Latin, Step by Step, Root by Root

An etymology-driven curriculum, built one word at a time

Adhithya Rajasekaran

This edition compiled incrementally — new chapters added as they are written.

Copyright © Adhithya Rajasekaran. Licensed under Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International (CC BY-SA 4.0).

Preface

Latin is not learned the way most languages are learned. Nobody is going to greet you in it, and this book will not pretend otherwise — you learn Latin to read it, and to find out why so much of the vocabulary you already own looks the way it does.

Latin is a taproot: the ancestor of Spanish, French, Italian, and Portuguese, and the single largest source of English's vocabulary after English's own Germanic core. Almost every lesson here pays a double dividend — you learn a Latin word and you see why a dozen English words, and their Romance cousins, look the way they do.

Latin uses the alphabet you are reading, so there is no script to decode; the work is the words and the endings. Latin carries meaning in its endings rather than in word order or helper-words, which is why it can drop pronouns and still be perfectly clear (agō already means "I do"). Each chapter introduces that machinery one piece at a time, exactly where a real phrase needs it — never as a front-loaded grammar table.

We use classical pronunciation (Caesar's v was a w, his c always hard) and mark long vowels with a macron (ā ē īō ū), as teaching texts do, though Romans themselves wrote none. Roots are traced back toward Proto-Indo-European where the trail is clear, and forward into English and the Romance languages — every form supplied in full.

How to use this book

Every numbered section is one word, or one small phrase, and takes a few minutes — the length of a queue, an errand, or the walk to the bus. Read them in order the first time through: each section stands on the ones before it, and nothing is used before it has been taught. After that the book becomes reference, and you can open it anywhere.

Say the Latin out loud wherever you can. The prompts under Your turn are written to be spoken, and saying a word is most of what makes it stay. The questions under Before you move on carry their own answers in brackets: cover them, answer from memory, then look.

Nothing here is gated behind pronunciation. Each lesson names the one or two sounds its own word needs, exactly where they are needed. The whole system is gathered in a reference at the back of the book — somewhere to look things up when you are curious, never a chapter to sit through first.

Released under CC BY-SA 4.0 — share it, adapt it, teach from it.

Contents

Preface iii

1 Greetings 1
1.1 salvē / salvēte 1
1.2 salvē / salvēte 2
1.3 salvē 3
1.4 heard greeting 4
1.5 avē / avēte 4
1.6 valē / valēte 5
1.7 grātiās (tibi) agō 7
1.8 ita / nōn 8
1.9 Practice 9

2 Numbers One to Ten 11
2.1 ūnus duo trēs quattuor quīnque 11
2.2 sex septem octō novem decem 13

3 Please 15
3.1 quaesō 15

4 Sorry 17
4.1 ignōsce mihi 17

5 Days of the Week 19
5.1 diēs Lūnae, Mārtis, Mercuriī, Iovis … 19
5.2 diēs Saturnī, diēs Sōlis 21

6 Colours 23
6.1 niger, albus 23
6.2 ruber, caeruleus 25

7 Family 27
7.1 pater, mater 27
7.2 frater, soror 28

8 Head and Hand 31
8.1 caput 31
8.2 manus 33

9 Seasons 35
9.1 vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems 35

10 Water, Wine, and Bread 39
10.1 aqua, vīnum 39
10.2 pānis 40

11 Months 43
11.1 Iānuārius, Februārius, Mārtius … 43

12 Noon and Midnight 47
12.1 medius diēs, media nox 47

13 Telling Time 51
13.1 hōra 51

14 Asking Someone's Age 53
14.1 vīgintī annōs nātus sum 53

15 Weather 57
15.1 tempestās 57
15.2 pluit, calor, sol 58

16 Numbers Eleven to Twenty 61
16.1 ūndecim — vīgintī 61

17 Dog and Cat 65
17.1 canis, fēlēs, cattus 65

18 Green and Yellow 69
18.1 viridis, flāvus 69

19 How Are You? 71
19.1 quid agis? 71
19.2 ut valēs? 72
19.3 valeō, valē 73
19.4 Practice 74

20 Exchanging Names 77
20.1 quid tibi nōmen est? / mihi nōmen est... 77
20.2 puerō nōmen est Mārcus / Mārcō 78

21 Nice to Meet You 81
21.1 volup est convēnisse 81
21.2 tē volup est convēnisse 82
21.3 Practice 83

22 You, Singular and Plural 87
22.1 tū / vōs 87

23 You're Welcome 91
23.1 nihil est 91

24 See You Soon 93
24.1 propediem tē vidēbō 93

25 See You Tomorrow 95
25.1 crās tē vidēbō 95

26 How 99
26.1 quōmodo 99

27 Well 101
27.1 bene 101

28 Day 103
28.1 diēs 103

29 Night 105
29.1 nox 105

30 Good Night 107
30.1 bonam noctem 107

31 Morning 109
31.1 mānе 109

32 Good Morning 111
32.1 bonum mānе 111

33 Evening 115
33.1 vesper 115
33.2 Hesperia, víspera, vespers 116
33.3 Practice 117

34 Good Evening 119
34.1 bonum vesperum 119

35 Noon and Afternoon 123
35.1 merīdiēs 123

36 Good Afternoon 125
36.1 salvē (post merīdiem) 125
36.2 salvē / salvēte 126
36.3 Practice 127

37 Eight Verbs at the Core 129
37.1 sum, esse 129
37.2 habeō, habēre 131
37.3 eō, īre 132
37.4 veniō, venīre 134
37.5 dīcō, dīcere 135
37.6 videō, vidēre 137
37.7 sciō, scīre 138
37.8 dō, dare 140

38 Thinking, Reading, Writing 143
38.1 cōgitō, cōgitāre 143
38.2 legō, legere 145
38.3 intellegō, intellegere 146
38.4 scrībō, scrībere 148

39 Taking, Asking, Helping, Loving 151
39.1 capiō, capere 151
39.2 rogō, rogāre 153

39.3 adiuvō, adiuvāre 154
39.4 amō, amāre 156

40 Hearing, Sleeping, Sitting, Standing 159
40.1 audiō, audīre 159
40.2 dormiō, dormīre 161
40.3 sedeō, sedēre 163
40.4 stō, stāre 164

41 Walking, Running, Opening, Closing 167
41.1 ambulō, ambulāre 167
41.2 currō, currere 169
41.3 aperiō, aperīre 171
41.4 claudō, claudere 172

42 Bringing, Getting, Playing, Waiting 175
42.1 ferō, ferre 175
42.2 accipiō, obtineō 177
42.3 lūdō, lūdere 178
42.4 exspectō, exspectāre 180

43 Answering, Meeting, Buying 183
43.1 respondeō, respondēre 183
43.2 conveniō, occurrō 185
43.3 emō, emere 187

44 The House, and Who Is Inside It 189
44.1 domus, domūs 189
44.2 porta, portae 190
44.3 mūrus, mūrī 191
44.4 hortus, hortī 192
44.5 focus, focī 193

45 Earth, Fire, Wind, Sky, Sea 195
45.1 terra, terrae 195
45.2 ignis, ignis 196
45.3 ventus, ventī 197
45.4 caelum, caelī 198
45.5 mare, maris 199

46 Light, Shadow, and Going to Sleep 201
46.1 lūx, lūcis . . . 201
46.2 umbra, umbrae . . . 202
46.3 stēlla, stēllae . . . 203
46.4 lūna, lūnae . . . 204
46.5 somnus, somnī . . . 205

47 Salt, Honey, Milk, Egg, Fish 207
47.1 sāl, salis . . . 207
47.2 mel, mellis . . . 208
47.3 lac, lactis . . . 209
47.4 ōvum, ōvī . . . 210
47.5 piscis, piscis . . . 211
47.6 ignōsce mihi · nihil est · quōmodo … . . . 212

48 Nescio, Male, Malus, Sed, Aut 215
48.1 nesciō, nescīre . . . 215
48.2 male . . . 217
48.3 focus · mare · somnus . . . 218
48.4 malus, mala, malum . . . 220
48.5 sed . . . 221
48.6 aut . . . 222

49 Possum, Volo, Qui, Et, Quando 225
49.1 possum, posse . . . 225
49.2 volō, velle . . . 226
49.3 quī, quae, quod . . . 228
49.4 et . . . 229
49.5 quandō . . . 231

50 Hic, Iste, Ille, Is, Ibi 233
50.1 hic, haec, hoc . . . 233
50.2 iste, ista, istud . . . 235
50.3 ille, illa, illud . . . 236
50.4 is, ea, id . . . 237
50.5 ibi . . . 239

51 Amicus, Pecunia, Medicus, Miles, Epistula 241
51.1 amīcus, amīcī . . . 241
51.2 pecūnia, pecūniae . . . 242

51.3 medicus, medicī 244
51.4 mīles, mīlitis 245
51.5 epistula, epistulae 247

52 Ubi, Cur, Quia, Meus, Tuus 249
52.1 ubi 249
52.2 cūr 250
52.3 quia 252
52.4 meus, mea, meum 253
52.5 tuus, tua, tuum 254

53 Iterum, Magister, Discipulus, Schola, Liber 257
53.1 iterum 257
53.2 magister, magistrī 258
53.3 discipulus, discipulī 260
53.4 schola, scholae 261
53.5 liber, librī 262

54 Edo, Bibo, Oculus, Auris, Pes 265
54.1 edō, esse 265
54.2 bibō, bibere 266
54.3 oculus, oculī 268
54.4 auris, auris 269
54.5 pēs, pedis 270

55 Numerī Ōrdinis 273
55.1 prīmus, prīma, prīmum 273
55.2 secundus, secunda, secundum 274
55.3 tertius, tertia, tertium 276
55.4 quārtus, quārta, quārtum 277
55.5 quīntus, quīnta, quīntum 278

56 Sextus ad Decimum 281
56.1 sextus, sexta, sextum 281
56.2 septimus, septima, septimum 282
56.3 octāvus, octāva, octāvum 284
56.4 nōnus, nōna, nōnum 285
56.5 decimus, decima, decimum 286

57 Ante et Post 289
57.1 ante 289
57.2 post 290
57.3 prīma hōra — sexta hōra — nōna hōra 292

58 Reading — Words, Lines, and a First Passage 295
58.1 (reading) 295
58.2 (reading) 296
58.3 (reading) 297

59 Reading — Objects, Places, and a Day 299
59.1 aqua -> aquam; epistula -> epistulam … 299
59.2 amicus -> amicum; magister -> … 300
59.3 ad scholam; in scholā; domum 302
59.4 (reading) 303
59.5 (reading) 304

60 Writing — My Own Line 307
60.1 (versus meus) 307

61 Writing — With A Clock 309
61.1 (cum horologio) 309

62 Writing — Four Lines, And The Word That Has A Twin 311
62.1 quia 311

63 Arm, Finger, Tooth 313
63.1 bracchium, bracchiī 313
63.2 digitus, digitī 314
63.3 dēns, dentis 315
63.4 lingua, linguae 316
63.5 nāsus, nāsī 316

64 Neck, Shoulder, Knee, Heart 319
64.1 collum, collī 319
64.2 umerus, umerī 320
64.3 genū, genūs 321
64.4 cor, cordis 322
64.5 sanguis, sanguinis 322

65 Hair, Belly, Back, Forehead, Beard 325
65.1 capillus, capillī 325
65.2 venter, ventris 326
65.3 tergum, tergī 327
65.4 frōns, frontis 328
65.5 barba, barbae 328

66 Chest, Leg, Cheek, Nail, Healthy 331
66.1 pectus, pectoris 331
66.2 crūs, crūris 332
66.3 gena, genae 333
66.4 unguis, unguis 333
66.5 sānus, sāna, sānum 334

67 Fever, Cough, Pain 337
67.1 febris, febris 337
67.2 tussis, tussis 338
67.3 dolor, dolōris 339
67.4 medicīna, medicīnae 339
67.5 morbus, morbī 340

68 Sick, Tired, Hungry, Thirsty 343
68.1 aeger, aegra, aegrum 343
68.2 fessus, fessa, fessum 344
68.3 famēs, famis 345
68.4 sitis, sitis 346
68.5 cūra, cūrae 346

69 Joy, Anger, Fear 349
69.1 gaudium, gaudiī 349
69.2 īra, īrae 350
69.3 timor, timōris 351
69.4 laetus, laeta, laetum 351
69.5 trīstis, trīste 352

70 Son, Daughter, Grandparents 355
70.1 fīlius, fīliī 355
70.2 fīlia, fīliae 356
70.3 avus, avī 357
70.4 avia, aviae 357

70.5 familia, familiae 358

71 Husband, Wife, Children 361
71.1 marītus, marītī 361
71.2 uxor, uxōris 362
71.3 līberī, līberōrum 363
71.4 īnfāns, īnfantis 363
71.5 patruus, patruī 364

72 Aunt, Neighbour, Guest, Man, Woman 367
72.1 amita, amitae 367
72.2 vīcīnus, vīcīnī 368
72.3 hospes, hospitis 369
72.4 vir, virī 370
72.5 fēmina, fēminae 370

73 Girl, Old Man, Queen, Sailor, Poet 373
73.1 puella, puellae 373
73.2 senex, senis 374
73.3 rēgīna, rēgīnae 375
73.4 nauta, nautae 375
73.5 poēta, poētae 376

74 Citizen, Cook, Merchant, Farmer 379
74.1 cīvis, cīvis 379
74.2 coquus, coquī 380
74.3 mercātor, mercātōris 381
74.4 agricola, agricolae 381
74.5 ager, agrī 382

75 Work, Sing, Dance, Laugh, Weep 385
75.1 labōrō, labōrāre 385
75.2 canō, canere 386
75.3 saltō, saltāre 387
75.4 rīdeō, rīdēre 387
75.5 fleō, flēre 388

76 Wash, Cook, Sell, Swim, Call 391
76.1 lavō, lavāre 391
76.2 coquō, coquere 392
76.3 vendō, vendere 393

76.4 natō, natāre 394
76.5 vocō, vocāre 394

77 Send, Stay, Fall, Put, Find 397
77.1 mittō, mittere 397
77.2 maneō, manēre 398
77.3 cadō, cadere 399
77.4 pōnō, pōnere 399
77.5 inveniō, invenīre 400

78 Live, Enter, Return, Fear, Rejoice 403
78.1 vīvō, vīvere 403
78.2 intrō, intrāre 404
78.3 redeō, redīre 405
78.4 timeō, timēre 405
78.5 gaudeō, gaudēre 406

79 Food and Meals 409
79.1 cibus, cibī 409
79.2 cēna, cēnae 410
79.3 prandium, prandiī 411
79.4 ientāculum, ientāculī 412
79.5 carō, carnis 412

80 Cheese, Oil, Grapes, Olives 415
80.1 cāseus, cāseī 415
80.2 oleum, oleī 416
80.3 ūva, ūvae 417
80.4 holus, holeris 417
80.5 olīva, olīvae 418

81 Grain, Flour, Pear, Fig, Nut 421
81.1 frūmentum, frūmentī 421
81.2 farīna, farīnae 422
81.3 pirum, pirī 423
81.4 fīcus, fīcī 423
81.5 nux, nucis 424

82 Table, Chair, Bed, Window 427
82.1 mēnsa, mēnsae 427
82.2 sella, sellae 428
82.3 lectus, lectī 429
82.4 fenestra, fenestrae 429
82.5 cubiculum, cubiculī 430

83 Kitchen, Roof, Lamp, Cup, Knife 433
83.1 culīna, culīnae 433
83.2 tēctum, tēctī 434
83.3 lucerna, lucernae 435
83.4 pōculum, pōculī 436
83.5 culter, cultrī 436

84 Chest, Paper, Pen, Tablet, Mirror 439
84.1 arca, arcae 439
84.2 charta, chartae 440
84.3 stilus, stilī 441
84.4 tabula, tabulae 442
84.5 speculum, speculī 442

85 Ball, Wheel, Sword, Crown, Ring 445
85.1 pila, pilae 445
85.2 rota, rotae 446
85.3 gladius, gladiī 447
85.4 corōna, corōnae 447
85.5 ānulus, ānulī 448
85.6 (dialogue) 449
85.7 (dialogue) 450

86 Tree, Flower, Leaf, Forest, Mountain 453
86.1 arbor, arboris 453
86.2 flōs, flōris 454
86.3 folium, foliī 455
86.4 silva, silvae 455
86.5 mōns, montis 456

87 River, Lake, Stream, Spring, Coast 459
87.1 flūmen, flūminis 459
87.2 lacus, lacūs 460

87.3 rīvus, rīvī 461
87.4 fōns, fontis 461
87.5 ōra, ōrae 462

88 Stone, Sand, Hill, Valley, Cave 465
88.1 lapis, lapidis 465
88.2 harēna, harēnae 466
88.3 collis, collis 467
88.4 vallis, vallis 467
88.5 spēlunca, spēluncae 468

89 Cloud, Rain, Snow, Plain, Shore 471
89.1 nūbēs, nūbis 471
89.2 pluvia, pluviae 472
89.3 nix, nivis 473
89.4 campus, campī 473
89.5 lītus, lītoris 474

90 Horse, Ox, Sheep, Goat, Pig 477
90.1 equus, equī 477
90.2 bōs, bovis 478
90.3 ovis, ovis 479
90.4 capra, caprae 480
90.5 porcus, porcī 480

91 Bird, Wolf, Lion, Bear, Snake 483
91.1 avis, avis 483
91.2 lupus, lupī 484
91.3 leō, leōnis 485
91.4 ursus, ursī 486
91.5 serpēns, serpentis 486

92 Mouse, Hen, Donkey, Elephant, Deer 489
92.1 mūs, mūris 489
92.2 gallīna, gallīnae 490
92.3 asinus, asinī 491
92.4 elephantus, elephantī 491
92.5 cervus, cervī 492

93 Big and Small, Long and Short, High 495
93.1 magnus, magna, magnum 495
93.2 parvus, parva, parvum 496
93.3 longus, longa, longum 497
93.4 brevis, breve 498
93.5 altus, alta, altum 498

94 New, Old, Light, Fast, Slow 501
94.1 novus, nova, novum 501
94.2 vetus, veteris 502
94.3 levis, leve 503
94.4 celer, celeris, celere 504
94.5 lentus, lenta, lentum 504

95 Hot, Cold, Dry, Wet, Sweet 507
95.1 calidus, calida, calidum 507
95.2 frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum 508
95.3 siccus, sicca, siccum 509
95.4 ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum 510
95.5 dulcis, dulce 510

96 Beautiful, Round, Empty, Bright, Dark 513
96.1 pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum 513
96.2 rotundus, rotunda, rotundum 514
96.3 vacuus, vacua, vacuum 515
96.4 clārus, clāra, clārum 516
96.5 obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum 516

97 Easy, Hard, Dear, Brave, Wise 519
97.1 facilis, facile 519
97.2 difficilis, difficile 520
97.3 cārus, cāra, cārum 521
97.4 fortis, forte 521
97.5 sapiēns, sapientis 522

98 Rich, Poor, Foolish, Enough, Too Much 525
98.1 dīves, dīvitis 525
98.2 pauper, pauperis 526
98.3 stultus, stulta, stultum 527
98.4 satis 528

98.5 nimis 528

99 Get to Know, Care For, Tell, Praise, Move 531
99.1 cognōscō, cognōscere 531
99.2 cūrō, cūrāre 532
99.3 nārrō, nārrāre 533
99.4 laudō, laudāre 534
99.5 moveō, movēre 534

100 Fight, Sail, Prepare, Touch, Pull 537
100.1 pugnō, pugnāre 537
100.2 nāvigō, nāvigāre 538
100.3 parō, parāre 539
100.4 tangō, tangere 539
100.5 trahō, trahere 540

101 Get Up, Wander, Run Away, At Once, Then 543
101.1 surgō, surgere 543
101.2 errō, errāre 544
101.3 fugiō, fugere 545
101.4 statim 546
101.5 deinde 546

102 Far, Above, Below, Inside, Outside 549
102.1 procul 549
102.2 suprā 550
102.3 īnfrā 551
102.4 intrā 551
102.5 extrā 552

103 Today, Yesterday, Year, Month, Dawn 555
103.1 hodiē 555
103.2 herī 556
103.3 annus, annī 557
103.4 mēnsis, mēnsis 557
103.5 aurōra, aurōrae 558

104 Often, Always, Never, Now, Soon 561
104.1 saepe 561
104.2 semper 562
104.3 numquam 563

104.4 nunc 563
104.5 mox 564

105 Rarely, Already, Then, Much, Little 567
105.1 rārō 567
105.2 iam 568
105.3 tum 569
105.4 multum 569
105.5 parum 570

106 Thirty to a Thousand 573
106.1 trīgintā 573
106.2 quadrāgintā 574
106.3 quīnquāgintā 575
106.4 centum 575
106.5 mīlle 576

107 City, Town, Forum, Temple, Shop 579
107.1 urbs, urbis 579
107.2 oppidum, oppidī 580
107.3 forum, forī 581
107.4 templum, templī 581
107.5 taberna, tabernae 582

108 Bridge, Farmhouse, Clothes, Tunic, Shoe 585
108.1 pōns, pontis 585
108.2 vīlla, vīllae 586
108.3 vestis, vestis 587
108.4 tunica, tunicae 588
108.5 calceus, calceī 588
108.6 (dialogue) 589
108.7 (dialogue) 591

109 To be able, To dare, To have to, To be used to, Power 593
109.1 queō, quīre 593
109.2 audeō, audēre 594
109.3 dēbeō, dēbēre 595
109.4 soleō, solēre 595
109.5 potestās, potestātis 596

110 Chance, Skill, It is necessary, It is allowed, To not want 599
110.1 facultās, facultātis 599
110.2 ars, artis 600
110.3 oportet 601
110.4 licet 602
110.5 nōlō, nōlle 602

111 To prefer, To desire, To wish for, To miss, Wish 605
111.1 mālō, mālle 605
111.2 cupiō, cupere 606
111.3 optō, optāre 607
111.4 dēsīderō, dēsīderāre 608
111.5 voluntās, voluntātis 608

112 Desire, Hope, Longing, Why?, Why? 611
112.1 cupiditās, cupiditātis 611
112.2 spēs, speī 612
112.3 dēsīderium, dēsīderiī 613
112.4 quārē 614
112.5 quamobrem 614

113 For, For, For that reason, And so, Reason 617
113.1 nam 617
113.2 enim 618
113.3 ideō 619
113.4 itaque 619
113.5 causa, causae 620

114 Reason, Because of that, Place, Right, Left 623
114.1 ratiō, ratiōnis 623
114.2 propterea 624
114.3 locus, locī 625
114.4 dexter, dextra, dextrum 625
114.5 sinister, sinistra, sinistrum 626

115 To here, To there, Theatre, Bath, Military camp 629
115.1 hūc 629
115.2 illūc 630
115.3 theātrum, theātrī 631
115.4 balneum, balneī 632

115.5 castra, castrōrum 632

116 Building, Prison, Main hall of a house, Corner, Street 635
116.1 aedificium, aedificiī 635
116.2 carcer, carceris 636
116.3 ātrium, ātriī 637
116.4 angulus, angulī 638
116.5 vīcus, vīcī 638

117 Step, Library, Food market, Eating-house, Inn 641
117.1 gradus, gradūs 641
117.2 bibliothēca, bibliothēcae 642
117.3 macellum, macellī 643
117.4 popīna, popīnae 644
117.5 caupōna, caupōnae 645

118 Floor, Well, Bakery, Workshop, Tomb 647
118.1 pavīmentum, pavīmentī 647
118.2 puteus, puteī 648
118.3 pistrīnum, pistrīnī 649
118.4 officīna, officīnae 650
118.5 sepulcrum, sepulcrī 650

119 Open space, Milestone, Around, Next to, Opposite 653
119.1 ārea, āreae 653
119.2 mīliārium, mīliāriī 654
119.3 circā 655
119.4 iūxtā 656
119.5 contrā 656
119.6 (dialogue) 657
119.7 (dialogue) 658

120 Sack, Box, Cushion, Blanket, Napkin 661
120.1 saccus, saccī 661
120.2 cista, cistae 662
120.3 pulvīnus, pulvīnī 663
120.4 strāgulum, strāgulī 664
120.5 mappa, mappae 664

121 Spoon, Cooking pot, Dish, Bowl, Candle 667
121.1 cochlear, cochleāris 667
121.2 ōlla, ōllae 668
121.3 patina, patinae 669
121.4 catīnus, catīnī 670
121.5 candēla, candēlae 670

122 Nail, Hammer, Saw, Axe, Ladder 673
122.1 clāvus, clāvī 673
122.2 malleus, malleī 674
122.3 serra, serrae 675
122.4 secūris, secūris 676
122.5 scālae, scālārum 676

123 Vessel, Two-handled jar, Flask, Purse, Coin 679
123.1 vās, vāsis 679
123.2 amphora, amphorae 680
123.3 lagoena, lagoenae 681
123.4 crumēna, crumēnae 682
123.5 nummus, nummī 682

124 Book, Ink, Reed pen, Wax, Picture 685
124.1 cōdex, cōdicis 685
124.2 ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī 686
124.3 calamus, calamī 687
124.4 cēra, cērae 687
124.5 pictūra, pictūrae 688

125 Statue, Sign, Sail, Wagon, Long dress 691
125.1 statua, statuae 691
125.2 signum, signī 692
125.3 vēlum, vēlī 693
125.4 plaustrum, plaustrī 694
125.5 stola, stolae 694

126 Cloak, Belt, Fruit, Onion, Garlic 697
126.1 pallium, palliī 697
126.2 zōna, zōnae 698
126.3 pōmum, pōmī 699
126.4 cēpa, cēpae 700

126.5 ālium, āliī 700

127 Bean, Pea, Cucumber, Chicken, Pepper 703
127.1 faba, fabae 703
127.2 pīsum, pīsī 704
127.3 cucumis, cucumeris 705
127.4 pullus, pullī 706
127.5 piper, piperis 706

128 Flat cake, Beer, Juice, Rose, Lily 709
128.1 placenta, placentae 709
128.2 cervīsia, cervīsiae 710
128.3 sūcus, sūcī 711
128.4 rosa, rosae 712
128.5 līlium, līliī 712

129 Branch, Tree trunk, Seed, Rock, River bank 715
129.1 rāmus, rāmī 715
129.2 truncus, truncī 716
129.3 sēmen, sēminis 717
129.4 saxum, saxī 718
129.5 rīpa, rīpae 718

130 Wave, Ice, Hail, Thunder, Lightning 721
130.1 unda, undae 721
130.2 glaciēs, glaciēī 722
130.3 grandō, grandinis 723
130.4 tonitrus, tonitrūs 723
130.5 fulgur, fulguris 724
130.6 (dialogue) 725
130.7 (dialogue) 726

131 Fog, Eagle, Dove, Raven, Duck 729
131.1 nebula, nebulae 729
131.2 aquila, aquilae 730
131.3 columba, columbae 731
131.4 corvus, corvī 732
131.5 anas, anatis 732

132 Goose, Bee, Fly, Ant, Butterfly 735
132.1 ānser, ānseris 735
132.2 apis, apis 736
132.3 musca, muscae 737
132.4 formīca, formīcae 737
132.5 pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis 738

133 Spider, Frog, Hare, Fox, Bull 741
133.1 arānea, arāneae 741
133.2 rāna, rānae 742
133.3 lepus, leporis 743
133.4 vulpēs, vulpis 743
133.5 taurus, taurī 744

134 Cow, Mule, Camel, Monkey, Dolphin 747
134.1 vacca, vaccae 747
134.2 mūlus, mūlī 748
134.3 camēlus, camēlī 749
134.4 sīmia, sīmiae 749
134.5 delphīnus, delphīnī 750

135 Whale, Cockerel, Lip, Chin, Back 753
135.1 balaena, balaenae 753
135.2 gallus, gallī 754
135.3 labrum, labrī 755
135.4 mentum, mentī 756
135.5 dorsum, dorsī 756

136 Elbow, Thumb, Skin, Bone, Stomach 759
136.1 cubitum, cubitī 759
136.2 pollex, pollicis 760
136.3 cutis, cutis 761
136.4 os, ossis 761
136.5 stomachus, stomachī 762

137 Craftsman, Baker, Shoemaker, Barber, Shepherd 765
137.1 faber, fabrī 765
137.2 pistor, pistōris 766
137.3 sūtor, sūtōris 767
137.4 tōnsor, tōnsōris 767

137.5 pāstor, pāstōris 768

138 Fisherman, Slave, Mistress, Friend, Cupboard 771
138.1 piscātor, piscātōris 771
138.2 servus, servī 772
138.3 domina, dominae 773
138.4 amīca, amīcae 774
138.5 armārium, armāriī 775

139 Chair with a back, Bench, Carpet, Torch, Lantern 777
139.1 cathedra, cathedrae 777
139.2 scamnum, scamnī 778
139.3 tapēte, tapētis 779
139.4 fax, facis 780
139.5 lanterna, lanternae 780

140 Comb, Scissors, Needle, Thread, Wool 783
140.1 pecten, pectinis 783
140.2 forfex, forficis 784
140.3 acus, acūs 785
140.4 fīlum, fīlī 785
140.5 lāna, lānae 786
140.6 (dialogue) 787
140.7 (dialogue) 788

141 Linen cloth, Soap, Sponge, Water jar, Cup 791
141.1 linteum, linteī 791
141.2 sāpō, sāpōnis 792
141.3 spongia, spongiae 793
141.4 urna, urnae 794
141.5 calix, calicis 794

142 Fork, Plough, Bell, Flute, Lyre 797
142.1 furca, furcae 797
142.2 arātrum, arātrī 798
142.3 tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī 799
142.4 tībia, tībiae 800
142.5 lyra, lyrae 800

143 Hard, Soft, Lukewarm, Ancient, Narrow 803
143.1 dūrus, dūra, dūrum 803
143.2 mollis, molle 804
143.3 tepidus, tepida, tepidum 805
143.4 antīquus, antīqua, antīquum 806
143.5 angustus, angusta, angustum 806

144 Low, Thick, Thin, Blind, Sharp 809
144.1 humilis, humile 809
144.2 crassus, crassa, crassum 810
144.3 tenuis, tenue 811
144.4 caecus, caeca, caecum 812
144.5 acūtus, acūta, acūtum 812

145 Sour, Alive, Gentle, Fierce, Pleasant 815
145.1 acerbus, acerba, acerbum 815
145.2 vīvus, vīva, vīvum 816
145.3 mītis, mīte 817
145.4 ferōx, ferōcis 818
145.5 iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum 818

146 Annoying, Useful, Clean, Dirty, Straight 821
146.1 molestus, molesta, molestum 821
146.2 ūtilis, ūtile 822
146.3 pūrus, pūra, pūrum 823
146.4 sordidus, sordida, sordidum 823
146.5 rēctus, rēcta, rēctum 824

147 Deaf, False, Sure, Safe, Dangerous 827
147.1 surdus, surda, surdum 827
147.2 falsus, falsa, falsum 828
147.3 certus, certa, certum 829
147.4 tūtus, tūta, tūtum 829
147.5 perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum 830

148 Lucky, Wretched, Angry, Quiet, Purple 833
148.1 fēlīx, fēlīcis 833
148.2 miser, misera, miserum 834
148.3 īrātus, īrāta, īrātum 835
148.4 quiētus, quiēta, quiētum 835

148.5 purpureus, purpurea, purpureum 836

149 Dark, Grey, Golden, Silver, Wise 839
149.1 fuscus, fusca, fuscum 839
149.2 cānus, cāna, cānum 840
149.3 aureus, aurea, aureum 841
149.4 argenteus, argentea, argenteum 842
149.5 prūdēns, prūdentis 842

150 Careful, Lazy, Hard-working, Timid, Bold 845
150.1 cautus, cauta, cautum 845
150.2 piger, pigra, pigrum 846
150.3 dīligēns, dīligentis 847
150.4 timidus, timida, timidum 848
150.5 audāx, audācis 848
150.6 (dialogue) 849
150.7 (dialogue) 850

151 Proud, Kind, Cruel, Ugly, Beautiful 853
151.1 superbus, superba, superbum 853
151.2 benignus, benigna, benignum 854
151.3 crūdēlis, crūdēle 855
151.4 turpis, turpe 856
151.5 fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum 856

152 Strong, Weak, Alone, Icy, Clear 859
152.1 validus, valida, validum 859
152.2 īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum 860
152.3 sōlus, sōla, sōlum 861
152.4 gelidus, gelida, gelidum 862
152.5 serēnus, serēna, serēnum 862

153 Cloudy, Windy, To build, To climb, To go down 865
153.1 nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum 865
153.2 ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum 866
153.3 aedificō, aedificāre 867
153.4 ascendō, ascendere 868
153.5 dēscendō, dēscendere 868

154 To join, To visit, To sing, To paint, To lead 871
154.1 iungō, iungere 871
154.2 vīsitō, vīsitāre 872
154.3 cantō, cantāre 873
154.4 pingō, pingere 874
154.5 dūcō, dūcere 874

155 To make, To carry, To put on, To take off, To clean 877
155.1 faciō, facere 877
155.2 gerō, gerere 878
155.3 induō, induere 879
155.4 exuō, exuere 880
155.5 pūrgō, pūrgāre 880

156 To break, To throw, To carry, To carry, To untie 883
156.1 frangō, frangere 883
156.2 iaciō, iacere 884
156.3 vehō, vehere 885
156.4 portō, portāre 886
156.5 solvō, solvere 886

157 To give back, To show, To shine, To lose, To win 889
157.1 reddō, reddere 889
157.2 ostendō, ostendere 890
157.3 lūceō, lūcēre 891
157.4 perdō, perdere 891
157.5 vincō, vincere 892

158 To grow, To hurry, To stay awake, To dine, To taste 895
158.1 crēscō, crēscere 895
158.2 festīnō, festīnāre 896
158.3 vigilō, vigilāre 897
158.4 cēnō, cēnāre 898
158.5 gustō, gustāre 898

159 To feel, To hang, To be silent, To keep, To change 901
159.1 sentiō, sentīre 901
159.2 pendeō, pendēre 902
159.3 taceō, tacēre 903
159.4 servō, servāre 903

159.5 mūtō, mūtāre 904

160 To count, To destroy, To go away, To arrive, To live 907
160.1 numerō, numerāre 907
160.2 dēleō, dēlēre 908
160.3 discēdō, discēdere 909
160.4 adveniō, advenīre 910
160.5 habitō, habitāre 910
160.6 (dialogue) 911
160.7 (dialogue) 912

161 Nothing, Nobody, No, Which of Two, Neither ... Nor 915
161.1 nihil 915
161.2 nēmō, nēminis 916
161.3 nūllus, nūlla, nūllum 917
161.4 uter, utra, utrum 918
161.5 neque 918

162 Recently, the Day before Yesterday, Once, Before, To Happen 921
162.1 nūper 921
162.2 nudiustertius 922
162.3 ōlim 923
162.4 anteā 924
162.5 accidō, accidere 925

163 The Day after Tomorrow, Afterwards, a Plan, To Decide, To Foresee 927
163.1 perendiē 927
163.2 posteā 928
163.3 cōnsilium, cōnsiliī 929
163.4 cōnstituō, cōnstituere 930
163.5 prōvideō, prōvidēre 931

164 A Notice, an Inscription, a Price, For Sale, Goods 933
164.1 titulus, titulī 933
164.2 īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis 934
164.3 pretium, pretiī 935
164.4 vēnālis, vēnāle 936
164.5 merx, mercis 937

164.6 (dialogue) 937
164.7 (dialogue) 938

165 To light, To put out, To jump, To smile, To shout 939
165.1 accendō, accendere 939
165.2 exstinguō, exstinguere 940
165.3 saliō, salīre 941
165.4 subrīdeō, subrīdēre 942
165.5 clāmō, clāmāre 942

166 To approve, To mark, To discuss, To promise, To allow 945
166.1 probō, probāre 945
166.2 signō, signāre 946
166.3 disputō, disputāre 947
166.4 prōmittō, prōmittere 948
166.5 permittō, permittere 948

167 To burn, To set on fire, To throw away, To calculate, To knock 951
167.1 ārdeō, ārdēre 951
167.2 incendō, incendere 952
167.3 abiciō, abicere 953
167.4 computō, computāre 954
167.5 pulsō, pulsāre 954

168 To fold, To own, To make ready in advance, To lend, To propose 957
168.1 plicō, plicāre 957
168.2 possideō, possidēre 958
168.3 praeparō, praeparāre 959
168.4 commodō, commodāre 960
168.5 prōpōnō, prōpōnere 960

169 To kill, To get used to, To make haste, To move back, To approach 963
169.1 interficiō, interficere 963
169.2 cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere 964
169.3 properō, properāre 965
169.4 recēdō, recēdere 966
169.5 appropinquō, appropinquāre 966

170 To slip, To lighten, To admire, To suspect, To press 969
170.1 lābor, lābī 969
170.2 levō, levāre 970
170.3 admīror, admīrārī 971
170.4 suspicor, suspicārī 972
170.5 premō, premere 972

171 To deceive, To endure, To found, To create, To believe 975
171.1 fallō, fallere 975
171.2 tolerō, tolerāre 976
171.3 condō, condere 977
171.4 creō, creāre 978
171.5 crēdō, crēdere 979

172 To sow, To reap, To hunt, To go fishing, To deny 981
172.1 serō, serere 981
172.2 metō, metere 982
172.3 vēnor, vēnārī 983
172.4 piscor, piscārī 984
172.5 negō, negāre 984

173 Health, Brain, Lung, Liver, Kidney 987
173.1 valētūdō, valētūdinis 987
173.2 cerebrum, cerebrī 988
173.3 pulmō, pulmōnis 989
173.4 iecur, iecoris 990
173.5 rēn, rēnis 990
173.6 (dialogue) 991
173.7 (dialogue) 992

174 Patience, Tear, Laugh, Voice, Mind 995
174.1 patientia, patientiae 995
174.2 lacrima, lacrimae 996
174.3 rīsus, rīsūs 997
174.4 vōx, vōcis 997
174.5 animus, animī 998

175 At last, From now on, Still, Suddenly, Until 1001
175.1 tandem 1001
175.2 posthāc 1002

175.3 adhūc 1003
175.4 subitō 1003
175.5 dōnec 1004

176 Earlier, Every year, Now and then, Once, Twice 1007
176.1 prius 1007
176.2 quotannīs 1008
176.3 nōnnumquam 1009
176.4 semel 1009
176.5 bis 1010

177 Far, Elsewhere, Over there, Within, Out of doors 1013
177.1 longē 1013
177.2 alibī 1014
177.3 illīc 1015
177.4 intus 1015
177.5 forīs 1016

178 Therefore, However, Although, Even if, Unless 1019
178.1 igitur 1019
178.2 tamen 1020
178.3 quamquam 1021
178.4 etsī 1021
178.5 nisi 1022

179 Especially, Rather, Most, Very, Quite 1025
179.1 praesertim 1025
179.2 potius 1026
179.3 maximē 1027
179.4 valdē 1027
179.5 admodum 1028

180 Convenient, Polite, Of the country, Cheerful, Shy 1031
180.1 commodus, commoda, commodum 1031
180.2 urbānus, urbāna, urbānum 1032
180.3 rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum 1033
180.4 hilaris, hilare 1034
180.5 verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum 1035

181 Free of charge, Fresh, Raw, Cooked, Distant 1037
181.1 grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum 1037
181.2 recēns, recentis 1038
181.3 crūdus, crūda, crūdum 1039
181.4 coctus, cocta, coctum 1040
181.5 longinquus, longinqua, longinquum 1040

182 Public, Private, Common, Hollow, Heavy 1043
182.1 pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum 1043
182.2 prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum 1044
182.3 commūnis, commūne 1045
182.4 inānis, ināne 1046
182.5 gravis, grave 1046
182.6 (dialogue) 1047
182.7 (dialogue) 1048

183 Known, Famous, Honourable, Middle, Highest 1051
183.1 nōtus, nōta, nōtum 1051
183.2 celeber, celebris, celebre 1052
183.3 honestus, honesta, honestum 1053
183.4 medius, media, medium 1054
183.5 summus, summa, summum 1054

184 Wasteful, Moderate, Eloquent, Mute, Lame 1057
184.1 prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum 1057
184.2 modestus, modesta, modestum 1058
184.3 fācundus, fācunda, fācundum 1059
184.4 mūtus, mūta, mūtum 1060
184.5 claudus, clauda, claudum 1060

185 Storeroom, Study, Colonnaded garden, Rain basin, Foundation 1063
185.1 cella, cellae 1063
185.2 tablīnum, tablīnī 1064
185.3 peristylium, peristyliī 1065
185.4 impluvium, impluviī 1066
185.5 fundāmentum, fundāmentī 1066

186 Helmsman, Market, Weight, Measure, Pound 1069
186.1 gubernātor, gubernātōris 1069
186.2 mercātus, mercātūs 1070
186.3 pondus, ponderis 1071
186.4 mēnsūra, mēnsūrae 1072
186.5 lībra, lībrae 1072

187 Peace, Leader, Victory, Freedom, Glory 1075
187.1 pāx, pācis 1075
187.2 dux, ducis 1076
187.3 victōria, victōriae 1077
187.4 lībertās, lībertātis 1077
187.5 glōria, glōriae 1078

188 Architect, Weaver, Potter, Farm manager, Tenant farmer 1081
188.1 architectus, architectī 1081
188.2 textor, textōris 1082
188.3 figulus, figulī 1083
188.4 vīlicus, vīlicī 1084
188.5 colōnus, colōnī 1084

189 Kin, Uncle, Aunt, Truth, Lie 1087
189.1 cognātus, cognātī 1087
189.2 avunculus, avunculī 1088
189.3 mātertera, māterterae 1089
189.4 vēritās, vēritātis 1090
189.5 mendācium, mendāciī 1090

190 Tax, Tribute, Wages, Denarius, Sesterce 1093
190.1 vectīgal, vectīgālis 1093
190.2 tribūtum, tribūtī 1094
190.3 mercēs, mercēdis 1095
190.4 dēnārius, dēnāriī 1096
190.5 sēstertius, sēstertiī 1097

191 Charcoal, Crag, Constellation, Storm, Rain cloud 1099
191.1 carbō, carbōnis 1099
191.2 scopulus, scopulī 1100
191.3 sīdus, sīderis 1101

191.4 procella, procellae 1102
191.5 nimbus, nimbī 1102
191.6 (dialogue) 1103
191.7 (dialogue) 1104

192 Crab, Sparrow, Stork, Owl, Peacock 1107
192.1 cancer, cancrī 1107
192.2 passer, passeris 1108
192.3 cicōnia, cicōniae 1109
192.4 noctua, noctuae 1109
192.5 pāvō, pāvōnis 1110

193 Drum, Knucklebone, Gaming die, Bracelet, Necklace 1113
193.1 tympanum, tympanī 1113
193.2 tālus, tālī 1114
193.3 tessera, tesserae 1115
193.4 armilla, armillae 1116
193.5 monīle, monīlis 1116

194 Opinion, Conversation, Speech, Rumour, History 1119
194.1 sententia, sententiae 1119
194.2 sermō, sermōnis 1120
194.3 ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis 1121
194.4 rūmor, rūmōris 1122
194.5 historia, historiae 1122

195 Cake, Vinegar, Fish sauce, Ham, Birthday 1125
195.1 lībum, lībī 1125
195.2 acētum, acētī 1126
195.3 garum, garī 1127
195.4 perna, pernae 1127
195.5 diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis 1128

196 Running stream, Marsh, Meadow, Grove, Sacred grove 1131
196.1 fluvius, fluviī 1131
196.2 palūs, palūdis 1132
196.3 prātum, prātī 1133
196.4 nemus, nemoris 1133
196.5 lūcus, lūcī 1134
196.6 (dialogue) 1135

196.7 (dialogue) 1136

197 To kiss, To greet, To invite, To explain, To interpret 1137
197.1 ōsculor, ōsculārī 1137
197.2 salūtō, salūtāre 1138
197.3 invītō, invītāre 1139
197.4 explicō, explicāre 1139
197.5 interpretor, interpretārī 1140

198 To forbid, To defend, To die, To marry, To rest 1143
198.1 vetō, vetāre 1143
198.2 dēfendō, dēfendere 1144
198.3 morior, morī 1145
198.4 nūbō, nūbere 1145
198.5 quiēscō, quiēscere 1146

199 To compare, To persuade, To blame, To share, To avoid 1149
199.1 comparō, comparāre 1149
199.2 persuādeō, persuādēre 1150
199.3 reprehendō, reprehendere 1151
199.4 partior, partīrī 1152
199.5 vītō, vītāre 1152

200 To lift, To reach, To recognise, To refuse, To fly about 1155
200.1 tollō, tollere 1155
200.2 perveniō, pervenīre 1156
200.3 agnōscō, agnōscere 1157
200.4 recūsō, recūsāre 1158
200.5 volitō, volitāre 1158

201 To talk together, To hand over, To straighten, To celebrate, To pursue 1161
201.1 colloquor, colloquī 1161
201.2 trādō, trādere 1162
201.3 corrigō, corrigere 1163
201.4 celebrō, celebrāre 1164
201.5 persequor, persequī 1164

202 To advise, To tremble, To welcome, To do, To go forward 1167
202.1 suādeō, suādēre 1167
202.2 tremō, tremere 1168
202.3 excipiō, excipere 1169
202.4 agō, agere 1170
202.5 prōcēdō, prōcēdere 1170

203 To doubt, To look for, To use up, To annoy, To forget 1173
203.1 dubitō, dubitāre 1173
203.2 quaerō, quaerere 1174
203.3 cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere 1175
203.4 vexō, vexāre 1176
203.5 oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī 1176

204 To state firmly, To hurt, To decorate, To throw together, To cease 1179
204.1 affirmō, affirmāre 1179
204.2 doleō, dolēre 1180
204.3 ōrnō, ōrnāre 1181
204.4 coniciō, conicere 1182
204.5 dēsinō, dēsinere 1182

205 Wound, Scar, Head cold, Drug, Ointment 1185
205.1 vulnus, vulneris 1185
205.2 cicātrīx, cicātrīcis 1186
205.3 gravēdō, gravēdinis 1187
205.4 medicāmentum, medicāmentī 1188
205.5 unguentum, unguentī 1188
205.6 (dialogue) 1189
205.7 (dialogue) 1190

206 Breath, Memory, Wisdom, Talent, Habit 1193
206.1 anima, animae 1193
206.2 memoria, memoriae 1194
206.3 sapientia, sapientiae 1195
206.4 ingenium, ingeniī 1196
206.5 cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis 1196

207 Generation, Age, Sunset, Sunrise, First light 1199
207.1 saeculum, saeculī 1199
207.2 aetās, aetātis 1200
207.3 occāsus, occāsūs 1201
207.4 ortus, ortūs 1202
207.5 dīlūculum, dīlūculī 1202

208 Finally, Lastly, On the spot, Formerly, Long since 1205
208.1 dēnique 1205
208.2 postrēmō 1206
208.3 illicō 1207
208.4 quondam 1207
208.5 iamdūdum 1208

209 Region, Province, From there, In the way, All the way 1211
209.1 regiō, regiōnis 1211
209.2 prōvincia, prōvinciae 1212
209.3 inde 1213
209.4 obviam 1213
209.5 usque 1214

210 Moreover, Indeed, Surely, About, Only 1217
210.1 autem 1217
210.2 vērō 1218
210.3 profectō 1219
210.4 ferē 1219
210.5 tantum 1220

211 Altogether, Hardly, Of one's own accord, In vain, Back again 1223
211.1 omnīnō 1223
211.2 vix 1224
211.3 sponte 1225
211.4 frūstrā 1225
211.5 rūrsus 1226

212 Inquisitive, Envious, Anxious, Peaceful, Silent 1229
212.1 cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum 1229
212.2 invidus, invida, invidum 1230
212.3 anxius, anxia, anxium 1231

212.4 placidus, placida, placidum 1232
212.5 tacitus, tacita, tacitum 1232

213 Foreign, Honest, Patient, Generous, Idle 1235
213.1 peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum 1235
213.2 probus, proba, probum 1236
213.3 patiēns, patientis 1237
213.4 līberālis, līberāle 1238
213.5 ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum 1238

214 Savage, Wild, Of the home, Rare, Frequent 1241
214.1 saevus, saeva, saevum 1241
214.2 ferus, fera, ferum 1242
214.3 domesticus, domestica, domesticum 1243
214.4 rārus, rāra, rārum 1244
214.5 crēber, crēbra, crēbrum 1244
214.6 (dialogue) 1245
214.7 (dialogue) 1246

215 Today's, Yesterday's, Tomorrow's, True, Uncertain 1249
215.1 hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum 1249
215.2 hesternus, hesterna, hesternum 1250
215.3 crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum 1251
215.4 vērus, vēra, vērum 1252
215.5 incertus, incerta, incertum 1252

216 Bald, Bearded, Charming, Worn out, Wakeful 1255
216.1 calvus, calva, calvum 1255
216.2 barbātus, barbāta, barbātum 1256
216.3 venustus, venusta, venustum 1257
216.4 dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum 1258
216.5 vigil, vigilis 1258

217 Roof tile, Furnace, Litter, Vehicle, Chariot 1261
217.1 tēgula, tēgulae 1261
217.2 fornāx, fornācis 1262
217.3 lectīca, lectīcae 1263
217.4 vehiculum, vehiculī 1264
217.5 currus, currūs 1264

218 Pace, Witness, Defendant, Punishment, Charge 1267
218.1 passus, passūs 1267
218.2 testis, testis 1268
218.3 reus, reī 1269
218.4 poena, poenae 1269
218.5 crīmen, crīminis 1270

219 Reputation, Messenger, Show, Actor, Story 1273
219.1 fāma, fāmae 1273
219.2 nūntius, nūntiī 1274
219.3 spectāculum, spectāculī 1275
219.4 histriō, histriōnis 1276
219.5 fābula, fābulae 1276

220 Maidservant, Freedman, Newcomer, Young person, Widow 1279
220.1 ancilla, ancillae 1279
220.2 lībertus, lībertī 1280
220.3 advena, advenae 1281
220.4 adulēscēns, adulēscentis 1281
220.5 vidua, viduae 1282

221 Rule, Difference, Outcome, Fortune, Accident 1285
221.1 rēgula, rēgulae 1285
221.2 discrīmen, discrīminis 1286
221.3 ēventus, ēventūs 1287
221.4 fortūna, fortūnae 1288
221.5 cāsus, cāsūs 1288

222 Gold, Silver, Bronze, Iron, Metal lead 1291
222.1 aurum, aurī 1291
222.2 argentum, argentī 1292
222.3 aes, aeris 1293
222.4 ferrum, ferrī 1293
222.5 plumbum, plumbī 1294

223 Mist, Breeze, Root, Thorn, Crop 1297
223.1 cālīgō, cālīginis 1297
223.2 aura, aurae 1298
223.3 rādīx, rādīcis 1299

223.4 spīna, spīnae 1299
223.5 seges, segetis 1300
223.6 (dialogue) 1301
223.7 (dialogue) 1302

224 Lizard, Wild boar, Billy goat, Lamb, Calf 1305
224.1 lacerta, lacertae 1305
224.2 aper, aprī 1306
224.3 caper, caprī 1307
224.4 agnus, agnī 1307
224.5 vitulus, vitulī 1308

225 Gem, Garment, Sandal, Fold of a garment, Mattress 1311
225.1 gemma, gemmae 1311
225.2 vestīmentum, vestīmentī 1312
225.3 solea, soleae 1313
225.4 sinus, sinūs 1314
225.5 culcita, culcitae 1314

226 Grammar, Philosophy, Eagerness, Question, Answer 1317
226.1 grammatica, grammaticae 1317
226.2 philosophia, philosophiae 1318
226.3 studium, studiī 1319
226.4 quaestiō, quaestiōnis 1320
226.5 respōnsum, respōnsī 1320

227 Fate, Lair, Hospitality, Lodging house, Traveller 1323
227.1 fātum, fātī 1323
227.2 cubīle, cubīlis 1324
227.3 hospitium, hospitiī 1325
227.4 dēversōrium, dēversōriī 1326
227.5 viātor, viātōris 1326

228 Woodland pass, Peak, Yoke, Whirlpool, Order 1329
228.1 saltus, saltūs 1329
228.2 cacūmen, cacūminis 1330
228.3 iugum, iugī 1331
228.4 vertex, verticis 1332
228.5 ōrdō, ōrdinis 1332
228.6 (dialogue) 1333

228.7 (dialogue) 1334

229 To decree, To try, To go on, To hold off, To remove 1335
229.1 dēcernō, dēcernere 1335
229.2 temptō, temptāre 1336
229.3 pergō, pergere 1337
229.4 cessō, cessāre 1338
229.5 removeō, removēre 1338

230 To wake up, To accompany, To add, To announce, To appear 1341
230.1 expergīscor, expergīscī 1341
230.2 comitor, comitārī 1342
230.3 addō, addere 1343
230.4 nūntiō, nūntiāre 1344
230.5 appāreō, appārēre 1344

231 To turn, To enjoy, To shape, To complain, To be missing 1347
231.1 vertō, vertere 1347
231.2 fruor, fruī 1348
231.3 fingō, fingere 1349
231.4 queror, querī 1350
231.5 dēsum, deesse 1350

232 To steal, To uncover, To seem, To serve, To suffer 1353
232.1 fūror, fūrārī 1353
232.2 dētegō, dētegere 1354
232.3 videor, vidērī 1355
232.4 serviō, servīre 1356
232.5 patior, patī 1356

233 To press on, To break off, To tie, To mix, To obey 1359
233.1 īnstō, īnstāre 1359
233.2 interrumpō, interrumpere 1360
233.3 ligō, ligāre 1361
233.4 misceō, miscēre 1362
233.5 pāreō, pārēre 1362

234 To let down, To gather, To vanish, To entrust, To hold back 1365
234.1 dēmittō, dēmittere 1365
234.2 colligō, colligere 1366
234.3 ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere 1367
234.4 mandō, mandāre 1368
234.5 retineō, retinēre 1368

235 To remember, To speak, To follow, To set out, To use 1371
235.1 meminī, meminisse 1371
235.2 loquor, loquī 1372
235.3 sequor, sequī 1373
235.4 proficīscor, proficīscī 1374
235.5 ūtor, ūtī 1374

236 Plaster, Remedy, Dream, Love, Friendship 1377
236.1 emplastrum, emplastrī 1377
236.2 remedium, remediī 1378
236.3 somnium, somniī 1379
236.4 amor, amōris 1379
236.5 amīcitia, amīcitiae 1380

237 End, Delay, Sometimes, Every day, Day before 1383
237.1 fīnis, fīnis 1383
237.2 mora, morae 1384
237.3 interdum 1385
237.4 cotīdiē 1386
237.5 prīdiē 1386
237.6 (dialogue) 1387
237.7 (dialogue) 1388

238 Beyond, On this side, At the house of, Face to face, By which way 1391
238.1 ultrā 1391
238.2 citrā 1392
238.3 apud 1393
238.4 cōram 1393
238.5 quā 1394

239 At the same time, Perhaps, Also, As if, Because of 1397
239.1 simul 1397
239.2 fortasse 1398
239.3 quoque 1399
239.4 quasi 1399
239.5 propter 1400

240 Rough, Deep, Unknown, Necessary, Useless 1403
240.1 asper, aspera, asperum 1403
240.2 profundus, profunda, profundum 1404
240.3 ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum 1405
240.4 necessārius, necessāria, necessārium 1406
240.5 inūtilis, inūtile 1406

241 Industrious, Talkative, Worried, Unmarried, Rainy 1409
241.1 industrius, industria, industrium 1409
241.2 loquāx, loquācis 1410
241.3 sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum 1411
241.4 caelebs, caelibis 1412
241.5 pluvius, pluvia, pluvium 1412

242 Few, All, Whole, Others, Other 1415
242.1 paucī, paucae, pauca 1415
242.2 omnis, omne 1416
242.3 tōtus, tōta, tōtum 1417
242.4 cēterī, cēterae, cētera 1417
242.5 alius, alia, aliud 1418

243 Doubtful, Faithful, Loyal, Unlucky, Blessed 1421
243.1 dubius, dubia, dubium 1421
243.2 fīdus, fīda, fīdum 1422
243.3 fīdēlis, fīdēle 1423
243.4 īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis 1424
243.5 beātus, beāta, beātum 1424

244 Travelling carriage, Broad street, Aqueduct, Public baths, Amphitheatre 1427
244.1 raeda, raedae 1427
244.2 platēa, platēae 1428
244.3 aquaeductus, aquaeductūs 1429

244.4 thermae, thermārum 1430
244.5 amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī 1431

245 Thief, Robber, Consul, General, Kingdom 1433
245.1 fūr, fūris 1433
245.2 latrō, latrōnis 1434
245.3 cōnsul, cōnsulis 1435
245.4 imperātor, imperātōris 1435
245.5 rēgnum, rēgnī 1436

246 Song, Line of verse, Writer, Painter, Music 1439
246.1 carmen, carminis 1439
246.2 versus, versūs 1440
246.3 scrīptor, scrīptōris 1441
246.4 pictor, pictōris 1442
246.5 mūsica, mūsicae 1442
246.6 (dialogue) 1443
246.7 (dialogue) 1444

247 A Twin and the In-Laws 1447
247.1 geminus, geminī 1447
247.2 socer, socerī 1448
247.3 socrus, socrūs 1449
247.4 gener, generī 1450
247.5 nurus, nurūs 1450

248 Opportunity, Danger, Kindness, Duty, Work 1453
248.1 occāsiō, occāsiōnis 1453
248.2 perīculum, perīculī 1454
248.3 beneficium, beneficiī 1455
248.4 officium, officiī 1456
248.5 labor, labōris 1456

249 Wood, Marble, Glass, Hide, Linen 1459
249.1 lignum, lignī 1459
249.2 marmor, marmoris 1460
249.3 vitrum, vitrī 1461
249.4 corium, coriī 1461
249.5 līnum, līnī 1462

250 Vine, Oak, Pine, Laurel, Violet 1465
250.1 vītis, vītis 1465
250.2 quercus, quercūs 1466
250.3 pīnus, pīnūs 1467
250.4 laurus, laurī 1468
250.5 viola, violae 1468

251 Puppy, Tiger, Club, Chain, Shield 1471
251.1 catulus, catulī 1471
251.2 tigris, tigris 1472
251.3 clāva, clāvae 1473
251.4 catēna, catēnae 1473
251.5 scūtum, scūtī 1474

252 Small flask, Frying pan, Oven, Candlestick, Small tablet 1477
252.1 ampulla, ampullae 1477
252.2 sartāgō, sartāginis 1478
252.3 furnus, furnī 1479
252.4 candēlābrum, candēlābrī 1480
252.5 tabella, tabellae 1480

253 Holidays, Banquet, Sacrifice, Altar, Goddess 1483
253.1 fēriae, fēriārum 1483
253.2 convīvium, convīviī 1484
253.3 sacrificium, sacrificiī 1485
253.4 āra, ārae 1486
253.5 dea, deae 1486

254 Pack, Satchel, Money bag, Tent, Flag 1489
254.1 sarcina, sarcinae 1489
254.2 pēra, pērae 1490
254.3 marsuppium, marsuppiī 1491
254.4 tabernāculum, tabernāculī 1491
254.5 vexillum, vexillī 1492
254.6 (dialogue) 1493
254.7 (dialogue) 1494

255 To hold, To burst, To warm, To fill, To measure 1495
255.1 teneō, tenēre 1495
255.2 rumpō, rumpere 1496

255.3 calefaciō, calefacere 1497
255.4 impleō, implēre 1498
255.5 mētior, mētīrī 1498

256 To clap, To cross, To increase, To lessen, To warn 1501
256.1 plaudō, plaudere 1501
256.2 trānseō, trānsīre 1502
256.3 augeō, augēre 1503
256.4 minuō, minuere 1504
256.5 moneō, monēre 1504

257 To deserve, To correct, To offer, To watch, To stroll 1507
257.1 mereor, merērī 1507
257.2 ēmendō, ēmendāre 1508
257.3 offerō, offerre 1509
257.4 observō, observāre 1510
257.5 spatior, spatiārī 1510

258 To dream, To push, To go past, To make no sound, To dread 1513
258.1 somniō, somniāre 1513
258.2 pellō, pellere 1514
258.3 praetereō, praeterīre 1515
258.4 sileō, silēre 1516
258.5 metuō, metuere 1516

259 To pray, To recommend, To breathe, To give up, To exchange 1519
259.1 ōrō, ōrāre 1519
259.2 commendō, commendāre 1520
259.3 spīrō, spīrāre 1521
259.4 dēsistō, dēsistere 1522
259.5 permūtō, permūtāre 1522

260 To press out, To feed, To put together, To notice, To blush 1525
260.1 exprimō, exprimere 1525
260.2 alō, alere 1526
260.3 compōnō, compōnere 1527
260.4 animadvertō, animadvertere 1528

260.5 ērubēscō, ērubēscere 1528

261 To give birth to, To order, To force, To mourn, To dig 1531
261.1 gignō, gignere 1531
261.2 iubeō, iubēre 1532
261.3 cōgō, cōgere 1533
261.4 lūgeō, lūgēre 1534
261.5 fodiō, fodere 1534

262 Trust, Courage, Shame, Envy, Boredom 1537
262.1 fidēs, fideī 1537
262.2 virtūs, virtūtis 1538
262.3 pudor, pudōris 1539
262.4 invidia, invidiae 1540
262.5 taedium, taediī 1540

263 Next day, Meanwhile, At some time, For a long time, Shortly 1543
263.1 postrīdiē 1543
263.2 intereā 1544
263.3 aliquandō 1545
263.4 diū 1546
263.5 brevī 1546
263.6 (dialogue) 1547
263.7 (dialogue) 1548

264 Nowhere, From all sides, Here and there, Upwards, Downwards 1551
264.1 nusquam 1551
264.2 undique 1552
264.3 passim 1553
264.4 sūrsum 1553
264.5 deorsum 1554

265 Even as, As, If only, On the contrary, At least 1557
265.1 sīcut 1557
265.2 velut 1558
265.3 utinam 1559
265.4 immō 1559
265.5 saltem 1560

266 Wonderful, Different, Similar, Fair, Unjust 1563
266.1 mīrus, mīra, mīrum 1563
266.2 dīversus, dīversa, dīversum 1564
266.3 similis, simile 1565
266.4 iūstus, iūsta, iūstum 1566
266.5 iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum 1566

267 Fat, Clever, Special, Former, Nearest 1569
267.1 pinguis, pingue 1569
267.2 callidus, callida, callidum 1570
267.3 praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum 1571
267.4 prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum 1572
267.5 proximus, proxima, proximum 1572

268 Second of two, Suitable, Fit, Ready, Facing 1575
268.1 alter, altera, alterum 1575
268.2 idōneus, idōnea, idōneum 1576
268.3 aptus, apta, aptum 1577
268.4 parātus, parāta, parātum 1578
268.5 adversus, adversa, adversum 1578

269 Gloomy, Drunk, Sober, Greedy, Thrifty 1581
269.1 maestus, maesta, maestum 1581
269.2 ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium 1582
269.3 sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium 1583
269.4 avārus, avāra, avārum 1584
269.5 parcus, parca, parcum 1584

270 Racecourse, Hall of justice, Senate house, Anchor, Oar 1587
270.1 circus, circī 1587
270.2 basilica, basilicae 1588
270.3 cūria, cūriae 1589
270.4 ancora, ancorae 1590
270.5 rēmus, rēmī 1590

271 People, State, Homeland, Enemy, War 1593
271.1 populus, populī 1593
271.2 cīvitās, cīvitātis 1594
271.3 patria, patriae 1595
271.4 hostis, hostis 1596

271.5 bellum, bellī 1596

272 Butcher, Innkeeper, Banker, Envoy, Clerk 1599
272.1 lanius, laniī 1599
272.2 caupō, caupōnis 1600
272.3 argentārius, argentāriī 1601
272.4 lēgātus, lēgātī 1602
272.5 scrība, scrībae 1602
272.6 (dialogue) 1603
272.7 (dialogue) 1604

273 Wedding, Husband or wife, Parent, Grandson, Granddaughter 1607
273.1 nūptiae, nūptiārum 1607
273.2 coniūnx, coniugis 1608
273.3 parēns, parentis 1609
273.4 nepōs, nepōtis 1610
273.5 neptis, neptis 1610

274 Leisure, Business, Profit, Loss, Debt 1613
274.1 ōtium, ōtiī 1613
274.2 negōtium, negōtiī 1614
274.3 lucrum, lucrī 1615
274.4 damnum, damnī 1615
274.5 dēbitum, dēbitī 1616

275 Silk, Mud, Dust, Smoke, Ash 1619
275.1 sēricum, sēricī 1619
275.2 lutum, lutī 1620
275.3 pulvis, pulveris 1621
275.4 fūmus, fūmī 1621
275.5 cinis, cineris 1622

276 Wasp, Gnat, Flea, Worm, Tortoise 1625
276.1 vespa, vespae 1625
276.2 culex, culicis 1626
276.3 pūlex, pūlicis 1627
276.4 vermis, vermis 1628
276.5 testūdō, testūdinis 1628

277 Helmet, Spear, Bow, Arrow, Trumpet 1631
277.1 galea, galeae 1631
277.2 hasta, hastae 1632
277.3 arcus, arcūs 1633
277.4 sagitta, sagittae 1634
277.5 tuba, tubae 1634

278 Book-roll, Page, Letter of the alphabet, Word, Name 1637
278.1 volūmen, volūminis 1637
278.2 pāgina, pāginae 1638
278.3 littera, litterae 1639
278.4 verbum, verbī 1640
278.5 nōmen, nōminis 1640

279 Cherry, Plum, Cabbage, Leek, Porridge 1643
279.1 cerasum, cerasī 1643
279.2 prūnum, prūnī 1644
279.3 brassica, brassicae 1645
279.4 porrum, porrī 1645
279.5 puls, pultis 1646

280 Tower, Column, City walls, Ditch, Rampart 1649
280.1 turris, turris 1649
280.2 columna, columnae 1650
280.3 moenia, moenium 1651
280.4 fossa, fossae 1652
280.5 vallum, vallī 1652
280.6 (dialogue) 1653
280.7 (dialogue) 1654

281 The Scene and the Event 1657
281.1 vīdī, vīdit, vīdērunt 1657
281.2 eram, erat, erant 1659
281.3 ambulābam, habēbam, legēbam 1660
281.4 pluēbat … vēnit 1661
281.5 (review) 1663

282 A Story in Order 1665
282.1 prīmum, deinde, tum, postrēmō 1665
282.2 dum 1667

282.3 (reading) 1668
282.4 (review) 1669

283 What I Think 1671
283.1 putō, putāre 1671
283.2 meā sententiā, mihi vidētur 1673
283.3 ergō, itaque, igitur 1674
283.4 (review) 1676

284 What You Should Do, and Why 1677
284.1 dēbēs, nōn dēbēs; dēbēbās 1677
284.2 cūr? — quia ..., quod ..., nam 1679
284.3 (review) 1680

285 Asking the Way 1683
285.1 quā viā ad forum? 1683
285.2 rēctā viā, ad dextram, ad sinistram 1684
285.3 iter, itineris 1686
285.4 (review) 1687

286 By Sea 1689
286.1 nāvis, nāvis 1689
286.2 naulum, naulī 1690
286.3 āmittō, āmittere 1691
286.4 (review) 1693

287 How It Felt 1695
287.1 laetus eram, laeta eram 1695
287.2 spērō, spērāre 1697
287.3 (review) 1698

288 Bigger Than, and How Long 1701
288.1 longior quam; maior, minor, melior 1701
288.2 abhinc 1703
288.3 (review) 1704

289 If 1707
289.1 sī, nisi 1707
289.2 sī pluit, in vīllā manēmus 1708
289.3 pendet ex 1709
289.4 (review) 1711

290 Would 1713
290.1 velim, possim, mālim 1713
290.2 sī hīc essēs, laetus essem 1715
290.3 (review) 1716
290.4 (epistula) 1717

291 Prīmō, tunc, dēmum 1719
291.1 prīmō 1719
291.2 tunc 1720
291.3 antequam 1721
291.4 nōndum 1722
291.5 dēmum 1723

292 Repente et cōnfestim 1725
292.1 repente 1725
292.2 cōnfestim 1726
292.3 continuō 1727
292.4 extemplō 1728
292.5 prōtinus 1729

293 Paulātim 1731
293.1 paulātim 1731
293.2 sēnsim 1732
293.3 gradātim 1733
293.4 paulisper 1734
293.5 aliquamdiū 1735

294 Identidem 1737
294.1 identidem 1737
294.2 subinde 1738
294.3 crēbrō 1739
294.4 plērumque 1740
294.5 quotiēns 1741

295 Noctū et interdiū 1743
295.1 noctū 1743
295.2 interdiū 1744
295.3 vesperī 1745
295.4 mātūrē 1746
295.5 dūdum 1747

296 Initium et exitus 1749
296.1 initium, initiī 1749
296.2 prīncipium, prīncipiī 1750
296.3 exitus, exitūs 1751
296.4 intervallum, intervallī 1752
296.5 mōmentum, mōmentī 1753

297 Incipere et fīnīre 1755
297.1 incipiō, incipere 1755
297.2 coepī, coepisse 1756
297.3 fīniō, fīnīre 1757
297.4 perficiō, perficere 1758
297.5 intermittō, intermittere 1759

298 Quid ēvēnit 1761
298.1 ēveniō, ēvenīre 1761
298.2 fīō, fierī 1762
298.3 orior, orīrī 1763
298.4 interveniō, intervenīre 1764
298.5 posterus, postera, posterum 1765
298.6 (dialogue) 1766

299 Nārrātiō 1769
299.1 nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis 1769
299.2 commemorō, commemorāre 1770
299.3 memorō, memorāre 1771
299.4 referō, referre 1772
299.5 inquam 1773

300 Tabellārius et praecō 1775
300.1 tabellārius, tabellāriī 1775
300.2 praecō, praecōnis 1776
300.3 mandātum, mandātī 1777
300.4 lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis 1778
300.5 renūntiō, renūntiāre 1779

301 Rūmor et susurrus 1781
301.1 susurrus, susurrī 1781
301.2 susurrō, susurrāre 1782
301.3 vulgō, vulgāre 1783

301.4 crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere 1784
301.5 perhibeō, perhibēre 1785

302 Speculātōrēs 1787
302.1 speculātor, speculātōris 1787
302.2 explōrātor, explōrātōris 1788
302.3 explōrō, explōrāre 1789
302.4 prōdō, prōdere 1790
302.5 patefaciō, patefacere 1791

303 Fūrtum 1793
303.1 fūrtum, fūrtī 1793
303.2 latrōcinium, latrōciniī 1794
303.3 grassātor, grassātōris 1795
303.4 praedō, praedōnis 1796
303.5 praeda, praedae 1797

304 Fūr comprehēnsus 1799
304.1 effringō, effringere 1799
304.2 claustrum, claustrī 1800
304.3 rapiō, rapere 1801
304.4 dēprehendō, dēprehendere 1802
304.5 comprehendō, comprehendere 1803

305 Scelus et fraus 1805
305.1 scelus, sceleris 1805
305.2 facinus, facinoris 1806
305.3 scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum 1807
305.4 fraus, fraudis 1808
305.5 dolus, dolī 1809

306 Caedēs 1811
306.1 caedēs, caedis 1811
306.2 homicīda, homicīdae 1812
306.3 sīcārius, sīcāriī 1813
306.4 pugiō, pugiōnis 1814
306.5 occīdō, occīdere 1815
306.6 (dialogue) 1816

307 Venēnum 1819
307.1 venēnum, venēnī 1819
307.2 venēficus, venēficī 1820
307.3 īnsidiae, īnsidiārum 1821
307.4 coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis 1822
307.5 prōditor, prōditōris 1823

308 Iūdex et lēx 1825
308.1 iūdex, iūdicis 1825
308.2 iūdicium, iūdiciī 1826
308.3 iūdicō, iūdicāre 1827
308.4 lēx, lēgis 1828
308.5 iūs, iūris 1829

309 Accūsātor et patrōnus 1831
309.1 accūsō, accūsāre 1831
309.2 accūsātor, accūsātōris 1832
309.3 advocātus, advocātī 1833
309.4 patrōnus, patrōnī 1834
309.5 testimōnium, testimōniī 1835

310 Vērum aut falsum 1837
310.1 iūrō, iūrāre 1837
310.2 periūrium, periūriī 1838
310.3 mentior, mentīrī 1839
310.4 arguō, arguere 1840
310.5 indicium, indiciī 1841

311 Damnātus aut absolūtus 1843
311.1 damnō, damnāre 1843
311.2 absolvō, absolvere 1844
311.3 nocēns, nocentis 1845
311.4 innocēns, innocentis 1846
311.5 culpa, culpae 1847

312 Poena et supplicium 1849
312.1 fateor, fatērī 1849
312.2 pūniō, pūnīre 1850
312.3 supplicium, suppliciī 1851
312.4 exsilium, exsiliī 1852

312.5 vinculum, vinculī 1853

313 Ruīna 1855
313.1 ruō, ruere 1855
313.2 ruīna, ruīnae 1856
313.3 corruō, corruere 1857
313.4 collābor, collābī 1858
313.5 dēcidō, dēcidere 1859

314 Cāsus in viā 1861
314.1 offendō, offendere 1861
314.2 praeceps, praecipitis 1862
314.3 praecipitō, praecipitāre 1863
314.4 plāga, plāgae 1864
314.5 saucius, saucia, saucium 1865
314.6 (dialogue) 1866

315 Naufragium 1869
315.1 naufragium, naufragiī 1869
315.2 naufragus, naufraga, naufragum 1870
315.3 mergō, mergere 1871
315.4 obruō, obruere 1872
315.5 calamitās, calamitātis 1873

316 Auxilium 1875
316.1 ēripiō, ēripere 1875
316.2 incolumis, incolume 1876
316.3 subveniō, subvenīre 1877
316.4 succurrō, succurrere 1878
316.5 auxilium, auxiliī 1879

317 Incendium 1881
317.1 incendium, incendiī 1881
317.2 aestus, aestūs 1882
317.3 favilla, favillae 1883
317.4 torris, torris 1884
317.5 ārdor, ārdōris 1885

318 Ārdet 1887
318.1 cremō, cremāre 1887
318.2 ūrō, ūrere 1888
318.3 flagrō, flagrāre 1889
318.4 fūmō, fūmāre 1890
318.5 cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre 1891

319 Vigilēs 1893
319.1 sīphō, sīphōnis 1893
319.2 hama, hamae 1894
319.3 restinguō, restinguere 1895
319.4 excubiae, excubiārum 1896
319.5 ambūrō, ambūrere 1897

320 Pavor 1899
320.1 pavor, pavōris 1899
320.2 metus, metūs 1900
320.3 formīdō, formīdinis 1901
320.4 pavidus, pavida, pavidum 1902
320.5 trepidō, trepidāre 1903

321 Minae et tumultus 1905
321.1 minae, minārum 1905
321.2 minitor, minitārī 1906
321.3 terreō, terrēre 1907
321.4 tumultus, tumultūs 1908
321.5 clāmor, clāmōris 1909

322 Fuga 1911
322.1 fuga, fugae 1911
322.2 effugiō, effugere 1912
322.3 ēvādō, ēvādere 1913
322.4 pereō, perīre 1914
322.5 custōs, custōdis 1915
322.6 (dialogue) 1916

323 Īnfāns nātus est 1919
323.1 pariō, parere 1919
323.2 partus, partūs 1920
323.3 obstetrīx, obstetrīcis 1921

323.4 nūtriō, nūtrīre 1922
323.5 nūtrīx, nūtrīcis 1923

324 Puer et pueritia 1925
324.1 cūnae, cūnārum 1925
324.2 puer, puerī 1926
324.3 īnfantia, īnfantiae 1927
324.4 pueritia, pueritiae 1928
324.5 ēducō, ēducāre 1929

325 Nōmen et bulla 1931
325.1 bulla, bullae 1931
325.2 crepundia, crepundiōrum 1932
325.3 praenōmen, praenōminis 1933
325.4 cognōmen, cognōminis 1934
325.5 tūtor, tūtōris 1935

326 Aetātēs 1937
326.1 adulēscentia, adulēscentiae 1937
326.2 iuventūs, iuventūtis 1938
326.3 senectūs, senectūtis 1939
326.4 orbus, orba, orbum 1940
326.5 pūpillus, pūpillī 1941

327 Spōnsālia 1943
327.1 spōnsa, spōnsae 1943
327.2 spōnsālia, spōnsālium 1944
327.3 dēspondeō, dēspondēre 1945
327.4 nūpta, nūptae 1946
327.5 mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī 1947

328 Nūptiae 1949
328.1 flammeum, flammeī 1949
328.2 prōnuba, prōnubae 1950
328.3 nūptiālis, nūptiāle 1951
328.4 mātrōna, mātrōnae 1952
328.5 dīvortium, dīvortiī 1953

329 Mors 1955
329.1 mors, mortis 1955
329.2 mortuus, mortua, mortuum 1956
329.3 exspīrō, exspīrāre 1957
329.4 obeō, obīre 1958
329.5 dēcēdō, dēcēdere 1959

330 Fūnus 1961
330.1 fūnus, fūneris 1961
330.2 sepeliō, sepelīre 1962
330.3 sepultūra, sepultūrae 1963
330.4 rogus, rogī 1964
330.5 exsequiae, exsequiārum 1965
330.6 (dialogue) 1966

331 Lūctus 1969
331.1 lūctus, lūctūs 1969
331.2 nēnia, nēniae 1970
331.3 laudātiō, laudātiōnis 1971
331.4 monumentum, monumentī 1972
331.5 īnferiae, īnferiārum 1973

332 Testāmentum 1975
332.1 hērēs, hērēdis 1975
332.2 hērēditās, hērēditātis 1976
332.3 testāmentum, testāmentī 1977
332.4 obsignō, obsignāre 1978
332.5 relinquō, relinquere 1979

333 Diēs fēstus 1981
333.1 fēstus, fēsta, fēstum 1981
333.2 sollemnis, sollemne 1982
333.3 pompa, pompae 1983
333.4 epulae, epulārum 1984
333.5 epulor, epulārī 1985

334 Sacrificium 1987
334.1 sacerdōs, sacerdōtis 1987
334.2 victima, victimae 1988
334.3 immolō, immolāre 1989

334.4 voveō, vovēre 1990
334.5 vōtum, vōtī 1991

335 Lūdī circēnsēs 1993
335.1 aurīga, aurīgae 1993
335.2 quadrīgae, quadrīgārum 1994
335.3 mēta, mētae 1995
335.4 factiō, factiōnis 1996
335.5 circēnsis, circēnse 1997

336 Mūnus 1999
336.1 gladiātor, gladiātōris 1999
336.2 lanista, lanistae 2000
336.3 mūnus, mūneris 2001
336.4 vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis 2002
336.5 bēstia, bēstiae 2003

337 Palma et praemium 2005
337.1 palma, palmae 2005
337.2 praemium, praemiī 2006
337.3 certō, certāre 2007
337.4 certāmen, certāminis 2008
337.5 plausus, plausūs 2009

338 Legiō 2011
338.1 legiō, legiōnis 2011
338.2 cohors, cohortis 2012
338.3 centuriō, centuriōnis 2013
338.4 signifer, signiferī 2014
338.5 tribūnus, tribūnī 2015
338.6 (dialogue) 2016

339 Proelium 2019
339.1 proelium, proeliī 2019
339.2 aciēs, aciēī 2020
339.3 agmen, agminis 2021
339.4 incursiō, incursiōnis 2022
339.5 dīmicō, dīmicāre 2023

340 Arma 2025
340.1 arma, armōrum 2025
340.2 eques, equitis 2026
340.3 pedes, peditis 2027
340.4 lōrīca, lōrīcae 2028
340.5 clipeus, clipeī 2029

341 Obsidiō 2031
341.1 obsideō, obsidēre 2031
341.2 obsidiō, obsidiōnis 2032
341.3 oppugnō, oppugnāre 2033
341.4 expugnō, expugnāre 2034
341.5 ariēs, arietis 2035

342 Clādēs 2037
342.1 fugō, fugāre 2037
342.2 superō, superāre 2038
342.3 caedō, caedere 2039
342.4 vāstō, vāstāre 2040
342.5 clādēs, clādis 2041

343 Triumphus 2043
343.1 captīvus, captīvī 2043
343.2 dēdō, dēdere 2044
343.3 dēditiō, dēditiōnis 2045
343.4 foedus, foederis 2046
343.5 triumphus, triumphī 2047

344 Maiōrēs nostrī 2049
344.1 maiōrēs, maiōrum 2049
344.2 annālēs, annālium 2050
344.3 conditor, conditōris 2051
344.4 orīgō, orīginis 2052
344.5 vetustās, vetustātis 2053

345 Rēgēs et dictātōrēs 2055
345.1 rēx, rēgis 2055
345.2 rēgnō, rēgnāre 2056
345.3 tyrannus, tyrannī 2057
345.4 plēbs, plēbis 2058

345.5 dictātor, dictātōris 2059

346 Deī et deae 2061
346.1 deus, deī 2061
346.2 dīvus, dīvī 2062
346.3 nūmen, nūminis 2063
346.4 mortālis, mortāle 2064
346.5 immortālis, immortāle 2065
346.6 (dialogue) 2066

347 Mōnstra et hērōēs 2069
347.1 mōnstrum, mōnstrī 2069
347.2 gigās, gigantis 2070
347.3 hērōs, hērōis 2071
347.4 nympha, nymphae 2072
347.5 vellus, velleris 2073

348 Ōrāculum 2075
348.1 ōrāculum, ōrāculī 2075
348.2 vātēs, vātis 2076
348.3 prōdigium, prōdigiī 2077
348.4 ōmen, ōminis 2078
348.5 vāticinor, vāticinārī 2079

349 Fābulae mīrae 2081
349.1 fābulor, fābulārī 2081
349.2 āiō 2082
349.3 mīrābilis, mīrābile 2083
349.4 incrēdibilis, incrēdibile 2084
349.5 commentum, commentī 2085

350 In macellō 2087
350.1 obsōnō, obsōnāre 2087
350.2 obsōnium, obsōniī 2088
350.3 abluō, abluere 2089
350.4 tergeō, tergēre 2090
350.5 cultellus, cultellī 2091

351 Concīdere et terere 2093
351.1 concīdō, concīdere 2093
351.2 secō, secāre 2094
351.3 mortārium, mortāriī 2095
351.4 pistillum, pistillī 2096
351.5 terō, terere 2097

352 Pānis domesticus 2099
352.1 mola, molae 2099
352.2 crībrum, crībrī 2100
352.3 subigō, subigere 2101
352.4 fermentum, fermentī 2102
352.5 clībanus, clībanī 2103

353 Aqua fervet 2105
353.1 ferveō, fervēre 2105
353.2 caccabus, caccabī 2106
353.3 ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum 2107
353.4 spūma, spūmae 2108
353.5 dēspūmō, dēspūmāre 2109

354 Assum et frīctum 2111
354.1 assus, assa, assum 2111
354.2 lūcānica, lūcānicae 2112
354.3 crāticula, crāticulae 2113
354.4 frīgō, frīgere 2114
354.5 torreō, torrēre 2115
354.6 (dialogue) 2116

355 Condīmenta 2119
355.1 condiō, condīre 2119
355.2 condīmentum, condīmentī 2120
355.3 aspergō, aspergere 2121
355.4 īnfundō, īnfundere 2122
355.5 cōlō, cōlāre 2123

356 Cēna appōnitur 2125
356.1 appōnō, appōnere 2125
356.2 ministrō, ministrāre 2126
356.3 triclīnium, triclīniī 2127

356.4 discumbō, discumbere 2128
356.5 ferculum, ferculī 2129
356.6 (dialogue) 2130
356.7 (dialogue) 2131

357 What I Think and Judge 2133
357.1 arbitror, arbitrārī 2133
357.2 exīstimō, exīstimāre 2134
357.3 cēnseō, cēnsēre 2135
357.4 opīnor, opīnārī 2136
357.5 opīniō, opīniōnis 2137

358 Agreeing and Disagreeing 2139
358.1 assentior, assentīrī 2139
358.2 dissentiō, dissentīre 2140
358.3 cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre 2141
358.4 cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs 2142
358.5 contrōversia, contrōversiae 2143

359 Weighing a Question 2145
359.1 ponderō, ponderāre 2145
359.2 dēlīberō, dēlīberāre 2146
359.3 dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis 2147
359.4 probābilis, probābile 2148
359.5 vērisimilis, vērisimile 2149

360 Plain, Clear and Absurd 2151
360.1 manifestus, manifesta, manifestum 2151
360.2 perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum 2152
360.3 absurdus, absurda, absurdum 2153
360.4 stultitia, stultitiae 2154
360.5 cōnstantia, cōnstantiae 2155

361 Proof and Example 2157
361.1 argūmentum, argūmentī 2157
361.2 exemplum, exemplī 2158
361.3 documentum, documentī 2159
361.4 dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre 2160
361.5 cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre 2161

362 Proving Someone Wrong 2163
362.1 refellō, refellere 2163
362.2 refūtō, refūtāre 2164
362.3 redarguō, redarguere 2165
362.4 convincō, convincere 2166
362.5 coniectūra, coniectūrae 2167

363 Granting and Denying 2169
363.1 concēdō, concēdere 2169
363.2 dēnegō, dēnegāre 2170
363.3 cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī 2171
363.4 obiciō, obicere 2172
363.5 contendō, contendere 2173

364 Drawing a Conclusion 2175
364.1 cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere 2175
364.2 cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis 2176
364.3 ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī 2177
364.4 significō, significāre 2178
364.5 suspīciō, suspīciōnis 2179
364.6 (dialogue) 2180

365 For, Of Course, Namely 2183
365.1 quandōquidem 2183
365.2 quippe 2184
365.3 etenim 2185
365.4 nempe 2186
365.5 scīlicet 2187

366 Evidently, And Yet, So Then 2189
366.1 vidēlicet 2189
366.2 nīmīrum 2190
366.3 atquī 2191
366.4 proinde 2192
366.5 idcircō 2193

367 Since, Lest, But That 2195
367.1 cum 2195
367.2 nē 2196
367.3 quīn 2197

367.4 quōminus 2198
367.5 tamquam 2199

368 The Orator 2201
368.1 ōrātor, ōrātōris 2201
368.2 ēloquentia, ēloquentiae 2202
368.3 disputātiō, disputātiōnis 2203
368.4 disserō, disserere 2204
368.5 ēloquor, ēloquī 2205

369 Urging and Dissuading 2207
369.1 hortor, hortārī 2207
369.2 dissuādeō, dissuādēre 2208
369.3 persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis 2209
369.4 excūsō, excūsāre 2210
369.5 excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis 2211

370 Weight and Standing 2213
370.1 auctōritās, auctōritātis 2213
370.2 dignitās, dignitātis 2214
370.3 gravitās, gravitātis 2215
370.4 levitās, levitātis 2216
370.5 temeritās, temeritātis 2217

371 At the Speakers' Platform 2219
371.1 rōstra, rōstrōrum 2219
371.2 cōntiō, cōntiōnis 2220
371.3 prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre 2221
371.4 recitō, recitāre 2222
371.5 temerē 2223

372 What Sets Things Going 2225
372.1 auctor, auctōris 2225
372.2 impulsus, impulsūs 2226
372.3 efficiō, efficere 2227
372.4 efficāx, efficācis 2228
372.5 excitō, excitāre 2229
372.6 (dialogue) 2230

373 How Things Turn Out 2233
373.1 effectus, effectūs 2233
373.2 cōnsequor, cōnsequī 2234
373.3 prōveniō, prōvenīre 2235
373.4 succēdō, succēdere 2236
373.5 redundō, redundāre 2237

374 Harm and Help 2239
374.1 noceō, nocēre 2239
374.2 prōsum, prōdesse 2240
374.3 obsum, obesse 2241
374.4 impediō, impedīre 2242
374.5 perturbō, perturbāre 2243

375 Things That Happen 2245
375.1 contingō, contingere 2245
375.2 exsistō, exsistere 2246
375.3 fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum 2247
375.4 inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum 2248
375.5 mōtus, mōtūs 2249

376 Work and Workers 2251
376.1 opus, operis 2251
376.2 opifex, opificis 2252
376.3 artifex, artificis 2253
376.4 operārius, operāriī 2254
376.5 operor, operārī 2255

377 Trades of the Town 2257
377.1 fullō, fullōnis 2257
377.2 aurifex, aurificis 2258
377.3 lignārius, lignāriī 2259
377.4 caementārius, caementāriī 2260
377.5 statuārius, statuāriī 2261

378 Making Things by Hand 2263
378.1 exerceō, exercēre 2263
378.2 fabricor, fabricārī 2264
378.3 texō, texere 2265
378.4 suō, suere 2266

378.5 sculpō, sculpere 2267

379 Earning a Living 2269
379.1 quaestus, quaestūs 2269
379.2 stīpendium, stīpendiī 2270
379.3 mercēnārius, mercēnāriī 2271
379.4 labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum 2272
379.5 dīligentia, dīligentiae 2273

380 Hiring and Hard Labour 2275
380.1 condūcō, condūcere 2275
380.2 locō, locāre 2276
380.3 famulus, famulī 2277
380.4 nāvō, nāvāre 2278
380.5 fatīgō, fatīgāre 2279
380.6 (dialogue) 2280

381 Pleaders, Clients and Clerks 2283
381.1 causidicus, causidicī 2283
381.2 cliēns, clientis 2284
381.3 nāviculārius, nāviculāriī 2285
381.4 librārius, librāriī 2286
381.5 agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris 2287

382 Senators and People 2289
382.1 senātor, senātōris 2289
382.2 patricius, patricia, patricium 2290
382.3 plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium 2291
382.4 nōbilis, nōbile 2292
382.5 populāris, populāre 2293

383 The Magistrates 2295
383.1 magistrātus, magistrātūs 2295
383.2 praetor, praetōris 2296
383.3 aedīlis, aedīlis 2297
383.4 quaestor, quaestōris 2298
383.5 cēnsor, cēnsōris 2299

384 Elections 2301
384.1 suffrāgium, suffrāgiī 2301
384.2 comitia, comitiōrum 2302
384.3 candidātus, candidātī 2303
384.4 ambitiō, ambitiōnis 2304
384.5 ēligō, ēligere 2305

385 Ruling and Governing 2307
385.1 regō, regere 2307
385.2 gubernō, gubernāre 2308
385.3 administrō, administrāre 2309
385.4 imperium, imperiī 2310
385.5 prīnceps, prīncipis 2311

386 Living Together 2313
386.1 societās, societātis 2313
386.2 hūmānitās, hūmānitātis 2314
386.3 mōs, mōris 2315
386.4 īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī 2316
386.5 concordia, concordiae 2317

387 Unrest 2319
387.1 discordia, discordiae 2319
387.2 sēditiō, sēditiōnis 2320
387.3 sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum 2321
387.4 turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum 2322
387.5 concitō, concitāre 2323

388 Towns and Associations 2325
388.1 mūniceps, mūnicipis 2325
388.2 decuriō, decuriōnis 2326
388.3 colōnia, colōniae 2327
388.4 sodālis, sodālis 2328
388.5 collēgium, collēgiī 2329
388.6 (dialogue) 2330

389 Duty and Freedom 2333
389.1 servitūs, servitūtis 2333
389.2 manūmittō, manūmittere 2334
389.3 pietās, pietātis 2335

389.4 onus, oneris 2336
389.5 obsequium, obsequiī 2337

390 On One Condition 2339
390.1 condiciō, condiciōnis 2339
390.2 sīn 2340
390.3 dummodo 2341
390.4 modo 2342
390.5 quamvīs 2343

391 Even If and Otherwise 2345
391.1 etiamsī 2345
391.2 tametsī 2346
391.3 aliōquī 2347
391.4 secus 2348
391.5 sīve 2349

392 Taking Care 2351
392.1 caveō, cavēre 2351
392.2 cautiō, cautiōnis 2352
392.3 necessitās, necessitātis 2353
392.4 opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum 2354
392.5 praecaveō, praecavēre 2355

393 Making Up My Mind 2357
393.1 statuō, statuere 2357
393.2 dēstinō, dēstināre 2358
393.3 prōpositum, prōpositī 2359
393.4 inceptum, inceptī 2360
393.5 cōnor, cōnārī 2361

394 Getting Ready 2363
394.1 apparō, apparāre 2363
394.2 dispōnō, dispōnere 2364
394.3 ōrdinō, ōrdināre 2365
394.4 mōlior, mōlīrī 2366
394.5 praevideō, praevidēre 2367

395 Sooner or Later 2369
395.1 mātūrō, mātūrāre 2369
395.2 differō, differre 2370
395.3 prōrogō, prōrogāre 2371
395.4 dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis 2372
395.5 exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis 2373

396 Making a Promise 2375
396.1 prōmissum, prōmissī 2375
396.2 polliceor, pollicērī 2376
396.3 fīdūcia, fīdūciae 2377
396.4 spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis 2378
396.5 obstringō, obstringere 2379
396.6 (dialogue) 2380

397 Oaths and Agreements 2383
397.1 iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī 2383
397.2 cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis 2384
397.3 pacīscor, pacīscī 2385
397.4 pactum, pactī 2386
397.5 stipulor, stipulārī 2387

398 Keeping My Word 2389
398.1 violō, violāre 2389
398.2 praestō, praestāre 2390
398.3 obligō, obligāre 2391
398.4 ratus, rata, ratum 2392
398.5 irritus, irrita, irritum 2393

399 Trust and Betrayal 2395
399.1 perfidia, perfidiae 2395
399.2 perfidus, perfida, perfidum 2396
399.3 fallācia, fallāciae 2397
399.4 dēcipiō, dēcipere 2398
399.5 testor, testārī 2399

400 Teaching 2401
400.1 doceō, docēre 2401
400.2 ērudiō, ērudīre 2402
400.3 īnstituō, īnstituere 2403

400.4 īnstruō, īnstruere 2404
400.5 praecipiō, praecipere 2405

401 At School 2407
401.1 paedagōgus, paedagōgī 2407
401.2 praeceptor, praeceptōris 2408
401.3 grammaticus, grammaticī 2409
401.4 litterātor, litterātōris 2410
401.5 condiscipulus, condiscipulī 2411

402 Learning by Heart 2413
402.1 ēdiscō, ēdiscere 2413
402.2 perdiscō, perdiscere 2414
402.3 studeō, studēre 2415
402.4 meditor, meditārī 2416
402.5 recordor, recordārī 2417

403 Learned and Unlearned 2419
403.1 doctus, docta, doctum 2419
403.2 indoctus, indocta, indoctum 2420
403.3 ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum 2421
403.4 sciēns, scientis 2422
403.5 imperītus, imperīta, imperītum 2423

404 What Pupils Studied 2425
404.1 rhētor, rhētoris 2425
404.2 rhētorica, rhētoricae 2426
404.3 dialectica, dialecticae 2427
404.4 geōmetria, geōmetriae 2428
404.5 elementum, elementī 2429
404.6 (dialogue) 2430

405 Counting and Dictation 2433
405.1 abacus, abacī 2433
405.2 calculus, calculī 2434
405.3 ēnumerō, ēnumerāre 2435
405.4 dictō, dictāre 2436
405.5 pēnsum, pēnsī 2437

406 Good and Bad Pupils 2439
406.1 ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum 2439
406.2 attentus, attenta, attentum 2440
406.3 tardus, tarda, tardum 2441
406.4 sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum 2442
406.5 neglegēns, neglegentis 2443

407 Knowing and Not Knowing 2445
407.1 scientia, scientiae 2445
407.2 intellegentia, intellegentiae 2446
407.3 doctrīna, doctrīnae 2447
407.4 īnscītia, īnscītiae 2448
407.5 imitor, imitārī 2449

408 Mistakes and the Cane 2451
408.1 mendum, mendī 2451
408.2 vitium, vitiī 2452
408.3 ferula, ferulae 2453
408.4 verber, verberis 2454
408.5 vāpulō, vāpulāre 2455

409 Edicts and Rules 2457
409.1 ēdictum, ēdictī 2457
409.2 dēcrētum, dēcrētī 2458
409.3 praeceptum, praeceptī 2459
409.4 lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum 2460
409.5 licitus, licita, licitum 2461

410 Passing a Law 2463
410.1 rogātiō, rogātiōnis 2463
410.2 prōmulgō, prōmulgāre 2464
410.3 abrogō, abrogāre 2465
410.4 sanciō, sancīre 2466
410.5 praescrībō, praescrībere 2467

411 Going to Law 2469
411.1 tribūnal, tribūnālis 2469
411.2 līs, lītis 2470
411.3 lītigō, lītigāre 2471
411.4 vadimōnium, vadimōniī 2472

411.5 iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī 2473

412 The Inquiry 2475
412.1 cognitiō, cognitiōnis 2475
412.2 quaesītor, quaesītōris 2476
412.3 interrogō, interrogāre 2477
412.4 dēlātor, dēlātōris 2478
412.5 dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis 2479
412.6 (dialogue) 2480

413 The Verdict 2483
413.1 condemnō, condemnāre 2483
413.2 damnātiō, damnātiōnis 2484
413.3 absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis 2485
413.4 dēprecor, dēprecārī 2486
413.5 patrōcinium, patrōciniī 2487

414 Right and Wrong 2489
414.1 iniūria, iniūriae 2489
414.2 flāgitium, flāgitiī 2490
414.3 fās 2491
414.4 nefās 2492
414.5 inīquus, inīqua, inīquum 2493

415 Punishment 2495
415.1 castīgō, castīgāre 2495
415.2 relēgō, relēgāre 2496
415.3 prōscrībō, prōscrībere 2497
415.4 flagellum, flagellī 2498
415.5 custōdia, custōdiae 2499

416 Justice and Obedience 2501
416.1 iūstitia, iūstitiae 2501
416.2 aequitās, aequitātis 2502
416.3 obtemperō, obtemperāre 2503
416.4 coerceō, coercēre 2504
416.5 vindicō, vindicāre 2505

417 Property 2507
417.1 possessiō, possessiōnis 2507
417.2 proprius, propria, proprium 2508
417.3 aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum 2509
417.4 dominium, dominiī 2510
417.5 mancipium, mancipiī 2511

418 Debts 2513
418.1 aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī 2513
418.2 dēbitor, dēbitōris 2514
418.3 crēditor, crēditōris 2515
418.4 fēnus, fēnoris 2516
418.5 mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum 2517

419 Paying It Back 2519
419.1 persolvō, persolvere 2519
419.2 ūsūra, ūsūrae 2520
419.3 pignus, pignoris 2521
419.4 syngrapha, syngraphae 2522
419.5 fēnerātor, fēnerātōris 2523

420 Buying and Selling 2525
420.1 cōnstō, cōnstāre 2525
420.2 auctiō, auctiōnis 2526
420.3 liceor, licērī 2527
420.4 emptor, emptōris 2528
420.5 venditor, venditōris 2529
420.6 (dialogue) 2530

421 Trade 2533
421.1 commercium, commerciī 2533
421.2 negōtior, negōtiārī 2534
421.3 nūndinae, nūndinārum 2535
421.4 portōrium, portōriī 2536
421.5 lucror, lucrārī 2537

422 Rich and Poor 2539
422.1 dīvitiae, dīvitiārum 2539
422.2 egeō, egēre 2540
422.3 egestās, egestātis 2541

422.4 careō, carēre 2542
422.5 abundō, abundāre 2543
422.6 (dialogue) 2544
422.7 (dialogue) 2544

423 Footpath, Mountain track, Side path, Slope, Step 2547
423.1 sēmita, sēmitae 2547
423.2 callis, callis 2548
423.3 trāmes, trāmitis 2549
423.4 clīvus, clīvī 2550
423.5 gradior, gradī 2551

424 Crossroads, Fork in the road, Bend, Winding, To bend 2553
424.1 compitum, compitī 2553
424.2 bivium, biviī 2554
424.3 flexus, flexūs 2555
424.4 anfrāctus, anfrāctūs 2556
424.5 flectō, flectere 2557

425 Roadbed, Flint, Kerb, Wheel rut, To pave 2559
425.1 agger, aggeris 2559
425.2 silex, silicis 2560
425.3 crepīdō, crepīdinis 2561
425.4 orbita, orbitae 2562
425.5 sternō, sternere 2563

426 Dusty, Muddy, Footprint, Weary, To wear out 2565
426.1 pulverulentus, pulverulenta … 2565
426.2 lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum 2566
426.3 vestīgium, vestīgiī 2567
426.4 lassus, lassa, lassum 2568
426.5 dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre 2569

427 Overnight stop, Coachman, Post, Travel money, To set out on 2571
427.1 mānsiō, mānsiōnis 2571
427.2 raedārius, raedāriī 2572
427.3 statiō, statiōnis 2573
427.4 viāticum, viāticī 2574
427.5 ingredior, ingredī 2575

428 Departure, Return, Travel abroad, To travel abroad, To go forward 2577
428.1 profectiō, profectiōnis 2577
428.2 reditus, reditūs 2578
428.3 peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis 2579
428.4 peregrīnor, peregrīnārī 2580
428.5 prōgredior, prōgredī 2581

429 Wagon, Light gig, War chariot, Covered carriage, Travelling coach 2583
429.1 carrus, carrī 2583
429.2 cisium, cisiī 2584
429.3 essedum, essedī 2585
429.4 carpentum, carpentī 2586
429.5 carrūca, carrūcae 2587

430 Cart pole, Wheel hub, Drag shoe, To yoke, To unyoke 2589
430.1 tēmō, tēmōnis 2589
430.2 modiolus, modiolī 2590
430.3 sufflāmen, sufflāminis 2591
430.4 subiungō, subiungere 2592
430.5 disiungō, disiungere 2593
430.6 (dialogue) 2594

431 Rein, Leather strap, Bridle, To bridle, Whip 2597
431.1 habēna, habēnae 2597
431.2 lōrum, lōrī 2598
431.3 frēnum, frēnī 2599
431.4 frēnō, frēnāre 2600
431.5 scutica, scuticae 2601

432 To ride, Saddle cloth, Spur, To jump down, To kick 2603
432.1 equitō, equitāre 2603
432.2 ephippium, ephippiī 2604
432.3 calcar, calcāris 2605
432.4 dēsiliō, dēsilīre 2606
432.5 calcitrō, calcitrāre 2607

433 Beast of burden, Nag, She-mule, Pack saddle, To load 2609
433.1 iūmentum, iūmentī 2609
433.2 caballus, caballī 2610
433.3 mūla, mūlae 2611
433.4 clītellae, clītellārum 2612
433.5 onerō, onerāre 2613

434 Stable, Manger, Hay, To neigh, Muleteer 2615
434.1 stabulum, stabulī 2615
434.2 praesēpe, praesēpis 2616
434.3 faenum, faenī 2617
434.4 hinniō, hinnīre 2618
434.5 mūliō, mūliōnis 2619

435 Vessel, Little boat, Skiff, Punt, Raft 2621
435.1 nāvigium, nāvigiī 2621
435.2 nāvicula, nāviculae 2622
435.3 scapha, scaphae 2623
435.4 linter, lintris 2624
435.5 ratis, ratis 2625

436 Stern, Prow, Keel, Rowing bench, For cargo 2627
436.1 puppis, puppis 2627
436.2 prōra, prōrae 2628
436.3 carīna, carīnae 2629
436.4 trānstrum, trānstrī 2630
436.5 onerārius, onerāria, onerārium 2631

437 Ship's rope, Rope, Tackle, Rudder, To row 2633
437.1 rudēns, rudentis 2633
437.2 fūnis, fūnis 2634
437.3 armāmenta, armāmentōrum 2635
437.4 gubernāculum, gubernāculī 2636
437.5 rēmigō, rēmigāre 2637

438 To go on board, Transport, Ship's master, To set sail, Ferryman 2639
438.1 cōnscendō, cōnscendere 2639
438.2 vectūra, vectūrae 2640
438.3 nauclērus, nauclērī 2641

438.4 vēlificor, vēlificārī 2642
438.5 portitor, portitōris 2643
438.6 (dialogue) 2644

439 To put in, To step out, To haul ashore, To launch, Navigable 2647
439.1 appellō, appellere 2647
439.2 ēgredior, ēgredī 2648
439.3 subdūcō, subdūcere 2649
439.4 dēdūcō, dēdūcere 2650
439.5 nāvigābilis, nāvigābile 2651

440 To toss on the waves, To be seasick, To carry down, To take across, To swim to safety 2653
440.1 flūctuō, flūctuāre 2653
440.2 nauseō, nauseāre 2654
440.3 dēferō, dēferre 2655
440.4 trāiciō, trāicere 2656
440.5 ēnatō, ēnatāre 2657

441 Harbour, Dockyard, Tidal inlet, Lighthouse, Headland 2659
441.1 portus, portūs 2659
441.2 nāvāle, nāvālis 2660
441.3 aestuārium, aestuāriī 2661
441.4 pharus, pharī 2662
441.5 prōmunturium, prōmunturiī 2663

442 Open sea, High sea, Level sea, Of the sea, Coastal 2665
442.1 salum, salī 2665
442.2 pelagus, pelagī 2666
442.3 aequor, aequoris 2667
442.4 marīnus, marīna, marīnum 2668
442.5 maritimus, maritima, maritimum 2669

443 Sandbank, Billow, Shallows, Strait, To sail past 2671
443.1 syrtis, syrtis 2671
443.2 flūctus, flūctūs 2672
443.3 vadum, vadī 2673
443.4 fretum, fretī 2674
443.5 praetervehor, praetervehī 2675

444 Dead calm, Calm weather, Peninsula, Of the shore, To sail out 2677
444.1 malacia, malaciae 2677
444.2 tranquillitās, tranquillitātis 2678
444.3 paenīnsula, paenīnsulae 2679
444.4 lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum 2680
444.5 ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre 2681

445 Roadside inn, To lodge, To spend the night, Stable-keeper, Hospitable 2683
445.1 dēverticulum, dēverticulī 2683
445.2 dēversor, dēversārī 2684
445.3 pernoctō, pernoctāre 2685
445.4 stabulārius, stabulāriī 2686
445.5 hospitālis, hospitāle 2687

446 Little bed, Straw bedding, Mat, Pillow, Blanket 2689
446.1 lectulus, lectulī 2689
446.2 strāmentum, strāmentī 2690
446.3 teges, tegetis 2691
446.4 cervīcal, cervīcālis 2692
446.5 lōdīx, lōdīcis 2693
446.6 (dialogue) 2694

447 Bedbug, To bite, To scratch, Sleepless, To lie down 2697
447.1 cīmex, cīmicis 2697
447.2 mordeō, mordēre 2698
447.3 scalpō, scalpere 2699
447.4 īnsomnis, īnsomne 2700
447.5 cubō, cubāre 2701

448 To snore, To make a noise, To make a din, Drinker, Hoarse 2703
448.1 stertō, stertere 2703
448.2 strepō, strepere 2704
448.3 obstrepō, obstrepere 2705
448.4 pōtor, pōtōris 2706
448.5 raucus, rauca, raucum 2707

449 Flat wine, Neat wine, To water down, Rotten, Tavern hostess 2709
449.1 vappa, vappae 2709
449.2 merum, merī 2710
449.3 dīluō, dīluere 2711
449.4 pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum 2712
449.5 cōpa, cōpae 2713

450 Complaint, To complain, To cheat, Grasping, Dirt 2715
450.1 querēla, querēlae 2715
450.2 conqueror, conquerī 2716
450.3 fraudō, fraudāre 2717
450.4 rapāx, rapācis 2718
450.5 sordēs, sordis 2719

451 To inquire, To ask around, To ask after, To show, To make known 2721
451.1 percontor, percontārī 2721
451.2 scīscitor, scīscitārī 2722
451.3 requīrō, requīrere 2723
451.4 mōnstrō, mōnstrāre 2724
451.5 indicō, indicāre 2725

452 To stray, Off the road, Without roads, Roundabout way, To wander about 2727
452.1 aberrō, aberrāre 2727
452.2 dēvius, dēvia, dēvium 2728
452.3 invius, invia, invium 2729
452.4 ambāgēs, ambāgum 2730
452.5 vagor, vagārī 2731

453 Leader, Knowing, To escort, To find, To track 2733
453.1 ductor, ductōris 2733
453.2 gnārus, gnāra, gnārum 2734
453.3 prōsequor, prōsequī 2735
453.4 reperiō, reperīre 2736
453.5 vestīgō, vestīgāre 2737

454 To the right, To the left, Slanting, To go round, Detour 2739
454.1 dextrōrsum 2739
454.2 sinistrōrsum 2740
454.3 oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum 2741
454.4 circumeō, circumīre 2742
454.5 circuitus, circuitūs 2743
454.6 (dialogue) 2744

455 To catch sight of, To come near, To turn back, To delay, To stop for a while 2747
455.1 cōnspicor, cōnspicārī 2747
455.2 accēdō, accēdere 2748
455.3 revertor, revertī 2749
455.4 moror, morārī 2750
455.5 commoror, commorārī 2751

456 Tenant, Townsman, Resident, To live in, Occupant 2753
456.1 inquilīnus, inquilīnī 2753
456.2 oppidānus, oppidānī 2754
456.3 incola, incolae 2755
456.4 incolō, incolere 2756
456.5 habitātor, habitātōris 2757

457 Block of flats, Upper room, Storey, Timber, Beam 2759
457.1 īnsula, īnsulae 2759
457.2 cēnāculum, cēnāculī 2760
457.3 contignātiō, contignātiōnis 2761
457.4 tignum, tignī 2762
457.5 trabs, trabis 2763

458 Alley, Neighbourhood, Privy, Sewer, Water tower 2765
458.1 angiportum, angiportī 2765
458.2 vīcīnia, vīcīniae 2766
458.3 lātrīna, lātrīnae 2767
458.4 cloāca, cloācae 2768
458.5 castellum, castellī 2769

459 Colonnade, Temple, Shrine, Sacred boundary, To build up 2771
459.1 porticus, porticūs 2771

459.2 aedēs, aedis 2772
459.3 aedicula, aediculae 2773
459.4 pōmērium, pōmēriī 2774
459.5 exstruō, exstruere 2775

460 Crowd, Crowded, To throng, To go back and forth, Near the city 2777
460.1 turba, turbae 2777
460.2 frequēns, frequentis 2778
460.3 frequentō, frequentāre 2779
460.4 commeō, commeāre 2780
460.5 suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum 2781

461 Hot-drinks bar, Hot water, To drink, Smoky, Filthy 2783
461.1 thermopōlium, thermopōliī 2783
461.2 calda, caldae 2784
461.3 pōtō, pōtāre 2785
461.4 fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum 2786
461.5 immundus, immunda, immundum 2787

462 To trade at market, To keep shouting, To offer for sale, Goods, Hawker 2789
462.1 nūndinor, nūndinārī 2789
462.2 clāmitō, clāmitāre 2790
462.3 vēnditō, vēnditāre 2791
462.4 mercimōnium, mercimōniī 2792
462.5 īnstitor, īnstitōris 2793
462.6 (dialogue) 2794

463 Vegetable grower, Fishmonger, Plaited basket, Wicker basket, Bread basket 2797
463.1 holitor, holitōris 2797
463.2 piscārius, piscāriī 2798
463.3 sporta, sportae 2799
463.4 corbis, corbis 2800
463.5 canistrum, canistrī 2801

464 Steelyard, Pair of scales, Scale pan, To weigh out, To weigh carefully 2803
464.1 statēra, statērae 2803

464.2 trutina, trutinae 2804
464.3 lanx, lancis 2805
464.4 appendō, appendere 2806
464.5 pēnsō, pēnsāre 2807

465 Peck, Pint, By weight, Quarter-as, Money-changer 2809
465.1 modius, modiī 2809
465.2 sextārius, sextāriī 2810
465.3 pondō 2811
465.4 quadrāns, quadrantis 2812
465.5 nummulārius, nummulāriī 2813

466 Corn supply, Dearness, Cheapness, To value, To be sold 2815
466.1 annōna, annōnae 2815
466.2 cāritās, cāritātis 2816
466.3 vīlitās, vīlitātis 2817
466.4 aestimō, aestimāre 2818
466.5 vēneō, vēnīre 2819

467 Cobbler's shop, Barber's shop, Awl, Tanner, Furrier 2821
467.1 sūtrīna, sūtrīnae 2821
467.2 tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae 2822
467.3 sūbula, sūbulae 2823
467.4 coriārius, coriāriī 2824
467.5 pelliō, pelliōnis 2825

468 To dye, Purple shellfish, Purple dye, Paint, Paintbrush 2827
468.1 tingō, tingere 2827
468.2 mūrex, mūricis 2828
468.3 ostrum, ostrī 2829
468.4 pigmentum, pigmentī 2830
468.5 pēnicillus, pēnicillī 2831

469 Anvil, Bellows, Forge, Blacksmith, To hammer 2833
469.1 incūs, incūdis 2833
469.2 follis, follis 2834
469.3 camīnus, camīnī 2835
469.4 ferrārius, ferrāriī 2836
469.5 cūdō, cūdere 2837

470 Adze, Drill, Plane, File, To hew 2839
470.1 ascia, asciae 2839
470.2 terebra, terebrae 2840
470.3 runcīna, runcīnae 2841
470.4 līma, līmae 2842
470.5 dolō, dolāre 2843
470.6 (dialogue) 2844

471 Lathe, To turn on a lathe, To polish, To sharpen, Stonecutter 2847
471.1 tornus, tornī 2847
471.2 tornō, tornāre 2848
471.3 poliō, polīre 2849
471.4 acuō, acuere 2850
471.5 lapicīda, lapicīdae 2851

472 Distaff, Spindle, Web on the loom, To spin, Woolworking 2853
472.1 colus, colī 2853
472.2 fūsus, fūsī 2854
472.3 tēla, tēlae 2855
472.4 neō, nēre 2856
472.5 lānificium, lānificiī 2857

473 Countryside, Farm, Ox stall, Cottage, Hut 2859
473.1 rūs, rūris 2859
473.2 fundus, fundī 2860
473.3 būbīle, būbīlis 2861
473.4 casa, casae 2862
473.5 tugurium, tugurīī 2863

474 To plough, Furrow, Ploughshare, Ploughman, To harrow 2865
474.1 arō, arāre 2865
474.2 sulcus, sulcī 2866
474.3 vōmer, vōmeris 2867
474.4 arātor, arātōris 2868
474.5 occō, occāre 2869

475 Harvest, Reaper, Sickle, Ear of grain, Wheat 2871
475.1 messis, messis 2871
475.2 messor, messōris 2872
475.3 falx, falcis 2873
475.4 spīca, spīcae 2874
475.5 trīticum, trīticī 2875

476 To thresh, To winnow, Chaff, Stalk, Granary 2877
476.1 trītūrō, trītūrāre 2877
476.2 ventilō, ventilāre 2878
476.3 palea, paleae 2879
476.4 stipula, stipulae 2880
476.5 horreum, horreī 2881

477 Livestock, Flock, Herd, To pasture, Pasture 2883
477.1 pecus, pecoris 2883
477.2 grex, gregis 2884
477.3 armentum, armentī 2885
477.4 pāscō, pāscere 2886
477.5 pāscuum, pāscuī 2887

478 Shepherd, Ox-driver, Sheepfold, To shear, To milk 2889
478.1 ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis 2889
478.2 bubulcus, bubulcī 2890
478.3 caulae, caulārum 2891
478.4 tondeō, tondēre 2892
478.5 mulgeō, mulgēre 2893
478.6 (dialogue) 2894

479 Orchard, Olive tree, Press, To graft, Grape harvest 2897
479.1 pōmārium, pōmāriī 2897
479.2 olea, oleae 2898
479.3 prēlum, prēlī 2899
479.4 īnserō, īnserere 2900
479.5 vindēmia, vindēmiae 2901

480 Cliff, Jagged rock, Sheer, Steep, To climb 2903
480.1 rūpēs, rūpis 2903
480.2 cautēs, cautis 2904
480.3 praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum 2905

480.4 arduus, ardua, arduum 2906
480.5 scandō, scandere 2907

481 Enclosed valley, Plain, Rocky, Rough, To slide down 2909
481.1 convallis, convallis 2909
481.2 plānitiēs, plānitiēī 2910
481.3 saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum 2911
481.4 cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum 2912
481.5 dēlābor, dēlābī 2913

482 River, Torrent, Confluence, To flow, To swim across 2915
482.1 amnis, amnis 2915
482.2 torrēns, torrentis 2916
482.3 cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis 2917
482.4 fluō, fluere 2918
482.5 trānsnatō, trānsnatāre 2919

483 Pool, Whirlpool, Chasm, To trickle, To flood 2921
483.1 stagnum, stagnī 2921
483.2 gurges, gurgitis 2922
483.3 vorāgō, vorāginis 2923
483.4 mānō, mānāre 2924
483.5 inundō, inundāre 2925

484 Beech, Fir, Elm, Ash, Shady 2927
484.1 fāgus, fāgī 2927
484.2 abiēs, abietis 2928
484.3 ulmus, ulmī 2929
484.4 fraxinus, fraxinī 2930
484.5 opācus, opāca, opācum 2931

485 Downpour, To be soaking wet, Rainy, Stormy, Turbulent 2933
485.1 imber, imbris 2933
485.2 madeō, madēre 2934
485.3 pluviālis, pluviāle 2935
485.4 nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum 2936
485.5 turbidus, turbida, turbidum 2937

486 Hoarfrost, The cold, To freeze, To be stiff with cold, To feel cold 2939
486.1 pruīna, pruīnae 2939
486.2 frīgus, frīgoris 2940
486.3 gelō, gelāre 2941
486.4 rigeō, rigēre 2942
486.5 algeō, algēre 2943
486.6 (dialogue) 2944

487 North wind, South wind, West wind, To blow through, Clear weather 2947
487.1 aquilō, aquilōnis 2947
487.2 auster, austrī 2948
487.3 favōnius, favōniī 2949
487.4 perflō, perflāre 2950
487.5 serēnitās, serēnitātis 2951

488 Midwinter, Summer solstice, Dog Star, Of summer, To be warm 2953
488.1 brūma, brūmae 2953
488.2 sōlstitium, sōlstitiī 2954
488.3 canīcula, canīculae 2955
488.4 aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum 2956
488.5 caleō, calēre 2957
488.6 (dialogue) 2958
488.7 (dialogue) 2959

489 Joy and gladness 2961
489.1 laetitia, laetitiae 2961
489.2 laetor, laetārī 2962
489.3 hilaritās, hilaritātis 2963
489.4 exsultō, exsultāre 2964
489.5 iūcunditās, iūcunditātis 2965

490 Sadness and grief 2967
490.1 trīstitia, trīstitiae 2967
490.2 maestitia, maestitiae 2968
490.3 maereō, maerēre 2969
490.4 maeror, maerōris 2970
490.5 lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum 2971

491 Tears and sighs 2973
491.1 lacrimō, lacrimāre 2973
491.2 plōrō, plōrāre 2974
491.3 gemō, gemere 2975
491.4 gemitus, gemitūs 2976
491.5 suspīrō, suspīrāre 2977

492 Comfort and gentleness 2979
492.1 cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī 2979
492.2 cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis 2980
492.3 sōlācium, sōlāciī 2981
492.4 lēnis, lēne 2982
492.5 lēniō, lēnīre 2983

493 Anger and indignation 2985
493.1 īrāscor, īrāscī 2985
493.2 īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum 2986
493.3 īrācundia, īrācundiae 2987
493.4 indignus, indigna, indignum 2988
493.5 indignor, indignārī 2989

494 Hatred and disgust 2991
494.1 ōdī, ōdisse 2991
494.2 odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum 2992
494.3 fastīdiō, fastīdīre 2993
494.4 fastīdium, fastīdiī 2994
494.5 taedet, taedēre 2995

495 Wonder and amazement 2997
495.1 admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis 2997
495.2 mīror, mīrārī 2998
495.3 stupeō, stupēre 2999
495.4 attonitus, attonita, attonitum 3000
495.5 obstupēscō, obstupēscere 3001

496 Fear and dread 3003
496.1 paveō, pavēre 3003
496.2 vereor, verērī 3004
496.3 perterreō, perterrēre 3005
496.4 horribilis, horribile 3006

496.5 terribilis, terribile 3007
496.6 (dialogue) 3008

497 Worry and distress 3011
497.1 sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis 3011
497.2 angō, angere 3012
497.3 aegritūdō, aegritūdinis 3013
497.4 molestia, molestiae 3014
497.5 cruciō, cruciāre 3015

498 Hope, despair and trust 3017
498.1 dēspērō, dēspērāre 3017
498.2 dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis 3018
498.3 cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere 3019
498.4 diffīdō, diffīdere 3020
498.5 crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum 3021

499 Pleasure and delight 3023
499.1 dēlectō, dēlectāre 3023
499.2 dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis 3024
499.3 voluptās, voluptātis 3025
499.4 oblectō, oblectāre 3026
499.5 placeō, placēre 3027

500 Desire and envy 3029
500.1 cupīdō, cupīdinis 3029
500.2 cupidus, cupida, cupidum 3030
500.3 avidus, avida, avidum 3031
500.4 invideō, invidēre 3032
500.5 rīvālis, rīvālis 3033

501 Moods and feelings 3035
501.1 commoveō, commovēre 3035
501.2 afficiō, afficere 3036
501.3 affectus, affectūs 3037
501.4 tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum 3038
501.5 sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum 3039

502 Jokes and wit 3041
502.1 iocus, iocī 3041
502.2 iocor, iocārī 3042
502.3 iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum 3043
502.4 rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum 3044
502.5 facētus, facēta, facētum 3045

503 Temperament 3047
503.1 nātūra, nātūrae 3047
503.2 indolēs, indolis 3048
503.3 alacer, alacris, alacre 3049
503.4 lepidus, lepida, lepidum 3050
503.5 lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum 3051

504 Honesty and pretence 3053
504.1 probitās, probitātis 3053
504.2 sincērus, sincēra, sincērum 3054
504.3 mendāx, mendācis 3055
504.4 simulō, simulāre 3056
504.5 dissimulō, dissimulāre 3057
504.6 (dialogue) 3058

505 Mercy and kindness 3061
505.1 clēmēns, clēmentis 3061
505.2 clēmentia, clēmentiae 3062
505.3 benignitās, benignitātis 3063
505.4 benevolus, benevola, benevolum 3064
505.5 benevolentia, benevolentiae 3065

506 Manners 3067
506.1 cōmis, cōme 3067
506.2 cōmitās, cōmitātis 3068
506.3 urbānitās, urbānitātis 3069
506.4 rūsticitās, rūsticitātis 3070
506.5 līberālitās, līberālitātis 3071

507 Pride and arrogance 3073
507.1 superbia, superbiae 3073
507.2 arrogāns, arrogantis 3074
507.3 arrogantia, arrogantiae 3075

507.4 īnsolēns, īnsolentis 3076
507.5 vānitās, vānitātis 3077

508 Laziness and energy 3079
508.1 ignāvia, ignāviae 3079
508.2 pigritia, pigritiae 3080
508.3 segnis, segne 3081
508.4 strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum 3082
508.5 assiduus, assidua, assiduum 3083

509 Courage and good sense 3085
509.1 fortitūdō, fortitūdinis 3085
509.2 audācia, audāciae 3086
509.3 temerārius, temerāria, temerārium 3087
509.4 cōnstāns, cōnstantis 3088
509.5 prūdentia, prūdentiae 3089

510 Folly and madness 3091
510.1 ineptus, inepta, ineptum 3091
510.2 īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum 3092
510.3 īnsānia, īnsāniae 3093
510.4 dēmēns, dēmentis 3094
510.5 dēlīrō, dēlīrāre 3095

511 Cruelty and gentleness 3097
511.1 crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis 3097
511.2 saevitia, saevitiae 3098
511.3 laedō, laedere 3099
511.4 mītigō, mītigāre 3100
511.5 mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum 3101

512 Gratitude and praise 3103
512.1 grātus, grāta, grātum 3103
512.2 ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum 3104
512.3 meritum, meritī 3105
512.4 laus, laudis 3106
512.5 vituperō, vituperāre 3107
512.6 (dialogue) 3108

513 Pity and shame 3111
513.1 misericors, misericordis 3111
513.2 misericordia, misericordiae 3112
513.3 misereor, miserērī 3113
513.4 pudet, pudēre 3114
513.5 verēcundia, verēcundiae 3115

514 Scorn and displeasure 3117
514.1 contemnō, contemnere 3117
514.2 spernō, spernere 3118
514.3 dēspiciō, dēspicere 3119
514.4 indignātiō, indignātiōnis 3120
514.5 displiceō, displicēre 3121

515 The face 3123
515.1 vultus, vultūs 3123
515.2 faciēs, faciēī 3124
515.3 crīnis, crīnis 3125
515.4 supercilium, superciliī 3126
515.5 palpebra, palpebrae 3127

516 Throat, neck and limbs 3129
516.1 guttur, gutturis 3129
516.2 faucēs, faucium 3130
516.3 cervīx, cervīcis 3131
516.4 membrum, membrī 3132
516.5 artus, artuum 3133

517 Inside the body 3135
517.1 vēna, vēnae 3135
517.2 nervus, nervī 3136
517.3 pellis, pellis 3137
517.4 sūdor, sūdōris 3138
517.5 pulsus, pulsūs 3139

518 Side, hip and foot 3141
518.1 latus, lateris 3141
518.2 coxa, coxae 3142
518.3 calx, calcis 3143
518.4 planta, plantae 3144

518.5 umbilīcus, umbilīcī 3145

519 The senses 3147
519.1 vīsus, vīsūs 3147
519.2 audītus, audītūs 3148
519.3 tāctus, tāctūs 3149
519.4 olfaciō, olfacere 3150
519.5 percipiō, percipere 3151

520 Breathing 3153
520.1 spīritus, spīritūs 3153
520.2 anhēlō, anhēlāre 3154
520.3 singultus, singultūs 3155
520.4 oscitō, oscitāre 3156
520.5 sternuō, sternuere 3157
520.6 (dialogue) 3158

521 Being ill 3161
521.1 aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum 3161
521.2 aegrōtō, aegrōtāre 3162
521.3 languidus, languida, languidum 3163
521.4 dēbilis, dēbile 3164
521.5 dēbilitās, dēbilitātis 3165

522 Pale, red and thin 3167
522.1 palleō, pallēre 3167
522.2 pallidus, pallida, pallidum 3168
522.3 rubeō, rubēre 3169
522.4 macer, macra, macrum 3170
522.5 maciēs, maciēī 3171

523 Build and health 3173
523.1 rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum 3173
523.2 obēsus, obēsa, obēsum 3174
523.3 gracilis, gracile 3175
523.4 sānitās, sānitātis 3176
523.5 salūbris, salūbre 3177

524 Plague and swelling 3179
524.1 pestis, pestis 3179
524.2 pestilentia, pestilentiae 3180
524.3 contāgiō, contāgiōnis 3181
524.4 ulcus, ulceris 3182
524.5 tumeō, tumēre 3183

525 Coughs and sore eyes 3185
525.1 tussiō, tussīre 3185
525.2 vomō, vomere 3186
525.3 sitiō, sitīre 3187
525.4 lippus, lippa, lippum 3188
525.5 lippitūdō, lippitūdinis 3189

526 Healing 3191
526.1 sānō, sānāre 3191
526.2 medeor, medērī 3192
526.3 convalēscō, convalēscere 3193
526.4 recreō, recreāre 3194
526.5 pōtiō, pōtiōnis 3195

527 Rest and sleep 3197
527.1 requiēscō, requiēscere 3197
527.2 requiēs, requiētis 3198
527.3 dormītō, dormītāre 3199
527.4 īnsomnia, īnsomniae 3200
527.5 recumbō, recumbere 3201

528 Relatives 3203
528.1 gēns, gentis 3203
528.2 propinquus, propinqua, propinquum 3204
528.3 affīnis, affīne 3205
528.4 cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī 3206
528.5 gemellus, gemella, gemellum 3207
528.6 (dialogue) 3208

529 Step-families 3211
529.1 noverca, novercae 3211
529.2 vitricus, vitricī 3212
529.3 prīvignus, prīvignī 3213

529.4 fīliola, fīliolae 3214
529.5 frāternus, frāterna, frāternum 3215

530 Masters and slaves 3217
530.1 erus, erī 3217
530.2 verna, vernae 3218
530.3 ancillula, ancillulae 3219
530.4 servīlis, servīle 3220
530.5 pedisequus, pedisequī 3221

531 Jobs in a great house 3223
531.1 ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis 3223
531.2 iānitor, iānitōris 3224
531.3 ostiārius, ostiāriī 3225
531.4 lectīcārius, lectīcāriī 3226
531.5 vīlica, vīlicae 3227

532 Freedom 3229
532.1 manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis 3229
532.2 lībertīnus, lībertīnī 3230
532.3 vindicta, vindictae 3231
532.4 ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum 3232
532.5 pilleus, pilleī 3233

533 Close friends 3235
533.1 familiāris, familiāris 3235
533.2 familiāritās, familiāritātis 3236
533.3 necessitūdō, necessitūdinis 3237
533.4 dīligō, dīligere 3238
533.5 amābilis, amābile 3239

534 Kisses and hugs 3241
534.1 ōsculum, ōsculī 3241
534.2 bāsium, bāsiī 3242
534.3 bāsiō, bāsiāre 3243
534.4 suāvium, suāviī 3244
534.5 amplexus, amplexūs 3245

535 Lovers 3247
535.1 amplector, amplectī 3247
535.2 complector, complectī 3248
535.3 amāns, amantis 3249
535.4 amātor, amātōris 3250
535.5 procus, procī 3251

536 Charm and sweet words 3253
536.1 blandus, blanda, blandum 3253
536.2 blanditia, blanditiae 3254
536.3 suāvis, suāve 3255
536.4 dēliciae, dēliciārum 3256
536.5 dōnum, dōnī 3257
536.6 (dialogue) 3258

537 Quarrels and making up 3261
537.1 iūrgium, iūrgiī 3261
537.2 reconciliō, reconciliāre 3262
537.3 dōnō, dōnāre 3263
537.4 īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum 3264
537.5 dēserō, dēserere 3265

538 Free time 3267
538.1 ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum 3267
538.2 vacō, vacāre 3268
538.3 fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum 3269
538.4 relaxō, relaxāre 3270
538.5 remissiō, remissiōnis 3271

539 Dice and board games 3273
539.1 ālea, āleae 3273
539.2 fritillus, fritillī 3274
539.3 latrunculus, latrunculī 3275
539.4 lūsus, lūsūs 3276
539.5 luctor, luctārī 3277

540 Toys and play 3279
540.1 pūpa, pūpae 3279
540.2 trochus, trochī 3280
540.3 turbō, turbinis 3281

540.4 harpastum, harpastī 3282
540.5 natātiō, natātiōnis 3283

541 At the baths 3285
541.1 balneātor, balneātōris 3285
541.2 caldārium, caldāriī 3286
541.3 tepidārium, tepidāriī 3287
541.4 frīgidārium, frīgidāriī 3288
541.5 piscīna, piscīnae 3289

542 Oil, walks and the country 3291
542.1 strigilis, strigilis 3291
542.2 unguō, unguere 3292
542.3 ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis 3293
542.4 rūsticor, rūsticārī 3294
542.5 amoenus, amoena, amoenum 3295

543 Song 3297
543.1 cantus, cantūs 3297
543.2 cantiō, cantiōnis 3298
543.3 cantilēna, cantilēnae 3299
543.4 concinō, concinere 3300
543.5 canōrus, canōra, canōrum 3301

544 Strings 3303
544.1 cithara, citharae 3303
544.2 citharoedus, citharoedī 3304
544.3 chorda, chordae 3305
544.4 fidicen, fidicinis 3306
544.5 psallō, psallere 3307
544.6 (dialogue) 3308

545 Sound and harmony 3311
545.1 sonus, sonī 3311
545.2 sonō, sonāre 3312
545.3 resonō, resonāre 3313
545.4 symphōnia, symphōniae 3314
545.5 concentus, concentūs 3315

546 At the theatre 3317
546.1 cavea, caveae 3317
546.2 pulpitum, pulpitī 3318
546.3 aulaeum, aulaeī 3319
546.4 prologus, prologī 3320
546.5 pantomīmus, pantomīmī 3321

547 Images and art 3323
547.1 imāgō, imāginis 3323
547.2 effigiēs, effigiēī 3324
547.3 figūra, figūrae 3325
547.4 tessella, tessellae 3326
547.5 caelō, caelāre 3327

548 Beauty 3329
548.1 pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis 3329
548.2 speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum 3330
548.3 ēlegāns, ēlegantis 3331
548.4 ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī 3332
548.5 dēfōrmis, dēfōrme 3333

549 Poems and readings 3335
549.1 poēma, poēmatis 3335
549.2 epigramma, epigrammatis 3336
549.3 versiculus, versiculī 3337
549.4 recitātiō, recitātiōnis 3338
549.5 audītor, audītōris 3339

550 Readers and booksellers 3341
550.1 litterātus, litterāta, litterātum 3341
550.2 bibliopōla, bibliopōlae 3342
550.3 lēctor, lēctōris 3343
550.4 perlegō, perlegere 3344
550.5 ēvolvō, ēvolvere 3345

551 Book boxes and tablets 3347
551.1 capsa, capsae 3347
551.2 scrīnium, scrīniī 3348
551.3 membrāna, membrānae 3349
551.4 pugillārēs, pugillārium 3350

551.5 rescrībō, rescrībere 3351

552 Rooms and furniture 3353
552.1 domicilium, domiciliī 3353
552.2 conclāve, conclāvis 3354
552.3 supellex, supellectilis 3355
552.4 verrō, verrere 3356
552.5 scōpae, scōpārum 3357
552.6 (dialogue) 3358

553 Doors and stores 3361
553.1 vestibulum, vestibulī 3361
553.2 pessulus, pessulī 3362
553.3 līmen, līminis 3363
553.4 cardō, cardinis 3364
553.5 penus, penūs 3365

554 Household chores 3367
554.1 subsellium, subselliī 3367
554.2 urceus, urceī 3368
554.3 repōnō, repōnere 3369
554.4 sarciō, sarcīre 3370
554.5 pectō, pectere 3371
554.6 (dialogue) 3372
554.7 (dialogue) 3372

How Latin sounds (reference) 3375

Glossary 3377

Review Questions 3563

Answer Key 3567

Index 3571

Chapter 1

Greetings

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ✓ pen (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can greet someone in Latin, thank them, answer yes or no, and say goodbye.
>
> The whole doorway sequence on cue: write salvē independently from its sound, use salvē or avē on arrival, say grātiās tibi agō, answer ita or nōn, and use valē on the way out.

1.1 salvē / salvēte — "hello" (be well)

The first Latin word — and it already contains save, safe, and salute.

Sounds you'll need

Latin is read as written, every letter sounded. A macron (ā ē ī ō ū) marks a long vowel — held longer, same quality. Classical v = w. So salvē = SAL-weh, not "sal-vay."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Salvē (to one person) / salvēte (to several) is the imperative of salvēre, "to be in good health," from salvus "safe, sound, whole." To greet in Latin is to wish someone health. That root fans out into English — save, safe, salvage, salvation, salute, salubrious, the toast "salut!" — and into the Romance children as the word for health itself: Spanish salud, Italian salute, French salut.

Grammar Lens

salvē vs. salvēte: Latin changes the ending to mark one listener (-e) or many (-ēte). This is the feature that defines Latin — meaning carried in endings, not in word order or extra words. English lost almost all of it; its Romance grandchildren kept some. You will meet it in every chapter.

Writing — follow one greeting you can see

Keep salvē visible. First point to the line over the final ē: that macron says to hold the vowel longer. Trace the whole word once, from s through ē, then say SAL-weh. Stop there.

This is not a spelling test. Your eye and hand are only following a greeting whose sound and meaning are already on the page.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- greet one friend — salvē (SAL-weh)
- greet a whole room — salvēte
- two English words from salvus (save, safe, salute, salvation…)

Before you move on

What does salvē literally wish, and how do you greet more than one person? ("Be well / be in good health"; salvēte, with the plural -ēte ending.)

1.2 salvē — copy one greeting with help

Point to salvē and say it once: SAL-weh. The model stays on the page.

Writing — one guided copy

Copy salvē once on the line below it. Write salve first, then add the short macron over the final ē. Look back at the model whenever you want.

Say the word as you finish. The macron belongs to the vowel: it records the long sound you already heard; it is not a new letter and not something to guess.

Before you move on

Compare your copy with the model. If one mark differs, repair only that mark. No hiding, no spelling from memory, and no second word today.

1.3 salvē — look, hide, write, check

Say salvē once: SAL-weh, "be well." Its sound and meaning are already familiar. Today only the amount of visual help changes.

Writing — delayed copy

How salvē is written, letter by letter, stroke by stroke

Look at salvē for five seconds. Notice the five letters and the short macron over the final ē. Cover the model completely. From memory, write the greeting once. Say SAL-weh as you finish.

Uncover the model and compare one feature at a time: s-a-l-v-ē. If one feature differs, repair only that feature. This is one gentle memory step, not a speed test.

Before you move on

Writing pass: 1/1 only when the covered-model attempt contains s-a-l-v-ē with the macron. Saying the greeting correctly does not replace the writing point.

1.4 Hear the greeting; write it independently

Cover the previous lesson and the answer box below. Hear this cue without looking at Latin spelling: "Greet one person: SAL-weh — literally, be well."

Writing — dictation and transcription

Write the one-word Latin greeting from the sound and meaning cue. Remember that the final vowel is long, so its written vowel carries the macron. Do not copy from an earlier page. Stop after one attempt.

Before you move on

Now uncover the answer: salvē.

- Writing: 1/1 for all five letters plus the final macron; otherwise 0/1.
- Listening: 1/1 if the cue selected the one-person greeting; otherwise 0/1.

Each skill must pass on its own. A correct listening choice cannot compensate for a missing or incorrect written form.

1.5 avē / avēte — "hail" (a formal greeting)

The ceremonious greeting — the one you still hear in Ave Maria.

Sounds you'll need

Avē = AH-weh (again the w-sound for v). Two syllables, the second long.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Avē is the more formal greeting — "hail" — from avēre "to fare well, to be eager." It survives in English essentially unchanged inside the prayer "Ave Maria" ("Hail, Mary"), and stands in Catullus's famous avē atque valē — "hail and farewell" — spoken at his brother's grave, pairing the word you say on arrival with the one you say on leaving (next lesson). Romans heard avē as a form of avēre; many scholars now think it began as a Punic greeting meaning "live!".

Why it's said this way

Avē carried rank and ritual — addressed to emperors and gods (avē, Caesar). For an everyday "hi," Romans reached for salvē; avē was the bow, not the wave.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- read it — AH-weh
- where English still uses it (Ave Maria, "Hail Mary")
- which is more formal, avē or salvē? (avē)

Before you move on

What register does avē carry, and in what famous phrase does English keep it? (Formal / ceremonial, for emperors and gods; Ave Maria.)

1.6 valē / valēte — "goodbye" (be strong)

Latin's goodbye wishes you strength — and hides inside value, valid, and prevail.

Sounds you'll need

Valē = WAH-leh. Like salvē, a health-and-strength wish frozen into a command.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Valē (singular) / valēte (plural) is the imperative of valēre, "to be strong, to be well." So goodbye in Latin literally wishes you strength. Valēre is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European *$*walh_2$-, "to be strong" (EtymDB 2.1). The root is an English gold mine: value, valid, valiant, valour, valence, prevail, convalesce, ambivalent ("strong both ways"). And the Romance children carry valēre as their verb "to be worth": Spanish valer, Italian valere, French valoir.

Grammar Lens

salvē, avē, valē are all the same shape — a bare imperative, a command form of a verb about health or strength. Latin doesn't say "hello/goodbye"; it orders you to thrive. Feel the -ē / -ēte pair recur: know it once, and you can address one friend or a whole room in any of the three.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- say goodbye to one person — valē (WAH-leh)
- to several — valēte
- the whole "hail and farewell" — avē atque valē
- two English words from valēre (value, valid, valiant, prevail…)

Before you move on

What does valē literally wish, and what everyday English noun comes straight from its root? ("Be strong / be well"; value — from valēre "to be worth.")

1.7 grātiās (tibi) agō — "thank you" (I give thanks)

Say this and you have said grace, gratitude, gracias, and grazie all at once.

Sounds you'll need

Grātiās = GRAH-tee-ās; agō = AH-go. In classical Latin c and t before i stay hard — GRA-tee, never "GRA-shee."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The full phrase is grātiās tibi agō — literally "I give thanks to you" (grātiās "thanks," tibi "to you," agō "I do/drive"). The noun grātia means "favour, grace, gratitude," from grātus "pleasing, thankful." Into English: grace, gratitude, gratis, grateful, gracious, ingratiate, congratulate. And straight into the Romance "thank you" you already learned — Italian grazie, Spanish gracias, Portuguese graças — all just the plural grātiās, "thanks," worn smooth.

Grammar Lens

agō means "I do" — the -ō ending is "I," so no separate pronoun is needed. This is Latin's great habit: the verb ending tells you who acts. Agō itself is a root you know: agent, act, agenda ("things to be done"), agile, navigate.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the phrase — grātiās tibi agō
- the Romance descendants of grātiās (grazie, gracias, graças)
- what the -ō on agō already means (the pronoun "I")

Before you move on

Grātiās agō literally says what, and why is there no word for "I"? ("I give thanks"; the -ō verb-ending already carries "I.")

1.8 ita / nōn — "yes" and "no"

A surprise: Latin had no plain word for "yes." Here is what Romans said instead.

Sounds you'll need

Ita = IH-tah; nōn = nōne, with a long ō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Classical Latin had no simple "yes." To agree you said ita ("thus, so"), sīc ("so, in this way"), certē ("certainly"), or you repeated the verb — asked "are you coming?", you answered "I'm coming." It was sīc that hardened into the Romance "yes": Spanish and Italian sí / sì, French si (the emphatic yes). "No" is easier: nōn ("not"), from older ne-oenum "not one thing" — the ancient negative ne- that also gives English no, not, none, never, and which you will meet again as Sanskrit na and Hindi nahīṇ.

Why it's said this way

A language that carries so much in its verb endings barely needs a "yes" word — the verb is the answer. This is a real window into how Latin thinks: agreement lives in the sentence, not in a little particle bolted on.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- three Latin ways to say "yes" (ita, sīc, certē)
- which one became Spanish/Italian sí/sì? (sīc)
- the English cousins of nōn (no, not, none, never)

Before you move on

How did Romans say "yes," and what Romance word grew out of sīc? (With ita/sīc/certē or by repeating the verb; sí / sì.)

1.9 Chapter 1 — Practice and Recall

No new words. Just the greetings — and the English and Romance words they secretly contain.

Your turn: Rapid recall

Say these aloud:

- hello, one person — salvē
- hail, formally — avē
- goodbye, one person — valē
- thank you — grātiās tibi agō
- "thus" (a way to say yes) and "not" — ita / nōn

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Each greeting is an etymological hub. Trace them:
Say these aloud:

- which greeting root gives save, safe, salute? (salvus, from salvē)
- which gives value, valid, prevail? (valēre, from valē)
- which gives grace, gratitude, grazie, gracias? (grātia, from grātiās)

Before you move on

- salvus "safe" → save, safe, salvage, salvation, salute
- valēre "be strong" → value, valid, valiant, prevail, convalesce
- grātia "grace" → grace, gratitude, gratis, congratulate; Romance grazie/gracias
- nōn ← ne- → English no, not, none; cousin of Sanskrit na

Before you move on

Catullus wrote avē atque valē at his brother's tomb. Translate it, and say what each verb literally wishes. ("Hail and farewell"; avē "fare well" on meeting, valē "be strong" on parting.)

Chapter 2

Numbers One to Ten

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from one to ten in Latin and say why September sits in the ninth month.
>
> Count ūnus to decem aloud, then read the Roman tally VI-X and place September against Rome's March-start year.

2.1 ūnus, duo, trēs, quattuor, quīnque — one to five

You've seen these numbers before — worn down. Here they are new, before a thousand years of erosion set to work.

You'll want to know: The five

numeral	Latin	said
I (1)	ūnus	OO-nus
II (2)	duo	DOO-oh
III (3)	trēs	trayss
IV (4)	quattuor	KWAT-twor
V (5)	quīnque	KWEEN-kwe

The Roman numerals I II III IV V are the tally you already half-know from clock faces — one, two, three strokes, then IV (one before five) and V (five itself). (The qu in quattuor/quīnque is said kw, and every Latin v is a w — so quīnque is KWEEN-kwe.)

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Latin is the well the Romance tracks keep drawing from. Line these up against their descendants and the erosion shows itself:

Latin	→ French	→ Spanish
ūnus	un	uno
duo	deux	dos
trēs	trois	tres
quattuor	quatre	cuatro
quīnque	cinq	cinco

(A purist's note: French deux and Spanish dos actually descend from the accusative duōs, not the duo shown — as Romance words generally do.)

Quattuor → quatre → cuatro is the same wearing-down Hindi shows in catvāri → chār — two branches of one ancient word (PIE *k^{w}etwóres), one softening in Europe, one in India. And they seed English too: ūnus in unit and union, duo in duo and dual, trēs in trio and triple, quīnque in quintet.

Grammar Lens: A grammar seed: the first three bend

Here's something Latin does that its children mostly dropped: one, two and three change their endings to match what they count — ūnus/ūna/ūnum, duo/duae, trēs/tria — while four and up stay fixed. You don't need the full tables yet; just notice that ūnus is really ūn- with a changeable tail, and file away that Latin makes even its numbers agree.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ūnus, duo, trēs, quattuor, quīnque" — remember v = w, qu = kw
- the erosion — "quattuor → quatre → cuatro"
- the tally — I, II, III, IV, V

Before you move on

Count to five in Latin. (Ūnus, duo, trēs, quattuor, quīnque.) Which Latin word is the source of both French quatre and Spanish cuatro? (quattuor.) How is the qu in quīnque pronounced? (kw — KWEEN-kwe.) Which of the first five numbers change their endings to match what they count? (One, two, three — four and up stay fixed.) Next: six to ten, and the numbers hiding in the calendar.

2.2 sex, septem, octō, novem, decem — six to ten

Four of these five are hiding in your calendar right now — with the wrong numbers on them. Here's why.

You'll want to know: The five

numeral	Latin	said
VI (6)	sex	sex
VII (7)	septem	SEP-tem
VIII (8)	octō	OK-toh
IX (9)	novem	NO-wem
X (10)	decem	DEK-em

The numerals climb by adding to five — VI VII VIII (five-and-one, -two, -three) — then IX (one before ten) and X. (Remember $v = w$, so novem is NO-wem; and c is always hard k, so decem is DEK-em.)

You'll want to know: The numbers frozen in the calendar

Say the last four out loud, then add the month-name ending -ber to each (where the ending itself comes from is uncertain):

septem + -ber → September
octō + -ber → Octōber
novem + -ber → November
decem + -ber → December

The first literally means "the seventh," yet it sits in ninth place, and the other three are two places off as well. The old Roman year began in March — so month one was March, and the seventh month was the one your calendar now counts ninth. When January and February were later pushed to the front, the names never moved. Rome renumbered the calendar and forgot to rename the months.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

- sex → sextet, sextant (and sex- "six" in sexagesimal, base-60)
- octō → octave, October — while its Greek twin oktṓ gives octagon and octopus
- decem → decimal, and — via duodecim "twelve" — dozen (its Greek cousin dekás "group of ten" adds decade)

All five numbers are cousins of English six to ten (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "sex, septem, octō, novem, decem" — v = w, c = k
- the calendar — the month named for septem, "seven", and the place it sits in now (ninth)
- the tally — VI, VII, VIII, IX, X

Before you move on

Count six to ten in Latin. (Sex, septem, octō, novem, decem.) Why does the month named for septem, "seven", fall ninth? (Rome's year began in March; two months were later added at the front and the names never changed.) How is novem said, and why? (NO-wem — Latin v is a w.) What everyday base-ten word comes straight from decem? (decimal.) You can now count to ten in the language every Romance number came from.

Chapter 3

Please

Modes: voice (1) Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can soften a Latin request the way Romans did, with quaesō or sīs instead of a word for please.
>
> Attach quaesō to a real request — dā mihi aquam, quaesō — and swap in sīs for the if-you-wish version.

3.1 quaesō — please (I ask)

Latin has no word that simply means "please." Instead you say what you're actually doing: asking.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quaesō — said KWAI-so (qu = kw, ae = eye) — literally means "I ask" or "I beg." Romans dropped it into a sentence exactly where English drops please:

> Dā mihi aquam, quaesō — "Give me water, please" (lit. "…I ask").

It's a worn-down cousin of Latin's everyday verb for "to seek, to ask" (a later chapter teaches it) — the same root English took for query, quest, question, require and inquire. So quaesō is, at heart, "I'm seeking [this] of you."

Why it's said this way

Because there's no single word, Latin had a small kit of polite moves — worth meeting so the absence doesn't feel like a gap:

- sīs — a squeezed sī vīs, "if you wish" (to one person); plural sultis (sī vultis). This is the same "if you wish" strategy French will use in s'il te plaît.
- amābō tē — literally "I will love you" — a warm, coaxing "please," the way English might say "be a dear."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "quaesō" — KWAI-so, "I ask"
- in place — "Dā mihi aquam, quaesō"
- the "if you wish" version — "sīs" (from sī vīs)

Before you move on

What did Romans literally say instead of "please"? (quaesō — "I ask/beg.") What verb is it from, and which English words share that root? (The verb "to seek, to ask" — query, quest, require.) What does sīs stand for? (sī vīs, "if you wish" — the same idea French uses in s'il te plaît.)

Chapter 4

Sorry

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can apologise in Latin with ignōsce mihi, and use paenitet mē when I want to name the regret instead.
>
> Apologise to someone's face with ignōsce mihi, then contrast it with paenitet mē, which names regret rather than asking pardon.

4.1 ignōsce mihi — "forgive me" / I'm sorry

You've met quaesō, the worn-down "I ask" Romans used for please. Their word for sorry is built the very same way — a small verb carrying the whole apology.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

- ignōsce — the imperative "forgive!," from ignōscere, itself in- (here appearing as ig-, "not") + (g)nōscere, "to know." Literally, ignōscere means "to not-know" — i.e. to overlook, to treat as unseen. Asking forgiveness in Latin is asking someone not to hold something against you, as if they hadn't noticed it.
- mihi — "to me," the dative pronoun.

So ignōsce mihi is "forgive [it] to me" — don't hold this against me. That root (g)nōscere, "to know," reaches deep into English: know itself traces to the very same ancient root, alongside recognize ("know again"), cognition, and notice. Latin's word for "sorry" and English's word for "know" are, at bottom, blood relatives.

Why it's said this way

Latin also had an impersonal construction for plain regret — no imperative, no "you" at all: paenitet mē, literally "it grieves me" (mē here is accusative, "me," the one afflicted by the regret) — "I regret [it]." It comes from the verb paenitēre, "to cause regret," the direct ancestor of English penitent, penitence, and repent. Where ignōsce mihi asks someone to forgive you, paenitet mē simply names your own regret — closer to "I'm sorry [that happened]" than to "please forgive me." The same regret/forgiveness split you'll meet again and again across languages.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ignōsce" — forgive — then "mihi," to me
- the whole phrase — "ignōsce mihi" = forgive me
- the other one — "paenitet mē" = I regret it

Before you move on

What does ignōsce mihi literally mean, piece by piece? ("Forgive to me" — ignōscere "to not-know/overlook" + mihi "to me.") What English words share the (g)nōscere root? (Know, recognize, cognition, notice.) What's Latin's other way to express regret, and how is it different? (Paenitet mē, "it grieves me" — names the regret, rather than asking to be forgiven.)

Chapter 5

Days of the Week

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name all seven Roman weekdays and say which modern names kept Rome's gods and which were rewritten.
>
> Name the full seven-day planetary week, then sort Saturday and Sunday by which languages kept Rome's gods and which renamed them.

5.1 diēs Lūnae to diēs Veneris — the week, before it wore down

Spanish says lunes; French says lundi. Both are worn-down descendants of something Latin still says in full: diēs Lūnae, "the day of the Moon." This lesson gives you the un-eroded originals.

You'll want to know: The five weekdays, spelled out in full

Each weekday is simply diēs ("day") plus a planet-god's name in the genitive ("of _____"):

Latin	literally (planet-god)	worn down to (Spanish / French)
diēs Lūnae	day of the Moon (Luna)	lunes / lundi
diēs Mārtis	day of Mars	martes / mardi
diēs Mercuriī	day of Mercury	miércoles / mercredi
diēs Iovis	day of Jupiter (Iuppiter)	jueves / jeudi
diēs Veneris	day of Venus	viernes / vendredi

Later languages kept only fragments of this phrase — a bare -s, a bare -di — but you now have the whole thing, still standing.

Why it's said this way

Rome didn't always keep a seven-day planetary week. For much of the Republic, Romans ran an eight-day market cycle (letters A through H, not planets at all). The planetary week — the Sun, Moon, and five visible planets, each ruling a day, in a fixed order — spread into Rome later, from Hellenistic astrology, and only gradually displaced the older market cycle. So diēs Lūnae and its siblings are themselves a Roman adoption, not an ancient Roman invention — a system Rome picked up and then passed on, worn down, to Spanish and French centuries later.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

diēs Lūnae and its siblings all start from diēs "day", which is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dyew-*, "sky; to shine" (EtymDB 2.1). Iovis "of Jupiter" belongs to the same root: it stands for an older Diovis, kin to the name of the Greek sky god Zeus (Lewis & Short). Lūna "moon" was built on the root of lūceō "I shine" (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "diēs Lūnae" — day of the Moon — then "diēs Mārtis," day of Mars
- all five in a row — "diēs Lūnae, Mārtis, Mercuriī, Iovis, Veneris"

- the wear-down — "diēs Mārtis" became Spanish "martes," French "mardi"

Before you move on

What does diēs Mārtis literally mean, and what does it become in Spanish and French? ("Day of Mars" — martes / mardi.) Did Rome always use a seven-day planetary week? (No — for much of the Republic it ran an eight-day market cycle; the planetary week arrived later, from Hellenistic astrology.) What holds every Latin weekday name together? (diēs "day" + the planet-god's name in the genitive, "of _____.")

5.2 diēs Saturnī, diēs Sōlis — Saturday and Sunday, before the renaming

The Roman planetary week had seven days, not five. The last two — Saturn's and the Sun's — tell a story neither Spanish nor French kept: a religious renaming that some languages accepted, and others didn't.

You'll want to know: The two original names

- diēs Saturnī — "day of Saturn." This one survives almost untouched in English: Saturday (Old English Sæternesdæg) is a direct borrowing of the Latin god's own name — the one weekday English kept a Roman god outright, rather than swapping in a Germanic equivalent, because there was no obvious Germanic god to stand in for stern old Saturn.
- diēs Sōlis — "day of the Sun." Also a direct hit in English: Sunday (Sunnandæg), a plain translation — the Sun didn't need a separate Germanic identity to be swapped in.

Why it's said this way

As Christianity spread through the Empire, Latin usage replaced both pagan names:

- diēs Saturnī → Sabbatum, borrowing the Jewish Sabbath (Hebrew shabbāt, "to rest").

- diēs Sōlis → diēs Dominica, "the Lord's day" (Dominus, "lord").

Spanish (sábado, domingo) and French (samedi, dimanche) inherited these newer, Christianized names. English never made the swap — so, unexpectedly, English's Saturday and Sunday are the older, more pagan forms, while Spanish and French's weekend names are the newer, religiously rewritten ones. The direction of "old vs. new" flips depending which language you're standing in.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "diēs Saturnī" — day of Saturn — then "diēs Sōlis," day of the Sun
- English kept these directly — "Saturday, Sunday"
- Spanish/French renamed them — "sábado/samedi (Sabbath), domingo/ dimanche (the Lord's day)"

Before you move on

What did Rome originally call Saturday and Sunday? (Diēs Saturnī "day of Saturn," diēs Sōlis "day of the Sun.") Which modern language kept these pagan names directly, and which two languages renamed them? (English kept them (Saturday, Sunday); Spanish and French replaced them with the Christian Sabbatum / diēs Dominica.) So which is actually "older" — English's weekend names, or Spanish's? (English's — Spanish's are the later, Christianized rewrite.)

Chapter 6

Colours

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say black, white, red, and blue in Latin, and explain why its blue was never as settled as its red.
>
> Say niger, albus, ruber, and caeruleus in turn, and split ruber's two children between French rouge and Spanish rojo.

6.1 niger, albus — Latin's black and white, each with a shine-twin

You've seen niger already, hiding inside French noir and Spanish negro. Here's what those daughter languages left behind: Latin didn't have just one word for black, or just one for white — it had two of each, split by brightness, not just hue.

You'll want to know: Two blacks, two whites

- niger = "black" with a gleam — a shiny, lustrous black. This is the one that survives into Romance (noir, negro, nero).
- āter = "black" that's dull, matte, lightless — the flatter, duller black. (English keeps a fossil of it in atrocious and atrocity — something so dark/dreadful it's "black" in the āter sense.)
- albus = "white" that's plain, dull, matte — this is the one that mostly faded from Romance's everyday vocabulary (surviving in Spanish alba/French aube, "dawn," rather than as the everyday color word).

- candidus = "white" with a shine, a gleam, a glow — bright white. English keeps this one working hard: candid (originally "shining bright," then "morally bright/honest"), candidate (Romans running for office wore a bleached, gleaming-white toga, the toga candida), and candle.

Why it's said this way

Romance languages mostly dropped this shine-vs-matte split and kept only one word per color (niger survived for black; albus and candidus both survive, but neither became the plain everyday "white" in most daughter languages — Spanish and French instead borrowed a Germanic word, blanco/ blanc, for their everyday white, as you may already have seen). So Latin's four color-words shrank to cover just two basic ideas — brightness stopped being how Latin-descended languages sort black and white.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

niger has no agreed origin outside Latin. albus "white" is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2elbhos*, "white" (EtymDB 2.1). āter "dull black" may come from a root for "fire" (EtymDB 2.1), and candidus "shining white" was built on candeō "I shine" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "niger" — gleaming black — then "āter," dull black
- "albus" — dull white — then "candidus," shining white
- the English fossils — "atrocious" (āter), "candid, candidate" (candidus)

Before you move on

What distinguished Latin's two black words, and its two white words? (Brightness — niger "gleaming black" vs. āter "dull black"; candidus "shining white" vs. albus "dull white.") Which two English words come from candidus, and why does candidate mean what it does? (Candid and candidate — Roman office-seekers wore a bleached-white toga candida.) Did Romance keep this four-way split? (No — it settled on one plain word per color, and Spanish/French even borrowed a Germanic word for everyday white.)

6.2 ruber, caeruleus — a rock-solid red, and a shaky blue

One of these two words is about as old and stable a color-word as language gets. The other is a genuine puzzle — because Latin, like a surprising number of ancient languages, never quite settled on a clean word for "blue."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ruber ("red") descends from PIE $\boldsymbol{h_1 rewd^h}$-, a root so old it also gives English red, rust, ruddy, and German rot. Latin's own family used two everyday variants of this root — rubeus and russus — and Romance split them between languages: French rouge comes from rubeus; Spanish rojo comes from russus. Different Latin words, same ancient root, same color.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

You might expect a clean Latin ancestor for "blue" the way ruber is for red. There isn't really one. Caeruleus is the closest word Latin had — and it's a much fuzzier idea than ruber: it covers the color of the sky and the sea (caeruleum mare, "the blue/dark sea"), but it can also shade toward dark green or simply "dark," depending on context. It isn't a fixed, single hue-word the way ruber clearly is.
This isn't just a Latin quirk. Classicists and linguists have long noted that many ancient languages lacked a clean, stable basic word for blue — Ancient Greek is the most famous case (Homer's "wine-dark sea," never a simple "blue sea"). Across many language families, "blue" tends to be one of the last basic color words to settle into place, historically — sometimes splitting off late from words that also covered green, dark, or grey. Latin's caeruleus looks like part of that same broader pattern, though the exact reasons are still debated among linguists rather than fully settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ruber" — red — the ancient, PIE-rooted color word
- its two children — "rubeus → French rouge," "russus → Spanish rojo"
- "caeruleus" — sea/sky-colored — Latin's shakiest, least fixed color word

Before you move on

What PIE root gives ruber, and what English words share it? ($h_1$rewd^h- — red, rust, ruddy.) Which two Latin red-words split between French and Spanish, and which went where? (Rubeus → French rouge; russus → Spanish rojo.) Why is caeruleus a shakier word than ruber? (It covers sea/sky and can shade toward dark or green — it was never a single fixed "blue," a pattern linguists have noticed across many ancient languages, most famously Greek's "wine-dark sea.")

Chapter 7

Family

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my father, mother, brother, and sister in Latin, and say why Spanish stopped using frāter.
>
> Name the four household members aloud, then trace frāter germānus down to Spanish hermano.

7.1 pater, mater — the oldest words, kept close to the source

"Father" and "mother" are among the oldest reconstructible words in human language. Latin kept them almost exactly as they were; English took the very same ancestor down a different road.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

- pater ("father") ← PIE ph₂tḗr.
- māter ("mother") ← PIE méh₂tēr.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Here's the point worth getting exactly right: pater and English father are not one derived from the other. Both descend independently, in parallel, from the same PIE word. Latin simply kept the ancestral p and t close to unchanged; the Germanic branch that produced English took a separate route through Grimm's Law, which shifted that same inherited p → f and t → th:

PIE ancestor	Latin	Germanic → English
ph₂tḗr	pater	father
méh₂tēr	māter	mother

So pater and father are siblings, sharing one parent-word thousands of years back — not a case of English borrowing or descending from Latin. Pater also gives Latin (and later English, through Latin) the whole "of-a-parent" family: paternus ("fatherly," → English paternal) and māternus (→ maternal).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "pater, māter" — father, mother
- the relationship — "cousins, not ancestor and descendant"
- "pater → paternus → paternal; māter → māternus → maternal"

Before you move on

Does English father come from Latin pater? (No — both descend independently from the same PIE word, ph₂tḗr.) What sound-law explains the difference between them? (Grimm's Law — the Germanic branch shifted the inherited p → f, t → th; Latin kept them.) What Latin adjectives give English paternal and maternal? (Paternus, māternus.)

7.2 frater, soror — Latin's original siblings, before Spanish moved on

Two more ancient words — and a preview of a twist: these are the very words that later got pushed aside in everyday Latin, on the road to Spanish.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

- frāter ("brother") ← PIE b^{h}réh$_2$tēr.
- soror ("sister") ← PIE swésōr.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Same rule as pater/māter: frāter is not the source of English "brother" — they're cousins, both from b^{h}réh$_2$tēr, with Grimm's Law shifting the Germanic branch's b^h → b while Latin developed its own f (from an earlier b^h → f shift already inside Latin itself).
Soror is the more surprising one. English sister looks nothing like soror — and that's because Latin dropped the w from the PIE cluster sw- (giving plain s-), while the Germanic branch kept the w far longer (Old English had sweostor). So soror and sister are, once again, cousins from the same PIE word, swésōr — neither one turned into the other; each branch just handled that opening sw- differently.

Why it's said this way

Here's the twist: classical Latin could say frāter germānus, "a brother of the same blood," to mark a full sibling. Over time, in everyday (Vulgar) Latin, that adjective germānus took over the whole job, and frāter itself faded out of common use — which is exactly why Spanish says hermano, not a descendant of frāter at all. (French frère took the opposite path and kept frāter as its everyday word — different Latin regions, different survivors.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "frāter, soror" — brother, sister
- the cousin relationship — "frāter/brother and soror/sister are BOTH parallel descendants, not one from the other"
- the twist — "frāter germānus" → just "germānus" → Spanish "hermano"

Before you move on

Is English "sister" descended from Latin soror? (No — both are cousins from PIE swésōr; Latin dropped the w, Germanic kept it longer.) What Latin phrase eventually replaced frāter in everyday speech, and where does it show up today? (Frāter germānus → just germānus → Spanish hermano.) Did every Romance language make that same swap? (No — French kept frāter as frère; Spanish moved on to germānus.)

Chapter 8

Head and Hand

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say head and hand in Latin, and explain why manus is feminine when its declension usually is not.
>
> Say caput and manus with the correct gender, then list the manus words English still runs on.

8.1 caput — the head, still working two thousand years later

Few Latin words stayed as busy in English as this one. And yet — one of Latin's own descendants abandoned it for the actual body part.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caput, capitis — "head." A perfectly ordinary noun, and one of Latin's most productive exports:

English	literally
captain	the "head" of a ship or unit
capital	the "head" city, or the "head" sum of money
decapitate	to remove the head
capitulate	to arrange terms under "little-head" headings — hence, to yield

Spanish kept caput as its everyday word too: cabeza descends from it (by way of Vulgar Latin capitia).

Why it's said this way

French had caput available — and dropped it for the body part entirely. Instead French says tête, from Latin testa, "an earthenware pot, a shell." Roman soldiers joked about the skull the way English speakers say "noggin" (a small mug), and in Gaul, that joke eventually replaced caput as the everyday word. Caput didn't disappear from French, though — it survives there too, just not for the actual head: chef ("chief"), chapitre, capital, capitaine.
So three languages took three different paths with the very same word: Spanish kept caput as the plain, everyday "head"; French demoted it to "chief/chapter/capital" and reached for a pot-joke instead; English never used it for the body part at all, only for these borrowed "head of something" senses.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "caput, capitis" — head
- the English family — "captain, capital, decapitate, capitulate"
- the twist — French swapped caput out for testa, "pot"

Before you move on

What does caput mean, and what English words come from it? ("Head" — captain, capital, decapitate, capitulate.) Did every Romance language keep it as the everyday word for "head"? (No — Spanish did (cabeza); French replaced it with testa, "pot," soldiers' slang for the skull.) Where does caput survive in French, if not as "head"? (Chef, chapitre, capital, capitaine.)

8.2 manus — the hand, and a famous grammatical exception

Here's a word that's productive in English and grammatically odd in Latin itself — an oddity that then rode straight through into Spanish.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

manus, manūs — "hand." It belongs to Latin's 4th declension — a group of nouns ending in -us that runs overwhelmingly masculine: frūctus ("fruit"), exercitus ("army"), senātus ("senate"), portus ("port") are all masculine. Manus is one of only a handful of exceptions in that declension — feminine, alongside anus ("old woman") and Latin's word for "house" (which is even messier: it mixes 4th- and 2nd-declension endings throughout its own paradigm) — for reasons tied to each noun's own ancient history, not a rule you could predict from the -us ending alone.
That oddity didn't stay buried in Latin grammar books: Spanish's word for hand, mano, inherited manus's feminine gender directly — which is exactly why mano is famously feminine despite ending in -o, the ending that signals masculine in nearly every other Spanish noun. One small Latin exception, carried whole into a completely different pattern in a daughter language, centuries later.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

English	literally
manual	done by hand
manufacture	made by hand (manus + facere, "to make") manuscript	written by hand (manus + scrībere)
maintain	hold in the hand (manū tenēre)
manage	to handle

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "manus, manūs" — hand
- the exception — "feminine, unlike frūctus, exercitus, senātus"
- the English family — "manual, manufacture, maintain, manage"

Before you move on

What gender is manus, and is that typical for its declension? (Feminine — unusual, since the 4th declension runs mostly masculine; manus is one of a few exceptions, alongside anus and the word for "house".) What Spanish word inherited this exact oddity? (Mano — feminine despite ending in -o.) Give an English word from manus. (Manual, manufacture, manuscript, maintain, manage.)

Chapter 9

Seasons

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the four seasons in Latin and say which ones Romance rebuilt out of a phrase instead.
>
> Name vēr, aestās, autumnus, and hiems, then sort which survived plainly and which Romance rebuilt from phrases: "first spring" and hībernum.

9.1 vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems — Latin's own four seasons

Four Latin nouns, one for each season — and a genuine surprise about which ones actually survived into Spanish and French as ordinary words.

You'll want to know: The four seasons, plain and simple

Latin	meaning
vēr, vēris	spring
aestās, aestātis	summer (also just "heat")
autumnus, autumnī	autumn
hiems, hiemis	winter

Why it's said this way

autumnus survived plainly: it's the direct ancestor of Spanish otoño, French automne, and English autumn itself — no detours.
But vēr and hiems, the plain nouns for spring and winter, mostly didn't make it into everyday Romance vocabulary. Instead, Spanish and French built brand-new words out of adjective phrases describing those seasons.
Spring was not vēr alone, but a Vulgar Latin phrase/reanalysis, roughly "first spring":
prīma ("first") + vēra (vēr, reshaped) → primavera
That gives Spanish primavera, Italian primavera (still the everyday word there), and French (originally) primevère — later displaced there by printemps ("first time," the same "first" put with tempus: the very same "adjective + tempus" recipe as winter's word below). Primevère narrowed to just mean "primrose" today.
Winter was not hiems alone, but hībernum (tempus), "the wintry [time]" → Spanish invierno, French hiver — the same root as English hibernate.
Aestās ("summer/heat") did survive directly into French été — but Spanish took yet another path: it built vērānum (tempus) ("of spring") from vēr itself, and that word's meaning later drifted forward to name summer instead of spring, giving Spanish verano — leaving primavera to do spring's job.
So the picture is mixed, not a clean split: autumnus cruised straight through into Spanish, French, and English unchanged; aestās cruised through into French (été) but got replaced in Spanish; vēr and hiems, the plain nouns for spring and winter, essentially left no everyday trace in either language — both were replaced by phrase-built words instead (or, in verano's case, by a related word whose meaning simply moved).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems" — the four seasons
- the one that survived plainly — "autumnus → otoño, automne, autumn"
- the two built from phrases — "first spring" → primavera, "hībernum → invierno, hiver"

Before you move on

What are Latin's four season-nouns? (Vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems.) Which one survived plainly into Spanish, French, and English? (Autumnus → otoño, automne, autumn.) What did Spanish and French build instead of the plain words vēr and hiems? (Adjective phrases — "first spring" → primavera/primevère; hībernum "wintry" → invierno/hiver.)

Chapter 10

Water, Wine, and Bread

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name water, wine, and bread in Latin, and explain why a companion is someone you share bread with.
>
> Ask for aqua, vīnum, and pānis, then unpack com- plus pānis into companion.

10.1 aqua, vīnum — one word worn thin, one word untouched

Two everyday Latin nouns — and two wildly different fates. One of Rome's daughters wore this word down to almost nothing. The other word barely moved at all, anywhere.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aqua, aquae — "water." Spanish and Italian kept it close to whole: agua, acqua. French, though, eroded it further than almost any other word it inherited from Latin: aqua → ewe → eaue → eau — three written letters, e-a-u, spelling one bare vowel sound, "oh." Compare caput, which French similarly abandoned as an everyday word (for testa) — aqua wasn't replaced, but it was worn down almost to nothing while staying in place.
English kept the whole, undamaged word as a learned borrowing: aquatic, aquarium, aqueduct, aqualung all sound exactly like their Latin ancestor.

You'll want to know: vīnum — survived, everywhere, almost untouched vīnum, vīnī — "wine." Unlike aqua and caput, this word simply didn't erode much in any direction: Spanish vino, French vin, Italian vino — all close to the original. Germanic borrowed it directly and early, giving English wine itself. Centuries later, English picked up more of the family — this time secondhand, through French: vine (< OF vigne < vīnea, "vineyard"), vinegar (< OF vinaigre, vin + aigre, ultimately acer "sour"), vintage (< OF vendage < vīndēmia, vīnum + dēmere "to harvest"). Vineyard isn't a borrowing at all — English built it at home, compounding the already-borrowed "wine" with native "yard." Few Latin words traveled this far, by this many different roads, and stayed this recognizable.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "aqua" — water — then the daughters: "agua, acqua, eau"
- "vīnum" — wine — then: "vino, vin, vino, wine"
- the contrast — aqua wore thin in French; vīnum stayed solid everywhere

Before you move on

Which Latin word for a drink got worn down almost to nothing, and in which language? (Aqua, in French — down to a bare "eau.") Which word barely changed anywhere, surviving into every Romance daughter and into English too? (Vīnum — wine, vino, vin, vino.) Where did the whole, undamaged form of aqua survive in English? (Aquatic, aquarium, aqueduct — learned borrowings, not everyday words.)

10.2 pānis — bread, and the friend who shares it

One Latin word for bread, surviving whole across every Romance daughter — and hiding, inside a compound, one of the loveliest word-stories in English.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pānis, pānis — "bread." Spanish pan, French pain, Italian pane all continue it directly — bread mattered enough to keep its own name everywhere. Pānis itself is inherited, built on an old root for feeding, *$peh_2$- (EtymDB 2.1).

You'll want to know: com- + pānis — "sharing bread"

Add the prefix com- ("with, together") and you get compānio/ compānia — a Vulgar Latin coinage, not a Classical-era word — literally "one you share bread with," the direct ancestor of English companion and company. A company was, at first, nothing more than a group who ate together.

Why it's said this way

English only kept the friendship half of this word — companion has nothing to do with actual bread anymore to an English speaker. Spanish, though, still keeps both halves traceably related: pan (the bread itself) and compañero (the friend, "one who shares pan") sit right next to each other in the same language, both transparently built from the same root. Latin's pānis split into two separate lives in English, but stayed one visible family in Spanish.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "pānis" — bread — then "pan, pain, pane"
- "com- + pānis" — "with bread" — companion, company
- the contrast — English kept only the friend; Spanish kept both the bread and the friend

Before you move on

What does pānis give Spanish, French, and Italian directly? (Pan, pain, pane — bread.) What English words come from com- + pānis, and what do they literally mean? (Companion, company — "one you share bread with.") Does English still connect

"companion" to actual bread? (No — only Spanish keeps both pan and compañero traceably related.)

Chapter 11

Months

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name all twelve Roman months and say what July and August were called before they were renamed.
>
> Recite the twelve months in order, then restore Quīntīlis and Sextīlis to July and August's slots.

11.1 Iānuārius to December — the twelve months, before and after the rename

These twelve names turn up again, worn down, in Spanish and French. Latin lets you see something they can't show you directly: two of these months used to have completely different names.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Latin	who / what
Iānuārius	Janus, the two-faced god of doors and beginnings
Februārius	Februa, the Roman purification festival
Mārtius	Mars, the war-god
Aprīlis	perhaps aperīre, "to open" (buds opening)
Māius	Maia, goddess of growth
Iūnius	Juno, queen of the gods
Quīntīlis	literally "the fifth" (quīntus) — later renamed Iūlius
Sextīlis	literally "the sixth" (sextus) — later renamed Augustus
September	"the seventh" (septem)
Octōber	"the eighth" (octō)
November	"the ninth" (novem)
December	"the tenth" (decem)

Each name comes from the god, festival or number beside it; Aprīlis is the least certain.

Why it's said this way

You'll often hear that Julius Caesar and Augustus "added" two months to the calendar, which is why September through December no longer match their numbers. That's not what happened. Rome's year, centuries earlier, had already been expanded from ten months to twelve by adding Iānuārius and Februārius at the front — that's the real reason September ("seventh") ended up as the ninth month. Quīntīlis ("the fifth") and Sextīlis ("the sixth") already existed as ordinary, plainly-numbered months, right alongside September through December. In 44 BC, the year Julius Caesar was killed, Rome renamed Quīntīlis to Iūlius in his honor; decades later, Augustus received the same honor, and Sextīlis became Augustus. No months were created — two old, numbered ones got new names, and Latin's fifth and sixth months quietly disappeared from view, hiding inside julio/juillet and agosto/août in every daughter language.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the twelve — "Iānuārius, Februārius, Mārtius, Aprīlis, Māius, Iūnius, Quīntīlis, Sextīlis, September, Octōber, November, December"
- the originals — "Quīntīlis, the fifth" / "Sextīlis, the sixth"
- the correction — "renamed, not inserted"

Before you move on

What were Iūlius and Augustus called before they were renamed, and what did those names mean? (Quīntīlis "the fifth" and Sextīlis "the sixth.") Did Julius Caesar and Augustus add new months to the calendar? (No — they got two already-existing months renamed after them.) What actually caused September–December to fall out of step with their numbers? (Adding Iānuārius and Februārius to the front of the year, centuries earlier.)

Chapter 12

Noon and Midnight

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say noon and midnight in Latin, and explain why English's noon does not come from either.
>
> Say medius diēs and media nox, then follow both halves into Spanish and French, and trace English noon to an unrelated "ninth hour".

12.1 medius diēs, media nox — the source phrase, worn down at different rates

Here's the same Latin phrase, followed into three languages — and each one treated it completely differently.

You'll want to know: The two phrases

- medius diēs — literally "the middle day," meaning "midday, noon" (medius, "middle" + diēs, "day").
- media nox — literally "the middle night," meaning "midnight" (media, the feminine of medius + nox, noctis, "night").

Why it's said this way

- Spanish kept both halves of both phrases as fully ordinary, living words: medio/media ("middle") and día/noche ("day/night") — giving mediodía and medianoche, entirely transparent.
- French eroded the same phrase unevenly. Nox survived as the everyday word nuit ("night") — still fully transparent inside minuit. But diēs did not survive as French's everyday word for "day" (that's jour instead) — so inside midi, the -di fragment is a fossil, recognizable only from weekday names like lundi, mardi, not from any living, standalone word for "day."

- English didn't inherit this phrase for "noon" at all. Instead, English's noon comes from an entirely different Latin phrase, "the ninth hour" (the next lesson meets its second word) — originally meaning roughly 3 p.m. (counting from a sunrise start), it drifted steadily earlier over the centuries until it settled on midday.

One Latin phrase, three completely different fates: fully kept, half-worn, and simply replaced by another Latin phrase altogether.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

medius diēs joins two inherited words: diēs "day", met with the weekday names, and medius "middle", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European medhyos*, "middle" (EtymDB 2.1), a cousin of English mid.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "medius diēs" — mid-day, then "media nox" — mid-night
- the three fates — "Spanish kept both halves, French kept only night, English used a different phrase entirely"
- what English's real ancestor for "noon" meant — "the ninth hour"

Before you move on

What do medius diēs and media nox literally mean? ("The middle day" = noon; "the middle night" = midnight.) Which language kept both halves of both phrases fully transparent? (Spanish — mediodía, medianoche.) Which language kept "night" but not "day"? (French — nuit stayed alive, -di became a fossil.)

Does English's noon come from this same phrase? (No — from a Latin phrase meaning "the ninth hour," which drifted from afternoon to midday.)

Chapter 13

Telling Time

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the hour in Latin, and explain why a Roman hour was not a fixed sixty minutes.
>
> Say hōra, then work out how long a Roman hour actually was on a winter day against a summer one.

13.1 hōra — the source word, and an hour that wasn't always 60 minutes

The last lesson traced English noon to a Latin phrase, "the ninth hour" — now meet its word for "hour" itself, and an honest surprise about what a Roman "hour" actually was.

You'll want to know: hōra ← Greek hṓrā hōra = "hour" — borrowed from Greek hṓrā, "a season, the right time, a time of day" (the Greek goddesses of the seasons, the Hōrai, share this root). Latin narrowed the broader Greek sense down to today's specific meaning: one twelfth of the day.

Why it's said this way

Here's the part that trips people up: the Romans divided daylight — sunrise to sunset — into 12 equal hōrae, and night into another 12. But since daylight itself is longer in summer and shorter in winter, each hōra stretched or shrank with the seasons: a summer daytime hōra in Rome could run close to 75 modern minutes, a winter one closer to 45. Only at the two equinoxes did an hōra land close to today's fixed 60 minutes. This is exactly why the ninth hōra (counted from sunrise) landed around 3 p.m. at the equinox but could shift earlier or later depending on the season — and why it drifted, over centuries, into the fixed clock-time we call "noon."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

language	word	what happened
Spanish	hora	inherited almost unchanged
French	heure	inherited, worn down further
German	Uhr	not inherited — borrowed centuries later, separately
English	hour	inherited via French

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "hōra" — the source word, Greek hṓrā underneath
- the honest surprise — a Roman hōra stretched and shrank with the seasons, it wasn't a fixed 60 minutes
- "hōra / hora / heure / hour" — one root, four different fates

Before you move on

What Greek word is hōra from, and what did it originally mean? (hṓrā — "a season, the right time.") Was a Roman hōra always 60 minutes long? (No — it was 1/12 of that day's actual daylight or nighttime span, so it stretched in summer and shrank in winter.) Which of Spanish, French, and German did not directly inherit this word from Latin? (German — it borrowed Uhr separately, much later.)

Chapter 14

Asking Someone's Age

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how old I am in Latin, using the classical born-so-many-years construction.
>
> State your own age as vīgintī annōs nātus sum, and set that pattern against Romance's have-your-years and English's be-your-years.

14.1 vīgintī annōs nātus sum — a THIRD way to say your age

You already know that Spanish and French say "I HAVE my years," and German/English say "I AM my years." Here's the honest surprise: Latin itself did neither.

You'll want to know: vīgintī annōs nātus sum — "twenty years born"

vīgintī annōs nātus sum = "I am twenty years old" — literally "I am, having been born, twenty years" (a man speaking; a woman says nāta). Taken apart:

- nātus/nāta — "born," the perfect passive participle of nāscor, "to be born" (the same root behind English nature, native, nation, innate).
- annōs — "years," in the accusative case, marking duration — "for twenty years [of life so far]." This is the same accusative-of-duration you'd use for "I studied for three years" (trēs annōs).

- sum — "I am."

So the whole phrase reads: "I am — having been born [and living] twenty years [so far]." Cicero uses exactly this pattern in Cato Maior de Senectute (§14): it gives Ennius's age as annōs septuāgintā nātus, "having been born seventy years," i.e., "at seventy years old" — and in the same section Cato gives his own age, sixty-five, in the very same shape.

Why it's said this way

You've already met the clean Romance/Germanic split for this concept — Romance languages have their years (tengo, j'ai, ho), Germanic languages are their years (ich bin, I am). Here's the twist: Latin itself used neither construction. Classical Latin's nātus + accusative-of-duration pattern is a third, distinct grammatical shape — not "having" years, not simply "being" a number, but "being born-for-that-long." The Romance "have your years" pattern ("have" + years) that Spanish, French, and Italian all inherited is a Vulgar Latin innovation that arose after Classical Latin, replacing the older nātus construction — so Spanish's tengo veinte años is NOT a direct continuation of how Cicero would have said it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vīgintī annōs nātus sum" — I am twenty years old, literally "born twenty years"
- "nātus" — born, same root as English "native, nature, nation"
- the honest surprise — this is a THIRD pattern, neither "have" nor simple "be"

Before you move on

What does vīgintī annōs nātus sum literally mean? ("I am, having been born, twenty years" — using the perfect participle nātus + the accusative of duration.) Does this match Romance's

"have your years" pattern? (No — that's a later Vulgar Latin innovation, not what Classical Latin did.) What English words share the root of nātus? (Native, nature, nation, innate.)

Chapter 15

Weather

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say it is raining, and name heat and sun in Latin, using its subjectless weather verbs.
>
> Say pluit with no subject at all, then name calor and sol, and check the pl- to ll- path into llueve.

15.1 tempestās — one Latin word widened, its own derivative narrowed

You've seen Spanish's tiempo mean both "time" and "weather" at once. Here's the honest history: Classical Latin actually kept these apart — but it wasn't Spanish that changed that. It happened inside Latin itself.

You'll want to know: tempestās — a derivative of tempus, specialized for weather, then narrowed further

tempestās = "weather, storm" — grammatically a derivative noun built on tempus ("time"), and by Classical Latin it had already specialized: tempus stayed strictly "time," while tempestās carried the weather/storm sense on its own. (English kept this split too: tempestās gives tempest, "a violent storm," while tempus gives temporal, tempo.)

Be careful with what happened next, though: Spanish's single tiempo is not these two words merging back together. Later — still within Latin's own history, before Spanish, French, or Italian existed as separate languages — tempus itself re-widened to also cover "weather" (that's why French temps and Italian tempo carry the exact same double sense; this happened at the shared Latin stage, not as a Spanish-only development). Meanwhile tempestās kept going too, narrowing further to mean specifically "storm" — and it's still alive in Spanish today as its own separate word, tempestad ("storm, tempest"), sitting right alongside tiempo. So it's one word (tempus) widening back out, not two words fusing into one.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tempestās was built inside Latin on tempus "time" (EtymDB 2.1). tempus itself has no sure origin: one proposal traces it to Proto-Indo-European tempos*, "stretch", time seen as a stretch (EtymDB 2.1), and Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "tempestās" — weather/storm, a derivative of tempus, "time," narrowed today to Spanish's "tempestad"
- "tempus" — time, later widened inside Latin to weather too

Before you move on

Were tempus and tempestās the same word in Classical Latin? (No — tempestās is a derivative that specialized for weather/storm, while tempus stayed strictly "time.") Did Spanish merge these two words back together? (No — tempus itself re-widened to cover "weather" already within Latin's own history, shared by French/Italian too; tempestās kept narrowing and survives separately as Spanish tempestad.)

15.2 pluit, calor, sol — three pieces of weather language

You know the history of tempestās. Now learn how Latin actually states rain, heat, and sun.

Grammar Lens: pluit — a subjectless weather verb

Latin uses dedicated impersonal verbs with no subject at all:

- pluit — it rains
- ningit — it snows
- tonat — it thunders

Pluit is the ancestor of Spanish llueve. Its opening follows the same pl- → ll- path as plovere → llover and plēnus → lleno; fl- went the same way, flamma → llama.
This verb pattern resembles English "it rains" more closely than Spanish hace calor. Spanish kept the dedicated verb for rain but built a new hacer expression for heat, cold, and sun.

You'll want to know: calor and sol — carried straight through

Latin calor ("heat") and sol ("sun") are also Spanish calor and sol. These words needed no visible sound change at all.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pluit is a form of pluō "I rain", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pleweti* (EtymDB 2.1), from a root plew-*, "to flow, to float". calor "heat" was built inside Latin on caleō "I am warm" (Lewis & Short). sōl "sun" is inherited, usually traced to soh2wl*, "sun" (EtymDB 2.1), a cousin of English sun.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "pluit" — it rains; ancestor of Spanish llueve
- "calor" — heat, unchanged in Spanish
- "sol" — sun, unchanged in Spanish

Before you move on

How does Latin say “it rains”? (Pluit, with no subject.) What sound path connects it to Spanish llueve? (pl- → ll-.) Which two weather nouns pass into Spanish unchanged? (Calor and sol.) Does Latin use a counterpart of Spanish hacer for all three ideas? (No — it uses dedicated impersonal weather verbs.)

Chapter 16

Numbers Eleven to Twenty

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from eleven to twenty in Latin, including its backwards eighteen and nineteen.
>
> Count ūndecim to vīgintī aloud, then say duodēvīgintī and ūndēvīgintī and explain what they are counting backwards from.

16.1 ūndecim, vīgintī — the source numbers, including a genuine oddity

You've seen Spanish's once through quince as fused, worn-down compounds. Here are the whole, un-fused Latin originals — plus a real quirk in Latin's own counting system that Spanish quietly dropped.

You'll want to know: ūndecim–quīndecim — plain "X-ten" compounds

Latin	literally
ūndecim	ūnus + decim, "one-ten"
duodecim	duo + decim, "two-ten"
tredecim	trēs + decim, "three-ten"
quattuordecim	quattuor + decim, "four-ten"
quīndecim	quīnque + decim, "five-ten"

Straightforward additive compounds — number, then decim ("ten," from decem). These are the direct, whole ancestors of Spanish's once, doce, trece, catorce, quince — fused down over the centuries into single words.

You'll want to know: sēdecim, septendecim — still additive sēdecim (16, "six-ten") and septendecim (17, "seven-ten") keep the same additive pattern.

Why it's said this way

Here's the real oddity. Latin didn't say "eight-ten" or "nine-ten" for 18 and 19 — it counted backward from twenty instead:

> duodēvīgintī — "two FROM twenty" (18)
> ūndēvīgintī — "one FROM twenty" (19)

This is genuinely subtractive counting, not additive — the same logic behind how Latin also names the day before the Kalends. It's a real irregularity sitting right in the middle of an otherwise perfectly additive system. Spanish did not inherit this quirk: dieciocho and diecinueve are built fresh on the simple "ten-and-X" template, quietly regularizing away something genuinely odd in Latin's own counting.

You'll want to know: vīgintī

vīgintī ("twenty") — the direct, unchanged source of Spanish's veinte.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūndecim was put together inside Latin from ūnus "one" and decem "ten" (Lewis & Short), and decem is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dekm*, "ten" (EtymDB 2.1). vīgintī "twenty" is inherited too, usually traced to h1wih1kmti*, "twenty", read as "two tens" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek eikosi "twenty" is its cousin (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ūndecim, duodecim, tredecim, quattuordecim, quīndecim" — the plain "X-ten" compounds
- "duodēvīgintī, ūndēvīgintī" — 18 and 19, counted BACKWARD from twenty
- "vīgintī" — twenty

Before you move on

- What pattern do ūndecim through quīndecim follow? (Additive — number + decim, "ten.")
- What's genuinely odd about Latin's 18 and 19? (They're subtractive — duodēvīgintī/ūndēvīgintī, literally "two/one FROM twenty," not "eight/nine-ten.")
- Did Spanish keep this pattern? (No — dieciocho/diecinueve use plain addition, regularizing away Latin's quirk.)

Chapter 17

Dog and Cat

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a dog and a cat in Latin, and say which of its two cat-words came first.
>
> Name canis, fēlēs, and cattus, then say which cat-word is Classical Latin's own and where the newcomer arrived from.

17.1 canis, fēlēs, cattus — the expected word, and the word that pushed it out

Spanish's perro mysteriously displaced the word Latin gave it. Here is that word, and a parallel story about "cat."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

canis ("dog") is the direct source of English canine, French chien, Italian cane — and it's also the Latin word Spanish inherited first, as can. But Spanish's everyday word for dog is perro instead, a word with no confirmed etymology at all — can survives only in archaic or literary use, quietly pushed aside by a newcomer nobody can fully explain.

You'll want to know: fēlēs and cattus — a similar displacement, this time INSIDE Latin

Here is a parallel that happened within Latin itself, before any Romance language existed:

- fēlēs was Classical Latin's own, original word for "cat" — used by Cicero, Pliny, and others, and still preserved today in the scientific name for the domestic cat, Felis catus.
- cattus (also catta) is a later word that entered Latin as domestic cats themselves spread along Roman trade routes, out of their point of domestication in Egypt (c. 2000 BCE). Cattus is most likely ultimately an Afro-Asiatic word (compare Nubian kadis, "cat") — the word traveled with the animal.

By around 700 CE, cattus had pushed fēlēs out of everyday use almost everywhere — it's cattus, not fēlēs, that gives Spanish gato, Italian gatto, French chat, and more.

Why it's said this way

Both "dog" and "cat" show a Latin-inherited word getting pushed aside by a newcomer — but the two stories aren't equally well understood. Cattus replacing fēlēs is a well-documented, well-sourced piece of history, with a real trade-route explanation. Perro replacing canis-derived can is genuinely unexplained — a real gap in the historical record, not just a simplification for beginners.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "canis" — dog, source of English "canine"
- "fēlēs" — Classical Latin's own word for cat
- "cattus" — the newcomer that replaced it, probably from Egypt via Africa

Before you move on

- What English word is a direct cousin of canis? (Canine.)
- Which Latin word for "cat" is older? (Fēlēs — Classical Latin's own word, later displaced by cattus.)
- Where does cattus most likely come from? (An Afro-Asiatic word, probably from Egypt, that traveled with the cat itself.)

- Are the two displacements equally well understood? (No — cattus has a sourced history; Spanish perro remains a genuine mystery.)

Chapter 18

Green and Yellow

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say green and yellow in Latin, and explain why almost no Romance language kept flāvus.
>
> Say viridis and flāvus, then follow verde one way and galbinus the other into jaune, giallo, and galben.

18.1 viridis, flāvus — the kept word, and the word Romance abandoned twice over

One of Latin's color words survived cleanly into Spanish. The other one is a genuine oddity: Latin had a perfectly good word for yellow — and virtually no Romance language kept it, though most of them agreed on a surprising replacement together.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

viridis ("green") comes from virēre, "to flourish, to be green, to be vigorous" — and this is the direct source of Spanish's verde, worn down by entirely ordinary sound change (syncope of the medial vowel: viridis → virdis → verde). A clean, uneventful inheritance.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flāvus ("yellow, golden, blond," often specifically of hair) is a genuine, well-attested Classical Latin color word, from Proto-Indo-European bhleh$_3$w- ("shining, light-colored") — though lūteus was Latin's more neutral, plain "yellow" word in everyday prose. Here's the honest oddity: almost no Romance language kept flāvus as its everyday word for "yellow." Spanish and Portuguese independently reinvented amarillo/amarelo from amarus, "bitter." But here's the genuinely surprising twist: French's jaune, Italian's giallo, and Romanian's galben all converge on a different shared Latin word instead — galbinus, which meant "light green," not yellow at all. So this isn't every daughter language scattering off in its own direction — it's closer to two major replacement stories: Ibero-Romance's shared "bitter" reinvention, and a much wider swath of Romance sharing galbinus instead. Flāvus itself didn't vanish completely — it survives today mainly in Roman personal names, like Flāvius and Flāvia.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "viridis" — green, direct source of verde
- "flāvus" — yellow, Latin's own word, almost universally abandoned
- "galbinus" — "light green," yet somehow the shared source of French's jaune, Italian's giallo, AND Romanian's galben
- "Flāvius" — a Roman name preserving flāvus, where the color word itself didn't survive

Before you move on

What Latin verb gives viridis, and what Spanish word does it directly become? (Virēre, "to flourish" → verde.) Did most Romance languages keep flāvus as their word for yellow? (No.) What are the two main replacement stories, and which languages fall into each? (Ibero-Romance — Spanish/Portuguese — independently reinvented amarillo/amarelo from "bitter"; French, Italian, and Romanian all instead converge on the same Latin word, galbinus, "light green," not yellow at all.) Where does flāvus mainly survive today? (Roman personal names, like Flāvius and Flāvia.)

Chapter 19

How Are You?

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask someone in Latin how they are, and answer that I am well.
>
> A five-line exchange run end to end: salvē, quid agis?, valeō with grātiās tibi agō, ut valēs?, and valē from both voices.

19.1 quid agis? — how are you?

Roman comedy gives you a short wellbeing question: quid agis?

Why it's said this way

Quid agis? literally means "What are you doing?" In the comedies of Plautus and Terence, it also works like "How are you?" or "How is it going?"
Say it in two pieces: quid … agis. Keep Latin qu as kw.
That is the whole step. A second attested question comes next, after this one is comfortable.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quid agis pairs two inherited words: quid "what", from the Proto-Indo-European question stem kwis*, and agis "you do", from agō, usually traced to h2eg-*, "to drive" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

- Say it: quid agis?
- Recall: its literal meaning — "what are you doing?"
- Recall: its conversational use — "how are you?"

Before you move on

Ask "How are you?" with today's Roman question. (Quid agis?) What does it say literally? (What are you doing?)

19.2 ut valēs? — how do you fare?

You know quid agis? Add one alternative built from the farewell valē: ut valēs?

Why it's said this way

Ut valēs? literally asks "How do you fare?" Its verb is valēre, "to be strong or well," the same family as valē, "be well." Plautus and Terence use this question in ordinary dialogue.
You may also meet a modern "how are you?" question in spoken-Latin courses (a later lesson shows it). It is grammatical, but it is not found in surviving classical texts. Ut valēs? is the one Romans can be heard asking.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ut valēs opens on ut "how", also spelled utī, built on the same question stem as quid "what" (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

- Say it: ut valēs?
- Recall: valē — "be well"
- Choose: Which is classically attested: ut valēs? or the modern spoken-Latin question? (Ut valēs?)

Before you move on

Ask "How do you fare?" (Ut valēs?) Which familiar farewell shares its verb? (Valē.) Where can you hear Romans ask it? (In Plautus and Terence.)

19.3 valeō and valē — answer and farewell from one verb

You can ask ut valēs?, "how do you fare?" Its most direct answer is already hiding inside the first farewell you learned.

You'll want to know: valeō — I fare well

The attested reply is valeō: "I fare well" or "I am strong." Plautus's characters can intensify it as valeō rēctē ("I am properly well"), or go on to say they are safe and sound too.

The dictionary verb is valēre, "to be strong, be well." Watch one stem move through the exchange:

- ut valēs? — how do you fare?
- valeō — I fare well
- valē! — be well!

That last imperative became the Chapter 1 goodbye. Latin's farewell is therefore a wish for the other person to remain well.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

valeō is inherited, usually traced through Proto-Italic walēō*, "to be strong", to Proto-Indo-European h2welh1-*, "to rule, to be strong" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ut valēs?" — how do you fare?

- "valeō" — I fare well
- "valē" — be well; goodbye

Before you move on

What verb unites ut valēs?, valeō, and valē? (Valēre, "to be strong or well.") Which form answers the question? (Valeō.) What does the farewell valē literally command? (Be well.)

19.4 Practice — open, check, answer, close

Nothing new. You already own every word below; this lesson only puts them in order, so that for the first time you can carry a whole Latin exchange from the first breath to the last.

The exchange — five lines, all of them already yours

A: Salvē! Quid agis? Be well! What are you doing? — "hello, how's it going?"

B: Valeō, grātiās tibi agō. Ut valēs? I fare well, I give thanks to you. How do you fare?

A: Valeō. — I fare well.

B: Valē! — Be well!, the parting wish

A: Valē!

Hear what holds it together. One verb, valēre ("to be strong, to be well"), supplies the second question (valēs), both answers (valeō), and the farewell (valē). Latin does not need a separate word for "I": the -ō of valeō and agō already is it. And the exchange opens and closes on the same wish — salvē "be well," valē "be well" — because a Roman greeting is a wish for the other person's health, coming and going.

Your turn

- Run through: both voices, aloud, once straight through
- Choose: you meet a whole room, not one person → salvēte
- Say it: the ending that already means "I" in valeō and agō — -ō

Before you move on

Run the exchange once more without looking. Then: which single verb supplies valēs, valeō, and valē? (Valēre.) Which of the two Roman "how are you?" questions is not attested? (Neither — both quid agis? and ut valēs? are real; only the spoken-Latin courses' question is modern.)

Chapter 20

Exchanging Names

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask someone's name in Latin and give my own, using the classical dative of possession.
>
> Ask quid tibi nōmen est? and answer mihi nōmen est, holding the possessor in the dative while the name itself may go either way.

20.1 quid tibi nōmen est?, mihi nōmen est... — "what's your name?", the dative way

English says you have a name. German says you're called something. Latin does neither — it says the name belongs to you, using nothing but a case ending.

You'll want to know: quid tibi nōmen est? — literally "what is the name TO YOU?"

Quid tibi nōmen est? ("what's your name?") is, word for word, "what [is] the-name [to] you?" — no verb for "have," no verb for "be called." The name simply exists, and tibi ("to you," dative case) says who it belongs to.

You'll want to know: mihi nōmen est... — the same construction, in reply

The reply follows the identical pattern: mihi nōmen est [name] — "[the-name] [is] to-me [name]." This is Latin's genuine "dative of possession":

instead of a possessive verb, the possessor simply sits in the dative case, and the thing possessed — here, nōmen, "name" — stays in the nominative, as the sentence's real subject.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quid tibi nōmen est rests on inherited words. nōmen "name" is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1nomn*, "name" (EtymDB 2.1), a cousin of English name. tibi "to you" is an old dative, usually traced to tebhye*, "to you" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "quid tibi nōmen est?" — literally "what's the name to you?"
- "mihi nōmen est..." — "the name is to me..."
- the case doing the work — dative tibi/mihi, not a verb

Before you move on

What case does the possessor sit in, in mihi nōmen est? (Dative — mihi, "to me.") Does Latin use a verb like "have" or "be called" for this? (No — the name simply exists; possession is shown by the dative case alone.) What noun remains the sentence's grammatical subject? (Nōmen, "name.")

20.2 Mārcus or Mārcō? — a real classical variation

The possessor in Latin's naming construction is reliably dative. The personal name beside nōmen, however, is not locked to one case in every author.

Grammar Lens: The stable frame

The dative possessor appears across authors from Plautus through Livy and Sallust:

puerō nōmen est ... — to the boy the name is ...

That puerō does not change. It marks the person who possesses the name.

Grammar Lens: Two habits for the personal name

Cicero tends to keep the personal name nominative, agreeing with nōmen, the sentence's subject:

> puerō nōmen est Mārcus

Livy and Sallust more often pull the personal name into the dative to match the possessor:

> puerō nōmen est Mārcō

The underlying dative-of-possession construction is the same. The choice between Mārcus and Mārcō is authorial variation, not evidence that one sentence has stopped using the dative of possession.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "puerō" — to the boy; always the dative possessor
- "Mārcus" — Cicero's usual nominative pattern
- "Mārcō" — the matching dative found more often in Livy/Sallust

Before you move on

- Which case remains constant for the possessor? (Dative.)
- Which author tends toward nominative Mārcus? (Cicero.)
- Which authors more often use matching dative Mārcō? (Livy and Sallust.)
- Do the two forms represent different possession constructions? (No.)

Chapter 21

Nice to Meet You

Modes: voice (3) Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say in Latin that it is a pleasure to have met someone, and say what that phrase really proves.
>
> Two meeting scenes: names traded with quid tibi nōmen est? between strangers, and volup est convēnisse kept for the chance re-encounter Plautus actually wrote it for.

21.1 volup est convēnisse — the phrase Latin uses instead of a fixed idiom

Modern languages generally have one fixed phrase for "nice to meet you." Latin, honestly, does not — but it has something better: a real line from a Roman comedy that does the job.

Why it's said this way

Plautus's comedy Miles Gloriosus (Act 2, Scene 3) gives us a real line that does exactly this work: "Tē, [name], volup est convēnisse" — literally "you, [name], [it] is-a-pleasure to-have-met," or naturally, "it's a pleasure to have met you, [name]." Break it down:

- volup — an old, indeclinable word for "pleasant, pleasing" (functioning here the way iuvat, "it pleases," would)
- est — "[it] is"

- convēnisse — the perfect infinitive of convenīre, "to come together, to meet" — "to have met"

Put together: "to have met [you] is a pleasure." This is a genuine, attested line — not a modern reconstruction.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

volup est convēnisse is built from Latin parts. volup "pleasant" goes with voluptās "pleasure"; Lewis & Short connect both with Greek elpis "hope" and compare volō "I want", a link still made but not certain. convēnisse comes from conveniō "I meet", made of con- "together" and veniō "I come" (EtymDB 2.1); veniō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwem-*, "to step" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "volup est convēnisse" — "it's a pleasure to have met you"
- the pieces — volup (pleasant) + est (is) + convēnisse (to have met)
- the grammar — convēnisse is a perfect infinitive

Before you move on

Does Classical Latin have one single fixed idiom for "nice to meet you"? (No — Romans expressed the sentiment according to context.) What real, attested phrase can do the job, and where does it come from? ("Volup est convēnisse", literally "to have met [you] is a pleasure" — Plautus, Miles Gloriosus.) What kind of infinitive is convēnisse? (Perfect — "to have met.")

21.2 Useful phrase, honest context

Volup est convēnisse is genuinely Roman. Now place it in its scene so you know exactly what that evidence does—and does not—prove.

Why it's said this way

In Miles Gloriosus, Sceledrus and Palaestrio are fellow slaves who already know one another. The line welcomes a chance encounter. It does not document a fixed formula that Romans always used when introduced to a stranger for the first time.
The phrase still expresses the right sentiment: "to have met you is a pleasure." Use it as an attested way to do that conversational work, while remembering that Classical Latin has no single fixed counterpart to Spanish encantado or German freut mich.

Why it's said this way

Modern spoken-Latin guides may teach mihi pergrātum est tē convenīre: "it is very pleasing to me to meet you." Its grammar is sound, but the formula does not occur in surviving classical texts. It is useful modern Latin, not direct evidence of Roman conversational convention.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "volup est convēnisse" — classically attested
- its scene — a chance encounter between people already acquainted
- "mihi pergrātum est tē convenīre" — grammatical, but modern

Before you move on

Is the Plautine line a first-time introduction? (No — it is a chance encounter between acquaintances.) Is it still genuinely attested? (Yes.) Is mihi pergrātum est tē convenīre bad grammar? (No.) Is it classically attested? (No — it is a modern spoken-Latin formula.)

21.3 Practice — two meetings, each with the right words

English uses one formula for both meetings. Latin does not, and the chapter told you why. So you get two scenes, and the payoff is knowing which words go in which.

The exchange — scene one: strangers, so trade names

A: Salvē! Quid tibi nōmen est? Be well! What is the name to you?

B: Mihi nōmen est Mārcus. Quid tibi nōmen est? The name to me is Marcus.

A: Mihi nōmen est Iūlia.

B: Valē! A: Valē!

Mārcus and Iūlia are only slots — put your own name there. Notice what is missing: no verb for "have," no verb for "be called." The dative tibi/mihi carries the possession by itself, and nōmen stays the subject.

Scene two is the chance re-encounter — the situation Plautus actually wrote the line for:

A: Salvē! Quid agis?

B: Valeō. Volup est convēnisse! I fare well. It is a pleasure to have met [you].

A: Valē!

Your turn

- Run through: scene one with your own name in the slot
- Choose: a stranger → names; someone you already know → volup est convēnisse
- Choose: greeting several people at once → salvēte

Before you move on

Which case does mihi sit in, and what work does it do? (Dative; it owns the name without any verb.) Cicero would write puerō nōmen est Mārcus; who prefers Mārcō? (Livy and Sallust.) Is mihi pergrātum est tē convenīre good Latin, and is it Roman? (Good grammar; not attested — modern.)

Chapter 22

You, Singular and Plural

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can choose tū or vōs correctly in Latin, knowing the choice is about number and not politeness.
>
> Address one person as tū and a group as vōs, then say why neither carries politeness the way German's Sie does.

22.1 tū, vōs — "you," before politeness got involved

German's two words for "you" are about formality — du against Sie. Latin's two words for "you" split on something completely different: plain number. Formality hadn't been invented yet.

You'll want to know: tū — you, one person

Tū = "you," addressing one person. That's the whole rule — no formal/informal split, just singular number. You've already used its dative form, tibi, in quid tibi nōmen est?

You'll want to know: vōs — you, more than one person

Vōs = "you," addressing more than one person — plain plural, nothing more.

Why it's said this way

Here's the real teaching point: in Classical Latin, this is a purely grammatical number distinction. There is no formal/informal dimension at all — using vōs to politely address a single powerful person had not yet started. That habit — plural pronoun used respectfully for one person — only developed later, in Late Latin, well after the classical period. It's the direct ancestor of French's polite vous. Careful, though: it is not the ancestor of German's Sie from the last lesson — Sie solves the same politeness problem in a completely different way, by repurposing an unrelated pronoun (3rd-person plural "they"), not by descending from vōs at all. Classical Romans simply didn't have this option yet: one person was always tū, no matter how important they were — though Romans still had other ways to show deference, like respectful titles (domine, "sir/lord"), just not through the pronoun itself.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tū is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tuh2*, "you" (EtymDB 2.1), a cousin of English thou. vōs "you all" is usually traced to Proto-Italic wos*, "you all" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "tū" — you, singular, one person
- "vōs" — you, plural, more than one person
- the honest twist — Classical Latin's tū/vōs is PURE number, no politeness at all, unlike German's du/Sie

Before you move on

What's the difference between tū and vōs in Classical Latin — number, or politeness? (Pure number — tū is singular, vōs is plural; no formality dimension existed yet.) When did using vōs to politely address one person begin? (Late Latin, after the classical period — the direct ancestor of French's polite vous.) Is German's Sie descended from vōs the same way? (No — Sie solves the same problem independently, by repurposing 3rd-person plural "they," not by inheriting from vōs at all.)

Chapter 23

You're Welcome

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can reply to thanks in Latin with nihil est, and say honestly how classical that reply is.
>
> Answer grātiās tibi agō with nihil est, and state plainly that the reply is modern convention built from real words.

23.1 nihil est — "you're welcome," another honest gap

You already learned that Latin has no fixed "nice to meet you." Here's the same honest gap again: no fixed reply to "thank you" either.

You'll want to know: nihil est — "it's nothing"

Nihil est = literally "[it] is nothing" — nihil ("nothing") + est ("is"). This is the phrase modern conversational-Latin communities commonly reach for as "you're welcome," parallel to English "it's nothing" or Spanish de nada.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Nihil itself is genuinely classical and richly attested, from an older nihilum, itself built from ne- ("not") + hīlum ("a tiny thing, a trifle" — said to have originally meant "the eye of a bean," though its own ultimate origin is uncertain). So "nothing" in Latin literally started life as "not [even] a tiny bit" — the same shape of story as French's pas ("not," originally "a step") or Spanish's nada (from nāta, "a thing born").

Why it's said this way

Here's the careful part: nihil and est are both thoroughly classical, and nihil est itself appears in real Latin texts — but always meaning things like "there's nothing to it" ("nihil est, nūgae", "nothing, trifles," Plautus's Bacchidēs) or "that's nothing" ("istuc quidem [edepol] nihil est", Plautus's The Braggart Soldier), never specifically attested as a reply to thanks. No surviving Roman text shows someone answering grātiās agō with nihil est. Treat it the way you already treated the modern "how are you?" of spoken-Latin courses: real Latin words, put to a genuinely useful modern job, but not a citation from a Roman play.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "nihil est" — "it's nothing," Latin's answer to "thank you"
- nihil's own history — ne- + hīlum, "not a tiny bit"
- the honest caveat — real words, modern job, not an ancient citation

Before you move on

What does nihil est literally mean, and what job does it do here? ("[It] is nothing" — the reply to grātiās agō, "thank you.") What does nihil itself literally break down into? (ne- "not" + hīlum "a tiny thing" — "not a tiny bit.") Is nihil est specifically attested in a classical text as a reply to thanks? (No — a modern conversational-Latin convention built from real words, not an ancient citation.)

Chapter 24

See You Soon

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell someone in Latin that I will see them soon, using a phrase Cicero actually wrote.
>
> Say propediem tē vidēbō as a parting line, split propediem into prope and diem, and locate it in Cicero's letters.

24.1 propediem tē vidēbō — a real change of pace: solidly attested, twice

The last few lessons were honest about real gaps — no fixed "how are you," no fixed "nice to meet you," no fixed "you're welcome." This one is different: a genuine, repeated Ciceronian phrase.

You'll want to know: propediem tē vidēbō — "I shall see you soon"

Propediem tē vidēbō — "I shall see you soon" — is genuinely attested, not once but twice, in Cicero's own letters:

- Ad Familiārēs 2.12 (to Caelius): "…ut spērō, propediem tē vidēbō" — "…as I hope, I shall see you soon."
- Ad Familiārēs 15.6 (to Cato): "Ego, ut spērō, tē propediem vidēbō" — the same phrase, word order reshuffled, "I, as I hope, shall see you soon."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Propediem is built from prope ("near") + diem (accusative of diēs, "day") — literally "near the day," meaning "very soon, shortly." That's the same diēs from your days-of-week lessons (diēs Lūnae, diēs Veneris) — a familiar root showing up in a brand-new job.

Grammar Lens: vidēbō — the verb ending doing the work, again

vidē- (the stem of "to see") + -bō ("I will") → vidēbō
Vidēbō is the future tense of the verb "to see", which a later chapter teaches on its own — and just like agō back in "thank you," the -bō ending already carries "I will," so no separate pronoun for "I" is needed. Tē ("you") is simply the direct object: "[I] will-see you."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "propediem tē vidēbō" — "I shall see you soon"
- propediem's own pieces — prope (near) + diem (the day)
- the honest contrast — unlike the last few lessons, this phrase IS solidly attested, twice, in Cicero

Before you move on

Where is propediem tē vidēbō genuinely attested, and how many times? (Twice, in Cicero's letters — Ad Familiārēs 2.12 and 15.6.) What does propediem literally break down into? (Prope "near" + diem "the day" — the same diēs from the days-of-week lessons.) Does vidēbō need a separate word for "I"? (No — the -bō future ending already carries it, the same way agō's -ō did.)

Chapter 25

See You Tomorrow

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say in Latin that I will see someone tomorrow, and say which piece of it Romance mostly abandoned.
>
> Say crās tē vidēbō on the same pattern, and say honestly that this combination is not itself a surviving quotation.

25.1 crās tē vidēbō — the same pattern, honestly not the same citation

Last lesson's phrase was a direct quote from Cicero. This one uses the exact same grammatical machinery — but be honest: it isn't itself pulled from a surviving letter.

You'll want to know: crās tē vidēbō — built from known-good pieces

Crās tē vidēbō — "I'll see you tomorrow" — swaps crās ("tomorrow") in for propediem ("soon") from the last lesson, keeping the same vidēbō ("I will see") you already learned. Both pieces are genuinely classical: crās is a real, common Latin adverb, and vidēbō is the same attested future-tense verb as before. But be careful: unlike propediem tē vidēbō, this specific combination isn't itself quoted in any surviving Roman letter — it's a well-formed construction built by analogy, not a direct citation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Crās traces back to Proto-Italic krās — but past that point, its ultimate origin is genuinely uncertain, with scholars proposing several different, competing Proto-Indo-European sources. Some things in etymology just don't resolve cleanly, even for a word this ordinary.

Why it's said this way

Here's the real teaching point: crās didn't survive as the everyday word for "tomorrow" in most of its major daughter languages. French's demain, Italian's domani, and Catalan's demà all rebuilt "tomorrow" from a Latin phrase meaning "in the morning" instead: dē ("from") + māne ("morning") → dē māne → French demain That is the same morning-based logic reappearing three separate times. Sardinian and Sicilian are the main holdouts that kept crās itself as an everyday word. Spanish, too, moved away from it, building its own mañana on that same word for "morning" rather than keeping crās. A genuinely ordinary Latin word, abandoned by most of the family — echoing, if less completely, the same shape of story as flāvus from the colors lesson (which survives nowhere as an everyday word, only in names like Flāvius).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "crās tē vidēbō" — "I'll see you tomorrow"
- the honest caveat — same pattern as propediem tē vidēbō, but not itself a direct quotation
- the Romance twist — nearly everyone replaced crās with a morning-based word instead

Before you move on

Is crās tē vidēbō itself quoted in a surviving Cicero letter, the way propediem tē vidēbō was? (No — same grammatical pattern, built from two genuinely classical pieces, but not itself a direct citation.) Which Romance language kept crās as its everyday word for "tomorrow"? (Sardinian and Sicilian — most of the rest rebuilt it from a phrase meaning “in the morning,” instead.)

Chapter 26

How

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how in Latin with quōmodo, and trace it into cómo, come, and comment.
>
> Say quōmodo, split it into quō and modō, and show how comment double-marks the manner that come and cómo mark once.

26.1 quōmodo — the real word behind "how," in three Romance languages at once

An earlier lesson warned that a modern spoken-Latin "how are you" greeting is not classically attested. This is its first word — and the word itself is completely genuine.

You'll want to know: quōmodo — genuinely classical, "by what manner"

Quōmodo ("how, in what way") is a real, common Classical Latin word — a fusion of quō (ablative of quis/quid, "what") + modō (ablative of modus, "manner, measure"), literally "by what manner." It's attested in both Cicero (Dē Inventiōne) and Seneca (the Moral Letters) — genuinely classical, unlike the specific greeting quōmodo tē habēs? ("how do you hold yourself?"), which is a modern construction. The word is real; it was only that one exact phrase that wasn't.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Quōmodo is the direct source of Italian's come and Spanish's cómo — both simply continue quōmodo, worn down by ordinary sound change.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Here's the honest surprise: French's comment is not a simple continuation of quōmodo the way Italian and Spanish's words are. French's comme ("how, as, like") continues quōmodo just like Italian's come does — but then comment picks up French's own -ment adverb ending on top of that, from mente (ablative of mēns, "mind") — the same -ment that turns any adjective into an adverb (rapide → rapidement, "quickly"). One well-attested account of this history holds that comment therefore marks "manner" twice — once via quōmodo's own modō, once via -ment's mente — where Italian and Spanish mark it only once, though the exact historical steps have more than one scholarly account.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "quōmodo" — "how," genuinely classical
- quō (what) + modō (manner) — "by what manner"
- the honest surprise — French's comment double-marks "manner"; Italian/Spanish's come/cómo mark it once

Before you move on

Is quōmodo itself genuinely classical, even though the specific phrase quōmodo tē habēs? wasn't? (Yes — the word is real, attested in Cicero and Seneca; only that one specific greeting was modern.) What are quōmodo's two Latin pieces, and what do they mean? (Quō "what" + modō "manner" — "by what manner.") Is French's comment a simple continuation of quōmodo, the way Italian's come is? (No — it adds a second "manner" marker, mente, doubling up where Italian/Spanish only carry the sense once.)

Chapter 27

Well

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can answer well in Latin with bene, and show how one regular sound change turns it into bien.
>
> Answer bene when asked how you fare, then derive bien from it in one regular sound change.

27.1 bene — a morphologically simple inheritance

Last lesson's "how" took a roundabout path into Romance, picking up an extra piece along the way. This one is refreshingly simple: one Latin word, one regular sound change, nothing grafted on.

You'll want to know: bene — "well," related to bonus

Bene ("well") is a genuine Classical Latin adverb, closely related to bonus ("good") — both descend from the same Old Latin ancestor, duenos/duonus (found in the famous Duenos inscription, one of the oldest surviving Latin texts). Past that point, the ultimate Proto-Indo-European root is debated, with more than one proposal on the table.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Here's the refreshing part: French's bien and Spanish's bien both continue bene through one single, regular sound change — short stressed e diphthongizing to "ie," the exact same shift behind mel → miel and terra → tierra/terre — and nothing else. No extra suffix gets grafted on, unlike quōmodo's roundabout, multi-step journey into come/cómo/comment. When two Romance languages agree this closely, picking up only one shared, ordinary sound change between them, you're looking almost straight at the Latin parent itself.

Why it's said this way

Bene is attested being used alone, repeated, in Plautus's Stichus, line 709 — though be honest about the context: it's a drinking toast, not literally an answer to "how are you." The characters raise their cups and say: "bene vōs, bene nōs, bene tē, bene mē, bene nostram etiam Stephanium" — "well to you, well to us, well to you, well to me, well to our Stephanium too." A real, attested use of bene standing alone — just repurposed here for the same conversational slot "well" fills, the way volup est convēnisse was for "nice to meet you."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bene" — "well," related to bonus
- the morphologically simple inheritance — French/Spanish bien is bene plus one regular sound change, nothing grafted on
- the honest context — bene vōs, bene nōs... is a drinking toast in Plautus, not literally "how are you"

Before you move on

What Latin word is French and Spanish's bien, continued through one regular sound change? (Bene, "well.") Is quōmodo's path into Romance as morphologically simple as bene's? (No — quōmodo picked up an extra grafted-on suffix along the way; bene → bien picked up only one ordinary sound change and nothing more.) Where is bene genuinely attested standing alone, and in what context? (Plautus's Stichus, around line 708-709 — a drinking toast, not an answer to "how are you.")

Chapter 28

Day

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can use diēs on its own for day, after meeting it inside the weekday and noon phrases.
>
> Say diēs alone, point to it inside diēs Lūnae and medius diēs, and separate journal and journey from diary.

28.1 diēs — the word you already know, now standing alone

You've used this word twice already without a lesson of its own — inside diēs Lūnae and medius diēs. Time to meet it directly.

You'll want to know: diēs — "day"

Diēs — "day" — is a genuinely common, everyday Classical Latin word, not a rare or bookish one. You've already met it embedded in:

- diēs Lūnae ("Monday," literally "day of the Moon" — Chapter 5)
- medius diēs ("noon," literally "mid-day" — Chapter 12)

Now it's the headword itself.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Diēs has its own derivative, diurnum ("daytime, daily"), which gives English diurnal directly — and, through French's jour, journée, and jornel (all descendants of diurnum in their own right), journal and journey as well (a "journey" was originally "a day's travel"). Diary takes a separate path: it comes from a sibling derivative of diēs, diārium ("daily allowance"), not from diurnum itself — two related but distinct branches off the same root. Further out, a genuine Proto-Indo-European root, *dyēws- ("to shine, sky"), connects diēs to Latin's own deus ("god") and to Iuppiter (Jupiter, literally "sky-father") — the same root that shines through the sky-god imagery of gods across the Indo-European world.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "diēs" — "day"
- where you've already met it — diēs Lūnae, medius diēs
- the English cousins — diurnal, diary, journal, journey

Before you move on

Where have you already met diēs twice before this lesson? (Diēs Lūnae, "Monday"; medius diēs, "noon.") What English word comes from diēs's derivative diurnum directly? (Diurnal.) What two words come through French descendants of diurnum — jour, journée, jornel? (Journal, journey.) Does diary also come from diurnum? (No — a separate sibling derivative, diārium, "daily allowance.")

Chapter 29

Night

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say night in Latin as nox, noctis, and see English night sitting inside it.
>
> Say nox and noctis, match it against English night, and build equinox out of aequus plus nox.

29.1 nox — English's own word, wearing a Roman toga

Last lesson gave diēs its own moment. Here's its partner from media nox — and this time, the English cousin isn't hiding behind centuries of sound change. It's staring you in the face.

You'll want to know: nox — "night"

Nox (genitive noctis) — "night" — is the word you've already met inside media nox ("midnight," Chapter 12).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Trace nox back far enough and you land on Proto-Indo-European *nók^{w}ts — and this is about as solid a reconstruction as historical linguistics gets. The cognates read almost like the same word spelled differently across a dozen languages: English's own night, German Nacht, Greek nyx, Sanskrit nakta, Old Norse nátt, Gothic nahts. Nox and "night" aren't just related — they're about as close to being the same word as two languages 6,000 years apart can get.

Grammar Lens: The same suffix as diurnum, and a name for equal nights

Nox's own derivative, nocturnus ("of the night"), wasn't built from scratch — it was coined directly on the analogy of diēs's own diurnum, reusing its exact -urnus suffix on purpose: the same suffix-machine, deliberately applied to a second time-word. Nocturnus gives English nocturnal and nocturne directly. And aequus ("equal") + nox's stem noct- gives equinox — literally "equal night," the day when day and night balance.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "nox" — "night," genitive noctis
- the tight cousin — nox/night, nearly the same word
- nocturnus's shared suffix with diurnum — the same -urnus pattern, two different times of day

Before you move on

Where have you already met nox before this lesson? (Media nox, "midnight.") What English word is nox almost identical to, both descending from PIE nókʷts*? (Night.) What suffix does nocturnus share with diēs's diurnum? (-urnus.) What does aequus + nox give in English? (Equinox, "equal night.")

Chapter 30

Good Night

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can wish someone a good night in Latin, and say why the wish takes the accusative case.
>
> Wish someone bonam noctem, and say why it is not bona nox — Latin wishes take the accusative.

30.1 bonam noctem — real grammar, not a real citation

You already have bonus (good) and nox (night, last lesson). Put them together for "good night" — but the case they end up in is the real lesson here.

Grammar Lens: bonam noctem — why accusative, not nominative

Bonam noctem = "good night" — but notice: not bona nox (nominative). Latin wishes and exclamations conventionally use the accusative case — the same "Accusative of Exclamation" behind the genuinely attested Fēlīcem nātālem! ("happy birthday!," short for tibi fēlīcem diem nātālem exoptō, "I wish you a happy birthday"). Grammatically, bonam noctem is a compressed exclamation — something like "[I wish you] a good night," with the verb left unstated, the same kind of ellipsis you'd find in a letter opening like "Cicero Atticō salūtem [dīcit]" ("Cicero sends greetings to Atticus"). The bare nominative bona nox would work too (with an implied "sit,"

"may it be"), but the accusative is the more natural, idiomatic choice for a wish like this.

Grammar Lens: Be honest: real grammar, not a real citation

Here's the careful part, matching the same honesty already applied to quōmodo tē habēs?, nihil est, and crās tē vidēbō: the accusative-of-wishing principle itself is genuine, solid Classical Latin grammar. But this specific fixed phrase, bonam noctem, is not actually attested as a Roman farewell formula in any surviving classical text — it appears to be a later, post-classical convention, built correctly from real grammar but not itself a citation. Treat the grammar as reliable and the exact phrase as a well-formed construction, not a quotation from a Roman text.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bonam noctem builds on bonus "good", which Old Latin wrote duenos (EtymDB 2.1). It is usually traced to Proto-Italic dwenos*, "good", and perhaps to a root for "to show favour" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bonam noctem" — "good night," accusative
- the case rule — Latin wishes take the accusative, not the nominative bona nox
- the honest caveat — solid grammar, but not itself an attested ancient farewell

Before you move on

Why is it bonam noctem and not bona nox? (Latin wishes/ exclamations conventionally take the accusative case, not the nominative.) Is the accusative-of-wishing rule itself solid Classical Latin grammar? (Yes.) Is bonam noctem as one specific fixed phrase directly attested as a Roman farewell in any surviving classical text? (No — the grammar is real, but this exact phrase appears to be a later, post-classical convention.)

Chapter 31

Morning

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say morning in Latin with māne, and keep it apart from manus, the hand.
>
> Say māne, recover it inside dē māne and mañana, and keep long-ā mānus apart from short-a manus, the hand.

31.1 māne — the word already hiding inside "tomorrow," in four languages

You've already met this word once, without a lesson of its own — buried inside the very phrase that replaced crās across half the Romance family. Time to meet it directly.

Grammar Lens: māne — "morning," an indeclinable word

Māne — "morning, early" — is an indeclinable neuter noun (and adverb): unlike diēs or nox, it never changes its ending, no matter its grammatical role. You've already met it once, inside dē māne ("in the morning," Chapter 25) — the exact phrase that French's demain, Italian's domani, and Catalan's demà all independently rebuilt as their new word for "tomorrow," abandoning crās. Spanish's mañana took a related but distinct path: built directly on māne itself, without the dē- (Vulgar Latin maneāna*) — the same root, one step closer to the source.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Māne traces to mānus, an archaic Latin adjective meaning "good." Watch the vowel length carefully: this is a completely different word from the everyday manus ("hand," short a) — same spelling once macrons are dropped, unrelated meaning, a genuine false friend. From that "good" root comes mātūrus ("ripe, timely, early"), the direct source of English mature — and mātūtīnus ("of the morning," tied to Matūta, the Roman goddess of dawn), which gives English, via Old French matines/matin, both matins ("morning prayers") and matinee ("afternoon performance") — the same root splitting into two very different senses of "a scheduled morning-adjacent thing."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "māne" — "morning," already met inside dē māne
- the false-friend warning — mānus "good" (long ā) vs. manus "hand" (short a)
- the English cousins — mature, matins, matinee, all from the same root as māne

Before you move on

Where did you already meet māne before this lesson? (Inside dē māne, "in the morning," Chapter 25 — source of French demain, Italian domani, and Catalan demà.) Did Spanish mañana come from dē māne too? (Not quite — it was built directly on māne alone, without the dē-.) Is māne's root mānus the same word as manus, "hand"? (No — a false friend; mānus "good" has a long ā, manus "hand" a short a.) What two very different English words both trace to māne's "good" root, via mātūtīnus? (Matins and matinee.)

Chapter 32

Good Morning

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say good morning in Latin, and describe the salūtātiō Romans actually performed at dawn.
>
> Say bonum māne, note that its neuter case is invisible, and describe the dawn salūtātiō Romans really used.

32.1 bonum māne — a phrase Romans didn't say, and a ritual they actually did

You have bonus (good) and māne (morning, last lesson). Put them together for "good morning" — but this time, watch for what's missing, not just what's uncertain.

Why it's said this way

Bonum māne = "good morning." Like bonam noctem two lessons ago, this specific phrase is not classically attested as a fixed Roman greeting. But here the honesty runs one level deeper: bonam noctem showed you real, solid grammar — the accusative noctem, distinct from nominative nox, demonstrating Latin's genuine "Accusative of Exclamation." Māne, though, is neuter and indeclinable — and Latin neuter nouns never distinguish nominative from accusative, in any word, ever. Bonum works identically whether you imagine it as nominative or accusative. The grammar point that made bonam noctem interesting simply isn't visible here — not because it's missing, but because neuter words never show it, for anyone, anywhere in Latin.

Why it's said this way

Here's what Romans did have, richly documented: the salūtātiō (mātūtīna salūtātiō, "morning greeting") — clients arriving at their patron's house at dawn, formally dressed, to pay respects, ask favors, and sometimes receive the sportula (a small cash or food allowance) in return. It structured the start of the Roman day the way a verbal "good morning" structures yours — just as a ritual visit, not a spoken phrase.
salūtā- ("greet") + -tiō ("the act of") → salūtātiō
The verb "to greet" comes from salūs ("health, safety, wholeness") — and salūs is a genuine doublet of salvus ("safe, sound"), the very root behind salvē (Chapter 1's first word). Both salūs and salvus descend from the same Proto-Indo-European root, solh$_2$- ("whole"). So Rome's real morning greeting and its very first "hello" share one root, arrived at by two separate paths — a wish for someone's wholeness, whether spoken as salvē or enacted at dawn as the salūtātiō.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bonum māne" — "good morning," a modern phrase, not classical
- why its grammar is invisible — māne is neuter, and neuters never show nominative vs. accusative
- "salūtātiō" — the real Roman morning greeting, a dawn visit, not a phrase — from the same root as salvē

Before you move on

Does bonum māne show the same accusative-of-wishing grammar that bonam noctem did? (No — māne is neuter, and Latin neuters never distinguish nominative from accusative, so the case is invisible either way.) What was Rome's real, richly documented "morning greeting"? (The salūtātiō — clients visiting a patron's house at dawn.) What word, already taught in Chapter 1, shares its root with salūtātiō? (Salvē — both salūs and salvus descend from the same PIE root, *$*solh_2$-, "whole.")

Chapter 33

Evening

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say evening in Latin, and follow the vesper root into Hesperia, víspera, and vespers.
>
> Sort any European evening word into the vesper family or the sērus family, then produce vesper and the everyday vespere Cicero uses for in the evening.

33.1 vesper — the evening word its own daughters mostly abandoned

A genuinely ordinary Latin word for "evening" — and a root that quietly reaches all the way to the English word west.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Vesper (also vespera) — "evening" — is a genuine, ordinary Classical Latin word, not a rare or poetic one: vespere ("in the evening") shows up routinely in Cicero's own letters. It traces to Proto-Indo-European wekero- ("evening, night"), itself an enlarged form of a root *we-, which some reconstructions gloss as "down" (the direction the sun sets) — though this specific piece is more contested than the vesper/west link itself. That same conceptual root, through a completely separate Germanic branch, gives English its own word for "west" — evening and west, sharing one deep idea: the direction the sun goes down.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vesper" — "evening," genuinely everyday Classical Latin
- the deep root — wekero-, shared with English "west," the direction of sunset
- the careful hedge — a lower root meaning "down" is more contested

Before you move on

What English word shares vesper's deep PIE root, and what's the connecting idea? (West — both trace to the direction the sun sets.) Is the proposed still-deeper root meaning "down" equally secure? (No — that sub-root is more contested than the vesper/west link.)

33.2 Hesperia, víspera, vespers — the root after Latin

Latin vesper and English west share the sunset idea. Now follow the evening root through Greek, English, Spanish, French, and Italian.

You'll want to know: Greek hesperos

The Greek cognate hesperos gives English Hesperus, the evening star (Venus at dusk), and Hesperia, "land of the west." The name is relative: Greeks used it for Italy, west of Greece; Romans could use it for Spain, west of Italy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

English borrowed vespers, the evening prayer service, and vespertine, "of the evening," directly from Latin.
Spanish inherited vespera as víspera, but narrowed its meaning to "the eve" or "the day before" an event. French soir and Italian sera do not descend from vesper at all. They rebuilt "evening" from Latin sērus, "late," through the idea of the "late day."

One ordinary Latin word therefore leaves three different outcomes: a learned English loan, a narrowed Spanish descendant, and replacement by a different root in French and Italian.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Hesperia" — land of the west
- "víspera" — the eve or day before, narrowed from evening
- "soir, sera" — from sērus, "late," not from vesper

Before you move on

What is Hesperus? (The evening star.) What does Spanish víspera mean now? (The eve or day before an event.) Which Latin root supplies French soir and Italian sera? (Sērus, "late.") Name one direct English borrowing from vesper. (Vespers or vespertine.)

33.3 Practice — sort the evening words, then read the Latin

Be honest about what this chapter can give you. There is no Roman "good evening" yet — that arrives next chapter, and even then it is modern. What you can do today is triage: hear any European evening word and place it in the right family.

You'll want to know: the two families, and the test that separates them

Everything in this chapter falls into exactly two lines, and one question separates them: does the word still carry a v or an h from the sunset root, or does it come from "late"?

- Sunset family — from vesper, or its Greek cousin hesperos: vespers, vespertine, víspera, Hesperus, Hesperia.

- Late family — from sērus, "late": French soir, Italian sera.

Two traps worth naming. Víspera is in the sunset family but no longer means "evening" — it narrowed to "the eve, the day before." And soir and sera look like the closest heirs of all, being the everyday words in Latin's two nearest daughters, yet they are the ones that are not descended from vesper at all.

Your turn

- Sort: vespers, sera, Hesperus, soir, víspera → sunset or late
- Say it: the noun — vesper; and "in the evening" — vespere, the form Cicero uses in his letters
- Say it: the deep link that started it — vesper and English west, one idea: where the sun goes down

Before you move on

Sort these three without looking: vespertine, sera, Hesperia. (Sunset, late, sunset.) What does víspera mean in Spanish now? (The eve, the day before — narrowed, not lost.) And which everyday Latin form means "in the evening"? (Vespere.)

Chapter 34

Good Evening

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can wish someone a good evening in Latin, and point to the accusative that bonum māne could not show.
>
> Wish someone bonum vesperum, and use its masculine ending to show the accusative rule bonum māne could not.

34.1 bonum vesperum — the accusative rule returns, this time visibly

Two lessons ago, bonum māne couldn't show you Latin's real wish-grammar, because māne is neuter. This time it's back — because vesper isn't.

Grammar Lens: bonum vesperum — masculine, and the case shows again

Bonum vesperum = "good evening." Like bonam noctem and bonum māne, this specific phrase is not classically attested as a fixed Roman greeting — the same honest gap, a third time. But the grammar here is different from bonum māne's: vesper is masculine, and Latin masculine nouns genuinely do distinguish nominative (vesper) from accusative (vesperum) — unlike neuter māne, where the two forms were always identical. So bonum vesperum does demonstrate the real Accusative-of-Exclamation rule again, the same wish-construction behind bonam noctem and the genuinely attested Fēlīcem nātālem! — just dressed in masculine endings instead of feminine ones.

Grammar Lens: A feminine alternate: bonam vesperam

Latin also has a separate feminine noun for evening, vespera (distinct from masculine vesper, though built from the same root — both headwords appeared together last lesson, though without their genders spelled out). Paired with bonus, its accusative gives bonam vesperam — agreeing the same way bonam noctem does: the adjective, bonam, matches bonam exactly. But watch the nouns carefully — they do not share an ending. Vespera is 1st declension (accusative -am, vesperam), while nox is 3rd declension (accusative -em, noctem — not -am). Same adjective agreement, genuinely different noun declensions underneath.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bonum vesperum keeps vesper "evening", whose Greek cousin is hesperos "evening" (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bonum vesperum" — "good evening," masculine accusative
- why this one shows the case rule, unlike bonum māne — vesper is masculine, not neuter
- "bonam vesperam" — the feminine alternate, matching bonam noctem's own shape

Before you move on

Is bonum vesperum itself directly attested as a classical Roman greeting? (No — a modern, pedagogical phrase, like bonam noctem and bonum māne.) Why does bonum vesperum show the real Accusative-of-Exclamation rule, when bonum māne couldn't? (Vesper is masculine, and masculine nouns distinguish nominative from accusative; māne is neuter, where the two are always identical.) What's the feminine alternate, and how does its adjective agreement compare to bonam noctem's? (Bonam vesperam — the adjective bonam matches bonam exactly, but the NOUNS don't share an ending: vesperam is 1st declension -am, while noctem is 3rd declension -em, not -am.)

Chapter 35

Noon and Afternoon

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say midday in Latin, and use ante merīdiem and post merīdiem to place any hour of the day.
>
> Say merīdiēs, place an hour with ante merīdiem or post merīdiem, and say why Rome needed no separate afternoon noun.

35.1 merīdiēs — the word you already know, one sound-change later

You already have medius diēs. Rome had no separate word for "afternoon"; it split the whole day around this word.

Sounds you'll need

Merīdiēs — "midday, noon" — is the same phrase as medius diēs (Chapter 12), just contracted: an earlier medīdiēs dropped its repeated d-sound (dissimilation) to become merīdiēs, a fifth-declension noun in its own right (accusative merīdiem). It's the ultimate root of English meridian, via the Latin adjective merīdiānus ("of midday").

Why it's said this way

Here's the twist: Spanish has tarde, French has après-midi, German has Nachmittag — a single word naming "the afternoon" as its own block of time. Latin doesn't. Instead, Romans split the entire day around merīdiēs into two large halves: ante merīdiem ("before noon") and post merīdiem ("after noon") — the direct ancestors of English's own a.m. and p.m., used on every clock and phone today, often without anyone realizing they're speaking Latin.

This wasn't just a loose figure of speech — it carried real legal weight. Under the Twelve Tables, Rome's foundational law code, a civil case had to be argued before noon, with both parties present; if one party failed to appear, the magistrate could rule against them, in absentia, once it passed noon. Ante and post merīdiem divided not just clock time, but courtroom procedure.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

You've already met tardus ("slow, late") through Spanish's own tarde — the very word Spanish reshaped into its "afternoon." In Latin itself, tardus never made that leap: it stayed a plain adjective, "slow, late," and never became a Latin noun for "afternoon." Spanish's shift from "late" to "the afternoon" happened entirely on its own, after Latin.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "merīdiēs" — the same medius diēs, contracted
- "ante merīdiem," "post merīdiem" — before/after noon, the source of a.m./p.m.
- the honest twist — no separate Latin word for "afternoon," just a line drawn at noon

Before you move on

What earlier phrase is merīdiēs a contracted form of? (Medius diēs, Chapter 12.) What two English abbreviations, used on every clock, come directly from ante merīdiem and post merīdiem? (a.m. and p.m..) Did this noon-based division matter beyond just telling time? (Yes — under the Twelve Tables, Roman court cases had a real legal deadline at noon.) Does Latin have its own separate word for "afternoon," the way Spanish has tarde? (No — Romans split the whole day around merīdiēs instead.)

Chapter 36

Good Afternoon

Modes: voice (3) Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can greet someone in Latin in the afternoon with salvē or salvēte, and explain why nothing more is needed.
>
> One Roman day in four meetings — morning, afternoon, evening, and parting at night — with salvē and valē marked as the attested pair and the three bonus phrases marked as modern.

36.1 salvē (post merīdiem) — the one that isn't there

Three lessons in a row, you've met a modern phrase built on real (if sometimes invisible) Latin grammar for "good _____." This lesson is different: there's honestly nothing to build.

Why it's said this way

Bonam noctem, bonum māne, and bonum vesperum are all modern, pedagogical phrases — not classically attested — but each pairs bonus directly with a single noun in the accusative: noctem, māne, vesperum. "Good afternoon" can't take that same shape, because you already learned last lesson that Latin has no simplex noun for "afternoon" at all — there's no afternoonem for bonus to modify. Bonum post merīdiem doesn't work: post merīdiem ("after noon") is a whole prepositional phrase, not a noun, so bonus has nothing to agree with. A three-word workaround, bonum tempus pōmerīdiānum ("good afternoon time"), actually is grammatical — pōmerīdiānus ("of the afternoon") is a real word Cicero himself uses, and here bonus agrees with a genuine noun, tempus ("time"). But it's a periphrasis, not a direct two-word match for the other three phrases — and it isn't itself attested anywhere as something Romans actually said as a greeting.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōmerīdiānus "of the afternoon" was built inside Latin from post "after" and merīdiānus "of midday" (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- why "bonum post merīdiem" doesn't work — no noun for bonus to agree with; why "bonum tempus pōmerīdiānum" DOES work, but isn't attested as a real greeting
- the grammatical adjective — pōmerīdiānum, "of the afternoon"

Before you move on

Does Latin have a two-word phrase for "good afternoon" the way it has bonum vesperum for evening? (No — Latin has no simplex noun for "afternoon" for bonus to pair with.) Is there ANY grammatical Latin phrase at all? (Yes — bonum tempus pōmerīdiānum is real grammar, but a three-word periphrasis, not attested as an actual greeting.) What did Romans say in the afternoon instead? (Salvē — the same everyday greeting from Chapter 1.) Why doesn't bonum post merīdiem work grammatically? (Post merīdiem is a whole prepositional phrase, not a single noun bonus can agree with.)

36.2 salvē — the greeting that does not watch the clock

Latin cannot build a neat two-word "good afternoon." What did Romans actually need in that time slot? Nothing beyond a greeting you already know.

Why it's said this way

Salvē to one person and salvēte to several people mean "be well." Neither form contains a morning, afternoon, or evening boundary. Romans could use the greeting whenever they met someone.
English encourages a learner to search for four matched clock-based formulas. Latin everyday greetings do not divide the day that way. The missing afternoon formula is therefore not a hole in Roman conversation.
The time-of-day arc now has three different kinds of evidence:

- a real institution, the morning salūtātiō
- grammatical but modern phrases such as bonam noctem
- no dedicated formula at all for afternoon—just salvē

Learning those differences is more faithful than forcing four symmetrical translations into Latin.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "salvē" — be well, to one person
- "salvēte" — be well, to several people
- the time restriction — none

Before you move on

What can one Roman say on meeting another in the afternoon? (Salvē.) What is the plural? (Salvēte.) Do these words encode a time of day? (No.) Why is there no conversational gap? (The everyday greeting already works whenever people meet.)

36.3 Practice — one whole day, in the words you have

Nine chapters of time-of-day words end here. This is the one place they all have to work at once — four meetings, one day, and no inventing.

The exchange — morning to night, with the honest label on each line

Morning. A: Salvē! Quid agis? B: Valeō. Salvē!

Afternoon. A: Salvē! B: Salvē!

Evening. A: Bonum vesperum! B: Salvē!

Parting at night. A: Bonam noctem! B: Valē!

Now the label, which is half the payoff. Salvē, salvēte and valē are genuinely Roman and carry no clock inside them, so they work in every one of those four rows. The three bonus phrases — bonum māne, bonum vesperum, bonam noctem — are well-formed modern teaching phrases, not lines from any surviving Roman text. And the afternoon row has only salvē in it, because Latin never had a noun for "afternoon" for bonus to agree with.

So the safe rule you leave with: when in doubt, salvē on arrival and valē on departure, at any hour.

Your turn

- Run through: all four rows aloud, both voices
- Choose: mid-afternoon, and you want to be Roman → salvē
- Say it: why it is noctem and vesperum, not nox and vesper — Latin wishes take the accusative
- Choose: a room full of people → salvēte

Before you move on

Which two words in the whole day-cycle are genuinely attested? (Salvē and valē.) What did Rome actually have in the morning instead of a phrase? (The salūtātiō — a dawn visit, an action.) Why can bonum māne not show the accusative rule? (Māne is neuter; neuters never distinguish the two cases.)

Chapter 37

Eight Verbs at the Core

Modes: 🚗 voice (8) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I am, I have, I go, I come, I say, I see, I know and I give in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, and name the English words each verb left behind.
>
> The chapter's eighth verb closes the set: after learning dō, the reader produces all eight first-person forms and all eight third-person forms in sequence — sum, habeō, eō, veniō, dīcō, videō, sciō, dō and est, habet, it, venit, dīcit, videt, scit, dat.

37.1 sum — the verb English never stopped sharing

You can already say valeō, "I fare well." Now meet the verb that sits under every such statement: "to be."

You'll want to know: sum — "I am"

Sum means "I am." The form a dictionary lists it under is esse, "to be."

- sum — I am
- es — you are, to one person
- est — he is, she is, it is
- sumus — we are

- estis — you are, to several people
- sunt — they are

Latin packs the person into the ending, so sum on its own is already a whole sentence. No separate word for "I" is required.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Two English words are not merely cousins of these forms — they are the same inherited word. Am and is come from the Proto-Indo-European root $h_1$es- ("to be"), and so do sum and est. Latin builds its past from a second root entirely: fuī ("I was") and futūrus ("about to be") come from b^huH- ("to grow, become") — which also gives English be and been, and Greek phúsis ("nature"), the source of physics. English patches its own verb from three roots the same way: am/is, be, and was/were.
From esse Latin built essentia, giving English essence and essential. Its participle -sēns supplies present (prae-, "before") and absent (ab-, "away"), while the phrase inter est ("it is between, it matters") hardened into interest.
Flag one false friend: Latin sum has nothing to do with an English "sum." That word comes from summa, "the highest, the total."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "sum" — I am
- "es, est" — you are, he or she is
- "sumus, estis, sunt" — we, you all, they
- the two English forms of the same root — am, is

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I am"? (Sum.) "They are"? (Sunt.) What form does a dictionary list? (Esse.) Which two English words come from the very same root as sum and est? (Am and is.) Where does Latin's past fuī come from instead? (A second root, *b^huH-, which also gives English be.)

37.2 habeō — the twin that is not a twin

You can say sum, "I am." The next verb says what you hold. It resembles its English translation so closely that the resemblance is a trap.

You'll want to know: habeō — "I have"

Habeō means "I have," and more literally "I hold." The dictionary form is habēre.

- habeō — I have
- habēs — you have, to one person
- habet — he has, she has, it has
- habēmus — we have
- habētis — you have, to several people
- habent — they have

The h was already weak in everyday Roman speech, and every Romance descendant dropped it: the letter is written, barely breathed.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Here is the trap. English have is not descended from habēre. It comes from the Proto-Indo-European root keh₂p- ("to seize"), whose Latin outcome is the verb "to take, to seize" (a later lesson teaches it) — the verb behind capture, captive, and capable. Two languages, two unrelated verbs, one accidental match of sound and sense. Etymologists cite this pair as the standard warning against trusting a resemblance. The genuine English family of habēre is large. From habitus ("condition, bearing") come habit and habitual; from habitāre ("to keep having, to dwell") come inhabit and habitat. Prefixed, the verb yields exhibit ("hold out"), prohibit ("hold away"), and inhibit. The adjective habilis ("easily held, handy") passes through French into able and ability. And dē + habēre — "to have from someone" — contracts to dēbēre, which supplies debt, debit, due, and duty.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "habeō" — I have
- "habēs, habet" — you have, he or she has
- "habēmus, habētis, habent" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — habit, inhabit, exhibit, able, debt

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I have"? (Habeō.) "They have"? (Habent.) Is English have descended from habēre? (No — it comes from the root behind Latin's verb "to seize", the one in capture.) Which English word hides dē + habēre? (Debt, and with it debit and due.) Which everyday word comes from habilis, "handy"? (Able.)

37.3 eō — a whole verb in one vowel

Habeō gave you a comfortable two-syllable stem. The next verb has almost no stem at all — and you have been reading one of its forms in English theatres your whole life.

You'll want to know: eō — "I go"

Eō means "I go." The dictionary form is īre, "to go." Strip the endings and what remains is a single vowel, i-.

- eō — I go
- īs — you go, to one person
- it — he goes, she goes, it goes
- īmus — we go

- ītis — you go, to several people
- eunt — they go

Two cautions worth hearing once. Latin it means "he or she goes" and has no connection to English "it." And the long ī of īs is a held vowel, which is what keeps it distinct from other short words.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European h₁ey-, "to go." Latin prefixed it relentlessly, and English took the results wholesale.
Exit is not derived from a Latin verb — it is one: exit, "he or she goes out," borrowed straight from Roman stage directions. Alongside it come transit and transient (trāns, "across"), initial and initiate (in-īre, "to go in," hence initium, "a beginning"), perish (per-īre, "to go away utterly"), circuit (circum, "around"), and obituary (ob-īre, "to go to meet" one's death).
Two are less obvious. Ambition is ambīre, "to go around" — what a Roman candidate did, walking the city to canvass for votes. Sudden is subitus, from sub-īre, "to come up from underneath," unnoticed until it arrives. The related noun iter, itineris ("a journey"), gives itinerary.
Beyond Latin, the Greek participle ión ("going") was borrowed by Michael Faraday in 1834 to name a particle that travels through a solution: ion.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "eō" — I go
- "īs, it" — you go, he or she goes
- "īmus, ītis, eunt" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — exit, transit, initial, perish, sudden

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I go"? (Eō.) "They go"? (Eunt.) What does Latin it mean? (He or she goes — not English "it".) Which

English stage direction is an untouched Latin verb form? (Exit.) What did a Roman candidate literally do to earn the word ambition? (Go around, canvassing the city.)

37.4 veniō — the one that really is English "come"

Eō takes you away. Its opposite number brings you in — and this time the English translation genuinely is the same ancient word.

You'll want to know: veniō — "I come"

Veniō means "I come." The dictionary form is venīre. Remember that Latin v is pronounced like English w, so this opens weh-.

- veniō — I come
- venīs — you come, to one person
- venit — he comes, she comes, it comes
- venīmus — we come
- venītis — you come, to several people
- veniunt — they come

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European g^wem-, "to step, to come." That initial g^w hardens to k in the Germanic branch, which is exactly how English come arises — so veniō and come are the same word, split apart several thousand years ago. In the Greek branch the root became baínō, "I step," which supplies base, basis, and acrobat ("one who walks on tiptoe").
The Latin branch is where English got rich. Prefixed, venīre produces advent and adventure (ad, "toward"), convene, convenient and convent (con-, "together" — what is convenient literally "comes together" well), event (ē-, "out"), invent (in-, "to come upon" — an inventor originally found rather than made), prevent (prae-, "to come before"), intervene, and revenue (re-, "what comes back"). Through French come avenue, venue, and souvenir (subvenīre, "to come to mind").

Flag a false friend: Venus, venerate, and venom look like members of this family and are not. They belong to a separate root, wenh₁-, "to desire" — the same one that gives English win and wish.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "veniō" — I come, with a w-sound
- "venīs, venit" — you come, he or she comes
- "venīmus, venītis, veniunt" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — advent, convenient, invent, revenue

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I come"? (Veniō, opening with a w-sound.) "They come"? (Veniunt.) Which everyday English verb is the same inherited word? (Come.) What does invent literally mean? (To come upon, to find.) Do Venus and venom belong to this family? (No — a separate root meaning "to desire".)

37.5 dīcō — saying began as pointing

You know valē, the farewell from Chapter 1. Learn the verb for "say," and one of English's grandest school words falls open.

You'll want to know: dīcō — "I say"

Dīcō means "I say" or "I tell." The dictionary form is dīcere. The c is always hard, as in English "keep," so this is DEE-koh.

- dīcō — I say
- dīcis — you say, to one person

- dīcit — he says, she says
- dīcimus — we say
- dīcitis — you say, to several people
- dīcunt — they say

Latin also had a near-twin with a short i, dicāre, "to proclaim formally, to consecrate." That sibling — not dīcere itself — is where dedicate and abdicate come from.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The Proto-Indo-European root deyk̑- meant "to point out, to show." Saying is a late specialisation of showing, and the family keeps both senses visible.
Pointing survives in index ("the pointer," which is also the name of the forefinger) and indicate. Saying dominates the rest: dictate, dictator, dictionary, diction, edict, predict, contradict, and benediction ("speaking well"). A verdict is vērē dictum, "truly said." A judge is a iūdex, from iūs ("law") plus this root — the one who points out the law.
One word ties the chapter back to your first: a valedictorian is the person who says valē, the farewell you learned in Chapter 1.
The Germanic branch kept the older sense. English teach descends from Old English tæcan, "to show," and token from tācen, "a sign" — both from the same root as dīcō. Greek deíknumi ("I show") gives paradigm, literally "a thing shown side by side."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dīcō" — I say, with a hard c
- "dīcis, dīcit" — you say, he or she says
- "dīcimus, dīcitis, dīcunt" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — dictionary, verdict, predict, teach

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I say"? (Dīcō, hard c.) "They say"? (Dīcunt.)
What did the root originally mean? (To point out, to show.)
What does a valedictorian literally do? (Says valē, the farewell.)
Which everyday English verb keeps the old "show" sense? (Teach.)

37.6 videō — where seeing and knowing were the same act

You can already promise crās tē vidēbō, "tomorrow I shall see you." The verb inside that promise deserves its own lesson: it has the widest family of any word in this chapter.

You'll want to know: videō — "I see"

Videō means "I see." The dictionary form is vidēre. The v is again a w-sound, so this is WEE-day-oh.

- videō — I see
- vidēs — you see, to one person
- videt — he sees, she sees
- vidēmus — we see
- vidētis — you see, to several people
- vident — they see

The future you already know, vidēbō ("I shall see"), is built on this same stem.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The Proto-Indo-European root *weyd- meant both "to see" and, by the obvious step, "to know" — because what you have seen, you know. The Latin harvest is enormous. Plain derivatives give vision, visible, video, visit, and vista. Prefixed ones are richer: evident (ē-, "seen out, unmissable"), provide and provision (prō-, "to see ahead"), and prudent, which is simply prōvidēns worn down. Survey is super plus vidēre, "to look over"; review and revise look again; advice is what you are shown. Envy is the sourest of them: invidēre meant "to look against," to cast an eye upon what belongs to someone else.

The other branches keep the knowing half. English wit, wise, and wisdom are Germanic outcomes of the same root. Greek turned it into idéa ("the look of a thing") — English idea — and into hístōr ("one who knows because he has seen"), giving history and story. Sanskrit made it Veda, "knowledge."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "videō" — I see, with a w-sound
- "vidēs, videt" — you see, he or she sees
- "vidēmus, vidētis, vident" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — vision, evident, provide, survey, envy

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I see"? (Videō, with a w-sound.) "They see"? (Vident.) What second meaning did the root carry besides "see"? (To know.) What does envy literally describe? (Looking against someone.) Which English word for wisdom comes from this root? (Wit, and with it wise and wisdom.)

37.7 sciō — the knowing that cuts things apart

Videō already carried a shade of "know." Latin nevertheless keeps two dedicated verbs for knowing, and this lesson takes the first.

You'll want to know: sciō — "I know"

Sciō means "I know" — know a fact, know that something is so. The dictionary form is scīre. The sc is a plain sk, so this is SKEE-oh.

- sciō — I know

- scīs — you know, to one person
- scit — he knows, she knows
- scīmus — we know
- scītis — you know, to several people
- sciunt — they know

Its negative is a single word, with the "not" fused onto the front. That is a genuinely useful thing to be able to say, and a later chapter builds it.

Latin's other knowing verb is nōscō, "to get to know, to recognise." A Roman used sciō for knowing a fact and nōscō for becoming acquainted.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Scīre is generally traced to the Proto-Indo-European root skey-, "to cut, to split" — knowing as the act of telling one thing from another. The link is the standard account rather than a certainty, and careful dictionaries mark it as probable. The same root gives Greek skhízein, "to split," behind schism and schizo-, and English shed in its old sense of dividing.

From scīre directly: science and scientific (scientia, "knowledge"), conscience and conscious (con-, "knowing with"), omniscient ("all-knowing"), and prescient. A plebiscite is a plēbis scītum, "a thing the people have decided."

The prize of the family is nice. It comes from nescius, "not knowing," which passed into Old French as nice, "simple, foolish," then drifted through "fussy" and "delicate" to today's mild compliment.

Now the false friend, and it is a big one. English know is not related to sciō. It descends from ǵneh₃-, the root behind Latin nōscō — the source of notice, notion, cognition, recognise, and ignore, and of Greek gnōsis in diagnosis.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "sciō" — I know, opening sk-
- "scīs, scit" — you know, he or she knows

- "scīmus, sciunt" — we know, they know
- the English relatives — science, conscience, nice

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I know"? (Sciō.) "They know"? (Sciunt.) What older sense probably sits under the root? (To cut or separate — telling one thing from another.) Which mild English compliment began as nescius, "not knowing"? (Nice.) Is English know from this verb? (No — from the root behind nōscō, which gives notice and cognition.)

37.8 dō — the eighth verb, and the whole set together

Seven verbs so far: to be, to have, to go, to come, to say, to see, to know. One remains, and then the set closes.

You'll want to know: dō — "I give"

Dō means "I give." The dictionary form is dare, and the a in it is short — DAH-reh, not DAH-ray. That short vowel is unusual and marks dare out as irregular.

- dō — I give
- dās — you give, to one person
- dat — he gives, she gives
- damus — we give
- datis — you give, to several people
- dant — they give

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European deh$_3$-, "to give." From the noun dōnum ("a gift") English takes donate, donor, condone, and pardon (per-dōnāre, "to give thoroughly, to forgive").

From the participle datum, "a thing given," come data and dative, the giving case — and also date. A Roman letter closed with data Rōmae, "given at Rome," followed by the day; the word for "given" became the word for the day itself.
trāns ("across") + dare ("to give") → trādere
The -ns drops out, and the compound means "to give across": "to hand over." That single compound splits into tradition (handed down), traitor and treason (handed over to the enemy), betray, and extradite. Dōs, dōtis ("dowry") gives dowry and endow. Greek dídōmi supplies dose and anecdote ("things not given out").
Two flags. English give is not from this root, despite the matching sense — it is Germanic and separate. And Latin compounds ending in -dere — addere ("to add"), condere ("to found") — belong to a different root, $d^h eh_1$- ("to put"), the one behind Greek títhēmi and English theme and thesis. So add is not a relative of dare.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dō, dās, dat" — I give, you give, he or she gives
- the eight "I" forms — sum, habeō, eō, veniō, dīcō, videō, sciō, dō
- the eight "he or she" forms — est, habet, it, venit, dīcit, videt, scit, dat
- the English relatives of dare — donate, data, date, tradition

Before you move on

Give the eight "I" forms of this chapter. (Sum, habeō, eō, veniō, dīcō, videō, sciō, dō.) Now the eight "he or she" forms. (Est, habet, it, venit, dīcit, videt, scit, dat.) Which English words come from datum, "a thing given"? (Data, dative, and date.) What do trāns and dare make together? (To hand over — hence tradition and traitor.) Is English give a relative? (No.)

Chapter 38

Thinking, Reading, Writing

Modes: voice (4) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I think, I read, I understand and I write in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, and name the English words each verb built.
>
> The chapter closes on scrībō: after learning it the reader produces all four first-person forms and all four third-person forms in sequence — cōgitō, legō, intellegō, scrībō and cōgitat, legit, intellegit, scrībit.

38.1 cōgitō — thinking as driving things together

> Sciō is knowing a fact you already hold. This verb is the work you do before you hold it.

You'll want to know: cōgitō — "I think"

Cōgitō means "I think," in the sense of turning something over. The dictionary form is cōgitāre. Both o-vowels are long and the g is hard: KOH-ghee-TAH-reh.

- cōgitō — I think
- cōgitās — you think, to one person
- cōgitat — he thinks, she thinks
- cōgitāmus — we think
- cōgitātis — you think, to several people

- cōgitant — they think

Latin's other everyday verb here is putō, "I reckon, I suppose" — lighter, closer to English "I guess."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Cōgitāre is co- ("together") welded onto agitāre, "to keep driving about" — itself the restless form of agere, "to drive, to do." Thinking, to a Roman, is not stillness: it is driving your material together and keeping it in motion.
English took the verb whole in cogitate and cogitation, and took the most quoted sentence in philosophy with it: cōgitō ergō sum, "I think, therefore I am" — whose second word is the sum you already know.
The engine underneath, agere, is one of Latin's great suppliers: act, action, agent, agenda ("things to be driven forward"), agile, agitate, exact, and navigate (nāvis, "ship," plus agere). The root is Proto-Indo-European ag-, "to drive," which in Greek became ágō and gave pedagogue ("child-leader") and demagogue.
Putāre is worth its own paragraph. It first meant "to prune a tree," then "to settle an account," then "to consider" — and English inherited all three stages: amputate, compute (and its worn-down form count), dispute, deputy, impute, and reputation.
One flag. English think is Germanic, from the root that also gives thank — a thought and a grateful thought. It is not related to cōgitō. Nor is cognition, which belongs to nōscō, the other knowing verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "cōgitō" — I think, hard g
- "cōgitās, cōgitat" — you think, he or she thinks
- "cōgitāmus, cōgitātis, cōgitant" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — cogitate, agent, agenda, compute

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I think"? (Cōgitō.) "They think"? (Cōgitant.) What two pieces is the verb built from? (Co-, "together," and agitāre, "to keep driving about".) Which philosopher's sentence carries it, and which chapter-37 verb closes that sentence? (Cōgitō ergō sum — and sum.) Which English word began as putāre, "to prune"? (Amputate — and compute, and count.)

38.2 legō — reading is picking things up

Cōgitō drives ideas together. The next verb gathers something more concrete — and it is the single richest word in this book.

You'll want to know: legō — "I read"

Legō means "I read." Its older and wider sense is "I gather, I pick out." The dictionary form is legere. Every g is hard and every vowel here is short: LEH-goh, LEH-geh-reh.

- legō — I read
- legis — you read, to one person
- legit — he reads, she reads
- legimus — we read
- legitis — you read, to several people
- legunt — they read

Reading is the younger meaning, and you can feel how it arrived: you pick the letters up, one after another. A Roman normally did this aloud.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The Proto-Indo-European root is *leg-, "to gather, to collect." Straight from legere English has legible, legend ("things to be read"), lectern, lecture, and — through Old French leçon, from lectiōnem, "a reading" — lesson. A Roman legion was a legiō, a levy of men picked out for service.

Prefixed, the verb becomes a machine. Con- gives collect (gather together); sē- gives select (gather apart); ē- gives elect (pick out). Neglect is nec legere, "not to pick up." Elegant is ēlegāns — originally an insult, "too choosy."
Greek inherited the same root as légō, "I gather, I speak," and its noun lógos, "word, reason." From those come logic, catalogue, dialogue, analogy, anthology (a flower-gathering), and the -logy ending on every science you can name.
One caution. Latin lēx, lēgis ("law") — behind legal, legislate, loyal, and privilege — is often derived from legere, "what is read out." That link is debated; treat it as a maybe.
And a false friend: English read is Germanic, from a word meaning "to advise," still visible in riddle. It has nothing to do with legō.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "legō" — I read, hard g
- "legis, legit" — you read, he or she reads
- "legimus, legitis, legunt" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — legible, collect, select, elegant

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I read"? (Legō.) "They read"? (Legunt.) What did the verb mean before it meant "read"? (To gather, to pick out.) What does neglect literally say? (Nec legere, "not to pick up".) Is English read a relative? (No — it is Germanic, from a word meaning "to advise".)

38.3 intellegō — reading between

Legō picks things out. Put one small word in front of it and you get the verb behind intelligence itself.

You'll want to know: intellegō — "I understand"

Intellegō means "I understand." The dictionary form is intellegere. It is legō with a prefix, so the endings are the ones you have just learned: in-TEL-leh-goh.

- intellegō — I understand
- intellegis — you understand, to one person
- intellegit — he understands, she understands
- intellegimus — we understand
- intellegitis — you understand, to several people
- intellegunt — they understand

Nōn intellegō — "I do not understand" — is the single most useful sentence in this chapter.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The prefix is inter, "between, among." Before an l it wore down to intel-. So intellegere is to pick out from among, to read between one thing and another. Latin says outright what English only implies: understanding is discrimination.

The family in English is one of the most familiar in the language: intellect, intellectual, intelligent, intelligence, intelligible and unintelligible, and — borrowed back through Russian — intelligentsia. Military and diplomatic intelligence is the older sense of the noun: information gathered.

There is a spelling puzzle here worth solving. Classical Latin wrote intellegō with an e, keeping the vowel of legō; later Latin respelled it intelligō. English took both, at different dates, which is why intellect keeps the e while intelligent carries the i. Two spellings, one verb.

Inter on its own gave English interval, interior, interrupt, international, and interest — that last one already met as inter est, "it is between."

Two flags. Latin had a second word for understanding, comprehendere, "to grasp together," which gives comprehend and comprehensive; it is a different image and a different root. And English understand is Germanic, a compound of under and stand — no connection at all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "intellegō" — I understand
- "intellegis, intellegit" — you understand, he or she understands
- "nōn intellegō" — I do not understand
- the English relatives — intellect, intelligent, intelligible

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I understand"? (Intellegō.) "I do not understand"? (Nōn intellegō.) What two pieces is it built from? (Inter, "between," and legere, "to pick out".) Why does English have both intellect and intelligent? (Two Latin spellings — classical intellegō, later intelligō.) Is English understand related? (No — it is Germanic.)

38.4 scrībō — writing began as scratching, and the four together

Cōgitō turns things over, legō takes words off a surface, intellegō picks them apart. One verb is left: the one that put them there.

You'll want to know: scrībō — "I write"

Scrībō means "I write." The dictionary form is scrībere. The sc is a plain sk and the ī is long and held: SKREE-boh.

- scrībō — I write
- scrībis — you write, to one person
- scrībit — he writes, she writes
- scrībimus — we write
- scrībitis — you write, to several people

- scrībunt — they write

Note that the endings match legō exactly. Two verbs, one pattern.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European skreyb^h-, "to cut, to scratch, to incise." That is not a metaphor. A Roman writing a note pressed a pointed stylus into a wax-coated board; writing was scratching, and the verb never forgot it.
The English family is enormous and almost entirely transparent. Bare: scribe, scribble, script, scripture, scrivener. Compounded with a noun: manuscript, "written by hand," from manus, the hand.
Prefixed with a preposition, the verb runs the whole set — describe (write down), prescribe (write in advance), subscribe (write underneath, which is what signing a document was), transcribe (write across), inscribe (write into), circumscribe (write around), proscribe (post a name publicly, which in Rome meant a death sentence), ascribe, conscript, and postscript.
One quiet survivor: Old English borrowed scrībere as scrīfan, "to impose a penance in writing," and that gives shrive, shrift, and the Tuesday before Lent, Shrove Tuesday. When somebody gets short shrift, they are being given very little confession time.
Now the honest part. English write is not from this verb. It is Germanic, from a word that also meant "to scratch, to tear" — two languages reaching the same image with two different words. Scrape and scrub are likewise Germanic and unrelated, however much they sound the part.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "scrībō, scrībis, scrībit" — I write, you write, he or she writes
- this chapter's four "I" forms — cōgitō, legō, intellegō, scrībō
- the four "he or she" forms — cōgitat, legit, intellegit, scrībit
- the English relatives — scribe, script, describe, manuscript

Before you move on

Give this chapter's four "I" forms. (Cōgitō, legō, intellegō, scrībō.) Now the four "he or she" forms. (Cōgitat, legit, intellegit, scrībit.) What did scrībere's root originally mean? (To scratch, to incise — a stylus in wax.) What does subscribe literally say? (Write underneath — to sign.) Is English write from this verb? (No — it is Germanic, and happens to mean "scratch" too.)

Chapter 39

Taking, Asking, Helping, Loving

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I take, I ask, I help and I love in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, and name the English words each verb built.
>
> The chapter closes on amō: after learning it the reader produces all four first-person forms and all four third-person forms in sequence — capiō, rogō, adiuvō, amō and capit, rogat, adiuvat, amat.

39.1 capiō — the verb behind English "have"

The last chapter closed on scrībō. This one opens by paying a debt: when you learned habeō, you were told that English have is not its descendant but belongs to another verb. This is that other verb.

You'll want to know: capiō — "I take"

Capiō means "I take," and also "I seize, I catch, I hold." The dictionary form is capere. Both vowels are short and the c is hard: KAH-pee-oh.

- capiō — I take
- capis — you take, to one person
- capit — he takes, she takes
- capimus — we take

- capitis — you take, to several people
- capiunt — they take

For "take up, take on" Latin also used sūmō, sūmere.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European keh$_2$p-, "to grasp." Latin made capere of it; the Germanic branch made English have and heave. So capiō and have really are the same inherited word — the resemblance habeō seemed to offer was the false one, and this is the true one.
Plain derivatives: capture, captive, captor, caption, capable, capacity. Prefixed, the a often weakens to i or e, which is what disguises the family: accept and except, intercept, anticipate ("to take beforehand"), participate (pars plus capere, "to take a part"), occupy, recuperate, and emancipate — ex plus manus plus capere, "to take out of the hand." Through French the same stem gives receive and reception, deceive and deception, conceive and concept, perceive, and susceptible. Vulgar Latin captiāre produced both chase and catch, which are therefore the same word twice.
Sūmere is sub plus emere, "to take up," and it supplies assume, consume, presume, resume, and sumptuous. Emere itself ("to buy") gives exempt, redeem, example, and premium.
Now the trap. Latin caput, "head," looks like a member of this family and is not. It is a separate word, and it — not capere — gives capital, captain, chapter, chief, and cape the headland.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "capiō" — I take, hard c
- "capis, capit" — you take, he or she takes
- "capimus, capitis, capiunt" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — capture, accept, receive, concept

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I take"? (Capiō.) "They take"? (Capiunt.) Which English verb is the same inherited word? (Have — and heave.) What does emancipate literally say? (To take out of the hand.) Do capital and captain belong here? (No — those are from caput, "head".)

39.2 rogō — asking as reaching straight out

Dīcō tells someone something. Capiō takes. This verb is what you do when you want to take and have to ask first.

You'll want to know: rogō — "I ask"

Rogō means "I ask" — both asking a question and asking for a thing. The dictionary form is rogāre. The g is hard: ROH-goh.

- rogō — I ask
- rogās — you ask, to one person
- rogat — he asks, she asks
- rogāmus — we ask
- rogātis — you ask, to several people
- rogant — they ask

Latin's harder-edged partner is petō, petere, "I seek, I aim at, I ask for" — asking with an object in view.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Rogāre is generally traced to the Proto-Indo-European root *reg-, "to move in a straight line, to direct" — asking pictured as reaching straight out toward somebody. That last step is the standard account rather than a certainty, so hold it loosely. The root itself is a giant: it gives Latin regō ("I rule") and rēx ("king"), hence regal, regent, region, direct, correct, and erect. In the Germanic branch it gives English right; in Sanskrit it gives the raja of maharaja.

From rogāre itself English has interrogate ("to ask thoroughly"), arrogant and arrogate (ad-rogāre, "to claim for oneself"), abrogate ("to ask away," to repeal), derogatory, and surrogate (sub-rogāre, "to ask in someone's place").
Petere runs a second family: petition, appetite, compete, repeat, impetus, perpetual, and centripetal. Its root meant "to fly, to rush," and that is why Latin penna, "feather," belongs to it — so pen is a cousin of petō, and Greek supplies helicopter, a spiral wing.
Two flags. English ask is Germanic and unrelated. And rogue is often guessed to come from rogāre; its origin is genuinely unknown.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "rogō" — I ask, hard g
- "rogās, rogat" — you ask, he or she asks
- "rogāmus, rogātis, rogant" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — interrogate, arrogant, prerogative

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I ask"? (Rogō.) "They ask"? (Rogant.) Which root is it generally traced to, and how sure is that? (*reg-, "to move in a straight line" — the standard account, not a certainty.) Which everyday writing tool comes from petere's family? (Pen, from penna, "feather".)

39.3 adiuvō — the verb inside "aid"

You can ask now — rogō. This is the verb for what you are hoping the other person will do.

You'll want to know: adiuvō — "I help"

Adiuvō means "I help." The dictionary form is adiuvāre. Two sounds to place: the i between vowels is a consonant, said like English y, and the v is a w. So this is ah-DYOO-woh.

- adiuvō — I help
- adiuvās — you help, to one person
- adiuvat — he helps, she helps
- adiuvāmus — we help
- adiuvātis — you help, to several people
- adiuvant — they help

The plain verb iuvō, iuvāre, means "to help" and also "to please," and ad- simply aims it at somebody.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Latin built a busier form of adiuvāre — adiūtāre — and Old French wore that down to aidier. English borrowed it as aid, and later took the French agent-noun as aide, which is why first aid and an aide-de-camp both hold this Roman verb without showing a letter of it.

Straight from Latin come adjutant (adiūtor, "a helper") and adjuvant, the medical term for something given alongside a treatment to help it work. A bishop's assistant is a coadjutor.

Latin's other word for help is auxilium, and its family is a surprise. It comes from augēre, "to increase" — help as an increase of your strength. That verb gives auxiliary, augment, auction (a sale where the price grows), author (auctor, one who makes a thing grow), and the month August, for the emperor Augustus, "the increased one."

The Germanic branch gives English eke — and a nickname is an eke-name, an also-name, with the n of an stuck to the front.

Two flags, and the first is a real trap. Iuvō ("help") is not the source of juvenile. That comes from iuvenis, "young," a separate word which also gives junior and rejuvenate. And English help is Germanic, unrelated to any of this.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "adiuvō" — I help, with a y and a w inside

- "adiuvās, adiuvat" — you help, he or she helps
- "adiuvāmus, adiuvātis, adiuvant" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — aid, aide, adjutant, adjuvant

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I help"? (Adiuvō.) "They help"? (Adiuvant.) How is the i in the middle pronounced? (Like English y.) Which two everyday English words came from it through French? (Aid and aide.) Is juvenile a relative? (No — that is iuvenis, "young," a different word.)

39.4 amō — the fourth verb, and the four together

Three verbs so far in this chapter: to take, to ask, to help. One remains, and it is the one every Latin class in history has started with.

You'll want to know: amō — "I love"

Amō means "I love," and, more mildly, "I like." The dictionary form is amāre. The a of amō is short, the ā of amās is long.

- amō — I love
- amās — you love, to one person
- amat — he loves, she loves
- amāmus — we love
- amātis — you love, to several people
- amant — they love

Amō, amās, amat is the oldest teaching formula in the subject. You meet it here in its proper place: as the last of four ordinary verbs.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Begin with the honest limit. Almost every other verb in this book walks back to a reconstructed Proto-Indo-European root. Amāre does not. It is usually explained as a nursery word — the am- sound small children make — which is a respectable account and not a reconstruction. The trail stops earlier here, and saying so is better than inventing a root.

The forward journey makes up for it. Amateur came through French and means "one who loves it"; the sneer is a late arrival. Beside it stand amatory, amorous, enamoured, and paramour ("by love"). From Latin's word for "friend," built on the same am- (a later lesson teaches it), come amicable, amity, and — Spanish being another daughter of Latin — amigo. Amanda means "she who is to be loved."

The best of them is upside down. Put the negative in- on that word for "friend":

in- ("not") + amīcus ("friend") → inimīcus

The a weakens to i inside the compound, and "not-friend" is English enemy, and enmity, and inimical. The word for an enemy is the word for love with a "not" in front of it.

Two flags. Amen is Hebrew, borrowed through Greek, and has nothing to do with amō. And amenable comes through French amener, "to lead to."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "amō, amās, amat" — I love, you love, he or she loves
- this chapter's four "I" forms — capiō, rogō, adiuvō, amō
- the four "he or she" forms — capit, rogat, adiuvat, amat
- the English relatives of amāre — amateur, amicable, enemy

Before you move on

Give this chapter's four "I" forms. (Capiō, rogō, adiuvō, amō.)
Now the four "he or she" forms. (Capit, rogat, adiuvat, amat.)
Why does this lesson name no ancient root? (Because amāre has none securely reconstructed — it is taken as a nursery word.)

Which English word is Latin's "friend" with a "not" on the front? (Enemy.)

Chapter 40

Hearing, Sleeping, Sitting, Standing

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I hear, I sleep, I sit and I stand in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, name the conjugation each belongs to, and tell an English word inherited from the shared ancestor apart from one borrowed out of Latin.
>
> The chapter closes on stō: after learning it the reader produces all four first-person forms and all four third-person forms in sequence — audiō, dormiō, sedeō, stō and audit, dormit, sedet, stat — sorts stand from station as inherited against borrowed, and reaches back three chapters to retrieve sum and eō, neither of which had been revisited since chapter 37.

40.1 audiō — hearing, and the word for obeying

The last chapter ended on amō, whose trail stopped early — no secure ancient root to walk back to. This verb is the opposite case: its trail runs all the way back, and forward into a surprising English word. It is also the natural partner of rogō: you ask, and then you hear.

You'll want to know: audiō — "I hear"

Audiō means "I hear," and also "I listen to." The dictionary form is audīre. The au is one sound, close to English ow in "now."

- audiō — I hear
- audīs — you hear, to one person
- audit — he hears, she hears
- audīmus — we hear
- audītis — you hear, to several people
- audiunt — they hear

This is a fourth-conjugation verb — the group whose dictionary form ends in -īre. Note the "they" form: audiunt, with a u slipped in.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European au-, "to perceive." Latin built audīre on it, and English borrowed the results wholesale: audio, audible, audience, audition, auditor, auditorium.
Audit is the best of them. An audit was literally a hearing: accounts were read out loud and checked by ear, long before anyone checked them by eye. The word kept the procedure and lost the sound.
Now the one nobody guesses. Put ob- ("toward") in front of audīre and Latin gives oboedīre, "to listen toward" — which through French becomes English obey, obedient and disobey. To obey is to listen hard at someone. The town crier's oyez is the same verb, an Old French imperative: "hear ye."
The Greek branch of au- produced words for perceiving in general: aesthetic, and anaesthesia, "no perception at all."
One flag. English hear is not a relative. It is Germanic, from another root — the one that also gives Greek akoúein and so English acoustic. Audio and acoustic mean nearly the same thing and are not cousins.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "audiō" — I hear
- "audīs, audit" — you hear, he or she hears
- "audīmus, audītis, audiunt" — we, you all, they

- the pair from the last chapter beside it — rogō, amō
- the English relatives — audience, audit, obey

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I hear"? (Audiō.) "They hear"? (Audiunt.) Which conjugation is it? (The fourth — the -īre group.) What was an audit originally, and which everyday word is ob- plus audīre? (A hearing, accounts read aloud — and obey.) Which verb from the last chapter had no securely reconstructed root, and which one means "I ask"? (Amō, and rogō.)

40.2 dormiō — the verb you do with your senses off

Audiō is hearing; videō, from an earlier chapter, is seeing. This verb is the state in which you do neither.

You'll want to know: dormiō — "I sleep"

Dormiō means "I sleep." The dictionary form is dormīre. The first o is short, the ī of dormīre is long: dor-MEE-reh.

- dormiō — I sleep
- dormīs — you sleep, to one person
- dormit — he sleeps, she sleeps
- dormīmus — we sleep
- dormītis — you sleep, to several people
- dormiunt — they sleep

This is the same fourth conjugation as the verb before it, and it takes the same endings — including that u in dormiunt. Two verbs in the group is enough to hear the pattern.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European drem-, "to sleep." It is a quiet root: Sanskrit drāti, Greek darthánein, Old Church Slavonic drěmati. Latin dormīre is the western member, and English inherited none of it — every English word here is a loan.

Borrowed whole: dormitory (dormītōrium, "a sleeping place"), and its clipped form dorm. Dormant, from French, is a thing that is sleeping rather than dead. A dormer window began as the window of a sleeping room.

Now a warning, because this one is a trap dressed as a gift. Dormouse looks like the perfect example and is not securely one. The animal's name is attested in English before the French word for a sleeper it is supposed to come from, and the -mouse half may simply be English speakers making sense of a syllable they did not recognise. A hook you have to defend is not a hook.

Latin's other word for sleep is a noun from a different root: English took insomnia ("no sleep") and somnolent from it, and soporific from its cousin sopor. The verb gave the rooms you sleep in; the noun gave the sleep.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dormiō" — I sleep
- "dormīs, dormit" — you sleep, he or she sleeps
- "dormīmus, dormītis, dormiunt" — we, you all, they
- the two senses this verb switches off — audiō, videō
- the English relatives — dormitory, dormant

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I sleep"? (Dormiō.) "They sleep"? (Dormiunt.) Which conjugation, and which other verb shares it here? (The fourth — with audiō.) Why is dormouse not a safe example? (Because the connection is not secure — the English word is older than the French one it supposedly comes from.) What does insomnia literally mean? (No sleep.) Which verb means "I see"? (Videō.)

40.3 sedeō — the same word English already had

Dormīre left English nothing but loans. This verb is the reverse, and it lets us name a distinction this book has been using without stating it.

You'll want to know: sedeō — "I sit"

Sedeō means "I sit," and also "I stay put." The dictionary form is sedēre, with a long ē.

- sedeō — I sit
- sedēs — you sit, to one person
- sedet — he sits, she sits
- sedēmus — we sit
- sedētis — you sit, to several people
- sedent — they sit

This one is second conjugation — the -ēre group. That long ē is the whole signal, so give it room.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European sed-, "to sit," and English has it by two different routes — which is the point.
Inherited, down the Germanic line, with no Latin involved: sit, seat, set ("cause to sit"), settle, saddle. Two are hidden: nest is "the place where one sits down," and soot is what settles.
Borrowed, later, out of Latin sedēre: session, sedentary, sediment, sedate, preside, reside, dissident ("sitting apart"), assiduous ("sitting at it"), possess. Siege is a seat too — an army sitting down in front of a town.
Hold the two apart. An inherited word came down to English from the shared ancestor without passing through Latin; a borrowed word was taken out of Latin, usually centuries later. Sit and session are one ancient word by two roads, and they look nothing alike because one wore down for three thousand years while the other was copied out of a book. You met this shape when capiō turned out to be the true relative of English have, with the borrowed capture beside it.

One flag. Sedan is often attached to sedēre, and the connection is not established. Leave it out.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "sedeō" — I sit, long ē in sedēre
- "sedēs, sedet" — you sit, he or she sits
- "sedēmus, sedētis, sedent" — we, you all, they
- the three verbs of this chapter so far — audiō, dormiō, sedeō
- the inherited word, then the borrowed one — sit, session

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I sit"? (Sedeō.) "They sit"? (Sedent.) Which conjugation? (The second — the long -ēre group.) Is English sit borrowed from Latin, and what about session? (Sit is inherited, by a different road; session is borrowed.) Which earlier verb showed that same shape, and why is dormouse not usable that way? (Capiō — cousin of have, source of capture; and dormouse's link to sleeping is not secure.)

40.4 stō — standing, and the four together

Three verbs so far: hearing, sleeping, sitting. One remains. It is the opposite of the last, and it shows the inherited-and-borrowed pattern sedeō just taught all over.

You'll want to know: stō — "I stand"

Stō means "I stand," and by extension "I stay." The dictionary form is stāre. Two letters in the "I" form makes it the shortest verb you have met.

- stō — I stand
- stās — you stand, to one person
- stat — he stands, she stands
- stāmus — we stand
- stātis — you stand, to several people
- stant — they stand

This is first conjugation, the -āre group, and in the present tense perfectly regular: the long ā runs through every form after the first.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *sta-, "to stand." Sort the English by the two roads that gave sit and session.
Inherited: stand — with an extra n wedged into the middle, which is why it looks unlike stō — plus stead (as in instead), steed, stall and stool.
Borrowed from stāre: station, statue, status, state, stable, estate, stage, substance, circumstance ("standing around"), obstacle ("standing in the way"), constant, instant, distance. Two are so worn down they hide: constāre, "to stand at a price," is English cost, and restāre, "to stand back," is the rest that means the remainder. The doubled-up sistere gives consist, resist, insist and assist.
Set this beside the verb for being. Sum and est are inherited cousins of English am and is — the same two-road picture, only there the English side kept the meaning exactly. And set it against eō, "I go": stāre is what you do when you are not going, and English holds both halves, station from this verb and exit from that one.
One flag. English still is often thrown in here and does not belong.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "stō, stās, stat" — I stand, you stand, he or she stands
- this chapter's four "I" forms — audiō, dormiō, sedeō, stō
- the four "he or she" forms — audit, dormit, sedet, stat
- the two from an earlier chapter beside them — sum, eō
- inherited, then borrowed — stand, station

Before you move on

Give this chapter's four "I" forms. (Audiō, dormiō, sedeō, stō.) Now the four "he or she" forms. (Audit, dormit, sedet, stat.) Which of the four is second conjugation? (Sedeō — the long -ēre group.) Which English word for standing is inherited, which is borrowed, and what is cost taken apart? (Stand inherited, station borrowed; constāre, what a thing stands at.) Which earlier verb has am and is as its inherited English cousins, and which one means "I go"? (Sum, and eō — the verb behind exit.)

Chapter 41

Walking, Running, Opening, Closing

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I walk, I run, I open and I close in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, name the conjugation each belongs to, and say what a Latin prefix does to the verb it sits on.
>
> The chapter closes on claudō: after learning it the reader produces all four first-person forms and all four third-person forms in sequence — ambulō, currō, aperiō, claudō and ambulat, currit, aperit, claudit — reads include/exclude beside accept/except and intellegō as one prefix rule, and so retrieves capiō and intellegō from two and three chapters back, neither of them revisited before now.

41.1 ambulō — walking about

The last chapter left you sitting and standing — sedeō and stō, both of them staying put. This chapter moves.

You'll want to know: ambulō — "I walk"

Ambulō means "I walk," with a flavour of walking about rather than walking to somewhere. The dictionary form is ambulāre.

- ambulō — I walk
- ambulās — you walk, to one person

- ambulat — he walks, she walks
- ambulāmus — we walk
- ambulātis — you walk, to several people
- ambulant — they walk

Like stō, this is first conjugation — the -āre group — with the same endings hung on a longer stem.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Start with the honest limit, because this word has one. The front half is secure: amb-, "around," the same element as in ambi-. The back half is not settled — usually connected with an old root meaning "to wander" or "to go," but the join has never been nailed down, so the standard gloss is a reasonable guess rather than a proof.

The harvest is not in doubt at all. Amble came through French and kept the leisurely sense exactly. Ambulatory is both an adjective and the walking-gallery of a church. Perambulate gave the Victorian perambulator and, clipped, the pram. A preamble walks in front (prae-, "before").

Two compounds are worth saying out loud. A funambulist walks a rope (fūnis). A somnambulist walks in sleep — and somnus is the Latin sleep-noun named in the last chapter, so that word is two pieces you already have.

The best is ambulance. A French military hospital that followed the army instead of waiting for it was an hôpital ambulant — a walking hospital. English took the second word and forgot the first, so the vehicle is named for moving.

Two flags. English walk is Germanic and no relation. And French aller, "to go" — with alley behind it — is often derived from ambulāre by heavy wear, but that derivation is disputed. Do not lean on it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ambulō" — I walk
- "ambulās, ambulat" — you walk, he or she walks

- "ambulāmus, ambulātis, ambulant" — we, you all, they
- the two still verbs it moves away from — sedeō, stō
- the English relatives — amble, preamble, ambulance

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I walk"? (Ambulō.) "They walk"? (Ambulant.) Which conjugation, and which earlier verb shares it? (The first, the -āre group — with stō.) Which half of the word is uncertain, and why is a vehicle called an ambulance? (The back half; and because the hospital walked — it followed the army.) Which verb means "I sit"? (Sedeō.)

41.2 currō — running, and the root that came by two roads

Ambulō is walking about, and its own back half is a guess. This verb is the fast one, and its ancestry is not a guess at all.

You'll want to know: currō — "I run"

Currō means "I run," and also "I race." The dictionary form is currere. Every vowel is short, the *r*s are rolled, the c is hard: KOOR-reh-reh.

- currō — I run
- curris — you run, to one person
- currit — he runs, she runs
- currimus — we run
- curritis — you run, to several people
- currunt — they run

This is third conjugation, whose dictionary form ends in -ere with a short second-to-last vowel. Say currere with the stress at the front to hear the difference from the long -ēre of the second.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *kers-, "to run," and it reached English by two very different roads.
Through the Latin verb: current (a running of water, then of electricity), currency (money that runs), cursor, cursive, course, discourse, occur ("to run to meet"), recur, excursion, precursor, and succour — sub- plus currere, to run underneath someone and hold them up. Corridor is Italian for "a running-place," and curriculum is simply a racecourse.
Through a wagon: the Gauls had a word karros for a war chariot, from the very same root, and Latin borrowed it as carrus. From that noun English has car, carry, carriage, cargo, charge (which began as loading a wagon), and career — first a road for carts, then the speed you take one at. Carpenter is there too: a carpentārius made wagons.
Set this beside veniō, "I come." Veniō is arriving; currō is the speed. English keeps them apart the same way — an event comes out, a course is the running of it.
Two flags. English hurry is not related. And the claim that English horse belongs to this root is a proposal, not a settled fact.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "currō" — I run, hard c, rolled r
- "curris, currit" — you run, he or she runs
- "currimus, curritis, currunt" — we, you all, they
- the three speeds so far — stō, ambulō, currō
- the relatives — current, curriculum, car

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I run"? (Currō.) "They run"? (Currunt.) Which conjugation? (The third — short -ere.) What is a curriculum literally, and how did car get into the family? (A racecourse; and through a Gaulish wagon-word Latin borrowed, from the same root.) Which earlier verb means "I come", the arriving to this verb's speed, and which means "I walk about"? (Veniō, and ambulō.)

41.3 aperiō — to un-cover

Currō showed one root reaching English by two roads. This verb shows something rarer: one root standing inside two Latin words that mean the opposite of each other.

You'll want to know: aperiō — "I open"

Aperiō means "I open," and also "I uncover, I reveal." The dictionary form is aperīre, with a long ī.

- aperiō — I open
- aperīs — you open, to one person
- aperit — he opens, she opens
- aperīmus — we open
- aperītis — you open, to several people
- aperiunt — they open

This is fourth conjugation, the -īre group, and it takes exactly the endings audiō and dormiō took — including that u before the ending in aperiunt.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Aperīre is taken apart as ap-, "off, away," welded onto an old root *wer- meaning "to cover." To open, in Latin, is to cover away.
Now the elegant part. Latin has a second verb on the very same root: operīre, "to cover, to shut" — op-, "over," on wer-*. The two verbs differ in one syllable at the front, and that syllable turns covering into uncovering:

- aperīre — cover away → open
- operīre — cover over → shut

English took both halves and never noticed they were a pair. From the opening verb: aperture, an opening; aperitif, the drink that opens a meal; and, worn down through French ouvrir, overt and overture. From the shutting verb, mostly with co- in front (cooperīre, "to cover completely"): cover, covert, and discover, which is dis- undoing the covering. Two French phrases came in whole: a curfew is couvre-feu, "cover the fire," and a kerchief is couvre-chef.
Two honest notes. The Vulgar Latin descendants of these verbs blurred into each other, which is why French ouvrir and couvrir rhyme today. And April — you will see it explained as "the opening month," from aperīre. That is folk etymology; the real origin is unsettled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "aperiō" — I open
- "aperīs, aperit" — you open, he or she opens
- "aperīmus, aperītis, aperiunt" — we, you all, they
- the pair, and what each prefix does — aperīre, cover away; operīre, cover over
- the chapter so far — ambulō, currō, aperiō

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I open", and how "they open"? (Aperiō, aperiunt.) Which conjugation, and what does aperīre literally say? (The fourth, the -īre group; and cover away — un-cover.) What is its opposite, and what does that prefix change? (Operīre — op-, "over," so cover over.) Which English word is couvre-feu, is April from this verb, and which verb means "I run"? (Curfew; no, that is folk etymology; and currō.)

41.4 claudō — closing, and the four together

Aperiō opened by covering away, and named its own Latin opposite. But that opposite is not the verb a Roman reached for to shut a door. This one is, and it is the word English says every day.

You'll want to know: claudō — "I close"

Claudō means "I close," "I shut in." The dictionary form is claudere. The au is one sound, as in audiō; the c is hard: KLOW-deh-reh.

- claudō — I close
- claudis — you close, to one person
- claudit — he closes, she closes
- claudimus — we close
- clauditis — you close, to several people
- claudunt — they close

Like currō, this is third conjugation — short -ere. That is three classes across this chapter's four verbs, worth noticing and not worth memorising: the class only tells you the endings.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *klau-, and it did not mean "shut." It meant hook or peg — the crooked wood you jam a door with. The action is named after the object, and Latin kept it: clāvis, "key."
English close is this verb. Not a cousin — the verb itself, borrowed through French from clausum. That matters, because you learned to sort the two ways apart: sit was inherited, session was a loan. Close is a loan that stopped looking like one. Beside it stand closet, closure, disclose, and the noun clause. A cloister is a claustrum, a bolted place, and sluice is exclūsa, "water shut out."
Then the prefixes, where the chapter's two halves meet. Claudere takes them by the handful: include, exclude, conclude, preclude, recluse. Set include and exclude beside accept and except — the same two prefixes on capere. Set them beside intellegō, where inter- turns picking into understanding. A prefix carries the meaning.
From clāvis, the key: clavicle (a little key — the collarbone), clef, and conclave, a room locked with a key. Greek kleís is the same inherited word and means both those things too.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "claudō, claudis, claudit" — I close, you close, he or she closes
- this chapter's four "I" forms — ambulō, currō, aperiō, claudō
- the four "he or she" forms — ambulat, currit, aperit, claudit
- two prefixes, two verbs — include, exclude; accept, except

Before you move on

Give this chapter's four "I" forms, then the four "he or she" forms. (Ambulō, currō, aperiō, claudō; ambulat, currit, aperit, claudit.) Which two share the third conjugation? (Currō and claudō.) Is English close inherited or borrowed, and what did the root name? (Borrowed — this Latin verb itself; and a hook or peg.) Which verb gives accept and except, the same prefixes as include and exclude, and which is inter- plus "to pick out"? (Capiō, and intellegō.)

Chapter 42

Bringing, Getting, Playing, Waiting

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I bring, I get, I play and I wait in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, and say whether a verb is welded together from two roots, built from a prefix on an older verb, or of ancestry nobody has settled.
>
> The chapter closes on exspectō: after learning it the reader produces all four first-person forms and all four third-person forms in sequence — ferō, accipiō, lūdō, exspectō and fert, accipit, lūdit, exspectat — sorts a verb's children from its siblings (expect against spectacle), and reaches back five chapters to retrieve videō and dō, neither of which had been revisited since chapter 37.

42.1 ferō — one verb, two ancestors

> Claudō shut the door that aperiō opened, and its root named a hook. This verb is stranger: it is not one word at all.

You'll want to know: ferō — "I bring"

Ferō means "I carry," and so also "I bring" and "I bear." The dictionary form is ferre, not the -ere you would expect.

- ferō — I bring
- fers — you bring, to one person

- fert — he brings, she brings
- ferimus — we bring
- fertis — you bring, to several people
- ferunt — they bring

Say fers and fert slowly. Every verb so far put a vowel between the stem and the ending — claudis, claudit. Here the ending is jammed straight onto fer-. That happens in the s, t and r forms only; ferimus and ferunt keep their vowel.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Ferre comes from Proto-Indo-European b^{h}er-, "to carry." English inherited that root directly, as the verb bear — so ferō and bear are blood relatives, not borrowings.
Now the odd part. To say "I brought," a Roman said tulī; the participle was lātum. Neither is from b^{h}er-*: both come from telh$_2$-, "to lift." One verb, two ancestries, welded together because each root had gone missing where the other survived. Grammarians call this suppletion, and you met a smaller case: sum, "I am," takes its past from another root.
Both halves are generous. From ferre: transfer (carry across), refer, prefer, confer, offer, suffer (bear from under), and fertile, a field that carries a crop. Differ is dis- plus ferre, "to carry apart" — and defer is that same Latin word split into two English ones. From lātum: relate and translate.
Set this beside dō, "I give." Dō hands a thing over; ferō carries it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ferō, fers, fert" — I bring, you bring, he or she brings
- "ferimus, fertis, ferunt" — we, you all, they
- the two past pieces from the other root — tulī, lātum
- the giving verb beside the carrying one — dō, ferō

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I bring", and "he brings"? (Ferō, fert.) Which two forms keep a vowel before the ending? (Ferimus and ferunt.) How many roots make this verb, and what is that called? (Two — b^{h}er-* and telh$_2$-*; suppletion.) Which English verb is the same word as ferō by inheritance? (Bear.) Which earlier verb means "I give", and which means "I close"? (Dō, and claudō.)

42.2 accipiō and obtineō — getting, two ways

Ferō carried a thing toward somebody. These two verbs are what happens at the other end — and neither is a new word. Each is a prefix welded onto a verb you have.

You'll want to know: accipiō — "I receive"

Accipiō means "I receive," "I get," "I accept." Latin has no all-purpose verb for English get; it uses the precise one.

- accipiō — I receive
- accipis — you receive, to one person
- accipit — he receives, she receives
- accipimus — we receive
- accipitis — you receive, to several people
- accipiunt — they receive

Those endings should feel familiar: they are capiō's, because capiō is what is inside this word.

You'll want to know: obtineō — "I get hold of"

Obtineō is the other half of "get": not receive but acquire and keep — getting hold of a thing and holding it. It is second conjugation, -ēre: obtineō, obtinēs, obtinet, obtinēmus, obtinētis, obtinent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Accipere is ad, "to, toward," plus capere, "to take." Take it toward yourself, and you have received it. Two things happened at the seam. The d of ad turned into the c it was leaning on — ad-capere becoming accipere. And the a of capere, now buried in a longer word, thinned to i. English accept and acceptance come from here.
ob ("over against") + tenēre ("to hold") → obtinēre
The same thinning shows: e to i. English took it whole as obtain.
Now put adiuvō next to them. It is ad plus iuvāre — the same ad, sitting in front of a vowel, where it had nothing to lean on and so stayed itself. One prefix, two states: kept in adiuvō, swallowed in accipiō.
Two flags. English receive is from recipere, a different prefix on the same verb. And retain and contain belong to the plain hold-verb at large, not to obtinēre.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "accipiō, accipis, accipit" — I, you, he or she receives
- "obtineō, obtinēs, obtinet" — I, you, he or she gets hold of
- the verb inside accipiō — capiō
- the prefix in three states — adiuvō, accipiō, obtineō

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I receive", and "they receive"? (Accipiō, accipiunt.) Which verb is buried inside it, and what happened to that verb's a? (Capiō; it thinned to *i.) What are the two pieces of obtinēre? (Ob, "over against," and the verb "to hold.") Which earlier verb shows the same ad- unswallowed? (Adiuvō.) And which verb means "I bring"? (Ferō.)

42.3 lūdō — playing, and being played

Accipiō and obtineō were built out of older parts. This verb is the opposite case: a short word whose own parentage is unknown, and which still went on to father a crowd.

You'll want to know: lūdō — "I play"

Lūdō means "I play" — a game, a sport, an instrument, a part on stage. The dictionary form is lūdere, with a long ū and a short e.

- lūdō — I play
- lūdis — you play, to one person
- lūdit — he plays, she plays
- lūdimus — we play
- lūditis — you play, to several people
- lūdunt — they play

Third conjugation, the short -ere group — the endings of claudō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Begin with the honest limit. Where lūdere came from before Latin is not settled. Dictionaries offer a root along the lines of loid-*, "play," but specialists disagree about its form and about whether the Greek word usually cited belongs at all. Some sources state a root confidently; they are more confident than the evidence.

The noun is lūdus, and it means two things at once: a game, and a school. The elementary school where a Roman child learned letters was the lūdus litterārius — the place you went to legō and scrībō, called by the word for play. Both senses sit in the one Latin word.

The English harvest is almost all about deception, because lūdere also meant "to make sport of." Illusion is in- plus the root: a playing-upon. Delude plays you down, elude plays you away, allude plays toward a thing without naming it, and to collude is to play together against someone. Ludicrous kept the plain sense — fit for a game. A prelude plays before, an interlude between.

Two flags. English play is Germanic and is no relation. And the board game Ludo, sold in Britain from the 1890s, is named with exactly the form you just said: lūdō, "I play."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "lūdō, lūdis, lūdit" — I play, you play, he or she plays
- "lūdimus, lūditis, lūdunt" — we, you all, they
- the two things a lūdus was — a game, and a school
- what you did at that school — legō, scrībō

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I play", and "they play"? (Lūdō, lūdunt.) Is this verb's older ancestry known? (No — it is unsettled, whatever a confident dictionary says.) What were the two senses of lūdus, and which two earlier verbs happened at the second one? (Game and school; legō and scrībō.) Which English word means a playing-upon? (Illusion.) And which verb means "I receive"? (Accipiō.)

42.4 exspectō — waiting is looking out

> Lūdō was a plain word with an unknown parent. This last verb of the chapter is the reverse: you can see straight through it to its two pieces.

You'll want to know: exspectō — "I wait"

Exspectō means "I wait," and more exactly "I wait for" — it usually has an object. It is first conjugation, the -āre group.

- exspectō — I wait
- exspectās — you wait, to one person
- exspectat — he waits, she waits
- exspectāmus — we wait
- exspectātis — you wait, to several people

- exspectant — they wait

Romans wrote it both exspectō and expectō, since only one s was ever pronounced. The longer spelling is the one that shows the seam, so it is the one worth learning.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Exspectāre is ex, "out," plus spectāre, "to watch." To wait is to look out for. And spectāre is itself built: it is the over-and-over form of specere, "to look" — so the middle piece already means "keep looking."
English expect is the direct child. Be careful with the rest.
Spectacle, spectator, inspect, respect and suspect are not from exspectāre; they are its brothers and sisters, the same spectāre with other prefixes on the front. Saying they come from "expect" gets the family tree upside down.
Set this beside videō, "I see." Videō is a wholly different root, and its English children — vision, video, evident — are a separate family. Latin had one word for the eye receiving a thing and another for the eye going out after it.
One good flag. English wait looks Romance, because it reached English through French. It is not. It is a Germanic word the French had borrowed first, and its true relatives are watch and wake.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "exspectō, exspectās, exspectat" — I, you, he or she waits
- this chapter's four "I" forms — ferō, accipiō, lūdō, exspectō
- the four "he or she" forms — fert, accipit, lūdit, exspectat
- the two eye-verbs — videō, exspectō

Before you move on

Give the chapter's four "I" forms, then the four "he or she" forms. (Ferō, accipiō, lūdō, exspectō; fert, accipit, lūdit, exspectat.) What does exspectāre literally say? (Look out — ex plus spectāre.) Is spectacle a child of exspectāre? (No — a sibling, from spectāre directly.) Which verb is welded from two roots, and which two are prefix plus an older verb? (Ferō; accipiō and obtineō.) Which verb's own ancestry is unknown, and which earlier verb means "I see"? (Lūdō; and videō.)

Chapter 43

Answering, Meeting, Buying

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I answer, I meet and I buy in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, and read an English word by recovering the older sense of the Latin verb inside it.
>
> The chapter closes on emō: after learning it the reader produces all three first-person forms and all three third-person forms in sequence — respondeō, conveniō, emō and respondet, convenit, emit — recovers redeem and example from the root's older sense 'take', and ranks the four getting-verbs capiō, accipiō, obtineō, emō against dō, retrieving capiō and dō from chapters 39 and 37.

43.1 respondeō — to pledge back

> Exspectō waited by looking out. This verb is what ends the waiting — and what a Roman heard in it was not "reply" but something much more binding.

You'll want to know: respondeō — "I answer"

Respondeō means "I answer," "I reply." The dictionary form is respondēre, with a long ē — second conjugation.

- respondeō — I answer
- respondēs — you answer, to one person
- respondet — he answers, she answers

- respondēmus — we answer
- respondētis — you answer, to several people
- respondent — they answer

The -eō of the I-form and the long -ē- everywhere after it are the mark of that class, exactly as in obtineō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Respondēre is re-, "back," plus spondēre, "to pledge, to promise solemnly." So an answer, at the root, is a pledge given back — you are not merely saying words, you are matching someone's undertaking with your own.

Spondēre was a heavy word. Its relative in Greek is spondḗ, a libation — wine poured out to seal an agreement — and in the plural it simply means a truce. Promises were made by pouring.

The English family is unusually wide. Straight from this verb: respond, response, responsible (able to answer for a thing) and correspond, two people answering each other by letter. From spondēre on its own: a sponsor is one who pledges. From its participle spōnsus and spōnsa, "pledged," English has spouse — a husband or wife is, etymologically, a promise. And dē-spondēre, "to promise away," gives despondent, the state of having given your hope to somebody else.

Set the verb among the ones you have. Rogō asks, audiō hears, sciō knows, dīcō says, and respondeō answers. Five verbs, one conversation — and audiō is the one that made obey, through ob-audīre, "to listen toward." Latin thought obeying was a kind of answering too.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "respondeō, respondēs, respondet" — I, you, he or she answers
- "respondēmus, respondētis, respondent" — we, you all, they
- the conversation, in order — rogō, audiō, sciō, dīcō, respondeō
- what the root really means — to pledge

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I answer", and "they answer"? (Respondeō, respondent.) What are its two pieces, and what does the second one mean? (Re- and spondēre, "to pledge.") Why is a husband a spouse? (Because spōnsus means pledged.) Which five verbs make the conversation? (Rogō, audiō, sciō, dīcō, respondeō.) And which verb means "I wait"? (Exspectō.)

43.2 conveniō and occurrō — coming together, running into

Respondeō answered by pledging back. This verb needs nothing new from you: both halves of it are already yours.

You'll want to know: conveniō — "I meet"

Conveniō means "I meet," "I come together with." Fourth conjugation, because veniō is:

- conveniō — I meet
- convenīs — you meet, to one person
- convenit — he meets, she meets
- convenīmus — we meet
- convenītis — you meet, to several people
- conveniunt — they meet

You'll want to know: occurrō — "I run into"

Occurrō is the other kind of meeting: not arranged, but stumbled into. Third conjugation, like currō: occurrō, occurris, occurrit, occurrimus, occurritis, occurrunt.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Convenīre is con-, "together," plus venīre, "to come." To meet is to come together. English has convene, convention, a convent

(those who came together), and convenient, which began as things coming together well. A covenant is this verb's present participle, picked up through Old French.
Occurrere is ob-, "toward, against," plus currere, "to run." To meet by chance is to run into — the English idiom says the same thing, and gives occur. A thought that occurs to you has run at you.
That con- is worth collecting. It sits on cōgitō, "I think" — con- plus a verb of shaking, so thinking is shaking things together. It sits on claudō: conclūdere shuts things in together, whence conclude. And it sits on ferō, where cōnferre gives confer and conference, people carrying their views together — a compound inherits its parent's oddity, so cōnferre's past is contulī, borrowing that second root exactly as ferō does.
One more piece is already yours. Chapter 21 taught volup est convēnisse, "it is a pleasure to have met." Convēnisse is this verb — you have been saying conveniō for twenty-two chapters without knowing it.

Your turn

- Say it: "conveniō, convenīs, convenit" — I, you, he or she meets
- Say it: "occurrō, occurris, occurrit" — I, you, he or she runs into
- Say it: the verb inside each — veniō, currō
- Run through: the meeting scene — "Salvē! Quid agis?" / "Valeō. Volup est convēnisse!"

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I meet", arranged and by chance? (Conveniō, occurrō.) What are the pieces of each? (Con plus veniō; ob plus currō.) Which chapter-21 phrase holds this verb? (Volup est convēnisse.) Which earlier verb is con- plus a shaking-verb, and what does con- plus ferō give English? (Cōgitō; confer and conference.) And which verb means "I answer"? (Respondeō.)

43.3 emō — buying, which used to be taking

> Conveniō and occurrō wore their older verbs on the outside. This last one hides something instead, and its English children give it away.

You'll want to know: emō — "I buy"

Emō means "I buy." Short word, short vowels, third conjugation: emere.

- emō — I buy
- emis — you buy, to one person
- emit — he buys, she buys
- emimus — we buy
- emitis — you buy, to several people
- emunt — they buy

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European h₁em-, and it did not mean "buy." It meant take. Buying is a late, narrow specialisation of taking — the same slide English makes when a shopper says "I'll take it."

The old sense never left the compounds, and that is where the payoff is. Redimere is red- plus emere, "to take back" — to buy back. From it English has redeem, redemption, and, through French, ransom: literally a buying-back of a person. Eximere is ex- plus emere, "to take out," giving exempt — someone taken out of an obligation. Its noun exemplum is "a thing taken out" as a specimen, and English took that noun by two roads at once: as example, and, worn down through Anglo-French, as sample. Praemium is prae- plus the same root, "what is taken first," and is English premium.

You have met this verb once before without being told. In the taking-verb lesson, sūmere was taken apart as sub plus emere. That was this word.

Now set the three getting-verbs side by side, because Latin keeps them apart. Capiō takes. Accipiō receives what is handed over. Obtineō gets and holds. Emō takes by paying. And facing all four is dō, "I give" — because a sale is both at once: one side gives, the other takes.

One flag, and it is the last in this book. English buy is Germanic, and unusually it has no secure relatives outside Germanic at all. The whole *$h_1em$- family reached English only as loans: redeem, ransom, example, premium.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "emō, emis, emit" — I buy, you buy, he or she buys
- this chapter's three "I" forms — respondeō, conveniō, emō
- the three "he or she" forms — respondet, convenit, emit
- the four ways of getting — capiō, accipiō, obtineō, emō

Before you move on

Give this chapter's three "I" forms, then the three "he or she" forms. (Respondeō, conveniō, emō; respondet, convenit, emit.) What did the root of emere originally mean? (To take.) So what is a redemption, and what is an example? (A buying back; a thing taken out.) Which verb receives what is handed over, and which gets and holds? (Accipiō; obtineō.) And which verb faces them all by giving? (Dō.)

Chapter 44

The House, and Who Is Inside It

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the parts of a house in Latin — the building, its door, its wall, its garden and its hearth — and point to the English words each one left behind.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

44.1 domus — the building a family lives in, and the root under domestic, dome and dominate

A new group of five words begins here. Nothing is assumed but the alphabet you already read.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

domus — "a house."
Not the walls. Latin has another word for those. Domus is the household as a thing: the building and the family in it, the way English house can mean a dynasty.
Its owner is the dominus, the master of it — and that word travelled further than almost any other in this book. It is the don of Spanish, the Dom of Portuguese, and, softened through French, the dame and madam of English. A domain is what a dominus holds. To dominate is to act like one. And a dungeon is the same word: French donjon, the lord's own tower, which came to mean the cell beneath it.

The building itself gave English domestic and domicile, and — through Italian duomo, "the house of God" — the dome on top of a cathedral.
One honest note. English home is not from domus. It is Germanic, from a different root entirely. The resemblance is close enough to be tempting and it is a coincidence, and this book will always tell you when a resemblance is one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- domus, domūs
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is a dominus? (The master of the house.) Name two English words from him. (Dominate, domain, dame, dungeon.) And is English home related? (No — Germanic, and the likeness is a coincidence.)

44.2 porta — and the reason a harbour, a porch and a portal are all the same word

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

porta — "a door," or a gate.
The root is Proto-Indo-European per-, "to pass through," and that is worth holding onto, because it explains a family of English words that look unrelated.
A portal is a porta made grand. A porch is a porticus, the covered way in front of one. And a port is a portus — the same root again, a place where you pass through, but from the sea rather than from the street.
Rome named its gates and remembered them: the Porta Capēna, the Porta Flāminia. A city's gates were its addresses.

Two things to keep apart, because Latin does. Porta is the opening. Ianua — the door leaf that swings in it — is a different word, and it is the one that named January, the month standing in the doorway of the year.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- porta, portae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does the root of porta mean? (To pass through.) So what is a port? (A way in, from the sea.) And which Latin word for a door named a month? (Ianua — January.)

44.3 mūrus — the one that keeps things out, not the one that divides a room

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūrus — "a wall."
Latin splits what English lumps together. A mūrus is a wall that defends: the wall around a city, the wall of a fort. The wall between two rooms is a pariēs, a different word altogether, and no Roman would confuse them.
English has one word for both and has to add an adjective — city wall, interior wall. That is a small, ordinary example of something this book will show you again and again: a language's vocabulary records what its speakers needed to tell apart. Mūrus is inherited: Old Latin spelled it moerus, and Lewis & Short links it with moenia, "city walls".
From mūrus English has mural, a painting made on a wall, and immure, to shut someone inside one. The Roman wall of Britain is still called by its builder's name rather than this word — but Hadrian's Wall is a mūrus in every sense Latin meant.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mūrus, mūrī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which kind of wall is a mūrus? (One that defends.) What is the other word? (Pariēs, a partition.) And what is a mural? (A painting on a wall.)

44.4 hortus — an enclosed piece of ground, and a true blood relative of English yard and garden

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hortus — "a garden."
This one is a cousin, not a loan, and that distinction is the engine of this whole book.
The root is Proto-Indo-European ǵʰórtos, "an enclosure" — a piece of ground with something round it. Latin took it as hortus. Germanic took the same word down its own road and English inherited it twice: as yard, the enclosed ground by a house, and — through Frankish and Old French — as garden. Three words, one ancestor, no borrowing between them.
The Latin form did lend as well: horticulture is the cultivation of a hortus, and it entered English from books rather than from speech, which is why it sounds bookish beside yard.
Look at what the enclosure meant. A garden is not defined by what grows in it. It is defined by the fence.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hortus, hortī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English yard borrowed from hortus, or descended from the same ancestor? (Descended — a cousin.) What did the root mean? (An enclosure.) And what is horticulture? (Cultivating a garden.)

44.5 focus — the fire in the middle of the house, and the reason a lens has a focus

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

focus — "the hearth."
The fireplace. The one warm point a Roman house was arranged around — and Latin had a different word for fire itself, which you will meet shortly.
Two roads out of this word, and they could hardly be less alike.
The spoken road. In late spoken Latin focus stopped meaning the fireplace and started meaning the fire, the way English hearth can. That is the word the Romance languages inherited: French feu, Spanish fuego, Italian fuoco, Portuguese fogo. None of them descends from Latin's own word for fire.
The written road. In 1604 Kepler needed a name for the point where a lens gathers light — the point where it would burn — and reached back into Latin for focus, the burning-place. That is the focus English uses today, and the verb to focus comes from it.
So the same word gives you a Spanish campfire and a camera lens, by two roads fifteen centuries apart.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- focus, focī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What did focus mean in classical Latin? (The hearth.) What became of it in spoken Latin? (It came to mean fire — French feu, Spanish fuego.) And why did Kepler choose it for a lens? (Because it is the burning-point.)

Chapter 45

Earth, Fire, Wind, Sky, Sea

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the five great outdoor things in Latin and say which of them English inherited by descent and which it borrowed from books.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

45.1 terra — dry land as opposed to sea, and the root under terrain, terrace and Mediterranean

A new group of five words begins here. Nothing is assumed but the alphabet you already read.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

terra — "the earth," and specifically dry land.
That contrast is built into the word. Terra is what is not sea — and the Romans named the Mediterranean on exactly that pattern, as the sea in the middle of the land. You will have the second half of that name shortly, and when you do the whole thing stops being a proper noun and becomes a description you can read.
English took terra freely: terrain, terrestrial, subterranean, a terrace (a raised bank of earth), and a terrier — a dog that goes to ground after its quarry. Even inter, to bury, is in plus terra: to put into the earth.

And terra firma, "solid ground," is still said in Latin because no English phrase does the job as briefly.
English earth is Germanic and unrelated. Another coincidence worth naming rather than assuming.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- terra, terrae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does terra contrast with? (The sea.) So what does Mediterranean literally say? (In the middle of the land.) And what does it mean to inter someone? (To put them into the earth.)

45.2 ignis — the classical word, which the Romance languages abandoned and English kept

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ignis — "fire."
This is Latin's own word, and it has a long pedigree: it is a genuine cousin of Sanskrit agni, the fire the Vedic hymns address, and of Russian ogon'. Two of this book's tracks meet here, which is the point of having a Sanskrit track at all.
Now the strange part, and it is worth pausing on.
No Romance language kept it. French, Spanish, Italian and Portuguese all threw ignis away and built their word for fire on focus, the hearth. The classical word for the commonest thing in the house simply lost.
But English kept it — as a loan from books. To ignite is to set on fire; igneous rock is rock that was once molten. So an English speaker saying ignite is using Caesar's word for fire, while a Spanish speaker saying fuego is not.

That is a good corrective to a natural assumption. The daughter languages are not always the better guide to the parent.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ignis, ignis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which Latin word did the Romance languages keep for fire — ignis or focus? (Focus.) Which one did English borrow? (Ignis — ignite, igneous.) And which Sanskrit word is its cousin? (Agni.)

45.3 ventus — and a true Germanic cousin, with the sound change that proves it

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ventus — "the wind."
Another cousin. Proto-Indo-European *h₂weh₁-nto- gave Latin ventus and Germanic windaz, which is English wind. Latin's v against English's w is not a coincidence and not a corruption — it is regular, and once you have seen it you will see it everywhere.
The borrowed branch came later and from French: a vent is a hole for wind, to ventilate is to move wind through, and ventilation is what results.
And a window is a Norse gift, vindauga — a wind-eye. The hole in the wall that the wind looks through. Even the Germanic side of the family named it after this word.
So English holds the same root three ways: inherited as wind, borrowed as vent, and compounded by the Vikings as window.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ventus, ventī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English wind borrowed from ventus or descended alongside it? (Descended — a cousin.) What regular difference marks the two branches? (Latin v-, Germanic w-.) And what does window literally mean? (Wind-eye.)

45.4 caelum — the word under celestial, and under a ceiling painted like the sky

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caelum — "the sky," and also "the heavens."
One word for both, which is why Latin can be ambiguous in exactly the places theology cares about. When a Roman said caelum, the weather and the gods were the same place.
English took it directly as celestial, anything of the sky or the heavens, and in Celeste as a name. The blue called cerulean is from the related caeruleus, which you have already met as a colour.
Ceiling is very probably the same word, arriving through French — a vaulted ceiling in a great hall was painted to look like sky, and the name stuck to the surface. The etymology is not perfectly settled, and this book will say so rather than round it off.
Two more you may already carry: the equinox you met with nox, and cyan, which is Greek rather than Latin and arrived by its own road.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- caelum, caelī

- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What two things does caelum name? (The sky and the heavens.) What is something celestial? (Of the sky.) And how confident is the ceiling connection? (Probable, not certain — and the book says so.)

45.5 mare — the word that finishes Mediterranean and names every marine thing in English

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mare — "the sea."
You met its partner a moment ago. Terra is the land; mare is what is not land, and together they make the mediterrāneum — the sea in the middle of the earth. Two words you now hold explain a name most people use without reading.
The loans came thickly: marine, maritime, a mariner, a submarine (under the sea), and — through French — a mermaid, whose first half is this word.
And there is a cousin. Proto-Indo-European mori- also went down the Germanic road and gave English mere, an old word for a lake that survives in place names — Windermere, Grasmere. Small, standing water rather than an ocean, but the same ancestor.
So once again: a borrowed branch that sounds learned, and an inherited branch that sounds like a field in the north of England.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mare, maris
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does mare pair with to make Mediterranean? (Terra — the land.) Which English word is its inherited cousin? (Mere, a lake.) And which are loans? (Marine, maritime, mermaid.)

Chapter 46

Light, Shadow, and Going to Sleep

Modes: 🎧 voice (5) 🎧 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name light, shadow, star, moon and sleep in Latin, and use them to close a day the way a Latin speaker would.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

46.1 lūx — the root of lucid, translucent and Lucifer, and a cousin of English light itself

A new group of five words begins here. Nothing is assumed but the alphabet you already read.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūx — "light."
Proto-Indo-European *lewk- is one of the best-attested roots there is, and it reaches English from three directions at once.
Inherited: English light is the Germanic descendant. Same ancestor, no borrowing.
Borrowed from Latin: something lucid is clear as light; something translucent lets light through; to elucidate is to shed light on. And Lucifer is lūx plus ferre — the light-bringer, which was the Romans' name for the morning star long before it was anything else.
Borrowed from Greek: the same root gave Greek leukos, "white," which English carries in leukemia, named for white blood cells.

Three roads, one root — and the everyday word is the inherited one, which is the usual pattern in English rather than an accident here.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- lūx, lūcis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does Lucifer literally mean? (Light-bringer — the morning star.) Is English light inherited or borrowed? (Inherited.) And which Greek word for white is the same root? (Leukos — leukemia.)

46.2 umbra — and the reason a little shade is called an umbrella

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

umbra — "shade," or a shadow.
The English word that gives it away is umbrella — Italian ombrella, a little shade. It was a sunshade first and a rain shield only later, which is why a language of northern rain borrowed a word about southern sun.
To take umbrage is to take shade — offence, in the sense of being overshadowed. And sombre is sub plus umbra worn down through French: under shadow.
Astronomers kept the Latin bare. In an eclipse the umbra is the full shadow and the penumbra — paene, "almost" — is the partial one at its edge. That prefix is worth having: a peninsula is paene plus īnsula, an almost- island.
You have already met the shade of evening under a different word, when this book taught you vesper.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- umbra, umbrae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does umbrella literally mean? (A little shade.) What was it for first? (Sun, not rain.) And what does paene add in penumbra and peninsula? (Almost.)

46.3 stēlla — a cousin of English star, and the word inside constellation and disaster

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stēlla — "a star."
A cousin again. Proto-Indo-European h₂stḗr gave Latin stēlla, Greek astēr, and — by inheritance down the Germanic line — English star. Three branches, one ancestor.
From the Latin: something stellar is of the stars, and a constellation is a set of them standing together (con- plus stēlla).
From the Greek: an asterisk is a little star, astronomy is the naming of stars, and an asteroid is a star-shaped thing.
And one word that carries a whole worldview. Disaster is Italian disastro — dis-, "ill," plus astro, "star." A bad star. The word only makes sense in a world where the stars decide what happens to you, and English has kept using it for four hundred years after it stopped believing that.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- stēlla, stēllae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English star a cousin or a loan? (A cousin.) What does constellation literally say? (Stars standing together.) And what does disaster literally say? (An ill star.)

46.4 lūna — the same root as lux, worn down to mean 'the shining one'

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūna — "the moon."
Look at what it is made of, because you have just met the pieces. Lūna is *lewk-snā: the shining one. It is the same root as lūx, worn down until the join stopped showing.
You already know one place it lives. The Latin name for Monday is diēs Lūnae, the moon's day — which this book taught you before you could take it apart, and which is exactly what German Montag and English Monday say too, in their own words.
Lunar is the plain loan. Lunatic is the interesting one: Latin lūnāticus meant "moon-struck," from a belief that the moon's phases moved the mind. English has kept the word and dropped the theory, the same way it kept disaster.
English moon is the inherited Germanic cousin — not from lūna, but from a root meaning measure, because the moon is what a month is counted by.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- lūna, lūnae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is lūna built from? (Lūx — the shining one.) Which weekday is diēs Lūnae? (Monday.) And what did lunatic originally claim? (Moon-struck — the moon moved the mind.)

46.5 somnus — the word under insomnia and somnolent, and a cousin of Sanskrit svapna

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

somnus — "sleep."
The last word of this chapter, and the right one to end a day on.
The root is Proto-Indo-European *swep-, "to sleep," and it reaches a long way: Sanskrit svapna, "sleep" or "dream," is the same word, and Old English had sweven for a dream — a word that died out but is still in Chaucer.
Insomnia is in-, "not," plus somnus: no sleep. Someone somnolent is sleepy, and a somnambulist walks (ambulāre — you have that verb) in their sleep.
The Roman god of sleep is Somnus, and his Greek counterpart Hypnos gave English hypnosis. Two languages, two gods, one job.
Now put the chapter together. Lūx goes, umbra comes, the stēllae and the lūna appear, and then somnus. That is a Latin evening in five words.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- somnus, somnī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does insomnia literally say? (No sleep.) What does a somnambulist do? (Walks in their sleep — ambulāre.) And which Sanskrit word is somnus's cousin? (Svapna.)

Chapter 47

Salt, Honey, Milk, Egg, Fish

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five things on a Latin table, and I can use Grimm's Law to tell an inherited English cousin from a borrowed Latin loan.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

47.1 sāl — a cousin of English salt, and the word a Roman soldier's salary was named for

A new group of five words begins here. Nothing is assumed but the alphabet you already read.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sāl — "salt."
A cousin: Proto-Indo-European séh₂ls gave Latin sāl and Germanic saltom, which is English salt. And then Latin lent the same root back into English several more times, all through food.
A salad is herba salāta, salted greens. A sauce is salsa, the salted thing — and Spanish salsa is the very same word, arriving by a different road. A sausage is salsīcia, salted meat. Four English food words, one Latin root.
Then salary. Latin salārium was money paid to Roman soldiers, and the ancient explanation — that it was an allowance for salt — is what Pliny reports. Treat it as the standard account rather than as settled fact: no document actually records soldiers being paid in salt, and some historians think salārium simply meant a ration allowance generally. The word is certainly from sāl. What the money bought is less certain than the story suggests.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sāl, salis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English salt a cousin or a loan? (A cousin.) Name three loans from the same root. (Salad, sauce, sausage, salsa.) And how solid is the salary story? (Standard, not proven — the word is from sāl, the salt payment is Pliny's account.)

47.2 mel — the root of mellifluous and marmalade, and of molasses by way of Portuguese

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mel — "honey."
Proto-Indo-European *melit-, and it is one of those roots that turns up in languages that otherwise share very little — Greek meli, Hittite milit, and Latin mel, all honey.
Something mellifluous is mel plus fluere, flowing with honey — used of a voice. Mellow is probably from the same family, though the road is not clean.
Two food words came in through Portuguese, which is why they look nothing alike. Marmalade is marmelada, a quince paste — Portuguese marmelo, "quince," from Greek melimēlon, a honey-apple. And molasses is Portuguese melaço, the honey-like residue left when sugar is refined.

English honey itself is Germanic and comes from a root meaning "golden." Unrelated — a different language naming the same substance by a different property.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mel, mellis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does mellifluous literally say? (Flowing with honey.) Which two food words came through Portuguese? (Marmalade, molasses.) And is English honey related? (No — Germanic, from a root meaning golden.)

47.3 lac — the root of lactose, lettuce and, at one remove, of the Milky Way itself

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lac — "milk." The stem is lact-, which is where every English relative comes from.
Lactose is milk sugar; lactic acid is named from souring milk; to lactate is to produce it.
Then a word nobody expects. Lettuce is Latin lactūca — "the milky one," named for the white sap that bleeds from a cut lettuce stem. Pick one and you can watch the etymology happen.
And the Greek sibling is gala, stem galakt-, also "milk." The Greeks called the band of light across the night sky the galaxías kúklos, the milky circle — which Latin rendered as via lactea and English as the Milky Way. So galaxy and lactose are the same word, and the Milky Way is a translation.
You met stēlla and lūna a moment ago. This is the sky they are in.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- lac, lactis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is lettuce named for? (Its milky sap.) What does galaxy mean? (Milky — the same root, through Greek.) And what is the Milky Way a translation of? (Greek galaxías, Latin via lactea.)

47.4 ōvum — a cousin of English egg, with two sound changes that hide the relationship completely

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōvum — "an egg."
Ōvum and egg are cousins — the same Proto-Indo-European h₂ōwyóm — and they look nothing like each other, which makes this a good place to see how much sound change can hide.
The loans are transparent: something oval is egg-shaped, an ovary is where eggs are made, ovulation is their release.
The inherited word had a rougher time. Old English had æg, and it was losing ground when Norse settlers brought their own form, egg. For a while both were in use — Caxton complained in 1490 that a merchant asking for eggys in Kent was not understood, because there they said eyren. The Norse form won, and the native English one vanished.
So the everyday word is a Viking word that replaced a cousin of itself, and the learned words came from Latin. English is full of this.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ōvum, ōvī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Are ōvum and egg related? (Yes — cousins, heavily disguised.) What was the native English word? (Æg, plural eyren.) And why do we say egg? (It is the Norse form, and it won.)

47.5 piscis — and the single clearest demonstration in this book of the sound law linking Latin to English

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piscis — "a fish."
Keep this word. It is the cleanest single demonstration in this book of how a Latin word and an English one can be the same word.
Latin p-iscis. English f-ish. Same word.
The change is not random. Around two thousand years ago the Germanic branch shifted every inherited p to f, and it did so without exception. That is Grimm's Law, and you have already met it once, in the family chapter:

- pater → father
- piscis → fish

Two pairs, one rule. Once you have it, you can run it yourself: Latin plēnus against English full, Latin prō against for.
The loans came separately and kept the p: Pisces the constellation, something piscine, a piscina. So English holds both the inherited form and the borrowed one, and now you can tell which is which by looking at a single letter.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- piscis, piscis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What sound does Latin p correspond to in inherited English words? (F — Grimm's Law.) Give two more pairs. (Pater/father, plēnus/full.) And why does Pisces keep its p? (It is a loan, not inherited.)

47.6 Attested, or agreed on

From memory: the reply to grātiās, and the one-word answer to how are you. Then hold the question this lesson asks of both — would a Roman have said it in that job?

You'll want to know: three shelves, not one

quōmodo	fully classical, in Cicero and Seneca — "by what manner"
bene	attested standing alone in Plautus, though in a drinking toast
nihil est	real words, real texts — but never attested answering thanks

ignōsce mihi belongs on the first shelf: a plain imperative of ignōscere, "to overlook, pardon." Beside it Latin kept an impersonal form with no "you" in it at all — paenitet mē, "it grieves me" — which is where English gets penitent and repent.

The middle shelf is the interesting one. bene on its own is genuinely attested; what is not attested is bene answering how are you, because that exchange is itself a modern habit. A phrase can be real and its job modern, and those are two different claims.

Why it's said this way

tū is one person, vōs is more than one, and in Classical Latin that is the whole of it. There is no formal-against-familiar dimension — addressing one powerful person as vōs had not started yet.

It started in Late Latin, and French vous is that habit's direct descendant. German solved the same problem separately and reached for a different pronoun altogether. So the polite plural is real, and it is younger than the Latin you are reading.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ignōsce mihi, then the impersonal one beside it
- nihil est — then say what is modern about it
- tū to one person, vōs to several, with no change of respect
- quōmodo, and which two words fused to make it

Before you move on

Which of the three is fully classical in its job? (Quōmodo.) What is modern about nihil est? (The job — no text shows it answering thanks.) Where is bene attested alone? (A drinking toast in Plautus.) And what did vōs mean to a Roman? (More than one person — no politeness in it.)

Chapter 48

Nescio, Male, Malus, Sed, Aut

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I do not know, that something went badly, and I can set one thing against another or offer a choice between two.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

48.1 nesciō — and the rule the whole chapter turns on: nōn stands in front of the verb

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say piscis — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say sāl — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say bonum māne — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say Hesperia — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say caput — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say manus — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nesciō — "I do not know."
Take it apart. It is ne- ("not") welded onto sciō, the verb the eight-verb chapter gave you. Latin fused the negative into the verb once and kept it: nesciō is one word, and it is the word a Roman actually said.
Now the rule that unlocks everything else. For every other verb, Latin puts nōn — the word your very first lesson taught you as "no" — immediately in front of the finite verb:

- nōn valeō — "I am not well."
- nōn intellegō — "I do not understand."
- nōn videō — "I do not see."

That is the whole of it. No auxiliary, no change to the verb, no word order to learn. You have had nōn since your first day and every one of these verbs since the eight-verb chapter, and until now nothing told you that you could put them together.
English nescience is nesciō borrowed whole. Nice is the same word by a long road: Latin nescius ("ignorant") became Old French nice ("silly"), and seven centuries of drift turned an insult into a compliment.

Grammar Lens: non goes in front of the verb

State it once, plainly, because everything else in this tranche leans on it.

nōn + a finite verb = the negative of that verb.

- nōn valeō — I am not well.
- nōn intellegō — I do not understand.
- nōn sciō — I do not know (and nesciō is the word a Roman preferred).
- nōn audiō — I do not hear.

Nothing else changes. Latin does not add an auxiliary, does not move the verb and does not have a second negative word to pair it with. One word, in front.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nesciō, nescīre
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How does Latin negate an ordinary verb? (nōn immediately before it.) Say "I do not understand." (Nōn intellegō.) And what two words are inside nesciō? (Ne- and sciō.)

48.2 male — the other end of the scale bene has had to itself all along

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say nesciō — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say lūna — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say bonum vesperum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say merīdiēs — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say manus — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say vēr — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

male — "badly."
The bene lesson gave you bene, "well," and left you with half a scale. This is the other half, and it is built the same way: an adverb ending in -e, formed from an adjective: malus, "bad", inherited from Proto-Italic malos* (EtymDB 2.1), whose origin further back is uncertain.

> Valeō. — I fare well. Male valeō. — I fare badly. (Or, more usually: nōn valeō.)

English keeps male- as a prefix that means "wrongly": malice, malady, malign, malpractice, malfunction. Malaria is Italian mal'aria, "bad air" — what people thought caused it before the mosquito was known. Dismal is diēs malī, "bad days," the unlucky days of the medieval calendar.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- male
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is the opposite of bene? (Male.) What two Latin words are inside dismal? (Diēs malī — bad days.)

48.3 focus · mare · somnus — hearth, sea, sleep

> Three words, one from the end of each of the last three chapters: the hearth, the sea, and sleep. Say all three before reading on.

You'll want to know: each one is a shelf of English

Latin	what it named	what English took focus	the hearth	focus — the point a lens gathers to mare	the sea	marine, maritime, mariner, submarine
somnus	sleep	insomnia, somnolent

focus is the odd one. English did not borrow the fireplace; it borrowed the idea of the one point a house is arranged around and handed it to optics. Meanwhile spoken Latin took the other road and let focus drift from the fireplace to the fire itself, which is where the Romance words for fire come from.

mare and terra together make mediterrāneum, the sea in the middle of the earth — two words you hold explaining a name most people never read. And somnus goes back to a root that reached Sanskrit svapna and Old English sweven, a word for a dream that Chaucer still used.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three words, then their three meanings
- what focus named first, and what it names now
- the two words inside mediterrāneum
- two English words built on somnus

Before you move on

What did focus name in a Roman house? (The hearth.) Which two words make mediterrāneum? (Mare and terra.) What does somnus mean, and which English word denies it? (Sleep — insomnia.) And which of the three drifted, in speech, to mean fire? (Focus.)

48.4 malus — the adjective under male, and the word Rome punned on for the apple

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say male — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say stēlla — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say merīdiēs — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say habeō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say vēr — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say aqua — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

malus — "bad."
The adjective that male was cut from. It changes its ending to match its noun, exactly as bonus does in bonam noctem: malus (m.), mala (f.), malum (n.).
Now the coincidence that changed a story. Latin also had mālum, "apple," borrowed from Greek mēlon — a different word, with a long ā, and in writing without macrons the two look identical. Genesis names no fruit at all: it says only "the fruit of the tree." When Latin translators wrote of the tree of mālum, the pun with malum, "evil," was there for the taking, and medieval art took it.
Treat that as the standard account rather than as settled fact: the pun is real and the timing is right, and no single document records anybody deciding it. English malevolent, malefactor and malcontent are all malus.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- malus, mala, malum
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does malus mean, and what does mālum mean? (Bad; apple.) What separates them in writing? (The macron — vowel length.)

48.5 sed — the word that sets one thing against another

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say malus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say umbra — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say eō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say vesper — vespere — sērus — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say aqua — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say pānis — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sed — "but."
You have met its sentence already. The propediem tē vidēbō lesson quoted Cicero's own letter, trimmed to "…ut spērō, propediem tē vidēbō". In the letter the line opens with this word: "Sed, ut spērō, propediem tē vidēbō" — "But, as I hope, I shall see you before long." A real sentence by a real Roman, and now you have its first word too. Sed joins two statements and marks the second as a correction or a contrast:

> Nōn valeō, sed nōn male valeō. — I am not well, but I am not badly off.

Here is the strange part. Sed is one of the commonest words in surviving Latin prose and not one Romance language kept it. Spanish and Italian took magis ("more") for mas and ma; French took mais from the same magis; Portuguese mas likewise. A word Cicero could not write a page without vanished completely.
Where sed came from is uncertain; Lewis & Short thinks it most likely an old ablative of the reflexive stem se-, "by itself, apart".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sed
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does sed mean? (But.) Which Roman did you first meet it from? (Cicero, in the propediem lesson.) Did any daughter language keep it? (No — they all took magis instead.)

48.6 aut — and the second or, which asks a different question

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say sed — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say lūx — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say bonum vesperum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back

- Recall: say merīdiēs — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say pānis — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say Iānuārius — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aut — "or."
The word that lets you offer a choice, which until now you could not do:

> Aquam aut vīnum? — Water or wine?

Latin has two words here and they are not interchangeable. Aut offers an exclusive choice: one or the other, not both. It is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h₂ewti*, "on the other hand" (EtymDB 2.1). Vel offers an indifferent one: either will do. Vel is literally an old command form of the verb "to want" — "choose, if you like" — and that verb is the next chapter's.
Logicians still use the distinction. The inclusive-or of Boolean algebra is called vel after the Latin, and it is inclusive precisely because vel was; exclusive-or is aut … aut. A grammatical nicety of a dead language is sitting inside every computer you have ever used.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- aut
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which or excludes, and which does not? (Aut excludes; vel does not.) What is vel literally? (An old command form of "to want" — choose if you like.)

Chapter 49

Possum, Volo, Qui, Et, Quando

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I can do and what I want, join two statements, and put a when-clause or a who-clause after a noun.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

49.1 possum — potis plus sum, and the verb that will not sit still

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say aut — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say nesciō — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say salvē (post merīdiem) — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say salvē / salvēte — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say pānis — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say Iānuārius — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

possum — "I am able, I can."
Two words in a coat. Potis meant "able," and Latin bolted it onto sum, the verb the eight-verb chapter gave you. Where sum begins with s, the t of potis flattens into it — pot-sum becomes possum — and where it does not, the t survives:

person	form	built from
I can	possum	pot- + sum
you can	potes	pot- + es
he/she can	potest	pot- + est
we can	possumus	pot- + sumus
they can	possunt	pot- + sunt

What follows possum is an infinitive, which is the form every verb in this book is already stored under: possum vidēre, "I can see." Nōn possum vidēre, "I cannot see," using last chapter's rule.
English potent, possible, potential and omnipotent are all potis; so is power, by way of French pouvoir.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- possum, posse
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What two words are inside possum? (Potis and sum.) What form follows it? (The infinitive.) Say "I cannot see." (Nōn possum vidēre.)

