Preface

This book teaches Marathi one word at a time, and it teaches each word by taking it apart. It is written for someone starting from zero — who may not read a single Devanagari letter — so the script is taught inside the word lessons themselves: each word introduces exactly the letters it needs, so you learn to read नमस्कार and learn that it means "greetings" in the same few minutes. (A reader who already reads Devanagari simply skims the letter notes — "the letters in this word" in most chapters, "sounds you'll need" in Chapter 7.)

Marathi is written in Devanagari, the script of Hindi and Sanskrit — but it is its own Indo-Aryan language, the tongue of Maharashtra, and one shaped by long contact with the Dravidian south. So the book keeps two contrasts in view: Marathi's Sanskrit inheritance (shared with Hindi), and the ways it goes its own way — an extra letter ळ, three grammatical genders where Hindi kept two, and gender marked on the verb. Roots are traced to Sanskrit and, where they reach, to the wider Indo-European family that also gave English its words — every form supplied in full, so no prior knowledge of any other language is assumed.

How to use this book

Every numbered section is one word, or one small phrase, and takes a few minutes — the length of a queue, an errand, or the walk to the bus. Read them in order the first time through: each section stands on the ones before it, and nothing is used before it has been taught. After that the book becomes reference, and you can open it anywhere.

Say the Marathi out loud wherever you can. The prompts under Your turn are written to be spoken, and saying a word is most of what makes it stay. The questions under Before you move on carry their own answers in brackets: cover them, answer from memory, then look.

Nothing here is gated behind the alphabet. Each lesson introduces exactly the letters and sounds its own word needs, so you are reading real words from the first page rather than drilling a chart. The whole script is gathered in a reference at the back of the book — somewhere to look things up when you are curious, never a chapter to sit through first.

Chapter 1

Namaskar, Piece by Piece

Modes: ✓ pen (14) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 14 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can hear and say namaskār, move हो from tracing through dictation, and read नमस्कार by assembling only signs I have already practised.
> Read नमस्कार and copy it only after hearing its meaning, writing हो from memory and sound, and tracing every load-bearing sign in its own short lesson.

1.1 Namaskar — first hear the greeting

The first Marathi word — and the everyday greeting of Maharashtra. First, only listen: namaskār.

The exchange

Namaskār is how you greet someone, and how you take your leave. Hear its beats slowly: na-ma-skār. Answer with the same greeting once.

The whole Devanagari spelling is deliberately absent from this first pass. The lessons right after this one give your eye and hand one shape at a time, and the whole written greeting arrives only when every piece of it is already yours.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Namaskār = Sanskrit namaḥ ("a bow") + kāra ("the making of") — literally "the making of a bow." The same word Kannada and Telugu borrowed, and close kin to Hindi's namaskār. But note: where Hindi leans on namaste, Marathi's default, all-purpose greeting is namaskār — one of many small ways the two Devanagari languages differ.

Why it's said this way

Said with palms pressed together, respectful and neutral — hello and goodbye, any time, to almost anyone. Warmer and more casual: kāy mhaṇtā? ("what do you say?" ≈ "how's it going?") among friends.

Writing — let your finger meet one shape

Here is the first printed shape of the greeting's written form: न. Follow that shape once with your finger while you say namaskār.

Do not write it yet, and do not try to read it. The shape gets its own short lesson later in this chapter; tracing a typeface here does not claim a handwriting stroke order.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- its beats — na · ma · skār → "namaskār"
- "namaskār" once as a greeting and once as a goodbye

Before you move on

What does namaskār literally mean, and how does Marathi's greeting habit differ from Hindi's? ("The making of a bow"; Marathi favors namaskār, Hindi namaste.) Do you need to read its spelling yet? (No — the script starts next, one shape at a time.)

1.2 ह — the consonant ha

Nothing is assumed but the words you can already say. This chapter turns them into words you can read.

Script

Devanagari is an abugida, and that word carries the whole system.

It is not an alphabet, where each letter is one sound. It is a system where a consonant already carries a vowel, and you write a vowel mark only when you want a different one.

Here is the first consonant:

ह

That is not h. It is ha — the consonant h with an a already inside it, the a of English about. Nobody wrote that vowel. A bare consonant in this script is understood to carry it, and it is called the inherent vowel.

Now look at the top of the shape. There is a horizontal bar running across it, and it is not decoration. It is the shirorekhā, the head-line, and in running Devanagari it joins up across a whole word so the writing appears to hang from a washing line. It is the single most recognisable thing about this script — and Gujarati, its sister, is written by erasing exactly this line.

Writing — notice and trace one consonant

How it is written — 3 strokes · 2 pen lifts · 3 movements

Stroke order after Opiaterein, 'Deva-ह-order.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 9 May 2009

This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ह is written, stroke by stroke

Keep ह visible. Finger-trace it once, then trace one printed model once with a pencil. Say ha only after your hand stops. Do not copy the word for "yes" yet; its vowel sign comes next.

Before you move on

What vowel does a bare consonant carry? (a — the inherent vowel, and nobody writes it.) What is the bar across the top called, and what does it do in a whole word? (The shirorekhā; it joins up across the word.)
Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

1.3 ो — the vowel sign that replaces the inherent a

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

The inherent a is a default. To get a different vowel you replace it, with a mark called a mātrā.

On its own it is meaningless. Attached to a consonant it swaps the inherent short a for o, the vowel of English go — and notice how it attaches: a stroke to the right, plus a small mark riding on the head-line itself.

Put it on the consonant you have:

ह + ो → हो

ho. That is a word: it is yes, and its own word lesson comes once the first letters are in your hand.

One consonant and one mark, and a word you could already say became a word you can read. Nothing was memorised as a picture.

Writing — one supported copy

Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Devanagari recognizer, class 55 (ो, o sign): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native writers (MIT licence, 2012)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ो is written, stroke by stroke

Keep हो visible. Copy it once: first ह, then its attached ो sign. Point to both pieces in your copy and read ho. You may look back after each piece; memory is not the task yet.

Before you move on

What does a mātrā do to the inherent vowel? (Replaces it.) What word did those two pieces make? (हो — ho, "yes".)
Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

1.4 हो — look, hide, write, compare

Look at हो for five seconds. Point first to ह, then to attached ो.
Do not copy it while the model is visible.

Writing — delayed copy

- cover हो

- wait five seconds
- write it once from memory
- uncover the model and compare the two pieces

If one piece differs, circle it and repair only that place. Repair is part of the exercise, not a failure. There is no tracing and no romanized answer model.

Before you move on

Read your repaired word as ho. Stop after one memory attempt.

1.5 One heard answer — write what you know

Cover the answer lower on this page. You will hear one familiar answer. No new Marathi and no new Devanagari shape is hiding in this lesson.

Writing — short dictation

Hear: ho — "yes"

Write the Devanagari word from sound alone. Do not use a visible model, romanization, or tracing guide. Now uncover and compare: हो. Check ह first and attached ो second. Repair one place if needed.

Before you move on

Writing from sound completes this tiny runway. It is not a mock assessment; later lessons must grow from one known word to forms, messages, and timed tasks.

1.6 न — the consonant na

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How it is written — 3 strokes · 2 pen lifts · 3 movements

Stroke order after Opiaterein, 'Deva-09-28-order.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 11 May 2009
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How न is written, stroke by stroke

न

na, with the same inherent a inside it — the n of English net, then the vowel nobody wrote.

Nothing new in the machinery. This is simply another consonant, and every rule you already have applies to it unchanged. That is the payoff of learning the system rather than the words: every consonant from here behaves exactly like the two you already know. New shapes are coming; new rules are not.

Write it beside the first, and notice both hang from the same head-line.

Your turn

- Write it: न
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What vowel is inside न when nothing is attached? (a.) And how many new rules did this lesson introduce? (None — only a shape.)

Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

1.7 ◌ा — a second vowel sign, and the simplest one in the script

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How ◌ा is written, stroke by stroke

ā, the long a of English father. It is a single upright stroke standing to the right of its consonant, dropping from the head-line.

न + ◌ा → ना

nā. One beat — a mātrā changes the vowel, it never adds a beat.

You now hold two vowel signs, and they sit in different places: one to the right with a mark above, one plainly to the right. Where a mātrā sits is part of its identity, not a style choice, and in this family of scripts they can go right, left, above, below, or on both sides at once. A reader learns to look around a consonant rather than only after it.

Your turn

- Write it: ◌ा
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Where does this mātrā sit? (To the right of the consonant.) Does it add a beat? (No — it replaces the vowel.)
Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

1.8 ◌ी — a mātrā that leans the other way

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Devanagari recognizer, class 49 (ii sign): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native writers (MIT licence, 2012)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ी is written, stroke by stroke

ī, the long ee of English see. It stands to the right like the last one, but with a curve that rises and hooks back over the head-line to the left.

Here it is, and here is what it completes:

ह + ी → ही

And now put that beside a piece you already built:

ना + ही → नाही

nā-hī — no.

You can now read both answers to a yes-or-no question:

हो नाही

Two consonants and three vowel signs. That is the arithmetic of an abugida: consonants and mātrās multiply, so a small number of pieces reaches a large number of syllables very fast.

Your turn

- Write it: ी
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is नाही? (No.) How many pieces is it built from? (Four — two consonants and two mātrās.) And which two mātrās look similar but hook differently? (The ā and the ī.)

1.9 म — the consonant ma

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How म is written, stroke by stroke

म

ma — the m of English met, with the inherent vowel riding along.

Three consonants now. Say them in the order you met them, each with the vowel nobody wrote:

ह न म

ha, na, ma. Three shapes, one head-line each, and the same rule under all of them.

Your turn

- Write it: म
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Say the three consonants you hold, each with its inherent vowel. (ha, na, ma.)

1.10 स — the consonant sa

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How स is written, stroke by stroke

स

sa — the s of English sit, plus the inherent vowel.

Four consonants. You are most of the way to a word you have been saying since your very first lesson, and the only piece of machinery still missing is the one that handles two consonants pressed together.

Your turn

- Write it: स
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is the inherent vowel in स? (a — sa.)
Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

1.11 क — the consonant ka

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How क is written, stroke by stroke

क

ka — the k of English skip, unaspirated, with no puff of breath after it.

Hold your palm in front of your mouth and say English kit: you feel air. Say skip: you do not. This is the second one. Devanagari has a separate letter for the breathy version, and swapping them changes the word — so the difference that English treats as an accident is one this script writes down.

Five consonants, two mātrās, and one thing left.

Your turn

- Write it: क
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is क the k of kit or of skip? (Of skip — no puff of air.) And does the script care? (Yes — the breathy one is a different letter.)

Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

1.12 ◌् — the mark that DELETES the inherent vowel and glues two consonants together

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How it is written — one unbroken stroke · 1 movement

Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Devanagari recognizer, class 61 (virama): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native writers (MIT licence, 2012)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ◌् is written, stroke by stroke

The inherent vowel is a nuisance when you do not want it. If a word presses two consonants together with no vowel between them, writing them plainly would insert an a that is not there.

So there is a mark that removes it:

This is the virama, and it sits under a consonant meaning: no vowel here.

Then something happens that no European alphabet does. A consonant stripped of its vowel usually does not sit there bare — it fuses with the consonant after it into one joined shape, a conjunct:

स + ् + क → स्क

ska, one cluster. Look closely and both letters are still in there. Conjuncts are not new characters to memorise — they are two you already know, joined, and the head-line runs straight across the join.

Your turn

- Write it: ्
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does the virama do? (Removes the inherent vowel.)
What usually happens to a consonant that loses its vowel? (It joins the next into a conjunct.) And are conjuncts new letters? (No — two known letters, fused.)
Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

1.13 र — the last consonant of the greeting

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How it is written — 2 strokes · 1 pen lift · 3 movements

Stroke order after Opiaterein, 'Deva-[illegible]-order.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How र is written, stroke by stroke ra — a light tap of the tongue, closer to the r in Spanish pero than to an English r.

र

That is the last piece. Everything the greeting needs is now something you can write from memory.

Your turn

- Write it: र
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How is र made? (A light tap of the tongue, not an English r.)
Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

1.14 नमस्कार — seven pieces, all of them already yours

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

Nothing new is introduced in this lesson. Every piece below is one you can write.

न + म + स + ् + क + ा + र → नमस्कार

Read it the way you built it:

- न — na, inherent vowel
- म — ma, inherent vowel
- स्क — the conjunct: sa with its vowel removed, fused to ka
- ा — the mātrā, making that piece kā
- र — ra

na-ma-skār. The greeting from your first lesson, now decoded rather than recalled.

Count what it took: six consonants, three vowel signs, and one virama. With them you can read yes, no, and the greeting — and every consonant you meet from here obeys rules you already hold.

Devanagari has around forty more letters. It does not have any more systems.

Your turn

- Write it: नमस्कार
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How many new pieces were in this lesson? (None.) What is स्क made of? (स with its vowel removed, joined to क.) And what still remains to learn — rules, or shapes? (Shapes.)

Chapter 2

Hear Thanks, Then Meet Six Signs

Modes: voice (5) pen (6) Hands-free start: the first 5 of 11 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can understand and say dhanyavad before decoding it, then write six new Devanagari signs one at a time through visible, guided, and delayed work.
> Write dental ta after a delay while keeping the first five signs separately retrievable.

2.1 Dhanyavad — "thank you"

The formal "thanks" — Sanskrit, shared across the Indian languages.

You'll want to know — hear the word before reading it

Listen first: dhan-ya-vād. Say it once for "thank you." The whole spelling waits: the next two tiny chapters will give you one missing sign at a time, and only then will you read and write the whole word. For now, notice one sign of it: द, the da of its last beat. The next word you hear begins with it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Dhanyavād = Sanskrit dhanya ("fortunate") + vāda ("a saying") — "an utterance of '[you are] fortunate.'" The same Sanskrit word behind Hindi dhanyavād, Kannada dhanyavāda, Telugu dhanyavādamulu. Warmer, more spoken Marathi often says ābhārī āhe ("[I] am grateful"), on the root ābhār, "gratitude."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dhanyavād" — no reading yet
- the warmer spoken form — "ābhārī āhe"

Before you move on

What are the two Sanskrit pieces of dhanyavād, and a warmer Marathi alternative? (dhanya "fortunate" + vāda "a saying"; ābhārī āhe.)

2.2 दुःख (duḥkh) — sorrow, grief

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: दुःख

दुःख — duḥkh — "sorrow, grief".

Say it: duḥkh. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ः, ु and ख, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दुःख (duḥkh) is Sanskrit duḥkha, "difficulty, pain", kept with its Sanskrit spelling, a tatsama. CDIAL lists the everyday Marathi form as dukh, "sorrow, pain", and notes that duḥkha was formed after sukha, "ease" (CDIAL 6375).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- duḥkh
- duḥkh, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "sorrow, grief"? (दुःख, duḥkh.)

2.3 आभाळ (ābhāḷ) — the sky

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: आभाळ

आभाळ — ābhāḷ — "the sky".

Say it: ābhāḷ. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, आ, भ and ळ, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आभाळ (ābhāḷ) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from abhrakāla*, "cloudy weather", a form CDIAL reconstructs from Sanskrit abhra, "cloud", and kāla, "time" (CDIAL 551). CDIAL glosses the Marathi word "cloudiness"; today it names the sky.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ābhāḷ
- ābhāḷ, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "the sky"? (आभाळ, ābhāḷ.)

2.4 संत (sant) — a saint

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: संत

संत — sant — "a saint".

Say it: sant. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ं and त, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

संत (sant) is usually traced to Sanskrit sant, "being, good", the present participle of as, "to be". CDIAL lists a Marathi sant only in the sense "calm", under śānta (CDIAL 12390).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sant
- sant, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a saint"? (संत, sant.)

2.5 बेत (bet) — a plan

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: बेत

बेत — bet — "a plan".

Say it: bet. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ब and े, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of बेत (bet) is not settled. Neither CDIAL nor DEDR, searched by form and by meaning, has an entry for it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bet
- bet, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a plan"? (बेत, bet.)

2.6 ः — a small breath after a vowel

You already know the greeting namaskār and its older first piece, namaḥ, "a bow." The final breath in namaḥ has its own mark.

The visarga is two dots written vertically to the right of a syllable. It marks a quiet breath after the vowel. For this first encounter, place the upper dot, lift, then place the lower dot. Stop after this one sign.

Writing — visible model

2.7 आ — long aa standing alone

Set one blank line aside for a single new vowel sign.

Script

आ

This is independent ā, used when the vowel begins a syllable. Curve around the joined left body; lift for the middle shoulder, and without lifting climb the inner stem and descend it; lift for the trailing stem; lift once more and finish with the headline from left to right.

Writing — trace, then guided copy

2.8 भ — bha, with a puff of breath

Make room for one consonant and one careful copy.

Script

भ

Say ba, then bha with a small puff against your palm. For the shape, sweep the upper loop into the trunk, lower bowl, and crossbar without lifting; descend the right stem; finish the headline left to right.

Writing — guided copy

2.9 े — e above the headline

Leave a small space above the next practice headline.

This mātrā replaces the inherent vowel with e. Add its short rising stroke above the consonant's headline; it cannot stand alone as a spoken vowel here.

2.10 ं — one nasal dot

Prepare to place one mark above a headline.

Script

The anusvāra is one dot above the headline. It marks a nasal sound whose exact place follows the sound after it. Place one dot; do not turn it into the two-dot visarga.

This is ba, the quiet partner of bha. Circle the oval body; descend the right stem; draw the inner diagonal down-right; finish the headline.

Writing — heard cue

Cover the model. Hear: ba, without a puff. Write the single consonant from sound alone. Uncover ब and repair only the differing run.

3.4 य — ya

Say the first sound of English yes once.

Script

Curve around the small inner curl; without lifting, sweep round the lower bowl; climb the right stem and descend it; lift and finish the headline. The sound is the y at the start of English yes.

Writing — heard cue and retrieval

Cover the model. Hear: ya. Write the consonant once. Then say the three sign names immediately before it: dental da, breathy dha, quiet ba.

3.5 ळ — Marathi's curled-back lla

Curl the tongue tip back once without adding a vowel.

ळ

Curl the tongue tip back for ḷa. Draw the left loop through the centre and around the right loop in one run; add the short stem above the right loop; finish the headline.

Writing — heard cue and wider retrieval

Cover the model. Hear: curled-back ḷa. Write it once. Then retrieve the e-mark, anusvāra, and dental ta by name; those three have now crossed a wider gap.

3.6 व — between English v and w

Relax the lips for a light sound between English v and w.

Script

How व is written, stroke by stroke

व

Marathi va can sound lighter than English v, toward w. Travel left around the top and circle the loop counterclockwise; descend the right stem; finish the headline.

Writing — heard cue

Cover the model. Hear: va. Write one consonant from sound. Uncover व and compare loop, right stem, headline.

3.7 धन्यवाद — now read what you already mean

Nothing in this word is an unknown shape now. Read ध · न् · य · वा · द, join the middle consonants, and say धन्यवाद — dhanyavād, "thank you."

Your turn

- hear dhanyavād and point to धन्यवाद

- say the word from the English cue “thank you”
- read धन्यवाद without romanization
- cover every model and write धन्यवाद from the heard cue

Then retrieve the last three signs separately: ya, curled-back ḷa, va.

Before you move on

Stop after one independent attempt.

Chapter 4

Courtesy, Responses, and Leave-Taking

Modes: voice (1) eyes (3) pen (1) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can thank someone, answer yes or no, say that things are fine, and take my leave politely in Marathi.
> Retrieve thanks, yes, fine, no, and gendered leave-taking in one short listening-and-speaking checkpoint, then write familiar हो without a visible model.

4.1 हो (ho) — "yes"

A one-syllable "yes."

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) ह (ha) + the o-mātrā ो → हो (ho).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हो (ho, "yes") is Marathi's plain affirmative — distinct from Hindi's hāṁ. Its origin is not settled; CDIAL lists an unglossed Marathi ho under Sanskrit ho, a cry of summons (CDIAL 14172). The polite, fuller "yes" is ho, baraṃ āhe ("yes, it's fine").

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ho" ("yes")
- the fuller polite form — "ho, baraṃ āhe"

Writing — the first return, from spoken names

Cover the recent script models. Write dhanyavād once, then dental da, breathy dha and quiet ba from their spoken names. Uncover and repair only a missed sign.

Before you move on

What is Marathi's "yes," and how does it differ from Hindi's? (ho; Hindi says hāṁ.)

4.2 बरं (baraṃ) — "okay, fine"

The verbal shrug of Marathi — "sure, fine, all right."

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) ब (ba) + रं (ra with the anusvāra dot ं, a light nasal) → baraṃ. That dot on top nasalises the vowel.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बरं (baraṃ, "okay, fine, good, all right") is the oil of everyday Marathi talk — a soft "sure, fine." Its neutral form is bare. Its origin is not settled: neither CDIAL nor DEDR has an entry for it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "baraṃ" (feel the nasal dot)
- "ho, baraṃ āhe" — "yes, it's fine"

Before you move on

What does बरं mean, and what does the dot ं do? ("Okay/fine"; the anusvāra nasalises the vowel.)

4.3 नाही (nāhī) — "no," a word older than English

The partner of ho — built on one of the oldest words in the whole Indo-European family.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) ना (nā) + ही (hī) → nāhī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

नाही (nāhī, "no / is not") sits on the ancient negative na- — the same Proto-Indo-European ne behind English no, not, none, Latin non, and Hindi nahīṁ. So Marathi's "no" and English's "no" are cousins from before either language existed. It doubles as "there isn't": Marathi, like Hindi, denies with this one word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair — ho ("yes") / nāhī ("no")
- the ancient cousins — no, not, Latin non

Before you move on

What ancient root is नाही built on, and what English words share it? (PIE ne*; no, not, none.)

4.4 येतो / येते (yeto / yete) — "I'll take my leave"

The Marathi goodbye — which, like the Dravidian languages, refuses to say a bare "I'm leaving." And it changes with the speaker's gender.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) ये (ye) + तो (to) → yeto; ये + ते (te) → yete.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Marathi, like the Dravidian languages to its south, will not say a bare "I'm leaving." The everyday goodbye is येतो (yeto) — literally "I come [again]," a promise of return, never a final departure. (Fuller: yeto, namaskār.) येतो is a form of yeṇẽ, "to come", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit aiti, "comes near" (CDIAL 2534).

Grammar Lens: Marathi verbs carry gender yeto is what a man says; a woman says येते (yete). The verb itself changes with the speaker's gender — something Hindi does only in the past tense, but Marathi does in the present too. (And Marathi keeps three genders — masculine, feminine, and neuter — where Hindi kept only two.) You'll meet this at every verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "yeto" (if male) / "yete" (if female)
- what it literally means ("I come [again]") — a promise of return

Before you move on

What does the Marathi goodbye literally mean, and why two forms? ("I'll come [again]"; the verb agrees with the speaker's gender — yeto m. / yete f.)

4.5 Chapter 4 — courtesy, responses, and leave-taking

Marathi		Meaning
नमस्कार	namaskār	hello / goodbye
धन्यवाद	dhanyavād	thank you
हो	ho	yes
नाही	nāhī	no
बरं	baraṃ	okay / fine
येतो / येते	yeto / yete	"I'll be going" (m./f.)

What you've built

- It prefers namaskār as the everyday greeting (Hindi leans on namaste).
- It keeps three genders — masculine, feminine, neuter — where Hindi kept two.
- It marks gender on the verb, even in the present: yeto (m.) / yete (f.).
- It has an extra letter, ळ (retroflex ḷ), shared with the Dravidian south and absent from Hindi.

Shared with Hindi/Sanskrit: the Devanagari script, the negative nā- (← PIE ne*, English no), and much formal vocabulary (dhanyavād).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all six — namaskār · dhanyavād · ho · nāhī · baraṃ · yeto/yete
- greet and thank — "namaskār!" … "dhanyavād."
- your leave-taking — "yeto/yete"

Before you move on

Read it: नमस्कार
Write it: हो once, without a model
Then name two ways Marathi differs from Hindi despite sharing Devanagari. (Prefers namaskār; three genders; gender on the verb; the extra letter ळ.)
Next chapter: introducing yourself — mājhe nāv… ("my name…") — and Marathi's tū / tumhī (familiar / respectful "you").

Chapter 5

Marks Above, Below, and Beside the Letter

Modes: voice (4) pen (6) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 10 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write and name the six Devanagari marks the rest of this book leans on, and say where each one sits relative to its letter.
> Retrieve all six marks cold, by name and by placement, with no model on the page.

5.1 अमृत (amṛt) — nectar

> Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: अमृत

अमृत — amṛt — "nectar".

Say it: amṛt. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, अ and ृ, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अमृत (amṛt) is Sanskrit amṛta, "immortal; nectar", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama (CDIAL 571). It is a-, "not", and mṛta, "dead": the drink of the gods that keeps death away.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- amṛt
- amṛt, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "nectar"? (अमृत, amṛt.)

5.2 किरण (kiraṇ) — a ray of light

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: किरण

किरण — kiraṇ — "a ray of light".

Say it: kiraṇ. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ि and ण, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

किरण (kiraṇ) is Sanskrit kiraṇa, "ray of light", which has lost only its final vowel; CDIAL lists it among the inherited Marathi words (CDIAL 3171). In the Rigveda the same word meant "dust".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kiraṇ
- kiraṇ, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a ray of light"? (किरण, kiraṇ.)

5.3 तूप (tūp) — ghee

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: तूप

तूप — tūp — "ghee".

Say it: tūp. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ◌ू and प, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तूप (tūp) goes back to Prakrit tuppa, "ghee", from a reconstructed tuppa*, "grease" (CDIAL 5864). CDIAL thinks the word probably has a non-Aryan source and takes Kannada tuppa, "ghee", as borrowed from Middle Indo-Aryan; DEDR compares it with Kannada tuppa and Tamil tuppu, "ghee" (DEDR 3282).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tūp
- tūp, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "ghee"? (तूप, tūp.)

5.4 ि◌ — short i, written before, read after

Say dhanyavād once from memory. Every mark in this chapter hangs on a consonant your hand already knows.

The short-i mark is the one that breaks the rule you would guess. It is written to the LEFT of its consonant and read to the RIGHT of it: कि is ki, never ik. The eye meets the mark first; the ear meets it second.

Draw the upright on the left of the letter, then carry the curve up and over the headline so it hooks back to the right. The hook is what tells this mark apart from its long partner, which you will meet later.

Writing — observe and trace

Keep कि in front of you. Trace the mark alone twice, then trace it beside क twice more. Say ki each time your pen finishes the hook, so the hand and the ear learn the same order the page will use.

Before you move on

Which side of क does the mark sit on? (The left.) Which side do you hear it on? (The right.)
Source: Unicode Devanagari chart, U+093F.

5.5 ु — short u, a small hook below

One mark went to the left. This one goes straight down, and it is the mark you will meet most often of all.

Script

The short-u mark is a small hook tucked under the letter, opening to the right. It hangs from the foot of the stem, not from the headline.

तु is tu — the opening syllable of the polite tumhī you already say. Start at the base of त, dip below the line, and curl right. Keep it small: its long partner is the same hook drawn deeper.

5.6 ू — long ū, the deeper hook below

You have the short hook. The long one is the same gesture, carried further.

Script

Long ū is the short hook drawn deeper and turned back on itself, so it finishes pointing down-left rather than right. Same place, same start, more travel.

दू is dū — the first syllable of the word for milk. Say tu and dū one after the other and you can hear the length the extra travel is paying for.

5.7 ृ — the vocalic r mark, said ru

A third mark below the line. This one is not a vowel you have a letter for in English.

This mark writes a sound Sanskrit treated as a vowel made of r. Marathi speakers say it ru, so कृ is heard as kṛ, close to kru.

The shape is a small curl below the letter that opens to the left — the mirror of the short-u hook, and that mirroring is exactly how to remember it. It appears in tatsama words the language borrowed whole, like kṛtī, “activity”.

5.8 ँ — the moon holding a dot

You already write one nasal mark above the headline. Here is its second, softer cousin.

The candrabindu is one dot cradled in a small upward crescent — a moon holding a dot, which is exactly what its name says.

Set it beside the anusvāra you already write:

ं closes the vowel onto a nasal consonant. ँ leaves the vowel open and sends the air through the nose while you are still saying it. Draw the crescent first, sitting on the headline, then place the single dot inside it.

Source: Unicode Devanagari chart, U+0901.

5.9 अ — the vowel your consonants have been hiding

Say क on its own. You did not say a bare k. Something came after it.

Script

अ

Every Devanagari consonant carries a short a inside it unless a mark or a halant takes it away: क is ka, not k. अ is that same hidden vowel written out on its own, for when a word begins with it and there is no consonant to hide inside.

You already write its long partner आ, and the relationship is visible: आ is अ with one upright added on the right. Draw the left loop, the vertical stem, then the headline that ties them together.

The Throat Row and the Palate Row

Modes: 🎧 voice (6) ✓ pen (7) 🎧 Hands-free start: the first 5 of 13 lessons.

6.1 घागर (ghāgar) — a water pot

> Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: घागर

घागर — ghāgar — "a water pot".

Say it: ghāgar. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, घ and ग, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

घागर (ghāgar) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from ghagghara*, "waterpot", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 4403). CDIAL suggests, with a query, that the word imitates the sound of gurgling, Sanskrit gharghara.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ghāgar
- ghāgar, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a water pot"? (घागर, ghāgar.)

6.2 चव (cav) — taste

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: चव

चव — cav — "taste".

Say it: cav. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, च, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of चव (cav) is not settled. Neither CDIAL nor DEDR, searched by form and by meaning, has an entry for it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- cav
- cav, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "taste"? (चव, cav.)

6.3 छत्री (chatrī) — an umbrella

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: छत्री

छत्री — chatrī — "an umbrella".

Say it: chatrī. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, छ, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

छत्री (chatrī) is a semi-tatsama: Sanskrit chattra, "parasol", which also had a feminine chattrikā, kept with its -tr- and given the ending -ī (CDIAL 4972). The inherited Hindi form is chātā, "umbrella".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chatrī
- chatrī, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "an umbrella"? (छत्री, chatrī.)

6.4 जहाज (jahāj) — a ship

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: जहाज

जहाज — jahāj — "a ship".

Say it: jahāj. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ज, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

जहाज (jahāj) is a loan from Arabic jahāz, "equipment, gear", which reached Marathi through Persian. Its Arabic root is j-h-z (Lane). In Persian it came to mean a ship, and Marathi writes it with plain ज.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- jahāj
- jahāj, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a ship"? (जहाज, jahāj.)

6.5 झोका (jhokā) — a swing

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: झोका

झोका — jhokā — "a swing".

Say it: jhokā. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, झ, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of झोका (jhokā) is not settled. CDIAL has no entry for it; it may belong with Marathi jhukṇẽ, "to stoop", from a reconstructed jhukkati*, "stoops" (CDIAL 5399), but no source says so.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- jhokā
- jhokā, and what it means

Before you move on

What is “a swing”? (झोका, jhokā.)

6.6 ख — ka with the breath let out

Two marks from the last chapter, from memory: write the long ū sign under a line, then the hook for ṛ. (ू, ृ.)

Say ka with your hand in front of your mouth. Now say it again and push the air out after it. That second sound has its own letter.

Script

ख

ख is kha: क said with a puff of breath released after it. Marathi keeps the two apart the way English keeps pin and bin apart — swap them and you have a different word.

The shape is not क with a mark added; it is its own letter. Draw the left loop, then the upright with its foot, then the headline across the top. You will need it for khāṇe, “to eat”.

Writing — observe and trace

How ख is written, stroke by stroke

Trace ख twice with the model visible. Say ka, then kha, as your pen finishes each one, and listen for the puff that only the second has.

6.7 ग — the same place, with the voice on

Put two fingers on your throat and say ka, then ga. The place in your mouth does not move. Something else switches on.

Script

ग

ग is ga: the same back-of-the-mouth closure as क, made with the voice running. That is the only difference, and your fingers felt it a moment ago.

The shape is a single curve that swings down and left from the headline and finishes with a small tail on the right. It is the first letter of gāv, "village", and it sits inside sāṅgṇe, "to tell" — a verb this book uses long before it shows you this letter.

6.8 घ — voice and breath together

You have the puff, and you have the voice. Now do both in one sound.

Script

घ

घ is gha: voiced like ग, breathy like ख. Four letters now sit at the same place in your mouth, and only voice and breath tell them apart:

क plain · ख breath · ग voice · घ voice and breath.

You already say this letter. Kāḷjī ghyā, "take care", ends in it, and so does gheṇe, "to take". Draw the left bowl, then the right stem, then the headline.

6.9 च — one letter, two Marathi sounds

> Move forward in your mouth: from the back, where ka lives, to the roof, right behind your teeth.

च

च is ca, close to English ch in church. Marathi does something Hindi does not: in many words it says this letter as ts, the sound at the end of English cats. Cār, "four", is one of them.

One letter, two pronunciations, and no mark on the page to tell you which — that is a thing you learn word by word. The shape is a bowl opening to the right, hung under the headline with a short stem.

Writing — guided copy

6.10 छ — the palate, with the breath let out

The same pair you learned at the back of the mouth happens again at the roof of it.

Script

छ

छ is chha: च with the breath released, exactly the step that took you from क to ख. Devanagari does this all the way down the alphabet — plain, breathy, voiced, voiced-and-breathy — which is why learning one row teaches you how to hear the next.

The shape is a closed loop with a tail curving away below. It carries vicāraṇe in some spellings and stands at the head of chān, "nice".

Script

ज

ज is ja, and it shadows च exactly: where a word says च as ts, it usually says ज as dz. The two travel together.

You need it for jāṇe, "to go", and it hides inside kāḷjī, "care", in the phrase you already use for goodbye. Draw the top stroke, the middle knot, and the descending stem under the headline.

6.12 झ — the letter inside mājhe

One more of the four-way sets, and this one closes a word you have been saying since your first introduction.

Script

झ

झ is jha: voiced like ज, breathy like छ. The palate now has its full four, in the same order the back of your mouth did.

This is the letter sitting in the middle of mājhe, "my" — माझे — a word this book taught you to say long before it taught you to read it. Every sign in that word is now yours.

Writing — guided copy

6.13 Two rows, told apart by voice and breath

Two questions decide every letter in this chapter: is the voice on, and is the breath let out? Answer those and you have the row.

Before you move on

Back of the mouth: plain, breathy, voiced, voiced-and-breathy. (ka, kha, ga, gha.) Roof of the mouth, same four steps. (ca, cha, ja, jha.) Which of the eight sits inside mājhe? (jha.) Which one does Marathi also say as ts? (ca.)
Reaching back one chapter, with nothing on the page: which hook goes deeper, short u or long ū? (ū.) Which curl opens the other way? (The vocalic r.) Which nasal mark wears a crescent? (The candrabindu.) And which vowel is already inside every consonant? (Short a.)

7.1 टाळी (ṭāḷī) — a clap

> Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: टाळी

टाळी — ṭāḷī — "a clap".

Say it: ṭāḷī. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ट, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

टाळी (ṭāḷī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. CDIAL lists Marathi ṭāḷī, "clapping", under Sanskrit tāḍa, "blow", whose form tāla meant "clap, rhythm" (CDIAL 5748).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ṭāḷī
- ṭāḷī, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a clap"? (टाळी, ṭāḷī.)

7.2 ठाम (ṭhām) — firm, steady

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: ठाम

ठाम — ṭhām — "firm, steady".

Say it: ṭhām. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ठ, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ठाम (ṭhām) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from sthāmya*, "placed", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 13761). CDIAL builds it on Sanskrit sthāman, "station, place", and glosses the Marathi word "fixed, firm, settled".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ṭhām
- ṭhām, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "firm, steady"? (ठाम, ṭhām.)

7.3 डबा (ḍabā) — a lunch box

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: डबा

डबा — ḍabā — "a lunch box".

Say it: ḍabā. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ड, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

डबा (ḍabā) goes back to a reconstructed ḍabba*, "box"; CDIAL lists Marathi ḍabbā, "box". It says the word is of non-Aryan origin, from Dravidian according to A. Master (CDIAL 5528).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ḍabā
- ḍabā, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a lunch box"? (डबा, ḍabā.)

7.4 ट — the tongue curled back

Say ta with your tongue on your teeth. Now curl the tip up and back until it touches the ridge behind them, and say it again.

Script

ट

That second sound is ट, ṭa. Marathi has a whole row of these retroflex letters, made with the tongue tip curled back, and they are genuinely different words from the dental row you already write: त and ट are not variants.

The shape is a hook that opens to the right and hangs from the headline. It is the sound in ṭebal, the borrowed word for table, and it is why this book has been writing ṭ with a dot under it in every romanization you have read.

7.5 ठ — the curl, with the breath let out

The four-way pattern again: you have the plain one, so you can predict the next.

Script

ठ

ठ is ṭha: ट with the breath released. You have now seen this step three times — क/ख, च/छ, and here — which is the point. Devanagari is built so that hearing one pair teaches you to expect the rest.

The shape is a plain circle sitting under the headline. It is the roundest letter in the alphabet and the easiest of this chapter to draw.

7.6 ड — the curl, with the voice on

Fingers on the throat, tongue curled back. Say ṭa, then switch the voice on.

Script

ड

ड is ḍa, the voiced member of the curled row — the same relationship ग has to क.

Marathi needs it for ḍoḷā, "eye", a word that also carries the retroflex ळ you learned in the doorway chapters. Draw the top stroke, then the body that curves down and closes to the left under the headline.

7.7 ण — the nasal with the tongue curled back

Every row in this alphabet ends with its own nasal. The curled row is no exception.

Script

ण

ण is ṇa: the tongue curled back, the air through the nose. Set it against न, the dental nasal you learned in your first chapter, and the difference is the same one you made a moment ago for ta and ṭa.

This is the single most useful letter in this chapter. It ends every Marathi infinitive this book teaches — bolṇe, khāṇe, jāṇe, sāṅgṇe — so once it is yours, the shape of "to do something" is readable.

7.8 प — the lips, with the voice off

Leave the tongue alone for this one. Close your lips, and let the voice stay off.

Script

प

प is pa, the voiceless partner of the ब you already write. Same lips, same closure, voice switched off — the fourth time this book has used that one distinction to give you a letter.

It opens pāṇī, "water", and pāhṇe, "to see", and it stands inside punhā, "again", in the goodbye you already say. The shape is ब without the inner dot: left bowl, right stem, headline across.

8.1 उलट (ulaṭ) — the other way round

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: उलट

उलट — ulaṭ — "the other way round".

Say it: ulaṭ. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ल and उ, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

उलट (ulaṭ) belongs with the verb ulaṭṇẽ, "to turn over", which CDIAL lists under a reconstructed ullaṭati*, "turns over" (CDIAL 2368).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ulaṭ
- ulaṭ, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "the other way round"? (उलट, ulaṭ.)

8.2 शेष (śeṣ) — what is left over

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: शेष

Say it: śeṣ. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, श and ष, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

शेष (śeṣ) is Sanskrit śeṣa, "remainder", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama (CDIAL 12611). Its root is śiṣ, "to leave".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- śeṣ
- śeṣ, and what it means

What is "what is left over"? (शेष, śeṣ.)

8.3 ऊब (ūb) — warmth

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: ऊब

ऊब — ūb — "warmth".

Say it: ūb. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ऊ, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ऊब (ūb) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from ubbā*, "damp heat", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 2340). CDIAL glosses the Marathi word "sultry heat".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ūb

8.4 एकदा (ekdā) — once

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: एकदा

एकदा — ekdā — "once".

Say it: ekdā. Look: at its shape as you say it. The lessons that follow take pieces of it, ए, and write each one on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

एकदा (ekdā) is Sanskrit ekadā, "once, at one time", a tatsama: eka, "one", with the time ending -dā that also closes Sanskrit kadā, "when". CDIAL has no entry for it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ekdā
- ekdā, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "once"? (एकदा, ekdā.)

8.5 ल — the plain l, beside the curled one you know

You learned the harder l first. Here is the ordinary one.

Script

ल

ल is plain la, the tongue at the teeth — the sound English writes with l. You already write ळ, the retroflex ḷ Marathi keeps alongside it, and which Hindi does not have at all.

Meeting the rare one first was not an accident: ळ sits in kāḷjī and ḍoḷā, words this book needed early. Now the common one arrives, and with it bolṇe, "to speak", becomes readable end to end.

Writing — observe and trace

8.6 श — the sh at the roof of the mouth

You write the plain s. Slide the tongue back along the roof of your mouth and it becomes something else.

Script

श

श is śa, English sh. Marathi keeps it distinct from the स you learned in your first chapter, and the pair behaves like every other pair in this runway: same air, different place.

It opens śahar, "city" — one of the six labels the A1 form chapters will ask you to fill in. Draw the left hook, the upright, and the headline; the small loop at the top left is what separates it from म.

8.7 ष — the third sibilant, kept on the page

Marathi writes three sibilants and says two. This is the third one.

Script

ष

ष is ṣa, the retroflex sibilant. Sanskrit distinguished it from श; most Marathi speakers today say the two the same way, and keep them apart only in spelling.

That is worth knowing rather than hiding: a letter can survive in the writing system after the sound behind it has merged. ष appears in tatsama words taken whole from Sanskrit, such as bhāṣā, “language” — another of the six form labels waiting for you.

8.8 उ — short u standing on its own

You already hang a short u under a consonant. What happens when there is no consonant to hang it on?

Script

उ

Then you write उ, the independent short u — the same vowel given its own full letter for the start of a word.

Devanagari does this for every vowel: a mark when something carries it, a letter when nothing does. You have already seen the pair once, with अ and its mark. उ opens udyā, “tomorrow”, in the farewell this book taught you chapters ago.

8.10 ए — the vowel that opens ek

One vowel left, and you have been reading it since the chapter where you learned to count.

It opens एक, ek, "one". That word has been printed beside its romanization since the counting chapter, which means you have been looking at this letter for a long time without being told what it was. Draw the left hook, the upright, and the headline; the mark version is what remains if you take the letter away and keep only the top.

Chapter 9

Introducing Yourself

Modes: voice (4) eyes (6) Hands-free start: the first 9 of 10 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can introduce myself in Marathi, give my name, and understand the other person's name.
> Complete MR-C02-practice, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: introduce myself in Marathi, give my name, and understand the other person's name.

9.1 नाव (nāv) — "name," a word older than Europe

To introduce yourself you need one word first: name. In Marathi it is नाव (nāv) — and it is a very old word wearing a Marathi coat.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) ना (nā, the न na with the ा long-ā stroke) + व (va) → नाव nāv. Two letters, read left to right.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

नाव (nāv) comes from Sanskrit नामन् (nāman, "name"). Watch the small Marathi sound-shift: the Sanskrit -m- softened to -v-, so nām became nāv. (Hindi kept the m: nām.) That Sanskrit nāman traces back to the same ancient root, h$_3$nómn — that final n is syllabic, a consonant doing a vowel's work — that gave English name and noun, Latin nōmen, Greek onoma. A cousin from before either language had a name for itself.

Why it's said this way

Marathi softens many old Sanskrit consonants this way — m leaning to v, hard sounds going soft. Spotting the shift lets you read a Sanskrit word straight into its Marathi form.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "nāv" — name
- the English cousin from the same root ("name")

Before you move on

What is nāv, and what happened to the m of Sanskrit nām? ("Name"; it softened to v — a Marathi sound-shift.)

9.2 माझं (mājhaṁ) — "my"

"My name." The word for my — and it changes shape with the gender of what it owns.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) मा (mā) + झं (jhaṁ, the झ jha with an anusvara ं for the light nasal) → माझं mājhaṁ.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

माझं (mājhaṁ, "my") sits on the first-person root ma- — the very root behind English me, my, mine, Latin meus, and Hindi merā. One tiny syllable, ma, marks "belonging to me" across the whole Indo-European family.

Grammar Lens: "my" agrees in three genders

Marathi keeps three genders, and "my" picks its ending from the noun: माझा (mājhā, masculine) · माझी (mājhī, feminine) · माझं (mājhaṁ, neuter). The word नाव (nāv, "name") is neuter, so "my name" is माझं नाव (mājhaṁ nāv). You met this gender-agreement idea already with the goodbye yeto/yete; it runs through the whole language.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mājhā / mājhī / mājhaṁ" — the three genders of "my"
- "mājhaṁ nāv" — my name (neuter, to match nāv)

Before you move on

Why is "my name" mājhaṁ nāv and not mājhā nāv? (nāv is neuter, so "my" takes the neuter form mājhaṁ.)

9.3 आहे (āhe) — "is"

The little verb that finishes almost every Marathi sentence about what something is — and, in Marathi, it comes last.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) आ (ā, the standalone long-ā vowel, used when a word begins with a vowel) + हे (he) → आहे āhe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आहे (āhe, "is") is listed by CDIAL under Sanskrit अस्ति (ásti, "is"), on the root √as ("to be"), though Bloch gives it another origin (CDIAL 977). That same √as / PIE h₁es- is the ancestor of Latin est, German ist, and English is itself — the deepest, oldest verb in the family.

Grammar Lens: the verb goes last

Marathi is a subject–object–verb language: "my name Mira is." The copula आहे sits at the end, where English puts it in the middle. It changes with the subject — you will meet आहेस (āhes, "you are") and आहात (āhāt, "you are," respectful) in the next chapter.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "āhe" — is
- the English cousin from the same root ("is")

Before you move on

Where does āhe sit in a Marathi sentence, and what English word is its cousin? (At the end; English is, both from √as.)

9.4 माझं नाव ... आहे (mājhaṁ nāv ... āhe) — "my name is..."

Now assemble the three atoms you just met into your first full sentence about yourself.

You'll want to know — the phrase, assembled

माझं (mājhaṁ, my) + नाव (nāv, name) + [your name] + आहे (āhe, is) → माझं नाव मीरा आहे (mājhaṁ nāv Mīrā āhe) — "my name is Mira."

Notice the shape:

- माझं is neuter, agreeing with the neuter नाव.
- The verb आहे comes last — "my name Mira is."

A man or a woman says it the same way here; the gender lived in mājhaṁ (matching nāv), which is settled.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Each word is inherited. CDIAL lists माझं under the Sanskrit first-person base ma- (CDIAL 9691) and नाव under Sanskrit nāman, "name" (CDIAL 7067). आहे it lists under asti, "is", though Bloch gives it another origin (CDIAL 977).

Why it's said this way

Marathi drops nothing and reorders everything to English eyes: possessor, thing, value, then is. Learn this frame and you can swap in any name — or, later, any fact about yourself.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mājhaṁ nāv Mīrā āhe" — my name is Mira
- it with your own name in the blank

Before you move on

Put "my name is Arun" into Marathi. (mājhaṁ nāv Arun āhe.)

9.5 तू / तुम्ही (tū / tumhī) — "you"

Before you can ask someone their name, you need "you" — and Marathi gives you two, one warm, one respectful.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) तू (tū, the त ta with the long-u stroke ू). And तुम्ही (tumhī): तु + म्ही (mhī, the म ma with a halant joining ह ha).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तू (tū, familiar "you") comes from Sanskrit त्वम् (tvam), from PIE tū — the very root of English archaic thou, Latin tū, French tu, and Hindi tū. The respectful तुम्ही (tumhī) is grammatically plural: you honour one person by addressing them as many, exactly as French does with vous. It takes the plural verb आहात (āhāt), not āhes.

Grammar Lens: two "you"s, a choice of respect

- तू (tū) — a friend, a child, someone close.
- तुम्ही (tumhī) — an elder, a stranger, anyone you show courtesy to.

Choosing between them is a small act of politeness Marathi makes you perform every time you speak to someone.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "tū" (close) / "tumhī" (respectful)
- the English cousin of tū ("thou")

Before you move on

Which "you" for a teacher, and why? (tumhī — the respectful plural, courtesy-by-plural like French vous.)

9.6 काय (kāy) — "what"

One more atom before the question "what's your name?" — the word what itself.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) का (kā) + य (ya) → काय kāy.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

काय (kāy, "what") grows from the ancient interrogative stem ka-, from PIE k^{w}o- — the very root behind English wh- words (what, who, when, where, why) and Latin qu- (quis, quid). Marathi keeps the k- plainly across its whole question family: काय (kāy, what), कोण (koṇ, who), कुठे (kuṭhe, where), का (kā, why), कसं (kasaṁ, how — Chapter 10). Learn to hear that opening k- and you can spot a Marathi question coming.

Why it's said this way

English wh-, Latin qu-, and Marathi k- are three coats on one 5,000-year-old question-root — the family resemblance survives the different spellings.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kāy" — what
- three more Marathi k- questions (koṇ, kuṭhe, kā)

Before you move on

What do Marathi kāy, English what, and Latin quid share? (One PIE question-root k^{w}o-.)

9.7 तुमचं नाव काय आहे? (tumchaṁ nāv kāy āhe?) — "what's your name?"

Now turn the question outward — ask someone else's name.

You'll want to know — the phrase, assembled

तुमचं (tumchaṁ, "your," neuter to match nāv) + नाव (nāv, name) + काय (kāy, what) + आहे (āhe, is) → तुमचं नाव काय आहे? — literally "your name what is?", verb last.

The "your" mirrors the "my" set you learned:

- माझं (mājhaṁ) — my
- तुमचं (tumchaṁ) — your (respectful, from tumhī)
- तुझं (tujhaṁ) — your (familiar, from tū)

All three are shown here in the neuter, agreeing with the neuter नाव (nāv).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

All inherited: तुमचं, like तुम्ही, from Sanskrit yuṣmad-, "you" (CDIAL 10511); नाव from nāman, "name" (CDIAL 7067); काय from kādṛk*, "of what sort" (CDIAL 3196).

Why it's said this way

To a friend you would say तुझं नाव काय आहे? (tujhaṁ nāv kāy āhe?), swapping the respectful tumchaṁ for the familiar tujhaṁ — the same tū / tumhī choice of respect, now on the possessive.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "tumchaṁ nāv kāy āhe?" — what's your name? (respectful)
- the familiar version (tujhaṁ nāv kāy āhe?)

Before you move on

Give the respectful and familiar "your name" forms. (tumchaṁ / tujhaṁ — both neuter before nāv.)

9.8 भेटून आनंद झाला (bheṭūn ānand jhālā) — "pleased to meet you"

Names exchanged — now the warm close of a first meeting.

You'll want to know — the phrase, assembled

भेटून (bheṭūn, "having met") + आनंद (ānand, "joy") + झाला (jhālā, "happened") → literally "having met [you], joy happened." Marathi does not say "I am pleased"; it says the joy itself occurred.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The heart of it is आनंद (ānand, "joy, bliss"), Sanskrit ānanda, "happiness", a tatsama (CDIAL 1172): आ- (ā-, "fully") + नन्द (nand, "to rejoice"). It is the ānanda of the scriptural phrase sat-cit-ānanda ("being–consciousness–bliss") — and one of the most common given names across India. So a Marathi speaker meets you and names the feeling joy.

Why it's said this way

The verb झाला (jhālā, "happened/became") also carries gender — jhālā by default here for the event ānand. And भेटून (bheṭūn) is built on भेटणे (bheṭṇe, "to meet") — a verb you will meet again in Chapter 11's goodbye, punhā bheṭū ("we'll meet again").

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bheṭūn ānand jhālā" — pleased to meet you
- what ānand literally means ("joy")

Before you move on

Literally, what does a Marathi speaker say when meeting you? ("Having met you, joy happened" — bheṭūn ānand jhālā.)

9.9 Chapter 9 recap — introducing yourself

Run the whole first exchange, atom by atom, then whole.

The exchange

Marathi	Say it	English
माझं नाव मीरा आहे.	mājhaṁ nāv Mīrā āhe.	My name is Mira.
तुमचं नाव काय आहे?	tumchaṁ nāv kāy āhe?	What's your name?
माझं नाव अरुण आहे.	mājhaṁ nāv Aruṇ āhe.	My name is Arun.
भेटून आनंद झाला.	bheṭūn ānand jhālā.	Pleased to meet you.

What you've built — atoms banked this chapter

- नाव (nāv) — name; Sanskrit nāman → English name (the m softened to v in Marathi).

- माझं (mājhaṁ) — my; root ma- → English me/my; three genders mājhā/mājhī/mājhaṁ.
- आहे (āhe) — is; Sanskrit ásti (√as) → English is; the verb comes last.
- तू / तुम्ही (tū / tumhī) — familiar / respectful "you"; tū → thou; courtesy-by-plural.
- काय (kāy) — what; PIE $*k^w o$-, the k- question family.
- आनंद (ānand) — joy; Sanskrit ānanda.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the full four-line exchange, both parts
- "my name is [you]" and "what's your name?" to a friend (tujhaṁ)

Before you move on

What two Marathi distinctives showed up again this chapter? (Three genders on mājhaṁ; the verb āhe going last.) Next chapter: tumhī kase āhāt? — "how are you?"

9.10 The last six, one chapter on

You closed the runway a chapter ago and have been introducing yourself since. Nothing to look at here — this is the first time those six are asked for cold.

Before you move on

Repair one group only. This is the first retrieval, not the last: the same six come back once at a durable gap, and once more at book distance near the end.
Which l does Marathi keep that Hindi does not? (The curled one, ळ.) Which two sibilants are told apart only in spelling? (śa* and ṣa.) Which vowel opens the word for one? (e*.) And how many written forms does the u vowel have? (Four — two letters and two marks.)

Chapter 10

How Are You?

Modes: voice (4) eyes (2) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how someone is in Marathi, answer naturally, and return the question.
> Complete MR-C03-practice, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: ask how someone is in Marathi, answer naturally, and return the question.

10.1 कसा / कशी / कसं (kasā / kaśī / kasaṁ) — "how"

The everyday "how are you?" needs one more k- question word — how. And, being an adjective-like word, it too carries gender.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) क (ka) + सा (sā) → कसा kasā; क + शी (śī) → कशी kaśī; क + सं (saṁ) → कसं kasaṁ.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कसा (kasā, "how") belongs to the same k- question family as kāy (what), koṇ (who), kuṭhe (where) — all from PIE k^{w}o-, the root behind English how (yes, how is a wh- word that lost its w-spelling) and Latin quo-modo ("in what way," which became Spanish cómo).

Grammar Lens: "how" agrees with who you ask

Because it describes the person's state, how takes their gender:

- कसा (kasā) — asking a man
- कशी (kaśī) — asking a woman
- कसं (kasaṁ) — asking about a neuter thing

So "how are you?" changes shape with whom you address — you will see this in the next lesson.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kasā / kaśī / kasaṁ" — how, in three genders
- two cousins from the same root (English how, Spanish cómo)

Before you move on

Which "how" do you use asking a woman? (kaśī — feminine.)

10.2 तुम्ही कसे आहात? (tumhī kase āhāt?) — "how are you?"

The full courteous "how are you?" — assembled from words you already hold.

You'll want to know — the phrase, assembled

तुम्ही (tumhī, respectful "you") + कसे (kase, "how," plural-agreeing) + आहात (āhāt, "are," respectful) → तुम्ही कसे आहात? — "you how are?", verb last.

Two agreements are at work:

- Because तुम्ही is grammatically plural, "how" appears as कसे (kase, the plural form of kasā), and the copula as आहात (āhāt).
- To a single male friend: तू कसा आहेस? (tū kasā āhes?); to a female friend: तू कशी आहेस? (tū kaśī āhes?).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Each word is inherited. CDIAL lists तुम्ही under Sanskrit yuṣmad-, "you" (plural), with its t- from tvam, "thou" (CDIAL 10511), and कसे under kīdṛśa, "of what kind" (CDIAL 3197). आहात is a form of आहे, which CDIAL lists under asti, "is", though Bloch gives it another origin (CDIAL 977).

Why it's said this way

The respectful tumhī … āhāt is the safe default with anyone new. The gendered kasā/kaśī only appears in the familiar tū form — one more place Marathi's three genders surface in ordinary speech.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "tumhī kase āhāt?" — how are you? (respectful)
- it to a female friend (tū kaśī āhes?)

Before you move on

Why kase and āhāt (not kasā, āhes) with tumhī? (tumhī is grammatically plural, so "how" and "are" take plural forms.)

10.3 मी (mī) — "I"

To answer "how are you?", you need to say I. In Marathi that is a single bright syllable: मी (mī).

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) मी = म (ma) + the long-ī stroke ी → mī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मी (mī, "I") does not come from Sanskrit अहम् (aham, "I"), the cousin of Latin ego and English I. CDIAL lists it under the first-person base ma- of mayā, "by me": the "by me" form took the place of aham (CDIAL 9691). Notice its family tie to last chapter's माझं (mājhaṁ, "my"): the same first-person m- thread runs through "I" and "my," just as English pairs I with me/my.

Grammar Lens: "I am" is mī āhe

Pair मी with the copula आहे: मी आहे (mī āhe, "I am"). To answer that you are well, reach back to Chapter 4's बरं (baraṁ, "fine"): the next lesson gives it the gendered form that sits between मी and आहे.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mī" — I; then "mī āhe" — I am
- "baraṁ" — fine — then "mī āhe" once more

Before you move on

What links mī ("I") and mājhaṁ ("my")? (The shared first-person m- root — as English links I with me/my.)

10.4 मी बरा आहे (mī barā āhe) — "I'm well, thank you"

The answer to "how are you?" — and it reuses a word you already banked in Chapter 4.

You'll want to know — the phrase, assembled

मी (mī, I) + बरा (barā, "well/fine") + आहे (āhe, am) → मी बरा आहे — "I am well." Add thanks: मी बरा आहे, धन्यवाद (mī barā āhe, dhanyavād).

