Preface

This book teaches Persian one word at a time, and it teaches each word by taking it apart. It assumes no Persian and no Perso-Arabic script: every section takes one small expression, introduces only the letters and grammar that expression needs, connects it to words you may already know, and ends by asking for it back. Persian reads right to left — but you will be reading real words long before you have met the whole alphabet.

This is contemporary Iranian Persian. Romanization stays beside the script for now and fades as your reading grows. Where formal written and colloquial forms diverge, both are labelled rather than quietly averaged; Dari and Tajik are relatives of this language, not substitutes for it, and are not smuggled in here.

Persian vocabulary comes in historical layers. Some everyday words are inherited Iranian forms; many others arrived through Arabic and now follow Persian pronunciation and grammar completely. Etymology in this book is practical — it gives a word a handhold in your memory — and never a claim that a borrowed word is less fully Persian today.

This is a starter edition: fourteen short chapters, complete in themselves, with more being written.

How to use this book

Every numbered section is one word, or one small phrase, and takes a few minutes — the length of a queue, an errand, or the walk to the bus. Read them in order the first time through: each section stands on the ones before it, and nothing is used before it has been taught. After that the book becomes reference, and you can open it anywhere.

Say the Persian out loud wherever you can. The prompts under Your turn are written to be spoken, and saying a word is most of what makes it stay. The questions under Before you move on carry their own answers in brackets: cover them, answer from memory, then look.

Chapter 1

Greetings and responses

Modes: voice (1) eyes (3) pen (4) Hands-free start: the first of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can greet someone in Persian, respond courteously, answer yes or no, and copy one alef with a visible model.
> Hold a four-line greeting exchange, say thank-you, yes and no without the page, point to its right-to-left start, and copy one alef beside the visible model.

1.1 Salâm — hello, one greeting at a time

One greeting is enough for this lesson. Listen once: salâm.

You'll want to know: salâm

salâm — hello

Persian runs right to left: a written line starts at the right edge of the page, and your eyes travel towards the left. The joined spelling of salâm waits for the next two-minute lesson, where you will point to its right edge and start there. Today you need only the greeting itself — no letter names, no joining rules, and none of the rest of the alphabet yet.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

salâm means "hello" and literally evokes peace. Persian borrowed it from Arabic, where the consonants s-l-m organize a family concerned with peace, safety, and wholeness. That same old Semitic family also includes Hebrew shalom. The word is now thoroughly everyday Persian.

Why it's said this way

Say salâm to one person or a group. It is neutral, friendly, and safe in most situations.

- See a neighbor: Salâm!
- Answer a greeting: Salâm!

Writing — follow one visible stroke

Keep this model visible: ا. With your finger, trace its one upright stroke from top to bottom. Do not copy it yet and do not hunt for it inside the joined word. The next two-minute lesson will name and copy this one shape.

Your turn

- Point to: the right edge of the page, where Persian reading begins
- Say it: salâm once to greet, and once to answer

Before you move on

Which direction does Persian run? (Right to left.) What old idea lives inside salâm? (Peace, safety, or wholeness.) Say the greeting once.
Persian Online: the writing system

1.2 ا — one stroke with the model present

Here is salâm, joined up and written: سلام. Point to its right edge, where reading begins, and say salâm. Keep this separate one-stroke model visible: ا.

Script — meet alef

The shape is ا, named alef. Draw its one straight stroke from top to bottom, then lift. In salâm, alef carries the long â sound.

Writing — one guided copy

How ا is written, stroke by stroke

Copy ا once beside the model. Look back whenever you need. Say the long â as your pen reaches the bottom, then stop.

Do not hide the model, copy the whole greeting, or add a second letter today. One visible stroke is enough for a first Persian writing lesson.

Before you move on

Compare your copy with ا. How many strokes? (One.) Which way did that stroke travel? (Top to bottom.)

1.3 ا — one stroke with the model covered

Look at ا once and say the long â. Then cover it.