49.2 volō — and the root inside voluntary, benevolent and will itself

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say possum — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say male — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say salvē — bonum vesperum — bonam noctem — valē — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say sum — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say medius diēs — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say hōra — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

volō — "I want, I wish."
The word that turns everything you own into a request. Like possum, it takes an infinitive:

> Volō bibere. — I want to drink. Nōn volō dormīre. — I do not want to sleep.

Its forms are irregular and worth hearing once: volō, vīs, vult, volumus, vultis, volunt. The infinitive is velle, not volere — an old form that survived because the verb was too common to regularise.
The root is Proto-Indo-European welh$_1$-, "to choose." English inherited it directly as will — a blood cousin, not a loan — and borrowed it back from Latin many times over: voluntary, volition, benevolent ("well-wishing"), malevolent (with last chapter's male), and voluptuous.
And you have already met its imperative. Vel, "or," from the last lesson of the denying chapter, is literally volō telling you to choose.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- volō, velle
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What form follows volō? (The infinitive.) Which English word is a blood cousin rather than a loan? (Will.) And where have you already met volō's imperative? (In *vel, "or.")

49.3 quī — the commonest word in Latin prose, and the one that joins two sentences into one

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say volō — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say malus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say sum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say habeō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say medius diēs — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say hōra — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quī, quae, quod — "who, which, that."
This is the single most common word in surviving Latin prose, and it does one job: it hangs a second statement onto a noun in the first.

> Amīcus quī venit. — The friend who comes. Liber quem legō. — The book which I am reading.

Three forms, because it agrees with the noun it hangs on: quī for a masculine one, quae for a feminine one, quod for a neuter one.

You already know its relatives. Quid ("what") from the wellbeing exchange and quis ("who") are the question words built on the same Proto-Indo-European stem *kwi-. And Grimm's Law — the piscis law, p to f — does kw to hw as well, which is why English who, what, which and why are inherited cousins of this word rather than borrowings from it. The spelling wh- is the old hw- with its letters swapped.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- quī, quae, quod
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does quī do to two sentences? (Joins them — hangs the second on a noun in the first.) Are English who and what cousins or loans? (Cousins, by Grimm's Law.)

49.4 et — and the enclitic -que, which does the same job glued to the back of a word

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say quī — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say sed — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say caelum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say eō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance

- Recall: say hōra — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say vīgintī annōs nātus sum — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

et — "and."
The plainest word in this book, and the corpus went forty-seven chapters without teaching it.

> Aqua et vīnum. — Water and wine. Pater et māter. — Father and mother.

Latin has a second way of saying it, and a reader meets it constantly: -que, glued onto the back of the second word rather than standing between the two.

> Senātus populusque Rōmānus — "The Senate and the Roman people," the SPQR on every Roman standard. The -que is that fourth letter.

-que is Proto-Indo-European *kwe, an enclitic Sanskrit kept as ca and Greek as te. Et went the other way: it is Spanish y, French et, Italian e and Portuguese e, and every Romance daughter kept it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- et
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Two ways to say and in Latin? (Et, and -que glued to the back.)
What does the Q in SPQR stand for? (-que, "and.")

49.5 quandō — as a question and as the hinge of a clause

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say et — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say aut — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say mare — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say veniō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say vīgintī annōs nātus sum — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say tempestās — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quandō — "when."
Built on the same *kwo- stem as quī and quid, three lessons back. It does two jobs.
As a question: Quandō venīs? — "When are you coming?"
As a hinge, joining two statements in time: Quandō veniō, videō — "When I come, I see."
Every Romance daughter kept it unchanged: Spanish cuándo, Italian and Portuguese quando, French quand. English quandary is often attached to it and the connection is not established — the word appears in the sixteenth century from nowhere obvious, and quandō is a guess rather than an etymology. This book will always tell you when a resemblance is only a resemblance.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- quandō

- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Two jobs for quandō? (Asking when, and joining two statements in time.) Is English quandary from it? (Not established — a guess, not an etymology.)

Chapter 50

Hic, Iste, Ille, Is, Ibi

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can point at something near me, something near you and something over there, refer back to a person already named, and say that a thing is there.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

50.1 hic — the near point of a three-way system Spanish still keeps

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say quandō — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say possum — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say lūx — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say veniō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say pluit — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

- Recall: say ūndecim — vīgintī — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hic, haec, hoc — "this," the one near me.
Latin points three ways, and this is the first of the three. Hic is the thing in the speaker's own hand or reach.

> Hic liber. — This book (here, mine).

Three forms because it agrees with its noun: hic for a masculine one, haec for a feminine one, hoc for a neuter one — the same three-way agreement quī showed you last chapter.
The system survived. Spanish still points three ways — este, ese, aquel — and it is Latin's system, arriving through a different set of words. Italian, French and Portuguese all collapsed to two. So a Spanish speaker meeting hic, iste, ille is meeting the shape of their own grammar in its original three pieces.
Hic itself is inherited, usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European pointing word for "this, here" (EtymDB 2.1).
English ad hoc is hoc, "for this"; a hic jacet is what an old gravestone says: "here lies."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hic, haec, hoc
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How many ways does Latin point? (Three.) Which one is hic? (The one near me.) Which modern language kept all three? (Spanish.)

50.2 iste — the middle point, and the one Latin used to sneer with

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say hic — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say volō — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say umbra — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say dīcō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say pluit — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say ūndecim — vīgintī — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iste, ista, istud — "that," the one near you.
The middle term, and the one with an attitude. Iste is literally "that of yours," and Roman orators used it to keep a thing at arm's length. Cicero's speeches are full of iste meaning "that man of yours" with a curl of the lip — the word does the sneering, and no adjective is needed.

> Iste liber. — That book of yours.

Then the words moved. Spanish este ("this") is from iste, not from hic — the middle term slid down into the near slot when hic dropped out, and ipse slid in behind it to make ese. So Spanish still points three ways and does it with a different three words, which is a good demonstration that a SYSTEM can outlive every word in it. Iste itself is built from is, "he, that", with a pointing ending -te (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- iste, ista, istud
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Where is iste? (Near you.) What tone can it carry? (Contempt — Cicero's "that man of yours".) Which Spanish word came from it? (Este — and it moved slot.)

50.3 ille — the far point, and the word that became the Romance article

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say iste — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say quī — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say stēlla — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say dīcō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say ūndecim — vīgintī — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say canis — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ille, illa, illud — "that," the one over there, away from both of us. The far term, and the most consequential word in this chapter — because it did not stay a demonstrative.

Latin had no article (this book's inventory records that as a demand it never states). Vulgar Latin invented one, and it invented it out of ille. Say ille often enough and unstressed, in front of a noun, and it wears down:

Latin	wore down to
ille	Italian il, French le, Spanish el
illa	Italian and Spanish la, French la
illī	Spanish ellos, French ils

The same word became the definite article and the third-person pronoun in every Romance language. Your very first lesson taught you that Latin's endings carry what other languages carry in extra words; here is the reverse motion, a demonstrative flattening into an extra word.

Ille goes back to Old Latin olle (Lewis & Short, EtymDB 2.1); beyond that its origin is uncertain.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ille, illa, illud
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Where is ille? (Over there, away from both.) What did it become? (The definite article and the third-person pronoun of every Romance language.)

50.4 is — the pronoun Latin does not really have, doing the job anyway

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say ille — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

- Recall: say et — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say lūna — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say videō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say ūndecim — vīgintī — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say canis — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

is, ea, id — "he, she, it."
Latin has no dedicated third-person pronoun. What it has is is, ea, id — a demonstrative with no deixis left in it, neither near nor far, pressed into the job. Hic points at something; is merely refers back to something already named.

> Amīcus venit. Is bene valet. — A friend is coming. He is well.

Its neuter, id, is a word English took whole: Freud's das Es was rendered into English as the id, Latin for "it." Identical and identity are idem, "the same one." And an idiom is not from this at all — that is Greek idios, "one's own," and the resemblance is a coincidence.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- is, ea, id
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Does Latin have a real third-person pronoun? (No — is, ea, id does the job.) Where does Freud's id come from? (Latin *id, "it".)

50.5 ibi — the place word the corpus has gone fifty chapters without

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say is — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say quandō — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say somnus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say videō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say canis — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say viridis — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ibi — "there."
Every demonstrative in this chapter has an adverb beside it, and this is the pair that matters most: hīc ("here") and ibi ("there").

> Canis hīc est. Fēlēs ibi est. — The dog is here. The cat is there.

Note the macron. The pronoun is hic, short; the adverb "here" is hīc, long. Same four letters, different words, and only the vowel length tells them apart — which is the whole argument for writing macrons, made once more.
Ibi survives into Italian ivi and, worn down almost to nothing, into the French y of il y a — "there is." A single letter of modern French is this Latin word. Ibi is built on the pronoun stem of is, "he, that" (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ibi
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Say "the dog is here" and "the cat is there." (Canis hīc est. Fēlēs ibi est.) What separates the pronoun hic from the adverb hīc? (Vowel length — the macron.)

Chapter 51

Amicus, Pecunia, Medicus, Miles, Epistula

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a friend, money, a doctor, a soldier and a letter — five words a Roman town could not be described without.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

51.1 amīcus — from the verb to love, and the word the bread lesson pointed at and did not give

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say ibi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say hic — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say sāl — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say sciō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance

- Recall: say viridis — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say quid agis? — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amīcus — "a friend."
The bread lesson traced pānis to companion — the one you share bread with — and to "the friendship-word every Romance daughter still shares." This is that word, and it took forty-one chapters to arrive. It is built straight onto amō, "I love," from the amō lesson: a friend is one who is loved, and nothing more than that. And its negative is the interesting half. In-amīcus becomes inimīcus, "not-friend," and inimīcus is English enemy. The most hostile word in the language is the friendliest one with two letters in front of it.
Spanish amigo, Italian amico, Portuguese amigo and French ami are all this word unchanged. English borrowed amicable, amity and amiable from it, and took enemy from its opposite by way of French.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- amīcus, amīcī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What verb is amīcus built on? (Amō, I love.) What is inimīcus, and what English word is it? (Not-friend; enemy.)

51.2 pecūnia — and the cattle it is named after

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say amīcus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

- Recall: say iste — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say mel — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say dō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say ut valēs? — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say valeō — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pecūnia — "money."
The word is a fossil of what wealth used to be. Pecū meant "cattle," and a Roman's pecūnia was originally his livestock. When Rome began to strike coins it stamped an ox on them, and the name of the herd became the name of the money.
The English family is larger than it looks:

- pecuniary — to do with money, straight from pecūnia.
- impecunious — having none.
- peculiar — from pecūlium, the private property a Roman slave or son was allowed to keep. "One's own" narrowed to "odd" over the centuries.
- fee — a Germanic cousin, not a loan: Old English feoh meant both cattle and property, from the same Proto-Indo-European root.

The same picture is behind English capital, from caput — a head of cattle — and caput is the first body word this book taught.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pecūnia, pecūniae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What did pecūnia originally mean? (Cattle.) Is English fee a cousin or a loan? (A cousin.) And which body word tells the same story? (Caput — capital, a head of cattle.)

51.3 medicus — from measuring, not from healing

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say pecūnia — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say ille — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say lac — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say cōgitō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say salvē — quid agis? — valeō — valē — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say quid tibi nōmen est? / mihi nōmen est... — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

medicus — "a doctor."
Not, as you might expect, from a word for healing. Medicus is from medeor, "I attend to," and behind that is Proto-Indo-European med-, "to measure, to take the appropriate measures." A doctor, to a Roman, is someone who works out the right amount.
The root spread widely on that meaning:

- meditate — to measure a thing over in the mind.

- moderate and modest — kept within measure.
- mete, as in "mete out" — an inherited English cousin, not a loan.
- remedy — re- plus medeor, attending to a thing again.

Every Romance language kept the word: Spanish médico, Italian medico, Portuguese médico. English took medicine, medical and medic from the same family, and French gave us medico back as slang.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- medicus, medicī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does the root behind medicus really mean? (To measure, to take the right measures.) Name two English words from it that are not about health. (Moderate, modest, meditate.)

51.4 mīles — the noun every Latin narrative turns on

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say medicus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say is — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say ōvum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back

- Recall: say legō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say quid tibi nōmen est? / mihi nōmen est... — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say puerō nōmen est Mārcus / Mārcō — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mīles — "a soldier."
The noun a reader of Latin meets on the first page of almost any history, and one this book went fifty chapters without.
Note the shape: nominative mīles, genitive mīlitis. The -t- that appears in the genitive is the real stem, and every English derivative is built on the genitive rather than the nominative — military, militia, militant, militarise. That is a general habit worth having: when an English word from Latin looks nothing like the Latin nominative, look at the genitive.
Where the word came from is not settled. The old suggestion is mille, "thousand" — a soldier as one of a thousand-strong unit — and it is a guess with no evidence behind it. Some scholars propose an Etruscan borrowing. Treat the etymology as open.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mīles, mīlitis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which form do the English derivatives come from? (The genitive, mīlitis — hence military.) Is the etymology settled? (No — the mille story is a guess.)

51.5 epistula — a Greek word Rome borrowed, and the thing Cicero wrote in his letters

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say mīles — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say ibi — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say piscis — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say intellegō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say puerō nōmen est Mārcus / Mārcō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say volup est convēnisse — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

epistula — "a letter."
The farewell lessons quoted two of Cicero's letters and never gave you the word for one. Here it is, and it is Greek: epistolē, "a thing sent to somebody," from epi- ("to, upon") plus stellō ("I send"). Rome borrowed the object and the word together.
The same stellō is inside apostle — apo-stolos, "one sent away" — so an epistle and an apostle are the same verb with opposite prefixes, which is why the letters of the apostles are called epistles twice over.
scrībō, from the verbs of mind, is the verb this noun needed.
Epistulam scrībō: "I am writing a letter." The verbs of mind gave you the writing and the propediem lesson gave you the reading, and this is the thing itself.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- epistula, epistulae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What language is epistula from? (Greek.) What do epistle and apostle share? (The verb *stellō, send — with opposite prefixes.)

Chapter 52

Ubi, Cur, Quia, Meus, Tuus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask where and why, answer with a because-clause, and say that a thing is mine or yours.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

52.1 ubi — the question the quōmodo lesson left half-finished

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say epistula — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say amīcus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say nesciō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say nesciō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say tē volup est convēnisse — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

- Recall: say quid tibi nōmen est? — volup est convēnisse — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ubi — "where."
The quōmodo lesson gave you "how," and stopped. This is the other half of the pair every beginner needs, and the corpus went fifty-one chapters without it.

> Ubi est liber? — Where is the book? Ibi. — There.
> (Last chapter's word, finally with a question to answer.)

Like quī and quandō, it is built on the kwo- stem. Latin also has quō ("to where") and unde ("from where") — Latin distinguishes three directions where English says only where, and this is the resting one. Ubique is "everywhere," and English ubiquitous is that word: being in every where at once. Spanish donde and French où both descend from ubi with dē in front of it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ubi
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which earlier question word is ubi the pair of? (Quōmodo, how.)
What does ubique mean, and what English word is it?
(Everywhere; ubiquitous.)

52.2 cūr — and the two words that answer it

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say ubi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say pecūnia — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say male — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say capiō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say tē volup est convēnisse — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say tū / vōs — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūr — "why."
The third of this chapter's question words, and the one that opens the only question a learner cannot fake an answer to.

> Cūr nōn venīs? — Why are you not coming? (with the nescio lesson's rule.)

Cūr is an older quor, the same *kwo- stem again — quī, quandō, ubi, cūr, quid, quis, all one family. Recognise the qu- and you can spot a Latin question word without knowing which one it is.
And like sed, it left no descendant. Spanish asks ¿por qué?, Italian perché, French pourquoi, all rebuilt from per or pro plus quid — "for what." Latin's own word for why did not survive its own daughters.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- cūr
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What do quī, quandō, ubi and cūr share? (The kwo-* stem — Latin's question family.) Did any Romance language keep cūr? (No

— all rebuilt it from per + quid.)

52.3 quia — the answer cūr asks for

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say cūr — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say medicus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say malus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say rogō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say tū / vōs — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say nihil est — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quia — "because."
The word that completes the pair. Cūr asks; quia answers, and it hangs a whole second statement onto the first:

> Cūr nōn venīs? Quia nōn possum. — Why are you not coming? Because I cannot.

That sentence uses four things this tranche has given you — cūr, quia, the nōn in front of a verb, and possum — and nothing else. It is the first question-and-reason exchange this book can build.
Latin has three words here and they are not quite the same: quia states a plain cause, quod states one the hearer already accepts, and quoniam ("since now") states one both parties take for granted. A reader meets all three. Start with quia.
Quia is built on the stem of quis, "who, what", inherited from Proto-Indo-European *$k^w is$ (EtymDB 2.1); the exact form behind it is disputed.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- quia
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Answer cūr nōn venīs? using this chapter and the last two. (Quia nōn possum.) How many Latin words mean because? (Three — quia, quod, quoniam.)

52.4 meus — the possessive the name lesson did without

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say quia — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say mīles — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say sed — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say adiuvō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say tū / vōs — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say nihil est — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

meus, mea, meum — "my."
The name-exchange lesson taught you to say mihi nōmen est, "the name is to me," and called it the genuinely classical way to give your name. That is Latin's dative of possession, and it is why this word waited so long: for a name, a Roman preferred the case to the adjective.
For everything else, the adjective is what you want, and it agrees with what is owned rather than with the owner:

> liber meus — my book (masculine, so meus) epistula mea — my letter (feminine, so mea)

That is the opposite of English, where my never changes. It matches French mon livre / ma lettre and Spanish mi only in part — Spanish flattened the gender out of mi and kept it in mío.
Meus is built on the stem of mē, "me", inherited from Proto-Indo-European (e)me-* (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- meus, mea, meum
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does meus agree with, the owner or the thing owned? (The thing owned.) What did the name exchange use instead for a name? (Mihi nōmen est — the dative of possession.)

52.5 tuus — and the pair of forms the tū / vōs lesson promised

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say meus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say epistula — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say aut — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say amō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say nihil est — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say propediem tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tuus, tua, tuum — "your," to one person.
The tū / vōs lesson made a point of it: in Classical Latin the difference is number only, with no politeness in it at all. This is tū's possessive, and it inherits that: tuus is not familiar or rude; it means only that the thing belongs to one person. For several, Latin says vester.

> Quid tibi nōmen est? — the name question, with tibi, the dative. Liber tuus. — Your book, with the adjective.

Tibi and tuus are the same pronoun by two routes, which is worth hearing once: the case form and the adjective come from one word, and Latin lets you choose.
Spanish tu, Italian tuo, French ton and Portuguese teu all descend from this — and every one of them acquired the politeness dimension that Latin's had not got.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tuus, tua, tuum
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is tuus familiar or polite? (Neither — Classical Latin marks number only.) Which earlier word is its case-form twin? (Tibi.)

Chapter 53

Iterum, Magister, Discipulus, Schola, Liber

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for something to be said again, and name the teacher, the pupil, the school and the book.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

53.1 iterum — and the repair move this book could not make

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say tuus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say ubi — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say possum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say audiō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say propediem tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

- Recall: say crās tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iterum — "again."
This one word closes the largest hole in this book. The quaesō lesson gave you "please"; the eight-verb chapter gave you dīcō, "I say." Fifty-two chapters went by without a way of joining them, and here it is:

> Iterum, quaesō. — Again, please. Quid dīcis? — What are you saying? Lentē, quaesō. — Slowly, please.

That is a repair: the move you make when you did not catch what somebody said. Every language teaches it in its first week, and this book — which could greet, thank, apologise and say please within four chapters — could not until now ask anyone to repeat anything.
Iterum is built on the same i- stem as is from the pointing chapter, with an old comparative suffix: literally "the other of the two," hence "a second time." English iterate and reiteration are loans from it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- iterum
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How do you ask a Roman to say it again? (Iterum, quaesō.)
Which two earlier lessons did the parts come from? (The quaesō lesson, and the eight-verb chapter for dīcō.)

53.2 magister — the greater one, against minister, the lesser

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say iterum — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say cūr — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say volō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say dormiō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say propediem tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say crās tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

magister — "a teacher, a master."
The word is one half of a matched pair and the other half is minister. Magis means "more," minus means "less," and both take the same old contrastive suffix -ter: the greater one and the lesser one (Lewis & Short). A Roman magister outranks a Roman minister, and a modern government minister is still, etymologically, a servant.
The English family is enormous, and all of it is one Latin word: master, mister, Mr, mistress, Mrs, Miss, magistrate, maestro, magisterial — and Spanish maestro, French maître, Italian maestro. And magis itself you have met: The sed lesson recorded that sed died and magis became Spanish mas and Italian ma, "but." The same "more" is inside both.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- magister, magistrī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is the pair magister belongs to? (Minister — greater and lesser.) Which earlier word is magis also behind? (The Romance *but — Spanish mas, Italian ma.)

53.3 discipulus — from learning, and the reason discipline means what it does

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say magister — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say quia — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say quī — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say sedeō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say crās tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say quōmodo — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

discipulus — "a pupil."
Built on discō, "I learn," which is itself a reduplicated form of the same root as doceō, "I teach." Learning and teaching are one word split in two, and the pupil is named for the learning half.
Then the word that grew out of it. Disciplīna originally meant no more than "teaching, instruction" — what a discipulus receives. Only later did it narrow to the training that keeps order, and later still to punishment. English discipline carries all three senses at once, and a disciple is the discipulus of the Latin Bible.

Note the shape against the last lesson's. Magister and discipulus are the two ends of a Roman classroom, and Latin names one for rank and the other for what he does.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- discipulus, discipulī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What verb is discipulus built on? (Discō, I learn.) What did disciplīna first mean? (Teaching — not punishment.)

53.4 schola — a Greek word that first meant leisure

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say discipulus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say meus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say et — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say stō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say quōmodo — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say bene — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

schola — "a school."
Greek, and the meaning has turned completely over. Scholē meant leisure — spare time, the opposite of work. Only a person with leisure could spend it on learned discussion, so the word moved to the discussion, then to the place the discussion happened, then to the building children are sent to.
A word that meant free time now means the place you must be at nine. Latin borrowed it as schola, and every daughter kept it: Spanish escuela, Italian scuola, French école, Portuguese escola — and each of them props up the sc- with a vowel in front, exactly the way Portuguese props up escrever. English school, scholar and scholastic are loans; schedule is not, and the resemblance is a coincidence.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- schola, scholae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What did scholē originally mean? (Leisure.) Why do Spanish and French put a vowel in front of sc-? (They prop up the cluster — escuela, école.)

53.5 liber — and the bark it was written on

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say schola — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say tuus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say quandō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say ambulō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say quōmodo — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say bene — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

liber — "a book."
The word for the thing this whole book is trying to let you read, and it arrives here, in the second-to-last chapter written so far.
Liber first meant the inner bark of a tree — the surface Romans wrote on before papyrus was easy to get. The material became the text and the text became the book, the same journey English paper made from papyrus and volume made from volvō, "I roll," because a Roman book was a scroll.
Watch out for the homograph. Līber with a long ī means "free," and gives English liberty, liberal and deliver. Liber with a short i is the book. Two different words, four identical letters, and only the macron between them — the same lesson hic and hīc taught in the pointing chapter.
Spanish libro, Italian libro, French livre, Portuguese livro. English library and libretto ("little book") are loans.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- liber, librī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What did liber first mean? (Tree bark — the writing surface.)
What separates liber from līber? (The macron — book against free.)

Chapter 54

Edo, Bibo, Oculus, Auris, Pes

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I eat and drink, and name the eye, the ear and the foot beside the head and hand I already had.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

54.1 edō — and the infinitive that collides with to be

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say liber — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say iterum — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say hic — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say currō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say bene — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say diēs — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

edō — "I eat."
Fifty-three chapters gave you bread, salt, honey, milk, eggs, fish, water and wine, and no verb to do anything with them. Here it is.
The root is Proto-Indo-European h₁ed-, and English eat is an inherited cousin, not a loan — the same relationship piscis and fish have, by the same Grimm's Law. So are etch and, at a distance, fret (fra-etan, "to eat away").
And then a trap worth meeting once. The infinitive of edō is ēsse, and the infinitive of sum, "to be," is esse. Four identical letters again. Only the long ē separates eating from being, and only in speech; a Roman reader took it from the sentence.
Edible and comestible are loans from this verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- edō, esse
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English eat a cousin or a loan? (A cousin.) What two verbs share the spelling esse? (Edō and sum — separated by vowel length.)

54.2 bibō — the verb inside beverage, bib and imbibe

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say edō — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say magister — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say iste — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say aperiō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say diēs — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say nox — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bibō — "I drink."
The other half of the pair, and the one that finally does something with the aqua and vīnum of the bread-and-wine lesson.

> Aquam bibō. — I drink water. Aquam aut vīnum bibō? — Do I drink water or wine? (with the aut of the denying chapter.)

The form is odd and the oddity is old: bibō is a reduplicated verb, the root syllable said twice, from Proto-Indo-European peh₃-. Latin regularly turns that initial p into b here, which is why bibō looks nothing like Greek pīnō although they are the same word.
English beverage is Old French bevrage, from bibere; imbibe and bibulous are direct loans; and a baby's bib is probably from the same verb, the thing you drink over — probably, not certainly.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bibō, bibere
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Say "I drink water." (Aquam bibō.) Is bib certainly from bibō? (Probably, not certainly.)

54.3 oculus — and the eye already hiding inside a word you know

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say bibō — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say discipulus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say ille — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say claudō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say nox — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say salvē / salvēte — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oculus — "an eye."
The third body word this book has, after caput and manus.
English eye is an inherited cousin — Proto-Indo-European h₃ek^w- gave Latin oculus and Germanic augon, which is eye. And the loans are everywhere: ocular, binoculars, monocle, oculist.
The best of them is inoculate. Latin inoculāre was a gardening word: to graft a bud — an oculus, an "eye" — into a plant.
Eighteenth-century physicians borrowed the gardener's word for grafting a little disease into a person, and that is why an injection is named after an eye.
Italian occhio and Spanish ojo both descend from it, by the same -cl- to -cchi- change Italian makes on occhio.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- oculus, oculī

- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English eye a cousin or a loan? (A cousin.) Why is inoculate named after an eye? (It was a gardening word — grafting a bud.)

54.4 auris — and the reason a Roman listened by obeying

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say oculus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say schola — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say is — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say ferō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say salvē / salvēte — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say avē / avēte — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

auris — "an ear."
English ear is an inherited cousin again — the same Proto-Indo-European h₂ews- on both sides.
And it connects to a verb you already have. The audiō lesson gave you "I hear," and noted that obey is hidden inside it. Now you can see why: audiō is itself built on this root — aus-diō, roughly "I put the ear to" — so hearing, in Latin, is an action performed with the named organ. Ob-audīre, "to listen towards," wore down through French into obey.
Auricle, aural and auscultate are loans. Watch the near-collision:

aural (of the ear) and oral (of the mouth) are different words from different roots, and English pronounces them identically — which is why careful writers avoid both.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- auris, auris
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which earlier verb is built on this root? (Audiō.) What is the difference between aural and oral? (Ear against mouth — different roots, same sound.)

54.5 pēs — the clearest Grimm's Law pair in the book, and the last word of the tranche

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say auris — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say liber — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say ibi — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say accipiō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say videō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say salvē / salvēte — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pēs, pedis — "a foot."
The piscis lesson taught Grimm's Law on piscis and fish, and promised the other pairs. This is the cleanest of them: Latin p against English f, pēs against foot, on the same Proto-Indo-European ped-.
And the genitive matters again, exactly as it did for mīles. The nominative is pēs; the stem is ped-; and every English loan is built on the stem: pedal, pedestrian, impede ("to shackle the feet"), expedite ("to free them"), biped, pedicure.
Pedigree is the best of them: French pied de grue, "crane's foot," because the three-line mark that shows descent on a genealogical chart looks like a bird's footprint.
That is thirty-five words in seven chapters. Say the five of this chapter in order, then say the head and the hand you have had from the start, and you have named a body.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pēs, pedis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What sound does Latin p correspond to in inherited English? (F — Grimm's Law.) Which form do the English loans use? (The genitive stem ped-.) And why is a pedigree a foot? (The chart mark looks like a crane's footprint.)

Chapter 55

Numerī Ōrdinis

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 4 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say first, second, third, fourth and fifth in Latin, and use them to say which hour or which day I mean.
>
> The fifth ordinal, said against the four before it, and the month whose name it is.

55.1 prīmus — counting in order, and the word with no ūnus in it

A new kind of counting starts here, so the recalls come first, at the four growing distances this book measures.

- Recall: say pēs — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say edō — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say lūdō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say amīcus — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say ūnus, duo, trēs, quattuor, quīnque — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīmus, prīma, prīmum — "first."
Counting does two different jobs. Ūnus, duo, trēs answer how many. This word answers which one in the line, and Latin keeps a whole second series for that job.
Then the surprise. There is no ūnus anywhere in prīmus. It is a superlative of an old pri-, "in front" — so the word means "foremost", not "one-th". That is why it looks nothing like the number it stands next to.
It changes its ending with the thing it counts, exactly as bonus and malus do: prīma hōra, "the first hour"; prīmus diēs, "the first day".
English took the whole family: prime, primary, premier, primitive — and prince, from prīnceps, "the one who takes the first place".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- prīmus, prīma, prīmum
- prīma hōra — the first hour
- prīmus diēs — the first day

Before you move on

Which question does prīmus answer — how many, or which one in the line? (Which one in the line.) What number word is hiding inside it? (None — it is built on pri-, "in front", and means "foremost".) And what does the ending do when the thing counted changes? (It changes with it — prīma hōra, prīmus diēs.)

55.2 secundus — the one that follows

Recalls before the second ordinal, at the four measured distances.

- Recall: say prīmus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say bibō — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say exspectō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say pecūnia — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say valē / valēte — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

secundus, secunda, secundum — "second."
Like prīmus, it is not built on its own number. There is no duo in it. It comes from the Latin verb "to follow" (a later chapter teaches it) — so second place is the place that comes after, named by what it does rather than by where it falls in a count.
That single fact explains a shelf of English words. Second is this word, borrowed whole. So are sequel, sequence, consequence and subsequent; every one of them still carries "follow" in it.
And the second on a clock is the same word twice over. The Romans cut the hour into small parts, pars minūta prīma, "the first small part" — our minute — and then cut that again into pars minūta secunda, "the second small part." English kept the adjective and threw the noun away, so a second is literally "the following one".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- secundus, secunda, secundum
- secunda hōra — the second hour
- the pair — prīmus, secundus

Before you move on

What did the root behind secundus mean? (To follow.) So what is second place, in Latin's own terms? (The place that comes after.) And why is a second on a clock called that? (It is the pars minūta secunda — the second cutting of the hour, after the minute.)

55.3 tertius — where the number starts to show through

Recalls first, then the third ordinal — and the first one you can see a number inside.

- Recall: say secundus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say oculus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say respondeō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say medicus — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say grātiās tibi agō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tertius, tertia, tertium — "third."
Two ordinals have now gone past with no number in them at all. This one is different: trēs is three, and ter- is trēs worn down to fit an ending. Say them together and the join is audible — trēs, tertius.
So the third word in the series is the first one that is built the way you would expect all of them to be built: take the number, put an ending on it, and let the ending agree with the thing counted. Tertia hōra, "the third hour".
English borrowed it late and kept it formal: tertiary, a tercet (three lines of verse), tierce. Spanish wore it down instead of borrowing it, into tercero — which is what happens to a word that stays in a language's mouth rather than being fetched out of a book.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tertius, tertia, tertium
- the join — trēs → tertius
- the three so far — prīmus, secundus, tertius

Before you move on

Which number is inside tertius, and what shape does it take? (Trēs, worn down to ter-.) Why is that worth noticing here rather than earlier? (The first two ordinals had no number in them at all.) And what did Spanish do with this word instead of borrowing it? (Wore it down into tercero.)

55.4 quārtus — the shape the rest of the series keeps

Recalls first, then the fourth — and the shape that carries the rest of the way.

- Recall: say tertius — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say auris — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say conveniō and occurrō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say mīles — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say ita and nōn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quārtus, quārta, quārtum — "fourth."
Quattuor is four, and quārtus is quattuor with the middle squeezed out and an ending put on. Quattuor is inherited, a cousin of English four (EtymDB 2.1). After the odd pair at the front, that is the shape the series keeps: the number you already know, wearing an ending, behaving like a describing word and agreeing with whatever it counts. Which means the first three were the hard part, and they are behind you. From here, if you can say the number you can nearly say the ordinal.
Quārta hōra, "the fourth hour". Quārta pars, "the fourth part" — and that phrase went into English three separate times: a quart (a fourth of a gallon), a quarter, and a quarto (a sheet folded into four). A quartet is four players; a quatrain is four lines.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- quārtus, quārta, quārtum
- the join — quattuor → quārtus
- the four so far — prīmus, secundus, tertius, quārtus

Before you move on

What happens to quattuor on the way to quārtus? (The middle is squeezed out and an ending goes on.) Which of the first four ordinals do NOT have their number inside them? (Prīmus and secundus.) And what does the ending of quārtus do? (Agrees with the thing counted — quārta hōra, quārtus diēs.)

55.5 quīntus — the fifth, and a month you have already met

Recalls first, then the fifth — and a payoff from a chapter long behind you.

- Recall: say quārtus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say pēs — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say emō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say epistula — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say avē / avēte — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say the first chapter's own recombining — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quīntus, quīnta, quīntum — "fifth."
Quīnque is five; quīntus is that number with the ending on it, exactly as quārtus was. Two in a row now behave the same way. Quīnque is inherited, a cousin of English five (EtymDB 2.1).
And here is where the series pays back something you were already told. The month lesson listed Quīntīlis among the twelve and translated it "the fifth" — the month that was later renamed Iūlius. You could read that translation then. Now you can see the word: Quīntīlis is quīntus turned into a month's name, and Sextīlis beside it is the next ordinal doing the same.
English has quintet (five players), quintuplets, and quintessence — the quīnta essentia, the "fifth being", which mediaeval writers put above earth, water, air and fire.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- quīntus, quīnta, quīntum
- the join — quīnque → quīntus
- the month — Quīntīlis, the fifth

Before you move on

What number is inside quīntus? (Quīnque, five.) What was Quīntīlis, and what is it called now? (The fifth month; it was renamed Iūlius.) And what is a quīnta essentia? (A fifth being — the one put above earth, water, air and fire.)

Chapter 56

Sextus ad Decimum

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count in order all the way to tenth, and say why noon and siesta are ordinal numbers wearing a disguise.
>
> The tenth ordinal, and the whole series said in order from primus to decimus.

56.1 sextus — the sixth, and the hour that became a nap

Recalls open the chapter, at the four measured distances.

- Recall: say quīntus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say prīmus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say domus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say ubi — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say sex, septem, octō, novem, decem — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sextus, sexta, sextum — "sixth."
Sex is six; sextus is the same word with the ending. And Sextīlis, the other renamed month, is what Quīntīlis was: an ordinal doing duty as a name, later handed over to Augustus.
The better story is the hour. A Roman day was cut into twelve hours running from sunrise to sunset, so prīma hōra began at dawn and the sixth hour landed on the middle of the day — which is why sexta hōra meant noon and the heat of it. That hour became a rest, the rest kept the hour's name, and the name wore down through Spanish into siesta. A word for a nap that is, underneath, an ordinal number.
English took the plainer ones: a sextet, a sextant (a sixth of a circle), and sexagēsimus behind sexagesimal, counting by sixties.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sextus, sexta, sextum
- the join — sex → sextus
- sexta hōra — the sixth hour, the middle of the day

Before you move on

Which hour of a Roman day was sexta hōra, and where did it fall? (The sixth, counted from sunrise — so the middle of the day.) What everyday Spanish word came out of it? (Siesta.) And which month was Sextīlis renamed after? (Augustus.)

56.2 septimus — the seventh, and the week that is a seven

Recalls first, then the seventh.

- Recall: say sextus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say secundus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say porta — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say cūr — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say quaesō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say ignōsce mihi — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

septimus, septima, septimum — "seventh."
Septem is seven, inherited, a cousin of English seven (EtymDB 2.1). Put the ending on and the vowel in the middle goes quiet: septem → septimus, with e worn down to i because nothing is leaning on it. Latin does that to unstressed middles constantly, and once you have heard it here you will hear it everywhere.
September is this number in a name, and the calendar lesson explained why it sits in ninth place: two months were pushed in at the front and the names never moved.
The prettier descendant is the week. Septimāna was "a set of seven" — seven days — and it went into Spanish as semana and French as semaine. So in two of Latin's daughters the ordinary word for a week is a number word, and the number is this one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- septimus, septima, septimum
- the join — septem → septimus
- septima hōra — the seventh hour

Before you move on

What happens to the vowel in the middle of septem when the ending goes on? (It wears down — e to i.) Which month keeps this number, and why is it two places out? (September; two months were added at the front.) And what is a semana, taken apart? (A set of seven — septimāna.)

56.3 octāvus — the eighth, and the ending that breaks step

Recalls first, then the eighth — the one that does not do what the last four did.

- Recall: say septimus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say tertius — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say mūrus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say quia — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say diēs Lūnae — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say diēs Sōlis — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

octāvus, octāva, octāvum — "eighth."
Octō is eight. By now you would expect octus, and it is not that. This one takes -āvus, and it is the only ordinal in the ten that does.
EtymDB 2.1 traces octāvus straight to a Proto-Indo-European ordinal built on "eight".
Worth stopping on, because it shows what a pattern in a language actually is. Four ordinals in a row behaved alike, so the shape looked settled; the eighth breaks step, and then the ninth breaks it differently, and the tenth goes back to behaving. A learner who was told a rule and then met these would think the rule was broken. A learner who was shown the shape and then shown where it bends has learned the language instead.
October is this number in a month's name. And an octave in music is the eighth note, the one at which the names begin again — do to do — so the interval is named for the count that closes it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- octāvus, octāva, octāvum
- the ending that breaks step — not octus
- the eight so far, in order

Before you move on

What ending does octāvus take, and how many of the ten take it? (-āvus, and only this one.) What is an octave, counted out? (The eighth note — where the names start again.) And what is October, taken literally? (The eighth month.)

56.4 nōnus — the ninth, and where noon comes from Recalls first, then the ninth — and the best word-history in the chapter.

- Recall: say octāvus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say quārtus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say hortus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say meus — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say niger and albus — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say ruber and caeruleus — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōnus, nōna, nōnum — "ninth."
Novem is nine, and this time the word is not lengthened but squeezed: noven- collapses in on itself and comes out as nōnus, with a long ō where the ove used to be (Lewis & Short). Novem is inherited, a cousin of English nine (EtymDB 2.1). Two ordinals running have now bent the shape in two different ways.
November is this number in a name.
And then nōna hōra. Counting from sunrise, the ninth hour is the middle of the afternoon, and it was the hour of a fixed prayer. Over centuries that prayer crept earlier and earlier in the day, until it was being said at midday — and the name went with it. English noon is nōna, still meaning "the ninth", attached now to an hour three hours away from the one it was named for. The word stayed put; the clock moved under it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nōnus, nōna, nōnum
- the squeeze — novem → nōnus
- nōna hōra — the ninth hour, once mid-afternoon

Before you move on

How is nōnus made out of novem? (By squeezing it shut, not by adding — noven- to nōn-.) Which English word is nōna hōra? (Noon.) And what moved, the word or the hour? (The hour — the name stayed and the time it named drifted to midday.)

56.5 decimus — the tenth, and the ten complete

Recalls first, then the tenth, which closes the series.

- Recall: say nōnus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say quīntus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say focus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say tuus — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say pater and mater — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say frater and soror — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

decimus, decima, decimum — "tenth."
Decem is ten, and the ending goes on with the same worn-down middle you met in septimus: decem → decimus. Remember that c is hard — DEK-imus. Decem is inherited, a cousin of English ten (EtymDB 2.1). December is this number in a name, and it is the last of the four the calendar froze.
Decima on its own means "a tenth part", and that noun did a great deal of work. Decimate is the Roman army's punishment: a unit that broke was made to draw lots and one man in ten was killed by the other nine. A dime is a tenth of a dollar. A tithe is a tenth of a harvest, and décima is still the word for it in Spanish.
That is the ten. Say them in order and you have a series that no cardinal count gives you: the place a thing holds, not how many of it there are.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- decimus, decima, decimum — DEK-imus
- the join — decem → decimus
- all ten in order, prīmus to decimus

Before you move on

How is c said in decimus? (Hard — DEK-imus.) What did the Roman army actually do when it decimated a unit? (Killed one man in ten, chosen by lot.) And how many of the ten ordinals have their own number visible inside them? (Eight — every one but prīmus and secundus.)

Chapter 57

Ante et Post

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can put one thing before or after another with ante and post, and place an event in a Roman day.
>
> The hours and the halves of the day put together: prima, sexta and nona hora against ante and post meridiem.

57.1 ante — before, in place and in time

Recalls open the chapter, at the four measured distances.

- Recall: say decimus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say sextus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say terra — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say iterum — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say caput — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say nox — R4, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say bonam noctem — R4, a third word from that distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ante — "before", "in front of".
The ordinals tell you which place a thing holds. This word and its partner tell you how two things stand relative to each other, which is the other half of putting anything in order.
Ante does both senses at once, and Latin does not separate them. In space it is "in front of": ante portam, "in front of the gate". In time it is "before": ante merīdiem, "before midday" — which you have already seen on a clock face, because that phrase is the a.m. you write every day. You have been reading this word for years in an abbreviation.
English borrowed it whole and left it visible: an antechamber is the room in front of the room, an antecedent is what went before, anterior means towards the front, and a poker player who antes up puts the money in beforehand.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ante
- ante portam — in front of the gate
- ante merīdiem — before midday

Before you move on

What two senses does ante carry at once? (In front of, in space, and before, in time.) What everyday abbreviation is ante merīdiem? (a.m.) And what is an antechamber? (The room in front of the room.)

57.2 post — after, and the pair completed

Recalls first, then the word that finishes the pair.

- Recall: say ante — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say septimus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say ignis — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say magister — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say māne — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say bonum māne — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

post — "after", "behind".
The mirror of ante, and the same double life. In space it is "behind": post mūrum, "behind the wall". In time it is "after". Post is inherited, and Lewis & Short compares a Sanskrit word for "behind".
This book has quoted it once already and walked past it. The afternoon greeting was given as salvē (post merīdiem), and post merīdiem was translated without the word ever being taught — which is exactly the sort of debt a course collects when a phrase is more useful than its parts. Now the phrase comes apart: post + merīdiem, "after midday", the p.m. that stands opposite the a.m. you had one lesson ago.
English keeps it everywhere and rarely notices: posterior, posterity, postpone ("to place after"), post mortem ("after death"), post-war, and a postscript, the thing written after the writing.
With ante and post you can now put two things in order without counting them at all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- post
- post mūrum — behind the wall
- the pair — ante merīdiem, post merīdiem

Before you move on

What are the two senses of post? (Behind, in space, and after, in time.) What is post merīdiem on a clock face? (p.m.) And what can you do with ante and post that the ordinals do not do for you? (Put two things in order without counting them.)

57.3 Putting a day in order — prīma, sexta, nōna, ante and post

Recalls first, and then the chapter's work: everything in one place.

- Recall: say post — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say octāvus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say ventus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say discipulus — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say vesper — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say Hesperia and víspera — R4, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say the vesper triage — R4, a third word from that distance

You'll want to know: the three chapters, on one clock

You have the hour. You have the ordinals. You have ante and post. That is enough to say when something happens, and this is what the three chapters were for.

A Roman day ran sunrise to sunset and was cut into twelve, so an hour was a twelfth of the daylight — long in June, short in December, and never the same length twice. Three of those hours now have names you can say:

- prīma hōra — the first hour, beginning at sunrise.

- sexta hōra — the sixth, the middle of the day. Its name is in siesta.
- nōna hōra — the ninth, mid-afternoon. Its name is in noon, which moved.

And the day splits in two at the middle: everything up to merīdiēs is ante merīdiem, everything past it post merīdiem.

Now place three things. Say prīma hōra and then ante merīdiem, and you have said early morning twice over, once by counting and once by dividing. Say nōna hōra, post merīdiem, and you have said mid-afternoon the same two ways. That is the whole point of having both.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three hours — prīma hōra, sexta hōra, nōna hōra
- the halves — ante merīdiem, post merīdiem
- all ten ordinals in order, prīmus to decimus

Before you move on

How long was a Roman hour? (A twelfth of the daylight — so it changed with the season.) Which hour was the middle of the day, and which word still carries its name? (The sixth; siesta.) And say mid-afternoon two ways. (Nōna hōra — and post merīdiem.)

Chapter 58

Reading — Words, Lines, and a First Passage

Modes: 👁 eyes (3) 🎧 Hands-free start: none of the 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read a Latin word cold and know its job from its ending, follow a line whose subject lives inside the verb, and hold a whole passage without translating it word by word.
>
> Forty-two words of Latin with no new word in them, where the verb goes last, the subject hides inside it, and bonus changes to bona without anyone explaining agreement.

58.1 (reading) — six words, each one already a claim

Every word below you have met. Not one is new.

What is new is that nothing surrounds them.

Read this

aqua liber schola magister discipulus oculus

Read it: down the list once, without stopping
Read it: the list again, and notice that five of the six end in -us, -a or -er, and that you know what that ending means

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

An English word standing alone tells you almost nothing about its job. Book could be the thing doing or the thing done to.
Liber cannot. That ending says it is the one doing, before any sentence has been built around it. A Latin noun carries its job with it. That is what makes Latin readable in a way its word order is not. The endings do the work English does with position, and they do it one word at a time.

Your turn

- Say it: the six words down the list, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
What does a Latin ending tell you that an English word cannot? (Its job — before the sentence exists.)

58.2 (reading) — six lines, two of them one word

The last lesson gave you words alone. These are whole lines.

You have said every one of them.

Read this

Salvē! Valē! Magister meus bonus est. Ego sum discipulus.
Iterum! Bonus est.

Read it: the six lines down once, without stopping
Read it: the six lines again, and notice that two of the six are a single word, and that both of them are things you say to somebody

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Salvē and Valē are commands. Be well. Be strong. A Roman greeting and a Roman farewell are both orders, which is why neither needs anything around it.

Bonus est has no subject on the page at all. Latin puts the person in the verb, so est is already he is or it is, and the sentence is complete with two words.
That is the second thing reading Latin asks of you: expect the subject to be missing, and expect the verb to have it.

Your turn

- Say it: the six lines, once, in order, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
Where is the subject of Bonus est? (Inside the verb.)

58.3 (reading) — the first passage

Six words, then six lines. Now twelve of them together.

Forty-two words, and not one of them is new.

Read this

Salvē! Mihi nōmen est Mārcus. Ego sum discipulus.
Magister meus bonus est. Liber meus bonus est. Ego legō et bibō. Amīcus meus est discipulus. Schola bona est.
Prīmus liber bonus est. Sextus liber bonus est. Iterum legō, quia liber bonus est. Valē!

Read it: the passage once without stopping; do not translate as you go — let the sentences arrive
Read it: the passage again, and notice where est falls

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Nearly every line ends in est. That is not a habit of this passage; it is how Latin was written. The verb goes last, and the reader holds everything before it open until it arrives.
Two lines break the pattern on purpose. Mihi nōmen est Mārcus puts est in the middle, because the name is the point and Latin moves what matters. And the last full line is the longest, because quia hangs a whole reason off a sentence that was already complete.

Notice also bonus, bona, bonus — the same word three times, changing to match what it describes. You are reading agreement, not being told about it.
This is the first whole passage the book has asked you to hold at once, and it works because everything in it was paid for.

Your turn

- Say it: the passage aloud, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

Where does a Latin sentence usually keep its verb? (Last.)
Why is it schola bona and not schola bonus? (The adjective agrees — and you read it before anyone explained it.)

Chapter 59

Reading — Objects, Places, and a Day

Modes: voice (2) eyes (3) Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can track direct objects and place phrases through a social exchange and a short first-person account without translating sentence by sentence.
>
> A 140-word adapted account whose time anchors, place phrases and visible object endings let a beginning reader follow one full day.

59.1 aqua -> aquam — when the action reaches the thing

You already know aqua: water. Read it: one new sentence

Aquam bibō. — I drink water.

Nothing new has happened to the water. Its ending changed because it is now the thing the action reaches.

You'll want to know: -a becomes -am

Latin marks the direct object with the accusative case. For the familiar nouns ending in -a, the first useful move is small:

- aqua -> aquam — I drink aquam
- epistula -> epistulam — I write epistulam

- porta -> portam — I open portam

The -m is a reading signal. It tells you that this word receives the action even if Latin moves the word somewhere English would not.

Grammar Lens: actor, action, object

In epistulam scrībō, the verb scrībō already says "I write." The ending -am tells you what I write.
Read from the endings rather than from position: portam aperiō and aperiō portam mean the same basic thing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- aquam bibō — the water receives the action
- epistulam scrībō — the letter receives the action
- portam aperiō — the gate receives the action

Twice through:

Before you move on

What does -am tell you here? (This familiar -a noun is the direct object.)
Change epistula for "I write a letter." (Epistulam scrībō.)

59.2 amīcus -> amīcum — a second road to the same object marker

You saw -a -> -am. Now read amīcum videō — I see the friend.

The noun changed more visibly, but the final signal is familiar: the word ends in -m because the seeing reaches it.

You'll want to know: -us and -er reach -um

Three known nouns give you the useful masculine pattern:

- amīcus -> amīcum — amīcum adiuvō, I help the friend
- magister -> magistrum — magistrum audiō, I hear the teacher
- liber -> librum — librum legō, I read the book

Magister and liber drop their nominative -er before -um. The genitives you learned — magistrī, librī — already showed the shorter stems magistr- and libr-.

Grammar Lens: the ending frees the order

Librum legō does not need English order to tell you what is read.
The -um has already done that work.
Put the two lessons together: epistulam scrībō; librum legō. Two actions, two objects, two visible endings.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- amīcum adiuvō
- magistrum audiō
- librum legō

Twice through:

Before you move on

What is the object form of liber? (Librum.)
What ending do amīcum, magistrum and librum share? (-um, ending in the accusative -m.)

59.3 ad scholam, in scholā, domum — toward, at, and homeward

The form scholam is no longer new. Read it: scholam after a tiny word — ad scholam

Ad points toward an endpoint: ad scholam ambulō — I walk to or toward school.

You'll want to know: motion and rest do not look alike

These three short shapes carry a whole route:

- ad scholam ambulō — I walk toward school
- in scholā sedeō — I sit in school
- domum eō — I go home

Motion toward takes ad plus the accusative scholam. Rest in a place takes in plus ablative scholā, whose long final -ā matters. Domum is the old compact exception: homeward needs no preposition.

Grammar Lens: follow the case, then the journey

A reader can now follow three stages without translating every word: movement toward, rest inside, movement home.
Add the object from the last lesson: in scholā librum legō. The long -ā locates the action; -um shows what the reading reaches.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ad scholam ambulō — movement toward
- in scholā sedeō — rest inside
- domum eō — movement home

Twice through:

Before you move on

Which form means "in school"? (In scholā, with long -ā.)
Which destination needs no preposition? (Domum — homeward.)

59.4 (reading) — a whole meeting, one turn at a time

The first passage was forty-two words. This exchange is seventy-three.

Do not race. Follow who asks, who answers, and where the two people go. The endings will keep the objects visible.

Read this

— Salvē! — Salvē! — Quid tibi nōmen est? — Mihi nōmen est Iūlia. Quid tibi nōmen est? — Mihi nōmen est Mārcus. — Quōmodo valēs? — Bene valeō. Et tū? — Bene valeō. — Ubi schola tua est? — Schola mea ibi est. Ubi schola tua est? — Schola mea hic est. — Māne ad scholam ambulō. In scholā sedeō. — Ego māne librum legō. Post merīdiem epistulam scrībō. — Librum iterum legō. — Cūr? — Quia liber meus bonus est. — Bene. — Crās tē vidēbō. — Ita. Valē! — Valē!

Read it: the dialogue once for the route — names, wellbeing, school, work, reason, farewell
Read it: the dialogue again for the two things handled — librum, epistulam

Grammar Lens: a dialogue is a chain of answers

You do not need to translate every turn. Quid tibi nōmen est? predicts a name. Quōmodo valēs? predicts wellbeing. Ubi predicts a place. Cūr? predicts quia.
That prediction is reading. It lets the shape of one turn prepare you for the next.

Your turn

- Say it: the exchange once, preserving each turn

Before you move on

Where does the first speaker's school stand? (Ibi — there.)
Why is the book read again? (Quia liber meus bonus est.)

59.5 (reading) — diēs meus, my day

The exchange gave you seventy-three words in turns. This account gives you one hundred forty words in one voice.

First follow the day words. Then follow the objects. You already know every form.

Read this

Mihi nōmen est Mārcus. Ego sum discipulus. Domus mea bona est. Canis meus hīc est, et fēlēs mea ibi est. Māne prīma hōra est. Ego stō, lac bibō, et mel et ōvum edō. Portam aperiō et portam claudō, et ad scholam ambulō. Schola mea bona est. In scholā sedeō. Magister meus bonus est. Magistrum videō et audiō. Prīmum librum accipiō et legō. Secundum librum nōn accipiō, quia secundus liber malus est. Epistulam scrībō. Cōgitō et intellegō. Amīcum meum videō et adiuvō. Amīcus meus discipulus est. Sexta hōra est. Lac bibō, et mel et ōvum edō. Vīnum nōn bibō. Aquam bibō. Mare et caelum videō. Post merīdiem domum eō. Hic sedeō, et librum iterum legō. Cūr iterum legō? Quia liber meus bonus est. Vesper est. Nox est. Bene valeō. Dormiō. Crās iterum ad scholam veniō. Crās magistrum et amīcum meum videō.

Read it: the account once for time — morning, first hour, sixth hour, after midday, evening, night, tomorrow
Read it: the account again for the route — home, toward school, in school, homeward

Grammar Lens: the account has two maps

The time words make one map. The place phrases make another. Inside both, the object endings tell you what each action reaches: portam, magistrum, librum, epistulam, amīcum, aquam.
The account repeats librum for a reason. The first book is read; the second is refused; the good book is read again. That is a connected thread, not a list of unrelated sentences.

Your turn

- Say it: the account once, pausing only at full stops

Twice through:

Before you move on

Put the route in order. (Domus — ad scholam — in scholā — domum.)
What happens tomorrow? (He goes to school again and sees his teacher and friend.)

Chapter 60

Writing — My Own Line

Modes: ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can write one line of Latin about myself from a closed supply of known words and forms, choosing not only which word but which ending it wears.
>
> Complete LA-W02-versus-meus: one line chosen rather than copied, using only forms the book has shown rather than forms guessed from a pattern.

60.1 Your own line — the first writing with no model

Everything you have written so far had something to reach for.

This does not. You choose the words, from a supply that is closed: only what this book has taught you.

Writing — controlled composition

Write one line in Latin about yourself.

And here is what makes this step harder in Latin than it is in most languages. Choosing the words is not enough. You must also choose which ending each word wears.

In English or French the shape of a word is given and its job comes from where you put it. In Latin the job comes from the ending, so a word you have only ever met in one form is a word you cannot yet place — you know it, and you still have to decide what it is doing.

Write the line. Use only forms the book has actually shown you, not forms you have guessed at from a pattern.

Before you move on

In Latin, what tells a reader what a word is doing in the sentence?
(Its ending.)
So what did you have to choose here that a French writer does not?
(The form of each word, not only which word.)

Chapter 61

Writing — With A Clock

Modes: ✓ pen (1) Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can complete the Latin A1 writing paper's three parts inside its published thirty minutes and meet each part's word floor.
>
> Complete LA-W03-cum-horologio: six minutes of dictation, ten of controlled sentences, fourteen for the personal note, then check each against its published range.

61.1 The same writing, with a clock

You wrote your own line with as long as you liked.

A task you can only do untimed is not yet a task you can do.

Writing — timed production

What this track's contract publishes. The Latin A1 writing paper runs 30 minutes and holds three parts, which is one more than most:

- dictation and orthography — 5 items, 8 to 15 words;
- controlled sentences — 4 items, 20 to 35 words;
- a short personal note — 3 items, 35 to 50 words.

Those numbers come out of `task-shapes/a1.json`, not from this page.

Split the clock the way the parts are weighted: six minutes, ten minutes, fourteen minutes. Start.

Stop when the time is up, even mid-word. An unfinished paper is information; an untimed one is not.

Before you move on

Now the rule this track states more sharply than any other, and the reason it does.

Latin is the language most people meet only as reading. Centuries of teaching it that way have made "I know Latin" mean "I can construe a page", and a four-skill contract has to refuse that or it is not measuring the same thing at all.

So: each of the four papers is worth 25 points and each must independently reach 15. The aggregate must also reach 60 out of 100. Reading strength cannot hide absent writing. That is a project standard rather than an external certificate — Latin has no awarding body issuing one — and it is stated openly as this project's own choice.

Count your words against the three ranges. Being under the floor on any one of them is the same as not having attempted it.

Chapter 62

Writing — Four Lines, And The Word That Has A Twin

Modes: ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can write four connected lines to a named reader, joining with et, sed or aut and giving a reason with quia rather than the ambiguous quod.
>
> Complete LA-W04-quattuor-versus: four lines to one reader, at least one joined and at least one reasoned with quia, then name which of Latin's two because-words can also mean which.

62.1 Four lines, and the word that has a twin

The last lesson asked for writing finished on time. This one asks for writing that holds together.

Pick one person who will read it.

What to know first

Connected writing is not longer writing. Four short lines can be connected; one long line can fail to be. What makes it connected is that a sentence stops standing on its own.

You hold four joiners. et adds. sed sets against. aut offers. quia gives the reason.

Use quia for your reason, and use it deliberately, because Latin has a second word that also means because — quod — and that one is doing two jobs at once. quod is also the ordinary word for which.

So a sentence built on quod hands the reader a small decision the writer may not have noticed making: is this a reason, or is it a relative clause? quia hands them nothing to decide. At this level, write the word that can only mean one thing.

That is a real habit and not a beginner's crutch. Choosing the unambiguous word where one exists is most of what clear writing is, in any language.

Writing — connected composition

Write four lines to the person you picked.

At least one must use et, sed or aut. At least one must use quia.

Use only words and forms the book has shown you. This lesson adds no vocabulary; the whole exercise is the joining.

Before you move on

Cover your first line and read the second alone. Does it still make sense without the first? If it does, you wrote a list — which is where you were one lesson ago.
Which of Latin's two words for because can also mean which? (quod.) And which one did you write? (quia — the one that cannot be mistaken.)

Chapter 63

Arm, Finger, Tooth

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name an arm, a finger, a tooth, the tongue and the nose.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 63: I can name an arm, a finger, a tooth, the tongue and the nose.

63.1 bracchium, bracchiī — an arm

Before the new one: say the Latin for before, then the Latin for after.

You'll want to know: bracchium, bracchiī

bracchium, bracchiī — "an arm".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bracchium is usually taken as a loan from Greek brakhiōn, "arm" (EtymDB 2.1). Lewis & Short only call the two words kindred. English bracelet comes from bracchium through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bracchium
- Say it: bracchium, once more
- Say it: say bracchium
- Recall: say the Latin for before, then the Latin for after, then say bracchium again

Before you move on

What does bracchium, bracchiī mean? ("An arm".) Say it once more.

63.2 digitus, digitī — a finger

Before the new one: say the Latin for after, then the Latin for an arm.

You'll want to know: digitus, digitī

digitus, digitī — "a finger". English digit keeps it: we first counted on our fingers.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

digitus has no certain origin. It is often linked to Proto-Indo-European deik-*, "to show, to point out" (EtymDB 2.1): the finger as the pointer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: digitus
- Say it: digitus, once more
- Say it: say digitus

- Recall: say the Latin for after, then the Latin for an arm, then say digitus again

Before you move on

What does digitus, digitī mean? ("A finger".) Say it once more.

63.3 dēns, dentis — a tooth

Before the new one: say the Latin for an arm, then the Latin for a finger.

You'll want to know: dēns, dentis

dēns, dentis — "a tooth". A dentist looks after them.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēns is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3dent-*, "tooth" (EtymDB 2.1). English tooth is a distant cousin (Lewis & Short), and English dental comes from dēns itself.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēns
- Say it: dēns, once more
- Say it: say dēns
- Recall: say the Latin for an arm, then the Latin for a finger, then say dēns again

Before you move on

What does dēns, dentis mean? ("A tooth".) Say it once more.

63.4 lingua, linguae — the tongue; a language

Before the new one: say the Latin for a finger, then the Latin for a tooth.

You'll want to know: lingua, linguae lingua, linguae — "the tongue; a language". Both meanings, as in English tongue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children lingua is inherited. Early Latin had dingua, "tongue" (Lewis & Short), and the word is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dnghweh2s*, "tongue" (EtymDB 2.1); English tongue is a cousin. The l is often put down to the pull of lingō, "to lick".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lingua
- Say it: lingua, once more
- Say it: say lingua
- Recall: say the Latin for a finger, then the Latin for a tooth, then say lingua again

Before you move on

What does lingua, linguae mean? ("The tongue; a language".) Say it once more.

63.5 nāsus, nāsī — the nose

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tooth, then the Latin for the tongue; a language.

You'll want to know: nāsus, nāsī nāsus, nāsī — "the nose". English nasal.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nāsus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European neh2s-*, "nose" (EtymDB 2.1). English nose is a cousin from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nāsus
- Say it: nāsus, once more
- Say it: say nāsus
- Recall: say the Latin for a tooth, then the Latin for the tongue; a language, then say nāsus again

Before you move on

What does nāsus, nāsī mean? ("The nose".) Say it once more.

Chapter 64

Neck, Shoulder, Knee, Heart

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the neck, a shoulder, a knee, the heart and blood.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 64: I can name the neck, a shoulder, a knee, the heart and blood.

64.1 collum, collī — the neck

Before the new one: say the Latin for the tongue; a language, then the Latin for the nose.

You'll want to know: collum, collī

collum, collī — "the neck". A collar goes round it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

collum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwolso-, "neck" (EtymDB 2.1), perhaps from a root kwel-, "to turn".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: collum
- Say it: collum, once more
- Say it: say collum
- Recall: say the Latin for the tongue; a language, then the Latin for the nose, then say collum again

Before you move on

What does collum, collī mean? ("The neck".) Say it once more.

64.2 umerus, umerī — the shoulder

Before the new one: say the Latin for the nose, then the Latin for the neck.

You'll want to know: umerus, umerī

umerus, umerī — "the shoulder".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

umerus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3emsos*, "shoulder" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek ōmos, "shoulder", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English humerus, the upper-arm bone, is the same word with a later h.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: umerus
- Say it: umerus, once more
- Say it: say umerus

- Recall: say the Latin for the nose, then the Latin for the neck, then say umerus again

Before you move on

What does umerus, umerī mean? ("The shoulder".) Say it once more.

64.3 genū, genūs — a knee

Before the new one: say the Latin for the neck, then the Latin for the shoulder.

You'll want to know: genū, genūs

genū, genūs — "a knee". Genuflect: to bend the knee.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children genū is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gonu*, "knee" (EtymDB 2.1). English knee is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: genū
- Say it: genū, once more
- Say it: say genū
- Recall: say the Latin for the neck, then the Latin for the shoulder, then say genū again

Before you move on

What does genū, genūs mean? ("A knee".) Say it once more.

64.4 cor, cordis — the heart

Before the new one: say the Latin for the shoulder, then the Latin for a knee.

You'll want to know: cor, cordis

cor, cordis — "the heart". English cordial, from the genitive cordis.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cor is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European krd-*, "heart" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek kardia, "heart", and English heart are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cor
- Say it: cor, once more
- Say it: say cor
- Recall: say the Latin for the shoulder, then the Latin for a knee, then say cor again

Before you move on

What does cor, cordis mean? ("The heart".) Say it once more.

64.5 sanguis, sanguinis — blood

Before the new one: say the Latin for a knee, then the Latin for the heart.

You'll want to know: sanguis, sanguinis

sanguis, sanguinis — "blood".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sanguis has no agreed origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. EtymDB 2.1 records a proposal that ties it to Proto-Indo-European h1esh2r*, "blood", but not everyone accepts it. English sanguine comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sanguis
- Say it: sanguis, once more
- Say it: say sanguis
- Recall: say the Latin for a knee, then the Latin for the heart, then say sanguis again

Before you move on

What does sanguis, sanguinis mean? ("Blood".) Say it once more.

Chapter 65

Hair, Belly, Back, Forehead, Beard

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name hair, the belly, the back, the forehead and a beard.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 65: I can name hair, the belly, the back, the forehead and a beard.

65.1 capillus, capillī — a hair, the hair

Before the new one: say the Latin for the heart, then the Latin for blood.

You'll want to know: capillus, capillī

capillus, capillī — "a hair, the hair". A capillary is hair-thin.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

capillus is linked to caput, "head": it is often read as caput plus pilus, "a single hair", so head-hair (EtymDB 2.1), while Lewis & Short see a diminutive beside caput.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: capillus
- Say it: capillus, once more
- Say it: say capillus
- Recall: say the Latin for the heart, then the Latin for blood, then say capillus again

Before you move on

What does capillus, capillī mean? ("A hair, the hair".) Say it once more.

65.2 venter, ventris — the belly

Before the new one: say the Latin for blood, then the Latin for a hair.

You'll want to know: venter, ventris venter, ventris — "the belly". A ventriloquist speaks from the belly.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

venter may be inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European wendtri-*, "belly" (EtymDB 2.1), though its relatives in other languages are few and uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: venter
- Say it: venter, once more
- Say it: say venter

- Recall: say the Latin for blood, then the Latin for a hair, then say venter again

Before you move on

What does venter, ventris mean? ("The belly".) Say it once more.

65.3 tergum, tergī — the back

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hair, then the Latin for the belly.

You'll want to know: tergum, tergī

tergum, tergī — "the back".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tergum, "the back", has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English tergiversation, "turning one's back, evasion", is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tergum
- Say it: tergum, once more
- Say it: say tergum
- Recall: say the Latin for a hair, then the Latin for the belly, then say tergum again

Before you move on

What does tergum, tergī mean? ("The back".) Say it once more.

65.4 frōns, frontis — the forehead, the front

> Before the new one: say the Latin for the belly, then the Latin for the back.

You'll want to know: frōns, frontis

frōns, frontis — "the forehead, the front". English front and frontier.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frōns, frontis, is often traced to Proto-Indo-European bhront-*, "forehead" (EtymDB 2.1), but the link is not certain. It is a different word from frōns, frondis, "leafy branches".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frōns
- Say it: frōns, once more
- Say it: say frōns
- Recall: say the Latin for the belly, then the Latin for the back, then say frōns again

Before you move on

What does frōns, frontis mean? ("The forehead, the front".) Say it once more.

65.5 barba, barbae — a beard

> Before the new one: say the Latin for the back, then the Latin for the forehead.

You'll want to know: barba, barbae barba, barbae — "a beard". A barber trims it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

barba is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhardheh2*, "beard" (EtymDB 2.1); English beard is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: barba
- Say it: barba, once more
- Say it: say barba
- Recall: say the Latin for the back, then the Latin for the forehead, then say barba again

Before you move on

What does barba, barbae mean? ("A beard".) Say it once more.

Chapter 66

Chest, Leg, Cheek, Nail, Healthy

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the chest, a leg, a cheek and a nail, and say healthy.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 66: I can name the chest, a leg, a cheek and a nail, and say healthy.

66.1 pectus, pectoris — the chest, the breast

Before the new one: say the Latin for the forehead, then the Latin for a beard.

You'll want to know: pectus, pectoris

pectus, pectoris — "the chest, the breast".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pectus is probably inherited: EtymDB 2.1 traces it through Proto-Italic pektos*, "chest", to a Proto-Indo-European peg-*, "breast", a root with few other witnesses. English pectoral comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pectus
- Say it: pectus, once more
- Say it: say pectus
- Recall: say the Latin for the forehead, then the Latin for a beard, then say pectus again

Before you move on

What does pectus, pectoris mean? ("The chest, the breast".) Say it once more.

66.2 crūs, crūris — a leg, a shin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a beard, then the Latin for the chest.

You'll want to know: crūs, crūris

crūs, crūris — "a leg, a shin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crūs, "leg, shin", has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful, and no later proposal has won general agreement.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crūs
- Say it: crūs, once more
- Say it: say crūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a beard, then the Latin for the chest, then say crūs again

Before you move on

What does crūs, crūris mean? ("A leg, a shin".) Say it once more.

66.3 gena, genae — a cheek

Before the new one: say the Latin for the chest, then the Latin for a leg.

You'll want to know: gena, genae

gena, genae — "a cheek".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gena is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European genu-*, "jaw, cheek" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek genys, "jaw" (Lewis & Short), and English chin are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gena
- Say it: gena, once more
- Say it: say gena
- Recall: say the Latin for the chest, then the Latin for a leg, then say gena again

Before you move on

What does gena, genae mean? ("A cheek".) Say it once more.

66.4 unguis, unguis — a fingernail, a claw

Before the new one: say the Latin for a leg, then the Latin for a cheek.

You'll want to know: unguis, unguis

unguis, unguis — "a fingernail, a claw".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

unguis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3nogwh-, "nail, claw" (EtymDB 2.1 writes h3negh-, without the w that the Latin gu needs). Greek onyx, "claw, nail" (Lewis & Short), and English nail are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: unguis
- Say it: unguis, once more
- Say it: say unguis
- Recall: say the Latin for a leg, then the Latin for a cheek, then say unguis again

Before you move on

What does unguis, unguis mean? ("A fingernail, a claw".) Say it once more.

66.5 sānus, sāna, sānum — healthy, sound

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cheek, then the Latin for a fingernail.

You'll want to know: sānus, sāna, sānum

sānus, sāna, sānum — "healthy, sound". English sane: sound in mind.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sānus has no secure origin. Lewis & Short compare Greek sōs, "safe and sound", and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European swan-*, "healthy", but neither link is settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sānus
- Say it: sānus, once more
- Say it: say sānus
- Recall: say the Latin for a cheek, then the Latin for a fingernail, then say sānus again

Before you move on

What does sānus, sāna, sānum mean? ("Healthy, sound".) Say it once more.

Chapter 67

Fever, Cough, Pain

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a fever, a cough, pain, medicine and an illness.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 67: I can name a fever, a cough, pain, medicine and an illness.

67.1 febris, febris — a fever

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fingernail, then the Latin for healthy.

You'll want to know: febris, febris

febris, febris — "a fever". English fever and febrile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

febris is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root dhegwh-*, "to burn" (EtymDB 2.1): a fever as a burning.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: febris
- Say it: febris, once more
- Say it: say febris
- Recall: say the Latin for a fingernail, then the Latin for healthy, then say febris again

Before you move on

What does febris, febris mean? ("A fever".) Say it once more.

67.2 tussis, tussis — a cough

Before the new one: say the Latin for healthy, then the Latin for a fever.

You'll want to know: tussis, tussis

tussis, tussis — "a cough".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tussis is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root (s)tewd-*, "to push, to strike" (EtymDB 2.1). Doctors still say pertussis, "whooping cough", built from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tussis
- Say it: tussis, once more
- Say it: say tussis
- Recall: say the Latin for healthy, then the Latin for a fever, then say tussis again

Before you move on

What does tussis, tussis mean? ("A cough".) Say it once more.

67.3 dolor, dolōris — pain, grief

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fever, then the Latin for a cough.

You'll want to know: dolor, dolōris

dolor, dolōris — "pain, grief".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dolor is built on doleō, "to hurt, to grieve" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -or, "a state". The family is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European delh1-*, "to split, to hew" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dolor
- Say it: dolor, once more
- Say it: say dolor
- Recall: say the Latin for a fever, then the Latin for a cough, then say dolor again

Before you move on

What does dolor, dolōris mean? ("Pain, grief".) Say it once more.

67.4 medicīna, medicīnae — medicine

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cough, then the Latin for pain.

You'll want to know: medicīna, medicīnae

medicīna, medicīnae — "medicine". What a medicus gives you.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

medicīna is built on medicus, "a doctor", which comes from medeor, "to heal" (EtymDB 2.1). English medicine comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: medicīna
- Say it: medicīna, once more
- Say it: say medicīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a cough, then the Latin for pain, then say medicīna again

Before you move on

What does medicīna, medicīnae mean? ("Medicine".) Say it once more.

67.5 morbus, morbī — an illness, a disease

Before the new one: say the Latin for pain, then the Latin for medicine.

You'll want to know: morbus, morbī morbus, morbī — "an illness, a disease". English morbid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

morbus has no certain origin. It is often linked with morior, "to die" (Lewis & Short), and EtymDB 2.1 traces it to Proto-Indo-European mer-*, "to die", but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: morbus
- Say it: morbus, once more
- Say it: say morbus
- Recall: say the Latin for pain, then the Latin for medicine, then say morbus again

Before you move on

What does morbus, morbī mean? ("An illness, a disease".) Say it once more.

Chapter 68

Sick, Tired, Hungry, Thirsty

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say sick and tired, and name hunger, thirst and worry.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 68: I can say sick and tired, and name hunger, thirst and worry.

68.1 aeger, aegra, aegrum — sick, ill

Before the new one: say the Latin for medicine, then the Latin for an illness.

You'll want to know: aeger, aegra, aegrum

aeger, aegra, aegrum — "sick, ill". The opposite of sānus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aeger, "sick", has no sure origin; Lewis & Short list only tentative comparisons, and no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aeger
- Say it: aeger, once more
- Say it: say aeger
- Recall: say the Latin for medicine, then the Latin for an illness, then say aeger again

Before you move on

What does aeger, aegra, aegrum mean? ("Sick, ill".) Say it once more.

68.2 fessus, fessa, fessum — tired

Before the new one: say the Latin for an illness, then the Latin for sick.

You'll want to know: fessus, fessa, fessum

fessus, fessa, fessum — "tired".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fessus is the old participle of fatīscor, "to grow weary, to gape open". It belongs with fatīgō, "to tire out" (Lewis & Short). English fatigue comes from that verb through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fessus
- Say it: fessus, once more
- Say it: say fessus

- Recall: say the Latin for an illness, then the Latin for sick, then say fessus again

Before you move on

What does fessus, fessa, fessum mean? ("Tired".) Say it once more.

68.3 famēs, famis — hunger

Before the new one: say the Latin for sick, then the Latin for tired.

You'll want to know: famēs, famis

famēs, famis — "hunger". English famine.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

famēs has no sure origin. One proposal, which EtymDB 2.1 records, ties it to a Proto-Indo-European root dhH-*, "to disappear".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: famēs
- Say it: famēs, once more
- Say it: say famēs
- Recall: say the Latin for sick, then the Latin for tired, then say famēs again

Before you move on

What does famēs, famis mean? ("Hunger".) Say it once more.

68.4 sitis, sitis — thirst

Before the new one: say the Latin for tired, then the Latin for hunger.

You'll want to know: sitis, sitis

sitis, sitis — "thirst". aqua answers it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sitis is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhgwhitis*, "a wasting, a decline" (EtymDB 2.1), the form behind Greek phthisis, "decline, consumption"; Lewis & Short still called it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sitis
- Say it: sitis, once more
- Say it: say sitis
- Recall: say the Latin for tired, then the Latin for hunger, then say sitis again

Before you move on

What does sitis, sitis mean? ("Thirst".) Say it once more.

68.5 cūra, cūrae — care, worry

Before the new one: say the Latin for hunger, then the Latin for thirst.

You'll want to know: cūra, cūrae cūra, cūrae — "care, worry". English cure and curator.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūra has no sure origin. EtymDB 2.1 records a proposal that traces it to Proto-Indo-European kweys-*, "to heed", but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cūra
- Say it: cūra, once more
- Say it: say cūra
- Recall: say the Latin for hunger, then the Latin for thirst, then say cūra again

Before you move on

What does cūra, cūrae mean? ("Care, worry".) Say it once more.

Chapter 69

Joy, Anger, Fear

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name joy, anger and fear, and say happy and sad.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 69: I can name joy, anger and fear, and say happy and sad.

69.1 gaudium, gaudiī — joy

Before the new one: say the Latin for thirst, then the Latin for care.

You'll want to know: gaudium, gaudiī

gaudium, gaudiī — "joy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gaudium is built on gaudeō, "to rejoice" (EtymDB 2.1). English joy comes from its plural through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gaudium
- Say it: gaudium, once more
- Say it: say gaudium
- Recall: say the Latin for thirst, then the Latin for care, then say gaudium again

Before you move on

What does gaudium, gaudiī mean? ("Joy".) Say it once more.

69.2 īra, īrae — anger

Before the new one: say the Latin for care, then the Latin for joy.

You'll want to know: īra, īrae

īra, īrae — "anger". English ire and irate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īra is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root h1eysh2-*, "to fall upon, to act sharply" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īra
- Say it: īra, once more
- Say it: say īra
- Recall: say the Latin for care, then the Latin for joy, then say īra again

Before you move on

What does īra, īrae mean? ("Anger".) Say it once more.

69.3 timor, timōris — fear

Before the new one: say the Latin for joy, then the Latin for anger.

You'll want to know: timor, timōris timor, timōris — "fear". English timid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

timor is built on timeō, "to fear" (EtymDB 2.1), with the ending -or, "a state". Where timeō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: timor
- Say it: timor, once more
- Say it: say timor
- Recall: say the Latin for joy, then the Latin for anger, then say timor again

Before you move on

What does timor, timōris mean? ("Fear".) Say it once more.

69.4 laetus, laeta, laetum — happy, glad

Before the new one: say the Latin for anger, then the Latin for fear.

You'll want to know: laetus, laeta, laetum

laetus, laeta, laetum — "happy, glad".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

laetus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. Lewis & Short give it the sense "rich, fertile" for crops and fields.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: laetus
- Say it: laetus, once more
- Say it: say laetus
- Recall: say the Latin for anger, then the Latin for fear, then say laetus again

Before you move on

What does laetus, laeta, laetum mean? ("Happy, glad".) Say it once more.

69.5 trīstis, trīste — sad

Before the new one: say the Latin for fear, then the Latin for happy.

You'll want to know: trīstis, trīste

trīstis, trīste — "sad".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trīstis has no sure origin. Lewis & Short call it doubtful; EtymDB 2.1 records a reconstructed Proto-Indo-European treystis*, "in a bad mood", but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trīstis
- Say it: trīstis, once more
- Say it: say trīstis
- Recall: say the Latin for fear, then the Latin for happy, then say trīstis again

Before you move on

What does trīstis, trīste mean? ("Sad".) Say it once more.

Chapter 70

Son, Daughter, Grandparents

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a son, a daughter, a grandfather, a grandmother and a family.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 70: I can name a son, a daughter, a grandfather, a grandmother and a family.

70.1 fīlius, fīliī — a son

Before the new one: say the Latin for happy, then the Latin for sad.

You'll want to know: fīlius, fīliī

fīlius, fīliī — "a son". English filial.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīlius is inherited. Old Latin had fīlios, "son", and the word is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1ylios*, "a suckling" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for nursing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīlius
- Say it: fīlius, once more
- Say it: say fīlius
- Recall: say the Latin for happy, then the Latin for sad, then say fīlius again

Before you move on

What does fīlius, fīliī mean? ("A son".) Say it once more.

70.2 fīlia, fīliae — a daughter

Before the new one: say the Latin for sad, then the Latin for a son.

You'll want to know: fīlia, fīliae

fīlia, fīliae — "a daughter".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīlia is the feminine of fīlius, "a son" (Lewis & Short); the pair is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1ylios*, "a suckling" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīlia
- Say it: fīlia, once more
- Say it: say fīlia
- Recall: say the Latin for sad, then the Latin for a son, then say fīlia again

Before you move on

What does fīlia, fīliae mean? ("A daughter".) Say it once more.

70.3 avus, avī — a grandfather

Before the new one: say the Latin for a son, then the Latin for a daughter.

You'll want to know: avus, avī

avus, avī — "a grandfather".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

avus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ewh2os*, "grandfather, elder male relative" (EtymDB 2.1). Its family includes avunculus, "mother's brother", the source of English uncle.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avus
- Say it: avus, once more
- Say it: say avus
- Recall: say the Latin for a son, then the Latin for a daughter, then say avus again

Before you move on

What does avus, avī mean? ("A grandfather".) Say it once more.

70.4 avia, aviae — a grandmother

Before the new one: say the Latin for a daughter, then the Latin for a grandfather.

You'll want to know: avia, aviae

avia, aviae — "a grandmother".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

avia is the feminine of avus, "a grandfather" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ewh2os*, "grandfather" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avia
- Say it: avia, once more
- Say it: say avia
- Recall: say the Latin for a daughter, then the Latin for a grandfather, then say avia again

Before you move on

What does avia, aviae mean? ("A grandmother".) Say it once more.

70.5 familia, familiae — a family, a household

Before the new one: say the Latin for a grandfather, then the Latin for a grandmother.

You'll want to know: familia, familiae

familia, familiae — "a family, a household".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

familia is built on famulus, "a household slave, a servant" (Lewis & Short): a familia was first everyone under one master's roof, the slaves included. English family comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: familia
- Say it: familia, once more
- Say it: say familia
- Recall: say the Latin for a grandfather, then the Latin for a grandmother, then say familia again

Before you move on

What does familia, familiae mean? ("A family, a household".) Say it once more.

Chapter 71

Husband, Wife, Children

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a husband, a wife, children, a baby and an uncle.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 71: I can name a husband, a wife, children, a baby and an uncle.

71.1 marītus, marītī — a husband

Before the new one: say the Latin for a grandmother, then the Latin for a family.

You'll want to know: marītus, marītī marītus, marītī — "a husband". English marital.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

marītus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European word for a young man of an age to marry, meryo-*, "young man" (EtymDB 2.1). English marry comes from its family through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: marītus
- Say it: marītus, once more
- Say it: say marītus
- Recall: say the Latin for a grandmother, then the Latin for a family, then say marītus again

Before you move on

What does marītus, marītī mean? ("A husband".) Say it once more.

71.2 uxor, uxōris — a wife

Before the new one: say the Latin for a family, then the Latin for a husband.

You'll want to know: uxor, uxōris

uxor, uxōris — "a wife".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

uxor, "wife", has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful, and no later proposal has won agreement. English uxorious, "doting on one's wife", comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: uxor
- Say it: uxor, once more
- Say it: say uxor
- Recall: say the Latin for a family, then the Latin for a husband, then say uxor again

Before you move on

What does uxor, uxōris mean? ("A wife".) Say it once more.

71.3 līberī, līberōrum — children

Before the new one: say the Latin for a husband, then the Latin for a wife.

You'll want to know: līberī, līberōrum

līberī, līberōrum — "children". Only in the plural.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līberī, "children", is the plural of līber, "free" (EtymDB 2.1): the free-born members of a household, as against its slaves. līber is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1lewdheros*, "free" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: līberī
- Say it: līberī, once more
- Say it: say līberī
- Recall: say the Latin for a husband, then the Latin for a wife, then say līberī again

Before you move on

What does līberī, līberōrum mean? ("Children".) Say it once more.

71.4 īnfāns, īnfantis — a baby, an infant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wife, then the Latin for children.

You'll want to know: īnfāns, īnfantis

īnfāns, īnfantis — "a baby, an infant". Literally "not speaking".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnfāns is built from in-, "not", and for, "I speak" (Lewis & Short): a baby is one who cannot yet speak. Its second part is fāns, "speaking". English infant comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnfāns
- Say it: īnfāns, once more
- Say it: say īnfāns
- Recall: say the Latin for a wife, then the Latin for children, then say īnfāns again

Before you move on

What does īnfāns, īnfantis mean? ("A baby, an infant".) Say it once more.

71.5 patruus, patruī — an uncle (father's brother)

Before the new one: say the Latin for children, then the Latin for a baby.

You'll want to know: patruus, patruī

patruus, patruī — "an uncle (father's brother)". Built on pater.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patruus is built on pater, "father" (Lewis & Short): the uncle on the father's side. pater is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ph2ter*, "father" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patruus
- Say it: patruus, once more
- Say it: say patruus
- Recall: say the Latin for children, then the Latin for a baby, then say patruus again

Before you move on

What does patruus, patruī mean? ("An uncle (father's brother)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 72

Aunt, Neighbour, Guest, Man, Woman

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name an aunt, a neighbour, a guest, a man and a woman.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 72: I can name an aunt, a neighbour, a guest, a man and a woman.

72.1 amita, amitae — an aunt (father's sister)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a baby, then the Latin for an uncle.

You'll want to know: amita, amitae

amita, amitae — "an aunt (father's sister)". English aunt comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amita is probably built on a nursery word, Proto-Indo-European amma-*, "mother" (EtymDB 2.1), with a suffix.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amita
- Say it: amita, once more
- Say it: say amita
- Recall: say the Latin for a baby, then the Latin for an uncle, then say amita again

Before you move on

What does amita, amitae mean? ("An aunt (father's sister)".) Say it once more.

72.2 vīcīnus, vīcīnī — a neighbour

Before the new one: say the Latin for an uncle, then the Latin for an aunt.

You'll want to know: vīcīnus, vīcīnī vīcīnus, vīcīnī — "a neighbour". English vicinity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīcīnus is built on vīcus, "a village, a street" (Lewis & Short): a neighbour lives in the same vīcus. vīcus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weik-*, "settlement" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīcīnus
- Say it: vīcīnus, once more
- Say it: say vīcīnus

- Recall: say the Latin for an uncle, then the Latin for an aunt, then say vīcīnus again

Before you move on

What does vīcīnus, vīcīnī mean? ("A neighbour".) Say it once more.

72.3 hospes, hospitis — a guest; a host

Before the new one: say the Latin for an aunt, then the Latin for a neighbour.

You'll want to know: hospes, hospitis

hospes, hospitis — "a guest; a host". English hospitality and hospital.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hospes is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghostipotis*, "master of guests" (EtymDB 2.1), a compound of words for "stranger, guest" and "master". English host comes from it too.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hospes
- Say it: hospes, once more
- Say it: say hospes
- Recall: say the Latin for an aunt, then the Latin for a neighbour, then say hospes again

Before you move on

What does hospes, hospitis mean? ("A guest; a host".) Say it once more.

72.4 vir, virī — a man

Before the new one: say the Latin for a neighbour, then the Latin for a guest; a host.

You'll want to know: vir, virī vir, virī — "a man". English virile and virtue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vir is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wiHros*, "man" (EtymDB 2.1). Old English wer, "man", is a cousin and survives in English werewolf.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vir
- Say it: vir, once more
- Say it: say vir
- Recall: say the Latin for a neighbour, then the Latin for a guest; a host, then say vir again

Before you move on

What does vir, virī mean? ("A man".) Say it once more.

72.5 fēmina, fēminae — a woman

Before the new one: say the Latin for a guest; a host, then the Latin for a man.

You'll want to know: fēmina, fēminae fēmina, fēminae — "a woman". English feminine.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fēmina is inherited, usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European form of dheh1-, "to suckle", dheh1mh1neh2, "the one who nurses" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fēmina
- Say it: fēmina, once more
- Say it: say fēmina
- Recall: say the Latin for a guest; a host, then the Latin for a man, then say fēmina again

Before you move on

What does fēmina, fēminae mean? ("A woman".) Say it once more.

Chapter 73

Girl, Old Man, Queen, Sailor, Poet

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a girl, an old man, a queen, a sailor and a poet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 73: I can name a girl, an old man, a queen, a sailor and a poet.

73.1 puella, puellae — a girl

Before the new one: say the Latin for a man, then the Latin for a woman.

You'll want to know: puella, puellae

puella, puellae — "a girl".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

puella is the feminine of puellus, "a little boy" (Lewis & Short), a diminutive of puer, "a boy, a child": so "a little girl".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: puella
- Say it: puella, once more
- Say it: say puella
- Recall: say the Latin for a man, then the Latin for a woman, then say puella again

Before you move on

What does puella, puellae mean? ("A girl".) Say it once more.

73.2 senex, senis — an old man

Before the new one: say the Latin for a woman, then the Latin for a girl.

You'll want to know: senex, senis senex, senis — "an old man". English senior and senate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

senex is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European senos*, "old" (EtymDB 2.1). senātus, "the senate", was first the council of elders.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: senex
- Say it: senex, once more
- Say it: say senex
- Recall: say the Latin for a woman, then the Latin for a girl, then say senex again

Before you move on

What does senex, senis mean? ("An old man".) Say it once more.

73.3 rēgīna, rēgīnae — a queen

Before the new one: say the Latin for a girl, then the Latin for an old man.

You'll want to know: rēgīna, rēgīnae

rēgīna, rēgīnae — "a queen".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēgīna is built on rēx, rēgis, "a king" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3reg-*, "to rule, a chief" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēgīna
- Say it: rēgīna, once more
- Say it: say rēgīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a girl, then the Latin for an old man, then say rēgīna again

Before you move on

What does rēgīna, rēgīnae mean? ("A queen".) Say it once more.

73.4 nauta, nautae — a sailor

Before the new one: say the Latin for an old man, then the Latin for a queen.

You'll want to know: nauta, nautae

nauta, nautae — "a sailor". English nautical.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nauta was borrowed from Greek nautēs, "a sailor" (EtymDB 2.1). Latin also had a home-grown nāvita, "sailor", built on nāvis, "a ship" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nauta
- Say it: nauta, once more
- Say it: say nauta
- Recall: say the Latin for an old man, then the Latin for a queen, then say nauta again

Before you move on

What does nauta, nautae mean? ("A sailor".) Say it once more.

73.5 poēta, poētae — a poet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a queen, then the Latin for a sailor.

You'll want to know: poēta, poētae

poēta, poētae — "a poet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

poēta was borrowed from Greek poiētēs, "a maker, a poet" (Lewis & Short), from poieō, "to make" (EtymDB 2.1): a poet was a maker of verses.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: poēta
- Say it: poēta, once more
- Say it: say poēta
- Recall: say the Latin for a queen, then the Latin for a sailor, then say poēta again

Before you move on

What does poēta, poētae mean? ("A poet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 74

Citizen, Cook, Merchant, Farmer

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a citizen, a cook, a merchant, a farmer and a field.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 74: I can name a citizen, a cook, a merchant, a farmer and a field.

74.1 cīvis, cīvis — a citizen

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sailor, then the Latin for a poet.

You'll want to know: cīvis, cīvis cīvis, cīvis — "a citizen". English civil and city.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cīvis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European keywos*, "intimate, friendly" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root kei-*, "to lie down, to settle".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cīvis
- Say it: cīvis, once more
- Say it: say cīvis
- Recall: say the Latin for a sailor, then the Latin for a poet, then say cīvis again

Before you move on

What does cīvis, cīvis mean? ("A citizen".) Say it once more.

74.2 coquus, coquī — a cook

Before the new one: say the Latin for a poet, then the Latin for a citizen.

You'll want to know: coquus, coquī

coquus, coquī — "a cook".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coquus is built on coquō, "to cook", which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pekw-*, "to cook, to ripen" (EtymDB 2.1). English cook came from coquus very early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: coquus
- Say it: coquus, once more
- Say it: say coquus
- Recall: say the Latin for a poet, then the Latin for a citizen, then say coquus again

Before you move on

What does coquus, coquī mean? ("A cook".) Say it once more.

74.3 mercātor, mercātōris — a merchant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a citizen, then the Latin for a cook.

You'll want to know: mercātor, mercātōris mercātor, mercātōris — "a merchant". English merchant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mercātor is built on mercor, "to trade", from merx, "goods, wares" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mercātor
- Say it: mercātor, once more
- Say it: say mercātor
- Recall: say the Latin for a citizen, then the Latin for a cook, then say mercātor again

Before you move on

What does mercātor, mercātōris mean? ("A merchant".) Say it once more.

74.4 agricola, agricolae — a farmer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cook, then the Latin for a merchant.

You'll want to know: agricola, agricolae agricola, agricolae — "a farmer". English agriculture.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

agricola is a compound of ager, "a field", and colō, "to till, to tend" (Lewis & Short): a field-tiller.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: agricola
- Say it: agricola, once more
- Say it: say agricola
- Recall: say the Latin for a cook, then the Latin for a merchant, then say agricola again

Before you move on

What does agricola, agricolae mean? ("A farmer".) Say it once more.

74.5 ager, agrī — a field

Before the new one: say the Latin for a merchant, then the Latin for a farmer.

You'll want to know: ager, agrī ager, agrī — "a field". Where the agricola works.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ager is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2egros*, "field" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek agros, "field", and English acre are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ager
- Say it: ager, once more
- Say it: say ager
- Recall: say the Latin for a merchant, then the Latin for a farmer, then say ager again

Before you move on

What does ager, agrī mean? ("A field".) Say it once more.

Chapter 75

Work, Sing, Dance, Laugh, Weep

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to work, to sing, to dance, to laugh and to weep.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 75: I can say to work, to sing, to dance, to laugh and to weep.

75.1 labōrō, labōrāre — to work

Before the new one: say the Latin for a farmer, then the Latin for a field.

You'll want to know: labōrō, labōrāre

labōrō, labōrāre — "to work". English labour.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

labōrō is built on labor, "toil, effort" (Lewis & Short): to work is to put in labor. Where labor itself comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: labōrō
- Say it: labōrō, once more
- Say it: say labōrō
- Recall: say the Latin for a farmer, then the Latin for a field, then say labōrō again

Before you move on

What does labōrō, labōrāre mean? ("To work".) Say it once more.

75.2 canō, canere — to sing

Before the new one: say the Latin for a field, then the Latin for to work.

You'll want to know: canō, canere

canō, canere — "to sing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

canō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European keh2n-*, "to sing" (EtymDB 2.1). English hen, the "singing" bird, is a distant cousin, and English chant comes from canō itself.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: canō
- Say it: canō, once more
- Say it: say canō
- Recall: say the Latin for a field, then the Latin for to work, then say canō again

Before you move on

What does canō, canere mean? ("To sing".) Say it once more.

75.3 saltō, saltāre — to dance

Before the new one: say the Latin for to work, then the Latin for to sing.

You'll want to know: saltō, saltāre

saltō, saltāre — "to dance".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saltō is a frequentative of saliō, "to leap" (Lewis & Short): to keep leaping, and so to dance.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saltō
- Say it: saltō, once more
- Say it: say saltō
- Recall: say the Latin for to work, then the Latin for to sing, then say saltō again

Before you move on

What does saltō, saltāre mean? ("To dance".) Say it once more.

75.4 rīdeō, rīdēre — to laugh

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sing, then the Latin for to dance.

You'll want to know: rīdeō, rīdēre

rīdeō, rīdēre — "to laugh". English ridiculous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rīdeō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English deride comes from it too.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rīdeō
- Say it: rīdeō, once more
- Say it: say rīdeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to sing, then the Latin for to dance, then say rīdeō again

Before you move on

What does rīdeō, rīdēre mean? ("To laugh".) Say it once more.

75.5 fleō, flēre — to weep

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dance, then the Latin for to laugh.

You'll want to know: fleō, flēre

fleō, flēre — "to weep".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fleō is inherited through Proto-Italic flēō*, "to weep", and probably goes back to Proto-Indo-European bhleh1-*, "to cry out, to howl" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fleō
- Say it: fleō, once more
- Say it: say fleō
- Recall: say the Latin for to dance, then the Latin for to laugh, then say fleō again

Before you move on

What does fleō, flēre mean? ("To weep".) Say it once more.

Chapter 76

Wash, Cook, Sell, Swim, Call

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to wash, to cook, to sell, to swim and to call.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 76: I can say to wash, to cook, to sell, to swim and to call.

76.1 lavō, lavāre — to wash

Before the new one: say the Latin for to laugh, then the Latin for to weep.

You'll want to know: lavō, lavāre

lavō, lavāre — "to wash". English lavatory.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lavō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European lewh3-*, "to wash" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek louō, "to wash", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lavō
- Say it: lavō, once more
- Say it: say lavō
- Recall: say the Latin for to laugh, then the Latin for to weep, then say lavō again

Before you move on

What does lavō, lavāre mean? ("To wash".) Say it once more.

76.2 coquō, coquere — to cook

Before the new one: say the Latin for to weep, then the Latin for to wash.

You'll want to know: coquō, coquere

coquō, coquere — "to cook". What a coquus does.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coquō is inherited from Proto-Italic kwekwō*, "I cook", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pekw-*, "to cook, to ripen" (EtymDB 2.1); the first p changed to match the second sound. Greek peptō, "to cook, to digest", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: coquō
- Say it: coquō, once more
- Say it: say coquō

- Recall: say the Latin for to weep, then the Latin for to wash, then say coquō again

Before you move on

What does coquō, coquere mean? ("To cook".) Say it once more.

76.3 vendō, vendere — to sell

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wash, then the Latin for to cook.

You'll want to know: vendō, vendere

vendō, vendere — "to sell". English vendor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vendō is a contraction of vēnum dō, "I put up for sale", from vēnum, "sale", and dō, "I give" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vendō
- Say it: vendō, once more
- Say it: say vendō
- Recall: say the Latin for to wash, then the Latin for to cook, then say vendō again

Before you move on

What does vendō, vendere mean? ("To sell".) Say it once more.

76.4 natō, natāre — to swim

Before the new one: say the Latin for to cook, then the Latin for to sell.

You'll want to know: natō, natāre

natō, natāre — "to swim".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

natō is a frequentative of the older verb nō, "to swim, to float" (Lewis & Short): to keep swimming.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: natō
- Say it: natō, once more
- Say it: say natō
- Recall: say the Latin for to cook, then the Latin for to sell, then say natō again

Before you move on

What does natō, natāre mean? ("To swim".) Say it once more.

76.5 vocō, vocāre — to call

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sell, then the Latin for to swim.

You'll want to know: vocō, vocāre vocō, vocāre — "to call". English vocal.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vocō belongs with vōx, "voice", and the pair is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wekw-*, "to speak" (EtymDB 2.1). English invoke comes from this family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vocō
- Say it: vocō, once more
- Say it: say vocō
- Recall: say the Latin for to sell, then the Latin for to swim, then say vocō again

Before you move on

What does vocō, vocāre mean? ("To call".) Say it once more.

Chapter 77

Send, Stay, Fall, Put, Find

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to send, to stay, to fall, to put and to find.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 77: I can say to send, to stay, to fall, to put and to find.

77.1 mittō, mittere — to send

Before the new one: say the Latin for to swim, then the Latin for to call.

You'll want to know: mittō, mittere

mittō, mittere — "to send". English mission.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mittō has no secure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European meyth2-*, "to exchange, to remove", and Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English admit comes from it too.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mittō
- Say it: mittō, once more
- Say it: say mittō
- Recall: say the Latin for to swim, then the Latin for to call, then say mittō again

Before you move on

What does mittō, mittere mean? ("To send".) Say it once more.

77.2 maneō, manēre — to stay, to remain

Before the new one: say the Latin for to call, then the Latin for to send.

You'll want to know: maneō, manēre

maneō, manēre — "to stay, to remain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maneō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European men-*, "to stay" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek menō, "to stay", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English remain and mansion come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: maneō
- Say it: maneō, once more
- Say it: say maneō
- Recall: say the Latin for to call, then the Latin for to send, then say maneō again

Before you move on

What does maneō, manēre mean? ("To stay, to remain".) Say it once more.

77.3 cadō, cadere — to fall

Before the new one: say the Latin for to send, then the Latin for to stay.

You'll want to know: cadō, cadere

cadō, cadere — "to fall".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cadō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kad-*, "to fall" (EtymDB 2.1). English cadence, case and accident come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cadō
- Say it: cadō, once more
- Say it: say cadō
- Recall: say the Latin for to send, then the Latin for to stay, then say cadō again

Before you move on

What does cadō, cadere mean? ("To fall".) Say it once more.

77.4 pōnō, pōnere — to put, to place

Before the new one: say the Latin for to stay, then the Latin for to fall.

You'll want to know: pōnō, pōnere pōnō, pōnere — "to put, to place". English position.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children pōnō is contracted from an older posinō* (Lewis & Short), made of a prefix po-, "off, away", and sinō, "to let, to leave": to let something down in its place.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pōnō
- Say it: pōnō, once more
- Say it: say pōnō
- Recall: say the Latin for to stay, then the Latin for to fall, then say pōnō again

Before you move on

What does pōnō, pōnere mean? ("To put, to place".) Say it once more.

77.5 inveniō, invenīre — to find, to come upon

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fall, then the Latin for to put.

You'll want to know: inveniō, invenīre

inveniō, invenīre — "to find, to come upon". English invent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inveniō is built from in, "on, upon", and veniō, "to come": to come upon a thing (Lewis & Short). English invent first meant "to find".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inveniō
- Say it: inveniō, once more
- Say it: say inveniō
- Recall: say the Latin for to fall, then the Latin for to put, then say inveniō again

Before you move on

What does inveniō, invenīre mean? ("To find, to come upon".) Say it once more.

Chapter 78

Live, Enter, Return, Fear, Rejoice

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to live, to enter, to return, to fear and to rejoice.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 78: I can say to live, to enter, to return, to fear and to rejoice.

78.1 vīvō, vīvere — to live

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put, then the Latin for to find.

You'll want to know: vīvō, vīvere vīvō, vīvere — "to live". English vivid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīvō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gweih3w-*, "to live" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek bios, "life", and English quick, which once meant "alive", are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīvō
- Say it: vīvō, once more
- Say it: say vīvō
- Recall: say the Latin for to put, then the Latin for to find, then say vīvō again

Before you move on

What does vīvō, vīvere mean? ("To live".) Say it once more.

78.2 intrō, intrāre — to enter

Before the new one: say the Latin for to find, then the Latin for to live.

You'll want to know: intrō, intrāre

intrō, intrāre — "to enter".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

intrō is built on intrā, "inside, within" (EtymDB 2.1): to go inside. English enter comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: intrō
- Say it: intrō, once more
- Say it: say intrō
- Recall: say the Latin for to find, then the Latin for to live, then say intrō again

Before you move on

What does intrō, intrāre mean? ("To enter".) Say it once more.

78.3 redeō, redīre — to go back, to return

Before the new one: say the Latin for to live, then the Latin for to enter.

You'll want to know: redeō, redīre

redeō, redīre — "to go back, to return". re-, back, with eō, go.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

redeō is built from red-, "back", and eō, "to go" (EtymDB 2.1); red- is the older form of the prefix, kept before a vowel.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: redeō
- Say it: redeō, once more
- Say it: say redeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to live, then the Latin for to enter, then say redeō again

Before you move on

What does redeō, redīre mean? ("To go back, to return".) Say it once more.

78.4 timeō, timēre — to fear

Before the new one: say the Latin for to enter, then the Latin for to go back.

You'll want to know: timeō, timēre

timeō, timēre — "to fear". The verb of timor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

timeō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English timid and intimidate come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: timeō
- Say it: timeō, once more
- Say it: say timeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to enter, then the Latin for to go back, then say timeō again

Before you move on

What does timeō, timēre mean? ("To fear".) Say it once more.

78.5 gaudeō, gaudēre — to rejoice, to be glad

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go back, then the Latin for to fear.

You'll want to know: gaudeō, gaudēre

gaudeō, gaudēre — "to rejoice, to be glad". The verb of gaudium.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gaudeō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European geh2w-*, "to rejoice" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek gētheō, "to rejoice", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gaudeō
- Say it: gaudeō, once more
- Say it: say gaudeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to go back, then the Latin for to fear, then say gaudeō again

Before you move on

What does gaudeō, gaudēre mean? ("To rejoice, to be glad".) Say it once more.

Chapter 79

Food and Meals

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name food, dinner, lunch, breakfast and meat.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 79: I can name food, dinner, lunch, breakfast and meat.

79.1 cibus, cibī — food

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fear, then the Latin for to rejoice.

You'll want to know: cibus, cibī

cibus, cibī — "food".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cibus, "food", has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cibus

- Say it: cibus, once more
- Say it: say cibus
- Recall: say the Latin for to fear, then the Latin for to rejoice, then say cibus again

Before you move on

What does cibus, cibī mean? ("Food".) Say it once more.

79.2 cēna, cēnae — dinner, the main meal

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rejoice, then the Latin for food.

You'll want to know: cēna, cēnae

cēna, cēnae — "dinner, the main meal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēna is inherited. An older spelling was caesna (Lewis & Short), and it is usually traced through Proto-Italic kertsnā*, "a portion", to Proto-Indo-European (s)ker-*, "to cut" (EtymDB 2.1): the meal as one's share.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cēna
- Say it: cēna, once more
- Say it: say cēna
- Recall: say the Latin for to rejoice, then the Latin for food, then say cēna again

Before you move on

What does cēna, cēnae mean? ("Dinner, the main meal".) Say it once more.

79.3 prandium, prandiī — lunch

Before the new one: say the Latin for food, then the Latin for dinner.

You'll want to know: prandium, prandiī

prandium, prandiī — "lunch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prandium probably began as "the early meal". Its first part is an old word for "early", which Lewis & Short compare with Doric Greek prān, "early". The second part is often taken as the root of edō, "to eat", but that is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prandium
- Say it: prandium, once more
- Say it: say prandium
- Recall: say the Latin for food, then the Latin for dinner, then say prandium again

Before you move on

What does prandium, prandiī mean? ("Lunch".) Say it once more.

79.4 ientāculum, ientāculī — breakfast

Before the new one: say the Latin for dinner, then the Latin for lunch.

You'll want to know: ientāculum, ientāculī

ientāculum, ientāculī — "breakfast".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ientāculum is built on ientō, "to have breakfast" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a thing. Where ientō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ientāculum
- Say it: ientāculum, once more
- Say it: say ientāculum
- Recall: say the Latin for dinner, then the Latin for lunch, then say ientāculum again

Before you move on

What does ientāculum, ientāculī mean? ("Breakfast".) Say it once more.

79.5 carō, carnis — meat

Before the new one: say the Latin for lunch, then the Latin for breakfast.

You'll want to know: carō, carnis

carō, carnis — "meat". English carnivore.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)ker-*, "to cut" (EtymDB 2.1): meat as a cut piece.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: carō
- Say it: carō, once more
- Say it: say carō
- Recall: say the Latin for lunch, then the Latin for breakfast, then say carō again

Before you move on

What does carō, carnis mean? ("Meat".) Say it once more.

Chapter 80

Cheese, Oil, Grapes, Olives

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name cheese, oil, a grape, vegetables and an olive.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 80: I can name cheese, oil, a grape, vegetables and an olive.

80.1 cāseus, cāseī — cheese

Before the new one: say the Latin for breakfast, then the Latin for meat.

You'll want to know: cāseus, cāseī

cāseus, cāseī — "cheese".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cāseus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root kwat-*, "to ferment, to turn sour" (EtymDB 2.1). English cheese was borrowed from cāseus very early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cāseus
- Say it: cāseus, once more
- Say it: say cāseus
- Recall: say the Latin for breakfast, then the Latin for meat, then say cāseus again

Before you move on

What does cāseus, cāseī mean? ("Cheese".) Say it once more.

80.2 oleum, oleī — oil

Before the new one: say the Latin for meat, then the Latin for cheese.

You'll want to know: oleum, oleī oleum, oleī — "oil". Pressed from the olive.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oleum was borrowed from Greek elaion, "olive oil" (Lewis & Short), probably from an older Greek elaiwon* (EtymDB 2.1). English oil comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: oleum
- Say it: oleum, once more
- Say it: say oleum
- Recall: say the Latin for meat, then the Latin for cheese, then say oleum again

Before you move on

What does oleum, oleī mean? ("Oil".) Say it once more.

80.3 ūva, ūvae — a grape

Before the new one: say the Latin for cheese, then the Latin for oil.

You'll want to know: ūva, ūvae

ūva, ūvae — "a grape". What vīnum is made from.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūva, "grape", has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ūva
- Say it: ūva, once more
- Say it: say ūva
- Recall: say the Latin for cheese, then the Latin for oil, then say ūva again

Before you move on

What does ūva, ūvae mean? ("A grape".) Say it once more.

80.4 holus, holeris — vegetables, greens

Before the new one: say the Latin for oil, then the Latin for a grape.

You'll want to know: holus, holeris

holus, holeris — "vegetables, greens".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

holus is inherited. Old Latin had helus, "greens", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghelh3-*, "green, yellow" (EtymDB 2.1). English yellow is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: holus
- Say it: holus, once more
- Say it: say holus
- Recall: say the Latin for oil, then the Latin for a grape, then say holus again

Before you move on

What does holus, holeris mean? ("Vegetables, greens".) Say it once more.

80.5 olīva, olīvae — an olive

Before the new one: say the Latin for a grape, then the Latin for vegetables.

You'll want to know: olīva, olīvae

olīva, olīvae — "an olive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

olīva was borrowed from Greek elaia, "olive" (Lewis & Short), probably from an older Greek elaiwa* (EtymDB 2.1). English olive comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: olīva
- Say it: olīva, once more
- Say it: say olīva
- Recall: say the Latin for a grape, then the Latin for vegetables, then say olīva again

Before you move on

What does olīva, olīvae mean? ("An olive".) Say it once more.

Chapter 81

Grain, Flour, Pear, Fig, Nut

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name grain, flour, a pear, a fig and a nut.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 81: I can name grain, flour, a pear, a fig and a nut.

81.1 frūmentum, frūmentī — grain, corn

Before the new one: say the Latin for vegetables, then the Latin for an olive.

You'll want to know: frūmentum, frūmentī

frūmentum, frūmentī — "grain, corn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frūmentum is built on the stem of fruor, "to enjoy, to have the use of" (Lewis & Short), with -mentum, an ending for a thing. fruor is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhrug-*, "to make use of" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frūmentum
- Say it: frūmentum, once more
- Say it: say frūmentum
- Recall: say the Latin for vegetables, then the Latin for an olive, then say frūmentum again

Before you move on

What does frūmentum, frūmentī mean? ("Grain, corn".) Say it once more.

81.2 farīna, farīnae — flour

Before the new one: say the Latin for an olive, then the Latin for grain.

You'll want to know: farīna, farīnae

farīna, farīnae — "flour". English farinaceous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

farīna is built on far, "spelt", a hardy wheat (Lewis & Short): flour is ground grain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: farīna
- Say it: farīna, once more
- Say it: say farīna
- Recall: say the Latin for an olive, then the Latin for grain, then say farīna again

Before you move on

What does farīna, farīnae mean? ("Flour".) Say it once more.

81.3 pirum, pirī — a pear

Before the new one: say the Latin for grain, then the Latin for flour.

You'll want to know: pirum, pirī

pirum, pirī — "a pear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pirum, "pear", has no sure origin; it is often thought to be a loan from a lost Mediterranean language. English pear was borrowed from it early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pirum
- Say it: pirum, once more
- Say it: say pirum
- Recall: say the Latin for grain, then the Latin for flour, then say pirum again

Before you move on

What does pirum, pirī mean? ("A pear".) Say it once more.

81.4 fīcus, fīcī — a fig, a fig tree

Before the new one: say the Latin for flour, then the Latin for a pear.

You'll want to know: fīcus, fīcī

fīcus, fīcī — "a fig, a fig tree".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīcus has no sure origin. Lewis & Short compare Greek sykon, "fig"; both are often taken as loans from an unknown Mediterranean language. English fig comes from fīcus through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīcus
- Say it: fīcus, once more
- Say it: say fīcus
- Recall: say the Latin for flour, then the Latin for a pear, then say fīcus again

Before you move on

What does fīcus, fīcī mean? ("A fig, a fig tree".) Say it once more.

81.5 nux, nucis — a nut

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pear, then the Latin for a fig.

You'll want to know: nux, nucis

nux, nucis — "a nut".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nux may be inherited: EtymDB 2.1 traces it to Proto-Indo-European knew-*, "nut", but Lewis & Short call its origin doubtful, and the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nux
- Say it: nux, once more
- Say it: say nux
- Recall: say the Latin for a pear, then the Latin for a fig, then say nux again

Before you move on

What does nux, nucis mean? ("A nut".) Say it once more.

Chapter 82

Table, Chair, Bed, Window

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a table, a chair, a bed, a window and a bedroom.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 82: I can name a table, a chair, a bed, a window and a bedroom.

82.1 mēnsa, mēnsae — a table

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fig, then the Latin for a nut.

You'll want to know: mēnsa, mēnsae

mēnsa, mēnsae — "a table".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mēnsa, "table", has no sure origin. It is often linked to mēnsus, "measured", the participle of mētior, "to measure", but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mēnsa
- Say it: mēnsa, once more
- Say it: say mēnsa
- Recall: say the Latin for a fig, then the Latin for a nut, then say mēnsa again

Before you move on

What does mēnsa, mēnsae mean? ("A table".) Say it once more.

82.2 sella, sellae — a chair, a seat

Before the new one: say the Latin for a nut, then the Latin for a table.

You'll want to know: sella, sellae

sella, sellae — "a chair, a seat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sella comes from an older sedla* (Lewis & Short), built on Proto-Indo-European sed-*, "to sit" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of sedeō, "to sit". English saddle is a cousin from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sella
- Say it: sella, once more
- Say it: say sella
- Recall: say the Latin for a nut, then the Latin for a table, then say sella again

Before you move on

What does sella, sellae mean? ("A chair, a seat".) Say it once more.

82.3 lectus, lectī — a bed, a couch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a table, then the Latin for a chair.

You'll want to know: lectus, lectī

lectus, lectī — "a bed, a couch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lectus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European legh-*, "to lie" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek lekhos, "bed", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English lie. It is a different word from lēctus, "chosen".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lectus
- Say it: lectus, once more
- Say it: say lectus
- Recall: say the Latin for a table, then the Latin for a chair, then say lectus again

Before you move on

What does lectus, lectī mean? ("A bed, a couch".) Say it once more.

82.4 fenestra, fenestrae — a window

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chair, then the Latin for a bed.

You'll want to know: fenestra, fenestrae

fenestra, fenestrae — "a window".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fenestra has no sure origin; it is often thought to be a loan from Etruscan, and the old link with Greek phainō, "to show", that Lewis & Short give is not generally accepted. English defenestrate is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fenestra
- Say it: fenestra, once more
- Say it: say fenestra
- Recall: say the Latin for a chair, then the Latin for a bed, then say fenestra again

Before you move on

What does fenestra, fenestrae mean? ("A window".) Say it once more.

82.5 cubiculum, cubiculī — a bedroom

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bed, then the Latin for a window.

You'll want to know: cubiculum, cubiculī

cubiculum, cubiculī — "a bedroom". English cubicle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cubiculum is built on cubō, "to lie down" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a place or tool: a room to lie down in.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cubiculum
- Say it: cubiculum, once more
- Say it: say cubiculum
- Recall: say the Latin for a bed, then the Latin for a window, then say cubiculum again

Before you move on

What does cubiculum, cubiculī mean? ("A bedroom".) Say it once more.

Chapter 83

Kitchen, Roof, Lamp, Cup, Knife

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a kitchen, a roof, a lamp, a cup and a knife.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 83: I can name a kitchen, a roof, a lamp, a cup and a knife.

83.1 culīna, culīnae — a kitchen

Before the new one: say the Latin for a window, then the Latin for a bedroom.

You'll want to know: culīna, culīnae culīna, culīnae — "a kitchen". English culinary.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

culīna has no sure origin; a link with coquō, "to cook", is often suggested but not proven.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: culīna
- Say it: culīna, once more
- Say it: say culīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a window, then the Latin for a bedroom, then say culīna again

Before you move on

What does culīna, culīnae mean? ("A kitchen".) Say it once more.

83.2 tēctum, tēctī — a roof

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bedroom, then the Latin for a kitchen.

You'll want to know: tēctum, tēctī

tēctum, tēctī — "a roof".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tēctum is the past participle of tegō, "to cover", used as a noun: "what covers" (Lewis & Short). tegō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)teg-*, "to cover with a roof" (EtymDB 2.1); English thatch is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tēctum
- Say it: tēctum, once more
- Say it: say tēctum

- Recall: say the Latin for a bedroom, then the Latin for a kitchen, then say tēctum again

Before you move on

What does tēctum, tēctī mean? ("A roof".) Say it once more.

83.3 lucerna, lucernae — a lamp

Before the new one: say the Latin for a kitchen, then the Latin for a roof.

You'll want to know: lucerna, lucernae

lucerna, lucernae — "a lamp". It gives lūx.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lucerna is built on lūceō, "to shine" (Lewis & Short), with -erna, a suffix also seen in caverna, "a hollow". lūceō belongs with lūx, "light".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lucerna
- Say it: lucerna, once more
- Say it: say lucerna
- Recall: say the Latin for a kitchen, then the Latin for a roof, then say lucerna again

Before you move on

What does lucerna, lucernae mean? ("A lamp".) Say it once more.

83.4 pōculum, pōculī — a cup

Before the new one: say the Latin for a roof, then the Latin for a lamp.

You'll want to know: pōculum, pōculī

pōculum, pōculī — "a cup".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōculum is inherited, usually traced through Proto-Italic pōtlom*, "drinking cup", to Proto-Indo-European peh3tlom*, "a thing to drink from" (EtymDB 2.1). pōtō, "to drink", belongs to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pōculum
- Say it: pōculum, once more
- Say it: say pōculum
- Recall: say the Latin for a roof, then the Latin for a lamp, then say pōculum again

Before you move on

What does pōculum, pōculī mean? ("A cup".) Say it once more.

83.5 culter, cultrī — a knife

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lamp, then the Latin for a cup.

You'll want to know: culter, cultrī

culter, cultrī — "a knife".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

culter is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European kelHtro-, "knife", built on (s)kelH-, "to split, to cut" (EtymDB 2.1). English coulter, the blade in front of a ploughshare, comes from culter.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: culter
- Say it: culter, once more
- Say it: say culter
- Recall: say the Latin for a lamp, then the Latin for a cup, then say culter again

Before you move on

What does culter, cultrī mean? ("A knife".) Say it once more.

Chapter 84

Chest, Paper, Pen, Tablet, Mirror

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a chest, paper, a writing stick, a tablet and a mirror.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 84: I can name a chest, paper, a writing stick, a tablet and a mirror.

84.1 arca, arcae — a chest, a box

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cup, then the Latin for a knife.

You'll want to know: arca, arcae

arca, arcae — "a chest, a box".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arca is usually linked with arceō, "to shut in, to keep off" (Lewis & Short): a chest keeps things shut away. English ark comes from arca.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: arca
- Say it: arca, once more
- Say it: say arca
- Recall: say the Latin for a cup, then the Latin for a knife, then say arca again

Before you move on

What does arca, arcae mean? ("A chest, a box".) Say it once more.

84.2 charta, chartae — paper, a sheet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a knife, then the Latin for a chest.

You'll want to know: charta, chartae charta, chartae — "paper, a sheet". English chart and card.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

charta was borrowed from Greek khartēs, "a sheet of papyrus" (Lewis & Short), which may come from kharassō, "to scratch, to engrave" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: charta
- Say it: charta, once more
- Say it: say charta
- Recall: say the Latin for a knife, then the Latin for a chest, then say charta again

Before you move on

What does charta, chartae mean? ("Paper, a sheet".) Say it once more.

84.3 stilus, stilī — a stylus, a writing stick

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chest, then the Latin for paper.

You'll want to know: stilus, stilī stilus, stilī — "a stylus, a writing stick". English style.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stilus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root steyg-*, "to prick, to pierce" (EtymDB 2.1); English stick is a cousin (Lewis & Short). The spelling with y came later, from a mistaken link with Greek stylos, "pillar".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: stilus
- Say it: stilus, once more
- Say it: say stilus
- Recall: say the Latin for a chest, then the Latin for paper, then say stilus again

Before you move on

What does stilus, stilī mean? ("A stylus, a writing stick".) Say it once more.

84.4 tabula, tabulae — a writing tablet, a board

Before the new one: say the Latin for paper, then the Latin for a stylus.

You'll want to know: tabula, tabulae

tabula, tabulae — "a writing tablet, a board". English table.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tabula has no sure origin. Lewis & Short connect it with taberna, "a booth, a shop", but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tabula
- Say it: tabula, once more
- Say it: say tabula
- Recall: say the Latin for paper, then the Latin for a stylus, then say tabula again

Before you move on

What does tabula, tabulae mean? ("A writing tablet, a board".) Say it once more.

84.5 speculum, speculī — a mirror

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stylus, then the Latin for a writing tablet.

You'll want to know: speculum, speculī

speculum, speculī — "a mirror".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

speculum is built on speciō, "to look at" (Lewis & Short), with -ulum, an ending for a tool: the thing one looks into. speciō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European spek-*, "to look" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: speculum
- Say it: speculum, once more
- Say it: say speculum
- Recall: say the Latin for a stylus, then the Latin for a writing tablet, then say speculum again

Before you move on

What does speculum, speculī mean? ("A mirror".) Say it once more.

Chapter 85

Ball, Wheel, Sword, Crown, Ring

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a ball, a wheel, a sword, a crown and a ring.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 85: I can name a ball, a wheel, a sword, a crown and a ring.

85.1 pila, pilae — a ball

Before the new one: say the Latin for a writing tablet, then the Latin for a mirror.

You'll want to know: pila, pilae

pila, pilae — "a ball".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pila, "ball", has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. It is a different word from pīla, "a pillar", and from pīla, "a mortar".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pila
- Say it: pila, once more
- Say it: say pila
- Recall: say the Latin for a writing tablet, then the Latin for a mirror, then say pila again

Before you move on

What does pila, pilae mean? ("A ball".) Say it once more.

85.2 rota, rotae — a wheel

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mirror, then the Latin for a ball.

You'll want to know: rota, rotae rota, rotae — "a wheel". English rotate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rota is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European Hroth2-o-, "wheel", from a root Hret-, "to run, to roll" (EtymDB 2.1). German Rad, "wheel", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rota
- Say it: rota, once more
- Say it: say rota
- Recall: say the Latin for a mirror, then the Latin for a ball, then say rota again

Before you move on

What does rota, rotae mean? ("A wheel".) Say it once more.

85.3 gladius, gladiī — a sword

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ball, then the Latin for a wheel.

You'll want to know: gladius, gladiī gladius, gladiī — "a sword". A gladiator carried one.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gladius is usually thought to be a loan from a Celtic language; Old Irish claideb, "sword", is often compared. Lewis & Short offer only an uncertain Latin link.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gladius
- Say it: gladius, once more
- Say it: say gladius
- Recall: say the Latin for a ball, then the Latin for a wheel, then say gladius again

Before you move on

What does gladius, gladiī mean? ("A sword".) Say it once more.

85.4 corōna, corōnae — a crown, a garland

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wheel, then the Latin for a sword.

You'll want to know: corōna, corōnae

corōna, corōnae — "a crown, a garland".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

corōna was borrowed from Greek korōnē, "a curved thing, a wreath" (Lewis & Short), probably from korōnos, "curved" (EtymDB 2.1). English crown comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: corōna
- Say it: corōna, once more
- Say it: say corōna
- Recall: say the Latin for a wheel, then the Latin for a sword, then say corōna again

Before you move on

What does corōna, corōnae mean? ("A crown, a garland".) Say it once more.

85.5 ānulus, ānulī — a ring

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sword, then the Latin for a crown.

You'll want to know: ānulus, ānulī

ānulus, ānulī — "a ring".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ānulus is built on ānus, "a ring" (Lewis & Short), with -ulus, a suffix. ānus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1eh2no-*, "ring"

(EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ānulus
- Say it: ānulus, once more
- Say it: say ānulus
- Recall: say the Latin for a sword, then the Latin for a crown, then say ānulus again

Before you move on

What does ānulus, ānulī mean? ("A ring".) Say it once more.

85.6 The body, health and people — a first pass

Say the words for a crown and a ring.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an arm, a finger, a tooth, the tongue; a language, the nose
- the neck, the shoulder, a knee, the heart, blood
- a hair, the belly, the back, the forehead, a beard
- the chest, a leg, a cheek, a fingernail, healthy
- a fever, a cough, pain, medicine, an illness
- sick, tired, hunger, thirst, care
- joy, anger, fear, happy, sad

- a son, a daughter, a grandfather, a grandmother, a family
- a husband, a wife, children, a baby, an uncle
- an aunt, a neighbour, a guest; a host, a man, a woman
- a girl, an old man, a queen, a sailor, a poet

Before you move on

An arm? (bracchium, bracchiī.) A finger? (digitus, digitī.) A tooth? (dēns, dentis.) The tongue; a language? (lingua, linguae.) The nose? (nāsus, nāsī.) The neck? (collum, collī.) The shoulder? (umerus, umerī.) A knee? (genū, genūs.) The heart? (cor, cordis.) Blood? (sanguis, sanguinis.) A hair? (capillus, capillī.) The belly? (venter, ventris.) The back? (tergum, tergī.) The forehead? (frōns, frontis.) A beard? (barba, barbae.) The chest? (pectus, pectoris.) A leg? (crūs, crūris.) A cheek? (gena, genae.) A fingernail? (unguis, unguis.) Healthy? (sānus, sāna, sānum.) A fever? (febris, febris.) A cough? (tussis, tussis.) Pain? (dolor, dolōris.) Medicine? (medicīna, medicīnae.) An illness? (morbus, morbī.) Sick? (aeger, aegra, aegrum.) Tired? (fessus, fessa, fessum.) Hunger? (famēs, famis.) Thirst? (sitis, sitis.) Care? (cūra, cūrae.) Joy? (gaudium, gaudiī.) Anger? (īra, īrae.) Fear? (timor, timōris.) Happy? (laetus, laeta, laetum.) Sad? (trīstis, trīste.) A son? (fīlius, fīliī.) A daughter? (fīlia, fīliae.) A grandfather? (avus, avī.) A grandmother? (avia, aviae.) A family? (familia, familiae.) A husband? (marītus, marītī.) A wife? (uxor, uxōris.) Children? (līberī, līberōrum.) A baby? (īnfāns, īnfantis.) An uncle? (patruus, patruī.) An aunt? (amita, amitae.) A neighbour? (vīcīnus, vīcīnī.) A guest; a host? (hospes, hospitis.) A man? (vir, virī.) A woman? (fēmina, fēminae.) A girl? (puella, puellae.) An old man? (senex, senis.) A queen? (rēgīna, rēgīnae.) A sailor? (nauta, nautae.) A poet? (poēta, poētae.)

85.7 Verbs, food, the house and things — a second pass

Say the words for a citizen and a cook.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a citizen, a cook, a merchant, a farmer, a field
- to work, to sing, to dance, to laugh, to weep
- to wash, to cook, to sell, to swim, to call
- to send, to stay, to fall, to put, to find
- to live, to enter, to go back, to fear, to rejoice
- food, dinner, lunch, breakfast, meat
- cheese, oil, a grape, vegetables, an olive
- grain, flour, a pear, a fig, a nut
- a table, a chair, a bed, a window, a bedroom
- a kitchen, a roof, a lamp, a cup, a knife
- a chest, paper, a stylus, a writing tablet, a mirror
- a ball, a wheel, a sword, a crown, a ring

Before you move on

A citizen? (cīvis, cīvis.) A cook? (coquus, coquī.) A merchant? (mercātor, mercātōris.) A farmer? (agricola, agricolae.) A field? (ager, agrī.) To work? (labōrō, labōrāre.) To sing? (canō, canere.) To dance? (saltō, saltāre.) To laugh? (rīdeō, rīdēre.) To weep? (fleō, flēre.) To wash? (lavō, lavāre.) To cook? (coquō, coquere.) To sell? (vendō, vendere.) To swim? (natō, natāre.) To call? (vocō, vocāre.) To send? (mittō, mittere.) To stay? (maneō, manēre.) To fall? (cadō, cadere.) To put? (pōnō, pōnere.) To find? (inveniō, invenīre.) To live? (vīvō, vīvere.) To enter? (intrō, intrāre.) To go back? (redeō, redīre.) To fear? (timeō, timēre.) To rejoice? (gaudeō, gaudēre.) Food? (cibus, cibī.) Dinner? (cēna, cēnae.) Lunch? (prandium, prandiī.) Breakfast? (ientāculum, ientāculī.) Meat? (carō, carnis.) Cheese? (cāseus, cāseī.) Oil? (oleum, oleī.) A grape? (ūva, ūvae.) Vegetables? (holus, holeris.) An olive? (olīva, olīvae.) Grain? (frūmentum, frūmentī.) Flour? (farīna, farīnae.) A pear? (pirum, pirī.) A fig? (fīcus, fīcī.) A nut? (nux, nucis.) A table? (mēnsa, mēnsae.) A chair? (sella, sellae.) A bed? (lectus, lectī.) A window? (fenestra, fenestrae.) A bedroom? (cubiculum, cubiculī.) A kitchen? (culīna, culīnae.) A roof? (tēctum, tēctī.) A lamp? (lucerna, lucernae.) A cup? (pōculum, pōculī.) A knife? (culter, cultrī.) A chest? (arca, arcae.) Paper? (charta, chartae.) A stylus? (stilus, stilī.) A writing tablet? (tabula, tabulae.) A mirror? (speculum, speculī.) A ball? (pila, pilae.) A wheel? (rota, rotae.) A sword? (gladius, gladiī.) A crown? (corōna, corōnae.) A ring? (ānulus, ānulī.)

Chapter 86

Tree, Flower, Leaf, Forest, Mountain

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a tree, a flower, a leaf, a forest and a mountain.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 86: I can name a tree, a flower, a leaf, a forest and a mountain.

86.1 arbor, arboris — a tree

Before the new one: say the Latin for a crown, then the Latin for a ring.

You'll want to know: arbor, arboris arbor, arboris — "a tree". English arboretum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children arbor had an older form arbōs (Lewis & Short). Its deeper origin is uncertain; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed link with Proto-Indo-European h3erdh-*, "high, to grow".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: arbor
- Say it: arbor, once more
- Say it: say arbor
- Recall: say the Latin for a crown, then the Latin for a ring, then say arbor again

Before you move on

What does arbor, arboris mean? ("A tree".) Say it once more.

86.2 flōs, flōris — a flower

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ring, then the Latin for a tree.

You'll want to know: flōs, flōris flōs, flōris — "a flower". English floral.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flōs is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhleh3-*, "to thrive, to bloom" (EtymDB 2.1). English bloom and blossom are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: flōs
- Say it: flōs, once more
- Say it: say flōs
- Recall: say the Latin for a ring, then the Latin for a tree, then say flōs again

Before you move on

What does flōs, flōris mean? ("A flower".) Say it once more.

86.3 folium, foliī — a leaf

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tree, then the Latin for a flower.

You'll want to know: folium, foliī folium, foliī — "a leaf". English foliage.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

folium is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bholh3yom*, "leaf" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek phyllon, "leaf", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: folium
- Say it: folium, once more
- Say it: say folium
- Recall: say the Latin for a tree, then the Latin for a flower, then say folium again

Before you move on

What does folium, foliī mean? ("A leaf".) Say it once more.

86.4 silva, silvae — a forest, a wood

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flower, then the Latin for a leaf.

You'll want to know: silva, silvae

silva, silvae — "a forest, a wood".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

silva has no sure origin. Lewis & Short compare Greek hylē, "wood, forest", and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European swel-*, "forest", but neither link is settled. English sylvan comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: silva
- Say it: silva, once more
- Say it: say silva
- Recall: say the Latin for a flower, then the Latin for a leaf, then say silva again

Before you move on

What does silva, silvae mean? ("A forest, a wood".) Say it once more.

86.5 mōns, montis — a mountain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a leaf, then the Latin for a forest.

You'll want to know: mōns, montis mōns, montis — "a mountain". English mount.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mōns is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root men-*, "to stand out" (EtymDB 2.1); ēmineō, "to stand out", and mentum, "chin", are often put in the same family (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mōns
- Say it: mōns, once more
- Say it: say mōns
- Recall: say the Latin for a leaf, then the Latin for a forest, then say mōns again

Before you move on

What does mōns, montis mean? ("A mountain".) Say it once more.

Chapter 87

River, Lake, Stream, Spring, Coast

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a river, a lake, a stream, a spring and a coast.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 87: I can name a river, a lake, a stream, a spring and a coast.

87.1 flūmen, flūminis — a river

Before the new one: say the Latin for a forest, then the Latin for a mountain.

You'll want to know: flūmen, flūminis

flūmen, flūminis — "a river".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flūmen is built on fluō, "to flow" (EtymDB 2.1), with -men, an ending for a thing or a result: the flowing. fluō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhlew-*, "to swell, to flow" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: flūmen
- Say it: flūmen, once more
- Say it: say flūmen
- Recall: say the Latin for a forest, then the Latin for a mountain, then say flūmen again

Before you move on

What does flūmen, flūminis mean? ("A river".) Say it once more.

87.2 lacus, lacūs — a lake

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mountain, then the Latin for a river.

You'll want to know: lacus, lacūs lacus, lacūs — "a lake". English lake.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lacus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European lokus*, "pond, pool" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lacus
- Say it: lacus, once more
- Say it: say lacus
- Recall: say the Latin for a mountain, then the Latin for a river, then say lacus again

Before you move on

What does lacus, lacūs mean? ("A lake".) Say it once more.

87.3 rīvus, rīvī — a stream

Before the new one: say the Latin for a river, then the Latin for a lake.

You'll want to know: rīvus, rīvī rīvus, rīvī — "a stream". English rival: people who share a stream.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rīvus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3rih2wos*, "brook, small stream" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for flowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rīvus
- Say it: rīvus, once more
- Say it: say rīvus
- Recall: say the Latin for a river, then the Latin for a lake, then say rīvus again

Before you move on

What does rīvus, rīvī mean? ("A stream".) Say it once more.

87.4 fōns, fontis — a spring, a fountain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lake, then the Latin for a stream.

You'll want to know: fōns, fontis fōns, fontis — "a spring, a fountain". English fountain.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fōns has no sure origin; Lewis & Short tie it to fundō, "to pour", but that link is doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fōns
- Say it: fōns, once more
- Say it: say fōns
- Recall: say the Latin for a lake, then the Latin for a stream, then say fōns again

Before you move on

What does fōns, fontis mean? ("A spring, a fountain".) Say it once more.

87.5 ōra, ōrae — a coast, an edge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stream, then the Latin for a spring.

You'll want to know: ōra, ōrae

ōra, ōrae — "a coast, an edge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōra is of uncertain origin; it is often linked with ōs, ōris, "mouth, opening": an edge as a rim.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōra
- Say it: ōra, once more
- Say it: say ōra
- Recall: say the Latin for a stream, then the Latin for a spring, then say ōra again

Before you move on

What does ōra, ōrae mean? ("A coast, an edge".) Say it once more.

Chapter 88

Stone, Sand, Hill, Valley, Cave

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a stone, sand, a hill, a valley and a cave.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 88: I can name a stone, sand, a hill, a valley and a cave.

88.1 lapis, lapidis — a stone

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spring, then the Latin for a coast.

You'll want to know: lapis, lapidis

lapis, lapidis — "a stone".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lapis has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. Greek lepas, "bare rock", is sometimes compared.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lapis
- Say it: lapis, once more
- Say it: say lapis
- Recall: say the Latin for a spring, then the Latin for a coast, then say lapis again

Before you move on

What does lapis, lapidis mean? ("A stone".) Say it once more.

88.2 harēna, harēnae — sand

Before the new one: say the Latin for a coast, then the Latin for a stone.

You'll want to know: harēna, harēnae

harēna, harēnae — "sand". An arena was floored with it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

harēna has no sure origin. Lewis & Short record a Sabine form fasēna, "sand", and the word may have reached Latin from a neighbouring language.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: harēna
- Say it: harēna, once more
- Say it: say harēna
- Recall: say the Latin for a coast, then the Latin for a stone, then say harēna again

Before you move on

What does harēna, harēnae mean? ("Sand".) Say it once more.

88.3 collis, collis — a hill

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stone, then the Latin for sand.

You'll want to know: collis, collis

collis, collis — "a hill".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

collis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European klHnis*, "hill", from kelH-*, "to rise" (EtymDB 2.1); excellō, "to rise above", comes from the same root (Lewis & Short). English hill is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: collis
- Say it: collis, once more
- Say it: say collis
- Recall: say the Latin for a stone, then the Latin for sand, then say collis again

Before you move on

What does collis, collis mean? ("A hill".) Say it once more.

88.4 vallis, vallis — a valley

Before the new one: say the Latin for sand, then the Latin for a hill.

You'll want to know: vallis, vallis vallis, vallis — "a valley". English valley.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vallis has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vallis
- Say it: vallis, once more
- Say it: say vallis
- Recall: say the Latin for sand, then the Latin for a hill, then say vallis again

Before you move on

What does vallis, vallis mean? ("A valley".) Say it once more.

88.5 spēlunca, spēluncae — a cave

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hill, then the Latin for a valley.

You'll want to know: spēlunca, spēluncae

spēlunca, spēluncae — "a cave".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spēlunca was borrowed from Greek spēlynx, "cave, grotto" (Lewis & Short), from speos, "cave" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spēlunca
- Say it: spēlunca, once more
- Say it: say spēlunca
- Recall: say the Latin for a hill, then the Latin for a valley, then say spēlunca again

Before you move on

What does spēlunca, spēluncae mean? ("A cave".) Say it once more.

Chapter 89

Cloud, Rain, Snow, Plain, Shore

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a cloud, rain, snow, a plain and a shore.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 89: I can name a cloud, rain, snow, a plain and a shore.

89.1 nūbēs, nūbis — a cloud

Before the new one: say the Latin for a valley, then the Latin for a cave.

You'll want to know: nūbēs, nūbis

nūbēs, nūbis — "a cloud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūbēs is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root (s)newdh-*, "to cover, to veil" (EtymDB 2.1): a cloud covers the sky.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūbēs
- Say it: nūbēs, once more
- Say it: say nūbēs
- Recall: say the Latin for a valley, then the Latin for a cave, then say nūbēs again

Before you move on

What does nūbēs, nūbis mean? ("A cloud".) Say it once more.

89.2 pluvia, pluviae — rain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cave, then the Latin for a cloud.

You'll want to know: pluvia, pluviae

pluvia, pluviae — "rain". The noun beside pluit, it rains.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pluvia is the feminine of pluvius, "rainy", used as a noun with aqua, "water", understood (Lewis & Short): rainy water. pluvius is built on pluit, "it rains" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pluvia
- Say it: pluvia, once more
- Say it: say pluvia
- Recall: say the Latin for a cave, then the Latin for a cloud, then say pluvia again

Before you move on

What does pluvia, pluviae mean? ("Rain".) Say it once more.

89.3 nix, nivis — snow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cloud, then the Latin for rain.

You'll want to know: nix, nivis

nix, nivis — "snow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nix, nivis, is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European snigwhs*, "snow" (EtymDB 2.1); Latin lost the first s. English snow and Greek nipha, "snow" (Lewis & Short), are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nix
- Say it: nix, once more
- Say it: say nix
- Recall: say the Latin for a cloud, then the Latin for rain, then say nix again

Before you move on

What does nix, nivis mean? ("Snow".) Say it once more.

89.4 campus, campī — a plain, an open field

Before the new one: say the Latin for rain, then the Latin for snow.

You'll want to know: campus, campī campus, campī — "a plain, an open field". English campus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

campus has no sure origin. EtymDB 2.1 tentatively links it to a Proto-Indo-European root kamp-*, "to bend", and Lewis & Short compare Greek kēpos, "garden"; neither link is settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: campus
- Say it: campus, once more
- Say it: say campus
- Recall: say the Latin for rain, then the Latin for snow, then say campus again

Before you move on

What does campus, campī mean? ("A plain, an open field".) Say it once more.

89.5 līitus, līitoris — a shore, a beach

Before the new one: say the Latin for snow, then the Latin for a plain.

You'll want to know: līitus, līitoris

līitus, līitoris — "a shore, a beach".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līitus has no sure origin; Lewis & Short compare Greek limēn, "harbour", but the link is uncertain. It is a different word from litus,

"smeared", from linō, "to smear".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lītus
- Say it: lītus, once more
- Say it: say lītus
- Recall: say the Latin for snow, then the Latin for a plain, then say lītus again

Before you move on

What does lītus, lītoris mean? ("A shore, a beach".) Say it once more.

Chapter 90

Horse, Ox, Sheep, Goat, Pig

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a horse, an ox, a sheep, a goat and a pig.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 90: I can name a horse, an ox, a sheep, a goat and a pig.

90.1 equus, equī — a horse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plain, then the Latin for a shore.

You'll want to know: equus, equī equus, equī — "a horse". English equestrian.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

equus is inherited. Old Latin wrote equos, and it is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1ekwos*, "horse" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hippos, "horse", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: equus
- Say it: equus, once more
- Say it: say equus
- Recall: say the Latin for a plain, then the Latin for a shore, then say equus again

Before you move on

What does equus, equī mean? ("A horse".) Say it once more.

90.2 bōs, bovis — an ox, a cow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shore, then the Latin for a horse.

You'll want to know: bōs, bovis

bōs, bovis — "an ox, a cow". English bovine.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bōs is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwows*, "cow" (EtymDB 2.1), but its b suggests it reached Latin from a neighbouring Italic language such as Oscan or Umbrian: Latin's own sound changes turned that gw into v. English cow is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bōs
- Say it: bōs, once more
- Say it: say bōs

- Recall: say the Latin for a shore, then the Latin for a horse, then say bōs again

Before you move on

What does bōs, bovis mean? ("An ox, a cow".) Say it once more.

90.3 ovis, ovis — a sheep

Before the new one: say the Latin for a horse, then the Latin for an ox.

You'll want to know: ovis, ovis

ovis, ovis — "a sheep".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ovis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2owis*, "sheep" (EtymDB 2.1). English ewe is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ovis
- Say it: ovis, once more
- Say it: say ovis
- Recall: say the Latin for a horse, then the Latin for an ox, then say ovis again

Before you move on

What does ovis, ovis mean? ("A sheep".) Say it once more.

90.4 capra, caprae — a goat

Before the new one: say the Latin for an ox, then the Latin for a sheep.

You'll want to know: capra, caprae

capra, caprae — "a goat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

capra is the feminine of caper, "a he-goat" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kapros*, "buck, he-goat" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: capra
- Say it: capra, once more
- Say it: say capra
- Recall: say the Latin for an ox, then the Latin for a sheep, then say capra again

Before you move on

What does capra, caprae mean? ("A goat".) Say it once more.

90.5 porcus, porcī — a pig

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sheep, then the Latin for a goat.

You'll want to know: porcus, porcī

porcus, porcī — "a pig". English pork.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

porcus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European porkos*, "young pig" (EtymDB 2.1). English farrow, "a litter of pigs", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: porcus
- Say it: porcus, once more
- Say it: say porcus
- Recall: say the Latin for a sheep, then the Latin for a goat, then say porcus again

Before you move on

What does porcus, porcī mean? ("A pig".) Say it once more.

Chapter 91

Bird, Wolf, Lion, Bear, Snake

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a bird, a wolf, a lion, a bear and a snake.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 91: I can name a bird, a wolf, a lion, a bear and a snake.

91.1 avis, avis — a bird

Before the new one: say the Latin for a goat, then the Latin for a pig.

You'll want to know: avis, avis avis, avis — "a bird". English aviation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

avis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ewis*, "bird" (EtymDB 2.1). auspex, "a bird-watcher", the priest who read omens from birds, is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avis
- Say it: avis, once more
- Say it: say avis
- Recall: say the Latin for a goat, then the Latin for a pig, then say avis again

Before you move on

What does avis, avis mean? ("A bird".) Say it once more.

91.2 lupus, lupī — a wolf

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pig, then the Latin for a bird.

You'll want to know: lupus, lupī

lupus, lupī — "a wolf".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lupus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wlkwos*, "wolf" (EtymDB 2.1), with Greek lykos, "wolf", and English wolf as cousins (Lewis & Short). Its p, where Latin would have qu, suggests it came in from a neighbouring Italic language such as Sabine.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lupus
- Say it: lupus, once more
- Say it: say lupus

- Recall: say the Latin for a pig, then the Latin for a bird, then say lupus again

Before you move on

What does lupus, lupī mean? ("A wolf".) Say it once more.

91.3 leō, leōnis — a lion

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bird, then the Latin for a wolf.

You'll want to know: leō, leōnis

leō, leōnis — "a lion".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

leō was borrowed from Greek leōn, "lion" (Lewis & Short); where Greek got the word is uncertain. English lion comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: leō
- Say it: leō, once more
- Say it: say leō
- Recall: say the Latin for a bird, then the Latin for a wolf, then say leō again

Before you move on

What does leō, leōnis mean? ("A lion".) Say it once more.

91.4 ursus, ursī — a bear

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wolf, then the Latin for a lion.

You'll want to know: ursus, ursī

ursus, ursī — "a bear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ursus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2rtkos*, "bear" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek arktos, "bear", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English Arctic, the region under the stars of the Bear, comes from the Greek.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ursus
- Say it: ursus, once more
- Say it: say ursus
- Recall: say the Latin for a wolf, then the Latin for a lion, then say ursus again

Before you move on

What does ursus, ursī mean? ("A bear".) Say it once more.

91.5 serpēns, serpentis — a snake

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lion, then the Latin for a bear.

You'll want to know: serpēns, serpentis

serpēns, serpentis — "a snake". Literally "the creeper".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

serpēns is the present participle of serpō, "to creep" (Lewis & Short), used as a noun: the creeping thing. serpō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European serp-*, "to crawl, to creep" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: serpēns
- Say it: serpēns, once more
- Say it: say serpēns
- Recall: say the Latin for a lion, then the Latin for a bear, then say serpēns again

Before you move on

What does serpēns, serpentis mean? ("A snake".) Say it once more.

Chapter 92

Mouse, Hen, Donkey, Elephant, Deer

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a mouse, a hen, a donkey, an elephant and a deer.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 92: I can name a mouse, a hen, a donkey, an elephant and a deer.

92.1 mūs, mūris — a mouse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bear, then the Latin for a snake.

You'll want to know: mūs, mūris

mūs, mūris — "a mouse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūs is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European muh2s*, "mouse" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek mys, "mouse" (Lewis & Short), and English mouse are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mūs
- Say it: mūs, once more
- Say it: say mūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a bear, then the Latin for a snake, then say mūs again

Before you move on

What does mūs, mūris mean? ("A mouse".) Say it once more.

92.2 gallīna, gallīnae — a hen

Before the new one: say the Latin for a snake, then the Latin for a mouse.

You'll want to know: gallīna, gallīnae

gallīna, gallīnae — "a hen". It lays the ōvum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gallīna is built on gallus, "a rooster" (Lewis & Short): the hen is the rooster's female. Where gallus comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gallīna
- Say it: gallīna, once more
- Say it: say gallīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a snake, then the Latin for a mouse, then say gallīna again

Before you move on

What does gallīna, gallīnae mean? ("A hen".) Say it once more.

92.3 asinus, asinī — a donkey

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mouse, then the Latin for a hen.

You'll want to know: asinus, asinī

asinus, asinī — "a donkey".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

asinus is probably a loan from an eastern language, as Lewis & Short already suspected; Greek onos, "donkey", may share the source, which is unknown. English ass comes from asinus.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: asinus
- Say it: asinus, once more
- Say it: say asinus
- Recall: say the Latin for a mouse, then the Latin for a hen, then say asinus again

Before you move on

What does asinus, asinī mean? ("A donkey".) Say it once more.

92.4 elephantus, elephantī — an elephant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hen, then the Latin for a donkey.

You'll want to know: elephantus, elephantī

elephantus, elephantī — "an elephant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

elephantus was borrowed from Greek elephas, elephantos, "elephant, ivory" (Lewis & Short). Where Greek got the word is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: elephantus
- Say it: elephantus, once more
- Say it: say elephantus
- Recall: say the Latin for a hen, then the Latin for a donkey, then say elephantus again

Before you move on

What does elephantus, elephantī mean? ("An elephant".) Say it once more.

92.5 cervus, cervī — a deer, a stag

Before the new one: say the Latin for a donkey, then the Latin for an elephant.

You'll want to know: cervus, cervī

cervus, cervī — "a deer, a stag".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cervus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European krh2wos*, "deer, stag", from kerh2-*, "horn" (EtymDB 2.1): the horned one. cornū, "horn", comes from the same root (Lewis & Short), and English hart is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cervus
- Say it: cervus, once more
- Say it: say cervus
- Recall: say the Latin for a donkey, then the Latin for an elephant, then say cervus again

Before you move on

What does cervus, cervī mean? ("A deer, a stag".) Say it once more.

Chapter 93

Big and Small, Long and Short, High

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say big, small, long, short and high.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 93: I can say big, small, long, short and high.

93.1 magnus, magna, magnum — big, great

Before the new one: say the Latin for an elephant, then the Latin for a deer.

You'll want to know: magnus, magna, magnum magnus, magna, magnum — "big, great". English magnify.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

magnus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mgh2nos*, "big", from megh2s*, "great" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek megas, "great", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: magnus
- Say it: magnus, once more
- Say it: say magnus
- Recall: say the Latin for an elephant, then the Latin for a deer, then say magnus again

Before you move on

What does magnus, magna, magnum mean? ("Big, great".) Say it once more.

93.2 parvus, parva, parvum — small

Before the new one: say the Latin for a deer, then the Latin for big.

You'll want to know: parvus, parva, parvum

parvus, parva, parvum — "small".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parvus has no sure origin; it may belong with paucus, "few", and paulum, "a little", but the details are disputed.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parvus
- Say it: parvus, once more
- Say it: say parvus
- Recall: say the Latin for a deer, then the Latin for big, then say parvus again

Before you move on

What does parvus, parva, parvum mean? ("Small".) Say it once more.

93.3 longus, longa, longum — long

Before the new one: say the Latin for big, then the Latin for small.

You'll want to know: longus, longa, longum

longus, longa, longum — "long".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

longus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dlongh-*, "long" (EtymDB 2.1), with the first d lost. English long is probably a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: longus
- Say it: longus, once more
- Say it: say longus
- Recall: say the Latin for big, then the Latin for small, then say longus again

Before you move on

What does longus, longa, longum mean? ("Long".) Say it once more.

93.4 brevis, breve — short, brief

Before the new one: say the Latin for small, then the Latin for long.

You'll want to know: brevis, breve

brevis, breve — "short, brief". English brief.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

brevis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mreghus*, "short" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek brakhys, "short", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: brevis
- Say it: brevis, once more
- Say it: say brevis
- Recall: say the Latin for small, then the Latin for long, then say brevis again

Before you move on

What does brevis, breve mean? ("Short, brief".) Say it once more.

93.5 altus, alta, altum — high; deep

Before the new one: say the Latin for long, then the Latin for short.

You'll want to know: altus, alta, altum

altus, alta, altum — "high; deep". English altitude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

altus is the old past participle of alō, "to nourish, to make grow" (Lewis & Short): high was first "grown tall". The root is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2el-*, "to grow, to nourish" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: altus
- Say it: altus, once more
- Say it: say altus
- Recall: say the Latin for long, then the Latin for short, then say altus again

Before you move on

What does altus, alta, altum mean? ("High; deep".) Say it once more.

Chapter 94

New, Old, Light, Fast, Slow

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say new, old, light, fast and slow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 94: I can say new, old, light, fast and slow.

94.1 novus, nova, novum — new

Before the new one: say the Latin for short, then the Latin for high; deep.

You'll want to know: novus, nova, novum

novus, nova, novum — "new". English novel.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

novus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European newos*, "new" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek neos, "new", and English new are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: novus
- Say it: novus, once more
- Say it: say novus
- Recall: say the Latin for short, then the Latin for high; deep, then say novus again

Before you move on

What does novus, nova, novum mean? ("New".) Say it once more.

94.2 vetus, veteris — old

Before the new one: say the Latin for high; deep, then the Latin for new.

You'll want to know: vetus, veteris

vetus, veteris — "old". English veteran.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vetus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wetos*, "year" (EtymDB 2.1): old meant "full of years". Greek etos, "year", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vetus
- Say it: vetus, once more
- Say it: say vetus
- Recall: say the Latin for high; deep, then the Latin for new, then say vetus again

Before you move on

What does vetus, veteris mean? ("Old".) Say it once more.

94.3 levis, leve — light (not heavy)

Before the new one: say the Latin for new, then the Latin for old.

You'll want to know: levis, leve levis, leve — "light (not heavy)". English levity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

levis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1lengwh-*, "light in weight" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek elakhys, "small", and English light are cousins (Lewis & Short). It is a different word from lēvis, "smooth".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: levis
- Say it: levis, once more
- Say it: say levis
- Recall: say the Latin for new, then the Latin for old, then say levis again

Before you move on

What does levis, leve mean? ("Light (not heavy)".) Say it once more.

94.4 celer, celeris, celere — fast, quick

Before the new one: say the Latin for old, then the Latin for light.

You'll want to know: celer, celeris, celere

celer, celeris, celere — "fast, quick".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

celer has no sure origin; Greek kelēs, "a racehorse", is often compared. English accelerate is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: celer
- Say it: celer, once more
- Say it: say celer
- Recall: say the Latin for old, then the Latin for light, then say celer again

Before you move on

What does celer, celeris, celere mean? ("Fast, quick".) Say it once more.

94.5 lentus, lenta, lentum — slow

Before the new one: say the Latin for light, then the Latin for fast.

You'll want to know: lentus, lenta, lentum lentus, lenta, lentum — "slow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lentus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European lentos*, "pliant, gentle" (EtymDB 2.1); its first sense was "pliant, supple". English lithe is often given as a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lentus
- Say it: lentus, once more
- Say it: say lentus
- Recall: say the Latin for light, then the Latin for fast, then say lentus again

Before you move on

What does lentus, lenta, lentum mean? ("Slow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 95

Hot, Cold, Dry, Wet, Sweet

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say hot, cold, dry, wet and sweet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 95: I can say hot, cold, dry, wet and sweet.

95.1 calidus, calida, calidum — hot, warm

Before the new one: say the Latin for fast, then the Latin for slow.

You'll want to know: calidus, calida, calidum

calidus, calida, calidum — "hot, warm".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calidus is built on caleō, "to be warm" (EtymDB 2.1), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives. caleō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kelh1-*, "warm" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calidus
- Say it: calidus, once more
- Say it: say calidus
- Recall: say the Latin for fast, then the Latin for slow, then say calidus again

Before you move on

What does calidus, calida, calidum mean? ("Hot, warm".) Say it once more.

95.2 frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum — cold

Before the new one: say the Latin for slow, then the Latin for hot.

You'll want to know: frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum

frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum — "cold". English frigid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frīgidus is built on frīgeō, "to be cold" (Lewis & Short), from frīgus, "cold", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sriHgos-*, "cold" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek rhigos, "frost", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frīgidus
- Say it: frīgidus, once more
- Say it: say frīgidus

- Recall: say the Latin for slow, then the Latin for hot, then say frīgidus again

Before you move on

What does frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum mean? ("Cold".) Say it once more.

95.3 siccus, sicca, siccum — dry

Before the new one: say the Latin for hot, then the Latin for cold.

You'll want to know: siccus, sicca, siccum

siccus, sicca, siccum — "dry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

siccus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root seyk-*, "dry" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: siccus
- Say it: siccus, once more
- Say it: say siccus
- Recall: say the Latin for hot, then the Latin for cold, then say siccus again

Before you move on

What does siccus, sicca, siccum mean? ("Dry".) Say it once more.

95.4 ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum — wet, damp

Before the new one: say the Latin for cold, then the Latin for dry.

You'll want to know: ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum — "wet, damp". English humid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūmidus is built on ūmeō, "to be moist" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives. The spelling with h came later.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ūmidus
- Say it: ūmidus, once more
- Say it: say ūmidus
- Recall: say the Latin for cold, then the Latin for dry, then say ūmidus again

Before you move on

What does ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum mean? ("Wet, damp".) Say it once more.

95.5 dulcis, dulce — sweet

Before the new one: say the Latin for dry, then the Latin for wet.

You'll want to know: dulcis, dulce dulcis, dulce — "sweet". Honey, mel, is the sweetest thing.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dulcis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dlku-*, "sweet" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek glykys, "sweet", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dulcis
- Say it: dulcis, once more
- Say it: say dulcis
- Recall: say the Latin for dry, then the Latin for wet, then say dulcis again

Before you move on

What does dulcis, dulce mean? ("Sweet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 96

Beautiful, Round, Empty, Bright, Dark

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say beautiful, round, empty, bright and dark.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 96: I can say beautiful, round, empty, bright and dark.

96.1 pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum — beautiful

Before the new one: say the Latin for wet, then the Latin for sweet.

You'll want to know: pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum

pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum — "beautiful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulcher has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. The ch, imitating Greek spelling, came in later; early Latin wrote pulcer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pulcher
- Say it: pulcher, once more
- Say it: say pulcher
- Recall: say the Latin for wet, then the Latin for sweet, then say pulcher again

Before you move on

What does pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum mean? ("Beautiful".) Say it once more.

96.2 rotundus, rotunda, rotundum — round

Before the new one: say the Latin for sweet, then the Latin for beautiful.

You'll want to know: rotundus, rotunda, rotundum

rotundus, rotunda, rotundum — "round".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rotundus is built on rota, "a wheel" (Lewis & Short): wheel-shaped. English round comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rotundus
- Say it: rotundus, once more
- Say it: say rotundus
- Recall: say the Latin for sweet, then the Latin for beautiful, then say rotundus again

Before you move on

What does rotundus, rotunda, rotundum mean? ("Round".) Say it once more.

96.3 vacuus, vacua, vacuum — empty

Before the new one: say the Latin for beautiful, then the Latin for round.

You'll want to know: vacuus, vacua, vacuum

vacuus, vacua, vacuum — "empty". English vacuum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vacuus is built on vacō, "to be empty, to be free" (Lewis & Short). Where vacō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vacuus
- Say it: vacuus, once more
- Say it: say vacuus
- Recall: say the Latin for beautiful, then the Latin for round, then say vacuus again

Before you move on

What does vacuus, vacua, vacuum mean? ("Empty".) Say it once more.

96.4 clārus, clāra, clārum — bright, clear; famous

Before the new one: say the Latin for round, then the Latin for empty.

You'll want to know: clārus, clāra, clārum

clārus, clāra, clārum — "bright, clear; famous".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clārus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European klh1ros*, "clear, bright", from kelh1-*, "to call, to shout" (EtymDB 2.1): it may first have meant "loud", like clāmō, "to shout" (Lewis & Short). English clear comes from clārus through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: clārus
- Say it: clārus, once more
- Say it: say clārus
- Recall: say the Latin for round, then the Latin for empty, then say clārus again

Before you move on

What does clārus, clāra, clārum mean? ("Bright, clear; famous".) Say it once more.

96.5 obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum — dark, obscure

Before the new one: say the Latin for empty, then the Latin for bright.

You'll want to know: obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum

obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum — "dark, obscure".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obscūrus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)kewH-*, "to cover" (EtymDB 2.1), with the prefix ob-, "over": covered over, so dark.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: obscūrus
- Say it: obscūrus, once more
- Say it: say obscūrus
- Recall: say the Latin for empty, then the Latin for bright, then say obscūrus again

Before you move on

What does obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum mean? ("Dark, obscure".) Say it once more.

Chapter 97

Easy, Hard, Dear, Brave, Wise

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say easy, difficult, dear, brave and wise.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 97: I can say easy, difficult, dear, brave and wise.

97.1 facilis, facile — easy

Before the new one: say the Latin for bright, then the Latin for dark.

You'll want to know: facilis, facile

facilis, facile — "easy". English facile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

facilis is built on faciō, "to do, to make" (Lewis & Short), with -ilis, an ending for "able to be": doable, so easy. faciō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1-*, "to put, to place" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: facilis
- Say it: facilis, once more
- Say it: say facilis
- Recall: say the Latin for bright, then the Latin for dark, then say facilis again

Before you move on

What does facilis, facile mean? ("Easy".) Say it once more.

97.2 difficilis, difficile — difficult

Before the new one: say the Latin for dark, then the Latin for easy.

You'll want to know: difficilis, difficile

difficilis, difficile — "difficult". dis-, not, with facilis.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

difficilis is facilis, "easy" (Lewis & Short), with the prefix dis-, "not"; the prefix's s became f before the f.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: difficilis
- Say it: difficilis, once more
- Say it: say difficilis
- Recall: say the Latin for dark, then the Latin for easy, then say difficilis again

Before you move on

What does difficilis, difficile mean? ("Difficult".) Say it once more.

97.3 cārus, cāra, cārum — dear; costly

Before the new one: say the Latin for easy, then the Latin for difficult.

You'll want to know: cārus, cāra, cārum

cārus, cāra, cārum — "dear; costly". English charity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cārus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European keh2ros*, "dear, loved", from keh2-*, "to desire, to wish" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cārus
- Say it: cārus, once more
- Say it: say cārus
- Recall: say the Latin for easy, then the Latin for difficult, then say cārus again

Before you move on

What does cārus, cāra, cārum mean? ("Dear; costly".) Say it once more.

97.4 fortis, forte — brave, strong

Before the new one: say the Latin for difficult, then the Latin for dear; costly.

You'll want to know: fortis, forte fortis, forte — "brave, strong". English fortitude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fortis had an Old Latin form forctis (EtymDB 2.1). Its origin is uncertain: one proposal, which EtymDB 2.1 records, traces it to Proto-Indo-European bhergh-*, "high"; Lewis & Short link it with firmus, "firm".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fortis
- Say it: fortis, once more
- Say it: say fortis
- Recall: say the Latin for difficult, then the Latin for dear; costly, then say fortis again

Before you move on

What does fortis, forte mean? ("Brave, strong".) Say it once more.

97.5 sapiēns, sapientis — wise

Before the new one: say the Latin for dear; costly, then the Latin for brave.

You'll want to know: sapiēns, sapientis

sapiēns, sapientis — "wise".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sapiēns is the present participle of sapiō, "to have taste, to be wise" (Lewis & Short): first "tasting", then "discerning". Homo sapiens, "the wise human", uses it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sapiēns
- Say it: sapiēns, once more
- Say it: say sapiēns
- Recall: say the Latin for dear; costly, then the Latin for brave, then say sapiēns again

Before you move on

What does sapiēns, sapientis mean? ("Wise".) Say it once more.

Chapter 98

Rich, Poor, Foolish, Enough, Too Much

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say rich, poor and foolish, and enough and too much.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 98: I can say rich, poor and foolish, and enough and too much.

98.1 dīves, dīvitis — rich

Before the new one: say the Latin for brave, then the Latin for wise.

You'll want to know: dīves, dīvitis

dīves, dīvitis — "rich".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīves is often derived from dīvus, "godlike, divine" (Lewis & Short): the rich as those the gods favour. That account is old and still uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dīves
- Say it: dīves, once more
- Say it: say dīves
- Recall: say the Latin for brave, then the Latin for wise, then say dīves again

Before you move on

What does dīves, dīvitis mean? ("Rich".) Say it once more.

98.2 pauper, pauperis — poor

Before the new one: say the Latin for wise, then the Latin for rich.

You'll want to know: pauper, pauperis pauper, pauperis — "poor". English pauper and poverty.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pauper is usually explained as pau-, "little", as in paucus, "few", plus the root of pariō, "to produce" (Lewis & Short): one who gets or produces little.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pauper
- Say it: pauper, once more
- Say it: say pauper
- Recall: say the Latin for wise, then the Latin for rich, then say pauper again

Before you move on

What does pauper, pauperis mean? ("Poor".) Say it once more.

98.3 stultus, stulta, stultum — foolish

Before the new one: say the Latin for rich, then the Latin for poor.

You'll want to know: stultus, stulta, stultum

stultus, stulta, stultum — "foolish".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stultus is probably related to stolidus, "dull, stupid" (Lewis & Short), and both are often traced to Proto-Indo-European ster-*, "stiff" (EtymDB 2.1): a fool as one stiff of mind.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: stultus
- Say it: stultus, once more
- Say it: say stultus
- Recall: say the Latin for rich, then the Latin for poor, then say stultus again

Before you move on

What does stultus, stulta, stultum mean? ("Foolish".) Say it once more.

98.4 satis — enough

Before the new one: say the Latin for poor, then the Latin for foolish.

You'll want to know: satis

satis — "enough". English satisfy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

satis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sh2tis*, "fullness", from seh2-*, "to satisfy, to fill" (EtymDB 2.1). English sad is a cousin: it first meant "having had enough".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: satis
- Say it: satis, once more
- Say it: say satis
- Recall: say the Latin for poor, then the Latin for foolish, then say satis again

Before you move on

What does satis mean? ("Enough".) Say it once more.

98.5 nimis — too much

Before the new one: say the Latin for foolish, then the Latin for enough.

You'll want to know: nimis

nimis — "too much".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nimis probably begins with the negative ne-, "not", but the rest is disputed: some link it to the stem of minus, "less", while Lewis & Short tie it to a root for measuring.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nimis
- Say it: nimis, once more
- Say it: say nimis
- Recall: say the Latin for foolish, then the Latin for enough, then say nimis again

Before you move on

What does nimis mean? ("Too much".) Say it once more.

Chapter 99

Get to Know, Care For, Tell, Praise, Move

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to get to know, to care for, to tell, to praise and to move.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 99: I can say to get to know, to care for, to tell, to praise and to move.

99.1 cognōscō, cognōscere — to get to know, to learn

Before the new one: say the Latin for enough, then the Latin for too much.

You'll want to know: cognōscō, cognōscere cognōscō, cognōscere — "to get to know, to learn". English recognise.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cognōscō is built on nōscō, "to come to know" (Lewis & Short), older gnōscō, with con-, a prefix that strengthens it. The root is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gneh3-*, "to know" (EtymDB 2.1); English know is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cognōscō
- Say it: cognōscō, once more
- Say it: say cognōscō
- Recall: say the Latin for enough, then the Latin for too much, then say cognōscō again

Before you move on

What does cognōscō, cognōscere mean? ("To get to know, to learn".) Say it once more.

99.2 cūrō, cūrāre — to care for

Before the new one: say the Latin for too much, then the Latin for to get to know.

You'll want to know: cūrō, cūrāre cūrō, cūrāre — "to care for". The verb of cūra.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūrō is the verb made from cūra, "care" (Lewis & Short), whose own origin is uncertain. English cure comes from the noun and the verb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cūrō
- Say it: cūrō, once more

- Say it: say cūrō
- Recall: say the Latin for too much, then the Latin for to get to know, then say cūrō again

Before you move on

What does cūrō, cūrāre mean? ("To care for".) Say it once more.

99.3 nārrō, nārrāre — to tell, to relate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to get to know, then the Latin for to care for.

You'll want to know: nārrō, nārrāre

nārrō, nārrāre — "to tell, to relate". English narrate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nārrō is usually derived from gnārus, "knowing, acquainted with" (Lewis & Short): to tell is to make known.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nārrō
- Say it: nārrō, once more
- Say it: say nārrō
- Recall: say the Latin for to get to know, then the Latin for to care for, then say nārrō again

Before you move on

What does nārrō, nārrāre mean? ("To tell, to relate".) Say it once more.

99.4 laudō, laudāre — to praise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to care for, then the Latin for to tell.

You'll want to know: laudō, laudāre

laudō, laudāre — "to praise". English laud.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

laudō is built on laus, laudis, "praise" (Lewis & Short). Where laus comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: laudō
- Say it: laudō, once more
- Say it: say laudō
- Recall: say the Latin for to care for, then the Latin for to tell, then say laudō again

Before you move on

What does laudō, laudāre mean? ("To praise".) Say it once more.

99.5 moveō, movēre — to move

Before the new one: say the Latin for to tell, then the Latin for to praise.

You'll want to know: moveō, movēre

moveō, movēre — "to move".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

moveō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mew-*, "to move, to push away" (EtymDB 2.1). English move comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: moveō
- Say it: moveō, once more
- Say it: say moveō
- Recall: say the Latin for to tell, then the Latin for to praise, then say moveō again

Before you move on

What does moveō, movēre mean? ("To move".) Say it once more.

Chapter 100

Fight, Sail, Prepare, Touch, Pull

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to fight, to sail, to prepare, to touch and to pull.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 100: I can say to fight, to sail, to prepare, to touch and to pull.

100.1 pugnō, pugnāre — to fight

Before the new one: say the Latin for to praise, then the Latin for to move.

You'll want to know: pugnō, pugnāre

pugnō, pugnāre — "to fight".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pugnō is built on pugnus, "a fist" (EtymDB 2.1), so it probably first meant to fight with fists. pugnus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peug-*, "to prick, to punch" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of pungō, "to prick" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pugnō
- Say it: pugnō, once more
- Say it: say pugnō
- Recall: say the Latin for to praise, then the Latin for to move, then say pugnō again

Before you move on

What does pugnō, pugnāre mean? ("To fight".) Say it once more.

100.2 nāvigō, nāvigāre — to sail

Before the new one: say the Latin for to move, then the Latin for to fight.

You'll want to know: nāvigō, nāvigāre

nāvigō, nāvigāre — "to sail". English navigate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nāvigō is built from nāvis, "a ship", and agō, "to drive" (Lewis & Short): to drive a ship. nāvis is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European neh2us*, "boat" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nāvigō
- Say it: nāvigō, once more
- Say it: say nāvigō
- Recall: say the Latin for to move, then the Latin for to fight, then say nāvigō again

Before you move on

What does nāvigō, nāvigāre mean? ("To sail".) Say it once more.

100.3 parō, parāre — to prepare

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fight, then the Latin for to sail.

You'll want to know: parō, parāre parō, parāre — "to prepare". English prepare.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parō is probably related to pariō, "to bring forth, to procure", and is traced to a Proto-Indo-European root per-*, "to produce, to procure" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parō
- Say it: parō, once more
- Say it: say parō
- Recall: say the Latin for to fight, then the Latin for to sail, then say parō again

Before you move on

What does parō, parāre mean? ("To prepare".) Say it once more.

100.4 tangō, tangere — to touch

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sail, then the Latin for to prepare.

You'll want to know: tangō, tangere tangō, tangere — "to touch". English tangible.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tangō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tag-*, "to touch" (EtymDB 2.1). The n inside the present stem is an old way of marking the verb and is missing from its perfect tetigī, "I touched".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tangō
- Say it: tangō, once more
- Say it: say tangō
- Recall: say the Latin for to sail, then the Latin for to prepare, then say tangō again

Before you move on

What does tangō, tangere mean? ("To touch".) Say it once more.

100.5 trahō, trahere — to pull, to drag

Before the new one: say the Latin for to prepare, then the Latin for to touch.

You'll want to know: trahō, trahere

trahō, trahere — "to pull, to drag". English tractor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trahō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tragh-*, "to draw, to drag" (EtymDB 2.1). English attract comes from it too.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trahō
- Say it: trahō, once more
- Say it: say trahō
- Recall: say the Latin for to prepare, then the Latin for to touch, then say trahō again

Before you move on

What does trahō, trahere mean? ("To pull, to drag".) Say it once more.

Chapter 101

Get Up, Wander, Run Away, At Once, Then

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to rise, to wander and to flee, and at once and then.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 101: I can say to rise, to wander and to flee, and at once and then.

101.1 surgō, surgere — to rise, to get up

Before the new one: say the Latin for to touch, then the Latin for to pull.

You'll want to know: surgō, surgere

surgō, surgere — "to rise, to get up". English surge.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

surgō is contracted from surrigō, "to raise up", built from sub, "up from under", and regō, "to direct, to keep straight" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: surgō
- Say it: surgō, once more
- Say it: say surgō
- Recall: say the Latin for to touch, then the Latin for to pull, then say surgō again

Before you move on

What does surgō, surgere mean? ("To rise, to get up".) Say it once more.

101.2 errō, errāre — to wander; to be wrong

Before the new one: say the Latin for to pull, then the Latin for to rise.

You'll want to know: errō, errāre

errō, errāre — "to wander; to be wrong". English err and error.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

errō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1ers-*, "to be in motion, to wander" (EtymDB 2.1); German irren, "to err", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: errō
- Say it: errō, once more
- Say it: say errō

- Recall: say the Latin for to pull, then the Latin for to rise, then say errō again

Before you move on

What does errō, errāre mean? ("To wander; to be wrong".) Say it once more.

101.3 fugiō, fugere — to flee, to run away

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rise, then the Latin for to wander; to be wrong.

You'll want to know: fugiō, fugere

fugiō, fugere — "to flee, to run away". English fugitive.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fugiō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhewg-*, "to flee" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek pheugō, "to flee", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fugiō
- Say it: fugiō, once more
- Say it: say fugiō
- Recall: say the Latin for to rise, then the Latin for to wander; to be wrong, then say fugiō again

Before you move on

What does fugiō, fugere mean? ("To flee, to run away".) Say it once more.

101.4 statim — at once, immediately

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wander; to be wrong, then the Latin for to flee.

You'll want to know: statim

statim — "at once, immediately".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

statim is built on the root of stō, "to stand" (Lewis & Short): first "standing firm, on the spot", then "at once".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: statim
- Say it: statim, once more
- Say it: say statim
- Recall: say the Latin for to wander; to be wrong, then the Latin for to flee, then say statim again

Before you move on

What does statim mean? ("At once, immediately".) Say it once more.

101.5 deinde — then, next

Before the new one: say the Latin for to flee, then the Latin for at once.

You'll want to know: deinde

deinde — "then, next".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

deinde is built from dē, "from", and inde, "from there, thence" (Lewis & Short): from that point on.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: deinde
- Say it: deinde, once more
- Say it: say deinde
- Recall: say the Latin for to flee, then the Latin for at once, then say deinde again

Before you move on

What does deinde mean? ("Then, next".) Say it once more.

Chapter 102

Far, Above, Below, Inside, Outside

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say far away, above, below, inside and outside.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 102: I can say far away, above, below, inside and outside.

102.1 procul — far away

Before the new one: say the Latin for at once, then the Latin for then.

You'll want to know: procul

procul — "far away".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

procul probably begins with prō, "forward, forth", but the rest is unclear; Lewis & Short's link with procellō, "to throw down", is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: procul
- Say it: procul, once more
- Say it: say procul
- Recall: say the Latin for at once, then the Latin for then, then say procul again

Before you move on

What does procul mean? ("Far away".) Say it once more.

102.2 suprā — above

Before the new one: say the Latin for then, then the Latin for far away.

You'll want to know: suprā suprā — "above". English supra and super-.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suprā comes from superus, "upper" (Lewis & Short), as if "on the upper side". Old Latin wrote suprād (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: suprā
- Say it: suprā, once more
- Say it: say suprā
- Recall: say the Latin for then, then the Latin for far away, then say suprā again

Before you move on

What does suprā mean? ("Above".) Say it once more.

102.3 īnfrā — below

Before the new one: say the Latin for far away, then the Latin for above.

You'll want to know: īnfrā

īnfrā — "below".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnfrā comes from īnferus, "lower" (Lewis & Short), as if "on the lower side". English inferior belongs to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnfrā
- Say it: īnfrā, once more
- Say it: say īnfrā
- Recall: say the Latin for far away, then the Latin for above, then say īnfrā again

Before you move on

What does īnfrā mean? ("Below".) Say it once more.

102.4 intrā — inside, within

Before the new one: say the Latin for above, then the Latin for below.

You'll want to know: intrā

intrā — "inside, within".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

intrā is contracted from interā, "on the inner side", with parte, "side", understood (Lewis & Short); it belongs with inter, "between".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: intrā
- Say it: intrā, once more
- Say it: say intrā
- Recall: say the Latin for above, then the Latin for below, then say intrā again

Before you move on

What does intrā mean? ("Inside, within".) Say it once more.

102.5 extrā — outside, beyond

Before the new one: say the Latin for below, then the Latin for inside.

You'll want to know: extrā extrā — "outside, beyond". English extra.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

extrā is contracted from exterā, "on the outer side" (Lewis & Short), from exter, "being on the outside" (EtymDB 2.1). Old Latin wrote extrād (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: extrā
- Say it: extrā, once more
- Say it: say extrā
- Recall: say the Latin for below, then the Latin for inside, then say extrā again

Before you move on

What does extrā mean? ("Outside, beyond".) Say it once more.

Chapter 103

Today, Yesterday, Year, Month, Dawn

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say today and yesterday, and name a year, a month and the dawn.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 103: I can say today and yesterday, and name a year, a month and the dawn.

103.1 hodiē — today

Before the new one: say the Latin for inside, then the Latin for outside.

You'll want to know: hodiē

hodiē — "today". hōc diē, "on this day".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hodiē is contracted from hōc diē, "on this day" (Lewis & Short); diē, "on the day", is a form of diēs, "day".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hodiē
- Say it: hodiē, once more
- Say it: say hodiē
- Recall: say the Latin for inside, then the Latin for outside, then say hodiē again

Before you move on

What does hodiē mean? ("Today".) Say it once more.

103.2 herī — yesterday

Before the new one: say the Latin for outside, then the Latin for today.

You'll want to know: herī

herī — "yesterday".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

herī is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhghyes-, "yesterday" (EtymDB 2.1). An older hesī shows in hesternus, "of yesterday", and English yesterday is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: herī
- Say it: herī, once more
- Say it: say herī
- Recall: say the Latin for outside, then the Latin for today, then say herī again

Before you move on

What does herī mean? ("Yesterday".) Say it once more.

103.3 annus, annī — a year

Before the new one: say the Latin for today, then the Latin for yesterday.

You'll want to know: annus, annī annus, annī — "a year". English annual.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

annus is inherited, usually traced through Proto-Italic atnos*, "year", to a Proto-Indo-European root h2et-*, "to go" (EtymDB 2.1). Gothic aþn, "year", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: annus
- Say it: annus, once more
- Say it: say annus
- Recall: say the Latin for today, then the Latin for yesterday, then say annus again

Before you move on

What does annus, annī mean? ("A year".) Say it once more.

103.4 mēnsis, mēnsis — a month

Before the new one: say the Latin for yesterday, then the Latin for a year.

You'll want to know: mēnsis, mēnsis

mēnsis, mēnsis — "a month".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mēnsis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European meh1ns*, "moon, month", from meh1-*, "to measure" (EtymDB 2.1). English moon and month are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mēnsis
- Say it: mēnsis, once more
- Say it: say mēnsis
- Recall: say the Latin for yesterday, then the Latin for a year, then say mēnsis again

Before you move on

What does mēnsis, mēnsis mean? ("A month".) Say it once more.

103.5 aurōra, aurōrae — the dawn

Before the new one: say the Latin for a year, then the Latin for a month.

You'll want to know: aurōra, aurōrae

aurōra, aurōrae — "the dawn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aurōra is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ewsōs*, "dawn" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek ēōs, "dawn", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English east.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aurōra
- Say it: aurōra, once more
- Say it: say aurōra
- Recall: say the Latin for a year, then the Latin for a month, then say aurōra again

Before you move on

What does aurōra, aurōrae mean? ("The dawn".) Say it once more.

Chapter 104

Often, Always, Never, Now, Soon

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say often, always, never, now and soon.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 104: I can say often, always, never, now and soon.

104.1 saepe — often

Before the new one: say the Latin for a month, then the Latin for the dawn.

You'll want to know: saepe

saepe — "often".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saepe is usually explained as an old neuter form of saepis, "thick, crowded" (Lewis & Short): what comes thick and fast comes often.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saepe
- Say it: saepe, once more
- Say it: say saepe
- Recall: say the Latin for a month, then the Latin for the dawn, then say saepe again

Before you move on

What does saepe mean? ("Often".) Say it once more.

104.2 semper — always

Before the new one: say the Latin for the dawn, then the Latin for often.

You'll want to know: semper

semper — "always".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

semper is usually linked with semel, "once", and the particle -per, "through, all along" (Lewis & Short): all in one stretch, so always.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: semper
- Say it: semper, once more
- Say it: say semper
- Recall: say the Latin for the dawn, then the Latin for often, then say semper again

Before you move on

What does semper mean? ("Always".) Say it once more.

104.3 numquam — never

Before the new one: say the Latin for often, then the Latin for always.

You'll want to know: numquam

numquam — "never".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

numquam is ne, "not", fused with umquam, "ever" (Lewis & Short): not ever.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: numquam
- Say it: numquam, once more
- Say it: say numquam
- Recall: say the Latin for often, then the Latin for always, then say numquam again

Before you move on

What does numquam mean? ("Never".) Say it once more.

104.4 nunc — now

Before the new one: say the Latin for always, then the Latin for never.

You'll want to know: nunc

nunc — "now".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nunc is an old num, "now", with the pointing particle -ce, "here" (Lewis & Short). num is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nu*, "now" (EtymDB 2.1); English now is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nunc
- Say it: nunc, once more
- Say it: say nunc
- Recall: say the Latin for always, then the Latin for never, then say nunc again

Before you move on

What does nunc mean? ("Now".) Say it once more.

104.5 mox — soon

Before the new one: say the Latin for never, then the Latin for now.

You'll want to know: mox

mox — "soon".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mox is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European moks*, "quickly, soon" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short still call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mox
- Say it: mox, once more
- Say it: say mox
- Recall: say the Latin for never, then the Latin for now, then say mox again

Before you move on

What does mox mean? ("Soon".) Say it once more.

Chapter 105

Rarely, Already, Then, Much, Little

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say rarely, already and then, and much and little.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 105: I can say rarely, already and then, and much and little.

105.1 rārō — rarely

Before the new one: say the Latin for now, then the Latin for soon.

You'll want to know: rārō rārō — "rarely". English rare.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rārō is the adverb of rārus, "thin, scattered, rare" (Lewis & Short). Where rārus comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rārō
- Say it: rārō, once more
- Say it: say rārō
- Recall: say the Latin for now, then the Latin for soon, then say rārō again

Before you move on

What does rārō mean? ("Rarely".) Say it once more.

105.2 iam — already, now

Before the new one: say the Latin for soon, then the Latin for rarely.

You'll want to know: iam

iam — "already, now".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iam is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European adverb Hyām*, "already, then" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iam
- Say it: iam, once more
- Say it: say iam
- Recall: say the Latin for soon, then the Latin for rarely, then say iam again

Before you move on

What does iam mean? ("Already, now".) Say it once more.

105.3 tum — then, at that time

Before the new one: say the Latin for rarely, then the Latin for already.

You'll want to know: tum

tum — "then, at that time".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tom*, "that" (EtymDB 2.1), a form of the pointing stem that also gave tam, "so" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tum
- Say it: tum, once more
- Say it: say tum
- Recall: say the Latin for rarely, then the Latin for already, then say tum again

Before you move on

What does tum mean? ("Then, at that time".) Say it once more.

105.4 multum — much, a lot

Before the new one: say the Latin for already, then the Latin for then.

You'll want to know: multum multum — "much, a lot". English multitude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

multum is the neuter of multus, "much, many" (Lewis & Short), used as an adverb. Where multus comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: multum
- Say it: multum, once more
- Say it: say multum
- Recall: say the Latin for already, then the Latin for then, then say multum again

Before you move on

What does multum mean? ("Much, a lot".) Say it once more.

105.5 parum — too little, not enough

Before the new one: say the Latin for then, then the Latin for much.

You'll want to know: parum

parum — "too little, not enough".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parum is related to parvus, "small" (Lewis & Short), though how the two forms fit together is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parum
- Say it: parum, once more
- Say it: say parum
- Recall: say the Latin for then, then the Latin for much, then say parum again

Before you move on

What does parum mean? ("Too little, not enough".) Say it once more.

Chapter 106

Thirty to a Thousand

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count thirty, forty and fifty, a hundred and a thousand.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 106: I can count thirty, forty and fifty, a hundred and a thousand.

106.1 trīgintā — thirty

Before the new one: say the Latin for much, then the Latin for too little.

You'll want to know: trīgintā

trīgintā — "thirty".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trīgintā is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European trid-komt*, "three tens" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek triakonta, "thirty", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trīgintā
- Say it: trīgintā, once more
- Say it: say trīgintā
- Recall: say the Latin for much, then the Latin for too little, then say trīgintā again

Before you move on

What does trīgintā mean? ("Thirty".) Say it once more.

106.2 quadrāgintā — forty

Before the new one: say the Latin for too little, then the Latin for thirty.

You'll want to know: quadrāgintā

quadrāgintā — "forty".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quadrāgintā is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwetwr-dkomt*, "four tens" (EtymDB 2.1); its first part is the word behind quattuor, "four" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quadrāgintā
- Say it: quadrāgintā, once more
- Say it: say quadrāgintā
- Recall: say the Latin for too little, then the Latin for thirty, then say quadrāgintā again

Before you move on

What does quadrāgintā mean? ("Forty".) Say it once more.

106.3 quīnquāgintā — fifty

Before the new one: say the Latin for thirty, then the Latin for forty.

You'll want to know: quīnquāgintā

quīnquāgintā — "fifty".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quīnquāgintā is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European penkwe-dkomt*, "five tens" (EtymDB 2.1), built on the word behind quīnque, "five".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quīnquāgintā
- Say it: quīnquāgintā, once more
- Say it: say quīnquāgintā
- Recall: say the Latin for thirty, then the Latin for forty, then say quīnquāgintā again

Before you move on

What does quīnquāgintā mean? ("Fifty".) Say it once more.

106.4 centum — a hundred

Before the new one: say the Latin for forty, then the Latin for fifty.

You'll want to know: centum centum — "a hundred". English century and cent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

centum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kmtom*, "hundred" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hekaton, "hundred", and English hundred are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: centum
- Say it: centum, once more
- Say it: say centum
- Recall: say the Latin for forty, then the Latin for fifty, then say centum again

Before you move on

What does centum mean? ("A hundred".) Say it once more.

106.5 mīlle — a thousand

Before the new one: say the Latin for fifty, then the Latin for a hundred.

You'll want to know: mīlle mīlle — "a thousand". English mile: a thousand paces.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mīlle is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European sm-gheslo-*, "one thousand" (EtymDB 2.1), whose first part meant "one".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mīlle
- Say it: mīlle, once more
- Say it: say mīlle
- Recall: say the Latin for fifty, then the Latin for a hundred, then say mīlle again

Before you move on

What does mīlle mean? ("A thousand".) Say it once more.

Chapter 107

City, Town, Forum, Temple, Shop

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a city, a town, the forum, a temple and a shop.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 107: I can name a city, a town, the forum, a temple and a shop.

107.1 urbs, urbis — a city

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hundred, then the Latin for a thousand.

You'll want to know: urbs, urbis urbs, urbis — "a city". English urban.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

urbs has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: urbs

- Say it: urbs, once more
- Say it: say urbs
- Recall: say the Latin for a hundred, then the Latin for a thousand, then say urbs again

Before you move on

What does urbs, urbis mean? ("A city".) Say it once more.

107.2 oppidum, oppidī — a town

Before the new one: say the Latin for a thousand, then the Latin for a city.

You'll want to know: oppidum, oppidī

oppidum, oppidī — "a town".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oppidum is usually explained as ob, "on, over", and a word for "ground, place", the one in Greek pedon, "ground" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: oppidum
- Say it: oppidum, once more
- Say it: say oppidum
- Recall: say the Latin for a thousand, then the Latin for a city, then say oppidum again

Before you move on

What does oppidum, oppidī mean? ("A town".) Say it once more.

107.3 forum, forī — a forum, a market square

Before the new one: say the Latin for a city, then the Latin for a town.

You'll want to know: forum, forī

forum, forī — "a forum, a market square".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

forum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhworom*, "enclosure", from dhwer-*, "door" (EtymDB 2.1); forās, "out of doors", and English door belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: forum
- Say it: forum, once more
- Say it: say forum
- Recall: say the Latin for a city, then the Latin for a town, then say forum again

Before you move on

What does forum, forī mean? ("A forum, a market square".) Say it once more.

107.4 templum, templī — a temple

Before the new one: say the Latin for a town, then the Latin for a forum.

You'll want to know: templum, templī

templum, templī — "a temple".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

templum first meant a space marked out for watching the sky. Its origin is uncertain: Lewis & Short link it with Greek temnō, "to cut", and temenos, "a sacred precinct"; EtymDB 2.1 traces it to a root temp-*, "to stretch".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: templum
- Say it: templum, once more
- Say it: say templum
- Recall: say the Latin for a town, then the Latin for a forum, then say templum again

Before you move on

What does templum, templī mean? ("A temple".) Say it once more.

107.5 taberna, tabernae — a shop, an inn

Before the new one: say the Latin for a forum, then the Latin for a temple.

You'll want to know: taberna, tabernae

taberna, tabernae — "a shop, an inn". English tavern.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

taberna has no sure origin; one common view derives it from trabs, "a beam": a hut of planks.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: taberna
- Say it: taberna, once more
- Say it: say taberna
- Recall: say the Latin for a forum, then the Latin for a temple, then say taberna again

Before you move on

What does taberna, tabernae mean? ("A shop, an inn".) Say it once more.

Chapter 108

Bridge, Farmhouse, Clothes, Tunic, Shoe

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a bridge, a farmhouse, clothing, a tunic and a shoe.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 108: I can name a bridge, a farmhouse, clothing, a tunic and a shoe.

108.1 pōns, pontis — a bridge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a temple, then the Latin for a shop.

You'll want to know: pōns, pontis

pōns, pontis — "a bridge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōns is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ponteh1s*, "path, road" (EtymDB 2.1): a bridge as a way across.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pōns
- Say it: pōns, once more
- Say it: say pōns
- Recall: say the Latin for a temple, then the Latin for a shop, then say pōns again

Before you move on

What does pōns, pontis mean? ("A bridge".) Say it once more.

108.2 vīlla, vīllae — a farmhouse, a country house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shop, then the Latin for a bridge.

You'll want to know: vīlla, vīllae

vīlla, vīllae — "a farmhouse, a country house".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīlla is probably a diminutive formed on vīcus, "a village, a homestead" (Lewis & Short). English village comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīlla
- Say it: vīlla, once more
- Say it: say vīlla

- Recall: say the Latin for a shop, then the Latin for a bridge, then say vīlla again

Before you move on

What does vīlla, vīllae mean? ("A farmhouse, a country house".) Say it once more.

108.3 vestis, vestis — clothing, a garment

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bridge, then the Latin for a farmhouse.

You'll want to know: vestis, vestis

vestis, vestis — "clothing, a garment". English vest.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vestis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European westis*, "garment", from wes-*, "to be dressed" (EtymDB 2.1). English wear is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vestis
- Say it: vestis, once more
- Say it: say vestis
- Recall: say the Latin for a bridge, then the Latin for a farmhouse, then say vestis again

Before you move on

What does vestis, vestis mean? ("Clothing, a garment".) Say it once more.

108.4 tunica, tunicae — a tunic

Before the new one: say the Latin for a farmhouse, then the Latin for clothing.

You'll want to know: tunica, tunicae

tunica, tunicae — "a tunic".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tunica is probably a loan from the eastern Mediterranean: it is often compared with Greek khitōn, "tunic", and with Semitic words for a linen garment.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tunica
- Say it: tunica, once more
- Say it: say tunica
- Recall: say the Latin for a farmhouse, then the Latin for clothing, then say tunica again

Before you move on

What does tunica, tunicae mean? ("A tunic".) Say it once more.

108.5 calceus, calceī — a shoe

Before the new one: say the Latin for clothing, then the Latin for a tunic.

You'll want to know: calceus, calceī

calceus, calceī — "a shoe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calceus is built on calx, calcis, "the heel" (Lewis & Short): a shoe covers the heel.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calceus
- Say it: calceus, once more
- Say it: say calceus
- Recall: say the Latin for clothing, then the Latin for a tunic, then say calceus again

Before you move on

What does calceus, calceī mean? ("A shoe".) Say it once more.

108.6 The land, animals and describing words — a first pass

Say the words for a tunic and a shoe.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a tree, a flower, a leaf, a forest, a mountain
- a river, a lake, a stream, a spring, a coast
- a stone, sand, a hill, a valley, a cave
- a cloud, rain, snow, a plain, a shore
- a horse, an ox, a sheep, a goat, a pig

- a bird, a wolf, a lion, a bear, a snake
- a mouse, a hen, a donkey, an elephant, a deer
- big, small, long, short, high; deep
- new, old, light, fast, slow
- hot, cold, dry, wet, sweet
- beautiful, round, empty, bright, dark

Before you move on

A tree? (arbor, arboris.) A flower? (flōs, flōris.) A leaf? (folium, foliī.) A forest? (silva, silvae.) A mountain? (mōns, montis.) A river? (flūmen, flūminis.) A lake? (lacus, lacūs.) A stream? (rīvus, rīvī.) A spring? (fōns, fontis.) A coast? (ōra, ōrae.) A stone? (lapis, lapidis.) Sand? (harēna, harēnae.) A hill? (collis, collis.) A valley? (vallis, vallis.) A cave? (spēlunca, spēluncae.) A cloud? (nūbēs, nūbis.) Rain? (pluvia, pluviae.) Snow? (nix, nivis.) A plain? (campus, campī.) A shore? (lītus, lītoris.) A horse? (equus, equī.) An ox? (bōs, bovis.) A sheep? (ovis, ovis.) A goat? (capra, caprae.) A pig? (porcus, porcī.) A bird? (avis, avis.) A wolf? (lupus, lupī.) A lion? (leō, leōnis.) A bear? (ursus, ursī.) A snake? (serpēns, serpentis.) A mouse? (mūs, mūris.) A hen? (gallīna, gallīnae.) A donkey? (asinus, asinī.) An elephant? (elephantus, elephantī.) A deer? (cervus, cervī.) Big? (magnus, magna, magnum.) Small? (parvus, parva, parvum.) Long? (longus, longa, longum.) Short? (brevis, breve.) High; deep? (altus, alta, altum.) New? (novus, nova, novum.) Old? (vetus, veteris.) Light? (levis, leve.) Fast? (celer, celeris, celere.) Slow? (lentus, lenta, lentum.) Hot? (calidus, calida, calidum.) Cold? (frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum.) Dry? (siccus, sicca, siccum.) Wet? (ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum.) Sweet? (dulcis, dulce.) Beautiful? (pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum.) Round? (rotundus, rotunda, rotundum.) Empty? (vacuus, vacua, vacuum.) Bright? (clārus, clāra, clārum.) Dark? (obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum.)

108.7 Verbs, time, numbers and the town — a second pass

Say the words for easy and difficult.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- easy, difficult, dear; costly, brave, wise
- rich, poor, foolish, enough, too much
- to get to know, to care for, to tell, to praise, to move
- to fight, to sail, to prepare, to touch, to pull
- to rise, to wander; to be wrong, to flee, at once, then
- far away, above, below, inside, outside
- today, yesterday, a year, a month, the dawn
- often, always, never, now, soon
- rarely, already, then, much, too little
- thirty, forty, fifty, a hundred, a thousand
- a city, a town, a forum, a temple, a shop
- a bridge, a farmhouse, clothing, a tunic, a shoe

Before you move on

Easy? (facilis, facile.) Difficult? (difficilis, difficile.) Dear; costly? (cārus, cāra, cārum.) Brave? (fortis, forte.) Wise? (sapiēns, sapientis.) Rich? (dīves, dīvitis.) Poor? (pauper, pauperis.) Foolish? (stultus, stulta, stultum.) Enough? (satis.) Too much? (nimis.) To get to know? (cognōscō, cognōscere.) To care for? (cūrō, cūrāre.) To tell? (nārrō, nārrāre.) To praise? (laudō, laudāre.) To move? (moveō, movēre.) To fight? (pugnō, pugnāre.) To sail? (nāvigō, nāvigāre.) To prepare? (parō, parāre.) To touch? (tangō, tangere.) To pull? (trahō, trahere.) To rise? (surgō, surgere.) To wander; to be wrong? (errō, errāre.) To flee? (fugiō, fugere.) At once? (statim.) Then? (deinde.) Far away? (procul.) Above? (suprā.) Below? (īnfrā.) Inside? (intrā.) Outside? (extrā.) Today? (hodiē.) Yesterday? (herī.) A year? (annus, annī.) A month? (mēnsis, mēnsis.) The dawn? (aurōra, aurōrae.) Often? (saepe.) Always? (semper.) Never? (numquam.) Now? (nunc.) Soon? (mox.) Rarely? (rārō.) Already? (iam.) Then? (tum.) Much? (multum.) Too little? (parum.) Thirty? (trīgintā.) Forty? (quadrāgintā.) Fifty? (quīnquāgintā.) A hundred? (centum.) A thousand? (mīlle.) A city? (urbs, urbis.) A town? (oppidum, oppidī.) A forum? (forum, forī.) A temple? (templum, templī.) A shop? (taberna, tabernae.) A bridge? (pōns, pontis.) A farmhouse? (vīlla, vīllae.) Clothing? (vestis, vestis.) A tunic? (tunica, tunicae.) A shoe? (calceus, calceī.)

Chapter 109

To be able, To dare, To have to, To be used to, Power

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to be able, to dare, to have to, to be used to and power.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 109: I can say to be able, to dare, to have to, to be used to and power.

109.1 queō, quīre — to be able, can

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a tunic, then the Latin for a shoe.

You'll want to know: queō, quīre

queō, quīre — "to be able, can".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

queō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. It is the verb behind nequeō, "to be unable".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: queō
- Say it: queō, once more
- Say it: say queō
- Recall: say the Latin for a tunic, then the Latin for a shoe, then say queō again

Before you move on

What does queō, quīre mean? ("To be able, can".) Say it once more.

109.2 audeō, audēre — to dare

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shoe, then the Latin for to be able.

You'll want to know: audeō, audēre

audeō, audēre — "to dare".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

audeō is usually traced to avidus, "eager, greedy" (EtymDB 2.1), from aveō, "to long for": to dare was first to be eager.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: audeō
- Say it: audeō, once more
- Say it: say audeō
- Recall: say the Latin for a shoe, then the Latin for to be able, then say audeō again

Before you move on

What does audeō, audēre mean? ("To dare".) Say it once more.

109.3 dēbeō, dēbēre — to have to, must; to owe

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be able, then the Latin for to dare.

You'll want to know: dēbeō, dēbēre

dēbeō, dēbēre — "to have to, must; to owe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēbeō is contracted from dē, "away from", and habeō, "to have" (Lewis & Short): to have what belongs to someone else, so to owe.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēbeō
- Say it: dēbeō, once more
- Say it: say dēbeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to be able, then the Latin for to dare, then say dēbeō again

Before you move on

What does dēbeō, dēbēre mean? ("To have to, must; to owe".) Say it once more.

109.4 soleō, solēre — to be used to, usually do

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dare, then the Latin for to have to.

You'll want to know: soleō, solēre

soleō, solēre — "to be used to, usually do".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

soleō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short compare suēscō, "to become used to", but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: soleō
- Say it: soleō, once more
- Say it: say soleō
- Recall: say the Latin for to dare, then the Latin for to have to, then say soleō again

Before you move on

What does soleō, solēre mean? ("To be used to, usually do".) Say it once more.

109.5 potestās, potestātis — power, the ability to act

Before the new one: say the Latin for to have to, then the Latin for to be used to.

You'll want to know: potestās, potestātis

potestās, potestātis — "power, the ability to act".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

potestās is built on possum, "to be able" (Lewis & Short), through its stem pot-, with -tās, an ending for a quality.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: potestās
- Say it: potestās, once more
- Say it: say potestās
- Recall: say the Latin for to have to, then the Latin for to be used to, then say potestās again

Before you move on

What does potestās, potestātis mean? ("Power, the ability to act".) Say it once more.

Chapter 110

Chance, Skill, It is necessary, It is allowed, To not want

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a chance, a skill, it is necessary, it is allowed and to not want.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 110: I can say a chance, a skill, it is necessary, it is allowed and to not want.

110.1 facultās, facultātis — a chance, the means to do something

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be used to, then the Latin for power.

You'll want to know: facultās, facultātis

facultās, facultātis — "a chance, the means to do something".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

facultās is built on facul, "easily", an old form of facilis, "easy" (Lewis & Short): ease, and so the means to do something.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: facultās
- Say it: facultās, once more
- Say it: say facultās
- Recall: say the Latin for to be used to, then the Latin for power, then say facultās again

Before you move on

What does facultās, facultātis mean? ("A chance, the means to do something".) Say it once more.

110.2 ars, artis — a skill, a craft

Before the new one: say the Latin for power, then the Latin for a chance.

You'll want to know: ars, artis

ars, artis — "a skill, a craft".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ars is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2rtis*, "skill, a fitting together" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for fitting that also gave arma, "tools, weapons" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ars
- Say it: ars, once more
- Say it: say ars

- Recall: say the Latin for power, then the Latin for a chance, then say ars again

Before you move on

What does ars, artis mean? ("A skill, a craft".) Say it once more.

110.3 oportet — it is necessary, one ought

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chance, then the Latin for a skill.

You'll want to know: oportet

oportet — "it is necessary, one ought".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oportet is usually linked with opus, "need, work" (Lewis & Short), but how it was formed is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: oportet
- Say it: oportet, once more
- Say it: say oportet
- Recall: say the Latin for a chance, then the Latin for a skill, then say oportet again

Before you move on

What does oportet mean? ("It is necessary, one ought".) Say it once more.

110.4 licet — it is allowed, one may

Before the new one: say the Latin for a skill, then the Latin for it is necessary.

You'll want to know: licet

licet — "it is allowed, one may".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

licet is related to liceō, "to be for sale, to be valued" (Lewis & Short), but where the pair comes from is uncertain. English licence comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: licet
- Say it: licet, once more
- Say it: say licet
- Recall: say the Latin for a skill, then the Latin for it is necessary, then say licet again

Before you move on

What does licet mean? ("It is allowed, one may".) Say it once more.

110.5 nōlō, nōlle — to not want, to refuse

Before the new one: say the Latin for it is necessary, then the Latin for it is allowed.

You'll want to know: nōlō, nōlle

nōlō, nōlle — "to not want, to refuse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōlō is ne, "not", fused with volō, "to want". Old forms such as nevis, "you do not want", show the join (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nōlō
- Say it: nōlō, once more
- Say it: say nōlō
- Recall: say the Latin for it is necessary, then the Latin for it is allowed, then say nōlō again

Before you move on

What does nōlō, nōlle mean? ("To not want, to refuse".) Say it once more.

Chapter 111

To prefer, To desire, To wish for, To miss, Wish

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to prefer, to desire, to wish for, to miss and a wish.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 111: I can say to prefer, to desire, to wish for, to miss and a wish.

111.1 mālō, mālle — to prefer

Before the new one: say the Latin for it is allowed, then the Latin for to not want.

You'll want to know: mālō, mālle

mālō, mālle — "to prefer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mālō is contracted from magis, "more", and volō, "to want" (Lewis & Short): to want more, so to prefer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mālō
- Say it: mālō, once more
- Say it: say mālō
- Recall: say the Latin for it is allowed, then the Latin for to not want, then say mālō again

Before you move on

What does mālō, mālle mean? ("To prefer".) Say it once more.

111.2 cupiō, cupere — to desire, to long for

Before the new one: say the Latin for to not want, then the Latin for to prefer.

You'll want to know: cupiō, cupere

cupiō, cupere — "to desire, to long for".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cupiō is probably inherited; Lewis & Short compare Sanskrit kup-, "to be stirred, to be angry", a link still often made. English covet comes from its family through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cupiō
- Say it: cupiō, once more
- Say it: say cupiō
- Recall: say the Latin for to not want, then the Latin for to prefer, then say cupiō again

Before you move on

What does cupiō, cupere mean? ("To desire, to long for".) Say it once more.

111.3 optō, optāre — to wish for, to choose

Before the new one: say the Latin for to prefer, then the Latin for to desire.

You'll want to know: optō, optāre

optō, optāre — "to wish for, to choose".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

optō has no sure origin; the link with a Greek root for seeing that Lewis & Short give is uncertain. English option and adopt come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: optō
- Say it: optō, once more
- Say it: say optō
- Recall: say the Latin for to prefer, then the Latin for to desire, then say optō again

Before you move on

What does optō, optāre mean? ("To wish for, to choose".) Say it once more.

111.4 dēsīderō, dēsīderāre — to miss, to long for

Before the new one: say the Latin for to desire, then the Latin for to wish for.

You'll want to know: dēsīderō, dēsīderāre

dēsīderō, dēsīderāre — "to miss, to long for".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēsīderō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. A common account builds it, like cōnsīderō, "to examine closely", from dē-, "away from", and sīdus, sīderis, "star", but the story behind that is unclear.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēsīderō
- Say it: dēsīderō, once more
- Say it: say dēsīderō
- Recall: say the Latin for to desire, then the Latin for to wish for, then say dēsīderō again

Before you move on

What does dēsīderō, dēsīderāre mean? ("To miss, to long for".) Say it once more.

111.5 voluntās, voluntātis — a wish, the will

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wish for, then the Latin for to miss.

You'll want to know: voluntās, voluntātis

voluntās, voluntātis — "a wish, the will".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

voluntās is built on volō, velle, "to want" (Lewis & Short), with -tās, an ending for a quality. volō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European welh1-*, "to choose, to wish".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: voluntās
- Say it: voluntās, once more
- Say it: say voluntās
- Recall: say the Latin for to wish for, then the Latin for to miss, then say voluntās again

Before you move on

What does voluntās, voluntātis mean? ("A wish, the will".) Say it once more.

Chapter 112

Desire, Hope, Longing, Why?, Why?

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a desire, hope, a longing, why? and why?.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 112: I can say a desire, hope, a longing, why? and why?.

112.1 cupiditās, cupiditātis — a desire, eagerness

Before the new one: say the Latin for to miss, then the Latin for a wish.

You'll want to know: cupiditās, cupiditātis

cupiditās, cupiditātis — "a desire, eagerness".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cupiditās is built on cupidus, "eager, desirous" (Lewis & Short), from cupiō, "to desire", with -itās, an ending for a quality.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cupiditās
- Say it: cupiditās, once more
- Say it: say cupiditās
- Recall: say the Latin for to miss, then the Latin for a wish, then say cupiditās again

Before you move on

What does cupiditās, cupiditātis mean? ("A desire, eagerness".) Say it once more.

112.2 spēs, speī — hope

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wish, then the Latin for a desire.

Greet the whole day in order: bonum māne, salvē, bonum vesperum, bonam noctem.

You'll want to know: spēs, speī

spēs, speī — "hope".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spēs is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European speh1-*, "to prosper, to turn out well" (EtymDB 2.1). prosperus, "favourable", and English speed, which once meant "success", are often given as cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spēs
- Say it: spēs, once more

- Say it: say spēs
- Recall: say the Latin for a wish, then the Latin for a desire, then say spēs again

Before you move on

What does spēs, speī mean? ("Hope".) Say it once more.

112.3 dēsīderium, dēsīderiī — a longing

Before the new one: say the Latin for a desire, then the Latin for hope.

You'll want to know: dēsīderium, dēsīderiī

dēsīderium, dēsīderiī — "a longing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēsīderium is built on dēsīderō, "to miss, to long for" (Lewis & Short), whose own origin is unclear.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēsīderium
- Say it: dēsīderium, once more
- Say it: say dēsīderium
- Recall: say the Latin for a desire, then the Latin for hope, then say dēsīderium again

Before you move on

What does dēsīderium, dēsīderiī mean? ("A longing".) Say it once more.

112.4 quārē — why?, for what reason?

Before the new one: say the Latin for hope, then the Latin for a longing.

You'll want to know: quārē

quārē — "why?, for what reason?".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quārē is fused from quā rē, "by what thing, for what reason" (Lewis & Short); rē, "by the thing", is a form of rēs, "thing".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quārē
- Say it: quārē, once more
- Say it: say quārē
- Recall: say the Latin for hope, then the Latin for a longing, then say quārē again

Before you move on

What does quārē mean? ("Why?, for what reason?".) Say it once more.

112.5 quamobrem — why?, on account of what?

Before the new one: say the Latin for a longing, then the Latin for why?.

You'll want to know: quamobrem

quamobrem — "why?, on account of what?".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quamobrem is fused from quam ob rem, "on account of which thing" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quamobrem
- Say it: quamobrem, once more
- Say it: say quamobrem
- Recall: say the Latin for a longing, then the Latin for why?, then say quamobrem again

Before you move on

What does quamobrem mean? ("Why?, on account of what?".) Say it once more.

Chapter 113

For, For, For that reason, And so, Reason

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say for, for, for that reason, and so and a reason.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 113: I can say for, for, for that reason, and so and a reason.

113.1 nam — for (giving a reason)

Before the new one: say the Latin for why?, then the Latin for why?.

You'll want to know: nam

nam — "for (giving a reason)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nam is usually explained as an old case form of a pronoun stem na-, "that" (Lewis & Short): "for that".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nam
- Say it: nam, once more
- Say it: say nam
- Recall: say the Latin for why?, then the Latin for why?, then say nam again

Before you move on

What does nam mean? ("For (giving a reason)".) Say it once more.

113.2 enim — for, you see

Before the new one: say the Latin for why?, then the Latin for for.

You'll want to know: enim

enim — "for, you see".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

enim is often explained as a short pointing element followed by nam, "for" (Lewis & Short), but its make-up is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: enim
- Say it: enim, once more
- Say it: say enim
- Recall: say the Latin for why?, then the Latin for for, then say enim again

Before you move on

What does enim mean? ("For, you see".) Say it once more.

113.3 ideō — for that reason

Before the new one: say the Latin for for, then the Latin for for.

You'll want to know: ideō

ideō — "for that reason".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ideō is built from id, "that", and eō, "for that" (Lewis & Short): for that reason.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ideō
- Say it: ideō, once more
- Say it: say ideō
- Recall: say the Latin for for, then the Latin for for, then say ideō again

Before you move on

What does ideō mean? ("For that reason".) Say it once more.

113.4 itaque — and so, therefore

Before the new one: say the Latin for for, then the Latin for for that reason.

You'll want to know: itaque

itaque — "and so, therefore".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

itaque is ita, "so, thus", with -que, "and" (EtymDB 2.1): and so.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: itaque
- Say it: itaque, once more
- Say it: say itaque
- Recall: say the Latin for for, then the Latin for for that reason, then say itaque again

Before you move on

What does itaque mean? ("And so, therefore".) Say it once more.

113.5 causa, causae — a reason, a cause

Before the new one: say the Latin for for that reason, then the Latin for and so.

You'll want to know: causa, causae

causa, causae — "a reason, a cause".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

causa was spelled caussa in older Latin (EtymDB 2.1); where it comes from is unknown. English cause and because come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: causa
- Say it: causa, once more
- Say it: say causa
- Recall: say the Latin for for that reason, then the Latin for and so, then say causa again

Before you move on

What does causa, causae mean? ("A reason, a cause".) Say it once more.

Chapter 114

Reason, Because of that, Place, Right, Left

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a reason, because of that, a place, right and left.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 114: I can say a reason, because of that, a place, right and left.

114.1 ratiō, ratiōnis — a reason, a way of thinking

Before the new one: say the Latin for and so, then the Latin for a reason.

You'll want to know: ratiō, ratiōnis

ratiō, ratiōnis — "a reason, a way of thinking".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ratiō is built on ratus, "reckoned", the participle of reor, "to reckon, to think" (Lewis & Short): a reckoning. English reason comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ratiō
- Say it: ratiō, once more
- Say it: say ratiō
- Recall: say the Latin for and so, then the Latin for a reason, then say ratiō again

Before you move on

What does ratiō, ratiōnis mean? ("A reason, a way of thinking".) Say it once more.

114.2 proptereā — because of that

Before the new one: say the Latin for a reason, then the Latin for a reason.

You'll want to know: proptereā

proptereā — "because of that".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

proptereā is propter, "because of", with ea, "these things" (EtymDB 2.1): because of that.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: proptereā
- Say it: proptereā, once more
- Say it: say proptereā
- Recall: say the Latin for a reason, then the Latin for a reason, then say proptereā again

Before you move on

What does propterea̅ mean? ("Because of that".) Say it once more.

114.3 locus, locī — a place

Before the new one: say the Latin for a reason, then the Latin for because of that.

You'll want to know: locus, locī

locus, locī — "a place".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

locus comes from Old Latin stlocus, "place" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European stel-*, "to put, to place" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: locus
- Say it: locus, once more
- Say it: say locus
- Recall: say the Latin for a reason, then the Latin for because of that, then say locus again

Before you move on

What does locus, locī mean? ("A place".) Say it once more.

114.4 dexter, dextra, dextrum — right (not left)

Before the new one: say the Latin for because of that, then the Latin for a place.

You'll want to know: dexter, dextra, dextrum

dexter, dextra, dextrum — "right (not left)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dexter is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European deks-*, "right side" (EtymDB 2.1), with -ter, an ending that sets one of two sides against the other; Greek dexios, "on the right", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dexter
- Say it: dexter, once more
- Say it: say dexter
- Recall: say the Latin for because of that, then the Latin for a place, then say dexter again

Before you move on

What does dexter, dextra, dextrum mean? ("Right (not left)".) Say it once more.

114.5 sinister, sinistra, sinistrum — left (not right)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a place, then the Latin for right.

You'll want to know: sinister, sinistra, sinistrum

sinister, sinistra, sinistrum — "left (not right)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sinister has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. It ends in -ter, an ending that sets one of two sides against the other, as in dexter, "right".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sinister
- Say it: sinister, once more
- Say it: say sinister
- Recall: say the Latin for a place, then the Latin for right, then say sinister again

Before you move on

What does sinister, sinistra, sinistrum mean? ("Left (not right)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 115

To here, To there, Theatre, Bath, Military camp

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to here, to there, a theatre, a bath and a military camp.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 115: I can say to here, to there, a theatre, a bath and a military camp.

115.1 hūc — to here, hither

> Before the new one: say the Latin for right, then the Latin for left.

You'll want to know: hūc

hūc — "to here, hither".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hūc is an old case form of hic, "this": "to this place". Early Latin wrote it hoc (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hūc
- Say it: hūc, once more
- Say it: say hūc
- Recall: say the Latin for right, then the Latin for left, then say hūc again

Before you move on

What does hūc mean? ("To here, hither".) Say it once more.

115.2 illūc — to there, thither

Before the new one: say the Latin for left, then the Latin for to here.

You'll want to know: illūc

illūc — "to there, thither".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

illūc goes with illic, "there" (Lewis & Short), and is built on ille, "that": to that place.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: illūc
- Say it: illūc, once more
- Say it: say illūc
- Recall: say the Latin for left, then the Latin for to here, then say illūc again

Before you move on

What does illūc mean? ("To there, thither".) Say it once more.

115.3 theātrum, theātrī — a theatre

Before the new one: say the Latin for to here, then the Latin for to there.

Read it: the exchange aloud as one run — Salvē! Quid agis? Bene. Valē!

You'll want to know: theātrum, theātrī theātrum, theātrī — "a theatre".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

theātrum was borrowed from Greek theatron, "a place for viewing" (Lewis & Short), from theaomai, "to watch" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: theātrum
- Say it: theātrum, once more
- Say it: say theātrum
- Recall: say the Latin for to here, then the Latin for to there, then say theātrum again

Before you move on

What does theātrum, theātrī mean? ("A theatre".) Say it once more.

115.4 balneum, balneī — a bath, a bathhouse

Before the new one: say the Latin for to there, then the Latin for a theatre.

You'll want to know: balneum, balneī

balneum, balneī — "a bath, a bathhouse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

balneum is contracted from balineum, "a bath" (Lewis & Short), which was borrowed from Greek balaneion, "bath" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: balneum
- Say it: balneum, once more
- Say it: say balneum
- Recall: say the Latin for to there, then the Latin for a theatre, then say balneum again

Before you move on

What does balneum, balneī mean? ("A bath, a bathhouse".) Say it once more.

115.5 castra, castrōrum — a military camp

Before the new one: say the Latin for a theatre, then the Latin for a bath.

You'll want to know: castra, castrōrum

castra, castrōrum — "a military camp".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

castra is the plural of castrum, "a fort" (Lewis & Short). Where castrum comes from is uncertain. English Chester and Lancaster take their names from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: castra
- Say it: castra, once more
- Say it: say castra
- Recall: say the Latin for a theatre, then the Latin for a bath, then say castra again

Before you move on

What does castra, castrōrum mean? ("A military camp".) Say it once more.

Chapter 116

Building, Prison, Main hall of a house, Corner, Street

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a building, a prison, the main hall of a house, a corner and a street.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 116: I can say a building, a prison, the main hall of a house, a corner and a street.

116.1 aedificium, aedificiī — a building

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bath, then the Latin for a military camp.

You'll want to know: aedificium, aedificiī

aedificium, aedificiī — "a building".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aedificium is built on aedificō, "to build" (Lewis & Short), from aedēs, "a building, a temple" (EtymDB 2.1), and faciō, "to make".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aedificium
- Say it: aedificium, once more
- Say it: say aedificium
- Recall: say the Latin for a bath, then the Latin for a military camp, then say aedificium again

Before you move on

What does aedificium, aedificiī mean? ("A building".) Say it once more.

116.2 carcer, carceris — a prison

Before the new one: say the Latin for a military camp, then the Latin for a building.

You'll want to know: carcer, carceris

carcer, carceris — "a prison".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carcer is probably inherited from Proto-Italic karkros*, "enclosure" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short note a Sicilian Greek karkaron, "prison", and call the origin doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: carcer
- Say it: carcer, once more
- Say it: say carcer

- Recall: say the Latin for a military camp, then the Latin for a building, then say carcer again

Before you move on

What does carcer, carceris mean? ("A prison".) Say it once more.

116.3 ātrium, ātriī — the main hall of a house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a building, then the Latin for a prison.

You'll want to know: ātrium, ātriī

ātrium, ātriī — "the main hall of a house".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ātrium has no sure origin. Lewis & Short report the ancient guesses: a Greek aithrion, "open court", or the Etruscan town of Atria. A link with āter, "black", from the smoke of the hearth, is also old; none is certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ātrium
- Say it: ātrium, once more
- Say it: say ātrium
- Recall: say the Latin for a building, then the Latin for a prison, then say ātrium again

Before you move on

What does ātrium, ātriī mean? ("The main hall of a house".) Say it once more.

116.4 angulus, angulī — a corner

Before the new one: say the Latin for a prison, then the Latin for the main hall of a house.

You'll want to know: angulus, angulī

angulus, angulī — "a corner".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

angulus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2engulos*, "corner, angle" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for bending; Greek ankylos, "crooked", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: angulus
- Say it: angulus, once more
- Say it: say angulus
- Recall: say the Latin for a prison, then the Latin for the main hall of a house, then say angulus again

Before you move on

What does angulus, angulī mean? ("A corner".) Say it once more.

116.5 vīcus, vīcī — a street, a village

Before the new one: say the Latin for the main hall of a house, then the Latin for a corner.

Read it: the two lines you would say at a door — Salvē! Ubi est porta?

You'll want to know: vīcus, vīcī

vīcus, vīcī — "a street, a village".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīcus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weik-*, "settlement, household" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek oikos, "house", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English place names in -wick and -wich, such as Norwich, come from vīcus, borrowed early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīcus
- Say it: vīcus, once more
- Say it: say vīcus
- Recall: say the Latin for the main hall of a house, then the Latin for a corner, then say vīcus again

Before you move on

What does vīcus, vīcī mean? ("A street, a village".) Say it once more.

Chapter 117

Step, Library, Food market, Eating-house, Inn

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a step, a library, a food market, an eating-house and an inn.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 117: I can say a step, a library, a food market, an eating-house and an inn.

117.1 gradus, gradūs — a step, a stair

Before the new one: say the Latin for a corner, then the Latin for a street.

You'll want to know: gradus, gradūs

gradus, gradūs — "a step, a stair".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gradus belongs with gradior, "to step, to walk" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghredh-*, "to walk, to go" (EtymDB 2.1). English grade and degree come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gradus
- Say it: gradus, once more
- Say it: say gradus
- Recall: say the Latin for a corner, then the Latin for a street, then say gradus again

Before you move on

What does gradus, gradūs mean? ("A step, a stair".) Say it once more.

117.2 bibliothēca, bibliothēcae — a library

Before the new one: say the Latin for a street, then the Latin for a step.

You'll want to know: bibliothēca, bibliothēcae

bibliothēca, bibliothēcae — "a library".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bibliothēca was borrowed from Greek bibliothēkē, "a book-room, a library" (Lewis & Short), from biblion, "book", and thēkē, "a box, a storeplace" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bibliothēca
- Say it: bibliothēca, once more
- Say it: say bibliothēca

- Recall: say the Latin for a street, then the Latin for a step, then say bibliothēca again

Before you move on

What does bibliothēca, bibliothēcae mean? ("A library".) Say it once more.

117.3 macellum, macellī — a food market

Before the new one: say the Latin for a step, then the Latin for a library.

At a market you buy and sell: say emō, I buy, then vendō, I sell.

You'll want to know: macellum, macellī

macellum, macellī — "a food market".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

macellum probably came into Latin from Greek makellon, "an enclosure, a meat market", which may itself be a Semitic loan; Lewis & Short's link with Greek makhomai, "to fight", is unlikely.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: macellum
- Say it: macellum, once more
- Say it: say macellum
- Recall: say the Latin for a step, then the Latin for a library, then say macellum again

Before you move on

What does macellum, macellī mean? ("A food market".) Say it once more.

117.4 popīna, popīnae — an eating-house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a library, then the Latin for a food market.

You'll want to know: popīna, popīnae

popīna, popīnae — "an eating-house".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

popīna is usually taken as the Oscan or Umbrian twin of coquīna, "kitchen": those languages had p where Latin had qu. Both go back to the root of coquō, "to cook" (Lewis & Short compare Greek peptō, "to cook").

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: popīna
- Say it: popīna, once more
- Say it: say popīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a library, then the Latin for a food market, then say popīna again

Before you move on

What does popīna, popīnae mean? ("An eating-house".) Say it once more.

117.5 caupōna, caupōnae — an inn

Before the new one: say the Latin for a food market, then the Latin for an eating-house.

You'll want to know: caupōna, caupōnae

caupōna, caupōnae — "an inn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caupōna is built on caupō, "an innkeeper, a shopkeeper" (Lewis & Short): first the woman who kept the shop, then the inn itself. Where caupō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: caupōna
- Say it: caupōna, once more
- Say it: say caupōna
- Recall: say the Latin for a food market, then the Latin for an eating-house, then say caupōna again

Before you move on

What does caupōna, caupōnae mean? ("An inn".) Say it once more.

Chapter 118

Floor, Well, Bakery, Workshop, Tomb

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a floor, a well, a bakery, a workshop and a tomb.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 118: I can say a floor, a well, a bakery, a workshop and a tomb.

118.1 pavīmentum, pavīmentī — a floor

Before the new one: say the Latin for an eating-house, then the Latin for an inn.

You'll want to know: pavīmentum, pavīmentī

pavīmentum, pavīmentī — "a floor".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pavīmentum is built on paviō, "to beat, to tread down" (Lewis & Short), with -mentum, an ending for a thing: a floor of beaten earth or stone. English pavement comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pavīmentum
- Say it: pavīmentum, once more
- Say it: say pavīmentum
- Recall: say the Latin for an eating-house, then the Latin for an inn, then say pavīmentum again

Before you move on

What does pavīmentum, pavīmentī mean? ("A floor".) Say it once more.

118.2 puteus, puteī — a well

Before the new one: say the Latin for an inn, then the Latin for a floor.

You'll want to know: puteus, puteī

puteus, puteī — "a well".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

puteus has no sure origin. EtymDB 2.1 tentatively links it to a Proto-Indo-European root pewH-*, "to strike, to hew", as a hole cut into the ground, but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: puteus
- Say it: puteus, once more
- Say it: say puteus

- Recall: say the Latin for an inn, then the Latin for a floor, then say puteus again

Before you move on

What does puteus, puteī mean? ("A well".) Say it once more.

118.3 pistrīnum, pistrīnī — a bakery, a mill

Before the new one: say the Latin for a floor, then the Latin for a well.

You'll want to know: pistrīnum, pistrīnī

pistrīnum, pistrīnī — "a bakery, a mill".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pistrīnum is built on pistor, "a miller, a baker" (Lewis & Short), from pīnsō, "to pound, to crush": grain was pounded before it was ground.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pistrīnum
- Say it: pistrīnum, once more
- Say it: say pistrīnum
- Recall: say the Latin for a floor, then the Latin for a well, then say pistrīnum again

Before you move on

What does pistrīnum, pistrīnī mean? ("A bakery, a mill".) Say it once more.

118.4 officīna, officīnae — a workshop

Before the new one: say the Latin for a well, then the Latin for a bakery.

You'll want to know: officīna, officīnae

officīna, officīnae — "a workshop".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

officīna is contracted from opificīna, "a workshop" (Lewis & Short), built on opifex, "a workman", from opus, "work", and faciō, "to make".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: officīna
- Say it: officīna, once more
- Say it: say officīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a well, then the Latin for a bakery, then say officīna again

Before you move on

What does officīna, officīnae mean? ("A workshop".) Say it once more.

118.5 sepulcrum, sepulcrī — a tomb

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bakery, then the Latin for a workshop.

You'll want to know: sepulcrum, sepulcrī

sepulcrum, sepulcrī — "a tomb".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sepulcrum is built on sepeliō, "to bury" (Lewis & Short), with -crum, an ending for a place or tool, as in fulcrum, "a support". English sepulchre comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sepulcrum
- Say it: sepulcrum, once more
- Say it: say sepulcrum
- Recall: say the Latin for a bakery, then the Latin for a workshop, then say sepulcrum again

Before you move on

What does sepulcrum, sepulcrī mean? ("A tomb".) Say it once more.

Chapter 119

Open space, Milestone, Around, Next to, Opposite

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say an open space, a milestone, around, next to and opposite.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 119: I can say an open space, a milestone, around, next to and opposite.

119.1 ārea, āreae — an open space, a courtyard

Before the new one: say the Latin for a workshop, then the Latin for a tomb.

You'll want to know: ārea, āreae

ārea, āreae — "an open space, a courtyard".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ārea has no sure origin. Varro tied it to āreō, "to be dry" (Lewis & Short), as a dry, level space, but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ārea
- Say it: ārea, once more
- Say it: say ārea
- Recall: say the Latin for a workshop, then the Latin for a tomb, then say ārea again

Before you move on

What does ārea, āreae mean? ("An open space, a courtyard".) Say it once more.

119.2 mīliārium, mīliāriī — a milestone

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tomb, then the Latin for an open space.

Read it: the three signs aloud, the way a traveller reads them — theātrum, balneum, forum

You'll want to know: mīliārium, mīliāriī

mīliārium, mīliāriī — "a milestone".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mīliārium is built on mīlia, "thousands", the plural of mīlle, "a thousand": a Roman mile was a thousand paces, and a stone marked each one.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mīliārium
- Say it: mīliārium, once more

- Say it: say mīliārium
- Recall: say the Latin for a tomb, then the Latin for an open space, then say mīliārium again

Before you move on

What does mīliārium, mīliāriī mean? ("A milestone".) Say it once more.

119.3 circā — around

Before the new one: say the Latin for an open space, then the Latin for a milestone.

You'll want to know: circā

circā — "around".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

circā is a later form beside circum, "around" (Lewis & Short), which is the accusative of circus, "a ring".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: circā
- Say it: circā, once more
- Say it: say circā
- Recall: say the Latin for an open space, then the Latin for a milestone, then say circā again

Before you move on

What does circā mean? ("Around".) Say it once more.

119.4 iūxtā — next to, close by

Before the new one: say the Latin for a milestone, then the Latin for around.

You'll want to know: iūxtā

iūxtā — "next to, close by".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūxtā is an old superlative adverb built on the root of iungō, "to join" (Lewis & Short): "most closely joined", so right next to.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iūxtā
- Say it: iūxtā, once more
- Say it: say iūxtā
- Recall: say the Latin for a milestone, then the Latin for around, then say iūxtā again

Before you move on

What does iūxtā mean? ("Next to, close by".) Say it once more.

119.5 contrā — opposite, against

Before the new one: say the Latin for around, then the Latin for next to.

You'll want to know: contrā

contrā — "opposite, against".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

contrā is built on cum, "with", in its old form com-, through a comparative form like the one in intrā, "inside" (Lewis & Short): "on the facing side".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: contrā
- Say it: contrā, once more
- Say it: say contrā
- Recall: say the Latin for around, then the Latin for next to, then say contrā again

Before you move on

What does contrā mean? ("Opposite, against".) Say it once more.

119.6 Can, want and why — a first pass

Say the words for next to and opposite.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to be able, to dare, to have to, to be used to, power
- a chance, a skill, it is necessary, it is allowed, to not want
- to prefer, to desire, to wish for, to miss, a wish
- a desire, hope, a longing, why?, why?
- for, for, for that reason, and so, a reason

Before you move on

To be able? (queō, quīre.) To dare? (audeō, audēre.) To have to? (dēbeō, dēbēre.) To be used to? (soleō, solēre.) Power? (potestās, potestātis.) A chance? (facultās, facultātis.) A skill? (ars, artis.) It is necessary? (oportet.) It is allowed? (licet.) To not want? (nōlō, nōlle.) To prefer? (mālō, mālle.) To desire? (cupiō, cupere.) To wish for? (optō, optāre.) To miss? (dēsīderō, dēsīderāre.) A wish? (voluntās, voluntātis.) A desire? (cupiditās, cupiditātis.) Hope? (spēs, speī.) A longing? (dēsīderium, dēsīderiī.) Asking why? (quārē.) Asking why, another way? (quamobrem.) For? (nam.) For? (enim.) For that reason? (ideō.) And so? (itaque.) A reason? (causa, causae.)

119.7 Places — a second pass

Say the words for a reason and because of that.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a reason, because of that, a place, right, left
- to here, to there, a theatre, a bath, a military camp
- a building, a prison, the main hall of a house, a corner, a street
- a step, a library, a food market, an eating-house, an inn
- a floor, a well, a bakery, a workshop, a tomb
- an open space, a milestone, around, next to, opposite

Before you move on

A reason? (ratiō, ratiōnis.) Because of that? (propterea.) A place? (locus, locī.) Right? (dexter, dextra, dextrum.) Left? (sinister, sinistra, sinistrum.) To here? (hūc.) To there? (illūc.) A theatre? (theātrum, theātrī.) A bath? (balneum, balneī.) A military camp? (castra, castrōrum.) A building? (aedificium, aedificiī.) A prison? (carcer, carceris.) The main hall of a house? (ātrium, ātrīī.) A corner? (angulus, angulī.) A street? (vīcus, vīcī.) A step? (gradus, gradūs.) A library? (bibliothēca, bibliothēcae.) A food market? (macellum, macellī.) An eating-house? (popīna, popīnae.) An inn? (caupōna, caupōnae.) A floor? (pavīmentum, pavīmentī.) A well? (puteus, puteī.) A bakery? (pistrīnum, pistrīnī.) A workshop? (officīna, officīnae.) A tomb? (sepulcrum, sepulcrī.) An open space? (ārea, āreae.) A milestone? (mīliārium, mīliāriī.) Around? (circā.) Next to? (iūxtā.) Opposite? (contrā.)

Chapter 120

Sack, Box, Cushion, Blanket, Napkin

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a sack, a box, a cushion, a blanket and a napkin.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 120: I can say a sack, a box, a cushion, a blanket and a napkin.

120.1 saccus, saccī — a sack, a bag

Before the new one: say the Latin for next to, close by, then the Latin for opposite, against.

You'll want to know: saccus, saccī

saccus, saccī — "a sack, a bag".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saccus was borrowed from Greek sakkos, "a bag of coarse cloth" (Lewis & Short), which Greek took from a Semitic language. English sack comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saccus
- Say it: saccus, once more
- Say it: say saccus
- Recall: say the Latin for next to, close by, then the Latin for opposite, against, then say saccus again

Before you move on

What does saccus, saccī mean? ("A sack, a bag".) Say it once more.

120.2 cista, cistae — a box, a chest

Before the new one: say the Latin for opposite, against, then the Latin for a sack.

You'll want to know: cista, cistae

cista, cistae — "a box, a chest".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cista was borrowed from Greek kistē, "a box, a basket" (Lewis & Short). English chest was borrowed from it very early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cista
- Say it: cista, once more
- Say it: say cista
- Recall: say the Latin for opposite, against, then the Latin for a sack, then say cista again

Before you move on

What does cista, cistae mean? ("A box, a chest".) Say it once more.

120.3 pulvīnus, pulvīnī — a cushion, a pillow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sack, then the Latin for a box.

You'll want to know: pulvīnus, pulvīnī

pulvīnus, pulvīnī — "a cushion, a pillow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulvīnus has no sure origin; the link with pulvis, "dust", that EtymDB 2.1 records is doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pulvīnus
- Say it: pulvīnus, once more
- Say it: say pulvīnus
- Recall: say the Latin for a sack, then the Latin for a box, then say pulvīnus again

Before you move on

What does pulvīnus, pulvīnī mean? ("A cushion, a pillow".) Say it once more.

120.4 strāgulum, strāgulī — a blanket, a bedspread

Before the new one: say the Latin for a box, then the Latin for a cushion.

You'll want to know: strāgulum, strāgulī

strāgulum, strāgulī — "a blanket, a bedspread".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

strāgulum is the neuter of strāgulus, "for spreading out" (Lewis & Short), built on the root of sternō, "to spread, to lay out".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: strāgulum
- Say it: strāgulum, once more
- Say it: say strāgulum
- Recall: say the Latin for a box, then the Latin for a cushion, then say strāgulum again

Before you move on

What does strāgulum, strāgulī mean? ("A blanket, a bedspread".) Say it once more.

120.5 mappa, mappae — a napkin, a cloth

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cushion, then the Latin for a blanket.

You'll want to know: mappa, mappae

mappa, mappae — "a napkin, a cloth".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mappa came from Punic, the language of Carthage: Quintilian already called mappa a Punic word (Lewis & Short). English map comes from it, through mappa mundi, "cloth of the world".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mappa
- Say it: mappa, once more
- Say it: say mappa
- Recall: say the Latin for a cushion, then the Latin for a blanket, then say mappa again

Before you move on

What does mappa, mappae mean? ("A napkin, a cloth".) Say it once more.

Chapter 121

Spoon, Cooking pot, Dish, Bowl, Candle

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a spoon, a cooking pot, a dish, a bowl and a candle.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 121: I can say a spoon, a cooking pot, a dish, a bowl and a candle.

121.1 cochlear, cochleāris — a spoon

Before the new one: say the Latin for a blanket, then the Latin for a napkin.

You'll want to know: cochlear, cochleāris

cochlear, cochleāris — "a spoon".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cochlear is built on cochlea, "a snail" (EtymDB 2.1), a word Latin took from Greek kokhlias, "snail, spiral": the spoon was first for eating snails, its pointed end for picking them out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cochlear
- Say it: cochlear, once more
- Say it: say cochlear
- Recall: say the Latin for a blanket, then the Latin for a napkin, then say cochlear again

Before you move on

What does cochlear, cochleāris mean? ("A spoon".) Say it once more.

121.2 ōlla, ōllae — a cooking pot

Before the new one: say the Latin for a napkin, then the Latin for a spoon.

You'll want to know: ōlla, ōllae

ōlla, ōllae — "a cooking pot".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōlla is inherited, usually traced through Proto-Italic aukslā*, "pot", to Proto-Indo-European Hukwsleh2*, "cooking pot" (EtymDB 2.1). An older Latin spelling was aula (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōlla
- Say it: ōlla, once more
- Say it: say ōlla

- Recall: say the Latin for a napkin, then the Latin for a spoon, then say ōlla again

Before you move on

What does ōlla, ōllae mean? ("A cooking pot".) Say it once more.

121.3 patina, patinae — a dish, a pan

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spoon, then the Latin for a cooking pot.

You'll want to know: patina, patinae

patina, patinae — "a dish, a pan".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patina was probably borrowed from Greek patanē, "a flat dish" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short's link with pateō, "to lie open", is less likely. English patina is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patina
- Say it: patina, once more
- Say it: say patina
- Recall: say the Latin for a spoon, then the Latin for a cooking pot, then say patina again

Before you move on

What does patina, patinae mean? ("A dish, a pan".) Say it once more.

121.4 catīnus, catīnī — a bowl, a deep dish

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cooking pot, then the Latin for a dish.

You'll want to know: catīnus, catīnī

catīnus, catīnī — "a bowl, a deep dish".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

catīnus has no sure origin; Varro compared a Sicilian Greek katinon, "dish" (Lewis & Short), and it may be a loan from there.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: catīnus
- Say it: catīnus, once more
- Say it: say catīnus
- Recall: say the Latin for a cooking pot, then the Latin for a dish, then say catīnus again

Before you move on

What does catīnus, catīnī mean? ("A bowl, a deep dish".) Say it once more.

121.5 candēla, candēlae — a candle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dish, then the Latin for a bowl.

Put three hours in order, first to last: prīma hōra, sexta hōra, nōna hōra. Which of them is ante merīdiem?

You'll want to know: candēla, candēlae

candēla, candēlae — "a candle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

candēla is built on candeō, "to shine, to glow white" (Lewis & Short), with -ēla, an ending for a tool. candeō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)kand-*, "to shine" (EtymDB 2.1). English candle comes from candēla.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: candēla
- Say it: candēla, once more
- Say it: say candēla
- Recall: say the Latin for a dish, then the Latin for a bowl, then say candēla again

Before you move on

What does candēla, candēlae mean? ("A candle".) Say it once more.

Chapter 122

Nail, Hammer, Saw, Axe, Ladder

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a nail, a hammer, a saw, an axe and a ladder.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 122: I can say a nail, a hammer, a saw, an axe and a ladder.

122.1 clāvus, clāvī — a nail (to hammer)

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a bowl, then the Latin for a candle.

You'll want to know: clāvus, clāvī

clāvus, clāvī — "a nail (to hammer)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clāvus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)kleh2w-*, "nail, pin, hook" (EtymDB 2.1); clāvis, "key", and claudō, "to shut", belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: clāvus
- Say it: clāvus, once more
- Say it: say clāvus
- Recall: say the Latin for a bowl, then the Latin for a candle, then say clāvus again

Before you move on

What does clāvus, clāvī mean? ("A nail (to hammer)".) Say it once more.

122.2 malleus, malleī — a hammer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a candle, then the Latin for a nail.

You'll want to know: malleus, malleī

malleus, malleī — "a hammer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

malleus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root melh2-*, "to grind, to crush" (EtymDB 2.1). English mallet and maul come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: malleus
- Say it: malleus, once more
- Say it: say malleus

- Recall: say the Latin for a candle, then the Latin for a nail, then say malleus again

Before you move on

What does malleus, malleī mean? ("A hammer".) Say it once more.

122.3 serra, serrae — a saw

Before the new one: say the Latin for a nail, then the Latin for a hammer.

You'll want to know: serra, serrae

serra, serrae — "a saw".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

serra has no sure origin; Lewis & Short suggest a link with secō, "to cut", but it is uncertain. English serrated, "saw-toothed", comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: serra
- Say it: serra, once more
- Say it: say serra
- Recall: say the Latin for a nail, then the Latin for a hammer, then say serra again

Before you move on

What does serra, serrae mean? ("A saw".) Say it once more.

122.4 secūris, secūris — an axe

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hammer, then the Latin for a saw.

You'll want to know: secūris, secūris

secūris, secūris — "an axe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

secūris is built on secō, "to cut" (Lewis & Short): the cutting tool.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: secūris
- Say it: secūris, once more
- Say it: say secūris
- Recall: say the Latin for a hammer, then the Latin for a saw, then say secūris again

Before you move on

What does secūris, secūris mean? ("An axe".) Say it once more.

122.5 scālae, scālārum — a ladder, stairs

Before the new one: say the Latin for a saw, then the Latin for an axe.

You'll want to know: scālae, scālārum

scālae, scālārum — "a ladder, stairs".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scālae is usually derived from scandō, "to climb": the things one climbs. English scale, "to climb", comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scālae
- Say it: scālae, once more
- Say it: say scālae
- Recall: say the Latin for a saw, then the Latin for an axe, then say scālae again

Before you move on

What does scālae, scālārum mean? ("A ladder, stairs".) Say it once more.

Chapter 123

Vessel, Two-handled jar, Flask, Purse, Coin

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a vessel, a two-handled jar, a flask, a purse and a coin.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 123: I can say a vessel, a two-handled jar, a flask, a purse and a coin.

123.1 vās, vāsis — a vessel, a container

Before the new one: say the Latin for an axe, then the Latin for a ladder.

You'll want to know: vās, vāsis

vās, vāsis — "a vessel, a container".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vās has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. It is a different word from vas, vadis, "a guarantor, bail". English vase comes from vās through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vās
- Say it: vās, once more
- Say it: say vās
- Recall: say the Latin for an axe, then the Latin for a ladder, then say vās again

Before you move on

What does vās, vāsis mean? ("A vessel, a container".) Say it once more.

123.2 amphora, amphorae — a two-handled jar

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ladder, then the Latin for a vessel.

You'll want to know: amphora, amphorae

amphora, amphorae — "a two-handled jar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amphora was borrowed from Greek amphoreus, "a two-handled jar" (Lewis & Short), from amphi, "on both sides", and pherō, "to carry": a jar carried by both handles.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amphora
- Say it: amphora, once more
- Say it: say amphora

- Recall: say the Latin for a ladder, then the Latin for a vessel, then say amphora again

Before you move on

What does amphora, amphorae mean? ("A two-handled jar".) Say it once more.

123.3 lagoena, lagoenae — a flask, a bottle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a vessel, then the Latin for a two-handled jar.

You'll want to know: lagoena, lagoenae

lagoena, lagoenae — "a flask, a bottle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lagoena is another spelling of lagēna, "a flask" (Lewis & Short), a word borrowed from Greek lagynos, "a flask".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lagoena
- Say it: lagoena, once more
- Say it: say lagoena
- Recall: say the Latin for a vessel, then the Latin for a two-handled jar, then say lagoena again

Before you move on

What does lagoena, lagoenae mean? ("A flask, a bottle".) Say it once more.

123.4 crumēna, crumēnae — a purse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a two-handled jar, then the Latin for a flask.

You'll want to know: crumēna, crumēnae

crumēna, crumēnae — "a purse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crumēna has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crumēna
- Say it: crumēna, once more
- Say it: say crumēna
- Recall: say the Latin for a two-handled jar, then the Latin for a flask, then say crumēna again

Before you move on

What does crumēna, crumēnae mean? ("A purse".) Say it once more.

123.5 nummus, nummī — a coin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flask, then the Latin for a purse.

You'll want to know: nummus, nummī

nummus, nummī — "a coin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nummus probably came from the Greek of Sicily and south Italy, where noummos, "a coin", was in use; Lewis & Short connect it with Greek nemō, "to distribute". English numismatic, "of coins", comes from the Greek family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nummus
- Say it: nummus, once more
- Say it: say nummus
- Recall: say the Latin for a flask, then the Latin for a purse, then say nummus again

Before you move on

What does nummus, nummī mean? ("A coin".) Say it once more.

Chapter 124

Book, Ink, Reed pen, Wax, Picture

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a book, ink, a reed pen, wax and a picture.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 124: I can say a book, ink, a reed pen, wax and a picture.

124.1 cōdex, cōdicis — a book (of bound pages)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a purse, then the Latin for a coin.

Read it: the account aloud as one run — Māne surgō. In scholā legō et scrībō. Vespere domum redeō.

You'll want to know: cōdex, cōdicis

cōdex, cōdicis — "a book (of bound pages)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōdex is another form of caudex, "a tree trunk, a block of wood" (Lewis & Short): the first such books were wooden tablets fastened together. Where caudex comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōdex
- Say it: cōdex, once more
- Say it: say cōdex
- Recall: say the Latin for a purse, then the Latin for a coin, then say cōdex again

Before you move on

What does cōdex, cōdicis mean? ("A book (of bound pages)".) Say it once more.

124.2 ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī — ink

Before the new one: say the Latin for a coin, then the Latin for a book.

You'll want to know: ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī

ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī — "ink".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ātrāmentum is built on āter, "black" (Lewis & Short), with -mentum, an ending for a thing: what blackens.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ātrāmentum
- Say it: ātrāmentum, once more
- Say it: say ātrāmentum
- Recall: say the Latin for a coin, then the Latin for a book, then say ātrāmentum again

Before you move on

What does ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī mean? ("Ink".) Say it once more.

124.3 calamus, calamī — a reed pen

Before the new one: say the Latin for a book, then the Latin for ink.

You'll want to know: calamus, calamī

calamus, calamī — "a reed pen".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calamus was borrowed from Greek kalamos, "a reed, a reed pen" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calamus
- Say it: calamus, once more
- Say it: say calamus
- Recall: say the Latin for a book, then the Latin for ink, then say calamus again

Before you move on

What does calamus, calamī mean? ("A reed pen".) Say it once more.

124.4 cēra, cērae — wax; a wax tablet

Before the new one: say the Latin for ink, then the Latin for a reed pen.

You'll want to know: cēra, cērae

cēra, cērae — "wax; a wax tablet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēra is usually taken as a loan from Greek kēros, "wax" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cēra
- Say it: cēra, once more
- Say it: say cēra
- Recall: say the Latin for ink, then the Latin for a reed pen, then say cēra again

Before you move on

What does cēra, cērae mean? ("Wax; a wax tablet".) Say it once more.

124.5 pictūra, pictūrae — a picture, a painting

Before the new one: say the Latin for a reed pen, then the Latin for wax; a wax tablet.

You'll want to know: pictūra, pictūrae

pictūra, pictūrae — "a picture, a painting".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pictūra is built on pingō, "to paint" (Lewis & Short), through its participle pictus, "painted", with -ūra, an ending for a result. pingō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peyk-*, "to mark, to colour"

(EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pictūra
- Say it: pictūra, once more
- Say it: say pictūra
- Recall: say the Latin for a reed pen, then the Latin for wax; a wax tablet, then say pictūra again

Before you move on

What does pictūra, pictūrae mean? ("A picture, a painting".) Say it once more.

Chapter 125

Statue, Sign, Sail, Wagon, Long dress

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a statue, a sign, a sail, a wagon and a long dress.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 125: I can say a statue, a sign, a sail, a wagon and a long dress.

125.1 statua, statuae — a statue

Before the new one: say the Latin for wax; a wax tablet, then the Latin for a picture.

You'll want to know: statua, statuae

statua, statuae — "a statue".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

statua is built on statuō, "to set up" (Lewis & Short): a thing set up. statuō comes from status, "a standing", from stō, "to stand".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: statua
- Say it: statua, once more
- Say it: say statua
- Recall: say the Latin for wax; a wax tablet, then the Latin for a picture, then say statua again

Before you move on

What does statua, statuae mean? ("A statue".) Say it once more.

125.2 signum, signī — a sign, a signal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a picture, then the Latin for a statue.

You'll want to know: signum, signī

signum, signī — "a sign, a signal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

signum is often traced to Proto-Indo-European sek-*, "to cut" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of secō, "to cut": a sign as a notch or mark. The link is likely but not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: signum
- Say it: signum, once more
- Say it: say signum
- Recall: say the Latin for a picture, then the Latin for a statue, then say signum again

Before you move on

What does signum, signī mean? ("A sign, a signal".) Say it once more.

125.3 vēlum, vēlī — a sail; a curtain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a statue, then the Latin for a sign.

You'll want to know: vēlum, vēlī

vēlum, vēlī — "a sail; a curtain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēlum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weg-, "to weave" (EtymDB 2.1), through an older wegslom; vexillum, "a banner", is its diminutive.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vēlum
- Say it: vēlum, once more
- Say it: say vēlum
- Recall: say the Latin for a statue, then the Latin for a sign, then say vēlum again

Before you move on

What does vēlum, vēlī mean? ("A sail; a curtain".) Say it once more.

125.4 plaustrum, plaustrī — a wagon, a cart

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sign, then the Latin for a sail; a curtain.

You'll want to know: plaustrum, plaustrī

plaustrum, plaustrī — "a wagon, a cart".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plaustrum has no sure origin; the links with words for floating that Lewis & Short and EtymDB 2.1 record are doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: plaustrum
- Say it: plaustrum, once more
- Say it: say plaustrum
- Recall: say the Latin for a sign, then the Latin for a sail; a curtain, then say plaustrum again

Before you move on

What does plaustrum, plaustrī mean? ("A wagon, a cart".) Say it once more.

125.5 stola, stolae — a long dress

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sail; a curtain, then the Latin for a wagon.

You'll want to know: stola, stolae

stola, stolae — "a long dress".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stola was borrowed from Greek stolē, "a garment, equipment" (Lewis & Short), from stellō, "to make ready, to equip" (EtymDB 2.1). English stole comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: stola
- Say it: stola, once more
- Say it: say stola
- Recall: say the Latin for a sail; a curtain, then the Latin for a wagon, then say stola again

Before you move on

What does stola, stolae mean? ("A long dress".) Say it once more.

Chapter 126

Cloak, Belt, Fruit, Onion, Garlic

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a cloak, a belt, a fruit, an onion and garlic.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 126: I can say a cloak, a belt, a fruit, an onion and garlic.

126.1 pallium, palliī — a cloak

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wagon, then the Latin for a long dress.

You'll want to know: pallium, palliī

pallium, palliī — "a cloak".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pallium belongs with palla, "a woman's mantle" (Lewis & Short); where the pair comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pallium
- Say it: pallium, once more
- Say it: say pallium
- Recall: say the Latin for a wagon, then the Latin for a long dress, then say pallium again

Before you move on

What does pallium, palliī mean? ("A cloak".) Say it once more.

126.2 zōna, zōnae — a belt

Before the new one: say the Latin for a long dress, then the Latin for a cloak.

You'll want to know: zōna, zōnae

zōna, zōnae — "a belt".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

zōna was borrowed from Greek zōnē, "a belt, a girdle" (Lewis & Short). English zone is the same word: the climate belts of the earth.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: zōna
- Say it: zōna, once more
- Say it: say zōna
- Recall: say the Latin for a long dress, then the Latin for a cloak, then say zōna again

Before you move on

What does zōna, zōnae mean? ("A belt".) Say it once more.

126.3 pōmum, pōmī — a fruit, an apple

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cloak, then the Latin for a belt.

You'll want to know: pōmum, pōmī

pōmum, pōmī — "a fruit, an apple".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōmum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2epo*, "off, away", and h1em-, "to take" (EtymDB 2.1), through an older po-emom, "what is taken off, picked". English pomegranate is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pōmum
- Say it: pōmum, once more
- Say it: say pōmum
- Recall: say the Latin for a cloak, then the Latin for a belt, then say pōmum again

Before you move on

What does pōmum, pōmī mean? ("A fruit, an apple".) Say it once more.

126.4 cēpa, cēpae — an onion

Before the new one: say the Latin for a belt, then the Latin for a fruit.

You'll want to know: cēpa, cēpae

cēpa, cēpae — "an onion".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēpa, also spelled caepa (Lewis & Short), has no sure origin. English chive comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cēpa
- Say it: cēpa, once more
- Say it: say cēpa
- Recall: say the Latin for a belt, then the Latin for a fruit, then say cēpa again

Before you move on

What does cēpa, cēpae mean? ("An onion".) Say it once more.

126.5 ālium, āliī — garlic

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fruit, then the Latin for an onion.

You'll want to know: ālium, āliī

ālium, āliī — "garlic".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ālium, also spelled allium (Lewis & Short), has no sure origin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ālium
- Say it: ālium, once more
- Say it: say ālium
- Recall: say the Latin for a fruit, then the Latin for an onion, then say ālium again

Before you move on

What does ālium, āliī mean? ("Garlic".) Say it once more.

Chapter 127

Bean, Pea, Cucumber, Chicken, Pepper

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a bean, a pea, a cucumber, a chicken and pepper.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 127: I can say a bean, a pea, a cucumber, a chicken and pepper.

127.1 faba, fabae — a bean

Before the new one: say the Latin for an onion, then the Latin for garlic.

You'll want to know: faba, fabae

faba, fabae — "a bean".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

faba is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhabh-*, "bean" (EtymDB 2.1). English bean may be a distant cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: faba
- Say it: faba, once more
- Say it: say faba
- Recall: say the Latin for an onion, then the Latin for garlic, then say faba again

Before you move on

What does faba, fabae mean? ("A bean".) Say it once more.

127.2 pīsum, pīsī — a pea

Before the new one: say the Latin for garlic, then the Latin for a bean.

You'll want to know: pīsum, pīsī

pīsum, pīsī — "a pea".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pīsum was borrowed from Greek pison, "pea" (Lewis & Short). English pea comes from it: older English pease was heard as a plural.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pīsum
- Say it: pīsum, once more
- Say it: say pīsum
- Recall: say the Latin for garlic, then the Latin for a bean, then say pīsum again

Before you move on

What does pīsum, pīsī mean? ("A pea".) Say it once more.

127.3 cucumis, cucumeris — a cucumber

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bean, then the Latin for a pea.

You'll want to know: cucumis, cucumeris

cucumis, cucumeris — "a cucumber".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cucumis has no sure origin; it is probably a loan from a lost Mediterranean language. English cucumber comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cucumis
- Say it: cucumis, once more
- Say it: say cucumis
- Recall: say the Latin for a bean, then the Latin for a pea, then say cucumis again

Before you move on

What does cucumis, cucumeris mean? ("A cucumber".) Say it once more.

127.4 pullus, pullī — a chicken, a young animal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pea, then the Latin for a cucumber.

You'll want to know: pullus, pullī

pullus, pullī — "a chicken, a young animal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pullus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European polH-*, "young animal" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek pōlos, "foal", and English foal are cousins (Lewis & Short). English pullet comes from pullus through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pullus
- Say it: pullus, once more
- Say it: say pullus
- Recall: say the Latin for a pea, then the Latin for a cucumber, then say pullus again

Before you move on

What does pullus, pullī mean? ("A chicken, a young animal".) Say it once more.

127.5 piper, piperis — pepper

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cucumber, then the Latin for a chicken.

You'll want to know: piper, piperis

piper, piperis — "pepper".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piper was borrowed from Greek peperi, "pepper" (Lewis & Short), which came by trade from an Indian word like Sanskrit pippalī, "long pepper" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: piper
- Say it: piper, once more
- Say it: say piper
- Recall: say the Latin for a cucumber, then the Latin for a chicken, then say piper again

Before you move on

What does piper, piperis mean? ("Pepper".) Say it once more.

Chapter 128

Flat cake, Beer, Juice, Rose, Lily

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a flat cake, beer, juice, a rose and a lily.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 128: I can say a flat cake, beer, juice, a rose and a lily.

128.1 placenta, placentae — a flat cake

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chicken, then the Latin for pepper.

You'll want to know: placenta, placentae

placenta, placentae — "a flat cake".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

placenta was borrowed from Greek plakous, plakountos, "a flat cake" (Lewis & Short). Anatomists later gave the name to a flat organ of the womb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: placenta
- Say it: placenta, once more
- Say it: say placenta
- Recall: say the Latin for a chicken, then the Latin for pepper, then say placenta again

Before you move on

What does placenta, placentae mean? ("A flat cake".) Say it once more.

128.2 cervīsia, cervīsiae — beer

Before the new one: say the Latin for pepper, then the Latin for a flat cake.

You'll want to know: cervīsia, cervīsiae

cervīsia, cervīsiae — "beer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cervīsia came from Gaulish, the Celtic language of Gaul: Lewis & Short mark cervīsia as Gallic, a Celtic word for beer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cervīsia
- Say it: cervīsia, once more
- Say it: say cervīsia
- Recall: say the Latin for pepper, then the Latin for a flat cake, then say cervīsia again

Before you move on

What does cervīsia, cervīsiae mean? ("Beer".) Say it once more.

128.3 sūcus, sūcī — juice

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flat cake, then the Latin for beer.

You'll want to know: sūcus, sūcī

sūcus, sūcī — "juice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sūcus belongs with sūgō, "to suck" (Lewis & Short), and both are usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sug-*, "to suck" (EtymDB 2.1). English suck is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sūcus
- Say it: sūcus, once more
- Say it: say sūcus
- Recall: say the Latin for a flat cake, then the Latin for beer, then say sūcus again

Before you move on

What does sūcus, sūcī mean? ("Juice".) Say it once more.

128.4 rosa, rosae — a rose

Before the new one: say the Latin for beer, then the Latin for juice.

Say amō, I love, and then amīcum amō.

You'll want to know: rosa, rosae

rosa, rosae — "a rose".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rosa is related to Greek rhodon, "rose" (Lewis & Short), but it is not a direct borrowing: it probably reached Latin through another language of Italy. The word is often traced further back to Iranian.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rosa
- Say it: rosa, once more
- Say it: say rosa
- Recall: say the Latin for beer, then the Latin for juice, then say rosa again

Before you move on

What does rosa, rosae mean? ("A rose".) Say it once more.

128.5 līlium, līliī — a lily

Before the new one: say the Latin for juice, then the Latin for a rose.

You'll want to know: līlium, līliī

līlium, līliī — "a lily".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līlium was borrowed from Greek leirion, "lily" (Lewis & Short), probably through another language; the word may go back to Egyptian.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: līlium
- Say it: līlium, once more
- Say it: say līlium
- Recall: say the Latin for juice, then the Latin for a rose, then say līlium again

Before you move on

What does līlium, līliī mean? ("A lily".) Say it once more.

Chapter 129

Branch, Tree trunk, Seed, Rock, River bank

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a branch, a tree trunk, a seed, a rock and a river bank.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 129: I can say a branch, a tree trunk, a seed, a rock and a river bank.

129.1 rāmus, rāmī — a branch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rose, then the Latin for a lily.

You'll want to know: rāmus, rāmī

rāmus, rāmī — "a branch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rāmus is probably related to rādīx, "root", from an older rādmus* (Lewis & Short); both are traced to Proto-Indo-European wreh2d-*, "root, branch" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rāmus
- Say it: rāmus, once more
- Say it: say rāmus
- Recall: say the Latin for a rose, then the Latin for a lily, then say rāmus again

Before you move on

What does rāmus, rāmī mean? ("A branch".) Say it once more.

129.2 truncus, truncī — a tree trunk

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lily, then the Latin for a branch.

You'll want to know: truncus, truncī

truncus, truncī — "a tree trunk".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

truncus is the adjective truncus, "cut off, maimed" (Lewis & Short), used as a noun: the stem of a tree, without its branches. English trunk comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: truncus
- Say it: truncus, once more
- Say it: say truncus
- Recall: say the Latin for a lily, then the Latin for a branch, then say truncus again

Before you move on

What does truncus, truncī mean? ("A tree trunk".) Say it once more.

129.3 sēmen, sēminis — a seed

Before the new one: say the Latin for a branch, then the Latin for a tree trunk.

You'll want to know: sēmen, sēminis

sēmen, sēminis — "a seed".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sēmen is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European seh1mn*, "seed", from seh1-*, "to sow" (EtymDB 2.1); serō, "to sow", belongs to the same family (Lewis & Short), and English seed is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sēmen
- Say it: sēmen, once more
- Say it: say sēmen
- Recall: say the Latin for a branch, then the Latin for a tree trunk, then say sēmen again

Before you move on

What does sēmen, sēminis mean? ("A seed".) Say it once more.

129.4 saxum, saxī — a rock, a boulder

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tree trunk, then the Latin for a seed.

You'll want to know: saxum, saxī

saxum, saxī — "a rock, a boulder".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saxum is often traced to Proto-Indo-European sek-*, "to cut" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of secāre, "to cut" (Lewis & Short), but the link is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saxum
- Say it: saxum, once more
- Say it: say saxum
- Recall: say the Latin for a tree trunk, then the Latin for a seed, then say saxum again

Before you move on

What does saxum, saxī mean? ("A rock, a boulder".) Say it once more.

129.5 rīpa, rīpae — a river bank

Before the new one: say the Latin for a seed, then the Latin for a rock.

You'll want to know: rīpa, rīpae

rīpa, rīpae — "a river bank".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rīpa is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European h1reypeh2*, "steep slope", from a root for tearing (EtymDB 2.1); Greek ereipō, "to tear down", is often compared. Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rīpa
- Say it: rīpa, once more
- Say it: say rīpa
- Recall: say the Latin for a seed, then the Latin for a rock, then say rīpa again

Before you move on

What does rīpa, rīpae mean? ("A river bank".) Say it once more.

Chapter 130

Wave, Ice, Hail, Thunder, Lightning

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a wave, ice, hail, thunder and lightning.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 130: I can say a wave, ice, hail, thunder and lightning.

130.1 unda, undae — a wave

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rock, then the Latin for a river bank.

You'll want to know: unda, undae

unda, undae — "a wave".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

unda is inherited, usually traced to the Proto-Indo-European root wed-*, "water", in a form with an n. Greek hydōr, "water", and English water are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: unda
- Say it: unda, once more
- Say it: say unda
- Recall: say the Latin for a rock, then the Latin for a river bank, then say unda again

Before you move on

What does unda, undae mean? ("A wave".) Say it once more.

130.2 glaciēs, glaciēī — ice

Before the new one: say the Latin for a river bank, then the Latin for a wave.

You'll want to know: glaciēs, glaciēī

glaciēs, glaciēī — "ice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

glaciēs is related to gelū, "frost", and both are usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gel-*, "cold, to freeze" (EtymDB 2.1). English cold is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: glaciēs
- Say it: glaciēs, once more
- Say it: say glaciēs
- Recall: say the Latin for a river bank, then the Latin for a wave, then say glaciēs again

Before you move on

What does glaciēs, glaciēī mean? ("Ice".) Say it once more.

130.3 grandō, grandinis — hail

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wave, then the Latin for ice.

You'll want to know: grandō, grandinis

grandō, grandinis — "hail".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

grandō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European greh3d-*, "hail" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek khalaza, "hail", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: grandō
- Say it: grandō, once more
- Say it: say grandō
- Recall: say the Latin for a wave, then the Latin for ice, then say grandō again

Before you move on

What does grandō, grandinis mean? ("Hail".) Say it once more.

130.4 tonitrus, tonitrūs — thunder

Before the new one: say the Latin for ice, then the Latin for hail.

You'll want to know: tonitrus, tonitrūs

tonitrus, tonitrūs — "thunder".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tonitrus is built on tonō, "to thunder" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)tenh2-*, "to thunder"; English thunder is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tonitrus
- Say it: tonitrus, once more
- Say it: say tonitrus
- Recall: say the Latin for ice, then the Latin for hail, then say tonitrus again

Before you move on

What does tonitrus, tonitrūs mean? ("Thunder".) Say it once more.

130.5 fulgur, fulguris — lightning

Before the new one: say the Latin for hail, then the Latin for thunder.

You'll want to know: fulgur, fulguris

fulgur, fulguris — "lightning".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fulgur is built on fulgeō, "to flash, to lighten" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhleg-*, "to shine, to burn". fulmen, "a thunderbolt", is from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fulgur
- Say it: fulgur, once more
- Say it: say fulgur
- Recall: say the Latin for hail, then the Latin for thunder, then say fulgur again

Before you move on

What does fulgur, fulguris mean? ("Lightning".) Say it once more.

130.6 Places and things in the house — a first pass

Say the words for thunder and lightning.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a sack, a box, a cushion, a blanket, a napkin
- a spoon, a cooking pot, a dish, a bowl, a candle
- a nail, a hammer, a saw, an axe, a ladder
- a vessel, a two-handled jar, a flask, a purse, a coin
- a book, ink, a reed pen, wax; a wax tablet, a picture

Before you move on

A sack? (saccus, saccī.) A box? (cista, cistae.) A cushion? (pulvīnus, pulvīnī.) A blanket? (strāgulum, strāgulī.) A napkin? (mappa, mappae.) A spoon? (cochlear, cochleāris.) A cooking pot? (ōlla, ōllae.) A dish? (patina, patinae.) A bowl? (catīnus, catīnī.) A candle? (candēla, candēlae.) A nail? (clāvus, clāvī.) A hammer? (malleus, malleī.) A saw? (serra, serrae.) An axe? (secūris, secūris.) A ladder? (scālae, scālārum.) A vessel? (vās, vāsis.) A two-handled jar? (amphora, amphorae.) A flask? (lagoena, lagoenae.) A purse? (crumēna, crumēnae.) A coin? (nummus, nummī.) A book? (cōdex, cōdicis.) Ink? (ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī.) A reed pen? (calamus, calamī.) Wax; a wax tablet? (cēra, cērae.) A picture? (pictūra, pictūrae.)

130.7 Things you use — a second pass

Say the words for a statue and a sign.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a statue, a sign, a sail; a curtain, a wagon, a long dress
- a cloak, a belt, a fruit, an onion, garlic
- a bean, a pea, a cucumber, a chicken, pepper
- a flat cake, beer, juice, a rose, a lily
- a branch, a tree trunk, a seed, a rock, a river bank
- a wave, ice, hail, thunder, lightning

Before you move on

A statue? (statua, statuae.) A sign? (signum, signī.) A sail; a curtain? (vēlum, vēlī.) A wagon? (plaustrum, plaustrī.) A long dress? (stola, stolae.) A cloak? (pallium, palliī.) A belt? (zōna, zōnae.) A fruit? (pōmum, pōmī.) An onion? (cēpa, cēpae.) Garlic? (ālium, āliī.) A bean? (faba, fabae.) A pea? (pīsum, pīsī.) A cucumber? (cucumis, cucumeris.) A chicken? (pullus, pullī.) Pepper? (piper, piperis.) A flat cake? (placenta, placentae.) Beer? (cervīsia, cervīsiae.) Juice? (sūcus, sūcī.) A rose? (rosa, rosae.) A lily? (līlium, līlīī.) A branch? (rāmus, rāmī.) A tree trunk? (truncus, truncī.) A seed? (sēmen, sēminis.) A rock? (saxum, saxī.) A river bank? (rīpa, rīpae.) A wave? (unda, undae.) Ice? (glaciēs, glaciēī.) Hail? (grandō, grandinis.) Thunder? (tonitrus, tonitrūs.) Lightning? (fulgur, fulguris.)

Chapter 131

Fog, Eagle, Dove, Raven, Duck

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say fog, an eagle, a dove, a raven and a duck.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 131: I can say fog, an eagle, a dove, a raven and a duck.

131.1 nebula, nebulae — fog, mist

Before the new one: say the Latin for thunder, then the Latin for lightning.

You'll want to know: nebula, nebulae

nebula, nebulae — "fog, mist".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nebula is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nebhos*, "cloud" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek nephelē, "cloud", is a close cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nebula
- Say it: nebula, once more
- Say it: say nebula
- Recall: say the Latin for thunder, then the Latin for lightning, then say nebula again

Before you move on

What does nebula, nebulae mean? ("Fog, mist".) Say it once more.

131.2 aquila, aquilae — an eagle

Before the new one: say the Latin for lightning, then the Latin for fog.

You'll want to know: aquila, aquilae

aquila, aquilae — "an eagle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aquila may come from aquilus, "dark brown" (Lewis & Short), after the bird's colour, but this is uncertain. English eagle comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aquila
- Say it: aquila, once more
- Say it: say aquila
- Recall: say the Latin for lightning, then the Latin for fog, then say aquila again

Before you move on

What does aquila, aquilae mean? ("An eagle".) Say it once more.

131.3 columba, columbae — a dove, a pigeon

Before the new one: say the Latin for fog, then the Latin for an eagle.

You'll want to know: columba, columbae

columba, columbae — "a dove, a pigeon".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

columba is the feminine of columbus, "a male dove" (Lewis & Short). Its origin is uncertain; Greek kolymbos, "a diving bird", is often compared (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: columba
- Say it: columba, once more
- Say it: say columba
- Recall: say the Latin for fog, then the Latin for an eagle, then say columba again

Before you move on

What does columba, columbae mean? ("A dove, a pigeon".) Say it once more.

131.4 corvus, corvī — a raven

Before the new one: say the Latin for an eagle, then the Latin for a dove.

You'll want to know: corvus, corvī

corvus, corvī — "a raven".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

corvus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European korh2wos*, "raven" (EtymDB 2.1), perhaps imitating the bird's croak; Greek korax, "raven", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: corvus
- Say it: corvus, once more
- Say it: say corvus
- Recall: say the Latin for an eagle, then the Latin for a dove, then say corvus again

Before you move on

What does corvus, corvī mean? ("A raven".) Say it once more.

131.5 anas, anatis — a duck

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dove, then the Latin for a raven.

You'll want to know: anas, anatis

anas, anatis — "a duck".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

anas is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2enh2ts*, "duck" (EtymDB 2.1); German Ente, "duck", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: anas
- Say it: anas, once more
- Say it: say anas
- Recall: say the Latin for a dove, then the Latin for a raven, then say anas again

Before you move on

What does anas, anatis mean? ("A duck".) Say it once more.

Chapter 132

Goose, Bee, Fly, Ant, Butterfly

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a goose, a bee, a fly, an ant and a butterfly.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 132: I can say a goose, a bee, a fly, an ant and a butterfly.

132.1 ānser, ānseris — a goose

Before the new one: say the Latin for a raven, then the Latin for a duck.

You'll want to know: ānser, ānseris

ānser, ānseris — "a goose".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ānser is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghh2ens*, "goose" (EtymDB 2.1); Latin lost the first sound. Greek khēn, "goose", and English goose and gander are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ānser
- Say it: ānser, once more
- Say it: say ānser
- Recall: say the Latin for a raven, then the Latin for a duck, then say ānser again

Before you move on

What does ānser, ānseris mean? ("A goose".) Say it once more.

132.2 apis, apis — a bee

Before the new one: say the Latin for a duck, then the Latin for a goose.

You'll want to know: apis, apis

apis, apis — "a bee".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

apis has no sure origin; it is often thought to be a loan from a lost language of Europe. It is a different word from Āpis, "the sacred bull of Egypt".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: apis
- Say it: apis, once more
- Say it: say apis
- Recall: say the Latin for a duck, then the Latin for a goose, then say apis again

Before you move on

What does apis, apis mean? ("A bee".) Say it once more.

132.3 musca, muscae — a fly

Before the new one: say the Latin for a goose, then the Latin for a bee.

You'll want to know: musca, muscae

musca, muscae — "a fly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

musca is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mus-*, "fly, gnat" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek myia, "fly", and English midge are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: musca
- Say it: musca, once more
- Say it: say musca
- Recall: say the Latin for a goose, then the Latin for a bee, then say musca again

Before you move on

What does musca, muscae mean? ("A fly".) Say it once more.

132.4 formīca, formīcae — an ant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bee, then the Latin for a fly.

You'll want to know: formīca, formīcae

formīca, formīcae — "an ant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

formīca is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European morwi-*, "ant" (EtymDB 2.1), with its first sound changed; Greek myrmēx, "ant", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: formīca
- Say it: formīca, once more
- Say it: say formīca
- Recall: say the Latin for a bee, then the Latin for a fly, then say formīca again

Before you move on

What does formīca, formīcae mean? ("An ant".) Say it once more.

132.5 pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis — a butterfly

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fly, then the Latin for an ant.

You'll want to know: pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis

pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis — "a butterfly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāpiliō has no sure origin; it looks like a doubled, playful form, and Lewis & Short compare palpitāre, "to flutter". English pavilion, a tent spread like wings, comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāpiliō
- Say it: pāpiliō, once more
- Say it: say pāpiliō
- Recall: say the Latin for a fly, then the Latin for an ant, then say pāpiliō again

Before you move on

What does pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis mean? ("A butterfly".) Say it once more.

Chapter 133

Spider, Frog, Hare, Fox, Bull

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a spider, a frog, a hare, a fox and a bull.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 133: I can say a spider, a frog, a hare, a fox and a bull.

133.1 arānea, arāneae — a spider

Before the new one: say the Latin for an ant, then the Latin for a butterfly.

You'll want to know: arānea, arāneae

arānea, arāneae — "a spider".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arānea is closely related to Greek arakhnē, "spider" (Lewis & Short); whether Latin borrowed it or both took it from a third language is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: arānea
- Say it: arānea, once more
- Say it: say arānea
- Recall: say the Latin for an ant, then the Latin for a butterfly, then say arānea again

Before you move on

What does arānea, arāneae mean? ("A spider".) Say it once more.

133.2 rāna, rānae — a frog

Before the new one: say the Latin for a butterfly, then the Latin for a spider.

You'll want to know: rāna, rānae

rāna, rānae — "a frog".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rāna has no sure origin; it is often thought to imitate the frog's croak.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rāna
- Say it: rāna, once more
- Say it: say rāna
- Recall: say the Latin for a butterfly, then the Latin for a spider, then say rāna again

Before you move on

What does rāna, rānae mean? ("A frog".) Say it once more.

133.3 lepus, leporis — a hare

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spider, then the Latin for a frog.

You'll want to know: lepus, leporis

lepus, leporis — "a hare".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lepus has no sure origin; Varro already compared a Sicilian Greek leporis, "hare" (Lewis & Short), and it may be a loan from a language of the Mediterranean.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lepus
- Say it: lepus, once more
- Say it: say lepus
- Recall: say the Latin for a spider, then the Latin for a frog, then say lepus again

Before you move on

What does lepus, leporis mean? ("A hare".) Say it once more.

133.4 vulpēs, vulpis — a fox

Before the new one: say the Latin for a frog, then the Latin for a hare.

You'll want to know: vulpēs, vulpis

vulpēs, vulpis — "a fox".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vulpēs is inherited from Proto-Italic wolpi-*, "fox" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek alōpēx, "fox", is often compared (Lewis & Short), but the details are uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vulpēs
- Say it: vulpēs, once more
- Say it: say vulpēs
- Recall: say the Latin for a frog, then the Latin for a hare, then say vulpēs again

Before you move on

What does vulpēs, vulpis mean? ("A fox".) Say it once more.

133.5 taurus, taurī — a bull

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hare, then the Latin for a fox.

You'll want to know: taurus, taurī

taurus, taurī — "a bull".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

taurus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tauros*, "bull" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek tauros, "bull", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: taurus
- Say it: taurus, once more
- Say it: say taurus
- Recall: say the Latin for a hare, then the Latin for a fox, then say taurus again

Before you move on

What does taurus, taurī mean? ("A bull".) Say it once more.

Chapter 134

Cow, Mule, Camel, Monkey, Dolphin

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a cow, a mule, a camel, a monkey and a dolphin.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 134: I can say a cow, a mule, a camel, a monkey and a dolphin.

134.1 vacca, vaccae — a cow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fox, then the Latin for a bull.

You'll want to know: vacca, vaccae

vacca, vaccae — "a cow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vacca is probably inherited, traced to Proto-Indo-European wokeh2*, "cow" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short compare Sanskrit vacā, "cow".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vacca
- Say it: vacca, once more
- Say it: say vacca
- Recall: say the Latin for a fox, then the Latin for a bull, then say vacca again

Before you move on

What does vacca, vaccae mean? ("A cow".) Say it once more.

134.2 mūlus, mūlī — a mule

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bull, then the Latin for a cow.

You'll want to know: mūlus, mūlī

mūlus, mūlī — "a mule".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūlus has no sure origin; Greek myklos, "a donkey" (Lewis & Short), is often compared, and both may come from a language of the Balkans or Asia Minor.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mūlus
- Say it: mūlus, once more
- Say it: say mūlus
- Recall: say the Latin for a bull, then the Latin for a cow, then say mūlus again

Before you move on

What does mūlus, mūlī mean? ("A mule".) Say it once more.

134.3 camēlus, camēlī — a camel

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cow, then the Latin for a mule.

You'll want to know: camēlus, camēlī

camēlus, camēlī — "a camel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

camēlus was borrowed from Greek kamēlos, "camel" (Lewis & Short), which Greek took from a Semitic word like Hebrew gāmāl, "camel" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: camēlus
- Say it: camēlus, once more
- Say it: say camēlus
- Recall: say the Latin for a cow, then the Latin for a mule, then say camēlus again

Before you move on

What does camēlus, camēlī mean? ("A camel".) Say it once more.

134.4 sīmia, sīmiae — a monkey

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mule, then the Latin for a camel.

You'll want to know: sīmia, sīmiae

sīmia, sīmiae — "a monkey".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sīmia is built on sīmus, "snub-nosed" (EtymDB 2.1), a word Latin took from Greek simos, "snub-nosed": the monkey as the flat-nosed one.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sīmia
- Say it: sīmia, once more
- Say it: say sīmia
- Recall: say the Latin for a mule, then the Latin for a camel, then say sīmia again

Before you move on

What does sīmia, sīmiae mean? ("A monkey".) Say it once more.

134.5 delphīnus, delphīnī — a dolphin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a camel, then the Latin for a monkey.

You'll want to know: delphīnus, delphīnī

delphīnus, delphīnī — "a dolphin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

delphīnus was borrowed from Greek delphis, delphinos, "dolphin" (Lewis & Short), which may be related to delphys, "womb" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: delphīnus
- Say it: delphīnus, once more
- Say it: say delphīnus
- Recall: say the Latin for a camel, then the Latin for a monkey, then say delphīnus again

Before you move on

What does delphīnus, delphīnī mean? ("A dolphin".) Say it once more.

Chapter 135

Whale, Cockerel, Lip, Chin, Back

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a whale, a cockerel, a lip, the chin and the back.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 135: I can say a whale, a cockerel, a lip, the chin and the back.

135.1 balaena, balaenae — a whale

Before the new one: say the Latin for a monkey, then the Latin for a dolphin.

You'll want to know: balaena, balaenae

balaena, balaenae — "a whale".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

balaena was borrowed from Greek phalaina, "whale" (Lewis & Short), with b for the Greek ph.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: balaena
- Say it: balaena, once more
- Say it: say balaena
- Recall: say the Latin for a monkey, then the Latin for a dolphin, then say balaena again

Before you move on

What does balaena, balaenae mean? ("A whale".) Say it once more.

135.2 gallus, gallī — a cockerel

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dolphin, then the Latin for a whale.

You'll want to know: gallus, gallī

gallus, gallī — "a cockerel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gallus is often traced to Proto-Italic galso-*, "the crier" (EtymDB 2.1), after the bird's call, but this is uncertain. It is a different word from Gallus, "a Gaul".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gallus
- Say it: gallus, once more
- Say it: say gallus
- Recall: say the Latin for a dolphin, then the Latin for a whale, then say gallus again

Before you move on

What does gallus, gallī mean? ("A cockerel".) Say it once more.

135.3 labrum, labrī — a lip

Before the new one: say the Latin for a whale, then the Latin for a cockerel.

You'll want to know: labrum, labrī

labrum, labrī — "a lip".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

labrum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European leb-*, "lip, to hang loosely" (EtymDB 2.1); English lip is a cousin. It is a different word from labrum, "a basin", contracted from lavābrum, "a bath" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: labrum
- Say it: labrum, once more
- Say it: say labrum
- Recall: say the Latin for a whale, then the Latin for a cockerel, then say labrum again

Before you move on

What does labrum, labrī mean? ("A lip".) Say it once more.

135.4 mentum, mentī — the chin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cockerel, then the Latin for a lip.

You'll want to know: mentum, mentī

mentum, mentī — "the chin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mentum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European men-*, "to project, to stick out" (EtymDB 2.1): the chin as the part that juts. minae, "overhanging points, threats", is often put in the same family (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mentum
- Say it: mentum, once more
- Say it: say mentum
- Recall: say the Latin for a cockerel, then the Latin for a lip, then say mentum again

Before you move on

What does mentum, mentī mean? ("The chin".) Say it once more.

135.5 dorsum, dorsī — the back

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lip, then the Latin for the chin.

You'll want to know: dorsum, dorsī

dorsum, dorsī — "the back".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dorsum has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English dorsal and endorse, "to write on the back", come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dorsum
- Say it: dorsum, once more
- Say it: say dorsum
- Recall: say the Latin for a lip, then the Latin for the chin, then say dorsum again

Before you move on

What does dorsum, dorsī mean? ("The back".) Say it once more.

Chapter 136

Elbow, Thumb, Skin, Bone, Stomach

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say an elbow, a thumb, the skin, a bone and the stomach.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 136: I can say an elbow, a thumb, the skin, a bone and the stomach.

136.1 cubitum, cubitī — an elbow

Before the new one: say the Latin for the chin, then the Latin for the back.

You'll want to know: cubitum, cubitī

cubitum, cubitī — "an elbow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cubitum is built on cubō, "to lie down, to recline" (EtymDB 2.1): the elbow is what one leans on at table. English cubit, the length from elbow to fingertip, comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cubitum
- Say it: cubitum, once more
- Say it: say cubitum
- Recall: say the Latin for the chin, then the Latin for the back, then say cubitum again

Before you move on

What does cubitum, cubitī mean? ("An elbow".) Say it once more.

136.2 pollex, pollicis — a thumb

Before the new one: say the Latin for the back, then the Latin for an elbow.

You'll want to know: pollex, pollicis

pollex, pollicis — "a thumb".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pollex was linked by the Romans with polleō, "to be strong" (Lewis & Short): the strongest finger. Modern scholars are less sure.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pollex
- Say it: pollex, once more
- Say it: say pollex
- Recall: say the Latin for the back, then the Latin for an elbow, then say pollex again

Before you move on

What does pollex, pollicis mean? ("A thumb".) Say it once more.

136.3 cutis, cutis — the skin

Before the new one: say the Latin for an elbow, then the Latin for a thumb.

You'll want to know: cutis, cutis

cutis, cutis — "the skin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cutis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kuHt-*, "skin, hide" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek kytos, "a hollow, a skin", is compared (Lewis & Short), and English hide may be a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cutis
- Say it: cutis, once more
- Say it: say cutis
- Recall: say the Latin for an elbow, then the Latin for a thumb, then say cutis again

Before you move on

What does cutis, cutis mean? ("The skin".) Say it once more.

136.4 os, ossis — a bone

Before the new one: say the Latin for a thumb, then the Latin for the skin.

You'll want to know: os, ossis

os, ossis — "a bone".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

os, ossis, is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3esth1*, "bone" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek osteon, "bone", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). It is a different word from ōs, ōris, "mouth".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: os
- Say it: os, once more
- Say it: say os
- Recall: say the Latin for a thumb, then the Latin for the skin, then say os again

Before you move on

What does os, ossis mean? ("A bone".) Say it once more.

136.5 stomachus, stomachī — the stomach

Before the new one: say the Latin for the skin, then the Latin for a bone.

You'll want to know: stomachus, stomachī

stomachus, stomachī — "the stomach".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stomachus was borrowed from Greek stomakhos, "throat, gullet" (Lewis & Short), from stoma, "mouth" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: stomachus
- Say it: stomachus, once more
- Say it: say stomachus
- Recall: say the Latin for the skin, then the Latin for a bone, then say stomachus again

Before you move on

What does stomachus, stomachī mean? ("The stomach".) Say it once more.

Chapter 137

Craftsman, Baker, Shoemaker, Barber, Shepherd

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a craftsman, a baker, a shoemaker, a barber and a shepherd.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 137: I can say a craftsman, a baker, a shoemaker, a barber and a shepherd.

137.1 faber, fabrī — a craftsman, a smith

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bone, then the Latin for the stomach.

You'll want to know: faber, fabrī

faber, fabrī — "a craftsman, a smith".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

faber is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhh2ebh-*, "to fit, to fashion" (EtymDB 2.1). English fabric and fabricate come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: faber
- Say it: faber, once more
- Say it: say faber
- Recall: say the Latin for a bone, then the Latin for the stomach, then say faber again

Before you move on

What does faber, fabrī mean? ("A craftsman, a smith".) Say it once more.

137.2 pistor, pistōris — a baker

Before the new one: say the Latin for the stomach, then the Latin for a craftsman.

You'll want to know: pistor, pistōris

pistor, pistōris — "a baker".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pistor is built on pīnsō, "to pound, to crush" (Lewis & Short): a pounder of grain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pistor
- Say it: pistor, once more
- Say it: say pistor
- Recall: say the Latin for the stomach, then the Latin for a craftsman, then say pistor again

Before you move on

What does pistor, pistōris mean? ("A baker".) Say it once more.

137.3 sūtor, sūtōris — a shoemaker

Before the new one: say the Latin for a craftsman, then the Latin for a baker.

You'll want to know: sūtor, sūtōris

sūtor, sūtōris — "a shoemaker".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sūtor is built on suō, "to sew, to stitch" (EtymDB 2.1), with -tor, "one who does it": the stitcher. suō is a cousin of English sew.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sūtor
- Say it: sūtor, once more
- Say it: say sūtor
- Recall: say the Latin for a craftsman, then the Latin for a baker, then say sūtor again

Before you move on

What does sūtor, sūtōris mean? ("A shoemaker".) Say it once more.

137.4 tōnsor, tōnsōris — a barber

Before the new one: say the Latin for a baker, then the Latin for a shoemaker.

You'll want to know: tōnsor, tōnsōris

tōnsor, tōnsōris — "a barber".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tōnsor is built on tondeō, "to shear, to clip" (EtymDB 2.1), with -tor, "one who does it". English tonsure comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tōnsor
- Say it: tōnsor, once more
- Say it: say tōnsor
- Recall: say the Latin for a baker, then the Latin for a shoemaker, then say tōnsor again

Before you move on

What does tōnsor, tōnsōris mean? ("A barber".) Say it once more.

137.5 pāstor, pāstōris — a shepherd

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shoemaker, then the Latin for a barber.

You'll want to know: pāstor, pāstōris

pāstor, pāstōris — "a shepherd".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāstor is built on pāscō, "to feed, to graze" (Lewis & Short), with -tor, "one who does it". pāscō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peh2-*, "to guard, to graze" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāstor
- Say it: pāstor, once more
- Say it: say pāstor
- Recall: say the Latin for a shoemaker, then the Latin for a barber, then say pāstor again

Before you move on

What does pāstor, pāstōris mean? ("A shepherd".) Say it once more.

Chapter 138

Fisherman, Slave, Mistress, Friend, Cupboard

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a fisherman, a slave, a mistress, a friend and a cupboard.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 138: I can say a fisherman, a slave, a mistress, a friend and a cupboard.

138.1 piscātor, piscātōris — a fisherman

Before the new one: say the Latin for a barber, then the Latin for a shepherd.

You'll want to know: piscātor, piscātōris

piscātor, piscātōris — "a fisherman".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piscātor is built on piscor, "to fish", from piscis, "a fish" (EtymDB 2.1), with -tor, "one who does it". piscis is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pisk-*, "fish" (EtymDB 2.1); English fish is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: piscātor
- Say it: piscātor, once more
- Say it: say piscātor
- Recall: say the Latin for a barber, then the Latin for a shepherd, then say piscātor again

Before you move on

What does piscātor, piscātōris mean? ("A fisherman".) Say it once more.

138.2 servus, servī — a slave, a servant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shepherd, then the Latin for a fisherman.

You'll want to know: servus, servī

servus, servī — "a slave, a servant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

servus has no sure origin. Romans tied it to servō, "to keep, to save" (Lewis & Short), and an Etruscan source has also been suggested; neither is proven.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: servus
- Say it: servus, once more
- Say it: say servus

- Recall: say the Latin for a shepherd, then the Latin for a fisherman, then say servus again

Before you move on

What does servus, servī mean? ("A slave, a servant".) Say it once more.

138.3 domina, dominae — a mistress, the lady of the house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fisherman, then the Latin for a slave.

You'll want to know: domina, dominae

domina, dominae — "a mistress, the lady of the house".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

domina is the feminine of dominus, "master of the house" (Lewis & Short), built on domus, "house", which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dom-*, "house" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: domina
- Say it: domina, once more
- Say it: say domina
- Recall: say the Latin for a fisherman, then the Latin for a slave, then say domina again

Before you move on

What does domina, dominae mean? ("A mistress, the lady of the house".) Say it once more.

138.4 amīca, amīcae — a friend (a woman)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a slave, then the Latin for a mistress.

You'll want to know: amīca, amīcae

amīca, amīcae — "a friend (a woman)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amīca is the feminine of amīcus, "a friend" (Lewis & Short), which is built on amō, "to love".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amīca
- Say it: amīca, once more
- Say it: say amīca
- Recall: say the Latin for a slave, then the Latin for a mistress, then say amīca again

Before you move on

What does amīca, amīcae mean? ("A friend (a woman)".) Say it once more.

138.5 armārium, armāriī — a cupboard

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mistress, then the Latin for a friend.

You'll want to know: armārium, armāriī

armārium, armāriī — "a cupboard".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

armārium is built on arma, "tools, gear" (Lewis & Short), with -ārium, an ending for a place to keep things.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: armārium
- Say it: armārium, once more
- Say it: say armārium
- Recall: say the Latin for a mistress, then the Latin for a friend, then say armārium again

Before you move on

What does armārium, armāriī mean? ("A cupboard".) Say it once more.

Chapter 139

Chair with a back, Bench, Carpet, Torch, Lantern

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a chair with a back, a bench, a carpet, a torch and a lantern.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 139: I can say a chair with a back, a bench, a carpet, a torch and a lantern.

139.1 cathedra, cathedrae — a chair with a back

Before the new one: say the Latin for a friend, then the Latin for a cupboard.

You'll want to know: cathedra, cathedrae

cathedra, cathedrae — "a chair with a back".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cathedra was borrowed from Greek kathedra, "a seat, a chair" (Lewis & Short), from kata, "down", and hedra, "seat" (EtymDB 2.1). A bishop's cathedra gave English cathedral its name.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cathedra
- Say it: cathedra, once more
- Say it: say cathedra
- Recall: say the Latin for a friend, then the Latin for a cupboard, then say cathedra again

Before you move on

What does cathedra, cathedrae mean? ("A chair with a back".) Say it once more.

139.2 scamnum, scamnī — a bench

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cupboard, then the Latin for a chair with a back.

You'll want to know: scamnum, scamnī

scamnum, scamnī — "a bench".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scamnum is inherited from Proto-Italic skabnom*, "bench", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European skabh-*, "to prop up" (EtymDB 2.1); scabellum, "a footstool", is its diminutive (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scamnum
- Say it: scamnum, once more
- Say it: say scamnum

- Recall: say the Latin for a cupboard, then the Latin for a chair with a back, then say scamnum again

Before you move on

What does scamnum, scamnī mean? ("A bench".) Say it once more.

139.3 tapēte, tapētis — a carpet, a rug

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chair with a back, then the Latin for a bench.

You'll want to know: tapēte, tapētis

tapēte, tapētis — "a carpet, a rug".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tapēte was borrowed from Greek tapēs, tapētos, "a carpet, a rug" (EtymDB 2.1). English tapestry belongs to its family, through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tapēte
- Say it: tapēte, once more
- Say it: say tapēte
- Recall: say the Latin for a chair with a back, then the Latin for a bench, then say tapēte again

Before you move on

What does tapēte, tapētis mean? ("A carpet, a rug".) Say it once more.

139.4 fax, facis — a torch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bench, then the Latin for a carpet.

You'll want to know: fax, facis

fax, facis — "a torch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fax has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European gwheh2k-*, "to shine", but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fax
- Say it: fax, once more
- Say it: say fax
- Recall: say the Latin for a bench, then the Latin for a carpet, then say fax again

Before you move on

What does fax, facis mean? ("A torch".) Say it once more.

139.5 lanterna, lanternae — a lantern

Before the new one: say the Latin for a carpet, then the Latin for a torch.

Count on past the ninth hour: nōnus, decimus. Say decima hōra, then say whether it is ante or post merīdiem.

You'll want to know: lanterna, lanternae

lanterna, lanternae — "a lantern".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lanterna comes from Greek lamptēr, "a torch, a lamp" (Lewis & Short), from lampō, "to shine", reshaped with the ending of lucerna, "lamp".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lanterna
- Say it: lanterna, once more
- Say it: say lanterna
- Recall: say the Latin for a carpet, then the Latin for a torch, then say lanterna again

Before you move on

What does lanterna, lanternae mean? ("A lantern".) Say it once more.

Chapter 140

Comb, Scissors, Needle, Thread, Wool

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a comb, scissors, a needle, a thread and wool.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 140: I can say a comb, scissors, a needle, a thread and wool.

140.1 pecten, pectinis — a comb

Before the new one: say the Latin for a torch, then the Latin for a lantern.

You'll want to know: pecten, pectinis

pecten, pectinis — "a comb".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pecten is built on pectō, "to comb" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pek-*, "to pluck wool or hair" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pecten
- Say it: pecten, once more
- Say it: say pecten
- Recall: say the Latin for a torch, then the Latin for a lantern, then say pecten again

Before you move on

What does pecten, pectinis mean? ("A comb".) Say it once more.

140.2 forfex, forficis — scissors

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lantern, then the Latin for a comb.

You'll want to know: forfex, forficis

forfex, forficis — "scissors".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

forfex has no sure origin; it is often linked with forceps, "tongs", but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: forfex
- Say it: forfex, once more
- Say it: say forfex
- Recall: say the Latin for a lantern, then the Latin for a comb, then say forfex again

Before you move on

What does forfex, forficis mean? ("Scissors".) Say it once more.

140.3 acus, acūs — a needle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a comb, then the Latin for scissors.

You'll want to know: acus, acūs

acus, acūs — "a needle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

acus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ek-*, "sharp" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of ācer, "sharp" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: acus
- Say it: acus, once more
- Say it: say acus
- Recall: say the Latin for a comb, then the Latin for scissors, then say acus again

Before you move on

What does acus, acūs mean? ("A needle".) Say it once more.

140.4 fīlum, fīlī — a thread

Before the new one: say the Latin for scissors, then the Latin for a needle.

You'll want to know: fīlum, fīlī

fīlum, fīlī — "a thread".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīlum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwhiHslo-*, "thread" (EtymDB 2.1). English filament and file, a row, come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīlum
- Say it: fīlum, once more
- Say it: say fīlum
- Recall: say the Latin for scissors, then the Latin for a needle, then say fīlum again

Before you move on

What does fīlum, fīlī mean? ("A thread".) Say it once more.

140.5 lāna, lānae — wool

Before the new one: say the Latin for a needle, then the Latin for a thread.

You'll want to know: lāna, lānae

lāna, lānae — "wool".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lāna is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2wlh1neh2*, "wool" (EtymDB 2.1); Latin lost the first w. English wool is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lāna
- Say it: lāna, once more
- Say it: say lāna
- Recall: say the Latin for a needle, then the Latin for a thread, then say lāna again

Before you move on

What does lāna, lānae mean? ("Wool".) Say it once more.

140.6 Food and nature — a first pass

Say the words for a thread and wool.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- fog, an eagle, a dove, a raven, a duck
- a goose, a bee, a fly, an ant, a butterfly
- a spider, a frog, a hare, a fox, a bull
- a cow, a mule, a camel, a monkey, a dolphin
- a whale, a cockerel, a lip, the chin, the back

Before you move on

Fog? (nebula, nebulae.) An eagle? (aquila, aquilae.) A dove? (columba, columbae.) A raven? (corvus, corvī.) A duck? (anas, anatis.) A goose? (ānser, ānseris.) A bee? (apis, apis.) A fly? (musca, muscae.) An ant? (formīca, formīcae.) A butterfly? (pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis.) A spider? (arānea, arāneae.) A frog? (rāna, rānae.) A hare? (lepus, leporis.) A fox? (vulpēs, vulpis.) A bull? (taurus, taurī.) A cow? (vacca, vaccae.) A mule? (mūlus, mūlī.) A camel? (camēlus, camēlī.) A monkey? (sīmia, sīmiae.) A dolphin? (delphīnus, delphīnī.) A whale? (balaena, balaenae.) A cockerel? (gallus, gallī.) A lip? (labrum, labrī.) The chin? (mentum, mentī.) The back? (dorsum, dorsī.)

140.7 Animals and the body — a second pass

Say the words for an elbow and a thumb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an elbow, a thumb, the skin, a bone, the stomach
- a craftsman, a baker, a shoemaker, a barber, a shepherd
- a fisherman, a slave, a mistress, a friend, a cupboard
- a chair with a back, a bench, a carpet, a torch, a lantern
- a comb, scissors, a needle, a thread, wool

Before you move on

An elbow? (cubitum, cubitī.) A thumb? (pollex, pollicis.) The skin? (cutis, cutis.) A bone? (os, ossis.) The stomach? (stomachus, stomachī.) A craftsman? (faber, fabrī.) A baker? (pistor, pistōris.) A shoemaker? (sūtor, sūtōris.) A barber? (tōnsor, tōnsōris.) A shepherd? (pāstor, pāstōris.) A fisherman? (piscātor, piscātōris.) A slave? (servus, servī.) A mistress? (domina, dominae.) A friend? (amīca, amīcae.) A cupboard? (armārium, armāriī.) A chair with a back? (cathedra, cathedrae.) A bench? (scamnum, scamnī.) A carpet? (tapēte, tapētis.) A torch? (fax, facis.) A lantern? (lanterna, lanternae.) A comb? (pecten, pectinis.) Scissors?

(forfex, forficis.) A needle? (acus, acūs.) A thread? (fīlum, fīlī.) Wool? (lāna, lānae.)

Chapter 141

Linen cloth, Soap, Sponge, Water jar, Cup

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a linen cloth, soap, a sponge, a water jar and a cup.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 141: I can say a linen cloth, soap, a sponge, a water jar and a cup.

141.1 linteum, linteī — a linen cloth, a towel

Before the new one: say the Latin for a thread, then the Latin for wool.

You'll want to know: linteum, linteī

linteum, linteī — "a linen cloth, a towel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children linteum comes from līnum, "flax" (Lewis & Short), through linteus, "made of linen". English linen and line belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: linteum
- Say it: linteum, once more
- Say it: say linteum
- Recall: say the Latin for a thread, then the Latin for wool, then say linteum again

Before you move on

What does linteum, linteī mean? ("A linen cloth, a towel".) Say it once more.

141.2 sāpō, sāpōnis — soap

Before the new one: say the Latin for wool, then the Latin for a linen cloth.

You'll want to know: sāpō, sāpōnis

sāpō, sāpōnis — "soap".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sāpō was borrowed from Germanic, as Lewis & Short note. The Germanic word is usually reconstructed as Proto-Germanic saipōn*, "soap, salve" (EtymDB 2.1); English soap comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sāpō
- Say it: sāpō, once more
- Say it: say sāpō

- Recall: say the Latin for wool, then the Latin for a linen cloth, then say sāpō again

Before you move on

What does sāpō, sāpōnis mean? ("Soap".) Say it once more.

141.3 spongia, spongiae — a sponge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a linen cloth, then the Latin for soap.

You'll want to know: spongia, spongiae

spongia, spongiae — "a sponge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spongia was borrowed from Greek spongia, "sponge" (Lewis & Short), from spongos, "sponge" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spongia
- Say it: spongia, once more
- Say it: say spongia
- Recall: say the Latin for a linen cloth, then the Latin for soap, then say spongia again

Before you move on

What does spongia, spongiae mean? ("A sponge".) Say it once more.

141.4 urna, urnae — a water jar

Before the new one: say the Latin for soap, then the Latin for a sponge.

You'll want to know: urna, urnae

urna, urnae — "a water jar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

urna is linked by Lewis & Short with ūrō, "to burn", as a vessel of fired clay, but that account is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: urna
- Say it: urna, once more
- Say it: say urna
- Recall: say the Latin for soap, then the Latin for a sponge, then say urna again

Before you move on

What does urna, urnae mean? ("A water jar".) Say it once more.

141.5 calix, calicis — a cup

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sponge, then the Latin for a water jar.

You'll want to know: calix, calicis

calix, calicis — "a cup".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calix is related to Greek kylix, "a drinking cup" (EtymDB 2.1), though whether Latin borrowed it is uncertain. It is a different word from Greek kalyx, "a flower bud". English chalice comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calix
- Say it: calix, once more
- Say it: say calix
- Recall: say the Latin for a sponge, then the Latin for a water jar, then say calix again

Before you move on

What does calix, calicis mean? ("A cup".) Say it once more.

Chapter 142

Fork, Plough, Bell, Flute, Lyre

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a fork, a plough, a bell, a flute and a lyre.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 142: I can say a fork, a plough, a bell, a flute and a lyre.

142.1 furca, furcae — a fork, a pitchfork

Before the new one: say the Latin for a water jar, then the Latin for a cup.

You'll want to know: furca, furcae

furca, furcae — "a fork, a pitchfork".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

furca has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English fork was borrowed from it early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: furca
- Say it: furca, once more
- Say it: say furca
- Recall: say the Latin for a water jar, then the Latin for a cup, then say furca again

Before you move on

What does furca, furcae mean? ("A fork, a pitchfork".) Say it once more.

142.2 arātrum, arātrī — a plough

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cup, then the Latin for a fork.

You'll want to know: arātrum, arātrī

arātrum, arātrī — "a plough".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arātrum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2erh3trom*, "plough", from h2erh3-*, "to plough" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek arotron, "plough", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). arō, "to plough", is the Latin verb from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: arātrum
- Say it: arātrum, once more
- Say it: say arātrum

- Recall: say the Latin for a cup, then the Latin for a fork, then say arātrum again

Before you move on

What does arātrum, arātrī mean? ("A plough".) Say it once more.

142.3 tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī — a bell

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fork, then the Latin for a plough.

You'll want to know: tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī

tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī — "a bell".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tintinnābulum is built on tintinnō, "to ring, to jingle" (Lewis & Short), an imitation of the sound, with -bulum, an ending for a tool.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tintinnābulum
- Say it: tintinnābulum, once more
- Say it: say tintinnābulum
- Recall: say the Latin for a fork, then the Latin for a plough, then say tintinnābulum again

Before you move on

What does tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī mean? ("A bell".) Say it once more.

142.4 tībia, tībiae — a flute, a pipe

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plough, then the Latin for a bell.

You'll want to know: tībia, tībiae

tībia, tībiae — "a flute, a pipe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tībia first meant the shin-bone: Lewis & Short give tībia that sense first. The pipe may have taken its name from pipes made of bone. Where the word comes from is unknown.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tībia
- Say it: tībia, once more
- Say it: say tībia
- Recall: say the Latin for a plough, then the Latin for a bell, then say tībia again

Before you move on

What does tībia, tībiae mean? ("A flute, a pipe".) Say it once more.

142.5 lyra, lyrae — a lyre

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bell, then the Latin for a flute.

You'll want to know: lyra, lyrae

lyra, lyrae — "a lyre".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lyra was borrowed from Greek lyra, "lyre" (Lewis & Short); where Greek got the word is unknown. English lyric comes from the Greek family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lyra
- Say it: lyra, once more
- Say it: say lyra
- Recall: say the Latin for a bell, then the Latin for a flute, then say lyra again

Before you move on

What does lyra, lyrae mean? ("A lyre".) Say it once more.

Chapter 143

Hard, Soft, Lukewarm, Ancient, Narrow

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say hard, soft, lukewarm, ancient and narrow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 143: I can say hard, soft, lukewarm, ancient and narrow.

143.1 dūrus, dūra, dūrum — hard

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flute, then the Latin for a lyre.

You'll want to know: dūrus, dūra, dūrum

dūrus, dūra, dūrum — "hard".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dūrus has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. A link with Proto-Indo-European deru-*, "firm, solid", the root of words for tree, is often proposed (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dūrus
- Say it: dūrus, once more
- Say it: say dūrus
- Recall: say the Latin for a flute, then the Latin for a lyre, then say dūrus again

Before you move on

What does dūrus, dūra, dūrum mean? ("Hard".) Say it once more.

143.2 mollis, molle — soft

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lyre, then the Latin for hard.

You'll want to know: mollis, molle

mollis, molle — "soft".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mollis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European moldus*, "soft, weak", from mel-*, "soft" (EtymDB 2.1); the ld became ll. Greek amalos, "weak", is compared (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mollis
- Say it: mollis, once more
- Say it: say mollis
- Recall: say the Latin for a lyre, then the Latin for hard, then say mollis again

Before you move on

What does mollis, molle mean? ("Soft".) Say it once more.

143.3 tepidus, tepida, tepidum — lukewarm

Before the new one: say the Latin for hard, then the Latin for soft.

You'll want to know: tepidus, tepida, tepidum

tepidus, tepida, tepidum — "lukewarm".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tepidus is built on tepeō, "to be warm" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives. tepeō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tep-*, "warm".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tepidus
- Say it: tepidus, once more
- Say it: say tepidus
- Recall: say the Latin for hard, then the Latin for soft, then say tepidus again

Before you move on

What does tepidus, tepida, tepidum mean? ("Lukewarm".) Say it once more.

143.4 antīquus, antīqua, antīquum — ancient, old-fashioned

Before the new one: say the Latin for soft, then the Latin for lukewarm.

You'll want to know: antīquus, antīqua, antīquum

antīquus, antīqua, antīquum — "ancient, old-fashioned".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

antīquus is built on ante, "before" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2enti-h3kwos*, "having been before" (EtymDB 2.1): what stood before, so old.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: antīquus
- Say it: antīquus, once more
- Say it: say antīquus
- Recall: say the Latin for soft, then the Latin for lukewarm, then say antīquus again

Before you move on

What does antīquus, antīqua, antīquum mean? ("Ancient, old-fashioned".) Say it once more.

143.5 angustus, angusta, angustum — narrow

Before the new one: say the Latin for lukewarm, then the Latin for ancient.

You'll want to know: angustus, angusta, angustum

angustus, angusta, angustum — "narrow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

angustus is built on angō, "to squeeze, to choke" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2engh-*, "narrow, tight" (EtymDB 2.1). English anguish and anxious belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: angustus
- Say it: angustus, once more
- Say it: say angustus
- Recall: say the Latin for lukewarm, then the Latin for ancient, then say angustus again

Before you move on

What does angustus, angusta, angustum mean? ("Narrow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 144

Low, Thick, Thin, Blind, Sharp

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say low, thick, thin, blind and sharp.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 144: I can say low, thick, thin, blind and sharp.

144.1 humilis, humile — low

Before the new one: say the Latin for ancient, then the Latin for narrow.

You'll want to know: humilis, humile

humilis, humile — "low".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

humilis is built on humus, "earth, ground" (Lewis & Short): low, near the ground. humus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhéghōm*, "earth" (EtymDB 2.1). English humble comes from humilis through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: humilis
- Say it: humilis, once more
- Say it: say humilis
- Recall: say the Latin for ancient, then the Latin for narrow, then say humilis again

Before you move on

What does humilis, humile mean? ("Low".) Say it once more.

144.2 crassus, crassa, crassum — thick, fat

Before the new one: say the Latin for narrow, then the Latin for low.

You'll want to know: crassus, crassa, crassum

crassus, crassa, crassum — "thick, fat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crassus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European krtsus*, "woven thick", from kert-*, "to twist together" (EtymDB 2.1). English crass comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crassus
- Say it: crassus, once more
- Say it: say crassus
- Recall: say the Latin for narrow, then the Latin for low, then say crassus again

Before you move on

What does crassus, crassa, crassum mean? ("Thick, fat".) Say it once more.

144.3 tenuis, tenue — thin

Before the new one: say the Latin for low, then the Latin for thick.

You'll want to know: tenuis, tenue

tenuis, tenue — "thin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tenuis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tenh2us*, "thin", from ten-*, "to stretch" (EtymDB 2.1): thin as stretched out. English thin is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tenuis
- Say it: tenuis, once more
- Say it: say tenuis
- Recall: say the Latin for low, then the Latin for thick, then say tenuis again

Before you move on

What does tenuis, tenue mean? ("Thin".) Say it once more.

144.4 caecus, caeca, caecum — blind

Before the new one: say the Latin for thick, then the Latin for thin.

You'll want to know: caecus, caeca, caecum

caecus, caeca, caecum — "blind".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caecus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kaykos*, "one-eyed, blind" (EtymDB 2.1). Gothic haihs, "one-eyed", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: caecus
- Say it: caecus, once more
- Say it: say caecus
- Recall: say the Latin for thick, then the Latin for thin, then say caecus again

Before you move on

What does caecus, caeca, caecum mean? ("Blind".) Say it once more.

144.5 acūtus, acūta, acūtum — sharp

Before the new one: say the Latin for thin, then the Latin for blind.

You'll want to know: acūtus, acūta, acūtum

acūtus, acūta, acūtum — "sharp".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

acūtus is the past participle of acuō, "to sharpen" (Lewis & Short): sharpened. acuō belongs with acus, "a needle".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: acūtus
- Say it: acūtus, once more
- Say it: say acūtus
- Recall: say the Latin for thin, then the Latin for blind, then say acūtus again

Before you move on

What does acūtus, acūta, acūtum mean? ("Sharp".) Say it once more.

Chapter 145

Sour, Alive, Gentle, Fierce, Pleasant

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say sour, alive, gentle, fierce and pleasant.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 145: I can say sour, alive, gentle, fierce and pleasant.

145.1 acerbus, acerba, acerbum — sour, unripe

Before the new one: say the Latin for blind, then the Latin for sharp.

You'll want to know: acerbus, acerba, acerbum

acerbus, acerba, acerbum — "sour, unripe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

acerbus is built on ācer, "sharp" (Lewis & Short), like superbus, "proud", on super, "above". ācer is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2kros*, "sharp" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: acerbus
- Say it: acerbus, once more
- Say it: say acerbus
- Recall: say the Latin for blind, then the Latin for sharp, then say acerbus again

Before you move on

What does acerbus, acerba, acerbum mean? ("Sour, unripe".) Say it once more.

145.2 vīvus, vīva, vīvum — alive

Before the new one: say the Latin for sharp, then the Latin for sour.

You'll want to know: vīvus, vīva, vīvum

vīvus, vīva, vīvum — "alive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīvus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwih3wos*, "alive" (EtymDB 2.1), and belongs with vīvō, "to live" (Lewis & Short). English quick, once "alive", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīvus
- Say it: vīvus, once more
- Say it: say vīvus

- Recall: say the Latin for sharp, then the Latin for sour, then say vīvus again

Before you move on

What does vīvus, vīva, vīvum mean? ("Alive".) Say it once more.

145.3 mītis, mīte — gentle, mild

Before the new one: say the Latin for sour, then the Latin for alive.

You'll want to know: mītis, mīte

mītis, mīte — "gentle, mild".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mītis is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European meh1y-*, "mild, soft" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mītis
- Say it: mītis, once more
- Say it: say mītis
- Recall: say the Latin for sour, then the Latin for alive, then say mītis again

Before you move on

What does mītis, mīte mean? ("Gentle, mild".) Say it once more.

145.4 ferōx, ferōcis — fierce

Before the new one: say the Latin for alive, then the Latin for gentle.

You'll want to know: ferōx, ferōcis

ferōx, ferōcis — "fierce".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ferōx is built on ferus, "wild" (Lewis & Short), with -ōx, an ending of strong character: wild-looking, fierce. ferus is a cousin of Greek thēr, "wild beast" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ferōx
- Say it: ferōx, once more
- Say it: say ferōx
- Recall: say the Latin for alive, then the Latin for gentle, then say ferōx again

Before you move on

What does ferōx, ferōcis mean? ("Fierce".) Say it once more.

145.5 iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum — pleasant

Before the new one: say the Latin for gentle, then the Latin for fierce.

You'll want to know: iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum

iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum — "pleasant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūcundus is usually derived from iuvō, "to help, to delight"; the link with iocus, "a joke", that Lewis & Short give is a later popular one.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iūcundus
- Say it: iūcundus, once more
- Say it: say iūcundus
- Recall: say the Latin for gentle, then the Latin for fierce, then say iūcundus again

Before you move on

What does iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum mean? ("Pleasant".) Say it once more.

Chapter 146

Annoying, Useful, Clean, Dirty, Straight

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say annoying, useful, clean, dirty and straight.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 146: I can say annoying, useful, clean, dirty and straight.

146.1 molestus, molesta, molestum — annoying

Before the new one: say the Latin for fierce, then the Latin for pleasant.

You'll want to know: molestus, molesta, molestum

molestus, molesta, molestum — "annoying".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

molestus is built on mōlēs, "a heavy mass, a burden" (Lewis & Short): burdensome. English molest comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: molestus
- Say it: molestus, once more
- Say it: say molestus
- Recall: say the Latin for fierce, then the Latin for pleasant, then say molestus again

Before you move on

What does molestus, molesta, molestum mean? ("Annoying".) Say it once more.

146.2 ūtilis, ūtile — useful

Before the new one: say the Latin for pleasant, then the Latin for annoying.

You'll want to know: ūtilis, ūtile

ūtilis, ūtile — "useful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūtilis is built on ūtor, "to use" (Lewis & Short), with -ilis, an ending for "fit for": usable.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ūtilis
- Say it: ūtilis, once more
- Say it: say ūtilis
- Recall: say the Latin for pleasant, then the Latin for annoying, then say ūtilis again

Before you move on

What does ūtilis, ūtile mean? ("Useful".) Say it once more.

146.3 pūrus, pūra, pūrum — clean, pure

Before the new one: say the Latin for annoying, then the Latin for useful.

You'll want to know: pūrus, pūra, pūrum

pūrus, pūra, pūrum — "clean, pure".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūrus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pewH-*, "to cleanse, to purify" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pūrus
- Say it: pūrus, once more
- Say it: say pūrus
- Recall: say the Latin for annoying, then the Latin for useful, then say pūrus again

Before you move on

What does pūrus, pūra, pūrum mean? ("Clean, pure".) Say it once more.

146.4 sordidus, sordida, sordidum — dirty

Before the new one: say the Latin for useful, then the Latin for clean.

You'll want to know: sordidus, sordida, sordidum

sordidus, sordida, sordidum — "dirty".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sordidus is built on sordeō, "to be dirty" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sordidus
- Say it: sordidus, once more
- Say it: say sordidus
- Recall: say the Latin for useful, then the Latin for clean, then say sordidus again

Before you move on

What does sordidus, sordida, sordidum mean? ("Dirty".) Say it once more.

146.5 rēctus, rēcta, rēctum — straight, right

Before the new one: say the Latin for clean, then the Latin for dirty.

You'll want to know: rēctus, rēcta, rēctum

rēctus, rēcta, rēctum — "straight, right".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēctus is the past participle of regō, "to keep straight, to direct" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3regtos*, "straightened" (EtymDB 2.1). English right is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēctus
- Say it: rēctus, once more
- Say it: say rēctus
- Recall: say the Latin for clean, then the Latin for dirty, then say rēctus again

Before you move on

What does rēctus, rēcta, rēctum mean? ("Straight, right".) Say it once more.

Chapter 147

Deaf, False, Sure, Safe, Dangerous

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say deaf, false, sure, safe and dangerous.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 147: I can say deaf, false, sure, safe and dangerous.

147.1 surdus, surda, surdum — deaf

Before the new one: say the Latin for dirty, then the Latin for straight.

You'll want to know: surdus, surda, surdum

surdus, surda, surdum — "deaf".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

surdus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: surdus

- Say it: surdus, once more
- Say it: say surdus
- Recall: say the Latin for dirty, then the Latin for straight, then say surdus again

Before you move on

What does surdus, surda, surdum mean? ("Deaf".) Say it once more.

147.2 falsus, falsa, falsum — false

Before the new one: say the Latin for straight, then the Latin for deaf.

You'll want to know: falsus, falsa, falsum

falsus, falsa, falsum — "false".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

falsus is the past participle of fallō, "to deceive, to trip up" (Lewis & Short): deceived, so false. Where fallō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: falsus
- Say it: falsus, once more
- Say it: say falsus
- Recall: say the Latin for straight, then the Latin for deaf, then say falsus again

Before you move on

What does falsus, falsa, falsum mean? ("False".) Say it once more.

147.3 certus, certa, certum — sure, certain

Before the new one: say the Latin for deaf, then the Latin for false.

You'll want to know: certus, certa, certum

certus, certa, certum — "sure, certain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

certus was first a participle of cernō, "to sift, to decide" (Lewis & Short): decided, so sure.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: certus
- Say it: certus, once more
- Say it: say certus
- Recall: say the Latin for deaf, then the Latin for false, then say certus again

Before you move on

What does certus, certa, certum mean? ("Sure, certain".) Say it once more.

147.4 tūtus, tūta, tūtum — safe

Before the new one: say the Latin for false, then the Latin for sure.

You'll want to know: tūtus, tūta, tūtum

tūtus, tūta, tūtum — "safe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tūtus is the past participle of tueor, "to watch over, to protect" (Lewis & Short): protected, so safe.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tūtus
- Say it: tūtus, once more
- Say it: say tūtus
- Recall: say the Latin for false, then the Latin for sure, then say tūtus again

Before you move on

What does tūtus, tūta, tūtum mean? ("Safe".) Say it once more.

147.5 perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum — dangerous

Before the new one: say the Latin for sure, then the Latin for safe.

You'll want to know: perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum

perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum — "dangerous".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perīculōsus is built on perīculum, "a trial, a danger" (Lewis & Short), with -ōsus, "full of". perīculum is built on the root of experior, "to try".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perīculōsus
- Say it: perīculōsus, once more
- Say it: say perīculōsus
- Recall: say the Latin for sure, then the Latin for safe, then say perīculōsus again

Before you move on

What does perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum mean? ("Dangerous".) Say it once more.

Chapter 148

Lucky, Wretched, Angry, Quiet, Purple

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say lucky, wretched, angry, quiet and purple.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 148: I can say lucky, wretched, angry, quiet and purple.

148.1 fēlīx, fēlīcis — lucky, happy

Before the new one: say the Latin for safe, then the Latin for dangerous.

You'll want to know: fēlīx, fēlīcis

fēlīx, fēlīcis — "lucky, happy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fēlīx is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1-*, "to suck, to suckle" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of fēmina, "woman": it first meant "fruitful", then lucky.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fēlīx
- Say it: fēlīx, once more
- Say it: say fēlīx
- Recall: say the Latin for safe, then the Latin for dangerous, then say fēlīx again

Before you move on

What does fēlīx, fēlīcis mean? ("Lucky, happy".) Say it once more.

148.2 miser, misera, miserum — wretched, unhappy

Before the new one: say the Latin for dangerous, then the Latin for lucky.

You'll want to know: miser, misera, miserum

miser, misera, miserum — "wretched, unhappy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

miser has no sure origin; Lewis & Short's comparisons are uncertain. English misery comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: miser
- Say it: miser, once more
- Say it: say miser
- Recall: say the Latin for dangerous, then the Latin for lucky, then say miser again

Before you move on

What does miser, misera, miserum mean? ("Wretched, unhappy".) Say it once more.

148.3 īrātus, īrāta, īrātum — angry

Before the new one: say the Latin for lucky, then the Latin for wretched.

You'll want to know: īrātus, īrāta, īrātum

īrātus, īrāta, īrātum — "angry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īrātus is the participle of īrāscor, "to grow angry" (Lewis & Short), from īra, "anger" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īrātus
- Say it: īrātus, once more
- Say it: say īrātus
- Recall: say the Latin for lucky, then the Latin for wretched, then say īrātus again

Before you move on

What does īrātus, īrāta, īrātum mean? ("Angry".) Say it once more.

148.4 quiētus, quiēta, quiētum — quiet, calm

Before the new one: say the Latin for wretched, then the Latin for angry.

You'll want to know: quiētus, quiēta, quiētum

quiētus, quiēta, quiētum — "quiet, calm".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quiētus is the participle of quiēscō, "to rest" (Lewis & Short), from quiēs, "rest", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwyeh1-*, "to rest" (EtymDB 2.1). English quiet and quit come from this family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quiētus
- Say it: quiētus, once more
- Say it: say quiētus
- Recall: say the Latin for wretched, then the Latin for angry, then say quiētus again

Before you move on

What does quiētus, quiēta, quiētum mean? ("Quiet, calm".) Say it once more.

148.5 purpureus, purpurea, purpureum — purple

Before the new one: say the Latin for angry, then the Latin for quiet.

You'll want to know: purpureus, purpurea, purpureum

purpureus, purpurea, purpureum — "purple".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

purpureus is built on purpura, "purple dye, the purple-fish" (Lewis & Short), a word Latin took from Greek porphyra, "purple-fish".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: purpureus
- Say it: purpureus, once more
- Say it: say purpureus
- Recall: say the Latin for angry, then the Latin for quiet, then say purpureus again

Before you move on

What does purpureus, purpurea, purpureum mean? ("Purple".) Say it once more.

Chapter 149

Dark, Grey, Golden, Silver, Wise

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say dark, grey, golden, silver and wise.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 149: I can say dark, grey, golden, silver and wise.

149.1 fuscus, fusca, fuscum — dark, dusky

Before the new one: say the Latin for quiet, then the Latin for purple.

You'll want to know: fuscus, fusca, fuscum

fuscus, fusca, fuscum — "dark, dusky".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fuscus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root dhewh2-*, "smoke, dust" (EtymDB 2.1): smoky, so dark.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fuscus
- Say it: fuscus, once more
- Say it: say fuscus
- Recall: say the Latin for quiet, then the Latin for purple, then say fuscus again

Before you move on

What does fuscus, fusca, fuscum mean? ("Dark, dusky".) Say it once more.

149.2 cānus, cāna, cānum — grey

Before the new one: say the Latin for purple, then the Latin for dark.

You'll want to know: cānus, cāna, cānum

cānus, cāna, cānum — "grey".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cānus is inherited from Proto-Italic kaznos*, "grey", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kas-*, "grey, white" (EtymDB 2.1). English hare, the grey animal, is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cānus
- Say it: cānus, once more
- Say it: say cānus

- Recall: say the Latin for purple, then the Latin for dark, then say cānus again

Before you move on

What does cānus, cāna, cānum mean? ("Grey".) Say it once more.

149.3 aureus, aurea, aureum — golden

Before the new one: say the Latin for dark, then the Latin for grey.

You'll want to know: aureus, aurea, aureum

aureus, aurea, aureum — "golden".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aureus is built on aurum, "gold" (Sabine ausum), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2eh2us-*, "glow" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aureus
- Say it: aureus, once more
- Say it: say aureus
- Recall: say the Latin for dark, then the Latin for grey, then say aureus again

Before you move on

What does aureus, aurea, aureum mean? ("Golden".) Say it once more.

149.4 argenteus, argentea, argenteum — silver

Before the new one: say the Latin for grey, then the Latin for golden.

You'll want to know: argenteus, argentea, argenteum

argenteus, argentea, argenteum — "silver".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

argenteus is built on argentum, "silver" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2rgntom*, "silver", from h2erg-*, "white, shining" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: argenteus
- Say it: argenteus, once more
- Say it: say argenteus
- Recall: say the Latin for grey, then the Latin for golden, then say argenteus again

Before you move on

What does argenteus, argentea, argenteum mean? ("Silver".) Say it once more.

149.5 prūdēns, prūdentis — wise, sensible

Before the new one: say the Latin for golden, then the Latin for silver.

You'll want to know: prūdēns, prūdentis

prūdēns, prūdentis — "wise, sensible".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prūdēns is contracted from prōvidēns, "foreseeing" (Lewis & Short), from prōvideō, "to see ahead".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prūdēns
- Say it: prūdēns, once more
- Say it: say prūdēns
- Recall: say the Latin for golden, then the Latin for silver, then say prūdēns again

Before you move on

What does prūdēns, prūdentis mean? ("Wise, sensible".) Say it once more.

Chapter 150

Careful, Lazy, Hard-working, Timid, Bold

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say careful, lazy, hard-working, timid and bold.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 150: I can say careful, lazy, hard-working, timid and bold.

150.1 cautus, cauta, cautum — careful

Before the new one: say the Latin for silver, then the Latin for wise.

You'll want to know: cautus, cauta, cautum

cautus, cauta, cautum — "careful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cautus is the past participle of caveō, "to beware, to take care" (Lewis & Short): on one's guard. English caution comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cautus
- Say it: cautus, once more
- Say it: say cautus
- Recall: say the Latin for silver, then the Latin for wise, then say cautus again

Before you move on

What does cautus, cauta, cautum mean? ("Careful".) Say it once more.

150.2 piger, pigra, pigrum — lazy

Before the new one: say the Latin for wise, then the Latin for careful.

You'll want to know: piger, pigra, pigrum

piger, pigra, pigrum — "lazy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piger belongs with piget, "it irks, it annoys" (Lewis & Short): one who finds work irksome. Where piget comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: piger
- Say it: piger, once more
- Say it: say piger
- Recall: say the Latin for wise, then the Latin for careful, then say piger again

Before you move on

What does piger, pigra, pigrum mean? ("Lazy".) Say it once more.

150.3 dīligēns, dīligentis — hard-working

Before the new one: say the Latin for careful, then the Latin for lazy.

You'll want to know: dīligēns, dīligentis

dīligēns, dīligentis — "hard-working".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīligēns is the present participle of dīligō, "to value, to love" (Lewis & Short), from dis-, "apart", and legō, "to choose": one who chooses with care.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dīligēns
- Say it: dīligēns, once more
- Say it: say dīligēns
- Recall: say the Latin for careful, then the Latin for lazy, then say dīligēns again

Before you move on

What does dīligēns, dīligentis mean? ("Hard-working".) Say it once more.

150.4 timidus, timida, timidum — timid, shy

Before the new one: say the Latin for lazy, then the Latin for hard-working.

You'll want to know: timidus, timida, timidum

timidus, timida, timidum — "timid, shy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

timidus is built on timeō, "to fear" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: timidus
- Say it: timidus, once more
- Say it: say timidus
- Recall: say the Latin for lazy, then the Latin for hard-working, then say timidus again

Before you move on

What does timidus, timida, timidum mean? ("Timid, shy".) Say it once more.

150.5 audāx, audācis — bold

Before the new one: say the Latin for hard-working, then the Latin for timid.

You'll want to know: audāx, audācis

audāx, audācis — "bold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

audāx is built on audeō, "to dare" (Lewis & Short), with -āx, an ending for a strong tendency, as capāx, "roomy", is built on capiō, "to take".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: audāx
- Say it: audāx, once more
- Say it: say audāx
- Recall: say the Latin for hard-working, then the Latin for timid, then say audāx again

Before you move on

What does audāx, audācis mean? ("Bold".) Say it once more.

150.6 People and describing words — a first pass

Say the words for timid and bold.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a linen cloth, soap, a sponge, a water jar, a cup
- a fork, a plough, a bell, a flute, a lyre
- hard, soft, lukewarm, ancient, narrow
- low, thick, thin, blind, sharp
- sour, alive, gentle, fierce, pleasant

Before you move on

A linen cloth? (linteum, linteī.) Soap? (sāpō, sāpōnis.) A sponge? (spongia, spongiae.) A water jar? (urna, urnae.) A cup? (calix, calicis.) A fork? (furca, furcae.) A plough? (arātrum, arātrī.) A bell? (tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī.) A flute? (tībia, tībiae.) A lyre? (lyra, lyrae.) Hard? (dūrus, dūra, dūrum.) Soft? (mollis, molle.) Lukewarm? (tepidus, tepida, tepidum.) Ancient? (antīquus, antīqua, antīquum.) Narrow? (angustus, angusta, angustum.) Low? (humilis, humile.) Thick? (crassus, crassa, crassum.) Thin? (tenuis, tenue.) Blind? (caecus, caeca, caecum.) Sharp? (acūtus, acūta, acūtum.) Sour? (acerbus, acerba, acerbum.) Alive? (vīvus, vīva, vīvum.) Gentle? (mītis, mīte.) Fierce? (ferōx, ferōcis.) Pleasant? (iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum.)

150.7 Describing words — a second pass

Say the words for annoying and useful.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- annoying, useful, clean, dirty, straight
- deaf, false, sure, safe, dangerous
- lucky, wretched, angry, quiet, purple
- dark, grey, golden, silver, wise
- careful, lazy, hard-working, timid, bold

Before you move on

Annoying? (molestus, molesta, molestum.) Useful? (ūtilis, ūtile.) Clean? (pūrus, pūra, pūrum.) Dirty? (sordidus, sordida, sordidum.) Straight? (rēctus, rēcta, rēctum.) Deaf? (surdus, surda, surdum.) False? (falsus, falsa, falsum.) Sure? (certus, certa, certum.) Safe? (tūtus, tūta, tūtum.)

Dangerous? (perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum.) Lucky? (fēlīx, fēlīcis.) Wretched? (miser, misera, miserum.) Angry? (īrātus, īrāta, īrātum.) Quiet? (quiētus, quiēta, quiētum.) Purple? (purpureus, purpurea, purpureum.) Dark? (fuscus, fusca, fuscum.) Grey? (cānus, cāna, cānum.) Golden? (aureus, aurea, aureum.) Silver? (argenteus, argentea, argenteum.) Wise? (prūdēns, prūdentis.) Careful? (cautus, cauta, cautum.) Lazy? (piger, pigra, pigrum.) Hard-working? (dīligēns, dīligentis.) Timid? (timidus, timida, timidum.) Bold? (audāx, audācis.)

Chapter 151

Proud, Kind, Cruel, Ugly, Beautiful

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say proud, kind, cruel, ugly and beautiful.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 151: I can say proud, kind, cruel, ugly and beautiful.

151.1 superbus, superba, superbum — proud

Before the new one: say the Latin for timid, shy, then the Latin for bold.

You'll want to know: superbus, superba, superbum

superbus, superba, superbum — "proud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

superbus is built on super, "above" (Lewis & Short): one who sets himself above others. Greek hyperbios, "overbearing", is a close parallel (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: superbus
- Say it: superbus, once more
- Say it: say superbus
- Recall: say the Latin for timid, shy, then the Latin for bold, then say superbus again

Before you move on

What does superbus, superba, superbum mean? ("Proud".) Say it once more.

151.2 benignus, benigna, benignum — kind

Before the new one: say the Latin for bold, then the Latin for proud.

You'll want to know: benignus, benigna, benignum

benignus, benigna, benignum — "kind".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

benignus is usually explained as bene, "well", plus the root of genus, "birth, kind" (Lewis & Short), on the model of malignus, "ill-natured": kindly by nature.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: benignus
- Say it: benignus, once more
- Say it: say benignus

- Recall: say the Latin for bold, then the Latin for proud, then say benignus again

Before you move on

What does benignus, benigna, benignum mean? ("Kind".) Say it once more.

151.3 crūdēlis, crūdēle — cruel

Before the new one: say the Latin for proud, then the Latin for kind.

You'll want to know: crūdēlis, crūdēle

crūdēlis, crūdēle — "cruel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crūdēlis is built on crūdus, "raw, bloody" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European krewh2-*, "raw flesh, blood" (EtymDB 2.1). English raw is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crūdēlis
- Say it: crūdēlis, once more
- Say it: say crūdēlis
- Recall: say the Latin for proud, then the Latin for kind, then say crūdēlis again

Before you move on

What does crūdēlis, crūdēle mean? ("Cruel".) Say it once more.

151.4 turpis, turpe — ugly, shameful

Before the new one: say the Latin for kind, then the Latin for cruel.

You'll want to know: turpis, turpe

turpis, turpe — "ugly, shameful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

turpis has no sure origin; neither Lewis & Short's comparison nor the root that EtymDB 2.1 records is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: turpis
- Say it: turpis, once more
- Say it: say turpis
- Recall: say the Latin for kind, then the Latin for cruel, then say turpis again

Before you move on

What does turpis, turpe mean? ("Ugly, shameful".) Say it once more.

151.5 fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum — beautiful

Before the new one: say the Latin for cruel, then the Latin for ugly.

You'll want to know: fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum

fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum — "beautiful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fōrmōsus is built on fōrma, "shape, beauty" (Lewis & Short), with -ōsus, "full of": well-shaped. Where fōrma comes from is uncertain; a link with Greek morphē, "shape", is often suggested (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fōrmōsus
- Say it: fōrmōsus, once more
- Say it: say fōrmōsus
- Recall: say the Latin for cruel, then the Latin for ugly, then say fōrmōsus again

Before you move on

What does fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum mean? ("Beautiful".) Say it once more.

Chapter 152

Strong, Weak, Alone, Icy, Clear

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say strong, weak, alone, icy and clear.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 152: I can say strong, weak, alone, icy and clear.

152.1 validus, valida, validum — strong

Before the new one: say the Latin for ugly, then the Latin for beautiful.

You'll want to know: validus, valida, validum

validus, valida, validum — "strong".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

validus is built on valeō, "to be strong" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives. valeō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2welh1-*, "to be strong, to rule" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: validus
- Say it: validus, once more
- Say it: say validus
- Recall: say the Latin for ugly, then the Latin for beautiful, then say validus again

Before you move on

What does validus, valida, validum mean? ("Strong".) Say it once more.

152.2 īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum — weak

Before the new one: say the Latin for beautiful, then the Latin for strong.

You'll want to know: īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum

īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum — "weak".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnfirmus is in-, "not", with firmus, "firm, strong" (Lewis & Short). firmus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dher-*, "to hold, to support" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnfirmus
- Say it: īnfirmus, once more
- Say it: say īnfirmus

- Recall: say the Latin for beautiful, then the Latin for strong, then say īnfirmus again

Before you move on

What does īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum mean? ("Weak".) Say it once more.

152.3 sōlus, sōla, sōlum — alone, only

Before the new one: say the Latin for strong, then the Latin for weak.

You'll want to know: sōlus, sōla, sōlum

sōlus, sōla, sōlum — "alone, only".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sōlus has no sure origin. It may belong with the reflexive sē, "oneself" (EtymDB 2.1 records Proto-Indo-European swe*, "self, alone"); Lewis & Short link it with sollus, "whole".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sōlus
- Say it: sōlus, once more
- Say it: say sōlus
- Recall: say the Latin for strong, then the Latin for weak, then say sōlus again

Before you move on

What does sōlus, sōla, sōlum mean? ("Alone, only".) Say it once more.

152.4 gelidus, gelida, gelidum — icy

Before the new one: say the Latin for weak, then the Latin for alone.

You'll want to know: gelidus, gelida, gelidum

gelidus, gelida, gelidum — "icy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gelidus is built on gelū, "frost" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gel-*, "cold" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gelidus
- Say it: gelidus, once more
- Say it: say gelidus
- Recall: say the Latin for weak, then the Latin for alone, then say gelidus again

Before you move on

What does gelidus, gelida, gelidum mean? ("Icy".) Say it once more.

152.5 serēnus, serēna, serēnum — clear, fine (of weather)

Before the new one: say the Latin for alone, then the Latin for icy.

You'll want to know: serēnus, serēna, serēnum

serēnus, serēna, serēnum — "clear, fine (of weather)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

serēnus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: serēnus
- Say it: serēnus, once more
- Say it: say serēnus
- Recall: say the Latin for alone, then the Latin for icy, then say serēnus again

Before you move on

What does serēnus, serēna, serēnum mean? ("Clear, fine (of weather)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 153

Cloudy, Windy, To build, To climb, To go down

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say cloudy, windy, to build, to climb and to go down.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 153: I can say cloudy, windy, to build, to climb and to go down.

153.1 nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum — cloudy

> Before the new one: say the Latin for icy, then the Latin for clear.

You'll want to know: nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum

nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum — "cloudy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūbilus is built on nūbēs, "a cloud" (Lewis & Short), which probably goes back to Proto-Indo-European (s)newdh-*, "to cover" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūbilus
- Say it: nūbilus, once more
- Say it: say nūbilus
- Recall: say the Latin for icy, then the Latin for clear, then say nūbilus again

Before you move on

What does nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum mean? ("Cloudy".) Say it once more.

153.2 ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum — windy

Before the new one: say the Latin for clear, then the Latin for cloudy.

You'll want to know: ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum

ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum — "windy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ventōsus is built on ventus, "wind" (Lewis & Short), with -ōsus, "full of". ventus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2weh1nts*, "blowing, wind", from h2weh1-*, "to blow" (EtymDB 2.1); English wind is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ventōsus
- Say it: ventōsus, once more
- Say it: say ventōsus

- Recall: say the Latin for clear, then the Latin for cloudy, then say ventōsus again

Before you move on

What does ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum mean? ("Windy".) Say it once more.

153.3 aedificō, aedificāre — to build

Before the new one: say the Latin for cloudy, then the Latin for windy.

You'll want to know: aedificō, aedificāre

aedificō, aedificāre — "to build".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aedificō is built from aedēs, "a building, a temple", and faciō, "to make" (Lewis & Short), which takes the form -ficō in compounds: to make a building. English edifice comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aedificō
- Say it: aedificō, once more
- Say it: say aedificō
- Recall: say the Latin for cloudy, then the Latin for windy, then say aedificō again

Before you move on

What does aedificō, aedificāre mean? ("To build".) Say it once more.

153.4 ascendō, ascendere — to climb, to go up

Before the new one: say the Latin for windy, then the Latin for to build.

You'll want to know: ascendō, ascendere

ascendō, ascendere — "to climb, to go up".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ascendō is ad, "to, towards", with scandō, "to climb" (Lewis & Short); the a of the verb weakened to e in the compound.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ascendō
- Say it: ascendō, once more
- Say it: say ascendō
- Recall: say the Latin for windy, then the Latin for to build, then say ascendō again

Before you move on

What does ascendō, ascendere mean? ("To climb, to go up".) Say it once more.

153.5 dēscendō, dēscendere — to go down

Before the new one: say the Latin for to build, then the Latin for to climb.

You'll want to know: dēscendō, dēscendere

dēscendō, dēscendere — "to go down".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēscendō is dē, "down from", with scandō, "to climb" (EtymDB 2.1): to climb down.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēscendō
- Say it: dēscendō, once more
- Say it: say dēscendō
- Recall: say the Latin for to build, then the Latin for to climb, then say dēscendō again

Before you move on

What does dēscendō, dēscendere mean? ("To go down".) Say it once more.

Chapter 154

To join, To visit, To sing, To paint, To lead

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to join, to visit, to sing, to paint and to lead.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 154: I can say to join, to visit, to sing, to paint and to lead.

154.1 iungō, iungere — to join

Before the new one: say the Latin for to climb, then the Latin for to go down.

You'll want to know: iungō, iungere

iungō, iungere — "to join".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iungō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European yewg-*, "to join, to yoke" (EtymDB 2.1); the n inside the present stem is an old mark of the verb. Greek zeugnymi, "to yoke", and English yoke are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iungō
- Say it: iungō, once more
- Say it: say iungō
- Recall: say the Latin for to climb, then the Latin for to go down, then say iungō again

Before you move on

What does iungō, iungere mean? ("To join".) Say it once more.

154.2 vīsitō, vīsitāre — to visit

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go down, then the Latin for to join.

You'll want to know: vīsitō, vīsitāre

vīsitō, vīsitāre — "to visit".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīsitō is a frequentative of vīsō, "to go and see" (Lewis & Short), itself built on videō, "to see": to keep going to see.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīsitō
- Say it: vīsitō, once more
- Say it: say vīsitō
- Recall: say the Latin for to go down, then the Latin for to join, then say vīsitō again

Before you move on

What does vīsitō, vīsitāre mean? ("To visit".) Say it once more.

154.3 cantō, cantāre — to sing

Before the new one: say the Latin for to join, then the Latin for to visit.