Back in Chapter 4 you met बरं (baraṁ) standing alone as "okay/fine" — its neuter form. When it describes you, it takes your gender:

- बरा (barā) — a man is well
- बरी (barī) — a woman is well
- बरं (baraṁ) — the bare "okay" (neuter)

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मी comes from Sanskrit mayā, "by me", on the first-person base ma- (CDIAL 9691). आहे CDIAL lists under asti, "is", though Bloch gives it another origin (CDIAL 977). The origin of बरा is not settled: neither CDIAL nor DEDR has an entry for it.

Grammar Lens: the copula changes with the subject

You now have three forms of āhe in play: मी आहे (mī āhe, I am), तू आहेस (tū āhes, you are, familiar), तुम्ही आहात (tumhī āhāt, you are, respectful). One verb, reshaped for each person — Marathi marks who on the verb itself.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mī barā āhe, dhanyavād" (man) / "mī barī āhe, dhanyavād" (woman)
- the three copula forms — mī āhe, tū āhes, tumhī āhāt

Before you move on

Why does the bare barami you banked earlier become barā here? (It now describes a person, so it takes that person's gender.)

10.5 काही हरकत नाही (kāhī harkat nāhī) — "no problem / you're welcome"

When someone thanks you, Marathi's easy reply is not "you're welcome" but "there's no objection at all."

You'll want to know — the phrase, assembled

काही (kāhī, "any") + हरकत (harkat, "objection, trouble") + नाही (nāhī, "not/none") → "any objection there-is-not" ≈ "no problem at all."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Two threads meet here:

- नाही (nāhī, "not") is Chapter 4's "no," on the ancient negative na- — PIE ne, the root of English no, not, none and Latin nōn.
- हरकत (harkat, "objection, hindrance") is a Perso-Arabic loan (from Arabic ḥarakah), one of the many words Marathi absorbed over centuries of contact with Persian-speaking rulers and traders — above all under the Deccan sultanates — the same trade-and-court layer that colours all the languages of the Deccan.

So the reply blends an Indo-European negative with an Arabic noun — a small map of Marathi's history in three words.

Why it's said this way

Where English "thank you / you're welcome" trades politeness tokens, Marathi waves the thanks away: don't mention it, there was no trouble. The same gesture, a different picture.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dhanyavād" → "kāhī harkat nāhī" — thanks → no problem
- the two histories inside it (nāhī ← PIE ne; harkat ← Arabic)

Before you move on

What two language families meet in kāhī harkat nāhī?
(Indo-European nāhī ← ne; Arabic* harkat.)

10.6 Chapter 10 recap — how are you

The whole everyday exchange, start to finish.

The exchange

Marathi	Say it	English
तुम्ही कसे आहात?	tumhī kase āhāt?	How are you?
मी बरा आहे, धन्यवाद.	mī barā āhe, dhanyavād.	I'm well, thank you.
काही हरकत नाही.	kāhī harkat nāhī.	No problem / you're welcome.

What you've built — atoms banked this chapter

- कसा / कशी / कसं (kasā/kaśī/kasaṁ) — how; the k- question family, gender-agreeing.
- मी (mī) — I; from Sanskrit mayā, "by me", which took the place of aham (CDIAL 9691).
- बरा / बरी / बरं (barā/barī/baraṁ) — well/fine, now gendered.
- काही हरकत नाही (kāhī harkat nāhī) — no problem; nāhī ← PIE ne*, harkat ← Arabic.
- Copula forms: मी आहे / तू आहेस / तुम्ही आहात (mī āhe / tū āhes / tumhī āhāt) — one verb, reshaped per person.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the full three-line exchange
- "how are you?" and "I'm well" for your own gender

Before you move on

Give the respectful "how are you?" and a full answer. (tumhī kase āhāt? — mī barā/barī āhe, dhanyavād.) Next chapter: the farewells — punhā bheṭū.

Chapter 11

Farewells

Modes: voice (3) eyes (4) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can end a Marathi conversation politely and choose a farewell that fits the situation.
> Complete MR-C04-practice, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: end a Marathi conversation politely and choose a farewell that fits the situation.

11.1 पुन्हा (punhā) — "again"

Chapter 4 gave you the goodbye yeto ("I'll come [again]"). Now the explicit word for again, to build the warm "see you again."

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) पु (pu) + न्हा (nhā, the न na joined by a halant to ह ha with the long-ā stroke) → पुन्हा punhā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पुन्हा (punhā, "again") is usually traced to Sanskrit पुनर् (punar, "again, back"), the puna- of punarjanma ("rebirth"). CDIAL lists Marathi paṇ, "also, but", under punar, but not punhā (CDIAL 8273). To say a thing punhā is to send it round once more.

Why it's said this way

Marathi's goodbyes lean on again and meet rather than on farewell — the parting is framed as a return, never an ending. This word is the hinge of that idea.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "punhā" — again
- its Sanskrit source (punar) and the punarjanma echo

Before you move on

What does punhā mean, and from what Sanskrit word? ("Again"; from punar.)

11.2 भेटू (bheṭū) — "(let's / we'll) meet"

The other half of the goodbye: meet. You already brushed past it in bheṭūn ānand jhālā ("pleased to meet you").

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) भे (bhe) + टू (ṭū, the retroflex ट ṭa with the long-u stroke) → भेटू bheṭū. Note the retroflex ट (ṭa) — the tongue curls back to the roof of the mouth.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

भेटू (bheṭū) is a form of the verb भेटणे (bheṭṇe, "to meet"). As भेटू it means "let's meet / (we) will meet" — the hopeful, forward-looking mood you want in a goodbye. CDIAL lists भेटणे under a reconstructed bhēṭ-, "meet, throng", from bhiṭ- (CDIAL 9490); the stem also gives bheṭ, "a meeting, a visit".

Grammar Lens: one verb, first-person-plural wish

भेटू carries a built-in "we/let's" — no separate word for "we" is needed, the verb form says it. This is the same -ū ending you'll feel in other "let's _____" verbs. Unlike the present tense (yeto/yete), this future-wish form does not split by gender — men and women both say bheṭū.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bheṭū" — (we'll) meet
- the fuller verb it comes from (bheṭṇe, to meet)

Before you move on

What does bheṭū pack into one word? ("(we/let's) will meet" — the "we" lives in the verb ending.)

11.3 पुन्हा भेटू (punhā bheṭū) — "see you again"

Assemble the two atoms into the standard warm goodbye.

You'll want to know — the phrase, assembled

पुन्हा (punhā, again) + भेटू (bheṭū, we'll meet) → पुन्हा भेटू — "we'll meet again." Two words, and the whole promise of return is spoken.

This is the fuller, explicit twin of Chapter 4's येतो (yeto, "I'll come [again]"). Both refuse a final "farewell": one says I'll come back, the other we'll meet again — the subcontinent's shared goodbye-as-promise (Hindi phir milenge, Bengali āshi, Tamil pōy varugirēn).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पुन्हा is usually traced to Sanskrit punar, "again, back". भेटू is a form of भेटणे, "to meet", which CDIAL lists under a reconstructed bhēṭ-*, "meet, throng" (CDIAL 9490).

Why it's said this way

You can stack them for warmth: येतो, पुन्हा भेटू (yeto, punhā bheṭū) — "I'll be going; we'll meet again." Neither word contains "goodbye"; the parting is all return.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "punhā bheṭū" — see you again
- it stacked with the Chapter-1 goodbye (yeto, punhā bheṭū)

Before you move on

What does punhā bheṭū literally promise? ("We'll meet again" — return, not farewell.)

11.4 उद्या भेटू (udyā bheṭū) — "see you tomorrow"

Swap "again" for "tomorrow" and you have a dated goodbye.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) उ (u, standalone vowel) + द्या (dyā, द da joined by a halant to य ya with the long-ā stroke) → उद्या udyā.

You'll want to know — the phrase, assembled

उद्या (udyā, "tomorrow") + भेटू (bheṭū, we'll meet) → उद्या भेटू — "we'll meet tomorrow."

Unlike Hindi's kal (which means both tomorrow and yesterday), Marathi keeps tomorrow and yesterday as two distinct words — udyā (tomorrow) vs. काल (kāl, yesterday). No ambiguity about which way time is pointing.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

उद्या has no entry in CDIAL, and its origin is not settled. भेटू is a form of भेटणे, "to meet", which CDIAL lists under a reconstructed bhēṭ-*, "meet, throng" (CDIAL 9490).

Why it's said this way

Because bheṭū already carries the future wish, you simply front it with when: udyā bheṭū (tomorrow), punhā bheṭū (again). The verb does the tense; the first word sets the day.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "udyā bheṭū" — see you tomorrow
- the tomorrow/yesterday pair Marathi keeps apart (udyā / kāl)

Before you move on

How does Marathi's udyā differ from Hindi's kal? (udyā is only "tomorrow"; Marathi uses a separate word kāl for "yesterday.")

11.5 काळजी घ्या (kāḷjī ghyā) — "take care"

One last, tender goodbye — the Marathi "take care," and with it a letter unique to Marathi's corner of Devanagari.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) काळजी carries the letter ळ (ḷa) — a retroflex "l," the tongue curled back. Standard Hindi dropped this sound; Marathi (like the Dravidian south and Gujarati) keeps it, and it appears in many everyday Marathi words. का + ळ + जी → kāḷjī. Then घ्या (ghyā, "take," respectful).

You'll want to know — the phrase, assembled

काळजी (kāḷjī, "care, concern") + घ्या (ghyā, "take," the respectful imperative) → काळजी घ्या — "take care." To a friend, the familiar imperative: काळजी घे (kāḷjī ghe).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

काळजी matches Gujarati kāḷjī, "care, anxiety", which CDIAL lists beside Marathi kāḷīj, "liver, heart", under Sanskrit kālēyaka, "liver" (CDIAL 3103). घ्या is a form of घेणे, "to take", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit gṛbhāyati, "takes, seizes" (CDIAL 4236).

Why it's said this way

Where punhā bheṭū looks ahead to the next meeting, kāḷjī ghyā looks after the person in between — "mind yourself until then." The respectful घ्या (ghyā) matches the तुम्ही register from Chapter 9; the familiar घे (ghe) matches तू.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kāḷjī ghyā" (respectful) / "kāḷjī ghe" (to a friend)
- the retroflex ळ (ḷa) Marathi keeps that Hindi lost

Before you move on

Which special Marathi letter sits in kāḷjī, and who else keeps it? (The retroflex ळ ḷa; also kept by the Dravidian languages and Gujarati.)

11.6 Chapter 11 recap — farewells

The parting words, together — none of them a bare "goodbye."

You'll want to know — the farewells

Marathi	Say it	English
येतो / येते.	yeto / yete.	I'll be going. ("I come again")
पुन्हा भेटू.	punhā bheṭū.	See you again.
उद्या भेटू.	udyā bheṭū.	See you tomorrow.
काळजी घ्या.	kāḷjī ghyā.	Take care.

What you've built — atoms banked this chapter

- पुन्हा (punhā) — again; Sanskrit punar.
- भेटू (bheṭū) — (we'll) meet; the "we" lives in the verb; from bheṭṇe.
- उद्या (udyā) — tomorrow (distinct from kāl, yesterday).
- काळजी घ्या (kāḷjī ghyā) — take care; the retroflex ळ Marathi keeps.
- Register: घ्या (ghyā, respectful) vs घे (ghe, familiar) — the tumhī / tū choice again.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all four farewells in a row
- a stacked goodbye — yeto, punhā bheṭū, kāḷjī ghyā

Before you move on

What does every Marathi goodbye have in common? (None says "farewell" — each is a return or a caring wish.) Next chapter: the first real verbs — mī marāṭhī bolto.

11.7 आहे — one verb, reshaped for whoever is speaking

Give your name, then ask for someone else's, respectfully. Both sentences end on the same word.

Grammar Lens: the verb carries the person

Three chapters have been quietly teaching one thing:

मी आहे mī āhe	I am
तू आहेस tū āhes	you are, familiar
तुम्ही आहात tumhī āhāt	you are, respectful

One verb, three shapes. And the agreement does not stop at the verb — कसे in तुम्ही कसे आहात*?* is plural to match the respectful तुम्ही, and बरा in मी बरा आहे takes the speaker's own gender. The person and the gender spread outward from the verb across the whole sentence.

What you've built — the first meeting, end to end

Every sentence puts the verb last:

> — तुमचं नाव काय आहे? — your name what is? — माझं नाव … आहे. भेटून आनंद झाला. — तुम्ही कसे आहात? — मी बरा आहे. — धन्यवाद. — काही हरकत नाही. — उद्या भेटू.

भेटू is the one to notice at the end. It carries we inside it — no separate word is needed — and unlike the present tense it does not split by gender: everyone says bheṭū.

You'll want to know: नाव, and a sound that leaned नाव came from a Sanskrit form with an m where Marathi now has a v. Marathi softened many old consonants that way, and spotting the lean lets you read a Sanskrit word straight into its Marathi shape.

Before you move on

Where does a Marathi sentence put its verb? (Last.) What changes between आहे, आहेस and आहात? (Who is being spoken to — the verb carries it.) Which word inside बरा changes with the speaker? (Its ending — it takes your gender.) What hides inside भेटू? (We, with no separate word.) And what did the m of the older form become? (V.)

> Complete MR-C05-practice, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: build short present-tense Marathi sentences with the chapter's first verbs.

12.1 बोलणे (bolṇe) — "to speak"

Until now, verbs of being and meeting. Here is your first verb of doing — to speak — and the pattern that runs every Marathi verb.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) बो (bo) + ल (la) + णे (ṇe, the retroflex ण ṇa with the -e stroke) → बोलणे bolṇe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बोलणे (bolṇe, "to speak") is a native Indo-Aryan verb, from a reconstructed bōll-*, "speak" (CDIAL 9321), on the stem bol- — the same bol- as Hindi bolnā and Punjabi bolṇā. Its ending -णे (-ṇe) is the Marathi infinitive ("to ____"): bol-ṇe "to speak," bheṭ-ṇe "to meet," ye-ṇe "to come." Strip -ṇe and you have the stem to build on: bol-.

Grammar Lens: stem + gendered present ending

From the stem you build the present tense — and, as with yeto/yete, it splits by the speaker's gender:

- मी बोलतो (mī bolto) — a man speaks
- मी बोलते (mī bolte) — a woman speaks
- (plural / respectful: बोलतो / बोलता)

The verb still ends the sentence; the copula-less present tense is one word doing the work.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bolṇe" — to speak; then the stem (bol-)
- "I speak" for your own gender (mī bolto / mī bolte)

Before you move on

What is the Marathi infinitive ending, and how does the present split? (-ṇe; the present ending changes with the speaker's gender — bolto m. / bolte f.)

12.2 मी मराठी बोलतो (mī marāṭhī bolto) — "I speak Marathi"

Your first full action-sentence — and it names the language itself.

You'll want to know — the phrase, assembled

मी (mī, I) + मराठी (marāṭhī, Marathi, the object) + बोलतो (bolto, speak) → "I Marathi speak," verb last.

- A woman says मी मराठी बोलते (mī marāṭhī bolte).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मराठी (marāṭhī) is "[the language] of महाराष्ट्र (Mahārāṣṭra)" — the "great kingdom/realm," mahā ("great," cousin of Latin magnus and English magnitude) + rāṣṭra ("nation, realm"). The people are the Marāṭhā, the land Mahārāṣṭra, and the tongue marāṭhī — all one root. It carries the same retroflex sounds you keep meeting: the ट (ṭa) of marāṭhī, the ळ of kāḷjī.

Why it's said this way

The present tense needs no separate "am/do" — बोलतो alone says "I speak." Contrast Hindi, which adds a copula (maiṁ hindī boltā hūṁ); Marathi folds the "am" into the verb ending. Cleaner, and gendered.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mī marāṭhī bolto/bolte" — I speak Marathi
- the root of marāṭhī (Mahārāṣṭra = "great realm")

Before you move on

Where does the name marāṭhī come from? (Mahārāṣṭra, "great realm" — mahā "great" + rāṣṭra "nation.")

12.3 राहणे (rāhṇe) — "to live, to stay"

A second verb on the same engine — to live — and a first postposition to place yourself somewhere.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) रा (rā) + ह (ha) + णे (ṇe, retroflex) → राहणे rāhṇe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

राहणे (rāhṇe, "to live, remain, stay") goes back to rahati*, "remains", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 10666) — the same verb as Hindi rahnā. Present tense, gendered as always: मी पुण्यात राहतो (mī puṇyāt rāhto, a man) / राहते (rāhte, a woman) — "I live in Pune."

Grammar Lens: "in" comes after the noun

Look at पुण्यात (puṇyāt) = पुणे (Puṇe, the city) + -ात (-āt, "in"). Marathi glues "in" onto the end of the noun — a postposition, not a preposition. Verb last, place-marker on the noun's tail: mī puṇyāt rāhto, "I in-Pune live."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "rāhṇe" — to live; then "mī puṇyāt rāhto/rāhte"
- how "in" attaches (Puṇe + -āt → puṇyāt)

Before you move on

Where does "in" go in Marathi, and on what root is rāhṇe? (On the end of the noun (-āt); Sanskrit rah- "to remain.")

12.4 काम करणे (kām karṇe) — "to work"

Your third verb — to work — and it closes a circle back to Chapter 1's greeting.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) काम (kām): का + म (ma). करणे (karṇe): क (ka) + र (ra) + णे (ṇe, retroflex).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

करणे (karṇe, "to do, make") is from Sanskrit √कृ (kṛ, "to do"), from PIE k^{w}er-. That is the very root hiding inside Chapter 1's नमस्कार

(namaskār = "the making of a bow") and inside कर्म (karma, "a thing done"). And काम (kām, "work") is itself worn down from that same कर्म (karma). So "to work" is literally built twice from doing: काम करणे (kām karṇe) = "work-do."

Grammar Lens: noun + करणे makes a verb

Marathi builds countless verbs as noun + करणे: kām karṇe (to work), madat karṇe (to help), sevā karṇe (to serve). Present tense, gendered: मी काम करतो (mī kām karto, m.) / करते (karte, f.) — "I work."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kām karṇe" — to work; then "mī kām karto/karte"
- the root it shares with namaskār and karma (√kṛ, "to do")

Before you move on

What links karṇe, namaskār, and karma? (All from √kṛ, "to do" — and kām "work" is worn-down karma.)

12.5 Chapter 12 recap — the first verbs

Three verbs, one engine — sentences about yourself.

You'll want to know — sentences about yourself

Marathi	Say it	English
मी मराठी बोलतो / बोलते.	mī marāṭhī bolto / bolte.	I speak Marathi.
मी पुण्यात राहतो / राहते.	mī puṇyāt rāhto / rāhte.	I live in Pune.
मी काम करतो / करते.	mī kām karto / karte.	I work.

What you've built — the engine, in one look

- Infinitive ends in -णे (-ṇe): bolṇe, rāhṇe, karṇe.
- Present = stem + a gendered ending — -to (m.) / -te (f.): bolto/ bolte, rāhto/rāhte, karto/karte. No separate "am" — the ending carries it.
- Verb goes last; "in" attaches to the noun's end (puṇyāt).

What you've built — roots banked

- बोलणे (bolṇe) — to speak (native bol-).
- मराठी (marāṭhī) — from Mahārāṣṭra, "great realm."
- राहणे (rāhṇe) — to live (Sanskrit rah-).
- करणे (karṇe) — to do/work (√kṛ — root of namaskār, karma; kām ← karma).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all three sentences for your own gender
- "I speak Marathi and I work" (mī marāṭhī bolto āṇi kām karto)

Before you move on

What three things does the Marathi present tense fold into one word? (The action, the person, and their gender — no separate "am.") From here, Marathi only opens further.

Chapter 13

Numbers One to Five

Modes: voice (9) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 6 of 10 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from one to five in Marathi, say चार as tsār rather than chār, and tell which of Marathi's differences from Hindi is an innovation and which is Hindi holding on to something older.
> Account for all three tells: दोन*'s final n copied from the rhyme of tiṇṇi/doṇṇi,* पाच dropping the nasal Hindi पाँच still writes, and चार spelled as everywhere else but pronounced with a ts.

Then compare: य ळ व. Stop after one retrieval and one repair.

13.5 एक, दोन, तीन, चार, पाच — one to five

Marathi and Hindi both use Devanagari and both descend from Sanskrit, so their numbers look almost identical. Almost is where the interest is.

You'll want to know: the five

	Marathi	said
1	एक	ek
2	दोन	don
3	तीन	tīn
4	चार	chār — but see below
5	पाच	pāch

What you've built: three Marathi tells

Set them against Hindi. Two differences are visible and one is audible:

number	Hindi	Marathi
2	दो do	दोन don: final n
5	पाँच pāṁch	पाच pāch: no nasal mark
4	चार chār	चार tsār: same spelling, different sound

Do not explain all three histories yet. First make the five forms automatic; the next lesson earns the deeper comparison.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ek, don, tīn, tsār, pāch"
- the visible tells — don has n; pāch has no nasal mark
- the audible tell — written chār, Marathi tsār

Before you move on

Count to five in Marathi. (Ek, don, tīn, tsār, pāch.) Where does Marathi add a letter compared with Hindi? (दोन, don.) Which form drops a nasal mark? (पाच, pāch.) What differs in चार without differing in spelling? (Marathi's च is nearer ts before ā.) Next: explain where those differences came from.

13.6 Why Marathi two rhymes with three

Count once: ek, don, tīn, tsār, pāch. Which two words end in n? (Don and tīn.)

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The tempting guess is that Marathi दोन don kept something Hindi दो do lost. It did not.
Sanskrit's neuter word for three, त्रीणि trīṇi, became Prakrit tiṇṇi. In three, the ṇ genuinely belongs to the word. The doubled consonant is a Prakrit trade for the lost r.
The word for two was then reshaped to match its neighbour: Prakrit doṇṇi copied the shape of tiṇṇi. Marathi don's final n is therefore an innovation, a rhyme borrowed from the number next door. Hindi do simply never took it.
English numbers did this too: four acquired its initial f- by analogy with five. Familiar sequences pull neighbouring words toward one another.

What you've built: पाच and the nasal Hindi kept

Marathi पाच pāch and Hindi पाँच pāṁch tell the opposite story. Hindi's chandrabindu ँ records the nasal of Sanskrit pañca; Marathi's spelling drops it.
So neither language is simply "older." Marathi innovated in don, while Hindi retained an older feature in pāṁch. Comparing both descendants reveals the history that either one alone could hide.

The letters in this word

Both write चार, but Marathi pronounces च before ā nearer ts: tsār.
The letters stayed aligned while the sound moved.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the borrowed rhyme — tiṇṇi … doṇṇi
- innovation — Marathi don's final n
- retention — Hindi pāṁch's nasal

- same spelling, shifted sound — chār / tsār

Before you move on

Did Marathi don preserve an ancient ending? (No: two copied three.) Which language retains Sanskrit pañca's nasal in writing? (Hindi.) Why can neither daughter be called simply older? (Each changed or retained a different feature.) What does Marathi change without respelling चार? (Ch shifts toward ts before ā.)

13.7 The six marks, with the page shut

Nothing to look at. Every answer here is a place on an imaginary line: before the letter, above it, or under it.

Before you move on

Which mark is written before the letter it is read after? (Short i.) Which two hang below the line? (Short u and long ū.) Which curl opens the other way from short u? (The vocalic r.) Which nasal mark sits in a crescent? (The candrabindu.) And which vowel needs no mark at all, because every consonant already carries it? (Short a.)

13.8 Two rows, rebuilt from two questions

You do not need to remember seven letters. You need to remember two questions and the order they come in.

Before you move on

Back of the mouth, four steps. (ka, kha, ga, gha.) Roof of the mouth, the same four. (ca, cha, ja, jha.) Which of the eight has both the voice and the breath at the palate? (jha.) And which one does Marathi also say as ts? (ca.)

13.9 The curled row, without a model

One question decides all five: where is the tongue, and is it doing anything different from the dental row you learned first?

Before you move on

Tongue curled back: plain, breathy, voiced, nasal. (ṭa, ṭha, ḍa, ṇa.) Which of them ends every infinitive you have learned? (ṇa.) Lips closed, voice off, one dot fewer than ba. (pa.)

13.10 The last six, without a model

Two letters your mouth keeps apart, two it no longer does, and three vowels that come in more than one shape.

Before you move on

Which l does Hindi not have? (The curled one.) Which two sibilants are kept apart only in spelling? (śa* and *ṣa.) How many written forms does the u vowel have? (Four.) And which vowel opens the word for one? (e.)

Chapter 14

The Core Verbs

Modes: voice (6) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can use six everyday Marathi verbs, pick the present-tense ending that agrees with my subject's gender, end every sentence on the verb, and say that I know something the way Marathi says it — with the knower in the dative and आहे closing the line.
> Say मला माहीत आहे and मला मराठी येते unprompted: the knower in the dative, the verb agreeing with its own subject rather than with the speaker, and आहे closing the sentence — the whole chapter's machinery in two lines.

14.1 असणे (asṇe) — "to be," and the word your sentence ends on

You have already said it: mājhaṁ nāv … āhe. Now meet the verb that form belongs to, and notice where Marathi insists on putting it.

You'll want to know: असणे and its present आहे

असणे — asṇe — to be

The ending -णे (-ṇe) is the Marathi infinitive, the same ending as bolṇe "to speak." Its present tense is short, irregular, and already yours: आहे (āhe) — "am, is, are."

who	Marathi	said
मी (I)	आहे	āhe
तू (you, familiar)	आहेस	āhes
तुम्ही (you, respectful)	आहात	āhāt

The letters in this word

अ is the bare vowel a; स is sa; णे is the retroflex ण ṇa carrying the -e stroke — a-sa-ṇe. आ is that first letter with an upright stroke added, the long ā. And ह + े → हे, ha with the same -e stroke: ā-he.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Sanskrit's word for "is" was अस्ति ásti, from the Indo-European root es-*: Latin est, German ist, English is. Asṇe looks built on it, but CDIAL files it under āsate, "sits, exists" (CDIAL 1480), or ākṣeti, "abides" (CDIAL 1031). It began as staying put, not as being.
आहे is the contested piece. CDIAL weighs ásti (CDIAL 977), ābhavati, "is present" (CDIAL 1226), and āsate (CDIAL 1480), and settles on none, so treat its descent as an open question.

Grammar Lens: the sentence ends on आहे

English slots is into the middle of a sentence: "My name is Sara."
Marathi holds it back to the very end:
माझं नाव सारा आहे — mājhaṁ nāv Sārā āhe — piece by piece, "my name Sara is."
That is the rule for every Marathi verb, and āhe is where it becomes unmissable. Whatever else the sentence carries, the verb closes it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "asṇe" — to be — then its present, "āhe"
- the three persons — "mī āhe … tū āhes … tumhī āhāt"
- your own name in Marathi order — "mājhaṁ nāv … āhe"

Before you move on

What is the infinitive behind āhe? (असणे, asṇe.) Where does a Marathi verb stand? (Last — the sentence closes on it.) Which everyday English word is ásti's own cousin? (Is.) Next: a verb that changes shape according to who is speaking.

14.2 जाणे (jāṇe) — "to go," and a present tense that gives you away

Say "my name is …" once more, and hear where āhe lands. Every verb from here obeys that same rule. This one adds a second rule English has no use for.

You'll want to know: जाणे

जाणे — jāṇe — to go

Strip the infinitive ending -णे and the stem is जा- jā-. On that stem Marathi builds the everyday present: जातो (jāto) and जाते (jāte).

Both mean "I go." Neither is more correct than the other. Which one you may say is decided by something the English sentence never mentions.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

जाणे (jāṇe) is inherited from Sanskrit yāti, "goes" (CDIAL 10452).

The letters in this word

ज is ja, and the upright stroke after it is the long ā — together जा jā. णे you met last lesson: retroflex ण with the -e stroke. Two syllables, jā-ṇe, with the tongue curled back for that second one.

Grammar Lens: the ending declares who is speaking

English "I go" hides the speaker completely — a man and a woman say the same two words. Marathi will not let you:

speaking of	Marathi	said
a man, of himself	मी जातो	mī jāto
a woman, of herself	मी जाते	mī jāte
a man, "he goes"	तो जातो	to jāto
a woman, "she goes"	ती जाते	tī jāte

The -तो / -ते swap is the whole mechanism, and it runs through every verb: bolto / bolte, yeto / yete. Hindi marks gender on its verbs too, but Marathi makes it unavoidable in the plainest sentence a beginner can build. From your first "I go," you are choosing.
Notice also what is missing: no separate word for "am." The ending carries the action, the person, and the gender at once.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "jāṇe" — to go — then the stem, "jā-"
- "I go" in your own gender — "mī jāto" or "mī jāte"
- the pair — "to jāto … tī jāte"

Before you move on

What is the stem inside jāṇe? (जा-, jā-.) Which two endings split the present, and by what? (-तो / -ते, by the gender of the one the verb is about.) Can a Marathi speaker say "I go" without revealing it? (No — the choice is forced.) Next: the same ancient root, pointed the other way.

14.3 येणे (yeṇe) — "to come," the other half of "to go"

Say "I go" in your own gender: mī jāto or mī jāte. Hold that shape. The next verb is closer to it than it sounds.

You'll want to know: येणे

येणे — yeṇe — to come

Same infinitive ending, same machinery: stem ये- ye-, present येतो (yeto) and येते (yete), split by gender exactly as jāto / jāte was.

You met yeto in Chapter 4 as a farewell — Marathi takes its leave by saying "I come," promising the return rather than announcing the departure.

The letters in this word

य is ya, a soft English y as in yes. Add the -e stroke above and you have ये ye — the same stroke you have been putting on णे and on the last syllable of आहे. Two syllables: ye-ṇe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Sanskrit had a verb of travelling, yā-, whose present was याति yāti "goes, travels." Middle Indo-Aryan turned that initial y- into a j-, giving Prakrit jāi — and that is Marathi जाणे.
Sanskrit had a second verb of going, eti, on the root i. Put a prefix on it: आ- ā- means "toward, hither," and ā- with eti is aiti, "comes near" — that is, comes. CDIAL lists Marathi येणे under aiti (CDIAL 2534). So coming is going with a prefix meaning "this way." जाणे and येणे grew from two different verbs of going, but येणे still carries the prefix that turned one direction into the other.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "yeṇe" — to come — then the stem, "ye-"
- "I come" in your own gender — "mī yeto" or "mī yete"
- the derivation — "ā- + eti … aiti … yeṇe"

Before you move on

What is the stem of yeṇe? (ये-, ye-.) Which Sanskrit verb does CDIAL list yeṇe under? (aiti, "comes near".) What single piece turns going into coming? (The prefix आ- ā-, "toward here.") Next: an infinitive that is also a noun, and the gender Hindi does not have.

14.4 खाणे (khāṇe) — "to eat," and Marathi's third gender

Two infinitives so far: jāṇe, yeṇe. Say them. This third one is ordinary as a verb and quietly remarkable as a noun.

You'll want to know: खाणे

खाणे — khāṇe — to eat

Stem खा- khā-, present खातो (khāto) and खाते (khāte) on the gendered pattern you already have.

Its root is Sanskrit खादति khādati, "chews, eats" — a solidly Indo-Aryan word with no borrowing in its history. The -d- wore away on the road to Marathi; the long ā stayed.

The letters in this word

ख is kha — a k with a genuine puff of breath after it, the sound in English kit said hard, not the k of skit. Marathi treats that puff as a different letter, not an accent. Add the long-ā stroke and the familiar णे: khā-ṇe.

Grammar Lens: the infinitive is a neuter noun

खाणे also means "eating" — the thing, not the act of doing it. Every -णे infinitive works this way; खाणंपिणं (khāṇaṁ-piṇaṁ), "eating and drinking," is how Marathi says food and drink.

And as a noun it carries a gender — neuter, the third one. Hindi has two genders, masculine and feminine. Marathi kept all three that Sanskrit had, so words agreeing with a noun come in three shapes:

gender	"my"	said
masculine	माझा	mājhā
feminine	माझी	mājhī
neuter	माझं	mājhaṁ

You met the neuter one five chapters ago in माझं नाव, so this table is a word you already own being shown in its other two shapes rather than a new one.

So "eating is fine" is खाणं बरं आहे — khāṇaṁ baraṁ āhe, with the neuter ending twice over and the verb, as always, last.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "khāṇe" — to eat — then "I eat" in your own gender
- the three shapes — "mājhā … mājhī … mājhaṁ"
- "eating is fine" — "khāṇaṁ baraṁ āhe"

Before you move on

What are the two things खाणे means? (To eat, and eating as a noun.) How many genders does Marathi have, and how many does Hindi have? (Three against two — Marathi kept Sanskrit's neuter.) Which gender is an infinitive? (Neuter.) Next: a verb whose root you already own in a dozen English words.

14.5 पाहणे (pāhṇe) — "to see," and a cousin it does not have

Say "I eat" in your own gender — mī khāto or mī khāte. The next verb runs on the same endings, and its history comes with a warning about words that only look related.

You'll want to know: पाहणे

पाहणे — pāhṇe — to see, to watch

Stem पाह- pāh-, present पाहतो (pāhto) and पाहते (pāhte). In everyday speech you will also hear बघणे (baghṇe) for the same job; pāhṇe is the one whose history repays digging.

The letters in this word

प is pa without the puff of breath that kha had. Add the upright stroke for long ā: पा pā. Then ह ha, and the णे you now know by heart. Three light syllables, pā-ha-ṇe, usually spoken as two: pāh-ṇe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

You will often read that pāhṇe comes from Sanskrit पश्यति paśyati, "sees", in its prefixed form prapaśyati, "looks out at". That root, paś-, is the Indo-European spek-*, "to observe", which reached English through Latin as spectacle, inspect and spy. It is a good story, and CDIAL does not tell it.
CDIAL files Marathi pāhṇẽ, "to see, to search", under pracāh*, "look for", a form it reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 8492), and lists pāhije, "it is needed", beside it. It builds pracāh* on cāh*, "see, look for, desire", the verb behind Hindi cāhnā, "to want" (CDIAL 4775), and it notes prabhāti, "appears", as a possible second source (CDIAL 8709).
So pāhṇe began as looking for something, and spectacle and spy are look-alikes, not cousins.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "pāhṇe" — to see — then "I see" in your own gender
- the derivation CDIAL gives — "pracāh, look for … pāhṇe"
- the look-alikes that are not its cousins — "spectacle, inspect, spy"

Before you move on

What is the stem of pāhṇe? (पाह-, pāh-.) Which form does CDIAL trace it to? (pracāh*, "look for".) Are spectacle and spy its cousins? (No — they belong to paśyati, a look-alike.) Next: a verb Marathi mostly refuses to use, and what it says instead.

14.6 माहीत असणे (māhīt asṇe) — "to know," which Marathi says sideways

Say "I go" and "I come" in your own gender — jāto or jāte, yeto or yete. Five verbs obeyed that pattern. This one refuses.

You'll want to know: माहीत असणे and जाणणे

माहीत असणे — māhīt asṇe — to know (everyday)

जाणणे — jāṇṇe — to know (formal, literary)

Marathi has an inherited verb for knowing and barely uses it. Everyday speech says māhīt asṇe, "to be known," built on asṇe.

The letters in this word

म is ma; with the long-ā stroke, मा. Then ह + ी → ही, ha with the long -ī stroke, which leans forward ahead of its letter. त is ta: mā-hī-t.

Grammar Lens: knowledge comes to you, you do not do it

मला माहीत आहे — malā māhīt āhe — "I know."
Word by word: "to me known is." Malā is "to me," and the knower sits there, not in the subject slot. Nobody acts; a fact is in your possession, and āhe closes the line.
The same frame carries a language: मला मराठी येते — malā marāṭhī yete — "I know Marathi," literally "to me Marathi comes." Yete is feminine because the subject is मराठी, a feminine noun — not the speaker; a man says it too. The verb agrees with its subject, as always. Here the subject is not you.

जाणणे is pure inheritance: Sanskrit जानाति jānāti, root jñā-, from Indo-European gnō- — the root of English know, Latin nōscere (notice, recognize) and Greek gnōsis (diagnosis). Marathi kept the cousin and gave the daily work to the loan.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "malā māhīt āhe" — then literally, "to me known is"
- "I know Marathi" — "malā marāṭhī yete"

- the inherited verb and its English cousin — “jāṇṇe … know”

Before you move on

Where does Marathi put the knower? (In the dative — malā, “to me.”) Which verb finishes malā māhīt āhe, and where? (आहे, last.) Why yete in malā marāṭhī yete? (The subject is मराठी, feminine — agreeing with it, not the speaker.) Which know-verb was borrowed? (माहीत, through Persian.)

Chapter 15

The Mind and the Page

Modes: 👁 eyes (4) 🎧 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I think, understand, read and write in Marathi, put the understander in the dative where Marathi puts it, and name what each of the four roots meant before it meant a mental act — turning, waking, speaking and scratching.
> Say मी माझं नाव लिहितो, run the chapter's four verbs back with the four things their roots meant — vichār karṇe from a root meaning to turn, samajṇe from one meaning to wake, vāchṇe from one meaning to speak, lihiṇe from one meaning to scratch — and pick out the one of the four that refuses मी and takes मला instead.

15.1 विचार करणे (vichār karṇe) — "to think," which is a turning

Say "I see" in your own gender — mī pāhto or mī pāhte — and say what the form CDIAL traces it to meant. (Look for.) Now the verb for what happens behind the eyes.

You'll want to know: विचार करणे

विचार करणे — vichār karṇe — to think

Two words, not one. विचार vichār is a noun, "a thought"; करणे karṇe is "to do," which has been yours since kām karṇe, "to work." Marathi thinks by doing a thought.

The present runs on endings you already own: मी विचार करतो — mī vichār karto, a man speaking — and करते karte, a woman.

The letters in this word

विचार is वि (vi — व carrying the short-i stroke, which stands to the left of its letter), then चा (chā), then र (ra). करणे is क ka, र ra, णे ṇe.

The letters in this word

च before a long ā hides a sound change: Marathi says it nearer ts. So चार is tsār, and विचार is vitsār — spelling unchanged, mouth moved.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

विचार is वि- vi- ("apart, thoroughly") on the Sanskrit root चर् car-, "to move, to range about." A thought is a ranging over.
And car- comes from Indo-European k^{w}elh$_1$-, "to turn," which surfaces as Greek pélomai, Latin colō, and — through a doubled form — English wheel and cycle. When English says you turn something over in your mind, that is the same picture, and विचार has it built into the root.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vichār karṇe" — to think — with the ts: vitsār
- "I think" in your own gender — "mī vichār karto" or "karte"
- the root and its English cousins — "car-, to turn … wheel, cycle"

Before you move on

Which two words make "to think"? (विचार "a thought" and करणे "to do.") What did the root inside विचार mean? (To move, to turn — the root behind wheel.) What gender is a -णे infinitive as a noun? (Neuter.) And why vitsār? (Marathi's च leans toward ts before a long ā.)

15.2 समजणे (samajṇe) — "to understand," which happens to you

Say "I think" — mī vichār karto or karte. Now say "I know" the way Marathi builds it. (मला माहीत आहे — malā māhīt āhe, "to me known is.") Understanding takes that second shape, not the first.

You'll want to know: समजणे

समजणे — samajṇe — to understand

मला मराठी समजते — malā marāṭhī samajte — "I understand Marathi." Piece by piece: "to me Marathi is-understood."

The letters in this word

समजणे is four plain letters with nothing hanging off the first three: स sa, म ma, ज ja, then णे ṇe. Each consonant carries its own built-in a, which is why sa-ma-ja comes out of three letters.

Grammar Lens: three verbs, one frame

You now have two Marathi sentences built the same way, and they belong side by side:

Marathi	word for word
मला मराठी येते	to-me Marathi comes — I know Marathi
मला मराठी समजते	to-me Marathi is-understood — I understand Marathi

In both, you sit in the dative — malā, "to me" — and the verb agrees with मराठी, a feminine noun, which is why both end -ते whoever is speaking.

The first one is worth hearing literally: knowing a language is it coming to you, on येणे — a verb of going with आ- "toward here" fixed to the front. Understanding works the same way. Neither is something you do.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

समजणे comes through Prakrit saṁbujjhaï from Sanskrit सम्बुध्यते sambudhyate: सम् sam-, "together," on the root बुध् budh-, "to wake up." To understand is to come awake to something.
That root named a man: बुद्ध buddha is simply "the awakened one." It is Indo-European b^{h}ewd^{h}-, which also gave Greek punthánomai, "to learn by asking," and English bid. English keeps the picture in it dawned on me.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "malā marāṭhī samajte" — hearing "to me," not "I"
- its twin — "malā marāṭhī yete"
- the root and the man it named — "budh-, to wake … buddha"

Before you move on

Where does Marathi put the understander? (In the dative — malā.) Why samajte and not samajto, even for a man? (It agrees with मराठी, feminine.) What did budh- mean before it meant understanding, and whom did it name? (To wake — and the Buddha.) Which two verbs beside this one take malā? (माहीत असणे and येणे, in malā marāṭhī yete.)

15.3 वाचणे (vāchṇe) — "to read," which is making a page speak

Say "I understand Marathi" — malā marāṭhī samajte. And "I see" — mī pāhto or pāhte. This verb sits between the two: eyes first, meaning after.

You'll want to know: वाचणे

वाचणे — vāchṇe — to read

मी मराठी वाचतो — mī marāṭhī vāchto — "I read Marathi," and वाचते vāchte if a woman is speaking. This one takes an ordinary subject: मी. Reading is something you do.

The letters in this word

वा is व va with the upright long-ā stroke; च is cha; णे is the retroflex infinitive ending. Three letters, and you have met all three before — व in nāv, च in chār, णे on every verb in the last chapter.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वाचणे goes back to Sanskrit वाचयति vācayati, and vācayati is not its own verb — it is the root वच् vac-, "to speak," with a gear changed: "to make speak." Marathi reading is making the marks talk. That is not a poetic gloss; it is the grammar of the Sanskrit form.
वच् is Indo-European wek^{w}-. Latin took it as vōx, "voice," and vocāre, "to call," and from that pair English has voice, vocal, vocation, invoke and advocate. Greek has óps, "voice."
One honest footnote: Marathi also has a वाचणे meaning "to survive," and it is a different word — from vañcati, "to escape." Same spelling, unrelated history.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mī marāṭhī vāchto" or "vāchte" — in your own gender
- the literal sense — "to make it speak"
- the cousins — "vāch- … voice, vocal, invoke"
- the chapter's three verbs so far — "vichār karṇe, samajṇe, vāchṇe"

Before you move on

What did वाचणे's Sanskrit ancestor literally mean? (To make speak — reading as speaking aloud.) Name two English words from the same root. (Voice, vocal, invoke, advocate: any two.) Which of your verbs takes mī and which takes malā — vāchṇe or samajṇe? (Vāchṇe takes मी; samajṇe takes मला.)

15.4 लिहिणे (lihiṇe) — "to write," which began as scratching

Three verbs and three roots: vichār karṇe on a root meaning to turn, samajṇe on one meaning to wake, vāchṇe on one meaning to speak. Say all three. The fourth root is the most physical of the lot.

You'll want to know: लिहिणे

लिहिणे — lihiṇe — to write

मी माझं नाव लिहितो — mī mājhaṁ nāv lihito — "I write my name," and लिहिते lihite if a woman says it. The stem keeps its i: lihi-, not lih-.

The letters in this word

लि is ल la with the short-i stroke standing to its left; हि is ह ha with the same stroke; then णे. One stroke, used on two letters running: li-hi-ṇe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

लिहिणे comes through Prakrit lihaï from Sanskrit लिखति likhati, and likh- meant to scratch, to score before it meant to write. Its plainest relative inside Sanskrit is रेखा rekhā, "a line, a scratch."
Outside Indo-Aryan the cousins are genuinely disputed, and this lesson claims none. What is not disputed is that three families reached for the same picture: Latin scrībere also meant to scratch, and stands behind scribe and script; English write began as Germanic "to tear, to score."

Grammar Lens: what Marathi writes that Hindi does not

A lesson about writing is the place for two things Marathi writes its own way. Count to five: ek, don, tīn, tsār, pāch. दोन ends in a न that Hindi's दो does not have. पाच has no nasal mark, where Hindi writes पाँच.
And लिहिणे is a noun as well as a verb — "writing," the thing — because every -णे infinitive is, and every one of them is neuter.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mī mājhaṁ nāv lihito" or "lihite"
- the chapter's four verbs — "vichār karṇe, samajṇe, vāchṇe, lihiṇe"
- their four roots — "to turn, to wake, to speak, to scratch"

Before you move on

What did likh- mean first, and which two families named writing the same way? (To scratch — Latin scrībere, English write.) Give the four verbs of this chapter and what their roots meant. (Vichār karṇe / turn, samajṇe / wake, vāchṇe / speak, lihiṇe / scratch.) Which one refuses मी? (समजणे — it takes malā.) Which number does Marathi write with an extra न, and which with one mark fewer than Hindi? (दोन; पाच.)

Chapter 16

Taking, Asking, Helping, Liking

Modes: 👁 eyes (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can take, ask, help and say what I like and what I love in Marathi, build a fresh verb by putting करणे behind a noun, and say why मला मराठी आवडते has no room for me as its subject while मी प्रेम करतो does.
> Say मला मराठी आवडते and hear that you are not its subject, set it against मी प्रेम करतो where you are, place both beside मला मराठी येते and मला मराठी समजते so one frame carries three meanings, and run the chapter's four verbs back with where each came from — Sanskrit ग्रह् beside English grab, विचार doing double duty as thought and question, Arabic मदद through Persian, and आवडणे with no Sanskrit ancestor to claim.

16.1 घेणे (gheṇe) — "to take," which you have been saying since Chapter 11

Say "to write" and "to read" — lihiṇe, vāchṇe — and what lihiṇe's root meant before writing existed. (To scratch.) This next verb has been in your mouth since the farewells, unrecognised.

You'll want to know: घेणे

घेणे — gheṇe — to take

काळजी घ्या — kāḷjī ghyā, "take care" — is this verb. घ्या ghyā is its respectful command, घे ghe the familiar one you would use with तू. The plain present is मी घेतो mī gheto / घेते ghete.

Note the -त- that appears in the present but not the infinitive: ghe- on its own, ghe-t-o when conjugated. Marathi's commonest verbs are the ones that bend.

The letters in this word

घ is gha — a g with a real puff of breath behind it, a separate letter from ग ga, exactly as ख kha is separate from क ka. Add the -e stroke over the top and the retroflex णे: ghe-ṇe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

घेणे comes through Prakrit gahaï from the Sanskrit root ग्रह् grah-, "to seize, to grasp" — the root of ग्रहण grahaṇ, an eclipse, which is the sky being seized.
Its older Vedic shape was ग्रभ् grabh-, and that bh is the piece worth holding on to: Indo-European g^{h}reb^h- kept its bh in Vedic and turned it into a b in Germanic, which is English grab. Marathi's gh- is what four thousand years did to the same first consonant. Grabh and grab are the same word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "gheṇe" — to take — then "mī gheto" or "ghete"
- the farewell it was hiding in — "kāḷjī ghyā"
- the Vedic form and its English cousin — "grabh … grab"

Before you move on

Which farewell has been using घेणे all along, and what does it literally say? (काळजी घ्या — "take care.") Which English word is the same word as Vedic grabh? (Grab.) What gender is घेणे when it acts as a noun? (Neuter, like every -णे form.) Say "to write" and "to take" in one breath. (Lihiṇe, gheṇe.)

16.2 विचारणे (vichārṇe) — "to ask," built out of "a thought"

Say "to take" — gheṇe. Say "to think" — vichār karṇe — and what its root meant. (To turn, to range about.) Hold that word. The next verb is it, with four letters fewer.

You'll want to know: विचारणे

विचारणे — vichārṇe — to ask

मी विचारतो — mī vichārto — "I ask," विचारते vichārte if a woman speaks. And the same च rule holds: say it vitsārto, with the ts Marathi puts before a long ā.

The letters in this word

There is nothing new. विचारणे is विचार — the noun from the last chapter, letter for letter — with णे on the end. If you can write "a thought," you can write "to ask."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Marathi builds both verbs on विचार:

Marathi	what it means
विचार करणे	to think — "to do a thought"
विचारणे	to ask — the thought made into a verb

Both sit on वि- plus चर् car-, "to move, to range." Thinking is ranging over something privately; asking is ranging over it out loud with somebody else. Marathi did not decide they were different enough to need different words.

This is Marathi's own arrangement, not a family inheritance. Hindi's verb for asking, पूछना pūchnā, comes from an unrelated root, and Hindi's विचार stays a noun. Where a language draws its lines is a choice each language makes for itself.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair, slowly — “vichār karṇe … vichārṇe”
- “I ask” in your own gender — “mī vichārto” or “vichārte”
- both with the Marathi ts — “vitsār karto … vitsārto”

Before you move on

What is the only difference between Marathi’s “to think” and its “to ask”? (करणे — thinking adds “to do”; asking puts -णे straight onto विचार.) What did the shared root mean? (To move, to turn over.) How is the च said in both? (Nearer ts before the long ā.) And “to take”? (Gheṇe.)

16.3 मदत करणे (madat karṇe) — “to help,” a word that travelled

Say “to ask” — vichārṇe. And say “I know” — malā māhīt āhe — then name where माहीत was borrowed from. (Arabic, through Persian.) A second borrowed word from that same layer is coming.

You’ll want to know: मदत करणे

मदत करणे — madat karṇe — to help

Built the way kām karṇe and vichār karṇe are built: a noun, मदत madat (“help”), with करणे behind it. मी मदत करतो — mī madat karto — “I help,” करते karte for a woman.

That pattern is the most productive thing in the language: put करणे behind almost any noun and Marathi will accept the verb.

The letters in this word

मदत is three bare consonants, each with its built-in a: म ma, द da, त ta — ma-da-t, with the last a falling away in speech as it usually does at the end of a Marathi word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मदत is Arabic madad, borrowed through Persian. Its Arabic root means to stretch out, to extend — madad is a thing extended: a hand, or reinforcements sent to an army. Help, named as reach.
It belongs to the layer of Persian and Arabic administration that settled into Marathi under the Deccan sultanates — the same layer that gave you माहीत in malā māhīt āhe, and हरकत in kāhī harkat nāhī. Three everyday words, one route.
One small tell worth keeping: Marathi writes मदत, with a final त. Hindi and Urdu write मदद, with a द. The same loan, landing differently in each language — which is what borrowing normally looks like.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "madat karṇe" — then "mī madat karto" or "karte"
- the three करणे verbs you have — "kām karṇe, vichār karṇe, madat karṇe"
- what the Arabic root meant — "to stretch out"

Before you move on

What did मदत's Arabic root mean before it meant help? (To stretch out, to extend.) Which road did it travel to reach Marathi? (Persian.) Name another word you have from that same layer. (माहीत, or हरकत in kāhī harkat nāhī.) And how does Marathi spell the end of the word, against Hindi and Urdu? (With त, not द.)

16.4 आवडणे (āvaḍṇe) — "to like," which is not something you do

Three verbs from this chapter: gheṇe, vichārṇe, madat karṇe. Say them. Each let you be the one acting. The fourth will not.

You'll want to know: आवडणे

आवडणे — āvaḍṇe — to like

मला मराठी आवडते — malā marāṭhī āvaḍte — "I like Marathi," or word for word, "to me Marathi pleases."

The letters in this word

आ is the standalone long ā; व va; ड ḍa, a retroflex d made with the tongue curled back — new here, and not the द da of madat; then णे. Ā-va-ḍa-ṇe.

Grammar Lens: the third sentence built this way

Marathi	word for word
मला मराठी येते	to-me Marathi comes — I know it
मला मराठी समजते	to-me Marathi is-understood — I understand it
मला मराठी आवडते	to-me Marathi pleases — I like it

One frame, three meanings. You are मला in all three, never the subject, and the verb agrees with मराठी. Change the thing liked and the ending follows it: a masculine thing takes आवडतो, a neuter thing आवडतं.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आवडणे is Marathi's own — straight down from Old Marathi, cousin to Konkani āvaḍ, with no Sanskrit ancestor securely established, so this lesson claims none. Hindi and Urdu say पसंद pasand, borrowed from Persian.

Loving is a separate verb: प्रेम करणे prem karṇe, and there you are the subject — मी प्रेम करतो. प्रेम is Sanskrit preman, on प्री prī-, "to be dear," from Indo-European preyH-. Germanic built a verb "to love" on it, and from that English has friend — the one loved — and free.

Why it's said this way

Chapter 13's rule holds here: neither language is simply older. Marathi's दोन took its final n by copying तीन — an innovation. Hindi's पाँच kept a nasal Marathi dropped — a retention. Now a verb: Marathi kept its native word for liking, Hindi took a Persian one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- “malā marāṭhī āvaḍte” — hearing “to me,” not “I”
- the one you do — “mī prem karto” or “karte”
- this chapter’s four — “gheṇe, vichārṇe, madat karṇe, āvaḍṇe”

Before you move on

Who is the subject of malā marāṭhī āvaḍte? (मराठी — not you.) Which of the two puts you in the subject’s chair? (प्रेम करणे.) Which English words share प्रेम’s root? (Friend, free.) Now the chapter’s four sources — gheṇe, vichārṇe, madat karṇe, āvaḍṇe. (Sanskrit ग्रह्, cousin of grab; विचार, the thinking word itself; Arabic madad through Persian; and आवड, native.)

Chapter 17

Water, Tea, Milk, and Bhakri

Modes: 👁 eyes (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can politely ask for water, tea, milk, or bhakri in Marathi, name which of the four is a Chinese loan and which never touched Sanskrit at all, and say why all three of Marathi's genders already show up in one short chapter.
> The chapter closes on भाकरी, the request that breaks every pattern the first three set: the reader produces all four requests with कृपया, sorts पाणी and दूध (inherited from Sanskrit) against चहा (a Chinese loan by the overland route) against भाकरी (native to Marathi's own ground, sharing Sanskrit with none of them), and names the three genders the four words already cover.

17.1 पाणी (pāṇī) — the first thing you'll actually ask for आवडणे told you what you like; प्रेम करणे what you love. This chapter asks for something smaller and more frequent than either: a drink.

You'll want to know: पाणी

पाणी — pāṇī — water

The letters in this word

Nothing new here. प pa you have from punhā; ण you have from every -णे verb so far; ी is the familiar long ī. पा-णी.

Grammar Lens: asking politely

पाणी, कृपया. — pāṇī, kṛpayā. — Water, please.

कृपया kṛpayā is Sanskrit's own instrumental of कृपा kṛpā, "mercy, kindness" — literally "by kindness, out of kindness." Name the thing you want, add कृपया, and the request is complete: no verb for "give" required. This is the pattern the whole chapter reuses, and the first time this track has built a "please" of any kind — a spine node this book had left empty until now.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पाणी continues Maharastri Prakrit pāṇīa, from Sanskrit पानीय pānīya, "that which is to be drunk," built on पा pā-, "to drink." That root is Indo-European peh₃(i)-, and English keeps two disguised pieces of it: potion and poison both come through Latin potare, "to drink" — a poison, by origin, is just a drink gone wrong. Greek turned the same idea into sympotēs, "one who drinks together," which English keeps as symposium.

Your turn

- Say it: pāṇī — water
- Say it: pāṇī, kṛpayā. — water, please
- Run through: malā marāṭhī āvaḍte, then pāṇī, kṛpayā — liking and requesting, side by side

Before you move on

Ask for water politely. (Pāṇī, kṛpayā.) What does कृपया literally mean? ("By kindness.") Which two English words for a drink, and one for a whole gathering of them, share pāṇī's root? (Potion, poison, symposium.)
Sources: Wiktionary: पाणी; Wiktionary: कृपया.

17.2 चहा (chahā) — a word that took the overland road

पाणी, कृपया (pāṇī, kṛpayā) — water, please. Say it once more, then ask for something that is not water at all.

You'll want to know: चहा

चहा — chahā — tea

चहा, कृपया. — chahā, kṛpayā. — Tea, please.

The letters in this word

Nothing new. च you already say near ts from Chapter 13's चार; ह is नमस्कार's; ा the familiar long ā. Cha-hā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Every other word in this chapter reaches back to Sanskrit. चहा does not — it is a loanword from Mandarin cha, and it reached Marathi by the overland route, through Persian and Turkic trade, the same road that gave Hindi चाय chāy, Bengali cha, and Persian chāy their words for the same drink. A second branch of the same plant travelled by sea: Dutch traders carried the Hokkien word te to Western Europe, which is why English says tea, not cha. One plant, two words, two trade routes. चहा is also this chapter's first masculine noun, against पाणी's neuter — a reminder that Marathi's three genders do not sort words by where they came from.

Your turn

- Say it: chahā, kṛpayā — tea, please
- Name: the two trade routes — overland to chāy/chahā, by sea to tea
- Say it: both requests — pāṇī, kṛpayā ... chahā, kṛpayā

Before you move on

Ask for tea politely. (Chahā, kṛpayā.) Which language does चहा ultimately come from? (Mandarin Chinese, cha.) Which English word for the same plant took the sea route instead? (Tea.)

Sources: Wiktionary: चहा.

17.3 दूध (dūdh) — back to Sanskrit, and a surprising English cousin

चहा broke the pattern — a loanword with no Sanskrit behind it. This next word rejoins पाणी's family: inherited, traceable, Indo-European.