Writing — delayed copy

How it is written — one unbroken stroke · 1 movement

Stroke order after Persian Online, How to Write Persian Characters, opening ا demonstration at 00:08–00:11 (Liberal Arts Instructional Technology Services, Univ. of Texas at Austin)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ا is written, stroke by stroke

With the model covered, wait ten seconds, then draw ا once from memory.

Ten seconds is long enough that your hand cannot be tracing a shape it can still see, and short enough that a stroke you made a minute ago is still there.

Only after the stroke is finished, uncover the model and compare.

Before you move on

One stroke is the easiest shape in the script to get right and the easiest to get backwards, and the page cannot tell you which you did.
So the question to ask yourself is not whether it looks right. It is: which end did your pen start from? Alef travels top to bottom. A stroke drawn upward lands in the same place and behaves differently the moment it has neighbours, which is why a single line is worth this much attention now rather than later.

1.4 ا — the stroke from the sound

Cover every ا on the page. Nothing to trace and nothing to uncover.

Writing — dictation

Say the long â of salâm aloud, or play it, and write the letter that carries it. One stroke, top to bottom, on the right-hand side of the line.

A delayed copy asked your hand to remember a shape. This asks it to turn a sound into a shape, which is the thing writing is actually for, and the two do not always arrive together.

Before you move on

Uncover the model and compare.
Now a warning worth having on the first day rather than the hundredth. What you wrote was alef standing for a vowel, and that is one of its two jobs. At the start of a word the same stroke often carries no long â at all — it is a stand for a short vowel to sit on, because Persian does not begin a word with a bare vowel.
So alef is not a letter with a sound. It is a letter with a position, and what it says depends on where it stands. Nothing in the dictation will tell you that; the word around it will.

1.5 ممنون — thank you

One more expression, and the exchange starts to work: mamnun.

The letters in this word

ممنون — mamnun — thank you

Read it the way you read the greeting: from the right edge, as one whole word with its romanization beside it. One thing about the writing is worth noticing now, because it is true of nearly every Persian word you will meet: the short vowels are not written. The a in mamnun is part of the word you hear, not a mark you read. The letters themselves get their own lessons later; none is being asked of you today.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mamnun literally describes someone as grateful or obliged, and in ordinary conversation it simply works as "thanks." Persian received it from Arabic, where the consonant family m-n-n gathers ideas of favour and kindness — the same kind of three-consonant family that gave you salâm.

Why it's said this way

Build the smallest exchange there is, and treat each expression as one social move rather than a sentence to analyse:

- A: سلام — salâm — Hello.
- B: سلام — salâm — Hello.
- A: ممنون — mamnun — Thank you.

No grammar is due. Two people, three moves.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- salâm — mamnun, the two moves in order
- what mamnun literally describes — someone grateful or obliged

Before you move on

Say salâm — mamnun without looking. What does mamnun literally describe? (Someone grateful, or obliged to you.) Which vowels does Persian writing leave out? (The short ones.)

1.6 بله — yes

A greeting and a thank-you need an answer. Here is the polite one.

The letters in this word

بله — bale — yes

Three letters, and both of its vowels are among the short ones Persian leaves out — so the written word carries no vowel at all and the reader supplies a and e. That is the same habit you just met in mamnun, met twice in one short word. Read the romanization and take the shape as a whole; no letter is being asked of you yet.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bale is usually traced to Arabic balā, "yes, indeed" (Lane).

Why it's said this way

bale is the standard, polite "yes." A more casual âre exists, but one clear affirmative is plenty for now.

- "Is this Persian?" — Bale.
- "Are you ready?" — Bale, mamnun. — Yes, thank you.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bale, once on its own
- bale, mamnun — yes, thank you

Before you move on

Answer "yes" in Persian once. (Bale.) Which sounds does the writing leave for you to supply? (The short vowels — here both of them.)

1.7 نه — no

The other answer — and the smallest word in the chapter.