You'll want to know: cantō, cantāre

cantō, cantāre — "to sing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cantō is a frequentative of canō, "to sing" (Lewis & Short), built on its stem cant-, and in everyday Latin it came to replace canō. canō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European keh2n-*, "to sing" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cantō
- Say it: cantō, once more
- Say it: say cantō
- Recall: say the Latin for to join, then the Latin for to visit, then say cantō again

Before you move on

What does cantō, cantāre mean? ("To sing".) Say it once more.

154.4 pingō, pingere — to paint

Before the new one: say the Latin for to visit, then the Latin for to sing.

You'll want to know: pingō, pingere

pingō, pingere — "to paint".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pingō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peyk-*, "to mark, to colour" (EtymDB 2.1); the n inside the present stem is missing from its participle pictus, "painted".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pingō
- Say it: pingō, once more
- Say it: say pingō
- Recall: say the Latin for to visit, then the Latin for to sing, then say pingō again

Before you move on

What does pingō, pingere mean? ("To paint".) Say it once more.

154.5 dūcō, dūcere — to lead

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sing, then the Latin for to paint.

You'll want to know: dūcō, dūcere

dūcō, dūcere — "to lead".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dūcō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dewk-*, "to lead, to pull" (EtymDB 2.1); Gothic tiuhan, "to lead, to draw", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so are English tug and tow.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dūcō
- Say it: dūcō, once more
- Say it: say dūcō
- Recall: say the Latin for to sing, then the Latin for to paint, then say dūcō again

Before you move on

What does dūcō, dūcere mean? ("To lead".) Say it once more.

Chapter 155

To make, To carry, To put on, To take off, To clean

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to make, to carry, to put on, to take off and to clean.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 155: I can say to make, to carry, to put on, to take off and to clean.

155.1 faciō, facere — to make, to do

Before the new one: say the Latin for to paint, then the Latin for to lead.

You'll want to know: faciō, facere

faciō, facere — "to make, to do".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

faciō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1-*, "to put, to place, to set" (EtymDB 2.1), with a k added to the root. English do is a cousin from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: faciō
- Say it: faciō, once more
- Say it: say faciō
- Recall: say the Latin for to paint, then the Latin for to lead, then say faciō again

Before you move on

What does faciō, facere mean? ("To make, to do".) Say it once more.

155.2 gerō, gerere — to carry, to wear

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lead, then the Latin for to make.

You'll want to know: gerō, gerere

gerō, gerere — "to carry, to wear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gerō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English gesture and digest come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gerō
- Say it: gerō, once more
- Say it: say gerō
- Recall: say the Latin for to lead, then the Latin for to make, then say gerō again

Before you move on

What does gerō, gerere mean? ("To carry, to wear".) Say it once more.

155.3 induō, induere — to put on (clothes)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make, then the Latin for to carry.

You'll want to know: induō, induere

induō, induere — "to put on (clothes)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

induō is built from indu-, "into", an old form of in, and a verb -uō, "to put on" (EtymDB 2.1), found also in exuō, "to take off".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: induō
- Say it: induō, once more
- Say it: say induō
- Recall: say the Latin for to make, then the Latin for to carry, then say induō again

Before you move on

What does induō, induere mean? ("To put on (clothes)".) Say it once more.

155.4 exuō, exuere — to take off (clothes)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to put on.

You'll want to know: exuō, exuere

exuō, exuere — "to take off (clothes)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exuō is ex, "out of", with the verb -uō, "to put on", found also in induō, "to put on clothes" (Lewis & Short): to get out of one's clothes.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: exuō
- Say it: exuō, once more
- Say it: say exuō
- Recall: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to put on, then say exuō again

Before you move on

What does exuō, exuere mean? ("To take off (clothes)".) Say it once more.

155.5 pūrgō, pūrgāre — to clean

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put on, then the Latin for to take off.

You'll want to know: pūrgō, pūrgāre

pūrgō, pūrgāre — "to clean".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūrgō is contracted from pūrigō, "to make clean", from pūrum, "clean", and agō, "to make" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pūrgō
- Say it: pūrgō, once more
- Say it: say pūrgō
- Recall: say the Latin for to put on, then the Latin for to take off, then say pūrgō again

Before you move on

What does pūrgō, pūrgāre mean? ("To clean".) Say it once more.

Chapter 156

To break, To throw, To carry, To carry, To untie

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to break, to throw, to carry, to carry and to untie.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 156: I can say to break, to throw, to carry, to carry and to untie.

156.1 frangō, frangere — to break

Before the new one: say the Latin for to take off, then the Latin for to clean.

You'll want to know: frangō, frangere

frangō, frangere — "to break".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frangō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhreg-*, "to break" (EtymDB 2.1); English break is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frangō
- Say it: frangō, once more
- Say it: say frangō
- Recall: say the Latin for to take off, then the Latin for to clean, then say frangō again

Before you move on

What does frangō, frangere mean? ("To break".) Say it once more.

156.2 iaciō, iacere — to throw

Before the new one: say the Latin for to clean, then the Latin for to break.

You'll want to know: iaciō, iacere

iaciō, iacere — "to throw".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iaciō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (H)yeh1-*, "to throw, to let go" (EtymDB 2.1), with a k added to the root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iaciō
- Say it: iaciō, once more
- Say it: say iaciō
- Recall: say the Latin for to clean, then the Latin for to break, then say iaciō again

Before you move on

What does iaciō, iacere mean? ("To throw".) Say it once more.

156.3 vehō, vehere — to carry (by cart or ship)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to break, then the Latin for to throw.

You'll want to know: vehō, vehere

vehō, vehere — "to carry (by cart or ship)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vehō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wegh-*, "to carry, to convey" (EtymDB 2.1); English wagon is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vehō
- Say it: vehō, once more
- Say it: say vehō
- Recall: say the Latin for to break, then the Latin for to throw, then say vehō again

Before you move on

What does vehō, vehere mean? ("To carry (by cart or ship)".) Say it once more.

156.4 portō, portāre — to carry

Before the new one: say the Latin for to throw, then the Latin for to carry.

You'll want to know: portō, portāre

portō, portāre — "to carry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

portō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root per-*, "to go across, to bring over" (EtymDB 2.1); porta, "a gate", and portus, "a harbour", belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: portō
- Say it: portō, once more
- Say it: say portō
- Recall: say the Latin for to throw, then the Latin for to carry, then say portō again

Before you move on

What does portō, portāre mean? ("To carry".) Say it once more.

156.5 solvō, solvere — to untie, to pay

Before the new one: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to carry.

You'll want to know: solvō, solvere

solvō, solvere — "to untie, to pay".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

solvō is contracted from se-, "apart", and luō, "to loosen, to release" (Lewis & Short): to loosen apart. English solve and dissolve come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: solvō
- Say it: solvō, once more
- Say it: say solvō
- Recall: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to carry, then say solvō again

Before you move on

What does solvō, solvere mean? ("To untie, to pay".) Say it once more.

Chapter 157

To give back, To show, To shine, To lose, To win

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to give back, to show, to shine, to lose and to win.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 157: I can say to give back, to show, to shine, to lose and to win.

157.1 reddō, reddere — to give back

Before the new one: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to untie.

You'll want to know: reddō, reddere

reddō, reddere — "to give back".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

reddō is red-, "back", with dō, "to give" (Lewis & Short): to give back.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: reddō
- Say it: reddō, once more
- Say it: say reddō
- Recall: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to untie, then say reddō again

Before you move on

What does reddō, reddere mean? ("To give back".) Say it once more.

157.2 ostendō, ostendere — to show

Before the new one: say the Latin for to untie, then the Latin for to give back.

You'll want to know: ostendō, ostendere

ostendō, ostendere — "to show".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ostendō is obs-, "in front of", an old form of ob, with tendō, "to stretch" (Lewis & Short): to stretch out before someone, to show.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ostendō
- Say it: ostendō, once more
- Say it: say ostendō
- Recall: say the Latin for to untie, then the Latin for to give back, then say ostendō again

Before you move on

What does ostendō, ostendere mean? ("To show".) Say it once more.

157.3 lūceō, lūcēre — to shine

Before the new one: say the Latin for to give back, then the Latin for to show.

You'll want to know: lūceō, lūcēre

lūceō, lūcēre — "to shine".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūceō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European lowkeye-*, "to make shine" (EtymDB 2.1), from the same root as lūx, "light"; Greek leukos, "white, bright", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lūceō
- Say it: lūceō, once more
- Say it: say lūceō
- Recall: say the Latin for to give back, then the Latin for to show, then say lūceō again

Before you move on

What does lūceō, lūcēre mean? ("To shine".) Say it once more.

157.4 perdō, perdere — to lose

Before the new one: say the Latin for to show, then the Latin for to shine.

You'll want to know: perdō, perdere

perdō, perdere — "to lose".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perdō is per-, "through, to destruction", with dō, "to give, to put" (Lewis & Short): to make away with, so to lose.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perdō
- Say it: perdō, once more
- Say it: say perdō
- Recall: say the Latin for to show, then the Latin for to shine, then say perdō again

Before you move on

What does perdō, perdere mean? ("To lose".) Say it once more.

157.5 vincō, vincere — to win, to defeat

Before the new one: say the Latin for to shine, then the Latin for to lose.

You'll want to know: vincō, vincere

vincō, vincere — "to win, to defeat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vincō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weyk-, "to fight, to conquer", with an n inside the present stem, wi-n-k-, "to conquer" (EtymDB 2.1); the n is missing from vīcī, "I won".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vincō
- Say it: vincō, once more
- Say it: say vincō
- Recall: say the Latin for to shine, then the Latin for to lose, then say vincō again

Before you move on

What does vincō, vincere mean? ("To win, to defeat".) Say it once more.

Chapter 158

To grow, To hurry, To stay awake, To dine, To taste

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to grow, to hurry, to stay awake, to dine and to taste.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 158: I can say to grow, to hurry, to stay awake, to dine and to taste.

158.1 crēscō, crēscere — to grow

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lose, then the Latin for to win.

You'll want to know: crēscō, crēscere

crēscō, crēscere — "to grow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crēscō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ker-*, "to grow" (EtymDB 2.1), with -scō, the ending of verbs of becoming. creō, "to create, to make grow", is its partner (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crēscō
- Say it: crēscō, once more
- Say it: say crēscō
- Recall: say the Latin for to lose, then the Latin for to win, then say crēscō again

Before you move on

What does crēscō, crēscere mean? ("To grow".) Say it once more.

158.2 festīnō, festīnāre — to hurry

Before the new one: say the Latin for to win, then the Latin for to grow.

You'll want to know: festīnō, festīnāre

festīnō, festīnāre — "to hurry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

festīnō is built on an adjective festīnus, "hasty" (EtymDB 2.1), and belongs with cōnfestim, "at once"; the deeper origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: festīnō
- Say it: festīnō, once more
- Say it: say festīnō
- Recall: say the Latin for to win, then the Latin for to grow, then say festīnō again

Before you move on

What does festīnō, festīnāre mean? ("To hurry".) Say it once more.

158.3 vigilō, vigilāre — to stay awake

Before the new one: say the Latin for to grow, then the Latin for to hurry.

You'll want to know: vigilō, vigilāre

vigilō, vigilāre — "to stay awake".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vigilō is built on vigil, "awake, watchful" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weg-*, "to be lively, to be awake" (EtymDB 2.1). English wake is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vigilō
- Say it: vigilō, once more
- Say it: say vigilō
- Recall: say the Latin for to grow, then the Latin for to hurry, then say vigilō again

Before you move on

What does vigilō, vigilāre mean? ("To stay awake".) Say it once more.

158.4 cēnō, cēnāre — to dine

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hurry, then the Latin for to stay awake.

You'll want to know: cēnō, cēnāre

cēnō, cēnāre — "to dine".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēnō is the verb made from cēna, "dinner" (EtymDB 2.1), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)ker-*, "to cut": the meal as one's portion.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cēnō
- Say it: cēnō, once more
- Say it: say cēnō
- Recall: say the Latin for to hurry, then the Latin for to stay awake, then say cēnō again

Before you move on

What does cēnō, cēnāre mean? ("To dine".) Say it once more.

158.5 gustō, gustāre — to taste

Before the new one: say the Latin for to stay awake, then the Latin for to dine.

You'll want to know: gustō, gustāre

gustō, gustāre — "to taste".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gustō is built on gustus, "a tasting" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gews-*, "to taste, to choose" (EtymDB 2.1). English choose is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gustō
- Say it: gustō, once more
- Say it: say gustō
- Recall: say the Latin for to stay awake, then the Latin for to dine, then say gustō again

Before you move on

What does gustō, gustāre mean? ("To taste".) Say it once more.

Chapter 159

To feel, To hang, To be silent, To keep, To change

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to feel, to hang, to be silent, to keep and to change.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 159: I can say to feel, to hang, to be silent, to keep and to change.

159.1 sentiō, sentīre — to feel

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dine, then the Latin for to taste.

You'll want to know: sentiō, sentīre

sentiō, sentīre — "to feel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sentiō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sent-*, "to head for, to go" (EtymDB 2.1). English send is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sentiō
- Say it: sentiō, once more
- Say it: say sentiō
- Recall: say the Latin for to dine, then the Latin for to taste, then say sentiō again

Before you move on

What does sentiō, sentīre mean? ("To feel".) Say it once more.

159.2 pendeō, pendēre — to hang

Before the new one: say the Latin for to taste, then the Latin for to feel.

You'll want to know: pendeō, pendēre

pendeō, pendēre — "to hang".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pendeō is the intransitive partner of pendō, "to weigh, to hang up" (Lewis & Short): to be hanging. The pair is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)pend-*, "to stretch, to pull" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pendeō
- Say it: pendeō, once more
- Say it: say pendeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to taste, then the Latin for to feel, then say pendeō again

Before you move on

What does pendeō, pendēre mean? ("To hang".) Say it once more.

159.3 taceō, tacēre — to be silent

Before the new one: say the Latin for to feel, then the Latin for to hang.

You'll want to know: taceō, tacēre

taceō, tacēre — "to be silent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

taceō is inherited from Proto-Italic takēō*, "to be silent" (EtymDB 2.1), but Lewis & Short call its deeper origin doubtful. Gothic þahan, "to be silent", is often compared.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: taceō
- Say it: taceō, once more
- Say it: say taceō
- Recall: say the Latin for to feel, then the Latin for to hang, then say taceō again

Before you move on

What does taceō, tacēre mean? ("To be silent".) Say it once more.

159.4 servō, servāre — to keep, to save

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hang, then the Latin for to be silent.

You'll want to know: servō, servāre

servō, servāre — "to keep, to save".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

servō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ser-*, "to watch over, to protect" (EtymDB 2.1). It is probably not the same word as servus, "a slave".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: servō
- Say it: servō, once more
- Say it: say servō
- Recall: say the Latin for to hang, then the Latin for to be silent, then say servō again

Before you move on

What does servō, servāre mean? ("To keep, to save".) Say it once more.

159.5 mūtō, mūtāre — to change

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be silent, then the Latin for to keep.

You'll want to know: mūtō, mūtāre

mūtō, mūtāre — "to change".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūtō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mey-*, "to change, to exchange", the root of mūtuus, "borrowed, mutual"; Lewis & Short's link with moveō, "to move", is less likely.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mūtō
- Say it: mūtō, once more
- Say it: say mūtō
- Recall: say the Latin for to be silent, then the Latin for to keep, then say mūtō again

Before you move on

What does mūtō, mūtāre mean? ("To change".) Say it once more.

Chapter 160

To count, To destroy, To go away, To arrive, To live

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to count, to destroy, to go away, to arrive and to live.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 160: I can say to count, to destroy, to go away, to arrive and to live.

160.1 numerō, numerāre — to count

Before the new one: say the Latin for to keep, then the Latin for to change.

You'll want to know: numerō, numerāre

numerō, numerāre — "to count".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

numerō is built on numerus, "a number" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nem-*, "to allot, to distribute" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: numerō
- Say it: numerō, once more
- Say it: say numerō
- Recall: say the Latin for to keep, then the Latin for to change, then say numerō again

Before you move on

What does numerō, numerāre mean? ("To count".) Say it once more.

160.2 dēleō, dēlēre — to destroy, to wipe out

Before the new one: say the Latin for to change, then the Latin for to count.

You'll want to know: dēleō, dēlēre

dēleō, dēlēre — "to destroy, to wipe out".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēleō probably begins with dē-, "away, off", but the rest is uncertain; a link with linō, "to smear", is sometimes suggested (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēleō
- Say it: dēleō, once more
- Say it: say dēleō
- Recall: say the Latin for to change, then the Latin for to count, then say dēleō again

Before you move on

What does dēleō, dēlēre mean? ("To destroy, to wipe out".) Say it once more.

160.3 discēdō, discēdere — to go away, to leave

Before the new one: say the Latin for to count, then the Latin for to destroy.

You'll want to know: discēdō, discēdere

discēdō, discēdere — "to go away, to leave".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

discēdō is dis-, "apart", with cēdō, "to go, to withdraw" (EtymDB 2.1): to go off in different directions, to leave.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: discēdō
- Say it: discēdō, once more
- Say it: say discēdō
- Recall: say the Latin for to count, then the Latin for to destroy, then say discēdō again

Before you move on

What does discēdō, discēdere mean? ("To go away, to leave".) Say it once more.

160.4 adveniō, advenīre — to arrive

Before the new one: say the Latin for to destroy, then the Latin for to go away.

You'll want to know: adveniō, advenīre

adveniō, advenīre — "to arrive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

adveniō is ad, "to", with veniō, "to come" (EtymDB 2.1). veniō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwem-*, "to step, to come" (EtymDB 2.1). English advent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: adveniō
- Say it: adveniō, once more
- Say it: say adveniō
- Recall: say the Latin for to destroy, then the Latin for to go away, then say adveniō again

Before you move on

What does adveniō, advenīre mean? ("To arrive".) Say it once more.

160.5 habitō, habitāre — to live (somewhere)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go away, then the Latin for to arrive.

Read it: Hodiē labōrō. Vespere domum redeō et dormiō. aloud as one account

You'll want to know: habitō, habitāre

habitō, habitāre — "to live (somewhere)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

habitō is a frequentative of habeō, "to have, to hold" (Lewis & Short): to keep holding a place, so to dwell.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: habitō
- Say it: habitō, once more
- Say it: say habitō
- Recall: say the Latin for to go away, then the Latin for to arrive, then say habitō again

Before you move on

What does habitō, habitāre mean? ("To live (somewhere)".) Say it once more.

160.6 Describing words and verbs — a first pass

Say the words for to arrive and to live.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- proud, kind, cruel, ugly, beautiful
- strong, weak, alone, icy, clear
- cloudy, windy, to build, to climb, to go down
- to join, to visit, to sing, to paint, to lead

- to make, to carry, to put on, to take off, to clean

Before you move on

Proud? (superbus, superba, superbum.) Kind? (benignus, benigna, benignum.) Cruel? (crūdēlis, crūdēle.) Ugly? (turpis, turpe.) Beautiful? (fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum.) Strong? (validus, valida, validum.) Weak? (īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum.) Alone? (sōlus, sōla, sōlum.) Icy? (gelidus, gelida, gelidum.) Clear? (serēnus, serēna, serēnum.) Cloudy? (nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum.) Windy? (ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum.) To build? (aedificō, aedificāre.) To climb? (ascendō, ascendere.) To go down? (dēscendō, dēscendere.) To join? (iungō, iungere.) To visit? (vīsitō, vīsitāre.) To sing? (cantō, cantāre.) To paint? (pingō, pingere.) To lead? (dūcō, dūcere.) To make? (faciō, facere.) To carry? (gerō, gerere.) To put on? (induō, induere.) To take off? (exuō, exuere.) To clean? (pūrgō, pūrgāre.)

160.7 Verbs — a second pass

Say the words for to break and to throw.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to break, to throw, to carry, to carry, to untie
- to give back, to show, to shine, to lose, to win
- to grow, to hurry, to stay awake, to dine, to taste
- to feel, to hang, to be silent, to keep, to change
- to count, to destroy, to go away, to arrive, to live

Before you move on

To break? (frangō, frangere.) To throw? (iaciō, iacere.) To carry? (vehō, vehere.) To carry? (portō, portāre.) To untie?

(solvō, solvere.) To give back? (reddō, reddere.) To show? (ostendō, ostendere.) To shine? (lūceō, lūcēre.) To lose? (perdō, perdere.) To win? (vincō, vincere.) To grow? (crēscō, crēscere.) To hurry? (festīnō, festīnāre.) To stay awake? (vigilō, vigilāre.) To dine? (cēnō, cēnāre.) To taste? (gustō, gustāre.) To feel? (sentiō, sentīre.) To hang? (pendeō, pendēre.) To be silent? (taceō, tacēre.) To keep? (servō, servāre.) To change? (mūtō, mūtāre.) To count? (numerō, numerāre.) To destroy? (dēleō, dēlēre.) To go away? (discēdō, discēdere.) To arrive? (adveniō, advenīre.) To live? (habitō, habitāre.)

Chapter 161

Nothing, Nobody, No, Which of Two, Neither … Nor

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that there is nothing, nobody and none, and ask which of two.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 161: I can say that there is nothing, nobody and none, and ask which of two.

161.1 nihil — nothing

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to arrive, then the Latin for to live (somewhere).

You'll want to know: nihil

nihil — "nothing". Nihil videō. — "I see nothing." Latin needs no second negative: nihil already means "not anything". English keeps it in nil and annihilate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nihil is ne, "not", fused with hīlum, "a trifle, the least thing" (Lewis & Short): not the least thing. Its short form is nīl, "nothing".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nihil
- Say it: nihil, once more
- Say it: say nihil
- Recall: say the Latin for to arrive, then the Latin for to live (somewhere), then say nihil again

Before you move on

What does nihil mean? ("Nothing".) Say it once more.

161.2 nēmō, nēminis — nobody, no one

Before the new one: say the Latin for to live (somewhere), then the Latin for nothing.

You'll want to know: nēmō, nēminis

nēmō, nēminis — "nobody, no one". Nēmō venit. — "Nobody is coming." It is ne-, "not", with an old form of homō, "a person": "not a person".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nēmō comes from ne hemō, "not a person" (EtymDB 2.1): hemō is an older form of homō, "a human being". Festus already took nēmō apart this way (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nēmō, nēminis
- Say it: nēmō, nēminis, once more
- Say it: say nēmō, nēminis

- Recall: say the Latin for to live (somewhere), then the Latin for nothing, then say nēmō, nēminis again

Before you move on

What does nēmō, nēminis mean? ("Nobody, no one".) Say it once more.

161.3 nūllus, nūlla, nūllum — no, not any

Before the new one: say the Latin for nothing, then the Latin for nobody.

You'll want to know: nūllus, nūlla, nūllum nūllus, nūlla, nūllum — "no, not any". It agrees with its noun: nūlla epistula — "no letter at all". English null and annul come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūllus is ne, "not", fused with ūllus, "any" (Lewis & Short): not any. ūllus itself is a diminutive of ūnus, "one".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūllus, nūlla, nūllum
- Say it: nūllus, nūlla, nūllum, once more
- Say it: say nūllus, nūlla, nūllum
- Recall: say the Latin for nothing, then the Latin for nobody, then say nūllus, nūlla, nūllum again

Before you move on

What does nūllus, nūlla, nūllum mean? ("No, not any".) Say it once more.

161.4 uter, utra, utrum — which (of two)

Before the new one: say the Latin for nobody, then the Latin for no.

You'll want to know: uter, utra, utrum

uter, utra, utrum — "which (of two)". A question that picks one of two: Uter liber? — "Which of the two books?" neuter, "neither of the two", gave English neuter and neutral.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

uter comes from an older cuter*, a comparative form of the question word quis, "who" (Lewis & Short): which of two. It is a different word from ūter, "a leather bag".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: uter, utra, utrum
- Say it: uter, utra, utrum, once more
- Say it: say uter, utra, utrum
- Recall: say the Latin for nobody, then the Latin for no, then say uter, utra, utrum again

Before you move on

What does uter, utra, utrum mean? ("Which (of two)".) Say it once more.

161.5 neque — and not, nor

Before the new one: say the Latin for no, then the Latin for which.

You'll want to know: neque

neque — "and not, nor". neque ... neque is "neither ... nor": Neque aquam neque vīnum bibō. — "I drink neither water nor wine." It is often shortened to nec.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

neque is ne, "not", with -que, "and" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nekwe*, "and not, nor" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: neque
- Say it: neque, once more
- Say it: say neque
- Recall: say the Latin for no, then the Latin for which, then say neque again

Before you move on

What does neque mean? ("And not, nor".) Say it once more.

Chapter 162

Recently, the Day before Yesterday, Once, Before, To Happen

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what happened, and when: recently, the day before yesterday, long ago.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 162: I can say what happened, and when: recently, the day before yesterday, long ago.

162.1 nūper — recently

> Before the new one: say the Latin for which, then the Latin for and not.

You'll want to know: nūper nūper — "recently". Latin's past tense, the perfect, has its own endings: vīdī — "I saw", vēnī — "I came". Nūper librum lēgī. — "I recently read a book."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūper is usually explained as novum, "new", with -per, "through", the ending of semper, "always" (Lewis & Short): newly, of late.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūper
- Say it: nūper, once more
- Say it: say nūper
- Recall: say the Latin for which, then the Latin for and not, then say nūper again

Before you move on

What does nūper mean? ("Recently".) Say it once more.

162.2 nudiustertius — the day before yesterday

Before the new one: say the Latin for and not, then the Latin for recently.

You'll want to know: nudiustertius nudiustertius — "the day before yesterday". It is nunc diēs tertius, "now (is) the third day": counting today, yesterday is the second. Nudiustertius epistulam scrīpsī. — "The day before yesterday I wrote a letter."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nudiustertius is fused from nunc diēs tertius, "now (is) the third day". Latin also said nudiusquārtus, "three days ago", on the same pattern.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nudiustertius
- Say it: nudiustertius, once more
- Say it: say nudiustertius
- Recall: say the Latin for and not, then the Latin for recently, then say nudiustertius again

Before you move on

What does nudiustertius mean? ("The day before yesterday".) Say it once more.

162.3 ōlim — once, long ago; one day

Before the new one: say the Latin for recently, then the Latin for the day before yesterday.

You'll want to know: ōlim ōlim — "once, long ago; one day". It points to a time far off, usually long past: Ōlim Rōma parva erat. — "Long ago Rome was small." erat is "was", from sum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōlim is built on ollus, "that", the archaic form of ille (Lewis & Short), with -im, an ending for a point in time: "at that time".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōlim
- Say it: ōlim, once more
- Say it: say ōlim

- Recall: say the Latin for recently, then the Latin for the day before yesterday, then say ōlim again

Before you move on

What does ōlim mean? ("Once, long ago; one day".) Say it once more.

162.4 anteā — before, previously

Before the new one: say the Latin for the day before yesterday, then the Latin for once.

You'll want to know: anteā anteā — "before, previously". It is ante, "before", with eā. Anteā Rōmae habitāvī. — "Before, I lived in Rome." habitāvī is the perfect of habitō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

anteā is ante, "before", with eā, "that" (Lewis & Short), like posteā, "afterwards", and propterea, "because of that". ante is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2enti*, "facing, in front" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: anteā
- Say it: anteā, once more
- Say it: say anteā
- Recall: say the Latin for the day before yesterday, then the Latin for once, then say anteā again

Before you move on

What does anteā mean? ("Before, previously".) Say it once more.

162.5 accidō, accidere — to happen

Before the new one: say the Latin for once, then the Latin for before.

You'll want to know: accidō, accidere

accidō, accidere — "to happen". Quid accidit? — "What happened?" Its perfect is spelled like its present in this form: accidit. It is ad + cadō, "to fall towards", the source of English accident.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

accidō is ad, "towards", with cadō, "to fall" (Lewis & Short), its a weakened to i: to fall towards, to befall. It is a different word from accīdō, "to cut into", built on caedō, "to cut".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: accidō, accidere
- Say it: accidō, accidere, once more
- Say it: say accidō, accidere
- Recall: say the Latin for once, then the Latin for before, then say accidō, accidere again

Before you move on

What does accidō, accidere mean? ("To happen".) Say it once more.

Chapter 163

The Day after Tomorrow, Afterwards, a Plan, To Decide, To Foresee

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what will happen, and when: the day after tomorrow, afterwards, and what I plan.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 163: I can say what will happen, and when: the day after tomorrow, afterwards, and what I plan.

163.1 perendiē — the day after tomorrow

Before the new one: say the Latin for before, then the Latin for to happen.

You'll want to know: perendiē

perendiē — "the day after tomorrow". One day further on than crās: Perendiē Rōmam ībō. — "The day after tomorrow I will go to Rome." ībō is the future of eō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perendiē is usually explained as a word for "beyond", like Greek peran, "on the other side" (Lewis & Short), with diē, "on the day": on the day beyond tomorrow.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perendiē
- Say it: perendiē, once more
- Say it: say perendiē
- Recall: say the Latin for before, then the Latin for to happen, then say perendiē again

Before you move on

What does perendiē mean? ("The day after tomorrow".) Say it once more.

163.2 posteā — afterwards, later

Before the new one: say the Latin for to happen, then the Latin for the day after tomorrow.

You'll want to know: posteā

posteā — "afterwards, later". It is post, "after", with eā. Posteā tē vidēbō. — "I will see you afterwards." vidēbō is the future you met in crās tē vidēbō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

posteā is post, "after", with eā, "that" (Lewis & Short), like anteā, "before": after that.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: posteā
- Say it: posteā, once more
- Say it: say posteā
- Recall: say the Latin for to happen, then the Latin for the day after tomorrow, then say posteā again

Before you move on

What does posteā mean? ("Afterwards, later".) Say it once more.

163.3 cōnsilium, cōnsiliī — a plan; advice

Before the new one: say the Latin for the day after tomorrow, then the Latin for afterwards.

You'll want to know: cōnsilium, cōnsiliī

cōnsilium, cōnsiliī — "a plan; advice". Quod cōnsilium habēs? — "What plan have you got?" English counsel comes from it, by way of French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsilium belongs with cōnsul, "a consul" (Lewis & Short), and with cōnsulō, "to consult, to deliberate"; where their root comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsilium, cōnsiliī
- Say it: cōnsilium, cōnsiliī, once more
- Say it: say cōnsilium, cōnsiliī

- Recall: say the Latin for the day after tomorrow, then the Latin for afterwards, then say cōnsilium, cōnsiliī again

Before you move on

What does cōnsilium, cōnsiliī mean? ("A plan; advice".) Say it once more.

163.4 cōnstituō, cōnstituere — to decide, to set up

Before the new one: say the Latin for afterwards, then the Latin for a plan; advice.

You'll want to know: cōnstituō, cōnstituere

cōnstituō, cōnstituere — "to decide, to set up". Third-conjugation verbs, with a short -ere, make their future with -am, -ēs, -et: Crās cōnstituam. — "I will decide tomorrow." English constitute and constitution come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnstituō is con-, "together, firmly", with statuō, "to set up" (Lewis & Short), its a weakened to i: to set firmly in place.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnstituō, cōnstituere
- Say it: cōnstituō, cōnstituere, once more
- Say it: say cōnstituō, cōnstituere
- Recall: say the Latin for afterwards, then the Latin for a plan; advice, then say cōnstituō, cōnstituere again

Before you move on

What does cōnstituō, cōnstituere mean? ("To decide, to set up".) Say it once more.

163.5 prōvideō, prōvidēre — to foresee, to provide for

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plan; advice, then the Latin for to decide.

You'll want to know: prōvideō, prōvidēre

prōvideō, prōvidēre — "to foresee, to provide for". It is videō with prō, "ahead": seeing a thing before it comes. Its future follows vidēbō: prōvidēbō. English provide and provident come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōvideō is prō, "ahead", with videō, "to see" (EtymDB 2.1). videō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weyd-*, "to see, to know" (EtymDB 2.1); English wit and wise are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōvideō, prōvidēre
- Say it: prōvideō, prōvidēre, once more
- Say it: say prōvideō, prōvidēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a plan; advice, then the Latin for to decide, then say prōvideō, prōvidēre again

Before you move on

What does prōvideō, prōvidēre mean? ("To foresee, to provide for".) Say it once more.

Chapter 164

A Notice, an Inscription, a Price, For Sale, Goods

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read a notice, an inscription, a price and a sale sign, and act on what they say.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 164: I can read a notice, an inscription, a price and a sale sign, and act on what they say.

164.1 titulus, titulī — a notice, a label; a title

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to decide, then the Latin for to foresee.

You'll want to know: titulus, titulī

titulus, titulī — "a notice, a label; a title". A shop or house could carry one by its door. The famous Pompeian doorway warning is a mosaic, but it reads like one: Cavē canem. — "Beware of the dog." English title comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

titulus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: titulus, titulī
- Say it: titulus, titulī, once more
- Say it: say titulus, titulī
- Recall: say the Latin for to decide, then the Latin for to foresee, then say titulus, titulī again

Before you move on

What does titulus, titulī mean? ("A notice, a label; a title".) Say it once more.

164.2 īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis — an inscription

Before the new one: say the Latin for to foresee, then the Latin for a notice.

You'll want to know: īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis

īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis — "an inscription".

Read it: the stone

The stone says SPQR, which is Senātus Populusque Rōmānus, "the Senate and People of Rome". It is in + scrībō: writing cut into something.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnscrīptiō is built on īnscrībō, "to write on" (Lewis & Short), with -tiō, an ending for an act or its result. scrībō, "to write", is probably related to Greek skariphos, "a scratch, a sketch".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis
- Say it: īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis, once more

- Say it: say īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to foresee, then the Latin for a notice, then say īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis again

Before you move on

What does īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis mean? ("An inscription".) Say it once more.

164.3 pretium, pretiī — a price

Before the new one: say the Latin for a notice, then the Latin for an inscription.

You'll want to know: pretium, pretiī

pretium, pretiī — "a price". Quantī cōnstat? — "How much does it cost?" English price and precious come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pretium is probably inherited, from a form built on Proto-Indo-European per-*, "back, in return" (EtymDB 2.1): what one gives in return.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pretium, pretiī
- Say it: pretium, pretiī, once more
- Say it: say pretium, pretiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a notice, then the Latin for an inscription, then say pretium, pretiī again

Before you move on

What does pretium, pretiī mean? ("A price".) Say it once more.

164.4 vēnālis, vēnāle — for sale

Before the new one: say the Latin for an inscription, then the Latin for a price.

You'll want to know: vēnālis, vēnāle

vēnālis, vēnāle — "for sale".

Read it: the sign

The sign says Domus vēnālis. — "House for sale." It comes from vēnum, "sale", like vendō, "to sell".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēnālis is built on vēnum, "sale" (EtymDB 2.1), with -ālis, "belonging to": for sale. vēnum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wesno-*, "price"; English venal, "bribable", comes from vēnālis.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vēnālis, vēnāle
- Say it: vēnālis, vēnāle, once more
- Say it: say vēnālis, vēnāle
- Recall: say the Latin for an inscription, then the Latin for a price, then say vēnālis, vēnāle again

Before you move on

What does vēnālis, vēnāle mean? ("For sale".) Say it once more.

164.5 merx, mercis — goods, merchandise

Before the new one: say the Latin for a price, then the Latin for for sale.

You'll want to know: merx, mercis merx, mercis — "goods, merchandise". What a shop sells is usually said in the plural:

merc- (the stem, as in mercis) + -ēs (the plural ending) → mercēs
English merchant and commerce come from this word.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

merx has no sure origin. Lewis & Short tie it to mereō, "to earn"; others think it may be a loan, perhaps from Etruscan. English market comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: merx, mercis
- Say it: merx, mercis, once more
- Say it: say merx, mercis
- Recall: say the Latin for a price, then the Latin for for sale, then say merx, mercis again

Before you move on

What does merx, mercis mean? ("Goods, merchandise".) Say it once more.

164.6 Saying no and looking back — a first pass

Say the words for for sale and goods.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nothing, nobody, no, which, and not
- recently, the day before yesterday, once, before, to happen

Before you move on

Nothing? (nihil.) Nobody? (nēmō, nēminis.) No? (nūllus, nūlla, nūllum.) Which? (uter, utra, utrum.) And not? (neque.) Recently? (nūper.) The day before yesterday? (nudiustertius.) Once? (ōlim.) Before? (anteā.) To happen? (accidō, accidere.)

164.7 Looking ahead and reading signs — a second pass

Say the words for the day after tomorrow and afterwards.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the day after tomorrow, afterwards, a plan; advice, to decide, to foresee
- a notice, an inscription, a price, for sale, goods

Before you move on

The day after tomorrow? (perendiē.) Afterwards? (posteā.) A plan; advice? (cōnsilium, cōnsiliī.) To decide? (cōnstituō, cōnstituere.) To foresee? (prōvideō, prōvidēre.) A notice? (titulus, titulī.) An inscription? (īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis.) A price? (pretium, pretiī.) For sale? (vēnālis, vēnāle.) Goods? (merx, mercis.)

Chapter 165

To light, To put out, To jump, To smile, To shout

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to light, to put out, to jump, to smile and to shout.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 165: I can say to light, to put out, to jump, to smile and to shout.

165.1 accendō, accendere — to light, to kindle

Before the new one: say the Latin for for sale, then the Latin for goods.

You'll want to know: accendō, accendere

accendō, accendere — "to light, to kindle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

accendō is ad, "to", with a verb -cendō, "to set alight", related to candeō, "to glow white" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: accendō, accendere
- Say it: accendō, accendere, once more
- Say it: say accendō, accendere
- Recall: say the Latin for for sale, then the Latin for goods, then say accendō, accendere again

Before you move on

What does accendō, accendere mean? ("To light, to kindle".) Say it once more.

165.2 exstinguō, exstinguere — to put out

Before the new one: say the Latin for goods, then the Latin for to light.

You'll want to know: exstinguō, exstinguere

exstinguō, exstinguere — "to put out".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exstinguō is ex, "out", with stinguō, "to quench, to put out": to put out entirely. English extinguish and extinct come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: exstinguō, exstinguere
- Say it: exstinguō, exstinguere, once more
- Say it: say exstinguō, exstinguere
- Recall: say the Latin for goods, then the Latin for to light, then say exstinguō, exstinguere again

Before you move on

What does exstinguō, exstinguere mean? ("To put out".) Say it once more.

165.3 saliō, salīre — to jump

Before the new one: say the Latin for to light, then the Latin for to put out.

You'll want to know: saliō, salīre

saliō, salīre — "to jump".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saliō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sel-*, "to spring, to leap" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hallomai, "to leap", is a cousin. It is a different word from saliō, "to salt", built on sāl, "salt".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saliō, salīre
- Say it: saliō, salīre, once more
- Say it: say saliō, salīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to light, then the Latin for to put out, then say saliō, salīre again

Before you move on

What does saliō, salīre mean? ("To jump".) Say it once more.

165.4 subrīdeō, subrīdēre — to smile

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put out, then the Latin for to jump.

You'll want to know: subrīdeō, subrīdēre

subrīdeō, subrīdēre — "to smile".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

subrīdeō is sub, "under, a little", with rīdeō, "to laugh" (EtymDB 2.1): to laugh a little, to smile.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: subrīdeō, subrīdēre
- Say it: subrīdeō, subrīdēre, once more
- Say it: say subrīdeō, subrīdēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to put out, then the Latin for to jump, then say subrīdeō, subrīdēre again

Before you move on

What does subrīdeō, subrīdēre mean? ("To smile".) Say it once more.

165.5 clāmō, clāmāre — to shout

Before the new one: say the Latin for to jump, then the Latin for to smile.

You'll want to know: clāmō, clāmāre

clāmō, clāmāre — "to shout".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clāmō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kelh1-*, "to call, to shout" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek kaleō, "to call", and clārus, "clear, loud", are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: clāmō, clāmāre
- Say it: clāmō, clāmāre, once more
- Say it: say clāmō, clāmāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to jump, then the Latin for to smile, then say clāmō, clāmāre again

Before you move on

What does clāmō, clāmāre mean? ("To shout".) Say it once more.

Chapter 166

To approve, To mark, To discuss, To promise, To allow

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to approve, to mark, to discuss, to promise and to allow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 166: I can say to approve, to mark, to discuss, to promise and to allow.

166.1 probō, probāre — to approve, to prove

Before the new one: say the Latin for to smile, then the Latin for to shout.

You'll want to know: probō, probāre

probō, probāre — "to approve, to prove".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

probō is built on probus, "good, honest" (Lewis & Short): to find something good, to test and approve. probus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pro-bhwo-*, "being in front, outstanding" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: probō, probāre
- Say it: probō, probāre, once more
- Say it: say probō, probāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to smile, then the Latin for to shout, then say probō, probāre again

Before you move on

What does probō, probāre mean? ("To approve, to prove".) Say it once more.

166.2 signō, signāre — to mark, to seal

Before the new one: say the Latin for to shout, then the Latin for to approve.

You'll want to know: signō, signāre

signō, signāre — "to mark, to seal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

signō is the verb made from signum, "a sign, a mark" (Lewis & Short): to put a mark on. English sign comes from both.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: signō, signāre
- Say it: signō, signāre, once more
- Say it: say signō, signāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to shout, then the Latin for to approve, then say signō, signāre again

Before you move on

What does signō, signāre mean? ("To mark, to seal".) Say it once more.

166.3 disputō, disputāre — to discuss, to argue

Before the new one: say the Latin for to approve, then the Latin for to mark.

You'll want to know: disputō, disputāre

disputō, disputāre — "to discuss, to argue".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

disputō is dis-, "apart", with putō, "to reckon" (EtymDB 2.1). Lewis & Short note that disputō was first a word of accounts: to go over a reckoning item by item.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: disputō, disputāre
- Say it: disputō, disputāre, once more
- Say it: say disputō, disputāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to approve, then the Latin for to mark, then say disputō, disputāre again

Before you move on

What does disputō, disputāre mean? ("To discuss, to argue".) Say it once more.

166.4 prōmittō, prōmittere — to promise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to mark, then the Latin for to discuss.

You'll want to know: prōmittō, prōmittere

prōmittō, prōmittere — "to promise".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōmittō is prō, "forward", with mittō, "to send" (EtymDB 2.1): to send one's word ahead.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōmittō, prōmittere
- Say it: prōmittō, prōmittere, once more
- Say it: say prōmittō, prōmittere
- Recall: say the Latin for to mark, then the Latin for to discuss, then say prōmittō, prōmittere again

Before you move on

What does prōmittō, prōmittere mean? ("To promise".) Say it once more.

166.5 permittō, permittere — to allow

Before the new one: say the Latin for to discuss, then the Latin for to promise.

You'll want to know: permittō, permittere

permittō, permittere — "to allow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

permittō is per, "through", with mittō, "to send, to let go" (EtymDB 2.1). Lewis & Short give permittō first as "to let go through", hence to allow.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: permittō, permittere
- Say it: permittō, permittere, once more
- Say it: say permittō, permittere
- Recall: say the Latin for to discuss, then the Latin for to promise, then say permittō, permittere again

Before you move on

What does permittō, permittere mean? ("To allow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 167

To burn, To set on fire, To throw away, To calculate, To knock

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to burn, to set on fire, to throw away, to calculate and to knock.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 167: I can say to burn, to set on fire, to throw away, to calculate and to knock.

167.1 ārdeō, ārdēre — to burn, to be on fire

Before the new one: say the Latin for to promise, then the Latin for to allow.

You'll want to know: ārdeō, ārdēre

ārdeō, ārdēre — "to burn, to be on fire".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ārdeō is usually linked with āreō, "to be dry, to be parched" (EtymDB 2.1): to burn as to be dried up by heat.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ārdeō, ārdēre
- Say it: ārdeō, ārdēre, once more
- Say it: say ārdeō, ārdēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to promise, then the Latin for to allow, then say ārdeō, ārdēre again

Before you move on

What does ārdeō, ārdēre mean? ("To burn, to be on fire".) Say it once more.

167.2 incendō, incendere — to set on fire

Before the new one: say the Latin for to allow, then the Latin for to burn.

You'll want to know: incendō, incendere

incendō, incendere — "to set on fire".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incendō is in, "on, into", with the verb seen in candeō, "to glow white" (Lewis & Short): to set alight.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: incendō, incendere
- Say it: incendō, incendere, once more
- Say it: say incendō, incendere
- Recall: say the Latin for to allow, then the Latin for to burn, then say incendō, incendere again

Before you move on

What does incendō, incendere mean? ("To set on fire".) Say it once more.

167.3 abiciō, abicere — to throw away

Before the new one: say the Latin for to burn, then the Latin for to set on fire.

You'll want to know: abiciō, abicere

abiciō, abicere — "to throw away".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

abiciō is ab, "away", with iaciō, "to throw" (Lewis & Short), its a weakened to i.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: abiciō, abicere
- Say it: abiciō, abicere, once more
- Say it: say abiciō, abicere
- Recall: say the Latin for to burn, then the Latin for to set on fire, then say abiciō, abicere again

Before you move on

What does abiciō, abicere mean? ("To throw away".) Say it once more.

167.4 computō, computāre — to calculate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to set on fire, then the Latin for to throw away.

You'll want to know: computō, computāre

computō, computāre — "to calculate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

computō is com-, "together", with putō, "to reckon" (EtymDB 2.1): to reckon up. English count and compute both come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: computō, computāre
- Say it: computō, computāre, once more
- Say it: say computō, computāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to set on fire, then the Latin for to throw away, then say computō, computāre again

Before you move on

What does computō, computāre mean? ("To calculate".) Say it once more.

167.5 pulsō, pulsāre — to knock, to beat

Before the new one: say the Latin for to throw away, then the Latin for to calculate.

You'll want to know: pulsō, pulsāre

pulsō, pulsāre — "to knock, to beat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulsō is a frequentative of pellō, “to push, to strike” (EtymDB 2.1), built on its participle pulsus, “struck”: to keep striking. English pulse comes from the same family.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pulsō, pulsāre
- Say it: pulsō, pulsāre, once more
- Say it: say pulsō, pulsāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to throw away, then the Latin for to calculate, then say pulsō, pulsāre again

Before you move on

What does pulsō, pulsāre mean? (“To knock, to beat”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 168

To fold, To own, To make ready in advance, To lend, To propose

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to fold, to own, to make ready in advance, to lend and to propose.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 168: I can say to fold, to own, to make ready in advance, to lend and to propose.

168.1 plicō, plicāre — to fold

Before the new one: say the Latin for to calculate, then the Latin for to knock.

You'll want to know: plicō, plicāre

plicō, plicāre — "to fold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plicō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European plek-*, "to fold, to plait" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek plekō, "to plait", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English ply and complicate come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: plicō, plicāre
- Say it: plicō, plicāre, once more
- Say it: say plicō, plicāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to calculate, then the Latin for to knock, then say plicō, plicāre again

Before you move on

What does plicō, plicāre mean? ("To fold".) Say it once more.

168.2 possideō, possidēre — to own, to possess

Before the new one: say the Latin for to knock, then the Latin for to fold.

You'll want to know: possideō, possidēre

possideō, possidēre — "to own, to possess".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

possideō is usually explained as potis, "master, able", with sedeō, "to sit" (EtymDB 2.1): to sit as master of something, so to own.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: possideō, possidēre
- Say it: possideō, possidēre, once more
- Say it: say possideō, possidēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to knock, then the Latin for to fold, then say possideō, possidēre again

Before you move on

What does possideō, possidēre mean? ("To own, to possess".) Say it once more.

168.3 praeparō, praeparāre — to make ready in advance

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fold, then the Latin for to own.

You'll want to know: praeparō, praeparāre

praeparō, praeparāre — "to make ready in advance".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praeparō is prae, "before", with parō, "to make ready" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: praeparō, praeparāre
- Say it: praeparō, praeparāre, once more
- Say it: say praeparō, praeparāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to fold, then the Latin for to own, then say praeparō, praeparāre again

Before you move on

What does praeparō, praeparāre mean? ("To make ready in advance".) Say it once more.

168.4 commodō, commodāre — to lend

Before the new one: say the Latin for to own, then the Latin for to make ready in advance.

You'll want to know: commodō, commodāre

commodō, commodāre — "to lend".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commodō is built on commodus, "fitting, convenient" (Lewis & Short), itself con-, "with", and modus, "a measure": to make something available, to lend.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: commodō, commodāre
- Say it: commodō, commodāre, once more
- Say it: say commodō, commodāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to own, then the Latin for to make ready in advance, then say commodō, commodāre again

Before you move on

What does commodō, commodāre mean? ("To lend".) Say it once more.

168.5 prōpōnō, prōpōnere — to propose, to put forward

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make ready in advance, then the Latin for to lend.

You'll want to know: prōpōnō, prōpōnere

prōpōnō, prōpōnere — "to propose, to put forward".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōpōnō is prō, "forward", with pōnō, "to put" (EtymDB 2.1): to put forward.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōpōnō, prōpōnere
- Say it: prōpōnō, prōpōnere, once more
- Say it: say prōpōnō, prōpōnere
- Recall: say the Latin for to make ready in advance, then the Latin for to lend, then say prōpōnō, prōpōnere again

Before you move on

What does prōpōnō, prōpōnere mean? ("To propose, to put forward".) Say it once more.

Chapter 169

To kill, To get used to, To make haste, To move back, To approach

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to kill, to get used to, to make haste, to move back and to approach.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 169: I can say to kill, to get used to, to make haste, to move back and to approach.

169.1 interficiō, interficere — to kill

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lend, then the Latin for to propose.

You'll want to know: interficiō, interficere

interficiō, interficere — "to kill".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

interficiō is inter, "between", with faciō, "to make" (Lewis & Short): first to put out of the way, then to kill.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: interficiō, interficere
- Say it: interficiō, interficere, once more
- Say it: say interficiō, interficere
- Recall: say the Latin for to lend, then the Latin for to propose, then say interficiō, interficere again

Before you move on

What does interficiō, interficere mean? ("To kill".) Say it once more.

169.2 cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere — to get used to

Before the new one: say the Latin for to propose, then the Latin for to kill.

You'll want to know: cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere

cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere — "to get used to".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsuēscō is con-, "thoroughly", with suēscō, "to become used to" (EtymDB 2.1). suēscō is usually traced to the reflexive swe-*, "one's own": to make something one's own.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere
- Say it: cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere, once more
- Say it: say cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to propose, then the Latin for to kill, then say cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere again

Before you move on

What does cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere mean? ("To get used to".) Say it once more.

169.3 properō, properāre — to make haste

Before the new one: say the Latin for to kill, then the Latin for to get used to.

You'll want to know: properō, properāre

properō, properāre — "to make haste".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

properō is built on properus, "quick, hasty" (Lewis & Short), which is often explained as pro-, "forward", plus the root of parō, "to make ready".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: properō, properāre
- Say it: properō, properāre, once more
- Say it: say properō, properāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to kill, then the Latin for to get used to, then say properō, properāre again

Before you move on

What does properō, properāre mean? ("To make haste".) Say it once more.

169.4 recēdō, recēdere — to move back, to withdraw

Before the new one: say the Latin for to get used to, then the Latin for to make haste.

You'll want to know: recēdō, recēdere

recēdō, recēdere — "to move back, to withdraw".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

recēdō is re-, "back", with cēdō, "to go" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: recēdō, recēdere
- Say it: recēdō, recēdere, once more
- Say it: say recēdō, recēdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to get used to, then the Latin for to make haste, then say recēdō, recēdere again

Before you move on

What does recēdō, recēdere mean? ("To move back, to withdraw".) Say it once more.

169.5 appropinquō, appropinquāre — to approach

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make haste, then the Latin for to move back.

You'll want to know: appropinquō, appropinquāre

appropinquō, appropinquāre — "to approach".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

appropinquō is ad, "to", with propinquō, "to come near" (EtymDB 2.1), from propinquus, "near", built on prope, "near".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: appropinquō, appropinquāre
- Say it: appropinquō, appropinquāre, once more
- Say it: say appropinquō, appropinquāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to make haste, then the Latin for to move back, then say appropinquō, appropinquāre again

Before you move on

What does appropinquō, appropinquāre mean? ("To approach".) Say it once more.

Chapter 170

To slip, To lighten, To admire, To suspect, To press

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to slip, to lighten, to admire, to suspect and to press.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 170: I can say to slip, to lighten, to admire, to suspect and to press.

170.1 lābor, lābī — to slip, to glide

Before the new one: say the Latin for to move back, then the Latin for to approach.

You'll want to know: lābor, lābī

lābor, lābī — "to slip, to glide".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lābor is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root (s)leh2b-*, "to hang loosely, to droop" (EtymDB 2.1). English lapse comes from its participle lāpsus, "slipped".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lābor, lābī
- Say it: lābor, lābī, once more
- Say it: say lābor, lābī
- Recall: say the Latin for to move back, then the Latin for to approach, then say lābor, lābī again

Before you move on

What does lābor, lābī mean? ("To slip, to glide".) Say it once more.

170.2 levō, levāre — to lighten, to lift

Before the new one: say the Latin for to approach, then the Latin for to slip.

You'll want to know: levō, levāre

levō, levāre — "to lighten, to lift".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

levō is built on levis, "light" (Lewis & Short): to make light, to lift. It is a different word from lēvō, "to make smooth".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: levō, levāre
- Say it: levō, levāre, once more
- Say it: say levō, levāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to approach, then the Latin for to slip, then say levō, levāre again

Before you move on

What does levō, levāre mean? ("To lighten, to lift".) Say it once more.

170.3 admīror, admīrārī — to admire

Before the new one: say the Latin for to slip, then the Latin for to lighten.

You'll want to know: admīror, admīrārī

admīror, admīrārī — "to admire".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

admīror is ad, "at", with mīror, "to wonder" (EtymDB 2.1), from mīrus, "wonderful", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)meyh2-*, "to smile, to be astonished" (EtymDB 2.1). English smile is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: admīror, admīrārī
- Say it: admīror, admīrārī, once more
- Say it: say admīror, admīrārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to slip, then the Latin for to lighten, then say admīror, admīrārī again

Before you move on

What does admīror, admīrārī mean? ("To admire".) Say it once more.

170.4 suspicor, suspicārī — to suspect

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lighten, then the Latin for to admire.

You'll want to know: suspicor, suspicārī

suspicor, suspicārī — "to suspect".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suspicor belongs with suspiciō, "to look up at, to suspect" (Lewis & Short), built from sub, "up from under", and speciō, "to look": to look at someone from below.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: suspicor, suspicārī
- Say it: suspicor, suspicārī, once more
- Say it: say suspicor, suspicārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to lighten, then the Latin for to admire, then say suspicor, suspicārī again

Before you move on

What does suspicor, suspicārī mean? ("To suspect".) Say it once more.

170.5 premō, premere — to press, to squeeze

Before the new one: say the Latin for to admire, then the Latin for to suspect.

You'll want to know: premō, premere

premō, premere — "to press, to squeeze".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

premō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European pres-*, "to press" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English press comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: premō, premere
- Say it: premō, premere, once more
- Say it: say premō, premere
- Recall: say the Latin for to admire, then the Latin for to suspect, then say premō, premere again

Before you move on

What does premō, premere mean? ("To press, to squeeze".) Say it once more.

Chapter 171

To deceive, To endure, To found, To create, To believe

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to deceive, to endure, to found, to create and to believe.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 171: I can say to deceive, to endure, to found, to create and to believe.

171.1 fallō, fallere — to deceive

Before the new one: say the Latin for to suspect, then the Latin for to press.

You'll want to know: fallō, fallere

fallō, fallere — "to deceive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fallō has no sure origin; Greek sphallō, "to trip up" (Lewis & Short), is often compared, and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed root ghwel-*, "to deceive".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fallō, fallere
- Say it: fallō, fallere, once more
- Say it: say fallō, fallere
- Recall: say the Latin for to suspect, then the Latin for to press, then say fallō, fallere again

Before you move on

What does fallō, fallere mean? ("To deceive".) Say it once more.

171.2 tolerō, tolerāre — to endure, to put up with

Before the new one: say the Latin for to press, then the Latin for to deceive.

You'll want to know: tolerō, tolerāre

tolerō, tolerāre — "to endure, to put up with".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tolerō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European telh2-*, "to bear, to endure" (EtymDB 2.1); tollō, "to lift", comes from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tolerō, tolerāre
- Say it: tolerō, tolerāre, once more
- Say it: say tolerō, tolerāre

- Recall: say the Latin for to press, then the Latin for to deceive, then say tolerō, tolerāre again

Before you move on

What does tolerō, tolerāre mean? ("To endure, to put up with".) Say it once more.

171.3 condō, condere — to found; to hide away

Before the new one: say the Latin for to deceive, then the Latin for to endure.

You'll want to know: condō, condere

condō, condere — "to found; to hide away".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

condō is con-, "together", with -dō, "to put" (Lewis & Short): to put together, to found, or to put away. This -dō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1-*, "to put, to place" (EtymDB 2.1), and merged in form with dō, "to give".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: condō, condere
- Say it: condō, condere, once more
- Say it: say condō, condere
- Recall: say the Latin for to deceive, then the Latin for to endure, then say condō, condere again

Before you move on

What does condō, condere mean? ("To found; to hide away".) Say it once more.

171.4 creō, creāre — to create, to elect

Before the new one: say the Latin for to endure, then the Latin for to found; to hide away.

You'll want to know: creō, creāre

creō, creāre — "to create, to elect".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

creō is inherited from Proto-Italic krēāō*, "to make grow", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ker-*, "to grow" (EtymDB 2.1); crēscō, "to grow", is its partner. English create comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: creō, creāre
- Say it: creō, creāre, once more
- Say it: say creō, creāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to endure, then the Latin for to found; to hide away, then say creō, creāre again

Before you move on

What does creō, creāre mean? ("To create, to elect".) Say it once more.

171.5 crēdō, crēdere — to believe, to trust

Before the new one: say the Latin for to found; to hide away, then the Latin for to create.

You'll want to know: crēdō, crēdere

crēdō, crēdere — "to believe, to trust".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crēdō is inherited, usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European phrase kred dheh1-, "to put one's heart" (EtymDB 2.1), from kerd-, "heart", and dheh1-*, "to put".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crēdō, crēdere
- Say it: crēdō, crēdere, once more
- Say it: say crēdō, crēdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to found; to hide away, then the Latin for to create, then say crēdō, crēdere again

Before you move on

What does crēdō, crēdere mean? ("To believe, to trust".) Say it once more.

Chapter 172

To sow, To reap, To hunt, To go fishing, To deny

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to sow, to reap, to hunt, to go fishing and to deny.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 172: I can say to sow, to reap, to hunt, to go fishing and to deny.

172.1 serō, serere — to sow, to plant

Before the new one: say the Latin for to create, then the Latin for to believe.

You'll want to know: serō, serere

serō, serere — "to sow, to plant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

serō, "to sow", is inherited from Proto-Italic sizō*, "I sow", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European si-sh1-*, "to sow", a doubled form of the root (EtymDB 2.1); sēmen, "seed", has the same root. It is a different word from serō, "to join, to bind".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: serō, serere
- Say it: serō, serere, once more
- Say it: say serō, serere
- Recall: say the Latin for to create, then the Latin for to believe, then say serō, serere again

Before you move on

What does serō, serere mean? ("To sow, to plant".) Say it once more.

172.2 metō, metere — to reap, to harvest

Before the new one: say the Latin for to believe, then the Latin for to sow.

You'll want to know: metō, metere

metō, metere — "to reap, to harvest".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

metō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2meh1-*, "to mow, to reap" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek amaō, "to reap", and English mow are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: metō, metere
- Say it: metō, metere, once more
- Say it: say metō, metere

- Recall: say the Latin for to believe, then the Latin for to sow, then say metō, metere again

Before you move on

What does metō, metere mean? ("To reap, to harvest".) Say it once more.

172.3 vēnor, vēnārī — to hunt

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sow, then the Latin for to reap.

You'll want to know: vēnor, vēnārī

vēnor, vēnārī — "to hunt".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēnor has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records proposed links with Proto-Indo-European wenh1-, "to strive for, to desire", and weyh1-, "to pursue". English venison, "hunted meat", comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vēnor, vēnārī
- Say it: vēnor, vēnārī, once more
- Say it: say vēnor, vēnārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to sow, then the Latin for to reap, then say vēnor, vēnārī again

Before you move on

What does vēnor, vēnārī mean? ("To hunt".) Say it once more.

172.4 piscor, piscārī — to go fishing

Before the new one: say the Latin for to reap, then the Latin for to hunt.

You'll want to know: piscor, piscārī

piscor, piscārī — "to go fishing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piscor is the verb made from piscis, "a fish" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pisk-*, "fish" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: piscor, piscārī
- Say it: piscor, piscārī, once more
- Say it: say piscor, piscārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to reap, then the Latin for to hunt, then say piscor, piscārī again

Before you move on

What does piscor, piscārī mean? ("To go fishing".) Say it once more.

172.5 negō, negāre — to deny, to say no

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hunt, then the Latin for to go fishing.

You'll want to know: negō, negāre

negō, negāre — "to deny, to say no".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

negō is built on the negative ne, "not", perhaps through nec, "and not"; how the verb was formed is uncertain. English negative and deny come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: negō, negāre
- Say it: negō, negāre, once more
- Say it: say negō, negāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to hunt, then the Latin for to go fishing, then say negō, negāre again

Before you move on

What does negō, negāre mean? ("To deny, to say no".) Say it once more.

Chapter 173

Health, Brain, Lung, Liver, Kidney

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say health, the brain, a lung, the liver and a kidney.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 173: I can say health, the brain, a lung, the liver and a kidney.

173.1 valētūdō, valētūdinis — health

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go fishing, then the Latin for to deny.

You'll want to know: valētūdō, valētūdinis

valētūdō, valētūdinis — "health".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

valētūdō is built on valeō, "to be strong, to be well" (Lewis & Short), with -tūdō, an ending for a state: one's state of health, good or bad.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: valētūdō, valētūdinis
- Say it: valētūdō, valētūdinis, once more
- Say it: say valētūdō, valētūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for to go fishing, then the Latin for to deny, then say valētūdō, valētūdinis again

Before you move on

What does valētūdō, valētūdinis mean? ("Health".) Say it once more.

173.2 cerebrum, cerebrī — the brain

Before the new one: say the Latin for to deny, then the Latin for health.

You'll want to know: cerebrum, cerebrī

cerebrum, cerebrī — "the brain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cerebrum is inherited from Proto-Italic kerazrom*, "brain", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kerh2s-*, "head" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek karē, "head", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cerebrum, cerebrī
- Say it: cerebrum, cerebrī, once more
- Say it: say cerebrum, cerebrī

- Recall: say the Latin for to deny, then the Latin for health, then say cerebrum, cerebrī again

Before you move on

What does cerebrum, cerebrī mean? ("The brain".) Say it once more.

173.3 pulmō, pulmōnis — a lung

Before the new one: say the Latin for health, then the Latin for the brain.

You'll want to know: pulmō, pulmōnis

pulmō, pulmōnis — "a lung".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulmō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European plewmō*, "lung" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek pleumōn, "lung", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), later reshaped as pneumōn, "lung", by a link with pneō, "to breathe".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pulmō, pulmōnis
- Say it: pulmō, pulmōnis, once more
- Say it: say pulmō, pulmōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for health, then the Latin for the brain, then say pulmō, pulmōnis again

Before you move on

What does pulmō, pulmōnis mean? ("A lung".) Say it once more.

173.4 iecur, iecoris — the liver

Before the new one: say the Latin for the brain, then the Latin for a lung.

You'll want to know: iecur, iecoris

iecur, iecoris — "the liver".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iecur is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European Hyekwr*, "liver" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hēpar, "liver", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iecur, iecoris
- Say it: iecur, iecoris, once more
- Say it: say iecur, iecoris
- Recall: say the Latin for the brain, then the Latin for a lung, then say iecur, iecoris again

Before you move on

What does iecur, iecoris mean? ("The liver".) Say it once more.

173.5 rēn, rēnis — a kidney

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lung, then the Latin for the liver.

You'll want to know: rēn, rēnis

rēn, rēnis — "a kidney".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēn is probably inherited from Proto-Italic hrēn*, "kidney" (EtymDB 2.1), but its deeper origin is unknown. It is mostly used in the plural, rēnēs, "the kidneys".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēn, rēnis
- Say it: rēn, rēnis, once more
- Say it: say rēn, rēnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a lung, then the Latin for the liver, then say rēn, rēnis again

Before you move on

What does rēn, rēnis mean? ("A kidney".) Say it once more.

173.6 Words from chapters 165-168 — a first pass

Say the words for the liver and a kidney.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to light, to put out, to jump, to smile, to shout
- to approve, to mark, to discuss, to promise, to allow
- to burn, to set on fire, to throw away, to calculate, to knock
- to fold, to own, to make ready in advance, to lend, to propose

Before you move on

To light? (accendō, accendere.) To put out? (exstinguō, exstinguere.) To jump? (saliō, salīre.) To smile? (subrīdeō, subrīdēre.) To shout? (clāmō, clāmāre.) To approve? (probō, probāre.) To mark? (signō, signāre.) To discuss? (disputō, disputāre.) To promise? (prōmittō, prōmittere.) To allow? (permittō, permittere.) To burn? (ārdeō, ārdēre.) To set on fire? (incendō, incendere.) To throw away? (abiciō, abicere.) To calculate? (computō, computāre.) To knock? (pulsō, pulsāre.) To fold? (plicō, plicāre.) To own? (possideō, possidēre.) To make ready in advance? (praeparō, praeparāre.) To lend? (commodō, commodāre.) To propose? (prōpōnō, prōpōnere.)

173.7 Words from chapters 169-173 — a second pass

Say the words for to kill and to get used to.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to kill, to get used to, to make haste, to move back, to approach
- to slip, to lighten, to admire, to suspect, to press
- to deceive, to endure, to found; to hide away, to create, to believe
- to sow, to reap, to hunt, to go fishing, to deny
- health, the brain, a lung, the liver, a kidney

Before you move on

To kill? (interficiō, interficere.) To get used to? (cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere.) To make haste? (properō, properāre.) To move back? (recēdō, recēdere.) To approach? (appropinquō, appropinquāre.) To slip? (lābor, lābī.) To lighten? (levō, levāre.) To admire? (admīror, admīrārī.) To suspect?

(suspicor, suspicārī.) To press? (premō, premere.) To deceive? (fallō, fallere.) To endure? (tolerō, tolerāre.) To found; to hide away? (condō, condere.) To create? (creō, creāre.) To believe? (crēdō, crēdere.) To sow? (serō, serere.) To reap? (metō, metere.) To hunt? (vēnor, vēnārī.) To go fishing? (piscor, piscārī.) To deny? (negō, negāre.) Health? (valētūdō, valētūdinis.) The brain? (cerebrum, cerebrī.) A lung? (pulmō, pulmōnis.) The liver? (iecur, iecoris.) A kidney? (rēn, rēnis.)

Chapter 174

Patience, Tear, Laugh, Voice, Mind

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say patience, a tear, a laugh, a voice and mind.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 174: I can say patience, a tear, a laugh, a voice and mind.

174.1 patientia, patientiae — patience

Before the new one: say the Latin for the liver, then the Latin for a kidney.

You'll want to know: patientia, patientiae

patientia, patientiae — "patience".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patientia is built on patior, "to suffer" (Lewis & Short), through patiēns, "enduring", with -ia, an ending for a quality.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patientia, patientiae
- Say it: patientia, patientiae, once more
- Say it: say patientia, patientiae
- Recall: say the Latin for the liver, then the Latin for a kidney, then say patientia, patientiae again

Before you move on

What does patientia, patientiae mean? ("Patience".) Say it once more.

174.2 lacrima, lacrimae — a tear

Before the new one: say the Latin for a kidney, then the Latin for patience.

You'll want to know: lacrima, lacrimae

lacrima, lacrimae — "a tear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lacrima is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dakru-*, "tear" (EtymDB 2.1). Old Latin had dacruma with d (Lewis & Short); Greek dakry, "tear", and English tear are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lacrima, lacrimae
- Say it: lacrima, lacrimae, once more
- Say it: say lacrima, lacrimae

- Recall: say the Latin for a kidney, then the Latin for patience, then say lacrima, lacrimae again

Before you move on

What does lacrima, lacrimae mean? ("A tear".) Say it once more.

174.3 rīsus, rīsūs — a laugh

Before the new one: say the Latin for patience, then the Latin for a tear.

You'll want to know: rīsus, rīsūs

rīsus, rīsūs — "a laugh".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rīsus is built on rīdeō, "to laugh", from its stem rīs-: a laughing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rīsus, rīsūs
- Say it: rīsus, rīsūs, once more
- Say it: say rīsus, rīsūs
- Recall: say the Latin for patience, then the Latin for a tear, then say rīsus, rīsūs again

Before you move on

What does rīsus, rīsūs mean? ("A laugh".) Say it once more.

174.4 vōx, vōcis — a voice

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tear, then the Latin for a laugh.

You'll want to know: vōx, vōcis

vōx, vōcis — "a voice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vōx is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wōkws*, "voice", from wekw-*, "to speak" (EtymDB 2.1); vocō, "to call", is its verb (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vōx, vōcis
- Say it: vōx, vōcis, once more
- Say it: say vōx, vōcis
- Recall: say the Latin for a tear, then the Latin for a laugh, then say vōx, vōcis again

Before you move on

What does vōx, vōcis mean? ("A voice".) Say it once more.

174.5 animus, animī — mind, spirit

Before the new one: say the Latin for a laugh, then the Latin for a voice.

You'll want to know: animus, animī

animus, animī — "mind, spirit".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

animus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2enh1mos*, "breath", from h2enh1-*, "to breathe" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek anemos, "wind", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). anima, "breath, soul", is its partner.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: animus, animī
- Say it: animus, animī, once more
- Say it: say animus, animī
- Recall: say the Latin for a laugh, then the Latin for a voice, then say animus, animī again

Before you move on

What does animus, animī mean? ("Mind, spirit".) Say it once more.

Chapter 175

At last, From now on, Still, Suddenly, Until

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say at last, from now on, still, suddenly and until.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 175: I can say at last, from now on, still, suddenly and until.

175.1 tandem — at last

Before the new one: say the Latin for a voice, then the Latin for mind.

You'll want to know: tandem tandem — "at last".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tandem is tam, "so far", with -dem, a pointing ending (Lewis & Short): so far and no further, at last.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tandem
- Say it: tandem, once more
- Say it: say tandem
- Recall: say the Latin for a voice, then the Latin for mind, then say tandem again

Before you move on

What does tandem mean? ("At last".) Say it once more.

175.2 posthāc — from now on

Before the new one: say the Latin for mind, then the Latin for at last.

You'll want to know: posthāc

posthāc — "from now on".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

posthāc is post, "after", with hāc, "this" (Lewis & Short): after this time.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: posthāc
- Say it: posthāc, once more
- Say it: say posthāc
- Recall: say the Latin for mind, then the Latin for at last, then say posthāc again

Before you move on

What does posthāc mean? ("From now on".) Say it once more.

175.3 adhūc — still, until now

Before the new one: say the Latin for at last, then the Latin for from now on.

You'll want to know: adhūc

adhūc — "still, until now".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

adhūc is ad, "up to", with hūc, "to here" (Lewis & Short): up to this point, first in space, then in time.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: adhūc
- Say it: adhūc, once more
- Say it: say adhūc
- Recall: say the Latin for at last, then the Latin for from now on, then say adhūc again

Before you move on

What does adhūc mean? ("Still, until now".) Say it once more.

175.4 subitō — suddenly

Before the new one: say the Latin for from now on, then the Latin for still.

You'll want to know: subitō

subitō — "suddenly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

subitō comes from the participle of subeō, "to come up from under" (Lewis & Short), subitus, "sudden": coming up unseen.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: subitō
- Say it: subitō, once more
- Say it: say subitō
- Recall: say the Latin for from now on, then the Latin for still, then say subitō again

Before you move on

What does subitō mean? ("Suddenly".) Say it once more.

175.5 dōnec — until; while

Before the new one: say the Latin for still, then the Latin for suddenly.

You'll want to know: dōnec

dōnec — "until; while".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dōnec comes from older dōnicum (Lewis & Short), but how that was formed is uncertain; Lewis & Short suggest an old word for "day" with cum, "when".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dōnec
- Say it: dōnec, once more
- Say it: say dōnec
- Recall: say the Latin for still, then the Latin for suddenly, then say dōnec again

Before you move on

What does dōnec mean? ("Until; while".) Say it once more.

Chapter 176

Earlier, Every year, Now and then, Once, Twice

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say earlier, every year, now and then, once and twice.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 176: I can say earlier, every year, now and then, once and twice.

176.1 prius — earlier, sooner

> Before the new one: say the Latin for suddenly, then the Latin for until; while.

You'll want to know: prius

prius — "earlier, sooner".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prius is the neuter of prior, "former, earlier" (Lewis & Short), used as an adverb. prior is a comparative built on the root of prō, "before".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prius
- Say it: prius, once more
- Say it: say prius
- Recall: say the Latin for suddenly, then the Latin for until; while, then say prius again

Before you move on

What does prius mean? ("Earlier, sooner".) Say it once more.

176.2 quotannīs — every year

Before the new one: say the Latin for until; while, then the Latin for earlier.

You'll want to know: quotannīs

quotannīs — "every year".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quotannīs is quot, "as many as", with annīs, "years" (EtymDB 2.1): in as many years as there are.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quotannīs
- Say it: quotannīs, once more
- Say it: say quotannīs
- Recall: say the Latin for until; while, then the Latin for earlier, then say quotannīs again

Before you move on

What does quotannīs mean? ("Every year".) Say it once more.

176.3 nōnnumquam — now and then

Before the new one: say the Latin for earlier, then the Latin for every year.

You'll want to know: nōnnumquam

nōnnumquam — "now and then".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōnnumquam is nōn, "not", with numquam, "never" (Lewis & Short): not never, so sometimes.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nōnnumquam
- Say it: nōnnumquam, once more
- Say it: say nōnnumquam
- Recall: say the Latin for earlier, then the Latin for every year, then say nōnnumquam again

Before you move on

What does nōnnumquam mean? ("Now and then".) Say it once more.

176.4 semel — once, a single time

Before the new one: say the Latin for every year, then the Latin for now and then.

You'll want to know: semel

semel — "once, a single time".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

semel is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sm-meh1lom*, "one time" (EtymDB 2.1), built on the root for "one"; simplex, "simple", and singulus, "single", share the root (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: semel
- Say it: semel, once more
- Say it: say semel
- Recall: say the Latin for every year, then the Latin for now and then, then say semel again

Before you move on

What does semel mean? ("Once, a single time".) Say it once more.

176.5 bis — twice

Before the new one: say the Latin for now and then, then the Latin for once.

You'll want to know: bis

bis — "twice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bis comes from older duis, "two times" (Lewis & Short), built on duo, "two"; Latin turned an initial dw into b, as in bellum, "war", from older duellum.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bis
- Say it: bis, once more
- Say it: say bis
- Recall: say the Latin for now and then, then the Latin for once, then say bis again

Before you move on

What does bis mean? ("Twice".) Say it once more.

Chapter 177

Far, Elsewhere, Over there, Within, Out of doors

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say far, elsewhere, over there, within and out of doors.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 177: I can say far, elsewhere, over there, within and out of doors.

177.1 longē — far, by far

Before the new one: say the Latin for once, then the Latin for twice.

You'll want to know: longē

longē — "far, by far".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

longē is the adverb of longus, "long" (Lewis & Short), with -ē, the adverb ending: at length, far off, and so by far.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: longē
- Say it: longē, once more
- Say it: say longē
- Recall: say the Latin for once, then the Latin for twice, then say longē again

Before you move on

What does longē mean? ("Far, by far".) Say it once more.

177.2 alibī — elsewhere

Before the new one: say the Latin for twice, then the Latin for far.

You'll want to know: alibī

alibī — "elsewhere".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

alibī is contracted from alius, "other", and ibī, "there" (Lewis & Short): in another place. English alibi is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: alibī
- Say it: alibī, once more
- Say it: say alibī
- Recall: say the Latin for twice, then the Latin for far, then say alibī again

Before you move on

What does alibī mean? ("Elsewhere".) Say it once more.

177.3 illīc — over there

Before the new one: say the Latin for far, then the Latin for elsewhere.

You'll want to know: illīc

illīc — "over there".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

illīc is ille, "that", with the pointing particle -ce, "here" (Lewis & Short): there, at that place.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: illīc
- Say it: illīc, once more
- Say it: say illīc
- Recall: say the Latin for far, then the Latin for elsewhere, then say illīc again

Before you move on

What does illīc mean? ("Over there".) Say it once more.

177.4 intus — within, indoors

Before the new one: say the Latin for elsewhere, then the Latin for over there.

You'll want to know: intus

intus — "within, indoors".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

intus is in, "in", with -tus, an old ending meaning "from" (Lewis & Short); Greek entos, "within", is built the same way.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: intus
- Say it: intus, once more
- Say it: say intus
- Recall: say the Latin for elsewhere, then the Latin for over there, then say intus again

Before you move on

What does intus mean? ("Within, indoors".) Say it once more.

177.5 forīs — out of doors

Before the new one: say the Latin for over there, then the Latin for within.

You'll want to know: forīs

forīs — "out of doors".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

forīs is an old case form of foris, "a door" (Lewis & Short): at the doors, so outside. The word for door is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhwer-*, "door" (EtymDB 2.1), and English door is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: forīs
- Say it: forīs, once more
- Say it: say forīs
- Recall: say the Latin for over there, then the Latin for within, then say forīs again

Before you move on

What does forīs mean? ("Out of doors".) Say it once more.

Chapter 178

Therefore, However, Although, Even if, Unless

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say therefore, however, although, even if and unless.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 178: I can say therefore, however, although, even if and unless.

178.1 igitur — therefore

Before the new one: say the Latin for within, then the Latin for out of doors.

You'll want to know: igitur

igitur — "therefore".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

igitur has no sure origin; Lewis & Short build it from the pronoun stem of is, "he, that", with old adverb endings, but this is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: igitur
- Say it: igitur, once more
- Say it: say igitur
- Recall: say the Latin for within, then the Latin for out of doors, then say igitur again

Before you move on

What does igitur mean? ("Therefore".) Say it once more.

178.2 tamen — however, nevertheless

Before the new one: say the Latin for out of doors, then the Latin for therefore.

You'll want to know: tamen

tamen — "however, nevertheless".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tamen probably begins with tam, "so" (Lewis & Short), but the ending is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tamen
- Say it: tamen, once more
- Say it: say tamen
- Recall: say the Latin for out of doors, then the Latin for therefore, then say tamen again

Before you move on

What does tamen mean? ("However, nevertheless".) Say it once more.

178.3 quamquam — although

Before the new one: say the Latin for therefore, then the Latin for however.

You'll want to know: quamquam

quamquam — "although".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quamquam is quam, "how, as", doubled (Lewis & Short): however much, so although.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quamquam
- Say it: quamquam, once more
- Say it: say quamquam
- Recall: say the Latin for therefore, then the Latin for however, then say quamquam again

Before you move on

What does quamquam mean? ("Although".) Say it once more.

178.4 etsī — even if

Before the new one: say the Latin for however, then the Latin for although.

You'll want to know: etsī

etsī — "even if".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

etsī is et, "even", with sī, "if" (EtymDB 2.1): even if.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: etsī
- Say it: etsī, once more
- Say it: say etsī
- Recall: say the Latin for however, then the Latin for although, then say etsī again

Before you move on

What does etsī mean? ("Even if".) Say it once more.

178.5 nisi — unless, if not

Before the new one: say the Latin for although, then the Latin for even if.

You'll want to know: nisi

nisi — "unless, if not".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nisi is sī, "if" (EtymDB 2.1), with the negative ne, "not", in front: if not.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nisi
- Say it: nisi, once more
- Say it: say nisi
- Recall: say the Latin for although, then the Latin for even if, then say nisi again

Before you move on

What does nisi mean? ("Unless, if not".) Say it once more.

Chapter 179

Especially, Rather, Most, Very, Quite

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say especially, rather, most, very and quite.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 179: I can say especially, rather, most, very and quite.

179.1 praesertim — especially

Before the new one: say the Latin for even if, then the Latin for unless.

You'll want to know: praesertim

praesertim — "especially".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praesertim is built on praeserō, "to put in front of a row" (Lewis & Short), from prae, "before", and serō, "to join, to line up", with -tim, an adverb ending: placed first, so especially.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: praesertim
- Say it: praesertim, once more
- Say it: say praesertim
- Recall: say the Latin for even if, then the Latin for unless, then say praesertim again

Before you move on

What does praesertim mean? ("Especially".) Say it once more.

179.2 potius — rather

Before the new one: say the Latin for unless, then the Latin for especially.

You'll want to know: potius

potius — "rather".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

potius is the comparative adverb of potis, "able, powerful" (Lewis & Short): more powerfully, so rather.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: potius
- Say it: potius, once more
- Say it: say potius
- Recall: say the Latin for unless, then the Latin for especially, then say potius again

Before you move on

What does potius mean? ("Rather".) Say it once more.

179.3 maximē — most, especially

Before the new one: say the Latin for especially, then the Latin for rather.

You'll want to know: maximē

maximē — "most, especially".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maximē is the adverb of the superlative of magnus, "big" (Lewis & Short): maximus, "greatest".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: maximē
- Say it: maximē, once more
- Say it: say maximē
- Recall: say the Latin for especially, then the Latin for rather, then say maximē again

Before you move on

What does maximē mean? ("Most, especially".) Say it once more.

179.4 valdē — very

Before the new one: say the Latin for rather, then the Latin for most.

You'll want to know: valdē

valdē — "very".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

valdē is a shortened adverb of validus, "strong" (Lewis & Short): strongly, so very.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: valdē
- Say it: valdē, once more
- Say it: say valdē
- Recall: say the Latin for rather, then the Latin for most, then say valdē again

Before you move on

What does valdē mean? ("Very".) Say it once more.

179.5 admodum — quite, very

Before the new one: say the Latin for most, then the Latin for very.

You'll want to know: admodum

admodum — "quite, very".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

admodum is ad, "up to", with modum, "the measure" (Lewis & Short): up to the full measure, so quite.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: admodum
- Say it: admodum, once more
- Say it: say admodum
- Recall: say the Latin for most, then the Latin for very, then say admodum again

Before you move on

What does admodum mean? ("Quite, very".) Say it once more.

Chapter 180

Convenient, Polite, Of the country, Cheerful, Shy

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say convenient, polite, of the country, cheerful and shy.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 180: I can say convenient, polite, of the country, cheerful and shy.

180.1 commodus, commoda, commodum — convenient, comfortable

Before the new one: say the Latin for very, then the Latin for quite.

You'll want to know: commodus, commoda, commodum

commodus, commoda, commodum — "convenient, comfortable".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commodus is com-, "with", and modus, "measure" (Lewis & Short): having its due measure, so fitting.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: commodus, commoda, commodum
- Say it: commodus, commoda, commodum, once more
- Say it: say commodus, commoda, commodum
- Recall: say the Latin for very, then the Latin for quite, then say commodus, commoda, commodum again

Before you move on

What does commodus, commoda, commodum mean? ("Convenient, comfortable".) Say it once more.

180.2 urbānus, urbāna, urbānum — polite, of the city

Before the new one: say the Latin for quite, then the Latin for convenient.

You'll want to know: urbānus, urbāna, urbānum

urbānus, urbāna, urbānum — "polite, of the city".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

urbānus is built on urbs, "a city" (Lewis & Short), with -ānus, "belonging to": of the city, then polished, witty. English urbane and urban both come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: urbānus, urbāna, urbānum
- Say it: urbānus, urbāna, urbānum, once more
- Say it: say urbānus, urbāna, urbānum

- Recall: say the Latin for quite, then the Latin for convenient, then say urbānus, urbāna, urbānum again

Before you move on

What does urbānus, urbāna, urbānum mean? ("Polite, of the city".) Say it once more.

180.3 rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum — of the country, boorish

Before the new one: say the Latin for convenient, then the Latin for polite.

You'll want to know: rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum

rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum — "of the country, boorish".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rūsticus is built on rūs, "the countryside" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European Hrewos*, "open space, field" (EtymDB 2.1). English room is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum
- Say it: rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum, once more
- Say it: say rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum
- Recall: say the Latin for convenient, then the Latin for polite, then say rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum again

Before you move on

What does rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum mean? ("Of the country, boorish".) Say it once more.

180.4 hilaris, hilare — cheerful

Before the new one: say the Latin for polite, then the Latin for of the country.

You'll want to know: hilaris, hilare

hilaris, hilare — "cheerful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hilaris was borrowed from Greek hilaros, "cheerful" (Lewis & Short), from hilaos, "gracious, kindly" (EtymDB 2.1). English hilarious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hilaris, hilare
- Say it: hilaris, hilare, once more
- Say it: say hilaris, hilare
- Recall: say the Latin for polite, then the Latin for of the country, then say hilaris, hilare again

Before you move on

What does hilaris, hilare mean? ("Cheerful".) Say it once more.

180.5 verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum — shy, modest

Before the new one: say the Latin for of the country, then the Latin for cheerful.

You'll want to know: verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum

verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum — "shy, modest".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

verēcundus is built on vereor, "to stand in awe of, to fear" (Lewis & Short), with -cundus, an ending for a lasting disposition. vereor is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wer-*, "to guard, to protect" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum
- Say it: verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum, once more
- Say it: say verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum
- Recall: say the Latin for of the country, then the Latin for cheerful, then say verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum again

Before you move on

What does verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum mean? ("Shy, modest".) Say it once more.

Chapter 181

Free of charge, Fresh, Raw, Cooked, Distant

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say free of charge, fresh, raw, cooked and distant.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 181: I can say free of charge, fresh, raw, cooked and distant.

181.1 grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum — free of charge

Before the new one: say the Latin for cheerful, then the Latin for shy.

You'll want to know: grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum

grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum — "free of charge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

grātuītus is built on grātia, "favour" (Lewis & Short): done as a favour, without pay. English gratuitous and gratis belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum
- Say it: grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum, once more
- Say it: say grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum
- Recall: say the Latin for cheerful, then the Latin for shy, then say grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum again

Before you move on

What does grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum mean? ("Free of charge".) Say it once more.

181.2 recēns, recentis — fresh, recent

Before the new one: say the Latin for shy, then the Latin for free of charge.

You'll want to know: recēns, recentis

recēns, recentis — "fresh, recent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

recēns has no sure origin; Greek kainos, "new", is often compared (Lewis & Short), but the details are uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: recēns, recentis
- Say it: recēns, recentis, once more
- Say it: say recēns, recentis
- Recall: say the Latin for shy, then the Latin for free of charge, then say recēns, recentis again

Before you move on

What does recēns, recentis mean? ("Fresh, recent".) Say it once more.

181.3 crūdus, crūda, crūdum — raw

Before the new one: say the Latin for free of charge, then the Latin for fresh.

You'll want to know: crūdus, crūda, crūdum

crūdus, crūda, crūdum — "raw".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crūdus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European krewh2-*, "raw flesh, blood" (EtymDB 2.1); cruor, "blood", is its cousin in Latin (Lewis & Short), and English raw is a cousin too.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crūdus, crūda, crūdum
- Say it: crūdus, crūda, crūdum, once more
- Say it: say crūdus, crūda, crūdum
- Recall: say the Latin for free of charge, then the Latin for fresh, then say crūdus, crūda, crūdum again

Before you move on

What does crūdus, crūda, crūdum mean? ("Raw".) Say it once more.

181.4 coctus, cocta, coctum — cooked

Before the new one: say the Latin for fresh, then the Latin for raw.

You'll want to know: coctus, cocta, coctum

coctus, cocta, coctum — "cooked".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coctus is the past participle of coquō, "to cook" (Lewis & Short): cooked.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: coctus, cocta, coctum
- Say it: coctus, cocta, coctum, once more
- Say it: say coctus, cocta, coctum
- Recall: say the Latin for fresh, then the Latin for raw, then say coctus, cocta, coctum again

Before you move on

What does coctus, cocta, coctum mean? ("Cooked".) Say it once more.

181.5 longinquus, longinqua, longinquum — distant

Before the new one: say the Latin for raw, then the Latin for cooked.

You'll want to know: longinquus, longinqua, longinquum

longinquus, longinqua, longinquum — "distant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

longinquus is built on longus, "long" (Lewis & Short), with an ending also found in propinquus, "near": far off.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: longinquus, longinqua, longinquum
- Say it: longinquus, longinqua, longinquum, once more
- Say it: say longinquus, longinqua, longinquum
- Recall: say the Latin for raw, then the Latin for cooked, then say longinquus, longinqua, longinquum again

Before you move on

What does longinquus, longinqua, longinquum mean? ("Distant".) Say it once more.

Chapter 182

Public, Private, Common, Hollow, Heavy

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say public, private, common, hollow and heavy.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 182: I can say public, private, common, hollow and heavy.

182.1 pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum — public

Before the new one: say the Latin for cooked, then the Latin for distant.

You'll want to know: pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum

pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum — "public".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūblicus comes from older poplicus, "of the people", as inscriptions write it (Lewis & Short), built on populus, "the people"; its spelling was probably influenced by pūbēs, "the grown men".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum
- Say it: pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum, once more
- Say it: say pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum
- Recall: say the Latin for cooked, then the Latin for distant, then say pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum again

Before you move on

What does pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum mean? ("Public".) Say it once more.

182.2 prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum — private

Before the new one: say the Latin for distant, then the Latin for public.

You'll want to know: prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum

prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum — "private".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīvātus is the past participle of prīvō, "to set apart, to deprive" (Lewis & Short), from prīvus, "single, one's own": set apart from the public.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum
- Say it: prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum, once more
- Say it: say prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum

- Recall: say the Latin for distant, then the Latin for public, then say prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum again

Before you move on

What does prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum mean? ("Private".) Say it once more.

182.3 commūnis, commūne — common, shared

Before the new one: say the Latin for public, then the Latin for private.

You'll want to know: commūnis, commūne

commūnis, commūne — "common, shared".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commūnis is inherited; Old Latin wrote comoinis, and it is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kom-moyni-, "held in common", from mey-, "to exchange" (EtymDB 2.1). mūnus, "a duty, a gift", has the same root (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: commūnis, commūne
- Say it: commūnis, commūne, once more
- Say it: say commūnis, commūne
- Recall: say the Latin for public, then the Latin for private, then say commūnis, commūne again

Before you move on

What does commūnis, commūne mean? ("Common, shared".) Say it once more.

182.4 inānis, ināne — hollow, vain

Before the new one: say the Latin for private, then the Latin for common.

You'll want to know: inānis, ināne

inānis, ināne — "hollow, vain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inānis has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English inane comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inānis, ināne
- Say it: inānis, ināne, once more
- Say it: say inānis, ināne
- Recall: say the Latin for private, then the Latin for common, then say inānis, ināne again

Before you move on

What does inānis, ināne mean? ("Hollow, vain".) Say it once more.

182.5 gravis, grave — heavy, serious

Before the new one: say the Latin for common, then the Latin for hollow.

You'll want to know: gravis, grave

gravis, grave — "heavy, serious".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gravis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwreh2us*, "heavy" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek barys, "heavy", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English gravity and grave, "serious", come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gravis, grave
- Say it: gravis, grave, once more
- Say it: say gravis, grave
- Recall: say the Latin for common, then the Latin for hollow, then say gravis, grave again

Before you move on

What does gravis, grave mean? ("Heavy, serious".) Say it once more.

182.6 Words from chapters 174-177 — a first pass

Say the words for hollow and heavy.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- patience, a tear, a laugh, a voice, mind
- at last, from now on, still, suddenly, until; while
- earlier, every year, now and then, once, twice
- far, elsewhere, over there, within, out of doors

Before you move on

Patience? (patientia, patientiae.) A tear? (lacrima, lacrimae.) A laugh? (rīsus, rīsūs.) A voice? (vōx, vōcis.) Mind? (animus, animī.) At last? (tandem.) From now on? (posthāc.) Still? (adhūc.) Suddenly? (subitō.) Until; while? (dōnec.) Earlier? (prius.) Every year? (quotannīs.) Now and then? (nōnnumquam.) Once? (semel.) Twice? (bis.) Far? (longē.) Elsewhere? (alibī.) Over there? (illīc.) Within? (intus.) Out of doors? (forīs.)

182.7 Words from chapters 178-182 — a second pass

Say the words for therefore and however.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- therefore, however, although, even if, unless
- especially, rather, most, very, quite
- convenient, polite, of the country, cheerful, shy
- free of charge, fresh, raw, cooked, distant
- public, private, common, hollow, heavy

Before you move on

Therefore? (igitur.) However? (tamen.) Although? (quamquam.) Even if? (etsī.) Unless? (nisi.) Especially? (praesertim.) Rather? (potius.) Most? (maximē.) Very? (valdē.) Quite? (admodum.) Convenient? (commodus, commoda, commodum.) Polite? (urbānus, urbāna, urbānum.) Of the country? (rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum.) Cheerful? (hilaris, hilare.) Shy? (verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum.) Free of charge? (grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum.) Fresh? (recēns, recentis.) Raw? (crūdus, crūda, crūdum.) Cooked? (coctus, cocta, coctum.) Distant? (longinquus, longinqua, longinquum.) Public? (pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum.) Private? (prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum.) Common? (commūnis, commūne.) Hollow? (inānis, ināne.) Heavy? (gravis, grave.)

Chapter 183

Known, Famous, Honourable, Middle, Highest

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say known, famous, honourable, middle and highest.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 183: I can say known, famous, honourable, middle and highest.

183.1 nōtus, nōta, nōtum — known, famous

Before the new one: say the Latin for hollow, vain, then the Latin for heavy, serious.

You'll want to know: nōtus, nōta, nōtum

nōtus, nōta, nōtum — "known, famous".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōtus is the past participle of nōscō, "to get to know" (Lewis & Short): known. nōscō, older gnōscō, is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gneh3-*, "to know".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nōtus, nōta, nōtum
- Say it: nōtus, nōta, nōtum, once more
- Say it: say nōtus, nōta, nōtum
- Recall: say the Latin for hollow, vain, then the Latin for heavy, serious, then say nōtus, nōta, nōtum again

Before you move on

What does nōtus, nōta, nōtum mean? ("Known, famous".) Say it once more.

183.2 celeber, celebris, celebre — famous, crowded

Before the new one: say the Latin for heavy, serious, then the Latin for known.

You'll want to know: celeber, celebris, celebre

celeber, celebris, celebre — "famous, crowded".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

celeber has no sure origin; it first meant "crowded, much visited", and Lewis & Short's comparison with a root for hearing is uncertain. English celebrate comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: celeber, celebris, celebre
- Say it: celeber, celebris, celebre, once more
- Say it: say celeber, celebris, celebre

- Recall: say the Latin for heavy, serious, then the Latin for known, then say celeber, celebris, celebre again

Before you move on

What does celeber, celebris, celebre mean? ("Famous, crowded".) Say it once more.

183.3 honestus, honesta, honestum — honourable

Before the new one: say the Latin for known, then the Latin for famous.

You'll want to know: honestus, honesta, honestum

honestus, honesta, honestum — "honourable".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

honestus is built on honōs, "honour, office" (Lewis & Short), the older form of honor: endowed with honour. Where honōs comes from is unknown.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: honestus, honesta, honestum
- Say it: honestus, honesta, honestum, once more
- Say it: say honestus, honesta, honestum
- Recall: say the Latin for known, then the Latin for famous, then say honestus, honesta, honestum again

Before you move on

What does honestus, honesta, honestum mean? ("Honourable".) Say it once more.

183.4 medius, media, medium — middle, the middle of

Before the new one: say the Latin for famous, then the Latin for honourable.

You'll want to know: medius, media, medium

medius, media, medium — "middle, the middle of".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

medius is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European medhyos*, "middle" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek mesos, "middle", and English mid are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: medius, media, medium
- Say it: medius, media, medium, once more
- Say it: say medius, media, medium
- Recall: say the Latin for famous, then the Latin for honourable, then say medius, media, medium again

Before you move on

What does medius, media, medium mean? ("Middle, the middle of".) Say it once more.

183.5 summus, summa, summum — highest, the top of

Before the new one: say the Latin for honourable, then the Latin for middle.

You'll want to know: summus, summa, summum

summus, summa, summum — "highest, the top of".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

summus is the superlative belonging to superus, "upper" (Lewis & Short), from an older supimos*, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)up-*, "up, over" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: summus, summa, summum
- Say it: summus, summa, summum, once more
- Say it: say summus, summa, summum
- Recall: say the Latin for honourable, then the Latin for middle, then say summus, summa, summum again

Before you move on

What does summus, summa, summum mean? ("Highest, the top of".) Say it once more.

Chapter 184

Wasteful, Moderate, Eloquent, Mute, Lame

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say wasteful, moderate, eloquent, mute and lame.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 184: I can say wasteful, moderate, eloquent, mute and lame.

184.1 prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum — wasteful

Before the new one: say the Latin for middle, then the Latin for highest.

You'll want to know: prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum

prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum — "wasteful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōdigus is built on prōdigō, "to drive forth, to squander" (Lewis & Short), from prōd-, "forth", and agō, "to drive".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum
- Say it: prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum, once more
- Say it: say prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum
- Recall: say the Latin for middle, then the Latin for highest, then say prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum again

Before you move on

What does prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum mean? ("Wasteful".) Say it once more.

184.2 modestus, modesta, modestum — moderate, restrained

Before the new one: say the Latin for highest, then the Latin for wasteful.

You'll want to know: modestus, modesta, modestum

modestus, modesta, modestum — "moderate, restrained".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

modestus is built on modus, "measure" (Lewis & Short): keeping to measure. modus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European med-*, "to measure" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: modestus, modesta, modestum
- Say it: modestus, modesta, modestum, once more
- Say it: say modestus, modesta, modestum

- Recall: say the Latin for highest, then the Latin for wasteful, then say modestus, modesta, modestum again

Before you move on

What does modestus, modesta, modestum mean? ("Moderate, restrained".) Say it once more.

184.3 fācundus, fācunda, fācundum — eloquent

Before the new one: say the Latin for wasteful, then the Latin for moderate.

You'll want to know: fācundus, fācunda, fācundum

fācundus, fācunda, fācundum — "eloquent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fācundus is built on fārī, "to speak" (Lewis & Short), with -cundus, an ending for a lasting disposition: given to speaking well.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fācundus, fācunda, fācundum
- Say it: fācundus, fācunda, fācundum, once more
- Say it: say fācundus, fācunda, fācundum
- Recall: say the Latin for wasteful, then the Latin for moderate, then say fācundus, fācunda, fācundum again

Before you move on

What does fācundus, fācunda, fācundum mean? ("Eloquent".) Say it once more.

184.4 mūtus, mūta, mūtum — mute, silent

Before the new one: say the Latin for moderate, then the Latin for eloquent.

You'll want to know: mūtus, mūta, mūtum

mūtus, mūta, mūtum — "mute, silent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūtus is probably built on an imitative sound, the mu of closed lips; Sanskrit mūka-, "dumb", is often compared (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mūtus, mūta, mūtum
- Say it: mūtus, mūta, mūtum, once more
- Say it: say mūtus, mūta, mūtum
- Recall: say the Latin for moderate, then the Latin for eloquent, then say mūtus, mūta, mūtum again

Before you move on

What does mūtus, mūta, mūtum mean? ("Mute, silent".) Say it once more.

184.5 claudus, clauda, claudum — lame

Before the new one: say the Latin for eloquent, then the Latin for mute.

You'll want to know: claudus, clauda, claudum

claudus, clauda, claudum — "lame".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

claudus has no sure origin; Lewis & Short link it with claudō, "to shut, to hem in", but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: claudus, clauda, claudum
- Say it: claudus, clauda, claudum, once more
- Say it: say claudus, clauda, claudum
- Recall: say the Latin for eloquent, then the Latin for mute, then say claudus, clauda, claudum again

Before you move on

What does claudus, clauda, claudum mean? ("Lame".) Say it once more.

Chapter 185

Storeroom, Study, Colonnaded garden, Rain basin, Foundation

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a storeroom, a study, a colonnaded garden, a rain basin and a foundation.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 185: I can say a storeroom, a study, a colonnaded garden, a rain basin and a foundation.

185.1 cella, cellae — a storeroom, a small room

Before the new one: say the Latin for mute, then the Latin for lame.

You'll want to know: cella, cellae

cella, cellae — "a storeroom, a small room".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cella is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kelneh2*, "a small room" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for hiding seen in cēlō, "to hide" (Lewis & Short). English cell comes from it, and English hall is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cella, cellae
- Say it: cella, cellae, once more
- Say it: say cella, cellae
- Recall: say the Latin for mute, then the Latin for lame, then say cella, cellae again

Before you move on

What does cella, cellae mean? ("A storeroom, a small room".) Say it once more.

185.2 tablīnum, tablīnī — a study (room)

Before the new one: say the Latin for lame, then the Latin for a storeroom.

You'll want to know: tablīnum, tablīnī

tablīnum, tablīnī — "a study (room)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tablīnum is built on tabula, "a writing tablet, records" (EtymDB 2.1): the room where the family's records were kept.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tablīnum, tablīnī
- Say it: tablīnum, tablīnī, once more
- Say it: say tablīnum, tablīnī
- Recall: say the Latin for lame, then the Latin for a storeroom, then say tablīnum, tablīnī again

Before you move on

What does tablīnum, tablīnī mean? ("A study (room)".) Say it once more.

185.3 peristylium, peristyliī — a colonnaded garden

Before the new one: say the Latin for a storeroom, then the Latin for a study.

You'll want to know: peristylium, peristyliī

peristylium, peristyliī — "a colonnaded garden".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

peristylium was borrowed from Greek peristylion, "a place ringed with columns" (Lewis & Short), from peri, "around", and stylos, "a column".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: peristylium, peristyliī
- Say it: peristylium, peristyliī, once more
- Say it: say peristylium, peristyliī
- Recall: say the Latin for a storeroom, then the Latin for a study, then say peristylium, peristyliī again

Before you move on

What does peristylium, peristyliī mean? ("A colonnaded garden".) Say it once more.

185.4 impluvium, impluviī — a rain basin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a study, then the Latin for a colonnaded garden.

You'll want to know: impluvium, impluviī

impluvium, impluviī — "a rain basin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

impluvium is built on impluō, "to rain into" (Lewis & Short), from in, "into", and pluit, "it rains": the basin the rain falls into.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: impluvium, impluviī
- Say it: impluvium, impluviī, once more
- Say it: say impluvium, impluviī
- Recall: say the Latin for a study, then the Latin for a colonnaded garden, then say impluvium, impluviī again

Before you move on

What does impluvium, impluviī mean? ("A rain basin".) Say it once more.

185.5 fundāmentum, fundāmentī — a foundation

Before the new one: say the Latin for a colonnaded garden, then the Latin for a rain basin.

You'll want to know: fundāmentum, fundāmentī

fundāmentum, fundāmentī — "a foundation".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fundāmentum is built on fundō, "to lay the bottom, to found", from fundus, "bottom" (EtymDB 2.1), with -mentum, an ending for a thing. fundus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhudhmen*, "bottom" (EtymDB 2.1); English bottom is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fundāmentum, fundāmentī
- Say it: fundāmentum, fundāmentī, once more
- Say it: say fundāmentum, fundāmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a colonnaded garden, then the Latin for a rain basin, then say fundāmentum, fundāmentī again

Before you move on

What does fundāmentum, fundāmentī mean? ("A foundation".) Say it once more.

Chapter 186

Helmsman, Market, Weight, Measure, Pound

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a helmsman, a market, a weight, a measure and a pound.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 186: I can say a helmsman, a market, a weight, a measure and a pound.

186.1 gubernātor, gubernātōris — a helmsman

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rain basin, then the Latin for a foundation.

You'll want to know: gubernātor, gubernātōris

gubernātor, gubernātōris — "a helmsman".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gubernātor is built on gubernō, "to steer" (EtymDB 2.1), a verb Latin took from Greek kybernaō, "to steer, to pilot", with -tor, "one who does it". English governor comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gubernātor, gubernātōris
- Say it: gubernātor, gubernātōris, once more
- Say it: say gubernātor, gubernātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a rain basin, then the Latin for a foundation, then say gubernātor, gubernātōris again

Before you move on

What does gubernātor, gubernātōris mean? ("A helmsman".) Say it once more.

186.2 mercātus, mercātūs — a market, a fair

Before the new one: say the Latin for a foundation, then the Latin for a helmsman.

You'll want to know: mercātus, mercātūs

mercātus, mercātūs — "a market, a fair".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mercātus is built on mercor, "to trade" (EtymDB 2.1), from merx, "goods". English market comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mercātus, mercātūs
- Say it: mercātus, mercātūs, once more
- Say it: say mercātus, mercātūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a foundation, then the Latin for a helmsman, then say mercātus, mercātūs again

Before you move on

What does mercātus, mercātūs mean? ("A market, a fair".) Say it once more.

186.3 pondus, ponderis — a weight

Before the new one: say the Latin for a helmsman, then the Latin for a market.

You'll want to know: pondus, ponderis

pondus, ponderis — "a weight".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pondus belongs with pendō, "to weigh" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)pend-*, "to stretch, to pull" (EtymDB 2.1). English pound comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pondus, ponderis
- Say it: pondus, ponderis, once more
- Say it: say pondus, ponderis
- Recall: say the Latin for a helmsman, then the Latin for a market, then say pondus, ponderis again

Before you move on

What does pondus, ponderis mean? ("A weight".) Say it once more.

186.4 mēnsūra, mēnsūrae — a measure

Before the new one: say the Latin for a market, then the Latin for a weight.

You'll want to know: mēnsūra, mēnsūrae

mēnsūra, mēnsūrae — "a measure".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mēnsūra is built on mēnsus, "measured", the participle of mētior, "to measure" (EtymDB 2.1), with -ūra, an ending for an act or result.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mēnsūra, mēnsūrae
- Say it: mēnsūra, mēnsūrae, once more
- Say it: say mēnsūra, mēnsūrae
- Recall: say the Latin for a market, then the Latin for a weight, then say mēnsūra, mēnsūrae again

Before you move on

What does mēnsūra, mēnsūrae mean? ("A measure".) Say it once more.

186.5 lībra, lībrae — a pound; a pair of scales

Before the new one: say the Latin for a weight, then the Latin for a measure.

You'll want to know: lībra, lībrae

lībra, lībrae — "a pound; a pair of scales".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lībra has no sure origin; Greek litra, "a pound", is often compared (Lewis & Short), and both may come from a common Mediterranean word. The abbreviation lb for the pound comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lībra, lībrae
- Say it: lībra, lībrae, once more
- Say it: say lībra, lībrae
- Recall: say the Latin for a weight, then the Latin for a measure, then say lībra, lībrae again

Before you move on

What does lībra, lībrae mean? ("A pound; a pair of scales".) Say it once more.

Chapter 187

Peace, Leader, Victory, Freedom, Glory

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say peace, a leader, victory, freedom and glory.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 187: I can say peace, a leader, victory, freedom and glory.

187.1 pāx, pācis — peace

Before the new one: say the Latin for a measure, then the Latin for a pound; a pair of scales.

You'll want to know: pāx, pācis pāx, pācis — "peace".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāx is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peh2k-*, "to fasten, to fix" (EtymDB 2.1): peace as a pact fixed between two sides. pacīscō, "to make a bargain", is from the same root (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāx, pācis
- Say it: pāx, pācis, once more
- Say it: say pāx, pācis
- Recall: say the Latin for a measure, then the Latin for a pound; a pair of scales, then say pāx, pācis again

Before you move on

What does pāx, pācis mean? ("Peace".) Say it once more.

187.2 dux, ducis — a leader

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pound; a pair of scales, then the Latin for peace.

You'll want to know: dux, ducis

dux, ducis — "a leader".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dux is built on dūcō, "to lead" (Lewis & Short): the one who leads. English duke comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dux, ducis
- Say it: dux, ducis, once more
- Say it: say dux, ducis
- Recall: say the Latin for a pound; a pair of scales, then the Latin for peace, then say dux, ducis again

Before you move on

What does dux, ducis mean? ("A leader".) Say it once more.

187.3 victōria, victōriae — victory

Before the new one: say the Latin for peace, then the Latin for a leader.

You'll want to know: victōria, victōriae

victōria, victōriae — "victory".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

victōria is built on victor, "a winner" (Lewis & Short), from vincō, "to win".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: victōria, victōriae
- Say it: victōria, victōriae, once more
- Say it: say victōria, victōriae
- Recall: say the Latin for peace, then the Latin for a leader, then say victōria, victōriae again

Before you move on

What does victōria, victōriae mean? ("Victory".) Say it once more.

187.4 lībertās, lībertātis — freedom

Before the new one: say the Latin for a leader, then the Latin for victory.

You'll want to know: lībertās, lībertātis

lībertās, lībertātis — "freedom".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lībertās is built on līber, "free" (Lewis & Short), with -tās, an ending for a quality. līber is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1lewdheros*, "free" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lībertās, lībertātis
- Say it: lībertās, lībertātis, once more
- Say it: say lībertās, lībertātis
- Recall: say the Latin for a leader, then the Latin for victory, then say lībertās, lībertātis again

Before you move on

What does lībertās, lībertātis mean? ("Freedom".) Say it once more.

187.5 glōria, glōriae — glory

Before the new one: say the Latin for victory, then the Latin for freedom.

You'll want to know: glōria, glōriae

glōria, glōriae — "glory".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

glōria has no sure origin. Lewis & Short connect it with Greek kleos, "fame", and EtymDB 2.1 records a reconstructed older gnōria*. Some tie that form to the root of nōscō, "to know"; neither account is settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: glōria, glōriae
- Say it: glōria, glōriae, once more
- Say it: say glōria, glōriae
- Recall: say the Latin for victory, then the Latin for freedom, then say glōria, glōriae again

Before you move on

What does glōria, glōriae mean? ("Glory".) Say it once more.

Chapter 188

Architect, Weaver, Potter, Farm manager, Tenant farmer

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say an architect, a weaver, a potter, a farm manager and a tenant farmer.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 188: I can say an architect, a weaver, a potter, a farm manager and a tenant farmer.

188.1 architectus, architectī — an architect

Before the new one: say the Latin for freedom, then the Latin for glory.

You'll want to know: architectus, architectī

architectus, architectī — "an architect".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

architectus was borrowed from Greek arkhitektōn, "a master builder" (Lewis & Short), from arkhi-, "chief", and tektōn, "builder" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: architectus, architectī
- Say it: architectus, architectī, once more
- Say it: say architectus, architectī
- Recall: say the Latin for freedom, then the Latin for glory, then say architectus, architectī again

Before you move on

What does architectus, architectī mean? ("An architect".) Say it once more.

188.2 textor, textōris — a weaver

Before the new one: say the Latin for glory, then the Latin for an architect.

You'll want to know: textor, textōris

textor, textōris — "a weaver".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

textor is built on texō, "to weave" (Lewis & Short), with -tor, "one who does it". texō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European teks-*, "to weave, to fashion"; English text and textile come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: textor, textōris
- Say it: textor, textōris, once more
- Say it: say textor, textōris

- Recall: say the Latin for glory, then the Latin for an architect, then say textor, textōris again

Before you move on

What does textor, textōris mean? ("A weaver".) Say it once more.

188.3 figulus, figulī — a potter

Before the new one: say the Latin for an architect, then the Latin for a weaver.

You'll want to know: figulus, figulī

figulus, figulī — "a potter".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

figulus is built on fingō, "to shape, to mould" (Lewis & Short), on its root without the n: the moulder of clay.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: figulus, figulī
- Say it: figulus, figulī, once more
- Say it: say figulus, figulī
- Recall: say the Latin for an architect, then the Latin for a weaver, then say figulus, figulī again

Before you move on

What does figulus, figulī mean? ("A potter".) Say it once more.

188.4 vīlicus, vīlicī — a farm manager

Before the new one: say the Latin for a weaver, then the Latin for a potter.

You'll want to know: vīlicus, vīlicī

vīlicus, vīlicī — "a farm manager".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīlicus is built on vīlla, "a farmhouse" (Lewis & Short): the man in charge of the farm.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīlicus, vīlicī
- Say it: vīlicus, vīlicī, once more
- Say it: say vīlicus, vīlicī
- Recall: say the Latin for a weaver, then the Latin for a potter, then say vīlicus, vīlicī again

Before you move on

What does vīlicus, vīlicī mean? ("A farm manager".) Say it once more.

188.5 colōnus, colōnī — a tenant farmer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a potter, then the Latin for a farm manager.

You'll want to know: colōnus, colōnī

colōnus, colōnī — "a tenant farmer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

colōnus is built on colō, "to till, to tend" (Lewis & Short): one who tills the land. colō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwel-*, "to turn, to move about" (EtymDB 2.1). English colony comes from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: colōnus, colōnī
- Say it: colōnus, colōnī, once more
- Say it: say colōnus, colōnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a potter, then the Latin for a farm manager, then say colōnus, colōnī again

Before you move on

What does colōnus, colōnī mean? ("A tenant farmer".) Say it once more.

Chapter 189

Kin, Uncle, Aunt, Truth, Lie

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a blood relative, a mother's brother, a mother's sister, truth and a lie.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 189: I can say a blood relative, a mother's brother, a mother's sister, truth and a lie.

189.1 cognātus, cognātī — a blood relative

Before the new one: say the Latin for a farm manager, then the Latin for a tenant farmer.

You'll want to know: cognātus, cognātī

cognātus, cognātī — "a blood relative".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cognātus is built on nātus, "born" (Lewis & Short), older gnātus, with con-, "together": born into the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cognātus, cognātī
- Say it: cognātus, cognātī, once more
- Say it: say cognātus, cognātī
- Recall: say the Latin for a farm manager, then the Latin for a tenant farmer, then say cognātus, cognātī again

Before you move on

What does cognātus, cognātī mean? ("A blood relative".) Say it once more.

189.2 avunculus, avunculī — a mother's brother, an uncle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tenant farmer, then the Latin for a blood relative.

You'll want to know: avunculus, avunculī

avunculus, avunculī — "a mother's brother, an uncle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

avunculus is a diminutive built on avus, "a grandfather" (Lewis & Short): "little grandfather", an old name for the mother's brother. English uncle comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avunculus, avunculī
- Say it: avunculus, avunculī, once more
- Say it: say avunculus, avunculī

- Recall: say the Latin for a tenant farmer, then the Latin for a blood relative, then say avunculus, avunculī again

Before you move on

What does avunculus, avunculī mean? ("A mother's brother, an uncle".) Say it once more.

189.3 mātertera, māterterae — a mother's sister, an aunt

Before the new one: say the Latin for a blood relative, then the Latin for a mother's brother.

You'll want to know: mātertera, māterterae

mātertera, māterterae — "a mother's sister, an aunt".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mātertera is built on māter, "mother" (Lewis & Short), with an ending like the one in altera, "the other of two": a second mother.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mātertera, māterterae
- Say it: mātertera, māterterae, once more
- Say it: say mātertera, māterterae
- Recall: say the Latin for a blood relative, then the Latin for a mother's brother, then say mātertera, māterterae again

Before you move on

What does mātertera, māterterae mean? ("A mother's sister, an aunt".) Say it once more.

189.4 vēritās, vēritātis — truth

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mother's brother, then the Latin for a mother's sister.

You'll want to know: vēritās, vēritātis

vēritās, vēritātis — "truth".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēritās is built on vērus, "true" (Lewis & Short), with -tās, an ending for a quality. vērus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weh1ros*, "true" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vēritās, vēritātis
- Say it: vēritās, vēritātis, once more
- Say it: say vēritās, vēritātis
- Recall: say the Latin for a mother's brother, then the Latin for a mother's sister, then say vēritās, vēritātis again

Before you move on

What does vēritās, vēritātis mean? ("Truth".) Say it once more.

189.5 mendācium, mendāciī — a lie

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mother's sister, then the Latin for truth.

You'll want to know: mendācium, mendāciī

mendācium, mendāciī — "a lie".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mendācium is built on mendāx, "lying, a liar" (Lewis & Short). Where mendāx comes from is uncertain; a link with mendum, "a fault", is often suggested.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mendācium, mendāciī
- Say it: mendācium, mendāciī, once more
- Say it: say mendācium, mendāciī
- Recall: say the Latin for a mother's sister, then the Latin for truth, then say mendācium, mendāciī again

Before you move on

What does mendācium, mendāciī mean? ("A lie".) Say it once more.

Chapter 190

Tax, Tribute, Wages, Denarius, Sesterce

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a tax, a tribute, wages, a denarius and a sesterce.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 190: I can say a tax, a tribute, wages, a denarius and a sesterce.

190.1 vectīgal, vectīgālis — a tax, a toll

Before the new one: say the Latin for truth, then the Latin for a lie.

You'll want to know: vectīgal, vectīgālis

vectīgal, vectīgālis — "a tax, a toll".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vectīgal is built on vectus, "carried", the participle of vehō, "to carry" (Lewis & Short): first a toll on goods carried in, then any tax.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vectīgal, vectīgālis
- Say it: vectīgal, vectīgālis, once more
- Say it: say vectīgal, vectīgālis
- Recall: say the Latin for truth, then the Latin for a lie, then say vectīgal, vectīgālis again

Before you move on

What does vectīgal, vectīgālis mean? ("A tax, a toll".) Say it once more.

190.2 tribūtum, tribūtī — a tribute, a tax

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lie, then the Latin for a tax.

You'll want to know: tribūtum, tribūtī

tribūtum, tribūtī — "a tribute, a tax".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tribūtum is the past participle of tribuō, "to assign, to pay out" (Lewis & Short), used as a noun: what is paid. tribuō is built on tribus, "a tribe": first to share out among the tribes.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tribūtum, tribūtī
- Say it: tribūtum, tribūtī, once more
- Say it: say tribūtum, tribūtī

- Recall: say the Latin for a lie, then the Latin for a tax, then say tribūtum, tribūtī again

Before you move on

What does tribūtum, tribūtī mean? ("A tribute, a tax".) Say it once more.

190.3 mercēs, mercēdis — wages, pay

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tax, then the Latin for a tribute.

You'll want to know: mercēs, mercēdis

mercēs, mercēdis — "wages, pay".

It is not the same word as merx, mercis, "goods", even though the plural of merx is spelled mercēs too. The second form tells them apart: mercēdis here, mercis there.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mercēs is usually linked with mereō, "to earn" (Lewis & Short): what one has earned. It may share a root with merx, "goods" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mercēs, mercēdis
- Say it: mercēs, mercēdis, once more
- Say it: say mercēs, mercēdis
- Recall: say the Latin for a tax, then the Latin for a tribute, then say mercēs, mercēdis again

Before you move on

What does mercēs, mercēdis mean? ("Wages, pay".) Say it once more.

190.4 dēnārius, dēnāriī — a denarius (silver coin)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tribute, then the Latin for wages.

You'll want to know: dēnārius, dēnāriī

dēnārius, dēnāriī — "a denarius (silver coin)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēnārius is built on dēnī, "ten each" (Lewis & Short): the coin was first worth ten bronze coins. dēnī comes from decem, "ten".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēnārius, dēnāriī
- Say it: dēnārius, dēnāriī, once more
- Say it: say dēnārius, dēnāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a tribute, then the Latin for wages, then say dēnārius, dēnāriī again

Before you move on

What does dēnārius, dēnāriī mean? ("A denarius (silver coin)".) Say it once more.

190.5 sēstertius, sēstertiī — a sesterce (coin)

Before the new one: say the Latin for wages, then the Latin for a denarius.

You'll want to know: sēstertius, sēstertiī

sēstertius, sēstertiī — "a sesterce (coin)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sēstertius is contracted from sēmis "half" and tertius "third" (Lewis & Short): two whole units and half of the third, the coin's first value.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sēstertius, sēstertiī
- Say it: sēstertius, sēstertiī, once more
- Say it: say sēstertius, sēstertiī
- Recall: say the Latin for wages, then the Latin for a denarius, then say sēstertius, sēstertiī again

Before you move on

What does sēstertius, sēstertiī mean? ("A sesterce (coin)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 191

Charcoal, Crag, Constellation, Storm, Rain cloud

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say charcoal, a crag, a constellation, a storm and a rain cloud.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 191: I can say charcoal, a crag, a constellation, a storm and a rain cloud.

191.1 carbō, carbōnis — charcoal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a denarius, then the Latin for a sesterce.

You'll want to know: carbō, carbōnis

carbō, carbōnis — "charcoal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carbō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root ker-*, "to burn" (EtymDB 2.1), though the details are uncertain. English carbon comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: carbō, carbōnis
- Say it: carbō, carbōnis, once more
- Say it: say carbō, carbōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a denarius, then the Latin for a sesterce, then say carbō, carbōnis again

Before you move on

What does carbō, carbōnis mean? ("Charcoal".) Say it once more.

191.2 scopulus, scopulī — a crag, a cliff

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sesterce, then the Latin for charcoal.

You'll want to know: scopulus, scopulī

scopulus, scopulī — "a crag, a cliff".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scopulus was borrowed from Greek skopelos, "a lookout rock, a peak" (Lewis & Short), from skopeō, "to look out" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scopulus, scopulī
- Say it: scopulus, scopulī, once more
- Say it: say scopulus, scopulī
- Recall: say the Latin for a sesterce, then the Latin for charcoal, then say scopulus, scopulī again

Before you move on

What does scopulus, scopulī mean? ("A crag, a cliff".) Say it once more.

191.3 sīdus, sīderis — a constellation, a star

Before the new one: say the Latin for charcoal, then the Latin for a crag.

You'll want to know: sīdus, sīderis

sīdus, sīderis — "a constellation, a star".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sīdus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. cōnsīderō, "to examine", and dēsīderō, "to miss", are often linked with it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sīdus, sīderis
- Say it: sīdus, sīderis, once more
- Say it: say sīdus, sīderis
- Recall: say the Latin for charcoal, then the Latin for a crag, then say sīdus, sīderis again

Before you move on

What does sīdus, sīderis mean? ("A constellation, a star".) Say it once more.

191.4 procella, procellae — a storm, a gale

Before the new one: say the Latin for a crag, then the Latin for a constellation.

You'll want to know: procella, procellae

procella, procellae — "a storm, a gale".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

procella is built on procellō, "to hurl forward, to dash down" (EtymDB 2.1), from prō-, "forward": the gale that throws things down.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: procella, procellae
- Say it: procella, procellae, once more
- Say it: say procella, procellae
- Recall: say the Latin for a crag, then the Latin for a constellation, then say procella, procellae again

Before you move on

What does procella, procellae mean? ("A storm, a gale".) Say it once more.

191.5 nimbus, nimbī — a rain cloud

Before the new one: say the Latin for a constellation, then the Latin for a storm.

You'll want to know: nimbus, nimbī

nimbus, nimbī — "a rain cloud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nimbus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nebhos*, "cloud" (EtymDB 2.1), in a form with an n inside; Greek nephos, "cloud", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is nebula, "mist".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nimbus, nimbī
- Say it: nimbus, nimbī, once more
- Say it: say nimbus, nimbī
- Recall: say the Latin for a constellation, then the Latin for a storm, then say nimbus, nimbī again

Before you move on

What does nimbus, nimbī mean? ("A rain cloud".) Say it once more.

191.6 Words from chapters 183-186 — a first pass

Say the words for a storm and a rain cloud.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- known, famous, honourable, middle, highest
- wasteful, moderate, eloquent, mute, lame
- a storeroom, a study, a colonnaded garden, a rain basin, a foundation
- a helmsman, a market, a weight, a measure, a pound; a pair of scales

Before you move on

Known? (nōtus, nōta, nōtum.) Famous? (celeber, celebris, celebre.) Honourable? (honestus, honesta, honestum.) Middle? (medius, media, medium.) Highest? (summus, summa, summum.) Wasteful? (prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum.) Moderate? (modestus, modesta, modestum.) Eloquent? (fācundus, fācunda, fācundum.) Mute? (mūtus, mūta, mūtum.) Lame? (claudus, clauda, claudum.) A storeroom? (cella, cellae.) A study? (tablīnum, tablīnī.) A colonnaded garden? (peristylium, peristyliī.) A rain basin? (impluvium, impluviī.) A foundation? (fundāmentum, fundāmentī.) A helmsman? (gubernātor, gubernātōris.) A market? (mercātus, mercātūs.) A weight? (pondus, ponderis.) A measure? (mēnsūra, mēnsūrae.) A pound; a pair of scales? (lībra, lībrae.)

191.7 Words from chapters 187-191 — a second pass

Say the words for peace and a leader.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- peace, a leader, victory, freedom, glory
- an architect, a weaver, a potter, a farm manager, a tenant farmer
- a blood relative, a mother's brother, a mother's sister, truth, a lie
- a tax, a tribute, wages, a denarius, a sesterce
- charcoal, a crag, a constellation, a storm, a rain cloud

Before you move on

Peace? (pāx, pācis.) A leader? (dux, ducis.) Victory? (victōria, victōriae.) Freedom? (lībertās, lībertātis.) Glory? (glōria, glōriae.) An architect? (architectus, architectī.) A weaver? (textor, textōris.) A potter? (figulus, figulī.) A farm manager?

(vīlicus, vīlicī.) A tenant farmer? (colōnus, colōnī.) A blood relative? (cognātus, cognātī.) A mother's brother? (avunculus, avunculī.) A mother's sister? (mātertera, māterterae.) Truth? (vēritās, vēritātis.) A lie? (mendācium, mendāciī.) A tax? (vectīgal, vectīgālis.) A tribute? (tribūtum, tribūtī.) Wages? (mercēs, mercēdis.) A denarius? (dēnārius, dēnāriī.) A sesterce? (sēstertius, sēstertiī.) Charcoal? (carbō, carbōnis.) A crag? (scopulus, scopulī.) A constellation? (sīdus, sīderis.) A storm? (procella, procellae.) A rain cloud? (nimbus, nimbī.)

Chapter 192

Crab, Sparrow, Stork, Owl, Peacock

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a crab, a sparrow, a stork, an owl and a peacock.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 192: I can say a crab, a sparrow, a stork, an owl and a peacock.

192.1 cancer, cancrī — a crab

Before the new one: say the Latin for a storm, a gale, then the Latin for a rain cloud.

You'll want to know: cancer, cancrī

cancer, cancrī — "a crab".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cancer is probably inherited, from a doubled form of a root for "hard"; Greek karkinos, "crab", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and the n came in by dissimilation.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cancer, cancrī
- Say it: cancer, cancrī, once more
- Say it: say cancer, cancrī
- Recall: say the Latin for a storm, a gale, then the Latin for a rain cloud, then say cancer, cancrī again

Before you move on

What does cancer, cancrī mean? ("A crab".) Say it once more.

192.2 passer, passeris — a sparrow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rain cloud, then the Latin for a crab.

You'll want to know: passer, passeris

passer, passeris — "a sparrow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

passer may be inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European pettro-, "flier, bird", from peth2-, "to fly" (EtymDB 2.1); the details are uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: passer, passeris
- Say it: passer, passeris, once more
- Say it: say passer, passeris
- Recall: say the Latin for a rain cloud, then the Latin for a crab, then say passer, passeris again

Before you move on

What does passer, passeris mean? ("A sparrow".) Say it once more.

192.3 cicōnia, cicōniae — a stork

Before the new one: say the Latin for a crab, then the Latin for a sparrow.

You'll want to know: cicōnia, cicōniae

cicōnia, cicōniae — "a stork".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cicōnia is probably a doubled form of the root keh2n-*, "to sing, to cry" (EtymDB 2.1). At Praeneste the bird was called cōnia, "stork" (Lewis & Short), and canō, "to sing", has the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cicōnia, cicōniae
- Say it: cicōnia, cicōniae, once more
- Say it: say cicōnia, cicōniae
- Recall: say the Latin for a crab, then the Latin for a sparrow, then say cicōnia, cicōniae again

Before you move on

What does cicōnia, cicōniae mean? ("A stork".) Say it once more.

192.4 noctua, noctuae — an owl

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sparrow, then the Latin for a stork.

You'll want to know: noctua, noctuae

noctua, noctuae — "an owl".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

noctua is built on nox, noctis, "night" (Lewis & Short): the night bird.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: noctua, noctuae
- Say it: noctua, noctuae, once more
- Say it: say noctua, noctuae
- Recall: say the Latin for a sparrow, then the Latin for a stork, then say noctua, noctuae again

Before you move on

What does noctua, noctuae mean? ("An owl".) Say it once more.

192.5 pāvō, pāvōnis — a peacock

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stork, then the Latin for an owl.

You'll want to know: pāvō, pāvōnis

pāvō, pāvōnis — "a peacock".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāvō is probably a loan from the east, like Greek taōs, "peacock" (Lewis & Short); both are thought to go back to a language of India, but the path is uncertain. English peacock begins with it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāvō, pāvōnis
- Say it: pāvō, pāvōnis, once more
- Say it: say pāvō, pāvōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a stork, then the Latin for an owl, then say pāvō, pāvōnis again

Before you move on

What does pāvō, pāvōnis mean? ("A peacock".) Say it once more.

Chapter 193

Drum, Knucklebone, Gaming die, Bracelet, Necklace

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a drum, a knucklebone, a gaming die, a bracelet and a necklace.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 193: I can say a drum, a knucklebone, a gaming die, a bracelet and a necklace.

193.1 tympanum, tympanī — a drum

Before the new one: say the Latin for an owl, then the Latin for a peacock.

You'll want to know: tympanum, tympanī

tympanum, tympanī — "a drum".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tympanum was borrowed from Greek tympanon, "a drum" (Lewis & Short), from typtō, "to strike, to beat" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tympanum, tympanī
- Say it: tympanum, tympanī, once more
- Say it: say tympanum, tympanī
- Recall: say the Latin for an owl, then the Latin for a peacock, then say tympanum, tympanī again

Before you move on

What does tympanum, tympanī mean? ("A drum".) Say it once more.

193.2 tālus, tālī — a knucklebone; an ankle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a peacock, then the Latin for a drum.

You'll want to know: tālus, tālī

tālus, tālī — "a knucklebone; an ankle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tālus comes from an older taxlus* (Lewis & Short), as its diminutive taxillus, "a small die", shows; EtymDB 2.1 gives Proto-Italic tākslos*, "knucklebone", but the deeper origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tālus, tālī
- Say it: tālus, tālī, once more
- Say it: say tālus, tālī

- Recall: say the Latin for a peacock, then the Latin for a drum, then say tālus, tālī again

Before you move on

What does tālus, tālī mean? ("A knucklebone; an ankle".) Say it once more.

193.3 tessera, tesserae — a gaming die; a token

Before the new one: say the Latin for a drum, then the Latin for a knucklebone; an ankle.

You'll want to know: tessera, tesserae

tessera, tesserae — "a gaming die; a token".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tessera comes from Greek tesseres, "four" (Lewis & Short): a square piece, with four corners. English tessellated, "made of small square tiles", comes from its diminutive.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tessera, tesserae
- Say it: tessera, tesserae, once more
- Say it: say tessera, tesserae
- Recall: say the Latin for a drum, then the Latin for a knucklebone; an ankle, then say tessera, tesserae again

Before you move on

What does tessera, tesserae mean? ("A gaming die; a token".) Say it once more.

193.4 armilla, armillae — a bracelet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a knucklebone; an ankle, then the Latin for a gaming die; a token.

You'll want to know: armilla, armillae

armilla, armillae — "a bracelet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

armilla is built on armus, "the upper arm, the shoulder" (Lewis & Short), with -illa, a diminutive ending: a band for the arm.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: armilla, armillae
- Say it: armilla, armillae, once more
- Say it: say armilla, armillae
- Recall: say the Latin for a knucklebone; an ankle, then the Latin for a gaming die; a token, then say armilla, armillae again

Before you move on

What does armilla, armillae mean? ("A bracelet".) Say it once more.

193.5 monīle, monīlis — a necklace

Before the new one: say the Latin for a gaming die; a token, then the Latin for a bracelet.

You'll want to know: monīle, monīlis

monīle, monīlis — "a necklace".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

monīle is usually linked with a Proto-Indo-European word mon-*, "neck", seen in Old Irish muin, "neck"; English mane is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: monīle, monīlis
- Say it: monīle, monīlis, once more
- Say it: say monīle, monīlis
- Recall: say the Latin for a gaming die; a token, then the Latin for a bracelet, then say monīle, monīlis again

Before you move on

What does monīle, monīlis mean? ("A necklace".) Say it once more.

Chapter 194

Opinion, Conversation, Speech, Rumour, History

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say an opinion, conversation, a speech, a rumour and history.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 194: I can say an opinion, conversation, a speech, a rumour and history.

194.1 sententia, sententiae — an opinion; a sentence

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bracelet, then the Latin for a necklace.

You'll want to know: sententia, sententiae

sententia, sententiae — "an opinion; a sentence".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sententia is shortened from an older sentientia*, "a feeling" (Lewis & Short), built on sentiō, "to feel, to think": what one thinks.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sententia, sententiae
- Say it: sententia, sententiae, once more
- Say it: say sententia, sententiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a bracelet, then the Latin for a necklace, then say sententia, sententiae again

Before you move on

What does sententia, sententiae mean? ("An opinion; a sentence".) Say it once more.

194.2 sermō, sermōnis — conversation, speech

Before the new one: say the Latin for a necklace, then the Latin for an opinion; a sentence.

You'll want to know: sermō, sermōnis

sermō, sermōnis — "conversation, speech".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sermō is often linked with serō, "to join, to string together" (Lewis & Short): talk as words strung together. The link is likely but not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sermō, sermōnis
- Say it: sermō, sermōnis, once more
- Say it: say sermō, sermōnis

- Recall: say the Latin for a necklace, then the Latin for an opinion; a sentence, then say sermō, sermōnis again

Before you move on

What does sermō, sermōnis mean? ("Conversation, speech".) Say it once more.

194.3 ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis — a speech

Before the new one: say the Latin for an opinion; a sentence, then the Latin for conversation.

You'll want to know: ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis

ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis — "a speech".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrātiō is built on ōrō, "to speak, to plead, to pray" (Lewis & Short), with -tiō, an ending for an act. ōrō is often linked with ōs, "mouth" (EtymDB 2.1), but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis
- Say it: ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis, once more
- Say it: say ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for an opinion; a sentence, then the Latin for conversation, then say ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis mean? ("A speech".) Say it once more.

194.4 rūmor, rūmōris — a rumour

Before the new one: say the Latin for conversation, then the Latin for a speech.

You'll want to know: rūmor, rūmōris

rūmor, rūmōris — "a rumour".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rūmor is often traced to a Proto-Indo-European root rewH-*, "to roar, to shout", but the link is not certain. Lewis & Short put raucus, "hoarse", in the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rūmor, rūmōris
- Say it: rūmor, rūmōris, once more
- Say it: say rūmor, rūmōris
- Recall: say the Latin for conversation, then the Latin for a speech, then say rūmor, rūmōris again

Before you move on

What does rūmor, rūmōris mean? ("A rumour".) Say it once more.

194.5 historia, historiae — history

Before the new one: say the Latin for a speech, then the Latin for a rumour.

You'll want to know: historia, historiae

historia, historiae — "history".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

historia was borrowed from Greek historia, "inquiry, a narrative" (Lewis & Short), from histōr, "one who knows" (EtymDB 2.1), whose root is usually given as weyd-*, "to see, to know", the root of videō, "to see".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: historia, historiae
- Say it: historia, historiae, once more
- Say it: say historia, historiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a speech, then the Latin for a rumour, then say historia, historiae again

Before you move on

What does historia, historiae mean? ("History".) Say it once more.

Chapter 195

Cake, Vinegar, Fish sauce, Ham, Birthday

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a cake, vinegar, fish sauce, a ham and a birthday.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 195: I can say a cake, vinegar, fish sauce, a ham and a birthday.

195.1 lībum, lībī — a cake

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rumour, then the Latin for history.

You'll want to know: lībum, lībī

lībum, lībī — "a cake".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lībum has no sure origin; Varro tied it to lībō, "to pour out an offering" (Lewis & Short), since such cakes were offered to the gods.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lībum, lībī
- Say it: lībum, lībī, once more
- Say it: say lībum, lībī
- Recall: say the Latin for a rumour, then the Latin for history, then say lībum, lībī again

Before you move on

What does lībum, lībī mean? ("A cake".) Say it once more.

195.2 acētum, acētī — vinegar

Before the new one: say the Latin for history, then the Latin for a cake.

You'll want to know: acētum, acētī

acētum, acētī — "vinegar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

acētum is the participle of aceō, "to be sour" (Lewis & Short), with vīnum, "wine", understood: soured wine. aceō belongs with ācer, "sharp".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: acētum, acētī
- Say it: acētum, acētī, once more
- Say it: say acētum, acētī
- Recall: say the Latin for history, then the Latin for a cake, then say acētum, acētī again

Before you move on

What does acētum, acētī mean? ("Vinegar".) Say it once more.

195.3 garum, garī — fish sauce

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cake, then the Latin for vinegar.

You'll want to know: garum, garī

garum, garī — "fish sauce".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

garum was borrowed from Greek garon, "fish sauce" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: garum, garī
- Say it: garum, garī, once more
- Say it: say garum, garī
- Recall: say the Latin for a cake, then the Latin for vinegar, then say garum, garī again

Before you move on

What does garum, garī mean? ("Fish sauce".) Say it once more.

195.4 perna, pernae — a ham

Before the new one: say the Latin for vinegar, then the Latin for fish sauce.

You'll want to know: perna, pernae

perna, pernae — "a ham".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perna is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European persneh2*, "heel" (EtymDB 2.1): first the leg of meat with the heel, then the ham. Gothic fairzna, "heel", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perna, pernae
- Say it: perna, pernae, once more
- Say it: say perna, pernae
- Recall: say the Latin for vinegar, then the Latin for fish sauce, then say perna, pernae again

Before you move on

What does perna, pernae mean? ("A ham".) Say it once more.

195.5 diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis — a birthday

Before the new one: say the Latin for fish sauce, then the Latin for a ham.

You'll want to know: diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis

diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis — "a birthday".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

diēs nātālis is diēs, "day", with nātālis, "of one's birth", built on nātus, "born", from nāscor, "to be born". English natal comes from the second word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis
- Say it: diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis, once more
- Say it: say diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis
- Recall: say the Latin for fish sauce, then the Latin for a ham, then say diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis again

Before you move on

What does diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis mean? ("A birthday".) Say it once more.

Chapter 196

Running stream, Marsh, Meadow, Grove, Sacred grove

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a running stream, a marsh, a meadow, a grove and a sacred grove.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 196: I can say a running stream, a marsh, a meadow, a grove and a sacred grove.

196.1 fluvius, fluviī — a running stream, a river

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ham, then the Latin for a birthday.

You'll want to know: fluvius, fluviī

fluvius, fluviī — "a running stream, a river".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fluvius is built on fluō, "to flow"; inscriptions also spell it flovios (Lewis & Short). fluō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhlew-*, "to swell, to flow".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fluvius, fluviī
- Say it: fluvius, fluviī, once more
- Say it: say fluvius, fluviī
- Recall: say the Latin for a ham, then the Latin for a birthday, then say fluvius, fluviī again

Before you move on

What does fluvius, fluviī mean? ("A running stream, a river".) Say it once more.

196.2 palūs, palūdis — a marsh

Before the new one: say the Latin for a birthday, then the Latin for a running stream.

You'll want to know: palūs, palūdis

palūs, palūdis — "a marsh".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

palūs, palūdis, has no sure origin; Lewis & Short compare Greek pēlos, "mud". It is a different word from pālus, "a stake".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: palūs, palūdis
- Say it: palūs, palūdis, once more
- Say it: say palūs, palūdis
- Recall: say the Latin for a birthday, then the Latin for a running stream, then say palūs, palūdis again

Before you move on

What does palūs, palūdis mean? ("A marsh".) Say it once more.

196.3 prātum, prātī — a meadow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a running stream, then the Latin for a marsh.

You'll want to know: prātum, prātī

prātum, prātī — "a meadow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prātum has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prātum, prātī
- Say it: prātum, prātī, once more
- Say it: say prātum, prātī
- Recall: say the Latin for a running stream, then the Latin for a marsh, then say prātum, prātī again

Before you move on

What does prātum, prātī mean? ("A meadow".) Say it once more.

196.4 nemus, nemoris — a grove

Before the new one: say the Latin for a marsh, then the Latin for a meadow.

You'll want to know: nemus, nemoris

nemus, nemoris — "a grove".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nemus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nemos*, "a sacred place, a clearing" (EtymDB 2.1), from nem-*, "to allot"; Greek nemos, "a woodland pasture", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nemus, nemoris
- Say it: nemus, nemoris, once more
- Say it: say nemus, nemoris
- Recall: say the Latin for a marsh, then the Latin for a meadow, then say nemus, nemoris again

Before you move on

What does nemus, nemoris mean? ("A grove".) Say it once more.

196.5 lūcus, lūcī — a sacred grove

Before the new one: say the Latin for a meadow, then the Latin for a grove.

You'll want to know: lūcus, lūcī

lūcus, lūcī — "a sacred grove".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūcus is inherited; Old Latin wrote loucos, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European lowkos*, "a clearing", from the root for light (EtymDB 2.1). Lewis & Short explain lūcus as the shining, open place in a wood. English lea, "a meadow", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lūcus, lūcī
- Say it: lūcus, lūcī, once more
- Say it: say lūcus, lūcī
- Recall: say the Latin for a meadow, then the Latin for a grove, then say lūcus, lūcī again

Before you move on

What does lūcus, lūcī mean? ("A sacred grove".) Say it once more.

196.6 Words from chapters 192-193 — a first pass

Say the words for a grove and a sacred grove.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a crab, a sparrow, a stork, an owl, a peacock
- a drum, a knucklebone; an ankle, a gaming die; a token, a bracelet, a necklace

Before you move on

A crab? (cancer, cancrī.) A sparrow? (passer, passeris.) A stork? (cicōnia, cicōniae.) An owl? (noctua, noctuae.) A peacock? (pāvō, pāvōnis.) A drum? (tympanum, tympanī.) A knucklebone; an ankle? (tālus, tālī.) A gaming die; a token? (tessera, tesserae.) A bracelet? (armilla, armillae.) A necklace?

(monīle, monīlis.)

196.7 Words from chapters 194-196 — a second pass

Say the words for an opinion; a sentence and conversation.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an opinion; a sentence, conversation, a speech, a rumour, history
- a cake, vinegar, fish sauce, a ham, a birthday
- a running stream, a marsh, a meadow, a grove, a sacred grove

Before you move on

An opinion; a sentence? (sententia, sententiae.) Conversation? (sermō, sermōnis.) A speech? (ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis.) A rumour? (rūmor, rūmōris.) History? (historia, historiae.) A cake? (lībum, lībī.) Vinegar? (acētum, acētī.) Fish sauce? (garum, garī.) A ham? (perna, pernae.) A birthday? (diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis.) A running stream? (fluvius, fluviī.) A marsh? (palūs, palūdis.) A meadow? (prātum, prātī.) A grove? (nemus, nemoris.) A sacred grove? (lūcus, lūcī.)

Chapter 197

To kiss, To greet, To invite, To explain, To interpret

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to kiss, to greet, to invite, to explain and to interpret.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 197: I can say to kiss, to greet, to invite, to explain and to interpret.

197.1 ōsculor, ōsculārī — to kiss

Before the new one: say the Latin for a grove, then the Latin for a sacred grove.

You'll want to know: ōsculor, ōsculārī

ōsculor, ōsculārī — "to kiss".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōsculor is built on ōsculum, "a kiss", a diminutive of ōs, "mouth" (EtymDB 2.1): a little mouth, then a kiss.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōsculor, ōsculārī
- Say it: ōsculor, ōsculārī, once more
- Say it: say ōsculor, ōsculārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a grove, then the Latin for a sacred grove, then say ōsculor, ōsculārī again

Before you move on

What does ōsculor, ōsculārī mean? ("To kiss".) Say it once more.

197.2 salūtō, salūtāre — to greet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sacred grove, then the Latin for to kiss.

You'll want to know: salūtō, salūtāre

salūtō, salūtāre — "to greet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

salūtō is built on salūs, salūtis, "health, safety" (Lewis & Short): to wish someone health. salūs is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European solh2-*, "whole" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: salūtō, salūtāre
- Say it: salūtō, salūtāre, once more
- Say it: say salūtō, salūtāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a sacred grove, then the Latin for to kiss, then say salūtō, salūtāre again

Before you move on

What does salūtō, salūtāre mean? ("To greet".) Say it once more.

197.3 invītō, invītāre — to invite

Before the new one: say the Latin for to kiss, then the Latin for to greet.

You'll want to know: invītō, invītāre

invītō, invītāre — "to invite".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

invītō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: invītō, invītāre
- Say it: invītō, invītāre, once more
- Say it: say invītō, invītāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to kiss, then the Latin for to greet, then say invītō, invītāre again

Before you move on

What does invītō, invītāre mean? ("To invite".) Say it once more.

197.4 explicō, explicāre — to explain, to unfold

Before the new one: say the Latin for to greet, then the Latin for to invite.

You'll want to know: explicō, explicāre

explicō, explicāre — "to explain, to unfold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

explicō is ex, "out", with plicō, "to fold" (EtymDB 2.1): to unfold, so to explain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: explicō, explicāre
- Say it: explicō, explicāre, once more
- Say it: say explicō, explicāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to greet, then the Latin for to invite, then say explicō, explicāre again

Before you move on

What does explicō, explicāre mean? ("To explain, to unfold".) Say it once more.

197.5 interpretor, interpretārī — to interpret, to translate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to invite, then the Latin for to explain.

You'll want to know: interpretor, interpretārī

interpretor, interpretārī — "to interpret, to translate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

interpretor is built on interpres, "a go-between, an agent" (Lewis & Short), whose first part is inter, "between"; the second part is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: interpretor, interpretārī
- Say it: interpretor, interpretārī, once more
- Say it: say interpretor, interpretārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to invite, then the Latin for to explain, then say interpretor, interpretārī again

Before you move on

What does interpretor, interpretārī mean? ("To interpret, to translate".) Say it once more.

Chapter 198

To forbid, To defend, To die, To marry, To rest

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to forbid, to defend, to die, to marry and to rest.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 198: I can say to forbid, to defend, to die, to marry and to rest.

198.1 vetō, vetāre — to forbid

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to explain, then the Latin for to interpret.

You'll want to know: vetō, vetāre

vetō, vetāre — "to forbid".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vetō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English veto, "I forbid", is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vetō, vetāre
- Say it: vetō, vetāre, once more
- Say it: say vetō, vetāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to explain, then the Latin for to interpret, then say vetō, vetāre again

Before you move on

What does vetō, vetāre mean? ("To forbid".) Say it once more.

198.2 dēfendō, dēfendere — to defend

Before the new one: say the Latin for to interpret, then the Latin for to forbid.

You'll want to know: dēfendō, dēfendere

dēfendō, dēfendere — "to defend".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēfendō is dē, "away", with an old verb fendō, "to strike" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwhen-*, "to strike, to ward off" (EtymDB 2.1): to strike away, to ward off.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēfendō, dēfendere
- Say it: dēfendō, dēfendere, once more
- Say it: say dēfendō, dēfendere
- Recall: say the Latin for to interpret, then the Latin for to forbid, then say dēfendō, dēfendere again

Before you move on

What does dēfendō, dēfendere mean? ("To defend".) Say it once more.

198.3 morior, morī — to die

Before the new one: say the Latin for to forbid, then the Latin for to defend.

You'll want to know: morior, morī

morior, morī — "to die".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

morior is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mer-*, "to die" (EtymDB 2.1). English murder is a distant cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: morior, morī
- Say it: morior, morī, once more
- Say it: say morior, morī
- Recall: say the Latin for to forbid, then the Latin for to defend, then say morior, morī again

Before you move on

What does morior, morī mean? ("To die".) Say it once more.

198.4 nūbō, nūbere — to marry (of a bride)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to defend, then the Latin for to die.

You'll want to know: nūbō, nūbere

nūbō, nūbere — "to marry (of a bride)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūbō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European snewbh-*, "to marry, to wed" (EtymDB 2.1). English nuptial comes from its participle nūptus, "married".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūbō, nūbere
- Say it: nūbō, nūbere, once more
- Say it: say nūbō, nūbere
- Recall: say the Latin for to defend, then the Latin for to die, then say nūbō, nūbere again

Before you move on

What does nūbō, nūbere mean? ("To marry (of a bride)".) Say it once more.

198.5 quiēscō, quiēscere — to rest

Before the new one: say the Latin for to die, then the Latin for to marry.

You'll want to know: quiēscō, quiēscere

quiēscō, quiēscere — "to rest".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quiēscō is built on quiēs, "rest" (Lewis & Short), with -scō, the ending of verbs of becoming: to come to rest. quiēs is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwyeh1-*, "to rest" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quiēscō, quiēscere
- Say it: quiēscō, quiēscere, once more
- Say it: say quiēscō, quiēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to die, then the Latin for to marry, then say quiēscō, quiēscere again

Before you move on

What does quiēscō, quiēscere mean? ("To rest".) Say it once more.

Chapter 199

To compare, To persuade, To blame, To share, To avoid

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to compare, to persuade, to blame, to share and to avoid.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 199: I can say to compare, to persuade, to blame, to share and to avoid.

199.1 comparō, comparāre — to compare; to get ready

Before the new one: say the Latin for to marry, then the Latin for to rest.

You'll want to know: comparō, comparāre

comparō, comparāre — "to compare; to get ready".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

comparō is two verbs in one form. "To compare" is built on compar, "matched, equal" (Lewis & Short), from com-, "together", and pār, "equal"; "to get ready" is com- with parō, "to prepare".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: comparō, comparāre
- Say it: comparō, comparāre, once more
- Say it: say comparō, comparāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to marry, then the Latin for to rest, then say comparō, comparāre again

Before you move on

What does comparō, comparāre mean? ("To compare; to get ready".) Say it once more.

199.2 persuādeō, persuādēre — to persuade

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rest, then the Latin for to compare; to get ready.

You'll want to know: persuādeō, persuādēre

persuādeō, persuādēre — "to persuade".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

persuādeō is per, "thoroughly", with suādeō, "to advise, to urge": to urge someone all the way. suādeō belongs with suāvis, "sweet", and is inherited from Proto-Italic swādēō*, "to advise" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: persuādeō, persuādēre
- Say it: persuādeō, persuādēre, once more
- Say it: say persuādeō, persuādēre

- Recall: say the Latin for to rest, then the Latin for to compare; to get ready, then say persuādeō, persuādēre again

Before you move on

What does persuādeō, persuādēre mean? ("To persuade".) Say it once more.

199.3 reprehendō, reprehendere — to blame, to criticise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to compare; to get ready, then the Latin for to persuade.

You'll want to know: reprehendō, reprehendere

reprehendō, reprehendere — "to blame, to criticise".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

reprehendō is re-, "back", with prehendō, "to seize" (EtymDB 2.1): to pull back, to hold someone back with blame.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: reprehendō, reprehendere
- Say it: reprehendō, reprehendere, once more
- Say it: say reprehendō, reprehendere
- Recall: say the Latin for to compare; to get ready, then the Latin for to persuade, then say reprehendō, reprehendere again

Before you move on

What does reprehendō, reprehendere mean? ("To blame, to criticise".) Say it once more.

199.4 partior, partīrī — to share, to divide

Before the new one: say the Latin for to persuade, then the Latin for to blame.

You'll want to know: partior, partīrī

partior, partīrī — "to share, to divide".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

partior is built on pars, partis, "a part": to make into parts. English partition comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: partior, partīrī
- Say it: partior, partīrī, once more
- Say it: say partior, partīrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to persuade, then the Latin for to blame, then say partior, partīrī again

Before you move on

What does partior, partīrī mean? ("To share, to divide".) Say it once more.

199.5 vītō, vītāre — to avoid

Before the new one: say the Latin for to blame, then the Latin for to share.

You'll want to know: vītō, vītāre

vītō, vītāre — "to avoid".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vītō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short's proposal is uncertain, and no other is generally accepted. English inevitable comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vītō, vītāre
- Say it: vītō, vītāre, once more
- Say it: say vītō, vītāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to blame, then the Latin for to share, then say vītō, vītāre again

Before you move on

What does vītō, vītāre mean? ("To avoid".) Say it once more.

Chapter 200

To lift, To reach, To recognise, To refuse, To fly about

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to lift, to reach, to recognise, to refuse and to fly about.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 200: I can say to lift, to reach, to recognise, to refuse and to fly about.

200.1 tollō, tollere — to lift, to raise; to remove

Before the new one: say the Latin for to share, then the Latin for to avoid.

You'll want to know: tollō, tollere

tollō, tollere — "to lift, to raise; to remove".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tollō is inherited from Proto-Italic tolnō*, "to lift up", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tl-neh2-*, "to lift, to bear" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek talanton, "a balance, a weight", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tollō, tollere
- Say it: tollō, tollere, once more
- Say it: say tollō, tollere
- Recall: say the Latin for to share, then the Latin for to avoid, then say tollō, tollere again

Before you move on

What does tollō, tollere mean? ("To lift, to raise; to remove".) Say it once more.

200.2 perveniō, pervenīre — to reach, to arrive at

Before the new one: say the Latin for to avoid, then the Latin for to lift.

You'll want to know: perveniō, pervenīre perveniō, pervenīre — "to reach, to arrive at".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perveniō is per, "through", with veniō, "to come" (EtymDB 2.1): to come all the way.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perveniō, pervenīre
- Say it: perveniō, pervenīre, once more
- Say it: say perveniō, pervenīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to avoid, then the Latin for to lift, then say perveniō, pervenīre again

Before you move on

What does perveniō, pervenīre mean? ("To reach, to arrive at".) Say it once more.

200.3 agnōscō, agnōscere — to recognise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lift, then the Latin for to reach.

You'll want to know: agnōscō, agnōscere

agnōscō, agnōscere — "to recognise".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

agnōscō is ad, "to", with gnōscō, "to get to know", the older form of nōscō (Lewis & Short): the g of the old form survives here.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: agnōscō, agnōscere
- Say it: agnōscō, agnōscere, once more
- Say it: say agnōscō, agnōscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to lift, then the Latin for to reach, then say agnōscō, agnōscere again

Before you move on

What does agnōscō, agnōscere mean? ("To recognise".) Say it once more.

200.4 recūsō, recūsāre — to refuse

Before the new one: say the Latin for to reach, then the Latin for to recognise.

You'll want to know: recūsō, recūsāre

recūsō, recūsāre — "to refuse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

recūsō is built on causa, "a case, a reason" (Lewis & Short), with re-, "back": to plead against, to refuse.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: recūsō, recūsāre
- Say it: recūsō, recūsāre, once more
- Say it: say recūsō, recūsāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to reach, then the Latin for to recognise, then say recūsō, recūsāre again

Before you move on

What does recūsō, recūsāre mean? ("To refuse".) Say it once more.

200.5 volitō, volitāre — to fly about

Before the new one: say the Latin for to recognise, then the Latin for to refuse.

You'll want to know: volitō, volitāre

volitō, volitāre — "to fly about".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

volitō is a frequentative of volō, "to fly" (Lewis & Short): to keep flying, to flit about. It is a different verb from volō, "to want".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: volitō, volitāre
- Say it: volitō, volitāre, once more
- Say it: say volitō, volitāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to recognise, then the Latin for to refuse, then say volitō, volitāre again

Before you move on

What does volitō, volitāre mean? ("To fly about".) Say it once more.

Chapter 201

To talk together, To hand over, To straighten, To celebrate, To pursue

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to talk together, to hand over, to straighten, to celebrate and to pursue.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 201: I can say to talk together, to hand over, to straighten, to celebrate and to pursue.

201.1 colloquor, colloquī — to talk together

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to refuse, then the Latin for to fly about.

You'll want to know: colloquor, colloquī

colloquor, colloquī — "to talk together".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

colloquor is con-, "together", with loquor, "to speak" (EtymDB 2.1). English colloquial comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: colloquor, colloquī
- Say it: colloquor, colloquī, once more
- Say it: say colloquor, colloquī
- Recall: say the Latin for to refuse, then the Latin for to fly about, then say colloquor, colloquī again

Before you move on

What does colloquor, colloquī mean? ("To talk together".) Say it once more.

201.2 trādō, trādere — to hand over

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fly about, then the Latin for to talk together.

You'll want to know: trādō, trādere

trādō, trādere — "to hand over".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trādō is contracted from trāns, "across", and dō, "to give" (Lewis & Short): to hand across. English tradition and traitor come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trādō, trādere
- Say it: trādō, trādere, once more
- Say it: say trādō, trādere
- Recall: say the Latin for to fly about, then the Latin for to talk together, then say trādō, trādere again

Before you move on

What does trādō, trādere mean? ("To hand over".) Say it once more.

201.3 corrigō, corrigere — to straighten, to correct

Before the new one: say the Latin for to talk together, then the Latin for to hand over.

You'll want to know: corrigō, corrigere

corrigō, corrigere — "to straighten, to correct".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

corrigō is regō, "to keep straight" (Lewis & Short), with con-, "thoroughly": to make fully straight.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: corrigō, corrigere
- Say it: corrigō, corrigere, once more
- Say it: say corrigō, corrigere
- Recall: say the Latin for to talk together, then the Latin for to hand over, then say corrigō, corrigere again

Before you move on

What does corrigō, corrigere mean? ("To straighten, to correct".) Say it once more.

201.4 celebrō, celebrāre — to celebrate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hand over, then the Latin for to straighten.

You'll want to know: celebrō, celebrāre

celebrō, celebrāre — "to celebrate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

celebrō is built on celeber, "crowded, much visited" (Lewis & Short): to throng a place, then to honour it with crowds.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: celebrō, celebrāre
- Say it: celebrō, celebrāre, once more
- Say it: say celebrō, celebrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to hand over, then the Latin for to straighten, then say celebrō, celebrāre again

Before you move on

What does celebrō, celebrāre mean? ("To celebrate".) Say it once more.

201.5 persequor, persequī — to pursue

Before the new one: say the Latin for to straighten, then the Latin for to celebrate.

You'll want to know: persequor, persequī

persequor, persequī — "to pursue".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

persequor is per, "through", with sequor, "to follow" (EtymDB 2.1). sequor is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sekw-*, "to follow" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: persequor, persequī
- Say it: persequor, persequī, once more
- Say it: say persequor, persequī
- Recall: say the Latin for to straighten, then the Latin for to celebrate, then say persequor, persequī again

Before you move on

What does persequor, persequī mean? ("To pursue".) Say it once more.

Chapter 202

To advise, To tremble, To welcome, To do, To go forward

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to advise, to tremble, to welcome, to do and to go forward.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 202: I can say to advise, to tremble, to welcome, to do and to go forward.

202.1 suādeō, suādēre — to advise, to urge

Before the new one: say the Latin for to celebrate, then the Latin for to pursue.

You'll want to know: suādeō, suādēre

suādeō, suādēre — "to advise, to urge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suādeō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sweh2d-*, "sweet" (EtymDB 2.1): to advise was to make a thing sweet to someone. suāvis, "sweet", and English sweet are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: suādeō, suādēre
- Say it: suādeō, suādēre, once more
- Say it: say suādeō, suādēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to celebrate, then the Latin for to pursue, then say suādeō, suādēre again

Before you move on

What does suādeō, suādēre mean? ("To advise, to urge".) Say it once more.

202.2 tremō, tremere — to tremble

Before the new one: say the Latin for to pursue, then the Latin for to advise.

You'll want to know: tremō, tremere

tremō, tremere — "to tremble".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tremō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European trem-*, "to tremble" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek tremō, "to tremble", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tremō, tremere
- Say it: tremō, tremere, once more
- Say it: say tremō, tremere

- Recall: say the Latin for to pursue, then the Latin for to advise, then say tremō, tremere again

Before you move on

What does tremō, tremere mean? ("To tremble".) Say it once more.

202.3 excipiō, excipere — to welcome, to receive

Before the new one: say the Latin for to advise, then the Latin for to tremble.

You'll want to know: excipiō, excipere

excipiō, excipere — "to welcome, to receive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

excipiō is ex, "out", with capiō, "to take" (EtymDB 2.1), its a weakened to i: to take out, to receive. capiō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European keh2p-*, "to grab" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: excipiō, excipere
- Say it: excipiō, excipere, once more
- Say it: say excipiō, excipere
- Recall: say the Latin for to advise, then the Latin for to tremble, then say excipiō, excipere again

Before you move on

What does excipiō, excipere mean? ("To welcome, to receive".) Say it once more.

202.4 agō, agere — to do, to drive

Before the new one: say the Latin for to tremble, then the Latin for to welcome.

You'll want to know: agō, agere

agō, agere — "to do, to drive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

agō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2eg-*, "to drive, to lead" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek agō, "to lead", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: agō, agere
- Say it: agō, agere, once more
- Say it: say agō, agere
- Recall: say the Latin for to tremble, then the Latin for to welcome, then say agō, agere again

Before you move on

What does agō, agere mean? ("To do, to drive".) Say it once more.

202.5 prōcēdō, prōcēdere — to go forward, to advance

Before the new one: say the Latin for to welcome, then the Latin for to do.

You'll want to know: prōcēdō, prōcēdere

prōcēdō, prōcēdere — "to go forward, to advance".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōcēdō is prō, "forward", with cēdō, "to go" (EtymDB 2.1). English proceed and process come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōcēdō, prōcēdere
- Say it: prōcēdō, prōcēdere, once more
- Say it: say prōcēdō, prōcēdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to welcome, then the Latin for to do, then say prōcēdō, prōcēdere again

Before you move on

What does prōcēdō, prōcēdere mean? ("To go forward, to advance".) Say it once more.

Chapter 203

To doubt, To look for, To use up, To annoy, To forget

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to doubt, to look for, to use up, to annoy and to forget.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 203: I can say to doubt, to look for, to use up, to annoy and to forget.

203.1 dubitō, dubitāre — to doubt, to hesitate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to do, then the Latin for to go forward.

You'll want to know: dubitō, dubitāre

dubitō, dubitāre — "to doubt, to hesitate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dubitō is built on dubius, "doubtful" (Lewis & Short), whose first part is duo, "two": to be of two minds.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dubitō, dubitāre
- Say it: dubitō, dubitāre, once more
- Say it: say dubitō, dubitāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to do, then the Latin for to go forward, then say dubitō, dubitāre again

Before you move on

What does dubitō, dubitāre mean? ("To doubt, to hesitate".) Say it once more.

203.2 quaerō, quaerere — to look for, to ask

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go forward, then the Latin for to doubt.

You'll want to know: quaerō, quaerere

quaerō, quaerere — "to look for, to ask".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quaerō has no sure origin. Old Latin wrote it quairō, and quaesō, "I beg", is an older form of the same verb (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quaerō, quaerere
- Say it: quaerō, quaerere, once more
- Say it: say quaerō, quaerere
- Recall: say the Latin for to go forward, then the Latin for to doubt, then say quaerō, quaerere again

Before you move on

What does quaerō, quaerere mean? ("To look for, to ask".) Say it once more.

203.3 cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere — to use up

Before the new one: say the Latin for to doubt, then the Latin for to look for.

You'll want to know: cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere

cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere — "to use up".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsūmō is con-, "completely", with sūmō, "to take" (EtymDB 2.1): to take wholly, to use up.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere
- Say it: cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere, once more
- Say it: say cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere
- Recall: say the Latin for to doubt, then the Latin for to look for, then say cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere again

Before you move on

What does cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere mean? ("To use up".) Say it once more.

203.4 vexō, vexāre — to annoy, to harass

Before the new one: say the Latin for to look for, then the Latin for to use up.

You'll want to know: vexō, vexāre

vexō, vexāre — "to annoy, to harass".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vexō is usually taken as a frequentative of vehō, "to carry" (Lewis & Short): to keep carrying about, to toss, so to harass.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vexō, vexāre
- Say it: vexō, vexāre, once more
- Say it: say vexō, vexāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to look for, then the Latin for to use up, then say vexō, vexāre again

Before you move on

What does vexō, vexāre mean? ("To annoy, to harass".) Say it once more.

203.5 oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī — to forget

Before the new one: say the Latin for to use up, then the Latin for to annoy.

You'll want to know: oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī

oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī — "to forget".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oblīvīscor is usually explained as ob, "over", with a root for smearing or smoothing: the mind wiped over. Lewis & Short tie it instead to līvor, "a dark colour".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī
- Say it: oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī, once more
- Say it: say oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī
- Recall: say the Latin for to use up, then the Latin for to annoy, then say oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī again

Before you move on

What does oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī mean? ("To forget".) Say it once more.

Chapter 204

To state firmly, To hurt, To decorate, To throw together, To cease

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to state firmly, to hurt, to decorate, to throw together and to cease.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 204: I can say to state firmly, to hurt, to decorate, to throw together and to cease.

204.1 affirmō, affirmāre — to state firmly

Before the new one: say the Latin for to annoy, then the Latin for to forget.

You'll want to know: affirmō, affirmāre

affirmō, affirmāre — "to state firmly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

affirmō is ad, "to", with firmō, "to make firm" (EtymDB 2.1), from firmus, "firm": to make a statement firm.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: affirmō, affirmāre
- Say it: affirmō, affirmāre, once more
- Say it: say affirmō, affirmāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to annoy, then the Latin for to forget, then say affirmō, affirmāre again

Before you move on

What does affirmō, affirmāre mean? ("To state firmly".) Say it once more.

204.2 doleō, dolēre — to hurt, to grieve

Before the new one: say the Latin for to forget, then the Latin for to state firmly.

You'll want to know: doleō, dolēre

doleō, dolēre — "to hurt, to grieve".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

doleō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European delh1-*, "to split, to cut" (EtymDB 2.1): pain as a cutting.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: doleō, dolēre
- Say it: doleō, dolēre, once more
- Say it: say doleō, dolēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to forget, then the Latin for to state firmly, then say doleō, dolēre again

Before you move on

What does doleō, dolēre mean? ("To hurt, to grieve".) Say it once more.

204.3 ōrnō, ōrnāre — to decorate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to state firmly, then the Latin for to hurt.

You'll want to know: ōrnō, ōrnāre

ōrnō, ōrnāre — "to decorate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrnō is often explained as a shortened ordināre*, "to put in order", from ōrdō, "a row, an order", but this is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrnō, ōrnāre
- Say it: ōrnō, ōrnāre, once more
- Say it: say ōrnō, ōrnāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to state firmly, then the Latin for to hurt, then say ōrnō, ōrnāre again

Before you move on

What does ōrnō, ōrnāre mean? ("To decorate".) Say it once more.

204.4 coniciō, conicere — to throw together; to guess

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hurt, then the Latin for to decorate.

You'll want to know: coniciō, conicere

coniciō, conicere — "to throw together; to guess".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coniciō is con-, "together", with iaciō, "to throw" (EtymDB 2.1): to throw together, then to put facts together, to guess. English conjecture comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: coniciō, conicere
- Say it: coniciō, conicere, once more
- Say it: say coniciō, conicere
- Recall: say the Latin for to hurt, then the Latin for to decorate, then say coniciō, conicere again

Before you move on

What does coniciō, conicere mean? ("To throw together; to guess".) Say it once more.

204.5 dēsinō, dēsinere — to cease

Before the new one: say the Latin for to decorate, then the Latin for to throw together; to guess.

You'll want to know: dēsinō, dēsinere

dēsinō, dēsinere — "to cease".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēsinō is dē, "off, away", with sinō, "to let, to leave": to leave off. Sinō is inherited, but its deeper origin is uncertain: EtymDB 2.1 records two different roots.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēsinō, dēsinere
- Say it: dēsinō, dēsinere, once more
- Say it: say dēsinō, dēsinere
- Recall: say the Latin for to decorate, then the Latin for to throw together; to guess, then say dēsinō, dēsinere again

Before you move on

What does dēsinō, dēsinere mean? ("To cease".) Say it once more.

Chapter 205

Wound, Scar, Head cold, Drug, Ointment

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a wound, a scar, a head cold, a drug and an ointment.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 205: I can say a wound, a scar, a head cold, a drug and an ointment.

205.1 vulnus, vulneris — a wound

Before the new one: say the Latin for to throw together; to guess, then the Latin for to cease.

You'll want to know: vulnus, vulneris

vulnus, vulneris — "a wound".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vulnus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root wel-*, "to tear, to wound". Lewis & Short link it with vellō, "to pluck, to tear".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vulnus, vulneris
- Say it: vulnus, vulneris, once more
- Say it: say vulnus, vulneris
- Recall: say the Latin for to throw together; to guess, then the Latin for to cease, then say vulnus, vulneris again

Before you move on

What does vulnus, vulneris mean? ("A wound".) Say it once more.

205.2 cicātrīx, cicātrīcis — a scar

Before the new one: say the Latin for to cease, then the Latin for a wound.

You'll want to know: cicātrīx, cicātrīcis

cicātrīx, cicātrīcis — "a scar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cicātrīx has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cicātrīx, cicātrīcis
- Say it: cicātrīx, cicātrīcis, once more
- Say it: say cicātrīx, cicātrīcis
- Recall: say the Latin for to cease, then the Latin for a wound, then say cicātrīx, cicātrīcis again

Before you move on

What does cicātrīx, cicātrīcis mean? ("A scar".) Say it once more.

205.3 gravēdō, gravēdinis — a head cold

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wound, then the Latin for a scar.

You'll want to know: gravēdō, gravēdinis

gravēdō, gravēdinis — "a head cold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gravēdō is built on gravis, "heavy" (Lewis & Short): the heaviness of a head cold.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gravēdō, gravēdinis
- Say it: gravēdō, gravēdinis, once more
- Say it: say gravēdō, gravēdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a wound, then the Latin for a scar, then say gravēdō, gravēdinis again

Before you move on

What does gravēdō, gravēdinis mean? ("A head cold".) Say it once more.

205.4 medicāmentum, medicāmentī — a drug, a medicine

Before the new one: say the Latin for a scar, then the Latin for a head cold.

You'll want to know: medicāmentum, medicāmentī

medicāmentum, medicāmentī — "a drug, a medicine".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

medicāmentum is built on medicor, "to heal, to treat" (Lewis & Short), with -mentum, an ending for a means: the means of healing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: medicāmentum, medicāmentī
- Say it: medicāmentum, medicāmentī, once more
- Say it: say medicāmentum, medicāmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a scar, then the Latin for a head cold, then say medicāmentum, medicāmentī again

Before you move on

What does medicāmentum, medicāmentī mean? ("A drug, a medicine".) Say it once more.

205.5 unguentum, unguentī — an ointment

Before the new one: say the Latin for a head cold, then the Latin for a drug.

You'll want to know: unguentum, unguentī

unguentum, unguentī — "an ointment".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

unguentum is built on unguō, "to smear, to anoint" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3engw-*, "to salve, to anoint" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: unguentum, unguentī
- Say it: unguentum, unguentī, once more
- Say it: say unguentum, unguentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a head cold, then the Latin for a drug, then say unguentum, unguentī again

Before you move on

What does unguentum, unguentī mean? ("An ointment".) Say it once more.

205.6 Words from chapters 197-200 — a first pass

Say the words for a drug and an ointment.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to kiss, to greet, to invite, to explain, to interpret
- to forbid, to defend, to die, to marry, to rest
- to compare; to get ready, to persuade, to blame, to share, to avoid
- to lift, to reach, to recognise, to refuse, to fly about

Before you move on

To kiss? (ōsculor, ōsculārī.) To greet? (salūtō, salūtāre.) To invite? (invītō, invītāre.) To explain? (explicō, explicāre.) To interpret? (interpretor, interpretārī.) To forbid? (vetō, vetāre.) To defend? (dēfendō, dēfendere.) To die? (morior, morī.) To marry? (nūbō, nūbere.) To rest? (quiēscō, quiēscere.) To compare; to get ready? (comparō, comparāre.) To persuade? (persuādeō, persuādēre.) To blame? (reprehendō, reprehendere.) To share? (partior, partīrī.) To avoid? (vītō, vītāre.) To lift? (tollō, tollere.) To reach? (perveniō, pervenīre.) To recognise? (agnōscō, agnōscere.) To refuse? (recūsō, recūsāre.) To fly about? (volitō, volitāre.)

205.7 Words from chapters 201-205 — a second pass

Say the words for to talk together and to hand over.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to talk together, to hand over, to straighten, to celebrate, to pursue
- to advise, to tremble, to welcome, to do, to go forward
- to doubt, to look for, to use up, to annoy, to forget
- to state firmly, to hurt, to decorate, to throw together; to guess, to cease
- a wound, a scar, a head cold, a drug, an ointment

Before you move on

To talk together? (colloquor, colloquī.) To hand over? (trādō, trādere.) To straighten? (corrigō, corrigere.) To celebrate? (celebrō, celebrāre.) To pursue? (persequor, persequī.) To advise? (suādeō, suādēre.) To tremble? (tremō, tremere.) To welcome? (excipiō, excipere.) To do? (agō, agere.) To go forward? (prōcēdō, prōcēdere.) To doubt? (dubitō, dubitāre.) To look for? (quaerō, quaerere.) To use up? (cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere.) To annoy? (vexō, vexāre.) To forget? (oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī.) To state firmly? (affirmō, affirmāre.) To hurt? (doleō, dolēre.) To decorate? (ōrnō, ōrnāre.) To throw together; to guess? (coniciō, conicere.) To cease? (dēsinō, dēsinere.) A wound? (vulnus, vulneris.) A scar? (cicātrīx, cicātrīcis.) A head cold? (gravēdō, gravēdinis.) A drug? (medicāmentum, medicāmentī.) An ointment? (unguentum, unguentī.)

Chapter 206

Breath, Memory, Wisdom, Talent, Habit

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say breath, memory, wisdom, talent and a habit.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 206: I can say breath, memory, wisdom, talent and a habit.

206.1 anima, animae — breath, soul

Before the new one: say the Latin for a drug, a medicine, then the Latin for an ointment.

You'll want to know: anima, animae

anima, animae — "breath, soul".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

anima is the partner of animus, "mind, spirit" (EtymDB 2.1), and both are usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2enh1-*, "to breathe" (EtymDB 2.1): the soul as breath.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: anima, animae
- Say it: anima, animae, once more
- Say it: say anima, animae
- Recall: say the Latin for a drug, a medicine, then the Latin for an ointment, then say anima, animae again

Before you move on

What does anima, animae mean? ("Breath, soul".) Say it once more.

206.2 memoria, memoriae — memory

Before the new one: say the Latin for an ointment, then the Latin for breath.

You'll want to know: memoria, memoriae

memoria, memoriae — "memory".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

memoria is built on memor, "mindful" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)mer-*, "to remember, to be mindful" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: memoria, memoriae
- Say it: memoria, memoriae, once more
- Say it: say memoria, memoriae
- Recall: say the Latin for an ointment, then the Latin for breath, then say memoria, memoriae again

Before you move on

What does memoria, memoriae mean? ("Memory".) Say it once more.

206.3 sapientia, sapientiae — wisdom

Before the new one: say the Latin for breath, then the Latin for memory.

You'll want to know: sapientia, sapientiae

sapientia, sapientiae — "wisdom".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sapientia is built on sapiēns, "wise" (Lewis & Short), from sapiō, "to taste, to be wise", with -ia, an ending for a quality.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sapientia, sapientiae
- Say it: sapientia, sapientiae, once more
- Say it: say sapientia, sapientiae
- Recall: say the Latin for breath, then the Latin for memory, then say sapientia, sapientiae again

Before you move on

What does sapientia, sapientiae mean? ("Wisdom".) Say it once more.

206.4 ingenium, ingeniī — talent, character

Before the new one: say the Latin for memory, then the Latin for wisdom.

You'll want to know: ingenium, ingeniī

ingenium, ingeniī — "talent, character".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ingenium is in, "in", with the root of gignō, "to beget, to give birth to" (Lewis & Short): what is born in a person, one's nature. English engine and ingenious come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ingenium, ingeniī
- Say it: ingenium, ingeniī, once more
- Say it: say ingenium, ingeniī
- Recall: say the Latin for memory, then the Latin for wisdom, then say ingenium, ingeniī again

Before you move on

What does ingenium, ingeniī mean? ("Talent, character".) Say it once more.

206.5 cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis — a habit, a custom

Before the new one: say the Latin for wisdom, then the Latin for talent.

You'll want to know: cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis

cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis — "a habit, a custom".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsuētūdō is built on cōnsuēscō, "to get used to" (Lewis & Short), with -tūdō, an ending for a state. English custom comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis
- Say it: cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis, once more
- Say it: say cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for wisdom, then the Latin for talent, then say cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis again

Before you move on

What does cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis mean? ("A habit, a custom".) Say it once more.

Chapter 207

Generation, Age, Sunset, Sunrise, First light

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a generation, age, sunset, sunrise and first light.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 207: I can say a generation, age, sunset, sunrise and first light.

207.1 saeculum, saeculī — a generation, a century

Before the new one: say the Latin for talent, then the Latin for a habit.

You'll want to know: saeculum, saeculī

saeculum, saeculī — "a generation, a century".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saeculum has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. Welsh hoedl, "lifetime", is sometimes compared. English secular comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saeculum, saeculī
- Say it: saeculum, saeculī, once more
- Say it: say saeculum, saeculī
- Recall: say the Latin for talent, then the Latin for a habit, then say saeculum, saeculī again

Before you move on

What does saeculum, saeculī mean? ("A generation, a century".) Say it once more.

207.2 aetās, aetātis — age, a lifetime

Before the new one: say the Latin for a habit, then the Latin for a generation.

You'll want to know: aetās, aetātis

aetās, aetātis — "age, a lifetime".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aetās is contracted from older aevitās (Lewis & Short), built on aevum, "a lifetime, an age", which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2eyu-*, "life force".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aetās, aetātis
- Say it: aetās, aetātis, once more
- Say it: say aetās, aetātis

- Recall: say the Latin for a habit, then the Latin for a generation, then say aetās, aetātis again

Before you move on

What does aetās, aetātis mean? ("Age, a lifetime".) Say it once more.

207.3 occāsus, occāsūs — sunset; a setting

Before the new one: say the Latin for a generation, then the Latin for age.

You'll want to know: occāsus, occāsūs

occāsus, occāsūs — "sunset; a setting".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

occāsus is built on occidō, "to fall down, to set" (Lewis & Short), from ob, "towards", and cadō, "to fall": the sun's going down.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: occāsus, occāsūs
- Say it: occāsus, occāsūs, once more
- Say it: say occāsus, occāsūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a generation, then the Latin for age, then say occāsus, occāsūs again

Before you move on

What does occāsus, occāsūs mean? ("Sunset; a setting".) Say it once more.

207.4 ortus, ortūs — sunrise; a rising

Before the new one: say the Latin for age, then the Latin for sunset; a setting.

You'll want to know: ortus, ortūs

ortus, ortūs — "sunrise; a rising".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ortus is built on orior, "to rise" (Lewis & Short): the sun's rising. English orient, "the east", comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ortus, ortūs
- Say it: ortus, ortūs, once more
- Say it: say ortus, ortūs
- Recall: say the Latin for age, then the Latin for sunset; a setting, then say ortus, ortūs again

Before you move on

What does ortus, ortūs mean? ("Sunrise; a rising".) Say it once more.

207.5 dīlūculum, dīlūculī — first light, daybreak

Before the new one: say the Latin for sunset; a setting, then the Latin for sunrise; a rising.

You'll want to know: dīlūculum, dīlūculī

dīlūculum, dīlūculī — "first light, daybreak".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīlūculum is built on dīlūceō, "to grow light" (Lewis & Short), from lūx, "light", with -culum, a diminutive ending: the first glimmer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dīlūculum, dīlūculī
- Say it: dīlūculum, dīlūculī, once more
- Say it: say dīlūculum, dīlūculī
- Recall: say the Latin for sunset; a setting, then the Latin for sunrise; a rising, then say dīlūculum, dīlūculī again

Before you move on

What does dīlūculum, dīlūculī mean? ("First light, daybreak".) Say it once more.

Chapter 208

Finally, Lastly, On the spot, Formerly, Long since

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say finally, lastly, on the spot, formerly and long since.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 208: I can say finally, lastly, on the spot, formerly and long since.

208.1 dēnique — finally

Before the new one: say the Latin for sunrise; a rising, then the Latin for first light.

You'll want to know: dēnique

dēnique — "finally".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēnique has no sure origin; it may be built on dē, "down from", with -que, "and", but Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēnique
- Say it: dēnique, once more
- Say it: say dēnique
- Recall: say the Latin for sunrise; a rising, then the Latin for first light, then say dēnique again

Before you move on

What does dēnique mean? ("Finally".) Say it once more.

208.2 postrēmō — lastly

Before the new one: say the Latin for first light, then the Latin for finally.

You'll want to know: postrēmō

postrēmō — "lastly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

postrēmō is the adverb of postrēmus, "last", the superlative of posterus, "coming after" (Lewis & Short), from post, "after".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: postrēmō
- Say it: postrēmō, once more
- Say it: say postrēmō
- Recall: say the Latin for first light, then the Latin for finally, then say postrēmō again

Before you move on

What does postrēmō mean? ("Lastly".) Say it once more.

208.3 illicō — on the spot

Before the new one: say the Latin for finally, then the Latin for lastly.

You'll want to know: illicō

illicō — "on the spot".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

illicō is usually explained as in locō, "on the spot", run together (Lewis & Short, which prefers the spelling īlicō).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: illicō
- Say it: illicō, once more
- Say it: say illicō
- Recall: say the Latin for finally, then the Latin for lastly, then say illicō again

Before you move on

What does illicō mean? ("On the spot".) Say it once more.

208.4 quondam — formerly, at one time

Before the new one: say the Latin for lastly, then the Latin for on the spot.

You'll want to know: quondam

quondam — "formerly, at one time".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quondam is quom, "when", the old form of cum, with -dam, a pointing ending (Lewis & Short): at some time, once.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quondam
- Say it: quondam, once more
- Say it: say quondam
- Recall: say the Latin for lastly, then the Latin for on the spot, then say quondam again

Before you move on

What does quondam mean? ("Formerly, at one time".) Say it once more.

208.5 iamdūdum — long since

Before the new one: say the Latin for on the spot, then the Latin for formerly.

You'll want to know: iamdūdum

iamdūdum — "long since".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iamdūdum is iam, "already", with dūdum, "a while ago" (Lewis & Short): already long ago.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iamdūdum
- Say it: iamdūdum, once more
- Say it: say iamdūdum
- Recall: say the Latin for on the spot, then the Latin for formerly, then say iamdūdum again

Before you move on

What does iamdūdum mean? ("Long since".) Say it once more.

Chapter 209

Region, Province, From there, In the way, All the way

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a region, a province, from there, in the way and all the way.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 209: I can say a region, a province, from there, in the way and all the way.

209.1 regiō, regiōnis — a region

Before the new one: say the Latin for formerly, then the Latin for long since.

You'll want to know: regiō, regiōnis

regiō, regiōnis — "a region".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

regiō is built on regō, "to direct, to draw straight" (Lewis & Short): first a straight line, a boundary, then the area it marks out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: regiō, regiōnis
- Say it: regiō, regiōnis, once more
- Say it: say regiō, regiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for formerly, then the Latin for long since, then say regiō, regiōnis again

Before you move on

What does regiō, regiōnis mean? ("A region".) Say it once more.

209.2 prōvincia, prōvinciae — a province

Before the new one: say the Latin for long since, then the Latin for a region.

You'll want to know: prōvincia, prōvinciae

prōvincia, prōvinciae — "a province".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōvincia has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. A link with vincō, "to conquer", is popular but not proven.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōvincia, prōvinciae
- Say it: prōvincia, prōvinciae, once more
- Say it: say prōvincia, prōvinciae
- Recall: say the Latin for long since, then the Latin for a region, then say prōvincia, prōvinciae again

Before you move on

What does prōvincia, prōvinciae mean? ("A province".) Say it once more.

209.3 inde — from there; then

Before the new one: say the Latin for a region, then the Latin for a province.

You'll want to know: inde

inde — "from there; then".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inde is usually explained as built on the pronoun stem of is, "he, that", with an ending -de, "from" (Lewis & Short): from there.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inde
- Say it: inde, once more
- Say it: say inde
- Recall: say the Latin for a region, then the Latin for a province, then say inde again

Before you move on

What does inde mean? ("From there; then".) Say it once more.

209.4 obviam — in the way, to meet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a province, then the Latin for from there; then.

You'll want to know: obviam

obviam — "in the way, to meet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obviam is ob, "towards, in front of", with viam, "the way" (Lewis & Short): in the way, so to meet someone.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: obviam
- Say it: obviam, once more
- Say it: say obviam
- Recall: say the Latin for a province, then the Latin for from there; then, then say obviam again

Before you move on

What does obviam mean? ("In the way, to meet".) Say it once more.

209.5 usque — all the way, continuously

Before the new one: say the Latin for from there; then, then the Latin for in the way.

You'll want to know: usque

usque — "all the way, continuously".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

usque is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European uds-kwe*, "and up to" (EtymDB 2.1); its ending is the -que, "and", of Latin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: usque
- Say it: usque, once more
- Say it: say usque
- Recall: say the Latin for from there; then, then the Latin for in the way, then say usque again

Before you move on

What does usque mean? ("All the way, continuously".) Say it once more.

Chapter 210

Moreover, Indeed, Surely, About, Only

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say moreover, indeed, surely, about and only.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 210: I can say moreover, indeed, surely, about and only.

210.1 autem — moreover; however

Before the new one: say the Latin for in the way, then the Latin for all the way.

You'll want to know: autem

autem — "moreover; however".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

autem belongs with aut, "or" (Lewis & Short), but how the two were formed is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: autem
- Say it: autem, once more
- Say it: say autem
- Recall: say the Latin for in the way, then the Latin for all the way, then say autem again

Before you move on

What does autem mean? ("Moreover; however".) Say it once more.

210.2 vērō — indeed; but

Before the new one: say the Latin for all the way, then the Latin for moreover; however.

You'll want to know: vērō

vērō — "indeed; but".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vērō is an old case form of vērus, "true" (Lewis & Short): in truth.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vērō
- Say it: vērō, once more
- Say it: say vērō
- Recall: say the Latin for all the way, then the Latin for moreover; however, then say vērō again

Before you move on

What does vērō mean? ("Indeed; but".) Say it once more.

210.3 profectō — surely

Before the new one: say the Latin for moreover; however, then the Latin for indeed; but.

You'll want to know: profectō

profectō — "surely".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

profectō is prō factō, "for a fact" (Lewis & Short): surely.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: profectō
- Say it: profectō, once more
- Say it: say profectō
- Recall: say the Latin for moreover; however, then the Latin for indeed; but, then say profectō again

Before you move on

What does profectō mean? ("Surely".) Say it once more.

210.4 ferē — about, nearly

Before the new one: say the Latin for indeed; but, then the Latin for surely.

You'll want to know: ferē

ferē — "about, nearly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ferē has no sure origin; it is often linked through a root dher-*, "to hold fast" (EtymDB 2.1), with firmus, "firm", but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ferē
- Say it: ferē, once more
- Say it: say ferē
- Recall: say the Latin for indeed; but, then the Latin for surely, then say ferē again

Before you move on

What does ferē mean? ("About, nearly".) Say it once more.

210.5 tantum — only; so much

Before the new one: say the Latin for surely, then the Latin for about.

You'll want to know: tantum

tantum — "only; so much".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tantum is the neuter of tantus, "so great", used as an adverb (Lewis & Short): so much, and only so much.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tantum
- Say it: tantum, once more
- Say it: say tantum
- Recall: say the Latin for surely, then the Latin for about, then say tantum again

Before you move on

What does tantum mean? ("Only; so much".) Say it once more.

Chapter 211

Altogether, Hardly, Of one's own accord, In vain, Back again

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say altogether, hardly, of one's own accord, in vain and back again.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 211: I can say altogether, hardly, of one's own accord, in vain and back again.

211.1 omnīnō — altogether

Before the new one: say the Latin for about, then the Latin for only; so much.

You'll want to know: omnīnō

omnīnō — "altogether".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

omnīnō is built on omnis, "all" (Lewis & Short): altogether. Where omnis comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: omnīnō
- Say it: omnīnō, once more
- Say it: say omnīnō
- Recall: say the Latin for about, then the Latin for only; so much, then say omnīnō again

Before you move on

What does omnīnō mean? ("Altogether".) Say it once more.

211.2 vix — hardly

Before the new one: say the Latin for only; so much, then the Latin for altogether.

You'll want to know: vix

vix — "hardly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vix has no sure origin; Lewis & Short suggest the root of vincō, "to win": won with effort. That is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vix
- Say it: vix, once more
- Say it: say vix
- Recall: say the Latin for only; so much, then the Latin for altogether, then say vix again

Before you move on

What does vix mean? ("Hardly".) Say it once more.

211.3 sponte — of one's own accord

Before the new one: say the Latin for altogether, then the Latin for hardly.

You'll want to know: sponte

sponte — "of one's own accord".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sponte is the ablative of an old noun for "free will"; Lewis & Short link it with spondeō, "to pledge", but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sponte
- Say it: sponte, once more
- Say it: say sponte
- Recall: say the Latin for altogether, then the Latin for hardly, then say sponte again

Before you move on

What does sponte mean? ("Of one's own accord".) Say it once more.

211.4 frūstrā — in vain

Before the new one: say the Latin for hardly, then the Latin for of one's own accord.

You'll want to know: frūstrā

frūstrā — "in vain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frūstrā is usually linked with fraus, "deceit, harm" (Lewis & Short): to one's harm, so in vain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frūstrā
- Say it: frūstrā, once more
- Say it: say frūstrā
- Recall: say the Latin for hardly, then the Latin for of one's own accord, then say frūstrā again

Before you move on

What does frūstrā mean? ("In vain".) Say it once more.

211.5 rūrsus — back again, once more

Before the new one: say the Latin for of one's own accord, then the Latin for in vain.

You'll want to know: rūrsus

rūrsus — "back again, once more".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rūrsus is contracted from revorsus, "turned back" (Lewis & Short), the participle of revertō, "to turn back".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rūrsus
- Say it: rūrsus, once more
- Say it: say rūrsus
- Recall: say the Latin for of one's own accord, then the Latin for in vain, then say rūrsus again

Before you move on

What does rūrsus mean? ("Back again, once more".) Say it once more.

Chapter 212

Inquisitive, Envious, Anxious, Peaceful, Silent

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say inquisitive, envious, anxious, peaceful and silent.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 212: I can say inquisitive, envious, anxious, peaceful and silent.

212.1 cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum — inquisitive, painstaking

Before the new one: say the Latin for in vain, then the Latin for back again.

You'll want to know: cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum

cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum — "inquisitive, painstaking".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūriōsus is built on cūra, "care" (Lewis & Short), with -ōsus, "full of": full of care, so careful or prying. English curious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum
- Say it: cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum, once more
- Say it: say cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for in vain, then the Latin for back again, then say cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum again

Before you move on

What does cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum mean? ("Inquisitive, painstaking".) Say it once more.

212.2 invidus, invida, invidum — envious

Before the new one: say the Latin for back again, then the Latin for inquisitive.

You'll want to know: invidus, invida, invidum

invidus, invida, invidum — "envious".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

invidus is built on invideō, "to look askance at, to envy" (Lewis & Short), from in, "against", and videō, "to see". English envy comes from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: invidus, invida, invidum
- Say it: invidus, invida, invidum, once more
- Say it: say invidus, invida, invidum

- Recall: say the Latin for back again, then the Latin for inquisitive, then say invidus, invida, invidum again

Before you move on

What does invidus, invida, invidum mean? ("Envious".) Say it once more.

212.3 anxius, anxia, anxium — anxious

Before the new one: say the Latin for inquisitive, then the Latin for envious.

You'll want to know: anxius, anxia, anxium

anxius, anxia, anxium — "anxious".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

anxius is built on angō, "to squeeze, to choke, to distress" (Lewis & Short): choked with worry.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: anxius, anxia, anxium
- Say it: anxius, anxia, anxium, once more
- Say it: say anxius, anxia, anxium
- Recall: say the Latin for inquisitive, then the Latin for envious, then say anxius, anxia, anxium again

Before you move on

What does anxius, anxia, anxium mean? ("Anxious".) Say it once more.

212.4 placidus, placida, placidum — peaceful, placid

Before the new one: say the Latin for envious, then the Latin for anxious.

You'll want to know: placidus, placida, placidum

placidus, placida, placidum — "peaceful, placid".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

placidus is built on placeō, "to please" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives: pleasing, mild.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: placidus, placida, placidum
- Say it: placidus, placida, placidum, once more
- Say it: say placidus, placida, placidum
- Recall: say the Latin for envious, then the Latin for anxious, then say placidus, placida, placidum again

Before you move on

What does placidus, placida, placidum mean? ("Peaceful, placid".) Say it once more.

212.5 tacitus, tacita, tacitum — silent

Before the new one: say the Latin for anxious, then the Latin for peaceful.

You'll want to know: tacitus, tacita, tacitum

tacitus, tacita, tacitum — "silent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tacitus is the past participle of taceō, "to be silent" (Lewis & Short): passed over in silence, then silent. English tacit comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tacitus, tacita, tacitum
- Say it: tacitus, tacita, tacitum, once more
- Say it: say tacitus, tacita, tacitum
- Recall: say the Latin for anxious, then the Latin for peaceful, then say tacitus, tacita, tacitum again

Before you move on

What does tacitus, tacita, tacitum mean? ("Silent".) Say it once more.

Chapter 213

Foreign, Honest, Patient, Generous, Idle

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say foreign, honest, patient, generous and idle.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 213: I can say foreign, honest, patient, generous and idle.

213.1 peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum — foreign

Before the new one: say the Latin for peaceful, then the Latin for silent.

You'll want to know: peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum

peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum — "foreign".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

peregrīnus is built on peregrē, "abroad, from abroad" (Lewis & Short), from per, "through", and ager, "field, territory": beyond one's own lands. English pilgrim comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum
- Say it: peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum, once more
- Say it: say peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum
- Recall: say the Latin for peaceful, then the Latin for silent, then say peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum again

Before you move on

What does peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum mean? ("Foreign".) Say it once more.

213.2 probus, proba, probum — honest, upright

Before the new one: say the Latin for silent, then the Latin for foreign.

You'll want to know: probus, proba, probum

probus, proba, probum — "honest, upright".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

probus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pro-bhwo-, "being in front, outstanding" (EtymDB 2.1), from pro, "forward", and bhu-*, "to be"; Sanskrit prabhu-, "mighty", is a close cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: probus, proba, probum
- Say it: probus, proba, probum, once more
- Say it: say probus, proba, probum

- Recall: say the Latin for silent, then the Latin for foreign, then say probus, proba, probum again

Before you move on

What does probus, proba, probum mean? ("Honest, upright".) Say it once more.

213.3 patiēns, patientis — patient

Before the new one: say the Latin for foreign, then the Latin for honest.

You'll want to know: patiēns, patientis

patiēns, patientis — "patient".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patiēns is the present participle of patior, "to suffer, to endure" (Lewis & Short): enduring.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patiēns, patientis
- Say it: patiēns, patientis, once more
- Say it: say patiēns, patientis
- Recall: say the Latin for foreign, then the Latin for honest, then say patiēns, patientis again

Before you move on

What does patiēns, patientis mean? ("Patient".) Say it once more.

213.4 līberālis, līberāle — generous

Before the new one: say the Latin for honest, then the Latin for patient.

You'll want to know: līberālis, līberāle

līberālis, līberāle — "generous".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līberālis is built on līber, "free" (Lewis & Short), with -ālis, "belonging to": fit for a free person, so generous.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: līberālis, līberāle
- Say it: līberālis, līberāle, once more
- Say it: say līberālis, līberāle
- Recall: say the Latin for honest, then the Latin for patient, then say līberālis, līberāle again

Before you move on

What does līberālis, līberāle mean? ("Generous".) Say it once more.

213.5 ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum — idle, cowardly

Before the new one: say the Latin for patient, then the Latin for generous.

You'll want to know: ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum

ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum — "idle, cowardly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ignāvus is in-, "not", with gnāvus, "busy, active" (Lewis & Short), the older form of nāvus: not active.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum
- Say it: ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum, once more
- Say it: say ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum
- Recall: say the Latin for patient, then the Latin for generous, then say ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum again

Before you move on

What does ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum mean? ("Idle, cowardly".) Say it once more.

Chapter 214

Savage, Wild, Of the home, Rare, Frequent

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say savage, wild, of the home, rare and frequent.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 214: I can say savage, wild, of the home, rare and frequent.

214.1 saevus, saeva, saevum — savage, cruel

Before the new one: say the Latin for generous, then the Latin for idle.

You'll want to know: saevus, saeva, saevum

saevus, saeva, saevum — "savage, cruel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saevus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European seh2y-wo-*, "fierce, afflicting" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saevus, saeva, saevum
- Say it: saevus, saeva, saevum, once more
- Say it: say saevus, saeva, saevum
- Recall: say the Latin for generous, then the Latin for idle, then say saevus, saeva, saevum again

Before you move on

What does saevus, saeva, saevum mean? ("Savage, cruel".) Say it once more.

214.2 ferus, fera, ferum — wild

Before the new one: say the Latin for idle, then the Latin for savage.

You'll want to know: ferus, fera, ferum

ferus, fera, ferum — "wild".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ferus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghwer-*, "wild animal" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek thēr, "wild beast", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English fierce comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ferus, fera, ferum
- Say it: ferus, fera, ferum, once more
- Say it: say ferus, fera, ferum

- Recall: say the Latin for idle, then the Latin for savage, then say ferus, fera, ferum again

Before you move on

What does ferus, fera, ferum mean? ("Wild".) Say it once more.

214.3 domesticus, domestica, domesticum — of the home, tame

Before the new one: say the Latin for savage, then the Latin for wild.

You'll want to know: domesticus, domestica, domesticum

domesticus, domestica, domesticum — "of the home, tame".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

domesticus is built on domus, "house" (Lewis & Short), with -ticus, "belonging to": of the house. domus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dom-*, "house" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: domesticus, domestica, domesticum
- Say it: domesticus, domestica, domesticum, once more
- Say it: say domesticus, domestica, domesticum
- Recall: say the Latin for savage, then the Latin for wild, then say domesticus, domestica, domesticum again

Before you move on

What does domesticus, domestica, domesticum mean? ("Of the home, tame".) Say it once more.

214.4 rārus, rāra, rārum — rare, thin

Before the new one: say the Latin for wild, then the Latin for of the home.

You'll want to know: rārus, rāra, rārum

rārus, rāra, rārum — "rare, thin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rārus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root er(e)-*, "loose, spaced apart" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short call it doubtful. Its first sense is "thin, with gaps".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rārus, rāra, rārum
- Say it: rārus, rāra, rārum, once more
- Say it: say rārus, rāra, rārum
- Recall: say the Latin for wild, then the Latin for of the home, then say rārus, rāra, rārum again

Before you move on

What does rārus, rāra, rārum mean? ("Rare, thin".) Say it once more.

214.5 crēber, crēbra, crēbrum — frequent, crowded

Before the new one: say the Latin for of the home, then the Latin for rare.

You'll want to know: crēber, crēbra, crēbrum

crēber, crēbra, crēbrum — "frequent, crowded".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crēber is often linked with crēscō, "to grow" (Lewis & Short), and traced to Proto-Indo-European ker-*, "to grow" (EtymDB 2.1): thick-growing, so crowded.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crēber, crēbra, crēbrum
- Say it: crēber, crēbra, crēbrum, once more
- Say it: say crēber, crēbra, crēbrum
- Recall: say the Latin for of the home, then the Latin for rare, then say crēber, crēbra, crēbrum again

Before you move on

What does crēber, crēbra, crēbrum mean? ("Frequent, crowded".) Say it once more.

214.6 Words from chapters 206-209 — a first pass

Say the words for rare and frequent.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- breath, memory, wisdom, talent, a habit
- a generation, age, sunset; a setting, sunrise; a rising, first light
- finally, lastly, on the spot, formerly, long since
- a region, a province, from there; then, in the way, all the way

Before you move on

Breath? (anima, animae.) Memory? (memoria, memoriae.) Wisdom? (sapientia, sapientiae.) Talent? (ingenium, ingeniī.) A habit? (cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis.) A generation? (saeculum, saeculī.) Age? (aetās, aetātis.) Sunset; a setting? (occāsus, occāsūs.) Sunrise; a rising? (ortus, ortūs.) First light? (dīlūculum, dīlūculī.) Finally? (dēnique.) Lastly? (postrēmō.) On the spot? (illicō.) Formerly? (quondam.) Long since? (iamdūdum.) A region? (regiō, regiōnis.) A province? (prōvincia, prōvinciae.) From there; then? (inde.) In the way? (obviam.) All the way? (usque.)

214.7 Words from chapters 210-214 — a second pass

Say the words for moreover; however and indeed; but.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- moreover; however, indeed; but, surely, about, only; so much
- altogether, hardly, of one's own accord, in vain, back again
- inquisitive, envious, anxious, peaceful, silent
- foreign, honest, patient, generous, idle
- savage, wild, of the home, rare, frequent

Before you move on

Moreover; however? (autem.) Indeed; but? (vērō.) Surely? (profectō.) About? (ferē.) Only; so much? (tantum.) Altogether? (omnīnō.) Hardly? (vix.) Of one's own accord? (sponte.) In vain? (frūstrā.) Back again? (rūrsus.) Inquisitive? (cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum.) Envious? (invidus, invida, invidum.) Anxious? (anxius, anxia, anxium.) Peaceful? (placidus, placida, placidum.) Silent? (tacitus, tacita, tacitum.) Foreign? (peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum.) Honest? (probus, proba, probum.) Patient? (patiēns, patientis.) Generous? (līberālis, līberāle.) Idle? (ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum.) Savage? (saevus, saeva, saevum.) Wild? (ferus, fera, ferum.) Of the home? (domesticus, domestica, domesticum.) Rare? (rārus, rāra, rārum.) Frequent? (crēber, crēbra, crēbrum.)

Chapter 215

Today's, Yesterday's, Tomorrow's, True, Uncertain

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say today's, yesterday's, tomorrow's, true and uncertain.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 215: I can say today's, yesterday's, tomorrow's, true and uncertain.

215.1 hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum — today's

Before the new one: say the Latin for rare, thin, then the Latin for frequent, crowded.

You'll want to know: hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum

hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum — "today's".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hodiernus is built on hodiē, "today" (Lewis & Short), with -ernus, an ending for time: of today.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum
- Say it: hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum, once more
- Say it: say hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum
- Recall: say the Latin for rare, thin, then the Latin for frequent, crowded, then say hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum again

Before you move on

What does hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum mean? ("Today's".) Say it once more.

215.2 hesternus, hesterna, hesternum — yesterday's

Before the new one: say the Latin for frequent, crowded, then the Latin for today's.

You'll want to know: hesternus, hesterna, hesternum

hesternus, hesterna, hesternum — "yesterday's".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hesternus is built on the old stem hes-, "yesterday", the stem behind herī, "yesterday" (Lewis & Short), with -ternus, an ending for time.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hesternus, hesterna, hesternum
- Say it: hesternus, hesterna, hesternum, once more
- Say it: say hesternus, hesterna, hesternum

- Recall: say the Latin for frequent, crowded, then the Latin for today's, then say hesternus, hesterna, hesternum again

Before you move on

What does hesternus, hesterna, hesternum mean? ("Yesterday's".) Say it once more.

215.3 crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum — tomorrow's

Before the new one: say the Latin for today's, then the Latin for yesterday's.

You'll want to know: crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum

crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum — "tomorrow's".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crāstinus is built on crās, "tomorrow" (Lewis & Short), with -tinus, an ending for time. Where crās comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum
- Say it: crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum, once more
- Say it: say crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum
- Recall: say the Latin for today's, then the Latin for yesterday's, then say crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum again

Before you move on

What does crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum mean? ("Tomorrow's".) Say it once more.

215.4 vērus, vēra, vērum — true, real

Before the new one: say the Latin for yesterday's, then the Latin for tomorrow's.

You'll want to know: vērus, vēra, vērum

vērus, vēra, vērum — "true, real".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vērus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weh1ros*, "true" (EtymDB 2.1); German wahr, "true", is a cousin. Lewis & Short still called it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vērus, vēra, vērum
- Say it: vērus, vēra, vērum, once more
- Say it: say vērus, vēra, vērum
- Recall: say the Latin for yesterday's, then the Latin for tomorrow's, then say vērus, vēra, vērum again

Before you move on

What does vērus, vēra, vērum mean? ("True, real".) Say it once more.

215.5 incertus, incerta, incertum — uncertain

Before the new one: say the Latin for tomorrow's, then the Latin for true.

You'll want to know: incertus, incerta, incertum

incertus, incerta, incertum — "uncertain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incertus is in-, "not", with certus, "sure" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: incertus, incerta, incertum
- Say it: incertus, incerta, incertum, once more
- Say it: say incertus, incerta, incertum
- Recall: say the Latin for tomorrow's, then the Latin for true, then say incertus, incerta, incertum again

Before you move on

What does incertus, incerta, incertum mean? ("Uncertain".) Say it once more.

Chapter 216

Bald, Bearded, Charming, Worn out, Wakeful

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say bald, bearded, charming, worn out and wakeful.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 216: I can say bald, bearded, charming, worn out and wakeful.

216.1 calvus, calva, calvum — bald

Before the new one: say the Latin for true, then the Latin for uncertain.

You'll want to know: calvus, calva, calvum

calvus, calva, calvum — "bald".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calvus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European klh2wos*, "bald" (EtymDB 2.1); German kahl, "bald", is often compared (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calvus, calva, calvum
- Say it: calvus, calva, calvum, once more
- Say it: say calvus, calva, calvum
- Recall: say the Latin for true, then the Latin for uncertain, then say calvus, calva, calvum again

Before you move on

What does calvus, calva, calvum mean? ("Bald".) Say it once more.

216.2 barbātus, barbāta, barbātum — bearded

Before the new one: say the Latin for uncertain, then the Latin for bald.

You'll want to know: barbātus, barbāta, barbātum

barbātus, barbāta, barbātum — "bearded".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

barbātus is built on barba, "beard" (Lewis & Short), with -ātus, "provided with": bearded.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: barbātus, barbāta, barbātum
- Say it: barbātus, barbāta, barbātum, once more
- Say it: say barbātus, barbāta, barbātum
- Recall: say the Latin for uncertain, then the Latin for bald, then say barbātus, barbāta, barbātum again

Before you move on

What does barbātus, barbāta, barbātum mean? ("Bearded".) Say it once more.

216.3 venustus, venusta, venustum — charming

Before the new one: say the Latin for bald, then the Latin for bearded.

You'll want to know: venustus, venusta, venustum

venustus, venusta, venustum — "charming".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

venustus is built on venus, "charm, loveliness", the word that is also the goddess's name, Venus (Lewis & Short). It is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wenh1-*, "to desire, to love".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: venustus, venusta, venustum
- Say it: venustus, venusta, venustum, once more
- Say it: say venustus, venusta, venustum
- Recall: say the Latin for bald, then the Latin for bearded, then say venustus, venusta, venustum again

Before you move on

What does venustus, venusta, venustum mean? ("Charming".) Say it once more.

216.4 dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum — worn out

Before the new one: say the Latin for bearded, then the Latin for charming.

You'll want to know: dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum

dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum — "worn out".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēfessus is the participle of dēfetīscor, "to grow weary" (Lewis & Short): dē-, "completely", with the verb behind fessus, "tired".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum
- Say it: dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum, once more
- Say it: say dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum
- Recall: say the Latin for bearded, then the Latin for charming, then say dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum again

Before you move on

What does dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum mean? ("Worn out".) Say it once more.

216.5 vigil, vigilis — wakeful, watchful

Before the new one: say the Latin for charming, then the Latin for worn out.

You'll want to know: vigil, vigilis

vigil, vigilis — "wakeful, watchful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vigil is built on vigeō, "to be lively, to thrive" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weg-*, "to be fresh, to be awake" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vigil, vigilis
- Say it: vigil, vigilis, once more
- Say it: say vigil, vigilis
- Recall: say the Latin for charming, then the Latin for worn out, then say vigil, vigilis again

Before you move on

What does vigil, vigilis mean? ("Wakeful, watchful".) Say it once more.

Chapter 217

Roof tile, Furnace, Litter, Vehicle, Chariot

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a roof tile, a furnace, a litter, a vehicle and a chariot.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 217: I can say a roof tile, a furnace, a litter, a vehicle and a chariot.

217.1 tēgula, tēgulae — a roof tile

Before the new one: say the Latin for worn out, then the Latin for wakeful.

You'll want to know: tēgula, tēgulae

tēgula, tēgulae — "a roof tile".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tēgula is built on tegō, "to cover" (EtymDB 2.1), with -ula, an ending for a tool: the thing that covers. English tile was borrowed from it early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tēgula, tēgulae
- Say it: tēgula, tēgulae, once more
- Say it: say tēgula, tēgulae
- Recall: say the Latin for worn out, then the Latin for wakeful, then say tēgula, tēgulae again

Before you move on

What does tēgula, tēgulae mean? ("A roof tile".) Say it once more.

217.2 fornāx, fornācis — a furnace, a kiln

Before the new one: say the Latin for wakeful, then the Latin for a roof tile.

You'll want to know: fornāx, fornācis

fornāx, fornācis — "a furnace, a kiln".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fornāx belongs with fornus, furnus, "an oven" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwher-*, "warm"; English warm is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fornāx, fornācis
- Say it: fornāx, fornācis, once more
- Say it: say fornāx, fornācis
- Recall: say the Latin for wakeful, then the Latin for a roof tile, then say fornāx, fornācis again

Before you move on

What does fornāx, fornācis mean? ("A furnace, a kiln".) Say it once more.

217.3 lectīca, lectīcae — a litter (carried chair)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a roof tile, then the Latin for a furnace.

You'll want to know: lectīca, lectīcae

lectīca, lectīcae — "a litter (carried chair)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lectīca is built on lectus, "a bed, a couch" (EtymDB 2.1): a couch carried on poles.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lectīca, lectīcae
- Say it: lectīca, lectīcae, once more
- Say it: say lectīca, lectīcae
- Recall: say the Latin for a roof tile, then the Latin for a furnace, then say lectīca, lectīcae again

Before you move on

What does lectīca, lectīcae mean? ("A litter (carried chair)".) Say it once more.

217.4 vehiculum, vehiculī — a vehicle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a furnace, then the Latin for a litter.

You'll want to know: vehiculum, vehiculī

vehiculum, vehiculī — "a vehicle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vehiculum is built on vehō, "to carry" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a means: a means of carrying.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vehiculum, vehiculī
- Say it: vehiculum, vehiculī, once more
- Say it: say vehiculum, vehiculī
- Recall: say the Latin for a furnace, then the Latin for a litter, then say vehiculum, vehiculī again

Before you move on

What does vehiculum, vehiculī mean? ("A vehicle".) Say it once more.

217.5 currus, currūs — a chariot

Before the new one: say the Latin for a litter, then the Latin for a vehicle.

You'll want to know: currus, currūs

currus, currūs — "a chariot".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

currus is built on currō, "to run" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kers-*, "to run" (EtymDB 2.1). English car comes from a Celtic cousin of the same root, through Latin carrus, "a wagon".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: currus, currūs
- Say it: currus, currūs, once more
- Say it: say currus, currūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a litter, then the Latin for a vehicle, then say currus, currūs again

Before you move on

What does currus, currūs mean? ("A chariot".) Say it once more.

Chapter 218

Pace, Witness, Defendant, Punishment, Charge

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a pace, a witness, a defendant, a punishment and a charge.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 218: I can say a pace, a witness, a defendant, a punishment and a charge.

218.1 passus, passūs — a pace

Before the new one: say the Latin for a vehicle, then the Latin for a chariot.

You'll want to know: passus, passūs

passus, passūs — "a pace".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

passus is built on pandō, "to spread out, to stretch" (EtymDB 2.1): a pace as the stretch of the legs. A Roman mile was mīlle passūs, "a thousand paces".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: passus, passūs
- Say it: passus, passūs, once more
- Say it: say passus, passūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a vehicle, then the Latin for a chariot, then say passus, passūs again

Before you move on

What does passus, passūs mean? ("A pace".) Say it once more.

218.2 testis, testis — a witness

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chariot, then the Latin for a pace.

You'll want to know: testis, testis

testis, testis — "a witness".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

testis is usually explained as an old compound, tri-stis*, "the third who stands by", from the root of trēs, "three", and stō, "to stand": a witness as the third party.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: testis, testis
- Say it: testis, testis, once more
- Say it: say testis, testis
- Recall: say the Latin for a chariot, then the Latin for a pace, then say testis, testis again

Before you move on

What does testis, testis mean? ("A witness".) Say it once more.

218.3 reus, reī — a defendant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pace, then the Latin for a witness.

You'll want to know: reus, reī

reus, reī — "a defendant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

reus is built on rēs, "a thing, a matter, a lawsuit" (Lewis & Short): the one the case concerns.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: reus, reī
- Say it: reus, reī, once more
- Say it: say reus, reī
- Recall: say the Latin for a pace, then the Latin for a witness, then say reus, reī again

Before you move on

What does reus, reī mean? ("A defendant".) Say it once more.

218.4 poena, poenae — a punishment

Before the new one: say the Latin for a witness, then the Latin for a defendant.

You'll want to know: poena, poenae

poena, poenae — "a punishment".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

poena was borrowed from Greek poinē, "a fine, blood-money" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwoyneh2*, "penalty" (EtymDB 2.1). English pain comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: poena, poenae
- Say it: poena, poenae, once more
- Say it: say poena, poenae
- Recall: say the Latin for a witness, then the Latin for a defendant, then say poena, poenae again

Before you move on

What does poena, poenae mean? ("A punishment".) Say it once more.

218.5 crīmen, crīminis — a charge, a crime

Before the new one: say the Latin for a defendant, then the Latin for a punishment.

You'll want to know: crīmen, crīminis

crīmen, crīminis — "a charge, a crime".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crīmen belongs with cernō, "to sift, to decide" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kreymn*, "a verdict, a sifting"

(EtymDB 2.1): first a judgement, then a charge.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crīmen, crīminis
- Say it: crīmen, crīminis, once more
- Say it: say crīmen, crīminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a defendant, then the Latin for a punishment, then say crīmen, crīminis again

Before you move on

What does crīmen, crīminis mean? ("A charge, a crime".) Say it once more.

Chapter 219

Reputation, Messenger, Show, Actor, Story

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say reputation, a messenger, a show, an actor and a story.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 219: I can say reputation, a messenger, a show, an actor and a story.

219.1 fāma, fāmae — reputation, rumour

Before the new one: say the Latin for a punishment, then the Latin for a charge.

You'll want to know: fāma, fāmae

fāma, fāmae — "reputation, rumour".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fāma is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bheh2meh2*, "talk, report", from bheh2-*, "to speak" (EtymDB 2.1); fārī, "to speak", has the same root (Lewis & Short). Greek phēmē, "a saying", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fāma, fāmae
- Say it: fāma, fāmae, once more
- Say it: say fāma, fāmae
- Recall: say the Latin for a punishment, then the Latin for a charge, then say fāma, fāmae again

Before you move on

What does fāma, fāmae mean? ("Reputation, rumour".) Say it once more.

219.2 nūntius, nūntiī — a messenger; news

Before the new one: say the Latin for a charge, then the Latin for reputation.

You'll want to know: nūntius, nūntiī

nūntius, nūntiī — "a messenger; news".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūntius has no sure origin; it is often explained as noventius*, "one who brings something new", from novus, "new" (Lewis & Short), but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūntius, nūntiī
- Say it: nūntius, nūntiī, once more
- Say it: say nūntius, nūntiī

- Recall: say the Latin for a charge, then the Latin for reputation, then say nūntius, nūntiī again

Before you move on

What does nūntius, nūntiī mean? ("A messenger; news".) Say it once more.

219.3 spectāculum, spectāculī — a show

Before the new one: say the Latin for reputation, then the Latin for a messenger; news.

You'll want to know: spectāculum, spectāculī

spectāculum, spectāculī — "a show".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spectāculum is built on spectō, "to look at, to watch" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a means or place: something to watch.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spectāculum, spectāculī
- Say it: spectāculum, spectāculī, once more
- Say it: say spectāculum, spectāculī
- Recall: say the Latin for reputation, then the Latin for a messenger; news, then say spectāculum, spectāculī again

Before you move on

What does spectāculum, spectāculī mean? ("A show".) Say it once more.

219.4 histriō, histriōnis — an actor

Before the new one: say the Latin for a messenger; news, then the Latin for a show.

You'll want to know: histriō, histriōnis

histriō, histriōnis — "an actor".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

histriō came from Etruscan: Livy says the Etruscans called a player hister, "actor" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: histriō, histriōnis
- Say it: histriō, histriōnis, once more
- Say it: say histriō, histriōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a messenger; news, then the Latin for a show, then say histriō, histriōnis again

Before you move on

What does histriō, histriōnis mean? ("An actor".) Say it once more.

219.5 fābula, fābulae — a story, a play

Before the new one: say the Latin for a show, then the Latin for an actor.

You'll want to know: fābula, fābulae

fābula, fābulae — "a story, a play".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fābula is built on fārī, "to speak" (Lewis & Short), with -bula, an ending for a means or result: what is told. English fable comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fābula, fābulae
- Say it: fābula, fābulae, once more
- Say it: say fābula, fābulae
- Recall: say the Latin for a show, then the Latin for an actor, then say fābula, fābulae again

Before you move on

What does fābula, fābulae mean? ("A story, a play".) Say it once more.

Chapter 220

Maidservant, Freedman, Newcomer, Young person, Widow

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a maidservant, a freedman, a newcomer, a young person and a widow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 220: I can say a maidservant, a freedman, a newcomer, a young person and a widow.

220.1 ancilla, ancillae — a maidservant

Before the new one: say the Latin for an actor, then the Latin for a story.

You'll want to know: ancilla, ancillae

ancilla, ancillae — "a maidservant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ancilla is a diminutive of ancula, "a maidservant" (Lewis & Short), an old word whose origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ancilla, ancillae
- Say it: ancilla, ancillae, once more
- Say it: say ancilla, ancillae
- Recall: say the Latin for an actor, then the Latin for a story, then say ancilla, ancillae again

Before you move on

What does ancilla, ancillae mean? ("A maidservant".) Say it once more.

220.2 lībertus, lībertī — a freedman

Before the new one: say the Latin for a story, then the Latin for a maidservant.

You'll want to know: lībertus, lībertī

lībertus, lībertī — "a freedman".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lībertus is built on līberō, "to set free" (Lewis & Short), from līber, "free": one who has been freed.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lībertus, lībertī
- Say it: lībertus, lībertī, once more
- Say it: say lībertus, lībertī
- Recall: say the Latin for a story, then the Latin for a maidservant, then say lībertus, lībertī again

Before you move on

What does lībertus, lībertī mean? ("A freedman".) Say it once more.

220.3 advena, advenae — a newcomer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a maidservant, then the Latin for a freedman.

You'll want to know: advena, advenae

advena, advenae — "a newcomer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

advena is built on adveniō, "to arrive" (Lewis & Short), from ad, "to", and veniō, "to come": one who has come.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: advena, advenae
- Say it: advena, advenae, once more
- Say it: say advena, advenae
- Recall: say the Latin for a maidservant, then the Latin for a freedman, then say advena, advenae again

Before you move on

What does advena, advenae mean? ("A newcomer".) Say it once more.

220.4 adulēscēns, adulēscentis — a young person

Before the new one: say the Latin for a freedman, then the Latin for a newcomer.

You'll want to know: adulēscēns, adulēscentis

adulēscēns, adulēscentis — "a young person".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

adulēscēns is the present participle of adolēscō, "to grow up": growing up. adolēscō is built on alō, "to nourish". English adolescent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: adulēscēns, adulēscentis
- Say it: adulēscēns, adulēscentis, once more
- Say it: say adulēscēns, adulēscentis
- Recall: say the Latin for a freedman, then the Latin for a newcomer, then say adulēscēns, adulēscentis again

Before you move on

What does adulēscēns, adulēscentis mean? ("A young person".) Say it once more.

220.5 vidua, viduae — a widow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a newcomer, then the Latin for a young person.

You'll want to know: vidua, viduae

vidua, viduae — "a widow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vidua is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1widhewh2*, "widow" (EtymDB 2.1); English widow is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vidua, viduae
- Say it: vidua, viduae, once more
- Say it: say vidua, viduae
- Recall: say the Latin for a newcomer, then the Latin for a young person, then say vidua, viduae again

Before you move on

What does vidua, viduae mean? ("A widow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 221

Rule, Difference, Outcome, Fortune, Accident

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a rule, a difference, an outcome, fortune and an accident.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 221: I can say a rule, a difference, an outcome, fortune and an accident.

221.1 rēgula, rēgulae — a rule, a ruler

Before the new one: say the Latin for a young person, then the Latin for a widow.

You'll want to know: rēgula, rēgulae

rēgula, rēgulae — "a rule, a ruler".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēgula is built on regō, "to keep straight, to rule" (Lewis & Short), with -ula, an ending for a tool: a straight stick, a ruler. English rule comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēgula, rēgulae
- Say it: rēgula, rēgulae, once more
- Say it: say rēgula, rēgulae
- Recall: say the Latin for a young person, then the Latin for a widow, then say rēgula, rēgulae again

Before you move on

What does rēgula, rēgulae mean? ("A rule, a ruler".) Say it once more.

221.2 discrīmen, discrīminis — a difference; a crisis

Before the new one: say the Latin for a widow, then the Latin for a rule.

You'll want to know: discrīmen, discrīminis

discrīmen, discrīminis — "a difference; a crisis".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

discrīmen is built on crī-, the root of discernō, "to separate, to distinguish" (Lewis & Short), also seen in crīmen, "a charge", with -men, an ending for a result: a dividing line, then a turning point.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: discrīmen, discrīminis
- Say it: discrīmen, discrīminis, once more
- Say it: say discrīmen, discrīminis

- Recall: say the Latin for a widow, then the Latin for a rule, then say discrīmen, discrīminis again

Before you move on

What does discrīmen, discrīminis mean? ("A difference; a crisis".) Say it once more.

221.3 ēventus, ēventūs — an outcome

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rule, then the Latin for a difference; a crisis.

You'll want to know: ēventus, ēventūs

ēventus, ēventūs — "an outcome".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēventus is built on ēveniō, "to come out, to happen" (Lewis & Short), from ē, "out", and veniō, "to come": how things come out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ēventus, ēventūs
- Say it: ēventus, ēventūs, once more
- Say it: say ēventus, ēventūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a rule, then the Latin for a difference; a crisis, then say ēventus, ēventūs again

Before you move on

What does ēventus, ēventūs mean? ("An outcome".) Say it once more.

221.4 fortūna, fortūnae — fortune, luck

Before the new one: say the Latin for a difference; a crisis, then the Latin for an outcome.

You'll want to know: fortūna, fortūnae

fortūna, fortūnae — "fortune, luck".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fortūna is built on fors, "chance, luck" (Lewis & Short), with -tūna, an ending also in Neptūnus, "Neptune". fors is usually traced to the root of ferō, "to bring": what chance brings.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fortūna, fortūnae
- Say it: fortūna, fortūnae, once more
- Say it: say fortūna, fortūnae
- Recall: say the Latin for a difference; a crisis, then the Latin for an outcome, then say fortūna, fortūnae again

Before you move on

What does fortūna, fortūnae mean? ("Fortune, luck".) Say it once more.

221.5 cāsus, cāsūs — an accident, a fall

Before the new one: say the Latin for an outcome, then the Latin for fortune.

You'll want to know: cāsus, cāsūs

cāsus, cāsūs — "an accident, a fall".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cāsus is built on cadō, "to fall" (Lewis & Short): a falling, then what befalls. English case comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cāsus, cāsūs
- Say it: cāsus, cāsūs, once more
- Say it: say cāsus, cāsūs
- Recall: say the Latin for an outcome, then the Latin for fortune, then say cāsus, cāsūs again

Before you move on

What does cāsus, cāsūs mean? ("An accident, a fall".) Say it once more.

Chapter 222

Gold, Silver, Bronze, Iron, Metal lead

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say gold, silver, bronze, iron and the metal lead.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 222: I can say gold, silver, bronze, iron and the metal lead.

222.1 aurum, aurī — gold

Before the new one: say the Latin for fortune, then the Latin for an accident.

You'll want to know: aurum, aurī

aurum, aurī — "gold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aurum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2eh2usom*, "a glow", from h2ews-*, "to dawn, to grow light" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of aurōra, "dawn". Festus records a Sabine ausum, "gold", which keeps the older s (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aurum, aurī
- Say it: aurum, aurī, once more
- Say it: say aurum, aurī
- Recall: say the Latin for fortune, then the Latin for an accident, then say aurum, aurī again

Before you move on

What does aurum, aurī mean? ("Gold".) Say it once more.

222.2 argentum, argentī — silver

Before the new one: say the Latin for an accident, then the Latin for gold.

You'll want to know: argentum, argentī

argentum, argentī — "silver".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

argentum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2rgntom*, "silver", from h2erg-*, "white, shining" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek argēs, "white, bright", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: argentum, argentī
- Say it: argentum, argentī, once more
- Say it: say argentum, argentī
- Recall: say the Latin for an accident, then the Latin for gold, then say argentum, argentī again

Before you move on

What does argentum, argentī mean? ("Silver".) Say it once more.

222.3 aes, aeris — bronze; money

Before the new one: say the Latin for gold, then the Latin for silver.

You'll want to know: aes, aeris

aes, aeris — "bronze; money".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aes is usually traced to Proto-Italic aos*, "copper, bronze" (EtymDB 2.1); Gothic aiz, "bronze", and English ore are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aes, aeris
- Say it: aes, aeris, once more
- Say it: say aes, aeris
- Recall: say the Latin for gold, then the Latin for silver, then say aes, aeris again

Before you move on

What does aes, aeris mean? ("Bronze; money".) Say it once more.

222.4 ferrum, ferrī — iron

Before the new one: say the Latin for silver, then the Latin for bronze; money.

You'll want to know: ferrum, ferrī

ferrum, ferrī — "iron".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ferrum has no sure origin; it is often thought to be a loan from a language of the eastern Mediterranean, perhaps through Etruscan, but the source is unknown.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ferrum, ferrī
- Say it: ferrum, ferrī, once more
- Say it: say ferrum, ferrī
- Recall: say the Latin for silver, then the Latin for bronze; money, then say ferrum, ferrī again

Before you move on

What does ferrum, ferrī mean? ("Iron".) Say it once more.

222.5 plumbum, plumbī — the metal lead

Before the new one: say the Latin for bronze; money, then the Latin for iron.

You'll want to know: plumbum, plumbī

plumbum, plumbī — "the metal lead".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plumbum is related to Greek molybdos, "lead" (Lewis & Short), but neither came straight from the other; both are thought to be loans from an unknown language. English plumb and plumber come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: plumbum, plumbī
- Say it: plumbum, plumbī, once more
- Say it: say plumbum, plumbī
- Recall: say the Latin for bronze; money, then the Latin for iron, then say plumbum, plumbī again

Before you move on

What does plumbum, plumbī mean? ("The metal lead".) Say it once more.

Chapter 223

Mist, Breeze, Root, Thorn, Crop

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say mist, a breeze, a root, a thorn and a crop.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 223: I can say mist, a breeze, a root, a thorn and a crop.

223.1 cālīgō, cālīginis — mist, darkness

Before the new one: say the Latin for iron, then the Latin for the metal lead.

You'll want to know: cālīgō, cālīginis

cālīgō, cālīginis — "mist, darkness".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cālīgō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cālīgō, cālīginis

- Say it: cālīgō, cālīginis, once more
- Say it: say cālīgō, cālīginis
- Recall: say the Latin for iron, then the Latin for the metal lead, then say cālīgō, cālīginis again

Before you move on

What does cālīgō, cālīginis mean? ("Mist, darkness".) Say it once more.

223.2 aura, aurae — a breeze

Before the new one: say the Latin for the metal lead, then the Latin for mist.

You'll want to know: aura, aurae

aura, aurae — "a breeze".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aura was borrowed from Greek aura, "a breeze, a breath of air" (EtymDB 2.1). English aura is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aura, aurae
- Say it: aura, aurae, once more
- Say it: say aura, aurae
- Recall: say the Latin for the metal lead, then the Latin for mist, then say aura, aurae again

Before you move on

What does aura, aurae mean? ("A breeze".) Say it once more.

223.3 rādīx, rādīcis — a root

Before the new one: say the Latin for mist, then the Latin for a breeze.

You'll want to know: rādīx, rādīcis

rādīx, rādīcis — "a root".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rādīx is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wreh2ds*, "root" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek rhiza, "root", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English wort, "a plant". English radish comes from rādīx.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rādīx, rādīcis
- Say it: rādīx, rādīcis, once more
- Say it: say rādīx, rādīcis
- Recall: say the Latin for mist, then the Latin for a breeze, then say rādīx, rādīcis again

Before you move on

What does rādīx, rādīcis mean? ("A root".) Say it once more.

223.4 spīna, spīnae — a thorn

Before the new one: say the Latin for a breeze, then the Latin for a root.

You'll want to know: spīna, spīnae

spīna, spīnae — "a thorn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spīna is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European spey-*, "a sharp point" (EtymDB 2.1); spīca, "an ear of grain", has the same root (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spīna, spīnae
- Say it: spīna, spīnae, once more
- Say it: say spīna, spīnae
- Recall: say the Latin for a breeze, then the Latin for a root, then say spīna, spīnae again

Before you move on

What does spīna, spīnae mean? ("A thorn".) Say it once more.

223.5 seges, segetis — a crop, a cornfield

Before the new one: say the Latin for a root, then the Latin for a thorn.

You'll want to know: seges, segetis

seges, segetis — "a crop, a cornfield".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

seges has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: seges, segetis
- Say it: seges, segetis, once more
- Say it: say seges, segetis
- Recall: say the Latin for a root, then the Latin for a thorn, then say seges, segetis again

Before you move on

What does seges, segetis mean? ("A crop, a cornfield".) Say it once more.

223.6 Words from chapters 215-218 — a first pass

Say the words for a thorn and a crop.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- today's, yesterday's, tomorrow's, true, uncertain
- bald, bearded, charming, worn out, wakeful
- a roof tile, a furnace, a litter, a vehicle, a chariot
- a pace, a witness, a defendant, a punishment, a charge

Before you move on

Today's? (hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum.) Yesterday's? (hesternus, hesterna, hesternum.) Tomorrow's? (crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum.) True? (vērus, vēra, vērum.) Uncertain? (incertus, incerta, incertum.) Bald? (calvus, calva, calvum.)

Bearded? (barbātus, barbāta, barbātum.) Charming? (venustus, venusta, venustum.) Worn out? (dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum.) Wakeful? (vigil, vigilis.) A roof tile? (tēgula, tēgulae.) A furnace? (fornāx, fornācis.) A litter? (lectīca, lectīcae.) A vehicle? (vehiculum, vehiculī.) A chariot? (currus, currūs.) A pace? (passus, passūs.) A witness? (testis, testis.) A defendant? (reus, reī.) A punishment? (poena, poenae.) A charge? (crīmen, crīminis.)

223.7 Words from chapters 219-223 — a second pass

Say the words for reputation and a messenger; news.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- reputation, a messenger; news, a show, an actor, a story
- a maidservant, a freedman, a newcomer, a young person, a widow
- a rule, a difference; a crisis, an outcome, fortune, an accident
- gold, silver, bronze; money, iron, the metal lead
- mist, a breeze, a root, a thorn, a crop

Before you move on

Reputation? (fāma, fāmae.) A messenger; news? (nūntius, nūntiī.) A show? (spectāculum, spectāculī.) An actor? (histriō, histriōnis.) A story? (fābula, fābulae.) A maidservant? (ancilla, ancillae.) A freedman? (lībertus, lībertī.) A newcomer? (advena, advenae.) A young person? (adulēscēns, adulēscentis.) A widow? (vidua, viduae.) A rule? (rēgula, rēgulae.) A difference; a crisis? (discrīmen, discrīminis.) An outcome? (ēventus, ēventūs.) Fortune? (fortūna, fortūnae.) An accident? (cāsus, cāsūs.) Gold? (aurum, aurī.) Silver? (argentum, argentī.) Bronze; money? (aes, aeris.) Iron?

(ferrum, ferrī.) The metal lead? (plumbum, plumbī.) Mist? (cālīgō, cālīginis.) A breeze? (aura, aurae.) A root? (rādīx, rādīcis.) A thorn? (spīna, spīnae.) A crop? (seges, segetis.)

Chapter 224

Lizard, Wild boar, Billy goat, Lamb, Calf

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a lizard, a wild boar, a billy goat, a lamb and a calf.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 224: I can say a lizard, a wild boar, a billy goat, a lamb and a calf.

224.1 lacerta, lacertae — a lizard

Before the new one: say the Latin for a thorn, then the Latin for a crop, a cornfield.

You'll want to know: lacerta, lacertae

lacerta, lacertae — "a lizard".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lacerta has no sure origin; it may be linked with lacertus, "the upper arm, a muscle", but that is uncertain. English lizard comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lacerta, lacertae
- Say it: lacerta, lacertae, once more
- Say it: say lacerta, lacertae
- Recall: say the Latin for a thorn, then the Latin for a crop, a cornfield, then say lacerta, lacertae again

Before you move on

What does lacerta, lacertae mean? ("A lizard".) Say it once more.

224.2 aper, aprī — a wild boar

Before the new one: say the Latin for a crop, a cornfield, then the Latin for a lizard.

You'll want to know: aper, aprī

aper, aprī — "a wild boar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aper is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1epr-*, "boar" (EtymDB 2.1); German Eber, "boar", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aper, aprī
- Say it: aper, aprī, once more
- Say it: say aper, aprī
- Recall: say the Latin for a crop, a cornfield, then the Latin for a lizard, then say aper, aprī again

Before you move on

What does aper, aprī mean? ("A wild boar".) Say it once more.

224.3 caper, caprī — a billy goat

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lizard, then the Latin for a wild boar.

You'll want to know: caper, caprī

caper, caprī — "a billy goat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caper is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kapros*, "buck, he-goat" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek kapros, "wild boar", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: caper, caprī
- Say it: caper, caprī, once more
- Say it: say caper, caprī
- Recall: say the Latin for a lizard, then the Latin for a wild boar, then say caper, caprī again

Before you move on

What does caper, caprī mean? ("A billy goat".) Say it once more.

224.4 agnus, agnī — a lamb

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wild boar, then the Latin for a billy goat.

You'll want to know: agnus, agnī

agnus, agnī — "a lamb".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

agnus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2egwnos*, "lamb" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek amnos, "lamb", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English yean, "to give birth to lambs".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: agnus, agnī
- Say it: agnus, agnī, once more
- Say it: say agnus, agnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a wild boar, then the Latin for a billy goat, then say agnus, agnī again

Before you move on

What does agnus, agnī mean? ("A lamb".) Say it once more.

224.5 vitulus, vitulī — a calf

Before the new one: say the Latin for a billy goat, then the Latin for a lamb.

You'll want to know: vitulus, vitulī

vitulus, vitulī — "a calf".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vitulus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wetelo-, "yearling", from wet-, "year" (EtymDB 2.1): a calf as a one-year-old. The name Italia, "Italy", is often explained as "land of calves" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vitulus, vitulī
- Say it: vitulus, vitulī, once more
- Say it: say vitulus, vitulī
- Recall: say the Latin for a billy goat, then the Latin for a lamb, then say vitulus, vitulī again

Before you move on

What does vitulus, vitulī mean? ("A calf".) Say it once more.

Chapter 225

Gem, Garment, Sandal, Fold of a garment, Mattress

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a gem, a garment, a sandal, a fold of a garment and a mattress.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 225: I can say a gem, a garment, a sandal, a fold of a garment and a mattress.

225.1 gemma, gemmae — a gem; a bud

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a lamb, then the Latin for a calf.

You'll want to know: gemma, gemmae

gemma, gemmae — "a gem; a bud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gemma has no sure origin. It meant both a bud and a precious stone; Lewis & Short note that ancient writers took the stone as the first sense.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gemma, gemmae
- Say it: gemma, gemmae, once more
- Say it: say gemma, gemmae
- Recall: say the Latin for a lamb, then the Latin for a calf, then say gemma, gemmae again

Before you move on

What does gemma, gemmae mean? ("A gem; a bud".) Say it once more.

225.2 vestīmentum, vestīmentī — a garment

Before the new one: say the Latin for a calf, then the Latin for a gem; a bud.

You'll want to know: vestīmentum, vestīmentī

vestīmentum, vestīmentī — "a garment".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vestīmentum is built on vestiō, "to clothe", from vestis, "clothing" (EtymDB 2.1), with -mentum, an ending for a thing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vestīmentum, vestīmentī
- Say it: vestīmentum, vestīmentī, once more
- Say it: say vestīmentum, vestīmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a calf, then the Latin for a gem; a bud, then say vestīmentum, vestīmentī again

Before you move on

What does vestīmentum, vestīmentī mean? ("A garment".) Say it once more.

225.3 solea, soleae — a sandal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a gem; a bud, then the Latin for a garment.

You'll want to know: solea, soleae

solea, soleae — "a sandal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

solea is built on solum, "the ground, the sole of the foot" (Lewis & Short): what goes under the sole. English sole, of a shoe, comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: solea, soleae
- Say it: solea, soleae, once more
- Say it: say solea, soleae
- Recall: say the Latin for a gem; a bud, then the Latin for a garment, then say solea, soleae again

Before you move on

What does solea, soleae mean? ("A sandal".) Say it once more.

225.4 sinus, sinūs — a fold of a garment; a bay

Before the new one: say the Latin for a garment, then the Latin for a sandal.

You'll want to know: sinus, sinūs

sinus, sinūs — "a fold of a garment; a bay".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sinus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English sinus, a hollow in a bone, is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sinus, sinūs
- Say it: sinus, sinūs, once more
- Say it: say sinus, sinūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a garment, then the Latin for a sandal, then say sinus, sinūs again

Before you move on

What does sinus, sinūs mean? ("A fold of a garment; a bay".) Say it once more.

225.5 culcita, culcitae — a mattress

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sandal, then the Latin for a fold of a garment; a bay.

You'll want to know: culcita, culcitae

culcita, culcitae — "a mattress".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

culcita has no sure origin. Varro tied it to calcō, "to tread, to press down", but Lewis & Short call that doubtful. English quilt comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: culcita, culcitae
- Say it: culcita, culcitae, once more
- Say it: say culcita, culcitae
- Recall: say the Latin for a sandal, then the Latin for a fold of a garment; a bay, then say culcita, culcitae again

Before you move on

What does culcita, culcitae mean? ("A mattress".) Say it once more.

Chapter 226

Grammar, Philosophy, Eagerness, Question, Answer

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say grammar, philosophy, eagerness, a question and an answer.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 226: I can say grammar, philosophy, eagerness, a question and an answer.

226.1 grammatica, grammaticae — grammar

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fold of a garment; a bay, then the Latin for a mattress.

You'll want to know: grammatica, grammaticae

grammatica, grammaticae — "grammar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

grammatica was borrowed from Greek grammatikē, "the art of letters" (EtymDB 2.1), from gramma, "a letter", and graphō, "to write".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: grammatica, grammaticae
- Say it: grammatica, grammaticae, once more
- Say it: say grammatica, grammaticae
- Recall: say the Latin for a fold of a garment; a bay, then the Latin for a mattress, then say grammatica, grammaticae again

Before you move on

What does grammatica, grammaticae mean? ("Grammar".) Say it once more.

226.2 philosophia, philosophiae — philosophy

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mattress, then the Latin for grammar.

You'll want to know: philosophia, philosophiae

philosophia, philosophiae — "philosophy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

philosophia was borrowed from Greek philosophia, "love of wisdom" (Lewis & Short), from philos, "loving", and sophia, "wisdom" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: philosophia, philosophiae
- Say it: philosophia, philosophiae, once more
- Say it: say philosophia, philosophiae

- Recall: say the Latin for a mattress, then the Latin for grammar, then say philosophia, philosophiae again

Before you move on

What does philosophia, philosophiae mean? ("Philosophy".) Say it once more.

226.3 studium, studiī — eagerness; study

Before the new one: say the Latin for grammar, then the Latin for philosophy.

You'll want to know: studium, studiī

studium, studiī — "eagerness; study".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

studium is built on studeō, "to be eager, to apply oneself" (Lewis & Short). Where studeō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: studium, studiī
- Say it: studium, studiī, once more
- Say it: say studium, studiī
- Recall: say the Latin for grammar, then the Latin for philosophy, then say studium, studiī again

Before you move on

What does studium, studiī mean? ("Eagerness; study".) Say it once more.

226.4 quaestiō, quaestiōnis — a question, an inquiry

Before the new one: say the Latin for philosophy, then the Latin for eagerness; study.

You'll want to know: quaestiō, quaestiōnis

quaestiō, quaestiōnis — "a question, an inquiry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quaestiō is built on quaerō, "to seek, to ask" (Lewis & Short), with -tiō, an ending for an act: a seeking.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quaestiō, quaestiōnis
- Say it: quaestiō, quaestiōnis, once more
- Say it: say quaestiō, quaestiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for philosophy, then the Latin for eagerness; study, then say quaestiō, quaestiōnis again

Before you move on

What does quaestiō, quaestiōnis mean? ("A question, an inquiry".) Say it once more.

226.5 respōnsum, respōnsī — an answer

Before the new one: say the Latin for eagerness; study, then the Latin for a question.

You'll want to know: respōnsum, respōnsī

respōnsum, respōnsī — "an answer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

respōnsum is the past participle of respondeō, "to answer" (Lewis & Short), used as a noun. respondeō is re-, "back", with spondeō, "to pledge" (EtymDB 2.1): to pledge back.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: respōnsum, respōnsī
- Say it: respōnsum, respōnsī, once more
- Say it: say respōnsum, respōnsī
- Recall: say the Latin for eagerness; study, then the Latin for a question, then say respōnsum, respōnsī again

Before you move on

What does respōnsum, respōnsī mean? ("An answer".) Say it once more.

Chapter 227

Fate, Lair, Hospitality, Lodging house, Traveller

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say fate, a lair, hospitality, a lodging house and a traveller.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 227: I can say fate, a lair, hospitality, a lodging house and a traveller.

227.1 fātum, fātī — fate

Before the new one: say the Latin for a question, then the Latin for an answer.

You'll want to know: fātum, fātī

fātum, fātī — "fate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fātum is the past participle of fārī, "to speak" (EtymDB 2.1), used as a noun: what has been spoken, the word of the gods.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fātum, fātī
- Say it: fātum, fātī, once more
- Say it: say fātum, fātī
- Recall: say the Latin for a question, then the Latin for an answer, then say fātum, fātī again

Before you move on

What does fātum, fātī mean? ("Fate".) Say it once more.

227.2 cubīle, cubīlis — a lair, a resting place

Before the new one: say the Latin for an answer, then the Latin for fate.

You'll want to know: cubīle, cubīlis

cubīle, cubīlis — "a lair, a resting place".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cubīle is built on cubō, "to lie down" (Lewis & Short), with -īle, an ending for a place: a place to lie.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cubīle, cubīlis
- Say it: cubīle, cubīlis, once more
- Say it: say cubīle, cubīlis
- Recall: say the Latin for an answer, then the Latin for fate, then say cubīle, cubīlis again

Before you move on

What does cubīle, cubīlis mean? ("A lair, a resting place".) Say it once more.

227.3 hospitium, hospitiī — hospitality; lodging

Before the new one: say the Latin for fate, then the Latin for a lair.

You'll want to know: hospitium, hospitiī

hospitium, hospitiī — "hospitality; lodging".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hospitium is built on hospes, hospitis, "a guest, a host" (Lewis & Short), with -ium, an ending for a state or place.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hospitium, hospitiī
- Say it: hospitium, hospitiī, once more
- Say it: say hospitium, hospitiī
- Recall: say the Latin for fate, then the Latin for a lair, then say hospitium, hospitiī again

Before you move on

What does hospitium, hospitiī mean? ("Hospitality; lodging".) Say it once more.

227.4 dēversōrium, dēversōriī — a lodging house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lair, then the Latin for hospitality; lodging.

You'll want to know: dēversōrium, dēversōriī

dēversōrium, dēversōriī — "a lodging house".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēversōrium is built on dēvertō, "to turn aside" (EtymDB 2.1), from dē, "away", and vertō, "to turn": a place where travellers turn aside for the night.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēversōrium, dēversōriī
- Say it: dēversōrium, dēversōriī, once more
- Say it: say dēversōrium, dēversōriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a lair, then the Latin for hospitality; lodging, then say dēversōrium, dēversōriī again

Before you move on

What does dēversōrium, dēversōriī mean? ("A lodging house".) Say it once more.

227.5 viātor, viātōris — a traveller

Before the new one: say the Latin for hospitality; lodging, then the Latin for a lodging house.

You'll want to know: viātor, viātōris

viātor, viātōris — "a traveller".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

viātor is built on viō, "to travel" (Lewis & Short), from via, "a road", with -tor, "one who does it". via is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wegh-*, "to go, to carry" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: viātor, viātōris
- Say it: viātor, viātōris, once more
- Say it: say viātor, viātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for hospitality; lodging, then the Latin for a lodging house, then say viātor, viātōris again

Before you move on

What does viātor, viātōris mean? ("A traveller".) Say it once more.

Chapter 228

Woodland pass, Peak, Yoke, Whirlpool, Order

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a woodland pass, a peak, a yoke, a whirlpool and order.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 228: I can say a woodland pass, a peak, a yoke, a whirlpool and order.

228.1 saltus, saltūs — a woodland pass; a leap

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lodging house, then the Latin for a traveller.

You'll want to know: saltus, saltūs

saltus, saltūs — "a woodland pass; a leap".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saltus is two words in one form. A leap is built on saliō, "to jump" (Lewis & Short); a woodland pass has no sure origin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saltus, saltūs
- Say it: saltus, saltūs, once more
- Say it: say saltus, saltūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a lodging house, then the Latin for a traveller, then say saltus, saltūs again

Before you move on

What does saltus, saltūs mean? ("A woodland pass; a leap".) Say it once more.

228.2 cacūmen, cacūminis — a peak, a tip

Before the new one: say the Latin for a traveller, then the Latin for a woodland pass; a leap.

You'll want to know: cacūmen, cacūminis

cacūmen, cacūminis — "a peak, a tip".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cacūmen has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cacūmen, cacūminis
- Say it: cacūmen, cacūminis, once more
- Say it: say cacūmen, cacūminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a traveller, then the Latin for a woodland pass; a leap, then say cacūmen, cacūminis again

Before you move on

What does cacūmen, cacūminis mean? ("A peak, a tip".) Say it once more.

228.3 iugum, iugī — a yoke; a ridge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a woodland pass; a leap, then the Latin for a peak.

You'll want to know: iugum, iugī

iugum, iugī — "a yoke; a ridge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iugum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European yugom*, "yoke", from yewg-*, "to join" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek zygon, "yoke", and English yoke are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iugum, iugī
- Say it: iugum, iugī, once more
- Say it: say iugum, iugī
- Recall: say the Latin for a woodland pass; a leap, then the Latin for a peak, then say iugum, iugī again

Before you move on

What does iugum, iugī mean? ("A yoke; a ridge".) Say it once more.

228.4 vertex, verticis — a whirlpool; the top

Before the new one: say the Latin for a peak, then the Latin for a yoke; a ridge.

You'll want to know: vertex, verticis

vertex, verticis — "a whirlpool; the top".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vertex is built on vertō, "to turn" (Lewis & Short): a whirl, then the crown of the head where the hair whirls, then the top. vortex, "a whirl", is the older spelling of the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vertex, verticis
- Say it: vertex, verticis, once more
- Say it: say vertex, verticis
- Recall: say the Latin for a peak, then the Latin for a yoke; a ridge, then say vertex, verticis again

Before you move on

What does vertex, verticis mean? ("A whirlpool; the top".) Say it once more.

228.5 ōrdō, ōrdinis — order, a row

Before the new one: say the Latin for a yoke; a ridge, then the Latin for a whirlpool; the top.

You'll want to know: ōrdō, ōrdinis

ōrdō, ōrdinis — "order, a row".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrdō is probably inherited, from Proto-Italic ordon-*, "a row, an order" (EtymDB 2.1), but its deeper origin is uncertain; it may first have been a weaving word, a row of threads.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrdō, ōrdinis
- Say it: ōrdō, ōrdinis, once more
- Say it: say ōrdō, ōrdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a yoke; a ridge, then the Latin for a whirlpool; the top, then say ōrdō, ōrdinis again

Before you move on

What does ōrdō, ōrdinis mean? ("Order, a row".) Say it once more.

228.6 Words from chapters 224-225 — a first pass

Say the words for a whirlpool; the top and order.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a lizard, a wild boar, a billy goat, a lamb, a calf
- a gem; a bud, a garment, a sandal, a fold of a garment; a bay, a mattress

Before you move on

A lizard? (lacerta, lacertae.) A wild boar? (aper, aprī.) A billy goat? (caper, caprī.) A lamb? (agnus, agnī.) A calf? (vitulus, vitulī.) A gem; a bud? (gemma, gemmae.) A garment? (vestīmentum, vestīmentī.) A sandal? (solea, soleae.) A fold of a garment; a bay? (sinus, sinūs.) A mattress? (culcita, culcitae.)

228.7 Words from chapters 226-228 — a second pass

Say the words for grammar and philosophy.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- grammar, philosophy, eagerness; study, a question, an answer
- fate, a lair, hospitality; lodging, a lodging house, a traveller
- a woodland pass; a leap, a peak, a yoke; a ridge, a whirlpool; the top, order

Before you move on

Grammar? (grammatica, grammaticae.) Philosophy? (philosophia, philosophiae.) Eagerness; study? (studium, studiī.) A question? (quaestiō, quaestiōnis.) An answer? (respōnsum, respōnsī.) Fate? (fātum, fātī.) A lair? (cubīle, cubīlis.) Hospitality; lodging? (hospitium, hospitiī.) A lodging house? (dēversōrium, dēversōriī.) A traveller? (viātor, viātōris.) A woodland pass; a leap? (saltus, saltūs.) A peak? (cacūmen, cacūminis.) A yoke; a ridge? (iugum, iugī.) A whirlpool; the top? (vertex, verticis.) Order? (ōrdō, ōrdinis.)

Chapter 229

To decree, To try, To go on, To hold off, To remove

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to decree, to try, to go on, to hold off and to remove.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 229: I can say to decree, to try, to go on, to hold off and to remove.

229.1 dēcernō, dēcernere — to decree, to settle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a whirlpool; the top, then the Latin for order, a row.

You'll want to know: dēcernō, dēcernere

dēcernō, dēcernere — "to decree, to settle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēcernō is dē, "down, off", with cernō, "to sift, to decide" (EtymDB 2.1): to decide finally. cernō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European krey-*, "to sift" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēcernō, dēcernere
- Say it: dēcernō, dēcernere, once more
- Say it: say dēcernō, dēcernere
- Recall: say the Latin for a whirlpool; the top, then the Latin for order, a row, then say dēcernō, dēcernere again

Before you move on

What does dēcernō, dēcernere mean? ("To decree, to settle".) Say it once more.

229.2 temptō, temptāre — to try, to test

Before the new one: say the Latin for order, a row, then the Latin for to decree.

You'll want to know: temptō, temptāre

temptō, temptāre — "to try, to test".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

temptō, also spelled tentō (EtymDB 2.1), is often taken as a frequentative of teneō, "to hold", but its origin is uncertain. English tempt and attempt come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: temptō, temptāre
- Say it: temptō, temptāre, once more
- Say it: say temptō, temptāre

- Recall: say the Latin for order, a row, then the Latin for to decree, then say temptō, temptāre again

Before you move on

What does temptō, temptāre mean? ("To try, to test".) Say it once more.

229.3 pergō, pergere — to go on, to continue

Before the new one: say the Latin for to decree, then the Latin for to try.

You'll want to know: pergō, pergere

pergō, pergere — "to go on, to continue".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pergō is contracted from per, "through", and regō, "to direct" (Lewis & Short): to keep on one's course.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pergō, pergere
- Say it: pergō, pergere, once more
- Say it: say pergō, pergere
- Recall: say the Latin for to decree, then the Latin for to try, then say pergō, pergere again

Before you move on

What does pergō, pergere mean? ("To go on, to continue".) Say it once more.

229.4 cessō, cessāre — to hold off, to be idle

Before the new one: say the Latin for to try, then the Latin for to go on.

You'll want to know: cessō, cessāre

cessō, cessāre — "to hold off, to be idle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cessō is a frequentative of cēdō, "to go, to give way" (Lewis & Short): to keep giving way, so to hang back. English cease comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cessō, cessāre
- Say it: cessō, cessāre, once more
- Say it: say cessō, cessāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to try, then the Latin for to go on, then say cessō, cessāre again

Before you move on

What does cessō, cessāre mean? ("To hold off, to be idle".) Say it once more.

229.5 removeō, removēre — to remove

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go on, then the Latin for to hold off.

You'll want to know: removeō, removēre

removeō, removēre — "to remove".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

removeō is re-, "back, away", with moveō, "to move" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: removeō, removēre
- Say it: removeō, removēre, once more
- Say it: say removeō, removēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to go on, then the Latin for to hold off, then say removeō, removēre again

Before you move on

What does removeō, removēre mean? ("To remove".) Say it once more.

Chapter 230

To wake up, To accompany, To add, To announce, To appear

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to wake up, to accompany, to add, to announce and to appear.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 230: I can say to wake up, to accompany, to add, to announce and to appear.

230.1 expergīscor, expergīscī — to wake up

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to hold off, then the Latin for to remove.

You'll want to know: expergīscor, expergīscī

expergīscor, expergīscī — "to wake up".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

expergīscor is built on expergō, "to wake up" (Lewis & Short), with -scor, the ending of verbs of becoming; expergō is often explained as ex, "out", with pergō, "to go on".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: expergīscor, expergīscī
- Say it: expergīscor, expergīscī, once more
- Say it: say expergīscor, expergīscī
- Recall: say the Latin for to hold off, then the Latin for to remove, then say expergīscor, expergīscī again

Before you move on

What does expergīscor, expergīscī mean? ("To wake up".) Say it once more.

230.2 comitor, comitārī — to accompany

Before the new one: say the Latin for to remove, then the Latin for to wake up.

You'll want to know: comitor, comitārī

comitor, comitārī — "to accompany".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

comitor is built on comes, comitis, "a companion" (Lewis & Short): to be someone's companion. comes is con-, "together", with the root of eō, "to go": one who goes along.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: comitor, comitārī
- Say it: comitor, comitārī, once more
- Say it: say comitor, comitārī

- Recall: say the Latin for to remove, then the Latin for to wake up, then say comitor, comitārī again

Before you move on

What does comitor, comitārī mean? ("To accompany".) Say it once more.

230.3 addō, addere — to add

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wake up, then the Latin for to accompany.

You'll want to know: addō, addere

addō, addere — "to add".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

addō is ad, "to", with dō, "to put, to give" (Lewis & Short): to put to.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: addō, addere
- Say it: addō, addere, once more
- Say it: say addō, addere
- Recall: say the Latin for to wake up, then the Latin for to accompany, then say addō, addere again

Before you move on

What does addō, addere mean? ("To add".) Say it once more.

230.4 nūntiō, nūntiāre — to announce

Before the new one: say the Latin for to accompany, then the Latin for to add.

You'll want to know: nūntiō, nūntiāre

nūntiō, nūntiāre — "to announce".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūntiō is the verb made from nūntius, "a messenger, news" (Lewis & Short), whose origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūntiō, nūntiāre
- Say it: nūntiō, nūntiāre, once more
- Say it: say nūntiō, nūntiāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to accompany, then the Latin for to add, then say nūntiō, nūntiāre again

Before you move on

What does nūntiō, nūntiāre mean? ("To announce".) Say it once more.

230.5 appāreō, appārēre — to appear

Before the new one: say the Latin for to add, then the Latin for to announce.

You'll want to know: appāreō, appārēre

appāreō, appārēre — "to appear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

appāreō is ad, "to", with pāreō, "to come into view" (EtymDB 2.1). English appear comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: appāreō, appārēre
- Say it: appāreō, appārēre, once more
- Say it: say appāreō, appārēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to add, then the Latin for to announce, then say appāreō, appārēre again

Before you move on

What does appāreō, appārēre mean? ("To appear".) Say it once more.

Chapter 231

To turn, To enjoy, To shape, To complain, To be missing

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to turn, to enjoy, to shape, to complain and to be missing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 231: I can say to turn, to enjoy, to shape, to complain and to be missing.

231.1 vertō, vertere — to turn

Before the new one: say the Latin for to announce, then the Latin for to appear.

You'll want to know: vertō, vertere

vertō, vertere — "to turn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vertō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wert-*, "to turn" (EtymDB 2.1); Sanskrit vart-, "to turn", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English -ward in words like toward.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vertō, vertere
- Say it: vertō, vertere, once more
- Say it: say vertō, vertere
- Recall: say the Latin for to announce, then the Latin for to appear, then say vertō, vertere again

Before you move on

What does vertō, vertere mean? ("To turn".) Say it once more.

231.2 fruor, fruī — to enjoy

Before the new one: say the Latin for to appear, then the Latin for to turn.

You'll want to know: fruor, fruī

fruor, fruī — "to enjoy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fruor is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhrug-*, "to make use of, to enjoy" (EtymDB 2.1). English fruit comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fruor, fruī
- Say it: fruor, fruī, once more
- Say it: say fruor, fruī
- Recall: say the Latin for to appear, then the Latin for to turn, then say fruor, fruī again

Before you move on

What does fruor, fruī mean? ("To enjoy".) Say it once more.

231.3 fingō, fingere — to shape, to imagine

Before the new one: say the Latin for to turn, then the Latin for to enjoy.

You'll want to know: fingō, fingere

fingō, fingere — "to shape, to imagine".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fingō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheygh-*, "to mould, to shape" (EtymDB 2.1). English dough is a cousin, and English fiction and figure come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fingō, fingere
- Say it: fingō, fingere, once more
- Say it: say fingō, fingere
- Recall: say the Latin for to turn, then the Latin for to enjoy, then say fingō, fingere again

Before you move on

What does fingō, fingere mean? ("To shape, to imagine".) Say it once more.

231.4 queror, querī — to complain

Before the new one: say the Latin for to enjoy, then the Latin for to shape.

You'll want to know: queror, querī

queror, querī — "to complain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

queror is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwes-*, "to puff, to sigh" (EtymDB 2.1). English wheeze is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: queror, querī
- Say it: queror, querī, once more
- Say it: say queror, querī
- Recall: say the Latin for to enjoy, then the Latin for to shape, then say queror, querī again

Before you move on

What does queror, querī mean? ("To complain".) Say it once more.

231.5 dēsum, deesse — to be missing, to fail

Before the new one: say the Latin for to shape, then the Latin for to complain.

You'll want to know: dēsum, deesse

dēsum, deesse — "to be missing, to fail".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēsum is dē, "away from", with sum, "to be": to be away, to be missing. Sum is inherited from Proto-Indo-European *$*h_1es$-, "to be" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēsum, deesse
- Say it: dēsum, deesse, once more
- Say it: say dēsum, deesse
- Recall: say the Latin for to shape, then the Latin for to complain, then say dēsum, deesse again

Before you move on

What does dēsum, deesse mean? ("To be missing, to fail".) Say it once more.

Chapter 232

To steal, To uncover, To seem, To serve, To suffer

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to steal, to uncover, to seem, to serve and to suffer.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 232: I can say to steal, to uncover, to seem, to serve and to suffer.

232.1 fūror, fūrārī — to steal

Before the new one: say the Latin for to complain, then the Latin for to be missing.

You'll want to know: fūror, fūrārī

fūror, fūrārī — "to steal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fūror is built on fūr, "a thief" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhōr*, "thief" (EtymDB 2.1), from the root of ferō, "to carry": one who carries off. It is a different word from furor, "rage".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fūror, fūrārī
- Say it: fūror, fūrārī, once more
- Say it: say fūror, fūrārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to complain, then the Latin for to be missing, then say fūror, fūrārī again

Before you move on

What does fūror, fūrārī mean? ("To steal".) Say it once more.

232.2 dētegō, dētegere — to uncover, to discover

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be missing, then the Latin for to steal.

You'll want to know: dētegō, dētegere

dētegō, dētegere — "to uncover, to discover".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dētegō is dē, "off", with tegō, "to cover" (EtymDB 2.1): to take the cover off. English detect comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dētegō, dētegere
- Say it: dētegō, dētegere, once more
- Say it: say dētegō, dētegere
- Recall: say the Latin for to be missing, then the Latin for to steal, then say dētegō, dētegere again

Before you move on

What does dētegō, dētegere mean? ("To uncover, to discover".) Say it once more.

232.3 videor, vidērī — to seem

Before the new one: say the Latin for to steal, then the Latin for to uncover.

You'll want to know: videor, vidērī

videor, vidērī — "to seem".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

videor is the passive of videō, "to see": to be seen, so to seem. Videō is inherited from Proto-Indo-European weyd-*, "to see, to know" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: videor, vidērī
- Say it: videor, vidērī, once more
- Say it: say videor, vidērī
- Recall: say the Latin for to steal, then the Latin for to uncover, then say videor, vidērī again

Before you move on

What does videor, vidērī mean? ("To seem".) Say it once more.

232.4 serviō, servīre — to serve, to be a slave

Before the new one: say the Latin for to uncover, then the Latin for to seem.

You'll want to know: serviō, servīre

serviō, servīre — "to serve, to be a slave".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

serviō is the verb made from servus, "a slave" (EtymDB 2.1): to be a slave, to serve. English serve comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: serviō, servīre
- Say it: serviō, servīre, once more
- Say it: say serviō, servīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to uncover, then the Latin for to seem, then say serviō, servīre again

Before you move on

What does serviō, servīre mean? ("To serve, to be a slave".) Say it once more.

232.5 patior, patī — to suffer, to allow

Before the new one: say the Latin for to seem, then the Latin for to serve.

You'll want to know: patior, patī

patior, patī — "to suffer, to allow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patior has no sure origin. Lewis & Short compare Greek penthos, "grief", and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed root pe(i)-*, "to hurt", but neither link is settled. English passion and patient come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patior, patī
- Say it: patior, patī, once more
- Say it: say patior, patī
- Recall: say the Latin for to seem, then the Latin for to serve, then say patior, patī again

Before you move on

What does patior, patī mean? ("To suffer, to allow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 233

To press on, To break off, To tie, To mix, To obey

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to press on, to break off, to tie, to mix and to obey.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 233: I can say to press on, to break off, to tie, to mix and to obey.

233.1 īnstō, īnstāre — to press on, to insist

Before the new one: say the Latin for to serve, then the Latin for to suffer.

You'll want to know: īnstō, īnstāre

īnstō, īnstāre — "to press on, to insist".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnstō is in, "on, upon", with stō, "to stand" (EtymDB 2.1): to stand upon, to press on. English instant comes from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnstō, īnstāre
- Say it: īnstō, īnstāre, once more
- Say it: say īnstō, īnstāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to serve, then the Latin for to suffer, then say īnstō, īnstāre again

Before you move on

What does īnstō, īnstāre mean? ("To press on, to insist".) Say it once more.

233.2 interrumpō, interrumpere — to break off, to interrupt

Before the new one: say the Latin for to suffer, then the Latin for to press on.

You'll want to know: interrumpō, interrumpere

interrumpō, interrumpere — "to break off, to interrupt".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

interrumpō is inter, "between", with rumpō, "to break" (EtymDB 2.1): to break in between. rumpō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European Hrewp-*, "to break".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: interrumpō, interrumpere
- Say it: interrumpō, interrumpere, once more
- Say it: say interrumpō, interrumpere

- Recall: say the Latin for to suffer, then the Latin for to press on, then say interrumpō, interrumpere again

Before you move on

What does interrumpō, interrumpere mean? ("To break off, to interrupt".) Say it once more.

233.3 ligō, ligāre — to tie

Before the new one: say the Latin for to press on, then the Latin for to break off.

You'll want to know: ligō, ligāre

ligō, ligāre — "to tie".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ligō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root leyg-*, "to bind" (EtymDB 2.1). English ligament comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ligō, ligāre
- Say it: ligō, ligāre, once more
- Say it: say ligō, ligāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to press on, then the Latin for to break off, then say ligō, ligāre again

Before you move on

What does ligō, ligāre mean? ("To tie".) Say it once more.

233.4 misceō, miscēre — to mix

Before the new one: say the Latin for to break off, then the Latin for to tie.

You'll want to know: misceō, miscēre

misceō, miscēre — "to mix".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

misceō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European meyk-*, "to mix" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek mignymi, "to mix", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English mix comes from its participle mixtus, "mixed".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: misceō, miscēre
- Say it: misceō, miscēre, once more
- Say it: say misceō, miscēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to break off, then the Latin for to tie, then say misceō, miscēre again

Before you move on

What does misceō, miscēre mean? ("To mix".) Say it once more.

233.5 pāreō, pārēre — to obey

Before the new one: say the Latin for to tie, then the Latin for to mix.

You'll want to know: pāreō, pārēre

pāreō, pārēre — "to obey".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāreō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European peh2s-*, "to watch, to see" (EtymDB 2.1): first to appear, to be at hand, then to be at someone's call, to obey.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāreō, pārēre
- Say it: pāreō, pārēre, once more
- Say it: say pāreō, pārēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to tie, then the Latin for to mix, then say pāreō, pārēre again

Before you move on

What does pāreō, pārēre mean? ("To obey".) Say it once more.

Chapter 234

To let down, To gather, To vanish, To entrust, To hold back

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to let down, to gather, to vanish, to entrust and to hold back.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 234: I can say to let down, to gather, to vanish, to entrust and to hold back.

234.1 dēmittō, dēmittere — to let down, to lower

Before the new one: say the Latin for to mix, then the Latin for to obey.

You'll want to know: dēmittō, dēmittere

dēmittō, dēmittere — "to let down, to lower".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēmittō is dē, "down", with mittō, "to send, to let go" (EtymDB 2.1): to let down.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēmittō, dēmittere
- Say it: dēmittō, dēmittere, once more
- Say it: say dēmittō, dēmittere
- Recall: say the Latin for to mix, then the Latin for to obey, then say dēmittō, dēmittere again

Before you move on

What does dēmittō, dēmittere mean? ("To let down, to lower".) Say it once more.

234.2 colligō, colligere — to gather, to collect

Before the new one: say the Latin for to obey, then the Latin for to let down.

You'll want to know: colligō, colligere

colligō, colligere — "to gather, to collect".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

colligō is con-, "together", with legō, "to gather, to pick" (EtymDB 2.1): to gather together. legō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European leg-*, "to gather" (EtymDB 2.1). English collect comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: colligō, colligere
- Say it: colligō, colligere, once more
- Say it: say colligō, colligere

- Recall: say the Latin for to obey, then the Latin for to let down, then say colligō, colligere again

Before you move on

What does colligō, colligere mean? ("To gather, to collect".) Say it once more.

234.3 ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere — to vanish

Before the new one: say the Latin for to let down, then the Latin for to gather.

You'll want to know: ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere

ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere — "to vanish".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēvanēscō is ex, "out", with vānēscō, "to become empty", from vānus, "empty" (EtymDB 2.1): to empty out, to vanish. English vanish comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere
- Say it: ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere, once more
- Say it: say ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to let down, then the Latin for to gather, then say ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere again

Before you move on

What does ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere mean? ("To vanish".) Say it once more.

234.4 mandō, mandāre — to entrust, to order

Before the new one: say the Latin for to gather, then the Latin for to vanish.

You'll want to know: mandō, mandāre

mandō, mandāre — "to entrust, to order".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mandō is usually explained as manus, "hand", with dō, "to put" (Lewis & Short): to put into someone's hand. It is a different word from mandō, "to chew".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mandō, mandāre
- Say it: mandō, mandāre, once more
- Say it: say mandō, mandāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to gather, then the Latin for to vanish, then say mandō, mandāre again

Before you move on

What does mandō, mandāre mean? ("To entrust, to order".) Say it once more.

234.5 retineō, retinēre — to hold back, to keep

Before the new one: say the Latin for to vanish, then the Latin for to entrust.

You'll want to know: retineō, retinēre

retineō, retinēre — "to hold back, to keep".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

retineō is re-, "back", with teneō, "to hold" (Lewis & Short), its e weakened to i: to hold back.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: retineō, retinēre
- Say it: retineō, retinēre, once more
- Say it: say retineō, retinēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to vanish, then the Latin for to entrust, then say retineō, retinēre again

Before you move on

What does retineō, retinēre mean? ("To hold back, to keep".) Say it once more.

Chapter 235

To remember, To speak, To follow, To set out, To use

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to remember, to speak, to follow, to set out and to use.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 235: I can say to remember, to speak, to follow, to set out and to use.

235.1 meminī, meminisse — to remember

Before the new one: say the Latin for to entrust, then the Latin for to hold back.

You'll want to know: meminī, meminisse

meminī, meminisse — "to remember".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

meminī is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European memone*, "has in mind", a doubled perfect of men-*, "to think" (EtymDB 2.1). English mind is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: meminī, meminisse
- Say it: meminī, meminisse, once more
- Say it: say meminī, meminisse
- Recall: say the Latin for to entrust, then the Latin for to hold back, then say meminī, meminisse again

Before you move on

What does meminī, meminisse mean? ("To remember".) Say it once more.

235.2 loquor, loquī — to speak

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hold back, then the Latin for to remember.

You'll want to know: loquor, loquī

loquor, loquī — "to speak".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

loquor is probably inherited from Proto-Italic tlokwōr*, "to speak" (EtymDB 2.1); its deeper origin is uncertain. English eloquent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: loquor, loquī
- Say it: loquor, loquī, once more
- Say it: say loquor, loquī

- Recall: say the Latin for to hold back, then the Latin for to remember, then say loquor, loquī again

Before you move on

What does loquor, loquī mean? ("To speak".) Say it once more.

235.3 sequor, sequī — to follow

Before the new one: say the Latin for to remember, then the Latin for to speak.

You'll want to know: sequor, sequī

sequor, sequī — "to follow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sequor is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sekw-*, "to follow" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hepomai, "to follow", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sequor, sequī
- Say it: sequor, sequī, once more
- Say it: say sequor, sequī
- Recall: say the Latin for to remember, then the Latin for to speak, then say sequor, sequī again

Before you move on

What does sequor, sequī mean? ("To follow".) Say it once more.

235.4 proficīscor, proficīscī — to set out

Before the new one: say the Latin for to speak, then the Latin for to follow.

You'll want to know: proficīscor, proficīscī

proficīscor, proficīscī — "to set out".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

proficīscor is built on prōficiō, "to make headway" (EtymDB 2.1), from prō, "forward", and faciō, "to make", with -scor, the ending of verbs of becoming: to put oneself forward, to set out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: proficīscor, proficīscī
- Say it: proficīscor, proficīscī, once more
- Say it: say proficīscor, proficīscī
- Recall: say the Latin for to speak, then the Latin for to follow, then say proficīscor, proficīscī again

Before you move on

What does proficīscor, proficīscī mean? ("To set out".) Say it once more.

235.5 ūtor, ūtī — to use

Before the new one: say the Latin for to follow, then the Latin for to set out.

You'll want to know: ūtor, ūtī

ūtor, ūtī — "to use".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūtor is probably inherited from Proto-Italic oitōr*, "to use" (EtymDB 2.1), but Lewis & Short call its deeper origin doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ūtor, ūtī
- Say it: ūtor, ūtī, once more
- Say it: say ūtor, ūtī
- Recall: say the Latin for to follow, then the Latin for to set out, then say ūtor, ūtī again

Before you move on

What does ūtor, ūtī mean? ("To use".) Say it once more.

Chapter 236

Plaster, Remedy, Dream, Love, Friendship

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a plaster, a remedy, a dream, love and friendship.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 236: I can say a plaster, a remedy, a dream, love and friendship.

236.1 emplastrum, emplastrī — a plaster, a dressing

Before the new one: say the Latin for to set out, then the Latin for to use.

You'll want to know: emplastrum, emplastrī

emplastrum, emplastrī — "a plaster, a dressing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

emplastrum was borrowed from Greek emplastron, "a plaster" (Lewis & Short), from en, "on", and plassō, "to mould" (EtymDB 2.1). English plaster comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: emplastrum, emplastrī
- Say it: emplastrum, emplastrī, once more
- Say it: say emplastrum, emplastrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to set out, then the Latin for to use, then say emplastrum, emplastrī again

Before you move on

What does emplastrum, emplastrī mean? ("A plaster, a dressing".) Say it once more.

236.2 remedium, remediī — a remedy

Before the new one: say the Latin for to use, then the Latin for a plaster.

You'll want to know: remedium, remediī

remedium, remediī — "a remedy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

remedium is re-, "back", with medeor, "to heal" (Lewis & Short): what brings back health.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: remedium, remediī
- Say it: remedium, remediī, once more
- Say it: say remedium, remediī
- Recall: say the Latin for to use, then the Latin for a plaster, then say remedium, remediī again

Before you move on

What does remedium, remediī mean? ("A remedy".) Say it once more.

236.3 somnium, somniī — a dream

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plaster, then the Latin for a remedy.

You'll want to know: somnium, somniī

somnium, somniī — "a dream".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

somnium is built on somnus, "sleep": what one sees in sleep. somnus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European swepnos*, "sleep".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: somnium, somniī
- Say it: somnium, somniī, once more
- Say it: say somnium, somniī
- Recall: say the Latin for a plaster, then the Latin for a remedy, then say somnium, somniī again

Before you move on

What does somnium, somniī mean? ("A dream".) Say it once more.

236.4 amor, amōris — love

Before the new one: say the Latin for a remedy, then the Latin for a dream.

You'll want to know: amor, amōris

amor, amōris — "love".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amor is built on amō, "to love" (Lewis & Short), with -or, "a state". Where amō comes from is uncertain; it may be a nursery word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amor, amōris
- Say it: amor, amōris, once more
- Say it: say amor, amōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a remedy, then the Latin for a dream, then say amor, amōris again

Before you move on

What does amor, amōris mean? ("Love".) Say it once more.

236.5 amīcitia, amīcitiae — friendship

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dream, then the Latin for love.

You'll want to know: amīcitia, amīcitiae

amīcitia, amīcitiae — "friendship".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amīcitia is built on amīcus, "a friend" (Lewis & Short), with -itia, an ending for a state: being friends.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amīcitia, amīcitiae
- Say it: amīcitia, amīcitiae, once more
- Say it: say amīcitia, amīcitiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a dream, then the Latin for love, then say amīcitia, amīcitiae again

Before you move on

What does amīcitia, amīcitiae mean? ("Friendship".) Say it once more.

Chapter 237

End, Delay, Sometimes, Every day, Day before

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say the end, a delay, sometimes, every day and the day before.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 237: I can say the end, a delay, sometimes, every day and the day before.

237.1 fīnis, fīnis — the end; a boundary

> Before the new one: say the Latin for love, then the Latin for friendship.

You'll want to know: fīnis, fīnis

fīnis, fīnis — "the end; a boundary".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīnis has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European dhnh2-*, "end", but no account is generally accepted. English final and finish come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīnis, fīnis
- Say it: fīnis, fīnis, once more
- Say it: say fīnis, fīnis
- Recall: say the Latin for love, then the Latin for friendship, then say fīnis, fīnis again

Before you move on

What does fīnis, fīnis mean? ("The end; a boundary".) Say it once more.

237.2 mora, morae — a delay

Before the new one: say the Latin for friendship, then the Latin for the end; a boundary.

You'll want to know: mora, morae

mora, morae — "a delay".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mora is often linked with Proto-Indo-European (s)mer-*, "to be mindful, to linger in thought" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of memor, "mindful" (Lewis & Short), but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mora, morae
- Say it: mora, morae, once more
- Say it: say mora, morae

- Recall: say the Latin for friendship, then the Latin for the end; a boundary, then say mora, morae again

Before you move on

What does mora, morae mean? ("A delay".) Say it once more.

237.3 interdum — sometimes

Before the new one: say the Latin for the end; a boundary, then the Latin for a delay.

You'll want to know: interdum

interdum — "sometimes".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

interdum is inter, "between", with dum, "while" (Lewis & Short): at times in between.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: interdum
- Say it: interdum, once more
- Say it: say interdum
- Recall: say the Latin for the end; a boundary, then the Latin for a delay, then say interdum again

Before you move on

What does interdum mean? ("Sometimes".) Say it once more.

237.4 cotīdiē — every day

Before the new one: say the Latin for a delay, then the Latin for sometimes.

You'll want to know: cotīdiē

cotīdiē — "every day".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cotīdiē is fused from quot, "as many as", and diē, "on the day": on every day there is. English quotidian comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cotīdiē
- Say it: cotīdiē, once more
- Say it: say cotīdiē
- Recall: say the Latin for a delay, then the Latin for sometimes, then say cotīdiē again

Before you move on

What does cotīdiē mean? ("Every day".) Say it once more.

237.5 prīdiē — the day before

Before the new one: say the Latin for sometimes, then the Latin for every day.

You'll want to know: prīdiē

prīdiē — "the day before".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīdiē is usually explained as an old prī*, "before", the root of prior, "earlier", with diē, "on the day" (Lewis & Short): on the day before.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prīdiē
- Say it: prīdiē, once more
- Say it: say prīdiē
- Recall: say the Latin for sometimes, then the Latin for every day, then say prīdiē again

Before you move on

What does prīdiē mean? ("The day before".) Say it once more.

237.6 Words from chapters 229-232 — a first pass

Say the words for every day and the day before.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to decree, to try, to go on, to hold off, to remove
- to wake up, to accompany, to add, to announce, to appear
- to turn, to enjoy, to shape, to complain, to be missing
- to steal, to uncover, to seem, to serve, to suffer

Before you move on

To decree? (dēcernō, dēcernere.) To try? (temptō, temptāre.) To go on? (pergō, pergere.) To hold off? (cessō, cessāre.) To remove? (removeō, removēre.) To wake up? (expergīscor, expergīscī.) To accompany? (comitor, comitārī.) To add? (addō, addere.) To announce? (nūntiō, nūntiāre.) To appear? (appāreō, appārēre.) To turn? (vertō, vertere.) To enjoy? (fruor, fruī.) To shape? (fingō, fingere.) To complain? (queror, querī.) To be missing? (dēsum, deesse.) To steal? (fūror, fūrārī.) To uncover? (dētegō, dētegere.) To seem? (videor, vidērī.) To serve? (serviō, servīre.) To suffer? (patior, patī.)

237.7 Words from chapters 233-237 — a second pass

Say the words for to press on and to break off.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to press on, to break off, to tie, to mix, to obey
- to let down, to gather, to vanish, to entrust, to hold back
- to remember, to speak, to follow, to set out, to use
- a plaster, a remedy, a dream, love, friendship
- the end; a boundary, a delay, sometimes, every day, the day before

Before you move on

To press on? (īnstō, īnstāre.) To break off? (interrumpō, interrumpere.) To tie? (ligō, ligāre.) To mix? (misceō, miscēre.) To obey? (pāreō, pārēre.) To let down? (dēmittō, dēmittere.) To gather? (colligō, colligere.) To vanish? (ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere.) To entrust? (mandō, mandāre.) To hold back? (retineō, retinēre.) To remember? (meminī, meminisse.) To speak? (loquor, loquī.) To follow? (sequor, sequī.) To set out? (proficīscor, proficīscī.) To use? (ūtor, ūtī.) A plaster? (emplastrum, emplastrī.) A remedy? (remedium, remediī.) A dream? (somnium, somniī.) Love? (amor, amōris.) Friendship? (amīcitia, amīcitiae.) The end; a boundary? (fīnis, fīnis.) A delay? (mora, morae.) Sometimes? (interdum.) Every day? (cotīdiē.) The day before? (prīdiē.)

Chapter 238

Beyond, On this side, At the house of, Face to face, By which way

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say beyond, on this side, at the house of, face to face and by which way.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 238: I can say beyond, on this side, at the house of, face to face and by which way.

238.1 ultrā — beyond

Before the new one: say the Latin for every day, then the Latin for the day before.

You'll want to know: ultrā

ultrā — "beyond".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ultrā is an old case form of ulter, "lying beyond" (Lewis & Short), built on uls, "beyond", with parte, "side", understood: on the far side. English ultra- comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ultrā
- Say it: ultrā, once more
- Say it: say ultrā
- Recall: say the Latin for every day, then the Latin for the day before, then say ultrā again

Before you move on

What does ultrā mean? ("Beyond".) Say it once more.

238.2 citrā — on this side

Before the new one: say the Latin for the day before, then the Latin for beyond.

You'll want to know: citrā

citrā — "on this side".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

citrā is an old case form of citer, "on this side" (Lewis & Short), built on the pointing element of cis, "on this side".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: citrā
- Say it: citrā, once more
- Say it: say citrā
- Recall: say the Latin for the day before, then the Latin for beyond, then say citrā again

Before you move on

What does citrā mean? ("On this side".) Say it once more.

238.3 apud — at the house of, among

Before the new one: say the Latin for beyond, then the Latin for on this side.

You'll want to know: apud

apud — "at the house of, among".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

apud has no sure origin; old inscriptions also write aput (Lewis & Short). A link with Greek apo, "from", is often suggested.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: apud
- Say it: apud, once more
- Say it: say apud
- Recall: say the Latin for beyond, then the Latin for on this side, then say apud again

Before you move on

What does apud mean? ("At the house of, among".) Say it once more.

238.4 cōram — face to face

Before the new one: say the Latin for on this side, then the Latin for at the house of.

You'll want to know: cōram

cōram — "face to face".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōram is usually linked with ōs, ōris, "the face, the mouth" (Lewis & Short), with con-, "with": face to face.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōram
- Say it: cōram, once more
- Say it: say cōram
- Recall: say the Latin for on this side, then the Latin for at the house of, then say cōram again

Before you move on

What does cōram mean? ("Face to face".) Say it once more.

238.5 quā — by which way

Before the new one: say the Latin for at the house of, then the Latin for face to face.

You'll want to know: quā

quā — "by which way".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quā is the ablative feminine of quī, "who, which" (Lewis & Short), with viā, "way", understood: by which way.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quā
- Say it: quā, once more
- Say it: say quā
- Recall: say the Latin for at the house of, then the Latin for face to face, then say quā again

Before you move on

What does quā mean? ("By which way".) Say it once more.

Chapter 239

At the same time, Perhaps, Also, As if, Because of

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say at the same time, perhaps, also, as if and because of.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 239: I can say at the same time, perhaps, also, as if and because of.

239.1 simul — at the same time

Before the new one: say the Latin for face to face, then the Latin for by which way.

You'll want to know: simul

simul — "at the same time".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

simul is inherited, usually traced to the Proto-Indo-European root sem-*, "one, together". Greek hama, "together", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English same.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: simul
- Say it: simul, once more
- Say it: say simul
- Recall: say the Latin for face to face, then the Latin for by which way, then say simul again

Before you move on

What does simul mean? ("At the same time".) Say it once more.

239.2 fortasse — perhaps

Before the new one: say the Latin for by which way, then the Latin for at the same time.

You'll want to know: fortasse

fortasse — "perhaps".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fortasse is usually explained as built on forte, "by chance", and an, "whether" (Lewis & Short): perhaps.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fortasse
- Say it: fortasse, once more
- Say it: say fortasse
- Recall: say the Latin for by which way, then the Latin for at the same time, then say fortasse again

Before you move on

What does fortasse mean? ("Perhaps".) Say it once more.

239.3 quoque — also, too

Before the new one: say the Latin for at the same time, then the Latin for perhaps.

You'll want to know: quoque

quoque — "also, too".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quoque has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. It is a different word from quōque, "and by which".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quoque
- Say it: quoque, once more
- Say it: say quoque
- Recall: say the Latin for at the same time, then the Latin for perhaps, then say quoque again

Before you move on

What does quoque mean? ("Also, too".) Say it once more.

239.4 quasi — as if

Before the new one: say the Latin for perhaps, then the Latin for also.

You'll want to know: quasi quasi — "as if".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quasi is contracted from quam sī, "as if" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quasi
- Say it: quasi, once more
- Say it: say quasi
- Recall: say the Latin for perhaps, then the Latin for also, then say quasi again

Before you move on

What does quasi mean? ("As if".) Say it once more.

239.5 propter — because of

Before the new one: say the Latin for also, then the Latin for as if.

You'll want to know: propter

propter — "because of".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

propter is contracted from an older propiter*, built on prope, "near" (Lewis & Short): near by, then because of.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: propter
- Say it: propter, once more
- Say it: say propter
- Recall: say the Latin for also, then the Latin for as if, then say propter again

Before you move on

What does propter mean? ("Because of".) Say it once more.

Chapter 240

Rough, Deep, Unknown, Necessary, Useless

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say rough, deep, unknown, necessary and useless.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 240: I can say rough, deep, unknown, necessary and useless.

240.1 asper, aspera, asperum — rough, harsh

Before the new one: say the Latin for as if, then the Latin for because of.

You'll want to know: asper, aspera, asperum

asper, aspera, asperum — "rough, harsh".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

asper has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful, and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed root h2esp-*, "to cut".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: asper, aspera, asperum
- Say it: asper, aspera, asperum, once more
- Say it: say asper, aspera, asperum
- Recall: say the Latin for as if, then the Latin for because of, then say asper, aspera, asperum again

Before you move on

What does asper, aspera, asperum mean? ("Rough, harsh".) Say it once more.

240.2 profundus, profunda, profundum — deep

Before the new one: say the Latin for because of, then the Latin for rough.

You'll want to know: profundus, profunda, profundum

profundus, profunda, profundum — "deep".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

profundus is prō, "forward, down", with fundus, "bottom" (EtymDB 2.1): reaching far down. English profound comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: profundus, profunda, profundum
- Say it: profundus, profunda, profundum, once more
- Say it: say profundus, profunda, profundum
- Recall: say the Latin for because of, then the Latin for rough, then say profundus, profunda, profundum again

Before you move on

What does profundus, profunda, profundum mean? ("Deep".) Say it once more.

240.3 ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum — unknown

Before the new one: say the Latin for rough, then the Latin for deep.

You'll want to know: ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum

ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum — "unknown".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ignōtus is in-, "not", with gnōtus, "known", the older form of nōtus (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum
- Say it: ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum, once more
- Say it: say ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum
- Recall: say the Latin for rough, then the Latin for deep, then say ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum again

Before you move on

What does ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum mean? ("Unknown".) Say it once more.

240.4 necessārius, necessāria, necessārium — necessary

Before the new one: say the Latin for deep, then the Latin for unknown.

You'll want to know: necessārius, necessāria, necessārium

necessārius, necessāria, necessārium — "necessary".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

necessārius is built on necesse, "unavoidable" (Lewis & Short), which is usually explained as ne, "not", with the root of cēdō, "to give way": not to be avoided.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: necessārius, necessāria, necessārium
- Say it: necessārius, necessāria, necessārium, once more
- Say it: say necessārius, necessāria, necessārium
- Recall: say the Latin for deep, then the Latin for unknown, then say necessārius, necessāria, necessārium again

Before you move on

What does necessārius, necessāria, necessārium mean? ("Necessary".) Say it once more.

240.5 inūtilis, inūtile — useless

Before the new one: say the Latin for unknown, then the Latin for necessary.

You'll want to know: inūtilis, inūtile

inūtilis, inūtile — "useless".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inūtilis is in-, "not", with ūtilis, "useful" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inūtilis, inūtile
- Say it: inūtilis, inūtile, once more
- Say it: say inūtilis, inūtile
- Recall: say the Latin for unknown, then the Latin for necessary, then say inūtilis, inūtile again

Before you move on

What does inūtilis, inūtile mean? ("Useless".) Say it once more.

Chapter 241

Industrious, Talkative, Worried, Unmarried, Rainy

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say industrious, talkative, worried, unmarried and rainy.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 241: I can say industrious, talkative, worried, unmarried and rainy.

241.1 industrius, industria, industrium — industrious, active

Before the new one: say the Latin for necessary, then the Latin for useless.

You'll want to know: industrius, industria, industrium

industrius, industria, industrium — "industrious, active".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

industrius is usually explained as indu-, "within", the old form of in, with the root of struō, "to build" (Lewis & Short): building from within, so active.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: industrius, industria, industrium
- Say it: industrius, industria, industrium, once more
- Say it: say industrius, industria, industrium
- Recall: say the Latin for necessary, then the Latin for useless, then say industrius, industria, industrium again

Before you move on

What does industrius, industria, industrium mean? ("Industrious, active".) Say it once more.

241.2 loquāx, loquācis — talkative

Before the new one: say the Latin for useless, then the Latin for industrious.

You'll want to know: loquāx, loquācis

loquāx, loquācis — "talkative".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

loquāx is built on loquor, "to speak" (Lewis & Short), with -āx, an ending for a strong tendency: much given to talking.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: loquāx, loquācis
- Say it: loquāx, loquācis, once more
- Say it: say loquāx, loquācis
- Recall: say the Latin for useless, then the Latin for industrious, then say loquāx, loquācis again

Before you move on

What does loquāx, loquācis mean? ("Talkative".) Say it once more.

241.3 sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum — worried

Before the new one: say the Latin for industrious, then the Latin for talkative.

You'll want to know: sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum

sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum — "worried".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sollicitus is built from sollus, "whole", and cieō, "to stir up" (Lewis & Short): stirred up through and through. English solicitous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum
- Say it: sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum, once more
- Say it: say sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum
- Recall: say the Latin for industrious, then the Latin for talkative, then say sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum again

Before you move on

What does sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum mean? ("Worried".) Say it once more.

241.4 caelebs, caelibis — unmarried

Before the new one: say the Latin for talkative, then the Latin for worried.

You'll want to know: caelebs, caelibis

caelebs, caelibis — "unmarried".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caelebs has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English celibate comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: caelebs, caelibis
- Say it: caelebs, caelibis, once more
- Say it: say caelebs, caelibis
- Recall: say the Latin for talkative, then the Latin for worried, then say caelebs, caelibis again

Before you move on

What does caelebs, caelibis mean? ("Unmarried".) Say it once more.

241.5 pluvius, pluvia, pluvium — rainy

Before the new one: say the Latin for worried, then the Latin for unmarried.

You'll want to know: pluvius, pluvia, pluvium

pluvius, pluvia, pluvium — "rainy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pluvius is built on pluō, "to rain" (Lewis & Short), whose third person is pluit, "it rains".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pluvius, pluvia, pluvium
- Say it: pluvius, pluvia, pluvium, once more
- Say it: say pluvius, pluvia, pluvium
- Recall: say the Latin for worried, then the Latin for unmarried, then say pluvius, pluvia, pluvium again

Before you move on

What does pluvius, pluvia, pluvium mean? ("Rainy".) Say it once more.

Chapter 242

Few, All, Whole, Others, Other

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say few, all, whole, the others and other.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 242: I can say few, all, whole, the others and other.

242.1 paucī, paucae, pauca — few

Before the new one: say the Latin for unmarried, then the Latin for rainy.

You'll want to know: paucī, paucae, pauca

paucī, paucae, pauca — "few".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

paucī is the plural of paucus, "few" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peh2w-*, "few, small" (EtymDB 2.1); English few is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: paucī, paucae, pauca
- Say it: paucī, paucae, pauca, once more
- Say it: say paucī, paucae, pauca
- Recall: say the Latin for unmarried, then the Latin for rainy, then say paucī, paucae, pauca again

Before you move on

What does paucī, paucae, pauca mean? ("Few".) Say it once more.

242.2 omnis, omne — all, every

Before the new one: say the Latin for rainy, then the Latin for few.

You'll want to know: omnis, omne

omnis, omne — "all, every".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

omnis has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful, and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European h3ep-ni-*, "working". Neither account is settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: omnis, omne
- Say it: omnis, omne, once more
- Say it: say omnis, omne
- Recall: say the Latin for rainy, then the Latin for few, then say omnis, omne again

Before you move on

What does omnis, omne mean? ("All, every".) Say it once more.

242.3 tōtus, tōta, tōtum — whole

Before the new one: say the Latin for few, then the Latin for all.

You'll want to know: tōtus, tōta, tōtum

tōtus, tōta, tōtum — "whole".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tōtus has no sure origin; Lewis & Short link it with tot, "so many", but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tōtus, tōta, tōtum
- Say it: tōtus, tōta, tōtum, once more
- Say it: say tōtus, tōta, tōtum
- Recall: say the Latin for few, then the Latin for all, then say tōtus, tōta, tōtum again

Before you move on

What does tōtus, tōta, tōtum mean? ("Whole".) Say it once more.

242.4 cēterī, cēterae, cētera — the others, the remaining

Before the new one: say the Latin for all, then the Latin for whole.

You'll want to know: cēterī, cēterae, cētera

cēterī, cēterae, cētera — "the others, the remaining".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēterī has no sure origin; it is often explained as a pointing element ce-, "here", with a word like Greek heteros, "the other", but this is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cēterī, cēterae, cētera
- Say it: cēterī, cēterae, cētera, once more
- Say it: say cēterī, cēterae, cētera
- Recall: say the Latin for all, then the Latin for whole, then say cēterī, cēterae, cētera again

Before you move on

What does cēterī, cēterae, cētera mean? ("The others, the remaining".) Say it once more.

242.5 alius, alia, aliud — other, another

Before the new one: say the Latin for whole, then the Latin for the others.

You'll want to know: alius, alia, aliud

alius, alia, aliud — "other, another".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

alius is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2elyos*, "other" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek allos, "other", and English else are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: alius, alia, aliud
- Say it: alius, alia, aliud, once more
- Say it: say alius, alia, aliud
- Recall: say the Latin for whole, then the Latin for the others, then say alius, alia, aliud again

Before you move on

What does alius, alia, aliud mean? ("Other, another".) Say it once more.

Chapter 243

Doubtful, Faithful, Loyal, Unlucky, Blessed

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say doubtful, faithful, loyal, unlucky and blessed.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 243: I can say doubtful, faithful, loyal, unlucky and blessed.

243.1 dubius, dubia, dubium — doubtful

Before the new one: say the Latin for the others, then the Latin for other.

You'll want to know: dubius, dubia, dubium

dubius, dubia, dubium — "doubtful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dubius is usually traced to an old compound of duo, "two", and a root for "being": being two ways at once, so in doubt.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dubius, dubia, dubium
- Say it: dubius, dubia, dubium, once more
- Say it: say dubius, dubia, dubium
- Recall: say the Latin for the others, then the Latin for other, then say dubius, dubia, dubium again

Before you move on

What does dubius, dubia, dubium mean? ("Doubtful".) Say it once more.

243.2 fīdus, fīda, fīdum — faithful

Before the new one: say the Latin for other, then the Latin for doubtful.

You'll want to know: fīdus, fīda, fīdum

fīdus, fīda, fīdum — "faithful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīdus belongs with fīdō, "to trust" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bheydh-*, "to trust, to persuade" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek peithō, "to persuade", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīdus, fīda, fīdum
- Say it: fīdus, fīda, fīdum, once more
- Say it: say fīdus, fīda, fīdum

- Recall: say the Latin for other, then the Latin for doubtful, then say fīdus, fīda, fīdum again

Before you move on

What does fīdus, fīda, fīdum mean? ("Faithful".) Say it once more.

243.3 fīdēlis, fīdēle — loyal

Before the new one: say the Latin for doubtful, then the Latin for faithful.

You'll want to know: fīdēlis, fīdēle

fīdēlis, fīdēle — "loyal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children fīdēlis is built on fidēs, "trust, faith" (Lewis & Short), with -ēlis, "having the quality of": faithful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīdēlis, fīdēle
- Say it: fīdēlis, fīdēle, once more
- Say it: say fīdēlis, fīdēle
- Recall: say the Latin for doubtful, then the Latin for faithful, then say fīdēlis, fīdēle again

Before you move on

What does fīdēlis, fīdēle mean? ("Loyal".) Say it once more.

243.4 īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis — unlucky, unhappy

Before the new one: say the Latin for faithful, then the Latin for loyal.

You'll want to know: īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis

īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis — "unlucky, unhappy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnfēlīx is in-, "not", with fēlīx, "fruitful, lucky" (Lewis & Short): first an unfruitful tree, then an unlucky person.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis
- Say it: īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis, once more
- Say it: say īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis
- Recall: say the Latin for faithful, then the Latin for loyal, then say īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis again

Before you move on

What does īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis mean? ("Unlucky, unhappy".) Say it once more.

243.5 beātus, beāta, beātum — blessed, fortunate

Before the new one: say the Latin for loyal, then the Latin for unlucky.

You'll want to know: beātus, beāta, beātum

beātus, beāta, beātum — "blessed, fortunate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

beātus is the past participle of beō, "to make happy, to bless" (Lewis & Short): made happy. Where beō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: beātus, beāta, beātum
- Say it: beātus, beāta, beātum, once more
- Say it: say beātus, beāta, beātum
- Recall: say the Latin for loyal, then the Latin for unlucky, then say beātus, beāta, beātum again

Before you move on

What does beātus, beāta, beātum mean? ("Blessed, fortunate".)
Say it once more.

Chapter 244

Travelling carriage, Broad street, Aqueduct, Public baths, Amphitheatre

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a travelling carriage, a broad street, an aqueduct, the public baths and an amphitheatre.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 244: I can say a travelling carriage, a broad street, an aqueduct, the public baths and an amphitheatre.

244.1 raeda, raedae — a travelling carriage

Before the new one: say the Latin for unlucky, then the Latin for blessed.

You'll want to know: raeda, raedae

raeda, raedae — "a travelling carriage".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

raeda was probably borrowed from Gaulish: Quintilian counts raeda among the Gallic words in Latin (Lewis & Short). Its Celtic root is the one for riding, a cousin of English ride.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: raeda, raedae
- Say it: raeda, raedae, once more
- Say it: say raeda, raedae
- Recall: say the Latin for unlucky, then the Latin for blessed, then say raeda, raedae again

Before you move on

What does raeda, raedae mean? ("A travelling carriage".) Say it once more.

244.2 platēa, platēae — a broad street, a square

Before the new one: say the Latin for blessed, then the Latin for a travelling carriage.

You'll want to know: platēa, platēae

platēa, platēae — "a broad street, a square".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

platēa was borrowed from Greek plateia, "a broad street" (Lewis & Short), from platys, "broad". English place comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: platēa, platēae

- Say it: platēa, platēae, once more
- Say it: say platēa, platēae
- Recall: say the Latin for blessed, then the Latin for a travelling carriage, then say platēa, platēae again

Before you move on

What does platēa, platēae mean? ("A broad street, a square".) Say it once more.

244.3 aquaeductus, aquaeductūs — an aqueduct

Before the new one: say the Latin for a travelling carriage, then the Latin for a broad street.

You'll want to know: aquaeductus, aquaeductūs

aquaeductus, aquaeductūs — "an aqueduct".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aquaeductus is aquae ductus, "a leading of water" (Lewis & Short): aqua, "water", and ductus, "a leading", from dūcō, "to lead".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aquaeductus, aquaeductūs
- Say it: aquaeductus, aquaeductūs, once more
- Say it: say aquaeductus, aquaeductūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a travelling carriage, then the Latin for a broad street, then say aquaeductus, aquaeductūs again

Before you move on

What does aquaeductus, aquaeductūs mean? ("An aqueduct".) Say it once more.

244.4 thermae, thermārum — the public baths

Before the new one: say the Latin for a broad street, then the Latin for an aqueduct.

You'll want to know: thermae, thermārum

thermae, thermārum — "the public baths".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

thermae comes from Greek thermos, "warm": Lewis & Short gloss thermae as warm springs and warm baths.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: thermae, thermārum
- Say it: thermae, thermārum, once more
- Say it: say thermae, thermārum
- Recall: say the Latin for a broad street, then the Latin for an aqueduct, then say thermae, thermārum again

Before you move on

What does thermae, thermārum mean? ("The public baths".) Say it once more.

244.5 amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī — an amphitheatre

Before the new one: say the Latin for an aqueduct, then the Latin for the public baths.

You'll want to know: amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī

amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī — "an amphitheatre".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amphitheātrum was borrowed from Greek amphitheatron, "a double theatre" (Lewis & Short), from amphi, "around, on both sides", and theatron, "a theatre" (EtymDB 2.1): seats all the way round.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī
- Say it: amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī, once more
- Say it: say amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī
- Recall: say the Latin for an aqueduct, then the Latin for the public baths, then say amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī again

Before you move on

What does amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī mean? ("An amphitheatre".) Say it once more.

Chapter 245

Thief, Robber, Consul, General, Kingdom

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a thief, a robber, a consul, a general and a kingdom.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 245: I can say a thief, a robber, a consul, a general and a kingdom.

245.1 fūr, fūris — a thief

> Before the new one: say the Latin for the public baths, then the Latin for an amphitheatre.

You'll want to know: fūr, fūris

fūr, fūris — "a thief".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fūr is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhōr*, "thief" (EtymDB 2.1), from the root of ferō, "to carry"; Greek phōr, "thief", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fūr, fūris
- Say it: fūr, fūris, once more
- Say it: say fūr, fūris
- Recall: say the Latin for the public baths, then the Latin for an amphitheatre, then say fūr, fūris again

Before you move on

What does fūr, fūris mean? ("A thief".) Say it once more.

245.2 latrō, latrōnis — a robber

Before the new one: say the Latin for an amphitheatre, then the Latin for a thief.

You'll want to know: latrō, latrōnis

latrō, latrōnis — "a robber".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

latrō was probably borrowed from Greek: latron, "pay, hire" (EtymDB 2.1), and latris, "a hired servant" (Lewis & Short). A latrō was first a hired soldier, then a robber.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: latrō, latrōnis
- Say it: latrō, latrōnis, once more
- Say it: say latrō, latrōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for an amphitheatre, then the Latin for a thief, then say latrō, latrōnis again

Before you move on

What does latrō, latrōnis mean? ("A robber".) Say it once more.

245.3 cōnsul, cōnsulis — a consul

Before the new one: say the Latin for a thief, then the Latin for a robber.

You'll want to know: cōnsul, cōnsulis

cōnsul, cōnsulis — "a consul".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsul belongs with cōnsulō, "to consult, to deliberate" (EtymDB 2.1); Old Latin wrote it consol. Where the root comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsul, cōnsulis
- Say it: cōnsul, cōnsulis, once more
- Say it: say cōnsul, cōnsulis
- Recall: say the Latin for a thief, then the Latin for a robber, then say cōnsul, cōnsulis again

Before you move on

What does cōnsul, cōnsulis mean? ("A consul".) Say it once more.

245.4 imperātor, imperātōris — a general, an emperor

Before the new one: say the Latin for a robber, then the Latin for a consul.

You'll want to know: imperātor, imperātōris

imperātor, imperātōris — "a general, an emperor".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

imperātor is built on imperō, "to command" (EtymDB 2.1), itself in, "in, upon", with parō, "to prepare, to order", with -tor, "one who does it". English emperor comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: imperātor, imperātōris
- Say it: imperātor, imperātōris, once more
- Say it: say imperātor, imperātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a robber, then the Latin for a consul, then say imperātor, imperātōris again

Before you move on

What does imperātor, imperātōris mean? ("A general, an emperor".) Say it once more.

245.5 rēgnum, rēgnī — a kingdom

Before the new one: say the Latin for a consul, then the Latin for a general.

You'll want to know: rēgnum, rēgnī

rēgnum, rēgnī — "a kingdom".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēgnum is built on rēx, rēgis, "a king" (Lewis & Short): what a king rules. English reign comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēgnum, rēgnī
- Say it: rēgnum, rēgnī, once more
- Say it: say rēgnum, rēgnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a consul, then the Latin for a general, then say rēgnum, rēgnī again

Before you move on

What does rēgnum, rēgnī mean? ("A kingdom".) Say it once more.

Chapter 246

Song, Line of verse, Writer, Painter, Music

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a song, a line of verse, a writer, a painter and music.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 246: I can say a song, a line of verse, a writer, a painter and music.

246.1 carmen, carminis — a song, a poem

Before the new one: say the Latin for a general, then the Latin for a kingdom.

You'll want to know: carmen, carminis

carmen, carminis — "a song, a poem".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carmen is usually explained as can-men*, "a singing", built on canō, "to sing", with -men, an ending for a result: a song. Varro gives an old form casmen (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: carmen, carminis
- Say it: carmen, carminis, once more
- Say it: say carmen, carminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a general, then the Latin for a kingdom, then say carmen, carminis again

Before you move on

What does carmen, carminis mean? ("A song, a poem".) Say it once more.

246.2 versus, versūs — a line of verse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a kingdom, then the Latin for a song.

You'll want to know: versus, versūs

versus, versūs — "a line of verse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

versus is built on vertō, "to turn" (Lewis & Short): first the turn of the plough at the end of a furrow, then a line of writing. English verse comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: versus, versūs
- Say it: versus, versūs, once more
- Say it: say versus, versūs

- Recall: say the Latin for a kingdom, then the Latin for a song, then say versus, versūs again

Before you move on

What does versus, versūs mean? ("A line of verse".) Say it once more.

246.3 scrīptor, scrīptōris — a writer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a song, then the Latin for a line of verse.

You'll want to know: scrīptor, scrīptōris

scrīptor, scrīptōris — "a writer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scrīptor is built on scrībō, "to write" (Lewis & Short), with -tor, "one who does it". scrībō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)kreybh-*, "to scratch, to cut" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scrīptor, scrīptōris
- Say it: scrīptor, scrīptōris, once more
- Say it: say scrīptor, scrīptōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a song, then the Latin for a line of verse, then say scrīptor, scrīptōris again

Before you move on

What does scrīptor, scrīptōris mean? ("A writer".) Say it once more.

246.4 pictor, pictōris — a painter

Before the new one: say the Latin for a line of verse, then the Latin for a writer.

You'll want to know: pictor, pictōris

pictor, pictōris — "a painter".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pictor is built on pingō, "to paint" (Lewis & Short), with -tor, "one who does it".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pictor, pictōris
- Say it: pictor, pictōris, once more
- Say it: say pictor, pictōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a line of verse, then the Latin for a writer, then say pictor, pictōris again

Before you move on

What does pictor, pictōris mean? ("A painter".) Say it once more.

246.5 mūsica, mūsicae — music

Before the new one: say the Latin for a writer, then the Latin for a painter.

You'll want to know: mūsica, mūsicae

mūsica, mūsicae — "music".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūsica was borrowed from Greek mousikē, "the art of the Muses" (Lewis & Short), from Mousa, "a Muse".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mūsica, mūsicae
- Say it: mūsica, mūsicae, once more
- Say it: say mūsica, mūsicae
- Recall: say the Latin for a writer, then the Latin for a painter, then say mūsica, mūsicae again

Before you move on

What does mūsica, mūsicae mean? ("Music".) Say it once more.

246.6 Words from chapters 238-241 — a first pass

Say the words for a painter and music.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- beyond, on this side, at the house of, face to face, by which way
- at the same time, perhaps, also, as if, because of
- rough, deep, unknown, necessary, useless
- industrious, talkative, worried, unmarried, rainy

Before you move on

Beyond? (ultrā.) On this side? (citrā.) At the house of? (apud.) Face to face? (cōram.) By which way? (quā.) At the same time? (simul.) Perhaps? (fortasse.) Also? (quoque.) As if? (quasi.) Because of? (propter.) Rough? (asper, aspera, asperum.) Deep? (profundus, profunda, profundum.) Unknown? (ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum.) Necessary? (necessārius, necessāria, necessārium.) Useless? (inūtilis, inūtile.) Industrious? (industrius, industria, industrium.) Talkative? (loquāx, loquācis.) Worried? (sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum.) Unmarried? (caelebs, caelibis.) Rainy? (pluvius, pluvia, pluvium.)

246.7 Words from chapters 242-246 — a second pass

Say the words for few and all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- few, all, whole, the others, other
- doubtful, faithful, loyal, unlucky, blessed
- a travelling carriage, a broad street, an aqueduct, the public baths, an amphitheatre
- a thief, a robber, a consul, a general, a kingdom
- a song, a line of verse, a writer, a painter, music

Before you move on

Few? (paucī, paucae, pauca.) All? (omnis, omne.) Whole? (tōtus, tōta, tōtum.) The others? (cēterī, cēterae, cētera.) Other? (alius, alia, aliud.) Doubtful? (dubius, dubia, dubium.) Faithful? (fīdus, fīda, fīdum.) Loyal? (fīdēlis, fīdēle.) Unlucky? (īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis.) Blessed? (beātus, beāta, beātum.)

A travelling carriage? (raeda, raedae.) A broad street? (platēa, platēae.) An aqueduct? (aquaeductus, aquaeductūs.) The public baths? (thermae, thermārum.) An amphitheatre? (amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī.) A thief? (fūr, fūris.) A robber? (latrō, latrōnis.) A consul? (cōnsul, cōnsulis.) A general? (imperātor, imperātōris.) A kingdom? (rēgnum, rēgnī.) A song? (carmen, carminis.) A line of verse? (versus, versūs.) A writer? (scrīptor, scrīptōris.) A painter? (pictor, pictōris.) Music? (mūsica, mūsicae.)

Chapter 247

A Twin and the In-Laws

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a twin, a father-in-law, a mother-in-law, a son-in-law and a daughter-in-law.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 247: I can say a twin, a father-in-law, a mother-in-law, a son-in-law and a daughter-in-law.

247.1 geminus, geminī — a twin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a painter, then the Latin for music.

You'll want to know: geminus, geminī

geminus, geminī — "a twin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

geminus has no sure origin; Lewis & Short's link with gignō, "to beget", is uncertain. English Gemini, "the Twins", is its plural.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: geminus, geminī
- Say it: geminus, geminī, once more
- Say it: say geminus, geminī
- Recall: say the Latin for a painter, then the Latin for music, then say geminus, geminī again

Before you move on

What does geminus, geminī mean? ("A twin".) Say it once more.

247.2 socer, socerī — a father-in-law

Before the new one: say the Latin for music, then the Latin for a twin.

You'll want to know: socer, socerī

socer, socerī — "a father-in-law".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

socer is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European swekuros*, "father-in-law" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hekyros, "father-in-law", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is German Schwager, "brother-in-law".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: socer, socerī
- Say it: socer, socerī, once more
- Say it: say socer, socerī
- Recall: say the Latin for music, then the Latin for a twin, then say socer, socerī again

Before you move on

What does socer, socerī mean? ("A father-in-law".) Say it once more.

247.3 socrus, socrūs — a mother-in-law

Before the new one: say the Latin for a twin, then the Latin for a father-in-law.

You'll want to know: socrus, socrūs

socrus, socrūs — "a mother-in-law".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

socrus is usually traced to Proto-Italic swekrus*, "mother-in-law" (EtymDB 2.1), the partner of socer, "father-in-law" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: socrus, socrūs
- Say it: socrus, socrūs, once more
- Say it: say socrus, socrūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a twin, then the Latin for a father-in-law, then say socrus, socrūs again

Before you move on

What does socrus, socrūs mean? ("A mother-in-law".) Say it once more.

247.4 gener, generī — a son-in-law

Before the new one: say the Latin for a father-in-law, then the Latin for a mother-in-law.

You'll want to know: gener, generī

gener, generī — "a son-in-law".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gener is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gmros*, "son-in-law" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek gambros, "son-in-law", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gener, generī
- Say it: gener, generī, once more
- Say it: say gener, generī
- Recall: say the Latin for a father-in-law, then the Latin for a mother-in-law, then say gener, generī again

Before you move on

What does gener, generī mean? ("A son-in-law".) Say it once more.

247.5 nurus, nurūs — a daughter-in-law

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mother-in-law, then the Latin for a son-in-law.

You'll want to know: nurus, nurūs

nurus, nurūs — "a daughter-in-law".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nurus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European snusos*, "daughter-in-law" (EtymDB 2.1); Latin lost the first s, and Old High German snur, "daughter-in-law", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nurus, nurūs
- Say it: nurus, nurūs, once more
- Say it: say nurus, nurūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a mother-in-law, then the Latin for a son-in-law, then say nurus, nurūs again

Before you move on

What does nurus, nurūs mean? ("A daughter-in-law".) Say it once more.

Chapter 248

Opportunity, Danger, Kindness, Duty, Work

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say an opportunity, danger, a kindness, a duty and work.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 248: I can say an opportunity, danger, a kindness, a duty and work.

248.1 occāsiō, occāsiōnis — an opportunity

Before the new one: say the Latin for a son-in-law, then the Latin for a daughter-in-law.

You'll want to know: occāsiō, occāsiōnis

occāsiō, occāsiōnis — "an opportunity".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

occāsiō is built on occidō, "to fall, to happen" (Lewis & Short), from ob, "towards", and cadō, "to fall": what falls one's way.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: occāsiō, occāsiōnis
- Say it: occāsiō, occāsiōnis, once more
- Say it: say occāsiō, occāsiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a son-in-law, then the Latin for a daughter-in-law, then say occāsiō, occāsiōnis again

Before you move on

What does occāsiō, occāsiōnis mean? ("An opportunity".) Say it once more.

248.2 perīculum, perīculī — danger

Before the new one: say the Latin for a daughter-in-law, then the Latin for an opportunity.

You'll want to know: perīculum, perīculī

perīculum, perīculī — "danger".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perīculum is built on the root of experior, "to try, to test" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a means: a trial, then a danger. English peril comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perīculum, perīculī
- Say it: perīculum, perīculī, once more
- Say it: say perīculum, perīculī

- Recall: say the Latin for a daughter-in-law, then the Latin for an opportunity, then say perīculum, perīculī again

Before you move on

What does perīculum, perīculī mean? ("Danger".) Say it once more.

248.3 beneficium, beneficiī — a kindness, a favour

Before the new one: say the Latin for an opportunity, then the Latin for danger.

You'll want to know: beneficium, beneficiī

beneficium, beneficiī — "a kindness, a favour".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

beneficium is built on beneficus, "doing good" (Lewis & Short), from bene, "well", and faciō, "to do".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: beneficium, beneficiī
- Say it: beneficium, beneficiī, once more
- Say it: say beneficium, beneficiī
- Recall: say the Latin for an opportunity, then the Latin for danger, then say beneficium, beneficiī again

Before you move on

What does beneficium, beneficiī mean? ("A kindness, a favour".) Say it once more.

248.4 officium, officiī — a duty

Before the new one: say the Latin for danger, then the Latin for a kindness.

You'll want to know: officium, officiī

officium, officiī — "a duty".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

officium is contracted from older opificium (Lewis & Short), from opus, "work", and faciō, "to do": the work one must do. English office comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: officium, officiī
- Say it: officium, officiī, once more
- Say it: say officium, officiī
- Recall: say the Latin for danger, then the Latin for a kindness, then say officium, officiī again

Before you move on

What does officium, officiī mean? ("A duty".) Say it once more.

248.5 labor, labōris — work, toil

Before the new one: say the Latin for a kindness, then the Latin for a duty.

You'll want to know: labor, labōris

labor, labōris — "work, toil".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

labor, "work", has no sure origin. EtymDB 2.1 tentatively ties it to the same root as lābor, "to slip", (s)leh2b-*, "to hang loosely, to be weak": toil as staggering under a load. The link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: labor, labōris
- Say it: labor, labōris, once more
- Say it: say labor, labōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a kindness, then the Latin for a duty, then say labor, labōris again

Before you move on

What does labor, labōris mean? ("Work, toil".) Say it once more.

Chapter 249

Wood, Marble, Glass, Hide, Linen

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say wood, marble, glass, hide and linen.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 249: I can say wood, marble, glass, hide and linen.

249.1 lignum, lignī — wood, timber

Before the new one: say the Latin for a duty, then the Latin for work.

You'll want to know: lignum, lignī

lignum, lignī — "wood, timber".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lignum is usually traced to the root of legō, "to gather" (Lewis & Short): what is gathered for the fire, firewood. EtymDB 2.1 gives a reconstructed Proto-Indo-European leg-no-*, "that which is collected".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lignum, lignī
- Say it: lignum, lignī, once more
- Say it: say lignum, lignī
- Recall: say the Latin for a duty, then the Latin for work, then say lignum, lignī again

Before you move on

What does lignum, lignī mean? ("Wood, timber".) Say it once more.

249.2 marmor, marmoris — marble

Before the new one: say the Latin for work, then the Latin for wood.

You'll want to know: marmor, marmoris

marmor, marmoris — "marble".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

marmor was borrowed from Greek marmaros, "a gleaming stone, marble" (Lewis & Short). English marble comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: marmor, marmoris
- Say it: marmor, marmoris, once more
- Say it: say marmor, marmoris
- Recall: say the Latin for work, then the Latin for wood, then say marmor, marmoris again

Before you move on

What does marmor, marmoris mean? ("Marble".) Say it once more.

249.3 vitrum, vitrī — glass

Before the new one: say the Latin for wood, then the Latin for marble.

You'll want to know: vitrum, vitrī

vitrum, vitrī — "glass".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vitrum is often traced to Proto-Italic wedrom*, "glass", from Proto-Indo-European wed-*, "water" (EtymDB 2.1): glass as the water-like stuff. The link is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vitrum, vitrī
- Say it: vitrum, vitrī, once more
- Say it: say vitrum, vitrī
- Recall: say the Latin for wood, then the Latin for marble, then say vitrum, vitrī again

Before you move on

What does vitrum, vitrī mean? ("Glass".) Say it once more.

249.4 corium, coriī — hide, leather

Before the new one: say the Latin for marble, then the Latin for glass.

You'll want to know: corium, coriī

corium, coriī — "hide, leather".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

corium is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)ker-*, "to cut" (EtymDB 2.1): a hide as what is cut off. Its family includes scortum, "a skin, a hide" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: corium, coriī
- Say it: corium, coriī, once more
- Say it: say corium, coriī
- Recall: say the Latin for marble, then the Latin for glass, then say corium, coriī again

Before you move on

What does corium, coriī mean? ("Hide, leather".) Say it once more.

249.5 līnum, līnī — linen, flax

Before the new one: say the Latin for glass, then the Latin for hide.

You'll want to know: līnum, līnī

līnum, līnī — "linen, flax".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children līnum belongs with Greek linon, "flax" (Lewis & Short), and Gothic lein, "linen". EtymDB 2.1 gives a reconstructed Proto-Indo-European līno-*, "flax", but many think it is an old loan shared across Europe.

English linen and line belong to its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: līnum, līnī
- Say it: līnum, līnī, once more
- Say it: say līnum, līnī
- Recall: say the Latin for glass, then the Latin for hide, then say līnum, līnī again

Before you move on

What does līnum, līnī mean? ("Linen, flax".) Say it once more.

Chapter 250

Vine, Oak, Pine, Laurel, Violet

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a vine, an oak, a pine, a laurel and a violet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 250: I can say a vine, an oak, a pine, a laurel and a violet.

250.1 vītis, vītis — a vine

Before the new one: say the Latin for hide, then the Latin for linen.

You'll want to know: vītis, vītis

vītis, vītis — "a vine".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vītis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weh1itis*, "a twining plant", from weh1y-*, "to twist, to weave" (EtymDB 2.1); vieō, "to plait", is from the same root (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vītis, vītis
- Say it: vītis, vītis, once more
- Say it: say vītis, vītis
- Recall: say the Latin for hide, then the Latin for linen, then say vītis, vītis again

Before you move on

What does vītis, vītis mean? ("A vine".) Say it once more.

250.2 quercus, quercūs — an oak

Before the new one: say the Latin for linen, then the Latin for a vine.

You'll want to know: quercus, quercūs

quercus, quercūs — "an oak".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quercus is inherited, probably from Proto-Italic kwerkus*, "oak" (EtymDB 2.1). It is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European perkwus*, "oak", with the first sound changed to match the second, as in coquō, "to cook". English fir is a distant cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quercus, quercūs
- Say it: quercus, quercūs, once more
- Say it: say quercus, quercūs

- Recall: say the Latin for linen, then the Latin for a vine, then say quercus, quercūs again

Before you move on

What does quercus, quercūs mean? ("An oak".) Say it once more.

250.3 pīnus, pīnūs — a pine

Before the new one: say the Latin for a vine, then the Latin for an oak.

You'll want to know: pīnus, pīnūs

pīnus, pīnūs — "a pine".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pīnus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European piHnu-, "pine", from peyH-, "sap, resin" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek pitys, "pine", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pīnus, pīnūs
- Say it: pīnus, pīnūs, once more
- Say it: say pīnus, pīnūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a vine, then the Latin for an oak, then say pīnus, pīnūs again

Before you move on

What does pīnus, pīnūs mean? ("A pine".) Say it once more.

250.4 laurus, laurī — a laurel

Before the new one: say the Latin for an oak, then the Latin for a pine.

You'll want to know: laurus, laurī

laurus, laurī — "a laurel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

laurus has no sure origin; it is usually thought to be a loan from a lost Mediterranean language. German Lorbeer, "laurel", was borrowed from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: laurus, laurī
- Say it: laurus, laurī, once more
- Say it: say laurus, laurī
- Recall: say the Latin for an oak, then the Latin for a pine, then say laurus, laurī again

Before you move on

What does laurus, laurī mean? ("A laurel".) Say it once more.

250.5 viola, violae — a violet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pine, then the Latin for a laurel.

You'll want to know: viola, violae

viola, violae — "a violet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

viola is related to Greek ion, "violet" (Lewis & Short), which once began with a w sound; both are probably loans from a lost Mediterranean language.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: viola, violae
- Say it: viola, violae, once more
- Say it: say viola, violae
- Recall: say the Latin for a pine, then the Latin for a laurel, then say viola, violae again

Before you move on

What does viola, violae mean? ("A violet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 251

Puppy, Tiger, Club, Chain, Shield

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a puppy, a tiger, a club, a chain and a shield.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 251: I can say a puppy, a tiger, a club, a chain and a shield.

251.1 catulus, catulī — a puppy

Before the new one: say the Latin for a laurel, then the Latin for a violet.

You'll want to know: catulus, catulī

catulus, catulī — "a puppy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

catulus, "a young animal, a puppy", has no sure origin. Lewis & Short make it a diminutive of catus, "a cat", but catulus is far older than that word for cat, so the link is unlikely.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: catulus, catulī
- Say it: catulus, catulī, once more
- Say it: say catulus, catulī
- Recall: say the Latin for a laurel, then the Latin for a violet, then say catulus, catulī again

Before you move on

What does catulus, catulī mean? ("A puppy".) Say it once more.

251.2 tigris, tigris — a tiger

Before the new one: say the Latin for a violet, then the Latin for a puppy.

You'll want to know: tigris, tigris

tigris, tigris — "a tiger".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tigris was borrowed from Greek tigris, "tiger" (EtymDB 2.1), which probably came from an Iranian language.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tigris, tigris
- Say it: tigris, tigris, once more
- Say it: say tigris, tigris
- Recall: say the Latin for a violet, then the Latin for a puppy, then say tigris, tigris again

Before you move on

What does tigris, tigris mean? ("A tiger".) Say it once more.

251.3 clāva, clāvae — a club

Before the new one: say the Latin for a puppy, then the Latin for a tiger.

You'll want to know: clāva, clāvae

clāva, clāvae — "a club".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clāva is often traced to Proto-Indo-European kelh2-*, "to beat, to break" (EtymDB 2.1), with percellō, "to strike down", in the same family (Lewis & Short); the link is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: clāva, clāvae
- Say it: clāva, clāvae, once more
- Say it: say clāva, clāvae
- Recall: say the Latin for a puppy, then the Latin for a tiger, then say clāva, clāvae again

Before you move on

What does clāva, clāvae mean? ("A club".) Say it once more.

251.4 catēna, catēnae — a chain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tiger, then the Latin for a club.

You'll want to know: catēna, catēnae

catēna, catēnae — "a chain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

catēna has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European kat-*, "to twist, to plait". English chain comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: catēna, catēnae
- Say it: catēna, catēnae, once more
- Say it: say catēna, catēnae
- Recall: say the Latin for a tiger, then the Latin for a club, then say catēna, catēnae again

Before you move on

What does catēna, catēnae mean? ("A chain".) Say it once more.

251.5 scūtum, scūtī — a shield

Before the new one: say the Latin for a club, then the Latin for a chain.

You'll want to know: scūtum, scūtī

scūtum, scūtī — "a shield".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scūtum is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root skei-*, "to cut, to split" (EtymDB 2.1): a shield of split boards. Old Irish sciath, "shield", is a cousin; Lewis & Short's link with Greek skytos, “leather”, is less likely.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scūtum, scūtī
- Say it: scūtum, scūtī, once more
- Say it: say scūtum, scūtī
- Recall: say the Latin for a club, then the Latin for a chain, then say scūtum, scūtī again

Before you move on

What does scūtum, scūtī mean? (“A shield”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 252

Small flask, Frying pan, Oven, Candlestick, Small tablet

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a small flask, a frying pan, an oven, a candlestick and a small tablet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 252: I can say a small flask, a frying pan, an oven, a candlestick and a small tablet.

252.1 ampulla, ampullae — a small flask, a phial

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chain, then the Latin for a shield.

You'll want to know: ampulla, ampullae

ampulla, ampullae — "a small flask, a phial".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ampulla is usually taken as a diminutive of amphora, "a two-handled jar" (EtymDB 2.1): a little jar. English ampoule comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ampulla, ampullae
- Say it: ampulla, ampullae, once more
- Say it: say ampulla, ampullae
- Recall: say the Latin for a chain, then the Latin for a shield, then say ampulla, ampullae again

Before you move on

What does ampulla, ampullae mean? ("A small flask, a phial".) Say it once more.

252.2 sartāgō, sartāginis — a frying pan

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shield, then the Latin for a small flask.

You'll want to know: sartāgō, sartāginis

sartāgō, sartāginis — "a frying pan".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sartāgō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sartāgō, sartāginis
- Say it: sartāgō, sartāginis, once more
- Say it: say sartāgō, sartāginis
- Recall: say the Latin for a shield, then the Latin for a small flask, then say sartāgō, sartāginis again

Before you move on

What does sartāgō, sartāginis mean? ("A frying pan".) Say it once more.

252.3 furnus, furnī — an oven

Before the new one: say the Latin for a small flask, then the Latin for a frying pan.

You'll want to know: furnus, furnī

furnus, furnī — "an oven".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

furnus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwhrnos*, "warm, an oven", from gwher-*, "warm, hot" (EtymDB 2.1); English warm is a cousin. fornāx, "a furnace", is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: furnus, furnī
- Say it: furnus, furnī, once more
- Say it: say furnus, furnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a small flask, then the Latin for a frying pan, then say furnus, furnī again

Before you move on

What does furnus, furnī mean? ("An oven".) Say it once more.

252.4 candēlābrum, candēlābrī — a candlestick

Before the new one: say the Latin for a frying pan, then the Latin for an oven.

You'll want to know: candēlābrum, candēlābrī

candēlābrum, candēlābrī — "a candlestick".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

candēlābrum is built on candēla, "a candle" (Lewis & Short), with -brum, an ending for a holder: a candle-holder.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: candēlābrum, candēlābrī
- Say it: candēlābrum, candēlābrī, once more
- Say it: say candēlābrum, candēlābrī
- Recall: say the Latin for a frying pan, then the Latin for an oven, then say candēlābrum, candēlābrī again

Before you move on

What does candēlābrum, candēlābrī mean? ("A candlestick".) Say it once more.

252.5 tabella, tabellae — a small tablet, a note

Before the new one: say the Latin for an oven, then the Latin for a candlestick.

You'll want to know: tabella, tabellae

tabella, tabellae — "a small tablet, a note".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tabella is a diminutive of tabula, "a board, a writing tablet" (Lewis & Short): a small tablet.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tabella, tabellae
- Say it: tabella, tabellae, once more
- Say it: say tabella, tabellae
- Recall: say the Latin for an oven, then the Latin for a candlestick, then say tabella, tabellae again

Before you move on

What does tabella, tabellae mean? ("A small tablet, a note".) Say it once more.

Chapter 253

Holidays, Banquet, Sacrifice, Altar, Goddess

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say holidays, a banquet, a sacrifice, an altar and a goddess.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 253: I can say holidays, a banquet, a sacrifice, an altar and a goddess.

253.1 fēriae, fēriārum — holidays

Before the new one: say the Latin for a candlestick, then the Latin for a small tablet.

You'll want to know: fēriae, fēriārum

fēriae, fēriārum — "holidays".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fēriae comes from an older fēsiae (Lewis & Short), from the same root as fēstus, "festive". Both are usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1s-*, "god, sacred" (EtymDB 2.1). English fair, a market, comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fēriae, fēriārum
- Say it: fēriae, fēriārum, once more
- Say it: say fēriae, fēriārum
- Recall: say the Latin for a candlestick, then the Latin for a small tablet, then say fēriae, fēriārum again

Before you move on

What does fēriae, fēriārum mean? ("Holidays".) Say it once more.

253.2 convīvium, convīviī — a banquet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a small tablet, then the Latin for holidays.

You'll want to know: convīvium, convīviī

convīvium, convīviī — "a banquet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

convīvium is con-, "together", with the root of vīvō, "to live" (Lewis & Short): living together, then a shared meal.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: convīvium, convīviī
- Say it: convīvium, convīviī, once more
- Say it: say convīvium, convīviī
- Recall: say the Latin for a small tablet, then the Latin for holidays, then say convīvium, convīviī again

Before you move on

What does convīvium, convīviī mean? ("A banquet".) Say it once more.

253.3 sacrificium, sacrificiī — a sacrifice

Before the new one: say the Latin for holidays, then the Latin for a banquet.

You'll want to know: sacrificium, sacrificiī

sacrificium, sacrificiī — "a sacrifice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sacrificium is built from sacer, "holy", and faciō, "to make" (EtymDB 2.1): to make something holy. sacer is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sh2kros*, "sacred" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sacrificium, sacrificiī
- Say it: sacrificium, sacrificiī, once more
- Say it: say sacrificium, sacrificiī
- Recall: say the Latin for holidays, then the Latin for a banquet, then say sacrificium, sacrificiī again

Before you move on

What does sacrificium, sacrificiī mean? ("A sacrifice".) Say it once more.

253.4 āra, ārae — an altar

Before the new one: say the Latin for a banquet, then the Latin for a sacrifice.

You'll want to know: āra, ārae

āra, ārae — "an altar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

āra comes from an older āsa, as Oscan aasa, "altar", shows (Lewis & Short); it is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2eHs-*, "to burn, a hearth" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: āra, ārae
- Say it: āra, ārae, once more
- Say it: say āra, ārae
- Recall: say the Latin for a banquet, then the Latin for a sacrifice, then say āra, ārae again

Before you move on

What does āra, ārae mean? ("An altar".) Say it once more.

253.5 dea, deae — a goddess

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sacrifice, then the Latin for an altar.

You'll want to know: dea, deae

dea, deae — "a goddess".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dea is the feminine of deus, "a god" (Lewis & Short); Old Latin wrote it deiva (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dea, deae
- Say it: dea, deae, once more
- Say it: say dea, deae
- Recall: say the Latin for a sacrifice, then the Latin for an altar, then say dea, deae again

Before you move on

What does dea, deae mean? ("A goddess".) Say it once more.

Chapter 254

Pack, Satchel, Money bag, Tent, Flag

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a pack, a satchel, a money bag, a tent and a flag.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 254: I can say a pack, a satchel, a money bag, a tent and a flag.

254.1 sarcina, sarcinae — a pack, a bundle

Before the new one: say the Latin for an altar, then the Latin for a goddess.

You'll want to know: sarcina, sarcinae

sarcina, sarcinae — "a pack, a bundle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sarcina belongs with sarciō, "to patch, to mend": a bundle tied together. The pair is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European serk-*, "to mend, to make whole" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sarcina, sarcinae
- Say it: sarcina, sarcinae, once more
- Say it: say sarcina, sarcinae
- Recall: say the Latin for an altar, then the Latin for a goddess, then say sarcina, sarcinae again

Before you move on

What does sarcina, sarcinae mean? ("A pack, a bundle".) Say it once more.

254.2 pēra, pērae — a satchel

Before the new one: say the Latin for a goddess, then the Latin for a pack.

You'll want to know: pēra, pērae

pēra, pērae — "a satchel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pēra was borrowed from Greek pēra, "a bag, a pouch" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pēra, pērae
- Say it: pēra, pērae, once more
- Say it: say pēra, pērae
- Recall: say the Latin for a goddess, then the Latin for a pack, then say pēra, pērae again

Before you move on

What does pēra, pērae mean? ("A satchel".) Say it once more.

254.3 marsuppium, marsuppiī — a money bag

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pack, then the Latin for a satchel.

You'll want to know: marsuppium, marsuppiī

marsuppium, marsuppiī — "a money bag".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

marsuppium was borrowed from Greek marsypion, "a little bag, a purse", a diminutive of marsipos, "a bag".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: marsuppium, marsuppiī
- Say it: marsuppium, marsuppiī, once more
- Say it: say marsuppium, marsuppiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a pack, then the Latin for a satchel, then say marsuppium, marsuppiī again

Before you move on

What does marsuppium, marsuppiī mean? ("A money bag".) Say it once more.

254.4 tabernāculum, tabernāculī — a tent

Before the new one: say the Latin for a satchel, then the Latin for a money bag.

You'll want to know: tabernāculum, tabernāculī

tabernāculum, tabernāculī — "a tent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tabernāculum is built on taberna, "a booth, a hut" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a means: a small shelter, a tent. English tabernacle comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tabernāculum, tabernāculī
- Say it: tabernāculum, tabernāculī, once more
- Say it: say tabernāculum, tabernāculī
- Recall: say the Latin for a satchel, then the Latin for a money bag, then say tabernāculum, tabernāculī again

Before you move on

What does tabernāculum, tabernāculī mean? ("A tent".) Say it once more.

254.5 vexillum, vexillī — a flag, a banner

Before the new one: say the Latin for a money bag, then the Latin for a tent.

You'll want to know: vexillum, vexillī

vexillum, vexillī — "a flag, a banner".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vexillum is a diminutive of vēlum, "a sail, a cloth" (Lewis & Short): a small cloth on a pole.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vexillum, vexillī
- Say it: vexillum, vexillī, once more
- Say it: say vexillum, vexillī
- Recall: say the Latin for a money bag, then the Latin for a tent, then say vexillum, vexillī again

Before you move on

What does vexillum, vexillī mean? ("A flag, a banner".) Say it once more.

254.6 Words from chapters 247-250 — a first pass

Say the words for a tent and a flag.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a twin, a father-in-law, a mother-in-law, a son-in-law, a daughter-in-law
- an opportunity, danger, a kindness, a duty, work
- wood, marble, glass, hide, linen
- a vine, an oak, a pine, a laurel, a violet

Before you move on

A twin? (geminus, geminī.) A father-in-law? (socer, socerī.) A mother-in-law? (socrus, socrūs.) A son-in-law? (gener, generī.) A daughter-in-law? (nurus, nurūs.) An opportunity? (occāsiō, occāsiōnis.) Danger? (perīculum, perīculī.) A kindness? (beneficium, beneficiī.) A duty? (officium, officiī.) Work? (labor, labōris.) Wood? (lignum, lignī.) Marble? (marmor, marmoris.) Glass? (vitrum, vitrī.) Hide? (corium, coriī.) Linen? (līnum, līnī.) A vine? (vītis, vītis.) An oak? (quercus, quercūs.) A pine? (pīnus, pīnūs.) A laurel? (laurus, laurī.) A violet? (viola, violae.)

254.7 Words from chapters 251-254 — a second pass

Say the words for a puppy and a tiger.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a puppy, a tiger, a club, a chain, a shield
- a small flask, a frying pan, an oven, a candlestick, a small tablet
- holidays, a banquet, a sacrifice, an altar, a goddess
- a pack, a satchel, a money bag, a tent, a flag

Before you move on

A puppy? (catulus, catulī.) A tiger? (tigris, tigris.) A club? (clāva, clāvae.) A chain? (catēna, catēnae.) A shield? (scūtum, scūtī.) A small flask? (ampulla, ampullae.) A frying pan? (sartāgō, sartāginis.) An oven? (furnus, furnī.) A candlestick? (candēlābrum, candēlābrī.) A small tablet? (tabella, tabellae.) Holidays? (fēriae, fēriārum.) A banquet? (convīvium, convīviī.) A sacrifice? (sacrificium, sacrificiī.) An altar? (āra, ārae.) A goddess? (dea, deae.) A pack? (sarcina, sarcinae.) A satchel? (pēra, pērae.) A money bag? (marsuppium, marsuppiī.) A tent? (tabernāculum, tabernāculī.) A flag? (vexillum, vexillī.)

Chapter 255

To hold, To burst, To warm, To fill, To measure

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to hold, to burst, to warm, to fill and to measure.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 255: I can say to hold, to burst, to warm, to fill and to measure.

255.1 teneō, tenēre — to hold

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tent, then the Latin for a flag, a banner.

You'll want to know: teneō, tenēre

teneō, tenēre — "to hold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

teneō is inherited from Proto-Italic tenēō*, "to hold" (EtymDB 2.1), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ten-*, "to stretch" (Lewis & Short compare Greek teinō, "to stretch"). English tenant comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: teneō, tenēre
- Say it: teneō, tenēre, once more
- Say it: say teneō, tenēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a tent, then the Latin for a flag, a banner, then say teneō, tenēre again

Before you move on

What does teneō, tenēre mean? ("To hold".) Say it once more.

255.2 rumpō, rumpere — to burst, to break apart

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flag, a banner, then the Latin for to hold.

You'll want to know: rumpō, rumpere

rumpō, rumpere — "to burst, to break apart".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children rumpō is inherited, usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European present Hrunepti*, "breaks" (EtymDB 2.1), with an n inside the root. English rupture comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rumpō, rumpere
- Say it: rumpō, rumpere, once more
- Say it: say rumpō, rumpere

- Recall: say the Latin for a flag, a banner, then the Latin for to hold, then say rumpō, rumpere again

Before you move on

What does rumpō, rumpere mean? ("To burst, to break apart".) Say it once more.