You'll want to know: दूध

दूध — dūdh — milk

दूध, कृपया. — dūdh, kṛpayā. — Milk, please.

The letters in this word

One new mark: ू, the long *ū vowel sign — a longer hook under the consonant than any you've written so far. द you have from dhanyavād and madat; ध from dhanyavād too. Dū-dh.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दूध continues Maharastri Prakrit duddha, from Sanskrit दुग्ध dugdha, "milked, milk" — literally the past participle of दुह् duh-, "to milk." That root traces to Indo-European d^h^ewg^h^-, "to be fit, to be of use, to produce" — milking as producing something useful. Germanic kept the same root for a different sense of "useful, capable": English doughty, "brave and able," is dūhtig in Old English, built on this exact root. Milk and doughtiness, four thousand years apart, share one ancestor.

Your turn

- Say it: dūdh, kṛpayā — milk, please
- Say it: what dugdha literally was — "milked"
- Run through: all three requests — pāṇī, chahā, dūdh — kṛpayā

Before you move on

Ask for milk politely. (Dūdh, kṛpayā.) What English word for "brave and capable" shares दूध's root? (Doughty.)
Sources: Wiktionary: दूध.

17.4 भाकरी (bhākarī) — the request that breaks the pattern

Three requests so far: pāṇī, chahā, dūdh. Two inherited from Sanskrit, one borrowed from Chinese. The fourth belongs to neither story.

You'll want to know: भाकरी

भाकरी — bhākarī — a round flatbread, the everyday Maharashtrian bread — of jowar, bajra, or rice flour, not wheat

भाकरी, कृपया. — bhākarī, kṛpayā. — Bhakri, please.

The letters in this word

Nothing new. भ from bheṭū, क from everywhere, र from marāṭhī, ी the familiar long ī. Bhā-ka-rī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

भाकरी is inherited from Old Marathi bhākarī, from Proto-Indo-Aryan b^hakkaras, "heap, pile, lump" — the flatbread named for the lump of dough it started as. That reconstruction is as far back as the sources trace it; its own root before Proto-Indo-Aryan is not established, so this lesson claims none rather than inventing one.
Unlike पाणी and दूध, भाकरी is not a Sanskrit tatsama or tadbhava — it never touched classical Sanskrit. And unlike चहा, it is no loanword either — a regional word, close kin to Gujarati bhākhrī and Kannada bakkari, and simply not Hindi's word for bread: Hindi asks for रोटी roṭī, an unrelated root. A Delhi shopkeeper would not recognize the request; a Pune one would hand you lunch.

Why it's said this way

Say the four requests once more and notice their genders: पाणी neuter, चहा masculine, दूध neuter, भाकरी feminine. Four everyday nouns, all three of Marathi's genders, in one short chapter — proof, alongside the verbs' present-tense endings, that the third gender Hindi lost is not a museum piece here.

Your turn

- Say it: all four requests, kṛpayā each time — pāṇī, chahā, dūdh, bhākarī
- Say it: "I eat bhakri" — mī bhākarī khāto or khāte, putting Chapter 7's खाणे to work on a word it never had before
- Name: which of the four is neither Sanskrit nor a loanword — bhākarī

Before you move on

What did भाकरी's Proto-Indo-Aryan ancestor mean? (A heap, a lump.) What does Hindi ask for instead? (रोटी, an unrelated root.) Give all four requests with their genders. (पाणी n, चहा m, दूध n, भाकरी f — all with कृपया.) Sort the four sources: two from Sanskrit, one a Chinese loan, one purely regional. (Pāṇī, dūdh — Sanskrit; chahā — Chinese; bhākarī — regional.)

Chapter 18

Friend and Family

Modes: voice (2) eyes (4) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a friend, a family, a brother, and a sister in Marathi, sort each word into a tatsama taken up whole from Sanskrit or a tadbhava worn down by sound change, and say which sibling word is genuinely English's cousin and which is not.
> The chapter closes on बहीण*, deliberately not a cousin of English sister: the reader produces* मित्र*,* कुटुंब*,* भाऊ and बहीण*, sorts the four into two tatsamas (मित्र,* कुटुंब*) and two tadbhavas (भाऊ,* बहीण*), and names* भाऊ as the secure cousin of brother against बहीण*'s unrelated root — while recalling* कुटुंब*'s gender split from Hindi and* मित्र*'s root in a covenant god's name.*

18.1 मित्र (mitra) — a friend, and a very old bond

You can ask for bhākarī now. This chapter turns from what you'd request to who you'd share it with.

You'll want to know: मित्र

मित्र — mitra — friend (masculine)

The letters in this word

Two things worth pausing on. ि, the short *i vowel sign, is new — written before the consonant it belongs to but said after it, so मि is read mi, not im.

And त्र is त joined to र by a halant, the same conjunct mechanism as punhā's न्हा, just a different pair of letters. Mi-tra.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मित्र is a learned borrowing straight from Sanskrit मित्र mitra — taken up whole, not worn down by centuries of sound change the way most everyday words are. Its root is Indo-European *mey-, "to bind," and the same word named a god: Avestan Mithra and Old Persian Mithra were divine witnesses to oaths — the bond itself, personified, before the word settled into ordinary Sanskrit as "friend."

Grammar Lens: taken up whole, not worn down

Sanskrit-descended Marathi words come in two kinds: a tatsama, borrowed directly with its Sanskrit shape mostly intact — मित्र is one — and a tadbhava, one that passed through centuries of Prakrit sound change and came out reshaped. भाकरी was neither: it never touched Sanskrit at all. This chapter will show both a tatsama and a tadbhava for family words, so you can hear the difference.

Your turn

- Say it: mitra — friend
- Say it: what its root meant before "friend" — "to bind"
- Name: the god-name that shares this root — Mithra
- Say it: mitra, then bhākarī — a learned word beside a native one whose own root went no further back than "a heap, a lump"
- Recall: Chapter 17's four requests and their three genders — pāṇī neuter, chahā masculine, dūdh neuter, bhākarī feminine

Before you move on

What did मित्र's root mean before "friend"? (To bind.) What god-name shares that root? (Mithra.) Is मित्र a tatsama or a tadbhava? (Tatsama — taken up whole from Sanskrit.)
Sources: Wiktionary: मित्र.

18.2 One step later — retrieve मित्र

Say the Marathi word for friend before you uncover it: मित्र (mitra).

What you've built

Its old root meant to bind. Marathi took the Sanskrit form up whole, so it is a tatsama, not a word worn down through ordinary sound change.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

मित्र — bind — tatsama. Stop here; the next lesson adds family.

18.3 कुटुंब (kuṭumb) — family, and a gender Hindi disagrees with मित्र (mitra) was taken up whole from Sanskrit, not worn down. This next word was too — and it names the group your friend belongs to as well.

You'll want to know: कुटुंब

कुटुंब — kuṭumb — family (neuter)

The letters in this word

One new mark: ु, the short *u vowel sign, a small hook under the consonant — the short partner of dūdh's long ू. ट you have informally from marāṭhī; ं the familiar anusvāra. Ku-ṭu-mb.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कुटुंब is a tatsama, a learned borrowing from Sanskrit कुटुम्ब kuṭumba, "household, family" — like मित्र, taken up whole rather than worn down by sound change. Unlike मित्र, its story does not reach a secure Indo-European root: a Dravidian origin for Sanskrit's own kuṭumba has been proposed, but it is not settled, so this lesson names the dispute rather than inventing a resolution.

Grammar Lens: a gender Hindi disagrees with

The very same Sanskrit word carries two different genders in its two daughters: Marathi's कुटुंब is neuter, Hindi's कुटुंब is masculine. Both borrowed the identical tatsama; each language then had to assign it a gender inside its own system, and they assigned it differently. A word's gender is not carried in with its meaning — it is decided fresh by whichever language receives it.

Your turn

- Say it: kuṭumb — family
- State: its gender in Marathi against Hindi — neuter here, masculine there
- Say it: mitra, then kuṭumb — two tatsamas in a row
- Recall: Chapter 17's own gender lineup — कुटुंब's neuter joins पाणी and दूध, after bhākarī's feminine closed out all three genders in one chapter

Before you move on

What gender is कुटुंब in Marathi, and how does that differ from Hindi? (Neuter here, masculine there — same borrowed word, different choice.) Is कुटुंब's pre-Sanskrit origin settled? (No — a Dravidian source is proposed but disputed.)
Sources: Wiktionary: कुटुंब.

18.4 One step later — retrieve कुटुंब

Say the Marathi word for family: कुटुंब (kutumb).

What you've built

Marathi treats कुटुंब as neuter. Hindi assigns the same borrowed word masculine gender. Retrieve the Marathi choice, not a universal rule.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

कुटुंब — family — neuter.

18.5 भाऊ (bhāū) — brother, and this time the resemblance is real

मित्र and कुटुंब were both taken up whole from Sanskrit. This next word was not — it was worn down, letter by letter, over centuries.

You'll want to know: भाऊ

भाऊ — bhāū — brother (masculine)

The letters in this word

One new letter: ऊ, the independent long *ū, used here because a Marathi word cannot stack one vowel mark on top of another — after आ's ा, the second vowel needs its own full letter. भ you have from bheṭū. Bhā-ū.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

भाऊ is a tadbhava — not borrowed whole like मित्र or कुटुंब, but the ordinary Prakrit-worn descendant of Sanskrit भ्रातृ bhrātṛ, three syllables ground down to two over a thousand years of speech. That root is Indo-European *b^{h}réh$_2$tēr, and here the family resemblance to English is not a false friend — it is the real thing: brother, Latin frāter, and Sanskrit's own bhrātṛ are all the same word, worn down four different ways by four different languages.

Your turn

- Say it: bhāū — brother
- Name: three languages that share this root — English, Latin, Sanskrit
- Say it: the three so far — mitra, kuṭumb, bhāū

Before you move on

Is भाऊ a tatsama or a tadbhava? (Tadbhava — worn down by sound change, not borrowed whole.) Which English word is the very same word as भाऊ? (Brother.)
Sources: Wiktionary: भाऊ.

18.6 बहीण (bahīṇ) — sister, deliberately not English's cousin

Three words so far: mitra, kuṭumb, bhāū. Say them, and say which one is a genuine cousin of an English word. (Bhāū — brother.) Its pair is not so simple.

You'll want to know: बहीण

बहीण — bahīṇ — sister (feminine)

The letters in this word

Nothing new. ब from baraṃ, ह from namaskār, ी the familiar long ī, ण from every -णे verb. Ba-hī-ṇ.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बहीण is a tadbhava, worn down like भाऊ: Old Marathi bahiṇī, from Maharastri Prakrit bhaiṇī, from Sanskrit भगिनी bhaginī. There the resemblance to brother's pair ends. Bhaginī is traditionally connected to भज् bhaj-, "to share, to apportion" — a sister as one who shares in the household. That root has nothing to do with Indo-European *swésōr, the ancestor of English sister. Two words that translate each other perfectly are, underneath, unrelated.

Grammar Lens: the chapter's whole shape, in two pairs

word	kind	route
मित्र, कुटुंब (mitra, kuṭumb)	tatsama	taken up whole from Sanskrit
भाऊ, बहीण (bhāū, bahīṇ)	tadbhava	worn down by Prakrit sound change

Notice, too, how each pair looks: मित्र and कुटुंब carry conjuncts and marks a learner has to stop for; भाऊ and बहीण do not — plain consonants and vowels, the shape sound change tends to leave behind. And of the tadbhava pair, only भाऊ is a secure English cousin; बहीण is not.

Your turn

- Say it: all four — mitra, kuṭumb, bhāū, bahīṇ
- Sort: which two are tatsama, which two are tadbhava
- Name: which sibling word is English's real cousin, and which is not — bhāū yes, bahīṇ no

Before you move on

Is बहीण related to English sister? (No — a different Sanskrit root entirely.) Which sibling word is related to its English counterpart? (भाऊ, to brother.) Sort the chapter's four words into tatsama and tadbhava. (Mitra, kuṭumb — tatsama; bhāū, bahīṇ — tadbhava.) What did कुटुंब's gender turn out to be, against Hindi's? (Neuter here, masculine there.) And what did मित्र's root mean before "friend"? (To bind.)

Chapter 19

Eye, Ear, Mouth, and Nose

Modes: 👁 eyes (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the eye, ear, mouth, and nose in Marathi, say the retroflex ळ formally for the first time, and tell which of the four carries the most secure English cognate and which replaced its own inherited word entirely.
> The chapter closes on नाक*, completing the face: the reader produces* डोळा, कान*,* तोंड and नाक with their genders, and sorts the four by kind of history — डोळा replaced the old Indo-Aryan eye-word with one that once meant "swing"; कान*'s root is honestly disputed;* तोंड keeps a formal doublet, मुख*, standing beside it;* नाक alone reaches English नोज़ / nose without qualification.

19.1 डोळा (ḍoḷā) — the letter you've heard since Chapter 11, formally मित्र, कुटुंब, भाऊ, बहीण (mitra, kuṭumb, bhāū, bahīṇ) — the people you'd introduce. This chapter turns to the body you'd ask after when you check how someone is.

You'll want to know: डोळा

डोळा — ḍoḷā — eye (masculine)

The letters in this word

ड you have from āvaḍṇe; ो the familiar o mark, from bolṇe. Then ळ — the retroflex "l" you first met, unlabeled, inside Chapter 11's काळजी. Formally: tongue curled back, same place as ट and ण. Standard Hindi dropped this sound centuries ago; Marathi kept it, sharing it with the Dravidian languages to the south and with Gujarati. Ḍo-ḷā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

डोळा continues Maharastri Prakrit ḍola, "eye," from Sanskrit दोल dola — "a swing, a swinging." Somewhere in Prakrit, "a swinging thing" came to mean "eye," and that word pushed out the one you might expect: the true inherited Indo-Aryan eye-word is Sanskrit अक्षि/अक्ष akṣi/akṣa, from Indo-European h₃ekʷ-, the very cousin of Latin oculus and English eye. Hindi's आँख ā̃kh continues that old word, worn down through Prakrit acchi. Marathi's eye is not that word at all — it is a replacement, built on something that once meant only swing.

Your turn

- Say it: ḍoḷā — eye
- Say it: what its Sanskrit root actually meant — "a swing"
- Name: the word Marathi's eye-word replaced — akṣi, Hindi's āṅkh
- Say it: what you do with your डोळे — pāhṇe, "to see," Chapter 14's verb, which CDIAL traces to pracāh*, "look for"
- Recall: Chapter 18's tatsama/tadbhava split — मित्र, कुटुंब taken up whole, भाऊ, बहीण worn down — and कुटुंब's own neuter gender against Hindi's masculine

Before you move on

What did डोळा's Sanskrit root originally mean? (A swing.) Is डोळा the same word as Hindi's आँख? (No — Marathi replaced the old eye-word entirely.) What Marathi letter appears in डोळा that Hindi lost? (ळ, the retroflex l.)
Sources: Wiktionary: डोळा; Wiktionary: दोल.

19.2 कान (kān) — an ear, and a cluster you've seen simplify before

डोळा (ḍoḷā) — its own root turned out to be a surprise, a swing, not the old eye-word. This next word has a different kind of surprise: not what it meant, but how its middle got simpler.

You'll want to know: कान

कान — kān — ear (masculine)

The letters in this word

Nothing new. क, ा, न are all familiar from Chapter 1 onward. Kā-n.

The letters in this word

कान continues Sanskrit कर्ण karṇa. Getting there took the same kind of step Chapter 13 traced in दोन: Prakrit could not keep Sanskrit's consonant cluster rṇ intact, so it simplified — not by copying a neighbor this time, but by doubling the surviving consonant, rṇ → ṇṇ, giving Prakrit कण्ण kaṇṇa. Old Marathi then simplified the geminate back down to one ṇ with a lengthened vowel: kāna. Different cluster, different path, same underlying habit — Prakrit does not tolerate what Sanskrit could pack into one syllable.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Past Sanskrit, कर्ण's own origin is genuinely disputed among scholars — proposals connect it to a word for "point, spike," to a root for "handle, grip," even to the verb "to hear," but none has won general acceptance. Rather than choose one and present it as settled, this lesson names the dispute and stops there, the same honest gap Chapter 18 named for कुटुंब, and the same restraint that kept बहीण from being handed a false cousin — बहीण looks like it should match English sister, and does not.

Your turn

- Say it: kān — ear

- Trace it: karṇa → kaṇṇa → kāna, the cluster ground down and then simplified again
- Say it: ḍoḷā, kān — eye, ear

Before you move on

What did Prakrit do to Sanskrit कर्ण's rṇ cluster? (Doubled it to ṇṇ, then Old Marathi simplified that back to one ṇ.) Is कर्ण's root beyond Sanskrit settled? (No — disputed.) Which Chapter 13 word also showed a consonant cluster changing shape? (दोन, whose final n came from copying तीन.)
Sources: Wiktionary: कान.

19.3 तोंड (tõḍ) — the mouth, and the formal word standing behind it

डोळा, कान — eye, ear. Recall how कान's middle got simpler — rṇ doubled to ṇṇ, then simplified again. One more word before the chapter's closing one.

You'll want to know: तोंड

तोंड — tõḍ — mouth (neuter)

The letters in this word

Nothing new. त, ो, ं, ड are all familiar. Tõ-ḍ, the anusvāra nasalizing the o.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तोंड continues Maharastri Prakrit तुंड tuṃḍa, from Sanskrit तुण्ड tuṇḍa, "mouth, snout, beak" — a tadbhava, worn down the way भाऊ was. Marathi keeps a second, formal word for the same thing: मुख mukh, borrowed whole from Sanskrit exactly the way मित्र and कुटुंब were — the same everyday-versus-formal split कुटुंब's chapter didn't need to show you for a body part until now. You'll hear तोंड in daily speech and मुख in writing, formal address, and words like mukhya, "chief, principal" — literally "at the mouth/face of things."

Your turn

- Say it: tõḍ — mouth
- Name: its formal doublet — mukh
- Say it: three so far — ḍoḷā, kān, tõḍ

Before you move on

What is तोंड's formal Sanskrit doublet? (मुख, mukh.) Is तोंड itself borrowed whole or worn down? (Worn down — a tadbhava, like भाऊ.)
Sources: Wiktionary: तोंड.

19.4 नाक (nāk) — the face, completed

डोळा, कान, तोंड (ḍoḷā, kān, tõḍ) — say them. One face part left, and it is the one with the plainest history of the four.

You'll want to know: नाक

नाक — nāk — nose (neuter)

The letters in this word

Nothing new. न, ा, क — all familiar since Chapter 1. Nā-k.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

नाक continues Prakrit णक्क ṇakka, "nose," built on Sanskrit नस् nas-, "nose," plus a suffix. You may have met the other Sanskrit route to "nose," नासिका nāsikā, elsewhere — Marathi's नाक took the shorter one, straight from the bare root. Either way the destination is the same Indo-European neh$_2$s-, which English inherited directly as nose. Of this chapter's four words, नाक is the one whose English cousin needs no qualification at all.

Why it's said this way

Run the face back one more time, and notice each word told a different kind of story: डोळा replaced its old Indo-Aryan word entirely, with something that once just meant swing; कान's root is honestly disputed, even though its rṇ → ṇṇ → ṇ path is not; तोंड keeps a formal Sanskrit doublet, मुख, standing beside it; and नाक is the plainest of the four — a straight, secure line to Sanskrit and to English both. Not every word in a family carries the same amount of history, and knowing which is which is worth more than assuming they all match.

Your turn

- Say it: all four, with gender — ḍoḷā m, kān m, tõḍ n, nāk n
- Name: which is a secure English cousin (nāk), which replaced its old word (ḍoḷā), which is disputed (kān), which has a formal doublet (tõḍ)
- Say it: what you do with your डोळे — pāhṇe, "to see"

Before you move on

Which English word is नाक's most secure cousin? (Nose.) Sort the four face words by their history — replaced, disputed, twinned, secure. (Ḍoḷā replaced its old word; kān's root is disputed; tõḍ has the formal doublet mukh; nāk is the secure one.) What Chapter 14 verb names what your eyes do? (Pāhṇe, "to see.")

Chapter 20

Heart

Modes: 👁 eyes (1) 🎧 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the heart in Marathi, name three English words that share its root, and say what makes it different from every other word this book has taken apart: it never drifted at all.
> The reader produces हृदय and its three secure English cousins — heart, cordial, cardiac — then sets it against वाचणे's drift from speaking to reading, समजणे's drift from waking to understanding, and डोळा's replacement of the old eye-word, naming हृदय as the one word among them that never drifted at all.

20.1 हृदय (hṛdaya) — the word that never drifted

The face is complete: ḍoḷā, kān, tõḍ, nāk — and nāk was the one whose English cousin, nose, needed no qualification at all. One organ is left, and its history could not be more different from डोळा's.

You'll want to know: हृदय

हृदय — hṛdaya — heart (neuter)

The letters in this word

One new mark, thirteen chapters in: ृ, the vocalic *r — a small hook below the consonant, standing for a syllabic r sound with no vowel written beside it. ह, द, य are all familiar. Hṛ-da-ya.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हृदय continues Sanskrit हृदय hṛdaya itself, unchanged in shape since this book's earliest chapters were still explaining what a halant does. Its root is Indo-European ḱērd-, "heart" — and this is about as secure as a cognate gets: English heart, Latin cor/cordis (behind cordial), and Greek kardia (behind cardiac) are all the same word, diverging by ordinary sound change and nothing stranger.

Why it's said this way

Set हृदय against the words this book has already taken apart. Chapter 15's वाचणे drifted from vac-, "to speak," into "to read" by way of a causative twist — reading as making the text speak. The same chapter's समजणे drifted from budh-, "to wake," into "to understand" — an idea arriving is a kind of waking up. Chapter 19's डोळा drifted furthest of all, from dola, "a swing," into "eye," pushing out the word it replaced. हृदय, by contrast, has drifted almost nowhere: no causative twist, no metaphor, no replacement — the same word, doing the same job, since before Sanskrit was written down.

Your turn

- Say it: hṛdaya — heart
- Name: three English words sharing its root — heart, cordial, cardiac
- Say it: all five body words this book has taught — ḍoḷā, kān, tõḍ, nāk, hṛdaya

Before you move on

Name three English words that share हृदय's root. (Heart, cordial, cardiac.) What makes हृदय different from वाचणे, समजणे, and डोळा? (Those three drifted — speaking to reading, waking to understanding, swinging to eye; हृदय did not drift at all.) What new Devanagari mark did this lesson add? (ृ, the vocalic r.)
Sources: Wiktionary: हृदय.

Chapter 21

Family Memory at Real Distance

Modes: voice (12) Hands-free start: all 12 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can retrieve मित्र and कुटुंब after short, medium, and durable gaps; explain the binding root and tatsama path of मित्र; and recall that कुटुंब is neuter in Marathi.
> After genuine intervening retrievals, produce the five-part comparison: मित्र*, its binding root and tatsama path, then* कुटुंब and its Marathi neuter gender.

21.1 After a gap — मित्र

Friend. Old root meaning to bind. Borrowed whole from Sanskrit. Say the three answers: मित्र — bind — tatsama.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

Say मित्र once more, then stop.

21.2 After a gap — कुटुंब

Family. Marathi gender. Answer: कुटुंब — neuter.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

Say कुटुंब once more.

21.3 Sibling retrieval

Say brother, sister: भाऊ, बहीण.

The two words and their histories

भाऊ is a secure cousin of English brother. Do not extend that claim to बहीण and English sister; those roots are unrelated.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

भाऊ, बहीण.

21.4 Eye and ear retrieval

Eye: डोळा. Ear: कान. In डोळा, keep ळ retroflex; do not replace it with ordinary ल.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

डोळा, कान.

21.5 Mouth and nose retrieval

Everyday mouth is तोंड; formal मुख stands beside it. Nose is नाक.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

तोंड, नाक.
One more body word: हृदय, heart. Which English words share its root? (Heart, and cardiac by way of Greek.)

21.6 Three request nouns

Say water, tea, milk in order: पाणी, चहा, दूध.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

Repeat once, then stop.

21.7 Three doing verbs

Take: घेणे. Ask: विचारणे. Help: मदत करणे.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

Repeat the trio once.

21.8 Three mind-and-page verbs

Think: विचार करणे. Understand: समजणे. Write: लिहिणे.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

Repeat once.

21.9 Three core verbs

Be: असणे. Go: जाणे. Come: येणे.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

Repeat once.

21.10 Durable retrieval — मित्र

Recover the word for friend, its old root meaning, and the name for a Sanskrit form borrowed whole.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

मित्र. One clean retrieval is enough.

21.11 Count, then notice

Count one through five. Then say चार with Marathi tsā-, and remember that a language can innovate in one place while retaining an older feature in another.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

Count once more without looking.

21.12 Durable family comparison

Friend: मित्र; old root to bind; tatsama. Family: कुटुंब; neuter in Marathi.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the missing piece.

Before you move on

मित्र, कुटुंब. End the session here.

Chapter 22

The Doorway Signs at Long Distance

Modes: voice (9) Hands-free start: all 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write dhanyavad and retrieve all twelve doorway signs after more than eighty later lessons.
> Retrieve the final sign batch from sound after every new doorway sign has crossed the long-distance window.

22.1 The doorway word, much later

Cover: every earlier model

Listen before picking up the pencil.

Before you move on

Hear dhanyavād. Say its meaning. Read it: धन्यवाद, then cover the model
Write it: धन्यवाद once
This reconnects meaning and script without adding anything new.

22.2 First batch at long distance

Cover: every model, and keep one blank line ready

Before you move on

Write it: dhanyavād, visarga, independent ā, and bha, from sound and spoken names only
Check: your answer once against धन्यवाद; ः आ भ

22.3 Second batch at long distance

Cover: every model, and keep one blank line ready

Before you move on

Write it: the e-mark, anusvāra, and dental ta, from spoken names only
Check: your answer once against े ं त

22.4 Voiced batch at long distance

Cover: every model, and keep one blank line ready

Before you move on

Write it: da, dha, and ba, from spoken names only
Check: your answer once against द ध ब

22.5 Final batch at long distance

Cover: every model, and keep one blank line ready

Before you move on

Write it: ya, curled-back ḷa, and va, from spoken names only
Check: your answer once against य ळ व

22.6 The six marks, a whole book later

You have not been asked for these since the counting chapter.
Say them anyway, and notice which one comes slowest.

Before you move on

Short i — before, above, or below? (Before.) Short u? (Below.) Long ū? (Below, deeper.) The vocalic r? (Below, opening the other way.) The candrabindu? (Above, in a crescent.) And short a standing alone? (Its own letter.)

22.7 Two rows, at book distance

If the pattern held, you will not be recalling seven separate things. Find out.

Before you move on

Velar row, plain to voiced-and-breathy. (ka, kha, ga, gha.) Palatal row, the same. (ca, cha, ja, jha.) Which sign does mājhe need? (jha.) Which one opens gheṇe? (gha.)

22.8 The curled row, a whole book later

These five are the reason the romanizations in this book carry dots under some letters and not others.

Before you move on

The four curled letters. (ṭa, ṭha, ḍa, ṇa.) What is the dot under ṭ telling you? (Curl the tongue back.) Which letter ends bolṇe and khāṇe? (ṇa.) And ba with the voice switched off? (pa.)

22.9 The last six, at book distance

The end of the second runway, asked for once more with everything else in between.

Before you move on

The plain l, beside the curled one. (la.) The two sibilants most speakers say alike. (śa* and ṣa.) The three vowels that stand alone as well as leaning. (u, ū, e.) Why is a letter still written for a sound that merged? (Spelling outlives the sound it recorded.)

Chapter 23

Six Small Form Labels

Modes: ✓ pen (10) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 10 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read, copy, and retrieve six Marathi form labels, while keeping the two favorite-label agreement endings distinct.
> After a delay and without a visible answer model, write the final three form labels and repair agreement before other spelling.

23.1 नाव — the first form label

You already know नाव as "name." On a form, the same word becomes a request: write the name after it. Today the answer is the familiar practice name मीरा.

Writing — observe and trace one pair

Trace only नाव: मीरा. Keep the colon between the printed label and the answer. Then cover the line and point to the part that asks the question.

Before you move on

Stop after one label and one known answer.

23.2 शहर — the city box

Before looking back, cover the title and recall the form label that asks for a person's name. Write only that label, then check the previous page. This is a quick memory check, not another form to fill.

The known sentence मी पुण्यात राहतो / राहते put the practice person in Pune. A short form asks for that place with शहर — "city."

Writing — observe and trace one pair

Trace only शहर: पुणे. Say "city, Pune" once. Do not add an address; this box asks for one small thing.

Before you move on

Two labels are enough for one sitting.

23.3 भाषा — the language box

Before looking back, cover the title. Write the label for the city box from memory. Check the previous page only after writing it.

You can already say मी मराठी बोलतो / बोलते. A form compresses that whole sentence to a label and a value: भाषा: मराठी — "language: Marathi."

Writing — observe and trace one pair

Trace भाषा: मराठी once. Keep भाषा on the question side and मराठी on the answer side.

Before you move on

Stop before the form grows longer.

23.4 आवडते पेय — favorite drink

Before looking back, cover the title. Write the label that asks which language a person uses. Check the previous page after writing it.

The known drink is चहा. The label आवडते पेय means "favorite drink." पेय is neuter, so the describing word takes neuter -ते: आवडते.

Writing — observe and trace one pair

Trace आवडते पेयः चहा once. Box only the ending -ते. The next lesson will change that ending for a feminine label; do not learn both today.

Before you move on

One agreement ending is enough.

23.5 आवडती कृती — favorite activity

Before looking back, cover the title. Write the complete favorite-drink label from memory. Check the previous page only after writing it.

Change one thing. कृती, "activity," is feminine, so "favorite" becomes feminine आवडती. The familiar activity value is वाचणे, "reading."

Writing — observe and trace one pair

Trace आवडती कृतीः वाचणे once. Underline only -ती. Compare without rewriting: आवडते पेय but आवडती कृती.

Before you move on

Stop after the one-ending contrast.

23.6 मित्राचे नाव — friend's name

You know मित्र, friend, and नाव, name. Marathi links them as मित्राचे नाव, "the friend's name." The -चे form agrees with neuter नाव. The familiar practice answer is अरुण.

Writing — observe and trace one pair

Trace मित्राचे नाव: अरुण once. Circle -चे and stop; no possessive table is needed for this form.

Before you move on

All six labels now have one first encounter.

23.7 Copy the first three rows

Say the three meanings once: name, city, language. Keep the model closed until you can say all three in that order.

Writing — guided copy

Copy exactly three short rows:

नाव: मीरा

शहर: पुणे भाषा: मराठी

After each row, point left of the colon and say what that label asks. Repair only a missing or misplaced character; do not add a fourth row.

Before you move on

Close the model before the next lesson.

23.8 Copy the last three rows

Say the three meanings once: favorite drink, favorite activity, friend's name. Listen for the one small job each label performs.

Writing — guided copy

Copy exactly three rows:

आवडते पेय: चहा

आवडती कृती: वाचणे मित्राचे नाव: अरुण

On the first two, underline only -ते / -ती. On the third, circle only -चे. One visible contrast, then stop.

Before you move on

Close the model before retrieval.

23.9 Hide, wait, write the first three labels

Close the copy lesson. Say name, city, language once, then start the ten-second delay.

Writing — delayed copy

Close the copy lesson and wait ten seconds. From the meaning cues name · city · language, write the three Marathi labels. There is no Devanagari model and no romanization in this attempt.

Only after all three are written, reopen the model. Check one row at a time and repair only the first differing character.

Before you move on

Stop after one delayed set.

23.10 Hide, wait, write the last three labels

Close the copy lesson. Say favorite drink, favorite activity, friend's name once, then start the ten-second delay.

Writing — delayed copy

Close the copy lesson and wait ten seconds. From favorite drink · favorite activity · friend's name, write the three Marathi labels without a model or romanization.

Then compare in two bounded passes: first -ते / -ती, then -चे. If the first pass differs, repair it and stop; leave the second pass for tomorrow.

Before you move on

The labels are ready; choosing answers belongs to the next runway.

Chapter 24

A Message for Mira

Modes: ✓ pen (20) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 20 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write a 30-40-word Devanagari message to Mira for a familiar purpose, first without a timer and then under a three-minute task timer.
> After an untimed independent message and a partial timer, write the 30-40-word named-reader message within three minutes without a visible model.

24.1 Write to one named reader

You already know नमस्कार. A message needs to show who receives that greeting. Today the reader is मीरा, the familiar practice name.

Writing — observe and trace one complete line

Trace नमस्कार मीरा. once. Leave one space between the greeting and the name. Touch the full stop; it closes this first line.

Before you move on

Stop after one reader, one greeting, and one boundary.

24.2 Add the sender's name

Before looking back, recall the form label for a friend's name. Write it from memory and circle the -चे ending that agrees with neuter नाव. Check the form page only after writing it. Now turn from a friend's name to the sender's own name in the message.

Write yesterday's reader greeting from memory. The next line is not new Marathi: माझं नाव अरुण आहे. already appeared in the introduction recap.

Writing — guided copy

Copy the name line once beneath the greeting. Check only two things: अरुण is the sender, and आहे remains at the end before the full stop.

Before you move on

Two lines are enough for today.

24.3 One line for meeting the reader

Read the known line भेटून आनंद झाला. Say where it ends. The full stop keeps the sender's name and the meeting response from running together.

Writing — guided copy

Copy भेटून आनंद झाला. beneath the identity line. Compare the boundary first; compare spelling only after the full stop is present.

Before you move on

The opening now has three short lines; do not combine them yet.

24.4 Begin the purpose: Marathi

Say the known sentence मला मराठी येते. Marathi puts the knower in the dative and lets मराठी govern येते. Nothing grammatical is being added.

Writing — delayed copy

Study मला मराठी येते. for five seconds. Cover it, wait five more seconds, then write it. Repair the ending -ते before any other spelling.

Before you move on

Only one purpose line today.

24.5 Add one reading line

The sender is Arun, so retrieve the already-practised masculine sentence: मी मराठी वाचतो. Today you are placing it in a message, not learning a verb.

Writing — delayed copy

Look once, hide the model, wait five seconds, and write the line. Check वाचतो first. Do not add the next skill on the same line.

Before you move on

One skill, one sentence, one full stop.

24.6 Add one writing line

Read the old sentence मी माझं नाव लिहितो. The middle names the object; the last word carries Arun's masculine ending.

Writing — delayed copy

Study the line, hide it, and wait eight seconds. Write it from memory. Compare in two passes: first माझं नाव, then लिहितो. Repair only one pass today.

Before you move on

The first three purpose lines now exist separately. Combining them comes later.

24.7 Add the shortest skill line

Arun has already said मी बोलतो in the verb lessons. In a message it needs only one new habit: a full stop that keeps it separate from the next skill.

Writing — delayed copy

Look at मी बोलतो., cover it, wait eight seconds, and write it. Compare the verb ending before the punctuation.

Before you move on

Do not join it with another verb yet.

24.8 Keep both pieces of thinking

Retrieve the known pair विचार करणे. In the sentence, विचार stays beside the light verb: मी विचार करतो.

Writing — delayed copy

Study the line, hide it, and wait eight seconds. Write it. Check for the two verb pieces first; check the full stop second.

Before you move on

One two-part verb is enough for today.

24.9 Return to the dative frame

Compare मला मराठी येते with मला मराठी समजते. The frame and ending stay; only the known verb changes.

Writing — delayed copy

Study मला मराठी समजते., cover it, and wait ten seconds. Write it. Repair the dative opening first and the verb ending second.

Before you move on

All six skill lines now exist separately.

24.10 One word can be a full line

Write धन्यवाद from memory. It is already durable; the only message habit today is closing the one-word sentence.

Writing — delayed copy

Look once at धन्यवाद., cover it, wait ten seconds, and write it. If the word is correct but the full stop is missing, repair only the boundary.

Before you move on

Stop after the single word and its boundary.

24.11 The first farewell line

The known phrase पुन्हा भेटू promises another meeting. Keep it on a new line after thanks.

Writing — delayed copy

Study पुन्हा भेटू., cover it, wait ten seconds, and write it. Compare the space between the two words before comparing the final mark.

Before you move on

Tomorrow's line comes in the next lesson.

24.12 The dated farewell line

Swap only the first known word: पुन्हा भेटू becomes उद्या भेटू. The message now says when the next meeting happens.

Writing — delayed copy

Study उद्या भेटू., cover it, wait ten seconds, and write it. Compare उद्या first; भेटू was retrieved yesterday.

Before you move on

All twelve lines have now been practised separately.

24.13 Order the opening block

Retrieve the three opening jobs: greet Mira, name Arun, acknowledge the meeting. Each job already has one practised line.

Writing — controlled composition

Put these known line cards in message order, then write them as three lines:

- भेटून आनंद झाला.
- नमस्कार मीरा.
- माझं नाव अरुण आहे.

Choose the order from the three jobs. Do not change any words.

Before you move on

Stop with one three-line block.

24.14 Order the first three skills

Say the three jobs in English: know Marathi, read Marathi, write my name. Keep the two grammar frames separate; मला and मी are not interchangeable.

Writing — controlled composition

Choose the matching known line for each job and write the jobs in that order. Do not add a conjunction. Check the two sentence openings before spelling.

Before you move on

The first skills block is complete; the next three stay separate until tomorrow.

24.15 Order the second three skills

Retrieve the three jobs: speak, think, understand Marathi. The middle job keeps two verb pieces; the last job returns to मला.

Writing — controlled composition

Write the matching known sentence for each job in that order. Check one dimension per pass: sentence opening, then verb, then full stop.

Before you move on

The two skills blocks remain separate for one more lesson.

24.16 Order the closing block

Retrieve the three closing jobs: thank Mira, promise another meeting, name tomorrow. All three lines are already known.

Writing — controlled composition

Write one known line for each job, in that order. Keep each farewell on its own line even though both end with भेटू.

Before you move on

The four message blocks are ready to meet.

24.17 Connect the four known blocks

Name the four blocks without writing: opening, first skills, second skills, closing. No block contains new Marathi.

Writing — connected composition

Use the four completed block lessons as cards. Put the cards in purpose order and write the message. Afterward, count words by spaces: the result has 32 words, inside the A1 target of 30–40.

Repair in four passes: block order, sentence boundaries, verb frames, spelling. Stop after the first pass that finds a problem.

Before you move on

Tomorrow the cards and answer model disappear.

24.18 Independent 30–40-word message

Close every earlier lesson. On blank paper write four tiny English planning labels only: opening · skills 1 · skills 2 · closing.

Writing — connected composition, no model

Write 30–40 words to Mira. Introduce Arun, state the six practised Marathi skills, thank her, and close for another meeting tomorrow.

There is no romanization, line bank, block card, or visible answer model during this checkpoint. The task is untimed. When finished, count words and run one repair pass of your choice.

Before you move on

This is untimed message evidence only. It does not claim form completion or the later integrated timed A1 writing task.

24.19 Give the message its first gentle timer

Close the earlier message. Mira is your reader; introduce Arun, thank her, and say you will meet tomorrow. This is familiar material, not new vocabulary.

Writing — generous partial timer

Set a 90-second partial timer. On blank paper write only the opening and closing lines, without a model or romanization. Stop when it rings; keep the first attempt visible. The full 30–40-word message comes next lesson.

Before you move on

Check task fulfilment (reader, introduction, thanks, tomorrow), organisation (opening before closing), Marathi control (familiar forms), and orthographic control (Devanagari letters and spacing). After scoring, make one 20-second repair to your weakest dimension on a separate line. Do not replace the timed attempt. This is not a full A1 mock.

24.20 A full message to Mira under a timer

> Mira is reading. Introduce Arun, tell her the six Marathi skills you have practised, thank her, and close with tomorrow's meeting.

Writing — full task timer

Set three minutes. Write 30–40 words in Devanagari from reader and purpose alone. No line bank, romanization, or visible model. Stop at the bell and preserve the first attempt before checking it.

Before you move on

Score task fulfilment (named reader, purpose, 30–40 words), organisation (opening, skills, closing), Marathi control (the practised forms), and orthographic control (Devanagari spelling and spacing) separately. Make one 20-second repair on another line; the stopped attempt remains the evidence. This is not a full A1 mock or a readiness claim.

Chapter 25

A Six-Field Profile

Modes: ✓ pen (12) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 12 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can independently choose and write six requested Marathi profile values without a model, then repeat the familiar task under a two-minute timer.
> After an untimed independent form and a partial timer, complete a six-field Marathi profile within two minutes from meanings alone.

25.1 Choose the first three answers

Read three known labels: नाव, शहर, भाषा. Today you choose what each row asks for; you do not yet write the whole form.

Your turn — one profile, three choices

Profile A says in the support language: name Arun; city Pune; language Marathi. Point to the matching detail when each Marathi label is shown. Keep the profile card open. There is no Marathi answer bank to copy.

Before you move on

Stop after three meaning choices.

25.2 Choose the last three answers

Say the three jobs once: favorite drink, favorite activity, friend's name. Keep -ते, -ती, and -चे attached to the printed labels.

Your turn — one profile, three choices

Profile A says: favorite drink tea; favorite activity reading; friend Mira. Choose the requested detail for each Marathi label. Do not write a full row yet.

Before you move on

Stop before entry begins.

25.3 Enter the first three values

Keep Profile A visible: Arun; Pune; Marathi. The card gives meanings, not copyable Devanagari answers.

Writing — supported controlled composition

Complete only these rows:

नाव: _____

शहर: _____

भाषा: _____

Choose the requested known value and write it in Devanagari. The labels stay visible because they are the form, not an answer model.

Before you move on

Stop after three rows.

25.4 Repair one value, not the whole form

Cover yesterday's entries. Say which row held the first spelling difference. Do not recopy a correct row.

Writing — bounded spelling repair

Write only the failed value from name · city · language. Compare in three passes: base letters, vowel signs, then the final headline. If it is correct, write the next requested value once instead.

Before you move on

One repair pass is enough.

25.5 Enter the last three values

Keep Profile A visible: tea; reading; Mira. Say the three printed label endings once: -ते, -ती, -चे.

Writing — supported controlled composition

Complete only the three blank value spaces. The support-language card chooses the meanings; you supply the known Marathi spellings. No Marathi answer bank is visible.

Before you move on

Stop after three rows.

25.6 Repair endings before values

Cover the values. Look only at the labels and say: neuter drink -ते, feminine activity -ती, neuter name -चे.

Writing — bounded agreement repair

Complete only these endings: आवड___ पेय · आवड___ कृती · मित्रा___ नाव. Do not rewrite tea, reading, or Mira. This pass repairs grammar separately from value spelling.

Before you move on

Stop before values return.

25.7 Delay the first three entries

Read Profile A once: Arun, Pune, Marathi. Close it and wait ten seconds.

Writing — delayed controlled composition

With only the three printed Marathi labels visible, fill all three values from the delayed profile. There is no romanization and no completed row to copy. Compare only after all three values are written.

Before you move on

Stop after one delayed attempt.

25.8 Delay the last three entries

> Read Profile A once: tea, reading, Mira. Close it and wait ten seconds.

Writing — delayed controlled composition

Fill the three values with only the blank form visible. Compare in two passes afterward: requested value first, then the printed -ते / -ती / -चे forms.

Before you move on

Stop after one delayed attempt.

25.9 Join the two halves

> Keep Profile A visible. The first three and last three rows have already passed separately; today the only new load is joining them.

Writing — supported six-field composition

Complete the six blank Marathi rows from the support-language profile. There is no Marathi value bank or completed example. Check rows 1–3, pause, then rows 4–6. Repair only the first failed half.

Before you move on

The independent profile changes next time.

25.10 Complete a new six-field form

> Profile B says: name Mira; city Pune; language Marathi; favorite drink milk; favorite activity writing; friend Arun. These meanings are the task. No Marathi values are displayed.

Writing — independent controlled composition

Complete the six printed Marathi labels from Profile B. There is no romanization, Marathi answer bank, or completed model. Do not reveal the answer while scoring. The task is untimed; timing belongs to the later checkpoint issue.

Before you move on

This proves untimed practical-form composition only. It does not claim timed writing or full A1 readiness.

25.11 Give the form its first gentle timer

> A new profile gives these meanings: name Arun; city Pune; language Marathi. Read the familiar printed labels: नाव, शहर, भाषा. No completed row or value bank is shown.

Writing — generous partial timer

Set a 60-second partial timer. Fill only these three fields in Marathi Devanagari. Stop at the bell; keep the first attempt. The six-field form follows next lesson.

Before you move on

Score task fulfilment (all three meanings), organisation (values beside the correct labels), Marathi control (the right Marathi forms), and orthographic control (Devanagari letters) separately. Make one 20-second repair on a separate line; do not replace the timed attempt. This is not a full A1 mock.

25.12 A full practical form under a timer

Profile C gives these meanings: name Arun; city Pune; language Marathi; favorite drink milk; favorite activity writing; friend Mira. Use the six printed Marathi labels from the earlier form. There is no value bank or completed model.

Writing — full task timer

Set two minutes. Write all six fields in Marathi Devanagari from the meanings alone. Stop at the bell and keep the first attempt before checking any values.

Before you move on

Score task fulfilment (all requested values), organisation (right row for each value), Marathi control (familiar noun and agreement forms), and orthographic control (Devanagari spelling) separately. Make one 20-second repair on another line; do not overwrite the stopped attempt. This is not a full A1 mock or a readiness claim.

Chapter 26

Give, Bring, Put

Modes: voice (1) eyes (4) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for four everyday actions in Marathi – give, drink, bring, put – and name the Indo-European root under each.
> Complete MR-R22-request-verbs and ask, unaided, for water to be given, tea to be brought, and milk to be put down, each with the polite kripaya frame.

26.1 देणे (deṇe) — to give

You can already ask for a thing by naming it: पाणी, कृपया. That request has no verb in it at all. Here is the verb it was doing without.

You'll want to know: देणे

देणे — deṇe — to give

Asked of someone, it comes out as द्या dyā — "give," said the way you would say it to a person you are being polite to.

पाणी द्या, कृपया. — pāṇī dyā, kṛpayā. — Give water, please.

The letters in this word

Nothing new. द da came with dhanyavād; े is the familiar e mark; ण has arrived with every -णे verb so far. दे-णे. In द्या the same द is bound to य by the halant you already write.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

देणे continues Sanskrit ददाति dadāti, on the root दा dā-, "to give." Behind that stands Indo-European deh₃-, and Latin took it up as dare. Three English words come out of that one Latin verb: donate, dative — the giving-case — and data, which began as data, "things given." Greek's own form of the root, dídōmi, is hiding in antidote: the thing given against.

Your turn

- Say it: deṇe — to give
- Say it: pāṇī dyā, kṛpayā. — give water, please
- Name: three English words standing on the same root — donate, dative, data

Before you move on

Ask someone to give you water, politely. (Pāṇī dyā, kṛpayā.)
What did Latin data mean before it meant numbers? (Things given.)
Sources: Wiktionary: देणे; Wiktionary: दा.

26.2 पिणे (piṇe) — to drink

देणे is what you ask another person to do. This one is what you do yourself, with पाणी, with चहा, with दूध.

You'll want to know: पिणे

पिणे — piṇe — to drink

मी पाणी पितो / पिते. — mī pāṇī pito / pite. — I drink water.

The ending still declares who is speaking: -to from a man, -te from a woman, the same gendered present you have carried since the first verbs.

The letters in this word

प pa you have from punhā and from pāṇī; ि is the short i mark that leans in front of its consonant even though the sound follows it; ण closes it as always. पि-णे.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

When you learned पाणी, you learned that it was built on पा pā-, "to drink," and that Indo-European peh₃(i)- underneath it surfaces in English potion, poison and symposium. पिणे is that same root standing on its own: Sanskrit पिबति pibati, "he drinks." So the word for water and the word for drinking are one word twice — the thing and the doing.

Your turn

- Say it: piṇe — to drink
- Say it: mī pāṇī pito or mī pāṇī pite, whichever declares you
- Run through: the same sentence with chahā, then with dūdh
- Say it: which earlier word carries this very root — pāṇī

Before you move on

Say "I drink tea" for your own gender. (Mī chahā pito / pite.)
Which word you already knew is built on the same root as पिणे? (पाणी.)
Sources: Wiktionary: पिणे; Wiktionary: पिबति.

26.3 आणणे (āṇṇe) — to bring

जाणे and येणे were one root with a small piece added to the front of the second. That small piece turns up again here.

You'll want to know: आणणे

आणणे — āṇṇe — to bring

चहा आणा, कृपया. — chahā āṇā, kṛpayā. — Bring tea, please.

देणे hands a thing over. आणणे carries it here first.

The letters in this word

आ is the standing long ā you write at the head of आहे; then ण twice, the retroflex you have been writing since the first infinitive; then े. आ-ण-णे.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आणणे continues Sanskrit आनयति ānayati, and that word comes apart into two pieces you have both met. नी nī- means "to lead." आ ā- means "toward here" — the very prefix that made येणे, "to come," out of the bare root for going. So bringing, in Marathi as in Sanskrit, is leading a thing toward here: the same shape of thought, built twice with the same brick.

Your turn

- Say it: āṇṇe — to bring
- Say it: chahā āṇā, kṛpayā. — bring tea, please
- Contrast: dyā and āṇā — giving against bringing here
- Say it: which prefix āṇṇe shares with yeṇe — ā-, "toward here"

Before you move on

Ask for tea to be brought. (Chahā āṇā, kṛpayā.) What did the root नी mean on its own? (To lead.)
Sources: Wiktionary: आणणे; Wiktionary: नी.

26.4 ठेवणे (ṭhevṇe) — to put, to keep

द्या hands a thing over. आणा carries it here. The fourth request in this run asks for it to be set down and left there.

You'll want to know: ठेवणे

ठेवणे — ṭhevṇe — to put, to keep

दूध ठेवा. — dūdh ṭhevā. — Put the milk down.

The same verb covers keeping: what you put down and do not take back, you have kept.

The letters in this word

ठ is the breathy retroflex ṭha — tongue curled back, then a puff. े and व and णे are all familiar. ठे-व-णे.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL files ठेवणे under Sanskrit sthēya, "to be stationed" (CDIAL 13777). Marathi has ṭheṇe, "to stand still," and CDIAL reads ठेवणे as a causative formed on it: "to make it stay." Prakrit had no taste for the sth- cluster and wore it down to a single consonant, in Marathi the retroflex ठ, which is why the word looks nothing like its Sanskrit parent — a worn-down word, the tadbhava kind, beside the taken-up-whole kind you met with मित्र.
Underneath sits the root sthā-, "to stand," from Indo-European steh$_2$-. English holds four pieces of it: stand, stay, state and statue. Putting a thing down, in this family of languages, has meant making it stand for a very long time.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭhevṇe — to put, to keep
- Say it: dūdh ṭhevā. — put the milk down
- Run through: dyā, āṇā, ṭhevā in order — give, bring, put
- Name: four English words standing on ṭhevṇe's deepest root — stand, stay, state, statue

Before you move on

Ask for the milk to be put down. (Dūdh ṭhevā.) What did the Sanskrit root under ठेवणे mean? (To stand.)
Sources: Wiktionary: ठेवणे; Wiktionary: sthā.

26.5 Four asked-for actions

Say the four infinitives in order: देणे, पिणे, आणणे, ठेवणे.

Your turn

Answer once, then repair only the piece that went missing.

Before you move on

Which of the four shares its root with पाणी? (पिणे.) Which one is built on a root meaning "to stand"? (ठेवणे.) Then stop.

Chapter 27

Sit, and How You Feel

Modes: voice (1) eyes (4) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can run a short visit in Marathi – seat my guest, say how I feel on the dative frame, say that I am sleepy, and accept an offer with chalel.
> Complete MR-R23-wellbeing-verbs and produce the whole small scene from memory: basa, mala baram vatam, chalel – then name which of the four verbs Marathi built for itself rather than inheriting.

27.1 बसणे (basṇe) — to sit

The last run of words was about things. This one is about how a person is doing — and it opens with what a Marathi household says to a visitor before anything else.

You'll want to know: बसणे

बसणे — basṇe — to sit

बसा. — basā. — Please sit.

One word, and it is hospitality: said at the door, it means you are welcome, stay a while.

मी बसतो / बसते. — mī basto / baste. — I sit.

The letters in this word

ब the quiet ba, स the sa of namaskār, and णे as ever. ब-स-णे. Nothing here is new to your hand.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बसणे comes through Prakrit vaisai from Sanskrit उपविशति upaviśati, "sits down" — उप upa-, "down, near," on विश् viś-, "to enter, to settle in."
That settling root is Indo-European weyk-, which named the dwelling and then the group of people in it. Latin took it as vīcus, a village or a quarter of a town, and English carries it, worn thin, at the end of place names: Norwich, Warwick, Ipswich. To sit down and to settle a village turn out to be the same idea at two sizes.

Your turn

- Say it: basṇe — to sit
- Say it: basā. — please sit, the way a host says it
- Say it: mī basto or mī baste, whichever declares you
- Name: what Latin vīcus meant — a village

Before you move on

Invite someone to sit. (Basā.) What did the root under बसणे mean before it meant sitting? (To settle, to enter a dwelling.)
Sources: Wiktionary: बसणे; Wiktionary: विश्.

27.2 वाटणे (vāṭṇe) — to feel, to seem

Two verbs you own put you in the dative rather than the nominative: मला मराठी आवडते and मला माहीत आहे. A third one joins them now, and it is the one you answer how are you with.

You'll want to know: वाटणे

वाटणे — vāṭṇe — to feel, to seem

मला बरं वाटतं. — malā baraṁ vāṭṭaṁ. — I feel fine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of वाटणे (vāṭṇe) is not settled. CDIAL has a Marathi vāṭṇẽ only in the sense "to grind finely", under vartayati, "turns" (CDIAL 11356), and no entry for the verb "to seem".

Grammar Lens: the third verb that puts you in the dative

Word for word, मला बरं वाटतं is to-me fine seems. You are not the one doing the feeling; the feeling arrives at you, and मला malā is where it lands. Three sentences now stand on that one frame:

- मला माहीत आहे — to me it is known
- मला मराठी आवडते — to me Marathi is pleasing
- मला बरं वाटतं — to me fine seems

Marathi keeps saying that what happens inside a person happens to them. Once that click lands, a whole family of verbs opens at once.

The letters in this word

व, ा, ट — the retroflex ṭa, tongue curled back — then णे. वा-ट-णे. In वाटतं the final तं carries the neuter ending that बरं also wears.

Your turn

- Say it: vāṭṇe — to feel, to seem
- Say it: malā baraṁ vāṭṭaṁ. — I feel fine
- Run through: the three dative sentences in order — malā māhīt āhe, malā marāṭhī āvaḍte, malā baraṁ vāṭṭaṁ
- Say it: what malā does in all three — it is where the feeling arrives
- Recall: बरं on its own, the agreeing word you have had since the first courtesy run, and hear it doing new work inside this sentence

Before you move on

Say that you feel fine. (Malā baraṁ vāṭṭaṁ.) Translated word for word, what does that sentence say? (To me fine seems.) Sources: Wiktionary: वाटणे.

27.3 झोपणे (jhopṇe) — to sleep

डोळा turned out not to be the old inherited eye-word at all — Marathi had swapped it for something else entirely. That happened more than once, and here is the second case.

You'll want to know: झोपणे

झोपणे — jhopṇe — to sleep

The noun sits inside it: झोप jhop, "sleep."

मला झोप येते. — malā jhop yete. — I am sleepy.

Word for word: to me sleep comes. The dative frame you met a moment ago is already back at work, and the form carrying it is येते — the very leave-taking word you learned in your first courtesy run, doing a different job here.

The letters in this word

झ is the breathy jha you have from mājhaṁ; ो the familiar o mark; प and णे are old friends. झो-प-णे.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The inherited Indo-Aryan verb for sleeping is Sanskrit स्वपिति svapiti, and Hindi still uses its descendant: सोना sonā. Behind it stands Indo-European *swep-, which Latin took as sopor, "deep sleep" — so English soporific is a cousin of Hindi's word for going to bed. Marathi's झोपणे is not that word. It rests on native झोप, whose pre-Marathi ancestry is not securely established, and this lesson does not invent one for it. What can be said is the pattern: with the eye, and again with sleep, Marathi let the inherited word go and built on something of its own.

Your turn

- Say it: jhopṇe — to sleep
- Say it: malā jhop yete. — I am sleepy, "to me sleep comes"
- Run through: basā, then malā baraṁ vāṭtaṁ, then malā jhop yete
- Name: the English word that is cousin to Hindi's sleep-word — soporific

Before you move on

Say that you are sleepy. (Malā jhop yete.) Is झोपणे the same word as Hindi's सोना? (No — Marathi built its own, as it did with the eye.)
Sources: Wiktionary: झोप; Wiktionary: svapiti.

27.4 चालणे (chālṇe) — to walk, and the yes that comes out of it

विचार rested on a root meaning to turn, to move about. Its close relative walks in here on its own two feet.

You'll want to know: चालणे

चालणे — chālṇe — to walk, to go along

मी चालतो / चालते. — mī chālto / chālte. — I walk.

The letters in this word

च before ा lands closer to English ts than to ch in most Marathi mouths, so चा is nearer tsā — the same thing that happens in chār. Then ल and णे. चा-ल-णे.

Grammar Lens: the yes that means it will walk

चालेल. — chālel. — That will do. / Fine by me.