The letters in this word

نه — na — no

Two letters and, once again, an unwritten short a. The second of the two is the shape that also ends bale, so part of this word is already familiar to your eye. Recognising a repeated shape is all that is asked; naming it is a later lesson's job.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

salâm and mamnun both arrived from Arabic. na did not. It continues a very old Indo-Iranian negative, and relatives of it turn up right across the Iranian and Indo-Aryan languages. That is the first bridge from Persian towards Hindi and Urdu — not something to study now, just a reason this tiny word may feel oddly familiar when you meet those languages later.

Why it's said this way

Change only the answer, and keep everything else the same:

- bale — yes
- نه — na — no

Ask yourself a harmless yes/no question and answer it both ways. The two written forms stand side by side at the end of the chapter, where every model is on the page at once.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair, twice — bale … na
- which of the chapter's four words is not a loan from Arabic — na

Before you move on

Answer "no" in Persian. (Na.) Which of this chapter's words came from somewhere other than Arabic, and where from? (na — an old Indo-Iranian negative.) Now say the whole chain once: hello, thank you, yes, no.

1.8 Chapter 1 — one tiny exchange, one tiny mark

Say سلام once to greet and once to answer.

The exchange

Read it: each Persian line from right to left

- A: سلام — salâm
- B: سلام — salâm
- A: ممنون — mamnun
- B: بله or نه — bale or na

The later three words stay as whole-word supports: you read them as shapes you know, not letter by letter. The next section checks that you can say them without the page.

Your turn — say it back

- Someone holds a door for you. What do you say? (Mamnun.)
- What does mamnun literally describe? (Someone grateful, or obliged — from the Arabic consonant family m-n-n, favour and kindness.)
- "Are you ready?" Answer yes. (Bale.) Now answer no. (Na.)
- na did not come from Arabic. Where is it from? (An old Indo-Iranian negative.)
- Which vowels does Persian writing leave for you to supply? (The short ones.)

Your turn

- Say it: the four-line exchange, choosing bale or na
- Point to: the right edge where each Persian line begins
- Copy: ا once beside the visible model, top to bottom
- Say it: the old idea behind salâm — “peace”

Before you move on

Greet once without help. Check: your ا against the model
No hidden-word spelling and no second letter: the chapter closes with one usable exchange and one supported stroke.

Chapter 2

Give your name

Modes: voice (1) Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say my name in Persian in one careful sentence, and I can hear the small linking -e that ties the name to its owner.
> One careful sentence with a slot for your own name: esm-e man ... ast, with the spoken ezafe doing the linking.

2.1 من اسم ... است — my name is ...

Greet once, then answer yes and no. The next line gives you one careful sentence for your own name.

The exchange

Read it: the phrase from right to left
Say its words in this order:

من اسم ... است — esm-e man ... ast

- اسم esm = name. You already recognize ا, س, and م.
- The small spoken -e after esm links "name" to its owner. This linker is called ezafe. It is often not written in ordinary text.
- من man = I / me; after the linker it means "my."
- است ast = is.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

esm is an Arabic loan related to Arabic ism, while man and ast belong to Persian's inherited Iranian core. One tiny sentence can therefore show two major layers of Persian vocabulary.

Grammar Lens: one spoken link

Only one grammar idea is new: noun + -e + owner. The spoken -e links "name" to its owner, so esm-e man is literally "name-of me." Do not turn that one pattern into a full grammar table yet.

Your turn

Replace the dots with your name:

> esm-e man Sârâ ast. — My name is Sara.

Say these aloud:

- esm-e man Sârâ ast
- replace Sârâ with your own name

In everyday speech, the ending is often shortened. Keep the careful full form for now; it makes every part visible.

Before you move on

What links esm to man? The spoken -e, or ezafe. Say "My name is …" once with your own name.

Chapter 3

Ask and Answer Names

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask someone's name respectfully with shomâ, answer with my own, and tell them I am pleased to meet them.
> A six-line first meeting: greet, ask the name with respectful shomâ, answer with your own, and acknowledge with khoshvaghtam.

3.1 شما / تو — two relationships inside "you"

Say esm-e man ... ast with your own name. To turn that sentence around, you next need a safe word for the other person.