255.3 calefaciō, calefacere — to warm, to heat

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hold, then the Latin for to burst.

You'll want to know: calefaciō, calefacere

calefaciō, calefacere — "to warm, to heat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calefaciō is built from faciō, "to make" (EtymDB 2.1), with the stem of caleō, "to be warm": to make warm.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calefaciō, calefacere
- Say it: calefaciō, calefacere, once more
- Say it: say calefaciō, calefacere
- Recall: say the Latin for to hold, then the Latin for to burst, then say calefaciō, calefacere again

Before you move on

What does calefaciō, calefacere mean? ("To warm, to heat".) Say it once more.

255.4 impleō, implēre — to fill

Before the new one: say the Latin for to burst, then the Latin for to warm.

You'll want to know: impleō, implēre

impleō, implēre — "to fill".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

impleō is in, "in", with pleō, "to fill" (EtymDB 2.1), a verb found only in compounds. pleō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pleh1-*, "to fill"; English full is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: impleō, implēre
- Say it: impleō, implēre, once more
- Say it: say impleō, implēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to burst, then the Latin for to warm, then say impleō, implēre again

Before you move on

What does impleō, implēre mean? ("To fill".) Say it once more.

255.5 mētior, mētīrī — to measure

Before the new one: say the Latin for to warm, then the Latin for to fill.

You'll want to know: mētior, mētīrī

mētior, mētīrī — "to measure".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mētior is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European meh1-*, "to measure" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek metron, "a measure", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mētior, mētīrī
- Say it: mētior, mētīrī, once more
- Say it: say mētior, mētīrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to warm, then the Latin for to fill, then say mētior, mētīrī again

Before you move on

What does mētior, mētīrī mean? ("To measure".) Say it once more.

Chapter 256

To clap, To cross, To increase, To lessen, To warn

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to clap, to cross, to increase, to lessen and to warn.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 256: I can say to clap, to cross, to increase, to lessen and to warn.

256.1 plaudō, plaudere — to clap, to applaud

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fill, then the Latin for to measure.

You'll want to know: plaudō, plaudere

plaudō, plaudere — "to clap, to applaud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plaudō has no sure origin; it may imitate the sound of clapping. A by-form plōdō, "to clap", is also found (Lewis & Short). English applaud and explode, first "to clap a player off the stage", come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: plaudō, plaudere
- Say it: plaudō, plaudere, once more
- Say it: say plaudō, plaudere
- Recall: say the Latin for to fill, then the Latin for to measure, then say plaudō, plaudere again

Before you move on

What does plaudō, plaudere mean? ("To clap, to applaud".) Say it once more.

256.2 trānseō, trānsīre — to cross, to go over

Before the new one: say the Latin for to measure, then the Latin for to clap.

You'll want to know: trānseō, trānsīre

trānseō, trānsīre — "to cross, to go over".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trānseō is trāns, "across", with eō, "to go" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trānseō, trānsīre
- Say it: trānseō, trānsīre, once more
- Say it: say trānseō, trānsīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to measure, then the Latin for to clap, then say trānseō, trānsīre again

Before you move on

What does trānseō, trānsīre mean? ("To cross, to go over".) Say it once more.

256.3 augeō, augēre — to increase

Before the new one: say the Latin for to clap, then the Latin for to cross.

You'll want to know: augeō, augēre

augeō, augēre — "to increase".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

augeō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ewg-*, "to increase, to grow" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek auxō, "to increase", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English eke, as in to eke out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: augeō, augēre
- Say it: augeō, augēre, once more
- Say it: say augeō, augēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to clap, then the Latin for to cross, then say augeō, augēre again

Before you move on

What does augeō, augēre mean? ("To increase".) Say it once more.

256.4 minuō, minuere — to lessen, to decrease

Before the new one: say the Latin for to cross, then the Latin for to increase.

You'll want to know: minuō, minuere

minuō, minuere — "to lessen, to decrease".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

minuō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mi-nu-*, "to lessen, to make small" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek minythō, "to lessen", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and minor, "smaller", shares the root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: minuō, minuere
- Say it: minuō, minuere, once more
- Say it: say minuō, minuere
- Recall: say the Latin for to cross, then the Latin for to increase, then say minuō, minuere again

Before you move on

What does minuō, minuere mean? ("To lessen, to decrease".) Say it once more.

256.5 moneō, monēre — to warn, to remind

Before the new one: say the Latin for to increase, then the Latin for to lessen.

You'll want to know: moneō, monēre

moneō, monēre — "to warn, to remind".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

moneō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European moneye-*, "to make think" (EtymDB 2.1), a causative of the root of meminī, "to remember" (Lewis & Short): to remind, to warn.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: moneō, monēre
- Say it: moneō, monēre, once more
- Say it: say moneō, monēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to increase, then the Latin for to lessen, then say moneō, monēre again

Before you move on

What does moneō, monēre mean? ("To warn, to remind".) Say it once more.

Chapter 257

To deserve, To correct, To offer, To watch, To stroll

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to deserve, to correct, to offer, to watch and to stroll.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 257: I can say to deserve, to correct, to offer, to watch and to stroll.

257.1 mereor, merērī — to deserve, to earn

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lessen, then the Latin for to warn.

You'll want to know: mereor, merērī

mereor, merērī — "to deserve, to earn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mereor is the deponent twin of mereō, "to earn, to deserve" (Lewis & Short). It is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European smer-*, "to get a share"; Greek meiromai, "to receive one's share", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mereor, merērī
- Say it: mereor, merērī, once more
- Say it: say mereor, merērī
- Recall: say the Latin for to lessen, then the Latin for to warn, then say mereor, merērī again

Before you move on

What does mereor, merērī mean? ("To deserve, to earn".) Say it once more.

257.2 ēmendō, ēmendāre — to correct (a fault)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to warn, then the Latin for to deserve.

You'll want to know: ēmendō, ēmendāre

ēmendō, ēmendāre — "to correct (a fault)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēmendō is built on mendum, "a fault, a blemish" (Lewis & Short), with ex, "out": to take the faults out. English amend and mend come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ēmendō, ēmendāre
- Say it: ēmendō, ēmendāre, once more
- Say it: say ēmendō, ēmendāre

- Recall: say the Latin for to warn, then the Latin for to deserve, then say ēmendō, ēmendāre again

Before you move on

What does ēmendō, ēmendāre mean? ("To correct (a fault)".) Say it once more.

257.3 offerō, offerre — to offer

Before the new one: say the Latin for to deserve, then the Latin for to correct.

You'll want to know: offerō, offerre

offerō, offerre — "to offer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

offerō is ob, "towards", with ferō, "to carry, to bring" (Lewis & Short): to bring before someone.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: offerō, offerre
- Say it: offerō, offerre, once more
- Say it: say offerō, offerre
- Recall: say the Latin for to deserve, then the Latin for to correct, then say offerō, offerre again

Before you move on

What does offerō, offerre mean? ("To offer".) Say it once more.

257.4 observō, observāre — to watch, to observe

Before the new one: say the Latin for to correct, then the Latin for to offer.

You'll want to know: observō, observāre

observō, observāre — "to watch, to observe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

observō is ob, "towards, before", with servō, "to watch over" (EtymDB 2.1): to keep watch on.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: observō, observāre
- Say it: observō, observāre, once more
- Say it: say observō, observāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to correct, then the Latin for to offer, then say observō, observāre again

Before you move on

What does observō, observāre mean? ("To watch, to observe".) Say it once more.

257.5 spatior, spatiārī — to stroll

Before the new one: say the Latin for to offer, then the Latin for to watch.

You'll want to know: spatior, spatiārī

spatior, spatiārī — "to stroll".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spatior is built on spatium, "space, room": to take up room, to walk about. Where spatium comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spatior, spatiārī
- Say it: spatior, spatiārī, once more
- Say it: say spatior, spatiārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to offer, then the Latin for to watch, then say spatior, spatiārī again

Before you move on

What does spatior, spatiārī mean? ("To stroll".) Say it once more.

Chapter 258

To dream, To push, To go past, To make no sound, To dread

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to dream, to push, to go past, to make no sound and to dread.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 258: I can say to dream, to push, to go past, to make no sound and to dread.

258.1 somniō, somniāre — to dream

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to watch, then the Latin for to stroll.

You'll want to know: somniō, somniāre

somniō, somniāre — "to dream".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

somniō is the verb made from somnium, "a dream" (Lewis & Short), which is built on somnus, "sleep".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: somniō, somniāre
- Say it: somniō, somniāre, once more
- Say it: say somniō, somniāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to watch, then the Latin for to stroll, then say somniō, somniāre again

Before you move on

What does somniō, somniāre mean? ("To dream".) Say it once more.

258.2 pellō, pellere — to push, to drive

Before the new one: say the Latin for to stroll, then the Latin for to dream.

You'll want to know: pellō, pellere

pellō, pellere — "to push, to drive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pellō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pel-*, "to drive, to thrust". Greek pallō, "to brandish, to shake", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English repel and pulse come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pellō, pellere
- Say it: pellō, pellere, once more
- Say it: say pellō, pellere
- Recall: say the Latin for to stroll, then the Latin for to dream, then say pellō, pellere again

Before you move on

What does pellō, pellere mean? ("To push, to drive".) Say it once more.

258.3 praetereō, praeterīre — to go past

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dream, then the Latin for to push.

You'll want to know: praetereō, praeterīre

praetereō, praeterīre — "to go past".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praetereō is eō, "to go" (EtymDB 2.1), with praeter, "past, beyond": to go past.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: praetereō, praeterīre
- Say it: praetereō, praeterīre, once more
- Say it: say praetereō, praeterīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to dream, then the Latin for to push, then say praetereō, praeterīre again

Before you move on

What does praetereō, praeterīre mean? ("To go past".) Say it once more.

258.4 sileō, silēre — to make no sound

Before the new one: say the Latin for to push, then the Latin for to go past.

You'll want to know: sileō, silēre

sileō, silēre — "to make no sound".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sileō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European seyl-*, "still, quiet" (EtymDB 2.1); Gothic anasilan, "to grow quiet", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sileō, silēre
- Say it: sileō, silēre, once more
- Say it: say sileō, silēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to push, then the Latin for to go past, then say sileō, silēre again

Before you move on

What does sileō, silēre mean? ("To make no sound".) Say it once more.

258.5 metuō, metuere — to dread

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go past, then the Latin for to make no sound.

You'll want to know: metuō, metuere

metuō, metuere — "to dread".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

metuō is the verb made from metus, "fear" (Lewis & Short), whose origin is unknown.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: metuō, metuere
- Say it: metuō, metuere, once more
- Say it: say metuō, metuere
- Recall: say the Latin for to go past, then the Latin for to make no sound, then say metuō, metuere again

Before you move on

What does metuō, metuere mean? ("To dread".) Say it once more.

Chapter 259

To pray, To recommend, To breathe, To give up, To exchange

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to pray, to recommend, to breathe, to give up and to exchange.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 259: I can say to pray, to recommend, to breathe, to give up and to exchange.

259.1 ōrō, ōrāre — to pray, to beg

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make no sound, then the Latin for to dread.

You'll want to know: ōrō, ōrāre

ōrō, ōrāre — "to pray, to beg".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrō is often linked with ōs, ōris, "the mouth" (Lewis & Short), though the link is uncertain: to speak, then to plead and pray. ōs is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1oh3s*, "mouth" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrō, ōrāre
- Say it: ōrō, ōrāre, once more
- Say it: say ōrō, ōrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to make no sound, then the Latin for to dread, then say ōrō, ōrāre again

Before you move on

What does ōrō, ōrāre mean? ("To pray, to beg".) Say it once more.

259.2 commendō, commendāre — to recommend, to entrust

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dread, then the Latin for to pray.

You'll want to know: commendō, commendāre

commendō, commendāre — "to recommend, to entrust".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commendō is mandō, "to entrust" (Lewis & Short), with con-, "thoroughly", its a weakened to e.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: commendō, commendāre
- Say it: commendō, commendāre, once more
- Say it: say commendō, commendāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to dread, then the Latin for to pray, then say commendō, commendāre again

Before you move on

What does commendō, commendāre mean? ("To recommend, to entrust".) Say it once more.

259.3 spīrō, spīrāre — to breathe

Before the new one: say the Latin for to pray, then the Latin for to recommend.

You'll want to know: spīrō, spīrāre

spīrō, spīrāre — "to breathe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spīrō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European (s)peys-*, "to blow, to breathe" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English spirit and inspire come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spīrō, spīrāre
- Say it: spīrō, spīrāre, once more
- Say it: say spīrō, spīrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to pray, then the Latin for to recommend, then say spīrō, spīrāre again

Before you move on

What does spīrō, spīrāre mean? ("To breathe".) Say it once more.

259.4 dēsistō, dēsistere — to give up

Before the new one: say the Latin for to recommend, then the Latin for to breathe.

You'll want to know: dēsistō, dēsistere

dēsistō, dēsistere — "to give up".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēsistō is dē, "away", with sistō, "to stand, to stop" (EtymDB 2.1): to stand off, to give up.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēsistō, dēsistere
- Say it: dēsistō, dēsistere, once more
- Say it: say dēsistō, dēsistere
- Recall: say the Latin for to recommend, then the Latin for to breathe, then say dēsistō, dēsistere again

Before you move on

What does dēsistō, dēsistere mean? ("To give up".) Say it once more.

259.5 permūtō, permūtāre — to exchange

Before the new one: say the Latin for to breathe, then the Latin for to give up.

You'll want to know: permūtō, permūtāre

permūtō, permūtāre — "to exchange".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

permūtō is per, "thoroughly", with mūtō, "to change" (EtymDB 2.1): to change completely, to exchange.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: permūtō, permūtāre
- Say it: permūtō, permūtāre, once more
- Say it: say permūtō, permūtāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to breathe, then the Latin for to give up, then say permūtō, permūtāre again

Before you move on

What does permūtō, permūtāre mean? ("To exchange".) Say it once more.

Chapter 260

To press out, To feed, To put together, To notice, To blush

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to press out, to feed, to put together, to notice and to blush.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 260: I can say to press out, to feed, to put together, to notice and to blush.

260.1 exprimō, exprimere — to press out, to express

Before the new one: say the Latin for to give up, then the Latin for to exchange.

You'll want to know: exprimō, exprimere

exprimō, exprimere — "to press out, to express".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exprimō is ex, "out", with premō, "to press" (Lewis & Short), its e weakened to i: to press out. English express comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: exprimō, exprimere
- Say it: exprimō, exprimere, once more
- Say it: say exprimō, exprimere
- Recall: say the Latin for to give up, then the Latin for to exchange, then say exprimō, exprimere again

Before you move on

What does exprimō, exprimere mean? ("To press out, to express".) Say it once more.

260.2 alō, alere — to feed, to nourish

Before the new one: say the Latin for to exchange, then the Latin for to press out.

You'll want to know: alō, alere

alō, alere — "to feed, to nourish".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

alō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2el-*, "to grow, to nourish" (EtymDB 2.1). Its old participle is altus, "grown tall, high".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: alō, alere
- Say it: alō, alere, once more
- Say it: say alō, alere

- Recall: say the Latin for to exchange, then the Latin for to press out, then say alō, alere again

Before you move on

What does alō, alere mean? ("To feed, to nourish".) Say it once more.

260.3 compōnō, compōnere — to put together, to arrange

Before the new one: say the Latin for to press out, then the Latin for to feed.

You'll want to know: compōnō, compōnere

compōnō, compōnere — "to put together, to arrange".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

compōnō is con-, "together", with pōnō, "to put" (EtymDB 2.1). English compose and component come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: compōnō, compōnere
- Say it: compōnō, compōnere, once more
- Say it: say compōnō, compōnere
- Recall: say the Latin for to press out, then the Latin for to feed, then say compōnō, compōnere again

Before you move on

What does compōnō, compōnere mean? ("To put together, to arrange".) Say it once more.

260.4 animadvertō, animadvertere — to notice

Before the new one: say the Latin for to feed, then the Latin for to put together.

You'll want to know: animadvertō, animadvertere

animadvertō, animadvertere — "to notice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

animadvertō is contracted from animum advertō, "I turn the mind towards" (Lewis & Short): animus, "mind", and advertō, "to turn to".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: animadvertō, animadvertere
- Say it: animadvertō, animadvertere, once more
- Say it: say animadvertō, animadvertere
- Recall: say the Latin for to feed, then the Latin for to put together, then say animadvertō, animadvertere again

Before you move on

What does animadvertō, animadvertere mean? ("To notice".) Say it once more.

260.5 ērubēscō, ērubēscere — to blush

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put together, then the Latin for to notice.

You'll want to know: ērubēscō, ērubēscere

ērubēscō, ērubēscere — "to blush".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ērubēscō is ex, "out", with rubēscō, "to grow red" (EtymDB 2.1), from ruber, "red".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ērubēscō, ērubēscere
- Say it: ērubēscō, ērubēscere, once more
- Say it: say ērubēscō, ērubēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to put together, then the Latin for to notice, then say ērubēscō, ērubēscere again

Before you move on

What does ērubēscō, ērubēscere mean? ("To blush".) Say it once more.

Chapter 261

To give birth to, To order, To force, To mourn, To dig

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to give birth to, to order, to force, to mourn and to dig.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 261: I can say to give birth to, to order, to force, to mourn and to dig.

261.1 gignō, gignere — to give birth to, to produce

Before the new one: say the Latin for to notice, then the Latin for to blush.

You'll want to know: gignō, gignere

gignō, gignere — "to give birth to, to produce".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gignō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gi-gnh1-*, "to beget", a doubled form of the root (EtymDB 2.1); Greek gignomai, "to be born", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gignō, gignere
- Say it: gignō, gignere, once more
- Say it: say gignō, gignere
- Recall: say the Latin for to notice, then the Latin for to blush, then say gignō, gignere again

Before you move on

What does gignō, gignere mean? ("To give birth to, to produce".) Say it once more.

261.2 iubeō, iubēre — to order, to tell (someone to)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to blush, then the Latin for to give birth to.

You'll want to know: iubeō, iubēre

iubeō, iubēre — "to order, to tell (someone to)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iubeō is inherited; Old Latin wrote ioubeō, and it is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European Hyowdheye-, "to set in motion", from Hyewdh-, "to move" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iubeō, iubēre
- Say it: iubeō, iubēre, once more
- Say it: say iubeō, iubēre

- Recall: say the Latin for to blush, then the Latin for to give birth to, then say iubeō, iubēre again

Before you move on

What does iubeō, iubēre mean? ("To order, to tell (someone to)".) Say it once more.

261.3 cōgō, cōgere — to force; to collect

Before the new one: say the Latin for to give birth to, then the Latin for to order.

You'll want to know: cōgō, cōgere

cōgō, cōgere — "to force; to collect".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōgō is contracted from co-, "together", and agō, "to drive" (Lewis & Short): to drive together, to compel.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōgō, cōgere
- Say it: cōgō, cōgere, once more
- Say it: say cōgō, cōgere
- Recall: say the Latin for to give birth to, then the Latin for to order, then say cōgō, cōgere again

Before you move on

What does cōgō, cōgere mean? ("To force; to collect".) Say it once more.

261.4 lūgeō, lūgēre — to mourn

Before the new one: say the Latin for to order, then the Latin for to force; to collect.

You'll want to know: lūgeō, lūgēre

lūgeō, lūgēre — "to mourn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūgeō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root lewg-*, "to break" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek lygros, "mournful", is often compared (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lūgeō, lūgēre
- Say it: lūgeō, lūgēre, once more
- Say it: say lūgeō, lūgēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to order, then the Latin for to force; to collect, then say lūgeō, lūgēre again

Before you move on

What does lūgeō, lūgēre mean? ("To mourn".) Say it once more.

261.5 fodiō, fodere — to dig

Before the new one: say the Latin for to force; to collect, then the Latin for to mourn.

You'll want to know: fodiō, fodere

fodiō, fodere — "to dig".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fodiō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhod-*, "to pierce, to dig" (EtymDB 2.1). English fossil, "dug up", comes from its participle fossus, "dug".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fodiō, fodere
- Say it: fodiō, fodere, once more
- Say it: say fodiō, fodere
- Recall: say the Latin for to force; to collect, then the Latin for to mourn, then say fodiō, fodere again

Before you move on

What does fodiō, fodere mean? ("To dig".) Say it once more.

Chapter 262

Trust, Courage, Shame, Envy, Boredom

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say trust, courage, shame, envy and boredom.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 262: I can say trust, courage, shame, envy and boredom.

262.1 fidēs, fideī — trust, faith

Before the new one: say the Latin for to mourn, then the Latin for to dig.

You'll want to know: fidēs, fideī

fidēs, fideī — "trust, faith".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fidēs belongs with fīdō, "to trust" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bheydh-*, "to trust, to persuade" (EtymDB 2.1). It is a different word from fidēs, "a lyre string".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fidēs, fideī
- Say it: fidēs, fideī, once more
- Say it: say fidēs, fideī
- Recall: say the Latin for to mourn, then the Latin for to dig, then say fidēs, fideī again

Before you move on

What does fidēs, fideī mean? ("Trust, faith".) Say it once more.

262.2 virtūs, virtūtis — courage, virtue

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dig, then the Latin for trust.

You'll want to know: virtūs, virtūtis

virtūs, virtūtis — "courage, virtue".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

virtūs is built on vir, "a man" (Lewis & Short), with -tūs, an ending for a quality: manliness, then courage and any excellence. English virtue comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: virtūs, virtūtis
- Say it: virtūs, virtūtis, once more
- Say it: say virtūs, virtūtis
- Recall: say the Latin for to dig, then the Latin for trust, then say virtūs, virtūtis again

Before you move on

What does virtūs, virtūtis mean? ("Courage, virtue".) Say it once more.

262.3 pudor, pudōris — shame, modesty

Before the new one: say the Latin for trust, then the Latin for courage.

You'll want to know: pudor, pudōris

pudor, pudōris — "shame, modesty".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pudor is built on pudeō, "to be ashamed" (Lewis & Short), with -or, "a state". Where pudeō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pudor, pudōris
- Say it: pudor, pudōris, once more
- Say it: say pudor, pudōris
- Recall: say the Latin for trust, then the Latin for courage, then say pudor, pudōris again

Before you move on

What does pudor, pudōris mean? ("Shame, modesty".) Say it once more.

262.4 invidia, invidiae — envy

Before the new one: say the Latin for courage, then the Latin for shame.

You'll want to know: invidia, invidiae

invidia, invidiae — "envy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

invidia is built on invidus, "envious" (Lewis & Short), from invideō, "to look askance at": the evil eye. English envy comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: invidia, invidiae
- Say it: invidia, invidiae, once more
- Say it: say invidia, invidiae
- Recall: say the Latin for courage, then the Latin for shame, then say invidia, invidiae again

Before you move on

What does invidia, invidiae mean? ("Envy".) Say it once more.

262.5 taedium, taediī — boredom, weariness

Before the new one: say the Latin for shame, then the Latin for envy.

You'll want to know: taedium, taediī

taedium, taediī — "boredom, weariness".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

taedium is built on taedet, "it wearies, it disgusts" (Lewis & Short). Where taedet comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: taedium, taediī
- Say it: taedium, taediī, once more
- Say it: say taedium, taediī
- Recall: say the Latin for shame, then the Latin for envy, then say taedium, taediī again

Before you move on

What does taedium, taediī mean? ("Boredom, weariness".) Say it once more.

Chapter 263

Next day, Meanwhile, At some time, For a long time, Shortly

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say the next day, meanwhile, at some time, for a long time and shortly.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 263: I can say the next day, meanwhile, at some time, for a long time and shortly.

263.1 postrīdiē — the next day

Before the new one: say the Latin for envy, then the Latin for boredom.

You'll want to know: postrīdiē

postrīdiē — "the next day".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

postrīdiē is a locative of posterus, "coming after" (Lewis & Short), with diē, "on the day": on the day after.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: postrīdiē
- Say it: postrīdiē, once more
- Say it: say postrīdiē
- Recall: say the Latin for envy, then the Latin for boredom, then say postrīdiē again

Before you move on

What does postrīdiē mean? ("The next day".) Say it once more.

263.2 intereā — meanwhile

Before the new one: say the Latin for boredom, then the Latin for the next day.

You'll want to know: intereā

intereā — "meanwhile".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

intereā is inter, "between, during", with eā, "that" (Lewis & Short): during that time.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: intereā
- Say it: intereā, once more
- Say it: say intereā
- Recall: say the Latin for boredom, then the Latin for the next day, then say intereā again

Before you move on

What does intereā mean? ("Meanwhile".) Say it once more.

263.3 aliquandō — at some time, once

Before the new one: say the Latin for the next day, then the Latin for meanwhile.

You'll want to know: aliquandō

aliquandō — "at some time, once".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aliquandō is built on quandō, "when" (EtymDB 2.1), with ali-, "some, other", the stem of alius, as in aliquis, "someone": at some time or other.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aliquandō
- Say it: aliquandō, once more
- Say it: say aliquandō
- Recall: say the Latin for the next day, then the Latin for meanwhile, then say aliquandō again

Before you move on

What does aliquandō mean? ("At some time, once".) Say it once more.

263.4 diū — for a long time

Before the new one: say the Latin for meanwhile, then the Latin for at some time.

You'll want to know: diū

diū — "for a long time".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

diū is an old case form from the root of diēs, "day" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dyewi*, "during the day" (EtymDB 2.1): first "by day", then "for a long time".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: diū
- Say it: diū, once more
- Say it: say diū
- Recall: say the Latin for meanwhile, then the Latin for at some time, then say diū again

Before you move on

What does diū mean? ("For a long time".) Say it once more.

263.5 brevī — shortly, soon

Before the new one: say the Latin for at some time, then the Latin for for a long time.

You'll want to know: brevī

brevī — "shortly, soon".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

brevī is the ablative of brevis, "short", with tempore, "in a time", understood: in a short time. Brevis is inherited, usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European word for "short" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: brevī
- Say it: brevī, once more
- Say it: say brevī
- Recall: say the Latin for at some time, then the Latin for for a long time, then say brevī again

Before you move on

What does brevī mean? ("Shortly, soon".) Say it once more.

263.6 Words from chapters 255-258 — a first pass

Say the words for for a long time and shortly.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to hold, to burst, to warm, to fill, to measure
- to clap, to cross, to increase, to lessen, to warn
- to deserve, to correct, to offer, to watch, to stroll
- to dream, to push, to go past, to make no sound, to dread

Before you move on

To hold? (teneō, tenēre.) To burst? (rumpō, rumpere.) To warm? (calefaciō, calefacere.) To fill? (impleō, implēre.) To measure? (mētior, mētīrī.) To clap? (plaudō, plaudere.) To cross? (trānseō, trānsīre.) To increase? (augeō, augēre.) To lessen? (minuō, minuere.) To warn? (moneō, monēre.) To deserve? (mereor, merērī.) To correct? (ēmendō, ēmendāre.) To offer? (offerō, offerre.) To watch? (observō, observāre.) To stroll? (spatior, spatiārī.) To dream? (somniō, somniāre.) To push? (pellō, pellere.) To go past? (praetereō, praeterīre.) To make no sound? (sileō, silēre.) To dread? (metuō, metuere.)

263.7 Words from chapters 259-263 — a second pass

Say the words for to pray and to recommend.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to pray, to recommend, to breathe, to give up, to exchange
- to press out, to feed, to put together, to notice, to blush
- to give birth to, to order, to force; to collect, to mourn, to dig
- trust, courage, shame, envy, boredom
- the next day, meanwhile, at some time, for a long time, shortly

Before you move on

To pray? (ōrō, ōrāre.) To recommend? (commendō, commendāre.) To breathe? (spīrō, spīrāre.) To give up? (dēsistō, dēsistere.) To exchange? (permūtō, permūtāre.) To press out? (exprimō, exprimere.) To feed? (alō, alere.) To put together? (compōnō, compōnere.) To notice? (animadvertō, animadvertere.) To blush? (ērubēscō, ērubēscere.) To give birth to? (gignō, gignere.) To order? (iubeō, iubēre.) To force;

to collect? (cōgō, cōgere.) To mourn? (lūgeō, lūgēre.) To dig? (fodiō, fodere.) Trust? (fidēs, fideī.) Courage? (virtūs, virtūtis.) Shame? (pudor, pudōris.) Envy? (invidia, invidiae.) Boredom? (taedium, taediī.) The next day? (postrīdiē.) Meanwhile? (intereā.) At some time? (aliquandō.) For a long time? (diū.) Shortly? (brevī.)

Chapter 264

Nowhere, From all sides, Here and there, Upwards, Downwards

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say nowhere, from all sides, here and there, upwards and downwards.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 264: I can say nowhere, from all sides, here and there, upwards and downwards.

264.1 nusquam — nowhere

> Before the new one: say the Latin for for a long time, then the Latin for shortly, soon.

You'll want to know: nusquam

nusquam — "nowhere".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nusquam is ne, "not", fused with usquam, "anywhere" (Lewis & Short): not anywhere.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nusquam
- Say it: nusquam, once more
- Say it: say nusquam
- Recall: say the Latin for for a long time, then the Latin for shortly, soon, then say nusquam again

Before you move on

What does nusquam mean? ("Nowhere".) Say it once more.

264.2 undique — from all sides

Before the new one: say the Latin for shortly, soon, then the Latin for nowhere.

You'll want to know: undique

undique — "from all sides".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

undique is unde, "from where", with -que, "and, any" (Lewis & Short): from wherever, so from all sides.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: undique
- Say it: undique, once more
- Say it: say undique
- Recall: say the Latin for shortly, soon, then the Latin for nowhere, then say undique again

Before you move on

What does undique mean? ("From all sides".) Say it once more.

264.3 passim — here and there

Before the new one: say the Latin for nowhere, then the Latin for from all sides.

You'll want to know: passim

passim — "here and there".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

passim is built on passus, "spread out", the participle of pandō, "to spread" (Lewis & Short), with -im, an adverb ending: scattered about.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: passim
- Say it: passim, once more
- Say it: say passim
- Recall: say the Latin for nowhere, then the Latin for from all sides, then say passim again

Before you move on

What does passim mean? ("Here and there".) Say it once more.

264.4 sūrsum — upwards

Before the new one: say the Latin for from all sides, then the Latin for here and there.

You'll want to know: sūrsum

sūrsum — "upwards".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sūrsum is contracted from subvorsum, "turned up from below" (Lewis & Short), from sub, "up from under", and vertō, "to turn".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sūrsum
- Say it: sūrsum, once more
- Say it: say sūrsum
- Recall: say the Latin for from all sides, then the Latin for here and there, then say sūrsum again

Before you move on

What does sūrsum mean? ("Upwards".) Say it once more.

264.5 deorsum — downwards

Before the new one: say the Latin for here and there, then the Latin for upwards.

You'll want to know: deorsum

deorsum — "downwards".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

deorsum is contracted from dēvorsum, "turned down" (Lewis & Short), from dē, "down", and vertō, "to turn".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: deorsum
- Say it: deorsum, once more
- Say it: say deorsum
- Recall: say the Latin for here and there, then the Latin for upwards, then say deorsum again

Before you move on

What does deorsum mean? ("Downwards".) Say it once more.

Chapter 265

Even as, As, If only, On the contrary, At least

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say even as, as, if only, on the contrary and at least.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 265: I can say even as, as, if only, on the contrary and at least.

265.1 sīcut — even as, in the same way as

Before the new one: say the Latin for upwards, then the Latin for downwards.

You'll want to know: sīcut

sīcut — "even as, in the same way as".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sīcut is sīc, "so", with ut, "as" (Lewis & Short): even as.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sīcut
- Say it: sīcut, once more
- Say it: say sīcut
- Recall: say the Latin for upwards, then the Latin for downwards, then say sīcut again

Before you move on

What does sīcut mean? ("Even as, in the same way as".) Say it once more.

265.2 velut — as, like

Before the new one: say the Latin for downwards, then the Latin for even as.

You'll want to know: velut

velut — "as, like".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

velut is vel, "or, even", with ut, "as" (Lewis & Short): even as, like.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: velut
- Say it: velut, once more
- Say it: say velut
- Recall: say the Latin for downwards, then the Latin for even as, then say velut again

Before you move on

What does velut mean? ("As, like".) Say it once more.

265.3 utinam — if only

Before the new one: say the Latin for even as, then the Latin for as.

You'll want to know: utinam

utinam — "if only".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

utinam is ut, "how, that", with the particle nam, "for, indeed" (EtymDB 2.1): oh that, if only.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: utinam
- Say it: utinam, once more
- Say it: say utinam
- Recall: say the Latin for even as, then the Latin for as, then say utinam again

Before you move on

What does utinam mean? ("If only".) Say it once more.

265.4 immō — on the contrary

Before the new one: say the Latin for as, then the Latin for if only.

You'll want to know: immō

immō — "on the contrary".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

immō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short suggest a superlative form built on in, "in", like summus, "highest", but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: immō
- Say it: immō, once more
- Say it: say immō
- Recall: say the Latin for as, then the Latin for if only, then say immō again

Before you move on

What does immō mean? ("On the contrary".) Say it once more.

265.5 saltem — at least

Before the new one: say the Latin for if only, then the Latin for on the contrary.

You'll want to know: saltem

saltem — "at least".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saltem has no sure origin; Lewis & Short tie it to salvus, "safe", but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saltem
- Say it: saltem, once more
- Say it: say saltem
- Recall: say the Latin for if only, then the Latin for on the contrary, then say saltem again

Before you move on

What does saltem mean? ("At least".) Say it once more.

Chapter 266

Wonderful, Different, Similar, Fair, Unjust

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say wonderful, different, similar, fair and unjust.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 266: I can say wonderful, different, similar, fair and unjust.

266.1 mīrus, mīra, mīrum — wonderful, strange

Before the new one: say the Latin for on the contrary, then the Latin for at least.

You'll want to know: mīrus, mīra, mīrum

mīrus, mīra, mīrum — "wonderful, strange".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mīrus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European smeyros*, "smiling, astonishing", from (s)mey-*, "to smile, to wonder" (EtymDB 2.1). English smile is a cousin, and English miracle comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mīrus, mīra, mīrum
- Say it: mīrus, mīra, mīrum, once more
- Say it: say mīrus, mīra, mīrum
- Recall: say the Latin for on the contrary, then the Latin for at least, then say mīrus, mīra, mīrum again

Before you move on

What does mīrus, mīra, mīrum mean? ("Wonderful, strange".) Say it once more.

266.2 dīversus, dīversa, dīversum — different

Before the new one: say the Latin for at least, then the Latin for wonderful.

You'll want to know: dīversus, dīversa, dīversum

dīversus, dīversa, dīversum — "different".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīversus is the past participle of dīvertō, "to turn in different directions" (Lewis & Short), from dis-, "apart", and vertō, "to turn".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dīversus, dīversa, dīversum
- Say it: dīversus, dīversa, dīversum, once more
- Say it: say dīversus, dīversa, dīversum
- Recall: say the Latin for at least, then the Latin for wonderful, then say dīversus, dīversa, dīversum again

Before you move on

What does dīversus, dīversa, dīversum mean? ("Different".) Say it once more.

266.3 similis, simile — similar, like

Before the new one: say the Latin for wonderful, then the Latin for different.

You'll want to know: similis, simile

similis, simile — "similar, like".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

similis is inherited, usually traced to the Proto-Indo-European root sem-*, "one, together" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek homoios, "like", and English same are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: similis, simile
- Say it: similis, simile, once more
- Say it: say similis, simile
- Recall: say the Latin for wonderful, then the Latin for different, then say similis, simile again

Before you move on

What does similis, simile mean? ("Similar, like".) Say it once more.

266.4 iūstus, iūsta, iūstum — fair, righteous

Before the new one: say the Latin for different, then the Latin for similar.

You'll want to know: iūstus, iūsta, iūstum

iūstus, iūsta, iūstum — "fair, righteous".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūstus is built on iūs, iūris, "law, right" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2yewos*, "rule, right" (EtymDB 2.1). English justice comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iūstus, iūsta, iūstum
- Say it: iūstus, iūsta, iūstum, once more
- Say it: say iūstus, iūsta, iūstum
- Recall: say the Latin for different, then the Latin for similar, then say iūstus, iūsta, iūstum again

Before you move on

What does iūstus, iūsta, iūstum mean? ("Fair, righteous".) Say it once more.

266.5 iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum — unjust

Before the new one: say the Latin for similar, then the Latin for fair.

You'll want to know: iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum

iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum — "unjust".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iniūstus is in-, "not", with iūstus, "fair, righteous" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum
- Say it: iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum, once more
- Say it: say iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum
- Recall: say the Latin for similar, then the Latin for fair, then say iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum again

Before you move on

What does iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum mean? ("Unjust".) Say it once more.

Chapter 267

Fat, Clever, Special, Former, Nearest

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say fat, clever, special, former and nearest.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 267: I can say fat, clever, special, former and nearest.

267.1 pinguis, pingue — fat

Before the new one: say the Latin for fair, then the Latin for unjust.

You'll want to know: pinguis, pingue

pinguis, pingue — "fat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pinguis has no sure origin; it is often linked with a Proto-Indo-European root peyH-*, "fat, to swell" (EtymDB 2.1), or with Greek pakhys, "thick" (Lewis & Short), but neither link is settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pinguis, pingue
- Say it: pinguis, pingue, once more
- Say it: say pinguis, pingue
- Recall: say the Latin for fair, then the Latin for unjust, then say pinguis, pingue again

Before you move on

What does pinguis, pingue mean? ("Fat".) Say it once more.

267.2 callidus, callida, callidum — clever, cunning

Before the new one: say the Latin for unjust, then the Latin for fat.

You'll want to know: callidus, callida, callidum

callidus, callida, callidum — "clever, cunning".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

callidus is built on calleō, "to be thick-skinned, to be practised" (Lewis & Short), from callum, "hard skin": hardened by experience, so shrewd. English callous comes from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: callidus, callida, callidum
- Say it: callidus, callida, callidum, once more
- Say it: say callidus, callida, callidum

- Recall: say the Latin for unjust, then the Latin for fat, then say callidus, callida, callidum again

Before you move on

What does callidus, callida, callidum mean? ("Clever, cunning".) Say it once more.

267.3 praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum — special, chief

Before the new one: say the Latin for fat, then the Latin for clever.

You'll want to know: praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum

praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum — "special, chief".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praecipuus is built on praecipiō, "to take beforehand" (Lewis & Short), from prae, "before", and capiō, "to take": taken first, so chief.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum
- Say it: praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum, once more
- Say it: say praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum
- Recall: say the Latin for fat, then the Latin for clever, then say praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum again

Before you move on

What does praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum mean? ("Special, chief".) Say it once more.

267.4 prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum — former, of old

Before the new one: say the Latin for clever, then the Latin for special.

You'll want to know: prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum

prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum — "former, of old".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīstinus belongs with prīscus, "ancient" (Lewis & Short), and with prior, "earlier", all built on what is usually reconstructed as pri-*, "before".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum
- Say it: prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum, once more
- Say it: say prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum
- Recall: say the Latin for clever, then the Latin for special, then say prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum again

Before you move on

What does prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum mean? ("Former, of old".) Say it once more.

267.5 proximus, proxima, proximum — nearest, next

Before the new one: say the Latin for special, then the Latin for former.

You'll want to know: proximus, proxima, proximum

proximus, proxima, proximum — "nearest, next".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

proximus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European prokwismmos*, "nearest" (EtymDB 2.1), the superlative belonging to prope, "near"; Lewis & Short list it under propior, "nearer".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: proximus, proxima, proximum
- Say it: proximus, proxima, proximum, once more
- Say it: say proximus, proxima, proximum
- Recall: say the Latin for special, then the Latin for former, then say proximus, proxima, proximum again

Before you move on

What does proximus, proxima, proximum mean? ("Nearest, next".) Say it once more.

Chapter 268

Second of two, Suitable, Fit, Ready, Facing

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say the second of two, suitable, fit, ready and facing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 268: I can say the second of two, suitable, fit, ready and facing.

268.1 alter, altera, alterum — the second of two, the other

Before the new one: say the Latin for former, then the Latin for nearest.

You'll want to know: alter, altera, alterum

alter, altera, alterum — "the second of two, the other".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

alter is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2elteros*, "the other of two" (EtymDB 2.1): the root of alius, "other", with -ter, an ending that sets one of two against the other.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: alter, altera, alterum
- Say it: alter, altera, alterum, once more
- Say it: say alter, altera, alterum
- Recall: say the Latin for former, then the Latin for nearest, then say alter, altera, alterum again

Before you move on

What does alter, altera, alterum mean? ("The second of two, the other".) Say it once more.

268.2 idōneus, idōnea, idōneum — suitable

Before the new one: say the Latin for nearest, then the Latin for the second of two.

You'll want to know: idōneus, idōnea, idōneum

idōneus, idōnea, idōneum — "suitable".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

idōneus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: idōneus, idōnea, idōneum
- Say it: idōneus, idōnea, idōneum, once more
- Say it: say idōneus, idōnea, idōneum
- Recall: say the Latin for nearest, then the Latin for the second of two, then say idōneus, idōnea, idōneum again

Before you move on

What does idōneus, idōnea, idōneum mean? ("Suitable".) Say it once more.

268.3 aptus, apta, aptum — fit, suited

Before the new one: say the Latin for the second of two, then the Latin for suitable.

You'll want to know: aptus, apta, aptum

aptus, apta, aptum — "fit, suited".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aptus is the old participle of apō, "to fasten, to attach" (Lewis & Short): fastened on, so fitted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aptus, apta, aptum
- Say it: aptus, apta, aptum, once more
- Say it: say aptus, apta, aptum
- Recall: say the Latin for the second of two, then the Latin for suitable, then say aptus, apta, aptum again

Before you move on

What does aptus, apta, aptum mean? ("Fit, suited".) Say it once more.

268.4 parātus, parāta, parātum — ready

Before the new one: say the Latin for suitable, then the Latin for fit.

You'll want to know: parātus, parāta, parātum

parātus, parāta, parātum — "ready".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parātus is the past participle of parō, "to prepare" (Lewis & Short): prepared, ready.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parātus, parāta, parātum
- Say it: parātus, parāta, parātum, once more
- Say it: say parātus, parāta, parātum
- Recall: say the Latin for suitable, then the Latin for fit, then say parātus, parāta, parātum again

Before you move on

What does parātus, parāta, parātum mean? ("Ready".) Say it once more.

268.5 adversus, adversa, adversum — facing, unfavourable

Before the new one: say the Latin for fit, then the Latin for ready.

You'll want to know: adversus, adversa, adversum

adversus, adversa, adversum — "facing, unfavourable".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

adversus is the past participle of advertō, "to turn towards" (Lewis & Short): turned towards, facing, and so against. English adverse comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: adversus, adversa, adversum
- Say it: adversus, adversa, adversum, once more
- Say it: say adversus, adversa, adversum
- Recall: say the Latin for fit, then the Latin for ready, then say adversus, adversa, adversum again

Before you move on

What does adversus, adversa, adversum mean? ("Facing, unfavourable".) Say it once more.

Chapter 269

Gloomy, Drunk, Sober, Greedy, Thrifty

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say gloomy, drunk, sober, greedy and thrifty.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 269: I can say gloomy, drunk, sober, greedy and thrifty.

269.1 maestus, maesta, maestum — gloomy, mournful

Before the new one: say the Latin for ready, then the Latin for facing.

You'll want to know: maestus, maesta, maestum

maestus, maesta, maestum — "gloomy, mournful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maestus belongs with maereō, "to grieve, to mourn" (Lewis & Short), whose origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: maestus, maesta, maestum
- Say it: maestus, maesta, maestum, once more
- Say it: say maestus, maesta, maestum
- Recall: say the Latin for ready, then the Latin for facing, then say maestus, maesta, maestum again

Before you move on

What does maestus, maesta, maestum mean? ("Gloomy, mournful".) Say it once more.

269.2 ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium — drunk

Before the new one: say the Latin for facing, then the Latin for gloomy.

You'll want to know: ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium

ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium — "drunk".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēbrius may be inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root h1egwh-*, "to drink" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short still called it doubtful. Its opposite is sōbrius, "sober".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium
- Say it: ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium, once more
- Say it: say ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium

- Recall: say the Latin for facing, then the Latin for gloomy, then say ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium again

Before you move on

What does ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium mean? ("Drunk".) Say it once more.

269.3 sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium — sober

Before the new one: say the Latin for gloomy, then the Latin for drunk.

You'll want to know: sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium

sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium — "sober".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sōbrius is usually explained as sē-, "without", with ēbrius, "drunk" (EtymDB 2.1): not drunk. English sober comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium
- Say it: sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium, once more
- Say it: say sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium
- Recall: say the Latin for gloomy, then the Latin for drunk, then say sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium again

Before you move on

What does sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium mean? ("Sober".) Say it once more.

269.4 avārus, avāra, avārum — greedy

Before the new one: say the Latin for drunk, then the Latin for sober.

You'll want to know: avārus, avāra, avārum

avārus, avāra, avārum — "greedy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

avārus is built on aveō, "to long for, to crave" (Lewis & Short): craving. English avarice comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avārus, avāra, avārum
- Say it: avārus, avāra, avārum, once more
- Say it: say avārus, avāra, avārum
- Recall: say the Latin for drunk, then the Latin for sober, then say avārus, avāra, avārum again

Before you move on

What does avārus, avāra, avārum mean? ("Greedy".) Say it once more.

269.5 parcus, parca, parcum — thrifty, sparing

Before the new one: say the Latin for sober, then the Latin for greedy.

You'll want to know: parcus, parca, parcum

parcus, parca, parcum — "thrifty, sparing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parcus belongs with parcō, "to spare, to be sparing" (Lewis & Short), whose origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parcus, parca, parcum
- Say it: parcus, parca, parcum, once more
- Say it: say parcus, parca, parcum
- Recall: say the Latin for sober, then the Latin for greedy, then say parcus, parca, parcum again

Before you move on

What does parcus, parca, parcum mean? ("Thrifty, sparing".) Say it once more.

Chapter 270

Racecourse, Hall of justice, Senate house, Anchor, Oar

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a racecourse, a hall of justice, the senate house, an anchor and an oar.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 270: I can say a racecourse, a hall of justice, the senate house, an anchor and an oar.

270.1 circus, circī — a racecourse

Before the new one: say the Latin for greedy, then the Latin for thrifty.

You'll want to know: circus, circī

circus, circī — "a racecourse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

circus is usually taken from Greek kirkos, "a ring, a circle" (Lewis & Short), a form beside krikos, "ring". English circle comes from its diminutive circulus, "a small ring".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: circus, circī
- Say it: circus, circī, once more
- Say it: say circus, circī
- Recall: say the Latin for greedy, then the Latin for thrifty, then say circus, circī again

Before you move on

What does circus, circī mean? ("A racecourse".) Say it once more.

270.2 basilica, basilicae — a hall of justice

Before the new one: say the Latin for thrifty, then the Latin for a racecourse.

You'll want to know: basilica, basilicae

basilica, basilicae — "a hall of justice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

basilica was borrowed from Greek basilikē, "royal", short for a royal hall (EtymDB 2.1), from basileus, "king".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: basilica, basilicae
- Say it: basilica, basilicae, once more
- Say it: say basilica, basilicae
- Recall: say the Latin for thrifty, then the Latin for a racecourse, then say basilica, basilicae again

Before you move on

What does basilica, basilicae mean? ("A hall of justice".) Say it once more.

270.3 cūria, cūriae — the senate house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a racecourse, then the Latin for a hall of justice.

You'll want to know: cūria, cūriae

cūria, cūriae — "the senate house".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūria is often explained as co-viria*, "a gathering of men" (EtymDB 2.1), from co-, "together", and vir, "a man", but this is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cūria, cūriae
- Say it: cūria, cūriae, once more
- Say it: say cūria, cūriae
- Recall: say the Latin for a racecourse, then the Latin for a hall of justice, then say cūria, cūriae again

Before you move on

What does cūria, cūriae mean? ("The senate house".) Say it once more.

270.4 ancora, ancorae — an anchor

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hall of justice, then the Latin for the senate house.

You'll want to know: ancora, ancorae

ancora, ancorae — "an anchor".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ancora was borrowed from Greek ankyra, "anchor" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for bending: a hooked thing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ancora, ancorae
- Say it: ancora, ancorae, once more
- Say it: say ancora, ancorae
- Recall: say the Latin for a hall of justice, then the Latin for the senate house, then say ancora, ancorae again

Before you move on

What does ancora, ancorae mean? ("An anchor".) Say it once more.

270.5 rēmus, rēmī — an oar

Before the new one: say the Latin for the senate house, then the Latin for an anchor.

You'll want to know: rēmus, rēmī

rēmus, rēmī — "an oar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēmus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1reh1-*, "to row". Greek eretmos, "oar", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so are English row and rudder.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēmus, rēmī
- Say it: rēmus, rēmī, once more
- Say it: say rēmus, rēmī
- Recall: say the Latin for the senate house, then the Latin for an anchor, then say rēmus, rēmī again

Before you move on

What does rēmus, rēmī mean? ("An oar".) Say it once more.

Chapter 271

People, State, Homeland, Enemy, War

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a people, a state, a homeland, an enemy and war.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 271: I can say a people, a state, a homeland, an enemy and war.

271.1 populus, populī — a people, a nation

Before the new one: say the Latin for an anchor, then the Latin for an oar.

You'll want to know: populus, populī

populus, populī — "a people, a nation".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

populus has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 gives Proto-Italic poplos*, "army", for its oldest sense, a body of armed men. It may be a loan, perhaps from Etruscan. English people comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: populus, populī
- Say it: populus, populī, once more
- Say it: say populus, populī
- Recall: say the Latin for an anchor, then the Latin for an oar, then say populus, populī again

Before you move on

What does populus, populī mean? ("A people, a nation".) Say it once more.

271.2 cīvitās, cīvitātis — a state; citizenship

Before the new one: say the Latin for an oar, then the Latin for a people.

You'll want to know: cīvitās, cīvitātis

cīvitās, cīvitātis — "a state; citizenship".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cīvitās is built on cīvis, "a citizen" (Lewis & Short), with -tās, an ending for a quality: the body of citizens. English city comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cīvitās, cīvitātis
- Say it: cīvitās, cīvitātis, once more
- Say it: say cīvitās, cīvitātis

- Recall: say the Latin for an oar, then the Latin for a people, then say cīvitās, cīvitātis again

Before you move on

What does cīvitās, cīvitātis mean? ("A state; citizenship".) Say it once more.

271.3 patria, patriae — a homeland

Before the new one: say the Latin for a people, then the Latin for a state; citizenship.

You'll want to know: patria, patriae

patria, patriae — "a homeland".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patria is the feminine of patrius, "of a father" (Lewis & Short), with terra, "land", understood: the land of one's fathers.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patria, patriae
- Say it: patria, patriae, once more
- Say it: say patria, patriae
- Recall: say the Latin for a people, then the Latin for a state; citizenship, then say patria, patriae again

Before you move on

What does patria, patriae mean? ("A homeland".) Say it once more.

271.4 hostis, hostis — an enemy (of the state)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a state; citizenship, then the Latin for a homeland.

You'll want to know: hostis, hostis

hostis, hostis — "an enemy (of the state)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hostis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghostis*, "a stranger, a guest" (EtymDB 2.1): the stranger became the enemy in Latin, the guest in Germanic. English guest is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hostis, hostis
- Say it: hostis, hostis, once more
- Say it: say hostis, hostis
- Recall: say the Latin for a state; citizenship, then the Latin for a homeland, then say hostis, hostis again

Before you move on

What does hostis, hostis mean? ("An enemy (of the state)".) Say it once more.

271.5 bellum, bellī — war

Before the new one: say the Latin for a homeland, then the Latin for an enemy.

You'll want to know: bellum, bellī

bellum, bellī — "war".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bellum comes from older duellum (Lewis & Short); Latin turned an initial dw into b, as in bis, "two times", from older duis. The deeper origin of duellum is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bellum, bellī
- Say it: bellum, bellī, once more
- Say it: say bellum, bellī
- Recall: say the Latin for a homeland, then the Latin for an enemy, then say bellum, bellī again

Before you move on

What does bellum, bellī mean? ("War".) Say it once more.

Chapter 272

Butcher, Innkeeper, Banker, Envoy, Clerk

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a butcher, an innkeeper, a banker, an envoy and a clerk.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 272: I can say a butcher, an innkeeper, a banker, an envoy and a clerk.

272.1 lanius, laniī — a butcher

Before the new one: say the Latin for an enemy, then the Latin for war.

You'll want to know: lanius, laniī

lanius, laniī — "a butcher".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lanius belongs with laniō, "to tear to pieces" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European lek-*, "to tear" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lanius, laniī
- Say it: lanius, laniī, once more
- Say it: say lanius, laniī
- Recall: say the Latin for an enemy, then the Latin for war, then say lanius, laniī again

Before you move on

What does lanius, laniī mean? ("A butcher".) Say it once more.

272.2 caupō, caupōnis — an innkeeper

Before the new one: say the Latin for war, then the Latin for a butcher.

You'll want to know: caupō, caupōnis

caupō, caupōnis — "an innkeeper".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caupō has no sure origin; Greek kapēlos, "a retail dealer", is often compared (Lewis & Short). German kaufen, "to buy", was probably borrowed from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: caupō, caupōnis
- Say it: caupō, caupōnis, once more
- Say it: say caupō, caupōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for war, then the Latin for a butcher, then say caupō, caupōnis again

Before you move on

What does caupō, caupōnis mean? ("An innkeeper".) Say it once more.

272.3 argentārius, argentāriī — a banker

Before the new one: say the Latin for a butcher, then the Latin for an innkeeper.

You'll want to know: argentārius, argentāriī

argentārius, argentāriī — "a banker".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

argentārius is built on argentum, "silver, money" (Lewis & Short), with -ārius, "one who deals in": a money-dealer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: argentārius, argentāriī
- Say it: argentārius, argentāriī, once more
- Say it: say argentārius, argentāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a butcher, then the Latin for an innkeeper, then say argentārius, argentāriī again

Before you move on

What does argentārius, argentāriī mean? ("A banker".) Say it once more.

272.4 lēgātus, lēgātī — an envoy

Before the new one: say the Latin for an innkeeper, then the Latin for a banker.

You'll want to know: lēgātus, lēgātī

lēgātus, lēgātī — "an envoy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lēgātus is the past participle of lēgō, "to send as an envoy, to appoint" (Lewis & Short), built on lēx, lēgis, "a law": one sent with a charge.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lēgātus, lēgātī
- Say it: lēgātus, lēgātī, once more
- Say it: say lēgātus, lēgātī
- Recall: say the Latin for an innkeeper, then the Latin for a banker, then say lēgātus, lēgātī again

Before you move on

What does lēgātus, lēgātī mean? ("An envoy".) Say it once more.

272.5 scrība, scrībae — a clerk

Before the new one: say the Latin for a banker, then the Latin for an envoy.

You'll want to know: scrība, scrībae

scrība, scrībae — "a clerk".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scrība is built on scrībō, "to write" (Lewis & Short): one who writes. English scribe comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scrība, scrībae
- Say it: scrība, scrībae, once more
- Say it: say scrība, scrībae
- Recall: say the Latin for a banker, then the Latin for an envoy, then say scrība, scrībae again

Before you move on

What does scrība, scrībae mean? ("A clerk".) Say it once more.

272.6 Words from chapters 264-267 — a first pass

Say the words for an envoy and a clerk.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nowhere, from all sides, here and there, upwards, downwards
- even as, as, if only, on the contrary, at least
- wonderful, different, similar, fair, unjust
- fat, clever, special, former, nearest

Before you move on

Nowhere? (nusquam.) From all sides? (undique.) Here and there? (passim.) Upwards? (sūrsum.) Downwards? (deorsum.) Even as? (sīcut.) As? (velut.) If only? (utinam.) On the contrary? (immō.) At least? (saltem.) Wonderful? (mīrus, mīra, mīrum.) Different? (dīversus, dīversa, dīversum.) Similar? (similis, simile.) Fair? (iūstus, iūsta, iūstum.) Unjust? (iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum.) Fat? (pinguis, pingue.) Clever? (callidus, callida, callidum.) Special? (praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum.) Former? (prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum.) Nearest? (proximus, proxima, proximum.)

272.7 Words from chapters 268-272 — a second pass

Say the words for the second of two and suitable.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the second of two, suitable, fit, ready, facing
- gloomy, drunk, sober, greedy, thrifty
- a racecourse, a hall of justice, the senate house, an anchor, an oar
- a people, a state; citizenship, a homeland, an enemy, war
- a butcher, an innkeeper, a banker, an envoy, a clerk

Before you move on

The second of two? (alter, altera, alterum.) Suitable? (idōneus, idōnea, idōneum.) Fit? (aptus, apta, aptum.) Ready? (parātus, parāta, parātum.) Facing? (adversus, adversa, adversum.) Gloomy? (maestus, maesta, maestum.) Drunk? (ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium.) Sober? (sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium.) Greedy? (avārus, avāra, avārum.) Thrifty? (parcus, parca, parcum.) A racecourse? (circus, circī.) A hall of justice?

(basilica, basilicae.) The senate house? (cūria, cūriae.) An anchor? (ancora, ancorae.) An oar? (rēmus, rēmī.) A people? (populus, populī.) A state; citizenship? (cīvitās, cīvitātis.) A homeland? (patria, patriae.) An enemy? (hostis, hostis.) War? (bellum, bellī.) A butcher? (lanius, laniī.) An innkeeper? (caupō, caupōnis.) A banker? (argentārius, argentāriī.) An envoy? (lēgātus, lēgātī.) A clerk? (scrība, scrībae.)

Chapter 273

Wedding, Husband or wife, Parent, Grandson, Granddaughter

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a wedding, a husband or wife, a parent, a grandson and a granddaughter.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 273: I can say a wedding, a husband or wife, a parent, a grandson and a granddaughter.

273.1 nūptiae, nūptiārum — a wedding

Before the new one: say the Latin for an envoy, then the Latin for a clerk.

You'll want to know: nūptiae, nūptiārum

nūptiae, nūptiārum — "a wedding".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūptiae is built on nūpta, "a bride" (Lewis & Short), the participle of nūbō, "to marry" (EtymDB 2.1). English nuptial comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūptiae, nūptiārum
- Say it: nūptiae, nūptiārum, once more
- Say it: say nūptiae, nūptiārum
- Recall: say the Latin for an envoy, then the Latin for a clerk, then say nūptiae, nūptiārum again

Before you move on

What does nūptiae, nūptiārum mean? ("A wedding".) Say it once more.

273.2 coniūnx, coniugis — a husband or wife, a spouse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a clerk, then the Latin for a wedding.

You'll want to know: coniūnx, coniugis

coniūnx, coniugis — "a husband or wife, a spouse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coniūnx is built on coniungō, "to join together", from con-, "together", and iungō, "to join": one joined in marriage. Its root is the one in iugum, "a yoke".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: coniūnx, coniugis
- Say it: coniūnx, coniugis, once more
- Say it: say coniūnx, coniugis

- Recall: say the Latin for a clerk, then the Latin for a wedding, then say coniūnx, coniugis again

Before you move on

What does coniūnx, coniugis mean? ("A husband or wife, a spouse".) Say it once more.

273.3 parēns, parentis — a parent

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wedding, then the Latin for a husband or wife.

You'll want to know: parēns, parentis

parēns, parentis — "a parent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parēns is the present participle of pariō, "to bring forth, to give birth to" (EtymDB 2.1): the one who brings forth. It is a different word from pārēns, "obeying", from pāreō, "to obey".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parēns, parentis
- Say it: parēns, parentis, once more
- Say it: say parēns, parentis
- Recall: say the Latin for a wedding, then the Latin for a husband or wife, then say parēns, parentis again

Before you move on

What does parēns, parentis mean? ("A parent".) Say it once more.

273.4 nepōs, nepōtis — a grandson

Before the new one: say the Latin for a husband or wife, then the Latin for a parent.

You'll want to know: nepōs, nepōtis

nepōs, nepōtis — "a grandson".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nepōs is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nepōts*, "grandson, nephew" (EtymDB 2.1); German Neffe, "nephew", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English nephew comes from nepōs through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nepōs, nepōtis
- Say it: nepōs, nepōtis, once more
- Say it: say nepōs, nepōtis
- Recall: say the Latin for a husband or wife, then the Latin for a parent, then say nepōs, nepōtis again

Before you move on

What does nepōs, nepōtis mean? ("A grandson".) Say it once more.

273.5 neptis, neptis — a granddaughter

Before the new one: say the Latin for a parent, then the Latin for a grandson.

You'll want to know: neptis, neptis

neptis, neptis — "a granddaughter".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

neptis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European neptih2*, "granddaughter, niece" (EtymDB 2.1), the feminine partner of nepōs, "grandson" (Lewis & Short). English niece comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: neptis, neptis
- Say it: neptis, neptis, once more
- Say it: say neptis, neptis
- Recall: say the Latin for a parent, then the Latin for a grandson, then say neptis, neptis again

Before you move on

What does neptis, neptis mean? ("A granddaughter".) Say it once more.

Chapter 274

Leisure, Business, Profit, Loss, Debt

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say leisure, business, profit, loss and a debt.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 274: I can say leisure, business, profit, loss and a debt.

274.1 ōtium, ōtiī — leisure

Before the new one: say the Latin for a grandson, then the Latin for a granddaughter.

You'll want to know: ōtium, ōtiī

ōtium, ōtiī — "leisure".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōtium has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōtium, ōtiī
- Say it: ōtium, ōtiī, once more
- Say it: say ōtium, ōtiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a grandson, then the Latin for a granddaughter, then say ōtium, ōtiī again

Before you move on

What does ōtium, ōtiī mean? ("Leisure".) Say it once more.

274.2 negōtium, negōtiī — business

Before the new one: say the Latin for a granddaughter, then the Latin for leisure.

You'll want to know: negōtium, negōtiī

negōtium, negōtiī — "business".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

negōtium is nec, "not", with ōtium, "leisure" (Lewis & Short): no leisure, so business. Festus already took it apart this way.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: negōtium, negōtiī
- Say it: negōtium, negōtiī, once more
- Say it: say negōtium, negōtiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a granddaughter, then the Latin for leisure, then say negōtium, negōtiī again

Before you move on

What does negōtium, negōtiī mean? ("Business".) Say it once more.

274.3 lucrum, lucrī — profit

Before the new one: say the Latin for leisure, then the Latin for business.

You'll want to know: lucrum, lucrī

lucrum, lucrī — "profit".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lucrum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European leh2w-*, "to take as booty, to profit" (EtymDB 2.1), with an ending for a means; German Lohn, "wages", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lucrum, lucrī
- Say it: lucrum, lucrī, once more
- Say it: say lucrum, lucrī
- Recall: say the Latin for leisure, then the Latin for business, then say lucrum, lucrī again

Before you move on

What does lucrum, lucrī mean? ("Profit".) Say it once more.

274.4 damnum, damnī — loss, damage

Before the new one: say the Latin for business, then the Latin for profit.

You'll want to know: damnum, damnī

damnum, damnī — "loss, damage".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

damnum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dh2pnom*, "an outlay, an expense" (EtymDB 2.1), the source also of Greek dapanē, "expense"; Lewis & Short still preferred a link with dare, "to give".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: damnum, damnī
- Say it: damnum, damnī, once more
- Say it: say damnum, damnī
- Recall: say the Latin for business, then the Latin for profit, then say damnum, damnī again

Before you move on

What does damnum, damnī mean? ("Loss, damage".) Say it once more.

274.5 dēbitum, dēbitī — a debt

Before the new one: say the Latin for profit, then the Latin for loss.

You'll want to know: dēbitum, dēbitī

dēbitum, dēbitī — "a debt".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēbitum is the past participle of dēbeō, "to owe" (EtymDB 2.1), used as a noun: what is owed. English debt comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēbitum, dēbitī
- Say it: dēbitum, dēbitī, once more
- Say it: say dēbitum, dēbitī
- Recall: say the Latin for profit, then the Latin for loss, then say dēbitum, dēbitī again

Before you move on

What does dēbitum, dēbitī mean? ("A debt".) Say it once more.

Chapter 275

Silk, Mud, Dust, Smoke, Ash

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say silk, mud, dust, smoke and ash.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 275: I can say silk, mud, dust, smoke and ash.

275.1 sēricum, sēricī — silk

Before the new one: say the Latin for loss, then the Latin for a debt.

You'll want to know: sēricum, sēricī

sēricum, sēricī — "silk".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sēricum is built on Sērēs, "the Seres", the people of the far east whom the Romans knew as makers of silk (Lewis & Short): the Seric stuff. English silk probably comes from the same name.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sēricum, sēricī
- Say it: sēricum, sēricī, once more
- Say it: say sēricum, sēricī
- Recall: say the Latin for loss, then the Latin for a debt, then say sēricum, sēricī again

Before you move on

What does sēricum, sēricī mean? ("Silk".) Say it once more.

275.2 lutum, lutī — mud

Before the new one: say the Latin for a debt, then the Latin for silk.

You'll want to know: lutum, lutī

lutum, lutī — "mud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lutum is usually linked with luō, "to wash" (Lewis & Short), or with a root for dirt seen in polluō, "to soil"; the details are uncertain. It is a different word from lūtum, "a plant used for yellow dye".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lutum, lutī
- Say it: lutum, lutī, once more
- Say it: say lutum, lutī
- Recall: say the Latin for a debt, then the Latin for silk, then say lutum, lutī again

Before you move on

What does lutum, lutī mean? ("Mud".) Say it once more.

275.3 pulvis, pulveris — dust

Before the new one: say the Latin for silk, then the Latin for mud.

You'll want to know: pulvis, pulveris

pulvis, pulveris — "dust".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulvis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pel-*, "flour, dust" (EtymDB 2.1); pollen, "fine flour", is from the same root. English powder comes from pulvis through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pulvis, pulveris
- Say it: pulvis, pulveris, once more
- Say it: say pulvis, pulveris
- Recall: say the Latin for silk, then the Latin for mud, then say pulvis, pulveris again

Before you move on

What does pulvis, pulveris mean? ("Dust".) Say it once more.

275.4 fūmus, fūmī — smoke

Before the new one: say the Latin for mud, then the Latin for dust.

You'll want to know: fūmus, fūmī

fūmus, fūmī — "smoke".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fūmus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhuh2mos*, "smoke" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek thymos, "spirit, passion", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), as is English dust.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fūmus, fūmī
- Say it: fūmus, fūmī, once more
- Say it: say fūmus, fūmī
- Recall: say the Latin for mud, then the Latin for dust, then say fūmus, fūmī again

Before you move on

What does fūmus, fūmī mean? ("Smoke".) Say it once more.

275.5 cinis, cineris — ash

Before the new one: say the Latin for dust, then the Latin for smoke.

You'll want to know: cinis, cineris

cinis, cineris — "ash".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cinis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ken-*, "dust, ashes" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek konis, "dust", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cinis, cineris
- Say it: cinis, cineris, once more
- Say it: say cinis, cineris
- Recall: say the Latin for dust, then the Latin for smoke, then say cinis, cineris again

Before you move on

What does cinis, cineris mean? ("Ash".) Say it once more.

Chapter 276

Wasp, Gnat, Flea, Worm, Tortoise

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a wasp, a gnat, a flea, a worm and a tortoise.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 276: I can say a wasp, a gnat, a flea, a worm and a tortoise.

276.1 vespa, vespae — a wasp

Before the new one: say the Latin for smoke, then the Latin for ash.

You'll want to know: vespa, vespae

vespa, vespae — "a wasp".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vespa is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wobhseh2*, "wasp", from webh-*, "to weave" (EtymDB 2.1): the insect that weaves its nest. English wasp is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vespa, vespae
- Say it: vespa, vespae, once more
- Say it: say vespa, vespae
- Recall: say the Latin for smoke, then the Latin for ash, then say vespa, vespae again

Before you move on

What does vespa, vespae mean? ("A wasp".) Say it once more.

276.2 culex, culicis — a gnat, a mosquito

Before the new one: say the Latin for ash, then the Latin for a wasp.

You'll want to know: culex, culicis

culex, culicis — "a gnat, a mosquito".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

culex has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European source, but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: culex, culicis
- Say it: culex, culicis, once more
- Say it: say culex, culicis
- Recall: say the Latin for ash, then the Latin for a wasp, then say culex, culicis again

Before you move on

What does culex, culicis mean? ("A gnat, a mosquito".) Say it once more.

276.3 pūlex, pūlicis — a flea

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wasp, then the Latin for a gnat.

You'll want to know: pūlex, pūlicis

pūlex, pūlicis — "a flea".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūlex is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European plusis*, "flea" (EtymDB 2.1), with its sounds rearranged; Greek psylla, "flea", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pūlex, pūlicis
- Say it: pūlex, pūlicis, once more
- Say it: say pūlex, pūlicis
- Recall: say the Latin for a wasp, then the Latin for a gnat, then say pūlex, pūlicis again

Before you move on

What does pūlex, pūlicis mean? ("A flea".) Say it once more.

276.4 vermis, vermis — a worm

Before the new one: say the Latin for a gnat, then the Latin for a flea.

You'll want to know: vermis, vermis

vermis, vermis — "a worm".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vermis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wrmis*, "worm" (EtymDB 2.1); Gothic waurms, "serpent", and English worm are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vermis, vermis
- Say it: vermis, vermis, once more
- Say it: say vermis, vermis
- Recall: say the Latin for a gnat, then the Latin for a flea, then say vermis, vermis again

Before you move on

What does vermis, vermis mean? ("A worm".) Say it once more.

276.5 testūdō, testūdinis — a tortoise

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flea, then the Latin for a worm.

You'll want to know: testūdō, testūdinis

testūdō, testūdinis — "a tortoise".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

testūdō is built on testa, "a piece of baked clay, a shell" (Lewis & Short), with -ūdō, an ending for a quality: the shelled creature.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: testūdō, testūdinis
- Say it: testūdō, testūdinis, once more
- Say it: say testūdō, testūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a flea, then the Latin for a worm, then say testūdō, testūdinis again

Before you move on

What does testūdō, testūdinis mean? ("A tortoise".) Say it once more.

Chapter 277

Helmet, Spear, Bow, Arrow, Trumpet

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a helmet, a spear, a bow, an arrow and a trumpet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 277: I can say a helmet, a spear, a bow, an arrow and a trumpet.

277.1 galea, galeae — a helmet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a worm, then the Latin for a tortoise.

You'll want to know: galea, galeae

galea, galeae — "a helmet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

galea is probably a loan from Greek galeē, "a weasel, a marten", for a cap of animal skin; Lewis & Short's comparison with Sanskrit is doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: galea, galeae
- Say it: galea, galeae, once more
- Say it: say galea, galeae
- Recall: say the Latin for a worm, then the Latin for a tortoise, then say galea, galeae again

Before you move on

What does galea, galeae mean? ("A helmet".) Say it once more.

277.2 hasta, hastae — a spear

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tortoise, then the Latin for a helmet.

You'll want to know: hasta, hastae

hasta, hastae — "a spear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hasta is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghast-*, "a rod, a branch" (EtymDB 2.1). Gothic gazds, "a goad", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hasta, hastae
- Say it: hasta, hastae, once more
- Say it: say hasta, hastae
- Recall: say the Latin for a tortoise, then the Latin for a helmet, then say hasta, hastae again

Before you move on

What does hasta, hastae mean? ("A spear".) Say it once more.

277.3 arcus, arcūs — a bow; an arch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a helmet, then the Latin for a spear.

You'll want to know: arcus, arcūs

arcus, arcūs — "a bow; an arch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arcus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2erkwo-*, "bow, arch" (EtymDB 2.1); English arrow is a cousin. English arc and arch come from arcus.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: arcus, arcūs
- Say it: arcus, arcūs, once more
- Say it: say arcus, arcūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a helmet, then the Latin for a spear, then say arcus, arcūs again

Before you move on

What does arcus, arcūs mean? ("A bow; an arch".) Say it once more.

277.4 sagitta, sagittae — an arrow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spear, then the Latin for a bow; an arch.

You'll want to know: sagitta, sagittae

sagitta, sagittae — "an arrow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sagitta has no sure origin; it may be a loan from a lost Mediterranean language, perhaps through Etruscan.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sagitta, sagittae
- Say it: sagitta, sagittae, once more
- Say it: say sagitta, sagittae
- Recall: say the Latin for a spear, then the Latin for a bow; an arch, then say sagitta, sagittae again

Before you move on

What does sagitta, sagittae mean? ("An arrow".) Say it once more.

277.5 tuba, tubae — a trumpet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bow; an arch, then the Latin for an arrow.

You'll want to know: tuba, tubae

tuba, tubae — "a trumpet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tuba belongs with tubus, "a pipe, a tube" (Lewis & Short); where the pair comes from is uncertain. English tube comes from tubus.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tuba, tubae
- Say it: tuba, tubae, once more
- Say it: say tuba, tubae
- Recall: say the Latin for a bow; an arch, then the Latin for an arrow, then say tuba, tubae again

Before you move on

What does tuba, tubae mean? ("A trumpet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 278

Book-roll, Page, Letter of the alphabet, Word, Name

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a book-roll, a page, a letter of the alphabet, a word and a name.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 278: I can say a book-roll, a page, a letter of the alphabet, a word and a name.

278.1 volūmen, volūminis — a book-roll

Before the new one: say the Latin for an arrow, then the Latin for a trumpet.

You'll want to know: volūmen, volūminis

volūmen, volūminis — "a book-roll".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

volūmen is built on volvō, "to roll" (Lewis & Short), with -men, an ending for a result: something rolled up. volvō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European welw-*, "to roll" (EtymDB 2.1). English volume comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: volūmen, volūminis
- Say it: volūmen, volūminis, once more
- Say it: say volūmen, volūminis
- Recall: say the Latin for an arrow, then the Latin for a trumpet, then say volūmen, volūminis again

Before you move on

What does volūmen, volūminis mean? ("A book-roll".) Say it once more.

278.2 pāgina, pāginae — a page

Before the new one: say the Latin for a trumpet, then the Latin for a book-roll.

You'll want to know: pāgina, pāginae

pāgina, pāginae — "a page".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāgina is built on the root of pangō, "to fasten, to fix" (Lewis & Short): first a row of vines fastened together, then a column of writing. The root is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peh2g-*, "to fasten" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāgina, pāginae
- Say it: pāgina, pāginae, once more
- Say it: say pāgina, pāginae

- Recall: say the Latin for a trumpet, then the Latin for a book-roll, then say pāgina, pāginae again

Before you move on

What does pāgina, pāginae mean? ("A page".) Say it once more.

278.3 littera, litterae — a letter of the alphabet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a book-roll, then the Latin for a page.

You'll want to know: littera, litterae

littera, litterae — "a letter of the alphabet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

littera has no sure origin; the old link with linō, "to smear", is doubtful, and a loan from Greek diphthera, "a hide for writing on", through Etruscan has also been suggested.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: littera, litterae
- Say it: littera, litterae, once more
- Say it: say littera, litterae
- Recall: say the Latin for a book-roll, then the Latin for a page, then say littera, litterae again

Before you move on

What does littera, litterae mean? ("A letter of the alphabet".) Say it once more.

278.4 verbum, verbī — a word

Before the new one: say the Latin for a page, then the Latin for a letter of the alphabet.

You'll want to know: verbum, verbī

verbum, verbī — "a word".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

verbum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European werdhom*, "word" (EtymDB 2.1); English word is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: verbum, verbī
- Say it: verbum, verbī, once more
- Say it: say verbum, verbī
- Recall: say the Latin for a page, then the Latin for a letter of the alphabet, then say verbum, verbī again

Before you move on

What does verbum, verbī mean? ("A word".) Say it once more.

278.5 nōmen, nōminis — a name

Before the new one: say the Latin for a letter of the alphabet, then the Latin for a word.

You'll want to know: nōmen, nōminis

nōmen, nōminis — "a name".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōmen is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1nomn*, "name" (EtymDB 2.1); English name is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nōmen, nōminis
- Say it: nōmen, nōminis, once more
- Say it: say nōmen, nōminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a letter of the alphabet, then the Latin for a word, then say nōmen, nōminis again

Before you move on

What does nōmen, nōminis mean? ("A name".) Say it once more.

Chapter 279

Cherry, Plum, Cabbage, Leek, Porridge

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a cherry, a plum, cabbage, a leek and porridge.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 279: I can say a cherry, a plum, cabbage, a leek and porridge.

279.1 cerasum, cerasī — a cherry

Before the new one: say the Latin for a word, then the Latin for a name.

You'll want to know: cerasum, cerasī

cerasum, cerasī — "a cherry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cerasum was borrowed from Greek kerasos, "cherry tree", itself probably from a language of Asia Minor. English cherry comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cerasum, cerasī
- Say it: cerasum, cerasī, once more
- Say it: say cerasum, cerasī
- Recall: say the Latin for a word, then the Latin for a name, then say cerasum, cerasī again

Before you move on

What does cerasum, cerasī mean? ("A cherry".) Say it once more.

279.2 prūnum, prūnī — a plum

Before the new one: say the Latin for a name, then the Latin for a cherry.

You'll want to know: prūnum, prūnī

prūnum, prūnī — "a plum".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prūnum was borrowed from Greek prounon, "plum" (EtymDB 2.1), a word probably from a language of Asia Minor. English prune and plum, an earlier borrowing, both come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prūnum, prūnī
- Say it: prūnum, prūnī, once more
- Say it: say prūnum, prūnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a name, then the Latin for a cherry, then say prūnum, prūnī again

Before you move on

What does prūnum, prūnī mean? ("A plum".) Say it once more.

279.3 brassica, brassicae — cabbage

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cherry, then the Latin for a plum.

You'll want to know: brassica, brassicae

brassica, brassicae — "cabbage".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

brassica has no sure origin; a Celtic source is sometimes suggested.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: brassica, brassicae
- Say it: brassica, brassicae, once more
- Say it: say brassica, brassicae
- Recall: say the Latin for a cherry, then the Latin for a plum, then say brassica, brassicae again

Before you move on

What does brassica, brassicae mean? ("Cabbage".) Say it once more.

279.4 porrum, porrī — a leek

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plum, then the Latin for cabbage.

You'll want to know: porrum, porrī

porrum, porrī — "a leek".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

porrum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European prso-*, "leek" (EtymDB 2.1), which makes Greek prason, "leek", a cousin (Lewis & Short); some think both are instead loans from a lost language.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: porrum, porrī
- Say it: porrum, porrī, once more
- Say it: say porrum, porrī
- Recall: say the Latin for a plum, then the Latin for cabbage, then say porrum, porrī again

Before you move on

What does porrum, porrī mean? ("A leek".) Say it once more.

279.5 puls, pultis — porridge

Before the new one: say the Latin for cabbage, then the Latin for a leek.

You'll want to know: puls, pultis

puls, pultis — "porridge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

puls is usually linked with Greek poltos, "porridge" (Lewis & Short), and may have been borrowed from it; both go back to a root for meal, pel-*, "flour, dust" (EtymDB 2.1). English pulse, "beans and lentils", comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: puls, pultis
- Say it: puls, pultis, once more
- Say it: say puls, pultis
- Recall: say the Latin for cabbage, then the Latin for a leek, then say puls, pultis again

Before you move on

What does puls, pultis mean? ("Porridge".) Say it once more.

Chapter 280

Tower, Column, City walls, Ditch, Rampart

Modes: voice (3) eyes (4) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a tower, a column, city walls, a ditch and a rampart.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 280: I can say a tower, a column, city walls, a ditch and a rampart.

280.1 turris, turris — a tower

Before the new one: say the Latin for a leek, then the Latin for porridge.

You'll want to know: turris, turris

turris, turris — "a tower".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

turris was borrowed from Greek tyrris, "a tower" (Lewis & Short), a word perhaps from Asia Minor. English tower comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: turris, turris
- Say it: turris, turris, once more
- Say it: say turris, turris
- Recall: say the Latin for a leek, then the Latin for porridge, then say turris, turris again

Before you move on

What does turris, turris mean? ("A tower".) Say it once more.

280.2 columna, columnae — a column

Before the new one: say the Latin for porridge, then the Latin for a tower.

You'll want to know: columna, columnae

columna, columnae — "a column".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

columna is a form beside columen, "a top, a pillar" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kelH-*, "to rise" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of collis, "a hill".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: columna, columnae
- Say it: columna, columnae, once more
- Say it: say columna, columnae
- Recall: say the Latin for porridge, then the Latin for a tower, then say columna, columnae again

Before you move on

What does columna, columnae mean? ("A column".) Say it once more.

280.3 moenia, moenium — city walls

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tower, then the Latin for a column.

You'll want to know: moenia, moenium

moenia, moenium — "city walls".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

moenia belongs with mūniō, "to fortify, to wall in" (Lewis & Short); the deeper origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: moenia, moenium
- Say it: moenia, moenium, once more
- Say it: say moenia, moenium
- Recall: say the Latin for a tower, then the Latin for a column, then say moenia, moenium again

Before you move on

What does moenia, moenium mean? ("City walls".) Say it once more.

280.4 fossa, fossae — a ditch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a column, then the Latin for city walls.

You'll want to know: fossa, fossae

fossa, fossae — "a ditch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fossa is the feminine past participle of fodiō, "to dig" (Lewis & Short), with terra, "earth", understood: dug earth, a ditch.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fossa, fossae
- Say it: fossa, fossae, once more
- Say it: say fossa, fossae
- Recall: say the Latin for a column, then the Latin for city walls, then say fossa, fossae again

Before you move on

What does fossa, fossae mean? ("A ditch".) Say it once more.

280.5 vallum, vallī — a rampart

Before the new one: say the Latin for city walls, then the Latin for a ditch.

You'll want to know: vallum, vallī

vallum, vallī — "a rampart".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vallum is built on vallus, "a stake" (Lewis & Short): a line of stakes, a palisade. vallus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European welH-*, "to turn, to twist" (EtymDB 2.1). English wall was borrowed from it early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vallum, vallī
- Say it: vallum, vallī, once more
- Say it: say vallum, vallī
- Recall: say the Latin for city walls, then the Latin for a ditch, then say vallum, vallī again

Before you move on

What does vallum, vallī mean? ("A rampart".) Say it once more.

280.6 Words from chapters 273-276 — a first pass

Say the words for a ditch and a rampart.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a wedding, a husband or wife, a parent, a grandson, a granddaughter
- leisure, business, profit, loss, a debt
- silk, mud, dust, smoke, ash
- a wasp, a gnat, a flea, a worm, a tortoise

Before you move on

A wedding? (nūptiae, nūptiārum.) A husband or wife? (coniūnx, coniugis.) A parent? (parēns, parentis.) A grandson? (nepōs, nepōtis.) A granddaughter? (neptis, neptis.) Leisure? (ōtium, ōtiī.) Business? (negōtium, negōtiī.) Profit? (lucrum, lucrī.) Loss? (damnum, damnī.) A debt? (dēbitum, dēbitī.) Silk? (sēricum, sēricī.) Mud? (lutum, lutī.) Dust? (pulvis, pulveris.) Smoke? (fūmus, fūmī.) Ash? (cinis, cineris.) A wasp? (vespa, vespae.) A gnat? (culex, culicis.) A flea? (pūlex, pūlicis.) A worm? (vermis, vermis.) A tortoise? (testūdō, testūdinis.)

280.7 Words from chapters 277-280 — a second pass

Say the words for a helmet and a spear.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a helmet, a spear, a bow; an arch, an arrow, a trumpet
- a book-roll, a page, a letter of the alphabet, a word, a name
- a cherry, a plum, cabbage, a leek, porridge
- a tower, a column, city walls, a ditch, a rampart

Before you move on

A helmet? (galea, galeae.) A spear? (hasta, hastae.) A bow; an arch? (arcus, arcūs.) An arrow? (sagitta, sagittae.) A trumpet? (tuba, tubae.) A book-roll? (volūmen, volūminis.) A page? (pāgina, pāginae.) A letter of the alphabet? (littera, litterae.) A word? (verbum, verbī.) A name? (nōmen, nōminis.) A cherry? (cerasum, cerasī.) A plum? (prūnum, prūnī.) Cabbage? (brassica, brassicae.) A leek? (porrum, porrī.) Porridge? (puls, pultis.) A tower? (turris, turris.) A column?

(columna, columnae.) City walls? (moenia, moenium.) A ditch? (fossa, fossae.) A rampart? (vallum, vallī.)

Chapter 281

The Scene and the Event

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell what happened in the perfect, and paint the scene it happened in with the imperfect.
>
> Complete LA-R281-the-scene-and-the-event: I can tell what happened in the perfect, and paint the scene it happened in with the imperfect.

281.1 vīdī, vīdit — the past of what happened

Say "I recently read a book". (Nūper librum lēgī.) Now "before, I lived in Rome". (Anteā Rōmae habitāvī.) And ask "what happened?" (Quid accidit?)

All three are the perfect, Latin's past for a thing that happened and was over. Here are its six persons.

Grammar Lens: one stem, six endings

Every verb has a perfect stem: for videō, vīd-, with a long ī. Onto it go six endings, the same for every verb:

> vīdī — I saw. vīdistī — you saw. vīdit — he saw, she saw. vīdimus — we saw. vīdistis — you all saw. vīdērunt — they saw.

Stories lean on two of them: -it for one person, -ērunt for several. The stem is learned with each verb. veniō has vēn-: vēnit, vēnērunt. sum has fu-: fuī, I was; fuit, he was.
Vīdī is also "I have seen"; the sentence decides.

You'll want to know: the -āvī verbs

Most -āre verbs add -āv-, like the habitāvī you own:

> ambulāre — ambulāvī, I walked; ambulāvit, he walked clāmāre — clāmāvit, he shouted nārrāre — nārrāvit, she told; nārrāvērunt, they told

The stems learned one by one are the others: vīdī, vēnī, fuī, lēgī, and bibī, from bibō, with nothing added at all.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fuī looks nothing like sum because it is built on another root, the one the chapter on sum named: Proto-Indo-European *$b^huH$-, "to become", which EtymDB 2.1 lists among the parents of sum and which also gives English be.
vīdī keeps the root of videō with a longer vowel (Lewis & Short give vīdi as its perfect). That vowel is how the ear tells videt, "he sees", from vīdit, "he saw".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- vīdī, vīdistī, vīdit — then vīdimus, vīdistis, vīdērunt
- videt, he sees; then vīdit, he saw — and hear the long ī
- vēnit, he came; vēnērunt, they came
- fuī, I was; fuit, it was
- ambulāvī, I walked; ambulāvērunt, they walked
- Nūper amīcum vīdī. — Recently I saw a friend

Before you move on

"He saw"? (Vīdit.) "They came"? (Vēnērunt.) "I walked"? (Ambulāvī.) Which ending says "they"? (-ērunt.) And which root is behind fuī? ($*b^huH$-, "to become", the root of English be.)

281.2 eram, erat — the past that stays open

Say "I am" and "they are". (Sum. Sunt.) Now "I was", in the perfect. (Fuī.)

Fuī closes a door: I was, and that is over. Latin has a second "was" that holds it open.

Grammar Lens: six forms, and the endings you know

Ōlim Rōma parva erat. — Long ago Rome was small.

erat is "was", the imperfect of sum. All six persons:

eram — I was. erās — you were. erat — he, she, it was. erāmus — we were. erātis — you all were. erant — they were.

The endings -m, -s, -t, -mus, -tis, -nt are those of sum, es, est, sumus, estis, sunt, on the stem era-. Before -m, -t and -nt the a is short. Erat is a state that went on, with no edge in view.

Fessus eram. — I was tired. Caelum obscūrum erat. — The sky was dark.

Why it's said this way

Both are "was"; the choice is the frame. Laetus eram paints a mood that lasted through the story. Laetus fuī sums it up from outside: I was happy, and that time is over. A story sets its scene with erat.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

eram is usually explained as an older esam*, built on the same root as est: between two vowels an old Latin s turned into r, and es-a-m came out as eram. Neither EtymDB nor Lewis & Short records a form that old, so this is the account histories of Latin give, offered here as one. The s survives where no vowel followed it: es, est, estis.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- eram, erās, erat — then erāmus, erātis, erant
- Ōlim Rōma parva erat.
- Fessus eram. — then a woman says it: Fessa eram.
- Caelum obscūrum erat. — then In vīllā erāmus.
- the closed door, then the open one — fuit, then erat

Before you move on

"They were"? (Erant.) "We were"? (Erāmus.) Whose endings does eram borrow? (The present sum, es, est.) Which "was" paints a scene, fuit or erat? (Erat.) And what did the r of eram used to be? (An s, between two vowels.)

281.3 ambulābam — I was walking

Say "I was tired", the open past. (Fessus eram.) Now "I walked", the closed one. (Ambulāvī.)

Eram belongs to one verb. Every other verb makes its open past with two letters slipped in before the ending.

Grammar Lens: -ba- before the ending

Take the present stem, add -ba-, then the endings eram taught you:

> ambulābam — I was walking. ambulābās — you were walking. ambulābat — he was walking. ambulābāmus — we were walking. ambulābātis — you all were walking. ambulābant — they were walking.

The vowel before -ba- comes from the infinitive. An -āre verb keeps its ā, and an -ēre verb its ē: habēre, habēbam, I had, I used to have; sedēre, sedēbat, he was sitting.
The other verbs put -ēbam on the stem: legere, legēbam, I was reading; volō gives volēbat, he wanted. And the verbs with -iō keep their i: venīre, veniēbam; dormīre, dormiēbat, he was sleeping.
What it says is the same for all of them: an action under way, or a habit. Ambulābam is "I was walking", and also "I used to walk".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Histories of Latin often trace the -b- of -bam to the root behind fuī, Proto-Indo-European *$*b^huH$-, "to become". That is a reconstruction, and neither EtymDB nor Lewis & Short takes it up, so it is offered as the usual account, not as a fact.
What is certain is where the ending went. Spanish kept it: cantābat, "he was singing", is Spanish cantaba. French wore the b away, so the same form there is chantait.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ambulābam, ambulābās, ambulābat
- ambulābāmus, ambulābātis, ambulābant
- habēbam, I had; sedēbat, he was sitting
- Mercātōrēs clāmābant. — The merchants were shouting
- legēbam, I was reading; veniēbam, I was coming
- Amīcus dormiēbat. — My friend was sleeping
- the closed past, then the open one — ambulāvit, then ambulābat

Before you move on

"They were walking"? (Ambulābant.) "I had"? (Habēbam.) "I was reading"? (Legēbam.) What two letters come before the ending? (-ba-.) And which Romance language still keeps the b? (Spanish: cantaba.)

281.4 pluēbat … vēnit — the scene and the event

Say "it rains", with no subject. (Pluit.) Now put it in the open past, the way legere gives legēbat. (Pluēbat, it was raining.)

Grammar Lens: which past for which job

> Pluēbat. Subitō amīcus vēnit. — It was raining. Suddenly a friend came.

The rain was already going on, and it went on afterwards: that is the imperfect, pluēbat. The friend's arrival happened once, at one moment, and was done: that is the perfect, vēnit.
So a story runs on two tracks. The imperfect paints the scene: weather, places, what people were doing. The perfect moves the events along.

> In forō ambulābam; subitō amīcum vīdī. — I was walking in the forum; suddenly I saw a friend.

A word like subitō, "suddenly", usually brings a perfect after it: suddenness is an event.

Why it's said this way

Sometimes both are right. Rōmae habitāvī counts it up from outside: I lived in Rome, a closed stretch. Rōmae habitābam puts you inside it: I was living in Rome then.
One small trap: pluit in the perfect is spelled pluit too, "it rained", the way accidit serves two tenses. Only the story around it decides.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The names are Latin. perfectum is the participle of a verb that Lewis & Short gloss "to carry through, to finish", and EtymDB 2.1 builds that verb from per-, "through", and faciō, "to make, to do". The perfect is the past that was carried through. imperfectum puts in-, "not", in front: unfinished, still going, which is what pluēbat is.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Pluēbat. Subitō amīcus vēnit.
- In forō ambulābam; subitō amīcum vīdī.
- a scene — Caelum obscūrum erat. — and an event — Amīcus vēnit.

- inside it, then outside it — Rōmae habitābam, then Rōmae habitāvī

Before you move on

Which past paints the scene? (The imperfect: pluēbat.) Which moves the story along? (The perfect: vēnit.) After subitō, which one is likely? (The perfect: suddenness is an event.) And what does perfectum mean, taken apart? (Carried through.)

281.5 Review — the scene, and what happened in it

Say "they saw". (Vīdērunt.) Then "we were", the open past. (Erāmus.)

What you've built

Four lessons, and both of Latin's story pasts are in your hands. The perfect, a stem and six endings: vīdī, vīdit, vīdērunt, with -āvī for most -āre verbs. The imperfect: eram, erat, erant for sum, and -ba- before the ending for every other verb: ambulābam, habēbam, legēbam, veniēbam.
And the division of labour between them: the imperfect holds the scene still, the perfect drops the events into it.

> Pluēbat, et in caupōnā sedēbam. Subitō amīcus intrāvit. — It was raining, and I was sitting in the inn. Suddenly a friend came in.

Two verbs of scene, pluēbat and sedēbam; one event, intrāvit, and subitō in front of it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a scene in three — Caelum obscūrum erat. Pluēbat. In caupōnā sedēbam.
- the event — Subitō amīcus intrāvit. — and a closed one — In caupōnā cēnāvērunt.

- In forō ambulābam; subitō amīcum vīdī.
- one of your own — a scene with erat or -bat, and one thing that happened, with subitō

Before you move on

"He came in"? (Intrāvit.) "I was sitting"? (Sedēbam.) Which ending says "they" in the perfect? (-ērunt.) In pluēbat … intrāvit, which verb is the scene? (Pluēbat.) What does perfectum mean? (Carried through.) What was the r of eram once? (An s.) And which language still says cantaba? (Spanish, keeping the -b-.)

Chapter 282

A Story in Order

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can tell a short story in order, with prīmum, deinde, tum and postrēmō, and hold two things together with dum.

Complete LA-R282-a-story-in-order: I can tell a short story in order, with prīmum, deinde, tum and postrēmō, and hold two things together with dum.

282.1 prīmum, deinde, tum, postrēmō — the rungs of a story

Say "I came" and "I saw". (Vēnī. Vīdī.) The verb for "to win" is vincō, and its perfect is vīcī, "I won".

Suetonius reports that when Caesar celebrated his victory in Pontus, a placard carried three words: vēnī, vīdī, vīcī. Three events, three perfects, and not one joining word.

Grammar Lens: four rungs

Caesar could leave the order bare because three short perfects explain themselves. A longer story names its rungs, with four words you already own:

> Prīmum ad forum ambulāvī. — First I walked to the forum. Deinde amīcum vīdī. — Next I saw a friend. Tum in caupōnam intrāvimus. — Then we went into the inn.

Postrēmō domum ambulāvī. — Last of all I walked home.

Each rung carries a perfect, because each is an event.
Deinde and tum both come out as "then", and they are not twins. Deinde is "next", the following step. Tum is "then, at that moment": it points at a time, and the scene can stand there with it. Tum pluēbat, at that moment it was raining.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīmum is the neuter of prīmus, "first", standing alone as an adverb (Lewis & Short list it under primus): "as the first thing". Postrēmō comes from postrēmus, "last", too, though it is the ablative, "at the last", and deinde is built from dē and inde, "from there": from that point on.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- vēnī, vīdī, vīcī — three events, no joiners
- Prīmum ad forum ambulāvī. Deinde amīcum vīdī.
- Tum in caupōnam intrāvimus. Postrēmō domum ambulāvī.
- a rung with a scene on it — Tum pluēbat.
- Amīcī in caupōnam intrāvērunt et vīnum bibērunt. — then Amīca fābulam nārrāvit.
- your own morning in four rungs — prīmum, deinde, tum, postrēmō, with a perfect on each

Before you move on

"First", "next", "then", "lastly"? (Prīmum, deinde, tum, postrēmō.) Which "then" points at a moment and can hold a scene? (Tum.) Which tense goes on each rung? (The perfect: each is an event.) What did Caesar's three words say? (Vēnī, vīdī, vīcī: I came, I saw, I won.)

282.2 dum — while

Say "first I walked to the forum". (Prīmum ad forum ambulāvī.)
Then a scene: "it was raining". (Pluēbat.)

You'll want to know: dum

dum — "while". It opens a stretch of time, and something happens inside it:

> Dum in forō ambulant, amīcam vīdērunt. — While they were walking in the forum, they saw a friend.

The seeing is an event, so it is a perfect, vīdērunt. The walking is the stretch it happened in, and dum holds it open.

Grammar Lens: dum keeps the present

Listen to ambulant. The story is in the past, and the verb after dum is the present: "they walk". When dum means "while", a past story usually keeps the present after it, and English turns it into "were walking".

> Dum mercātōrēs pānem vendunt, amīca vēnit. — While the merchants were selling bread, my friend came.

Caesar writes it that way: dum haec geruntur, "while these things are being done", and then the event in the perfect (Lewis & Short quote it from his war in Gaul). In the main sentence, the scene still takes the imperfect: mercātōrēs pānem vendēbant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of dum is not settled. Lewis & Short connect it with diū, "for a long time", the word whose own lesson traced it to the root of diēs, "day"; EtymDB 2.1 traces dum to a Proto-Indo-European particle de*. Either way it is a small, old word, and its meaning has stayed "for the stretch of time that".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dum
- Dum in forō ambulant, amīcam vīdērunt.
- Dum mercātōrēs pānem vendunt, amīca vēnit.
- the scene without dum — Mercātōrēs pānem vendēbant.
- one of your own — Dum plus a present, then a perfect

Before you move on

What does dum mean? (While.) In a past story, which tense follows dum? (The present: dum ambulant.) And the event inside the stretch? (The perfect: vīdērunt.) Is the origin of dum settled? (No.)

282.3 (reading) — a rainy day, told in both pasts

Your first passage gave you forty-two words in a row, all in the present. This one is twice as long, and it happened yesterday.

Every word in it has come up before this lesson.

Read this

Herī māne caelum obscūrum erat, et pluēbat. Mārcus in vīllā sedēbat et librum legēbat. Subitō amīcus ad portam vēnit et clāmāvit: "Venī ad forum!" Prīmum Mārcus nōn volēbat, quia fessus erat. Deinde tamen vēnit, et ad forum ambulāvērunt.

Dum ambulant, amīcam vīdērunt, et amīca quoque vēnit. In forō mercātōrēs pānem et vīnum vendēbant et multum clāmābant. Tum amīcī in caupōnam intrāvērunt. In caupōnā calor erat. Ibi cēnāvērunt et vīnum bibērunt, et amīca fābulam nārrāvit. Postrēmō domum ambulāvērunt. Iam nōn pluēbat, caelum serēnum erat, et Mārcus laetus erat.

Read it: the passage once without stopping; do not translate as you go
Read it: the passage again, and sort every verb into one of two piles: the scene, or what happened

Why it's said this way

The events pile is the perfects: vēnit, clāmāvit, vēnit, ambulāvērunt, vīdērunt, vēnit, intrāvērunt, cēnāvērunt, bibērunt, nārrāvit, ambulāvērunt. Eleven things happened, and prīmum, deinde, tum and postrēmō keep them in order.
Everything else is scene: the dark sky, the rain, Marcus reading, the merchants shouting, the warmth of the inn. A story is mostly background.
And dum ambulant is a present inside a past story, the stretch of time the meeting happened in.

Your turn

- Say it: the passage aloud, once, without stopping

Before you move on

Why is legēbat in the imperfect? (The reading was already going on when the friend came: it is scene.)
Why is ambulant in the present? (It follows dum.)
How did the day end? (Iam nōn pluēbat: the rain had stopped, and Marcus was happy.)

282.4 Review — a story, told in order

Say Caesar's three words. (Vēnī, vīdī, vīcī.) Then the four rungs. (Prīmum, deinde, tum, postrēmō.)

What you've built

Two chapters, and you can nārrāre, tell a story. The scene in the imperfect, erat, pluēbat, sedēbat. The events in the perfect, one per rung, from prīmum to postrēmō. And dum with a present for the stretch an event happened in.

> Dum in forō ambulō, amīcum vīdī. Prīmum nōn clāmāvī, quia fessus eram. — While I was walking in the forum, I saw a friend. At first I did not call out, because I was tired.

In that last sentence the event is negative, nōn clāmāvī, and it is still an event; the tiredness around it is scene, fessus eram.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the rainy day in four rungs, from memory — prīmum, deinde, tum, postrēmō
- Dum in forō ambulō, amīcum vīdī.
- the day's last scene — Iam nōn pluēbat, et Mārcus laetus erat.
- a day of your own: one line of scene, then three events in order

Before you move on

Which rung comes last? (Postrēmō.) Which tense follows dum in a past story? (The present.) Which tense goes on each rung? (The perfect.) And what did Marcus do first, when his friend called? (He did not want to come: nōn volēbat.)

Chapter 283

What I Think

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I think, with putō and an accusative and infinitive, and draw a conclusion with ergō.
>
> Complete LA-R283-what-i-think: I can say what I think, with putō and an accusative and infinitive, and draw a conclusion with ergō.

283.1 putō — I think that ...

Say "I think", the verb of turning things over. (Cōgitō.) Now "I believe". (Crēdō.)

The chapter on cōgitō named a lighter verb beside it, closer to "I reckon". This lesson puts it to work.

You'll want to know: putō

putō, putāre — "to think, to reckon, to suppose". It is the everyday verb of opinion: cōgitō is thinking hard; putō is what you think.

> Ita putō. — I think so; that is how I reckon it.

Its perfect is regular: putāvī, I thought.

Grammar Lens: no word for "that"

English says "I think that my friend is ill". Latin has no word there. It puts the person in the accusative and the verb in the infinitive:

> Putō amīcum aegrum esse. — I think my friend is ill.

Word for word, "I think friend-um to be ill". The -um of amīcum marks who the thought is about, and esse carries the verb. Even the adjective joins the accusative: aegrum, not aeger.

> Crēdō tē fessum esse. — I believe you are tired. Putō pluere. — I think it is raining.

Pluere has no subject at all, as pluit had none. This pattern, accusative and infinitive, carries what someone thinks, believes or says all through Latin.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The cōgitō lesson told the story: putō first meant "to prune", then "to settle an account", then "to think" (Lewis & Short trace it to a root meaning "to clean"). You own two of its compounds already: computō, "to calculate", is com- + putō, reckoning together, and disputō, "to discuss", began in the merchants' sense of going over a sum item by item.
The Roman writer Aulus Gellius made a point of it. He read the word for "I think" as a pruner's word: cutting away the false opinions until what is left is true (Lewis & Short quote the passage under puto).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- putō — then Ita putō.
- Putō amīcum aegrum esse.
- Crēdō tē fessum esse.
- Putō pluere.
- Herī putāvī amīcum venīre. — Yesterday I thought my friend was coming

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I think my friend is ill"? (Putō amīcum aegrum esse.) Which case does the person go into? (The accusative.) And the verb? (The infinitive.) What did putō first mean? (To prune.)

283.2 meā sententiā, mihi vidētur — in my opinion

Say "I think my friend is ill". (Putō amīcum aegrum esse.)

Putō turns the whole sentence into what you think. Latin also has ways to leave the sentence as it is and hang the opinion on it.

You'll want to know: meā sententiā

meā sententiā — "in my opinion". You own sententia, "an opinion"; this is its ablative with meā, "my": word for word, "by my opinion".

> Meā sententiā, Rōma pulchra est. — In my opinion, Rome is beautiful.

Nothing else in the sentence changes: Rōma stays nominative, est stays as it was. Plautus says it, and so does Cicero.

You'll want to know: mihi vidētur

mihi vidētur — "it seems to me". You own videor, "to seem"; mihi is "to me".

> Mārcus mihi fessus vidētur. — Marcus seems tired to me.
> Pluit, ut mihi vidētur. — It is raining, as far as I can tell.

Marcus is the subject, so fessus stays nominative. And ut mihi vidētur, "as it seems to me", is a phrase Cicero tucks into the middle of a sentence.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sententia is built on sentiō, "to feel, to think" (Lewis & Short), so meā sententiā is "by what I feel about it". vidētur is the passive of videō, "to see": "it is seen". So mihi vidētur is, word for word, "it is seen, to me", which is how a Roman said "it seems to me". Videō is inherited from Proto-Indo-European weyd-*, "to see" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- meā sententiā, then mihi vidētur
- Meā sententiā, Rōma pulchra est.
- Mārcus mihi fessus vidētur.
- the same opinion three ways — Putō Rōmam pulchram esse. Meā sententiā, Rōma pulchra est. Rōma mihi pulchra vidētur.

Before you move on

"In my opinion"? (Meā sententiā.) "It seems to me"? (Mihi vidētur.) After putō, Rōma becomes what? (Rōmam, with esse.) After meā sententiā? (It stays Rōma.)

283.3 ergō, itaque, igitur — and so

The cōgitō lesson gave you a famous sentence. Say it. (Cōgitō, ergō sum. I think, therefore I am.) The sentence is Descartes', written long after Rome, but every word of it is Latin.

You also own itaque, "and so", and igitur, "therefore". This lesson sorts all three.

Grammar Lens: what happened next, and what follows

itaque tells a story forward. It usually stands first, and what comes after it is the next thing that happened, because of the last:

> Pluēbat; itaque in vīllā mānsimus. — It was raining, and so we stayed in the farmhouse.

igitur and ergō draw a conclusion. They belong to an argument more than to a story. In Cicero's prose igitur usually comes second, after the first word: Fessus igitur es. — So you are tired.
ergō, "therefore, so", often stands first, and it has the sound of someone reaching the point: Fessus es; ergō dormī. — You are tired; so sleep.
So, as a leaning and not a law: a story's and so is mostly itaque; an argument's therefore is mostly igitur or ergō. Itaque can carry an argument too, and Lewis & Short note that the historians Sallust and Livy often open a sentence with igitur.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Before ergō meant "therefore", it meant "on account of", and it followed a genitive: virtūtis ergō, "on account of courage", an old formula for decorating a soldier (Lewis & Short). Lewis & Short build the word from ex, "out of", and a root meaning "to stretch upward", but the origin is not settled. The sense moved from "on account of this" to "so, then".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Cōgitō, ergō sum.
- a story — Pluēbat; itaque in vīllā mānsimus.
- an argument — Fessus igitur es. — then Fessus es; ergō dormī.
- Meā sententiā, amīcus aeger est; ergō nōn venit.

Before you move on

Which "so" mostly carries a story forward? (Itaque.) Which two mostly draw a conclusion? (Igitur and ergō.) Where does igitur usually stand in Cicero? (Second, after the first word.) And what did ergō mean before "therefore"? (On account of, after a genitive.)

283.4 Review — what I think, and what follows

> Say "I think it is raining". (Putō pluere.) Then "I believe you are tired". (Crēdō tē fessum esse.)

What you've built

Three lessons, and an opinion has three shapes. putō with the accusative and infinitive, which turns the sentence into what you think. meā sententiā, which leaves it alone. And mihi vidētur, "it seems to me", with the thing that seems as its subject. Then ergō to draw the conclusion, beside itaque, which leans to stories, and igitur, which leans to arguments.

> Meā sententiā, Mārcus fessus est; ergō dormit. — In my opinion Marcus is tired; so he is sleeping.

The opinion leaves Mārcus nominative. Say it with putō instead, and he turns accusative: Putō Mārcum fessum esse.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- one opinion three ways — Putō Rōmam pulchram esse. Meā sententiā, Rōma pulchra est. Rōma mihi pulchra vidētur.
- Meā sententiā, Mārcus fessus est; ergō dormit.
- a story's "and so" — Pluēbat; itaque in vīllā mānsimus.
- an opinion of your own about today's weather, with putō, then a conclusion with ergō

Before you move on

"In my opinion"? (Meā sententiā.) "It seems to me"? (Mihi vidētur.) What did putō first mean? (To prune.) After putō, which case is the person in? (The accusative.) And from the last chapter: what does dum mean? (While.) Which rung comes first? (Prīmum.)

Chapter 284

What You Should Do, and Why

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give advice with dēbēs, and explain why with quia and quod.
>
> Complete LA-R284-advice-and-reasons: I can give advice with dēbēs, and explain why with quia and quod.

284.1 dēbēs — what you should do

You own dēbeō, "I have to, I must; I owe", and quiēscō, "to rest". Say "I have to work". (Labōrāre dēbeō.)

Turn the same verb on a friend, and it becomes advice.

Grammar Lens: dēbēs + infinitive

> Aeger es; quiēscere dēbēs. — You are ill; you should rest. Nōn dēbēs tantum labōrāre. — You shouldn't work so much.

Dēbēs is the second person, "you must", and Latin uses it for what English softens into "you should". The infinitive carries the advice, and nōn in front turns it round.
oportet, "it is right, one ought", says the same thing without pointing at anyone, and it takes the accusative and infinitive you met with putō:

> Oportet tē quiēscere. — You ought to rest.

Grammar Lens: dēbēbās, you should have

English moves the past onto the infinitive: "you should have come". Latin moves it onto dēbeō instead, and keeps the plain infinitive:

> Herī venīre dēbēbās. — You should have come yesterday.

Dēbēbās is the imperfect, "you were bound to", and the sentence carries the regret: the coming was owed, and it did not happen. The perfect does the same work, venīre dēbuistī, and so does oportet in the perfect: oportuit tē venīre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēbeō is contracted from dē, "away from", and habeō, "to have" (Lewis & Short), as its own lesson said: to have something that belongs to someone else. A debt, dēbitum, is what you hold and must give back; advice with dēbēs treats the right action as something owed.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Aeger es; quiēscere dēbēs.
- Nōn dēbēs tantum labōrāre.
- Oportet tē quiēscere.
- Herī venīre dēbēbās.
- Fessus es; ergō quiēscere dēbēs.

Before you move on

"You should rest"? (Quiēscere dēbēs.) "You shouldn't work so much"? (Nōn dēbēs tantum labōrāre.) "You should have come yesterday"? (Herī venīre dēbēbās.) Which verb carries the past in that last one? (Dēbēbās, not the infinitive.)

284.2 cūr? — quia, quod, nam: explaining

Ask "why?". (Cūr?) Answer with "because". (Quia.)

You also own explicō, "to explain", and causa, "a reason".

Grammar Lens: the answer to cūr

> Cūr herī nōn vēnistī? — Why didn't you come yesterday? Nōn vēnī, quia aeger eram. — I didn't come, because I was ill.

Both pasts: the not-coming is an event, nōn vēnī; the illness is the scene behind it, aeger eram. After quia the verb is an ordinary one, in whatever tense the facts need.
nam, "for", hangs the reason on afterwards, as a second sentence: Nōn vēnī. Nam aeger eram. And explicō names what you are doing: Causam explicō, I am explaining the reason.

You'll want to know: quod, because

The four lines you wrote with joiners asked you for quia, because quod has two jobs. Now you meet its second one as a reader:

> Gaudeō quod vēnistī. — I am glad that you came, glad because you came.

After a verb of feeling, gaudeō, doleō, quod gives the cause. Where a noun stands before it and quod points back to it, it is usually "which"; where no noun waits for it, it is usually "because" or "that". Writing, quia is still the safe choice; reading, expect both.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

explicō is ex, "out", with plicō, "to fold" (EtymDB 2.1), as its own lesson said: to explain is to unfold. A Roman book was a volūmen, a roll, and Cicero writes volūmen explicāre for opening one (Lewis & Short). An explanation opens out what was rolled up inside the question.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Cūr herī nōn vēnistī? — then answer: Nōn vēnī, quia aeger eram.
- the same reason with nam — Nōn vēnī. Nam aeger eram.
- Gaudeō quod vēnistī.
- Quiēscere dēbēs, quia fessus es.
- a reason of your own for something you did not do yesterday

Before you move on

"Why didn't you come?" (Cūr nōn vēnistī?) "Because I was ill"? (Quia aeger eram.) Which word adds the reason as a second sentence? (Nam.) In gaudeō quod vēnistī, what does quod mean? (Because, or "that": no noun waits for it.)

284.3 Review — what you should do, and why

Say "you should rest". (Quiēscere dēbēs.) Then "because you are tired". (Quia fessus es.)

What you've built

Two chapters, and you can give reasons. An opinion: putō with the accusative and infinitive, meā sententiā, mihi vidētur. Advice: dēbēs and an infinitive, and dēbēbās for what should have happened. A reason: quia, nam, and the quod that follows a feeling. A conclusion: ergō.

> Meā sententiā, quiēscere dēbēs, quia aeger es. Herī labōrāre nōn dēbēbās. — In my opinion you should rest, because you are ill. You shouldn't have worked yesterday.

Four pieces in two sentences: the opinion, the advice, the reason, and the regret.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Meā sententiā, quiēscere dēbēs, quia aeger es.

- Herī labōrāre nōn dēbēbās.
- Cūr nōn vēnistī? — Nōn vēnī. Nam aeger eram.
- Putō tē fessum esse; ergō quiēscere dēbēs.
- advice of your own to a friend, with its reason

Before you move on

"You shouldn't work so much"? (Nōn dēbēs tantum labōrāre.) "You should have come"? (Venīre dēbēbās.) "I am glad that you came"? (Gaudeō quod vēnistī.) "In my opinion"? (Meā sententiā.)

Chapter 285

Asking the Way

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask the way politely, follow directions to the right, to the left and straight on, and talk about a journey.
>
> Complete LA-R285-asking-the-way: I can ask the way politely, follow directions to the right, to the left and straight on, and talk about a journey.

285.1 quā viā — asking the way

Ask "where is the forum?" (Ubi est forum?)

That asks for a place. A traveller standing at a crossroads needs something else: not where it is, but which way to go.

You'll want to know: via, viae via, viae — "a road, a way, a street". It is a feminine noun like porta.

You own quā, "by which way", and its own lesson said that viā, "road", was understood inside it. Now say it out loud:

> Quā viā ad forum? — By which road to the forum?

Viā is the ablative, "by road": the road you travel along.

Grammar Lens: asking politely

A stranger deserves a softer opening. Put two pieces in front:

> Quaesō, dīc mihi: quā viā ad thermās? — Please, tell me: which way to the baths.

Dīc is "tell!", the command of dīcō, and it is short: no ending at all.
Mihi, "to me", you know from ignōsce mihi.
Ad plus the accusative is where you are heading: ad forum, ad thermās.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

via is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wegh-* (EtymDB 2.1), the root the vehō lesson named, "to carry, to convey"; Lewis & Short put the two words together. A road is where things are carried. English way is usually given as a cousin, and English via, "by way of", is this word's ablative, taken over whole.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- via, viae
- Quā viā ad forum?
- Quaesō, dīc mihi: quā viā ad thermās?

Before you move on

Say "a road", then "by which road to the forum". (Via. Quā viā ad forum.) Say "tell me!" (Dīc mihi!) Which verb you own is via related to? (Vehō, to carry by cart.)

285.2 rēctā viā, ad dextram — following the directions

Ask the way to the forum, politely. (Quaesō, dīc mihi: quā viā ad forum?) And say "right", then "left". (Dexter. Sinister.)

Grammar Lens: three directions

> Rēctā viā ī. — Go straight on. Deinde ad dextram. — Then to the right. Tum ad sinistram. — Then to the left.

ī is the command of eō: "go!", a whole sentence in one long vowel. Rēctā viā is "by the straight road", the ablative of via with rēctus agreeing.
ad dextram and ad sinistram are "towards the right" and "towards the left": dextram and sinistram are the feminine accusative, because manum, "hand", is understood. Where something already is, Latin says dextrā, "on the right", and sinistrā, "on the left".

> Thermae sunt dextrā, iūxtā pontem. — The baths are on the right, next to the bridge.

Why it's said this way

Roman comedy has a scene built on exactly this. In Terence's Adelphoe, a slave gets rid of an old man by sending him across town: ad sinistram, then ad dextram, along hāc rēctā plateā, "this straight street", to a place where the person he wants is not. Lewis & Short cite ad dexteram, the longer spelling, from Plautus and from Terence's Andria. A Roman audience laughed because they gave and got directions this way every day.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dextram is the adjective dexter with manum left out: Lewis & Short take dextra, "the right", as dextra manus, "the right hand", with the noun understood. The dexter lesson traced the word itself to Proto-Indo-European deks-*, "right", and named Greek dexios as a cousin.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Rēctā viā ī.
- Prīmum rēctā viā ī; deinde ad dextram.

- Tum ad sinistram. Ibi est forum.
- Thermae sunt dextrā, iūxtā pontem.
- directions of your own, from your door to the nearest shop

Before you move on

"Go straight on"? (Rēctā viā ī.) "To the left"? (Ad sinistram.) "On the right"? (Dextrā.) What word is understood inside ad dextram? (Manum, hand.)

285.3 iter, itineris — a journey

Say "go straight on". (Rēctā viā ī.) Then "we go". (Īmus.)

You'll want to know: iter, itineris

iter, itineris — "a journey; a route, a way". It is neuter, and the genitive shows the stem every other form is built on: itiner-.

> Iter longum erat. — The journey was long. In itinere — on the way, on the journey

Via is the road under your feet; iter is the going along it, from the start to the arrival.

You'll want to know: iter faciō

To travel, a Roman made a journey: iter faciō. Caesar writes it of whole armies marching through a province.

> Rōmam iter faciō. — I am travelling to Rome. Herī iter fēcī. — Yesterday I made a journey.

Rōmam needs no ad: a city's name points the way by itself, as domum does. Fēcī is the perfect of faciō, a stem learned on its own.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iter is built on īre, "to go" (Lewis & Short), the one-vowel verb whose lesson traced it to Proto-Indo-European $*h_1ey$-: a journey is a going.

Its stem itiner- gives English itinerary, a plan of the route, and itinerant, someone who lives on the road.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- iter, itineris
- Iter longum erat.
- Rōmam iter faciō.
- Herī iter fēcī.
- the road and the journey — via, then iter

Before you move on

What does iter, itineris mean? (A journey; a route.) How does a Roman say "I travel"? (Iter faciō.) And which verb is inside iter? (Īre, to go.)

285.4 Review — at the crossroads

Say "a road", then "a journey". (Via. Iter.)

What you've built

Three lessons, and you can find your way through a Roman town. The question: quaesō, dīc mihi: quā viā ad …? The answer: rēctā viā ī, ad dextram, ad sinistram, and dextrā or sinistrā for where a place already stands. And the whole of it: iter faciō, I am on a journey.

> — Quaesō, dīc mihi: quā viā ad thermās? — Prīmum rēctā viā ī. Deinde ad sinistram. Thermae sunt dextrā, iūxtā pontem.

The rungs of a story, prīmum and deinde, are the rungs of a set of directions too.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the question — Quaesō, dīc mihi: quā viā ad thermās?
- the answer — Prīmum rēctā viā ī. Deinde ad sinistram.
- Thermae sunt dextrā, iūxtā pontem.
- advice for the road — Rēctā viā īre dēbēs, quia via longa est.
- the advice too late — Viam rogāre dēbēbās. — You should have asked the way
- ask the way to the forum, then give the answer yourself

Before you move on

"Which way to the baths?" (Quā viā ad thermās?) "Go straight on"? (Rēctā viā ī.) "To the right"? (Ad dextram.) "I am travelling to Rome"? (Rōmam iter faciō.)

Chapter 286

By Sea

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can book a passage on a ship, pay the fare, and report that something went wrong on the way.
>
> Complete LA-R286-by-sea: I can book a passage on a ship, pay the fare, and report that something went wrong on the way.

286.1 nāvis, nāvis — a ship

> Say "I am making a journey". (Iter faciō.) Then "to sail", and "a sailor". (Nāvigāre. Nauta.)
>
> A long Roman journey often went by sea. The word for what the sailor sails has been hiding inside nāvigāre all along.

You'll want to know: nāvis, nāvis nāvis, nāvis — "a ship". It is feminine, and its accusative is nāvem.

> In nāvem ascendō. — I go on board the ship. Nāvis solvit. — The ship sets sail.

You own ascendō, "to climb, to go up", and Romans went up into a ship. And you own solvō, "to untie": a ship that solvit has cast off its ropes from the shore.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nāvis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European néh$_2$us*, "boat" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek naus, "ship", is a cousin (Lewis & Short set them side by side). From the Latin come English naval, navy and the nave of a church, and nāvigō is nāvis with agō, "to drive" (Lewis & Short): to drive a ship.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nāvis, nāvis
- In nāvem ascendō.
- Nāvis solvit.
- Herī nāvis solvit, et diū nāvigāvimus.
- the journey and the ship — iter, then nāvis

Before you move on

What does nāvis, nāvis mean? (A ship.) Say "I go on board". (In nāvem ascendō.) Say "the ship sets sail". (Nāvis solvit.) Which Greek word is its cousin? (Naus.)

286.2 naulum, naulī — the fare

Say "I go on board the ship". (In nāvem ascendō.)

Romans had no tickets. A passenger found a ship going his way and paid its master a fare.

You'll want to know: naulum, naulī

naulum, naulī — "a fare, passage money". It is neuter, like pretium, "a price", which is the word for what it costs.

Naulum solvō. — I pay the fare. Decem dēnāriōs solvī. — I paid ten denarii.

Solvō does both jobs of this chapter: it unties a ship from the shore, and it pays what you owe.

The man you pay is the magister nāvis, "the master of the ship": the same magister as a teacher, the one in charge.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

naulum was borrowed from Greek naulon, "passage money" (Lewis & Short), a word usually connected with naus, "ship", the Greek cousin of nāvis. The satirist Juvenal uses it, and so do the Roman law books, for the money owed to a ship; the law books also name the magister nāvis, the ship's master (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- naulum, naulī
- Naulum solvō.
- Prīmum naulum solvī; deinde in nāvem ascendī.
- Magister nāvis decem dēnāriōs accēpit. — The ship's master took ten denarii
- on land — raeda, a travelling carriage — then by sea: nāvis and naulum

Before you move on

What does naulum, naulī mean? (A fare, for a ship.) Say "I pay the fare". (Naulum solvō.) Who takes it? (The magister nāvis.) Which language lent Latin the word? (Greek.)

286.3 āmittō — something went wrong

Ask "what happened?" (Quid accidit?) Then say "I paid the fare". (Naulum solvī.)

On a journey, the answer to quid accidit is often bad news.

You'll want to know: āmittō, āmittere

āmittō, āmittere — "to lose, to let slip". Its perfect is āmīsī, "I have lost".

> Sarcinam āmīsī! — I have lost my pack! Occāsiōnem āmīsī. — I let the chance slip.

You own perdō, "to lose", too. The two overlap, but they lean different ways. Perdō leans to losing by wasting or wrecking: money thrown away, a thing ruined. Āmittō leans to losing by letting go: it slipped away from you.

Grammar Lens: reporting the problem

A problem on the road is an event, so it comes in the perfect:

> — Quid accidit? — What happened? — Nāvis iam discessit! — The ship has already left!

Discessit is the perfect of discēdō, "to go away", and iam, "already", makes it the missed boat. Answer quid accidit with what happened, then say what it means for you: Sarcinam āmīsī; nummōs nōn habeō. I have lost my pack; I have no money.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

āmittō is built from ab, "away", and mittō, "to send" (EtymDB 2.1; Lewis & Short): to send away from yourself. In early Latin it meant "to let someone go", and from there "to let a thing slip", and so "to lose". Its perfect āmīsī keeps the perfect of mittō, mīsī.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āmittō, āmittere — then āmīsī
- Sarcinam āmīsī!
- Quid accidit? — Nāvis iam discessit!
- Naulum solvī, sed nāvis iam discessit.
- a problem of your own on a journey, and what it means for you

Before you move on

What does āmittō, āmittere mean? (To lose, to let slip.) Say "I have lost my pack". (Sarcinam āmīsī.) Say "the ship has already left". (Nāvis iam discessit.) Which verb loses by wasting? (Perdō.)

286.4 Review — a journey by sea

Say "a ship", then "the fare". (Nāvis. Naulum.)

What you've built

Two chapters, and a whole journey. The way through the town, quā viā …, rēctā viā, ad dextram. The ship, the fare and the master who takes it. And the trouble: quid accidit?, answered in the perfect.

> Iter Rōmam faciēbam. Prīmum naulum solvī. Deinde sarcinam āmīsī. Postrēmō nāvis discessit! — I was making a journey to Rome. First I paid the fare. Then I lost my pack. And last of all, the ship left!

One line of scene, faciēbam, and three events.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Quaesō, dīc mihi: quā viā ad nāvem?
- the answer — Rēctā viā ī; deinde ad dextram.
- Naulum solvō; deinde in nāvem ascendō.
- Quid accidit? — Sarcinam āmīsī!
- the whole journey in four lines: a scene, then three events

Before you move on

Say "I pay the fare". (Naulum solvō.) Say "I have lost my pack". (Sarcinam āmīsī.) Ask "what happened?" (Quid accidit?) Say "I am making a journey". (Iter faciō.)

Chapter 287

How It Felt

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how I felt, with laetus eram, and what I hope for and long to do.
>
> Complete LA-R287-how-it-felt: I can say how I felt, with laetus eram, and what I hope for and long to do.

287.1 laetus eram — how it felt

Say "happy", then "sad". (Laetus. Trīstis.) Then "I was", the open past. (Eram.)

Grammar Lens: the feeling agrees with who felt it

A feeling in a story is a state, so it usually takes the imperfect, and the adjective matches the person who felt it:

> Laetus eram. — I was happy (a man speaking). Laeta eram. — I was happy (a woman speaking). Sollicitī erāmus. — We were worried. Trīstis erat. — He was sad, or she was: trīstis serves both.

Anxius, sollicitus and īrātus follow laetus: -us for a man, -a for a woman, -ī for several. Trīstis has one form for a man and a woman, and trīstēs for several.

Why it's said this way

The cause of a feeling takes the quod you met as a reader, and here both verbs are scene:

> Laeta eram, quod caelum serēnum erat. — I was happy, because the sky was clear. Trīstis eram, quod pluēbat. — I was sad, because it was raining.

Latin can also put the feeling in a verb: gaudēbam, "I was glad", beside laetus eram; timēbam, "I was afraid". The adjective describes the person; the verb tells what the person was doing inside.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Two of these feelings are bodily, and their own lessons said how. anxius is built on the verb for "to squeeze, to choke" (Lewis & Short): worry as a tight throat. sollicitus is built from sollus, "whole", and cieō, "to stir up" (Lewis & Short): stirred through and through. English took them over as anxious and solicitous.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Laetus eram. — then a woman says it: Laeta eram.
- Sollicitī erāmus.
- Laeta eram, quod caelum serēnum erat.
- Trīstis eram, quod nāvis nōn veniēbat. — I was sad, because the ship was not coming
- In nāve īrātus erat, et timēbam.
- how you felt yesterday, and why

Before you move on

A woman says "I was happy". (Laeta eram.) "We were worried"? (Sollicitī erāmus.) Which feeling word has one form for a man and a woman? (Trīstis.) Which tense does a feeling in a story usually take? (The imperfect: it is a state.)

287.2 spērō — I hope

Say "I was happy". (Laetus eram.) Then the noun for "hope". (Spēs.)

A feeling looks back. A hope looks forward, and Latin has a verb for it built on the noun you own.

You'll want to know: spērō spērō, spērāre — "to hope". It takes three shapes.

> Pācem spērō. — I hope for peace. Ut spērō, valēs. — As I hope, you are well. Spērō tē valēre. — I hope you are well.

The first hopes for a thing, in the accusative. The second tucks ut spērō, "as I hope", into a sentence; Cicero writes it in his letters. The third is the accusative and infinitive of putō: tē, then valēre.

When the hope is about later, Latin prefers an infinitive made for the future, a form still to come. For now, hope for things, and for how things are.

Grammar Lens: cupiō, volō + infinitive

What you long to do goes with cupiō, "I long", or volō, "I want", and a plain infinitive:

> Rōmam vidēre cupiō. — I long to see Rome. Mercātor esse volō. — I want to be a merchant.

Mercātor stays nominative: it is the same person as the one who wants. And optō, "to wish for, to choose", hopes for a thing, like spērō: nāvem optō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spērō is the verb of spēs, "hope", and EtymDB 2.1 traces it, like the noun, to Proto-Indo-European speh$_1$-*, "to prosper, to turn out well". Put dē-, "away", in front and you have the verb for "to give up hope"

(Lewis & Short), which reached English as despair and desperate.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- spērō, spērāre
- Pācem spērō. — then Spērō tē valēre.
- Ut spērō, valēs.
- Rōmam vidēre cupiō.
- Nauta esse volō, et nāvem optō.
- one thing you long to do, with cupiō

Before you move on

Say "I hope you are well". (Spērō tē valēre.) Say "I long to see Rome". (Rōmam vidēre cupiō.) Which English word grew from this verb's family? (Despair.)

287.3 Review — how it felt, and what you hope for

A woman says "I was worried". (Sollicita eram.) Then say "I hope for peace". (Pācem spērō.)

What you've built

Two lessons, and an experience has a before and an after. Before: a feeling with eram, agreeing with the one who felt it, and its cause with quod. After: spērō for what you hope for, and cupiō or volō with an infinitive for what you long to do.

> Sarcinam āmīsī, et trīstis eram. Sed nunc laetus sum, et Rōmam vidēre cupiō. — I lost my pack, and I was sad. But now I am happy, and I long to see Rome.

An event, a feeling in the past, a feeling now, and a wish.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Laeta eram, quod caelum serēnum erat.
- Quid accidit? — Nāvis discessit, et sollicitī erāmus.
- Spērō tē valēre.
- Sarcinam āmīsī, et trīstis eram. Sed nunc Rōmam vidēre cupiō.
- a day that went wrong, how you felt, and what you hope for now

Before you move on

Say "we were worried". (Sollicitī erāmus.) Say "I hope you are well". (Spērō tē valēre.) Say "I long to see Rome". (Rōmam vidēre cupiō.) Say "I have lost my pack". (Sarcinam āmīsī.)

Chapter 288

Bigger Than, and How Long

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can compare two things with -ior and quam, and say how long something lasted and how long ago it was.
>
> Complete LA-R288-bigger-and-how-long: I can compare two things with -ior and quam, and say how long something lasted and how long ago it was.

288.1 longior quam — bigger than, faster than

Say "long", then "fast". (Longus. Celer.)

An experience is often a comparison: the road was longer than you thought, the ship faster than the cart.

Grammar Lens: -ior and quam

Take the stem of the adjective and add -ior, "more": long-us, longior, longer. quam is "than":

> Nāvis celerior est quam raeda. — A ship is faster than a carriage.

For a neuter word the ending is -ius:

> Mare altius est quam flūmen. — The sea is deeper than the river. Iter longius erat quam putāvī. — The journey was longer than I thought.

Mare and iter are neuter, so altius, longius. Nāvis is feminine, and -ior serves a man or a woman alike: celerior.
Facilis gives facilior, easier. An adjective with a vowel before -us, like idōneus, usually takes magis, "more", in front instead: magis idōneus quam, more suitable than.

You'll want to know: maior, minor, melior

Three common adjectives have a comparative of their own, learned whole:

> magnus — maior, bigger. parvus — minor, smaller. bonus, good — melior, better.
>
> Rōma maior est quam oppidum meum. — Rome is bigger than my town.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The -ior ending is inherited: EtymDB 2.1 builds maior from the root of magnus, Proto-Indo-European mégh₂s*, "great", with a comparative ending -yos*. melior is traced to a Proto-Indo-European melyos*, "better", with no link to bonus at all, which is why it has to be learned whole. English took major, minor and, through French, ameliorate.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- longus, longior; celer, celerior; facilis, facilior
- Nāvis celerior est quam raeda.
- Mare altius est quam flūmen.
- maior, minor, melior
- Rōma maior est quam oppidum meum.
- two things you know, compared with quam

Before you move on

Say "longer". (Longior.) Say "than". (Quam.) Say "bigger", "smaller", "better". (Maior, minor, melior.) Why is it altius with mare? (Mare is neuter.)

288.2 abhinc — ago, and for how long

Say "for a long time". (Diū.) Then "a year". (Annus.)

Diū says long without saying how long. Latin can count it out, and the case it counts in is the accusative.

Grammar Lens: the accusative of how long

Trēs annōs Rōmae habitāvī. — I lived in Rome for three years. Duās hōrās ambulāvimus. — We walked for two hours.

No word for "for": the stretch of time stands in the accusative, annōs, hōrās, and the verb says what filled it. Duās is duo agreeing with hōrās.

You'll want to know: abhinc abhinc — "ago". It counts back from now, and the count goes in the accusative too:

Abhinc trēs annōs Rōmam vēnī. — I came to Rome three years ago. Abhinc decem diēs nāvis solvit. — The ship sailed ten days ago.

Put the two together and a life has a shape: abhinc for when it began, the accusative for how long it lasted. Cicero uses abhinc with the accusative in his speeches and letters (Lewis & Short).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

abhinc is built from ab, "from", and hinc, "from here, from this point" (EtymDB 2.1), and hinc in turn comes from hīc, "here". So the word is "from this point", counted backwards into the past. Lewis & Short note that some early writers also used it forwards, "from now on", a sense that did not last.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- abhinc
- Trēs annōs Rōmae habitāvī.
- Abhinc trēs annōs Rōmam vēnī.
- Duās hōrās ambulāvimus; iter longius erat quam putāvī.
- how long you have lived where you live, and when you came

Before you move on

What does abhinc mean? (Ago.) Say "three years ago". (Abhinc trēs annōs.) Say "for two hours". (Duās hōrās.) Which case counts the time? (The accusative.)

288.3 Review — what it was like

Say "the sea is deeper than the river". (Mare altius est quam flūmen.)

What you've built

Two chapters, and an experience can be told whole. How it felt, with eram and quod. What you hope for, with spērō and cupiō. What was bigger, faster or better, with -ior, quam, maior, minor and melior. And time counted out: the accusative for how long, abhinc for how long ago.

> Abhinc duōs annōs Rōmam vēnī. Decem diēs ibi mānsī. Rōma maior erat quam putāvī, et laetus eram. — I came to Rome two years ago. I stayed there ten days. Rome was bigger than I thought, and I was happy.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Abhinc duōs annōs Rōmam vēnī.

- Decem diēs ibi mānsī.
- Rōma maior erat quam putāvī, et laetus eram.
- Iterum Rōmam vidēre cupiō, et spērō tē valēre.
- a place you have been: when, for how long, and what was bigger or better than you expected

Before you move on

Say "two years ago". (Abhinc duōs annōs.) Say "for ten days". (Decem diēs.) Say "better". (Melior.) A woman says "I was happy". (Laeta eram.)

Chapter 289

If

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can make a real condition with sī and nisi, and say that something depends on something else.
>
> Complete LA-R289-if: I can make a real condition with sī and nisi, and say that something depends on something else.

289.1 sī — if

Your very first politeness gave you sīs, a squeezed sī vīs, "if you wish". And you own nisi, "unless".

Both have the word for "if" inside them. Now it stands on its own.

You'll want to know: sī sī — "if". It opens the condition, and the condition usually comes first:

> Sī vīs, ambulāmus. — If you like, we'll go for a walk. Sī pluit, nōn ambulō. — If it rains, I don't go walking.

nisi, "unless, if not", opens the same slot the other way round:

> Nisi pluit, ambulō. — Unless it rains, I go walking.

Sī nōn also exists, and it puts the weight on the nōn. Nisi is the everyday way to say "unless".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sī is inherited, usually traced to a small Proto-Indo-European word swe* (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short derive it from a pronoun stem and record an older spelling, seī. The details are not settled. nisi, as its own lesson said, is ne, "not", in front of sī.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sī, then nisi
- Sī vīs, ambulāmus.
- Sī pluit, nōn ambulō.
- Nisi pluit, ambulō.
- Sī vīs, iter Rōmam facimus.

Before you move on

Say "if". (Sī.) Say "unless". (Nisi.) What is sīs squeezed from? (Sī vīs, if you wish.) And where does the sī clause usually stand? (First.)

289.2 sī pluit — a condition that may well be true

Say "if it rains, I don't go walking". (Sī pluit, nōn ambulō.)

That is a real condition: it may well rain, and if it does, the second half follows. Latin keeps both halves plain.

Grammar Lens: ordinary verbs on both sides

> Sī pluit, in vīllā manēmus. — If it rains, we stay in the farmhouse.

Each half has the tense the facts need. A real condition about a past event takes the perfect, as any event does; a past scene would take the imperfect:

> Sī herī in forō fuistī, amīcum vīdistī. — If you were in the forum yesterday, you saw my friend.

The speaker does not know whether you were there. If you were, the seeing follows. Nothing in the verbs is pretending.

Why it's said this way

The second half can be a command, or the dēbēs of advice:

> Sī fessus es, quiēsce. — If you are tired, rest. Sī aeger es, quiēscere dēbēs. — If you are ill, you should rest.

Quiēsce is the command of quiēscō: the stem with -e, like ignōsce in ignōsce mihi.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Sī pluit, in vīllā manēmus.
- Sī herī in forō fuistī, amīcum vīdistī.
- Sī fessus es, quiēsce.
- Sī aeger es, quiēscere dēbēs.
- a real condition about tomorrow's weather, and what you do if it comes true

Before you move on

Say "if it rains, we stay in the farmhouse". (Sī pluit, in vīllā manēmus.) Which tense goes after sī for a real past event? (The perfect, like any event.) Say "if you are tired, rest". (Sī fessus es, quiēsce.)

289.3 pendet ex — it depends

> You own pendeō, "to hang". Say "if it rains, we stay in the farmhouse". (Sī pluit, in vīllā manēmus.)

> Asked whether you will walk tomorrow, the honest answer is often neither yes nor no.

You'll want to know: pendet ex

pendet ex — "it depends on", word for word "it hangs from". ex is "out of, from", and the thing it hangs from goes in the ablative:

> Tōtum ex tempestāte pendet. — It all depends on the weather.

Cicero says it of hope: spēs pendet ex fortūnā, hope hangs on fortune (Lewis & Short quote it under pendeo). English "depend" is the same picture, dē-pendēre, to hang down from.

You'll want to know: in tuā potestāte est

When it depends on the person you are talking to:

> In tuā potestāte est. — It is up to you; it is in your power.

You own potestās, "power, the ability to act"; in tuā potestāte is "in your power". Cicero, writing about fate, asks what is in nostrā potestāte, in our power.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pendeō, as its own lesson said, is the intransitive partner of pendō, "to weigh, to hang up", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)pend-, "to stretch, to pull" (EtymDB 2.1). ex is inherited from Proto-Indo-European h₁eǵʰs, "out" (EtymDB 2.1), and English exit begins with it. A thing that pendet ex is held up by something else, and falls if that gives way.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pendet ex
- Tōtum ex tempestāte pendet.
- Spēs pendet ex fortūnā.

- In tuā potestāte est.
- Sī pluit, in vīllā manēmus. Tōtum ex tempestāte pendet.

Before you move on

Say "it all depends on the weather". (Tōtum ex tempestāte pendet.) Say "it is up to you". (In tuā potestāte est.) What does pendet ex say, word for word? (It hangs from.)

289.4 Review — if, and what it depends on

Say "if you like, we'll go for a walk". (Sī vīs, ambulāmus.) Then "unless it rains". (Nisi pluit.)

What you've built

Three lessons, and the real condition is yours. Sī or nisi first, then the result, and ordinary verbs on both sides: present, perfect, or a command. And when the answer is neither yes nor no: tōtum ex tempestāte pendet, or, handing it back, in tuā potestāte est.

> — Crās iter Rōmam facimus? — Ex tempestāte pendet. Sī pluit, in vīllā manēmus; nisi pluit, iter facimus.

Crās, "tomorrow", with a present verb: Latin speech often lets the present stand for a plan.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Ex tempestāte pendet.
- Sī pluit, in vīllā manēmus; nisi pluit, iter facimus.
- Sī abhinc trēs annōs Rōmae fuistī, forum vīdistī.
- In tuā potestāte est.
- a plan of your own for tomorrow, with sī, nisi, and what it depends on

Before you move on

Say “it depends on the weather”. (Ex tempestāte pendet.) Say “it is up to you”. (In tuā potestāte est.) Say “unless”. (Nisi.) And from the last chapter, say “better”. (Melior.)

Chapter 290

Would

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say politely what I would like, and what would happen if something that is not true were true, and write a short letter that uses it.
>
> Complete LA-W290-epistula: I can say politely what I would like, and what would happen if something that is not true were true, and write a short letter that uses it.

290.1 velim — I would like

Say "I want to see Rome". (Rōmam vidēre volō.)

Volō states a fact about you: I want. Said to a stranger it can sound blunt. Latin softens it by changing the verb's mood.

Grammar Lens: velim, the softer want

> Velim tē vidēre. — I would like to see you.

velim is the subjunctive of volō: not "I want", but "I would want, I would like". All six persons:

> velim, velīs, velit, velīmus, velītis, velint.

The other wanting and able verbs do the same, with the same endings: possim, "I could, I might be able"; mālim, "I would rather".

> Hoc facere possim. — I could do this. Mālim manēre. — I would rather stay.

Cicero writes velim scire, "I should like to know", in one of his dialogues, and velim again in a letter telling his friend Atticus how much he would like to see him (Lewis & Short quote both).

Why it's said this way

Velim is not past or future. It is a different way of holding the same present: the indicative, volō, says what is; the subjunctive, velim, says what would be, or could be. Sum has one too, sim, "I may be", and the next lesson puts sum's other subjunctive to work.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The -i- of velim, possim and sim is usually explained as the mark of an old wishing mood, which Greek kept as a mood of its own and Latin folded into the subjunctive. Lewis & Short do record an older siem, siet for sim, sit in Plautus; the link to the Greek mood is the account histories of Latin give, offered as one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- velim, velīs, velit — then velīmus, velītis, velint
- Velim tē vidēre.
- Hoc facere possim.
- Mālim manēre.
- the blunt want, then the soft one — volō, then velim
- Sī vīs, tē vidēre velim.

Before you move on

Say "I would like to see you". (Velim tē vidēre.) Say "I could". (Possim.) Say "I would rather stay". (Mālim manēre.) Is velim a tense? (No: a mood, the subjunctive.)

290.2 sī hīc essēs — if it were so

Say "if it rains, we stay in the farmhouse". (Sī pluit, in vīllā manēmus.) Then "I would like to see you". (Velim tē vidēre.)

The first may well come true. Now a condition you know is false, about right now.

Grammar Lens: the infinitive plus an ending

> Sī hīc essēs, laetus essem. — If you were here, I would be happy.

You are not here, and both halves say so by their mood. essem and essēs are the imperfect subjunctive of sum, and they are made the easiest way Latin has: take the infinitive, esse, and add the endings: essem, essēs, esset, essēmus, essētis, essent.
The other verbs follow the same recipe: habēre, habērem, I would have; posse, possem, I could; velle, vellem, I would want.

> Sī pecūniam habērem, nāvem emerem. — If I had money, I would buy a ship.

Emerem is emere with -m. In English the "if" half sounds past, "if I had"; Latin agrees, and calls this the imperfect.

Why it's said this way

Set the two side by side:

> Sī pluit, in vīllā manēmus. — If it rains, we stay in. (It may.) Sī nōn plueret, nāvigārēmus. — If it were not raining, we would be sailing. (It is.)

Plain verbs leave the question open. The subjunctive tells the listener the "if" is false right now, and the speaker knows it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- esse, then essem, essēs, esset

- Sī hīc essēs, laetus essem.
- Sī pecūniam habērem, nāvem emerem.
- Sī nōn plueret, nāvigārēmus.
- one thing that is not true now, and what would follow if it were

Before you move on

Say "if you were here, I would be happy". (Sī hīc essēs, laetus essem.) What is essem built on? (The infinitive, esse.) Say "I would have". (Habērem.) Which kind of condition says the "if" is false? (The one with the subjunctive.)

290.3 Review — what is, what may be, what would be

Say "I would like to see you". (Velim tē vidēre.) Then "if you were here, I would be happy". (Sī hīc essēs, laetus essem.)

What you've built

Two chapters, and three ways to hold a thought. What is, and what may well be: plain verbs, sī pluit, manēmus. What depends: ex tempestāte pendet. What would be: the subjunctive, velim and possim for the polite and the possible, essem and habērem for an "if" that is not true now.

> Sī pluit, in vīllā manēmus. Sed sī nōn plueret, nāvigārēmus, et laetus essem.

The first sentence leaves the weather open. The second knows it is raining, and wishes it were not.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Sī pecūniam habērem, nāvem emerem.

- Hoc facere possim, sed mālim manēre.
- In tuā potestāte est. — then Spērō tē valēre.
- Sī nōn plueret, nāvigārēmus.
- one real condition and one unreal one about today

Before you move on

Say "I could". (Possim.) Say "if I had money". (Sī pecūniam habērem.) In sī pluit, manēmus, may it rain? (Yes, it is open.) In sī nōn plueret, is it raining? (Yes: that is why the verb is subjunctive.) What is the -i- of velim usually said to be? (An old wishing mood.)

290.4 A letter about a journey

Your four lines with joiners held together. These six lines are an epistula, a letter, and they tell a story.

Pick one friend who will read it.

What to know first

A Roman letter opened with two names and two letters: Mārcus Iūliae S. D., Marcus to Julia, S. D., salūtem dīcit, "sends greeting". Your name goes first, in the nominative; your friend's in the dative.

Then, often, a real condition: Sī valēs, bene est; ego valeō. "If you are well, good; I am well." Seneca calls it an old custom for the first words of a letter (Lewis & Short quote him), and it was common enough to be written as initials.

The middle tells the story: the scene in the imperfect, the events in the perfect, in order. The end looks forward, and the last word is valē.

Writing — connected composition

On paper, write six lines to your friend about a journey, real or invented, one line for each of these:

1. the opening: your name, your friend's, S. D., and sī valēs, bene est;

2. the scene: when it was, with abhinc, and the weather, with erat or -bat;
3. the first events, with prīmum and deinde: iter faciō, a ship, the fare;
4. what went wrong, with subitō or quid accidit, in the perfect;
5. how you felt and why, with eram and quia or quod, and one comparison with quam;
6. one line forward, with sī … essēs, … essem, or velim, or spērō, then valē.

Use only words you already write. The exercise is choosing the right past for each line.

Before you move on

Now go through your lines as you went through the rainy day in your first story. Mark every verb S for scene or E for event. Line two should be all S; lines three and four mostly E; line five mostly S. A line about the weather marked E is the commonest slip: change pluit to pluēbat.
Then two endings to check. The perfect for "they" ends in -ērunt; the imperfect has -ba- before its ending. And a feeling word agrees with whoever felt it: laeta eram if a woman is writing.
Last, read line six on its own. If its sī is about something that may be true, are both verbs plain? If it is about something false, are both subjunctive, essēs and essem? Then the letter looks forward, and it is finished.

Chapter 291

Prīmō, tunc, dēmum

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can set the stages of a story in time: at first, at that time, before, not yet and at last.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 291: I can set the stages of a story in time: at first, at that time, before, not yet and at last.

291.1 prīmō — at first, at the beginning

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a ditch, then the Latin for a rampart.

You'll want to know: prīmō

prīmō — "at first, at the beginning".

> Prīmō caelum serēnum erat; deinde pluit.
>
> At first the sky was clear; then it rained.

An adverb. Prīmō marks a first stage that later changes; prīmum (taught) counts the steps of a list.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīmō is the ablative of prīmus, "first", used as an adverb (Lewis & Short): at the first point in time. English prime and primary come from prīmus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prīmō
- Say it: prīmō, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prīmō
- Recall: say the Latin for a ditch, then the Latin for a rampart, then say prīmō again

Before you move on

What does prīmō mean? ("At first, at the beginning".) Say it once more.

291.2 tunc — then, at that time

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rampart, then the Latin for at first.

You'll want to know: tunc

tunc — "then, at that time".

Tunc urbs parva erat, sed mūrī altī erant.

At that time the city was small, but the walls were high.

A stronger tum (taught): at that very time. Livy and later writers use it freely in stories.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tunc is built on tum, "then", with the pointing particle -ce that is also seen in hic (Lewis & Short): then, at that point.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tunc
- Say it: tunc, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tunc
- Recall: say the Latin for a rampart, then the Latin for at first, then say tunc again

Before you move on

What does tunc mean? ("Then, at that time".) Say it once more.

291.3 antequam — before (joining two clauses)

Before the new one: say the Latin for at first, then the Latin for then.

You'll want to know: antequam

antequam — "before (joining two clauses)".

Antequam lūx vēnit, mīlitēs ē castrīs discessērunt.

Before daylight came, the soldiers left the camp.

A conjunction, often split as ante … quam. With the perfect for a plain past event.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

antequam joins ante, "before", and quam, "than, as" (Lewis & Short): earlier than the moment when.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: antequam
- Say it: antequam, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with antequam
- Recall: say the Latin for at first, then the Latin for then, then say antequam again

Before you move on

What does antequam mean? ("Before (joining two clauses)".) Say it once more.

291.4 nōndum — not yet

Before the new one: say the Latin for then, then the Latin for before.

You'll want to know: nōndum

nōndum — "not yet".

Nūntius nōndum vēnerat; itaque exspectābāmus.

The messenger had not yet come, so we were waiting.

The opposite of iam (taught), 'already'. Nōndum + pluperfect sets a scene in which something is still awaited.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōndum joins nōn, "not", and dum, "yet, still" (Lewis & Short): not as yet.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nōndum
- Say it: nōndum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nōndum
- Recall: say the Latin for then, then the Latin for before, then say nōndum again

Before you move on

What does nōndum mean? ("Not yet".) Say it once more.

291.5 dēmum — at last, only then

Before the new one: say the Latin for before, then the Latin for not yet.

You'll want to know: dēmum

dēmum — "at last, only then".

Post multās hōrās dēmum ad urbem pervēnimus.

After many hours we at last reached the city.

Tum dēmum: only then. It stresses that something came late, after waiting; close to tandem (taught).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēmum is explained by Lewis & Short as a superlative-like form built on dē, "down from": the lowest, last point. The details are not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēmum
- Say it: dēmum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēmum
- Recall: say the Latin for before, then the Latin for not yet, then say dēmum again

Before you move on

What does dēmum mean? ("At last, only then".) Say it once more.

Chapter 292

Repente et cōnfestim

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how suddenly things happened: suddenly, at once, straightaway, in an instant and immediately.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 292: I can tell how suddenly things happened: suddenly, at once, straightaway, in an instant and immediately.

292.1 repente — suddenly, unexpectedly

Before the new one: say the Latin for not yet, then the Latin for at last.

You'll want to know: repente

repente — "suddenly, unexpectedly".

> Repente magna pluvia cecidit, et omnēs fūgērunt.
>
> Suddenly heavy rain fell, and everyone ran away.

The ablative of the old adjective repēns, 'sudden'. Close to subitō (taught), and common in Livy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

repente is the ablative of repēns, "sudden" (Lewis & Short), used as an adverb. Where repēns itself comes from is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: repente
- Say it: repente, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with repente
- Recall: say the Latin for not yet, then the Latin for at last, then say repente again

Before you move on

What does repente mean? ("Suddenly, unexpectedly".) Say it once more.

292.2 cōnfestim — at once, without delay

Before the new one: say the Latin for at last, then the Latin for suddenly.

You'll want to know: cōnfestim

cōnfestim — "at once, without delay".

Dux, ubi nūntium audīvit, cōnfestim mīlitēs mīsit.

When the leader heard the news, he sent soldiers at once.

Common in Caesar and Livy for a swift reaction: one thing heard, the next done.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnfestim is linked by Lewis & Short with festīnō, "to hurry" (taught), with the prefix con-: all in a rush. The exact formation is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnfestim
- Say it: cōnfestim, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnfestim
- Recall: say the Latin for at last, then the Latin for suddenly, then say cōnfestim again

Before you move on

What does cōnfestim mean? ("At once, without delay".) Say it once more.

292.3 continuō — straightaway, without a pause

Before the new one: say the Latin for suddenly, then the Latin for at once.

You'll want to know: continuō

continuō — "straightaway, without a pause".

Puella epistulam lēgit et continuō flēvit.

The girl read the letter and straightaway burst into tears.

The adverb of continuus, 'unbroken': nothing comes between. Do not confuse the verb continuō, continuāre, 'to join in a row'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

continuō is the ablative of continuus, "unbroken", which is built on contineō, "to hold together" (EtymDB). English continue comes from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: continuō
- Say it: continuō, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with continuō
- Recall: say the Latin for suddenly, then the Latin for at once, then say continuō again

Before you move on

What does continuō mean? ("Straightaway, without a pause".) Say it once more.

292.4 extemplō — in an instant, forthwith

Before the new one: say the Latin for at once, then the Latin for straightaway.

You'll want to know: extemplō

extemplō — "in an instant, forthwith".

> Extemplō portae clausae sunt.
>
> In an instant the gates were shut.

Old and lively in tone: Plautus, Vergil and Livy use it. Plautus also has the longer extempulō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

extemplō comes, says Lewis & Short, from ex and tempulum, a diminutive of templum in its old sense "a marked-out space": out of the very moment.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: extemplō
- Say it: extemplō, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with extemplō
- Recall: say the Latin for at once, then the Latin for straightaway, then say extemplō again

Before you move on

What does extemplō mean? ("In an instant, forthwith".) Say it once more.

292.5 prōtinus — immediately; straight on

Before the new one: say the Latin for straightaway, then the Latin for in an instant.

You'll want to know: prōtinus

prōtinus — "immediately; straight on".

Ē raedā dēscendit et prōtinus domum festīnāvit.

He got down from the carriage and hurried straight home.

First in space, 'onward, straight ahead'; then in time, 'at once'. Both senses are classical.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōtinus is built on prō, "forward", and tenus, "as far as" (Lewis & Short): onward, and then without a break.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōtinus
- Say it: prōtinus, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōtinus
- Recall: say the Latin for straightaway, then the Latin for in an instant, then say prōtinus again

Before you move on

What does prōtinus mean? ("Immediately; straight on".) Say it once more.

Chapter 293

Paulātim

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how slowly things happened: little by little, gradually, step by step, for a little while and for some time.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 293: I can tell how slowly things happened: little by little, gradually, step by step, for a little while and for some time.

293.1 paulātim — little by little

Before the new one: say the Latin for in an instant, then the Latin for immediately.

You'll want to know: paulātim

paulātim — "little by little".

> Paulātim aqua in fossā crēscēbat.
>
> Little by little the water in the ditch was rising.

Built on paulum, 'a little'. Caesar writes of people who paulātim get used to something.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

paulātim is built on paulum, "a little" (Lewis & Short), with the adverb ending -ātim that is also seen in gradātim: one little bit after another.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: paulātim
- Say it: paulātim, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with paulātim
- Recall: say the Latin for in an instant, then the Latin for immediately, then say paulātim again

Before you move on

What does paulātim mean? ("Little by little".) Say it once more.

293.2 sēnsim — gradually, gently

Before the new one: say the Latin for immediately, then the Latin for little by little.

You'll want to know: sēnsim

sēnsim — "gradually, gently".

Senex sēnsim ad forum ambulābat.

The old man was walking slowly to the forum.

So gentle that each step is felt; the opposite of repente.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sēnsim is built on sentiō, "to perceive" (Lewis & Short): first "perceptibly", then "gently, little by little", as opposed to what comes suddenly.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sēnsim
- Say it: sēnsim, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sēnsim
- Recall: say the Latin for immediately, then the Latin for little by little, then say sēnsim again

Before you move on

What does sēnsim mean? ("Gradually, gently".) Say it once more.

293.3 gradātim — step by step

Before the new one: say the Latin for little by little, then the Latin for gradually.

You'll want to know: gradātim

gradātim — "step by step".

Gradātim ad summum montem ascendimus.

Step by step we climbed to the top of the mountain.

From gradus, 'a step' (taught). Cicero uses it of an argument that moves one point at a time.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gradātim is built on gradus, "step" (EtymDB), with the adverb ending -ātim. Gradus is inherited and goes back to a root meaning "to walk, to step".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gradātim
- Say it: gradātim, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gradātim
- Recall: say the Latin for little by little, then the Latin for gradually, then say gradātim again

Before you move on

What does gradātim mean? ("Step by step".) Say it once more.

293.4 paulisper — for a little while

Before the new one: say the Latin for gradually, then the Latin for step by step.

You'll want to know: paulisper

paulisper — "for a little while".

> Paulisper in tabernā mānsimus; deinde discessimus.
>
> We stayed in the shop for a little while; then we left.

It says how long, briefly. In Plautus a slave begs his master to wait paulisper.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

paulisper is built on paulum, "a little", the neuter of paulus, "small", and per, "through" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short): through a small stretch of time.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: paulisper
- Say it: paulisper, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with paulisper
- Recall: say the Latin for gradually, then the Latin for step by step, then say paulisper again

Before you move on

What does paulisper mean? ("For a little while".) Say it once more.

293.5 aliquamdiū — for some time

Before the new one: say the Latin for step by step, then the Latin for for a little while.

You'll want to know: aliquamdiū

aliquamdiū — "for some time".

Aliquamdiū pugnātum est; tum hostēs fūgērunt.

There was fighting for some time; then the enemy fled.

aliquam + diū (taught): for a fair while, longer than paulisper. Caesar uses it of battles.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aliquamdiū joins a form of aliquis, “some”, with diū, “for a long time” (Lewis & Short): for some length of time.

What you’ve built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aliquamdiū
- Say it: aliquamdiū, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aliquamdiū
- Recall: say the Latin for step by step, then the Latin for for a little while, then say aliquamdiū again

Before you move on

What does aliquamdiū mean? (“For some time”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 294

Identidem

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how often things happened: again and again, immediately after, frequently, mostly and as often as.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 294: I can say how often things happened: again and again, immediately after, frequently, mostly and as often as.

294.1 identidem — again and again, repeatedly

> Before the new one: say the Latin for for a little while, then the Latin for for some time.

You'll want to know: identidem

identidem — "again and again, repeatedly".

> Īnfāns identidem flēbat.
>
> The baby cried again and again.

An adverb for an action that keeps coming back, like saepe (taught) but closer together.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

identidem is built on idem, "the same" (EtymDB): the same, and the same again. Lewis & Short analyse the middle part in more than one way.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: identidem
- Say it: identidem, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with identidem
- Recall: say the Latin for for a little while, then the Latin for for some time, then say identidem again

Before you move on

What does identidem mean? ("Again and again, repeatedly".) Say it once more.

294.2 subinde — immediately after; now and then

Before the new one: say the Latin for for some time, then the Latin for again and again.

You'll want to know: subinde

subinde — "immediately after; now and then".

Prīmō rīsit, subinde flēvit.

At first she laughed, and immediately after she wept.

Horace and later prose. In Seneca and Pliny it also means 'from time to time'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

subinde joins sub, "close after", and inde, "from there, then" (Lewis & Short): following closely on.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: subinde
- Say it: subinde, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with subinde
- Recall: say the Latin for for some time, then the Latin for again and again, then say subinde again

Before you move on

What does subinde mean? ("Immediately after; now and then".) Say it once more.

294.3 crēbrō — frequently, often

Before the new one: say the Latin for again and again, then the Latin for immediately after.

You'll want to know: crēbrō

crēbrō — "frequently, often".

Ad vīllam avī crēbrō veniēbāmus.

We often used to come to our grandfather's villa.

The adverb of crēber (taught), 'thick, close-packed, frequent'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crēbrō is the ablative of crēber, "close-packed, frequent", used as an adverb (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: crēbrō
- Say it: crēbrō, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with crēbrō
- Recall: say the Latin for again and again, then the Latin for immediately after, then say crēbrō again

Before you move on

What does crēbrō mean? ("Frequently, often".) Say it once more.

294.4 plērumque — mostly, usually

Before the new one: say the Latin for immediately after, then the Latin for frequently.

You'll want to know: plērumque

plērumque — "mostly, usually".

Plērumque post merīdiem dormiēbat.

He usually slept in the afternoon.

The neuter of plērusque, 'the greater part': for the most part.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plērumque is the neuter of plērusque, "the greater part, most" (Lewis & Short), used as an adverb: for the most part.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: plērumque
- Say it: plērumque, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with plērumque
- Recall: say the Latin for immediately after, then the Latin for frequently, then say plērumque again

Before you move on

What does plērumque mean? ("Mostly, usually".) Say it once more.

294.5 quotiēns — as often as; how often

Before the new one: say the Latin for frequently, then the Latin for mostly.

You'll want to know: quotiēns

quotiēns — "as often as; how often".

Quotiēns in urbem veniēbat, amīcōs vīsitābat.

As often as he came into the city, he visited his friends.

Its partner is totiēns, 'so often'. English quotient comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quotiēns is built on quot, "how many" (Lewis & Short): how many times. English quotient was formed from quotiēns (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: quotiēns
- Say it: quotiēns, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with quotiēns
- Recall: say the Latin for frequently, then the Latin for mostly, then say quotiēns again

Before you move on

What does quotiēns mean? ("As often as; how often".) Say it once more.

Chapter 295

Noctū et interdiū

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say when in the day things happened: by night, by day, in the evening, early and a while ago.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 295: I can say when in the day things happened: by night, by day, in the evening, early and a while ago.

295.1 noctū — by night, at night

> Before the new one: say the Latin for mostly, then the Latin for as often as.

You'll want to know: noctū

noctū — "by night, at night".

> Fūrēs noctū in vīllam intrāvērunt.
>
> Thieves got into the villa at night.

An old case form of nox (taught): in the night-time, a word for when thieves and lovers go out.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

noctū is an old case form of nox, "night" (EtymDB), which is inherited from Proto-Indo-European nók^{w}ts*, "night"; English night is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: noctū
- Say it: noctū, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with noctū
- Recall: say the Latin for mostly, then the Latin for as often as, then say noctū again

Before you move on

What does noctū mean? ("By night, at night".) Say it once more.

295.2 interdiū — by day, in the daytime

Before the new one: say the Latin for as often as, then the Latin for by night.

You'll want to know: interdiū

interdiū — "by day, in the daytime".

Interdiū in agrīs labōrābant, noctū dormiēbant.

By day they worked in the fields, at night they slept.

inter + an old form of diēs: within the day. It pairs with noctū. Caesar and Livy use it; Cicero does not.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

interdiū joins inter, "between, within", and an old form of diēs, "day" (EtymDB): within the daylight hours.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: interdiū
- Say it: interdiū, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with interdiū
- Recall: say the Latin for as often as, then the Latin for by night, then say interdiū again

Before you move on

What does interdiū mean? ("By day, in the daytime".) Say it once more.

295.3 vesperī — in the evening

Before the new one: say the Latin for by night, then the Latin for by day.

You'll want to know: vesperī

vesperī — "in the evening".

Vesperī omnēs ad cēnam vēnērunt.

In the evening everyone came to dinner.

An old locative of vesper (taught): at evening. Herī vesperī: yesterday evening.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vesperī is an old locative of vesper, "evening" (Lewis & Short), used as an adverb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vesperī
- Say it: vesperī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vesperī
- Recall: say the Latin for by night, then the Latin for by day, then say vesperī again

Before you move on

What does vesperī mean? ("In the evening".) Say it once more.

295.4 mātūrē — early; in good time

Before the new one: say the Latin for by day, then the Latin for in the evening.

You'll want to know: mātūrē

mātūrē — "early; in good time".

Agricola mātūrē surrēxit et in agrum īvit.

The farmer got up early and went to the field.

From mātūrus, 'ripe, timely'. Its opposite is sērō, 'late', the adverb of sērus (taught). English mature.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mātūrē is the adverb of mātūrus, "ripe, timely" (Lewis & Short): at the right time, and so early. English mature comes from mātūrus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mātūrē
- Say it: mātūrē, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mātūrē
- Recall: say the Latin for by day, then the Latin for in the evening, then say mātūrē again

Before you move on

What does mātūrē mean? ("Early; in good time".) Say it once more.

295.5 dūdum — a little while ago; for a long time

Before the new one: say the Latin for in the evening, then the Latin for early.

You'll want to know: dūdum

dūdum — "a little while ago; for a long time".

Epistulam, quam dūdum scrīpsī, nunc mittō.

I am now sending the letter that I wrote a little while ago.

With iam, 'for a long time now': the track teaches iamdūdum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dūdum is built, says Lewis & Short, on diū, "for a long time", and dum, "while" (EtymDB lists the same parts): it is a while since.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dūdum
- Say it: dūdum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dūdum
- Recall: say the Latin for in the evening, then the Latin for early, then say dūdum again

Before you move on

What does dūdum mean? ("A little while ago; for a long time".) Say it once more.

Chapter 296

Initium et exitus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the parts of a story in time: the beginning, the start, the way out or outcome, the gap between and the moment.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 296: I can name the parts of a story in time: the beginning, the start, the way out or outcome, the gap between and the moment.

296.1 initium, initiī — a beginning

Before the new one: say the Latin for early, then the Latin for a little while ago.

You'll want to know: initium, initiī

initium, initiī — "a beginning".

> Initium fābulae laetum erat, fīnis trīstis.
>
> The beginning of the story was happy, the end sad.

Neuter, 2nd declension. Initiō: at the start. English initial.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

initium is built on ineō, "to go in, to begin", from in and eō, "to go" (EtymDB): the going-in. English initial and initiate come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: initium, initiī
- Say it: initium, initiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with initium, initiī
- Recall: say the Latin for early, then the Latin for a little while ago, then say initium, initiī again

Before you move on

What does initium, initiī mean? ("A beginning".) Say it once more.

296.2 prīncipium, prīncipiī — a start, an origin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a little while ago, then the Latin for a beginning.

You'll want to know: prīncipium, prīncipiī

prīncipium, prīncipiī — "a start, an origin".

Ā prīncipiō rem tōtam nārrāvit.

He told the whole affair from the start.

Neuter, 2nd declension. Ā prīncipiō: from the start. English principle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīncipium is built on prīnceps, "first, the one who takes first place" (EtymDB): what comes first. English principle comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prīncipium, prīncipiī
- Say it: prīncipium, prīncipiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prīncipium, prīncipiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a little while ago, then the Latin for a beginning, then say prīncipium, prīncipiī again

Before you move on

What does prīncipium, prīncipiī mean? ("A start, an origin".) Say it once more.

296.3 exitus, exitūs — a way out; an outcome, an end

Before the new one: say the Latin for a beginning, then the Latin for a start.

You'll want to know: exitus, exitūs

exitus, exitūs — "a way out; an outcome, an end".

Nēmō exitum reī prōvidēre poterat.

Nobody could foresee the outcome of the affair.

Masculine, 4th declension, from exeō, 'to go out'. English exit.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exitus is built on exeō, "to go out", from ex and eō, "to go" (EtymDB): a going out, and so the way a thing comes out. English exit is from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: exitus, exitūs
- Say it: exitus, exitūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with exitus, exitūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a beginning, then the Latin for a start, then say exitus, exitūs again

Before you move on

What does exitus, exitūs mean? ("A way out; an outcome, an end".) Say it once more.

296.4 intervallum, intervallī — a gap, an interval

Before the new one: say the Latin for a start, then the Latin for a way out.

You'll want to know: intervallum, intervallī

intervallum, intervallī — "a gap, an interval".

Post breve intervallum nūntius alter vēnit.

After a short interval a second messenger came.

Neuter. First the space between two stakes of a rampart, then any gap in space or time.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

intervallum joins inter, "between", and vallum, "rampart, palisade" (EtymDB): the space between the stakes. English interval comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: intervallum, intervallī
- Say it: intervallum, intervallī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with intervallum, intervallī
- Recall: say the Latin for a start, then the Latin for a way out, then say intervallum, intervallī again

Before you move on

What does intervallum, intervallī mean? ("A gap, an interval".) Say it once more.

296.5 mōmentum, mōmentī — a moment; weight, importance

Before the new one: say the Latin for a way out, then the Latin for a gap.

You'll want to know: mōmentum, mōmentī

mōmentum, mōmentī — "a moment; weight, importance".

Mōmentō temporis omnia mūtāta sunt.

In a moment of time everything was changed.

Neuter. A slight movement that tips the scales, then an instant, and also 'weight, importance'. English moment, momentum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mōmentum is built on moveō, "to move" (EtymDB): a movement, the tilt of a balance, and so an instant. English moment and momentum come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mōmentum, mōmentī
- Say it: mōmentum, mōmentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mōmentum, mōmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a way out, then the Latin for a gap, then say mōmentum, mōmentī again

Before you move on

What does mōmentum, mōmentī mean? ("A moment; weight, importance".) Say it once more.

Chapter 297

Incipere et fīnīre

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that an action began, was finished, was completed or was broken off.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 297: I can say that an action began, was finished, was completed or was broken off.

297.1 incipiō, incipere — to begin

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a gap, then the Latin for a moment.

You'll want to know: incipiō, incipere

incipiō, incipere — "to begin".

> Mīlitēs mūrum aedificāre incēpērunt.
>
> The soldiers began to build a wall.

Perfect incēpī. With an infinitive: incipit loquī, he begins to speak. English incipient.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incipiō is built on capiō, "to take", with in- (Lewis & Short): to lay hold of a task, to take it in hand. English incipient comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: incipiō, incipere
- Say it: incipiō, incipere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with incipiō, incipere
- Recall: say the Latin for a gap, then the Latin for a moment, then say incipiō, incipere again

Before you move on

What does incipiō, incipere mean? ("To begin".) Say it once more.

297.2 coepī, coepisse — I began, I have begun

Before the new one: say the Latin for a moment, then the Latin for to begin.

You'll want to know: coepī, coepisse

coepī, coepisse — "I began, I have begun".

Ubi nox vēnit, puellae canere coepērunt.

When night came, the girls began to sing.

A perfect with no present in classical use: coepī, coepisse, participle coeptus. It serves as the past of incipiō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coepī is the perfect of an old verb coepiō, which Lewis & Short take as co- and apiō, "to fasten": to join on, to set about.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: coepī, coepisse
- Say it: coepī, coepisse, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with coepī, coepisse
- Recall: say the Latin for a moment, then the Latin for to begin, then say coepī, coepisse again

Before you move on

What does coepī, coepisse mean? ("I began, I have begun".) Say it once more.

297.3 fīniō, fīnīre — to finish; to set limits

Before the new one: say the Latin for to begin, then the Latin for I began.

You'll want to know: fīniō, fīnīre

fīniō, fīnīre — "to finish; to set limits".

Hōrā nōnā labōrem fīnīvimus.

We finished the work at the ninth hour.

fīniō, fīnīre, fīnīvī, fīnītum. From fīnis (taught): first 'to mark a boundary', then 'to end'. English finish, finite.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīniō is built on fīnis, "end, boundary" (EtymDB): to set an end. English finish comes from it through French, and finite from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fīniō, fīnīre
- Say it: fīniō, fīnīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fīniō, fīnīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to begin, then the Latin for I began, then say fīniō, fīnīre again

Before you move on

What does fīniō, fīnīre mean? ("To finish; to set limits".) Say it once more.

297.4 perficiō, perficere — to complete, to carry out

Before the new one: say the Latin for I began, then the Latin for to finish.

You'll want to know: perficiō, perficere

perficiō, perficere — "to complete, to carry out".

Mūrum novum tandem perfēcērunt.

At last they completed the new wall.

perficiō, perficere, perfēcī, perfectum: per 'through' + faciō. English perfect.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perficiō is built on faciō, "to make, to do", with per-, "through" (EtymDB): to do right through. English perfect comes from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: perficiō, perficere
- Say it: perficiō, perficere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with perficiō, perficere
- Recall: say the Latin for I began, then the Latin for to finish, then say perficiō, perficere again

Before you move on

What does perficiō, perficere mean? ("To complete, to carry out".) Say it once more.

297.5 intermittō, intermittere — to break off, to interrupt

Before the new one: say the Latin for to finish, then the Latin for to complete.

You'll want to know: intermittō, intermittere

intermittō, intermittere — "to break off, to interrupt".

Propter pluviam labōrem intermīsimus.

Because of the rain we broke off the work.

intermittō, intermittere, intermīsī, intermissum: to put a gap into something. Caesar uses it of a battle or a march that is broken off.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

intermittō is built on mittō, "to send, to let go", with inter, "between" (Lewis & Short): to leave a gap. English intermission and intermittent come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: intermittō, intermittere
- Say it: intermittō, intermittere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with intermittō, intermittere
- Recall: say the Latin for to finish, then the Latin for to complete, then say intermittō, intermittere again

Before you move on

What does intermittō, intermittere mean? ("To break off, to interrupt".) Say it once more.

Chapter 298

Quid ēvēnit

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what happened and what came of it: to turn out, to become or happen, to arise, to come along and the next day.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 298: I can say what happened and what came of it: to turn out, to become or happen, to arise, to come along and the next day.

298.1 ēveniō, ēvenīre — to happen, to turn out

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to complete, then the Latin for to break off.

You'll want to know: ēveniō, ēvenīre

ēveniō, ēvenīre — "to happen, to turn out".

> Mihi rēs mīra herī ēvēnit.
>
> A strange thing happened to me yesterday.

ēveniō, ēvenīre, ēvēnī, ēventum, often with the dative: mihi ēvēnit. Its noun ēventus is taught.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēveniō is built on veniō, "to come", with ex-, "out" (EtymDB): to come out, to turn out. English event comes from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēveniō, ēvenīre
- Say it: ēveniō, ēvenīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēveniō, ēvenīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to complete, then the Latin for to break off, then say ēveniō, ēvenīre again

Before you move on

What does ēveniō, ēvenīre mean? ("To happen, to turn out".) Say it once more.

298.2 fīō, fierī — to become; to happen, to be done

Before the new one: say the Latin for to break off, then the Latin for to happen.

You'll want to know: fīō, fierī

fīō, fierī — "to become; to happen, to be done".

Quid hīc fit? Cūr omnēs currunt?

What is going on here? Why is everyone running?

fīō, fierī, factus sum. It serves as the passive of faciō: fit 'it is done, it happens'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīō is an inherited verb that serves as the passive of faciō (Lewis & Short). It is usually traced to the Proto-Indo-European root *$^*b^huH$-, "to become, to be", which also gives the Latin perfect fuī and English be.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fīō, fierī
- Say it: fīō, fierī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fīō, fierī
- Recall: say the Latin for to break off, then the Latin for to happen, then say fīō, fierī again

Before you move on

What does fīō, fierī mean? ("To become; to happen, to be done".) Say it once more.

298.3 orior, orīrī — to rise; to arise, to begin

Before the new one: say the Latin for to happen, then the Latin for to become.

You'll want to know: orior, orīrī

orior, orīrī — "to rise; to arise, to begin".

Sōle oriente ē portā discessimus.

As the sun was rising, we left by the gate.

orior, orīrī, ortus sum, a deponent. The sun rises, and so do quarrels and wars. The noun ortus, 'sunrise', is taught. English orient.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

orior is an inherited verb (EtymDB). English orient, the land of the rising sun, comes from its participle, and origin from its noun orīgō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: orior, orīrī
- Say it: orior, orīrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with orior, orīrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to happen, then the Latin for to become, then say orior, orīrī again

Before you move on

What does orior, orīrī mean? ("To rise; to arise, to begin".) Say it once more.

298.4 interveniō, intervenīre — to come along, to intervene

Before the new one: say the Latin for to become, then the Latin for to rise.

You'll want to know: interveniō, intervenīre

interveniō, intervenīre — "to come along, to intervene".

Pater intervēnit et fābulam interrūpit.

Father came along and broke off the story.

interveniō, intervenīre, intervēnī, interventum, often with the dative: sermōnī intervēnit, he broke in on the talk.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

interveniō is built on veniō, "to come", with inter, "between" (Lewis & Short): to come in during something. English intervene comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: interveniō, intervenīre
- Say it: interveniō, intervenīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with interveniō, intervenīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to become, then the Latin for to rise, then say interveniō, intervenīre again

Before you move on

What does interveniō, intervenīre mean? ("To come along, to intervene".) Say it once more.

298.5 posterus, postera, posterum — next, following

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rise, then the Latin for to come along.

You'll want to know: posterus, postera, posterum

posterus, postera, posterum — "next, following".

Posterō diē nūntius ad urbem rediit.

On the next day the messenger returned to the city.

Posterō diē: the next day, a set phrase in Caesar. The plural noun posterī means descendants.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

posterus is built on post, "after, behind" (EtymDB): coming after. English posterity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: posterus, postera, posterum
- Say it: posterus, postera, posterum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with posterus, postera, posterum
- Recall: say the Latin for to rise, then the Latin for to come along, then say posterus, postera, posterum again

Before you move on

What does posterus, postera, posterum mean? ("Next, following".) Say it once more.

298.6 Words from chapters 291–298 — a review

Say the Latin for at first and then.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- at first, then, before, not yet, at last
- suddenly, at once, straightaway, in an instant, immediately
- little by little, gradually, step by step, for a little while, for some time
- again and again, immediately after, frequently, mostly, as often as
- by night, by day, in the evening, early, a little while ago
- a beginning, a start, a way out, a gap, a moment

- to begin, I began, to finish, to complete, to break off
- to happen, to become, to rise, to come along, next

Before you move on

At first? (prīmō.) Then? (tunc.) Before? (antequam.) Not yet? (nōndum.) At last? (dēmum.) Suddenly? (repente.) At once? (cōnfestim.) Straightaway? (continuō.) In an instant? (extemplō.) Immediately? (prōtinus.) Little by little? (paulātim.) Gradually? (sēnsim.) Step by step? (gradātim.) For a little while? (paulisper.) For some time? (aliquamdiū.) Again and again? (identidem.) Immediately after? (subinde.) Frequently? (crēbrō.) Mostly? (plērumque.) As often as? (quotiēns.) By night? (noctū.) By day? (interdiū.) In the evening? (vesperī.) Early? (mātūrē.) A little while ago? (dūdum.) A beginning? (initium, initiī.) A start? (prīncipium, prīncipiī.) A way out? (exitus, exitūs.) A gap? (intervallum, intervallī.) A moment? (mōmentum, mōmentī.) To begin? (incipiō, incipere.) I began? (coepī, coepisse.) To finish? (fīniō, fīnīre.) To complete? (perficiō, perficere.) To break off? (intermittō, intermittere.) To happen? (ēveniō, ēvenīre.) To become? (fīō, fierī.) To rise? (orior, orīrī.) To come along? (interveniō, intervenīre.) Next? (posterus, postera, posterum.)

Chapter 299

Nārrātiō

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about telling a story: a narrative, to recall, to relate, to report and to quote words.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 299: I can talk about telling a story: a narrative, to recall, to relate, to report and to quote words.

299.1 nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis — a narrative, a telling

Before the new one: say the Latin for to come along, then the Latin for next.

You'll want to know: nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis

nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis — "a narrative, a telling".

> Nārrātiō senis longa sed iūcunda erat.
>
> The old man's story was long but pleasant.

Feminine, 3rd declension, from nārrō (taught). In a Roman speech, the nārrātiō set out the facts. English narration.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nārrātiō is built on nārrō, "to tell, to relate" (EtymDB), which Lewis & Short link with gnārus, "knowing": making known. English narration comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis
- Say it: nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to come along, then the Latin for next, then say nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis mean? ("A narrative, a telling".) Say it once more.

299.2 commemorō, commemorāre — to recall, to mention

Before the new one: say the Latin for next, then the Latin for a narrative.

You'll want to know: commemorō, commemorāre

commemorō, commemorāre — "to recall, to mention".

Senex victōriās veterēs commemorābat.

The old man was recalling old victories.

commemorō, commemorāre, commemorāvī, commemorātum: to bring something fully to mind, and so to mention it. English commemorate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commemorō is built on memorō, "to bring to mind, to tell of", with con- (EtymDB); memorō comes from memor, "mindful". English commemorate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: commemorō, commemorāre
- Say it: commemorō, commemorāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with commemorō, commemorāre
- Recall: say the Latin for next, then the Latin for a narrative, then say commemorō, commemorāre again

Before you move on

What does commemorō, commemorāre mean? ("To recall, to mention".) Say it once more.

299.3 memorō, memorāre — to tell of, to relate

Before the new one: say the Latin for a narrative, then the Latin for to recall.

You'll want to know: memorō, memorāre

memorō, memorāre — "to tell of, to relate".

Poētae multa dē bellīs memorant.

Poets tell many things about wars.

memorō, memorāre, memorāvī, memorātum. Poetic and historical in tone; Vergil opens his poem by asking the Muse to tell him the causes.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

memorō is built on memor, "mindful" (EtymDB), which is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to remember". English memory comes from memoria, of the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: memorō, memorāre
- Say it: memorō, memorāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with memorō, memorāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a narrative, then the Latin for to recall, then say memorō, memorāre again

Before you move on

What does memorō, memorāre mean? ("To tell of, to relate".) Say it once more.

299.4 referō, referre — to report; to carry back

Before the new one: say the Latin for to recall, then the Latin for to tell of.

You'll want to know: referō, referre

referō, referre — "to report; to carry back".

Nūntius omnia quae vīderat ducī rettulit.

The messenger reported to the leader all that he had seen.

referō, referre, rettulī, relātum, irregular like ferō. Ad senātum referre: to put a matter before the senate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

referō is built on ferō, "to carry", with re-, "back" (EtymDB): to carry back, and so to bring back word. English refer comes from it, and relate from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: referō, referre
- Say it: referō, referre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with referō, referre
- Recall: say the Latin for to recall, then the Latin for to tell of, then say referō, referre again

Before you move on

What does referō, referre mean? ("To report; to carry back".) Say it once more.

299.5 inquam — I say (quoting words)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to tell of, then the Latin for to report.

You'll want to know: inquam

inquam — "I say (quoting words)".

> 'Venī mēcum,' inquit pater, 'et omnia vidēbis.'
>
> 'Come with me,' said father, 'and you will see everything.'

Defective: mostly inquam, inquis, inquit, set inside the words quoted. Inquit means 'he says' or 'he said'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inquam is an inherited verb that EtymDB traces to a Proto-Indo-European form *$*ensk^{w}e$-, "to say". Only a few forms are in use (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: inquam
- Say it: inquam, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with inquam
- Recall: say the Latin for to tell of, then the Latin for to report, then say inquam again

Before you move on

What does inquam mean? ("I say (quoting words)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 300

Tabellārius et praecō

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about how news travelled: the letter-carrier, the herald, the instructions, the embassy and bringing word back.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 300: I can talk about how news travelled: the letter-carrier, the herald, the instructions, the embassy and bringing word back.

300.1 tabellārius, tabellāriī — a letter-carrier, a courier

Before the new one: say the Latin for to report, then the Latin for I say.

You'll want to know: tabellārius, tabellāriī

tabellārius, tabellāriī — "a letter-carrier, a courier".

> Tabellārius epistulam patris ad nōs portāvit.
>
> The courier carried father's letter to us.

Masculine. Romans with money sent their own slaves as couriers; letters went on wax tabellae.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tabellārius is built on tabella, "a small writing tablet, a letter" (Lewis & Short): the man who carries the tablets.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tabellārius, tabellāriī
- Say it: tabellārius, tabellāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tabellārius, tabellāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for to report, then the Latin for I say, then say tabellārius, tabellāriī again

Before you move on

What does tabellārius, tabellāriī mean? ("A letter-carrier, a courier".) Say it once more.

300.2 praecō, praecōnis — a herald, a crier

Before the new one: say the Latin for I say, then the Latin for a letter-carrier.

You'll want to know: praecō, praecōnis

praecō, praecōnis — "a herald, a crier".

Praecō in forō victōriam nūntiāvit.

The herald announced the victory in the forum.

Masculine, 3rd declension. He called for silence at trials, announced the lots at auctions and proclaimed winners at the games.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praecō is usually traced to prae, "before, in front", and vocō, "to call": one who calls out in front. Lewis & Short give the word without a settled origin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praecō, praecōnis
- Say it: praecō, praecōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praecō, praecōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for I say, then the Latin for a letter-carrier, then say praecō, praecōnis again

Before you move on

What does praecō, praecōnis mean? ("A herald, a crier".) Say it once more.

300.3 mandātum, mandātī — an instruction, an order

Before the new one: say the Latin for a letter-carrier, then the Latin for a herald.

You'll want to know: mandātum, mandātī

mandātum, mandātī — "an instruction, an order".

Lēgātus mandāta imperātōris memoriā tenēbat.

The envoy kept the general's instructions in his memory.

Neuter, from mandō (taught), 'to entrust'. The plural mandāta is the message an envoy carried. English mandate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mandātum is the neuter participle of mandō, "to entrust, to order" (Lewis & Short): what has been entrusted. English mandate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mandātum, mandātī
- Say it: mandātum, mandātī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mandātum, mandātī
- Recall: say the Latin for a letter-carrier, then the Latin for a herald, then say mandātum, mandātī again

Before you move on

What does mandātum, mandātī mean? ("An instruction, an order".) Say it once more.

300.4 lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis — an embassy

Before the new one: say the Latin for a herald, then the Latin for an instruction.

You'll want to know: lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis

lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis — "an embassy".

Lēgātiō ab hostibus vēnit et pācem petīvit.

An embassy came from the enemy and asked for peace.

Feminine, 3rd declension. The lēgātus (taught) led it. English legation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lēgātiō is built on lēgō, "to send with a commission" (EtymDB): the sending of envoys, and the envoys themselves. English legation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis
- Say it: lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a herald, then the Latin for an instruction, then say lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis mean? ("An embassy".) Say it once more.

300.5 renūntiō, renūntiāre — to bring back word, to report

Before the new one: say the Latin for an instruction, then the Latin for an embassy.

You'll want to know: renūntiō, renūntiāre

renūntiō, renūntiāre — "to bring back word, to report".

Servus ad dominum rediit et omnia renūntiāvit.

The slave went back to his master and reported everything.

renūntiō, renūntiāre, renūntiāvī, renūntiātum: re- 'back' + nūntiō (taught). Also 'to declare someone elected', and 'to give up, to renounce'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

renūntiō is built on nūntiō, "to announce", with re-, "back" (Lewis & Short): to carry word back. English renounce comes from another sense, "to call off, to give up".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: renūntiō, renūntiāre
- Say it: renūntiō, renūntiāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with renūntiō, renūntiāre
- Recall: say the Latin for an instruction, then the Latin for an embassy, then say renūntiō, renūntiāre again

Before you move on

What does renūntiō, renūntiāre mean? ("To bring back word, to report".) Say it once more.

Chapter 301

Rūmor et susurrus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how a rumour spread: a whisper, to whisper, to spread abroad, to grow stronger and they say.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 301: I can tell how a rumour spread: a whisper, to whisper, to spread abroad, to grow stronger and they say.

301.1 susurrus, susurrī — a whisper, a murmur

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an embassy, then the Latin for to bring back word.

You'll want to know: susurrus, susurrī

susurrus, susurrī — "a whisper, a murmur".

> Per tōtam urbem susurrus erat.
>
> There was a whisper all through the city.

Masculine. A sound word: the hum of bees, the rustle of wind, the murmur of gossip. English susurration.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

susurrus is a doubled word for a low hum, which Lewis & Short build on a root sur for sound. English susurration comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: susurrus, susurrī
- Say it: susurrus, susurrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with susurrus, susurrī
- Recall: say the Latin for an embassy, then the Latin for to bring back word, then say susurrus, susurrī again

Before you move on

What does susurrus, susurrī mean? ("A whisper, a murmur".) Say it once more.

301.2 susurrō, susurrāre — to whisper

Before the new one: say the Latin for to bring back word, then the Latin for a whisper.

You'll want to know: susurrō, susurrāre

susurrō, susurrāre — "to whisper".

Ancilla dominae aliquid in aurem susurrāvit.

The maid whispered something into her mistress's ear.

susurrō, susurrāre, susurrāvī, susurrātum, mostly poetic (Vergil, Ovid). In aurem: into the ear.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

susurrō is built on susurrus, "a whisper, a hum" (EtymDB), itself a sound word.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: susurrō, susurrāre
- Say it: susurrō, susurrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with susurrō, susurrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to bring back word, then the Latin for a whisper, then say susurrō, susurrāre again

Before you move on

What does susurrō, susurrāre mean? ("To whisper".) Say it once more.

301.3 vulgō, vulgāre — to spread abroad, to make public

Before the new one: say the Latin for a whisper, then the Latin for to whisper.

You'll want to know: vulgō, vulgāre

vulgō, vulgāre — "to spread abroad, to make public".

Rūmor dē pāce celeriter vulgātus est.

The rumour about peace was quickly spread abroad.

vulgō, vulgāre, vulgāvī, vulgātum, also written volgō. Its compound dīvulgō gives English divulge.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vulgō is built on vulgus, "the common people, the crowd" (EtymDB): to put something among the crowd. English vulgar comes from vulgus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vulgō, vulgāre
- Say it: vulgō, vulgāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vulgō, vulgāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a whisper, then the Latin for to whisper, then say vulgō, vulgāre again

Before you move on

What does vulgō, vulgāre mean? ("To spread abroad, to make public".) Say it once more.

301.4 crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere — to grow stronger, to spread (of a rumour)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to whisper, then the Latin for to spread abroad.

You'll want to know: crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere

crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere — "to grow stronger, to spread (of a rumour)".

Fāma dē victōriā in diēs crēbrēscēbat.

The report of the victory grew stronger day by day.

crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere, crēbruī, from crēber (taught). Tacitus uses it of a rumour that keeps growing.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crēbrēscō is built on crēber, "frequent, close-packed", with the ending -ēscō for something that is becoming so (Lewis & Short): to become frequent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere
- Say it: crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to whisper, then the Latin for to spread abroad, then say crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere again

Before you move on

What does crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere mean? ("To grow stronger, to spread (of a rumour)".) Say it once more.

301.5 perhibeō, perhibēre — to assert, to say (that)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to spread abroad, then the Latin for to grow stronger.

You'll want to know: perhibeō, perhibēre

perhibeō, perhibēre — "to assert, to say (that)".

Hunc fluvium altissimum esse perhibent.

They say this river is very deep.

perhibeō, perhibēre, perhibuī, perhibitum: per + habeō. Perhibent + accusative and infinitive: 'they say that…', the way rumour talks.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perhibeō is built on habeō, "to hold", with per- (EtymDB): to hold out, to put forward, and so to say.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: perhibeō, perhibēre
- Say it: perhibeō, perhibēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with perhibeō, perhibēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to spread abroad, then the Latin for to grow stronger, then say perhibeō, perhibēre again

Before you move on

What does perhibeō, perhibēre mean? ("To assert, to say (that)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 302

Speculātōrēs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how secrets came out: a spy, a scout, to search out, to betray and to disclose.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 302: I can tell how secrets came out: a spy, a scout, to search out, to betray and to disclose.

302.1 speculātor, speculātōris — a spy, a lookout

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to grow stronger, then the Latin for to assert.

You'll want to know: speculātor, speculātōris

speculātor, speculātōris — "a spy, a lookout".

> Speculātor noctū in castra hostium vēnit.
>
> A spy came into the enemy camp by night.

Masculine, 3rd declension. A soldier sent ahead to watch. English speculator now means someone who gambles on prices.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

speculātor is built on speculor, "to keep watch", from specula, "a lookout", which belongs with speciō, "to look" (Lewis & Short). English speculate is from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: speculātor, speculātōris
- Say it: speculātor, speculātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with speculātor, speculātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for to grow stronger, then the Latin for to assert, then say speculātor, speculātōris again

Before you move on

What does speculātor, speculātōris mean? ("A spy, a lookout".) Say it once more.

302.2 explōrātor, explōrātōris — a scout

Before the new one: say the Latin for to assert, then the Latin for a spy.

You'll want to know: explōrātor, explōrātōris

explōrātor, explōrātōris — "a scout".

Explōrātōrēs nūntiāvērunt hostēs prope flūmen esse.

The scouts reported that the enemy were near the river.

Masculine, 3rd declension. In Caesar the explōrātōrēs went ahead of the army.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

explōrātor is built on explōrō, "to search out" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -tor for the one who does it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: explōrātor, explōrātōris
- Say it: explōrātor, explōrātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with explōrātor, explōrātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for to assert, then the Latin for a spy, then say explōrātor, explōrātōris again

Before you move on

What does explōrātor, explōrātōris mean? ("A scout".) Say it once more.

302.3 explōrō, explōrāre — to search out, to explore

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spy, then the Latin for a scout.

You'll want to know: explōrō, explōrāre

explōrō, explōrāre — "to search out, to explore".

Mīlitēs silvam explōrāvērunt, sed nēminem invēnērunt.

The soldiers searched the forest, but found nobody.

explōrō, explōrāre, explōrāvī, explōrātum. English explore.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

explōrō is usually traced to ex and plōrō, "to cry out", perhaps first the shout of hunters driving game out of cover; the details are not settled. English explore comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: explōrō, explōrāre
- Say it: explōrō, explōrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with explōrō, explōrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a spy, then the Latin for a scout, then say explōrō, explōrāre again

Before you move on

What does explōrō, explōrāre mean? ("To search out, to explore".) Say it once more.

302.4 prōdō, prōdere — to betray; to hand down

Before the new one: say the Latin for a scout, then the Latin for to search out.

You'll want to know: prōdō, prōdere

prōdō, prōdere — "to betray; to hand down".

Servus dominum hostibus prōdidit.

The slave betrayed his master to the enemy.

prōdō, prōdere, prōdidī, prōditum: to give forth. Also 'to hand down': memoriae prōdere, to record for later ages.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōdō is built on dō, "to give", with prō, "forth" (Lewis & Short): to give forth, to give up, and so to betray.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōdō, prōdere
- Say it: prōdō, prōdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōdō, prōdere
- Recall: say the Latin for a scout, then the Latin for to search out, then say prōdō, prōdere again

Before you move on

What does prōdō, prōdere mean? ("To betray; to hand down".) Say it once more.

302.5 patefaciō, patefacere — to open up; to disclose

Before the new one: say the Latin for to search out, then the Latin for to betray.

You'll want to know: patefaciō, patefacere

patefaciō, patefacere — "to open up; to disclose".

> Ūna epistula tōtum cōnsilium patefēcit.
>
> A single letter disclosed the whole plan.

patefaciō, patefacere, patefēcī, patefactum. Cicero uses it of plots brought to light.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patefaciō joins pateō, "to be open", and faciō, "to make" (EtymDB): to make open.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: patefaciō, patefacere
- Say it: patefaciō, patefacere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with patefaciō, patefacere
- Recall: say the Latin for to search out, then the Latin for to betray, then say patefaciō, patefacere again

Before you move on

What does patefaciō, patefacere mean? ("To open up; to disclose".) Say it once more.

Chapter 303

Fūrtum

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about theft and robbery: a theft, highway robbery, a mugger, a robber and the loot.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 303: I can talk about theft and robbery: a theft, highway robbery, a mugger, a robber and the loot.

303.1 fūrtum, fūrtī — a theft

Before the new one: say the Latin for to betray, then the Latin for to open up.

You'll want to know: fūrtum, fūrtī

fūrtum, fūrtī — "a theft".

Fūrtum in balneō factum est.

A theft was committed at the baths.

Neuter, built on fūr, 'thief', which is taught. The ablative fūrtō means 'by stealth'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fūrtum is built on fūr, "thief" (EtymDB), which is inherited from Proto-Italic fōr*.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fūrtum, fūrtī
- Say it: fūrtum, fūrtī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fūrtum, fūrtī
- Recall: say the Latin for to betray, then the Latin for to open up, then say fūrtum, fūrtī again

Before you move on

What does fūrtum, fūrtī mean? ("A theft".) Say it once more.

303.2 latrōcinium, latrōciniī — highway robbery, banditry

Before the new one: say the Latin for to open up, then the Latin for a theft.

You'll want to know: latrōcinium, latrōciniī

latrōcinium, latrōciniī — "highway robbery, banditry".

In illā silvā latrōcinia crēbra erant.

In that forest robberies were frequent.

Neuter, from latrō (taught), 'bandit'. Cicero calls a lawless war a latrōcinium.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

latrōcinium is built on latrō, "bandit", first "a hired soldier" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short). EtymDB traces latrō to Greek latron, "pay".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: latrōcinium, latrōciniī
- Say it: latrōcinium, latrōciniī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with latrōcinium, latrōciniī
- Recall: say the Latin for to open up, then the Latin for a theft, then say latrōcinium, latrōciniī again

Before you move on

What does latrōcinium, latrōciniī mean? ("Highway robbery, banditry".) Say it once more.

303.3 grassātor, grassātōris — a mugger, a street thug

Before the new one: say the Latin for a theft, then the Latin for highway robbery.

You'll want to know: grassātor, grassātōris

grassātor, grassātōris — "a mugger, a street thug".

Noctū grassātōrēs per viās errābant.

At night muggers roamed the streets.

Masculine, 3rd declension, from grassor, 'to prowl'. Satirists warn of them in dark city streets.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

grassātor is built on grassor, "to go about, to prowl" (EtymDB), with the ending -tor. Lewis & Short note an older sense, "an idler".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: grassātor, grassātōris
- Say it: grassātor, grassātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with grassātor, grassātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a theft, then the Latin for highway robbery, then say grassātor, grassātōris again

Before you move on

What does grassātor, grassātōris mean? ("A mugger, a street thug".) Say it once more.

303.4 praedō, praedōnis — a robber, a pirate

Before the new one: say the Latin for highway robbery, then the Latin for a mugger.

You'll want to know: praedō, praedōnis

praedō, praedōnis — "a robber, a pirate".

Praedōnēs mercātōrem cēpērunt et aurum eius retinuērunt.

Robbers captured a merchant and kept his gold.

Masculine, 3rd declension. At sea a praedō is a pirate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praedō is built on praeda, "loot, booty" (EtymDB): one who takes booty.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praedō, praedōnis
- Say it: praedō, praedōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praedō, praedōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for highway robbery, then the Latin for a mugger, then say praedō, praedōnis again

Before you move on

What does praedō, praedōnis mean? ("A robber, a pirate".) Say it once more.

303.5 praeda, praedae — loot, booty; prey

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mugger, then the Latin for a robber.

You'll want to know: praeda, praedae

praeda, praedae — "loot, booty; prey".

Latrōnēs praedam in spēluncā posuērunt.

The bandits put the loot in a cave.

Feminine. Also the prey of an animal. English prey comes from it through French, and predator from its verb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praeda is explained by Lewis & Short as a short form of an older praehenda*, "a thing seized", from prehendō, "to seize". English prey comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praeda, praedae
- Say it: praeda, praedae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praeda, praedae
- Recall: say the Latin for a mugger, then the Latin for a robber, then say praeda, praedae again

Before you move on

What does praeda, praedae mean? ("Loot, booty; prey".) Say it once more.

Chapter 304

Fūr comprehēnsus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how a thief broke in and was caught: to break open, a bolt, to snatch, to catch in the act and to arrest.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 304: I can tell how a thief broke in and was caught: to break open, a bolt, to snatch, to catch in the act and to arrest.

304.1 effringō, effringere — to break open

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a robber, then the Latin for loot.

You'll want to know: effringō, effringere

effringō, effringere — "to break open".

> Fūr portam effrēgit et in domum intrāvit.
>
> The thief broke the door open and went into the house.

effringō, effringere, effrēgī, effrāctum: ex + frangō (taught). Plautus has doors smashed in this way.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

effringō is built on frangō, "to break", with ex-, "out" (Lewis & Short); the vowel changes inside the compound.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: effringō, effringere
- Say it: effringō, effringere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with effringō, effringere
- Recall: say the Latin for a robber, then the Latin for loot, then say effringō, effringere again

Before you move on

What does effringō, effringere mean? ("To break open".) Say it once more.

304.2 claustrum, claustrī — a bolt, a bar; a barrier

Before the new one: say the Latin for loot, then the Latin for to break open.

You'll want to know: claustrum, claustrī

claustrum, claustrī — "a bolt, a bar; a barrier".

Fūr claustra portae nocte remōvit.

At night the thief removed the bolts of the door.

Neuter, from claudō, 'to shut' (taught); most often plural, claustra, the bars of a door or gate. English cloister.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

claustrum is built on claudō, "to shut" (EtymDB), with a tool ending: the thing that shuts. English cloister comes from it through French, and claustrophobia is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: claustrum, claustrī
- Say it: claustrum, claustrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with claustrum, claustrī
- Recall: say the Latin for loot, then the Latin for to break open, then say claustrum, claustrī again

Before you move on

What does claustrum, claustrī mean? ("A bolt, a bar; a barrier".) Say it once more.

304.3 rapiō, rapere — to snatch, to carry off

Before the new one: say the Latin for to break open, then the Latin for a bolt.

You'll want to know: rapiō, rapere

rapiō, rapere — "to snatch, to carry off".

Fūr crumēnam meam rapuit et fūgit.

The thief snatched my purse and ran away.

rapiō, rapere, rapuī, raptum. English rapid and rapture come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rapiō is inherited from Proto-Italic rapiō* (EtymDB). English rapid comes from rapidus, "snatching, swift", and rapture from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rapiō, rapere
- Say it: rapiō, rapere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rapiō, rapere
- Recall: say the Latin for to break open, then the Latin for a bolt, then say rapiō, rapere again

Before you move on

What does rapiō, rapere mean? ("To snatch, to carry off".) Say it once more.

304.4 dēprehendō, dēprehendere — to catch, to catch in the act

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bolt, then the Latin for to snatch.

You'll want to know: dēprehendō, dēprehendere

dēprehendō, dēprehendere — "to catch, to catch in the act".

Servus fūrem in hortō dēprehendit.

A slave caught the thief in the garden.

dēprehendō, dēprehendere, dēprehendī, dēprehēnsum, also dēprendō. In fūrtō dēprehendere: to catch someone stealing.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēprehendō is built on prehendō, "to seize", with dē- (Lewis & Short): to snatch away, to catch something on the move.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēprehendō, dēprehendere
- Say it: dēprehendō, dēprehendere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēprehendō, dēprehendere
- Recall: say the Latin for a bolt, then the Latin for to snatch, then say dēprehendō, dēprehendere again

Before you move on

What does dēprehendō, dēprehendere mean? ("To catch, to catch in the act".) Say it once more.

304.5 comprehendō, comprehendere — to seize, to arrest; to grasp

Before the new one: say the Latin for to snatch, then the Latin for to catch.

You'll want to know: comprehendō, comprehendere

comprehendō, comprehendere — "to seize, to arrest; to grasp".

Mīlitēs latrōnem comprehendērunt et in carcerem dūxērunt.

The soldiers arrested the bandit and took him to prison.

comprehendō, comprehendere, comprehendī, comprehēnsum. To seize a person, and also to grasp an idea. English comprehend.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

comprehendō is built on prehendō, "to seize", with con-, "together, wholly" (EtymDB): to take hold of on all sides. English comprehend comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: comprehendō, comprehendere
- Say it: comprehendō, comprehendere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with comprehendō, comprehendere
- Recall: say the Latin for to snatch, then the Latin for to catch, then say comprehendō, comprehendere again

Before you move on

What does comprehendō, comprehendere mean? ("To seize, to arrest; to grasp".) Say it once more.

Chapter 305

Scelus et fraus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name wrongdoing in a story: a crime, a deed, wicked, fraud and trickery.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 305: I can name wrongdoing in a story: a crime, a deed, wicked, fraud and trickery.

305.1 scelus, sceleris — a crime, a wicked deed

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to catch, then the Latin for to seize.

You'll want to know: scelus, sceleris

scelus, sceleris — "a crime, a wicked deed".

> Omnēs cīvēs dē hōc scelere loquēbantur.
>
> All the citizens were talking about this crime.

Neuter, 3rd declension. The strongest word for a wrong: a crime that also offends the gods.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scelus is an inherited word whose origin is not settled; Lewis & Short compare a Sanskrit root meaning "to stumble".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: scelus, sceleris
- Say it: scelus, sceleris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with scelus, sceleris
- Recall: say the Latin for to catch, then the Latin for to seize, then say scelus, sceleris again

Before you move on

What does scelus, sceleris mean? ("A crime, a wicked deed".) Say it once more.

305.2 facinus, facinoris — a deed; a bad deed

Before the new one: say the Latin for to seize, then the Latin for a crime.

You'll want to know: facinus, facinoris

facinus, facinoris — "a deed; a bad deed".

Facinus audāx erat, sed nōn turpe.

It was a daring deed, but not a shameful one.

Neuter, 3rd declension, from faciō. Alone it often means a crime; praised, a fine deed.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

facinus is built on faciō, "to do, to make" (EtymDB): a thing done, and very often a wicked thing done.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: facinus, facinoris
- Say it: facinus, facinoris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with facinus, facinoris
- Recall: say the Latin for to seize, then the Latin for a crime, then say facinus, facinoris again

Before you move on

What does facinus, facinoris mean? ("A deed; a bad deed".) Say it once more.

305.3 scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum — wicked, criminal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a crime, then the Latin for a deed.

You'll want to know: scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum

scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum — "wicked, criminal".

Ille vir scelerātus patrem suum fefellit.

That wicked man deceived his own father.

The past participle of scelerō, 'to stain with crime', used as an adjective.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scelerātus is the participle of scelerō, "to pollute with crime", built on scelus, "crime" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum
- Say it: scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum
- Recall: say the Latin for a crime, then the Latin for a deed, then say scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum again

Before you move on

What does scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum mean? ("Wicked, criminal".) Say it once more.

305.4 fraus, fraudis — fraud, deceit; harm

Before the new one: say the Latin for a deed, then the Latin for wicked.

You'll want to know: fraus, fraudis

fraus, fraudis — "fraud, deceit; harm".

Mercātor fraude multam pecūniam accēpit.

The merchant got a lot of money by fraud.

Feminine, 3rd declension. In old law also 'harm': sine fraude, without loss. English fraud.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fraus is an inherited word whose earlier origin is not settled (Lewis & Short, EtymDB). English fraud comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fraus, fraudis
- Say it: fraus, fraudis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fraus, fraudis
- Recall: say the Latin for a deed, then the Latin for wicked, then say fraus, fraudis again

Before you move on

What does fraus, fraudis mean? ("Fraud, deceit; harm".) Say it once more.

305.5 dolus, dolī — a trick, cunning

Before the new one: say the Latin for wicked, then the Latin for fraud.

You'll want to know: dolus, dolī

dolus, dolī — "a trick, cunning".

Hostēs dolum parāvērunt, sed dux eum animadvertit.

The enemy prepared a trick, but the leader noticed it.

Masculine, 2nd declension. The wooden horse was the most famous dolus of the old stories.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dolus matches Greek dolos, "bait, trick"; EtymDB lists it as taken from Greek, while Lewis & Short treat the two as cousins.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dolus, dolī
- Say it: dolus, dolī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dolus, dolī
- Recall: say the Latin for wicked, then the Latin for fraud, then say dolus, dolī again

Before you move on

What does dolus, dolī mean? ("A trick, cunning".) Say it once more.

Chapter 306

Caedēs

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about violent crime: slaughter, a murderer, an assassin, a dagger and to kill.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 306: I can talk about violent crime: slaughter, a murderer, an assassin, a dagger and to kill.

306.1 caedēs, caedis — slaughter, murder

> Before the new one: say the Latin for fraud, then the Latin for a trick.

You'll want to know: caedēs, caedis

caedēs, caedis — "slaughter, murder".

> Post caedem tōta urbs tacita erat.
>
> After the murder the whole city was silent.

Feminine, 3rd declension, genitive plural caedium. Used of one killing or of a massacre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caedēs is built on caedō, "to cut, to cut down" (EtymDB), which is inherited from a root meaning "to cut, to hew".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: caedēs, caedis
- Say it: caedēs, caedis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with caedēs, caedis
- Recall: say the Latin for fraud, then the Latin for a trick, then say caedēs, caedis again

Before you move on

What does caedēs, caedis mean? ("Slaughter, murder".) Say it once more.

306.2 homicīda, homicīdae — a murderer, a killer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a trick, then the Latin for slaughter.

You'll want to know: homicīda, homicīdae

homicīda, homicīdae — "a murderer, a killer".

Homicīda ē carcere fūgit.

The murderer escaped from prison.

Masculine or feminine, 1st declension. English homicide names both the deed and the doer.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

homicīda joins homō, "person", and -cīda, "killer", from caedō, "to cut down" (Lewis & Short). English homicide comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: homicīda, homicīdae
- Say it: homicīda, homicīdae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with homicīda, homicīdae
- Recall: say the Latin for a trick, then the Latin for slaughter, then say homicīda, homicīdae again

Before you move on

What does homicīda, homicīdae mean? ("A murderer, a killer".) Say it once more.

306.3 sīcārius, sīcāriī — an assassin

Before the new one: say the Latin for slaughter, then the Latin for a murderer.

You'll want to know: sīcārius, sīcāriī

sīcārius, sīcāriī — "an assassin".

Sīcāriī cōnsulem in viā exspectābant.

The assassins were waiting for the consul in the street.

Masculine. Murder trials at Rome were held inter sīcāriōs: among the assassins.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sīcārius is built on sīca, "a curved dagger" (Lewis & Short): the dagger man.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sīcārius, sīcāriī
- Say it: sīcārius, sīcāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sīcārius, sīcāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for slaughter, then the Latin for a murderer, then say sīcārius, sīcāriī again

Before you move on

What does sīcārius, sīcāriī mean? ("An assassin".) Say it once more.

306.4 pugiō, pugiōnis — a dagger

Before the new one: say the Latin for a murderer, then the Latin for an assassin.

You'll want to know: pugiō, pugiōnis

pugiō, pugiōnis — "a dagger".

Pugiōnem sub veste habēbat.

He had a dagger under his clothing.

Masculine, 3rd declension. A short stabbing blade that soldiers wore on the belt.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pugiō is built, says Lewis & Short, on the root of pungō, "to prick, to stab"; an old explanation says the dagger strikes with the point.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pugiō, pugiōnis
- Say it: pugiō, pugiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pugiō, pugiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a murderer, then the Latin for an assassin, then say pugiō, pugiōnis again

Before you move on

What does pugiō, pugiōnis mean? ("A dagger".) Say it once more.

306.5 occīdō, occīdere — to kill, to cut down

Before the new one: say the Latin for an assassin, then the Latin for a dagger.

You'll want to know: occīdō, occīdere

occīdō, occīdere — "to kill, to cut down".

Latrō viātōrem occīdit et pecūniam rapuit.

The bandit killed a traveller and snatched his money.

occīdō, occīdere, occīdī, occīsum, with a long ī. Do not confuse occidō, 'to fall, to set', of the sun.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

occīdō is built on caedō, "to cut down", with ob- (EtymDB, Lewis & Short): to strike down. Its look-alike occidō, "to fall", is built on cadō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: occīdō, occīdere
- Say it: occīdō, occīdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with occīdō, occīdere
- Recall: say the Latin for an assassin, then the Latin for a dagger, then say occīdō, occīdere again

Before you move on

What does occīdō, occīdere mean? ("To kill, to cut down".) Say it once more.

306.6 Words from chapters 299–306 — a review

Say the Latin for a narrative and to recall.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a narrative, to recall, to tell of, to report, I say
- a letter-carrier, a herald, an instruction, an embassy, to bring back word
- a whisper, to whisper, to spread abroad, to grow stronger, to assert
- a spy, a scout, to search out, to betray, to open up
- a theft, highway robbery, a mugger, a robber, loot
- to break open, a bolt, to snatch, to catch, to seize
- a crime, a deed, wicked, fraud, a trick
- slaughter, a murderer, an assassin, a dagger, to kill

Before you move on

A narrative? (nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis.) To recall? (commemorō, commemorāre.) To tell of? (memorō, memorāre.) To report? (referō, referre.) I say? (inquam.) A letter-carrier? (tabellārius, tabellāriī.) A herald? (praecō, praecōnis.) An instruction? (mandātum, mandātī.) An embassy? (lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis.) To bring back word? (renūntiō, renūntiāre.) A whisper? (susurrus, susurrī.) To whisper? (susurrō, susurrāre.) To spread abroad? (vulgō, vulgāre.) To grow stronger? (crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere.) To assert? (perhibeō, perhibēre.) A spy? (speculātor, speculātōris.) A scout? (explōrātor, explōrātōris.) To search out? (explōrō, explōrāre.) To betray? (prōdō, prōdere.) To open up? (patefaciō, patefacere.) A theft? (fūrtum, fūrtī.) Highway robbery? (latrōcinium, latrōciniī.) A mugger? (grassātor, grassātōris.) A robber? (praedō, praedōnis.) Loot? (praeda, praedae.) To break open? (effringō, effringere.) A bolt? (claustrum, claustrī.) To snatch? (rapiō, rapere.) To catch? (dēprehendō, dēprehendere.) To seize? (comprehendō, comprehendere.) A crime? (scelus, sceleris.) A deed? (facinus, facinoris.) Wicked? (scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum.) Fraud? (fraus, fraudis.) A trick? (dolus, dolī.) Slaughter? (caedēs, caedis.) A murderer? (homicīda, homicīdae.) An assassin? (sīcārius, sīcāriī.) A dagger? (pugiō, pugiōnis.) To kill? (occīdō, occīdere.)

Chapter 307

Venēnum

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about poison and plots: poison, a poisoner, an ambush, a conspiracy and a traitor.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 307: I can talk about poison and plots: poison, a poisoner, an ambush, a conspiracy and a traitor.

307.1 venēnum, venēnī — poison; a drug

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a dagger, then the Latin for to kill.

You'll want to know: venēnum, venēnī

venēnum, venēnī — "poison; a drug".

> Medicus venēnum in pōculō invēnit.
>
> The doctor found poison in the cup.

Neuter. First any strong drug or charm, then poison. English venom comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

venēnum is inherited; EtymDB traces it to Proto-Italic wenesnom*, from a root meaning "to desire", so first a love potion. English venom comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: venēnum, venēnī
- Say it: venēnum, venēnī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with venēnum, venēnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a dagger, then the Latin for to kill, then say venēnum, venēnī again

Before you move on

What does venēnum, venēnī mean? ("Poison; a drug".) Say it once more.

307.2 venēficus, venēficī — a poisoner; a sorcerer

Before the new one: say the Latin for to kill, then the Latin for poison.

You'll want to know: venēficus, venēficī

venēficus, venēficī — "a poisoner; a sorcerer".

Venēficus herbās perīculōsās in hortō alēbat.

The poisoner grew dangerous herbs in his garden.

Masculine; the feminine venēfica is the witch of Roman stories.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

venēficus joins venēnum, "poison", and faciō, "to make" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short): a maker of poisons and charms.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: venēficus, venēficī
- Say it: venēficus, venēficī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with venēficus, venēficī
- Recall: say the Latin for to kill, then the Latin for poison, then say venēficus, venēficī again

Before you move on

What does venēficus, venēficī mean? ("A poisoner; a sorcerer".) Say it once more.

307.3 īnsidiae, īnsidiārum — an ambush; a plot

Before the new one: say the Latin for poison, then the Latin for a poisoner.

You'll want to know: īnsidiae, īnsidiārum

īnsidiae, īnsidiārum — "an ambush; a plot".

Hostēs in silvā īnsidiās parāvērunt.

The enemy prepared an ambush in the forest.

Feminine, plural only: men sitting hidden, waiting. English insidious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnsidiae is built on īnsideō, "to sit in, to occupy" (Lewis & Short), from in and sedeō, "to sit": a lying in wait. English insidious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnsidiae, īnsidiārum
- Say it: īnsidiae, īnsidiārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnsidiae, īnsidiārum
- Recall: say the Latin for poison, then the Latin for a poisoner, then say īnsidiae, īnsidiārum again

Before you move on

What does īnsidiae, īnsidiārum mean? ("An ambush; a plot".) Say it once more.

307.4 coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis — a conspiracy

Before the new one: say the Latin for a poisoner, then the Latin for an ambush.

You'll want to know: coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis

coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis — "a conspiracy".

Cōnsul coniūrātiōnem in senātū patefēcit.

The consul exposed the conspiracy in the senate.

Feminine, 3rd declension. Cicero brought one to light in 63 BC.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coniūrātiō is built on coniūrō, "to swear together", from con- and iūrō, "to swear" (Lewis & Short): a band bound by a shared oath.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis
- Say it: coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a poisoner, then the Latin for an ambush, then say coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis mean? ("A conspiracy".) Say it once more.

307.5 prōditor, prōditōris — a traitor

Before the new one: say the Latin for an ambush, then the Latin for a conspiracy.

You'll want to know: prōditor, prōditōris

prōditor, prōditōris — "a traitor".

Prōditor portās hostibus aperuit.

The traitor opened the gates to the enemy.

Masculine, 3rd declension, from prōdō, 'to betray'. Prōditor patriae: a traitor to his country.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōditor is built on prōdō, "to give up, to betray" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -tor.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōditor, prōditōris
- Say it: prōditor, prōditōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōditor, prōditōris
- Recall: say the Latin for an ambush, then the Latin for a conspiracy, then say prōditor, prōditōris again

Before you move on

What does prōditor, prōditōris mean? ("A traitor".) Say it once more.

Chapter 308

Iūdex et lēx

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a Roman court: the judge, the trial, to judge, a law and rights.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 308: I can talk about a Roman court: the judge, the trial, to judge, a law and rights.

308.1 iūdex, iūdicis — a judge; a juror

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a conspiracy, then the Latin for a traitor.

You'll want to know: iūdex, iūdicis

iūdex, iūdicis — "a judge; a juror".

> Iūdex testēs diū audīvit.
>
> The judge listened to the witnesses for a long time.

Masculine (also feminine), 3rd declension. In big trials many iūdicēs sat together as a jury.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūdex joins iūs, "law, right", and the root of dīcō, "to say" (EtymDB): the one who speaks the law. English judge comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iūdex, iūdicis
- Say it: iūdex, iūdicis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iūdex, iūdicis
- Recall: say the Latin for a conspiracy, then the Latin for a traitor, then say iūdex, iūdicis again

Before you move on

What does iūdex, iūdicis mean? ("A judge; a juror".) Say it once more.

308.2 iūdicium, iūdiciī — a trial; a judgement

Before the new one: say the Latin for a traitor, then the Latin for a judge.

You'll want to know: iūdicium, iūdiciī

iūdicium, iūdiciī — "a trial; a judgement".

Iūdicium in basilicā habitum est.

The trial was held in the basilica.

Neuter, 2nd declension. Both the trial and the verdict at its end; also 'opinion': meō iūdiciō, in my judgement.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūdicium is built on iūdex, "judge" (EtymDB): what a judge does, the trial and its verdict. English judicial belongs to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iūdicium, iūdiciī
- Say it: iūdicium, iūdiciī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iūdicium, iūdiciī
- Recall: say the Latin for a traitor, then the Latin for a judge, then say iūdicium, iūdiciī again

Before you move on

What does iūdicium, iūdiciī mean? ("A trial; a judgement".) Say it once more.

308.3 iūdicō, iūdicāre — to judge; to declare

Before the new one: say the Latin for a judge, then the Latin for a trial.

You'll want to know: iūdicō, iūdicāre

iūdicō, iūdicāre — "to judge; to declare".

Senātus eum hostem iūdicāvit.

The senate declared him a public enemy.

iūdicō, iūdicāre, iūdicāvī, iūdicātum, often with two accusatives: someone + what he is judged to be.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūdicō is built on iūdex, "judge" (EtymDB): to act as judge, to decide. English judge the verb comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iūdicō, iūdicāre
- Say it: iūdicō, iūdicāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iūdicō, iūdicāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a judge, then the Latin for a trial, then say iūdicō, iūdicāre again

Before you move on

What does iūdicō, iūdicāre mean? ("To judge; to declare".) Say it once more.

308.4 lēx, lēgis — a law

Before the new one: say the Latin for a trial, then the Latin for to judge.

You'll want to know: lēx, lēgis

lēx, lēgis — "a law".

Populus novam lēgem probāvit.

The people approved the new law.

Feminine, 3rd declension. A lēx was a bill passed by the people's vote. English legal comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lēx is inherited from Proto-Italic lēg-* (EtymDB); Lewis & Short connect it, with doubt, with a root meaning "to bind". English legal and legislate come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lēx, lēgis
- Say it: lēx, lēgis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lēx, lēgis
- Recall: say the Latin for a trial, then the Latin for to judge, then say lēx, lēgis again

Before you move on

What does lēx, lēgis mean? ("A law".) Say it once more.

308.5 iūs, iūris — law, right; justice

Before the new one: say the Latin for to judge, then the Latin for a law.

You'll want to know: iūs, iūris

iūs, iūris — "law, right; justice".

Omnēs cīvēs eadem iūra habēbant.

All the citizens had the same rights.

Neuter, 3rd declension. Iūs is law and right as a whole; a lēx is one law. A look-alike iūs means 'broth'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūs is inherited from Proto-Indo-European $h_2$yéwos*, "law, right" (EtymDB). English jury, justice and jurist come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iūs, iūris
- Say it: iūs, iūris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iūs, iūris
- Recall: say the Latin for to judge, then the Latin for a law, then say iūs, iūris again

Before you move on

What does iūs, iūris mean? ("Law, right; justice".) Say it once more.

Chapter 309

Accūsātor et patrōnus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe the sides in a trial: to accuse, the prosecutor, the supporter in court, the counsel and the evidence.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 309: I can describe the sides in a trial: to accuse, the prosecutor, the supporter in court, the counsel and the evidence.

309.1 accūsō, accūsāre — to accuse, to charge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a law, then the Latin for law.

You'll want to know: accūsō, accūsāre

accūsō, accūsāre — "to accuse, to charge".

> Mercātōrem fūrtī accūsāvērunt.
>
> They accused the merchant of theft.

accūsō, accūsāre, accūsāvī, accūsātum, with the genitive of the charge: fūrtī accūsāre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

accūsō is built on causa, "a cause, a lawsuit", with ad- (EtymDB): to call someone to account. English accuse comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: accūsō, accūsāre
- Say it: accūsō, accūsāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with accūsō, accūsāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a law, then the Latin for law, then say accūsō, accūsāre again

Before you move on

What does accūsō, accūsāre mean? ("To accuse, to charge".) Say it once more.

309.2 accūsātor, accūsātōris — a prosecutor, an accuser

Before the new one: say the Latin for law, then the Latin for to accuse.

You'll want to know: accūsātor, accūsātōris

accūsātor, accūsātōris — "a prosecutor, an accuser".

Accūsātor longam ōrātiōnem habuit.

The prosecutor made a long speech.

Masculine, 3rd declension. Rome had no public prosecutor: any citizen could act as accūsātor, and young men won fame that way.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

accūsātor is built on accūsō, "to accuse" (EtymDB), with the ending -tor for the one who does it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: accūsātor, accūsātōris
- Say it: accūsātor, accūsātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with accūsātor, accūsātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for law, then the Latin for to accuse, then say accūsātor, accūsātōris again

Before you move on

What does accūsātor, accūsātōris mean? ("A prosecutor, an accuser".) Say it once more.

309.3 advocātus, advocātī — a supporter in court, a legal adviser

Before the new one: say the Latin for to accuse, then the Latin for a prosecutor.

You'll want to know: advocātus, advocātī

advocātus, advocātī — "a supporter in court, a legal adviser".

Reus multōs amīcōs advocātōs habēbat.

The defendant had many friends supporting him in court.

Masculine. In Cicero an advocātus stood by a friend in court; later the word meant a pleader. English advocate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

advocātus is the participle of advocō, "to call to oneself" (EtymDB), from ad and vocō, "to call": one who has been called in. English advocate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: advocātus, advocātī
- Say it: advocātus, advocātī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with advocātus, advocātī
- Recall: say the Latin for to accuse, then the Latin for a prosecutor, then say advocātus, advocātī again

Before you move on

What does advocātus, advocātī mean? ("A supporter in court, a legal adviser".) Say it once more.

309.4 patrōnus, patrōnī — a patron; a defending counsel

Before the new one: say the Latin for a prosecutor, then the Latin for a supporter in court.

You'll want to know: patrōnus, patrōnī

patrōnus, patrōnī — "a patron; a defending counsel".

Patrōnus prō reō dīxit et iūdicēs mōvit.

The counsel spoke for the defendant and moved the judges.

Masculine. A patron protected his dependants and spoke for them in court. English patron.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patrōnus is built on pater, "father" (EtymDB): one who stands to others as a father. English patron comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: patrōnus, patrōnī
- Say it: patrōnus, patrōnī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with patrōnus, patrōnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a prosecutor, then the Latin for a supporter in court, then say patrōnus, patrōnī again

Before you move on

What does patrōnus, patrōnī mean? ("A patron; a defending counsel".) Say it once more.

309.5 testimōnium, testimōniī — evidence, testimony

Before the new one: say the Latin for a supporter in court, then the Latin for a patron.

You'll want to know: testimōnium, testimōniī

testimōnium, testimōniī — "evidence, testimony".

Testimōnium ancillae ūtile erat.

The maid's evidence was useful.

Neuter, from testis, 'witness' (taught). Testimōnium dīcere: to give evidence.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

testimōnium is built on testis, "witness" (EtymDB), with the ending -mōnium. English testimony comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: testimōnium, testimōniī
- Say it: testimōnium, testimōniī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with testimōnium, testimōniī
- Recall: say the Latin for a supporter in court, then the Latin for a patron, then say testimōnium, testimōniī again

Before you move on

What does testimōnium, testimōniī mean? ("Evidence, testimony".) Say it once more.

Chapter 310

Vērum aut falsum

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about truth and lies in court: to swear, perjury, to lie, to prove and information.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 310: I can talk about truth and lies in court: to swear, perjury, to lie, to prove and information.

310.1 iūrō, iūrāre — to swear (an oath)

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a patron, then the Latin for evidence.

You'll want to know: iūrō, iūrāre

iūrō, iūrāre — "to swear (an oath)".

> Testis iūrāvit sē vēra dīcere.
>
> The witness swore that he was telling the truth.

iūrō, iūrāre, iūrāvī, iūrātum, with accusative and infinitive. English jury comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūrō is built on iūs, "right, law" (EtymDB): to bind oneself by law. English jury comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iūrō, iūrāre
- Say it: iūrō, iūrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iūrō, iūrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a patron, then the Latin for evidence, then say iūrō, iūrāre again

Before you move on

What does iūrō, iūrāre mean? ("To swear (an oath)".) Say it once more.

310.2 periūrium, periūriī — perjury, a false oath

Before the new one: say the Latin for evidence, then the Latin for to swear.

You'll want to know: periūrium, periūriī

periūrium, periūriī — "perjury, a false oath".

Periūrium grave crīmen erat.

Perjury was a serious crime.

Neuter, from periūrus, 'oath-breaking': per- here means 'wrongly'. English perjury.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

periūrium is built on periūrus, "oath-breaking" (EtymDB), from per-, here "wrongly", and the root of iūrō, "to swear". English perjury comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: periūrium, periūriī
- Say it: periūrium, periūriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with periūrium, periūriī
- Recall: say the Latin for evidence, then the Latin for to swear, then say periūrium, periūriī again

Before you move on

What does periūrium, periūriī mean? ("Perjury, a false oath".) Say it once more.

310.3 mentior, mentīrī — to lie, to tell a lie

Before the new one: say the Latin for to swear, then the Latin for perjury.

You'll want to know: mentior, mentīrī

mentior, mentīrī — "to lie, to tell a lie".

Servus mentītus est; nam pōculum ipse frēgerat.

The slave lied, for he had broken the cup himself.

mentior, mentīrī, mentītus sum, a deponent. Its noun mendācium, 'a lie', is taught.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mentior is probably built, says Lewis & Short, on the root of mēns, "mind", with a first sense "to invent, to make up"; this is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mentior, mentīrī
- Say it: mentior, mentīrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mentior, mentīrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to swear, then the Latin for perjury, then say mentior, mentīrī again

Before you move on

What does mentior, mentīrī mean? ("To lie, to tell a lie".) Say it once more.

310.4 arguō, arguere — to prove; to accuse

Before the new one: say the Latin for perjury, then the Latin for to lie.

You'll want to know: arguō, arguere

arguō, arguere — "to prove; to accuse".

Haec epistula eum mentītum esse arguit.

This letter proves that he lied.

arguō, arguere, arguī, argūtum: to make clear, and so to prove or to charge. English argue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arguō first meant "to make clear"; Lewis & Short connect it with the root of argentum, "silver", and Greek argos, "bright". English argue comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: arguō, arguere
- Say it: arguō, arguere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with arguō, arguere
- Recall: say the Latin for perjury, then the Latin for to lie, then say arguō, arguere again

Before you move on

What does arguō, arguere mean? ("To prove; to accuse".) Say it once more.

310.5 indicium, indiciī — information, evidence; a sign

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lie, then the Latin for to prove.

You'll want to know: indicium, indiciī

indicium, indiciī — "information, evidence; a sign".

Servus cōnsulī indicium dedit.

A slave gave information to the consul.

Neuter. Indicium facere: to give information. A clue in a story is also an indicium.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

indicium is built on index, "one who points out, an informer" (EtymDB), and so on the verb meaning "to point out": a pointing out.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: indicium, indiciī
- Say it: indicium, indiciī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with indicium, indiciī
- Recall: say the Latin for to lie, then the Latin for to prove, then say indicium, indiciī again

Before you move on

What does indicium, indiciī mean? ("Information, evidence; a sign".) Say it once more.

Chapter 311

Damnātus aut absolūtus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell the end of a trial: to condemn, to acquit, guilty, innocent and the blame.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 311: I can tell the end of a trial: to condemn, to acquit, guilty, innocent and the blame.

311.1 damnō, damnāre — to condemn, to find guilty

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to prove, then the Latin for information.

You'll want to know: damnō, damnāre

damnō, damnāre — "to condemn, to find guilty".

> Iūdicēs eum fūrtī damnāvērunt.
>
> The judges found him guilty of theft.

damnō, damnāre, damnāvī, damnātum, with the genitive of the charge. From damnum, 'loss' (taught). English damn.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

damnō is built on damnum, "loss, damage" (EtymDB): to inflict a loss, a penalty. English damn and condemn come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: damnō, damnāre
- Say it: damnō, damnāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with damnō, damnāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to prove, then the Latin for information, then say damnō, damnāre again

Before you move on

What does damnō, damnāre mean? ("To condemn, to find guilty".) Say it once more.

311.2 absolvō, absolvere — to acquit; to set free; to finish

Before the new one: say the Latin for information, then the Latin for to condemn.

You'll want to know: absolvō, absolvere

absolvō, absolvere — "to acquit; to set free; to finish".

Reus absolūtus est et laetus domum rediit.

The defendant was acquitted and went home happy.

absolvō, absolvere, absolvī, absolūtum: ab + solvō (taught), to loosen from. English absolve.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

absolvō joins ab, "from", and solvō, "to loosen" (EtymDB): to set loose from a charge. English absolve comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: absolvō, absolvere
- Say it: absolvō, absolvere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with absolvō, absolvere
- Recall: say the Latin for information, then the Latin for to condemn, then say absolvō, absolvere again

Before you move on

What does absolvō, absolvere mean? ("To acquit; to set free; to finish".) Say it once more.

311.3 nocēns, nocentis — guilty; harmful

Before the new one: say the Latin for to condemn, then the Latin for to acquit.

You'll want to know: nocēns, nocentis

nocēns, nocentis — "guilty; harmful".

Nocēns poenam dare dēbet.

The guilty man must pay the penalty.

One ending, genitive nocentis: the present participle of a verb meaning 'to harm'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nocēns is the present participle of noceō, "to harm" (Lewis & Short): doing harm, and so guilty.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nocēns, nocentis
- Say it: nocēns, nocentis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nocēns, nocentis
- Recall: say the Latin for to condemn, then the Latin for to acquit, then say nocēns, nocentis again

Before you move on

What does nocēns, nocentis mean? ("Guilty; harmful".) Say it once more.

311.4 innocēns, innocentis — innocent, harmless

Before the new one: say the Latin for to acquit, then the Latin for guilty.

You'll want to know: innocēns, innocentis

innocēns, innocentis — "innocent, harmless".

Omnēs scīvērunt eum innocentem esse.

Everyone knew that he was innocent.

One ending, genitive innocentis: in- 'not' + nocēns. English innocent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

innocēns joins in-, "not", and nocēns, "harmful, guilty" (EtymDB): doing no harm. English innocent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: innocēns, innocentis
- Say it: innocēns, innocentis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with innocēns, innocentis
- Recall: say the Latin for to acquit, then the Latin for guilty, then say innocēns, innocentis again

Before you move on

What does innocēns, innocentis mean? ("Innocent, harmless".) Say it once more.

311.5 culpa, culpae — fault, blame; guilt

Before the new one: say the Latin for guilty, then the Latin for innocent.

You'll want to know: culpa, culpae

culpa, culpae — "fault, blame; guilt".

Nōn mea culpa erat, sed tua.

It was not my fault, but yours.

Feminine. In culpā esse: to be to blame. English culpable comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

culpa is inherited from Proto-Italic *$k^w olpā$, "a wrong, a mistake" (EtymDB). English culpable and culprit come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: culpa, culpae
- Say it: culpa, culpae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with culpa, culpae
- Recall: say the Latin for guilty, then the Latin for innocent, then say culpa, culpae again

Before you move on

What does culpa, culpae mean? ("Fault, blame; guilt".) Say it once more.

Chapter 312

Poena et supplicium

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell what punishment followed: to admit, to punish, execution, exile and chains.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 312: I can tell what punishment followed: to admit, to punish, execution, exile and chains.

312.1 fateor, fatērī — to admit, to confess

> Before the new one: say the Latin for innocent, then the Latin for fault.

You'll want to know: fateor, fatērī

fateor, fatērī — "to admit, to confess".

> Tandem fūr fassus est sē crumēnam rapuisse.
>
> At last the thief admitted that he had snatched the purse.

fateor, fatērī, fassus sum, a deponent, with accusative and infinitive. English confess comes from a compound of it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fateor is inherited from Proto-Italic fatēōr* (EtymDB), usually traced to a root meaning "to speak", also seen in fārī, "to speak". English confess comes from a compound.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fateor, fatērī
- Say it: fateor, fatērī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fateor, fatērī
- Recall: say the Latin for innocent, then the Latin for fault, then say fateor, fatērī again

Before you move on

What does fateor, fatērī mean? ("To admit, to confess".) Say it once more.

312.2 pūniō, pūnīre — to punish

Before the new one: say the Latin for fault, then the Latin for to admit.

You'll want to know: pūniō, pūnīre

pūniō, pūnīre — "to punish".

Magister discipulōs pigrōs pūniēbat.

The teacher used to punish lazy pupils.

pūniō, pūnīre, pūnīvī, pūnītum, old form poeniō. From poena (taught). English punish.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūniō is built on poena, "penalty" (EtymDB), itself a loan from Greek poinē, "blood-money". English punish comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pūniō, pūnīre
- Say it: pūniō, pūnīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pūniō, pūnīre
- Recall: say the Latin for fault, then the Latin for to admit, then say pūniō, pūnīre again

Before you move on

What does pūniō, pūnīre mean? ("To punish".) Say it once more.

312.3 supplicium, supplicii̅ — punishment, execution; a prayer

Before the new one: say the Latin for to admit, then the Latin for to punish.

You'll want to know: supplicium, supplicii̅

supplicium, supplicii̅ — "punishment, execution; a prayer".

Prōditōrēs ad supplicium ductī sunt.

The traitors were led to execution.

Neuter. First a kneeling in prayer, then the kneeling of the condemned. Summum supplicium: the death penalty.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

supplicium is built on supplex, "kneeling, begging" (EtymDB): a kneeling down, in prayer or to receive punishment.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: supplicium, suppliciī
- Say it: supplicium, suppliciī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with supplicium, suppliciī
- Recall: say the Latin for to admit, then the Latin for to punish, then say supplicium, suppliciī again

Before you move on

What does supplicium, suppliciī mean? ("Punishment, execution; a prayer".) Say it once more.

312.4 exsilium, exsiliī — exile, banishment

Before the new one: say the Latin for to punish, then the Latin for punishment.

You'll want to know: exsilium, exsiliī

exsilium, exsiliī — "exile, banishment".

> Cōnsul in exsilium īre coāctus est.
>
> The consul was forced to go into exile.

Neuter, also exilium. A Roman citizen could often choose exile before his trial ended. English exile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exsilium is built on exsul, "an exiled person" (EtymDB), which Lewis & Short connect either with solum, "soil", or with a root meaning "to go"; the origin is not settled. English exile comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: exsilium, exsiliī
- Say it: exsilium, exsiliī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with exsilium, exsiliī
- Recall: say the Latin for to punish, then the Latin for punishment, then say exsilium, exsiliī again

Before you move on

What does exsilium, exsiliī mean? ("Exile, banishment".) Say it once more.

312.5 vinculum, vinculī — a chain, a bond

Before the new one: say the Latin for punishment, then the Latin for exile.

You'll want to know: vinculum, vinculī

vinculum, vinculī — "a chain, a bond".

> Latrōnēs in vinculīs tenēbantur.
>
> The bandits were kept in chains.

Neuter, also vinclum. In vincula conicere: to throw into prison.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vinculum is built on vinciō, "to bind, to fetter", with the tool ending -ulum (EtymDB): that which binds.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vinculum, vinculī
- Say it: vinculum, vinculī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vinculum, vinculī
- Recall: say the Latin for punishment, then the Latin for exile, then say vinculum, vinculī again

Before you move on

What does vinculum, vinculī mean? ("A chain, a bond".) Say it once more.

Chapter 313

Ruīna

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell of a building falling: to rush down, a collapse, to tumble down, to fall in and to fall off.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 313: I can tell of a building falling: to rush down, a collapse, to tumble down, to fall in and to fall off.

313.1 ruō, ruere — to rush; to fall down

Before the new one: say the Latin for exile, then the Latin for a chain.

You'll want to know: ruō, ruere

ruō, ruere — "to rush; to fall down".

> Aqua dē monte ruēbat.
>
> Water was rushing down from the mountain.

ruō, ruere, ruī, rutum: any violent movement, forward or down.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ruō is an inherited verb (EtymDB). English ruin comes from its noun ruīna.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ruō, ruere
- Say it: ruō, ruere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ruō, ruere
- Recall: say the Latin for exile, then the Latin for a chain, then say ruō, ruere again

Before you move on

What does ruō, ruere mean? ("To rush; to fall down".) Say it once more.

313.2 ruīna, ruīnae — a collapse, a fall; ruins

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chain, then the Latin for to rush.

You'll want to know: ruīna, ruīnae

ruīna, ruīnae — "a collapse, a fall; ruins".

Post ruīnam aedificiī nihil nisi saxa manēbat.

After the collapse of the building nothing remained but stones.

Feminine, from ruō. The plural ruīnae: ruins. English ruin.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ruīna is built on ruō, "to rush down, to collapse" (EtymDB): a falling down. English ruin comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ruīna, ruīnae
- Say it: ruīna, ruīnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ruīna, ruīnae
- Recall: say the Latin for a chain, then the Latin for to rush, then say ruīna, ruīnae again

Before you move on

What does ruīna, ruīnae mean? ("A collapse, a fall; ruins".) Say it once more.

313.3 corruō, corruere — to collapse, to tumble down

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rush, then the Latin for a collapse.

You'll want to know: corruō, corruere

corruō, corruere — "to collapse, to tumble down".

Tabernae mihi duae corruērunt.

Two of my shops have tumbled down.

corruō, corruere, corruī: con- + ruō. A landlord in one of Cicero's letters complains in these very words.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

corruō is built on ruō, "to fall down", with con-, "together, wholly" (Lewis & Short): to fall in a heap.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: corruō, corruere
- Say it: corruō, corruere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with corruō, corruere
- Recall: say the Latin for to rush, then the Latin for a collapse, then say corruō, corruere again

Before you move on

What does corruō, corruere mean? ("To collapse, to tumble down".) Say it once more.

313.4 collābor, collābī — to fall in, to collapse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a collapse, then the Latin for to collapse.

You'll want to know: collābor, collābī

collābor, collābī — "to fall in, to collapse".

Pōns vetus subitō collāpsus est.

The old bridge suddenly collapsed.

collābor, collābī, collāpsus sum, a deponent: con- + lābor (taught). English collapse comes from its participle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

collābor is built on lābor, "to slip, to fall", with con- (Lewis & Short): to fall together in ruins. English collapse comes from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: collābor, collābī
- Say it: collābor, collābī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with collābor, collābī
- Recall: say the Latin for a collapse, then the Latin for to collapse, then say collābor, collābī again

Before you move on

What does collābor, collābī mean? ("To fall in, to collapse".) Say it once more.

313.5 dēcidō, dēcidere — to fall down, to fall off

Before the new one: say the Latin for to collapse, then the Latin for to fall in.

You'll want to know: dēcidō, dēcidere

dēcidō, dēcidere — "to fall down, to fall off".

Tēgula dē tēctō dēcidit et ante mē frācta est.

A tile fell off the roof and broke in front of me.

dēcidō, dēcidere, dēcidī, short i: dē + cadō (taught). Do not confuse dēcīdō, 'to cut off'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēcidō is built on cadō, "to fall", with dē, "down from" (Lewis & Short); the vowel changes inside the compound.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēcidō, dēcidere
- Say it: dēcidō, dēcidere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēcidō, dēcidere
- Recall: say the Latin for to collapse, then the Latin for to fall in, then say dēcidō, dēcidere again

Before you move on

What does dēcidō, dēcidere mean? ("To fall down, to fall off".) Say it once more.

Chapter 314

Cāsus in viā

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a fall or a knock: to strike against, headlong, to hurl down, a blow and wounded.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 314: I can describe a fall or a knock: to strike against, headlong, to hurl down, a blow and wounded.

314.1 offendō, offendere — to strike against, to stumble; to offend

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fall in, then the Latin for to fall down.

You'll want to know: offendō, offendere

offendō, offendere — "to strike against, to stumble; to offend".

> Nocte pedem ad saxum offendī et cecidī.
>
> At night I struck my foot against a stone and fell.

offendō, offendere, offendī, offēnsum. First a knock against something, then hurt feelings. English offend.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

offendō joins ob-, "against", and an old verb fendō*, "to strike" (EtymDB), also seen in dēfendō, "to ward off". English offend comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: offendō, offendere
- Say it: offendō, offendere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with offendō, offendere
- Recall: say the Latin for to fall in, then the Latin for to fall down, then say offendō, offendere again

Before you move on

What does offendō, offendere mean? ("To strike against, to stumble; to offend".) Say it once more.

314.2 praeceps, praecipitis — headlong; steep

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fall down, then the Latin for to strike against.

You'll want to know: praeceps, praecipitis

praeceps, praecipitis — "headlong; steep".

Senex praeceps per scālās cecidit.

The old man fell headlong down the stairs.

One ending, genitive praecipitis: head first. Also 'steep': locus praeceps.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praeceps joins prae, "in front", and caput, "head" (EtymDB): head first. English precipice comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praeceps, praecipitis
- Say it: praeceps, praecipitis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praeceps, praecipitis
- Recall: say the Latin for to fall down, then the Latin for to strike against, then say praeceps, praecipitis again

Before you move on

What does praeceps, praecipitis mean? ("Headlong; steep".) Say it once more.

314.3 praecipitō, praecipitāre — to hurl headlong; to fall headlong

Before the new one: say the Latin for to strike against, then the Latin for headlong.

You'll want to know: praecipitō, praecipitāre

praecipitō, praecipitāre — "to hurl headlong; to fall headlong".

Equus subitō sē in fossam praecipitāvit.

The horse suddenly threw itself headlong into the ditch.

praecipitō, praecipitāre, praecipitāvī, praecipitātum, from praeceps. English precipitate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praecipitō is built on praeceps, "headlong" (EtymDB): to throw head first. English precipitate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praecipitō, praecipitāre
- Say it: praecipitō, praecipitāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praecipitō, praecipitāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to strike against, then the Latin for headlong, then say praecipitō, praecipitāre again

Before you move on

What does praecipitō, praecipitāre mean? ("To hurl headlong; to fall headlong".) Say it once more.

314.4 plāga, plāgae — a blow, a wound

Before the new one: say the Latin for headlong, then the Latin for to hurl headlong.

You'll want to know: plāga, plāgae

plāga, plāgae — "a blow, a wound".

Plāga in capite gravis erat.

The blow on the head was serious.

Feminine, with a long ā. Do not confuse plaga, 'a region' or 'a hunting net'. English plague comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plāga belongs with plangō, "to strike, to beat" (EtymDB), and matches Greek plēgē, "a blow" (Lewis & Short). English plague, a blow from heaven, comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: plāga, plāgae
- Say it: plāga, plāgae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with plāga, plāgae
- Recall: say the Latin for headlong, then the Latin for to hurl headlong, then say plāga, plāgae again

Before you move on

What does plāga, plāgae mean? ("A blow, a wound".) Say it once more.

314.5 saucius, saucia, saucium — wounded, hurt

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hurl headlong, then the Latin for a blow.

You'll want to know: saucius, saucia, saucium

saucius, saucia, saucium — "wounded, hurt".

Medicus mīlitēs sauciōs cūrābat.

The doctor was looking after the wounded soldiers.

Wounded but alive; vulnus (taught) is the wound itself. Caesar counts the sauciī after a battle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saucius is a Latin word whose origin is not settled (Lewis & Short, EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: saucius, saucia, saucium
- Say it: saucius, saucia, saucium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with saucius, saucia, saucium
- Recall: say the Latin for to hurl headlong, then the Latin for a blow, then say saucius, saucia, saucium again

Before you move on

What does saucius, saucia, saucium mean? ("Wounded, hurt".) Say it once more.

314.6 Words from chapters 307–314 — a review

Say the Latin for poison and a poisoner.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- poison, a poisoner, an ambush, a conspiracy, a traitor
- a judge, a trial, to judge, a law, law
- to accuse, a prosecutor, a supporter in court, a patron, evidence
- to swear, perjury, to lie, to prove, information
- to condemn, to acquit, guilty, innocent, fault
- to admit, to punish, punishment, exile, a chain

- to rush, a collapse, to collapse, to fall in, to fall down
- to strike against, headlong, to hurl headlong, a blow, wounded

Before you move on

Poison? (venēnum, venēnī.) A poisoner? (venēficus, venēficī.) An ambush? (īnsidiae, īnsidiārum.) A conspiracy? (coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis.) A traitor? (prōditor, prōditōris.) A judge? (iūdex, iūdicis.) A trial? (iūdicium, iūdiciī.) To judge? (iūdicō, iūdicāre.) A law? (lēx, lēgis.) Law? (iūs, iūris.) To accuse? (accūsō, accūsāre.) A prosecutor? (accūsātor, accūsātōris.) A supporter in court? (advocātus, advocātī.) A patron? (patrōnus, patrōnī.) Evidence? (testimōnium, testimōniī.) To swear? (iūrō, iūrāre.) Perjury? (periūrium, periūriī.) To lie? (mentior, mentīrī.) To prove? (arguō, arguere.) Information? (indicium, indiciī.) To condemn? (damnō, damnāre.) To acquit? (absolvō, absolvere.) Guilty? (nocēns, nocentis.) Innocent? (innocēns, innocentis.) Fault? (culpa, culpae.) To admit? (fateor, fatērī.) To punish? (pūniō, pūnīre.) Punishment? (supplicium, suppliciī.) Exile? (exsilium, exsiliī.) A chain? (vinculum, vinculī.) To rush? (ruō, ruere.) A collapse? (ruīna, ruīnae.) To collapse? (corruō, corruere.) To fall in? (collābor, collābī.) To fall down? (dēcidō, dēcidere.) To strike against? (offendō, offendere.) Headlong? (praeceps, praecipitis.) To hurl headlong? (praecipitō, praecipitāre.) A blow? (plāga, plāgae.) Wounded? (saucius, saucia, saucium.)

Chapter 315

Naufragium

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell the story of a shipwreck: the wreck, shipwrecked, to sink, to overwhelm and a disaster.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 315: I can tell the story of a shipwreck: the wreck, shipwrecked, to sink, to overwhelm and a disaster.

315.1 naufragium, naufragiī — a shipwreck

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a blow, then the Latin for wounded.

You'll want to know: naufragium, naufragiī

naufragium, naufragiī — "a shipwreck".

> Naufragium prope lītus factum est.
>
> A shipwreck happened near the shore.

Neuter, built from the words for 'ship' and 'to break'. Naufragium facere: to be shipwrecked.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

naufragium stands for an older nāvifragium*, from nāvis, "ship", and frangō, "to break" (Lewis & Short): a ship-breaking.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: naufragium, naufragiī
- Say it: naufragium, naufragiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with naufragium, naufragiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a blow, then the Latin for wounded, then say naufragium, naufragiī again

Before you move on

What does naufragium, naufragiī mean? ("A shipwreck".) Say it once more.

315.2 naufragus, naufraga, naufragum — shipwrecked

Before the new one: say the Latin for wounded, then the Latin for a shipwreck.

You'll want to know: naufragus, naufraga, naufragum

naufragus, naufraga, naufragum — "shipwrecked".

Nautae naufragī in līitore sedēbant.

The shipwrecked sailors were sitting on the shore.

As a noun, naufragus is a shipwrecked man; beggars told of their wrecks to win coins.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

naufragus joins nāvis, "ship", and frangō, "to break" (EtymDB): one whose ship is broken.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: naufragus, naufraga, naufragum
- Say it: naufragus, naufraga, naufragum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with naufragus, naufraga, naufragum
- Recall: say the Latin for wounded, then the Latin for a shipwreck, then say naufragus, naufraga, naufragum again

Before you move on

What does naufragus, naufraga, naufragum mean? ("Shipwrecked".) Say it once more.

315.3 mergō, mergere — to sink, to plunge, to dip

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shipwreck, then the Latin for shipwrecked.

You'll want to know: mergō, mergere

mergō, mergere — "to sink, to plunge, to dip".

Undae nāvem parvam mersērunt.

The waves sank the little ship.

mergō, mergere, mersī, mersum. English merge and submerge come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mergō is an inherited verb that Lewis & Short connect with a Sanskrit verb meaning "to dip". English merge, submerge and immerse come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mergō, mergere
- Say it: mergō, mergere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mergō, mergere
- Recall: say the Latin for a shipwreck, then the Latin for shipwrecked, then say mergō, mergere again

Before you move on

What does mergō, mergere mean? ("To sink, to plunge, to dip".) Say it once more.

315.4 obruō, obruere — to overwhelm, to bury

Before the new one: say the Latin for shipwrecked, then the Latin for to sink.

You'll want to know: obruō, obruere

obruō, obruere — "to overwhelm, to bury".

Tempestās nautās obruit.

The storm overwhelmed the sailors.

obruō, obruere, obruī, obrutum: ob + ruō, to rush over. Also of earth and ash: a town buried under ash.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obruō is built on ruō, "to rush, to fall", with ob- (EtymDB): to fall upon and cover over.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obruō, obruere
- Say it: obruō, obruere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obruō, obruere
- Recall: say the Latin for shipwrecked, then the Latin for to sink, then say obruō, obruere again

Before you move on

What does obruō, obruere mean? ("To overwhelm, to bury".) Say it once more.

315.5 calamitās, calamitātis — a disaster, a misfortune

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sink, then the Latin for to overwhelm.

You'll want to know: calamitās, calamitātis

calamitās, calamitātis — "a disaster, a misfortune".

Post illam calamitātem multī cīvēs pauperēs erant.

After that disaster many citizens were poor.

Feminine, 3rd declension. First harm to crops, then any disaster. English calamity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calamitās first meant "loss, damage", especially to crops (Lewis & Short); its origin is not settled. English calamity comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: calamitās, calamitātis
- Say it: calamitās, calamitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with calamitās, calamitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for to sink, then the Latin for to overwhelm, then say calamitās, calamitātis again

Before you move on

What does calamitās, calamitātis mean? ("A disaster, a misfortune".) Say it once more.

Chapter 316

Auxilium

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how people were rescued: to snatch away, unharmed, to come to help, to run to help and help.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 316: I can tell how people were rescued: to snatch away, unharmed, to come to help, to run to help and help.

316.1 ēripiō, ēripere — to snatch away, to rescue

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to overwhelm, then the Latin for a disaster.

You'll want to know: ēripiō, ēripere

ēripiō, ēripere — "to snatch away, to rescue".

> Pater fīlium ē flūmine ēripuit.
>
> The father snatched his son out of the river.

ēripiō, ēripere, ēripuī, ēreptum: ē + rapiō. Ēripere ex perīculō: to rescue from danger.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēripiō is built on rapiō, "to snatch", with ex-, "out" (EtymDB); the vowel changes inside the compound.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēripiō, ēripere
- Say it: ēripiō, ēripere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēripiō, ēripere
- Recall: say the Latin for to overwhelm, then the Latin for a disaster, then say ēripiō, ēripere again

Before you move on

What does ēripiō, ēripere mean? ("To snatch away, to rescue".) Say it once more.

316.2 incolumis, incolume — unharmed, safe

Before the new one: say the Latin for a disaster, then the Latin for to snatch away.

You'll want to know: incolumis, incolume

incolumis, incolume — "unharmed, safe".

Omnēs nautae incolumēs ad līitus pervēnērunt.

All the sailors reached the shore unharmed.

Two endings. Caesar uses it of soldiers who came back safe and sound.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incolumis joins in-, "not", and a second part that EtymDB traces to Proto-Italic kadami-*, "damaged". Lewis & Short compare calamitās; the details are not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: incolumis, incolume
- Say it: incolumis, incolume, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with incolumis, incolume
- Recall: say the Latin for a disaster, then the Latin for to snatch away, then say incolumis, incolume again

Before you move on

What does incolumis, incolume mean? ("Unharmed, safe".) Say it once more.

316.3 subveniō, subvenīre — to come to help

Before the new one: say the Latin for to snatch away, then the Latin for unharmed.

You'll want to know: subveniō, subvenīre

subveniō, subvenīre — "to come to help".

Vīcīnī celeriter subvēnērunt.

The neighbours quickly came to help.

subveniō, subvenīre, subvēnī, subventum, with the dative: mihi subvēnit. English subvention.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

subveniō is built on veniō, "to come", with sub- (EtymDB): to come up in support, as reserves do in battle. English subvention comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: subveniō, subvenīre
- Say it: subveniō, subvenīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with subveniō, subvenīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to snatch away, then the Latin for unharmed, then say subveniō, subvenīre again

Before you move on

What does subveniō, subvenīre mean? ("To come to help".) Say it once more.

316.4 succurrō, succurrere — to run to help

Before the new one: say the Latin for unharmed, then the Latin for to come to help.

You'll want to know: succurrō, succurrere

succurrō, succurrere — "to run to help".

Puellae in aquā clāmantī duo nautae succurrērunt.

Two sailors ran to help the girl who was shouting in the water.

succurrō, succurrere, succurrī, succursum, with the dative. English succour.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

succurrō is built on currō, "to run", with sub- (EtymDB): to run up to someone. English succour comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: succurrō, succurrere
- Say it: succurrō, succurrere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with succurrō, succurrere
- Recall: say the Latin for unharmed, then the Latin for to come to help, then say succurrō, succurrere again

Before you move on

What does succurrō, succurrere mean? ("To run to help".) Say it once more.

316.5 auxilium, auxiliī — help, aid

Before the new one: say the Latin for to come to help, then the Latin for to run to help.

You'll want to know: auxilium, auxiliī

auxilium, auxiliī — "help, aid".

Fēmina auxilium ā vīcīnīs petīvit.

The woman asked the neighbours for help.

Neuter. The plural auxilia means auxiliary troops. English auxiliary.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

auxilium is built on augeō, "to increase" (EtymDB): what adds to your strength. English auxiliary comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: auxilium, auxiliī
- Say it: auxilium, auxiliī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with auxilium, auxiliī
- Recall: say the Latin for to come to help, then the Latin for to run to help, then say auxilium, auxiliī again

Before you move on

What does auxilium, auxiliī mean? ("Help, aid".) Say it once more.

Chapter 317

Incendium

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a fire: a blaze, the heat, glowing ash, a firebrand and burning heat.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 317: I can describe a fire: a blaze, the heat, glowing ash, a firebrand and burning heat.

317.1 incendium, incendiī — a fire, a blaze

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to run to help, then the Latin for help.

You'll want to know: incendium, incendiī

incendium, incendiī — "a fire, a blaze".

> Noctū magnum incendium in urbe ortum est.
>
> At night a great fire broke out in the city.

Neuter, from incendō, 'to set on fire' (taught). Fire was the great fear of a crowded city of wooden floors and oil lamps.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incendium is built on incendō, "to set on fire" (EtymDB), from in and candeō, "to glow". English incendiary comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: incendium, incendiī
- Say it: incendium, incendiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with incendium, incendiī
- Recall: say the Latin for to run to help, then the Latin for help, then say incendium, incendiī again

Before you move on

What does incendium, incendiī mean? ("A fire, a blaze".) Say it once more.

317.2 aestus, aestūs — heat, glow; the tide

Before the new one: say the Latin for help, then the Latin for a fire.

You'll want to know: aestus, aestūs

aestus, aestūs — "heat, glow; the tide".

Propter aestum incendiī nēmō appropinquāre poterat.

Because of the heat of the fire nobody could come near.

Masculine, 4th declension. The heat of fire or summer, the surge of the sea, and the tide. Related to aestās (taught).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aestus is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to burn" (EtymDB), and is a cousin of aestās, "summer".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aestus, aestūs
- Say it: aestus, aestūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aestus, aestūs
- Recall: say the Latin for help, then the Latin for a fire, then say aestus, aestūs again

Before you move on

What does aestus, aestūs mean? ("Heat, glow; the tide".) Say it once more.

317.3 favilla, favillae — glowing ash, embers

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fire, then the Latin for heat.

You'll want to know: favilla, favillae

favilla, favillae — "glowing ash, embers".

Ventus favillam in tēcta vīcīna ferēbat.

The wind was carrying the glowing ash onto the roofs nearby.

Feminine, mostly poetic: the hot ash that drifts and starts new fires.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

favilla is linked by Lewis & Short with a root meaning "to shine", seen in Greek phōs, "light"; the link is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: favilla, favillae
- Say it: favilla, favillae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with favilla, favillae
- Recall: say the Latin for a fire, then the Latin for heat, then say favilla, favillae again

Before you move on

What does favilla, favillae mean? ("Glowing ash, embers".) Say it once more.

317.4 torris, torris — a firebrand, a burning log

Before the new one: say the Latin for heat, then the Latin for glowing ash.

You'll want to know: torris, torris

torris, torris — "a firebrand, a burning log".

Servus torrem ē focō rapuit.

A slave snatched a burning log from the hearth.

Masculine, 3rd declension: a piece of wood still burning.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

torris belongs with torreō, "to scorch, to roast" (Lewis & Short): the scorching log.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: torris, torris
- Say it: torris, torris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with torris, torris
- Recall: say the Latin for heat, then the Latin for glowing ash, then say torris, torris again

Before you move on

What does torris, torris mean? ("A firebrand, a burning log".) Say it once more.

317.5 ārdor, ārdōris — burning heat; passion

Before the new one: say the Latin for glowing ash, then the Latin for a firebrand.

You'll want to know: ārdor, ārdōris

ārdor, ārdōris — "burning heat; passion".

Ārdor flammārum mūrōs nigrōs fēcit.

The heat of the flames blackened the walls.

Masculine, 3rd declension, from ārdeō, 'to burn' (taught). Also a burning eagerness. English ardour.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ārdor is built on ārdeō, "to burn" (EtymDB): burning, in fire and in feeling. English ardour comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ārdor, ārdōris
- Say it: ārdor, ārdōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ārdor, ārdōris
- Recall: say the Latin for glowing ash, then the Latin for a firebrand, then say ārdor, ārdōris again

Before you move on

What does ārdor, ārdōris mean? ("Burning heat; passion".) Say it once more.

Chapter 318

Ārdet

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how things burned: to burn up, to scorch, to blaze, to smoke and to go up in flames.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 318: I can say how things burned: to burn up, to scorch, to blaze, to smoke and to go up in flames.

318.1 cremō, cremāre — to burn up, to cremate

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a firebrand, then the Latin for burning heat.

You'll want to know: cremō, cremāre

cremō, cremāre — "to burn up, to cremate".

> Ignis tōtum vīcum cremāvit.
>
> The fire burned up the whole street.

cremō, cremāre, cremāvī, cremātum. Romans usually burned their dead, and English cremate comes from this verb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cremō is inherited; EtymDB traces it to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to burn", also seen in carbō, "coal". English cremate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cremō, cremāre
- Say it: cremō, cremāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cremō, cremāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a firebrand, then the Latin for burning heat, then say cremō, cremāre again

Before you move on

What does cremō, cremāre mean? ("To burn up, to cremate".) Say it once more.

318.2 ūrō, ūrere — to burn; to scorch

Before the new one: say the Latin for burning heat, then the Latin for to burn up.

You'll want to know: ūrō, ūrere

ūrō, ūrere — "to burn; to scorch".

Sōl agrōs ūrēbat.

The sun was scorching the fields.

ūrō, ūrere, ussī, ustum. It has many compounds; English combustion comes from combūrō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūrō is an inherited verb; Lewis & Short compare Greek heuō, "to singe". English combustion comes from its compound combūrō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ūrō, ūrere
- Say it: ūrō, ūrere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ūrō, ūrere
- Recall: say the Latin for burning heat, then the Latin for to burn up, then say ūrō, ūrere again

Before you move on

What does ūrō, ūrere mean? ("To burn; to scorch".) Say it once more.

318.3 flagrō, flagrāre — to blaze, to be on fire

Before the new one: say the Latin for to burn up, then the Latin for to burn.

You'll want to know: flagrō, flagrāre

flagrō, flagrāre — "to blaze, to be on fire".

Domus flagrābat, et vīcīnī aquam portābant.

The house was blazing, and the neighbours were carrying water.

flagrō, flagrāre, flagrāvī: to blaze, and of people, to burn with a feeling. English flagrant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flagrō is inherited from Proto-Italic flagros*, "burning" (EtymDB), of the same family as flamma, "flame". English flagrant comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: flagrō, flagrāre
- Say it: flagrō, flagrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with flagrō, flagrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to burn up, then the Latin for to burn, then say flagrō, flagrāre again

Before you move on

What does flagrō, flagrāre mean? ("To blaze, to be on fire".) Say it once more.

318.4 fūmō, fūmāre — to smoke

Before the new one: say the Latin for to burn, then the Latin for to blaze.

You'll want to know: fūmō, fūmāre

fūmō, fūmāre — "to smoke".

Post incendium ruīnae diū fūmābant.

After the fire the ruins smoked for a long time.

fūmō, fūmāre, fūmāvī, from fūmus, 'smoke' (taught). English fume.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fūmō is built on fūmus, "smoke" (EtymDB). English fume comes from the same family through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fūmō, fūmāre
- Say it: fūmō, fūmāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fūmō, fūmāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to burn, then the Latin for to blaze, then say fūmō, fūmāre again

Before you move on

What does fūmō, fūmāre mean? ("To smoke".) Say it once more.

318.5 cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre — to go up in flames

Before the new one: say the Latin for to blaze, then the Latin for to smoke.

You'll want to know: cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre

cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre — "to go up in flames".

Tōtum aedificium ūnā nocte cōnflagrāvit.

The whole building went up in flames in a single night.

cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre, cōnflagrāvī, cōnflagrātum: con- 'wholly' + flagrō. English conflagration.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnflagrō is built on flagrō, "to blaze", with con-, "wholly" (Lewis & Short): to burn up entirely. English conflagration comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre
- Say it: cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to blaze, then the Latin for to smoke, then say cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre again

Before you move on

What does cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre mean? ("To go up in flames".) Say it once more.

Chapter 319

Vigilēs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how a fire was fought: the fire pump, the fire bucket, to put out, the night watch and to scorch.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 319: I can tell how a fire was fought: the fire pump, the fire bucket, to put out, the night watch and to scorch.

319.1 sīphō, sīphōnis — a fire pump; a siphon

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to smoke, then the Latin for to go up in flames.

You'll want to know: sīphō, sīphōnis

sīphō, sīphōnis — "a fire pump; a siphon".

> Oppidum nūllum sīphōnem habēbat.
>
> The town had no fire pump.

Masculine, 3rd declension, a Greek word. A Roman governor once wrote that a burning town had no sīphō and no buckets.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sīphō was borrowed from Greek siphōn, "a pipe" (Lewis & Short): a small pipe, a drinking tube, and a fire engine. English siphon comes from the same Greek word.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sīphō, sīphōnis
- Say it: sīphō, sīphōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sīphō, sīphōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to smoke, then the Latin for to go up in flames, then say sīphō, sīphōnis again

Before you move on

What does sīphō, sīphōnis mean? ("A fire pump; a siphon".) Say it once more.

319.2 hama, hamae — a fire bucket

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go up in flames, then the Latin for a fire pump.

You'll want to know: hama, hamae

hama, hamae — "a fire bucket".

Vigilēs aquam hamīs portābant.

The watchmen were carrying water in fire buckets.

Feminine, short a. The watchmen of the fire service kept them ready.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hama was borrowed from Greek amē, "a bucket" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: hama, hamae
- Say it: hama, hamae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with hama, hamae
- Recall: say the Latin for to go up in flames, then the Latin for a fire pump, then say hama, hamae again

Before you move on

What does hama, hamae mean? ("A fire bucket".) Say it once more.

319.3 restinguō, restinguere — to put out, to quench

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fire pump, then the Latin for a fire bucket.

You'll want to know: restinguō, restinguere

restinguō, restinguere — "to put out, to quench".

Vigilēs incendium aquā restinxērunt.

The watchmen put out the fire with water.

restinguō, restinguere, restinxī, restinctum: close to exstinguō (taught). Also of thirst: sitim restinguere.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

restinguō is built on an old verb stinguō, "to quench", with re- (Lewis & Short); exstinguō is built on the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: restinguō, restinguere
- Say it: restinguō, restinguere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with restinguō, restinguere
- Recall: say the Latin for a fire pump, then the Latin for a fire bucket, then say restinguō, restinguere again

Before you move on

What does restinguō, restinguere mean? ("To put out, to quench".) Say it once more.

319.4 excubiae, excubiārum — the watch, guard duty

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fire bucket, then the Latin for to put out.

You'll want to know: excubiae, excubiārum

excubiae, excubiārum — "the watch, guard duty".

Vigilēs per tōtam noctem excubiās agēbant.

The watchmen kept watch all night long.

Feminine, plural only: lying out of doors on guard. Excubiās agere: to keep watch.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

excubiae is built on ex, "out", and cubō, "to lie down" (Lewis & Short): a lying out on guard.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: excubiae, excubiārum
- Say it: excubiae, excubiārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with excubiae, excubiārum
- Recall: say the Latin for a fire bucket, then the Latin for to put out, then say excubiae, excubiārum again

Before you move on

What does excubiae, excubiārum mean? ("The watch, guard duty".) Say it once more.

319.5 ambūrō, ambūrere — to scorch, to singe

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put out, then the Latin for the watch.

You'll want to know: ambūrō, ambūrere

ambūrō, ambūrere — "to scorch, to singe".

Ignis manūs eius ambussit, sed vīvus fūgit.

The fire scorched his hands, but he got away alive.

ambūrō, ambūrere, ambussī, ambustum: to burn all round, not right through.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ambūrō is built on ūrō, "to burn", with amb-, "around" (EtymDB): to burn round the edges.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ambūrō, ambūrere
- Say it: ambūrō, ambūrere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ambūrō, ambūrere
- Recall: say the Latin for to put out, then the Latin for the watch, then say ambūrō, ambūrere again

Before you move on

What does ambūrō, ambūrere mean? ("To scorch, to singe".) Say it once more.

Chapter 320

Pavor

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe fear in a story: panic, fear, dread, frightened and to be in a flurry.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 320: I can describe fear in a story: panic, fear, dread, frightened and to be in a flurry.

320.1 pavor, pavōris — panic, terror

Before the new one: say the Latin for the watch, then the Latin for to scorch.

You'll want to know: pavor, pavōris

pavor, pavōris — "panic, terror".

Pavor omnēs cīvēs cēpit.

Panic seized all the citizens.

Masculine, 3rd declension. A sudden fear that shakes the body.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pavor is built on paveō, "to tremble with fear" (EtymDB): the trembling itself.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pavor, pavōris
- Say it: pavor, pavōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pavor, pavōris
- Recall: say the Latin for the watch, then the Latin for to scorch, then say pavor, pavōris again

Before you move on

What does pavor, pavōris mean? ("Panic, terror".) Say it once more.

320.2 metus, metūs — fear, dread

Before the new one: say the Latin for to scorch, then the Latin for panic.

You'll want to know: metus, metūs

metus, metūs — "fear, dread".

Propter metum hostium portās clausērunt.

Out of fear of the enemy they shut the gates.

Masculine, 4th declension. A steady, lasting fear, beside timor (taught).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

metus is a Latin word whose earlier origin is not settled (Lewis & Short, EtymDB). Its verb is metuō, "to fear" (taught).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: metus, metūs
- Say it: metus, metūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with metus, metūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to scorch, then the Latin for panic, then say metus, metūs again

Before you move on

What does metus, metūs mean? ("Fear, dread".) Say it once more.

320.3 formīdō, formīdinis — dread, terror

Before the new one: say the Latin for panic, then the Latin for fear.

You'll want to know: formīdō, formīdinis

formīdō, formīdinis — "dread, terror".

Magna formīdō mīlitēs tenēbat.

Great dread held the soldiers.

Feminine, 3rd declension. There is also a verb formīdō, formīdāre, 'to dread'; English formidable comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

formīdō is explained by Lewis & Short as "the fear that makes one rigid", from a root also seen in firmus, "firm"; the link is not certain. English formidable comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: formīdō, formīdinis
- Say it: formīdō, formīdinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with formīdō, formīdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for panic, then the Latin for fear, then say formīdō, formīdinis again

Before you move on

What does formīdō, formīdinis mean? ("Dread, terror".) Say it once more.

320.4 pavidus, pavida, pavidum — frightened, trembling

Before the new one: say the Latin for fear, then the Latin for dread.

You'll want to know: pavidus, pavida, pavidum

pavidus, pavida, pavidum — "frightened, trembling".

Pavida ancilla in angulō sedēbat.

The frightened maid was sitting in the corner.

From the same verb as pavor. Plautus pairs it with timidus (taught).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pavidus is built on paveō, "to tremble with fear", with the adjective ending -idus (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pavidus, pavida, pavidum
- Say it: pavidus, pavida, pavidum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pavidus, pavida, pavidum
- Recall: say the Latin for fear, then the Latin for dread, then say pavidus, pavida, pavidum again

Before you move on

What does pavidus, pavida, pavidum mean? ("Frightened, trembling".) Say it once more.

320.5 trepidō, trepidāre — to panic, to be in a flurry

Before the new one: say the Latin for dread, then the Latin for frightened.

You'll want to know: trepidō, trepidāre

trepidō, trepidāre — "to panic, to be in a flurry".

> Cīvēs in vīīs trepidābant, nec quid facerent sciēbant.
>
> The citizens were rushing about in alarm in the streets and did not know what to do.

trepidō, trepidāre, trepidāvī, trepidātum: anxious hurrying, the bustle of fear. English trepidation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trepidō is built on trepidus, "restless, alarmed" (EtymDB). English trepidation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: trepidō, trepidāre
- Say it: trepidō, trepidāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with trepidō, trepidāre
- Recall: say the Latin for dread, then the Latin for frightened, then say trepidō, trepidāre again

Before you move on

What does trepidō, trepidāre mean? ("To panic, to be in a flurry".) Say it once more.

Chapter 321

Minae et tumultus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell of threats and uproar: threats, to threaten, to frighten, an uproar and shouting.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 321: I can tell of threats and uproar: threats, to threaten, to frighten, an uproar and shouting.

321.1 minae, minārum — threats

> Before the new one: say the Latin for frightened, then the Latin for to panic.

You'll want to know: minae, minārum

minae, minārum — "threats".

> Hostēs minās contrā urbem iactābant.
>
> The enemy were hurling threats against the city.

Feminine, plural. First the jutting points of a wall, then threats that hang over someone.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

minae first meant "the jutting points of a wall" (Lewis & Short); EtymDB traces it to Proto-Italic menā*, "a projection". English menace comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: minae, minārum
- Say it: minae, minārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with minae, minārum
- Recall: say the Latin for frightened, then the Latin for to panic, then say minae, minārum again

Before you move on

What does minae, minārum mean? ("Threats".) Say it once more.

321.2 minitor, minitārī — to threaten

Before the new one: say the Latin for to panic, then the Latin for threats.

You'll want to know: minitor, minitārī

minitor, minitārī — "to threaten".

Latrō mihi gladiō minitābātur.

The bandit was threatening me with a sword.

minitor, minitārī, minitātus sum, a deponent, with the dative of the person threatened.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

minitor is a stronger form of minor, "to threaten", which is built on minae, "threats" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: minitor, minitārī
- Say it: minitor, minitārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with minitor, minitārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to panic, then the Latin for threats, then say minitor, minitārī again

Before you move on

What does minitor, minitārī mean? ("To threaten".) Say it once more.

321.3 terreō, terrēre — to frighten

Before the new one: say the Latin for threats, then the Latin for to threaten.

You'll want to know: terreō, terrēre

terreō, terrēre — "to frighten".

Tonitrus īnfantem terruit.

The thunder frightened the baby.

terreō, terrēre, terruī, territum. English terrify and terror belong to this family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

terreō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to tremble, to frighten" (EtymDB). English terrify and terror come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: terreō, terrēre
- Say it: terreō, terrēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with terreō, terrēre
- Recall: say the Latin for threats, then the Latin for to threaten, then say terreō, terrēre again

Before you move on

What does terreō, terrēre mean? ("To frighten".) Say it once more.

321.4 tumultus, tumultūs — an uproar, a commotion

Before the new one: say the Latin for to threaten, then the Latin for to frighten.

You'll want to know: tumultus, tumultūs

tumultus, tumultūs — "an uproar, a commotion".

Magnus tumultus in forō erat.

There was a great commotion in the forum.

Masculine, 4th declension. Also an emergency war close to home. English tumult.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tumultus is perhaps related to tumeō, "to swell"; its origin is not settled (Lewis & Short). English tumult comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tumultus, tumultūs
- Say it: tumultus, tumultūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tumultus, tumultūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to threaten, then the Latin for to frighten, then say tumultus, tumultūs again

Before you move on

What does tumultus, tumultūs mean? ("An uproar, a commotion".) Say it once more.

321.5 clāmor, clāmōris — a shout, shouting

Before the new one: say the Latin for to frighten, then the Latin for an uproar.

You'll want to know: clāmor, clāmōris

clāmor, clāmōris — "a shout, shouting".

Subitō clāmor ingēns in viā ortus est.

Suddenly a huge shout went up in the street.

Masculine, 3rd declension, from clāmō (taught). Clāmōrem tollere: to raise a shout. English clamour.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clāmor is built on clāmō, "to shout" (EtymDB). English clamour comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: clāmor, clāmōris
- Say it: clāmor, clāmōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with clāmor, clāmōris
- Recall: say the Latin for to frighten, then the Latin for an uproar, then say clāmor, clāmōris again

Before you move on

What does clāmor, clāmōris mean? ("A shout, shouting".) Say it once more.

Chapter 322

Fuga

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how people got away or did not: flight, to escape, to get away, to perish and a guard.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 322: I can tell how people got away or did not: flight, to escape, to get away, to perish and a guard.

322.1 fuga, fugae — flight, running away

Before the new one: say the Latin for an uproar, then the Latin for a shout.

You'll want to know: fuga, fugae

fuga, fugae — "flight, running away".

Hostēs sē in fugam dedērunt.

The enemy took to flight.

Feminine, from fugiō (taught). In fugam dare: to put to flight.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fuga belongs with fugiō, "to flee" (Lewis & Short), and matches Greek phygē, "flight". English fugitive comes from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fuga, fugae
- Say it: fuga, fugae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fuga, fugae
- Recall: say the Latin for an uproar, then the Latin for a shout, then say fuga, fugae again

Before you move on

What does fuga, fugae mean? ("Flight, running away".) Say it once more.

322.2 effugiō, effugere — to escape

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shout, then the Latin for flight.

You'll want to know: effugiō, effugere

effugiō, effugere — "to escape".

Paucī ex incendiō effūgērunt.

Few escaped from the fire.

effugiō, effugere, effūgī: ex + fugiō, also with the accusative: perīculum effugere.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

effugiō is built on fugiō, "to flee", with ex-, "out" (Lewis & Short): to flee out of danger.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: effugiō, effugere
- Say it: effugiō, effugere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with effugiō, effugere
- Recall: say the Latin for a shout, then the Latin for flight, then say effugiō, effugere again

Before you move on

What does effugiō, effugere mean? ("To escape".) Say it once more.

322.3 ēvādō, ēvādere — to get away, to come out

Before the new one: say the Latin for flight, then the Latin for to escape.

You'll want to know: ēvādō, ēvādere

ēvādō, ēvādere — "to get away, to come out".

Nauta ex undīs ad lītus ēvāsit.

The sailor got out of the waves to the shore.

ēvādō, ēvādere, ēvāsī, ēvāsum: ē + vādō, 'to go'. English evade.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēvādō is built on vādō, "to go, to rush", with ex-, "out" (EtymDB). English evade comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēvādō, ēvādere
- Say it: ēvādō, ēvādere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēvādō, ēvādere
- Recall: say the Latin for flight, then the Latin for to escape, then say ēvādō, ēvādere again

Before you move on

What does ēvādō, ēvādere mean? ("To get away, to come out".) Say it once more.

322.4 pereō, perīre — to perish, to die; to be lost

Before the new one: say the Latin for to escape, then the Latin for to get away.

You'll want to know: pereō, perīre

pereō, perīre — "to perish, to die; to be lost".

In illō incendiō multī periērunt.

Many died in that fire.

pereō, perīre, periī, peritum, like eō (taught). In comedy a slave cries periī!, 'I am done for!'

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pereō is built on eō, "to go", with per-, here "to destruction" (Lewis & Short): to go to ruin. English perish comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pereō, perīre
- Say it: pereō, perīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pereō, perīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to escape, then the Latin for to get away, then say pereō, perīre again

Before you move on

What does pereō, perīre mean? ("To perish, to die; to be lost".) Say it once more.

322.5 custōs, custōdis — a guard, a keeper

Before the new one: say the Latin for to get away, then the Latin for to perish.

You'll want to know: custōs, custōdis

custōs, custōdis — "a guard, a keeper".

Custōdēs portae dormiēbant, et fūr intrāvit.

The guards of the gate were asleep, and the thief got in.

Masculine or feminine, 3rd declension. A satirist asked who would guard the guards themselves. English custody is of its family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

custōs is linked by Lewis & Short with a root meaning "to cover, to hide"; the link is not certain. English custody comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: custōs, custōdis
- Say it: custōs, custōdis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with custōs, custōdis
- Recall: say the Latin for to get away, then the Latin for to perish, then say custōs, custōdis again

Before you move on

What does custōs, custōdis mean? ("A guard, a keeper".) Say it once more.

322.6 Words from chapters 315–322 — a review

Say the Latin for a shipwreck and shipwrecked.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a shipwreck, shipwrecked, to sink, to overwhelm, a disaster
- to snatch away, unharmed, to come to help, to run to help, help
- a fire, heat, glowing ash, a firebrand, burning heat
- to burn up, to burn, to blaze, to smoke, to go up in flames
- a fire pump, a fire bucket, to put out, the watch, to scorch
- panic, fear, dread, frightened, to panic
- threats, to threaten, to frighten, an uproar, a shout
- flight, to escape, to get away, to perish, a guard

Before you move on

A shipwreck? (naufragium, naufragiī.) Shipwrecked? (naufragus, naufraga, naufragum.) To sink? (mergō, mergere.) To overwhelm? (obruō, obruere.) A disaster? (calamitās, calamitātis.) To snatch away? (ēripiō, ēripere.) Unharmed? (incolumis, incolume.) To come to help? (subveniō, subvenīre.) To run to help? (succurrō, succurrere.) Help? (auxilium, auxiliī.) A fire? (incendium, incendiī.) Heat? (aestus, aestūs.) Glowing ash? (favilla, favillae.) A firebrand? (torris, torris.) Burning heat? (ārdor, ārdōris.) To burn up? (cremō, cremāre.) To burn? (ūrō, ūrere.) To blaze? (flagrō, flagrāre.) To smoke? (fūmō, fūmāre.) To go up in flames? (cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre.) A fire pump? (sīphō, sīphōnis.) A fire bucket? (hama, hamae.) To put out? (restinguō, restinguere.) The watch? (excubiae, excubiārum.) To scorch? (ambūrō, ambūrere.) Panic? (pavor, pavōris.) Fear? (metus, metūs.) Dread? (formīdō, formīdinis.) Frightened? (pavidus, pavida, pavidum.) To panic? (trepidō, trepidāre.) Threats? (minae, minārum.) To threaten? (minitor, minitārī.) To frighten? (terreō, terrēre.) An uproar? (tumultus, tumultūs.) A shout? (clāmor, clāmōris.) Flight? (fuga, fugae.) To escape? (effugiō, effugere.) To get away? (ēvādō, ēvādere.) To perish? (pereō, perīre.) A guard? (custōs, custōdis.)

Chapter 323

Īnfāns nātus est

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a birth: to give birth, the birth, the midwife, to suckle and the nurse.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 323: I can talk about a birth: to give birth, the birth, the midwife, to suckle and the nurse.

323.1 pariō, parere — to give birth to; to produce

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to perish, then the Latin for a guard.

You'll want to know: pariō, parere

pariō, parere — "to give birth to; to produce".

> Uxor eius fīliam peperit.
>
> His wife gave birth to a daughter.

pariō, parere, peperī, partum, short a. Not pāreō, pārēre, 'to obey' (taught). English parent comes from its family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pariō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to bring forth" (EtymDB). English parent comes from its participle parēns.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pariō, parere
- Say it: pariō, parere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pariō, parere
- Recall: say the Latin for to perish, then the Latin for a guard, then say pariō, parere again

Before you move on

What does pariō, parere mean? ("To give birth to; to produce".) Say it once more.

323.2 partus, partūs — a birth; offspring

Before the new one: say the Latin for a guard, then the Latin for to give birth to.

You'll want to know: partus, partūs

partus, partūs — "a birth; offspring".

Partus facilis erat, et māter laeta.

The birth was easy, and the mother happy.

Masculine, 4th declension, from pariō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

partus is built on pariō, "to give birth" (EtymDB): a bearing, and what is born.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: partus, partūs
- Say it: partus, partūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with partus, partūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a guard, then the Latin for to give birth to, then say partus, partūs again

Before you move on

What does partus, partūs mean? ("A birth; offspring".) Say it once more.

323.3 obstetrīx, obstetrīcis — a midwife

Before the new one: say the Latin for to give birth to, then the Latin for a birth.

You'll want to know: obstetrīx, obstetrīcis

obstetrīx, obstetrīcis — "a midwife".

Obstetrīx māne ad domum vēnit.

The midwife came to the house in the morning.

Feminine, 3rd declension: she stands by the mother. English obstetrics.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obstetrīx is built on obstō, "to stand before" (EtymDB), with the feminine ending -trīx: she who stands by. English obstetrics comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obstetrīx, obstetrīcis
- Say it: obstetrīx, obstetrīcis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obstetrīx, obstetrīcis
- Recall: say the Latin for to give birth to, then the Latin for a birth, then say obstetrīx, obstetrīcis again

Before you move on

What does obstetrīx, obstetrīcis mean? ("A midwife".) Say it once more.

323.4 nūtriō, nūtrīre — to suckle, to feed, to rear

Before the new one: say the Latin for a birth, then the Latin for a midwife.

You'll want to know: nūtriō, nūtrīre

nūtriō, nūtrīre — "to suckle, to feed, to rear".

Māter ipsa īnfantem nūtrīvit.

The mother fed the baby herself.

nūtriō, nūtrīre, nūtrīvī, nūtrītum. English nourish and nutrition come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūtriō is an inherited verb meaning first "to suckle" (EtymDB). English nourish comes from it through French, and nutrition directly.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nūtriō, nūtrīre
- Say it: nūtriō, nūtrīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nūtriō, nūtrīre
- Recall: say the Latin for a birth, then the Latin for a midwife, then say nūtriō, nūtrīre again

Before you move on

What does nūtriō, nūtrīre mean? ("To suckle, to feed, to rear".) Say it once more.

323.5 nūtrīx, nūtrīcis — a nurse, a wet nurse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a midwife, then the Latin for to suckle.

You'll want to know: nūtrīx, nūtrīcis

nūtrīx, nūtrīcis — "a nurse, a wet nurse".

Nūtrīx īnfantem in bracchiīs tenēbat.

The nurse was holding the baby in her arms.

Feminine, 3rd declension, from nūtriō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūtrīx is built on nūtriō, "to suckle, to feed" (EtymDB), with the feminine ending -trīx.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nūtrīx, nūtrīcis
- Say it: nūtrīx, nūtrīcis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nūtrīx, nūtrīcis
- Recall: say the Latin for a midwife, then the Latin for to suckle, then say nūtrīx, nūtrīcis again

Before you move on

What does nūtrīx, nūtrīcis mean? ("A nurse, a wet nurse".) Say it once more.

Chapter 324

Puer et pueritia

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about childhood: the cradle, a boy, infancy, childhood and to bring up.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 324: I can talk about childhood: the cradle, a boy, infancy, childhood and to bring up.

324.1 cūnae, cūnārum — a cradle

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to suckle, then the Latin for a nurse.

You'll want to know: cūnae, cūnārum

cūnae, cūnārum — "a cradle".

> Īnfāns in cūnīs dormiēbat.
>
> The baby was sleeping in the cradle.

Feminine, plural. In Plautus a grown man is asked if he still sleeps in cūnīs.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūnae is inherited from Proto-Italic koinā*, "cradle" (EtymDB), from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to lie down".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cūnae, cūnārum
- Say it: cūnae, cūnārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cūnae, cūnārum
- Recall: say the Latin for to suckle, then the Latin for a nurse, then say cūnae, cūnārum again

Before you move on

What does cūnae, cūnārum mean? ("A cradle".) Say it once more.

324.2 puer, puerī — a boy; a child; a slave boy

Before the new one: say the Latin for a nurse, then the Latin for a cradle.

You'll want to know: puer, puerī

puer, puerī — "a boy; a child; a slave boy".

Puer in hortō lūdēbat.

The boy was playing in the garden.

Masculine, 2nd declension; the e stays in every form. Also a young slave of any age; the plural puerī can mean 'children'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

puer is inherited from Proto-Indo-European *$ph_2weros$ (EtymDB), from a root meaning "few, small". English puerile, "childish", comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: puer, puerī
- Say it: puer, puerī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with puer, puerī
- Recall: say the Latin for a nurse, then the Latin for a cradle, then say puer, puerī again

Before you move on

What does puer, puerī mean? ("A boy; a child; a slave boy".) Say it once more.

324.3 īnfantia, īnfantiae — infancy, early childhood

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cradle, then the Latin for a boy.

You'll want to know: īnfantia, īnfantiae

īnfantia, īnfantiae — "infancy, early childhood".

Ab īnfantiā in vīllā avī vīxit.

From early childhood he lived at his grandfather's villa.

Feminine, from īnfāns (taught), 'not yet speaking'. English infancy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnfantia is built on īnfāns, "unable to speak" (EtymDB), from in-, "not", and fārī, "to speak". English infancy comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnfantia, īnfantiae
- Say it: īnfantia, īnfantiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnfantia, īnfantiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a cradle, then the Latin for a boy, then say īnfantia, īnfantiae again

Before you move on

What does īnfantia, īnfantiae mean? ("Infancy, early childhood".) Say it once more.

324.4 pueritia, pueritiae — childhood, boyhood

Before the new one: say the Latin for a boy, then the Latin for infancy.

You'll want to know: pueritia, pueritiae

pueritia, pueritiae — "childhood, boyhood".

In pueritiā multās fābulās audiēbam.

In my childhood I used to hear many stories.

Feminine, from puer; up to about the seventeenth year.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pueritia is built on puer, "boy, child", with the ending -itia for a state (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pueritia, pueritiae
- Say it: pueritia, pueritiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pueritia, pueritiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a boy, then the Latin for infancy, then say pueritia, pueritiae again

Before you move on

What does pueritia, pueritiae mean? ("Childhood, boyhood".) Say it once more.

324.5 ēducō, ēducāre — to bring up, to rear

Before the new one: say the Latin for infancy, then the Latin for childhood.

You'll want to know: ēducō, ēducāre

ēducō, ēducāre — "to bring up, to rear".

Avia eum ēducāvit, quod parentēs aberant.

His grandmother brought him up, because his parents were away.

ēducō, ēducāre, ēducāvī, ēducātum, first conjugation, short u. Do not confuse ēdūcō, ēdūcere, 'to lead out'. English educate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēducō is built on ēdūcō, "to lead out, to draw out" (Lewis & Short), and so on dūcō, "to lead". English educate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēducō, ēducāre
- Say it: ēducō, ēducāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēducō, ēducāre
- Recall: say the Latin for infancy, then the Latin for childhood, then say ēducō, ēducāre again

Before you move on

What does ēducō, ēducāre mean? ("To bring up, to rear".) Say it once more.

Chapter 325

Nōmen et bulla

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a Roman child growing up: the amulet, the toys, the first name, the extra family name and the guardian.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 325: I can talk about a Roman child growing up: the amulet, the toys, the first name, the extra family name and the guardian.

325.1 bulla, bullae — an amulet (worn by a child); a bubble

Before the new one: say the Latin for childhood, then the Latin for to bring up.

You'll want to know: bulla, bullae

bulla, bullae — "an amulet (worn by a child); a bubble".

> Puer bullam auream in collō gerēbat.
>
> The boy wore a golden amulet round his neck.

Feminine. First a bubble, then the round locket a freeborn boy wore until he came of age. English bullet and the papal bull come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bulla first meant "a bubble", anything swelling into a round shape (Lewis & Short); where the word comes from is not settled. English bull, a papal letter with a round seal, comes from it, and bullet through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bulla, bullae
- Say it: bulla, bullae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bulla, bullae
- Recall: say the Latin for childhood, then the Latin for to bring up, then say bulla, bullae again

Before you move on

What does bulla, bullae mean? ("An amulet (worn by a child); a bubble".) Say it once more.

325.2 crepundia, crepundiōrum — a rattle; childhood toys

Before the new one: say the Latin for to bring up, then the Latin for an amulet.

You'll want to know: crepundia, crepundiōrum

crepundia, crepundiōrum — "a rattle; childhood toys".

Nūtrīx īnfantī crepundia dedit.

The nurse gave the baby a rattle.

Neuter, plural only. In comedies a lost child is recognised by the little toys kept in a box.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crepundia is built on crepō, "to rattle, to creak" (Lewis & Short): things that rattle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: crepundia, crepundiōrum
- Say it: crepundia, crepundiōrum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with crepundia, crepundiōrum
- Recall: say the Latin for to bring up, then the Latin for an amulet, then say crepundia, crepundiōrum again

Before you move on

What does crepundia, crepundiōrum mean? ("A rattle; childhood toys".) Say it once more.

325.3 praenōmen, praenōminis — a first name

Before the new one: say the Latin for an amulet, then the Latin for a rattle.

You'll want to know: praenōmen, praenōminis

praenōmen, praenōminis — "a first name".

Pater fīliō praenōmen avī dedit.

The father gave his son his grandfather's first name.

Neuter, 3rd declension: the name before the family name. Romans had few first names and wrote them short.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praenōmen joins prae, "before", and nōmen, "name" (Lewis & Short): the name in front of the family name.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praenōmen, praenōminis
- Say it: praenōmen, praenōminis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praenōmen, praenōminis
- Recall: say the Latin for an amulet, then the Latin for a rattle, then say praenōmen, praenōminis again

Before you move on

What does praenōmen, praenōminis mean? ("A first name".) Say it once more.

325.4 cognōmen, cognōminis — an extra family name, a surname

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rattle, then the Latin for a first name.

You'll want to know: cognōmen, cognōminis

cognōmen, cognōminis — "an extra family name, a surname".

Ob magnam victōriam cognōmen novum accēpit.

Because of a great victory he received a new surname.

Neuter, 3rd declension. The third name, which often told something about a person or a branch of the family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cognōmen joins co-, "together with", and nōmen, "name" (EtymDB): the name added to the family name.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cognōmen, cognōminis
- Say it: cognōmen, cognōminis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cognōmen, cognōminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a rattle, then the Latin for a first name, then say cognōmen, cognōminis again

Before you move on

What does cognōmen, cognōminis mean? ("An extra family name, a surname".) Say it once more.

325.5 tūtor, tūtōris — a guardian, a protector

Before the new one: say the Latin for a first name, then the Latin for an extra family name.

You'll want to know: tūtor, tūtōris

tūtor, tūtōris — "a guardian, a protector".

Avunculus tūtor puerōrum factus est.

Their uncle became the boys' guardian.

Masculine, 3rd declension. A child with no father had a tūtor to keep his property safe. English tutor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tūtor is built on tueor, "to watch over, to protect" (Lewis & Short): a protector. English tutor comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tūtor, tūtōris
- Say it: tūtor, tūtōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tūtor, tūtōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a first name, then the Latin for an extra family name, then say tūtor, tūtōris again

Before you move on

What does tūtor, tūtōris mean? ("A guardian, a protector".) Say it once more.

Chapter 326

Aetātēs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the ages of life: young adulthood, youth, old age, orphaned and a ward.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 326: I can talk about the ages of life: young adulthood, youth, old age, orphaned and a ward.

326.1 adulēscentia, adulēscentiae — young adulthood, youth

Before the new one: say the Latin for an extra family name, then the Latin for a guardian.

You'll want to know: adulēscentia, adulēscentiae

adulēscentia, adulēscentiae — "young adulthood, youth".

> In adulēscentiā multa et stulta fēcī.
>
> In my youth I did many foolish things.

Feminine, from adulēscēns (taught): roughly from fifteen to thirty. English adolescence.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

adulēscentia is built on adulēscēns, the participle of adulēscō, "to grow up" (Lewis & Short). English adolescence comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: adulēscentia, adulēscentiae
- Say it: adulēscentia, adulēscentiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with adulēscentia, adulēscentiae
- Recall: say the Latin for an extra family name, then the Latin for a guardian, then say adulēscentia, adulēscentiae again

Before you move on

What does adulēscentia, adulēscentiae mean? ("Young adulthood, youth".) Say it once more.

326.2 iuventūs, iuventūtis — youth; young people

Before the new one: say the Latin for a guardian, then the Latin for young adulthood.

You'll want to know: iuventūs, iuventūtis

iuventūs, iuventūtis — "youth; young people".

Tōta iuventūs urbis in campō lūdēbat.

All the young people of the city were playing on the field.

Feminine, 3rd declension, from iuvenis, 'young'. Both the time of youth and the young people themselves.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iuventūs is built on iuvenis, "young" (EtymDB), which is inherited and a cousin of English young. English juvenile comes from iuvenis.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iuventūs, iuventūtis
- Say it: iuventūs, iuventūtis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iuventūs, iuventūtis
- Recall: say the Latin for a guardian, then the Latin for young adulthood, then say iuventūs, iuventūtis again

Before you move on

What does iuventūs, iuventūtis mean? ("Youth; young people".) Say it once more.

326.3 senectūs, senectūtis — old age

Before the new one: say the Latin for young adulthood, then the Latin for youth.

You'll want to know: senectūs, senectūtis

senectūs, senectūtis — "old age".

Avus meus in senectūte in vīllā habitābat.

In his old age my grandfather lived at the villa.

Feminine, 3rd declension, from senex (taught). Cicero wrote a whole dialogue in its praise.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

senectūs is built on senex, "old man" (Lewis & Short). English senior and senile come from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: senectūs, senectūtis
- Say it: senectūs, senectūtis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with senectūs, senectūtis
- Recall: say the Latin for young adulthood, then the Latin for youth, then say senectūs, senectūtis again

Before you move on

What does senectūs, senectūtis mean? ("Old age".) Say it once more.

326.4 orbus, orba, orbum — orphaned; childless, bereft

Before the new one: say the Latin for youth, then the Latin for old age.

You'll want to know: orbus, orba, orbum

orbus, orba, orbum — "orphaned; childless, bereft".

Puella orba ab avunculō ēducāta est.

The orphaned girl was brought up by her uncle.

Bereft of parents or of children; with the ablative, bereft of anything.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

orbus is an inherited word that Lewis & Short compare with Greek orphanos, "orphan", the source of English orphan.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: orbus, orba, orbum
- Say it: orbus, orba, orbum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with orbus, orba, orbum
- Recall: say the Latin for youth, then the Latin for old age, then say orbus, orba, orbum again

Before you move on

What does orbus, orba, orbum mean? ("Orphaned; childless, bereft".) Say it once more.

326.5 pūpillus, pūpillī — a ward, an orphan boy

Before the new one: say the Latin for old age, then the Latin for orphaned.

You'll want to know: pūpillus, pūpillī

pūpillus, pūpillī — "a ward, an orphan boy".

Tūtor pecūniam pūpillī fidēliter servābat.

The guardian faithfully kept the ward's money safe.

Masculine. The girl is a pūpilla, also 'the pupil of the eye'. English pupil.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūpillus is a diminutive of pūpulus, "little child" (Lewis & Short): a little child in the care of another. English pupil comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pūpillus, pūpillī
- Say it: pūpillus, pūpillī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pūpillus, pūpillī
- Recall: say the Latin for old age, then the Latin for orphaned, then say pūpillus, pūpillī again

Before you move on

What does pūpillus, pūpillī mean? ("A ward, an orphan boy".) Say it once more.

Chapter 327

Spōnsālia

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about getting engaged and married: the bride-to-be, the betrothal, to promise in marriage, the bride and marriage.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 327: I can talk about getting engaged and married: the bride-to-be, the betrothal, to promise in marriage, the bride and marriage.

327.1 spōnsa, spōnsae — a bride-to-be, a fiancée

> Before the new one: say the Latin for orphaned, then the Latin for a ward.

You'll want to know: spōnsa, spōnsae

spōnsa, spōnsae — "a bride-to-be, a fiancée".

> Spōnsa eius ex oppidō vīcīnō erat.
>
> His bride-to-be was from a neighbouring town.

Feminine, a participle: a girl promised. Her man is the spōnsus. English spouse.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spōnsa is the feminine participle of spondeō, "to promise solemnly" (EtymDB): she who has been promised. English spouse comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: spōnsa, spōnsae
- Say it: spōnsa, spōnsae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with spōnsa, spōnsae
- Recall: say the Latin for orphaned, then the Latin for a ward, then say spōnsa, spōnsae again

Before you move on

What does spōnsa, spōnsae mean? ("A bride-to-be, a fiancée".) Say it once more.

327.2 spōnsālia, spōnsālium — a betrothal; an engagement party

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ward, then the Latin for a bride-to-be.

You'll want to know: spōnsālia, spōnsālium

spōnsālia, spōnsālium — "a betrothal; an engagement party".

Ad spōnsālia multī amīcī vēnērunt.

Many friends came to the engagement party.

Neuter, plural only. A ring was often given at the spōnsālia.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spōnsālia is built on spōnsālis, "of a betrothal", from spōnsa (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: spōnsālia, spōnsālium
- Say it: spōnsālia, spōnsālium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with spōnsālia, spōnsālium
- Recall: say the Latin for a ward, then the Latin for a bride-to-be, then say spōnsālia, spōnsālium again

Before you move on

What does spōnsālia, spōnsālium mean? ("A betrothal; an engagement party".) Say it once more.

327.3 dēspondeō, dēspondēre — to promise in marriage, to betroth

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bride-to-be, then the Latin for a betrothal.

You'll want to know: dēspondeō, dēspondēre

dēspondeō, dēspondēre — "to promise in marriage, to betroth".

Pater fīliam suam amīcō dēspondit.

The father promised his daughter in marriage to a friend.

dēspondeō, dēspondēre, dēspondī, dēspōnsum. Animum dēspondēre: to lose heart, which gives English despond.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēspondeō is built on spondeō, "to promise solemnly", with dē- (EtymDB): to promise away. English despond comes from its use with animum, "to lose heart".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēspondeō, dēspondēre
- Say it: dēspondeō, dēspondēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēspondeō, dēspondēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a bride-to-be, then the Latin for a betrothal, then say dēspondeō, dēspondēre again

Before you move on

What does dēspondeō, dēspondēre mean? ("To promise in marriage, to betroth".) Say it once more.

327.4 nūpta, nūptae — a bride, a married woman

Before the new one: say the Latin for a betrothal, then the Latin for to promise in marriage.

You'll want to know: nūpta, nūptae

nūpta, nūptae — "a bride, a married woman".

Nūpta ad domum marītī ducta est.

The bride was led to her husband's house.

Feminine, the participle of nūbō (taught), said of the woman who marries. Nova nūpta: the new bride.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūpta is the feminine participle of nūbō, "to marry" (EtymDB), which is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to wed". English nuptial comes from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nūpta, nūptae
- Say it: nūpta, nūptae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nūpta, nūptae
- Recall: say the Latin for a betrothal, then the Latin for to promise in marriage, then say nūpta, nūptae again

Before you move on

What does nūpta, nūptae mean? ("A bride, a married woman".) Say it once more.

327.5 mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī — marriage

Before the new one: say the Latin for to promise in marriage, then the Latin for a bride.

You'll want to know: mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī

mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī — "marriage".

Puellam in mātrimōnium dūxit.

He married the girl.

Neuter. In mātrimōnium dūcere: (of a man) to marry. English matrimony.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mātrimōnium is built on māter, "mother", with the ending -mōnium (EtymDB): the state of a mother, of a wife. English matrimony comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī
- Say it: mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī
- Recall: say the Latin for to promise in marriage, then the Latin for a bride, then say mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī again

Before you move on

What does mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī mean? ("Marriage".) Say it once more.

Chapter 328

Nūptiae

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a Roman wedding and its end: the bridal veil, the matron of honour, of a wedding, the married woman and divorce.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 328: I can describe a Roman wedding and its end: the bridal veil, the matron of honour, of a wedding, the married woman and divorce.

328.1 flammeum, flammeī — a bridal veil

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bride, then the Latin for marriage.

You'll want to know: flammeum, flammeī

flammeum, flammeī — "a bridal veil".

> Spōnsa flammeum gerēbat.
>
> The bride wore a flame-coloured veil.

Neuter, from flammeus, 'flame-coloured': the bride's orange-red veil.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flammeum is the neuter of flammeus, "flame-coloured", with vēlum, "veil", understood (Lewis & Short); flammeus is built on flamma,

"flame".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: flammeum, flammeī
- Say it: flammeum, flammeī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with flammeum, flammeī
- Recall: say the Latin for a bride, then the Latin for marriage, then say flammeum, flammeī again

Before you move on

What does flammeum, flammeī mean? ("A bridal veil".) Say it once more.

328.2 prōnuba, prōnubae — a matron of honour

Before the new one: say the Latin for marriage, then the Latin for a bridal veil.

You'll want to know: prōnuba, prōnubae

prōnuba, prōnubae — "a matron of honour".

Prōnuba dextrās spōnsī et spōnsae iūnxit.

The matron of honour joined the right hands of groom and bride.

Feminine. A woman married only once led the bride and joined the couple's hands.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōnuba is built on nūbō, "to marry", with prō (Lewis & Short): she who helps on the marrying.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōnuba, prōnubae
- Say it: prōnuba, prōnubae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōnuba, prōnubae
- Recall: say the Latin for marriage, then the Latin for a bridal veil, then say prōnuba, prōnubae again

Before you move on

What does prōnuba, prōnubae mean? ("A matron of honour".) Say it once more.

328.3 nūptiālis, nūptiāle — of a wedding, bridal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bridal veil, then the Latin for a matron of honour.

You'll want to know: nūptiālis, nūptiāle

nūptiālis, nūptiāle — "of a wedding, bridal".

Post cēnam nūptiālem spōnsa ad domum novam ducta est.

After the wedding feast the bride was led to her new home.

Two endings, from nūptiae (taught). Cēna nūptiālis: the wedding feast. English nuptial.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūptiālis is built on nūptiae, "wedding" (EtymDB), and so on nūbō, "to marry". English nuptial comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nūptiālis, nūptiāle
- Say it: nūptiālis, nūptiāle, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nūptiālis, nūptiāle
- Recall: say the Latin for a bridal veil, then the Latin for a matron of honour, then say nūptiālis, nūptiāle again

Before you move on

What does nūptiālis, nūptiāle mean? ("Of a wedding, bridal".) Say it once more.

328.4 mātrōna, mātrōnae — a married woman, a lady of the house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a matron of honour, then the Latin for of a wedding.

You'll want to know: mātrōna, mātrōnae

mātrōna, mātrōnae — "a married woman, a lady of the house".

Mātrōna servōs et domum cūrābat.

The lady of the house looked after the slaves and the home.

Feminine. The stola (taught) was the dress of a mātrōna. English matron.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mātrōna is built on māter, "mother" (EtymDB): a married woman of standing. English matron comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mātrōna, mātrōnae
- Say it: mātrōna, mātrōnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mātrōna, mātrōnae
- Recall: say the Latin for a matron of honour, then the Latin for of a wedding, then say mātrōna, mātrōnae again

Before you move on

What does mātrōna, mātrōnae mean? ("A married woman, a lady of the house".) Say it once more.

328.5 dīvortium, dīvortiī — a divorce; a separation

Before the new one: say the Latin for of a wedding, then the Latin for a married woman.

You'll want to know: dīvortium, dīvortiī

dīvortium, dīvortiī — "a divorce; a separation".

Post decem annōs dīvortium fēcērunt.

After ten years they divorced.

Neuter. Dīvortium facere: to divorce. Also a place where roads or rivers part.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīvortium is built on dīvertō, "to turn aside, to separate" (EtymDB): a parting of ways. English divorce comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dīvortium, dīvortiī
- Say it: dīvortium, dīvortiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dīvortium, dīvortiī
- Recall: say the Latin for of a wedding, then the Latin for a married woman, then say dīvortium, dīvortiī again

Before you move on

What does dīvortium, dīvortiī mean? ("A divorce; a separation".) Say it once more.

Chapter 329

Mors

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a death: death, dead, to breathe one's last, to die and to pass away.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 329: I can talk about a death: death, dead, to breathe one's last, to die and to pass away.

329.1 mors, mortis — death

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a married woman, then the Latin for a divorce.

You'll want to know: mors, mortis

mors, mortis — "death".

> Mors avī tōtam familiam trīstem fēcit.
>
> Grandfather's death made the whole family sad.

Feminine, 3rd declension, from the root of morior (taught). English mortal comes from its family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mors is inherited from Proto-Indo-European mértis*, "death" (EtymDB). English mortal comes from its family, as does mortgage, a dead pledge, through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mors, mortis
- Say it: mors, mortis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mors, mortis
- Recall: say the Latin for a married woman, then the Latin for a divorce, then say mors, mortis again

Before you move on

What does mors, mortis mean? ("Death".) Say it once more.

329.2 mortuus, mortua, mortuum — dead

Before the new one: say the Latin for a divorce, then the Latin for death.

You'll want to know: mortuus, mortua, mortuum

mortuus, mortua, mortuum — "dead".

Canis senex in angulō mortuus iacēbat.

The old dog lay dead in the corner.

The past participle of morior: mortuus est, he died. As a noun, mortuus is a dead man.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mortuus is the participle of morior, "to die" (EtymDB), and goes back to Proto-Italic mortwos*, "dead"; Greek brotos, "mortal", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mortuus, mortua, mortuum
- Say it: mortuus, mortua, mortuum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mortuus, mortua, mortuum
- Recall: say the Latin for a divorce, then the Latin for death, then say mortuus, mortua, mortuum again

Before you move on

What does mortuus, mortua, mortuum mean? ("Dead".) Say it once more.

329.3 exspīrō, exspīrāre — to breathe one's last

Before the new one: say the Latin for death, then the Latin for dead.

You'll want to know: exspīrō, exspīrāre

exspīrō, exspīrāre — "to breathe one's last".

Senex in lectō exspīrāvit.

The old man breathed his last in bed.

exspīrō, exspīrāre, exspīrāvī, exspīrātum: ex + spīrō (taught), to breathe out. English expire.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exspīrō is built on spīrō, "to breathe", with ex-, "out" (EtymDB): to breathe out the last breath. English expire comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: exspīrō, exspīrāre
- Say it: exspīrō, exspīrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with exspīrō, exspīrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for death, then the Latin for dead, then say exspīrō, exspīrāre again

Before you move on

What does exspīrō, exspīrāre mean? ("To breathe one's last".) Say it once more.

329.4 obeō, obīre — to die; to go to meet

Before the new one: say the Latin for dead, then the Latin for to breathe one's last.

You'll want to know: obeō, obīre

obeō, obīre — "to die; to go to meet".

Avia mea placidē in somnō obiit.

My grandmother died peacefully in her sleep.

obeō, obīre, obiī, obitum, like eō. Mortem obīre: to meet death; alone, obiit means 'he died'. English obituary.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obeō is built on eō, "to go", with ob, "towards" (EtymDB): to go to meet, and so to meet one's end. English obituary comes from its noun obitus, "death".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obeō, obīre
- Say it: obeō, obīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obeō, obīre
- Recall: say the Latin for dead, then the Latin for to breathe one's last, then say obeō, obīre again

Before you move on

What does obeō, obīre mean? ("To die; to go to meet".) Say it once more.

329.5 dēcēdō, dēcēdere — to depart; to die

Before the new one: say the Latin for to breathe one's last, then the Latin for to die.

You'll want to know: dēcēdō, dēcēdere

dēcēdō, dēcēdere — "to depart; to die".

Pater meus herī dēcessit.

My father passed away yesterday.

dēcēdō, dēcēdere, dēcessī, dēcessum: to go away, from a province or from life. English decease.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēcēdō is built on cēdō, "to go, to withdraw", with dē, "away" (Lewis & Short). English decease comes from its noun through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēcēdō, dēcēdere
- Say it: dēcēdō, dēcēdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēcēdō, dēcēdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to breathe one's last, then the Latin for to die, then say dēcēdō, dēcēdere again

Before you move on

What does dēcēdō, dēcēdere mean? ("To depart; to die".) Say it once more.

Chapter 330

Fūnus

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a Roman funeral: the funeral, to bury, the burial, the pyre and the funeral procession.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 330: I can describe a Roman funeral: the funeral, to bury, the burial, the pyre and the funeral procession.

330.1 fūnus, fūneris — a funeral; death

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to die, then the Latin for to depart.

You'll want to know: fūnus, fūneris

fūnus, fūneris — "a funeral; death".

> Fūnus māne per forum dūcēbātur.
>
> In the morning the funeral was being led through the forum.

Neuter, 3rd declension. The funerals of great men passed through the forum with music. English funeral.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fūnus is a Latin word whose origin is not settled; Lewis & Short link it, with doubt, with a word for smoke. English funeral comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fūnus, fūneris
- Say it: fūnus, fūneris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fūnus, fūneris
- Recall: say the Latin for to die, then the Latin for to depart, then say fūnus, fūneris again

Before you move on

What does fūnus, fūneris mean? ("A funeral; death".) Say it once more.

330.2 sepeliō, sepelīre — to bury

Before the new one: say the Latin for to depart, then the Latin for a funeral.

You'll want to know: sepeliō, sepelīre

sepeliō, sepelīre — "to bury".

Mīlitēs sociōs suōs prope viam sepelīvērunt.

The soldiers buried their comrades near the road.

sepeliō, sepelīre, sepelīvī, sepultum. Graves lay outside the city walls, along the roads.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sepeliō is an inherited verb whose earlier origin is not settled (Lewis & Short, EtymDB). English sepulchre belongs to its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sepeliō, sepelīre
- Say it: sepeliō, sepelīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sepeliō, sepelīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to depart, then the Latin for a funeral, then say sepeliō, sepelīre again

Before you move on

What does sepeliō, sepelīre mean? ("To bury".) Say it once more.

330.3 sepultūra, sepultūrae — burial

Before the new one: say the Latin for a funeral, then the Latin for to bury.

You'll want to know: sepultūra, sepultūrae

sepultūra, sepultūrae — "burial".

Sepultūra in sepulcrō familiae facta est.

The burial took place in the family tomb.

Feminine, from sepultum, the supine of sepeliō. English sepulture.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sepultūra is built on sepultus, the participle of sepeliō, "to bury" (EtymDB), with the ending -ūra.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sepultūra, sepultūrae
- Say it: sepultūra, sepultūrae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sepultūra, sepultūrae
- Recall: say the Latin for a funeral, then the Latin for to bury, then say sepultūra, sepultūrae again

Before you move on

What does sepultūra, sepultūrae mean? ("Burial".) Say it once more.

330.4 rogus, rogī — a funeral pyre

Before the new one: say the Latin for to bury, then the Latin for burial.

You'll want to know: rogus, rogī

rogus, rogī — "a funeral pyre".

Fīlius rogum patris accendit.

The son lit his father's pyre.

Masculine. The pyre was built of wood outside the walls; the ash was gathered into an urna (taught).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rogus is inherited; EtymDB links it with a Proto-Indo-European root, but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rogus, rogī
- Say it: rogus, rogī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rogus, rogī
- Recall: say the Latin for to bury, then the Latin for burial, then say rogus, rogī again

Before you move on

What does rogus, rogī mean? ("A funeral pyre".) Say it once more.

330.5 exsequiae, exsequiārum — a funeral procession, funeral rites

Before the new one: say the Latin for burial, then the Latin for a funeral pyre.

You'll want to know: exsequiae, exsequiārum

exsequiae, exsequiārum — "a funeral procession, funeral rites".

Multī cīvēs exsequiās cōnsulis secūtī sunt.

Many citizens followed the consul's funeral procession.

Feminine, plural: those who follow the body out. English exequies.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exsequiae is built on exsequor, "to follow out" (Lewis & Short), from ex and sequor, "to follow": the following of the dead.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: exsequiae, exsequiārum
- Say it: exsequiae, exsequiārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with exsequiae, exsequiārum
- Recall: say the Latin for burial, then the Latin for a funeral pyre, then say exsequiae, exsequiārum again

Before you move on

What does exsequiae, exsequiārum mean? ("A funeral procession, funeral rites".) Say it once more.

330.6 Words from chapters 323–330 — a review

Say the Latin for to give birth to and a birth.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to give birth to, a birth, a midwife, to suckle, a nurse
- a cradle, a boy, infancy, childhood, to bring up
- an amulet, a rattle, a first name, an extra family name, a guardian
- young adulthood, youth, old age, orphaned, a ward
- a bride-to-be, a betrothal, to promise in marriage, a bride, marriage
- a bridal veil, a matron of honour, of a wedding, a married woman, a divorce
- death, dead, to breathe one's last, to die, to depart
- a funeral, to bury, burial, a funeral pyre, a funeral procession

Before you move on

To give birth to? (pariō, parere.) A birth? (partus, partūs.) A midwife? (obstetrīx, obstetrīcis.) To suckle? (nūtriō, nūtrīre.) A nurse? (nūtrīx, nūtrīcis.) A cradle? (cūnae, cūnārum.) A boy? (puer, puerī.) Infancy? (īnfantia, īnfantiae.) Childhood? (pueritia, pueritiae.) To bring up? (ēducō, ēducāre.) An amulet? (bulla, bullae.) A rattle? (crepundia, crepundiōrum.) A first name? (praenōmen, praenōminis.) An extra family name? (cognōmen, cognōminis.) A guardian? (tūtor, tūtōris.) Young adulthood? (adulēscentia, adulēscentiae.) Youth? (iuventūs, iuventūtis.) Old age? (senectūs, senectūtis.) Orphaned? (orbus, orba, orbum.) A ward? (pūpillus, pūpillī.) A bride-to-be? (spōnsa, spōnsae.) A betrothal? (spōnsālia, spōnsālium.) To promise in marriage? (dēspondeō, dēspondēre.) A bride? (nūpta, nūptae.) Marriage? (mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī.) A bridal veil? (flammeum, flammeī.) A matron of honour? (prōnuba, prōnubae.) Of a wedding? (nūptiālis, nūptiāle.) A married woman? (mātrōna, mātrōnae.) A divorce? (dīvortium, dīvortiī.) Death? (mors, mortis.) Dead? (mortuus, mortua, mortuum.) To breathe one's last? (exspīrō, exspīrāre.) To die? (obeō, obīre.) To depart? (dēcēdō, dēcēdere.) A funeral? (fūnus, fūneris.) To bury? (sepeliō, sepelīre.) Burial? (sepultūra, sepultūrae.) A funeral pyre? (rogus, rogī.) A funeral procession? (exsequiae, exsequiārum.)

Chapter 331

Lūctus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about mourning and remembrance: grief, the dirge, the speech of praise, the memorial and the offerings to the dead.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 331: I can talk about mourning and remembrance: grief, the dirge, the speech of praise, the memorial and the offerings to the dead.

331.1 lūctus, lūctūs — grief, mourning

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a funeral pyre, then the Latin for a funeral procession.

You'll want to know: lūctus, lūctūs

lūctus, lūctūs — "grief, mourning".

> Tōta domus in lūctū erat.
>
> The whole household was in mourning.

Masculine, 4th declension, from lūgeō, 'to mourn' (taught). Mourners wore dark clothes.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūctus is built on lūgeō, "to mourn" (EtymDB): sorrow shown for the dead.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lūctus, lūctūs
- Say it: lūctus, lūctūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lūctus, lūctūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a funeral pyre, then the Latin for a funeral procession, then say lūctus, lūctūs again

Before you move on

What does lūctus, lūctūs mean? ("Grief, mourning".) Say it once more.

331.2 nēnia, nēniae — a dirge, a funeral song

Before the new one: say the Latin for a funeral procession, then the Latin for grief.

You'll want to know: nēnia, nēniae

nēnia, nēniae — "a dirge, a funeral song".

Fēminae nēniam trīstem canēbant.

The women were singing a sad dirge.

Feminine, also spelled naenia. Hired women sang it in praise of the dead; later also a lullaby or a silly song.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nēnia is a word whose origin is not settled (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nēnia, nēniae
- Say it: nēnia, nēniae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nēnia, nēniae
- Recall: say the Latin for a funeral procession, then the Latin for grief, then say nēnia, nēniae again

Before you move on

What does nēnia, nēniae mean? ("A dirge, a funeral song".) Say it once more.

331.3 laudātiō, laudātiōnis — a speech of praise, a eulogy

Before the new one: say the Latin for grief, then the Latin for a dirge.

You'll want to know: laudātiō, laudātiōnis

laudātiō, laudātiōnis — "a speech of praise, a eulogy".

Fīlius in forō laudātiōnem patris habuit.

The son gave a speech in praise of his father in the forum.

Feminine, from laudō, 'to praise' (taught). Laudātiō fūnebris: the funeral speech.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

laudātiō is built on laudō, "to praise" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -tiō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: laudātiō, laudātiōnis
- Say it: laudātiō, laudātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with laudātiō, laudātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for grief, then the Latin for a dirge, then say laudātiō, laudātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does laudātiō, laudātiōnis mean? ("A speech of praise, a eulogy".) Say it once more.

331.4 monumentum, monumentī — a memorial, a monument

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dirge, then the Latin for a speech of praise.

You'll want to know: monumentum, monumentī

monumentum, monumentī — "a memorial, a monument".

Fīliī patrī monumentum ad viam posuērunt.

The sons set up a memorial to their father by the road.

Neuter, from moneō, 'to remind' (taught): anything that keeps a memory alive, a tomb, a statue or a book. English monument.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

monumentum is built on moneō, "to remind", with the ending -mentum (EtymDB): a reminder. English monument comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: monumentum, monumentī
- Say it: monumentum, monumentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with monumentum, monumentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a dirge, then the Latin for a speech of praise, then say monumentum, monumentī again

Before you move on

What does monumentum, monumentī mean? ("A memorial, a monument".) Say it once more.

331.5 īnferiae, īnferiārum — offerings to the dead

Before the new one: say the Latin for a speech of praise, then the Latin for a memorial.

You'll want to know: īnferiae, īnferiārum

īnferiae, īnferiārum — "offerings to the dead".

> Fīliī īnferiās ad sepulcrum patris tulērunt.
>
> The sons brought offerings to their father's tomb.

Feminine, plural only. Wine, milk and flowers were poured or laid at the grave.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnferiae is built on īnferī, "those below, the dead", from īnferus, "lower" (Lewis & Short): gifts for those below.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnferiae, īnferiārum
- Say it: īnferiae, īnferiārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnferiae, īnferiārum
- Recall: say the Latin for a speech of praise, then the Latin for a memorial, then say īnferiae, īnferiārum again

Before you move on

What does īnferiae, īnferiārum mean? ("Offerings to the dead".) Say it once more.

Chapter 332

Testāmentum

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a will and inheritance: an heir, an inheritance, a will, to seal and to leave behind.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 332: I can talk about a will and inheritance: an heir, an inheritance, a will, to seal and to leave behind.

332.1 hērēs, hērēdis — an heir

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a memorial, then the Latin for offerings to the dead.

You'll want to know: hērēs, hērēdis

hērēs, hērēdis — "an heir".

> Fīlius ūnus hērēs patris erat.
>
> The only son was his father's heir.

Masculine or feminine, 3rd declension. Hērēdem facere: to name someone heir in a will. English heir.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hērēs is inherited; EtymDB traces it to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to leave behind", while Lewis & Short compare a Sanskrit root meaning "to take", so the details are not settled. English heir comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: hērēs, hērēdis
- Say it: hērēs, hērēdis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with hērēs, hērēdis
- Recall: say the Latin for a memorial, then the Latin for offerings to the dead, then say hērēs, hērēdis again

Before you move on

What does hērēs, hērēdis mean? ("An heir".) Say it once more.

332.2 hērēditās, hērēditātis — an inheritance

Before the new one: say the Latin for offerings to the dead, then the Latin for an heir.

You'll want to know: hērēditās, hērēditātis

hērēditās, hērēditātis — "an inheritance".

Magnam hērēditātem ab avunculō accēpit.

He received a large inheritance from his uncle.

Feminine, 3rd declension, from hērēs. English heredity and heritage belong to its family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hērēditās is built on hērēs, "heir" (EtymDB), with the ending -tās: what comes to an heir. English heredity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: hērēditās, hērēditātis
- Say it: hērēditās, hērēditātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with hērēditās, hērēditātis
- Recall: say the Latin for offerings to the dead, then the Latin for an heir, then say hērēditās, hērēditātis again

Before you move on

What does hērēditās, hērēditātis mean? ("An inheritance".) Say it once more.

332.3 testāmentum, testāmentī — a will, a testament

Before the new one: say the Latin for an heir, then the Latin for an inheritance.

You'll want to know: testāmentum, testāmentī

testāmentum, testāmentī — "a will, a testament".

Senex testāmentum cōram testibus scrīpsit.

The old man wrote his will in front of witnesses.

Neuter, from a verb meaning 'to call to witness', and so from testis (taught). Seven witnesses sealed a Roman will.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

testāmentum is built on testor, "to call to witness", from testis, "witness" (EtymDB): a declaration made before witnesses. English testament comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: testāmentum, testāmentī
- Say it: testāmentum, testāmentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with testāmentum, testāmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for an heir, then the Latin for an inheritance, then say testāmentum, testāmentī again

Before you move on

What does testāmentum, testāmentī mean? ("A will, a testament".) Say it once more.

332.4 obsignō, obsignāre — to seal, to seal up

Before the new one: say the Latin for an inheritance, then the Latin for a will.

You'll want to know: obsignō, obsignāre

obsignō, obsignāre — "to seal, to seal up".

Testēs testāmentum ānulīs suīs obsignāvērunt.

The witnesses sealed the will with their rings.

obsignō, obsignāre, obsignāvī, obsignātum: ob + signō (taught). A seal of wax pressed with a signet ring.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obsignō is built on signō, "to mark, to seal", with ob- (EtymDB): to put a seal over.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obsignō, obsignāre
- Say it: obsignō, obsignāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obsignō, obsignāre
- Recall: say the Latin for an inheritance, then the Latin for a will, then say obsignō, obsignāre again

Before you move on

What does obsignō, obsignāre mean? ("To seal, to seal up".) Say it once more.

332.5 relinquō, relinquere — to leave behind; to leave (in a will)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a will, then the Latin for to seal.

You'll want to know: relinquō, relinquere

relinquō, relinquere — "to leave behind; to leave (in a will)".

Pater fīliīs domum et agrōs relīquit.

The father left the house and the fields to his sons.

relinquō, relinquere, relīquī, relictum. English relinquish and relic belong to its family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

relinquō is built on linquō, “to leave”, with re-, “back, behind” (EtymDB). English relinquish comes from it through French, and relic from reliquiae, “remains”, of the same family.

What you’ve built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: relinquō, relinquere
- Say it: relinquō, relinquere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with relinquō, relinquere
- Recall: say the Latin for a will, then the Latin for to seal, then say relinquō, relinquere again

Before you move on

What does relinquō, relinquere mean? (“To leave behind; to leave (in a will)”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 333

Diēs fēstus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a festival day: festive, yearly and solemn, a procession, a feast and to feast.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 333: I can describe a festival day: festive, yearly and solemn, a procession, a feast and to feast.

333.1 fēstus, fēsta, fēstum — festive, holiday

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to seal, then the Latin for to leave behind.

You'll want to know: fēstus, fēsta, fēstum

fēstus, fēsta, fēstum — "festive, holiday".

> Diē fēstō nēmō in forō labōrābat.
>
> On the holiday nobody was working in the forum.

Diēs fēstus: a holiday, the opposite of a working day. English feast and festival come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fēstus belongs, says Lewis & Short, with fēriae, "holidays" (taught). English feast comes from it through French, and festival from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fēstus, fēsta, fēstum
- Say it: fēstus, fēsta, fēstum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fēstus, fēsta, fēstum
- Recall: say the Latin for to seal, then the Latin for to leave behind, then say fēstus, fēsta, fēstum again

Before you move on

What does fēstus, fēsta, fēstum mean? ("Festive, holiday".) Say it once more.

333.2 sollemnis, sollemne — yearly, solemn; customary

Before the new one: say the Latin for to leave behind, then the Latin for festive.

You'll want to know: sollemnis, sollemne

sollemnis, sollemne — "yearly, solemn; customary".

Sacrificium sollemne quotannīs fīēbat.

A solemn sacrifice was held every year.

Two endings. A rite that comes round every year, and so solemn and customary. English solemn.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sollemnis is explained by Lewis & Short as sollus, "whole", and annus, "year": what happens every year; EtymDB derives it from sollus. English solemn comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sollemnis, sollemne
- Say it: sollemnis, sollemne, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sollemnis, sollemne
- Recall: say the Latin for to leave behind, then the Latin for festive, then say sollemnis, sollemne again

Before you move on

What does sollemnis, sollemne mean? ("Yearly, solemn; customary".) Say it once more.

333.3 pompa, pompae — a procession

Before the new one: say the Latin for festive, then the Latin for yearly.

You'll want to know: pompa, pompae

pompa, pompae — "a procession".

Longa pompa per viās urbis prōcessit.

A long procession moved through the streets of the city.

Feminine. Games, triumphs, weddings and funerals all had their pompa. English pomp.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pompa was borrowed from Greek pompē, "a sending, a procession", from pempō, "to send" (EtymDB). English pomp comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pompa, pompae
- Say it: pompa, pompae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pompa, pompae
- Recall: say the Latin for festive, then the Latin for yearly, then say pompa, pompae again

Before you move on

What does pompa, pompae mean? ("A procession".) Say it once more.

333.4 epulae, epulārum — a feast, a banquet

Before the new one: say the Latin for yearly, then the Latin for a procession.

You'll want to know: epulae, epulārum

epulae, epulārum — "a feast, a banquet".

Post sacrificium epulae magnae parātae sunt.

After the sacrifice a great feast was prepared.

Feminine, plural; the singular is the neuter epulum, a public banquet.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

epulae is the plural that goes with epulum, "a banquet"; Lewis & Short call its origin doubtful and suggest, with hesitation, a link with edō, "to eat".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: epulae, epulārum
- Say it: epulae, epulārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with epulae, epulārum
- Recall: say the Latin for yearly, then the Latin for a procession, then say epulae, epulārum again

Before you move on

What does epulae, epulārum mean? ("A feast, a banquet".) Say it once more.

333.5 epulor, epulārī — to feast, to banquet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a procession, then the Latin for a feast.

You'll want to know: epulor, epulārī

epulor, epulārī — "to feast, to banquet".

Tōtam noctem amīcī epulābantur.

The friends feasted all night long.

epulor, epulārī, epulātus sum, a deponent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

epulor is built on epulum, "a banquet" (Lewis & Short): to hold a feast.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: epulor, epulārī
- Say it: epulor, epulārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with epulor, epulārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a procession, then the Latin for a feast, then say epulor, epulārī again

Before you move on

What does epulor, epulārī mean? ("To feast, to banquet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 334

Sacrificium

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a sacrifice: the priest, the victim, to sacrifice, to vow and a vow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 334: I can describe a sacrifice: the priest, the victim, to sacrifice, to vow and a vow.

334.1 sacerdōs, sacerdōtis — a priest, a priestess

Before the new one: say the Latin for a feast, then the Latin for to feast.

You'll want to know: sacerdōs, sacerdōtis

sacerdōs, sacerdōtis — "a priest, a priestess".

Sacerdōs ante āram stābat.

The priest was standing before the altar.

Masculine or feminine, 3rd declension, from sacer, 'holy'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sacerdōs is built on sacer, "holy" (EtymDB), with a second part whose origin is not settled: one who performs holy things.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sacerdōs, sacerdōtis
- Say it: sacerdōs, sacerdōtis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sacerdōs, sacerdōtis
- Recall: say the Latin for a feast, then the Latin for to feast, then say sacerdōs, sacerdōtis again

Before you move on

What does sacerdōs, sacerdōtis mean? ("A priest, a priestess".) Say it once more.

334.2 victima, victimae — a sacrificial animal, a victim

Before the new one: say the Latin for to feast, then the Latin for a priest.

You'll want to know: victima, victimae

victima, victimae — "a sacrificial animal, a victim".

Victima alba ad āram ducta est.

A white victim was led to the altar.

Feminine. A larger animal for sacrifice, such as an ox. English victim.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

victima is a Latin word whose origin is not settled; Lewis & Short suggest, with doubt, a root seen in vigeō, "to be strong". English victim comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: victima, victimae
- Say it: victima, victimae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with victima, victimae
- Recall: say the Latin for to feast, then the Latin for a priest, then say victima, victimae again

Before you move on

What does victima, victimae mean? ("A sacrificial animal, a victim".) Say it once more.

334.3 immolō, immolāre — to sacrifice

Before the new one: say the Latin for a priest, then the Latin for a sacrificial animal.

You'll want to know: immolō, immolāre

immolō, immolāre — "to sacrifice".

Sacerdōs taurum deae immolāvit.

The priest sacrificed a bull to the goddess.

immolō, immolāre, immolāvī, immolātum: first, to sprinkle the victim with salted grain.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

immolō is built on mola, "meal, salted grain", with in- (Lewis & Short): to sprinkle the victim with sacred meal before the sacrifice.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: immolō, immolāre
- Say it: immolō, immolāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with immolō, immolāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a priest, then the Latin for a sacrificial animal, then say immolō, immolāre again

Before you move on

What does immolō, immolāre mean? ("To sacrifice".) Say it once more.

334.4 voveō, vovēre — to vow, to promise solemnly

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sacrificial animal, then the Latin for to sacrifice.

You'll want to know: voveō, vovēre

voveō, vovēre — "to vow, to promise solemnly".

Dux deae templum novum vōvit.

The general vowed a new temple to the goddess.

voveō, vovēre, perfect vōvī: short o in the present, long in the perfect and in its noun.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

voveō is inherited; EtymDB traces it to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to vow", though Lewis & Short call the origin doubtful. English vow and vote come from its noun vōtum.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: voveō, vovēre
- Say it: voveō, vovēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with voveō, vovēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a sacrificial animal, then the Latin for to sacrifice, then say voveō, vovēre again

Before you move on

What does voveō, vovēre mean? ("To vow, to promise solemnly".) Say it once more.

334.5 vōtum, vōtī — a vow; a wish

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sacrifice, then the Latin for to vow.

You'll want to know: vōtum, vōtī

vōtum, vōtī — "a vow; a wish".

Post naufragium nautae vōtum solvērunt.

After the shipwreck the sailors fulfilled their vow.

Neuter, from voveō. Vōtum solvere: to keep a vow. English vote and vow.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vōtum is built on voveō, "to vow" (EtymDB): a thing vowed. English vote comes from it, and vow through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vōtum, vōtī
- Say it: vōtum, vōtī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vōtum, vōtī
- Recall: say the Latin for to sacrifice, then the Latin for to vow, then say vōtum, vōtī again

Before you move on

What does vōtum, vōtī mean? ("A vow; a wish".) Say it once more.

Chapter 335

Lūdī circēnsēs

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a chariot race: the charioteer, the four-horse chariot, the turning post, the racing team and of the circus.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 335: I can describe a chariot race: the charioteer, the four-horse chariot, the turning post, the racing team and of the circus.

335.1 aurīga, aurīgae — a charioteer

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to vow, then the Latin for a vow.

You'll want to know: aurīga, aurīgae

aurīga, aurīgae — "a charioteer".

> Aurīga equōs celeriter agēbat.
>
> The charioteer was driving the horses fast.

Masculine, 1st declension, though it ends in -a, like nauta. Famous charioteers grew very rich.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aurīga is explained by Lewis & Short as built on an old word for the reins and agō, "to drive": he who handles the reins. The details are not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aurīga, aurīgae
- Say it: aurīga, aurīgae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aurīga, aurīgae
- Recall: say the Latin for to vow, then the Latin for a vow, then say aurīga, aurīgae again

Before you move on

What does aurīga, aurīgae mean? ("A charioteer".) Say it once more.

335.2 quadrīgae, quadrīgārum — a four-horse chariot

Before the new one: say the Latin for a vow, then the Latin for a charioteer.

You'll want to know: quadrīgae, quadrīgārum

quadrīgae, quadrīgārum — "a four-horse chariot".

Quadrīgae per circum volābant.

The four-horse chariots flew round the circus.

Feminine, plural: four horses under one yoke.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quadrīgae is a shortened quadriiugae, from quattuor, "four", and iugum, "yoke" (Lewis & Short): four together.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: quadrīgae, quadrīgārum
- Say it: quadrīgae, quadrīgārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with quadrīgae, quadrīgārum
- Recall: say the Latin for a vow, then the Latin for a charioteer, then say quadrīgae, quadrīgārum again

Before you move on

What does quadrīgae, quadrīgārum mean? ("A four-horse chariot".) Say it once more.

335.3 mēta, mētae — a turning post; a goal, a limit

Before the new one: say the Latin for a charioteer, then the Latin for a four-horse chariot.

You'll want to know: mēta, mētae

mēta, mētae — "a turning post; a goal, a limit".

Aurīga prope mētam cecidit.

The charioteer fell near the turning post.

Feminine. The cone-shaped posts at each end of the track, where crashes happened. Also any limit or goal.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mēta is inherited from Proto-Italic mētā*, "boundary" (EtymDB): a marker at the limit.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mēta, mētae
- Say it: mēta, mētae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mēta, mētae
- Recall: say the Latin for a charioteer, then the Latin for a four-horse chariot, then say mēta, mētae again

Before you move on

What does mēta, mētae mean? ("A turning post; a goal, a limit".) Say it once more.

335.4 factiō, factiōnis — a racing team; a party, a faction

Before the new one: say the Latin for a four-horse chariot, then the Latin for a turning post.

You'll want to know: factiō, factiōnis

factiō, factiōnis — "a racing team; a party, a faction".

Puer factiōnem viridem amābat.

The boy loved the Green team.

Feminine, from faciō. The racing teams wore colours: white, red, green and blue. English faction.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

factiō is built on faciō, "to make, to do" (EtymDB): a doing together, and so a group that acts together. English faction comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: factiō, factiōnis
- Say it: factiō, factiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with factiō, factiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a four-horse chariot, then the Latin for a turning post, then say factiō, factiōnis again

Before you move on

What does factiō, factiōnis mean? ("A racing team; a party, a faction".) Say it once more.

335.5 circēnsis, circēnse — of the circus

Before the new one: say the Latin for a turning post, then the Latin for a racing team.

You'll want to know: circēnsis, circēnse

circēnsis, circēnse — "of the circus".

> Lūdī circēnsēs per quīnque diēs fīebant.
>
> The races in the circus went on for five days.

Two endings. Lūdī circēnsēs: the races. A satirist said the people wanted only bread and races.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

circēnsis is built on circus, “ring, racecourse” (EtymDB), with the ending -ēnsis, “belonging to”.

What you’ve built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: circēnsis, circēnse
- Say it: circēnsis, circēnse, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with circēnsis, circēnse
- Recall: say the Latin for a turning post, then the Latin for a racing team, then say circēnsis, circēnse again

Before you move on

What does circēnsis, circēnse mean? (“Of the circus”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 336

Mūnus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe the shows in the arena: the gladiator, the trainer, the public show, the wild-beast hunt and the beast.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 336: I can describe the shows in the arena: the gladiator, the trainer, the public show, the wild-beast hunt and the beast.

336.1 gladiātor, gladiātōris — a gladiator

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a racing team, then the Latin for of the circus.

You'll want to know: gladiātor, gladiātōris

gladiātor, gladiātōris — "a gladiator".

> Gladiātōrēs in harēnā pugnābant.
>
> Gladiators were fighting in the arena.

Masculine, 3rd declension, from gladius, 'sword' (taught). Most were slaves or prisoners; a few were volunteers.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gladiātor is built on gladius, "sword" (EtymDB): the swordsman. English gladiator is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gladiātor, gladiātōris
- Say it: gladiātor, gladiātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gladiātor, gladiātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a racing team, then the Latin for of the circus, then say gladiātor, gladiātōris again

Before you move on

What does gladiātor, gladiātōris mean? ("A gladiator".) Say it once more.

336.2 lanista, lanistae — a trainer of gladiators

Before the new one: say the Latin for of the circus, then the Latin for a gladiator.

You'll want to know: lanista, lanistae

lanista, lanistae — "a trainer of gladiators".