Formally this is the verb in the future: it will walk. In use it is one of the commonest small yeses in the language — offered a time, a plan, a cup of tea, you answer चालेल and the matter is settled. Beside बरं, which agrees, चालेल accepts.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चालणे continues Sanskrit चलति calati, "moves, stirs," on the root चल् cal-, which is widely taken to be a variant of चर् car-, "to move about" — the root you already met sitting inside विचार. Sanskrit चंचल cañcala, "restless," is built on the same piece. So thinking and walking, in this language, are two speeds of one old verb for moving.

Your turn

- Say it: chālṇe — to walk
- Say it: mī chālto or mī chālte, whichever declares you
- Say it: chālel. — that will do
- Run through: someone asks how you are; answer malā baraṁ vāṭtaṁ, then accept their offer with chālel

Before you move on

Accept an offer in one word. (Chālel.) What is चालेल literally? (It will walk.) Which word you already knew stands on the same moving root? (विचार.)
Sources: Wiktionary: चालणे; Wiktionary: चलति.

27.5 One visit, four verbs

Say the four infinitives in order: बसणे, वाटणे, झोपणे, चालणे.

Your turn

Run it once as a small scene, then repair only what went missing.

Before you move on

Which of the four is a word Marathi built for itself instead of keeping the inherited one? (झोपणे.) Which one goes back to a root for settling a dwelling? (बसणे.) When you answer that you are well, which word carries the "well"? (बरं.) And which body word have you met for the place feeling is said to sit? (हृदय.) Then stop.

Chapter 28

What Passes Between Two People

Modes: voice (1) eyes (4) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask someone to tell me their name, quote what I said, say that I am learning Marathi, and ask whether a thing is to be had – carrying one of the four by ear because its letter is still owed to me.
> Complete MR-R24-passing-verbs and run the exchange unaided: ask for a name with the by-ear verb, say you are learning Marathi, and ask whether water is to be had.

28.1 sāṅgṇe — to tell, by ear first

You have asked someone's name with a whole question. There is a shorter way, and it turns on a verb you have not met.

You'll want to know: sāṅgṇe

sāṅgṇe — to tell

Asked of a person you are being polite to, it comes out sāṅgā:

tumchaṁ nāv sāṅgā. — Tell me your name.

Two syllables, and it does the work your longer question was doing.

The letters in this word

This word is here by ear only, on purpose. Its middle consonant is ga — a letter this book has shown you inside other words but has never taught your hand to make, and asking you to read a shape nobody taught you would be the one thing a gentle ramp must not do.

So carry sāṅgṇe the way a child carries a word off a shop sign: sayable, understandable, useful today, and readable later. The letter is owed to you, and it is written down as owed.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Sāṅgṇe is often traced to Sanskrit śaṃsati, "recites, proclaims", and through it to the root behind Latin cēnseō and English census. CDIAL does not file it there. It lists Marathi sāṅgṇe, "to declare, to bid", under Sanskrit saṃkhyāti, "reckons" (CDIAL 12842), beside Prakrit verbs for saying such as saṃghai. Bloch once linked those Prakrit verbs with a root seen in Greek omphē, "voice"; CDIAL records that view without taking it.
So on CDIAL's account the verb for telling began as a verb for counting up. English took the same turn with an unrelated word: to tell once meant to count, which is why a bank still has tellers.

Your turn

- Say it: sāṅgṇe — to tell
- Say it: tumchaṁ nāv sāṅgā. — tell me your name
- Run through: basā, then tumchaṁ nāv sāṅgā — seat your visitor, then ask
- Name: the old sense CDIAL gives — counting — and the English verb that drifted the same way, tell

Before you move on

Ask someone to tell you their name. (Tumchaṁ nāv sāṅgā.) What did the Sanskrit verb CDIAL gives mean? (To reckon, to count up.) Why is this word not printed here in its own script? (Its ga has not been taught yet.)
Sources: Wiktionary: sāṅgṇe; CDIAL 12842.

28.2 म्हणणे (mhaṇṇe) — to say these words

> The last word arrived by ear alone, with one letter still owed to your hand. This one owes you nothing: every piece of it is already yours to write.

You'll want to know: म्हणणे

> म्हणणे — mhaṇṇe — to say
> मी "नमस्कार" म्हणतो / म्हणते. — mī "namaskār" mhaṇto / mhaṇte. — I say "namaskār."

Two verbs, two jobs. Sāṅgṇe tells a person something. म्हणणे utters the words themselves — what came out of the mouth, quoted.

The letters in this word

म bound to ह by the halant you have written since नमस्कार, then ण twice, then े. म्ह-ण-णे. Say it with the breath and the m together, not one after the other.

The same verb gives म्हणून mhaṇūn, "therefore" — literally having said that, which is how a good many Marathi sentences turn a corner.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

म्हणणे comes through Prakrit bhaṇai from Sanskrit भणति bhaṇati, "speaks." The opening भ bh- did something Marathi is fond of: it shifted to the म्ह mh- cluster, breath and nasal at once. Hindi kept a plainer descendant in bhannā. Set beside sāṅgṇe, which CDIAL traces to a verb for counting, Marathi ended up with one verb for telling a person and one for plain uttering.

Your turn

- Say it: mhaṇṇe — to say
- Say it: mī "namaskār" mhaṇto or mhaṇte, whichever declares you
- Contrast: sāṅgā and म्हणतो — telling a person, uttering the words
- Write it: म्हणणे, and notice that every piece was already yours

- Read aloud: नमस्कार, whose halant and whose र you are reusing here

Before you move on

Which Sanskrit consonant became Marathi's म्ह? (भ bh-.) What does म्हणून mean? (Therefore — "having said that".)
Sources: Wiktionary: म्हणणे; Wiktionary: भणति.

28.3 शिकणे (shikṇe) — to learn

You can tell someone your name and you can quote what you said. The sentence a beginner most wants next is the one about what they are doing right now.

You'll want to know: शिकणे

शिकणे — shikṇe — to learn

मी मराठी शिकतो / शिकते. — mī marāṭhī shikto / shikte. — I am learning Marathi.

Said to a stranger in Maharashtra, that sentence usually ends the awkward part of the conversation and starts the good part.

The letters in this word

श the sha you write in कशी, then ि, then क, then णे. शि-क-णे. Keep श and the retroflex ष apart in your ear: this word takes the softer one.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

शिकणे continues Sanskrit शिक्षते śikṣate, and that form is not a plain verb: it is the desiderative of शक् śak-, "to be able." A desiderative is the shape Sanskrit puts a root into to mean wanting to do it. So to learn was built, quite literally, as to want to be able.
Two familiar words fall out of the same root: शक्ति śakti, "power, what one is able to do," and शिक्षा śikṣā, "instruction." Every one of them is the same idea turned a different way.

Your turn

- Say it: shikṇe — to learn
- Say it: mī marāṭhī shikto or shikte, whichever declares you
- Say it: what the Sanskrit root under it meant — to be able
- Run through: mī "namaskār" mhaṇto, then mī marāṭhī shikto

Before you move on

Say that you are learning Marathi. (Mī marāṭhī shikto / shikte.) What does शक्ति mean, and how is it related? (Power — the same root, without the wanting.)
Sources: Wiktionary: शिकणे; Wiktionary: शक्.

28.4 मिळणे (miḷṇe) — to be got, to be found

मला बरं वाटतं put the feeling at you rather than in you. One more everyday verb works the same way, and it is the one you need in a shop.

You'll want to know: मिळणे

मिळणे — miḷṇe — to be got, to be found, to be available

पाणी मिळेल का? — pāṇī miḷel kā? — Is water to be had?

मला मिळतं. — malā miḷtaṁ. — I get it.

Word for word the second one is to me it is got. English makes the person the getter; Marathi makes the thing the one that arrives. That is now the fourth sentence standing on the same dative frame.

The letters in this word

म, ि, then ळ — the retroflex ḷ that Hindi lost and Marathi kept, the letter inside डोळा and काळजी — then णे. मि-ळ-णे. Curl the tongue back for ळ and let it flap.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मिळणे continues Sanskrit मिलति milati, "meets, joins, comes together." The Sanskrit l hardened on the way into Marathi and came out as ळ. The sense travelled too: what joins you is what you get, so a verb about meeting became the ordinary verb for a thing being available. Hindi's मिलना milnā kept both senses side by side and kept the plain l.

Your turn

- Say it: miḷṇe — to be got
- Say it: pāṇī miḷel kā? — is water to be had?
- Run through: the four dative sentences — malā māhīt āhe, malā marāṭhī āvaḍte, malā baraṁ vāṭṭaṁ, malā miḷtaṁ
- Name: the other two words you know carrying ळ

Before you move on

Ask whether water is to be had. (Pāṇī miḷel kā?) What did the Sanskrit verb behind मिळणे mean? (To meet, to join.)
Sources: Wiktionary: मिळणे; Wiktionary: मिलति.

28.5 Four things that pass between two people

Say the four in order: sāṅgṇe, then म्हणणे, शिकणे, मिळणे. Three of them you can also write; one is still owed a letter.

Your turn

Run the three aloud, then repair only what went missing.

Before you move on

Which of the four was built out of wanting to be able? (शिकणे.)
Which one puts you in the dative? (मिळणे.) Then stop.

Chapter 29

The Twelve, Further Apart

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can produce all twelve of the new verbs at a wider spacing, and say what the mala frame does in each of the four sentences built on it.
> Complete MR-R25-dative-frame and produce feeling, sleepiness, and getting on one dative frame, then say word for word what mala is doing in each.

29.1 The twelve, further apart

The four you ask for: देणे, पिणे, आणणे, ठेवणे. Say them without looking anywhere.

Your turn

Then the four that pass between two people: sāṅgṇe, म्हणणे, शिकणे, मिळणे.

Before you move on

Twelve verbs, three runs of four. Say the one you would use to accept an offer. (Chālel.) Say the one you would use to ask for water. (Dyā.) Then stop.

29.2 One frame, four sentences

मला is where things arrive. Say the two oldest ones: मला माहीत आहे, मला मराठी आवडते.

Your turn

Say each one, then say the word-for-word English under it.

Before you move on

What does मला do in every one of these? (It is where the knowing, the liking, the feeling and the getting arrive.) And name the body word this book gave you for where feeling is said to sit. (हृदय.) Then stop.

29.3 Recognition at distance: two signs and one sound

The first two shapes this book ever asked you to make were ह and the ो mark, and together they wrote हो. Make them both from memory.

Your turn

Say चालणे and चार one after the other and hear the same leaning in both.

Before you move on

Write it: हो once, without a model
Say चार with its leaning consonant, then stop.

29.4 Recognition at distance: five things from further back

Count to five out loud — ek, don, tīn, chār, pāch — and then put आहे at the end of a sentence about yourself, where Marathi keeps it.

Your turn

Both were taken up from Sanskrit whole rather than worn down, and कुटुंब takes a gender Hindi does not give it.

Before you move on

Say that Marathi is understandable to you (मला मराठी समजते) and then that you are learning it (मी मराठी शिकतो / शिकते). What did मित्र's root mean before it meant friend? (To bind.) Then stop.

Chapter 30

Two Sentences, One Breath

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can join two Marathi sentences with aani, offer a choice with kinvaa, and take something back with pan.
> Complete MR-R30-three-joins and fill the same slot three ways with chaha and paani: added, offered, contradicted.

30.1 आणि (āṇi) — and

Say two sentences you already own: मला चहा आवडतो, and मला दूध आवडतं. Two sentences, two breaths. This chapter makes them one.

You'll want to know: आणि

आणि — āṇi — and

मला चहा आवडतो आणि दूध आवडतं. — malā chahā āvaḍto āṇi dūdh āvaḍtaṁ. — I like tea and I like milk.

आणि sits BETWEEN the two pieces and changes nothing on either side. Each half keeps its own agreement: चहा is masculine and keeps आवडतो, दूध is neuter and keeps आवडतं. The joining word does not reach inside.

It joins two nouns just as happily: भाऊ आणि बहीण, brother and sister.

The word is old and slightly surprising. It comes from Sanskrit अन्य (anya), "other." A word for the other one wore down into a word for one more. English does the same trick from the other side: another is an other.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bhāū āṇi bahīṇ — brother and sister
- malā chahā āvaḍto āṇi dūdh āvaḍtaṁ
- which half of that sentence changed when you joined it — neither

Before you move on

Where does आणि sit, and what does it change? (Between the two pieces; nothing.) What did it originally mean? (Other.)
Sources: Wiktionary: आणि.

30.2 किंवा (kiṁvā) — or

One lesson ago you got आणि, which adds. Say चहा आणि पाणी. Now you need the word that does the opposite: it puts two things side by side and asks you to take only one.

You'll want to know: किंवा

किंवा — kiṁvā — or

चहा किंवा पाणी? — chahā kiṁvā pāṇī? — Tea or water?

It sits exactly where आणि sat. The two words are a matched pair: same slot, opposite job. आणि hands you both, किंवा makes you choose.

Taken apart, किंवा is two Sanskrit words carried over whole: किम् (kim), "what" — the same stem that gave Marathi काय — plus वा (vā), an ancient particle meaning "or." That वा is genuinely old: Latin kept it as the -ve in sīve, "or if." Marathi's word for choosing is, underneath, "what-or."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

किंवा is Sanskrit kiṁ vā, "or whether", kept whole; CDIAL lists it under kim, "what" (CDIAL 3164).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chahā kiṁvā pāṇī?
- dūdh kiṁvā pāṇī?
- the same pair with āṇi, and hear the offer become a list

Before you move on

Which of the two joining words makes the listener choose? (किंवा.)
What two Sanskrit words is it made of? (किम् + वा, "what or".)
Sources: Wiktionary: किंवा.

30.3 पण (paṇ) — but

Two joining words are yours: आणि adds, किंवा offers. Say चहा आणि दूध, then चहा किंवा दूध. Both are friendly. Neither can disagree with anything.

You'll want to know: पण

पण — paṇ — but

चहा आहे पण दूध नाही. — chahā āhe paṇ dūdh nāhī. — There is tea but there is no milk.

पण stands in the same slot as the other two and does the one thing they cannot: it lets the second half push back against the first. Until you have it, every sentence you can build only agrees with itself.

पण and पुन्हा — the again in पुन्हा भेटू — are the same Sanskrit word, पुनर् (punar), "again, back." One descendant kept the time meaning; the other kept only the back, and turned it into contradiction. English does this too: but began as be-utan, "outside."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पण (paṇ) is inherited from Sanskrit punar, "back; however" (CDIAL 8273).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chahā āhe paṇ dūdh nāhī
- the three joining words in a row — āṇi, kiṁvā, paṇ
- which Marathi word for again is पण's twin — punhā

Before you move on

Which joining word lets the second half disagree with the first? (पण.) Which everyday farewell word is its twin? (पुन्हा.)
Sources: Wiktionary: पण.

30.4 The same gap, three ways

Three words landed in this chapter and all three go in the same place. Name them in the order you met them.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- malā chahā āvaḍto āṇi dūdh āvaḍtaṁ
- chahā kiṁvā pāṇī?
- chahā āhe paṇ dūdh nāhī

Before you move on

Which one hands over both? (आणि.) Which one makes you pick? (किंवा.) Which one takes something back? (पण.) Then stop.

Chapter 31

Words That Need Two Places

Modes: voice (4) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can refuse two things at once with naa ... naa, check a statement with a final naa, and share a pair out with ek ... dusraa.
> Complete MR-R31-pairs and run chaha and dudh three ways: refuse both, share them out, and check a statement about tea.

31.1 ना ... ना ... (nā ... nā ...) — neither, nor

Retrieve the last two joining words by name: the one that offers a choice (किंवा) and the one that takes something back (पण). Say a sentence with each before you go on.

Grammar Lens: the word that comes in a pair

> ना चहा ना दूध. — nā chahā nā dūdh. — Neither tea nor milk.

Every joining word so far went in ONE place, between the halves. This one goes in two, in FRONT of each half, and it must be said both times. Say it once and the sentence is unfinished.
ना is the short form of नाही, the no you have had since the courtesy chapter, and it carries the same ancient na-. Doubling it is what makes it a joiner rather than a plain refusal: the first ना sweeps the first thing away, the second sweeps the second, and the pair means both of them, gone.

English does exactly this with neither … nor, which is why the English needs two words too. A one-word translation would be a lie about the shape.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chahā āṇi dūdh — both offered
- nā chahā nā dūdh — both refused
- where ना sits, against where आणि sits — in front of each half, not between them

Before you move on

How many times must ना be said? (Twice.) Where does it go, compared with आणि? (In front of each half, not between them.)

31.2 … ना? (… nā?) — "isn't it?"

You have just used ना twice in a row to refuse two things. The same syllable does something completely different when it comes once, and at the end.

Grammar Lens: hanging a check on the end

चहा आहे ना? — chahā āhe nā? — There's tea, isn't there?

Take any statement you can already make. Put ना on the end. It is now a check: you are telling the listener what you believe and inviting them to confirm it. The answer comes back as हो or नाही.
This is worth more than its size. A Marathi conversation is full of these, and they are how a beginner keeps a turn going without having to build a question from scratch. One syllable turns every sentence in this book into something a listener has to answer.
Notice how far the negative ना has travelled: doubled in front, it wipes two things out; single at the end, it politely asks for a yes. The tag is the old negative used as an invitation — the same move English makes in …, isn't it?, where a negative asks for agreement.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chahā āhe nā? then answer yourself — ho
- malā marāṭhī yete nā? — I know Marathi, don't I?
- nā chahā nā dūdh — and hear the same syllable doing the opposite job

Before you move on

What does one ना at the END of a sentence do? (Asks the listener to confirm it.) And two ना in FRONT? (Refuses both things.)

31.3 दुसरा (dusrā) — the other one

Count to five out loud. You have owned एक since the numbers chapter. It has been waiting for a partner.

You'll want to know: दुसरा

दुसरा — dusrā — the other, the second

दुसरा is दोन ("two") wearing an ordinal ending: literally two-th. Marathi builds it the way English builds second out of nothing you can see, and Marathi's is the more honest of the two — you can still read the two inside it.

Like every -आ word in this book it agrees: दुसरा for a masculine thing, दुसरी feminine, दुसरं neuter.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दुसरा comes from dviḥsara*, "twofold", built on Sanskrit dviḥ, "twice" (CDIAL 6676).

Grammar Lens: एक ... दुसरा ... — sharing a pair out

> एक चहा आणि दुसरा पाणी. — ek chahā āṇi dusrā pāṇī. —
> One is tea and the other is water.

Set एक in front of the first thing and दुसरा in front of the second, and the pair is now shared out rather than merely listed. आणि would only stack them; this frame says this one, and that one. It is the last of the joining shapes that needs a word at BOTH ends, and it is how Marathi distributes a choice a speaker has already made.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ek chahā āṇi dusrā pāṇī
- the number hiding inside dusrā — don
- the three agreeing forms — dusrā, dusrī, dusraṁ

Before you move on

What number is दुसरा built on? (दोन.) What does putting एक and दुसरा at the two ends do that आणि alone cannot? (Shares the pair out — this one, that one.)
Sources: Wiktionary: दुसरा.

31.4 Words that need two places

> Chapter thirty gave you three joiners that each need ONE place. Name them. Chapter thirty-one gave you three that need more.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nā chahā nā dūdh
- ek chahā āṇi dusrā pāṇī
- chahā āhe nā? and answer ho

Before you move on

Which of this chapter's three shapes puts its word at the END? (The tag ना.) Which two put a word in FRONT of each half? (ना ... ना and एक ... दुसरा.) Then stop.

Chapter 32

Saying It Is Not So

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can negate a whole Marathi sentence, say that I do not know, and decline an offer with nako rather than nahii.
> Complete MR-R32-not-so and produce all three unaided: I do not like milk, I do not know, and no thank you.

32.1 ... नाही — saying that a whole sentence is not so

Retrieve the two things the last chapter did with ना: the doubled front pair, and the tag on the end. Then say the full word नाही on its own, the way you have said it since the courtesy chapter — as an answer.

Grammar Lens: नाही at the end of a sentence, not instead of one > मला दूध आवडत नाही. — malā dūdh āvaḍat nāhī. — I don't like milk.

Until now नाही was a whole reply. Here it is a piece of a sentence, and the rule is short:

- the verb drops back to its bare -अत shape — आवडते becomes आवडत

- नाही follows it, at the very end, carrying the whole denial

Marathi does not slip a not in front of the verb the way English does. It finishes the sentence and then cancels it. That order is worth saying out loud a few times, because it is the opposite of the English habit and it is what a listening paper's distractors are made of: āvaḍtaṁ and āvaḍat nāhī differ only in what comes after.

You'll want to know: मला माहीत नाही

> मला माहीत नाही. — malā māhīt nāhī. — I don't know.

You have had मला माहीत आहे for a long time. Swap आहे for नाही and you have the single most useful sentence a beginner owns: the honest admission that lets a conversation continue instead of stopping.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- malā chahā āvaḍto then malā dūdh āvaḍat nāhī
- malā māhīt āhe then malā māhīt nāhī
- where the denial sits in Marathi — at the end, after the verb

Before you move on

Where does नाही go when it denies a whole sentence? (At the end, after the verb.) What happens to आवडते in front of it? (It drops back to आवडत.)

32.2 नको (nako) — "no, thank you"

> You can now accept with चालेल and deny a fact with नाही. Between them sits a gap: how do you turn down something you are being offered?

You'll want to know: नको

> नको — nako — no thank you; I don't want it
> चहा? — नको, धन्यवाद. — chahā? — nako, dhanyavād. — Tea? — No thank you.

नाही says a thing is not so. नको says you do not want it. Answer an offer with नाही and you have said something slightly odd — that the tea does not exist. Marathi keeps the two apart, and so should you.

The word carries the same ancient na- as नाही; it means I do not want it, which is why it can refuse an offer and never answer a question of fact.

Its polite partner is the one you already have. चालेल accepts, नको declines, and धन्यवाद goes on the end of either.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Its origin is not settled: it opens with the old negative na, "not" (CDIAL 6906), but CDIAL has no entry for नको itself.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chahā? — chālel
- dūdh? — nako, dhanyavād
- which of nāhī and nako answers an OFFER — nako

Before you move on

Which word declines an offer? (नको.) Which one says a thing is not so? (नाही.)
Sources: Wiktionary: नको.

32.3 Four ways of saying no

> You now hold four different noes: the answer नाही, the doubled ना ... ना, the sentence-final नाही, and नको. Only one of them can refuse a cup of tea.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- malā chahā āvaḍto paṇ dūdh āvaḍat nāhī — the joining word and the denial in one sentence
- malā māhīt nāhī
- nako, dhanyavād

Before you move on

Which no goes at the END of a sentence and cancels it? (नाही.)
Which one answers an offer? (नको.) Then stop.

Chapter 33

Asking a Yes-or-No Question

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can turn any statement I own into a yes-or-no question with kaa, hear one carried by the voice alone, and write it with one trailing mark.
> Complete MR-R33-ask-and-answer and run a two-turn exchange: ask whether there is tea and answer it, then ask permission and decline.

33.1 ... का? (... kā?) — the yes-or-no question

Retrieve the last two items by name: the tag ना, and the sentence-final नाही. Both go at the end. So does this one.

Grammar Lens: का at the end

> माहीत आहे का? — māhīt āhe kā? — Do you know?

Marathi leaves the person out when it is obvious, so this three-word question needs no pronoun at all.
Take a statement, put का on the end, and nothing else moves — no word order, no verb. Marathi does not turn a sentence around to ask; it appends.
ना says this is so, agree with me. का says I do not know, tell me.

> चालेल का? — chālel kā? — Is that all right?

That is how you ask permission, and the answer comes back as the चालेल you already own.

The letters in this word

Speakers often drop का and let pitch do the work: चहा? with a rising voice is a complete offer. Say चहा. flat, then चहा? rising. A listening paper gives you the rise without the particle, so the ear must hold both.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- māhīt āhe kā? and answer it — ho or nāhī
- chālel kā? and answer it — chālel
- chahā? with the rise, and chahā. flat

Before you move on

What does का on the end do, and what else moves? (Makes a yes-or-no question; nothing.) How does it differ from a final ना? (ना expects agreement; का does not know the answer.)

33.2 ? and ! — the marks that go only at the end

You can now ask a yes-or-no question out loud. On paper, the rising voice is gone. Something has to take its place.

Script: one mark, and only at the end

चहा आहे का?

Marathi writes the question mark exactly where English does: one mark, at the end, and nowhere else. If you have met Spanish, this is worth naming — Spanish opens a question with an upside-down mark as well as closing it, and Marathi does not. There is nothing at the front of the sentence to warn you.

That is the practical consequence: in a printed Marathi sentence the only signal that you are reading a question may be the last character on the line, or the little का just before it. Read to the end before you decide.

And the rising voice you learned last lesson leaves no trace at all. Written down, चहा? has to carry the mark, because there is no pitch on paper.

Script: the exclamation mark

नमस्कार!

Same rule, same place, one mark. It marks a greeting or a raised voice, and it never doubles at the front either.

Writing — copy and mark

Write चहा आहे का? once. Then write नमस्कार! once. Check that each line carries exactly one mark and that it is the last thing on the line.

Before you move on

How many question marks does a written Marathi question carry, and where? (One, at the end.) So what must you do before deciding whether a printed sentence is a question? (Read to the end of it.)

33.3 Ask it, then answer it

A question in Marathi is a statement with का on the end and one mark on the page. Say one. Write it: the question you said, and नमस्कार! underneath it, so the two end marks stand side by side

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chahā āhe kā? — answer ho
- māhīt āhe kā? — answer malā māhīt nāhī
- chālel kā? — answer nako, dhanyavād

Before you move on

Name the three answers a का question can get. (हो, नाही, नको — and the last only for an offer.) Then stop.

Chapter 34

Why, and Because

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask why in Marathi, answer it with a whole reason clause after kaaran, and use the comma in a written list and after a named reader.
> Complete MR-R34-reasons and take both turns unaided: ask kaa?, then answer with the claim first and the reason after kaaran.

34.1 का (kā) — why

Retrieve the two items before this one by name: the particle का that turns a statement into a yes-or-no question, and the single ? that marks it on the page. Say a question with both.

You'll want to know: का at the front

का? — kā? — why?

का आवडते? — kā āvaḍte? — Why do you like it?

The same two letters you have just learned to hang on the end mean why when they stand at the front, or on their own. That is not a coincidence and it is not an accident of spelling: both come from the Sanskrit question stem क- (ka-), which also built काय ("what") and कसा ("how"). Marathi's whole question system is one syllable with different tails, and the same Indo-European k- is under Latin quis and English who.

Position is what keeps the two apart, so it is worth saying both aloud back to back:

- मराठी आवडते का? — do you like Marathi? (particle, at the end)
- मराठी का आवडते? — why do you like Marathi? (question word, in front of the verb)

Said on its own, का? is a complete turn: it is how you ask someone to explain what they have just said.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- marāṭhī āvaḍte kā? then marāṭhī kā āvaḍte?
- kā? on its own, as a whole turn
- the three k-words together — kāy, kasā, kā

Before you move on

What does का mean at the front of a sentence? (Why.) And at the end? (It makes a yes-or-no question.) What decides which? (Where it stands.)
Sources: Wiktionary: का.

34.2 कारण (kāraṇ) — because

You can now ask का?. Ask it out loud. Then notice that you have no way whatever to answer it.

Grammar Lens: कारण takes a whole sentence after it

मी मराठी शिकतो कारण मला मराठी आवडते. — mī marāṭhī shikto kāraṇ malā marāṭhī āvaḍte. — I am learning Marathi because I like Marathi.

आणि, किंवा and पण put two things side by side as equals. कारण does something new: everything after it is subordinate — it exists only to explain the half in front. That is the first time in this book that one Marathi clause has been put inside the job of another.
The order is fixed and it is the useful way round: the claim first, the reason second. English can lead with because; Marathi's ordinary sentence does not.

कारण is Sanskrit कारण (kāraṇa), "a cause," built on the root कृ (kṛ-), "to do" — the same कृ inside करणे, the verb this book gave you for to do. Marathi's because is, at root, the doing of it.
A short answer works too. Asked का?, you may reply with कारण and one clause, and nothing else is needed.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kā? then answer it with kāraṇ …
- malā chahā āvaḍto paṇ dūdh āvaḍat nāhī — equals — then mī marāṭhī shikto kāraṇ malā marāṭhī āvaḍte — not equals
- which verb कारण is related to — karṇe

Before you move on

Which half comes first in a Marathi कारण sentence? (The claim; the reason follows.) How is कारण unlike पण? (पण joins two equals; कारण puts one clause underneath the other.)
Sources: Wiktionary: कारण.

34.3 , — the mark that carries a list

Say चहा आणि दूध आणि पाणी. Three things, two आणि. Out loud it is clumsy; on paper it is worse.

Script: the comma does the joining work for all but the last pair

चहा, दूध आणि पाणी

Marathi writes the comma exactly as English does: it stands in for the joining word between every pair except the last, where आणि is written out. The mark is the same shape you already know from the Latin alphabet, sitting on the baseline below the letters — not hanging from the headline like a Devanagari sign.

It has one more everyday job, and it is the one the writing task needs:

A comma after the person you are addressing. Every message that opens by naming its reader wants one.

Marathi's own name for it, स्वल्पविराम, means "small pause," which is a better description than comma — the mark tells the eye to hesitate, not to stop.

Writing — copy, then place

Write चहा, दूध आणि पाणी once. Then write नमस्कार मीरा, and check that the comma sits on the baseline, after the name.

Before you move on

In a written list of three, how many आणि do you write, and where? (One, before the last item.) What does the comma's Marathi name mean? (Small pause.)

34.4 Two turns: why, and because का at the end asks yes-or-no. का at the front asks why. Say one of each before you go on.

Your turn

- Say it: marāṭhī āvaḍte kā? — ho — kā? — kāraṇ …
- Say it: mī marāṭhī shikto kāraṇ malā marāṭhī āvaḍte
- Write it: chahā, dūdh āṇi pāṇī

Before you move on

Which joining word puts one clause underneath another? (कारण.) Which half of a कारण sentence comes first? (The claim.) Then stop.

Chapter 35

A Sentence Inside a Sentence

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can report what I think or know with a whole clause after ki, and turn any Marathi verb into a purpose with -nyaasaathii.
> Complete MR-R35-inside and produce a reason, a reported thought and an aim, naming what each underneath clause is doing.

35.1 की (kī) — that

Retrieve the two items before this one by name: कारण, which puts a reason under a claim, and the comma that carries a written list. Then say मला वाटतं — it seems to me. You have had the verb for a long time and have never once been able to say WHAT seems.

Grammar Lens: की opens the room where the thought goes > मला वाटतं की चहा आहे. — malā vāṭtaṁ kī chahā āhe. — I think there is tea.

Word for word that is to-me it-seems that tea is. Everything after की is an ordinary complete Marathi sentence — चहा आहे — doing the job of an object.
That is the trick worth seeing: you do not need a new grammar to report a thought. You need one word and a sentence you could already say. Every sentence in this book just became something you can think, know or say about.

> मला माहीत आहे की चहा आहे. — I know that there is tea.

Negate the outer half and the inner clause survives untouched: मला माहीत नाही की चहा आहे — I don't know whether there is tea. Only the main verb was denied.
कारण and की are cousins in shape and different in job: कारण puts a clause underneath as a REASON, की puts one underneath as the CONTENT. Both keep the main clause first, which is Marathi's steady habit.
की looks like का and काय, but it is a loan. CDIAL, following Bloch, keeps it apart from the native kī̃, "or" (from Sanskrit kím), and takes it from Hindi ki, which Hindi had from Persian ke (CDIAL 3164). Persian uses ke for exactly this job, and the word travelled with the job.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chahā āhe on its own
- malā vāṭṭaṁ kī chahā āhe
- what changed inside the second half when you put it after की — nothing

Before you move on

What goes after की? (A whole ordinary sentence, unchanged.)
How does की differ from कारण? (कारण gives the reason; की gives the content.)
Sources: Wiktionary: की.

35.2 -ण्यासाठी (-ṇyāsāṭhī) — in order to

Every Marathi verb in this book ends in -णे: शिकणे, वाचणे, बोलणे. That ending is what makes the verb usable as a thing. Now it becomes usable as a purpose.

Grammar Lens: swap -णे for -ण्यासाठी

> मी मराठी शिकण्यासाठी वाचतो. — mī marāṭhī shikṇyāsāṭhī vācto. — I read in order to learn Marathi.

One swap does it — take -णे off, put -ण्यासाठी on:

dictionary form	purpose form
शिकणे	शिकण्यासाठी
वाचणे	वाचण्यासाठी

The purpose clause then goes BEFORE the main verb, which is where Marathi keeps everything that modifies it.
Two honest notes. First, साठी is a postposition meaning for the sake of — it can sit after a plain noun too. Second, the -ण्या- in front of it is not decoration: Marathi bends a word into an oblique shape before any postposition, and this is one instance of a rule that runs through the whole language. That general rule is still owed to you. Learn this one swap now; the rule it belongs to comes later.
Where कारण answers why by giving a cause, -ण्यासाठी answers it by giving an aim. Marathi keeps those apart and you now have both.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- shikṇe → shikṇyāsāṭhī, then vācṇe → vācṇyāsāṭhī
- mī marāṭhī shikṇyāsāṭhī vācto
- the difference between a cause and an aim — kāraṇ against -ṇyāsāṭhī

Before you move on

What do you take off the verb, and what do you put on? (Take off -णे, put on -ण्यासाठी.) Where does the purpose clause stand? (Before the main verb.)
Sources: Wiktionary: साठी.

35.3 Three clauses underneath, three jobs

Three things can now go underneath a Marathi main clause: a reason, a content, and an aim. Name the word or ending that carries each.

Then reach further back and say the frame that shares a pair out — एक in front of one, दुसरा in front of the other — and notice that it puts its two halves side by side as equals, which is exactly what these three do not do.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the कारण sentence
- the की sentence
- the -ण्यासाठी sentence

Before you move on

Which of the three goes BEFORE the main verb rather than after it? (The -ण्यासाठी purpose clause.) Then stop.

Chapter 36

When, After, and Too

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can place two events in time with jevhaa ... tevhaa or the shorter -lyaavar, add something with sudhaa, and run every joining word in the book once.
> Complete MR-R36-joined and say five sentences with a clause underneath – a reason, a content, an aim, a same-time and an after – naming the job of each.

36.1 जेव्हा ... तेव्हा ... (jevhā ... tevhā ...) — when, then

Retrieve the two items before this one by name: की, which hangs a whole sentence on a thinking verb, and -ण्यासाठी, which turns a verb into an aim. Both put a clause underneath. This one does it in time.

Grammar Lens: the two-word frame

> जेव्हा मी वाचतो तेव्हा मला समजतं. — jevhā mī vācto tevhā malā samajtaṁ. — When I read, then I understand.

Marathi does not leave when on its own. It opens with जेव्हा and answers with तेव्हा in the second half, and the second word is not optional padding — it is what tells you the first clause has finished. You have met this machinery before without being told its name. जेव्हा is built on the relative stem ज-, तेव्हा on the demonstrative त-, and the same two stems sit under Marathi's relative and pointing pronouns. English keeps the pair in when … then and drops the then; Latin kept both in cum … tum. Marathi keeps both, always.

Because the frame is spoken in the order the events happen, it is also the easiest long sentence in the book to say: first clause, तेव्हा, second clause.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- jevhā mī vācto tevhā malā samajtaṁ
- the pair on its own — jevhā … tevhā
- which of the two stems is the relative one — ज-

Before you move on

What must follow a जेव्हा clause? (तेव्हा.) What does that second word do for the listener? (Tells them the first clause has ended.)
Sources: Wiktionary: जेव्हा.

36.2 -ल्यावर (-lyāvar) — after doing

Say the two-clause frame you got last lesson: जेव्हा मी वाचतो तेव्हा मला समजतं. Nine syllables of scaffolding for two events. Marathi has a shorter way.

Grammar Lens: one ending instead of two clauses

वाचल्यावर मला समजतं. — vācalyāvar malā samajtaṁ. — After reading, I understand.

The swap is the same shape as -ण्यासाठी: take -णे off the verb and put -ल्यावर on. The result is one word that means after doing it, and it stands at the front of the sentence with no second half required.

dictionary form	after-doing form
वाचणे	वाचल्यावर
शिकणे	शिकल्यावर

Taken apart, -ल्यावर is a past participle in -ल- with the postposition var ("on, upon") behind it. After reading is literally upon having-read. English reaches for the same preposition in upon reading, which makes this one of the few Marathi endings you can feel your way into rather than memorise.
जेव्हा says the two things happen at once; -ल्यावर says one finished before the other began. Choose by which you mean, not by which is shorter.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- vācṇe → vācalyāvar, then shikṇe → shikalyāvar
- vācalyāvar malā samajtaṁ
- which of the two says at the same time — jevhā

Before you move on

What does -ल्यावर replace? (A whole जेव्हा ... तेव्हा frame.) What is the var in it doing? (It means upon — upon having done it.)

36.3 सुद्धा (sudhā) — too, and "not even"

आणि joins two things in one sentence. But often the first thing was said a minute ago, by somebody else. There is no gap to put आणि in.

You'll want to know: सुद्धा

मला दूध सुद्धा आवडतं. — malā dūdh sudhā āvaḍtaṁ. — I like milk too.

सुद्धा goes straight after the word it adds — not between two things, but behind one. That is what lets it reach back to something already said. It is the joining word for a CONVERSATION rather than for a sentence.

Grammar Lens: the same word in front of a denial

> मला दूध सुद्धा आवडत नाही. — malā dūdh sudhā āvaḍat nāhī.
> — I don't even like milk.

Nothing about सुद्धा changed. The sentence around it turned negative, and too became not even on its own. English does the identical thing: I like it too against I don't even like it. One word, two readings, and the negation picks which.
सुद्धा is Sanskrit शुद्ध (śuddha), "pure." Purely that hardened into even that, which is the ordinary road a purity word travels.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- malā chahā āvaḍto — then malā dūdh sudhā āvaḍtaṁ
- malā dūdh sudhā āvaḍat nāhī
- where सुद्धा stands — right after the word it adds

Before you move on

Where does सुद्धा stand? (Directly after the word it adds.)
What turns too into not even? (Negating the verb; सुद्धा itself does not change.)
Sources: Wiktionary: सुद्धा.

36.4 Everything that joins

> Seven chapters ago you could name a hundred Marathi things and say nothing about two of them at once. Name the six joining words in this lesson's title without looking.

Your turn — flat joins

Say these aloud:

- chahā āṇi dūdh · chahā kiṁvā dūdh · chahā āhe paṇ dūdh nāhī
- nā chahā nā dūdh · ek chahā āṇi dusrā pāṇī

- malā dūdh sudhā āvaḍtaṁ · malā dūdh sudhā āvaḍat nāhī
- chahā āhe nā? · chahā? — nako, dhanyavād

Your turn — clauses underneath

Say each of the five, and after each one name what the underneath clause is doing: a reason, a content, an aim, a same-time, an after.

Before you move on

Which joining words treat the two halves as EQUALS? (आणि, किंवा, पण, ना ... ना, एक ... दुसरा.) Which ones put one half UNDERNEATH the other? (कारण, की, -ण्यासाठी, जेव्हा ... तेव्हा, -ल्यावर.) And which single syllable both asks a yes-or-no question and asks why, depending only on where it stands? (का.) When it is dropped altogether, what carries the question instead? (A rising voice — and on paper, the single ?, with ! its partner.) Then stop.

Chapter 37

Who, and How Many

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask which person is meant with koṇ and ask for a quantity with kitī, and I can say what shape of answer each of the k- asking words wants.
> Complete MR-R37-who-how-many and sort three asking words by the shape of the answer they demand: a thing, a person, a number.

37.1 कोण (koṇ) — who

You own one asking word: काय (kāy), what. It asks about a thing. Nothing you own yet asks about a person.

You'll want to know: कोण

कोण — koṇ — who

तू कोण आहेस? — tū koṇ āhes? — who are you?

कोण asks for a person the way काय asks for a thing. Both begin with क, and that is not luck: Marathi builds its asking words on one inherited stem. काय, कसा, कोण — the क- family. Meet a new word starting with क in a question and you can guess its job before you know its meaning.

कोण comes down from Sanskrit kaḥ punar, "who" (CDIAL 2575), by way of the older Marathi कवण. English who and Latin quis grew from the same Indo-European stem.

Aim it at somebody you have already named: मीरा कोण आहे? — Mīrā koṇ āhe? — who is Mira?

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- koṇ — who
- mitra koṇ āhe? — who is the friend?
- which letter every Marathi asking word so far begins with — क

Before you move on

Which word asks for a thing, and which for a person? (काय; कोण.)
What do they share? (The क- stem.)
Sources: Wiktionary: कोण.

37.2 किती (kitī) — how many

You can count एक दोन तीन चार पाच. You met कोण one lesson ago. Neither of them lets you ask somebody for a number.

You'll want to know: किती

किती — kitī — how many, how much

तुम्हाला किती भाऊ आहेत? — tumhālā kitī bhāū āhet? — how many brothers do you have?

Another क- word, and the answer to it is always a number. That is what makes it worth spending a lesson on so early: five numbers with no question to trigger them are five words nobody asks you for.

किती goes back to kiyatta*, "how great", a form CDIAL builds like Sanskrit kiyant, "how much" (CDIAL 3167). Latin quot and English how many carry the same ancient stem.

It also does duty for how much of something uncountable — Marathi does not split the two the way English does.

Your turn

- Say it: kitī — how many
- Say it: kitī bhāū? — how many brothers?

- Recall: say dusrā — the other one — then answer kitī? with don

Before you move on

What kind of answer does किती always want? (A number.) And कोण? (A person.)
Sources: Wiktionary: किती.

37.3 Sort the answers, not the questions

Three asking words are now yours. Name them in the order you met them, oldest first.

Your turn

- Say it: kāy āhe? — and answer with a thing
- Say it: koṇ āhe? — and answer with a person
- Say it: kitī? — and answer with a numeral between ek and pāch
- Read it: the form label आवडती कृती, then say why it ends in -ती

Before you move on

All three begin with the same letter. Which? (क.) So what does a strange new क- word at the front of a sentence probably want from you? (An answer — it is a question.)

Chapter 38

Where, and When

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask where somebody lives and when they are coming, and I can turn any statement I already own into a question by swapping one word and moving nothing.
> Complete MR-R38-where-when and ask three questions about one person – who, where, when – then tell the two question types apart by whether the voice has to rise.

38.1 कुठे (kuṭhe) — where

Two chapters ago you learned to add one more thing with सुद्धा. Last chapter gave you कोण and किती.

- Recall: say koṇ, then kitī, then sudhā in one breath

You'll want to know: कुठे

कुठे — kuṭhe — where

तुम्ही कुठे राहता? — tumhī kuṭhe rāhtā? — where do you live?

मी पुण्यात राहतो. — mī puṇyāt rāhto. — I live in Pune.

That exchange is the second question of almost every spoken interview, and until this lesson the book could write the answer and not the question. You already had पुण्यात — the city with -ात glued on its tail. What was missing was the word that asks for it.

कुठे is the क- family again, usually traced to Sanskrit कुत्र (kutra, "where"). Its answer is a place, the way कोण wants a person and किती wants a number.

When you do not know: माहीत नाही — māhīt nāhī — I don't know. That is a complete and polite answer to कुठे.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kuṭhe — where
- tumhī kuṭhe rāhtā?
- māhīt nāhī — the answer when you do not know

Before you move on

What shape of answer does कुठे want? (A place.) Which form field on your A1 profile answers it? (शहर.)
Sources: Wiktionary: कुठे.

38.2 कधी (kadhī) — when

You can already put two events in order with जेव्हा ... तेव्हा ... and with -ल्यावर. Both of them ANSWER a question you cannot yet ask.

- Recall: say a jevhā … tevhā … sentence, then the same idea with -ल्यावर

You'll want to know: कधी

कधी — kadhī — when

तुम्ही कधी येता? — tumhī kadhī yetā? — when are you coming?

उद्या. — udyā. — tomorrow.

कधी is usually traced to Sanskrit कदा (kadā, "when"), and it is the fourth क- word in four lessons. The family is now large enough to be a rule rather than a coincidence: काय, कोण, किती, कुठे, कधी.

Notice where it sits. A Marathi time word comes early, before the verb — you saw that with उद्या भेटू. कधी takes exactly that slot, because it is standing in for the answer.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kadhī — when
- tumhī kadhī yetā?
- koṇ, kuṭhe, kadhī — person, place, time
- nako — the word that refuses an offer, so you can decline as well as answer

Before you move on

Where in the sentence does a Marathi time word go? (Early, before the verb.) So where does कधी go? (The same place.) Sources: Wiktionary: कधी.

38.3 Where the asking word stands

You have said तुमचं नाव काय आहे? and तुम्ही कसे आहात? for many chapters. Both are questions. Neither one told you the rule they obey.

Grammar Lens: nothing moves to the front

English hauls its asking word to the front of the sentence: your name is Aruṇ becomes what is your name. Marathi does not move anything. The asking word simply stands in the slot where the answer would stand, and the verb stays last.

तुमचं नाव अरुण आहे. → तुमचं नाव काय आहे?

तुम्ही पुण्यात राहता. → तुम्ही कुठे राहता?

Compare those two pairs. In each, exactly one word changed and nothing else moved. That is the whole rule, and it is worth having as a rule rather than as two memorised phrases: it means every asking word you own works in every sentence you own, without rearrangement.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कुठे is usually traced to Sanskrit kutra, "where", on the same question stem ka- as काय. CDIAL has no entry for it.

Your turn

- Say it: a statement, then the same sentence with कुठे in the answer's slot
- Say it: the same trick with कधी
- Recall: say kitī and put it where a number would have gone

Before you move on

Where does a Marathi asking word stand? (In the answer's own slot.) What moves to the front? (Nothing.)

38.4 Two ways to ask, and how to tell them apart

Marathi now gives you two kinds of question. One ends in का and is answered हो or नाही. The other carries a क- word and is answered with information.

Your turn

- Say it: koṇ, kitī, kuṭhe, kadhī — the four you now own, in order
- Say it: one का question, with the voice rising at the end
- Say it: one कुठे question, with the voice NOT rising — it does not have to
- Recall: say kāy, the oldest of the family, and the sentence you have used it in since chapter nine

Before you move on

Which kind of question needs the rise, and which does not? (The का question needs it; a क- question already shows itself in a word.)

Chapter 39

There

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write the aspirated dental थ, and answer a where-question with tithe instead of naming a city.
> Complete MR-R39-there and run one place exchange end to end: ask kuṭhe, answer tithe, then ask kā and decline with māhīt nāhī.

39.1 थ — the hole in the dental row

Chapter three gave you त, द, ध and न. Four of a row of five. This is the fifth.

Script

थ

थ is tha: त with the breath let out, exactly the step you already know from क/ख and from ट/ठ. The sound is a dental t with a puff after it — never the English th of this or thin.

The shape is worth a second look, because it is the one letter in the row that does not resemble its plain partner at all. त has a hook; थ is a loop with a stem through it. Do not expect to derive it — learn it as its own picture.

Curled ठ and dental थ are the pair readers confuse: ठ is a bare circle, थ carries a vertical stem down the right.

Writing — guided copy

How थ is written, stroke by stroke

Copy थ twice with the model visible. Then write ठ beside it and check that only one of the two has a stem.

Before you move on

Which of the two is a bare circle? (ठ.) The word for there needs the other one, and arrives in the next lesson. End the line with ? or ! as before, and never both.
Source: Devanagari tha stroke order.

39.2 तिथे (tithe) — there

One lesson ago you learned a letter and were told the word it was for. Here it is.

You'll want to know: तिथे

तिथे — tithe — there

मीरा तिथे आहे. — Mīrā tithe āhe. — Mira is there.

This is the first complete answer you can give to कुठे without naming a city. Point across the room and say it.

Look at how it is built. जेव्हा ... तेव्हा ... taught you that Marathi keeps two matching stems: ज- for the one you ask about and त- for the one you point at. तिथे is that same त-, the far-pointing stem, with a place ending. It comes down from Sanskrit तत्र (tatra, "there").

So the shape of the language is now visible in three columns: क- asks, त- points away. One column is still missing, and it is the near one.

Your turn

- Say it: tithe — there
- Say it: Mīrā tithe āhe
- Recall: greet Mira the way your named-reader message opens

Before you move on

Which stem points away from you? (त-.) Which letter in तिथे did you not have two lessons ago? (थ.)
Sources: Wiktionary: तिथे.

39.3 Ask a place, answer a place

A question and its answer landed one lesson apart. Say the pair.

Your turn

- Say it: kuṭhe āhe? — then answer tithe
- Say it: kadhī? — and notice it takes the same slot
- Recall: ask का ...? — the why-question from chapter thirty-four — and answer māhīt nāhī
- Recall: say the line of your named-reader message that gives your own name

Before you move on

Write it: तिथे once, and check the middle letter carries a stem (थ, not ठ.)

Chapter 40

Here, and the Asking Column

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write the independent इ, say where I am with ithe, and turn the lines of my own A1 message into the questions they answer.
> Complete MR-R40-asking-column and interrogate your own named-reader message: turn its name, wellbeing and place lines into questions by changing one word each.

40.1 इ — short i with nothing to lean on

You hang a short i in front of a consonant with ि. You have the independent अ and the independent उ. The independent short i is still missing, and a word that starts with it cannot be written without it.

Script

इ

इ is the letter form of the same short i. Devanagari's rule has not changed since chapter five: a mark when a consonant carries the vowel, a letter when nothing does. अ, आ, उ, ऊ, ए are already yours; this is the sixth.

You need it for exactly one reason right now, and it is a good one. The word you learned last chapter points AWAY from you. Its near partner begins with this vowel, and until now the book could say तिथे and not its opposite.

Writing — guided copy

How इ is written, stroke by stroke

Copy इ twice with the model visible. Then write the short-i mark beside it and say which of the two can start a word.

Before you move on

Which form opens a word? (The letter.)

- Recall: say कारण and give one reason for anything at all
- Recall: say the line of your message that means it was a pleasure to meet you

Source: Devanagari i stroke order.

40.2 इथे (ithe) — here

The letter from the last lesson has one job waiting for it.

You'll want to know: इथे

इथे — ithe — here

मी इथे आहे. — mī ithe āhe. — I am here.

Marathi points two ways and only two. English has here, there and the older yonder; Spanish has three, aquí, ahí and allí. Marathi splits the world in half at your own body: इथे is where you are, तिथे is everywhere else. There is no middle term to learn.

Now put the three columns side by side, because this is the pattern that will keep paying out for the rest of the book:

> कुठे — asks. इथे — near. तिथे — far.

One shared ending, three stems: क-, इ-, त-. When you later meet an unfamiliar Marathi word beginning with one of those three, you already know which of the three jobs it is doing.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

इथे (ithe) is inherited. CDIAL lists it, as ethẽ, "here", under Sanskrit ittham, "thus", whose Prakrit form ittha already meant "here" (CDIAL 1564).

Your turn

- Say it: ithe — here
- Say it: mī ithe āhe
- Say it: kuṭhe, ithe, tithe — with a comma's pause between each
- Recall: say the line of your message that means I know Marathi

Before you move on

How many pointing words does Marathi have for place, and where is the line drawn? (Two; at your own body.)
Sources: Wiktionary: इथे.

40.3 Ask your own message six questions

> Six asking words are now yours: काय, कसा, कोण, किती, कुठे, कधी.
> Name them, then name the one letter they all begin with.

Your turn

You wrote a message about yourself many chapters ago and could not question a line of it. Now you can. Take each line and turn it into the question it answers, changing one word and moving nothing.

- Say it: tumchaṁ nāv kāy āhe? — and answer it
- Say it: tumhī kase āhāt? — and answer it
- Say it: tumhī kuṭhe rāhtā? — and answer it
- Recall: say the line of your message that means I read Marathi
- Write it: इथे from memory, then तिथे, and check which one needed a whole vowel letter

Before you move on

You can now ask for a person, a number, a place and a time, and answer a place question with इथे or तिथे without naming anywhere at all. Which two signs did this chapter and the last one give your hand? (थ and इ.)

Chapter 41

A House, a Room, and the Stem That Bends

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a house and a room, and I can put either of them into the -t locative, knowing which one changes shape first and why.
> Complete MR-R41-in-the-house and answer kuṭhe? twice with a place you can name – gharāt and khoolīt – saying which of the two nouns had to bend.

41.1 घर (ghar) — house, home

You can point at a place — इथे, तिथे — and you cannot yet NAME one.

- Recall: say ithe, then tithe, then ask kuṭhe?

You'll want to know: घर

घर — ghar — house, home

माझं घर इथे आहे. — mājhaṁ ghar ithe āhe. — my house is here.

Two letters you have had since chapter six, and a word Marathi uses for both house and home — the building and the belonging, with no second word for the difference.

It is usually taken as a popular form of Sanskrit गृह (gṛha), "house", though CDIAL calls the sound change difficult (CDIAL 4428).

घर is neuter, like कुटुंब. That will matter the moment you put an adjective on it, and it matters now for माझं rather than माझा.

Your turn

- Say it: ghar — house, home
- Say it: mājhaṁ ghar ithe āhe
- Recall: say की and report that your house is here — mī mhaṇto kī …

Before you move on

Which Sanskrit word is घर usually taken from? (गृह, gṛha, "house".)
What gender is घर? (Neuter.)
Sources: Wiktionary: घर.

41.2 खोली (khoolī) — room

A house has an inside. That inside needs a name before anything can be said to be in it.

You'll want to know: खोली

खोली — khoolī — room

माझ्या घरात एक खोली आहे. — mājhyā gharāt ek khoolī āhe. — there is one room in my house.

खोली is feminine, which its -ी ending announces before you are told. It is the word a rental notice uses, the word a hotel uses, and the word you would use for the room you sleep in — Marathi does not have a separate everyday noun for bedroom the way English does; it says the room you do the sleeping in.

The word is the noun of खोल (khool), "deep." A room is a depth cut into a house. Once you know that pair you also know a second, unrelated-looking word: खोली on its own can mean depth, which is the same noun doing its literal job.

That sentence above did something new to घर, and you should notice it now rather than be surprised by it: घर became घरा- before -त. The next lesson is about nothing else.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खोली comes from a reconstructed kholla*, "hut"; CDIAL glosses the Marathi word "inner room" (CDIAL 3946).

Your turn

- Say it: khoolī — room
- Say it: mājhaṁ ghar; ek khoolī
- Recall: say -ण्यासाठी and give a purpose for a room — jhopaṇyāsāṭhī

Before you move on

What gender is खोली, and what tells you? (Feminine; the -ी.)
What adjective is it built on? (खोल, deep.)
Sources: Wiktionary: खोली.

41.3 घरा- (gharā-) — the stem a noun takes before a postposition

घर became घरात last lesson, and पुणे became पुण्यात back in chapter twelve. Neither one just took an ending. Both changed shape first.

Grammar Lens: the noun bends before anything is glued to it

Marathi puts almost every place, time and direction relation on a postposition — a piece glued to the END of the noun. Chapter twelve showed you one. What it did not say is that the noun does not stay as it is: it first takes an oblique stem, and only then accepts the glue.

घर → घरा- → घरात

पुणे → पुण्या- → पुण्यात

खोली → खोली- → खोलीत

Three classes, three answers, and the pattern is worth holding as a shape rather than a list. A neuter noun ending in a consonant takes -आ. A noun ending in -ए takes -या. A feminine noun in -ी does not change at all.
This is the single most load-bearing rule in the book so far, because nothing in the next three chapters works without it. Every one of the five postpositions they teach — madhye, var, khālī, javaḷ and samor — demands the oblique before it, and a Marathi sentence that skips it is not merely clumsy: it is wrong.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

घरा- (gharā-) is घर, "house", in its oblique shape. घर is usually taken as a popular form of Sanskrit gṛha, "house", though CDIAL calls the sound change difficult (CDIAL 4428).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ghar, then gharāt — and hear the extra ā
- khoolī, then khoolīt — and hear that nothing was added
- mī gharāt rāhto — I live in the house

Before you move on

What happens to a Marathi noun before a postposition? (It takes an oblique stem first.) Which of the three classes changes least? (Feminine -ी — not at all.)

41.4 Ask where, and answer with a place you can name

Until this chapter, कुठे? could only be answered by pointing.
Now it can be answered with a room.

Your turn

- Say it: kuṭhe āhe? — then answer gharāt
- Say it: the same question answered khoolīt
- Say it: ithe — and notice you can now answer that question two ways
- Recall: say a jevhā … tevhā … sentence about being at home
- Recall: say the line of your message that means I understand Marathi

Before you move on

Which of घर and खोली changes shape before -त? (घर, to घरा-.) Why does that rule matter more than it looks? (Every postposition in the next three chapters needs it.)

Chapter 42

In, On, Under

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that a thing is in, on or under a place, running three postpositions off one oblique stem, and I can use var and khālī as bare adverbs when there is no noun to glue them to.
> Complete MR-R42-inside-outside and put a room in, on and under a house from a single bent stem, then say there is something in the room.

42.1 मध्ये (madhye) — in, inside

Last chapter gave you the oblique stem and the room it was demonstrated on.

- Recall: say khoolī, then khoolīt, and name what changed — nothing

You'll want to know: मध्ये

मध्ये — madhye — in, inside, among

घरामध्ये खोली आहे. — gharāmadhye khoolī āhe. — there is a room in the house.