Lanista novōs gladiātōrēs ēmit.

The trainer bought new gladiators.

Masculine, 1st declension. He owned and trained a troop; in Cicero the word is an insult.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lanista is a word whose origin is not settled (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lanista, lanistae
- Say it: lanista, lanistae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lanista, lanistae
- Recall: say the Latin for of the circus, then the Latin for a gladiator, then say lanista, lanistae again

Before you move on

What does lanista, lanistae mean? ("A trainer of gladiators".) Say it once more.

336.3 mūnus, mūneris — a public show; a gift; a duty

Before the new one: say the Latin for a gladiator, then the Latin for a trainer of gladiators.

You'll want to know: mūnus, mūneris

mūnus, mūneris — "a public show; a gift; a duty".

Ad mūnus tōta urbs vēnit.

The whole city came to the show.

Neuter, 3rd declension. First a duty, then a gift, and so the gladiator show given to the people. English munificent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūnus is inherited from Proto-Italic moinos*, "service" (EtymDB): a duty, then a gift, then a show. English munificent comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mūnus, mūneris
- Say it: mūnus, mūneris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mūnus, mūneris
- Recall: say the Latin for a gladiator, then the Latin for a trainer of gladiators, then say mūnus, mūneris again

Before you move on

What does mūnus, mūneris mean? ("A public show; a gift; a duty".) Say it once more.

336.4 vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis — a hunt; a wild-beast show

Before the new one: say the Latin for a trainer of gladiators, then the Latin for a public show.

You'll want to know: vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis

vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis — "a hunt; a wild-beast show".

Māne vēnātiō erat, post merīdiem gladiātōrēs.

In the morning there was a wild-beast hunt, in the afternoon the gladiators.

Feminine, from vēnor, 'to hunt' (taught). In the arena, hunters fought lions and bears.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēnātiō is built on vēnor, "to hunt" (Lewis & Short): hunting, and the meat of the hunt. English venison comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis
- Say it: vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a trainer of gladiators, then the Latin for a public show, then say vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis mean? ("A hunt; a wild-beast show".) Say it once more.

336.5 bēstia, bēstiae — a beast, a wild animal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a public show, then the Latin for a hunt.

You'll want to know: bēstia, bēstiae

bēstia, bēstiae — "a beast, a wild animal".

Bēstiae ingentēs in harēnam missae sunt.

Huge beasts were sent into the arena.

Feminine. A creature without reason, as opposed to people. English beast, through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bēstia is a Latin word whose origin is not settled; Lewis & Short suggest a link with fera, "wild beast". English beast comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bēstia, bēstiae
- Say it: bēstia, bēstiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bēstia, bēstiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a public show, then the Latin for a hunt, then say bēstia, bēstiae again

Before you move on

What does bēstia, bēstiae mean? ("A beast, a wild animal".) Say it once more.

Chapter 337

Palma et praemium

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell who won a contest: the palm of victory, the prize, to compete, the contest and the applause.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 337: I can tell who won a contest: the palm of victory, the prize, to compete, the contest and the applause.

337.1 palma, palmae — the palm of victory; the palm of the hand; a palm tree

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a hunt, then the Latin for a beast.

You'll want to know: palma, palmae

palma, palmae — "the palm of victory; the palm of the hand; a palm tree".

> Aurīga palmam et corōnam accēpit.
>
> The charioteer received the palm and a crown.

Feminine. The flat of the hand, then the palm tree, whose branch was given to winners.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

palma is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European form for "the flat of the hand" (EtymDB), matching Greek palamē. The palm tree was named from its hand-like leaves. English palm comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: palma, palmae
- Say it: palma, palmae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with palma, palmae
- Recall: say the Latin for a hunt, then the Latin for a beast, then say palma, palmae again

Before you move on

What does palma, palmae mean? ("The palm of victory; the palm of the hand; a palm tree".) Say it once more.

337.2 praemium, praemiī — a prize, a reward

Before the new one: say the Latin for a beast, then the Latin for the palm of victory.

You'll want to know: praemium, praemiī

praemium, praemiī — "a prize, a reward".

Praemium magnum erat: centum dēnāriī.

The prize was large: a hundred denarii.

Neuter. First booty taken before others, then any reward. English premium.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praemium is built on prae, "before", and emō, "to take, to buy" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short): what one takes before others. English premium comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praemium, praemiī
- Say it: praemium, praemiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praemium, praemiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a beast, then the Latin for the palm of victory, then say praemium, praemiī again

Before you move on

What does praemium, praemiī mean? ("A prize, a reward".) Say it once more.

337.3 certō, certāre — to compete, to contend

Before the new one: say the Latin for the palm of victory, then the Latin for a prize.

You'll want to know: certō, certāre

certō, certāre — "to compete, to contend".

Duo aurīgae dē palmā certābant.

Two charioteers were competing for the palm.

certō, certāre, certāvī, certātum. Do not confuse the adverb certō, 'for certain'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

certō is built on cernō, "to decide" (Lewis & Short): to decide something by a contest.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: certō, certāre
- Say it: certō, certāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with certō, certāre
- Recall: say the Latin for the palm of victory, then the Latin for a prize, then say certō, certāre again

Before you move on

What does certō, certāre mean? ("To compete, to contend".) Say it once more.

337.4 certāmen, certāminis — a contest, a struggle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a prize, then the Latin for to compete.

You'll want to know: certāmen, certāminis

certāmen, certāminis — "a contest, a struggle".

Certāmen longum et difficile erat.

The contest was long and hard.

Neuter, 3rd declension, from certō. Any contest, friendly or hostile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

certāmen is built on certō, "to contend" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -men.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: certāmen, certāminis
- Say it: certāmen, certāminis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with certāmen, certāminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a prize, then the Latin for to compete, then say certāmen, certāminis again

Before you move on

What does certāmen, certāminis mean? ("A contest, a struggle".) Say it once more.

337.5 plausus, plausūs — applause, clapping

Before the new one: say the Latin for to compete, then the Latin for a contest.

You'll want to know: plausus, plausūs

plausus, plausūs — "applause, clapping".

Magnus plausus in theātrō erat.

There was loud applause in the theatre.

Masculine, 4th declension, from plaudō, 'to clap' (taught). Plays ended with the call plaudite!

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plausus is built on plaudō, "to clap" (Lewis & Short). English applause comes from its compound applaudō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: plausus, plausūs
- Say it: plausus, plausūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with plausus, plausūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to compete, then the Latin for a contest, then say plausus, plausūs again

Before you move on

What does plausus, plausūs mean? ("Applause, clapping".) Say it once more.

Chapter 338

Legiō

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the parts of a Roman army: the legion, the cohort, the centurion, the standard-bearer and the tribune.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 338: I can name the parts of a Roman army: the legion, the cohort, the centurion, the standard-bearer and the tribune.

338.1 legiō, legiōnis — a legion

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a contest, then the Latin for applause.

You'll want to know: legiō, legiōnis

legiō, legiōnis — "a legion".

> Decima legiō fortissima erat.
>
> The tenth legion was the bravest.

Feminine, 3rd declension, from legō, 'to choose': a picked levy, about five thousand men. English legion.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

legiō is built on legō, "to gather, to choose" (Lewis & Short): a body of chosen soldiers. English legion comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: legiō, legiōnis
- Say it: legiō, legiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with legiō, legiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a contest, then the Latin for applause, then say legiō, legiōnis again

Before you move on

What does legiō, legiōnis mean? ("A legion".) Say it once more.

338.2 cohors, cohortis — a cohort; an enclosure

Before the new one: say the Latin for applause, then the Latin for a legion.

You'll want to know: cohors, cohortis

cohors, cohortis — "a cohort; an enclosure".

Cohors ad portam castrōrum stābat.

A cohort was standing at the gate of the camp.

Feminine, 3rd declension. A legion had ten cohorts. The same word meant a farmyard, which gives English court.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cohors is inherited, and its earlier history is not settled. It first meant "an enclosure, a farmyard" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short), and then the body of soldiers drawn up together. English court comes from it through French, and cohort directly.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cohors, cohortis
- Say it: cohors, cohortis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cohors, cohortis
- Recall: say the Latin for applause, then the Latin for a legion, then say cohors, cohortis again

Before you move on

What does cohors, cohortis mean? ("A cohort; an enclosure".) Say it once more.

338.3 centuriō, centuriōnis — a centurion

Before the new one: say the Latin for a legion, then the Latin for a cohort.

You'll want to know: centuriō, centuriōnis

centuriō, centuriōnis — "a centurion".

Centuriō mīlitēs suōs ad mūrum dūxit.

The centurion led his soldiers to the wall.

Masculine, 3rd declension, from centuria, a company of a hundred.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

centuriō is built on centuria, "a division of a hundred", from centum, "hundred" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: centuriō, centuriōnis
- Say it: centuriō, centuriōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with centuriō, centuriōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a legion, then the Latin for a cohort, then say centuriō, centuriōnis again

Before you move on

What does centuriō, centuriōnis mean? ("A centurion".) Say it once more.

338.4 signifer, signiferī — a standard-bearer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cohort, then the Latin for a centurion.

You'll want to know: signifer, signiferī

signifer, signiferī — "a standard-bearer".

Signifer signum in hostēs tulit.

The standard-bearer carried the standard against the enemy.

Masculine: signum (taught) + ferō. Losing the standard was a deep disgrace.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

signifer joins signum, "sign, standard", and -fer, "carrying", from ferō (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: signifer, signiferī
- Say it: signifer, signiferī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with signifer, signiferī
- Recall: say the Latin for a cohort, then the Latin for a centurion, then say signifer, signiferī again

Before you move on

What does signifer, signiferī mean? ("A standard-bearer".) Say it once more.

338.5 tribūnus, tribūnī — a tribune

Before the new one: say the Latin for a centurion, then the Latin for a standard-bearer.

You'll want to know: tribūnus, tribūnī

tribūnus, tribūnī — "a tribune".

Tribūnus mīlitum ad castra advēnit.

The military tribune arrived at the camp.

Masculine. Tribūnus mīlitum: an officer of a legion; the people's tribunes protected ordinary citizens.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tribūnus is built on tribus, "tribe" (EtymDB): first the head of a tribe. English tribune comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tribūnus, tribūnī
- Say it: tribūnus, tribūnī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tribūnus, tribūnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a centurion, then the Latin for a standard-bearer, then say tribūnus, tribūnī again

Before you move on

What does tribūnus, tribūnī mean? ("A tribune".) Say it once more.

338.6 Words from chapters 331–338 — a review

Say the Latin for grief and a dirge.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- grief, a dirge, a speech of praise, a memorial, offerings to the dead
- an heir, an inheritance, a will, to seal, to leave behind
- festive, yearly, a procession, a feast, to feast
- a priest, a sacrificial animal, to sacrifice, to vow, a vow
- a charioteer, a four-horse chariot, a turning post, a racing team, of the circus
- a gladiator, a trainer of gladiators, a public show, a hunt, a beast

- the palm of victory, a prize, to compete, a contest, applause
- a legion, a cohort, a centurion, a standard-bearer, a tribune

Before you move on

Grief? (lūctus, lūctūs.) A dirge? (nēnia, nēniae.) A speech of praise? (laudātiō, laudātiōnis.) A memorial? (monumentum, monumentī.) Offerings to the dead? (īnferiae, īnferiārum.) An heir? (hērēs, hērēdis.) An inheritance? (hērēditās, hērēditātis.) A will? (testāmentum, testāmentī.) To seal? (obsignō, obsignāre.) To leave behind? (relinquō, relinquere.) Festive? (fēstus, fēsta, fēstum.) Yearly? (sollemnis, sollemne.) A procession? (pompa, pompae.) A feast? (epulae, epulārum.) To feast? (epulor, epulārī.) A priest? (sacerdōs, sacerdōtis.) A sacrificial animal? (victima, victimae.) To sacrifice? (immolō, immolāre.) To vow? (voveō, vovēre.) A vow? (vōtum, vōtī.) A charioteer? (aurīga, aurīgae.) A four-horse chariot? (quadrīgae, quadrīgārum.) A turning post? (mēta, mētae.) A racing team? (factiō, factiōnis.) Of the circus? (circēnsis, circēnse.) A gladiator? (gladiātor, gladiātōris.) A trainer of gladiators? (lanista, lanistae.) A public show? (mūnus, mūneris.) A hunt? (vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis.) A beast? (bēstia, bēstiae.) The palm of victory? (palma, palmae.) A prize? (praemium, praemiī.) To compete? (certō, certāre.) A contest? (certāmen, certāminis.) Applause? (plausus, plausūs.) A legion? (legiō, legiōnis.) A cohort? (cohors, cohortis.) A centurion? (centuriō, centuriōnis.) A standard-bearer? (signifer, signiferī.) A tribune? (tribūnus, tribūnī.)

Chapter 339

Proelium

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell the story of a battle: the battle, the battle line, the army on the march, a raid and to fight it out.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 339: I can tell the story of a battle: the battle, the battle line, the army on the march, a raid and to fight it out.

339.1 proelium, proeliī — a battle

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a standard-bearer, then the Latin for a tribune.

You'll want to know: proelium, proeliī

proelium, proeliī — "a battle".

> Proelium ab hōrā prīmā ad vesperum dūrābat.
>
> The battle lasted from the first hour until evening.

Neuter. A single battle; bellum (taught) is the whole war. Proelium committere: to join battle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

proelium is a word whose origin Lewis & Short call doubtful; they suggest, with hesitation, a link with duellum, the old form of bellum.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: proelium, proeliī
- Say it: proelium, proeliī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with proelium, proeliī
- Recall: say the Latin for a standard-bearer, then the Latin for a tribune, then say proelium, proeliī again

Before you move on

What does proelium, proeliī mean? ("A battle".) Say it once more.

339.2 aciēs, aciēī — a battle line; a sharp edge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tribune, then the Latin for a battle.

You'll want to know: aciēs, aciēī

aciēs, aciēī — "a battle line; a sharp edge".

Dux aciem ante castra posuit.

The leader drew up the battle line in front of the camp.

Feminine, 5th declension, like diēs. First a sharp edge, then the sharp front of an army.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aciēs is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "sharp" (EtymDB): the edge of a blade, then the front edge of an army. English acid comes from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aciēs, aciēī
- Say it: aciēs, aciēī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aciēs, aciēī
- Recall: say the Latin for a tribune, then the Latin for a battle, then say aciēs, aciēī again

Before you move on

What does aciēs, aciēī mean? ("A battle line; a sharp edge".) Say it once more.

339.3 agmen, agminis — an army on the march; a crowd

Before the new one: say the Latin for a battle, then the Latin for a battle line.

You'll want to know: agmen, agminis

agmen, agminis — "an army on the march; a crowd".

Agmen longum per vallem prōcēdēbat.

A long line of soldiers was moving forward through the valley.

Neuter, 3rd declension: a body in motion. Novissimum agmen: the rearguard.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

agmen is built on agō, "to drive, to lead" (EtymDB), with the ending -men: a train in motion.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: agmen, agminis
- Say it: agmen, agminis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with agmen, agminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a battle, then the Latin for a battle line, then say agmen, agminis again

Before you move on

What does agmen, agminis mean? ("An army on the march; a crowd".) Say it once more.

339.4 incursiō, incursiōnis — a raid, an attack

Before the new one: say the Latin for a battle line, then the Latin for an army on the march.

You'll want to know: incursiō, incursiōnis

incursiō, incursiōnis — "a raid, an attack".

Hostēs incursiōnem in agrōs nostrōs fēcērunt.

The enemy made a raid on our fields.

Feminine, 3rd declension, from incurrō, 'to run against'. English incursion.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incursiō is built on incurrō, "to run against", from in and currō, "to run" (Lewis & Short). English incursion comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: incursiō, incursiōnis
- Say it: incursiō, incursiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with incursiō, incursiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a battle line, then the Latin for an army on the march, then say incursiō, incursiōnis again

Before you move on

What does incursiō, incursiōnis mean? ("A raid, an attack".) Say it once more.

339.5 dīmicō, dīmicāre — to fight it out, to struggle

Before the new one: say the Latin for an army on the march, then the Latin for a raid.

You'll want to know: dīmicō, dīmicāre

dīmicō, dīmicāre — "to fight it out, to struggle".

Ambō exercitūs ācriter dīmicāvērunt.

Both armies fought it out fiercely.

dīmicō, dīmicāre, dīmicāvī, dīmicātum. A hard, deciding fight.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīmicō is built on micō, "to flash, to quiver", with dis- (EtymDB): perhaps first the flashing of swords to and fro.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dīmicō, dīmicāre
- Say it: dīmicō, dīmicāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dīmicō, dīmicāre
- Recall: say the Latin for an army on the march, then the Latin for a raid, then say dīmicō, dīmicāre again

Before you move on

What does dīmicō, dīmicāre mean? ("To fight it out, to struggle".) Say it once more.

Chapter 340

Arma

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name arms and kinds of soldier: weapons, a horseman, a foot soldier, the breastplate and the round shield.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 340: I can name arms and kinds of soldier: weapons, a horseman, a foot soldier, the breastplate and the round shield.

340.1 arma, armōrum — weapons, arms

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a raid, then the Latin for to fight it out.

You'll want to know: arma, armōrum

arma, armōrum — "weapons, arms".

> Mīlitēs arma capere iussī sunt.
>
> The soldiers were ordered to take up arms.

Neuter, plural only. Mostly armour and shields, the things fitted to the body. A famous epic opens with arma virumque canō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arma is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to fit together" (EtymDB): fitted gear. English arms and army come from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: arma, armōrum
- Say it: arma, armōrum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with arma, armōrum
- Recall: say the Latin for a raid, then the Latin for to fight it out, then say arma, armōrum again

Before you move on

What does arma, armōrum mean? ("Weapons, arms".) Say it once more.

340.2 eques, equitis — a horseman, a cavalryman; a knight

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fight it out, then the Latin for weapons.

You'll want to know: eques, equitis

eques, equitis — "a horseman, a cavalryman; a knight".

Equitēs hostium ex silvā ērūpērunt.

The enemy's cavalry burst out of the forest.

Masculine, 3rd declension, from equus (taught). The equitēs were also a rich class below the senators. English equestrian.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

eques is built on equus, "horse" (EtymDB). English equestrian comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: eques, equitis
- Say it: eques, equitis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with eques, equitis
- Recall: say the Latin for to fight it out, then the Latin for weapons, then say eques, equitis again

Before you move on

What does eques, equitis mean? ("A horseman, a cavalryman; a knight".) Say it once more.

340.3 pedes, peditis — a foot soldier

Before the new one: say the Latin for weapons, then the Latin for a horseman.

You'll want to know: pedes, peditis

pedes, peditis — "a foot soldier".

Peditēs lentē post equitēs ībant.

The foot soldiers were marching slowly behind the cavalry.

Masculine, 3rd declension, from pēs (taught). Mind the forms: pedes 'foot soldier', pedēs 'feet'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pedes is built on pēs, "foot" (Lewis & Short): one who goes on foot. English pedestrian comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pedes, peditis
- Say it: pedes, peditis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pedes, peditis
- Recall: say the Latin for weapons, then the Latin for a horseman, then say pedes, peditis again

Before you move on

What does pedes, peditis mean? ("A foot soldier".) Say it once more.

340.4 lōrīca, lōrīcae — a breastplate, a cuirass

Before the new one: say the Latin for a horseman, then the Latin for a foot soldier.

You'll want to know: lōrīca, lōrīcae

lōrīca, lōrīcae — "a breastplate, a cuirass".

Lōrīca mīlitem ā sagittā servāvit.

His breastplate saved the soldier from the arrow.

Feminine. The first ones were made of leather straps.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lōrīca is built on lōrum, "a leather strap" (Lewis & Short): a corselet of leather thongs.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lōrīca, lōrīcae
- Say it: lōrīca, lōrīcae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lōrīca, lōrīcae
- Recall: say the Latin for a horseman, then the Latin for a foot soldier, then say lōrīca, lōrīcae again

Before you move on

What does lōrīca, lōrīcae mean? ("A breastplate, a cuirass".) Say it once more.

340.5 clipeus, clipeī — a round shield

Before the new one: say the Latin for a foot soldier, then the Latin for a breastplate.

You'll want to know: clipeus, clipeī

clipeus, clipeī — "a round shield".

Clipeus aureus in templō pendēbat.

A golden round shield hung in the temple.

Masculine (also neuter clipeum). A round bronze shield; the long shield of the legions is the scūtum (taught).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clipeus is linked by Lewis & Short with clepō, "to steal, to hide": the cover. The link is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: clipeus, clipeī
- Say it: clipeus, clipeī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with clipeus, clipeī
- Recall: say the Latin for a foot soldier, then the Latin for a breastplate, then say clipeus, clipeī again

Before you move on

What does clipeus, clipeī mean? ("A round shield".) Say it once more.

Chapter 341

Obsidiō

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how a town was besieged: to besiege, the siege, to attack, to take by storm and the battering ram.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 341: I can tell how a town was besieged: to besiege, the siege, to attack, to take by storm and the battering ram.

341.1 obsideō, obsidēre — to besiege; to sit at

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a breastplate, then the Latin for a round shield.

You'll want to know: obsideō, obsidēre

obsideō, obsidēre — "to besiege; to sit at".

> Hostēs oppidum trēs mēnsēs obsēdērunt.
>
> The enemy besieged the town for three months.

obsideō, obsidēre, obsēdī, obsessum: ob + sedeō (taught), to sit down in front of. English obsess.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obsideō is built on sedeō, "to sit", with ob, "in front of" (Lewis & Short): to sit down before a town. English obsess comes from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obsideō, obsidēre
- Say it: obsideō, obsidēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obsideō, obsidēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a breastplate, then the Latin for a round shield, then say obsideō, obsidēre again

Before you move on

What does obsideō, obsidēre mean? ("To besiege; to sit at".) Say it once more.

341.2 obsidiō, obsidiōnis — a siege

Before the new one: say the Latin for a round shield, then the Latin for to besiege.

You'll want to know: obsidiō, obsidiōnis

obsidiō, obsidiōnis — "a siege".

Obsidiō longa erat, et cīvēs famē labōrābant.

The siege was long, and the citizens were suffering from hunger.

Feminine, 3rd declension, from obsideō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obsidiō is built on obsideō, "to besiege" (EtymDB), with the ending -iō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obsidiō, obsidiōnis
- Say it: obsidiō, obsidiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obsidiō, obsidiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a round shield, then the Latin for to besiege, then say obsidiō, obsidiōnis again

Before you move on

What does obsidiō, obsidiōnis mean? ("A siege".) Say it once more.

341.3 oppugnō, oppugnāre — to attack, to assault

Before the new one: say the Latin for to besiege, then the Latin for a siege.

You'll want to know: oppugnō, oppugnāre

oppugnō, oppugnāre — "to attack, to assault".

Mīlitēs mūrōs oppidī oppugnābant.

The soldiers were attacking the walls of the town.

oppugnō, oppugnāre, oppugnāvī, oppugnātum: ob + pugnō (taught). To attack, not yet to win.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oppugnō is built on pugnō, "to fight", with ob-, "against" (EtymDB). English oppugn comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: oppugnō, oppugnāre
- Say it: oppugnō, oppugnāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with oppugnō, oppugnāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to besiege, then the Latin for a siege, then say oppugnō, oppugnāre again

Before you move on

What does oppugnō, oppugnāre mean? ("To attack, to assault".) Say it once more.

341.4 expugnō, expugnāre — to take by storm

Before the new one: say the Latin for a siege, then the Latin for to attack.

You'll want to know: expugnō, expugnāre

expugnō, expugnāre — "to take by storm".

Tandem oppidum expugnāvērunt.

At last they took the town by storm.

expugnō, expugnāre, expugnāvī, expugnātum. After the attack comes, if things go well, the storming.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

expugnō is built on pugnō, "to fight", with ex-, "out, to the end" (Lewis & Short): to fight a place out of the enemy's hands.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: expugnō, expugnāre
- Say it: expugnō, expugnāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with expugnō, expugnāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a siege, then the Latin for to attack, then say expugnō, expugnāre again

Before you move on

What does expugnō, expugnāre mean? ("To take by storm".) Say it once more.

341.5 ariēs, arietis — a battering ram; a ram

Before the new one: say the Latin for to attack, then the Latin for to take by storm.

You'll want to know: ariēs, arietis

ariēs, arietis — "a battering ram; a ram".

Ariete portam frēgērunt.

They broke the gate with a battering ram.

Masculine, 3rd declension. First the male sheep, then the beam with an iron ram's head that broke gates.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ariēs is inherited; EtymDB traces it to a Proto-Indo-European name for a domestic animal, with cousins in Greek eriphos, "kid".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ariēs, arietis
- Say it: ariēs, arietis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ariēs, arietis
- Recall: say the Latin for to attack, then the Latin for to take by storm, then say ariēs, arietis again

Before you move on

What does ariēs, arietis mean? ("A battering ram; a ram".) Say it once more.

Chapter 342

Clādēs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how a battle ended: to put to flight, to overcome, to cut down, to lay waste and a disaster.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 342: I can tell how a battle ended: to put to flight, to overcome, to cut down, to lay waste and a disaster.

342.1 fugō, fugāre — to put to flight, to rout

Before the new one: say the Latin for to take by storm, then the Latin for a battering ram.

You'll want to know: fugō, fugāre

fugō, fugāre — "to put to flight, to rout".

> Equitēs nostrī hostēs fugāvērunt.
>
> Our cavalry put the enemy to flight.

fugō, fugāre, fugāvī, fugātum: to make others run.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fugō is built on fuga, "flight" (Lewis & Short): to cause to flee.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fugō, fugāre
- Say it: fugō, fugāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fugō, fugāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to take by storm, then the Latin for a battering ram, then say fugō, fugāre again

Before you move on

What does fugō, fugāre mean? ("To put to flight, to rout".) Say it once more.

342.2 superō, superāre — to overcome, to defeat; to surpass

Before the new one: say the Latin for a battering ram, then the Latin for to put to flight.

You'll want to know: superō, superāre

superō, superāre — "to overcome, to defeat; to surpass".

Parva manus magnum exercitum superāvit.

A small band defeated a large army.

superō, superāre, superāvī, superātum, from super, 'above'. Also to climb over: montēs superāre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

superō is built on super, "above, over" (Lewis & Short): to go over, to get the upper hand.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: superō, superāre
- Say it: superō, superāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with superō, superāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a battering ram, then the Latin for to put to flight, then say superō, superāre again

Before you move on

What does superō, superāre mean? ("To overcome, to defeat; to surpass".) Say it once more.

342.3 caedō, caedere — to cut down, to kill; to beat

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put to flight, then the Latin for to overcome.

You'll want to know: caedō, caedere

caedō, caedere — "to cut down, to kill; to beat".

Mīlitēs hostēs fugientēs caedēbant.

The soldiers were cutting down the fleeing enemy.

caedō, caedere, cecīdī, caesum. Also to fell trees and to beat. Its noun is caedēs.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caedō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to cut, to hew" (EtymDB). English words in -cide, such as homicide, come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: caedō, caedere
- Say it: caedō, caedere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with caedō, caedere
- Recall: say the Latin for to put to flight, then the Latin for to overcome, then say caedō, caedere again

Before you move on

What does caedō, caedere mean? ("To cut down, to kill; to beat".) Say it once more.

342.4 vāstō, vāstāre — to lay waste, to ravage

Before the new one: say the Latin for to overcome, then the Latin for to cut down.

You'll want to know: vāstō, vāstāre

vāstō, vāstāre — "to lay waste, to ravage".

Hostēs agrōs vīllāsque vāstāvērunt.

The enemy laid waste the fields and the farmhouses.

vāstō, vāstāre, vāstāvī, vāstātum: to make a land empty. English devastate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vāstō is built on vāstus, "empty, desolate" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short): to make a place empty. English waste and devastate come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vāstō, vāstāre
- Say it: vāstō, vāstāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vāstō, vāstāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to overcome, then the Latin for to cut down, then say vāstō, vāstāre again

Before you move on

What does vāstō, vāstāre mean? ("To lay waste, to ravage".) Say it once more.

342.5 clādēs, clādis — a defeat, a disaster

Before the new one: say the Latin for to cut down, then the Latin for to lay waste.

You'll want to know: clādēs, clādis

clādēs, clādis — "a defeat, a disaster".

Post clādem paucī mīlitēs in castra rediērunt.

After the defeat few soldiers returned to the camp.

Feminine, 3rd declension. A heavy defeat with great loss of life.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clādēs is usually traced to a root meaning "to beat, to break": EtymDB gives a Proto-Indo-European root of that sense, and Lewis & Short compare Greek klaō, "to break". The details are not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: clādēs, clādis
- Say it: clādēs, clādis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with clādēs, clādis
- Recall: say the Latin for to cut down, then the Latin for to lay waste, then say clādēs, clādis again

Before you move on

What does clādēs, clādis mean? ("A defeat, a disaster".) Say it once more.

Chapter 343

Triumphus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how a war ended: a prisoner, to surrender, a surrender, a treaty and the triumph.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 343: I can tell how a war ended: a prisoner, to surrender, a surrender, a treaty and the triumph.

343.1 captīvus, captīvī — a prisoner, a captive

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to lay waste, then the Latin for a defeat.

You'll want to know: captīvus, captīvī

captīvus, captīvī — "a prisoner, a captive".

> Captīvī post currum imperātōris ambulābant.
>
> The prisoners were walking behind the general's chariot.

Masculine, from capiō (taught). Also an adjective, captīvus, -a, -um. English captive.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

captīvus is built on captus, the participle of capiō, "to take" (Lewis & Short). English captive comes from it, and caitiff through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: captīvus, captīvī
- Say it: captīvus, captīvī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with captīvus, captīvī
- Recall: say the Latin for to lay waste, then the Latin for a defeat, then say captīvus, captīvī again

Before you move on

What does captīvus, captīvī mean? ("A prisoner, a captive".) Say it once more.

343.2 dēdō, dēdere — to give up, to surrender

Before the new one: say the Latin for a defeat, then the Latin for a prisoner.

You'll want to know: dēdō, dēdere

dēdō, dēdere — "to give up, to surrender".

Cīvēs sē et urbem imperātōrī dēdidērunt.

The citizens surrendered themselves and the city to the general.

dēdō, dēdere, dēdidī, dēditum: dē + dō. Sē dēdere: to surrender.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēdō is built on dō, "to give", with dē, "away" (EtymDB): to give away from oneself.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēdō, dēdere
- Say it: dēdō, dēdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēdō, dēdere
- Recall: say the Latin for a defeat, then the Latin for a prisoner, then say dēdō, dēdere again

Before you move on

What does dēdō, dēdere mean? ("To give up, to surrender".) Say it once more.

343.3 dēditiō, dēditiōnis — a surrender

Before the new one: say the Latin for a prisoner, then the Latin for to give up.

You'll want to know: dēditiō, dēditiōnis

dēditiō, dēditiōnis — "a surrender".

Post longam obsidiōnem dēditiō facta est.

After a long siege a surrender took place.

Feminine, from dēdō. In a dēditiō, the defeated put everything into the winner's hands.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēditiō is built on dēdō, "to give up, to surrender" (EtymDB), with the ending -tiō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēditiō, dēditiōnis
- Say it: dēditiō, dēditiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēditiō, dēditiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a prisoner, then the Latin for to give up, then say dēditiō, dēditiōnis again

Before you move on

What does dēditiō, dēditiōnis mean? ("A surrender".) Say it once more.

343.4 foedus, foederis — a treaty, an alliance

Before the new one: say the Latin for to give up, then the Latin for a surrender.

You'll want to know: foedus, foederis

foedus, foederis — "a treaty, an alliance".

Duae cīvitātēs foedus fēcērunt.

The two states made a treaty.

Neuter, 3rd declension. Not the adjective foedus, -a, -um, 'foul'. English federal.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

foedus is inherited from the Proto-Indo-European root *$b^h eyd^h$- (EtymDB), which also gives fidēs, "trust" (taught); Lewis & Short link it with fīdō, "to trust". English federal comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: foedus, foederis
- Say it: foedus, foederis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with foedus, foederis
- Recall: say the Latin for to give up, then the Latin for a surrender, then say foedus, foederis again

Before you move on

What does foedus, foederis mean? ("A treaty, an alliance".) Say it once more.

343.5 triumphus, triumphī — a triumph, a victory procession

Before the new one: say the Latin for a surrender, then the Latin for a treaty.

You'll want to know: triumphus, triumphī

triumphus, triumphī — "a triumph, a victory procession".

Imperātor in triumphō per urbem vectus est.

The general rode through the city in a triumph.

Masculine. The winner rode in a chariot through the city, and his soldiers sang rude songs about him.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

triumphus was taken, EtymDB says, from Greek thriambos, "a hymn to Dionysus", probably through Etruscan; old Latin wrote triumpus. English triumph comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: triumphus, triumphī
- Say it: triumphus, triumphī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with triumphus, triumphī
- Recall: say the Latin for a surrender, then the Latin for a treaty, then say triumphus, triumphī again

Before you move on

What does triumphus, triumphī mean? ("A triumph, a victory procession".) Say it once more.

Chapter 344

Maiōrēs nostrī

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the past and its records: the ancestors, the annals, the founder, the origin and great age.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 344: I can talk about the past and its records: the ancestors, the annals, the founder, the origin and great age.

344.1 maiōrēs, maiōrum — ancestors, forefathers

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a treaty, then the Latin for a triumph.

You'll want to know: maiōrēs, maiōrum

maiōrēs, maiōrum — "ancestors, forefathers".

> Maiōrēs nostrī hoc templum aedificāvērunt.
>
> Our ancestors built this temple.

Masculine, plural: the comparative of magnus as a noun, the 'greater' generations before us.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maiōrēs is the plural of maior, "greater, elder", the comparative of magnus, "great" (Lewis & Short): the elders, the ancestors.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: maiōrēs, maiōrum
- Say it: maiōrēs, maiōrum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with maiōrēs, maiōrum
- Recall: say the Latin for a treaty, then the Latin for a triumph, then say maiōrēs, maiōrum again

Before you move on

What does maiōrēs, maiōrum mean? ("Ancestors, forefathers".) Say it once more.

344.2 annālēs, annālium — annals, a year-by-year history

Before the new one: say the Latin for a triumph, then the Latin for ancestors.

You'll want to know: annālēs, annālium

annālēs, annālium — "annals, a year-by-year history".

In annālibus omnia bella scrīpta sunt.

All the wars are written in the annals.

Masculine, plural, with librī understood. The priests kept a record of each year; later historians wrote annālēs.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

annālēs is built on annus, "year" (EtymDB): the yearly books. English annals comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: annālēs, annālium
- Say it: annālēs, annālium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with annālēs, annālium
- Recall: say the Latin for a triumph, then the Latin for ancestors, then say annālēs, annālium again

Before you move on

What does annālēs, annālium mean? ("Annals, a year-by-year history".) Say it once more.

344.3 conditor, conditōris — a founder

Before the new one: say the Latin for ancestors, then the Latin for annals.

You'll want to know: conditor, conditōris

conditor, conditōris — "a founder".

Conditor urbis in forō sepultus esse dīcēbātur.

The founder of the city was said to be buried in the forum.

Masculine, from condō, 'to found' (taught), short i. Do not confuse condītor, 'a seasoner'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

conditor is built on condō, "to put together, to found" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -tor.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: conditor, conditōris
- Say it: conditor, conditōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with conditor, conditōris
- Recall: say the Latin for ancestors, then the Latin for annals, then say conditor, conditōris again

Before you move on

What does conditor, conditōris mean? ("A founder".) Say it once more.

344.4 orīgō, orīginis — an origin, a beginning; ancestry

Before the new one: say the Latin for annals, then the Latin for a founder.

You'll want to know: orīgō, orīginis

orīgō, orīginis — "an origin, a beginning; ancestry".

Dē orīgine urbis multae fābulae nārrantur.

Many stories are told about the origin of the city.

Feminine, 3rd declension, from orior, 'to rise'. English origin.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

orīgō is built on orior, "to rise, to arise" (Lewis & Short): the rising, the source. English origin comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: orīgō, orīginis
- Say it: orīgō, orīginis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with orīgō, orīginis
- Recall: say the Latin for annals, then the Latin for a founder, then say orīgō, orīginis again

Before you move on

What does orīgō, orīginis mean? ("An origin, a beginning; ancestry".) Say it once more.

344.5 vetustās, vetustātis — great age, antiquity

Before the new one: say the Latin for a founder, then the Latin for an origin.

You'll want to know: vetustās, vetustātis

vetustās, vetustātis — "great age, antiquity".

Templum vetustāte collāpsum erat.

The temple had fallen in from age.

Feminine, 3rd declension, from vetus (taught). Vetustāte: through long age.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vetustās is built on vetustus, “aged”, from vetus, “old” (Lewis & Short): long existence. English veteran belongs to the same family.

What you’ve built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vetustās, vetustātis
- Say it: vetustās, vetustātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vetustās, vetustātis
- Recall: say the Latin for a founder, then the Latin for an origin, then say vetustās, vetustātis again

Before you move on

What does vetustās, vetustātis mean? (“Great age, antiquity”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 345

Rēgēs et dictātōrēs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about early rulers and the people: a king, to reign, a tyrant, the common people and a dictator.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 345: I can talk about early rulers and the people: a king, to reign, a tyrant, the common people and a dictator.

345.1 rēx, rēgis — a king

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an origin, then the Latin for great age.

You'll want to know: rēx, rēgis

rēx, rēgis — "a king".

> Ōlim rēgēs hanc urbem tenēbant.
>
> Once kings held this city.

Masculine, 3rd declension. After the last king was driven out, the Romans hated the very name rēx.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēx is inherited from Proto-Indo-European h₃rḗǵs*, "ruler, king" (EtymDB), a cousin of Sanskrit rāj-. English regal and royal come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rēx, rēgis
- Say it: rēx, rēgis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rēx, rēgis
- Recall: say the Latin for an origin, then the Latin for great age, then say rēx, rēgis again

Before you move on

What does rēx, rēgis mean? ("A king".) Say it once more.

345.2 rēgnō, rēgnāre — to reign, to be king

Before the new one: say the Latin for great age, then the Latin for a king.

You'll want to know: rēgnō, rēgnāre

rēgnō, rēgnāre — "to reign, to be king".

Senex rēx multōs annōs rēgnāvit.

The old king reigned for many years.

rēgnō, rēgnāre, rēgnāvī, rēgnātum, from rēgnum (taught). English reign.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēgnō is built on rēgnum, "kingship, kingdom" (EtymDB). English reign comes from its family through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rēgnō, rēgnāre
- Say it: rēgnō, rēgnāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rēgnō, rēgnāre
- Recall: say the Latin for great age, then the Latin for a king, then say rēgnō, rēgnāre again

Before you move on

What does rēgnō, rēgnāre mean? ("To reign, to be king".) Say it once more.

345.3 tyrannus, tyrannī — a tyrant, a despot

Before the new one: say the Latin for a king, then the Latin for to reign.

You'll want to know: tyrannus, tyrannī

tyrannus, tyrannī — "a tyrant, a despot".

Cīvēs tyrannum ex urbe pepulērunt.

The citizens drove the tyrant out of the city.

Masculine. For a Roman, a ruler who seized power and ruled without law.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tyrannus was borrowed from Greek tyrannos, "absolute ruler" (EtymDB). English tyrant comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tyrannus, tyrannī
- Say it: tyrannus, tyrannī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tyrannus, tyrannī
- Recall: say the Latin for a king, then the Latin for to reign, then say tyrannus, tyrannī again

Before you move on

What does tyrannus, tyrannī mean? ("A tyrant, a despot".) Say it once more.

345.4 plēbs, plēbis — the common people

Before the new one: say the Latin for to reign, then the Latin for a tyrant.

You'll want to know: plēbs, plēbis

plēbs, plēbis — "the common people".

Plēbs in forō clāmābat.

The common people were shouting in the forum.

Feminine, 3rd declension, singular. The citizens outside the old noble families. English plebeian.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plēbs is linked by Lewis & Short with a root meaning "to fill", as in plēnus, "full": the multitude. English plebeian comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: plēbs, plēbis
- Say it: plēbs, plēbis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with plēbs, plēbis
- Recall: say the Latin for to reign, then the Latin for a tyrant, then say plēbs, plēbis again

Before you move on

What does plēbs, plēbis mean? ("The common people".) Say it once more.

345.5 dictātor, dictātōris — a dictator

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tyrant, then the Latin for the common people.

You'll want to know: dictātor, dictātōris

dictātor, dictātōris — "a dictator".

In magnō perīculō senātus dictātōrem creāvit.

In great danger the senate appointed a dictator.

Masculine, 3rd declension. The Roman dictator held full power in an emergency, for six months only.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dictātor is built on dictō, "to say often, to order" (Lewis & Short), from dīcō, "to say". English dictator is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dictātor, dictātōris
- Say it: dictātor, dictātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dictātor, dictātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a tyrant, then the Latin for the common people, then say dictātor, dictātōris again

Before you move on

What does dictātor, dictātōris mean? ("A dictator".) Say it once more.

Chapter 346

Deī et deae

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the gods in stories: a god, a deified one, divine power, mortal and immortal.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 346: I can talk about the gods in stories: a god, a deified one, divine power, mortal and immortal.

346.1 deus, deī — a god

> Before the new one: say the Latin for the common people, then the Latin for a dictator.

You'll want to know: deus, deī

deus, deī — "a god".

> Poētae dē deīs multa canunt.
>
> Poets sing many things about the gods.

Masculine, 2nd declension; plural deī or dī. Its feminine dea is taught.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

deus is inherited from Old Latin deivos, Proto-Indo-European deywós*, "god" (EtymDB). English deity comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: deus, deī
- Say it: deus, deī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with deus, deī
- Recall: say the Latin for the common people, then the Latin for a dictator, then say deus, deī again

Before you move on

What does deus, deī mean? ("A god".) Say it once more.

346.2 dīvus, dīvī — a deified emperor; a god

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dictator, then the Latin for a god.

You'll want to know: dīvus, dīvī

dīvus, dīvī — "a deified emperor; a god".

Post mortem imperātor dīvus factus est.

After his death the emperor was declared a god.

Masculine, also an adjective, dīvus, -a, -um, 'divine'. Coins call dead emperors dīvus. English divine is of its family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīvus is usually traced to the same Old Latin deivos, "god", as deus; Lewis & Short compare Greek dios, "divine". English divine comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dīvus, dīvī
- Say it: dīvus, dīvī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dīvus, dīvī
- Recall: say the Latin for a dictator, then the Latin for a god, then say dīvus, dīvī again

Before you move on

What does dīvus, dīvī mean? ("A deified emperor; a god".) Say it once more.

346.3 nūmen, nūminis — divine power, divine will

Before the new one: say the Latin for a god, then the Latin for a deified emperor.

You'll want to know: nūmen, nūminis

nūmen, nūminis — "divine power, divine will".

Nūmen deae hunc lūcum servābat.

The power of the goddess protected this grove.

Neuter, 3rd declension: the nod of a god, and so divine power. English numinous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūmen is built, says Lewis & Short, on nuō, "to nod", seen in innuō: a nod, the nod of a god. English numinous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nūmen, nūminis
- Say it: nūmen, nūminis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nūmen, nūminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a god, then the Latin for a deified emperor, then say nūmen, nūminis again

Before you move on

What does nūmen, nūminis mean? ("Divine power, divine will".) Say it once more.

346.4 mortālis, mortāle — mortal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a deified emperor, then the Latin for divine power.

You'll want to know: mortālis, mortāle

mortālis, mortāle — "mortal".

Omnēs hominēs mortālēs sunt.

All human beings are mortal.

Two endings, from mors, 'death'. As a noun, mortālēs: human beings.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mortālis is built on mors, "death" (EtymDB): subject to death. English mortal comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mortālis, mortāle
- Say it: mortālis, mortāle, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mortālis, mortāle
- Recall: say the Latin for a deified emperor, then the Latin for divine power, then say mortālis, mortāle again

Before you move on

What does mortālis, mortāle mean? ("Mortal".) Say it once more.

346.5 immortālis, immortāle — immortal, undying

Before the new one: say the Latin for divine power, then the Latin for mortal.

You'll want to know: immortālis, immortāle

immortālis, immortāle — "immortal, undying".

Deī immortālēs numquam moriuntur.

The immortal gods never die.

Two endings: in- 'not' + mortālis. Dī immortālēs!: Good gods!

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

immortālis joins in-, "not", and mortālis, "mortal" (EtymDB). English immortal comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: immortālis, immortāle
- Say it: immortālis, immortāle, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with immortālis, immortāle
- Recall: say the Latin for divine power, then the Latin for mortal, then say immortālis, immortāle again

Before you move on

What does immortālis, immortāle mean? ("Immortal, undying".) Say it once more.

346.6 Words from chapters 339–346 — a review

Say the Latin for a battle and a battle line.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a battle, a battle line, an army on the march, a raid, to fight it out
- weapons, a horseman, a foot soldier, a breastplate, a round shield
- to besiege, a siege, to attack, to take by storm, a battering ram
- to put to flight, to overcome, to cut down, to lay waste, a defeat
- a prisoner, to give up, a surrender, a treaty, a triumph
- ancestors, annals, a founder, an origin, great age
- a king, to reign, a tyrant, the common people, a dictator
- a god, a deified emperor, divine power, mortal, immortal

Before you move on

A battle? (proelium, proeliī.) A battle line? (aciēs, aciēī.) An army on the march? (agmen, agminis.) A raid? (incursiō, incursiōnis.) To fight it out? (dīmicō, dīmicāre.) Weapons? (arma, armōrum.) A horseman? (eques, equitis.) A foot soldier? (pedes, peditis.) A breastplate? (lōrīca, lōrīcae.) A round shield? (clipeus, clipeī.) To besiege? (obsideō, obsidēre.) A siege? (obsidiō, obsidiōnis.) To attack? (oppugnō, oppugnāre.) To take by storm? (expugnō, expugnāre.) A battering ram? (ariēs, arietis.) To put to flight? (fugō, fugāre.) To overcome? (superō, superāre.) To cut down? (caedō, caedere.) To lay waste? (vāstō, vāstāre.) A defeat? (clādēs, clādis.) A prisoner? (captīvus, captīvī.) To give up? (dēdō, dēdere.) A surrender? (dēditiō, dēditiōnis.) A treaty? (foedus, foederis.) A triumph? (triumphus, triumphī.) Ancestors? (maiōrēs, maiōrum.) Annals? (annālēs, annālium.) A founder? (conditor, conditōris.) An origin? (orīgō, orīginis.) Great age? (vetustās, vetustātis.) A king? (rēx, rēgis.) To reign? (rēgnō, rēgnāre.) A tyrant? (tyrannus, tyrannī.) The common people? (plēbs, plēbis.) A dictator? (dictātor, dictātōris.) A god? (deus, deī.) A deified emperor? (dīvus, dīvī.) Divine power? (nūmen, nūminis.) Mortal? (mortālis, mortāle.) Immortal? (immortālis, immortāle.)

Chapter 347

Mōnstra et hērōēs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the creatures of myth: a monster, a giant, a hero, a nymph and the fleece.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 347: I can talk about the creatures of myth: a monster, a giant, a hero, a nymph and the fleece.

347.1 mōnstrum, mōnstrī — a monster; a portent

Before the new one: say the Latin for mortal, then the Latin for immortal.

You'll want to know: mōnstrum, mōnstrī

mōnstrum, mōnstrī — "a monster; a portent".

Mōnstrum ingēns in spēluncā habitābat.

A huge monster lived in the cave.

Neuter, from moneō, 'to warn': first a sign sent by the gods, then a monster. English monster.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mōnstrum is built on moneō, "to warn" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short): a warning sign, a portent, and then a monster. English monster comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mōnstrum, mōnstrī
- Say it: mōnstrum, mōnstrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mōnstrum, mōnstrī
- Recall: say the Latin for mortal, then the Latin for immortal, then say mōnstrum, mōnstrī again

Before you move on

What does mōnstrum, mōnstrī mean? ("A monster; a portent".) Say it once more.

347.2 gigās, gigantis — a giant

Before the new one: say the Latin for immortal, then the Latin for a monster.

You'll want to know: gigās, gigantis

gigās, gigantis — "a giant".

Gigantēs saxa ad caelum iaciēbant.

The giants were hurling rocks at the sky.

Masculine, a Greek loan; usually plural. English giant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gigās was borrowed from Greek gigas, "giant" (EtymDB). English giant comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gigās, gigantis
- Say it: gigās, gigantis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gigās, gigantis
- Recall: say the Latin for immortal, then the Latin for a monster, then say gigās, gigantis again

Before you move on

What does gigās, gigantis mean? ("A giant".) Say it once more.

347.3 hērōs, hērōis — a hero, a demigod

Before the new one: say the Latin for a monster, then the Latin for a giant.

You'll want to know: hērōs, hērōis

hērōs, hērōis — "a hero, a demigod".

Hērōs mōnstrum gladiō interfēcit.

The hero killed the monster with a sword.

Masculine, a Greek loan; accusative hērōa. A man of the old stories, often the son of a god.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hērōs was borrowed from Greek hērōs, "demigod, hero" (EtymDB). English hero comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: hērōs, hērōis
- Say it: hērōs, hērōis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with hērōs, hērōis
- Recall: say the Latin for a monster, then the Latin for a giant, then say hērōs, hērōis again

Before you move on

What does hērōs, hērōis mean? ("A hero, a demigod".) Say it once more.

347.4 nympha, nymphae — a nymph

Before the new one: say the Latin for a giant, then the Latin for a hero.

You'll want to know: nympha, nymphae

nympha, nymphae — "a nymph".

Nymphae in silvīs et fontibus habitābant.

Nymphs lived in the woods and springs.

Feminine, a Greek loan; also 'a bride, a young woman'. Spirits of springs, trees and mountains.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nympha was borrowed from Greek nymphē, "bride, nymph" (Lewis & Short). English nymph comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nympha, nymphae
- Say it: nympha, nymphae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nympha, nymphae
- Recall: say the Latin for a giant, then the Latin for a hero, then say nympha, nymphae again

Before you move on

What does nympha, nymphae mean? ("A nymph".) Say it once more.

347.5 vellus, velleris — a fleece

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hero, then the Latin for a nymph.

You'll want to know: vellus, velleris

vellus, velleris — "a fleece".

Hērōēs vellus aureum per tōtum mare quaesīvērunt.

The heroes searched the whole sea for the golden fleece.

Neuter, 3rd declension. A sheep's shorn wool; the golden one was guarded by a serpent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vellus is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European word for "wool, hair" (EtymDB); English wool is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vellus, velleris
- Say it: vellus, velleris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vellus, velleris
- Recall: say the Latin for a hero, then the Latin for a nymph, then say vellus, velleris again

Before you move on

What does vellus, velleris mean? ("A fleece".) Say it once more.

Chapter 348

Ōrāculum

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about signs and prophecy: an oracle, a seer, a portent, an omen and to prophesy.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 348: I can talk about signs and prophecy: an oracle, a seer, a portent, an omen and to prophesy.

348.1 ōrāculum, ōrāculī — an oracle

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a nymph, then the Latin for a fleece.

You'll want to know: ōrāculum, ōrāculī

ōrāculum, ōrāculī — "an oracle".

> Lēgātī ad ōrāculum missī sunt.
>
> Envoys were sent to the oracle.

Neuter, from ōrō, 'to speak, to pray' (taught). Both the place where a god answered and the answer itself.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrāculum is built on ōrō, "to speak, to pray", with the ending -culum (Lewis & Short). English oracle comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrāculum, ōrāculī
- Say it: ōrāculum, ōrāculī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ōrāculum, ōrāculī
- Recall: say the Latin for a nymph, then the Latin for a fleece, then say ōrāculum, ōrāculī again

Before you move on

What does ōrāculum, ōrāculī mean? ("An oracle".) Say it once more.

348.2 vātēs, vātis — a seer, a prophet; a poet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fleece, then the Latin for an oracle.

You'll want to know: vātēs, vātis

vātēs, vātis — "a seer, a prophet; a poet".

Vātēs fāta urbis cecinit.

The seer sang of the fates of the city.

Masculine or feminine, 3rd declension. Poets liked to call themselves vātēs, inspired singers.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vātēs is inherited; EtymDB traces it to a Proto-Indo-European word for "seer", and Lewis & Short compare an Old Irish word for a seer.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vātēs, vātis
- Say it: vātēs, vātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vātēs, vātis
- Recall: say the Latin for a fleece, then the Latin for an oracle, then say vātēs, vātis again

Before you move on

What does vātēs, vātis mean? ("A seer, a prophet; a poet".) Say it once more.

348.3 prōdigium, prōdigiī — a portent, a wonder

Before the new one: say the Latin for an oracle, then the Latin for a seer.

You'll want to know: prōdigium, prōdigiī

prōdigium, prōdigiī — "a portent, a wonder".

Lapidibus pluit; hoc prōdigium omnēs terruit.

It rained stones; this portent frightened everyone.

Neuter. Roman historians list the prōdigia of each year: a rain of stones, a cow that spoke. English prodigy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōdigium is explained by Lewis & Short as standing for prōdicium*, from prōdīcō, "to foretell": a sign that speaks of what will come. English prodigy comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōdigium, prōdigiī
- Say it: prōdigium, prōdigiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōdigium, prōdigiī
- Recall: say the Latin for an oracle, then the Latin for a seer, then say prōdigium, prōdigiī again

Before you move on

What does prōdigium, prōdigiī mean? ("A portent, a wonder".) Say it once more.

348.4 ōmen, ōminis — an omen, a sign

Before the new one: say the Latin for a seer, then the Latin for a portent.

You'll want to know: ōmen, ōminis

ōmen, ōminis — "an omen, a sign".

Hoc ōmen bonum esse putāvērunt.

They thought that this omen was good.

Neuter, 3rd declension. A chance word or sight that seemed to foretell the future.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōmen had an old form osmen, says Varro, quoted by Lewis & Short; its earlier origin is not settled. English omen is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ōmen, ōminis
- Say it: ōmen, ōminis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ōmen, ōminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a seer, then the Latin for a portent, then say ōmen, ōminis again

Before you move on

What does ōmen, ōminis mean? ("An omen, a sign".) Say it once more.

348.5 vāticinor, vāticinārī — to prophesy, to foretell

Before the new one: say the Latin for a portent, then the Latin for an omen.

You'll want to know: vāticinor, vāticinārī

vāticinor, vāticinārī — "to prophesy, to foretell".

Vātēs bellum longum vāticinātus est.

The seer foretold a long war.

vāticinor, vāticinārī, vāticinātus sum, a deponent, from vātēs + canō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vāticinor is built on vātēs, "seer" (Lewis & Short), with a second part from canō, "to sing": to sing as a seer.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vāticinor, vāticinārī
- Say it: vāticinor, vāticinārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vāticinor, vāticinārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a portent, then the Latin for an omen, then say vāticinor, vāticinārī again

Before you move on

What does vāticinor, vāticinārī mean? ("To prophesy, to foretell".) Say it once more.

Chapter 349

Fābulae mīrae

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell and react to a tall story: to chat, to say, wonderful, unbelievable and a made-up story.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 349: I can tell and react to a tall story: to chat, to say, wonderful, unbelievable and a made-up story.

349.1 fābulor, fābulārī — to chat, to tell stories

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an omen, then the Latin for to prophesy.

You'll want to know: fābulor, fābulārī

fābulor, fābulārī — "to chat, to tell stories".

> Senēs in tabernā dē rēbus antīquīs fābulābantur.
>
> The old men were chatting in the inn about the old days.

fābulor, fābulārī, fābulātus sum, a deponent, from fābula (taught). In Spain it became hablar, 'to speak'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fābulor is built on fābula, "story, talk" (Lewis & Short), from fārī, "to speak". Spanish hablar, "to speak", comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fābulor, fābulārī
- Say it: fābulor, fābulārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fābulor, fābulārī
- Recall: say the Latin for an omen, then the Latin for to prophesy, then say fābulor, fābulārī again

Before you move on

What does fābulor, fābulārī mean? ("To chat, to tell stories".) Say it once more.

349.2 āiō — to say yes; to say

Before the new one: say the Latin for to prophesy, then the Latin for to chat.

You'll want to know: āiō

āiō — "to say yes; to say".

Nauta mōnstrum sē vīdisse ait.

The sailor says he saw a monster.

Defective: mostly āiō, ais, ait, aiunt. Aiunt: they say. Its opposite is negō (taught), 'to say no'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

āiō is inherited from Proto-Italic agjō* (EtymDB), from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to say". Only a few of its forms are in use (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: āiō
- Say it: āiō, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with āiō
- Recall: say the Latin for to prophesy, then the Latin for to chat, then say āiō again

Before you move on

What does āiō mean? ("To say yes; to say".) Say it once more.

349.3 mīrābilis, mīrābile — wonderful, astonishing

Before the new one: say the Latin for to chat, then the Latin for to say yes.

You'll want to know: mīrābilis, mīrābile

mīrābilis, mīrābile — "wonderful, astonishing".

Fābula mīrābilis erat, sed vēra.

The story was astonishing, but true.

Two endings, from a verb meaning 'to wonder at'. English admirable is a cousin.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mīrābilis is built on mīror, "to wonder at", from mīrus, "wonderful" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -bilis. English marvel and miracle come from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mīrābilis, mīrābile
- Say it: mīrābilis, mīrābile, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mīrābilis, mīrābile
- Recall: say the Latin for to chat, then the Latin for to say yes, then say mīrābilis, mīrābile again

Before you move on

What does mīrābilis, mīrābile mean? ("Wonderful, astonishing".) Say it once more.

349.4 incrēdibilis, incrēdibile — unbelievable, incredible

Before the new one: say the Latin for to say yes, then the Latin for wonderful.

You'll want to know: incrēdibilis, incrēdibile

incrēdibilis, incrēdibile — "unbelievable, incredible".

Nauta rēs incrēdibilēs nārrābat.

The sailor was telling unbelievable things.

Two endings: in- 'not' + crēdibilis 'believable', from crēdō (taught). English incredible.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incrēdibilis joins in-, "not", and crēdibilis, "worthy of belief", from crēdō, "to believe" (EtymDB). English incredible comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: incrēdibilis, incrēdibile
- Say it: incrēdibilis, incrēdibile, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with incrēdibilis, incrēdibile
- Recall: say the Latin for to say yes, then the Latin for wonderful, then say incrēdibilis, incrēdibile again

Before you move on

What does incrēdibilis, incrēdibile mean? ("Unbelievable, incredible".) Say it once more.

349.5 commentum, commentī — an invention, a made-up story

Before the new one: say the Latin for wonderful, then the Latin for unbelievable.

You'll want to know: commentum, commentī

commentum, commentī — "an invention, a made-up story".

Tōta fābula commentum erat.

The whole story was an invention.

Neuter, the participle of comminīscor, 'to think up'. Also a commentary, which gives English comment.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commentum is the participle of comminīscor, "to devise, to invent" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short), from the root of mēns, "mind". English comment comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: commentum, commentī
- Say it: commentum, commentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with commentum, commentī
- Recall: say the Latin for wonderful, then the Latin for unbelievable, then say commentum, commentī again

Before you move on

What does commentum, commentī mean? ("An invention, a made-up story".) Say it once more.

Chapter 350

In macellō

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how food was bought and made ready: to buy food, the provisions, to wash off, to wipe clean and the small knife.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 350: I can tell how food was bought and made ready: to buy food, the provisions, to wash off, to wipe clean and the small knife.

350.1 obsōnō, obsōnāre — to buy food, to shop for a meal

Before the new one: say the Latin for unbelievable, then the Latin for an invention.

You'll want to know: obsōnō, obsōnāre

obsōnō, obsōnāre — "to buy food, to shop for a meal".

> Coquus māne in macellō obsōnābat.
>
> In the morning the cook was buying food at the market.

obsōnō, obsōnāre, obsōnāvī, obsōnātum, also opsōnō. Comedies are full of cooks sent off to shop.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obsōnō was borrowed from Greek opsōneō, "to buy fish or other dainties" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obsōnō, obsōnāre
- Say it: obsōnō, obsōnāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obsōnō, obsōnāre
- Recall: say the Latin for unbelievable, then the Latin for an invention, then say obsōnō, obsōnāre again

Before you move on

What does obsōnō, obsōnāre mean? ("To buy food, to shop for a meal".) Say it once more.

350.2 obsōnium, obsōniī — food to go with bread, provisions

Before the new one: say the Latin for an invention, then the Latin for to buy food.

You'll want to know: obsōnium, obsōniī

obsōnium, obsōniī — "food to go with bread, provisions".

Obsōnium in culīnam portāvit: piscēs et holera.

He carried the provisions into the kitchen: fish and vegetables.

Neuter. Anything eaten with bread, very often fish.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obsōnium was borrowed from Greek opsōnion, "provisions, what is eaten with bread" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obsōnium, obsōniī
- Say it: obsōnium, obsōniī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obsōnium, obsōniī
- Recall: say the Latin for an invention, then the Latin for to buy food, then say obsōnium, obsōniī again

Before you move on

What does obsōnium, obsōniī mean? ("Food to go with bread, provisions".) Say it once more.

350.3 abluō, abluere — to wash off, to wash clean

Before the new one: say the Latin for to buy food, then the Latin for food to go with bread.

You'll want to know: abluō, abluere

abluō, abluere — "to wash off, to wash clean".

Coquus holera aquā frīgidā abluit.

The cook washed the vegetables in cold water.

abluō, abluere, abluī, ablūtum. English ablution.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

abluō joins ab, "away", and luō, "to wash", a cousin of lavō (EtymDB). English ablution comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: abluō, abluere
- Say it: abluō, abluere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with abluō, abluere
- Recall: say the Latin for to buy food, then the Latin for food to go with bread, then say abluō, abluere again

Before you move on

What does abluō, abluere mean? ("To wash off, to wash clean".) Say it once more.

350.4 tergeō, tergēre — to wipe, to wipe clean

Before the new one: say the Latin for food to go with bread, then the Latin for to wash off.

You'll want to know: tergeō, tergēre

tergeō, tergēre — "to wipe, to wipe clean".

Ancilla mēnsam linteō tersit.

The maid wiped the dining table with a cloth.

tergeō, tergēre, tersī, tersum. Its compound dētergeō gives English detergent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tergeō is an inherited verb (EtymDB). English detergent comes from its compound dētergeō, "to wipe off".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tergeō, tergēre
- Say it: tergeō, tergēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tergeō, tergēre
- Recall: say the Latin for food to go with bread, then the Latin for to wash off, then say tergeō, tergēre again

Before you move on

What does tergeō, tergēre mean? ("To wipe, to wipe clean".) Say it once more.

350.5 cultellus, cultellī — a small knife

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wash off, then the Latin for to wipe.

You'll want to know: cultellus, cultellī

cultellus, cultellī — "a small knife".

Coquus cultellum acūtum ē cistā sūmpsit.

The cook took a sharp little knife from the box.

Masculine, a diminutive of culter (taught). English cutlass and cutlery come from this family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cultellus is a diminutive of culter, "knife" (Lewis & Short). English cutlass and cutlery come from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cultellus, cultellī
- Say it: cultellus, cultellī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cultellus, cultellī
- Recall: say the Latin for to wash off, then the Latin for to wipe, then say cultellus, cultellī again

Before you move on

What does cultellus, cultellī mean? ("A small knife".) Say it once more.

Chapter 351

Concīdere et terere

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe preparing food: to chop up, to cut, the mortar, the pestle and to grind.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 351: I can describe preparing food: to chop up, to cut, the mortar, the pestle and to grind.

351.1 concīdō, concīdere — to chop up, to cut to pieces

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to wipe, then the Latin for a small knife.

You'll want to know: concīdō, concīdere

concīdō, concīdere — "to chop up, to cut to pieces".

> Coquus cēpās et ālium concīdit.
>
> The cook chopped up the onions and garlic.

concīdō, concīdere, concīdī, concīsum, long ī: con- + caedō. Do not confuse concidō, 'to collapse'. English concise.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

concīdō is built on caedō, "to cut", with con- (EtymDB): to cut up small. English concise, cut short, comes from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: concīdō, concīdere
- Say it: concīdō, concīdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with concīdō, concīdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to wipe, then the Latin for a small knife, then say concīdō, concīdere again

Before you move on

What does concīdō, concīdere mean? ("To chop up, to cut to pieces".) Say it once more.

351.2 secō, secāre — to cut, to slice

Before the new one: say the Latin for a small knife, then the Latin for to chop up.

You'll want to know: secō, secāre

secō, secāre — "to cut, to slice".

Pater pānem cultellō secuit.

Father sliced the bread with a little knife.

secō, secāre, secuī, sectum. English section and insect, a creature cut into parts, come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

secō is inherited from the Proto-Indo-European root sek-*, "to cut" (EtymDB). English section, sector and insect come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: secō, secāre
- Say it: secō, secāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with secō, secāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a small knife, then the Latin for to chop up, then say secō, secāre again

Before you move on

What does secō, secāre mean? ("To cut, to slice".) Say it once more.

351.3 mortārium, mortāriī — a mortar (a bowl for pounding)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to chop up, then the Latin for to cut.

You'll want to know: mortārium, mortāriī

mortārium, mortāriī — "a mortar (a bowl for pounding)".

Coquus herbās in mortārium posuit.

The cook put the herbs into the mortar.

Neuter. A heavy bowl of stone or clay. English mortar, for building too, comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mortārium is a Latin word whose origin is not settled (Lewis & Short). English mortar, both the bowl and the builder mix, comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mortārium, mortāriī
- Say it: mortārium, mortāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mortārium, mortāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for to chop up, then the Latin for to cut, then say mortārium, mortāriī again

Before you move on

What does mortārium, mortāriī mean? ("A mortar (a bowl for pounding)".) Say it once more.

351.4 pistillum, pistillī — a pestle

Before the new one: say the Latin for to cut, then the Latin for a mortar.

You'll want to know: pistillum, pistillī

pistillum, pistillī — "a pestle".

Pistillum ligneum erat et grave.

The pestle was wooden and heavy.

Neuter, from a verb meaning 'to pound'. English pestle comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pistillum is built on pīnsō, "to pound" (EtymDB), with a small-tool ending. English pestle comes from it through French, and pistil directly.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pistillum, pistillī
- Say it: pistillum, pistillī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pistillum, pistillī
- Recall: say the Latin for to cut, then the Latin for a mortar, then say pistillum, pistillī again

Before you move on

What does pistillum, pistillī mean? ("A pestle".) Say it once more.

351.5 terō, terere — to grind, to rub

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mortar, then the Latin for a pestle.

You'll want to know: terō, terere

terō, terere — "to grind, to rub".

Ancilla piper pistillō terēbat.

The maid was grinding pepper with the pestle.

terō, terere, trīvī, trītum. English trite, worn out by rubbing.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

terō is an inherited verb; Lewis & Short compare Greek teirō, "to wear away". English trite comes from its participle trītus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: terō, terere
- Say it: terō, terere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with terō, terere
- Recall: say the Latin for a mortar, then the Latin for a pestle, then say terō, terere again

Before you move on

What does terō, terere mean? ("To grind, to rub".) Say it once more.

Chapter 352

Pānis domesticus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how bread was made: the millstone, the sieve, to knead, the yeast and the baking pot.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 352: I can tell how bread was made: the millstone, the sieve, to knead, the yeast and the baking pot.

352.1 mola, molae — a millstone; a mill; salted meal

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a pestle, then the Latin for to grind.

You'll want to know: mola, molae

mola, molae — "a millstone; a mill; salted meal".

> Asinus molam in pistrīnō vertēbat.
>
> A donkey was turning the millstone in the bakery.

Feminine; the plural molae is a mill. Mola salsa, salted meal, was sprinkled on victims. English molar, the grinding tooth.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mola is inherited from the Proto-Indo-European root *$*melh_2$-, "to grind" (EtymDB). English molar comes from it, and English meal, "flour", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mola, molae
- Say it: mola, molae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mola, molae
- Recall: say the Latin for a pestle, then the Latin for to grind, then say mola, molae again

Before you move on

What does mola, molae mean? ("A millstone; a mill; salted meal".) Say it once more.

352.2 crībrum, crībrī — a sieve

Before the new one: say the Latin for to grind, then the Latin for a millstone.

You'll want to know: crībrum, crībrī

crībrum, crībrī — "a sieve".

Pistor farīnam crībrō pūrgābat.

The baker was cleaning the flour with a sieve.

Neuter. Pouring water into a sieve was a Roman picture of a hopeless task.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crībrum is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to sift" (EtymDB), also seen, says Lewis & Short, in cernō, "to sift, to separate".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: crībrum, crībrī
- Say it: crībrum, crībrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with crībrum, crībrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to grind, then the Latin for a millstone, then say crībrum, crībrī again

Before you move on

What does crībrum, crībrī mean? ("A sieve".) Say it once more.

352.3 subigō, subigere — to knead; to subdue

Before the new one: say the Latin for a millstone, then the Latin for a sieve.

You'll want to know: subigō, subigere

subigō, subigere — "to knead; to subdue".

Pistor farīnam et aquam subēgit.

The baker kneaded the flour with water.

subigō, subigere, subēgī, subāctum: sub + agō. Also to bring under one's power.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

subigō is built on agō, "to drive", with sub-, "under" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short): to work something under, to knead, and to subdue.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: subigō, subigere
- Say it: subigō, subigere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with subigō, subigere
- Recall: say the Latin for a millstone, then the Latin for a sieve, then say subigō, subigere again

Before you move on

What does subigō, subigere mean? ("To knead; to subdue".) Say it once more.

352.4 fermentum, fermentī — leaven, yeast

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sieve, then the Latin for to knead.

You'll want to know: fermentum, fermentī

fermentum, fermentī — "leaven, yeast".

Sine fermentō pānis dūrus fit.

Without leaven bread turns out hard.

Neuter, from a verb meaning 'to boil, to bubble'. English ferment.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fermentum is built on ferveō, "to boil, to bubble" (EtymDB): what makes dough bubble. English ferment comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fermentum, fermentī
- Say it: fermentum, fermentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fermentum, fermentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a sieve, then the Latin for to knead, then say fermentum, fermentī again

Before you move on

What does fermentum, fermentī mean? ("Leaven, yeast".) Say it once more.

352.5 clībanus, clībanī — a baking pot, a small oven

Before the new one: say the Latin for to knead, then the Latin for leaven.

You'll want to know: clībanus, clībanī

clībanus, clībanī — "a baking pot, a small oven".

Pānem in clībanō coxit.

He baked the bread in a baking pot.

Masculine, a Greek loan: a clay or iron pot heated with coals, wider at the bottom.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clībanus was borrowed from Greek klibanos, "a baker's oven, a covered pan" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: clībanus, clībanī
- Say it: clībanus, clībanī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with clībanus, clībanī
- Recall: say the Latin for to knead, then the Latin for leaven, then say clībanus, clībanī again

Before you move on

What does clībanus, clībanī mean? ("A baking pot, a small oven".) Say it once more.

Chapter 353

Aqua fervet

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe boiling food: to boil, the cooking pot, boiled, the foam and to skim.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 353: I can describe boiling food: to boil, the cooking pot, boiled, the foam and to skim.

353.1 ferveō, fervēre — to boil, to be hot

> Before the new one: say the Latin for leaven, then the Latin for a baking pot.

You'll want to know: ferveō, fervēre ferveō, fervēre — "to boil, to be hot".

> Aqua in ōllā fervēbat.
>
> The water was boiling in the pot.

ferveō, fervēre, ferbuī, also an older fervō, fervere. English fervent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ferveō is an inherited verb (EtymDB). English fervent comes from it, and ferment from its noun fermentum.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ferveō, fervēre
- Say it: ferveō, fervēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ferveō, fervēre
- Recall: say the Latin for leaven, then the Latin for a baking pot, then say ferveō, fervēre again

Before you move on

What does ferveō, fervēre mean? ("To boil, to be hot".) Say it once more.

353.2 caccabus, caccabī — a cooking pot

Before the new one: say the Latin for a baking pot, then the Latin for to boil.

You'll want to know: caccabus, caccabī

caccabus, caccabī — "a cooking pot".

Caccabus super focum pendēbat.

A cooking pot was hanging over the hearth.

Masculine, a Greek loan: a round pot of bronze or clay.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caccabus was borrowed from Greek kakkabos, "a pot, a pan" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: caccabus, caccabī
- Say it: caccabus, caccabī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with caccabus, caccabī
- Recall: say the Latin for a baking pot, then the Latin for to boil, then say caccabus, caccabī again

Before you move on

What does caccabus, caccabī mean? ("A cooking pot".) Say it once more.

353.3 ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum — boiled

Before the new one: say the Latin for to boil, then the Latin for a cooking pot.

You'll want to know: ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum

ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum — "boiled".

Carō ēlixa mollis et dulcis erat.

The boiled meat was soft and sweet.

Boiled right through. A slave in Plautus jokes that he tastes better boiled than roasted.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēlixus is built, says Lewis & Short, on ē, "out, thoroughly", and lix, an old word for water or lye: thoroughly boiled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum
- Say it: ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum
- Recall: say the Latin for to boil, then the Latin for a cooking pot, then say ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum again

Before you move on

What does ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum mean? ("Boiled".) Say it once more.

353.4 spūma, spūmae — foam, froth, scum

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cooking pot, then the Latin for boiled.

You'll want to know: spūma, spūmae

spūma, spūmae — "foam, froth, scum".

Spūma alba in aquā ferventī natābat.

White foam was floating on the boiling water.

Feminine. English spume.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spūma is linked by Lewis & Short with spuō, "to spit". English spume comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: spūma, spūmae
- Say it: spūma, spūmae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with spūma, spūmae
- Recall: say the Latin for a cooking pot, then the Latin for boiled, then say spūma, spūmae again

Before you move on

What does spūma, spūmae mean? ("Foam, froth, scum".) Say it once more.

353.5 dēspūmō, dēspūmāre — to skim off

Before the new one: say the Latin for boiled, then the Latin for foam.

You'll want to know: dēspūmō, dēspūmāre

dēspūmō, dēspūmāre — "to skim off".

Coquus ōllam dīligenter dēspūmāvit.

The cook carefully skimmed the pot.

dēspūmō, dēspūmāre, dēspūmāvī, dēspūmātum. Vergil's farmer skims the boiling grape juice with leaves.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēspūmō is built on spūma, "foam", with dē-, "off" (EtymDB): to take the foam off.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēspūmō, dēspūmāre
- Say it: dēspūmō, dēspūmāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēspūmō, dēspūmāre
- Recall: say the Latin for boiled, then the Latin for foam, then say dēspūmō, dēspūmāre again

Before you move on

What does dēspūmō, dēspūmāre mean? ("To skim off".) Say it once more.

Chapter 354

Assum et frīctum

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe roasting and frying: roasted, a sausage, the gridiron, to fry and to toast.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 354: I can describe roasting and frying: roasted, a sausage, the gridiron, to fry and to toast.

354.1 assus, assa, assum — roasted

> Before the new one: say the Latin for foam, then the Latin for to skim off.

You'll want to know: assus, assa, assum

assus, assa, assum — "roasted".

> Carō assa iūcunda erat.
>
> The roast meat was delicious.

Assus is roasted, ēlixus boiled: Horace and Celsus set the two side by side.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

assus is inherited (EtymDB); Lewis & Short connect it with āreō, "to be dry", and ārdeō, "to burn".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: assus, assa, assum
- Say it: assus, assa, assum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with assus, assa, assum
- Recall: say the Latin for foam, then the Latin for to skim off, then say assus, assa, assum again

Before you move on

What does assus, assa, assum mean? ("Roasted".) Say it once more.

354.2 lūcānica, lūcānicae — a smoked sausage

Before the new one: say the Latin for to skim off, then the Latin for roasted.

You'll want to know: lūcānica, lūcānicae

lūcānica, lūcānicae — "a smoked sausage".

Senex lūcānicam et pānem edēbat.

The old man was eating a sausage and bread.

Feminine. A smoked pork sausage from southern Italy; Martial sends one as a little present.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūcānica is the sausage of Lucania, a region of southern Italy, named after the people who made it (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lūcānica, lūcānicae
- Say it: lūcānica, lūcānicae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lūcānica, lūcānicae
- Recall: say the Latin for to skim off, then the Latin for roasted, then say lūcānica, lūcānicae again

Before you move on

What does lūcānica, lūcānicae mean? ("A smoked sausage".) Say it once more.

354.3 crāticula, crāticulae — a gridiron, a grill

Before the new one: say the Latin for roasted, then the Latin for a smoked sausage.

You'll want to know: crāticula, crāticulae

crāticula, crāticulae — "a gridiron, a grill".

Piscēs in crāticulā super carbōnēs coquēbantur.

The fish were cooking on a grill over the coals.

Feminine, a small grid of iron. Martial makes a small present of one.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crāticula is a diminutive of crātis, "wickerwork, a hurdle" (Lewis & Short): a little grid.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: crāticula, crāticulae
- Say it: crāticula, crāticulae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with crāticula, crāticulae
- Recall: say the Latin for roasted, then the Latin for a smoked sausage, then say crāticula, crāticulae again

Before you move on

What does crāticula, crāticulae mean? ("A gridiron, a grill".) Say it once more.

354.4 frīgō, frīgere — to fry, to parch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a smoked sausage, then the Latin for a gridiron.

You'll want to know: frīgō, frīgere

frīgō, frīgere — "to fry, to parch".

Coquus piscēs in oleō frīxit.

The cook fried the fish in oil.

frīgō, frīgere, frīxī, frīctum, long ī, in a sartāgō (taught). English fry comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frīgō is compared by Lewis & Short with Greek phrygō, "to roast, to parch". English fry comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: frīgō, frīgere
- Say it: frīgō, frīgere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with frīgō, frīgere
- Recall: say the Latin for a smoked sausage, then the Latin for a gridiron, then say frīgō, frīgere again

Before you move on

What does frīgō, frīgere mean? ("To fry, to parch".) Say it once more.

354.5 torreō, torrēre — to roast, to toast, to parch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a gridiron, then the Latin for to fry.

You'll want to know: torreō, torrēre

torreō, torrēre — "to roast, to toast, to parch".

Ad focum pānem torrēbat.

He was toasting bread by the hearth.

torreō, torrēre, torruī, tostum. English toast comes from tostum, and torrid from the verb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

torreō is inherited from Proto-Italic torzeō*, "to scorch" (EtymDB), a cousin of English thirst. English toast and torrid come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: torreō, torrēre
- Say it: torreō, torrēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with torreō, torrēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a gridiron, then the Latin for to fry, then say torreō, torrēre again

Before you move on

What does torreō, torrēre mean? ("To roast, to toast, to parch".) Say it once more.

354.6 Words from chapters 347–354 — a review

Say the Latin for a monster and a giant.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a monster, a giant, a hero, a nymph, a fleece
- an oracle, a seer, a portent, an omen, to prophesy
- to chat, to say yes, wonderful, unbelievable, an invention
- to buy food, food to go with bread, to wash off, to wipe, a small knife
- to chop up, to cut, a mortar, a pestle, to grind
- a millstone, a sieve, to knead, leaven, a baking pot
- to boil, a cooking pot, boiled, foam, to skim off
- roasted, a smoked sausage, a gridiron, to fry, to roast

Before you move on

A monster? (mōnstrum, mōnstrī.) A giant? (gigās, gigantis.) A hero? (hērōs, hērōis.) A nymph? (nympha, nymphae.) A fleece? (vellus, velleris.) An oracle? (ōrāculum, ōrāculī.) A seer? (vātēs, vātis.) A portent? (prōdigium, prōdigiī.) An omen? (ōmen, ōminis.) To prophesy? (vāticinor, vāticinārī.) To chat? (fābulor, fābulārī.) To say yes? (āiō.) Wonderful? (mīrābilis, mīrābile.) Unbelievable? (incrēdibilis, incrēdibile.) An invention? (commentum, commentī.) To buy food? (obsōnō, obsōnāre.) Food to go with bread? (obsōnium, obsōniī.) To wash off? (abluō, abluere.) To wipe? (tergeō, tergēre.) A small knife? (cultellus, cultellī.) To chop up? (concīdō, concīdere.) To cut? (secō, secāre.) A mortar? (mortārium, mortāriī.) A pestle? (pistillum, pistillī.) To grind? (terō, terere.) A millstone? (mola, molae.) A sieve? (crībrum, crībrī.) To knead? (subigō, subigere.) Leaven? (fermentum, fermentī.) A baking pot? (clībanus, clībanī.) To boil? (ferveō, fervēre.) A cooking pot? (caccabus, caccabī.) Boiled? (ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum.) Foam? (spūma, spūmae.) To skim off? (dēspūmō, dēspūmāre.) Roasted? (assus, assa, assum.) A smoked sausage? (lūcānica, lūcānicae.) A gridiron? (crāticula, crāticulae.) To fry? (frīgō, frīgere.) To roast? (torreō, torrēre.)

Chapter 355

Condīmenta

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how a dish was seasoned: to season, a seasoning, to sprinkle, to pour in and to strain.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 355: I can tell how a dish was seasoned: to season, a seasoning, to sprinkle, to pour in and to strain.

355.1 condiō, condīre — to season, to spice; to pickle

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to fry, then the Latin for to roast.

You'll want to know: condiō, condīre

condiō, condīre — "to season, to spice; to pickle".

> Coquus carnem pipere et sale condīvit.
>
> The cook seasoned the meat with pepper and salt.

condiō, condīre, condīvī, condītum. First to preserve fruit in vinegar or salt, then to flavour.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

condiō is taken by Lewis & Short as a side form of condō, "to put away, to store": first to put fruit away in pickle, then to season.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: condiō, condīre
- Say it: condiō, condīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with condiō, condīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to fry, then the Latin for to roast, then say condiō, condīre again

Before you move on

What does condiō, condīre mean? ("To season, to spice; to pickle".) Say it once more.

355.2 condīmentum, condīmentī — a seasoning, a spice

Before the new one: say the Latin for to roast, then the Latin for to season.

You'll want to know: condīmentum, condīmentī

condīmentum, condīmentī — "a seasoning, a spice".

Famēs optimum condīmentum est.

Hunger is the best seasoning.

Neuter, from condiō. Cicero passes on the saying that hunger seasons food. English condiment.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

condīmentum is built on condiō, "to season" (EtymDB), with the ending -mentum. English condiment comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: condīmentum, condīmentī
- Say it: condīmentum, condīmentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with condīmentum, condīmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for to roast, then the Latin for to season, then say condīmentum, condīmentī again

Before you move on

What does condīmentum, condīmentī mean? ("A seasoning, a spice".) Say it once more.

355.3 aspergō, aspergere — to sprinkle

Before the new one: say the Latin for to season, then the Latin for a seasoning.

You'll want to know: aspergō, aspergere

aspergō, aspergere — "to sprinkle".

Coquus piper in carnem aspersit.

The cook sprinkled pepper on the meat.

aspergō, aspergere, aspersī, aspersum: ad + spargō, 'to scatter'. English asperse.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aspergō is built on spargō, "to scatter", with ad- (Lewis & Short); the vowel changes inside the compound.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aspergō, aspergere
- Say it: aspergō, aspergere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aspergō, aspergere
- Recall: say the Latin for to season, then the Latin for a seasoning, then say aspergō, aspergere again

Before you move on

What does aspergō, aspergere mean? ("To sprinkle".) Say it once more.

355.4 īnfundō, īnfundere — to pour in, to pour on

Before the new one: say the Latin for a seasoning, then the Latin for to sprinkle.

You'll want to know: īnfundō, īnfundere

īnfundō, īnfundere — "to pour in, to pour on".

Garum et oleum in patinam īnfūdit.

He poured fish sauce and oil into the pan.

īnfundō, īnfundere, īnfūdī, īnfūsum: in + fundō, 'to pour'. English infuse.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnfundō is built on fundō, "to pour", with in, "into" (Lewis & Short). English infuse comes from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnfundō, īnfundere
- Say it: īnfundō, īnfundere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnfundō, īnfundere
- Recall: say the Latin for a seasoning, then the Latin for to sprinkle, then say īnfundō, īnfundere again

Before you move on

What does īnfundō, īnfundere mean? ("To pour in, to pour on".) Say it once more.

355.5 cōlō, cōlāre — to strain, to filter

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sprinkle, then the Latin for to pour in.

You'll want to know: cōlō, cōlāre

cōlō, cōlāre — "to strain, to filter".

Vīnum per linteum cōlāvit.

He strained the wine through a cloth.

cōlō, cōlāre, cōlāvī, cōlātum, from cōlum, 'a strainer'. Not the verb colō, colere, 'to farm'. English colander.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōlō is built on cōlum, "a strainer, a colander" (EtymDB, Lewis & Short). English colander comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōlō, cōlāre
- Say it: cōlō, cōlāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōlō, cōlāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to sprinkle, then the Latin for to pour in, then say cōlō, cōlāre again

Before you move on

What does cōlō, cōlāre mean? ("To strain, to filter".) Say it once more.

Chapter 356

Cēna appōnitur

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how a dinner was served and eaten: to serve up, to wait at table, the dining room, to recline and a course.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 356: I can tell how a dinner was served and eaten: to serve up, to wait at table, the dining room, to recline and a course.

356.1 appōnō, appōnere — to serve up, to put before

Before the new one: say the Latin for to pour in, then the Latin for to strain.

You'll want to know: appōnō, appōnere

appōnō, appōnere — "to serve up, to put before".

> Servī cēnam amīcīs appōnēbant.
>
> The slaves were serving dinner to the friends.

appōnō, appōnere, apposuī, appositum: ad + pōnō (taught), to set food before someone.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

appōnō is built on pōnō, "to put", with ad-, "to, beside" (Lewis & Short): to put before someone.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: appōnō, appōnere
- Say it: appōnō, appōnere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with appōnō, appōnere
- Recall: say the Latin for to pour in, then the Latin for to strain, then say appōnō, appōnere again

Before you move on

What does appōnō, appōnere mean? ("To serve up, to put before".) Say it once more.

356.2 ministrō, ministrāre — to wait at table, to serve

Before the new one: say the Latin for to strain, then the Latin for to serve up.

You'll want to know: ministrō, ministrāre

ministrō, ministrāre — "to wait at table, to serve".

Puerī vīnum ministrābant.

The slave boys were serving the wine.

ministrō, ministrāre, ministrāvī, ministrātum, from minister, 'servant'. English minister.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ministrō is built on minister, "servant, attendant" (EtymDB), itself from minus, "less", as magister is from magis. English minister comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ministrō, ministrāre
- Say it: ministrō, ministrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ministrō, ministrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to strain, then the Latin for to serve up, then say ministrō, ministrāre again

Before you move on

What does ministrō, ministrāre mean? ("To wait at table, to serve".) Say it once more.

356.3 triclīnium, triclīniī — a dining room; a dining couch

Before the new one: say the Latin for to serve up, then the Latin for to wait at table.

You'll want to know: triclīnium, triclīniī

triclīnium, triclīniī — "a dining room; a dining couch".

Hospitēs in triclīnium intrāvērunt.

The guests went into the dining room.

Neuter, a Greek loan: three couches round a table, three guests on each.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

triclīnium was borrowed from Greek triklinion, from treis, "three", and klinē, "couch" (EtymDB): the room with three couches.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: triclīnium, triclīniī
- Say it: triclīnium, triclīniī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with triclīnium, triclīniī
- Recall: say the Latin for to serve up, then the Latin for to wait at table, then say triclīnium, triclīniī again

Before you move on

What does triclīnium, triclīniī mean? ("A dining room; a dining couch".) Say it once more.

356.4 discumbō, discumbere — to recline at table

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wait at table, then the Latin for a dining room.

You'll want to know: discumbō, discumbere

discumbō, discumbere — "to recline at table".

Omnēs discubuērunt, et cēna incēpit.

Everyone took their places at table, and the dinner began.

discumbō, discumbere, discubuī, discubitum. Romans ate lying on the left elbow.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

discumbō is built on -cumbō, "to lie down", with dis-, "apart" (EtymDB): each guest lying down in his place.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: discumbō, discumbere
- Say it: discumbō, discumbere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with discumbō, discumbere
- Recall: say the Latin for to wait at table, then the Latin for a dining room, then say discumbō, discumbere again

Before you move on

What does discumbō, discumbere mean? ("To recline at table".) Say it once more.

356.5 ferculum, ferculī — a course, a dish; a tray

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dining room, then the Latin for to recline at table.

You'll want to know: ferculum, ferculī

ferculum, ferculī — "a course, a dish; a tray".

Prīmum ferculum ōva et olīvae erant.

The first course was eggs and olives.

Neuter, from ferō: a tray that carries food, and so a course. In a triumph, a ferculum carried the spoils.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ferculum is built on ferō, "to carry", with the tool ending -culum (EtymDB): a carrier, a tray.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ferculum, ferculī
- Say it: ferculum, ferculī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ferculum, ferculī
- Recall: say the Latin for a dining room, then the Latin for to recline at table, then say ferculum, ferculī again

Before you move on

What does ferculum, ferculī mean? ("A course, a dish; a tray".) Say it once more.

356.6 The last stories — a review

Say the Latin for to season and a seasoning.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to season, a seasoning, to sprinkle, to pour in, to strain
- to serve up, to wait at table, a dining room, to recline at table, a course

Before you move on

To season? (condiō, condīre.) A seasoning? (condīmentum, condīmentī.) To sprinkle? (aspergō, aspergere.) To pour in?

(īnfundō, īnfundere.) To strain? (cōlō, cōlāre.) To serve up? (appōnō, appōnere.) To wait at table? (ministrō, ministrāre.) A dining room? (triclīnium, triclīniī.) To recline at table? (discumbō, discumbere.) A course? (ferculum, ferculī.)

356.7 Cēna appōnitur — once more

Say the Latin for to serve up and to wait at table.

Your turn

- Say it: to serve up, to wait at table, a dining room, to recline at table, a course

Before you move on

To serve up? (appōnō, appōnere.) To wait at table? (ministrō, ministrāre.) A dining room? (triclīnium, triclīniī.) To recline at table? (discumbō, discumbere.) A course? (ferculum, ferculī.)

Chapter 357

What I Think and Judge

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I judge, reckon, propose and suppose, and talk about an opinion.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 357: I can say what I judge, reckon, propose and suppose, and talk about an opinion.

357.1 arbitror, arbitrārī — to be of the opinion, to judge

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a ditch, then the Latin for a rampart.

You'll want to know: arbitror, arbitrārī

arbitror, arbitrārī — "to be of the opinion, to judge".

> Arbitror eum vērum dīcere.
>
> I believe he is telling the truth.

Deponent: arbitror, arbitrārī, arbitrātus sum, passive in form and active in meaning. Like putō it takes the accusative and infinitive. English arbitrate comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arbitror is built on arbiter "an eyewitness, an umpire" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): to judge a thing as one who saw it. English arbiter, arbitrate and arbitrary come from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: arbitror, arbitrārī
- Say it: arbitror, arbitrārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with arbitror, arbitrārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a ditch, then the Latin for a rampart, then say arbitror, arbitrārī again

Before you move on

What does arbitror, arbitrārī mean? ("To be of the opinion, to judge".) Say it once more.

357.2 exīstimō, exīstimāre — to reckon, to consider; to value

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rampart, then the Latin for to be of the opinion.

You'll want to know: exīstimō, exīstimāre

exīstimō, exīstimāre — "to reckon, to consider; to value".

Quid dē hōc librō exīstimās?

What do you think of this book?

exīstimō, exīstimāre, exīstimāvī, exīstimātum. With the accusative and infinitive: exīstimō tē errāre, I reckon you are wrong.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exīstimō is built from ex "out" and aestimō "to value, to put a price on" (Lewis & Short): to weigh a thing up and give the result. English estimate and esteem come from aestimō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: exīstimō, exīstimāre
- Say it: exīstimō, exīstimāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with exīstimō, exīstimāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a rampart, then the Latin for to be of the opinion, then say exīstimō, exīstimāre again

Before you move on

What does exīstimō, exīstimāre mean? ("To reckon, to consider; to value".) Say it once more.

357.3 cēnseō, cēnsēre — to give an opinion, to propose; to assess

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be of the opinion, then the Latin for to reckon.

You'll want to know: cēnseō, cēnsēre

cēnseō, cēnsēre — "to give an opinion, to propose; to assess".

Ego cēnseō pācem meliōrem esse quam bellum.

In my opinion peace is better than war.

cēnseō, cēnsēre, cēnsuī, cēnsum. The verb of a senator stating his view in the senate, and of the officer who counted and valued the citizens. English census comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēnseō is inherited from Proto-Italic kensēō* "to assess, to judge" (EtymDB), and has a Sanskrit cousin meaning "to declare". English census comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cēnseō, cēnsēre
- Say it: cēnseō, cēnsēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cēnseō, cēnsēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to be of the opinion, then the Latin for to reckon, then say cēnseō, cēnsēre again

Before you move on

What does cēnseō, cēnsēre mean? ("To give an opinion, to propose; to assess".) Say it once more.

357.4 opīnor, opīnārī — to suppose, to imagine

Before the new one: say the Latin for to reckon, then the Latin for to give an opinion.

You'll want to know: opīnor, opīnārī

opīnor, opīnārī — "to suppose, to imagine".

Ille, opīnor, nōn veniet.

He will not come, I suppose.

Deponent: opīnor, opīnārī, opīnātus sum. Dropped into a sentence, opīnor softens it, like English I suppose. English opine comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

opīnor comes from an old adjective opīnus "expecting" (EtymDB), which survives in necopīnus "unexpected" (Lewis & Short). English opine and opinion come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: opīnor, opīnārī
- Say it: opīnor, opīnārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with opīnor, opīnārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to reckon, then the Latin for to give an opinion, then say opīnor, opīnārī again

Before you move on

What does opīnor, opīnārī mean? ("To suppose, to imagine".) Say it once more.

357.5 opīniō, opīniōnis — an opinion, a belief; a reputation

Before the new one: say the Latin for to give an opinion, then the Latin for to suppose.

You'll want to know: opīniō, opīniōnis

opīniō, opīniōnis — "an opinion, a belief; a reputation".

Haec est opīniō mea, nōn tua.

This is my opinion, not yours.

opīniō, opīniōnis f., third declension. It is also what people think of you: bona opīniō, a good name. English opinion.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

opīniō is the noun built on opīnor "to suppose" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), and English opinion comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: opīniō, opīniōnis
- Say it: opīniō, opīniōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with opīniō, opīniōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to give an opinion, then the Latin for to suppose, then say opīniō, opīniōnis again

Before you move on

What does opīniō, opīniōnis mean? ("An opinion, a belief; a reputation".) Say it once more.

Chapter 358

Agreeing and Disagreeing

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I agree or disagree, that we are of one mind, and that a question is in dispute.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 358: I can say that I agree or disagree, that we are of one mind, and that a question is in dispute.

358.1 assentior, assentīrī — to agree (with), to assent

Before the new one: say the Latin for to suppose, then the Latin for an opinion.

You'll want to know: assentior, assentīrī

assentior, assentīrī — "to agree (with), to assent".

> Tibi assentior: nōn est tūtum.
>
> I agree with you: it is not safe.

Deponent: assentior, assentīrī, assēnsus sum, with the dative of the person: tibi assentior. English assent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

assentior is built from ad "towards" and sentiō "to feel, to think" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to bring your feeling over to someone else's. English assent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: assentior, assentīrī
- Say it: assentior, assentīrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with assentior, assentīrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to suppose, then the Latin for an opinion, then say assentior, assentīrī again

Before you move on

What does assentior, assentīrī mean? ("To agree (with), to assent".) Say it once more.

358.2 dissentiō, dissentīre — to disagree, to differ in opinion

Before the new one: say the Latin for an opinion, then the Latin for to agree.

You'll want to know: dissentiō, dissentīre

dissentiō, dissentīre — "to disagree, to differ in opinion".

Saepe ā frātre meō dissentiō.

I often disagree with my brother.

dissentiō, dissentīre, dissēnsī, dissēnsum. The person you disagree with goes in the ablative with ā / ab. English dissent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dissentiō is built from dis- "apart" and sentiō "to feel, to think" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to feel apart. English dissent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dissentiō, dissentīre
- Say it: dissentiō, dissentīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dissentiō, dissentīre
- Recall: say the Latin for an opinion, then the Latin for to agree, then say dissentiō, dissentīre again

Before you move on

What does dissentiō, dissentīre mean? ("To disagree, to differ in opinion".) Say it once more.

358.3 cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre — to agree together, to be of one mind

Before the new one: say the Latin for to agree, then the Latin for to disagree.

You'll want to know: cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre

cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre — "to agree together, to be of one mind".

Omnēs cīvēs dē hāc rē cōnsentiunt.

All the citizens agree about this matter.

cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre, cōnsēnsī, cōnsēnsum. Where assentior is one person agreeing with another, cōnsentiō is many minds agreeing together. English consent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsentiō is built from con- "together" and sentiō "to feel, to think" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to feel together. English consent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre
- Say it: cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to agree, then the Latin for to disagree, then say cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre again

Before you move on

What does cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre mean? ("To agree together, to be of one mind".) Say it once more.

358.4 cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs — agreement, unanimity

Before the new one: say the Latin for to disagree, then the Latin for to agree together.

You'll want to know: cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs

cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs — "agreement, unanimity".

Omnium cōnsēnsū eum ducem fēcērunt.

By common consent they made him leader.

cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs m., fourth declension. Omnium cōnsēnsū, by everyone's agreement, is a stock phrase. English consensus is the same word.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsēnsus is the noun built on cōnsentiō "to agree together" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), and English took it over whole as consensus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs
- Say it: cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to disagree, then the Latin for to agree together, then say cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs again

Before you move on

What does cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs mean? ("Agreement, unanimity".) Say it once more.

358.5 contrōversia, contrōversiae — a dispute, a controversy

Before the new one: say the Latin for to agree together, then the Latin for agreement.

You'll want to know: contrōversia, contrōversiae

contrōversia, contrōversiae — "a dispute, a controversy".

Inter vīcīnōs contrōversia dē agrō erat.

There was a dispute between the neighbours about a field.

contrōversia, contrōversiae f. A quarrel at law over a boundary or a will, and a set debate in the schools of speaking. English controversy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

contrōversia is built on contrōversus "turned the other way" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from contrā "against" and the participle of vertō "to turn": two sides turned against each other. English controversy comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: contrōversia, contrōversiae
- Say it: contrōversia, contrōversiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with contrōversia, contrōversiae
- Recall: say the Latin for to agree together, then the Latin for agreement, then say contrōversia, contrōversiae again

Before you move on

What does contrōversia, contrōversiae mean? ("A dispute, a controversy".) Say it once more.

Chapter 359

Weighing a Question

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I weigh a question and think it over, that I am in doubt, and that a thing is likely.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 359: I can say that I weigh a question and think it over, that I am in doubt, and that a thing is likely.

359.1 ponderō, ponderāre — to weigh (up), to ponder

Before the new one: say the Latin for agreement, then the Latin for a dispute.

You'll want to know: ponderō, ponderāre

ponderō, ponderāre — "to weigh (up), to ponder".

> Verba eius dīligenter ponderāvī.
>
> I weighed his words carefully.

ponderō, ponderāre, ponderāvī, ponderātum. Built on pondus, a weight: you weigh words as a merchant weighs goods. English ponder.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ponderō is built on pondus, ponderis "a weight" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB lists ponderō "to weigh"). English ponder comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ponderō, ponderāre
- Say it: ponderō, ponderāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ponderō, ponderāre
- Recall: say the Latin for agreement, then the Latin for a dispute, then say ponderō, ponderāre again

Before you move on

What does ponderō, ponderāre mean? ("To weigh (up), to ponder".) Say it once more.

359.2 dēlīberō, dēlīberāre — to deliberate, to think over

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dispute, then the Latin for to weigh.

You'll want to know: dēlīberō, dēlīberāre

dēlīberō, dēlīberāre — "to deliberate, to think over".

Diū dēlīberāvimus; tandem cōnstituimus.

We deliberated for a long time; at last we decided.

dēlīberō, dēlīberāre, dēlīberāvī, dēlīberātum. Dē rē dēlīberāre, to think a matter over. English deliberate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēlīberō is built from dē and a verb made on lībra "a balance, a pair of scales" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to weigh a decision on the scales. English deliberate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēlīberō, dēlīberāre
- Say it: dēlīberō, dēlīberāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēlīberō, dēlīberāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a dispute, then the Latin for to weigh, then say dēlīberō, dēlīberāre again

Before you move on

What does dēlīberō, dēlīberāre mean? ("To deliberate, to think over".) Say it once more.

359.3 dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis — doubt, hesitation

Before the new one: say the Latin for to weigh, then the Latin for to deliberate.

You'll want to know: dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis

dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis — "doubt, hesitation".

Sine ūllā dubitātiōne tibi crēdō.

I believe you without any doubt.

dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis f., the noun of dubitō, to doubt. Sine dubitātiōne, without hesitation. English doubt comes through French from dubitāre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dubitātiō is the noun built on dubitō "to doubt" (EtymDB), which belongs with dubius "wavering between two" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis
- Say it: dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to weigh, then the Latin for to deliberate, then say dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis mean? ("Doubt, hesitation".) Say it once more.

359.4 probābilis, probābile — likely, credible; worth approving

Before the new one: say the Latin for to deliberate, then the Latin for doubt.

You'll want to know: probābilis, probābile

probābilis, probābile — "likely, credible; worth approving".

Tua causa mihi probābilis vidētur.

Your case seems credible to me.

probābilis, probābile: two endings. Built on probō, to approve, to test: a thing you can approve. For a view that is likely but not certain. English probable.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

probābilis is built on probō "to approve, to test" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which comes from probus "good, upright". English probable comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: probābilis, probābile
- Say it: probābilis, probābile, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with probābilis, probābile
- Recall: say the Latin for to deliberate, then the Latin for doubt, then say probābilis, probābile again

Before you move on

What does probābilis, probābile mean? ("Likely, credible; worth approving".) Say it once more.

359.5 vērisimilis, vērisimile — probable, like the truth

Before the new one: say the Latin for doubt, then the Latin for likely.

You'll want to know: vērisimilis, vērisimile

vērisimilis, vērisimile — "probable, like the truth".

Nōn est vērisimile eum hoc fēcisse.

It is not likely that he did this.

vērisimilis, vērisimile, also written as two words, vērī similis, like the truth. Vērisimile est + accusative and infinitive. English verisimilitude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vērisimilis grew out of the phrase vērī similis "like the truth" (Lewis & Short), from vērus "true" and similis "like". English verisimilitude comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vērisimilis, vērisimile
- Say it: vērisimilis, vērisimile, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vērisimilis, vērisimile
- Recall: say the Latin for doubt, then the Latin for likely, then say vērisimilis, vērisimile again

Before you move on

What does vērisimilis, vērisimile mean? ("Probable, like the truth".) Say it once more.

Chapter 360

Plain, Clear and Absurd

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that a thing is plain or clear, call an idea absurd or foolish, and praise steadiness of mind.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 360: I can say that a thing is plain or clear, call an idea absurd or foolish, and praise steadiness of mind.

360.1 manifestus, manifesta, manifestum — evident, plain; caught in the act

Before the new one: say the Latin for likely, then the Latin for probable.

You'll want to know: manifestus, manifesta, manifestum

manifestus, manifesta, manifestum — "evident, plain; caught in the act".

> Rēs manifesta est: fūr pecūniam habet.
>
> The matter is plain: the thief has the money.

manifestus, manifesta, manifestum. A thief manifestus is caught red-handed. English manifest.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

manifestus is built from manus "hand" and an old verb fendō "to strike", the one in dēfendō and offendō (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a thing you could strike with your hand, so plain to see. English manifest comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: manifestus, manifesta, manifestum
- Say it: manifestus, manifesta, manifestum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with manifestus, manifesta, manifestum
- Recall: say the Latin for likely, then the Latin for probable, then say manifestus, manifesta, manifestum again

Before you move on

What does manifestus, manifesta, manifestum mean? ("Evident, plain; caught in the act".) Say it once more.

360.2 perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum — clear, transparent; evident

Before the new one: say the Latin for probable, then the Latin for evident.

You'll want to know: perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum

perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum — "clear, transparent; evident".

Haec ratiō perspicua est omnibus.

This reasoning is clear to everyone.

perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum. Water or glass you see through, and an argument you see through to the end. English perspicuous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perspicuus is built on perspiciō "to see through" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from per "through" and the old verb speciō "to look". English perspicuous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum
- Say it: perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum
- Recall: say the Latin for probable, then the Latin for evident, then say perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum again

Before you move on

What does perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum mean? ("Clear, transparent; evident".) Say it once more.

360.3 absurdus, absurda, absurdum — absurd, foolish; out of tune

Before the new one: say the Latin for evident, then the Latin for clear.

You'll want to know: absurdus, absurda, absurdum

absurdus, absurda, absurdum — "absurd, foolish; out of tune".

Absurdum est hoc dīcere.

It is absurd to say this.

absurdus, absurda, absurdum. First a voice out of tune, then anything that jars with sense. English absurd.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

absurdus is built from ab "away from" and surdus "deaf, dull-sounding" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a note that sounds wrong. English absurd comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: absurdus, absurda, absurdum
- Say it: absurdus, absurda, absurdum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with absurdus, absurda, absurdum
- Recall: say the Latin for evident, then the Latin for clear, then say absurdus, absurda, absurdum again

Before you move on

What does absurdus, absurda, absurdum mean? ("Absurd, foolish; out of tune".) Say it once more.

360.4 stultitia, stultitiae — foolishness, folly

Before the new one: say the Latin for clear, then the Latin for absurd.

You'll want to know: stultitia, stultitiae

stultitia, stultitiae — "foolishness, folly".

Magna stultitia est hostī crēdere.

It is great folly to trust an enemy.

stultitia, stultitiae f., the noun of stultus, foolish. Its opposite is sapientia.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stultitia is the noun built on stultus "foolish" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -itia that makes a quality.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: stultitia, stultitiae
- Say it: stultitia, stultitiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with stultitia, stultitiae
- Recall: say the Latin for clear, then the Latin for absurd, then say stultitia, stultitiae again

Before you move on

What does stultitia, stultitiae mean? ("Foolishness, folly".) Say it once more.

360.5 cōnstantia, cōnstantiae — steadiness, firmness, consistency

Before the new one: say the Latin for absurd, then the Latin for foolishness.

You'll want to know: cōnstantia, cōnstantiae

cōnstantia, cōnstantiae — "steadiness, firmness, consistency".

Cōnstantiam eius omnēs laudant.

Everyone praises his steadiness.

cōnstantia, cōnstantiae f. A person of cōnstantia holds the same view today as yesterday. English constancy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnstantia is the noun made from the present participle of a verb built on con- "together" and stō "to stand" (Lewis & Short): standing firm. English constancy and constant come from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnstantia, cōnstantiae
- Say it: cōnstantia, cōnstantiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnstantia, cōnstantiae
- Recall: say the Latin for absurd, then the Latin for foolishness, then say cōnstantia, cōnstantiae again

Before you move on

What does cōnstantia, cōnstantiae mean? ("Steadiness, firmness, consistency".) Say it once more.

Chapter 361

Proof and Example

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can bring an argument, an example and a proof, and say that something shows or confirms a point.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 361: I can bring an argument, an example and a proof, and say that something shows or confirms a point.

361.1 argūmentum, argūmentī — an argument, a proof; a plot

Before the new one: say the Latin for foolishness, then the Latin for steadiness.

You'll want to know: argūmentum, argūmentī

argūmentum, argūmentī — "an argument, a proof; a plot".

> Hoc argūmentum mihi nōn persuādet.
>
> This argument does not persuade me.

argūmentum, argūmentī n. It is also the plot of a play. Built on arguō, to make clear. English argument.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

argūmentum is built on arguō "to make clear, to prove" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -mentum that names a means. English argument comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: argūmentum, argūmentī
- Say it: argūmentum, argūmentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with argūmentum, argūmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for foolishness, then the Latin for steadiness, then say argūmentum, argūmentī again

Before you move on

What does argūmentum, argūmentī mean? ("An argument, a proof; a plot".) Say it once more.

361.2 exemplum, exemplī — an example; a warning

Before the new one: say the Latin for steadiness, then the Latin for an argument.

You'll want to know: exemplum, exemplī

exemplum, exemplī — "an example; a warning".

Pater exemplum bonum fīliō dedit.

The father set his son a good example.

exemplum, exemplī n. Exemplī grātiā, for the sake of an example, gives English e.g.; exemplī causā means the same. Exemplum facere is to make an example of someone.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exemplum comes from eximō "to take out" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), built from ex and emō, whose old sense was "to take": a piece taken out to show the rest. English example and sample come from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: exemplum, exemplī
- Say it: exemplum, exemplī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with exemplum, exemplī
- Recall: say the Latin for steadiness, then the Latin for an argument, then say exemplum, exemplī again

Before you move on

What does exemplum, exemplī mean? ("An example; a warning".) Say it once more.

361.3 documentum, documentī — a lesson, a proof; a warning example

Before the new one: say the Latin for an argument, then the Latin for an example.

You'll want to know: documentum, documentī

documentum, documentī — "a lesson, a proof; a warning example".

Eius poena documentum omnibus fuit.

His punishment was a lesson to everyone.

documentum, documentī n. Built on the verb for teaching: something that teaches. In Latin it is a lesson or a proof, not a paper. English document.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

documentum is built on doceō "to teach" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -mentum: a thing that teaches. English document comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: documentum, documentī
- Say it: documentum, documentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with documentum, documentī
- Recall: say the Latin for an argument, then the Latin for an example, then say documentum, documentī again

Before you move on

What does documentum, documentī mean? ("A lesson, a proof; a warning example".) Say it once more.

361.4 dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre — to show, to point out; to prove

Before the new one: say the Latin for an example, then the Latin for a lesson.

You'll want to know: dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre

dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre — "to show, to point out; to prove".

Testis dēmōnstrāvit reum tum domī fuisse.

The witness showed that the accused was at home then.

dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre, dēmōnstrāvī, dēmōnstrātum. With the accusative and infinitive it proves a claim. English demonstrate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēmōnstrō is built from dē and mōnstrō "to show" (Lewis & Short), which belongs with moneō "to warn, to remind". English demonstrate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre
- Say it: dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for an example, then the Latin for a lesson, then say dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre again

Before you move on

What does dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre mean? ("To show, to point out; to prove".) Say it once more.

361.5 cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre — to strengthen; to confirm, to assert

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lesson, then the Latin for to show.

You'll want to know: cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre

cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre — "to strengthen; to confirm, to assert".

Litterae tuae opīniōnem meam cōnfirmant.

Your letter confirms my opinion.

cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre, cōnfirmāvī, cōnfirmātum. Built on firmus, firm: to make firm, then to state firmly. Animum cōnfirmāre, to give someone courage. English confirm.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnfirmō is built from con- and a verb made on firmus "firm, strong" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to make thoroughly firm. English confirm comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre
- Say it: cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a lesson, then the Latin for to show, then say cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre again

Before you move on

What does cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre mean? ("To strengthen; to confirm, to assert".) Say it once more.

Chapter 362

Proving Someone Wrong

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can refute a claim, prove someone wrong and say that a case rests only on a guess.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 362: I can refute a claim, prove someone wrong and say that a case rests only on a guess.

362.1 refellō, refellere — to prove false, to refute

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to show, then the Latin for to strengthen.

You'll want to know: refellō, refellere

refellō, refellere — "to prove false, to refute".

> Facile erat eius verba refellere.
>
> It was easy to refute his words.

refellō, refellere, refellī, with no supine. Built on fallō, to deceive: to show up a deception.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

refellō is built from re- "back" and fallō "to deceive" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to turn a deception back on itself.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: refellō, refellere
- Say it: refellō, refellere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with refellō, refellere
- Recall: say the Latin for to show, then the Latin for to strengthen, then say refellō, refellere again

Before you move on

What does refellō, refellere mean? ("To prove false, to refute".) Say it once more.

362.2 refūtō, refūtāre — to refute; to drive back

Before the new one: say the Latin for to strengthen, then the Latin for to prove false.

You'll want to know: refūtō, refūtāre

refūtō, refūtāre — "to refute; to drive back".

Hanc opīniōnem nōn difficile est refūtāre.

This opinion is not hard to refute.

refūtō, refūtāre, refūtāvī, refūtātum. First to beat back an attack, then an argument. English refute.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

refūtō is built from re- "back" and an old verb fūtō, which EtymDB glosses "to beat"; Lewis & Short connect it instead with fundō "to pour", so its deeper origin is not settled. English refute comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: refūtō, refūtāre
- Say it: refūtō, refūtāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with refūtō, refūtāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to strengthen, then the Latin for to prove false, then say refūtō, refūtāre again

Before you move on

What does refūtō, refūtāre mean? ("To refute; to drive back".) Say it once more.

362.3 redarguō, redarguere — to disprove, to show to be wrong

Before the new one: say the Latin for to prove false, then the Latin for to refute.

You'll want to know: redarguō, redarguere

redarguō, redarguere — "to disprove, to show to be wrong".

Testis falsum dīxit, sed iūdex eum redarguit.

The witness told a lie, but the judge proved him wrong.

redarguō, redarguere, redarguī. Built on arguō: to prove the other side wrong, back to its face.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

redarguō is built from red- "back" and arguō "to make clear, to prove" (Lewis & Short): to prove a claim back against the one who made it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: redarguō, redarguere
- Say it: redarguō, redarguere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with redarguō, redarguere
- Recall: say the Latin for to prove false, then the Latin for to refute, then say redarguō, redarguere again

Before you move on

What does redarguō, redarguere mean? ("To disprove, to show to be wrong".) Say it once more.

362.4 convincō, convincere — to prove wrong, to convict; to prove

Before the new one: say the Latin for to refute, then the Latin for to disprove.

You'll want to know: convincō, convincere

convincō, convincere — "to prove wrong, to convict; to prove".

Eum mendācii convīcērunt.

They convicted him of lying.

convincō, convincere, convīcī, convictum. The charge goes in the genitive: mendācii convincere, to convict of lying. In Latin it proves, it does not persuade. English convict and convince.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

convincō is built from con- and vincō "to conquer" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to beat an opponent completely in argument. English convict and convince both come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: convincō, convincere
- Say it: convincō, convincere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with convincō, convincere
- Recall: say the Latin for to refute, then the Latin for to disprove, then say convincō, convincere again

Before you move on

What does convincō, convincere mean? ("To prove wrong, to convict; to prove".) Say it once more.

362.5 coniectūra, coniectūrae — a guess, a conjecture; an inference

Before the new one: say the Latin for to disprove, then the Latin for to prove wrong.

You'll want to know: coniectūra, coniectūrae

coniectūra, coniectūrae — "a guess, a conjecture; an inference".

Hoc nōn sciō, sed coniectūrā tantum dīcō.

I do not know this; I say it only by guesswork.

coniectūra, coniectūrae f. Built on coniciō, to throw together: pieces thrown together to make a guess. English conjecture.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coniectūra is built on coniciō "to throw together, to infer" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from con- and iaciō "to throw". English conjecture comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: coniectūra, coniectūrae
- Say it: coniectūra, coniectūrae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with coniectūra, coniectūrae
- Recall: say the Latin for to disprove, then the Latin for to prove wrong, then say coniectūra, coniectūrae again

Before you move on

What does coniectūra, coniectūrae mean? ("A guess, a conjecture; an inference".) Say it once more.

Chapter 363

Granting and Denying

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can grant a point, deny or refuse something, own up to a fault, raise a reproach and keep insisting.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 363: I can grant a point, deny or refuse something, own up to a fault, raise a reproach and keep insisting.

363.1 concēdō, concēdere — to grant, to concede; to give way

Before the new one: say the Latin for to prove wrong, then the Latin for a guess.

You'll want to know: concēdō, concēdere concēdō, concēdere — "to grant, to concede; to give way".

> Hoc tibi concēdō, sed nōn omnia.
>
> I grant you this, but not everything.

concēdō, concēdere, concessī, concessum. Dative of the person, accusative of the point: hoc tibi concēdō. English concede and concession.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

concēdō is built from con- and cēdō "to go, to yield" (Lewis & Short): to step aside for someone. English concede comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: concēdō, concēdere
- Say it: concēdō, concēdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with concēdō, concēdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to prove wrong, then the Latin for a guess, then say concēdō, concēdere again

Before you move on

What does concēdō, concēdere mean? ("To grant, to concede; to give way".) Say it once more.

363.2 dēnegō, dēnegāre — to deny flatly; to refuse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a guess, then the Latin for to grant.

You'll want to know: dēnegō, dēnegāre

dēnegō, dēnegāre — "to deny flatly; to refuse".

Pater mihi pecūniam dēnegāvit.

Father refused me the money.

dēnegō, dēnegāre, dēnegāvī, dēnegātum. Stronger than negō: a firm no. English deny comes through French from dēnegāre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēnegō is built from dē- and negō "to say no" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English deny comes from it through Old French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēnegō, dēnegāre
- Say it: dēnegō, dēnegāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēnegō, dēnegāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a guess, then the Latin for to grant, then say dēnegō, dēnegāre again

Before you move on

What does dēnegō, dēnegāre mean? ("To deny flatly; to refuse".) Say it once more.

363.3 cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī — to confess, to admit

Before the new one: say the Latin for to grant, then the Latin for to deny flatly.

You'll want to know: cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī

cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī — "to confess, to admit".

Culpam meam cōnfiteor.

I admit my fault.

Deponent: cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī, cōnfessus sum. A fuller form of fateor, to admit. English confess.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnfiteor is built from con- and fateor "to admit" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the vowel weakened inside the compound. English confess comes from its participle cōnfessus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī
- Say it: cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī
- Recall: say the Latin for to grant, then the Latin for to deny flatly, then say cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī again

Before you move on

What does cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī mean? ("To confess, to admit".) Say it once more.

363.4 obiciō, obicere — to throw in the way; to throw in someone's face

Before the new one: say the Latin for to deny flatly, then the Latin for to confess.

You'll want to know: obiciō, obicere

obiciō, obicere — "to throw in the way; to throw in someone's face".

Multī eī stultitiam obiciunt.

Many people reproach him with folly.

obiciō, obicere, obiēcī, obiectum: dative of the person, accusative of the charge. English object and objection.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obiciō is built from ob "in the way" and iaciō "to throw" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English object comes from its participle obiectum.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obiciō, obicere
- Say it: obiciō, obicere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obiciō, obicere
- Recall: say the Latin for to deny flatly, then the Latin for to confess, then say obiciō, obicere again

Before you move on

What does obiciō, obicere mean? ("To throw in the way; to throw in someone's face".) Say it once more.

363.5 contendō, contendere — to insist, to maintain; to strive; to hurry

Before the new one: say the Latin for to confess, then the Latin for to throw in the way.

You'll want to know: contendō, contendere

contendō, contendere — "to insist, to maintain; to strive; to hurry".

Contendit sē innocentem esse.

He insists that he is innocent.

contendō, contendere, contendī, contentum. With the accusative and infinitive, to insist; with ad, to hurry to a place. English contend.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

contendō is built from con- and tendō "to stretch" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to stretch every nerve, for a goal or for a claim. English contend comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: contendō, contendere
- Say it: contendō, contendere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with contendō, contendere
- Recall: say the Latin for to confess, then the Latin for to throw in the way, then say contendō, contendere again

Before you move on

What does contendō, contendere mean? ("To insist, to maintain; to strive; to hurry".) Say it once more.

Chapter 364

Drawing a Conclusion

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can draw a conclusion, reason a thing out, say what a word means and voice a suspicion.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 364: I can draw a conclusion, reason a thing out, say what a word means and voice a suspicion.

364.1 cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere — to shut in; to conclude, to infer

Before the new one: say the Latin for to throw in the way, then the Latin for to insist.

You'll want to know: cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere

cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere — "to shut in; to conclude, to infer".

> Ex hīs rēbus cōnclūdō eum mentīrī.
>
> From these facts I conclude that he is lying.

cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere, cōnclūsī, cōnclūsum. Built on claudō, to shut: to shut an argument up tight. English conclude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnclūdō is built from con- and claudō "to shut" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the vowel changed inside the compound. English conclude comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere
- Say it: cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to throw in the way, then the Latin for to insist, then say cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere again

Before you move on

What does cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere mean? ("To shut in; to conclude, to infer".) Say it once more.

364.2 cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis — a conclusion; the close of a speech

Before the new one: say the Latin for to insist, then the Latin for to shut in.

You'll want to know: cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis

cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis — "a conclusion; the close of a speech".

Cōnclūsiō tua falsa est.

Your conclusion is false.

cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis f. The last step of an argument, and the last part of a speech. English conclusion.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnclūsiō is the noun built on cōnclūdō "to shut up, to infer" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English conclusion comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis
- Say it: cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to insist, then the Latin for to shut in, then say cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis again

Before you move on

What does cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis mean? ("A conclusion; the close of a speech".) Say it once more.

364.3 ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī — to reason, to calculate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to shut in, then the Latin for a conclusion.

You'll want to know: ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī

ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī — "to reason, to calculate".

Bene ratiōcināris, sed falsum est initium.

You reason well, but the starting point is false.

Deponent: ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī, ratiōcinātus sum. Built on ratiō, reckoning: to work a thing out step by step. English ratiocination.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ratiōcinor is built on ratiō "a reckoning, reason" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to keep accounts, then to reason. English ratiocination comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī
- Say it: ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to shut in, then the Latin for a conclusion, then say ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī again

Before you move on

What does ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī mean? ("To reason, to calculate".) Say it once more.

364.4 significō, significāre — to indicate, to mean; to show

Before the new one: say the Latin for a conclusion, then the Latin for to reason.

You'll want to know: significō, significāre

significō, significāre — "to indicate, to mean; to show".

Quid hoc verbum significat?

What does this word mean?

significō, significāre, significāvī, significātum. Built on signum, a sign: to make a sign. English signify and significant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

significō is built on signum "a sign" (EtymDB) and the root of faciō "to make" (Lewis & Short): to make a sign. English signify comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: significō, significāre
- Say it: significō, significāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with significō, significāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a conclusion, then the Latin for to reason, then say significō, significāre again

Before you move on

What does significō, significāre mean? ("To indicate, to mean; to show".) Say it once more.

364.5 suspīciō, suspīciōnis — a suspicion, a mistrust

Before the new one: say the Latin for to reason, then the Latin for to indicate.

You'll want to know: suspīciō, suspīciōnis

suspīciō, suspīciōnis — "a suspicion, a mistrust".

In eum suspīciō cecidit.

Suspicion fell on him.

suspīciō, suspīciōnis f., with a long ī; suspicor, to suspect, is its verb. English suspicion.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suspīciō comes from suspiciō "to look up at; to suspect" (Lewis & Short), built from sub "up from under" and speciō "to look": a look from below. English suspicion comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: suspīciō, suspīciōnis
- Say it: suspīciō, suspīciōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with suspīciō, suspīciōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to reason, then the Latin for to indicate, then say suspīciō, suspīciōnis again

Before you move on

What does suspīciō, suspīciōnis mean? ("A suspicion, a mistrust".) Say it once more.

364.6 Reasons, causes and conditions

Say the Latin for to be of the opinion and to reckon.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to be of the opinion, to reckon, to give an opinion, to suppose, an opinion
- to agree, to disagree, to agree together, agreement, a dispute
- to weigh, to deliberate, doubt, likely, probable
- evident, clear, absurd, foolishness, steadiness

- an argument, an example, a lesson, to show, to strengthen
- to prove false, to refute, to disprove, to prove wrong, a guess
- to grant, to deny flatly, to confess, to throw in the way, to insist
- to shut in, a conclusion, to reason, to indicate, a suspicion

Before you move on

To be of the opinion? (arbitror, arbitrārī.) To reckon? (exīstimō, exīstimāre.) To give an opinion? (cēnseō, cēnsēre.) To suppose? (opīnor, opīnārī.) An opinion? (opīniō, opīniōnis.) To agree? (assentior, assentīrī.) To disagree? (dissentiō, dissentīre.) To agree together? (cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre.) Agreement? (cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs.) A dispute? (contrōversia, contrōversiae.) To weigh? (ponderō, ponderāre.) To deliberate? (dēlīberō, dēlīberāre.) Doubt? (dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis.) Likely? (probābilis, probābile.) Probable? (vērisimilis, vērisimile.) Evident? (manifestus, manifesta, manifestum.) Clear? (perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum.) Absurd? (absurdus, absurda, absurdum.) Foolishness? (stultitia, stultitiae.) Steadiness? (cōnstantia, cōnstantiae.) An argument? (argūmentum, argūmentī.) An example? (exemplum, exemplī.) A lesson? (documentum, documentī.) To show? (dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre.) To strengthen? (cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre.) To prove false? (refellō, refellere.) To refute? (refūtō, refūtāre.) To disprove? (redarguō, redarguere.) To prove wrong? (convincō, convincere.) A guess? (coniectūra, coniectūrae.) To grant? (concēdō, concēdere.) To deny flatly? (dēnegō, dēnegāre.) To confess? (cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī.) To throw in the way? (obiciō, obicere.) To insist? (contendō, contendere.) To shut in? (cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere.) A conclusion? (cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis.) To reason? (ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī.) To indicate? (significō, significāre.) A suspicion? (suspīciō, suspīciōnis.)

Chapter 365

For, Of Course, Namely

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can back up a claim with since, for, of course and namely, and say what mood each word takes.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 365: I can back up a claim with since, for, of course and namely, and say what mood each word takes.

365.1 quandōquidem — since, seeing that

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to indicate, then the Latin for a suspicion.

You'll want to know: quandōquidem

quandōquidem — "since, seeing that".

> Quandōquidem tū ades, incipiāmus.
>
> Since you are here, let us begin.

Quandōquidem takes the indicative: the reason is a plain fact both sides accept. It is built from quandō and quidem, indeed.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quandōquidem is built from quandō "when, since" and the particle quidem "indeed" (Lewis & Short): since, as we both know.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: quandōquidem
- Say it: quandōquidem, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with quandōquidem
- Recall: say the Latin for to indicate, then the Latin for a suspicion, then say quandōquidem again

Before you move on

What does quandōquidem mean? ("Since, seeing that".) Say it once more.

365.2 quippe — of course, naturally; for

Before the new one: say the Latin for a suspicion, then the Latin for since.

You'll want to know: quippe

quippe — "of course, naturally; for".

> Nōn vēnit, quippe quī aeger esset.
>
> He did not come, since of course he was ill.

Quippe gives a reason as something obvious, sometimes with irony. Quippe quī + subjunctive, seeing that he, is the classical use; Plautus and Livy also put the indicative after it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quippe is built from the old adverb quī "how" and the particle -pe (Lewis & Short), the same ending that is in nempe.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: quippe
- Say it: quippe, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with quippe
- Recall: say the Latin for a suspicion, then the Latin for since, then say quippe again

Before you move on

What does quippe mean? ("Of course, naturally; for".) Say it once more.

365.3 etenim — for indeed, and in fact

Before the new one: say the Latin for since, then the Latin for of course.

You'll want to know: etenim

etenim — "for indeed, and in fact".

Domī mānsī; etenim pluēbat.

I stayed at home: for it was raining.

Etenim (= et + enim) opens a sentence that gives the reason for the last one. Like enim and nam, it takes the indicative.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

etenim is built from et "and" and enim "for, you see" (Lewis & Short): and the reason is.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: etenim
- Say it: etenim, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with etenim
- Recall: say the Latin for since, then the Latin for of course, then say etenim again

Before you move on

What does etenim mean? ("For indeed, and in fact".) Say it once more.

365.4 nempe — surely, of course; namely

Before the new one: say the Latin for of course, then the Latin for for indeed.

You'll want to know: nempe

nempe — "surely, of course; namely".

Quis hoc fēcit? Nempe tū.

Who did this? You, of course.

Nempe appeals to what the listener must grant: surely, of course. It takes the indicative.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nempe is built from nam "for" and the particle -pe (EtymDB), the same ending that is in quippe.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nempe
- Say it: nempe, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nempe
- Recall: say the Latin for of course, then the Latin for for indeed, then say nempe again

Before you move on

What does nempe mean? ("Surely, of course; namely".) Say it once more.

365.5 scīlicet — to be sure, of course

Before the new one: say the Latin for for indeed, then the Latin for surely.

You'll want to know: scīlicet

scīlicet — "to be sure, of course".

Tū scīlicet omnia scīs!

You know everything, to be sure!

Scīlicet = scīre licet, one may know. Often ironic: to be sure! English scilicet, short sc., means namely.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scīlicet is contracted from scīre licet "one may know" (Lewis & Short): it is plain to know. English scilicet "namely" was borrowed from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: scīlicet
- Say it: scīlicet, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with scīlicet
- Recall: say the Latin for for indeed, then the Latin for surely, then say scīlicet again

Before you move on

What does scīlicet mean? ("To be sure, of course".) Say it once more.

Chapter 366

Evidently, And Yet, So Then

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say evidently and no doubt, object with and yet, and draw a consequence with so then and for that reason.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 366: I can say evidently and no doubt, object with and yet, and draw a consequence with so then and for that reason.

366.1 vidēlicet — evidently, clearly; namely

Before the new one: say the Latin for surely, then the Latin for to be sure.

You'll want to know: vidēlicet

vidēlicet — "evidently, clearly; namely".

> Domum rediit, vidēlicet fessus.
>
> He went home, tired, evidently.

Vidēlicet = vidēre licet, one may see. English viz. is its abbreviation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vidēlicet is contracted from vidēre licet "one may see" (Lewis & Short). English videlicet and its short form viz. were borrowed from it (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vidēlicet
- Say it: vidēlicet, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vidēlicet
- Recall: say the Latin for surely, then the Latin for to be sure, then say vidēlicet again

Before you move on

What does vidēlicet mean? ("Evidently, clearly; namely".) Say it once more.

366.2 nīmīrum — without doubt, surely

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be sure, then the Latin for evidently.

You'll want to know: nīmīrum

nīmīrum — "without doubt, surely".

Nīmīrum vērum dīcis.

No doubt you are telling the truth.

Nīmīrum = nī mīrum, no wonder. It can carry a smile of irony.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nīmīrum is built from nī "not" and mīrum "a wonder" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): it is no wonder, so surely.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nīmīrum
- Say it: nīmīrum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nīmīrum
- Recall: say the Latin for to be sure, then the Latin for evidently, then say nīmīrum again

Before you move on

What does nīmīrum mean? ("Without doubt, surely".) Say it once more.

366.3 atquī — and yet, but (raising an objection)

Before the new one: say the Latin for evidently, then the Latin for without doubt.

You'll want to know: atquī

atquī — "and yet, but (raising an objection)".

> Dīcis tē pauperem esse; atquī vīllam magnam habēs.
>
> You say you are poor; and yet you have a large country house.

Atquī brings in a fact that tells against what was said. It takes the indicative.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

atquī is built from at "but" and quī, an old ablative form meaning "in any way" (Lewis & Short): but in any case.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: atquī
- Say it: atquī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with atquī
- Recall: say the Latin for evidently, then the Latin for without doubt, then say atquī again

Before you move on

What does atquī mean? ("And yet, but (raising an objection)".) Say it once more.

366.4 proinde — therefore, accordingly; so then

Before the new one: say the Latin for without doubt, then the Latin for and yet.

You'll want to know: proinde

proinde — "therefore, accordingly; so then".

Hostēs adsunt; proinde arma capiāmus.

The enemy is here; so then let us take up arms.

Proinde draws a practical consequence and often comes with a subjunctive of exhortation (capiāmus, let us take) or with a command.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

proinde is built from prō "for, in proportion to" and inde "from there" (Lewis & Short): from that, accordingly.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: proinde
- Say it: proinde, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with proinde
- Recall: say the Latin for without doubt, then the Latin for and yet, then say proinde again

Before you move on

What does proinde mean? ("Therefore, accordingly; so then".) Say it once more.

366.5 idcircō — for that reason, therefore

Before the new one: say the Latin for and yet, then the Latin for therefore.

You'll want to know: idcircō

idcircō — "for that reason, therefore".

Aeger erat; idcircō nōn vēnit.

He was ill; for that reason he did not come.

Idcircō points ahead to a reason or an aim: idcircō … quod, for this reason, that; idcircō … ut, for this purpose, that.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

idcircō is built from id "that" and an old form of circā, circum "around, about" (Lewis & Short give id-circa, EtymDB id + circum): about that, for that reason.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: idcircō
- Say it: idcircō, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with idcircō
- Recall: say the Latin for and yet, then the Latin for therefore, then say idcircō again

Before you move on

What does idcircō mean? ("For that reason, therefore".) Say it once more.

Chapter 367

Since, Lest, But That

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give a reason with cum, an aim with nē, and use quīn, quōminus and tamquam with the subjunctive.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 367: I can give a reason with cum, an aim with nē, and use quīn, quōminus and tamquam with the subjunctive.

367.1 cum — when, since, although (with the subjunctive)

Before the new one: say the Latin for therefore, then the Latin for for that reason.

You'll want to know: cum

cum — "when, since, although (with the subjunctive)".

> Cum aeger essem, domī mānsī.
>
> Since I was ill, I stayed at home.

As a preposition cum takes the ablative: cum amīcō, with a friend. As a conjunction with the subjunctive it gives a reason or the scene: cum essem, since I was. With the indicative it means when.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The conjunction cum was written quom in old Latin (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): it comes from the stem of the relative quī "who, which", and is a different word from the preposition cum "with".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cum
- Say it: cum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cum
- Recall: say the Latin for therefore, then the Latin for for that reason, then say cum again

Before you move on

What does cum mean? ("When, since, although (with the subjunctive)".) Say it once more.

367.2 nē — so that not, lest; that (after fearing)

Before the new one: say the Latin for for that reason, then the Latin for when.

You'll want to know: nē

nē — "so that not, lest; that (after fearing)".

Portam claudō nē fūr intret.

I shut the gate so that a thief may not come in.

Nē + subjunctive gives a negative aim: ut says so that, nē says so that not. After a verb of fearing, timeō nē means I fear that. Nē … quidem means not even.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nē is the old Latin negative; Lewis & Short compare Sanskrit na and Old English ne, and it is usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European negative ne*. It also lies behind nōn and nihil and, through Old English, behind English no.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nē
- Say it: nē, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nē
- Recall: say the Latin for for that reason, then the Latin for when, then say nē again

Before you move on

What does nē mean? ("So that not, lest; that (after fearing)".) Say it once more.

367.3 quīn — but that, that (after a denied doubt); why not

Before the new one: say the Latin for when, then the Latin for so that not.

You'll want to know: quīn

quīn — "but that, that (after a denied doubt); why not".

Nōn dubitō quīn vērum dīcās.

I do not doubt that you are telling the truth.

Quīn + subjunctive follows a doubt or a hindrance that is denied: nōn dubitō quīn, I do not doubt that. Alone, quīn can mean why not.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quīn is usually taken as the old adverb quī "how" with the negative -ne (Lewis & Short): how not, why not.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: quīn
- Say it: quīn, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with quīn
- Recall: say the Latin for when, then the Latin for so that not, then say quīn again

Before you move on

What does quīn mean? ("But that, that (after a denied doubt); why not".) Say it once more.

367.4 quōminus — that … not (after hindering), from doing

Before the new one: say the Latin for so that not, then the Latin for but that.

You'll want to know: quōminus

quōminus — "that … not (after hindering), from doing".

Nōn recūsō quōminus hoc faciam.

I do not refuse to do this.

Quōminus + subjunctive follows verbs of hindering and refusing: nōn recūsō quōminus, I do not refuse to.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quōminus is built from quō "by which" and minus "less" (Lewis & Short): by which the less, so that not.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: quōminus
- Say it: quōminus, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with quōminus
- Recall: say the Latin for so that not, then the Latin for but that, then say quōminus again

Before you move on

What does quōminus mean? ("That … not (after hindering), from doing".) Say it once more.

367.5 tamquam — as, in the same way as; as if

Before the new one: say the Latin for but that, then the Latin for that … not.

You'll want to know: tamquam

tamquam — "as, in the same way as; as if".

Loquitur tamquam rēx sit.

He speaks as if he were king.

Tamquam compares: in the same way as. Tamquam or tamquam sī + subjunctive is as if: tamquam rēx sit.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tamquam is built from tam "so" and quam "as" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): so as.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tamquam
- Say it: tamquam, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tamquam
- Recall: say the Latin for but that, then the Latin for that … not, then say tamquam again

Before you move on

What does tamquam mean? ("As, in the same way as; as if".) Say it once more.

Chapter 368

The Orator

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the orator and his eloquence, a debate, and holding forth on a subject.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 368: I can talk about the orator and his eloquence, a debate, and holding forth on a subject.

368.1 ōrātor, ōrātōris — a speaker, an orator; an envoy

> Before the new one: say the Latin for that … not, then the Latin for as.

You'll want to know: ōrātor, ōrātōris

ōrātor, ōrātōris — "a speaker, an orator; an envoy".

> Ōrātor ā populō laudātus est.
>
> The speaker was praised by the people.

ōrātor, ōrātōris m. Built on ōrō, to speak, to plead. An envoy who speaks for his city is also an ōrātor. English orator.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrātor is built on ōrō "to speak, to plead" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -tor of the one who does it. English orator comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrātor, ōrātōris
- Say it: ōrātor, ōrātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ōrātor, ōrātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for that … not, then the Latin for as, then say ōrātor, ōrātōris again

Before you move on

What does ōrātor, ōrātōris mean? ("A speaker, an orator; an envoy".) Say it once more.

368.2 ēloquentia, ēloquentiae — eloquence

Before the new one: say the Latin for as, then the Latin for a speaker.

You'll want to know: ēloquentia, ēloquentiae

ēloquentia, ēloquentiae — "eloquence".

Ēloquentia eius iūdicēs mōvit.

His eloquence moved the judges.

ēloquentia, ēloquentiae f. Built on ēloquēns, speaking out well. English eloquence.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēloquentia is built on ēloquēns "speaking out well" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the participle of a verb made from ē "out" and loquor "to speak". English eloquence comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēloquentia, ēloquentiae
- Say it: ēloquentia, ēloquentiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēloquentia, ēloquentiae
- Recall: say the Latin for as, then the Latin for a speaker, then say ēloquentia, ēloquentiae again

Before you move on

What does ēloquentia, ēloquentiae mean? ("Eloquence".) Say it once more.

368.3 disputātiō, disputātiōnis — a discussion, a debate

Before the new one: say the Latin for a speaker, then the Latin for eloquence.

You'll want to know: disputātiō, disputātiōnis

disputātiō, disputātiōnis — "a discussion, a debate".

Disputātiō dē lēgibus longa fuit.

The debate about the laws was long.

disputātiō, disputātiōnis f., the noun of disputō, to discuss. English disputation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

disputātiō is the noun built on disputō "to discuss, to argue" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English disputation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: disputātiō, disputātiōnis
- Say it: disputātiō, disputātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with disputātiō, disputātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a speaker, then the Latin for eloquence, then say disputātiō, disputātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does disputātiō, disputātiōnis mean? ("A discussion, a debate".) Say it once more.

368.4 disserō, disserere — to discuss, to hold forth (on)

Before the new one: say the Latin for eloquence, then the Latin for a discussion.

You'll want to know: disserō, disserere

disserō, disserere — "to discuss, to hold forth (on)".

Senex dē amīcitiā disseruit.

The old man spoke at length about friendship.

disserō, disserere, disseruī, dissertum. Dē + ablative names the subject. It is a different verb from serō, to sow. English dissertation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

disserō is built from dis- "apart" and serō, serere, seruī "to join, to string together" (Lewis & Short), a different verb from serō "to sow": to set ideas out in a row. English dissertation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: disserō, disserere
- Say it: disserō, disserere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with disserō, disserere
- Recall: say the Latin for eloquence, then the Latin for a discussion, then say disserō, disserere again

Before you move on

What does disserō, disserere mean? ("To discuss, to hold forth (on)".) Say it once more.

368.5 ēloquor, ēloquī — to speak out, to utter

Before the new one: say the Latin for a discussion, then the Latin for to discuss.

You'll want to know: ēloquor, ēloquī

ēloquor, ēloquī — "to speak out, to utter".

Tandem quod sentiēbat ēlocūtus est.

At last he spoke out what he felt.

Deponent: ēloquor, ēloquī, ēlocūtus sum. Ē + loquor: to speak out. English eloquent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēloquor is built from ē "out" and loquor "to speak" (Lewis & Short). English eloquent comes from its present participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēloquor, ēloquī
- Say it: ēloquor, ēloquī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēloquor, ēloquī
- Recall: say the Latin for a discussion, then the Latin for to discuss, then say ēloquor, ēloquī again

Before you move on

What does ēloquor, ēloquī mean? ("To speak out, to utter".) Say it once more.

Chapter 369

Urging and Dissuading

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can urge someone on, talk someone out of a plan, speak of persuasion, and offer or turn down an excuse.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 369: I can urge someone on, talk someone out of a plan, speak of persuasion, and offer or turn down an excuse.

369.1 hortor, hortārī — to urge, to encourage

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to discuss, then the Latin for to speak out.

You'll want to know: hortor, hortārī

hortor, hortārī — "to urge, to encourage".

> Mīlitēs hortātus est ut fortiter pugnārent.
>
> He urged the soldiers to fight bravely.

Deponent: hortor, hortārī, hortātus sum + accusative and ut (or nē) with the subjunctive. English exhort.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hortor comes from an old verb horior "to urge on" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), traced to a root meaning "to desire" that Greek khairō "to rejoice" shares. English exhort comes from the compound exhortor.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: hortor, hortārī
- Say it: hortor, hortārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with hortor, hortārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to discuss, then the Latin for to speak out, then say hortor, hortārī again

Before you move on

What does hortor, hortārī mean? ("To urge, to encourage".) Say it once more.

369.2 dissuādeō, dissuādēre — to advise against, to dissuade

Before the new one: say the Latin for to speak out, then the Latin for to urge.

You'll want to know: dissuādeō, dissuādēre

dissuādeō, dissuādēre — "to advise against, to dissuade".

Amīcī mihi hoc iter dissuāsērunt.

My friends advised me against this journey.

dissuādeō, dissuādēre, dissuāsī, dissuāsum, with the dative of the person: the opposite of suādeō. English dissuade.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dissuādeō is built from dis- "apart, away" and suādeō "to advise" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English dissuade comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dissuādeō, dissuādēre
- Say it: dissuādeō, dissuādēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dissuādeō, dissuādēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to speak out, then the Latin for to urge, then say dissuādeō, dissuādēre again

Before you move on

What does dissuādeō, dissuādēre mean? ("To advise against, to dissuade".) Say it once more.

369.3 persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis — persuasion; a conviction

Before the new one: say the Latin for to urge, then the Latin for to advise against.

You'll want to know: persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis

persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis — "persuasion; a conviction".

Persuāsiōne, nōn vī, vincere mālō.

I prefer to win by persuasion, not by force.

persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis f., the noun of persuādeō. English persuasion.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

persuāsiō is the noun built on persuādeō "to persuade" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), itself per- "thoroughly" with suādeō "to advise". English persuasion comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis
- Say it: persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to urge, then the Latin for to advise against, then say persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis again

Before you move on

What does persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis mean? ("Persuasion; a conviction".) Say it once more.

369.4 excūsō, excūsāre — to excuse; to plead as an excuse

Before the new one: say the Latin for to advise against, then the Latin for persuasion.

You'll want to know: excūsō, excūsāre

excūsō, excūsāre — "to excuse; to plead as an excuse".

Morbum excūsāvit.

He pleaded illness as his excuse.

excūsō, excūsāre, excūsāvī, excūsātum. Sē excūsāre, to excuse oneself. Built on causa: out of the case. English excuse.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

excūsō is built from ex "out of" and causa "a case, a charge" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to take someone out of the charge. English excuse comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: excūsō, excūsāre
- Say it: excūsō, excūsāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with excūsō, excūsāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to advise against, then the Latin for persuasion, then say excūsō, excūsāre again

Before you move on

What does excūsō, excūsāre mean? ("To excuse; to plead as an excuse".) Say it once more.

369.5 excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis — an excuse, a plea

Before the new one: say the Latin for persuasion, then the Latin for to excuse.

You'll want to know: excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis

excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis — "an excuse, a plea".

Haec excūsātiō nōn accipitur.

This excuse is not accepted.

excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis f., the noun of excūsō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

excūsātiō is the noun built on excūsō "to excuse" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from ex and causa.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis
- Say it: excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for persuasion, then the Latin for to excuse, then say excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis mean? ("An excuse, a plea".) Say it once more.

Chapter 370

Weight and Standing

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about authority, rank and seriousness, and about lightness and rashness of character.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 370: I can talk about authority, rank and seriousness, and about lightness and rashness of character.

370.1 auctōritās, auctōritātis — authority, influence; backing

Before the new one: say the Latin for to excuse, then the Latin for an excuse.

You'll want to know: auctōritās, auctōritātis

auctōritās, auctōritātis — "authority, influence; backing".

Senex magnam auctōritātem in oppidō habet.

The old man has great influence in the town.

auctōritās, auctōritātis f. A man's weight in public life, earned by age and deeds. English authority.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

auctōritās is built on auctor "a backer, an originator" (EtymDB), which comes from augeō "to increase" (Lewis & Short). English authority comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: auctōritās, auctōritātis
- Say it: auctōritās, auctōritātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with auctōritās, auctōritātis
- Recall: say the Latin for to excuse, then the Latin for an excuse, then say auctōritās, auctōritātis again

Before you move on

What does auctōritās, auctōritātis mean? ("Authority, influence; backing".) Say it once more.

370.2 dignitās, dignitātis — worth, rank, dignity

Before the new one: say the Latin for an excuse, then the Latin for authority.

You'll want to know: dignitās, dignitātis

dignitās, dignitātis — "worth, rank, dignity".

Dignitātem suam semper servāvit.

He always kept his dignity.

dignitās, dignitātis f., built on dignus, worthy. A Roman's dignitās is his rank and good name. English dignity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dignitās is built on dignus "worthy" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -tās that makes a quality. English dignity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dignitās, dignitātis
- Say it: dignitās, dignitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dignitās, dignitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for an excuse, then the Latin for authority, then say dignitās, dignitātis again

Before you move on

What does dignitās, dignitātis mean? ("Worth, rank, dignity".) Say it once more.

370.3 gravitās, gravitātis — weight; seriousness

Before the new one: say the Latin for authority, then the Latin for worth.

You'll want to know: gravitās, gravitātis

gravitās, gravitātis — "weight; seriousness".

Cum gravitāte et sine īrā locūtus est.

He spoke seriously and without anger.

gravitās, gravitātis f., from gravis, heavy. A Roman virtue: the seriousness of a man who weighs his words. English gravity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gravitās is built on gravis "heavy" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), whose cousins include Sanskrit guru "heavy". English gravity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gravitās, gravitātis
- Say it: gravitās, gravitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gravitās, gravitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for authority, then the Latin for worth, then say gravitās, gravitātis again

Before you move on

What does gravitās, gravitātis mean? ("Weight; seriousness".) Say it once more.

370.4 levitās, levitātis — lightness; fickleness

Before the new one: say the Latin for worth, then the Latin for weight.

You'll want to know: levitās, levitātis

levitās, levitātis — "lightness; fickleness".

Levitātem eius omnēs reprehendunt.

Everyone blames his fickleness.

levitās, levitātis f., from levis, light: the opposite of gravitās. English levity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

levitās is built on levis "light" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): lightness of weight, then of character. English levity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: levitās, levitātis
- Say it: levitās, levitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with levitās, levitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for worth, then the Latin for weight, then say levitās, levitātis again

Before you move on

What does levitās, levitātis mean? ("Lightness; fickleness".) Say it once more.

370.5 temeritās, temeritātis — rashness, recklessness

Before the new one: say the Latin for weight, then the Latin for lightness.

You'll want to know: temeritās, temeritātis

temeritās, temeritātis — "rashness, recklessness".

Temeritās iuvenis eum in perīculum dūxit.

The young man's rashness led him into danger.

temeritās, temeritātis f.: acting blindly, without a plan. English temerity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

temeritās is built on the adverb temerē "blindly, at random" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English temerity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: temeritās, temeritātis
- Say it: temeritās, temeritātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with temeritās, temeritātis
- Recall: say the Latin for weight, then the Latin for lightness, then say temeritās, temeritātis again

Before you move on

What does temeritās, temeritātis mean? ("Rashness, recklessness".) Say it once more.

Chapter 371

At the Speakers' Platform

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the speakers' platform and a public meeting, and say that someone announced, read aloud or spoke rashly.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 371: I can talk about the speakers' platform and a public meeting, and say that someone announced, read aloud or spoke rashly.

371.1 rōstra, rōstrōrum — the speakers' platform (in the Forum)

Before the new one: say the Latin for lightness, then the Latin for rashness.

You'll want to know: rōstra, rōstrōrum

rōstra, rōstrōrum — "the speakers' platform (in the Forum)".

> Senex in rōstra ascendit.
>
> The old man went up onto the speakers' platform.

rōstra, rōstrōrum n. pl. The platform in the Forum was decked with the bronze beaks (rōstra) of captured warships. English rostrum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rōstra is the plural of rōstrum "a beak, a ship's ram", which is built on rōdō "to gnaw" (Lewis & Short). English rostrum comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rōstra, rōstrōrum
- Say it: rōstra, rōstrōrum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rōstra, rōstrōrum
- Recall: say the Latin for lightness, then the Latin for rashness, then say rōstra, rōstrōrum again

Before you move on

What does rōstra, rōstrōrum mean? ("The speakers' platform (in the Forum)".) Say it once more.

371.2 cōntiō, cōntiōnis — a public meeting; a speech made to it

Before the new one: say the Latin for rashness, then the Latin for the speakers' platform.

You'll want to know: cōntiō, cōntiōnis

cōntiō, cōntiōnis — "a public meeting; a speech made to it".

Cōnsul cōntiōnem habuit.

The consul held a public meeting.

cōntiō, cōntiōnis f. A meeting of the people called to hear a magistrate, where no vote was taken; also the speech made there.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōntiō is contracted from an old form coventiō "a coming together" (Lewis & Short), built from con- and veniō "to come".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōntiō, cōntiōnis
- Say it: cōntiō, cōntiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōntiō, cōntiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for rashness, then the Latin for the speakers' platform, then say cōntiō, cōntiōnis again

Before you move on

What does cōntiō, cōntiōnis mean? ("A public meeting; a speech made to it".) Say it once more.

371.3 prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre — to proclaim, to announce; to deliver (a speech)

Before the new one: say the Latin for the speakers' platform, then the Latin for a public meeting.

You'll want to know: prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre

prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre — "to proclaim, to announce; to deliver (a speech)".

Praecō sententiam iūdicum prōnūntiāvit.

The herald announced the judges' verdict.

prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre, prōnūntiāvī, prōnūntiātum. Built on nūntiō, to announce. It is also a speaker's delivery. English pronounce.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōnūntiō is built from prō "forth" and nūntiō "to announce" (Lewis & Short). English pronounce comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre
- Say it: prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre
- Recall: say the Latin for the speakers' platform, then the Latin for a public meeting, then say prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre again

Before you move on

What does prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre mean? ("To proclaim, to announce; to deliver (a speech)".) Say it once more.

371.4 recitō, recitāre — to read aloud, to recite

Before the new one: say the Latin for a public meeting, then the Latin for to proclaim.

You'll want to know: recitō, recitāre

recitō, recitāre — "to read aloud, to recite".

Poēta carmina sua amīcīs recitāvit.

The poet read his poems aloud to his friends.

recitō, recitāre, recitāvī, recitātum. At Rome authors read new work aloud to invited listeners. English recite.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

recitō is built from re- and citō "to call, to summon" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to call words out again. English recite comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: recitō, recitāre
- Say it: recitō, recitāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with recitō, recitāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a public meeting, then the Latin for to proclaim, then say recitō, recitāre again

Before you move on

What does recitō, recitāre mean? ("To read aloud, to recite".) Say it once more.

371.5 temerē — rashly, blindly; at random

Before the new one: say the Latin for to proclaim, then the Latin for to read aloud.

You'll want to know: temerē

temerē — "rashly, blindly; at random".

Nihil temerē faciēbat.

He did nothing rashly.

An adverb; its noun is temeritās, rashness. Nōn temerē, not without good reason.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

temerē is inherited from Proto-Italic temezi* "in the dark" (EtymDB), kin to tenebrae "darkness" (Lewis & Short): to act blindly.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: temerē
- Say it: temerē, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with temerē
- Recall: say the Latin for to proclaim, then the Latin for to read aloud, then say temerē again

Before you move on

What does temerē mean? ("Rashly, blindly; at random".) Say it once more.

Chapter 372

What Sets Things Going

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the person behind an act and the impulse behind it, and say what brings a result about and what works.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 372: I can name the person behind an act and the impulse behind it, and say what brings a result about and what works.

372.1 auctor, auctōris — an originator, an author; a backer

Before the new one: say the Latin for to read aloud, then the Latin for rashly.

You'll want to know: auctor, auctōris

auctor, auctōris — "an originator, an author; a backer".

> Quis huius cōnsiliī auctor fuit?
>
> Who was the author of this plan?

auctor, auctōris m. (sometimes f.). The one who makes a thing grow: a founder, a writer, the backer of a law or of a sale. English author.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

auctor is built on augeō "to increase, to make grow" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -tor of the one who does it. English author comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: auctor, auctōris
- Say it: auctor, auctōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with auctor, auctōris
- Recall: say the Latin for to read aloud, then the Latin for rashly, then say auctor, auctōris again

Before you move on

What does auctor, auctōris mean? ("An originator, an author; a backer".) Say it once more.

372.2 impulsus, impulsūs — a push; an impulse; instigation

Before the new one: say the Latin for rashly, then the Latin for an originator.

You'll want to know: impulsus, impulsūs

impulsus, impulsūs — "a push; an impulse; instigation".

Impulsū amīcōrum hoc fēcit.

He did this at his friends' urging.

impulsus, impulsūs m., built on impellō, to push on (in + pellō). Impulsū alicuius, at someone's instigation. English impulse.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

impulsus is the noun built on impellō "to push on" (Lewis & Short), from in and pellō "to drive". English impulse comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: impulsus, impulsūs
- Say it: impulsus, impulsūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with impulsus, impulsūs
- Recall: say the Latin for rashly, then the Latin for an originator, then say impulsus, impulsūs again

Before you move on

What does impulsus, impulsūs mean? ("A push; an impulse; instigation".) Say it once more.

372.3 efficiō, efficere — to bring about, to cause; to make

Before the new one: say the Latin for an originator, then the Latin for a push.

You'll want to know: efficiō, efficere

efficiō, efficere — "to bring about, to cause; to make".

Pluvia effēcit ut domī manērēmus.

The rain made us stay at home.

efficiō, efficere, effēcī, effectum. Efficiō ut + subjunctive: I bring it about that. Built on faciō. English efficient.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

efficiō is built from ex "out" and faciō "to make" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to make a thing until it is done. English efficient comes from its present participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: efficiō, efficere
- Say it: efficiō, efficere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with efficiō, efficere
- Recall: say the Latin for an originator, then the Latin for a push, then say efficiō, efficere again

Before you move on

What does efficiō, efficere mean? ("To bring about, to cause; to make".) Say it once more.

372.4 efficāx, efficācis — effective, efficient

Before the new one: say the Latin for a push, then the Latin for to bring about.

You'll want to know: efficāx, efficācis

efficāx, efficācis — "effective, efficient".

Hoc remedium efficāx est.

This remedy is effective.

efficāx, efficācis: one ending in the nominative for all genders. English efficacious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

efficāx is built on efficiō "to bring about" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -āx of a lasting tendency. English efficacious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: efficāx, efficācis
- Say it: efficāx, efficācis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with efficāx, efficācis
- Recall: say the Latin for a push, then the Latin for to bring about, then say efficāx, efficācis again

Before you move on

What does efficāx, efficācis mean? ("Effective, efficient".) Say it once more.

372.5 excitō, excitāre — to rouse, to wake; to stir up

Before the new one: say the Latin for to bring about, then the Latin for effective.

You'll want to know: excitō, excitāre

excitō, excitāre — "to rouse, to wake; to stir up".

Clāmor mē ē somnō excitāvit.

The shouting woke me from sleep.

excitō, excitāre, excitāvī, excitātum. To call out and set moving: a sleeper, a fire, a feeling. English excite.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

excitō is the frequentative of exciō "to call out, to rouse" (Lewis & Short), from ex "out" and cieō "to set moving", the verb behind citō. English excite comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: excitō, excitāre
- Say it: excitō, excitāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with excitō, excitāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to bring about, then the Latin for effective, then say excitō, excitāre again

Before you move on

What does excitō, excitāre mean? ("To rouse, to wake; to stir up".) Say it once more.

372.6 Words from chapters 365–372 — a review

Say the Latin for since and of course.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- since, of course, for indeed, surely, to be sure
- evidently, without doubt, and yet, therefore, for that reason
- when, so that not, but that, that … not, as
- a speaker, eloquence, a discussion, to discuss, to speak out
- to urge, to advise against, persuasion, to excuse, an excuse

- authority, worth, weight, lightness, rashness
- the speakers' platform, a public meeting, to proclaim, to read aloud, rashly
- an originator, a push, to bring about, effective, to rouse

Before you move on

Since? (quandōquidem.) Of course? (quippe.) For indeed? (etenim.) Surely? (nempe.) To be sure? (scīlicet.) Evidently? (vidēlicet.) Without doubt? (nīmīrum.) And yet? (atquī.) Therefore? (proinde.) For that reason? (idcircō.) When? (cum.) So that not? (nē.) But that? (quīn.) That … not? (quōminus.) As? (tamquam.) A speaker? (ōrātor, ōrātōris.) Eloquence? (ēloquentia, ēloquentiae.) A discussion? (disputātiō, disputātiōnis.) To discuss? (disserō, disserere.) To speak out? (ēloquor, ēloquī.) To urge? (hortor, hortārī.) To advise against? (dissuādeō, dissuādēre.) Persuasion? (persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis.) To excuse? (excūsō, excūsāre.) An excuse? (excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis.) Authority? (auctōritās, auctōritātis.) Worth? (dignitās, dignitātis.) Weight? (gravitās, gravitātis.) Lightness? (levitās, levitātis.) Rashness? (temeritās, temeritātis.) The speakers' platform? (rōstra, rōstrōrum.) A public meeting? (cōntiō, cōntiōnis.) To proclaim? (prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre.) To read aloud? (recitō, recitāre.) Rashly? (temerē.) An originator? (auctor, auctōris.) A push? (impulsus, impulsūs.) To bring about? (efficiō, efficere.) Effective? (efficāx, efficācis.) To rouse? (excitō, excitāre.)

Chapter 373

How Things Turn Out

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can speak of a result, say what someone achieved and how things turned out, and that blame or credit falls on someone.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 373: I can speak of a result, say what someone achieved and how things turned out, and that blame or credit falls on someone.

373.1 effectus, effectūs — a result, an effect; performance

Before the new one: say the Latin for effective, then the Latin for to rouse.

You'll want to know: effectus, effectūs

effectus, effectūs — "a result, an effect; performance".

> Effectus cōnsiliī bonus fuit.
>
> The result of the plan was good.

effectus, effectūs m., built on efficiō. English effect.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

effectus is the noun built on efficiō "to bring about" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English effect comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: effectus, effectūs
- Say it: effectus, effectūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with effectus, effectūs
- Recall: say the Latin for effective, then the Latin for to rouse, then say effectus, effectūs again

Before you move on

What does effectus, effectūs mean? ("A result, an effect; performance".) Say it once more.

373.2 cōnsequor, cōnsequī — to follow; to achieve, to obtain

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rouse, then the Latin for a result.

You'll want to know: cōnsequor, cōnsequī

cōnsequor, cōnsequī — "to follow; to achieve, to obtain".

Quod voluit, cōnsecūtus est.

He achieved what he wanted.

Deponent: cōnsequor, cōnsequī, cōnsecūtus sum. Cōnsequitur ut, it follows that. English consequence.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsequor is built from con- and sequor "to follow" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to follow all the way to the goal. English consequence comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsequor, cōnsequī
- Say it: cōnsequor, cōnsequī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnsequor, cōnsequī
- Recall: say the Latin for to rouse, then the Latin for a result, then say cōnsequor, cōnsequī again

Before you move on

What does cōnsequor, cōnsequī mean? ("To follow; to achieve, to obtain".) Say it once more.

373.3 prōveniō, prōvenīre — to come forth, to grow; to turn out

Before the new one: say the Latin for a result, then the Latin for to follow.

You'll want to know: prōveniō, prōvenīre

prōveniō, prōvenīre — "to come forth, to grow; to turn out".

Frūmentum hōc annō bene prōvēnit.

The grain grew well this year.

prōveniō, prōvenīre, prōvēnī, prōventum. Of a harvest, to come up; of a plan, to turn out. English provenance comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōveniō is built from prō "forth" and veniō "to come" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English provenance comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōveniō, prōvenīre
- Say it: prōveniō, prōvenīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōveniō, prōvenīre
- Recall: say the Latin for a result, then the Latin for to follow, then say prōveniō, prōvenīre again

Before you move on

What does prōveniō, prōvenīre mean? ("To come forth, to grow; to turn out".) Say it once more.

373.4 succēdō, succēdere — to turn out well, to succeed; to come next

Before the new one: say the Latin for to follow, then the Latin for to come forth.

You'll want to know: succēdō, succēdere

succēdō, succēdere — "to turn out well, to succeed; to come next".

Cōnsilium nōn successit.

The plan did not succeed.

succēdō, succēdere, successī, successum. With the dative it is also to take someone's place. English succeed and success.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

succēdō is built from sub "up to, next" and cēdō "to go" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to come up close, to come next. English succeed and success come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: succēdō, succēdere
- Say it: succēdō, succēdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with succēdō, succēdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to follow, then the Latin for to come forth, then say succēdō, succēdere again

Before you move on

What does succēdō, succēdere mean? ("To turn out well, to succeed; to come next".) Say it once more.

373.5 redundō, redundāre — to overflow; to result (in), to fall back (on)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to come forth, then the Latin for to turn out well.

You'll want to know: redundō, redundāre

redundō, redundāre — "to overflow; to result (in), to fall back (on)".

Haec culpa in tē redundat.

This fault falls back on you.

redundō, redundāre, redundāvī, redundātum. Built on unda, a wave: water flowing back over, and blame or credit coming back. English redound and redundant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

redundō is built from red- "back" and undō "to surge", from unda "a wave" (Lewis & Short). English redound and redundant come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: redundō, redundāre
- Say it: redundō, redundāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with redundō, redundāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to come forth, then the Latin for to turn out well, then say redundō, redundāre again

Before you move on

What does redundō, redundāre mean? ("To overflow; to result (in), to fall back (on)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 374

Harm and Help

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that something harms or helps, does damage, stands in the way of a plan or upsets someone.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 374: I can say that something harms or helps, does damage, stands in the way of a plan or upsets someone.

374.1 noceō, nocēre — to harm, to hurt

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to turn out well, then the Latin for to overflow.

You'll want to know: noceō, nocēre

noceō, nocēre — "to harm, to hurt".

> Fūmus oculīs nocet.
>
> Smoke harms the eyes.

noceō, nocēre, nocuī, nocitum + dative: tibi nocet, it harms you. English innocent (not harming) and nuisance come from its family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

noceō is inherited from Proto-Italic nokeō* (EtymDB), a causative of the root of nex "violent death": to make perish, then to harm. English innocent and nuisance come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: noceō, nocēre
- Say it: noceō, nocēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with noceō, nocēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to turn out well, then the Latin for to overflow, then say noceō, nocēre again

Before you move on

What does noceō, nocēre mean? ("To harm, to hurt".) Say it once more.

374.2 prōsum, prōdesse — to be useful, to benefit

Before the new one: say the Latin for to overflow, then the Latin for to harm.

You'll want to know: prōsum, prōdesse

prōsum, prōdesse — "to be useful, to benefit".

Haec medicīna tibi prōderit.

This medicine will do you good.

prōsum, prōdesse, prōfuī + dative. It goes like sum, with prōd- before a vowel: prōdest, prōderit.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōsum is built from prō "for, on behalf of" and sum "to be" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with an old -d- kept before a vowel: prōdest.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōsum, prōdesse
- Say it: prōsum, prōdesse, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōsum, prōdesse
- Recall: say the Latin for to overflow, then the Latin for to harm, then say prōsum, prōdesse again

Before you move on

What does prōsum, prōdesse mean? ("To be useful, to benefit".) Say it once more.

374.3 obsum, obesse — to be a hindrance, to do harm

Before the new one: say the Latin for to harm, then the Latin for to be useful.

You'll want to know: obsum, obesse

obsum, obesse — "to be a hindrance, to do harm".

Nimia pecūnia saepe obest.

Too much money often does harm.

obsum, obesse, obfuī + dative: the opposite of prōsum. Nōn obest, it does no harm.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obsum is built from ob "against, in the way" and sum "to be" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to be in someone's way.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obsum, obesse
- Say it: obsum, obesse, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obsum, obesse
- Recall: say the Latin for to harm, then the Latin for to be useful, then say obsum, obesse again

Before you move on

What does obsum, obesse mean? ("To be a hindrance, to do harm".) Say it once more.

374.4 impediō, impedīre — to hinder, to hamper

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be useful, then the Latin for to be a hindrance.

You'll want to know: impediō, impedīre

impediō, impedīre — "to hinder, to hamper".

Nix iter nostrum impedīvit.

Snow hampered our journey.

impediō, impedīre, impedīvī, impedītum. Built on pēs, pedis: to shackle the feet. Impediō quōminus + subjunctive, to keep from. English impede and impediment.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

impediō is built from in and pēs, pedis "a foot" (Lewis & Short): to catch someone by the feet. English impede and impediment come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: impediō, impedīre
- Say it: impediō, impedīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with impediō, impedīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to be useful, then the Latin for to be a hindrance, then say impediō, impedīre again

Before you move on

What does impediō, impedīre mean? ("To hinder, to hamper".) Say it once more.

374.5 perturbō, perturbāre — to throw into confusion, to upset

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be a hindrance, then the Latin for to hinder.

You'll want to know: perturbō, perturbāre

perturbō, perturbāre — "to throw into confusion, to upset".

Nūntius malus mē perturbāvit.

The bad news upset me.

perturbō, perturbāre, perturbāvī, perturbātum. Per-, thoroughly, with a verb for stirring up. English perturb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perturbō is built from per "thoroughly" and turbō "to stir up, to disturb" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which belongs with turba "an uproar". English perturb comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: perturbō, perturbāre
- Say it: perturbō, perturbāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with perturbō, perturbāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to be a hindrance, then the Latin for to hinder, then say perturbō, perturbāre again

Before you move on

What does perturbō, perturbāre mean? ("To throw into confusion, to upset".) Say it once more.

Chapter 375

Things That Happen

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that something befalls someone or arises, call an event chance or unexpected, and speak of a commotion.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 375: I can say that something befalls someone or arises, call an event chance or unexpected, and speak of a commotion.

375.1 contingō, contingere — to touch; to happen (to), to fall to one's lot

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to hinder, then the Latin for to throw into confusion.

You'll want to know: contingō, contingere

contingō, contingere — "to touch; to happen (to), to fall to one's lot".

> Mihi contigit ut eum vidērem.
>
> I had the good luck to see him.

contingō, contingere, contigī, contactum. Built on tangō, to touch. Contingit + dative, often of good luck. English contact and contingent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

contingō is built from con- and tangō "to touch" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the vowel weakened inside the compound: what touches you is what happens to you. English contact and contingent come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: contingō, contingere
- Say it: contingō, contingere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with contingō, contingere
- Recall: say the Latin for to hinder, then the Latin for to throw into confusion, then say contingō, contingere again

Before you move on

What does contingō, contingere mean? ("To touch; to happen (to), to fall to one's lot".) Say it once more.

375.2 exsistō, exsistere — to arise, to come forth; to exist

Before the new one: say the Latin for to throw into confusion, then the Latin for to touch.

You'll want to know: exsistō, exsistere

exsistō, exsistere — "to arise, to come forth; to exist".

Ex parvīs initiīs magnum bellum exstitit.

From small beginnings a great war arose.

exsistō, exsistere, exstitī. Ex + sistō, to set, to stand: to stand out, to appear. English exist.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exsistō is built from ex "out" and sistō "to stand, to set" (Lewis & Short): to step forth. English exist comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: exsistō, exsistere
- Say it: exsistō, exsistere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with exsistō, exsistere
- Recall: say the Latin for to throw into confusion, then the Latin for to touch, then say exsistō, exsistere again

Before you move on

What does exsistō, exsistere mean? ("To arise, to come forth; to exist".) Say it once more.

375.3 fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum — by chance, accidental

Before the new one: say the Latin for to touch, then the Latin for to arise.

You'll want to know: fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum

fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum — "by chance, accidental".

Nōn fortuītus erat ille cāsus.

That event was no accident.

fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum, built on fors, chance; fortūna is its cousin. English fortuitous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fortuītus is built on fors "chance" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the same word that gives fortūna. English fortuitous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum
- Say it: fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum
- Recall: say the Latin for to touch, then the Latin for to arise, then say fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum again

Before you move on

What does fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum mean? ("By chance, accidental".) Say it once more.

375.4 inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum — unexpected

Before the new one: say the Latin for to arise, then the Latin for by chance.

You'll want to know: inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum

inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum — "unexpected".

Inopīnātum perīculum nōs terruit.

An unexpected danger frightened us.

inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum: in- not + the participle of opīnor: not supposed. Ex inopīnātō, unexpectedly.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inopīnātus is built from in- "not" and opīnātus, the participle of opīnor "to suppose" (Lewis & Short): not supposed beforehand.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum
- Say it: inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum
- Recall: say the Latin for to arise, then the Latin for by chance, then say inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum again

Before you move on

What does inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum mean? ("Unexpected".) Say it once more.

375.5 mōtus, mōtūs — a movement; a stirring (of the mind); a disturbance

Before the new one: say the Latin for by chance, then the Latin for unexpected.

You'll want to know: mōtus, mōtūs

mōtus, mōtūs — "a movement; a stirring (of the mind); a disturbance".

Magnus mōtus in urbe fuit.

There was a great commotion in the city.

mōtus, mōtūs m., from moveō. Mōtus animī, a stirring of the mind; mōtus terrae, an earthquake. English motion and motor belong to the family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mōtus is the noun built on moveō "to move" (Lewis & Short), from its participle mōtus. English motion and motor belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mōtus, mōtūs
- Say it: mōtus, mōtūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mōtus, mōtūs
- Recall: say the Latin for by chance, then the Latin for unexpected, then say mōtus, mōtūs again

Before you move on

What does mōtus, mōtūs mean? ("A movement; a stirring (of the mind); a disturbance".) Say it once more.

Chapter 376

Work and Workers

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a piece of work and say that I need something, and name a craftsman, an artist and a labourer at work.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 376: I can talk about a piece of work and say that I need something, and name a craftsman, an artist and a labourer at work.

376.1 opus, operis — a work, a task; need (opus est)

Before the new one: say the Latin for unexpected, then the Latin for a movement.

You'll want to know: opus, operis

opus, operis — "a work, a task; need (opus est)".

> Mihi pecūniā opus est.
>
> I need money.

opus, operis n. Opus est + dative of the person and ablative of the thing: mihi pecūniā opus est, I need money. English operate comes from its family, and opera comes through Italian from the related opera, effort.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

opus is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European noun built on a root meaning "to work, to produce" (EtymDB), with ops "power, means" as a cousin (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English operate comes from its family, and opera from the related opera "effort".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: opus, operis
- Say it: opus, operis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with opus, operis
- Recall: say the Latin for unexpected, then the Latin for a movement, then say opus, operis again

Before you move on

What does opus, operis mean? ("A work, a task; need (opus est)".) Say it once more.

376.2 opifex, opificis — a craftsman, a worker

Before the new one: say the Latin for a movement, then the Latin for a work.

You'll want to know: opifex, opificis

opifex, opificis — "a craftsman, a worker".

Opifex mēnsam novam fēcit.

The craftsman made a new table.

opifex, opificis m. and f. Built from opus, work, and faciō, to make: a work-maker.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

opifex is built from opus "work" and faciō "to make" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB puts the related ops "power, means" in place of opus), with the ending -fex of a maker.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: opifex, opificis
- Say it: opifex, opificis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with opifex, opificis
- Recall: say the Latin for a movement, then the Latin for a work, then say opifex, opificis again

Before you move on

What does opifex, opificis mean? ("A craftsman, a worker".) Say it once more.

376.3 artifex, artificis — an artist, a skilled craftsman; a master (of)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a work, then the Latin for a craftsman.

You'll want to know: artifex, artificis

artifex, artificis — "an artist, a skilled craftsman; a master (of)".

Artifex statuam pulchram fēcit.

The artist made a beautiful statue.

artifex, artificis m. Built from ars and faciō: a maker by skill. Artifex dīcendī, a master of speaking. English artifice and artificial.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

artifex is built from ars, artis "skill" and faciō "to make" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English artifice and artificial come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: artifex, artificis
- Say it: artifex, artificis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with artifex, artificis
- Recall: say the Latin for a work, then the Latin for a craftsman, then say artifex, artificis again

Before you move on

What does artifex, artificis mean? ("An artist, a skilled craftsman; a master (of)".) Say it once more.

376.4 operārius, operāriī — a labourer, a workman

Before the new one: say the Latin for a craftsman, then the Latin for an artist.

You'll want to know: operārius, operāriī

operārius, operāriī — "a labourer, a workman".

Operāriī tōtum diem in agrō labōrant.

The labourers work all day in the field.

operārius, operāriī m., a man who works with his hands for a wage, built on opera, work, effort.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

operārius is built on opera "work, effort" (Lewis & Short), a word of the same family as opus, operis "work", with the ending -ārius of a person busy with something.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: operārius, operāriī
- Say it: operārius, operāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with operārius, operāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a craftsman, then the Latin for an artist, then say operārius, operāriī again

Before you move on

What does operārius, operāriī mean? ("A labourer, a workman".) Say it once more.

376.5 operor, operārī — to work, to be busy (at)

Before the new one: say the Latin for an artist, then the Latin for a labourer.

You'll want to know: operor, operārī

operor, operārī — "to work, to be busy (at)".

Fabrī in officīnā operābantur.

The smiths were at work in the workshop.

Deponent: operor, operārī, operātus sum, often with the dative of the task. English operate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

operor is built on opus, operis “work” (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English operate comes from it.

What you’ve built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: operor, operārī
- Say it: operor, operārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with operor, operārī
- Recall: say the Latin for an artist, then the Latin for a labourer, then say operor, operārī again

Before you move on

What does operor, operārī mean? (“To work, to be busy (at)”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 377

Trades of the Town

Modes: 🎧 voice (5) 🎧 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a fuller, a goldsmith, a carpenter, a mason and a sculptor.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 377: I can name a fuller, a goldsmith, a carpenter, a mason and a sculptor.

377.1 fullō, fullōnis — a fuller, a cleaner of cloth

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a labourer, then the Latin for to work.

You'll want to know: fullō, fullōnis

fullō, fullōnis — "a fuller, a cleaner of cloth".

> Fullō vestēs sordidās lavat.
>
> The fuller washes dirty clothes.

fullō, fullōnis m. The fuller cleaned and finished woollen cloth by treading it in tubs; his shop was the fullōnica.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of fullō is not settled: Lewis & Short give none, and EtymDB has no parent for it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fullō, fullōnis
- Say it: fullō, fullōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fullō, fullōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a labourer, then the Latin for to work, then say fullō, fullōnis again

Before you move on

What does fullō, fullōnis mean? ("A fuller, a cleaner of cloth".) Say it once more.

377.2 aurifex, aurificis — a goldsmith

Before the new one: say the Latin for to work, then the Latin for a fuller.

You'll want to know: aurifex, aurificis

aurifex, aurificis — "a goldsmith".

Aurifex ānulum aureum fēcit.

The goldsmith made a gold ring.

aurifex, aurificis m., from aurum, gold, and faciō, to make.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aurifex is built from aurum "gold" and faciō "to make" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a gold-maker.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aurifex, aurificis
- Say it: aurifex, aurificis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aurifex, aurificis
- Recall: say the Latin for to work, then the Latin for a fuller, then say aurifex, aurificis again

Before you move on

What does aurifex, aurificis mean? ("A goldsmith".) Say it once more.

377.3 lignārius, lignāriī — a carpenter, a worker in wood

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fuller, then the Latin for a goldsmith.

You'll want to know: lignārius, lignāriī

lignārius, lignāriī — "a carpenter, a worker in wood".

Lignārius mēnsās et sellās facit.

The carpenter makes tables and chairs.

lignārius, lignāriī m., often faber lignārius: a smith (faber) who works in wood, lignum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lignārius is built on lignum "wood" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -ārius of a man busy with something.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lignārius, lignāriī
- Say it: lignārius, lignāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lignārius, lignāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a fuller, then the Latin for a goldsmith, then say lignārius, lignāriī again

Before you move on

What does lignārius, lignāriī mean? ("A carpenter, a worker in wood".) Say it once more.

377.4 caementārius, caementāriī — a mason, a builder in stone

Before the new one: say the Latin for a goldsmith, then the Latin for a carpenter.

You'll want to know: caementārius, caementāriī

caementārius, caementāriī — "a mason, a builder in stone".

Caementāriī mūrum novum aedificant.

The masons are building a new wall.

caementārius, caementāriī m., built on caementum, rough-cut stone set in mortar. English cement comes from caementum. A late word, in Jerome.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caementārius is built on caementum "rough-cut stone" (Lewis & Short), which comes from caedō "to cut". English cement comes from caementum through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: caementārius, caementāriī
- Say it: caementārius, caementāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with caementārius, caementāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a goldsmith, then the Latin for a carpenter, then say caementārius, caementāriī again

Before you move on

What does caementārius, caementāriī mean? ("A mason, a builder in stone".) Say it once more.

377.5 statuārius, statuāriī — a sculptor of statues

Before the new one: say the Latin for a carpenter, then the Latin for a mason.

You'll want to know: statuārius, statuāriī

statuārius, statuāriī — "a sculptor of statues".

Statuārius ex marmore deam fēcit.

The sculptor made a goddess out of marble.

statuārius, statuāriī m., built on statua, a statue. English statuary.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

statuārius is built on statua "a statue" (Lewis & Short), which comes from statuō "to set up". English statuary comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: statuārius, statuāriī
- Say it: statuārius, statuāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with statuārius, statuāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a carpenter, then the Latin for a mason, then say statuārius, statuāriī again

Before you move on

What does statuārius, statuāriī mean? ("A sculptor of statues".) Say it once more.

Chapter 378

Making Things by Hand

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone practises a craft, and that he makes, weaves, sews or carves something.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 378: I can say that someone practises a craft, and that he makes, weaves, sews or carves something.

378.1 exerceō, exercēre — to train, to practise; to keep busy

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mason, then the Latin for a sculptor of statues.

You'll want to know: exerceō, exercēre

exerceō, exercēre — "to train, to practise; to keep busy".

> Pistor artem suam multōs annōs exercuit.
>
> The baker practised his trade for many years.

exerceō, exercēre, exercuī, exercitum. Artem exercēre, to practise a craft; sē exercēre, to train. English exercise.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exerceō is built from ex and arceō "to shut in, to keep off" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to drive animals out to work, then to keep anyone busy. English exercise comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: exerceō, exercēre
- Say it: exerceō, exercēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with exerceō, exercēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a mason, then the Latin for a sculptor of statues, then say exerceō, exercēre again

Before you move on

What does exerceō, exercēre mean? ("To train, to practise; to keep busy".) Say it once more.

378.2 fabricor, fabricārī — to make, to build, to forge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sculptor of statues, then the Latin for to train.

You'll want to know: fabricor, fabricārī

fabricor, fabricārī — "to make, to build, to forge".

Faber gladium fabricātur.

The smith is forging a sword.

Deponent: fabricor, fabricārī, fabricātus sum, built on fabrica, a workshop, and faber, a smith. English fabricate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fabricor is built on fabrica "a workshop, a craft" (Lewis & Short), which comes from faber "a smith, a craftsman". English fabricate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fabricor, fabricārī
- Say it: fabricor, fabricārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fabricor, fabricārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a sculptor of statues, then the Latin for to train, then say fabricor, fabricārī again

Before you move on

What does fabricor, fabricārī mean? ("To make, to build, to forge".) Say it once more.

378.3 texō, texere — to weave; to build

Before the new one: say the Latin for to train, then the Latin for to make.

You'll want to know: texō, texere

texō, texere — "to weave; to build".

Fēmina vestem ē lānā texit.

The woman weaves a garment from wool.

texō, texere, texuī, textum. A speech too can be woven. English text, textile and texture.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

texō is inherited from Proto-Italic teksō* (EtymDB), from a root meaning "to fashion, to build" that Greek tektōn "a builder" shares. English text and textile come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: texō, texere
- Say it: texō, texere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with texō, texere
- Recall: say the Latin for to train, then the Latin for to make, then say texō, texere again

Before you move on

What does texō, texere mean? ("To weave; to build".) Say it once more.

378.4 suō, suere — to sew, to stitch

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make, then the Latin for to weave.

You'll want to know: suō, suere

suō, suere — "to sew, to stitch".

Sūtor calceōs suit.

The shoemaker stitches shoes.

suō, suere, suī, sūtum. Sūtor, a shoemaker, is the man who sews. English suture comes from it; English sew is a native cousin, not a loan.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suō is inherited from Proto-Italic sūō* (EtymDB), from the same Proto-Indo-European root as English sew, which came down through Old English, not from Latin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: suō, suere
- Say it: suō, suere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with suō, suere
- Recall: say the Latin for to make, then the Latin for to weave, then say suō, suere again

Before you move on

What does suō, suere mean? ("To sew, to stitch".) Say it once more.

378.5 sculpō, sculpere — to carve, to engrave

Before the new one: say the Latin for to weave, then the Latin for to sew.

You'll want to know: sculpō, sculpere

sculpō, sculpere — "to carve, to engrave".

Statuārius nōmen in saxō sculpsit.

The sculptor carved the name in stone.

sculpō, sculpere, sculpsī, sculptum. English sculpture and sculptor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sculpō is a form beside scalpō "to scratch, to scrape" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English sculpture and sculptor come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sculpō, sculpere
- Say it: sculpō, sculpere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sculpō, sculpere
- Recall: say the Latin for to weave, then the Latin for to sew, then say sculpō, sculpere again

Before you move on

What does sculpō, sculpere mean? ("To carve, to engrave".) Say it once more.

Chapter 379

Earning a Living

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about earning a living, pay, hired men, hard work and care.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 379: I can talk about earning a living, pay, hired men, hard work and care.

379.1 quaestus, quaestūs — gain, profit; a way of earning a living

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sew, then the Latin for to carve.

You'll want to know: quaestus, quaestūs

quaestus, quaestūs — "gain, profit; a way of earning a living".

> Piscātor ex marī quaestum facit.
>
> The fisherman makes his living from the sea.

quaestus, quaestūs m., built on quaerō, to seek: what you go out to get. Quaestum facere, to make money.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quaestus is the noun built on quaerō "to seek, to get" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): what a man goes out to win.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: quaestus, quaestūs
- Say it: quaestus, quaestūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with quaestus, quaestūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to sew, then the Latin for to carve, then say quaestus, quaestūs again

Before you move on

What does quaestus, quaestūs mean? ("Gain, profit; a way of earning a living".) Say it once more.

379.2 stīpendium, stīpendiī — pay, wages (especially a soldier's)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to carve, then the Latin for gain.

You'll want to know: stīpendium, stīpendiī

stīpendium, stīpendiī — "pay, wages (especially a soldier's)".

Mīlitēs stīpendium accēpērunt.

The soldiers received their pay.

stīpendium, stīpendiī n. A soldier's pay, then a year of service: vīgintī stīpendia, twenty campaigns. English stipend.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stīpendium is contracted from stipipendium, built from stips "a small coin" and pendō "to weigh out, to pay" (Lewis & Short): coins weighed out. English stipend comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: stīpendium, stīpendiī
- Say it: stīpendium, stīpendiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with stīpendium, stīpendiī
- Recall: say the Latin for to carve, then the Latin for gain, then say stīpendium, stīpendiī again

Before you move on

What does stīpendium, stīpendiī mean? ("Pay, wages (especially a soldier's)".) Say it once more.

379.3 mercēnārius, mercēnāriī — a hired worker; a mercenary

Before the new one: say the Latin for gain, then the Latin for pay.

You'll want to know: mercēnārius, mercēnāriī

mercēnārius, mercēnāriī — "a hired worker; a mercenary".

Mercēnāriī prō mercēde labōrant.

Hired men work for a wage.

mercēnārius, mercēnāriī m. (also spelled mercennārius), built on mercēs, a wage. As an adjective, hired. English mercenary.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mercēnārius is built on mercēs, mercēdis "wages, hire" (Lewis & Short), which belongs with merx "goods". English mercenary comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mercēnārius, mercēnāriī
- Say it: mercēnārius, mercēnāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mercēnārius, mercēnāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for gain, then the Latin for pay, then say mercēnārius, mercēnāriī again

Before you move on

What does mercēnārius, mercēnāriī mean? ("A hired worker; a mercenary".) Say it once more.

379.4 labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum — toilsome; hard-working

Before the new one: say the Latin for pay, then the Latin for a hired worker.

You'll want to know: labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum

labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum — "toilsome; hard-working".

Vīta agricolae labōriōsa est.

A farmer's life is full of toil.

labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum: of a task, toilsome; of a person, hard-working. English laborious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

labōriōsus is built on labor, labōris "toil" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -ōsus "full of". English laborious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum
- Say it: labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for pay, then the Latin for a hired worker, then say labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum again

Before you move on

What does labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum mean? ("Toilsome; hard-working".) Say it once more.

379.5 dīligentia, dīligentiae — care, diligence

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hired worker, then the Latin for toilsome.

You'll want to know: dīligentia, dīligentiae

dīligentia, dīligentiae — "care, diligence".

Opus magnā dīligentiā perfēcit.

He finished the work with great care.

dīligentia, dīligentiae f., the noun of dīligēns, careful, hard-working. English diligence.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīligentia is the noun built on dīligēns "careful" (Lewis & Short), the participle of a verb made from dis- and legō "to pick out". English diligence comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dīligentia, dīligentiae
- Say it: dīligentia, dīligentiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dīligentia, dīligentiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a hired worker, then the Latin for toilsome, then say dīligentia, dīligentiae again

Before you move on

What does dīligentia, dīligentiae mean? ("Care, diligence".) Say it once more.

Chapter 380

Hiring and Hard Labour

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone hires workers or lets out a house, speak of a servant, and say that someone works hard or wears himself out.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 380: I can say that someone hires workers or lets out a house, speak of a servant, and say that someone works hard or wears himself out.

380.1 condūcō, condūcere — to hire, to rent; to bring together

> Before the new one: say the Latin for toilsome, then the Latin for care.

You'll want to know: condūcō, condūcere

condūcō, condūcere — "to hire, to rent; to bring together".

> Agricola operāriōs condūxit.
>
> The farmer hired labourers.

condūcō, condūcere, condūxī, conductum. The man who hires or rents is the conductor. English conduct.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

condūcō is built from con- "together" and dūcō "to lead" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to lead workers together. English conduct comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: condūcō, condūcere
- Say it: condūcō, condūcere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with condūcō, condūcere
- Recall: say the Latin for toilsome, then the Latin for care, then say condūcō, condūcere again

Before you move on

What does condūcō, condūcere mean? ("To hire, to rent; to bring together".) Say it once more.

380.2 locō, locāre — to place; to let out, to hire out

Before the new one: say the Latin for care, then the Latin for to hire.

You'll want to know: locō, locāre

locō, locāre — "to place; to let out, to hire out".

Dominus domum suam mercēde magnā locāvit.

The owner let his house for a high rent.

locō, locāre, locāvī, locātum, built on locus. In Roman law locāre is to let out and condūcere to take on hire. English locate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

locō is built on locus "a place" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to put in place, then to let out for hire. English locate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: locō, locāre
- Say it: locō, locāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with locō, locāre
- Recall: say the Latin for care, then the Latin for to hire, then say locō, locāre again

Before you move on

What does locō, locāre mean? ("To place; to let out, to hire out".) Say it once more.

380.3 famulus, famulī — a household servant, an attendant

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hire, then the Latin for to place.

You'll want to know: famulus, famulī

famulus, famulī — "a household servant, an attendant".

Famulus cēnam in mēnsā posuit.

The servant laid dinner on a table.

famulus, famulī m. Familia first meant the household's servants, the famulī. English family and familiar come from that word.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

famulus is inherited from Proto-Italic famelos* (EtymDB), and familia "a household" is built on it (Lewis & Short). English family and familiar come from familia.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: famulus, famulī
- Say it: famulus, famulī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with famulus, famulī
- Recall: say the Latin for to hire, then the Latin for to place, then say famulus, famulī again

Before you move on

What does famulus, famulī mean? ("A household servant, an attendant".) Say it once more.

380.4 nāvō, nāvāre — to do with energy (operam nāvāre: to work hard)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to place, then the Latin for a household servant.

You'll want to know: nāvō, nāvāre

nāvō, nāvāre — "to do with energy (operam nāvāre: to work hard)".

Amīcō operam nāvāvit.

He worked hard for his friend.

nāvō, nāvāre, nāvāvī, nāvātum, built on nāvus (old gnāvus), busy; ignāvus, lazy, is the opposite. It mostly appears in operam nāvāre + dative.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nāvō is built on nāvus, old gnāvus "busy, active" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the adjective that ignāvus "lazy" denies.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nāvō, nāvāre
- Say it: nāvō, nāvāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nāvō, nāvāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to place, then the Latin for a household servant, then say nāvō, nāvāre again

Before you move on

What does nāvō, nāvāre mean? ("To do with energy (operam nāvāre: to work hard)".) Say it once more.

380.5 fatīgō, fatīgāre — to tire out, to weary

Before the new one: say the Latin for a household servant, then the Latin for to do with energy.

You'll want to know: fatīgō, fatīgāre

fatīgō, fatīgāre — "to tire out, to weary".

Longum iter equōs fatīgāvit.

The long journey tired out the horses.

fatīgō, fatīgāre, fatīgāvī, fatīgātum. English fatigue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fatīgō is linked by Lewis & Short with affatim "enough" and fatīscō "to grow weak", but its full origin is not settled. English fatigue comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fatīgō, fatīgāre
- Say it: fatīgō, fatīgāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fatīgō, fatīgāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a household servant, then the Latin for to do with energy, then say fatīgō, fatīgāre again

Before you move on

What does fatīgō, fatīgāre mean? ("To tire out, to weary".) Say it once more.

380.6 Words from chapters 373–380 — a review

Say the Latin for a result and to follow.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a result, to follow, to come forth, to turn out well, to overflow
- to harm, to be useful, to be a hindrance, to hinder, to throw into confusion
- to touch, to arise, by chance, unexpected, a movement
- a work, a craftsman, an artist, a labourer, to work

- a fuller, a goldsmith, a carpenter, a mason, a sculptor of statues
- to train, to make, to weave, to sew, to carve
- gain, pay, a hired worker, toilsome, care
- to hire, to place, a household servant, to do with energy, to tire out

Before you move on

A result? (effectus, effectūs.) To follow? (cōnsequor, cōnsequī.) To come forth? (prōveniō, prōvenīre.) To turn out well? (succēdō, succēdere.) To overflow? (redundō, redundāre.) To harm? (noceō, nocēre.) To be useful? (prōsum, prōdesse.) To be a hindrance? (obsum, obesse.) To hinder? (impediō, impedīre.) To throw into confusion? (perturbō, perturbāre.) To touch? (contingō, contingere.) To arise? (exsistō, exsistere.) By chance? (fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum.) Unexpected? (inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum.) A movement? (mōtus, mōtūs.) A work? (opus, operis.) A craftsman? (opifex, opificis.) An artist? (artifex, artificis.) A labourer? (operārius, operāriī.) To work? (operor, operārī.) A fuller? (fullō, fullōnis.) A goldsmith? (aurifex, aurificis.) A carpenter? (lignārius, lignāriī.) A mason? (caementārius, caementāriī.) A sculptor of statues? (statuārius, statuāriī.) To train? (exerceō, exercēre.) To make? (fabricor, fabricārī.) To weave? (texō, texere.) To sew? (suō, suere.) To carve? (sculpō, sculpere.) Gain? (quaestus, quaestūs.) Pay? (stīpendium, stīpendiī.) A hired worker? (mercēnārius, mercēnāriī.) Toilsome? (labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum.) Care? (dīligentia, dīligentiae.) To hire? (condūcō, condūcere.) To place? (locō, locāre.) A household servant? (famulus, famulī.) To do with energy? (nāvō, nāvāre.) To tire out? (fatīgō, fatīgāre.)

Chapter 381

Pleaders, Clients and Clerks

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name an advocate and his client, a shipowner, a copyist and a land surveyor.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 381: I can name an advocate and his client, a shipowner, a copyist and a land surveyor.

381.1 causidicus, causidicī — an advocate, a pleader for hire

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to do with energy, then the Latin for to tire out.

You'll want to know: causidicus, causidicī

causidicus, causidicī — "an advocate, a pleader for hire".

> Causidicus prō reō dīxit.
>
> The advocate spoke for the accused.

causidicus, causidicī m., from causa, a case, and dīcō: a case-speaker, often said with a little scorn.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

causidicus is built from causa "a case at law" and dīcō "to say" (Lewis & Short): one who speaks cases.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: causidicus, causidicī
- Say it: causidicus, causidicī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with causidicus, causidicī
- Recall: say the Latin for to do with energy, then the Latin for to tire out, then say causidicus, causidicī again

Before you move on

What does causidicus, causidicī mean? ("An advocate, a pleader for hire".) Say it once more.

381.2 cliēns, clientis — a client, a dependant

Before the new one: say the Latin for to tire out, then the Latin for an advocate.

You'll want to know: cliēns, clientis

cliēns, clientis — "a client, a dependant".

Clientēs māne ad domum patrōnī veniunt.

The clients come to their patron's house in the morning.

cliēns, clientis m. A client owed his patron greeting and support; the patron owed him protection and help at law. English client.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cliēns is usually traced to an old verb clueō "to hear, to be called" (Lewis & Short): one who listens to his patron. English client comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cliēns, clientis
- Say it: cliēns, clientis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cliēns, clientis
- Recall: say the Latin for to tire out, then the Latin for an advocate, then say cliēns, clientis again

Before you move on

What does cliēns, clientis mean? ("A client, a dependant".) Say it once more.

381.3 nāviculārius, nāviculāriī — a shipowner, a shipper

Before the new one: say the Latin for an advocate, then the Latin for a client.

You'll want to know: nāviculārius, nāviculāriī

nāviculārius, nāviculāriī — "a shipowner, a shipper".

Nāviculārius frūmentum trāns mare vehit.

The shipowner carries grain across the sea.

nāviculārius, nāviculāriī m., built on a little word for a ship, from nāvis. The great grain ships of Rome were run by nāviculāriī.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nāviculārius is built on nāvicula "a little ship" (Lewis & Short), a small form of nāvis "a ship".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nāviculārius, nāviculāriī
- Say it: nāviculārius, nāviculāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nāviculārius, nāviculāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for an advocate, then the Latin for a client, then say nāviculārius, nāviculāriī again

Before you move on

What does nāviculārius, nāviculāriī mean? ("A shipowner, a shipper".) Say it once more.

381.4 librārius, librāriī — a copyist, a scribe; a bookseller

Before the new one: say the Latin for a client, then the Latin for a shipowner.

You'll want to know: librārius, librāriī

librārius, librāriī — "a copyist, a scribe; a bookseller".

Librārius librōs dīligenter scrībit.

The copyist writes out books carefully.

librārius, librāriī m., built on liber, a book, with a short i. Copyists were often slaves trained to write a fast clear hand.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

librārius is built on liber, librī "a book" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -ārius of a man busy with something. English library comes from the same word through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: librārius, librāriī
- Say it: librārius, librāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with librārius, librāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a client, then the Latin for a shipowner, then say librārius, librāriī again

Before you move on

What does librārius, librāriī mean? ("A copyist, a scribe; a bookseller".) Say it once more.

381.5 agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris — a land surveyor

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shipowner, then the Latin for a copyist.

You'll want to know: agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris

agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris — "a land surveyor".

Agrīmēnsor fīnēs agrī mētītur.

The surveyor measures the boundaries of the field.

agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris m., from agrī, of a field, and mētior, to measure (participle mēnsus). A late word, in Ammianus and Cassiodorus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

agrīmēnsor is built from agrī, the genitive of ager "a field" and mēnsor "a measurer" (Lewis & Short), the agent noun of mētior "to measure".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris
- Say it: agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a shipowner, then the Latin for a copyist, then say agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris again

Before you move on

What does agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris mean? ("A land surveyor".) Say it once more.

Chapter 382

Senators and People

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about senators, patricians and plebeians, the nobility and the popular side.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 382: I can talk about senators, patricians and plebeians, the nobility and the popular side.

382.1 senātor, senātōris — a senator

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a copyist, then the Latin for a land surveyor.

You'll want to know: senātor, senātōris

senātor, senātōris — "a senator".

> Senātōrēs in cūriā sedent.
>
> The senators sit in the senate house.

senātor, senātōris m., a member of the senātus, the council of elders (senex, an old man).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

senātor is built on senātus "the council of elders" (EtymDB), which comes from senex "an old man" (Lewis & Short). English senator comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: senātor, senātōris
- Say it: senātor, senātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with senātor, senātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a copyist, then the Latin for a land surveyor, then say senātor, senātōris again

Before you move on

What does senātor, senātōris mean? ("A senator".) Say it once more.

382.2 patricius, patricia, patricium — patrician, of the old noble families

Before the new one: say the Latin for a land surveyor, then the Latin for a senator.

You'll want to know: patricius, patricia, patricium

patricius, patricia, patricium — "patrician, of the old noble families".

Familia eius patricia et antīqua est.

His family is patrician and ancient.

patricius, patricia, patricium, built on patrēs, the fathers, an old name of the senators. English patrician.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patricius is built on patrēs "the fathers" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the plural of pater used of the first senators. English patrician comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: patricius, patricia, patricium
- Say it: patricius, patricia, patricium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with patricius, patricia, patricium
- Recall: say the Latin for a land surveyor, then the Latin for a senator, then say patricius, patricia, patricium again

Before you move on

What does patricius, patricia, patricium mean? ("Patrician, of the old noble families".) Say it once more.

382.3 plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium — plebeian, of the common people

Before the new one: say the Latin for a senator, then the Latin for patrician.

You'll want to know: plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium

plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium — "plebeian, of the common people".

> Prīmus cōnsul plēbēius ā populō laudātus est.
>
> The first plebeian consul was praised by the people.

plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium, built on plēbs, the common people. English plebeian.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plēbēius is built on plēbs, plēbis "the common people" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English plebeian comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium
- Say it: plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium
- Recall: say the Latin for a senator, then the Latin for patrician, then say plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium again

Before you move on

What does plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium mean? ("Plebeian, of the common people".) Say it once more.

382.4 nōbilis, nōbile — well known; noble

Before the new one: say the Latin for patrician, then the Latin for plebeian.

You'll want to know: nōbilis, nōbile

nōbilis, nōbile — "well known; noble".

Nōbilis vir est, sed pauper.

He is a man of noble birth, but poor.

nōbilis, nōbile: first known (it is built on nōscō, to get to know), then of a known family. The nōbilēs had a consul among their ancestors. English noble.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōbilis is built on nōscō, old gnōscō "to get to know" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -bilis: one who can be known. English noble comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nōbilis, nōbile
- Say it: nōbilis, nōbile, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nōbilis, nōbile
- Recall: say the Latin for patrician, then the Latin for plebeian, then say nōbilis, nōbile again

Before you move on

What does nōbilis, nōbile mean? ("Well known; noble".) Say it once more.

382.5 populāris, populāre — of the people, popular; a fellow countryman

Before the new one: say the Latin for plebeian, then the Latin for well known.

You'll want to know: populāris, populāre

populāris, populāre — "of the people, popular; a fellow countryman".

> Ōrātor populāris plēbem ad sē trahēbat.
>
> The popular speaker drew the common people to himself.

populāris, populāre. The populārēs were politicians who worked through the people's assemblies. As a noun, populāris is a fellow countryman. English popular.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

populāris is built on populus "the people" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -āris "belonging to". English popular comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: populāris, populāre
- Say it: populāris, populāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with populāris, populāre
- Recall: say the Latin for plebeian, then the Latin for well known, then say populāris, populāre again

Before you move on

What does populāris, populāre mean? ("Of the people, popular; a fellow countryman".) Say it once more.

Chapter 383

The Magistrates

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a magistrate, a praetor, an aedile, a quaestor and a censor, and say what each one does.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 383: I can name a magistrate, a praetor, an aedile, a quaestor and a censor, and say what each one does.

383.1 magistrātus, magistrātūs — a public office; a magistrate

Before the new one: say the Latin for well known, then the Latin for of the people.

You'll want to know: magistrātus, magistrātūs

magistrātus, magistrātūs — "a public office; a magistrate".

> Magistrātūs quotannīs ā populō creantur.
>
> Magistrates are elected by the people every year.

magistrātus, magistrātūs m., built on magister: both the office and the man who holds it. Roman offices lasted a year.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

magistrātus is built on magister "a master" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): the office of one set over others. English magistrate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: magistrātus, magistrātūs
- Say it: magistrātus, magistrātūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with magistrātus, magistrātūs
- Recall: say the Latin for well known, then the Latin for of the people, then say magistrātus, magistrātūs again

Before you move on

What does magistrātus, magistrātūs mean? ("A public office; a magistrate".) Say it once more.

383.2 praetor, praetōris — a praetor, a judge and magistrate

Before the new one: say the Latin for of the people, then the Latin for a public office.

You'll want to know: praetor, praetōris

praetor, praetōris — "a praetor, a judge and magistrate".

Praetor iūs dīcit in forō.

The praetor gives judgement in the Forum.

praetor, praetōris m. Next in rank below the consuls, he ran the law courts.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praetor is usually taken as prae "before" and the root of eō "to go" (Lewis & Short): one who goes in front, an old word for a leader.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praetor, praetōris
- Say it: praetor, praetōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praetor, praetōris
- Recall: say the Latin for of the people, then the Latin for a public office, then say praetor, praetōris again

Before you move on

What does praetor, praetōris mean? ("A praetor, a judge and magistrate".) Say it once more.

383.3 aedīlis, aedīlis — an aedile, an officer for streets, markets and games

Before the new one: say the Latin for a public office, then the Latin for a praetor.

You'll want to know: aedīlis, aedīlis

aedīlis, aedīlis — "an aedile, an officer for streets, markets and games".

Aedīlis macellum et viās cūrat.

The aedile looks after the meat market and the streets.

aedīlis, aedīlis m., built on the word for a temple or a building: he first cared for the temples. English aedile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aedīlis is built on aedēs "a temple, a building" (EtymDB, which lists old Latin aidīlis; Lewis & Short). English aedile comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aedīlis, aedīlis
- Say it: aedīlis, aedīlis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aedīlis, aedīlis
- Recall: say the Latin for a public office, then the Latin for a praetor, then say aedīlis, aedīlis again

Before you move on

What does aedīlis, aedīlis mean? ("An aedile, an officer for streets, markets and games".) Say it once more.

383.4 quaestor, quaestōris — a quaestor, a finance officer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a praetor, then the Latin for an aedile.

You'll want to know: quaestor, quaestōris

quaestor, quaestōris — "a quaestor, a finance officer".

Quaestor pecūniam pūblicam servat.

The quaestor keeps the public money.

quaestor, quaestōris m., built on quaerō, to seek, to inquire. The lowest regular office: the treasury and the accounts.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quaestor is built on quaerō "to seek, to inquire" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -tor of the one who does it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: quaestor, quaestōris
- Say it: quaestor, quaestōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with quaestor, quaestōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a praetor, then the Latin for an aedile, then say quaestor, quaestōris again

Before you move on

What does quaestor, quaestōris mean? ("A quaestor, a finance officer".) Say it once more.

383.5 cēnsor, cēnsōris — a censor

Before the new one: say the Latin for an aedile, then the Latin for a quaestor.

You'll want to know: cēnsor, cēnsōris

cēnsor, cēnsōris — "a censor".

Cēnsor cīvēs et bona eōrum numerat.

The censor counts the citizens and their property.

cēnsor, cēnsōris m., built on cēnseō, to assess. Every five years two censors drew up the list of citizens and could strike a senator off the roll. English censor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēnsor is built on cēnseō "to assess, to value" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): the officer who assessed the citizens. English censor comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cēnsor, cēnsōris
- Say it: cēnsor, cēnsōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cēnsor, cēnsōris
- Recall: say the Latin for an aedile, then the Latin for a quaestor, then say cēnsor, cēnsōris again

Before you move on

What does cēnsor, cēnsōris mean? ("A censor".) Say it once more.

Chapter 384

Elections

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about votes and the voting assembly, a candidate, canvassing, and choosing someone.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 384: I can talk about votes and the voting assembly, a candidate, canvassing, and choosing someone.

384.1 suffrāgium, suffrāgiī — a vote; the right to vote

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a quaestor, then the Latin for a censor.

You'll want to know: suffrāgium, suffrāgiī

suffrāgium, suffrāgiī — "a vote; the right to vote".

> Cīvēs suffrāgia ferunt.
>
> The citizens cast their votes.

suffrāgium, suffrāgiī n. Suffrāgium ferre, to vote. English suffrage.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of suffrāgium is not settled: Lewis & Short link it, with a "perhaps", to suffrāgō "the hock of a leg", and EtymDB has no parent for it. English suffrage comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: suffrāgium, suffrāgiī
- Say it: suffrāgium, suffrāgiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with suffrāgium, suffrāgiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a quaestor, then the Latin for a censor, then say suffrāgium, suffrāgiī again

Before you move on

What does suffrāgium, suffrāgiī mean? ("A vote; the right to vote".) Say it once more.

384.2 comitia, comitiōrum — the voting assembly, the elections

Before the new one: say the Latin for a censor, then the Latin for a vote.

You'll want to know: comitia, comitiōrum

comitia, comitiōrum — "the voting assembly, the elections".

Comitia mox habēbuntur.

The elections will be held soon.

comitia, comitiōrum n. pl.: the Roman people meeting to vote. The singular comitium is the meeting place.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

comitia is built from com- "together" and the root of eō "to go" (Lewis & Short): a going together.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: comitia, comitiōrum
- Say it: comitia, comitiōrum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with comitia, comitiōrum
- Recall: say the Latin for a censor, then the Latin for a vote, then say comitia, comitiōrum again

Before you move on

What does comitia, comitiōrum mean? ("The voting assembly, the elections".) Say it once more.

384.3 candidātus, candidātī — a candidate

Before the new one: say the Latin for a vote, then the Latin for the voting assembly.

You'll want to know: candidātus, candidātī

candidātus, candidātī — "a candidate".

Candidātus cīvēs in forō salūtābat.

The candidate was greeting the citizens in the Forum.

candidātus, candidātī m., from candidus, shining white: a man seeking office wore a toga whitened with chalk. English candidate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

candidātus is built on candidus "shining white" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): dressed in white. English candidate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: candidātus, candidātī
- Say it: candidātus, candidātī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with candidātus, candidātī
- Recall: say the Latin for a vote, then the Latin for the voting assembly, then say candidātus, candidātī again

Before you move on

What does candidātus, candidātī mean? ("A candidate".) Say it once more.

384.4 ambitiō, ambitiōnis — canvassing; ambition

Before the new one: say the Latin for the voting assembly, then the Latin for a candidate.

You'll want to know: ambitiō, ambitiōnis

ambitiō, ambitiōnis — "canvassing; ambition".

Ambitiō eius omnibus nōta erat.

His canvassing was known to all.

ambitiō, ambitiōnis f., built on ambiō, to go round: the candidate went round asking for votes. English ambition.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ambitiō is the noun built on ambiō "to go round" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from amb- "around" and eō "to go". English ambition comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ambitiō, ambitiōnis
- Say it: ambitiō, ambitiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ambitiō, ambitiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for the voting assembly, then the Latin for a candidate, then say ambitiō, ambitiōnis again

Before you move on

What does ambitiō, ambitiōnis mean? ("Canvassing; ambition".) Say it once more.

384.5 ēligō, ēligere — to pick out, to choose

Before the new one: say the Latin for a candidate, then the Latin for canvassing.

You'll want to know: ēligō, ēligere

ēligō, ēligere — "to pick out, to choose".

Ex multīs hunc ēlēgimus.

Out of many we chose this one.

ēligō, ēligere, ēlēgī, ēlectum: ē + legō, to pick. English elect and election.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēligō is built from ē "out" and legō "to pick, to gather" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English elect comes from its participle ēlēctus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēligō, ēligere
- Say it: ēligō, ēligere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēligō, ēligere
- Recall: say the Latin for a candidate, then the Latin for canvassing, then say ēligō, ēligere again

Before you move on

What does ēligō, ēligere mean? ("To pick out, to choose".) Say it once more.

Chapter 385

Ruling and Governing

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone rules, steers or runs a state, and talk about supreme power and the first man of the state.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 385: I can say that someone rules, steers or runs a state, and talk about supreme power and the first man of the state.

385.1 regō, regere — to rule, to guide, to direct

> Before the new one: say the Latin for canvassing, then the Latin for to pick out.

You'll want to know: regō, regere

regō, regere — "to rule, to guide, to direct".

> Rēx populum iūstē regēbat.
>
> The king ruled the people justly.

regō, regere, rēxī, rēctum. Rēctus, straight, is its participle; rēx is the man who rules. English regent and correct.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

regō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to make straight, to direct" (EtymDB), the same root as in rēx and rēctus (Lewis & Short). English regent and correct come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: regō, regere
- Say it: regō, regere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with regō, regere
- Recall: say the Latin for canvassing, then the Latin for to pick out, then say regō, regere again

Before you move on

What does regō, regere mean? ("To rule, to guide, to direct".) Say it once more.

385.2 gubernō, gubernāre — to steer; to govern

Before the new one: say the Latin for to pick out, then the Latin for to rule.

You'll want to know: gubernō, gubernāre

gubernō, gubernāre — "to steer; to govern".

Nauta nāvem gubernat.

The sailor steers the ship.

gubernō, gubernāre, gubernāvī, gubernātum. Gubernātor, a helmsman, is already known. English govern comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gubernō was borrowed from Greek kybernaō "to steer a ship" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English govern comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gubernō, gubernāre
- Say it: gubernō, gubernāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gubernō, gubernāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to pick out, then the Latin for to rule, then say gubernō, gubernāre again

Before you move on

What does gubernō, gubernāre mean? ("To steer; to govern".) Say it once more.

385.3 administrō, administrāre — to manage, to run; to administer

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rule, then the Latin for to steer.

You'll want to know: administrō, administrāre

administrō, administrāre — "to manage, to run; to administer".

Prōvinciam bene administrāvit.

He governed the province well.

administrō, administrāre, administrāvī, administrātum, built on minister, a servant, a helper. English administer.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

administrō is built from ad and ministrō "to serve" (EtymDB), which comes from minister "a servant, a helper" (Lewis & Short). English administer comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: administrō, administrāre
- Say it: administrō, administrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with administrō, administrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to rule, then the Latin for to steer, then say administrō, administrāre again

Before you move on

What does administrō, administrāre mean? ("To manage, to run; to administer".) Say it once more.

385.4 imperium, imperiī — command, supreme power; an empire

Before the new one: say the Latin for to steer, then the Latin for to manage.

You'll want to know: imperium, imperiī

imperium, imperiī — "command, supreme power; an empire".

Cōnsulēs summum imperium habent.

The consuls hold supreme power.

imperium, imperiī n., built on imperō, to command: the power to command an army and govern, then the land ruled. English empire and imperial.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

imperium is built on imperō "to command" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English empire comes from it through French, and imperial from its adjective.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: imperium, imperiī
- Say it: imperium, imperiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with imperium, imperiī
- Recall: say the Latin for to steer, then the Latin for to manage, then say imperium, imperiī again

Before you move on

What does imperium, imperiī mean? ("Command, supreme power; an empire".) Say it once more.

385.5 prīnceps, prīncipis — the first, a leader; the emperor

Before the new one: say the Latin for to manage, then the Latin for command.

You'll want to know: prīnceps, prīncipis

prīnceps, prīncipis — "the first, a leader; the emperor".

Prīnceps cīvitātis erat.

He was the leading man of the state.

prīnceps, prīncipis m.: prīmus + capiō, the one who takes first place. As an adjective it means first. English prince and principal.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīnceps is built from prīmus "first" and capiō "to take" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): the one who takes first place. English prince and principal come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prīnceps, prīncipis
- Say it: prīnceps, prīncipis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prīnceps, prīncipis
- Recall: say the Latin for to manage, then the Latin for command, then say prīnceps, prīncipis again

Before you move on

What does prīnceps, prīncipis mean? ("The first, a leader; the emperor".) Say it once more.

Chapter 386

Living Together

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a partnership, kindness and culture, custom and character, an institution and harmony.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 386: I can talk about a partnership, kindness and culture, custom and character, an institution and harmony.

386.1 societās, societātis — a partnership, an alliance; society

Before the new one: say the Latin for command, then the Latin for the first.

You'll want to know: societās, societātis

societās, societātis — "a partnership, an alliance; society".

> Cum frātre societātem fēcit.
>
> He went into partnership with his brother.

societās, societātis f., built on socius, a partner, an ally. A business partnership in Roman law. English society.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

societās is built on socius "a partner, an ally" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), a word kin to sequor "to follow": one who goes along with you. English society comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: societās, societātis
- Say it: societās, societātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with societās, societātis
- Recall: say the Latin for command, then the Latin for the first, then say societās, societātis again

Before you move on

What does societās, societātis mean? ("A partnership, an alliance; society".) Say it once more.

386.2 hūmānitās, hūmānitātis — human nature; kindness; culture

Before the new one: say the Latin for the first, then the Latin for a partnership.

You'll want to know: hūmānitās, hūmānitātis

hūmānitās, hūmānitātis — "human nature; kindness; culture".

Hospitem summā hūmānitāte accēpit.

He received the guest with the greatest kindness.

hūmānitās, hūmānitātis f., built on hūmānus, human. The kindness and learning that make a person truly human. English humanity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hūmānitās is built on hūmānus "human" (Lewis & Short), an adjective kin to homō "a human being". English humanity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: hūmānitās, hūmānitātis
- Say it: hūmānitās, hūmānitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with hūmānitās, hūmānitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for the first, then the Latin for a partnership, then say hūmānitās, hūmānitātis again

Before you move on

What does hūmānitās, hūmānitātis mean? ("Human nature; kindness; culture".) Say it once more.

386.3 mōs, mōris — a custom, a way; (plural) character, morals

Before the new one: say the Latin for a partnership, then the Latin for human nature.

You'll want to know: mōs, mōris

mōs, mōris — "a custom, a way; (plural) character, morals".

Hic mōs antīquus est.

This is an old custom.

mōs, mōris m. The plural mōrēs is a person's ways, his character. Mōs maiōrum, the custom of the ancestors. English moral and morals.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of mōs is not settled; Lewis & Short give no sure account. English moral comes from its adjective mōrālis.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mōs, mōris
- Say it: mōs, mōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mōs, mōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a partnership, then the Latin for human nature, then say mōs, mōris again

Before you move on

What does mōs, mōris mean? ("A custom, a way; (plural) character, morals".) Say it once more.

386.4 īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī — an institution, a custom; a purpose

Before the new one: say the Latin for human nature, then the Latin for a custom.

You'll want to know: īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī

īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī — "an institution, a custom; a purpose".

Īnstitūta patrum servāmus.

We keep the institutions of our fathers.

īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī n.: a thing set up and kept, a custom. English institute and institution.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnstitūtum is the participle of īnstituō "to set up" (Lewis & Short), from in and statuō "to set, to place". English institute comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī
- Say it: īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī
- Recall: say the Latin for human nature, then the Latin for a custom, then say īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī again

Before you move on

What does īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī mean? ("An institution, a custom; a purpose".) Say it once more.

386.5 concordia, concordiae — harmony, concord

Before the new one: say the Latin for a custom, then the Latin for an institution.

You'll want to know: concordia, concordiae

concordia, concordiae — "harmony, concord".

Concordiā parvae rēs crēscunt.

Through harmony small states grow.

concordia, concordiae f., built on cor, cordis, heart: hearts together. English concord.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

concordia is built on concors "of one heart" (Lewis & Short), from con- "together" and cor, cordis "heart". English concord comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: concordia, concordiae
- Say it: concordia, concordiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with concordia, concordiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a custom, then the Latin for an institution, then say concordia, concordiae again

Before you move on

What does concordia, concordiae mean? ("Harmony, concord".) Say it once more.

Chapter 387

Unrest

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about discord and uprising, call people seditious or turbulent, and say that someone stirs up a crowd.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 387: I can talk about discord and uprising, call people seditious or turbulent, and say that someone stirs up a crowd.

387.1 discordia, discordiae — disagreement, discord

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an institution, then the Latin for harmony.

You'll want to know: discordia, discordiae

discordia, discordiae — "disagreement, discord".

> Discordia cīvium urbem perdidit.
>
> The discord of the citizens ruined the city.

discordia, discordiae f., dis- apart + cor: hearts apart, the opposite of concordia. English discord.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

discordia is built on discors "at odds" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from dis- "apart" and cor, cordis "heart". English discord comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: discordia, discordiae
- Say it: discordia, discordiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with discordia, discordiae
- Recall: say the Latin for an institution, then the Latin for harmony, then say discordia, discordiae again

Before you move on

What does discordia, discordiae mean? ("Disagreement, discord".) Say it once more.

387.2 sēditiō, sēditiōnis — a rising, a mutiny, sedition

Before the new one: say the Latin for harmony, then the Latin for disagreement.

You'll want to know: sēditiō, sēditiōnis

sēditiō, sēditiōnis — "a rising, a mutiny, sedition".

In castrīs sēditiō orta est.

A mutiny broke out in the camp.

sēditiō, sēditiōnis f., sēd- apart + itiō, a going: a going apart. English sedition.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sēditiō is built from sēd- "apart" and itiō "a going", from eō "to go" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): people going off on their own. English sedition comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sēditiō, sēditiōnis
- Say it: sēditiō, sēditiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sēditiō, sēditiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for harmony, then the Latin for disagreement, then say sēditiō, sēditiōnis again

Before you move on

What does sēditiō, sēditiōnis mean? ("A rising, a mutiny, sedition".) Say it once more.

387.3 sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum — seditious, rebellious

Before the new one: say the Latin for disagreement, then the Latin for a rising.

You'll want to know: sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum

sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum — "seditious, rebellious".

Sēditiōsī cīvēs forum occupāvērunt.

Rebellious citizens took over the Forum.

sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum, built on sēditiō. English seditious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sēditiōsus is built on sēditiō "a rising" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -ōsus "full of". English seditious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum
- Say it: sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for disagreement, then the Latin for a rising, then say sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum again

Before you move on

What does sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum mean? ("Seditious, rebellious".) Say it once more.

387.4 turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum — stormy, turbulent; disorderly

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rising, then the Latin for seditious.

You'll want to know: turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum

turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum — "stormy, turbulent; disorderly".

Tempora turbulenta erant.

The times were turbulent.

turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum, built on the word for a crowd or an uproar. English turbulent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

turbulentus is built on turba "an uproar, a crowd" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -ulentus "full of". English turbulent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum
- Say it: turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum
- Recall: say the Latin for a rising, then the Latin for seditious, then say turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum again

Before you move on

What does turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum mean? ("Stormy, turbulent; disorderly".) Say it once more.

387.5 concitō, concitāre — to stir up, to rouse

Before the new one: say the Latin for seditious, then the Latin for stormy.

You'll want to know: concitō, concitāre

concitō, concitāre — "to stir up, to rouse".

Ōrātor plēbem in senātum concitāvit.

The speaker stirred up the common people against the senate.

concitō, concitāre, concitāvī, concitātum, the frequentative of concieō: con- + cieō, to set in motion.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

concitō is the frequentative of concieō "to stir up" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from con- and cieō "to set in motion": to set a crowd moving all together.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: concitō, concitāre
- Say it: concitō, concitāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with concitō, concitāre
- Recall: say the Latin for seditious, then the Latin for stormy, then say concitō, concitāre again

Before you move on

What does concitō, concitāre mean? ("To stir up, to rouse".) Say it once more.

Chapter 388

Towns and Associations

Modes: voice (6) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a townsman and a town councillor, a colony, a comrade and an association.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 388: I can talk about a townsman and a town councillor, a colony, a comrade and an association.

388.1 mūniceps, mūnicipis — a citizen of a free town; a fellow townsman

Before the new one: say the Latin for stormy, then the Latin for to stir up.

You'll want to know: mūniceps, mūnicipis

mūniceps, mūnicipis — "a citizen of a free town; a fellow townsman".

> Ille mūniceps meus est.
>
> He comes from my home town.

mūniceps, mūnicipis m. and f.: one who took on the duties of a self-governing Italian town.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūniceps is built from mūnus "a duty, a service" and capiō "to take" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): one who takes on the town's duties.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mūniceps, mūnicipis
- Say it: mūniceps, mūnicipis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mūniceps, mūnicipis
- Recall: say the Latin for stormy, then the Latin for to stir up, then say mūniceps, mūnicipis again

Before you move on

What does mūniceps, mūnicipis mean? ("A citizen of a free town; a fellow townsman".) Say it once more.

388.2 decuriō, decuriōnis — a town councillor; a cavalry officer

Before the new one: say the Latin for to stir up, then the Latin for a citizen of a free town.

You'll want to know: decuriō, decuriōnis

decuriō, decuriōnis — "a town councillor; a cavalry officer".

Decuriōnēs dē aquaeductū dēlīberāvērunt.

The town councillors deliberated about the aqueduct.

decuriō, decuriōnis m. In a town the decuriōnēs formed the council; in the army a decuriō led ten horsemen. Built on decem, ten.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

decuriō is built on decuria "a group of ten" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which comes from decem "ten".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: decuriō, decuriōnis
- Say it: decuriō, decuriōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with decuriō, decuriōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to stir up, then the Latin for a citizen of a free town, then say decuriō, decuriōnis again

Before you move on

What does decuriō, decuriōnis mean? ("A town councillor; a cavalry officer".) Say it once more.

388.3 colōnia, colōniae — a colony, a settlement

Before the new one: say the Latin for a citizen of a free town, then the Latin for a town councillor.

You'll want to know: colōnia, colōniae

colōnia, colōniae — "a colony, a settlement".

Mīlitēs in colōniam missī sunt.

Soldiers were sent to the settlement.

colōnia, colōniae f., built on colōnus, a settler, a farmer. Many cities of Europe began as Roman colonies. English colony.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

colōnia is built on colōnus "a settler, a farmer" (EtymDB), which comes from colō "to till, to dwell" (Lewis & Short). English colony comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: colōnia, colōniae
- Say it: colōnia, colōniae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with colōnia, colōniae
- Recall: say the Latin for a citizen of a free town, then the Latin for a town councillor, then say colōnia, colōniae again

Before you move on

What does colōnia, colōniae mean? ("A colony, a settlement".) Say it once more.

388.4 sodālis, sodālis — a companion, a comrade; a club member

Before the new one: say the Latin for a town councillor, then the Latin for a colony.

You'll want to know: sodālis, sodālis

sodālis, sodālis — "a companion, a comrade; a club member".

Cum sodālibus cēnāvit.

He dined with his comrades.

sodālis, sodālis m. and f. Members of a club, a guild or a priestly brotherhood were sodālēs.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of sodālis is not settled: Lewis & Short compare it with a root meaning "one's own way, custom", but give no sure account.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sodālis, sodālis
- Say it: sodālis, sodālis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sodālis, sodālis
- Recall: say the Latin for a town councillor, then the Latin for a colony, then say sodālis, sodālis again

Before you move on

What does sodālis, sodālis mean? ("A companion, a comrade; a club member".) Say it once more.

388.5 collēgium, collēgiī — an association, a guild; a board of officials

Before the new one: say the Latin for a colony, then the Latin for a companion.

You'll want to know: collēgium, collēgiī

collēgium, collēgiī — "an association, a guild; a board of officials".

Fabrī in collēgium convēnērunt.

The craftsmen met in their guild.

collēgium, collēgiī n., built on collēga, a colleague. Guilds of craftsmen and boards of priests were both collēgia. English college.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

collēgium is built on collēga "a colleague, one chosen with another" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English college comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: collēgium, collēgiī
- Say it: collēgium, collēgiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with collēgium, collēgiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a colony, then the Latin for a companion, then say collēgium, collēgiī again

Before you move on

What does collēgium, collēgiī mean? ("An association, a guild; a board of officials".) Say it once more.

388.6 Words from chapters 381–388 — a review

Say the Latin for an advocate and a client.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an advocate, a client, a shipowner, a copyist, a land surveyor
- a senator, patrician, plebeian, well known, of the people
- a public office, a praetor, an aedile, a quaestor, a censor
- a vote, the voting assembly, a candidate, canvassing, to pick out
- to rule, to steer, to manage, command, the first
- a partnership, human nature, a custom, an institution, harmony

- disagreement, a rising, seditious, stormy, to stir up
- a citizen of a free town, a town councillor, a colony, a companion, an association

Before you move on

An advocate? (causidicus, causidicī.) A client? (cliēns, clientis.) A shipowner? (nāviculārius, nāviculāriī.) A copyist? (librārius, librāriī.) A land surveyor? (agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris.) A senator? (senātor, senātōris.) Patrician? (patricius, patricia, patricium.) Plebeian? (plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium.) Well known? (nōbilis, nōbile.) Of the people? (populāris, populāre.) A public office? (magistrātus, magistrātūs.) A praetor? (praetor, praetōris.) An aedile? (aedīlis, aedīlis.) A quaestor? (quaestor, quaestōris.) A censor? (cēnsor, cēnsōris.) A vote? (suffrāgium, suffrāgiī.) The voting assembly? (comitia, comitiōrum.) A candidate? (candidātus, candidātī.) Canvassing? (ambitiō, ambitiōnis.) To pick out? (ēligō, ēligere.) To rule? (regō, regere.) To steer? (gubernō, gubernāre.) To manage? (administrō, administrāre.) Command? (imperium, imperiī.) The first? (prīnceps, prīncipis.) A partnership? (societās, societātis.) Human nature? (hūmānitās, hūmānitātis.) A custom? (mōs, mōris.) An institution? (īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī.) Harmony? (concordia, concordiae.) Disagreement? (discordia, discordiae.) A rising? (sēditiō, sēditiōnis.) Seditious? (sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum.) Stormy? (turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum.) To stir up? (concitō, concitāre.) A citizen of a free town? (mūniceps, mūnicipis.) A town councillor? (decuriō, decuriōnis.) A colony? (colōnia, colōniae.) A companion? (sodālis, sodālis.) An association? (collēgium, collēgiī.)

Chapter 389

Duty and Freedom

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about slavery and setting a slave free, about duty to the gods and to family, a burden and obedience.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 389: I can talk about slavery and setting a slave free, about duty to the gods and to family, a burden and obedience.

389.1 servitūs, servitūtis — slavery, servitude

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a companion, then the Latin for an association.

You'll want to know: servitūs, servitūtis

servitūs, servitūtis — "slavery, servitude".

> Lībertās servitūte melior est.
>
> Freedom is better than slavery.

servitūs, servitūtis f., built on servus, a slave. English servitude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

servitūs is built on servus "a slave" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -tūs that makes a state.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: servitūs, servitūtis
- Say it: servitūs, servitūtis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with servitūs, servitūtis
- Recall: say the Latin for a companion, then the Latin for an association, then say servitūs, servitūtis again

Before you move on

What does servitūs, servitūtis mean? ("Slavery, servitude".) Say it once more.

389.2 manūmittō, manūmittere — to set free (a slave)

Before the new one: say the Latin for an association, then the Latin for slavery.

You'll want to know: manūmittō, manūmittere

manūmittō, manūmittere — "to set free (a slave)".

Dominus servum fidēlem manūmīsit.

The master freed his faithful slave.

manūmittō, manūmittere, manūmīsī, manūmissum: manū from the hand + mittō, to let go. The freed slave became a lībertus. English manumit.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

manūmittō is built from manū "from the hand", the ablative of manus, and mittō "to let go" (Lewis & Short): to release from one's power. English manumit comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: manūmittō, manūmittere
- Say it: manūmittō, manūmittere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with manūmittō, manūmittere
- Recall: say the Latin for an association, then the Latin for slavery, then say manūmittō, manūmittere again

Before you move on

What does manūmittō, manūmittere mean? ("To set free (a slave)".) Say it once more.

389.3 pietās, pietātis — dutifulness, devotion (to gods, family, country)

Before the new one: say the Latin for slavery, then the Latin for to set free.

You'll want to know: pietās, pietātis

pietās, pietātis — "dutifulness, devotion (to gods, family, country)".

Fīlius magnā pietāte patrem cūrābat.

The son looked after his father with great devotion.

pietās, pietātis f., built on pius, dutiful: the loyalty owed to gods, parents and country. English piety and pity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pietās is built on pius "dutiful" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -tās that makes a quality. English piety and pity both come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pietās, pietātis
- Say it: pietās, pietātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pietās, pietātis
- Recall: say the Latin for slavery, then the Latin for to set free, then say pietās, pietātis again

Before you move on

What does pietās, pietātis mean? ("Dutifulness, devotion (to gods, family, country)".) Say it once more.

389.4 onus, oneris — a load, a burden

Before the new one: say the Latin for to set free, then the Latin for dutifulness.

You'll want to know: onus, oneris

onus, oneris — "a load, a burden".

Asinus onus grave portat.

The donkey carries a heavy load.

onus, oneris n. A load on a back, and a burden of duty or tax. English onus and onerous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

onus is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European noun meaning "a burden" (EtymDB). English took it over as onus, and onerous comes from its adjective.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: onus, oneris
- Say it: onus, oneris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with onus, oneris
- Recall: say the Latin for to set free, then the Latin for dutifulness, then say onus, oneris again

Before you move on

What does onus, oneris mean? ("A load, a burden".) Say it once more.

389.5 obsequium, obsequiī — compliance, obedience

Before the new one: say the Latin for dutifulness, then the Latin for a load.

You'll want to know: obsequium, obsequiī

obsequium, obsequiī — "compliance, obedience".

Obsequium amīcōs, vēritās odium parit.

Giving way wins friends; truth breeds hatred.

obsequium, obsequiī n., built on obsequor, to give way to someone. English obsequious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obsequium is built on obsequor "to comply" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from ob and sequor "to follow". English obsequious comes from its adjective.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obsequium, obsequiī
- Say it: obsequium, obsequiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obsequium, obsequiī
- Recall: say the Latin for dutifulness, then the Latin for a load, then say obsequium, obsequiī again

Before you move on

What does obsequium, obsequiī mean? ("Compliance, obedience".) Say it once more.

Chapter 390

On One Condition

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can set a condition, say but if, provided that and only if, and concede however much.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 390: I can set a condition, say but if, provided that and only if, and concede however much.

390.1 condiciō, condiciōnis — a condition, terms; a situation

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a load, then the Latin for compliance.

You'll want to know: condiciō, condiciōnis

condiciō, condiciōnis — "a condition, terms; a situation".

> Hāc condiciōne veniam, ut tū quoque veniās.
>
> I will come on this condition, that you come too.

condiciō, condiciōnis f. Hāc condiciōne ut + subjunctive: on condition that. It is also a person's situation in life. English condition.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

condiciō is built on condīcō "to agree on, to settle" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from con- "together" and dīcō "to say": what two sides say together. English condition comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: condiciō, condiciōnis
- Say it: condiciō, condiciōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with condiciō, condiciōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a load, then the Latin for compliance, then say condiciō, condiciōnis again

Before you move on

What does condiciō, condiciōnis mean? ("A condition, terms; a situation".) Say it once more.

390.2 sīn — but if

Before the new one: say the Latin for compliance, then the Latin for a condition.

You'll want to know: sīn

sīn — "but if".

Sī venīs, gaudeō; sīn minus, domī maneō.

If you come, I am glad; but if not, I stay at home.

Sīn opens the second of two conditions, after a sī clause: if … but if. Sīn minus or sīn aliter, but if not.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sīn is built from sī "if" and the particle -ne (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): if, on the other hand.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sīn
- Say it: sīn, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sīn
- Recall: say the Latin for compliance, then the Latin for a condition, then say sīn again

Before you move on

What does sīn mean? ("But if".) Say it once more.

390.3 dummodo — provided that, so long as

Before the new one: say the Latin for a condition, then the Latin for but if.

You'll want to know: dummodo

dummodo — "provided that, so long as".

> Omnia tibi dabō, dummodo vērum dīcās.
>
> I will give you everything, provided that you tell the truth.

Dummodo takes the subjunctive; dummodo nē, provided that not. It is dum, while, with an adverb meaning only.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dummodo is built from dum "while, so long as" and modo "only" (Lewis & Short): only so long as.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dummodo
- Say it: dummodo, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dummodo
- Recall: say the Latin for a condition, then the Latin for but if, then say dummodo again

Before you move on

What does dummodo mean? ("Provided that, so long as".) Say it once more.

390.4 modo — only; a moment ago; provided that (with the subjunctive)

Before the new one: say the Latin for but if, then the Latin for provided that.

You'll want to know: modo

modo — "only; a moment ago; provided that (with the subjunctive)".

Veniam, modo nē pluat.

I will come, provided it does not rain.

Modo is the ablative of modus, a measure: only. Modo + subjunctive, provided that; nōn modo … sed etiam, not only … but also.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

modo is the old ablative of modus "a measure, a limit" (Lewis & Short): within measure, so only.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: modo
- Say it: modo, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with modo
- Recall: say the Latin for but if, then the Latin for provided that, then say modo again

Before you move on

What does modo mean? ("Only; a moment ago; provided that (with the subjunctive)".) Say it once more.

390.5 quamvīs — however much; although (with the subjunctive)

Before the new one: say the Latin for provided that, then the Latin for only.

You'll want to know: quamvīs

quamvīs — "however much; although (with the subjunctive)".

Quamvīs dīves sit, nōn est fēlīx.

However rich he may be, he is not happy.

Quamvīs = quam + vīs, as much as you like; in classical prose it takes the subjunctive, while quamquam, although, takes the indicative.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quamvīs is built from quam "as" and vīs "you wish", from volō (Lewis & Short): as much as you like.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: quamvīs
- Say it: quamvīs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with quamvīs
- Recall: say the Latin for provided that, then the Latin for only, then say quamvīs again

Before you move on

What does quamvīs mean? ("However much; although (with the subjunctive)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 391

Even If and Otherwise

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say even if and although, otherwise and differently, and whether … or.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 391: I can say even if and although, otherwise and differently, and whether … or.

391.1 etiamsī — even if

> Before the new one: say the Latin for only, then the Latin for however much.

You'll want to know: etiamsī

etiamsī — "even if".

> Etiamsī pluet, ambulābimus.
>
> Even if it rains, we shall walk.

Etiamsī = etiam + sī: even if. It takes the mood a sī clause would take.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

etiamsī is built from etiam "even, also" and sī "if" (Lewis & Short), and is often written as two words.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: etiamsī
- Say it: etiamsī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with etiamsī
- Recall: say the Latin for only, then the Latin for however much, then say etiamsī again

Before you move on

What does etiamsī mean? ("Even if".) Say it once more.

391.2 tametsī — although, even though

Before the new one: say the Latin for however much, then the Latin for even if.

You'll want to know: tametsī

tametsī — "although, even though".

Tametsī fessus erat, labōrāvit.

Although he was tired, he worked.

Tametsī = tamen + etsī, and like etsī it mostly takes the indicative.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tametsī is built from tamen "yet" and etsī "even if" (Lewis & Short), with the end of tamen worn away.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tametsī
- Say it: tametsī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tametsī
- Recall: say the Latin for however much, then the Latin for even if, then say tametsī again

Before you move on

What does tametsī mean? ("Although, even though".) Say it once more.

391.3 aliōquī — otherwise; in other respects

Before the new one: say the Latin for even if, then the Latin for although.

You'll want to know: aliōquī

aliōquī — "otherwise; in other respects".

Festīnāre dēbēmus; aliōquī nāvem āmittēmus.

We must hurry; otherwise we shall miss the ship.

Aliōquī (also aliōquīn): otherwise, or else; also, in other respects.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aliōquī is built from a form of alius "other" and the old adverb quī "in some way" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): in another way.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aliōquī
- Say it: aliōquī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aliōquī
- Recall: say the Latin for even if, then the Latin for although, then say aliōquī again

Before you move on

What does aliōquī mean? ("Otherwise; in other respects".) Say it once more.

391.4 secus — differently, otherwise

Before the new one: say the Latin for although, then the Latin for otherwise.

You'll want to know: secus

secus — "differently, otherwise".

Rēs secus accidit atque spērābāmus.

Things turned out otherwise than we hoped.

Secus is an adverb: nōn secus ac, not otherwise than, in the same way as; haud secus, in no other way.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

secus comes from the root of sequor "to follow" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): coming after, so less well, otherwise.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: secus
- Say it: secus, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with secus
- Recall: say the Latin for although, then the Latin for otherwise, then say secus again

Before you move on

What does secus mean? ("Differently, otherwise".) Say it once more.

391.5 sīve — or if; whether … or

Before the new one: say the Latin for otherwise, then the Latin for differently.

You'll want to know: sīve

sīve — "or if; whether … or".

Sīve pluit sīve sōl lūcet, ambulō.

Whether it rains or the sun shines, I go for a walk.

Sīve (or seu) = sī + -ve, or: sīve … sīve, whether … or.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sīve is built from sī "if" and the particle -ve "or" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sīve
- Say it: sīve, once more

- Say it: a sentence of your own with sīve
- Recall: say the Latin for otherwise, then the Latin for differently, then say sīve again

Before you move on

What does sīve mean? ("Or if; whether … or".) Say it once more.

Chapter 392

Taking Care

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I am on my guard and take precautions, and talk about a guarantee, a necessity and a good moment.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 392: I can say that I am on my guard and take precautions, and talk about a guarantee, a necessity and a good moment.

392.1 caveō, cavēre — to beware, to be on one's guard

Before the new one: say the Latin for differently, then the Latin for or if.

You'll want to know: caveō, cavēre

caveō, cavēre — "to beware, to be on one's guard".

> In mūrō scrīptum erat: CAVĒ CANEM.
>
> On the wall was written: BEWARE OF THE DOG.

caveō, cavēre, cāvī, cautum. Cavēre + accusative, to beware of; cavē nē + subjunctive, take care not to. English caution and caveat, let him beware.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caveō is inherited from Proto-Italic kawēō* (EtymDB), from a root meaning "to watch, to heed". English caution and caveat come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: caveō, cavēre
- Say it: caveō, cavēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with caveō, cavēre
- Recall: say the Latin for differently, then the Latin for or if, then say caveō, cavēre again

Before you move on

What does caveō, cavēre mean? ("To beware, to be on one's guard".) Say it once more.

392.2 cautiō, cautiōnis — caution; a guarantee, a bond

Before the new one: say the Latin for or if, then the Latin for to beware.

You'll want to know: cautiō, cautiōnis

cautiō, cautiōnis — "caution; a guarantee, a bond".

Sine cautiōne pecūniam nōn crēdit.

He does not lend money without a guarantee.

cautiō, cautiōnis f., from caveō: carefulness, and in law a written security. English caution.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cautiō is the noun built on caveō "to beware, to take care" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English caution comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cautiō, cautiōnis
- Say it: cautiō, cautiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cautiō, cautiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for or if, then the Latin for to beware, then say cautiō, cautiōnis again

Before you move on

What does cautiō, cautiōnis mean? ("Caution; a guarantee, a bond".) Say it once more.

392.3 necessitās, necessitātis — necessity, need; compulsion

Before the new one: say the Latin for to beware, then the Latin for caution.

You'll want to know: necessitās, necessitātis

necessitās, necessitātis — "necessity, need; compulsion".

Necessitās mē coēgit.

Necessity forced me.

necessitās, necessitātis f., the noun of necesse, needful. Necessitās nōn habet lēgem, necessity knows no law. English necessity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

necessitās is built on necesse "needful" (Lewis & Short), which EtymDB takes as ne- "not" with cessus, from cēdō "to give way": what does not give way. English necessity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: necessitās, necessitātis
- Say it: necessitās, necessitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with necessitās, necessitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for to beware, then the Latin for caution, then say necessitās, necessitātis again

Before you move on

What does necessitās, necessitātis mean? ("Necessity, need; compulsion".) Say it once more.

392.4 opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum — convenient, timely, opportune

Before the new one: say the Latin for caution, then the Latin for necessity.

You'll want to know: opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum

opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum — "convenient, timely, opportune".

Tempus opportūnum exspectāmus.

We are waiting for a convenient time.

opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum: said first of a wind blowing towards the harbour, then of anything well timed. English opportune.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

opportūnus is built from ob "towards" and portus "a harbour" (Lewis & Short): of a wind that drives you into port. English opportune and opportunity come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum
- Say it: opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum
- Recall: say the Latin for caution, then the Latin for necessity, then say opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum again

Before you move on

What does opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum mean? ("Convenient, timely, opportune".) Say it once more.

392.5 praecaveō, praecavēre — to take precautions, to guard against beforehand

Before the new one: say the Latin for necessity, then the Latin for convenient.

You'll want to know: praecaveō, praecavēre

praecaveō, praecavēre — "to take precautions, to guard against beforehand".

Ab īnsidiīs praecāvit.

He took precautions against the ambush.

praecaveō, praecavēre, praecāvī, praecautum: prae- beforehand + caveō. English precaution.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praecaveō is built from prae- "before" and caveō "to beware" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English precaution comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praecaveō, praecavēre
- Say it: praecaveō, praecavēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praecaveō, praecavēre
- Recall: say the Latin for necessity, then the Latin for convenient, then say praecaveō, praecavēre again

Before you move on

What does praecaveō, praecavēre mean? ("To take precautions, to guard against beforehand".) Say it once more.

Chapter 393

Making Up My Mind

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I have decided and fixed a day, talk about an aim and a venture, and say that I am trying to do something.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 393: I can say that I have decided and fixed a day, talk about an aim and a venture, and say that I am trying to do something.

393.1 statuō, statuere — to set up; to decide

> Before the new one: say the Latin for convenient, then the Latin for to take precautions.

You'll want to know: statuō, statuere

statuō, statuere — "to set up; to decide".

> Statuī domī manēre.
>
> I decided to stay at home.

statuō, statuere, statuī, statūtum. With an infinitive, to decide to; with the accusative and infinitive, to judge that. English statute.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

statuō is built on status "a standing, a position" (Lewis & Short), from the root of stō "to stand": to make a thing stand. English statute comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: statuō, statuere
- Say it: statuō, statuere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with statuō, statuere
- Recall: say the Latin for convenient, then the Latin for to take precautions, then say statuō, statuere again

Before you move on

What does statuō, statuere mean? ("To set up; to decide".) Say it once more.

393.2 dēstinō, dēstināre — to fix, to intend; to appoint

Before the new one: say the Latin for to take precautions, then the Latin for to set up.

You'll want to know: dēstinō, dēstināre

dēstinō, dēstināre — "to fix, to intend; to appoint".

Hunc diem nūptiīs dēstināvērunt.

They fixed this day for the wedding.

dēstinō, dēstināre, dēstināvī, dēstinātum: to make fast, then to set aside for a purpose. English destine and destination.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēstinō is built from dē and an old verb meaning "to set, to make stand" (EtymDB), from the root of stō "to stand". English destine and destination come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēstinō, dēstināre
- Say it: dēstinō, dēstināre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēstinō, dēstināre
- Recall: say the Latin for to take precautions, then the Latin for to set up, then say dēstinō, dēstināre again

Before you move on

What does dēstinō, dēstināre mean? ("To fix, to intend; to appoint".) Say it once more.

393.3 prōpositum, prōpositī — a plan, a purpose, an aim

Before the new one: say the Latin for to set up, then the Latin for to fix.

You'll want to know: prōpositum, prōpositī

prōpositum, prōpositī — "a plan, a purpose, an aim".

Prōpositum meum est librum scrībere.

My aim is to write a book.

prōpositum, prōpositī n., the participle of prōpōnō, to set before: what you have set before yourself. English purpose goes back to it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōpositum is the participle of prōpōnō "to set before" (Lewis & Short), from prō "before" and pōnō "to put". English purpose goes back to the same verb through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōpositum, prōpositī
- Say it: prōpositum, prōpositī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōpositum, prōpositī
- Recall: say the Latin for to set up, then the Latin for to fix, then say prōpositum, prōpositī again

Before you move on

What does prōpositum, prōpositī mean? ("A plan, a purpose, an aim".) Say it once more.

393.4 inceptum, inceptī — an undertaking, a venture

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fix, then the Latin for a plan.

You'll want to know: inceptum, inceptī

inceptum, inceptī — "an undertaking, a venture".

Inceptum tuum laudō.

I praise your undertaking.

inceptum, inceptī n., the participle of incipiō, to begin: a thing begun.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inceptum is the participle of incipiō "to begin" (Lewis & Short), from in and capiō "to take": a thing taken in hand. English inception comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: inceptum, inceptī
- Say it: inceptum, inceptī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with inceptum, inceptī
- Recall: say the Latin for to fix, then the Latin for a plan, then say inceptum, inceptī again

Before you move on

What does inceptum, inceptī mean? ("An undertaking, a venture".) Say it once more.

393.5 cōnor, cōnārī — to try, to attempt

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plan, then the Latin for an undertaking.

You'll want to know: cōnor, cōnārī

cōnor, cōnārī — "to try, to attempt".

Cōnābar dormīre, sed nōn poteram.

I was trying to sleep, but I could not.

Deponent: cōnor, cōnārī, cōnātus sum + infinitive. Cōnātus, an attempt.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnor is inherited from Proto-Italic kōnāō* "to try, to exert oneself" (EtymDB); its deeper origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnor, cōnārī
- Say it: cōnor, cōnārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnor, cōnārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a plan, then the Latin for an undertaking, then say cōnor, cōnārī again

Before you move on

What does cōnor, cōnārī mean? ("To try, to attempt".) Say it once more.

Chapter 394

Getting Ready

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I prepare, set out, put in order and set about a task, and that I foresee what will come.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 394: I can say that I prepare, set out, put in order and set about a task, and that I foresee what will come.

394.1 apparō, apparāre — to prepare, to get ready

Before the new one: say the Latin for an undertaking, then the Latin for to try.

You'll want to know: apparō, apparāre

apparō, apparāre — "to prepare, to get ready".

> Convīvium magnum apparāvit.
>
> He prepared a great banquet.

apparō, apparāre, apparāvī, apparātum, ad + parō. Apparātus, equipment, splendour; English apparatus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

apparō is built from ad "towards" and parō "to make ready" (Lewis & Short). English apparatus comes from its noun.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: apparō, apparāre
- Say it: apparō, apparāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with apparō, apparāre
- Recall: say the Latin for an undertaking, then the Latin for to try, then say apparō, apparāre again

Before you move on

What does apparō, apparāre mean? ("To prepare, to get ready".) Say it once more.

394.2 dispōnō, dispōnere — to set out, to arrange

Before the new one: say the Latin for to try, then the Latin for to prepare.

You'll want to know: dispōnō, dispōnere

dispōnō, dispōnere — "to set out, to arrange".

Mīlitēs in mūrīs dispositī sunt.

The soldiers were posted along the walls.

dispōnō, dispōnere, disposuī, dispositum: dis- + pōnō, to place here and there. English dispose.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dispōnō is built from dis- "apart" and pōnō "to put" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to put each thing in its own place. English dispose comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dispōnō, dispōnere
- Say it: dispōnō, dispōnere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dispōnō, dispōnere
- Recall: say the Latin for to try, then the Latin for to prepare, then say dispōnō, dispōnere again

Before you move on

What does dispōnō, dispōnere mean? ("To set out, to arrange".) Say it once more.

394.3 ōrdinō, ōrdināre — to set in order, to arrange

Before the new one: say the Latin for to prepare, then the Latin for to set out.

You'll want to know: ōrdinō, ōrdināre

ōrdinō, ōrdināre — "to set in order, to arrange".

Librōs suōs ōrdināvit.

He put his books in order.

ōrdinō, ōrdināre, ōrdināvī, ōrdinātum, built on ōrdō, a row. English ordain and coordinate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrdinō is built on ōrdō, ōrdinis "a row, an order" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English ordain comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrdinō, ōrdināre
- Say it: ōrdinō, ōrdināre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ōrdinō, ōrdināre
- Recall: say the Latin for to prepare, then the Latin for to set out, then say ōrdinō, ōrdināre again

Before you move on

What does ōrdinō, ōrdināre mean? ("To set in order, to arrange".) Say it once more.

394.4 mōlior, mōlīrī — to set about (with effort), to undertake; to plot

Before the new one: say the Latin for to set out, then the Latin for to set in order.

You'll want to know: mōlior, mōlīrī

mōlior, mōlīrī — "to set about (with effort), to undertake; to plot".

Magnam rem mōlītur.

He is setting about a great undertaking.

Deponent: mōlior, mōlīrī, mōlītus sum, built on mōlēs, a mass: to heave a heavy thing. English demolish comes from dēmōlior, to pull down.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mōlior is built on mōlēs "a mass, a heavy weight" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to move a great weight. English demolish comes from its compound dēmōlior.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mōlior, mōlīrī
- Say it: mōlior, mōlīrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mōlior, mōlīrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to set out, then the Latin for to set in order, then say mōlior, mōlīrī again

Before you move on

What does mōlior, mōlīrī mean? ("To set about (with effort), to undertake; to plot".) Say it once more.

394.5 praevideō, praevidēre — to foresee

Before the new one: say the Latin for to set in order, then the Latin for to set about.

You'll want to know: praevideō, praevidēre

praevideō, praevidēre — "to foresee".

Perīculum praevīdit et fūgit.

He foresaw the danger and fled.

praevideō, praevidēre, praevīdī, praevīsum: prae- beforehand + videō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praevideō is built from prae- "before" and videō "to see" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praevideō, praevidēre
- Say it: praevideō, praevidēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praevideō, praevidēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to set in order, then the Latin for to set about, then say praevideō, praevidēre again

Before you move on

What does praevideō, praevidēre mean? ("To foresee".) Say it once more.

Chapter 395

Sooner or Later

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I hurry something on or put it off, that a command was extended, and talk about a delay and what people expect.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 395: I can say that I hurry something on or put it off, that a command was extended, and talk about a delay and what people expect.

395.1 mātūrō, mātūrāre — to hasten; to ripen

Before the new one: say the Latin for to set about, then the Latin for to foresee.

You'll want to know: mātūrō, mātūrāre

mātūrō, mātūrāre — "to hasten; to ripen".

> Iter mātūrāvit.
>
> He hurried on his journey.

mātūrō, mātūrāre, mātūrāvī, mātūrātum, built on mātūrus, ripe, early: to bring on early. English mature.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mātūrō is built on mātūrus "ripe, early, timely" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English mature comes from the adjective.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mātūrō, mātūrāre
- Say it: mātūrō, mātūrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mātūrō, mātūrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to set about, then the Latin for to foresee, then say mātūrō, mātūrāre again

Before you move on

What does mātūrō, mātūrāre mean? ("To hasten; to ripen".) Say it once more.

395.2 differō, differre — to put off; to differ; to spread

Before the new one: say the Latin for to foresee, then the Latin for to hasten.

You'll want to know: differō, differre

differō, differre — "to put off; to differ; to spread".

Rem in crāstinum diem distulimus.

We put the matter off to the next day.

differō, differre, distulī, dīlātum: irregular, like ferō. To put off, and, without an object, to differ. English defer and differ.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

differō is built from dis- "apart" and ferō "to carry" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to carry in different directions, or forward in time. English defer and differ both come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: differō, differre
- Say it: differō, differre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with differō, differre
- Recall: say the Latin for to foresee, then the Latin for to hasten, then say differō, differre again

Before you move on

What does differō, differre mean? ("To put off; to differ; to spread".) Say it once more.

395.3 prōrogō, prōrogāre — to extend, to prolong (a term of office)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hasten, then the Latin for to put off.

You'll want to know: prōrogō, prōrogāre

prōrogō, prōrogāre — "to extend, to prolong (a term of office)".

Senātus imperium eī prōrogāvit.

The senate extended his command.

prōrogō, prōrogāre, prōrogāvī, prōrogātum, built on rogō: to ask the people for more time. English prorogue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōrogō is built from prō "forward" and rogō "to ask" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to ask for a term to run on. English prorogue comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōrogō, prōrogāre
- Say it: prōrogō, prōrogāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōrogō, prōrogāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to hasten, then the Latin for to put off, then say prōrogō, prōrogāre again

Before you move on

What does prōrogō, prōrogāre mean? ("To extend, to prolong (a term of office)".) Say it once more.

395.4 dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis — a putting off, a delay

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put off, then the Latin for to extend.

You'll want to know: dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis

dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis — "a putting off, a delay".

Rēs dīlātiōnem nōn patitur.

The matter allows no delay.

dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis f., the noun of differō, from its supine dīlātum. English dilatory.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīlātiō is the noun made on dīlātum, the supine of differō "to put off" (Lewis & Short), whose -lātum comes from a different old verb than ferō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis
- Say it: dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to put off, then the Latin for to extend, then say dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis mean? ("A putting off, a delay".) Say it once more.

395.5 exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis — expectation, anticipation

Before the new one: say the Latin for to extend, then the Latin for a putting off.

You'll want to know: exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis

exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis — "expectation, anticipation".

Omnēs in magnā exspectātiōne erant.

Everyone was in great expectation.

exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis f., the noun of exspectō. Praeter exspectātiōnem, beyond expectation. English expectation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exspectātiō is the noun built on exspectō "to wait for" (Lewis & Short), from ex "out" and spectō "to look": to look out for. English expectation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis
- Say it: exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to extend, then the Latin for a putting off, then say exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis mean? ("Expectation, anticipation".) Say it once more.

Chapter 396

Making a Promise

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can make a promise and say that I promised something, talk about trust and a formal pledge, and say that I am bound by a favour.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 396: I can make a promise and say that I promised something, talk about trust and a formal pledge, and say that I am bound by a favour.

396.1 prōmissum, prōmissī — a promise

Before the new one: say the Latin for a putting off, then the Latin for expectation.

You'll want to know: prōmissum, prōmissī

prōmissum, prōmissī — "a promise".

> Prōmissum suum servāvit.
>
> He kept his promise.

prōmissum, prōmissī n., the participle of prōmittō: a thing sent forward. Prōmissum servāre, to keep a promise. English promise.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōmissum is the participle of prōmittō "to send forward, to promise" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from prō and mittō "to send". English promise comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōmissum, prōmissī
- Say it: prōmissum, prōmissī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōmissum, prōmissī
- Recall: say the Latin for a putting off, then the Latin for expectation, then say prōmissum, prōmissī again

Before you move on

What does prōmissum, prōmissī mean? ("A promise".) Say it once more.

396.2 polliceor, pollicērī — to promise, to offer

Before the new one: say the Latin for expectation, then the Latin for a promise.

You'll want to know: polliceor, pollicērī

polliceor, pollicērī — "to promise, to offer".

Pater mihi equum pollicitus est.

Father promised me a horse.

Deponent: polliceor, pollicērī, pollicitus sum. Often with the accusative and future infinitive: pollicētur sē ventūrum esse, he promises that he will come.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

polliceor is built from an old prefix por- "forth" and liceor "to bid, to offer a price" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to hold out an offer.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: polliceor, pollicērī
- Say it: polliceor, pollicērī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with polliceor, pollicērī
- Recall: say the Latin for expectation, then the Latin for a promise, then say polliceor, pollicērī again

Before you move on

What does polliceor, pollicērī mean? ("To promise, to offer".) Say it once more.

396.3 fīdūcia, fīdūciae — trust, confidence; a thing held in trust

Before the new one: say the Latin for a promise, then the Latin for to promise.

You'll want to know: fīdūcia, fīdūciae

fīdūcia, fīdūciae — "trust, confidence; a thing held in trust".

Magnam fīdūciam in amīcīs habēbat.

He had great trust in his friends.

fīdūcia, fīdūciae f., built on fīdō, to trust. In law it is a thing handed over in trust. English fiduciary.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīdūcia is built on fīdō "to trust" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the verb behind fīdus "faithful". English fiduciary comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fīdūcia, fīdūciae
- Say it: fīdūcia, fīdūciae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fīdūcia, fīdūciae
- Recall: say the Latin for a promise, then the Latin for to promise, then say fīdūcia, fīdūciae again

Before you move on

What does fīdūcia, fīdūciae mean? ("Trust, confidence; a thing held in trust".) Say it once more.

396.4 spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis — a solemn promise, a pledge; a wager

Before the new one: say the Latin for to promise, then the Latin for trust.

You'll want to know: spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis

spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis — "a solemn promise, a pledge; a wager".

Spōnsiōnem inter sē fēcērunt.

They made a formal wager with each other.

spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis f., built on spondeō, to pledge: the old spoken contract, spondēsne? — spondeō. Also a bet. English sponsor is from the same verb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spōnsiō is the noun built on spondeō "to pledge solemnly" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English sponsor comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis
- Say it: spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to promise, then the Latin for trust, then say spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis again

Before you move on

What does spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis mean? ("A solemn promise, a pledge; a wager".) Say it once more.

396.5 obstringō, obstringere — to bind, to put under an obligation

Before the new one: say the Latin for trust, then the Latin for a solemn promise.

You'll want to know: obstringō, obstringere

obstringō, obstringere — "to bind, to put under an obligation".

Beneficiō mē obstrīnxistī.

You have bound me by your kindness.

obstringō, obstringere, obstrīnxī, obstrictum: to tie fast, then to bind by a promise or a favour.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obstringō is built from ob and stringō "to draw tight, to bind" (Lewis & Short): to tie someone fast to a duty.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obstringō, obstringere
- Say it: obstringō, obstringere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obstringō, obstringere
- Recall: say the Latin for trust, then the Latin for a solemn promise, then say obstringō, obstringere again

Before you move on

What does obstringō, obstringere mean? ("To bind, to put under an obligation".) Say it once more.

396.6 Words from chapters 389–396 — a review

Say the Latin for slavery and to set free.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- slavery, to set free, dutifulness, a load, compliance
- a condition, but if, provided that, only, however much
- even if, although, otherwise, differently, or if
- to beware, caution, necessity, convenient, to take precautions
- to set up, to fix, a plan, an undertaking, to try

- to prepare, to set out, to set in order, to set about, to foresee
- to hasten, to put off, to extend, a putting off, expectation
- a promise, to promise, trust, a solemn promise, to bind

Before you move on

Slavery? (servitūs, servitūtis.) To set free? (manūmittō, manūmittere.) Dutifulness? (pietās, pietātis.) A load? (onus, oneris.) Compliance? (obsequium, obsequiī.) A condition? (condiciō, condiciōnis.) But if? (sīn.) Provided that? (dummodo.) Only? (modo.) However much? (quamvīs.) Even if? (etiamsī.) Although? (tametsī.) Otherwise? (aliōquī.) Differently? (secus.) Or if? (sīve.) To beware? (caveō, cavēre.) Caution? (cautiō, cautiōnis.) Necessity? (necessitās, necessitātis.) Convenient? (opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum.) To take precautions? (praecaveō, praecavēre.) To set up? (statuō, statuere.) To fix? (dēstinō, dēstināre.) A plan? (prōpositum, prōpositī.) An undertaking? (inceptum, inceptī.) To try? (cōnor, cōnārī.) To prepare? (apparō, apparāre.) To set out? (dispōnō, dispōnere.) To set in order? (ōrdinō, ōrdināre.) To set about? (mōlior, mōlīrī.) To foresee? (praevideō, praevidēre.) To hasten? (mātūrō, mātūrāre.) To put off? (differō, differre.) To extend? (prōrogō, prōrogāre.) A putting off? (dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis.) Expectation? (exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis.) A promise? (prōmissum, prōmissī.) To promise? (polliceor, pollicērī.) Trust? (fīdūcia, fīdūciae.) A solemn promise? (spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis.) To bind? (obstringō, obstringere.)

Chapter 397

Oaths and Agreements

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about an oath, an agreement and a pact, and say that people strike a bargain and demand a formal promise.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 397: I can talk about an oath, an agreement and a pact, and say that people strike a bargain and demand a formal promise.

397.1 iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī — an oath

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a solemn promise, then the Latin for to bind.

You'll want to know: iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī

iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī — "an oath".

> Iūsiūrandum dedit sē reditūrum esse.
>
> He gave his oath that he would return.

iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī n.: both parts decline, iūre iūrandō, by oath. Built from iūs and iūrō, to swear.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūsiūrandum is built from iūs "right, law" and iūrandum, the gerundive of iūrō "to swear" (Lewis & Short): a right that must be sworn.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī
- Say it: iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī
- Recall: say the Latin for a solemn promise, then the Latin for to bind, then say iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī again

Before you move on

What does iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī mean? ("An oath".) Say it once more.

397.2 cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis — an agreement, a covenant; an assembly

Before the new one: say the Latin for to bind, then the Latin for an oath.

You'll want to know: cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis

cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis — "an agreement, a covenant; an assembly".

Cōnventiō inter eōs facta est.

An agreement was made between them.

cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis f., built on conveniō, to come together: convenit, it is agreed. English convention.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnventiō is the noun built on conveniō "to come together, to agree" (Lewis & Short). English convention comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis
- Say it: cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to bind, then the Latin for an oath, then say cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis again

Before you move on

What does cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis mean? ("An agreement, a covenant; an assembly".) Say it once more.

397.3 pacīscor, pacīscī — to strike a bargain, to come to terms

Before the new one: say the Latin for an oath, then the Latin for an agreement.

You'll want to know: pacīscor, pacīscī

pacīscor, pacīscī — "to strike a bargain, to come to terms".

Cum hostibus dē pāce pacīscēbantur.

They were bargaining with the enemy about peace.

Deponent: pacīscor, pacīscī, pactus sum, kin to pāx, peace. Cum aliquō pacīscī, to strike a bargain with someone.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pacīscor is built on an old verb pacō "to come to terms" with the ending -scō (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), and belongs with pāx "peace": to fix terms.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pacīscor, pacīscī
- Say it: pacīscor, pacīscī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pacīscor, pacīscī
- Recall: say the Latin for an oath, then the Latin for an agreement, then say pacīscor, pacīscī again

Before you move on

What does pacīscor, pacīscī mean? ("To strike a bargain, to come to terms".) Say it once more.

397.4 pactum, pactī — a pact, an agreement

Before the new one: say the Latin for an agreement, then the Latin for to strike a bargain.

You'll want to know: pactum, pactī

pactum, pactī — "a pact, an agreement".

Pactum servāre dēbēmus.

We must keep the pact.

pactum, pactī n., the participle of pacīscor: a thing agreed. Quō pactō?, in what way? English pact.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pactum is the participle of pacīscor "to make a bargain" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a thing agreed. English pact comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pactum, pactī
- Say it: pactum, pactī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pactum, pactī
- Recall: say the Latin for an agreement, then the Latin for to strike a bargain, then say pactum, pactī again

Before you move on

What does pactum, pactī mean? ("A pact, an agreement".) Say it once more.

397.5 stipulor, stipulārī — to bargain for, to demand a formal promise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to strike a bargain, then the Latin for a pact.

You'll want to know: stipulor, stipulārī

stipulor, stipulārī — "to bargain for, to demand a formal promise".

Stipulātus est ut pecūnia redderētur.

He stipulated that the money be returned.

Deponent: stipulor, stipulārī, stipulātus sum. In Roman law the stipulātiō was a contract made by question and answer. English stipulate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of stipulor is not settled: Lewis & Short give no sure account, and EtymDB has no parent for it. English stipulate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: stipulor, stipulārī
- Say it: stipulor, stipulārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with stipulor, stipulārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to strike a bargain, then the Latin for a pact, then say stipulor, stipulārī again

Before you move on

What does stipulor, stipulārī mean? ("To bargain for, to demand a formal promise".) Say it once more.

Chapter 398

Keeping My Word

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone broke or kept his word and bound himself, and that an agreement holds good or comes to nothing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 398: I can say that someone broke or kept his word and bound himself, and that an agreement holds good or comes to nothing.

398.1 violō, violāre — to violate, to break; to wrong

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pact, then the Latin for to bargain for.

You'll want to know: violō, violāre

violō, violāre — "to violate, to break; to wrong".

> Hostēs foedus violāvērunt.
>
> The enemy broke the treaty.

violō, violāre, violāvī, violātum, kin to vīs, force. Fidem violāre, to break one's word. English violate and violence.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

violō is built on vīs "force" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to treat with force. English violate and violence come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: violō, violāre
- Say it: violō, violāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with violō, violāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a pact, then the Latin for to bargain for, then say violō, violāre again

Before you move on

What does violō, violāre mean? ("To violate, to break; to wrong".) Say it once more.

398.2 praestō, praestāre — to make good, to fulfil; to excel

Before the new one: say the Latin for to bargain for, then the Latin for to violate.

You'll want to know: praestō, praestāre

praestō, praestāre — "to make good, to fulfil; to excel".

Fidem praestitit.

He kept his word.

praestō, praestāre, praestitī, praestitum. Fidem praestāre, to make one's word good; with the dative, to stand out above: omnibus praestat.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praestō is built from prae "before, in front" and stō "to stand" (Lewis & Short): to stand out in front, then to stand good for a promise.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praestō, praestāre
- Say it: praestō, praestāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praestō, praestāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to bargain for, then the Latin for to violate, then say praestō, praestāre again

Before you move on

What does praestō, praestāre mean? ("To make good, to fulfil; to excel".) Say it once more.

398.3 obligō, obligāre — to oblige, to bind

Before the new one: say the Latin for to violate, then the Latin for to make good.

You'll want to know: obligō, obligāre

obligō, obligāre — "to oblige, to bind".

Prōmissō mē obligāvī.

I bound myself by a promise.

obligō, obligāre, obligāvī, obligātum, ob + ligō, to tie. English oblige and obligation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obligō is built from ob and ligō "to tie" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to tie someone to a duty. English oblige and obligation come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obligō, obligāre
- Say it: obligō, obligāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obligō, obligāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to violate, then the Latin for to make good, then say obligō, obligāre again

Before you move on

What does obligō, obligāre mean? ("To oblige, to bind".) Say it once more.

398.4 ratus, rata, ratum — fixed, settled, valid

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make good, then the Latin for to oblige.

You'll want to know: ratus, rata, ratum

ratus, rata, ratum — "fixed, settled, valid".

Pactum ratum est.

The pact is valid.

ratus, rata, ratum, the participle of reor, to reckon. Ratum habēre, to ratify; prō ratā parte, in proportion, gives English pro rata.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ratus is the participle of reor "to reckon, to think" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): reckoned, so settled. English pro rata and rate come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ratus, rata, ratum
- Say it: ratus, rata, ratum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ratus, rata, ratum
- Recall: say the Latin for to make good, then the Latin for to oblige, then say ratus, rata, ratum again

Before you move on

What does ratus, rata, ratum mean? ("Fixed, settled, valid".) Say it once more.

398.5 irritus, irrita, irritum — void, invalid; in vain

Before the new one: say the Latin for to oblige, then the Latin for fixed.

You'll want to know: irritus, irrita, irritum

irritus, irrita, irritum — "void, invalid; in vain".

Cōnsilia eius irrita fuērunt.

His plans came to nothing.

irritus, irrita, irritum (also inritus): in- not + ratus, fixed. Irritum fierī, to come to nothing.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

irritus is built from in- "not" and ratus "fixed, valid" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): not settled, so void.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: irritus, irrita, irritum
- Say it: irritus, irrita, irritum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with irritus, irrita, irritum
- Recall: say the Latin for to oblige, then the Latin for fixed, then say irritus, irrita, irritum again

Before you move on

What does irritus, irrita, irritum mean? ("Void, invalid; in vain".) Say it once more.

Chapter 399

Trust and Betrayal

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about bad faith and a treacherous friend, a trick and a deception, and call the gods to witness.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 399: I can talk about bad faith and a treacherous friend, a trick and a deception, and call the gods to witness.

399.1 perfidia, perfidiae — bad faith, treachery

> Before the new one: say the Latin for fixed, then the Latin for void.

You'll want to know: perfidia, perfidiae

perfidia, perfidiae — "bad faith, treachery".

> Perfidiam eius omnēs nōvērunt.
>
> Everyone knew of his treachery.

perfidia, perfidiae f., per- past + fidēs, faith: going past one's word. English perfidy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perfidia is built on perfidus "faithless" (Lewis & Short), from per- "past, beyond" and fidēs "faith": going beyond one's word. English perfidy comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: perfidia, perfidiae
- Say it: perfidia, perfidiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with perfidia, perfidiae
- Recall: say the Latin for fixed, then the Latin for void, then say perfidia, perfidiae again

Before you move on

What does perfidia, perfidiae mean? ("Bad faith, treachery".) Say it once more.

399.2 perfidus, perfida, perfidum — treacherous, faithless

Before the new one: say the Latin for void, then the Latin for bad faith.

You'll want to know: perfidus, perfida, perfidum

perfidus, perfida, perfidum — "treacherous, faithless".

Perfidō amīcō nēmō crēdit.

Nobody trusts a faithless friend.

perfidus, perfida, perfidum: the opposite of fīdus, faithful.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perfidus is built from per- "past, beyond" and fidēs "faith" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): one who goes beyond his word.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: perfidus, perfida, perfidum
- Say it: perfidus, perfida, perfidum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with perfidus, perfida, perfidum
- Recall: say the Latin for void, then the Latin for bad faith, then say perfidus, perfida, perfidum again

Before you move on

What does perfidus, perfida, perfidum mean? ("Treacherous, faithless".) Say it once more.

399.3 fallācia, fallāciae — a deceit, a trick

Before the new one: say the Latin for bad faith, then the Latin for treacherous.

You'll want to know: fallācia, fallāciae

fallācia, fallāciae — "a deceit, a trick".

Fallāciīs eius nōn crēdō.

I do not trust his tricks.

fallācia, fallāciae f., built on fallō, to deceive. A favourite word for a slave's trick in comedy. English fallacy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fallācia is built on fallāx "deceitful" (EtymDB), which comes from fallō "to deceive" (Lewis & Short). English fallacy comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fallācia, fallāciae
- Say it: fallācia, fallāciae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fallācia, fallāciae
- Recall: say the Latin for bad faith, then the Latin for treacherous, then say fallācia, fallāciae again

Before you move on

What does fallācia, fallāciae mean? ("A deceit, a trick".) Say it once more.

399.4 dēcipiō, dēcipere — to deceive, to cheat

Before the new one: say the Latin for treacherous, then the Latin for a deceit.

You'll want to know: dēcipiō, dēcipere

dēcipiō, dēcipere — "to deceive, to cheat".

Mercātor malus multōs dēcēpit.

The dishonest merchant cheated many people.

dēcipiō, dēcipere, dēcēpī, dēceptum, dē + capiō: to catch out. English deceive and deception.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēcipiō is built from dē and capiō "to take, to catch" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to catch someone out. English deceive comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēcipiō, dēcipere
- Say it: dēcipiō, dēcipere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēcipiō, dēcipere
- Recall: say the Latin for treacherous, then the Latin for a deceit, then say dēcipiō, dēcipere again

Before you move on

What does dēcipiō, dēcipere mean? ("To deceive, to cheat".) Say it once more.

399.5 testor, testārī — to call to witness; to testify

Before the new one: say the Latin for a deceit, then the Latin for to deceive.

You'll want to know: testor, testārī

testor, testārī — "to call to witness; to testify".

Deōs testor mē vērum dīcere.

I call the gods to witness that I speak the truth.

Deponent: testor, testārī, testātus sum, built on testis, a witness. Testāmentum, a will, is its noun.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

testor is built on testis "a witness" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English testament and testify come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: testor, testārī
- Say it: testor, testārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with testor, testārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a deceit, then the Latin for to deceive, then say testor, testārī again

Before you move on

What does testor, testārī mean? ("To call to witness; to testify".) Say it once more.

Chapter 400

Teaching

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone teaches, educates, trains and instructs a pupil, and tells him what to do.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 400: I can say that someone teaches, educates, trains and instructs a pupil, and tells him what to do.

400.1 doceō, docēre — to teach

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to deceive, then the Latin for to call to witness.

You'll want to know: doceō, docēre

doceō, docēre — "to teach".

> Magister puerōs litterās docet.
>
> The teacher teaches the boys their letters.

doceō, docēre, docuī; its participle follows in a later lesson. Two accusatives, the person and the thing: puerōs litterās docet. English doctor, first a teacher, and docile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

doceō is inherited from Proto-Italic dokeō* (EtymDB), usually taken as a causative beside decet "it is fitting": to make someone take a thing in. English doctor and doctrine come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: doceō, docēre
- Say it: doceō, docēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with doceō, docēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to deceive, then the Latin for to call to witness, then say doceō, docēre again

Before you move on

What does doceō, docēre mean? ("To teach".) Say it once more.

400.2 ērudiō, ērudīre — to educate, to polish

Before the new one: say the Latin for to call to witness, then the Latin for to teach.

You'll want to know: ērudiō, ērudīre

ērudiō, ērudīre — "to educate, to polish".

Pater fīlium dīligenter ērudīvit.

The father educated his son carefully.

ērudiō, ērudīre, ērudīvī; its participle follows in a later lesson. Ē + rudis, rough: to take the roughness out. English erudite.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ērudiō is built from ē "out of" and rudis "rough, untaught" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to bring out of the rough state. English erudite comes from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ērudiō, ērudīre
- Say it: ērudiō, ērudīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ērudiō, ērudīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to call to witness, then the Latin for to teach, then say ērudiō, ērudīre again

Before you move on

What does ērudiō, ērudīre mean? ("To educate, to polish".) Say it once more.

400.3 īnstituō, īnstituere — to train up, to instruct; to set up

Before the new one: say the Latin for to teach, then the Latin for to educate.

You'll want to know: īnstituō, īnstituere

īnstituō, īnstituere — "to train up, to instruct; to set up".

Puerōs ad virtūtem īnstituēbat.

He trained the boys in virtue.

īnstituō, īnstituere, īnstituī, īnstitūtum, in + statuō: to set up, then to set a young mind in order. Īnstitūtum is its noun.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnstituō is built from in and statuō "to set, to place" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the vowel weakened inside the compound. English institute comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnstituō, īnstituere
- Say it: īnstituō, īnstituere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnstituō, īnstituere
- Recall: say the Latin for to teach, then the Latin for to educate, then say īnstituō, īnstituere again

Before you move on

What does īnstituō, īnstituere mean? ("To train up, to instruct; to set up".) Say it once more.

400.4 īnstruō, īnstruere — to equip, to draw up; to instruct

Before the new one: say the Latin for to educate, then the Latin for to train up.

You'll want to know: īnstruō, īnstruere

īnstruō, īnstruere — "to equip, to draw up; to instruct".

Imperātor aciem īnstrūxit.

The general drew up his battle line.

īnstruō, īnstruere, īnstrūxī, īnstrūctum: to build in, to equip, then to fit someone out with knowledge. English instruct and instrument.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnstruō is built from in and struō "to pile up, to build" (Lewis & Short). English instruct and instrument come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnstruō, īnstruere
- Say it: īnstruō, īnstruere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnstruō, īnstruere
- Recall: say the Latin for to educate, then the Latin for to train up, then say īnstruō, īnstruere again

Before you move on

What does īnstruō, īnstruere mean? ("To equip, to draw up; to instruct".) Say it once more.

400.5 praecipiō, praecipere — to instruct, to advise; to take beforehand

Before the new one: say the Latin for to train up, then the Latin for to equip.

You'll want to know: praecipiō, praecipere

praecipiō, praecipere — "to instruct, to advise; to take beforehand".

Medicus mihi praecēpit ut quiēscerem.

The doctor told me to rest.

praecipiō, praecipere, praecēpī; prae + capiō: to take beforehand, then to lay down a rule: praecipiō tibi ut, I instruct you to. English precept.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praecipiō is built from prae "before" and capiō "to take" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to take in advance, then to tell in advance. English precept comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praecipiō, praecipere
- Say it: praecipiō, praecipere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praecipiō, praecipere
- Recall: say the Latin for to train up, then the Latin for to equip, then say praecipiō, praecipere again

Before you move on

What does praecipiō, praecipere mean? ("To instruct, to advise; to take beforehand".) Say it once more.

Chapter 401

At School

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the slave who walks a boy to school, a teacher, the grammar master, the primary teacher and a schoolfellow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 401: I can name the slave who walks a boy to school, a teacher, the grammar master, the primary teacher and a schoolfellow.

401.1 paedagōgus, paedagōgī — a slave who takes a boy to school; a tutor

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to equip, then the Latin for to instruct.

You'll want to know: paedagōgus, paedagōgī

paedagōgus, paedagōgī — "a slave who takes a boy to school; a tutor".

> Paedagōgus puerum ad scholam dūcit.
>
> The slave-tutor takes the boy to school.

paedagōgus, paedagōgī m., borrowed from Greek paidagōgos, child-leader. English pedagogue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

paedagōgus was borrowed from Greek paidagōgos "child-leader" (EtymDB), built from pais "a child" and agōgos "leading". English pedagogue comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: paedagōgus, paedagōgī
- Say it: paedagōgus, paedagōgī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with paedagōgus, paedagōgī
- Recall: say the Latin for to equip, then the Latin for to instruct, then say paedagōgus, paedagōgī again

Before you move on

What does paedagōgus, paedagōgī mean? ("A slave who takes a boy to school; a tutor".) Say it once more.

401.2 praeceptor, praeceptōris — a teacher, an instructor

Before the new one: say the Latin for to instruct, then the Latin for a slave who takes a boy to school.

You'll want to know: praeceptor, praeceptōris

praeceptor, praeceptōris — "a teacher, an instructor".

Praeceptor discipulōs suōs laudāvit.

The teacher praised his pupils.

praeceptor, praeceptōris m., built on praecipiō: the one who lays down rules. English preceptor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praeceptor is built on praecipiō "to instruct" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -tor of the one who does it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praeceptor, praeceptōris
- Say it: praeceptor, praeceptōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praeceptor, praeceptōris
- Recall: say the Latin for to instruct, then the Latin for a slave who takes a boy to school, then say praeceptor, praeceptōris again

Before you move on

What does praeceptor, praeceptōris mean? ("A teacher, an instructor".) Say it once more.

401.3 grammaticus, grammaticī — a teacher of literature and grammar

Before the new one: say the Latin for a slave who takes a boy to school, then the Latin for a teacher.

You'll want to know: grammaticus, grammaticī

grammaticus, grammaticī — "a teacher of literature and grammar".

Apud grammaticum poētās legēbāmus.

With the grammar master we read the poets.

grammaticus, grammaticī m., borrowed from Greek grammatikos. After the first school, a boy went to the grammaticus to read the poets.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

grammaticus was borrowed from Greek grammatikos "skilled in letters" (EtymDB), built on gramma "a letter". English grammar comes from the same Greek family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: grammaticus, grammaticī
- Say it: grammaticus, grammaticī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with grammaticus, grammaticī
- Recall: say the Latin for a slave who takes a boy to school, then the Latin for a teacher, then say grammaticus, grammaticī again

Before you move on

What does grammaticus, grammaticī mean? ("A teacher of literature and grammar".) Say it once more.

401.4 litterātor, litterātōris — an elementary teacher of letters

Before the new one: say the Latin for a teacher, then the Latin for a teacher of literature and grammar.

You'll want to know: litterātor, litterātōris

litterātor, litterātōris — "an elementary teacher of letters".

Litterātor puerōs legere et scrībere docet.

The elementary teacher teaches the boys to read and write.

litterātor, litterātōris m., built on littera, a letter. He was also called lūdī magister.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

litterātor is built on littera "a letter" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -tor of the one who does it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: litterātor, litterātōris
- Say it: litterātor, litterātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with litterātor, litterātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a teacher, then the Latin for a teacher of literature and grammar, then say litterātor, litterātōris again

Before you move on

What does litterātor, litterātōris mean? ("An elementary teacher of letters".) Say it once more.

401.5 condiscipulus, condiscipulī — a schoolfellow, a fellow pupil

Before the new one: say the Latin for a teacher of literature and grammar, then the Latin for an elementary teacher of letters.

You'll want to know: condiscipulus, condiscipulī

condiscipulus, condiscipulī — "a schoolfellow, a fellow pupil".

Condiscipulī in eādem scholā sedēbant.

The schoolfellows sat in the same school.

condiscipulus, condiscipulī m., con- with + discipulus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

condiscipulus is built from con- "with" and discipulus "a pupil" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: condiscipulus, condiscipulī
- Say it: condiscipulus, condiscipulī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with condiscipulus, condiscipulī
- Recall: say the Latin for a teacher of literature and grammar, then the Latin for an elementary teacher of letters, then say condiscipulus, condiscipulī again

Before you move on

What does condiscipulus, condiscipulī mean? ("A schoolfellow, a fellow pupil".) Say it once more.

Chapter 402

Learning by Heart

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I learn something by heart or thoroughly, that I study and rehearse it, and that I remember it.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 402: I can say that I learn something by heart or thoroughly, that I study and rehearse it, and that I remember it.

402.1 ēdiscō, ēdiscere — to learn by heart

Before the new one: say the Latin for an elementary teacher of letters, then the Latin for a schoolfellow.

You'll want to know: ēdiscō, ēdiscere

ēdiscō, ēdiscere — "to learn by heart".

Puerī carmina poētae ēdiscunt.

The boys learn the poet's poems by heart.

ēdiscō, ēdiscere, ēdidicī: ē + discō, to learn out to the end.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēdiscō is built from ē "out, to the end" and discō "to learn" (Lewis & Short): to learn right through.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēdiscō, ēdiscere
- Say it: ēdiscō, ēdiscere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēdiscō, ēdiscere
- Recall: say the Latin for an elementary teacher of letters, then the Latin for a schoolfellow, then say ēdiscō, ēdiscere again

Before you move on

What does ēdiscō, ēdiscere mean? ("To learn by heart".) Say it once more.

402.2 perdiscō, perdiscere — to learn thoroughly

Before the new one: say the Latin for a schoolfellow, then the Latin for to learn by heart.

You'll want to know: perdiscō, perdiscere

perdiscō, perdiscere — "to learn thoroughly".

Artem medicīnae perdidicit.

He learned the art of medicine thoroughly.

perdiscō, perdiscere, perdidicī: per- through + discō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perdiscō is built from per- "through, thoroughly" and discō "to learn" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: perdiscō, perdiscere
- Say it: perdiscō, perdiscere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with perdiscō, perdiscere
- Recall: say the Latin for a schoolfellow, then the Latin for to learn by heart, then say perdiscō, perdiscere again

Before you move on

What does perdiscō, perdiscere mean? ("To learn thoroughly".) Say it once more.

402.3 studeō, studēre — to be eager (for); to study

Before the new one: say the Latin for to learn by heart, then the Latin for to learn thoroughly.

You'll want to know: studeō, studēre

studeō, studēre — "to be eager (for); to study".

Litterīs studet.

He is devoted to literature.

studeō, studēre, studuī + dative: litterīs studēre, to give oneself to literature. Studium is its noun. English student and study.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

studeō is usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to push, to strike" (EtymDB): to press on towards a thing. English student and study come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: studeō, studēre
- Say it: studeō, studēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with studeō, studēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to learn by heart, then the Latin for to learn thoroughly, then say studeō, studēre again

Before you move on

What does studeō, studēre mean? ("To be eager (for); to study".) Say it once more.

402.4 meditor, meditārī — to think over; to rehearse, to practise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to learn thoroughly, then the Latin for to be eager.

You'll want to know: meditor, meditārī

meditor, meditārī — "to think over; to rehearse, to practise".

Ōrātiōnem tōtam noctem meditābātur.

He rehearsed his speech all night.

Deponent: meditor, meditārī, meditātus sum. To think over, and to practise, like a speaker rehearsing. English meditate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

meditor is usually traced to the same root as medeor "to heal" (Lewis & Short compare medeor and remedium), a root meaning "to take fitting measures". English meditate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: meditor, meditārī
- Say it: meditor, meditārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with meditor, meditārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to learn thoroughly, then the Latin for to be eager, then say meditor, meditārī again

Before you move on

What does meditor, meditārī mean? ("To think over; to rehearse, to practise".) Say it once more.

402.5 recordor, recordārī — to call to mind, to remember

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be eager, then the Latin for to think over.

You'll want to know: recordor, recordārī

recordor, recordārī — "to call to mind, to remember".

Diem illum saepe recordor.

I often recall that day.

Deponent: recordor, recordārī, recordātus sum, built on cor, heart: to bring back to the heart. English record comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

recordor is built from re- "back" and cor, cordis "heart" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the seat of memory for the Romans. English record comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: recordor, recordārī
- Say it: recordor, recordārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with recordor, recordārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to be eager, then the Latin for to think over, then say recordor, recordārī again

Before you move on

What does recordor, recordārī mean? ("To call to mind, to remember".) Say it once more.

Chapter 403

Learned and Unlearned

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can call someone learned or unlearned, educated or knowing, and say that someone lacks experience.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 403: I can call someone learned or unlearned, educated or knowing, and say that someone lacks experience.

403.1 doctus, docta, doctum — learned, skilled

Before the new one: say the Latin for to think over, then the Latin for to call to mind.

You'll want to know: doctus, docta, doctum

doctus, docta, doctum — "learned, skilled".

Vir doctus et prūdēns est.

He is a learned and wise man.

doctus, docta, doctum, the participle of doceō: taught.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

doctus is the participle of doceō "to teach" (Lewis & Short): one who has been taught.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: doctus, docta, doctum
- Say it: doctus, docta, doctum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with doctus, docta, doctum
- Recall: say the Latin for to think over, then the Latin for to call to mind, then say doctus, docta, doctum again

Before you move on

What does doctus, docta, doctum mean? ("Learned, skilled".) Say it once more.

403.2 indoctus, indocta, indoctum — unlearned, untaught

Before the new one: say the Latin for to call to mind, then the Latin for learned.

You'll want to know: indoctus, indocta, indoctum

indoctus, indocta, indoctum — "unlearned, untaught".

Indoctus est, sed nōn stultus.

He is unlearned, but not foolish.

indoctus, indocta, indoctum: in- not + doctus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

indoctus is built from in- "not" and doctus "taught" (Lewis & Short), the participle of doceō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: indoctus, indocta, indoctum
- Say it: indoctus, indocta, indoctum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with indoctus, indocta, indoctum
- Recall: say the Latin for to call to mind, then the Latin for learned, then say indoctus, indocta, indoctum again

Before you move on

What does indoctus, indocta, indoctum mean? ("Unlearned, untaught".) Say it once more.

403.3 ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum — educated, learned

Before the new one: say the Latin for learned, then the Latin for unlearned.

You'll want to know: ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum

ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum — "educated, learned".

Fēmina ērudīta multōs librōs lēgerat.

The educated woman had read many books.

ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum, the participle of ērudiō. English erudite.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ērudītus is the participle of ērudiō "to educate" (Lewis & Short), from ē and rudis "rough". English erudite comes from it (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum
- Say it: ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum
- Recall: say the Latin for learned, then the Latin for unlearned, then say ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum again

Before you move on

What does ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum mean? ("Educated, learned".) Say it once more.

403.4 sciēns, scientis — knowing; on purpose; skilled (in)

Before the new one: say the Latin for unlearned, then the Latin for educated.

You'll want to know: sciēns, scientis

sciēns, scientis — "knowing; on purpose; skilled (in)".

Sciēns hoc fēcit, nōn imprūdēns.

He did this knowingly, not by mistake.

sciēns, scientis, the present participle of sciō: knowing, on purpose. With the genitive, skilled in: bellī sciēns.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sciēns is the present participle of sciō "to know" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English science and conscience come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sciēns, scientis
- Say it: sciēns, scientis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sciēns, scientis
- Recall: say the Latin for unlearned, then the Latin for educated, then say sciēns, scientis again

Before you move on

What does sciēns, scientis mean? ("Knowing; on purpose; skilled (in)".) Say it once more.

403.5 imperītus, imperīta, imperītum — inexperienced, unskilled

Before the new one: say the Latin for educated, then the Latin for knowing.

You'll want to know: imperītus, imperīta, imperītum

imperītus, imperīta, imperītum — "inexperienced, unskilled".

Imperītus nauta nāvem frēgit.

The unskilled sailor wrecked the ship.

imperītus, imperīta, imperītum: the opposite of the word for experienced, with in-, not. With the genitive: bellī imperītus, without experience of war.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

imperītus is built from in- "not" and perītus "experienced" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which comes from the root of experior "to try, to test".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: imperītus, imperīta, imperītum
- Say it: imperītus, imperīta, imperītum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with imperītus, imperīta, imperītum
- Recall: say the Latin for educated, then the Latin for knowing, then say imperītus, imperīta, imperītum again

Before you move on

What does imperītus, imperīta, imperītum mean? ("Inexperienced, unskilled".) Say it once more.

Chapter 404

What Pupils Studied

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the teacher of speaking, rhetoric, logic and geometry, and the first elements of a subject.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 404: I can name the teacher of speaking, rhetoric, logic and geometry, and the first elements of a subject.

404.1 rhētor, rhētoris — a teacher of public speaking

Before the new one: say the Latin for knowing, then the Latin for inexperienced.

You'll want to know: rhētor, rhētoris

rhētor, rhētoris — "a teacher of public speaking".

> Iuvenēs apud rhētorem dīcere discunt.
>
> Young men learn to speak in public with a rhetoric teacher.

rhētor, rhētoris m., borrowed from Greek rhētōr, a speaker. The last stage of a Roman education was the school of the rhētor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rhētor was borrowed from Greek rhētōr "a public speaker" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English rhetor and rhetoric come from the same Greek word.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rhētor, rhētoris
- Say it: rhētor, rhētoris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rhētor, rhētoris
- Recall: say the Latin for knowing, then the Latin for inexperienced, then say rhētor, rhētoris again

Before you move on

What does rhētor, rhētoris mean? ("A teacher of public speaking".) Say it once more.

404.2 rhētorica, rhētoricae — rhetoric, the art of speaking

Before the new one: say the Latin for inexperienced, then the Latin for a teacher of public speaking.

You'll want to know: rhētorica, rhētoricae

rhētorica, rhētoricae — "rhetoric, the art of speaking".

Rhētoricam in scholā didicit.

He learned rhetoric at school.

rhētorica, rhētoricae f., also ars rhētorica. English rhetoric.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rhētorica was borrowed from Greek rhētorikē "the art of speaking" (EtymDB), built on rhētōr "a speaker". English rhetoric comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rhētorica, rhētoricae
- Say it: rhētorica, rhētoricae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rhētorica, rhētoricae
- Recall: say the Latin for inexperienced, then the Latin for a teacher of public speaking, then say rhētorica, rhētoricae again

Before you move on

What does rhētorica, rhētoricae mean? ("Rhetoric, the art of speaking".) Say it once more.

404.3 dialectica, dialecticae — logic, dialectic

Before the new one: say the Latin for a teacher of public speaking, then the Latin for rhetoric.

You'll want to know: dialectica, dialecticae

dialectica, dialecticae — "logic, dialectic".

Dialectica docet vēra ā falsīs distinguere.

Logic teaches us to tell true from false.

dialectica, dialecticae f., from Greek dialektikē, the art of discussion: the logic of the philosophers. English dialectic.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dialectica was borrowed from Greek dialektikē "the art of discussion" (Lewis & Short), built on a verb meaning "to talk things through". English dialectic comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dialectica, dialecticae
- Say it: dialectica, dialecticae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dialectica, dialecticae
- Recall: say the Latin for a teacher of public speaking, then the Latin for rhetoric, then say dialectica, dialecticae again

Before you move on

What does dialectica, dialecticae mean? ("Logic, dialectic".) Say it once more.

404.4 geōmetria, geōmetriae — geometry

Before the new one: say the Latin for rhetoric, then the Latin for logic.

You'll want to know: geōmetria, geōmetriae

geōmetria, geōmetriae — "geometry".

Geōmetria terrae mēnsūram docet.

Geometry teaches the measuring of land.

geōmetria, geōmetriae f., from Greek geōmetria, land-measuring: gē, earth + metron, a measure. English geometry.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

geōmetria was borrowed from Greek geōmetria "land-measuring" (EtymDB), built from gē "earth" and metron "a measure". English geometry comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: geōmetria, geōmetriae
- Say it: geōmetria, geōmetriae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with geōmetria, geōmetriae
- Recall: say the Latin for rhetoric, then the Latin for logic, then say geōmetria, geōmetriae again

Before you move on

What does geōmetria, geōmetriae mean? ("Geometry".) Say it once more.

404.5 elementum, elementī — a first principle, an element; (plural) the ABC

Before the new one: say the Latin for logic, then the Latin for geometry.

You'll want to know: elementum, elementī

elementum, elementī — "a first principle, an element; (plural) the ABC".

Puer prīma elementa discit.

The boy is learning his ABC.

elementum, elementī n. In the plural, elementa are the letters, the first steps of any subject, and the four elements: earth, water, air and fire. English element.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of elementum is not settled: Lewis & Short connect it with alō "to nourish", and EtymDB pairs it with Greek stoicheion "an element", the word it translates. English element comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: elementum, elementī
- Say it: elementum, elementī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with elementum, elementī
- Recall: say the Latin for logic, then the Latin for geometry, then say elementum, elementī again

Before you move on

What does elementum, elementī mean? ("A first principle, an element; (plural) the ABC".) Say it once more.

404.6 Words from chapters 397–404 — a review

Say the Latin for an oath and an agreement.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an oath, an agreement, to strike a bargain, a pact, to bargain for
- to violate, to make good, to oblige, fixed, void
- bad faith, treacherous, a deceit, to deceive, to call to witness
- to teach, to educate, to train up, to equip, to instruct
- a slave who takes a boy to school, a teacher, a teacher of literature and grammar, an elementary teacher of letters, a schoolfellow

- to learn by heart, to learn thoroughly, to be eager, to think over, to call to mind
- learned, unlearned, educated, knowing, inexperienced
- a teacher of public speaking, rhetoric, logic, geometry, a first principle

Before you move on

An oath? (iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī.) An agreement? (cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis.) To strike a bargain? (pacīscor, pacīscī.) A pact? (pactum, pactī.) To bargain for? (stipulor, stipulārī.) To violate? (violō, violāre.) To make good? (praestō, praestāre.) To oblige? (obligō, obligāre.) Fixed? (ratus, rata, ratum.) Void? (irritus, irrita, irritum.) Bad faith? (perfidia, perfidiae.) Treacherous? (perfidus, perfida, perfidum.) A deceit? (fallācia, fallāciae.) To deceive? (dēcipiō, dēcipere.) To call to witness? (testor, testārī.) To teach? (doceō, docēre.) To educate? (ērudiō, ērudīre.) To train up? (īnstituō, īnstituere.) To equip? (īnstruō, īnstruere.) To instruct? (praecipiō, praecipere.) A slave who takes a boy to school? (paedagōgus, paedagōgī.) A teacher? (praeceptor, praeceptōris.) A teacher of literature and grammar? (grammaticus, grammaticī.) An elementary teacher of letters? (litterātor, litterātōris.) A schoolfellow? (condiscipulus, condiscipulī.) To learn by heart? (ēdiscō, ēdiscere.) To learn thoroughly? (perdiscō, perdiscere.) To be eager? (studeō, studēre.) To think over? (meditor, meditārī.) To call to mind? (recordor, recordārī.) Learned? (doctus, docta, doctum.) Unlearned? (indoctus, indocta, indoctum.) Educated? (ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum.) Knowing? (sciēns, scientis.) Inexperienced? (imperītus, imperīta, imperītum.) A teacher of public speaking? (rhētor, rhētoris.) Rhetoric? (rhētorica, rhētoricae.) Logic? (dialectica, dialecticae.) Geometry? (geōmetria, geōmetriae.) A first principle? (elementum, elementī.)

Chapter 405

Counting and Dictation

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a counting board and pebbles for counting, listing things one by one, dictating to pupils and a set task.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 405: I can talk about a counting board and pebbles for counting, listing things one by one, dictating to pupils and a set task.

405.1 abacus, abacī — a counting board; a sideboard

> Before the new one: say the Latin for geometry, then the Latin for a first principle.

You'll want to know: abacus, abacī

abacus, abacī — "a counting board; a sideboard".

> Puer in abacō numerōs computat.
>
> The boy works out sums on the counting board.

abacus, abacī m., borrowed from Greek abax, a board. Pebbles moved along lines on the board. English abacus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

abacus was borrowed from Greek abax, abakos "a board, a counting table" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English took it over as abacus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: abacus, abacī
- Say it: abacus, abacī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with abacus, abacī
- Recall: say the Latin for geometry, then the Latin for a first principle, then say abacus, abacī again

Before you move on

What does abacus, abacī mean? ("A counting board; a sideboard".) Say it once more.

405.2 calculus, calculī — a pebble, a counter; a reckoning

Before the new one: say the Latin for a first principle, then the Latin for a counting board.

You'll want to know: calculus, calculī

calculus, calculī — "a pebble, a counter; a reckoning".

Calculīs numerābat.

He was counting with pebbles.

calculus, calculī m., a little stone. Calculum pōnere, to reckon. English calculate and calculus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calculus is a small form of calx, calcis "a stone, lime" (Lewis & Short): a little pebble used for counting. English calculate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: calculus, calculī
- Say it: calculus, calculī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with calculus, calculī
- Recall: say the Latin for a first principle, then the Latin for a counting board, then say calculus, calculī again

Before you move on

What does calculus, calculī mean? ("A pebble, a counter; a reckoning".) Say it once more.

405.3 ēnumerō, ēnumerāre — to count out, to list

Before the new one: say the Latin for a counting board, then the Latin for a pebble.

You'll want to know: ēnumerō, ēnumerāre

ēnumerō, ēnumerāre — "to count out, to list".

Omnia beneficia eius ēnumerāvit.

He listed all his kindnesses.

ēnumerō, ēnumerāre, ēnumerāvī, ēnumerātum, ē + numerō. English enumerate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēnumerō is built from ē "out" and numerō "to count", from numerus "a number" (Lewis & Short). English enumerate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēnumerō, ēnumerāre
- Say it: ēnumerō, ēnumerāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēnumerō, ēnumerāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a counting board, then the Latin for a pebble, then say ēnumerō, ēnumerāre again

Before you move on

What does ēnumerō, ēnumerāre mean? ("To count out, to list".) Say it once more.

405.4 dictō, dictāre — to say repeatedly; to dictate

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pebble, then the Latin for to count out.

You'll want to know: dictō, dictāre

dictō, dictāre — "to say repeatedly; to dictate".

Magister versūs discipulīs dictābat.

The teacher used to dictate verses to the pupils.

dictō, dictāre, dictāvī, dictātum, built on dīcō: to say over and over, for someone to take down. English dictate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dictō is built on dīcō "to say" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -tō of a repeated act. English dictate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dictō, dictāre
- Say it: dictō, dictāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dictō, dictāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a pebble, then the Latin for to count out, then say dictō, dictāre again

Before you move on

What does dictō, dictāre mean? ("To say repeatedly; to dictate".) Say it once more.

405.5 pēnsum, pēnsī — a task, a day's work

Before the new one: say the Latin for to count out, then the Latin for to say repeatedly.

You'll want to know: pēnsum, pēnsī

pēnsum, pēnsī — "a task, a day's work".

Ancillae pēnsum suum perfēcērunt.

The maids finished their day's work.

pēnsum, pēnsī n., the participle of pendō, to weigh: the wool weighed out to a spinner each day, then any set task.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pēnsum is the participle of pendō "to weigh out" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): the wool weighed out for a day's spinning.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pēnsum, pēnsī
- Say it: pēnsum, pēnsī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pēnsum, pēnsī
- Recall: say the Latin for to count out, then the Latin for to say repeatedly, then say pēnsum, pēnsī again

Before you move on

What does pēnsum, pēnsī mean? ("A task, a day's work".) Say it once more.

Chapter 406

Good and Bad Pupils

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can call a pupil clever, attentive, slow, painstaking or careless.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 406: I can call a pupil clever, attentive, slow, painstaking or careless.

406.1 ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum — clever, talented

Before the new one: say the Latin for to say repeatedly, then the Latin for a task.

You'll want to know: ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum

ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum — "clever, talented".

> Puer ingeniōsus omnia celeriter discit.
>
> The clever boy learns everything quickly.

ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum, built on ingenium, natural talent. English ingenious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ingeniōsus is built on ingenium "inborn talent" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -ōsus "full of". English ingenious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum
- Say it: ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for to say repeatedly, then the Latin for a task, then say ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum again

Before you move on

What does ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum mean? ("Clever, talented".) Say it once more.

406.2 attentus, attenta, attentum — attentive, intent; careful with money

Before the new one: say the Latin for a task, then the Latin for clever.

You'll want to know: attentus, attenta, attentum

attentus, attenta, attentum — "attentive, intent; careful with money".

Discipulī attentī magistrum audiunt.

The attentive pupils listen to the teacher.

attentus, attenta, attentum, the participle of attendō, to stretch towards. Attentus ad rem, careful with money. English attentive.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

attentus is the participle of attendō "to stretch towards, to give heed" (Lewis & Short), from ad and tendō "to stretch". English attentive and attention come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: attentus, attenta, attentum
- Say it: attentus, attenta, attentum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with attentus, attenta, attentum
- Recall: say the Latin for a task, then the Latin for clever, then say attentus, attenta, attentum again

Before you move on

What does attentus, attenta, attentum mean? ("Attentive, intent; careful with money".) Say it once more.

406.3 tardus, tarda, tardum — slow; slow-witted

Before the new one: say the Latin for clever, then the Latin for attentive.

You'll want to know: tardus, tarda, tardum

tardus, tarda, tardum — "slow; slow-witted".

Tardus est, sed dīligēns.

He is slow, but hard-working.

tardus, tarda, tardum: slow of foot and slow of mind. English tardy and retard.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of tardus is not settled; Lewis & Short give no sure account. English tardy comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tardus, tarda, tardum
- Say it: tardus, tarda, tardum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tardus, tarda, tardum
- Recall: say the Latin for clever, then the Latin for attentive, then say tardus, tarda, tardum again

Before you move on

What does tardus, tarda, tardum mean? ("Slow; slow-witted".) Say it once more.

406.4 sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum — painstaking, busy

Before the new one: say the Latin for attentive, then the Latin for slow.

You'll want to know: sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum

sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum — "painstaking, busy".

Sēdula ancilla domum pūrgat.

The busy maid cleans the house.

sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum. The adverb sēdulō is busily, on purpose. English sedulous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of sēdulus is not settled: EtymDB links it with sedeō "to sit", and Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English sedulous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum
- Say it: sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum
- Recall: say the Latin for attentive, then the Latin for slow, then say sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum again

Before you move on

What does sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum mean? ("Painstaking, busy".) Say it once more.

406.5 neglegēns, neglegentis — careless, negligent

Before the new one: say the Latin for slow, then the Latin for painstaking.

You'll want to know: neglegēns, neglegentis

neglegēns, neglegentis — "careless, negligent".

Discipulus neglegēns pēnsum nōn perfēcit.

The careless pupil did not finish his task.

neglegēns, neglegentis, the participle of neglegō, nec + legō: not to pick up. English negligent and neglect.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

neglegēns is the present participle of neglegō "not to heed" (Lewis & Short), from nec "not" and legō "to pick up, to gather". English negligent and neglect come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: neglegēns, neglegentis
- Say it: neglegēns, neglegentis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with neglegēns, neglegentis
- Recall: say the Latin for slow, then the Latin for painstaking, then say neglegēns, neglegentis again

Before you move on

What does neglegēns, neglegentis mean? ("Careless, negligent".) Say it once more.

Chapter 407

Knowing and Not Knowing

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about knowledge, understanding, learning and ignorance, and say that someone imitates a model.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 407: I can talk about knowledge, understanding, learning and ignorance, and say that someone imitates a model.

407.1 scientia, scientiae — knowledge, skill

Before the new one: say the Latin for painstaking, then the Latin for careless.

You'll want to know: scientia, scientiae

scientia, scientiae — "knowledge, skill".

Scientia rērum ūtilis est.

Knowledge of things is useful.

scientia, scientiae f., built on sciēns, knowing. English science.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scientia is built on sciēns "knowing" (EtymDB), the participle of sciō "to know" (Lewis & Short). English science comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: scientia, scientiae
- Say it: scientia, scientiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with scientia, scientiae
- Recall: say the Latin for painstaking, then the Latin for careless, then say scientia, scientiae again

Before you move on

What does scientia, scientiae mean? ("Knowledge, skill".) Say it once more.

407.2 intellegentia, intellegentiae — understanding, intelligence

Before the new one: say the Latin for careless, then the Latin for knowledge.

You'll want to know: intellegentia, intellegentiae

intellegentia, intellegentiae — "understanding, intelligence".

Intellegentia eius omnēs superat.

His understanding is greater than anyone's.

intellegentia, intellegentiae f., the noun of intellegō. English intelligence.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

intellegentia is the noun built on intellegō "to understand" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from inter "between" and legō "to pick": to choose between. English intelligence comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: intellegentia, intellegentiae
- Say it: intellegentia, intellegentiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with intellegentia, intellegentiae
- Recall: say the Latin for careless, then the Latin for knowledge, then say intellegentia, intellegentiae again

Before you move on

What does intellegentia, intellegentiae mean? ("Understanding, intelligence".) Say it once more.

407.3 doctrīna, doctrīnae — teaching, learning; a doctrine

Before the new one: say the Latin for knowledge, then the Latin for understanding.

You'll want to know: doctrīna, doctrīnae

doctrīna, doctrīnae — "teaching, learning; a doctrine".

Vir magnae doctrīnae erat.

He was a man of great learning.

doctrīna, doctrīnae f., built on doctor, a teacher, from doceō. English doctrine.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

doctrīna is built on doctor "a teacher" (EtymDB), which comes from doceō "to teach" (Lewis & Short). English doctrine comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: doctrīna, doctrīnae
- Say it: doctrīna, doctrīnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with doctrīna, doctrīnae
- Recall: say the Latin for knowledge, then the Latin for understanding, then say doctrīna, doctrīnae again

Before you move on

What does doctrīna, doctrīnae mean? ("Teaching, learning; a doctrine".) Say it once more.

407.4 īnscītia, īnscītiae — ignorance, lack of skill

Before the new one: say the Latin for understanding, then the Latin for teaching.

You'll want to know: īnscītia, īnscītiae

īnscītia, īnscītiae — "ignorance, lack of skill".

Īnscītiā nautae nāvis periit.

The ship was lost through the sailor's lack of skill.

īnscītia, īnscītiae f., built on īnscītus, not knowing, from in- and sciō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnscītia is built on īnscītus "unknowing" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from in- "not" and the root of sciō "to know".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnscītia, īnscītiae
- Say it: īnscītia, īnscītiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnscītia, īnscītiae
- Recall: say the Latin for understanding, then the Latin for teaching, then say īnscītia, īnscītiae again

Before you move on

What does īnscītia, īnscītiae mean? ("Ignorance, lack of skill".) Say it once more.

407.5 imitor, imitārī — to imitate, to copy

Before the new one: say the Latin for teaching, then the Latin for ignorance.

You'll want to know: imitor, imitārī

imitor, imitārī — "to imitate, to copy".

Fīlius patrem imitātur.

The son imitates his father.

Deponent: imitor, imitārī, imitātus sum, with the accusative. English imitate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of imitor is not settled; Lewis & Short give no sure account, though it is often grouped with the word for an image. English imitate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: imitor, imitārī
- Say it: imitor, imitārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with imitor, imitārī
- Recall: say the Latin for teaching, then the Latin for ignorance, then say imitor, imitārī again

Before you move on

What does imitor, imitārī mean? ("To imitate, to copy".) Say it once more.

Chapter 408

Mistakes and the Cane

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a mistake in a text and a fault, the cane and the lash, and say that a pupil got a beating.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 408: I can talk about a mistake in a text and a fault, the cane and the lash, and say that a pupil got a beating.

408.1 mendum, mendī — a mistake, a blemish (in writing)

> Before the new one: say the Latin for ignorance, then the Latin for to imitate.

You'll want to know: mendum, mendī

mendum, mendī — "a mistake, a blemish (in writing)".

> In hōc librō multa menda sunt.
>
> There are many mistakes in this book.

mendum, mendī n. Ēmendō, to correct, is to take the mistakes out. English amend and emend.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mendum is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "a fault, a flaw" (EtymDB), and ēmendō "to correct" is built on it (Lewis & Short). English amend and emend come from ēmendō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mendum, mendī
- Say it: mendum, mendī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mendum, mendī
- Recall: say the Latin for ignorance, then the Latin for to imitate, then say mendum, mendī again

Before you move on

What does mendum, mendī mean? ("A mistake, a blemish (in writing)".) Say it once more.

408.2 vitium, vitiī — a fault, a defect; a vice

Before the new one: say the Latin for to imitate, then the Latin for a mistake.

You'll want to know: vitium, vitiī

vitium, vitiī — "a fault, a defect; a vice".

Nēmō sine vitiīs nāscitur.

No one is born without faults.

vitium, vitiī n. A flaw in a thing, a fault in a person. English vice and vicious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of vitium is not settled: Lewis & Short tie it to the root of vieō "to twist", so first a twist, a flaw, while EtymDB offers a different Proto-Indo-European source. English vice and vicious come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vitium, vitiī
- Say it: vitium, vitiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vitium, vitiī
- Recall: say the Latin for to imitate, then the Latin for a mistake, then say vitium, vitiī again

Before you move on

What does vitium, vitiī mean? ("A fault, a defect; a vice".) Say it once more.

408.3 ferula, ferulae — a cane (for punishing pupils); a fennel stalk

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mistake, then the Latin for a fault.

You'll want to know: ferula, ferulae

ferula, ferulae — "a cane (for punishing pupils); a fennel stalk".

Magister ferulam in manū tenēbat.

The teacher held the cane in his hand.

ferula, ferulae f.: the stalk of the giant fennel, light and stinging, the schoolmaster's cane. English ferule.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of ferula is not settled: EtymDB derives it from feriō "to strike", but Lewis & Short give no origin for it. English ferule comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ferula, ferulae
- Say it: ferula, ferulae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ferula, ferulae
- Recall: say the Latin for a mistake, then the Latin for a fault, then say ferula, ferulae again

Before you move on

What does ferula, ferulae mean? ("A cane (for punishing pupils); a fennel stalk".) Say it once more.

408.4 verber, verberis — a lash, a blow; (plural) a beating

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fault, then the Latin for a cane.

You'll want to know: verber, verberis

verber, verberis — "a lash, a blow; (plural) a beating".

Puer verbera timet.

The boy fears a beating.

verber, verberis n., mostly plural: verbera, blows, a flogging. English reverberate comes from its verb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

verber is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to turn, to bend" (EtymDB), which also gives English warp. English reverberate comes from its verb verberō "to beat".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: verber, verberis
- Say it: verber, verberis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with verber, verberis
- Recall: say the Latin for a fault, then the Latin for a cane, then say verber, verberis again

Before you move on

What does verber, verberis mean? ("A lash, a blow; (plural) a beating".) Say it once more.

408.5 vāpulō, vāpulāre — to be beaten, to get a thrashing

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cane, then the Latin for a lash.

You'll want to know: vāpulō, vāpulāre

vāpulō, vāpulāre — "to be beaten, to get a thrashing".

Puer piger vāpulāvit.

The lazy boy got a beating.

Active in form but passive in meaning: vāpulō means 'I am beaten'. Its perfect is vāpulāvī. Vāpulābis!, you'll get a thrashing, is a threat in comedy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of vāpulō is not settled: Lewis & Short suggest, with a "perhaps", a root meaning to wriggle, and EtymDB gives a Proto-Indo-European root without a meaning.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vāpulō, vāpulāre
- Say it: vāpulō, vāpulāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vāpulō, vāpulāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a cane, then the Latin for a lash, then say vāpulō, vāpulāre again

Before you move on

What does vāpulō, vāpulāre mean? ("To be beaten, to get a thrashing".) Say it once more.

Chapter 409

Edicts and Rules

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about an edict, a decree and a rule, and say that something is lawful or allowed.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 409: I can talk about an edict, a decree and a rule, and say that something is lawful or allowed.

409.1 ēdictum, ēdictī — an edict, a proclamation

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a lash, then the Latin for to be beaten.

You'll want to know: ēdictum, ēdictī

ēdictum, ēdictī — "an edict, a proclamation".

> Praetor ēdictum prōposuit.
>
> The praetor published his edict.

ēdictum, ēdictī n., from ēdīcō, to speak out. Each praetor posted an edict saying how he would run the courts. English edict.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēdictum is the participle of ēdīcō "to speak out, to proclaim" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from ē and dīcō "to say". English edict comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēdictum, ēdictī
- Say it: ēdictum, ēdictī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēdictum, ēdictī
- Recall: say the Latin for a lash, then the Latin for to be beaten, then say ēdictum, ēdictī again

Before you move on

What does ēdictum, ēdictī mean? ("An edict, a proclamation".) Say it once more.

409.2 dēcrētum, dēcrētī — a decree, a decision

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be beaten, then the Latin for an edict.

You'll want to know: dēcrētum, dēcrētī

dēcrētum, dēcrētī — "a decree, a decision".

Senātūs dēcrētum factum est.

A decree of the senate was passed.

dēcrētum, dēcrētī n., the participle of dēcernō, to decide. English decree.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēcrētum is the participle of dēcernō "to decide, to decree" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from dē and cernō "to sift". English decree comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēcrētum, dēcrētī
- Say it: dēcrētum, dēcrētī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēcrētum, dēcrētī
- Recall: say the Latin for to be beaten, then the Latin for an edict, then say dēcrētum, dēcrētī again

Before you move on

What does dēcrētum, dēcrētī mean? ("A decree, a decision".) Say it once more.

409.3 praeceptum, praeceptī — a rule, a precept, an instruction

Before the new one: say the Latin for an edict, then the Latin for a decree.

You'll want to know: praeceptum, praeceptī

praeceptum, praeceptī — "a rule, a precept, an instruction".

Praecepta medicī servāvit.

He followed the doctor's instructions.

praeceptum, praeceptī n., the participle of praecipiō. English precept.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praeceptum is the participle of praecipiō "to instruct" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from prae and capiō. English precept comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praeceptum, praeceptī
- Say it: praeceptum, praeceptī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praeceptum, praeceptī
- Recall: say the Latin for an edict, then the Latin for a decree, then say praeceptum, praeceptī again

Before you move on

What does praeceptum, praeceptī mean? ("A rule, a precept, an instruction".) Say it once more.

409.4 lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum — lawful, legitimate; proper

Before the new one: say the Latin for a decree, then the Latin for a rule.

You'll want to know: lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum

lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum — "lawful, legitimate; proper".

Hoc nōn est lēgitimum.

This is not lawful.

lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum, built on lēx, lēgis. English legitimate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lēgitimus is built on lēx, lēgis "a law" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English legitimate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum
- Say it: lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum
- Recall: say the Latin for a decree, then the Latin for a rule, then say lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum again

Before you move on

What does lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum mean? ("Lawful, legitimate; proper".) Say it once more.

409.5 licitus, licita, licitum — allowed, lawful

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rule, then the Latin for lawful.

You'll want to know: licitus, licita, licitum

licitus, licita, licitum — "allowed, lawful".

Quod nōn licitum est, nōn faciō.

What is not allowed, I do not do.

licitus, licita, licitum, the participle of licet, it is allowed. Its opposite is illicitus. English licit and illicit.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

licitus is the participle of licet "it is allowed" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English licit and illicit come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: licitus, licita, licitum
- Say it: licitus, licita, licitum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with licitus, licita, licitum
- Recall: say the Latin for a rule, then the Latin for lawful, then say licitus, licita, licitum again

Before you move on

What does licitus, licita, licitum mean? ("Allowed, lawful".) Say it once more.

Chapter 410

Passing a Law

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a bill before the people, publishing and repealing a law, making it binding and laying down what must be done.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 410: I can talk about a bill before the people, publishing and repealing a law, making it binding and laying down what must be done.

410.1 rogātiō, rogātiōnis — a bill (put to the people); a request

Before the new one: say the Latin for lawful, then the Latin for allowed.

You'll want to know: rogātiō, rogātiōnis

rogātiō, rogātiōnis — "a bill (put to the people); a request".

> Tribūnus rogātiōnem ad populum tulit.
>
> The tribune put a bill to the people.

rogātiō, rogātiōnis f., built on rogō, to ask: the magistrate asked the people whether they wished it. If they voted yes, the bill became a lēx.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rogātiō is the noun built on rogō "to ask" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): the question put to the people. English rogation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rogātiō, rogātiōnis
- Say it: rogātiō, rogātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rogātiō, rogātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for lawful, then the Latin for allowed, then say rogātiō, rogātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does rogātiō, rogātiōnis mean? ("A bill (put to the people); a request".) Say it once more.

410.2 prōmulgō, prōmulgāre — to publish, to make known (a bill)

Before the new one: say the Latin for allowed, then the Latin for a bill.

You'll want to know: prōmulgō, prōmulgāre

prōmulgō, prōmulgāre — "to publish, to make known (a bill)".

Lēgem novam prōmulgāvit.

He published the new law.

prōmulgō, prōmulgāre, prōmulgāvī, prōmulgātum. A bill was posted for public view before the vote. English promulgate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of prōmulgō is not settled: Lewis & Short call it unknown. English promulgate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōmulgō, prōmulgāre
- Say it: prōmulgō, prōmulgāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōmulgō, prōmulgāre
- Recall: say the Latin for allowed, then the Latin for a bill, then say prōmulgō, prōmulgāre again

Before you move on

What does prōmulgō, prōmulgāre mean? ("To publish, to make known (a bill)".) Say it once more.

410.3 abrogō, abrogāre — to repeal, to abolish

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bill, then the Latin for to publish.

You'll want to know: abrogō, abrogāre

abrogō, abrogāre — "to repeal, to abolish".

Populus lēgem veterem abrogāvit.

The people repealed the old law.

abrogō, abrogāre, abrogāvī, abrogātum, ab + rogō: to ask the people to take a law away. English abrogate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

abrogō is built from ab "away" and rogō "to ask" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to ask the people to take a law away. English abrogate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: abrogō, abrogāre
- Say it: abrogō, abrogāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with abrogō, abrogāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a bill, then the Latin for to publish, then say abrogō, abrogāre again

Before you move on

What does abrogō, abrogāre mean? ("To repeal, to abolish".) Say it once more.

410.4 sanciō, sancīre — to make sacred and binding; to ratify

Before the new one: say the Latin for to publish, then the Latin for to repeal.

You'll want to know: sanciō, sancīre

sanciō, sancīre — "to make sacred and binding; to ratify".

Lēgem iūre iūrandō sānxērunt.

They made the law binding by an oath.

sanciō, sancīre, sānxī, sānctum: to make a thing sacred and binding. Sānctus, holy, is its participle. English sanction and saint.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sanciō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to make holy" (EtymDB), and sānctus "holy" is its participle (Lewis & Short). English sanction and saint come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sanciō, sancīre
- Say it: sanciō, sancīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sanciō, sancīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to publish, then the Latin for to repeal, then say sanciō, sancīre again

Before you move on

What does sanciō, sancīre mean? ("To make sacred and binding; to ratify".) Say it once more.

410.5 praescrībō, praescrībere — to lay down, to prescribe

Before the new one: say the Latin for to repeal, then the Latin for to make sacred and binding.

You'll want to know: praescrībō, praescrībere

praescrībō, praescrībere — "to lay down, to prescribe".

Lēx praescrībit quid facere dēbeāmus.

The law lays down what we must do.

praescrībō, praescrībere, praescrīpsī, praescrīptum: to write at the head, then to lay down a rule. English prescribe.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praescrībō is built from prae "before, at the head" and scrībō "to write" (Lewis & Short). English prescribe comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praescrībō, praescrībere
- Say it: praescrībō, praescrībere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praescrībō, praescrībere
- Recall: say the Latin for to repeal, then the Latin for to make sacred and binding, then say praescrībō, praescrībere again

Before you move on

What does praescrībō, praescrībere mean? ("To lay down, to prescribe".) Say it once more.

Chapter 411

Going to Law

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the judgement seat, a lawsuit and going to law, bail and a legal expert.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 411: I can talk about the judgement seat, a lawsuit and going to law, bail and a legal expert.

411.1 tribūnal, tribūnālis — the judgement seat, a raised platform

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to make sacred and binding, then the Latin for to lay down.

You'll want to know: tribūnal, tribūnālis

tribūnal, tribūnālis — "the judgement seat, a raised platform".

> Praetor in tribūnālī sedēbat.
>
> The praetor sat on the judgement seat.

tribūnal, tribūnālis n.: the raised platform where a magistrate sat to judge. English tribunal.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tribūnal is built on tribūnus "a tribune" (Lewis & Short), who takes his name from tribus "a tribe": the platform of the tribunes. English tribunal comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tribūnal, tribūnālis
- Say it: tribūnal, tribūnālis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tribūnal, tribūnālis
- Recall: say the Latin for to make sacred and binding, then the Latin for to lay down, then say tribūnal, tribūnālis again

Before you move on

What does tribūnal, tribūnālis mean? ("The judgement seat, a raised platform".) Say it once more.

411.2 līs, lītis — a lawsuit, a dispute

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lay down, then the Latin for the judgement seat.

You'll want to know: līs, lītis

līs, lītis — "a lawsuit, a dispute".

Inter frātrēs līs dē hērēditāte erat.

There was a lawsuit between the brothers about the inheritance.

līs, lītis f., old Latin stlīs. Lītem intendere, to bring a suit. English litigation is built on it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līs was stlīs in old Latin (EtymDB; Lewis & Short); its deeper origin is not settled. English litigation comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: līs, lītis
- Say it: līs, lītis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with līs, lītis
- Recall: say the Latin for to lay down, then the Latin for the judgement seat, then say līs, lītis again

Before you move on

What does līs, lītis mean? ("A lawsuit, a dispute".) Say it once more.

411.3 lītigō, lītigāre — to go to law, to quarrel

Before the new one: say the Latin for the judgement seat, then the Latin for a lawsuit.

You'll want to know: lītigō, lītigāre

lītigō, lītigāre — "to go to law, to quarrel".

Vīcīnī dē fīnibus lītigant.

The neighbours are going to law about the boundaries.

lītigō, lītigāre, lītigāvī, lītigātum, built on līs and agō: to drive a suit. English litigate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lītigō is built from līs, lītis "a lawsuit" and agō "to drive, to conduct" (Lewis & Short). English litigate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lītigō, lītigāre
- Say it: lītigō, lītigāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lītigō, lītigāre
- Recall: say the Latin for the judgement seat, then the Latin for a lawsuit, then say lītigō, lītigāre again

Before you move on

What does lītigō, lītigāre mean? ("To go to law, to quarrel".) Say it once more.

411.4 vadimōnium, vadimōniī — a promise to appear in court, bail

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lawsuit, then the Latin for to go to law.

You'll want to know: vadimōnium, vadimōniī

vadimōnium, vadimōniī — "a promise to appear in court, bail".

Reus vadimōnium prōmīsit.

The accused gave bail to appear.

vadimōnium, vadimōniī n., built on vas, vadis, a surety: a promise, backed by money, to appear in court on a set day.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vadimōnium is built on vas, vadis "a surety, a bail" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the ending -mōnium; it is a different word from vās "a vessel".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vadimōnium, vadimōniī
- Say it: vadimōnium, vadimōniī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vadimōnium, vadimōniī
- Recall: say the Latin for a lawsuit, then the Latin for to go to law, then say vadimōnium, vadimōniī again

Before you move on

What does vadimōnium, vadimōniī mean? ("A promise to appear in court, bail".) Say it once more.

411.5 iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī — a legal expert, a jurist

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go to law, then the Latin for a promise to appear in court.

You'll want to know: iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī

iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī — "a legal expert, a jurist".

Iūriscōnsultum dē hāc rē cōnsuluī.

I consulted a legal expert about this matter.

iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī m., also written as two words, iūris cōnsultus: one consulted on the law. Romans came to his house in the morning for advice.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūriscōnsultus is built from iūris "of the law", the genitive of iūs, and cōnsultus, the participle of cōnsulō "to consult" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī
- Say it: iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī
- Recall: say the Latin for to go to law, then the Latin for a promise to appear in court, then say iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī again

Before you move on

What does iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī mean? ("A legal expert, a jurist".) Say it once more.

Chapter 412

The Inquiry

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a judicial inquiry and the man who runs it, questioning a witness, an informer and a defence.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 412: I can talk about a judicial inquiry and the man who runs it, questioning a witness, an informer and a defence.

412.1 cognitiō, cognitiōnis — an inquiry, a hearing; knowledge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a promise to appear in court, then the Latin for a legal expert.

You'll want to know: cognitiō, cognitiōnis

cognitiō, cognitiōnis — "an inquiry, a hearing; knowledge".

> Cōnsul cognitiōnem dē caede habuit.
>
> The consul held an inquiry into the murder.

cognitiō, cognitiōnis f., built on cognōscō: getting to know, and a judge's hearing of a case. English cognition.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cognitiō is the noun built on cognitus, the participle of cognōscō "to get to know" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English cognition comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cognitiō, cognitiōnis
- Say it: cognitiō, cognitiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cognitiō, cognitiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a promise to appear in court, then the Latin for a legal expert, then say cognitiō, cognitiōnis again

Before you move on

What does cognitiō, cognitiōnis mean? ("An inquiry, a hearing; knowledge".) Say it once more.

412.2 quaesītor, quaesītōris — an investigator; a presiding judge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a legal expert, then the Latin for an inquiry.

You'll want to know: quaesītor, quaesītōris

quaesītor, quaesītōris — "an investigator; a presiding judge".

Quaesītor testēs audīvit.

The investigator heard the witnesses.

quaesītor, quaesītōris m., built on quaerō, to seek, to inquire.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quaesītor is built on quaerō "to seek, to inquire" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from its participle quaesītus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: quaesītor, quaesītōris
- Say it: quaesītor, quaesītōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with quaesītor, quaesītōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a legal expert, then the Latin for an inquiry, then say quaesītor, quaesītōris again

Before you move on

What does quaesītor, quaesītōris mean? ("An investigator; a presiding judge".) Say it once more.

412.3 interrogō, interrogāre — to question, to examine

Before the new one: say the Latin for an inquiry, then the Latin for an investigator.

You'll want to know: interrogō, interrogāre

interrogō, interrogāre — "to question, to examine".

Iūdex testem interrogāvit.

The judge questioned the witness.

interrogō, interrogāre, interrogāvī, interrogātum, inter + rogō. English interrogate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

interrogō is built from inter "between" and rogō "to ask" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English interrogate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: interrogō, interrogāre
- Say it: interrogō, interrogāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with interrogō, interrogāre
- Recall: say the Latin for an inquiry, then the Latin for an investigator, then say interrogō, interrogāre again

Before you move on

What does interrogō, interrogāre mean? ("To question, to examine".) Say it once more.

412.4 dēlātor, dēlātōris — an informer, an accuser

Before the new one: say the Latin for an investigator, then the Latin for to question.

You'll want to know: dēlātor, dēlātōris

dēlātor, dēlātōris — "an informer, an accuser".

Dēlātōrēs multōs innocentēs accūsāvērunt.

Informers accused many innocent people.

dēlātor, dēlātōris m., built on the verb for reporting a name to a magistrate. Under the emperors, informers could grow rich.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēlātor is built on dēlātum, the supine of dēferō "to carry down, to report" (Lewis & Short): one who reports a name. English delator comes from it (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēlātor, dēlātōris
- Say it: dēlātor, dēlātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēlātor, dēlātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for an investigator, then the Latin for to question, then say dēlātor, dēlātōris again

Before you move on

What does dēlātor, dēlātōris mean? ("An informer, an accuser".) Say it once more.

412.5 dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis — a defence

Before the new one: say the Latin for to question, then the Latin for an informer.

You'll want to know: dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis

dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis — "a defence".

Dēfēnsiō reī longa fuit.

The defence of the accused was long.

dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis f., the noun of dēfendō. English defence comes through French from the same verb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēfēnsiō is the noun built on dēfendō "to ward off, to defend" (Lewis & Short). English defence comes through French from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis
- Say it: dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to question, then the Latin for an informer, then say dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis again

Before you move on

What does dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis mean? ("A defence".) Say it once more.

412.6 Words from chapters 405–412 — a review

Say the Latin for a counting board and a pebble.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a counting board, a pebble, to count out, to say repeatedly, a task
- clever, attentive, slow, painstaking, careless
- knowledge, understanding, teaching, ignorance, to imitate
- a mistake, a fault, a cane, a lash, to be beaten
- an edict, a decree, a rule, lawful, allowed
- a bill, to publish, to repeal, to make sacred and binding, to lay down

- the judgement seat, a lawsuit, to go to law, a promise to appear in court, a legal expert
- an inquiry, an investigator, to question, an informer, a defence

Before you move on

A counting board? (abacus, abacī.) A pebble? (calculus, calculī.) To count out? (ēnumerō, ēnumerāre.) To say repeatedly? (dictō, dictāre.) A task? (pēnsum, pēnsī.) Clever? (ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum.) Attentive? (attentus, attenta, attentum.) Slow? (tardus, tarda, tardum.) Painstaking? (sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum.) Careless? (neglegēns, neglegentis.) Knowledge? (scientia, scientiae.) Understanding? (intellegentia, intellegentiae.) Teaching? (doctrīna, doctrīnae.) Ignorance? (īnscītia, īnscītiae.) To imitate? (imitor, imitārī.) A mistake? (mendum, mendī.) A fault? (vitium, vitiī.) A cane? (ferula, ferulae.) A lash? (verber, verberis.) To be beaten? (vāpulō, vāpulāre.) An edict? (ēdictum, ēdictī.) A decree? (dēcrētum, dēcrētī.) A rule? (praeceptum, praeceptī.) Lawful? (lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum.) Allowed? (licitus, licita, licitum.) A bill? (rogātiō, rogātiōnis.) To publish? (prōmulgō, prōmulgāre.) To repeal? (abrogō, abrogāre.) To make sacred and binding? (sanciō, sancīre.) To lay down? (praescrībō, praescrībere.) The judgement seat? (tribūnal, tribūnālis.) A lawsuit? (līs, lītis.) To go to law? (lītigō, lītigāre.) A promise to appear in court? (vadimōnium, vadimōniī.) A legal expert? (iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī.) An inquiry? (cognitiō, cognitiōnis.) An investigator? (quaesītor, quaesītōris.) To question? (interrogō, interrogāre.) An informer? (dēlātor, dēlātōris.) A defence? (dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis.)

Chapter 413

The Verdict

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone was found guilty or acquitted, talk about a conviction and an acquittal, and plead to be spared.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 413: I can say that someone was found guilty or acquitted, talk about a conviction and an acquittal, and plead to be spared.

413.1 condemnō, condemnāre — to condemn, to find guilty

Before the new one: say the Latin for an informer, then the Latin for a defence.

You'll want to know: condemnō, condemnāre

condemnō, condemnāre — "to condemn, to find guilty".

> Iūdicēs eum furtī condemnāvērunt.
>
> The judges found him guilty of theft.

condemnō, condemnāre, condemnāvī, condemnātum, with the charge in the genitive. English condemn.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

condemnō is built from con- and damnō "to condemn" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which comes from damnum "a loss, a fine". English condemn comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: condemnō, condemnāre
- Say it: condemnō, condemnāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with condemnō, condemnāre
- Recall: say the Latin for an informer, then the Latin for a defence, then say condemnō, condemnāre again

Before you move on

What does condemnō, condemnāre mean? ("To condemn, to find guilty".) Say it once more.

413.2 damnātiō, damnātiōnis — a conviction, a condemnation

Before the new one: say the Latin for a defence, then the Latin for to condemn.

You'll want to know: damnātiō, damnātiōnis

damnātiō, damnātiōnis — "a conviction, a condemnation".

Post damnātiōnem in exsilium iit.

After his conviction he went into exile.

damnātiō, damnātiōnis f., the noun of damnō. English damnation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

damnātiō is the noun built on damnō "to condemn" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from damnum "a loss". English damnation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: damnātiō, damnātiōnis
- Say it: damnātiō, damnātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with damnātiō, damnātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a defence, then the Latin for to condemn, then say damnātiō, damnātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does damnātiō, damnātiōnis mean? ("A conviction, a condemnation".) Say it once more.

413.3 absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis — an acquittal

Before the new one: say the Latin for to condemn, then the Latin for a conviction.

You'll want to know: absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis

absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis — "an acquittal".

Post absolūtiōnem domum rediit.

After his acquittal he went home.

absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis f., the noun of absolvō, to set loose. English absolution.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

absolūtiō is the noun built on absolvō "to set loose, to acquit" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from ab and solvō "to loosen". English absolution comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis
- Say it: absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to condemn, then the Latin for a conviction, then say absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis again

Before you move on

What does absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis mean? ("An acquittal".) Say it once more.

413.4 dēprecor, dēprecārī — to beg to be spared, to plead against

Before the new one: say the Latin for a conviction, then the Latin for an acquittal.

You'll want to know: dēprecor, dēprecārī

dēprecor, dēprecārī — "to beg to be spared, to plead against".

Reus poenam dēprecātus est.

The accused begged to be spared the punishment.

Deponent: dēprecor, dēprecārī, dēprecātus sum, dē + precor, to pray: to pray a thing away. English deprecate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēprecor is built from dē "away" and precor "to pray" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to pray a thing away. English deprecate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēprecor, dēprecārī
- Say it: dēprecor, dēprecārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēprecor, dēprecārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a conviction, then the Latin for an acquittal, then say dēprecor, dēprecārī again

Before you move on

What does dēprecor, dēprecārī mean? ("To beg to be spared, to plead against".) Say it once more.

413.5 patrōcinium, patrōciniī — defence in court, advocacy; protection

Before the new one: say the Latin for an acquittal, then the Latin for to beg to be spared.

You'll want to know: patrōcinium, patrōciniī

patrōcinium, patrōciniī — "defence in court, advocacy; protection".

Patrōcinium causidicī reum nōn adiūvit.

The advocate's defence did not help the accused.

patrōcinium, patrōciniī n., built on patrōnus: the patron's protection, and his pleading in court.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patrōcinium is built on patrōnus “a patron, a defender” (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which comes from pater “a father”.

What you’ve built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: patrōcinium, patrōciniī
- Say it: patrōcinium, patrōciniī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with patrōcinium, patrōciniī
- Recall: say the Latin for an acquittal, then the Latin for to beg to be spared, then say patrōcinium, patrōciniī again

Before you move on

What does patrōcinium, patrōciniī mean? (“Defence in court, advocacy; protection”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 414

Right and Wrong

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a wrong and a disgraceful act, what heaven allows and forbids, and call a thing unfair.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 414: I can talk about a wrong and a disgraceful act, what heaven allows and forbids, and call a thing unfair.

414.1 iniūria, iniūriae — a wrong, an injustice, an insult

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to beg to be spared, then the Latin for defence in court.

You'll want to know: iniūria, iniūriae

iniūria, iniūriae — "a wrong, an injustice, an insult".

> Iniūriam accēpit, nōn fēcit.
>
> He suffered a wrong; he did not do one.

iniūria, iniūriae f., in- not + iūs: what is against right. Iniūriā, wrongly. English injury.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iniūria is built from in- "not" and iūs, iūris "right, law" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): what goes against right. English injury comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iniūria, iniūriae
- Say it: iniūria, iniūriae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iniūria, iniūriae
- Recall: say the Latin for to beg to be spared, then the Latin for defence in court, then say iniūria, iniūriae again

Before you move on

What does iniūria, iniūriae mean? ("A wrong, an injustice, an insult".) Say it once more.

414.2 flāgitium, flāgitiī — a disgraceful act, a scandal

Before the new one: say the Latin for defence in court, then the Latin for a wrong.

You'll want to know: flāgitium, flāgitiī

flāgitium, flāgitiī — "a disgraceful act, a scandal".

Hoc flāgitium tacēre nōn possum.

I cannot keep quiet about this scandal.

flāgitium, flāgitiī n., a shameful deed, and the person who does it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flāgitium is built on flāgitō "to demand loudly" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): first a furious demand, then the shameful act that people cried out against.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: flāgitium, flāgitiī
- Say it: flāgitium, flāgitiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with flāgitium, flāgitiī
- Recall: say the Latin for defence in court, then the Latin for a wrong, then say flāgitium, flāgitiī again

Before you move on

What does flāgitium, flāgitiī mean? ("A disgraceful act, a scandal".) Say it once more.

414.3 fās — divine law; what is right

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wrong, then the Latin for a disgraceful act.

You'll want to know: fās

fās — "divine law; what is right".

Fās nōn est hoc dīcere.

It is not right to say this.

fās n., indeclinable. Fās est, it is right, it is allowed by the gods; it covers what human law leaves out.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fās is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European noun meaning "a saying, an utterance" (EtymDB), and Lewis & Short link it with fārī "to speak": what the gods have declared.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fās
- Say it: fās, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fās
- Recall: say the Latin for a wrong, then the Latin for a disgraceful act, then say fās again

Before you move on

What does fās mean? ("Divine law; what is right".) Say it once more.

414.4 nefās — a crime against heaven, a wicked thing

Before the new one: say the Latin for a disgraceful act, then the Latin for divine law.

You'll want to know: nefās

nefās — "a crime against heaven, a wicked thing".