मध्ये and the -त you already own do the same job, and Marathi keeps both. -त is short and is what speech reaches for; मध्ये is longer, unmistakable, and is what a written sign or a form reaches for. A learner who knows only one of them can speak but not read a notice.

Both demand the same oblique stem, which is the point of having met that rule first: घर → घरा-, then either ending. Nothing new has to be learned about the noun.

It is Sanskrit मध्य (madhya), "middle" — the same ancient word behind Latin medius and English mid and middle. Its third sense follows from that literally: मध्ये also means among, in the middle of a group.

Your turn

- Say it: madhye — in, inside
- Say it: gharāmadhye khoolī āhe
- Recall: say -ल्यावर and put an event after coming home

Before you move on

Which of -त and मध्ये would you expect on a printed notice? (मध्ये.)
What do both demand of the noun first? (The oblique stem.)
Sources: Wiktionary: मध्ये.

42.2 वर (var) — on, above, up

मध्ये put something inside. Nothing yet puts something on top.

You'll want to know: वर

वर — var — on, above, up

घरावर — gharāvar — on the house

वर पाहा. — var pāhā. — look up.

वर earns two lessons' worth of use out of one word, and both are worth having now. Glued to an oblique stem it is the on of a surface. Standing alone in front of a verb it is the plain adverb up — no noun needed, and no oblique either, because there is nothing for it to be glued to.

It descends from Sanskrit उपरि (upari), "above," which is the same ancient word as English over and German über. The up in up is the same syllable.

One more use, and it is the commonest of the three in ordinary speech: Marathi puts affection on its object rather than for it.

> मी मराठीवर प्रेम करतो. — mī marāṭhīvar prem karto. — I love Marathi.

That is not a metaphor you have to decode each time; it is simply where the language puts the thing loved.

Your turn

- Say it: gharāvar — on the house
- Say it: var pāhā — look up
- Say it: mī marāṭhīvar prem karto
- Recall: say सुद्धा and add one more thing to that sentence

Before you move on

When does वर NOT need an oblique stem in front of it? (When it stands alone as the adverb *up.) What does Marathi put love on? (The thing loved — marāṭhīvar.)
Sources: Wiktionary: वर.

42.3 खाली (khālī) — under, below, down

You have वर. Every language that has an on has an under, and in Marathi the two are built the same way.

You'll want to know: खाली

> खाली — khālī — under, below, down
> खोलीखाली — khoolīkhālī — under the room
> खाली बसा. — khālī basā. — sit down.

Learn it as वर's mirror and you get two facts for one. Glued to an oblique stem it means under; standing alone in front of a verb it is the adverb down. Marathi's up-and-down pair share one grammar, so what you learned about वर transfers whole.

खाली बसा is worth saying aloud twice. It is one of the commonest things a Marathi host says to a guest, and you already own the polite imperative it is built on.

The word is the खाल of underside with the same -ी you saw on खोली. Marathi builds a good deal of its everyday vocabulary that way: a short base, a long form, and a job for each.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL lists Marathi khāl, "below", under Sanskrit khalla, "trench, creek" (CDIAL 3849).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- khālī — under, down
- khālī basā — sit down
- gharāvar, then gharākhālī — above it, below it

Before you move on

What does खाली do when nothing is glued in front of it? (It is the adverb *down.) What does a host say to a guest with it? (खाली बसा.)
Sources: Wiktionary: खाली.

42.4 There is a thing, and it is somewhere

Three postpositions landed in this chapter and all three sit in the same place. Name them in the order you met them.

Your turn

- Say it: gharāmadhye, gharāvar, gharākhālī — and change only the tail

- Say it: khoolīmadhye — and notice the stem did not move
- Say it: khoolīt kāhī āhe — there is something in the room
- Recall: ask koṇ gharāt āhe? — who is in the house?

Before you move on

Marathi has no separate verb for there is. What does it use instead? (आहे, with a place in front of it.) What has to happen to the noun carrying that place? (It takes the oblique stem.)

Chapter 43

Near, Opposite, Far

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can place something near or in front of a landmark, say that it is far, and tell a postposition apart from an ordinary word by whether it bends the noun in front of it.
> Complete MR-R43-how-far and answer one where-question three ways – near Pune, in front of the room, far – naming which of the three needed no ending at all.

43.1 जवळ (javaḷ) — near, close to

Last chapter stacked things above and below each other. Real directions are almost never that tidy.

- Recall: say khālī, then var, then bend घर and glue each on

You'll want to know: जवळ

> जवळ — javaḷ — near, close to
> माझं घर पुण्याजवळ आहे. — mājhaṁ ghar puṇyājavaḷ āhe. — my house is near Pune.

This is the answer a real person gives when you ask कुठे? and the true answer is not a single named point. It takes the same oblique stem as every other place word here — पुणे → पुण्या- — so nothing new has to be learned about the noun.

जवळ carries the ळ, the retroflex ḷ that is Marathi's own letter and that Hindi does not have. Say it with the tongue curled back, the way you learned it in chapter three, or the word will sound like a different one.

It has a second job you will need in the next chapter: X जवळ can also mean in X's keeping — near enough to reach — which is how Marathi gets close to saying somebody HAS something.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of जवळ is not settled: neither CDIAL nor DEDR has an entry for it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- javaḷ — near, with the tongue curled on the ळ
- mājhaṁ ghar puṇyājavaḷ āhe
- mitrājavaḷ — near my friend

Before you move on

Which letter in जवळ is the one Hindi does not have? (ळ.) What does पुणे become before it? (पुण्या-.)
Sources: Wiktionary: जवळ.

43.2 समोर (samor) — in front of, opposite

जवळ says close by, which does not say which side.

You'll want to know: समोर

समोर — samor — in front of, opposite, facing

घरासमोर — gharāsamor — in front of the house

This is the postposition a set of directions is actually made of. Opposite the station, in front of the shop — a Marathi speaker giving you a landmark reaches for समोर before anything else.

Take the word apart and it pays you back. It is Sanskrit सम्मुख (sammukha) — सम् together plus मुख face. Chapter nineteen told you that मुख is the formal doublet of तोंड, the everyday mouth. So समोर is, quite literally, face-to-face: the thing whose face is turned toward yours.

That is why it means opposite as well as in front of. English keeps those apart; Marathi does not need to, because a face has only one direction.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- samor — in front of
- gharāsamor, then gharājavaḷ — a side, then a distance
- which body part is inside this word — मुख, the formal tond

Before you move on

What two pieces is समोर built from? (सम् together and मुख face.)
Why does one word cover both in front of and opposite? (A face points one way; both meanings are that.)
Sources: Wiktionary: समोर.

43.3 लांब (lāmb) — far, and long

जवळ answers near. Nothing yet answers the other half of the question.

You'll want to know: लांब

लांब — lāmb — far; long

माझं घर लांब आहे. — mājhaṁ ghar lāmb āhe. — my house is far away.

लांब is जवळ's opposite and does not behave like it. जवळ is a postposition and wants a noun bent in front of it; लांब is an ordinary word that can simply stand in the sentence, which is why the example above needs no oblique stem at all.

The second meaning is the one to hold onto, because it explains the first. Sanskrit लम्ब (lamba) means "hanging down, extended" — so लांब is long before it is far, and far is only long applied to a distance. A Marathi speaker uses the one word for a long rope and a distant town without feeling any jump.

Pair the two and you can answer a real question:

> जवळ, की लांब? — javaḷ, kī lāmb? — near, or far?

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- lāmb — far, and long
- mājhaṁ ghar lāmb āhe
- javaḷ, kī lāmb? — and answer it about where you live

Before you move on

Which of जवळ and लांब needs the oblique stem? (जवळ — it is a postposition; लांब is not.) What does लांब mean before it means far? (Long.)
Sources: Wiktionary: लांब.

43.4 Give somebody a direction

> Three words landed in this chapter and only two of them are postpositions. Name all three, then say which one is the odd one out and why.

Your turn

- Say it: ghar kuṭhe āhe? — then answer puṇyājavaḷ
- Say it: khoolīsamor — in front of the room
- Say it: lāmb — and notice you added no ending to anything
- Recall: ask kadhī? and kitī? about the same house

Before you move on

You can now answer कुठे? five ways without naming a street. Which of this chapter's three words is not a postposition? (लांब.)

Right and Left

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the right and left sides with an adjective that agrees with its noun, and I can run every place word in the book off one bent stem.
> Complete MR-R44-directions and bend ghar once, then run madhye, var, khālī, javaḷ and samor off that single stem before adding a side with ujvā or ḍāvā.

44.1 उजवा (ujvā) — right

A direction needs a side, and in front of is only one of them.

- Recall: say lāmb, then samor, and put a room in front of a house

You'll want to know: उजवा

उजवा — ujvā — right (the side)

उजवा डोळा — ujvā ḍoḷā — the right eye

उजवा is an adjective, so it comes BEFORE its noun and it agrees with it: उजवा with a masculine noun, उजवी with a feminine, उजवं with a neuter. You have seen that three-way ending before, on माझा / माझी / माझं, and it is the same three endings doing the same job.

Its history is a good one to keep. The Sanskrit word ṛju meant "straight, upright," and the right hand was the straight one — the hand that does the proper thing. The very same idea sits inside Latin rectus and therefore inside English right, which is both a side and a correctness. Two languages made the same joke independently, out of the same root.

To send somebody rightwards you add the -कडे you will meet later, giving उजवीकडे. For now, the side itself is enough.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ujvā — right
- ujvā ḍoḷā — the right eye
- ujvī khoolī — and hear the ending follow the noun

Before you move on

Where does उजवा stand relative to its noun? (Before it.) What did its Sanskrit ancestor mean? (Straight — the same idea as English right.)
Sources: Wiktionary: उजवा.

44.2 डावा (ḍāvā) — left

One side is not a pair. Say उजवा once and then take the other hand.

You'll want to know: डावा

डावा — ḍāvā — left (the side)

Everything you learned one lesson ago transfers whole: डावा is an adjective, it stands before its noun, and it agrees — डावा, डावी, डावं. Learning a pair of opposites together is cheaper than learning two words, because the second one costs only its sound.

It opens with ड, the retroflex d, so the tongue curls back the way it does in डोळा. Keep it apart from the dental द of दूध: the two sound close to an English ear and Marathi treats them as different letters entirely.

Now you can take somebody through a door: उजवा or डावा, then a landmark with समोर or जवळ, and the direction is complete.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

डावा goes back to ḍāva-*, "lefthand", which CDIAL calls non-Aryan, from Dravidian after A. Master (CDIAL 5539); DEDR compares Kannada eḍa, "left" (DEDR 449).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ḍāvā — left, with the tongue curled on the ड
- ḍāvā kān, then ujvā kān
- ḍāvī khoolī — and hear the feminine ending

Before you move on

Which letter does डावा start with, and which taught word shares it? (ड, as in डोळा.) How much of उजवा's grammar did डावा need you to learn again? (None of it.)
Sources: Wiktionary: डावा.

44.3 Say where something is, five ways, from one stem

Four chapters ago the only answer you had to कुठे? was a pointed finger. Name every answer you have now.

Your turn

- Say it: gharā- once, then run madhye · var · khālī · javaḷ · samor
- Say it: lāmb — and notice it took no stem
- Say it: ujvā ḍoḷā, ḍāvā kān — the two sides, before their nouns
- Recall: answer kuṭhe? with ithe, then tithe
- Write it: तिथे once, from memory

Before you move on

What do five of this tranche's words demand of the noun in front of them, and which two do not? (The oblique stem; लांब, उजवा and डावा are not postpositions.) Then stop.

Chapter 45

With Whom, and With What

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say who I am with, who I am speaking to and what I am doing something with, choosing between three endings English collapses into one, and I can put a pronoun in front of any of them.
> Complete MR-R45-with and put all three endings on mitra, saying for each one whether it takes a companion, a partner in the act, or a tool.

45.1 बरोबर (barobar) — with

You can say where a thing is. You cannot yet say who is there with you — the book has taught मित्र since chapter eighteen with no way to attach him to anything.

- Recall: say ḍāvā, then ujvā, then lāmb

You'll want to know: बरोबर

बरोबर — barobar — with, together with

मी मित्राबरोबर जातो. — mī mitrābarobar jāto. — I go with my friend.

Another postposition, and the same oblique stem you have been bending for four chapters: मित्र → मित्रा-, then बरोबर. Nothing new about the noun.

The word has a second life you should meet now, because you will hear it far more often than the first. Said alone, बरोबर means that's right — agreement, confirmation, correct. It is built on the same base as बरं, the fine, good of chapter four: बरोबर is good-alongside, and a thing that lines up alongside another is both with it and right.

> बरोबर! — barobar! — that's right!

So one word gives you a way to travel with somebody and a way to agree with them.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बरोबर (barobar) is a loan, usually traced to Persian barābar, "equal, level". Marathi uses it for "with" and, said alone, for "that's right".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- barobar — with
- mī mitrābarobar jāto
- barobar! — on its own, meaning that's right
- mitra tithe āhe — and then put yourself beside him

Before you move on

What does बरोबर mean when it stands alone? (That's right.) What does मित्र become in front of it? (मित्रा-.)
Sources: Wiktionary: बरोबर.

45.2 माझ्याबरोबर (mājhyābarobar) — a pronoun bends too

With my friend works. Try with me and you will find you cannot say it: मी बरोबर is not Marathi.

Grammar Lens: the pronoun goes through its possessive first

A noun takes an oblique stem before a postposition. A pronoun does too, and its oblique stem is built on the possessive you already know rather than on the subject form:

मी → माझ्या- → माझ्याबरोबर — with me

तू → तुझ्या- → तुझ्याबरोबर — with you

तुम्ही → तुमच्या- → तुमच्याबरोबर — with you (respectful)

Say the middle form of each line aloud. Each one is माझं / तुझं / तुमचं with its ending changed to -या, which is exactly what a noun in -ए did back in chapter forty-one. The machinery is the same; only the starting form is different, and the starting form is the possessive. That is the rule worth holding, because it saves you from guessing every time: to put a pronoun in front of a postposition, take its possessive and bend that.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

माझ्या- is the oblique of माझा, on the first-person base ma- (CDIAL 9691). बरोबर is usually traced to Persian barābar, "equal, level".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mājhyābarobar — with me
- tumchyābarobar — with you, respectfully
- which form each one started from — माझं, तुमचं

Before you move on

Which form of a pronoun does the oblique start from? (The possessive.) So what is with you, said to a stranger? (तुमच्याबरोबर.)

45.3 -शी (-śī) — with, to

बरोबर puts two people side by side. It does not work when the second person is the one you are TALKING to.

You'll want to know: -शी

-शी — -śī — with, to

मी मित्राशी बोलतो. — mī mitrāśī bolto. — I speak to my friend.

-शी is glued straight onto the oblique stem with no space, which is the first difference from बरोबर. The second is the job. बरोबर is alongside — two people going somewhere together. -शी is engaged with — the partner a verb reaches toward.

That is why बोलणे takes it. English says speak TO; Marathi says मित्राशी, and the choice is not free: मित्राबरोबर बोलतो would mean you and your friend were both speaking, side by side, to somebody else.

Keep the pair as a contrast rather than as two words:

मित्राबरोबर — alongside my friend.

मित्राशी — engaged with my friend.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

-शी (-śī) is inherited. CDIAL lists it, as Marathi śīṁ, "with", under Sanskrit sama, "equal, alike", which already meant "together with" in the Brahmanas. CDIAL calls Bloch's derivation from sahitam wrong (CDIAL 13173).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mitrāśī — with, to my friend
- mī mitrāśī bolto
- the two side by side — mitrābarobar, mitrāśī

Before you move on

Which of the two does बोलणे take, and why? (-शी — the person is engaged with, not merely alongside.) Which one is written with no space? (-शी.)
Sources: Wiktionary: शी.

45.4 -ने (-ne) — by, with (an instrument)

Two ways of being with somebody, and still no way of saying what you did it with.

You'll want to know: -ने

-ने — -ne — by, with (an instrument)

मी डोळ्याने पाहतो. — mī ḍoḷyāne pāhto. — I see with my eye.

English overloads one word: with my friend, with my eye. Marathi refuses to. A companion takes बरोबर or -शी; a tool takes -ने, and the two sets never swap. Ask yourself which one the thing is — a person you are with, or a thing you are using — and the ending picks itself.

-ने glues to the oblique stem like everything else in this chapter, and a pronoun in front of it bends the same way: माझ्याने, by me.

One thing to file away rather than learn now. This same -ने has a second and much larger job in Marathi: it also marks the SUBJECT of a past transitive verb, which is a rule no European language has. That is a later chapter. For now, note only that the ending you have just met is one you will meet again wearing a different hat.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

-ने is usually traced to the Sanskrit instrumental ending -ena, "by, with"; CDIAL has no entry for it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ḍoḷyāne — with the eye

- mī ḍoḷyāne pāhto
- mājhyāne — by me, with the pronoun bent
- the three endings of this chapter and what each takes — barobar, -śī, -ne

Before you move on

Which of this chapter's three endings takes a TOOL rather than a person? (-ने.) What other job does it have, waiting in a later chapter? (Marking the subject of a past transitive verb.) Sources: Wiktionary: ने.

45.5 Ask one question and the ending picks itself

English says with three times and means three things. Name the three Marathi endings that keep them apart.

Your turn

- Say it: mitrābarobar — alongside
- Say it: mitrāśī — engaged with
- Say it: ḍoḷyāne — by means of, which no person takes
- Say it: mājhyābarobar — and notice the pronoun bent from its possessive
- Recall: ask koṇ tumchyābarobar āhe? — who is with you?

Before you move on

One question sorts all three: is this a companion, a partner in the act, or a tool? Which ending does the tool take? (-ने.) Which form of a pronoun feeds all three? (The possessive, bent to -या.)

Chapter 46

Where You Came From

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say where I come from and ask somebody else, and I can start a stretch of time as well as a journey.
> Complete MR-R46-from and run the interview's second exchange both ways – ask kuṭhūn yetā?, answer puṇyāhūn – then start a stretch of time with udyāpāsūn.

46.1 -हून (-hūn) — from

Chapter twenty-three taught शहर as a line on a form. A form wants the name of a city. An interviewer wants something else.

- Recall: say -ne, then -śī, and name which one takes a person

You'll want to know: -हून

-हून — -hūn — from

मी पुण्याहून येतो. — mī puṇyāhūn yeto. — I come from Pune.

That sentence is the second thing said in almost every spoken A1 interview, and until this lesson the book could write शहर: पुणे on a form and not say it out loud. A form field is a label; -हून is an answer.

The stem is the one you already bend: पुणे → पुण्या-, then -हून, no space. And because इथे and तिथे are place words too, they take it and give you two more:

इथून — ithūn — from here

तिथून — tithūn — from there

Notice what happened to the shape: इथे ends in -ए and the ending replaced it, exactly as it does on पुणे. The rule you learned in chapter forty-one is doing all the work.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of the ending -हून (-hūn) is not settled. CDIAL has no entry for it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mī puṇyāhūn yeto — I come from Pune
- ithūn, then tithūn — from here, from there
- gharāhūn — from the house

Before you move on

What can you now say that a form field could not? (I come from Pune — an answer, not a label.) What does इथे become with it? (इथून.)
Sources: Wiktionary: हून.

46.2 पासून (pāsūn) — from, since

-हून says where a journey began. It does not say when one did.

You'll want to know: पासून

पासून — pāsūn — from, since

उद्यापासून — udyāpāsūn — from tomorrow onwards

पासून is written joined, like -हून, and takes the same oblique stem. What makes it worth its own lesson is that it works on time as well as place — Marathi uses one word where English splits from and since, and a Marathi speaker feels no difference between the start of a road and the start of a week.

Against -हून the contrast is direction of attention. -हून looks back at the place you LEFT; पासून looks forward from a starting point that is still running:

> उद्यापासून — starting tomorrow, and continuing.

That is why a notice about opening hours uses पासून and a traveller uses -हून.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पासून (pāsūn) is built on Marathi pās, "near", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit pārśva, "side", in its adverb pārśve, "near" (CDIAL 8118).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- udyāpāsūn — from tomorrow
- gharāpāsūn — from the house onwards
- the pair — puṇyāhūn, udyāpāsūn

Before you move on

Which of the two also does TIME? (पासून.) Which one looks back at where you left? (-हून.)
Sources: Wiktionary: पासून.

46.3 कुठून (kuṭhūn) — from where

You can answer I come from Pune. Nobody has asked you yet.

You'll want to know: कुठून

> कुठून — kuṭhūn — from where
> तुम्ही कुठून येता? — tumhī kuṭhūn yetā? — where are you from?

Nothing here is new except the answer to a question you can now finally ask. कुठून is कुठे with -हून on it, and the -ए dropped for -ऊ in exactly the way इथे became इथून two lessons ago. A place word, an ablative, and the same rule.

Its position obeys chapter thirty-eight: an asking word stands in the answer's own slot, so कुठून sits precisely where पुण्याहून would sit and nothing moves to the front.

> तुम्ही पुण्याहून येता. → तुम्ही कुठून येता?

Now put the whole family beside each other, because they are one shape with three stems and you have owned two of them since chapter forty:

> कुठून from where · इथून from here · तिथून from there.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कुठून is कुठे, usually traced to Sanskrit kutra, "where", plus -हून, "from", whose origin is not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kuṭhūn — from where
- tumhī kuṭhūn yetā? — and answer it about yourself
- the three together — kuṭhūn, ithūn, tithūn

Before you move on

What two pieces is कुठून made of? (कुठे plus -हून.) Where in the sentence does it stand? (Where the answer would stand.)

46.4 Answer the second interview question

Say the question and its answer as one exchange, both halves aloud.

Your turn

- Say it: tumhī kuṭhūn yetā? — then answer it
- Say it: udyāpāsūn — and hear that this one is a time
- Say it: mitrāśī — and notice this chapter did not touch it
- Recall: say देणे and its root — deṇe, from the ancient deh₃-, "to give"

Before you move on

Which form field can you now turn into a spoken answer? (शहर — मी पुण्याहून येतो.) Which of the two endings also does time? (पासून.)

Chapter 47

Who You Give It To

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can mark a person I act on with -lā and leave a thing bare, and I can say that I give or bring something to somebody.
> Complete MR-R47-give-it-to and say three sentences whose -lā does three different jobs: the experiencer who likes, the person seen, and the person given to.

47.1 मित्राला (mitrālā) — the object that is a person

मला has been in this book since chapter sixteen, always in front of liking or knowing. The -ला inside it has a second job you have never been shown.

- Recall: say kuṭhūn, then udyāpāsūn

Grammar Lens: a person you act on takes -ला; a thing does not मी मित्राला पाहतो. — mī mitrālā pāhto. — I see my friend.

मी पाणी पाहतो. — mī pāṇī pāhto. — I see water.

Compare those two. Same verb, same position, and the marker appears on one and not the other. Marathi puts -ला on a direct object when the object is animate — a person, and usually an animal — and leaves it bare when the object is a thing.

If you know Spanish this is the personal a under another name, and it behaves the same way: it is not politeness and not emphasis, it is a rule, and dropping it on a person is a mistake rather than a shade. The stem is the usual one: मित्र → मित्रा-, then -ला. And now the old मला makes sense: it is मी through its oblique, with this same -ला on the end.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मित्र is Sanskrit mitra, "friend" (CDIAL 10124). The ending -ला has no CDIAL entry, and its history is not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mī mitrālā pāhto — the friend is marked
- mī pāṇī pāhto — water is not
- malā — and hear the same -ला you have used since chapter sixteen

Before you move on

Which objects take -ला? (Animate ones — people and animals.) Is leaving it off a person a shade of meaning or a mistake? (A mistake.)

47.2 मित्राला देतो (mitrālā deto) — giving it to somebody

मित्राला पाहतो marks the person as the one being seen. The same ending marks a different role entirely, and the verb decides which.

Grammar Lens: the thing stays bare, the person takes -ला

मी मित्राला पाणी देतो. — mī mitrālā pāṇī deto. — I give water to my friend.

Three pieces, and each one is somewhere you can predict. The giver is first and bare. The receiver takes -ला. The thing given stays bare because it is not animate. The verb, as always, is last.

English has two ways to say this — give my friend water, give water to my friend — and has to choose an order. Marathi has one marker and does not care very much about the order of the two objects, because -ला already says which is which. That is the payoff of marking rather than positioning.
आणणे works the same way: मी मित्राला पाणी आणतो, I bring water to my friend. Any verb of handing over takes this frame, and you already have three of them.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मित्र is Sanskrit mitra, "friend" (CDIAL 10124); देतो comes from Sanskrit dadāti, "gives" (CDIAL 6141). The ending -ला has no CDIAL entry.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mī mitrālā pāṇī deto
- the same sentence with āṇto — I bring it
- which of the two objects carries the marker — the person

Before you move on

In I give water to my friend, which noun takes -ला? (The friend.)
Why does Marathi not need to fix the order of the two objects?
(The marker already says which is which.)

47.3 One ending, three jobs

-ला has now appeared in three different sentences doing three different things. Name them before you read on.

Your turn

- Say it: malā chahā āvaḍto — the experiencer carries it
- Say it: mī mitrālā pāhto — the person acted on carries it

- Say it: mī mitrālā pāṇī deto — the receiver carries it
- Recall: say ठेवणे and put something under the room — khoolīkhālī

Before you move on

What decides which of the three jobs -ला is doing in a given sentence? (The verb.) Which of the two objects in I give my friend water carries it? (The friend.)

Chapter 48

Toward, and What You Have

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can send somebody left or right, go to somebody's place, and say what I have and do not have in a language that has no verb for having.
> Complete MR-R48-have-and-toward and give a direction, state a possession and hand something over – ujvīkaḍe jā, mājhyākaḍe pāṇī āhe, mī mitrālā pāṇī deto.

48.1 -कडे (-kaḍe) — toward, at somebody's side

Chapter forty-four gave you उजवा and डावा, and a warning: naming a side is not the same as sending somebody toward it.

- Recall: say the two sides, then mitrālā pāṇī deto

You'll want to know: -कडे

-कडे — -kaḍe — toward; at (somebody's) side

उजवीकडे जा. — ujvīkaḍe jā. — go to the right.

That is a direction rather than a description, and it is the reason chapter forty-four ended where it did. -कडे goes on the feminine form — उजवी, डावी — because the noun it agrees with, बाजू (side), is feminine even when nobody says it.

It works on people too: मित्राकडे is toward my friend, or at my friend's place. Marathi does not distinguish going to somebody and going to where they are; the side of a person and their house are the same idea.

मी मित्राकडे जातो. — mī mitrākaḍe jāto. — I go to my friend's.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

-कडे (-kaḍe) matches Marathi kaḍ, "side, waist", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit kaṭi, "hip". CDIAL takes that word as rather from Dravidian, comparing Kannada kaḍe, "side, end" (CDIAL 2639), and DEDR compares Old Marathi kaḍe, "edge, side" (DEDR 1109).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ujvīkaḍe, ḍāvīkaḍe — right, left
- mī mitrākaḍe jāto
- kuṭhūn and then kuṭhe — where from, and where to

Before you move on

Which form of उजवा does -कडे attach to, and why? (उजवी — the unspoken noun side is feminine.) What does मित्राकडे mean besides toward my friend? (At my friend's place.)
Sources: Wiktionary: कडे.

48.2 माझ्याकडे ... आहे — the sentence Marathi uses instead of "have"

Look for a Marathi verb meaning to have and you will not find one. Forty-eight chapters in, this book has never taught it, and the reason is that it does not exist.

Grammar Lens: possession is a place, not an action

माझ्याकडे पाणी आहे. — mājhyākaḍe pāṇī āhe. — I have water.

Word for word that is at-my-side water is. Marathi says having by saying where the thing is, and the whole construction is made of pieces you already own: a pronoun through its possessive oblique, the -कडे of one lesson ago, and आहे.
Two things follow, and both are worth noticing now rather than discovering later.
The thing possessed is the SUBJECT, so आहे agrees with it and not with you. And to deny it you negate that same verb, exactly as chapter thirty-two taught:

> माझ्याकडे पाणी नाही. — mājhyākaḍe pāṇī nāhī. — I don't have water.

Swap the person and nothing else changes: मित्राकडे पाणी आहे, my friend has water.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

माझ्या- goes back to the first-person base ma- (CDIAL 9691); -कडे matches kaḍ, "side", which CDIAL takes as rather Dravidian (CDIAL 2639). आहे CDIAL lists under asti, "is", though Bloch disagrees (CDIAL 977).

Your turn

- Say it: mājhyākaḍe pāṇī āhe
- Say it: mājhyākaḍe pāṇī nāhī
- Say it: mitrākaḍe pāṇī āhe
- Recall: say बसणे and then invite somebody to sit — khālī basā

Before you move on

Which word in माझ्याकडे पाणी आहे is the subject? (पाणी — the thing, not the owner.) How do you say you do NOT have it? (Negate आहे: नाही.)

48.3 Send somebody, and say what you have

-कडे did three jobs in two lessons. Name them.

Your turn

- Say it: ujvīkaḍe, ḍāvīkaḍe — a direction
- Say it: mitrākaḍe — at his place
- Say it: mājhyākaḍe pāṇī āhe — the whole of have
- Say it: answer kuṭhe? with gharāsamor and gharājavaḷ
- Recall: say वाटणे and how it puts the feeler in the dative

Before you move on

Marathi has no verb to have. What does it use instead? (-कडे plus आहे — the thing is at your side.) Which ending marks the person a thing is given TO? (-ला.) Then stop.

Chapter 49

Big, and How an Adjective Agrees

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can call a thing big in all three genders, and I can say where a Marathi adjective stands both when it labels a noun and when it is the claim of the sentence.
> Complete MR-R49-big and describe a thing three ways – label a big room, claim that your house is big, and say that you have a big house – with one adjective doing all three.

49.1 मोठा (moṭhā) — big

Forty-eight chapters in you can name a house, put a room in it, say who it belongs to and how to get there. You cannot say one thing about what it is like.

- Recall: say mājhyākaḍe ghar āhe, then mī mitrālā pāṇī deto

You'll want to know: मोठा

मोठा — moṭhā — big, large

मोठं घर — moṭhaṁ ghar — a big house

Start with the ending. The headword is मोठा, and the example says मोठं. Nothing is wrong: the adjective took the shape of the noun it sits in front of, and घर is neuter. The next lesson is about nothing but that.

मोठा covers size in every direction — a big house, a big city, a big brother. Where लांब measured a distance, this measures a thing.

One warning worth having early. If you know Hindi you will meet मोटा (moṭā) there and reach for it: it means fat, not big, and the two words are a genuine trap between the languages. Marathi's मोठा is the neutral, everyday word; nothing about it is about a body.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of मोठा is not settled. CDIAL lists only a Marathi moṭā, "big, fat", in its "defective" word group muṭṭa* (CDIAL 10187).

Your turn

- Say it: moṭhā — big
- Say it: moṭhaṁ ghar — a big house
- Recall: say झोपणे and then ask for a big room to do it in

Before you move on

Which word measures a distance, and which measures a thing? (लांब; मोठा.) What does the Hindi look-alike मोटा mean? (Fat — not the same word.)
Sources: Wiktionary: मोठा.

49.2 मोठा · मोठी · मोठं — three endings, one rule

माझा · माझी · माझं from chapter nine. उजवा · उजवी · उजवं from chapter forty-four. The same three endings, twice, and never named.

Grammar Lens: the adjective takes the gender of its noun

मोठा moṭhā — with a masculine noun

मोठी moṭhī — with a feminine noun

मोठं moṭhaṁ — with a neuter noun

Marathi has three genders where most European languages have two, and an adjective that ends in -आ in its dictionary form changes to match all three. You have owned the machinery since chapter nine; what you did not have was permission to use it on a new word.

मोठा मित्र — a big friend (masculine)

मोठी खोली — a big room (feminine)

मोठं घर — a big house (neuter)

Say those three aloud and hear that only the last syllable moves. That is what makes the rule cheap: learn one adjective and you have learned three forms, and every -आ adjective after this costs you nothing extra.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of मोठा is not settled. CDIAL has no entry for it; it lists only a Marathi moṭā, "big, fat", beside Hindi moṭā, under muṭṭa* (CDIAL 10187).

Your turn

- Say it: moṭhā mitra, moṭhī khoolī, moṭhaṁ ghar
- Say it: the same three endings on ujvā — and hear that nothing new happened
- Recall: say चालणे, and the chālel that means that will do

Before you move on

Which part of the adjective moves? (Only the last syllable.) How many genders does it have to match? (Three.)

49.3 मोठं ... आहे — where the adjective stands

Every adjective this book has shown you — माझा, उजवा, डावा, मोठा — has stood in the same place, and nobody has said so.

Grammar Lens: in front, always

A Marathi adjective goes before its noun and never after it.

> मोठं घर — a big house. Never घर मोठं.

That is worth saying out loud because it is the opposite of what a Romance language does: Spanish writes una casa grande and French une maison grande, noun first. English happens to agree with Marathi here, which makes this one of the few places an English speaker can trust the order they already have.
The second position is different, and you have used it since chapter ten without noticing. When the adjective is the whole point of the sentence rather than a label on a noun, it goes at the END, in front of आहे:

> माझं घर मोठं आहे. — mājhaṁ ghar moṭhaṁ āhe. — my house is big.

Two positions, two jobs: in front describes a thing you are naming, at the end before आहे makes the description the claim. The ending agrees in both.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of मोठा is not settled. आहे CDIAL lists under asti, "is", though Bloch disagrees (CDIAL 977).

Your turn

- Say it: moṭhaṁ ghar — the label
- Say it: mājhaṁ ghar moṭhaṁ āhe — the claim
- Recall: say mājhyākaḍe moṭhaṁ ghar āhe — I have a big house

Before you move on

Where does an adjective stand when it labels a noun? (Before it.) And when it is the claim of the sentence? (At the end, before आहे.)

49.4 Describe a thing for the first time

One adjective arrived in this chapter and two rules came with it. Name the rules before you use the word.

Your turn

- Say it: moṭhī khoolī — and hear the feminine ending
- Say it: mājhaṁ ghar moṭhaṁ āhe
- Say it: ḍāvī khoolī — the left room, with the same machinery
- Recall: say सांगणे and tell somebody your house is big

Before you move on

How many endings does an -आ adjective have, and how many positions? (Three endings; two positions.) Then stop.

Chapter 50

Small, and the Words That Never Change

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can call a thing small or beautiful, and I can tell from an adjective's last letter whether it will take an ending at all.
> Complete MR-R50-small and put all three adjectives on khoolī, naming which one changed and why.

50.1 लहान (lahān) — small

Last chapter gave you मोठा and the two rules it obeys. This word is its opposite and it breaks one of them.

- Recall: say moṭhaṁ ghar, then mājhaṁ ghar moṭhaṁ āhe

You'll want to know: लहान

लहान — lahān — small, little; young

लहान घर · लहान खोली · लहान मित्र — lahān ghar · lahān khoolī · lahān mitra

Three genders, one form. लहान does not end in -आ, so it has nothing to change, and it stays exactly as it is in front of any noun at all. Compare it with मोठा, which moved three ways one lesson ago, and the contrast tells you which kind of adjective you are holding.

It also does the work English splits between small and young: लहान भाऊ is a younger brother, not a short one. Marathi treats age and size as the same scale for people.

Its history is a good one. CDIAL traces लहान not to लघु (laghu, "light") but to Sanskrit ślakṣṇa, "smooth, soft, tender", which the old word-lists also gloss "thin, small" (CDIAL 12732). Two thousand years wore it down to लहान.

Your turn

- Say it: lahān ghar, lahān khoolī, lahān mitra — nothing moved
- Say it: moṭhaṁ ghar, moṭhī khoolī — and hear that something did
- Recall: say म्हणणे and report that your room is small

Before you move on

How many forms does लहान have? (One.) What does लहान भाऊ mean? (A younger brother.)
Sources: Wiktionary: लहान.

50.2 The adjectives that never change

Two adjectives, two behaviours. That is not an accident about those two words.

Grammar Lens: only the -आ adjectives agree

Marathi's adjectives fall into two classes, and you can tell which class a word is in by looking at its last letter.
An adjective ending in -आ agrees: मोठा · मोठी · मोठं. An adjective ending in anything else does not agree at all, in any gender, ever: लहान is लहान in front of every noun in the language.
That second class is large, and most of it is words Marathi borrowed — from Sanskrit, from Persian, from Arabic. A borrowed word arrived without a Marathi ending to change, and it never grew one.
This is the mistake to watch for in yourself. Having met मोठा first, the temptation is to say लहानी खोली by analogy. It is wrong, and it is wrong in a way a listener notices immediately, because no Marathi speaker has ever heard that form. Check the last letter before you reach for an ending.

Your turn

- Say it: lahān khoolī — and add nothing
- Say it: moṭhī khoolī — and hear where the ending was earned
- Recall: say शिकणे and that you are learning with a friend

Before you move on

What tells you whether an adjective will agree? (Its last letter — only -आ agrees.) Where do most of the non-agreeing ones come from? (Other languages — Sanskrit, Persian, Arabic.)

50.3 सुंदर (sundar) — beautiful

You have one word that never agrees. Here is a second, and knowing the class means you already know how it behaves before you meet it.

You'll want to know: सुंदर

सुंदर — sundar — beautiful, lovely

सुंदर घर · सुंदर खोली — sundar ghar · sundar khoolī — a beautiful house · a beautiful room

No ending, in either gender, because सुंदर does not end in -आ. You could predict that from the last letter one lesson before meeting the word, which is the whole return on having a class rather than a list.

The word came into Marathi from Sanskrit सुन्दर (sundara) unchanged, and that is exactly why it does not bend: it arrived already finished. Sanskrit is often said to have built it from सु- (su-), "good, well", though CDIAL asks whether सुन्दर is itself a Middle Indo-Aryan form of sūnara, "excellent" (CDIAL 13474).

It is a wide word in use. Marathi says सुंदर of a person, a room, a song and a day, where English would reach for beautiful, lovely, nice and fine in turn.

Your turn

- Say it: sundar khoolī, sundar ghar
- Say it: mājhyākaḍe sundar ghar āhe — I have a beautiful house
- Recall: say मिळणे and how it puts you in the dative

Before you move on

Why does सुंदर not agree? (It does not end in -आ; it arrived from Sanskrit already finished.) What does the सु- in it mean? (Good, well.)
Sources: Wiktionary: सुंदर.

50.4 The last letter decides

Three adjectives are now yours. Sort them into two classes before you say anything with them.

Your turn

- Say it: moṭhī khoolī, lahān khoolī, sundar khoolī
- Say it: which of the three moved, and why — मोठा, because it ends in -आ
- Say it: mājhyākaḍe lahān sundar ghar āhe
- Recall: say mitrāśī and tell your friend the room is beautiful

Before you move on

What is the one test that sorts every Marathi adjective into its class? (Does it end in -आ?) Where do all three of them stand? (Before the noun.)

Chapter 51

Good, Bad, Clever

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can judge a thing good or bad, call a person clever, and deny any of those judgements.
> Complete MR-R51-good-and-bad and make three judgements plus a denial – the tea is good, the water is bad, my friend is clever, the water is not good.

51.1 चांगला (chāṅglā) — good

बरं has been in this book since chapter four and it can only say that a STATE is fine — मी बरा आहे. It cannot call a thing good.

- Recall: say sundar khoolī, then name the class सुंदर belongs to

You'll want to know: चांगला

चांगला — chāṅglā — good

चांगला चहा · चांगली खोली · चांगलं घर — chāṅglā chahā · chāṅglī khoolī · chāṅglaṁ ghar

It ends in -आ, so it agrees, and you already know all three forms without being told them. That is the second time the rule has paid for itself.

Keep it apart from बरं. बरं answers how are you and closes a turn — fine, all right, okay. चांगला is a judgement about a thing: this tea is good, that room is good, he is a good friend. English blurs the two under good and Marathi does not.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चांगला (chāṅglā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from caṅga, "of good understanding; handsome" (CDIAL 4564). CDIAL lists both Marathi cāṅg and cāṅglā, "good".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chāṅglā chahā — good tea
- chāṅglī khoolī, chāṅglaṁ ghar
- baraṁ and chāṅglā back to back, and name what each is for

Before you move on

Which of बरं and चांगला judges a THING? (चांगला.) Which class does चांगला belong to? (The agreeing one — it ends in -आ.)
Sources: Wiktionary: चांगला.

51.2 खराब (kharāb) — bad, spoiled

> Half a judgement is not a judgement. You can say a thing is good and not that it is not.

You'll want to know: खराब

खराब — kharāb — bad, spoiled, ruined

खराब पाणी — kharāb pāṇī — bad water

Its last letter tells you it will not agree, before you ever hear it used: खराब खोली, खराब घर, no ending anywhere. Three adjectives into the class now, and the test has not failed you once.

This one carries its history on its face. It is the Arabic kharāb, "ruined, in ruins," and it reached Marathi through Persian — the same road that brought मदत and हरकत, both of which this book has already taught. Centuries of Persian administration in the Deccan left several hundred such words in ordinary Marathi.

The original sense survives in the modern one. खराब is closer to spoiled than to evil: bad water, a bad road, a phone that has stopped working.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kharāb pāṇī — bad water
- pāṇī kharāb āhe, then pāṇī chāṅglaṁ nāhī
- which language it came from, and by which road — Arabic, through Persian

Before you move on

Does खराब agree? (No — it does not end in -आ.) Which two taught words came by the same road? (मदत and हरकत.)
Sources: Wiktionary: खराब.

51.3 हुशार (hushār) — clever

Everything you can describe so far is a thing. The A1 speaking paper asks you to describe a person for a minute.

You'll want to know: हुशार

हुशार — hushār — clever, sharp, quick-witted

माझा मित्र हुशार आहे. — mājhā mitra hushār āhe. — my friend is clever.

Another one that does not agree, and by now you saw that coming from the last letter. It is the sixth adjective this book has taught and the fourth that does not agree; the invariable class is already twice the size of the other one, which is worth knowing so the endings stop feeling like the default.

हुशार is the Persian hushyār, "alert, wide awake," built on hush, "consciousness, wits." Marathi kept the alertness inside the cleverness: a हुशार person is quick rather than merely learned, and it is what a teacher says about a child who catches on fast.

It is a compliment you can pay out loud without awkwardness, which is not true of every word in this area, and it is exactly the kind of thing the speaking paper's one-minute description wants.

Your turn

- Say it: hushār — clever
- Say it: mājhā mitra hushār āhe
- Recall: say puṇyāhūn and that your clever friend comes from Pune

Before you move on

What does the Persian hush inside it mean? (Wits, consciousness — so clever is awake.) Does it agree? (No.) Sources: Wiktionary: हुशार.

51.4 Say what you think of something

Three more adjectives. Two of them cannot change and one can. Say which is which before you use any of them.

Your turn

- Say it: chahā chāṅglā āhe — and hear the masculine ending
- Say it: pāṇī kharāb āhe — and hear that nothing was added
- Say it: mājhā mitra hushār āhe
- Say it: sundar, lahān, kharāb, hushār — the four that never move
- Recall: say udyāpāsūn and promise something from tomorrow

Before you move on

Of the six adjectives you now own, how many agree? (Two — मोठा and चांगला.) What do the other four have in common? (None of them ends in -आ.)

Chapter 52

Easy, Hard, Tall

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a thing is easy or difficult and a person is tall, and I can sort every adjective I own into the two classes by looking at its last letter.
> Complete MR-R52-easy-hard-tall and describe a person in three sentences – tall, clever, a good friend – which is the shape the A1 speaking paper's one-minute description asks for.

52.1 सोपा (sopā) — easy

Six adjectives in, and only two of them agree. Here is a third that does, so the ending muscle does not go cold.

- Recall: say hushār, then kharāb, and name the class they share

You'll want to know: सोपा

सोपा — sopā — easy, simple

सोपा · सोपी · सोपं — sopā · sopī · sopaṁ

It ends in -आ, so all three forms are yours already. The third adjective to behave this way and the first that costs nothing to conjugate, which is the point of having had the rule named in chapter forty-nine.

The sentence to keep is the one about the language itself:

मराठी सोपी आहे. — marāṭhī sopī āhe. — Marathi is easy.

मराठी is feminine, so the adjective ends in -ी. Say it out loud; you have earned it, and it is true more often than a beginner expects.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सोपा (sopā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from sukalpa, "easy to correct" (CDIAL 13446). It is built with su-, "well, easily". CDIAL prefers this source to a suvalpaka-*.

Your turn

- Say it: sopā · sopī · sopaṁ
- Say it: marāṭhī sopī āhe
- Recall: join two judgements with आणि — lahān āṇi sopī

Before you move on

What gender is मराठी, and what does सोपा become with it? (Feminine; सोपी.) Which class does सोपा belong to? (The agreeing one.)
Sources: Wiktionary: सोपा.

52.2 कठीण (kaṭhīṇ) — hard, difficult

सोपा without its opposite is an opinion nobody can disagree with.

You'll want to know: कठीण

कठीण — kaṭhīṇ — hard, difficult

मराठी कठीण नाही. — marāṭhī kaṭhīṇ nāhī. — Marathi is not difficult.

No ending, in any gender: the last letter is not -आ, so the class is settled before you look anything up. Its opposite सोपा agrees and it does not, which is a useful pair to hold precisely because the two halves behave differently.

Sanskrit कठिन (kaṭhina) meant hard in the physical sense — a hard stone, hard ground. Marathi kept the word and moved it almost entirely onto tasks: कठीण काम, hard work; कठीण भाषा, a hard language. For a hard OBJECT a Marathi speaker will normally reach for another word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kaṭhīṇ — hard, difficult
- marāṭhī kaṭhīṇ nāhī
- sopī kiṁvā kaṭhīṇ? — and hear only one of the two move

Before you move on

What did कठिन mean in Sanskrit? (Physically hard.) Does कठीण agree? (No.)
Sources: Wiktionary: कठीण.

52.3 उंच (uṁch) — tall, high

मोठा and लहान measure a thing in every direction at once. A person has one direction that matters more than the others.

You'll want to know: उंच

उंच — uṁch — tall, high

माझा मित्र उंच आहे. — mājhā mitra uṁch āhe. — my friend is tall.

Invariable, like most of what you have met: no -आ, no ending. It works on a person, a building and a hill without changing, and it is the natural partner of the वर you learned in chapter forty-two — what is उंच is what is high वर.

The pair to hold is उंच against मोठा. A मोठा मित्र is a big or an elder friend; an उंच मित्र is a tall one. English big blurs the two and Marathi keeps them apart, which matters the moment somebody asks you to describe a person for a minute.

Its ancestor is Sanskrit उच्च (ucca), "high, lofty" — the same syllable that sits inside words for height across the Indo-Aryan languages.

Your turn

- Say it: uṁch — tall
- Say it: mājhā mitra uṁch āhe
- Say it: uṁch and moṭhā back to back, and name the difference
- Recall: say mitrālā and describe the friend you can now see

Before you move on

Which word would you use for a tall friend, and which for a big one? (उंच; मोठा.) Does उंच agree? (No.)
Sources: Wiktionary: उंच.

52.4 Describe a person for the first time

Nine adjectives are now yours. Sort all nine into the two classes before you use any of them.

Your turn

- Say it: the three that agree — मोठा, चांगला, सोपा
- Say it: the ones that never do — लहान, सुंदर, खराब, हुशार, कठीण, उंच
- Say it: mājhā mitra uṁch āhe paṇ lahān nāhī
- Say it: chāṅglā mitra — with the adjective in front, where it belongs
- Recall: say mī mitrālā pāṇī deto and then judge the water

Before you move on

You can now describe a house, a room, a language and a person. Which single test decides whether an adjective takes an ending? (Does it end in -आ?) Then stop.

Chapter 53

Very, a Little, and Saying It Twice

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can turn any adjective I own up or down without learning a new one, and I can strengthen a word further by repeating it.
> Complete MR-R53-very and run one adjective through three strengths – jaraa uMch, khuup uMch, khuup khuup uMch – with the ending untouched every time.

53.1 खूप (khūp) — very, a lot

Nine adjectives, and every one of them is an on-or-off switch. You can say a house is big and not that it is very big.

- Recall: say umch, then kaṭhīṇ, and name the class they share

You'll want to know: खूप

खूप — khūp — very, a lot, much

खूप मोठं घर — khūp moṭhaṁ ghar — a very big house

खूप stands in front of the adjective, and the adjective goes on doing exactly what it did before: मोठा still agrees, सुंदर still does not. Nothing about the ending changes. One small word, and every adjective you own gains a second strength.

It works on a verb and a noun too, where English would need a lot or much:

खूप पाणी — a lot of water. खूप धन्यवाद — many thanks.

That last one is worth having by heart. खूप धन्यवाद is the ordinary warm thank you very much, and you have owned धन्यवाद since chapter two with no way to strengthen it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खूप (khūp) is usually traced to Persian khūb, "good, fine".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- khūp moṭhaṁ ghar
- khūp sundar khoolī — and hear that सुंदर still did not move
- khūp dhanyavād — thank you very much

Before you move on

Where does खूप stand? (In front of the adjective.) What does it do to the adjective's ending? (Nothing at all.)
Sources: Wiktionary: खूप.

53.2 जरा (jarā) — a little

खूप turns an adjective up. Nothing yet turns one down.

You'll want to know: जरा

जरा — jarā — a little, slightly, just a bit

जरा कठीण — jarā kaṭhīṇ — a little difficult

The same slot as खूप, the opposite direction, and again the adjective's ending is untouched. Between the two of them every adjective you own now has three settings.

जरा has a second use that matters more in a real conversation than the first. Put it in front of a request and the request becomes polite — not give, but give a little, which is how Marathi softens an instruction without adding a whole formula:

जरा पाणी द्या. — jarā pāṇī dyā. — a little water, please.

The word is shared with Hindi's zarā and with Urdu, and it does the same softening job in all three. It is the sort of word you will hear far more often than you read.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

जरा (jarā) is a loan, usually traced to Persian zarra, from Arabic dharra, "a tiny particle, a mote".

Your turn

- Say it: jarā kaṭhīṇ, then khūp kaṭhīṇ
- Say it: jarā pāṇī dyā — and hear the request soften
- Recall: say काळजी घ्या and add जरा in front of it

Before you move on

What does जरा do to a request? (Softens it — a little.) Which two words now share the slot in front of an adjective? (खूप and जरा.)
Sources: Wiktionary: जरा.

53.3 खूप खूप (khūp khūp) — say it twice

Two intensifiers, and one more setting still missing: the one above खूप.

Grammar Lens: repetition is a degree

Marathi strengthens a word by saying it twice. No new vocabulary, no ending, no extra word — the same word, twice.

खूप खूप धन्यवाद. — khūp khūp dhanyavād. — thank you very, very much.

That is the warm form, the one somebody uses when the thanks is real, and it is built out of two words you already own.
It works on an adjective as well as on खूप. मोठं मोठं is great big; लहान लहान is ever so small; जरा जरा is little by little. In each one the word is unchanged and only said again.

English does the same trick and pretends not to — a long, long way, many, many thanks — so this is a rule you can hear rather than one you have to memorise.
It is worth keeping because it is free. Any adjective you learn from here on arrives with its own intensifier already attached.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खूप is usually traced to Persian khūb, "good, fine".

Your turn

- Say it: khūp khūp dhanyavād
- Say it: jarā, khūp, khūp khūp — three settings, quietest first
- Recall: say mājhyākaḍe khūp pāṇī āhe, then double the khūp

Before you move on

How does Marathi make a word stronger without adding anything? (By saying it twice.) What is the warm form of thank you? (खूप खूप धन्यवाद.)

53.4 Turn the same adjective up and down

Three settings landed in this chapter and not one of them is an adjective. Name them, quietest first.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- jarā uṁch, khūp uṁch, khūp khūp uṁch
- the same three on chāṅglā — and hear that the ending still agrees
- khūp khūp dhanyavād

Before you move on

How many new adjectives did this chapter teach? (None — it taught three ways to change the nine you had.) What happens to an adjective's ending when you strengthen it? (Nothing.)

Chapter 54

A Little, Enough, Quite a Lot

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can measure out an amount of something on a four-step scale, stop somebody pouring, and exclaim how big or how beautiful a thing is.
> Complete MR-R54-how-much and run the amount scale, the degree scale and the exclamative in one pass – thoDaM paaNii dyaa, khuup paaNii aahe, kitii lahaan!

54.1 थोडा (thoḍā) — a little, some

जरा softens an adjective. It cannot measure out a quantity of something: jarā water is not Marathi.

- Recall: say jarā kaṭhīṇ, then double a word to strengthen it

You'll want to know: थोडा

थोडा — thoḍā — a little, some, a small amount of

थोडं पाणी — thoḍaṁ pāṇī — a little water

The ending is where the difference lives. थोडा ends in -आ, so it agrees: थोडा चहा (masculine), थोडं पाणी (neuter). जरा never changes. The two are close in meaning and behave in opposite ways, and the reason is that they are different parts of speech — थोडा measures a NOUN, जरा softens an adjective or a verb.

थोडा चहा — a little tea. जरा कठीण — slightly difficult.

Its ancestor is Sanskrit स्तोक (stoka), "a little, a drop," worn down through the Prakrits. Hindi's thoṛā is the same word by the same road.

Against खूप it is the other end of the same scale: खूप पाणी is a lot of water, थोडं पाणी is a little.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- thoḍaṁ pāṇī, thoḍā chahā — and hear the ending move
- jarā — and hear that it never would
- khūp pāṇī against thoḍaṁ pāṇī

Before you move on

Which of थोडा and जरा agrees, and why? (थोडा — it measures a noun and ends in -आ.) What Sanskrit word is it worn down from? (स्तोक, a drop.)
Sources: Wiktionary: थोडा.

54.2 पुरेसा (puresā) — enough

A little and a lot are both amounts. Neither one says the amount is right.

You'll want to know: पुरेसा

पुरेसा — puresā — enough, sufficient

पुरेसं पाणी — puresaṁ pāṇī — enough water

Another -आ word, so it agrees and you already have all three forms: पुरेसा चहा, पुरेसं पाणी.

Said on its own it closes a transaction. पुरे! is that's enough, and a Marathi host pouring tea will stop when you say it — which is a more useful thing to own than it sounds, because the alternative is नको, and नको refuses the whole offer rather than the next spoonful.

That पुरे is the word underneath पुरेसा, and it comes from the Sanskrit root पूर् (pūr-), "to fill." Enough is filled. The same ancient root gives Latin plenus and English full, so the idea has travelled a long way without changing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- puresaṁ pāṇī, puresā chahā
- pure! — that's enough
- thoḍaṁ, puresaṁ, khūp — three amounts, smallest first

Before you move on

What does पुरे stop, and what does नको stop? (पुरे stops the pouring; नको refuses the offer.) What does the root पूर् mean? (To fill.) Sources: Wiktionary: पुरेसा.

54.3 बराच (barāch) — quite a lot

A little, enough, a lot. There is a step between enough and a lot that Marathi bothers to name.

You'll want to know: बराच

बराच — barāch — quite a lot, a fair amount, rather

बरंच पाणी — baraṁch pāṇī — quite a lot of water

You already own both halves of this word. बरा is the fine, all right of chapter four — the बरं you answer how are you with — and -च is Marathi's little emphatic tail, the one that means precisely that. Glue them together and a fair amount is literally a good-ish bit.

It agrees, because the बरा underneath it ends in -आ: बराच चहा, बरंच पाणी.

Set the four amounts in order and the scale is complete:

थोडं a little · पुरेसं enough · बरंच quite a lot · खूप a lot.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बराच (barāch) is बरा with the emphatic -च. The origin of बरा is not settled: neither CDIAL nor DEDR has an entry for it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- baraṁch pāṇī — quite a lot of water
- which taught word is hiding inside it — बरा
- the four amounts in order

Before you move on

What two pieces is बराच made of? (बरा and the emphatic -च.) Which of the four amount words does NOT agree? (खूप.)
Sources: Wiktionary: बराच.

54.4 किती मोठं! (kitī moṭhaṁ!) — how big!

किती has asked for a number since chapter thirty-seven. Put it in front of an adjective instead of a noun and it stops asking.

You'll want to know: किती with an adjective

किती मोठं! — kitī moṭhaṁ! — how big!

किती सुंदर! — kitī sundar! — how beautiful!

Same word, different neighbour, different job. In front of a noun — किती भाऊ? — किती asks for a number. In front of an adjective it exclaims, and no number is wanted or given.

Two things tell the listener which one you mean. On the page it is the ! you learned in chapter thirty-three, where a question would have carried ?. Out loud it is the tune: the exclamation falls at the end where a question rises. Say the pair back to back and hear your own voice do it.

English works exactly this way — how many? against how lovely! — so this is a construction you can feel rather than one you have to install.

The adjective still agrees, and there is nothing else to remember: किती मोठं! of a house, किती मोठी! of a room.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

किती goes back to kiyatta*, "how great" (CDIAL 3167). The origin of मोठा is not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kitī sundar! — and let the voice fall
- kitī bhāū? — and let it rise
- kitī moṭhaṁ! of a house, then kitī moṭhī! of a room

Before you move on

What decides whether किती asks or exclaims? (Whether a noun or an adjective follows it.) Which mark ends the exclamation, and what does the voice do? (!; it falls.)

54.5 How much, how strong, and how!

> Two chapters, seven items, and not one of them was an adjective. Name the four amounts in order before you use any of them.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- thoḍaṁ · puresaṁ · baraṁch · khūp — the amounts, smallest first
- jarā · khūp · khūp khūp — the degrees, quietest first
- kitī lahān! — and let the voice fall on the **!
- kitī? — and let it rise on the **?

Before you move on

Which of the four amount words never changes its ending? (खूप.) What turns किती from a question into an exclamation? (An adjective after it instead of a noun.) Then stop.

Chapter 55

Six, Seven, Eight, Nine

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from six to nine, four numbers further than the book has taken me since chapter thirteen.
> Complete MR-R55-six-to-nine and count from ek to nau without stopping – four numbers more than chapter thirteen left you with.

55.1 सहा (sahā) — six

Count एक दोन तीन चार पाच and stop. Since chapter thirteen that has been the whole of what you can count.

You'll want to know: सहा

सहा — sahā — 6

Sanskrit षष् (ṣaṣ) is the ancestor, and it is the same word as Latin sex and English six. The opening consonant softened on its way into Marathi; everything else is recognisably there.

Your turn

- Say it: sahā chahā — six teas
- Say it: ek don tīn chār pāch sahā — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say thoḍaṁ pāṇī — a little water
- Recall: say lahān khoolī — and no ending on it

Before you move on

What is six in Marathi? (सहा.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: सहा.

55.2 सात (sāt) — seven

Count from एक to सहा and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: सात

सात — sāt — 7

Sanskrit सप्त (sapta), which is Latin septem and English seven. The प dropped out and the त stayed, and that collapse is the single most common thing that happened to these words on their way from Sanskrit.

Your turn

- Say it: sāt — seven
- Say it: sahā — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say puresaṁ — enough
- Recall: say sundar — beautiful
- Recall: say kā? — why?

Before you move on

What is seven in Marathi? (सात.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: सात.

55.3 आठ (āṭh) — eight

Count from एक to सात and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: आठ

आठ — āṭh — 8

Sanskrit अष्ट (aṣṭa) — Latin octo, English eight. Hear what the ष्ट became: a single retroflex ठ. That is the regular outcome, and it is why so many Marathi words carry a retroflex where Sanskrit had a cluster.

Your turn

- Say it: āṭh — eight
- Say it: sahā sāt — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say baraṁch — quite a lot
- Recall: say kāraṇ … — because …

Before you move on

What is eight in Marathi? (आठ.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: आठ.

55.4 नऊ (naū) — nine

Count from एक to आठ and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: नऊ

नऊ — naū — 9

Sanskrit नव (nava), "nine" — Latin novem, English nine (CDIAL 6984). Sanskrit has a second नव, "new," like Latin novus and English new, but CDIAL gives it a separate entry (6983): the two only sound alike.

Your turn

- Say it: naū — nine
- Say it: sahā sāt āṭh — the run up to it, without looking

- Recall: say kitī sundar! — how beautiful!
- Recall: say chāṅglā chahā — good tea
- Recall: say chahā, dūdh āṇi pāṇī — with the comma doing the joining

Before you move on

What is nine in Marathi? (नऊ.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: नऊ.

55.5 Four numbers past five

Four numbers landed in this chapter. Count from एक to नऊ without stopping.

Your turn

- Say it: ek don tīn chār pāch sahā sāt āṭh naū — one to nine
- Say it: the four new ones alone — sahā sāt āṭh naū
- Say it: which of the four carries a retroflex — आठ
- Recall: say kharāb pāṇī — bad water

Before you move on

How far can you count now? (To nine.) Which of the four is the same word as new? (नऊ.)

Chapter 56

Ten, Eleven, Twelve, and the au Sign

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 4 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count to twelve, hear the worn-down ten at the end of the teens, and write the au vowel sign.
> Complete MR-R56-ten-to-twelve and count to twelve, then name the worn-down dahaa hiding at the end of akraa and baaraa.

56.1 दहा (dahā) — ten

Count from एक to नऊ and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: दहा

दहा — dahā — 10

Sanskrit दश (daśa) — Latin decem, English ten. This is the one to hold hardest, because the eleven-to-eighteen you are about to meet are all something-and-ten with the ten worn down to a -रा on the end.

Your turn

- Say it: dahā — ten
- Say it: sahā sāt āṭh naū — the run up to it, without looking

- Recall: say hushār — clever
- Recall: say mī mhaṇto kī … — I say that …

Before you move on

What is ten in Marathi? (दहा.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: दहा.

56.2 अकरा (akrā) — eleven

Count from एक to दहा and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: अकरा

अकरा — akrā — 11

Sanskrit एकादश (ekādaśa), literally one-ten. Say अकरा slowly: the अ- at the front is the एक you have counted with since chapter thirteen, and the -रा at the end is what is left of दश.

That is the pattern for everything up to eighteen. Each one is a unit in front and a worn-down ten behind, and the -रा is the tell.

Your turn

- Say it: akrā — eleven
- Say it: sāt āṭh naū dahā — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say -ṇyāsāṭhī — in order to

Before you move on

What is eleven in Marathi? (अकरा.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: अकरा.

56.3 बारा (bārā) — twelve

Count from एक to अकरा and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: बारा

बारा — bārā — 12

Sanskrit द्वादश (dvādaśa), two-ten. The द्वा- flattened to बा- and the -दश to -रा, and the second half is identical to the second half of अकरा. One pattern, twice.

Your turn

- Say it: bārā — twelve
- Say it: āṭh naū dahā akrā — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say sopī — easy

Before you move on

What is twelve in Marathi? (बारा.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: बारा.

56.4 मौज (mauj) — fun, enjoyment

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: मौज

मौज — mauj — "fun, enjoyment".

Say it: mauj. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, ौ, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मौज (mauj) is a loan from Arabic mawj, "a wave, a surge", which reached Marathi through Persian. Its Arabic root is m-w-j (Lane). In Hindustani and Marathi it came to mean a surge of pleasure: fun, enjoyment.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mauj
- mauj, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "fun, enjoyment"? (मौज, mauj.)

56.5 ौ — the au vowel sign

You can write every number so far. The next one but one needs a vowel sign the book has never taught.

Script

ौ is au, and it is the ो you have had since chapter one with a second stroke added. That is the whole relationship: ो is o, ौ is au, and the extra mark is the difference — exactly as े and ै will pair in a later chapter.

Say the two apart before you write them. को is ko; कौ is kau, a fuller sound with the mouth opening wider.

Writing — guided copy

Copy कौ twice with the model visible. Then write को beside it and check that only one of the two carries the second stroke.

Before you move on

Which of ो and ौ has two strokes? (ौ.) What is the number it was taught for? (Fourteen, next chapter.)
Source: Devanagari au vowel sign.

56.6 Ten, and the first two of the -रा family built on it

Count from एक to बारा. Then say only the two that end in -रा.

Your turn

- Say it: ek … bārā — the whole run
- Say it: akrā, bārā — and hear the same -रा twice
- Say it: what that -रा used to be — दश, the Sanskrit ten
- Recall: say uṁch — tall
- Recall: say -lyāvar — after doing

Before you move on

What is hiding at the end of अकरा and बारा? (The word for ten.)
How far can you count? (To twelve.)

Chapter 57

Thirteen to Sixteen

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count to sixteen and take each teen apart into the unit at its front and the ten behind it.
> Complete MR-R57-thirteen-to-sixteen and take each teen apart, naming the unit at its front and the worn ten behind it.

57.1 तेरा (terā) — thirteen

Count from एक to बारा and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: तेरा

तेरा — terā — 13

Sanskrit त्रयोदश (trayodaśa), three-ten. The त्र- of three is still at the front — the same त्र you can hear in English three — and the -रा is the ten again.

Your turn

- Say it: terā — thirteen
- Say it: naū dahā akrā bārā — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say sudhā — too
- Recall: say sudhā nāhī — not even

Before you move on

What is thirteen in Marathi? (तेरा.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: तेरा.

57.2 चौदा (chaudā) — fourteen

Count from एक to तेरा and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: चौदा

चौदा — chaudā — 14

Sanskrit चतुर्दश (caturdaśa), four-ten. The चतुर् collapsed into a single चौ, which is why this is the number that needed a new vowel sign before it could be written at all.

The -दा here rather than -रा is not a break in the pattern: it is the same दश, stopped one step earlier on the way down.

Your turn

- Say it: chaudā — fourteen
- Say it: dahā akrā bārā terā — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say khūp — very

Before you move on

What is fourteen in Marathi? (चौदा.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: चौदा.

57.3 पंधरा (pandhrā) — fifteen

Count from एक to चौदा and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: पंधरा

पंधरा — pandhrā — 15

Sanskrit pañcadaśa, five-ten, written with a nasal this book has not taught. The पं- is the पाच of chapter thirteen with its vowel squeezed out, and the -रा is the ten. You have now seen the same construction five times.

Your turn

- Say it: pandhrā — fifteen
- Say it: akrā bārā terā chaudā — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say jarā — a little
- Recall: say koṇ? — who?

Before you move on

What is fifteen in Marathi? (पंधरा.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: पंधरा.

57.4 सोळा (soḷā) — sixteen

Count from एक to पंधरा and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: सोळा

सोळा — soḷā — 16

Sanskrit षोडश (ṣoḍaśa), six-ten. The सो- is the सहा you learned first in this run, and the -ळा is the ten again — but written with ळ, the retroflex l that Marathi has and Hindi does not.

Your turn

- Say it: soḷā — sixteen
- Say it: bārā terā chaudā pandhrā — the run up to it, without looking

- Recall: say khūp khūp — said twice
- Recall: say kitī? — how many?

Before you move on

What is sixteen in Marathi? (सोळा.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: सोळा.

57.5 Four more teens

Count from दहा to सोळा. Then take each teen apart and name the number hiding at its front.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dahā … soḷā — seven numbers without stopping
- pandhrā and then pāch — and hear the five inside the fifteen
- soḷā and then sahā — and hear the six inside the sixteen

Before you move on

Which number is hiding inside सोळा? (सहा.) Which sign did चौदा need before it could be written? (ौ.)

Chapter 58

Seventeen to Twenty

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count to twenty, and I can build nineteen the way Marathi does – one less than twenty rather than nine and ten.
> Complete MR-R58-seventeen-to-twenty and count one to twenty, then take ekoNiis apart into ek plus uun plus viis.

58.1 सतरा (satrā) — seventeen

Count from एक to सोळा and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: सतरा

सतरा — satrā — 17

Sanskrit सप्तदश (saptadaśa), seven-ten. सत- is the सात of two chapters ago and -रा is the ten. From here the pattern finishes itself.

Your turn

- Say it: satrā — seventeen
- Say it: terā chaudā pandhrā soḷā — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say thoḍaṁ pāṇī — a little water
- Recall: say kuṭhe? — where?

Before you move on

What is seventeen in Marathi? (सतरा.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: सतरा.

58.2 अठरा (aṭhrā) — eighteen

Count from एक to सतरा and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: अठरा

अठरा — aṭhrā — 18

Sanskrit अष्टादश (aṣṭādaśa), eight-ten. अठ- is the आठ you met in chapter fifty-five, retroflex and all, and -रा is the ten for the last time: nineteen is built a completely different way.

Your turn

- Say it: aṭhrā — eighteen
- Say it: chaudā pandhrā soḷā satrā — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say puresaṁ — enough
- Recall: say kadhī? — when?

Before you move on

What is eighteen in Marathi? (अठरा.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: अठरा.

58.3 वीस (vīs) — twenty

Count एक दोन तीन चार पाच and stop. Since chapter thirteen that has been the whole of what you can count.

You'll want to know: वीस

वीस — vīs — 20

Sanskrit विंशति (viṁśati) — the same word as Latin viginti and, further along, English -ty. It is the first number in this run that is not built out of ten and something else — and the next lesson will build nineteen backwards from it, which is why it comes out of order.

Your turn

- Say it: vīs — twenty
- Say it: soḷā satrā aṭhrā — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say baraṁch — quite a lot
- Recall: say the asking word in the answer's own slot

Before you move on

What is twenty in Marathi? (वीस.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: वीस.

58.4 एकोणीस (ekoṇīs) — nineteen

Count from एक to अठरा and stop. The book has taken you no further than that.

You'll want to know: एकोणीस

एकोणीस — ekoṇīs — 19

This one breaks the pattern on purpose, and it is why वीस came first: you cannot build nineteen until you have twenty. एकोणीस is एक (one) plus ऊन (less) plus वीस (twenty): one less than twenty, counting DOWN from the round number rather than up from the ten.

Latin does the same thing with undeviginti, and so does the clock face when somebody says quarter to. Marathi uses this एकोण- trick at every nineteen — twenty-nine, thirty-nine and the rest are all built this way — so learning it once buys every one of them.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

एकोणीस (ekoṇīs) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit ekonaviṁśati, "nineteen": eka, "one", ūna, "less", and viṁśati, "twenty" (CDIAL 2499).

Your turn

- Say it: ekoṇīs — nineteen
- Say it: pandhrā soḷā satrā aṭhrā vīs — the run up to it, without looking
- Recall: say kitī sundar! — how beautiful!

Before you move on

What is nineteen in Marathi? (एकोणीस.) Say the number before it, and the one before that.
Sources: Wiktionary: एकोणीस.

58.5 The count reaches twenty, and the last step is taken backwards

Count from एक to वीस without stopping. That is fifteen numbers more than you had four chapters ago.

Your turn

- Say it: ek … vīs — the whole count
- Say it: ekoṇīs and take it apart — ek + ūn + vīs
- Say it: which number in the run is NOT built out of ten — वीस
- Recall: say थ — the aspirated dental

Before you move on

How is एकोणीस built, and which direction does it count? (एक + ऊन + वीस; downwards, from twenty.)

Chapter 59

What It Costs

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write the ai vowel sign, name money and the rupee, and ask and answer a price with any number up to twenty.
> Complete MR-R59-what-it-costs and run a whole exchange

59.1 ◌ै — the ai vowel sign

Three chapters ago you learned ◌ौ by adding a stroke to ◌ो. The same trick works one more time.

Script

◌ै is ai, and it is ◌े with a second stroke — the identical relationship ◌ौ has to ◌ो. Two marks, one rule, and with this one the four vowel signs of the e and o family are complete.

Hear them apart: के is ke; कै is kai, wider in the mouth. If you have met the pair ◌ो / ◌ौ, you already know what your voice has to do.

Writing — guided copy

Copy कै twice with the model visible. Then write के beside it, and को and कौ underneath, and check that the second stroke falls in the same place in both pairs.

Before you move on

What is the difference between े and ै? (One stroke.) Which other pair works the same way? (ो and ौ.)
Source: Devanagari ai vowel sign.

59.2 पैसे (paise) — money

> You can count to twenty and you cannot name the one thing people count most often.

You'll want to know: पैसे

> पैसे — paise — money

The word the sign in the last lesson was for. पैसे is Marathi's ordinary word for money, and it is plural only — there is no singular पैसा in this sense, the way English has no singular scissors. You will always hear it and always say it in this shape.

Underneath it is the paisa, the coin that is a hundredth of a rupee, which is why the plural is the natural form: money is counted in many small pieces.

Now the numbers earn their keep. किती पैसे? — how much money? — is the question the speaking paper's transactional part is built on, and you have owned किती since chapter thirty-seven with nothing to ask it about.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पैसे (paise) is the plural of paisā, which CDIAL traces to a reconstructed padāmiśa*, "quarter part", built with amśa, "part". CDIAL marks the Marathi word as taken from Hindi paisā, "quarter anna" (CDIAL 7761).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- paise — money
- kitī paise? — how much money?

- mājhyākaḍe vīs paise āhet — I have twenty

Before you move on

What shape is पैसे always in? (Plural.) Which sign did it need? (ै.)
Sources: Wiktionary: पैसे.

59.3 रुपया (rupayā) — rupee

पैसे is money in general. No price is ever quoted in it.

You'll want to know: रुपया

रुपया — rupayā — rupee

वीस रुपये — vīs rupaye — twenty rupees

This is the word a price is named in, and it is masculine, so it takes a plural ending after a number: one रुपया, twenty रुपये. Say the pair out loud until the change is automatic, because a number is almost never said without it.

The history is a good one. Sanskrit रूप्य (rūpya) meant "wrought silver" — silver that had been given a SHAPE, from रूप (rūpa), form. A rupee is, at root, shaped metal. The same coin name travelled out of India far enough that it is now the currency of half a dozen countries.

With a number in front of it you can finally answer the transactional part of the speaking paper: किती? — वीस रुपये.

Your turn

- Say it: rupayā, then vīs rupaye — and hear the ending change
- Say it: kitī rupaye? — how many rupees?
- Recall: say इ and name a word it opens

Before you move on

What did रूप्य mean in Sanskrit? (Wrought silver — shaped metal.) What happens to रुपया after a number? (It becomes रुपये.)
Sources: Wiktionary: रुपया.

59.4 A price asked and answered

Twenty numbers, a word for money and a word for the currency. That is a whole exchange, and it is the first one.

Your turn

- Say it: kitī rupaye? — and answer with any number to twenty
- Say it: mājhyākaḍe paise āhet — I have money
- Say it: ek … vīs once more, and stop where the book stops
- Recall: say ithe — here

Before you move on

Which word names the currency and which names money in general? (रुपया; पैसे.) How far can you count? (To twenty.) Then stop.

Chapter 60

Which One in the Line

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 4 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say first to fifth in Marathi, tell the four ordinals Marathi inherited whole from the ones it builds, and agree any of them with a masculine, feminine or neuter thing.
> Complete MR-R60-first-to-fifth and run pahilaa to paachvaa, then say which one of the five you could have worked out.

60.1 दुसरा (dusrā) — the second, and the set it belongs to

A second kind of number word starts here, so the recalls come first, at the four growing distances this book measures.

- Recall: say rupayā — R1, one chapter back
- Recall: say vīs — R2, the first real retrieval
- Recall: say sahā — R3, twenty-four lessons back
- Recall: say kitī? — R4, ninety-one lessons back

You'll want to know: you already own one of these दुसरा — dusrā — the second, the other

Chapter thirty-one gave you this word as the partner एक needed: एक चहा आणि दुसरा पाणी. Its gloss said the other, the second, and its etymology said it comes from dviḥsara*, "twofold", built on Sanskrit dviḥ, "twice" (CDIAL 6676).

Nothing about it changes today. What changes is that it stops being one word and becomes a member of a set.

Grammar Lens: two sets of number words, not one

the question	the set	example
किती? — how many? which one in the line?	एक, दोन, तीन, चार, पाच दुसरा and its fellows	दोन चहा — two teas दुसरा चहा — the second tea

दोन चहा and दुसरा चहा are not the same order at a stall: the first asks for two cups, the second picks one cup out of a line.
This chapter teaches the second set, and it teaches no new word today — because the set already has a member in your mouth, and noticing that is the honest first step.
An ordinal is an ordinary adjective in -आ, so it takes the three endings chapter forty-nine taught on मोठा: दुसरा, दुसरी, दुसरं. Every word in this chapter and the next behaves this way.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- don chahā, then dusrā chahā
- the three agreeing forms — dusrā, dusrī, dusraṁ

Before you move on

How many sets of number words does Marathi keep? (Two.) How many new words did this lesson teach? (None.)
Sources: Molesworth, A Dictionary, Marathi and English, p. 420 (DSAL); Wiktionary: दुसरा.

60.2 तिसरा (tisrā) — third

Four recalls, at four distances.

- Recall: say how many sets of number words Marathi keeps — R1, one lesson back
- Write it: the ai sign on क from memory — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say dahā — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say ghar — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: तिसरा

तिसरा — tisrā — third

तिसरं घर — tisraṁ ghar — the third house

Put the two words you now have side by side against the numbers under them:

how many	which one in the line
दोन (don)	दुसरा (dusrā)
तीन (tīn)	तिसरा (tisrā)

The number is still visible in both. दोन leaves दु-, तीन leaves ति-, and the same -सरा sits on the end of each.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तिसरा comes from triḥsara*, "triple", built on Sanskrit triḥ, "thrice" (CDIAL 6018).

Grammar Lens: two is not yet a rule

It would be pleasant to say -सरा is how Marathi makes ordinals. It is not, and this book will not claim it: -सरा appears on these two words and on no others in the language. What the pair does prove is smaller and true — that the which-one set is related to the how-many set, close enough for the eye to catch it.
Keep the vowel change in view too. don has an o and dusrā has a u; tīn has a long ī and tisrā a short i. The number is visible, not untouched.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dusrā, then tisrā
- the number inside each — don, tīn
- tisraṁ ghar — the third house

Before you move on

Which number is inside तिसरा? (तीन.) Is -सरा a rule you can use on any number? (No — it is on these two words only.)
Sources: Molesworth, A Dictionary, Marathi and English, p. 381 (DSAL); Omniglot: Numbers in Marathi.

60.3 पहिला (pahilā) — first

Four recalls, at four distances.

- Recall: say tisrā — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say paise — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say akrā — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say khoolī — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: पहिला

पहिला — pahilā — first

पहिली खोली — pahilī khoolī — the first room

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पहिला comes from prathilla*, "first", which CDIAL builds on Sanskrit prathama (CDIAL 8652).

Grammar Lens: why first arrives third

Go looking for the number inside this one:

how many	which one in the line	the number, still visible?
दोन	दुसरा	yes — दु-
तीन	तिसरा	yes — ति-
एक	पहिला	no

There is no एक anywhere in पहिला. Not a letter of it.
That is why the chapter did not begin here. A word can only be seen to break a shape once the shape has been seen holding, and you have now watched the number stay visible in two words running. The third case is a surprise.

Grammar Lens: what this book claims about पहिला, and what it does not Molesworth's dictionary gives पहिला twice over — as an adjective, "the first", and, declined, as an adverb, "at first; in the beginning". Marathi never built a separate word for putting an action first; it re-used this one.

This lesson teaches the adjective only — a thing picked out of a line, as in पहिली खोली. The adverb is named so you recognise it, and not drilled. The words that order a sequence — before, after, next — are not taught here.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pahilā, dusrā, tisrā
- which of the three has no number inside it — pahilā
- pahilī khoolī — the first room

Before you move on

Which number is inside पहिला? (None — एक is not in it.) Why was this word not the first one in the chapter? (Nothing had been seen for it to break yet.)
Sources: Molesworth, A Dictionary, Marathi and English, p. 497

(DSAL); Omniglot: Numbers in Marathi.

60.4 चौथा (chauthā) — fourth

Four recalls, at four distances.

- Recall: say pahilā — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say rupayā — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say bārā — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say gharāt and name what the -आ did to घर — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: चौथा

चौथा — chauthā — fourth

The au sign you wrote in chapter fifty-six is the visible part of this word. चार (chār) gives चौ- (chau-), and then an ending you have not seen before takes over: -था.

Grammar Lens: four words, three shapes, no rule

The chapter's four words, laid out against their numbers:

how many	which one in the line	what happened
एक	पहिला	nothing survives
दोन	दुसरा	-सरा
तीन	तिसरा	-सरा
चार	चौथा	-था

Three different shapes across four words. No rule made these; each was inherited and worn down separately over centuries — Molesworth records चौथा as coming straight from Sanskrit चतुर्थ.
So do not look for a rule here. There is none, and this book will not invent one: these four are four words, and the honest instruction is to learn them as four words. What matters is that the list ENDS. There are exactly four of them, and you now have all four.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pahilā dusrā tisrā chauthā — the four, in order
- which two share an ending — dusrā and tisrā
- chauthā rupayā — the fourth rupee

Before you move on

How many of these four can you predict from the number? (None — each has its own shape.) How many are there in all? (Four.) Sources: Molesworth, A Dictionary, Marathi and English, p. 296 (DSAL); Omniglot: Numbers in Marathi.

60.5 पाचवा (pāchvā) — fifth, and the seam

Four recalls, at four distances.

- Recall: say chauthā — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say ekoṇīs and take it apart — R2, ten lessons back
- Recall: write the au sign — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say ghar — R4, eighty-three lessons back

You'll want to know: पाचवा

पाचवा — pāchvā — fifth

पाचवं घर — pāchvaṁ ghar — the fifth house

Say पाच and then say पाचवा. The number did not change at all. Nothing was worn down, nothing was replaced: पाच is still sitting there whole, with -वा added behind it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पाचवा is inherited too, from Sanskrit pañcama, "fifth" (CDIAL 7669). Its -वा is the old ending -ma; what is new is that Marathi now puts it on any number.

Grammar Lens: -वा, and where the language changes its mind

Here is the whole chapter in one column, with the break marked:

	how many	which one in the line
	एक	पहिला
	दोन	दुसरा
	तीन	तिसरा
	चार	चौथा
— the seam —
	पाच	पाच + वा

Above the line, four words, each worn down its own way, none predictable from the number.
Below the line, a rule: take the number and put -वा on it. That is all there is, and it does not stop at five. Six, seven, ten, twenty, a hundred — the next chapter walks the rest of the way, and every one of them is made this way.
You have therefore learned two different kinds of thing in one chapter. Four words, which had to be memorised. And one ending, which does not.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pāch, then pāchvā
- pāchvaṁ ghar — the fifth house
- the four that had to be memorised — pahilā dusrā tisrā chauthā

Before you move on

What do you add to a number to make an ordinal? (-वा.) At which number does that start working? (Five — everything before it is a word, not a rule.)
Sources: Omniglot: Numbers in Marathi; Molesworth, A Dictionary, Marathi and English, p. 500 (DSAL).

60.6 First to fifth, and where the language changed its mind

Four recalls, at four distances, before the run.

- Recall: say pāchvā and the ending that made it — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say how many sets of number words Marathi keeps — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say the three agreeing endings of मोठा — R3, fifty-three lessons back
- Recall: say madhye — R4, eighty lessons back

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pahilā dusrā tisrā chauthā pāchvā — the run, without stopping
- the four that had to be memorised, and the one that did not
- pāchvaṁ, pāchvī, pāchvā — the three agreeing endings on the fifth

What you've built this chapter, in one number

Of the five ordinals in this chapter, one was built and four were memorised. That is the worst ratio you will ever see in this set, and it is worth saying out loud, because the next chapter reverses it completely: five more ordinals, and every single one of them built. The break sits between चौथा and पाचवा. Everything before it has to be memorised. Everything after it follows a rule.

Before you move on

Between which two ordinals does the seam fall? (चौथा and पाचवा.) What sits on the far side of it? (A rule — the number, plus -वा.)

Chapter 61

The Rest Are Built

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can build any ordinal from sixth upwards by putting -vaa on the number, and I know the one place between five and ten where the number underneath is an older form.
> Complete MR-R61-sixth-to-tenth and run pahilaa to dahaavaa, then name the one of the ten that bent the rule and how.

61.1 सहावा (sahāvā) — sixth

Four recalls, at four distances.

- Recall: say pāchvā — R1, two lessons back
- Recall: say tisrā — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say terā — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say var — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: सहावा

सहावा — sahāvā — sixth

Before you read the word, work it out. You have सहा and you have -वा. सहा + वा = सहावा. Nothing was worn down. Nothing was replaced.

This is the first time in this book that a new word has been handed to you already known. It will happen four more times in this chapter.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सहावा is सहा, "six", with -वा, the old ending -ma of Sanskrit saptama, "seventh" (CDIAL 13151). CDIAL has no entry for the whole word.

Grammar Lens: what a rule buys

सहावं घर — sahāvaṁ ghar — the sixth house

Chapter sixty cost you four separate words to reach fourth. This chapter costs you one ending, already paid for, to reach tenth — and then twentieth, and hundredth, and every ordinal Marathi will ever need.
That is what the difference between a memorised word and a rule word is worth, and it is why the chapter before this one taught its four the hard way rather than pretending they followed a pattern.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sahā, then sahāvā
- pāchvā, sahāvā — fifth, sixth
- what changed inside the number when the ending went on — nothing

Before you move on

What is सहा plus -वा? (सहावा.) Did you have to be told this word? (No.)
Sources: Omniglot: Numbers in Marathi.

61.2 सातवा (sātvā) — seventh

Four recalls, at four distances.

- Recall: say sahāvā — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say pahilā — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say chaudā — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say khālī — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: सातवा

सातवा — sātvā — seventh

सात + वा. Say it before you read it.

One small thing in the sound. सहा ends in a vowel, so सहावा comes out in three beats — sa-hā-vā. सात ends in a consonant, so सातवा comes out in two — sāt-vā. The ending did not change; the number it landed on did.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सातवा is inherited: CDIAL lists it under Sanskrit saptama, "seventh", whose -ma became -वा (CDIAL 13151).

Grammar Lens: Molesworth agrees with you

Look up पहिला in Molesworth's 1857 dictionary and it is there, with its own definition. Look up तिसरा, and चौथा — both there, each with its own entry.
Look up सातवा and there is nothing. The dictionary has no such word. That is not an oversight. A dictionary records what a reader cannot work out, and by 1857 nobody thought सातवा needed recording, because anybody with सात and the ending already had it. The seam you were shown last chapter is visible in the dictionary's own table of contents.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sahāvā, sātvā
- sāt and then sātvā
- which four ordinals a dictionary DOES print — pahilā dusrā tisrā chauthā

Before you move on

What is सात plus -वा? (सातवा.) Why is that word missing from the dictionary? (Because it can be worked out.)
Sources: Molesworth, A Dictionary, Marathi and English — search for सातवा (DSAL); Omniglot: Numbers in Marathi.

61.3 आठवा (āṭhvā) — eighth

Four recalls, at four distances.

- Recall: say sātvā — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say chauthā — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say pandhrā — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say khoolī — R4, eighty-six lessons back

You'll want to know: आठवा

आठवा — āṭhvā — eighth

आठवी खोली — āṭhvī khoolī — the eighth room

आठ + वा, with the retroflex ठ carried through untouched.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL lists आठवा (āṭhvā) under Sanskrit aṣṭama, "eighth" (CDIAL 937).

Grammar Lens: the pair to keep apart

Two words in this set both end in a -था/-वा you might blur together:

चौथा (chauthā)	fourth — an inherited word, -था
आठवा (āṭhvā)	eighth — a regular word, आठ + -वा

They are not the same ending, and the test is quick: take the ending off and see whether a number is left standing. आठवा minus -वा leaves आठ. चौथा minus -था leaves चौ, which is not a Marathi number.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āṭh, then āṭhvā
- sahāvā sātvā āṭhvā — sixth, seventh, eighth
- āṭhvī khoolī — the eighth room

Before you move on

What is आठ plus -वा? (आठवा.) Is चौथा built the same way? (No — take -था off and no number is left.)
Sources: Omniglot: Numbers in Marathi.

61.4 नववा (navvā) — ninth

Four recalls, at four distances.

- Recall: say āṭhvā — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say pāchvā and the ending that made it — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say soḷā — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say javaḷ — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: नववा

नववा — navvā — ninth

Work it out first, the way the last three lessons let you. Nine is नऊ (naū), so the ending should give नऊवा.

It does not. The word is नववा — nav-vā.

Grammar Lens: one tooth missing, and where it went number	expected	actual

सहा	सहावा	सहावा
सात	सातवा	सातवा
आठ	आठवा	आठवा
नऊ	नऊवा	नववा

The rule held four times and slipped once. What slipped is not the ending — it is still -वा — but the shape of the number underneath it. Wiktionary traces नऊ back through Prakrit nava to Sanskrit नव, and it is that older नव that the ordinal is standing on. The ending froze the number as it was when the ordinal was made, and the cardinal went on changing without it.
So what you can say now is a little longer than what last chapter said. From five up, an ordinal is the number with -वा behind it — and at nine, the number that turns up underneath is an older shape of itself. One adjustment in the whole system, worth carrying as one adjustment rather than as a second pattern.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sahāvā sātvā āṭhvā navvā — sixth to ninth
- which one of the four did not come out as expected — navvā
- the part that DID stay the same in all four — -vā

Before you move on

What is ninth? (नववा.) Which part of the rule bent, the ending or the number? (The number — the ending held.)
Sources: Omniglot: Numbers in Marathi; Wiktionary: नऊ.

61.5 दहावा (dahāvā) — tenth

Four recalls, at four distances.

- Recall: say navvā — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say chauthā — R2, seven lessons back
- Recall: say bārā — R3, twenty-seven lessons back
- Recall: say samor — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: दहावा

दहावा — dahāvā — tenth

दहा + वा, with the number whole and the ending behind it, exactly as sixth, seventh and eighth were.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL lists दहावा (dahāvā) under Sanskrit daśama, "tenth" (CDIAL 6233).

Grammar Lens: this is where the set stops, and the ending does not

Tenth is where this book's ordinal list ends. It is not where Marathi's ends.
You already count to twenty, and every one of those numbers takes the same ending. Here is one you can build without help:

बारा → बारावा — bārāvā, twelfth

That word is not on this book's list and never will be. You can say it anyway, which is the whole difference between a list and a rule.
What you own after this chapter is not ten words. It is four words and an ending — and the ending goes on working after the book stops listing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dahā, then dahāvā
- sahāvā sātvā āṭhvā navvā dahāvā — sixth to tenth
- bārāvā — twelfth, a word this book never taught you

Before you move on

What is दहा plus -वा? (दहावा.) Does the ending stop at ten? (No — the book's list does; the ending does not.)
Sources: Omniglot: Numbers in Marathi.

61.6 Sixth to tenth, and what the dictionary knew

Four recalls, at four distances, before the run.

- Recall: say dahāvā — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say sahāvā — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say satrā — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say lāmb — R4, eighty lessons back

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pahilā … dahāvā — the whole ten
- the four that had to be memorised — pahilā dusrā tisrā chauthā
- the six that did not — pāchvā sahāvā sātvā āṭhvā navvā dahāvā

What you've built across these two chapters

Ten ordinals. Four were words and six were arithmetic — and of the six, five came out exactly as the rule predicted and one, नववा, kept an older shape of its number.
There is a way to check that split without taking this book's word for it. Check: Molesworth's Dictionary, Marathi and English — the 1857 one this chapter has been citing — for all ten looked up	in the dictionary?

पहिला	yes, p. 497
दुसरा	yes, p. 420
तिसरा	yes, p. 381
चौथा	yes, p. 296
सहावा · सातवा · आठवा · नववा · दहावा	no entry, any of them
पाचवा	an entry, but for a different word entirely — a returning sickness

Four in, the regular ones out. A dictionary is a list of what a reader cannot work out for themselves, so the seam this book drew between चौथा and पाचवा was drawn in Marathi lexicography a century and a half before it was drawn here.

Before you move on

Which four ordinals does an 1857 dictionary print, and why exactly those four? (पहिला, दुसरा, तिसरा, चौथा — because they are the four that cannot be predicted.)

Chapter 62

Reading — Labels, a Message, and a First Paragraph

Modes: 👁 eyes (3) 🎧 Hands-free start: none of the 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read Marathi off a form, off a short message, and through a whole paragraph, without translating word by word.
> Ninety-one words of Marathi in a row with no new word in them — enough for every published A1 reading part.

62.1 (reading) — six words, no sentence around them

Every word below you have already written. Not one is new.

What is new is that nothing tells you which is coming.

Read this

नाव शहर भाषा घर खोली पाणी

Read down the list once. Do not sound out each letter — look at the whole word and let it arrive.
Again, and notice which came at once and which you had to assemble.
Both are fine. The difference is what practice removes.

You'll want to know: a word with nothing to lean on

The first three are form labels — the ones you filled in when you wrote your own profile. The last three are things.

A label gives you no sentence to lean on. There is no आहे at the end to tell you what is going on, and no verb to wait for. One word, and it carries everything.

That is why six is enough for one sitting.

Your turn

- Say it: the six words down the list, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
What was new? (Nobody said them first. You read them.)

62.2 (reading) — a message with your own sentences in it

The last lesson gave you single words. This gives each one a sentence to stand in.

You have written every line below. This time somebody wrote it to you.

Read this

नमस्कार मीरा. माझं नाव अरुण आहे. भेटून आनंद झाला. मला मराठी येते. मी मराठी वाचतो. धन्यवाद.

Read it: the message through once, without stopping
Read it: the message again, and notice you did not assemble it line by line the second time
You took it in.

You'll want to know: the same sentences, the other way round

These are the lines from your own six-field profile and your own message, in the order you wrote them.

Writing them, you chose each one and had all the time you wanted. Reading them, they arrive in somebody else's order and at their pace. That is a different skill, and it is why this is a separate lesson rather than a review.

Six lines is not much. Meeting them from the other side is the whole exercise.

Your turn

- Say it: the six lines, once, in order, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

Who is the message addressed to? (मीरा.)
How many of the six lines were new? (None.)

62.3 (reading) — the first paragraph

Six words, then six lines. Now a whole paragraph.

Ninety-one words, and the rule has not changed: not one of them is new.

Read this

माझं नाव अरुण आहे. मला मराठी येते. माझं घर मोठं आहे. घरामध्ये एक खोली आहे. खोली लहान आहे पण चांगली आहे. मी चहा पितो. मला दूध सुद्धा आवडतं. मला भाकरी आवडते. माझा भाऊ उंच आहे. माझा मित्र जवळ आहे. मित्राचे नाव मीरा आहे. मीरा हुशार आहे आणि खूप वाचते. माझी बहीण पण हुशार आहे आणि खूप वाचते. मीरा मला मदत करते. मीरा माझ्याबरोबर चालते. मी मराठी वाचतो आणि लिहितो. मीरा म्हणते की मराठी सोपं आहे. मला पण सोपं वाटतं, कारण मी बोलतो. मीरा विचारते, किती? मी म्हणतो, दहा. उद्या भेटू. धन्यवाद.

Read it: the passage once without stopping; do not translate — let the sentences arrive

Read it: the passage again, and notice how little work it took

You'll want to know: what is holding it together

आणि adds. पण holds two true things apart. कारण gives a reason. की hangs a whole sentence off another one. सुद्धा adds a thing to a list already made. Each of those was a chapter, and each was small.

Notice also that Marathi waits. मीरा म्हणते की मराठी सोपं आहे — you do not find out what Mira says until the end, and you held the beginning without being asked to.

This is the first whole paragraph the track has asked you to hold at once, and it works because every piece was paid for.

Your turn

- Say it: the paragraph aloud, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many words in that paragraph were new to you? (None.) And what made it readable? (Everything in it had already been paid for, one chapter at a time.)

Chapter 63

Writing — With A Clock

Modes: ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can complete the A1 writing paper's two tasks inside its published twenty minutes, filling every form field and keeping the message between thirty and forty words.
> Complete MR-W10-a1-con-reloj: seven minutes for the form and thirteen for the message, then count the words and check the form for blanks before mistakes.

63.1 The same six fields, with a clock

You have done this writing with as long as you liked.

A task you can only do untimed is not yet a task you can do. Here are the conditions the assessment actually publishes.

Writing — timed production

What the contract publishes. This track's A1 writing paper runs 20 minutes and holds two tasks:

- a practical form asking for six to eight completed fields, worth 40 of the paper's 100 points;
- a message for a named reader and a stated purpose, 30 to 40 words, worth the other 60.

Those numbers are read out of `task-shapes/a1.json`, the same file the assessment contract points at. They are not invented here.

Notice what the split says before you write a word: the message is worth more than the form, and it is the shorter of the two. Time spent perfecting a field is time taken from the part that scores.

Give the form its share and no more: seven minutes, starting now. Fill every field. A blank field scores nothing and cannot be argued with.

Now the message: thirteen minutes, thirty to forty words, to one named reader.

When the time is up, stop even if a line is unfinished. An unfinished paper is information. An untimed one is not.

Before you move on

Count the words in your message. Under thirty and the task is half done; well past forty and you spent time the paper did not give you. Both are worth learning from your own clock rather than from an examiner.

Then check the form, and check it for blanks before mistakes. A field with a wrong answer can still earn something; a field left empty cannot.

This is the last of the seven writing stages. Everything before it asked you to produce the language. This one asks whether you can produce it when the conditions are not yours to choose — which is the only version of the question an assessment ever asks.

Chapter 64

Rows Closed

Modes: voice (2) eyes (1) pen (3) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write the two aspirated letters that were missing from the curled and lip rows, and recognise the danda where an older text ends a sentence.
> From cold, with nothing open: write the aspirated retroflex d, the aspirated lip p, and the mark an older text ends a sentence with.

64.1 ढोल (ḍhol) — a drum

> Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: ढोल

ढोल — ḍhol — "a drum".

Say it: ḍhol. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, ढ, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ढोल (ḍhol) is inherited from Sanskrit ḍhola, "large drum", and has come down with almost no change (CDIAL 5608).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ḍhol
- ḍhol, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a drum"? (ढोल, ḍhol.)

64.2 ढ — the fifth of the curled row

Chapter seven gave you ट, ठ, ड and ण. Four of a row of five.
Say the two of those four that belong to the d half of the row.

Script

ढ

ढ is the aspirated partner of ड — the same step you have taken three times already, at क/ख, at ट/ठ and at त/थ. Curl the tongue to the roof of the mouth for a ड, then let the breath out after it.

Set the two side by side and the shape follows the sound: ड ढ. The second carries an extra curl at its foot, so the letter that has more breath in it also has more ink.

ढग — a cloud. Two letters, and you can read both.

Grammar Lens: the romanization lies about this one letter	where the tongue is

ध	against the teeth
ढ	curled to the roof

Both of these are written dh in most romanizations, and that is the whole of the problem. They are different letters in different rows, and the spelling that is supposed to help you tell them apart makes them identical.

On the page they are nothing alike, which is the good news: a reader who learns the shapes is never in doubt, and a reader who leans on the romanization is in doubt every time. This is the argument for the script the track has been making since chapter one, in one pair of letters.

Writing: guided copy

How it is written — 2 strokes · 1 pen lift · 2 movements

Stroke order after Opiaterein, 'Deva-ढ-order.gif', strokes 1–2, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ढ is written, stroke by stroke

Copy ढ twice with the model visible. Then write ड beside it and check that only one of the two carries the extra curl at the foot.

Before you move on

Which of the two has more ink at the foot? (ढ.) Which of ध and ढ is made with the tongue against the teeth? (ध.) What do most romanizations write for both of them? (dh — which is why the shapes matter.)
Stroke order for ढ is illustrated in the Devanagari letter-order animations held by Wikimedia Commons.

64.3 फणस (phaṇas) — a jackfruit

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: फणस

फणस — phaṇas — "a jackfruit".

Say it: phaṇas. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, फ, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

फणस (phaṇas) comes from phanasa*, a variant CDIAL sets beside Sanskrit panasa, "the breadfruit or jackfruit tree" (CDIAL 7781). CDIAL takes the word as probably from Dravidian.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- phaṇas
- phaṇas, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a jackfruit"? (फणस, phaṇas.)

64.4 फ — the gap in the lip row

The lip row is प, फ, ब, भ, म. Name the three of those five you have been writing since the early chapters. Then say what the lesson before this one did to ड.

Script

फ

फ is प with the breath let out. That is the fifth time this same step has appeared, and with it every row of stops in the script is closed:

plain	aspirated
क ट त	ख ठ थ
ड प	ढ फ

Five pairs, one rule, and it has not changed once: the aspirated letter is the plain one with a puff of air after it. A row is not a list of five unrelated shapes — it is two sounds crossed with two settings, plus the nasal at the end.

Grammar Lens: the letter whose sound has drifted

फोन — a telephone. Read the first letter aloud and listen to what you did with your lips.
In words Marathi has borrowed, many speakers give फ the sound of an English f rather than the puffed p the row predicts. Both are heard, and the drift runs one way: it is the borrowed words that pull toward f, while the inherited ones keep the puff.
The letter did not change; the words around it did. A reader meets one shape and has to know that it covers two sounds, which is the opposite of the tidy row above and worth expecting rather than being surprised by.

Writing: guided copy

How it is written — 3 strokes · 2 pen lifts · 3 movements

Stroke order after JackPotte, 'Devanagari pʰ 09 28.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 29 March 2009
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How फ is written, stroke by stroke

Copy फ twice with the model visible. Then write प beside it and read the two aloud, plain then aspirated.

Before you move on

Which letter is प with a puff after it? (फ.) How many plain and aspirated pairs does the script have now? (Five.) What sound does फ take in a borrowed word like फोन? (Often an f.)
Stroke order for फ is illustrated in the Devanagari letter-order animations held by Wikimedia Commons.

64.5 । — the stroke that ends an older sentence

> Name the two marks you have been writing that Marathi borrowed whole from the Latin alphabet — the one that asks and the one that lists.

Script

। is the danda — a single upright stroke, drawn from the headline down, and it ends a sentence. It is the full stop Devanagari had before there was a full stop.

Everything printed in this track ends its sentences with a ., because that is what Marathi does now. The danda did not go away; it moved. It stays in poetry, in older printing, in devotional and formal text, and on plenty of signs and notices that were set once and never reset.

Grammar Lens: a mark to recognise rather than to reach for mark	what it does	do you write it

.	ends a sentence	yes, every time
।	ends a sentence	you will read it

This is the first mark in the track you are being taught to read and not to produce, and the distinction is worth naming because it will come back. A reader who has only ever met the full stop hits a danda on the first authentic notice and has no way of knowing whether the sentence ended, whether a word is missing, or whether something has gone wrong with the printing.
It is not a vertical bar between columns and it is not the tail of a letter. It sits alone after the last word, with a space before whatever comes next, and it means what a full stop means.

Writing: guided copy

Copy । twice with the model visible. Draw it from the headline straight down, the full height of a letter, with no hook at either end. Then write a comma beside it and check that one sits on the baseline and the other runs the whole way down.

Before you move on

What does a danda mean? (The sentence ended.) Which of the two sentence-enders will you be writing? (The full stop.) Where are you most likely to meet the other one? (Poetry, older printing, and signs nobody has reset.)

64.6 rows closed — two letters and a stroke, from cold

Close the three lessons before this one. Write the plain retroflex ड and the plain lip प from memory, with nothing in front of you.

Script: the five pairs, written out once

plain	aspirated
क ट त	ख ठ थ
ड प	ढ फ

Ten letters, one rule, and the last two of them arrived in this chapter. Every stop in the script now has its pair, which means a plain letter you meet from here on has a partner you can predict rather than a shape you have to learn.

Write the bottom row from memory, plain beside aspirated, and check that the aspirated one in each pair is the one carrying the extra ink.

Grammar Lens: the pair the romanization hides

ध and ढ are both dh in a romanization and are not the same letter. One is made against the teeth and one with the tongue curled to the roof, and the page tells them apart where the spelling will not.
Say ढग and then say a word with ध in it, and listen for where your tongue went.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- which of ध and ढ is the curled one
- what sound फ often takes in a borrowed word
- what a । at the end of a line means
- which of the two sentence-enders you write yourself

Before you move on

How many plain-and-aspirated pairs does the script have? (Five.) Which mark in this chapter are you learning to read rather than to write? (The ।.)

Chapter 65

Standing Vowels

Modes: voice (3) eyes (2) pen (4) Hands-free start: the first of 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write the four vowel letters that begin a word, and say which of them a word needs rather than the sign that hangs on a consonant.
> From cold, with nothing open: write the four standing vowels this chapter taught, in the order they were met.

65.1 ईश्वर (īśvar) — God

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: ईश्वर

ईश्वर — īśvar — "God".

Say it: īśvar. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, ई, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ईश्वर (īśvar) is Sanskrit īśvara, "master; god", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama (CDIAL 1619). It is built on īś, "to be master of".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- īśvar
- īśvar, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "God"? (ईश्वर, īśvar.)

65.2 ई — the long one, standing on its own

Draw the short standing i. Then draw the long ii sign, the one that hangs on a consonant and has been in your hand since the first chapter.

Script

ई

ई is the long partner of इ, and it is a letter rather than a sign.

ईमेल — email. The word opens with it, which is the one job a standing vowel has.

Grammar Lens: the sign rides, the letter stands shape	where it goes

ी	hangs on a consonant
ई	stands at the start of a word

These are two shapes for one vowel, and which one you use is decided by what comes before it. A consonant in front means the sound rides that consonant as a sign. Nothing in front means the sound needs a letter of its own to stand on.

You have been reading the sign since chapter one, at the end of a great many words. The letter is the same sound with nowhere to sit, and that is the whole difference between them.

Writing: guided copy

How ई is written, stroke by stroke

Copy ई twice with the model visible. Then write the ी sign beside it and check that one of the two is standing alone and the other is waiting for a consonant to hang on.

Before you move on

Which of ई and ी can open a word? (ई.) What decides which of the two a word uses? (Whether a consonant is in front of the sound.) Stroke order for ई is illustrated in the Devanagari letter-order animations held by Wikimedia Commons.

65.3 ओला (olā) — wet

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: ओला

ओला — olā — "wet".

Say it: olā. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, ओ, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ओला (olā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from olla, "wet" (CDIAL 2554). CDIAL gives ōlla as a word-list form beside a reconstructed ōdra*, "wet", from the root ud, "to wet".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- olā
- olā, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "wet"? (ओला, olā.)

65.4 ओ — the same trade, a second time

Draw the o sign that hangs on a consonant. Then say what the lesson before this one did with a sign of the same age.

Script

ओ

ओ is the standing form of the o you have been hanging on consonants since chapter one.

ओठ — a lip. Two letters, and you can read both.

Grammar Lens: the same arrangement you met a lesson ago

sign	letter
ी	ई
ो	ओ

Two vowels, one arrangement. A consonant in front means a sign; nothing in front means a letter. The reason this chapter is four short lessons rather than one long one is that the rule stays fixed while the shapes change, so what is worth practising is the shapes.

The two signs in the left column have been in your hand since the opening chapter. Their letters are arriving sixty chapters later, which is a gap worth noticing: a reader can spend a long time writing Marathi without ever needing to begin a word with a vowel.

Writing: guided copy

How ओ is written, stroke by stroke

Copy ओ twice with the model visible. Then write the ो sign beside it and read the pair aloud, letter then sign.

Before you move on

Which shape does a word beginning with an o sound need? (ओ.)
Which one does ठ take when the o rides it? (The ो sign.)
Stroke order for ओ is illustrated in the Devanagari letter-order animations held by Wikimedia Commons.

65.5 ऐवज (aivaj) — valuables

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: ऐवज

ऐवज — aivaj — "valuables".

Say it: aivaj. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, ऐ, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ऐवज (aivaj) is a loan, usually traced through Persian to Arabic ᶜiwaḍ, "exchange, equivalent". Its Arabic root is ᶜ-w-ḍ (Lane). In Marathi it came to mean money and valuables.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- aivaj
- aivaj, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "valuables"? (ऐवज, aivaj.)

65.6 ऐ — the letter a number was waiting on

Draw the ai sign from the chapter where you met it. Then draw the standing letter from the lesson before this one.

Script

ऐ

ऐ is the standing form of the ai sign, and this one has been holding up a word you need rather than only a class of them.

ऐंशी — eighty. It opens with ऐ, so until this letter arrived the number could not be read at all.

Grammar Lens: a sign that arrived late, and a letter that arrived later

sign	letter
◌ै	ऐ

The ◌ी and ◌ो signs came in the first chapter. The ◌ै sign came far later, because a word needing it is rarer, and its letter is rarer still. That is why a gap like ऐंशी sits unnoticed. A number in the middle of a counting sequence looks like ordinary vocabulary, and nothing about it announces that one of its four shapes had never been drawn. The way such a gap gets found is by checking the letters a word needs against the letters a reader has met, rather than by reading the word and feeling that it looks familiar.

Writing: guided copy

How ऐ is written, stroke by stroke

Copy ऐ twice with the model visible. Then write the ै sign beside it and check which of the two is standing alone.

Before you move on

Which number opens with ऐ? (Eighty.) Could the ै sign have done that job? (No — it needs a consonant in front of it.)
Stroke order for ऐ is illustrated in the Devanagari letter-order animations held by Wikimedia Commons.

65.7 औ — the last one standing

Draw the au sign. Then draw the standing letter from the lesson before this one, and say which number it opened.

Script

औ

औ is the standing form of the au sign, and it is the fourth of four.

औषध — medicine. A word worth being able to read on a label, and one you could not have read an hour ago.

Grammar Lens: the four, and what they have in common

sign	letter
ी ो	ई ओ
ै ौ	ऐ औ

Four vowels the reader could hear and could hang on a consonant, and could not put at the front of a word. The gap was never in the sound — it was in the position.

That is the shape of this whole chapter. Where the script writes one vowel in two places, the two shapes look nothing alike, so a reader who has drawn the sign still meets the letter as something new.

Writing: guided copy

How औ is written, stroke by stroke

Copy औ twice with the model visible. Then write the ौ sign beside it and read the pair aloud, letter then sign.

Before you move on

How many standing vowels did this chapter add? (Four.) Was the gap in the sound or in the position? (The position.)

Stroke order for औ is illustrated in the Devanagari letter-order animations held by Wikimedia Commons.

65.8 standing vowels — four letters, from cold

Close the four lessons before this one. Draw the two signs you have had since the opening chapter, with nothing in front of you.

Script: the four pairs, written out once

sign	letter
ी ो	ई ओ
ै ौ	ऐ औ

Write the right column from memory. One rule decides which column a word needs: a consonant in front of the sound calls for the sign, nothing in front calls for the letter.

Grammar Lens: what the four unlocked

ऐंशी is eighty and औषध is medicine. Neither could be read before this chapter, and neither is unusual — one is a number in the middle of a counting sequence and the other is on a label in every pharmacy.
A word that looks ordinary can still be unreadable, and the way to find out is to check its letters against the ones you have been taught rather than to look at it and feel that it seems familiar.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- which shape a word starting with an o sound needs
- which shape ठ takes when the o rides it
- what decides between a sign and a letter
- the two words this chapter made readable

Before you move on

How many of these four had a sign you already knew? (All of them.) Was the gap in the sound or in the position? (The position.)

65.9 फ औ । — a sound that moved, a vowel that stands, a stroke that stops

The aspirated partner of प. Say its name, then say what its sound has done that the other aspirated letters have not.

Script: three marks, three different kinds of fact

	what it is
फ	the gap in the lip row — and the one letter whose sound has drifted
औ	the standing au, last of the vowels that can begin a word alone
।	the upright stroke that ends a sentence, now largely replaced by a full stop

Three different kinds of fact sit in that column, which is why they are worth holding together rather than as three isolated shapes.

फ is a fact about speech: the letter records an aspirated p, and the sound modern speakers make has moved away from it. औ is a fact about position: a vowel needs its own standing letter when nothing carries it. । is a fact about convention: a mark that is still correct and is quietly losing ground to an imported one.

Drift, position, convention. A script old enough to have a history carries all three at once, and none of them is a rule about pronunciation.

Your turn

- Say it: प, then फ, and note which of the two your mouth changes for
- Look: at औ and say why it is a whole letter rather than a sign
- Look: at । and say what a modern page is likely to print instead

- Trace it: each of the three once

Before you move on

Which of the three is a fact about a sound that moved? (फ.) When does a vowel need a standing letter? (When no consonant is carrying it.) What does । do, and what is replacing it? (Ends a sentence; the full stop.) And what do the three have in common? (Nothing — drift, position and convention are three different kinds of fact, which is the point.)

Chapter 66

The Parts of the Day

Modes: voice (3) eyes (3) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name the parts of the day and say that something happens in one of them.

From cold: the four parts of the day in the order they happen, the whole day that holds them, and each one turned into an at-that-time word in front of a verb – including the masculine one that takes -aa where the four feminine ones take -ii.

66.1 सकाळ (sakāḷ) — morning

You can ask कधी — when — and you have exactly one word to answer it with: उद्या, tomorrow.

- Recall: ask tumhī kadhī yetā? and answer it

That is a question with one answer. This chapter widens the answer.

You'll want to know: सकाळ

सकाळ — sakāḷ — morning

The last letter is ळ, the retroflex l you first read in काळजी घ्या. Standard Hindi lacks it, so do not read it as an ordinary ल.

Where सकाळ comes from is not settled. CDIAL has Sanskrit sakāla, "early in the morning" (13067), but lists no Marathi form there.

Grammar Lens: the ending that means "at that time"

सकाळ is the morning as a thing. To put an event in it, add -ी:

the part of the day	at that time
सकाळ sakāḷ	सकाळी sakāḷī

> मी सकाळी येतो. — mī sakāḷī yeto. — I come in the morning.

Notice where सकाळी sits: early, before the verb, in the same slot उद्या and कधी take. A Marathi time word fronts the verb. English needs two words for that slot — in the morning. Marathi needs one letter.

Your turn

- Say it: sakāḷ — morning
- Say it: sakāḷī — in the morning
- Say it: mī sakāḷī yeto
- Look: at सकाळ and find the ळ you already read in काळजी

Before you move on

What is सकाळ? (Morning.) What do you add to put something in it? (-ी — sakāḷī.) And where in the sentence does that word go? (Early, in front of the verb.)

66.2 दुपार (dupār) — afternoon

> Say the morning. Then say in the morning, and listen for the letter that does the work.

You'll want to know: दुपार

> दुपार — dupār — afternoon, the middle of the day

It is the stretch after the morning and before the evening — the middle of the day, when the sun is highest.

मी दुपारी येतो. — mī dupārī yeto. — I come in the afternoon.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दुपार is usually explained as "two watches", du- and pahār, "a watch of three hours"; CDIAL asks whether Sanskrit prahara renders Persian pahra (CDIAL 8900).

Grammar Lens: the ending holds

You were shown -ी on one word. Here it is on a second, doing the same job:

the part of the day	at that time
सकाळ sakāḷ	सकाळी sakāḷī
दुपार dupār	दुपारी dupārī

Two is where a pattern starts being worth trusting. Expect the next part of the day to behave the same way, and you will be right twice more before this chapter is over.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dupār — afternoon
- dupārī — in the afternoon
- mī dupārī yeto
- both parts of the day so far, in the order they happen

Before you move on

What is दुपार? (Afternoon.) How do you say in the afternoon? (दुपारी.) Which ending did you use, and had you seen it before? (-ी, and yes — on sakāḷī.)