Nefās est hospitem violāre.

It is wicked to wrong a guest.

nefās n., indeclinable: ne- not + fās. English nefarious comes from its family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nefās is built from ne- "not" and fās "divine law" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): what heaven forbids. English nefarious comes from its adjective.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nefās
- Say it: nefās, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nefās
- Recall: say the Latin for a disgraceful act, then the Latin for divine law, then say nefās again

Before you move on

What does nefās mean? ("A crime against heaven, a wicked thing".) Say it once more.

414.5 inīquus, inīqua, inīquum — unfair, unjust; uneven

Before the new one: say the Latin for divine law, then the Latin for a crime against heaven.

You'll want to know: inīquus, inīqua, inīquum

inīquus, inīqua, inīquum — "unfair, unjust; uneven".

Lēx inīqua est.

The law is unfair.

inīquus, inīqua, inīquum, in- not + aequus, level, fair. English iniquity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inīquus is built from in- "not" and aequus "level, fair" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the vowel changed inside the compound. English iniquity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: inīquus, inīqua, inīquum
- Say it: inīquus, inīqua, inīquum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with inīquus, inīqua, inīquum
- Recall: say the Latin for divine law, then the Latin for a crime against heaven, then say inīquus, inīqua, inīquum again

Before you move on

What does inīquus, inīqua, inīquum mean? ("Unfair, unjust; uneven".) Say it once more.

Chapter 415

Punishment

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone was punished, banished or outlawed, and talk about the whip and custody.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 415: I can say that someone was punished, banished or outlawed, and talk about the whip and custody.

415.1 castīgō, castīgāre — to punish, to correct; to rebuke

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a crime against heaven, then the Latin for unfair.

You'll want to know: castīgō, castīgāre

castīgō, castīgāre — "to punish, to correct; to rebuke".

> Pater fīlium verbīs castīgāvit.
>
> The father rebuked his son.

castīgō, castīgāre, castīgāvī, castīgātum, built on castus, pure: to set right. English castigate and chastise.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

castīgō is built on castus "pure" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to set a person right. English castigate and chastise come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: castīgō, castīgāre
- Say it: castīgō, castīgāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with castīgō, castīgāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a crime against heaven, then the Latin for unfair, then say castīgō, castīgāre again

Before you move on

What does castīgō, castīgāre mean? ("To punish, to correct; to rebuke".) Say it once more.

415.2 relēgō, relēgāre — to send away, to banish

Before the new one: say the Latin for unfair, then the Latin for to punish.

You'll want to know: relēgō, relēgāre

relēgō, relēgāre — "to send away, to banish".

Prīnceps eum procul ab urbe relēgāvit.

The emperor banished him far from the city.

relēgō, relēgāre, relēgāvī, relēgātum: a milder exile, which kept a man's property and citizenship. English relegate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

relēgō is built from re- "away, back" and lēgō "to send with a charge, to depute" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English relegate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: relēgō, relēgāre
- Say it: relēgō, relēgāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with relēgō, relēgāre
- Recall: say the Latin for unfair, then the Latin for to punish, then say relēgō, relēgāre again

Before you move on

What does relēgō, relēgāre mean? ("To send away, to banish".) Say it once more.

415.3 prōscrībō, prōscrībere — to post for sale; to outlaw, to proscribe

Before the new one: say the Latin for to punish, then the Latin for to send away.

You'll want to know: prōscrībō, prōscrībere

prōscrībō, prōscrībere — "to post for sale; to outlaw, to proscribe".

Multī cīvēs prōscrīptī sunt.

Many citizens were outlawed.

prōscrībō, prōscrībere, prōscrīpsī, prōscrīptum: to post a notice, first of a house for sale, then of a man whose life and goods were forfeit. English proscribe.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōscrībō is built from prō "forth, in public" and scrībō "to write" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to post a notice. English proscribe comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōscrībō, prōscrībere
- Say it: prōscrībō, prōscrībere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōscrībō, prōscrībere
- Recall: say the Latin for to punish, then the Latin for to send away, then say prōscrībō, prōscrībere again

Before you move on

What does prōscrībō, prōscrībere mean? ("To post for sale; to outlaw, to proscribe".) Say it once more.

415.4 flagellum, flagellī — a whip, a scourge

Before the new one: say the Latin for to send away, then the Latin for to post for sale.

You'll want to know: flagellum, flagellī

flagellum, flagellī — "a whip, a scourge".

Aurīga flagellum in manū tenet.

The charioteer holds a whip in his hand.

flagellum, flagellī n., a small form of flagrum, a whip. English flagellate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flagellum is a small form of flagrum "a whip, a scourge" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English flagellate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: flagellum, flagellī
- Say it: flagellum, flagellī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with flagellum, flagellī
- Recall: say the Latin for to send away, then the Latin for to post for sale, then say flagellum, flagellī again

Before you move on

What does flagellum, flagellī mean? ("A whip, a scourge".) Say it once more.

415.5 custōdia, custōdiae — custody, guard; prison

Before the new one: say the Latin for to post for sale, then the Latin for a whip.

You'll want to know: custōdia, custōdiae

custōdia, custōdiae — "custody, guard; prison".

Reus in custōdiā erat.

The accused was in custody.

custōdia, custōdiae f., built on custōs, a guard. In custōdiam dare, to put under guard. English custody.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

custōdia is built on custōs, custōdis "a guard" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English custody comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: custōdia, custōdiae
- Say it: custōdia, custōdiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with custōdia, custōdiae
- Recall: say the Latin for to post for sale, then the Latin for a whip, then say custōdia, custōdiae again

Before you move on

What does custōdia, custōdiae mean? ("Custody, guard; prison".) Say it once more.

Chapter 416

Justice and Obedience

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about justice and fairness, say that someone obeys the law or restrains people, and that a wrong was avenged.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 416: I can talk about justice and fairness, say that someone obeys the law or restrains people, and that a wrong was avenged.

416.1 iūstitia, iūstitiae — justice

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a whip, then the Latin for custody.

You'll want to know: iūstitia, iūstitiae

iūstitia, iūstitiae — "justice".

> Iūstitia fundāmentum cīvitātis est.
>
> Justice is the foundation of the state.

iūstitia, iūstitiae f., built on iūstus, fair and right. English justice.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūstitia is built on iūstus "righteous, fair" (EtymDB), which comes from iūs "right, law" (Lewis & Short). English justice comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iūstitia, iūstitiae
- Say it: iūstitia, iūstitiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iūstitia, iūstitiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a whip, then the Latin for custody, then say iūstitia, iūstitiae again

Before you move on

What does iūstitia, iūstitiae mean? ("Justice".) Say it once more.

416.2 aequitās, aequitātis — fairness, equity

Before the new one: say the Latin for custody, then the Latin for justice.

You'll want to know: aequitās, aequitātis

aequitās, aequitātis — "fairness, equity".

Iūdex magnā aequitāte iūdicāvit.

The judge gave judgement with great fairness.

aequitās, aequitātis f., built on aequus, level, fair. English equity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aequitās is built on aequus "level, fair" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -tās that makes a quality. English equity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aequitās, aequitātis
- Say it: aequitās, aequitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aequitās, aequitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for custody, then the Latin for justice, then say aequitās, aequitātis again

Before you move on

What does aequitās, aequitātis mean? ("Fairness, equity".) Say it once more.

416.3 obtemperō, obtemperāre — to obey, to comply (with)

Before the new one: say the Latin for justice, then the Latin for fairness.

You'll want to know: obtemperō, obtemperāre

obtemperō, obtemperāre — "to obey, to comply (with)".

Lēgibus obtemperāre dēbēmus.

We must obey the laws.

obtemperō, obtemperāre, obtemperāvī, obtemperātum + dative, like pāreō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obtemperō is built from ob and temperō "to keep within measure, to restrain oneself" (EtymDB): to hold oneself in for someone else.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obtemperō, obtemperāre
- Say it: obtemperō, obtemperāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obtemperō, obtemperāre
- Recall: say the Latin for justice, then the Latin for fairness, then say obtemperō, obtemperāre again

Before you move on

What does obtemperō, obtemperāre mean? ("To obey, to comply (with)".) Say it once more.

416.4 coerceō, coercēre — to restrain, to keep in check

Before the new one: say the Latin for fairness, then the Latin for to obey.

You'll want to know: coerceō, coercēre

coerceō, coercēre — "to restrain, to keep in check".

Cōnsul sēditiōsōs coercuit.

The consul restrained the rebels.

coerceō, coercēre, coercuī, coercitum, co- + arceō, to shut in. English coerce.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coerceō is built from co- "together" and arceō "to shut in, to keep off" (Lewis & Short): to hem in on all sides. English coerce comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: coerceō, coercēre
- Say it: coerceō, coercēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with coerceō, coercēre
- Recall: say the Latin for fairness, then the Latin for to obey, then say coerceō, coercēre again

Before you move on

What does coerceō, coercēre mean? ("To restrain, to keep in check".) Say it once more.

416.5 vindicō, vindicāre — to claim; to avenge, to punish

Before the new one: say the Latin for to obey, then the Latin for to restrain.

You'll want to know: vindicō, vindicāre

vindicō, vindicāre — "to claim; to avenge, to punish".

Iniūriam vindicāvit.

He avenged the wrong.

vindicō, vindicāre, vindicāvī, vindicātum. In law, to claim a thing as one's own; in lībertātem vindicāre, to set free. English vindicate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vindicō is built on vindex, vindicis "a claimant, a protector, an avenger" (EtymDB); Lewis & Short explain it as vim dīcō, to assert force. English vindicate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vindicō, vindicāre
- Say it: vindicō, vindicāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vindicō, vindicāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to obey, then the Latin for to restrain, then say vindicō, vindicāre again

Before you move on

What does vindicō, vindicāre mean? ("To claim; to avenge, to punish".) Say it once more.

Chapter 417

Property

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about possession and what is mine or another's, ownership and formal purchase.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 417: I can talk about possession and what is mine or another's, ownership and formal purchase.

417.1 possessiō, possessiōnis — possession; (plural) estates

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to restrain, then the Latin for to claim.

You'll want to know: possessiō, possessiōnis

possessiō, possessiōnis — "possession; (plural) estates".

> Possessiōnēs magnās in agrīs habēbat.
>
> He had large estates in the country.

possessiō, possessiōnis f., the noun of possideō. In the plural, landed estates. English possession.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

possessiō is the noun built on possideō "to possess" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English possession comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: possessiō, possessiōnis
- Say it: possessiō, possessiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with possessiō, possessiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to restrain, then the Latin for to claim, then say possessiō, possessiōnis again

Before you move on

What does possessiō, possessiōnis mean? ("Possession; (plural) estates".) Say it once more.

417.2 proprius, propria, proprium — one's own; peculiar (to)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to claim, then the Latin for possession.

You'll want to know: proprius, propria, proprium

proprius, propria, proprium — "one's own; peculiar (to)".

Domum propriam nōn habet.

He has no house of his own.

proprius, propria, proprium + genitive or dative: belonging to one alone. English proper and property.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of proprius is not settled: EtymDB traces it to Proto-Italic prijos*, but Lewis & Short call it doubtful and suggest, with a "perhaps", the root of prae "before". English proper and property come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: proprius, propria, proprium
- Say it: proprius, propria, proprium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with proprius, propria, proprium
- Recall: say the Latin for to claim, then the Latin for possession, then say proprius, propria, proprium again

Before you move on

What does proprius, propria, proprium mean? ("One's own; peculiar (to)".) Say it once more.

417.3 aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum — belonging to another; foreign; unfavourable

Before the new one: say the Latin for possession, then the Latin for one's own.

You'll want to know: aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum

aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum — "belonging to another; foreign; unfavourable".

Rem aliēnam cupere nōn dēbēmus.

We should not desire what belongs to another.

aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum, built on alius, other. The opposite of suus and proprius. English alien.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aliēnus is built on alius "other" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English alien comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum
- Say it: aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum
- Recall: say the Latin for possession, then the Latin for one's own, then say aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum again

Before you move on

What does aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum mean? ("Belonging to another; foreign; unfavourable".) Say it once more.

417.4 dominium, dominiī — ownership

Before the new one: say the Latin for one's own, then the Latin for belonging to another.

You'll want to know: dominium, dominiī

dominium, dominiī — "ownership".

Dominium agrī ad fīlium pervēnit.

The ownership of the field passed to the son.

dominium, dominiī n., built on dominus, master. In Roman law, full ownership. English dominion.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dominium is built on dominus "a master" (EtymDB), which comes from domus "a house" (Lewis & Short): the right of the master of the house. English dominion is of the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dominium, dominiī
- Say it: dominium, dominiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dominium, dominiī
- Recall: say the Latin for one's own, then the Latin for belonging to another, then say dominium, dominiī again

Before you move on

What does dominium, dominiī mean? ("Ownership".) Say it once more.

417.5 mancipium, mancipiī — formal purchase; a slave

Before the new one: say the Latin for belonging to another, then the Latin for ownership.

You'll want to know: mancipium, mancipiī

mancipium, mancipiī — "formal purchase; a slave".

Servum mancipiō accēpit.

He received the slave by formal purchase.

mancipium, mancipiī n., manus + capiō: taking in the hand, the old ceremony of purchase with scales and bronze; then the thing bought, a slave. English emancipate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mancipium is built on manceps "a purchaser" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from manus "hand" and capiō "to take". English emancipate comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mancipium, mancipiī
- Say it: mancipium, mancipiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mancipium, mancipiī
- Recall: say the Latin for belonging to another, then the Latin for ownership, then say mancipium, mancipiī again

Before you move on

What does mancipium, mancipiī mean? ("Formal purchase; a slave".) Say it once more.

Chapter 418

Debts

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about debt, a debtor and a creditor, interest, and money borrowed or lent.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 418: I can talk about debt, a debtor and a creditor, interest, and money borrowed or lent.

418.1 aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī — debt

> Before the new one: say the Latin for ownership, then the Latin for formal purchase.

You'll want to know: aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī

aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī — "debt".

> Aere aliēnō premitur.
>
> He is weighed down by debt.

aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī n.: other people's bronze, money that belongs to someone else. In aere aliēnō esse, to be in debt.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aes aliēnum is built from aes "bronze, money" and aliēnus "belonging to another" (Lewis & Short): money that is someone else's.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī
- Say it: aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī
- Recall: say the Latin for ownership, then the Latin for formal purchase, then say aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī again

Before you move on

What does aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī mean? ("Debt".) Say it once more.

418.2 dēbitor, dēbitōris — a debtor

Before the new one: say the Latin for formal purchase, then the Latin for debt.

You'll want to know: dēbitor, dēbitōris

dēbitor, dēbitōris — "a debtor".

Dēbitor pecūniam reddere nōn potuit.

The debtor could not pay the money back.

dēbitor, dēbitōris m., built on dēbeō, to owe. English debtor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēbitor is built on dēbitum "a debt" (EtymDB), from dēbeō "to owe" (Lewis & Short). English debtor comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēbitor, dēbitōris
- Say it: dēbitor, dēbitōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēbitor, dēbitōris
- Recall: say the Latin for formal purchase, then the Latin for debt, then say dēbitor, dēbitōris again

Before you move on

What does dēbitor, dēbitōris mean? ("A debtor".) Say it once more.

418.3 crēditor, crēditōris — a creditor, a lender

Before the new one: say the Latin for debt, then the Latin for a debtor.

You'll want to know: crēditor, crēditōris

crēditor, crēditōris — "a creditor, a lender".

Crēditor pecūniam suam exspectat.

The creditor is waiting for his money.

crēditor, crēditōris m., built on crēdō, to trust, to lend. English creditor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crēditor is built on crēdō "to trust, to lend" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from its participle crēditus. English creditor comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: crēditor, crēditōris
- Say it: crēditor, crēditōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with crēditor, crēditōris
- Recall: say the Latin for debt, then the Latin for a debtor, then say crēditor, crēditōris again

Before you move on

What does crēditor, crēditōris mean? ("A creditor, a lender".) Say it once more.

418.4 fēnus, fēnoris — interest (on money)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a debtor, then the Latin for a creditor.

You'll want to know: fēnus, fēnoris

fēnus, fēnoris — "interest (on money)".

Pecūniam fēnore dabat.

He lent money at interest.

fēnus, fēnoris n., also spelled faenus: the yield of money, as a field yields a crop.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fēnus is usually traced to a root meaning "to bring forth, to yield", the root Lewis & Short also see in fēmina: what money produces. The account is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fēnus, fēnoris
- Say it: fēnus, fēnoris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fēnus, fēnoris
- Recall: say the Latin for a debtor, then the Latin for a creditor, then say fēnus, fēnoris again

Before you move on

What does fēnus, fēnoris mean? ("Interest (on money)".) Say it once more.

418.5 mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum — borrowed, lent; mutual

Before the new one: say the Latin for a creditor, then the Latin for interest.

You'll want to know: mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum

mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum — "borrowed, lent; mutual".

Pecūniam mūtuam ab amīcō sūmpsit.

He borrowed money from a friend.

mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum: pecūniam mūtuam dare, to lend; sūmere, to borrow. Also mutual: amor mūtuus. English mutual.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūtuus is built on mūtō "to change, to exchange" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): given in exchange. English mutual comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum
- Say it: mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum
- Recall: say the Latin for a creditor, then the Latin for interest, then say mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum again

Before you move on

What does mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum mean? ("Borrowed, lent; mutual".) Say it once more.

Chapter 419

Paying It Back

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that a debt was paid in full, and talk about interest, a pledge, a written bond and a moneylender.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 419: I can say that a debt was paid in full, and talk about interest, a pledge, a written bond and a moneylender.

419.1 persolvō, persolvere — to pay in full

> Before the new one: say the Latin for interest, then the Latin for borrowed.

You'll want to know: persolvō, persolvere

persolvō, persolvere — "to pay in full".

> Tandem omne aes aliēnum persolvit.
>
> At last he paid off his whole debt.

persolvō, persolvere, persolvī, persolūtum, per- through + solvō: to loosen the whole debt.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

persolvō is built from per- "through, completely" and solvō "to loosen, to pay" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: persolvō, persolvere
- Say it: persolvō, persolvere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with persolvō, persolvere
- Recall: say the Latin for interest, then the Latin for borrowed, then say persolvō, persolvere again

Before you move on

What does persolvō, persolvere mean? ("To pay in full".) Say it once more.

419.2 ūsūra, ūsūrae — interest charged; use

Before the new one: say the Latin for borrowed, then the Latin for to pay in full.

You'll want to know: ūsūra, ūsūrae

ūsūra, ūsūrae — "interest charged; use".

> Ūsūra gravis erat.
>
> The interest was heavy.

ūsūra, ūsūrae f., built on ūtor, to use: payment for the use of money, often plural. English usury.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūsūra is built on ūtor, ūsus "to use" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): payment for the use of money. English usury comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ūsūra, ūsūrae
- Say it: ūsūra, ūsūrae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ūsūra, ūsūrae
- Recall: say the Latin for borrowed, then the Latin for to pay in full, then say ūsūra, ūsūrae again

Before you move on

What does ūsūra, ūsūrae mean? ("Interest charged; use".) Say it once more.

419.3 pignus, pignoris — a pledge, a security

Before the new one: say the Latin for to pay in full, then the Latin for interest charged.

You'll want to know: pignus, pignoris

pignus, pignoris — "a pledge, a security".

Ānulum prō pignore dedit.

He gave a ring as a pledge.

pignus, pignoris n. A thing handed over as security for a debt, and any pledge of love or loyalty.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pignus comes from the root of pangō "to fasten, to fix" (Lewis & Short), the root also in pacīscor "to make a bargain": a thing that fastens a bargain.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pignus, pignoris
- Say it: pignus, pignoris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pignus, pignoris
- Recall: say the Latin for to pay in full, then the Latin for interest charged, then say pignus, pignoris again

Before you move on

What does pignus, pignoris mean? ("A pledge, a security".) Say it once more.

419.4 syngrapha, syngraphae — a written bond, a promissory note

Before the new one: say the Latin for interest charged, then the Latin for a pledge.

You'll want to know: syngrapha, syngraphae

syngrapha, syngraphae — "a written bond, a promissory note".

Syngrapham manū suā scrīpsit.

He wrote out the bond in his own hand.

syngrapha, syngraphae f., borrowed from Greek syngraphē, a written contract signed by both sides.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

syngrapha was borrowed from Greek syngraphē "a written contract" (Lewis & Short), built from syn "together" and graphein "to write". English syngraph comes from it (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: syngrapha, syngraphae
- Say it: syngrapha, syngraphae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with syngrapha, syngraphae
- Recall: say the Latin for interest charged, then the Latin for a pledge, then say syngrapha, syngraphae again

Before you move on

What does syngrapha, syngraphae mean? ("A written bond, a promissory note".) Say it once more.

419.5 fēnerātor, fēnerātōris — a moneylender

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pledge, then the Latin for a written bond.

You'll want to know: fēnerātor, fēnerātōris

fēnerātor, fēnerātōris — "a moneylender".

Fēnerātor ā pauperibus pecūniam repetit.

The moneylender demands his money back from the poor.

fēnerātor, fēnerātōris m., also spelled faenerātor, built on fēnus: a man who lends at interest.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fēnerātor is built on fēneror "to lend at interest" (Lewis & Short), which comes from fēnus "interest".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fēnerātor, fēnerātōris
- Say it: fēnerātor, fēnerātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fēnerātor, fēnerātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a pledge, then the Latin for a written bond, then say fēnerātor, fēnerātōris again

Before you move on

What does fēnerātor, fēnerātōris mean? ("A moneylender".) Say it once more.

Chapter 420

Buying and Selling

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what something costs, talk about an auction and bidding, and name the buyer and the seller.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 420: I can say what something costs, talk about an auction and bidding, and name the buyer and the seller.

420.1 cōnstō, cōnstāre — to cost; to stand firm; to be agreed

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a written bond, then the Latin for a moneylender.

You'll want to know: cōnstō, cōnstāre

cōnstō, cōnstāre — "to cost; to stand firm; to be agreed".

> Haec vīlla magnō cōnstitit.
>
> This country house cost a great deal.

cōnstō, cōnstāre, cōnstitī. The price is in the ablative: magnō, at a high price, parvō, cheaply. Cōnstat, it is agreed. English cost comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnstō is built from con- and stō "to stand" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to stand firm, then to stand at a price. English cost comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnstō, cōnstāre
- Say it: cōnstō, cōnstāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnstō, cōnstāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a written bond, then the Latin for a moneylender, then say cōnstō, cōnstāre again

Before you move on

What does cōnstō, cōnstāre mean? ("To cost; to stand firm; to be agreed".) Say it once more.

420.2 auctiō, auctiōnis — an auction

Before the new one: say the Latin for a moneylender, then the Latin for to cost.

You'll want to know: auctiō, auctiōnis

auctiō, auctiōnis — "an auction".

Bona eius in auctiōne vendita sunt.

His goods were sold at an auction.

auctiō, auctiōnis f., built on augeō, to increase: the price goes up and up. English auction.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

auctiō is the noun built on augeō "to increase" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a sale where the price keeps rising. English auction comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: auctiō, auctiōnis
- Say it: auctiō, auctiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with auctiō, auctiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a moneylender, then the Latin for to cost, then say auctiō, auctiōnis again

Before you move on

What does auctiō, auctiōnis mean? ("An auction".) Say it once more.

420.3 liceor, licērī — to bid (at an auction)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to cost, then the Latin for an auction.

You'll want to know: liceor, licērī

liceor, licērī — "to bid (at an auction)".

Hunc equum centum dēnāriīs licitus est.

He bid a hundred denarii for this horse.

Deponent: liceor, licērī, licitus sum. The thing bid for goes in the accusative and the price in the ablative. It belongs with licet: to name what you are allowed to pay.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

liceor belongs with liceō "to be for sale, to be valued" and licet "it is allowed" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to put a value on a thing.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: liceor, licērī
- Say it: liceor, licērī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with liceor, licērī
- Recall: say the Latin for to cost, then the Latin for an auction, then say liceor, licērī again

Before you move on

What does liceor, licērī mean? ("To bid (at an auction)".) Say it once more.

420.4 emptor, emptōris — a buyer

Before the new one: say the Latin for an auction, then the Latin for to bid.

You'll want to know: emptor, emptōris

emptor, emptōris — "a buyer".

Emptor pretium nimis magnum esse dīxit.

The buyer said the price was too high.

emptor, emptōris m., built on emō, to buy. Caveat emptor: let the buyer beware.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

emptor is built on emō "to buy" (Lewis & Short), from its supine emptum, with the ending -tor of the one who does it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: emptor, emptōris
- Say it: emptor, emptōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with emptor, emptōris
- Recall: say the Latin for an auction, then the Latin for to bid, then say emptor, emptōris again

Before you move on

What does emptor, emptōris mean? ("A buyer".) Say it once more.

420.5 venditor, venditōris — a seller

Before the new one: say the Latin for to bid, then the Latin for a buyer.

You'll want to know: venditor, venditōris

venditor, venditōris — "a seller".

Venditor equum laudābat.

The seller was praising the horse.

venditor, venditōris m., built on vendō, to sell. English vendor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

venditor is built on vendō "to sell" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from its supine venditum. English vendor comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: venditor, venditōris
- Say it: venditor, venditōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with venditor, venditōris
- Recall: say the Latin for to bid, then the Latin for a buyer, then say venditor, venditōris again

Before you move on

What does venditor, venditōris mean? ("A seller".) Say it once more.

420.6 Words from chapters 413–420 — a review

Say the Latin for to condemn and a conviction.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to condemn, a conviction, an acquittal, to beg to be spared, defence in court
- a wrong, a disgraceful act, divine law, a crime against heaven, unfair
- to punish, to send away, to post for sale, a whip, custody
- justice, fairness, to obey, to restrain, to claim
- possession, one's own, belonging to another, ownership, formal purchase
- debt, a debtor, a creditor, interest, borrowed
- to pay in full, interest charged, a pledge, a written bond, a moneylender

- to cost, an auction, to bid, a buyer, a seller

Before you move on

To condemn? (condemnō, condemnāre.) A conviction? (damnātiō, damnātiōnis.) An acquittal? (absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis.) To beg to be spared? (dēprecor, dēprecārī.) Defence in court? (patrōcinium, patrōciniī.) A wrong? (iniūria, iniūriae.) A disgraceful act? (flāgitium, flāgitiī.) Divine law? (fās.) A crime against heaven? (nefās.) Unfair? (inīquus, inīqua, inīquum.) To punish? (castīgō, castīgāre.) To send away? (relēgō, relēgāre.) To post for sale? (prōscrībō, prōscrībere.) A whip? (flagellum, flagellī.) Custody? (custōdia, custōdiae.) Justice? (iūstitia, iūstitiae.) Fairness? (aequitās, aequitātis.) To obey? (obtemperō, obtemperāre.) To restrain? (coerceō, coercēre.) To claim? (vindicō, vindicāre.) Possession? (possessiō, possessiōnis.) One's own? (proprius, propria, proprium.) Belonging to another? (aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum.) Ownership? (dominium, dominiī.) Formal purchase? (mancipium, mancipiī.) Debt? (aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī.) A debtor? (dēbitor, dēbitōris.) A creditor? (crēditor, crēditōris.) Interest? (fēnus, fēnoris.) Borrowed? (mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum.) To pay in full? (persolvō, persolvere.) Interest charged? (ūsūra, ūsūrae.) A pledge? (pignus, pignoris.) A written bond? (syngrapha, syngraphae.) A moneylender? (fēnerātor, fēnerātōris.) To cost? (cōnstō, cōnstāre.) An auction? (auctiō, auctiōnis.) To bid? (liceor, licērī.) A buyer? (emptor, emptōris.) A seller? (venditor, venditōris.)

Chapter 421

Trade

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about trade and doing business, the market day, customs duty and making a profit.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 421: I can talk about trade and doing business, the market day, customs duty and making a profit.

421.1 commercium, commerciī — trade, commerce; dealings

Before the new one: say the Latin for a buyer, then the Latin for a seller.

You'll want to know: commercium, commerciī

commercium, commerciī — "trade, commerce; dealings".

> Inter duās urbēs magnum commercium erat.
>
> There was a lot of trade between the two cities.

commercium, commerciī n., com- + merx, goods. Any dealings with people, not only buying and selling. English commerce.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commercium is built from com- "together" and merx, mercis "goods" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English commerce comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: commercium, commerciī
- Say it: commercium, commerciī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with commercium, commerciī
- Recall: say the Latin for a buyer, then the Latin for a seller, then say commercium, commerciī again

Before you move on

What does commercium, commerciī mean? ("Trade, commerce; dealings".) Say it once more.

421.2 negōtior, negōtiārī — to do business, to trade

Before the new one: say the Latin for a seller, then the Latin for trade.

You'll want to know: negōtior, negōtiārī

negōtior, negōtiārī — "to do business, to trade".

In prōvinciā negōtiābātur.

He was doing business in the province.

Deponent: negōtior, negōtiārī, negōtiātus sum, built on negōtium, business. English negotiate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

negōtior is built on negōtium "business" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which is nec "not" and ōtium "leisure". English negotiate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: negōtior, negōtiārī
- Say it: negōtior, negōtiārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with negōtior, negōtiārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a seller, then the Latin for trade, then say negōtior, negōtiārī again

Before you move on

What does negōtior, negōtiārī mean? ("To do business, to trade".) Say it once more.

421.3 nūndinae, nūndinārum — market day; a market

Before the new one: say the Latin for trade, then the Latin for to do business.

You'll want to know: nūndinae, nūndinārum

nūndinae, nūndinārum — "market day; a market".

Rūsticī nūndinīs in oppidum veniunt.

Country people come into town on market days.

nūndinae, nūndinārum f. pl., the ninth day, counted inclusively: every eighth day was market day.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūndinae is built on nūndinus "of the ninth day" (EtymDB), from novem "nine" and the root of diēs "day" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nūndinae, nūndinārum
- Say it: nūndinae, nūndinārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nūndinae, nūndinārum
- Recall: say the Latin for trade, then the Latin for to do business, then say nūndinae, nūndinārum again

Before you move on

What does nūndinae, nūndinārum mean? ("Market day; a market".) Say it once more.

421.4 portōrium, portōriī — harbour dues, customs duty

Before the new one: say the Latin for to do business, then the Latin for market day.

You'll want to know: portōrium, portōriī

portōrium, portōriī — "harbour dues, customs duty".

Mercātōrēs portōrium solvunt.

The merchants pay customs duty.

portōrium, portōriī n., a toll on goods carried through a harbour, a gate or across a frontier.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

portōrium comes from the root of portō "to carry" (Lewis & Short), and EtymDB links it with porta "a gate": a toll on what is carried through.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: portōrium, portōriī
- Say it: portōrium, portōriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with portōrium, portōriī
- Recall: say the Latin for to do business, then the Latin for market day, then say portōrium, portōriī again

Before you move on

What does portōrium, portōriī mean? ("Harbour dues, customs duty".) Say it once more.

421.5 lucror, lucrārī — to gain, to make a profit

Before the new one: say the Latin for market day, then the Latin for harbour dues.

You'll want to know: lucror, lucrārī

lucror, lucrārī — "to gain, to make a profit".

Ille mercātor multum lucrātus est.

That merchant made a lot of profit.

Deponent: lucror, lucrārī, lucrātus sum, built on lucrum, gain. English lucrative.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lucror is built on lucrum "gain, profit" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English lucrative comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lucror, lucrārī
- Say it: lucror, lucrārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lucror, lucrārī
- Recall: say the Latin for market day, then the Latin for harbour dues, then say lucror, lucrārī again

Before you move on

What does lucror, lucrārī mean? ("To gain, to make a profit".) Say it once more.

Chapter 422

Rich and Poor

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about wealth and poverty, say that someone is in need or does without, and that a place has plenty.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 422: I can talk about wealth and poverty, say that someone is in need or does without, and that a place has plenty.

422.1 dīvitiae, dīvitiārum — riches, wealth

Before the new one: say the Latin for harbour dues, then the Latin for to gain.

You'll want to know: dīvitiae, dīvitiārum

dīvitiae, dīvitiārum — "riches, wealth".

> Dīvitiae virum nōn semper fēlīcem faciunt.
>
> Riches do not always make a man happy.

dīvitiae, dīvitiārum f. pl., built on dīves, rich.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīvitiae is built on dīves, dīvitis "rich" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dīvitiae, dīvitiārum
- Say it: dīvitiae, dīvitiārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dīvitiae, dīvitiārum
- Recall: say the Latin for harbour dues, then the Latin for to gain, then say dīvitiae, dīvitiārum again

Before you move on

What does dīvitiae, dīvitiārum mean? ("Riches, wealth".) Say it once more.

422.2 egeō, egēre — to be in need (of), to lack

Before the new one: say the Latin for to gain, then the Latin for riches.

You'll want to know: egeō, egēre

egeō, egēre — "to be in need (of), to lack".

Pecūniā egeō.

I am short of money.

egeō, egēre, eguī + ablative or genitive. Indigeō is a stronger form; English indigent comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of egeō is not settled; Lewis & Short give no sure account. English indigent comes from its compound indigeō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: egeō, egēre
- Say it: egeō, egēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with egeō, egēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to gain, then the Latin for riches, then say egeō, egēre again

Before you move on

What does egeō, egēre mean? ("To be in need (of), to lack".) Say it once more.

422.3 egestās, egestātis — want, extreme poverty

Before the new one: say the Latin for riches, then the Latin for to be in need.

You'll want to know: egestās, egestātis

egestās, egestātis — "want, extreme poverty".

In summā egestāte vīvēbat.

He lived in the deepest poverty.

egestās, egestātis f., built on egeō, to be in need.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

egestās is built on egeō "to be in need" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -tās that makes a state.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: egestās, egestātis
- Say it: egestās, egestātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with egestās, egestātis
- Recall: say the Latin for riches, then the Latin for to be in need, then say egestās, egestātis again

Before you move on

What does egestās, egestātis mean? ("Want, extreme poverty".) Say it once more.

422.4 careō, carēre — to be without, to lack

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be in need, then the Latin for want.

You'll want to know: careō, carēre

careō, carēre — "to be without, to lack".

Multī cīvēs domō carent.

Many citizens have no home.

careō, carēre, caruī + ablative: careō pecūniā, I have no money. Unlike egeō, it says the thing is absent without saying that you need it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

careō is inherited from Proto-Italic kazēō* (EtymDB), from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to cut": to be cut off from a thing.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: careō, carēre
- Say it: careō, carēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with careō, carēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to be in need, then the Latin for want, then say careō, carēre again

Before you move on

What does careō, carēre mean? ("To be without, to lack".) Say it once more.

422.5 abundō, abundāre — to have plenty (of), to abound; to overflow

Before the new one: say the Latin for want, then the Latin for to be without.

You'll want to know: abundō, abundāre

abundō, abundāre — "to have plenty (of), to abound; to overflow".

Urbs frūmentō abundat.

The city has plenty of grain.

abundō, abundāre, abundāvī, abundātum + ablative, built on unda, a wave: to overflow. English abound and abundant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

abundō is built from ab "away, over" and undō "to surge", from unda "a wave" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to flow over. English abound and abundant come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: abundō, abundāre
- Say it: abundō, abundāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with abundō, abundāre
- Recall: say the Latin for want, then the Latin for to be without, then say abundō, abundāre again

Before you move on

What does abundō, abundāre mean? ("To have plenty (of), to abound; to overflow".) Say it once more.

422.6 Laws, money and agreements

Say the Latin for trade and to do business.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- trade, to do business, market day, harbour dues, to gain
- riches, to be in need, want, to be without, to have plenty

Before you move on

Trade? (commercium, commerciī.) To do business? (negōtior, negōtiārī.) Market day? (nūndinae, nūndinārum.) Harbour dues? (portōrium, portōriī.) To gain? (lucror, lucrārī.) Riches? (dīvitiae, dīvitiārum.) To be in need? (egeō, egēre.) Want? (egestās, egestātis.) To be without? (careō, carēre.) To have plenty? (abundō, abundāre.)

422.7 Rich and Poor — once more

Say the Latin for riches and to be in need.

Your turn

- Say it: riches, to be in need, want, to be without, to have plenty

Before you move on

Riches? (dīvitiae, dīvitiārum.) To be in need? (egeō, egēre.) Want? (egestās, egestātis.) To be without? (careō, carēre.) To have plenty? (abundō, abundāre.)

Chapter 423

Footpath, Mountain track, Side path, Slope, Step

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the smaller ways a traveller takes: a footpath, a mountain track, a side path, a slope, and stepping along.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 423: I can talk about the smaller ways a traveller takes: a footpath, a mountain track, a side path, a slope, and stepping along.

423.1 sēmita, sēmitae — a footpath; a narrow way, a lane

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ditch, then the Latin for a rampart.

You'll want to know: sēmita, sēmitae

sēmita, sēmitae — "a footpath; a narrow way, a lane".

> Viātor nōn viā sed sēmitā per silvam ambulat.
>
> The traveller walks through the wood not on the road but on a footpath.

First declension, feminine: sēmita, sēmitae f. Narrower than a via: room for feet, not for carts.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sēmita is inherited: EtymDB traces it to Proto-Italic sēmitā and lists trāmes 'by-path' as a cousin. Lewis & Short explain it as a way that goes 'aside' (sē-) from the main road.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sēmita, sēmitae
- Say it: sēmita, sēmitae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sēmita, sēmitae
- Recall: say the Latin for a ditch, then the Latin for a rampart, then say sēmita, sēmitae again

Before you move on

What does sēmita, sēmitae mean? ("A footpath; a narrow way, a lane".) Say it once more.

423.2 callis, callis — a mountain track; a rough path made by cattle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rampart, then the Latin for a footpath.

You'll want to know: callis, callis

callis, callis — "a mountain track; a rough path made by cattle".

Pastor gregem per callem in montem dūcit.

The shepherd leads his flock up the mountain along a rough track.

Third declension, usually masculine: callis, callis m. (sometimes feminine).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

callis is inherited. EtymDB connects it with PIE kel- 'to drive, to set in motion' and with celer 'quick'; Lewis & Short give no etymology, so the link stays a likely one rather than a sure one.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: callis, callis
- Say it: callis, callis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with callis, callis
- Recall: say the Latin for a rampart, then the Latin for a footpath, then say callis, callis again

Before you move on

What does callis, callis mean? ("A mountain track; a rough path made by cattle".) Say it once more.

423.3 trāmes, trāmitis — a side path, a by-way; a cross path

Before the new one: say the Latin for a footpath, then the Latin for a mountain track.

You'll want to know: trāmes, trāmitis

trāmes, trāmitis — "a side path, a by-way; a cross path".

> Mercātor trāmitem scit et ante aliōs ad oppidum pervenit.
>
> The merchant knows a side path and reaches the town before the others.

Third declension, masculine: trāmes, trāmitis m. A short cut across country, off the high road.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trāmes is inherited. Lewis & Short link it with trāns 'across', so it is a path that cuts across country, and EtymDB lists sēmita as a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: trāmes, trāmitis
- Say it: trāmes, trāmitis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with trāmes, trāmitis
- Recall: say the Latin for a footpath, then the Latin for a mountain track, then say trāmes, trāmitis again

Before you move on

What does trāmes, trāmitis mean? ("A side path, a by-way; a cross path".) Say it once more.

423.4 clīvus, clīvī — a slope; a sloping street, an uphill road

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mountain track, then the Latin for a side path.

You'll want to know: clīvus, clīvī

clīvus, clīvī — "a slope; a sloping street, an uphill road".

Clīvus longus est, et mūlus lentē ascendit.

The slope is long, and the mule climbs slowly.

Second declension, masculine: clīvus, clīvī m. A street that climbs a hill is also a clīvus. English declivity and proclivity come from the same root.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clīvus is inherited from PIE ḱleywós, built on ḱley- 'to lean, to incline' (EtymDB). English declivity and proclivity come from the related Latin adjectives dēclīvis and prōclīvis (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: clīvus, clīvī
- Say it: clīvus, clīvī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with clīvus, clīvī
- Recall: say the Latin for a mountain track, then the Latin for a side path, then say clīvus, clīvī again

Before you move on

What does clīvus, clīvī mean? ("A slope; a sloping street, an uphill road".) Say it once more.

423.5 gradior, gradī — to step, to walk

Before the new one: say the Latin for a side path, then the Latin for a slope.

You'll want to know: gradior, gradī

gradior, gradī — "to step, to walk".

In viā angustā senex lentē graditur.

On the narrow road the old man walks slowly.

Deponent: gradior, gradī, gressus sum. Passive endings, active meaning. Its compounds give English ingredient, progress and egress.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gradior is inherited from PIE $g^h red^h$- 'to walk, to go' (EtymDB), and gradus 'a step' is built on the same root. English gradient and grade go back to this family (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gradior, gradī
- Say it: gradior, gradī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gradior, gradī
- Recall: say the Latin for a side path, then the Latin for a slope, then say gradior, gradī again

Before you move on

What does gradior, gradī mean? ("To step, to walk".) Say it once more.

Chapter 424

Crossroads, Fork in the road, Bend, Winding, To bend

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about where roads meet and turn: a crossroads, a fork, a bend, a winding stretch, and bending a way.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 424: I can talk about where roads meet and turn: a crossroads, a fork, a bend, a winding stretch, and bending a way.

424.1 compitum, compitī — a crossroads, a place where roads meet

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a slope, then the Latin for to step.

You'll want to know: compitum, compitī

compitum, compitī — "a crossroads, a place where roads meet".

> Ad compitum viātor stat et viam quaerit.
>
> At the crossroads the traveller stops and looks for the road.

Second declension, neuter: compitum, compitī n. Small altars to the gods of the crossroads stood there.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

compitum is usually explained as built from com- 'together' and the root of petō 'to make for', a place where ways come together. Lewis & Short derive it from competō 'to come together'; EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: compitum, compitī
- Say it: compitum, compitī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with compitum, compitī
- Recall: say the Latin for a slope, then the Latin for to step, then say compitum, compitī again

Before you move on

What does compitum, compitī mean? ("A crossroads, a place where roads meet".) Say it once more.

424.2 bivium, biviī — a fork in the road, a place where two roads meet

Before the new one: say the Latin for to step, then the Latin for a crossroads.

You'll want to know: bivium, biviī

bivium, biviī — "a fork in the road, a place where two roads meet".

In biviō duae viae sunt: ūna ad mare, altera ad montēs.

At the fork there are two roads: one to the sea, the other to the mountains.

Second declension, neuter: bivium, biviī n. Compare trivium, where three roads meet.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bivium is built on bi- 'two' and via 'road' (Lewis & Short, under the adjective bivius 'having two ways'). It is a native Latin compound.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bivium, biviī
- Say it: bivium, biviī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bivium, biviī
- Recall: say the Latin for to step, then the Latin for a crossroads, then say bivium, biviī again

Before you move on

What does bivium, biviī mean? ("A fork in the road, a place where two roads meet".) Say it once more.

424.3 flexus, flexūs — a bend, a turn (in a road or river)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a crossroads, then the Latin for a fork in the road.

You'll want to know: flexus, flexūs

flexus, flexūs — "a bend, a turn (in a road or river)".

Post flexum viae oppidum appāret.

After the bend in the road the town comes into view.

Fourth declension, masculine: flexus, flexūs m. English flex and reflex belong to the same family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flexus is built on flectō 'to bend' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), a fourth-declension noun of action made from the verb's stem flex-. English flex comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: flexus, flexūs
- Say it: flexus, flexūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with flexus, flexūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a crossroads, then the Latin for a fork in the road, then say flexus, flexūs again

Before you move on

What does flexus, flexūs mean? ("A bend, a turn (in a road or river)".) Say it once more.

424.4 anfrāctus, anfrāctūs — a winding, a twisting stretch of road

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fork in the road, then the Latin for a bend.

You'll want to know: anfrāctus, anfrāctūs

anfrāctus, anfrāctūs — "a winding, a twisting stretch of road".

Via per montēs multīs anfrāctibus it.

The road goes through the mountains with many windings.

Fourth declension, masculine: anfrāctus, anfrāctūs m. Also a long, roundabout way of speaking.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

anfrāctus is built on am(b)- 'around' and frangō 'to break' (Lewis & Short; EtymDB lists frangō, from PIE b^hreg- 'to break'): a road that keeps breaking round in turns.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: anfrāctus, anfrāctūs
- Say it: anfrāctus, anfrāctūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with anfrāctus, anfrāctūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a fork in the road, then the Latin for a bend, then say anfrāctus, anfrāctūs again

Before you move on

What does anfrāctus, anfrāctūs mean? ("A winding, a twisting stretch of road".) Say it once more.

424.5 flectō, flectere — to bend, to turn

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bend, then the Latin for a winding.

You'll want to know: flectō, flectere

flectō, flectere — "to bend, to turn".

Agricola bovēs dextrā flectit, et plaustrum in viam angustam intrat.

The farmer turns the oxen to the right, and the wagon goes into the narrow road.

flectō, flectere, flexī, flexum. Iter flectere, to change the direction of a journey. English flexible and reflect come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flectō is inherited from Proto-Italic flektō (EtymDB). English flexible, reflect and inflection all come from it (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: flectō, flectere
- Say it: flectō, flectere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with flectō, flectere
- Recall: say the Latin for a bend, then the Latin for a winding, then say flectō, flectere again

Before you move on

What does flectō, flectere mean? ("To bend, to turn".) Say it once more.

Chapter 425

Roadbed, Flint, Kerb, Wheel rut, To pave

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe how a Roman road is built: the raised roadbed, the flint paving, the raised kerb, the wheel ruts, and paving a road.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 425: I can describe how a Roman road is built: the raised roadbed, the flint paving, the raised kerb, the wheel ruts, and paving a road.

425.1 agger, aggeris — a raised roadbed; a mound, an embankment

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a winding, then the Latin for to bend.

You'll want to know: agger, aggeris

agger, aggeris — "a raised roadbed; a mound, an embankment".

> Via in aggere altō per campum it.
>
> The road runs across the plain on a high embankment.

Third declension, masculine: agger, aggeris m. A Roman road was laid on a raised bank of earth and stones. English exaggerate first meant 'to heap up'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

agger is built on ad- 'to' and gerō 'to carry' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): earth and stones carried to one spot. English exaggerate comes from Latin exaggerāre 'to heap up', built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: agger, aggeris
- Say it: agger, aggeris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with agger, aggeris
- Recall: say the Latin for a winding, then the Latin for to bend, then say agger, aggeris again

Before you move on

What does agger, aggeris mean? ("A raised roadbed; a mound, an embankment".) Say it once more.

425.2 silex, silicis — a flint; a hard paving stone

Before the new one: say the Latin for to bend, then the Latin for a raised roadbed.

You'll want to know: silex, silicis

silex, silicis — "a flint; a hard paving stone".

Haec via ē silice facta est, itaque in pluviā quoque bona est.

This road is made of hard stone, so it is good in the rain too.

Third declension, usually masculine: silex, silicis m. Roman roads were paved with blocks of it. English silica and silicon come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of silex is not settled: Lewis & Short tentatively link it with a root meaning 'firm', as in solidus, and EtymDB gives no parent. EtymDB lists English silica and silicon among the words made from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: silex, silicis
- Say it: silex, silicis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with silex, silicis
- Recall: say the Latin for to bend, then the Latin for a raised roadbed, then say silex, silicis again

Before you move on

What does silex, silicis mean? ("A flint; a hard paving stone".) Say it once more.

425.3 crepīdō, crepīdinis — a raised edge; a kerb, a raised footway; a quay

Before the new one: say the Latin for a raised roadbed, then the Latin for a flint.

You'll want to know: crepīdō, crepīdinis

crepīdō, crepīdinis — "a raised edge; a kerb, a raised footway; a quay".

Viātōrēs in crepīdine ambulant, plaustra in mediā viā eunt.

The travellers walk on the raised footway, the wagons go in the middle of the road.

Third declension, feminine: crepīdō, crepīdinis f. Any raised edge: the kerb of a street, the base of a building, the stone edge of a quay.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crepīdō was borrowed from Greek krēpis, krēpidos 'foundation, base' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). The Greek word also meant a kind of boot, the source of Latin crepida 'sandal'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: crepīdō, crepīdinis
- Say it: crepīdō, crepīdinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with crepīdō, crepīdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a raised roadbed, then the Latin for a flint, then say crepīdō, crepīdinis again

Before you move on

What does crepīdō, crepīdinis mean? ("A raised edge; a kerb, a raised footway; a quay".) Say it once more.

425.4 orbita, orbitae — a wheel rut, a track

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flint, then the Latin for a raised edge.

You'll want to know: orbita, orbitae

orbita, orbitae — "a wheel rut, a track".

In viā vetere altae orbitae sunt, et plaustrum lentē it.

On the old road there are deep ruts, and the wagon goes slowly.

First declension, feminine: orbita, orbitae f. English orbit is the same word: the track a planet runs in.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

orbita is built on orbis 'circle, wheel' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): the track a wheel leaves. English orbit comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: orbita, orbitae
- Say it: orbita, orbitae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with orbita, orbitae
- Recall: say the Latin for a flint, then the Latin for a raised edge, then say orbita, orbitae again

Before you move on

What does orbita, orbitae mean? ("A wheel rut, a track".) Say it once more.

425.5 sternō, sternere — to spread, to lay out; to pave (a road)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a raised edge, then the Latin for a wheel rut.

You'll want to know: sternō, sternere

sternō, sternere — "to spread, to lay out; to pave (a road)".

Fabrī viam novam saxīs sternunt.

The workmen pave the new road with stones.

sternō, sternere, strāvī, strātum. Viam sternere, to pave a road; lectum sternere, to make a bed. Its participle strāta gives English street.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sternō is inherited from Proto-Italic stornō, from PIE sterh₃- 'to stretch out, to spread' (EtymDB). Its participle in via strāta 'paved road' was borrowed into Germanic and became English street (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sternō, sternere
- Say it: sternō, sternere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sternō, sternere
- Recall: say the Latin for a raised edge, then the Latin for a wheel rut, then say sternō, sternere again

Before you move on

What does sternō, sternere mean? ("To spread, to lay out; to pave (a road)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 426

Dusty, Muddy, Footprint, Weary, To wear out

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe the road in bad weather and how a traveller feels: dusty, muddy, footprints, weary, and worn out.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 426: I can describe the road in bad weather and how a traveller feels: dusty, muddy, footprints, weary, and worn out.

426.1 pulverulentus, pulverulenta, pulverulentum — dusty, covered with dust

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wheel rut, then the Latin for to spread.

You'll want to know: pulverulentus, pulverulenta, pulverulentum

pulverulentus, pulverulenta, pulverulentum — "dusty, covered with dust".

> Aestāte via pulverulenta est, et viātōrēs aquam quaerunt.
>
> In summer the road is dusty, and travellers look for water.

An adjective of three endings, from pulvis, pulveris 'dust' with the ending -ulentus 'full of'. English pulverize is a cousin.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulverulentus is built on pulvis, pulveris 'dust' with the suffix -ulentus 'full of' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English pulverize comes from the same noun.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pulverulentus, pulverulenta, pulverulentum
- Say it: pulverulentus, pulverulenta, pulverulentum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pulverulentus, pulverulenta, pulverulentum
- Recall: say the Latin for a wheel rut, then the Latin for to spread, then say pulverulentus, pulverulenta, pulverulentum again

Before you move on

What does pulverulentus, pulverulenta, pulverulentum mean? ("Dusty, covered with dust".) Say it once more.

426.2 lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum — muddy, covered with mud

Before the new one: say the Latin for to spread, then the Latin for dusty.

You'll want to know: lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum

lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum — "muddy, covered with mud".

Post pluviam via lutulenta est, et plaustra lentē eunt.

After the rain the road is muddy, and the wagons go slowly.

An adjective of three endings, from lutum 'mud'. Also of a dirty, low person.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lutulentus is built on lutum 'mud' with the suffix -ulentus 'full of' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), the same pattern as pulverulentus 'dusty'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum
- Say it: lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum
- Recall: say the Latin for to spread, then the Latin for dusty, then say lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum again

Before you move on

What does lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum mean? ("Muddy, covered with mud".) Say it once more.

426.3 vestīgium, vestīgiī — a footprint, a track; a trace

Before the new one: say the Latin for dusty, then the Latin for muddy.

You'll want to know: vestīgium, vestīgiī

vestīgium, vestīgiī — "a footprint, a track; a trace".

In lutō vestīgia equōrum et mūlōrum sunt.

In the mud there are the footprints of horses and mules.

Second declension, neuter: vestīgium, vestīgiī n. Eōdem vestīgiō, on the same spot. English vestige comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of vestīgium is not settled: Lewis & Short call the etymology doubtful, and EtymDB gives no parent. English vestige comes from it, and investigate from the related verb investīgāre.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vestīgium, vestīgiī
- Say it: vestīgium, vestīgiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vestīgium, vestīgiī
- Recall: say the Latin for dusty, then the Latin for muddy, then say vestīgium, vestīgiī again

Before you move on

What does vestīgium, vestīgiī mean? ("A footprint, a track; a trace".) Say it once more.

426.4 lassus, lassa, lassum — weary, tired out

Before the new one: say the Latin for muddy, then the Latin for a footprint.

You'll want to know: lassus, lassa, lassum

lassus, lassa, lassum — "weary, tired out".

Post longum iter viātor lassus in caupōnā sedet.

After a long journey the weary traveller sits in the inn.

An adjective of three endings, close to fessus. English lassitude comes from the noun lassitūdō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lassus is inherited and is usually traced to PIE led- 'slow, weary' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short call its origin doubtful. English lassitude comes from the Latin noun lassitūdō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lassus, lassa, lassum
- Say it: lassus, lassa, lassum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lassus, lassa, lassum
- Recall: say the Latin for muddy, then the Latin for a footprint, then say lassus, lassa, lassum again

Before you move on

What does lassus, lassa, lassum mean? ("Weary, tired out".) Say it once more.

426.5 dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre — to wear out, to tire out

Before the new one: say the Latin for a footprint, then the Latin for weary.

You'll want to know: dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre

dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre — "to wear out, to tire out".

Via longa equōs dēfatīgat.

The long road wears the horses out.

dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre, dēfatīgāvī, dēfatīgātum. Often passive: dēfatīgātus 'worn out'. The simple verb fatīgō gives English fatigue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēfatīgō is built from dē- 'down, completely' and fatīgō 'to tire, to weary' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English fatigue comes, through French, from fatīgō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre
- Say it: dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a footprint, then the Latin for weary, then say dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre again

Before you move on

What does dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre mean? ("To wear out, to tire out".) Say it once more.

Chapter 427

Overnight stop, Coachman, Post, Travel money, To set out on

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about stopping and setting off on a long road: the overnight stop, the coachman, the post, travel money, and setting out.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 427: I can talk about stopping and setting off on a long road: the overnight stop, the coachman, the post, travel money, and setting out.

427.1 mānsiō, mānsiōnis — an overnight stop, a halting place; a stay

Before the new one: say the Latin for weary, then the Latin for to wear out.

You'll want to know: mānsiō, mānsiōnis

mānsiō, mānsiōnis — "an overnight stop, a halting place; a stay".

> Prīmā mānsiōne viātōrēs cēnant et dormiunt.
>
> At the first halting place the travellers have dinner and sleep.

Third declension, feminine: mānsiō, mānsiōnis f. A journey could be counted in mānsiōnēs, day stages. English mansion comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mānsiō is built on maneō 'to stay, to remain' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), through its participle mānsus. English mansion comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mānsiō, mānsiōnis
- Say it: mānsiō, mānsiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mānsiō, mānsiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for weary, then the Latin for to wear out, then say mānsiō, mānsiōnis again

Before you move on

What does mānsiō, mānsiōnis mean? ("An overnight stop, a halting place; a stay".) Say it once more.

427.2 raedārius, raedāriī — a coachman, the driver of a four-wheeled carriage

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wear out, then the Latin for an overnight stop.

You'll want to know: raedārius, raedāriī

raedārius, raedāriī — "a coachman, the driver of a four-wheeled carriage".

Raedārius equōs ad raedam dūcit et iungit.

The coachman leads the horses to the carriage and harnesses them.

Second declension, masculine: raedārius, raedāriī m.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

raedārius is built on raeda 'four-wheeled travelling carriage' with the suffix -ārius 'one who works with' (Lewis & Short). Lewis & Short call raeda probably Celtic, citing Quintilian.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: raedārius, raedāriī
- Say it: raedārius, raedāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with raedārius, raedāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for to wear out, then the Latin for an overnight stop, then say raedārius, raedāriī again

Before you move on

What does raedārius, raedāriī mean? ("A coachman, the driver of a four-wheeled carriage".) Say it once more.

427.3 statiō, statiōnis — a post, a station; a stopping place; an anchorage

Before the new one: say the Latin for an overnight stop, then the Latin for a coachman.

You'll want to know: statiō, statiōnis

statiō, statiōnis — "a post, a station; a stopping place; an anchorage".

Ad statiōnem mīlitēs viātōrēs exspectant.

At the post soldiers wait for the travellers.

Third declension, feminine: statiō, statiōnis f. A guard post on a road, or a place where ships lie at anchor. English station comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

statiō is built on stō 'to stand', from PIE steh₂- (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): first a standing still, then a place where people stand or stop. English station comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: statiō, statiōnis
- Say it: statiō, statiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with statiō, statiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for an overnight stop, then the Latin for a coachman, then say statiō, statiōnis again

Before you move on

What does statiō, statiōnis mean? ("A post, a station; a stopping place; an anchorage".) Say it once more.

427.4 viāticum, viāticī — travel money; provisions for a journey

Before the new one: say the Latin for a coachman, then the Latin for a post.

You'll want to know: viāticum, viāticī

viāticum, viāticī — "travel money; provisions for a journey".

> Pater fīliō viāticum dat, et fīlius ad urbem proficīscitur.
>
> The father gives his son travel money, and the son sets out for the city.

Second declension, neuter: viāticum, viāticī n. What you take with you for the road: coins, food or both.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

viāticum is the neuter of viāticus 'of a road or journey', built on via 'road' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English keeps it as viaticum.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: viāticum, viāticī
- Say it: viāticum, viāticī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with viāticum, viāticī
- Recall: say the Latin for a coachman, then the Latin for a post, then say viāticum, viāticī again

Before you move on

What does viāticum, viāticī mean? ("Travel money; provisions for a journey".) Say it once more.

427.5 ingredior, ingredī — to set out on, to enter upon; to go in

Before the new one: say the Latin for a post, then the Latin for travel money.

You'll want to know: ingredior, ingredī

ingredior, ingredī — "to set out on, to enter upon; to go in".

Prīmā lūce viātōrēs iter longum ingrediuntur.

At first light the travellers set out on the long journey.

Deponent: ingredior, ingredī, ingressus sum, with an accusative: iter ingredī, to begin a journey. English ingredient comes from its participle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ingredior is built from in- 'in, on' and gradior 'to step' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English ingredient comes from its present participle ingrediēns.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ingredior, ingredī
- Say it: ingredior, ingredī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ingredior, ingredī
- Recall: say the Latin for a post, then the Latin for travel money, then say ingredior, ingredī again

Before you move on

What does ingredior, ingredī mean? ("To set out on, to enter upon; to go in".) Say it once more.

Chapter 428

Departure, Return, Travel abroad, To travel abroad, To go forward

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about leaving, coming back and travelling far: a departure, a return, travel abroad, travelling abroad, and going forward.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 428: I can talk about leaving, coming back and travelling far: a departure, a return, travel abroad, travelling abroad, and going forward.

428.1 profectiō, profectiōnis — a departure, a setting out

Before the new one: say the Latin for travel money, then the Latin for to set out on.

You'll want to know: profectiō, profectiōnis

profectiō, profectiōnis — "a departure, a setting out".

> Ante profectiōnem mercātor sarcinās parat.
>
> Before the departure the merchant gets his baggage ready.

Third declension, feminine: profectiō, profectiōnis f., the noun of proficīscor 'to set out'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

profectiō is built on proficīscor 'to set out' (Lewis & Short), through its participle profectus. EtymDB does not list it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: profectiō, profectiōnis
- Say it: profectiō, profectiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with profectiō, profectiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for travel money, then the Latin for to set out on, then say profectiō, profectiōnis again

Before you move on

What does profectiō, profectiōnis mean? ("A departure, a setting out".) Say it once more.

428.2 reditus, reditūs — a return, a coming back

Before the new one: say the Latin for to set out on, then the Latin for a departure.

You'll want to know: reditus, reditūs

reditus, reditūs — "a return, a coming back".

Uxor nautae reditum marītī exspectat.

The sailor's wife waits for her husband's return.

Fourth declension, masculine: reditus, reditūs m. Also income, what comes back from land.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

reditus is built on redeō 'to go back' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), itself from red- 'back' and eō 'to go'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: reditus, reditūs
- Say it: reditus, reditūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with reditus, reditūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to set out on, then the Latin for a departure, then say reditus, reditūs again

Before you move on

What does reditus, reditūs mean? ("A return, a coming back".) Say it once more.

428.3 peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis — travel abroad, a stay in foreign parts

Before the new one: say the Latin for a departure, then the Latin for a return.

You'll want to know: peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis

peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis — "travel abroad, a stay in foreign parts".

Post longam peregrīnātiōnem senex domum redit.

After a long time abroad the old man comes home.

Third declension, feminine: peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis f. English peregrination comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

peregrīnātiō is built on peregrīnor 'to travel abroad' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which comes from peregrīnus 'foreign'. English peregrination comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis
- Say it: peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a departure, then the Latin for a return, then say peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis mean? ("Travel abroad, a stay in foreign parts".) Say it once more.

428.4 peregrīnor, peregrīnārī — to travel abroad, to live in foreign parts

Before the new one: say the Latin for a return, then the Latin for travel abroad.

You'll want to know: peregrīnor, peregrīnārī

peregrīnor, peregrīnārī — "to travel abroad, to live in foreign parts".

Mercātor multōs annōs in terrīs longinquīs peregrīnātur.

The merchant travels abroad in distant lands for many years.

Deponent: peregrīnor, peregrīnārī, peregrīnātus sum. English pilgrim comes from the related adjective peregrīnus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

peregrīnor is built on peregrīnus 'foreign' (EtymDB), which goes back to peregrē 'abroad', from per- 'through, beyond' and ager 'land' (Lewis & Short). English pilgrim comes from peregrīnus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: peregrīnor, peregrīnārī
- Say it: peregrīnor, peregrīnārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with peregrīnor, peregrīnārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a return, then the Latin for travel abroad, then say peregrīnor, peregrīnārī again

Before you move on

What does peregrīnor, peregrīnārī mean? ("To travel abroad, to live in foreign parts".) Say it once more.

428.5 prōgredior, prōgredī — to go forward, to advance

Before the new one: say the Latin for travel abroad, then the Latin for to travel abroad.

You'll want to know: prōgredior, prōgredī

prōgredior, prōgredī — "to go forward, to advance".

Nox venit, sed viātōrēs ad oppidum prōgrediuntur.

Night comes, but the travellers go on towards the town.

Deponent: prōgredior, prōgredī, prōgressus sum. English progress comes from its participle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōgredior is built from prō- 'forward' and gradior 'to step' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English progress comes from its participle prōgressus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōgredior, prōgredī
- Say it: prōgredior, prōgredī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōgredior, prōgredī
- Recall: say the Latin for travel abroad, then the Latin for to travel abroad, then say prōgredior, prōgredī again

Before you move on

What does prōgredior, prōgredī mean? ("To go forward, to advance".) Say it once more.

Chapter 429

Wagon, Light gig, War chariot, Covered carriage, Travelling coach

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name Roman vehicles: a wagon, a light gig, a two-wheeled chariot, a covered carriage and a travelling coach.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 429: I can name Roman vehicles: a wagon, a light gig, a two-wheeled chariot, a covered carriage and a travelling coach.

429.1 carrus, carrī — a wagon, a baggage cart

Before the new one: say the Latin for to travel abroad, then the Latin for to go forward.

You'll want to know: carrus, carrī

carrus, carrī — "a wagon, a baggage cart".

Carrus frūmentum ex agrīs ad oppidum vehit.

The wagon carries grain from the fields to the town.

Second declension, masculine: carrus, carrī m. (also carrum, carrī n.). A heavy cart for goods. English car, carry and career come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carrus was borrowed from Gaulish karros 'wagon', from PIE ḱers- 'to run' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short give no origin. English car, carry and career go back to it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: carrus, carrī
- Say it: carrus, carrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with carrus, carrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to travel abroad, then the Latin for to go forward, then say carrus, carrī again

Before you move on

What does carrus, carrī mean? ("A wagon, a baggage cart".) Say it once more.

429.2 cisium, cisiī — a light gig, a fast two-wheeled cart

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go forward, then the Latin for a wagon.

You'll want to know: cisium, cisiī

cisium, cisiī — "a light gig, a fast two-wheeled cart".

Cisium celere est; itaque mercātor cisiō ad urbem it.

A gig is fast; so the merchant goes to the city by gig.

Second declension, neuter: cisium, cisiī n. A light two-wheeled carriage for one or two people, for speed rather than baggage.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of cisium is not settled. Lewis & Short give the sense, a light two-wheeled vehicle, but no source, and EtymDB does not list it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cisium, cisiī
- Say it: cisium, cisiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cisium, cisiī
- Recall: say the Latin for to go forward, then the Latin for a wagon, then say cisium, cisiī again

Before you move on

What does cisium, cisiī mean? ("A light gig, a fast two-wheeled cart".) Say it once more.

429.3 essedum, essedī — a two-wheeled chariot; a light travelling carriage

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wagon, then the Latin for a light gig.

You'll want to know: essedum, essedī

essedum, essedī — "a two-wheeled chariot; a light travelling carriage".

Dīves essedō celerī ad vīllam vehitur.

The rich man rides to his country house in a fast two-wheeled carriage.

Second declension, neuter: essedum, essedī n. First a war chariot of northern peoples, later a smart carriage in the city.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

essedum names the war chariot of the Gauls and Britons (Lewis & Short, under essedārius), later a travelling carriage. It is usually thought to be a Gaulish word, but neither Lewis & Short nor EtymDB states an origin, so the line is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: essedum, essedī
- Say it: essedum, essedī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with essedum, essedī
- Recall: say the Latin for a wagon, then the Latin for a light gig, then say essedum, essedī again

Before you move on

What does essedum, essedī mean? ("A two-wheeled chariot; a light travelling carriage".) Say it once more.

429.4 carpentum, carpentī — a covered carriage; a two-wheeled coach

Before the new one: say the Latin for a light gig, then the Latin for a two-wheeled chariot.

You'll want to know: carpentum, carpentī

carpentum, carpentī — "a covered carriage; a two-wheeled coach".

Māter et fīliae carpentō ad vīllam vehuntur.

The mother and her daughters ride to the country house in a covered carriage.

Second declension, neuter: carpentum, carpentī n. Married women of rank rode in it. English carpenter first meant a maker of carriages.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carpentum was borrowed from Gaulish carbantos 'two-wheeled carriage' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short give no origin. English carpenter comes, through French, from Latin carpentārius 'carriage-maker', built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: carpentum, carpentī
- Say it: carpentum, carpentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with carpentum, carpentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a light gig, then the Latin for a two-wheeled chariot, then say carpentum, carpentī again

Before you move on

What does carpentum, carpentī mean? ("A covered carriage; a two-wheeled coach".) Say it once more.

429.5 carrūca, carrūcae — a travelling coach, a four-wheeled carriage

Before the new one: say the Latin for a two-wheeled chariot, then the Latin for a covered carriage.

You'll want to know: carrūca, carrūcae

carrūca, carrūcae — "a travelling coach, a four-wheeled carriage".

Dīves in carrūcā sedet et servī post eum ambulant.

The rich man sits in his coach and the slaves walk behind him.

First declension, feminine: carrūca, carrūcae f. A grand four-wheeled coach. In French it later became charrue, a plough.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carrūca is built on carrus 'wagon' (EtymDB), which was borrowed from Gaulish karros. Lewis & Short gloss it as a four-wheeled travelling and state coach.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: carrūca, carrūcae
- Say it: carrūca, carrūcae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with carrūca, carrūcae
- Recall: say the Latin for a two-wheeled chariot, then the Latin for a covered carriage, then say carrūca, carrūcae again

Before you move on

What does carrūca, carrūcae mean? ("A travelling coach, a four-wheeled carriage".) Say it once more.

Chapter 430

Cart pole, Wheel hub, Drag shoe, To yoke, To unyoke

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the parts of a cart and harnessing it: the pole, the hub, the drag shoe, yoking and unyoking.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 430: I can talk about the parts of a cart and harnessing it: the pole, the hub, the drag shoe, yoking and unyoking.

430.1 tēmō, tēmōnis — a cart pole, the shaft of a wagon or plough

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a covered carriage, then the Latin for a travelling coach.

You'll want to know: tēmō, tēmōnis

tēmō, tēmōnis — "a cart pole, the shaft of a wagon or plough".

> Agricola bovēs ad tēmōnem plaustrī iungit.
>
> The farmer harnesses the oxen to the pole of the wagon.

Third declension, masculine: tēmō, tēmōnis m. The long beam that runs forward from the cart to the yoke.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tēmō is inherited. Lewis & Short connect it with the root tek- of texō 'to weave, to build', and EtymDB lists texō as a cousin; the exact path is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tēmō, tēmōnis
- Say it: tēmō, tēmōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tēmō, tēmōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a covered carriage, then the Latin for a travelling coach, then say tēmō, tēmōnis again

Before you move on

What does tēmō, tēmōnis mean? ("A cart pole, the shaft of a wagon or plough".) Say it once more.

430.2 modiolus, modiolī — a wheel hub, the nave of a wheel; a small measure

Before the new one: say the Latin for a travelling coach, then the Latin for a cart pole.

You'll want to know: modiolus, modiolī

modiolus, modiolī — "a wheel hub, the nave of a wheel; a small measure".

In mediā rotā modiolus est.

In the middle of the wheel is the hub.

Second declension, masculine: modiolus, modiolī m. A little measure: the hub looks like a small barrel.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

modiolus is a diminutive of modius 'a peck measure' (Lewis & Short), which is built on modus 'measure' (EtymDB). The round hub of a wheel looked like a small measuring tub.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: modiolus, modiolī
- Say it: modiolus, modiolī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with modiolus, modiolī
- Recall: say the Latin for a travelling coach, then the Latin for a cart pole, then say modiolus, modiolī again

Before you move on

What does modiolus, modiolī mean? ("A wheel hub, the nave of a wheel; a small measure".) Say it once more.

430.3 sufflāmen, sufflāminis — a drag shoe, a brake (for a wheel)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cart pole, then the Latin for a wheel hub.

You'll want to know: sufflāmen, sufflāminis

sufflāmen, sufflāminis — "a drag shoe, a brake (for a wheel)".

In clīvō raedārius sufflāmen sub rotā pōnit.

On the slope the coachman puts the drag shoe under the wheel.

Third declension, neuter: sufflāmen, sufflāminis n. A block or chain that stops a wheel turning on a steep road. Also anything that holds a thing back.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of sufflāmen is not settled. Lewis & Short file it with sufflō 'to blow up' without further comment, while EtymDB lists Greek phalanx 'log, beam' as a cousin, which points to a word for a wooden block.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sufflāmen, sufflāminis
- Say it: sufflāmen, sufflāminis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sufflāmen, sufflāminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a cart pole, then the Latin for a wheel hub, then say sufflāmen, sufflāminis again

Before you move on

What does sufflāmen, sufflāminis mean? ("A drag shoe, a brake (for a wheel)".) Say it once more.

430.4 subiungō, subiungere — to yoke, to harness; to put under

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wheel hub, then the Latin for a drag shoe.

You'll want to know: subiungō, subiungere

subiungō, subiungere — "to yoke, to harness; to put under".

Agricola mūlōs plaustrō subiungit.

The farmer harnesses the mules to the wagon.

subiungō, subiungere, subiūnxī, subiūnctum, often with a dative: equōs currū subiungere. English subjunctive comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

subiungō is built from sub- 'under' and iungō 'to join, to yoke' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English subjunctive comes from its participle subiūnctus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: subiungō, subiungere
- Say it: subiungō, subiungere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with subiungō, subiungere
- Recall: say the Latin for a wheel hub, then the Latin for a drag shoe, then say subiungō, subiungere again

Before you move on

What does subiungō, subiungere mean? ("To yoke, to harness; to put under".) Say it once more.

430.5 disiungō, disiungere — to unyoke; to separate

Before the new one: say the Latin for a drag shoe, then the Latin for to yoke.

You'll want to know: disiungō, disiungere

disiungō, disiungere — "to unyoke; to separate".

Vesperī agricola bovēs disiungit et domum redit.

In the evening the farmer unyokes the oxen and goes home.

disiungō, disiungere, disiūnxī, disiūnctum. English disjoint and disjunction come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

disiungō is built from dis- 'apart' and iungō 'to join, to yoke' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English disjoint comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: disiungō, disiungere
- Say it: disiungō, disiungere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with disiungō, disiungere
- Recall: say the Latin for a drag shoe, then the Latin for to yoke, then say disiungō, disiungere again

Before you move on

What does disiungō, disiungere mean? ("To unyoke; to separate".) Say it once more.

430.6 Roads, carts and ships

Say the Latin for a footpath and a mountain track.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a footpath, a mountain track, a side path, a slope, to step
- a crossroads, a fork in the road, a bend, a winding, to bend
- a raised roadbed, a flint, a raised edge, a wheel rut, to spread
- dusty, muddy, a footprint, weary, to wear out
- an overnight stop, a coachman, a post, travel money, to set out on

- a departure, a return, travel abroad, to travel abroad, to go forward
- a wagon, a light gig, a two-wheeled chariot, a covered carriage, a travelling coach
- a cart pole, a wheel hub, a drag shoe, to yoke, to unyoke

Before you move on

A footpath? (sēmita, sēmitae.) A mountain track? (callis, callis.) A side path? (trāmes, trāmitis.) A slope? (clīvus, clīvī.) To step? (gradior, gradī.) A crossroads? (compitum, compitī.) A fork in the road? (bivium, biviī.) A bend? (flexus, flexūs.) A winding? (anfrāctus, anfrāctūs.) To bend? (flectō, flectere.) A raised roadbed? (agger, aggeris.) A flint? (silex, silicis.) A raised edge? (crepīdō, crepīdinis.) A wheel rut? (orbita, orbitae.) To spread? (sternō, sternere.) Dusty? (pulverulentus, pulverulenta, pulverulentum.) Muddy? (lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum.) A footprint? (vestīgium, vestīgiī.) Weary? (lassus, lassa, lassum.) To wear out? (dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre.) An overnight stop? (mānsiō, mānsiōnis.) A coachman? (raedārius, raedāriī.) A post? (statiō, statiōnis.) Travel money? (viāticum, viāticī.) To set out on? (ingredior, ingredī.) A departure? (profectiō, profectiōnis.) A return? (reditus, reditūs.) Travel abroad? (peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis.) To travel abroad? (peregrīnor, peregrīnārī.) To go forward? (prōgredior, prōgredī.) A wagon? (carrus, carrī.) A light gig? (cisium, cisiī.) A two-wheeled chariot? (essedum, essedī.) A covered carriage? (carpentum, carpentī.) A travelling coach? (carrūca, carrūcae.) A cart pole? (tēmō, tēmōnis.) A wheel hub? (modiolus, modiolī.) A drag shoe? (sufflāmen, sufflāminis.) To yoke? (subiungō, subiungere.) To unyoke? (disiungō, disiungere.)

Chapter 431

Rein, Leather strap, Bridle, To bridle, Whip

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about steering a horse: the reins, a leather strap, the bridle, bridling, and the whip.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 431: I can talk about steering a horse: the reins, a leather strap, the bridle, bridling, and the whip.

431.1 habēna, habēnae — a rein; a strap

Before the new one: say the Latin for to yoke, then the Latin for to unyoke.

You'll want to know: habēna, habēnae

habēna, habēnae — "a rein; a strap".

> Raedārius habēnās tenet et equī lentē eunt.
>
> The coachman holds the reins and the horses go slowly.

First declension, feminine: habēna, habēnae f., mostly plural: habēnās dare, to give a horse its head.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

habēna is built on habeō 'to have, to hold' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): the strap by which a horse is held.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: habēna, habēnae
- Say it: habēna, habēnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with habēna, habēnae
- Recall: say the Latin for to yoke, then the Latin for to unyoke, then say habēna, habēnae again

Before you move on

What does habēna, habēnae mean? ("A rein; a strap".) Say it once more.

431.2 lōrum, lōrī — a leather strap, a thong; (plural) reins

Before the new one: say the Latin for to unyoke, then the Latin for a rein.

You'll want to know: lōrum, lōrī

lōrum, lōrī — "a leather strap, a thong; (plural) reins".

Servus sarcinās lōrīs ad mūlum ligat.

The slave ties the bags to the mule with straps.

Second declension, neuter: lōrum, lōrī n. A strap of leather for tying, for reins, or for whipping.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lōrum is inherited. Lewis & Short compare Greek eulēra 'reins' and suggest an older form vlōrum; EtymDB gives no parent, so the link is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lōrum, lōrī
- Say it: lōrum, lōrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lōrum, lōrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to unyoke, then the Latin for a rein, then say lōrum, lōrī again

Before you move on

What does lōrum, lōrī mean? ("A leather strap, a thong; (plural) reins".) Say it once more.

431.3 frēnum, frēnī — a bridle, a bit

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rein, then the Latin for a leather strap.

You'll want to know: frēnum, frēnī

frēnum, frēnī — "a bridle, a bit".

Equus ferōx frēnum nōn amat.

A wild horse does not like the bridle.

Second declension, neuter: frēnum, frēnī n.; the plural is often frēnī m. Also spelled fraenum. English refrain 'to hold back' comes from refrēnāre 'to bridle back'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frēnum is inherited and is usually traced to PIE d^her- 'to hold, to support' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English refrain 'to hold back' comes from Latin refrēnāre, built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: frēnum, frēnī
- Say it: frēnum, frēnī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with frēnum, frēnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a rein, then the Latin for a leather strap, then say frēnum, frēnī again

Before you move on

What does frēnum, frēnī mean? ("A bridle, a bit".) Say it once more.

431.4 frēnō, frēnāre — to bridle; to hold back

Before the new one: say the Latin for a leather strap, then the Latin for a bridle.

You'll want to know: frēnō, frēnāre

frēnō, frēnāre — "to bridle; to hold back".

Puer equum frēnat, deinde ascendit.

The boy bridles the horse, then gets on.

frēnō, frēnāre, frēnāvī, frēnātum. Also figurative: īram frēnāre, to hold back anger.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frēnō is built on frēnum 'bridle' (Lewis & Short), a regular first-conjugation verb made from the noun.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: frēnō, frēnāre
- Say it: frēnō, frēnāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with frēnō, frēnāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a leather strap, then the Latin for a bridle, then say frēnō, frēnāre again

Before you move on

What does frēnō, frēnāre mean? ("To bridle; to hold back".) Say it once more.

431.5 scutica, scuticae — a whip, a lash

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bridle, then the Latin for to bridle.

You'll want to know: scutica, scuticae

scutica, scuticae — "a whip, a lash".

Raedārius scuticam habet, sed equōs nōn tangit.

The coachman has a whip, but he does not touch the horses.

First declension, feminine: scutica, scuticae f. A strap whip of leather.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scutica was borrowed from Greek; EtymDB traces it to skytos 'leather, hide'. Lewis & Short gloss it as a lash or whip but give no origin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: scutica, scuticae
- Say it: scutica, scuticae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with scutica, scuticae
- Recall: say the Latin for a bridle, then the Latin for to bridle, then say scutica, scuticae again

Before you move on

What does scutica, scuticae mean? ("A whip, a lash".) Say it once more.

Chapter 432

To ride, Saddle cloth, Spur, To jump down, To kick

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about riding: riding a horse, the saddle cloth, a spur, jumping down, and a horse kicking.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 432: I can talk about riding: riding a horse, the saddle cloth, a spur, jumping down, and a horse kicking.

432.1 equitō, equitāre — to ride (on horseback)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to bridle, then the Latin for a whip.

You'll want to know: equitō, equitāre

equitō, equitāre — "to ride (on horseback)".

> Mīles per campum equitat.
>
> The soldier rides across the plain.

equitō, equitāre, equitāvī, equitātum. English equitation comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

equitō is built on eques 'horseman' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which comes from equus 'horse'. English equitation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: equitō, equitāre
- Say it: equitō, equitāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with equitō, equitāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to bridle, then the Latin for a whip, then say equitō, equitāre again

Before you move on

What does equitō, equitāre mean? ("To ride (on horseback)".) Say it once more.

432.2 ephippium, ephippiī — a saddle cloth, a horse blanket

Before the new one: say the Latin for a whip, then the Latin for to ride.

You'll want to know: ephippium, ephippiī

ephippium, ephippiī — "a saddle cloth, a horse blanket".

Servus ephippium in equum pōnit.

The slave puts the saddle cloth on the horse.

Second declension, neuter: ephippium, ephippiī n. Riders sat on a padded cloth rather than a modern saddle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ephippium was borrowed from Greek ephippion 'saddlecloth', built from epi 'on' and hippos 'horse' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ephippium, ephippiī
- Say it: ephippium, ephippiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ephippium, ephippiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a whip, then the Latin for to ride, then say ephippium, ephippiī again

Before you move on

What does ephippium, ephippiī mean? ("A saddle cloth, a horse blanket".) Say it once more.

432.3 calcar, calcāris — a spur

Before the new one: say the Latin for to ride, then the Latin for a saddle cloth.

You'll want to know: calcar, calcāris

calcar, calcāris — "a spur".

Eques calcar habet, sed equus lentē it.

The rider has a spur, but the horse goes slowly.

Third declension, neuter: calcar, calcāris n. Figurative too: a spur to effort.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calcar is usually linked with calx, calcis 'heel': Lewis & Short compare calx and quote an ancient explanation that the spur is tied to the heel. EtymDB lists the word but gives no parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: calcar, calcāris
- Say it: calcar, calcāris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with calcar, calcāris
- Recall: say the Latin for to ride, then the Latin for a saddle cloth, then say calcar, calcāris again

Before you move on

What does calcar, calcāris mean? ("A spur".) Say it once more.

432.4 dēsiliō, dēsilīre — to jump down, to leap down

Before the new one: say the Latin for a saddle cloth, then the Latin for a spur.

You'll want to know: dēsiliō, dēsilīre

dēsiliō, dēsilīre — "to jump down, to leap down".

Ad portam eques ex equō dēsilit.

At the gate the rider jumps down from his horse.

dēsiliō, dēsilīre, dēsiluī, dēsultum, with ex or dē. English desultory comes from dēsultor, a circus rider who leapt from horse to horse.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēsiliō is built from dē- 'down' and saliō 'to leap, to jump' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English desultory comes from dēsultōrius, built on its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēsiliō, dēsilīre
- Say it: dēsiliō, dēsilīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēsiliō, dēsilīre
- Recall: say the Latin for a saddle cloth, then the Latin for a spur, then say dēsiliō, dēsilīre again

Before you move on

What does dēsiliō, dēsilīre mean? ("To jump down, to leap down".) Say it once more.

432.5 calcitrō, calcitrāre — to kick (with the heels); to resist

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spur, then the Latin for to jump down.

You'll want to know: calcitrō, calcitrāre

calcitrō, calcitrāre — "to kick (with the heels); to resist".

Mūlus calcitrat, et servus fugit.

The mule kicks, and the slave runs away.

A first-conjugation verb; the perfect is rare. English recalcitrant comes from recalcitrāre 'to kick back'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calcitrō is built on calx, calcis 'heel' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to strike out with the heels. English recalcitrant comes from the compound recalcitrāre.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: calcitrō, calcitrāre
- Say it: calcitrō, calcitrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with calcitrō, calcitrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a spur, then the Latin for to jump down, then say calcitrō, calcitrāre again

Before you move on

What does calcitrō, calcitrāre mean? ("To kick (with the heels); to resist".) Say it once more.

Chapter 433

Beast of burden, Nag, She-mule, Pack saddle, To load

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about animals that carry loads: a beast of burden, a nag, a she-mule, a pack saddle, and loading them.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 433: I can talk about animals that carry loads: a beast of burden, a nag, a she-mule, a pack saddle, and loading them.

433.1 iūmentum, iūmentī — a beast of burden, a draught animal

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to jump down, then the Latin for to kick.

You'll want to know: iūmentum, iūmentī

iūmentum, iūmentī — "a beast of burden, a draught animal".

> Iūmenta sarcinās mercātōrum per montēs portant.
>
> Pack animals carry the merchants' bags over the mountains.

Second declension, neuter: iūmentum, iūmentī n. Any animal that pulls or carries: horse, mule, ass or ox.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūmentum is usually traced to iungō 'to yoke' (Lewis & Short, from an older iugimentum): an animal put under the yoke. EtymDB lists it without a parent, so the line is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iūmentum, iūmentī
- Say it: iūmentum, iūmentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iūmentum, iūmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for to jump down, then the Latin for to kick, then say iūmentum, iūmentī again

Before you move on

What does iūmentum, iūmentī mean? ("A beast of burden, a draught animal".) Say it once more.

433.2 caballus, caballī — a nag, a pack horse

Before the new one: say the Latin for to kick, then the Latin for a beast of burden.

You'll want to know: caballus, caballī

caballus, caballī — "a nag, a pack horse".

Caballus vetus et lentus est, sed sarcinās portat.

The nag is old and slow, but it carries the bags.

Second declension, masculine: caballus, caballī m. An everyday, low word; the fine word is equus. French cheval and English cavalry come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caballus is usually traced to Gaulish caballos 'pack horse' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short also call it perhaps Celtic and compare Greek kaballēs. French cheval and, through Italian, English cavalry go back to it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: caballus, caballī
- Say it: caballus, caballī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with caballus, caballī
- Recall: say the Latin for to kick, then the Latin for a beast of burden, then say caballus, caballī again

Before you move on

What does caballus, caballī mean? ("A nag, a pack horse".) Say it once more.

433.3 mūla, mūlae — a she-mule

Before the new one: say the Latin for a beast of burden, then the Latin for a nag.

You'll want to know: mūla, mūlae

mūla, mūlae — "a she-mule".

Mūla parva est sed fortis.

The she-mule is small but strong.

First declension, feminine: mūla, mūlae f., the female of mūlus. Romans said a mule never foals, so cum mūla pepererit meant 'never'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūla is the feminine of mūlus 'mule' (Lewis & Short). EtymDB traces mūlus to PIE mukslós.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mūla, mūlae
- Say it: mūla, mūlae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mūla, mūlae
- Recall: say the Latin for a beast of burden, then the Latin for a nag, then say mūla, mūlae again

Before you move on

What does mūla, mūlae mean? ("A she-mule".) Say it once more.

433.4 clītellae, clītellārum — a pack saddle (for an ass or mule)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a nag, then the Latin for a she-mule.

You'll want to know: clītellae, clītellārum

clītellae, clītellārum — "a pack saddle (for an ass or mule)".

> Asinus clītellās portat et in clītellīs saccī sunt.
>
> The donkey carries a pack saddle, and on the pack saddle there are sacks.

First declension, feminine plural: clītellae, clītellārum f. One thing, plural form.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clītellae is inherited: EtymDB traces it to Proto-Italic kleitrelā. Lewis & Short give the sense but no origin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: clītellae, clītellārum
- Say it: clītellae, clītellārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with clītellae, clītellārum
- Recall: say the Latin for a nag, then the Latin for a she-mule, then say clītellae, clītellārum again

Before you move on

What does clītellae, clītellārum mean? ("A pack saddle (for an ass or mule)".) Say it once more.

433.5 onerō, onerāre — to load, to burden

Before the new one: say the Latin for a she-mule, then the Latin for a pack saddle.

You'll want to know: onerō, onerāre

onerō, onerāre — "to load, to burden".

Servī mūlōs sarcinīs onerant.

The slaves load the mules with baggage.

onerō, onerāre, onerāvī, onerātum, with the thing in the ablative. English onerous and exonerate come from the same root.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

onerō is built on onus, oneris 'a load, a burden', from PIE $h_3$énh$_2$os (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English onerous and exonerate come from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: onerō, onerāre
- Say it: onerō, onerāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with onerō, onerāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a she-mule, then the Latin for a pack saddle, then say onerō, onerāre again

Before you move on

What does onerō, onerāre mean? ("To load, to burden".) Say it once more.

Chapter 434

Stable, Manger, Hay, To neigh, Muleteer

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the stable at an inn: the stable, the manger, hay, horses neighing and the muleteer.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 434: I can talk about the stable at an inn: the stable, the manger, hay, horses neighing and the muleteer.

434.1 stabulum, stabulī — a stable, a stall; a lodging

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a pack saddle, then the Latin for to load.

You'll want to know: stabulum, stabulī

stabulum, stabulī — "a stable, a stall; a lodging".

> Vesperī equī in stabulō quiēscunt.
>
> In the evening the horses rest in the stable.

Second declension, neuter: stabulum, stabulī n. Also a cheap roadside lodging where people and beasts stayed. English stable comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stabulum is built on stō 'to stand' with the suffix -bulum 'place for' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a standing place. English stable comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: stabulum, stabulī
- Say it: stabulum, stabulī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with stabulum, stabulī
- Recall: say the Latin for a pack saddle, then the Latin for to load, then say stabulum, stabulī again

Before you move on

What does stabulum, stabulī mean? ("A stable, a stall; a lodging".) Say it once more.

434.2 praesēpe, praesēpis — a manger, a crib; a stall

Before the new one: say the Latin for to load, then the Latin for a stable.

You'll want to know: praesēpe, praesēpis

praesēpe, praesēpis — "a manger, a crib; a stall".

Servus cibum in praesēpe pōnit.

The slave puts food in the manger.

Third declension, neuter: praesēpe, praesēpis n. Also spelled praesaepe.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praesēpe is built on prae- 'in front' and saepiō 'to fence in' (Lewis & Short, under praesaepe): a fenced place in front of the animal. EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praesēpe, praesēpis
- Say it: praesēpe, praesēpis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praesēpe, praesēpis
- Recall: say the Latin for to load, then the Latin for a stable, then say praesēpe, praesēpis again

Before you move on

What does praesēpe, praesēpis mean? ("A manger, a crib; a stall".) Say it once more.

434.3 faenum, faenī — hay

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stable, then the Latin for a manger.

You'll want to know: faenum, faenī

faenum, faenī — "hay".

Aestāte agricolae faenum in prātīs colligunt.

In summer the farmers gather hay in the meadows.

Second declension, neuter: faenum, faenī n., also spelled fēnum. English fennel comes from faeniculum 'little hay'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

faenum is inherited; EtymDB traces it to PIE $d^h eh_1(y)$-no-, and Lewis & Short tie it to the root of fēmina and fēlīx. English fennel comes from its diminutive faeniculum (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: faenum, faenī
- Say it: faenum, faenī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with faenum, faenī
- Recall: say the Latin for a stable, then the Latin for a manger, then say faenum, faenī again

Before you move on

What does faenum, faenī mean? ("Hay".) Say it once more.

434.4 hinniō, hinnīre — to neigh, to whinny

Before the new one: say the Latin for a manger, then the Latin for hay.

You'll want to know: hinniō, hinnīre

hinniō, hinnīre — "to neigh, to whinny".

In stabulō equī hinniunt, quod cibum exspectant.

In the stable the horses neigh, because they are waiting for food.

Fourth conjugation: hinniō, hinnīre; the perfect is rare. A sound word, like English whinny.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hinniō is usually taken as an imitation of the sound a horse makes, like English whinny; Lewis & Short give no origin, and EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: hinniō, hinnīre
- Say it: hinniō, hinnīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with hinniō, hinnīre
- Recall: say the Latin for a manger, then the Latin for hay, then say hinniō, hinnīre again

Before you move on

What does hinniō, hinnīre mean? ("To neigh, to whinny".) Say it once more.

434.5 mūliō, mūliōnis — a muleteer, a mule driver

Before the new one: say the Latin for hay, then the Latin for to neigh.

You'll want to know: mūliō, mūliōnis

mūliō, mūliōnis — "a muleteer, a mule driver".

Mūliō mūlōs ad flūmen dūcit et aquam dat.

The muleteer leads the mules to the river and gives them water.

Third declension, masculine: mūliō, mūliōnis m. Muleteers hired out mules and carts to travellers.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūliō is built on mūlus 'mule' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short) with the suffix -iō for a person who works with something.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mūliō, mūliōnis
- Say it: mūliō, mūliōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mūliō, mūliōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for hay, then the Latin for to neigh, then say mūliō, mūliōnis again

Before you move on

What does mūliō, mūliōnis mean? ("A muleteer, a mule driver".) Say it once more.

Chapter 435

Vessel, Little boat, Skiff, Punt, Raft

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name boats of every size: a vessel, a little boat, a skiff, a punt and a raft.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 435: I can name boats of every size: a vessel, a little boat, a skiff, a punt and a raft.

435.1 nāvigium, nāvigiī — a vessel, a craft (any ship or boat)

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to neigh, then the Latin for a muleteer.

You'll want to know: nāvigium, nāvigiī

nāvigium, nāvigiī — "a vessel, a craft (any ship or boat)".

> In portū multa nāvigia sunt, magna et parva.
>
> In the harbour there are many vessels, large and small.

Second declension, neuter: nāvigium, nāvigiī n. A general word for anything that sails.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nāvigium is built on nāvigō 'to sail' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which comes from nāvis 'ship', inherited from PIE néh₂us 'boat'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nāvigium, nāvigiī
- Say it: nāvigium, nāvigiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nāvigium, nāvigiī
- Recall: say the Latin for to neigh, then the Latin for a muleteer, then say nāvigium, nāvigiī again

Before you move on

What does nāvigium, nāvigiī mean? ("A vessel, a craft (any ship or boat)".) Say it once more.

435.2 nāvicula, nāviculae — a little boat, a small ship

Before the new one: say the Latin for a muleteer, then the Latin for a vessel.

You'll want to know: nāvicula, nāviculae

nāvicula, nāviculae — "a little boat, a small ship".

Piscātor nāviculā in flūmine piscēs capit.

The fisherman catches fish from a little boat on the river.

First declension, feminine: nāvicula, nāviculae f., a diminutive of nāvis. English navicular 'boat-shaped' comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nāvicula is a diminutive of nāvis 'ship' (Lewis & Short), made with the ending -cula. nāvis is inherited from PIE néh₂us 'boat' (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nāvicula, nāviculae
- Say it: nāvicula, nāviculae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nāvicula, nāviculae
- Recall: say the Latin for a muleteer, then the Latin for a vessel, then say nāvicula, nāviculae again

Before you move on

What does nāvicula, nāviculae mean? ("A little boat, a small ship".) Say it once more.

435.3 scapha, scaphae — a skiff, a ship's boat

Before the new one: say the Latin for a vessel, then the Latin for a little boat.

You'll want to know: scapha, scaphae

scapha, scaphae — "a skiff, a ship's boat".

Nautae ē nāve in scapham dēscendunt et ad lītus remīs eunt.

The sailors climb down from the ship into the skiff and row to the shore.

First declension, feminine: scapha, scaphae f. The small boat a ship carried or towed, for going ashore.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scapha was borrowed from Greek skaphē 'light boat, skiff' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short compare scabō 'to scratch, to scrape', as of a hollowed-out boat.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: scapha, scaphae
- Say it: scapha, scaphae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with scapha, scaphae
- Recall: say the Latin for a vessel, then the Latin for a little boat, then say scapha, scaphae again

Before you move on

What does scapha, scaphae mean? ("A skiff, a ship's boat".) Say it once more.

435.4 linter, lintris — a punt, a small flat boat; a trough

Before the new one: say the Latin for a little boat, then the Latin for a skiff.

You'll want to know: linter, lintris

linter, lintris — "a punt, a small flat boat; a trough".

Agricolae lintribus flūmen trānseunt.

The farmers cross the river in punts.

Third declension, feminine: linter, lintris f. A flat river boat; also a wooden tub or trough.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of linter is not settled: Lewis & Short connect it, doubtfully, with Greek plynō 'to wash', a washtub before a boat, and EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: linter, lintris
- Say it: linter, lintris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with linter, lintris
- Recall: say the Latin for a little boat, then the Latin for a skiff, then say linter, lintris again

Before you move on

What does linter, lintris mean? ("A punt, a small flat boat; a trough".) Say it once more.

435.5 ratis, ratis — a raft; (in poetry) a boat

Before the new one: say the Latin for a skiff, then the Latin for a punt.

You'll want to know: ratis, ratis

ratis, ratis — "a raft; (in poetry) a boat".

Mīlitēs ratēs ex arboribus faciunt et flūmen trānseunt.

The soldiers make rafts out of trees and cross the river.

Third declension, feminine: ratis, ratis f. Logs tied together; poets use it for any ship.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ratis is inherited. Lewis & Short connect it with rēmus 'oar' and Greek eretēs 'rower', but EtymDB gives no parent, so the link is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ratis, ratis
- Say it: ratis, ratis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ratis, ratis
- Recall: say the Latin for a skiff, then the Latin for a punt, then say ratis, ratis again

Before you move on

What does ratis, ratis mean? ("A raft; (in poetry) a boat".) Say it once more.

Chapter 436

Stern, Prow, Keel, Rowing bench, For cargo

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the parts of a ship: the stern, the prow, the keel, the rowing benches, and say a ship is for cargo.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 436: I can name the parts of a ship: the stern, the prow, the keel, the rowing benches, and say a ship is for cargo.

436.1 puppis, puppis — the stern (of a ship); a ship

Before the new one: say the Latin for a punt, then the Latin for a raft.

You'll want to know: puppis, puppis

puppis, puppis — "the stern (of a ship); a ship".

> Gubernātor in puppī stat et nāvem regit.
>
> The helmsman stands at the stern and steers the ship.

Third declension, feminine, with accusative puppim and ablative puppī. English poop deck comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of puppis is not settled: Lewis & Short call it doubtful and EtymDB gives no parent. English poop, the raised deck at the stern, comes from it through French poupe.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: puppis, puppis
- Say it: puppis, puppis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with puppis, puppis
- Recall: say the Latin for a punt, then the Latin for a raft, then say puppis, puppis again

Before you move on

What does puppis, puppis mean? ("The stern (of a ship); a ship".) Say it once more.

436.2 prōra, prōrae — the prow, the bow (of a ship)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a raft, then the Latin for the stern.

You'll want to know: prōra, prōrae

prōra, prōrae — "the prow, the bow (of a ship)".

Nauta in prōrā stat et lītus spectat.

A sailor stands in the prow and watches the shore.

First declension, feminine: prōra, prōrae f. Prōra et puppis, the whole of a thing, front to back. English prow comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōra was borrowed from Greek prōira 'prow' (EtymDB), built on the root of pro 'forward'. English prow comes from it through French proue.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōra, prōrae
- Say it: prōra, prōrae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōra, prōrae
- Recall: say the Latin for a raft, then the Latin for the stern, then say prōra, prōrae again

Before you move on

What does prōra, prōrae mean? ("The prow, the bow (of a ship)".) Say it once more.

436.3 carīna, carīnae — the keel (of a ship); a boat

Before the new one: say the Latin for the stern, then the Latin for the prow.

You'll want to know: carīna, carīnae

carīna, carīnae — "the keel (of a ship); a boat".

Nāvis nova carīnam longam et validam habet.

The new ship has a long, strong keel.

First declension, feminine: carīna, carīnae f. First a nutshell, then the keel. English careen 'to tip a ship on its side' comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carīna is inherited and is usually traced to PIE ḱerh₂- (EtymDB); Lewis & Short compare Greek karyon 'nut', since its first sense is a nutshell. English careen comes from it through French carène.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: carīna, carīnae
- Say it: carīna, carīnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with carīna, carīnae
- Recall: say the Latin for the stern, then the Latin for the prow, then say carīna, carīnae again

Before you move on

What does carīna, carīnae mean? ("The keel (of a ship); a boat".) Say it once more.

436.4 trānstrum, trānstrī — a rowing bench, a thwart; a crossbeam

Before the new one: say the Latin for the prow, then the Latin for the keel.

You'll want to know: trānstrum, trānstrī

trānstrum, trānstrī — "a rowing bench, a thwart; a crossbeam".

Rēmigēs in trānstrīs sedent.

The rowers sit on the benches.

Second declension, neuter: trānstrum, trānstrī n. The bench runs across the ship. English transom is usually traced to it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trānstrum is built on trāns 'across' with the suffix -trum (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a beam laid across a ship. English transom is usually traced to it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: trānstrum, trānstrī
- Say it: trānstrum, trānstrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with trānstrum, trānstrī
- Recall: say the Latin for the prow, then the Latin for the keel, then say trānstrum, trānstrī again

Before you move on

What does trānstrum, trānstrī mean? ("A rowing bench, a thwart; a crossbeam".) Say it once more.

436.5 onerārius, onerāria, onerārium — for cargo, for carrying loads

Before the new one: say the Latin for the keel, then the Latin for a rowing bench.

You'll want to know: onerārius, onerāria, onerārium

onerārius, onerāria, onerārium — "for cargo, for carrying loads".

Nāvēs onerāriae frūmentum ad urbem vehunt.

Cargo ships carry grain to the city.

An adjective of three endings. Nāvis onerāria, a merchant ship, or onerāria on its own; iūmentum onerārium, a pack animal.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

onerārius is built on onus, oneris 'a load' with the suffix -ārius (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English onerary 'fit for loads' is a rare borrowing of it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: onerārius, onerāria, onerārium
- Say it: onerārius, onerāria, onerārium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with onerārius, onerāria, onerārium
- Recall: say the Latin for the keel, then the Latin for a rowing bench, then say onerārius, onerāria, onerārium again

Before you move on

What does onerārius, onerāria, onerārium mean? ("For cargo, for carrying loads".) Say it once more.

Chapter 437

Ship's rope, Rope, Tackle, Rudder, To row

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about ropes, steering and rowing: a ship's rope, a rope, the tackle, the rudder, and rowing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 437: I can talk about ropes, steering and rowing: a ship's rope, a rope, the tackle, the rudder, and rowing.

437.1 rudēns, rudentis — a ship's rope, a line

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a rowing bench, then the Latin for for cargo.

You'll want to know: rudēns, rudentis

rudēns, rudentis — "a ship's rope, a line".

> Nautae rudentēs trahunt et vēlum tollunt.
>
> The sailors pull the ropes and raise the sail.

Third declension, masculine: rudēns, rudentis m. The ropes of the rigging.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of rudēns is not settled: Lewis & Short call it unknown (ancient writers linked it with rudō 'to roar', from the creaking of the ropes), and EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rudēns, rudentis
- Say it: rudēns, rudentis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rudēns, rudentis
- Recall: say the Latin for a rowing bench, then the Latin for for cargo, then say rudēns, rudentis again

Before you move on

What does rudēns, rudentis mean? ("A ship's rope, a line".) Say it once more.

437.2 fūnis, fūnis — a rope, a cord

Before the new one: say the Latin for for cargo, then the Latin for a ship's rope.

You'll want to know: fūnis, fūnis

fūnis, fūnis — "a rope, a cord".

Nāvis fūne ad lītus ligātur.

The ship is tied to the shore with a rope.

Third declension, usually masculine: fūnis, fūnis m. English funicular, a railway pulled by a rope, comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fūnis is inherited and is usually traced to PIE $b^h end^h$- 'to bind, to tie' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short also suggest, with a perhaps, the Sanskrit root for binding. English funicular comes from its diminutive fūniculus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fūnis, fūnis
- Say it: fūnis, fūnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fūnis, fūnis
- Recall: say the Latin for for cargo, then the Latin for a ship's rope, then say fūnis, fūnis again

Before you move on

What does fūnis, fūnis mean? ("A rope, a cord".) Say it once more.

437.3 armāmenta, armāmentōrum — a ship's tackle, the rigging; equipment

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ship's rope, then the Latin for a rope.

You'll want to know: armāmenta, armāmentōrum

armāmenta, armāmentōrum — "a ship's tackle, the rigging; equipment".

Procella armāmenta nāvis frangit.

The storm breaks the ship's rigging.

Second declension, neuter plural: armāmenta, armāmentōrum n. Masts, sails and ropes together. English armament comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

armāmenta is built on arma 'gear, equipment' (Lewis & Short) with the suffix -mentum. English armament comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: armāmenta, armāmentōrum
- Say it: armāmenta, armāmentōrum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with armāmenta, armāmentōrum
- Recall: say the Latin for a ship's rope, then the Latin for a rope, then say armāmenta, armāmentōrum again

Before you move on

What does armāmenta, armāmentōrum mean? ("A ship's tackle, the rigging; equipment".) Say it once more.

437.4 gubernāculum, gubernāculī — a rudder, a steering oar

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rope, then the Latin for a ship's tackle.

You'll want to know: gubernāculum, gubernāculī

gubernāculum, gubernāculī — "a rudder, a steering oar".

Gubernātor gubernāculum tenet et nāvem ad portum dūcit.

The helmsman holds the rudder and guides the ship to harbour.

Second declension, neuter: gubernāculum, gubernāculī n. Also the helm of the state. English govern comes from the verb gubernāre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gubernāculum is built on gubernō 'to steer' (Lewis & Short), which was borrowed from Greek kybernaō. English govern comes from gubernō through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gubernāculum, gubernāculī
- Say it: gubernāculum, gubernāculī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gubernāculum, gubernāculī
- Recall: say the Latin for a rope, then the Latin for a ship's tackle, then say gubernāculum, gubernāculī again

Before you move on

What does gubernāculum, gubernāculī mean? ("A rudder, a steering oar".) Say it once more.

437.5 rēmigō, rēmigāre — to row

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ship's tackle, then the Latin for a rudder.

You'll want to know: rēmigō, rēmigāre

rēmigō, rēmigāre — "to row".

Ventus nūllus est; itaque nautae rēmigant.

There is no wind; so the sailors row.

A first-conjugation verb: rēmigō, rēmigāre; the perfect is rare. The rower is rēmex, rēmigis.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēmigō is built from rēmus 'oar' and agō 'to drive' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to drive the oars.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rēmigō, rēmigāre
- Say it: rēmigō, rēmigāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rēmigō, rēmigāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a ship's tackle, then the Latin for a rudder, then say rēmigō, rēmigāre again

Before you move on

What does rēmigō, rēmigāre mean? ("To row".) Say it once more.

Chapter 438

To go on board, Transport, Ship's master, To set sail, Ferryman

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about taking a ship: going on board, transport and its cost, the ship's master, setting sail, and the ferryman.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 438: I can talk about taking a ship: going on board, transport and its cost, the ship's master, setting sail, and the ferryman.

438.1 cōnscendō, cōnscendere — to go on board, to embark; to climb

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a rudder, then the Latin for to row.

You'll want to know: cōnscendō, cōnscendere

cōnscendō, cōnscendere — "to go on board, to embark; to climb".

> Prīmā lūce mercātōrēs nāvem cōnscendunt.
>
> At first light the merchants go on board the ship.

cōnscendō, cōnscendere, cōnscendī, cōnscēnsum. Nāvem cōnscendere, to embark; in nāvem is also found.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnscendō is built from con- and scandō 'to climb' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to climb up into a ship.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnscendō, cōnscendere
- Say it: cōnscendō, cōnscendere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnscendō, cōnscendere
- Recall: say the Latin for a rudder, then the Latin for to row, then say cōnscendō, cōnscendere again

Before you move on

What does cōnscendō, cōnscendere mean? ("To go on board, to embark; to climb".) Say it once more.

438.2 vectūra, vectūrae — transport, carriage (of goods or people); the fare

Before the new one: say the Latin for to row, then the Latin for to go on board.

You'll want to know: vectūra, vectūrae

vectūra, vectūrae — "transport, carriage (of goods or people); the fare".

Mercātor prō vectūrā mercium nummōs dat.

The merchant pays coins for the transport of his goods.

First declension, feminine: vectūra, vectūrae f., from vehō 'to carry'. Also the price paid for it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vectūra is built on vehō 'to carry' (Lewis & Short), from its participle vectus, with the ending -ūra.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vectūra, vectūrae
- Say it: vectūra, vectūrae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vectūra, vectūrae
- Recall: say the Latin for to row, then the Latin for to go on board, then say vectūra, vectūrae again

Before you move on

What does vectūra, vectūrae mean? ("Transport, carriage (of goods or people); the fare".) Say it once more.

438.3 nauclērus, nauclērī — a ship's master, a shipowner

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go on board, then the Latin for transport.

You'll want to know: nauclērus, nauclērī

nauclērus, nauclērī — "a ship's master, a shipowner".

Nauclērus nautās vocat et nāvem parat.

The ship's master calls the sailors and gets the ship ready.

Second declension, masculine: nauclērus, nauclērī m. The man who owns or commands a merchant ship.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nauclērus was borrowed from Greek nauklēros 'shipowner' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), built from naus 'ship' and klēros 'lot, portion'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nauclērus, nauclērī
- Say it: nauclērus, nauclērī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nauclērus, nauclērī
- Recall: say the Latin for to go on board, then the Latin for transport, then say nauclērus, nauclērī again

Before you move on

What does nauclērus, nauclērī mean? ("A ship's master, a shipowner".) Say it once more.

438.4 vēlificor, vēlificārī — to set sail, to sail

Before the new one: say the Latin for transport, then the Latin for a ship's master.

You'll want to know: vēlificor, vēlificārī

vēlificor, vēlificārī — "to set sail, to sail".

Ventus secundus est, et nautae laetī vēlificantur.

The wind is favourable, and the sailors set sail happily.

Deponent: vēlificor, vēlificārī, vēlificātus sum. Also an active form vēlificō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēlificor is built on vēlum 'sail' and faciō 'to make' (Lewis & Short): to make sail. EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vēlificor, vēlificārī
- Say it: vēlificor, vēlificārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vēlificor, vēlificārī
- Recall: say the Latin for transport, then the Latin for a ship's master, then say vēlificor, vēlificārī again

Before you move on

What does vēlificor, vēlificārī mean? ("To set sail, to sail".) Say it once more.

438.5 portitor, portitōris — a ferryman, a boatman; a customs officer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ship's master, then the Latin for to set sail.

You'll want to know: portitor, portitōris

portitor, portitōris — "a ferryman, a boatman; a customs officer".

Portitor viātōrēs ad alteram rīpam vehit.

The ferryman carries the travellers to the other bank.

Third declension, masculine: portitor, portitōris m. Two words in one spelling: a ferryman, and the officer who takes harbour dues.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Lewis & Short list two words portitor: the customs officer, built on portus 'harbour', and the carrier or ferryman, from the root of portō 'to carry'. EtymDB does not list it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: portitor, portitōris
- Say it: portitor, portitōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with portitor, portitōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a ship's master, then the Latin for to set sail, then say portitor, portitōris again

Before you move on

What does portitor, portitōris mean? ("A ferryman, a boatman; a customs officer".) Say it once more.

438.6 Words from chapters 431–438 — a review

Say the Latin for a rein and a leather strap.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a rein, a leather strap, a bridle, to bridle, a whip
- to ride, a saddle cloth, a spur, to jump down, to kick
- a beast of burden, a nag, a she-mule, a pack saddle, to load
- a stable, a manger, hay, to neigh, a muleteer
- a vessel, a little boat, a skiff, a punt, a raft

- the stern, the prow, the keel, a rowing bench, for cargo
- a ship's rope, a rope, a ship's tackle, a rudder, to row
- to go on board, transport, a ship's master, to set sail, a ferryman

Before you move on

A rein? (habēna, habēnae.) A leather strap? (lōrum, lōrī.) A bridle? (frēnum, frēnī.) To bridle? (frēnō, frēnāre.) A whip? (scutica, scuticae.) To ride? (equitō, equitāre.) A saddle cloth? (ephippium, ephippiī.) A spur? (calcar, calcāris.) To jump down? (dēsiliō, dēsilīre.) To kick? (calcitrō, calcitrāre.) A beast of burden? (iūmentum, iūmentī.) A nag? (caballus, caballī.) A she-mule? (mūla, mūlae.) A pack saddle? (clītellae, clītellārum.) To load? (onerō, onerāre.) A stable? (stabulum, stabulī.) A manger? (praesēpe, praesēpis.) Hay? (faenum, faenī.) To neigh? (hinniō, hinnīre.) A muleteer? (mūliō, mūliōnis.) A vessel? (nāvigium, nāvigiī.) A little boat? (nāvicula, nāviculae.) A skiff? (scapha, scaphae.) A punt? (linter, lintris.) A raft? (ratis, ratis.) The stern? (puppis, puppis.) The prow? (prōra, prōrae.) The keel? (carīna, carīnae.) A rowing bench? (trānstrum, trānstrī.) For cargo? (onerārius, onerāria, onerārium.) A ship's rope? (rudēns, rudentis.) A rope? (fūnis, fūnis.) A ship's tackle? (armāmenta, armāmentōrum.) A rudder? (gubernāculum, gubernāculī.) To row? (rēmigō, rēmigāre.) To go on board? (cōnscendō, cōnscendere.) Transport? (vectūra, vectūrae.) A ship's master? (nauclērus, nauclērī.) To set sail? (vēlificor, vēlificārī.) A ferryman? (portitor, portitōris.)

Chapter 439

To put in, To step out, To haul ashore, To launch, Navigable

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about arriving and leaving by ship: putting in, going ashore, hauling a ship up, launching it, and a navigable river.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 439: I can talk about arriving and leaving by ship: putting in, going ashore, hauling a ship up, launching it, and a navigable river.

439.1 appellō, appellere — to put in (to land), to bring a ship to shore

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to set sail, then the Latin for a ferryman.

You'll want to know: appellō, appellere

appellō, appellere — "to put in (to land), to bring a ship to shore".

> Nautae nāvem ad lītus appellunt.
>
> The sailors bring the ship in to the shore.

appellō, appellere, appulī, appulsum, third conjugation. Do not mix it up with appellō, appellāre 'to call', a different verb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

appellō, appellere is built from ad- 'to' and pellō 'to drive, to push' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to drive a ship to land.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: appellō, appellere
- Say it: appellō, appellere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with appellō, appellere
- Recall: say the Latin for to set sail, then the Latin for a ferryman, then say appellō, appellere again

Before you move on

What does appellō, appellere mean? ("To put in (to land), to bring a ship to shore".) Say it once more.

439.2 ēgredior, ēgredī — to step out, to go out; to land, to disembark

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ferryman, then the Latin for to put in.

You'll want to know: ēgredior, ēgredī

ēgredior, ēgredī — "to step out, to go out; to land, to disembark".

Viātōrēs ē nāve ēgrediuntur et ad caupōnam ambulant.

The travellers get off the ship and walk to the inn.

Deponent: ēgredior, ēgredī, ēgressus sum. Ē nāve ēgredī, to disembark. English egress comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēgredior is built from ē(x)- 'out' and gradior 'to step' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English egress comes from its participle ēgressus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēgredior, ēgredī
- Say it: ēgredior, ēgredī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēgredior, ēgredī
- Recall: say the Latin for a ferryman, then the Latin for to put in, then say ēgredior, ēgredī again

Before you move on

What does ēgredior, ēgredī mean? ("To step out, to go out; to land, to disembark".) Say it once more.

439.3 subdūcō, subdūcere — to haul ashore, to draw up (a ship); to take away

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put in, then the Latin for to step out.

You'll want to know: subdūcō, subdūcere

subdūcō, subdūcere — "to haul ashore, to draw up (a ship); to take away".

Hieme nautae nāvēs in līitus subdūcunt.

In winter the sailors haul the ships up on the shore.

subdūcō, subdūcere, subdūxī, subductum. Ancient ships were pulled up on the beach for the winter.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

subdūcō is built from sub- 'from under, up' and dūcō 'to lead, to draw' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English subduction comes from the noun subductiō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: subdūcō, subdūcere
- Say it: subdūcō, subdūcere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with subdūcō, subdūcere
- Recall: say the Latin for to put in, then the Latin for to step out, then say subdūcō, subdūcere again

Before you move on

What does subdūcō, subdūcere mean? ("To haul ashore, to draw up (a ship); to take away".) Say it once more.

439.4 dēdūcō, dēdūcere — to launch (a ship); to lead away, to escort

Before the new one: say the Latin for to step out, then the Latin for to haul ashore.

You'll want to know: dēdūcō, dēdūcere

dēdūcō, dēdūcere — "to launch (a ship); to lead away, to escort".

Vēre nautae nāvēs in mare dēdūcunt.

In spring the sailors launch the ships into the sea.

dēdūcō, dēdūcere, dēdūxī, dēductum. The opposite of subdūcō. English deduce and deduct come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēdūcō is built from dē- 'down, away' and dūcō 'to lead' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to draw a ship down into the water. English deduce and deduct come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēdūcō, dēdūcere
- Say it: dēdūcō, dēdūcere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēdūcō, dēdūcere
- Recall: say the Latin for to step out, then the Latin for to haul ashore, then say dēdūcō, dēdūcere again

Before you move on

What does dēdūcō, dēdūcere mean? ("To launch (a ship); to lead away, to escort".) Say it once more.

439.5 nāvigābilis, nāvigābile — navigable

Before the new one: say the Latin for to haul ashore, then the Latin for to launch.

You'll want to know: nāvigābilis, nāvigābile

nāvigābilis, nāvigābile — "navigable".

Flūmen magnum et altum est, itaque nāvigābile.

The river is big and deep, and so it is navigable.

An adjective of two endings, from nāvigō 'to sail' with -bilis 'that can be'. English navigable comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nāvigābilis is built on nāvigō 'to sail' with the suffix -bilis 'that can be' (Lewis & Short). English navigable comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nāvigābilis, nāvigābile
- Say it: nāvigābilis, nāvigābile, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nāvigābilis, nāvigābile
- Recall: say the Latin for to haul ashore, then the Latin for to launch, then say nāvigābilis, nāvigābile again

Before you move on

What does nāvigābilis, nāvigābile mean? ("Navigable".) Say it once more.

Chapter 440

To toss on the waves, To be seasick, To carry down, To take across, To swim to safety

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a rough crossing: tossing on the waves, being seasick, being carried off course, crossing over, and swimming to safety.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 440: I can talk about a rough crossing: tossing on the waves, being seasick, being carried off course, crossing over, and swimming to safety.

440.1 flūctuō, flūctuāre — to toss on the waves, to rise in waves; to waver

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to launch, then the Latin for navigable.

You'll want to know: flūctuō, flūctuāre

flūctuō, flūctuāre — "to toss on the waves, to rise in waves; to waver".

> In tempestāte nāvis diū flūctuat.
>
> In the storm the ship tosses on the waves for a long time.

flūctuō, flūctuāre, flūctuāvī; also a deponent flūctuor. Of the mind: to waver. English fluctuate comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flūctuō is built on flūctus 'wave' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which comes from fluō 'to flow'. English fluctuate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: flūctuō, flūctuāre
- Say it: flūctuō, flūctuāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with flūctuō, flūctuāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to launch, then the Latin for navigable, then say flūctuō, flūctuāre again

Before you move on

What does flūctuō, flūctuāre mean? ("To toss on the waves, to rise in waves; to waver".) Say it once more.

440.2 nauseō, nauseāre — to be seasick; to feel sick

Before the new one: say the Latin for navigable, then the Latin for to toss on the waves.

You'll want to know: nauseō, nauseāre

nauseō, nauseāre — "to be seasick; to feel sick".

Mare asperum est, et multī viātōrēs nauseant.

The sea is rough, and many travellers are seasick.

nauseō, nauseāre, nauseāvī, nauseātum, from nausea 'seasickness'. English nauseate comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nauseō is built on nausea 'seasickness' (Lewis & Short), which was borrowed from Greek nausiā, built on naus 'ship'. English nauseate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nauseō, nauseāre
- Say it: nauseō, nauseāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nauseō, nauseāre
- Recall: say the Latin for navigable, then the Latin for to toss on the waves, then say nauseō, nauseāre again

Before you move on

What does nauseō, nauseāre mean? ("To be seasick; to feel sick".) Say it once more.

440.3 dēferō, dēferre — to carry down, to carry off; (of ships) to drive off course; to report

Before the new one: say the Latin for to toss on the waves, then the Latin for to be seasick.

You'll want to know: dēferō, dēferre

dēferō, dēferre — "to carry down, to carry off; (of ships) to drive off course; to report".

Ventus nāvem ad ignōtum lītus dēfert.

The wind drives the ship off course to an unknown shore.

Irregular: dēferō, dēferre, dētulī, dēlātum. In the passive, dēferrī, of a ship carried off its course. English defer comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēferō is built from dē- 'down, away' and ferō 'to carry' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English defer comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēferō, dēferre
- Say it: dēferō, dēferre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēferō, dēferre
- Recall: say the Latin for to toss on the waves, then the Latin for to be seasick, then say dēferō, dēferre again

Before you move on

What does dēferō, dēferre mean? ("To carry down, to carry off; (of ships) to drive off course; to report".) Say it once more.

440.4 trāiciō, trāicere — to take across, to cross over; to throw across

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be seasick, then the Latin for to carry down.

You'll want to know: trāiciō, trāicere

trāiciō, trāicere — "to take across, to cross over; to throw across".

Mīlitēs equōs nāvibus trāns flūmen trāiciunt.

The soldiers take their horses across the river in boats.

trāiciō, trāicere, trāiēcī, trāiectum. Mare trāicere, to cross the sea. English trajectory comes from its participle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trāiciō is built from trāns 'across' and iaciō 'to throw' (Lewis & Short). English trajectory comes from its participle trāiectus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: trāiciō, trāicere
- Say it: trāiciō, trāicere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with trāiciō, trāicere
- Recall: say the Latin for to be seasick, then the Latin for to carry down, then say trāiciō, trāicere again

Before you move on

What does trāiciō, trāicere mean? ("To take across, to cross over; to throw across".) Say it once more.

440.5 ēnatō, ēnatāre — to swim to safety, to swim out

Before the new one: say the Latin for to carry down, then the Latin for to take across.

You'll want to know: ēnatō, ēnatāre

ēnatō, ēnatāre — "to swim to safety, to swim out".

Nāvis frangitur, sed nauta ad lītus ēnatat.

The ship breaks up, but the sailor swims to the shore and is safe.

ēnatō, ēnatāre, ēnatāvī. From ē- 'out' and natō 'to swim': to swim out of danger.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēnatō is built from ē(x)- 'out' and natō 'to swim' (Lewis & Short): to swim out of the water, to escape by swimming.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēnatō, ēnatāre
- Say it: ēnatō, ēnatāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēnatō, ēnatāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to carry down, then the Latin for to take across, then say ēnatō, ēnatāre again

Before you move on

What does ēnatō, ēnatāre mean? ("To swim to safety, to swim out".) Say it once more.

Chapter 441

Harbour, Dockyard, Tidal inlet, Lighthouse, Headland

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a harbour and its coast: the harbour, the dockyard, a tidal inlet, the lighthouse and a headland.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 441: I can describe a harbour and its coast: the harbour, the dockyard, a tidal inlet, the lighthouse and a headland.

441.1 portus, portūs — a harbour, a port

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to take across, then the Latin for to swim to safety.

You'll want to know: portus, portūs

portus, portūs — "a harbour, a port".

> Tandem nāvis in portum intrat, et nautae gaudent.
>
> At last the ship comes into the harbour, and the sailors are glad.

Fourth declension, masculine: portus, portūs m. Figurative too: a safe place after trouble. English port comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

portus is inherited from Proto-Italic portus, from PIE pértus 'crossing, passage' (EtymDB), the same root as porta 'gate'. English port comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: portus, portūs
- Say it: portus, portūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with portus, portūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to take across, then the Latin for to swim to safety, then say portus, portūs again

Before you move on

What does portus, portūs mean? ("A harbour, a port".) Say it once more.

441.2 nāvāle, nāvālis — a dockyard, a place where ships are kept

Before the new one: say the Latin for to swim to safety, then the Latin for a harbour.

You'll want to know: nāvāle, nāvālis

nāvāle, nāvālis — "a dockyard, a place where ships are kept".

In nāvālī fabrī nāvēs novās aedificant.

In the dockyard the workmen build new ships.

Third declension, neuter: nāvāle, nāvālis n., often plural nāvālia. It is the neuter of the adjective nāvālis 'of ships'; English naval comes from that.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nāvāle is the neuter of the adjective nāvālis 'of ships', built on nāvis 'ship' (Lewis & Short). English naval comes from the adjective.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nāvāle, nāvālis
- Say it: nāvāle, nāvālis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nāvāle, nāvālis
- Recall: say the Latin for to swim to safety, then the Latin for a harbour, then say nāvāle, nāvālis again

Before you move on

What does nāvāle, nāvālis mean? ("A dockyard, a place where ships are kept".) Say it once more.

441.3 aestuārium, aestuāriī — a tidal inlet, a tidal marsh; an estuary

Before the new one: say the Latin for a harbour, then the Latin for a dockyard.

You'll want to know: aestuārium, aestuāriī

aestuārium, aestuāriī — "a tidal inlet, a tidal marsh; an estuary".

Ubi mare recēdit, in aestuāriō lutum est.

When the sea goes back, there is mud in the tidal inlet.

Second declension, neuter: aestuārium, aestuāriī n. Land the tide covers and uncovers. English estuary comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aestuārium is built on aestus 'heat, surge, tide' with the suffix -ārium (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English estuary comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aestuārium, aestuāriī
- Say it: aestuārium, aestuāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aestuārium, aestuāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a harbour, then the Latin for a dockyard, then say aestuārium, aestuāriī again

Before you move on

What does aestuārium, aestuāriī mean? ("A tidal inlet, a tidal marsh; an estuary".) Say it once more.

441.4 pharus, pharī — a lighthouse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dockyard, then the Latin for a tidal inlet.

You'll want to know: pharus, pharī

pharus, pharī — "a lighthouse".

Nocte lūx pharī procul ardet, et nautae portum inveniunt.

At night the light of the lighthouse burns far off, and the sailors find the harbour.

Second declension, feminine: pharus, pharī f. (also pharos). Named after a famous lighthouse island.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pharus was borrowed from Greek pharos, the name of the island whose lighthouse became famous (EtymDB; Lewis & Short); the name then became the common word for any lighthouse.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pharus, pharī
- Say it: pharus, pharī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pharus, pharī
- Recall: say the Latin for a dockyard, then the Latin for a tidal inlet, then say pharus, pharī again

Before you move on

What does pharus, pharī mean? ("A lighthouse".) Say it once more.

441.5 prōmunturium, prōmunturiī — a headland, a promontory

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tidal inlet, then the Latin for a lighthouse.

You'll want to know: prōmunturium, prōmunturiī

prōmunturium, prōmunturiī — "a headland, a promontory".

Nāvis prope prōmunturium altum nāvigat.

The ship sails near a high headland.

Second declension, neuter: prōmunturium, prōmunturiī n., also spelled prōmontōrium. English promontory comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōmunturium is usually traced to prō 'forward' and mineō 'to jut out' (Lewis & Short): land that juts forward into the sea. English promontory comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōmunturium, prōmunturiī
- Say it: prōmunturium, prōmunturiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōmunturium, prōmunturiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a tidal inlet, then the Latin for a lighthouse, then say prōmunturium, prōmunturiī again

Before you move on

What does prōmunturium, prōmunturiī mean? ("A headland, a promontory".) Say it once more.

Chapter 442

Open sea, High sea, Level sea, Of the sea, Coastal

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the open sea and the coast: the open sea, the high sea, the level sea, things of the sea, and coastal places.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 442: I can talk about the open sea and the coast: the open sea, the high sea, the level sea, things of the sea, and coastal places.

442.1 salum, salī — the open sea, the swell (of the sea)

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a lighthouse, then the Latin for a headland.

You'll want to know: salum, salī

salum, salī — "the open sea, the swell (of the sea)".

> Nāvēs extrā portum in salō ad ancorās stant.
>
> The ships lie at anchor on the open sea outside the harbour.

Second declension, neuter: salum, salī n. The rolling sea off the coast, where ships ride at anchor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

salum matches Greek salos 'the rolling swell of the sea' (Lewis & Short), but EtymDB gives no parent, so whether it was borrowed is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: salum, salī
- Say it: salum, salī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with salum, salī
- Recall: say the Latin for a lighthouse, then the Latin for a headland, then say salum, salī again

Before you move on

What does salum, salī mean? ("The open sea, the swell (of the sea)".) Say it once more.

442.2 pelagus, pelagī — the high sea, the open sea

Before the new one: say the Latin for a headland, then the Latin for the open sea.

You'll want to know: pelagus, pelagī

pelagus, pelagī — "the high sea, the open sea".

Nāvis parva in pelagō sōla est.

The small ship is alone on the high sea.

Second declension but neuter: pelagus, pelagī n. A poetic and Greek word. English pelagic 'of the open sea' is related.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pelagus was borrowed from Greek pelagos 'the sea, the open sea' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which explains why it keeps the Greek neuter gender in -us.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pelagus, pelagī
- Say it: pelagus, pelagī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pelagus, pelagī
- Recall: say the Latin for a headland, then the Latin for the open sea, then say pelagus, pelagī again

Before you move on

What does pelagus, pelagī mean? ("The high sea, the open sea".) Say it once more.

442.3 aequor, aequoris — the level sea, the sea's surface; a level plain

Before the new one: say the Latin for the open sea, then the Latin for the high sea.

You'll want to know: aequor, aequoris

aequor, aequoris — "the level sea, the sea's surface; a level plain".

Ventus nūllus est, et aequor quiētum est.

There is no wind, and the surface of the sea is still.

Third declension, neuter: aequor, aequoris n. First any flat surface, then above all the calm, level sea (a word of poetry).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aequor is built on aequus 'level, even' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a level surface, and so the sea when it is calm.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aequor, aequoris
- Say it: aequor, aequoris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aequor, aequoris
- Recall: say the Latin for the open sea, then the Latin for the high sea, then say aequor, aequoris again

Before you move on

What does aequor, aequoris mean? ("The level sea, the sea's surface; a level plain".) Say it once more.

442.4 marīnus, marīna, marīnum — of the sea, marine

Before the new one: say the Latin for the high sea, then the Latin for the level sea.

You'll want to know: marīnus, marīna, marīnum

marīnus, marīna, marīnum — "of the sea, marine".

Aqua marīna salsa est, nōn dulcis.

Sea water is salty, not sweet.

An adjective of three endings, from mare 'sea'. English marine and marina come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

marīnus is built on mare 'sea', inherited from Proto-Italic mari, PIE móri (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English marine and marina come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: marīnus, marīna, marīnum
- Say it: marīnus, marīna, marīnum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with marīnus, marīna, marīnum
- Recall: say the Latin for the high sea, then the Latin for the level sea, then say marīnus, marīna, marīnum again

Before you move on

What does marīnus, marīna, marīnum mean? ("Of the sea, marine".) Say it once more.

442.5 maritimus, maritima, maritimum — coastal, by the sea; of the sea

Before the new one: say the Latin for the level sea, then the Latin for of the sea.

You'll want to know: maritimus, maritima, maritimum

maritimus, maritima, maritimum — "coastal, by the sea; of the sea".

Oppida maritima multōs mercātōrēs habent.

Towns by the sea have many merchants.

An adjective of three endings, from mare 'sea'. Ōra maritima, the sea coast. English maritime comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maritimus is built on mare 'sea' with an old suffix also seen in fīnitimus 'neighbouring' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English maritime comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: maritimus, maritima, maritimum
- Say it: maritimus, maritima, maritimum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with maritimus, maritima, maritimum
- Recall: say the Latin for the level sea, then the Latin for of the sea, then say maritimus, maritima, maritimum again

Before you move on

What does maritimus, maritima, maritimum mean? ("Coastal, by the sea; of the sea".) Say it once more.

Chapter 443

Sandbank, Billow, Shallows, Strait, To sail past

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the dangers of the water: a sandbank, the billows, the shallows, a strait, and sailing past.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 443: I can talk about the dangers of the water: a sandbank, the billows, the shallows, a strait, and sailing past.

443.1 syrtis, syrtis — a sandbank, a shoal

> Before the new one: say the Latin for of the sea, then the Latin for coastal.

You'll want to know: syrtis, syrtis

syrtis, syrtis — "a sandbank, a shoal".

> Gubernātor syrtēs vītat et nāvem in altum dūcit.
>
> The helmsman avoids the sandbanks and steers the ship into deep water.

Third declension, feminine: syrtis, syrtis f. Any sandbank, and above all the two dangerous sandy gulfs off the African coast.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

syrtis was borrowed from Greek syrtis 'sandbank' (Lewis & Short), above all the two gulfs off Africa full of shoals. EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: syrtis, syrtis
- Say it: syrtis, syrtis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with syrtis, syrtis
- Recall: say the Latin for of the sea, then the Latin for coastal, then say syrtis, syrtis again

Before you move on

What does syrtis, syrtis mean? ("A sandbank, a shoal".) Say it once more.

443.2 flūctus, flūctūs — a billow, a wave; a surge

Before the new one: say the Latin for coastal, then the Latin for a sandbank.

You'll want to know: flūctus, flūctūs

flūctus, flūctūs — "a billow, a wave; a surge".

Magnī flūctūs in lītus cadunt.

Great waves fall on the shore.

Fourth declension, masculine: flūctus, flūctūs m. A bigger word than unda: the wave as it rolls and breaks.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flūctus is built on fluō 'to flow' with the noun suffix -tus (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a flowing, a surge of water.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: flūctus, flūctūs
- Say it: flūctus, flūctūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with flūctus, flūctūs
- Recall: say the Latin for coastal, then the Latin for a sandbank, then say flūctus, flūctūs again

Before you move on

What does flūctus, flūctūs mean? ("A billow, a wave; a surge".) Say it once more.

443.3 vadum, vadī — a shallow, a shoal; a ford

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sandbank, then the Latin for a billow.

You'll want to know: vadum, vadī

vadum, vadī — "a shallow, a shoal; a ford".

Equī flūmen per vadum trānseunt.

The horses cross the river by the ford.

Second declension, neuter: vadum, vadī n. A place where water is shallow enough to walk through, or to run aground on.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vadum is inherited from Proto-Italic waðom 'shallow, ford', from PIE wh₂d^{h}óm (EtymDB). Lewis & Short link it with vādō 'to go': a place where you can walk through water.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vadum, vadī
- Say it: vadum, vadī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vadum, vadī
- Recall: say the Latin for a sandbank, then the Latin for a billow, then say vadum, vadī again

Before you move on

What does vadum, vadī mean? ("A shallow, a shoal; a ford".) Say it once more.

443.4 fretum, fretī — a strait, a narrow channel; (in poetry) the sea

Before the new one: say the Latin for a billow, then the Latin for a shallow.

You'll want to know: fretum, fretī

fretum, fretī — "a strait, a narrow channel; (in poetry) the sea".

Fretum angustum est, sed flūctūs magnī sunt.

The strait is narrow, but the waves are big.

Second declension, neuter: fretum, fretī n. A narrow sea between two coasts, where the water runs hard.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fretum is inherited. Lewis & Short connect it with a root for restless, seething movement, seen in ferveō 'to boil', since water churns in a strait; EtymDB gives no parent, so the link is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fretum, fretī
- Say it: fretum, fretī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fretum, fretī
- Recall: say the Latin for a billow, then the Latin for a shallow, then say fretum, fretī again

Before you move on

What does fretum, fretī mean? ("A strait, a narrow channel; (in poetry) the sea".) Say it once more.

443.5 praetervehor, praetervehī — to sail past, to ride past, to be carried past

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shallow, then the Latin for a strait.

You'll want to know: praetervehor, praetervehī

praetervehor, praetervehī — "to sail past, to ride past, to be carried past".

Nāvis multa oppida praetervehitur.

The ship sails past many towns.

Deponent in form: praetervehor, praetervehī, praetervectus sum, with an accusative of the place passed.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praetervehor is built from praeter 'past, beyond' and vehor, the passive of vehō 'to carry' (Lewis & Short): to be carried past a place by ship or carriage.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praetervehor, praetervehī
- Say it: praetervehor, praetervehī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praetervehor, praetervehī
- Recall: say the Latin for a shallow, then the Latin for a strait, then say praetervehor, praetervehī again

Before you move on

What does praetervehor, praetervehī mean? ("To sail past, to ride past, to be carried past".) Say it once more.

Chapter 444

Dead calm, Calm weather, Peninsula, Of the shore, To sail out

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about calm seas and coasts: a dead calm, calm weather, a peninsula, things of the shore, and sailing out.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 444: I can talk about calm seas and coasts: a dead calm, calm weather, a peninsula, things of the shore, and sailing out.

444.1 malacia, malaciae — a dead calm (at sea)

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a strait, then the Latin for to sail past.

You'll want to know: malacia, malaciae

malacia, malaciae — "a dead calm (at sea)".

> Malacia est; nāvēs in marī stant et nautae ventum exspectant.
>
> There is a dead calm; the ships stand still on the sea and the sailors wait for wind.

First declension, feminine: malacia, malaciae f. No wind at all, the sailor's other trouble.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

malacia was borrowed from Greek malakiā 'softness, slackness' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from malakos 'soft': a sea gone slack.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: malacia, malaciae
- Say it: malacia, malaciae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with malacia, malaciae
- Recall: say the Latin for a strait, then the Latin for to sail past, then say malacia, malaciae again

Before you move on

What does malacia, malaciae mean? ("A dead calm (at sea)".) Say it once more.

444.2 tranquillitās, tranquillitātis — calm weather, a calm; stillness

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sail past, then the Latin for a dead calm.

You'll want to know: tranquillitās, tranquillitātis

tranquillitās, tranquillitātis — "calm weather, a calm; stillness".

Post tempestātem tranquillitās venit.

After the storm calm weather comes.

Third declension, feminine: tranquillitās, tranquillitātis f. Also calm of mind. English tranquillity comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tranquillitās is built on the adjective tranquillus 'calm, still' with the suffix -itās (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English tranquillity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tranquillitās, tranquillitātis
- Say it: tranquillitās, tranquillitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tranquillitās, tranquillitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for to sail past, then the Latin for a dead calm, then say tranquillitās, tranquillitātis again

Before you move on

What does tranquillitās, tranquillitātis mean? ("Calm weather, a calm; stillness".) Say it once more.

444.3 paenīnsula, paenīnsulae — a peninsula

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dead calm, then the Latin for calm weather.

You'll want to know: paenīnsula, paenīnsulae

paenīnsula, paenīnsulae — "a peninsula".

Oppidum in paenīnsulā est; mare ā tribus partibus est.

The town is on a peninsula; the sea is on three sides.

First declension, feminine: paenīnsula, paenīnsulae f., also spelled pēnīnsula. Almost an island. English peninsula comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

paenīnsula is built from paene 'almost' and īnsula 'island' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English peninsula comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: paenīnsula, paenīnsulae
- Say it: paenīnsula, paenīnsulae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with paenīnsula, paenīnsulae
- Recall: say the Latin for a dead calm, then the Latin for calm weather, then say paenīnsula, paenīnsulae again

Before you move on

What does paenīnsula, paenīnsulae mean? ("A peninsula".) Say it once more.

444.4 lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum — of the shore, on the beach

Before the new one: say the Latin for calm weather, then the Latin for a peninsula.

You'll want to know: lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum

lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum — "of the shore, on the beach".

Līberī harēnam lītoream in saccōs pōnunt.

The children put beach sand into sacks.

An adjective of three endings, from lītus, lītoris 'shore'. English littoral comes from the related lītorālis.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lītoreus is built on lītus, lītoris 'shore' with the adjective suffix -eus (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English littoral comes from the related adjective lītorālis.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum
- Say it: lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum
- Recall: say the Latin for calm weather, then the Latin for a peninsula, then say lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum again

Before you move on

What does lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum mean? ("Of the shore, on the beach".) Say it once more.

444.5 ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre — to sail out, to sail away; to sail across

Before the new one: say the Latin for a peninsula, then the Latin for of the shore.

You'll want to know: ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre

ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre — "to sail out, to sail away; to sail across".

Nāvis ē portū ēnāvigat et in altum it.

The ship sails out of the harbour and goes out to sea.

ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre, ēnāvigāvī, ēnāvigātum. With an accusative, to sail right across: mare ēnāvigāre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēnāvigō is built from ē(x)- 'out' and nāvigō 'to sail' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre
- Say it: ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a peninsula, then the Latin for of the shore, then say ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre again

Before you move on

What does ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre mean? ("To sail out, to sail away; to sail across".) Say it once more.

Chapter 445

Roadside inn, To lodge, To spend the night, Stable-keeper, Hospitable

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about stopping at an inn: a roadside inn, lodging there, spending the night, the stable-keeper and a hospitable host.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 445: I can talk about stopping at an inn: a roadside inn, lodging there, spending the night, the stable-keeper and a hospitable host.

445.1 dēverticulum, dēverticulī — a roadside inn, a lodging; a side road

> Before the new one: say the Latin for of the shore, then the Latin for to sail out.

You'll want to know: dēverticulum, dēverticulī

dēverticulum, dēverticulī — "a roadside inn, a lodging; a side road".

> Nox venit, itaque viātōrēs in dēverticulum intrant.
>
> Night is coming, so the travellers go into a roadside inn.

Second declension, neuter: dēverticulum, dēverticulī n. A place you turn off the road for: first a side road, then the inn at its end.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēverticulum is built on dēvertō 'to turn aside' with the suffix -culum 'place for' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a place you turn aside to. dēvertō comes from vertō 'to turn'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēverticulum, dēverticulī
- Say it: dēverticulum, dēverticulī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēverticulum, dēverticulī
- Recall: say the Latin for of the shore, then the Latin for to sail out, then say dēverticulum, dēverticulī again

Before you move on

What does dēverticulum, dēverticulī mean? ("A roadside inn, a lodging; a side road".) Say it once more.

445.2 dēversor, dēversārī — to lodge, to stay as a guest

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sail out, then the Latin for a roadside inn.

You'll want to know: dēversor, dēversārī

dēversor, dēversārī — "to lodge, to stay as a guest".

Mercātor apud amīcum in oppidō dēversātur.

The merchant lodges with a friend in the town.

Deponent: dēversor, dēversārī, dēversātus sum, often with apud 'at the house of'. The inn is a dēversōrium.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēversor is a frequentative built on dēvertō 'to turn aside' (Lewis & Short): to keep turning in, to stay as a guest. dēversōrium 'inn' comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēversor, dēversārī
- Say it: dēversor, dēversārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēversor, dēversārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to sail out, then the Latin for a roadside inn, then say dēversor, dēversārī again

Before you move on

What does dēversor, dēversārī mean? ("To lodge, to stay as a guest".) Say it once more.

445.3 pernoctō, pernoctāre — to spend the night, to stay all night

Before the new one: say the Latin for a roadside inn, then the Latin for to lodge.

You'll want to know: pernoctō, pernoctāre

pernoctō, pernoctāre — "to spend the night, to stay all night".

> Viātōrēs in stabulō pernoctant, quod caupōna plēna est.
>
> The travellers spend the night in the stable, because the inn is full.

pernoctō, pernoctāre, pernoctāvī, pernoctātum. From per 'through' and nox 'night'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pernoctō is built from per 'through' and nox, noctis 'night' (Lewis & Short): to stay through the night.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pernoctō, pernoctāre
- Say it: pernoctō, pernoctāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pernoctō, pernoctāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a roadside inn, then the Latin for to lodge, then say pernoctō, pernoctāre again

Before you move on

What does pernoctō, pernoctāre mean? ("To spend the night, to stay all night".) Say it once more.

445.4 stabulārius, stabulāriī — a stable-keeper, an innkeeper (of a stable inn)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lodge, then the Latin for to spend the night.

You'll want to know: stabulārius, stabulāriī stabulārius, stabulāriī — "a stable-keeper, an innkeeper (of a stable inn)".

Stabulārius equōs viātōrum cūrat.

The stable-keeper looks after the travellers' horses.

Second declension, masculine: stabulārius, stabulāriī m. The keeper of a stabulum, the cheapest kind of roadside lodging.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stabulārius is built on stabulum 'stable, lodging' with the suffix -ārius 'one who works with' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: stabulārius, stabulāriī
- Say it: stabulārius, stabulāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with stabulārius, stabulāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for to lodge, then the Latin for to spend the night, then say stabulārius, stabulāriī again

Before you move on

What does stabulārius, stabulāriī mean? ("A stable-keeper, an innkeeper (of a stable inn)".) Say it once more.

445.5 hospitālis, hospitāle — hospitable; of a guest or host

Before the new one: say the Latin for to spend the night, then the Latin for a stable-keeper.

You'll want to know: hospitālis, hospitāle

hospitālis, hospitāle — "hospitable; of a guest or host".

Caupō hospitālis est et viātōribus bonam cēnam dat.

The innkeeper is hospitable and gives the travellers a good dinner.

An adjective of two endings, from hospes 'host, guest'. English hospital and hospitable come from the same family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hospitālis is built on hospes, hospitis 'host, guest', from PIE g^hóspot- 'master of guests' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English hospital comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: hospitālis, hospitāle
- Say it: hospitālis, hospitāle, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with hospitālis, hospitāle
- Recall: say the Latin for to spend the night, then the Latin for a stable-keeper, then say hospitālis, hospitāle again

Before you move on

What does hospitālis, hospitāle mean? ("Hospitable; of a guest or host".) Say it once more.

Chapter 446

Little bed, Straw bedding, Mat, Pillow, Blanket

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a bed for the night: a little bed, straw bedding, a mat, a pillow and a blanket.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 446: I can describe a bed for the night: a little bed, straw bedding, a mat, a pillow and a blanket.

446.1 lectulus, lectulī — a little bed, a small couch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stable-keeper, then the Latin for hospitable.

You'll want to know: lectulus, lectulī

lectulus, lectulī — "a little bed, a small couch".

> In cubiculō parvō lectulus dūrus est.
>
> In the small bedroom there is a hard little bed.

Second declension, masculine: lectulus, lectulī m., a diminutive of lectus 'bed'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lectulus is a diminutive of lectus 'bed, couch' (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to PIE leg^{h}- 'to lie down'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lectulus, lectulī
- Say it: lectulus, lectulī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lectulus, lectulī
- Recall: say the Latin for a stable-keeper, then the Latin for hospitable, then say lectulus, lectulī again

Before you move on

What does lectulus, lectulī mean? ("A little bed, a small couch".) Say it once more.

446.2 strāmentum, strāmentī — straw bedding, straw; a covering

Before the new one: say the Latin for hospitable, then the Latin for a little bed.

You'll want to know: strāmentum, strāmentī

strāmentum, strāmentī — "straw bedding, straw; a covering".

Pauper in strāmentō dormit, nōn in lectō.

The poor man sleeps on straw, not in a bed.

Second declension, neuter: strāmentum, strāmentī n. Straw spread out for sleeping on, or for animals.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

strāmentum is built on sternō 'to spread' (Lewis & Short), from its participle strātus, with the suffix -mentum: something spread out to lie on.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: strāmentum, strāmentī
- Say it: strāmentum, strāmentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with strāmentum, strāmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for hospitable, then the Latin for a little bed, then say strāmentum, strāmentī again

Before you move on

What does strāmentum, strāmentī mean? ("Straw bedding, straw; a covering".) Say it once more.

446.3 teges, tegetis — a mat, a rush mat; a covering

Before the new one: say the Latin for a little bed, then the Latin for straw bedding.

You'll want to know: teges, tegetis

teges, tegetis — "a mat, a rush mat; a covering".

In caupōnā parvā tantum teges in pavīmentō est.

In a small inn there is only a mat on the floor.

Third declension, feminine: teges, tegetis f. A coarse mat of rushes, the poor man's bed in Roman satire.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

teges is built on tegō 'to cover' (Lewis & Short): a covering, a mat.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: teges, tegetis
- Say it: teges, tegetis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with teges, tegetis
- Recall: say the Latin for a little bed, then the Latin for straw bedding, then say teges, tegetis again

Before you move on

What does teges, tegetis mean? ("A mat, a rush mat; a covering".) Say it once more.

446.4 cervīcal, cervīcālis — a pillow, a bolster

Before the new one: say the Latin for straw bedding, then the Latin for a mat.

You'll want to know: cervīcal, cervīcālis

cervīcal, cervīcālis — "a pillow, a bolster".

Hospes cervīcal sub caput pōnit et dormit.

The guest puts a pillow under his head and sleeps.

Third declension, neuter: cervīcal, cervīcālis n. Literally a thing for the neck.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cervīcal is built on cervīx, cervīcis 'neck' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a support for the neck. English cervical comes from cervīx.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cervīcal, cervīcālis
- Say it: cervīcal, cervīcālis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cervīcal, cervīcālis
- Recall: say the Latin for straw bedding, then the Latin for a mat, then say cervīcal, cervīcālis again

Before you move on

What does cervīcal, cervīcālis mean? ("A pillow, a bolster".) Say it once more.

446.5 lōdīx, lōdīcis — a blanket, a coverlet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mat, then the Latin for a pillow.

You'll want to know: lōdīx, lōdīcis

lōdīx, lōdīcis — "a blanket, a coverlet".

Nox frīgida est, sed lōdīx tenuis est.

The night is cold, but the blanket is thin.

Third declension, feminine: lōdīx, lōdīcis f. A wool blanket for a bed.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of lōdīx is not settled: Lewis & Short give the sense, a blanket or coverlet, but no source, and EtymDB does not list it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lōdīx, lōdīcis
- Say it: lōdīx, lōdīcis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lōdīx, lōdīcis
- Recall: say the Latin for a mat, then the Latin for a pillow, then say lōdīx, lōdīcis again

Before you move on

What does lōdīx, lōdīcis mean? ("A blanket, a coverlet".) Say it once more.

446.6 Words from chapters 439–446 — a review

Say the Latin for to put in and to step out.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to put in, to step out, to haul ashore, to launch, navigable
- to toss on the waves, to be seasick, to carry down, to take across, to swim to safety
- a harbour, a dockyard, a tidal inlet, a lighthouse, a headland
- the open sea, the high sea, the level sea, of the sea, coastal
- a sandbank, a billow, a shallow, a strait, to sail past

- a dead calm, calm weather, a peninsula, of the shore, to sail out
- a roadside inn, to lodge, to spend the night, a stable-keeper, hospitable
- a little bed, straw bedding, a mat, a pillow, a blanket

Before you move on

To put in? (appellō, appellere.) To step out? (ēgredior, ēgredī.) To haul ashore? (subdūcō, subdūcere.) To launch? (dēdūcō, dēdūcere.) Navigable? (nāvigābilis, nāvigābile.) To toss on the waves? (flūctuō, flūctuāre.) To be seasick? (nauseō, nauseāre.) To carry down? (dēferō, dēferre.) To take across? (trāiciō, trāicere.) To swim to safety? (ēnatō, ēnatāre.) A harbour? (portus, portūs.) A dockyard? (nāvāle, nāvālis.) A tidal inlet? (aestuārium, aestuāriī.) A lighthouse? (pharus, pharī.) A headland? (prōmunturium, prōmunturiī.) The open sea? (salum, salī.) The high sea? (pelagus, pelagī.) The level sea? (aequor, aequoris.) Of the sea? (marīnus, marīna, marīnum.) Coastal? (maritimus, maritima, maritimum.) A sandbank? (syrtis, syrtis.) A billow? (flūctus, flūctūs.) A shallow? (vadum, vadī.) A strait? (fretum, fretī.) To sail past? (praetervehor, praetervehī.) A dead calm? (malacia, malaciae.) Calm weather? (tranquillitās, tranquillitātis.) A peninsula? (paenīnsula, paenīnsulae.) Of the shore? (lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum.) To sail out? (ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre.) A roadside inn? (dēverticulum, dēverticulī.) To lodge? (dēversor, dēversārī.) To spend the night? (pernoctō, pernoctāre.) A stable-keeper? (stabulārius, stabulāriī.) Hospitable? (hospitālis, hospitāle.) A little bed? (lectulus, lectulī.) Straw bedding? (strāmentum, strāmentī.) A mat? (teges, tegetis.) A pillow? (cervīcal, cervīcālis.) A blanket? (lōdīx, lōdīcis.)

Chapter 447

Bedbug, To bite, To scratch, Sleepless, To lie down

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can complain about a bad night: bedbugs, being bitten, scratching, a sleepless night, and lying down.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 447: I can complain about a bad night: bedbugs, being bitten, scratching, a sleepless night, and lying down.

447.1 cīmex, cīmicis — a bedbug

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a pillow, then the Latin for a blanket.

You'll want to know: cīmex, cīmicis

cīmex, cīmicis — "a bedbug".

> In lectō caupōnae multī cīmicēs sunt.
>
> In the inn's bed there are lots of bedbugs.

Third declension, masculine: cīmex, cīmicis m. An old enemy of travellers; also a rude word for a small, annoying man.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of cīmex is not settled: Lewis & Short give the sense, a bug, but no etymology, and EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cīmex, cīmicis
- Say it: cīmex, cīmicis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cīmex, cīmicis
- Recall: say the Latin for a pillow, then the Latin for a blanket, then say cīmex, cīmicis again

Before you move on

What does cīmex, cīmicis mean? ("A bedbug".) Say it once more.

447.2 mordeō, mordēre — to bite

Before the new one: say the Latin for a blanket, then the Latin for a bedbug.

You'll want to know: mordeō, mordēre

mordeō, mordēre — "to bite".

Tōtam noctem cīmicēs hospitem mordent.

All night the bedbugs bite the guest.

mordeō, mordēre, momordī, morsum, with a reduplicated perfect. English remorse (a biting back) and mordant come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mordeō is inherited from Proto-Italic mordeō, from PIE (s)merd- 'to bite, to sting' (EtymDB). English smart 'to sting' is a cousin, and remorse and mordant come from the Latin verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mordeō, mordēre
- Say it: mordeō, mordēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mordeō, mordēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a blanket, then the Latin for a bedbug, then say mordeō, mordēre again

Before you move on

What does mordeō, mordēre mean? ("To bite".) Say it once more.

447.3 scalpō, scalpere — to scratch; to carve

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bedbug, then the Latin for to bite.

You'll want to know: scalpō, scalpere

scalpō, scalpere — "to scratch; to carve".

Hospes caput et bracchia scalpit.

The guest scratches his head and arms.

scalpō, scalpere, scalpsī, scalptum. Also to carve or engrave. English scalpel comes from scalpellum, a little knife, from the same root.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scalpō is inherited from PIE (s)kel(H)p-, from a root meaning 'to split, to cut' (EtymDB). English scalpel comes from scalpellum, a diminutive of scalprum 'knife', built on it (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: scalpō, scalpere
- Say it: scalpō, scalpere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with scalpō, scalpere
- Recall: say the Latin for a bedbug, then the Latin for to bite, then say scalpō, scalpere again

Before you move on

What does scalpō, scalpere mean? ("To scratch; to carve".) Say it once more.

447.4 īnsomnis, īnsomne — sleepless

Before the new one: say the Latin for to bite, then the Latin for to scratch.

You'll want to know: īnsomnis, īnsomne

īnsomnis, īnsomne — "sleepless".

Propter cīmicēs viātor īnsomnis in lectō iacet.

Because of the bedbugs the traveller lies sleepless in bed.

An adjective of two endings, from in- 'not' and somnus 'sleep'. English insomnia comes from a noun built on it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnsomnis is built from in- 'not' and somnus 'sleep' (Lewis & Short). English insomnia comes from the related noun īnsomnia.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnsomnis, īnsomne
- Say it: īnsomnis, īnsomne, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnsomnis, īnsomne
- Recall: say the Latin for to bite, then the Latin for to scratch, then say īnsomnis, īnsomne again

Before you move on

What does īnsomnis, īnsomne mean? ("Sleepless".) Say it once more.

447.5 cubō, cubāre — to lie down, to lie (in bed); to sleep

Before the new one: say the Latin for to scratch, then the Latin for sleepless.

You'll want to know: cubō, cubāre

cubō, cubāre — "to lie down, to lie (in bed); to sleep".

Fessus viātor in lectulō cubat, sed nōn dormit.

The tired traveller lies on the little bed, but he does not sleep.

cubō, cubāre, cubuī, cubitum. English incubate and cubicle come from the same root.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cubō is inherited from Proto-Italic kubāō, from PIE ḱewb- 'to lie down' (EtymDB). English incubate comes from incubāre, built on it (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cubō, cubāre
- Say it: cubō, cubāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cubō, cubāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to scratch, then the Latin for sleepless, then say cubō, cubāre again

Before you move on

What does cubō, cubāre mean? ("To lie down, to lie (in bed); to sleep".) Say it once more.

Chapter 448

To snore, To make a noise, To make a din, Drinker, Hoarse

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can complain about a noisy night: someone snoring, people making noise, a din, the drinkers and their hoarse voices.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 448: I can complain about a noisy night: someone snoring, people making noise, a din, the drinkers and their hoarse voices.

448.1 stertō, stertere — to snore

> Before the new one: say the Latin for sleepless, then the Latin for to lie down.

You'll want to know: stertō, stertere

stertō, stertere — "to snore".

> Hospes ēbrius tōtam noctem stertit.
>
> The drunken guest snores all night.

stertō, stertere, stertuī. English stertorous 'heavy and snoring' comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of stertō is not settled: Lewis & Short compare Greek darthanō 'to sleep', but EtymDB gives no parent. English stertor and stertorous come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: stertō, stertere
- Say it: stertō, stertere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with stertō, stertere
- Recall: say the Latin for sleepless, then the Latin for to lie down, then say stertō, stertere again

Before you move on

What does stertō, stertere mean? ("To snore".) Say it once more.

448.2 strepō, strepere — to make a noise, to clatter, to roar

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lie down, then the Latin for to snore.

You'll want to know: strepō, strepere

strepō, strepere — "to make a noise, to clatter, to roar".

In viā plaustra strepunt, et nēmō dormīre potest.

In the street the wagons clatter, and nobody can sleep.

strepō, strepere, strepuī, strepitum. Any loud noise: wheels, voices, water.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of strepō is not settled: Lewis & Short give its senses, to rattle, rumble, roar, but no etymology, and EtymDB gives no parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: strepō, strepere
- Say it: strepō, strepere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with strepō, strepere
- Recall: say the Latin for to lie down, then the Latin for to snore, then say strepō, strepere again

Before you move on

What does strepō, strepere mean? ("To make a noise, to clatter, to roar".) Say it once more.

448.3 obstrepō, obstrepere — to make a din, to drown out with noise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to snore, then the Latin for to make a noise.

You'll want to know: obstrepō, obstrepere

obstrepō, obstrepere — "to make a din, to drown out with noise".

Virī ēbriī in caupōnā obstrepunt, et hospitēs queruntur.

Drunken men make a din in the inn, and the guests complain.

obstrepō, obstrepere, obstrepuī, obstrepitum, often with a dative: to roar at someone. English obstreperous comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obstrepō is built from ob- 'against' and strepō 'to make a noise' (Lewis & Short). English obstreperous comes from obstreperus, built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obstrepō, obstrepere
- Say it: obstrepō, obstrepere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obstrepō, obstrepere
- Recall: say the Latin for to snore, then the Latin for to make a noise, then say obstrepō, obstrepere again

Before you move on

What does obstrepō, obstrepere mean? ("To make a din, to drown out with noise".) Say it once more.

448.4 pōtor, pōtōris — a drinker, a heavy drinker

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make a noise, then the Latin for to make a din.

You'll want to know: pōtor, pōtōris

pōtor, pōtōris — "a drinker, a heavy drinker".

In tabernā pōtōrēs multum vīnum bibunt.

In the tavern the drinkers drink a lot of wine.

Third declension, masculine: pōtor, pōtōris m., from the same root as pōtus 'drunk'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōtor is built on the root of pōtō 'to drink' with the suffix -tor 'one who' (Lewis & Short). Greek pinō 'to drink' is a cousin of that root.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pōtor, pōtōris
- Say it: pōtor, pōtōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pōtor, pōtōris
- Recall: say the Latin for to make a noise, then the Latin for to make a din, then say pōtor, pōtōris again

Before you move on

What does pōtor, pōtōris mean? ("A drinker, a heavy drinker".) Say it once more.

448.5 raucus, rauca, raucum — hoarse; harsh-sounding

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make a din, then the Latin for a drinker.

You'll want to know: raucus, rauca, raucum

raucus, rauca, raucum — "hoarse; harsh-sounding".

Post noctem longam vōx caupōnis rauca est.

After a long night the innkeeper's voice is hoarse.

An adjective of three endings. English raucous comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

raucus is built on rāvis 'hoarseness' with an adjective suffix (EtymDB); Lewis & Short trace it to a root meaning 'to make a loud noise'. English raucous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: raucus, rauca, raucum
- Say it: raucus, rauca, raucum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with raucus, rauca, raucum
- Recall: say the Latin for to make a din, then the Latin for a drinker, then say raucus, rauca, raucum again

Before you move on

What does raucus, rauca, raucum mean? ("Hoarse; harsh-sounding".) Say it once more.

Chapter 449

Flat wine, Neat wine, To water down, Rotten, Tavern hostess

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can complain about the food and drink at an inn: flat wine, neat wine, watered wine, rotten food, and the tavern hostess.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 449: I can complain about the food and drink at an inn: flat wine, neat wine, watered wine, rotten food, and the tavern hostess.

449.1 vappa, vappae — flat wine, wine gone off; a good-for-nothing

Before the new one: say the Latin for a drinker, then the Latin for hoarse.

You'll want to know: vappa, vappae

vappa, vappae — "flat wine, wine gone off; a good-for-nothing".

> Caupō nōn vīnum bonum sed vappam vendit.
>
> The innkeeper sells not good wine but flat wine.

First declension, feminine: vappa, vappae f. Wine that has lost its taste; also, of a person, a worthless fellow.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vappa is usually linked with vapor 'steam' (Lewis & Short): wine whose spirit has gone up in vapour. Lewis & Short also compare vapidus 'flat', the source of English vapid.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vappa, vappae
- Say it: vappa, vappae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vappa, vappae
- Recall: say the Latin for a drinker, then the Latin for hoarse, then say vappa, vappae again

Before you move on

What does vappa, vappae mean? ("Flat wine, wine gone off; a good-for-nothing".) Say it once more.

449.2 merum, merī — neat wine, wine without water

Before the new one: say the Latin for hoarse, then the Latin for flat wine.

You'll want to know: merum, merī

merum, merī — "neat wine, wine without water".

Pōtor merum bibit, nōn vīnum cum aquā.

The drinker drinks neat wine, not wine with water.

Second declension, neuter: merum, merī n., the neuter of merus 'pure, unmixed'. Romans mixed wine with water; drinking it neat was a sign of excess. English mere comes from merus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

merum is the neuter of the adjective merus 'pure, unmixed' (Lewis & Short), used as a noun for wine with no water. English mere comes from merus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: merum, merī
- Say it: merum, merī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with merum, merī
- Recall: say the Latin for hoarse, then the Latin for flat wine, then say merum, merī again

Before you move on

What does merum, merī mean? ("Neat wine, wine without water".) Say it once more.

449.3 dīluō, dīluere — to water down, to dilute; to wash away

Before the new one: say the Latin for flat wine, then the Latin for neat wine.

You'll want to know: dīluō, dīluere

dīluō, dīluere — "to water down, to dilute; to wash away".

Caupō vīnum aquā dīluit et magnō pretiō vendit.

The innkeeper waters the wine and sells it at a high price.

dīluō, dīluere, dīluī, dīlūtum. English dilute comes from its participle and deluge from the noun dīluvium.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīluō is built from dis- 'apart' and luō 'to wash', a verb akin to lavō (Lewis & Short). English dilute comes from its participle dīlūtus, and deluge from the noun dīluvium 'flood'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dīluō, dīluere
- Say it: dīluō, dīluere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dīluō, dīluere
- Recall: say the Latin for flat wine, then the Latin for neat wine, then say dīluō, dīluere again

Before you move on

What does dīluō, dīluere mean? ("To water down, to dilute; to wash away".) Say it once more.

449.4 pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum — rotten, stinking

Before the new one: say the Latin for neat wine, then the Latin for to water down.

You'll want to know: pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum

pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum — "rotten, stinking".

Carō in caupōnā pūtida est.

The meat in the inn is rotten.

An adjective of three endings, from pūteō 'to stink'. Also of style: affected, tiresome.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūtidus is built on pūteō 'to stink, to be rotten' (Lewis & Short) with the adjective suffix -idus, as in frīgidus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum
- Say it: pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum
- Recall: say the Latin for neat wine, then the Latin for to water down, then say pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum again

Before you move on

What does pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum mean? ("Rotten, stinking".) Say it once more.

449.5 cōpa, cōpae — a tavern hostess, a barmaid

Before the new one: say the Latin for to water down, then the Latin for rotten.

You'll want to know: cōpa, cōpae

cōpa, cōpae — "a tavern hostess, a barmaid".

Cōpa vīnum hospitibus dat et cum eīs rīdet.

The tavern hostess gives the guests wine and laughs with them.

First declension, feminine: cōpa, cōpae f. The woman who kept or served in a tavern.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōpa is the feminine of cōpō, another form of caupō 'innkeeper' (Lewis & Short), with the au turned to ō as in everyday speech.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōpa, cōpae
- Say it: cōpa, cōpae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōpa, cōpae
- Recall: say the Latin for to water down, then the Latin for rotten, then say cōpa, cōpae again

Before you move on

What does cōpa, cōpae mean? ("A tavern hostess, a barmaid".) Say it once more.

Chapter 450

Complaint, To complain, To cheat, Grasping, Dirt

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can complain about a bad inn: making a complaint, complaining, being cheated, a grasping landlord, and dirt.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 450: I can complain about a bad inn: making a complaint, complaining, being cheated, a grasping landlord, and dirt.

450.1 querēla, querēlae — a complaint

> Before the new one: say the Latin for rotten, then the Latin for a tavern hostess.

You'll want to know: querēla, querēlae querēla, querēlae — "a complaint".

> Hospitēs multās querēlās dē caupōne habent.
>
> The guests have many complaints about the innkeeper.

First declension, feminine: querēla, querēlae f., also spelled querella. English quarrel comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

querēla is built on queror 'to complain' with the suffix -ēla (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English quarrel comes from it through Old French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: querēla, querēlae
- Say it: querēla, querēlae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with querēla, querēlae
- Recall: say the Latin for rotten, then the Latin for a tavern hostess, then say querēla, querēlae again

Before you move on

What does querēla, querēlae mean? ("A complaint".) Say it once more.

450.2 conqueror, conquerī — to complain (loudly), to complain of

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tavern hostess, then the Latin for a complaint.

You'll want to know: conqueror, conquerī

conqueror, conquerī — "to complain (loudly), to complain of".

Viātor dē cīmicibus et dē pretiō conqueritur.

The traveller complains about the bedbugs and about the price.

Deponent: conqueror, conquerī, conquestus sum. English conquer does not come from it; that word goes back to conquīrere 'to seek out'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

conqueror is built from con-, which strengthens, and queror 'to complain' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English conquer looks like it but comes from a different verb, conquīrere 'to seek out'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: conqueror, conquerī
- Say it: conqueror, conquerī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with conqueror, conquerī
- Recall: say the Latin for a tavern hostess, then the Latin for a complaint, then say conqueror, conquerī again

Before you move on

What does conqueror, conquerī mean? ("To complain (loudly), to complain of".) Say it once more.

450.3 fraudō, fraudāre — to cheat, to defraud

Before the new one: say the Latin for a complaint, then the Latin for to complain.

You'll want to know: fraudō, fraudāre

fraudō, fraudāre — "to cheat, to defraud".

Caupō malus hospitēs fraudat.

The bad innkeeper cheats his guests.

fraudō, fraudāre, fraudāvī, fraudātum, with the person in the accusative and the thing in the ablative. English defraud comes from dēfraudāre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fraudō is built on fraus, fraudis 'harm, deceit' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English fraud comes from the noun and defraud from the compound dēfraudāre.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fraudō, fraudāre
- Say it: fraudō, fraudāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fraudō, fraudāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a complaint, then the Latin for to complain, then say fraudō, fraudāre again

Before you move on

What does fraudō, fraudāre mean? ("To cheat, to defraud".) Say it once more.

450.4 rapāx, rapācis — grasping, greedy

Before the new one: say the Latin for to complain, then the Latin for to cheat.

You'll want to know: rapāx, rapācis

rapāx, rapācis — "grasping, greedy".

Caupō rapāx magnum pretium prō cēnā parvā rogat.

The grasping innkeeper asks a big price for a small dinner.

An adjective of one ending: rapāx, genitive rapācis. Also of wild beasts: ravenous. English rapacious comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rapāx is built on rapiō 'to seize, to snatch' with the suffix -āx 'given to' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English rapacious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rapāx, rapācis
- Say it: rapāx, rapācis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rapāx, rapācis
- Recall: say the Latin for to complain, then the Latin for to cheat, then say rapāx, rapācis again

Before you move on

What does rapāx, rapācis mean? ("Grasping, greedy".) Say it once more.

450.5 sordēs, sordis — dirt, filth

Before the new one: say the Latin for to cheat, then the Latin for grasping.

You'll want to know: sordēs, sordis

sordēs, sordis — "dirt, filth".

In cubiculō sordēs sunt, et hospes īrātus est.

There is dirt in the bedroom, and the guest is angry.

Third declension, feminine: sordēs, sordis f., mostly plural sordēs, sordium. English sordid comes from the adjective sordidus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sordēs is built on sordeō 'to be dirty' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English sordid comes from the related adjective sordidus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sordēs, sordis
- Say it: sordēs, sordis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sordēs, sordis
- Recall: say the Latin for to cheat, then the Latin for grasping, then say sordēs, sordis again

Before you move on

What does sordēs, sordis mean? ("Dirt, filth".) Say it once more.

Chapter 451

To inquire, To ask around, To ask after, To show, To make known

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask the way and be shown it: inquiring, asking around, asking after a place, showing and making known.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 451: I can ask the way and be shown it: inquiring, asking around, asking after a place, showing and making known.

451.1 percontor, percontārī — to inquire, to ask questions

> Before the new one: say the Latin for grasping, then the Latin for dirt.

You'll want to know: percontor, percontārī

percontor, percontārī — "to inquire, to ask questions".

> Viātor ā pastōre percontātur ubi oppidum sit.
>
> The traveller asks a shepherd where the town is.

Deponent: percontor, percontārī, percontātus sum, with ā or ex and the person asked. An indirect question follows in the subjunctive: ubi sit.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of percontor is not settled. Lewis & Short build it on per and a root they connect with hesitating; the older spelling is percunctor. EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: percontor, percontārī
- Say it: percontor, percontārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with percontor, percontārī
- Recall: say the Latin for grasping, then the Latin for dirt, then say percontor, percontārī again

Before you move on

What does percontor, percontārī mean? ("To inquire, to ask questions".) Say it once more.

451.2 scīscitor, scīscitārī — to ask around, to try to find out

Before the new one: say the Latin for dirt, then the Latin for to inquire.

You'll want to know: scīscitor, scīscitārī

scīscitor, scīscitārī — "to ask around, to try to find out".

Mercātor in forō dē viā scīscitātur.

The merchant asks around in the forum about the road.

Deponent: scīscitor, scīscitārī, scīscitātus sum. A frequentative: asking again and again.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scīscitor is built on scīscō 'to seek to know' with the frequentative ending -itor (EtymDB), and scīscō comes from sciō 'to know' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: scīscitor, scīscitārī
- Say it: scīscitor, scīscitārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with scīscitor, scīscitārī
- Recall: say the Latin for dirt, then the Latin for to inquire, then say scīscitor, scīscitārī again

Before you move on

What does scīscitor, scīscitārī mean? ("To ask around, to try to find out".) Say it once more.

451.3 requīrō, requīrere — to ask after, to look for; to need

Before the new one: say the Latin for to inquire, then the Latin for to ask around.

You'll want to know: requīrō, requīrere

requīrō, requīrere — "to ask after, to look for; to need".

Hospes caupōnam bonam requīrit.

The visitor asks after a good inn.

requīrō, requīrere, requīsīvī, requīsītum. English require and request come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

requīrō is built from re- 'again' and quaerō 'to seek, to ask' (Lewis & Short), with the vowel weakened in the compound. English require and request come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: requīrō, requīrere
- Say it: requīrō, requīrere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with requīrō, requīrere
- Recall: say the Latin for to inquire, then the Latin for to ask around, then say requīrō, requīrere again

Before you move on

What does requīrō, requīrere mean? ("To ask after, to look for; to need".) Say it once more.

451.4 mōnstrō, mōnstrāre — to show, to point out

Before the new one: say the Latin for to ask around, then the Latin for to ask after.

You'll want to know: mōnstrō, mōnstrāre

mōnstrō, mōnstrāre — "to show, to point out".

Agricola viātōribus viam ad flūmen mōnstrat.

The farmer shows the travellers the way to the river.

mōnstrō, mōnstrāre, mōnstrāvī, mōnstrātum, with a dative of the person shown. English demonstrate comes from the compound, and muster comes through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mōnstrō is built on mōnstrum 'a sign, a portent' (EtymDB), which Lewis & Short derive from moneō 'to warn, to remind'. English demonstrate comes from dēmōnstrāre, and muster comes from mōnstrāre through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mōnstrō, mōnstrāre
- Say it: mōnstrō, mōnstrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mōnstrō, mōnstrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to ask around, then the Latin for to ask after, then say mōnstrō, mōnstrāre again

Before you move on

What does mōnstrō, mōnstrāre mean? ("To show, to point out".) Say it once more.

451.5 indicō, indicāre — to make known, to indicate, to show

Before the new one: say the Latin for to ask after, then the Latin for to show.

You'll want to know: indicō, indicāre

indicō, indicāre — "to make known, to indicate, to show".

Mīliārium indicat urbem decem mīlia passuum abesse.

The milestone shows that the city is ten miles away.

indicō, indicāre, indicāvī, indicātum, first conjugation. Not the same as indīcō, indīcere 'to proclaim'. English indicate comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

indicō is built from in- and the root of dīcō 'to say, to show' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short); index 'a pointer' belongs to the same family. English indicate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: indicō, indicāre
- Say it: indicō, indicāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with indicō, indicāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to ask after, then the Latin for to show, then say indicō, indicāre again

Before you move on

What does indicō, indicāre mean? ("To make known, to indicate, to show".) Say it once more.

Chapter 452

To stray, Off the road, Without roads, Roundabout way, To wander about

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about getting lost: straying from the road, going off the road, roadless country, a roundabout way, and wandering about.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 452: I can talk about getting lost: straying from the road, going off the road, roadless country, a roundabout way, and wandering about.

452.1 aberrō, aberrāre — to stray, to wander from the way

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to show, then the Latin for to make known.

You'll want to know: aberrō, aberrāre

aberrō, aberrāre — "to stray, to wander from the way".

> In nebulā viātōrēs ā viā aberrant.
>
> In the fog the travellers stray from the road.

aberrō, aberrāre, aberrāvī, aberrātum, with ā or ab. English aberration comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aberrō is built from ab 'away, from' and errō 'to wander, to go astray' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English aberration comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aberrō, aberrāre
- Say it: aberrō, aberrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aberrō, aberrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to show, then the Latin for to make known, then say aberrō, aberrāre again

Before you move on

What does aberrō, aberrāre mean? ("To stray, to wander from the way".) Say it once more.

452.2 dēvius, dēvia, dēvium — off the road, out of the way; remote

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make known, then the Latin for to stray.

You'll want to know: dēvius, dēvia, dēvium

dēvius, dēvia, dēvium — "off the road, out of the way; remote".

Vīlla dēvia est; nēmō eam facile invenit.

The country house is out of the way; nobody finds it easily.

An adjective of three endings, from dē 'off' and via 'road'. English devious first meant 'off the main road'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēvius is built from dē 'off, away from' and via 'road' (Lewis & Short). English devious comes from it, first in the sense 'out of the way'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēvius, dēvia, dēvium
- Say it: dēvius, dēvia, dēvium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēvius, dēvia, dēvium
- Recall: say the Latin for to make known, then the Latin for to stray, then say dēvius, dēvia, dēvium again

Before you move on

What does dēvius, dēvia, dēvium mean? ("Off the road, out of the way; remote".) Say it once more.

452.3 invius, invia, invium — without roads, pathless, impassable

Before the new one: say the Latin for to stray, then the Latin for off the road.

You'll want to know: invius, invia, invium

invius, invia, invium — "without roads, pathless, impassable".

Silva magna et invia est; equī trānsīre nōn possunt.

The wood is big and pathless; the horses cannot get through.

An adjective of three endings, from in- 'not' and via 'road'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

invius is built from in- 'not' and via 'road' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): without a road, so hard to pass.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: invius, invia, invium
- Say it: invius, invia, invium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with invius, invia, invium
- Recall: say the Latin for to stray, then the Latin for off the road, then say invius, invia, invium again

Before you move on

What does invius, invia, invium mean? ("Without roads, pathless, impassable".) Say it once more.

452.4 ambāgēs, ambāgum — a roundabout way, a winding path; long-winded talk

Before the new one: say the Latin for off the road, then the Latin for without roads.

You'll want to know: ambāgēs, ambāgum

ambāgēs, ambāgum — "a roundabout way, a winding path; long-winded talk".

Pastor nōn rēctā viā sed per ambāgēs nōs dūcit.

The shepherd leads us not by the direct road but by a roundabout way.

Third declension, feminine, mostly plural: ambāgēs, ambāgum f.; the singular appears only in the ablative ambāge. Also talk that goes round the point.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ambāgēs is built from ambi- 'around' and agō 'to drive, to go' (EtymDB): a going round. Lewis & Short give a roundabout way, then roundabout speech.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ambāgēs, ambāgum
- Say it: ambāgēs, ambāgum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ambāgēs, ambāgum
- Recall: say the Latin for off the road, then the Latin for without roads, then say ambāgēs, ambāgum again

Before you move on

What does ambāgēs, ambāgum mean? ("A roundabout way, a winding path; long-winded talk".) Say it once more.

452.5 vagor, vagārī — to wander about, to roam

Before the new one: say the Latin for without roads, then the Latin for a roundabout way.

You'll want to know: vagor, vagārī

vagor, vagārī — "to wander about, to roam".

Canis sine dominō per viās oppidī vagātur.

A dog without a master roams the streets of the town.

Deponent: vagor, vagārī, vagātus sum. English vagabond comes from vagābundus, built on it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vagor is built on the adjective vagus 'wandering, roving' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English vague comes from vagus, and vagabond from vagābundus, built on the verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vagor, vagārī
- Say it: vagor, vagārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vagor, vagārī
- Recall: say the Latin for without roads, then the Latin for a roundabout way, then say vagor, vagārī again

Before you move on

What does vagor, vagārī mean? ("To wander about, to roam".) Say it once more.

Chapter 453

Leader, Knowing, To escort, To find, To track

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about people who help you find the way: a leader, someone knowing the country, escorting, finding, and tracking.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 453: I can talk about people who help you find the way: a leader, someone knowing the country, escorting, finding, and tracking.

453.1 ductor, ductōris — a leader, one who leads the way; a commander

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a roundabout way, then the Latin for to wander about.

You'll want to know: ductor, ductōris

ductor, ductōris — "a leader, one who leads the way; a commander".

> Ductor viātōrēs per montēs dūcit.
>
> The leader takes the travellers through the mountains.

Third declension, masculine: ductor, ductōris m., from dūcō 'to lead'. Dux itineris is the usual phrase for a guide.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ductor is built on dūcō 'to lead' with the suffix -tor 'one who' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English conductor comes from a compound of the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ductor, ductōris
- Say it: ductor, ductōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ductor, ductōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a roundabout way, then the Latin for to wander about, then say ductor, ductōris again

Before you move on

What does ductor, ductōris mean? ("A leader, one who leads the way; a commander".) Say it once more.

453.2 gnārus, gnāra, gnārum — knowing, familiar with, expert in

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wander about, then the Latin for a leader.

You'll want to know: gnārus, gnāra, gnārum

gnārus, gnāra, gnārum — "knowing, familiar with, expert in".

Pastor regiōnis gnārus est et viam scit.

The shepherd knows the region well and knows the way.

An adjective of three endings, with a genitive: locōrum gnārus, who knows the places. The opposite is ignārus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gnārus is inherited and comes from the same root as (g)nōscō 'to get to know' and nārrō 'to tell' (Lewis & Short), from PIE ǵneh₃- 'to know'. English know is a distant cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gnārus, gnāra, gnārum
- Say it: gnārus, gnāra, gnārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gnārus, gnāra, gnārum
- Recall: say the Latin for to wander about, then the Latin for a leader, then say gnārus, gnāra, gnārum again

Before you move on

What does gnārus, gnāra, gnārum mean? ("Knowing, familiar with, expert in".) Say it once more.

453.3 prōsequor, prōsequī — to escort, to see off, to accompany; to pursue

Before the new one: say the Latin for a leader, then the Latin for knowing.

You'll want to know: prōsequor, prōsequī

prōsequor, prōsequī — "to escort, to see off, to accompany; to pursue".

Amīcī viātōrem ad portam urbis prōsequuntur.

Friends escort the traveller as far as the city gate.

Deponent: prōsequor, prōsequī, prōsecūtus sum. Escorting a departing friend part of the way was a duty. English prosecute and pursue come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōsequor is built from prō- 'forward, onward' and sequor 'to follow' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English prosecute comes from its participle, and pursue from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prōsequor, prōsequī
- Say it: prōsequor, prōsequī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prōsequor, prōsequī
- Recall: say the Latin for a leader, then the Latin for knowing, then say prōsequor, prōsequī again

Before you move on

What does prōsequor, prōsequī mean? ("To escort, to see off, to accompany; to pursue".) Say it once more.

453.4 reperiō, reperīre — to find, to find out, to discover

Before the new one: say the Latin for knowing, then the Latin for to escort.

You'll want to know: reperiō, reperīre

reperiō, reperīre — "to find, to find out, to discover".

Tandem viātōrēs caupōnam reperiunt.

At last the travellers find an inn.

reperiō, reperīre, repperī, repertum. English repertory comes from repertōrium, a list of things found.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

reperiō is built from re- and pariō 'to bring forth, to get' (Lewis & Short): to get again, to find. English repertory and repertoire come from repertōrium, built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: reperiō, reperīre
- Say it: reperiō, reperīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with reperiō, reperīre
- Recall: say the Latin for knowing, then the Latin for to escort, then say reperiō, reperīre again

Before you move on

What does reperiō, reperīre mean? ("To find, to find out, to discover".) Say it once more.

453.5 vestīgō, vestīgāre — to track, to trace; to search out

Before the new one: say the Latin for to escort, then the Latin for to find.

You'll want to know: vestīgō, vestīgāre

vestīgō, vestīgāre — "to track, to trace; to search out".

Canis vestīgia lupī in nive vestīgat.

The dog tracks the wolf's footprints in the snow.

vestīgō, vestīgāre, vestīgāvī, vestīgātum. English investigate comes from investīgāre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vestīgō goes with vestīgium 'footprint, track'; Lewis & Short call the origin doubtful, so which came first is not settled. English investigate comes from the compound investīgāre.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vestīgō, vestīgāre
- Say it: vestīgō, vestīgāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vestīgō, vestīgāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to escort, then the Latin for to find, then say vestīgō, vestīgāre again

Before you move on

What does vestīgō, vestīgāre mean? ("To track, to trace; to search out".) Say it once more.

Chapter 454

To the right, To the left, Slanting, To go round, Detour

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give directions: to the right, to the left, at a slant, going round, and taking a detour.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 454: I can give directions: to the right, to the left, at a slant, going round, and taking a detour.

454.1 dextrōrsum — to the right, towards the right

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to find, then the Latin for to track.

You'll want to know: dextrōrsum

dextrōrsum — "to the right, towards the right".

> Post pontem via dextrōrsum it.
>
> After the bridge the road goes to the right.

An adverb, also dextrōrsus, from dexter 'right' and vorsum 'turned'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dextrōrsum is a shortened dextrō-vorsum, built from dexter 'right' and vorsum, an old form of versum 'turned', from vertō 'to turn' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dextrōrsum
- Say it: dextrōrsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dextrōrsum
- Recall: say the Latin for to find, then the Latin for to track, then say dextrōrsum again

Before you move on

What does dextrōrsum mean? ("To the right, towards the right".) Say it once more.

454.2 sinistrōrsum — to the left, towards the left

Before the new one: say the Latin for to track, then the Latin for to the right.

You'll want to know: sinistrōrsum

sinistrōrsum — "to the left, towards the left".

Ad compitum sinistrōrsum flectimus et ad flūmen venīmus.

At the crossroads we turn to the left and come to the river.

An adverb, also sinistrōrsus, built like dextrōrsum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sinistrōrsum is a shortened sinistrō-vorsum, built from sinister 'left' and vorsum 'turned', from vertō 'to turn' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sinistrōrsum
- Say it: sinistrōrsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sinistrōrsum
- Recall: say the Latin for to track, then the Latin for to the right, then say sinistrōrsum again

Before you move on

What does sinistrōrsum mean? ("To the left, towards the left".) Say it once more.

454.3 oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum — slanting, sideways, at an angle

Before the new one: say the Latin for to the right, then the Latin for to the left.

You'll want to know: oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum

oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum — "slanting, sideways, at an angle".

Sēmita oblīqua per collem ascendit.

The path climbs across the hill at a slant.

An adjective of three endings. Oblīquō itinere, by a sideways route. English oblique comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oblīquus is built from ob- and an old root meaning 'bent, slanting' (Lewis & Short); the exact source of that root is not settled. English oblique comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum
- Say it: oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum
- Recall: say the Latin for to the right, then the Latin for to the left, then say oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum again

Before you move on

What does oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum mean? ("Slanting, sideways, at an angle".) Say it once more.

454.4 circumeō, circumīre — to go round, to walk round; to visit in turn

Before the new one: say the Latin for to the left, then the Latin for slanting.

You'll want to know: circumeō, circumīre

circumeō, circumīre — "to go round, to walk round; to visit in turn".

Via mūrōs oppidī circumit.

The road goes round the walls of the town.

Irregular like eō: circumeō, circumīre, circumiī, circumitum. Often written circueō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

circumeō is built from circum 'around' and eō 'to go' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: circumeō, circumīre
- Say it: circumeō, circumīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with circumeō, circumīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to the left, then the Latin for slanting, then say circumeō, circumīre again

Before you move on

What does circumeō, circumīre mean? ("To go round, to walk round; to visit in turn".) Say it once more.

454.5 circuitus, circuitūs — a detour, a way round; a circuit

Before the new one: say the Latin for slanting, then the Latin for to go round.

You'll want to know: circuitus, circuitūs

circuitus, circuitūs — "a detour, a way round; a circuit".

Pōns frāctus est; itaque longō circuitū ad oppidum pervenīmus.

The bridge is broken; so we reach the town by a long detour.

Fourth declension, masculine: circuitus, circuitūs m., from circumeō. English circuit comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

circuitus is built on circumeō 'to go round' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with the noun ending -tus. English circuit comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: circuitus, circuitūs
- Say it: circuitus, circuitūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with circuitus, circuitūs
- Recall: say the Latin for slanting, then the Latin for to go round, then say circuitus, circuitūs again

Before you move on

What does circuitus, circuitūs mean? ("A detour, a way round; a circuit".) Say it once more.

454.6 Words from chapters 447–454 — a review

Say the Latin for a bedbug and to bite.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a bedbug, to bite, to scratch, sleepless, to lie down
- to snore, to make a noise, to make a din, a drinker, hoarse
- flat wine, neat wine, to water down, rotten, a tavern hostess
- a complaint, to complain, to cheat, grasping, dirt
- to inquire, to ask around, to ask after, to show, to make known

- to stray, off the road, without roads, a roundabout way, to wander about
- a leader, knowing, to escort, to find, to track
- to the right, to the left, slanting, to go round, a detour

Before you move on

A bedbug? (cīmex, cīmicis.) To bite? (mordeō, mordēre.) To scratch? (scalpō, scalpere.) Sleepless? (īnsomnis, īnsomne.) To lie down? (cubō, cubāre.) To snore? (stertō, stertere.) To make a noise? (strepō, strepere.) To make a din? (obstrepō, obstrepere.) A drinker? (pōtor, pōtōris.) Hoarse? (raucus, rauca, raucum.) Flat wine? (vappa, vappae.) Neat wine? (merum, merī.) To water down? (dīluō, dīluere.) Rotten? (pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum.) A tavern hostess? (cōpa, cōpae.) A complaint? (querēla, querēlae.) To complain? (conqueror, conquerī.) To cheat? (fraudō, fraudāre.) Grasping? (rapāx, rapācis.) Dirt? (sordēs, sordis.) To inquire? (percontor, percontārī.) To ask around? (scīscitor, scīscitārī.) To ask after? (requīrō, requīrere.) To show? (mōnstrō, mōnstrāre.) To make known? (indicō, indicāre.) To stray? (aberrō, aberrāre.) Off the road? (dēvius, dēvia, dēvium.) Without roads? (invius, invia, invium.) A roundabout way? (ambāgēs, ambāgum.) To wander about? (vagor, vagārī.) A leader? (ductor, ductōris.) Knowing? (gnārus, gnāra, gnārum.) To escort? (prōsequor, prōsequī.) To find? (reperiō, reperīre.) To track? (vestīgō, vestīgāre.) To the right? (dextrōrsum.) To the left? (sinistrōrsum.) Slanting? (oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum.) To go round? (circumeō, circumīre.) A detour? (circuitus, circuitūs.)

Chapter 455

To catch sight of, To come near, To turn back, To delay, To stop for a while

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the end of a journey: catching sight of the town, coming near, turning back, delaying and stopping for a while.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 455: I can talk about the end of a journey: catching sight of the town, coming near, turning back, delaying and stopping for a while.

455.1 cōnspicor, cōnspicārī — to catch sight of, to see

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to go round, then the Latin for a detour.

You'll want to know: cōnspicor, cōnspicārī

cōnspicor, cōnspicārī — "to catch sight of, to see".

> Tandem viātōrēs mūrōs urbis cōnspicantur.
>
> At last the travellers catch sight of the city walls.

Deponent: cōnspicor, cōnspicārī, cōnspicātus sum, with an accusative. A related active verb is cōnspiciō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnspicor is built from con- and the root of speciō 'to look' (Lewis & Short), the root seen in spectō 'to watch'. EtymDB lists it but gives no parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnspicor, cōnspicārī
- Say it: cōnspicor, cōnspicārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnspicor, cōnspicārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to go round, then the Latin for a detour, then say cōnspicor, cōnspicārī again

Before you move on

What does cōnspicor, cōnspicārī mean? ("To catch sight of, to see".) Say it once more.

455.2 accēdō, accēdere — to come near, to approach; to be added

Before the new one: say the Latin for a detour, then the Latin for to catch sight of.

You'll want to know: accēdō, accēdere

accēdō, accēdere — "to come near, to approach; to be added".

Nāvis ad portum accēdit.

The ship comes near the harbour.

accēdō, accēdere, accessī, accessum, with ad and the accusative. English access and accede come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

accēdō is built from ad- 'towards' and cēdō 'to go' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English access and accede come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: accēdō, accēdere
- Say it: accēdō, accēdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with accēdō, accēdere
- Recall: say the Latin for a detour, then the Latin for to catch sight of, then say accēdō, accēdere again

Before you move on

What does accēdō, accēdere mean? ("To come near, to approach; to be added".) Say it once more.

455.3 revertor, revertī — to turn back, to return

Before the new one: say the Latin for to catch sight of, then the Latin for to come near.

You'll want to know: revertor, revertī

revertor, revertī — "to turn back, to return".

Via clausa est; itaque viātōrēs domum revertuntur.

The road is closed; so the travellers turn back home.

Deponent in the present: revertor, revertī, but the perfect is active: revertī, reversus as a participle. English revert comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

revertor is built from re- 'back' and vertō 'to turn' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short, under revertō). English revert comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: revertor, revertī
- Say it: revertor, revertī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with revertor, revertī
- Recall: say the Latin for to catch sight of, then the Latin for to come near, then say revertor, revertī again

Before you move on

What does revertor, revertī mean? ("To turn back, to return".) Say it once more.

455.4 moror, morārī — to delay, to linger; to hold up

Before the new one: say the Latin for to come near, then the Latin for to turn back.

You'll want to know: moror, morārī

moror, morārī — "to delay, to linger; to hold up".

Viātor in caupōnā nōn morātur, quod nox venit.

The traveller does not linger at the inn, because night is coming.

Deponent: moror, morārī, morātus sum, from mora 'delay'. Nōlī morārī, don't hang about. English moratorium comes from the same root.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

moror is built on mora 'delay' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), a regular first-conjugation deponent made from the noun.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: moror, morārī
- Say it: moror, morārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with moror, morārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to come near, then the Latin for to turn back, then say moror, morārī again

Before you move on

What does moror, morārī mean? ("To delay, to linger; to hold up".) Say it once more.

455.5 commoror, commorārī — to stop for a while, to stay

Before the new one: say the Latin for to turn back, then the Latin for to delay.

You'll want to know: commoror, commorārī

commoror, commorārī — "to stop for a while, to stay".

Mercātor trēs diēs in oppidō commorātur.

The merchant stays three days in the town.

Deponent: commoror, commorārī, commorātus sum. A short stay on the way, not an end.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commoror is built from con- and moror 'to delay, to linger' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: commoror, commorārī
- Say it: commoror, commorārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with commoror, commorārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to turn back, then the Latin for to delay, then say commoror, commorārī again

Before you move on

What does commoror, commorārī mean? ("To stop for a while, to stay".) Say it once more.

Chapter 456

Tenant, Townsman, Resident, To live in, Occupant

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the people who live in a town: a tenant, a townsman, a resident, living in a place, and the occupant of a house.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 456: I can talk about the people who live in a town: a tenant, a townsman, a resident, living in a place, and the occupant of a house.

456.1 inquilīnus, inquilīnī — a tenant, a lodger

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to delay, then the Latin for to stop for a while.

You'll want to know: inquilīnus, inquilīnī

inquilīnus, inquilīnī — "a tenant, a lodger".

> Inquilīnus dominō mercēdem dat.
>
> The tenant pays the landlord his rent.

Second declension, masculine: inquilīnus, inquilīnī m. Someone living in a house that is not his own; most people in a big city rented.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inquilīnus is built on incolō 'to live in', from in- and colō 'to dwell, to till' (Lewis & Short, from an older incolīnus). EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: inquilīnus, inquilīnī
- Say it: inquilīnus, inquilīnī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with inquilīnus, inquilīnī
- Recall: say the Latin for to delay, then the Latin for to stop for a while, then say inquilīnus, inquilīnī again

Before you move on

What does inquilīnus, inquilīnī mean? ("A tenant, a lodger".) Say it once more.

456.2 oppidānus, oppidānī — a townsman, an inhabitant of a town

Before the new one: say the Latin for to stop for a while, then the Latin for a tenant.

You'll want to know: oppidānus, oppidānī

oppidānus, oppidānī — "a townsman, an inhabitant of a town".

Oppidānī in forō mercātōrēs exspectant.

The townspeople wait for the merchants in the forum.

Second declension, masculine: oppidānus, oppidānī m., mostly plural. Also an adjective: of a country town.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oppidānus is built on oppidum 'town' with the suffix -ānus 'belonging to' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: oppidānus, oppidānī
- Say it: oppidānus, oppidānī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with oppidānus, oppidānī
- Recall: say the Latin for to stop for a while, then the Latin for a tenant, then say oppidānus, oppidānī again

Before you move on

What does oppidānus, oppidānī mean? ("A townsman, an inhabitant of a town".) Say it once more.

456.3 incola, incolae — a resident, an inhabitant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tenant, then the Latin for a townsman.

You'll want to know: incola, incolae

incola, incolae — "a resident, an inhabitant".

Incolae vīcī nōs benignē accipiunt.

The people who live in the village receive us kindly.

First declension, masculine or feminine: incola, incolae. Like nauta and agricola, a first-declension noun for a person who is often a man.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incola is built on incolō 'to live in' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which comes from in- and colō 'to dwell'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: incola, incolae
- Say it: incola, incolae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with incola, incolae
- Recall: say the Latin for a tenant, then the Latin for a townsman, then say incola, incolae again

Before you move on

What does incola, incolae mean? ("A resident, an inhabitant".) Say it once more.

456.4 incolō, incolere — to live in, to inhabit

Before the new one: say the Latin for a townsman, then the Latin for a resident.

You'll want to know: incolō, incolere

incolō, incolere — "to live in, to inhabit".

Multī hominēs hanc urbem incolunt.

Many people live in this city.

incolō, incolere, incoluī, with an accusative of the place lived in.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incolō is built from in- 'in' and colō 'to dwell, to till' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: incolō, incolere
- Say it: incolō, incolere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with incolō, incolere
- Recall: say the Latin for a townsman, then the Latin for a resident, then say incolō, incolere again

Before you move on

What does incolō, incolere mean? ("To live in, to inhabit".) Say it once more.

456.5 habitātor, habitātōris — an occupant, a dweller

Before the new one: say the Latin for a resident, then the Latin for to live in.

You'll want to know: habitātor, habitātōris

habitātor, habitātōris — "an occupant, a dweller".

Domus vetus est, sed habitātōrēs eam amant.

The house is old, but the people who live in it love it.

Third declension, masculine: habitātor, habitātōris m., from habitō 'to live'. English habitat comes from the same verb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

habitātor is built on habitō 'to live, to dwell' with the suffix -tor 'one who' (Lewis & Short). habitō itself is a frequentative of habeō 'to have, to hold'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: habitātor, habitātōris
- Say it: habitātor, habitātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with habitātor, habitātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a resident, then the Latin for to live in, then say habitātor, habitātōris again

Before you move on

What does habitātor, habitātōris mean? ("An occupant, a dweller".) Say it once more.

Chapter 457

Block of flats, Upper room, Storey, Timber, Beam

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a block of flats: the block itself, an upper room, a storey, timbers and beams.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 457: I can describe a block of flats: the block itself, an upper room, a storey, timbers and beams.

457.1 īnsula, īnsulae — a block of flats, an apartment house; an island

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to live in, then the Latin for an occupant.

You'll want to know: īnsula, īnsulae

īnsula, īnsulae — "a block of flats, an apartment house; an island".

> In urbe multī pauperēs in īnsulīs altīs habitant.
>
> In the city many poor people live in tall blocks of flats.

First declension, feminine: īnsula, īnsulae f. First an island, then a block of rented flats standing alone like an island among streets. English isle and insulate come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of īnsula is not settled: Lewis & Short offer a doubtful analysis as in- + sul-, and EtymDB gives no older parent. English isle comes from it through French, and insulate and peninsula from Latin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnsula, īnsulae
- Say it: īnsula, īnsulae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnsula, īnsulae
- Recall: say the Latin for to live in, then the Latin for an occupant, then say īnsula, īnsulae again

Before you move on

What does īnsula, īnsulae mean? ("A block of flats, an apartment house; an island".) Say it once more.

457.2 cēnāculum, cēnāculī — an upper room, a garret, a flat on an upper floor

Before the new one: say the Latin for an occupant, then the Latin for a block of flats.

You'll want to know: cēnāculum, cēnāculī

cēnāculum, cēnāculī — "an upper room, a garret, a flat on an upper floor".

Poēta pauper in cēnāculō sub tēgulīs habitat.

The poor poet lives in a garret under the roof tiles.

Second declension, neuter: cēnāculum, cēnāculī n. First a dining room, which in old houses was upstairs, then any upper room.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēnāculum is built on cēna 'dinner' with the suffix -culum 'place for' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a dining room, which was upstairs, and so an upper room.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cēnāculum, cēnāculī
- Say it: cēnāculum, cēnāculī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cēnāculum, cēnāculī
- Recall: say the Latin for an occupant, then the Latin for a block of flats, then say cēnāculum, cēnāculī again

Before you move on

What does cēnāculum, cēnāculī mean? ("An upper room, a garret, a flat on an upper floor".) Say it once more.

457.3 contignātiō, contignātiōnis — a storey, a floor (of beams and boards)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a block of flats, then the Latin for an upper room.

You'll want to know: contignātiō, contignātiōnis

contignātiō, contignātiōnis — "a storey, a floor (of beams and boards)".

Īnsula alta est: sex contignātiōnēs habet.

The block of flats is tall: it has six storeys.

Third declension, feminine: contignātiō, contignātiōnis f. A floor laid on joists, so one storey of a building.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

contignātiō is built on contignō 'to join with beams', from con- and tignum 'beam, timber' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: contignātiō, contignātiōnis
- Say it: contignātiō, contignātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with contignātiō, contignātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a block of flats, then the Latin for an upper room, then say contignātiō, contignātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does contignātiō, contignātiōnis mean? ("A storey, a floor (of beams and boards)".) Say it once more.

457.4 tignum, tignī — a timber, a log for building; building material

Before the new one: say the Latin for an upper room, then the Latin for a storey.

You'll want to know: tignum, tignī

tignum, tignī — "a timber, a log for building; building material".

Fabrī tigna in plaustrō ad īnsulam novam vehunt.

The workmen carry timbers on a wagon to the new block of flats.

Second declension, neuter: tignum, tignī n. Wood for building, cut and ready.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tignum is inherited from Proto-Italic tegnom (EtymDB), which EtymDB traces to a PIE word for a pole or stake, with English stake as a cousin. Lewis & Short connect it instead with the root of texō 'to build', so the deeper source is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tignum, tignī
- Say it: tignum, tignī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tignum, tignī
- Recall: say the Latin for an upper room, then the Latin for a storey, then say tignum, tignī again

Before you move on

What does tignum, tignī mean? ("A timber, a log for building; building material".) Say it once more.

457.5 trabs, trabis — a beam, a timber; (in poetry) a ship

Before the new one: say the Latin for a storey, then the Latin for a timber.

You'll want to know: trabs, trabis

trabs, trabis — "a beam, a timber; (in poetry) a ship".

Magnae trabēs in tēctō templī sunt.

There are great beams in the roof of the temple.

Third declension, feminine: trabs, trabis f. Bigger than a tignum. English architrave comes, through Italian trave, from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trabs is inherited from PIE treb- 'wooden beam' (EtymDB), and EtymDB lists English thorp 'village' as a cousin. English architrave comes from it through Italian trave.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: trabs, trabis
- Say it: trabs, trabis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with trabs, trabis
- Recall: say the Latin for a storey, then the Latin for a timber, then say trabs, trabis again

Before you move on

What does trabs, trabis mean? ("A beam, a timber; (in poetry) a ship".) Say it once more.

Chapter 458

Alley, Neighbourhood, Privy, Sewer, Water tower

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the back streets and services of a town: an alley, the neighbourhood, a privy, the sewer and a water tower.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 458: I can talk about the back streets and services of a town: an alley, the neighbourhood, a privy, the sewer and a water tower.

458.1 angiportum, angiportī — an alley, a narrow lane

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a timber, then the Latin for a beam.

You'll want to know: angiportum, angiportī

angiportum, angiportī — "an alley, a narrow lane".

> Nocte angiportum obscūrum et perīculōsum est.
>
> At night the alley is dark and dangerous.

Second declension, neuter: angiportum, angiportī n.; also angiportus, angiportūs m. A narrow side street between houses.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

angiportum is built, as Lewis & Short explain under angiportus, on the root of angustus 'narrow' and on portus in its old sense 'passage'. EtymDB does not list it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: angiportum, angiportī
- Say it: angiportum, angiportī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with angiportum, angiportī
- Recall: say the Latin for a timber, then the Latin for a beam, then say angiportum, angiportī again

Before you move on

What does angiportum, angiportī mean? ("An alley, a narrow lane".) Say it once more.

458.2 vīcīnia, vīcīniae — a neighbourhood; the neighbours

Before the new one: say the Latin for a beam, then the Latin for an alley.

You'll want to know: vīcīnia, vīcīniae

vīcīnia, vīcīniae — "a neighbourhood; the neighbours".

In nostrā vīcīniā taberna bona est.

In our neighbourhood there is a good shop.

First declension, feminine: vīcīnia, vīcīniae f., from vīcīnus 'neighbour'. English vicinity comes from the related vīcīnitās.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīcīnia is built on vīcīnus 'neighbour' with the suffix -ia (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), and vīcīnus comes from vīcus 'street, village'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vīcīnia, vīcīniae
- Say it: vīcīnia, vīcīniae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vīcīnia, vīcīniae
- Recall: say the Latin for a beam, then the Latin for an alley, then say vīcīnia, vīcīniae again

Before you move on

What does vīcīnia, vīcīniae mean? ("A neighbourhood; the neighbours".) Say it once more.

458.3 lātrīna, lātrīnae — a latrine, a privy, a lavatory

Before the new one: say the Latin for an alley, then the Latin for a neighbourhood.

You'll want to know: lātrīna, lātrīnae

lātrīna, lātrīnae — "a latrine, a privy, a lavatory".

In thermīs lātrīna pūblica est.

In the baths there is a public lavatory.

First declension, feminine: lātrīna, lātrīnae f. Lewis & Short note that it first meant a bath. English latrine comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lātrīna is shortened from lavātrīna 'a place for washing', built on lavō 'to wash' (Lewis & Short). English latrine comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lātrīna, lātrīnae
- Say it: lātrīna, lātrīnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lātrīna, lātrīnae
- Recall: say the Latin for an alley, then the Latin for a neighbourhood, then say lātrīna, lātrīnae again

Before you move on

What does lātrīna, lātrīnae mean? ("A latrine, a privy, a lavatory".) Say it once more.

458.4 cloāca, cloācae — a sewer, a drain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a neighbourhood, then the Latin for a latrine.

You'll want to know: cloāca, cloācae

cloāca, cloācae — "a sewer, a drain".

Aqua sordida per cloācam in flūmen it.

Dirty water runs through the sewer into the river.

First declension, feminine: cloāca, cloācae f. The great sewers of old towns still carry water.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cloāca is built on an old verb cluō 'to cleanse, to purge' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), so it is a channel that washes the city clean. English keeps cloaca as a term in zoology.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cloāca, cloācae
- Say it: cloāca, cloācae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cloāca, cloācae
- Recall: say the Latin for a neighbourhood, then the Latin for a latrine, then say cloāca, cloācae again

Before you move on

What does cloāca, cloācae mean? ("A sewer, a drain".) Say it once more.

458.5 castellum, castellī — a water tower, a reservoir; a fort, a stronghold

Before the new one: say the Latin for a latrine, then the Latin for a sewer.

You'll want to know: castellum, castellī

castellum, castellī — "a water tower, a reservoir; a fort, a stronghold".

Aqua ex aquaeductū in castellum venit et inde in urbem.

Water comes from the aqueduct into the water tower and from there into the city.

Second declension, neuter: castellum, castellī n., a diminutive of castrum 'fort'. The castellum aquae shared the water out to the pipes. English castle comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

castellum is a diminutive of castrum 'fort, fortified place' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), and Lewis & Short also give the water reservoir of an aqueduct. English castle comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: castellum, castellī
- Say it: castellum, castellī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with castellum, castellī
- Recall: say the Latin for a latrine, then the Latin for a sewer, then say castellum, castellī again

Before you move on

What does castellum, castellī mean? ("A water tower, a reservoir; a fort, a stronghold".) Say it once more.

Chapter 459

Colonnade, Temple, Shrine, Sacred boundary, To build up

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe the public buildings of a town: a colonnade, a temple, a shrine, the sacred boundary, and putting buildings up.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 459: I can describe the public buildings of a town: a colonnade, a temple, a shrine, the sacred boundary, and putting buildings up.

459.1 porticus, porticūs — a colonnade, a covered walk, a portico

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a sewer, then the Latin for a water tower.

You'll want to know: porticus, porticūs

porticus, porticūs — "a colonnade, a covered walk, a portico".

> Aestāte cīvēs in porticū ambulant, quod ibi umbra est.
>
> In summer the citizens walk in the colonnade, because there is shade there.

Fourth declension, feminine: porticus, porticūs f. English portico and porch come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

porticus is built on porta 'gate, passage' (EtymDB): a covered passage. English portico comes from it through Italian, and porch through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: porticus, porticūs
- Say it: porticus, porticūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with porticus, porticūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a sewer, then the Latin for a water tower, then say porticus, porticūs again

Before you move on

What does porticus, porticūs mean? ("A colonnade, a covered walk, a portico".) Say it once more.

459.2 aedēs, aedis — a temple; (plural) a house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a water tower, then the Latin for a colonnade.

You'll want to know: aedēs, aedis

aedēs, aedis — "a temple; (plural) a house".

In forō aedēs magna et antīqua est.

In the forum there is a great old temple.

Third declension, feminine: aedēs or aedis, aedis f. In the singular a temple, a house of a god; in the plural a house of people, with all its rooms.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aedēs is usually traced to PIE h_2eyd^h- 'to burn', since Lewis & Short give 'hearth' as an early sense; aestās 'summer' is from the same root. English edifice comes from aedificium, built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aedēs, aedis
- Say it: aedēs, aedis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aedēs, aedis
- Recall: say the Latin for a water tower, then the Latin for a colonnade, then say aedēs, aedis again

Before you move on

What does aedēs, aedis mean? ("A temple; (plural) a house".) Say it once more.

459.3 aedicula, aediculae — a shrine, a small temple; a niche

Before the new one: say the Latin for a colonnade, then the Latin for a temple.

You'll want to know: aedicula, aediculae

aedicula, aediculae — "a shrine, a small temple; a niche".

> In compitō aedicula parva est, et viātōrēs ibi flōrēs pōnunt.
>
> At the crossroads there is a small shrine, and travellers put flowers there.

First declension, feminine: aedicula, aediculae f., a diminutive of aedēs. A little shrine, or a niche for a statue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aedicula is a diminutive of aedēs 'temple, house' (Lewis & Short), made with -cula. English keeps aedicule in architecture.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aedicula, aediculae
- Say it: aedicula, aediculae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aedicula, aediculae
- Recall: say the Latin for a colonnade, then the Latin for a temple, then say aedicula, aediculae again

Before you move on

What does aedicula, aediculae mean? ("A shrine, a small temple; a niche".) Say it once more.

459.4 pōmērium, pōmēriī — the sacred boundary (of a city)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a temple, then the Latin for a shrine.

You'll want to know: pōmērium, pōmēriī

pōmērium, pōmēriī — "the sacred boundary (of a city)".

Intrā pōmērium mīlitēs arma nōn gerunt.

Inside the sacred boundary soldiers do not carry weapons.

Second declension, neuter: pōmērium, pōmēriī n., also pōmoerium. The holy line round a Roman town, marked with stones.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōmērium is usually explained, as by ancient writers, as post 'behind' and moerus, an old form of mūrus 'wall' (Lewis & Short): the strip of land along the wall. EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pōmērium, pōmēriī
- Say it: pōmērium, pōmēriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pōmērium, pōmēriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a temple, then the Latin for a shrine, then say pōmērium, pōmēriī again

Before you move on

What does pōmērium, pōmēriī mean? ("The sacred boundary (of a city)".) Say it once more.

459.5 exstruō, exstruere — to build up, to raise, to pile up

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shrine, then the Latin for the sacred boundary.

You'll want to know: exstruō, exstruere

exstruō, exstruere — "to build up, to raise, to pile up".

Cīvēs novam porticum in forō exstruunt.

The citizens put up a new colonnade in the forum.

exstruō, exstruere, exstrūxī, exstrūctum. Also to pile up: mēnsās epulīs exstruere, to load tables with food.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exstruō is built from ex- 'up, out' and struō 'to pile up, to build' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English construct and structure come from struō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: exstruō, exstruere
- Say it: exstruō, exstruere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with exstruō, exstruere
- Recall: say the Latin for a shrine, then the Latin for the sacred boundary, then say exstruō, exstruere again

Before you move on

What does exstruō, exstruere mean? ("To build up, to raise, to pile up".) Say it once more.

Chapter 460

Crowd, Crowded, To throng, To go back and forth, Near the city

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a busy town: a crowd, crowded streets, people thronging and going back and forth, and places near the city.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 460: I can describe a busy town: a crowd, crowded streets, people thronging and going back and forth, and places near the city.

460.1 turba, turbae — a crowd, a throng; an uproar

Before the new one: say the Latin for the sacred boundary, then the Latin for to build up.

You'll want to know: turba, turbae

turba, turbae — "a crowd, a throng; an uproar".

> In viā turba magna est, et raeda lentē it.
>
> There is a big crowd in the street, and the carriage goes slowly.

First declension, feminine: turba, turbae f. First disorder and noise, then the crowd that makes it. English disturb and turbulent belong to the same family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

turba is usually linked with Greek tyrbē 'turmoil, disorder' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short); whether it was borrowed or is a cousin is not settled. English disturb and turbulent come from words built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: turba, turbae
- Say it: turba, turbae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with turba, turbae
- Recall: say the Latin for the sacred boundary, then the Latin for to build up, then say turba, turbae again

Before you move on

What does turba, turbae mean? ("A crowd, a throng; an uproar".) Say it once more.

460.2 frequēns, frequentis — crowded, full of people; frequent

Before the new one: say the Latin for to build up, then the Latin for a crowd.

You'll want to know: frequēns, frequentis

frequēns, frequentis — "crowded, full of people; frequent".

Forum hodiē frequēns est, quod mercātus est.

The forum is crowded today, because it is market day.

An adjective of one ending: frequēns, genitive frequentis. First 'packed close', then 'often'. English frequent comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frequēns is usually traced to PIE $b^h rek$- 'to cram together' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short compare farciō 'to stuff'). English frequent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: frequēns, frequentis
- Say it: frequēns, frequentis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with frequēns, frequentis
- Recall: say the Latin for to build up, then the Latin for a crowd, then say frequēns, frequentis again

Before you move on

What does frequēns, frequentis mean? ("Crowded, full of people; frequent".) Say it once more.

460.3 frequentō, frequentāre — to throng, to crowd into; to visit often

Before the new one: say the Latin for a crowd, then the Latin for crowded.

You'll want to know: frequentō, frequentāre

frequentō, frequentāre — "to throng, to crowd into; to visit often".

Cīvēs thermās post merīdiem frequentant.

The citizens throng the baths in the afternoon.

frequentō, frequentāre, frequentāvī, frequentātum, with an accusative. English frequent as a verb comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frequentō is built on frequēns, frequentis 'crowded, frequent' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: frequentō, frequentāre
- Say it: frequentō, frequentāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with frequentō, frequentāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a crowd, then the Latin for crowded, then say frequentō, frequentāre again

Before you move on

What does frequentō, frequentāre mean? ("To throng, to crowd into; to visit often".) Say it once more.

460.4 commeō, commeāre — to go back and forth, to come and go

Before the new one: say the Latin for crowded, then the Latin for to throng.

You'll want to know: commeō, commeāre

commeō, commeāre — "to go back and forth, to come and go".

Mercātōrēs inter portum et forum commeant.

Merchants go back and forth between the harbour and the forum.

commeō, commeāre, commeāvī, commeātum. The noun commeātus is the coming and going, then supplies and leave.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commeō is built from con- and meō 'to go, to pass' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: commeō, commeāre
- Say it: commeō, commeāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with commeō, commeāre
- Recall: say the Latin for crowded, then the Latin for to throng, then say commeō, commeāre again

Before you move on

What does commeō, commeāre mean? ("To go back and forth, to come and go".) Say it once more.

460.5 suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum — near the city, suburban

Before the new one: say the Latin for to throng, then the Latin for to go back and forth.

You'll want to know: suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum

suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum — "near the city, suburban".

Dīves vīllam suburbānam habet et saepe ibi cēnat.

The rich man has a villa near the city and often dines there.

An adjective of three endings, from sub 'near, under' and urbs 'city'. Suburbānum, a villa near the city. English suburban comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suburbānus is built from sub 'under, close to' and urbānus 'of the city', from urbs (Lewis & Short). English suburban comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum
- Say it: suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum
- Recall: say the Latin for to throng, then the Latin for to go back and forth, then say suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum again

Before you move on

What does suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum mean? ("Near the city, suburban".) Say it once more.

Chapter 461

Hot-drinks bar, Hot water, To drink, Smoky, Filthy

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about eating and drinking in town: a hot-drinks bar, hot water for wine, drinking, a smoky room and a filthy table.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 461: I can talk about eating and drinking in town: a hot-drinks bar, hot water for wine, drinking, a smoky room and a filthy table.

461.1 thermopōlium, thermopōliī — a hot-drinks bar, a tavern selling warm drinks

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to go back and forth, then the Latin for near the city.

You'll want to know: thermopōlium, thermopōliī

thermopōlium, thermopōliī — "a hot-drinks bar, a tavern selling warm drinks".

> Fabrī in thermopōliō vīnum calidum bibunt.
>
> The workmen drink warm wine in the hot-drinks bar.

Second declension, neuter: thermopōlium, thermopōliī n. A word of comedy; such bars, with jars set in the counter, line the streets of excavated towns.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

thermopōlium comes from Greek, built from thermos 'hot' and pōleō 'to sell' (Lewis & Short give the sense, a place where warm drinks were sold). EtymDB does not list it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: thermopōlium, thermopōliī
- Say it: thermopōlium, thermopōliī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with thermopōlium, thermopōliī
- Recall: say the Latin for to go back and forth, then the Latin for near the city, then say thermopōlium, thermopōliī again

Before you move on

What does thermopōlium, thermopōliī mean? ("A hot-drinks bar, a tavern selling warm drinks".) Say it once more.

461.2 calda, caldae — hot water (for mixing with wine)

Before the new one: say the Latin for near the city, then the Latin for a hot-drinks bar.

You'll want to know: calda, caldae

calda, caldae — "hot water (for mixing with wine)".

Hospes caldam et vīnum rogat.

The guest asks for hot water and wine.

First declension, feminine: calda, caldae f., short for (aqua) calida. Romans liked wine mixed with hot water in winter.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calda is a shortened form of (aqua) calida 'hot water', from calidus 'hot' (Lewis & Short), which is built on caleō 'to be warm'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: calda, caldae
- Say it: calda, caldae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with calda, caldae
- Recall: say the Latin for near the city, then the Latin for a hot-drinks bar, then say calda, caldae again

Before you move on

What does calda, caldae mean? ("Hot water (for mixing with wine)".) Say it once more.

461.3 pōtō, pōtāre — to drink, to drink deep

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hot-drinks bar, then the Latin for hot water.

You'll want to know: pōtō, pōtāre

pōtō, pōtāre — "to drink, to drink deep".

Pōtōrēs usque ad mediam noctem pōtant.

The drinkers drink on until midnight.

pōtō, pōtāre, pōtāvī, pōtātum or pōtum. Stronger than bibō: drinking hard, drinking for pleasure. English potion and potable come from the same root.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōtō is inherited from PIE peh₃- 'to drink', with Greek pinō 'to drink' as a cousin (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English potion and potable come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pōtō, pōtāre
- Say it: pōtō, pōtāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pōtō, pōtāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a hot-drinks bar, then the Latin for hot water, then say pōtō, pōtāre again

Before you move on

What does pōtō, pōtāre mean? ("To drink, to drink deep".) Say it once more.

461.4 fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum — smoky, full of smoke

Before the new one: say the Latin for hot water, then the Latin for to drink.

You'll want to know: fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum

fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum — "smoky, full of smoke".

Popīna fūmōsa est, et oculī hospitum dolent.

The cookshop is smoky, and the customers' eyes hurt.

An adjective of three endings, from fūmus 'smoke' with -ōsus 'full of'. Poets mock the smoky tavern.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fūmōsus is built on fūmus 'smoke' with the suffix -ōsus 'full of' (Lewis & Short). English fume comes from fūmus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum
- Say it: fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for hot water, then the Latin for to drink, then say fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum again

Before you move on

What does fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum mean? ("Smoky, full of smoke".) Say it once more.

461.5 immundus, immunda, immundum — filthy, dirty, unclean

Before the new one: say the Latin for to drink, then the Latin for smoky.

You'll want to know: immundus, immunda, immundum

immundus, immunda, immundum — "filthy, dirty, unclean".

Mēnsae immundae sunt, et cibus malus est.

The tables are filthy, and the food is bad.

An adjective of three endings, from in- 'not' and mundus 'clean, neat'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

immundus is built from in- 'not' and the adjective mundus 'clean, neat' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: immundus, immunda, immundum
- Say it: immundus, immunda, immundum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with immundus, immunda, immundum
- Recall: say the Latin for to drink, then the Latin for smoky, then say immundus, immunda, immundum again

Before you move on

What does immundus, immunda, immundum mean? ("Filthy, dirty, unclean".) Say it once more.

Chapter 462

To trade at market, To keep shouting, To offer for sale, Goods, Hawker

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe market day: trading at the market, sellers shouting, goods offered for sale, and the hawker.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 462: I can describe market day: trading at the market, sellers shouting, goods offered for sale, and the hawker.

462.1 nūndinor, nūndinārī — to trade at market, to buy and sell

> Before the new one: say the Latin for smoky, then the Latin for filthy.

You'll want to know: nūndinor, nūndinārī

nūndinor, nūndinārī — "to trade at market, to buy and sell".

> Agricolae nōnō quōque diē in oppidō nūndinantur.
>
> Every ninth day the farmers trade at the market in the town.

Deponent: nūndinor, nūndinārī, nūndinātus sum. The market day, nūndinae, came every ninth day, counting both ends.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūndinor is built on nūndinae 'market day' (Lewis & Short), which comes from novem 'nine' and diēs 'day': the market held every ninth day.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nūndinor, nūndinārī
- Say it: nūndinor, nūndinārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nūndinor, nūndinārī
- Recall: say the Latin for smoky, then the Latin for filthy, then say nūndinor, nūndinārī again

Before you move on

What does nūndinor, nūndinārī mean? ("To trade at market, to buy and sell".) Say it once more.

462.2 clāmitō, clāmitāre — to keep shouting, to cry out again and again

Before the new one: say the Latin for filthy, then the Latin for to trade at market.

You'll want to know: clāmitō, clāmitāre

clāmitō, clāmitāre — "to keep shouting, to cry out again and again".

Mercātōrēs in forō clāmitant.

The merchants in the forum keep shouting.

clāmitō, clāmitāre, clāmitāvī, clāmitātum, a frequentative of clāmō: the -itō means 'again and again'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clāmitō is built on clāmō 'to shout' with the frequentative ending -itō (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: clāmitō, clāmitāre
- Say it: clāmitō, clāmitāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with clāmitō, clāmitāre
- Recall: say the Latin for filthy, then the Latin for to trade at market, then say clāmitō, clāmitāre again

Before you move on

What does clāmitō, clāmitāre mean? ("To keep shouting, to cry out again and again".) Say it once more.

462.3 vēnditō, vēnditāre — to offer for sale, to try to sell

Before the new one: say the Latin for to trade at market, then the Latin for to keep shouting.

You'll want to know: vēnditō, vēnditāre

vēnditō, vēnditāre — "to offer for sale, to try to sell".

Mercātor vīnum suum omnibus vēnditat.

The merchant tries to sell his wine to everyone.

vēnditō, vēnditāre, vēnditāvī, vēnditātum, a frequentative of vendō: offering again and again, praising your goods.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēnditō is built on vendō 'to sell' with the frequentative ending -itō (Lewis & Short). English vend and vendor come from vendō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vēnditō, vēnditāre
- Say it: vēnditō, vēnditāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vēnditō, vēnditāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to trade at market, then the Latin for to keep shouting, then say vēnditō, vēnditāre again

Before you move on

What does vēnditō, vēnditāre mean? ("To offer for sale, to try to sell".) Say it once more.

462.4 mercimōnium, mercimōniī — goods, wares, merchandise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to keep shouting, then the Latin for to offer for sale.

You'll want to know: mercimōnium, mercimōniī

mercimōnium, mercimōniī — "goods, wares, merchandise".

Mercātor mercimōnia in nāve ad urbem vehit.

The merchant carries his goods by ship to the city.

Second declension, neuter: mercimōnium, mercimōniī n., mostly plural. A word of comedy, from merx 'goods'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children mercimōnium is built on merx, mercis 'merchandise' with the suffix -mōnium (Lewis & Short). English merchant and commerce come from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mercimōnium, mercimōniī
- Say it: mercimōnium, mercimōniī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mercimōnium, mercimōniī
- Recall: say the Latin for to keep shouting, then the Latin for to offer for sale, then say mercimōnium, mercimōniī again

Before you move on

What does mercimōnium, mercimōniī mean? ("Goods, wares, merchandise".) Say it once more.

462.5 īnstitor, īnstitōris — a hawker, a pedlar; a shop agent

Before the new one: say the Latin for to offer for sale, then the Latin for goods.

You'll want to know: īnstitor, īnstitōris

īnstitor, īnstitōris — "a hawker, a pedlar; a shop agent".

Īnstitor per viās it et mercēs suās clāmat.

The hawker goes through the streets and calls out his goods.

Third declension, masculine: īnstitor, īnstitōris m. A man who sells for someone else, often on the street.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnstitor is built on īnsistō 'to stand on, to keep at a thing' (Lewis & Short), from in- and sistō 'to stand'. EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnstitor, īnstitōris
- Say it: īnstitor, īnstitōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnstitor, īnstitōris
- Recall: say the Latin for to offer for sale, then the Latin for goods, then say īnstitor, īnstitōris again

Before you move on

What does īnstitor, īnstitōris mean? ("A hawker, a pedlar; a shop agent".) Say it once more.

462.6 Words from chapters 455–462 — a review

Say the Latin for to catch sight of and to come near.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to catch sight of, to come near, to turn back, to delay, to stop for a while
- a tenant, a townsman, a resident, to live in, an occupant
- a block of flats, an upper room, a storey, a timber, a beam
- an alley, a neighbourhood, a latrine, a sewer, a water tower
- a colonnade, a temple, a shrine, the sacred boundary, to build up

- a crowd, crowded, to throng, to go back and forth, near the city
- a hot-drinks bar, hot water, to drink, smoky, filthy
- to trade at market, to keep shouting, to offer for sale, goods, a hawker

Before you move on

To catch sight of? (cōnspicor, cōnspicārī.) To come near? (accēdō, accēdere.) To turn back? (revertor, revertī.) To delay? (moror, morārī.) To stop for a while? (commoror, commorārī.) A tenant? (inquilīnus, inquilīnī.) A townsman? (oppidānus, oppidānī.) A resident? (incola, incolae.) To live in? (incolō, incolere.) An occupant? (habitātor, habitātōris.) A block of flats? (īnsula, īnsulae.) An upper room? (cēnāculum, cēnāculī.) A storey? (contignātiō, contignātiōnis.) A timber? (tignum, tignī.) A beam? (trabs, trabis.) An alley? (angiportum, angiportī.) A neighbourhood? (vīcīnia, vīcīniae.) A latrine? (lātrīna, lātrīnae.) A sewer? (cloāca, cloācae.) A water tower? (castellum, castellī.) A colonnade? (porticus, porticūs.) A temple? (aedēs, aedis.) A shrine? (aedicula, aediculae.) The sacred boundary? (pōmērium, pōmēriī.) To build up? (exstruō, exstruere.) A crowd? (turba, turbae.) Crowded? (frequēns, frequentis.) To throng? (frequentō, frequentāre.) To go back and forth? (commeō, commeāre.) Near the city? (suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum.) A hot-drinks bar? (thermopōlium, thermopōliī.) Hot water? (calda, caldae.) To drink? (pōtō, pōtāre.) Smoky? (fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum.) Filthy? (immundus, immunda, immundum.) To trade at market? (nūndinor, nūndinārī.) To keep shouting? (clāmitō, clāmitāre.) To offer for sale? (vēnditō, vēnditāre.) Goods? (mercimōnium, mercimōniī.) A hawker? (īnstitor, īnstitōris.)

Chapter 463

Vegetable grower, Fishmonger, Plaited basket, Wicker basket, Bread basket

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about market sellers and what they carry things in: the vegetable grower, the fishmonger, and three kinds of basket.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 463: I can talk about market sellers and what they carry things in: the vegetable grower, the fishmonger, and three kinds of basket.

463.1 holitor, holitōris — a vegetable grower, a market gardener

Before the new one: say the Latin for goods, then the Latin for a hawker.

You'll want to know: holitor, holitōris

holitor, holitōris — "a vegetable grower, a market gardener".

Holitor holera in forum portat et vendit.

The market gardener carries vegetables to the forum and sells them.

Third declension, masculine: holitor, holitōris m., also spelled olitor. From holus 'vegetables'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

holitor is built on holus, holeris 'vegetables, greens' with the suffix -tor 'one who' (Lewis & Short, under olitor).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: holitor, holitōris
- Say it: holitor, holitōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with holitor, holitōris
- Recall: say the Latin for goods, then the Latin for a hawker, then say holitor, holitōris again

Before you move on

What does holitor, holitōris mean? ("A vegetable grower, a market gardener".) Say it once more.

463.2 piscārius, piscāriī — a fishmonger

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hawker, then the Latin for a vegetable grower.

You'll want to know: piscārius, piscāriī

piscārius, piscāriī — "a fishmonger".

Piscārius piscēs recentēs clāmat.

The fishmonger calls out his fresh fish.

Second declension, masculine: piscārius, piscāriī m. Also an adjective: forum piscārium, the fish market.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piscārius is built on piscis 'fish' with the suffix -ārius (EtymDB; Lewis & Short); piscis comes from PIE peysḱ-, and English fish is a Germanic cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: piscārius, piscāriī
- Say it: piscārius, piscāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with piscārius, piscāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a hawker, then the Latin for a vegetable grower, then say piscārius, piscāriī again

Before you move on

What does piscārius, piscāriī mean? ("A fishmonger".) Say it once more.

463.3 sporta, sportae — a plaited basket, a hamper

Before the new one: say the Latin for a vegetable grower, then the Latin for a fishmonger.

You'll want to know: sporta, sportae

sporta, sportae — "a plaited basket, a hamper".

Ancilla pānem et cāseum in sportā portat.

The maid carries bread and cheese in a hamper.

First declension, feminine: sporta, sportae f. Its diminutive sportula was the food basket, later the cash, a patron gave his clients.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sporta is usually traced to Greek spyris 'plaited basket' (Lewis & Short compare it); EtymDB links it with PIE sper- 'to twist, to turn'. The path is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sporta, sportae
- Say it: sporta, sportae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sporta, sportae
- Recall: say the Latin for a vegetable grower, then the Latin for a fishmonger, then say sporta, sportae again

Before you move on

What does sporta, sportae mean? ("A plaited basket, a hamper".) Say it once more.

463.4 corbis, corbis — a wicker basket

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fishmonger, then the Latin for a plaited basket.

You'll want to know: corbis, corbis

corbis, corbis — "a wicker basket".

Servī ūvās in corbēs pōnunt.

The slaves put the grapes into wicker baskets.

Third declension, masculine or feminine: corbis, corbis. A big basket of woven twigs, for the field or the vineyard.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of corbis is not settled: an ancient writer explained it from the bent (curvātae) twigs it is woven of, while Lewis & Short compare Greek kolpos 'fold'. EtymDB gives no parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: corbis, corbis
- Say it: corbis, corbis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with corbis, corbis
- Recall: say the Latin for a fishmonger, then the Latin for a plaited basket, then say corbis, corbis again

Before you move on

What does corbis, corbis mean? ("A wicker basket".) Say it once more.

463.5 canistrum, canistrī — a bread basket, a reed basket

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plaited basket, then the Latin for a wicker basket.

You'll want to know: canistrum, canistrī

canistrum, canistrī — "a bread basket, a reed basket".

In cēnā canistrum plēnum pānis est.

At dinner there is a basket full of bread.

Second declension, neuter: canistrum, canistrī n., mostly plural. English canister comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

canistrum was borrowed from Greek kanastron 'basket of reeds' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from kanna 'reed'. English canister comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: canistrum, canistrī
- Say it: canistrum, canistrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with canistrum, canistrī
- Recall: say the Latin for a plaited basket, then the Latin for a wicker basket, then say canistrum, canistrī again

Before you move on

What does canistrum, canistrī mean? ("A bread basket, a reed basket".) Say it once more.

Chapter 464

Steelyard, Pair of scales, Scale pan, To weigh out, To weigh carefully

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about weighing in the market: the steelyard, a pair of scales, the scale pan, and weighing things out with care.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 464: I can talk about weighing in the market: the steelyard, a pair of scales, the scale pan, and weighing things out with care.

464.1 statēra, statērae — a steelyard, a balance with one arm

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a wicker basket, then the Latin for a bread basket.

You'll want to know: statēra, statērae

statēra, statērae — "a steelyard, a balance with one arm".

> Lanius carnem in statērā pōnit.
>
> The butcher puts the meat on the steelyard.

First declension, feminine: statēra, statērae f. A beam hung from a hook, with a weight slid along one arm.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

statēra is usually traced to Greek statēr, a weight and a coin, built on histēmi 'to make stand, to weigh' (EtymDB). Lewis & Short compare Greek stathmē 'rule, balance' instead, so the exact source is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: statēra, statērae
- Say it: statēra, statērae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with statēra, statērae
- Recall: say the Latin for a wicker basket, then the Latin for a bread basket, then say statēra, statērae again

Before you move on

What does statēra, statērae mean? ("A steelyard, a balance with one arm".) Say it once more.

464.2 trutina, trutinae — a pair of scales, a balance

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bread basket, then the Latin for a steelyard.

You'll want to know: trutina, trutinae

trutina, trutinae — "a pair of scales, a balance".

Mercātor aurum in trutinā dīligenter pōnit.

The merchant carefully puts the gold on the scales.

First declension, feminine: trutina, trutinae f. Also figurative: weighing a thing in the mind.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trutina was borrowed from Greek trytanē 'balance, tongue of a balance' (Lewis & Short). EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: trutina, trutinae
- Say it: trutina, trutinae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with trutina, trutinae
- Recall: say the Latin for a bread basket, then the Latin for a steelyard, then say trutina, trutinae again

Before you move on

What does trutina, trutinae mean? ("A pair of scales, a balance".) Say it once more.

464.3 lanx, lancis — a scale pan; a dish, a platter

Before the new one: say the Latin for a steelyard, then the Latin for a pair of scales.

You'll want to know: lanx, lancis

lanx, lancis — "a scale pan; a dish, a platter".

In ūnā lance merx est, in alterā pondus.

In one scale pan there are the goods, in the other the weight.

Third declension, feminine: lanx, lancis f. English balance comes, through French, from bilanx 'having two pans'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lanx is inherited; Lewis & Short and EtymDB compare Greek lekos 'dish, pan' as a cousin. English balance comes, through French, from Late Latin bilanx 'with two scale pans'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lanx, lancis
- Say it: lanx, lancis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lanx, lancis
- Recall: say the Latin for a steelyard, then the Latin for a pair of scales, then say lanx, lancis again

Before you move on

What does lanx, lancis mean? ("A scale pan; a dish, a platter".) Say it once more.

464.4 appendō, appendere — to weigh out; to hang on

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pair of scales, then the Latin for a scale pan.

You'll want to know: appendō, appendere

appendō, appendere — "to weigh out; to hang on".

Pistor pānem appendit et pretium dīcit.

The baker weighs out the bread and says the price.

appendō, appendere, appendī, appēnsum. Money was once weighed, so appendere can also mean to pay. English append and appendix come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

appendō is built from ad- 'to' and pendō 'to hang, to weigh' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English append and appendix come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: appendō, appendere
- Say it: appendō, appendere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with appendō, appendere
- Recall: say the Latin for a pair of scales, then the Latin for a scale pan, then say appendō, appendere again

Before you move on

What does appendō, appendere mean? ("To weigh out; to hang on".) Say it once more.

464.5 pēnsō, pēnsāre — to weigh carefully, to weigh out; to ponder

Before the new one: say the Latin for a scale pan, then the Latin for to weigh out.

You'll want to know: pēnsō, pēnsāre

pēnsō, pēnsāre — "to weigh carefully, to weigh out; to ponder".

Mercātor prūdēns mercem pēnsat.

A careful merchant weighs the goods.

pēnsō, pēnsāre, pēnsāvī, pēnsātum, a frequentative of pendō. English pensive comes from it through French penser 'to think'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pēnsō is a frequentative of pendō 'to weigh', made from its participle pēnsus (Lewis & Short). English pensive comes from it through French penser 'to think, to weigh in the mind'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pēnsō, pēnsāre
- Say it: pēnsō, pēnsāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pēnsō, pēnsāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a scale pan, then the Latin for to weigh out, then say pēnsō, pēnsāre again

Before you move on

What does pēnsō, pēnsāre mean? ("To weigh carefully, to weigh out; to ponder".) Say it once more.

Chapter 465

Peck, Pint, By weight, Quarter-as, Money-changer

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about measures and money: a peck, a pint, things sold by weight, a small coin, and the money-changer.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 465: I can talk about measures and money: a peck, a pint, things sold by weight, a small coin, and the money-changer.

465.1 modius, modiī — a peck (a measure of grain)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to weigh out, then the Latin for to weigh carefully.

You'll want to know: modius, modiī

modius, modiī — "a peck (a measure of grain)".

> Agricola trēs modiōs frūmentī vendit.
>
> The farmer sells three pecks of grain.

Second declension, masculine: modius, modiī m., genitive plural often modium. About nine litres, the standard grain measure.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

modius is built on modus 'measure' with the suffix -ius (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: modius, modiī
- Say it: modius, modiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with modius, modiī
- Recall: say the Latin for to weigh out, then the Latin for to weigh carefully, then say modius, modiī again

Before you move on

What does modius, modiī mean? ("A peck (a measure of grain)".) Say it once more.

465.2 sextārius, sextāriī — a pint (a sixth of a larger measure)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to weigh carefully, then the Latin for a peck.

You'll want to know: sextārius, sextāriī

sextārius, sextāriī — "a pint (a sixth of a larger measure)".

Caupō sextārium vīnī prō duōbus assibus vendit.

The innkeeper sells a pint of wine for two asses.

Second declension, masculine: sextārius, sextāriī m. A sixth of a congius, a little over half a litre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sextārius is built on sextus 'sixth' with the suffix -ārius (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a sixth of a larger measure.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sextārius, sextāriī
- Say it: sextārius, sextāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sextārius, sextāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for to weigh carefully, then the Latin for a peck, then say sextārius, sextāriī again

Before you move on

What does sextārius, sextāriī mean? ("A pint (a sixth of a larger measure)".) Say it once more.

465.3 pondō — by weight, in weight; a pound

Before the new one: say the Latin for a peck, then the Latin for a pint.

You'll want to know: pondō

pondō — "by weight, in weight; a pound".

Pistor duo pondō farīnae emit.

The baker buys two pounds of flour.

An old ablative of pondus 'weight', used as an adverb and as an undeclined noun: decem pondō, ten pounds. English pound comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pondō is an old ablative of pondus 'weight' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from the root of pendō 'to weigh'. English pound comes from it, borrowed early into Germanic.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pondō
- Say it: pondō, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pondō
- Recall: say the Latin for a peck, then the Latin for a pint, then say pondō again

Before you move on

What does pondō mean? ("By weight, in weight; a pound".) Say it once more.

465.4 quadrāns, quadrantis — a quarter-as (a small coin); a quarter

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pint, then the Latin for by weight.

You'll want to know: quadrāns, quadrantis

quadrāns, quadrantis — "a quarter-as (a small coin); a quarter".

Prō balneō tantum quadrantem solvimus.

We pay only a quarter-as for the bath.

Third declension, masculine: quadrāns, quadrantis m. A quarter of an as, the price of a public bath. English quadrant comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quadrāns is built on quattuor 'four' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a fourth part. English quadrant comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: quadrāns, quadrantis
- Say it: quadrāns, quadrantis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with quadrāns, quadrantis
- Recall: say the Latin for a pint, then the Latin for by weight, then say quadrāns, quadrantis again

Before you move on

What does quadrāns, quadrantis mean? ("A quarter-as (a small coin); a quarter".) Say it once more.

465.5 nummulārius, nummulāriī — a money-changer, a banker at a table

Before the new one: say the Latin for by weight, then the Latin for a quarter-as.

You'll want to know: nummulārius, nummulāriī

nummulārius, nummulāriī — "a money-changer, a banker at a table".

Nummulārius nummōs peregrīnōs in forō mūtat.

The money-changer changes foreign coins in the forum.

Second declension, masculine: nummulārius, nummulāriī m. He tested and changed coins at a small table.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nummulārius is built on nummulus 'a little coin, small change', a diminutive of nummus 'coin' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nummulārius, nummulāriī
- Say it: nummulārius, nummulāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nummulārius, nummulāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for by weight, then the Latin for a quarter-as, then say nummulārius, nummulāriī again

Before you move on

What does nummulārius, nummulāriī mean? ("A money-changer, a banker at a table".) Say it once more.

Chapter 466

Corn supply, Dearness, Cheapness, To value, To be sold

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about prices: the corn supply, high prices and low prices, valuing goods and things being sold.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 466: I can talk about prices: the corn supply, high prices and low prices, valuing goods and things being sold.

466.1 annōna, annōnae — the corn supply; the price of grain

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a quarter-as, then the Latin for a money-changer.

You'll want to know: annōna, annōnae

annōna, annōnae — "the corn supply; the price of grain".

> Hōc annō annōna cāra est, quod pluvia nūlla fuit.
>
> This year grain is dear, because there was no rain.

First declension, feminine: annōna, annōnae f. First the year's harvest, then the city's grain supply and its price.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

annōna is built on annus 'year' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): the produce of the year, and so the grain supply and its price.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: annōna, annōnae
- Say it: annōna, annōnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with annōna, annōnae
- Recall: say the Latin for a quarter-as, then the Latin for a money-changer, then say annōna, annōnae again

Before you move on

What does annōna, annōnae mean? ("The corn supply; the price of grain".) Say it once more.

466.2 cāritās, cāritātis — dearness, high prices; affection

Before the new one: say the Latin for a money-changer, then the Latin for the corn supply.

You'll want to know: cāritās, cāritātis

cāritās, cāritātis — "dearness, high prices; affection".

Propter cāritātem annōnae pauperēs parum cibī habent.

Because of the high price of grain the poor have too little food.

Third declension, feminine: cāritās, cāritātis f., from cārus 'dear'. Dear in price, and dear to the heart. English charity comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cāritās is built on cārus 'dear, costly', from PIE keh₂- 'to desire' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English charity comes from it, in its sense 'affection'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cāritās, cāritātis
- Say it: cāritās, cāritātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cāritās, cāritātis
- Recall: say the Latin for a money-changer, then the Latin for the corn supply, then say cāritās, cāritātis again

Before you move on

What does cāritās, cāritātis mean? ("Dearness, high prices; affection".) Say it once more.

466.3 vīlitās, vīlitātis — cheapness, low prices

Before the new one: say the Latin for the corn supply, then the Latin for dearness.

You'll want to know: vīlitās, vīlitātis

vīlitās, vīlitātis — "cheapness, low prices".

> Post bonum annum vīlitās est, et agricolae minus pecūniae habent.
>
> After a good year prices are low, and the farmers have less money.

Third declension, feminine: vīlitās, vīlitātis f. The opposite of cāritās. Also worthlessness.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīlitās is built on vīlis 'cheap, of little value' with the suffix -itās (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English vile comes from vīlis.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vīlitās, vīlitātis
- Say it: vīlitās, vīlitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vīlitās, vīlitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for the corn supply, then the Latin for dearness, then say vīlitās, vīlitātis again

Before you move on

What does vīlitās, vīlitātis mean? ("Cheapness, low prices".) Say it once more.

466.4 aestimō, aestimāre — to value, to put a price on; to judge

Before the new one: say the Latin for dearness, then the Latin for cheapness.

You'll want to know: aestimō, aestimāre

aestimō, aestimāre — "to value, to put a price on; to judge".

Mercātor equum centum dēnāriīs aestimat.

The merchant values the horse at a hundred denarii.

aestimō, aestimāre, aestimāvī, aestimātum, with the price in the ablative or genitive: magnī aestimāre, to value highly. English estimate and esteem come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aestimō comes from older aestumāre (EtymDB), and Lewis & Short link it with aes 'bronze, money', a valuing in money; the second part is not settled. English estimate and esteem come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aestimō, aestimāre
- Say it: aestimō, aestimāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aestimō, aestimāre
- Recall: say the Latin for dearness, then the Latin for cheapness, then say aestimō, aestimāre again

Before you move on

What does aestimō, aestimāre mean? ("To value, to put a price on; to judge".) Say it once more.

466.5 vēneō, vēnīre — to be sold, to go on sale

Before the new one: say the Latin for cheapness, then the Latin for to value.

You'll want to know: vēneō, vēnīre

vēneō, vēnīre — "to be sold, to go on sale".

In forō servī et equī vēneunt.

Slaves and horses are sold in the forum.

Irregular like eō: vēneō, vēnīre, vēniī. It serves as the passive of vendō. Do not confuse vēnīre with venīre 'to come'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēneō comes from vēnum eō 'I go to sale' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), with vēnum 'sale' and eō 'to go'; vendō 'to sell' is from vēnum dō 'I give to sale'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vēneō, vēnīre
- Say it: vēneō, vēnīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vēneō, vēnīre
- Recall: say the Latin for cheapness, then the Latin for to value, then say vēneō, vēnīre again

Before you move on

What does vēneō, vēnīre mean? ("To be sold, to go on sale".) Say it once more.

Chapter 467

Cobbler's shop, Barber's shop, Awl, Tanner, Furrier

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about small shops and leather work: the cobbler's shop, the barber's, an awl, the tanner and the furrier.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 467: I can talk about small shops and leather work: the cobbler's shop, the barber's, an awl, the tanner and the furrier.

467.1 sūtrīna, sūtrīnae — a cobbler's shop

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to value, then the Latin for to be sold.

You'll want to know: sūtrīna, sūtrīnae

sūtrīna, sūtrīnae — "a cobbler's shop".

> Sūtor in sūtrīnā calceōs novōs facit.
>
> The cobbler makes new shoes in his shop.

First declension, feminine: sūtrīna, sūtrīnae f., from sūtor 'shoemaker'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sūtrīna is built on sūtor 'shoemaker' (Lewis & Short), which comes from suō 'to sew'. English suture comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sūtrīna, sūtrīnae
- Say it: sūtrīna, sūtrīnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sūtrīna, sūtrīnae
- Recall: say the Latin for to value, then the Latin for to be sold, then say sūtrīna, sūtrīnae again

Before you move on

What does sūtrīna, sūtrīnae mean? ("A cobbler's shop".) Say it once more.

467.2 tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae — a barber's shop

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be sold, then the Latin for a cobbler's shop.

You'll want to know: tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae

tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae — "a barber's shop".

In tōnstrīnā hominēs sedent et fābulās narrant.

In the barber's shop men sit and tell stories.

First declension, feminine: tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae f., from tōnsor 'barber'. A favourite place for gossip.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tōnstrīna is built on tōnsor 'barber' (Lewis & Short), which comes from tondeō 'to shear, to clip'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae
- Say it: tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae
- Recall: say the Latin for to be sold, then the Latin for a cobbler's shop, then say tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae again

Before you move on

What does tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae mean? ("A barber's shop".) Say it once more.

467.3 sūbula, sūbulae — an awl

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cobbler's shop, then the Latin for a barber's shop.

You'll want to know: sūbula, sūbulae

sūbula, sūbulae — "an awl".

Sūtor sūbulā et fīlō calceōs facit.

The cobbler makes shoes with an awl and thread.

First declension, feminine: sūbula, sūbulae f. A pointed tool for piercing leather before sewing.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sūbula is inherited from PIE syuh₁-dʰleh₂ (EtymDB), built on the root of suō 'to sew': a tool for sewing leather.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sūbula, sūbulae
- Say it: sūbula, sūbulae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sūbula, sūbulae
- Recall: say the Latin for a cobbler's shop, then the Latin for a barber's shop, then say sūbula, sūbulae again

Before you move on

What does sūbula, sūbulae mean? ("An awl".) Say it once more.

467.4 coriārius, coriāriī — a tanner, a currier

Before the new one: say the Latin for a barber's shop, then the Latin for an awl.

You'll want to know: coriārius, coriāriī

coriārius, coriāriī — "a tanner, a currier".

Coriārius coria bovum in aquā lavat.

The tanner washes the hides of the oxen in water.

Second declension, masculine: coriārius, coriāriī m., from corium 'hide, leather'. Tanneries stank and stood at the edge of town. English currier comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coriārius is built on corium 'hide, leather' with the suffix -ārius (Lewis & Short). English currier, a leather dresser, comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: coriārius, coriāriī
- Say it: coriārius, coriāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with coriārius, coriāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a barber's shop, then the Latin for an awl, then say coriārius, coriāriī again

Before you move on

What does coriārius, coriāriī mean? ("A tanner, a currier".) Say it once more.

467.5 pelliō, pelliōnis — a furrier, a worker in skins

Before the new one: say the Latin for an awl, then the Latin for a tanner.

You'll want to know: pelliō, pelliōnis

pelliō, pelliōnis — "a furrier, a worker in skins".

Pelliō vestem calidam facit.

The furrier makes a warm garment.

Third declension, masculine: pelliō, pelliōnis m. He made and sold warm clothes of skins.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pelliō is built on pellis 'skin, hide' with the suffix -iō for a person who works with something (Lewis & Short). English pelt is often linked with pellis, but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pelliō, pelliōnis
- Say it: pelliō, pelliōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pelliō, pelliōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for an awl, then the Latin for a tanner, then say pelliō, pelliōnis again

Before you move on

What does pelliō, pelliōnis mean? ("A furrier, a worker in skins".) Say it once more.

Chapter 468

To dye, Purple shellfish, Purple dye, Paint, Paintbrush

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about dyeing and painting: dyeing cloth, the purple shellfish, purple dye, paint and a paintbrush.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 468: I can talk about dyeing and painting: dyeing cloth, the purple shellfish, purple dye, paint and a paintbrush.

468.1 tingō, tingere — to dye, to colour; to wet, to dip

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a tanner, then the Latin for a furrier.

You'll want to know: tingō, tingere

tingō, tingere — "to dye, to colour; to wet, to dip".

> Servus lānam in aquā calidā tingit.
>
> The slave dyes the wool in hot water.

tingō, tingere, tīnxī, tīnctum, also spelled tinguō. English tinge, tint and tincture come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tingō is inherited from PIE teng- 'to dip, to soak' (EtymDB), and Greek tengō 'to wet' is a cousin. English tinge, tint and tincture come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tingō, tingere
- Say it: tingō, tingere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tingō, tingere
- Recall: say the Latin for a tanner, then the Latin for a furrier, then say tingō, tingere again

Before you move on

What does tingō, tingere mean? ("To dye, to colour; to wet, to dip".) Say it once more.

468.2 mūrex, mūricis — the purple shellfish, murex; purple dye

Before the new one: say the Latin for a furrier, then the Latin for to dye.

You'll want to know: mūrex, mūricis

mūrex, mūricis — "the purple shellfish, murex; purple dye".

Ex mūrice color purpureus fit.

A purple colour is made from the murex shell.

Third declension, masculine: mūrex, mūricis m. Thousands of these sea snails went into a little purple dye. English keeps murex.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūrex is usually traced to Greek myax 'sea mussel' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short give the sense but no source, so the path is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mūrex, mūricis
- Say it: mūrex, mūricis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mūrex, mūricis
- Recall: say the Latin for a furrier, then the Latin for to dye, then say mūrex, mūricis again

Before you move on

What does mūrex, mūricis mean? ("The purple shellfish, murex; purple dye".) Say it once more.

468.3 ostrum, ostrī — purple dye; purple cloth

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dye, then the Latin for the purple shellfish.

You'll want to know: ostrum, ostrī

ostrum, ostrī — "purple dye; purple cloth".

Dīves vestem ostrō tīnctam gerit.

The rich man wears a garment dyed with purple.

Second declension, neuter: ostrum, ostrī n. A word of poetry for the dye and for cloth coloured with it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ostrum was borrowed from Greek ostreon 'oyster, shellfish' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), since the dye came from a shellfish.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ostrum, ostrī
- Say it: ostrum, ostrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ostrum, ostrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to dye, then the Latin for the purple shellfish, then say ostrum, ostrī again

Before you move on

What does ostrum, ostrī mean? ("Purple dye; purple cloth".) Say it once more.

468.4 pigmentum, pigmentī — a paint, a colour, a pigment

Before the new one: say the Latin for the purple shellfish, then the Latin for purple dye.

You'll want to know: pigmentum, pigmentī

pigmentum, pigmentī — "a paint, a colour, a pigment".

Pictor pigmenta in tabulā miscet.

The painter mixes his paints on a board.

Second declension, neuter: pigmentum, pigmentī n., from pingō 'to paint'. English pigment comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pigmentum is built on pingō 'to paint' with the suffix -mentum (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English pigment comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pigmentum, pigmentī
- Say it: pigmentum, pigmentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pigmentum, pigmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for the purple shellfish, then the Latin for purple dye, then say pigmentum, pigmentī again

Before you move on

What does pigmentum, pigmentī mean? ("A paint, a colour, a pigment".) Say it once more.

468.5 pēnicillus, pēnicillī — a paintbrush, a fine brush

Before the new one: say the Latin for purple dye, then the Latin for a paint.

You'll want to know: pēnicillus, pēnicillī

pēnicillus, pēnicillī — "a paintbrush, a fine brush".

Pictor pēnicillō tenuī flōrēs pingit.

The painter paints flowers with a fine brush.

Second declension, masculine: pēnicillus, pēnicillī m. (also pēnicillum n.). English pencil comes from it: the first pencils were fine brushes.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pēnicillus is a diminutive of pēniculus 'brush' (Lewis & Short), which first meant 'a little tail', since brushes were made of ox-tails and horse-tails. English pencil comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pēnicillus, pēnicillī
- Say it: pēnicillus, pēnicillī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pēnicillus, pēnicillī
- Recall: say the Latin for purple dye, then the Latin for a paint, then say pēnicillus, pēnicillī again

Before you move on

What does pēnicillus, pēnicillī mean? ("A paintbrush, a fine brush".) Say it once more.

Chapter 469

Anvil, Bellows, Forge, Blacksmith, To hammer

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a smithy: the anvil, the bellows, the forge, the blacksmith and hammering iron.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 469: I can describe a smithy: the anvil, the bellows, the forge, the blacksmith and hammering iron.

469.1 incūs, incūdis — an anvil

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a paint, then the Latin for a paintbrush.

You'll want to know: incūs, incūdis

incūs, incūdis — "an anvil".

> Faber ferrum calidum in incūde pōnit.
>
> The smith puts the hot iron on the anvil.

Third declension, feminine: incūs, incūdis f. Ad incūdem redīre, to go back to the anvil, to rework a piece of writing. English incus is a bone of the ear, named for its shape.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incūs is built on incūdō 'to forge on' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from in 'on' and cūdō 'to strike, to hammer': the block that iron is struck on.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: incūs, incūdis
- Say it: incūs, incūdis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with incūs, incūdis
- Recall: say the Latin for a paint, then the Latin for a paintbrush, then say incūs, incūdis again

Before you move on

What does incūs, incūdis mean? ("An anvil".) Say it once more.

469.2 follis, follis — a pair of bellows; a leather bag

Before the new one: say the Latin for a paintbrush, then the Latin for an anvil.

You'll want to know: follis, follis

follis, follis — "a pair of bellows; a leather bag".

Servus folle ignem auget.

The slave makes the fire bigger with the bellows.

Third declension, masculine: follis, follis m. Also a blown-up leather ball and a money bag. English fool comes from it through French, from 'windbag'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

follis is inherited from PIE $b^h olǵ^h nis$ (EtymDB); Lewis & Short compare flō 'to blow'. English fool comes from it through Old French fol, from the sense 'windbag'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: follis, follis
- Say it: follis, follis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with follis, follis
- Recall: say the Latin for a paintbrush, then the Latin for an anvil, then say follis, follis again

Before you move on

What does follis, follis mean? ("A pair of bellows; a leather bag".) Say it once more.

469.3 camīnus, camīnī — a forge, a furnace; a fireplace

Before the new one: say the Latin for an anvil, then the Latin for a pair of bellows.

You'll want to know: camīnus, camīnī

camīnus, camīnī — "a forge, a furnace; a fireplace".

In camīnō ignis magnus ardet.

A big fire burns in the forge.

Second declension, masculine: camīnus, camīnī m. A smith's forge, or a stove for heating a room. English chimney comes from a word built on it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

camīnus was borrowed from Greek kamīnos 'furnace' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English chimney comes, through French, from Late Latin camīnāta, built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: camīnus, camīnī
- Say it: camīnus, camīnī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with camīnus, camīnī
- Recall: say the Latin for an anvil, then the Latin for a pair of bellows, then say camīnus, camīnī again

Before you move on

What does camīnus, camīnī mean? ("A forge, a furnace; a fireplace".) Say it once more.

469.4 ferrārius, ferrāriī — a blacksmith, an ironworker

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pair of bellows, then the Latin for a forge.

You'll want to know: ferrārius, ferrāriī

ferrārius, ferrāriī — "a blacksmith, an ironworker".

Ferrārius soleās ferreās equīs facit.

The blacksmith makes iron shoes for the horses.

Second declension, masculine: ferrārius, ferrāriī m., short for faber ferrārius. English farrier comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ferrārius is built on ferrum 'iron' with the suffix -ārius (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English farrier, a smith who shoes horses, comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ferrārius, ferrāriī
- Say it: ferrārius, ferrāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ferrārius, ferrāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a pair of bellows, then the Latin for a forge, then say ferrārius, ferrāriī again

Before you move on

What does ferrārius, ferrāriī mean? ("A blacksmith, an ironworker".) Say it once more.

469.5 cūdō, cūdere — to hammer, to forge; to strike (coins)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a forge, then the Latin for a blacksmith.

You'll want to know: cūdō, cūdere

cūdō, cūdere — "to hammer, to forge; to strike (coins)".

Faber ferrum in incūde cūdit.

The smith hammers the iron on the anvil.

cūdō, cūdere, cūdī, cūsum. Nummōs cūdere, to strike coins.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūdō is inherited from Proto-Italic kūdō 'to stamp, to pound', from PIE kewh₂- 'to strike, to hew' (EtymDB). English hew is a distant Germanic cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cūdō, cūdere
- Say it: cūdō, cūdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cūdō, cūdere
- Recall: say the Latin for a forge, then the Latin for a blacksmith, then say cūdō, cūdere again

Before you move on

What does cūdō, cūdere mean? ("To hammer, to forge; to strike (coins)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 470

Adze, Drill, Plane, File, To hew

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a carpenter's tools: an adze, a drill, a plane and a file, and talk about hewing wood.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 470: I can name a carpenter's tools: an adze, a drill, a plane and a file, and talk about hewing wood.

470.1 ascia, asciae — an adze, a carpenter's axe

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a blacksmith, then the Latin for to hammer.

You'll want to know: ascia, asciae

ascia, asciae — "an adze, a carpenter's axe".

> Faber asciam in manū tenet.
>
> The carpenter holds an adze in his hand.

First declension, feminine: ascia, asciae f. A tool with the blade across the handle, for shaping beams.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ascia is inherited; Lewis & Short compare Greek axinē 'axe' as a cousin. EtymDB gives no parent, so the link is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ascia, asciae
- Say it: ascia, asciae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ascia, asciae
- Recall: say the Latin for a blacksmith, then the Latin for to hammer, then say ascia, asciae again

Before you move on

What does ascia, asciae mean? ("An adze, a carpenter's axe".) Say it once more.

470.2 terebra, terebrae — a drill, a borer, an auger

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hammer, then the Latin for an adze.

You'll want to know: terebra, terebrae

terebra, terebrae — "a drill, a borer, an auger".

Faber terebrā in tabulā labōrat.

The carpenter works on the board with a drill.

First declension, feminine: terebra, terebrae f., from terō 'to rub, to wear away'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

terebra is built on terō 'to rub, to wear away' with the tool suffix -bra (EtymDB): a tool that bores by turning.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: terebra, terebrae
- Say it: terebra, terebrae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with terebra, terebrae
- Recall: say the Latin for to hammer, then the Latin for an adze, then say terebra, terebrae again

Before you move on

What does terebra, terebrae mean? ("A drill, a borer, an auger".) Say it once more.

470.3 runcīna, runcīnae — a plane (a carpenter's tool)

Before the new one: say the Latin for an adze, then the Latin for a drill.

You'll want to know: runcīna, runcīnae

runcīna, runcīnae — "a plane (a carpenter's tool)".

Faber tabulam runcīnā parat.

The carpenter prepares the board with a plane.

First declension, feminine: runcīna, runcīnae f. An iron blade in a wooden block, for smoothing wood.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

runcīna was borrowed from Greek rhykanē 'plane', as an ancient grammarian already said (Lewis & Short); the form was changed to look like runcō 'to weed'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: runcīna, runcīnae
- Say it: runcīna, runcīnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with runcīna, runcīnae
- Recall: say the Latin for an adze, then the Latin for a drill, then say runcīna, runcīnae again

Before you move on

What does runcīna, runcīnae mean? ("A plane (a carpenter's tool)".) Say it once more.

470.4 līma, līmae — a file (tool); polishing

Before the new one: say the Latin for a drill, then the Latin for a plane.

You'll want to know: līma, līmae

līma, līmae — "a file (tool); polishing".

Faber ferrum līmā pūrgat.

The smith cleans the iron with a file.

First declension, feminine: līma, līmae f. Also the polishing of a poem: līmae labor, the work of the file.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of līma is not settled: Lewis & Short say plainly that it is unknown, and EtymDB gives no sure parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: līma, līmae
- Say it: līma, līmae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with līma, līmae
- Recall: say the Latin for a drill, then the Latin for a plane, then say līma, līmae again

Before you move on

What does līma, līmae mean? ("A file (tool); polishing".) Say it once more.

470.5 dolō, dolāre — to hew, to chop into shape

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plane, then the Latin for a file.

You'll want to know: dolō, dolāre

dolō, dolāre — "to hew, to chop into shape".

Fabrī trabēs asciīs dolant.

The carpenters hew the beams with adzes.

dolō, dolāre, dolāvī, dolātum. Rough shaping of wood with an axe or adze.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dolō is inherited from Proto-Italic dolaō (EtymDB); Lewis & Short link it with a root meaning 'to split, to tear apart'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dolō, dolāre
- Say it: dolō, dolāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dolō, dolāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a plane, then the Latin for a file, then say dolō, dolāre again

Before you move on

What does dolō, dolāre mean? ("To hew, to chop into shape".) Say it once more.

470.6 Words from chapters 463–470 — a review

Say the Latin for a vegetable grower and a fishmonger.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a vegetable grower, a fishmonger, a plaited basket, a wicker basket, a bread basket
- a steelyard, a pair of scales, a scale pan, to weigh out, to weigh carefully
- a peck, a pint, by weight, a quarter-as, a money-changer
- the corn supply, dearness, cheapness, to value, to be sold
- a cobbler's shop, a barber's shop, an awl, a tanner, a furrier
- to dye, the purple shellfish, purple dye, a paint, a paintbrush
- an anvil, a pair of bellows, a forge, a blacksmith, to hammer
- an adze, a drill, a plane, a file, to hew

Before you move on

A vegetable grower? (holitor, holitōris.) A fishmonger? (piscārius, piscāriī.) A plaited basket? (sporta, sportae.) A wicker basket? (corbis, corbis.) A bread basket? (canistrum, canistrī.) A steelyard? (statēra, statērae.) A pair of scales? (trutina, trutinae.) A scale pan? (lanx, lancis.) To weigh out? (appendō, appendere.) To weigh carefully? (pēnsō, pēnsāre.) A peck? (modius, modiī.) A pint? (sextārius, sextāriī.) By weight? (pondō.) A quarter-as? (quadrāns, quadrantis.) A money-changer? (nummulārius, nummulāriī.) The corn supply? (annōna, annōnae.) Dearness? (cāritās, cāritātis.) Cheapness? (vīlitās, vīlitātis.) To value? (aestimō, aestimāre.) To be sold? (vēneō, vēnīre.) A cobbler's shop? (sūtrīna, sūtrīnae.) A barber's shop? (tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae.) An awl? (sūbula, sūbulae.) A tanner? (coriārius, coriāriī.) A furrier? (pelliō, pelliōnis.) To dye? (tingō, tingere.) The purple shellfish? (mūrex, mūricis.) Purple dye? (ostrum, ostrī.) A paint? (pigmentum, pigmentī.) A paintbrush? (pēnicillus, pēnicillī.) An anvil? (incūs, incūdis.) A pair of bellows? (follis, follis.) A forge? (camīnus, camīnī.) A blacksmith? (ferrārius, ferrāriī.) To hammer? (cūdō, cūdere.) An adze? (ascia, asciae.) A drill? (terebra, terebrae.) A plane? (runcīna, runcīnae.) A file? (līma, līmae.) To hew? (dolō, dolāre.)

Chapter 471

Lathe, To turn on a lathe, To polish, To sharpen, Stonecutter

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about finishing work in a workshop: the lathe, turning wood, polishing, sharpening tools, and the stonecutter.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 471: I can talk about finishing work in a workshop: the lathe, turning wood, polishing, sharpening tools, and the stonecutter.

471.1 tornus, tornī — a lathe

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a file, then the Latin for to hew.

You'll want to know: tornus, tornī

tornus, tornī — "a lathe".

> Faber in officīnā tornum habet et pōcula lignea facit.
>
> The craftsman has a lathe in his workshop and makes wooden cups.

Second declension, masculine: tornus, tornī m. Also the finish of a poem, as if turned on a lathe.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tornus was borrowed from Greek tornos 'lathe, a tool for drawing circles' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from PIE terh₁- 'to rub, to twist'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tornus, tornī
- Say it: tornus, tornī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tornus, tornī
- Recall: say the Latin for a file, then the Latin for to hew, then say tornus, tornī again

Before you move on

What does tornus, tornī mean? ("A lathe".) Say it once more.

471.2 tornō, tornāre — to turn on a lathe, to round off

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hew, then the Latin for a lathe.

You'll want to know: tornō, tornāre

tornō, tornāre — "to turn on a lathe, to round off".

Faber lignum tornat, et pōculum rotundum fit.

The craftsman turns the wood, and a round cup takes shape.

tornō, tornāre, tornāvī, tornātum. English turn comes from it, borrowed early into Old English.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tornō is built on tornus 'lathe' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), a Greek borrowing. English turn comes from tornāre, borrowed early into Old English and later into French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tornō, tornāre
- Say it: tornō, tornāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tornō, tornāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to hew, then the Latin for a lathe, then say tornō, tornāre again

Before you move on

What does tornō, tornāre mean? ("To turn on a lathe, to round off".) Say it once more.

471.3 poliō, polīre — to polish, to smooth; to refine

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lathe, then the Latin for to turn on a lathe.

You'll want to know: poliō, polīre

poliō, polīre — "to polish, to smooth; to refine".

Servus vāsa argentea polit.

The slave polishes the silver dishes.

poliō, polīre, polīvī, polītum. Polītus is polished, also refined in manner. English polish and polite come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

poliō is usually traced to PIE pelh₂- (EtymDB), though Lewis & Short suggest another root and the origin is not settled. English polish comes from it through French, and polite from its participle polītus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: poliō, polīre
- Say it: poliō, polīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with poliō, polīre
- Recall: say the Latin for a lathe, then the Latin for to turn on a lathe, then say poliō, polīre again

Before you move on

What does poliō, polīre mean? ("To polish, to smooth; to refine".) Say it once more.

471.4 acuō, acuere — to sharpen, to whet

Before the new one: say the Latin for to turn on a lathe, then the Latin for to polish.

You'll want to know: acuō, acuere

acuō, acuere — "to sharpen, to whet".

Mīles gladium ante bellum acuit.

The soldier sharpens his sword before the war.

acuō, acuere, acuī, acūtum. Its participle acūtus 'sharp' gives English acute.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

acuō is inherited from PIE h_2eḱ- 'sharp' (EtymDB), the root of acus 'needle'. English acute comes from its participle acūtus, and acumen from a noun built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: acuō, acuere
- Say it: acuō, acuere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with acuō, acuere
- Recall: say the Latin for to turn on a lathe, then the Latin for to polish, then say acuō, acuere again

Before you move on

What does acuō, acuere mean? ("To sharpen, to whet".) Say it once more.

471.5 lapicīda, lapicīdae — a stonecutter, a quarryman

Before the new one: say the Latin for to polish, then the Latin for to sharpen.

You'll want to know: lapicīda, lapicīdae

lapicīda, lapicīdae — "a stonecutter, a quarryman".

Lapicīda saxum magnum in forō caedit.

The stonecutter cuts a large stone in the forum.

First declension, masculine: lapicīda, lapicīdae m. Like agricola, a masculine noun in -a.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lapicīda is built from lapis, lapidis 'stone' and caedō 'to cut' (Lewis & Short; an older form is lapidicīda). EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lapicīda, lapicīdae
- Say it: lapicīda, lapicīdae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lapicīda, lapicīdae
- Recall: say the Latin for to polish, then the Latin for to sharpen, then say lapicīda, lapicīdae again

Before you move on

What does lapicīda, lapicīdae mean? ("A stonecutter, a quarryman".) Say it once more.

Chapter 472

Distaff, Spindle, Web on the loom, To spin, Wool-working

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about spinning and weaving at home: the distaff, the spindle, the web on the loom, spinning, and wool-working.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 472: I can talk about spinning and weaving at home: the distaff, the spindle, the web on the loom, spinning, and wool-working.

472.1 colus, colī — a distaff (for spinning)

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to sharpen, then the Latin for a stonecutter.

You'll want to know: colus, colī

colus, colī — "a distaff (for spinning)".

> Avia colum tenet et lānam trahit.
>
> Grandmother holds the distaff and draws out the wool.

Feminine, with second and fourth declension forms: colus, colī or colūs f. The stick that holds the raw wool.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

colus is inherited from PIE k^wélus, built on k^wel- 'to turn' (EtymDB), the turning stick of the spinner. Lewis & Short suggest a different root, for being bent or round, so the details are not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: colus, colī
- Say it: colus, colī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with colus, colī
- Recall: say the Latin for to sharpen, then the Latin for a stonecutter, then say colus, colī again

Before you move on

What does colus, colī mean? ("A distaff (for spinning)".) Say it once more.

472.2 fūsus, fūsī — a spindle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stonecutter, then the Latin for a distaff.

You'll want to know: fūsus, fūsī

fūsus, fūsī — "a spindle".

Fūsus in manū ancillae celeriter vertitur.

The spindle turns fast in the maid's hand.

Second declension, masculine: fūsus, fūsī m. The weighted stick on which the spun thread is wound.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of fūsus 'spindle' is not settled: Lewis & Short give the sense but no source, and EtymDB lists it without a parent. It is a different word from fūsus 'poured', from fundō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fūsus, fūsī
- Say it: fūsus, fūsī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fūsus, fūsī
- Recall: say the Latin for a stonecutter, then the Latin for a distaff, then say fūsus, fūsī again

Before you move on

What does fūsus, fūsī mean? ("A spindle".) Say it once more.

472.3 tēla, tēlae — a web on the loom, the warp; a loom

Before the new one: say the Latin for a distaff, then the Latin for a spindle.

You'll want to know: tēla, tēlae

tēla, tēlae — "a web on the loom, the warp; a loom".

Fēminae in ātriō ad tēlam labōrant.

The women work at the loom in the hall.

First declension, feminine: tēla, tēlae f. Also a spider's web. French toile 'cloth' comes from it, and so English toilet, first a little cloth.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tēla is built on texō 'to weave' (EtymDB), and Lewis & Short take it as contracted from an older texia, as āla stands beside axilla. French toile 'cloth' comes from it, and English toilet from the French diminutive toilette.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tēla, tēlae
- Say it: tēla, tēlae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tēla, tēlae
- Recall: say the Latin for a distaff, then the Latin for a spindle, then say tēla, tēlae again

Before you move on

What does tēla, tēlae mean? ("A web on the loom, the warp; a loom".) Say it once more.

472.4 neō, nēre — to spin (thread)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spindle, then the Latin for a web on the loom.

You'll want to know: neō, nēre

neō, nēre — "to spin (thread)".

Ancillae vesperī lānam nent.

In the evening the maids spin wool.

neō, nēre, nēvī, nētum, second conjugation. Short forms: net 'she spins', nent 'they spin'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

neō is inherited from Proto-Italic nēō, from PIE (s)neh$_1$- 'to spin' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short compare Greek neō. English needle is usually counted a distant Germanic cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: neō, nēre
- Say it: neō, nēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with neō, nēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a spindle, then the Latin for a web on the loom, then say neō, nēre again

Before you move on

What does neō, nēre mean? ("To spin (thread)".) Say it once more.

472.5 lānificium, lānificiī — wool-working, spinning and weaving

Before the new one: say the Latin for a web on the loom, then the Latin for to spin.

You'll want to know: lānificium, lānificiī

lānificium, lānificiī — "wool-working, spinning and weaving".

Lānificium in vīllā labor fēminārum est.

Wool-working in the house is women's work.

Second declension, neuter: lānificium, lānificiī n., from lāna 'wool' and faciō 'to make'. A Roman tomb often praised a woman for it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lānificium is built on lānificus 'wool-working', from lāna 'wool' and faciō 'to make' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lānificium, lānificiī
- Say it: lānificium, lānificiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lānificium, lānificiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a web on the loom, then the Latin for to spin, then say lānificium, lānificiī again

Before you move on

What does lānificium, lānificiī mean? ("Wool-working, spinning and weaving".) Say it once more.

Chapter 473

Countryside, Farm, Ox stall, Cottage, Hut

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the countryside and the buildings of a farm: the country, a farm, the ox stall, a cottage and a hut.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 473: I can talk about the countryside and the buildings of a farm: the country, a farm, the ox stall, a cottage and a hut.

473.1 rūs, rūris — the countryside, the country; a farm

Before the new one: say the Latin for to spin, then the Latin for wool-working.

You'll want to know: rūs, rūris

rūs, rūris — "the countryside, the country; a farm".

> Aestāte multī cīvēs rūs eunt.
>
> In summer many citizens go to the country.

Third declension, neuter: rūs, rūris n. Like domus, it takes no preposition: rūs 'to the country', rūre 'from the country', rūrī 'in the country'. English rural and rustic come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rūs is inherited from Proto-Italic rowos, from PIE rewh₁- 'open space, field' (EtymDB). English rural and, through rūsticus, rustic come from it; German Raum 'space' is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rūs, rūris
- Say it: rūs, rūris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rūs, rūris
- Recall: say the Latin for to spin, then the Latin for wool-working, then say rūs, rūris again

Before you move on

What does rūs, rūris mean? ("The countryside, the country; a farm".) Say it once more.

473.2 fundus, fundī — a farm, an estate; the bottom

Before the new one: say the Latin for wool-working, then the Latin for the countryside.

You'll want to know: fundus, fundī

fundus, fundī — "a farm, an estate; the bottom".

Fundus noster parvus est sed bonus.

Our farm is small but good.

Second declension, masculine: fundus, fundī m. First the bottom of a thing, then the ground itself, a piece of land. English fund and foundation go back to the same word.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fundus is inherited from PIE $b^h ud^h mḗn$ 'bottom' (EtymDB), with Greek pythmēn 'bottom' as a cousin. English fund and profound come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fundus, fundī
- Say it: fundus, fundī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fundus, fundī
- Recall: say the Latin for wool-working, then the Latin for the countryside, then say fundus, fundī again

Before you move on

What does fundus, fundī mean? ("A farm, an estate; the bottom".) Say it once more.

473.3 būbīle, būbīlis — an ox stall, a cowshed

Before the new one: say the Latin for the countryside, then the Latin for a farm.

You'll want to know: būbīle, būbīlis

būbīle, būbīlis — "an ox stall, a cowshed".

Bovēs hieme in būbīlī manent.

In winter the oxen stay in the cowshed.

Third declension, neuter: būbīle, būbīlis n., from bōs, bovis 'ox'. A word of the farm writers.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

būbīle is built on bōs, bovis 'ox' with the suffix -īle 'place for animals', as in ovīle 'sheepfold' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: būbīle, būbīlis
- Say it: būbīle, būbīlis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with būbīle, būbīlis
- Recall: say the Latin for the countryside, then the Latin for a farm, then say būbīle, būbīlis again

Before you move on

What does būbīle, būbīlis mean? ("An ox stall, a cowshed".) Say it once more.

473.4 casa, casae — a cottage, a small house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a farm, then the Latin for an ox stall.

You'll want to know: casa, casae

casa, casae — "a cottage, a small house".

Pastor in casā parvā prope silvam habitat.

The shepherd lives in a small cottage near the wood.

First declension, feminine: casa, casae f. In Italian and Spanish it became the everyday word for 'house'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of casa is not settled: Lewis & Short link it with a root meaning 'to cover', but EtymDB gives no parent. It became casa 'house' in Italian, Spanish and Portuguese.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: casa, casae
- Say it: casa, casae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with casa, casae
- Recall: say the Latin for a farm, then the Latin for an ox stall, then say casa, casae again

Before you move on

What does casa, casae mean? ("A cottage, a small house".) Say it once more.

473.5 tugurium, tuguriī — a hut, a shed

Before the new one: say the Latin for an ox stall, then the Latin for a cottage.

You'll want to know: tugurium, tuguriī

tugurium, tuguriī — "a hut, a shed".

Pauper agricola in tuguriō cum familiā vīvit.

The poor farmer lives in a hut with his family.

Second declension, neuter: tugurium, tuguriī n. A rough hut, poorer than a casa.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tugurium is usually linked with tegō 'to cover' (Lewis & Short), so a shelter with a roof; EtymDB traces it to PIE (s)teg- 'to cover with a roof', with Greek stegō 'to cover' as a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tugurium, tuguriī
- Say it: tugurium, tuguriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tugurium, tuguriī
- Recall: say the Latin for an ox stall, then the Latin for a cottage, then say tugurium, tuguriī again

Before you move on

What does tugurium, tuguriī mean? ("A hut, a shed".) Say it once more.

Chapter 474

To plough, Furrow, Ploughshare, Ploughman, To harrow

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about ploughing: ploughing a field, the furrow, the ploughshare, the ploughman and harrowing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 474: I can talk about ploughing: ploughing a field, the furrow, the ploughshare, the ploughman and harrowing.

474.1 arō, arāre — to plough

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a cottage, then the Latin for a hut.

You'll want to know: arō, arāre

arō, arāre — "to plough".

> Vēre agricolae agrōs arant.
>
> In spring the farmers plough the fields.

arō, arāre, arāvī, arātum. The plough is arātrum. English arable comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arō is inherited from Proto-Italic araō (EtymDB), with Greek aroō 'to plough' as a cousin (EtymDB; Lewis & Short); Lewis & Short add Gothic arjan. English arable comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: arō, arāre
- Say it: arō, arāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with arō, arāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a cottage, then the Latin for a hut, then say arō, arāre again

Before you move on

What does arō, arāre mean? ("To plough".) Say it once more.

474.2 sulcus, sulcī — a furrow; a trench

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hut, then the Latin for to plough.

You'll want to know: sulcus, sulcī

sulcus, sulcī — "a furrow; a trench".

Agricola sulcōs rēctōs in agrō facit.

The farmer makes straight furrows in the field.

Second declension, masculine: sulcus, sulcī m. Also the wake of a ship. English keeps sulcus in anatomy for a groove.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sulcus is inherited from PIE solk-o- 'furrow' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short compare Greek holkos 'furrow'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sulcus, sulcī
- Say it: sulcus, sulcī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sulcus, sulcī
- Recall: say the Latin for a hut, then the Latin for to plough, then say sulcus, sulcī again

Before you move on

What does sulcus, sulcī mean? ("A furrow; a trench".) Say it once more.

474.3 vōmer, vōmeris — a ploughshare

Before the new one: say the Latin for to plough, then the Latin for a furrow.

You'll want to know: vōmer, vōmeris

vōmer, vōmeris — "a ploughshare".

Vōmer ex ferrō est et terram dūram frangit.

The ploughshare is made of iron and breaks the hard ground.

Third declension, masculine: vōmer, vōmeris m. (also vōmis). The iron blade of the plough.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of vōmer is not settled: Lewis & Short give the sense but no source, and EtymDB lists it without a parent. English keeps vomer for a bone of the nose.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vōmer, vōmeris
- Say it: vōmer, vōmeris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vōmer, vōmeris
- Recall: say the Latin for to plough, then the Latin for a furrow, then say vōmer, vōmeris again

Before you move on

What does vōmer, vōmeris mean? ("A ploughshare".) Say it once more.

474.4 arātor, arātōris — a ploughman, a farmer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a furrow, then the Latin for a ploughshare.

You'll want to know: arātor, arātōris

arātor, arātōris — "a ploughman, a farmer".

Arātor bovēs ad agrum dūcit.

The ploughman leads the oxen to the field.

Third declension, masculine: arātor, arātōris m., from arō with -tor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arātor is built on arō 'to plough' with the suffix -tor 'one who' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: arātor, arātōris
- Say it: arātor, arātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with arātor, arātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a furrow, then the Latin for a ploughshare, then say arātor, arātōris again

Before you move on

What does arātor, arātōris mean? ("A ploughman, a farmer".) Say it once more.

474.5 occō, occāre — to harrow, to break up the soil

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ploughshare, then the Latin for a ploughman.

You'll want to know: occō, occāre

occō, occāre — "to harrow, to break up the soil".

Agricola agrum prīmum arat, deinde occat.

The farmer first ploughs the field, then harrows it.

occō, occāre, occāvī, occātum, from occa 'a harrow'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

occō is built on occa 'a harrow' (EtymDB), from the PIE root h_2eḱ- 'sharp'. Lewis & Short give German eggen 'to harrow' as a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: occō, occāre
- Say it: occō, occāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with occō, occāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a ploughshare, then the Latin for a ploughman, then say occō, occāre again

Before you move on

What does occō, occāre mean? ("To harrow, to break up the soil".) Say it once more.

Chapter 475

Harvest, Reaper, Sickle, Ear of grain, Wheat

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the grain harvest: the harvest, the reapers, the sickle, the ears of grain and the wheat.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 475: I can talk about the grain harvest: the harvest, the reapers, the sickle, the ears of grain and the wheat.

475.1 messis, messis — the harvest, the crop

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a ploughman, then the Latin for to harrow.

You'll want to know: messis, messis

messis, messis — "the harvest, the crop".

> Aestāte messis est, et omnēs in agrīs labōrant.
>
> In summer it is harvest time, and everyone works in the fields.

Third declension, feminine: messis, messis f., accusative often messem. From metō 'to reap'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

messis is built on metō 'to reap, to mow' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from PIE h_2meh_1- 'to mow'. English mow and meadow are Germanic cousins.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: messis, messis
- Say it: messis, messis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with messis, messis
- Recall: say the Latin for a ploughman, then the Latin for to harrow, then say messis, messis again

Before you move on

What does messis, messis mean? ("The harvest, the crop".) Say it once more.

475.2 messor, messōris — a reaper, a harvester

Before the new one: say the Latin for to harrow, then the Latin for the harvest.

You'll want to know: messor, messōris

messor, messōris — "a reaper, a harvester".

Messōrēs sub sōle ardentī frūmentum metunt.

The reapers cut the grain under the burning sun.

Third declension, masculine: messor, messōris m., from metō with the agent ending -or.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

messor is built on metō 'to reap' with the agent ending -or, on mess-, the stem of its supine (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: messor, messōris
- Say it: messor, messōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with messor, messōris
- Recall: say the Latin for to harrow, then the Latin for the harvest, then say messor, messōris again

Before you move on

What does messor, messōris mean? ("A reaper, a harvester".) Say it once more.

475.3 falx, falcis — a sickle, a pruning hook

Before the new one: say the Latin for the harvest, then the Latin for a reaper.

You'll want to know: falx, falcis

falx, falcis — "a sickle, a pruning hook".

Messor falce frūmentum metit.

The reaper cuts the grain with a sickle.

Third declension, feminine: falx, falcis f. A curved blade for grain or for pruning vines.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

falx is inherited from PIE d^halk- 'sickle, cutting tool' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short suggest a link with flectō 'to bend', for its curve, but that is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: falx, falcis
- Say it: falx, falcis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with falx, falcis
- Recall: say the Latin for the harvest, then the Latin for a reaper, then say falx, falcis again

Before you move on

What does falx, falcis mean? ("A sickle, a pruning hook".) Say it once more.

475.4 spīca, spīcae — an ear of grain, a spike

Before the new one: say the Latin for a reaper, then the Latin for a sickle.

You'll want to know: spīca, spīcae

spīca, spīcae — "an ear of grain, a spike".

Spīcae plēnae et flāvae sunt; messis bona erit.

The ears of grain are full and golden; the harvest will be good.

First declension, feminine: spīca, spīcae f. The head of wheat or barley.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spīca is usually traced to a root meaning 'to be sharp, pointed' (Lewis & Short), the root of spīna 'thorn'. EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: spīca, spīcae
- Say it: spīca, spīcae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with spīca, spīcae
- Recall: say the Latin for a reaper, then the Latin for a sickle, then say spīca, spīcae again

Before you move on

What does spīca, spīcae mean? ("An ear of grain, a spike".) Say it once more.

475.5 trīticum, trīticī — wheat

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sickle, then the Latin for an ear of grain.

You'll want to know: trīticum, trīticī

trīticum, trīticī — "wheat".

Agricola trīticum in agrō serit.

The farmer sows wheat in the field.

Second declension, neuter: trīticum, trīticī n. The best grain for bread.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trīticum is built on trītus, the participle of terō 'to rub, to thresh' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short, after an ancient explanation): the grain that is threshed.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: trīticum, trīticī
- Say it: trīticum, trīticī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with trīticum, trīticī
- Recall: say the Latin for a sickle, then the Latin for an ear of grain, then say trīticum, trīticī again

Before you move on

What does trīticum, trīticī mean? ("Wheat".) Say it once more.

Chapter 476

To thresh, To winnow, Chaff, Stalk, Granary

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about what happens after the harvest: threshing, winnowing, the chaff, the stalks and storing grain in the granary.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 476: I can talk about what happens after the harvest: threshing, winnowing, the chaff, the stalks and storing grain in the granary.

476.1 trītūrō, trītūrāre — to thresh

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an ear of grain, then the Latin for wheat.

You'll want to know: trītūrō, trītūrāre

trītūrō, trītūrāre — "to thresh".

> In āreā servī frūmentum trītūrant.
>
> On the threshing floor the slaves thresh the grain.

trītūrō, trītūrāre, trītūrāvī, trītūrātum, from trītūra 'threshing'. Oxen often trod the grain out. A late word; earlier writers say frūmentum terere.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trītūrō is built on trītūra 'threshing' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which comes from terō 'to rub'. English triturate 'to grind to powder' comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: trītūrō, trītūrāre
- Say it: trītūrō, trītūrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with trītūrō, trītūrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for an ear of grain, then the Latin for wheat, then say trītūrō, trītūrāre again

Before you move on

What does trītūrō, trītūrāre mean? ("To thresh".) Say it once more.

476.2 ventilō, ventilāre — to winnow; to fan, to toss in the air

Before the new one: say the Latin for wheat, then the Latin for to thresh.

You'll want to know: ventilō, ventilāre

ventilō, ventilāre — "to winnow; to fan, to toss in the air".

Agricolae frūmentum in āreā ventilant.

The farmers winnow the grain on the threshing floor.

ventilō, ventilāre, ventilāvī, ventilātum. English ventilate comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ventilō is built on ventulus 'a slight wind' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), a diminutive of ventus 'wind'. English ventilate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ventilō, ventilāre
- Say it: ventilō, ventilāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ventilō, ventilāre
- Recall: say the Latin for wheat, then the Latin for to thresh, then say ventilō, ventilāre again

Before you move on

What does ventilō, ventilāre mean? ("To winnow; to fan, to toss in the air".) Say it once more.

476.3 palea, paleae — chaff; straw

Before the new one: say the Latin for to thresh, then the Latin for to winnow.

You'll want to know: palea, paleae

palea, paleae — "chaff; straw".

Palea levis est et ā ventō portātur.

Chaff is light and is carried by the wind.

First declension, feminine: palea, paleae f. The husks left after threshing, used for fodder and bedding. English keeps palea as a term in botany.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

palea is inherited from PIE pel- 'flour, dust' (EtymDB), the root also seen in pulvis 'dust' and pollen. French paille 'straw' comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: palea, paleae
- Say it: palea, paleae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with palea, paleae
- Recall: say the Latin for to thresh, then the Latin for to winnow, then say palea, paleae again

Before you move on

What does palea, paleae mean? ("Chaff; straw".) Say it once more.

476.4 stipula, stipulae — a stalk, a straw; stubble

Before the new one: say the Latin for to winnow, then the Latin for chaff.

You'll want to know: stipula, stipulae

stipula, stipulae — "a stalk, a straw; stubble".

Post messem in agrō sōla stipula manet.

After the harvest only stubble is left in the field.

First declension, feminine: stipula, stipulae f., a diminutive linked with stīpes 'stake'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stipula is inherited from Proto-Italic stipelā 'straw' (EtymDB), and Lewis & Short connect it with stīpes 'stake, trunk'. English stubble comes, through French, from a related Late Latin form.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: stipula, stipulae
- Say it: stipula, stipulae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with stipula, stipulae
- Recall: say the Latin for to winnow, then the Latin for chaff, then say stipula, stipulae again

Before you move on

What does stipula, stipulae mean? ("A stalk, a straw; stubble".) Say it once more.

476.5 horreum, horreī — a granary, a barn, a storehouse

Before the new one: say the Latin for chaff, then the Latin for a stalk.

You'll want to know: horreum, horreī

horreum, horreī — "a granary, a barn, a storehouse".

Frūmentum in horreō servātur.

The grain is kept in the granary.

Second declension, neuter: horreum, horreī n. Big public horrea by the river stored the city's grain.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of horreum is not settled. EtymDB traces it to Greek hōreion 'storehouse, granary', while Lewis & Short compare farreum, from far 'spelt'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: horreum, horreī
- Say it: horreum, horreī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with horreum, horreī
- Recall: say the Latin for chaff, then the Latin for a stalk, then say horreum, horreī again

Before you move on

What does horreum, horreī mean? ("A granary, a barn, a storehouse".) Say it once more.

Chapter 477

Livestock, Flock, Herd, To pasture, Pasture

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about farm animals and their grazing: livestock, a flock, a herd, putting animals out to pasture, and the pasture.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 477: I can talk about farm animals and their grazing: livestock, a flock, a herd, putting animals out to pasture, and the pasture.

477.1 pecus, pecoris — livestock, cattle, a herd of animals

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a stalk, then the Latin for a granary.

You'll want to know: pecus, pecoris

pecus, pecoris — "livestock, cattle, a herd of animals".

> Agricola multum pecus habet: ovēs, caprās, bovēs.
>
> The farmer has a lot of livestock: sheep, goats, oxen.

Third declension, neuter: pecus, pecoris n., the animals as a group. Another word pecus, pecudis f. is one beast. Pecūnia 'money' comes from the same root: wealth was once counted in cattle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pecus is inherited from PIE peḱu- 'livestock' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short list Gothic faihu, German Vieh and English fee as cousins. pecūnia 'money' is built on the same root (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pecus, pecoris
- Say it: pecus, pecoris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pecus, pecoris
- Recall: say the Latin for a stalk, then the Latin for a granary, then say pecus, pecoris again

Before you move on

What does pecus, pecoris mean? ("Livestock, cattle, a herd of animals".) Say it once more.

477.2 grex, gregis — a flock, a herd; a band of people

Before the new one: say the Latin for a granary, then the Latin for livestock.

You'll want to know: grex, gregis

grex, gregis — "a flock, a herd; a band of people".

Pastor gregem ovium ad flūmen dūcit.

The shepherd leads the flock of sheep to the river.

Third declension, masculine: grex, gregis m. Also a group of people. English gregarious, congregate and egregious (out of the flock) come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

grex is inherited from PIE h_2*ger-* 'to assemble, to gather' (EtymDB). English gregarious, congregate and egregious come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: grex, gregis
- Say it: grex, gregis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with grex, gregis
- Recall: say the Latin for a granary, then the Latin for livestock, then say grex, gregis again

Before you move on

What does grex, gregis mean? ("A flock, a herd; a band of people".) Say it once more.

477.3 armentum, armentī — a herd (of cattle or horses)

Before the new one: say the Latin for livestock, then the Latin for a flock.

You'll want to know: armentum, armentī

armentum, armentī — "a herd (of cattle or horses)".

Armenta bovum in campīs sunt.

Herds of cattle are on the plains.

Second declension, neuter: armentum, armentī n. Large animals, cattle and horses; grex goes with sheep and goats.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

armentum is usually linked with arō 'to plough', since Lewis & Short give its first sense as cattle for ploughing; EtymDB connects it with arma instead, so the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: armentum, armentī
- Say it: armentum, armentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with armentum, armentī
- Recall: say the Latin for livestock, then the Latin for a flock, then say armentum, armentī again

Before you move on

What does armentum, armentī mean? ("A herd (of cattle or horses)".) Say it once more.

477.4 pāscō, pāscere — to pasture, to put out to graze; to feed

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flock, then the Latin for a herd.

You'll want to know: pāscō, pāscere

pāscō, pāscere — "to pasture, to put out to graze; to feed".

Puer caprās in colle pāscit.

The boy pastures the goats on the hill.

pāscō, pāscere, pāvī, pāstum. Passive pāscor, 'to graze': ovēs pāscuntur. Pāstor 'shepherd' comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāscō is inherited from PIE peh₂- 'to protect, to feed' (EtymDB); pāstor 'shepherd' and pābulum 'fodder' come from the same root (Lewis & Short). English food is a Germanic cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pāscō, pāscere
- Say it: pāscō, pāscere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pāscō, pāscere
- Recall: say the Latin for a flock, then the Latin for a herd, then say pāscō, pāscere again

Before you move on

What does pāscō, pāscere mean? ("To pasture, to put out to graze; to feed".) Say it once more.

477.5 pāscuum, pāscuī — a pasture, grazing land

Before the new one: say the Latin for a herd, then the Latin for to pasture.

You'll want to know: pāscuum, pāscuī

pāscuum, pāscuī — "a pasture, grazing land".

Vēre pecus in pāscua dūcitur.

In spring the livestock is taken to the pastures.

Second declension, neuter: pāscuum, pāscuī n., mostly plural. The neuter of the adjective pāscuus 'for grazing'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāscuum is the neuter of the adjective pāscuus 'for grazing', built on pāscō 'to pasture' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pāscuum, pāscuī
- Say it: pāscuum, pāscuī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pāscuum, pāscuī
- Recall: say the Latin for a herd, then the Latin for to pasture, then say pāscuum, pāscuī again

Before you move on

What does pāscuum, pāscuī mean? ("A pasture, grazing land".) Say it once more.

Chapter 478

Shepherd, Ox-driver, Sheepfold, To shear, To milk

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the work of herdsmen: the shepherd, the ox-driver, the sheepfold, shearing sheep and milking.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 478: I can talk about the work of herdsmen: the shepherd, the ox-driver, the sheepfold, shearing sheep and milking.

478.1 ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis — a shepherd (of sheep)

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to pasture, then the Latin for a pasture.

You'll want to know: ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis

ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis — "a shepherd (of sheep)".

> Ōpiliō ovēs in colle servat.
>
> The shepherd watches over the sheep on the hill.

Third declension, masculine: ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis m., a word of comedy and the farm writers. Pāstor is the general word.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōpiliō is usually traced to ovis 'sheep' (Lewis & Short, from an older ovilio), so a sheep-keeper; the second part is not settled. EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis
- Say it: ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to pasture, then the Latin for a pasture, then say ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis again

Before you move on

What does ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis mean? ("A shepherd (of sheep)".) Say it once more.

478.2 bubulcus, bubulcī — an ox-driver, a herdsman

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pasture, then the Latin for a shepherd.

You'll want to know: bubulcus, bubulcī

bubulcus, bubulcī — "an ox-driver, a herdsman".

Bubulcus cum bōbus ad agrum it.

The ox-driver goes to the field with the oxen.

Second declension, masculine: bubulcus, bubulcī m. The man who drives the plough oxen.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bubulcus is built on būbulus 'of cattle', from bōs, bovis 'ox' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from PIE g^wŏws 'cow'. English cow is a Germanic cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bubulcus, bubulcī
- Say it: bubulcus, bubulcī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bubulcus, bubulcī
- Recall: say the Latin for a pasture, then the Latin for a shepherd, then say bubulcus, bubulcī again

Before you move on

What does bubulcus, bubulcī mean? ("An ox-driver, a herdsman".) Say it once more.

478.3 caulae, caulārum — a sheepfold, a pen; an opening

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shepherd, then the Latin for an ox-driver.

You'll want to know: caulae, caulārum

caulae, caulārum — "a sheepfold, a pen; an opening".

Lupus prope caulās vagātur.

A wolf prowls near the sheepfold.

First declension, feminine plural: caulae, caulārum f. First a hole or passage, then a fenced pen.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caulae is usually traced to cavus 'hollow', through an older cavile (Lewis & Short, after an ancient grammarian); EtymDB gives no parent, so the line is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: caulae, caulārum
- Say it: caulae, caulārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with caulae, caulārum
- Recall: say the Latin for a shepherd, then the Latin for an ox-driver, then say caulae, caulārum again

Before you move on

What does caulae, caulārum mean? ("A sheepfold, a pen; an opening".) Say it once more.

478.4 tondeō, tondēre — to shear, to clip; to shave

Before the new one: say the Latin for an ox-driver, then the Latin for a sheepfold.

You'll want to know: tondeō, tondēre

tondeō, tondēre — "to shear, to clip; to shave".

Vēre agricolae ovēs tondent.

In spring the farmers shear the sheep.

tondeō, tondēre, totondī, tōnsum, with a reduplicated perfect. Tōnsor 'barber' comes from it, and English tonsure.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tondeō is inherited and is usually traced to PIE temh₂- 'to cut' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short compare Greek temnō 'to cut'). English tonsure comes from its participle tōnsus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tondeō, tondēre
- Say it: tondeō, tondēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tondeō, tondēre
- Recall: say the Latin for an ox-driver, then the Latin for a sheepfold, then say tondeō, tondēre again

Before you move on

What does tondeō, tondēre mean? ("To shear, to clip; to shave".) Say it once more.

478.5 mulgeō, mulgēre — to milk

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sheepfold, then the Latin for to shear.

You'll want to know: mulgeō, mulgēre

mulgeō, mulgēre — "to milk".

Ancilla mane caprās mulget.

In the morning the maid milks the goats.

mulgeō, mulgēre, mulsī, mulsum or mulctum. English milk is a Germanic cousin, and emulsion comes from ēmulgēre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mulgeō is inherited from PIE $h_2$melǵ- 'to milk' (EtymDB); German melken and English milk are Germanic cousins (Lewis & Short). English emulsion comes from the compound ēmulgēre.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mulgeō, mulgēre
- Say it: mulgeō, mulgēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mulgeō, mulgēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a sheepfold, then the Latin for to shear, then say mulgeō, mulgēre again

Before you move on

What does mulgeō, mulgēre mean? ("To milk".) Say it once more.

478.6 Words from chapters 471–478 — a review

Say the Latin for a lathe and to turn on a lathe.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a lathe, to turn on a lathe, to polish, to sharpen, a stonecutter
- a distaff, a spindle, a web on the loom, to spin, wool-working
- the countryside, a farm, an ox stall, a cottage, a hut
- to plough, a furrow, a ploughshare, a ploughman, to harrow
- the harvest, a reaper, a sickle, an ear of grain, wheat
- to thresh, to winnow, chaff, a stalk, a granary

- livestock, a flock, a herd, to pasture, a pasture
- a shepherd, an ox-driver, a sheepfold, to shear, to milk

Before you move on

A lathe? (tornus, tornī.) To turn on a lathe? (tornō, tornāre.) To polish? (poliō, polīre.) To sharpen? (acuō, acuere.) A stonecutter? (lapicīda, lapicīdae.) A distaff? (colus, colī.) A spindle? (fūsus, fūsī.) A web on the loom? (tēla, tēlae.) To spin? (neō, nēre.) Wool-working? (lānificium, lānificiī.) The countryside? (rūs, rūris.) A farm? (fundus, fundī.) An ox stall? (būbīle, būbīlis.) A cottage? (casa, casae.) A hut? (tugurium, tugurii.) To plough? (arō, arāre.) A furrow? (sulcus, sulcī.) A ploughshare? (vōmer, vōmeris.) A ploughman? (arātor, arātōris.) To harrow? (occō, occāre.) The harvest? (messis, messis.) A reaper? (messor, messōris.) A sickle? (falx, falcis.) An ear of grain? (spīca, spīcae.) Wheat? (trīticum, trīticī.) To thresh? (trītūrō, trītūrāre.) To winnow? (ventilō, ventilāre.) Chaff? (palea, paleae.) A stalk? (stipula, stipulae.) A granary? (horreum, horreī.) Livestock? (pecus, pecoris.) A flock? (grex, gregis.) A herd? (armentum, armentī.) To pasture? (pāscō, pāscere.) A pasture? (pāscuum, pāscuī.) A shepherd? (ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis.) An ox-driver? (bubulcus, bubulcī.) A sheepfold? (caulae, caulārum.) To shear? (tondeō, tondēre.) To milk? (mulgeō, mulgēre.)

Chapter 479

Orchard, Olive tree, Press, To graft, Grape harvest

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about orchards and vineyards: an orchard, an olive tree, the press, grafting trees and the grape harvest.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 479: I can talk about orchards and vineyards: an orchard, an olive tree, the press, grafting trees and the grape harvest.

479.1 pōmārium, pōmāriī — an orchard

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to shear, then the Latin for to milk.

You'll want to know: pōmārium, pōmāriī

pōmārium, pōmāriī — "an orchard".

> In pōmāriō arborēs plēnae pōmōrum sunt.
>
> In the orchard the trees are full of fruit.

Second declension, neuter: pōmārium, pōmāriī n., from pōmum 'fruit'. A pōmārius sells fruit.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōmārium is built on pōmum 'fruit' with the suffix -ārium 'place for' (Lewis & Short, under pōmārius).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pōmārium, pōmāriī
- Say it: pōmārium, pōmāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pōmārium, pōmāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for to shear, then the Latin for to milk, then say pōmārium, pōmāriī again

Before you move on

What does pōmārium, pōmāriī mean? ("An orchard".) Say it once more.

479.2 olea, oleae — an olive tree; an olive

Before the new one: say the Latin for to milk, then the Latin for an orchard.

You'll want to know: olea, oleae

olea, oleae — "an olive tree; an olive".

In colle multae oleae sunt.

On the hill there are many olive trees.

First declension, feminine: olea, oleae f. A variant of olīva.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

olea was borrowed from Greek elaia 'olive, olive tree' (EtymDB), like olīva and oleum 'oil'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: olea, oleae
- Say it: olea, oleae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with olea, oleae
- Recall: say the Latin for to milk, then the Latin for an orchard, then say olea, oleae again

Before you move on

What does olea, oleae mean? ("An olive tree; an olive".) Say it once more.

479.3 prēlum, prēlī — a press (for wine or oil)

Before the new one: say the Latin for an orchard, then the Latin for an olive tree.

You'll want to know: prēlum, prēlī

prēlum, prēlī — "a press (for wine or oil)".

Servī ūvās in prēlō premunt.

The slaves press the grapes in the press.

Second declension, neuter: prēlum, prēlī n., also praelum. The heavy beam that squeezed grapes and olives.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prēlum is built on premō 'to press' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), from an older prem-lom. English press comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prēlum, prēlī
- Say it: prēlum, prēlī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prēlum, prēlī
- Recall: say the Latin for an orchard, then the Latin for an olive tree, then say prēlum, prēlī again

Before you move on

What does prēlum, prēlī mean? ("A press (for wine or oil)".) Say it once more.

479.4 īnserō, īnserere — to graft, to plant in

Before the new one: say the Latin for an olive tree, then the Latin for a press.

You'll want to know: īnserō, īnserere

īnserō, īnserere — "to graft, to plant in".

Agricola rāmum pirī in mālum īnserit.

The farmer grafts a pear branch onto an apple tree.

īnserō, īnserere, īnsēvī, īnsitum, from serō, serere, sēvī 'to sow'. A different verb īnserō, īnserere, īnseruī, īnsertum 'to put in' gives English insert.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnserō 'to graft' is built from in- 'in' and serō, serere, sēvī 'to sow, to plant' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). It must be kept apart from īnserō 'to put in', from serō, seruī 'to join'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnserō, īnserere
- Say it: īnserō, īnserere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnserō, īnserere
- Recall: say the Latin for an olive tree, then the Latin for a press, then say īnserō, īnserere again

Before you move on

What does īnserō, īnserere mean? ("To graft, to plant in".) Say it once more.

479.5 vindēmia, vindēmiae — the grape harvest, the vintage

Before the new one: say the Latin for a press, then the Latin for to graft.

You'll want to know: vindēmia, vindēmiae

vindēmia, vindēmiae — "the grape harvest, the vintage".

Autumnō vindēmia est; tōta familia ūvās legit.

In autumn it is the grape harvest; the whole household gathers grapes.

First declension, feminine: vindēmia, vindēmiae f. English vintage comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vindēmia is built from vīnum 'wine, grapes' and dēmō 'to take off, to remove' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): taking the grapes off the vine. English vintage comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vindēmia, vindēmiae
- Say it: vindēmia, vindēmiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vindēmia, vindēmiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a press, then the Latin for to graft, then say vindēmia, vindēmiae again

Before you move on

What does vindēmia, vindēmiae mean? ("The grape harvest, the vintage".) Say it once more.

Chapter 480

Cliff, Jagged rock, Sheer, Steep, To climb

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe mountains: a cliff, a jagged rock, sheer and steep slopes, and climbing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 480: I can describe mountains: a cliff, a jagged rock, sheer and steep slopes, and climbing.

480.1 rūpēs, rūpis — a cliff, a rock face

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to graft, then the Latin for the grape harvest.

You'll want to know: rūpēs, rūpis

rūpēs, rūpis — "a cliff, a rock face".

> Caprae in rūpibus altīs ambulant.
>
> Goats walk on the high cliffs.

Third declension, feminine: rūpēs, rūpis f. A broken rock face, from rumpō 'to break'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rūpēs is built on rumpō 'to break' (Lewis & Short): rock broken off, a cliff. EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rūpēs, rūpis
- Say it: rūpēs, rūpis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rūpēs, rūpis
- Recall: say the Latin for to graft, then the Latin for the grape harvest, then say rūpēs, rūpis again

Before you move on

What does rūpēs, rūpis mean? ("A cliff, a rock face".) Say it once more.

480.2 cautēs, cautis — a jagged rock, a crag

Before the new one: say the Latin for the grape harvest, then the Latin for a cliff.

You'll want to know: cautēs, cautis

cautēs, cautis — "a jagged rock, a crag".

Nāvis in cautēs cadit et frangitur.

The ship runs onto the jagged rocks and breaks up.

Third declension, feminine: cautēs, cautis f., mostly plural. Sharp rocks on a coast or a mountain.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cautēs is inherited; Lewis & Short and EtymDB connect it with cōs 'whetstone', from PIE ḱeh₃- 'to sharpen': a sharp rock.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cautēs, cautis
- Say it: cautēs, cautis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cautēs, cautis
- Recall: say the Latin for the grape harvest, then the Latin for a cliff, then say cautēs, cautis again

Before you move on

What does cautēs, cautis mean? ("A jagged rock, a crag".) Say it once more.

480.3 praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum — sheer, very steep, broken off

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cliff, then the Latin for a jagged rock.

You'll want to know: praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum

praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum — "sheer, very steep, broken off".

Via in monte praerupta est, itaque mūlī lentē eunt.

The road up the mountain is very steep, so the mules go slowly.

An adjective of three endings, the participle of praerumpō 'to break off in front'. Of rock: sheer.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praeruptus is the past participle of praerumpō 'to break off in front', from prae- and rumpō 'to break' (Lewis & Short): land broken off sharply.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum
- Say it: praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum
- Recall: say the Latin for a cliff, then the Latin for a jagged rock, then say praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum again

Before you move on

What does praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum mean? ("Sheer, very steep, broken off".) Say it once more.

480.4 arduus, ardua, arduum — steep, high; difficult

Before the new one: say the Latin for a jagged rock, then the Latin for sheer.

You'll want to know: arduus, ardua, arduum

arduus, ardua, arduum — "steep, high; difficult".

Sēmita ardua est, et viātōrēs lassī sunt.

The path is steep, and the travellers are weary.

An adjective of three endings. Rēs ardua, a hard task. English arduous comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arduus is inherited, but its origin is not settled: Lewis & Short link it, doubtfully, with alō 'to nourish' and altus 'high', and EtymDB gives no parent. English arduous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: arduus, ardua, arduum
- Say it: arduus, ardua, arduum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with arduus, ardua, arduum
- Recall: say the Latin for a jagged rock, then the Latin for sheer, then say arduus, ardua, arduum again

Before you move on

What does arduus, ardua, arduum mean? ("Steep, high; difficult".) Say it once more.

480.5 scandō, scandere — to climb, to mount

Before the new one: say the Latin for sheer, then the Latin for steep.

You'll want to know: scandō, scandere

scandō, scandere — "to climb, to mount".

Amīcī montem scandunt et urbem procul cōnspicantur.

The friends climb the mountain and catch sight of the city far off.

scandō, scandere, scandī, scānsum. English scan (to count out the feet of a verse) comes from it, and ascend and descend from its compounds.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scandō is inherited from PIE skend- 'to jump, to climb' (EtymDB). English scan comes from it, and ascend and descend from its compounds ascendō and dēscendō (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: scandō, scandere
- Say it: scandō, scandere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with scandō, scandere
- Recall: say the Latin for sheer, then the Latin for steep, then say scandō, scandere again

Before you move on

What does scandō, scandere mean? ("To climb, to mount".) Say it once more.

Chapter 481

Enclosed valley, Plain, Rocky, Rough, To slide down

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe the shape of the land: an enclosed valley, a plain, rocky and rough ground, and sliding down a slope.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 481: I can describe the shape of the land: an enclosed valley, a plain, rocky and rough ground, and sliding down a slope.

481.1 convallis, convallis — an enclosed valley, a deep valley

> Before the new one: say the Latin for steep, then the Latin for to climb.

You'll want to know: convallis, convallis

convallis, convallis — "an enclosed valley, a deep valley".

> Inter montēs convallis viridis est.
>
> Between the mountains there is a green valley.

Third declension, feminine: convallis, convallis f. A valley shut in on all sides.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

convallis is built from con- 'together, all round' and vallis 'valley' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: convallis, convallis
- Say it: convallis, convallis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with convallis, convallis
- Recall: say the Latin for steep, then the Latin for to climb, then say convallis, convallis again

Before you move on

What does convallis, convallis mean? ("An enclosed valley, a deep valley".) Say it once more.

481.2 plānitiēs, plānitiēī — a plain, level ground

Before the new one: say the Latin for to climb, then the Latin for an enclosed valley.

You'll want to know: plānitiēs, plānitiēī

plānitiēs, plānitiēī — "a plain, level ground".

Post montēs plānitiēs magna est, et via rēcta est.

Beyond the mountains there is a great plain, and the road is straight.

Fifth declension, feminine: plānitiēs, plānitiēī f., from plānus 'flat'. English plain comes from plānus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plānitiēs is built on plānus 'flat, level' with the suffix -itiēs (Lewis & Short). English plain and plane come from plānus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: plānitiēs, plānitiēī
- Say it: plānitiēs, plānitiēī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with plānitiēs, plānitiēī
- Recall: say the Latin for to climb, then the Latin for an enclosed valley, then say plānitiēs, plānitiēī again

Before you move on

What does plānitiēs, plānitiēī mean? ("A plain, level ground".) Say it once more.

481.3 saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum — rocky, stony

Before the new one: say the Latin for an enclosed valley, then the Latin for a plain.

You'll want to know: saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum

saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum — "rocky, stony".

Ager saxōsus est; agricola eum arāre nōn potest.

The field is stony; the farmer cannot plough it.

An adjective of three endings, from saxum 'rock' with -ōsus 'full of'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saxōsus is built on saxum 'rock, stone' with the suffix -ōsus 'full of' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum
- Say it: saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for an enclosed valley, then the Latin for a plain, then say saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum again

Before you move on

What does saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum mean? ("Rocky, stony".) Say it once more.

481.4 cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum — rough, broken (of ground)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plain, then the Latin for rocky.

You'll want to know: cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum

cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum — "rough, broken (of ground)".

Locus cōnfragōsus est, et equī cadunt.

The ground is rough, and the horses stumble.

An adjective of three endings: ground full of breaks and holes. Also of a hard question: knotty.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnfragōsus is built from con- and fragōsus 'broken, rough' (EtymDB), which comes from frangō 'to break' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum
- Say it: cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for a plain, then the Latin for rocky, then say cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum again

Before you move on

What does cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum mean? ("Rough, broken (of ground)".) Say it once more.

481.5 dēlābor, dēlābī — to slide down, to slip down, to fall

Before the new one: say the Latin for rocky, then the Latin for rough.

You'll want to know: dēlābor, dēlābī

dēlābor, dēlābī — "to slide down, to slip down, to fall".

Nix dē monte dēlābitur.

Snow slides down from the mountain.

Deponent: dēlābor, dēlābī, dēlāpsus sum, with dē or ex.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēlābor is built from dē- 'down' and lābor 'to slip, to glide' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English lapse comes from lābor.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēlābor, dēlābī
- Say it: dēlābor, dēlābī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēlābor, dēlābī
- Recall: say the Latin for rocky, then the Latin for rough, then say dēlābor, dēlābī again

Before you move on

What does dēlābor, dēlābī mean? ("To slide down, to slip down, to fall".) Say it once more.

Chapter 482

River, Torrent, Confluence, To flow, To swim across

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe rivers: a broad river, a torrent, the place where rivers meet, water flowing, and swimming across.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 482: I can describe rivers: a broad river, a torrent, the place where rivers meet, water flowing, and swimming across.

482.1 amnis, amnis — a river, a broad stream

> Before the new one: say the Latin for rough, then the Latin for to slide down.

You'll want to know: amnis, amnis

amnis, amnis — "a river, a broad stream".

> Amnis magnus et altus per campōs it.
>
> A big, deep river runs through the plains.

Third declension, masculine: amnis, amnis m. A big, deep river, a word more of poetry and history than flūmen.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amnis is inherited from Old Latin abnis, from PIE $h_2$ep- 'water' (EtymDB). Lewis & Short also derive it from the Sanskrit word for water.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: amnis, amnis
- Say it: amnis, amnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with amnis, amnis
- Recall: say the Latin for rough, then the Latin for to slide down, then say amnis, amnis again

Before you move on

What does amnis, amnis mean? ("A river, a broad stream".) Say it once more.

482.2 torrēns, torrentis — a torrent, a rushing stream

Before the new one: say the Latin for to slide down, then the Latin for a river.

You'll want to know: torrēns, torrentis

torrēns, torrentis — "a torrent, a rushing stream".

Post pluviam torrēns ē monte currit.

After the rain a torrent rushes down from the mountain.

Third declension, masculine: torrēns, torrentis m. The present participle of torreō 'to burn', used as a noun: a stream that is fierce. English torrent comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

torrēns is the present participle of torreō 'to parch, to burn' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), used as a noun for a raging, boiling stream. English torrent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: torrēns, torrentis
- Say it: torrēns, torrentis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with torrēns, torrentis
- Recall: say the Latin for to slide down, then the Latin for a river, then say torrēns, torrentis again

Before you move on

What does torrēns, torrentis mean? ("A torrent, a rushing stream".) Say it once more.

482.3 cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis — a confluence, the place where two rivers meet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a river, then the Latin for a torrent.

You'll want to know: cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis

cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis — "a confluence, the place where two rivers meet".

Ad cōnfluentem duōrum flūminum oppidum est.

At the confluence of two rivers there is a town.

Third declension, masculine: cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis m., also plural cōnfluentēs. Many towns stand at such a place. English confluence comes from the same verb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnfluēns is the present participle of cōnfluō 'to flow together', from con- and fluō 'to flow' (Lewis & Short). English confluence comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis
- Say it: cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis
- Recall: say the Latin for a river, then the Latin for a torrent, then say cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis again

Before you move on

What does cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis mean? ("A confluence, the place where two rivers meet".) Say it once more.

482.4 fluō, fluere — to flow, to run (of water)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a torrent, then the Latin for a confluence.

You'll want to know: fluō, fluere

fluō, fluere — "to flow, to run (of water)".

Rīvus per prātum lentē fluit.

A stream flows slowly through the meadow.

fluō, fluere, flūxī, flūxum. English fluid, fluent and flux come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fluō is inherited from PIE b^h*lew-* 'to swell, to flow' (EtymDB). English fluid, fluent, flux and influence come from it (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fluō, fluere
- Say it: fluō, fluere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fluō, fluere
- Recall: say the Latin for a torrent, then the Latin for a confluence, then say fluō, fluere again

Before you move on

What does fluō, fluere mean? ("To flow, to run (of water)".) Say it once more.

482.5 trānsnatō, trānsnatāre — to swim across

Before the new one: say the Latin for a confluence, then the Latin for to flow.

You'll want to know: trānsnatō, trānsnatāre

trānsnatō, trānsnatāre — "to swim across".

Mīlitēs flūmen trānsnatant, quod pōns nūllus est.

The soldiers swim across the river, because there is no bridge.

trānsnatō, trānsnatāre, trānsnatāvī, also trānatō, with an accusative.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trānsnatō is built from trāns 'across' and natō 'to swim' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: trānsnatō, trānsnatāre
- Say it: trānsnatō, trānsnatāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with trānsnatō, trānsnatāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a confluence, then the Latin for to flow, then say trānsnatō, trānsnatāre again

Before you move on

What does trānsnatō, trānsnatāre mean? ("To swim across".) Say it once more.

Chapter 483

Pool, Whirlpool, Chasm, To trickle, To flood

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about still and dangerous water: a pool, a whirlpool, a chasm, water trickling and a river flooding.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 483: I can talk about still and dangerous water: a pool, a whirlpool, a chasm, water trickling and a river flooding.

483.1 stagnum, stagnī — a pool, a pond; standing water

Before the new one: say the Latin for to flow, then the Latin for to swim across.

You'll want to know: stagnum, stagnī

stagnum, stagnī — "a pool, a pond; standing water".

> In silvā stagnum quiētum est, et rānae cantant.
>
> In the wood there is a quiet pool, and frogs sing.

Second declension, neuter: stagnum, stagnī n. Still water, not running. English stagnant comes from the verb stagnāre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of stagnum is not settled: Lewis & Short compare Greek tenagos 'shallow water', but EtymDB gives no parent. English stagnant comes from stagnāre, built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: stagnum, stagnī
- Say it: stagnum, stagnī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with stagnum, stagnī
- Recall: say the Latin for to flow, then the Latin for to swim across, then say stagnum, stagnī again

Before you move on

What does stagnum, stagnī mean? ("A pool, a pond; standing water".) Say it once more.

483.2 gurges, gurgitis — a whirlpool, an abyss of water; a flood

Before the new one: say the Latin for to swim across, then the Latin for a pool.

You'll want to know: gurges, gurgitis

gurges, gurgitis — "a whirlpool, an abyss of water; a flood".

Nauta in gurgitem cadit, sed amīcī eum servant.

A sailor falls into a whirlpool, but his friends save him.

Third declension, masculine: gurges, gurgitis m. Also a glutton, one who swallows everything. English regurgitate comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gurges is inherited and Lewis & Short link it with gula 'throat'; EtymDB lists Greek gorgyra 'underground drain' as a cousin. English regurgitate comes from a word built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gurges, gurgitis
- Say it: gurges, gurgitis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gurges, gurgitis
- Recall: say the Latin for to swim across, then the Latin for a pool, then say gurges, gurgitis again

Before you move on

What does gurges, gurgitis mean? ("A whirlpool, an abyss of water; a flood".) Say it once more.

483.3 vorāgō, vorāginis — a chasm, an abyss; a whirlpool

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pool, then the Latin for a whirlpool.

You'll want to know: vorāgō, vorāginis

vorāgō, vorāginis — "a chasm, an abyss; a whirlpool".

In mediō forō terra sē aperit, et vorāgō magna fit.

In the middle of the forum the ground opens, and a great chasm forms.

Third declension, feminine: vorāgō, vorāginis f., from vorō 'to swallow'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vorāgō is built on vorō 'to swallow, to devour' (Lewis & Short): a hole that swallows things up. English voracious comes from vorō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vorāgō, vorāginis
- Say it: vorāgō, vorāginis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vorāgō, vorāginis
- Recall: say the Latin for a pool, then the Latin for a whirlpool, then say vorāgō, vorāginis again

Before you move on

What does vorāgō, vorāginis mean? ("A chasm, an abyss; a whirlpool".) Say it once more.

483.4 mānō, mānāre — to trickle, to flow, to drip

Before the new one: say the Latin for a whirlpool, then the Latin for a chasm.

You'll want to know: mānō, mānāre

mānō, mānāre — "to trickle, to flow, to drip".

Aqua frīgida ē saxō mānat.

Cold water trickles out of the rock.

mānō, mānāre, mānāvī, mānātum. Also of news: to spread. English emanate comes from ēmānāre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of mānō is not settled: Lewis & Short connect it, as probable, with madeō 'to be wet', but EtymDB gives no parent. English emanate comes from the compound ēmānāre.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mānō, mānāre
- Say it: mānō, mānāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mānō, mānāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a whirlpool, then the Latin for a chasm, then say mānō, mānāre again

Before you move on

What does mānō, mānāre mean? ("To trickle, to flow, to drip".) Say it once more.

483.5 inundō, inundāre — to flood, to overflow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chasm, then the Latin for to trickle.

You'll want to know: inundō, inundāre

inundō, inundāre — "to flood, to overflow".

Vēre flūmen agrōs inundat.

In spring the river floods the fields.

inundō, inundāre, inundāvī, inundātum, from in- and unda 'wave'. English inundate comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inundō is built from in- and undō 'to rise in waves', from unda 'wave' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English inundate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: inundō, inundāre
- Say it: inundō, inundāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with inundō, inundāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a chasm, then the Latin for to trickle, then say inundō, inundāre again

Before you move on

What does inundō, inundāre mean? ("To flood, to overflow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 484

Beech, Fir, Elm, Ash, Shady

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the trees of a forest and describe it: beech, fir, elm and ash, and shady woods.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 484: I can name the trees of a forest and describe it: beech, fir, elm and ash, and shady woods.

484.1 fāgus, fāgī — a beech tree

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to trickle, then the Latin for to flood.

You'll want to know: fāgus, fāgī

fāgus, fāgī — "a beech tree".

> Pastor sub fāgō sedet et cantat.
>
> The shepherd sits under a beech tree and sings.

Second declension but feminine, like most tree names: fāgus, fāgī f. English beech is a Germanic cousin, not a borrowing.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fāgus is inherited from Proto-Italic fāgos, from PIE $b^h eh_2 ǵos$ 'beech tree' (EtymDB). English beech and German Buche are Germanic cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fāgus, fāgī
- Say it: fāgus, fāgī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fāgus, fāgī
- Recall: say the Latin for to trickle, then the Latin for to flood, then say fāgus, fāgī again

Before you move on

What does fāgus, fāgī mean? ("A beech tree".) Say it once more.

484.2 abiēs, abietis — a fir tree; fir wood

Before the new one: say the Latin for to flood, then the Latin for a beech tree.

You'll want to know: abiēs, abietis

abiēs, abietis — "a fir tree; fir wood".

In monte altō abietēs crēscunt.

Fir trees grow on the high mountain.

Third declension, feminine: abiēs, abietis f. Its wood was light and good for ships and oars.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

abiēs is inherited from Proto-Italic abiets 'fir' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short call its further origin uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: abiēs, abietis
- Say it: abiēs, abietis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with abiēs, abietis
- Recall: say the Latin for to flood, then the Latin for a beech tree, then say abiēs, abietis again

Before you move on

What does abiēs, abietis mean? ("A fir tree; fir wood".) Say it once more.

484.3 ulmus, ulmī — an elm tree

Before the new one: say the Latin for a beech tree, then the Latin for a fir tree.

You'll want to know: ulmus, ulmī

ulmus, ulmī — "an elm tree".

Agricolae vītēs ad ulmōs ligant.

The farmers tie the vines to the elm trees.

Second declension but feminine: ulmus, ulmī f. Italian farmers trained vines up elms. English elm is a Germanic cousin.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ulmus is inherited from PIE $h_1$élem 'mountain elm' (EtymDB); English elm is a Germanic cousin from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ulmus, ulmī
- Say it: ulmus, ulmī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ulmus, ulmī
- Recall: say the Latin for a beech tree, then the Latin for a fir tree, then say ulmus, ulmī again

Before you move on

What does ulmus, ulmī mean? ("An elm tree".) Say it once more.

484.4 fraxinus, fraxinī — an ash tree; an ash-wood spear

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fir tree, then the Latin for an elm tree.

You'll want to know: fraxinus, fraxinī

fraxinus, fraxinī — "an ash tree; an ash-wood spear".

Ex fraxinō hastae fīunt.

Spears are made from ash wood.

Second declension but feminine: fraxinus, fraxinī f. Its hard, springy wood made spear shafts.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fraxinus is inherited from Proto-Italic fraksinos, from PIE b^hrHǵ-s-inos 'ash tree' (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fraxinus, fraxinī
- Say it: fraxinus, fraxinī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fraxinus, fraxinī
- Recall: say the Latin for a fir tree, then the Latin for an elm tree, then say fraxinus, fraxinī again

Before you move on

What does fraxinus, fraxinī mean? ("An ash tree; an ash-wood spear".) Say it once more.

484.5 opācus, opāca, opācum — shady, shaded; dark

Before the new one: say the Latin for an elm tree, then the Latin for an ash tree.

You'll want to know: opācus, opāca, opācum

opācus, opāca, opācum — "shady, shaded; dark".

Aestāte viātōrēs locum opācum quaerunt.

In summer travellers look for a shady place.

An adjective of three endings. English opaque comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of opācus is not settled: Lewis & Short give no etymology and EtymDB gives no parent. English opaque comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: opācus, opāca, opācum
- Say it: opācus, opāca, opācum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with opācus, opāca, opācum
- Recall: say the Latin for an elm tree, then the Latin for an ash tree, then say opācus, opāca, opācum again

Before you move on

What does opācus, opāca, opācum mean? ("Shady, shaded; dark".) Say it once more.

Chapter 485

Downpour, To be soaking wet, Rainy, Stormy, Turbulent

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe rain and storms: a downpour, being soaked, rainy and stormy weather, and turbulent water.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 485: I can describe rain and storms: a downpour, being soaked, rainy and stormy weather, and turbulent water.

485.1 imber, imbris — a downpour, a heavy shower of rain

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an ash tree, then the Latin for shady.

You'll want to know: imber, imbris

imber, imbris — "a downpour, a heavy shower of rain".

> Subitō imber magnus cadit, et viātōrēs ad caupōnam currunt.
>
> Suddenly a heavy downpour falls, and the travellers run to the inn.

Third declension, masculine: imber, imbris m., genitive plural imbrium. Heavier than pluvia.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

imber is inherited; Lewis & Short list Sanskrit abhra 'cloud', Greek ombros 'rain' and Latin umbra 'shade' as kin. EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: imber, imbris
- Say it: imber, imbris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with imber, imbris
- Recall: say the Latin for an ash tree, then the Latin for shady, then say imber, imbris again

Before you move on

What does imber, imbris mean? ("A downpour, a heavy shower of rain".) Say it once more.

485.2 madeō, madēre — to be soaking wet, to drip

Before the new one: say the Latin for shady, then the Latin for a downpour.

You'll want to know: madeō, madēre

madeō, madēre — "to be soaking wet, to drip".

Post imbrem vestēs viātōrum madent.

After the downpour the travellers' clothes are soaking wet.

madeō, madēre, maduī, second conjugation, no supine. Also, in comedy, to be drunk.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

madeō is inherited from PIE meh₂d- 'to drip, to ooze' (EtymDB); Lewis & Short compare Greek madaō 'to be moist'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: madeō, madēre
- Say it: madeō, madēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with madeō, madēre
- Recall: say the Latin for shady, then the Latin for a downpour, then say madeō, madēre again

Before you move on

What does madeō, madēre mean? ("To be soaking wet, to drip".) Say it once more.

485.3 pluviālis, pluviāle — rainy, of rain, bringing rain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a downpour, then the Latin for to be soaking wet.

You'll want to know: pluviālis, pluviāle

pluviālis, pluviāle — "rainy, of rain, bringing rain".

Ventus pluviālis ā marī venit.

The rainy wind comes from the sea.

An adjective of two endings, from pluvia 'rain'. Aqua pluviālis, rainwater. English pluvial comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pluviālis is built on pluvia 'rain' with the suffix -ālis (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), and pluvia comes from pluit 'it rains'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pluviālis, pluviāle
- Say it: pluviālis, pluviāle, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pluviālis, pluviāle
- Recall: say the Latin for a downpour, then the Latin for to be soaking wet, then say pluviālis, pluviāle again

Before you move on

What does pluviālis, pluviāle mean? ("Rainy, of rain, bringing rain".) Say it once more.

485.4 nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum — stormy, full of rain clouds

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be soaking wet, then the Latin for rainy.

You'll want to know: nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum

nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum — "stormy, full of rain clouds".

Caelum nimbōsum est; nautae in portū manent.

The sky is stormy; the sailors stay in the harbour.

An adjective of three endings, from nimbus 'rain cloud' with -ōsus 'full of'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nimbōsus is built on nimbus 'rain cloud, storm' with the suffix -ōsus 'full of' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum
- Say it: nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for to be soaking wet, then the Latin for rainy, then say nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum again

Before you move on

What does nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum mean? ("Stormy, full of rain clouds".) Say it once more.

485.5 turbidus, turbida, turbidum — turbulent, wild; cloudy, muddy (of water)

Before the new one: say the Latin for rainy, then the Latin for stormy.

You'll want to know: turbidus, turbida, turbidum

turbidus, turbida, turbidum — "turbulent, wild; cloudy, muddy (of water)".

Post tempestātem flūmen turbidum est.

After the storm the river is cloudy and wild.

An adjective of three endings, from turba 'disorder'. Of water, weather or a crowd. English turbid comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

turbidus is built on turba 'disorder, commotion' with the suffix -idus (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English turbid comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: turbidus, turbida, turbidum
- Say it: turbidus, turbida, turbidum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with turbidus, turbida, turbidum
- Recall: say the Latin for rainy, then the Latin for stormy, then say turbidus, turbida, turbidum again

Before you move on

What does turbidus, turbida, turbidum mean? ("Turbulent, wild; cloudy, muddy (of water)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 486

Hoarfrost, The cold, To freeze, To be stiff with cold, To feel cold

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about cold weather: hoarfrost, the cold, water freezing, being stiff with cold, and feeling cold.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 486: I can talk about cold weather: hoarfrost, the cold, water freezing, being stiff with cold, and feeling cold.

486.1 pruīna, pruīnae — hoarfrost, frost

Before the new one: say the Latin for stormy, then the Latin for turbulent.

You'll want to know: pruīna, pruīnae

pruīna, pruīnae — "hoarfrost, frost".

> Mane in prātīs pruīna alba est.
>
> In the morning there is white frost on the meadows.

First declension, feminine: pruīna, pruīnae f. In poetry, also winter.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pruīna is inherited from PIE prews- 'to frost, to freeze' (EtymDB). English freeze and frost are Germanic cousins from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pruīna, pruīnae
- Say it: pruīna, pruīnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pruīna, pruīnae
- Recall: say the Latin for stormy, then the Latin for turbulent, then say pruīna, pruīnae again

Before you move on

What does pruīna, pruīnae mean? ("Hoarfrost, frost".) Say it once more.

486.2 frīgus, frīgoris — the cold, cold weather

Before the new one: say the Latin for turbulent, then the Latin for hoarfrost.

You'll want to know: frīgus, frīgoris

frīgus, frīgoris — "the cold, cold weather".

Hieme frīgus magnum est, et pauperēs ignem nōn habent.

In winter the cold is great, and the poor have no fire.

Third declension, neuter: frīgus, frīgoris n. The adjective frīgidus 'cold' gives English frigid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frīgus is inherited from PIE sriHgos 'cold, coldness' (EtymDB), with Greek rhigos 'cold' as a cousin. English frigid comes from frīgidus, built on it (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: frīgus, frīgoris
- Say it: frīgus, frīgoris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with frīgus, frīgoris
- Recall: say the Latin for turbulent, then the Latin for hoarfrost, then say frīgus, frīgoris again

Before you move on

What does frīgus, frīgoris mean? ("The cold, cold weather".) Say it once more.

486.3 gelō, gelāre — to freeze; (passive) to be frozen

Before the new one: say the Latin for hoarfrost, then the Latin for the cold.

You'll want to know: gelō, gelāre

gelō, gelāre — "to freeze; (passive) to be frozen".

Nocte aqua in puteō gelātur.

At night the water in the well freezes.

gelō, gelāre, gelāvī, gelātum. English congeal, jelly and gelatin come from this family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gelō is built on gelū 'frost, chill', from PIE gel- 'cold' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English congeal comes from congelāre, and jelly from gelāta 'frozen' through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gelō, gelāre
- Say it: gelō, gelāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gelō, gelāre
- Recall: say the Latin for hoarfrost, then the Latin for the cold, then say gelō, gelāre again

Before you move on

What does gelō, gelāre mean? ("To freeze; (passive) to be frozen".) Say it once more.

486.4 rigeō, rigēre — to be stiff with cold, to be numb; to be stiff

Before the new one: say the Latin for the cold, then the Latin for to freeze.

You'll want to know: rigeō, rigēre

rigeō, rigēre — "to be stiff with cold, to be numb; to be stiff".

Manūs viātōrum frīgore rigent.

The travellers' hands are stiff with cold.

rigeō, rigēre, riguī, second conjugation, no supine. English rigid comes from rigidus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of rigeō is not settled: Lewis & Short suggest a link with Greek rhigeō 'to shiver' and frīgeō, and EtymDB gives no parent. English rigid comes from rigidus, built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rigeō, rigēre
- Say it: rigeō, rigēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rigeō, rigēre
- Recall: say the Latin for the cold, then the Latin for to freeze, then say rigeō, rigēre again

Before you move on

What does rigeō, rigēre mean? ("To be stiff with cold, to be numb; to be stiff".) Say it once more.

486.5 algeō, algēre — to feel cold, to be cold

Before the new one: say the Latin for to freeze, then the Latin for to be stiff with cold.

You'll want to know: algeō, algēre

algeō, algēre — "to feel cold, to be cold".

Servus sine palliō alget.

The slave without a cloak feels cold.

algeō, algēre, alsī, second conjugation. Of a person feeling cold; frīgus is the cold itself.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of algeō is not settled: Lewis & Short report an old link with Greek algeō 'to feel pain', and EtymDB gives no parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: algeō, algēre
- Say it: algeō, algēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with algeō, algēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to freeze, then the Latin for to be stiff with cold, then say algeō, algēre again

Before you move on

What does algeō, algēre mean? ("To feel cold, to be cold".) Say it once more.

486.6 Words from chapters 479–486 — a review

Say the Latin for an orchard and an olive tree.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an orchard, an olive tree, a press, to graft, the grape harvest
- a cliff, a jagged rock, sheer, steep, to climb
- an enclosed valley, a plain, rocky, rough, to slide down
- a river, a torrent, a confluence, to flow, to swim across
- a pool, a whirlpool, a chasm, to trickle, to flood
- a beech tree, a fir tree, an elm tree, an ash tree, shady

- a downpour, to be soaking wet, rainy, stormy, turbulent
- hoarfrost, the cold, to freeze, to be stiff with cold, to feel cold

Before you move on

An orchard? (pōmārium, pōmāriī.) An olive tree? (olea, oleae.) A press? (prēlum, prēlī.) To graft? (īnserō, īnserere.) The grape harvest? (vindēmia, vindēmiae.) A cliff? (rūpēs, rūpis.) A jagged rock? (cautēs, cautis.) Sheer? (praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum.) Steep? (arduus, ardua, arduum.) To climb? (scandō, scandere.) An enclosed valley? (convallis, convallis.) A plain? (plānitiēs, plānitiēī.) Rocky? (saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum.) Rough? (cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum.) To slide down? (dēlābor, dēlābī.) A river? (amnis, amnis.) A torrent? (torrēns, torrentis.) A confluence? (cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis.) To flow? (fluō, fluere.) To swim across? (trānsnatō, trānsnatāre.) A pool? (stagnum, stagnī.) A whirlpool? (gurges, gurgitis.) A chasm? (vorāgō, vorāginis.) To trickle? (mānō, mānāre.) To flood? (inundō, inundāre.) A beech tree? (fāgus, fāgī.) A fir tree? (abiēs, abietis.) An elm tree? (ulmus, ulmī.) An ash tree? (fraxinus, fraxinī.) Shady? (opācus, opāca, opācum.) A downpour? (imber, imbris.) To be soaking wet? (madeō, madēre.) Rainy? (pluviālis, pluviāle.) Stormy? (nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum.) Turbulent? (turbidus, turbida, turbidum.) Hoarfrost? (pruīna, pruīnae.) The cold? (frīgus, frīgoris.) To freeze? (gelō, gelāre.) To be stiff with cold? (rigeō, rigēre.) To feel cold? (algeō, algēre.)

Chapter 487

North wind, South wind, West wind, To blow through, Clear weather

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the winds: the north, south and west winds, the wind blowing across the land, and clear weather after it.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 487: I can talk about the winds: the north, south and west winds, the wind blowing across the land, and clear weather after it.

487.1 aquilō, aquilōnis — the north wind; the north

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be stiff with cold, then the Latin for to feel cold.

You'll want to know: aquilō, aquilōnis

aquilō, aquilōnis — "the north wind; the north".

Hieme aquilō ventus frīgidus est.

In winter the north wind is a cold wind.

Third declension, masculine: aquilō, aquilōnis m. A cold, stormy wind.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The origin of aquilō is not settled. Lewis & Short suggest aqua 'water', for its rain, or aquilus 'dark', for its storm clouds; EtymDB gives no parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aquilō, aquilōnis
- Say it: aquilō, aquilōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aquilō, aquilōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to be stiff with cold, then the Latin for to feel cold, then say aquilō, aquilōnis again

Before you move on

What does aquilō, aquilōnis mean? ("The north wind; the north".) Say it once more.

487.2 auster, austrī — the south wind; the south

Before the new one: say the Latin for to feel cold, then the Latin for the north wind.

You'll want to know: auster, austrī

auster, austrī — "the south wind; the south".

Auster calidus nūbēs et pluviam fert.

The warm south wind brings clouds and rain.

Second declension, masculine: auster, austrī m. English austral comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

auster is inherited; EtymDB lists English east and Latin aurōra 'dawn' as cousins, while Lewis & Short derive it from a root meaning 'to burn', the hot wind. English austral comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: auster, austrī
- Say it: auster, austrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with auster, austrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to feel cold, then the Latin for the north wind, then say auster, austrī again

Before you move on

What does auster, austrī mean? ("The south wind; the south".) Say it once more.

487.3 favōnius, favōniī — the west wind (of spring)

Before the new one: say the Latin for the north wind, then the Latin for the south wind.

You'll want to know: favōnius, favōniī

favōnius, favōniī — "the west wind (of spring)".

Vēre favōnius venit, et flōrēs aperiuntur.

In spring the west wind comes, and the flowers open.

Second declension, masculine: favōnius, favōniī m. The mild wind that brings spring.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

favōnius is built on faveō 'to be kind, to favour' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): the kindly wind of spring. The Alpine wind name Föhn is usually traced to it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: favōnius, favōniī
- Say it: favōnius, favōniī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with favōnius, favōniī
- Recall: say the Latin for the north wind, then the Latin for the south wind, then say favōnius, favōniī again

Before you move on

What does favōnius, favōniī mean? ("The west wind (of spring)".) Say it once more.

487.4 perflō, perflāre — to blow through, to blow across

Before the new one: say the Latin for the south wind, then the Latin for the west wind.

You'll want to know: perflō, perflāre

perflō, perflāre — "to blow through, to blow across".

Ventus magnus agrōs perflat, et arborēs moventur.

A strong wind blows across the fields, and the trees move.

perflō, perflāre, perflāvī, perflātum, with an accusative of the place. The simple verb flō 'to blow' gives English inflate through īnflāre.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perflō is built from per 'through' and flō 'to blow' (Lewis & Short). flō is inherited, and EtymDB lists English blow as a cousin; English inflate and flatulent come from flō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: perflō, perflāre
- Say it: perflō, perflāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with perflō, perflāre
- Recall: say the Latin for the south wind, then the Latin for the west wind, then say perflō, perflāre again

Before you move on

What does perflō, perflāre mean? ("To blow through, to blow across".) Say it once more.

487.5 serēnitās, serēnitātis — clear weather, fair weather; calm

Before the new one: say the Latin for the west wind, then the Latin for to blow through.

You'll want to know: serēnitās, serēnitātis

serēnitās, serēnitātis — "clear weather, fair weather; calm".

Post ventum serēnitās est, et caelum caeruleum est.

After the wind the weather is clear, and the sky is blue.

Third declension, feminine: serēnitās, serēnitātis f., from serēnus 'clear'. English serenity comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

serēnitās is built on serēnus 'clear, cloudless' with the suffix -itās (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English serenity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: serēnitās, serēnitātis
- Say it: serēnitās, serēnitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with serēnitās, serēnitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for the west wind, then the Latin for to blow through, then say serēnitās, serēnitātis again

Before you move on

What does serēnitās, serēnitātis mean? ("Clear weather, fair weather; calm".) Say it once more.

Chapter 488

Midwinter, Summer solstice, Dog Star, Of summer, To be warm

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the turning points of the year: midwinter, the summer solstice, the Dog Days, summer things and warm weather.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 488: I can talk about the turning points of the year: midwinter, the summer solstice, the Dog Days, summer things and warm weather.

488.1 brūma, brūmae — midwinter, the winter solstice, the shortest day

Before the new one: say the Latin for to blow through, then the Latin for clear weather.

You'll want to know: brūma, brūmae

brūma, brūmae — "midwinter, the winter solstice, the shortest day".

> Brūmā diēs brevissimus est et nox longissima.
>
> At midwinter the day is shortest and the night longest.

First declension, feminine: brūma, brūmae f. Shortened from brevissima (diēs), the shortest day. English brumal 'wintry' comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

brūma comes from brevima, an old form of brevissima 'shortest', as in brevissima diēs 'the shortest day' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short); it is built on brevis 'short'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: brūma, brūmae
- Say it: brūma, brūmae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with brūma, brūmae
- Recall: say the Latin for to blow through, then the Latin for clear weather, then say brūma, brūmae again

Before you move on

What does brūma, brūmae mean? ("Midwinter, the winter solstice, the shortest day".) Say it once more.

488.2 sōlstitium, sōlstitiī — the summer solstice; midsummer heat

Before the new one: say the Latin for clear weather, then the Latin for midwinter.

You'll want to know: sōlstitium, sōlstitiī

sōlstitium, sōlstitiī — "the summer solstice; midsummer heat".

Sōlstitiō diēs longissimus est.

At the summer solstice the day is longest.

Second declension, neuter: sōlstitium, sōlstitiī n. For Romans mostly the summer one; midwinter was brūma. English solstice comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sōlstitium is built from sōl 'sun' and sistō 'to stand still' (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): the time when the sun seems to stand still. English solstice comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sōlstitium, sōlstitiī
- Say it: sōlstitium, sōlstitiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sōlstitium, sōlstitiī
- Recall: say the Latin for clear weather, then the Latin for midwinter, then say sōlstitium, sōlstitiī again

Before you move on

What does sōlstitium, sōlstitiī mean? ("The summer solstice; midsummer heat".) Say it once more.

488.3 canīcula, canīculae — the Dog Star; a little dog

Before the new one: say the Latin for midwinter, then the Latin for the summer solstice.

You'll want to know: canīcula, canīculae

canīcula, canīculae — "the Dog Star; a little dog".

Ubi canīcula ardet, agricolae in umbrā quiēscunt.

When the Dog Star blazes, the farmers rest in the shade.

First declension, feminine: canīcula, canīculae f., a diminutive of canis 'dog'. Its rising in high summer brought the hottest days, the dog days.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

canīcula is a diminutive of canis 'dog' with -cula (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): a little dog, and the star in the mouth of the Great Dog. English canicular comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: canīcula, canīculae
- Say it: canīcula, canīculae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with canīcula, canīculae
- Recall: say the Latin for midwinter, then the Latin for the summer solstice, then say canīcula, canīculae again

Before you move on

What does canīcula, canīculae mean? ("The Dog Star; a little dog".) Say it once more.

488.4 aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum — of summer, summer

Before the new one: say the Latin for the summer solstice, then the Latin for the Dog Star.

You'll want to know: aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum

aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum — "of summer, summer".

Dīves vīllam aestīvam in montibus habet.

The rich man has a summer house in the mountains.

An adjective of three endings, from aestās 'summer'. Aestīva (n. pl.), a summer camp. English aestivate comes from the same root.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aestīvus is built on aestās 'summer' with the suffix -īvus (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), and aestās goes back to PIE h_2eyd^h- 'to burn'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum
- Say it: aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum
- Recall: say the Latin for the summer solstice, then the Latin for the Dog Star, then say aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum again

Before you move on

What does aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum mean? ("Of summer, summer".) Say it once more.

488.5 caleō, calēre — to be warm, to be hot

Before the new one: say the Latin for the Dog Star, then the Latin for of summer.

You'll want to know: caleō, calēre

caleō, calēre — "to be warm, to be hot".

Aestāte saxa sub sōle calent.

In summer the stones are hot under the sun.

caleō, calēre, caluī, second conjugation. Calidus 'hot' and calor 'heat' come from it; English calorie comes from calor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caleō is inherited from Proto-Italic kalēō 'to be hot', from PIE ḱelh₁- 'to heat' (EtymDB). calidus 'hot' and calor 'heat', the source of English calorie, are built on it (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: caleō, calēre
- Say it: caleō, calēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with caleō, calēre
- Recall: say the Latin for the Dog Star, then the Latin for of summer, then say caleō, calēre again

Before you move on

What does caleō, calēre mean? ("To be warm, to be hot".) Say it once more.

488.6 Farm, mountains and weather

Say the Latin for the north wind and the south wind.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the north wind, the south wind, the west wind, to blow through, clear weather
- midwinter, the summer solstice, the Dog Star, of summer, to be warm

Before you move on

The north wind? (aquilō, aquilōnis.) The south wind? (auster, austrī.) The west wind? (favōnius, favōniī.) To blow through? (perflō, perflāre.) Clear weather? (serēnitās, serēnitātis.) Midwinter? (brūma, brūmae.) The summer solstice? (sōlstitium, sōlstitiī.) The Dog Star? (canīcula, canīculae.) Of summer? (aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum.) To be warm? (caleō, calēre.)

488.7 Midwinter, Summer solstice, Dog Star, Of summer, To be warm — once more

Say the Latin for midwinter and the summer solstice.

Your turn

- Say it: midwinter, the summer solstice, the Dog Star, of summer, to be warm

Before you move on

Midwinter? (brūma, brūmae.) The summer solstice? (sōlstitium, sōlstitiī.) The Dog Star? (canīcula, canīculae.) Of summer? (aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum.) To be warm? (caleō, calēre.)

Chapter 489

Joy and gladness

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about joy and gladness.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 489: I can talk about joy and gladness.

489.1 laetitia, laetitiae — joy, gladness

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a ditch, then the Latin for a rampart.

You'll want to know: laetitia, laetitiae

laetitia, laetitiae — "joy, gladness".

> Post victōriam magna laetitia in urbe erat.
>
> After the victory there was great joy in the city.

Feminine, first declension. Laetitia is lively joy that shows; gaudium is joy felt inside.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

laetitia is built on the adjective laetus "glad, happy" with the noun ending -itia (Lewis & Short; EtymDB derives it from laetus).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: laetitia, laetitiae
- Say it: laetitia, laetitiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with laetitia, laetitiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a ditch, then the Latin for a rampart, then say laetitia, laetitiae again

Before you move on

What does laetitia, laetitiae mean? ("Joy, gladness".) Say it once more.

489.2 laetor, laetārī — to rejoice, be glad

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rampart, then the Latin for joy.

You'll want to know: laetor, laetārī

laetor, laetārī — "to rejoice, be glad".

> Māter laetātur, quod fīlius sānus redit.
>
> The mother rejoices because her son comes home healthy.

Deponent: laetor, laetārī, laetātus sum. With the ablative or with dē: victōriā laetor — I rejoice at the victory.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

laetor is a deponent verb built on laetus "glad, happy" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: laetor, laetārī
- Say it: laetor, laetārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with laetor, laetārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a rampart, then the Latin for joy, then say laetor, laetārī again

Before you move on

What does laetor, laetārī mean? ("To rejoice, be glad".) Say it once more.

489.3 hilaritās, hilaritātis — cheerfulness, merriment

Before the new one: say the Latin for joy, then the Latin for to rejoice.

You'll want to know: hilaritās, hilaritātis

hilaritās, hilaritātis — "cheerfulness, merriment".

Hilaritās avī omnēs hospitēs laetōs facit.

Grandfather's cheerfulness makes all the guests happy.

Feminine, third declension. English hilarity comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hilaritās is built on hilaris "cheerful", an early borrowing from Greek hilaros "cheerful" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English hilarity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: hilaritās, hilaritātis
- Say it: hilaritās, hilaritātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with hilaritās, hilaritātis
- Recall: say the Latin for joy, then the Latin for to rejoice, then say hilaritās, hilaritātis again

Before you move on

What does hilaritās, hilaritātis mean? ("Cheerfulness, merriment".) Say it once more.

489.4 exsultō, exsultāre — to leap for joy, rejoice greatly

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rejoice, then the Latin for cheerfulness.

You'll want to know: exsultō, exsultāre

exsultō, exsultāre — "to leap for joy, rejoice greatly".

Puerī in hortō exsultant, quod hodiē fēriae sunt.

The boys leap for joy in the garden, because today is a holiday.

exsultō, exsultāre, exsultāvī, exsultātum. First to leap up, then to be overjoyed. English exult.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exsultō is built on ex- "out, up" and saltō "to jump, dance", the frequentative of saliō "to leap" (Lewis & Short). English exult comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: exsultō, exsultāre
- Say it: exsultō, exsultāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with exsultō, exsultāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to rejoice, then the Latin for cheerfulness, then say exsultō, exsultāre again

Before you move on

What does exsultō, exsultāre mean? ("To leap for joy, rejoice greatly".) Say it once more.

489.5 iūcunditās, iūcunditātis — pleasantness, delight

Before the new one: say the Latin for cheerfulness, then the Latin for to leap for joy.

You'll want to know: iūcunditās, iūcunditātis

iūcunditās, iūcunditātis — "pleasantness, delight".

Iūcunditātem hortī nostrī omnēs amīcī laudant.

All our friends praise the pleasantness of our garden.

Feminine, third declension, built on iūcundus — pleasant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūcunditās is built on iūcundus "pleasant, agreeable" with the noun ending -itās (Lewis & Short, under jucunditas); Lewis & Short links iūcundus with iocus "a joke", but its origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iūcunditās, iūcunditātis
- Say it: iūcunditās, iūcunditātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iūcunditās, iūcunditātis
- Recall: say the Latin for cheerfulness, then the Latin for to leap for joy, then say iūcunditās, iūcunditātis again

Before you move on

What does iūcunditās, iūcunditātis mean? ("Pleasantness, delight".) Say it once more.

Chapter 490

Sadness and grief

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about sadness and grief.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 490: I can talk about sadness and grief.

490.1 trīstitia, trīstitiae — sadness

Before the new one: say the Latin for to leap for joy, then the Latin for pleasantness.

You'll want to know: trīstitia, trīstitiae

trīstitia, trīstitiae — "sadness".

Post mortem patris magna trīstitia domum tenet.

After the father's death great sadness fills the house.

Feminine, first declension, from trīstis — sad.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trīstitia is built on trīstis "sad, gloomy" with -itia (Lewis & Short); EtymDB traces trīstis to a Proto-Indo-European form meaning "in a bad mood".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: trīstitia, trīstitiae
- Say it: trīstitia, trīstitiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with trīstitia, trīstitiae
- Recall: say the Latin for to leap for joy, then the Latin for pleasantness, then say trīstitia, trīstitiae again

Before you move on

What does trīstitia, trīstitiae mean? ("Sadness".) Say it once more.

490.2 maestitia, maestitiae — sorrow, dejection

Before the new one: say the Latin for pleasantness, then the Latin for sadness.

You'll want to know: maestitia, maestitiae

maestitia, maestitiae — "sorrow, dejection".

Maestitia puellae ex oculīs eius appāret.

The girl's sorrow shows in her eyes.

Feminine, first declension, from maestus — sad. A close partner of trīstitia.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maestitia is built on maestus "sad, sorrowful" with -itia (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: maestitia, maestitiae
- Say it: maestitia, maestitiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with maestitia, maestitiae
- Recall: say the Latin for pleasantness, then the Latin for sadness, then say maestitia, maestitiae again

Before you move on

What does maestitia, maestitiae mean? ("Sorrow, dejection".) Say it once more.

490.3 maereō, maerēre — to grieve, mourn

Before the new one: say the Latin for sadness, then the Latin for sorrow.

You'll want to know: maereō, maerēre

maereō, maerēre — "to grieve, mourn".

Senex maeret, quod amīcus eius periit.

The old man grieves because his friend has died.

maereō, maerēre, maeruī; no supine in common use. Sadness that shows, as a mourner's does.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maereō is a native Latin verb; Lewis & Short compares Greek misos "hatred" and Latin miser "wretched", but EtymDB gives no parent, so the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: maereō, maerēre
- Say it: maereō, maerēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with maereō, maerēre
- Recall: say the Latin for sadness, then the Latin for sorrow, then say maereō, maerēre again

Before you move on

What does maereō, maerēre mean? ("To grieve, mourn".) Say it once more.

490.4 maeror, maerōris — grief, mourning

Before the new one: say the Latin for sorrow, then the Latin for to grieve.

You'll want to know: maeror, maerōris

maeror, maerōris — "grief, mourning".

Maeror viduae magnus est.

The widow's grief is great.

Masculine, third declension. Grief that shows, in tears and mourning clothes.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maeror is built on the verb maereō "to grieve" with the noun ending -or, as dolor is built on doleō (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: maeror, maerōris
- Say it: maeror, maerōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with maeror, maerōris
- Recall: say the Latin for sorrow, then the Latin for to grieve, then say maeror, maerōris again

Before you move on

What does maeror, maerōris mean? ("Grief, mourning".) Say it once more.

490.5 lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum — sorrowful, mournful

Before the new one: say the Latin for to grieve, then the Latin for grief.

You'll want to know: lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum

lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum — "sorrowful, mournful".

Ille diēs lūctuōsus omnibus cīvibus fuit.

That day was a sorrowful one for all the citizens.

Built on lūctus — mourning. It can mean causing grief or feeling it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūctuōsus is built on lūctus "mourning", the noun of lūgeō "to mourn", with -ōsus "full of" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB derives it from lūctus).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum
- Say it: lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for to grieve, then the Latin for grief, then say lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum again

Before you move on

What does lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum mean? ("Sorrowful, mournful".) Say it once more.

Chapter 491

Tears and sighs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe weeping, groaning and sighing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 491: I can describe weeping, groaning and sighing.

491.1 lacrimō, lacrimāre — to weep, shed tears

> Before the new one: say the Latin for grief, then the Latin for sorrowful.

You'll want to know: lacrimō, lacrimāre

lacrimō, lacrimāre — "to weep, shed tears".

> Īnfāns tōtam noctem lacrimat.
>
> The baby cries all night.

lacrimō, lacrimāre, lacrimāvī, lacrimātum, from lacrima — a tear. English lachrymose comes from the same family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lacrimō is built on lacrima "a tear" (Lewis & Short), which EtymDB traces to a Proto-Indo-European word for "tear"; English tear is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lacrimō, lacrimāre
- Say it: lacrimō, lacrimāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lacrimō, lacrimāre
- Recall: say the Latin for grief, then the Latin for sorrowful, then say lacrimō, lacrimāre again

Before you move on

What does lacrimō, lacrimāre mean? ("To weep, shed tears".) Say it once more.

491.2 plōrō, plōrāre — to wail, cry aloud

Before the new one: say the Latin for sorrowful, then the Latin for to weep.

You'll want to know: plōrō, plōrāre

plōrō, plōrāre — "to wail, cry aloud".

Puella plōrat, quia pila eius in flūmen cecidit.

The girl is wailing because her ball fell into the river.

plōrō, plōrāre, plōrāvī, plōrātum. Louder than fleō: crying out loud. English deplore and implore come from its compounds.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plōrō is a native Latin verb whose origin is not settled; Lewis & Short calls it doubtful. English deplore and implore come from its compounds dēplōrō and implōrō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: plōrō, plōrāre
- Say it: plōrō, plōrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with plōrō, plōrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for sorrowful, then the Latin for to weep, then say plōrō, plōrāre again

Before you move on

What does plōrō, plōrāre mean? ("To wail, cry aloud".) Say it once more.

491.3 gemō, gemere — to groan, moan

Before the new one: say the Latin for to weep, then the Latin for to wail.

You'll want to know: gemō, gemere

gemō, gemere — "to groan, moan".

Aeger in lectō gemit.

The sick man groans in bed.

gemō, gemere, gemuī, gemitum. Also of a dove cooing or a wheel creaking.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gemō is a native Latin verb; Lewis & Short compares a Greek verb meaning "to be full", but EtymDB gives no parent, so the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gemō, gemere
- Say it: gemō, gemere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gemō, gemere
- Recall: say the Latin for to weep, then the Latin for to wail, then say gemō, gemere again

Before you move on

What does gemō, gemere mean? ("To groan, moan".) Say it once more.

491.4 gemitus, gemitūs — a groan, moan

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wail, then the Latin for to groan.

You'll want to know: gemitus, gemitūs

gemitus, gemitūs — "a groan, moan".

Ē cubiculō gemitūs audīmus.

We hear groans from the bedroom.

Masculine, fourth declension, from gemō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gemitus is the action noun of gemō "to groan", with the fourth-declension ending -tus (Lewis & Short; EtymDB derives it from gemō).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gemitus, gemitūs
- Say it: gemitus, gemitūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gemitus, gemitūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to wail, then the Latin for to groan, then say gemitus, gemitūs again

Before you move on

What does gemitus, gemitūs mean? ("A groan, moan".) Say it once more.

491.5 suspīrō, suspīrāre — to sigh

Before the new one: say the Latin for to groan, then the Latin for a groan.

You'll want to know: suspīrō, suspīrāre

suspīrō, suspīrāre — "to sigh".

Iuvenis suspīrat et dē puellā cōgitat.

The young man sighs and thinks about the girl.

suspīrō, suspīrāre, suspīrāvī, suspīrātum: sub 'up from below' + spīrō 'to breathe'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suspīrō is built on sub- "up from below" and spīrō "to breathe" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): a sigh is a breath drawn up from deep down. English inspire and respire share spīrō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: suspīrō, suspīrāre
- Say it: suspīrō, suspīrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with suspīrō, suspīrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to groan, then the Latin for a groan, then say suspīrō, suspīrāre again

Before you move on

What does suspīrō, suspīrāre mean? ("To sigh".) Say it once more.

Chapter 492

Comfort and gentleness

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about comforting someone.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 492: I can talk about comforting someone.

492.1 cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī — to console, comfort

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a groan, then the Latin for to sigh.

You'll want to know: cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī

cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī — "to console, comfort".

> Amīca puellam trīstem cōnsōlātur.
>
> Her friend comforts the sad girl.

Deponent: cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī, cōnsōlātus sum, with the accusative. English console.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsōlor is built on con- and sōlor "to comfort" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English console and consolation come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī
- Say it: cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a groan, then the Latin for to sigh, then say cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī again

Before you move on

What does cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī mean? ("To console, comfort".) Say it once more.

492.2 cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis — consolation, comfort

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sigh, then the Latin for to console.

You'll want to know: cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis

cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis — "consolation, comfort".

Epistula amīcī mihi magna cōnsōlātiō fuit.

My friend's letter was a great comfort to me.

Feminine, third declension. A favourite word of letter-writers.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsōlātiō is the action noun of cōnsōlor "to console", with -tiō (Lewis & Short). English consolation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis
- Say it: cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to sigh, then the Latin for to console, then say cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis mean? ("Consolation, comfort".) Say it once more.

492.3 sōlācium, sōlāciī — solace, relief

Before the new one: say the Latin for to console, then the Latin for consolation.

You'll want to know: sōlācium, sōlāciī

sōlācium, sōlāciī — "solace, relief".

Librī mihi in senectūte sōlācium sunt.

Books are a solace to me in old age.

Neuter, second declension. English solace comes from it through Old French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sōlācium is built on sōlor "to comfort, soothe" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English solace comes from it through Old French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sōlācium, sōlāciī
- Say it: sōlācium, sōlāciī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sōlācium, sōlāciī
- Recall: say the Latin for to console, then the Latin for consolation, then say sōlācium, sōlāciī again

Before you move on

What does sōlācium, sōlāciī mean? ("Solace, relief".) Say it once more.

492.4 lēnis, lēne — gentle, mild, soft

Before the new one: say the Latin for consolation, then the Latin for solace.

You'll want to know: lēnis, lēne

lēnis, lēne — "gentle, mild, soft".

Vōx mātris lēnis et dulcis est.

Mother's voice is gentle and sweet.

Two endings: lēnis for masculine and feminine, lēne for neuter. Of voices, winds and people.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lēnis is a native Latin adjective; Lewis & Short compares lentus "pliant, slow", and EtymDB lists a Proto-Indo-European parent, but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lēnis, lēne
- Say it: lēnis, lēne, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lēnis, lēne
- Recall: say the Latin for consolation, then the Latin for solace, then say lēnis, lēne again

Before you move on

What does lēnis, lēne mean? ("Gentle, mild, soft".) Say it once more.

492.5 lēniō, lēnīre — to soothe, soften

Before the new one: say the Latin for solace, then the Latin for gentle.

You'll want to know: lēniō, lēnīre

lēniō, lēnīre — "to soothe, soften".

Medicus dolōrem aegrī medicāmentō lēnit.

The doctor soothes the patient's pain with a medicine.

lēniō, lēnīre, lēnīvī, lēnītum, from lēnis. English lenient comes from its present participle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lēniō is built on lēnis "gentle, soft" (Lewis & Short). English lenient comes from its present participle lēniēns.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lēniō, lēnīre
- Say it: lēniō, lēnīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lēniō, lēnīre
- Recall: say the Latin for solace, then the Latin for gentle, then say lēniō, lēnīre again

Before you move on

What does lēniō, lēnīre mean? ("To soothe, soften".) Say it once more.

Chapter 493

Anger and indignation

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about anger and indignation.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 493: I can talk about anger and indignation.

493.1 īrāscor, īrāscī — to grow angry, be angry

> Before the new one: say the Latin for gentle, then the Latin for to soothe.

You'll want to know: īrāscor, īrāscī

īrāscor, īrāscī — "to grow angry, be angry".

> Dominus servō īrāscitur, quod cēnam nōn parāvit.
>
> The master grows angry with the slave because he has not prepared dinner.

Deponent: īrāscor, īrāscī, īrātus sum, with the dative of the person. Īrātus, already known, is its participle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īrāscor is built on īra "anger" with -scor, an ending for a state that begins (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English irascible comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īrāscor, īrāscī
- Say it: īrāscor, īrāscī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īrāscor, īrāscī
- Recall: say the Latin for gentle, then the Latin for to soothe, then say īrāscor, īrāscī again

Before you move on

What does īrāscor, īrāscī mean? ("To grow angry, be angry".) Say it once more.

493.2 īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum — hot-tempered, quick to anger

Before the new one: say the Latin for to soothe, then the Latin for to grow angry.

You'll want to know: īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum

īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum — "hot-tempered, quick to anger".

Senex īrācundus semper clāmat.

The hot-tempered old man is always shouting.

Built on īra — anger. A trait of character, where īrātus is a passing mood.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īrācundus is built on īra "anger" with the adjective ending -cundus, as in verēcundus (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum
- Say it: īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum
- Recall: say the Latin for to soothe, then the Latin for to grow angry, then say īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum again

Before you move on

What does īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum mean? ("Hot-tempered, quick to anger".) Say it once more.

493.3 īrācundia, īrācundiae — a hot temper, irritability

Before the new one: say the Latin for to grow angry, then the Latin for hot-tempered.

You'll want to know: īrācundia, īrācundiae

īrācundia, īrācundiae — "a hot temper, irritability".

Īrācundia eius omnēs amīcōs terret.

His hot temper frightens all his friends.

Feminine, first declension, from īrācundus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īrācundia is built on īrācundus "hot-tempered", itself from īra "anger" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īrācundia, īrācundiae
- Say it: īrācundia, īrācundiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īrācundia, īrācundiae
- Recall: say the Latin for to grow angry, then the Latin for hot-tempered, then say īrācundia, īrācundiae again

Before you move on

What does īrācundia, īrācundiae mean? ("A hot temper, irritability".) Say it once more.

493.4 indignus, indigna, indignum — unworthy, undeserving; shameful

Before the new one: say the Latin for hot-tempered, then the Latin for a hot temper.

You'll want to know: indignus, indigna, indignum

indignus, indigna, indignum — "unworthy, undeserving; shameful".

Hoc verbum tē indignum est.

This word is unworthy of you.

With the ablative: indignus honōre — unworthy of honour. The opposite of dignus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

indignus is built on in- "not" and dignus "worthy" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB traces dignus to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to take, accept"). English indignity comes from its noun indignitās.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: indignus, indigna, indignum
- Say it: indignus, indigna, indignum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with indignus, indigna, indignum
- Recall: say the Latin for hot-tempered, then the Latin for a hot temper, then say indignus, indigna, indignum again

Before you move on

What does indignus, indigna, indignum mean? ("Unworthy, undeserving; shameful".) Say it once more.

493.5 indignor, indignārī — to be indignant, resent

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hot temper, then the Latin for unworthy.

You'll want to know: indignor, indignārī

indignor, indignārī — "to be indignant, resent".

> Cīvēs indignantur, quod tribūtum magnum est.
>
> The citizens are indignant that the tax is large.

Deponent: indignor, indignārī, indignātus sum. To count a thing unworthy, and be angry at it. English indignant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

indignor is built on indignus "unworthy" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English indignant comes from its present participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: indignor, indignārī
- Say it: indignor, indignārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with indignor, indignārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a hot temper, then the Latin for unworthy, then say indignor, indignārī again

Before you move on

What does indignor, indignārī mean? ("To be indignant, resent".) Say it once more.

Chapter 494

Hatred and disgust

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about hatred, disgust and weariness.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 494: I can talk about hatred, disgust and weariness.

494.1 ōdī, ōdisse — to hate

> Before the new one: say the Latin for unworthy, then the Latin for to be indignant.

You'll want to know: ōdī, ōdisse

ōdī, ōdisse — "to hate".

> Fēlēs aquam ōdit.
>
> The cat hates water.

Perfect in form, present in meaning: ōdī — I hate, ōderam — I hated, ōderō — I shall hate. Future participle ōsūrus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōdī is inherited, through Proto-Italic ōdai, from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to hate" (EtymDB). The noun odium "hatred", source of English odium and odious, is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ōdī, ōdisse
- Say it: ōdī, ōdisse, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ōdī, ōdisse
- Recall: say the Latin for unworthy, then the Latin for to be indignant, then say ōdī, ōdisse again

Before you move on

What does ōdī, ōdisse mean? ("To hate".) Say it once more.

494.2 odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum — hateful, tiresome

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be indignant, then the Latin for to hate.

You'll want to know: odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum

odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum — "hateful, tiresome".

Iter longum et odiōsum fuit.

The journey was long and tiresome.

Built on odium — hatred. In everyday Latin it often means no more than annoying. English odious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

odiōsus is built on odium "hatred" with the ending -ōsus "full of" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English odious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum
- Say it: odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for to be indignant, then the Latin for to hate, then say odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum again

Before you move on

What does odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum mean? ("Hateful, tiresome".) Say it once more.

494.3 fastīdiō, fastīdīre — to turn up one's nose at, feel disgust at

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hate, then the Latin for hateful.

You'll want to know: fastīdiō, fastīdīre

fastīdiō, fastīdīre — "to turn up one's nose at, feel disgust at".

Puer holera fastīdit.

The boy turns up his nose at vegetables.

fastīdiō, fastīdīre, fastīdīvī, fastīdītum, with the accusative.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fastīdiō is built on fastīdium "loathing" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fastīdiō, fastīdīre
- Say it: fastīdiō, fastīdīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fastīdiō, fastīdīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to hate, then the Latin for hateful, then say fastīdiō, fastīdīre again

Before you move on

What does fastīdiō, fastīdīre mean? ("To turn up one's nose at, feel disgust at".) Say it once more.

494.4 fastīdium, fastīdiī — disgust, squeamishness; disdain

Before the new one: say the Latin for hateful, then the Latin for to turn up one's nose at.

You'll want to know: fastīdium, fastīdiī

fastīdium, fastīdiī — "disgust, squeamishness; disdain".

Aeger cibum cum fastīdiō spectat.

The sick man looks at the food with disgust.

Neuter, second declension. Disgust of the stomach, and the scorn of a snob.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fastīdium is a native Latin word; Lewis & Short compares fastus "pride", but the origin is not settled. English fastidious comes from fastīdiōsus, built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fastīdium, fastīdiī
- Say it: fastīdium, fastīdiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fastīdium, fastīdiī
- Recall: say the Latin for hateful, then the Latin for to turn up one's nose at, then say fastīdium, fastīdiī again

Before you move on

What does fastīdium, fastīdiī mean? ("Disgust, squeamishness; disdain".) Say it once more.

494.5 taedet, taedēre — it wearies, it disgusts

Before the new one: say the Latin for to turn up one's nose at, then the Latin for disgust.

You'll want to know: taedet, taedēre

taedet, taedēre — "it wearies, it disgusts".

Mē taedet longārum ōrātiōnum.

I am weary of long speeches.

Impersonal: taedet, taedēre, taeduit or taesum est. The person in the accusative, the thing in the genitive: mē taedet labōris — I am sick of the work. Taedium, already known, is built on it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

taedet is a native Latin impersonal verb, and the noun taedium "weariness" is built on it (Lewis & Short); its deeper origin is not settled. English tedium and tedious come from taedium.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: taedet, taedēre
- Say it: taedet, taedēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with taedet, taedēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to turn up one's nose at, then the Latin for disgust, then say taedet, taedēre again

Before you move on

What does taedet, taedēre mean? ("It wearies, it disgusts".) Say it once more.

Chapter 495

Wonder and amazement

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe wonder and amazement.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 495: I can describe wonder and amazement.

495.1 admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis — admiration, wonder

> Before the new one: say the Latin for disgust, then the Latin for it wearies.

You'll want to know: admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis

admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis — "admiration, wonder".

> Hospitēs templum novum cum admīrātiōne spectant.
>
> The guests gaze at the new temple in wonder.

Feminine, third declension, from admīror, already known. English admiration.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

admīrātiō is the action noun of admīror "to wonder at", built on ad- and mīror "to wonder" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English admiration comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis
- Say it: admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for disgust, then the Latin for it wearies, then say admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis mean? ("Admiration, wonder".) Say it once more.

495.2 mīror, mīrārī — to wonder, marvel at

Before the new one: say the Latin for it wearies, then the Latin for admiration.

You'll want to know: mīror, mīrārī

mīror, mīrārī — "to wonder, marvel at".

Puer elephantum mīrātur.

The boy marvels at the elephant.

Deponent: mīror, mīrārī, mīrātus sum. With the accusative, or with quod — I am surprised that. English miracle belongs to the same family.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mīror is built on mīrus "wonderful", which EtymDB traces through Proto-Italic to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to smile". English admire and miracle belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mīror, mīrārī
- Say it: mīror, mīrārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mīror, mīrārī
- Recall: say the Latin for it wearies, then the Latin for admiration, then say mīror, mīrārī again

Before you move on

What does mīror, mīrārī mean? ("To wonder, marvel at".) Say it once more.

495.3 stupeō, stupēre — to be stunned, be amazed

Before the new one: say the Latin for admiration, then the Latin for to wonder.

You'll want to know: stupeō, stupēre

stupeō, stupēre — "to be stunned, be amazed".

Agricola in urbe magnā stupet.

The farmer is stunned in the great city.

stupeō, stupēre, stupuī. Struck dumb with wonder or fear. English stupor comes from it, and stupid from its adjective stupidus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stupeō is inherited and usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to strike, to stun" (EtymDB). English stupid comes from its adjective stupidus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: stupeō, stupēre
- Say it: stupeō, stupēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with stupeō, stupēre
- Recall: say the Latin for admiration, then the Latin for to wonder, then say stupeō, stupēre again

Before you move on

What does stupeō, stupēre mean? ("To be stunned, be amazed".) Say it once more.

495.4 attonitus, attonita, attonitum — thunderstruck, astonished

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wonder, then the Latin for to be stunned.

You'll want to know: attonitus, attonita, attonitum

attonitus, attonita, attonitum — "thunderstruck, astonished".

Attonitī nūntium audīmus.

We hear the news, thunderstruck.

The past participle of attonō — to strike with thunder.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

attonitus is the past participle of attonō "to strike with thunder", built on ad- and tonō "to thunder" (Lewis & Short). English astonish comes from a related compound of tonō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: attonitus, attonita, attonitum
- Say it: attonitus, attonita, attonitum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with attonitus, attonita, attonitum
- Recall: say the Latin for to wonder, then the Latin for to be stunned, then say attonitus, attonita, attonitum again

Before you move on

What does attonitus, attonita, attonitum mean? ("Thunderstruck, astonished".) Say it once more.

495.5 obstupēscō, obstupēscere — to be struck dumb, be astounded

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be stunned, then the Latin for thunderstruck.

You'll want to know: obstupēscō, obstupēscere

obstupēscō, obstupēscere — "to be struck dumb, be astounded".

Hospitēs ad hanc fābulam obstupēscunt.

The guests are astounded at this story.

obstupēscō, obstupēscere, obstupuī. The inceptive of stupeō: the moment the wonder strikes.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obstupēscō is built on ob- and stupēscō, the inceptive form of stupeō "to be stunned" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obstupēscō, obstupēscere
- Say it: obstupēscō, obstupēscere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obstupēscō, obstupēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to be stunned, then the Latin for thunderstruck, then say obstupēscō, obstupēscere again

Before you move on

What does obstupēscō, obstupēscere mean? ("To be struck dumb, be astounded".) Say it once more.

Chapter 496

Fear and dread

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe fear and dreadful things.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 496: I can describe fear and dreadful things.

496.1 paveō, pavēre — to quake with fear, be terrified

Before the new one: say the Latin for thunderstruck, then the Latin for to be struck dumb.

You'll want to know: paveō, pavēre

paveō, pavēre — "to quake with fear, be terrified".

> Ovēs lupum vident et pavent.
>
> The sheep catch sight of the wolf and quake with fear.

paveō, pavēre, pāvī. The noun is pavor — terror.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

paveō is a native Latin verb; EtymDB links it with a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to strike", but Lewis & Short calls its origin doubtful, so it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: paveō, pavēre
- Say it: paveō, pavēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with paveō, pavēre
- Recall: say the Latin for thunderstruck, then the Latin for to be struck dumb, then say paveō, pavēre again

Before you move on

What does paveō, pavēre mean? ("To quake with fear, be terrified".) Say it once more.

496.2 vereor, verērī — to respect; to fear

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be struck dumb, then the Latin for to quake with fear.

You'll want to know: vereor, verērī

vereor, verērī — "to respect; to fear".

Discipulī magistrum verentur.

The pupils respect their teacher.

Deponent: vereor, verērī, veritus sum. Fear mixed with respect. Vereor nē… — I am afraid that…

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vereor is inherited through Proto-Italic from a Proto-Indo-European root wer- (EtymDB), and Lewis & Short compares Greek horao "to see" and English ward. English revere comes from revereor.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vereor, verērī
- Say it: vereor, verērī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vereor, verērī
- Recall: say the Latin for to be struck dumb, then the Latin for to quake with fear, then say vereor, verērī again

Before you move on

What does vereor, verērī mean? ("To respect; to fear".) Say it once more.

496.3 perterreō, perterrēre — to terrify thoroughly

Before the new one: say the Latin for to quake with fear, then the Latin for to respect.

You'll want to know: perterreō, perterrēre

perterreō, perterrēre — "to terrify thoroughly".

Tonitrus puerōs perterret.

The thunder terrifies the children.

perterreō, perterrēre, perterruī, perterritum: per- 'thoroughly' + terreō 'to frighten'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perterreō is built on per- "thoroughly" and terreō "to frighten" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English terrify and terror belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: perterreō, perterrēre
- Say it: perterreō, perterrēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with perterreō, perterrēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to quake with fear, then the Latin for to respect, then say perterreō, perterrēre again

Before you move on

What does perterreō, perterrēre mean? ("To terrify thoroughly".) Say it once more.

496.4 horribilis, horribile — dreadful, horrible

Before the new one: say the Latin for to respect, then the Latin for to terrify thoroughly.

You'll want to know: horribilis, horribile

horribilis, horribile — "dreadful, horrible".

Tempestās horribilis nāvem frēgit.

A dreadful storm broke the ship.

Two endings. From horreō — to bristle, to shudder. English horrible.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

horribilis is built on horreō "to bristle, to shudder" with -ibilis (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English horrible comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: horribilis, horribile
- Say it: horribilis, horribile, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with horribilis, horribile
- Recall: say the Latin for to respect, then the Latin for to terrify thoroughly, then say horribilis, horribile again

Before you move on

What does horribilis, horribile mean? ("Dreadful, horrible".) Say it once more.

496.5 terribilis, terribile — frightful, terrible

Before the new one: say the Latin for to terrify thoroughly, then the Latin for dreadful.

You'll want to know: terribilis, terribile

terribilis, terribile — "frightful, terrible".

Leō vōcem terribilem habet.

The lion has a terrible voice.

Two endings. From terreō — to frighten. English terrible.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

terribilis is built on terreō "to frighten" with -ibilis (Lewis & Short); EtymDB traces terreō to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to tremble, to frighten". English terrible comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: terribilis, terribile
- Say it: terribilis, terribile, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with terribilis, terribile
- Recall: say the Latin for to terrify thoroughly, then the Latin for dreadful, then say terribilis, terribile again

Before you move on

What does terribilis, terribile mean? ("Frightful, terrible".) Say it once more.

496.6 Feelings and character

Say the Latin for joy and to rejoice.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- joy, to rejoice, cheerfulness, to leap for joy, pleasantness
- sadness, sorrow, to grieve, grief, sorrowful
- to weep, to wail, to groan, a groan, to sigh
- to console, consolation, solace, gentle, to soothe
- to grow angry, hot-tempered, a hot temper, unworthy, to be indignant

- to hate, hateful, to turn up one's nose at, disgust, it wearies
- admiration, to wonder, to be stunned, thunderstruck, to be struck dumb
- to quake with fear, to respect, to terrify thoroughly, dreadful, frightful

Before you move on

Joy? (laetitia, laetitiae.) To rejoice? (laetor, laetārī.) Cheerfulness? (hilaritās, hilaritātis.) To leap for joy? (exsultō, exsultāre.) Pleasantness? (iūcunditās, iūcunditātis.) Sadness? (trīstitia, trīstitiae.) Sorrow? (maestitia, maestitiae.) To grieve? (maereō, maerēre.) Grief? (maeror, maerōris.) Sorrowful? (lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum.) To weep? (lacrimō, lacrimāre.) To wail? (plōrō, plōrāre.) To groan? (gemō, gemere.) A groan? (gemitus, gemitūs.) To sigh? (suspīrō, suspīrāre.) To console? (cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī.) Consolation? (cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis.) Solace? (sōlācium, sōlācii.) Gentle? (lēnis, lēne.) To soothe? (lēniō, lēnīre.) To grow angry? (īrāscor, īrāscī.) Hot-tempered? (īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum.) A hot temper? (īrācundia, īrācundiae.) Unworthy? (indignus, indigna, indignum.) To be indignant? (indignor, indignārī.) To hate? (ōdī, ōdisse.) Hateful? (odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum.) To turn up one's nose at? (fastīdiō, fastīdīre.) Disgust? (fastīdium, fastīdii.) It wearies? (taedet, taedēre.) Admiration? (admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis.) To wonder? (mīror, mīrārī.) To be stunned? (stupeō, stupēre.) Thunderstruck? (attonitus, attonita, attonitum.) To be struck dumb? (obstupēscō, obstupēscere.) To quake with fear? (paveō, pavēre.) To respect? (vereor, verērī.) To terrify thoroughly? (perterreō, perterrēre.) Dreadful? (horribilis, horribile.) Frightful? (terribilis, terribile.)

Chapter 497

Worry and distress

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about worry and distress.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 497: I can talk about worry and distress.

497.1 sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis — anxiety, worry

Before the new one: say the Latin for dreadful, then the Latin for frightful.

You'll want to know: sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis

sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis — "anxiety, worry".

> Māter magnā sollicitūdine fīlium exspectat.
>
> The mother waits for her son with great anxiety.

Feminine, third declension, from sollicitus — anxious. English solicitude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sollicitūdō is built on sollicitus "anxious, troubled" with -tūdō (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English solicitude comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis
- Say it: sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for dreadful, then the Latin for frightful, then say sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis again

Before you move on

What does sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis mean? ("Anxiety, worry".) Say it once more.

497.2 angō, angere — to distress, torment; to choke

Before the new one: say the Latin for frightful, then the Latin for anxiety.

You'll want to know: angō, angere

angō, angere — "to distress, torment; to choke".

Cūra dē fīliō patrem angit.

Worry about his son torments the father.

angō, angere, anxī. First to squeeze the throat, then to torment the mind. Anxius, already known, comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

angō is inherited from Proto-Italic angō, from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "narrow, tight" (EtymDB). English anxious and anguish come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: angō, angere
- Say it: angō, angere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with angō, angere
- Recall: say the Latin for frightful, then the Latin for anxiety, then say angō, angere again

Before you move on

What does angō, angere mean? ("To distress, torment; to choke".) Say it once more.

497.3 aegritūdō, aegritūdinis — distress of mind, grief; sickness

Before the new one: say the Latin for anxiety, then the Latin for to distress.

You'll want to know: aegritūdō, aegritūdinis

aegritūdō, aegritūdinis — "distress of mind, grief; sickness".

Post mortem amīcī aegritūdō eum diū tenet.

After his friend's death, grief holds him for a long time.

Feminine, third declension, from aeger — sick. In philosophy it often means sorrow, a sickness of the mind.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aegritūdō is built on aeger "sick" with -tūdō (Lewis & Short), and it names sickness of body or of mind.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aegritūdō, aegritūdinis
- Say it: aegritūdō, aegritūdinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aegritūdō, aegritūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for anxiety, then the Latin for to distress, then say aegritūdō, aegritūdinis again

Before you move on

What does aegritūdō, aegritūdinis mean? ("Distress of mind, grief; sickness".) Say it once more.

497.4 molestia, molestiae — annoyance, trouble

Before the new one: say the Latin for to distress, then the Latin for distress of mind.

You'll want to know: molestia, molestiae

molestia, molestiae — "annoyance, trouble".

Muscae aegrō molestiam afferunt.

The flies cause the sick man annoyance.

Feminine, first declension, from molestus — annoying. English molest comes from the related verb molestō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

molestia is built on molestus "troublesome", which Lewis & Short connects with mōlēs "a heavy mass": a burden. English molest comes from the related verb molestō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: molestia, molestiae
- Say it: molestia, molestiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with molestia, molestiae
- Recall: say the Latin for to distress, then the Latin for distress of mind, then say molestia, molestiae again

Before you move on

What does molestia, molestiae mean? ("Annoyance, trouble".) Say it once more.

497.5 cruciō, cruciāre — to torment, torture

Before the new one: say the Latin for distress of mind, then the Latin for annoyance.

You'll want to know: cruciō, cruciāre

cruciō, cruciāre — "to torment, torture".

Dolor dentium senem cruciat.

Toothache torments the old man.

cruciō, cruciāre, cruciāvī, cruciātum, from crux — a cross. In comedy also of worry: mē cruciō — I fret. English excruciating.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cruciō is built on crux "a cross" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): to torment as on a cross. English excruciating comes from the compound excruciō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cruciō, cruciāre
- Say it: cruciō, cruciāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cruciō, cruciāre
- Recall: say the Latin for distress of mind, then the Latin for annoyance, then say cruciō, cruciāre again

Before you move on

What does cruciō, cruciāre mean? ("To torment, torture".) Say it once more.

Chapter 498

Hope, despair and trust

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about despair, trust and distrust.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 498: I can talk about despair, trust and distrust.

498.1 dēspērō, dēspērāre — to despair (of)

Before the new one: say the Latin for annoyance, then the Latin for to torment.

You'll want to know: dēspērō, dēspērāre

dēspērō, dēspērāre — "to despair (of)".

Medicus dē salūte aegrī dēspērat.

The doctor despairs of the patient's recovery.

dēspērō, dēspērāre, dēspērāvī, dēspērātum: dē- 'away from' + spērō 'to hope'. With dē and the ablative, or the accusative. English despair, desperate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēspērō is built on dē- "away from" and spērō "to hope", from spēs "hope" (Lewis & Short). English despair and desperate come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēspērō, dēspērāre
- Say it: dēspērō, dēspērāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēspērō, dēspērāre
- Recall: say the Latin for annoyance, then the Latin for to torment, then say dēspērō, dēspērāre again

Before you move on

What does dēspērō, dēspērāre mean? ("To despair (of)".) Say it once more.

498.2 dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis — despair, hopelessness

Before the new one: say the Latin for to torment, then the Latin for to despair.

You'll want to know: dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis

dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis — "despair, hopelessness".

In dēspērātiōne nautae deōs ōrant.

In their despair the sailors pray to the gods.

Feminine, third declension. English desperation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēspērātiō is the action noun of dēspērō "to despair" (Lewis & Short). English desperation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis
- Say it: dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to torment, then the Latin for to despair, then say dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis mean? ("Despair, hopelessness".) Say it once more.

498.3 cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere — to trust, rely on; to be confident

Before the new one: say the Latin for to despair, then the Latin for despair.

You'll want to know: cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere

cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere — "to trust, rely on; to be confident".

Amīcō meō omnīnō cōnfīdō.

I trust my friend completely.

Semi-deponent: cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere, cōnfīsus sum, with the dative of a person. English confide, confident.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnfīdō is built on con- and fīdō "to trust" (Lewis & Short); EtymDB traces fīdō through Proto-Italic to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to trust". English confide and confident come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere
- Say it: cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to despair, then the Latin for despair, then say cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere again

Before you move on

What does cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere mean? ("To trust, rely on; to be confident".) Say it once more.

498.4 diffīdō, diffīdere — to distrust; to lose hope

Before the new one: say the Latin for despair, then the Latin for to trust.

You'll want to know: diffīdō, diffīdere

diffīdō, diffīdere — "to distrust; to lose hope".

Mercātor nautīs diffīdit.

The merchant distrusts the sailors.

Semi-deponent: diffīdō, diffīdere, diffīsus sum, with the dative. The opposite of cōnfīdō. English diffident.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

diffīdō is built on dis- "apart, not" and fīdō "to trust" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English diffident comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: diffīdō, diffīdere
- Say it: diffīdō, diffīdere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with diffīdō, diffīdere
- Recall: say the Latin for despair, then the Latin for to trust, then say diffīdō, diffīdere again

Before you move on

What does diffīdō, diffīdere mean? ("To distrust; to lose hope".) Say it once more.

498.5 crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum — trusting, credulous

Before the new one: say the Latin for to trust, then the Latin for to distrust.

You'll want to know: crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum

crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum — "trusting, credulous".

Puer crēdulus omnia crēdit, quae audit.

The trusting boy believes everything he hears.

Built on crēdō — to believe. English credulous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crēdulus is built on crēdō "to believe" with -ulus (Lewis & Short; EtymDB), and EtymDB traces crēdō to a Proto-Indo-European phrase meaning "to put one's heart". English credulous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum
- Say it: crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum
- Recall: say the Latin for to trust, then the Latin for to distrust, then say crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum again

Before you move on

What does crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum mean? ("Trusting, credulous".) Say it once more.

Chapter 499

Pleasure and delight

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about what pleases and delights me.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 499: I can talk about what pleases and delights me.

499.1 dēlectō, dēlectāre — to delight, charm

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to distrust, then the Latin for trusting.

You'll want to know: dēlectō, dēlectāre

dēlectō, dēlectāre — "to delight, charm".

> Fābulae avī puerōs dēlectant.
>
> Grandfather's stories delight the children.

dēlectō, dēlectāre, dēlectāvī, dēlectātum, with the accusative. English delight comes from it through Old French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēlectō is the frequentative of dēliciō "to allure, entice" (Lewis & Short), built on dē- and laciō "to entice". English delight comes from it through Old French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēlectō, dēlectāre
- Say it: dēlectō, dēlectāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēlectō, dēlectāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to distrust, then the Latin for trusting, then say dēlectō, dēlectāre again

Before you move on

What does dēlectō, dēlectāre mean? ("To delight, charm".) Say it once more.

499.2 dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis — delight, pleasure

Before the new one: say the Latin for trusting, then the Latin for to delight.

You'll want to know: dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis

dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis — "delight, pleasure".

Cantāre mihi magna dēlectātiō est.

Singing is a great delight to me.

Feminine, third declension, from dēlectō. English delectation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēlectātiō is the action noun of dēlectō "to delight" (Lewis & Short). English delectation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis
- Say it: dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for trusting, then the Latin for to delight, then say dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis mean? ("Delight, pleasure".) Say it once more.

499.3 voluptās, voluptātis — pleasure, enjoyment

Before the new one: say the Latin for to delight, then the Latin for delight.

You'll want to know: voluptās, voluptātis

voluptās, voluptātis — "pleasure, enjoyment".

Sapiēns nōn voluptātem, sed virtūtem quaerit.

The wise man seeks not pleasure but virtue.

Feminine, third declension. Pleasure of every kind, of the senses and of the mind. English voluptuous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

voluptās is built on the old adverb volup "pleasantly" (EtymDB), heard in the phrase volup est "it is a pleasure"; Lewis & Short compares Greek elpo "to hope" instead. English voluptuous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: voluptās, voluptātis
- Say it: voluptās, voluptātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with voluptās, voluptātis
- Recall: say the Latin for to delight, then the Latin for delight, then say voluptās, voluptātis again

Before you move on

What does voluptās, voluptātis mean? ("Pleasure, enjoyment".) Say it once more.

499.4 oblectō, oblectāre — to amuse, entertain

Before the new one: say the Latin for delight, then the Latin for pleasure.

You'll want to know: oblectō, oblectāre

oblectō, oblectāre — "to amuse, entertain".

Senex sē librīs oblectat.

The old man amuses himself with books.

oblectō, oblectāre, oblectāvī, oblectātum. Often with sē: to pass the time pleasantly.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oblectō is built on ob- and lactō "to allure", a frequentative of laciō "to entice" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB), the same root as dēlectō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: oblectō, oblectāre
- Say it: oblectō, oblectāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with oblectō, oblectāre
- Recall: say the Latin for delight, then the Latin for pleasure, then say oblectō, oblectāre again

Before you move on

What does oblectō, oblectāre mean? ("To amuse, entertain".) Say it once more.

499.5 placeō, placēre — to please, be pleasing

Before the new one: say the Latin for pleasure, then the Latin for to amuse.

You'll want to know: placeō, placēre

placeō, placēre — "to please, be pleasing".

Haec domus nova uxōrī meae placet.

This new house pleases my wife.

placeō, placēre, placuī, placitum, with the dative: mihi placet — I like it; it seems good to me. English please comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

placeō is a native Latin verb, a cousin of plācō "to calm" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English please and pleasure come from it through Old French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: placeō, placēre
- Say it: placeō, placēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with placeō, placēre
- Recall: say the Latin for pleasure, then the Latin for to amuse, then say placeō, placēre again

Before you move on

What does placeō, placēre mean? ("To please, be pleasing".) Say it once more.

Chapter 500

Desire and envy

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about desire, greed and envy.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 500: I can talk about desire, greed and envy.

500.1 cupīdō, cupīdinis — desire, longing

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to amuse, then the Latin for to please.

You'll want to know: cupīdō, cupīdinis

cupīdō, cupīdinis — "desire, longing".

> Cupīdō pecūniae multōs hominēs malōs facit.
>
> Desire for money makes many people bad.

Feminine in prose, third declension; as the god of love it is masculine. Built on cupiō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cupīdō is built on cupiō "to desire" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short); cupiditās, already known, comes from the same verb, and English cupidity from that.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cupīdō, cupīdinis
- Say it: cupīdō, cupīdinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cupīdō, cupīdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for to amuse, then the Latin for to please, then say cupīdō, cupīdinis again

Before you move on

What does cupīdō, cupīdinis mean? ("Desire, longing".) Say it once more.

500.2 cupidus, cupida, cupidum — eager, desirous

Before the new one: say the Latin for to please, then the Latin for desire.

You'll want to know: cupidus, cupida, cupidum

cupidus, cupida, cupidum — "eager, desirous".

Discipulus cupidus litterārum est.

The pupil is eager for learning.

With the genitive: cupidus pecūniae — greedy for money.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cupidus is built on cupiō "to desire" with the adjective ending -idus (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cupidus, cupida, cupidum
- Say it: cupidus, cupida, cupidum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cupidus, cupida, cupidum
- Recall: say the Latin for to please, then the Latin for desire, then say cupidus, cupida, cupidum again

Before you move on

What does cupidus, cupida, cupidum mean? ("Eager, desirous".)
Say it once more.

500.3 avidus, avida, avidum — greedy, eager

Before the new one: say the Latin for desire, then the Latin for eager.

You'll want to know: avidus, avida, avidum

avidus, avida, avidum — "greedy, eager".

Canis avidus cibum statim edit.

The greedy dog eats the food at once.

With the genitive: avidus glōriae — hungry for glory. English avid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

avidus is built on aveō "to long for" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).
English avid comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: avidus, avida, avidum
- Say it: avidus, avida, avidum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with avidus, avida, avidum
- Recall: say the Latin for desire, then the Latin for eager, then say avidus, avida, avidum again

Before you move on

What does avidus, avida, avidum mean? ("Greedy, eager".) Say it once more.

500.4 invideō, invidēre — to envy, begrudge

Before the new one: say the Latin for eager, then the Latin for greedy.

You'll want to know: invideō, invidēre

invideō, invidēre — "to envy, begrudge".

Soror sorōrī novam stolam invidet.

One sister envies the other her new dress.

invideō, invidēre, invīdī, invīsum, with the dative of the person: tibi invideō — I envy you. Invidia and invidus, already known, come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

invideō is built on in- "upon, against" and videō "to see" (Lewis & Short), first "to cast an evil eye on". English envy comes from invidia through Old French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: invideō, invidēre
- Say it: invideō, invidēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with invideō, invidēre
- Recall: say the Latin for eager, then the Latin for greedy, then say invideō, invidēre again

Before you move on

What does invideō, invidēre mean? ("To envy, begrudge".) Say it once more.

500.5 rīvālis, rīvālis — a rival (in love)

Before the new one: say the Latin for greedy, then the Latin for to envy.

You'll want to know: rīvālis, rīvālis

rīvālis, rīvālis — "a rival (in love)".

Duo iuvenēs eandem puellam amant; rīvālēs sunt.

Two young men love the same girl; they are rivals.

Masculine, third declension. First someone who shares a stream with you, then a rival in love. English rival.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rīvālis is built on rīvus "a stream" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): first those who used the same brook, then rivals in love. English rival comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rīvālis, rīvālis
- Say it: rīvālis, rīvālis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rīvālis, rīvālis
- Recall: say the Latin for greedy, then the Latin for to envy, then say rīvālis, rīvālis again

Before you move on

What does rīvālis, rīvālis mean? ("A rival (in love)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 501

Moods and feelings

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe moods and how things affect me.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 501: I can describe moods and how things affect me.

501.1 commoveō, commovēre — to move deeply, disturb

Before the new one: say the Latin for to envy, then the Latin for a rival.

You'll want to know: commoveō, commovēre

commoveō, commovēre — "to move deeply, disturb".

> Lacrimae fīliae patrem valdē commovent.
>
> His daughter's tears move the father deeply.

commoveō, commovēre, commōvī, commōtum. Of the body, to shake; of the mind, to stir or upset. English commotion.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commoveō is built on con- and moveō "to move" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English commotion comes from the related noun commōtiō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: commoveō, commovēre
- Say it: commoveō, commovēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with commoveō, commovēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to envy, then the Latin for a rival, then say commoveō, commovēre again

Before you move on

What does commoveō, commovēre mean? ("To move deeply, disturb".) Say it once more.

501.2 afficiō, afficere — to affect, fill with a feeling

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rival, then the Latin for to move deeply.

You'll want to know: afficiō, afficere

afficiō, afficere — "to affect, fill with a feeling".

Nūntius malus omnēs dolōre afficit.

The bad news fills everyone with grief.

afficiō, afficere, affēcī, affectum. Aliquem laetitiā afficere — to fill someone with joy; in the passive, dolōre afficior — I am stricken with pain. English affect.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

afficiō is built on ad- and faciō "to do, make" (Lewis & Short): to do something to someone. English affect comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: afficiō, afficere
- Say it: afficiō, afficere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with afficiō, afficere
- Recall: say the Latin for a rival, then the Latin for to move deeply, then say afficiō, afficere again

Before you move on

What does afficiō, afficere mean? ("To affect, fill with a feeling".) Say it once more.

501.3 affectus, affectūs — a mood, state of mind

Before the new one: say the Latin for to move deeply, then the Latin for to affect.

You'll want to know: affectus, affectūs

affectus, affectūs — "a mood, state of mind".

Affectūs animī in vōce audīmus.

We hear the moods of the mind in the voice.

Masculine, fourth declension, from afficiō. English affection comes from the related affectiō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

affectus is the action noun of afficiō "to affect" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): the state into which something puts the mind.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: affectus, affectūs
- Say it: affectus, affectūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with affectus, affectūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to move deeply, then the Latin for to affect, then say affectus, affectūs again

Before you move on

What does affectus, affectūs mean? ("A mood, state of mind".) Say it once more.

501.4 tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum — calm, peaceful

Before the new one: say the Latin for to affect, then the Latin for a mood.

You'll want to know: tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum

tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum — "calm, peaceful".

Post tempestātem mare tranquillum est.

After the storm the sea is calm.

Of the weather and the sea, and of a quiet mind. English tranquil.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tranquillus goes back to Proto-Italic (EtymDB), but its further origin is not settled. English tranquil comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum
- Say it: tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum
- Recall: say the Latin for to affect, then the Latin for a mood, then say tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum again

Before you move on

What does tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum mean? ("Calm, peaceful".) Say it once more.

501.5 sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum — free from care, untroubled

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mood, then the Latin for calm.

You'll want to know: sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum

sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum — "free from care, untroubled".

Post labōrem agricola sēcūrus dormit.

After his work the farmer sleeps free from care.

sē- 'without' + cūra 'care'. In classical Latin it means carefree rather than safe. English secure.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sēcūrus is built on sē- "without" and cūra "care" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English secure and sure come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum
- Say it: sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum
- Recall: say the Latin for a mood, then the Latin for calm, then say sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum again

Before you move on

What does sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum mean? ("Free from care, untroubled".) Say it once more.

Chapter 502

Jokes and wit

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about jokes and witty people.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 502: I can talk about jokes and witty people.

502.1 iocus, iocī — a joke, jest

> Before the new one: say the Latin for calm, then the Latin for free from care.

You'll want to know: iocus, iocī

iocus, iocī — "a joke, jest".

> Pater iocum nārrat, et omnēs rīdent.
>
> Father tells a joke, and everyone laughs.

Masculine, second declension; the plural is often ioca. Per iocum — as a joke. English joke and jocular.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iocus is inherited through Proto-Italic from a Proto-Indo-European word that EtymDB traces to a root meaning "to speak", with Welsh iaith "language" as a cousin; Lewis & Short is less sure. English joke and jocular come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iocus, iocī
- Say it: iocus, iocī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iocus, iocī
- Recall: say the Latin for calm, then the Latin for free from care, then say iocus, iocī again

Before you move on

What does iocus, iocī mean? ("A joke, jest".) Say it once more.

502.2 iocor, iocārī — to joke, jest

Before the new one: say the Latin for free from care, then the Latin for a joke.

You'll want to know: iocor, iocārī

iocor, iocārī — "to joke, jest".

Servī in culīnā iocantur.

The slaves joke in the kitchen.

Deponent: iocor, iocārī, iocātus sum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iocor is built on iocus "a joke" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iocor, iocārī
- Say it: iocor, iocārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iocor, iocārī
- Recall: say the Latin for free from care, then the Latin for a joke, then say iocor, iocārī again

Before you move on

What does iocor, iocārī mean? ("To joke, jest".) Say it once more.

502.3 iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum — humorous, playful

Before the new one: say the Latin for a joke, then the Latin for to joke.

You'll want to know: iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum

iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum — "humorous, playful".

Avus meus senex iocōsus est.

My grandfather is a humorous old man.

Built on iocus. English jocose.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iocōsus is built on iocus "a joke" with -ōsus "full of" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English jocose comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum
- Say it: iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for a joke, then the Latin for to joke, then say iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum again

Before you move on

What does iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum mean? ("Humorous, playful".) Say it once more.

502.4 rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum — funny, laughable; absurd

Before the new one: say the Latin for to joke, then the Latin for humorous.

You'll want to know: rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum

rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum — "funny, laughable; absurd".

Histriō in theātrō rīdiculus est.

The actor is funny in the theatre.

From rīdeō — to laugh. Funny in a good sense, absurd in a bad one. English ridiculous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rīdiculus is built on rīdeō "to laugh" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English ridiculous and ridicule come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum
- Say it: rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum
- Recall: say the Latin for to joke, then the Latin for humorous, then say rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum again

Before you move on

What does rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum mean? ("Funny, laughable; absurd".) Say it once more.

502.5 facētus, facēta, facētum — witty, clever

Before the new one: say the Latin for humorous, then the Latin for funny.

You'll want to know: facētus, facēta, facētum

facētus, facēta, facētum — "witty, clever".

Hospes facētus multa rīdicula dīcit.

The witty guest says many funny things.

Elegant, good-humoured wit. English facetious comes from facētiae — jokes.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

facētus is a native Latin adjective; Lewis & Short and EtymDB link it with fax "torch" and a root meaning "to shine", but the origin is not settled. English facetious comes from facētiae "jokes", built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: facētus, facēta, facētum
- Say it: facētus, facēta, facētum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with facētus, facēta, facētum
- Recall: say the Latin for humorous, then the Latin for funny, then say facētus, facēta, facētum again

Before you move on

What does facētus, facēta, facētum mean? ("Witty, clever".) Say it once more.

Chapter 503

Temperament

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe someone's nature and temperament.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 503: I can describe someone's nature and temperament.

503.1 nātūra, nātūrae — nature, character

> Before the new one: say the Latin for funny, then the Latin for witty.

You'll want to know: nātūra, nātūrae

nātūra, nātūrae — "nature, character".

> Nātūra frātris meī placida est.
>
> My brother's nature is calm.

Feminine, first declension, from nāscor — to be born: what you are born with. English nature.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nātūra is built on nātus, the participle of nāscor "to be born" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English nature comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nātūra, nātūrae
- Say it: nātūra, nātūrae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nātūra, nātūrae
- Recall: say the Latin for funny, then the Latin for witty, then say nātūra, nātūrae again

Before you move on

What does nātūra, nātūrae mean? ("Nature, character".) Say it once more.

503.2 indolēs, indolis — natural disposition, talent

Before the new one: say the Latin for witty, then the Latin for nature.

You'll want to know: indolēs, indolis

indolēs, indolis — "natural disposition, talent".

Hic puer bonam indolem habet.

This boy has a good disposition.

Feminine, third declension. Inborn character, often of a promising young person.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

indolēs is built on old indu "within" and the root of olēscō "to grow", a relative of alō "to nourish" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): what grows from within.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: indolēs, indolis
- Say it: indolēs, indolis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with indolēs, indolis
- Recall: say the Latin for witty, then the Latin for nature, then say indolēs, indolis again

Before you move on

What does indolēs, indolis mean? ("Natural disposition, talent".) Say it once more.

503.3 alacer, alacris, alacre — lively, eager

Before the new one: say the Latin for nature, then the Latin for natural disposition.

You'll want to know: alacer, alacris, alacre

alacer, alacris, alacre — "lively, eager".

> Mīlitēs alacrēs ad pugnam currunt.
>
> The soldiers run eagerly to the fight.

Three endings in the nominative, like ācer. English alacrity comes from alacritās.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

alacer is a native Latin adjective; Lewis & Short suggests a link with alō "to nourish", but the origin is not settled. English alacrity comes from alacritās, built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: alacer, alacris, alacre
- Say it: alacer, alacris, alacre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with alacer, alacris, alacre
- Recall: say the Latin for nature, then the Latin for natural disposition, then say alacer, alacris, alacre again

Before you move on

What does alacer, alacris, alacre mean? ("Lively, eager".) Say it once more.

503.4 lepidus, lepida, lepidum — charming, delightful

Before the new one: say the Latin for natural disposition, then the Latin for lively.

You'll want to know: lepidus, lepida, lepidum

lepidus, lepida, lepidum — "charming, delightful".

> Fābula lepida et brevis est.
>
> The story is charming and short.

A word of comedy and of friendly letters: neat, pleasant, nicely done.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lepidus is built on lepōs "charm, grace" (Lewis & Short); the origin of lepōs is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lepidus, lepida, lepidum
- Say it: lepidus, lepida, lepidum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lepidus, lepida, lepidum
- Recall: say the Latin for natural disposition, then the Latin for lively, then say lepidus, lepida, lepidum again

Before you move on

What does lepidus, lepida, lepidum mean? ("Charming, delightful".) Say it once more.

503.5 lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum — playful, frisky

Before the new one: say the Latin for lively, then the Latin for charming.

You'll want to know: lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum

lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum — "playful, frisky".

Catulī lascīvī in hortō lūdunt.

The playful puppies play in the garden.

Of animals and children, frisky; of grown-ups, sometimes naughty. English lascivious is narrower.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lascīvus is inherited and traced to a Proto-Indo-European root las- "eager, wanton" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English lascivious comes from it, with a narrower meaning.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum
- Say it: lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum
- Recall: say the Latin for lively, then the Latin for charming, then say lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum again

Before you move on

What does lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum mean? ("Playful, frisky".) Say it once more.

Chapter 504

Honesty and pretence

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about honesty, lies and pretence.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 504: I can talk about honesty, lies and pretence.

504.1 probitās, probitātis — honesty, uprightness

Before the new one: say the Latin for charming, then the Latin for playful.

You'll want to know: probitās, probitātis

probitās, probitātis — "honesty, uprightness".

Omnēs probitātem eius laudant.

Everyone praises his honesty.

Feminine, third declension, from probus — upright. English probity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

probitās is built on probus "good, upright" (Lewis & Short), which EtymDB traces to a Proto-Indo-European compound meaning "being in front, excellent". English probity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: probitās, probitātis
- Say it: probitās, probitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with probitās, probitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for charming, then the Latin for playful, then say probitās, probitātis again

Before you move on

What does probitās, probitātis mean? ("Honesty, uprightness".) Say it once more.

504.2 sincērus, sincēra, sincērum — genuine, sincere

Before the new one: say the Latin for playful, then the Latin for honesty.

You'll want to know: sincērus, sincēra, sincērum

sincērus, sincēra, sincērum — "genuine, sincere".

Amīcitia nostra sincēra est.

Our friendship is genuine.

Of things, pure and unmixed; of people, honest. English sincere.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sincērus is a native Latin adjective whose origin is not settled; EtymDB and Lewis & Short both link its first part with sim-, as in simplex. English sincere comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sincērus, sincēra, sincērum
- Say it: sincērus, sincēra, sincērum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sincērus, sincēra, sincērum
- Recall: say the Latin for playful, then the Latin for honesty, then say sincērus, sincēra, sincērum again

Before you move on

What does sincērus, sincēra, sincērum mean? ("Genuine, sincere".) Say it once more.

504.3 mendāx, mendācis — lying; a liar

Before the new one: say the Latin for honesty, then the Latin for genuine.

You'll want to know: mendāx, mendācis

mendāx, mendācis — "lying; a liar".

Nēmō mendācī crēdit.

No one believes a liar.

One ending: mendāx for all genders. As a noun, a liar. Mendācium, already known, is the lie.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mendāx belongs with mentior "to lie" and mendācium "a lie" (Lewis & Short). English mendacious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mendāx, mendācis
- Say it: mendāx, mendācis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mendāx, mendācis
- Recall: say the Latin for honesty, then the Latin for genuine, then say mendāx, mendācis again

Before you move on

What does mendāx, mendācis mean? ("Lying; a liar".) Say it once more.

504.4 simulō, simulāre — to pretend, imitate

Before the new one: say the Latin for genuine, then the Latin for lying.

You'll want to know: simulō, simulāre

simulō, simulāre — "to pretend, imitate".

Servus morbum simulat, quod labōrāre nōn vult.

The slave pretends to be ill, because he does not want to work.

simulō, simulāre, simulāvī, simulātum: to pretend that something is so. English simulate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

simulō is built on similis "like" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): to make a thing look like another. English simulate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: simulō, simulāre
- Say it: simulō, simulāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with simulō, simulāre
- Recall: say the Latin for genuine, then the Latin for lying, then say simulō, simulāre again

Before you move on

What does simulō, simulāre mean? ("To pretend, imitate".) Say it once more.

504.5 dissimulō, dissimulāre — to hide, disguise (a feeling)

Before the new one: say the Latin for lying, then the Latin for to pretend.

You'll want to know: dissimulō, dissimulāre

dissimulō, dissimulāre — "to hide, disguise (a feeling)".

Puella dolōrem suum dissimulat et rīdet.

The girl hides her pain and smiles.

dissimulō, dissimulāre, dissimulāvī, dissimulātum: to pretend that something is not so. English dissimulate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dissimulō is built on dissimilis "unlike" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English dissimulate comes from it, and dissemble is a reshaped form.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dissimulō, dissimulāre
- Say it: dissimulō, dissimulāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dissimulō, dissimulāre
- Recall: say the Latin for lying, then the Latin for to pretend, then say dissimulō, dissimulāre again

Before you move on

What does dissimulō, dissimulāre mean? ("To hide, disguise (a feeling)".) Say it once more.

504.6 Words from chapters 497–504 — a review

Say the Latin for anxiety and to distress.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- anxiety, to distress, distress of mind, annoyance, to torment
- to despair, despair, to trust, to distrust, trusting
- to delight, delight, pleasure, to amuse, to please
- desire, eager, greedy, to envy, a rival
- to move deeply, to affect, a mood, calm, free from care
- a joke, to joke, humorous, funny, witty
- nature, natural disposition, lively, charming, playful
- honesty, genuine, lying, to pretend, to hide

Before you move on

Anxiety? (sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis.) To distress? (angō, angere.) Distress of mind? (aegritūdō, aegritūdinis.) Annoyance? (molestia, molestiae.) To torment? (cruciō, cruciāre.) To despair? (dēspērō, dēspērāre.) Despair? (dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis.) To trust? (cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere.) To distrust? (diffīdō, diffīdere.) Trusting? (crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum.) To delight? (dēlectō, dēlectāre.) Delight? (dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis.) Pleasure? (voluptās, voluptātis.) To amuse? (oblectō, oblectāre.) To please? (placeō, placēre.) Desire? (cupīdō, cupīdinis.) Eager? (cupidus, cupida, cupidum.) Greedy? (avidus, avida, avidum.) To envy? (invideō, invidēre.) A rival? (rīvālis, rīvālis.) To move deeply? (commoveō, commovēre.) To affect? (afficiō, afficere.) A mood? (affectus, affectūs.) Calm? (tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum.) Free from care? (sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum.) A joke? (iocus, iocī.) To joke? (iocor, iocārī.) Humorous? (iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum.) Funny? (rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum.) Witty? (facētus, facēta, facētum.) Nature? (nātūra, nātūrae.) Natural disposition? (indolēs, indolis.) Lively? (alacer, alacris, alacre.) Charming? (lepidus, lepida, lepidum.) Playful? (lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum.) Honesty? (probitās, probitātis.) Genuine? (sincērus, sincēra, sincērum.) Lying? (mendāx, mendācis.) To pretend? (simulō, simulāre.) To hide? (dissimulō, dissimulāre.)

Chapter 505

Mercy and kindness

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about mercy, kindness and goodwill.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 505: I can talk about mercy, kindness and goodwill.

505.1 clēmēns, clēmentis — merciful, mild

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to pretend, then the Latin for to hide.

You'll want to know: clēmēns, clēmentis

clēmēns, clēmentis — "merciful, mild".

> Rēx clēmēns captīvīs ignōscit.
>
> The merciful king pardons the prisoners.

One ending; ablative usually clēmentī. Of a ruler or a judge: gentle in punishing. English clement.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clēmēns is a native Latin adjective; Lewis & Short calls its origin doubtful, so it is not settled. English clement and inclement come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: clēmēns, clēmentis
- Say it: clēmēns, clēmentis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with clēmēns, clēmentis
- Recall: say the Latin for to pretend, then the Latin for to hide, then say clēmēns, clēmentis again

Before you move on

What does clēmēns, clēmentis mean? ("Merciful, mild".) Say it once more.

505.2 clēmentia, clēmentiae — mercy, clemency

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hide, then the Latin for merciful.

You'll want to know: clēmentia, clēmentiae

clēmentia, clēmentiae — "mercy, clemency".

Victor clēmentiam hostibus ostendit.

The victor shows mercy to the enemy.

Feminine, first declension. A virtue of rulers: mercy toward those in your power.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clēmentia is built on clēmēns "merciful" (Lewis & Short). English clemency comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: clēmentia, clēmentiae
- Say it: clēmentia, clēmentiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with clēmentia, clēmentiae
- Recall: say the Latin for to hide, then the Latin for merciful, then say clēmentia, clēmentiae again

Before you move on

What does clēmentia, clēmentiae mean? ("Mercy, clemency".) Say it once more.

505.3 benignitās, benignitātis — kindness, generosity

Before the new one: say the Latin for merciful, then the Latin for mercy.

You'll want to know: benignitās, benignitātis

benignitās, benignitātis — "kindness, generosity".

Benignitās hospitis nōs dēlectat.

Our host's kindness delights us.

Feminine, third declension, from benignus — kind. English benignity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

benignitās is built on benignus "kind", which Lewis & Short and EtymDB explain as bonus or bene "good, well" with genus "kind": of a good kind. English benign comes from benignus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: benignitās, benignitātis
- Say it: benignitās, benignitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with benignitās, benignitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for merciful, then the Latin for mercy, then say benignitās, benignitātis again

Before you move on

What does benignitās, benignitātis mean? ("Kindness, generosity".) Say it once more.

505.4 benevolus, benevola, benevolum — kindly, well-wishing

Before the new one: say the Latin for mercy, then the Latin for kindness.

You'll want to know: benevolus, benevola, benevolum

benevolus, benevola, benevolum — "kindly, well-wishing".

Vīcīnus benevolus nōbīs semper adest.

Our kindly neighbour is always there for us.

bene 'well' + volō 'to wish'. Often of a friend's goodwill.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

benevolus is built on bene "well" and volō "to wish" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: benevolus, benevola, benevolum
- Say it: benevolus, benevola, benevolum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with benevolus, benevola, benevolum
- Recall: say the Latin for mercy, then the Latin for kindness, then say benevolus, benevola, benevolum again

Before you move on

What does benevolus, benevola, benevolum mean? ("Kindly, well-wishing".) Say it once more.

505.5 benevolentia, benevolentiae — goodwill, kindness

Before the new one: say the Latin for kindness, then the Latin for kindly.

You'll want to know: benevolentia, benevolentiae

benevolentia, benevolentiae — "goodwill, kindness".

Sine benevolentiā nūlla amīcitia est.

Without goodwill there is no friendship.

Feminine, first declension, from benevolus. English benevolence.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

benevolentia is built on benevolus "kindly, well-wishing" (Lewis & Short). English benevolence comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: benevolentia, benevolentiae
- Say it: benevolentia, benevolentiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with benevolentia, benevolentiae
- Recall: say the Latin for kindness, then the Latin for kindly, then say benevolentia, benevolentiae again

Before you move on

What does benevolentia, benevolentiae mean? ("Goodwill, kindness".) Say it once more.

Chapter 506

Manners

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe good and bad manners.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 506: I can describe good and bad manners.

506.1 cōmis, cōme — courteous, friendly

Before the new one: say the Latin for kindly, then the Latin for goodwill.

You'll want to know: cōmis, cōme

cōmis, cōme — "courteous, friendly".

Hospes cōmis omnēs benignē salūtat.

The courteous host greets everyone kindly.

Two endings. Warm, easy, approachable manners.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōmis comes from Old Latin cosmis (EtymDB), which EtymDB traces to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to smile"; Lewis & Short calls it doubtful, so the origin is not fully settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōmis, cōme
- Say it: cōmis, cōme, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōmis, cōme
- Recall: say the Latin for kindly, then the Latin for goodwill, then say cōmis, cōme again

Before you move on

What does cōmis, cōme mean? ("Courteous, friendly".) Say it once more.

506.2 cōmitās, cōmitātis — friendliness, affability

Before the new one: say the Latin for goodwill, then the Latin for courteous.

You'll want to know: cōmitās, cōmitātis

cōmitās, cōmitātis — "friendliness, affability".

Cōmitāte suā multōs amīcōs habet.

Through his friendliness he has many friends.

Feminine, third declension, from cōmis.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōmitās is built on cōmis "courteous" with -itās (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōmitās, cōmitātis
- Say it: cōmitās, cōmitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōmitās, cōmitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for goodwill, then the Latin for courteous, then say cōmitās, cōmitātis again

Before you move on

What does cōmitās, cōmitātis mean? ("Friendliness, affability".) Say it once more.

506.3 urbānitās, urbānitātis — refinement, polished wit

Before the new one: say the Latin for courteous, then the Latin for friendliness.

You'll want to know: urbānitās, urbānitātis

urbānitās, urbānitātis — "refinement, polished wit".

Urbānitās eius in sermōne appāret.

His refinement shows in his conversation.

Feminine, third declension, from urbānus: the polish of the city, urbs. English urbanity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

urbānitās is built on urbānus "of the city", from urbs "city" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English urbanity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: urbānitās, urbānitātis
- Say it: urbānitās, urbānitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with urbānitās, urbānitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for courteous, then the Latin for friendliness, then say urbānitās, urbānitātis again

Before you move on

What does urbānitās, urbānitātis mean? ("Refinement, polished wit".) Say it once more.

506.4 rūsticitās, rūsticitātis — country manners, boorishness

Before the new one: say the Latin for friendliness, then the Latin for refinement.

You'll want to know: rūsticitās, rūsticitātis

rūsticitās, rūsticitātis — "country manners, boorishness".

Rūsticitātem eius urbānī rīdent.

City people laugh at his country manners.

Feminine, third declension, from rūsticus. The opposite of urbānitās. English rusticity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rūsticitās is built on rūsticus "of the country", from rūs "countryside" (Lewis & Short). English rusticity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rūsticitās, rūsticitātis
- Say it: rūsticitās, rūsticitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rūsticitās, rūsticitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for friendliness, then the Latin for refinement, then say rūsticitās, rūsticitātis again

Before you move on

What does rūsticitās, rūsticitātis mean? ("Country manners, boorishness".) Say it once more.

506.5 līberālitās, līberālitātis — generosity

Before the new one: say the Latin for refinement, then the Latin for country manners.

You'll want to know: līberālitās, līberālitātis

līberālitās, līberālitātis — "generosity".

Līberālitāte dominī servus lībertātem accipit.

Through his master's generosity the slave receives his freedom.

Feminine, third declension, from līberālis — befitting a free person. English liberality.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līberālitās is built on līberālis "befitting a free person", from līber "free" (Lewis & Short). English liberality comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lībērālitās, lībērālitātis
- Say it: lībērālitās, lībērālitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lībērālitās, lībērālitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for refinement, then the Latin for country manners, then say lībērālitās, lībērālitātis again

Before you move on

What does lībērālitās, lībērālitātis mean? ("Generosity".) Say it once more.

Chapter 507

Pride and arrogance

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe proud and arrogant people.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 507: I can describe proud and arrogant people.

507.1 superbia, superbiae — pride, haughtiness

> Before the new one: say the Latin for country manners, then the Latin for generosity.

You'll want to know: superbia, superbiae

superbia, superbiae — "pride, haughtiness".

> Superbia rēgis cīvēs vexat.
>
> The king's arrogance troubles the citizens.

Feminine, first declension, from superbus. Usually a fault in Latin, not a virtue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

superbia is built on superbus "proud", which Lewis & Short and EtymDB take from super "above": one who holds himself above others.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: superbia, superbiae
- Say it: superbia, superbiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with superbia, superbiae
- Recall: say the Latin for country manners, then the Latin for generosity, then say superbia, superbiae again

Before you move on

What does superbia, superbiae mean? ("Pride, haughtiness".) Say it once more.

507.2 arrogāns, arrogantis — arrogant, presumptuous

Before the new one: say the Latin for generosity, then the Latin for pride.

You'll want to know: arrogāns, arrogantis

arrogāns, arrogantis — "arrogant, presumptuous".

Iuvenis arrogāns nēminem audit.

The arrogant young man listens to no one.

One ending. The present participle of arrogō — to claim for oneself. English arrogant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arrogāns is the present participle of arrogō "to claim for oneself", built on ad- and rogō "to ask" (Lewis & Short). English arrogant comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: arrogāns, arrogantis
- Say it: arrogāns, arrogantis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with arrogāns, arrogantis
- Recall: say the Latin for generosity, then the Latin for pride, then say arrogāns, arrogantis again

Before you move on

What does arrogāns, arrogantis mean? ("Arrogant, presumptuous".) Say it once more.

507.3 arrogantia, arrogantiae — arrogance, conceit

Before the new one: say the Latin for pride, then the Latin for arrogant.

You'll want to know: arrogantia, arrogantiae

arrogantia, arrogantiae — "arrogance, conceit".

Arrogantia eius omnibus molesta est.

His arrogance annoys everyone.

Feminine, first declension. English arrogance.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arrogantia is built on arrogāns "arrogant" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English arrogance comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: arrogantia, arrogantiae
- Say it: arrogantia, arrogantiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with arrogantia, arrogantiae
- Recall: say the Latin for pride, then the Latin for arrogant, then say arrogantia, arrogantiae again

Before you move on

What does arrogantia, arrogantiae mean? ("Arrogance, conceit".) Say it once more.

507.4 īnsolēns, īnsolentis — insolent, haughty; unaccustomed

Before the new one: say the Latin for arrogant, then the Latin for arrogance.

You'll want to know: īnsolēns, īnsolentis

īnsolēns, īnsolentis — "insolent, haughty; unaccustomed".

Mīles īnsolēns agricolīs male dīcit.

The insolent soldier speaks abusively to the farmers.

One ending. First unaccustomed (in- + soleō), then behaving beyond the usual bounds. English insolent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnsolēns is built on in- "not" and solēns, the participle of soleō "to be accustomed" (Lewis & Short). English insolent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnsolēns, īnsolentis
- Say it: īnsolēns, īnsolentis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnsolēns, īnsolentis
- Recall: say the Latin for arrogant, then the Latin for arrogance, then say īnsolēns, īnsolentis again

Before you move on

What does īnsolēns, īnsolentis mean? ("Insolent, haughty; unaccustomed".) Say it once more.

507.5 vānitās, vānitātis — boastfulness, vanity; emptiness

Before the new one: say the Latin for arrogance, then the Latin for insolent.

You'll want to know: vānitās, vānitātis

vānitās, vānitātis — "boastfulness, vanity; emptiness".

Vānitās eius rīdicula est.

His boastfulness is ridiculous.

Feminine, third declension, from vānus — empty. English vanity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vānitās is built on vānus "empty" (Lewis & Short), which EtymDB traces to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "empty". English vanity and vain come from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vānitās, vānitātis
- Say it: vānitās, vānitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vānitās, vānitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for arrogance, then the Latin for insolent, then say vānitās, vānitātis again

Before you move on

What does vānitās, vānitātis mean? ("Boastfulness, vanity; emptiness".) Say it once more.

Chapter 508

Laziness and energy

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe lazy and hard-working people.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 508: I can describe lazy and hard-working people.

508.1 ignāvia, ignāviae — cowardice; laziness

Before the new one: say the Latin for insolent, then the Latin for boastfulness.

You'll want to know: ignāvia, ignāviae

ignāvia, ignāviae — "cowardice; laziness".

> Ignāvia mīlitum ducem īrātum facit.
>
> The soldiers' cowardice makes the general angry.

Feminine, first declension, from ignāvus — lazy, cowardly.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ignāvia is built on ignāvus "idle, cowardly", from in- "not" and old gnāvus "busy, active" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ignāvia, ignāviae
- Say it: ignāvia, ignāviae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ignāvia, ignāviae
- Recall: say the Latin for insolent, then the Latin for boastfulness, then say ignāvia, ignāviae again

Before you move on

What does ignāvia, ignāviae mean? ("Cowardice; laziness".) Say it once more.

508.2 pigritia, pigritiae — sloth, laziness

Before the new one: say the Latin for boastfulness, then the Latin for cowardice.

You'll want to know: pigritia, pigritiae

pigritia, pigritiae — "sloth, laziness".

Propter pigritiam servus nihil facit.

Because of his laziness the slave does nothing.

Feminine, first declension, from piger — lazy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pigritia is built on piger "lazy, slow" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB), which EtymDB links with pigeō "to feel annoyance".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pigritia, pigritiae
- Say it: pigritia, pigritiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pigritia, pigritiae
- Recall: say the Latin for boastfulness, then the Latin for cowardice, then say pigritia, pigritiae again

Before you move on

What does pigritia, pigritiae mean? ("Sloth, laziness".) Say it once more.

508.3 segnis, segne — sluggish, slow

Before the new one: say the Latin for cowardice, then the Latin for sloth.

You'll want to know: segnis, segne

segnis, segne — "sluggish, slow".

Asinus segnis lentē ambulat.

The sluggish donkey walks slowly.

Two endings. Nōn segniter — not slackly, with energy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

segnis is a native Latin adjective; Lewis & Short reports that it is commonly linked with sequor "to follow", but the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: segnis, segne
- Say it: segnis, segne, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with segnis, segne
- Recall: say the Latin for cowardice, then the Latin for sloth, then say segnis, segne again

Before you move on

What does segnis, segne mean? ("Sluggish, slow".) Say it once more.

508.4 strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum — vigorous, active

Before the new one: say the Latin for sloth, then the Latin for sluggish.

You'll want to know: strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum

strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum — "vigorous, active".

Agricola strēnuus ā prīmā lūce labōrat.

The vigorous farmer works from first light.

Brisk and energetic, in work or in war. English strenuous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

strēnuus is a native Latin adjective; Lewis & Short and EtymDB compare Greek stereos "firm, hard", but the link is not settled. English strenuous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum
- Say it: strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum
- Recall: say the Latin for sloth, then the Latin for sluggish, then say strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum again

Before you move on

What does strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum mean? ("Vigorous, active".) Say it once more.

508.5 assiduus, assidua, assiduum — diligent, unremitting

Before the new one: say the Latin for sluggish, then the Latin for vigorous.

You'll want to know: assiduus, assidua, assiduum

assiduus, assidua, assiduum — "diligent, unremitting".

Discipulus assiduus semper in scholā est.

The diligent pupil is always at school.

From assideō — to sit beside: someone who stays at the task. English assiduous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

assiduus is built on assideō "to sit beside", from ad- and sedeō "to sit" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English assiduous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: assiduus, assidua, assiduum
- Say it: assiduus, assidua, assiduum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with assiduus, assidua, assiduum
- Recall: say the Latin for sluggish, then the Latin for vigorous, then say assiduus, assidua, assiduum again

Before you move on

What does assiduus, assidua, assiduum mean? ("Diligent, unremitting".) Say it once more.

Chapter 509

Courage and good sense

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about courage, rashness and good sense.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 509: I can talk about courage, rashness and good sense.

509.1 fortitūdō, fortitūdinis — courage, bravery

> Before the new one: say the Latin for vigorous, then the Latin for diligent.

You'll want to know: fortitūdō, fortitūdinis

fortitūdō, fortitūdinis — "courage, bravery".

> Mīlitēs magnā fortitūdine pugnant.
>
> The soldiers fight with great courage.

Feminine, third declension, from fortis. One of the four great virtues of ancient ethics. English fortitude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fortitūdō is built on fortis "strong, brave" with -tūdō (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English fortitude comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fortitūdō, fortitūdinis
- Say it: fortitūdō, fortitūdinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fortitūdō, fortitūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for vigorous, then the Latin for diligent, then say fortitūdō, fortitūdinis again

Before you move on

What does fortitūdō, fortitūdinis mean? ("Courage, bravery".) Say it once more.

509.2 audācia, audāciae — boldness, daring

Before the new one: say the Latin for diligent, then the Latin for courage.

You'll want to know: audācia, audāciae

audācia, audāciae — "boldness, daring".

Audācia nautae omnēs servat.

The sailor's daring saves everyone.

Feminine, first declension, from audāx. Often in a bad sense: recklessness, impudence. English audacity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

audācia is built on audāx "bold", from audeō "to dare" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English audacity comes from the same adjective.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: audācia, audāciae
- Say it: audācia, audāciae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with audācia, audāciae
- Recall: say the Latin for diligent, then the Latin for courage, then say audācia, audāciae again

Before you move on

What does audācia, audāciae mean? ("Boldness, daring".) Say it once more.

509.3 temerārius, temerāria, temerārium — rash, reckless

Before the new one: say the Latin for courage, then the Latin for boldness.

You'll want to know: temerārius, temerāria, temerārium

temerārius, temerāria, temerārium — "rash, reckless".

Iuvenis temerārius in flūmen altum salit.

The rash young man jumps into the deep river.

From the adverb temere — blindly, by chance. English temerity comes from the related temeritās.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

temerārius is built on the adverb temere "blindly, by chance" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English temerity comes from the related temeritās.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: temerārius, temerāria, temerārium
- Say it: temerārius, temerāria, temerārium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with temerārius, temerāria, temerārium
- Recall: say the Latin for courage, then the Latin for boldness, then say temerārius, temerāria, temerārium again

Before you move on

What does temerārius, temerāria, temerārium mean? ("Rash, reckless".) Say it once more.

509.4 cōnstāns, cōnstantis — steadfast, consistent

Before the new one: say the Latin for boldness, then the Latin for rash.

You'll want to know: cōnstāns, cōnstantis

cōnstāns, cōnstantis — "steadfast, consistent".

Amīcus cōnstāns in perīculīs nōn fugit.

A steadfast friend does not run away in danger.

One ending. The present participle of cōnstō — to stand firm. English constant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnstāns is the present participle of cōnstō "to stand firm", built on con- and stō "to stand" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English constant comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnstāns, cōnstantis
- Say it: cōnstāns, cōnstantis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnstāns, cōnstantis
- Recall: say the Latin for boldness, then the Latin for rash, then say cōnstāns, cōnstantis again

Before you move on

What does cōnstāns, cōnstantis mean? ("Steadfast, consistent".) Say it once more.

509.5 prūdentia, prūdentiae — good sense, prudence

Before the new one: say the Latin for rash, then the Latin for steadfast.

You'll want to know: prūdentia, prūdentiae

prūdentia, prūdentiae — "good sense, prudence".

Prūdentiā patris familia servātur.

The family is saved by the father's good sense.

Feminine, first declension, from prūdēns, a short form of prōvidēns — foreseeing. English prudence.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prūdentia is built on prūdēns "wise", a shortened prōvidēns "foreseeing" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB links it with prōvidentia). English prudence comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prūdentia, prūdentiae
- Say it: prūdentia, prūdentiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prūdentia, prūdentiae
- Recall: say the Latin for rash, then the Latin for steadfast, then say prūdentia, prūdentiae again

Before you move on

What does prūdentia, prūdentiae mean? ("Good sense, prudence".) Say it once more.

Chapter 510

Folly and madness

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe foolish and crazy behaviour.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 510: I can describe foolish and crazy behaviour.

510.1 ineptus, inepta, ineptum — silly, foolish; tactless

Before the new one: say the Latin for steadfast, then the Latin for good sense.

You'll want to know: ineptus, inepta, ineptum

ineptus, inepta, ineptum — "silly, foolish; tactless".

> Fābula inepta est, sed puerī rīdent.
>
> The story is silly, but the children laugh.

in- 'not' + aptus 'fitting': someone who says the wrong thing at the wrong time. English inept.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ineptus is built on in- "not" and aptus "fitting" (Lewis & Short). English inept comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ineptus, inepta, ineptum
- Say it: ineptus, inepta, ineptum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ineptus, inepta, ineptum
- Recall: say the Latin for steadfast, then the Latin for good sense, then say ineptus, inepta, ineptum again

Before you move on

What does ineptus, inepta, ineptum mean? ("Silly, foolish; tactless".) Say it once more.

510.2 īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum — mad, insane

Before the new one: say the Latin for good sense, then the Latin for silly.

You'll want to know: īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum

īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum — "mad, insane".

Vir īnsānus in viā clāmat.

A madman is shouting in the street.

in- 'not' + sānus 'healthy'. Also of wild, crazy plans. English insane.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnsānus is built on in- "not" and sānus "sound, healthy" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English insane comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum
- Say it: īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum
- Recall: say the Latin for good sense, then the Latin for silly, then say īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum again

Before you move on

What does īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum mean? ("Mad, insane".) Say it once more.

510.3 īnsānia, īnsāniae — madness, folly

Before the new one: say the Latin for silly, then the Latin for mad.

You'll want to know: īnsānia, īnsāniae

īnsānia, īnsāniae — "madness, folly".

Haec īnsānia est, nōn cōnsilium.

This is madness, not a plan.

Feminine, first declension, from īnsānus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children īnsānia is built on īnsānus "mad" (Lewis & Short). English insanity comes from the related īnsānitās.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnsānia, īnsāniae
- Say it: īnsānia, īnsāniae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnsānia, īnsāniae
- Recall: say the Latin for silly, then the Latin for mad, then say īnsānia, īnsāniae again

Before you move on

What does īnsānia, īnsāniae mean? ("Madness, folly".) Say it once more.

510.4 dēmēns, dēmentis — out of one's mind, crazy

Before the new one: say the Latin for mad, then the Latin for madness.

You'll want to know: dēmēns, dēmentis

dēmēns, dēmentis — "out of one's mind, crazy".

Dēmēns es, sī in tempestāte nāvigās.

You are out of your mind if you sail in a storm.

One ending. dē- 'away from' + mēns 'mind'. English demented.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēmēns is built on dē- "away from" and mēns "mind" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English demented comes from the related Late Latin verb dēmentō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēmēns, dēmentis
- Say it: dēmēns, dēmentis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēmēns, dēmentis
- Recall: say the Latin for mad, then the Latin for madness, then say dēmēns, dēmentis again

Before you move on

What does dēmēns, dēmentis mean? ("Out of one's mind, crazy".) Say it once more.

510.5 dēlīrō, dēlīrāre — to be delirious, talk nonsense

Before the new one: say the Latin for madness, then the Latin for out of one's mind.

You'll want to know: dēlīrō, dēlīrāre

dēlīrō, dēlīrāre — "to be delirious, talk nonsense".

Aeger febrī dēlīrat.

The patient is delirious with fever.

dēlīrō, dēlīrāre, dēlīrāvī: dē 'out of' + līra 'furrow' — to plough crooked, then to wander in mind. English delirium.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēlīrō is built on dē- "away from" and līra "a furrow" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): first to plough out of the line, then to wander in mind. English delirious and delirium come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēlīrō, dēlīrāre
- Say it: dēlīrō, dēlīrāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēlīrō, dēlīrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for madness, then the Latin for out of one's mind, then say dēlīrō, dēlīrāre again

Before you move on

What does dēlīrō, dēlīrāre mean? ("To be delirious, talk nonsense".) Say it once more.

Chapter 511

Cruelty and gentleness

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about cruelty and gentleness.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 511: I can talk about cruelty and gentleness.

511.1 crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis — cruelty

Before the new one: say the Latin for out of one's mind, then the Latin for to be delirious.

You'll want to know: crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis

crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis — "cruelty".

> Crūdēlitās dominī servōs terret.
>
> The master's cruelty frightens the slaves.

Feminine, third declension, from crūdēlis. English cruelty.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crūdēlitās is built on crūdēlis "cruel", itself related to crūdus "raw" (Lewis & Short). English cruelty comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis
- Say it: crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for out of one's mind, then the Latin for to be delirious, then say crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis again

Before you move on

What does crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis mean? ("Cruelty".) Say it once more.

511.2 saevitia, saevitiae — fury, savagery

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be delirious, then the Latin for cruelty.

You'll want to know: saevitia, saevitiae

saevitia, saevitiae — "fury, savagery".

Saevitia tempestātis nautās terret.

The fury of the storm frightens the sailors.

Feminine, first declension, from saevus — fierce. Of beasts, storms and harsh masters.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saevitia is built on saevus "fierce, savage" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB); the origin of saevus is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: saevitia, saevitiae
- Say it: saevitia, saevitiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with saevitia, saevitiae
- Recall: say the Latin for to be delirious, then the Latin for cruelty, then say saevitia, saevitiae again

Before you move on

What does saevitia, saevitiae mean? ("Fury, savagery".) Say it once more.

511.3 laedō, laedere — to hurt, harm; to offend

Before the new one: say the Latin for cruelty, then the Latin for fury.

You'll want to know: laedō, laedere

laedō, laedere — "to hurt, harm; to offend".

Verba tua amīcum laedunt.

Your words hurt your friend.

laedō, laedere, laesī, laesum. Of the body and of feelings. English lesion.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

laedō is a native Latin verb; Lewis & Short offers a guess at its root, but the origin is not settled. English lesion comes from its participle laesus, and collide from the compound collīdō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: laedō, laedere
- Say it: laedō, laedere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with laedō, laedere
- Recall: say the Latin for cruelty, then the Latin for fury, then say laedō, laedere again

Before you move on

What does laedō, laedere mean? ("To hurt, harm; to offend".) Say it once more.

511.4 mītigō, mītigāre — to ease, soften, calm

Before the new one: say the Latin for fury, then the Latin for to hurt.

You'll want to know: mītigō, mītigāre

mītigō, mītigāre — "to ease, soften, calm".

Vīnum dolōrem mītigat.

Wine eases pain.

mītigō, mītigāre, mītigāvī, mītigātum: mītis 'mild' + agō 'to make'. English mitigate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mītigō is built on mītis "mild" and agō "to drive, make" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English mitigate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mītigō, mītigāre
- Say it: mītigō, mītigāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mītigō, mītigāre
- Recall: say the Latin for fury, then the Latin for to hurt, then say mītigō, mītigāre again

Before you move on

What does mītigō, mītigāre mean? ("To ease, soften, calm".) Say it once more.

511.5 mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum — tame; gentle

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hurt, then the Latin for to ease.

You'll want to know: mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum

mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum — "tame; gentle".

Leō in amphitheātrō mānsuētus est.

The lion in the amphitheatre is tame.

The participle of mānsuēscō: manus 'hand' + suēscō 'to get used to' — used to the hand.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mānsuētus is the participle of mānsuēscō "to grow tame", built on manus "hand" and suēscō "to become used to" (Lewis & Short): used to the hand.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum
- Say it: mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum
- Recall: say the Latin for to hurt, then the Latin for to ease, then say mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum again

Before you move on

What does mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum mean? ("Tame; gentle".) Say it once more.

Chapter 512

Gratitude and praise

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about thanks, praise and blame.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 512: I can talk about thanks, praise and blame.

512.1 grātus, grāta, grātum — welcome, pleasing; grateful

Before the new one: say the Latin for to ease, then the Latin for tame.

You'll want to know: grātus, grāta, grātum

grātus, grāta, grātum — "welcome, pleasing; grateful".

> Epistula tua mihi grāta est.
>
> Your letter is welcome to me.

Two sides: pleasing to someone (with the dative), and grateful for something. Grātiās agō, already known, belongs here. English grateful.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

grātus is inherited and traced to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to praise, welcome" (EtymDB); Lewis & Short compares Greek charis. English grateful and gratitude come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: grātus, grāta, grātum
- Say it: grātus, grāta, grātum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with grātus, grāta, grātum
- Recall: say the Latin for to ease, then the Latin for tame, then say grātus, grāta, grātum again

Before you move on

What does grātus, grāta, grātum mean? ("Welcome, pleasing; grateful".) Say it once more.

512.2 ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum — ungrateful; unpleasant

Before the new one: say the Latin for tame, then the Latin for welcome.

You'll want to know: ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum

ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum — "ungrateful; unpleasant".

Fīlius ingrātus parentēs nōn vīsitat.

The ungrateful son does not visit his parents.

in- 'not' + grātus. English ingrate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ingrātus is built on in- "not" and grātus "pleasing, grateful" (Lewis & Short). English ingratitude and ingrate come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum
- Say it: ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum
- Recall: say the Latin for tame, then the Latin for welcome, then say ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum again

Before you move on

What does ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum mean? ("Ungrateful; unpleasant".) Say it once more.

512.3 meritum, meritī — a kindness, service; merit

Before the new one: say the Latin for welcome, then the Latin for ungrateful.

You'll want to know: meritum, meritī

meritum, meritī — "a kindness, service; merit".

Prō meritīs tuīs tibi grātiās agō.

I thank you for your kindnesses.

Neuter, second declension, from mereō — to earn. A good deed that deserves thanks. English merit.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

meritum is the neuter past participle of mereō "to earn, deserve", used as a noun (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English merit comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: meritum, meritī
- Say it: meritum, meritī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with meritum, meritī
- Recall: say the Latin for welcome, then the Latin for ungrateful, then say meritum, meritī again

Before you move on

What does meritum, meritī mean? ("A kindness, service; merit".) Say it once more.

512.4 laus, laudis — praise

Before the new one: say the Latin for ungrateful, then the Latin for a kindness.

You'll want to know: laus, laudis

laus, laudis — "praise".

Mīles laudem ducis accipit.

The soldier receives the general's praise.

Feminine, third declension. Laudō, already known, comes from it. English laud.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

laus is a native Latin noun, and laudō "to praise" is built on it (Lewis & Short). Lewis & Short links it with clueō "to be spoken of", but the origin is not settled. English laud and laudable come from the family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: laus, laudis
- Say it: laus, laudis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with laus, laudis
- Recall: say the Latin for ungrateful, then the Latin for a kindness, then say laus, laudis again

Before you move on

What does laus, laudis mean? ("Praise".) Say it once more.

512.5 vituperō, vituperāre — to blame, scold

Before the new one: say the Latin for a kindness, then the Latin for praise.

You'll want to know: vituperō, vituperāre

vituperō, vituperāre — "to blame, scold".

Magister discipulum pigrum vituperat.

The teacher scolds the lazy pupil.

vituperō, vituperāre, vituperāvī, vituperātum, the opposite of laudō. English vituperation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vituperō is built on vitium "a fault" and parō "to prepare" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): to make out a fault. English vituperate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vituperō, vituperāre
- Say it: vituperō, vituperāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vituperō, vituperāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a kindness, then the Latin for praise, then say vituperō, vituperāre again

Before you move on

What does vituperō, vituperāre mean? ("To blame, scold".) Say it once more.

512.6 Words from chapters 505–512 — a review

Say the Latin for merciful and mercy.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- merciful, mercy, kindness, kindly, goodwill
- courteous, friendliness, refinement, country manners, generosity
- pride, arrogant, arrogance, insolent, boastfulness
- cowardice, sloth, sluggish, vigorous, diligent
- courage, boldness, rash, steadfast, good sense
- silly, mad, madness, out of one's mind, to be delirious

- cruelty, fury, to hurt, to ease, tame
- welcome, ungrateful, a kindness, praise, to blame

Before you move on

Merciful? (clēmēns, clēmentis.) Mercy? (clēmentia, clēmentiae.) Kindness? (benignitās, benignitātis.) Kindly? (benevolus, benevola, benevolum.) Goodwill? (benevolentia, benevolentiae.) Courteous? (cōmis, cōme.) Friendliness? (cōmitās, cōmitātis.) Refinement? (urbānitās, urbānitātis.) Country manners? (rūsticitās, rūsticitātis.) Generosity? (līberālitās, līberālitātis.) Pride? (superbia, superbiae.) Arrogant? (arrogāns, arrogantis.) Arrogance? (arrogantia, arrogantiae.) Insolent? (īnsolēns, īnsolentis.) Boastfulness? (vānitās, vānitātis.) Cowardice? (ignāvia, ignāviae.) Sloth? (pigritia, pigritiae.) Sluggish? (segnis, segne.) Vigorous? (strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum.) Diligent? (assiduus, assidua, assiduum.) Courage? (fortitūdō, fortitūdinis.) Boldness? (audācia, audāciae.) Rash? (temerārius, temerāria, temerārium.) Steadfast? (cōnstāns, cōnstantis.) Good sense? (prūdentia, prūdentiae.) Silly? (ineptus, inepta, ineptum.) Mad? (īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum.) Madness? (īnsānia, īnsāniae.) Out of one's mind? (dēmēns, dēmentis.) To be delirious? (dēlīrō, dēlīrāre.) Cruelty? (crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis.) Fury? (saevitia, saevitiae.) To hurt? (laedō, laedere.) To ease? (mītigō, mītigāre.) Tame? (mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum.) Welcome? (grātus, grāta, grātum.) Ungrateful? (ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum.) A kindness? (meritum, meritī.) Praise? (laus, laudis.) To blame? (vituperō, vituperāre.)

Chapter 513

Pity and shame

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about pity, compassion and shame.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 513: I can talk about pity, compassion and shame.

513.1 misericors, misericordis — compassionate, merciful

Before the new one: say the Latin for praise, then the Latin for to blame.

You'll want to know: misericors, misericordis

misericors, misericordis — "compassionate, merciful".

> Fēmina misericors pauperibus cibum dat.
>
> The compassionate woman gives food to the poor.

One ending: miser 'wretched' + cor 'heart' — with a heart for the wretched.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

misericors is built on miser "wretched" and cor "heart" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: misericors, misericordis
- Say it: misericors, misericordis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with misericors, misericordis
- Recall: say the Latin for praise, then the Latin for to blame, then say misericors, misericordis again

Before you move on

What does misericors, misericordis mean? ("Compassionate, merciful".) Say it once more.

513.2 misericordia, misericordiae — pity, compassion

Before the new one: say the Latin for to blame, then the Latin for compassionate.

You'll want to know: misericordia, misericordiae

misericordia, misericordiae — "pity, compassion".

Misericordiā mōtus, pauperī pecūniam dat.

Moved by pity, he gives the poor man money.

Feminine, first declension, from misericors.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

misericordia is built on misericors "compassionate", from miser and cor "heart" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: misericordia, misericordiae
- Say it: misericordia, misericordiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with misericordia, misericordiae
- Recall: say the Latin for to blame, then the Latin for compassionate, then say misericordia, misericordiae again

Before you move on

What does misericordia, misericordiae mean? ("Pity, compassion".) Say it once more.

513.3 misereor, miserērī — to pity, feel sorry for

Before the new one: say the Latin for compassionate, then the Latin for pity.

You'll want to know: misereor, miserērī

misereor, miserērī — "to pity, feel sorry for".

Miserēmur puerōrum, quī nūllōs parentēs habent.

We pity the children who have no parents.

Deponent: misereor, miserērī, miseritus sum, with the genitive: tuī misereor — I pity you.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

misereor is built on miser "wretched, pitiable" (Lewis & Short). English misery comes from miseria, from the same adjective.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: misereor, miserērī
- Say it: misereor, miserērī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with misereor, miserērī
- Recall: say the Latin for compassionate, then the Latin for pity, then say misereor, miserērī again

Before you move on

What does misereor, miserērī mean? ("To pity, feel sorry for".) Say it once more.

513.4 pudet, pudēre — it shames, one is ashamed

Before the new one: say the Latin for pity, then the Latin for to pity.

You'll want to know: pudet, pudēre

pudet, pudēre — "it shames, one is ashamed".

Mē pudet errōris meī.

I am ashamed of my mistake.

Impersonal: pudet, pudēre, puduit. The person in the accusative, the cause in the genitive. Pudor, already known, is shame.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pudet is the impersonal use of pudeō "to be ashamed", and pudor "shame" is built on it (Lewis & Short). English impudent comes from the family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pudet, pudēre
- Say it: pudet, pudēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pudet, pudēre
- Recall: say the Latin for pity, then the Latin for to pity, then say pudet, pudēre again

Before you move on

What does pudet, pudēre mean? ("It shames, one is ashamed".) Say it once more.

513.5 verēcundia, verēcundiae — shyness, modesty

Before the new one: say the Latin for to pity, then the Latin for it shames.

You'll want to know: verēcundia, verēcundiae

verēcundia, verēcundiae — "shyness, modesty".

Puella prae verēcundiā tacet.

The girl stays silent out of shyness.

Feminine, first declension, from verēcundus — shy, modest. A gentle sense of shame.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

verēcundia is built on verēcundus "modest, shy", from vereor "to respect, fear" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: verēcundia, verēcundiae
- Say it: verēcundia, verēcundiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with verēcundia, verēcundiae
- Recall: say the Latin for to pity, then the Latin for it shames, then say verēcundia, verēcundiae again

Before you move on

What does verēcundia, verēcundiae mean? ("Shyness, modesty".) Say it once more.

Chapter 514

Scorn and displeasure

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about scorn and displeasure.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 514: I can talk about scorn and displeasure.

514.1 contemnō, contemnere — to despise, scorn

> Before the new one: say the Latin for it shames, then the Latin for shyness.

You'll want to know: contemnō, contemnere

contemnō, contemnere — "to despise, scorn".

> Sapiēns pecūniam contemnit.
>
> The wise man despises money.

contemnō, contemnere, contempsī, contemptum, with the accusative. English contempt.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

contemnō is built on con- and temnō "to scorn" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English contempt and contemptible come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: contemnō, contemnere
- Say it: contemnō, contemnere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with contemnō, contemnere
- Recall: say the Latin for it shames, then the Latin for shyness, then say contemnō, contemnere again

Before you move on

What does contemnō, contemnere mean? ("To despise, scorn".) Say it once more.

514.2 spernō, spernere — to reject, spurn

Before the new one: say the Latin for shyness, then the Latin for to despise.

You'll want to know: spernō, spernere

spernō, spernere — "to reject, spurn".

Puella amōrem iuvenis spernit.

The girl rejects the young man's love.

spernō, spernere, sprēvī, sprētum. Stronger than contemnō: to push away.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spernō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root sper- (EtymDB), and English spurn is a cousin from the same root (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: spernō, spernere
- Say it: spernō, spernere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with spernō, spernere
- Recall: say the Latin for shyness, then the Latin for to despise, then say spernō, spernere again

Before you move on

What does spernō, spernere mean? ("To reject, spurn".) Say it once more.

514.3 dēspiciō, dēspicere — to look down on, despise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to despise, then the Latin for to reject.

You'll want to know: dēspiciō, dēspicere

dēspiciō, dēspicere — "to look down on, despise".

Dīves pauperēs dēspicit.

The rich man looks down on the poor.

dēspiciō, dēspicere, dēspexī, dēspectum: dē 'down' + speciō 'to look'. English despise.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēspiciō is built on dē- "down" and speciō "to behold" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English despise comes from it through Old French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēspiciō, dēspicere
- Say it: dēspiciō, dēspicere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēspiciō, dēspicere
- Recall: say the Latin for to despise, then the Latin for to reject, then say dēspiciō, dēspicere again

Before you move on

What does dēspiciō, dēspicere mean? ("To look down on, despise".) Say it once more.

514.4 indignātiō, indignātiōnis — indignation, outrage

Before the new one: say the Latin for to reject, then the Latin for to look down on.

You'll want to know: indignātiō, indignātiōnis

indignātiō, indignātiōnis — "indignation, outrage".

Cīvēs magnā cum indignātiōne clāmant.

The citizens shout with great indignation.

Feminine, third declension, from indignor. English indignation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

indignātiō is the action noun of indignor "to be indignant" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English indignation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: indignātiō, indignātiōnis
- Say it: indignātiō, indignātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with indignātiō, indignātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to reject, then the Latin for to look down on, then say indignātiō, indignātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does indignātiō, indignātiōnis mean? ("Indignation, outrage".) Say it once more.

514.5 displiceō, displicēre — to displease

Before the new one: say the Latin for to look down on, then the Latin for indignation.

You'll want to know: displiceō, displicēre

displiceō, displicēre — "to displease".

Haec verba mihi valdē displicent.

These words displease me greatly.

displiceō, displicēre, displicuī, displicitum, with the dative; the opposite of placeō. English displease.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

displiceō is built on dis- "apart, not" and placeō "to please" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English displease comes from it through Old French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: displiceō, displicēre
- Say it: displiceō, displicēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with displiceō, displicēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to look down on, then the Latin for indignation, then say displiceō, displicēre again

Before you move on

What does displiceō, displicēre mean? ("To displease".) Say it once more.

Chapter 515

The face

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a face.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 515: I can describe a face.

515.1 vultus, vultūs — face, expression

> Before the new one: say the Latin for indignation, then the Latin for to displease.

You'll want to know: vultus, vultūs

vultus, vultūs — "face, expression".

> Vultus mātris laetus est.
>
> Mother's face is happy.

Masculine, fourth declension. The face as it shows feeling and mood.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vultus is a native Latin noun; EtymDB links it with a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to see", while Lewis & Short calls it doubtful, so the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vultus, vultūs
- Say it: vultus, vultūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vultus, vultūs
- Recall: say the Latin for indignation, then the Latin for to displease, then say vultus, vultūs again

Before you move on

What does vultus, vultūs mean? ("Face, expression".) Say it once more.

515.2 faciēs, faciēī — appearance, shape; face

Before the new one: say the Latin for to displease, then the Latin for face.

You'll want to know: faciēs, faciēī

faciēs, faciēī — "appearance, shape; face".

Puer faciem in aquā lavat.

The boy washes his face in the water.

Feminine, fifth declension. The shape and look of a face, or of anything; vultus is the face as it shows feeling. English face.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

faciēs is usually traced to the root of faciō "to make" (EtymDB): the make of a thing, its shape; Lewis & Short links it with fax "torch" instead. English face and surface come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: faciēs, faciēī
- Say it: faciēs, faciēī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with faciēs, faciēī
- Recall: say the Latin for to displease, then the Latin for face, then say faciēs, faciēī again

Before you move on

What does faciēs, faciēī mean? ("Appearance, shape; face".) Say it once more.

515.3 crīnis, crīnis — hair, a lock of hair

Before the new one: say the Latin for face, then the Latin for appearance.

You'll want to know: crīnis, crīnis

crīnis, crīnis — "hair, a lock of hair".

Crīnēs puellae longī et flāvī sunt.

The girl's hair is long and golden.

Masculine, third declension; usually plural. A word of poetry and fine prose; capillus is the everyday word.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crīnis is a native Latin noun; Lewis & Short and EtymDB compare crista "crest", but the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: crīnis, crīnis
- Say it: crīnis, crīnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with crīnis, crīnis
- Recall: say the Latin for face, then the Latin for appearance, then say crīnis, crīnis again

Before you move on

What does crīnis, crīnis mean? ("Hair, a lock of hair".) Say it once more.

515.4 supercilium, superciliī — eyebrow

Before the new one: say the Latin for appearance, then the Latin for hair.

You'll want to know: supercilium, superciliī

supercilium, superciliī — "eyebrow".

Senex supercilia alba habet.

The old man has white eyebrows.

Neuter, second declension. Also a frown, and so pride: supercilium — haughtiness. English supercilious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

supercilium is built on super "above" and cilium "eyelid" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English supercilious comes from it, from a raised eyebrow.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: supercilium, superciliī
- Say it: supercilium, superciliī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with supercilium, superciliī
- Recall: say the Latin for appearance, then the Latin for hair, then say supercilium, superciliī again

Before you move on

What does supercilium, superciliī mean? ("Eyebrow".) Say it once more.

515.5 palpebra, palpebrae — eyelid

Before the new one: say the Latin for hair, then the Latin for eyebrow.

You'll want to know: palpebra, palpebrae

palpebra, palpebrae — "eyelid".

Puer fessus palpebrās claudit.

The tired boy closes his eyelids.

Feminine, first declension; usually plural. English palpebral, in medicine.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

palpebra is built on palpō "to stroke, touch softly" (EtymDB), with an ending for a tool: the soft lid that strokes the eye.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: palpebra, palpebrae
- Say it: palpebra, palpebrae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with palpebra, palpebrae
- Recall: say the Latin for hair, then the Latin for eyebrow, then say palpebra, palpebrae again

Before you move on

What does palpebra, palpebrae mean? ("Eyelid".) Say it once more.

Chapter 516

Throat, neck and limbs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the throat, the neck and the limbs.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 516: I can name the throat, the neck and the limbs.

516.1 guttur, gutturis — throat, gullet

> Before the new one: say the Latin for eyebrow, then the Latin for eyelid.

You'll want to know: guttur, gutturis

guttur, gutturis — "throat, gullet".

> Guttur mihi dolet.
>
> My throat hurts.

Neuter, third declension. English guttural — of the throat.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

guttur is inherited; EtymDB traces it to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "a swelling, rounding". English guttural comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: guttur, gutturis
- Say it: guttur, gutturis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with guttur, gutturis
- Recall: say the Latin for eyebrow, then the Latin for eyelid, then say guttur, gutturis again

Before you move on

What does guttur, gutturis mean? ("Throat, gullet".) Say it once more.

516.2 faucēs, faucium — jaws, the back of the mouth; a narrow pass

Before the new one: say the Latin for eyelid, then the Latin for throat.

You'll want to know: faucēs, faucium

faucēs, faucium — "jaws, the back of the mouth; a narrow pass".

Leō faucēs aperit.

The lion opens its jaws.

Feminine, third declension, plural. The back of the mouth; also a narrow entrance to a valley or a harbour.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

faucēs is a native Latin noun; Lewis & Short compares a Sanskrit word for "opening", but the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: faucēs, faucium
- Say it: faucēs, faucium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with faucēs, faucium
- Recall: say the Latin for eyelid, then the Latin for throat, then say faucēs, faucium again

Before you move on

What does faucēs, faucium mean? ("Jaws, the back of the mouth; a narrow pass".) Say it once more.

516.3 cervīx, cervīcis — neck, nape

Before the new one: say the Latin for throat, then the Latin for jaws.

You'll want to know: cervīx, cervīcis

cervīx, cervīcis — "neck, nape".

Servus sarcinam in cervīcibus portat.

The slave carries the pack on his neck.

Feminine, third declension; often plural cervīcēs. English cervical.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cervīx is inherited; EtymDB traces it to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "horn, head". English cervical comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cervīx, cervīcis
- Say it: cervīx, cervīcis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cervīx, cervīcis
- Recall: say the Latin for throat, then the Latin for jaws, then say cervīx, cervīcis again

Before you move on

What does cervīx, cervīcis mean? ("Neck, nape".) Say it once more.

516.4 membrum, membrī — a limb; a member

Before the new one: say the Latin for jaws, then the Latin for neck.

You'll want to know: membrum, membrī

membrum, membrī — "a limb; a member".

Post longum iter membra mea dolent.

After the long journey my limbs ache.

Neuter, second declension. Also a member of a group. English member.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

membrum is inherited through Proto-Italic from a Proto-Indo-European word for "flesh" (EtymDB). English member comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: membrum, membrī
- Say it: membrum, membrī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with membrum, membrī
- Recall: say the Latin for jaws, then the Latin for neck, then say membrum, membrī again

Before you move on

What does membrum, membrī mean? ("A limb; a member".) Say it once more.

516.5 artus, artuum — joints, limbs

Before the new one: say the Latin for neck, then the Latin for a limb.

You'll want to know: artus, artuum

artus, artuum — "joints, limbs".

Frīgus artūs senis rigidōs facit.

The cold makes the old man's joints stiff.

Masculine, fourth declension, nearly always plural; dative and ablative artubus. English article, a little joint, comes from its diminutive.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

artus belongs with arma and a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to fit together" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English article comes from its diminutive articulus "a little joint".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: artus, artuum
- Say it: artus, artuum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with artus, artuum
- Recall: say the Latin for neck, then the Latin for a limb, then say artus, artuum again

Before you move on

What does artus, artuum mean? ("Joints, limbs".) Say it once more.

Chapter 517

Inside the body

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about veins, sinews, skin and sweat.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 517: I can talk about veins, sinews, skin and sweat.

517.1 vēna, vēnae — a vein

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a limb, then the Latin for joints.

You'll want to know: vēna, vēnae

vēna, vēnae — "a vein".

> Sanguis per vēnās currit.
>
> Blood runs through the veins.

Feminine, first declension. Also a vein of metal, or of talent. English vein.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēna is a native Latin noun; Lewis & Short guesses a link with vehō "to carry", but the origin is not settled. English vein comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vēna, vēnae
- Say it: vēna, vēnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vēna, vēnae
- Recall: say the Latin for a limb, then the Latin for joints, then say vēna, vēnae again

Before you move on

What does vēna, vēnae mean? ("A vein".) Say it once more.

517.2 nervus, nervī — a sinew, tendon; a string

Before the new one: say the Latin for joints, then the Latin for a vein.

You'll want to know: nervus, nervī

nervus, nervī — "a sinew, tendon; a string".

Faber nervōs firmōs habet.

The smith has strong sinews.

Masculine, second declension. In the plural also strength, vigour. English nerve.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nervus is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European word for "sinew, tendon", and Greek neuron is a cousin (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English nerve comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nervus, nervī
- Say it: nervus, nervī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nervus, nervī
- Recall: say the Latin for joints, then the Latin for a vein, then say nervus, nervī again

Before you move on

What does nervus, nervī mean? ("A sinew, tendon; a string".) Say it once more.

517.3 pellis, pellis — a hide, skin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a vein, then the Latin for a sinew.

You'll want to know: pellis, pellis

pellis, pellis — "a hide, skin".

Pāstor pellem ovis vendit.

The shepherd sells the sheep's hide.

Feminine, third declension. Mostly an animal's hide; cutis is skin as part of the body.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pellis is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to cover, skin" (EtymDB), and Old English fell "hide" is a cousin. English pellicle, a thin skin, comes from its diminutive.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pellis, pellis
- Say it: pellis, pellis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pellis, pellis
- Recall: say the Latin for a vein, then the Latin for a sinew, then say pellis, pellis again

Before you move on

What does pellis, pellis mean? ("A hide, skin".) Say it once more.

517.4 sūdor, sūdōris — sweat

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sinew, then the Latin for a hide.

You'll want to know: sūdor, sūdōris

sūdor, sūdōris — "sweat".

Sūdor dē fronte agricolae fluit.

Sweat flows from the farmer's brow.

Masculine, third declension, from sūdō — to sweat.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sūdor is built on sūdō "to sweat", inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to sweat"; English sweat is a cousin (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sūdor, sūdōris
- Say it: sūdor, sūdōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sūdor, sūdōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a sinew, then the Latin for a hide, then say sūdor, sūdōris again

Before you move on

What does sūdor, sūdōris mean? ("Sweat".) Say it once more.

517.5 pulsus, pulsūs — a beat, pulse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hide, then the Latin for sweat.

You'll want to know: pulsus, pulsūs

pulsus, pulsūs — "a beat, pulse".

Medicus pulsum vēnārum temptat.

The doctor tests the beat of the veins.

Masculine, fourth declension, from pellō — to strike, push. Pulsus vēnārum — the pulse. English pulse.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulsus is the action noun of pellō "to push, strike" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English pulse and repulse come from the family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pulsus, pulsūs
- Say it: pulsus, pulsūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pulsus, pulsūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a hide, then the Latin for sweat, then say pulsus, pulsūs again

Before you move on

What does pulsus, pulsūs mean? ("A beat, pulse".) Say it once more.

Chapter 518

Side, hip and foot

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the side, the hip, the heel and the sole.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 518: I can name the side, the hip, the heel and the sole.

518.1 latus, lateris — side, flank

Before the new one: say the Latin for sweat, then the Latin for a beat.

You'll want to know: latus, lateris

latus, lateris — "side, flank".

> Dolor in latere sinistrō est.
>
> The pain is in the left side.

Neuter, third declension. Not the adjective lātus — wide. English lateral.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

latus is a native Latin noun; Lewis & Short compares Greek platus "broad", but the origin is not settled. English lateral comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: latus, lateris
- Say it: latus, lateris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with latus, lateris
- Recall: say the Latin for sweat, then the Latin for a beat, then say latus, lateris again

Before you move on

What does latus, lateris mean? ("Side, flank".) Say it once more.

518.2 coxa, coxae — hip

Before the new one: say the Latin for a beat, then the Latin for side.

You'll want to know: coxa, coxae

coxa, coxae — "hip".

Senex in coxā dolōrem sentit.

The old man feels pain in his hip.

Feminine, first declension. French cuisse and Italian coscia — thigh — come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coxa is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European word for "hip, joint", and Old Irish cos "foot, leg" is a cousin (EtymDB). French cuisse "thigh" comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: coxa, coxae
- Say it: coxa, coxae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with coxa, coxae
- Recall: say the Latin for a beat, then the Latin for side, then say coxa, coxae again

Before you move on

What does coxa, coxae mean? ("Hip".) Say it once more.

518.3 calx, calcis — heel

Before the new one: say the Latin for side, then the Latin for hip.

You'll want to know: calx, calcis

calx, calcis — "heel".

Calx mea post longum iter dolet.

My heel hurts after the long journey.

Feminine, third declension. Another calx means lime or chalk. English recalcitrant, kicking back, comes from this one.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calx "heel" is a native Latin noun with no settled origin; Lewis & Short keeps it apart from calx "lime". English recalcitrant comes from it, through recalcitrō "to kick back".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: calx, calcis
- Say it: calx, calcis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with calx, calcis
- Recall: say the Latin for side, then the Latin for hip, then say calx, calcis again

Before you move on

What does calx, calcis mean? ("Heel".) Say it once more.

518.4 planta, plantae — sole of the foot; a sprout

Before the new one: say the Latin for hip, then the Latin for heel.

You'll want to know: planta, plantae

planta, plantae — "sole of the foot; a sprout".

Puer nūdīs plantīs in harēnā ambulat.

The boy walks on the sand with bare soles.

Feminine, first declension. Both the sole of the foot and a young plant. English plant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

planta is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European word for "sole of the foot", built on a root meaning "flat" (EtymDB). English plant comes from its second sense, a sprout.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: planta, plantae
- Say it: planta, plantae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with planta, plantae
- Recall: say the Latin for hip, then the Latin for heel, then say planta, plantae again

Before you move on

What does planta, plantae mean? ("Sole of the foot; a sprout".) Say it once more.

518.5 umbilīcus, umbilīcī — navel; the knob of a book-roll

Before the new one: say the Latin for heel, then the Latin for sole of the foot.

You'll want to know: umbilīcus, umbilīcī

umbilīcus, umbilīcī — "navel; the knob of a book-roll".

Īnfāns parvum umbilīcum habet.

The baby has a little navel.

Masculine, second declension. Also the knob on the rod of a book-roll, so ad umbilīcum addūcere — to finish a book. English umbilical.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

umbilīcus is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European word for "navel", and Greek omphalos is a cousin (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English umbilical comes from it, and navel is a distant Germanic cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: umbilīcus, umbilīcī
- Say it: umbilīcus, umbilīcī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with umbilīcus, umbilīcī
- Recall: say the Latin for heel, then the Latin for sole of the foot, then say umbilīcus, umbilīcī again

Before you move on

What does umbilīcus, umbilīcī mean? ("Navel; the knob of a book-roll".) Say it once more.

Chapter 519

The senses

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about sight, hearing, touch and smell.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 519: I can talk about sight, hearing, touch and smell.

519.1 vīsus, vīsūs — sight, vision

> Before the new one: say the Latin for sole of the foot, then the Latin for navel.

You'll want to know: vīsus, vīsūs

vīsus, vīsūs — "sight, vision".

> Senex vīsum āmittit.
>
> The old man is losing his sight.

Masculine, fourth declension, from videō. One of the five senses.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīsus is the action noun of videō "to see" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English vision comes from the related vīsiō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vīsus, vīsūs
- Say it: vīsus, vīsūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vīsus, vīsūs
- Recall: say the Latin for sole of the foot, then the Latin for navel, then say vīsus, vīsūs again

Before you move on

What does vīsus, vīsūs mean? ("Sight, vision".) Say it once more.

519.2 audītus, audītūs — hearing

Before the new one: say the Latin for navel, then the Latin for sight.

You'll want to know: audītus, audītūs

audītus, audītūs — "hearing".

Canis audītum ācrem habet.

The dog has sharp hearing.

Masculine, fourth declension, from audiō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

audītus is the action noun of audiō "to hear" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English audition comes from the related audītiō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: audītus, audītūs
- Say it: audītus, audītūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with audītus, audītūs
- Recall: say the Latin for navel, then the Latin for sight, then say audītus, audītūs again

Before you move on

What does audītus, audītūs mean? ("Hearing".) Say it once more.

519.3 tāctus, tāctūs — touch

Before the new one: say the Latin for sight, then the Latin for hearing.

You'll want to know: tāctus, tāctūs

tāctus, tāctūs — "touch".

Caecus tāctū litterās cognōscit.

The blind man recognises the letters by touch.

Masculine, fourth declension, from tangō — to touch. English tact.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tāctus is the action noun of tangō "to touch" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English tact comes from it, and contact from the compound contingō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tāctus, tāctūs
- Say it: tāctus, tāctūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tāctus, tāctūs
- Recall: say the Latin for sight, then the Latin for hearing, then say tāctus, tāctūs again

Before you move on

What does tāctus, tāctūs mean? ("Touch".) Say it once more.

519.4 olfaciō, olfacere — to smell, scent

Before the new one: say the Latin for hearing, then the Latin for touch.

You'll want to know: olfaciō, olfacere

olfaciō, olfacere — "to smell, scent".

Canis cibum olfacit.

The dog smells the food.

olfaciō, olfacere, olfēcī, olfactum: oleō 'to give off a smell' + faciō. English olfactory.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

olfaciō is built on oleō "to give off a smell" and faciō "to make" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English olfactory comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: olfaciō, olfacere
- Say it: olfaciō, olfacere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with olfaciō, olfacere
- Recall: say the Latin for hearing, then the Latin for touch, then say olfaciō, olfacere again

Before you move on

What does olfaciō, olfacere mean? ("To smell, scent".) Say it once more.

519.5 percipiō, percipere — to perceive, take in

Before the new one: say the Latin for touch, then the Latin for to smell.

You'll want to know: percipiō, percipere

percipiō, percipere — "to perceive, take in".

Oculī nostrī lūcem percipiunt.

Our eyes perceive light.

percipiō, percipere, percēpī, perceptum: per 'thoroughly' + capiō 'to take'. English perceive.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

percipiō is built on per- "thoroughly" and capiō "to take" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English perceive and perception come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: percipiō, percipere
- Say it: percipiō, percipere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with percipiō, percipere
- Recall: say the Latin for touch, then the Latin for to smell, then say percipiō, percipere again

Before you move on

What does percipiō, percipere mean? ("To perceive, take in".) Say it once more.

Chapter 520

Breathing

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe panting, sobbing, yawning and sneezing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 520: I can describe panting, sobbing, yawning and sneezing.

520.1 spīritus, spīritūs — breath; spirit

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to smell, then the Latin for to perceive.

You'll want to know: spīritus, spīritūs

spīritus, spīritūs — "breath; spirit".

> Post cursum spīritum vix dūcō.
>
> After the run I can hardly draw breath.

Masculine, fourth declension, from spīrō. Breath first, then the spirit. English spirit.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spīritus is the action noun of spīrō "to breathe" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English spirit comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: spīritus, spīritūs
- Say it: spīritus, spīritūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with spīritus, spīritūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to smell, then the Latin for to perceive, then say spīritus, spīritūs again

Before you move on

What does spīritus, spīritūs mean? ("Breath; spirit".) Say it once more.

520.2 anhēlō, anhēlāre — to pant, gasp

Before the new one: say the Latin for to perceive, then the Latin for breath.

You'll want to know: anhēlō, anhēlāre

anhēlō, anhēlāre — "to pant, gasp".

Canis post cursum anhēlat.

The dog pants after the run.

anhēlō, anhēlāre, anhēlāvī, anhēlātum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

anhēlō is built, as Lewis & Short explains it, on a prefix an- and hālō "to breathe out", but the details are not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: anhēlō, anhēlāre
- Say it: anhēlō, anhēlāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with anhēlō, anhēlāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to perceive, then the Latin for breath, then say anhēlō, anhēlāre again

Before you move on

What does anhēlō, anhēlāre mean? ("To pant, gasp".) Say it once more.

520.3 singultus, singultūs — a sob; a hiccup

Before the new one: say the Latin for breath, then the Latin for to pant.

You'll want to know: singultus, singultūs

singultus, singultūs — "a sob; a hiccup".

Puella inter singultūs loquitur.

The girl speaks between sobs.

Masculine, fourth declension. Breath broken by weeping, or a hiccup.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

singultus is usually traced to singulī "one at a time" (Lewis & Short): speech broken into single sounds.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: singultus, singultūs
- Say it: singultus, singultūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with singultus, singultūs
- Recall: say the Latin for breath, then the Latin for to pant, then say singultus, singultūs again

Before you move on

What does singultus, singultūs mean? ("A sob; a hiccup".) Say it once more.

520.4 oscitō, oscitāre — to yawn, gape

Before the new one: say the Latin for to pant, then the Latin for a sob.

You'll want to know: oscitō, oscitāre

oscitō, oscitāre — "to yawn, gape".

Discipulus fessus in scholā oscitat.

The tired pupil yawns at school.

oscitō, oscitāre: to open the mouth wide; also to be drowsy and careless.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oscitō is built on ōs "mouth" and citō "to set in motion" (EtymDB): to set the mouth moving. English oscitation "yawning" is a rare learned word from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: oscitō, oscitāre
- Say it: oscitō, oscitāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with oscitō, oscitāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to pant, then the Latin for a sob, then say oscitō, oscitāre again

Before you move on

What does oscitō, oscitāre mean? ("To yawn, gape".) Say it once more.

520.5 sternuō, sternuere — to sneeze

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sob, then the Latin for to yawn.

You'll want to know: sternuō, sternuere

sternuō, sternuere — "to sneeze".

Puer propter pulverem sternuit.

The boy sneezes because of the dust.

sternuō, sternuere, sternuī. To Roman eyes a sneeze could be an omen.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sternuō is a native Latin verb; Lewis & Short compares Greek ptarnusthai "to sneeze", but EtymDB gives no parent, so the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sternuō, sternuere
- Say it: sternuō, sternuere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sternuō, sternuere
- Recall: say the Latin for a sob, then the Latin for to yawn, then say sternuō, sternuere again

Before you move on

What does sternuō, sternuere mean? ("To sneeze".) Say it once more.

520.6 Words from chapters 513–520 — a review

Say the Latin for compassionate and pity.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- compassionate, pity, to pity, it shames, shyness
- to despise, to reject, to look down on, indignation, to displease
- face, appearance, hair, eyebrow, eyelid
- throat, jaws, neck, a limb, joints
- a vein, a sinew, a hide, sweat, a beat
- side, hip, heel, sole of the foot, navel
- sight, hearing, touch, to smell, to perceive
- breath, to pant, a sob, to yawn, to sneeze

Before you move on

Compassionate? (misericors, misericordis.) Pity? (misericordia, misericordiae.) To pity? (misereor, miserērī.)

It shames? (pudet, pudēre.) Shyness? (verēcundia, verēcundiae.) To despise? (contemnō, contemnere.) To reject? (spernō, spernere.) To look down on? (dēspiciō, dēspicere.) Indignation? (indignātiō, indignātiōnis.) To displease? (displiceō, displicēre.) Face? (vultus, vultūs.) Appearance? (faciēs, faciēī.) Hair? (crīnis, crīnis.) Eyebrow? (supercilium, supercilīī.) Eyelid? (palpebra, palpebrae.) Throat? (guttur, gutturis.) Jaws? (faucēs, faucium.) Neck? (cervīx, cervīcis.) A limb? (membrum, membrī.) Joints? (artus, artuum.) A vein? (vēna, vēnae.) A sinew? (nervus, nervī.) A hide? (pellis, pellis.) Sweat? (sūdor, sūdōris.) A beat? (pulsus, pulsūs.) Side? (latus, lateris.) Hip? (coxa, coxae.) Heel? (calx, calcis.) Sole of the foot? (planta, plantae.) Navel? (umbilīcus, umbilīcī.) Sight? (vīsus, vīsūs.) Hearing? (audītus, audītūs.) Touch? (tāctus, tāctūs.) To smell? (olfaciō, olfacere.) To perceive? (percipiō, percipere.) Breath? (spīritus, spīritūs.) To pant? (anhēlō, anhēlāre.) A sob? (singultus, singultūs.) To yawn? (oscitō, oscitāre.) To sneeze? (sternuō, sternuere.)

Chapter 521

Being ill

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone is ill and weak.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 521: I can say that someone is ill and weak.

521.1 aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum — sick, ill

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to yawn, then the Latin for to sneeze.

You'll want to know: aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum

aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum — "sick, ill".

> Fīlius aegrōtus in lectō iacet.
>
> The sick son lies in bed.

Built on aeger. As a noun, aegrōtus — a patient.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aegrōtus is built on aeger "sick" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum
- Say it: aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum
- Recall: say the Latin for to yawn, then the Latin for to sneeze, then say aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum again

Before you move on

What does aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum mean? ("Sick, ill".) Say it once more.

521.2 aegrōtō, aegrōtāre — to be ill

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sneeze, then the Latin for sick.

You'll want to know: aegrōtō, aegrōtāre

aegrōtō, aegrōtāre — "to be ill".

Avus iam trēs diēs aegrōtat.

Grandfather has been ill for three days now.

aegrōtō, aegrōtāre, aegrōtāvī, from aegrōtus. With iam, the present means has been.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aegrōtō is built on aegrōtus "sick" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aegrōtō, aegrōtāre
- Say it: aegrōtō, aegrōtāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aegrōtō, aegrōtāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to sneeze, then the Latin for sick, then say aegrōtō, aegrōtāre again

Before you move on

What does aegrōtō, aegrōtāre mean? ("To be ill".) Say it once more.

521.3 languidus, languida, languidum — faint, weak, listless

Before the new one: say the Latin for sick, then the Latin for to be ill.

You'll want to know: languidus, languida, languidum

languidus, languida, languidum — "faint, weak, listless".

> Post febrem corpus languidum est.
>
> After the fever the body is weak.

From langueō — to be faint. English languid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

languidus is built on langueō "to be faint, weary" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English languid comes from it, and languish from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: languidus, languida, languidum
- Say it: languidus, languida, languidum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with languidus, languida, languidum
- Recall: say the Latin for sick, then the Latin for to be ill, then say languidus, languida, languidum again

Before you move on

What does languidus, languida, languidum mean? ("Faint, weak, listless".) Say it once more.

521.4 dēbilis, dēbile — weak, disabled

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be ill, then the Latin for faint.

You'll want to know: dēbilis, dēbile

dēbilis, dēbile — "weak, disabled".

Senex dēbilis lentē ambulat.

The weak old man walks slowly.

Two endings. Of a limb that will not work, or of general weakness.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēbilis is built on dē- "away from" and habilis "handy, able" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēbilis, dēbile
- Say it: dēbilis, dēbile, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēbilis, dēbile
- Recall: say the Latin for to be ill, then the Latin for faint, then say dēbilis, dēbile again

Before you move on

What does dēbilis, dēbile mean? ("Weak, disabled".) Say it once more.

521.5 dēbilitās, dēbilitātis — weakness, infirmity

Before the new one: say the Latin for faint, then the Latin for weak.

You'll want to know: dēbilitās, dēbilitātis

dēbilitās, dēbilitātis — "weakness, infirmity".

Dēbilitās corporis eum domī tenet.

Weakness of body keeps him at home.

Feminine, third declension, from dēbilis. English debility.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēbilitās is built on dēbilis "weak" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English debility comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēbilitās, dēbilitātis
- Say it: dēbilitās, dēbilitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēbilitās, dēbilitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for faint, then the Latin for weak, then say dēbilitās, dēbilitātis again

Before you move on

What does dēbilitās, dēbilitātis mean? ("Weakness, infirmity".) Say it once more.

Chapter 522

Pale, red and thin

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe how someone looks when unwell.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 522: I can describe how someone looks when unwell.

522.1 palleō, pallēre — to be pale

Before the new one: say the Latin for weak, then the Latin for weakness.

You'll want to know: palleō, pallēre

palleō, pallēre — "to be pale".

> Ancilla timōre pallet.
>
> The maid is pale with fear.

palleō, pallēre, palluī. English pallor comes from its noun.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

palleō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "grey, pale" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English pallor comes from the noun built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: palleō, pallēre
- Say it: palleō, pallēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with palleō, pallēre
- Recall: say the Latin for weak, then the Latin for weakness, then say palleō, pallēre again

Before you move on

What does palleō, pallēre mean? ("To be pale".) Say it once more.

522.2 pallidus, pallida, pallidum — pale

Before the new one: say the Latin for weakness, then the Latin for to be pale.

You'll want to know: pallidus, pallida, pallidum

pallidus, pallida, pallidum — "pale".

Post morbum puella pallida est.

After her illness the girl is pale.

From palleō. English pallid, and pale through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pallidus is built on palleō "to be pale" with -idus (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English pallid comes from it, and pale came the same way through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pallidus, pallida, pallidum
- Say it: pallidus, pallida, pallidum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pallidus, pallida, pallidum
- Recall: say the Latin for weakness, then the Latin for to be pale, then say pallidus, pallida, pallidum again

Before you move on

What does pallidus, pallida, pallidum mean? ("Pale".) Say it once more.

522.3 rubeō, rubēre — to be red

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be pale, then the Latin for pale.

You'll want to know: rubeō, rubēre

rubeō, rubēre — "to be red".

Genae puerī rubent.

The boy's cheeks are red.

rubeō, rubēre, rubuī, from ruber — red. Ērubēscō, already known, is to turn red.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rubeō belongs with ruber "red", inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "red" (EtymDB). English ruby and rubicund come from the same family, and English red is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rubeō, rubēre
- Say it: rubeō, rubēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rubeō, rubēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to be pale, then the Latin for pale, then say rubeō, rubēre again

Before you move on

What does rubeō, rubēre mean? ("To be red".) Say it once more.

522.4 macer, macra, macrum — thin, lean

Before the new one: say the Latin for pale, then the Latin for to be red.

You'll want to know: macer, macra, macrum

macer, macra, macrum — "thin, lean".

Canis macer cibum quaerit.

The thin dog looks for food.

Like ruber: macer, macra, macrum. English meagre comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

macer is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European word meaning "thin" (EtymDB), and German mager "lean" is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English meagre comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: macer, macra, macrum
- Say it: macer, macra, macrum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with macer, macra, macrum
- Recall: say the Latin for pale, then the Latin for to be red, then say macer, macra, macrum again

Before you move on

What does macer, macra, macrum mean? ("Thin, lean".) Say it once more.

522.5 maciēs, maciēī — leanness, thinness

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be red, then the Latin for thin.

You'll want to know: maciēs, maciēī

maciēs, maciēī — "leanness, thinness".

Maciēs eius morbum ostendit.

His thinness shows his illness.

Feminine, fifth declension. English emaciated comes from the related verb ēmaciō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maciēs belongs with macer "thin" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English emaciated comes from the related verb ēmaciō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: maciēs, maciēī
- Say it: maciēs, maciēī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with maciēs, maciēī
- Recall: say the Latin for to be red, then the Latin for thin, then say maciēs, maciēī again

Before you move on

What does maciēs, maciēī mean? ("Leanness, thinness".) Say it once more.

Chapter 523

Build and health

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe someone's build and health.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 523: I can describe someone's build and health.

523.1 rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum — sturdy, strong

Before the new one: say the Latin for thin, then the Latin for leanness.

You'll want to know: rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum

rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum — "sturdy, strong".

> Agricola rōbustus saccum gravem portat.
>
> The sturdy farmer carries a heavy sack.

From rōbur — oak, hardwood: as strong as oak. English robust.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rōbustus is built on rōbur "oak, hard wood, strength" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): oaken, then sturdy. English robust comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum
- Say it: rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum
- Recall: say the Latin for thin, then the Latin for leanness, then say rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum again

Before you move on

What does rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum mean? ("Sturdy, strong".) Say it once more.

523.2 obēsus, obēsa, obēsum — fat, stout

Before the new one: say the Latin for leanness, then the Latin for sturdy.

You'll want to know: obēsus, obēsa, obēsum

obēsus, obēsa, obēsum — "fat, stout".

Coquus obēsus multum edit.

The fat cook eats a lot.

The past participle of obedō — to eat away; here, well fed. English obese.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obēsus is the past participle of obedō, built on ob- and edō "to eat" (Lewis & Short). English obese comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: obēsus, obēsa, obēsum
- Say it: obēsus, obēsa, obēsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with obēsus, obēsa, obēsum
- Recall: say the Latin for leanness, then the Latin for sturdy, then say obēsus, obēsa, obēsum again

Before you move on

What does obēsus, obēsa, obēsum mean? ("Fat, stout".) Say it once more.

523.3 gracilis, gracile — slender, slim

Before the new one: say the Latin for sturdy, then the Latin for fat.

You'll want to know: gracilis, gracile

gracilis, gracile — "slender, slim".

Puella gracilis et alta est.

The girl is slender and tall.

Two endings. Slim in a graceful way; macer is thin from want.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gracilis is a native Latin adjective; Lewis & Short compares an old Latin word for "slender", but the origin is not settled. English gracile comes from it; grace does not.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gracilis, gracile
- Say it: gracilis, gracile, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gracilis, gracile
- Recall: say the Latin for sturdy, then the Latin for fat, then say gracilis, gracile again

Before you move on

What does gracilis, gracile mean? ("Slender, slim".) Say it once more.

523.4 sānitās, sānitātis — health, soundness

Before the new one: say the Latin for fat, then the Latin for slender.

You'll want to know: sānitās, sānitātis

sānitās, sānitātis — "health, soundness".

Sānitās maius bonum est quam pecūnia.

Health is a greater good than money.

Feminine, third declension, from sānus. Of the mind, good sense. English sanity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sānitās is built on sānus "sound, healthy" with -itās (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English sanity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sānitās, sānitātis
- Say it: sānitās, sānitātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sānitās, sānitātis
- Recall: say the Latin for fat, then the Latin for slender, then say sānitās, sānitātis again

Before you move on

What does sānitās, sānitātis mean? ("Health, soundness".) Say it once more.

523.5 salūbris, salūbre — wholesome, healthy

Before the new one: say the Latin for slender, then the Latin for health.

You'll want to know: salūbris, salūbre

salūbris, salūbre — "wholesome, healthy".

Aqua huius fontis salūbris est.

The water of this spring is wholesome.

Two endings; an older masculine salūber also appears. Of places, food and air. English salubrious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

salūbris is built on salūs "health, safety" (Lewis & Short). English salubrious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: salūbris, salūbre
- Say it: salūbris, salūbre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with salūbris, salūbre
- Recall: say the Latin for slender, then the Latin for health, then say salūbris, salūbre again

Before you move on

What does salūbris, salūbre mean? ("Wholesome, healthy".) Say it once more.

Chapter 524

Plague and swelling

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about plague, infection and swelling.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 524: I can talk about plague, infection and swelling.

524.1 pestis, pestis — plague, pestilence; ruin

> Before the new one: say the Latin for health, then the Latin for wholesome.

You'll want to know: pestis, pestis

pestis, pestis — "plague, pestilence; ruin".

> Pestis per urbem it.
>
> Plague is going through the city.

Feminine, third declension; accusative pestem. English pest.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pestis is a native Latin noun; Lewis & Short suggests a link with perdō "to destroy", but the origin is not settled. English pest comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pestis, pestis
- Say it: pestis, pestis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pestis, pestis
- Recall: say the Latin for health, then the Latin for wholesome, then say pestis, pestis again

Before you move on

What does pestis, pestis mean? ("Plague, pestilence; ruin".) Say it once more.

524.2 pestilentia, pestilentiae — an epidemic, pestilence

Before the new one: say the Latin for wholesome, then the Latin for plague.

You'll want to know: pestilentia, pestilentiae

pestilentia, pestilentiae — "an epidemic, pestilence".

> Eō annō pestilentia magna fuit.
>
> That year there was a great epidemic.

Feminine, first declension, from pestilēns — plague-bearing. English pestilence.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pestilentia is built on pestilēns "plague-bearing", from pestis "plague" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English pestilence comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pestilentia, pestilentiae
- Say it: pestilentia, pestilentiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pestilentia, pestilentiae
- Recall: say the Latin for wholesome, then the Latin for plague, then say pestilentia, pestilentiae again

Before you move on

What does pestilentia, pestilentiae mean? ("An epidemic, pestilence".) Say it once more.

524.3 contāgiō, contāgiōnis — infection, contagion; touch

Before the new one: say the Latin for plague, then the Latin for an epidemic.

You'll want to know: contāgiō, contāgiōnis

contāgiō, contāgiōnis — "infection, contagion; touch".

Morbus contāgiōne trānsit.

The disease passes by contact.

Feminine, third declension, from con- + the root of tangō — to touch. English contagion.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

contāgiō is built on con- and the root of tangō "to touch" (Lewis & Short): a touching together. English contagion and contagious come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: contāgiō, contāgiōnis
- Say it: contāgiō, contāgiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with contāgiō, contāgiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for plague, then the Latin for an epidemic, then say contāgiō, contāgiōnis again

Before you move on

What does contāgiō, contāgiōnis mean? ("Infection, contagion; touch".) Say it once more.

524.4 ulcus, ulceris — a sore, ulcer

Before the new one: say the Latin for an epidemic, then the Latin for infection.

You'll want to know: ulcus, ulceris

ulcus, ulceris — "a sore, ulcer".

Medicus ulcus in crūre lavat.

The doctor washes the sore on the leg.

Neuter, third declension. English ulcer.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ulcus is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European word for "wound, sore", and Greek helkos is a cousin (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English ulcer comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ulcus, ulceris
- Say it: ulcus, ulceris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ulcus, ulceris
- Recall: say the Latin for an epidemic, then the Latin for infection, then say ulcus, ulceris again

Before you move on

What does ulcus, ulceris mean? ("A sore, ulcer".) Say it once more.

524.5 tumeō, tumēre — to swell, be swollen

Before the new one: say the Latin for infection, then the Latin for a sore.

You'll want to know: tumeō, tumēre

tumeō, tumēre — "to swell, be swollen".

Post cāsum pēs eius tumet.

After the fall his foot is swollen.

tumeō, tumēre, tumuī. English tumour comes from its noun tumor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tumeō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to swell" (EtymDB); Lewis & Short also compares English thumb. English tumour comes from its noun tumor.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tumeō, tumēre
- Say it: tumeō, tumēre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tumeō, tumēre
- Recall: say the Latin for infection, then the Latin for a sore, then say tumeō, tumēre again

Before you move on

What does tumeō, tumēre mean? ("To swell, be swollen".) Say it once more.

Chapter 525

Coughs and sore eyes

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe coughing, sickness, thirst and sore eyes.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 525: I can describe coughing, sickness, thirst and sore eyes.

525.1 tussiō, tussīre — to cough

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a sore, then the Latin for to swell.

You'll want to know: tussiō, tussīre

tussiō, tussīre — "to cough".

> Senex tōtam noctem tussit.
>
> The old man coughs all night.

tussiō, tussīre, from tussis — a cough, already known.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tussiō is built on tussis "a cough" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB), which EtymDB traces to a Proto-Indo-European root for coughing. English pertussis, whooping cough, comes from the noun.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tussiō, tussīre
- Say it: tussiō, tussīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tussiō, tussīre
- Recall: say the Latin for a sore, then the Latin for to swell, then say tussiō, tussīre again

Before you move on

What does tussiō, tussīre mean? ("To cough".) Say it once more.

525.2 vomō, vomere — to vomit, be sick

Before the new one: say the Latin for to swell, then the Latin for to cough.

You'll want to know: vomō, vomere

vomō, vomere — "to vomit, be sick".

Nauta in nāve vomit.

The sailor is sick on the ship.

vomō, vomere, vomuī, vomitum. Also of a volcano spewing fire. English vomit.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vomō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to vomit", and Greek emeo is a cousin (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English vomit comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vomō, vomere
- Say it: vomō, vomere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vomō, vomere
- Recall: say the Latin for to swell, then the Latin for to cough, then say vomō, vomere again

Before you move on

What does vomō, vomere mean? ("To vomit, be sick".) Say it once more.

525.3 sitiō, sitīre — to be thirsty

Before the new one: say the Latin for to cough, then the Latin for to vomit.

You'll want to know: sitiō, sitīre

sitiō, sitīre — "to be thirsty".

Post cursum valdē sitiō.

After running I am very thirsty.

sitiō, sitīre, sitīvī, from sitis — thirst, already known.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sitiō is built on sitis "thirst" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sitiō, sitīre
- Say it: sitiō, sitīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sitiō, sitīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to cough, then the Latin for to vomit, then say sitiō, sitīre again

Before you move on

What does sitiō, sitīre mean? ("To be thirsty".) Say it once more.

525.4 lippus, lippa, lippum — bleary-eyed, with sore eyes

Before the new one: say the Latin for to vomit, then the Latin for to be thirsty.

You'll want to know: lippus, lippa, lippum

lippus, lippa, lippum — "bleary-eyed, with sore eyes".

Servus lippus librum legere nōn potest.

The bleary-eyed slave cannot read the book.

Watery, inflamed eyes, a common complaint in Rome.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lippus is a native Latin adjective; Lewis & Short compares a root meaning "to smear", but the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lippus, lippa, lippum
- Say it: lippus, lippa, lippum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lippus, lippa, lippum
- Recall: say the Latin for to vomit, then the Latin for to be thirsty, then say lippus, lippa, lippum again

Before you move on

What does lippus, lippa, lippum mean? ("Bleary-eyed, with sore eyes".) Say it once more.

525.5 lippitūdō, lippitūdinis — inflammation of the eyes

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be thirsty, then the Latin for bleary-eyed.

You'll want to know: lippitūdō, lippitūdinis

lippitūdō, lippitūdinis — "inflammation of the eyes".

Propter lippitūdinem epistulās nōn scrībō.

Because of sore eyes I am not writing letters.

Feminine, third declension, from lippus. A complaint of busy letter-writers.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lippitūdō is built on lippus "bleary-eyed" with -tūdō (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lippitūdō, lippitūdinis
- Say it: lippitūdō, lippitūdinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lippitūdō, lippitūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for to be thirsty, then the Latin for bleary-eyed, then say lippitūdō, lippitūdinis again

Before you move on

What does lippitūdō, lippitūdinis mean? ("Inflammation of the eyes".) Say it once more.

Chapter 526

Healing

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about healing and getting well.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 526: I can talk about healing and getting well.

526.1 sānō, sānāre — to heal, cure

Before the new one: say the Latin for bleary-eyed, then the Latin for inflammation of the eyes.

You'll want to know: sānō, sānāre

sānō, sānāre — "to heal, cure".

Medicus vulnus mīlitis sānat.

The doctor heals the soldier's wound.

sānō, sānāre, sānāvī, sānātum, from sānus. English sanatorium.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sānō is built on sānus "sound, healthy" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English sanatorium comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sānō, sānāre
- Say it: sānō, sānāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sānō, sānāre
- Recall: say the Latin for bleary-eyed, then the Latin for inflammation of the eyes, then say sānō, sānāre again

Before you move on

What does sānō, sānāre mean? ("To heal, cure".) Say it once more.

526.2 medeor, medērī — to remedy, be good for

Before the new one: say the Latin for inflammation of the eyes, then the Latin for to heal.

You'll want to know: medeor, medērī

medeor, medērī — "to remedy, be good for".

Haec herba morbō medētur.

This herb is good for the disease.

Deponent, with the dative: morbō medērī. No perfect in use. Medicus, medicīna and remedium come from the same root.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

medeor is inherited through Proto-Italic from a Proto-Indo-European root med- "to measure, take care" (EtymDB). medicus, medicīna and remedium belong to it, and so English medicine and remedy.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: medeor, medērī
- Say it: medeor, medērī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with medeor, medērī
- Recall: say the Latin for inflammation of the eyes, then the Latin for to heal, then say medeor, medērī again

Before you move on

What does medeor, medērī mean? ("To remedy, be good for".) Say it once more.

526.3 convalēscō, convalēscere — to recover, get well

Before the new one: say the Latin for to heal, then the Latin for to remedy.

You'll want to know: convalēscō, convalēscere

convalēscō, convalēscere — "to recover, get well".

Post longum morbum avus convalēscit.

After a long illness grandfather is getting well.

convalēscō, convalēscere, convaluī, built on valeō — to be well. English convalesce.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

convalēscō is built on con- and valēscō, the inceptive of valeō "to be well, strong" (Lewis & Short). English convalesce comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: convalēscō, convalēscere
- Say it: convalēscō, convalēscere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with convalēscō, convalēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to heal, then the Latin for to remedy, then say convalēscō, convalēscere again

Before you move on

What does convalēscō, convalēscere mean? ("To recover, get well".) Say it once more.

526.4 recreō, recreāre — to refresh, restore

Before the new one: say the Latin for to remedy, then the Latin for to recover.

You'll want to know: recreō, recreāre

recreō, recreāre — "to refresh, restore".

Somnus corpus fessum recreat.

Sleep refreshes the tired body.

recreō, recreāre, recreāvī, recreātum: re- 'again' + creō 'to make'. English recreation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

recreō is built on re- "again" and creō "to create" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): to make new again. English recreation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: recreō, recreāre
- Say it: recreō, recreāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with recreō, recreāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to remedy, then the Latin for to recover, then say recreō, recreāre again

Before you move on

What does recreō, recreāre mean? ("To refresh, restore".) Say it once more.

526.5 pōtiō, pōtiōnis — a draught, drink; a potion

Before the new one: say the Latin for to recover, then the Latin for to refresh.

You'll want to know: pōtiō, pōtiōnis

pōtiō, pōtiōnis — "a draught, drink; a potion".

Medicus aegrō pōtiōnem amāram dat.

The doctor gives the patient a bitter draught.

Feminine, third declension, from the root of pōtō — to drink. English potion, and poison too.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōtiō is built on the root of pōtō "to drink" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English potion comes from it, and poison too, through Old French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pōtiō, pōtiōnis
- Say it: pōtiō, pōtiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pōtiō, pōtiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to recover, then the Latin for to refresh, then say pōtiō, pōtiōnis again

Before you move on

What does pōtiō, pōtiōnis mean? ("A draught, drink; a potion".) Say it once more.

Chapter 527

Rest and sleep

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about rest, dozing and sleeplessness.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 527: I can talk about rest, dozing and sleeplessness.

527.1 requiēscō, requiēscere — to rest, take a rest

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to refresh, then the Latin for a draught.

You'll want to know: requiēscō, requiēscere

requiēscō, requiēscere — "to rest, take a rest".

> Post labōrem in hortō requiēscimus.
>
> After work we rest in the garden.

requiēscō, requiēscere, requiēvī, requiētum. On tombs: requiēscat in pāce — may he rest in peace.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

requiēscō is built on re- and quiēscō "to rest" (Lewis & Short), from quiēs "quiet".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: requiēscō, requiēscere
- Say it: requiēscō, requiēscere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with requiēscō, requiēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to refresh, then the Latin for a draught, then say requiēscō, requiēscere again

Before you move on

What does requiēscō, requiēscere mean? ("To rest, take a rest".) Say it once more.

527.2 requiēs, requiētis — rest, repose

Before the new one: say the Latin for a draught, then the Latin for to rest.

You'll want to know: requiēs, requiētis

requiēs, requiētis — "rest, repose".

Nautae nūllam requiem habent.

The sailors have no rest.

Feminine, third declension; accusative requiem. English requiem, from the first word of a prayer for the dead.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

requiēs is built on re- and quiēs "rest, quiet" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which EtymDB traces to a Proto-Indo-European word for "rest". English requiem comes from its accusative.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: requiēs, requiētis
- Say it: requiēs, requiētis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with requiēs, requiētis
- Recall: say the Latin for a draught, then the Latin for to rest, then say requiēs, requiētis again

Before you move on

What does requiēs, requiētis mean? ("Rest, repose".) Say it once more.

527.3 dormītō, dormītāre — to doze, be sleepy

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rest, then the Latin for rest.

You'll want to know: dormītō, dormītāre

dormītō, dormītāre — "to doze, be sleepy".

Avus post prandium in sellā dormītat.

Grandfather dozes in his chair after lunch.

dormītō, dormītāre, dormītāvī: the frequentative of dormiō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dormītō is the frequentative of dormiō "to sleep" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English dormitory comes from dormītōrium, built on the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dormītō, dormītāre
- Say it: dormītō, dormītāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dormītō, dormītāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to rest, then the Latin for rest, then say dormītō, dormītāre again

Before you move on

What does dormītō, dormītāre mean? ("To doze, be sleepy".) Say it once more.

527.4 īnsomnia, īnsomniae — sleeplessness

Before the new one: say the Latin for rest, then the Latin for to doze.

You'll want to know: īnsomnia, īnsomniae

īnsomnia, īnsomniae — "sleeplessness".

Propter cūrās īnsomniā labōrō.

Because of my worries I suffer from sleeplessness.

Feminine, first declension, from īnsomnis — sleepless. English insomnia.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnsomnia is built on īnsomnis "sleepless", from in- "not" and somnus "sleep" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English insomnia comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnsomnia, īnsomniae
- Say it: īnsomnia, īnsomniae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnsomnia, īnsomniae
- Recall: say the Latin for rest, then the Latin for to doze, then say īnsomnia, īnsomniae again

Before you move on

What does īnsomnia, īnsomniae mean? ("Sleeplessness".) Say it once more.

527.5 recumbō, recumbere — to recline, lie down

Before the new one: say the Latin for to doze, then the Latin for sleeplessness.

You'll want to know: recumbō, recumbere

recumbō, recumbere — "to recline, lie down".

Hospitēs ad cēnam recumbunt.

The guests recline at dinner.

recumbō, recumbere, recubuī. Romans lay on couches to eat. English recumbent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

recumbō is built on re- "back" and -cumbō, a form of cubō "to lie down" (Lewis & Short). English recumbent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: recumbō, recumbere
- Say it: recumbō, recumbere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with recumbō, recumbere
- Recall: say the Latin for to doze, then the Latin for sleeplessness, then say recumbō, recumbere again

Before you move on

What does recumbō, recumbere mean? ("To recline, lie down".) Say it once more.

Chapter 528

Relatives

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about my wider family.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 528: I can talk about my wider family.

528.1 gēns, gentis — a clan, family line; a people

> Before the new one: say the Latin for sleeplessness, then the Latin for to recline.

You'll want to know: gēns, gentis

gēns, gentis — "a clan, family line; a people".

> Haec gēns antīqua et nōbilis est.
>
> This clan is old and noble.

Feminine, third declension. A Roman's family name showed his gēns. English gentle and genteel come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gēns is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European word for "birth, family", built on the root of gignō "to beget" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English gentle and gentile come from it, and English kin and kind are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gēns, gentis
- Say it: gēns, gentis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gēns, gentis
- Recall: say the Latin for sleeplessness, then the Latin for to recline, then say gēns, gentis again

Before you move on

What does gēns, gentis mean? ("A clan, family line; a people".) Say it once more.

528.2 propinquus, propinqua, propinquum — near; a relative

Before the new one: say the Latin for to recline, then the Latin for a clan.

You'll want to know: propinquus, propinqua, propinquum

propinquus, propinqua, propinquum — "near; a relative".

Multī propinquī ad nūptiās veniunt.

Many relatives come to the wedding.

From prope — near. As a noun, propinquus or propinqua — a relative. English propinquity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

propinquus is built on prope "near" (Lewis & Short). English propinquity "nearness" comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: propinquus, propinqua, propinquum
- Say it: propinquus, propinqua, propinquum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with propinquus, propinqua, propinquum
- Recall: say the Latin for to recline, then the Latin for a clan, then say propinquus, propinqua, propinquum again

Before you move on

What does propinquus, propinqua, propinquum mean? ("Near; a relative".) Say it once more.

528.3 affīnis, affīne — related by marriage; an in-law

Before the new one: say the Latin for a clan, then the Latin for near.

You'll want to know: affīnis, affīne

affīnis, affīne — "related by marriage; an in-law".

Socer meus affīnis meus est.

My father-in-law is my relative by marriage.

Two endings. As a noun, a relative by marriage, as against a cognātus by blood. English affinity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

affīnis is built on ad- "at" and fīnis "boundary" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): first a neighbour, then a relative by marriage. English affinity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: affīnis, affīne
- Say it: affīnis, affīne, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with affīnis, affīne
- Recall: say the Latin for a clan, then the Latin for near, then say affīnis, affīne again

Before you move on

What does affīnis, affīne mean? ("Related by marriage; an in-law".) Say it once more.

528.4 cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī — a cousin

Before the new one: say the Latin for near, then the Latin for related by marriage.

You'll want to know: cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī

cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī — "a cousin".

Cōnsōbrīnus meus in vīllā avī habitat.

My cousin lives in grandfather's country house.

Masculine; cōnsōbrīna is a female cousin. First the child of a mother's sister. English cousin comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsōbrīnus is built on con- and sōbrīnus "maternal cousin", from soror "sister" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English cousin comes from it through Old French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī
- Say it: cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī
- Recall: say the Latin for near, then the Latin for related by marriage, then say cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī again

Before you move on

What does cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī mean? ("A cousin".) Say it once more.

528.5 gemellus, gemella, gemellum — twin

Before the new one: say the Latin for related by marriage, then the Latin for a cousin.

You'll want to know: gemellus, gemella, gemellum

gemellus, gemella, gemellum — "twin".

Frātrēs gemellī simillimī sunt.

The twin brothers are very alike.

A diminutive of geminus; as a noun, gemellus — a twin.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gemellus is a diminutive of geminus "twin" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gemellus, gemella, gemellum
- Say it: gemellus, gemella, gemellum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gemellus, gemella, gemellum
- Recall: say the Latin for related by marriage, then the Latin for a cousin, then say gemellus, gemella, gemellum again

Before you move on

What does gemellus, gemella, gemellum mean? ("Twin".) Say it once more.

528.6 Words from chapters 521–528 — a review

Say the Latin for sick and to be ill.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sick, to be ill, faint, weak, weakness
- to be pale, pale, to be red, thin, leanness
- sturdy, fat, slender, health, wholesome
- plague, an epidemic, infection, a sore, to swell
- to cough, to vomit, to be thirsty, bleary-eyed, inflammation of the eyes
- to heal, to remedy, to recover, to refresh, a draught
- to rest, rest, to doze, sleeplessness, to recline
- a clan, near, related by marriage, a cousin, twin

Before you move on

Sick? (aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum.) To be ill? (aegrōtō, aegrōtāre.) Faint? (languidus, languida, languidum.) Weak? (dēbilis, dēbile.) Weakness? (dēbilitās, dēbilitātis.) To be pale? (palleō, pallēre.) Pale? (pallidus, pallida, pallidum.) To be red? (rubeō, rubēre.) Thin? (macer, macra, macrum.) Leanness? (maciēs, maciēī.) Sturdy? (rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum.) Fat? (obēsus, obēsa, obēsum.) Slender? (gracilis, gracile.) Health? (sānitās, sānitātis.) Wholesome? (salūbris, salūbre.) Plague? (pestis, pestis.) An epidemic? (pestilentia, pestilentiae.) Infection? (contāgiō, contāgiōnis.) A sore? (ulcus, ulceris.) To swell? (tumeō, tumēre.) To cough? (tussiō, tussīre.) To vomit? (vomō, vomere.) To be thirsty? (sitiō, sitīre.) Bleary-eyed? (lippus, lippa, lippum.) Inflammation of the eyes? (lippitūdō, lippitūdinis.) To heal? (sānō, sānāre.) To remedy? (medeor, medērī.) To recover? (convalēscō, convalēscere.) To refresh? (recreō, recreāre.) A draught? (pōtiō, pōtiōnis.) To rest? (requiēscō, requiēscere.) Rest? (requiēs, requiētis.) To doze? (dormītō, dormītāre.) Sleeplessness? (īnsomnia, īnsomniae.) To recline? (recumbō, recumbere.) A clan? (gēns, gentis.) Near? (propinquus, propinqua, propinquum.) Related by marriage? (affīnis, affīne.) A cousin? (cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī.) Twin? (gemellus, gemella, gemellum.)

Chapter 529

Step-families

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about step-parents and step-children.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 529: I can talk about step-parents and step-children.

529.1 noverca, novercae — a stepmother

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a cousin, then the Latin for twin.

You'll want to know: noverca, novercae

noverca, novercae — "a stepmother".

> Noverca fīliōs marītī amat.
>
> The stepmother loves her husband's sons.

Feminine, first declension. In Roman stories the stepmother is often cruel, but not always.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

noverca is usually traced to novus "new" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): the new wife of the house.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: noverca, novercae
- Say it: noverca, novercae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with noverca, novercae
- Recall: say the Latin for a cousin, then the Latin for twin, then say noverca, novercae again

Before you move on

What does noverca, novercae mean? ("A stepmother".) Say it once more.

529.2 vitricus, vitricī — a stepfather

Before the new one: say the Latin for twin, then the Latin for a stepmother.

You'll want to know: vitricus, vitricī

vitricus, vitricī — "a stepfather".

Vitricus puerum ut fīlium suum amat.

The stepfather loves the boy like his own son.

Masculine, second declension.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vitricus is a native Latin noun, and its origin is not settled; neither Lewis & Short nor EtymDB gives a source.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vitricus, vitricī
- Say it: vitricus, vitricī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vitricus, vitricī
- Recall: say the Latin for twin, then the Latin for a stepmother, then say vitricus, vitricī again

Before you move on

What does vitricus, vitricī mean? ("A stepfather".) Say it once more.

529.3 prīvignus, prīvignī — a stepson

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stepmother, then the Latin for a stepfather.

You'll want to know: prīvignus, prīvignī

prīvignus, prīvignī — "a stepson".

Prīvignus novercae epistulam scrībit.

The stepson writes a letter to his stepmother.

Masculine; prīvigna — a stepdaughter.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīvignus is built, Lewis & Short explains, on prīvus "separate" and the root of gignō "to beget": born of another line.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prīvignus, prīvignī
- Say it: prīvignus, prīvignī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prīvignus, prīvignī
- Recall: say the Latin for a stepmother, then the Latin for a stepfather, then say prīvignus, prīvignī again

Before you move on

What does prīvignus, prīvignī mean? ("A stepson".) Say it once more.

529.4 fīliola, fīliolae — a little daughter

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stepfather, then the Latin for a stepson.

You'll want to know: fīliola, fīliolae

fīliola, fīliolae — "a little daughter".

Fīliola mea hodiē quīnque annōs nāta est.

My little daughter is five years old today.

Feminine, a diminutive of fīlia: a word of affection.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīliola is a diminutive of fīlia "daughter" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fīliola, fīliolae
- Say it: fīliola, fīliolae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fīliola, fīliolae
- Recall: say the Latin for a stepfather, then the Latin for a stepson, then say fīliola, fīliolae again

Before you move on

What does fīliola, fīliolae mean? ("A little daughter".) Say it once more.

529.5 frāternus, frāterna, frāternum — brotherly

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stepson, then the Latin for a little daughter.

You'll want to know: frāternus, frāterna, frāternum

frāternus, frāterna, frāternum — "brotherly".

Amor frāternus semper manet.

Brotherly love always endures.

From frāter. English fraternal.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frāternus is built on frāter "brother" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short), which is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European word for "brother"; English brother is a cousin. English fraternal comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: frāternus, frāterna, frāternum
- Say it: frāternus, frāterna, frāternum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with frāternus, frāterna, frāternum
- Recall: say the Latin for a stepson, then the Latin for a little daughter, then say frāternus, frāterna, frāternum again

Before you move on

What does frāternus, frāterna, frāternum mean? ("Brotherly".) Say it once more.

Chapter 530

Masters and slaves

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe masters and slaves in a Roman house.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 530: I can describe masters and slaves in a Roman house.

530.1 erus, erī — a master (of slaves)

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a little daughter, then the Latin for brotherly.

You'll want to know: erus, erī

erus, erī — "a master (of slaves)".

> Servus erō suō pāret.
>
> The slave obeys his master.

Masculine, second declension. The word of comedy for the master of slaves; era is the mistress. Dominus is the everyday word.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

erus is inherited through Proto-Italic from a Proto-Indo-European word for "master", and Hittite ishas "lord" is a cousin (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: erus, erī
- Say it: erus, erī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with erus, erī
- Recall: say the Latin for a little daughter, then the Latin for brotherly, then say erus, erī again

Before you move on

What does erus, erī mean? ("A master (of slaves)".) Say it once more.

530.2 verna, vernae — a home-born slave

Before the new one: say the Latin for brotherly, then the Latin for a master.

You'll want to know: verna, vernae

verna, vernae — "a home-born slave".

Verna in domō dominī nātus est.

A home-born slave was born in his master's house.

Masculine or feminine, first declension. Such slaves were often trusted. English vernacular — the speech of home — comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

verna is a native Latin word whose origin is not settled; Lewis & Short links it with a root meaning "to dwell". English vernacular comes from vernāculus, built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: verna, vernae
- Say it: verna, vernae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with verna, vernae
- Recall: say the Latin for brotherly, then the Latin for a master, then say verna, vernae again

Before you move on

What does verna, vernae mean? ("A home-born slave".) Say it once more.

530.3 ancillula, ancillulae — a young maidservant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a master, then the Latin for a home-born slave.

You'll want to know: ancillula, ancillulae

ancillula, ancillulae — "a young maidservant".

Ancillula dominae speculum dat.

The little maid gives her mistress a mirror.

Feminine, a diminutive of ancilla, already known, which is itself a diminutive.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ancillula is a diminutive of ancilla "maidservant" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ancillula, ancillulae
- Say it: ancillula, ancillulae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ancillula, ancillulae
- Recall: say the Latin for a master, then the Latin for a home-born slave, then say ancillula, ancillulae again

Before you move on

What does ancillula, ancillulae mean? ("A young maidservant".) Say it once more.

530.4 servīlis, servīle — of a slave, slavish

Before the new one: say the Latin for a home-born slave, then the Latin for a young maidservant.

You'll want to know: servīlis, servīle

servīlis, servīle — "of a slave, slavish".

Labor servīlis dūrus est.

A slave's work is hard.

Two endings, from servus. English servile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

servīlis is built on servus "slave" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English servile comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: servīlis, servīle
- Say it: servīlis, servīle, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with servīlis, servīle
- Recall: say the Latin for a home-born slave, then the Latin for a young maidservant, then say servīlis, servīle again

Before you move on

What does servīlis, servīle mean? ("Of a slave, slavish".) Say it once more.

530.5 pedisequus, pedisequī — a footman, attendant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a young maidservant, then the Latin for of a slave.

You'll want to know: pedisequus, pedisequī

pedisequus, pedisequī — "a footman, attendant".

Pedisequus dominum in forum sequitur.

The footman follows his master into the forum.

Masculine; pedisequa — a female attendant. pēs 'foot' + sequor 'to follow'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pedisequus is built on pēs "foot" and sequor "to follow" (Lewis & Short): one who follows on foot.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pedisequus, pedisequī
- Say it: pedisequus, pedisequī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pedisequus, pedisequī
- Recall: say the Latin for a young maidservant, then the Latin for of a slave, then say pedisequus, pedisequī again

Before you move on

What does pedisequus, pedisequī mean? ("A footman, attendant".) Say it once more.

Chapter 531

Jobs in a great house

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the jobs of slaves in a large household.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 531: I can name the jobs of slaves in a large household.

531.1 ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis — a steward, house-manager

> Before the new one: say the Latin for of a slave, then the Latin for a footman.

You'll want to know: ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis

ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis — "a steward, house-manager".

> Ātriēnsis servīs labōrem dat.
>
> The steward gives the slaves their work.

Masculine, third declension, from ātrium: the slave in charge of the hall and the house.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ātriēnsis is built on ātrium "hall" with -ēnsis (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis
- Say it: ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis
- Recall: say the Latin for of a slave, then the Latin for a footman, then say ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis again

Before you move on

What does ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis mean? ("A steward, house-manager".) Say it once more.

531.2 iānitor, iānitōris — a doorkeeper

Before the new one: say the Latin for a footman, then the Latin for a steward.

You'll want to know: iānitor, iānitōris

iānitor, iānitōris — "a doorkeeper".

Iānitor ad iānuam sedet et hospitēs salūtat.

The doorkeeper sits by the door and greets the guests.

Masculine, third declension, from iānua — door. English janitor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iānitor is built on iānua "door" with -tor (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English janitor comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iānitor, iānitōris
- Say it: iānitor, iānitōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iānitor, iānitōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a footman, then the Latin for a steward, then say iānitor, iānitōris again

Before you move on

What does iānitor, iānitōris mean? ("A doorkeeper".) Say it once more.

531.3 ostiārius, ostiāriī — a porter, doorman

Before the new one: say the Latin for a steward, then the Latin for a doorkeeper.

You'll want to know: ostiārius, ostiāriī

ostiārius, ostiāriī — "a porter, doorman".

Ostiārius canem ad portam habet.

The porter keeps a dog at the gate.

Masculine, second declension, from ostium — door, entrance.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ostiārius is built on ostium "door, entrance" with -ārius (Lewis & Short; EtymDB), and EtymDB relates ostium to ōs "mouth".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ostiārius, ostiāriī
- Say it: ostiārius, ostiāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ostiārius, ostiāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a steward, then the Latin for a doorkeeper, then say ostiārius, ostiāriī again

Before you move on

What does ostiārius, ostiāriī mean? ("A porter, doorman".) Say it once more.

531.4 lectīcārius, lectīcāriī — a litter-bearer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a doorkeeper, then the Latin for a porter.

You'll want to know: lectīcārius, lectīcāriī

lectīcārius, lectīcāriī — "a litter-bearer".

Sex lectīcāriī dominam per urbem portant.

Six litter-bearers carry their mistress through the city.

Masculine, second declension, from lectīca — a litter.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lectīcārius is built on lectīca "litter, sedan chair" with -ārius (Lewis & Short); lectīca itself comes from lectus "couch" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lectīcārius, lectīcāriī
- Say it: lectīcārius, lectīcāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lectīcārius, lectīcāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a doorkeeper, then the Latin for a porter, then say lectīcārius, lectīcāriī again

Before you move on

What does lectīcārius, lectīcāriī mean? ("A litter-bearer".) Say it once more.

531.5 vīlica, vīlicae — a farm housekeeper

Before the new one: say the Latin for a porter, then the Latin for a litter-bearer.

You'll want to know: vīlica, vīlicae

vīlica, vīlicae — "a farm housekeeper".

Vīlica cēnam familiae rūsticae parat.

The farm housekeeper prepares dinner for the farm slaves.

Feminine, first declension: the wife of the vīlicus, the farm manager. She ran the farm kitchen and stores.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīlica is the feminine of vīlicus "farm manager", built on vīlla "country house, farm" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vīlica, vīlicae
- Say it: vīlica, vīlicae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vīlica, vīlicae
- Recall: say the Latin for a porter, then the Latin for a litter-bearer, then say vīlica, vīlicae again

Before you move on

What does vīlica, vīlicae mean? ("A farm housekeeper".) Say it once more.

Chapter 532

Freedom

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about freeing slaves and freed people.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 532: I can talk about freeing slaves and freed people.

532.1 manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis — the freeing of a slave

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a litter-bearer, then the Latin for a farm housekeeper.

You'll want to know: manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis

manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis — "the freeing of a slave".

> Post manūmissiōnem servus lībertus est.
>
> After being set free, the slave is a freedman.

Feminine, third declension: manus 'hand' + mittō 'to send' — to let go from the hand. English manumission.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

manūmissiō is built on manūmittō "to set free", from manus "hand, power" and mittō "to let go" (Lewis & Short). English manumission comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis
- Say it: manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a litter-bearer, then the Latin for a farm housekeeper, then say manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis again

Before you move on

What does manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis mean? ("The freeing of a slave".) Say it once more.

532.2 lībertīnus, lībertīnī — a freedman (by rank)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a farm housekeeper, then the Latin for the freeing of a slave.

You'll want to know: lībertīnus, lībertīnī

lībertīnus, lībertīnī — "a freedman (by rank)".

Multī lībertīnī in urbe tabernās habent.

Many freedmen keep shops in the city.

Masculine. Lībertīnus names a freed slave's rank in society, lībertus his tie to his former master.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lībertīnus is built on lībertus "freedman" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB), from līber "free".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lībertīnus, lībertīnī
- Say it: lībertīnus, lībertīnī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lībertīnus, lībertīnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a farm housekeeper, then the Latin for the freeing of a slave, then say lībertīnus, lībertīnī again

Before you move on

What does lībertīnus, lībertīnī mean? ("A freedman (by rank)".) Say it once more.

532.3 vindicta, vindictae — the rod of freedom (in freeing a slave); vengeance

Before the new one: say the Latin for the freeing of a slave, then the Latin for a freedman.

You'll want to know: vindicta, vindictae

vindicta, vindictae — "the rod of freedom (in freeing a slave); vengeance".

Magistrātus servum vindictā tangit, et servus līber fit.

The magistrate touches the slave with the rod, and the slave becomes free.

Feminine, first declension. In one way of freeing a slave, he was touched with this rod before a magistrate. Later it also means vengeance; English vindictive.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vindicta is built on vindicō "to lay claim to, set free" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB), from vindex "a defender". English vindictive comes from its later sense, vengeance.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vindicta, vindictae
- Say it: vindicta, vindictae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vindicta, vindictae
- Recall: say the Latin for the freeing of a slave, then the Latin for a freedman, then say vindicta, vindictae again

Before you move on

What does vindicta, vindictae mean? ("The rod of freedom (in freeing a slave); vengeance".) Say it once more.

532.4 ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum — free-born; frank

Before the new one: say the Latin for a freedman, then the Latin for the rod of freedom.

You'll want to know: ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum

ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum — "free-born; frank".

Hic puer ingenuus est, nōn servus.

This boy is free-born, not a slave.

Born free, as against lībertīnus; then honest, frank. English ingenuous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ingenuus is built on in- and the root of gignō "to beget" (Lewis & Short): born in the place, then born free. English ingenuous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum
- Say it: ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum
- Recall: say the Latin for a freedman, then the Latin for the rod of freedom, then say ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum again

Before you move on

What does ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum mean? ("Free-born; frank".) Say it once more.

532.5 pilleus, pilleī — a felt cap

Before the new one: say the Latin for the rod of freedom, then the Latin for free-born.

You'll want to know: pilleus, pilleī

pilleus, pilleī — "a felt cap".

Servus līberātus pilleum gerit.

The freed slave wears the felt cap.

Masculine, second declension. A newly freed slave put on the pilleus, a sign of liberty.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pilleus is usually linked with Greek pilos "felt, felt cap" (Lewis & Short), but whether it is a loan or a cousin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pilleus, pilleī
- Say it: pilleus, pilleī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pilleus, pilleī
- Recall: say the Latin for the rod of freedom, then the Latin for free-born, then say pilleus, pilleī again

Before you move on

What does pilleus, pilleī mean? ("A felt cap".) Say it once more.

Chapter 533

Close friends

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about close friends and the ties between people.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 533: I can talk about close friends and the ties between people.

533.1 familiāris, familiāris — a close friend

> Before the new one: say the Latin for free-born, then the Latin for a felt cap.

You'll want to know: familiāris, familiāris familiāris, familiāris — "a close friend".

> Hic vir familiāris patris meī est.
>
> This man is a close friend of my father's.

As an adjective (familiāris, familiāre), of the household; as a noun, an intimate friend. English familiar.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

familiāris is built on familia "household" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English familiar comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: familiāris, familiāris
- Say it: familiāris, familiāris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with familiāris, familiāris
- Recall: say the Latin for free-born, then the Latin for a felt cap, then say familiāris, familiāris again

Before you move on

What does familiāris, familiāris mean? ("A close friend".) Say it once more.

533.2 familiāritās, familiāritātis — close friendship, intimacy

Before the new one: say the Latin for a felt cap, then the Latin for a close friend.

You'll want to know: familiāritās, familiāritātis

familiāritās, familiāritātis — "close friendship, intimacy".

Inter eōs magna familiāritās est.

There is a close friendship between them.

Feminine, third declension. English familiarity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

familiāritās is built on familiāris "intimate, of the household" (Lewis & Short). English familiarity comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: familiāritās, familiāritātis
- Say it: familiāritās, familiāritātis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with familiāritās, familiāritātis
- Recall: say the Latin for a felt cap, then the Latin for a close friend, then say familiāritās, familiāritātis again

Before you move on

What does familiāritās, familiāritātis mean? ("Close friendship, intimacy".) Say it once more.

533.3 necessitūdō, necessitūdinis — a close bond, tie

Before the new one: say the Latin for a close friend, then the Latin for close friendship.

You'll want to know: necessitūdō, necessitūdinis

necessitūdō, necessitūdinis — "a close bond, tie".

Magna necessitūdō mihi cum frātre tuō est.

I have a close bond with your brother.

Feminine, third declension, from necesse. Also need, but in letters it often means a tie of family or friendship.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

necessitūdō is built on necesse "necessary" (Lewis & Short): first need, then the ties that bind people.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: necessitūdō, necessitūdinis
- Say it: necessitūdō, necessitūdinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with necessitūdō, necessitūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a close friend, then the Latin for close friendship, then say necessitūdō, necessitūdinis again

Before you move on

What does necessitūdō, necessitūdinis mean? ("A close bond, tie".) Say it once more.

533.4 dīligō, dīligere — to hold dear, esteem

Before the new one: say the Latin for close friendship, then the Latin for a close bond.

You'll want to know: dīligō, dīligere

dīligō, dīligere — "to hold dear, esteem".

Parentēs līberōs suōs dīligunt.

Parents hold their children dear.

dīligō, dīligere, dīlēxī, dīlēctum. Love by choice and esteem, calmer than amō. Dīligēns, already known, comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīligō is built on dis- "apart" and legō "to choose" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): to single out. English diligent and predilection come from the family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dīligō, dīligere
- Say it: dīligō, dīligere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dīligō, dīligere
- Recall: say the Latin for close friendship, then the Latin for a close bond, then say dīligō, dīligere again

Before you move on

What does dīligō, dīligere mean? ("To hold dear, esteem".) Say it once more.

533.5 amābilis, amābile — lovable, delightful

Before the new one: say the Latin for a close bond, then the Latin for to hold dear.

You'll want to know: amābilis, amābile

amābilis, amābile — "lovable, delightful".

Fīliola tua amābilis est.

Your little daughter is lovable.

Two endings, from amō with -bilis.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amābilis is built on amō "to love" with -bilis "able to be" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: amābilis, amābile
- Say it: amābilis, amābile, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with amābilis, amābile
- Recall: say the Latin for a close bond, then the Latin for to hold dear, then say amābilis, amābile again

Before you move on

What does amābilis, amābile mean? ("Lovable, delightful".) Say it once more.

Chapter 534

Kisses and hugs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about kisses and hugs.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 534: I can talk about kisses and hugs.

534.1 ōsculum, ōsculī — a kiss

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to hold dear, then the Latin for lovable.

You'll want to know: ōsculum, ōsculī

ōsculum, ōsculī — "a kiss".

> Māter fīliō ōsculum dat.
>
> The mother gives her son a kiss.

Neuter, a diminutive of ōs — mouth: a little mouth. Ōsculor, already known, is to kiss.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōsculum is a diminutive of ōs "mouth" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English osculate comes from the verb ōsculor.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ōsculum, ōsculī
- Say it: ōsculum, ōsculī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ōsculum, ōsculī
- Recall: say the Latin for to hold dear, then the Latin for lovable, then say ōsculum, ōsculī again

Before you move on

What does ōsculum, ōsculī mean? ("A kiss".) Say it once more.

534.2 bāsium, bāsiī — a loving kiss

Before the new one: say the Latin for lovable, then the Latin for a kiss.

You'll want to know: bāsium, bāsiī

bāsium, bāsiī — "a loving kiss".

Fīliola patrī bāsia mīlle dat.

The little girl gives her father a thousand kisses.

Neuter, second declension. A warm word of love poetry. Spanish beso and Italian bacio come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bāsium is a word of uncertain origin; Lewis & Short compares English buss, and EtymDB gives a Proto-Indo-European root bu-, but it is not settled. Spanish beso and Italian bacio come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bāsium, bāsiī
- Say it: bāsium, bāsiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bāsium, bāsiī
- Recall: say the Latin for lovable, then the Latin for a kiss, then say bāsium, bāsiī again

Before you move on

What does bāsium, bāsiī mean? ("A loving kiss".) Say it once more.

534.3 bāsiō, bāsiāre — to kiss

Before the new one: say the Latin for a kiss, then the Latin for a loving kiss.

You'll want to know: bāsiō, bāsiāre

bāsiō, bāsiāre — "to kiss".

Avia nepōtēs bāsiat.

Grandmother kisses her grandchildren.

bāsiō, bāsiāre, bāsiāvī, bāsiātum, from bāsium.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bāsiō is built on bāsium "a kiss" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). French baiser comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bāsiō, bāsiāre
- Say it: bāsiō, bāsiāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bāsiō, bāsiāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a kiss, then the Latin for a loving kiss, then say bāsiō, bāsiāre again

Before you move on

What does bāsiō, bāsiāre mean? ("To kiss".) Say it once more.

534.4 suāvium, suāvīī — a kiss on the lips

Before the new one: say the Latin for a loving kiss, then the Latin for to kiss.

You'll want to know: suāvium, suāvīī

suāvium, suāvīī — "a kiss on the lips".

Puella iuvenī suāvium dat.

The girl gives the young man a kiss on the lips.

Neuter, second declension; also spelt sāvium. A word of comedy and love letters.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suāvium is built on suāvis "sweet" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: suāvium, suāviī
- Say it: suāvium, suāviī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with suāvium, suāviī
- Recall: say the Latin for a loving kiss, then the Latin for to kiss, then say suāvium, suāviī again

Before you move on

What does suāvium, suāviī mean? ("A kiss on the lips".) Say it once more.

534.5 amplexus, amplexūs — an embrace

Before the new one: say the Latin for to kiss, then the Latin for a kiss on the lips.

You'll want to know: amplexus, amplexūs

amplexus, amplexūs — "an embrace".

Māter fīliam in amplexū tenet.

The mother holds her daughter in an embrace.

Masculine, fourth declension: arms wound around someone. In poetry also the coils of a snake.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amplexus is the action noun of amplector "to embrace" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: amplexus, amplexūs
- Say it: amplexus, amplexūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with amplexus, amplexūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to kiss, then the Latin for a kiss on the lips, then say amplexus, amplexūs again

Before you move on

What does amplexus, amplexūs mean? ("An embrace".) Say it once more.

Chapter 535

Lovers

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about lovers, admirers and suitors.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 535: I can talk about lovers, admirers and suitors.

535.1 amplector, amplectī — to embrace, hug

Before the new one: say the Latin for a kiss on the lips, then the Latin for an embrace.

You'll want to know: amplector, amplectī

amplector, amplectī — "to embrace, hug".

Pater filium redeuntem amplectitur.

The father embraces his son as he comes home.

Deponent: amplector, amplectī, amplexus sum: ambi- 'around' + plectō 'to twine'. Also to welcome an idea.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amplector is built on ambi- "around" and plector, from plectō "to twine, plait" (EtymDB): to wind the arms around.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: amplector, amplectī
- Say it: amplector, amplectī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with amplector, amplectī
- Recall: say the Latin for a kiss on the lips, then the Latin for an embrace, then say amplector, amplectī again

Before you move on

What does amplector, amplectī mean? ("To embrace, hug".) Say it once more.

535.2 complector, complectī — to clasp, embrace; to include

Before the new one: say the Latin for an embrace, then the Latin for to embrace.

You'll want to know: complector, complectī

complector, complectī — "to clasp, embrace; to include".

> Amīcī post longum tempus sē complectuntur.
>
> The friends embrace after a long time.

Deponent: complector, complectī, complexus sum. Also to take in, to include. English complex comes from its participle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

complector is built on con- and plectō "to twine" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English complex comes from its participle complexus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: complector, complectī
- Say it: complector, complectī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with complector, complectī
- Recall: say the Latin for an embrace, then the Latin for to embrace, then say complector, complectī again

Before you move on

What does complector, complectī mean? ("To clasp, embrace; to include".) Say it once more.

535.3 amāns, amantis — a lover

Before the new one: say the Latin for to embrace, then the Latin for to clasp.

You'll want to know: amāns, amantis

amāns, amantis — "a lover".

Amāns sub fenestrā puellae cantat.

The lover sings under the girl's window.

The present participle of amō, used as a noun. Amantēs — lovers.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amāns is the present participle of amō "to love", used as a noun (Lewis & Short). English amorous belongs to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: amāns, amantis
- Say it: amāns, amantis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with amāns, amantis
- Recall: say the Latin for to embrace, then the Latin for to clasp, then say amāns, amantis again

Before you move on

What does amāns, amantis mean? ("A lover".) Say it once more.

535.4 amātor, amātōris — an admirer, lover

Before the new one: say the Latin for to clasp, then the Latin for a lover.

You'll want to know: amātor, amātōris

amātor, amātōris — "an admirer, lover".

Amātor puellae flōrēs mittit.

Her admirer sends the girl flowers.

Masculine, third declension. Also a lover of things: amātor librōrum. English amateur comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amātor is built on amō "to love" with -tor (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English amateur, one who does a thing for love, comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: amātor, amātōris
- Say it: amātor, amātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with amātor, amātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for to clasp, then the Latin for a lover, then say amātor, amātōris again

Before you move on

What does amātor, amātōris mean? ("An admirer, lover".) Say it once more.

535.5 procus, procī — a suitor

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lover, then the Latin for an admirer.

You'll want to know: procus, procī

procus, procī — "a suitor".

> Multī procī fīliam rēgis petunt.
>
> Many suitors seek the king's daughter.

Masculine, second declension; usually plural. A word of epic and comedy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

procus is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to ask" (EtymDB), the same root as precor "to pray": a suitor is one who asks.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: procus, procī
- Say it: procus, procī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with procus, procī
- Recall: say the Latin for a lover, then the Latin for an admirer, then say procus, procī again

Before you move on

What does procus, procī mean? ("A suitor".) Say it once more.

Chapter 536

Charm and sweet words

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about charm, sweetness and gifts.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 536: I can talk about charm, sweetness and gifts.

536.1 blandus, blanda, blandum — coaxing, flattering; charming

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an admirer, then the Latin for a suitor.

You'll want to know: blandus, blanda, blandum

blandus, blanda, blandum — "coaxing, flattering; charming".

> Fēlēs blanda ad dominam venit.
>
> The coaxing cat comes to her mistress.

Soft and winning words, true or false. English bland, whose meaning has drifted.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

blandus is a native Latin adjective; Lewis & Short suggests a link with mollis "soft" and English mild, but the origin is not settled. English bland comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: blandus, blanda, blandum
- Say it: blandus, blanda, blandum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with blandus, blanda, blandum
- Recall: say the Latin for an admirer, then the Latin for a suitor, then say blandus, blanda, blandum again

Before you move on

What does blandus, blanda, blandum mean? ("Coaxing, flattering; charming".) Say it once more.

536.2 blanditia, blanditiae — flattery, coaxing

Before the new one: say the Latin for a suitor, then the Latin for coaxing.

You'll want to know: blanditia, blanditiae

blanditia, blanditiae — "flattery, coaxing".

Blanditiīs fīliae pater nōn resistit.

The father does not resist his daughter's coaxing.

Feminine, first declension; often plural blanditiae — coaxing words.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

blanditia is built on blandus "coaxing, flattering" (Lewis & Short). English blandishment comes from the related verb blandior.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: blanditia, blanditiae
- Say it: blanditia, blanditiae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with blanditia, blanditiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a suitor, then the Latin for coaxing, then say blanditia, blanditiae again

Before you move on

What does blanditia, blanditiae mean? ("Flattery, coaxing".) Say it once more.

536.3 suāvis, suāve — sweet, pleasant

Before the new one: say the Latin for coaxing, then the Latin for flattery.

You'll want to know: suāvis, suāve

suāvis, suāve — "sweet, pleasant".

Odor rosārum suāvis est.

The scent of the roses is sweet.

Two endings. Sweet to every sense, and in manner. English suave.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suāvis is inherited through Proto-Italic from a Proto-Indo-European word for "sweet" (EtymDB), and English sweet is a cousin. English suave comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: suāvis, suāve
- Say it: suāvis, suāve, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with suāvis, suāve
- Recall: say the Latin for coaxing, then the Latin for flattery, then say suāvis, suāve again

Before you move on

What does suāvis, suāve mean? ("Sweet, pleasant".) Say it once more.

536.4 dēliciae, dēliciārum — a darling, pet; delight

Before the new one: say the Latin for flattery, then the Latin for sweet.

You'll want to know: dēliciae, dēliciārum

dēliciae, dēliciārum — "a darling, pet; delight".

Hic catulus dēliciae puellae est.

This puppy is the girl's darling.

Feminine plural, first declension, often with a singular meaning: meae dēliciae! — my darling! English delicious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēliciae is built on dēliciō "to allure", from dē- and laciō "to entice" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English delicious and delicacy come from the family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēliciae, dēliciārum
- Say it: dēliciae, dēliciārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēliciae, dēliciārum
- Recall: say the Latin for flattery, then the Latin for sweet, then say dēliciae, dēliciārum again

Before you move on

What does dēliciae, dēliciārum mean? ("A darling, pet; delight".) Say it once more.

536.5 dōnum, dōnī — a gift

Before the new one: say the Latin for sweet, then the Latin for a darling.

You'll want to know: dōnum, dōnī

dōnum, dōnī — "a gift".

Amīcus mihi dōnum pulchrum mittit.

My friend sends me a beautiful gift.

Neuter, second declension, from dō — to give. English donation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dōnum is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European word for "gift", built on the root of dō "to give" (EtymDB). English donor and donation come from the family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dōnum, dōnī
- Say it: dōnum, dōnī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dōnum, dōnī
- Recall: say the Latin for sweet, then the Latin for a darling, then say dōnum, dōnī again

Before you move on

What does dōnum, dōnī mean? ("A gift".) Say it once more.

536.6 Words from chapters 529–536 — a review

Say the Latin for a stepmother and a stepfather.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a stepmother, a stepfather, a stepson, a little daughter, brotherly
- a master, a home-born slave, a young maidservant, of a slave, a footman
- a steward, a doorkeeper, a porter, a litter-bearer, a farm housekeeper
- the freeing of a slave, a freedman, the rod of freedom, free-born, a felt cap

- a close friend, close friendship, a close bond, to hold dear, lovable
- a kiss, a loving kiss, to kiss, a kiss on the lips, an embrace
- to embrace, to clasp, a lover, an admirer, a suitor
- coaxing, flattery, sweet, a darling, a gift

Before you move on

A stepmother? (noverca, novercae.) A stepfather? (vitricus, vitricī.) A stepson? (prīvignus, prīvignī.) A little daughter? (fīliola, fīliolae.) Brotherly? (frāternus, frāterna, frāternum.) A master? (erus, erī.) A home-born slave? (verna, vernae.) A young maidservant? (ancillula, ancillulae.) Of a slave? (servīlis, servīle.) A footman? (pedisequus, pedisequī.) A steward? (ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis.) A doorkeeper? (iānitor, iānitōris.) A porter? (ostiārius, ostiāriī.) A litter-bearer? (lectīcārius, lectīcāriī.) A farm housekeeper? (vīlica, vīlicae.) The freeing of a slave? (manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis.) A freedman? (lībertīnus, lībertīnī.) The rod of freedom? (vindicta, vindictae.) Free-born? (ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum.) A felt cap? (pilleus, pilleī.) A close friend? (familiāris, familiāris.) Close friendship? (familiāritās, familiāritātis.) A close bond? (necessitūdō, necessitūdinis.) To hold dear? (dīligō, dīligere.) Lovable? (amābilis, amābile.) A kiss? (ōsculum, ōsculī.) A loving kiss? (bāsium, bāsiī.) To kiss? (bāsiō, bāsiāre.) A kiss on the lips? (suāvium, suāviī.) An embrace? (amplexus, amplexūs.) To embrace? (amplector, amplectī.) To clasp? (complector, complectī.) A lover? (amāns, amantis.) An admirer? (amātor, amātōris.) A suitor? (procus, procī.) Coaxing? (blandus, blanda, blandum.) Flattery? (blanditia, blanditiae.) Sweet? (suāvis, suāve.) A darling? (dēliciae, dēliciārum.) A gift? (dōnum, dōnī.)

Chapter 537

Quarrels and making up

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about quarrels and making up.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 537: I can talk about quarrels and making up.

537.1 iūrgium, iūrgiī — a quarrel, dispute

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a darling, then the Latin for a gift.

You'll want to know: iūrgium, iūrgiī

iūrgium, iūrgiī — "a quarrel, dispute".

> Inter frātrēs saepe iūrgium est.
>
> There is often a quarrel between the brothers.

Neuter, second declension. A quarrel of words, at home or between neighbours.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūrgium is built on iūrgō "to quarrel", which Lewis & Short takes from iūs "right, law" and agō "to drive"; EtymDB agrees on iūs.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: iūrgium, iūrgiī
- Say it: iūrgium, iūrgiī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with iūrgium, iūrgiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a darling, then the Latin for a gift, then say iūrgium, iūrgiī again

Before you move on

What does iūrgium, iūrgiī mean? ("A quarrel, dispute".) Say it once more.

537.2 reconciliō, reconciliāre — to reconcile, bring together again

Before the new one: say the Latin for a gift, then the Latin for a quarrel.

You'll want to know: reconciliō, reconciliāre

reconciliō, reconciliāre — "to reconcile, bring together again".

Māter frātrēs post iūrgium reconciliat.

Mother reconciles the brothers after the quarrel.

reconciliō, reconciliāre, reconciliāvī, reconciliātum: re- 'again' + conciliō 'to bring together'. English reconcile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

reconciliō is built on re- "again" and conciliō "to bring together", from concilium "a gathering" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English reconcile comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: reconciliō, reconciliāre
- Say it: reconciliō, reconciliāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with reconciliō, reconciliāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a gift, then the Latin for a quarrel, then say reconciliō, reconciliāre again

Before you move on

What does reconciliō, reconciliāre mean? ("To reconcile, bring together again".) Say it once more.

537.3 dōnō, dōnāre — to give as a present

Before the new one: say the Latin for a quarrel, then the Latin for to reconcile.

You'll want to know: dōnō, dōnāre

dōnō, dōnāre — "to give as a present".

Avus nepōtī librum dōnat.

Grandfather gives his grandson a book as a present.

dōnō, dōnāre, dōnāvī, dōnātum: alicui aliquid dōnāre, or aliquem aliquā rē dōnāre. English donate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dōnō is built on dōnum "a gift" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English donate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dōnō, dōnāre
- Say it: dōnō, dōnāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dōnō, dōnāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a quarrel, then the Latin for to reconcile, then say dōnō, dōnāre again

Before you move on

What does dōnō, dōnāre mean? ("To give as a present".) Say it once more.

537.4 īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum — faithless, untrustworthy

Before the new one: say the Latin for to reconcile, then the Latin for to give as a present.

You'll want to know: īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum

īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum — "faithless, untrustworthy".

Amīcus īnfīdus omnia, quae dīxī, aliīs nārrat.

The faithless friend tells others everything I said.

in- 'not' + fīdus 'faithful'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnfīdus is built on in- "not" and fīdus "faithful", from fīdō "to trust" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum
- Say it: īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum
- Recall: say the Latin for to reconcile, then the Latin for to give as a present, then say īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum again

Before you move on

What does īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum mean? ("Faithless, untrustworthy".) Say it once more.

537.5 dēserō, dēserere — to abandon, desert

Before the new one: say the Latin for to give as a present, then the Latin for faithless.

You'll want to know: dēserō, dēserere

dēserō, dēserere — "to abandon, desert".

Amīcus vērus amīcum in perīculō nōn dēserit.

A true friend does not abandon his friend in danger.

dēserō, dēserere, dēseruī, dēsertum: dē- 'away' + serō 'to join' — to break a tie. English desert.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēserō is built on dē- "away" and serō "to join, link" (Lewis & Short): to break off a tie. English desert comes from its participle dēsertus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēserō, dēserere
- Say it: dēserō, dēserere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēserō, dēserere
- Recall: say the Latin for to give as a present, then the Latin for faithless, then say dēserō, dēserere again

Before you move on

What does dēserō, dēserere mean? ("To abandon, desert".) Say it once more.

Chapter 538

Free time

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about leisure and holidays.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 538: I can talk about leisure and holidays.

538.1 ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum — at leisure, idle

> Before the new one: say the Latin for faithless, then the Latin for to abandon.

You'll want to know: ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum

ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum — "at leisure, idle".

> Diē fēstō cīvēs ōtiōsī in forō ambulant.
>
> On the holiday the citizens stroll at leisure in the forum.

From ōtium: free of business, with no blame meant. English otiose.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōtiōsus is built on ōtium "leisure" with -ōsus (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English otiose comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum
- Say it: ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for faithless, then the Latin for to abandon, then say ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum again

Before you move on

What does ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum mean? ("At leisure, idle".) Say it once more.

538.2 vacō, vacāre — to be free, have time (for)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to abandon, then the Latin for at leisure.

You'll want to know: vacō, vacāre vacō, vacāre — "to be free, have time (for)".

Hodiē vacō; tēcum ambulāre possum.

Today I am free; I can go for a walk with you.

vacō, vacāre, vacāvī, vacātum. To be empty, then to be free for something: vacāre litterīs — to have time for literature. English vacant, vacation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vacō is inherited, through Proto-Italic, from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "empty" (EtymDB). English vacant and vacation come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vacō, vacāre
- Say it: vacō, vacāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vacō, vacāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to abandon, then the Latin for at leisure, then say vacō, vacāre again

Before you move on

What does vacō, vacāre mean? ("To be free, have time (for)".) Say it once more.

538.3 fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum — on holiday, keeping holiday

Before the new one: say the Latin for at leisure, then the Latin for to be free.

You'll want to know: fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum

fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum — "on holiday, keeping holiday".

Puerī fēriātī tōtum diem lūdunt.

The boys on holiday play all day.

The participle of fērior — to keep holiday, from fēriae, already known.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fēriātus is the participle of fērior "to keep holiday", built on fēriae "holidays" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum
- Say it: fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum
- Recall: say the Latin for at leisure, then the Latin for to be free, then say fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum again

Before you move on

What does fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum mean? ("On holiday, keeping holiday".) Say it once more.

538.4 relaxō, relaxāre — to relax, ease; to loosen

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be free, then the Latin for on holiday.

You'll want to know: relaxō, relaxāre

relaxō, relaxāre — "to relax, ease; to loosen".

Post labōrem animum mūsicā relaxō.

After work I relax my mind with music.

relaxō, relaxāre, relaxāvī, relaxātum: re- + laxō 'to loosen'. English relax.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

relaxō is built on re- and laxō "to loosen", from laxus "slack" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English relax and release come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: relaxō, relaxāre
- Say it: relaxō, relaxāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with relaxō, relaxāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to be free, then the Latin for on holiday, then say relaxō, relaxāre again

Before you move on

What does relaxō, relaxāre mean? ("To relax, ease; to loosen".) Say it once more.

538.5 remissiō, remissiōnis — relaxation; a letting go

Before the new one: say the Latin for on holiday, then the Latin for to relax.

You'll want to know: remissiō, remissiōnis

remissiō, remissiōnis — "relaxation; a letting go".

Post studia remissiō animī necessāria est.

After study, relaxation of the mind is necessary.

Feminine, third declension, from remittō — to send back, slacken. English remission.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

remissiō is the action noun of remittō "to send back, slacken", built on re- and mittō (Lewis & Short). English remission comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: remissiō, remissiōnis
- Say it: remissiō, remissiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with remissiō, remissiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for on holiday, then the Latin for to relax, then say remissiō, remissiōnis again

Before you move on

What does remissiō, remissiōnis mean? ("Relaxation; a letting go".) Say it once more.

Chapter 539

Dice and board games

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about dice and board games.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 539: I can talk about dice and board games.

539.1 ālea, āleae — dice-playing, a game of chance

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to relax, then the Latin for relaxation.

You'll want to know: ālea, āleae

ālea, āleae — "dice-playing, a game of chance".

> Mīlitēs in castrīs āleā lūdunt.
>
> The soldiers play dice in the camp.

Feminine, first declension. Gambling at dice was forbidden except at festival time. Ālea iacta est — the die is cast.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ālea is a word of uncertain origin; Lewis & Short reports a guess linking it with a word for bone, but nothing is settled. English aleatory, depending on chance, comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ālea, āleae
- Say it: ālea, āleae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ālea, āleae
- Recall: say the Latin for to relax, then the Latin for relaxation, then say ālea, āleae again

Before you move on

What does ālea, āleae mean? ("Dice-playing, a game of chance".) Say it once more.

539.2 fritillus, fritillī — a dice-box

Before the new one: say the Latin for relaxation, then the Latin for dice-playing.

You'll want to know: fritillus, fritillī

fritillus, fritillī — "a dice-box".

Senex tālōs ē fritillō iacit.

The old man throws the knucklebones from the dice-box.

Masculine, second declension. A little cup for shaking and throwing the dice.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fritillus is a native Latin noun whose origin is not settled (Lewis & Short gives none). The flower fritillary is named after it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fritillus, fritillī
- Say it: fritillus, fritillī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fritillus, fritillī
- Recall: say the Latin for relaxation, then the Latin for dice-playing, then say fritillus, fritillī again

Before you move on

What does fritillus, fritillī mean? ("A dice-box".) Say it once more.

539.3 latrunculus, latrunculī — a piece in a board game; a robber

Before the new one: say the Latin for dice-playing, then the Latin for a dice-box.

You'll want to know: latrunculus, latrunculī

latrunculus, latrunculī — "a piece in a board game; a robber".

Duo amīcī latrunculīs lūdunt.

Two friends play the board game of soldiers.

Masculine, second declension. First a little robber or hired soldier, then a piece in a war game played on a board.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

latrunculus is a diminutive of latrō "robber, hired soldier" (Lewis & Short): the pieces of the game were little soldiers.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: latrunculus, latrunculī
- Say it: latrunculus, latrunculī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with latrunculus, latrunculī
- Recall: say the Latin for dice-playing, then the Latin for a dice-box, then say latrunculus, latrunculī again

Before you move on

What does latrunculus, latrunculī mean? ("A piece in a board game; a robber".) Say it once more.

539.4 lūsus, lūsūs — play, a game

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dice-box, then the Latin for a piece in a board game.

You'll want to know: lūsus, lūsūs

lūsus, lūsūs — "play, a game".

Lūsus puerōrum in viā clāmōsus est.

The children's play in the street is noisy.

Masculine, fourth declension, from lūdō — to play.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūsus is the action noun of lūdō "to play" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English illusion comes from the family, through illūdō "to mock".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lūsus, lūsūs
- Say it: lūsus, lūsūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lūsus, lūsūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a dice-box, then the Latin for a piece in a board game, then say lūsus, lūsūs again

Before you move on

What does lūsus, lūsūs mean? ("Play, a game".) Say it once more.

539.5 luctor, luctārī — to wrestle, struggle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a piece in a board game, then the Latin for play.

You'll want to know: luctor, luctārī

luctor, luctārī — "to wrestle, struggle".

Iuvenēs in campō luctantur.

The young men wrestle on the field.

Deponent: luctor, luctārī, luctātus sum. Also to struggle against something. English reluctant comes from reluctor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

luctor is built on lucta "wrestling" (Lewis & Short); EtymDB links it with a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to bend, twist". English reluctant comes from the compound reluctor.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: luctor, luctārī
- Say it: luctor, luctārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with luctor, luctārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a piece in a board game, then the Latin for play, then say luctor, luctārī again

Before you move on

What does luctor, luctārī mean? ("To wrestle, struggle".) Say it once more.

Chapter 540

Toys and play

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about children's toys and games.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 540: I can talk about children's toys and games.

540.1 pūpa, pūpae — a doll; a little girl

Before the new one: say the Latin for play, then the Latin for to wrestle.

You'll want to know: pūpa, pūpae

pūpa, pūpae — "a doll; a little girl".

> Fīliola cum pūpā suā dormit.
>
> The little daughter sleeps with her doll.

Feminine, first declension. Before her wedding a Roman girl gave her dolls to the household gods.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūpa is the feminine of pūpus "boy, child" (Lewis & Short). English puppet comes from it, and pupil from the diminutive pūpillus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pūpa, pūpae
- Say it: pūpa, pūpae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pūpa, pūpae
- Recall: say the Latin for play, then the Latin for to wrestle, then say pūpa, pūpae again

Before you move on

What does pūpa, pūpae mean? ("A doll; a little girl".) Say it once more.

540.2 trochus, trochī — a hoop

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wrestle, then the Latin for a doll.

You'll want to know: trochus, trochī

trochus, trochī — "a hoop".

Puer trochum per viam agit.

The boy drives his hoop along the street.

Masculine, second declension. A metal hoop with little rings, driven with a stick.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trochus was borrowed from Greek trochos "wheel, hoop" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: trochus, trochī
- Say it: trochus, trochī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with trochus, trochī
- Recall: say the Latin for to wrestle, then the Latin for a doll, then say trochus, trochī again

Before you move on

What does trochus, trochī mean? ("A hoop".) Say it once more.

540.3 turbō, turbinis — a spinning top; a whirlwind

Before the new one: say the Latin for a doll, then the Latin for a hoop.

You'll want to know: turbō, turbinis

turbō, turbinis — "a spinning top; a whirlwind".

Turbō in pavīmentō celeriter vertitur.

The top spins fast on the floor.

Masculine, third declension. Anything that spins: a top, a whirlwind. English turbine.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

turbō belongs with turba "commotion" and the verb turbō "to disturb" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): a thing in whirling motion. English turbine comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: turbō, turbinis
- Say it: turbō, turbinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with turbō, turbinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a doll, then the Latin for a hoop, then say turbō, turbinis again

Before you move on

What does turbō, turbinis mean? ("A spinning top; a whirlwind".) Say it once more.

540.4 harpastum, harpastī — a hand-ball game

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hoop, then the Latin for a spinning top.

You'll want to know: harpastum, harpastī

harpastum, harpastī — "a hand-ball game".

Iuvenēs in campō harpastō lūdunt.

The young men play hand-ball on the field.

Neuter, second declension. A rough team game with a small ball, from Greek.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

harpastum was borrowed from Greek harpaston (Lewis & Short), a ball one snatches from another, from harpazo "to seize".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: harpastum, harpastī
- Say it: harpastum, harpastī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with harpastum, harpastī
- Recall: say the Latin for a hoop, then the Latin for a spinning top, then say harpastum, harpastī again

Before you move on

What does harpastum, harpastī mean? ("A hand-ball game".) Say it once more.

540.5 natātiō, natātiōnis — swimming; a swimming place

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spinning top, then the Latin for a hand-ball game.

You'll want to know: natātiō, natātiōnis

natātiō, natātiōnis — "swimming; a swimming place".

Natātiō in marī mihi placet.

I like swimming in the sea.

Feminine, third declension, from natō — to swim.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

natātiō is the action noun of natō "to swim" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English natatorium, a swimming pool, comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: natātiō, natātiōnis
- Say it: natātiō, natātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with natātiō, natātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a spinning top, then the Latin for a hand-ball game, then say natātiō, natātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does natātiō, natātiōnis mean? ("Swimming; a swimming place".) Say it once more.

Chapter 541

At the baths

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the rooms of the Roman baths.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 541: I can name the rooms of the Roman baths.

541.1 balneātor, balneātōris — a bath-keeper

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a hand-ball game, then the Latin for swimming.

You'll want to know: balneātor, balneātōris

balneātor, balneātōris — "a bath-keeper".

> Balneātor aquam calefacit.
>
> The bath-keeper heats the water.

Masculine, third declension, from balneum: the man who runs a bath-house.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

balneātor is built on balneum "bath" with -tor (Lewis & Short); balneum was borrowed from Greek balaneion.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: balneātor, balneātōris
- Say it: balneātor, balneātōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with balneātor, balneātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a hand-ball game, then the Latin for swimming, then say balneātor, balneātōris again

Before you move on

What does balneātor, balneātōris mean? ("A bath-keeper".) Say it once more.

541.2 caldārium, caldāriī — the hot room (of the baths)

Before the new one: say the Latin for swimming, then the Latin for a bath-keeper.

You'll want to know: caldārium, caldāriī

caldārium, caldāriī — "the hot room (of the baths)".

In caldāriō aqua calida est.

In the hot room the water is hot.

Neuter, second declension, from caldus — a short form of calidus, hot.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caldārium is built on caldus, a shortened calidus "hot" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English cauldron comes from the related caldāria "cooking pot".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: caldārium, caldāriī
- Say it: caldārium, caldāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with caldārium, caldāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for swimming, then the Latin for a bath-keeper, then say caldārium, caldāriī again

Before you move on

What does caldārium, caldāriī mean? ("The hot room (of the baths)".) Say it once more.

541.3 tepidārium, tepidāriī — the warm room

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bath-keeper, then the Latin for the hot room.

You'll want to know: tepidārium, tepidāriī

tepidārium, tepidāriī — "the warm room".

Ē caldāriō in tepidārium īmus.

From the hot room we go into the warm room.

Neuter, second declension, from tepidus — lukewarm, already known.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tepidārium is built on tepidus "lukewarm" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tepidārium, tepidāriī
- Say it: tepidārium, tepidāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tepidārium, tepidāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a bath-keeper, then the Latin for the hot room, then say tepidārium, tepidāriī again

Before you move on

What does tepidārium, tepidāriī mean? ("The warm room".) Say it once more.

541.4 frīgidārium, frīgidāriī — the cold room

Before the new one: say the Latin for the hot room, then the Latin for the warm room.

You'll want to know: frīgidārium, frīgidāriī

frīgidārium, frīgidāriī — "the cold room".

Post caldārium in frīgidāriō natāmus.

After the hot room we swim in the cold room.

Neuter, second declension, from frīgidus — cold. It held a cold plunge pool.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frīgidārium is built on frīgidus "cold" (Lewis & Short); EtymDB traces frīgus to a Proto-Indo-European word for "cold". English frigid comes from frīgidus.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: frīgidārium, frīgidāriī
- Say it: frīgidārium, frīgidāriī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with frīgidārium, frīgidāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for the hot room, then the Latin for the warm room, then say frīgidārium, frīgidāriī again

Before you move on

What does frīgidārium, frīgidāriī mean? ("The cold room".) Say it once more.

541.5 piscīna, piscīnae — a pool; a fish-pond

Before the new one: say the Latin for the warm room, then the Latin for the cold room.

You'll want to know: piscīna, piscīnae

piscīna, piscīnae — "a pool; a fish-pond".

In piscīnā thermārum puerī natant.

Boys swim in the pool of the baths.

Feminine, first declension, from piscis — fish: first a fish-pond, then any pool for swimming.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piscīna is built on piscis "fish" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): a fish-pond, then a swimming pool. French piscine "swimming pool" comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: piscīna, piscīnae
- Say it: piscīna, piscīnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with piscīna, piscīnae
- Recall: say the Latin for the warm room, then the Latin for the cold room, then say piscīna, piscīnae again

Before you move on

What does piscīna, piscīnae mean? ("A pool; a fish-pond".) Say it once more.

Chapter 542

Oil, walks and the country

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe what Romans did after the baths.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 542: I can describe what Romans did after the baths.

542.1 strigilis, strigilis — a strigil, scraper

> Before the new one: say the Latin for the cold room, then the Latin for a pool.

You'll want to know: strigilis, strigilis strigilis, strigilis — "a strigil, scraper".

> Servus dorsum dominī strigile pūrgat.
>
> The slave cleans his master's back with a scraper.

Feminine, third declension. After oil and sweat, bathers scraped their skin clean with this curved tool.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children strigilis is built, Lewis & Short says, on stringō "to strip, graze"; EtymDB compares Greek stlengis, so the exact history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: strigilis, strigilis
- Say it: strigilis, strigilis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with strigilis, strigilis
- Recall: say the Latin for the cold room, then the Latin for a pool, then say strigilis, strigilis again

Before you move on

What does strigilis, strigilis mean? ("A strigil, scraper".) Say it once more.

542.2 unguō, unguere — to anoint, rub with oil

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pool, then the Latin for a strigil.

You'll want to know: unguō, unguere

unguō, unguere — "to anoint, rub with oil".

Post balneum corpus oleō unguimus.

After the bath we rub the body with oil.

unguō, unguere, ūnxī, ūnctum; also spelt ungō. Unguentum, already known, comes from it. English unction.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

unguō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to anoint, salve" (EtymDB). unguentum "ointment" comes from it, and English unction and ointment from its family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: unguō, unguere
- Say it: unguō, unguere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with unguō, unguere
- Recall: say the Latin for a pool, then the Latin for a strigil, then say unguō, unguere again

Before you move on

What does unguō, unguere mean? ("To anoint, rub with oil".) Say it once more.

542.3 ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis — a walk, stroll

Before the new one: say the Latin for a strigil, then the Latin for to anoint.

You'll want to know: ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis

ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis — "a walk, stroll".

Post cēnam ambulātiōnem in hortō facimus.

After dinner we take a walk in the garden.

Feminine, third declension, from ambulō. Also a covered walk in a villa.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ambulātiō is the action noun of ambulō "to walk" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English ambulance and perambulate come from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis
- Say it: ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a strigil, then the Latin for to anoint, then say ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis mean? ("A walk, stroll".) Say it once more.

542.4 rūsticor, rūsticārī — to stay in the country

Before the new one: say the Latin for to anoint, then the Latin for a walk.

You'll want to know: rūsticor, rūsticārī

rūsticor, rūsticārī — "to stay in the country".

Aestāte pater in vīllā rūsticātur.

In summer father stays in the country at the villa.

Deponent: rūsticor, rūsticārī, rūsticātus sum, from rūsticus. English rusticate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rūsticor is built on rūsticus "of the country", from rūs "countryside" (Lewis & Short). English rusticate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rūsticor, rūsticārī
- Say it: rūsticor, rūsticārī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rūsticor, rūsticārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to anoint, then the Latin for a walk, then say rūsticor, rūsticārī again

Before you move on

What does rūsticor, rūsticārī mean? ("To stay in the country".) Say it once more.

542.5 amoenus, amoena, amoenum — lovely, pleasant (of places)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a walk, then the Latin for to stay in the country.

You'll want to know: amoenus, amoena, amoenum

amoenus, amoena, amoenum — "lovely, pleasant (of places)".

Prope rīvum locus amoenus est.

There is a lovely spot near the stream.

Of gardens, groves and views. Locus amoenus — a pleasant place.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amoenus is a native Latin adjective; Lewis & Short reports links with amō "to love" and with a Greek word, but the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: amoenus, amoena, amoenum
- Say it: amoenus, amoena, amoenum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with amoenus, amoena, amoenum
- Recall: say the Latin for a walk, then the Latin for to stay in the country, then say amoenus, amoena, amoenum again

Before you move on

What does amoenus, amoena, amoenum mean? ("Lovely, pleasant (of places)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 543

Song

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about singing and songs.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 543: I can talk about singing and songs.

543.1 cantus, cantūs — singing, song; music

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to stay in the country, then the Latin for lovely.

You'll want to know: cantus, cantūs

cantus, cantūs — "singing, song; music".

> Cantum avium māne audīmus.
>
> In the morning we hear the song of the birds.

Masculine, fourth declension, from canō. Singing, and playing too. English chant comes from the verb cantō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cantus is the action noun of canō "to sing", inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to sing" (EtymDB). English chant belongs to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cantus, cantūs
- Say it: cantus, cantūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cantus, cantūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to stay in the country, then the Latin for lovely, then say cantus, cantūs again

Before you move on

What does cantus, cantūs mean? ("Singing, song; music".) Say it once more.

543.2 cantiō, cantiōnis — a song; a spell

Before the new one: say the Latin for lovely, then the Latin for singing.

You'll want to know: cantiō, cantiōnis

cantiō, cantiōnis — "a song; a spell".

Ancillae in culīnā cantiōnem canunt.

The maids sing a song in the kitchen.

Feminine, third declension, from canō. Also a magic spell sung over someone. French chanson and Italian canzone come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cantiō is the action noun of canō "to sing" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). French chanson and Italian canzone come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cantiō, cantiōnis
- Say it: cantiō, cantiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cantiō, cantiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for lovely, then the Latin for singing, then say cantiō, cantiōnis again

Before you move on

What does cantiō, cantiōnis mean? ("A song; a spell".) Say it once more.

543.3 cantilēna, cantilēnae — an old song, the same old tune

Before the new one: say the Latin for singing, then the Latin for a song.

You'll want to know: cantilēna, cantilēnae

cantilēna, cantilēnae — "an old song, the same old tune".

Avia eandem cantilēnam semper canit.

Grandmother always sings the same old song.

Feminine, first declension. Cantilēnam eandem canis — you sing the same old tune: you keep repeating yourself.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cantilēna is built on cantillō "to hum", a diminutive of cantō "to sing" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cantilēna, cantilēnae
- Say it: cantilēna, cantilēnae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cantilēna, cantilēnae
- Recall: say the Latin for singing, then the Latin for a song, then say cantilēna, cantilēnae again

Before you move on

What does cantilēna, cantilēnae mean? ("An old song, the same old tune".) Say it once more.

543.4 concinō, concinere — to sing together, sound in harmony

Before the new one: say the Latin for a song, then the Latin for an old song.

You'll want to know: concinō, concinere

concinō, concinere — "to sing together, sound in harmony".

Puellae in templō concinunt.

The girls sing together in the temple.

concinō, concinere, concinuī: con- + canō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

concinō is built on con- "together" and canō "to sing" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: concinō, concinere
- Say it: concinō, concinere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with concinō, concinere
- Recall: say the Latin for a song, then the Latin for an old song, then say concinō, concinere again

Before you move on

What does concinō, concinere mean? ("To sing together, sound in harmony".) Say it once more.

543.5 canōrus, canōra, canōrum — melodious, tuneful

Before the new one: say the Latin for an old song, then the Latin for to sing together.

You'll want to know: canōrus, canōra, canōrum

canōrus, canōra, canōrum — "melodious, tuneful".

Vōx puellae canōra est.

The girl's voice is melodious.

From canor — melody, and so from canō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

canōrus is built on canor "melody", from canō "to sing" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: canōrus, canōra, canōrum
- Say it: canōrus, canōra, canōrum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with canōrus, canōra, canōrum
- Recall: say the Latin for an old song, then the Latin for to sing together, then say canōrus, canōra, canōrum again

Before you move on

What does canōrus, canōra, canōrum mean? ("Melodious, tuneful".) Say it once more.

Chapter 544

Strings

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the lyre and those who play it.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 544: I can talk about the lyre and those who play it.

544.1 cithara, citharae — a cithara, concert lyre

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to sing together, then the Latin for melodious.

You'll want to know: cithara, citharae

cithara, citharae — "a cithara, concert lyre".

> Iuvenis citharam pulsat et canit.
>
> The young man plays the lyre and sings.

Feminine, first declension. A large lyre for public performance.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cithara was borrowed from Greek kithara (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English guitar and zither come from the same Greek word by other routes.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cithara, citharae
- Say it: cithara, citharae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cithara, citharae
- Recall: say the Latin for to sing together, then the Latin for melodious, then say cithara, citharae again

Before you move on

What does cithara, citharae mean? ("A cithara, concert lyre".) Say it once more.

544.2 citharoedus, citharoedī — a singer to the lyre

Before the new one: say the Latin for melodious, then the Latin for a cithara.

You'll want to know: citharoedus, citharoedī

citharoedus, citharoedī — "a singer to the lyre".

Citharoedus in theātrō canit.

The lyre-singer sings in the theatre.

Masculine, second declension. A star performer who played the cithara and sang.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

citharoedus was borrowed from Greek kitharodos, built on kithara "lyre" and aoidos "singer" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: citharoedus, citharoedī
- Say it: citharoedus, citharoedī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with citharoedus, citharoedī
- Recall: say the Latin for melodious, then the Latin for a cithara, then say citharoedus, citharoedī again

Before you move on

What does citharoedus, citharoedī mean? ("A singer to the lyre".) Say it once more.

544.3 chorda, chordae — a string (of an instrument)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cithara, then the Latin for a singer to the lyre.

You'll want to know: chorda, chordae

chorda, chordae — "a string (of an instrument)".

> Ūna chorda lyrae rupta est.
>
> One string of the lyre is broken.

Feminine, first declension, from Greek: first gut, then a string. English chord and cord.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

chorda was borrowed from Greek chorde "gut, string" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English cord and chord come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: chorda, chordae
- Say it: chorda, chordae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with chorda, chordae
- Recall: say the Latin for a cithara, then the Latin for a singer to the lyre, then say chorda, chordae again

Before you move on

What does chorda, chordae mean? ("A string (of an instrument)".) Say it once more.

544.4 fidicen, fidicinis — a lyre-player

Before the new one: say the Latin for a singer to the lyre, then the Latin for a string.

You'll want to know: fidicen, fidicinis

fidicen, fidicinis — "a lyre-player".

Fidicen ad convīvium venit.

A lyre-player comes to the dinner party.

Masculine, third declension: fidēs 'lyre strings' + canō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fidicen is built on fidēs "the strings of a lyre" and canō "to sing, play" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fidicen, fidicinis
- Say it: fidicen, fidicinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with fidicen, fidicinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a singer to the lyre, then the Latin for a string, then say fidicen, fidicinis again

Before you move on

What does fidicen, fidicinis mean? ("A lyre-player".) Say it once more.

544.5 psallō, psallere — to play the cithara, sing to strings

Before the new one: say the Latin for a string, then the Latin for a lyre-player.

You'll want to know: psallō, psallere

psallō, psallere — "to play the cithara, sing to strings".

Puella psallit et saltat.

The girl plays the lyre and dances.

psallō, psallere, psallī. From Greek. English psalm comes from the same Greek verb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

psallō was borrowed from Greek psallo "to pluck the strings" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English psalm comes from the same Greek verb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: psallō, psallere
- Say it: psallō, psallere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with psallō, psallere
- Recall: say the Latin for a string, then the Latin for a lyre-player, then say psallō, psallere again

Before you move on

What does psallō, psallere mean? ("To play the cithara, sing to strings".) Say it once more.

544.6 Words from chapters 537–544 — a review

Say the Latin for a quarrel and to reconcile.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a quarrel, to reconcile, to give as a present, faithless, to abandon
- at leisure, to be free, on holiday, to relax, relaxation
- dice-playing, a dice-box, a piece in a board game, play, to wrestle
- a doll, a hoop, a spinning top, a hand-ball game, swimming
- a bath-keeper, the hot room, the warm room, the cold room, a pool
- a strigil, to anoint, a walk, to stay in the country, lovely
- singing, a song, an old song, to sing together, melodious
- a cithara, a singer to the lyre, a string, a lyre-player, to play the cithara

Before you move on

A quarrel? (iūrgium, iūrgiī.) To reconcile? (reconciliō, reconciliāre.) To give as a present? (dōnō, dōnāre.) Faithless? (īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum.) To abandon? (dēserō, dēserere.) At leisure? (ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum.) To be free? (vacō, vacāre.) On holiday? (fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum.) To relax? (relaxō, relaxāre.) Relaxation? (remissiō, remissiōnis.) Dice-playing? (ālea, āleae.) A dice-box? (fritillus, fritillī.) A piece in a board game? (latrunculus, latrunculī.) Play? (lūsus, lūsūs.) To wrestle? (luctor, luctārī.) A doll? (pūpa, pūpae.) A hoop? (trochus, trochī.) A spinning top? (turbō, turbinis.) A hand-ball game? (harpastum, harpastī.) Swimming? (natātiō, natātiōnis.) A bath-keeper? (balneātor, balneātōris.) The hot room? (caldārium, caldāriī.) The warm room? (tepidārium, tepidāriī.) The cold room? (frīgidārium, frīgidāriī.) A pool? (piscīna, piscīnae.) A strigil? (strigilis, strigilis.) To anoint? (unguō, unguere.) A walk? (ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis.) To stay in the country? (rūsticor, rūsticārī.) Lovely? (amoenus, amoena, amoenum.) Singing? (cantus, cantūs.) A song? (cantiō, cantiōnis.) An old song? (cantilēna, cantilēnae.) To sing together? (concinō, concinere.) Melodious? (canōrus, canōra, canōrum.) A cithara? (cithara, citharae.) A singer to the lyre? (citharoedus, citharoedī.) A string? (chorda, chordae.) A lyre-player? (fidicen, fidicinis.) To play the cithara? (psallō, psallere.)

Chapter 545

Sound and harmony

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe sounds, echoes and harmony.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 545: I can describe sounds, echoes and harmony.

545.1 sonus, sonī — a sound

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lyre-player, then the Latin for to play the cithara.

You'll want to know: sonus, sonī

sonus, sonī — "a sound".

Sonus tubae per castra it.

The sound of the trumpet goes through the camp.

Masculine, second declension. English sound comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sonus belongs with sonō "to sound", inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to sound" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English sound comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sonus, sonī
- Say it: sonus, sonī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sonus, sonī
- Recall: say the Latin for a lyre-player, then the Latin for to play the cithara, then say sonus, sonī again

Before you move on

What does sonus, sonī mean? ("A sound".) Say it once more.

545.2 sonō, sonāre — to sound, ring

Before the new one: say the Latin for to play the cithara, then the Latin for a sound.

You'll want to know: sonō, sonāre

sonō, sonāre — "to sound, ring".

Tintinnābulum sonat; hospitēs adsunt.

The bell rings; the guests are here.

sonō, sonāre, sonuī, sonitum. Italian sonata, a piece to be played, comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sonō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to sound" (EtymDB). Italian sonata comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sonō, sonāre
- Say it: sonō, sonāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sonō, sonāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to play the cithara, then the Latin for a sound, then say sonō, sonāre again

Before you move on

What does sonō, sonāre mean? ("To sound, ring".) Say it once more.

545.3 resonō, resonāre — to resound, echo

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sound, then the Latin for to sound.

You'll want to know: resonō, resonāre

resonō, resonāre — "to resound, echo".

Tōta vallis cantū pāstōrum resonat.

The whole valley echoes with the shepherds' song.

resonō, resonāre, resonāvī: re- 'back' + sonō. English resound, resonant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

resonō is built on re- "back" and sonō "to sound" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English resound and resonant come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: resonō, resonāre
- Say it: resonō, resonāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with resonō, resonāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a sound, then the Latin for to sound, then say resonō, resonāre again

Before you move on

What does resonō, resonāre mean? ("To resound, echo".) Say it once more.

545.4 symphōnia, symphōniae — a band of musicians; harmony

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sound, then the Latin for to resound.

You'll want to know: symphōnia, symphōniae

symphōnia, symphōniae — "a band of musicians; harmony".

In convīviō symphōnia canit.

At the dinner party a band plays.

Feminine, first declension, from Greek: sounds together, then the slaves who made music at dinner. English symphony.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

symphōnia was borrowed from Greek symphonia, built on syn "with" and phone "sound" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English symphony comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: symphōnia, symphōniae
- Say it: symphōnia, symphōniae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with symphōnia, symphōniae
- Recall: say the Latin for to sound, then the Latin for to resound, then say symphōnia, symphōniae again

Before you move on

What does symphōnia, symphōniae mean? ("A band of musicians; harmony".) Say it once more.

545.5 concentus, concentūs — harmony, singing together

Before the new one: say the Latin for to resound, then the Latin for a band of musicians.

You'll want to know: concentus, concentūs

concentus, concentūs — "harmony, singing together".

Concentus avium in silvā dulcis est.

The chorus of the birds in the wood is sweet.

Masculine, fourth declension, from concinō. Also agreement between people.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

concentus is the action noun of concinō "to sing together" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: concentus, concentūs
- Say it: concentus, concentūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with concentus, concentūs
- Recall: say the Latin for to resound, then the Latin for a band of musicians, then say concentus, concentūs again

Before you move on

What does concentus, concentūs mean? ("Harmony, singing together".) Say it once more.

Chapter 546

At the theatre

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a Roman theatre.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 546: I can describe a Roman theatre.

546.1 cavea, caveae — the seats of a theatre; a cage

Before the new one: say the Latin for a band of musicians, then the Latin for harmony.

You'll want to know: cavea, caveae

cavea, caveae — "the seats of a theatre; a cage".

> Tōta cavea plaudit.
>
> The whole audience applauds.

Feminine, first declension, from cavus — hollow. The hollow bowl of seats, and so the audience; also a cage or den. English cage.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cavea is built on cavus "hollow" (Lewis & Short). English cage comes from it through Old French.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cavea, caveae
- Say it: cavea, caveae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cavea, caveae
- Recall: say the Latin for a band of musicians, then the Latin for harmony, then say cavea, caveae again

Before you move on

What does cavea, caveae mean? ("The seats of a theatre; a cage".) Say it once more.

546.2 pulpitum, pulpitī — a stage, platform

Before the new one: say the Latin for harmony, then the Latin for the seats of a theatre.

You'll want to know: pulpitum, pulpitī

pulpitum, pulpitī — "a stage, platform".

Histriō in pulpitum ascendit.

The actor climbs onto the stage.

Neuter, second declension. A wooden platform for actors or speakers. English pulpit.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulpitum is a Latin word whose origin is not settled; Lewis & Short gives none. English pulpit comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pulpitum, pulpitī
- Say it: pulpitum, pulpitī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pulpitum, pulpitī
- Recall: say the Latin for harmony, then the Latin for the seats of a theatre, then say pulpitum, pulpitī again

Before you move on

What does pulpitum, pulpitī mean? ("A stage, platform".) Say it once more.

546.3 aulaeum, aulaeī — a theatre curtain

Before the new one: say the Latin for the seats of a theatre, then the Latin for a stage.

You'll want to know: aulaeum, aulaeī

aulaeum, aulaeī — "a theatre curtain".

Aulaeum premitur, et fābula incipit.

The curtain is lowered, and the play begins.

Neuter, second declension. Roman curtains worked upside down: they sank into a slot at the start of a play and rose at the end.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aulaeum was borrowed from Greek aulaia "curtain, hanging" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: aulaeum, aulaeī
- Say it: aulaeum, aulaeī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with aulaeum, aulaeī
- Recall: say the Latin for the seats of a theatre, then the Latin for a stage, then say aulaeum, aulaeī again

Before you move on

What does aulaeum, aulaeī mean? ("A theatre curtain".) Say it once more.

546.4 prologus, prologī — a prologue; its speaker

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stage, then the Latin for a theatre curtain.

You'll want to know: prologus, prologī

prologus, prologī — "a prologue; its speaker".

Prologus argūmentum fābulae nārrat.

The prologue tells the plot of the play.

Masculine, second declension, from Greek. Both the speech before a comedy and the actor who gave it. English prologue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prologus was borrowed from Greek prologos, built on pro "before" and logos "speech" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English prologue comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: prologus, prologī
- Say it: prologus, prologī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with prologus, prologī
- Recall: say the Latin for a stage, then the Latin for a theatre curtain, then say prologus, prologī again

Before you move on

What does prologus, prologī mean? ("A prologue; its speaker".) Say it once more.

546.5 pantomīmus, pantomīmī — a mime dancer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a theatre curtain, then the Latin for a prologue.

You'll want to know: pantomīmus, pantomīmī

pantomīmus, pantomīmī — "a mime dancer".

Pantomīmus sine verbīs fābulam saltat.

The mime dancer dances a story without words.

Masculine, second declension, from Greek. A solo dancer who told myths with gestures; the best were stars.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pantomīmus was borrowed from Greek pantomimos, built on pan "all" and mimeisthai "to imitate" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English pantomime comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pantomīmus, pantomīmī
- Say it: pantomīmus, pantomīmī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pantomīmus, pantomīmī
- Recall: say the Latin for a theatre curtain, then the Latin for a prologue, then say pantomīmus, pantomīmī again

Before you move on

What does pantomīmus, pantomīmī mean? ("A mime dancer".) Say it once more.

Chapter 547

Images and art

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about portraits, shapes and mosaics.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 547: I can talk about portraits, shapes and mosaics.

547.1 imāgō, imāginis — an image, likeness, portrait

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a prologue, then the Latin for a mime dancer.

You'll want to know: imāgō, imāginis

imāgō, imāginis — "an image, likeness, portrait".

> In ātriō imāginēs maiōrum sunt.
>
> In the hall there are portraits of the ancestors.

Feminine, third declension. Also the wax masks of ancestors kept in the hall. English image.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

imāgō is usually linked with imitor "to copy" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English image and imagine come from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: imāgō, imāginis
- Say it: imāgō, imāginis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with imāgō, imāginis
- Recall: say the Latin for a prologue, then the Latin for a mime dancer, then say imāgō, imāginis again

Before you move on

What does imāgō, imāginis mean? ("An image, likeness, portrait".) Say it once more.

547.2 effigiēs, effigiēī — a likeness, effigy

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mime dancer, then the Latin for an image.

You'll want to know: effigiēs, effigiēī

effigiēs, effigiēī — "a likeness, effigy".

Effigiēs avī in ātriō stat.

A likeness of grandfather stands in the hall.

Feminine, fifth declension, from effingō — to shape, portray. English effigy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

effigiēs is built on effingō "to form, portray", from ex- and fingō "to shape" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English effigy comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: effigiēs, effigiēī
- Say it: effigiēs, effigiēī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with effigiēs, effigiēī
- Recall: say the Latin for a mime dancer, then the Latin for an image, then say effigiēs, effigiēī again

Before you move on

What does effigiēs, effigiēī mean? ("A likeness, effigy".) Say it once more.

547.3 figūra, figūrae — a shape, form, figure

Before the new one: say the Latin for an image, then the Latin for a likeness.

You'll want to know: figūra, figūrae

figūra, figūrae — "a shape, form, figure".

Pictor figūram equī in mūrō pingit.

The painter paints the shape of a horse on the wall.

Feminine, first declension, from fingō. English figure.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

figūra is built on fingō "to shape, mould" (Lewis & Short); EtymDB traces fingō to a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to knead, shape". English figure comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: figūra, figūrae
- Say it: figūra, figūrae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with figūra, figūrae
- Recall: say the Latin for an image, then the Latin for a likeness, then say figūra, figūrae again

Before you move on

What does figūra, figūrae mean? ("A shape, form, figure".) Say it once more.

547.4 tessella, tessellae — a small cube (of mosaic)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a likeness, then the Latin for a shape.

You'll want to know: tessella, tessellae

tessella, tessellae — "a small cube (of mosaic)".

Faber pavīmentum ex multīs tessellīs facit.

The craftsman makes the floor out of many little cubes.

Feminine, a diminutive of tessera — a cube, a die. English tessellated.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tessella is a diminutive of tessera "a cube, die" (Lewis & Short). English tessellated comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tessella, tessellae
- Say it: tessella, tessellae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tessella, tessellae
- Recall: say the Latin for a likeness, then the Latin for a shape, then say tessella, tessellae again

Before you move on

What does tessella, tessellae mean? ("A small cube (of mosaic)".) Say it once more.

547.5 caelō, caelāre — to engrave, carve in relief

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shape, then the Latin for a small cube.

You'll want to know: caelō, caelāre

caelō, caelāre — "to engrave, carve in relief".

Faber pōculum argenteum caelat.

The smith engraves a silver cup.

caelō, caelāre, caelāvī, caelātum: raised work on silver, gold or ivory. Not to be confused with cēlō — to hide.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caelō is built on caelum "an engraver's chisel", a different word from caelum "sky" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: caelō, caelāre
- Say it: caelō, caelāre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with caelō, caelāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a shape, then the Latin for a small cube, then say caelō, caelāre again

Before you move on

What does caelō, caelāre mean? ("To engrave, carve in relief".) Say it once more.

Chapter 548

Beauty

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe beauty, charm and ugliness.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 548: I can describe beauty, charm and ugliness.

548.1 pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis — beauty

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a small cube, then the Latin for to engrave.

You'll want to know: pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis

pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis — "beauty".

> Pulchritūdō hortī hospitēs dēlectat.
>
> The beauty of the garden delights the guests.

Feminine, third declension, from pulcher. English pulchritude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulchritūdō is built on pulcher "beautiful" with -tūdō (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English pulchritude comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis
- Say it: pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a small cube, then the Latin for to engrave, then say pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis again

Before you move on

What does pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis mean? ("Beauty".) Say it once more.

548.2 speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum — good-looking, handsome

Before the new one: say the Latin for to engrave, then the Latin for beauty.

You'll want to know: speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum

speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum — "good-looking, handsome".

Iuvenis speciōsus est, sed superbus.

The young man is good-looking, but proud.

From speciēs — appearance. Later also showy but false: English specious.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

speciōsus is built on speciēs "appearance, look", from speciō "to behold" (Lewis & Short). English specious comes from it, with the later sense "fair on the surface".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum
- Say it: speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for to engrave, then the Latin for beauty, then say speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum again

Before you move on

What does speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum mean? ("Good-looking, handsome".) Say it once more.

548.3 ēlegāns, ēlegantis — elegant, refined, tasteful

Before the new one: say the Latin for beauty, then the Latin for good-looking.

You'll want to know: ēlegāns, ēlegantis

ēlegāns, ēlegantis — "elegant, refined, tasteful".

Domus eius parva, sed ēlegāns est.

His house is small but elegant.

One ending. First choosy, then of good taste. English elegant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēlegāns is probably an old form of ēligēns, the participle of ēligō "to pick out" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB), from legō "to choose". English elegant comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēlegāns, ēlegantis
- Say it: ēlegāns, ēlegantis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēlegāns, ēlegantis
- Recall: say the Latin for beauty, then the Latin for good-looking, then say ēlegāns, ēlegantis again

Before you move on

What does ēlegāns, ēlegantis mean? ("Elegant, refined, tasteful".) Say it once more.

548.4 ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī — an ornament, decoration

Before the new one: say the Latin for good-looking, then the Latin for elegant.

You'll want to know: ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī

ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī — "an ornament, decoration".

Domina ōrnāmenta aurea gerit.

The lady wears gold ornaments.

Neuter, second declension, from ōrnō — to equip, adorn. English ornament.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrnāmentum is built on ōrnō "to equip, adorn" with -mentum (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English ornament comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī
- Say it: ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for good-looking, then the Latin for elegant, then say ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī again

Before you move on

What does ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī mean? ("An ornament, decoration".) Say it once more.

548.5 dēfōrmis, dēfōrme — ugly, misshapen

Before the new one: say the Latin for elegant, then the Latin for an ornament.

You'll want to know: dēfōrmis, dēfōrme

dēfōrmis, dēfōrme — "ugly, misshapen".

Statua dēfōrmis est, sed antīqua.

The statue is ugly, but old.

Two endings. dē- 'away from' + fōrma 'shape, beauty'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēfōrmis is built on dē- "away from" and fōrma "shape, beauty" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English deformed comes from the related verb dēfōrmō.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dēfōrmis, dēfōrme
- Say it: dēfōrmis, dēfōrme, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dēfōrmis, dēfōrme
- Recall: say the Latin for elegant, then the Latin for an ornament, then say dēfōrmis, dēfōrme again

Before you move on

What does dēfōrmis, dēfōrme mean? ("Ugly, misshapen".) Say it once more.

Chapter 549

Poems and readings

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about poems and public readings.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 549: I can talk about poems and public readings.

549.1 poēma, poēmatis — a poem

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an ornament, then the Latin for ugly.

You'll want to know: poēma, poēmatis

poēma, poēmatis — "a poem".

> Poēta novum poēma amīcīs legit.
>
> The poet reads his new poem to his friends.

Neuter, third declension, from Greek; dative and ablative plural poēmatīs. English poem.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

poēma was borrowed from Greek poiema "a thing made, a poem", from poieo "to make" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English poem comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: poēma, poēmatis
- Say it: poēma, poēmatis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with poēma, poēmatis
- Recall: say the Latin for an ornament, then the Latin for ugly, then say poēma, poēmatis again

Before you move on

What does poēma, poēmatis mean? ("A poem".) Say it once more.

549.2 epigramma, epigrammatis — an epigram, a short poem

Before the new one: say the Latin for ugly, then the Latin for a poem.

You'll want to know: epigramma, epigrammatis

epigramma, epigrammatis — "an epigram, a short poem".

Hoc epigramma breve et facētum est.

This epigram is short and witty.

Neuter, third declension, from Greek: first an inscription, then a short, pointed poem. English epigram.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

epigramma was borrowed from Greek epigramma "inscription", from epigrapho "to write upon" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English epigram comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: epigramma, epigrammatis
- Say it: epigramma, epigrammatis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with epigramma, epigrammatis
- Recall: say the Latin for ugly, then the Latin for a poem, then say epigramma, epigrammatis again

Before you move on

What does epigramma, epigrammatis mean? ("An epigram, a short poem".) Say it once more.

549.3 versiculus, versiculī — a little verse, a short line

Before the new one: say the Latin for a poem, then the Latin for an epigram.

You'll want to know: versiculus, versiculī

versiculus, versiculī — "a little verse, a short line".

Amīcus mihi paucōs versiculōs scrībit.

My friend writes me a few little verses.

Masculine, a diminutive of versus — a line of verse.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

versiculus is a diminutive of versus "a line of writing", from vertō "to turn" (Lewis & Short): the turn at the end of a line.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: versiculus, versiculī
- Say it: versiculus, versiculī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with versiculus, versiculī
- Recall: say the Latin for a poem, then the Latin for an epigram, then say versiculus, versiculī again

Before you move on

What does versiculus, versiculī mean? ("A little verse, a short line".) Say it once more.

549.4 recitātiō, recitātiōnis — a public reading

Before the new one: say the Latin for an epigram, then the Latin for a little verse.

You'll want to know: recitātiō, recitātiōnis

recitātiō, recitātiōnis — "a public reading".

Hodiē poēta recitātiōnem in ātriō facit.

Today the poet gives a reading in the hall.

Feminine, third declension, from recitō — to read aloud. Authors read new work to invited listeners. English recitation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

recitātiō is the action noun of recitō "to read aloud", built on re- and citō "to call" (Lewis & Short). English recitation comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: recitātiō, recitātiōnis
- Say it: recitātiō, recitātiōnis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with recitātiō, recitātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for an epigram, then the Latin for a little verse, then say recitātiō, recitātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does recitātiō, recitātiōnis mean? ("A public reading".) Say it once more.

549.5 audītor, audītōris — a listener, hearer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a little verse, then the Latin for a public reading.

You'll want to know: audītor, audītōris

audītor, audītōris — "a listener, hearer".

Audītōrēs poētae plaudunt.

The listeners applaud the poet.

Masculine, third declension, from audiō; also a pupil. English auditor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

audītor is built on audiō "to hear" with -tor (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English auditor and auditorium come from the family.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: audītor, audītōris
- Say it: audītor, audītōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with audītor, audītōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a little verse, then the Latin for a public reading, then say audītor, audītōris again

Before you move on

What does audītor, audītōris mean? ("A listener, hearer".) Say it once more.

Chapter 550

Readers and booksellers

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about readers, booksellers and reading.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 550: I can talk about readers, booksellers and reading.

550.1 litterātus, litterāta, litterātum — learned, well-read

Before the new one: say the Latin for a public reading, then the Latin for a listener.

You'll want to know: litterātus, litterāta, litterātum

litterātus, litterāta, litterātum — "learned, well-read".

> Vir litterātus multōs librōs habet.
>
> The learned man has many books.

From litterae — letters, learning. English literate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

litterātus is built on littera "a letter" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): lettered, learned. English literate comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: litterātus, litterāta, litterātum
- Say it: litterātus, litterāta, litterātum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with litterātus, litterāta, litterātum
- Recall: say the Latin for a public reading, then the Latin for a listener, then say litterātus, litterāta, litterātum again

Before you move on

What does litterātus, litterāta, litterātum mean? ("Learned, well-read".) Say it once more.

550.2 bibliopōla, bibliopōlae — a bookseller

Before the new one: say the Latin for a listener, then the Latin for learned.

You'll want to know: bibliopōla, bibliopōlae

bibliopōla, bibliopōlae — "a bookseller".

Bibliopōla novōs librōs in tabernā vendit.

The bookseller sells new books in his shop.

Masculine, first declension, from Greek biblion 'book' + pōlein 'to sell'.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bibliopōla was borrowed from Greek bibliopoles, built on biblion "book" and poles "seller" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bibliopōla, bibliopōlae
- Say it: bibliopōla, bibliopōlae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bibliopōla, bibliopōlae
- Recall: say the Latin for a listener, then the Latin for learned, then say bibliopōla, bibliopōlae again

Before you move on

What does bibliopōla, bibliopōlae mean? ("A bookseller".) Say it once more.

550.3 lēctor, lēctōris — a reader

Before the new one: say the Latin for learned, then the Latin for a bookseller.

You'll want to know: lēctor, lēctōris

lēctor, lēctōris — "a reader".

Lēctor dominō librum legit.

The reader reads a book to his master.

Masculine, third declension, from legō. Rich houses kept a slave to read aloud.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lēctor is built on legō "to read" with -tor (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English lecture comes from the related lēctūra.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lēctor, lēctōris
- Say it: lēctor, lēctōris, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lēctor, lēctōris
- Recall: say the Latin for learned, then the Latin for a bookseller, then say lēctor, lēctōris again

Before you move on

What does lēctor, lēctōris mean? ("A reader".) Say it once more.

550.4 perlegō, perlegere — to read through

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bookseller, then the Latin for a reader.

You'll want to know: perlegō, perlegere

perlegō, perlegere — "to read through".

Epistulam tuam ter perlēgī.

I have read your letter through three times.

perlegō, perlegere, perlēgī, perlēctum: per 'through' + legō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perlegō is built on per- "through" and legō "to read" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: perlegō, perlegere
- Say it: perlegō, perlegere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with perlegō, perlegere
- Recall: say the Latin for a bookseller, then the Latin for a reader, then say perlegō, perlegere again

Before you move on

What does perlegō, perlegere mean? ("To read through".) Say it once more.

550.5 ēvolvō, ēvolvere — to unroll; to read (a book)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a reader, then the Latin for to read through.

You'll want to know: ēvolvō, ēvolvere

ēvolvō, ēvolvere — "to unroll; to read (a book)".

Discipulus librum ēvolvit et legit.

The pupil unrolls the book and reads.

ēvolvō, ēvolvere, ēvolvī, ēvolūtum. Books were rolls, so to read was to unroll. English evolve.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēvolvō is built on ē- "out" and volvō "to roll" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short): to unroll a book. English evolve comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ēvolvō, ēvolvere
- Say it: ēvolvō, ēvolvere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ēvolvō, ēvolvere
- Recall: say the Latin for a reader, then the Latin for to read through, then say ēvolvō, ēvolvere again

Before you move on

What does ēvolvō, ēvolvere mean? ("To unroll; to read (a book)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 551

Book boxes and tablets

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about writing materials and replying to letters.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 551: I can talk about writing materials and replying to letters.

551.1 capsa, capsae — a book box

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to read through, then the Latin for to unroll.

You'll want to know: capsa, capsae

capsa, capsae — "a book box".

> Puer librōs in capsā portat.
>
> The boy carries his books in a book box.

Feminine, first declension, from capiō — to hold. English case, a box, comes from it through French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

capsa is built on capiō "to take, hold" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB). English case "box" comes from it through French, and capsule from its diminutive.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: capsa, capsae
- Say it: capsa, capsae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with capsa, capsae
- Recall: say the Latin for to read through, then the Latin for to unroll, then say capsa, capsae again

Before you move on

What does capsa, capsae mean? ("A book box".) Say it once more.

551.2 scrīnium, scrīniī — a writing case, chest for papers

Before the new one: say the Latin for to unroll, then the Latin for a book box.

You'll want to know: scrīnium, scrīniī

scrīnium, scrīniī — "a writing case, chest for papers".

Epistulās in scrīniō servō.

I keep the letters in a writing case.

Neuter, second declension. A round box for book-rolls and letters.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scrīnium is a native Latin noun; Lewis & Short links it with scrībō "to write", but EtymDB traces it to a root meaning "to cut", so the origin is not settled. English shrine comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: scrīnium, scrīniī
- Say it: scrīnium, scrīniī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with scrīnium, scrīniī
- Recall: say the Latin for to unroll, then the Latin for a book box, then say scrīnium, scrīniī again

Before you move on

What does scrīnium, scrīniī mean? ("A writing case, chest for papers".) Say it once more.

551.3 membrāna, membrānae — parchment; skin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a book box, then the Latin for a writing case.

You'll want to know: membrāna, membrānae

membrāna, membrānae — "parchment; skin".

Poēta versūs in membrānā scrībit.

The poet writes the verses on parchment.

Feminine, first declension, from membrum. Thin skin, then parchment for writing. English membrane.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

membrāna is built on membrum "limb" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB): the skin over the limbs, then parchment. English membrane comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: membrāna, membrānae
- Say it: membrāna, membrānae, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with membrāna, membrānae
- Recall: say the Latin for a book box, then the Latin for a writing case, then say membrāna, membrānae again

Before you move on

What does membrāna, membrānae mean? ("Parchment; skin".) Say it once more.

551.4 pugillārēs, pugillārium — writing tablets

Before the new one: say the Latin for a writing case, then the Latin for parchment.

You'll want to know: pugillārēs, pugillārium

pugillārēs, pugillārium — "writing tablets".

In pugillāribus pauca verba scrībit.

He writes a few words on his writing tablets.

Masculine, third declension, plural. Small wax tablets that fitted in the hand, from pugillus — a little fist.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pugillārēs is built on pugillus "a little fist, handful", from pugnus "fist" (Lewis & Short): tablets held in the hand.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pugillārēs, pugillārium
- Say it: pugillārēs, pugillārium, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pugillārēs, pugillārium
- Recall: say the Latin for a writing case, then the Latin for parchment, then say pugillārēs, pugillārium again

Before you move on

What does pugillārēs, pugillārium mean? ("Writing tablets".) Say it once more.

551.5 rescrībō, rescrībere — to write back, reply

Before the new one: say the Latin for parchment, then the Latin for writing tablets.

You'll want to know: rescrībō, rescrībere

rescrībō, rescrībere — "to write back, reply".

Epistulam tuam accēpī et statim rescrībō.

I have received your letter and I am writing back at once.

rescrībō, rescrībere, rescrīpsī, rescrīptum. An emperor's written answer was a rescrīptum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rescrībō is built on re- "back" and scrībō "to write" (Lewis & Short). English rescript comes from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rescrībō, rescrībere
- Say it: rescrībō, rescrībere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rescrībō, rescrībere
- Recall: say the Latin for parchment, then the Latin for writing tablets, then say rescrībō, rescrībere again

Before you move on

What does rescrībō, rescrībere mean? ("To write back, reply".) Say it once more.

Chapter 552

Rooms and furniture

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about rooms, furniture and sweeping.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 552: I can talk about rooms, furniture and sweeping.

552.1 domicilium, domiciliī — a home, dwelling

Before the new one: say the Latin for writing tablets, then the Latin for to write back.

You'll want to know: domicilium, domiciliī

domicilium, domiciliī — "a home, dwelling".

> Haec vīlla domicilium familiae nostrae est.
>
> This villa is our family's home.

Neuter, second declension, from domus. English domicile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

domicilium is built on domus "house"; Lewis & Short sees in its second part the root of cēlō "to hide". English domicile comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: domicilium, domiciliī
- Say it: domicilium, domiciliī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with domicilium, domiciliī
- Recall: say the Latin for writing tablets, then the Latin for to write back, then say domicilium, domiciliī again

Before you move on

What does domicilium, domiciliī mean? ("A home, dwelling".) Say it once more.

552.2 conclāve, conclāvis — a room

Before the new one: say the Latin for to write back, then the Latin for a home.

You'll want to know: conclāve, conclāvis

conclāve, conclāvis — "a room".

Hoc conclāve parvum sed lūcidum est.

This room is small but bright.

Neuter, third declension: a room that can be locked with one key, clāvis. English conclave.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

conclāve is built on con- and clāvis "key" (Lewis & Short): a room shut with one key. English conclave comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: conclāve, conclāvis
- Say it: conclāve, conclāvis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with conclāve, conclāvis
- Recall: say the Latin for to write back, then the Latin for a home, then say conclāve, conclāvis again

Before you move on

What does conclāve, conclāvis mean? ("A room".) Say it once more.

552.3 supellex, supellectilis — household furniture, goods

Before the new one: say the Latin for a home, then the Latin for a room.

You'll want to know: supellex, supellectilis

supellex, supellectilis — "household furniture, goods".

Supellex nostra simplex est: lectī, mēnsa, sellae.

Our furniture is simple: beds, a table, chairs.

Feminine, third declension, singular only: all the movable things of a house. Ablative supellectile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

supellex is usually traced, as in Lewis & Short, to super and legō "to gather", but the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: supellex, supellectilis
- Say it: supellex, supellectilis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with supellex, supellectilis
- Recall: say the Latin for a home, then the Latin for a room, then say supellex, supellectilis again

Before you move on

What does supellex, supellectilis mean? ("Household furniture, goods".) Say it once more.

552.4 verrō, verrere — to sweep

Before the new one: say the Latin for a room, then the Latin for household furniture.

You'll want to know: verrō, verrere

verrō, verrere — "to sweep".

Ancilla pavīmentum ātriī verrit.

The maid sweeps the floor of the hall.

verrō, verrere, verrī, versum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

verrō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to sweep, drag along the ground" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: verrō, verrere
- Say it: verrō, verrere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with verrō, verrere
- Recall: say the Latin for a room, then the Latin for household furniture, then say verrō, verrere again

Before you move on

What does verrō, verrere mean? ("To sweep".) Say it once more.

552.5 scōpae, scōpārum — a broom

Before the new one: say the Latin for household furniture, then the Latin for to sweep.

You'll want to know: scōpae, scōpārum

scōpae, scōpārum — "a broom".

Servus scōpīs culīnam pūrgat.

The slave cleans the kitchen with a broom.

Feminine, first declension, plural: a bundle of twigs. Italian scopa — broom — comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scōpae first meant "twigs" (Lewis & Short), and a bundle of twigs made a broom. Lewis & Short connects it with a root meaning "to prop", but the origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: scōpae, scōpārum
- Say it: scōpae, scōpārum, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with scōpae, scōpārum
- Recall: say the Latin for household furniture, then the Latin for to sweep, then say scōpae, scōpārum again

Before you move on

What does scōpae, scōpārum mean? ("A broom".) Say it once more.

552.6 Words from chapters 545–552 — a review

Say the Latin for a sound and to sound.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a sound, to sound, to resound, a band of musicians, harmony
- the seats of a theatre, a stage, a theatre curtain, a prologue, a mime dancer
- an image, a likeness, a shape, a small cube, to engrave
- beauty, good-looking, elegant, an ornament, ugly
- a poem, an epigram, a little verse, a public reading, a listener
- learned, a bookseller, a reader, to read through, to unroll
- a book box, a writing case, parchment, writing tablets, to write back
- a home, a room, household furniture, to sweep, a broom

Before you move on

A sound? (sonus, sonī.) To sound? (sonō, sonāre.) To resound? (resonō, resonāre.) A band of musicians? (symphōnia, symphōniae.) Harmony? (concentus, concentūs.) The seats of a theatre? (cavea, caveae.) A stage? (pulpitum, pulpitī.) A theatre curtain? (aulaeum, aulaeī.) A prologue? (prologus, prologī.) A mime dancer? (pantomīmus, pantomīmī.) An image? (imāgō, imāginis.) A likeness? (effigiēs, effigiēī.) A shape? (figūra, figūrae.) A small cube? (tessella, tessellae.) To engrave? (caelō, caelāre.) Beauty? (pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis.) Good-looking? (speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum.) Elegant? (ēlegāns, ēlegantis.) An ornament? (ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī.) Ugly? (dēfōrmis, dēfōrme.) A poem? (poēma, poēmatis.) An epigram? (epigramma, epigrammatis.) A little verse? (versiculus, versiculī.) A public reading? (recitātiō, recitātiōnis.) A listener? (audītor, audītōris.) Learned? (litterātus, litterāta, litterātum.) A bookseller? (bibliopōla, bibliopōlae.) A reader? (lēctor, lēctōris.) To read through? (perlegō, perlegere.) To unroll? (ēvolvō, ēvolvere.) A book box? (capsa, capsae.) A writing case? (scrīnium, scrīniī.) Parchment? (membrāna, membrānae.) Writing tablets? (pugillārēs, pugillārium.) To write back? (rescrībō, rescrībere.) A home? (domicilium, domiciliī.) A room? (conclāve, conclāvis.) Household furniture? (supellex, supellectilis.) To sweep? (verrō, verrere.) A broom? (scōpae, scōpārum.)

Chapter 553

Doors and stores

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe the entrance of a house and its stores.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 553: I can describe the entrance of a house and its stores.

553.1 vestibulum, vestibulī — a forecourt, entrance court

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to sweep, then the Latin for a broom.

You'll want to know: vestibulum, vestibulī

vestibulum, vestibulī — "a forecourt, entrance court".

> Hospitēs in vestibulō exspectant.
>
> The guests wait in the forecourt.

Neuter, second declension. The space between the street and the front door. English vestibule.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vestibulum is of uncertain origin; Lewis & Short connects it with a root meaning "to dwell", but it is not settled. English vestibule comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: vestibulum, vestibulī
- Say it: vestibulum, vestibulī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with vestibulum, vestibulī
- Recall: say the Latin for to sweep, then the Latin for a broom, then say vestibulum, vestibulī again

Before you move on

What does vestibulum, vestibulī mean? ("A forecourt, entrance court".) Say it once more.

553.2 pessulus, pessulī — a door bolt

Before the new one: say the Latin for a broom, then the Latin for a forecourt.

You'll want to know: pessulus, pessulī

pessulus, pessulī — "a door bolt".

Iānitor noctū pessulum iānuae obdit.

At night the doorkeeper shoots the bolt of the door.

Masculine, second declension. Pessulum obdere — to shoot the bolt.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pessulus was borrowed from Greek passalos "a peg" (Lewis & Short; EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pessulus, pessulī
- Say it: pessulus, pessulī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pessulus, pessulī
- Recall: say the Latin for a broom, then the Latin for a forecourt, then say pessulus, pessulī again

Before you move on

What does pessulus, pessulī mean? ("A door bolt".) Say it once more.

553.3 līmen, līminis — a threshold, doorstep

Before the new one: say the Latin for a forecourt, then the Latin for a door bolt.

You'll want to know: līmen, līminis

līmen, līminis — "a threshold, doorstep".

Nova nūpta līmen nōn tangit.

The new bride does not touch the threshold.

Neuter, third declension. A bride was carried over the threshold, so as not to stumble on it. English subliminal.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līmen is a native Latin noun; Lewis & Short connects it with līmus "sidelong", a crossbeam, but the origin is not settled. English subliminal comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: līmen, līminis
- Say it: līmen, līminis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with līmen, līminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a forecourt, then the Latin for a door bolt, then say līmen, līminis again

Before you move on

What does līmen, līminis mean? ("A threshold, doorstep".) Say it once more.

553.4 cardō, cardinis — a hinge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a door bolt, then the Latin for a threshold.

You'll want to know: cardō, cardinis

cardō, cardinis — "a hinge".

Iānua vetus in cardine sonat.

The old door creaks on its hinge.

Masculine, third declension. Also a turning point, and so English cardinal — that on which things turn.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cardō is a native Latin noun of uncertain origin; Lewis & Short offers only guesses. English cardinal, "chief, pivotal", comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cardō, cardinis
- Say it: cardō, cardinis, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cardō, cardinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a door bolt, then the Latin for a threshold, then say cardō, cardinis again

Before you move on

What does cardō, cardinis mean? ("A hinge".) Say it once more.

553.5 penus, penūs — provisions, the store of food

Before the new one: say the Latin for a threshold, then the Latin for a hinge.

You'll want to know: penus, penūs

penus, penūs — "provisions, the store of food".

Vīlica penum in cellā servat.

The housekeeper keeps the provisions in the storeroom.

Masculine or feminine, fourth declension; also penum, neuter. The stored food of a household.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

penus is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European word for "food" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: penus, penūs
- Say it: penus, penūs, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with penus, penūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a threshold, then the Latin for a hinge, then say penus, penūs again

Before you move on

What does penus, penūs mean? ("Provisions, the store of food".) Say it once more.

Chapter 554

Household chores

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about chores at home.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 554: I can talk about chores at home.

554.1 subsellium, subsellīī — a bench, low seat

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a hinge, then the Latin for provisions.

You'll want to know: subsellium, subsellīī

subsellium, subsellīī — "a bench, low seat".

> Discipulī in subsellīīs sedent.
>
> The pupils sit on benches.

Neuter, second declension: sub + sella — lower than a chair. Also the benches of a law court.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

subsellium is built on sub "below" and sella "seat, chair" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: subsellium, subsellii̅
- Say it: subsellium, subsellii̅, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with subsellium, subsellii̅
- Recall: say the Latin for a hinge, then the Latin for provisions, then say subsellium, subsellii̅ again

Before you move on

What does subsellium, subsellii̅ mean? ("A bench, low seat".) Say it once more.

554.2 urceus, urceī — a jug, pitcher

Before the new one: say the Latin for provisions, then the Latin for a bench.

You'll want to know: urceus, urceī

urceus, urceī — "a jug, pitcher".

Ancilla aquam urceō portat.

The maid carries water in a jug.

Masculine, second declension.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

urceus is a word of uncertain origin; Lewis & Short compares Greek hurche "a jar", and EtymDB links it with orca "a cask", but nothing is settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: urceus, urceī
- Say it: urceus, urceī, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with urceus, urceī
- Recall: say the Latin for provisions, then the Latin for a bench, then say urceus, urceī again

Before you move on

What does urceus, urceī mean? ("A jug, pitcher".) Say it once more.

554.3 repōnō, repōnere — to put back; to store away

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bench, then the Latin for a jug.

You'll want to know: repōnō, repōnere

repōnō, repōnere — "to put back; to store away".

Post cēnam ancilla vāsa in armāriō repōnit.

After dinner the maid puts the dishes back in the cupboard.

repōnō, repōnere, reposuī, repositum. English repository.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

repōnō is built on re- "back" and pōnō "to put" (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). English repository comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: repōnō, repōnere
- Say it: repōnō, repōnere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with repōnō, repōnere
- Recall: say the Latin for a bench, then the Latin for a jug, then say repōnō, repōnere again

Before you move on

What does repōnō, repōnere mean? ("To put back; to store away".) Say it once more.

554.4 sarciō, sarcīre — to mend, patch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a jug, then the Latin for to put back.

You'll want to know: sarciō, sarcīre

sarciō, sarcīre — "to mend, patch".

Avia tunicam nepōtis sarcit.

Grandmother mends her grandson's tunic.

sarciō, sarcīre, sarsī, sartum. Of clothes, roofs and friendships.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sarciō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to mend, make whole" (EtymDB), though Lewis & Short calls it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sarciō, sarcīre
- Say it: sarciō, sarcīre, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sarciō, sarcīre
- Recall: say the Latin for a jug, then the Latin for to put back, then say sarciō, sarcīre again

Before you move on

What does sarciō, sarcīre mean? ("To mend, patch".) Say it once more.

554.5 pectō, pectere — to comb

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put back, then the Latin for to mend.

You'll want to know: pectō, pectere

pectō, pectere — "to comb".

Ancilla crīnēs dominae pectit.

The maid combs her mistress's hair.

pectō, pectere, pexī, pexum. Pecten, already known, is the comb.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pectō is inherited from a Proto-Indo-European root meaning "to comb, shear", and Greek peko is a cousin (EtymDB; Lewis & Short). pecten "comb" is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pectō, pectere
- Say it: pectō, pectere, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pectō, pectere
- Recall: say the Latin for to put back, then the Latin for to mend, then say pectō, pectere again

Before you move on

What does pectō, pectere mean? ("To comb".) Say it once more.

554.6 Home, books and the arts

Say the Latin for a forecourt and a door bolt.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a forecourt, a door bolt, a threshold, a hinge, provisions
- a bench, a jug, to put back, to mend, to comb

Before you move on

A forecourt? (vestibulum, vestibulī.) A door bolt? (pessulus, pessulī.) A threshold? (līmen, līminis.) A hinge? (cardō, cardinis.) Provisions? (penus, penūs.) A bench? (subsellium, subsellīī.) A jug? (urceus, urceī.) To put back? (repōnō, repōnere.) To mend? (sarciō, sarcīre.) To comb? (pectō, pectere.)

554.7 Household chores — once more

Say the Latin for a bench and a jug.

Your turn

- Say it: a bench, a jug, to put back, to mend, to comb

Before you move on

A bench? (subsellium, subsellīī.) A jug? (urceus, urceī.) To put back? (repōnō, repōnere.) To mend? (sarciō, sarcīre.) To comb? (pectō, pectere.)

How Latin sounds — a reference

A reference, not a chapter — the lessons teach the sounds through real words. This page gathers the classical scheme (the one this course uses).

The three facts

1. Every letter is sounded, always the same way. No silent letters and, in the classical scheme, no "soft" consonants: c and g are always hard (Cicero = KIH-keh-ro, not "SIS-er-o"), v is w, s is always hissed (never "z"), r is trilled.
2. Vowels come long or short, marked by a macron. ā ē ī ō ū are held longer than a e i o u — same quality, more time. Length can change meaning (malum "evil" vs. mālum "apple"), which is why teaching texts print macrons Romans never wrote.
3. Diphthongs: ae = "eye" (Caesar = KYE-sar), au = "ow," oe = "oy"; otherwise adjacent vowels each keep their value.

Worth flagging

- v* = w, i = y as consonants: vīnum ("wine") = WEE-noom, Iulius = YOO-lee-oos. The "v as vee / soft c" you may have heard is later Church Latin.
- Stress is predictable: two-syllable words stress the first; longer words stress the second-to-last syllable if it is long, else the one before. No accent marks are needed once you hear vowel length.
- No j, u/v split, or w: classical Latin wrote I and V for both vowel and glide; j, u, w are medieval/modern additions.

Latin in the family

Latin is Italic, a branch of Indo-European — cousin to Greek, to the Germanic languages (English among them), and, further off, to Sanskrit. It was the speech of Rome, then of an empire, then of the medieval church and the learned world; as it fragmented in daily use it became Spanish, Portuguese, French, Italian, Romanian, and the rest. This curriculum treats Latin as a taproot: nearly every word has both English and Romance descendants, traced in the lessons — and its sister taproot, Sanskrit, shares the same Indo-European negative (nōn / na) and the family of mother/father words.

Glossary

This glossary collects every word and phrase taught in the book. Pronunciation appears when it differs from the written form; chapter numbers show where each entry is introduced.

abacus, abacī
a counting board; a sideboard
Introduced in Chapter 405.

aberrō, aberrāre
to stray, to wander from the way
Introduced in Chapter 452.

abhinc
ago; counting back from now
Introduced in Chapter 288.

abiciō, abicere
to throw away
Introduced in Chapter 167.

abiēs, abietis
a fir tree; fir wood
Introduced in Chapter 484.

abluō, abluere
to wash off, to wash clean
Introduced in Chapter 350.

abrogō, abrogāre
to repeal, to abolish
Introduced in Chapter 410.

absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis
an acquittal
Introduced in Chapter 413.

absolvō, absolvere
to acquit; to set free; to finish
Introduced in Chapter 311.

absurdus, absurda, absurdum
absurd, foolish; out of tune
Introduced in Chapter 360.

abundō, abundāre
to have plenty (of), to abound; to overflow
Introduced in Chapter 422.

accēdō, accēdere
to come near, to approach; to be added
Introduced in Chapter 455.

accendō, accendere
to light, to kindle
Introduced in Chapter 165.

accidō, accidere
to happen
Introduced in Chapter 162.

accipiō, obtineō
"I get" — two verbs, each one a prefix bolted onto a verb you already know, and each one bent out of shape by the join
Introduced in Chapter 42.

accūsātor, accūsātōris
a prosecutor, an accuser
Introduced in Chapter 309.

accūsō, accūsāre
to accuse, to charge
Introduced in Chapter 309.

acerbus, acerba, acerbum
sour, unripe
Introduced in Chapter 145.

acētum, acētī
vinegar
Introduced in Chapter 195.

aciēs, aciēī
a battle line; a sharp edge
Introduced in Chapter 339.

acuō, acuere
to sharpen, to whet
Introduced in Chapter 471.

acus, acūs
a needle
Introduced in Chapter 140.

acūtus, acūta, acūtum
sharp
Introduced in Chapter 144.

addō, addere
to add
Introduced in Chapter 230.

adhūc
still, until now
Introduced in Chapter 175.

adiuvō, adiuvāre
"I help" — the verb hiding inside English aid, aide and adjutant, and no relation to juvenile
Introduced in Chapter 39.

administrō, administrāre
to manage, to run; to administer Introduced in Chapter 385.

admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis
admiration, wonder
Introduced in Chapter 495.

admīror, admīrārī
to admire
Introduced in Chapter 170.

admodum
quite, very
Introduced in Chapter 179.

adulēscēns, adulēscentis
a young person
Introduced in Chapter 220.

adulēscentia, adulēscentiae
young adulthood, youth
Introduced in Chapter 326.

advena, advenae
a newcomer
Introduced in Chapter 220.

adveniō, advenīre
to arrive
Introduced in Chapter 160.

adversus, adversa, adversum
facing, unfavourable
Introduced in Chapter 268.

advocātus, advocātī
a supporter in court, a legal adviser
Introduced in Chapter 309.

aedēs, aedis
a temple; (plural) a house
Introduced in Chapter 459.

aedicula, aediculae
a shrine, a small temple; a niche
Introduced in Chapter 459.

aedificium, aedificiī
a building
Introduced in Chapter 116.

aedificō, aedificāre
to build
Introduced in Chapter 153.

aedīlis, aedīlis
an aedile, an officer for streets, markets and games
Introduced in Chapter 383.

aeger, aegra, aegrum
sick, ill
Introduced in Chapter 68.

aegritūdō, aegritūdinis
distress of mind, grief; sickness
Introduced in Chapter 497.

aegrōtō, aegrōtāre
to be ill
Introduced in Chapter 521.

aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum
sick, ill
Introduced in Chapter 521.

aequitās, aequitātis
fairness, equity
Introduced in Chapter 416.

aequor, aequoris
the level sea, the sea's surface; a level plain
Introduced in Chapter 442.

aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī
debt
Introduced in Chapter 418.

aes, aeris
bronze; money
Introduced in Chapter 222.

aestimō, aestimāre
to value, to put a price on; to judge
Introduced in Chapter 466.

aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum
of summer, summer
Introduced in Chapter 488.

aestuārium, aestuāriī
a tidal inlet, a tidal marsh; an estuary
Introduced in Chapter 441.

aestus, aestūs
heat, glow; the tide
Introduced in Chapter 317.

aetās, aetātis
age, a lifetime
Introduced in Chapter 207.

affectus, affectūs
a mood, state of mind
Introduced in Chapter 501.

afficiō, afficere
to affect, fill with a feeling
Introduced in Chapter 501.

affīnis, affīne
related by marriage; an in-law
Introduced in Chapter 528.

affirmō, affirmāre
to state firmly
Introduced in Chapter 204.

ager, agrī
a field
Introduced in Chapter 74.

agger, aggeris
a raised roadbed; a mound, an embankment
Introduced in Chapter 425.

agmen, agminis
an army on the march; a crowd
Introduced in Chapter 339.

agnōscō, agnōscere
to recognise
Introduced in Chapter 200.

agnus, agnī
a lamb
Introduced in Chapter 224.

agō, agere
to do, to drive
Introduced in Chapter 202.

agricola, agricolae
a farmer
Introduced in Chapter 74.

agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris
a land surveyor
Introduced in Chapter 381.

āiō
to say yes; to say
Introduced in Chapter 349.

alacer, alacris, alacre
lively, eager
Introduced in Chapter 503.

ālea, āleae
dice-playing, a game of chance
Introduced in Chapter 539.

algeō, algēre
to feel cold, to be cold
Introduced in Chapter 486.

alibī
elsewhere
Introduced in Chapter 177.

aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum
belonging to another; foreign; unfavourable Introduced in Chapter 417.

aliōquī
otherwise; in other respects
Introduced in Chapter 391.

aliquamdiū
for some time
Introduced in Chapter 293.

aliquandō
at some time, once
Introduced in Chapter 263.

ālium, āliī
garlic
Introduced in Chapter 126.

alius, alia, aliud
other, another
Introduced in Chapter 242.

alō, alere
to feed, to nourish
Introduced in Chapter 260.

alter, altera, alterum
the second of two, the other
Introduced in Chapter 268.

altus, alta, altum
high; deep
Introduced in Chapter 93.

amābilis, amābile
lovable, delightful
Introduced in Chapter 533.

amāns, amantis
a lover
Introduced in Chapter 535.

amātor, amātōris
an admirer, lover
Introduced in Chapter 535.

ambāgēs, ambāgum
a roundabout way, a winding path; long-winded talk
Introduced in Chapter 452.

ambitiō, ambitiōnis
canvassing; ambition
Introduced in Chapter 384.

ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis
a walk, stroll
Introduced in Chapter 542.

ambulō, ambulāre
"I walk" — the verb behind ambulance, preamble and the pram, and a rare case where the front half is clear and the back half is not
Introduced in Chapter 41.

ambūrō, ambūrere
to scorch, to singe
Introduced in Chapter 319.

amīca, amīcae
a friend (a woman)
Introduced in Chapter 138.

amīcitia, amīcitiae
friendship
Introduced in Chapter 236.

amīcus, amīcī
the friend — from the verb to love, and the word the bread lesson pointed at and did not give Introduced in Chapter 51.

amita, amitae
an aunt (father's sister)
Introduced in Chapter 72.

āmittō, āmittere
to lose, to let slip
Introduced in Chapter 286.

amnis, amnis
a river, a broad stream
Introduced in Chapter 482.

amō, amāre
"I love" — the chapter's fourth verb, the first thing generations of pupils ever chanted, and the word inside enemy
Introduced in Chapter 39.

amoenus, amoena, amoenum
lovely, pleasant (of places)
Introduced in Chapter 542.

amor, amōris
love
Introduced in Chapter 236.

amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī
an amphitheatre
Introduced in Chapter 244.

amphora, amphorae
a two-handled jar
Introduced in Chapter 123.

amplector, amplectī
to embrace, hug
Introduced in Chapter 535.

amplexus, amplexūs
an embrace
Introduced in Chapter 534.

ampulla, ampullae
a small flask, a phial
Introduced in Chapter 252.

anas, anatis
a duck
Introduced in Chapter 131.

ancilla, ancillae
a maidservant
Introduced in Chapter 220.

ancillula, ancillulae
a young maidservant
Introduced in Chapter 530.

ancora, ancorae
an anchor
Introduced in Chapter 270.

anfrāctus, anfrāctūs
a winding, a twisting stretch of road
Introduced in Chapter 424.

angiportum, angiportī
an alley, a narrow lane
Introduced in Chapter 458.

angō, angere
to distress, torment; to choke
Introduced in Chapter 497.

angulus, angulī
a corner
Introduced in Chapter 116.

angustus, angusta, angustum narrow
Introduced in Chapter 143.

anhēlō, anhēlāre
to pant, gasp
Introduced in Chapter 520.

anima, animae
breath, soul
Introduced in Chapter 206.

animadvertō, animadvertere
to notice
Introduced in Chapter 260.

animus, animī
mind, spirit
Introduced in Chapter 174.

annālēs, annālium
annals, a year-by-year history
Introduced in Chapter 344.

annōna, annōnae
the corn supply; the price of grain
Introduced in Chapter 466.

annus, annī
a year
Introduced in Chapter 103.

ānser, ānseris
a goose
Introduced in Chapter 132.

ante
before, in front of — the word that puts one thing ahead of another Introduced in Chapter 57.

anteā
before, previously Introduced in Chapter 162.

antequam
before (joining two clauses)
Introduced in Chapter 291.

antīquus, antīqua, antīquum
ancient, old-fashioned
Introduced in Chapter 143.

ānulus, ānulī
a ring
Introduced in Chapter 85.

anxius, anxia, anxium anxious Introduced in Chapter 212.

aper, aprī
a wild boar
Introduced in Chapter 224.

aperiō, aperīre
"I open" — half of a matched pair, built from one root with two opposite prefixes
Introduced in Chapter 41.

apis, apis
a bee
Introduced in Chapter 132.

appāreō, appārēre
to appear
Introduced in Chapter 230.

apparō, apparāre
to prepare, to get ready
Introduced in Chapter 394.

appellō, appellere
to put in (to land), to bring a ship to shore
Introduced in Chapter 439.

appendō, appendere
to weigh out; to hang on Introduced in Chapter 464.

appōnō, appōnere
to serve up, to put before
Introduced in Chapter 356.

appropinquō, appropinquāre
to approach
Introduced in Chapter 169.

aptus, apta, aptum
fit, suited
Introduced in Chapter 268.

apud
at the house of, among
Introduced in Chapter 238.

aqua, vīnum
water and wine — one word French wore down to almost nothing, one that barely changed anywhere Introduced in Chapter 10.

aquaeductus, aquaeductūs
an aqueduct
Introduced in Chapter 244.

aquila, aquilae
an eagle
Introduced in Chapter 131.

aquilō, aquilōnis
the north wind; the north
Introduced in Chapter 487.

āra, ārae
an altar
Introduced in Chapter 253.

arānea, arāneae
a spider
Introduced in Chapter 133.

arātor, arātōris
a ploughman, a farmer
Introduced in Chapter 474.

arātrum, arātrī
a plough
Introduced in Chapter 142.

arbitror, arbitrārī
to be of the opinion, to judge
Introduced in Chapter 357.

arbor, arboris
a tree
Introduced in Chapter 86.

arca, arcae
a chest, a box
Introduced in Chapter 84.

architectus, architectī
an architect
Introduced in Chapter 188.

arcus, arcūs
a bow; an arch
Introduced in Chapter 277.

ārdeō, ārdēre
to burn, to be on fire
Introduced in Chapter 167.

ārdor, ārdōris
burning heat; passion
Introduced in Chapter 317.

arduus, ardua, arduum
steep, high; difficult
Introduced in Chapter 480.

ārea, āreae
an open space, a courtyard
Introduced in Chapter 119.

argentārius, argentāriī
a banker
Introduced in Chapter 272.

argenteus, argentea, argenteum
silver
Introduced in Chapter 149.

argentum, argentī
silver
Introduced in Chapter 222.

argūmentum, argūmentī
an argument, a proof; a plot
Introduced in Chapter 361.

arguō, arguere
to prove; to accuse
Introduced in Chapter 310.

ariēs, arietis
a battering ram; a ram
Introduced in Chapter 341.

arma, armōrum
weapons, arms
Introduced in Chapter 340.

armāmenta, armāmentōrum
a ship's tackle, the rigging; equipment
Introduced in Chapter 437.

armārium, armāriī
a cupboard
Introduced in Chapter 138.

armentum, armentī
a herd (of cattle or horses)
Introduced in Chapter 477.

armilla, armillae
a bracelet
Introduced in Chapter 193.

arō, arāre
to plough
Introduced in Chapter 474.

arrogāns, arrogantis
arrogant, presumptuous
Introduced in Chapter 507.

arrogantia, arrogantiae
arrogance, conceit
Introduced in Chapter 507.

ars, artis
a skill, a craft
Introduced in Chapter 110.

artifex, artificis
an artist, a skilled craftsman; a master (of)
Introduced in Chapter 376.

artus, artuum
joints, limbs
Introduced in Chapter 516.

ascendō, ascendere
to climb, to go up
Introduced in Chapter 153.

ascia, asciae
an adze, a carpenter's axe
Introduced in Chapter 470.

asinus, asinī
a donkey
Introduced in Chapter 92.

asper, aspera, asperum
rough, harsh
Introduced in Chapter 240.

aspergō, aspergere
to sprinkle
Introduced in Chapter 355.

assentior, assentīrī
to agree (with), to assent
Introduced in Chapter 358.

assiduus, assidua, assiduum
diligent, unremitting
Introduced in Chapter 508.

assus, assa, assum
roasted Introduced in Chapter 354.

atquī
and yet, but (raising an objection)
Introduced in Chapter 366.

ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī
ink
Introduced in Chapter 124.

ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis
a steward, house-manager
Introduced in Chapter 531.

ātrium, ātriī
the main hall of a house
Introduced in Chapter 116.

attentus, attenta, attentum
attentive, intent; careful with money
Introduced in Chapter 406.

attonitus, attonita, attonitum
thunderstruck, astonished
Introduced in Chapter 495.

auctiō, auctiōnis
an auction
Introduced in Chapter 420.

auctor, auctōris
an originator, an author; a backer
Introduced in Chapter 372.

auctōritās, auctōritātis
authority, influence; backing
Introduced in Chapter 370.

audācia, audāciae
boldness, daring
Introduced in Chapter 509.

audāx, audācis
bold
Introduced in Chapter 150.

audeō, audēre
to dare
Introduced in Chapter 109.

audiō, audīre
"I hear" — the verb inside audio, audience and audit, and, less obviously, inside obey
Introduced in Chapter 40.

audītor, audītōris
a listener, hearer
Introduced in Chapter 549.

audītus, audītūs
hearing
Introduced in Chapter 519.

augeō, augēre
to increase
Introduced in Chapter 256.

aulaeum, aulaeī
a theatre curtain
Introduced in Chapter 546.

aura, aurae
a breeze
Introduced in Chapter 223.

aureus, aurea, aureum
golden
Introduced in Chapter 149.

aurifex, aurificis
a goldsmith
Introduced in Chapter 377.

aurīga, aurīgae
a charioteer
Introduced in Chapter 335.

auris, auris
the ear — and the reason a Roman listened by obeying
Introduced in Chapter 54.

aurōra, aurōrae
the dawn
Introduced in Chapter 103.

aurum, aurī
gold
Introduced in Chapter 222.

auster, austrī
the south wind; the south
Introduced in Chapter 487.

aut
or — and the second or, which asks a different question
Introduced in Chapter 48.

autem
moreover; however
Introduced in Chapter 210.

auxilium, auxilii̅
help, aid
Introduced in Chapter 316.

avārus, avāra, avārum
greedy
Introduced in Chapter 269.

avē / avēte
hail (a formal greeting)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

avia, aviae
a grandmother
Introduced in Chapter 70.

avidus, avida, avidum
greedy, eager
Introduced in Chapter 500.

avis, avis
a bird
Introduced in Chapter 91.

avunculus, avunculī
a mother's brother, an uncle
Introduced in Chapter 189.

avus, avī
a grandfather
Introduced in Chapter 70.

balaena, balaenae
a whale
Introduced in Chapter 135.

balneātor, balneātōris
a bath-keeper
Introduced in Chapter 541.

balneum, balneī
a bath, a bathhouse
Introduced in Chapter 115.

barba, barbae
a beard
Introduced in Chapter 65.

barbātus, barbāta, barbātum bearded
Introduced in Chapter 216.

basilica, basilicae
a hall of justice
Introduced in Chapter 270.

bāsiō, bāsiāre
to kiss
Introduced in Chapter 534.

bāsium, bāsiī
a loving kiss
Introduced in Chapter 534.

beātus, beāta, beātum
blessed, fortunate
Introduced in Chapter 243.

bellum, bellī
war
Introduced in Chapter 271.

bene
"well" — a morphologically simple inheritance: French bien and Spanish bien are just bene plus one regular sound change (the same short-e-diphthongizes-to-ie shift as mel→miel), with no extra grafted-on suffix, unlike quōmodo's more roundabout Romance history
Introduced in Chapter 27.

beneficium, beneficiī
a kindness, a favour
Introduced in Chapter 248.

benevolentia, benevolentiae
goodwill, kindness
Introduced in Chapter 505.

benevolus, benevola, benevolum
kindly, well-wishing
Introduced in Chapter 505.

benignitās, benignitātis
kindness, generosity
Introduced in Chapter 505.

benignus, benigna, benignum
kind
Introduced in Chapter 151.

bēstia, bēstiae
a beast, a wild animal
Introduced in Chapter 336.

bibliopōla, bibliopōlae
a bookseller
Introduced in Chapter 550.

bibliothēca, bibliothēcae
a library
Introduced in Chapter 117.

bibō, bibere
I drink — the verb inside beverage, bib and imbibe
Introduced in Chapter 54.

bis
twice
Introduced in Chapter 176.

bivium, biviī
a fork in the road, a place where two roads meet
Introduced in Chapter 424.

blanditia, blanditiae
flattery, coaxing
Introduced in Chapter 536.

blandus, blanda, blandum
coaxing, flattering; charming
Introduced in Chapter 536.

bonam noctem
"good night" — genuine Latin grammar (wishes take the accusative, not the nominative), though the fixed phrase itself may be a later/modern convention rather than a directly-attested ancient formula Introduced in Chapter 30.

bonum māne
"good morning" — a modern, pedagogical phrase (not classically attested); unlike bonam noctem, its grammar is genuinely invisible, since māne is neuter and Latin neuters never distinguish nominative from accusative — Romans instead had a real, richly documented morning GREETING RITUAL, the salūtātiō, whose root is a doublet of salvē's own
Introduced in Chapter 32.

bonum vesperum
"good evening" — a modern, pedagogical phrase (not classically attested), but unlike bonum māne, this one CAN show the real Accusative-of-Exclamation grammar again, since vesper is masculine, not neuter
Introduced in Chapter 34.

bōs, bovis
an ox, a cow
Introduced in Chapter 90.

bracchium, bracchiī
an arm
Introduced in Chapter 63.

brassica, brassicae
cabbage
Introduced in Chapter 279.

brevī
shortly, soon
Introduced in Chapter 263.

brevis, breve
short, brief
Introduced in Chapter 93.

brūma, brūmae
midwinter, the winter solstice, the shortest day
Introduced in Chapter 488.

būbīle, būbīlis
an ox stall, a cowshed
Introduced in Chapter 473.

bubulcus, bubulcī
an ox-driver, a herdsman
Introduced in Chapter 478.

bulla, bullae
an amulet (worn by a child); a bubble
Introduced in Chapter 325.

caballus, caballī
a nag, a pack horse
Introduced in Chapter 433.

caccabus, caccabī
a cooking pot
Introduced in Chapter 353.

cacūmen, cacūminis
a peak, a tip
Introduced in Chapter 228.

cadō, cadere
to fall
Introduced in Chapter 77.

caecus, caeca, caecum
blind
Introduced in Chapter 144.

caedēs, caedis
slaughter, murder
Introduced in Chapter 306.

caedō, caedere
to cut down, to kill; to beat
Introduced in Chapter 342.

caelebs, caelibis
unmarried
Introduced in Chapter 241.

caelō, caelāre
to engrave, carve in relief
Introduced in Chapter 547.

caelum, caelī
the sky, and the heavens — the word under celestial, and under a ceiling painted like the sky
Introduced in Chapter 45.

caementārius, caementāriī
a mason, a builder in stone
Introduced in Chapter 377.

calamitās, calamitātis
a disaster, a misfortune
Introduced in Chapter 315.

calamus, calamī
a reed pen
Introduced in Chapter 124.

calcar, calcāris
a spur
Introduced in Chapter 432.

calceus, calceī
a shoe
Introduced in Chapter 108.

calcitrō, calcitrāre
to kick (with the heels); to resist
Introduced in Chapter 432.

calculus, calculī
a pebble, a counter; a reckoning
Introduced in Chapter 405.

calda, caldae
hot water (for mixing with wine)
Introduced in Chapter 461.

caldārium, caldāriī
the hot room (of the baths)
Introduced in Chapter 541.

calefaciō, calefacere
to warm, to heat
Introduced in Chapter 255.

caleō, calēre
to be warm, to be hot
Introduced in Chapter 488.

calidus, calida, calidum
hot, warm
Introduced in Chapter 95.

cālīgō, cālīginis
mist, darkness
Introduced in Chapter 223.

calix, calicis
a cup
Introduced in Chapter 141.

callidus, callida, callidum
clever, cunning
Introduced in Chapter 267.

callis, callis
a mountain track; a rough path made by cattle
Introduced in Chapter 423.

calvus, calva, calvum
bald
Introduced in Chapter 216.

calx, calcis
heel
Introduced in Chapter 518.

camēlus, camēlī
a camel
Introduced in Chapter 134.

camīnus, camīnī
a forge, a furnace; a fireplace
Introduced in Chapter 469.

campus, campī
a plain, an open field
Introduced in Chapter 89.

cancer, cancrī
a crab
Introduced in Chapter 192.

candēla, candēlae
a candle
Introduced in Chapter 121.

candēlābrum, candēlābrī
a candlestick
Introduced in Chapter 252.

candidātus, candidātī
a candidate
Introduced in Chapter 384.

canīcula, canīculae
the Dog Star; a little dog
Introduced in Chapter 488.

canis, fēlēs, cattus
dog and (two words for) cat — canis is the "expected" ancestor Spanish's perro mysteriously replaced; fēlēs was Classical Latin's OWN word for cat, later pushed out by the newcomer cattus
Introduced in Chapter 17.

canistrum, canistrī
a bread basket, a reed basket
Introduced in Chapter 463.

canō, canere
to sing
Introduced in Chapter 75.

canōrus, canōra, canōrum
melodious, tuneful
Introduced in Chapter 543.

cantilēna, cantilēnae
an old song, the same old tune
Introduced in Chapter 543.

cantiō, cantiōnis
a song; a spell
Introduced in Chapter 543.

cantō, cantāre
to sing
Introduced in Chapter 154.

cantus, cantūs
singing, song; music
Introduced in Chapter 543.

cānus, cāna, cānum
grey
Introduced in Chapter 149.

caper, caprī
a billy goat
Introduced in Chapter 224.

capillus, capillī
a hair, the hair
Introduced in Chapter 65.

capiō, capere
"I take" — the verb the habeō lesson promised, and the true relative of English have Introduced in Chapter 39.

capra, caprae
a goat
Introduced in Chapter 90.

capsa, capsae
a book box
Introduced in Chapter 551.

captīvus, captīvī
a prisoner, a captive
Introduced in Chapter 343.

caput
the head — the word French abandoned, but Spanish and English kept working hard Introduced in Chapter 8.

carbō, carbōnis
charcoal
Introduced in Chapter 191.

carcer, carceris
a prison
Introduced in Chapter 116.

cardō, cardinis
a hinge
Introduced in Chapter 553.

careō, carēre
to be without, to lack
Introduced in Chapter 422.

carīna, carīnae
the keel (of a ship); a boat
Introduced in Chapter 436.

cāritās, cāritātis
dearness, high prices; affection
Introduced in Chapter 466.

carmen, carminis
a song, a poem
Introduced in Chapter 246.

carō, carnis
meat
Introduced in Chapter 79.

carpentum, carpentī
a covered carriage; a two-wheeled coach
Introduced in Chapter 429.

carrūca, carrūcae
a travelling coach, a four-wheeled carriage
Introduced in Chapter 429.

carrus, carrī
a wagon, a baggage cart
Introduced in Chapter 429.

cārus, cāra, cārum
dear; costly
Introduced in Chapter 97.

casa, casae
a cottage, a small house
Introduced in Chapter 473.

cāseus, cāseī
cheese
Introduced in Chapter 80.

castellum, castellī
a water tower, a reservoir; a fort, a stronghold
Introduced in Chapter 458.

castīgō, castīgāre
to punish, to correct; to rebuke
Introduced in Chapter 415.

castra, castrōrum
a military camp
Introduced in Chapter 115.

cāsus, cāsūs
an accident, a fall
Introduced in Chapter 221.

catēna, catēnae
a chain
Introduced in Chapter 251.

cathedra, cathedrae
a chair with a back
Introduced in Chapter 139.

catīnus, catīnī
a bowl, a deep dish
Introduced in Chapter 121.

catulus, catulī
a puppy
Introduced in Chapter 251.

caulae, caulārum
a sheepfold, a pen; an opening
Introduced in Chapter 478.

caupō, caupōnis
an innkeeper
Introduced in Chapter 272.

caupōna, caupōnae
an inn
Introduced in Chapter 117.

causa, causae
a reason, a cause
Introduced in Chapter 113.

causidicus, causidicī
an advocate, a pleader for hire
Introduced in Chapter 381.

cautēs, cautis
a jagged rock, a crag
Introduced in Chapter 480.

cautiō, cautiōnis
caution; a guarantee, a bond
Introduced in Chapter 392.

cautus, cauta, cautum
careful
Introduced in Chapter 150.

cavea, caveae
the seats of a theatre; a cage
Introduced in Chapter 546.

caveō, cavēre
to beware, to be on one's guard
Introduced in Chapter 392.

celeber, celebris, celebre
famous, crowded
Introduced in Chapter 183.

celebrō, celebrāre
to celebrate
Introduced in Chapter 201.

celer, celeris, celere
fast, quick
Introduced in Chapter 94.

cella, cellae
a storeroom, a small room
Introduced in Chapter 185.

cēna, cēnae
dinner, the main meal
Introduced in Chapter 79.

cēnāculum, cēnāculī
an upper room, a garret, a flat on an upper floor
Introduced in Chapter 457.

cēnō, cēnāre
to dine
Introduced in Chapter 158.

cēnseō, cēnsēre
to give an opinion, to propose; to assess
Introduced in Chapter 357.

cēnsor, cēnsōris
a censor
Introduced in Chapter 383.

centum
a hundred
Introduced in Chapter 106.

centuriō, centuriōnis
a centurion
Introduced in Chapter 338.

cēpa, cēpae
an onion
Introduced in Chapter 126.

cēra, cērae
wax; a wax tablet
Introduced in Chapter 124.

cerasum, cerasī
a cherry
Introduced in Chapter 279.

cerebrum, cerebrī
the brain
Introduced in Chapter 173.

certāmen, certāminis
a contest, a struggle
Introduced in Chapter 337.

certō, certāre
to compete, to contend
Introduced in Chapter 337.

certus, certa, certum
sure, certain
Introduced in Chapter 147.

cervīcal, cervīcālis
a pillow, a bolster
Introduced in Chapter 446.

cervīsia, cervīsiae
beer
Introduced in Chapter 128.

cervīx, cervīcis
neck, nape
Introduced in Chapter 516.

cervus, cervī
a deer, a stag
Introduced in Chapter 92.

cessō, cessāre
to hold off, to be idle
Introduced in Chapter 229.

cēterī, cēterae, cētera
the others, the remaining
Introduced in Chapter 242.

charta, chartae
paper, a sheet
Introduced in Chapter 84.

chorda, chordae
a string (of an instrument)
Introduced in Chapter 544.

cibus, cibī
food
Introduced in Chapter 79.

cicātrīx, cicātrīcis
a scar
Introduced in Chapter 205.

cicōnia, cicōniae
a stork
Introduced in Chapter 192.

cīmex, cīmicis
a bedbug
Introduced in Chapter 447.

cinis, cineris
ash
Introduced in Chapter 275.

circā around
Introduced in Chapter 119.

circēnsis, circēnse
of the circus
Introduced in Chapter 335.

circuitus, circuitūs
a detour, a way round; a circuit
Introduced in Chapter 454.

circumeō, circumīre
to go round, to walk round; to visit in turn
Introduced in Chapter 454.

circus, circī
a racecourse
Introduced in Chapter 270.

cisium, cisiī
a light gig, a fast two-wheeled cart
Introduced in Chapter 429.

cista, cistae
a box, a chest
Introduced in Chapter 120.

cithara, citharae
a cithara, concert lyre
Introduced in Chapter 544.

citharoedus, citharoedī
a singer to the lyre
Introduced in Chapter 544.

citrā
on this side
Introduced in Chapter 238.

cīvis, cīvis
a citizen
Introduced in Chapter 74.

cīvitās, cīvitātis
a state; citizenship
Introduced in Chapter 271.

clādēs, clādis
a defeat, a disaster
Introduced in Chapter 342.

clāmitō, clāmitāre
to keep shouting, to cry out again and again
Introduced in Chapter 462.

clāmō, clāmāre
to shout
Introduced in Chapter 165.

clāmor, clāmōris
a shout, shouting
Introduced in Chapter 321.

clārus, clāra, clārum
bright, clear; famous
Introduced in Chapter 96.

claudō, claudere
"I close" — the word English calls close, and the fourth of four
Introduced in Chapter 41.

claudus, clauda, claudum
lame
Introduced in Chapter 184.

claustrum, claustrī
a bolt, a bar; a barrier
Introduced in Chapter 304.

clāva, clāvae
a club
Introduced in Chapter 251.

clāvus, clāvī
a nail (to hammer)
Introduced in Chapter 122.

clēmēns, clēmentis
merciful, mild
Introduced in Chapter 505.

clēmentia, clēmentiae
mercy, clemency
Introduced in Chapter 505.

clībanus, clībanī
a baking pot, a small oven
Introduced in Chapter 352.

cliēns, clientis
a client, a dependant
Introduced in Chapter 381.

clipeus, clipeī
a round shield
Introduced in Chapter 340.

clītellae, clītellārum
a pack saddle (for an ass or mule)
Introduced in Chapter 433.

clīvus, clīvī
a slope; a sloping street, an uphill road
Introduced in Chapter 423.

cloāca, cloācae
a sewer, a drain
Introduced in Chapter 458.

cochlear, cochleāris
a spoon
Introduced in Chapter 121.

coctus, cocta, coctum
cooked
Introduced in Chapter 181.

cōdex, cōdicis
a book (of bound pages)
Introduced in Chapter 124.

coepī, coepisse
I began, I have begun
Introduced in Chapter 297.

coerceō, coercēre
to restrain, to keep in check
Introduced in Chapter 416.

cōgitō, cōgitāre
"I think" — the verb of cōgitō ergō sum, built from a word meaning "to shake together"
Introduced in Chapter 38.

cognātus, cognātī
a blood relative
Introduced in Chapter 189.

cognitiō, cognitiōnis
an inquiry, a hearing; knowledge
Introduced in Chapter 412.

cognōmen, cognōminis
an extra family name, a surname
Introduced in Chapter 325.

cognōscō, cognōscere
to get to know, to learn
Introduced in Chapter 99.

cōgō, cōgere
to force; to collect
Introduced in Chapter 261.

cohors, cohortis
a cohort; an enclosure
Introduced in Chapter 338.

collābor, collābī
to fall in, to collapse
Introduced in Chapter 313.

collēgium, collēgiī
an association, a guild; a board of officials
Introduced in Chapter 388.

colligō, colligere
to gather, to collect
Introduced in Chapter 234.

collis, collis
a hill
Introduced in Chapter 88.

colloquor, colloquī
to talk together
Introduced in Chapter 201.

collum, collī
the neck
Introduced in Chapter 64.

cōlō, cōlāre
to strain, to filter
Introduced in Chapter 355.

colōnia, colōniae
a colony, a settlement
Introduced in Chapter 388.

colōnus, colōnī
a tenant farmer
Introduced in Chapter 188.

columba, columbae
a dove, a pigeon
Introduced in Chapter 131.

columna, columnae
a column
Introduced in Chapter 280.

colus, colī
a distaff (for spinning)
Introduced in Chapter 472.

cōmis, cōme
courteous, friendly
Introduced in Chapter 506.

cōmitās, cōmitātis
friendliness, affability
Introduced in Chapter 506.

comitia, comitiōrum
the voting assembly, the elections
Introduced in Chapter 384.

comitor, comitārī
to accompany
Introduced in Chapter 230.

commemorō, commemorāre
to recall, to mention
Introduced in Chapter 299.

commendō, commendāre
to recommend, to entrust
Introduced in Chapter 259.

commentum, commentī
an invention, a made-up story
Introduced in Chapter 349.

commeō, commeāre
to go back and forth, to come and go
Introduced in Chapter 460.

commercium, commerciī
trade, commerce; dealings
Introduced in Chapter 421.

commodō, commodāre
to lend
Introduced in Chapter 168.

commodus, commoda, commodum
convenient, comfortable
Introduced in Chapter 180.

commoror, commorārī
to stop for a while, to stay
Introduced in Chapter 455.

commoveō, commovēre
to move deeply, disturb
Introduced in Chapter 501.

commūnis, commūne
common, shared
Introduced in Chapter 182.

comparō, comparāre
to compare; to get ready
Introduced in Chapter 199.

compitum, compitī
a crossroads, a place where roads meet
Introduced in Chapter 424.

complector, complectī
to clasp, embrace; to include
Introduced in Chapter 535.

compōnō, compōnere
to put together, to arrange Introduced in Chapter 260.

comprehendō, comprehendere
to seize, to arrest; to grasp
Introduced in Chapter 304.

computō, computāre
to calculate
Introduced in Chapter 167.

concēdō, concēdere
to grant, to concede; to give way
Introduced in Chapter 363.

concentus, concentūs
harmony, singing together
Introduced in Chapter 545.

concīdō, concīdere
to chop up, to cut to pieces
Introduced in Chapter 351.

concinō, concinere
to sing together, sound in harmony
Introduced in Chapter 543.

concitō, concitāre
to stir up, to rouse
Introduced in Chapter 387.

conclāve, conclāvis
a room
Introduced in Chapter 552.

cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere
to shut in; to conclude, to infer
Introduced in Chapter 364.

cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis
a conclusion; the close of a speech
Introduced in Chapter 364.

concordia, concordiae
harmony, concord
Introduced in Chapter 386.

condemnō, condemnāre
to condemn, to find guilty
Introduced in Chapter 413.

condiciō, condiciōnis
a condition, terms; a situation
Introduced in Chapter 390.

condīmentum, condīmentī
a seasoning, a spice
Introduced in Chapter 355.

condiō, condīre
to season, to spice; to pickle
Introduced in Chapter 355.

condiscipulus, condiscipulī
a schoolfellow, a fellow pupil
Introduced in Chapter 401.

conditor, conditōris
a founder
Introduced in Chapter 344.

condō, condere
to found; to hide away
Introduced in Chapter 171.

condūcō, condūcere
to hire, to rent; to bring together
Introduced in Chapter 380.

cōnfestim
at once, without delay
Introduced in Chapter 292.

cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere
to trust, rely on; to be confident
Introduced in Chapter 498.

cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre
to strengthen; to confirm, to assert
Introduced in Chapter 361.

cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī
to confess, to admit
Introduced in Chapter 363.

cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre
to go up in flames
Introduced in Chapter 318.

cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis
a confluence, the place where two rivers meet
Introduced in Chapter 482.

cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum
rough, broken (of ground)
Introduced in Chapter 481.

coniciō, conicere
to throw together; to guess
Introduced in Chapter 204.

coniectūra, coniectūrae
a guess, a conjecture; an inference Introduced in Chapter 362.

coniūnx, coniugis
a husband or wife, a spouse
Introduced in Chapter 273.

coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis
a conspiracy
Introduced in Chapter 307.

cōnor, cōnārī
to try, to attempt
Introduced in Chapter 393.

conqueror, conquerī
to complain (loudly), to complain of Introduced in Chapter 450.

cōnscendō, cōnscendere
to go on board, to embark; to climb
Introduced in Chapter 438.

cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs
agreement, unanimity
Introduced in Chapter 358.

cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre
to agree together, to be of one mind
Introduced in Chapter 358.

cōnsequor, cōnsequī
to follow; to achieve, to obtain
Introduced in Chapter 373.

cōnsilium, cōnsiliī
a plan; advice
Introduced in Chapter 163.

cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī
a cousin
Introduced in Chapter 528.

cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis
consolation, comfort
Introduced in Chapter 492.

cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī
to console, comfort
Introduced in Chapter 492.

cōnspicor, cōnspicārī
to catch sight of, to see
Introduced in Chapter 455.

cōnstāns, cōnstantis
steadfast, consistent
Introduced in Chapter 509.

cōnstantia, cōnstantiae
steadiness, firmness, consistency
Introduced in Chapter 360.

cōnstituō, cōnstituere
to decide, to set up
Introduced in Chapter 163.

cōnstō, cōnstāre
to cost; to stand firm; to be agreed
Introduced in Chapter 420.

cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere
to get used to
Introduced in Chapter 169.

cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis
a habit, a custom
Introduced in Chapter 206.

cōnsul, cōnsulis
a consul
Introduced in Chapter 245.

cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere
to use up
Introduced in Chapter 203.

contāgiō, contāgiōnis
infection, contagion; touch
Introduced in Chapter 524.

contemnō, contemnere
to despise, scorn
Introduced in Chapter 514.

contendō, contendere
to insist, to maintain; to strive; to hurry
Introduced in Chapter 363.

contignātiō, contignātiōnis
a storey, a floor (of beams and boards)
Introduced in Chapter 457.

contingō, contingere
to touch; to happen (to), to fall to one's lot Introduced in Chapter 375.

continuō
straightaway, without a pause
Introduced in Chapter 292.

cōntiō, cōntiōnis
a public meeting; a speech made to it Introduced in Chapter 371.

contrā
opposite, against
Introduced in Chapter 119.

contrōversia, contrōversiae
a dispute, a controversy
Introduced in Chapter 358.

convalēscō, convalēscere
to recover, get well
Introduced in Chapter 526.

convallis, convallis
an enclosed valley, a deep valley
Introduced in Chapter 481.

conveniō, occurrō
"I meet" — two verbs for meeting, each one a prefix on a verb you already know, and the verb hiding inside a phrase from chapter 21
Introduced in Chapter 43.

cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis
an agreement, a covenant; an assembly
Introduced in Chapter 397.

convincō, convincere
to prove wrong, to convict; to prove
Introduced in Chapter 362.

convīvium, convīviī a banquet
Introduced in Chapter 253.

cōpa, cōpae
a tavern hostess, a barmaid
Introduced in Chapter 449.

coquō, coquere
to cook
Introduced in Chapter 76.

coquus, coquī
a cook
Introduced in Chapter 74.

cor, cordis
the heart
Introduced in Chapter 64.

cōram
face to face
Introduced in Chapter 238.

corbis, corbis
a wicker basket
Introduced in Chapter 463.

coriārius, coriāriī
a tanner, a currier
Introduced in Chapter 467.

corium, coriī
hide, leather
Introduced in Chapter 249.

corōna, corōnae
a crown, a garland
Introduced in Chapter 85.

corrigō, corrigere
to straighten, to correct
Introduced in Chapter 201.

corruō, corruere
to collapse, to tumble down
Introduced in Chapter 313.

corvus, corvī
a raven
Introduced in Chapter 131.

cotīdiē
every day
Introduced in Chapter 237.

coxa, coxae
hip
Introduced in Chapter 518.

crās tē vidēbō
"see you tomorrow" — built from two genuinely classical pieces (crās, "tomorrow," and vidēbō, already met last lesson) using the exact same pattern as the attested propediem tē vidēbō, though this specific combination isn't itself pulled from one surviving letter
Introduced in Chapter 25.

crassus, crassa, crassum
thick, fat
Introduced in Chapter 144.

crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum
tomorrow's
Introduced in Chapter 215.

crāticula, crāticulae
a gridiron, a grill
Introduced in Chapter 354.

crēber, crēbra, crēbrum
frequent, crowded
Introduced in Chapter 214.

crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere
to grow stronger, to spread (of a rumour)
Introduced in Chapter 301.

crēbrō
frequently, often
Introduced in Chapter 294.

crēditor, crēditōris
a creditor, a lender
Introduced in Chapter 418.

crēdō, crēdere
to believe, to trust
Introduced in Chapter 171.

crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum
trusting, credulous
Introduced in Chapter 498.

cremō, cremāre
to burn up, to cremate
Introduced in Chapter 318.

creō, creāre
to create, to elect
Introduced in Chapter 171.

crepīdō, crepīdinis
a raised edge; a kerb, a raised footway; a quay
Introduced in Chapter 425.

crepundia, crepundiōrum
a rattle; childhood toys
Introduced in Chapter 325.

crēscō, crēscere
to grow
Introduced in Chapter 158.

crībrum, crībrī
a sieve
Introduced in Chapter 352.

crīmen, crīminis
a charge, a crime
Introduced in Chapter 218.

crīnis, crīnis
hair, a lock of hair
Introduced in Chapter 515.

cruciō, cruciāre
to torment, torture
Introduced in Chapter 497.

crūdēlis, crūdēle
cruel
Introduced in Chapter 151.

crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis
cruelty
Introduced in Chapter 511.

crūdus, crūda, crūdum
raw
Introduced in Chapter 181.

crumēna, crumēnae
a purse
Introduced in Chapter 123.

crūs, crūris
a leg, a shin
Introduced in Chapter 66.

cubiculum, cubiculī
a bedroom
Introduced in Chapter 82.

cubīle, cubīlis
a lair, a resting place
Introduced in Chapter 227.

cubitum, cubitī
an elbow
Introduced in Chapter 136.

cubō, cubāre
to lie down, to lie (in bed); to sleep
Introduced in Chapter 447.

cucumis, cucumeris
a cucumber
Introduced in Chapter 127.

cūdō, cūdere
to hammer, to forge; to strike (coins)
Introduced in Chapter 469.

culcita, culcitae
a mattress
Introduced in Chapter 225.

culex, culicis
a gnat, a mosquito
Introduced in Chapter 276.

culīna, culīnae
a kitchen
Introduced in Chapter 83.

culpa, culpae
fault, blame; guilt
Introduced in Chapter 311.

cultellus, cultellī
a small knife
Introduced in Chapter 350.

culter, cultrī
a knife
Introduced in Chapter 83.

cum
when, since, although (with the subjunctive)
Introduced in Chapter 367.

cūnae, cūnārum
a cradle
Introduced in Chapter 324.

cupiditās, cupiditātis
a desire, eagerness
Introduced in Chapter 112.

cupīdō, cupīdinis
desire, longing
Introduced in Chapter 500.

cupidus, cupida, cupidum
eager, desirous
Introduced in Chapter 500.

cupiō, cupere
to desire, to long for Introduced in Chapter 111.

cūr
why — and the two words that answer it
Introduced in Chapter 52.

cūra, cūrae
care, worry
Introduced in Chapter 68.

cūria, cūriae
the senate house
Introduced in Chapter 270.

cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum
inquisitive, painstaking
Introduced in Chapter 212.

cūrō, cūrāre
to care for
Introduced in Chapter 99.

currō, currere
"I run" — the verb inside current, curriculum, courier and corridor, and, by way of a Celtic wagon, inside car
Introduced in Chapter 41.

currus, currūs
a chariot
Introduced in Chapter 217.

custōdia, custōdiae
custody, guard; prison
Introduced in Chapter 415.

custōs, custōdis
a guard, a keeper
Introduced in Chapter 322.

cutis, cutis
the skin
Introduced in Chapter 136.

damnātiō, damnātiōnis
a conviction, a condemnation
Introduced in Chapter 413.

damnō, damnāre
to condemn, to find guilty
Introduced in Chapter 311.

damnum, damnī
loss, damage
Introduced in Chapter 274.

dea, deae
a goddess
Introduced in Chapter 253.

dēbeō, dēbēre
to have to, must; to owe
Introduced in Chapter 109.

dēbilis, dēbile
weak, disabled
Introduced in Chapter 521.

dēbilitās, dēbilitātis
weakness, infirmity
Introduced in Chapter 521.

dēbitor, dēbitōris
a debtor
Introduced in Chapter 418.

dēbitum, dēbitī
a debt
Introduced in Chapter 274.

dēcēdō, dēcēdere
to depart; to die
Introduced in Chapter 329.

dēcernō, dēcernere
to decree, to settle Introduced in Chapter 229.

dēcidō, dēcidere
to fall down, to fall off
Introduced in Chapter 313.

decimus, decima, decimum
tenth — and the tax that took one in ten
Introduced in Chapter 56.

dēcipiō, dēcipere
to deceive, to cheat
Introduced in Chapter 399.

dēcrētum, dēcrētī
a decree, a decision
Introduced in Chapter 409.

decuriō, decuriōnis
a town councillor; a cavalry officer
Introduced in Chapter 388.

dēditiō, dēditiōnis
a surrender
Introduced in Chapter 343.

dēdō, dēdere
to give up, to surrender
Introduced in Chapter 343.

dēdūcō, dēdūcere
to launch (a ship); to lead away, to escort
Introduced in Chapter 439.

dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre
to wear out, to tire out
Introduced in Chapter 426.

dēfendō, dēfendere
to defend
Introduced in Chapter 198.

dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis
a defence
Introduced in Chapter 412.

dēferō, dēferre
to carry down, to carry off; (of ships) to drive off course; to report
Introduced in Chapter 440.

dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum
worn out
Introduced in Chapter 216.

dēfōrmis, dēfōrme
ugly, misshapen
Introduced in Chapter 548.

deinde
then, next
Introduced in Chapter 101.

dēlābor, dēlābī
to slide down, to slip down, to fall
Introduced in Chapter 481.

dēlātor, dēlātōris
an informer, an accuser
Introduced in Chapter 412.

dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis
delight, pleasure
Introduced in Chapter 499.

dēlectō, dēlectāre
to delight, charm
Introduced in Chapter 499.

dēleō, dēlēre
to destroy, to wipe out
Introduced in Chapter 160.

dēlīberō, dēlīberāre
to deliberate, to think over
Introduced in Chapter 359.

dēliciae, dēliciārum
a darling, pet; delight
Introduced in Chapter 536.

dēlīrō, dēlīrāre
to be delirious, talk nonsense
Introduced in Chapter 510.

delphīnus, delphīnī
a dolphin
Introduced in Chapter 134.

dēmēns, dēmentis
out of one's mind, crazy
Introduced in Chapter 510.

dēmittō, dēmittere
to let down, to lower
Introduced in Chapter 234.

dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre
to show, to point out; to prove Introduced in Chapter 361.

dēmum
at last, only then
Introduced in Chapter 291.

dēnārius, dēnāriī
a denarius (silver coin)
Introduced in Chapter 190.

dēnegō, dēnegāre
to deny flatly; to refuse Introduced in Chapter 363.

dēnique
finally
Introduced in Chapter 208.

dēns, dentis
a tooth
Introduced in Chapter 63.

deorsum
downwards
Introduced in Chapter 264.

dēprecor, dēprecārī
to beg to be spared, to plead against
Introduced in Chapter 413.

dēprehendō, dēprehendere
to catch, to catch in the act
Introduced in Chapter 304.

dēscendō, dēscendere
to go down
Introduced in Chapter 153.

dēserō, dēserere
to abandon, desert
Introduced in Chapter 537.

dēsīderium, dēsīderiī
a longing
Introduced in Chapter 112.

dēsīderō, dēsīderāre
to miss, to long for Introduced in Chapter 111.

dēsiliō, dēsilīre
to jump down, to leap down
Introduced in Chapter 432.

dēsinō, dēsinere
to cease
Introduced in Chapter 204.

dēsistō, dēsistere
to give up
Introduced in Chapter 259.

dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis
despair, hopelessness
Introduced in Chapter 498.

dēspērō, dēspērāre
to despair (of)
Introduced in Chapter 498.

dēspiciō, dēspicere
to look down on, despise
Introduced in Chapter 514.

dēspondeō, dēspondēre
to promise in marriage, to betroth
Introduced in Chapter 327.

dēspūmō, dēspūmāre
to skim off
Introduced in Chapter 353.

dēstinō, dēstināre
to fix, to intend; to appoint
Introduced in Chapter 393.

dēsum, deesse
to be missing, to fail
Introduced in Chapter 231.

dētegō, dētegere
to uncover, to discover Introduced in Chapter 232.

deus, deī
a god
Introduced in Chapter 346.

dēversor, dēversārī
to lodge, to stay as a guest
Introduced in Chapter 445.

dēversōrium, dēversōriī
a lodging house
Introduced in Chapter 227.

dēverticulum, dēverticulī
a roadside inn, a lodging; a side road
Introduced in Chapter 445.

dēvius, dēvia, dēvium
off the road, out of the way; remote
Introduced in Chapter 452.

dexter, dextra, dextrum
right (not left)
Introduced in Chapter 114.

dextrōrsum
to the right, towards the right
Introduced in Chapter 454.

dialectica, dialecticae
logic, dialectic
Introduced in Chapter 404.

dīcō, dīcere
"I say" — a verb that originally meant "point out", which is why English got both dictionary and teach from it
Introduced in Chapter 37.

dictātor, dictātōris
a dictator
Introduced in Chapter 345.

dictō, dictāre
to say repeatedly; to dictate
Introduced in Chapter 405.

diēs
"day" — the word you've already been using all along, inside diēs Lūnae and medius diēs, now on its own
Introduced in Chapter 28.

diēs Lūnae, Mārtis, Mercuriī, Iovis, Veneris the weekdays (Monday–Friday) — the full, un-worn-down planet-god phrases
Introduced in Chapter 5.

diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis
a birthday
Introduced in Chapter 195.

diēs Saturnī, diēs Sōlis
Saturday and Sunday — Rome's own pagan names, and how Christianity later renamed them
Introduced in Chapter 5.

differō, differre
to put off; to differ; to spread
Introduced in Chapter 395.

difficilis, difficile difficult
Introduced in Chapter 97.

diffīdō, diffīdere
to distrust; to lose hope
Introduced in Chapter 498.

digitus, digitī
a finger
Introduced in Chapter 63.

dignitās, dignitātis
worth, rank, dignity
Introduced in Chapter 370.

dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis
a putting off, a delay
Introduced in Chapter 395.

dīligēns, dīligentis
hard-working
Introduced in Chapter 150.

dīligentia, dīligentiae
care, diligence
Introduced in Chapter 379.

dīligō, dīligere
to hold dear, esteem
Introduced in Chapter 533.

dīlūculum, dīlūculī
first light, daybreak
Introduced in Chapter 207.

dīluō, dīluere
to water down, to dilute; to wash away
Introduced in Chapter 449.

dīmicō, dīmicāre
to fight it out, to struggle
Introduced in Chapter 339.

discēdō, discēdere
to go away, to leave
Introduced in Chapter 160.

discipulus, discipulī
the pupil — from learning, and the reason discipline means what it does
Introduced in Chapter 53.

discordia, discordiae
disagreement, discord
Introduced in Chapter 387.

discrīmen, discrīminis
a difference; a crisis
Introduced in Chapter 221.

discumbō, discumbere
to recline at table
Introduced in Chapter 356.

disiungō, disiungere
to unyoke; to separate
Introduced in Chapter 430.

displicēō, displicēre to displease
Introduced in Chapter 514.

dispōnō, dispōnere
to set out, to arrange Introduced in Chapter 394.

disputātiō, disputātiōnis
a discussion, a debate
Introduced in Chapter 368.

disputō, disputāre
to discuss, to argue
Introduced in Chapter 166.

dissentiō, dissentīre
to disagree, to differ in opinion
Introduced in Chapter 358.

disserō, disserere
to discuss, to hold forth (on)
Introduced in Chapter 368.

dissimulō, dissimulāre
to hide, disguise (a feeling)
Introduced in Chapter 504.

dissuādeō, dissuādēre
to advise against, to dissuade
Introduced in Chapter 369.

diū
for a long time
Introduced in Chapter 263.

dīversus, dīversa, dīversum different
Introduced in Chapter 266.

dīves, dīvitis
rich
Introduced in Chapter 98.

dīvitiae, dīvitiārum
riches, wealth
Introduced in Chapter 422.

dīvortium, dīvortiī
a divorce; a separation
Introduced in Chapter 328.

dīvus, dīvī
a deified emperor; a god
Introduced in Chapter 346.

dō, dare
"I give" — the last of the chapter's eight verbs, and the one that gave English data, date, tradition and dose
Introduced in Chapter 37.

doceō, docēre
to teach
Introduced in Chapter 400.

doctrīna, doctrīnae
teaching, learning; a doctrine
Introduced in Chapter 407.

doctus, docta, doctum
learned, skilled
Introduced in Chapter 403.

documentum, documentī
a lesson, a proof; a warning example
Introduced in Chapter 361.

doleō, dolēre
to hurt, to grieve
Introduced in Chapter 204.

dolō, dolāre
to hew, to chop into shape
Introduced in Chapter 470.

dolor, dolōris
pain, grief
Introduced in Chapter 67.

dolus, dolī
a trick, cunning
Introduced in Chapter 305.

domesticus, domestica, domesticum
of the home, tame
Introduced in Chapter 214.

domicilium, domiciliī
a home, dwelling
Introduced in Chapter 552.

domina, dominae
a mistress, the lady of the house
Introduced in Chapter 138.

dominium, dominiī
ownership
Introduced in Chapter 417.

domus, domūs
the house — the building a family lives in, and the root under domestic, dome and dominate Introduced in Chapter 44.

dōnec
until; while
Introduced in Chapter 175.

dōnō, dōnāre
to give as a present
Introduced in Chapter 537.

dōnum, dōnī
a gift
Introduced in Chapter 536.

dormiō, dormīre
"I sleep" — the verb behind dormitory and dormant, and the one word English may only look as though it borrowed Introduced in Chapter 40.

dormītō, dormītāre
to doze, be sleepy
Introduced in Chapter 527.

dorsum, dorsī
the back
Introduced in Chapter 135.

dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis
doubt, hesitation
Introduced in Chapter 359.

dubitō, dubitāre
to doubt, to hesitate
Introduced in Chapter 203.

dubius, dubia, dubium
doubtful
Introduced in Chapter 243.

dūcō, dūcere
to lead
Introduced in Chapter 154.

ductor, ductōris
a leader, one who leads the way; a commander
Introduced in Chapter 453.

dūdum
a little while ago; for a long time
Introduced in Chapter 295.

dulcis, dulce
sweet
Introduced in Chapter 95.

dum
while — the word that holds one thing open while another happens Introduced in Chapter 282.

dummodo
provided that, so long as Introduced in Chapter 390.

dūrus, dūra, dūrum
hard
Introduced in Chapter 143.

dux, ducis
a leader
Introduced in Chapter 187.

ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium
drunk
Introduced in Chapter 269.

ēdictum, ēdictī
an edict, a proclamation
Introduced in Chapter 409.

ēdiscō, ēdiscere
to learn by heart
Introduced in Chapter 402.

edō, esse
I eat — and the infinitive that collides with to be Introduced in Chapter 54.

ēducō, ēducāre
to bring up, to rear
Introduced in Chapter 324.

effectus, effectūs
a result, an effect; performance
Introduced in Chapter 373.

efficāx, efficācis
effective, efficient
Introduced in Chapter 372.

efficiō, efficere
to bring about, to cause; to make
Introduced in Chapter 372.

effigiēs, effigiēī
a likeness, effigy
Introduced in Chapter 547.

effringō, effringere
to break open
Introduced in Chapter 304.

effugiō, effugere
to escape
Introduced in Chapter 322.

egeō, egēre
to be in need (of), to lack
Introduced in Chapter 422.

egestās, egestātis
want, extreme poverty
Introduced in Chapter 422.

ēgredior, ēgredī
to step out, to go out; to land, to disembark
Introduced in Chapter 439.

ēlegāns, ēlegantis
elegant, refined, tasteful
Introduced in Chapter 548.

elementum, elementī
a first principle, an element; (plural) the ABC
Introduced in Chapter 404.

elephantus, elephantī
an elephant
Introduced in Chapter 92.

ēligō, ēligere
to pick out, to choose
Introduced in Chapter 384.

ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum
boiled
Introduced in Chapter 353.

ēloquentia, ēloquentiae
eloquence
Introduced in Chapter 368.

ēloquor, ēloquī
to speak out, to utter Introduced in Chapter 368.

ēmendō, ēmendāre
to correct (a fault)
Introduced in Chapter 257.

emō, emere
"I buy" — a verb that once meant simply "I take", which is the only reason redeem, example and premium mean what they do
Introduced in Chapter 43.

emplastrum, emplastrī
a plaster, a dressing
Introduced in Chapter 236.

emptor, emptōris
a buyer
Introduced in Chapter 420.

ēnatō, ēnatāre
to swim to safety, to swim out
Introduced in Chapter 440.

ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre
to sail out, to sail away; to sail across Introduced in Chapter 444.

enim
for, you see
Introduced in Chapter 113.

ēnumerō, ēnumerāre
to count out, to list
Introduced in Chapter 405.

eō, īre
"I go" — the shortest verb in Latin, whose bare stem is a single vowel
Introduced in Chapter 37.

ephippium, ephippiī
a saddle cloth, a horse blanket
Introduced in Chapter 432.

epigramma, epigrammatis
an epigram, a short poem
Introduced in Chapter 549.

epistula, epistulae
a letter — a Greek word Rome borrowed, and the thing Cicero wrote in his letters Introduced in Chapter 51.

epulae, epulārum
a feast, a banquet
Introduced in Chapter 333.

epulor, epulārī
to feast, to banquet
Introduced in Chapter 333.

eques, equitis
a horseman, a cavalryman; a knight
Introduced in Chapter 340.

equitō, equitāre
to ride (on horseback)
Introduced in Chapter 432.

equus, equī
a horse
Introduced in Chapter 90.

ēripiō, ēripere
to snatch away, to rescue
Introduced in Chapter 316.

errō, errāre
to wander; to be wrong
Introduced in Chapter 101.

ērubēscō, ērubēscere
to blush
Introduced in Chapter 260.

ērudiō, ērudīre
to educate, to polish
Introduced in Chapter 400.

ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum
educated, learned
Introduced in Chapter 403.

erus, erī
a master (of slaves)
Introduced in Chapter 530.

essedum, essedī
a two-wheeled chariot; a light travelling carriage Introduced in Chapter 429.

et
and — and the enclitic -que, which does the same job glued to the back of a word Introduced in Chapter 49.

etenim
for indeed, and in fact Introduced in Chapter 365.

etiamsī
even if
Introduced in Chapter 391.

etsī
even if
Introduced in Chapter 178.

ēvādō, ēvādere
to get away, to come out
Introduced in Chapter 322.

ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere
to vanish
Introduced in Chapter 234.

ēveniō, ēvenīre
to happen, to turn out
Introduced in Chapter 298.

ēventus, ēventūs
an outcome
Introduced in Chapter 221.