66.3 संध्याकाळ (sandhyākāḷ) — evening

Two parts of the day, and their at-that-time forms. Say all four words before you turn to the new one.

You'll want to know: संध्याकाळ

संध्याकाळ — sandhyākāḷ — evening

It is the longest word in this chapter, and you have already read half of it. Look at its end:

सकाळ	*sa-kāḷ
संध्याकाळ	*sandhyā-kāḷ

The morning and the evening end in the same piece — काळ. Once you see that, संध्याकाळ stops being a long new word and becomes a short new piece — संध्या — in front of one you can already read.

That is worth doing to any long word in this language before deciding it is hard: look for the part of it you have met.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

संध्याकाळ is Sanskrit sandhyā, "twilight" (CDIAL 12918), and kāḷ, "time", from kāla (CDIAL 3084).

Grammar Lens: third time, same ending

मी संध्याकाळी येतो. — mī sandhyākāḷī yeto. — I come in the evening.

the part of the day	at that time
सकाळ	सकाळी
दुपार	दुपारी
संध्याकाळ	संध्याकाळी

Three for three. The ending has not cared how long the word was, where the stress fell, or what letter came before it.

Your turn

- Say it: sandhyākāḷ — evening
- Say it: sandhyākāḷī — in the evening
- Look: at सकाळ and संध्याकाळ, and find where they stop differing
- Say it: the three parts of the day so far, in the order they happen

Before you move on

What is संध्याकाळ? (Evening.) Which earlier word does it end like? (सकाळ.) Say I come in the evening. (मी संध्याकाळी येतो.)

66.4 रात्र (rātra) — night

Three parts of the day are yours. Say them in order, and then name the one still missing from the end of it.

You'll want to know: रात्र

रात्र — rātra — night

The word ends on त्र, a त and a र written as one joined shape. You have read that join before; here it closes the word rather than opening it, so give it its full value — rā-tra, not rāt.

मी रात्री येतो. — mī rātrī yeto. — I come at night.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रात्र is Sanskrit rātri, "night", lightly reshaped; the inherited form is rāt (CDIAL 10702).

Grammar Lens: four for four, and what English does instead

the part of the day	at that time
सकाळ	सकाळी
दुपार	दुपारी
संध्याकाळ	संध्याकाळी
रात्र	रात्री

Four words, one ending, no exceptions among them.
Now look at what English needed for that same column: in the morning, in the afternoon, in the evening — but at night. English changes its preposition and Marathi does not change anything. The irregular language here is the one you already speak.

Your turn

- Say it: rātra — night
- Say it: rātrī — at night
- Say it: all four parts of the day, in order
- Say it: all four at-that-time forms, in the same order
- Notice: which language needed a different word for the last one

Before you move on

Say I come at night. (मी रात्री येतो.) How many of the four parts of the day take -ी? (All four.) Which language had to change a word to say the same set? (English — in the morning, but at night.)

66.5 दिवस (divas) — day

Four parts, four at-that-time words. Say them. Then ask yourself what the four of them together are called.

You'll want to know: दिवस

दिवस — divas — day

Not a fifth part. The whole that holds the other four — the morning, the afternoon, the evening and the night are stretches of a दिवस.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दिवस is inherited, almost unchanged, from Sanskrit divasa, "heaven", later "day" (CDIAL 6333).

Grammar Lens: the one that will not take -ी

Four words took -ी without complaint. This one does not:

	at that time
रात्र	रात्री
दिवस	दिवसा — divasā, by day

-आ, not -ी. And the reason is one you already own.
सकाळ, दुपार, संध्याकाळ and रात्र are all feminine. दिवस is masculine — and gender is the thing that has decided endings for you since the chapter that gave you three of them.
So this is not the pattern breaking. It is the pattern meeting a noun of a different gender and doing what it has always done. An exception you can predict is not an exception.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- divas — day
- divasā — by day
- the four parts a divas is made of
- which gender each of the five words is

Before you move on

Is दिवस a part of the day? (No — it is the whole of it.) Why does it take -आ and not -ी? (It is masculine; the four parts are feminine.)

66.6 (the parts of the day) — from cold

Close the lessons before this one. Name the parts of the day you have, in the order they happen.

Grammar Lens: one ending, every part of the day

the part of the day	at that time
सकाळ sakāḷ	सकाळी sakāḷī
दुपार dupār	दुपारी dupārī
संध्याकाळ sandhyākāḷ	संध्याकाळी sandhyākāḷī
रात्र rātra	रात्री rātrī
दिवस divas	दिवसा divasā

The left column names a stretch of the day. The right column puts something inside it, and for the four feminine parts the only difference is **-ी.
The last row is the whole day rather than a part of it, it is masculine, and it takes -आ. Gender picked that, the way it has picked endings for you all along.
Then that word goes early, in front of the verb — the slot कधी and उद्या have taken since your first chapter. So a sentence about when something happens has the same shape every time, and only one word in it is new.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the four parts of the day, in order, then the word for the whole
- each one again as an at-that-time word, and hear which one differs
- mī sakāḷī yeto, then the same with the afternoon
- where the time word sits, without looking

Before you move on

Which ending puts an event inside a part of the day? (-ी.) Which of the five words refuses it, and why? (दिवस — masculine.) And does the time word go before or after the verb? (Before.)

Chapter 67

The Clock

Modes: voice (2) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask what time it is, say what time it is, and say that something happens at a given hour.
> From cold: ask the time, tell it with the verb that counts, and place an event at an hour with the form that never changes.

67.1 किती वाजले (kitī vājle) — "what time is it?"

Count from one to five. Then say the word you use to ask how many.

You already own both halves of this chapter's question.

You'll want to know: किती वाजले

किती वाजले? — kitī vājle? — what time is it?

The question word is किती, the one you ask how many with. Marathi does not ask what time it is — it asks how many have sounded.

वाजणे is to sound, to ring, to strike. English kept that picture when clocks had bells — the clock struck three.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वाजले comes from Sanskrit vādyate, "is made to sound" (CDIAL 11513).

Grammar Lens: the verb counts with you

Answer it with a number, and the verb changes for one:

एक वाजला. ek vājlā	It is one o'clock.
दोन वाजले. don vājle	It is two o'clock.
पाच वाजले. pāc vājle	It is five o'clock.

One struck. Two struck. Singular for one, plural for everything above it, which is what a verb about how many sounded ought to do. You have seen a Marathi verb go plural before, in तुम्ही कसे आहात — but that plural was for respect, on one person. This one is plural because the things counted really are more than one. Same shape, different reason.
So there is one form to learn, not twelve: -ला after एक, -ले after every other number.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kitī vājle?
- ek vājlā — one o'clock
- don vājle, tīn vājle, chār vājle
- which number is the odd one out, and what it does to the verb

Before you move on

What does the question literally ask? (How many have sounded.) Which number takes वाजला rather than वाजले? (एक — one.)

67.2 वाजता (vājtā) — "at _____ o'clock"

Say it is one o'clock. Then say it is three o'clock, and hear the verb change.

You'll want to know: वाजता

> मी दोन वाजता येतो. — mī don vājtā yeto. — I come at two o'clock.

Telling the time and putting something at a time are two different jobs, and Marathi uses two different words for them:

दोन वाजले	it is two o'clock
दोन वाजता	at two o'clock

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वाजता comes from Sanskrit vādyate, "is made to sound" (CDIAL 11513).

Grammar Lens: the one that never moves

वाजले counted with you — वाजला after one, वाजले after the rest. वाजता does not. It is वाजता after every number there is:

एक वाजता	at one
दोन वाजता	at two
बारा वाजता	at twelve

So the harder-looking half of the clock is the easier one. And the whole phrase then goes where every time word on this track goes — early, in front of the verb, exactly where सकाळी sat.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ek vājtā, don vājtā, bārā vājtā
- mī don vājtā yeto
- the difference between don vājle and don vājtā
- the same sentence with a part of the day instead of a number

Before you move on

How do you say at four o'clock? (चार वाजता.) Does वाजता change after एक? (No — only वाजले does that.) And where does the phrase sit? (In front of the verb.)

67.3 (the clock) — from cold

Close the lessons before this one. Ask somebody the time, then answer yourself with one o'clock and with six o'clock.

Grammar Lens: two words, one of which counts

	telling it	placing something at it
one	एक वाजला	एक वाजता
two	दोन वाजले	दोन वाजता

Only the left column moves, and only for एक. The right column is one word for every hour on the clock.
This chapter added no new numbers. You had all twelve already, and until now the only thing you could do with them was count. The clock is what they were for.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kitī vājle?
- the hours from one to five, told
- the same hours, placed — ek vājtā … pāc vājtā
- mī dahā vājtā yeto
- which of the two words ever changes, and after which number

Before you move on

Ask the time. (किती वाजले?) Say it is one o'clock. (एक वाजला.) Say at eleven o'clock. (अकरा वाजता.) How many new numbers did this chapter teach you? (None — you had them all.)

Chapter 68

Three Greetings, One Word

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read the time-of-day greetings, and I know which greeting Marathi speakers actually use at any hour.
> From cold: the three shubh greetings in the order the day runs, the one new word they are all built from, and the greeting that replaces all of them in speech.

68.1 शुभ सकाळ (śubh sakāḷ) — "good morning"

Say the word for morning. Then say the greeting you have used since your very first Marathi word.

You'll want to know: शुभ

शुभ — śubh — auspicious, good

One word. It goes in front of a part of the day, and that is the whole construction:

शुभ सकाळ. — śubh sakāḷ. — good morning.

The second word is not new. सकाळ is yours already, and so are the other parts of the day — which means one new word buys you a greeting for each of them. That is the cheapest chapter you have had in a while, and it is cheap because of work you already did.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

शुभ is Sanskrit śubha, "auspicious" (CDIAL 12532); the origin of सकाळ is not settled.

Why it's said this way

Here is the part worth having, and it is about when you would actually say this.
नमस्कार covers every hour of the day. Your first Marathi word was the all-purpose greeting, and it has not stopped being that. Marathi does not need a different greeting for the morning the way English does.
शुभ सकाळ is real, and it skews formal and written — a message, a notice, a broadcast, the top of something addressed to a group. Spoken between two people who know each other, नमस्कार is the ordinary choice at any hour.
So learn this to read it and to use it where it belongs, and do not replace the greeting you already have.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- śubh — good, auspicious
- śubh sakāḷ
- which of the two words in it you already knew
- what you would say instead, out loud, to a person

Before you move on

What does शुभ mean on its own? (Auspicious, good.) How many new words did good morning cost you? (One.) And which greeting still covers every hour? (नमस्कार.)

68.2 शुभ दुपार (śubh dupār) — "good afternoon"

Say good morning. Now say the part of the day that comes after the morning, and put the same word in front of it before you read on.

You'll want to know: शुभ दुपार

शुभ दुपार. — śubh dupār. — good afternoon.

If you built that yourself in the warm-up, the lesson has already done its job. शुभ does not change for the word behind it, and the word behind it is one you have had since the parts of the day.

शुभ सकाळ	good morning
शुभ दुपार	good afternoon

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

शुभ is Sanskrit śubha, "auspicious" (CDIAL 12532); दुपार is usually explained as "two watches" (CDIAL 8900).

Grammar Lens: a pattern you can finish alone

Two rows are enough to see the shape: शुभ plus a part of the day. You can already say the evening greeting, and the next lesson will only confirm what you worked out rather than teach it to you. That is what a system is worth — the words stop arriving one at a time.
This one is also the least used of the set in speech, for the same reason the last lesson gave: there is a greeting that covers the whole day and Marathi speakers reach for it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- śubh dupār
- both greetings you have, in the order the day runs
- the third one, before anybody teaches it to you

Before you move on

How do you say good afternoon? (शुभ दुपार.) Did शुभ change? (No — it never does.) Which part of the day can you still put behind it? (The evening one.)

68.3 शुभ संध्याकाळ (śubh sandhyākāḷ) — "good evening"

Say the two greetings you have. Then say the one you worked out last lesson without being taught it.

You'll want to know: शुभ संध्याकाळ

शुभ संध्याकाळ.

— śubh sandhyākāḷ. — good evening.

You built this before you read it. शुभ in front, the part of the day behind, nothing changed in either.

शुभ सकाळ	good morning
शुभ दुपार	good afternoon
शुभ संध्याकाळ	good evening

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

शुभ is Sanskrit śubha, "auspicious" (CDIAL 12532); संध्याकाळ is sandhyā, "twilight", and kāḷ, "time".

Why it's said this way

Three greetings, and the honest summary of all three is the same. They belong to writing and to formal speech — a notice, a message, the opening of something addressed to a room. Between two people, at any hour of the day, the greeting is नमस्कार, and it was the first word this book gave you.
That is not a reason to skip them. You will read them, and a reader who has never seen शुभ will stall on a word that costs nothing to know. It is a reason not to swap out a working greeting for one that will sound like a broadcast.

Grammar Lens: where the pattern stops

You have four parts of the day and three greetings. The night is the one that does not follow.
Its greeting is built on रात्री — the at-that-time form from the parts of the day — rather than on the bare रात्र these three use. This book is not teaching that phrase here; it names the exception so that you do not build it wrongly.

A pattern worth trusting is one you also know the edge of.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- śubh sandhyākāḷ
- all three, in the order the day runs
- which part of the day has no greeting in this chapter
- what you would actually say to a person, at any hour

Before you move on

Say good evening. (शुभ संध्याकाळ.) Which register do these three belong to? (Written and formal.) And which part of the day was left out, because it does not follow the pattern? (The night.)

68.4 (three greetings, one word) — from cold

From memory alone, say the one word this chapter taught, and then say what it means on its own.

Grammar Lens: one word, three greetings

शुभ सकाळ	good morning
शुभ दुपार	good afternoon
शुभ संध्याकाळ	good evening

This chapter taught one word. Everything on the right of शुभ you already had, which is why three greetings cost what one usually does. That is the second time the parts of the day have paid for something: they gave you the at-that-time forms first, and now they give you these.

What you've built

Three greetings to read, and one greeting to say.
नमस्कार was the first Marathi word in this book and it still covers every hour of the day. The three above belong to notices, messages and formal openings. Knowing both, and knowing which is which, is the whole of what this chapter is for.
The night has no greeting here on purpose: its form is built on रात्री rather than the bare part of the day, so it does not follow these three.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three greetings, in the order the day runs
- the one word that is new, and what it means alone
- which greeting you would use out loud, and at what hour
- which part of the day is missing from the three, and why

Before you move on

How many new words did this chapter teach? (One — शुभ.) Say good evening. (शुभ संध्याकाळ.) And which greeting would you actually speak, at any hour of the day? (नमस्कार.)

Chapter 69

This One and That One

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can point at something near or far in the right gender, and I can talk about a third person.
> From cold: the two-by-three grid of pointing words, the fact that the front carries distance while the ending carries the noun's gender, and the far row doing double duty as he, she and it.

69.1 हा / ही / हे (hā / hī / he) — "this"

Three nouns, three genders. मित्र is masculine, खोली is feminine, घर is neuter. Say all three before you turn the page.

You'll want to know: हा, ही, हे

हा hā · ही hī · हे he — this

English has one word for this. Marathi has three, and which one you use is decided by the noun, not by you:

हा मित्र hā mitra	this friend
ही खोली hī khoolī	this room
हे घर he ghar	this house

You have made this choice before. माझा and माझी split the same way, on the same two endings — -आ for a masculine noun, -ई for a feminine one. So the first two rows are a habit you already have, pointed at a new word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of हा is not settled; CDIAL has no entry for it.

Grammar Lens: it goes in front, and it never stands alone here

हा sits before its noun — hā mitra, never mitra hā. That is the same slot माझा and डावा take, so the front of a Marathi noun is becoming a place you know: the words that describe it queue up there.
And because the ending is chosen by the noun, the word tells you the gender of anything that follows it. Meet a noun you have never read, with ही in front of it, and you already know one true thing about it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hā mitra, hī khoolī, he ghar
- which of the three endings matches माझा
- where the word sits — before the noun or after it

Before you move on

How do you say this room? (ही खोली.) Who chooses between हा, ही and हे — you, or the noun? (The noun.) And where does the word go? (In front.)

69.2 तो / ती / ते (to / tī / te) — "that"

Say this house, this room, this friend. Keep the three endings in your ear; only their front is about to change.

You'll want to know: तो, ती, ते

तो to · ती tī · ते te — that

near	far
हा मित्र	तो मित्र
ही खोली	ती खोली
हे घर	ते घर

Only the first letter moved. ह- became त-, and the three endings did not budge, because they were never about distance — they were about the noun.

That is the whole of the second lesson. You learned six words by learning four.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तो is usually traced to the old pronoun sa, "he, that", whose other forms use the stem ta-; CDIAL lists no Marathi form (CDIAL 12815).

Why it's said this way

One warning worth having before you meet ते on a page.
You have already read ते in this book, and it was not this word. In एक ते पाच — ek te pāc — it means "one to five", a stretch between two numbers. Same three letters, different job.
Nothing in the shape tells them apart. What tells them apart is what sits beside it: a noun after it makes it that; two numbers around it make it to. Marathi will do this to you again, and the habit of reading the neighbours rather than the word alone is what gets you through it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to mitra, tī khoolī, te ghar
- each near word and its far partner, as a pair
- the other job ते does, and how you would tell which is which

Before you move on

How do you say that house? (ते घर.) What is the only difference between this room and that room? (The first letter.) And what else can ते mean? (To, between two numbers.)

69.3 हा · तो — two rows, and what the far one is really for

Say the six words, near row first, in the order masculine, feminine, neuter.

Grammar Lens: two rows, not three

Marathi points in two directions and stops. ह- is here; त- is not here. There is no third word for that one over there, further away. Spanish needs three — este, ese, aquel — and English is unstable about it, keeping yonder alive only in corners. Marathi draws the line once, between what is at hand and what is not, and everything not at hand shares one row.
That is fewer words to learn and one fewer decision to make while speaking.

Grammar Lens: the far row is also he, she and it

Here is the part that matters most, and it is not about pointing at all.

> तो — that — is also he. ती — that — is also she. ते — that — is also it.

Marathi does not keep a separate set of third-person pronouns. It reuses the far row. Whoever is not you and not the person you are speaking to is, by default, the one over there.
So this chapter did more than teach pointing:

मी	I
तू / तुम्ही	you
तो / ती / ते	he / she / it

That is the whole set of people a sentence can be about, and until now you had the first two rows and not the third.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- how many directions Marathi points in
- to, and then both things it can mean
- the three rows of people — I, you, and the third

Before you move on

How many directions does Marathi point in? (Two — here and not here.) How do you say she? (ती — the same word as that.) And does Marathi have a separate word for he? (No — it reuses the far row.)

69.4 (this one and that one) — from cold

Write it: the grid from memory — two rows, three columns

Grammar Lens: four letters, six words

	masculine	feminine
near	हा	ही
far	तो	ती

The neuter completes each row — हे and ते — and the grid is done.
Two fronts and three endings make six words. The front carries the distance and is yours to choose; the ending carries the gender and is the noun's. Neither decision touches the other, which is why six words cost you four.
All six sit in front of their noun, in the slot माझा and डावा already use.

What you've built

Pointing, and the third person.
तो, ती and ते are he, she and it as well as that. Before this chapter a Marathi sentence could be about you or about the person you were speaking to, and about nobody else. Now it can be about anyone.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the near row, then the far row
- this room and that room
- he, she, it — without looking
- which part of each word the noun decided

Before you move on

How many pointing rows does Marathi have? (Two.) Say that room. (ती खोली.) And what else do तो, ती and ते do? (They are he, she and it.)

Chapter 70

Hand, Foot, Hair, Tooth, Throat

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a hand, a foot, a leg, hair, a tooth and the throat.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 70: I can say a hand, a foot, a leg, hair, a tooth and the throat.

70.1 हात (hāt) — a hand

Before the new one: say the Marathi for ninth, then the Marathi for tenth.

You'll want to know: हात

हात — hāt — "a hand".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हात (hāt) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from hasta, "hand" (CDIAL 14024). CDIAL glosses the Marathi word "hand, arm, cubit".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hāt
- Say it: hāt, once more
- Say it: say hāt
- Recall: say the Marathi for ninth, then the Marathi for tenth, then say hāt again

Before you move on

What does हात mean? ("A hand".) Say it once more.

70.2 पाय (pāy) — a foot, a leg

Before the new one: say the Marathi for tenth, then the Marathi for a hand.

Chapter 87

Chilli, Butter, Honey, Oil, Grapes

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a chilli, butter, honey, oil and grapes.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 87: I can say a chilli, butter, honey, oil and grapes.

87.1 मिरची (mirchī) — a chilli

Before the new one: say the Marathi for sugar, then the Marathi for salt.

You'll want to know: मिरची

मिरची — mirchī — "a chilli".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मिरची (mirchī) belongs with Sanskrit marīca, "peppercorn" (CDIAL 9875). CDIAL lists Marathi only under the plain marīca, with mirī, "a peppercorn"; mirchī, with its -ch-, matches the variant maricca* in the same entry, under which CDIAL puts Hindi mirc and Gujarati marcī. CDIAL notes the view that the Sanskrit word comes from Austroasiatic. The chilli came later, from the Americas, and took over the pepper's name.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mirchī
- Say it: mirchī, once more
- Say it: say mirchī
- Recall: say the Marathi for sugar, then the Marathi for salt, then say mirchī again

Before the new one: say the Marathi for oil, then the Marathi for grapes.

You'll want to know: संत्रे

संत्रे — santre — "an orange".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of संत्रे (santre) is uncertain. It is often linked with the town of Cintra (Sintra) in Portugal, but CDIAL has no entry for it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: santre
- Say it: santre, once more
- Say it: say santre
- Recall: say the Marathi for oil, then the Marathi for grapes, then say santre again

Before you move on

What does संत्रे mean? ("An orange".) Say it once more.

88.2 लिंबू (limbū) — a lemon

Before the new one: say the Marathi for grapes, then the Marathi for an orange.

You'll want to know: लिंबू

लिंबू — limbū — "a lemon".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

लिंबू (limbū) goes back to Sanskrit nimbū, "lime", which CDIAL takes from Austroasiatic (CDIAL 7247). CDIAL lists Marathi nīṁbūṁ; the form with l- matches Gujarati lĩbu, "lime, lemon".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: limbū
- Say it: limbū, once more
- Say it: say limbū
- Recall: say the Marathi for grapes, then the Marathi for an orange, then say limbū again

Before the new one: say the Marathi for an orange, then the Marathi for a lemon.

You'll want to know: नाश्ता

नाश्ता — nāshtā — "breakfast".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

नाश्ता (nāshtā) is a loan, usually traced to Persian nāshtā, "not having eaten". The meal is named for the fast it ends.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nāshtā
- Say it: nāshtā, once more
- Say it: say nāshtā
- Recall: say the Marathi for an orange, then the Marathi for a lemon, then say nāshtā again

Before you move on

What does नाश्ता mean? ("Breakfast".) Say it once more.

88.4 अंडे (aṇḍe) — an egg

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a lemon, then the Marathi for breakfast.

You'll want to know: अंडे

अंडे — aṇḍe — "an egg".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अंडे (aṇḍe) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit āṇḍa, "egg" (CDIAL 1111). CDIAL reports Mayrhofer's view that the word is of Munda origin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aṇḍe
- Say it: aṇḍe, once more
- Say it: say aṇḍe

89.3 खिडकी (khiḍkī) — a window

Before the new one: say the Marathi for an onion, then the Marathi for a mango.

You'll want to know: खिडकी

खिडकी — khiḍkī — "a window".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खिडकी (khiḍkī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from khaṭakkikā, "side door" (CDIAL 3770). CDIAL glosses the Marathi word "back door, window", and suggests the word first named something made of matting.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: khiḍkī
- Say it: khiḍkī, once more
- Say it: say khiḍkī
- Recall: say the Marathi for an onion, then the Marathi for a mango, then say khiḍkī again

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a wall, then the Marathi for a roof.

You'll want to know: पलंग

पलंग — palaṅg — "a bed".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पलंग (palaṅg) goes back to Sanskrit palyaṅka, "bed" (CDIAL 7964). CDIAL says the north-western form with -ṅg was borrowed widely as the word for "bed"; Marathi's own inherited forms are pālak, "cradle", and pālkhī, "litter".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: palaṅg
- Say it: palaṅg, once more
- Say it: say palaṅg
- Recall: say the Marathi for a wall, then the Marathi for a roof, then say palaṅg again

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a dog, then the Marathi for a cat.

You'll want to know: घोडा

घोडा — ghoḍā — "a horse".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

घोडा (ghoḍā) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit ghoṭa, "horse" (CDIAL 4516). CDIAL calls the Sanskrit word non-Aryan, probably from Dravidian.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ghoḍā
- Say it: ghoḍā, once more
- Say it: say ghoḍā
- Recall: say the Marathi for a dog, then the Marathi for a cat, then say ghoḍā again

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a cow, then the Marathi for a goat.

You'll want to know: मेंढी

मेंढी — meṇḍhī — "a sheep".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मेंढी (meṇḍhī) is the feminine of Marathi meṇḍhā, "ram", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit meṇḍha, "ram", a word from the old word-lists (CDIAL 10310). CDIAL takes it as a loan-word, probably of Austroasiatic origin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: meṇḍhī
- Say it: meṇḍhī, once more
- Say it: say meṇḍhī
- Recall: say the Marathi for a cow, then the Marathi for a goat, then say meṇḍhī again

Before you move on

What does मेंढी mean? ("A sheep".) Say it once more.

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a sheep, then the Marathi for a bird.

You'll want to know: उंदीर

उंदीर — undīr — "a mouse".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

उंदीर (undīr) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit undura, "rat, mouse" (CDIAL 2095). CDIAL notes the view that the Sanskrit word comes from Austroasiatic.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: undīr
- Say it: undīr, once more
- Say it: say undīr
- Recall: say the Marathi for a sheep, then the Marathi for a bird, then say undīr again

- Say it: say vāgh
- Recall: say the Marathi for a mouse, then the Marathi for a lion, then say vāgh again

Before you move on

What does वाघ mean? ("A tiger".) Say it once more.

101.4 हत्ती (hattī) — an elephant

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a lion, then the Marathi for a tiger.

You'll want to know: हत्ती

हत्ती — hattī — "an elephant".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हत्ती (hattī) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit hastin, "having hands", which meant "elephant" from the Rigveda on (CDIAL 14039). CDIAL suggests it renders karin, "elephant", a word perhaps of non-Aryan origin, linked by folk etymology with kara, "hand".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hattī
- Say it: hattī, once more
- Say it: say hattī
- Recall: say the Marathi for a lion, then the Marathi for a tiger, then say hattī again

- Say it: say peṭī
- Recall: say the Marathi for a comb, then the Marathi for soap, then say peṭī again

Before you move on

What does पेटी mean? ("A box".) Say it once more.

133.3 पिशवी (piśvī) — a bag

Before the new one: say the Marathi for soap, then the Marathi for a box.

You'll want to know: पिशवी

पिशवी — piśvī — "a bag".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of पिशवी (piśvī) is not settled. Neither CDIAL nor DEDR, searched by form and by meaning, has an entry for it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: piśvī
- Say it: piśvī, once more
- Say it: say piśvī
- Recall: say the Marathi for soap, then the Marathi for a box, then say piśvī again

133.4 टोपली (ṭoplī) — a basket

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a box, then the Marathi for a bag.

You'll want to know: टोपली

टोपली — ṭoplī — "a basket".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

टोपली (ṭoplī) is inherited. CDIAL lists Marathi ṭoplā, "basket", with an added -l-, under a reconstructed ṭōppa*, "basket-work", and asks whether that is the same word as the ṭōppa* behind टोपी (CDIAL 5482).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭoplī
- Say it: ṭoplī, once more

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a pencil, then the Marathi for an eraser.

You'll want to know: दप्तर

दप्तर — daptar — "a school bag".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दप्तर (daptar) is a loan, usually traced through Persian to Arabic daftar, "register, account book" (Lane), which Arabic itself took from Greek. Marathi uses it for a school bag, the bag that holds the books.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: daptar
- Say it: daptar, once more
- Say it: say daptar
- Recall: say the Marathi for a pencil, then the Marathi for an eraser, then say daptar again

Before you move on

What does दप्तर mean? ("A school bag".) Say it once more.

135.2 परीक्षा (parīkṣā) — an exam

Before the new one: say the Marathi for an eraser, then the Marathi for a school bag.

Read it: the message aloud as one run — मी बरा आहे. उद्या भेटू.

You'll want to know: परीक्षा

परीक्षा — parīkṣā — "an exam".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

परीक्षा (parīkṣā) is Sanskrit parīkṣā, "inspection, test", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama (CDIAL 7904).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

136.3 पोळी (poḷī) — a chapati

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a coat, then the Marathi for a jumper.

You'll want to know: पोळी

पोळी — poḷī — "a chapati".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पोळी (poḷī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from pauli, "a cake of scorched grain and ghee" (CDIAL 8423). CDIAL glosses the Marathi word "wheaten cake", and suggests, with a "perhaps", a link with Prakrit paülaï, "cooks", or with pūpalā, "a cake".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: poḷī
- Say it: poḷī, once more

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a chapati, then the Marathi for a vegetable dish.

You'll want to know: वरण

वरण — varaṇ — "plain dal".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL lists Marathi varaṇ, "tasty dish of pulse", under a reconstructed aparānna*, built from Sanskrit apara, "other, later", and anna, "food" (CDIAL 442). CDIAL calls the link very doubtful: the loss of the first a- and the single -ṇ- are not explained.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: varaṇ
- Say it: varaṇ, once more
- Say it: say varaṇ
- Recall: say the Marathi for a chapati, then the Marathi for a vegetable dish, then say varaṇ again

Before the new one: say the Marathi for soil, then the Marathi for a rock.

You'll want to know: लाट

लाट — lāṭ — "a wave".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of लाट (lāṭ) is not settled. CDIAL has no entry for it in this sense; its Marathi lāṭ is a different word, "large beam" (CDIAL 10991).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lāṭ
- Say it: lāṭ, once more
- Say it: say lāṭ

161.1 वेळापत्रक (veḷāpatrak) — a timetable

Before the new one: say the Marathi for from now on, then the Marathi for to plan.

You'll want to know: वेळापत्रक

वेळापत्रक — veḷāpatrak — "a timetable".

Read it: the board

The board says बस: सकाळी आठ वाजता. The bus leaves at eight in the morning, so be there before eight.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वेळापत्रक (veḷāpatrak) is "time-sheet": veḷā, "time", from Sanskrit velā, "limit, time" (CDIAL 12115), and patrak, "sheet", from Sanskrit pattraka, "leaf" (CDIAL 7733).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: veḷāpatrak
- Say it: veḷāpatrak, once more
- Say it: say veḷāpatrak
- Recall: say the Marathi for from now on, then the Marathi for to plan, then say veḷāpatrak again

Before you move on

What does वेळापत्रक mean? ("A timetable".) Say it once more.

161.2 सूचना (sūcanā) — a notice, an instruction

Before the new one: say the Marathi for to plan, then the Marathi for a timetable.

You'll want to know: सूचना

सूचना — sūcanā — "a notice, an instruction".

Read it: the notice

The notice says दुकान रविवारी बंद. The shop is closed on Sundays, so come on another day.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सूचना (sūcanā) is Sanskrit sūcanā, "pointing out, information", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama. It is built on sūc, "to point out".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sūcanā
- Say it: sūcanā, once more
- Say it: say sūcanā
- Recall: say the Marathi for to plan, then the Marathi for a timetable, then say sūcanā again

Before you move on

What does सूचना mean? ("A notice, an instruction".) Say it once more.

161.3 भाडे (bhāḍe) — rent; a fare

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a timetable, then the Marathi for a notice.

You'll want to know: भाडे

भाडे — bhāḍe — "rent; a fare". The money for a room, or for a ride: खोलीचे भाडे — kholīce bhāḍe — "the rent for the room".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

भाडे (bhāḍe) comes through Middle Indo-Aryan bhāṭa, "wages", which CDIAL traces, as more probable than a link with bhṛta, "hired", to a reconstructed bhārta*, "pertaining to servants" (CDIAL 9468).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bhāḍe
- Say it: bhāḍe, once more
- Say it: say bhāḍe

- Recall: say the Marathi for a timetable, then the Marathi for a notice, then say bhāḍe again

Before you move on

What does भाडे mean? ("Rent; a fare".) Say it once more.

161.4 जाहिरात (jāhirāt) — an advert

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a notice, then the Marathi for rent; a fare.

You'll want to know: जाहिरात

जाहिरात — jāhirāt — "an advert".

Read it: the advert

The advert says खोली भाड्याने देणे आहे. — "Room to let." A room is free to rent.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

जाहिरात (jāhirāt) is built on jāhīr, "public, evident", which is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic ẓāhir, "evident, manifest", whose root is ẓ-h-r (Lane).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: jāhirāt
- Say it: jāhirāt, once more

What Happened, Who Did It, What There Was

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what happened (gelo, ālī), who did something with -ne (tyāne kām kelaṁ), and what there was (hotā).
> Complete MR-R276-what-happened: say what happened, who did it and what there was, in the past.

276.1 मी गेलो (mī gelo) — the past, person by person

Before the new one: say the last two things you named, dance and a stage. (nṛtya, raṅgmañc.) Then the line you have said since your first meeting: भेटून आनंद झाला (bheṭūn ānand jhālā).

Its last word, झाला, is a past: "(gladness) came about".

You'll want to know: the past, person by person

काल मी पुण्याला गेलो.

kāl mī puṇyālā gelo. — "Yesterday I went to Pune."

काल (kāl, "yesterday"). गेलो is जाणे in the past: the stem गे-, then -ल-, then an ending for person and gender, as in बोलतो / बोलते:

- मी गेलो (gelo) — I went; a woman says मी गेले (gele)
- तू गेलास (gelās) — you went, to a friend; to a woman, गेलीस (gelīs)
- तो गेला (gelā) — he went; ती गेली (gelī) — she went
- आम्ही (āmhī, "we") गेलो — we went
- तुम्ही गेलात (gelāt) — you went, with respect or to several
- ते गेले (gele) — they went; त्या (tyā, "they, all women") गेल्या (gelyā)

-ा, -ी, -ं are the endings of माझा, माझी, माझं. The Marathi past behaves like an adjective that agrees with whoever went.

You'll want to know: the past stems

Most verbs put -ल- straight onto the stem: बसणे → मी बसलो (mī baslo), झोपणे → मी झोपलो (mī jhoplo), पडणे → तो पडला (to paḍlā), "he fell". A few add a vowel first: राहणे → मी राहिलो (mī rāhilo), "I stayed"; निघणे → मी निघालो (mī nighālo), "I set out".

Two more change the stem itself:

- येणे → मी आलो (mī ālo), ती आली (tī ālī) — came
- होणे (hoṇe, "to become, to happen") → तो झाला (to jhālā), ते झालं (te jhālaṁ) — became, happened

"Did not" keeps the past form and puts नाही last, as you do with the present: मी गेलो नाही (mī gelo nāhī), "I didn't go".

Your turn

घरी (gharī, "home, at home").

Say these aloud:

- "Yesterday I went to Pune" — kāl mī puṇyālā gelo
- "She came home in the evening" — tī sandhyākāḷī gharī ālī
- "We sat. Then we slept." — āmhī baslo. mag āmhī jhoplo.

Before you move on

"I went"? (गेलो, or गेले.) "He came"? (आला.) "It happened"? (झालं.) Which ending says "she"? (-ी: गेली.) "I didn't go"? (मी गेलो नाही.)

276.2 त्याने काम केलं (tyāne kām kelaṁ) — the past that agrees with the thing

Say "I went" and "she came". (mī gelo, tī ālī.) Then "I see with my eye", with the -ने of a tool. (mī ḍoḷyāne pāhto.)

That -ने was promised a second job. This is it.

Grammar Lens: the doer takes -ने

त्याने काम केलं.

tyāne kām kelaṁ. — "He did the work."

A verb with an object, such as eating, reading or doing, changes the past. The doer is marked: तो becomes त्याने (tyāne), ती becomes तिने (tine), and ते, "they", becomes त्यांनी (tyānnī). A name takes -ने too: मीराने (mīrāne).
मी, तू, आम्ही and तुम्ही take nothing: मी काम केलं (mī kām kelaṁ), "I did the work".

You'll want to know: the verb follows the thing

मी आंबा खाल्ला.

mī āmbā khāllā. — "I ate a mango."

आंबा is masculine, so the verb ends in -ा, whoever ate it. Change the thing and the verb changes:

- मी पोळी खाल्ली (khāllī) — I ate a chapati (feminine)
- मी पुस्तक वाचलं (vāclaṁ) — I read a book (neuter)
- तिने चित्रपट पाहिला (pāhilā) — she watched a film

After तू the verb adds -स: तू पुस्तक वाचलंस (tū pustak vāclaṁs); after तुम्ही, -त: तुम्ही काय केलंत? (tumhī kāy kelant?), "What did you do?"

Pasts to learn: केलं, खाल्लं, घेतलं (ghetlaṁ), दिलं (dilaṁ), सांगितलं (sāṅgitlaṁ), and from पिणे, प्यायलं (pyāylaṁ). With no object, -ं: त्याने सांगितलं (tyāne sāṅgitlaṁ), "he said so". Formal print writes this -ं as -े (केले). A few verbs with an object still follow the doer: मी मराठी शिकलो (mī marāṭhī śiklo).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "He did the work" — tyāne kām kelaṁ
- "I ate a mango" — mī āmbā khāllā
- "Meera read the news" — mīrāne bātmī vāclī

Before you move on

Who takes -ने? (त्याने, तिने, त्यांनी, and a name.) Who takes nothing? (मी, तू, आम्ही, तुम्ही.) Why खाल्ली in मी पोळी खाल्ली? (पोळी is feminine, and the verb follows the thing.) "I read a book"? (मी पुस्तक वाचलं.)

276.3 होता (hotā) — was, and there was

Say "I am well": mī barā āhe. Then "I went": mī gelo.

आहे has a past of its own, and it takes the endings of गेलो.

You'll want to know: होता, 'was'

काल मी घरी होतो.

kāl mī gharī hoto. — "Yesterday I was at home."

- मी होतो (hoto) — I was; a woman says होते (hote)
- तू होतास (hotās) / होतीस (hotīs) — you were, to a friend
- तो होता (hotā), ती होती (hotī), ते होतं (hotaṁ) — he, she, it was
- आम्ही होतो, तुम्ही होतात (hotāt), ते होते (hote) — we, you, they were

It is also "there was":

गावात एक नदी होती.

gāvāt ek nadī hotī. — "There was a river in the village."

You'll want to know: नव्हता, 'was not'

"Was not" is one word, with the same endings: नव्हतो (navhto), नव्हता (navhtā), नव्हती (navhtī), नव्हतं (navhtaṁ).

तो शाळेत नव्हता.

to śāḷet navhtā. — "He was not at school."

It is to होता what नाही is to आहे.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Yesterday I was at home" — kāl mī gharī hoto
- "There was a big shop in the village" — gāvāt ek moṭhaṁ dukān hotaṁ
- "He was not at school" — to śāḷet navhtā

Before you move on

"I was"? (होतो, or होते.) "It was"? (होतं.) "There was a river"? (एक नदी होती.) "She was not"? (ती नव्हती.)

276.4 Review — what happened

Say "Yesterday I went to Pune". (kāl mī puṇyālā gelo.) Then "she came" and "we sat". (tī ālī, āmhī baslo.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- I came home in the evening, and then I slept.
- Meera ate a mango. Arun read a book.
- What did you do yesterday? I was at home.
- There was a big shop in the village.
- I didn't go to school. He was not at home either.

Before you move on

Which past follows the one who went? (गेलो, आली: no object.) Which follows the thing? (The past with an object: मीराने आंबा खाल्ला.) "There was"? (होता, होती, होतं.) "Was not"? (नव्हता.)

Chapter 277

Will, Going To, Will Not

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what will happen (jāīn, paḍel), what I am going to do (jāṇār āhe) and what I won't do (jāṇār nāhī).
> Complete MR-R277-what-will-happen: say what will happen, what is planned and what won't happen.

277.1 मी जाईन (mī jāīn) — the future, person by person

Say "see you tomorrow": udyā bheṭū. Then "I went": mī gelo.

भेटू, "we'll meet", has been a future all along. Here are the others.

You'll want to know: the future, person by person

उद्या मी पुण्याला जाईन.

udyā mī puṇyālā jāīn. — "Tomorrow I will go to Pune."

- मी जाईन (jāīn) — I will go
- तू जाशील (jāśīl) — you will go, to a friend
- तो, ती, ते जाईल (jāīl) — he, she, it will go

- आम्ही जाऊ (jāū) — we will go: the -ऊ of भेटू
- तुम्ही जाल (jāl) — you will go, with respect
- ते जातील (jātīl) — they will go

There is no gender here: a man and a woman both say मी जाईन.

You'll want to know: more verbs in the future

The endings stay; the stem in front changes:

- येणे → मी येईन (mī yeīn), तो येईल (to yeīl), तुम्ही याल (tumhī yāl)
- करणे → मी करीन (mī karīn), तो करेल (to karel), आम्ही करू (āmhī karū)
- वाचणे → मी वाचीन (mī vācīn), ती वाचेल (tī vācel)
- पडणे → पाऊस पडेल (pāūs paḍel), "it will rain"
- असणे → मी घरी असेन (mī gharī asen), "I will be at home"; तो असेल (to asel)
- होणे → काय होईल? (kāy hoīl?), "What will happen?"

Many people say करेन (karen) and वाचेन (vācen) for "I will"; both are heard.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Tomorrow I will go to Pune" — udyā mī puṇyālā jāīn
- "It will rain in the evening" — sandhyākāḷī pāūs paḍel
- "We will meet tomorrow" — āmhī udyā bheṭū
- "What will happen?" — kāy hoīl?

Before you move on

"I will go"? (जाईन.) "They will go"? (जातील.) "We will go"? (जाऊ.) "It will rain"? (पाऊस पडेल.) Does a woman say it differently? (No:

the future has no gender.)

277.2 जाणार आहे (jāṇār āhe) — a plan, and won't

Say "I will go". (mī jāīn.) Then "next week". (puḍhcyā āṭhavḍyāt.)

You'll want to know: -णार आहे, 'going to'

पुढच्या आठवड्यात मी गावाला जाणार आहे.

puḍhcyā āṭhavḍyāt mī gāvālā jāṇār āhe. — "Next week I am going to go to the village."

Take -णे off the dictionary form and put -णार on: जाणे → जाणार (jāṇār), करणे → करणार (karṇār). Then the present of "to be" carries the person: मी जाणार आहे (mī jāṇār āhe), तुम्ही जाणार आहात (tumhī jāṇār āhāt), and, with आहोत (āhot, "we are"), आम्ही जाणार आहोत (āmhī jāṇār āhot). It says a plan already made, where जाईन can be a promise made on the spot.

You'll want to know: -णार नाही, 'won't'

मी उद्या येणार नाही.

mī udyā yeṇār nāhī. — "I won't come tomorrow."

Put नाही in place of आहे. This is the everyday "won't" for every person: तो जाणार नाही (to jāṇār nāhī), आम्ही करणार नाही (āmhī karṇār nāhī).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Next week I am going to the village" — puḍhcyā āṭhavḍyāt mī gāvālā jāṇār āhe
- "I won't come tomorrow" — mī udyā yeṇār nāhī
- "What are you going to do?" — tumhī kāy karṇār āhāt?

Before you move on

"I am going to go"? (मी जाणार आहे.) "I won't go"? (मी जाणार नाही.) "What are you going to do?" (तुम्ही काय करणार आहात?)

277.3 Review — what will happen

Say "Yesterday I went to Pune" and "Tomorrow I will go to Pune". (kāl mī puṇyālā gelo, udyā mī puṇyālā jāīn.) Then "he did the work". (tyāne kām kelaṁ.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Yesterday it rained. Tomorrow it will rain too.
- Yesterday I was not at home. Tomorrow I will be at home.
- Next week she is going to go to the village.
- I won't come tomorrow, because I am going to read a book.
- What will happen? What happened?

Before you move on

"I will"? (-ईन: जाईन, येईन.) "It will"? (-एल or -ईल: पडेल, जाईल.) A plan? (-णार आहे.) "Won't"? (-णार नाही.)

Chapter 278

Was Doing, While, Used To

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can set the scene with vācat hoto and astānā, and say what used to happen with jāyco.
> Complete MR-R278-the-past-three-ways: tell what happened, what was going on and what used to happen.

278.1 मी वाचत होतो (mī vācat hoto) — what was going on

Say "I won't come tomorrow". (mī udyā yeṇār nāhī.) Then "I was at home" and "I read a book". (mī gharī hoto, mī pustak vāclaṁ.)

The last is an event: it happened and it was over. A story also needs what was going on at the time.

You'll want to know: -त होतो, 'was doing'

> काल रात्री नऊ वाजता मी पुस्तक वाचत होतो.
> kāl rātrī naū vājtā mī pustak vācat hoto. — "At nine last night I was reading a book."

Two pieces. वाचत is the bare -त shape you know from आवडत नाही; होतो, "I was", carries the person and the gender:

- ती वाचत होती (vācat hotī) — she was reading

- तो काम करत होता (kām karat hotā) — he was working
- आम्ही बोलत होतो (bolat hoto) — we were talking
- पाऊस पडत होता (pāūs paḍat hotā) — it was raining

This past follows the doer even with an object: ती पुस्तक वाचत होती. No -ने here.

Grammar Lens: the scene and the event

मी वाचत होतो. तेव्हा मीरा आली.

mī vācat hoto. tevhā mīrā ālī. — "I was reading. At that moment, Meera came."

The first sentence is the scene: it was going on. आली is the event: it happened once and cut into the scene. तेव्हा, the "then" of जेव्हा ... तेव्हा, hooks one onto the other. A told story moves on this rhythm.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "She was reading" — tī vācat hotī
- "It was raining" — pāūs paḍat hotā
- "I was reading. At that moment, Meera came." — mī vācat hoto. tevhā mīrā ālī.

Before you move on

"I was reading"? (मी वाचत होतो.) "It was raining"? (पाऊस पडत होता.) Which past is the scene? (-त होतो.) Which is the event? (The plain past: आली.)

278.2 असताना (astānā) — while it was going on

Say "I was reading". (mī vācat hoto.) Then the two-part "when … then" frame. (jevhā … tevhā.)

You'll want to know: असताना, 'while'

> मी वाचत असताना मीरा आली.
> mī vācat astānā mīrā ālī. — "While I was reading, Meera came."

असताना is असणे, "to be", with -ताना, "while being". Put it after the -त shape, and the scene needs no second clause: मी वाचत असताना. It follows a place or a state too: मी घरी असताना (mī gharī astānā), "while I was at home"; लहान असताना (lahān astānā), "when (I was) small".

It does not change for person or gender. The event after it does: मीरा आली.

You'll want to know: जेव्हा ... तेव्हा with the past

> मी घरी आलो, तेव्हा आई चहा करत होती.
> mī gharī ālo, tevhā āī cahā karat hotī. — "When I came home, Mother was making tea."

जेव्हा can stay or go: with the past, the first clause alone sets the time, and तेव्हा picks it up.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "While I was reading, Meera came" — mī vācat astānā mīrā ālī
- "While I was at home, it was raining" — mī gharī astānā pāūs paḍat hotā
- "When I came home, Mother was making tea" — mī gharī ālo, tevhā āī cahā karat hotī

Before you move on

"While I was reading"? (मी वाचत असताना.) "When (I was) small"? (लहान असताना.) Does असताना change for "she"? (No.)

278.3 मी जायचो (mī jāyco) — what used to happen

Say "when (I was) small". (lahān astānā.) Then "formerly". (pūrvī.)

You'll want to know: -ायचो, 'used to'

लहान असताना मी रोज नदीवर जायचो.

lahān astānā mī roj nadīvar jāyco. — "When I was small, I used to go to the river every day."

Take -णे off and put -ायच- on, then the endings of गेलो:

- मी जायचो (jāyco) — I used to go; a woman says जायचे (jāyce)
- तो जायचा (jāycā), ती जायची (jāycī) — he, she used to go
- आम्ही जायचो, ते जायचे — we, they used to go

करणे → करायचो (karāyco); राहणे → राहायचो (rāhāyco): पूर्वी मी पुण्यात राहायचो (pūrvī mī puṇyāt rāhāyco), "I used to live in Pune". With an object it follows the doer: मी पुस्तक वाचायचो (mī pustak vācāyco).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "When I was small, I used to go to the river every day" — lahān astānā mī roj nadīvar jāyco
- "Formerly she used to live in Pune" — pūrvī tī puṇyāt rāhāycī
- "We used to read books" — āmhī pustakaṁ vācāyco

पुस्तकं (pustakaṁ, "books").

Before you move on

"I used to go"? (जायचो, or जायचे.) "She used to live"? (राहायची.) Which past is a habit? (-ायचो.)

278.4 Review — the past three ways

Say "I am going to go" and "I won't go". (mī jāṇār āhe, mī jāṇār nāhī.) Then "he was not at home" and "she was reading". (to gharī navhtā, tī vācat hotī.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- At nine last night I was reading a book.
- While I was reading, Meera came.
- When I came home, Mother was making tea.
- When I was small, I used to go to the river every day.
- one thing you were doing yesterday evening, and one thing that cut into it

Before you move on

Which past is the event? (The plain past: आली.) Which is the scene? (-त होतो, or असताना.) Which is the habit? (-ायचो.) "When I came home"? (मी घरी आलो, तेव्हा **...)

Chapter 279

Telling It in Order

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell a story in order with ādhī, mag, tyānantar and śevṭī, join actions with -ūn, and read and write ऋ in ṛtū.
> Complete MR-R279-a-story-in-order: tell a short story in order, after reading Arun's monsoon day.

279.1 त्यानंतर (tyānantar) — first, then, after that, in the end

Say "then" and "after". (mag, nantar.) Then "I used to go". (mī jāyco.)

You'll want to know: first, then, after that

> आधी मी चहा घेतला. मग मी पुस्तक वाचलं.
> ādhī mī cahā ghetlā. mag mī pustak vāclaṁ. — "First I had tea. Then I read a book."

A story keeps its events in order with four words:

- आधी — first
- मग — then

- त्यानंतर (tyānantar) — after that: त्या, "that", and नंतर, "after"
- शेवटी — in the end

Each one opens its sentence.

Grammar Lens: -नंतर after a noun

शाळेनंतर मी घरी आलो.

śāḷenantar mī gharī ālo. — "After school I came home."

नंतर also stands after a noun, in its bent form: शाळा → शाळेनंतर (śāḷenantar), "after school". त्यानंतर is the same thing done to तो.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "First I had tea. Then I read a book." — ādhī mī cahā ghetlā. mag mī pustak vāclaṁ.
- "After that, suddenly, it rained" — tyānantar acānak pāūs paḍlā
- "After school I came home" — śāḷenantar mī gharī ālo

Before you move on

"First"? (आधी.) "After that"? (त्यानंतर.) "In the end"? (शेवटी.) "After school"? (शाळेनंतर.)

279.2 करून (karūn) — having done it, and then

Say "pleased to meet you". (bheṭūn ānand jhālā.) भेटून is "having met": the form this lesson teaches has been in your mouth since the first meeting.

You'll want to know: -ऊन, 'having done'

मी घरी जाऊन झोपलो.

mī gharī jāūn jhoplo. — "I went home and slept."

Take -णे off and put -ऊन on: करणे → करून (karūn), बसणे → बसून (basūn), पाहणे → पाहून (pāhūn). A stem ending in a vowel keeps it: जाणे → जाऊन (jāūn), येणे → येऊन (yeūn), घेणे → घेऊन (gheūn).

The tense comes once, at the end: जाऊन झोपलो is "went and slept". तो चहा घेऊन आला (to cahā gheūn ālā), "having taken tea he came", is how Marathi says "he brought tea".

Grammar Lens: -ऊन or -ल्यावर

> घरी पोहोचल्यावर मी झोपलो.
> gharī pohocalyāvar mī jhoplo. — "After I reached home, I slept."

-ऊन joins two actions of one doer, one after the other. -ल्यावर says "after", and the doer can change: मी घरी पोहोचल्यावर आई आली (mī gharī pohocalyāvar āī ālī), "after I reached home, Mother came".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I went home and slept" — mī gharī jāūn jhoplo
- "He brought tea" — to cahā gheūn ālā
- "After I reached home, Mother came" — mī gharī pohocalyāvar āī ālī

Before you move on

"Having done"? (करून.) "Having gone"? (जाऊन.) "He brought tea"? (तो चहा घेऊन आला.) Which joins two doers? (-ल्यावर.)

279.3 ऋतू (ṛtū) — a season

Before the new one: say the summer, the monsoon and the winter. (unhāḷā, pāvsāḷā, hivāḷā.) Each of them is one of these.

You'll want to know: ऋतू

ऋतू — ṛtū — "a season".

मला पावसाळा हा ऋतू खूप आवडतो.

malā pāvsāḷā hā ṛtū khūp āvaḍto. — "I like the monsoon season very much."

Its first letter is the vowel you know as the sign ृ in नृत्य, standing on its own. Marathi says it ru: ऋतू is said rutū.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ऋतू (ṛtū) is a tatsama: Sanskrit ṛtu, "a fixed time, a season" (Monier-Williams). CDIAL has no entry for it. Everyday Marathi names three seasons; the Sanskrit calendar counts six, and वसंत, "springtime", is one of them.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ṛtū, said rutū
- "I like the monsoon season very much" — malā pāvsāḷā hā ṛtū khūp āvaḍto
- the three seasons, one after another

Before you move on

What does ऋतू mean? ("A season".) How is it said? (rutū.)

279.4 ऋ — the vowel letter at the start of ऋतू

Say ऋतू, "a season". Then find the sign ृ in नृत्य, "dance", and say its sound: ru.

One new character comes next: the first letter of ऋतू.

Script

ऋ

ऋ is the standing form of the sign ृ. The sign hangs on a consonant (नृत्य, हृदय); the letter starts a word (ऋतू). Its careful transliteration is ṛ; Marathi says it ru. Keep it apart from र, the consonant ra: ऋ is a vowel letter, and it stands alone.

Writing: ऋ — guided copy

How ऋ is written, stroke by stroke

Keep ऋ in front of you for this first pass.

- 1. start at the open upper-left tip, sweep right through the short shoulder, then turn down-left through the diagonal hook
- 2. lift at the middle body's left edge, loop anticlockwise round its little ball, then run down to the right and swing the lower bowl left, round the bottom, and out to the right without lifting
- 3. lift and draw the right stem top-to-bottom
- 4. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 3. This is one sourced learner order; hands and teachers vary. Source: Saurmandal, 'Devanagari ऋ stroke order.svg', panels 1–4, Wikimedia Commons, 5 August 2023.

Copy ऋ twice beside the model, saying ru as you finish each one. Then write ऋतू once.

Before you move on

Which letter starts ऋतू? (ऋ.) How does Marathi say it? (ru.)
Where does its sign ृ stand? (On a consonant: नृत्य.)

279.5 (reading) — a monsoon day in the village

Eighty-six words, every one met before or glossed after it. The writer is Arun. He says मला पावसाळा हा ऋतू खूप आवडतो, and then he tells you why.

Read this

गेल्या वर्षी पावसाळ्यात मी गावाला गेलो. मला पावसाळा हा ऋतू खूप आवडतो. आधी मी बसने स्टेशनला गेलो. मग गाडीने गावाला निघालो. गाडीत मी पुस्तक वाचत होतो. अचानक खूप पाऊस आला. डोंगर हिरवे होते. संध्याकाळी गावाला पोहोचल्यावर मी नदीवर गेलो. नदी भरलेली होती. लहान असताना मी रोज इथे यायचो. मग मी घरी आलो. आई चहा करत होती. आम्ही चहा घेऊन अंगणात बसलो. पाऊस पडत होता. आईने मला एक गोष्ट सांगितली. त्यानंतर आम्ही भाकरी खाल्ली. रात्रभर पाऊस पडत होता. शेवटी मी लवकर झोपलो. तो दिवस खूप चांगला होता.

Read it: the passage once without stopping; do not translate
Read it: the passage again, and sort every verb: event, scene or habit

Why it's said this way

New forms: गेल्या वर्षी (gelyā varṣī, "last year"), the "gone" year; घरी (gharī, "home"); बसने (basne, "by bus"), with the -ने of a tool; and पाऊस आला, "rain came", which is how Marathi says a downpour began. The scene is वाचत होतो, करत होती and पडत होता; the habit is यायचो. आईने ... सांगितली and आम्ही भाकरी खाल्ली follow the thing: a story, a bhakri. The plain होते, होती and होता describe; every other past verb is an event.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- what Arun was doing on the train when the rain came
- what Mother was doing when he came home
- which season Arun likes, with ऋतू

Before you move on

Why is पडत होता in the scene form? (The rain was going on while they sat.) Which word starts the last event? (शेवटी.)

279.6 Review — a story in order

Say "when I came home, Mother was making tea" and "I used to go". (mī gharī ālo, tevhā āī cahā karat hotī, mī jāyco.) Then say ऋतू and name its first letter: ऋ, said ru.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- First I went to the station. Then I set out for the village.
- After that I went home and slept.
- He brought tea. After school I came home.
- I like the monsoon season very much, with ऋतू
- Arun's monsoon day, in four sentences, with आधी, मग, त्यानंतर and शेवटी

Before you move on

"After that"? (त्यानंतर.) "Having gone"? (जाऊन.) Which joins two doers? (-ल्यावर.) A season? (ऋतू, ṛtū, said rutū.)

Chapter 280

What I Think, and So

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give an opinion with malā vāṭṭaṁ kī and mājhyā mate, and a result with mhaṇūn and tyāmuḷe.
> Complete MR-R280-opinion-and-result: say what you think and what follows from a reason.

280.1 मला वाटतं की ... (malā vāṭṭaṁ kī ...) — what I think

Say "I feel fine", with the verb that puts you in the dative. (malā baraṁ vāṭṭaṁ.) Then "Meera says that Marathi is easy". (mīrā mhaṇte kī marāṭhī sopaṁ āhe.)

With की you said malā vāṭṭaṁ kī cahā āhe, "I think there is tea". Put a judgment after की instead of a fact, and you have an opinion.

You'll want to know: मला वाटतं की ...

> मला वाटतं की उद्या पाऊस पडेल.
> malā vāṭṭaṁ kī udyā pāūs paḍel. — "I think it will rain tomorrow."

Word for word: "to me it seems that tomorrow rain will fall". The thinker stands in the dative, as with आवडणे; की opens the opinion, and the opinion is a whole sentence. To ask: तुम्हाला काय वाटतं? (tumhālā kāy vāṭtaṁ?), "What do you think?" In the past: मला वाटलं की ... (malā vāṭlaṁ kī …), "I thought that …". "I don't think so": मला असं वाटत नाही (malā asaṁ vāṭat nāhī), with असं (asaṁ, "so, like this").

You'll want to know: माझ्या मते, 'in my opinion'

> माझ्या मते हा चित्रपट चांगला आहे.
> mājhyā mate hā citrapaṭ cāṅglā āhe. — "In my opinion this film is good."

मते is मत, "an opinion", the word inside मत देणे, "to vote", with an ending; माझ्या is माझा bent to fit it. It sits at the front of the sentence, and it sounds firmer than मला वाटतं.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I think it will rain tomorrow" — malā vāṭtaṁ kī udyā pāūs paḍel
- "What do you think?" — tumhālā kāy vāṭtaṁ?
- "In my opinion this film is good" — mājhyā mate hā citrapaṭ cāṅglā āhe

Before you move on

"I think that"? (मला वाटतं की.) "I thought that"? (मला वाटलं की.) "In my opinion"? (माझ्या मते.) "What do you think?" (तुम्हाला काय वाटतं?)

280.2 म्हणून (mhaṇūn) — so, and because of that

> Say "because", the word that answers का. (kāraṇ.) Then "it was raining". (pāūs paḍat hotā.)

You'll want to know: म्हणून, 'so'

> पाऊस पडत होता, म्हणून मी घरी राहिलो.
> pāūs paḍat hotā, mhaṇūn mī gharī rāhilo. — "It was raining, so I stayed at home."

कारण gives the reason after the event; म्हणून gives the result after the reason. Same two facts, opposite order: मी घरी राहिलो, कारण पाऊस पडत होता (mī gharī rāhilo, kāraṇ pāūs paḍat hotā).

म्हणून is built like करून: the -ऊन form of म्हणणे, "to say". Its past has two shapes: तो म्हणाला (to mhaṇālā), "he said", following the speaker, and त्याने म्हटलं (tyāne mhaṭlaṁ), with -ने.

You'll want to know: त्यामुळे, 'because of that'

> काल खूप पाऊस होता, त्यामुळे आम्ही बाहेर गेलो नाही.
> kāl khūp pāūs hotā, tyāmuḷe āmhī bāher gelo nāhī. — "Yesterday there was a lot of rain, so we didn't go out."

त्यामुळे (tyāmuḷe) is त्या, "that", and -मुळे, "because of". It leans on the cause: "because of that". Where म्हणून often marks a choice someone made, त्यामुळे marks what came of something.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "It was raining, so I stayed at home" — pāūs paḍat hotā, mhaṇūn mī gharī rāhilo
- "I stayed at home, because it was raining" — mī gharī rāhilo, kāraṇ pāūs paḍat hotā
- "Yesterday there was a lot of rain, so we didn't go out" — kāl khūp pāūs hotā, tyāmuḷe āmhī bāher gelo nāhī

Before you move on

Which word comes after the reason? (म्हणून.) Which comes before it? (कारण.) "Because of that"? (त्यामुळे.)

280.3 Review — opinion and result

Say "after school I had tea; after that I went home and slept".
(śāḷenantar mī cahā ghetlā. tyānantar mī gharī jāūn jhoplo.)
Then name the season Arun likes, with ऋतू.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- I think Meera will come tomorrow.
- In my opinion this play is good.
- It was raining, so I didn't go to school.
- Yesterday there was a lot of rain, so the river was full.
- which season you like, and why, with ऋतू and कारण

Before you move on

"I think that"? (मला वाटतं की.) "So"? (म्हणून.) "Because of that"? (त्यामुळे.) Which letter starts ऋतू? (ऋ.)

Chapter 281

Must, Must Not, and Because

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what someone must do (jāylā pāhije) and shouldn't do (jāū nayes), give a reason with -muḷe and kāraṇ, and read and write ञ in jñān.
> Complete MR-R281-advice-and-reasons: give advice and reasons, after meeting ज्ञान and its letter ञ*.*

281.1 मला जायला पाहिजे (malā jāylā pāhije) — must, and must not

Say "to go for a walk": phirāylā jāṇe. फिरायला is "for walking", and it is the form this lesson needs.

You'll want to know: -ायला पाहिजे, 'must, should'

मला आता घरी जायला पाहिजे.

malā ātā gharī jāylā pāhije. — "I must go home now."

Take -णे off and put -ायला on: जाणे → जायला (jāylā), करणे → करायला (karāylā), येणे → यायला (yāylā), वाचणे → वाचायला. Then पाहिजे (pāhije), which does not change. The one who must stands in the dative, as with आवडणे: मला, तुला (tulā, "to you, a friend"), त्याला (tyālā, "to him"), तिला (tilā, "to her").

हवं, the हवा you know, does the same work: मला जायला हवं (malā jāylā havaṁ).

You'll want to know: -ऊ नये, 'should not'

तू रात्री जाऊ नयेस.

tū rātrī jāū nayes. — "You shouldn't go at night."

The -ऊ of आम्ही जाऊ with नये, "should not", which takes -स after तू. Said to no one in particular: असं करू नये (asaṁ karū naye), "one shouldn't do that". A flat "don't" uses the नको you know: जाऊ नकोस (jāū nakos), "don't go".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I must go home now" — malā ātā gharī jāylā pāhije
- "He should read this book" — tyālā he pustak vācāylā pāhije
- "You shouldn't go at night" — tū rātrī jāū nayes

Before you move on

"I must go"? (मला जायला पाहिजे.) Does पाहिजे change for "she"? (No: तिला जायला पाहिजे.) "You shouldn't go"? (तू जाऊ नयेस.)

281.2 -मुळे (-muḷe) — because of, and the reason in full

Say "because of that". (tyāmuḷe.) Its second half is the ending this lesson takes apart.

You'll want to know: -मुळे, 'because of'

पावसामुळे गाडी उशिरा आली.

pāvsāmuḷe gāḍī uśirā ālī. — "Because of the rain, the train came late."

-मुळे goes on a noun in its bent form. पाऊस bends to पावसा-, the same as in पावसाळा: पावसामुळे (pāvsāmuḷe). उशिरा (uśirā, "late") is उशीर made into "how". On a pronoun: तुमच्यामुळे (tumcyāmuḷe), "because of you"; and त्यामुळे, "because of that".

You'll want to know: the reason in full

> मी काल आलो नाही, कारण मी आजारी होतो.
> mī kāl ālo nāhī, kāraṇ mī ājārī hoto. — "I didn't come yesterday, because I was ill."

When someone asks तुम्ही का आला नाहीत? (tumhī kā ālā nāhīt?), "Why didn't you come?", answer with the event and then कारण and the reason, a whole sentence in the past. Or the reason first and then म्हणून: मी आजारी होतो, म्हणून मी आलो नाही (mī ājārī hoto, mhaṇūn mī ālo nāhī).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Because of the rain, the train came late" — pāvsāmuḷe gāḍī uśirā ālī
- "Why didn't you come?" — tumhī kā ālā nāhīt?
- "I didn't come, because I was ill" — mī ālo nāhī, kāraṇ mī ājārī hoto

Before you move on

"Because of the rain"? (पावसामुळे.) "Because of you"? (तुमच्यामुळे.) Which takes a whole sentence, -मुळे or कारण? (कारण.)

281.3 ज्ञान (jñān) — knowledge

> Before the new one: say "a book" and "to grow". (pustak, vāḍhṇe.)

You'll want to know: ज्ञान

ज्ञान — jñān — "knowledge".

> पुस्तकांमुळे ज्ञान वाढतं.
> pustakāmmuḷe jñān vāḍhtaṁ. — "Knowledge grows because of books."

The first block, ज्ञ, is said dny in Marathi: ज्ञान is said dnyān. The romanization keeps the letters, jñ. ज्ञान महत्त्वाचं आहे (jñān mahattvācaṁ āhe): knowledge is important.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ज्ञान (jñān) is a tatsama: Sanskrit jñāna, "knowledge", on the root jñā, "to know" (CDIAL 5281). Under the same entry CDIAL lists an inherited Marathi form, jāṇ, in the narrower sense "acknowledgement of favours"; ज्ञान is the learned word, taken whole from Sanskrit.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- jñān, said dnyān
- "Knowledge grows because of books" — pustakāmmuḷe jñān vāḍhtaṁ
- "Knowledge is important" — jñān mahattvācaṁ āhe

Before you move on

What does ज्ञान mean? ("Knowledge".) How is ज्ञ said? (dny.)

281.4 ञ (ña) — the letter hidden inside ज्ञ

Say ज्ञान, "knowledge". You have read its first block, ज्ञ, as one shape. Name the letter it starts with: ज. Then the mark that silences a letter's vowel: ्.

Script

ञ

ञ is ña, a nasal made where j is made. ज्ञ is ज, the ्, and ञ, joined into one shape; Marathi says the pair dny. On its own ञ is rare in Marathi words; you will meet it inside ज्ञ, in ज्ञान.

Writing: ञ — guided copy

Stroke order after Opiaterein, 'Deva-ञ-order.gif', strokes 1–4, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ञ is written, stroke by stroke

Keep ञ in front of you for this first pass.

- 1. start at the open upper-left tip and curve clockwise around the bowl to the open lower-left tip
- 2. lift at the bowl's right junction, sweep right through the shoulder, then curve upward along the right side to the headline
- 3. lift at the lower right-side junction and descend the short stem below the bowl
- 4. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 3. This is one attested teaching order; hands and teachers vary. Source: Opiaterein, 'Deva-ञ-order.gif', strokes 1–4, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009.

Copy ञ twice beside the model, saying ña as you finish each one. Then write ज्ञान once and point at the ञ inside its first block.

Before you move on

Which letter hides inside ज्ञ? (ञ, ña.) Which word holds it? (ज्ञान, jñān, said dnyān.)

281.5 Review — advice and reasons

Say "I think it will rain tomorrow, so I will stay at home".
(malā vāṭtaṁ kī udyā pāūs paḍel, mhaṇūn mī gharī rāhīn.)
Then say ऋतू, and ज्ञान with its dny.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- I must go home now, because it is late.
- You shouldn't go at night.
- Because of the rain, the train came late.
- Why didn't you come? I didn't come, because I was ill.
- In my opinion knowledge grows because of books.

Before you move on

"Must"? (-ायला पाहिजे.) "Should not"? (-ऊ नये.) "Because of"? (-मुळे.) Which letter hides in ज्ञ? (ञ.) Which starts ऋतू? (ऋ.)

Chapter 282

Asking the Way

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask the way (sṭeśanlā kasaṁ jāycaṁ?) and how far it is, and give the way with saraḷ jā and ujvīkaḍe vaḷā.
> Complete MR-R282-asking-the-way: ask the way to a place and give the way back.

282.1 स्टेशनला कसं जायचं? (sṭeśanlā kasaṁ jāycaṁ?) — asking the way

Say "where is the station?" (sṭeśan kuṭhe āhe?) Then "I used to go". (mī jāyco.)

You'll want to know: ... ला कसं जायचं?

> कृपया, स्टेशनला कसं जायचं?
> kṛpayā, sṭeśanlā kasaṁ jāycaṁ? — "Please, how do I get to the station?"

जायचं is the -ायच- of जायचो with -ं: "how is it to be gone". Put -ला on the place: बसस्थानकाला (basasthānakālā), विमानतळाला (vimāntaḷālā). To ask for a place by name, the question you know stays the best: बसस्थानक कुठे आहे?

You'll want to know: how far

> इथून किती लांब आहे?
> ithūn kitī lāmb āhe? — "How far is it from here?"

इथून (ithūn, "from here") is इथे with -ऊन, "from". The answers: जवळ आहे (javaḷ āhe), "it is near"; खूप लांब आहे (khūp lāmb āhe), "it is a long way"; दहा मिनिटं (dahā miniṭaṁ), "ten minutes".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Please, how do I get to the station?" — kṛpayā, sṭeśanlā kasaṁ jāycaṁ?
- "How far is it from here?" — ithūn kitī lāmb āhe?
- "Is it near?" — javaḷ āhe kā?

Before you move on

"How do I get to the airport?" (विमानतळाला कसं जायचं?) "How far is it from here?" (इथून किती लांब आहे?) "From here"? (इथून.)

282.2 उजवीकडे वळा (ujvīkaḍe vaḷā) — giving the way

> Say "go right" with the -कडे you know. (ujvīkaḍe jā.) Then "straight". (saraḷ.)

You'll want to know: go, turn

> सरळ जा, मग चौकात उजवीकडे वळा.
> saraḷ jā, mag caukāt ujvīkaḍe vaḷā. — "Go straight, then turn right at the square."

वळा is वळणे with -आ, the polite "turn", built like घ्या and बसा. To a friend: वळ (vaḷ). जा serves both. With पहिल्या, "the first", the way gets precise: पहिल्या चौकात डावीकडे वळा (pahilyā caukāt ḍāvīkaḍe vaḷā), "turn left at the first square"; पुढे जा (puḍhe jā), "go on ahead".

You'll want to know: what stands beside it

> स्टेशन मंदिराच्या समोर आहे.
> sṭeśan mandirācyā samor āhe. — "The station is opposite the temple."

-च्या on the landmark, then the place word: दुकानाच्या जवळ (dukānācyā javaḷ), "near the shop"; मंदिराच्या मागे (mandirācyā māge), "behind the temple".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Go straight, then turn right at the square" — saraḷ jā, mag caukāt ujvīkaḍe vaḷā
- "Turn left at the first square" — pahilyā caukāt ḍāvīkaḍe vaḷā
- "The station is opposite the temple" — sṭeśan mandirācyā samor āhe

Before you move on

"Turn right"? (उजवीकडे वळा.) "Go straight"? (सरळ जा.) "Opposite the temple"? (मंदिराच्या समोर.)

282.3 Review — asking the way

> Say "I must go to the station" and "you shouldn't go at night". (malā sṭeśanlā jāylā pāhije, tū rātrī jāū nayes.) Then say ज्ञान and ऋतू, and name the letter each one holds: ज and ऋ.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Please, how do I get to the airport?
- How far is it from here? Is it near?
- Go straight, then turn left at the square.

- The bus station is near the shop, opposite the temple.
- the way from your door to the nearest shop, in three sentences

Before you move on

"How do I get to …?" (… ला कसं जायचं?) "Turn"? (वळा.) "Near the shop"? (दुकानाच्या जवळ.) Which letters did ऋतू and ज्ञान bring? (ऋ and ञ.)

Chapter 283

Tickets, Times and Trouble

Modes: 🚕 voice (4) 🚕 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can buy a ticket (ek tikīṭ dyā), ask when a train leaves, and say that something is lost or missed (haravlī, cuklī).
> Complete MR-R283-at-the-station: buy a ticket, ask the time, and report a problem.

283.1 तिकीट (tikīṭ) — a ticket

> Before the new one: say "the station is opposite the temple" (sṭeśan mandirācyā samor āhe), then "a bus" and "a train". (bas, gāḍī.)

You'll want to know: तिकीट

तिकीट — tikīṭ — "a ticket".

> मला पुण्याचं एक तिकीट हवं आहे.
> malā puṇyācaṁ ek tikīṭ havaṁ āhe. — "I want a ticket to Pune."

तिकीट is neuter, so हवं. Two tickets: दोन तिकिटं (don tikiṭaṁ). Marathi buys a ticket with काढणे, "to take out": मी तिकीट काढलं (mī tikīṭ kāḍhlaṁ), "I bought a ticket".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तिकीट (tikīṭ) is a loan from English ticket, reshaped to Marathi sounds: a long ī and a retroflex ṭ.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tikīṭ
- "I want a ticket to Pune" — malā puṇyācaṁ ek tikīṭ havaṁ āhe
- "I bought a ticket" — mī tikīṭ kāḍhlaṁ

Before you move on

What does तिकीट mean? ("A ticket".) "Two tickets"? (दोन तिकिटं.)

283.2 एक तिकीट द्या (ek tikīṭ dyā) — at the counter

Ask how far the station is from here. (ithūn sṭeśan kitī lāmb āhe?) Then say "I want a ticket to Pune". (malā puṇyācaṁ ek tikīṭ havaṁ āhe.) The polite "please give" is द्या.

You'll want to know: buying a ticket

पुण्याचं एक तिकीट द्या.

puṇyācaṁ ek tikīṭ dyā. — "One ticket to Pune, please."

पुण्याचं is "of Pune": the ticket belongs to where it goes. A return: परतीचं तिकीट (partīcaṁ tikīṭ), with the परत, "back", of परतणे. Then the price: किती पैसे झाले? (kitī paise jhāle?), "How much is it?"

You'll want to know: when it leaves

पुण्याची गाडी किती वाजता निघते?

puṇyācī gāḍī kitī vājtā nighte? — "What time does the Pune train leave?"

निघते, "sets out", is the present of निघणे, said of the train. The answers come as times: सात वाजता (sāt vājtā). And the other end: गाडी किती वाजता पोहोचते? (gāḍī kitī vājtā pohocte?), "What time does it arrive?" For the platform, ask with कोणत्या (koṇtyā, "which"): कोणत्या फलाटावर? (koṇtyā phalāṭāvar?)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "One ticket to Pune, please" — puṇyācaṁ ek tikīṭ dyā
- "A return ticket, please" — partīcaṁ tikīṭ dyā
- "What time does the Pune train leave?" — puṇyācī gāḍī kitī vājtā nighte?

Before you move on

"A ticket to Pune, please"? (पुण्याचं एक तिकीट द्या.) "A return ticket"? (परतीचं तिकीट.) "What time does it leave?" (किती वाजता निघते?)

283.3 माझी पिशवी हरवली (mājhī piśvī haravlī) — when something goes wrong

Say "a bag" and "to lose". (piśvī, haravṇe.) Then "she came". (tī ālī.)

You'll want to know: lost

माझी पिशवी हरवली.

mājhī piśvī haravlī. — "My bag is lost."

The bag is what got lost, so the past agrees with it, as ती आली agrees with her: पिशवी हरवली, पुस्तक हरवलं (pustak haravlaṁ). No -ने here. Then the report: मी पोलिसांकडे तक्रार केली (mī polisāṅkaḍe takrār kelī), "I complained to the police", with तक्रार feminine.

You'll want to know: missed

> माझी गाडी चुकली.
> mājhī gāḍī cuklī. — "I missed my train."

Word for word "my train went wrong": with चुकणे the train is the subject. The cause comes first: मला उशीर झाला, म्हणून माझी गाडी चुकली (malā uśīr jhālā, mhaṇūn mājhī gāḍī cuklī), "I was late, so I missed my train".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "My bag is lost" — mājhī piśvī haravlī
- "I complained to the police" — mī polisāṅkaḍe takrār kelī
- "I was late, so I missed my train" — malā uśīr jhālā, mhaṇūn mājhī gāḍī cuklī

Before you move on

"My bag is lost"? (माझी पिशवी हरवली.) "My book is lost"? (माझं पुस्तक हरवलं.) "I missed my train"? (माझी गाडी चुकली.)

283.4 Review — at the station

> Ask the way to the station and how far it is, then give it: straight, then right, opposite the temple. (sṭeśanlā kasaṁ jāycaṁ? ithūn kitī lāmb āhe? saraḷ jā, mag ujvīkaḍe vaḷā. sṭeśan mandirācyā samor āhe.) Then say ऋतू and ज्ञान, and name the letters ऋ and ञ.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- One ticket to Pune, please. A return ticket.
- What time does the train leave? Which platform?

- My bag is lost. I complained to the police.
- I was late, so I missed my train.
- what went wrong on a trip of yours, in two sentences

Before you move on

A ticket? (तिकीट.) "When does it leave?" (किती वाजता निघते?) "Lost"? (हरवली.) "Missed"? (चुकली.) Which letters hide in ज्ञान and start ऋतू? (ञ, ऋ.)

Chapter 284

Feelings and Hopes

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I felt (malā rāg ālā, bhītī vāṭlī), name a goal (dhyey), and say what I want to do and become (vhāycaṁ āhe).
> Complete MR-R284-feelings-and-hopes: say what you felt and what you want to become.

284.1 राग (rāg) — anger

> Before the new one: say "my bag is lost" and "I missed my train". (mājhī piśvī haravlī, mājhī gāḍī cuklī.) Then "to get angry". (rāgāvṇe.)

You'll want to know: राग

राग — rāg — "anger".

> मला खूप राग आला.
> malā khūp rāg ālā. — "I got very angry."

रागावणे, "to get angry", is built on this noun. Anger is something that comes to you: "to me anger came".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

राग (rāg) is a tatsama: Sanskrit rāga, "passion, love" (CDIAL 10674); CDIAL lists no Marathi form. Marathi, like Bengali, uses it for anger; how the sense moved there is not settled. Sanskrit rāga also names a melody, the rāga of Indian music (Monier-Williams).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- rāg
- "I got very angry" — malā khūp rāg ālā
- rāg, then rāgāvṇe, the verb built on it

Before you move on

What does राग mean? ("Anger".) Which verb is built on it? (रागावणे.)

284.2 भीती (bhītī) — fear

Before the new one: say "anger" and "to be afraid". (rāg, ghābarṇe.)

You'll want to know: भीती

भीती — bhītī — "fear".

मला सापाची भीती वाटते.

malā sāpācī bhītī vāṭte. — "I am afraid of snakes."

What you fear takes -ची: सापाची भीती, "fear of snakes". The feeling वाटते, "is felt", and it is feminine, so the verb ends in -ते.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

भीती (bhītī) is a tatsama: Sanskrit bhīti, "fear" (CDIAL 9512), from the root bhī, "to be afraid". Marathi writes it with a long final ī.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bhītī
- "I am afraid of snakes" — malā sāpācī bhītī vāṭte
- bhītī, once more, and ghābarṇe, "to be afraid"

Before you move on

What does भीती mean? ("Fear".) "I am afraid of snakes"? (मला सापाची भीती वाटते.)

284.3 मला राग आला (malā rāg ālā) — feelings that come to you

Say "I got very angry" and "I am afraid of snakes". (malā khūp rāg ālā, malā sāpācī bhītī vāṭte.) Then the first line you learned: bheṭūn ānand jhālā.

You'll want to know: the feeling is the subject

मला राग आला.

malā rāg ālā. — "I got angry."

The one who feels stands in the dative, as with आवडणे and वाटणे. The feeling is the subject, and the past agrees with it: राग आला (masculine), भीती वाटली (feminine), कंटाळा आला (kaṇṭāḷā ālā), "I got bored". Ask it the same way: तुम्हाला राग आला का? (tumhālā rāg ālā kā?)

Two feeling words you know are adjectives instead, and they agree with the person: ती आनंदी आहे (tī ānandī āhe), "she is happy"; तो दुःखी होता (to duḥkhī hotā), "he was sad".

You'll want to know: which verb each feeling takes

Three verbs carry feelings, and each feeling has its own:

- आला, "came": राग आला, कंटाळा आला

- वाटलं, "was felt": भीती वाटली, लाज वाटली (lāj vāṭlī), "I felt ashamed"
- झालं, "came about": आनंद झाला, दुःख झालं (duḥkh jhālaṁ), "I was sad"

Learn the feeling with its verb, as you learned भेटून आनंद झाला whole.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I got angry" — malā rāg ālā
- "She felt afraid" — tilā bhītī vāṭlī
- "We were glad" — āmhālā ānand jhālā
- "He got bored" — tyālā kaṇṭāḷā ālā

आम्हाला (āmhālā, "to us").

Before you move on

"I got angry"? (मला राग आला.) "I felt ashamed"? (मला लाज वाटली.) "We were glad"? (आम्हाला आनंद झाला.) What does the verb agree with? (The feeling.)

284.4 ध्येय (dhyey) — a goal

Before the new one: say "a wish" and "a dream". (icchā, svapna.) Then "we were glad". (āmhālā ānand jhālā.)

You'll want to know: ध्येय

ध्येय — dhyey — "a goal, an aim".

माझं ध्येय मोठं आहे.

mājhaṁ dhyey moṭhaṁ āhe. — "My goal is a big one."

ध्येय is neuter: माझं ध्येय. A wish can stay a wish; a goal is what you work toward.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ध्येय (dhyey) is a tatsama: Sanskrit dhyeya, "to be meditated on, to be pondered" (Monier-Williams), from the root of dhyāna, "meditation". Marathi uses it for the aim one keeps the mind fixed on.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dhyey
- "My goal is a big one" — mājhaṁ dhyey moṭhaṁ āhe
- a wish, a dream and a goal: icchā, svapna, dhyey

Before you move on

What does ध्येय mean? ("A goal, an aim".) Is it masculine, feminine or neuter? (Neuter: माझं ध्येय.)

284.5 मला शिक्षक व्हायचं आहे (malā śikṣak vhāycaṁ āhe) — wanting to do, wanting to be

Say "my goal is a big one". (mājhaṁ dhyey moṭhaṁ āhe.) Then "how do I get to the station?", with its जायचं. (sṭeśanlā kasaṁ jāycaṁ?)

You'll want to know: मला ... -ायचं आहे, 'I want to'

मला मराठीत गोष्ट लिहायची आहे.

malā marāṭhīt goṣṭa lihāycī āhe. — "I want to write a story in Marathi."

The -ायच- form, with आहे and the dative: मला जायचं आहे (malā jāycaṁ āhe), "I want to go". With an object it agrees with the thing, as the past does: गोष्ट लिहायची आहे, पुस्तक वाचायचं आहे (pustak vācāycaṁ āhe). And the "not": मला जायचं नाही (malā jāycaṁ nāhī), "I don't want to go".

You'll want to know: व्हायचं, 'to become'

> मला शिक्षक व्हायचं आहे.
> malā śikṣak vhāycaṁ āhe. — "I want to become a teacher."

व्हायचं is होणे, "to become", in the same form. The wish words you know can follow it: ते माझं स्वप्न आहे (te mājhaṁ svapna āhe), "that is my dream"; ते माझं ध्येय आहे (te mājhaṁ dhyey āhe), "that is my goal".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I want to become a teacher" — malā śikṣak vhāycaṁ āhe
- "I want to write a story in Marathi" — malā marāṭhīt goṣṭa lihāycī āhe
- "I don't want to go" — malā jāycaṁ nāhī

Before you move on

"I want to go"? (मला जायचं आहे.) "I want to become a teacher"? (मला शिक्षक व्हायचं आहे.) "I don't want to go"? (मला जायचं नाही.)

284.6 Review — feelings and hopes

> Ask for one ticket to Pune and when the train leaves. (puṇyācaṁ ek tikīṭ dyā. gāḍī kitī vājtā nighte?) Say "I bought a ticket, but I missed my train". (mī tikīṭ kāḍhlaṁ, paṇ mājhī gāḍī cuklī.) Then ऋतू and ज्ञान: two words, two letters, ऋ and ज्ञ.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- I missed my train, so I got angry.
- She is afraid of snakes.

- We were glad. He got bored.
- I want to become a teacher. That is my goal.
- one thing you want to do this year, with -ायचं आहे

Before you move on

Anger? (राग.) Fear? (भीती.) "I got angry"? (मला राग आला.) A goal? (ध्येय.) "I want to become"? (मला ... व्हायचं आहे.) Which letter starts ऋतू? (ऋ.)

Chapter 285

Bigger, Biggest, and How Long

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can compare two things with -pekṣā and jāsta, say the most with sarvāt, and say how long with -pāsūn, -paryant and -bhar.
> Complete MR-R285-comparing-and-time: compare things and say how long something has gone on.

285.1 -पेक्षा (-pekṣā) — than, and the most

Say "I want to go to Pune". (malā puṇyālā jāycaṁ āhe.) Then "fast". (jalad.)

You'll want to know: -पेक्षा, 'than'

गाडी बसपेक्षा जलद आहे.

gāḍī baspekṣā jalad āhe. — "The train is faster than the bus."

-पेक्षा goes on the thing you compare against, in its bent form: घर → घरापेक्षा (gharāpekṣā), चहा → चहापेक्षा (cahāpekṣā). The adjective stays as it is; Marathi needs no "-er". For a quantity, add जास्त (jāsta, "more") or कमी, "less": मला चहापेक्षा दूध जास्त आवडतं (malā cahāpekṣā dūdh jāsta āvaḍtaṁ), "I like milk more than tea".

You'll want to know: सर्वात, 'the most'

> मीरा वर्गात सर्वात उंच आहे.
> mīrā vargāt sarvāt uñc āhe. — "Meera is the tallest in the class."

सर्वात (sarvāt) is "of all": सर्वात मोठा (sarvāt moṭhā), "the biggest"; सर्वात जवळ (sarvāt javaḷ), "the nearest".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "The train is faster than the bus" — gāḍī baspekṣā jalad āhe
- "I like milk more than tea" — malā cahāpekṣā dūdh jāsta āvaḍtaṁ
- "Meera is the tallest in the class" — mīrā vargāt sarvāt uñc āhe

Before you move on

"Than the house"? (घरापेक्षा.) "More"? (जास्त.) "The biggest"? (सर्वात मोठा.)

285.2 तीन वर्षांपासून (tīn varṣāmpāsūn) — how long

> Say "the train is faster than the bus". (gāḍī baspekṣā jalad āhe.) Then "from" and "until". (pāsūn, paryant.)

You'll want to know: -पासून, 'for (and still)'

> मी तीन वर्षांपासून पुण्यात राहतो.
> mī tīn varṣāmpāsūn puṇyāt rāhto. — "I have lived in Pune for three years."

Marathi keeps the present: the living still goes on. -पासून goes on the stretch of time, in its bent plural: वर्ष → वर्षांपासून (varṣāmpāsūn), तास → तासांपासून (tāsāmpāsūn). To ask: तुम्ही किती दिवसांपासून इथे आहात? (tumhī kitī divsāmpāsūn ithe āhāt?), "How long have you been here?"

You'll want to know: from … until, and all … long

> मी सकाळपासून संध्याकाळपर्यंत काम केलं.
> mī sakāḷpāsūn sandhyākāḷparyant kām kelaṁ. — "I worked from morning until evening."

-पासून … -पर्यंत frames a stretch with two ends. -भर, as in दिवसभर, fills it: दिवसभर पाऊस पडत होता (divasbhar pāūs paḍat hotā), "it rained all day". A bare number of hours needs no ending: मी दोन तास वाचत होतो (mī don tās vācat hoto).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I have lived in Pune for three years" — mī tīn varṣāmpāsūn puṇyāt rāhto
- "How long have you been here?" — tumhī kitī divsāmpāsūn ithe āhāt?
- "I worked from morning until evening" — mī sakāḷpāsūn sandhyākāḷparyant kām kelaṁ

Before you move on

"For three years"? (तीन वर्षांपासून.) Which tense goes with it, for something still going on? (The present: राहतो.) "From morning until evening"? (सकाळपासून संध्याकाळपर्यंत.)

285.3 Review — comparing and time

> Say "I got angry" and "I want to become a teacher". (malā rāg ālā, malā śikṣak vhāycaṁ āhe.) Ask what time the Pune train leaves. (puṇyācī gāḍī kitī vājtā nighte?) Then ऋतू and ज्ञान, and the letters ऋ and ज्ञ.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- In my opinion the train is better than the bus.
- I like the monsoon season most, with ऋतू.
- I have lived in Pune for three years.
- Yesterday it rained all day. I read from morning until evening.
- how long you have been learning Marathi, with -पासून

Before you move on

"Than"? (-पेक्षा.) "The most"? (सर्वात.) "For three years"? (तीन वर्षांपासून.) "All day"? (दिवसभर.)

Chapter 286

If, and Otherwise

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what will happen if something does (jar … tar …), read the formal -lyās, and warn with nāhītar.
> Complete MR-R286-if-and-otherwise: set a condition and its result, and say what happens otherwise.

286.1 जर ... तर ... (jar ... tar ...) — if

> Say "it will rain" and "it rained". (pāūs paḍel, pāūs paḍlā.) Then "it rained all day". (divasbhar pāūs paḍat hotā.)

You'll want to know: जर ... तर

> जर उद्या पाऊस पडला, तर मी घरी राहीन.
> jar udyā pāūs paḍlā, tar mī gharī rāhīn. — "If it rains tomorrow, I will stay at home."

जर (jar) opens the condition, तर (tar) opens the result. The condition takes the past form, पडला, though it looks ahead; the result is in the future, राहीन. जर can go: पाऊस पडला तर मी घरी राहीन (pāūs paḍlā tar mī gharī rāhīn). तर stays.

You'll want to know: if it is जर तुम्हाला वेळ असेल, तर या.

jar tumhālā veḷ asel, tar yā. — "If you have time, come."

For a state, the condition takes the future of "to be", असेल; the result can be a request. या, "come", is the polite form of येणे.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "If it rains tomorrow, I will stay at home" — jar udyā pāūs paḍlā, tar mī gharī rāhīn
- "If Meera comes, we will go" — mīrā ālī tar āmhī jāū
- "If you have time, come" — jar tumhālā veḷ asel, tar yā

Before you move on

"If"? (जर.) "Then"? (तर.) Which form does the condition take? (The past: पडला.) "If you have time"? (जर तुम्हाला वेळ असेल.)

286.2 पाऊस पडल्यास (pāūs paḍalyās) — should it happen, and otherwise

Say "if it rains tomorrow, I will stay at home". (jar udyā pāūs paḍlā, tar mī gharī rāhīn.) Then "after reading". (vācalyāvar.)

You'll want to know: -ल्यास, 'should it'

पाऊस पडल्यास आम्ही घरी राहू.

pāūs paḍalyās āmhī gharī rāhū. — "Should it rain, we will stay at home."

The -ल्- of -ल्यावर, with -ल्यास: पडल्यास says जर ... पडला तर in one word. It is the careful, written way, and you will read it on notices more than you will hear it: उशीर झाल्यास (uśīr jhālyās), "in case of delay".

You'll want to know: नाहीतर, 'otherwise'

> लवकर निघा, नाहीतर गाडी चुकेल.
> lavkar nighā, nāhītar gāḍī cukel. — "Leave early, otherwise you'll miss the train."

नाहीतर (nāhītar) is नाही and तर: "if not, then". निघा is the polite "set out"; चुकेल is the future of चुकणे, with the train as its subject, as in माझी गाडी चुकली.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Should it rain, we will stay at home" — pāūs paḍalyās āmhī gharī rāhū
- "Leave early, otherwise you'll miss the train" — lavkar nighā, nāhītar gāḍī cukel
- "Come tomorrow, otherwise I'll get angry" — udyā yā, nāhītar malā rāg yeīl

Before you move on

"Should it rain"? (पाऊस पडल्यास.) Is it said or written more? (Written, on notices.) "Otherwise"? (नाहीतर.)

286.3 Review — if and otherwise

> Say "the train is faster than the bus" and "I have lived in Pune for three years". (gāḍī baspekṣā jalad āhe, mī tīn varṣāmpāsūn puṇyāt rāhto.) Then "the biggest" and "from morning until evening". (sarvāt moṭhā, sakāḷpāsūn sandhyākāḷparyant.) Last, ऋतू and ज्ञान, and their letters ऋ and ज.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- If it rains tomorrow, I will stay at home.

- If you have time, come.
- Leave early, otherwise you'll miss the train.
- If it rains, you shouldn't go out.
- one plan of yours for next week, with जर ... तर

Before you move on

"If … then"? (जर ... तर.) Which form does the condition take? (The past: पडला.) "Should it rain"? (पाऊस पडल्यास.) "Otherwise"? (नाहीतर.)

Chapter 287

It Depends, and What Would Have Been

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what something depends on (… -var avlambūn āhe), say what would have happened (gelo asto), and write six connected lines about a trip.
> Complete MR-R287-depends-and-would: say what something depends on and what would have been, after writing six connected lines about a trip.

287.1 हवामानावर अवलंबून आहे (havāmānāvar avlambūn āhe) — it depends

Say "to depend". (avlambūn asṇe.) Then "if it rains, I will stay at home". (pāūs paḍlā tar mī gharī rāhīn.)

You'll want to know: … -वर अवलंबून आहे

> आम्ही उद्या जाऊ का? ते हवामानावर अवलंबून आहे.
> āmhī udyā jāū kā? te havāmānāvar avlambūn āhe. — "Will we go tomorrow? It depends on the weather."

What it depends on takes -वर, "on": हवामानावर (havāmānāvar), तुमच्यावर (tumcyāvar), "on you". The verb is असणे, so the tense goes there: ते

हवामानावर अवलंबून असेल (te havāmānāvar avlambūn asel), "it will depend on the weather". To ask: with कशावर (kaśāvar, "on what"): कशावर अवलंबून आहे? (kaśāvar avlambūn āhe?)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "It depends on the weather" — te havāmānāvar avlambūn āhe
- "It depends on you" — te tumcyāvar avlambūn āhe
- "What does it depend on?" — kaśāvar avlambūn āhe?

Before you move on

"It depends on the weather"? (ते हवामानावर अवलंबून आहे.) "On you"? (तुमच्यावर.) "What does it depend on?" (कशावर अवलंबून आहे?)

287.2 मी गेलो असतो (mī gelo asto) — what would have been

Say "it depends on the weather". (te havāmānāvar avlambūn āhe.) Then "If it rains tomorrow, I will stay at home". (jar udyā pāūs paḍlā, tar mī gharī rāhīn.)

That looks ahead at what may still happen. This lesson looks back at what did not.

You'll want to know: -लो असतो, 'would have'

मी गेलो असतो.

mī gelo asto. — "I would have gone."

The past, गेलो, then असतो (asto), which takes the same endings: तो गेला असता (to gelā astā), ती गेली असती (tī gelī astī), आम्ही आलो असतो (āmhī ālo asto). A woman says मी गेले असते (mī gele aste).

You'll want to know: the if that did not happen

> जर मला वेळ असता, तर मी आलो असतो.
> jar malā veḷ astā, tar mī ālo asto. — "If I had had time, I would have come."

In the condition, असता (astā) alone says "had been"; with a verb, the past comes first: जर पाऊस पडला नसता (jar pāūs paḍlā nastā), "if it had not rained", with नसता (nastā, "had not been"). Both halves wear असता, and that is how a listener knows it did not happen: जर तू आला असतास, तर आम्ही बोललो असतो (jar tū ālā astās, tar āmhī bollo asto), "if you had come, we would have talked".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I would have gone" — mī gelo asto
- "If I had had time, I would have come" — jar malā veḷ astā, tar mī ālo asto
- "If it had not rained, we would have gone" — jar pāūs paḍlā nastā, tar āmhī gelo asto

Before you move on

"I would have gone"? (मी गेलो असतो.) "She would have come"? (ती आली असती.) "If I had had time"? (जर मला वेळ असता.) How do you know it did not happen? (Both halves wear असता.)

287.3 Six lines about a trip

The A1 message asked for a few practised lines to Meera. This task asks for six lines, and they tell a story: a trip, to a village or anywhere else.

Pick one reader: Meera, or a friend, by name. Say ऋतू and ज्ञान aloud; both will go in.

What to know first

A told story is not a list of events. It has a scene, in -त होतो or असताना. It has events in the plain past, kept in order with आधी, मग, त्यानंतर and शेवटी, and joined with -ऊन. It has a reason, with म्हणून or कारण, and a feeling, with मला ... आला or वाटलं.

A good one ends by looking at what might have been: जर ..., तर मी ... गेलो असतो.

Writing — connected composition

On paper, in Devanagari, write six lines to your reader about a trip, real or invented, one line for each of these:

1. the scene: which season it was, with ऋतू, and what you were doing as it began, with -त होतो or ... तेव्हा;
2. the first thing that happened, with आधी, and buying a ticket, with तिकीट;
3. what happened next, with मग or a -ऊन form, and one thing that went wrong: हरवली or चुकली;
4. why, with म्हणून, कारण or -मुळे;
5. how it ended and how you felt, with शेवटी and मला ... आला, वाटलं or झालं;
6. what might have been, with ... असतो, and one thing the trip taught you, with ज्ञान.

There is no model in this lesson. Use only words you already write. The work is choosing the right past for each line, and joining them.

Before you move on

Now read your lines as you read Arun's monsoon day. Mark every verb s for scene, e for event. Line one should be mostly s; lines two and three mostly e.
Then three checks. A verb with an object in the plain past follows the thing: -ने on he, she or a name. ऋतू starts with the letter ऋ, not र. ज्ञान starts with ज्ञ, with ञ inside it.
Last, read line six alone. Do both halves of the if wear असता or असतो?

287.4 Review — it depends, and what would have been

Say "leave early, otherwise you'll miss the train". (lavkar nighā, nāhītar gāḍī cukel.) Then "I like the monsoon season most". (malā pāvsāḷā hā ṛtū sarvāt jāsta āvaḍto.) Then read aloud a line of yours with ज्ञान.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Will we go tomorrow? It depends on the weather.
- It depends on you.
- If I had had time, I would have come.
- If it had not rained, we would have gone to the river.
- one trip that depends on something, and one that would have gone better, if …

Before you move on

"It depends on"? (… -वर अवलंबून आहे.) "I would have gone"? (मी गेलो असतो.) "If I had had time"? (जर मला वेळ असता.) Which letters did ऋतू and ज्ञान bring? (ऋ and ञ.)

Chapter 288

Something Happened

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that something happened: an incident, an accident, a theft.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 288: I can say that something happened: an incident, an accident, a theft.

288.1 घटना (ghaṭnā) — an event; an incident

Before the new one: say the Marathi for dance, then the Marathi for a stage.

You'll want to know: घटना

घटना — ghaṭnā — "an event; an incident".

> ही घटना किती मोठी होती, हे तुम्ही कोणाला विचारता यावर अवलंबून आहे.
> hī ghaṭnā kitī moṭhī hotī, he tumhī koṇālā vicārtā yāvar avlambūn āhe.
> How big this incident was depends on whom you ask.

Feminine.
घटना घडणे, an event takes place; the oblique is घटने-: घटनेचा, of the event.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

घटना (ghaṭnā) is a tatsama, taken from Sanskrit ghaṭanā, 'exertion; a taking effect, a coming about' (Monier-Williams). Marathi uses it for anything that happens.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ghaṭnā
- Say it: ghaṭnā, once more
- Say it: hī ghaṭnā kitī moṭhī hotī, he tumhī koṇālā vicārtā yāvar avlambūn āhe. — How big this incident was depends on whom you ask.
- Recall: say the Marathi for dance, then the Marathi for a stage, then say ghaṭnā again

Before you move on

What does घटना mean? ("An event; an incident".) Say it once more.

288.2 अपघात (apghāt) — an accident

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a stage, then the Marathi for an event.

You'll want to know: अपघात

अपघात — apghāt — "an accident".

शाळेजवळ काल एक मोठा अपघात झाला.

śāḷejvaḷ kāl ek moṭhā apghāt jhālā.

There was a big accident near the school yesterday.

Chapter 304

Telling It Well

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe an episode and say how the news spread.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 304: I can describe an episode and say how the news spread.

304.1 वर्णन करणे (varṇan karṇe) — to describe

Before the new one: say the Marathi for an anecdote, then the Marathi for to narrate.

You'll want to know: वर्णन करणे

वर्णन करणे — varṇan karṇe — "to describe".

> तिने सहलीचं सुंदर वर्णन केलं.
> tine sahlīcaṁ sundar varṇan kelaṁ.
> She described the trip beautifully.

Past, with -ने (he …): त्याने वर्णन केलं, tyāne varṇan kelaṁ.
What is described takes -चं: गावाचं वर्णन करणे.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वर्णन करणे (varṇan karṇe) joins varṇan, 'a description', a tatsama taken from Sanskrit varṇana, 'depicting, describing' (Monier-Williams), to karṇe, 'to do'.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: varṇan karṇe
- Say it: varṇan karṇe, once more
- Say it: tine sahlīcaṁ sundar varṇan kelaṁ. — She described the trip beautifully.
- Recall: say the Marathi for an anecdote, then the Marathi for to narrate, then say varṇan karṇe again

Before you move on

What does वर्णन करणे mean? ("To describe".) Say it once more.

304.2 प्रसंग (prasaṅg) — an occasion; an episode

Before the new one: say the Marathi for to narrate, then the Marathi for to describe.

You'll want to know: प्रसंग

प्रसंग — prasaṅg — "an occasion; an episode".

शाळेतला तो प्रसंग मी कधीच विसरणार नाही.

śāḷetlā to prasaṅg mī kadhīc visarṇār nāhī.

I will never forget that episode at school.

Masculine.
प्रसंगी, on occasion.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

प्रसंग (prasaṅg) is a tatsama, taken from Sanskrit prasaṅga, 'attachment; an occasion, a juncture' (Monier-Williams).

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: prasaṅg
- Say it: prasaṅg, once more
- Say it: śāḷetlā to prasaṅg mī kadhīc visarṇār nāhī. — I will never forget that episode at school.

Before the new one: say the Marathi for to describe, then the Marathi for an occasion.

You'll want to know: उलगडणे

उलगडणे — ulgaḍṇe — "to unfold; to come clear".

हळूहळू त्या घटनेचा अर्थ उलगडला.

haḷūhaḷū tyā ghaṭnecā artha ulgaḍlā.

Little by little the meaning of that event came clear.

Past, with -ने (he …): त्याने उलगडलं, tyāne ulgaḍlaṁ.

Intransitive (अर्थ उलगडतो, the meaning unfolds) and transitive (कागद उलगडणे, to unfold a paper).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

उलगडणे (ulgaḍṇe) is inherited: CDIAL lists Marathi algaḍṇẽ, 'to get unravelled; to unravel', most likely a variant of this verb, under ullagyati*, 'is unfastened' (CDIAL 2363).

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ulgaḍṇe
- Say it: ulgaḍṇe, once more

- Recall: say the Marathi for to describe, then the Marathi for an occasion, then say ulgaḍṇe again

Before you move on

What does उलगडणे mean? ("To unfold; to come clear".) Say it once more.

304.4 गाजणे (gājṇe) — to make a stir

Before the new one: say the Marathi for an occasion, then the Marathi for to unfold.

You'll want to know: गाजणे

गाजणे — gājṇe — "to make a stir".

तो चित्रपट त्या वर्षी खूप गाजला.

to citrapaṭ tyā varṣī khūp gājlā.

That film made a big stir that year.

Past (he …): तो गाजला, to gājlā.
Intransitive; गाजलेला, much talked about.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

गाजणे (gājṇe) is a tadbhava: CDIAL lists Marathi gājṇe, 'thunders', under Sanskrit garjati, 'thunders, roars' (CDIAL 4046). What thunders is heard everywhere.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

Before you move on

What does गाजणे mean? ("To make a stir".) Say it once more.

304.5 पसरणे (pasarṇe) — to spread

Before the new one: say the Marathi for to unfold, then the Marathi for to make a stir.

You'll want to know: पसरणे

पसरणे — pasarṇe — "to spread".

ही बातमी संपूर्ण गावात पसरली.

hī bātmī sampūrṇa gāvāt pasarlī.

This news spread through the whole village.

Past (he …): तो पसरला, to pasarlā.
Intransitive; its transitive partner is पसरवणे, to spread something.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पसरणे (pasarṇe) is a tadbhava: CDIAL lists Marathi pasarṇe, 'to spread out', under Sanskrit prasarati, 'advances, extends' (CDIAL 8825).

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: pasarṇe

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 349: I can describe a problem and suggest a way out.

349.1 समस्या (samasyā) — a problem

Before the new one: say the Marathi for linked, then the Marathi for on the contrary.

You'll want to know: समस्या

समस्या — samasyā — "a problem".

> शहरात पाण्याची समस्या गंभीर आहे.
> śahrāt pāṇyācī samasyā gambhīr āhe.
> The water problem in the city is serious.

Feminine.
Formal; in speech प्रश्न also means an issue.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

समस्या (samasyā) is a tatsama, taken from Sanskrit samasyā, "joining together; a half-verse set to be completed" (Monier-Williams). Marathi uses it for any problem to be solved.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

349.2 अडचण (aḍcaṇ) — a difficulty; a snag

Before the new one: say the Marathi for on the contrary, then the Marathi for a problem.

You'll want to know: अडचण

अडचण — aḍcaṇ — "a difficulty; a snag".

नव्या शहरात सुरुवातीला खूप अडचणी आल्या.

navyā śahrāt suruvātīlā khūp aḍcaṇī ālyā.

There were many difficulties at first in the new city.

Feminine. Plural: अडचणी, aḍcaṇī.
अडचण येणे, a difficulty comes up; अडचणीत असणे, to be in trouble.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अडचण (aḍcaṇ) is usually traced to the root aḍḍ-*, "obstruct, stop", under which CDIAL lists Marathi aḍṇẽ, "to be stopped" (CDIAL 188).

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: aḍcaṇ
- Say it: aḍcaṇ, once more

385.4 टळणे (ṭaḷṇe) — to be averted

Before the new one: say the Marathi for to surge up, then the Marathi for to calm down.

You'll want to know: टळणे

टळणे — ṭaḷṇe — "to be averted".

थोडक्यात अपघात टळला.

thoḍkyāt apghāt ṭaḷlā.

An accident was narrowly averted.

Past (he …): तो टळला, to ṭaḷlā.

Intransitive: the danger is the subject; टाळणे, to avoid, is its causative partner.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

टळणे (ṭaḷṇe) is inherited: CDIAL lists Marathi ṭaḷṇẽ, "to pass off", under ṭalati, "moves aside" (CDIAL 5450), beside ṭāḷṇẽ, "to avoid".

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

What does टळणे mean? ("To be averted".) Say it once more.

385.5 सामोरे जाणे (sāmore jāṇe) — to confront; to face

Before the new one: say the Marathi for to calm down, then the Marathi for to be averted.

You'll want to know: सामोरे जाणे

सामोरे जाणे — sāmore jāṇe — "to confront; to face".

ती अडचणींना धैर्याने सामोरी गेली.

tī aḍcaṇīnnā dhairyāne sāmorī gelī.

She faced the difficulties bravely.

Past (he …): तो सामोरा गेला, to sāmorā gelā.

What is faced takes -ला, and सामोरा agrees with the subject: तो सामोरा गेला, ती सामोरी गेली.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सामोरे जाणे (sāmore jāṇe) joins सामोरे, "in front", inherited from Sanskrit saṁmukha, "facing" (CDIAL 12982 lists Marathi sāmorā), to जाणे, "to go": to go up face to face.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: sāmore jāṇe
- Say it: sāmore jāṇe, once more

386.3 अडवणे (aḍavṇe) — to block; to stop (someone)

Before the new one: say the Marathi for to prevent, then the Marathi for to restrain.

You'll want to know: अडवणे

अडवणे — aḍavṇe — "to block; to stop (someone)".

रस्त्यात एका माणसाने मला अडवलं.

rastyāt ekā māṇsāne malā aḍavlaṁ.

A man stopped me on the road.

Past, with -ने (he …): त्याने अडवलं, tyāne aḍavlaṁ.
The one stopped takes -ला; अडणे, to get stuck.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अडवणे (aḍavṇe) is built on अडणे, "to be stopped", as its causative; CDIAL lists it as Marathi aḍṇẽ under aḍḍ-*, "obstruct, stop" (CDIAL 188).

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: aḍavṇe
- Say it: aḍavṇe, once more
- Say it: rastyāt ekā māṇsāne malā aḍavlaṁ. — A man stopped me on the road.
- Recall: say the Marathi for to prevent, then the Marathi for to restrain, then say aḍavṇe again

Before you move on

386.4 दखल घेणे (dakhal gheṇe) — to take notice (of)

Before the new one: say the Marathi for to restrain, then the Marathi for to block.

You'll want to know: दखल घेणे

दखल घेणे — dakhal gheṇe — "to take notice (of)".

शेवटी प्रशासनाने आमच्या तक्रारीची दखल घेतली.

śevṭī praśāsnāne āmacyā takrārīcī dakhal ghetlī.

In the end the administration took notice of our complaint.

Past, with -ने (he …): त्याने दखल घेतली, tyāne dakhal ghetlī.
What is noticed takes -ची: तक्रारीची दखल घेणे.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दखल घेणे (dakhal gheṇe) joins दखल, "notice, interference", a loan from Persian usually traced to Arabic dakhl, "entering", to घेणे, "to take".

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: dakhal gheṇe
- Say it: dakhal gheṇe, once more

Before you move on

What does दखल घेणे mean? ("To take notice (of)".) Say it once more.

386.5 पळवाट (paḷvāṭ) — a loophole; an escape route

Before the new one: say the Marathi for to block, then the Marathi for to take notice.

You'll want to know: पळवाट

पळवाट — paḷvāṭ — "a loophole; an escape route".

या नियमात एक पळवाट आहे.

yā niymāt ek paḷvāṭ āhe.

There is a loophole in this rule.

Feminine.
पळ + वाट, flight + path; पळवाट काढणे, to find a way out.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पळवाट (paḷvāṭ) is a Marathi compound built from the stem of पळणे, "to run away", inherited from Sanskrit palāyate, "flees" (CDIAL 7955), and वाट, "path", inherited from Sanskrit vartman, "track of a wheel, path" (CDIAL 11366): a path to run by.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: paḷvāṭ

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about ghat roads, passes, slopes and a winding road.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 402: I can talk about ghat roads, passes, slopes and a winding road.

402.1 घाट (ghāṭ) — a ghat road; a mountain pass

Before the new one: say the Marathi for a puncture, then the Marathi for to run out.

You'll want to know: घाट

घाट — ghāṭ — "a ghat road; a mountain pass".

> बस हळूहळू घाट चढत होती.
> bas haḷūhaḷū ghāṭ caḍhat hotī.
> The bus was slowly climbing the ghat.

Masculine.

In the western hills a घाट is the steep road up the slope; on a river it is a flight of steps to the water.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

घाट (ghāṭ) is inherited: CDIAL lists Marathi ghāṭ, "mountain pass, landing place", under Sanskrit ghaṭṭa, "landing place, quay" (CDIAL 4414), and notes a possible Dravidian source.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ghāṭ
- Say it: ghāṭ, once more
- Say it: bas haḷūhaḷū ghāṭ caḍhat hotī. — The bus was slowly climbing the ghat.
- Recall: say the Marathi for a puncture, then the Marathi for to run out, then say ghāṭ again

Before you move on

What does घाट mean? ("A ghat road; a mountain pass".) Say it once more.

402.2 खिंड (khiṇḍ) — a narrow pass; a gap

Before the new one: say the Marathi for to run out, then the Marathi for a ghat road.

Devanagari for Marathi — a reference

A reference, not a chapter — the lessons teach reading through real words. This page gathers the system and flags what is special about Marathi's Devanagari.

How Devanagari works (the three facts)

1. Consonants carry a built-in "a". क = ka, न = na, म = ma.
2. A vowel sign (mātrā) changes it: का kā · कि ki · की kī · कु ku · के ke · को ko · कौ kau.
3. A halant removes it, and the bare consonant joins the next as a conjunct: स् + का → स्का; न् + य → न्य. The anusvāra dot ं nasalises a vowel (बरं baraṃ).

What is special about Marathi's Devanagari

- The extra letter ळ (ḷa) — a retroflex l, tongue curled back. Hindi does not have it; Marathi shares it with the Dravidian languages to the south — Tamil, Kannada and the rest — a mark of centuries of contact. Common in kāḷ ("time"), phaḷ ("fruit").
- The vowel ॲ / ऍ for the English "a" of cat — added for English loanwords (běnk, "bank").
- Three genders. Marathi keeps Sanskrit's masculine, feminine, and neuter (Hindi collapsed to two), and marks gender on verbs and adjectives more thoroughly — even in the present tense (yeto m. / yete f.).

Marathi in the family

Marathi is Indo-Aryan (like Hindi, Punjabi, Bengali — descended from Sanskrit), spoken in Maharashtra. Its script and much formal vocabulary are shared with Hindi and Sanskrit; its sound system, the letter ळ, and parts of its grammar bear the imprint of long contact with Dravidian. The lessons trace both threads.