ēvolvō, ēvolvere
to unroll; to read (a book)
Introduced in Chapter 550.

excipiō, excipere
to welcome, to receive
Introduced in Chapter 202.

excitō, excitāre
to rouse, to wake; to stir up
Introduced in Chapter 372.

excubiae, excubiārum
the watch, guard duty
Introduced in Chapter 319.

excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis
an excuse, a plea
Introduced in Chapter 369.

excūsō, excūsāre
to excuse; to plead as an excuse
Introduced in Chapter 369.

exemplum, exemplī
an example; a warning
Introduced in Chapter 361.

exerceō, exercēre
to train, to practise; to keep busy
Introduced in Chapter 378.

exīstimō, exīstimāre
to reckon, to consider; to value
Introduced in Chapter 357.

exitus, exitūs
a way out; an outcome, an end
Introduced in Chapter 296.

expergīscor, expergīscī
to wake up
Introduced in Chapter 230.

explicō, explicāre
to explain, to unfold
Introduced in Chapter 197.

explōrātor, explōrātōris
a scout
Introduced in Chapter 302.

explōrō, explōrāre
to search out, to explore
Introduced in Chapter 302.

exprimō, exprimere
to press out, to express
Introduced in Chapter 260.

expugnō, expugnāre
to take by storm
Introduced in Chapter 341.

exsequiae, exsequiārum
a funeral procession, funeral rites
Introduced in Chapter 330.

exsilium, exsiliī
exile, banishment
Introduced in Chapter 312.

exsistō, exsistere
to arise, to come forth; to exist
Introduced in Chapter 375.

exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis
expectation, anticipation
Introduced in Chapter 395.

exspectō, exspectāre
"I wait" — to wait, in Latin, is to look out for something, and the four verbs of this chapter together
Introduced in Chapter 42.

exspīrō, exspīrāre
to breathe one's last
Introduced in Chapter 329.

exstinguō, exstinguere
to put out
Introduced in Chapter 165.

exstruō, exstruere
to build up, to raise, to pile up
Introduced in Chapter 459.

exsultō, exsultāre
to leap for joy, rejoice greatly Introduced in Chapter 489.

extemplō
in an instant, forthwith
Introduced in Chapter 292.

extrā
outside, beyond
Introduced in Chapter 102.

exuō, exuere
to take off (clothes)
Introduced in Chapter 155.

faba, fabae
a bean
Introduced in Chapter 127.

faber, fabrī
a craftsman, a smith
Introduced in Chapter 137.

fabricor, fabricārī
to make, to build, to forge
Introduced in Chapter 378.

fābula, fābulae
a story, a play
Introduced in Chapter 219.

fābulor, fābulārī
to chat, to tell stories
Introduced in Chapter 349.

facētus, facēta, facētum
witty, clever
Introduced in Chapter 502.

faciēs, faciēī
appearance, shape; face
Introduced in Chapter 515.

facilis, facile
easy
Introduced in Chapter 97.

facinus, facinoris
a deed; a bad deed
Introduced in Chapter 305.

faciō, facere
to make, to do
Introduced in Chapter 155.

factiō, factiōnis
a racing team; a party, a faction
Introduced in Chapter 335.

facultās, facultātis
a chance, the means to do something
Introduced in Chapter 110.

fācundus, fācunda, fācundum eloquent Introduced in Chapter 184.

faenum, faenī
hay
Introduced in Chapter 434.

fāgus, fāgī
a beech tree
Introduced in Chapter 484.

fallācia, fallāciae
a deceit, a trick
Introduced in Chapter 399.

fallō, fallere
to deceive
Introduced in Chapter 171.

falsus, falsa, falsum
false
Introduced in Chapter 147.

falx, falcis
a sickle, a pruning hook
Introduced in Chapter 475.

fāma, fāmae
reputation, rumour
Introduced in Chapter 219.

famēs, famis
hunger
Introduced in Chapter 68.

familia, familiae
a family, a household
Introduced in Chapter 70.

familiāris, familiāris
a close friend
Introduced in Chapter 533.

familiāritās, familiāritātis
close friendship, intimacy
Introduced in Chapter 533.

famulus, famulī
a household servant, an attendant
Introduced in Chapter 380.

farīna, farīnae
flour
Introduced in Chapter 81.

fās
divine law; what is right
Introduced in Chapter 414.

fastīdiō, fastīdīre
to turn up one's nose at, feel disgust at Introduced in Chapter 494.

fastīdium, fastīdiī
disgust, squeamishness; disdain
Introduced in Chapter 494.

fateor, fatērī
to admit, to confess Introduced in Chapter 312.

fatīgō, fatīgāre
to tire out, to weary
Introduced in Chapter 380.

fātum, fātī
fate
Introduced in Chapter 227.

faucēs, faucium
jaws, the back of the mouth; a narrow pass
Introduced in Chapter 516.

favilla, favillae
glowing ash, embers
Introduced in Chapter 317.

favōnius, favōniī
the west wind (of spring)
Introduced in Chapter 487.

fax, facis
a torch
Introduced in Chapter 139.

febris, febris
a fever
Introduced in Chapter 67.

fēlīx, fēlīcis
lucky, happy
Introduced in Chapter 148.

fēmina, fēminae
a woman
Introduced in Chapter 72.

fēnerātor, fēnerātōris
a moneylender
Introduced in Chapter 419.

fenestra, fenestrae
a window
Introduced in Chapter 82.

fēnus, fēnoris
interest (on money)
Introduced in Chapter 418.

ferculum, ferculī
a course, a dish; a tray
Introduced in Chapter 356.

ferē about, nearly
Introduced in Chapter 210.

fēriae, fēriārum
holidays
Introduced in Chapter 253.

fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum
on holiday, keeping holiday
Introduced in Chapter 538.

fermentum, fermentī
leaven, yeast
Introduced in Chapter 352.

ferō, ferre
"I bring, I carry" — one verb built out of two unrelated roots, and the parent of transfer, refer, prefer, differ, offer and suffer
Introduced in Chapter 42.

ferōx, ferōcis
fierce
Introduced in Chapter 145.

ferrārius, ferrāriī
a blacksmith, an ironworker
Introduced in Chapter 469.

ferrum, ferrī
iron
Introduced in Chapter 222.

ferula, ferulae
a cane (for punishing pupils); a fennel stalk
Introduced in Chapter 408.

ferus, fera, ferum
wild
Introduced in Chapter 214.

ferveō, fervēre
to boil, to be hot
Introduced in Chapter 353.

fessus, fessa, fessum
tired
Introduced in Chapter 68.

festīnō, festīnāre
to hurry
Introduced in Chapter 158.

fēstus, fēsta, fēstum
festive, holiday
Introduced in Chapter 333.

fīcus, fīcī
a fig, a fig tree
Introduced in Chapter 81.

fīdēlis, fīdēle
loyal
Introduced in Chapter 243.

fidēs, fideī
trust, faith
Introduced in Chapter 262.

fidicen, fidicinis
a lyre-player
Introduced in Chapter 544.

fīdūcia, fīdūciae
trust, confidence; a thing held in trust
Introduced in Chapter 396.

fīdus, fīda, fīdum
faithful
Introduced in Chapter 243.

figulus, figulī
a potter
Introduced in Chapter 188.

figūra, figūrae
a shape, form, figure
Introduced in Chapter 547.

fīlia, fīliae
a daughter
Introduced in Chapter 70.

fīliola, fīliolae
a little daughter
Introduced in Chapter 529.

fīlius, fīliī
a son
Introduced in Chapter 70.

fīlum, fīlī
a thread
Introduced in Chapter 140.

fingō, fingere
to shape, to imagine
Introduced in Chapter 231.

fīniō, fīnīre
to finish; to set limits
Introduced in Chapter 297.

fīnis, fīnis
the end; a boundary
Introduced in Chapter 237.

fīō, fierī
to become; to happen, to be done
Introduced in Chapter 298.

flagellum, flagellī
a whip, a scourge
Introduced in Chapter 415.

flāgitium, flāgitiī
a disgraceful act, a scandal
Introduced in Chapter 414.

flagrō, flagrāre
to blaze, to be on fire
Introduced in Chapter 318.

flammeum, flammeī
a bridal veil
Introduced in Chapter 328.

flectō, flectere
to bend, to turn
Introduced in Chapter 424.

fleō, flēre
to weep
Introduced in Chapter 75.

flexus, flexūs
a bend, a turn (in a road or river)
Introduced in Chapter 424.

flōs, flōris
a flower
Introduced in Chapter 86.

flūctuō, flūctuāre
to toss on the waves, to rise in waves; to waver
Introduced in Chapter 440.

flūctus, flūctūs
a billow, a wave; a surge
Introduced in Chapter 443.

flūmen, flūminis
a river
Introduced in Chapter 87.

fluō, fluere
to flow, to run (of water)
Introduced in Chapter 482.

fluvius, fluviī
a running stream, a river
Introduced in Chapter 196.

focus, focī
the hearth — the fire in the middle of the house, and the reason a lens has a focus Introduced in Chapter 44.

fodiō, fodere
to dig
Introduced in Chapter 261.

foedus, foederis
a treaty, an alliance
Introduced in Chapter 343.

folium, foliī
a leaf
Introduced in Chapter 86.

follis, follis
a pair of bellows; a leather bag
Introduced in Chapter 469.

fōns, fontis
a spring, a fountain
Introduced in Chapter 87.

forfex, forficis
scissors
Introduced in Chapter 140.

forīs
out of doors
Introduced in Chapter 177.

formīca, formīcae
an ant
Introduced in Chapter 132.

formīdō, formīdinis
dread, terror
Introduced in Chapter 320.

fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum
beautiful
Introduced in Chapter 151.

fornāx, fornācis
a furnace, a kiln
Introduced in Chapter 217.

fortasse
perhaps
Introduced in Chapter 239.

fortis, forte
brave, strong
Introduced in Chapter 97.

fortitūdō, fortitūdinis
courage, bravery
Introduced in Chapter 509.

fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum
by chance, accidental
Introduced in Chapter 375.

fortūna, fortūnae
fortune, luck
Introduced in Chapter 221.

forum, forī
a forum, a market square
Introduced in Chapter 107.

fossa, fossae
a ditch
Introduced in Chapter 280.

frangō, frangere
to break
Introduced in Chapter 156.

frater, soror
brother and sister — the words Vulgar Latin later abandoned in favor of germanus
Introduced in Chapter 7.

frāternus, frāterna, frāternum
brotherly
Introduced in Chapter 529.

fraudō, fraudāre
to cheat, to defraud
Introduced in Chapter 450.

fraus, fraudis
fraud, deceit; harm
Introduced in Chapter 305.

fraxinus, fraxinī
an ash tree; an ash-wood spear
Introduced in Chapter 484.

frēnō, frēnāre
to bridle; to hold back
Introduced in Chapter 431.

frēnum, frēnī
a bridle, a bit
Introduced in Chapter 431.

frequēns, frequentis
crowded, full of people; frequent
Introduced in Chapter 460.

frequentō, frequentāre
to throng, to crowd into; to visit often
Introduced in Chapter 460.

fretum, fretī
a strait, a narrow channel; (in poetry) the sea
Introduced in Chapter 443.

frīgidārium, frīgidāriī
the cold room
Introduced in Chapter 541.

frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum
cold
Introduced in Chapter 95.

frīgō, frīgere
to fry, to parch
Introduced in Chapter 354.

frīgus, frīgoris
the cold, cold weather
Introduced in Chapter 486.

fritillus, fritillī
a dice-box
Introduced in Chapter 539.

frōns, frontis
the forehead, the front
Introduced in Chapter 65.

frūmentum, frūmentī
grain, corn
Introduced in Chapter 81.

fruor, fruī
to enjoy
Introduced in Chapter 231.

frūstrā
in vain
Introduced in Chapter 211.

fuga, fugae
flight, running away
Introduced in Chapter 322.

fugiō, fugere
to flee, to run away
Introduced in Chapter 101.

fugō, fugāre
to put to flight, to rout
Introduced in Chapter 342.

fulgur, fulguris
lightning
Introduced in Chapter 130.

fullō, fullōnis
a fuller, a cleaner of cloth
Introduced in Chapter 377.

fūmō, fūmāre
to smoke
Introduced in Chapter 318.

fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum
smoky, full of smoke
Introduced in Chapter 461.

fūmus, fūmī
smoke
Introduced in Chapter 275.

fundāmentum, fundāmentī
a foundation
Introduced in Chapter 185.

fundus, fundī
a farm, an estate; the bottom
Introduced in Chapter 473.

fūnis, fūnis
a rope, a cord
Introduced in Chapter 437.

fūnus, fūneris
a funeral; death
Introduced in Chapter 330.

fūr, fūris
a thief
Introduced in Chapter 245.

furca, furcae
a fork, a pitchfork
Introduced in Chapter 142.

furnus, furnī
an oven
Introduced in Chapter 252.

fūror, fūrārī
to steal
Introduced in Chapter 232.

fūrtum, fūrtī
a theft
Introduced in Chapter 303.

fuscus, fusca, fuscum
dark, dusky
Introduced in Chapter 149.

fūsus, fūsī
a spindle
Introduced in Chapter 472.

galea, galeae
a helmet
Introduced in Chapter 277.

gallīna, gallīnae
a hen
Introduced in Chapter 92.

gallus, gallī
a cockerel
Introduced in Chapter 135.

garum, garī
fish sauce
Introduced in Chapter 195.

gaudeō, gaudēre
to rejoice, to be glad
Introduced in Chapter 78.

gaudium, gaudiī
joy
Introduced in Chapter 69.

gelidus, gelida, gelidum
icy
Introduced in Chapter 152.

gelō, gelāre
to freeze; (passive) to be frozen
Introduced in Chapter 486.

gemellus, gemella, gemellum
twin
Introduced in Chapter 528.

geminus, geminī
a twin
Introduced in Chapter 247.

gemitus, gemitūs
a groan, moan
Introduced in Chapter 491.

gemma, gemmae
a gem; a bud
Introduced in Chapter 225.

gemō, gemere
to groan, moan
Introduced in Chapter 491.

gena, genae
a cheek
Introduced in Chapter 66.

gener, generī
a son-in-law
Introduced in Chapter 247.

gēns, gentis
a clan, family line; a people
Introduced in Chapter 528.

genū, genūs
a knee
Introduced in Chapter 64.

geōmetria, geōmetriae
geometry
Introduced in Chapter 404.

gerō, gerere
to carry, to wear
Introduced in Chapter 155.

gigās, gigantis
a giant
Introduced in Chapter 347.

gignō, gignere
to give birth to, to produce
Introduced in Chapter 261.

glaciēs, glaciēī
ice
Introduced in Chapter 130.

gladiātor, gladiātōris
a gladiator
Introduced in Chapter 336.

gladius, gladiī
a sword
Introduced in Chapter 85.

glōria, glōriae
glory
Introduced in Chapter 187.

gnārus, gnāra, gnārum
knowing, familiar with, expert in Introduced in Chapter 453.

gracilis, gracile
slender, slim
Introduced in Chapter 523.

gradātim
step by step
Introduced in Chapter 293.

gradior, gradī
to step, to walk
Introduced in Chapter 423.

gradus, gradūs
a step, a stair
Introduced in Chapter 117.

grammatica, grammaticae
grammar
Introduced in Chapter 226.

grammaticus, grammaticī
a teacher of literature and grammar
Introduced in Chapter 401.

grandō, grandinis
hail
Introduced in Chapter 130.

grassātor, grassātōris
a mugger, a street thug
Introduced in Chapter 303.

grātiās (tibi) agō
thank you (lit. "I give thanks to you")
Introduced in Chapter 1.

grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum
free of charge
Introduced in Chapter 181.

grātus, grāta, grātum
welcome, pleasing; grateful
Introduced in Chapter 512.

gravēdō, gravēdinis
a head cold
Introduced in Chapter 205.

gravis, grave
heavy, serious
Introduced in Chapter 182.

gravitās, gravitātis
weight; seriousness
Introduced in Chapter 370.

grex, gregis
a flock, a herd; a band of people
Introduced in Chapter 477.

gubernāculum, gubernāculī
a rudder, a steering oar
Introduced in Chapter 437.

gubernātor, gubernātōris
a helmsman
Introduced in Chapter 186.

gubernō, gubernāre
to steer; to govern
Introduced in Chapter 385.

gurges, gurgitis
a whirlpool, an abyss of water; a flood
Introduced in Chapter 483.

gustō, gustāre
to taste
Introduced in Chapter 158.

guttur, gutturis
throat, gullet
Introduced in Chapter 516.

habēna, habēnae
a rein; a strap
Introduced in Chapter 431.

habeō, habēre
"I have" — a verb that looks exactly like its English translation and is not related to it at all
Introduced in Chapter 37.

habitātor, habitātōris
an occupant, a dweller
Introduced in Chapter 456.

habitō, habitāre
to live (somewhere)
Introduced in Chapter 160.

hama, hamae
a fire bucket
Introduced in Chapter 319.

harēna, harēnae
sand
Introduced in Chapter 88.

harpastum, harpastī
a hand-ball game
Introduced in Chapter 540.

hasta, hastae
a spear
Introduced in Chapter 277.

hērēditās, hērēditātis
an inheritance
Introduced in Chapter 332.

hērēs, hērēdis
an heir
Introduced in Chapter 332.

herī yesterday
Introduced in Chapter 103.

hērōs, hērōis
a hero, a demigod
Introduced in Chapter 347.

hesternus, hesterna, hesternum
yesterday's Introduced in Chapter 215.

hic, haec, hoc
this, here by me — the near point of a three-way system Spanish still keeps Introduced in Chapter 50.

hilaris, hilare
cheerful
Introduced in Chapter 180.

hilaritās, hilaritātis
cheerfulness, merriment
Introduced in Chapter 489.

hinniō, hinnīre
to neigh, to whinny
Introduced in Chapter 434.

historia, historiae
history
Introduced in Chapter 194.

histriō, histriōnis
an actor
Introduced in Chapter 219.

hodiē
today
Introduced in Chapter 103.

hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum
today's
Introduced in Chapter 215.

holitor, holitōris
a vegetable grower, a market gardener
Introduced in Chapter 463.

holus, holeris
vegetables, greens
Introduced in Chapter 80.

homicīda, homicīdae
a murderer, a killer
Introduced in Chapter 306.

honestus, honesta, honestum
honourable Introduced in Chapter 183.

hōra
hour — the source word itself, and the Roman hour was NOT a fixed length Introduced in Chapter 13.

horreum, horreī
a granary, a barn, a storehouse
Introduced in Chapter 476.

horribilis, horribile
dreadful, horrible
Introduced in Chapter 496.

hortor, hortārī
to urge, to encourage Introduced in Chapter 369.

hortus, hortī
the garden — an enclosed piece of ground, and a true blood relative of English yard and garden
Introduced in Chapter 44.

hospes, hospitis
a guest; a host
Introduced in Chapter 72.

hospitālis, hospitāle
hospitable; of a guest or host
Introduced in Chapter 445.

hospitium, hospitiī
hospitality; lodging
Introduced in Chapter 227.

hostis, hostis
an enemy (of the state)
Introduced in Chapter 271.

hūc
to here, hither
Introduced in Chapter 115.

hūmānitās, hūmānitātis
human nature; kindness; culture
Introduced in Chapter 386.

humilis, humile
low
Introduced in Chapter 144.

iaciō, iacere
to throw Introduced in Chapter 156.

iam
already, now
Introduced in Chapter 105.

iamdūdum
long since
Introduced in Chapter 208.

iānitor, iānitōris
a doorkeeper
Introduced in Chapter 531.

Iānuārius, Februārius, Mārtius, Aprīlis, Māius, Iūnius, Quīntīlis, Sextīlis, September, Octōber, November, December
the twelve months — and the two ORIGINAL names, Quintilis and Sextilis, before Rome renamed them Introduced in Chapter 11.

ibi
there — the place word the corpus has gone fifty chapters without Introduced in Chapter 50.

idcircō
for that reason, therefore Introduced in Chapter 366.

identidem
again and again, repeatedly Introduced in Chapter 294.

ideō
for that reason
Introduced in Chapter 113.

idōneus, idōnea, idōneum suitable Introduced in Chapter 268.

iecur, iecoris
the liver
Introduced in Chapter 173.

ientāculum, ientāculī
breakfast
Introduced in Chapter 79.

igitur
therefore
Introduced in Chapter 178.

ignāvia, ignāviae
cowardice; laziness
Introduced in Chapter 508.

ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum
idle, cowardly
Introduced in Chapter 213.

ignis, ignis
fire itself — the classical word, which the Romance languages abandoned and English kept Introduced in Chapter 45.

ignōsce mihi
forgive me / I'm sorry (imperative of ignōscere, "to not-know, overlook, pardon")
Introduced in Chapter 4.

ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum
unknown
Introduced in Chapter 240.

ille, illa, illud
that, over there — the far point, and the word that became the Romance article Introduced in Chapter 50.

illīc
over there
Introduced in Chapter 177.

illicō
on the spot
Introduced in Chapter 208.

illūc
to there, thither
Introduced in Chapter 115.

imāgō, imāginis
an image, likeness, portrait
Introduced in Chapter 547.

imber, imbris
a downpour, a heavy shower of rain
Introduced in Chapter 485.

imitor, imitārī
to imitate, to copy
Introduced in Chapter 407.

immō
on the contrary
Introduced in Chapter 265.

immolō, immolāre
to sacrifice
Introduced in Chapter 334.

immortālis, immortāle
immortal, undying
Introduced in Chapter 346.

immundus, immunda, immundum
filthy, dirty, unclean
Introduced in Chapter 461.

impediō, impedīre
to hinder, to hamper
Introduced in Chapter 374.

imperātor, imperātōris
a general, an emperor
Introduced in Chapter 245.

imperītus, imperīta, imperītum
inexperienced, unskilled
Introduced in Chapter 403.

imperium, imperiī
command, supreme power; an empire
Introduced in Chapter 385.

impleō, implēre
to fill
Introduced in Chapter 255.

impluvium, impluviī
a rain basin
Introduced in Chapter 185.

impulsus, impulsūs
a push; an impulse; instigation
Introduced in Chapter 372.

inānis, ināne
hollow, vain
Introduced in Chapter 182.

incendium, incendiī
a fire, a blaze
Introduced in Chapter 317.

incendō, incendere
to set on fire
Introduced in Chapter 167.

inceptum, inceptī
an undertaking, a venture
Introduced in Chapter 393.

incertus, incerta, incertum
uncertain
Introduced in Chapter 215.

incipiō, incipere
to begin Introduced in Chapter 297.

incola, incolae
a resident, an inhabitant
Introduced in Chapter 456.

incolō, incolere
to live in, to inhabit
Introduced in Chapter 456.

incolumis, incolume
unharmed, safe
Introduced in Chapter 316.

incrēdibilis, incrēdibile
unbelievable, incredible
Introduced in Chapter 349.

incursiō, incursiōnis
a raid, an attack
Introduced in Chapter 339.

incūs, incūdis
an anvil
Introduced in Chapter 469.

inde
from there; then
Introduced in Chapter 209.

indicium, indiciī
information, evidence; a sign
Introduced in Chapter 310.

indicō, indicāre
to make known, to indicate, to show
Introduced in Chapter 451.

indignātiō, indignātiōnis
indignation, outrage
Introduced in Chapter 514.

indignor, indignārī
to be indignant, resent
Introduced in Chapter 493.

indignus, indigna, indignum
unworthy, undeserving; shameful
Introduced in Chapter 493.

indoctus, indocta, indoctum
unlearned, untaught
Introduced in Chapter 403.

indolēs, indolis
natural disposition, talent
Introduced in Chapter 503.

induō, induere
to put on (clothes)
Introduced in Chapter 155.

industrius, industria, industrium
industrious, active
Introduced in Chapter 241.

ineptus, inepta, ineptum
silly, foolish; tactless
Introduced in Chapter 510.

īnfāns, īnfantis
a baby, an infant
Introduced in Chapter 71.

īnfantia, īnfantiae
infancy, early childhood
Introduced in Chapter 324.

īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis
unlucky, unhappy
Introduced in Chapter 243.

īnferiae, īnferiārum
offerings to the dead
Introduced in Chapter 331.

īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum
faithless, untrustworthy
Introduced in Chapter 537.

īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum
weak
Introduced in Chapter 152.

īnfrā
below
Introduced in Chapter 102.

īnfundō, īnfundere
to pour in, to pour on
Introduced in Chapter 355.

ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum
clever, talented
Introduced in Chapter 406.

ingenium, ingeniī
talent, character
Introduced in Chapter 206.

ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum
free-born; frank
Introduced in Chapter 532.

ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum
ungrateful; unpleasant
Introduced in Chapter 512.

ingredior, ingredī
to set out on, to enter upon; to go in
Introduced in Chapter 427.

inīquus, inīqua, inīquum
unfair, unjust; uneven
Introduced in Chapter 414.

initium, initiī
a beginning
Introduced in Chapter 296.

iniūria, iniūriae
a wrong, an injustice, an insult
Introduced in Chapter 414.

iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum
unjust
Introduced in Chapter 266.

innocēns, innocentis
innocent, harmless
Introduced in Chapter 311.

inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum
unexpected
Introduced in Chapter 375.

inquam
I say (quoting words)
Introduced in Chapter 299.

inquilīnus, inquilīnī
a tenant, a lodger
Introduced in Chapter 456.

īnsānia, īnsāniae
madness, folly
Introduced in Chapter 510.

īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum
mad, insane
Introduced in Chapter 510.

īnscītia, īnscītiae
ignorance, lack of skill
Introduced in Chapter 407.

īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis
an inscription
Introduced in Chapter 164.

īnserō, īnserere
to graft, to plant in Introduced in Chapter 479.

īnsidiae, īnsidiārum
an ambush; a plot
Introduced in Chapter 307.

īnsolēns, īnsolentis
insolent, haughty; unaccustomed
Introduced in Chapter 507.

īnsomnia, īnsomniae
sleeplessness
Introduced in Chapter 527.

īnsomnis, īnsomne
sleepless
Introduced in Chapter 447.

īnstitor, īnstitōris
a hawker, a pedlar; a shop agent
Introduced in Chapter 462.

īnstituō, īnstituere
to train up, to instruct; to set up
Introduced in Chapter 400.

īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī
an institution, a custom; a purpose
Introduced in Chapter 386.

īnstō, īnstāre
to press on, to insist
Introduced in Chapter 233.

īnstruō, īnstruere
to equip, to draw up; to instruct Introduced in Chapter 400.

īnsula, īnsulae
a block of flats, an apartment house; an island
Introduced in Chapter 457.

intellegentia, intellegentiae
understanding, intelligence
Introduced in Chapter 407.

intellegō, intellegere
"I understand" — literally inter plus legō, "to read between", and the ancestor of intellect and intelligence
Introduced in Chapter 38.

interdiū
by day, in the daytime
Introduced in Chapter 295.

interdum sometimes
Introduced in Chapter 237.

intereā
meanwhile
Introduced in Chapter 263.

interficiō, interficere
to kill
Introduced in Chapter 169.

intermittō, intermittere
to break off, to interrupt
Introduced in Chapter 297.

interpretor, interpretārī
to interpret, to translate
Introduced in Chapter 197.

interrogō, interrogāre
to question, to examine
Introduced in Chapter 412.

interrumpō, interrumpere
to break off, to interrupt
Introduced in Chapter 233.

intervallum, intervallī
a gap, an interval
Introduced in Chapter 296.

interveniō, intervenīre
to come along, to intervene
Introduced in Chapter 298.

intrā
inside, within
Introduced in Chapter 102.

intrō, intrāre
to enter
Introduced in Chapter 78.

intus
within, indoors
Introduced in Chapter 177.

inundō, inundāre
to flood, to overflow
Introduced in Chapter 483.

inūtilis, inūtile
useless
Introduced in Chapter 240.

inveniō, invenīre
to find, to come upon
Introduced in Chapter 77.

invideō, invidēre
to envy, begrudge
Introduced in Chapter 500.

invidia, invidiae
envy
Introduced in Chapter 262.

invidus, invida, invidum
envious
Introduced in Chapter 212.

invītō, invītāre
to invite
Introduced in Chapter 197.

invius, invia, invium
without roads, pathless, impassable
Introduced in Chapter 452.

iocor, iocārī
to joke, jest
Introduced in Chapter 502.

iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum
humorous, playful
Introduced in Chapter 502.

iocus, iocī
a joke, jest
Introduced in Chapter 502.

īra, īrae
anger
Introduced in Chapter 69.

īrācundia, īrācundiae
a hot temper, irritability
Introduced in Chapter 493.

īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum
hot-tempered, quick to anger
Introduced in Chapter 493.

īrāscor, īrāscī
to grow angry, be angry
Introduced in Chapter 493.

īrātus, īrāta, īrātum
angry
Introduced in Chapter 148.

irritus, irrita, irritum
void, invalid; in vain
Introduced in Chapter 398.

is, ea, id
he, she, it — the pronoun Latin does not really have, doing the job anyway
Introduced in Chapter 50.

iste, ista, istud
that, near you — the middle point, and the one Latin used to sneer with Introduced in Chapter 50.

ita / nōn
yes / no (lit. "thus" / "not")
Introduced in Chapter 1.

itaque
and so, therefore Introduced in Chapter 113.

iter, itineris
a journey; a route, a way
Introduced in Chapter 285.

iterum
again — and the repair move this book could not make Introduced in Chapter 53.

iubeō, iubēre
to order, to tell (someone to)
Introduced in Chapter 261.

iūcunditās, iūcunditātis
pleasantness, delight
Introduced in Chapter 489.

iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum
pleasant
Introduced in Chapter 145.

iūdex, iūdicis
a judge; a juror
Introduced in Chapter 308.

iūdicium, iūdiciī
a trial; a judgement
Introduced in Chapter 308.

iūdicō, iūdicāre
to judge; to declare
Introduced in Chapter 308.

iugum, iugī
a yoke; a ridge
Introduced in Chapter 228.

iūmentum, iūmentī
a beast of burden, a draught animal
Introduced in Chapter 433.

iungō, iungere
to join
Introduced in Chapter 154.

iūrgium, iūrgiī
a quarrel, dispute
Introduced in Chapter 537.

iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī
a legal expert, a jurist
Introduced in Chapter 411.

iūrō, iūrāre
to swear (an oath)
Introduced in Chapter 310.

iūs, iūris
law, right; justice
Introduced in Chapter 308.

iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī
an oath
Introduced in Chapter 397.

iūstitia, iūstitiae
justice
Introduced in Chapter 416.

iūstus, iūsta, iūstum
fair, righteous
Introduced in Chapter 266.

iuventūs, iuventūtis
youth; young people
Introduced in Chapter 326.

iūxtā
next to, close by
Introduced in Chapter 119.

lābor, lābī
to slip, to glide
Introduced in Chapter 170.

labor, labōris
work, toil
Introduced in Chapter 248.

labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum
toilsome; hard-working
Introduced in Chapter 379.

labōrō, labōrāre
to work
Introduced in Chapter 75.

labrum, labrī
a lip
Introduced in Chapter 135.

lac, lactis
milk — the root of lactose, lettuce and, at one remove, of the Milky Way itself
Introduced in Chapter 47.

lacerta, lacertae
a lizard
Introduced in Chapter 224.

lacrima, lacrimae
a tear
Introduced in Chapter 174.

lacrimō, lacrimāre
to weep, shed tears
Introduced in Chapter 491.

lacus, lacūs
a lake
Introduced in Chapter 87.

laedō, laedere
to hurt, harm; to offend
Introduced in Chapter 511.

laetitia, laetitiae
joy, gladness
Introduced in Chapter 489.

laetor, laetārī
to rejoice, be glad
Introduced in Chapter 489.

laetus, laeta, laetum
happy, glad
Introduced in Chapter 69.

lagoena, lagoenae
a flask, a bottle
Introduced in Chapter 123.

lāna, lānae
wool
Introduced in Chapter 140.

languidus, languida, languidum
faint, weak, listless
Introduced in Chapter 521.

lānificium, lānificiī
wool-working, spinning and weaving
Introduced in Chapter 472.

lanista, lanistae
a trainer of gladiators
Introduced in Chapter 336.

lanius, laniī
a butcher
Introduced in Chapter 272.

lanterna, lanternae
a lantern
Introduced in Chapter 139.

lanx, lancis
a scale pan; a dish, a platter
Introduced in Chapter 464.

lapicīda, lapicīdae
a stonecutter, a quarryman
Introduced in Chapter 471.

lapis, lapidis
a stone
Introduced in Chapter 88.

lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum
playful, frisky
Introduced in Chapter 503.

lassus, lassa, lassum
weary, tired out
Introduced in Chapter 426.

lātrīna, lātrīnae
a latrine, a privy, a lavatory
Introduced in Chapter 458.

latrō, latrōnis
a robber
Introduced in Chapter 245.

latrōcinium, latrōciniī
highway robbery, banditry
Introduced in Chapter 303.

latrunculus, latrunculī
a piece in a board game; a robber
Introduced in Chapter 539.

latus, lateris
side, flank
Introduced in Chapter 518.

laudātiō, laudātiōnis
a speech of praise, a eulogy
Introduced in Chapter 331.

laudō, laudāre
to praise
Introduced in Chapter 99.

laurus, laurī
a laurel
Introduced in Chapter 250.

laus, laudis
praise
Introduced in Chapter 512.

lavō, lavāre
to wash
Introduced in Chapter 76.

lectīca, lectīcae
a litter (carried chair)
Introduced in Chapter 217.

lectīcārius, lectīcāriī
a litter-bearer
Introduced in Chapter 531.

lēctor, lēctōris
a reader
Introduced in Chapter 550.

lectulus, lectulī
a little bed, a small couch
Introduced in Chapter 446.

lectus, lectī
a bed, a couch
Introduced in Chapter 82.

lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis
an embassy
Introduced in Chapter 300.

lēgātus, lēgātī
an envoy
Introduced in Chapter 272.

legiō, legiōnis
a legion
Introduced in Chapter 338.

lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum
lawful, legitimate; proper
Introduced in Chapter 409.

legō, legere
"I read" — a verb that first meant "to gather", which is why English got collect, elegant, lecture and legible from it
Introduced in Chapter 38.

lēniō, lēnīre
to soothe, soften
Introduced in Chapter 492.

lēnis, lēne
gentle, mild, soft
Introduced in Chapter 492.

lentus, lenta, lentum
slow
Introduced in Chapter 94.

leō, leōnis
a lion
Introduced in Chapter 91.

lepidus, lepida, lepidum
charming, delightful
Introduced in Chapter 503.

lepus, leporis
a hare
Introduced in Chapter 133.

levis, leve
light (not heavy)
Introduced in Chapter 94.

levitās, levitātis
lightness; fickleness
Introduced in Chapter 370.

levō, levāre
to lighten, to lift
Introduced in Chapter 170.

lēx, lēgis
a law
Introduced in Chapter 308.

liber, librī
the book — and the bark it was written on
Introduced in Chapter 53.

līberālis, līberāle
generous
Introduced in Chapter 213.

līberālitās, līberālitātis
generosity
Introduced in Chapter 506.

līberī, līberōrum
children
Introduced in Chapter 71.

lībertās, lībertātis
freedom
Introduced in Chapter 187.

lībertīnus, lībertīnī
a freedman (by rank)
Introduced in Chapter 532.

lībertus, lībertī
a freedman
Introduced in Chapter 220.

lībra, lībrae
a pound; a pair of scales
Introduced in Chapter 186.

librārius, librāriī
a copyist, a scribe; a bookseller
Introduced in Chapter 381.

lībum, lībī
a cake
Introduced in Chapter 195.

liceor, licērī
to bid (at an auction)
Introduced in Chapter 420.

licet
it is allowed, one may
Introduced in Chapter 110.

licitus, licita, licitum
allowed, lawful
Introduced in Chapter 409.

lignārius, lignāriī
a carpenter, a worker in wood
Introduced in Chapter 377.

lignum, lignī
wood, timber
Introduced in Chapter 249.

ligō, ligāre
to tie
Introduced in Chapter 233.

līlium, līlīī
a lily
Introduced in Chapter 128.

līma, līmae
a file (tool); polishing
Introduced in Chapter 470.

līmen, līminis
a threshold, doorstep
Introduced in Chapter 553.

lingua, linguae
the tongue; a language
Introduced in Chapter 63.

linter, lintris
a punt, a small flat boat; a trough
Introduced in Chapter 435.

linteum, linteī
a linen cloth, a towel
Introduced in Chapter 141.

līnum, līnī
linen, flax
Introduced in Chapter 249.

lippitūdō, lippitūdinis
inflammation of the eyes
Introduced in Chapter 525.

lippus, lippa, lippum
bleary-eyed, with sore eyes
Introduced in Chapter 525.

līs, lītis
a lawsuit, a dispute
Introduced in Chapter 411.

lītigō, lītigāre
to go to law, to quarrel
Introduced in Chapter 411.

lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum
of the shore, on the beach
Introduced in Chapter 444.

littera, litterae
a letter of the alphabet
Introduced in Chapter 278.

litterātor, litterātōris
an elementary teacher of letters
Introduced in Chapter 401.

litterātus, litterāta, litterātum
learned, well-read
Introduced in Chapter 550.

lītus, lītoris
a shore, a beach
Introduced in Chapter 89.

locō, locāre
to place; to let out, to hire out
Introduced in Chapter 380.

locus, locī
a place
Introduced in Chapter 114.

lōdīx, lōdīcis
a blanket, a coverlet
Introduced in Chapter 446.

longē
far, by far
Introduced in Chapter 177.

longinquus, longinqua, longinquum
distant
Introduced in Chapter 181.

longus, longa, longum
long
Introduced in Chapter 93.

loquāx, loquācis
talkative
Introduced in Chapter 241.

loquor, loquī
to speak
Introduced in Chapter 235.

lōrīca, lōrīcae
a breastplate, a cuirass
Introduced in Chapter 340.

lōrum, lōrī
a leather strap, a thong; (plural) reins
Introduced in Chapter 431.

lūcānica, lūcānicae
a smoked sausage
Introduced in Chapter 354.

lūceō, lūcēre
to shine
Introduced in Chapter 157.

lucerna, lucernae
a lamp
Introduced in Chapter 83.

lucror, lucrārī
to gain, to make a profit
Introduced in Chapter 421.

lucrum, lucrī
profit
Introduced in Chapter 274.

luctor, luctārī
to wrestle, struggle
Introduced in Chapter 539.

lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum
sorrowful, mournful
Introduced in Chapter 490.

lūctus, lūctūs
grief, mourning
Introduced in Chapter 331.

lūcus, lūcī
a sacred grove
Introduced in Chapter 196.

lūdō, lūdere
"I play" — a small verb with an outsized English family, most of which is about being fooled rather than about play
Introduced in Chapter 42.

lūgeō, lūgēre
to mourn
Introduced in Chapter 261.

lūna, lūnae
the moon — the same root as lux, worn down to mean 'the shining one'
Introduced in Chapter 46.

lupus, lupī
a wolf
Introduced in Chapter 91.

lūsus, lūsūs
play, a game
Introduced in Chapter 539.

lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum
muddy, covered with mud
Introduced in Chapter 426.

lutum, lutī
mud
Introduced in Chapter 275.

lūx, lūcis
light — the root of lucid, translucent and Lucifer, and a cousin of English light itself
Introduced in Chapter 46.

lyra, lyrae
a lyre
Introduced in Chapter 142.

macellum, macellī
a food market
Introduced in Chapter 117.

macer, macra, macrum
thin, lean
Introduced in Chapter 522.

maciēs, maciēī
leanness, thinness
Introduced in Chapter 522.

madeō, madēre
to be soaking wet, to drip
Introduced in Chapter 485.

maereō, maerēre
to grieve, mourn
Introduced in Chapter 490.

maeror, maerōris
grief, mourning
Introduced in Chapter 490.

maestitia, maestitiae
sorrow, dejection
Introduced in Chapter 490.

maestus, maesta, maestum
gloomy, mournful
Introduced in Chapter 269.

magister, magistrī
the teacher — the greater one, against minister, the lesser Introduced in Chapter 53.

magistrātus, magistrātūs
a public office; a magistrate
Introduced in Chapter 383.

magnus, magna, magnum
big, great
Introduced in Chapter 93.

maiōrēs, maiōrum
ancestors, forefathers
Introduced in Chapter 344.

malacia, malaciae
a dead calm (at sea)
Introduced in Chapter 444.

male
badly — the other end of the scale bene has had to itself all along
Introduced in Chapter 48.

malleus, malleī
a hammer
Introduced in Chapter 122.

mālō, mālle
to prefer
Introduced in Chapter 111.

malus, mala, malum
bad — the adjective under male, and the word Rome punned on for the apple Introduced in Chapter 48.

mancipium, mancipiī
formal purchase; a slave
Introduced in Chapter 417.

mandātum, mandātī
an instruction, an order
Introduced in Chapter 300.

mandō, mandāre
to entrust, to order
Introduced in Chapter 234.

mānе
"morning, early" — the word already hiding inside dē mānе (the source of French demain, Italian domani, and Catalan demà, all rebuilt "tomorrow" from this phrase) and, without the dē-, the direct base of Spanish mañana too, now standing alone
Introduced in Chapter 31.

maneō, manēre
to stay, to remain
Introduced in Chapter 77.

manifestus, manifesta, manifestum
evident, plain; caught in the act
Introduced in Chapter 360.

mānō, mānāre
to trickle, to flow, to drip
Introduced in Chapter 483.

mānsiō, mānsiōnis
an overnight stop, a halting place; a stay
Introduced in Chapter 427.

mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum
tame; gentle
Introduced in Chapter 511.

manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis
the freeing of a slave
Introduced in Chapter 532.

manūmittō, manūmittere
to set free (a slave)
Introduced in Chapter 389.

manus
the hand — a rare feminine noun in an overwhelmingly masculine group of Latin words
Introduced in Chapter 8.

mappa, mappae
a napkin, a cloth
Introduced in Chapter 120.

mare, maris
the sea — the word that finishes Mediterranean and names every marine thing in English Introduced in Chapter 45.

marīnus, marīna, marīnum
of the sea, marine
Introduced in Chapter 442.

maritimus, maritima, maritimum
coastal, by the sea; of the sea
Introduced in Chapter 442.

marītus, marītī
a husband
Introduced in Chapter 71.

marmor, marmoris
marble
Introduced in Chapter 249.

marsuppium, marsuppiī
a money bag
Introduced in Chapter 254.

mātertera, māterterae
a mother's sister, an aunt
Introduced in Chapter 189.

mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī
marriage
Introduced in Chapter 327.

mātrōna, mātrōnae
a married woman, a lady of the house
Introduced in Chapter 328.

mātūrē
early; in good time
Introduced in Chapter 295.

mātūrō, mātūrāre
to hasten; to ripen
Introduced in Chapter 395.

maximē
most, especially
Introduced in Chapter 179.

meā sententiā, mihi vidētur
in my opinion; it seems to me — two ways to hang an opinion on a sentence
Introduced in Chapter 283.

medeor, medērī
to remedy, be good for
Introduced in Chapter 526.

medicāmentum, medicāmentī
a drug, a medicine
Introduced in Chapter 205.

medicīna, medicīnae
medicine
Introduced in Chapter 67.

medicus, medicī
the doctor — from measuring, not from healing
Introduced in Chapter 51.

meditor, meditārī
to think over; to rehearse, to practise
Introduced in Chapter 402.

medius diēs, media nox
noon and midnight — the source phrase daughters kept whole, wore down unevenly, or eroded almost entirely
Introduced in Chapter 12.

medius, media, medium
middle, the middle of Introduced in Chapter 183.

mel, mellis
honey — the root of mellifluous and marmalade, and of molasses by way of Portuguese Introduced in Chapter 47.

membrāna, membrānae
parchment; skin
Introduced in Chapter 551.

membrum, membrī
a limb; a member
Introduced in Chapter 516.

meminī, meminisse
to remember
Introduced in Chapter 235.

memoria, memoriae
memory
Introduced in Chapter 206.

memorō, memorāre
to tell of, to relate
Introduced in Chapter 299.

mendācium, mendāciī
a lie
Introduced in Chapter 189.

mendāx, mendācis
lying; a liar
Introduced in Chapter 504.

mendum, mendī
a mistake, a blemish (in writing)
Introduced in Chapter 408.

mēnsa, mēnsae
a table
Introduced in Chapter 82.

mēnsis, mēnsis
a month
Introduced in Chapter 103.

mēnsūra, mēnsūrae
a measure
Introduced in Chapter 186.

mentior, mentīrī
to lie, to tell a lie
Introduced in Chapter 310.

mentum, mentī
the chin
Introduced in Chapter 135.

mercātor, mercātōris
a merchant
Introduced in Chapter 74.

mercātus, mercātūs
a market, a fair
Introduced in Chapter 186.

mercēnārius, mercēnāriī
a hired worker; a mercenary
Introduced in Chapter 379.

mercēs, mercēdis
wages, pay
Introduced in Chapter 190.

mercimōnium, mercimōniī
goods, wares, merchandise
Introduced in Chapter 462.

mereor, merērī
to deserve, to earn
Introduced in Chapter 257.

mergō, mergere
to sink, to plunge, to dip
Introduced in Chapter 315.

merīdiēs
"midday, noon" — the same medius diēs you already know, contracted into one word; Romans split the day around IT (ante/post merīdiem), not into a separate colloquial "afternoon" the way Spanish's tarde or French's après-midi do
Introduced in Chapter 35.

meritum, meritī
a kindness, service; merit
Introduced in Chapter 512.

merum, merī
neat wine, wine without water
Introduced in Chapter 449.

merx, mercis
goods, merchandise
Introduced in Chapter 164.

messis, messis
the harvest, the crop
Introduced in Chapter 475.

messor, messōris
a reaper, a harvester
Introduced in Chapter 475.

mēta, mētae
a turning post; a goal, a limit
Introduced in Chapter 335.

mētior, mētīrī
to measure
Introduced in Chapter 255.

metō, metere
to reap, to harvest
Introduced in Chapter 172.

metuō, metuere
to dread
Introduced in Chapter 258.

metus, metūs
fear, dread
Introduced in Chapter 320.

meus, mea, meum
my — the possessive the name lesson did without Introduced in Chapter 52.

mīles, mīlitis
the soldier — the noun every Latin narrative turns on Introduced in Chapter 51.

mīliārium, mīliāriī
a milestone
Introduced in Chapter 119.

mīlle
a thousand
Introduced in Chapter 106.

minae, minārum
threats
Introduced in Chapter 321.

ministrō, ministrāre
to wait at table, to serve
Introduced in Chapter 356.

minitor, minitārī
to threaten
Introduced in Chapter 321.

minuō, minuere
to lessen, to decrease
Introduced in Chapter 256.

mīrābilis, mīrābile
wonderful, astonishing
Introduced in Chapter 349.

mīror, mīrārī
to wonder, marvel at Introduced in Chapter 495.

mīrus, mīra, mīrum
wonderful, strange
Introduced in Chapter 266.

misceō, miscēre
to mix
Introduced in Chapter 233.

miser, misera, miserum
wretched, unhappy
Introduced in Chapter 148.

misereor, miserērī
to pity, feel sorry for
Introduced in Chapter 513.

misericordia, misericordiae
pity, compassion
Introduced in Chapter 513.

misericors, misericordis
compassionate, merciful
Introduced in Chapter 513.

mītigō, mītigāre
to ease, soften, calm
Introduced in Chapter 511.

mītis, mīte
gentle, mild
Introduced in Chapter 145.

mittō, mittere
to send
Introduced in Chapter 77.

modestus, modesta, modestum
moderate, restrained
Introduced in Chapter 184.

modiolus, modiolī
a wheel hub, the nave of a wheel; a small measure
Introduced in Chapter 430.

modius, modiī
a peck (a measure of grain)
Introduced in Chapter 465.

modo
only; a moment ago; provided that (with the subjunctive)
Introduced in Chapter 390.

moenia, moenium
city walls
Introduced in Chapter 280.

mola, molae
a millstone; a mill; salted meal
Introduced in Chapter 352.

molestia, molestiae
annoyance, trouble
Introduced in Chapter 497.

molestus, molesta, molestum
annoying
Introduced in Chapter 146.

mōlior, mōlīrī
to set about (with effort), to undertake; to plot
Introduced in Chapter 394.

mollis, molle
soft
Introduced in Chapter 143.

mōmentum, mōmentī
a moment; weight, importance
Introduced in Chapter 296.

moneō, monēre
to warn, to remind
Introduced in Chapter 256.

monīle, monīlis
a necklace
Introduced in Chapter 193.

mōns, montis
a mountain
Introduced in Chapter 86.

mōnstrō, mōnstrāre
to show, to point out
Introduced in Chapter 451.

mōnstrum, mōnstrī
a monster; a portent
Introduced in Chapter 347.

monumentum, monumentī
a memorial, a monument
Introduced in Chapter 331.

mora, morae
a delay
Introduced in Chapter 237.

morbus, morbī
an illness, a disease
Introduced in Chapter 67.

mordeō, mordēre
to bite
Introduced in Chapter 447.

morior, morī
to die
Introduced in Chapter 198.

moror, morārī
to delay, to linger; to hold up
Introduced in Chapter 455.

mors, mortis
death
Introduced in Chapter 329.

mortālis, mortāle
mortal
Introduced in Chapter 346.

mortārium, mortāriī
a mortar (a bowl for pounding)
Introduced in Chapter 351.

mortuus, mortua, mortuum
dead
Introduced in Chapter 329.

mōs, mōris
a custom, a way; (plural) character, morals
Introduced in Chapter 386.

mōtus, mōtūs
a movement; a stirring (of the mind); a disturbance
Introduced in Chapter 375.

moveō, movēre
to move
Introduced in Chapter 99.

mox
soon
Introduced in Chapter 104.

mūla, mūlae
a she-mule
Introduced in Chapter 433.

mulgeō, mulgēre
to milk
Introduced in Chapter 478.

mūliō, mūliōnis
a muleteer, a mule driver
Introduced in Chapter 434.

multum
much, a lot
Introduced in Chapter 105.

mūlus, mūlī
a mule
Introduced in Chapter 134.

mūniceps, mūnicipis
a citizen of a free town; a fellow townsman
Introduced in Chapter 388.

mūnus, mūneris
a public show; a gift; a duty
Introduced in Chapter 336.

mūrex, mūricis
the purple shellfish, murex; purple dye
Introduced in Chapter 468.

mūrus, mūrī
the wall — the one that keeps things out, not the one that divides a room
Introduced in Chapter 44.

mūs, mūris
a mouse
Introduced in Chapter 92.

musca, muscae
a fly
Introduced in Chapter 132.

mūsica, mūsicae
music
Introduced in Chapter 246.

mūtō, mūtāre
to change
Introduced in Chapter 159.

mūtus, mūta, mūtum
mute, silent
Introduced in Chapter 184.

mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum
borrowed, lent; mutual Introduced in Chapter 418.

nam
for (giving a reason)
Introduced in Chapter 113.

nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis
a narrative, a telling
Introduced in Chapter 299.

nārrō, nārrāre
to tell, to relate
Introduced in Chapter 99.

nāsus, nāsī
the nose
Introduced in Chapter 63.

natātiō, natātiōnis
swimming; a swimming place
Introduced in Chapter 540.

natō, natāre
to swim
Introduced in Chapter 76.

nātūra, nātūrae
nature, character
Introduced in Chapter 503.

nauclērus, nauclērī
a ship's master, a shipowner
Introduced in Chapter 438.

naufragium, naufragiī
a shipwreck
Introduced in Chapter 315.

naufragus, naufraga, naufragum
shipwrecked
Introduced in Chapter 315.

naulum, naulī
a fare, passage money for a ship
Introduced in Chapter 286.

nauseō, nauseāre
to be seasick; to feel sick
Introduced in Chapter 440.

nauta, nautae
a sailor
Introduced in Chapter 73.

nāvāle, nāvālis
a dockyard, a place where ships are kept
Introduced in Chapter 441.

nāvicula, nāviculae
a little boat, a small ship
Introduced in Chapter 435.

nāviculārius, nāviculāriī
a shipowner, a shipper
Introduced in Chapter 381.

nāvigābilis, nāvigābile
navigable
Introduced in Chapter 439.

nāvigium, nāvigiī
a vessel, a craft (any ship or boat)
Introduced in Chapter 435.

nāvigō, nāvigāre
to sail
Introduced in Chapter 100.

nāvis, nāvis
a ship
Introduced in Chapter 286.

nāvō, nāvāre
to do with energy (operam nāvāre: to work hard) Introduced in Chapter 380.

nē
so that not, lest; that (after fearing)
Introduced in Chapter 367.

nebula, nebulae
fog, mist
Introduced in Chapter 131.

necessārius, necessāria, necessārium
necessary
Introduced in Chapter 240.

necessitās, necessitātis
necessity, need; compulsion
Introduced in Chapter 392.

necessitūdō, necessitūdinis
a close bond, tie
Introduced in Chapter 533.

nefās
a crime against heaven, a wicked thing
Introduced in Chapter 414.

neglegēns, neglegentis
careless, negligent
Introduced in Chapter 406.

negō, negāre
to deny, to say no
Introduced in Chapter 172.

negōtior, negōtiārī
to do business, to trade
Introduced in Chapter 421.

negōtium, negōtiī
business
Introduced in Chapter 274.

nēmō, nēminis nobody, no one Introduced in Chapter 161.

nempe
surely, of course; namely
Introduced in Chapter 365.

nemus, nemoris
a grove
Introduced in Chapter 196.

nēnia, nēniae
a dirge, a funeral song
Introduced in Chapter 331.

neō, nēre
to spin (thread)
Introduced in Chapter 472.

nepōs, nepōtis
a grandson
Introduced in Chapter 273.

neptis, neptis
a granddaughter
Introduced in Chapter 273.

neque
and not, nor
Introduced in Chapter 161.

nervus, nervī
a sinew, tendon; a string
Introduced in Chapter 517.

nesciō, nescīre
I do not know — and the rule the whole chapter turns on: nōn stands in front of the verb
Introduced in Chapter 48.

niger, albus
black and white — the source words for Spanish/French/Italian, each with a shine-vs-matte twin Introduced in Chapter 6.

nihil
nothing
Introduced in Chapter 161.

nihil est
"you're welcome" — another honest gap: Classical Latin has no single fixed reply to thanks, and nihil est ("it's nothing") is a modern conversational-Latin convention built from genuinely real words, not a specific classical citation for this exact job
Introduced in Chapter 23.

nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum
stormy, full of rain clouds
Introduced in Chapter 485.

nimbus, nimbī
a rain cloud
Introduced in Chapter 191.

nīmīrum
without doubt, surely Introduced in Chapter 366.

nimis too much
Introduced in Chapter 98.

nisi
unless, if not
Introduced in Chapter 178.

nix, nivis
snow
Introduced in Chapter 89.

nōbilis, nōbile
well known; noble
Introduced in Chapter 382.

nocēns, nocentis
guilty; harmful
Introduced in Chapter 311.

noceō, nocēre
to harm, to hurt
Introduced in Chapter 374.

noctū
by night, at night
Introduced in Chapter 295.

noctua, noctuae
an owl
Introduced in Chapter 192.

nōlō, nōlle
to not want, to refuse
Introduced in Chapter 110.

nōmen, nōminis
a name
Introduced in Chapter 278.

nōndum
not yet
Introduced in Chapter 291.

nōnnumquam
now and then
Introduced in Chapter 176.

nōnus, nōna, nōnum
ninth — and the hour that turned into noon
Introduced in Chapter 56.

nōtus, nōta, nōtum
known, famous
Introduced in Chapter 183.

noverca, novercae
a stepmother
Introduced in Chapter 529.

novus, nova, novum
new Introduced in Chapter 94.

nox
"night" — the word already hiding inside media nox ('midnight'), one of the most rock-solid PIE roots in the whole Indo-European family
Introduced in Chapter 29.

nūbēs, nūbis
a cloud
Introduced in Chapter 89.

nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum
cloudy
Introduced in Chapter 153.

nūbō, nūbere
to marry (of a bride)
Introduced in Chapter 198.

nudiustertius
the day before yesterday
Introduced in Chapter 162.

nūllus, nūlla, nūllum
no, not any
Introduced in Chapter 161.

nūmen, nūminis
divine power, divine will
Introduced in Chapter 346.

numerō, numerāre
to count
Introduced in Chapter 160.

nummulārius, nummulāriī
a money-changer, a banker at a table
Introduced in Chapter 465.

nummus, nummī
a coin Introduced in Chapter 123.

numquam never Introduced in Chapter 104.

nunc
now
Introduced in Chapter 104.

nūndinae, nūndinārum
market day; a market
Introduced in Chapter 421.

nūndinor, nūndinārī
to trade at market, to buy and sell
Introduced in Chapter 462.

nūntiō, nūntiāre
to announce
Introduced in Chapter 230.

nūntius, nūntiī
a messenger; news
Introduced in Chapter 219.

nūper
recently
Introduced in Chapter 162.

nūpta, nūptae
a bride, a married woman
Introduced in Chapter 327.

nūptiae, nūptiārum
a wedding
Introduced in Chapter 273.

nūptiālis, nūptiāle
of a wedding, bridal Introduced in Chapter 328.

nurus, nurūs
a daughter-in-law
Introduced in Chapter 247.

nusquam
nowhere
Introduced in Chapter 264.

nūtriō, nūtrīre
to suckle, to feed, to rear
Introduced in Chapter 323.

nūtrīx, nūtrīcis
a nurse, a wet nurse
Introduced in Chapter 323.

nux, nucis
a nut
Introduced in Chapter 81.

nympha, nymphae
a nymph
Introduced in Chapter 347.

obeō, obīre
to die; to go to meet
Introduced in Chapter 329.

obēsus, obēsa, obēsum
fat, stout
Introduced in Chapter 523.

obiciō, obicere
to throw in the way; to throw in someone's face
Introduced in Chapter 363.

oblectō, oblectāre
to amuse, entertain
Introduced in Chapter 499.

obligō, obligāre
to oblige, to bind
Introduced in Chapter 398.

oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum
slanting, sideways, at an angle
Introduced in Chapter 454.

oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī
to forget
Introduced in Chapter 203.

obruō, obruere
to overwhelm, to bury
Introduced in Chapter 315.

obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum dark, obscure
Introduced in Chapter 96.

obsequium, obsequiī
compliance, obedience
Introduced in Chapter 389.

observō, observāre
to watch, to observe
Introduced in Chapter 257.

obsideō, obsidēre
to besiege; to sit at
Introduced in Chapter 341.

obsidiō, obsidiōnis
a siege
Introduced in Chapter 341.

obsignō, obsignāre
to seal, to seal up
Introduced in Chapter 332.

obsōnium, obsōniī
food to go with bread, provisions
Introduced in Chapter 350.

obsōnō, obsōnāre
to buy food, to shop for a meal
Introduced in Chapter 350.

obstetrīx, obstetrīcis
a midwife
Introduced in Chapter 323.

obstrepō, obstrepere
to make a din, to drown out with noise
Introduced in Chapter 448.

obstringō, obstringere
to bind, to put under an obligation
Introduced in Chapter 396.

obstupēscō, obstupēscere
to be struck dumb, be astounded
Introduced in Chapter 495.

obsum, obesse
to be a hindrance, to do harm
Introduced in Chapter 374.

obtemperō, obtemperāre
to obey, to comply (with)
Introduced in Chapter 416.

obviam
in the way, to meet
Introduced in Chapter 209.

occāsiō, occāsiōnis
an opportunity
Introduced in Chapter 248.

occāsus, occāsūs
sunset; a setting
Introduced in Chapter 207.

occīdō, occīdere
to kill, to cut down
Introduced in Chapter 306.

occō, occāre
to harrow, to break up the soil
Introduced in Chapter 474.

octāvus, octāva, octāvum
eighth — the one that takes a different ending
Introduced in Chapter 56.

oculus, oculī
the eye — and the eye already hiding inside a word you know
Introduced in Chapter 54.

ōdī, ōdisse
to hate
Introduced in Chapter 494.

odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum
hateful, tiresome
Introduced in Chapter 494.

offendō, offendere
to strike against, to stumble; to offend
Introduced in Chapter 314.

offerō, offerre
to offer
Introduced in Chapter 257.

officīna, officīnae
a workshop
Introduced in Chapter 118.

officium, officiī
a duty
Introduced in Chapter 248.

olea, oleae
an olive tree; an olive Introduced in Chapter 479.

oleum, oleī
oil
Introduced in Chapter 80.

olfaciō, olfacere
to smell, scent
Introduced in Chapter 519.

ōlim
once, long ago; one day
Introduced in Chapter 162.

olīva, olīvae
an olive
Introduced in Chapter 80.

ōlla, ōllae
a cooking pot
Introduced in Chapter 121.

ōmen, ōminis
an omen, a sign
Introduced in Chapter 348.

omnīnō
altogether
Introduced in Chapter 211.

omnis, omne
all, every
Introduced in Chapter 242.

onerārius, onerāria, onerārium
for cargo, for carrying loads
Introduced in Chapter 436.

onerō, onerāre
to load, to burden
Introduced in Chapter 433.

onus, oneris
a load, a burden
Introduced in Chapter 389.

opācus, opāca, opācum
shady, shaded; dark
Introduced in Chapter 484.

operārius, operāriī
a labourer, a workman
Introduced in Chapter 376.

operor, operārī
to work, to be busy (at)
Introduced in Chapter 376.

opifex, opificis
a craftsman, a worker
Introduced in Chapter 376.

ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis
a shepherd (of sheep)
Introduced in Chapter 478.

opīniō, opīniōnis
an opinion, a belief; a reputation
Introduced in Chapter 357.

opīnor, opīnārī
to suppose, to imagine
Introduced in Chapter 357.

oportet
it is necessary, one ought
Introduced in Chapter 110.

oppidānus, oppidānī
a townsman, an inhabitant of a town
Introduced in Chapter 456.

oppidum, oppidī
a town
Introduced in Chapter 107.

opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum
convenient, timely, opportune
Introduced in Chapter 392.

oppugnō, oppugnāre
to attack, to assault
Introduced in Chapter 341.

optō, optāre
to wish for, to choose
Introduced in Chapter 111.

opus, operis
a work, a task; need (opus est)
Introduced in Chapter 376.

ōra, ōrae
a coast, an edge
Introduced in Chapter 87.

ōrāculum, ōrāculī
an oracle
Introduced in Chapter 348.

ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis
a speech
Introduced in Chapter 194.

ōrātor, ōrātōris
a speaker, an orator; an envoy
Introduced in Chapter 368.

orbita, orbitae
a wheel rut, a track
Introduced in Chapter 425.

orbus, orba, orbum
orphaned; childless, bereft
Introduced in Chapter 326.

ōrdinō, ōrdināre
to set in order, to arrange Introduced in Chapter 394.

ōrdō, ōrdinis
order, a row
Introduced in Chapter 228.

orīgō, orīginis
an origin, a beginning; ancestry
Introduced in Chapter 344.

orior, orīrī
to rise; to arise, to begin Introduced in Chapter 298.

ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī
an ornament, decoration
Introduced in Chapter 548.

ōrnō, ōrnāre
to decorate
Introduced in Chapter 204.

ōrō, ōrāre
to pray, to beg
Introduced in Chapter 259.

ortus, ortūs
sunrise; a rising
Introduced in Chapter 207.

os, ossis
a bone
Introduced in Chapter 136.

oscitō, oscitāre
to yawn, gape
Introduced in Chapter 520.

ōsculor, ōsculārī
to kiss
Introduced in Chapter 197.

ōsculum, ōsculī
a kiss
Introduced in Chapter 534.

ostendō, ostendere
to show
Introduced in Chapter 157.

ostiārius, ostiāriī
a porter, doorman
Introduced in Chapter 531.

ostrum, ostrī
purple dye; purple cloth
Introduced in Chapter 468.

ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum
at leisure, idle
Introduced in Chapter 538.

ōtium, ōtiī
leisure
Introduced in Chapter 274.

ovis, ovis
a sheep
Introduced in Chapter 90.

ōvum, ōvī
the egg — a cousin of English egg, with two sound changes that hide the relationship completely Introduced in Chapter 47.

pacīscor, pacīscī
to strike a bargain, to come to terms
Introduced in Chapter 397.

pactum, pactī
a pact, an agreement
Introduced in Chapter 397.

paedagōgus, paedagōgī
a slave who takes a boy to school; a tutor
Introduced in Chapter 401.

paenīnsula, paenīnsulae
a peninsula
Introduced in Chapter 444.

pāgina, pāginae
a page
Introduced in Chapter 278.

palea, paleae
chaff; straw
Introduced in Chapter 476.

palleō, pallēre
to be pale
Introduced in Chapter 522.

pallidus, pallida, pallidum
pale
Introduced in Chapter 522.

pallium, pallii
a cloak
Introduced in Chapter 126.

palma, palmae
the palm of victory; the palm of the hand; a palm tree
Introduced in Chapter 337.

palpebra, palpebrae
eyelid
Introduced in Chapter 515.

palūs, palūdis
a marsh
Introduced in Chapter 196.

pānis
bread — the source of "companion," and of the friendship-word every Romance daughter still shares with it
Introduced in Chapter 10.

pantomīmus, pantomīmī
a mime dancer
Introduced in Chapter 546.

pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis
a butterfly
Introduced in Chapter 132.

parātus, parāta, parātum ready
Introduced in Chapter 268.

parcus, parca, parcum
thrifty, sparing
Introduced in Chapter 269.

parēns, parentis
a parent
Introduced in Chapter 273.

pāreō, pārēre
to obey
Introduced in Chapter 233.

pariō, parere
to give birth to; to produce
Introduced in Chapter 323.

parō, parāre
to prepare
Introduced in Chapter 100.

partior, partīrī
to share, to divide
Introduced in Chapter 199.

partus, partūs
a birth; offspring
Introduced in Chapter 323.

parum
too little, not enough
Introduced in Chapter 105.

parvus, parva, parvum
small
Introduced in Chapter 93.

pāscō, pāscere
to pasture, to put out to graze; to feed
Introduced in Chapter 477.

pāscuum, pāscuī
a pasture, grazing land
Introduced in Chapter 477.

passer, passeris
a sparrow
Introduced in Chapter 192.

passim
here and there
Introduced in Chapter 264.

passus, passūs
a pace
Introduced in Chapter 218.

pāstor, pāstōris
a shepherd
Introduced in Chapter 137.

patefaciō, patefacere
to open up; to disclose
Introduced in Chapter 302.

pater, mater
father and mother — the PIE ancestor Latin and English both inherited, in parallel Introduced in Chapter 7.

patiēns, patientis
patient
Introduced in Chapter 213.

patientia, patientiae
patience
Introduced in Chapter 174.

patina, patinae
a dish, a pan
Introduced in Chapter 121.

patior, patī
to suffer, to allow
Introduced in Chapter 232.

patria, patriae
a homeland
Introduced in Chapter 271.

patricius, patricia, patricium
patrician, of the old noble families
Introduced in Chapter 382.

patrōcinium, patrōciniī
defence in court, advocacy; protection
Introduced in Chapter 413.

patrōnus, patrōnī
a patron; a defending counsel
Introduced in Chapter 309.

patruus, patruī
an uncle (father's brother)
Introduced in Chapter 71.

paucī, paucae, pauca
few Introduced in Chapter 242.

paulātim
little by little Introduced in Chapter 293.

paulisper
for a little while Introduced in Chapter 293.

pauper, pauperis
poor
Introduced in Chapter 98.

paveō, pavēre
to quake with fear, be terrified
Introduced in Chapter 496.

pavidus, pavida, pavidum
frightened, trembling
Introduced in Chapter 320.

pavīmentum, pavīmentī
a floor
Introduced in Chapter 118.

pāvō, pāvōnis
a peacock
Introduced in Chapter 192.

pavor, pavōris
panic, terror
Introduced in Chapter 320.

pāx, pācis
peace
Introduced in Chapter 187.

pecten, pectinis
a comb
Introduced in Chapter 140.

pectō, pectere
to comb
Introduced in Chapter 554.

pectus, pectoris
the chest, the breast
Introduced in Chapter 66.

pecūnia, pecūniae
money — and the cattle it is named after
Introduced in Chapter 51.

pecus, pecoris
livestock, cattle, a herd of animals
Introduced in Chapter 477.

pedes, peditis
a foot soldier
Introduced in Chapter 340.

pedisequus, pedisequī
a footman, attendant
Introduced in Chapter 530.

pelagus, pelagī
the high sea, the open sea
Introduced in Chapter 442.

pelliō, pelliōnis
a furrier, a worker in skins
Introduced in Chapter 467.

pellis, pellis
a hide, skin
Introduced in Chapter 517.

pellō, pellere
to push, to drive
Introduced in Chapter 258.

pendeō, pendēre
to hang Introduced in Chapter 159.

pendet ex
it depends on — literally 'it hangs from'; and in tuā potestāte est, it is up to you
Introduced in Chapter 289.

pēnicillus, pēnicillī
a paintbrush, a fine brush
Introduced in Chapter 468.

pēnsō, pēnsāre
to weigh carefully, to weigh out; to ponder
Introduced in Chapter 464.

pēnsum, pēnsī
a task, a day's work
Introduced in Chapter 405.

penus, penūs
provisions, the store of food
Introduced in Chapter 553.

pēra, pērae
a satchel
Introduced in Chapter 254.

percipiō, percipere
to perceive, take in
Introduced in Chapter 519.

percontor, percontārī
to inquire, to ask questions
Introduced in Chapter 451.

perdiscō, perdiscere
to learn thoroughly
Introduced in Chapter 402.

perdō, perdere
to lose
Introduced in Chapter 157.

peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis
travel abroad, a stay in foreign parts
Introduced in Chapter 428.

peregrīnor, peregrīnārī
to travel abroad, to live in foreign parts
Introduced in Chapter 428.

peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum foreign Introduced in Chapter 213.

perendiē
the day after tomorrow
Introduced in Chapter 163.

pereō, perīre
to perish, to die; to be lost
Introduced in Chapter 322.

perficiō, perficere
to complete, to carry out
Introduced in Chapter 297.

perfidia, perfidiae
bad faith, treachery
Introduced in Chapter 399.

perfidus, perfida, perfidum
treacherous, faithless
Introduced in Chapter 399.

perflō, perflāre
to blow through, to blow across
Introduced in Chapter 487.

pergō, pergere
to go on, to continue
Introduced in Chapter 229.

perhibeō, perhibēre
to assert, to say (that)
Introduced in Chapter 301.

perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum
dangerous
Introduced in Chapter 147.

perīculum, perīculī
danger
Introduced in Chapter 248.

peristylium, peristyliī
a colonnaded garden
Introduced in Chapter 185.

periūrium, periūriī
perjury, a false oath
Introduced in Chapter 310.

perlegō, perlegere
to read through
Introduced in Chapter 550.

permittō, permittere
to allow
Introduced in Chapter 166.

permūtō, permūtāre
to exchange
Introduced in Chapter 259.

perna, pernae
a ham
Introduced in Chapter 195.

pernoctō, pernoctāre
to spend the night, to stay all night
Introduced in Chapter 445.

persequor, persequī
to pursue
Introduced in Chapter 201.

persolvō, persolvere
to pay in full
Introduced in Chapter 419.

perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum
clear, transparent; evident
Introduced in Chapter 360.

persuādeō, persuādēre
to persuade
Introduced in Chapter 199.

persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis
persuasion; a conviction
Introduced in Chapter 369.

perterreō, perterrēre
to terrify thoroughly
Introduced in Chapter 496.

perturbō, perturbāre
to throw into confusion, to upset
Introduced in Chapter 374.

perveniō, pervenīre
to reach, to arrive at Introduced in Chapter 200.

pēs, pedis
the foot — the clearest Grimm's Law pair in the book, and the last word of the tranche Introduced in Chapter 54.

pessulus, pessulī
a door bolt
Introduced in Chapter 553.

pestilentia, pestilentiae
an epidemic, pestilence
Introduced in Chapter 524.

pestis, pestis
plague, pestilence; ruin
Introduced in Chapter 524.

pharus, pharī
a lighthouse
Introduced in Chapter 441.

philosophia, philosophiae
philosophy
Introduced in Chapter 226.

pictor, pictōris
a painter
Introduced in Chapter 246.

pictūra, pictūrae
a picture, a painting
Introduced in Chapter 124.

pietās, pietātis
dutifulness, devotion (to gods, family, country)
Introduced in Chapter 389.

piger, pigra, pigrum
lazy
Introduced in Chapter 150.

pigmentum, pigmentī
a paint, a colour, a pigment
Introduced in Chapter 468.

pignus, pignoris
a pledge, a security
Introduced in Chapter 419.

pigritia, pigritiae
sloth, laziness
Introduced in Chapter 508.

pila, pilae
a ball
Introduced in Chapter 85.

pilleus, pilleī
a felt cap
Introduced in Chapter 532.

pingō, pingere
to paint
Introduced in Chapter 154.

pinguis, pingue
fat
Introduced in Chapter 267.

pīnus, pīnūs
a pine
Introduced in Chapter 250.

piper, piperis
pepper
Introduced in Chapter 127.

pirum, pirī
a pear
Introduced in Chapter 81.

piscārius, piscāriī
a fishmonger
Introduced in Chapter 463.

piscātor, piscātōris
a fisherman
Introduced in Chapter 138.

piscīna, piscīnae
a pool; a fish-pond
Introduced in Chapter 541.

piscis, piscis
the fish — and the single clearest demonstration in this book of the sound law linking Latin to English
Introduced in Chapter 47.

piscor, piscārī
to go fishing
Introduced in Chapter 172.

pistillum, pistillī
a pestle
Introduced in Chapter 351.

pistor, pistōris
a baker
Introduced in Chapter 137.

pistrīnum, pistrīnī
a bakery, a mill
Introduced in Chapter 118.

pīsum, pīsī
a pea
Introduced in Chapter 127.

placenta, placentae
a flat cake
Introduced in Chapter 128.

placeō, placēre
to please, be pleasing
Introduced in Chapter 499.

placidus, placida, placidum
peaceful, placid
Introduced in Chapter 212.

plāga, plāgae
a blow, a wound
Introduced in Chapter 314.

plānitiēs, plānitiēī
a plain, level ground
Introduced in Chapter 481.

planta, plantae
sole of the foot; a sprout
Introduced in Chapter 518.

platēa, platēae
a broad street, a square
Introduced in Chapter 244.

plaudō, plaudere
to clap, to applaud
Introduced in Chapter 256.

plaustrum, plaustrī
a wagon, a cart
Introduced in Chapter 125.

plausus, plausūs
applause, clapping
Introduced in Chapter 337.

plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium
plebeian, of the common people
Introduced in Chapter 382.

plēbs, plēbis
the common people
Introduced in Chapter 345.

plērumque
mostly, usually Introduced in Chapter 294.

plicō, plicāre
to fold
Introduced in Chapter 168.

plōrō, plōrāre
to wail, cry aloud
Introduced in Chapter 491.

plumbum, plumbī
the metal lead
Introduced in Chapter 222.

pluvia, pluviae
rain
Introduced in Chapter 89.

pluviālis, pluviāle
rainy, of rain, bringing rain
Introduced in Chapter 485.

pluvius, pluvia, pluvium
rainy
Introduced in Chapter 241.

pōculum, pōculī
a cup
Introduced in Chapter 83.

poēma, poēmatis
a poem
Introduced in Chapter 549.

poena, poenae
a punishment
Introduced in Chapter 218.

poēta, poētae
a poet
Introduced in Chapter 73.

poliō, polīre
to polish, to smooth; to refine
Introduced in Chapter 471.

pollex, pollicis
a thumb
Introduced in Chapter 136.

polliceor, pollicērī
to promise, to offer
Introduced in Chapter 396.

pōmārium, pōmāriī
an orchard
Introduced in Chapter 479.

pōmērium, pōmēriī
the sacred boundary (of a city)
Introduced in Chapter 459.

pompa, pompae
a procession
Introduced in Chapter 333.

pōmum, pōmī
a fruit, an apple
Introduced in Chapter 126.

ponderō, ponderāre
to weigh (up), to ponder Introduced in Chapter 359.

pondō
by weight, in weight; a pound
Introduced in Chapter 465.

pondus, ponderis
a weight
Introduced in Chapter 186.

pōnō, pōnere
to put, to place
Introduced in Chapter 77.

pōns, pontis
a bridge
Introduced in Chapter 108.

popīna, popīnae
an eating-house
Introduced in Chapter 117.

populāris, populāre
of the people, popular; a fellow countryman
Introduced in Chapter 382.

populus, populī
a people, a nation
Introduced in Chapter 271.

porcus, porcī
a pig
Introduced in Chapter 90.

porrum, porrī
a leek
Introduced in Chapter 279.

porta, portae
the door or gate — and the reason a harbour, a porch and a portal are all the same word
Introduced in Chapter 44.

porticus, porticūs
a colonnade, a covered walk, a portico
Introduced in Chapter 459.

portitor, portitōris
a ferryman, a boatman; a customs officer
Introduced in Chapter 438.

portō, portāre
to carry
Introduced in Chapter 156.

portōrium, portōriī
harbour dues, customs duty
Introduced in Chapter 421.

portus, portūs
a harbour, a port
Introduced in Chapter 441.

possessiō, possessiōnis
possession; (plural) estates
Introduced in Chapter 417.

possideō, possidēre
to own, to possess
Introduced in Chapter 168.

possum, posse
I can — potis plus sum, and the verb that will not sit still Introduced in Chapter 49.

post
after, behind — the other half of a phrase this book quoted long ago and never taught Introduced in Chapter 57.

posteā
afterwards, later
Introduced in Chapter 163.

posterus, postera, posterum
next, following
Introduced in Chapter 298.

posthāc
from now on Introduced in Chapter 175.

postrēmō
lastly Introduced in Chapter 208.

postrīdiē
the next day
Introduced in Chapter 263.

potestās, potestātis
power, the ability to act
Introduced in Chapter 109.

pōtiō, pōtiōnis
a draught, drink; a potion
Introduced in Chapter 526.

potius
rather Introduced in Chapter 179.

pōtō, pōtāre
to drink, to drink deep
Introduced in Chapter 461.

pōtor, pōtōris
a drinker, a heavy drinker
Introduced in Chapter 448.

praecaveō, praecavēre
to take precautions, to guard against beforehand
Introduced in Chapter 392.

praeceps, praecipitis
headlong; steep
Introduced in Chapter 314.

praeceptor, praeceptōris
a teacher, an instructor
Introduced in Chapter 401.

praeceptum, praeceptī
a rule, a precept, an instruction
Introduced in Chapter 409.

praecipiō, praecipere
to instruct, to advise; to take beforehand
Introduced in Chapter 400.

praecipitō, praecipitāre
to hurl headlong; to fall headlong
Introduced in Chapter 314.

praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum
special, chief
Introduced in Chapter 267.

praecō, praecōnis
a herald, a crier
Introduced in Chapter 300.

praeda, praedae
loot, booty; prey
Introduced in Chapter 303.

praedō, praedōnis
a robber, a pirate
Introduced in Chapter 303.

praemium, praemiī
a prize, a reward
Introduced in Chapter 337.

praenōmen, praenōminis
a first name
Introduced in Chapter 325.

praeparō, praeparāre
to make ready in advance
Introduced in Chapter 168.

praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum
sheer, very steep, broken off
Introduced in Chapter 480.

praescrībō, praescrībere
to lay down, to prescribe
Introduced in Chapter 410.

praesēpe, praesēpis
a manger, a crib; a stall
Introduced in Chapter 434.

praesertim
especially Introduced in Chapter 179.

praestō, praestāre
to make good, to fulfil; to excel
Introduced in Chapter 398.

praetereō, praeterīre
to go past
Introduced in Chapter 258.

praetervehor, praetervehī
to sail past, to ride past, to be carried past Introduced in Chapter 443.

praetor, praetōris
a praetor, a judge and magistrate
Introduced in Chapter 383.

praevideō, praevidēre
to foresee
Introduced in Chapter 394.

prandium, prandiī
lunch
Introduced in Chapter 79.

prātum, prātī
a meadow
Introduced in Chapter 196.

prēlum, prēlī
a press (for wine or oil)
Introduced in Chapter 479.

premō, premere
to press, to squeeze
Introduced in Chapter 170.

pretium, pretiī
a price
Introduced in Chapter 164.

prīdiē
the day before
Introduced in Chapter 237.

prīmō
at first, at the beginning
Introduced in Chapter 291.

prīmus, prīma, prīmum
first — the counting word for order rather than amount, and the one with no ūnus in it Introduced in Chapter 55.

prīnceps, prīncipis
the first, a leader; the emperor
Introduced in Chapter 385.

prīncipium, prīncipiī
a start, an origin
Introduced in Chapter 296.

prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum
former, of old
Introduced in Chapter 267.

prius
earlier, sooner
Introduced in Chapter 176.

prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum private
Introduced in Chapter 182.

prīvignus, prīvignī
a stepson
Introduced in Chapter 529.

probābilis, probābile
likely, credible; worth approving Introduced in Chapter 359.

probitās, probitātis
honesty, uprightness
Introduced in Chapter 504.

probō, probāre
to approve, to prove
Introduced in Chapter 166.

probus, proba, probum
honest, upright
Introduced in Chapter 213.

prōcēdō, prōcēdere
to go forward, to advance
Introduced in Chapter 202.

procella, procellae
a storm, a gale
Introduced in Chapter 191.

procul
far away
Introduced in Chapter 102.

procus, procī
a suitor
Introduced in Chapter 535.

prōdigium, prōdigiī
a portent, a wonder
Introduced in Chapter 348.

prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum
wasteful
Introduced in Chapter 184.

prōditor, prōditōris
a traitor
Introduced in Chapter 307.

prōdō, prōdere
to betray; to hand down
Introduced in Chapter 302.

proelium, proeliī
a battle
Introduced in Chapter 339.

profectiō, profectiōnis
a departure, a setting out Introduced in Chapter 428.

profectō
surely
Introduced in Chapter 210.

proficīscor, proficīscī
to set out
Introduced in Chapter 235.

profundus, profunda, profundum deep
Introduced in Chapter 240.

prōgredior, prōgredī
to go forward, to advance
Introduced in Chapter 428.

proinde
therefore, accordingly; so then
Introduced in Chapter 366.

prologus, prologī
a prologue; its speaker
Introduced in Chapter 546.

prōmissum, prōmissī
a promise
Introduced in Chapter 396.

prōmittō, prōmittere
to promise
Introduced in Chapter 166.

prōmulgō, prōmulgāre
to publish, to make known (a bill)
Introduced in Chapter 410.

prōmunturium, prōmunturiī
a headland, a promontory
Introduced in Chapter 441.

prōnuba, prōnubae
a matron of honour
Introduced in Chapter 328.

prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre
to proclaim, to announce; to deliver (a speech)
Introduced in Chapter 371.

propediem tē vidēbō
"see you later/soon" — a genuine change of pace from the last few lessons: this one IS solidly attested, twice, in Cicero's own letters
Introduced in Chapter 24.

properō, properāre
to make haste
Introduced in Chapter 169.

propinquus, propinqua, propinquum
near; a relative
Introduced in Chapter 528.

prōpōnō, prōpōnere
to propose, to put forward
Introduced in Chapter 168.

prōpositum, prōpositī
a plan, a purpose, an aim
Introduced in Chapter 393.

proprius, propria, proprium one's own; peculiar (to)
Introduced in Chapter 417.

propter
because of Introduced in Chapter 239.

proptereā
because of that Introduced in Chapter 114.

prōra, prōrae
the prow, the bow (of a ship)
Introduced in Chapter 436.

prōrogō, prōrogāre
to extend, to prolong (a term of office)
Introduced in Chapter 395.

prōscrībō, prōscrībere
to post for sale; to outlaw, to proscribe
Introduced in Chapter 415.

prōsequor, prōsequī
to escort, to see off, to accompany; to pursue
Introduced in Chapter 453.

prōsum, prōdesse
to be useful, to benefit Introduced in Chapter 374.

prōtinus
immediately; straight on
Introduced in Chapter 292.

prōveniō, prōvenīre
to come forth, to grow; to turn out
Introduced in Chapter 373.

prōvideō, prōvidēre
to foresee, to provide for
Introduced in Chapter 163.

prōvincia, prōvinciae
a province
Introduced in Chapter 209.

proximus, proxima, proximum
nearest, next
Introduced in Chapter 267.

prūdēns, prūdentis
wise, sensible
Introduced in Chapter 149.

prūdentia, prūdentiae
good sense, prudence
Introduced in Chapter 509.

pruīna, pruīnae
hoarfrost, frost
Introduced in Chapter 486.

prūnum, prūnī
a plum
Introduced in Chapter 279.

psallō, psallere
to play the cithara, sing to strings
Introduced in Chapter 544.

pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum
public
Introduced in Chapter 182.

pudet, pudēre
it shames, one is ashamed
Introduced in Chapter 513.

pudor, pudōris
shame, modesty
Introduced in Chapter 262.

puella, puellae
a girl
Introduced in Chapter 73.

puer, puerī
a boy; a child; a slave boy
Introduced in Chapter 324.

pueritia, pueritiae
childhood, boyhood
Introduced in Chapter 324.

pugillārēs, pugillārium
writing tablets
Introduced in Chapter 551.

pugiō, pugiōnis
a dagger
Introduced in Chapter 306.

pugnō, pugnāre
to fight
Introduced in Chapter 100.

pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum
beautiful
Introduced in Chapter 96.

pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis
beauty
Introduced in Chapter 548.

pūlex, pūlicis
a flea
Introduced in Chapter 276.

pullus, pullī
a chicken, a young animal
Introduced in Chapter 127.

pulmō, pulmōnis
a lung
Introduced in Chapter 173.

pulpitum, pulpitī
a stage, platform
Introduced in Chapter 546.

puls, pultis
porridge
Introduced in Chapter 279.

pulsō, pulsāre
to knock, to beat
Introduced in Chapter 167.

pulsus, pulsūs
a beat, pulse
Introduced in Chapter 517.

pulverulentus, pulverulenta, pulverulentum
dusty, covered with dust
Introduced in Chapter 426.

pulvīnus, pulvīnī
a cushion, a pillow
Introduced in Chapter 120.

pulvis, pulveris
dust
Introduced in Chapter 275.

pūniō, pūnīre
to punish
Introduced in Chapter 312.

pūpa, pūpae
a doll; a little girl
Introduced in Chapter 540.

pūpillus, pūpillī
a ward, an orphan boy
Introduced in Chapter 326.

puppis, puppis
the stern (of a ship); a ship
Introduced in Chapter 436.

pūrgō, pūrgāre
to clean
Introduced in Chapter 155.

purpureus, purpurea, purpureum
purple
Introduced in Chapter 148.

pūrus, pūra, pūrum
clean, pure
Introduced in Chapter 146.

puteus, puteī
a well
Introduced in Chapter 118.

pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum
rotten, stinking
Introduced in Chapter 449.

quā
by which way
Introduced in Chapter 238.

quadrāgintā
forty
Introduced in Chapter 106.

quadrāns, quadrantis
a quarter-as (a small coin); a quarter
Introduced in Chapter 465.

quadrīgae, quadrīgārum
a four-horse chariot
Introduced in Chapter 335.

quaerō, quaerere
to look for, to ask
Introduced in Chapter 203.

quaesītor, quaesītōris
an investigator; a presiding judge Introduced in Chapter 412.

quaesō
please (literally "I ask, I beg")
Introduced in Chapter 3.

quaestiō, quaestiōnis
a question, an inquiry
Introduced in Chapter 226.

quaestor, quaestōris
a quaestor, a finance officer
Introduced in Chapter 383.

quaestus, quaestūs
gain, profit; a way of earning a living
Introduced in Chapter 379.

quamobrem
why?, on account of what?
Introduced in Chapter 112.

quamquam
although Introduced in Chapter 178.

quamvīs
however much; although (with the subjunctive)
Introduced in Chapter 390.

quandō
when — as a question and as the hinge of a clause
Introduced in Chapter 49.

quandōquidem
since, seeing that Introduced in Chapter 365.

quārē
why?, for what reason?
Introduced in Chapter 112.

quārtus, quārta, quārtum
fourth — where the series settles into a shape
Introduced in Chapter 55.

quasi
as if
Introduced in Chapter 239.

queō, quīre
to be able, can Introduced in Chapter 109.

quercus, quercūs
an oak
Introduced in Chapter 250.

querēla, querēlae
a complaint
Introduced in Chapter 450.

queror, querī
to complain
Introduced in Chapter 231.

quī, quae, quod
who, which — the commonest word in Latin prose, and the one that joins two sentences into one Introduced in Chapter 49.

quia
because — the answer cūr asks for
Introduced in Chapter 52.

quid agis?
how are you? — literally, what are you doing?
Introduced in Chapter 19.

quid tibi nōmen est? / mihi nōmen est...
what's your name? / my name is... — the genuinely classical dative of possession, literally what is the name to you?
Introduced in Chapter 20.

quiēscō, quiēscere
to rest
Introduced in Chapter 198.

quiētus, quiēta, quiētum
quiet, calm
Introduced in Chapter 148.

quīn
but that, that (after a denied doubt); why not Introduced in Chapter 367.

quīnquāgintā
fifty
Introduced in Chapter 106.

quīntus, quīnta, quīntum
fifth — and the month that was once called The Fifth Introduced in Chapter 55.

quippe
of course, naturally; for Introduced in Chapter 365.

quōminus
that … not (after hindering), from doing Introduced in Chapter 367.

quōmodo
"how, in what way" — the genuine classical word behind Italian come, Spanish cómo, and French comment, which went one step further and double-marked "manner"
Introduced in Chapter 26.

quondam
formerly, at one time
Introduced in Chapter 208.

quoque
also, too
Introduced in Chapter 239.

quotannīs
every year
Introduced in Chapter 176.

quotiēns
as often as; how often
Introduced in Chapter 294.

rādīx, rādīcis
a root
Introduced in Chapter 223.

raeda, raedae
a travelling carriage
Introduced in Chapter 244.

raedārius, raedāriī
a coachman, the driver of a four-wheeled carriage
Introduced in Chapter 427.

rāmus, rāmī
a branch
Introduced in Chapter 129.

rāna, rānae
a frog
Introduced in Chapter 133.

rapāx, rapācis
grasping, greedy
Introduced in Chapter 450.

rapiō, rapere
to snatch, to carry off
Introduced in Chapter 304.

rārō rarely
Introduced in Chapter 105.

rārus, rāra, rārum
rare, thin
Introduced in Chapter 214.

ratiō, ratiōnis
a reason, a way of thinking
Introduced in Chapter 114.

ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī
to reason, to calculate
Introduced in Chapter 364.

ratis, ratis
a raft; (in poetry) a boat
Introduced in Chapter 435.

ratus, rata, ratum
fixed, settled, valid
Introduced in Chapter 398.

raucus, rauca, raucum
hoarse; harsh-sounding
Introduced in Chapter 448.

recēdō, recēdere
to move back, to withdraw
Introduced in Chapter 169.

recēns, recentis
fresh, recent
Introduced in Chapter 181.

recitātiō, recitātiōnis
a public reading
Introduced in Chapter 549.

recitō, recitāre
to read aloud, to recite
Introduced in Chapter 371.

reconciliō, reconciliāre
to reconcile, bring together again
Introduced in Chapter 537.

recordor, recordārī
to call to mind, to remember
Introduced in Chapter 402.

recreō, recreāre
to refresh, restore
Introduced in Chapter 526.

rēctus, rēcta, rēctum
straight, right
Introduced in Chapter 146.

recumbō, recumbere
to recline, lie down
Introduced in Chapter 527.

recūsō, recūsāre
to refuse
Introduced in Chapter 200.

redarguō, redarguere
to disprove, to show to be wrong
Introduced in Chapter 362.

reddō, reddere
to give back
Introduced in Chapter 157.

redeō, redīre
to go back, to return
Introduced in Chapter 78.

reditus, reditūs
a return, a coming back
Introduced in Chapter 428.

redundō, redundāre
to overflow; to result (in), to fall back (on)
Introduced in Chapter 373.

refellō, refellere
to prove false, to refute
Introduced in Chapter 362.

referō, referre
to report; to carry back
Introduced in Chapter 299.

refūtō, refūtāre
to refute; to drive back
Introduced in Chapter 362.

rēgīna, rēgīnae
a queen
Introduced in Chapter 73.

regiō, regiōnis
a region
Introduced in Chapter 209.

rēgnō, rēgnāre
to reign, to be king
Introduced in Chapter 345.

rēgnum, rēgnī
a kingdom
Introduced in Chapter 245.

regō, regere
to rule, to guide, to direct
Introduced in Chapter 385.

rēgula, rēgulae
a rule, a ruler
Introduced in Chapter 221.

relaxō, relaxāre
to relax, ease; to loosen
Introduced in Chapter 538.

relēgō, relēgāre
to send away, to banish
Introduced in Chapter 415.

relinquō, relinquere
to leave behind; to leave (in a will)
Introduced in Chapter 332.

remedium, remediī
a remedy
Introduced in Chapter 236.

rēmigō, rēmigāre
to row
Introduced in Chapter 437.

remissiō, remissiōnis
relaxation; a letting go
Introduced in Chapter 538.

removeō, removēre
to remove
Introduced in Chapter 229.

rēmus, rēmī
an oar
Introduced in Chapter 270.

rēn, rēnis
a kidney
Introduced in Chapter 173.

renūntiō, renūntiāre
to bring back word, to report
Introduced in Chapter 300.

repente
suddenly, unexpectedly
Introduced in Chapter 292.

reperiō, reperīre
to find, to find out, to discover
Introduced in Chapter 453.

repōnō, repōnere
to put back; to store away
Introduced in Chapter 554.

reprehendō, reprehendere
to blame, to criticise
Introduced in Chapter 199.

requiēs, requiētis
rest, repose
Introduced in Chapter 527.

requiēscō, requiēscere
to rest, take a rest
Introduced in Chapter 527.

requīrō, requīrere
to ask after, to look for; to need
Introduced in Chapter 451.

rescrībō, rescrībere
to write back, reply
Introduced in Chapter 551.

resonō, resonāre
to resound, echo
Introduced in Chapter 545.

respondeō, respondēre
"I answer" — literally "I pledge back", from the verb Romans used for a solemn promise, and the reason a husband is a spouse
Introduced in Chapter 43.

respōnsum, respōnsī
an answer
Introduced in Chapter 226.

restinguō, restinguere
to put out, to quench
Introduced in Chapter 319.

retineō, retinēre
to hold back, to keep Introduced in Chapter 234.

reus, reī
a defendant
Introduced in Chapter 218.

revertor, revertī
to turn back, to return
Introduced in Chapter 455.

rēx, rēgis
a king
Introduced in Chapter 345.

rhētor, rhētoris
a teacher of public speaking
Introduced in Chapter 404.

rhētorica, rhētoricae
rhetoric, the art of speaking
Introduced in Chapter 404.

rīdeō, rīdēre
to laugh
Introduced in Chapter 75.

rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum
funny, laughable; absurd
Introduced in Chapter 502.

rigeō, rigēre
to be stiff with cold, to be numb; to be stiff Introduced in Chapter 486.

rīpa, rīpae
a river bank
Introduced in Chapter 129.

rīsus, rīsūs
a laugh
Introduced in Chapter 174.

rīvālis, rīvālis
a rival (in love)
Introduced in Chapter 500.

rīvus, rīvī
a stream
Introduced in Chapter 87.

rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum
sturdy, strong
Introduced in Chapter 523.

rogātiō, rogātiōnis
a bill (put to the people); a request
Introduced in Chapter 410.

rogō, rogāre
"I ask" — a verb probably built on "stretching straight out", and a cousin of regal, direct and right
Introduced in Chapter 39.

rogus, rogī
a funeral pyre
Introduced in Chapter 330.

rosa, rosae
a rose
Introduced in Chapter 128.

rōstra, rōstrōrum
the speakers' platform (in the Forum)
Introduced in Chapter 371.

rota, rotae
a wheel
Introduced in Chapter 85.

rotundus, rotunda, rotundum
round
Introduced in Chapter 96.

rubeō, rubēre
to be red
Introduced in Chapter 522.

ruber, caeruleus
red (rock-solid) and blue (surprisingly shaky) — Latin's clearest color word, and one of its weakest
Introduced in Chapter 6.

rudēns, rudentis
a ship's rope, a line
Introduced in Chapter 437.

ruīna, ruīnae
a collapse, a fall; ruins
Introduced in Chapter 313.

rūmor, rūmōris
a rumour
Introduced in Chapter 194.

rumpō, rumpere
to burst, to break apart
Introduced in Chapter 255.

runcīna, runcīnae
a plane (a carpenter's tool)
Introduced in Chapter 470.

ruō, ruere
to rush; to fall down
Introduced in Chapter 313.

rūpēs, rūpis
a cliff, a rock face
Introduced in Chapter 480.

rūrsus
back again, once more Introduced in Chapter 211.

rūs, rūris
the countryside, the country; a farm
Introduced in Chapter 473.

rūsticitās, rūsticitātis
country manners, boorishness
Introduced in Chapter 506.

rūsticor, rūsticārī
to stay in the country
Introduced in Chapter 542.

rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum
of the country, boorish
Introduced in Chapter 180.

saccus, saccī
a sack, a bag
Introduced in Chapter 120.

sacerdōs, sacerdōtis
a priest, a priestess
Introduced in Chapter 334.

sacrificium, sacrificiī
a sacrifice
Introduced in Chapter 253.

saeculum, saeculī
a generation, a century
Introduced in Chapter 207.

saepe
often
Introduced in Chapter 104.

saevitia, saevitiae
fury, savagery
Introduced in Chapter 511.

saevus, saeva, saevum
savage, cruel
Introduced in Chapter 214.

sagitta, sagittae
an arrow
Introduced in Chapter 277.

sāl, salis
salt — a cousin of English salt, and the word a Roman soldier's salary was named for Introduced in Chapter 47.

saliō, salīre
to jump
Introduced in Chapter 165.

saltem
at least
Introduced in Chapter 265.

saltō, saltāre
to dance
Introduced in Chapter 75.

saltus, saltūs
a woodland pass; a leap
Introduced in Chapter 228.

salūbris, salūbre
wholesome, healthy
Introduced in Chapter 523.

salum, salī
the open sea, the swell (of the sea)
Introduced in Chapter 442.

salūtō, salūtāre
to greet
Introduced in Chapter 197.

salvē (post merīdiem)
why no two-word good-afternoon phrase exists — Latin has no simplex afternoon noun, and a grammatical three-word workaround is not attested as a greeting
Introduced in Chapter 36.

salvē / salvēte
hello (lit. "be well")
Introduced in Chapter 1.

sanciō, sancīre
to make sacred and binding; to ratify
Introduced in Chapter 410.

sanguis, sanguinis
blood
Introduced in Chapter 64.

sānitās, sānitātis
health, soundness
Introduced in Chapter 523.

sānō, sānāre
to heal, cure
Introduced in Chapter 526.

sānus, sāna, sānum
healthy, sound
Introduced in Chapter 66.

sapiēns, sapientis
wise
Introduced in Chapter 97.

sapientia, sapientiae
wisdom
Introduced in Chapter 206.

sāpō, sāpōnis
soap
Introduced in Chapter 141.

sarcina, sarcinae
a pack, a bundle
Introduced in Chapter 254.

sarciō, sarcīre
to mend, patch
Introduced in Chapter 554.

sartāgō, sartāginis
a frying pan
Introduced in Chapter 252.

satis
enough
Introduced in Chapter 98.

saucius, saucia, saucium
wounded, hurt
Introduced in Chapter 314.

saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum
rocky, stony
Introduced in Chapter 481.

saxum, saxī
a rock, a boulder
Introduced in Chapter 129.

scālae, scālārum
a ladder, stairs
Introduced in Chapter 122.

scalpō, scalpere
to scratch; to carve
Introduced in Chapter 447.

scamnum, scamnī
a bench
Introduced in Chapter 139.

scandō, scandere
to climb, to mount
Introduced in Chapter 480.

scapha, scaphae
a skiff, a ship's boat
Introduced in Chapter 435.

scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum
wicked, criminal
Introduced in Chapter 305.

scelus, sceleris
a crime, a wicked deed
Introduced in Chapter 305.

schola, scholae
the school — a Greek word that first meant leisure
Introduced in Chapter 53.

sciēns, scientis
knowing; on purpose; skilled (in)
Introduced in Chapter 403.

scientia, scientiae
knowledge, skill
Introduced in Chapter 407.

scīlicet
to be sure, of course
Introduced in Chapter 365.

sciō, scīre
"I know" — one of Latin's two verbs for knowing, and the one that gave English science and nice
Introduced in Chapter 37.

scīscitor, scīscitārī
to ask around, to try to find out
Introduced in Chapter 451.

scōpae, scōpārum
a broom
Introduced in Chapter 552.

scopulus, scopulī
a crag, a cliff
Introduced in Chapter 191.

scrība, scrībae
a clerk
Introduced in Chapter 272.

scrībō, scrībere
"I write" — a verb whose root means "to scratch", and the fourth of this chapter's four
Introduced in Chapter 38.

scrīnium, scrīniī
a writing case, chest for papers
Introduced in Chapter 551.

scrīptor, scrīptōris
a writer
Introduced in Chapter 246.

sculpō, sculpere
to carve, to engrave
Introduced in Chapter 378.

scutica, scuticae
a whip, a lash
Introduced in Chapter 431.

scūtum, scūtī
a shield
Introduced in Chapter 251.

secō, secāre
to cut, to slice
Introduced in Chapter 351.

secundus, secunda, secundum
second — and the verb hiding inside it
Introduced in Chapter 55.

secūris, secūris
an axe
Introduced in Chapter 122.

sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum
free from care, untroubled
Introduced in Chapter 501.

secus
differently, otherwise
Introduced in Chapter 391.

sed
but — the word that sets one thing against another
Introduced in Chapter 48.

sedeō, sedēre
"I sit" — the verb that is English sit by descent and English session by loan, and the clearest case of the difference
Introduced in Chapter 40.

sēditiō, sēditiōnis
a rising, a mutiny, sedition
Introduced in Chapter 387.

sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum
seditious, rebellious
Introduced in Chapter 387.

sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum
painstaking, busy
Introduced in Chapter 406.

seges, segetis
a crop, a cornfield
Introduced in Chapter 223.

segnis, segne
sluggish, slow
Introduced in Chapter 508.

sella, sellae
a chair, a seat
Introduced in Chapter 82.

semel
once, a single time
Introduced in Chapter 176.

sēmen, sēminis
a seed
Introduced in Chapter 129.

sēmita, sēmitae
a footpath; a narrow way, a lane
Introduced in Chapter 423.

semper always Introduced in Chapter 104.

senātor, senātōris
a senator
Introduced in Chapter 382.

senectūs, senectūtis
old age
Introduced in Chapter 326.

senex, senis
an old man
Introduced in Chapter 73.

sēnsim
gradually, gently
Introduced in Chapter 293.

sententia, sententiae
an opinion; a sentence
Introduced in Chapter 194.

sentiō, sentīre
to feel
Introduced in Chapter 159.

sepeliō, sepelīre
to bury
Introduced in Chapter 330.

septimus, septima, septimum
seventh — the ending wears the vowel down
Introduced in Chapter 56.

sepulcrum, sepulcrī
a tomb
Introduced in Chapter 118.

sepultūra, sepultūrae
burial
Introduced in Chapter 330.

sequor, sequī
to follow
Introduced in Chapter 235.

serēnitās, serēnitātis
clear weather, fair weather; calm
Introduced in Chapter 487.

serēnus, serēna, serēnum
clear, fine (of weather)
Introduced in Chapter 152.

sēricum, sēricī
silk
Introduced in Chapter 275.

sermō, sermōnis
conversation, speech
Introduced in Chapter 194.

serō, serere
to sow, to plant
Introduced in Chapter 172.

serpēns, serpentis
a snake
Introduced in Chapter 91.

serra, serrae
a saw
Introduced in Chapter 122.

servīlis, servīle
of a slave, slavish
Introduced in Chapter 530.

serviō, servīre
to serve, to be a slave
Introduced in Chapter 232.

servitūs, servitūtis
slavery, servitude
Introduced in Chapter 389.

servō, servāre
to keep, to save
Introduced in Chapter 159.

servus, servī
a slave, a servant
Introduced in Chapter 138.

sēstertius, sēstertiī
a sesterce (coin)
Introduced in Chapter 190.

sex septem octō novem decem
six to ten — and the four that got frozen into the calendar
Introduced in Chapter 2.

sextārius, sextāriī
a pint (a sixth of a larger measure)
Introduced in Chapter 465.

sextus, sexta, sextum
sixth — and the nap named after the sixth hour
Introduced in Chapter 56.

sīcārius, sīcāriī
an assassin
Introduced in Chapter 306.

siccus, sicca, siccum
dry
Introduced in Chapter 95.

sīcut
even as, in the same way as Introduced in Chapter 265.

sīdus, sīderis
a constellation, a star
Introduced in Chapter 191.

signifer, signiferī
a standard-bearer
Introduced in Chapter 338.

significō, significāre
to indicate, to mean; to show
Introduced in Chapter 364.

signō, signāre
to mark, to seal
Introduced in Chapter 166.

signum, signī
a sign, a signal
Introduced in Chapter 125.

sileō, silēre
to make no sound
Introduced in Chapter 258.

silex, silicis
a flint; a hard paving stone
Introduced in Chapter 425.

silva, silvae
a forest, a wood
Introduced in Chapter 86.

sīmia, sīmiae
a monkey
Introduced in Chapter 134.

similis, simile
similar, like
Introduced in Chapter 266.

simul
at the same time
Introduced in Chapter 239.

simulō, simulāre
to pretend, imitate
Introduced in Chapter 504.

sīn but if
Introduced in Chapter 390.

sincērus, sincēra, sincērum
genuine, sincere
Introduced in Chapter 504.

singultus, singultūs
a sob; a hiccup
Introduced in Chapter 520.

sinister, sinistra, sinistrum
left (not right)
Introduced in Chapter 114.

sinistrōrsum
to the left, towards the left
Introduced in Chapter 454.

sinus, sinūs
a fold of a garment; a bay
Introduced in Chapter 225.

sīphō, sīphōnis
a fire pump; a siphon
Introduced in Chapter 319.

sitiō, sitīre
to be thirsty
Introduced in Chapter 525.

sitis, sitis
thirst
Introduced in Chapter 68.

sīve
or if; whether … or
Introduced in Chapter 391.

sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium
sober
Introduced in Chapter 269.

socer, socerī
a father-in-law
Introduced in Chapter 247.

societās, societātis
a partnership, an alliance; society
Introduced in Chapter 386.

socrus, socrūs
a mother-in-law
Introduced in Chapter 247.

sodālis, sodālis
a companion, a comrade; a club member
Introduced in Chapter 388.

sōlācium, sōlāciī
solace, relief
Introduced in Chapter 492.

solea, soleae
a sandal
Introduced in Chapter 225.

soleō, solēre
to be used to, usually do
Introduced in Chapter 109.

sollemnis, sollemne
yearly, solemn; customary Introduced in Chapter 333.

sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis
anxiety, worry
Introduced in Chapter 497.

sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum worried
Introduced in Chapter 241.

sōlstitium, sōlstitiī
the summer solstice; midsummer heat
Introduced in Chapter 488.

sōlus, sōla, sōlum
alone, only
Introduced in Chapter 152.

solvō, solvere
to untie, to pay
Introduced in Chapter 156.

somniō, somniāre
to dream
Introduced in Chapter 258.

somnium, somniī
a dream
Introduced in Chapter 236.

somnus, somnī
sleep — the word under insomnia and somnolent, and a cousin of Sanskrit svapna Introduced in Chapter 46.

sonō, sonāre
to sound, ring
Introduced in Chapter 545.

sonus, sonī
a sound
Introduced in Chapter 545.

sordēs, sordis
dirt, filth
Introduced in Chapter 450.

sordidus, sordida, sordidum
dirty
Introduced in Chapter 146.

spatior, spatiārī
to stroll
Introduced in Chapter 257.

speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum
good-looking, handsome
Introduced in Chapter 548.

spectāculum, spectāculī
a show
Introduced in Chapter 219.

speculātor, speculātōris
a spy, a lookout
Introduced in Chapter 302.

speculum, speculī
a mirror
Introduced in Chapter 84.

spēlunca, spēluncae
a cave
Introduced in Chapter 88.

spernō, spernere
to reject, spurn
Introduced in Chapter 514.

spēs, speī
hope
Introduced in Chapter 112.

spīca, spīcae
an ear of grain, a spike
Introduced in Chapter 475.

spīna, spīnae
a thorn
Introduced in Chapter 223.

spīritus, spīritūs
breath; spirit
Introduced in Chapter 520.

spīrō, spīrāre
to breathe
Introduced in Chapter 259.

spongia, spongiae
a sponge
Introduced in Chapter 141.

spōnsa, spōnsae
a bride-to-be, a fiancée
Introduced in Chapter 327.

spōnsālia, spōnsālium
a betrothal; an engagement party
Introduced in Chapter 327.

spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis
a solemn promise, a pledge; a wager
Introduced in Chapter 396.

sponte
of one's own accord
Introduced in Chapter 211.

sporta, sportae
a plaited basket, a hamper
Introduced in Chapter 463.

spūma, spūmae
foam, froth, scum
Introduced in Chapter 353.

stabulārius, stabulāriī
a stable-keeper, an innkeeper (of a stable inn)
Introduced in Chapter 445.

stabulum, stabulī
a stable, a stall; a lodging
Introduced in Chapter 434.

stagnum, stagnī
a pool, a pond; standing water
Introduced in Chapter 483.

statēra, statērae
a steelyard, a balance with one arm
Introduced in Chapter 464.

statim
at once, immediately
Introduced in Chapter 101.

statiō, statiōnis
a post, a station; a stopping place; an anchorage
Introduced in Chapter 427.

statua, statuae
a statue
Introduced in Chapter 125.

statuārius, statuāriī
a sculptor of statues
Introduced in Chapter 377.

statuō, statuere
to set up; to decide
Introduced in Chapter 393.

stēlla, stēllae
the star — a cousin of English star, and the word inside constellation and disaster
Introduced in Chapter 46.

sternō, sternere
to spread, to lay out; to pave (a road)
Introduced in Chapter 425.

sternuō, sternuere
to sneeze
Introduced in Chapter 520.

stertō, stertere
to snore
Introduced in Chapter 448.

stilus, stilī
a stylus, a writing stick
Introduced in Chapter 84.

stīpendium, stīpendiī
pay, wages (especially a soldier's)
Introduced in Chapter 379.

stipula, stipulae
a stalk, a straw; stubble
Introduced in Chapter 476.

stipulor, stipulārī
to bargain for, to demand a formal promise
Introduced in Chapter 397.

stō, stāre
"I stand" — the shortest verb in the chapter and the most productive in English, and the fourth of four
Introduced in Chapter 40.

stola, stolae
a long dress
Introduced in Chapter 125.

stomachus, stomachī
the stomach
Introduced in Chapter 136.

strāgulum, strāgulī
a blanket, a bedspread
Introduced in Chapter 120.

strāmentum, strāmentī
straw bedding, straw; a covering
Introduced in Chapter 446.

strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum
vigorous, active
Introduced in Chapter 508.

strepō, strepere
to make a noise, to clatter, to roar
Introduced in Chapter 448.

strigilis, strigilis
a strigil, scraper
Introduced in Chapter 542.

studeō, studēre
to be eager (for); to study
Introduced in Chapter 402.

studium, studiī
eagerness; study
Introduced in Chapter 226.

stultitia, stultitiae
foolishness, folly
Introduced in Chapter 360.

stultus, stulta, stultum
foolish
Introduced in Chapter 98.

stupeō, stupēre
to be stunned, be amazed
Introduced in Chapter 495.

suādeō, suādēre
to advise, to urge
Introduced in Chapter 202.

suāvis, suāve
sweet, pleasant
Introduced in Chapter 536.

suāvium, suāviī
a kiss on the lips
Introduced in Chapter 534.

subdūcō, subdūcere
to haul ashore, to draw up (a ship); to take away
Introduced in Chapter 439.

subigō, subigere
to knead; to subdue
Introduced in Chapter 352.

subinde
immediately after; now and then Introduced in Chapter 294.

subitō
suddenly
Introduced in Chapter 175.

subiungō, subiungere
to yoke, to harness; to put under
Introduced in Chapter 430.

subrīdeō, subrīdēre
to smile
Introduced in Chapter 165.

subsellium, subsellii̅
a bench, low seat
Introduced in Chapter 554.

sūbula, sūbulae
an awl
Introduced in Chapter 467.

suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum
near the city, suburban
Introduced in Chapter 460.

subveniō, subvenīre
to come to help
Introduced in Chapter 316.

succēdō, succēdere
to turn out well, to succeed; to come next
Introduced in Chapter 373.

succurrō, succurrere
to run to help
Introduced in Chapter 316.

sūcus, sūcī
juice
Introduced in Chapter 128.

sūdor, sūdōris
sweat
Introduced in Chapter 517.

sufflāmen, sufflāminis
a drag shoe, a brake (for a wheel)
Introduced in Chapter 430.

suffrāgium, suffrāgii̅
a vote; the right to vote
Introduced in Chapter 384.

sulcus, sulcī
a furrow; a trench
Introduced in Chapter 474.

sum, esse
"I am" — the verb every sentence leans on, and the one whose forms English still shares outright
Introduced in Chapter 37.

summus, summa, summum
highest, the top of Introduced in Chapter 183.

suō, suere
to sew, to stitch
Introduced in Chapter 378.

supellex, supellectilis
household furniture, goods
Introduced in Chapter 552.

superbia, superbiae
pride, haughtiness
Introduced in Chapter 507.

superbus, superba, superbum
proud
Introduced in Chapter 151.

supercilium, supercilii
eyebrow
Introduced in Chapter 515.

superō, superāre
to overcome, to defeat; to surpass
Introduced in Chapter 342.

supplicium, supplicii punishment, execution; a prayer
Introduced in Chapter 312.

suprā
above
Introduced in Chapter 102.

surdus, surda, surdum
deaf
Introduced in Chapter 147.

surgō, surgere
to rise, to get up
Introduced in Chapter 101.

sūrsum
upwards
Introduced in Chapter 264.

suspīciō, suspīciōnis
a suspicion, a mistrust
Introduced in Chapter 364.

suspicor, suspicārī
to suspect
Introduced in Chapter 170.

suspīrō, suspīrāre
to sigh
Introduced in Chapter 491.

susurrō, susurrāre
to whisper
Introduced in Chapter 301.

susurrus, susurrī
a whisper, a murmur
Introduced in Chapter 301.

sūtor, sūtōris
a shoemaker
Introduced in Chapter 137.

sūtrīna, sūtrīnae
a cobbler's shop
Introduced in Chapter 467.

symphōnia, symphōniae
a band of musicians; harmony
Introduced in Chapter 545.

syngrapha, syngraphae
a written bond, a promissory note
Introduced in Chapter 419.

syrtis, syrtis
a sandbank, a shoal
Introduced in Chapter 443.

tabella, tabellae
a small tablet, a note
Introduced in Chapter 252.

tabellārius, tabellāriī
a letter-carrier, a courier
Introduced in Chapter 300.

taberna, tabernae
a shop, an inn
Introduced in Chapter 107.

tabernāculum, tabernāculī
a tent
Introduced in Chapter 254.

tablīnum, tablīnī
a study (room)
Introduced in Chapter 185.

tabula, tabulae
a writing tablet, a board
Introduced in Chapter 84.

taceō, tacēre
to be silent
Introduced in Chapter 159.

tacitus, tacita, tacitum
silent
Introduced in Chapter 212.

tāctus, tāctūs
touch
Introduced in Chapter 519.

taedet, taedēre
it wearies, it disgusts
Introduced in Chapter 494.

taedium, taediī
boredom, weariness
Introduced in Chapter 262.

tālus, tālī
a knucklebone; an ankle
Introduced in Chapter 193.

tamen
however, nevertheless Introduced in Chapter 178.

tametsī
although, even though Introduced in Chapter 391.

tamquam
as, in the same way as; as if Introduced in Chapter 367.

tandem
at last
Introduced in Chapter 175.

tangō, tangere
to touch
Introduced in Chapter 100.

tantum
only; so much
Introduced in Chapter 210.

tapēte, tapētis
a carpet, a rug
Introduced in Chapter 139.

tardus, tarda, tardum
slow; slow-witted
Introduced in Chapter 406.

taurus, taurī
a bull
Introduced in Chapter 133.

tēctum, tēctī
a roof
Introduced in Chapter 83.

teges, tegetis
a mat, a rush mat; a covering
Introduced in Chapter 446.

tēgula, tēgulae
a roof tile
Introduced in Chapter 217.

tēla, tēlae
a web on the loom, the warp; a loom
Introduced in Chapter 472.

temerārius, temerāria, temerārium
rash, reckless Introduced in Chapter 509.

temerē
rashly, blindly; at random
Introduced in Chapter 371.

temeritās, temeritātis
rashness, recklessness
Introduced in Chapter 370.

tēmō, tēmōnis
a cart pole, the shaft of a wagon or plough Introduced in Chapter 430.

tempestās
weather or storm — a derivative of tempus that specialized for weather in Classical Latin, while tempus itself meant only time; later tempus widened to weather and tempestās narrowed to storm
Introduced in Chapter 15.

templum, templī
a temple
Introduced in Chapter 107.

temptō, temptāre
to try, to test
Introduced in Chapter 229.

teneō, tenēre
to hold
Introduced in Chapter 255.

tenuis, tenue
thin
Introduced in Chapter 144.

tepidārium, tepidāriī
the warm room
Introduced in Chapter 541.

tepidus, tepida, tepidum
lukewarm
Introduced in Chapter 143.

terebra, terebrae
a drill, a borer, an auger
Introduced in Chapter 470.

tergeō, tergēre
to wipe, to wipe clean
Introduced in Chapter 350.

tergum, tergī
the back
Introduced in Chapter 65.

terō, terere
to grind, to rub
Introduced in Chapter 351.

terra, terrae
the earth — dry land as opposed to sea, and the root under terrain, terrace and Mediterranean Introduced in Chapter 45.

terreō, terrēre
to frighten
Introduced in Chapter 321.

terribilis, terribile
frightful, terrible
Introduced in Chapter 496.

tertius, tertia, tertium
third — the first ordinal with its own number visible inside it Introduced in Chapter 55.

tessella, tessellae
a small cube (of mosaic)
Introduced in Chapter 547.

tessera, tesserae
a gaming die; a token
Introduced in Chapter 193.

testāmentum, testāmentī
a will, a testament
Introduced in Chapter 332.

testimōnium, testimōniī
evidence, testimony
Introduced in Chapter 309.

testis, testis
a witness
Introduced in Chapter 218.

testor, testārī
to call to witness; to testify
Introduced in Chapter 399.

testūdō, testūdinis
a tortoise
Introduced in Chapter 276.

texō, texere
to weave; to build
Introduced in Chapter 378.

textor, textōris
a weaver
Introduced in Chapter 188.

theātrum, theātrī
a theatre
Introduced in Chapter 115.

thermae, thermārum
the public baths
Introduced in Chapter 244.

thermopōlium, thermopōliī
a hot-drinks bar, a tavern selling warm drinks
Introduced in Chapter 461.

tībia, tībiae
a flute, a pipe
Introduced in Chapter 142.

tignum, tignī
a timber, a log for building; building material
Introduced in Chapter 457.

tigris, tigris
a tiger
Introduced in Chapter 251.

timeō, timēre
to fear
Introduced in Chapter 78.

timidus, timida, timidum
timid, shy
Introduced in Chapter 150.

timor, timōris
fear
Introduced in Chapter 69.

tingō, tingere
to dye, to colour; to wet, to dip
Introduced in Chapter 468.

tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī
a bell
Introduced in Chapter 142.

titulus, titulī
a notice, a label; a title
Introduced in Chapter 164.

tolerō, tolerāre
to endure, to put up with Introduced in Chapter 171.

tollō, tollere
to lift, to raise; to remove
Introduced in Chapter 200.

tondeō, tondēre
to shear, to clip; to shave
Introduced in Chapter 478.

tonitrus, tonitrūs
thunder
Introduced in Chapter 130.

tōnsor, tōnsōris
a barber
Introduced in Chapter 137.

tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae
a barber's shop
Introduced in Chapter 467.

tornō, tornāre
to turn on a lathe, to round off
Introduced in Chapter 471.

tornus, tornī
a lathe
Introduced in Chapter 471.

torrēns, torrentis
a torrent, a rushing stream
Introduced in Chapter 482.

torreō, torrēre
to roast, to toast, to parch
Introduced in Chapter 354.

torris, torris
a firebrand, a burning log
Introduced in Chapter 317.

tōtus, tōta, tōtum
whole
Introduced in Chapter 242.

trabs, trabis
a beam, a timber; (in poetry) a ship
Introduced in Chapter 457.

trādō, trādere
to hand over
Introduced in Chapter 201.

trahō, trahere
to pull, to drag
Introduced in Chapter 100.

trāiciō, trāicere
to take across, to cross over; to throw across
Introduced in Chapter 440.

trāmes, trāmitis
a side path, a by-way; a cross path
Introduced in Chapter 423.

tranquillitās, tranquillitātis
calm weather, a calm; stillness
Introduced in Chapter 444.

tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum
calm, peaceful
Introduced in Chapter 501.

trānseō, trānsīre
to cross, to go over
Introduced in Chapter 256.

trānsnatō, trānsnatāre
to swim across
Introduced in Chapter 482.

trānstrum, trānstrī
a rowing bench, a thwart; a crossbeam
Introduced in Chapter 436.

tremō, tremere
to tremble
Introduced in Chapter 202.

trepidō, trepidāre
to panic, to be in a flurry
Introduced in Chapter 320.

tribūnal, tribūnālis
the judgement seat, a raised platform
Introduced in Chapter 411.

tribūnus, tribūnī
a tribune
Introduced in Chapter 338.

tribūtum, tribūtī
a tribute, a tax
Introduced in Chapter 190.

triclīnium, triclīniī
a dining room; a dining couch
Introduced in Chapter 356.

trīgintā
thirty
Introduced in Chapter 106.

trīstis, trīste
sad
Introduced in Chapter 69.

trīstitia, trīstitiae
sadness
Introduced in Chapter 490.

trīticum, trīticī
wheat
Introduced in Chapter 475.

trītūrō, trītūrāre
to thresh
Introduced in Chapter 476.

triumphus, triumphī
a triumph, a victory procession
Introduced in Chapter 343.

trochus, trochī
a hoop
Introduced in Chapter 540.

truncus, truncī
a tree trunk
Introduced in Chapter 129.

trutina, trutinae
a pair of scales, a balance
Introduced in Chapter 464.

tū / vōs
you (singular) / you (plural) — a PURELY grammatical number distinction in Classical Latin, with no politeness dimension at all; the polite-vous pattern (a Late Latin innovation) is vōs's own direct descendant, unlike German's Sie, which solved the same politeness problem independently via a completely different pronoun (3rd-person plural, not 2nd)
Introduced in Chapter 22.

tuba, tubae
a trumpet
Introduced in Chapter 277.

tugurium, tugurīī
a hut, a shed
Introduced in Chapter 473.

tum
then, at that time
Introduced in Chapter 105.

tumeō, tumēre
to swell, be swollen
Introduced in Chapter 524.

tumultus, tumultūs
an uproar, a commotion
Introduced in Chapter 321.

tunc
then, at that time
Introduced in Chapter 291.

tunica, tunicae
a tunic
Introduced in Chapter 108.

turba, turbae
a crowd, a throng; an uproar
Introduced in Chapter 460.

turbidus, turbida, turbidum
turbulent, wild; cloudy, muddy (of water)
Introduced in Chapter 485.

turbō, turbinis
a spinning top; a whirlwind
Introduced in Chapter 540.

turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum
stormy, turbulent; disorderly
Introduced in Chapter 387.

turpis, turpe
ugly, shameful
Introduced in Chapter 151.

turris, turris
a tower
Introduced in Chapter 280.

tussiō, tussīre
to cough
Introduced in Chapter 525.

tussis, tussis
a cough
Introduced in Chapter 67.

tūtor, tūtōris
a guardian, a protector
Introduced in Chapter 325.

tūtus, tūta, tūtum
safe
Introduced in Chapter 147.

tuus, tua, tuum
your — and the pair of forms the tū / vōs lesson promised Introduced in Chapter 52.

tympanum, tympanī
a drum
Introduced in Chapter 193.

tyrannus, tyrannī
a tyrant, a despot
Introduced in Chapter 345.

ubi
where — the question the quōmodo lesson left half-finished Introduced in Chapter 52.

ulcus, ulceris
a sore, ulcer
Introduced in Chapter 524.

ulmus, ulmī
an elm tree
Introduced in Chapter 484.

ultrā
beyond
Introduced in Chapter 238.

umbilīcus, umbilīcī
navel; the knob of a book-roll
Introduced in Chapter 518.

umbra, umbrae
the shade or shadow — and the reason a little shade is called an umbrella
Introduced in Chapter 46.

umerus, umerī
the shoulder
Introduced in Chapter 64.

ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum
wet, damp
Introduced in Chapter 95.

unda, undae
a wave
Introduced in Chapter 130.

ūndecim — vīgintī
11-20, the source numbers themselves — including Latin's own genuine oddity, SUBTRACTIVE 18 and 19, which Spanish quietly regularized away
Introduced in Chapter 16.

undique
from all sides
Introduced in Chapter 264.

unguentum, unguentī
an ointment
Introduced in Chapter 205.

unguis, unguis
a fingernail, a claw
Introduced in Chapter 66.

unguō, unguere
to anoint, rub with oil
Introduced in Chapter 542.

ūnus duo trēs quattuor quīnque
one to five — the Roman originals that became every Romance number Introduced in Chapter 2.

urbānitās, urbānitātis
refinement, polished wit
Introduced in Chapter 506.

urbānus, urbāna, urbānum
polite, of the city
Introduced in Chapter 180.

urbs, urbis
a city
Introduced in Chapter 107.

urceus, urceī
a jug, pitcher
Introduced in Chapter 554.

urna, urnae
a water jar
Introduced in Chapter 141.

ūrō, ūrere
to burn; to scorch
Introduced in Chapter 318.

ursus, ursī
a bear
Introduced in Chapter 91.

usque
all the way, continuously
Introduced in Chapter 209.

ūsūra, ūsūrae
interest charged; use
Introduced in Chapter 419.

ut valēs?
how do you fare?
Introduced in Chapter 19.

uter, utra, utrum
which (of two)
Introduced in Chapter 161.

ūtilis, ūtile
useful
Introduced in Chapter 146.

utinam
if only Introduced in Chapter 265.

ūtor, ūtī
to use
Introduced in Chapter 235.

ūva, ūvae
a grape
Introduced in Chapter 80.

uxor, uxōris
a wife
Introduced in Chapter 71.

vacca, vaccae
a cow
Introduced in Chapter 134.

vacō, vacāre
to be free, have time (for)
Introduced in Chapter 538.

vacuus, vacua, vacuum
empty
Introduced in Chapter 96.

vadimōnium, vadimōniī
a promise to appear in court, bail
Introduced in Chapter 411.

vadum, vadī
a shallow, a shoal; a ford
Introduced in Chapter 443.

vagor, vagārī
to wander about, to roam
Introduced in Chapter 452.

valdē very
Introduced in Chapter 179.

valē / valēte
goodbye (lit. "be strong")
Introduced in Chapter 1.

valētūdō, valētūdinis
health
Introduced in Chapter 173.

validus, valida, validum
strong
Introduced in Chapter 152.

vallis, vallis
a valley
Introduced in Chapter 88.

vallum, vallī
a rampart
Introduced in Chapter 280.

vānitās, vānitātis
boastfulness, vanity; emptiness
Introduced in Chapter 507.

vappa, vappae
flat wine, wine gone off; a good-for-nothing
Introduced in Chapter 449.

vāpulō, vāpulāre
to be beaten, to get a thrashing
Introduced in Chapter 408.

vās, vāsis
a vessel, a container
Introduced in Chapter 123.

vāstō, vāstāre
to lay waste, to ravage
Introduced in Chapter 342.

vātēs, vātis
a seer, a prophet; a poet
Introduced in Chapter 348.

vāticinor, vāticinārī
to prophesy, to foretell
Introduced in Chapter 348.

vectīgal, vectīgālis
a tax, a toll
Introduced in Chapter 190.

vectūra, vectūrae
transport, carriage (of goods or people); the fare
Introduced in Chapter 438.

vehiculum, vehiculī
a vehicle
Introduced in Chapter 217.

vehō, vehere
to carry (by cart or ship)
Introduced in Chapter 156.

vēlificor, vēlificārī
to set sail, to sail
Introduced in Chapter 438.

vellus, velleris
a fleece
Introduced in Chapter 347.

vēlum, vēlī
a sail; a curtain
Introduced in Chapter 125.

velut
as, like
Introduced in Chapter 265.

vēna, vēnae
a vein
Introduced in Chapter 517.

vēnālis, vēnāle
for sale
Introduced in Chapter 164.

vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis
a hunt; a wild-beast show
Introduced in Chapter 336.

vēnditō, vēnditāre
to offer for sale, to try to sell
Introduced in Chapter 462.

venditor, venditōris
a seller
Introduced in Chapter 420.

vendō, vendere
to sell
Introduced in Chapter 76.

venēficus, venēficī
a poisoner; a sorcerer
Introduced in Chapter 307.

venēnum, venēnī
poison; a drug
Introduced in Chapter 307.

vēneō, vēnīre
to be sold, to go on sale
Introduced in Chapter 466.

veniō, venīre
"I come" — a Latin verb that really is the same inherited word as English come
Introduced in Chapter 37.

vēnor, vēnārī
to hunt
Introduced in Chapter 172.

venter, ventris
the belly
Introduced in Chapter 65.

ventilō, ventilāre
to winnow; to fan, to toss in the air
Introduced in Chapter 476.

ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum
windy
Introduced in Chapter 153.

ventus, ventī
the wind — and a true Germanic cousin, with the sound change that proves it Introduced in Chapter 45.

venustus, venusta, venustum charming
Introduced in Chapter 216.

vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems
the four seasons — and why Romance languages often skipped the plain noun for an adjective phrase instead
Introduced in Chapter 9.

verber, verberis
a lash, a blow; (plural) a beating
Introduced in Chapter 408.

verbum, verbī
a word
Introduced in Chapter 278.

verēcundia, verēcundiae
shyness, modesty
Introduced in Chapter 513.

verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum
shy, modest
Introduced in Chapter 180.

vereor, verērī
to respect; to fear
Introduced in Chapter 496.

vērisimilis, vērisimile
probable, like the truth
Introduced in Chapter 359.

vēritās, vēritātis
truth
Introduced in Chapter 189.

vermis, vermis
a worm
Introduced in Chapter 276.

verna, vernae
a home-born slave
Introduced in Chapter 530.

vērō indeed; but
Introduced in Chapter 210.

verrō, verrere
to sweep
Introduced in Chapter 552.

versiculus, versiculī
a little verse, a short line
Introduced in Chapter 549.

versus, versūs
a line of verse
Introduced in Chapter 246.

vertex, verticis
a whirlpool; the top
Introduced in Chapter 228.

vertō, vertere
to turn
Introduced in Chapter 231.

vērus, vēra, vērum
true, real
Introduced in Chapter 215.

vespa, vespae
a wasp
Introduced in Chapter 276.

vesper
evening — a genuine everyday classical word sharing a deep root with English west through the direction of sunset Introduced in Chapter 33.

vesperī
in the evening
Introduced in Chapter 295.

vestibulum, vestibulī
a forecourt, entrance court
Introduced in Chapter 553.

vestīgium, vestīgiī
a footprint, a track; a trace
Introduced in Chapter 426.

vestīgō, vestīgāre
to track, to trace; to search out
Introduced in Chapter 453.

vestīmentum, vestīmentī
a garment
Introduced in Chapter 225.

vestis, vestis
clothing, a garment
Introduced in Chapter 108.

vetō, vetāre
to forbid
Introduced in Chapter 198.

vetus, veteris
old
Introduced in Chapter 94.

vetustās, vetustātis
great age, antiquity
Introduced in Chapter 344.

vexillum, vexillī
a flag, a banner
Introduced in Chapter 254.

vexō, vexāre
to annoy, to harass
Introduced in Chapter 203.

viāticum, viāticī
travel money; provisions for a journey
Introduced in Chapter 427.

viātor, viātōris
a traveller
Introduced in Chapter 227.

vīcīnia, vīcīniae
a neighbourhood; the neighbours
Introduced in Chapter 458.

vīcīnus, vīcīnī
a neighbour
Introduced in Chapter 72.

victima, victimae
a sacrificial animal, a victim
Introduced in Chapter 334.

victōria, victōriae
victory
Introduced in Chapter 187.

vīcus, vīcī
a street, a village
Introduced in Chapter 116.

vidēlicet
evidently, clearly; namely
Introduced in Chapter 366.

videō, vidēre
"I see" — the widest root in this chapter, because seeing and knowing were once one idea
Introduced in Chapter 37.

videor, vidērī
to seem
Introduced in Chapter 232.

vidua, viduae
a widow
Introduced in Chapter 220.

vigil, vigilis
wakeful, watchful
Introduced in Chapter 216.

vigilō, vigilāre
to stay awake
Introduced in Chapter 158.

vīgintī annōs nātus sum
"I am twenty years old" — literally "I am, having been born, twenty years [so far]"; NEITHER Romance's "have" NOR Germanic's "be my years" — Latin used a THIRD construction, later abandoned
Introduced in Chapter 14.

vīlica, vīlicae
a farm housekeeper
Introduced in Chapter 531.

vīlicus, vīlicī
a farm manager
Introduced in Chapter 188.

vīlitās, vīlitātis
cheapness, low prices
Introduced in Chapter 466.

vīlla, vīllae
a farmhouse, a country house
Introduced in Chapter 108.

vincō, vincere
to win, to defeat
Introduced in Chapter 157.

vinculum, vinculī
a chain, a bond
Introduced in Chapter 312.

vindēmia, vindēmiae
the grape harvest, the vintage
Introduced in Chapter 479.

vindicō, vindicāre
to claim; to avenge, to punish Introduced in Chapter 416.

vindicta, vindictae
the rod of freedom (in freeing a slave); vengeance
Introduced in Chapter 532.

viola, violae
a violet
Introduced in Chapter 250.

violō, violāre
to violate, to break; to wrong Introduced in Chapter 398.

vir, virī
a man
Introduced in Chapter 72.

viridis, flāvus
green and yellow — viridis is the direct, kept source of Spanish's verde; flāvus is Latin's own real word for yellow, and almost NO Romance language kept it as their everyday color word — most (French, Italian, Romanian) converged on a DIFFERENT shared Latin word instead Introduced in Chapter 18.

virtūs, virtūtis
courage, virtue
Introduced in Chapter 262.

vīsitō, vīsitāre
to visit
Introduced in Chapter 154.

vīsus, vīsūs
sight, vision
Introduced in Chapter 519.

vītis, vītis
a vine
Introduced in Chapter 250.

vitium, vitiī
a fault, a defect; a vice
Introduced in Chapter 408.

vītō, vītāre
to avoid
Introduced in Chapter 199.

vitricus, vitricī
a stepfather
Introduced in Chapter 529.

vitrum, vitrī
glass
Introduced in Chapter 249.

vitulus, vitulī
a calf
Introduced in Chapter 224.

vituperō, vituperāre
to blame, scold
Introduced in Chapter 512.

vīvō, vīvere
to live
Introduced in Chapter 78.

vīvus, vīva, vīvum
alive
Introduced in Chapter 145.

vix hardly
Introduced in Chapter 211.

vocō, vocāre
to call
Introduced in Chapter 76.

volitō, volitāre
to fly about
Introduced in Chapter 200.

volō, velle
I want — and the root inside voluntary, benevolent and will itself
Introduced in Chapter 49.

volūmen, volūminis
a book-roll
Introduced in Chapter 278.

voluntās, voluntātis
a wish, the will
Introduced in Chapter 111.

volup est convēnisse
"it is a pleasure to have met you" — an attested Plautine phrase that can fill a conversational slot for which Classical Latin has no single fixed idiom
Introduced in Chapter 21.

voluptās, voluptātis
pleasure, enjoyment
Introduced in Chapter 499.

vōmer, vōmeris
a ploughshare
Introduced in Chapter 474.

vomō, vomere
to vomit, be sick
Introduced in Chapter 525.

vorāgō, vorāginis
a chasm, an abyss; a whirlpool
Introduced in Chapter 483.

vōtum, vōtī
a vow; a wish
Introduced in Chapter 334.

voveō, vovēre
to vow, to promise solemnly
Introduced in Chapter 334.

vōx, vōcis
a voice
Introduced in Chapter 174.

vulgō, vulgāre
to spread abroad, to make public
Introduced in Chapter 301.

vulnus, vulneris
a wound
Introduced in Chapter 205.

vulpēs, vulpis
a fox
Introduced in Chapter 133.

vultus, vultūs
face, expression
Introduced in Chapter 515.

zōna, zōnae
a belt
Introduced in Chapter 126.

Review Questions

Try these without looking ahead. Every prompt comes from the same canonical lesson data as its chapter. Answers begin in the next section.

Chapter 1

1.1 salvē — look, hide, write, check
Cover the model and write the one-person Latin greeting meaning be well. Then uncover it and check every letter and the macron.

1.2 Hear the greeting; write it independently
From the cue SAL-weh, meaning be well to one person, write the Latin greeting with its long-vowel mark.

1.3 Chapter 1 — Practice and Recall
Which Latin root links vale to English valid and value?

Chapter 19

19.1 Practice — open, check, answer, close
Someone has just asked you ut vales? Type the one-word Latin answer.

Chapter 21

21.1 Practice — two meetings, each with the right words
You have been asked quid tibi nomen est? Type the first three Latin words of your reply.

Chapter 33

33.1 Practice — sort the evening words, then read the Latin
French soir and Italian sera descend from which Latin word?

Chapter 36

36.1 Practice — one whole day, in the words you have
You meet one person at three in the afternoon and want words a Roman would have used. Type them.

Chapter 58

58.1 (reading) — six words, each one already a claim
Which word is the teacher?

58.2 (reading) — six lines, two of them one word
Which line would you read as you leave?

58.3 (reading) — the first passage
Why does he read again?

Chapter 59

59.1 aqua -> aquam — when the action reaches the thing
Complete the sentence meaning I drink water: ____ bibo.

59.2 amīcus -> amīcum — a second road to the same object marker
Complete the sentence meaning I read the book: ____ lego.

59.3 ad scholam, in scholā, domum — toward, at, and homeward
Which two Latin words mean toward school?

59.4 (reading) — a whole meeting, one turn at a time
What does one speaker write after midday?

59.5 (reading) — diēs meus, my day
Which book is not taken, and why?

Chapter 281

281.1 pluēbat … vēnit — the scene and the event
In 'Pluebat. Subito amicus venit.', which verb is the event?

Chapter 282

282.1 (reading) — a rainy day, told in both pasts
Why did Marcus not want to come at first?

Chapter 285

285.1 quā viā — asking the way
Ask politely which way to the baths.

Chapter 290

290.1 sī hīc essēs — if it were so
Build 'I would have' from habere.

Answer Key

The first response is the canonical display answer. When a question accepts other authored forms, they appear underneath.

Chapter 1

1.1 salvē — look, hide, write, check
Answer: salvē
1.2 Hear the greeting; write it independently
Answer: salvē
1.3 Chapter 1 — Practice and Recall
Answer: valere
Also accepted: valēre

Chapter 19

19.1 Practice — open, check, answer, close
Answer: valeo
Also accepted: valeō

Chapter 21

21.1 Practice — two meetings, each with the right words
Answer: mihi nomen est
Also accepted: mihi nōmen est

Chapter 33

33.1 Practice — sort the evening words, then read the Latin
Answer: serus
Also accepted: sērus; serus (late)

Chapter 36

36.1 Practice — one whole day, in the words you have Answer: salve
Also accepted: salvē

Chapter 58

58.1 (reading) — six words, each one already a claim
Answer: magister
Also accepted: the teacher

58.2 (reading) — six lines, two of them one word
Answer: vale
Also accepted: Valē; Valē!; farewell

58.3 (reading) — the first passage
Answer: because the book is good
Also accepted: quia liber bonus est; the book is good

Chapter 59

59.1 aqua -> aquam — when the action reaches the thing
Answer: aquam

59.2 amīcus -> amīcum — a second road to the same object marker
Answer: librum

59.3 ad scholam, in scholā, domum — toward, at, and homeward
Answer: ad scholam

59.4 (reading) — a whole meeting, one turn at a time
Answer: a letter
Also accepted: epistulam; an epistle; letter

59.5 (reading) — diēs meus, my day
Answer: the second book, because it is bad
Also accepted: secundum librum, quia secundus liber malus est; the second because it is bad

Chapter 281

281.1 pluēbat … vēnit — the scene and the event
Answer: venit
Also accepted: vēnit; the perfect venit

Chapter 282

282.1 (reading) — a rainy day, told in both pasts
Answer: because he was tired
Also accepted: quia fessus erat; he was tired

Chapter 285

285.1 quā viā — asking the way
Answer: quaeso dic mihi qua via ad thermas
Also accepted: qua via ad thermas; quaeso qua via ad thermas

Chapter 290

290.1 sī hīc essēs — if it were so
Answer: haberem
Also accepted: habērem

Index

Look up an English meaning, a dedicated language topic, or a chapter topic. Each linked reference opens the chapter where the material is introduced; the focus labels name only explicitly typed lesson sections.

0–9

11-20, the source numbers themselves — including Latin's own genuine oddity, SUBTRACTIVE 18 and 19, which Spanish quietly regularized away ūndecim — vīgintī
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 16, p. 61

A

a baby, an infant īnfāns, īnfantis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 361
a baker pistor, pistōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 765
a bakery, a mill pistrīnum, pistrīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 647
a baking pot, a small oven clībanus, clībanī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 352, p. 2099
a ball pila, pilae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 445
a band of musicians; harmony symphōnia, symphōniae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 545, p. 3311
a banker argentārius, argentāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 272, p. 1599
a banquet convīvium, convīviī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1483
a barber tōnsor, tōnsōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 765

a barber's shop tōnstrīna, tōnstrīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 467, p. 2821
a bath, a bathhouse balneum, balneī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 629
a bath-keeper balneātor, balneātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 541, p. 3285
a battering ram; a ram ariēs, arietis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 341, p. 2031
a battle proelium, proeliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 339, p. 2019
a battle line; a sharp edge aciēs, aciēī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 339, p. 2019
a beam, a timber; (in poetry) a ship trabs, trabis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 457, p. 2759
a bean faba, fabae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 703
a bear ursus, ursī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 483
a beard barba, barbae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 325
a beast, a wild animal bēstia, bēstiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 336, p. 1999
a beast of burden, a draught animal iūmentum, iūmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 433, p. 2609
a beat, pulse pulsus, pulsūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 517, p. 3135
a bed, a couch lectus, lectī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 427
a bedbug cīmex, cīmicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 447, p. 2697
a bedroom cubiculum, cubiculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 427
a bee apis, apis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 735
a beech tree fāgus, fāgī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 484, p. 2927
a beginning initium, initiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 296, p. 1749
a bell tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 797
a belt zōna, zōnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 697
a bench scamnum, scamnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 777

a bench, low seat subsellium, subsellī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 554, p. 3367
a bend, a turn (in a road or river) flexus, flexūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 424, p. 2553
a betrothal; an engagement party spōnsālia, spōnsālium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 327, p. 1943
a bill (put to the people); a request rogātiō, rogātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 410, p. 2463
a billow, a wave; a surge flūctus, flūctūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 443, p. 2671
a billy goat caper, caprī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1305
a bird avis, avis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 483
a birth; offspring partus, partūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 323, p. 1919
a birthday diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1125
a blacksmith, an ironworker ferrārius, ferrāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 469, p. 2833
a blanket, a bedspread strāgulum, strāgulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 661
a blanket, a coverlet lōdīx, lōdīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 446, p. 2689
a block of flats, an apartment house; an island īnsula, īnsulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 457, p. 2759
a blood relative cognātus, cognātī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1087
a blow, a wound plāga, plāgae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 314, p. 1861
a bolt, a bar; a barrier claustrum, claustrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 304, p. 1799
a bone os, ossis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 759
a book box capsa, capsae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 551, p. 3347
a book (of bound pages) cōdex, cōdicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 685
a book-roll volūmen, volūminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 278, p. 1637
a bookseller bibliopōla, bibliopōlae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 550, p. 3341
a bow; an arch arcus, arcūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 277, p. 1631

a bowl, a deep dish catīnus, catīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 667
a box, a chest cista, cistae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 661
a boy; a child; a slave boy puer, puerī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 324, p. 1925
a bracelet armilla, armillae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1113
a branch rāmus, rāmī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 715
a bread basket, a reed basket canistrum, canistrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 463, p. 2797
a breastplate, a cuirass lōrīca, lōrīcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 340, p. 2025
a breeze aura, aurae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1297
a bridal veil flammeum, flammeī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 328, p. 1949
a bride, a married woman nūpta, nūptae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 327, p. 1943
a bride-to-be, a fiancée spōnsa, spōnsae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 327, p. 1943
a bridge pōns, pontis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 585
a bridle, a bit frēnum, frēnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 431, p. 2597
a broad street, a square platēa, platēae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1427
a broom scōpae, scōpārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 552, p. 3353
a building aedificium, aedificiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 635
a bull taurus, taurī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 741
a butcher lanius, laniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 272, p. 1599
a butterfly pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 735
a buyer emptor, emptōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 420, p. 2525
a cake lībum, lībī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1125
a calf vitulus, vitulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1305

a camel camēlus, camēlī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 747
a candidate candidātus, candidātī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 384, p. 2301
a candle candēla, candēlae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 667
a candlestick candēlābrum, candēlābrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1477
a cane (for punishing pupils); a fennel stalk ferula, ferulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 408, p. 2451
a carpenter, a worker in wood lignārius, lignāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 377, p. 2257
a carpet, a rug tapēte, tapētis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 777
a cart pole, the shaft of a wagon or plough tēmō, tēmōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 430, p. 2589
a cave spēlunca, spēluncae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 465
a censor cēnsor, cēnsōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 383, p. 2295
a centurion centuriō, centuriōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 338, p. 2011
a chain catēna, catēnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1471
a chain, a bond vinculum, vinculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 312, p. 1849
a chair, a seat sella, sellae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 427
a chair with a back cathedra, cathedrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 777
a chance, the means to do something facultās, facultātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 599
a charge, a crime crīmen, crīminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1267
a chariot currus, currūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1261
a charioteer aurīga, aurīgae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 335, p. 1993
a chasm, an abyss; a whirlpool vorāgō, vorāginis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 483, p. 2921
a cheek gena, genae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 331
a cherry cerasum, cerasī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 279, p. 1643

a chest, a box arca, arcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 439
a chicken, a young animal pullus, pullī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 703
a cithara, concert lyre cithara, citharae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 544, p. 3303
a citizen cīvis, cīvis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 379
a citizen of a free town; a fellow townsman mūniceps, mūnicipis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 388, p. 2325
a city urbs, urbis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 579
a clan, family line; a people gēns, gentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 528, p. 3203
a clerk scrība, scrībae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 272, p. 1599
a client, a dependant cliēns, clientis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 381, p. 2283
a cliff, a rock face rūpēs, rūpis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 480, p. 2903
a cloak pallium, palliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 697
a close bond, tie necessitūdō, necessitūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 533, p. 3235
a close friend familiāris, familiāris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 533, p. 3235
a cloud nūbēs, nūbis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 471
a club clāva, clāvae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1471
a coachman, the driver of a four-wheeled carriage raedārius, raedāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 427, p. 2571
a coast, an edge ōra, ōrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 459
a cobbler's shop sūtrīna, sūtrīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 467, p. 2821
a cockerel gallus, gallī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 753
a cohort; an enclosure cohors, cohortis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 338, p. 2011
a coin nummus, nummī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 679
a collapse, a fall; ruins ruīna, ruīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 313, p. 1855

a colonnade, a covered walk, a portico porticus, porticūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 459, p. 2771
a colonnaded garden peristylium, peristyliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1063
a colony, a settlement colōnia, colōniae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 388, p. 2325
a column columna, columnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 280, p. 1649
a comb pecten, pectinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 783
a companion, a comrade; a club member sodālis, sodālis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 388, p. 2325
a complaint querēla, querēlae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 450, p. 2715
a conclusion; the close of a speech cōnclūsiō, cōnclūsiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 364, p. 2175
a condition, terms; a situation condiciō, condiciōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 390, p. 2339
a confluence, the place where two rivers meet cōnfluēns, cōnfluentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 482, p. 2915
a conspiracy coniūrātiō, coniūrātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 307, p. 1819
a constellation, a star sīdus, sīderis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1099
a consul cōnsul, cōnsulis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1433
a contest, a struggle certāmen, certāminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 337, p. 2005
a conviction, a condemnation damnātiō, damnātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 413, p. 2483
a cook coquus, coquī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 379
a cooking pot caccabus, caccabī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 353, p. 2105
a cooking pot ōlla, ōllae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 667
a copyist, a scribe; a bookseller librārius, librāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 381, p. 2283
a corner angulus, angulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 635
a cottage, a small house casa, casae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 473, p. 2859
a cough tussis, tussis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 337

a counting board; a sideboard abacus, abacī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 405, p. 2433
a course, a dish; a tray ferculum, ferculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 356, p. 2125
a cousin cōnsōbrīnus, cōnsōbrīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 528, p. 3203
a covered carriage; a two-wheeled coach carpentum, carpentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 429, p. 2583
a cow vacca, vaccae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 747
a crab cancer, cancrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1107 a cradle cūnae, cūnārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 324, p. 1925
a craftsman, a smith faber, fabrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 765
a craftsman, a worker opifex, opificis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 376, p. 2251
a crag, a cliff scopulus, scopulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1099
a creditor, a lender crēditor, crēditōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 418, p. 2513
a crime, a wicked deed scelus, sceleris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 305, p. 1805
a crime against heaven, a wicked thing nefās
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 414, p. 2489
a crop, a cornfield seges, segetis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1297
a crossroads, a place where roads meet compitum, compitī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 424, p. 2553
a crowd, a throng; an uproar turba, turbae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 460, p. 2777
a crown, a garland corōna, corōnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 445
a cucumber cucumis, cucumeris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 703
a cup calix, calicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 791
a cup pōculum, pōculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 433
a cupboard armārium, armāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 771
a cushion, a pillow pulvīnus, pulvīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 661

a custom, a way; (plural) character, morals mōs, mōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 386, p. 2313
a dagger pugiō, pugiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 306, p. 1811
a darling, pet; delight dēliciae, dēliciārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 536, p. 3253
a daughter fīlia, fīliae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 355
a daughter-in-law nurus, nurūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1447
a dead calm (at sea) malacia, malaciae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 444, p. 2677
a debt dēbitum, dēbitī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 274, p. 1613
a debtor dēbitor, dēbitōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 418, p. 2513
a deceit, a trick fallācia, fallāciae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 399, p. 2395
a decree, a decision dēcrētum, dēcrētī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 409, p. 2457
a deed; a bad deed facinus, facinoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 305, p. 1805
a deer, a stag cervus, cervī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 489
a defeat, a disaster clādēs, clādis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 342, p. 2037
a defence dēfēnsiō, dēfēnsiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 412, p. 2475
a defendant reus, reī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1267
a deified emperor; a god dīvus, dīvī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 346, p. 2061
a delay mora, morae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1383
a denarius (silver coin) dēnārius, dēnāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1093
a departure, a setting out profectiō, profectiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 428, p. 2577
a desire, eagerness cupiditās, cupiditātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 611
a detour, a way round; a circuit circuitus, circuitūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 454, p. 2739
a dice-box fritillus, fritillī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 539, p. 3273

a dictator dictātor, dictātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 345, p. 2055
a difference; a crisis discrīmen, discrīminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1285
a dining room; a dining couch triclīnium, triclīniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 356, p. 2125
a dirge, a funeral song nēnia, nēniae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 331, p. 1969
a disaster, a misfortune calamitās, calamitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 315, p. 1869
a discussion, a debate disputātiō, disputātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 368, p. 2201
a disgraceful act, a scandal flāgitium, flāgitiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 414, p. 2489
a dish, a pan patina, patinae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 667
a dispute, a controversy contrōversia, contrōversiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 358, p. 2139
a distaff (for spinning) colus, colī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 472, p. 2853
a ditch fossa, fossae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 280, p. 1649
a divorce; a separation dīvortium, dīvortiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 328, p. 1949
a dockyard, a place where ships are kept nāvāle, nāvālis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 441, p. 2659
a doll; a little girl pūpa, pūpae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 540, p. 3279
a dolphin delphīnus, delphīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 747
a donkey asinus, asinī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 489
a door bolt pessulus, pessulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 553, p. 3361
a doorkeeper iānitor, iānitōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 531, p. 3223
a dove, a pigeon columba, columbae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 729
a downpour, a heavy shower of rain imber, imbris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 485, p. 2933
a drag shoe, a brake (for a wheel) sufflāmen, sufflāminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 430, p. 2589
a draught, drink; a potion pōtiō, pōtiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 526, p. 3191

a dream somnium, somniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1377
a drill, a borer, an auger terebra, terebrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 470, p. 2839
a drinker, a heavy drinker pōtor, pōtōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 448, p. 2703
a drug, a medicine medicāmentum, medicāmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1185
a drum tympanum, tympanī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1113
a duck anas, anatis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 729
a duty officium, officiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1453
a family, a household familia, familiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 355
a fare, passage money for a ship naulum, naulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 286, p. 1689
a farm, an estate; the bottom fundus, fundī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 473, p. 2859
a farm housekeeper vīlica, vīlicae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 531, p. 3223
a farm manager vīlicus, vīlicī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1081
a farmer agricola, agricolae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 379
a farmhouse, a country house vīlla, vīllae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 585
a father-in-law socer, socerī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1447
a fault, a defect; a vice vitium, vitiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 408, p. 2451
a feast, a banquet epulae, epulārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 333, p. 1981
a felt cap pilleus, pilleī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 532, p. 3229
a ferryman, a boatman; a customs officer portitor, portitōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 438, p. 2639
a fever febris, febris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 337
a field ager, agrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 379
a fig, a fig tree fīcus, fīcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 421

a file (tool); polishing līma, līmae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 470, p. 2839
a finger digitus, digitī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 313
a fingernail, a claw unguis, unguis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 331
a fir tree; fir wood abiēs, abietis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 484, p. 2927
a fire, a blaze incendium, incendiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 317, p. 1881
a fire bucket hama, hamae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 319, p. 1893
a fire pump; a siphon sīphō, sīphōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 319, p. 1893
a firebrand, a burning log torris, torris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 317, p. 1881
a first name praenōmen, praenōminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 325, p. 1931
a first principle, an element; (plural) the ABC elementum, elementī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 404, p. 2425
a fisherman piscātor, piscātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 771
a fishmonger piscārius, piscāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 463, p. 2797
a flag, a banner vexillum, vexillī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1489
a flask, a bottle lagoena, lagoenae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 679
a flat cake placenta, placentae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 709
a flea pūlex, pūlicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 276, p. 1625
a fleece vellus, velleris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 347, p. 2069
a flint; a hard paving stone silex, silicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 425, p. 2559
a flock, a herd; a band of people grex, gregis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 477, p. 2883
a floor pavīmentum, pavīmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 647
a flower flōs, flōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 453
a flute, a pipe tībia, tībiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 797

a fly musca, muscae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 735
a fold of a garment; a bay sinus, sinūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1311
a food market macellum, macellī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 641
a foot soldier pedes, peditis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 340, p. 2025
a footman, attendant pedisequus, pedisequī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 530, p. 3217
a footpath; a narrow way, a lane sēmita, sēmitae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 423, p. 2547
a footprint, a track; a trace vestīgium, vestīgiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 426, p. 2565
a forecourt, entrance court vestibulum, vestibulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 553, p. 3361
a forest, a wood silva, silvae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 453
a forge, a furnace; a fireplace camīnus, camīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 469, p. 2833
a fork, a pitchfork furca, furcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 797
a fork in the road, a place where two roads meet bivium, biviī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 424, p. 2553
a forum, a market square forum, forī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 579
a foundation fundāmentum, fundāmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1063
a founder conditor, conditōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 344, p. 2049
a four-horse chariot quadrīgae, quadrīgārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 335, p. 1993
a fox vulpēs, vulpis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 741
a freedman lībertus, lībertī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1279
a freedman (by rank) lībertīnus, lībertīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 532, p. 3229
a friend (a woman) amīca, amīcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 771
a frog rāna, rānae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 741
a fruit, an apple pōmum, pōmī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 697

a frying pan sartāgō, sartāginis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1477
a fuller, a cleaner of cloth fullō, fullōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 377, p. 2257
a funeral; death fūnus, fūneris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 330, p. 1961
a funeral procession, funeral rites exsequiae, exsequiārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 330, p. 1961
a funeral pyre rogus, rogī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 330, p. 1961
a furnace, a kiln fornāx, fornācis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1261
a furrier, a worker in skins pelliō, pelliōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 467, p. 2821
a furrow; a trench sulcus, sulcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 474, p. 2865
a gaming die; a token tessera, tesserae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1113
a gap, an interval intervallum, intervallī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 296, p. 1749
a garment vestīmentum, vestīmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1311
a gem; a bud gemma, gemmae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1311
a general, an emperor imperātor, imperātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1433
a generation, a century saeculum, saeculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1199
a giant gigās, gigantis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 347, p. 2069
a gift dōnum, dōnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 536, p. 3253
a girl puella, puellae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 373
a gladiator gladiātor, gladiātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 336, p. 1999
a gnat, a mosquito culex, culicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 276, p. 1625
a goat capra, caprae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 477
a god deus, deī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 346, p. 2061
a goddess dea, deae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1483

a goldsmith aurifex, aurificis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 377, p. 2257
a goose ānser, ānseris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 735
a granary, a barn, a storehouse horreum, horreī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 476, p. 2877
a granddaughter neptis, neptis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 273, p. 1607
a grandfather avus, avī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 355
a grandmother avia, aviae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 355
a grandson nepōs, nepōtis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 273, p. 1607
a grape ūva, ūvae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 415
a gridiron, a grill crāticula, crāticulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 354, p. 2111
a groan, moan gemitus, gemitūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 491, p. 2973
a grove nemus, nemoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1131
a guard, a keeper custōs, custōdis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 322, p. 1911
a guardian, a protector tūtor, tūtōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 325, p. 1931
a guess, a conjecture; an inference coniectūra, coniectūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 362, p. 2163
a guest; a host hospes, hospitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 367
a habit, a custom cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1193
a hair, the hair capillus, capillī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 325
a hall of justice basilica, basilicae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 270, p. 1587
a ham perna, pernae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1125
a hammer malleus, malleī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 673
a hand-ball game harpastum, harpastī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 540, p. 3279
a harbour, a port portus, portūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 441, p. 2659

a hare lepus, leporis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 741
a hawker, a pedlar; a shop agent īnstitor, īnstitōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 462, p. 2789
a head cold gravēdō, gravēdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1185
a headland, a promontory prōmunturium, prōmunturiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 441, p. 2659
a helmet galea, galeae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 277, p. 1631
a helmsman gubernātor, gubernātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1069
a hen gallīna, gallīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 489
a herald, a crier praecō, praecōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 300, p. 1775
a herd (of cattle or horses) armentum, armentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 477, p. 2883
a hero, a demigod hērōs, hērōis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 347, p. 2069
a hide, skin pellis, pellis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 517, p. 3135
a hill collis, collis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 465
a hinge cardō, cardinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 553, p. 3361
a hired worker; a mercenary mercēnārius, mercēnāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 379, p. 2269
a home-born slave verna, vernae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 530, p. 3217
a home, dwelling domicilium, domiciliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 552, p. 3353
a homeland patria, patriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 271, p. 1593
a hoop trochus, trochī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 540, p. 3279
a horse equus, equī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 477
a horseman, a cavalryman; a knight eques, equitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 340, p. 2025
a hot-drinks bar, a tavern selling warm drinks thermopōlium, thermopōliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 461, p. 2783
a hot temper, irritability īrācundia, īrācundiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 493, p. 2985

a household servant, an attendant famulus, famulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 380, p. 2275
a hundred centum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 573
a hunt; a wild-beast show vēnātiō, vēnātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 336, p. 1999
a husband marītus, marītī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 361
a husband or wife, a spouse coniūnx, coniugis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 273, p. 1607
a hut, a shed tugurium, tugurii
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 473, p. 2859
a jagged rock, a crag cautēs, cautis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 480, p. 2903
a joke, jest iocus, iocī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 502, p. 3041
a journey; a route, a way iter, itineris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 285, p. 1683
a judge; a juror iūdex, iūdicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 308, p. 1825
a jug, pitcher urceus, urceī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 554, p. 3367
a kidney rēn, rēnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 987
a kindness, a favour beneficium, beneficiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1453
a kindness, service; merit meritum, meritī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 512, p. 3103
a king rēx, rēgis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 345, p. 2055
a kingdom rēgnum, rēgnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1433
a kiss ōsculum, ōsculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 534, p. 3241
a kiss on the lips suāvium, suāviī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 534, p. 3241
a kitchen culīna, culīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 433
a knee genū, genūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 319
a knife culter, cultrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 433
a knucklebone; an ankle tālus, tālī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1113

a labourer, a workman operārius, operāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 376, p. 2251
a ladder, stairs scālae, scālārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 673
a lair, a resting place cubīle, cubīlis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1323
a lake lacus, lacūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 459
a lamb agnus, agnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1305
a lamp lucerna, lucernae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 433
a land surveyor agrīmēnsor, agrīmēnsōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 381, p. 2283
a lantern lanterna, lanternae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 777
a lash, a blow; (plural) a beating verber, verberis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 408, p. 2451
a lathe tornus, tornī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 471, p. 2847
a latrine, a privy, a lavatory lātrīna, lātrīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 458, p. 2765
a laugh rīsus, rīsūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 995
a laurel laurus, laurī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1465
a law lēx, lēgis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 308, p. 1825
a lawsuit, a dispute līs, lītis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 411, p. 2469
a leader dux, ducis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1075
a leader, one who leads the way; a commander ductor, ductōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 453, p. 2733
a leaf folium, foliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 453
a leather strap, a thong; (plural) reins lōrum, lōrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 431, p. 2597
a leek porrum, porrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 279, p. 1643
a leg, a shin crūs, crūris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 331
a legal expert, a jurist iūriscōnsultus, iūriscōnsultī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 411, p. 2469

a legion legiō, legiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 338, p. 2011
a lesson, a proof; a warning example documentum, documentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 361, p. 2157
a letter — a Greek word Rome borrowed, and the thing Cicero wrote in his letters epistula, epistulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 241
A letter about a journey
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 290, p. 1713
a letter-carrier, a courier tabellārius, tabellāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 300, p. 1775
a letter of the alphabet littera, litterae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 278, p. 1637
a library bibliothēca, bibliothēcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 641
a lie mendācium, mendāciī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1087
a light gig, a fast two-wheeled cart cisium, cisiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 429, p. 2583
a lighthouse pharus, pharī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 441, p. 2659
a likeness, effigy effigiēs, effigiēī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 547, p. 3323
a lily līlium, līliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 709
a limb; a member membrum, membrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 516, p. 3129
a line of verse versus, versūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1439
a linen cloth, a towel linteum, linteī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 791
a lion leō, leōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 483
a lip labrum, labrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 753
a listener, hearer audītor, audītōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 549, p. 3335
a litter-bearer lectīcārius, lectīcāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 531, p. 3223
a litter (carried chair) lectīca, lectīcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1261
a little bed, a small couch lectulus, lectulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 446, p. 2689
a little boat, a small ship nāvicula, nāviculae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 435, p. 2621

a little daughter fīliola, fīliolae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 529, p. 3211
a little verse, a short line versiculus, versiculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 549, p. 3335
a little while ago; for a long time dūdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 295, p. 1743
a lizard lacerta, lacertae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1305
a load, a burden onus, oneris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 389, p. 2333
a lodging house dēversōrium, dēversōriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1323
a long dress stola, stolae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 691
a longing dēsīderium, dēsīderiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 611
a lover amāns, amantis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 535, p. 3247
a loving kiss bāsium, bāsiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 534, p. 3241
a lung pulmō, pulmōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 987
a lyre lyra, lyrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 797
a lyre-player fidicen, fidicinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 544, p. 3303
a maidservant ancilla, ancillae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1279
a man vir, virī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 367
a manger, a crib; a stall praesēpe, praesēpis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 434, p. 2615
a market, a fair mercātus, mercātūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1069
a married woman, a lady of the house mātrōna, mātrōnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 328, p. 1949
a marsh palūs, palūdis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1131
a mason, a builder in stone caementārius, caementāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 377, p. 2257
a master (of slaves) erus, erī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 530, p. 3217
a mat, a rush mat; a covering teges, tegetis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 446, p. 2689

a matron of honour prōnuba, prōnubae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 328, p. 1949
a mattress culcita, culcitae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1311
a meadow prātum, prātī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1131
a measure mēnsūra, mēnsūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1069
a memorial, a monument monumentum, monumentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 331, p. 1969
a merchant mercātor, mercātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 379
a messenger; news nūntius, nūntiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1273
a midwife obstetrīx, obstetrīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 323, p. 1919
a milestone mīliārium, mīliāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 653
a military camp castra, castrōrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 629
a millstone; a mill; salted meal mola, molae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 352, p. 2099
a mime dancer pantomīmus, pantomīmī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 546, p. 3317
a mirror speculum, speculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 439
a mistake, a blemish (in writing) mendum, mendī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 408, p. 2451
a mistress, the lady of the house domina, dominae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 771
a moment; weight, importance mōmentum, mōmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 296, p. 1749
a money bag marsuppium, marsuppiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1489
a money-changer, a banker at a table nummulārius, nummulāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 465, p. 2809
a moneylender fēnerātor, fēnerātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 419, p. 2519
a monkey sīmia, sīmiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 747
a monster; a portent mōnstrum, mōnstrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 347, p. 2069
a month mēnsis, mēnsis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 555

a mood, state of mind affectus, affectūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 501, p. 3035
a mortar (a bowl for pounding) mortārium, mortāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 351, p. 2093
a mother-in-law socrus, socrūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1447
a mother's brother, an uncle avunculus, avunculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1087
a mother's sister, an aunt mātertera, māterterae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1087
a mountain mōns, montis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 453
a mountain track; a rough path made by cattle callis, callis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 423, p. 2547
a mouse mūs, mūris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 489
a movement; a stirring (of the mind); a disturbance mōtus, mōtūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 375, p. 2245
a mugger, a street thug grassātor, grassātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 303, p. 1793
a mule mūlus, mūlī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 747
a muleteer, a mule driver mūliō, mūliōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 434, p. 2615
a murderer, a killer homicīda, homicīdae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 306, p. 1811
a nag, a pack horse caballus, caballī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 433, p. 2609
a nail (to hammer) clāvus, clāvī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 673
a name nōmen, nōminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 278, p. 1637
a napkin, a cloth mappa, mappae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 661
a narrative, a telling nārrātiō, nārrātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 299, p. 1769
a necklace monīle, monīlis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1113
a needle acus, acūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 783
a neighbour vīcīnus, vīcīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 367
a neighbourhood; the neighbours vīcīnia, vīcīniae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 458, p. 2765

a newcomer advena, advenae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1279
a notice, a label; a title titulus, titulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 933
A Notice, an Inscription, a Price, For Sale, Goods
chapter topic; Chapter 164, p. 933
a nurse, a wet nurse nūtrīx, nūtrīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 323, p. 1919
a nut nux, nucis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 421
a nymph nympha, nymphae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 347, p. 2069
a pace passus, passūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1267
a pack, a bundle sarcina, sarcinae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1489
a pack saddle (for an ass or mule) clītellae, clītellārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 433, p. 2609
a pact, an agreement pactum, pactī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 397, p. 2383
a page pāgina, pāginae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 278, p. 1637
a paint, a colour, a pigment pigmentum, pigmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 468, p. 2827
a paintbrush, a fine brush pēnicillus, pēnicillī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 468, p. 2827
a painter pictor, pictōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1439
a pair of bellows; a leather bag follis, follis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 469, p. 2833
a pair of scales, a balance trutina, trutinae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 464, p. 2803
a parent parēns, parentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 273, p. 1607
a partnership, an alliance; society societās, societātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 386, p. 2313
a pasture, grazing land pāscuum, pāscuī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 477, p. 2883
a patron; a defending counsel patrōnus, patrōnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 309, p. 1831
a pea pīsum, pīsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 703
a peacock pāvō, pāvōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1107

a peak, a tip cacūmen, cacūminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1329
a pear pirum, pirī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 421
a pebble, a counter; a reckoning calculus, calculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 405, p. 2433
a peck (a measure of grain) modius, modiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 465, p. 2809
a peninsula paenīnsula, paenīnsulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 444, p. 2677
a people, a nation populus, populī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 271, p. 1593
a pestle pistillum, pistillī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 351, p. 2093
a picture, a painting pictūra, pictūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 685
a piece in a board game; a robber latrunculus, latrunculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 539, p. 3273
a pig porcus, porcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 477
a pillow, a bolster cervīcal, cervīcālis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 446, p. 2689
a pine pīnus, pīnūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1465
a pint (a sixth of a larger measure) sextārius, sextāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 465, p. 2809
a place locus, locī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 623
a plain, an open field campus, campī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 471
a plain, level ground plānitiēs, plānitiēī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 481, p. 2909
a plaited basket, a hamper sporta, sportae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 463, p. 2797
a plan, a purpose, an aim prōpositum, prōpositī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 393, p. 2357
a plan; advice cōnsilium, cōnsiliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 927
a plane (a carpenter's tool) runcīna, runcīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 470, p. 2839
a plaster, a dressing emplastrum, emplastrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1377
a pledge, a security pignus, pignoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 419, p. 2519

a plough arātrum, arātrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 797
a ploughman, a farmer arātor, arātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 474, p. 2865
a ploughshare vōmer, vōmeris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 474, p. 2865
a plum prūnum, prūnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 279, p. 1643
a poem poēma, poēmatis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 549, p. 3335
a poet poēta, poētae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 373
a poisoner; a sorcerer venēficus, venēficī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 307, p. 1819
a pool; a fish-pond piscīna, piscīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 541, p. 3285
a pool, a pond; standing water stagnum, stagnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 483, p. 2921
a portent, a wonder prōdigium, prōdigiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 348, p. 2075
a porter, doorman ostiārius, ostiāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 531, p. 3223
a post, a station; a stopping place; an anchorage statiō, statiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 427, p. 2571
a potter figulus, figulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1081
a pound; a pair of scales lībra, lībrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1069
a praetor, a judge and magistrate praetor, praetōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 383, p. 2295
a press (for wine or oil) prēlum, prēlī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 479, p. 2897
a price pretium, pretiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 933
a priest, a priestess sacerdōs, sacerdōtis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 334, p. 1987
a prison carcer, carceris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 635
a prisoner, a captive captīvus, captīvī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 343, p. 2043
a prize, a reward praemium, praemiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 337, p. 2005
a procession pompa, pompae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 333, p. 1981

a prologue; its speaker prologus, prologī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 546, p. 3317
a promise prōmissum, prōmissī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 396, p. 2375
a promise to appear in court, bail vadimōnium, vadimōniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 411, p. 2469
a prosecutor, an accuser accūsātor, accūsātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 309, p. 1831
a province prōvincia, prōvinciae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1211
a public meeting; a speech made to it cōntiō, cōntiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 371, p. 2219
a public office; a magistrate magistrātus, magistrātūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 383, p. 2295
a public reading recitātiō, recitātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 549, p. 3335
a public show; a gift; a duty mūnus, mūneris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 336, p. 1999
a punishment poena, poenae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1267
a punt, a small flat boat; a trough linter, lintris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 435, p. 2621
a puppy catulus, catulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1471
a purse crumēna, crumēnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 679
a push; an impulse; instigation impulsus, impulsūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 372, p. 2225
a putting off, a delay dīlātiō, dīlātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 395, p. 2369
a quaestor, a finance officer quaestor, quaestōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 383, p. 2295
a quarrel, dispute iūrgium, iūrgiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 537, p. 3261
a quarter-as (a small coin); a quarter quadrāns, quadrantis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 465, p. 2809
a queen rēgīna, rēgīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 373
a question, an inquiry quaestiō, quaestiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1317
a racecourse circus, circī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 270, p. 1587
a racing team; a party, a faction factiō, factiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 335, p. 1993

a raft; (in poetry) a boat ratis, ratis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 435, p. 2621
a raid, an attack incursiō, incursiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 339, p. 2019
a rain basin impluvium, impluviī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1063
a rain cloud nimbus, nimbī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1099
a raised edge; a kerb, a raised footway; a quay crepīdō, crepīdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 425, p. 2559
a raised roadbed; a mound, an embankment agger, aggeris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 425, p. 2559
a rampart vallum, vallī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 280, p. 1649
a rattle; childhood toys crepundia, crepundiōrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 325, p. 1931
a raven corvus, corvī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 729
a reader lēctor, lēctōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 550, p. 3341
a reaper, a harvester messor, messōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 475, p. 2871
a reason, a cause causa, causae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 617
a reason, a way of thinking ratiō, ratiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 623
a reed pen calamus, calamī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 685
a region regiō, regiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1211
a rein; a strap habēna, habēnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 431, p. 2597
a remedy remedium, remediī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1377
a resident, an inhabitant incola, incolae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 456, p. 2753
a result, an effect; performance effectus, effectūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 373, p. 2233
a return, a coming back reditus, reditūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 428, p. 2577
a ring ānulus, ānulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 445
a rising, a mutiny, sedition sēditiō, sēditiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 387, p. 2319

a rival (in love) rīvālis, rīvālis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 500, p. 3029
a river flūmen, flūminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 459
a river, a broad stream amnis, amnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 482, p. 2915
a river bank rīpa, rīpae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 715
a roadside inn, a lodging; a side road dēverticulum, dēverticulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 445, p. 2683
a robber latrō, latrōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1433
a robber, a pirate praedō, praedōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 303, p. 1793
a rock, a boulder saxum, saxī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 715
a roof tēctum, tēctī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 433
a roof tile tēgula, tēgulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1261
a room conclāve, conclāvis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 552, p. 3353
a root rādīx, rādīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1297
a rope, a cord fūnis, fūnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 437, p. 2633
a rose rosa, rosae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 709
a round shield clipeus, clipeī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 340, p. 2025
a roundabout way, a winding path; long-winded talk ambāgēs, ambāgum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 452, p. 2727
a rowing bench, a thwart; a crossbeam trānstrum, trānstrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 436, p. 2627
a rudder, a steering oar gubernāculum, gubernāculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 437, p. 2633
a rule, a precept, an instruction praeceptum, praeceptī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 409, p. 2457
a rule, a ruler rēgula, rēgulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1285
a rumour rūmor, rūmōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1119
a running stream, a river fluvius, fluviī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1131

a sack, a bag saccus, saccī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 661
a sacred grove lūcus, lūcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1131
a sacrifice sacrificium, sacrificiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1483
a sacrificial animal, a victim victima, victimae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 334, p. 1987
a saddle cloth, a horse blanket ephippium, ephippiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 432, p. 2603
a sail; a curtain vēlum, vēlī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 691
a sailor nauta, nautae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 373
a sandal solea, soleae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1311
a sandbank, a shoal syrtis, syrtis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 443, p. 2671
a satchel pēra, pērae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1489
a saw serra, serrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 673
a scale pan; a dish, a platter lanx, lancis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 464, p. 2803
a scar cicātrīx, cicātrīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1185
a schoolfellow, a fellow pupil condiscipulus, condiscipulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 401, p. 2407
a scout explōrātor, explōrātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 302, p. 1787
a sculptor of statues statuārius, statuāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 377, p. 2257
a seasoning, a spice condīmentum, condīmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 355, p. 2119
a seed sēmen, sēminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 715
a seer, a prophet; a poet vātēs, vātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 348, p. 2075
a seller venditor, venditōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 420, p. 2525
a senator senātor, senātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 382, p. 2289
a sesterce (coin) sēstertius, sēstertiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1093

a sewer, a drain cloāca, cloācae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 458, p. 2765
a shallow, a shoal; a ford vadum, vadī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 443, p. 2671
a shape, form, figure figūra, figūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 547, p. 3323
a she-mule mūla, mūlae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 433, p. 2609
a sheep ovis, ovis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 477
a sheepfold, a pen; an opening caulae, caulārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 478, p. 2889
a shepherd pāstor, pāstōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 765
a shepherd (of sheep) ōpiliō, ōpiliōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 478, p. 2889
a shield scūtum, scūtī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1471
a ship nāvis, nāvis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 286, p. 1689
a ship's master, a shipowner nauclērus, nauclērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 438, p. 2639
a ship's rope, a line rudēns, rudentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 437, p. 2633
a ship's tackle, the rigging; equipment armāmenta, armāmentōrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 437, p. 2633
a shipowner, a shipper nāviculārius, nāviculāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 381, p. 2283
a shipwreck naufragium, naufragiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 315, p. 1869
a shoe calceus, calceī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 585
a shoemaker sūtor, sūtōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 765
a shop, an inn taberna, tabernae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 579
a shore, a beach lītus, lītoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 471
a shout, shouting clāmor, clāmōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 321, p. 1905
a show spectāculum, spectāculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1273
a shrine, a small temple; a niche aedicula, aediculae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 459, p. 2771

a sickle, a pruning hook falx, falcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 475, p. 2871
a side path, a by-way; a cross path trāmes, trāmitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 423, p. 2547
a siege obsidiō, obsidiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 341, p. 2031
a sieve crībrum, crībrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 352, p. 2099
a sign, a signal signum, signī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 691
a sinew, tendon; a string nervus, nervī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 517, p. 3135
a singer to the lyre citharoedus, citharoedī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 544, p. 3303
a skiff, a ship's boat scapha, scaphae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 435, p. 2621
a skill, a craft ars, artis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 599
a slave, a servant servus, servī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 771
a slave who takes a boy to school; a tutor paedagōgus, paedagōgī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 401, p. 2407
a slope; a sloping street, an uphill road clīvus, clīvī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 423, p. 2547
a small cube (of mosaic) tessella, tessellae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 547, p. 3323
a small flask, a phial ampulla, ampullae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1477
a small knife cultellus, cultellī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 350, p. 2087
a small tablet, a note tabella, tabellae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1477
a smoked sausage lūcānica, lūcānicae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 354, p. 2111
a snake serpēns, serpentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 483
a sob; a hiccup singultus, singultūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 520, p. 3153
a solemn promise, a pledge; a wager spōnsiō, spōnsiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 396, p. 2375
a son fīlius, fīliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 355
a son-in-law gener, generī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1447

a song, a poem carmen, carminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1439
a song; a spell cantiō, cantiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 543, p. 3297
a sore, ulcer ulcus, ulceris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 524, p. 3179
a sound sonus, sonī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 545, p. 3311
a sparrow passer, passeris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1107
a speaker, an orator; an envoy ōrātor, ōrātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 368, p. 2201
a spear hasta, hastae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 277, p. 1631
a speech ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1119
a speech of praise, a eulogy laudātiō, laudātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 331, p. 1969
a spider arānea, arāneae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 741
a spindle fūsus, fūsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 472, p. 2853
a spinning top; a whirlwind turbō, turbinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 540, p. 3279
a sponge spongia, spongiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 791
a spoon cochlear, cochleāris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 667
a spring, a fountain fōns, fontis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 459
a spur calcar, calcāris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 432, p. 2603
a spy, a lookout speculātor, speculātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 302, p. 1787
a stable, a stall; a lodging stabulum, stabulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 434, p. 2615
a stable-keeper, an innkeeper (of a stable inn) stabulārius, stabulāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 445, p. 2683
a stage, platform pulpitum, pulpitī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 546, p. 3317
a stalk, a straw; stubble stipula, stipulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 476, p. 2877
a standard-bearer signifer, signiferī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 338, p. 2011

a start, an origin prīncipium, prīncipiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 296, p. 1749
a state; citizenship cīvitās, cīvitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 271, p. 1593
a statue statua, statuae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 691
a steelyard, a balance with one arm statēra, statērae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 464, p. 2803
a step, a stair gradus, gradūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 641
a stepfather vitricus, vitricī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 529, p. 3211
a stepmother noverca, novercae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 529, p. 3211
a stepson prīvignus, prīvignī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 529, p. 3211
a steward, house-manager ātriēnsis, ātriēnsis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 531, p. 3223
a stone lapis, lapidis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 465
a stonecutter, a quarryman lapicīda, lapicīdae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 471, p. 2847
a storeroom, a small room cella, cellae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1063
a storey, a floor (of beams and boards) contignātiō, contignātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 457, p. 2759
a stork cicōnia, cicōniae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1107
a storm, a gale procella, procellae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1099
a story, a play fābula, fābulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1273
A Story in Order
chapter topic; Chapter 282, p. 1665
a strait, a narrow channel; (in poetry) the sea fretum, fretī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 443, p. 2671
a stream rīvus, rīvī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 459
a street, a village vīcus, vīcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 635
a strigil, scraper strigilis, strigilis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 542, p. 3291
a string (of an instrument) chorda, chordae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 544, p. 3303

a study (room) tablīnum, tablīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1063
a stylus, a writing stick stilus, stilī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 439
a suitor procus, procī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 535, p. 3247
a supporter in court, a legal adviser advocātus, advocātī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 309, p. 1831
a surrender dēditiō, dēditiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 343, p. 2043
a suspicion, a mistrust suspīciō, suspīciōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 364, p. 2175
a sword gladius, gladiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 445
a table mēnsa, mēnsae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 427
a tanner, a currier coriārius, coriāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 467, p. 2821
a task, a day's work pēnsum, pēnsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 405, p. 2433
a tavern hostess, a barmaid cōpa, cōpae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 449, p. 2709
a tax, a toll vectīgal, vectīgālis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1093
a teacher, an instructor praeceptor, praeceptōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 401, p. 2407
a teacher of literature and grammar grammaticus, grammaticī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 401, p. 2407
a teacher of public speaking rhētor, rhētoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 404, p. 2425
a tear lacrima, lacrimae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 995
a temple templum, templī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 579
a temple; (plural) a house aedēs, aedis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 459, p. 2771
a tenant, a lodger inquilīnus, inquilīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 456, p. 2753
a tenant farmer colōnus, colōnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1081
a tent tabernāculum, tabernāculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1489
a theatre theātrum, theātrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 629

a theatre curtain aulaeum, aulaeī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 546, p. 3317
a theft fūrtum, fūrtī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 303, p. 1793
a thief fūr, fūris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1433
a thorn spīna, spīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1297
a thousand mīlle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 573
a thread fīlum, fīlī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 783
a threshold, doorstep līmen, līminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 553, p. 3361
a thumb pollex, pollicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 759
a tidal inlet, a tidal marsh; an estuary aestuārium, aestuāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 441, p. 2659
a tiger tigris, tigris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1471
a timber, a log for building; building material tignum, tignī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 457, p. 2759
a tomb sepulcrum, sepulcrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 647
a tooth dēns, dentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 313
a torch fax, facis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 777
a torrent, a rushing stream torrēns, torrentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 482, p. 2915
a tortoise testūdō, testūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 276, p. 1625
a tower turris, turris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 280, p. 1649
a town oppidum, oppidī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 579
a town councillor; a cavalry officer decuriō, decuriōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 388, p. 2325
a townsman, an inhabitant of a town oppidānus, oppidānī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 456, p. 2753
a trainer of gladiators lanista, lanistae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 336, p. 1999
a traitor prōditor, prōditōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 307, p. 1819

a traveller viātor, viātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1323
a travelling carriage raeda, raedae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1427
a travelling coach, a four-wheeled carriage carrūca, carrūcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 429, p. 2583
a treaty, an alliance foedus, foederis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 343, p. 2043
a tree arbor, arboris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 453
a tree trunk truncus, truncī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 715
a trial; a judgement iūdicium, iūdiciī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 308, p. 1825
a tribune tribūnus, tribūnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 338, p. 2011
a tribute, a tax tribūtum, tribūtī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1093
a trick, cunning dolus, dolī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 305, p. 1805
a triumph, a victory procession triumphus, triumphī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 343, p. 2043
a trumpet tuba, tubae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 277, p. 1631
a tunic tunica, tunicae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 585
a turning post; a goal, a limit mēta, mētae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 335, p. 1993
a twin geminus, geminī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1447
A Twin and the In-Laws
chapter topic; Chapter 247, p. 1447
a two-handled jar amphora, amphorae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 679
a two-wheeled chariot; a light travelling carriage essedum, essedī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 429, p. 2583
a tyrant, a despot tyrannus, tyrannī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 345, p. 2055
a valley vallis, vallis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 465
a vegetable grower, a market gardener holitor, holitōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 463, p. 2797
a vehicle vehiculum, vehiculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1261

a vein vēna, vēnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 517, p. 3135
a vessel, a container vās, vāsis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 679
a vessel, a craft (any ship or boat) nāvigium, nāvigiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 435, p. 2621
a vine vītis, vītis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1465
a violet viola, violae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1465
a voice vōx, vōcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 995
a vote; the right to vote suffrāgium, suffrāgiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 384, p. 2301
a vow; a wish vōtum, vōtī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 334, p. 1987
a wagon, a baggage cart carrus, carrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 429, p. 2583
a wagon, a cart plaustrum, plaustrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 691
a walk, stroll ambulātiō, ambulātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 542, p. 3291
a ward, an orphan boy pūpillus, pūpillī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 326, p. 1937
a wasp vespa, vespae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 276, p. 1625
a water jar urna, urnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 791
a water tower, a reservoir; a fort, a stronghold castellum, castellī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 458, p. 2765
a wave unda, undae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 721
a way out; an outcome, an end exitus, exitūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 296, p. 1749
a weaver textor, textōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1081
a web on the loom, the warp; a loom tēla, tēlae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 472, p. 2853
a wedding nūptiae, nūptiārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 273, p. 1607
a weight pondus, ponderis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1069
a well puteus, puteī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 647

a whale balaena, balaenae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 753
a wheel rota, rotae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 445
a wheel hub, the nave of a wheel; a small measure modiolus, modiolī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 430, p. 2589
a wheel rut, a track orbita, orbitae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 425, p. 2559
a whip, a lash scutica, scuticae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 431, p. 2597
a whip, a scourge flagellum, flagellī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 415, p. 2495
a whirlpool, an abyss of water; a flood gurges, gurgitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 483, p. 2921
a whirlpool; the top vertex, verticis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1329
a whisper, a murmur susurrus, susurrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 301, p. 1781
a wicker basket corbis, corbis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 463, p. 2797
a widow vidua, viduae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1279
a wife uxor, uxōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 361
a wild boar aper, aprī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1305
a will, a testament testāmentum, testāmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 332, p. 1975
a winding, a twisting stretch of road anfrāctus, anfrāctūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 424, p. 2553
a window fenestra, fenestrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 427
a wish, the will voluntās, voluntātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 605
a witness testis, testis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1267
a wolf lupus, lupī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 483
a woman fēmina, fēminae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 367
a woodland pass; a leap saltus, saltūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1329
a word verbum, verbī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 278, p. 1637

a work, a task; need (opus est) opus, operis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 376, p. 2251
a workshop officīna, officīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 647
a worm vermis, vermis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 276, p. 1625
a wound vulnus, vulneris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1185
a writer scrīptor, scrīptōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1439
a writing case, chest for papers scrīnium, scrīniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 551, p. 3347
a writing tablet, a board tabula, tabulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 439
a written bond, a promissory note syngrapha, syngraphae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 419, p. 2519
a wrong, an injustice, an insult iniūria, iniūriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 414, p. 2489
a year annus, annī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 555
a yoke; a ridge iugum, iugī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1329
a young maidservant ancillula, ancillulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 530, p. 3217
a young person adulēscēns, adulēscentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1279
about, nearly ferē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1217
above suprā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 549
absurd, foolish; out of tune absurdus, absurda, absurdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 360, p. 2151
Accūsātor et patrōnus
chapter topic; Chapter 309, p. 1831
ad scholam, in scholā, domum — toward, at, and homeward
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 59, p. 299
admiration, wonder admīrātiō, admīrātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 495, p. 2997
Adze, Drill, Plane, File, To hew
chapter topic; Chapter 470, p. 2839
Aetātēs
chapter topic; Chapter 326, p. 1937
after, behind — the other half of a phrase this book quoted long ago and never taught post
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 57, p. 289

afterwards, later posteā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 927
again and again, repeatedly identidem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 294, p. 1737
again — and the repair move this book could not make iterum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 257
age, a lifetime aetās, aetātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1199
ago; counting back from now abhinc
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 288, p. 1701
Agreeing and Disagreeing
chapter topic; Chapter 358, p. 2139
agreement, unanimity cōnsēnsus, cōnsēnsūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 358, p. 2139
alive vīvus, vīva, vīvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 815
all, every omnis, omne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1415
all the way, continuously usque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1211
Alley, Neighbourhood, Privy, Sewer, Water tower
chapter topic; Chapter 458, p. 2765
allowed, lawful licitus, licita, licitum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 409, p. 2457
alone, only sōlus, sōla, sōlum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 859
already, now iam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 567
also, too quoque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1397 although quamquam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1019
although, even though tametsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 391, p. 2345
altogether omnīnō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1223
Altogether, Hardly, Of one's own accord, In vain, Back again
chapter topic; Chapter 211, p. 1223
always semper
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 561
ambulābam — I was walking
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 281, p. 1657
amīcus -> amīcum — a second road to the same object marker
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 59, p. 299

Amicus, Pecunia, Medicus, Miles, Epistula
chapter topic; Chapter 51, p. 241
an accident, a fall cāsus, cāsūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1285
an acquittal absolūtiō, absolūtiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 413, p. 2483
an actor histriō, histriōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1273
an admirer, lover amātor, amātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 535, p. 3247
an advocate, a pleader for hire causidicus, causidicī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 381, p. 2283
an adze, a carpenter's axe ascia, asciae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 470, p. 2839
an aedile, an officer for streets, markets and games aedīlis, aedīlis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 383, p. 2295
an agreement, a covenant; an assembly cōnventiō, cōnventiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 397, p. 2383
an alley, a narrow lane angiportum, angiportī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 458, p. 2765
an altar āra, ārae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1483
an ambush; a plot īnsidiae, īnsidiārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 307, p. 1819
an amphitheatre amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1427
an amulet (worn by a child); a bubble bulla, bullae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 325, p. 1931
an anchor ancora, ancorae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 270, p. 1587
an answer respōnsum, respōnsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1317
an ant formīca, formīcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 735
an anvil incūs, incūdis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 469, p. 2833
an aqueduct aquaeductus, aquaeductūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1427
an architect architectus, architectī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1081
an argument, a proof; a plot argūmentum, argūmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 361, p. 2157
an arm bracchium, bracchiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 313

an army on the march; a crowd agmen, agminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 339, p. 2019
an arrow sagitta, sagittae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 277, p. 1631
an artist, a skilled craftsman; a master (of) artifex, artificis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 376, p. 2251
an ash tree; an ash-wood spear fraxinus, fraxinī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 484, p. 2927
an assassin sīcārius, sīcāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 306, p. 1811
an association, a guild; a board of officials collēgium, collēgiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 388, p. 2325
an auction auctiō, auctiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 420, p. 2525
an aunt (father's sister) amita, amitae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 367
an awl sūbula, sūbulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 467, p. 2821
an axe secūris, secūris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 673
an eagle aquila, aquilae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 729
an ear of grain, a spike spīca, spīcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 475, p. 2871
an eating-house popīna, popīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 641
an edict, a proclamation ēdictum, ēdictī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 409, p. 2457
an elbow cubitum, cubitī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 759
an elementary teacher of letters litterātor, litterātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 401, p. 2407
an elephant elephantus, elephantī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 489
an elm tree ulmus, ulmī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 484, p. 2927
an embassy lēgātiō, lēgātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 300, p. 1775
an embrace amplexus, amplexūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 534, p. 3241
an enclosed valley, a deep valley convallis, convallis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 481, p. 2909
an enemy (of the state) hostis, hostis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 271, p. 1593

an envoy lēgātus, lēgātī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 272, p. 1599
an epidemic, pestilence pestilentia, pestilentiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 524, p. 3179
an epigram, a short poem epigramma, epigrammatis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 549, p. 3335
an example; a warning exemplum, exemplī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 361, p. 2157
an excuse, a plea excūsātiō, excūsātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 369, p. 2207
an extra family name, a surname cognōmen, cognōminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 325, p. 1931
an heir hērēs, hērēdis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 332, p. 1975
an illness, a disease morbus, morbī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 337
an image, likeness, portrait imāgō, imāginis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 547, p. 3323
an informer, an accuser dēlātor, dēlātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 412, p. 2475
an inheritance hērēditās, hērēditātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 332, p. 1975
an inn caupōna, caupōnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 641
an innkeeper caupō, caupōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 272, p. 1599
an inquiry, a hearing; knowledge cognitiō, cognitiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 412, p. 2475
an inscription īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 933
an institution, a custom; a purpose īnstitūtum, īnstitūtī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 386, p. 2313
an instruction, an order mandātum, mandātī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 300, p. 1775
an invention, a made-up story commentum, commentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 349, p. 2081
an investigator; a presiding judge quaesītor, quaesītōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 412, p. 2475
an oak quercus, quercūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1465
an oar rēmus, rēmī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 270, p. 1587
an oath iūsiūrandum, iūrisiūrandī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 397, p. 2383

an occupant, a dweller habitātor, habitātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 456, p. 2753
an ointment unguentum, unguentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1185
an old man senex, senis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 373
an old song, the same old tune cantilēna, cantilēnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 543, p. 3297
an olive olīva, olīvae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 415
an olive tree; an olive olea, oleae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 479, p. 2897
an omen, a sign ōmen, ōminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 348, p. 2075
an onion cēpa, cēpae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 697
an open space, a courtyard ārea, āreae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 653
an opinion, a belief; a reputation opīniō, opīniōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 357, p. 2133
an opinion; a sentence sententia, sententiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1119
an opportunity occāsiō, occāsiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1453
an oracle ōrāculum, ōrāculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 348, p. 2075
an orchard pōmārium, pōmāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 479, p. 2897
an origin, a beginning; ancestry orīgō, orīginis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 344, p. 2049
an originator, an author; a backer auctor, auctōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 372, p. 2225
an ornament, decoration ōrnāmentum, ōrnāmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 548, p. 3329
an outcome ēventus, ēventūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1285
an oven furnus, furnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1477
an overnight stop, a halting place; a stay mānsiō, mānsiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 427, p. 2571
an owl noctua, noctuae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1107 an ox, a cow bōs, bovis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 477

an ox-driver, a herdsman bubulcus, bubulcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 478, p. 2889
an ox stall, a cowshed būbīle, būbīlis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 473, p. 2859
an uncle (father's brother) patruus, patruī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 361
an undertaking, a venture inceptum, inceptī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 393, p. 2357
an upper room, a garret, a flat on an upper floor cēnāculum, cēnāculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 457, p. 2759
an uproar, a commotion tumultus, tumultūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 321, p. 1905
ancestors, forefathers maiōrēs, maiōrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 344, p. 2049
ancient, old-fashioned antīquus, antīqua, antīquum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 803
and — and the enclitic -que, which does the same job glued to the back of a word et
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 225
and not, nor neque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 915
and so, therefore itaque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 617
and yet, but (raising an objection) atquī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 366, p. 2189
anger īra, īrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 349
Anger and indignation
chapter topic; Chapter 493, p. 2985
angry īrātus, īrāta, īrātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 833
annals, a year-by-year history annālēs, annālium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 344, p. 2049
annoyance, trouble molestia, molestiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 497, p. 3011
annoying molestus, molesta, molestum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 821
Annoying, Useful, Clean, Dirty, Straight
chapter topic; Chapter 146, p. 821
Answering, Meeting, Buying
chapter topic; Chapter 43, p. 183
Ante et Post
chapter topic; Chapter 57, p. 289

Anvil, Bellows, Forge, Blacksmith, To hammer
chapter topic; Chapter 469, p. 2833
anxiety, worry sollicitūdō, sollicitūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 497, p. 3011
anxious anxius, anxia, anxium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1229
appearance, shape; face faciēs, faciēī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 515, p. 3123
applause, clapping plausus, plausūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 337, p. 2005
aqua -> aquam — when the action reaches the thing
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 59, p. 299
Aqua fervet
chapter topic; Chapter 353, p. 2105
Architect, Weaver, Potter, Farm manager, Tenant farmer
chapter topic; Chapter 188, p. 1081
Ārdet
chapter topic; Chapter 318, p. 1887
Arm, Finger, Tooth
chapter topic; Chapter 63, p. 313
Arma
chapter topic; Chapter 340, p. 2025
around circā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 653 arrogance, conceit arrogantia, arrogantiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 507, p. 3073
arrogant, presumptuous arrogāns, arrogantis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 507, p. 3073
as if quasi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1397
as, in the same way as; as if tamquam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 367, p. 2195
as, like velut
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 265, p. 1557
as often as; how often quotiēns
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 294, p. 1737
ash cinis, cineris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 275, p. 1619
Asking Someone's Age
chapter topic; Chapter 14, p. 53
Asking the Way
chapter topic; Chapter 285, p. 1683
Assum et frīctum
chapter topic; Chapter 354, p. 2111

at first, at the beginning prīmō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 291, p. 1719
at last tandem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1001
At last, From now on, Still, Suddenly, Until
chapter topic; Chapter 175, p. 1001
at last, only then dēmum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 291, p. 1719
at least saltem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 265, p. 1557
at leisure, idle ōtiōsus, ōtiōsa, ōtiōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 538, p. 3267
at once, immediately statim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 543
at once, without delay cōnfestim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 292, p. 1725
At School
chapter topic; Chapter 401, p. 2407
at some time, once aliquandō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 263, p. 1543
At the baths
chapter topic; Chapter 541, p. 3285
at the house of, among apud
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1391
at the same time simul
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1397
At the same time, Perhaps, Also, As if, Because of
chapter topic; Chapter 239, p. 1397
At the Speakers' Platform
chapter topic; Chapter 371, p. 2219
At the theatre
chapter topic; Chapter 546, p. 3317
attentive, intent; careful with money attentus, attenta, attentum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 406, p. 2439
Aunt, Neighbour, Guest, Man, Woman
chapter topic; Chapter 72, p. 367
authority, influence; backing auctōritās, auctōritātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 370, p. 2213
Auxilium
chapter topic; Chapter 316, p. 1875

B

back again, once more rūrsus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1223
bad faith, treachery perfidia, perfidiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 399, p. 2395
bad — the adjective under male, and the word Rome punned on for the apple malus, mala, malum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 48, p. 215 badly — the other end of the scale bene has had to itself all along male
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 48, p. 215
bald calvus, calva, calvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1255
Bald, Bearded, Charming, Worn out, Wakeful
chapter topic; Chapter 216, p. 1255
Ball, Wheel, Sword, Crown, Ring
chapter topic; Chapter 85, p. 445
Bean, Pea, Cucumber, Chicken, Pepper
chapter topic; Chapter 127, p. 703
bearded barbātus, barbāta, barbātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1255
Beast of burden, Nag, She-mule, Pack saddle, To load
chapter topic; Chapter 433, p. 2609
beautiful fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 853
beautiful pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 513
Beautiful, Round, Empty, Bright, Dark
chapter topic; Chapter 96, p. 513
Beauty
chapter topic; Chapter 548, p. 3329
beauty pulchritūdō, pulchritūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 548, p. 3329
because of propter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1397
because of that propterea
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 623
because — the answer cūr asks for quia
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 249
Bedbug, To bite, To scratch, Sleepless, To lie down
chapter topic; Chapter 447, p. 2697
Beech, Fir, Elm, Ash, Shady
chapter topic; Chapter 484, p. 2927

beer cervīsia, cervīsiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 709 before, in front of — the word that puts one thing ahead of another ante
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 57, p. 289
before (joining two clauses) antequam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 291, p. 1719
before, previously anteā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 921
Being ill
chapter topic; Chapter 521, p. 3161
belonging to another; foreign; unfavourable aliēnus, aliēna, aliēnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 417, p. 2507
below īnfrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 549
beyond ultrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1391
Beyond, On this side, At the house of, Face to face, By which way
chapter topic; Chapter 238, p. 1391
Big and Small, Long and Short, High
chapter topic; Chapter 93, p. 495
big, great magnus, magna, magnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 495
Bigger Than, and How Long
chapter topic; Chapter 288, p. 1701
Bird, Wolf, Lion, Bear, Snake
chapter topic; Chapter 91, p. 483
black and white — the source words for Spanish/French/Italian, each with a shine-vs-matte twin niger, albus
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 6, p. 23
bleary-eyed, with sore eyes lippus, lippa, lippum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 525, p. 3185
blessed, fortunate beātus, beāta, beātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1421
blind caecus, caeca, caecum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 809
Block of flats, Upper room, Storey, Timber, Beam
chapter topic; Chapter 457, p. 2759
blood sanguis, sanguinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 319
boastfulness, vanity; emptiness vānitās, vānitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 507, p. 3073
boiled ēlixus, ēlixa, ēlixum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 353, p. 2105

bold audāx, audācis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 845
boldness, daring audācia, audāciae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 509, p. 3085
Book boxes and tablets
chapter topic; Chapter 551, p. 3347
Book, Ink, Reed pen, Wax, Picture
chapter topic; Chapter 124, p. 685
Book-roll, Page, Letter of the alphabet, Word, Name
chapter topic; Chapter 278, p. 1637
boredom, weariness taedium, taediī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 262, p. 1537
borrowed, lent; mutual mūtuus, mūtua, mūtuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 418, p. 2513
Branch, Tree trunk, Seed, Rock, River bank
chapter topic; Chapter 129, p. 715
brave, strong fortis, forte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 519
bread — the source of "companion," and of the friendship-word every Romance daughter still shares with it pānis
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 10, p. 39
breakfast ientāculum, ientāculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 409
Breath, Memory, Wisdom, Talent, Habit
chapter topic; Chapter 206, p. 1193
breath, soul anima, animae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1193
breath; spirit spīritus, spīritūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 520, p. 3153
Breathing
chapter topic; Chapter 520, p. 3153
Bridge, Farmhouse, Clothes, Tunic, Shoe
chapter topic; Chapter 108, p. 585
bright, clear; famous clārus, clāra, clārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 513
Bringing, Getting, Playing, Waiting
chapter topic; Chapter 42, p. 175
bronze; money aes, aeris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1291
brother and sister — the words Vulgar Latin later abandoned in favor of germanus frater, soror
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 7, p. 27
brotherly frāternus, frāterna, frāternum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 529, p. 3211

Build and health
chapter topic; Chapter 523, p. 3173
Building, Prison, Main hall of a house, Corner, Street
chapter topic; Chapter 116, p. 635
burial sepultūra, sepultūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 330, p. 1961
burning heat; passion ārdor, ārdōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 317, p. 1881
business negōtium, negōtiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 274, p. 1613
but if sīn
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 390, p. 2339
but that, that (after a denied doubt); why not quīn
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 367, p. 2195
but — the word that sets one thing against another sed
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 48, p. 215
Butcher, Innkeeper, Banker, Envoy, Clerk
chapter topic; Chapter 272, p. 1599
Buying and Selling
chapter topic; Chapter 420, p. 2525
by chance, accidental fortuītus, fortuīta, fortuītum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 375, p. 2245
by day, in the daytime interdiū
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 295, p. 1743
by night, at night noctū
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 295, p. 1743
By Sea
chapter topic; Chapter 286, p. 1689
by weight, in weight; a pound pondō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 465, p. 2809
by which way quā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1391

C

cabbage brassica, brassicae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 279, p. 1643
Caedēs
chapter topic; Chapter 306, p. 1811
Cake, Vinegar, Fish sauce, Ham, Birthday
chapter topic; Chapter 195, p. 1125
calm, peaceful tranquillus, tranquilla, tranquillum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 501, p. 3035

calm weather, a calm; stillness tranquillitās, tranquillitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 444, p. 2677
canvassing; ambition ambitiō, ambitiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 384, p. 2301
care, diligence dīligentia, dīligentiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 379, p. 2269
care, worry cūra, cūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 343
careful cautus, cauta, cautum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 845
Careful, Lazy, Hard-working, Timid, Bold
chapter topic; Chapter 150, p. 845
careless, negligent neglegēns, neglegentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 406, p. 2439
Cart pole, Wheel hub, Drag shoe, To yoke, To unyoke
chapter topic; Chapter 430, p. 2589
Cāsus in viā
chapter topic; Chapter 314, p. 1861
caution; a guarantee, a bond cautiō, cautiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 392, p. 2351
Cēna appōnitur
chapter topic; Chapter 356, p. 2125
chaff; straw palea, paleae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 476, p. 2877
Chair with a back, Bench, Carpet, Torch, Lantern
chapter topic; Chapter 139, p. 777
Chance, Skill, It is necessary, It is allowed, To not want
chapter topic; Chapter 110, p. 599
charcoal carbō, carbōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1099
Charcoal, Crag, Constellation, Storm, Rain cloud
chapter topic; Chapter 191, p. 1099
Charm and sweet words
chapter topic; Chapter 536, p. 3253
charming venustus, venusta, venustum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1255
charming, delightful lepidus, lepida, lepidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 503, p. 3047
cheapness, low prices vīlitās, vīlitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 466, p. 2815
cheerful hilaris, hilare
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1031
cheerfulness, merriment hilaritās, hilaritātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 489, p. 2961

cheese cāseus, cāseī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 415
Cheese, Oil, Grapes, Olives
chapter topic; Chapter 80, p. 415
Cherry, Plum, Cabbage, Leek, Porridge
chapter topic; Chapter 279, p. 1643
Chest, Leg, Cheek, Nail, Healthy
chapter topic; Chapter 66, p. 331
Chest, Paper, Pen, Tablet, Mirror
chapter topic; Chapter 84, p. 439
childhood, boyhood pueritia, pueritiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 324, p. 1925
children līberī, līberōrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 361
Citizen, Cook, Merchant, Farmer
chapter topic; Chapter 74, p. 379
City, Town, Forum, Temple, Shop
chapter topic; Chapter 107, p. 579
city walls moenia, moenium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 280, p. 1649
Clādēs
chapter topic; Chapter 342, p. 2037
clean, pure pūrus, pūra, pūrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 821
clear, fine (of weather) serēnus, serēna, serēnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 859
clear, transparent; evident perspicuus, perspicua, perspicuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 360, p. 2151
clear weather, fair weather; calm serēnitās, serēnitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 487, p. 2947
clever, cunning callidus, callida, callidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 267, p. 1569
clever, talented ingeniōsus, ingeniōsa, ingeniōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 406, p. 2439
Cliff, Jagged rock, Sheer, Steep, To climb
chapter topic; Chapter 480, p. 2903
Cloak, Belt, Fruit, Onion, Garlic
chapter topic; Chapter 126, p. 697
Close friends
chapter topic; Chapter 533, p. 3235
close friendship, intimacy familiāritās, familiāritātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 533, p. 3235
clothing, a garment vestis, vestis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 585

Cloud, Rain, Snow, Plain, Shore
chapter topic; Chapter 89, p. 471
cloudy nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 865
Cloudy, Windy, To build, To climb, To go down
chapter topic; Chapter 153, p. 865
coastal, by the sea; of the sea maritimus, maritima, maritimum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 442, p. 2665
coaxing, flattering; charming blandus, blanda, blandum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 536, p. 3253
Cobbler's shop, Barber's shop, Awl, Tanner, Furrier
chapter topic; Chapter 467, p. 2821
cold frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 507
Colonnade, Temple, Shrine, Sacred boundary, To build up
chapter topic; Chapter 459, p. 2771
Colours
chapter topic; Chapter 6, p. 23
Comb, Scissors, Needle, Thread, Wool
chapter topic; Chapter 140, p. 783
Comfort and gentleness
chapter topic; Chapter 492, p. 2979
command, supreme power; an empire imperium, imperiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 385, p. 2307
common, shared commūnis, commūne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1043
compassionate, merciful misericors, misericordis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 513, p. 3111
Complaint, To complain, To cheat, Grasping, Dirt
chapter topic; Chapter 450, p. 2715
compliance, obedience obsequium, obsequiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 389, p. 2333
Concīdere et terere
chapter topic; Chapter 351, p. 2093
Condīmenta
chapter topic; Chapter 355, p. 2119
consolation, comfort cōnsōlātiō, cōnsōlātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 492, p. 2979
convenient, comfortable commodus, commoda, commodum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1031
Convenient, Polite, Of the country, Cheerful, Shy
chapter topic; Chapter 180, p. 1031
convenient, timely, opportune opportūnus, opportūna, opportūnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 392, p. 2351

conversation, speech sermō, sermōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1119
cooked coctus, cocta, coctum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1037
Corn supply, Dearness, Cheapness, To value, To be sold
chapter topic; Chapter 466, p. 2815
Coughs and sore eyes
chapter topic; Chapter 525, p. 3185
Counting and Dictation
chapter topic; Chapter 405, p. 2433
country manners, boorishness rūsticitās, rūsticitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 506, p. 3067
Countryside, Farm, Ox stall, Cottage, Hut
chapter topic; Chapter 473, p. 2859
Courage and good sense
chapter topic; Chapter 509, p. 3085
courage, bravery fortitūdō, fortitūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 509, p. 3085
courage, virtue virtūs, virtūtis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 262, p. 1537
courteous, friendly cōmis, cōme
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 506, p. 3067
Cow, Mule, Camel, Monkey, Dolphin
chapter topic; Chapter 134, p. 747 cowardice; laziness ignāvia, ignāviae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 508, p. 3079
Crab, Sparrow, Stork, Owl, Peacock
chapter topic; Chapter 192, p. 1107
Craftsman, Baker, Shoemaker, Barber, Shepherd
chapter topic; Chapter 137, p. 765
Crossroads, Fork in the road, Bend, Winding, To bend
chapter topic; Chapter 424, p. 2553
Crowd, Crowded, To throng, To go back and forth, Near the city
chapter topic; Chapter 460, p. 2777
crowded, full of people; frequent frequēns, frequentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 460, p. 2777
cruel crūdēlis, crūdēle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 853
cruelty crūdēlitās, crūdēlitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 511, p. 3097
Cruelty and gentleness
chapter topic; Chapter 511, p. 3097
cūr? — quia, quod, nam: explaining
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 284, p. 1677 custody, guard; prison custōdia, custōdiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 415, p. 2495

D

Damnātus aut absolūtus
chapter topic; Chapter 311, p. 1843
danger perīculum, perīculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1453
dangerous perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 827
dark, dusky fuscus, fusca, fuscum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 839
Dark, Grey, Golden, Silver, Wise
chapter topic; Chapter 149, p. 839
dark, obscure obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 513
Day
chapter topic; Chapter 28, p. 103
"day" — the word you've already been using all along, inside diēs Lūnae and medius diēs, now on its own diēs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 28, p. 103
Days of the Week
chapter topic; Chapter 5, p. 19
dead mortuus, mortua, mortuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 329, p. 1955
Dead calm, Calm weather, Peninsula, Of the shore, To sail out
chapter topic; Chapter 444, p. 2677
deaf surdus, surda, surdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 827
Deaf, False, Sure, Safe, Dangerous
chapter topic; Chapter 147, p. 827
dear; costly cārus, cāra, cārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 519
dearness, high prices; affection cāritās, cāritātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 466, p. 2815
death mors, mortis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 329, p. 1955
dēbēs — what you should do
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 284, p. 1677
debt aes aliēnum, aeris aliēnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 418, p. 2513
Debts
chapter topic; Chapter 418, p. 2513
deep profundus, profunda, profundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1403
defence in court, advocacy; protection patrōcinium, patrōciniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 413, p. 2483

Deī et deae
chapter topic; Chapter 346, p. 2061
delight, pleasure dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 499, p. 3023
Departure, Return, Travel abroad, To travel abroad, To go forward
chapter topic; Chapter 428, p. 2577
Desire and envy
chapter topic; Chapter 500, p. 3029
Desire, Hope, Longing, Why?, Why?
chapter topic; Chapter 112, p. 611
desire, longing cupīdō, cupīdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 500, p. 3029
despair, hopelessness dēspērātiō, dēspērātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 498, p. 3017
Dice and board games
chapter topic; Chapter 539, p. 3273
dice-playing, a game of chance ālea, āleae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 539, p. 3273
Diēs fēstus
chapter topic; Chapter 333, p. 1981
different dīversus, dīversa, dīversum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 266, p. 1563
differently, otherwise secus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 391, p. 2345
difficult difficilis, difficile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 519
diligent, unremitting assiduus, assidua, assiduum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 508, p. 3079
dinner, the main meal cēna, cēnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 409
dirt, filth sordēs, sordis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 450, p. 2715
dirty sordidus, sordida, sordidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 821
disagreement, discord discordia, discordiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 387, p. 2319
disgust, squeamishness; disdain fastīdium, fastīdiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 494, p. 2991
Distaff, Spindle, Web on the loom, To spin, Wool-working
chapter topic; Chapter 472, p. 2853
distant longinquus, longinqua, longinquum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1037
distress of mind, grief; sickness aegritūdō, aegritūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 497, p. 3011

divine law; what is right fās
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 414, p. 2489
divine power, divine will nūmen, nūminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 346, p. 2061
Dog and Cat
chapter topic; Chapter 17, p. 65
dog and (two words for) cat — canis is the "expected" ancestor Spanish's perro mysteriously replaced; fēlēs was Classical Latin's OWN word for cat, later pushed out by the newcomer
cattus canis, fēlēs, cattus
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 17, p. 65
Doors and stores
chapter topic; Chapter 553, p. 3361
doubt, hesitation dubitātiō, dubitātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 359, p. 2145
doubtful dubius, dubia, dubium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1421
Doubtful, Faithful, Loyal, Unlucky, Blessed
chapter topic; Chapter 243, p. 1421
Downpour, To be soaking wet, Rainy, Stormy, Turbulent
chapter topic; Chapter 485, p. 2933
downwards deorsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 264, p. 1551
Drawing a Conclusion
chapter topic; Chapter 364, p. 2175
dread, terror formīdō, formīdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 320, p. 1899
dreadful, horrible horribilis, horribile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 496, p. 3003
Drum, Knucklebone, Gaming die, Bracelet, Necklace
chapter topic; Chapter 193, p. 1113
drunk ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 269, p. 1581
dry siccus, sicca, siccum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 507
dust pulvis, pulveris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 275, p. 1619
dusty, covered with dust pulverulentus, pulverulenta, pulverulentum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 426, p. 2565
Dusty, Muddy, Footprint, Weary, To wear out
chapter topic; Chapter 426, p. 2565
dutifulness, devotion (to gods, family, country) pietās, pietātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 389, p. 2333
Duty and Freedom
chapter topic; Chapter 389, p. 2333

E

eager, desirous cupidus, cupida, cupidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 500, p. 3029
eagerness; study studium, studiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1317
Earlier, Every year, Now and then, Once, Twice
chapter topic; Chapter 176, p. 1007
earlier, sooner prius
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1007
early; in good time mātūrē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 295, p. 1743
Earning a Living
chapter topic; Chapter 379, p. 2269
Earth, Fire, Wind, Sky, Sea
chapter topic; Chapter 45, p. 195
easy facilis, facile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 519
Easy, Hard, Dear, Brave, Wise
chapter topic; Chapter 97, p. 519
Edicts and Rules
chapter topic; Chapter 409, p. 2457
Edo, Bibo, Oculus, Auris, Pes
chapter topic; Chapter 54, p. 265
educated, learned ērudītus, ērudīta, ērudītum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 403, p. 2419
effective, efficient efficāx, efficācis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 372, p. 2225
Eight Verbs at the Core
chapter topic; Chapter 37, p. 129
eighth — the one that takes a different ending octāvus, octāva, octāvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 281
Elbow, Thumb, Skin, Bone, Stomach
chapter topic; Chapter 136, p. 759
Elections
chapter topic; Chapter 384, p. 2301
elegant, refined, tasteful ēlegāns, ēlegantis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 548, p. 3329
eloquence ēloquentia, ēloquentiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 368, p. 2201
eloquent fācundus, fācunda, fācundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1057
elsewhere alibī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1013

empty vacuus, vacua, vacuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 513
Enclosed valley, Plain, Rocky, Rough, To slide down
chapter topic; Chapter 481, p. 2909
End, Delay, Sometimes, Every day, Day before
chapter topic; Chapter 237, p. 1383
enough satis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 525
envious invidus, invida, invidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1229
envy invidia, invidiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 262, p. 1537
eram, erat — the past that stays open grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 281, p. 1657
ergō, itaque, igitur — and so
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 283, p. 1671
especially praesertim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1025
Especially, Rather, Most, Very, Quite
chapter topic; Chapter 179, p. 1025
Even as, As, If only, On the contrary, At least
chapter topic; Chapter 265, p. 1557
even as, in the same way as sīcut
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 265, p. 1557
even if etiamsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 391, p. 2345
even if etsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1019
Even If and Otherwise
chapter topic; Chapter 391, p. 2345
Evening
chapter topic; Chapter 33, p. 115
evening — a genuine everyday classical word sharing a deep root with English west through the direction of sunset vesper
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 33, p. 115
every day cotīdiē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1383
every year quotannīs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1007
evidence, testimony testimōnium, testimōniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 309, p. 1831
evident, plain; caught in the act manifestus, manifesta, manifestum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 360, p. 2151

Evidently, And Yet, So Then
chapter topic; Chapter 366, p. 2189
evidently, clearly; namely vidēlicet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 366, p. 2189
Exchanging Names
chapter topic; Chapter 20, p. 77
exile, banishment exsilium, exsiliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 312, p. 1849
expectation, anticipation exspectātiō, exspectātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 395, p. 2369
eyebrow supercilium, superciliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 515, p. 3123
eyelid palpebra, palpebrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 515, p. 3123

F

Fābulae mīrae
chapter topic; Chapter 349, p. 2081
face, expression vultus, vultūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 515, p. 3123
face to face cōram
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1391
facing, unfavourable adversus, adversa, adversum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 268, p. 1575
faint, weak, listless languidus, languida, languidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 521, p. 3161
fair, righteous iūstus, iūsta, iūstum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 266, p. 1563
fairness, equity aequitās, aequitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 416, p. 2501
faithful fīdus, fīda, fīdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1421
faithless, untrustworthy īnfīdus, īnfīda, īnfīdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 537, p. 3261
false falsus, falsa, falsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 827
Family
chapter topic; Chapter 7, p. 27
famous, crowded celeber, celebris, celebre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1051
Far, Above, Below, Inside, Outside
chapter topic; Chapter 102, p. 549

far away procul
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 549
far, by far longē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1013
Far, Elsewhere, Over there, Within, Out of doors
chapter topic; Chapter 177, p. 1013
fast, quick celer, celeris, celere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 501 fat pinguis, pingue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 267, p. 1569
Fat, Clever, Special, Former, Nearest
chapter topic; Chapter 267, p. 1569
fat, stout obēsus, obēsa, obēsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 523, p. 3173
fate fātum, fātī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1323
Fate, Lair, Hospitality, Lodging house, Traveller
chapter topic; Chapter 227, p. 1323
father and mother — the PIE ancestor Latin and English both inherited, in parallel pater, mater
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 7, p. 27
fault, blame; guilt culpa, culpae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 311, p. 1843
fear timor, timōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 349
Fear and dread
chapter topic; Chapter 496, p. 3003
fear, dread metus, metūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 320, p. 1899 festive, holiday fēstus, fēsta, fēstum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 333, p. 1981
Fever, Cough, Pain
chapter topic; Chapter 67, p. 337
few paucī, paucae, pauca
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1415
Few, All, Whole, Others, Other
chapter topic; Chapter 242, p. 1415
fierce ferōx, ferōcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 815
fifth — and the month that was once called The Fifth quīntus, quīnta, quīntum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 273
fifty quīnquāgintā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 573

Fight, Sail, Prepare, Touch, Pull
chapter topic; Chapter 100, p. 537
filthy, dirty, unclean immundus, immunda, immundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 461, p. 2783
finally dēnique
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1205
Finally, Lastly, On the spot, Formerly, Long since
chapter topic; Chapter 208, p. 1205
fire itself — the classical word, which the Romance languages abandoned and English kept ignis, ignis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 45, p. 195
first light, daybreak dīlūculum, dīlūculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1199
first — the counting word for order rather than amount, and the one with no ūnus in it prīmus, prīma, prīmum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 273
fish sauce garum, garī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1125
Fisherman, Slave, Mistress, Friend, Cupboard
chapter topic; Chapter 138, p. 771
fit, suited aptus, apta, aptum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 268, p. 1575
fixed, settled, valid ratus, rata, ratum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 398, p. 2389
Flat cake, Beer, Juice, Rose, Lily
chapter topic; Chapter 128, p. 709
Flat wine, Neat wine, To water down, Rotten, Tavern hostess
chapter topic; Chapter 449, p. 2709
flat wine, wine gone off; a good-for-nothing vappa, vappae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 449, p. 2709
flattery, coaxing blanditia, blanditiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 536, p. 3253
flight, running away fuga, fugae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 322, p. 1911
Floor, Well, Bakery, Workshop, Tomb
chapter topic; Chapter 118, p. 647
flour farīna, farīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 421
foam, froth, scum spūma, spūmae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 353, p. 2105
Fog, Eagle, Dove, Raven, Duck
chapter topic; Chapter 131, p. 729
fog, mist nebula, nebulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 729

Folly and madness
chapter topic; Chapter 510, p. 3091
food cibus, cibī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 409
Food and Meals
chapter topic; Chapter 79, p. 409
food to go with bread, provisions obsōnium, obsōniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 350, p. 2087
foolish stultus, stulta, stultum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 525
foolishness, folly stultitia, stultitiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 360, p. 2151
Footpath, Mountain track, Side path, Slope, Step
chapter topic; Chapter 423, p. 2547
for a little while paulisper
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 293, p. 1731
for a long time diū
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 263, p. 1543
for cargo, for carrying loads onerārius, onerāria, onerārium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 436, p. 2627
For, For, For that reason, And so, Reason
chapter topic; Chapter 113, p. 617
for (giving a reason) nam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 617
for indeed, and in fact etenim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 365, p. 2183
For, Of Course, Namely
chapter topic; Chapter 365, p. 2183
for sale vēnālis, vēnāle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 933
for some time aliquamdiū
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 293, p. 1731
for that reason ideō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 617
for that reason, therefore idcircō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 366, p. 2189
for, you see enim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 617
foreign peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1235
Foreign, Honest, Patient, Generous, Idle
chapter topic; Chapter 213, p. 1235
forgive me / I'm sorry (imperative of ignōscere, "to not-know, overlook, pardon") ignōsce mihi
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 4, p. 17

Fork, Plough, Bell, Flute, Lyre
chapter topic; Chapter 142, p. 797 formal purchase; a slave mancipium, mancipiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 417, p. 2507
former, of old prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 267, p. 1569
formerly, at one time quondam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1205
fortune, luck fortūna, fortūnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1285
forty quadrāgintā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 573
Four lines, and the word that has a twin
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 62, p. 311
fourth — where the series settles into a shape quārtus, quārta, quārtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 273
fraud, deceit; harm fraus, fraudis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 305, p. 1805
free-born; frank ingenuus, ingenua, ingenuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 532, p. 3229
free from care, untroubled sēcūrus, sēcūra, sēcūrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 501, p. 3035
free of charge grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1037
Free of charge, Fresh, Raw, Cooked, Distant
chapter topic; Chapter 181, p. 1037
Free time
chapter topic; Chapter 538, p. 3267
Freedom
chapter topic; Chapter 532, p. 3229
freedom lībertās, lībertātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1075 frequent, crowded crēber, crēbra, crēbrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1241
frequently, often crēbrō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 294, p. 1737
fresh, recent recēns, recentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1037
friendliness, affability cōmitās, cōmitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 506, p. 3067
friendship amīcitia, amīcitiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1377
frightened, trembling pavidus, pavida, pavidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 320, p. 1899

frightful, terrible terribilis, terribile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 496, p. 3003
from all sides undique
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 264, p. 1551
from now on posthāc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1001
from there; then inde
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1211
Fuga
chapter topic; Chapter 322, p. 1911
funny, laughable; absurd rīdiculus, rīdicula, rīdiculum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 502, p. 3041
Fūnus
chapter topic; Chapter 330, p. 1961
Fūr comprehēnsus
chapter topic; Chapter 304, p. 1799
Fūrtum
chapter topic; Chapter 303, p. 1793
fury, savagery saevitia, saevitiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 511, p. 3097

G

gain, profit; a way of earning a living quaestus, quaestūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 379, p. 2269
garlic ālium, āliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 697
Gem, Garment, Sandal, Fold of a garment, Mattress
chapter topic; Chapter 225, p. 1311
Generation, Age, Sunset, Sunrise, First light
chapter topic; Chapter 207, p. 1199
generosity līberālitās, līberālitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 506, p. 3067
generous līberālis, līberāle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1235
gentle, mild mītis, mīte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 815
gentle, mild, soft lēnis, lēne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 492, p. 2979
genuine, sincere sincērus, sincēra, sincērum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 504, p. 3053
geometry geōmetria, geōmetriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 404, p. 2425

Get to Know, Care For, Tell, Praise, Move
chapter topic; Chapter 99, p. 531
Get Up, Wander, Run Away, At Once, Then
chapter topic; Chapter 101, p. 543
Getting Ready
chapter topic; Chapter 394, p. 2363
Girl, Old Man, Queen, Sailor, Poet
chapter topic; Chapter 73, p. 373
glass vitrum, vitrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1459
Gloomy, Drunk, Sober, Greedy, Thrifty
chapter topic; Chapter 269, p. 1581
gloomy, mournful maestus, maesta, maestum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 269, p. 1581
glory glōria, glōriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1075
glowing ash, embers favilla, favillae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 317, p. 1881
Going to Law
chapter topic; Chapter 411, p. 2469
gold aurum, aurī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1291
Gold, Silver, Bronze, Iron, Metal lead
chapter topic; Chapter 222, p. 1291
golden aureus, aurea, aureum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 839
Good Afternoon
chapter topic; Chapter 36, p. 125
Good and Bad Pupils
chapter topic; Chapter 406, p. 2439
Good Evening
chapter topic; Chapter 34, p. 119
"good evening" — a modern, pedagogical phrase (not classically attested), but unlike bonum māne, this one CAN show the real Accusative-of-Exclamation grammar again, since vesper is masculine, not neuter bonum vesperum
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 34, p. 119
good-looking, handsome speciōsus, speciōsa, speciōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 548, p. 3329
Good Morning
chapter topic; Chapter 32, p. 111

"good morning" — a modern, pedagogical phrase (not classically attested); unlike bonam noctem, its grammar is genuinely invisible, since mā̆ne is neuter and Latin neuters never distinguish nominative from accusative — Romans instead had a real, richly documented morning GREETING RITUAL, the salūtātiō, whose root is a doublet of salvē's own bonum mā̆ne
explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 32, p. 111
Good Night
chapter topic; Chapter 30, p. 107
"good night" — genuine Latin grammar (wishes take the accusative, not the nominative), though the fixed phrase itself may be a later/modern convention rather than a directly-attested ancient formula bonam noctem
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 30, p. 107
good sense, prudence prūdentia, prūdentiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 509, p. 3085
goodbye (lit. "be strong") valē / valēte
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1
goods, merchandise merx, mercis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 933
goods, wares, merchandise mercimōnium, mercimōniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 462, p. 2789
goodwill, kindness benevolentia, benevolentiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 505, p. 3061
Goose, Bee, Fly, Ant, Butterfly
chapter topic; Chapter 132, p. 735
gradually, gently sēnsim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 293, p. 1731
grain, corn frūmentum, frūmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 421
Grain, Flour, Pear, Fig, Nut
chapter topic; Chapter 81, p. 421
grammar grammatica, grammaticae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1317
Grammar, Philosophy, Eagerness, Question, Answer
chapter topic; Chapter 226, p. 1317
Granting and Denying
chapter topic; Chapter 363, p. 2169
grasping, greedy rapāx, rapācis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 450, p. 2715
Gratitude and praise
chapter topic; Chapter 512, p. 3103
great age, antiquity vetustās, vetustātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 344, p. 2049

greedy avārus, avāra, avārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 269, p. 1581
greedy, eager avidus, avida, avidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 500, p. 3029
Green and Yellow
chapter topic; Chapter 18, p. 69
green and yellow — viridis is the direct, kept source of Spanish's verde; flāvus is Latin's own real word for yellow, and almost NO Romance language kept it as their everyday color word — most (French, Italian, Romanian) converged on a DIFFERENT shared Latin word instead viridis, flāvus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 18, p. 69
Greetings
chapter topic; Chapter 1, p. 1
grey cānus, cāna, cānum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 839
grief, mourning lūctus, lūctūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 331, p. 1969
grief, mourning maeror, maerōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 490, p. 2967
guilty; harmful nocēns, nocentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 311, p. 1843

H

hail grandō, grandinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 721
hail (a formal greeting) avē / avēte
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 1, p. 1
hair, a lock of hair crīnis, crīnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 515, p. 3123
Hair, Belly, Back, Forehead, Beard
chapter topic; Chapter 65, p. 325
happy, glad laetus, laeta, laetum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 349
Harbour, Dockyard, Tidal inlet, Lighthouse, Headland
chapter topic; Chapter 441, p. 2659
harbour dues, customs duty portōrium, portōriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 421, p. 2533
hard dūrus, dūra, dūrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 803
Hard, Soft, Lukewarm, Ancient, Narrow
chapter topic; Chapter 143, p. 803

hard-working dīligēns, dīligentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 845 hardly vix
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1223
Harm and Help
chapter topic; Chapter 374, p. 2239
harmony, concord concordia, concordiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 386, p. 2313
harmony, singing together concentus, concentūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 545, p. 3311
Harvest, Reaper, Sickle, Ear of grain, Wheat
chapter topic; Chapter 475, p. 2871
hateful, tiresome odiōsus, odiōsa, odiōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 494, p. 2991
Hatred and disgust
chapter topic; Chapter 494, p. 2991
hay faenum, faenī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 434, p. 2615
he, she, it — the pronoun Latin does not really have, doing the job anyway is, ea, id
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 233
Head and Hand
chapter topic; Chapter 8, p. 31
headlong; steep praeceps, praecipitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 314, p. 1861
Healing
chapter topic; Chapter 526, p. 3191
health valētūdō, valētūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 987
Health, Brain, Lung, Liver, Kidney
chapter topic; Chapter 173, p. 987
health, soundness sānitās, sānitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 523, p. 3173
healthy, sound sānus, sāna, sānum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 331
Hear the greeting; write it independently
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 1, p. 1
hearing audītus, audītūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 519, p. 3147
Hearing, Sleeping, Sitting, Standing
chapter topic; Chapter 40, p. 159
heat, glow; the tide aestus, aestūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 317, p. 1881
heavy, serious gravis, grave
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1043

heel calx, calcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 518, p. 3141
hello (lit. "be well") salvē / salvēte
explicit focus: pronunciation, writing, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1
Helmet, Spear, Bow, Arrow, Trumpet
chapter topic; Chapter 277, p. 1631
Helmsman, Market, Weight, Measure, Pound
chapter topic; Chapter 186, p. 1069
help, aid auxilium, auxiliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 316, p. 1875
here and there passim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 264, p. 1551
Hesperia, víspera, vespers — the root after Latin etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 33, p. 115
Hic, Iste, Ille, Is, Ibi
chapter topic; Chapter 50, p. 233
hide, leather corium, coriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1459
high; deep altus, alta, altum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 495
highest, the top of summus, summa, summum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1051
highway robbery, banditry latrōcinium, latrōciniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 303, p. 1793
hip coxa, coxae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 518, p. 3141
Hiring and Hard Labour
chapter topic; Chapter 380, p. 2275
history historia, historiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1119
hoarfrost, frost pruīna, pruīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 486, p. 2939
Hoarfrost, The cold, To freeze, To be stiff with cold, To feel cold
chapter topic; Chapter 486, p. 2939
hoarse; harsh-sounding raucus, rauca, raucum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 448, p. 2703
holidays fēriae, fēriārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1483
Holidays, Banquet, Sacrifice, Altar, Goddess
chapter topic; Chapter 253, p. 1483
hollow, vain inānis, ināne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1043
honest, upright probus, proba, probum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1235

Honesty and pretence
chapter topic; Chapter 504, p. 3053
honesty, uprightness probitās, probitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 504, p. 3053
honey — the root of mellifluous and marmalade, and of molasses by way of Portuguese mel, mellis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 47, p. 207
honourable honestus, honesta, honestum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1051
hope spēs, speī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 611
Hope, despair and trust
chapter topic; Chapter 498, p. 3017
Horse, Ox, Sheep, Goat, Pig
chapter topic; Chapter 90, p. 477
hospitable; of a guest or host hospitālis, hospitāle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 445, p. 2683
hospitality; lodging hospitium, hospitiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1323
Hot, Cold, Dry, Wet, Sweet
chapter topic; Chapter 95, p. 507
Hot-drinks bar, Hot water, To drink, Smoky, Filthy
chapter topic; Chapter 461, p. 2783
hot-tempered, quick to anger īrācundus, īrācunda, īrācundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 493, p. 2985
hot, warm calidus, calida, calidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 507
hot water (for mixing with wine) calda, caldae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 461, p. 2783
hour — the source word itself, and the Roman hour was NOT a fixed length hōra
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 13, p. 51
Household chores
chapter topic; Chapter 554, p. 3367
household furniture, goods supellex, supellectilis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 552, p. 3353
How
chapter topic; Chapter 26, p. 99
How Are You?
chapter topic; Chapter 19, p. 71
how are you? — literally, what are you doing? quid agis?
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 19, p. 71
how do you fare? ut valēs?
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 19, p. 71

"how, in what way" — the genuine classical word behind Italian come, Spanish cómo, and French comment, which went one step further and double-marked "manner" quōmodo
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 26, p. 99
How It Felt
chapter topic; Chapter 287, p. 1695
How Things Turn Out
chapter topic; Chapter 373, p. 2233
however much; although (with the subjunctive) quamvīs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 390, p. 2339
however, nevertheless tamen
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1019
human nature; kindness; culture hūmānitās, hūmānitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 386, p. 2313
humorous, playful iocōsus, iocōsa, iocōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 502, p. 3041
hunger famēs, famis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 343
Husband, Wife, Children
chapter topic; Chapter 71, p. 361

I

"I am" — the verb every sentence leans on, and the one whose forms English still shares outright sum, esse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I am twenty years old" — literally "I am, having been born, twenty years [so far]"; NEITHER Romance's "have" NOR Germanic's "be my years" — Latin used a THIRD construction, later abandoned vīgintī annōs nātus sum
explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 14, p. 53
"I answer" — literally "I pledge back", from the verb Romans used for a solemn promise, and the reason a husband is a spouse respondeō, respondēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 43, p. 183
"I ask" — a verb probably built on "stretching straight out", and a cousin of regal, direct and right rogō, rogāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 151
I began, I have begun coepī, coepisse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 297, p. 1755

"I bring, I carry" — one verb built out of two unrelated roots, and the parent of transfer, refer, prefer, differ, offer and suffer ferō, ferre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 175
"I buy" — a verb that once meant simply "I take", which is the only reason redeem, example and premium mean what they do emō, emere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 43, p. 183
I can — potis plus sum, and the verb that will not sit still possum, posse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 225
"I close" — the word English calls close, and the fourth of four claudō, claudere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 167
"I come" — a Latin verb that really is the same inherited word as English come veniō, venīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
I do not know — and the rule the whole chapter turns on: nōn stands in front of the verb nesciō, nescīre
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 48, p. 215
I drink — the verb inside beverage, bib and imbibe bibō, bibere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 265
I eat — and the infinitive that collides with to be edō, esse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 265
"I get" — two verbs, each one a prefix bolted onto a verb you already know, and each one bent out of shape by the join accipiō, obtineō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 175
"I give" — the last of the chapter's eight verbs, and the one that gave English data, date, tradition and dose dō, dare
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I go" — the shortest verb in Latin, whose bare stem is a single vowel eō, īre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I have" — a verb that looks exactly like its English translation and is not related to it at all habeō, habēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I hear" — the verb inside audio, audience and audit, and, less obviously, inside obey audiō, audīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 159
"I help" — the verb hiding inside English aid, aide and adjutant, and no relation to juvenile adiuvō, adiuvāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 151

"I know" — one of Latin's two verbs for knowing, and the one that gave English science and nice sciō, scīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I love" — the chapter's fourth verb, the first thing generations of pupils ever chanted, and the word inside enemy amō, amāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 151
"I meet" — two verbs for meeting, each one a prefix on a verb you already know, and the verb hiding inside a phrase from chapter 21 conveniō, occurrō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 43, p. 183
"I open" — half of a matched pair, built from one root with two opposite prefixes aperiō, aperīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 167
"I play" — a small verb with an outsized English family, most of which is about being fooled rather than about play lūdō, lūdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 175
"I read" — a verb that first meant "to gather", which is why English got collect, elegant, lecture and legible from it legō, legere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 143
"I run" — the verb inside current, curriculum, courier and corridor, and, by way of a Celtic wagon, inside car currō, currere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 167
"I say" — a verb that originally meant "point out", which is why English got both dictionary and teach from it dīcō, dīcere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
I say (quoting words) inquam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 299, p. 1769
"I see" — the widest root in this chapter, because seeing and knowing were once one idea videō, vidēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I sit" — the verb that is English sit by descent and English session by loan, and the clearest case of the difference sedeō, sedēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 159
"I sleep" — the verb behind dormitory and dormant, and the one word English may only look as though it borrowed dormiō, dormīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 159
"I stand" — the shortest verb in the chapter and the most productive in English, and the fourth of four stō, stāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 159

"I take" — the verb the habeō lesson promised, and the true relative of English have capiō, capere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 151
"I think" — the verb of cōgitō ergō sum, built from a word meaning "to shake together" cōgitō, cōgitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 143
"I understand" — literally inter plus legō, "to read between", and the ancestor of intellect and intelligence intellegō, intellegere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 143
"I wait" — to wait, in Latin, is to look out for something, and the four verbs of this chapter together exspectō, exspectāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 175
"I walk" — the verb behind ambulance, preamble and the pram, and a rare case where the front half is clear and the back half is not ambulō, ambulāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 167
I want — and the root inside voluntary, benevolent and will itself volō, velle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 225
"I write" — a verb whose root means "to scratch", and the fourth of this chapter's four scrībō, scrībere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 143
ice glaciēs, glaciēī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 721
icy gelidus, gelida, gelidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 859
Identidem
chapter topic; Chapter 294, p. 1737
idle, cowardly ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1235
If
chapter topic; Chapter 289, p. 1707
if only utinam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 265, p. 1557
ignorance, lack of skill īnscītia, īnscītiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 407, p. 2445
Images and art
chapter topic; Chapter 547, p. 3323
immediately after; now and then subinde
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 294, p. 1737
immediately; straight on prōtinus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 292, p. 1725
immortal, undying immortālis, immortāle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 346, p. 2061

in an instant, forthwith extemplō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 292, p. 1725
In macellō
chapter topic; Chapter 350, p. 2087
in my opinion; it seems to me — two ways to hang an opinion on a sentence meā sententiā, mihi vidētur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 283, p. 1671
in the evening vesperī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 295, p. 1743
in the way, to meet obviam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1211
in vain frūstrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1223
Incendium
chapter topic; Chapter 317, p. 1881
Incipere et fīnīre
chapter topic; Chapter 297, p. 1755
indeed; but vērō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1217
indignation, outrage indignātiō, indignātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 514, p. 3117
industrious, active industrius, industria, industrium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1409
Industrious, Talkative, Worried, Unmarried, Rainy
chapter topic; Chapter 241, p. 1409
inexperienced, unskilled imperītus, imperīta, imperītum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 403, p. 2419
infancy, early childhood īnfantia, īnfantiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 324, p. 1925
Īnfāns nātus est
chapter topic; Chapter 323, p. 1919
infection, contagion; touch contāgiō, contāgiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 524, p. 3179
inflammation of the eyes lippitūdō, lippitūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 525, p. 3185
information, evidence; a sign indicium, indiciī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 310, p. 1837
Initium et exitus
chapter topic; Chapter 296, p. 1749
ink ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 685
innocent, harmless innocēns, innocentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 311, p. 1843
Inquisitive, Envious, Anxious, Peaceful, Silent
chapter topic; Chapter 212, p. 1229

inquisitive, painstaking cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1229
Inside the body
chapter topic; Chapter 517, p. 3135
inside, within intrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 549
insolent, haughty; unaccustomed īnsolēns, īnsolentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 507, p. 3073
interest charged; use ūsūra, ūsūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 419, p. 2519
interest (on money) fēnus, fēnoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 418, p. 2513
iron ferrum, ferrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1291
it depends on — literally 'it hangs from'; and in tuā potestāte est, it is up to you pendet ex
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 289, p. 1707
"it is a pleasure to have met you" — an attested Plautine phrase that can fill a conversational slot for which Classical Latin has no single fixed idiom volup est convēnisse
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 21, p. 81
it is allowed, one may licet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 599
it is necessary, one ought oportet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 599
it shames, one is ashamed pudet, pudēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 513, p. 3111
it wearies, it disgusts taedet, taedēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 494, p. 2991
Iterum, Magister, Discipulus, Schola, Liber
chapter topic; Chapter 53, p. 257
Iūdex et lēx
chapter topic; Chapter 308, p. 1825

J

jaws, the back of the mouth; a narrow pass faucēs, faucium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 516, p. 3129
Jobs in a great house
chapter topic; Chapter 531, p. 3223
joints, limbs artus, artuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 516, p. 3129
Jokes and wit
chapter topic; Chapter 502, p. 3041

joy gaudium, gaudiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 349
Joy and gladness
chapter topic; Chapter 489, p. 2961
Joy, Anger, Fear
chapter topic; Chapter 69, p. 349
joy, gladness laetitia, laetitiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 489, p. 2961
juice sūcus, sūcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 709
justice iūstitia, iūstitiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 416, p. 2501
Justice and Obedience
chapter topic; Chapter 416, p. 2501

K

Keeping My Word
chapter topic; Chapter 398, p. 2389
Kin, Uncle, Aunt, Truth, Lie
chapter topic; Chapter 189, p. 1087
kind benignus, benigna, benignum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 853
kindly, well-wishing benevolus, benevola, benevolum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 505, p. 3061
kindness, generosity benignitās, benignitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 505, p. 3061
Kisses and hugs
chapter topic; Chapter 534, p. 3241
Kitchen, Roof, Lamp, Cup, Knife
chapter topic; Chapter 83, p. 433
Knowing and Not Knowing
chapter topic; Chapter 407, p. 2445
knowing, familiar with, expert in gnārus, gnāra, gnārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 453, p. 2733
knowing; on purpose; skilled (in) sciēns, scientis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 403, p. 2419
knowledge, skill scientia, scientiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 407, p. 2445
known, famous nōtus, nōta, nōtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1051
Known, Famous, Honourable, Middle, Highest
chapter topic; Chapter 183, p. 1051

L

laetus eram — how it felt grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 287, p. 1695
lame claudus, clauda, claudum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1057
lastly postrēmō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1205
Lathe, To turn on a lathe, To polish, To sharpen, Stonecutter
chapter topic; Chapter 471, p. 2847
law, right; justice iūs, iūris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 308, p. 1825
lawful, legitimate; proper lēgitimus, lēgitima, lēgitimum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 409, p. 2457
Laziness and energy
chapter topic; Chapter 508, p. 3079
lazy piger, pigra, pigrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 845
Leader, Knowing, To escort, To find, To track
chapter topic; Chapter 453, p. 2733
leanness, thinness maciēs, maciēī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 522, p. 3167
Learned and Unlearned
chapter topic; Chapter 403, p. 2419
learned, skilled doctus, docta, doctum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 403, p. 2419
learned, well-read litterātus, litterāta, litterātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 550, p. 3341
Learning by Heart
chapter topic; Chapter 402, p. 2413
leaven, yeast fermentum, fermentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 352, p. 2099
left (not right) sinister, sinistra, sinistrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 623
Legiō
chapter topic; Chapter 338, p. 2011
leisure ōtium, ōtiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 274, p. 1613
Leisure, Business, Profit, Loss, Debt
chapter topic; Chapter 274, p. 1613
light (not heavy) levis, leve
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 501 Light, Shadow, and Going to Sleep
chapter topic; Chapter 46, p. 201

light — the root of lucid, translucent and Lucifer, and a cousin of English light itself lūx, lūcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 46, p. 201
lightness; fickleness levitās, levitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 370, p. 2213
lightning fulgur, fulguris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 721
likely, credible; worth approving probābilis, probābile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 359, p. 2145
Linen cloth, Soap, Sponge, Water jar, Cup
chapter topic; Chapter 141, p. 791
linen, flax līnum, līnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1459
Little bed, Straw bedding, Mat, Pillow, Blanket
chapter topic; Chapter 446, p. 2689
little by little paulātim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 293, p. 1731
Live, Enter, Return, Fear, Rejoice
chapter topic; Chapter 78, p. 403
lively, eager alacer, alacris, alacre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 503, p. 3047
livestock, cattle, a herd of animals pecus, pecoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 477, p. 2883
Livestock, Flock, Herd, To pasture, Pasture
chapter topic; Chapter 477, p. 2883
Living Together
chapter topic; Chapter 386, p. 2313
Lizard, Wild boar, Billy goat, Lamb, Calf
chapter topic; Chapter 224, p. 1305
logic, dialectic dialectica, dialecticae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 404, p. 2425
long longus, longa, longum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 495
long since iamdūdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1205
longior quam — bigger than, faster than
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 288, p. 1701
loot, booty; prey praeda, praedae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 303, p. 1793
loss, damage damnum, damnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 274, p. 1613
lovable, delightful amābilis, amābile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 533, p. 3235
love amor, amōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1377

lovely, pleasant (of places) amoenus, amoena, amoenum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 542, p. 3291
Lovers
chapter topic; Chapter 535, p. 3247
low humilis, humile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 809
Low, Thick, Thin, Blind, Sharp
chapter topic; Chapter 144, p. 809
loyal fīdēlis, fīdēle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1421
lucky, happy fēlīx, fēlīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 833
Lucky, Wretched, Angry, Quiet, Purple
chapter topic; Chapter 148, p. 833
Lūctus
chapter topic; Chapter 331, p. 1969
Lūdī circēnsēs
chapter topic; Chapter 335, p. 1993
lukewarm tepidus, tepida, tepidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 803
lunch prandium, prandiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 409
lying; a liar mendāx, mendācis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 504, p. 3053

M

mad, insane īnsānus, īnsāna, īnsānum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 510, p. 3091
madness, folly īnsānia, īnsāniae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 510, p. 3091
Maidservant, Freedman, Newcomer, Young person, Widow
chapter topic; Chapter 220, p. 1279
Maiōrēs nostrī
chapter topic; Chapter 344, p. 2049
Making a Promise
chapter topic; Chapter 396, p. 2375
Making Things by Hand
chapter topic; Chapter 378, p. 2263
Making Up My Mind
chapter topic; Chapter 393, p. 2357
Manners
chapter topic; Chapter 506, p. 3067

marble marmor, marmoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1459
Mārcus or Mārcō? — a real classical variation
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 20, p. 77
market day; a market nūndinae, nūndinārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 421, p. 2533
marriage mātrimōnium, mātrimōniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 327, p. 1943
Masters and slaves
chapter topic; Chapter 530, p. 3217
meanwhile intereā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 263, p. 1543
meat carō, carnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 409
medicine medicīna, medicīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 337
melodious, tuneful canōrus, canōra, canōrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 543, p. 3297
memory memoria, memoriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1193
merciful, mild clēmēns, clēmentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 505, p. 3061
Mercy and kindness
chapter topic; Chapter 505, p. 3061
mercy, clemency clēmentia, clēmentiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 505, p. 3061
"midday, noon" — the same medius diēs you already know, contracted into one word; Romans split the day around IT (ante/post merīdiem), not into a separate colloquial "afternoon" the way Spanish's tarde or French's après-midi do merīdiēs explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 35, p. 123
middle, the middle of medius, media, medium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1051
Midwinter, Summer solstice, Dog Star, Of summer, To be warm
chapter topic; Chapter 488, p. 2953
midwinter, the winter solstice, the shortest day brūma, brūmae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 488, p. 2953
milk — the root of lactose, lettuce and, at one remove, of the Milky Way itself lac, lactis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 47, p. 207
Minae et tumultus
chapter topic; Chapter 321, p. 1905
mind, spirit animus, animī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 995

Mist, Breeze, Root, Thorn, Crop
chapter topic; Chapter 223, p. 1297
mist, darkness cālīgō, cālīginis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1297
Mistakes and the Cane
chapter topic; Chapter 408, p. 2451
moderate, restrained modestus, modesta, modestum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1057
money — and the cattle it is named after pecūnia, pecūniae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 241
Mōnstra et hērōēs
chapter topic; Chapter 347, p. 2069
Months
chapter topic; Chapter 11, p. 43
Moods and feelings
chapter topic; Chapter 501, p. 3035
moreover; however autem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1217
Moreover, Indeed, Surely, About, Only
chapter topic; Chapter 210, p. 1217
Morning
chapter topic; Chapter 31, p. 109
"morning, early" — the word already hiding inside dē māne (the source of French demain, Italian domani, and Catalan demà, all rebuilt "tomorrow" from this phrase) and, without the dē-, the direct base of Spanish mañana too, now standing alone māne
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 31, p. 109
Mors
chapter topic; Chapter 329, p. 1955
mortal mortālis, mortāle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 346, p. 2061
most, especially maximē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1025
mostly, usually plērumque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 294, p. 1737
Mouse, Hen, Donkey, Elephant, Deer
chapter topic; Chapter 92, p. 489
much, a lot multum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 567
mud lutum, lutī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 275, p. 1619
muddy, covered with mud lutulentus, lutulenta, lutulentum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 426, p. 2565
Mūnus
chapter topic; Chapter 336, p. 1999

music mūsica, mūsicae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1439
mute, silent mūtus, mūta, mūtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1057
my — the possessive the name lesson did without meus, mea, meum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 249

N

Nail, Hammer, Saw, Axe, Ladder
chapter topic; Chapter 122, p. 673
Nārrātiō
chapter topic; Chapter 299, p. 1769
narrow angustus, angusta, angustum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 803
natural disposition, talent indolēs, indolis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 503, p. 3047
nature, character nātūra, nātūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 503, p. 3047
Naufragium
chapter topic; Chapter 315, p. 1869
navel; the knob of a book-roll umbilīcus, umbilīcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 518, p. 3141
navigable nāvigābilis, nāvigābile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 439, p. 2647
near; a relative propinquus, propinqua, propinquum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 528, p. 3203
near the city, suburban suburbānus, suburbāna, suburbānum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 460, p. 2777
nearest, next proximus, proxima, proximum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 267, p. 1569
neat wine, wine without water merum, merī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 449, p. 2709
necessary necessārius, necessāria, necessārium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1403
necessity, need; compulsion necessitās, necessitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 392, p. 2351
neck, nape cervīx, cervīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 516, p. 3129
Neck, Shoulder, Knee, Heart
chapter topic; Chapter 64, p. 319
Nescio, Male, Malus, Sed, Aut
chapter topic; Chapter 48, p. 215

never numquam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 561
new novus, nova, novum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 501
New, Old, Light, Fast, Slow
chapter topic; Chapter 94, p. 501
Next day, Meanwhile, At some time, For a long time, Shortly
chapter topic; Chapter 263, p. 1543
next, following posterus, postera, posterum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 298, p. 1761
next to, close by iūxtā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 653
Nice to Meet You
chapter topic; Chapter 21, p. 81
Night
chapter topic; Chapter 29, p. 105
"night" — the word already hiding inside media nox ('midnight'), one of the most rock-solid PIE roots in the whole Indo-European family nox
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 29, p. 105
ninth — and the hour that turned into noon nōnus, nōna, nōnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 281
no, not any nūllus, nūlla, nūllum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 915
nobody, no one nēmō, nēminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 915
Noctū et interdiū
chapter topic; Chapter 295, p. 1743
Nōmen et bulla
chapter topic; Chapter 325, p. 1931
Noon and Afternoon
chapter topic; Chapter 35, p. 123
Noon and Midnight
chapter topic; Chapter 12, p. 47
noon and midnight — the source phrase daughters kept whole, wore down unevenly, or eroded almost entirely medius diēs, media nox
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 12, p. 47
North wind, South wind, West wind, To blow through, Clear weather
chapter topic; Chapter 487, p. 2947
not yet nōndum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 291, p. 1719
nothing nihil
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 915

Nothing, Nobody, No, Which of Two, Neither ... Nor
chapter topic; Chapter 161, p. 915
now nunc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 561
now and then nōnnumquam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1007
nowhere nusquam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 264, p. 1551
Nowhere, From all sides, Here and there, Upwards, Downwards
chapter topic; Chapter 264, p. 1551
Numbers Eleven to Twenty
chapter topic; Chapter 16, p. 61
Numbers One to Ten
chapter topic; Chapter 2, p. 11
Numerī Ōrdinis
chapter topic; Chapter 55, p. 273
Nūptiae
chapter topic; Chapter 328, p. 1949

O

Oaths and Agreements
chapter topic; Chapter 397, p. 2383
Obsidiō
chapter topic; Chapter 341, p. 2031
of a slave, slavish servīlis, servīle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 530, p. 3217
of a wedding, bridal nūptiālis, nūptiāle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 328, p. 1949
of course, naturally; for quippe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 365, p. 2183
of one's own accord sponte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1223
of summer, summer aestīvus, aestīva, aestīvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 488, p. 2953
of the circus circēnsis, circēnse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 335, p. 1993
of the country, boorish rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1031
of the home, tame domesticus, domestica, domesticum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1241
of the people, popular; a fellow countryman populāris, populāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 382, p. 2289

of the sea, marine marīnus, marīna, marīnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 442, p. 2665
of the shore, on the beach lītoreus, lītorea, lītoreum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 444, p. 2677
off the road, out of the way; remote dēvius, dēvia, dēvium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 452, p. 2727
offerings to the dead īnferiae, īnferiārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 331, p. 1969
often saepe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 561
Often, Always, Never, Now, Soon
chapter topic; Chapter 104, p. 561
oil oleum, oleī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 415
Oil, walks and the country
chapter topic; Chapter 542, p. 3291
old vetus, veteris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 501 old age senectūs, senectūtis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 326, p. 1937
on holiday, keeping holiday fēriātus, fēriāta, fēriātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 538, p. 3267
On One Condition
chapter topic; Chapter 390, p. 2339
on the contrary immō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 265, p. 1557
on the spot illicō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1205
on this side citrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1391
once, a single time semel
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1007
once, long ago; one day ōlim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 921
one's own; peculiar (to) proprius, propria, proprium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 417, p. 2507
one to five — the Roman originals that became every Romance number ūnus duo trēs quattuor quīnque
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 2, p. 11
only; a moment ago; provided that (with the subjunctive) modo
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 390, p. 2339
only; so much tantum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1217
Open sea, High sea, Level sea, Of the sea, Coastal
chapter topic; Chapter 442, p. 2665

Open space, Milestone, Around, Next to, Opposite
chapter topic; Chapter 119, p. 653
Opinion, Conversation, Speech, Rumour, History
chapter topic; Chapter 194, p. 1119
Opportunity, Danger, Kindness, Duty, Work
chapter topic; Chapter 248, p. 1453
opposite, against contrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 653
or — and the second or, which asks a different question aut
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 48, p. 215
or if; whether ... or sīve
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 391, p. 2345
Ōrāculum
chapter topic; Chapter 348, p. 2075
Orchard, Olive tree, Press, To graft, Grape harvest
chapter topic; Chapter 479, p. 2897
order, a row ōrdō, ōrdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1329
orphaned; childless, bereft orbus, orba, orbum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 326, p. 1937
other, another alius, alia, aliud
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1415
otherwise; in other respects aliōquī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 391, p. 2345
out of doors forīs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1013
out of one's mind, crazy dēmēns, dēmentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 510, p. 3091
outside, beyond extrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 549
over there illīc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1013
Overnight stop, Coachman, Post, Travel money, To set out on
chapter topic; Chapter 427, p. 2571
ownership dominium, dominiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 417, p. 2507

P

Pace, Witness, Defendant, Punishment, Charge
chapter topic; Chapter 218, p. 1267
Pack, Satchel, Money bag, Tent, Flag
chapter topic; Chapter 254, p. 1489

pain, grief dolor, dolōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 337
painstaking, busy sēdulus, sēdula, sēdulum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 406, p. 2439
pale pallidus, pallida, pallidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 522, p. 3167
Pale, red and thin
chapter topic; Chapter 522, p. 3167
Palma et praemium
chapter topic; Chapter 337, p. 2005
panic, terror pavor, pavōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 320, p. 1899
Pānis domesticus
chapter topic; Chapter 352, p. 2099
paper, a sheet charta, chartae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 439
parchment; skin membrāna, membrānae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 551, p. 3347
Passing a Law
chapter topic; Chapter 410, p. 2463
patience patientia, patientiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 995
Patience, Tear, Laugh, Voice, Mind
chapter topic; Chapter 174, p. 995
patient patiēns, patientis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1235
patrician, of the old noble families patricius, patricia, patricium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 382, p. 2289
Paulātim
chapter topic; Chapter 293, p. 1731
Pavor
chapter topic; Chapter 320, p. 1899
pay, wages (especially a soldier's) stīpendium, stīpendiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 379, p. 2269
Paying It Back
chapter topic; Chapter 419, p. 2519
peace pāx, pācis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1075
Peace, Leader, Victory, Freedom, Glory
chapter topic; Chapter 187, p. 1075
peaceful, placid placidus, placida, placidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1229
Peck, Pint, By weight, Quarter-as, Money-changer
chapter topic; Chapter 465, p. 2809

People, State, Homeland, Enemy, War
chapter topic; Chapter 271, p. 1593
pepper piper, piperis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 703
perhaps fortasse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1397
perjury, a false oath periūrium, periūriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 310, p. 1837
persuasion; a conviction persuāsiō, persuāsiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 369, p. 2207
philosophy philosophia, philosophiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1317
Pity and shame
chapter topic; Chapter 513, p. 3111
pity, compassion misericordia, misericordiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 513, p. 3111
Plague and swelling
chapter topic; Chapter 524, p. 3179
plague, pestilence; ruin pestis, pestis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 524, p. 3179
Plain, Clear and Absurd
chapter topic; Chapter 360, p. 2151
Plaster, Remedy, Dream, Love, Friendship
chapter topic; Chapter 236, p. 1377
play, a game lūsus, lūsūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 539, p. 3273
playful, frisky lascīvus, lascīva, lascīvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 503, p. 3047
Pleaders, Clients and Clerks
chapter topic; Chapter 381, p. 2283
pleasant iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 815
pleasantness, delight iūcunditās, iūcunditātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 489, p. 2961
Please
chapter topic; Chapter 3, p. 15
please (literally "I ask, I beg") quaesō
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 3, p. 15
Pleasure and delight
chapter topic; Chapter 499, p. 3023
pleasure, enjoyment voluptās, voluptātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 499, p. 3023
plebeian, of the common people plēbēius, plēbēia, plēbēium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 382, p. 2289

pluēbat ... vēnit — the scene and the event
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 281, p. 1657
pluit, calor, sol — three pieces of weather language
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 15, p. 57
Poems and readings
chapter topic; Chapter 549, p. 3335
Poena et supplicium
chapter topic; Chapter 312, p. 1849
poison; a drug venēnum, venēnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 307, p. 1819
polite, of the city urbānus, urbāna, urbānum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1031
Pool, Whirlpool, Chasm, To trickle, To flood
chapter topic; Chapter 483, p. 2921
poor pauper, pauperis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 525
porridge puls, pultis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 279, p. 1643
possession; (plural) estates possessiō, possessiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 417, p. 2507
Possum, Volo, Qui, Et, Quando
chapter topic; Chapter 49, p. 225
power, the ability to act potestās, potestātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 593
praise laus, laudis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 512, p. 3103
Pride and arrogance
chapter topic; Chapter 507, p. 3073
pride, haughtiness superbia, superbiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 507, p. 3073
Prīmō, tunc, dēmum
chapter topic; Chapter 291, p. 1719
prīmum, deinde, tum, postrēmō — the rungs of a story
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 282, p. 1665
private prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1043
probable, like the truth vērisimilis, vērisimile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 359, p. 2145
Proelium
chapter topic; Chapter 339, p. 2019
profit lucrum, lucrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 274, p. 1613
Proof and Example
chapter topic; Chapter 361, p. 2157

Property
chapter topic; Chapter 417, p. 2507
proud superbus, superba, superbum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 853
Proud, Kind, Cruel, Ugly, Beautiful
chapter topic; Chapter 151, p. 853
provided that, so long as dummodo
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 390, p. 2339
Proving Someone Wrong
chapter topic; Chapter 362, p. 2163
provisions, the store of food penus, penūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 553, p. 3361
public pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1043
Public, Private, Common, Hollow, Heavy
chapter topic; Chapter 182, p. 1043
Puer et pueritia
chapter topic; Chapter 324, p. 1925
Punishment
chapter topic; Chapter 415, p. 2495
punishment, execution; a prayer supplicium, suppliciī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 312, p. 1849
Puppy, Tiger, Club, Chain, Shield
chapter topic; Chapter 251, p. 1471
purple purpureus, purpurea, purpureum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 833
purple dye; purple cloth ostrum, ostrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 468, p. 2827
putō — I think that ...
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 283, p. 1671

Q

quā viā — asking the way
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 285, p. 1683
Quarrels and making up
chapter topic; Chapter 537, p. 3261
Quid ēvēnit
chapter topic; Chapter 298, p. 1761
quiet, calm quiētus, quiēta, quiētum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 833
quite, very admodum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1025

R

Racecourse, Hall of justice, Senate house, Anchor, Oar
chapter topic; Chapter 270, p. 1587
rain pluvia, pluviae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 471
rainy pluvius, pluvia, pluvium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1409
rainy, of rain, bringing rain pluviālis, pluviāle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 485, p. 2933
rare, thin rārus, rāra, rārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1241
rarely rārō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 567
Rarely, Already, Then, Much, Little
chapter topic; Chapter 105, p. 567
rash, reckless temerārius, temerāria, temerārium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 509, p. 3085
rashly, blindly; at random temerē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 371, p. 2219
rashness, recklessness temeritās, temeritātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 370, p. 2213
rather potius
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1025
raw crūdus, crūda, crūdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1037
Readers and booksellers
chapter topic; Chapter 550, p. 3341
Reading — Objects, Places, and a Day
chapter topic; Chapter 59, p. 299
Reading — Words, Lines, and a First Passage
chapter topic; Chapter 58, p. 295
ready parātus, parāta, parātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 268, p. 1575
Reason, Because of that, Place, Right, Left
chapter topic; Chapter 114, p. 623
recently nūper
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 921
Recently, the Day before Yesterday, Once, Before, To Happen
chapter topic; Chapter 162, p. 921
rēctā viā, ad dextram — following the directions
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 285, p. 1683

red (rock-solid) and blue (surprisingly shaky) — Latin's clearest color word, and one of its weakest ruber, caeruleus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 6, p. 23
refinement, polished wit urbānitās, urbānitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 506, p. 3067
Rēgēs et dictātōrēs
chapter topic; Chapter 345, p. 2055
Region, Province, From there, In the way, All the way
chapter topic; Chapter 209, p. 1211
Rein, Leather strap, Bridle, To bridle, Whip
chapter topic; Chapter 431, p. 2597
related by marriage; an in-law affīnis, affīne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 528, p. 3203
Relatives
chapter topic; Chapter 528, p. 3203
relaxation; a letting go remissiō, remissiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 538, p. 3267
Repente et cōnfestim
chapter topic; Chapter 292, p. 1725
Reputation, Messenger, Show, Actor, Story
chapter topic; Chapter 219, p. 1273
reputation, rumour fāma, fāmae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1273
Rest and sleep
chapter topic; Chapter 527, p. 3197
rest, repose requiēs, requiētis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 527, p. 3197
rhetoric, the art of speaking rhētorica, rhētoricae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 404, p. 2425
rich dīves, dīvitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 525
Rich and Poor
chapter topic; Chapter 422, p. 2539
Rich, Poor, Foolish, Enough, Too Much
chapter topic; Chapter 98, p. 525
riches, wealth dīvitiae, dīvitiārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 422, p. 2539
Right and Wrong
chapter topic; Chapter 414, p. 2489
right (not left) dexter, dextra, dextrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 623
River, Lake, Stream, Spring, Coast
chapter topic; Chapter 87, p. 459
River, Torrent, Confluence, To flow, To swim across
chapter topic; Chapter 482, p. 2915

Roadbed, Flint, Kerb, Wheel rut, To pave
chapter topic; Chapter 425, p. 2559
Roadside inn, To lodge, To spend the night, Stable-keeper, Hospitable
chapter topic; Chapter 445, p. 2683
roasted assus, assa, assum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 354, p. 2111
rocky, stony saxōsus, saxōsa, saxōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 481, p. 2909
Roof tile, Furnace, Litter, Vehicle, Chariot
chapter topic; Chapter 217, p. 1261
Rooms and furniture
chapter topic; Chapter 552, p. 3353
rotten, stinking pūtidus, pūtida, pūtidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 449, p. 2709
rough, broken (of ground) cōnfragōsus, cōnfragōsa, cōnfragōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 481, p. 2909
Rough, Deep, Unknown, Necessary, Useless
chapter topic; Chapter 240, p. 1403
rough, harsh asper, aspera, asperum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1403
round rotundus, rotunda, rotundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 513
Ruīna
chapter topic; Chapter 313, p. 1855
Rule, Difference, Outcome, Fortune, Accident
chapter topic; Chapter 221, p. 1285
Ruling and Governing
chapter topic; Chapter 385, p. 2307
Rūmor et susurrus
chapter topic; Chapter 301, p. 1781
Running stream, Marsh, Meadow, Grove, Sacred grove
chapter topic; Chapter 196, p. 1131

S

Sack, Box, Cushion, Blanket, Napkin
chapter topic; Chapter 120, p. 661
Sacrificium
chapter topic; Chapter 334, p. 1987
sad trīstis, trīste
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 349
sadness trīstitia, trīstitiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 490, p. 2967

Sadness and grief
chapter topic; Chapter 490, p. 2967
safe tūtus, tūta, tūtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 827
salt — a cousin of English salt, and the word a Roman soldier's salary was named for sāl, salis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 47, p. 207
Salt, Honey, Milk, Egg, Fish
chapter topic; Chapter 47, p. 207
salvē — copy one greeting with help
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 1, p. 1
salvē — look, hide, write, check
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 1, p. 1
salvē — the greeting that does not watch the clock
culture and usage topic; explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 36, p. 125
sand harēna, harēnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 465
Sandbank, Billow, Shallows, Strait, To sail past
chapter topic; Chapter 443, p. 2671
Saturday and Sunday — Rome's own pagan names, and how Christianity later renamed them diēs Saturnī, diēs Sōlis
explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 5, p. 19
savage, cruel saevus, saeva, saevum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1241
Savage, Wild, Of the home, Rare, Frequent
chapter topic; Chapter 214, p. 1241
Scelus et fraus
chapter topic; Chapter 305, p. 1805
scissors forfex, forficis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 783
Scorn and displeasure
chapter topic; Chapter 514, p. 3117
Seasons
chapter topic; Chapter 9, p. 35
second — and the verb hiding inside it secundus, secunda, secundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 273
Second of two, Suitable, Fit, Ready, Facing
chapter topic; Chapter 268, p. 1575
seditious, rebellious sēditiōsus, sēditiōsa, sēditiōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 387, p. 2319
"see you later/soon" — a genuine change of pace from the last few lessons: this one IS solidly attested, twice, in Cicero's own letters propediem tē vidēbō
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 24, p. 93

See You Soon
chapter topic; Chapter 24, p. 93
See You Tomorrow
chapter topic; Chapter 25, p. 95
"see you tomorrow" — built from two genuinely classical pieces (crās, "tomorrow," and vidēbō, already met last lesson) using the exact same pattern as the attested propediem tē vidēbō, though this specific combination isn't itself pulled from one surviving letter crās tē vidēbō
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 25, p. 95
Senators and People
chapter topic; Chapter 382, p. 2289
Send, Stay, Fall, Put, Find
chapter topic; Chapter 77, p. 397
seventh — the ending wears the vowel down septimus, septima, septimum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 281
Sextus ad Decimum
chapter topic; Chapter 56, p. 281
shady, shaded; dark opācus, opāca, opācum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 484, p. 2927
shame, modesty pudor, pudōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 262, p. 1537
sharp acūtus, acūta, acūtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 809
sheer, very steep, broken off praeruptus, praerupta, praeruptum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 480, p. 2903
Shepherd, Ox-driver, Sheepfold, To shear, To milk
chapter topic; Chapter 478, p. 2889
Ship's rope, Rope, Tackle, Rudder, To row
chapter topic; Chapter 437, p. 2633
shipwrecked naufragus, naufraga, naufragum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 315, p. 1869
short, brief brevis, breve
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 495
shortly, soon brevī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 263, p. 1543
shy, modest verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1031
shyness, modesty verēcundia, verēcundiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 513, p. 3111
sī hīc essēs — if it were so grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, usage and culture; Chapter 290, p. 1713

sī — if grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 289, p. 1707
sī pluit — a condition that may well be true
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, usage and culture; Chapter 289, p. 1707
sick, ill aeger, aegra, aegrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 343
sick, ill aegrōtus, aegrōta, aegrōtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 521, p. 3161
Sick, Tired, Hungry, Thirsty
chapter topic; Chapter 68, p. 343
side, flank latus, lateris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 518, p. 3141
Side, hip and foot
chapter topic; Chapter 518, p. 3141
sight, vision vīsus, vīsūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 519, p. 3147
silent tacitus, tacita, tacitum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1229
silk sēricum, sēricī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 275, p. 1619
Silk, Mud, Dust, Smoke, Ash
chapter topic; Chapter 275, p. 1619
silly, foolish; tactless ineptus, inepta, ineptum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 510, p. 3091
silver argenteus, argentea, argenteum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 839
silver argentum, argentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1291
similar, like similis, simile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 266, p. 1563
Since, Lest, But That
chapter topic; Chapter 367, p. 2195
since, seeing that quandōquidem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 365, p. 2183
singing, song; music cantus, cantūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 543, p. 3297
six to ten — and the four that got frozen into the calendar sex septem octō novem decem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 2, p. 11
sixth — and the nap named after the sixth hour sextus, sexta, sextum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 281
slanting, sideways, at an angle oblīquus, oblīqua, oblīquum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 454, p. 2739

slaughter, murder caedēs, caedis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 306, p. 1811
slavery, servitude servitūs, servitūtis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 389, p. 2333
sleep — the word under insomnia and somnolent, and a cousin of Sanskrit svapna somnus, somnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 46, p. 201
sleepless īnsomnis, īnsomne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 447, p. 2697
sleeplessness īnsomnia, īnsomniae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 527, p. 3197
slender, slim gracilis, gracile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 523, p. 3173
sloth, laziness pigritia, pigritiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 508, p. 3079
slow lentus, lenta, lentum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 501 slow; slow-witted tardus, tarda, tardum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 406, p. 2439
sluggish, slow segnis, segne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 508, p. 3079
small parvus, parva, parvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 495
Small flask, Frying pan, Oven, Candlestick, Small tablet
chapter topic; Chapter 252, p. 1477
smoke fūmus, fūmī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 275, p. 1619
smoky, full of smoke fūmōsus, fūmōsa, fūmōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 461, p. 2783
snow nix, nivis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 471
so that not, lest; that (after fearing) nē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 367, p. 2195
soap sāpō, sāpōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 791
sober sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 269, p. 1581
soft mollis, molle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 803
solace, relief sōlācium, sōlāciī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 492, p. 2979
sole of the foot; a sprout planta, plantae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 518, p. 3141
sometimes interdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1383

Son, Daughter, Grandparents
chapter topic; Chapter 70, p. 355
Song
chapter topic; Chapter 543, p. 3297
Song, Line of verse, Writer, Painter, Music
chapter topic; Chapter 246, p. 1439
soon mox
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 561
Sooner or Later
chapter topic; Chapter 395, p. 2369
sorrow, dejection maestitia, maestitiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 490, p. 2967
sorrowful, mournful lūctuōsus, lūctuōsa, lūctuōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 490, p. 2967
Sorry
chapter topic; Chapter 4, p. 17
Sound and harmony
chapter topic; Chapter 545, p. 3311
Sour, Alive, Gentle, Fierce, Pleasant
chapter topic; Chapter 145, p. 815
sour, unripe acerbus, acerba, acerbum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 815
special, chief praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 267, p. 1569
Speculātōrēs
chapter topic; Chapter 302, p. 1787
spērō — I hope
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 287, p. 1695
Spider, Frog, Hare, Fox, Bull
chapter topic; Chapter 133, p. 741
Spōnsālia
chapter topic; Chapter 327, p. 1943
Spoon, Cooking pot, Dish, Bowl, Candle
chapter topic; Chapter 121, p. 667
Stable, Manger, Hay, To neigh, Muleteer
chapter topic; Chapter 434, p. 2615
Statue, Sign, Sail, Wagon, Long dress
chapter topic; Chapter 125, p. 691
steadfast, consistent cōnstāns, cōnstantis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 509, p. 3085
steadiness, firmness, consistency cōnstantia, cōnstantiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 360, p. 2151
Steelyard, Pair of scales, Scale pan, To weigh out, To weigh carefully
chapter topic; Chapter 464, p. 2803

steep, high; difficult arduus, ardua, arduum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 480, p. 2903
step by step gradātim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 293, p. 1731
Step-families
chapter topic; Chapter 529, p. 3211
Step, Library, Food market, Eating-house, Inn
chapter topic; Chapter 117, p. 641
Stern, Prow, Keel, Rowing bench, For cargo
chapter topic; Chapter 436, p. 2627
still, until now adhūc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1001
Stone, Sand, Hill, Valley, Cave
chapter topic; Chapter 88, p. 465
Storeroom, Study, Colonnaded garden, Rain basin, Foundation
chapter topic; Chapter 185, p. 1063
stormy, full of rain clouds nimbōsus, nimbōsa, nimbōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 485, p. 2933 stormy, turbulent; disorderly turbulentus, turbulenta, turbulentum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 387, p. 2319
straight, right rēctus, rēcta, rēctum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 821
straightaway, without a pause continuō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 292, p. 1725
straw bedding, straw; a covering strāmentum, strāmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 446, p. 2689
Strings
chapter topic; Chapter 544, p. 3303
strong validus, valida, validum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 859
Strong, Weak, Alone, Icy, Clear
chapter topic; Chapter 152, p. 859
sturdy, strong rōbustus, rōbusta, rōbustum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 523, p. 3173
suddenly subitō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1001
suddenly, unexpectedly repente
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 292, p. 1725
suitable idōneus, idōnea, idōneum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 268, p. 1575
sunrise; a rising ortus, ortūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1199
sunset; a setting occāsus, occāsūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1199

sure, certain certus, certa, certum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 827
surely profectō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1217
surely, of course; namely nempe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 365, p. 2183
sweat sūdor, sūdōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 517, p. 3135
sweet dulcis, dulce
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 507
sweet, pleasant suāvis, suāve
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 536, p. 3253
swimming; a swimming place natātiō, natātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 540, p. 3279

T

Tabellārius et praecō
chapter topic; Chapter 300, p. 1775
Table, Chair, Bed, Window
chapter topic; Chapter 82, p. 427
Taking, Asking, Helping, Loving
chapter topic; Chapter 39, p. 151
Taking Care
chapter topic; Chapter 392, p. 2351
talent, character ingenium, ingeniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1193
talkative loquāx, loquācis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1409
tame; gentle mānsuētus, mānsuēta, mānsuētum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 511, p. 3097
Tax, Tribute, Wages, Denarius, Sesterce
chapter topic; Chapter 190, p. 1093
Teaching
chapter topic; Chapter 400, p. 2401
teaching, learning; a doctrine doctrīna, doctrīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 407, p. 2445
Tears and sighs
chapter topic; Chapter 491, p. 2973
Telling Time
chapter topic; Chapter 13, p. 51
Temperament
chapter topic; Chapter 503, p. 3047

Tenant, Townsman, Resident, To live in, Occupant
chapter topic; Chapter 456, p. 2753
tenth — and the tax that took one in ten decimus, decima, decimum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 281
Testāmentum
chapter topic; Chapter 332, p. 1975
thank you (lit. "I give thanks to you") grātiās (tibi) agō
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1
that, near you — the middle point, and the one Latin used to sneer with iste, ista, istud
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 233
that ... not (after hindering), from doing quōminus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 367, p. 2195
that, over there — the far point, and the word that became the Romance article ille, illa, illud
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 233
the back dorsum, dorsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 753
the back tergum, tergī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 325
the belly venter, ventris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 325
the book — and the bark it was written on liber, librī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 257
the brain cerebrum, cerebrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 987
the chest, the breast pectus, pectoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 331
the chin mentum, mentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 753
the cold, cold weather frīgus, frīgoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 486, p. 2939
the cold room frīgidārium, frīgidāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 541, p. 3285
the common people plēbs, plēbis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 345, p. 2055
the corn supply; the price of grain annōna, annōnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 466, p. 2815
the countryside, the country; a farm rūs, rūris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 473, p. 2859
the dawn aurōra, aurōrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 555
the day after tomorrow perendiē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 927

The Day after Tomorrow, Afterwards, a Plan, To Decide, To Foresee
chapter topic; Chapter 163, p. 927
the day before prīdiē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1383
the day before yesterday nudiustertius
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 921
the doctor — from measuring, not from healing medicus, medicī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 241
the Dog Star; a little dog canīcula, canīculae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 488, p. 2953
the door or gate — and the reason a harbour, a porch and a portal are all the same word porta, portae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 189
the ear — and the reason a Roman listened by obeying auris, auris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 265
the earth — dry land as opposed to sea, and the root under terrain, terrace and Mediterranean terra, terrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 45, p. 195
the egg — a cousin of English egg, with two sound changes that hide the relationship completely ōvum, ōvī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 47, p. 207
the end; a boundary fīnis, fīnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1383
the eye — and the eye already hiding inside a word you know oculus, oculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 265
The face
chapter topic; Chapter 515, p. 3123
the first, a leader; the emperor prīnceps, prīncipis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 385, p. 2307
the fish — and the single clearest demonstration in this book of the sound law linking Latin to English piscis, piscis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 47, p. 207
the foot — the clearest Grimm's Law pair in the book, and the last word of the tranche pēs, pedis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 265
the forehead, the front frōns, frontis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 325
the four seasons — and why Romance languages often skipped the plain noun for an adjective phrase instead vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems
explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 9, p. 35

the freeing of a slave manūmissiō, manūmissiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 532, p. 3229
the friend — from the verb to love, and the word the bread lesson pointed at and did not give amīcus, amīcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 241
the garden — an enclosed piece of ground, and a true blood relative of English yard and garden hortus, hortī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 189
the grape harvest, the vintage vindēmia, vindēmiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 479, p. 2897
the hand — a rare feminine noun in an overwhelmingly masculine group of Latin words manus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 8, p. 31
the harvest, the crop messis, messis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 475, p. 2871
the head — the word French abandoned, but Spanish and English kept working hard caput
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 8, p. 31
the heart cor, cordis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 319
the hearth — the fire in the middle of the house, and the reason a lens has a focus focus, focī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 189
the high sea, the open sea pelagus, pelagī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 442, p. 2665
the hot room (of the baths) caldārium, caldāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 541, p. 3285
The House, and Who Is Inside It
chapter topic; Chapter 44, p. 189
the house — the building a family lives in, and the root under domestic, dome and dominate domus, domūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 189
The Inquiry
chapter topic; Chapter 412, p. 2475
the judgement seat, a raised platform tribūnal, tribūnālis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 411, p. 2469
the keel (of a ship); a boat carīna, carīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 436, p. 2627
the level sea, the sea's surface; a level plain aequor, aequoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 442, p. 2665
the liver iecur, iecoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 987
The Magistrates
chapter topic; Chapter 383, p. 2295

the main hall of a house ātrium, ātriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 635
the metal lead plumbum, plumbī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1291
the moon — the same root as lux, worn down to mean 'the shining one' lūna, lūnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 46, p. 201
the neck collum, collī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 319
the next day postrīdiē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 263, p. 1543
the north wind; the north aquilō, aquilōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 487, p. 2947
the nose nāsus, nāsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 313
the open sea, the swell (of the sea) salum, salī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 442, p. 2665
The Orator
chapter topic; Chapter 368, p. 2201
the others, the remaining cēterī, cēterae, cētera
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1415
the palm of victory; the palm of the hand; a palm tree palma, palmae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 337, p. 2005
the prow, the bow (of a ship) prōra, prōrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 436, p. 2627
the public baths thermae, thermārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1427
the pupil — from learning, and the reason discipline means what it does discipulus, discipulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 257
the purple shellfish, murex; purple dye mūrex, mūricis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 468, p. 2827
the rod of freedom (in freeing a slave); vengeance vindicta, vindictae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 532, p. 3229
the sacred boundary (of a city) pōmērium, pōmēriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 459, p. 2771
The same writing, with a clock
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 61, p. 309
The Scene and the Event
chapter topic; Chapter 281, p. 1657
the school — a Greek word that first meant leisure schola, scholae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 257

the sea — the word that finishes Mediterranean and names every marine thing in English mare, maris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 45, p. 195
the seats of a theatre; a cage cavea, caveae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 546, p. 3317
the second of two, the other alter, altera, alterum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 268, p. 1575
the senate house cūria, cūriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 270, p. 1587
The senses
chapter topic; Chapter 519, p. 3147
the shade or shadow — and the reason a little shade is called an umbrella umbra, umbrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 46, p. 201
the shoulder umerus, umerī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 319
the skin cutis, cutis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 759
the sky, and the heavens — the word under celestial, and under a ceiling painted like the sky caelum, caelī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 45, p. 195
the soldier — the noun every Latin narrative turns on mīles, mīlitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 241
the south wind; the south auster, austrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 487, p. 2947
the speakers' platform (in the Forum) rōstra, rōstrōrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 371, p. 2219
the star — a cousin of English star, and the word inside constellation and disaster stēlla, stēllae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 46, p. 201
the stern (of a ship); a ship puppis, puppis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 436, p. 2627
the stomach stomachus, stomachī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 759
the summer solstice; midsummer heat sōlstitium, sōlstitiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 488, p. 2953
the teacher — the greater one, against minister, the lesser magister, magistrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 257
the tongue; a language lingua, linguae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 313

the twelve months — and the two ORIGINAL names, Quintilis and Sextilis, before Rome renamed them Iānuārius, Februārius, Mārtius, Aprīlis, Māius, Iūnius, Quīntīlis, Sextīlis, September, Octōber, November, December
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 11, p. 43
The Verdict
chapter topic; Chapter 413, p. 2483
the voting assembly, the elections comitia, comitiōrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 384, p. 2301
the wall — the one that keeps things out, not the one that divides a room mūrus, mūrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 189
the warm room tepidārium, tepidāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 541, p. 3285
the watch, guard duty excubiae, excubiārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 319, p. 1893
the weekdays (Monday–Friday) — the full, un-worn-down planet-god phrases diēs Lūnae, Mārtis, Mercuriī, Iovis, Veneris
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 5, p. 19
the west wind (of spring) favōnius, favōniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 487, p. 2947
the wind — and a true Germanic cousin, with the sound change that proves it ventus, ventī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 45, p. 195
then, at that time tum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 567
then, at that time tunc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 291, p. 1719
then, next deinde
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 543
there — the place word the corpus has gone fifty chapters without ibi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 233
therefore igitur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1019
therefore, accordingly; so then proinde
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 366, p. 2189
Therefore, However, Although, Even if, Unless
chapter topic; Chapter 178, p. 1019
thick, fat crassus, crassa, crassum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 809
Thief, Robber, Consul, General, Kingdom
chapter topic; Chapter 245, p. 1433

thin tenuis, tenue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 809
thin, lean macer, macra, macrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 522, p. 3167
Things That Happen
chapter topic; Chapter 375, p. 2245
Thinking, Reading, Writing
chapter topic; Chapter 38, p. 143
third — the first ordinal with its own number visible inside it tertius, tertia, tertium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 273
thirst sitis, sitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 343
thirty trīgintā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 573
Thirty to a Thousand
chapter topic; Chapter 106, p. 573
this, here by me — the near point of a three-way system Spanish still keeps hic, haec, hoc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 233
threats minae, minārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 321, p. 1905
thrifty, sparing parcus, parca, parcum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 269, p. 1581
throat, gullet guttur, gutturis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 516, p. 3129
Throat, neck and limbs
chapter topic; Chapter 516, p. 3129
thunder tonitrus, tonitrūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 721
thunderstruck, astonished attonitus, attonita, attonitum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 495, p. 2997
timid, shy timidus, timida, timidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 845
tired fessus, fessa, fessum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 343
to abandon, desert dēserō, dēserere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 537, p. 3261
to accompany comitor, comitārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1341
to accuse, to charge accūsō, accūsāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 309, p. 1831
to acquit; to set free; to finish absolvō, absolvere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 311, p. 1843

to add addō, addere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1341
to admire admīror, admīrārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 969
to admit, to confess fateor, fatērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 312, p. 1849
to advise against, to dissuade dissuādeō, dissuādēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 369, p. 2207
To advise, To tremble, To welcome, To do, To go forward
chapter topic; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to advise, to urge suādeō, suādēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to affect, fill with a feeling afficiō, afficere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 501, p. 3035
to agree together, to be of one mind cōnsentiō, cōnsentīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 358, p. 2139
to agree (with), to assent assentior, assentīrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 358, p. 2139
to allow permittō, permittere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 945
to amuse, entertain oblectō, oblectāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 499, p. 3023
to announce nūntiō, nūntiāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1341
to annoy, to harass vexō, vexāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1173
to anoint, rub with oil unguō, unguere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 542, p. 3291
to appear appāreō, appārēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1341
to approach appropinquō, appropinquāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 963
To approve, To mark, To discuss, To promise, To allow
chapter topic; Chapter 166, p. 945
to approve, to prove probō, probāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 945
to arise, to come forth; to exist exsistō, exsistere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 375, p. 2245
to arrive adveniō, advenīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 907
to ask after, to look for; to need requīrō, requīrere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 451, p. 2721
to ask around, to try to find out scīscitor, scīscitārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 451, p. 2721

to assert, to say (that) perhibeō, perhibēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 301, p. 1781
to attack, to assault oppugnō, oppugnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 341, p. 2031
to avoid vītō, vītāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1149
to bargain for, to demand a formal promise stipulor, stipulārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 397, p. 2383
to be a hindrance, to do harm obsum, obesse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 374, p. 2239
to be able, can queō, quīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 593
To be able, To dare, To have to, To be used to, Power
chapter topic; Chapter 109, p. 593
to be beaten, to get a thrashing vāpulō, vāpulāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 408, p. 2451
to be delirious, talk nonsense dēlīrō, dēlīrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 510, p. 3091
to be eager (for); to study studeō, studēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 402, p. 2413
to be free, have time (for) vacō, vacāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 538, p. 3267
to be ill aegrōtō, aegrōtāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 521, p. 3161
to be in need (of), to lack egeō, egēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 422, p. 2539
to be indignant, resent indignor, indignārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 493, p. 2985
to be missing, to fail dēsum, deesse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1347
to be of the opinion, to judge arbitror, arbitrārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 357, p. 2133
to be pale palleō, pallēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 522, p. 3167
to be red rubeō, rubēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 522, p. 3167
to be seasick; to feel sick nauseō, nauseāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 440, p. 2653
to be silent taceō, tacēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 901
to be soaking wet, to drip madeō, madēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 485, p. 2933
to be sold, to go on sale vēneō, vēnīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 466, p. 2815

to be stiff with cold, to be numb; to be stiff rigeō, rigēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 486, p. 2939
to be struck dumb, be astounded obstupēscō, obstupēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 495, p. 2997
to be stunned, be amazed stupeō, stupēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 495, p. 2997
to be sure, of course scīlicet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 365, p. 2183
to be thirsty sitiō, sitīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 525, p. 3185
to be used to, usually do soleō, solēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 593
to be useful, to benefit prōsum, prōdesse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 374, p. 2239
to be warm, to be hot caleō, calēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 488, p. 2953
to be without, to lack careō, carēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 422, p. 2539
to become; to happen, to be done fīō, fierī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 298, p. 1761
to beg to be spared, to plead against dēprecor, dēprecārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 413, p. 2483
to begin incipiō, incipere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 297, p. 1755
to believe, to trust crēdō, crēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 975
to bend, to turn flectō, flectere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 424, p. 2553
to besiege; to sit at obsideō, obsidēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 341, p. 2031
to betray; to hand down prōdō, prōdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 302, p. 1787
to beware, to be on one's guard caveō, cavēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 392, p. 2351
to bid (at an auction) liceor, licērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 420, p. 2525
to bind, to put under an obligation obstringō, obstringere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 396, p. 2375
to bite mordeō, mordēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 447, p. 2697
to blame, scold vituperō, vituperāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 512, p. 3103
to blame, to criticise reprehendō, reprehendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1149

to blaze, to be on fire flagrō, flagrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 318, p. 1887
to blow through, to blow across perflō, perflāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 487, p. 2947
to blush ērubēscō, ērubēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 260, p. 1525
to boil, to be hot ferveō, fervēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 353, p. 2105
to break frangō, frangere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 883
to break off, to interrupt intermittō, intermittere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 297, p. 1755
to break off, to interrupt interrumpō, interrumpere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1359
to break open effringō, effringere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 304, p. 1799
To break, To throw, To carry, To carry, To untie
chapter topic; Chapter 156, p. 883
to breathe spīrō, spīrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 259, p. 1519
to breathe one's last exspīrō, exspīrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 329, p. 1955
to bridle; to hold back frēnō, frēnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 431, p. 2597
to bring about, to cause; to make efficiō, efficere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 372, p. 2225
to bring back word, to report renūntiō, renūntiāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 300, p. 1775
to bring up, to rear ēducō, ēducāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 324, p. 1925
to build aedificō, aedificāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 865
to build up, to raise, to pile up exstruō, exstruere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 459, p. 2771
to burn, to be on fire ārdeō, ārdēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 951
to burn; to scorch ūrō, ūrere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 318, p. 1887
To burn, To set on fire, To throw away, To calculate, To knock
chapter topic; Chapter 167, p. 951
to burn up, to cremate cremō, cremāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 318, p. 1887
to burst, to break apart rumpō, rumpere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1495

to bury sepeliō, sepelīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 330, p. 1961
to buy food, to shop for a meal obsōnō, obsōnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 350, p. 2087
to calculate computō, computāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 951
to call vocō, vocāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 391
to call to mind, to remember recordor, recordārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 402, p. 2413
to call to witness; to testify testor, testārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 399, p. 2395
to care for cūrō, cūrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 531
to carry portō, portāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 883
to carry (by cart or ship) vehō, vehere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 883
to carry down, to carry off; (of ships) to drive off course; to report dēferō, dēferre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 440, p. 2653
to carry, to wear gerō, gerere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 877
to carve, to engrave sculpō, sculpere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 378, p. 2263
To catch sight of, To come near, To turn back, To delay, To stop for a while
chapter topic; Chapter 455, p. 2747
to catch sight of, to see cōnspicor, cōnspicārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 455, p. 2747
to catch, to catch in the act dēprehendō, dēprehendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 304, p. 1799
to cease dēsinō, dēsinere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1179
to celebrate celebrō, celebrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1161
to change mūtō, mūtāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 901
to chat, to tell stories fābulor, fābulārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 349, p. 2081
to cheat, to defraud fraudō, fraudāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 450, p. 2715
to chop up, to cut to pieces concīdō, concīdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 351, p. 2093

to claim; to avenge, to punish vindicō, vindicāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 416, p. 2501
to clap, to applaud plaudō, plaudere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1501
To clap, To cross, To increase, To lessen, To warn
chapter topic; Chapter 256, p. 1501
to clasp, embrace; to include complector, complectī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 535, p. 3247
to clean pūrgō, pūrgāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 877
to climb, to go up ascendō, ascendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 865
to climb, to mount scandō, scandere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 480, p. 2903
to collapse, to tumble down corruō, corruere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 313, p. 1855
to comb pectō, pectere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 554, p. 3367
to come along, to intervene interveniō, intervenīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 298, p. 1761
to come forth, to grow; to turn out prōveniō, prōvenīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 373, p. 2233
to come near, to approach; to be added accēdō, accēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 455, p. 2747
to come to help subveniō, subvenīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 316, p. 1875
to compare; to get ready comparō, comparāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1149
To compare, To persuade, To blame, To share, To avoid
chapter topic; Chapter 199, p. 1149
to compete, to contend certō, certāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 337, p. 2005
to complain queror, querī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1347
to complain (loudly), to complain of conqueror, conquerī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 450, p. 2715
to complete, to carry out perficiō, perficere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 297, p. 1755
to condemn, to find guilty condemnō, condemnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 413, p. 2483
to condemn, to find guilty damnō, damnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 311, p. 1843
to confess, to admit cōnfiteor, cōnfitērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 363, p. 2169

to console, comfort cōnsōlor, cōnsōlārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 492, p. 2979
to cook coquō, coquere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 391
to correct (a fault) ēmendō, ēmendāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to cost; to stand firm; to be agreed cōnstō, cōnstāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 420, p. 2525
to cough tussiō, tussīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 525, p. 3185
to count numerō, numerāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 907
to count out, to list ēnumerō, ēnumerāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 405, p. 2433
To count, To destroy, To go away, To arrive, To live
chapter topic; Chapter 160, p. 907
to create, to elect creō, creāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 975
to cross, to go over trānseō, trānsīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1501
to cut down, to kill; to beat caedō, caedere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 342, p. 2037
to cut, to slice secō, secāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 351, p. 2093
to dance saltō, saltāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 385
to dare audeō, audēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 593
to deceive fallō, fallere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 975
to deceive, to cheat dēcipiō, dēcipere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 399, p. 2395
To deceive, To endure, To found, To create, To believe
chapter topic; Chapter 171, p. 975
to decide, to set up cōnstituō, cōnstituere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 927
to decorate ōrnō, ōrnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1179
to decree, to settle dēcernō, dēcernere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1335
To decree, To try, To go on, To hold off, To remove
chapter topic; Chapter 229, p. 1335
to defend dēfendō, dēfendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1143

to delay, to linger; to hold up moror, morārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 455, p. 2747
to deliberate, to think over dēlīberō, dēlīberāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 359, p. 2145
to delight, charm dēlectō, dēlectāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 499, p. 3023
to deny flatly; to refuse dēnegō, dēnegāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 363, p. 2169
to deny, to say no negō, negāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 981
to depart; to die dēcēdō, dēcēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 329, p. 1955
To deserve, To correct, To offer, To watch, To stroll
chapter topic; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to deserve, to earn mereor, merērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to desire, to long for cupiō, cupere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 605
to despair (of) dēspērō, dēspērāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 498, p. 3017
to despise, scorn contemnō, contemnere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 514, p. 3117
to destroy, to wipe out dēleō, dēlēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 907
to die morior, morī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1143
to die; to go to meet obeō, obīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 329, p. 1955
to dig fodiō, fodere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to dine cēnō, cēnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 895
to disagree, to differ in opinion dissentiō, dissentīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 358, p. 2139
to discuss, to argue disputō, disputāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 945
to discuss, to hold forth (on) disserō, disserere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 368, p. 2201
to displease displiceō, displicēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 514, p. 3117
to disprove, to show to be wrong redarguō, redarguere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 362, p. 2163
to distress, torment; to choke angō, angere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 497, p. 3011

to distrust; to lose hope diffīdō, diffīdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 498, p. 3017
to do business, to trade negōtior, negōtiārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 421, p. 2533
to do, to drive agō, agere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to do with energy (operam nāvāre: to work hard) nāvō, nāvāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 380, p. 2275
to doubt, to hesitate dubitō, dubitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1173
To doubt, To look for, To use up, To annoy, To forget
chapter topic; Chapter 203, p. 1173
to doze, be sleepy dormītō, dormītāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 527, p. 3197
to dread metuō, metuere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 258, p. 1513
to dream somniō, somniāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 258, p. 1513
To dream, To push, To go past, To make no sound, To dread
chapter topic; Chapter 258, p. 1513
to drink, to drink deep pōtō, pōtāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 461, p. 2783
To dye, Purple shellfish, Purple dye, Paint, Paintbrush
chapter topic; Chapter 468, p. 2827
to dye, to colour; to wet, to dip tingō, tingere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 468, p. 2827
to ease, soften, calm mītigō, mītigāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 511, p. 3097
to educate, to polish ērudiō, ērudīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 400, p. 2401
to embrace, hug amplector, amplectī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 535, p. 3247
to endure, to put up with tolerō, tolerāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 975
to engrave, carve in relief caelō, caelāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 547, p. 3323
to enjoy fruor, fruī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1347
to enter intrō, intrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 403
to entrust, to order mandō, mandāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1365
to envy, begrudge invideō, invidēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 500, p. 3029

to equip, to draw up; to instruct īnstruō, īnstruere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 400, p. 2401
to escape effugiō, effugere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 322, p. 1911
to escort, to see off, to accompany; to pursue prōsequor, prōsequī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 453, p. 2733
to exchange permūtō, permūtāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 259, p. 1519
to excuse; to plead as an excuse excūsō, excūsāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 369, p. 2207
to explain, to unfold explicō, explicāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1137
to extend, to prolong (a term of office) prōrogō, prōrogāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 395, p. 2369
to fall cadō, cadere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 397
to fall down, to fall off dēcidō, dēcidere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 313, p. 1855
to fall in, to collapse collābor, collābī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 313, p. 1855
to fear timeō, timēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 403
to feast, to banquet epulor, epulārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 333, p. 1981
to feed, to nourish alō, alere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 260, p. 1525
to feel sentiō, sentīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 901
to feel cold, to be cold algeō, algēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 486, p. 2939
To feel, To hang, To be silent, To keep, To change
chapter topic; Chapter 159, p. 901
to fight pugnō, pugnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 537
to fight it out, to struggle dīmicō, dīmicāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 339, p. 2019
to fill impleō, implēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1495
to find, to come upon inveniō, invenīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 397
to find, to find out, to discover reperiō, reperīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 453, p. 2733
to finish; to set limits fīniō, fīnīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 297, p. 1755

to fix, to intend; to appoint dēstinō, dēstināre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 393, p. 2357
to flee, to run away fugiō, fugere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 543
to flood, to overflow inundō, inundāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 483, p. 2921
to flow, to run (of water) fluō, fluere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 482, p. 2915
to fly about volitō, volitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1155
to fold plicō, plicāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 957
To fold, To own, To make ready in advance, To lend, To propose
chapter topic; Chapter 168, p. 957
to follow sequor, sequī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1371
to follow; to achieve, to obtain cōnsequor, cōnsequī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 373, p. 2233
to forbid vetō, vetāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1143
To forbid, To defend, To die, To marry, To rest
chapter topic; Chapter 198, p. 1143
to force; to collect cōgō, cōgere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to foresee praevideō, praevidēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 394, p. 2363
to foresee, to provide for prōvideō, prōvidēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 927
to forget oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1173
to found; to hide away condō, condere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 975
to freeze; (passive) to be frozen gelō, gelāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 486, p. 2939
to frighten terreō, terrēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 321, p. 1905
to fry, to parch frīgō, frīgere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 354, p. 2111
to gain, to make a profit lucror, lucrārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 421, p. 2533
to gather, to collect colligō, colligere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1365
to get away, to come out ēvādō, ēvādere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 322, p. 1911

to get to know, to learn cognōscō, cognōscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 531
to get used to cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 963
to give an opinion, to propose; to assess cēnseō, cēnsēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 357, p. 2133
to give as a present dōnō, dōnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 537, p. 3261
to give back reddō, reddere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 889
To give back, To show, To shine, To lose, To win
chapter topic; Chapter 157, p. 889
To give birth to, To order, To force, To mourn, To dig
chapter topic; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to give birth to, to produce gignō, gignere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to give birth to; to produce pariō, parere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 323, p. 1919
to give up dēsistō, dēsistere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 259, p. 1519
to give up, to surrender dēdō, dēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 343, p. 2043
to go away, to leave discēdō, discēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 907
to go back and forth, to come and go commeō, commeāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 460, p. 2777
to go back, to return redeō, redīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 403
to go down dēscendō, dēscendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 865
to go fishing piscor, piscārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 981
to go forward, to advance prōcēdō, prōcēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to go forward, to advance prōgredior, prōgredī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 428, p. 2577
to go on board, to embark; to climb cōnscendō, cōnscendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 438, p. 2639
To go on board, Transport, Ship's master, To set sail, Ferryman
chapter topic; Chapter 438, p. 2639
to go on, to continue pergō, pergere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1335
to go past praetereō, praeterīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 258, p. 1513

to go round, to walk round; to visit in turn circumeō, circumīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 454, p. 2739
to go to law, to quarrel lītigō, lītigāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 411, p. 2469
to go up in flames cōnflagrō, cōnflagrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 318, p. 1887
to graft, to plant in īnserō, īnserere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 479, p. 2897
to grant, to concede; to give way concēdō, concēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 363, p. 2169
to greet salūtō, salūtāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1137
to grieve, mourn maereō, maerēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 490, p. 2967
to grind, to rub terō, terere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 351, p. 2093
to groan, moan gemō, gemere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 491, p. 2973
to grow crēscō, crēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 895
to grow angry, be angry īrāscor, īrāscī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 493, p. 2985
to grow stronger, to spread (of a rumour) crēbrēscō, crēbrēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 301, p. 1781
To grow, To hurry, To stay awake, To dine, To taste
chapter topic; Chapter 158, p. 895
to hammer, to forge; to strike (coins) cūdō, cūdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 469, p. 2833
to hand over trādō, trādere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1161
to hang pendeō, pendēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 901
to happen accidō, accidere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 921
to happen, to turn out ēveniō, ēvenīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 298, p. 1761
to harm, to hurt noceō, nocēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 374, p. 2239
to harrow, to break up the soil occō, occāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 474, p. 2865
to hasten; to ripen mātūrō, mātūrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 395, p. 2369
to hate ōdī, ōdisse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 494, p. 2991

to haul ashore, to draw up (a ship); to take away subdūcō, subdūcere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 439, p. 2647
to have plenty (of), to abound; to overflow abundō, abundāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 422, p. 2539
to have to, must; to owe dēbeō, dēbēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 593
to heal, cure sānō, sānāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 526, p. 3191
to here, hither hūc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 629
To here, To there, Theatre, Bath, Military camp
chapter topic; Chapter 115, p. 629
to hew, to chop into shape dolō, dolāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 470, p. 2839
to hide, disguise (a feeling) dissimulō, dissimulāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 504, p. 3053
to hinder, to hamper impediō, impedīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 374, p. 2239
to hire, to rent; to bring together condūcō, condūcere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 380, p. 2275
to hold teneō, tenēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1495
to hold back, to keep retineō, retinēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1365
to hold dear, esteem dīligō, dīligere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 533, p. 3235
to hold off, to be idle cessō, cessāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1335
To hold, To burst, To warm, To fill, To measure
chapter topic; Chapter 255, p. 1495
to hunt vēnor, vēnārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 981
to hurl headlong; to fall headlong praecipitō, praecipitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 314, p. 1861
to hurry festīnō, festīnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 895
to hurt, harm; to offend laedō, laedere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 511, p. 3097
to hurt, to grieve doleō, dolēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1179
to imitate, to copy imitor, imitārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 407, p. 2445
to increase augeō, augēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1501

to indicate, to mean; to show significō, significāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 364, p. 2175
To inquire, To ask around, To ask after, To show, To make known
chapter topic; Chapter 451, p. 2721
to inquire, to ask questions percontor, percontārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 451, p. 2721
to insist, to maintain; to strive; to hurry contendō, contendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 363, p. 2169
to instruct, to advise; to take beforehand praecipiō, praecipere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 400, p. 2401
to interpret, to translate interpretor, interpretārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1137
to invite invītō, invītāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1137
to join iungō, iungere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 871
To join, To visit, To sing, To paint, To lead
chapter topic; Chapter 154, p. 871
to joke, jest iocor, iocārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 502, p. 3041
to judge; to declare iūdicō, iūdicāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 308, p. 1825
to jump saliō, salīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 939
to jump down, to leap down dēsiliō, dēsilīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 432, p. 2603
to keep shouting, to cry out again and again clāmitō, clāmitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 462, p. 2789
to keep, to save servō, servāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 901
to kick (with the heels); to resist calcitrō, calcitrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 432, p. 2603
to kill interficiō, interficere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 963
to kill, to cut down occīdō, occīdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 306, p. 1811
To kill, To get used to, To make haste, To move back, To approach
chapter topic; Chapter 169, p. 963
to kiss bāsiō, bāsiāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 534, p. 3241
to kiss ōsculor, ōsculārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1137
To kiss, To greet, To invite, To explain, To interpret
chapter topic; Chapter 197, p. 1137

to knead; to subdue subigō, subigere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 352, p. 2099
to knock, to beat pulsō, pulsāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 951
to laugh rīdeō, rīdēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 385
to launch (a ship); to lead away, to escort dēdūcō, dēdūcere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 439, p. 2647
to lay down, to prescribe praescrībō, praescrībere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 410, p. 2463
to lay waste, to ravage vāstō, vāstāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 342, p. 2037
to lead dūcō, dūcere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 871
to leap for joy, rejoice greatly exsultō, exsultāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 489, p. 2961
to learn by heart ēdiscō, ēdiscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 402, p. 2413
to learn thoroughly perdiscō, perdiscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 402, p. 2413
to leave behind; to leave (in a will) relinquō, relinquere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 332, p. 1975
to lend commodō, commodāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 957
to lessen, to decrease minuō, minuere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1501
To let down, To gather, To vanish, To entrust, To hold back
chapter topic; Chapter 234, p. 1365
to let down, to lower dēmittō, dēmittere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1365
to lie down, to lie (in bed); to sleep cubō, cubāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 447, p. 2697
to lie, to tell a lie mentior, mentīrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 310, p. 1837
to lift, to raise; to remove tollō, tollere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1155
To lift, To reach, To recognise, To refuse, To fly about
chapter topic; Chapter 200, p. 1155
to light, to kindle accendō, accendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 939
To light, To put out, To jump, To smile, To shout
chapter topic; Chapter 165, p. 939
to lighten, to lift levō, levāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 969

to live vīvō, vīvere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 403
to live in, to inhabit incolō, incolere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 456, p. 2753
to live (somewhere) habitō, habitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 907
to load, to burden onerō, onerāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 433, p. 2609
to lodge, to stay as a guest dēversor, dēversārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 445, p. 2683
to look down on, despise dēspiciō, dēspicere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 514, p. 3117
to look for, to ask quaerō, quaerere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1173
to lose perdō, perdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 889
to lose, to let slip āmittō, āmittere
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 286, p. 1689
to make a din, to drown out with noise obstrepō, obstrepere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 448, p. 2703
to make a noise, to clatter, to roar strepō, strepere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 448, p. 2703
to make good, to fulfil; to excel praestō, praestāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 398, p. 2389
to make haste properō, properāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 963
to make known, to indicate, to show indicō, indicāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 451, p. 2721
to make no sound sileō, silēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 258, p. 1513
to make ready in advance praeparō, praeparāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 957
to make sacred and binding; to ratify sanciō, sancīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 410, p. 2463
to make, to build, to forge fabricor, fabricārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 378, p. 2263
To make, To carry, To put on, To take off, To clean
chapter topic; Chapter 155, p. 877
to make, to do faciō, facere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 877
to manage, to run; to administer administrō, administrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 385, p. 2307
to mark, to seal signō, signāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 945

to marry (of a bride) nūbō, nūbere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1143
to measure mētior, mētīrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1495
to mend, patch sarciō, sarcīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 554, p. 3367
to milk mulgeō, mulgēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 478, p. 2889
to miss, to long for dēsīderō, dēsīderāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 605
to mix misceō, miscēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1359
to mourn lūgeō, lūgēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to move moveō, movēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 531
to move back, to withdraw recēdō, recēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 963
to move deeply, disturb commoveō, commovēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 501, p. 3035
to neigh, to whinny hinniō, hinnīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 434, p. 2615
to not want, to refuse nōlō, nōlle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 599
to notice animadvertō, animadvertere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 260, p. 1525
to obey pāreō, pārēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1359
to obey, to comply (with) obtemperō, obtemperāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 416, p. 2501
to oblige, to bind obligō, obligāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 398, p. 2389
to offer offerō, offerre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to offer for sale, to try to sell vēnditō, vēnditāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 462, p. 2789
to open up; to disclose patefaciō, patefacere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 302, p. 1787
to order, to tell (someone to) iubeō, iubēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to overcome, to defeat; to surpass superō, superāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 342, p. 2037
to overflow; to result (in), to fall back (on) redundō, redundāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 373, p. 2233

to overwhelm, to bury obruō, obruere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 315, p. 1869
to own, to possess possideō, possidēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 957
to paint pingō, pingere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 871
to panic, to be in a flurry trepidō, trepidāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 320, p. 1899
to pant, gasp anhēlō, anhēlāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 520, p. 3153
to pasture, to put out to graze; to feed pāscō, pāscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 477, p. 2883
to pay in full persolvō, persolvere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 419, p. 2519
to perceive, take in percipiō, percipere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 519, p. 3147
to perish, to die; to be lost pereō, perīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 322, p. 1911
to persuade persuādeō, persuādēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1149
to pick out, to choose ēligō, ēligere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 384, p. 2301
to pity, feel sorry for misereor, miserērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 513, p. 3111
to place; to let out, to hire out locō, locāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 380, p. 2275
to play the cithara, sing to strings psallō, psallere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 544, p. 3303
to please, be pleasing placeō, placēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 499, p. 3023
to plough arō, arāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 474, p. 2865
To plough, Furrow, Ploughshare, Ploughman, To harrow
chapter topic; Chapter 474, p. 2865
to polish, to smooth; to refine poliō, polīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 471, p. 2847
to post for sale; to outlaw, to proscribe prōscrībō, prōscrībere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 415, p. 2495
to pour in, to pour on īnfundō, īnfundere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 355, p. 2119
to praise laudō, laudāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 531
to pray, to beg ōrō, ōrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 259, p. 1519

To pray, To recommend, To breathe, To give up, To exchange
chapter topic; Chapter 259, p. 1519
to prefer mālō, mālle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 605
To prefer, To desire, To wish for, To miss, Wish
chapter topic; Chapter 111, p. 605
to prepare parō, parāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 537
to prepare, to get ready apparō, apparāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 394, p. 2363
To press on, To break off, To tie, To mix, To obey
chapter topic; Chapter 233, p. 1359
to press on, to insist īnstō, īnstāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1359
to press out, to express exprimō, exprimere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 260, p. 1525
To press out, To feed, To put together, To notice, To blush
chapter topic; Chapter 260, p. 1525
to press, to squeeze premō, premere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 969
to pretend, imitate simulō, simulāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 504, p. 3053
to proclaim, to announce; to deliver (a speech) prōnūntiō, prōnūntiāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 371, p. 2219
to promise prōmittō, prōmittere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 945
to promise in marriage, to betroth dēspondeō, dēspondēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 327, p. 1943
to promise, to offer polliceor, pollicērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 396, p. 2375
to prophesy, to foretell vāticinor, vāticinārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 348, p. 2075
to propose, to put forward prōpōnō, prōpōnere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 957
to prove false, to refute refellō, refellere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 362, p. 2163
to prove; to accuse arguō, arguere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 310, p. 1837
to prove wrong, to convict; to prove convincō, convincere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 362, p. 2163
to publish, to make known (a bill) prōmulgō, prōmulgāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 410, p. 2463
to pull, to drag trahō, trahere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 537

to punish pūniō, pūnīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 312, p. 1849
to punish, to correct; to rebuke castīgō, castīgāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 415, p. 2495
to pursue persequor, persequī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1161
to push, to drive pellō, pellere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 258, p. 1513
to put back; to store away repōnō, repōnere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 554, p. 3367
to put in (to land), to bring a ship to shore appellō, appellere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 439, p. 2647
To put in, To step out, To haul ashore, To launch, Navigable
chapter topic; Chapter 439, p. 2647
to put off; to differ; to spread differō, differre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 395, p. 2369
to put on (clothes) induō, induere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 877
to put out exstinguō, exstinguere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 939
to put out, to quench restinguō, restinguere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 319, p. 1893
to put to flight, to rout fugō, fugāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 342, p. 2037
to put, to place pōnō, pōnere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 397
to put together, to arrange compōnō, compōnere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 260, p. 1525
to quake with fear, be terrified paveō, pavēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 496, p. 3003
to question, to examine interrogō, interrogāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 412, p. 2475
to reach, to arrive at perveniō, pervenīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1155
to read aloud, to recite recitō, recitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 371, p. 2219
to read through perlegō, perlegere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 550, p. 3341
to reap, to harvest metō, metere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 981
to reason, to calculate ratiōcinor, ratiōcinārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 364, p. 2175
to recall, to mention commemorō, commemorāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 299, p. 1769

to reckon, to consider; to value exīstimō, exīstimāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 357, p. 2133
to recline at table discumbō, discumbere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 356, p. 2125
to recline, lie down recumbō, recumbere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 527, p. 3197
to recognise agnōscō, agnōscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1155
to recommend, to entrust commendō, commendāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 259, p. 1519
to reconcile, bring together again reconciliō, reconciliāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 537, p. 3261
to recover, get well convalēscō, convalēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 526, p. 3191
to refresh, restore recreō, recreāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 526, p. 3191
to refuse recūsō, recūsāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1155
to refute; to drive back refūtō, refūtāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 362, p. 2163
to reign, to be king rēgnō, rēgnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 345, p. 2055
to reject, spurn spernō, spernere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 514, p. 3117
to rejoice, be glad laetor, laetārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 489, p. 2961
to rejoice, to be glad gaudeō, gaudēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 403
to relax, ease; to loosen relaxō, relaxāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 538, p. 3267
to remedy, be good for medeor, medērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 526, p. 3191
to remember meminī, meminisse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1371
To remember, To speak, To follow, To set out, To use
chapter topic; Chapter 235, p. 1371
to remove removeō, removēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1335
to repeal, to abolish abrogō, abrogāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 410, p. 2463
to report; to carry back referō, referre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 299, p. 1769
to resound, echo resonō, resonāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 545, p. 3311

to respect; to fear vereor, verērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 496, p. 3003
to rest quiēscō, quiēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1143
to rest, take a rest requiēscō, requiēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 527, p. 3197
to restrain, to keep in check coerceō, coercēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 416, p. 2501
to ride (on horseback) equitō, equitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 432, p. 2603
To ride, Saddle cloth, Spur, To jump down, To kick
chapter topic; Chapter 432, p. 2603
to rise; to arise, to begin orior, orīrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 298, p. 1761
to rise, to get up surgō, surgere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 543
to roast, to toast, to parch torreō, torrēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 354, p. 2111
to rouse, to wake; to stir up excitō, excitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 372, p. 2225
to row rēmigō, rēmigāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 437, p. 2633
to rule, to guide, to direct regō, regere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 385, p. 2307
to run to help succurrō, succurrere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 316, p. 1875
to rush; to fall down ruō, ruere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 313, p. 1855
to sacrifice immolō, immolāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 334, p. 1987
to sail nāvigō, nāvigāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 537
to sail out, to sail away; to sail across ēnāvigō, ēnāvigāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 444, p. 2677
to sail past, to ride past, to be carried past praetervehor, praetervehī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 443, p. 2671
to say repeatedly; to dictate dictō, dictāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 405, p. 2433
to say yes; to say āiō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 349, p. 2081
to scorch, to singe ambūrō, ambūrere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 319, p. 1893
to scratch; to carve scalpō, scalpere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 447, p. 2697

to seal, to seal up obsignō, obsignāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 332, p. 1975
to search out, to explore explōrō, explōrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 302, p. 1787
to season, to spice; to pickle condiō, condīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 355, p. 2119
to seem videor, vidērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1353
to seize, to arrest; to grasp comprehendō, comprehendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 304, p. 1799
to sell vendō, vendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 391
to send mittō, mittere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 397
to send away, to banish relēgō, relēgāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 415, p. 2495
to serve, to be a slave serviō, servīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1353
to serve up, to put before appōnō, appōnere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 356, p. 2125
to set about (with effort), to undertake; to plot mōlior, mōlīrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 394, p. 2363
to set free (a slave) manūmittō, manūmittere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 389, p. 2333
to set in order, to arrange ōrdinō, ōrdināre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 394, p. 2363
to set on fire incendō, incendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 951
to set out proficīscor, proficīscī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1371
to set out on, to enter upon; to go in ingredior, ingredī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 427, p. 2571
to set out, to arrange dispōnō, dispōnere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 394, p. 2363
to set sail, to sail vēlificor, vēlificārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 438, p. 2639
to set up; to decide statuō, statuere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 393, p. 2357
to sew, to stitch suō, suere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 378, p. 2263
to shape, to imagine fingō, fingere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1347
to share, to divide partior, partīrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1149

to sharpen, to whet acuō, acuere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 471, p. 2847
to shear, to clip; to shave tondeō, tondēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 478, p. 2889
to shine lūceō, lūcēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 889
to shout clāmō, clāmāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 939
to show ostendō, ostendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 889
to show, to point out mōnstrō, mōnstrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 451, p. 2721
to show, to point out; to prove dēmōnstrō, dēmōnstrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 361, p. 2157
to shut in; to conclude, to infer cōnclūdō, cōnclūdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 364, p. 2175
to sigh suspīrō, suspīrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 491, p. 2973
to sing canō, canere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 385
to sing cantō, cantāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 871
to sing together, sound in harmony concinō, concinere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 543, p. 3297
to sink, to plunge, to dip mergō, mergere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 315, p. 1869
to skim off dēspūmō, dēspūmāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 353, p. 2105
to slide down, to slip down, to fall dēlābor, dēlābī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 481, p. 2909
to slip, to glide lābor, lābī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 969
To slip, To lighten, To admire, To suspect, To press
chapter topic; Chapter 170, p. 969
to smell, scent olfaciō, olfacere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 519, p. 3147
to smile subrīdeō, subrīdēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 939
to smoke fūmō, fūmāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 318, p. 1887
to snatch away, to rescue ēripiō, ēripere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 316, p. 1875
to snatch, to carry off rapiō, rapere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 304, p. 1799

to sneeze sternuō, sternuere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 520, p. 3153
to snore stertō, stertere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 448, p. 2703
To snore, To make a noise, To make a din, Drinker, Hoarse
chapter topic; Chapter 448, p. 2703
to soothe, soften lēniō, lēnīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 492, p. 2979
to sound, ring sonō, sonāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 545, p. 3311
to sow, to plant serō, serere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 981
To sow, To reap, To hunt, To go fishing, To deny
chapter topic; Chapter 172, p. 981
to speak loquor, loquī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1371
to speak out, to utter ēloquor, ēloquī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 368, p. 2201
to spend the night, to stay all night pernoctō, pernoctāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 445, p. 2683
to spin (thread) neō, nēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 472, p. 2853
to spread abroad, to make public vulgō, vulgāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 301, p. 1781
to spread, to lay out; to pave (a road) sternō, sternere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 425, p. 2559
to sprinkle aspergō, aspergere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 355, p. 2119
to state firmly affirmō, affirmāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1179
To state firmly, To hurt, To decorate, To throw together, To cease
chapter topic; Chapter 204, p. 1179
to stay awake vigilō, vigilāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 895
to stay in the country rūsticor, rūsticārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 542, p. 3291
to stay, to remain maneō, manēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 397
to steal fūror, fūrārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1353
To steal, To uncover, To seem, To serve, To suffer
chapter topic; Chapter 232, p. 1353
to steer; to govern gubernō, gubernāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 385, p. 2307

to step out, to go out; to land, to disembark ēgredior, ēgredī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 439, p. 2647
to step, to walk gradior, gradī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 423, p. 2547
to stir up, to rouse concitō, concitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 387, p. 2319
to stop for a while, to stay commoror, commorārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 455, p. 2747
to straighten, to correct corrigō, corrigere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1161
to strain, to filter cōlō, cōlāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 355, p. 2119
To stray, Off the road, Without roads, Roundabout way, To wander about
chapter topic; Chapter 452, p. 2727
to stray, to wander from the way aberrō, aberrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 452, p. 2727
to strengthen; to confirm, to assert cōnfirmō, cōnfirmāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 361, p. 2157
to strike a bargain, to come to terms pacīscor, pacīscī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 397, p. 2383
to strike against, to stumble; to offend offendō, offendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 314, p. 1861
to stroll spatior, spatiārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to suckle, to feed, to rear nūtriō, nūtrīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 323, p. 1919
to suffer, to allow patior, patī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1353
to suppose, to imagine opīnor, opīnārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 357, p. 2133
to suspect suspicor, suspicārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 969
to swear (an oath) iūrō, iūrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 310, p. 1837
to sweep verrō, verrere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 552, p. 3353
to swell, be swollen tumeō, tumēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 524, p. 3179
to swim natō, natāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 391
to swim across trānsnatō, trānsnatāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 482, p. 2915
to swim to safety, to swim out ēnatō, ēnatāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 440, p. 2653

to take across, to cross over; to throw across trāiciō, trāicere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 440, p. 2653
to take by storm expugnō, expugnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 341, p. 2031
to take off (clothes) exuō, exuere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 877
to take precautions, to guard against beforehand praecaveō, praecavēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 392, p. 2351
to talk together colloquor, colloquī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1161
To talk together, To hand over, To straighten, To celebrate, To pursue
chapter topic; Chapter 201, p. 1161
to taste gustō, gustāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 895
to teach doceō, docēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 400, p. 2401
to tell of, to relate memorō, memorāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 299, p. 1769
to tell, to relate nārrō, nārrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 531
to terrify thoroughly perterreō, perterrēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 496, p. 3003
to the left, towards the left sinistrōrsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 454, p. 2739
To the right, To the left, Slanting, To go round, Detour
chapter topic; Chapter 454, p. 2739
to the right, towards the right dextrōrsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 454, p. 2739
to there, thither illūc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 629
to think over; to rehearse, to practise meditor, meditārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 402, p. 2413
to threaten minitor, minitārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 321, p. 1905
to thresh trītūrō, trītūrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 476, p. 2877
To thresh, To winnow, Chaff, Stalk, Granary
chapter topic; Chapter 476, p. 2877
to throng, to crowd into; to visit often frequentō, frequentāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 460, p. 2777
to throw iaciō, iacere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 883

to throw away abiciō, abicere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 951
to throw in the way; to throw in someone's face obiciō, obicere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 363, p. 2169
to throw into confusion, to upset perturbō, perturbāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 374, p. 2239
to throw together; to guess coniciō, conicere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1179
to tie ligō, ligāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1359
to tire out, to weary fatīgō, fatīgāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 380, p. 2275
to torment, torture cruciō, cruciāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 497, p. 3011
To toss on the waves, To be seasick, To carry down, To take across, To swim to safety
chapter topic; Chapter 440, p. 2653
to toss on the waves, to rise in waves; to waver flūctuō, flūctuāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 440, p. 2653
to touch tangō, tangere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 537
to touch; to happen (to), to fall to one's lot contingō, contingere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 375, p. 2245
to track, to trace; to search out vestīgō, vestīgāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 453, p. 2733
to trade at market, to buy and sell nūndinor, nūndinārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 462, p. 2789
To trade at market, To keep shouting, To offer for sale, Goods, Hawker
chapter topic; Chapter 462, p. 2789
to train, to practise; to keep busy exerceō, exercēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 378, p. 2263
to train up, to instruct; to set up īnstituō, īnstituere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 400, p. 2401
to travel abroad, to live in foreign parts peregrīnor, peregrīnārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 428, p. 2577
to tremble tremō, tremere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to trickle, to flow, to drip mānō, mānāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 483, p. 2921
to trust, rely on; to be confident cōnfīdō, cōnfīdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 498, p. 3017
to try, to attempt cōnor, cōnārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 393, p. 2357

to try, to test temptō, temptāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1335
to turn vertō, vertere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1347
to turn back, to return revertor, revertī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 455, p. 2747
to turn on a lathe, to round off tornō, tornāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 471, p. 2847
to turn out well, to succeed; to come next succēdō, succēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 373, p. 2233
To turn, To enjoy, To shape, To complain, To be missing
chapter topic; Chapter 231, p. 1347
to turn up one's nose at, feel disgust at fastīdiō, fastīdīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 494, p. 2991
to uncover, to discover dētegō, dētegere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1353
to unroll; to read (a book) ēvolvō, ēvolvere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 550, p. 3341
to untie, to pay solvō, solvere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 883
to unyoke; to separate disiungō, disiungere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 430, p. 2589
to urge, to encourage hortor, hortārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 369, p. 2207
to use ūtor, ūtī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1371
to use up cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1173
to value, to put a price on; to judge aestimō, aestimāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 466, p. 2815
to vanish ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1365
to violate, to break; to wrong violō, violāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 398, p. 2389
to visit vīsitō, vīsitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 871
to vomit, be sick vomō, vomere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 525, p. 3185
to vow, to promise solemnly voveō, vovēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 334, p. 1987
to wail, cry aloud plōrō, plōrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 491, p. 2973
to wait at table, to serve ministrō, ministrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 356, p. 2125

to wake up expergīscor, expergīscī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1341
To wake up, To accompany, To add, To announce, To appear
chapter topic; Chapter 230, p. 1341
to wander about, to roam vagor, vagārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 452, p. 2727
to wander; to be wrong errō, errāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 543
to warm, to heat calefaciō, calefacere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1495
to warn, to remind moneō, monēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1501
to wash lavō, lavāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 391
to wash off, to wash clean abluō, abluere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 350, p. 2087
to watch, to observe observō, observāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to water down, to dilute; to wash away dīluō, dīluere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 449, p. 2709
to wear out, to tire out dēfatīgō, dēfatīgāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 426, p. 2565
to weave; to build texō, texere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 378, p. 2263
to weep fleō, flēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 385
to weep, shed tears lacrimō, lacrimāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 491, p. 2973
to weigh carefully, to weigh out; to ponder pēnsō, pēnsāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 464, p. 2803
to weigh out; to hang on appendō, appendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 464, p. 2803
to weigh (up), to ponder ponderō, ponderāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 359, p. 2145
to welcome, to receive excipiō, excipere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to whisper susurrō, susurrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 301, p. 1781
to win, to defeat vincō, vincere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 889
to winnow; to fan, to toss in the air ventilō, ventilāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 476, p. 2877
to wipe, to wipe clean tergeō, tergēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 350, p. 2087

to wish for, to choose optō, optāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 605
to wonder, marvel at mīror, mīrārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 495, p. 2997
to work labōrō, labōrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 385
to work, to be busy (at) operor, operārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 376, p. 2251
to wrestle, struggle luctor, luctārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 539, p. 3273
to write back, reply rescrībō, rescrībere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 551, p. 3347
to yawn, gape oscitō, oscitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 520, p. 3153
to yoke, to harness; to put under subiungō, subiungere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 430, p. 2589
today hodiē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 555
today's hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1249
Today's, Yesterday's, Tomorrow's, True, Uncertain
chapter topic; Chapter 215, p. 1249
Today, Yesterday, Year, Month, Dawn
chapter topic; Chapter 103, p. 555
toilsome; hard-working labōriōsus, labōriōsa, labōriōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 379, p. 2269
tomorrow's crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1249
too little, not enough parum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 567
too much nimis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 525
touch tāctus, tāctūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 519, p. 3147
Tower, Column, City walls, Ditch, Rampart
chapter topic; Chapter 280, p. 1649
Towns and Associations
chapter topic; Chapter 388, p. 2325
Toys and play
chapter topic; Chapter 540, p. 3279
Trade
chapter topic; Chapter 421, p. 2533
trade, commerce; dealings commercium, commerciī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 421, p. 2533

Trades of the Town
chapter topic; Chapter 377, p. 2257
transport, carriage (of goods or people); the fare vectūra, vectūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 438, p. 2639
travel abroad, a stay in foreign parts peregrīnātiō, peregrīnātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 428, p. 2577
travel money; provisions for a journey viāticum, viāticī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 427, p. 2571
Travelling carriage, Broad street, Aqueduct, Public baths, Amphitheatre
chapter topic; Chapter 244, p. 1427
treacherous, faithless perfidus, perfida, perfidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 399, p. 2395
Tree, Flower, Leaf, Forest, Mountain
chapter topic; Chapter 86, p. 453
Triumphus
chapter topic; Chapter 343, p. 2043
true, real vērus, vēra, vērum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1249
Trust and Betrayal
chapter topic; Chapter 399, p. 2395
trust, confidence; a thing held in trust fīdūcia, fīdūciae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 396, p. 2375
Trust, Courage, Shame, Envy, Boredom
chapter topic; Chapter 262, p. 1537
trust, faith fidēs, fideī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 262, p. 1537
trusting, credulous crēdulus, crēdula, crēdulum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 498, p. 3017
truth vēritās, vēritātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1087
turbulent, wild; cloudy, muddy (of water) turbidus, turbida, turbidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 485, p. 2933
twice bis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1007
twin gemellus, gemella, gemellum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 528, p. 3203

U

Ubi, Cur, Quia, Meus, Tuus
chapter topic; Chapter 52, p. 249

ugly, misshapen dēfōrmis, dēfōrme
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 548, p. 3329
ugly, shameful turpis, turpe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 853
unbelievable, incredible incrēdibilis, incrēdibile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 349, p. 2081
uncertain incertus, incerta, incertum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1249
understanding, intelligence intellegentia, intellegentiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 407, p. 2445
unexpected inopīnātus, inopīnāta, inopīnātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 375, p. 2245
unfair, unjust; uneven inīquus, inīqua, inīquum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 414, p. 2489
ungrateful; unpleasant ingrātus, ingrāta, ingrātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 512, p. 3103
unharmed, safe incolumis, incolume
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 316, p. 1875
unjust iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 266, p. 1563
unknown ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1403
unlearned, untaught indoctus, indocta, indoctum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 403, p. 2419
unless, if not nisi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1019
unlucky, unhappy īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1421
unmarried caelebs, caelibis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1409
Unrest
chapter topic; Chapter 387, p. 2319
until; while dōnec
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1001
unworthy, undeserving; shameful indignus, indigna, indignum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 493, p. 2985
upwards sūrsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 264, p. 1551
Urging and Dissuading
chapter topic; Chapter 369, p. 2207
useful ūtilis, ūtile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 821
Useful phrase, honest context
culture and usage topic; explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 21, p. 81

useless inūtilis, inūtile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1403

V

valeō and valē — answer and farewell from one verb
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 19, p. 71
Vegetable grower, Fishmonger, Plaited basket, Wicker basket, Bread basket
chapter topic; Chapter 463, p. 2797
vegetables, greens holus, holeris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 415
velim — I would like
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 290, p. 1713
Venēnum
chapter topic; Chapter 307, p. 1819
Vērum aut falsum
chapter topic; Chapter 310, p. 1837
very valdē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1025
Vessel, Little boat, Skiff, Punt, Raft
chapter topic; Chapter 435, p. 2621
Vessel, Two-handled jar, Flask, Purse, Coin
chapter topic; Chapter 123, p. 679
victory victōria, victōriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1075
vīdī, vīdit — the past of what happened
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 281, p. 1657
Vigilēs
chapter topic; Chapter 319, p. 1893
vigorous, active strēnuus, strēnua, strēnuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 508, p. 3079
Vine, Oak, Pine, Laurel, Violet
chapter topic; Chapter 250, p. 1465
vinegar acētum, acētī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1125
void, invalid; in vain irritus, irrita, irritum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 398, p. 2389

W

wages, pay mercēs, mercēdis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1093
Wagon, Light gig, War chariot, Covered carriage, Travelling coach
chapter topic; Chapter 429, p. 2583
wakeful, watchful vigil, vigilis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1255
Walking, Running, Opening, Closing
chapter topic; Chapter 41, p. 167
want, extreme poverty egestās, egestātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 422, p. 2539
war bellum, bellī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 271, p. 1593
Wash, Cook, Sell, Swim, Call
chapter topic; Chapter 76, p. 391
Wasp, Gnat, Flea, Worm, Tortoise
chapter topic; Chapter 276, p. 1625
wasteful prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1057
Wasteful, Moderate, Eloquent, Mute, Lame
chapter topic; Chapter 184, p. 1057
water and wine — one word French wore down to almost nothing, one that barely changed anywhere aqua, vīnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 10, p. 39
Water, Wine, and Bread
chapter topic; Chapter 10, p. 39
Wave, Ice, Hail, Thunder, Lightning
chapter topic; Chapter 130, p. 721
wax; a wax tablet cēra, cērae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 685
weak īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 859
weak, disabled dēbilis, dēbile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 521, p. 3161
weakness, infirmity dēbilitās, dēbilitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 521, p. 3161
weapons, arms arma, armōrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 340, p. 2025
weary, tired out lassus, lassa, lassum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 426, p. 2565
Weather
chapter topic; Chapter 15, p. 57

weather or storm — a derivative of tempus that specialized for weather in Classical Latin, while tempus itself meant only time; later tempus widened to weather and tempestās narrowed to storm tempestās
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 15, p. 57
Wedding, Husband or wife, Parent, Grandson, Granddaughter
chapter topic; Chapter 273, p. 1607
Weighing a Question
chapter topic; Chapter 359, p. 2145
Weight and Standing
chapter topic; Chapter 370, p. 2213
weight; seriousness gravitās, gravitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 370, p. 2213
welcome, pleasing; grateful grātus, grāta, grātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 512, p. 3103
Well
chapter topic; Chapter 27, p. 101
"well" — a morphologically simple inheritance: French bien and Spanish bien are just bene plus one regular sound change (the same short-e-diphthongizes-to-ie shift as mel→miel), with no extra grafted-on suffix, unlike quōmodo's more roundabout Romance history bene
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 27, p. 101
well known; noble nōbilis, nōbile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 382, p. 2289
wet, damp ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 507
Whale, Cockerel, Lip, Chin, Back
chapter topic; Chapter 135, p. 753
What I Think
chapter topic; Chapter 283, p. 1671
What I Think and Judge
chapter topic; Chapter 357, p. 2133
What Pupils Studied
chapter topic; Chapter 404, p. 2425
what's your name? / my name is... — the genuinely classical dative of possession, literally what is the name to you? quid tibi nōmen est? / mihi nōmen est...
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 20, p. 77
What Sets Things Going
chapter topic; Chapter 372, p. 2225
What You Should Do, and Why
chapter topic; Chapter 284, p. 1677

wheat trīticum, trīticī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 475, p. 2871
when — as a question and as the hinge of a clause quandō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 225
when, since, although (with the subjunctive) cum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 367, p. 2195
where — the question the quōmodo lesson left half-finished ubi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 249
which (of two) uter, utra, utrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 915
while — the word that holds one thing open while another happens dum
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 282, p. 1665
who, which — the commonest word in Latin prose, and the one that joins two sentences into one quī, quae, quod
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 225
whole tōtus, tōta, tōtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1415
wholesome, healthy salūbris, salūbre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 523, p. 3173
why — and the two words that answer it cūr
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 249
why?, for what reason? quārē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 611
why no two-word good-afternoon phrase exists — Latin has no simplex afternoon noun, and a grammatical three-word workaround is not attested as a greeting salvē (post merīdiem)
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 36, p. 125
why?, on account of what? quamobrem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 611
wicked, criminal scelerātus, scelerāta, scelerātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 305, p. 1805
wild ferus, fera, ferum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1241
windy ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 865
wisdom sapientia, sapientiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1193
wise sapiēns, sapientis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 519
wise, sensible prūdēns, prūdentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 839
within, indoors intus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1013

without doubt, surely nīmīrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 366, p. 2189
without roads, pathless, impassable invius, invia, invium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 452, p. 2727
witty, clever facētus, facēta, facētum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 502, p. 3041
Wonder and amazement
chapter topic; Chapter 495, p. 2997
wonderful, astonishing mīrābilis, mīrābile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 349, p. 2081
Wonderful, Different, Similar, Fair, Unjust
chapter topic; Chapter 266, p. 1563
wonderful, strange mīrus, mīra, mīrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 266, p. 1563
Wood, Marble, Glass, Hide, Linen
chapter topic; Chapter 249, p. 1459
wood, timber lignum, lignī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1459
Woodland pass, Peak, Yoke, Whirlpool, Order
chapter topic; Chapter 228, p. 1329
wool lāna, lānae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 783
wool-working, spinning and weaving lānificium, lānificiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 472, p. 2853
Work and Workers
chapter topic; Chapter 376, p. 2251
Work, Sing, Dance, Laugh, Weep
chapter topic; Chapter 75, p. 385
work, toil labor, labōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1453
worn out dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1255
worried sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1409
Worry and distress
chapter topic; Chapter 497, p. 3011
worth, rank, dignity dignitās, dignitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 370, p. 2213
Would
chapter topic; Chapter 290, p. 1713
Wound, Scar, Head cold, Drug, Ointment
chapter topic; Chapter 205, p. 1185
wounded, hurt saucius, saucia, saucium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 314, p. 1861

wretched, unhappy miser, misera, miserum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 833
Writing — Four Lines, And The Word That Has A Twin
chapter topic; Chapter 62, p. 311
Writing — My Own Line
chapter topic; Chapter 60, p. 307
writing tablets pugillārēs, pugillārium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 551, p. 3347
Writing — With A Clock
chapter topic; Chapter 61, p. 309

Y

yearly, solemn; customary sollemnis, sollemne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 333, p. 1981
yes / no (lit. "thus" / "not") ita / nōn explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 1, p. 1
yesterday herī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 555
yesterday's hesternus, hesterna, hesternum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1249
You're Welcome
chapter topic; Chapter 23, p. 91
"you're welcome" — another honest gap: Classical Latin has no single fixed reply to thanks, and nihil est ("it's nothing") is a modern conversational-Latin convention built from genuinely real words, not a specific classical citation for this exact job nihil est
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 23, p. 91
You, Singular and Plural
chapter topic; Chapter 22, p. 87
you (singular) / you (plural) — a PURELY grammatical number distinction in Classical Latin, with no politeness dimension at all; the polite-vous pattern (a Late Latin innovation) is vōs's own direct descendant, unlike German's Sie, which solved the same politeness problem independently via a completely different pronoun (3rd-person plural, not 2nd) tū / vōs
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 22, p. 87
young adulthood, youth adulēscentia, adulēscentiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 326, p. 1937
your — and the pair of forms the tū / vōs lesson promised tuus, tua, tuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 249

Your own line — the first writing with no model
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 60, p. 307
youth; young people iuventūs, iuventūtis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 326, p. 1937