The two words

Persian	read	use
شما	shomâ	one person respectfully, or more than one person
تو	to	one familiar person

In شما, meet ش sh; its three dots distinguish it from س s. Final ا carries long â. In تو, و has its o value rather than the long u it had in mamnun. Learn the sound from the whole word.

Grammar Lens: begin respectfully

Persian uses plural shomâ for respectful singular address, much as Russian uses vy and French uses vous. Use shomâ with an unfamiliar adult or in a first meeting. Use to after the relationship is familiar. English once made a similar distinction but now uses you for both.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

to is inherited: it is the old Indo-European familiar "you", the word behind English thou and Latin tu, usually traced to Middle Persian tō. shomâ is inherited too, usually traced to Middle Persian ašmā, the old plural "you".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a new adult — shomâ
- a close friend — to
- the old family — to, thou, tū, tvam

Before you move on

Which form is safest when the relationship is new? (Shomâ.)
Which is the relative of English thou? (To.)
Source: Persian Online: Pronouns.

3.2 (شما / تو, continued) — The word, taken apart

Before going on: say شما / تو again, and what it means.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Persian to belongs to the ancient Indo-European familiar-"you" family: English thou, Latin tū, and Sanskrit tvam are relatives. The word is old; the social choice carried by it is current.

Your turn

- Say it: what this lesson added to شما / تو, in one sentence

Before you move on

What did this lesson add to شما / تو? Say it once more, without looking.

3.3 چیست — "what is?" in one joined word

Which "you" is safe for a new adult? (shomâ.) Now add the question engine that will follow "your name."

You'll want to know first — چیست

How چ is written, stroke by stroke

چیست — chist — what is?

From the right: چ ch, ی long i, س s, ت t. Read it: the word from the right

چ is one of Persian's four additions to the Arabic alphabet: it uses the same base shape as the letter jim, with three dots below. Meet only this joined form now.

Grammar Lens: two words compressed chist is the careful fusion of chi "what" and ast "is." The opening vowel of ast disappears when the pieces join:

chi + ast → chist

You already know full ast from esm-e man … ast. This lesson changes no copula rule; it gives one high-frequency fused question form.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chist joins two inherited words. chi, "what", continues Middle Persian čē (EtymDB); ast, "is", goes back to Old Persian astiy and the Indo-European *$h_1$ésti, the same word as English is (EtymDB).

Your turn

- Say it: chi + ast → chist
- Read it: چیست from چ to ت
- Say it: chist? — "what is?"

Before you move on

What two pieces make chist? (Chi + ast.) Which new Persian letter opens it? (چ, ch, with three dots below.)

3.4 چیست؟ شما اسم — ask a name respectfully

Give the three ready pieces: esm-e "name-of," shomâ respectful "you," and chist "what is?"

The exchange

چیست؟ شما اسم — esm-e shomâ chist? — What is your name?

The Persian order is transparent once the pieces are known:

name + -e + you + what-is?

The spoken ezafe turns esm-e shomâ into "your name." Chist stays at the end. No new agreement or verb table is hiding here.

Script: the question mark

Persian ends a written question with ؟. Its curve faces the opposite way from English ?, matching the right-to-left line. Read the sentence from its right edge; meet the punctuation at the far left.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

esm is borrowed from Arabic ism, "name" (EtymDB; root s-m-w, Lane). shomâ, chist and the linking -e are inherited Persian.

Your turn

- Say it: esm-e shomâ chist?
- Say it: ask, then answer — esm-e man ... ast
- Point to: ؟ at the end of the right-to-left question

Before you move on

Ask the question once without reading the romanization. Then answer with the careful name frame you already know.
Source: Persian Online: Introducing Yourself.

3.5 خوشوقتم — pleased to meet you

Ask esm-e shomâ chist? and answer esm-e man ... ast. One warm response now closes that tiny meeting.

The exchange

خوشوقتم — khoshvaghtam — Pleased to meet you.

Treat the joined word as one social move first. خ gives kh, like the sound in Scottish loch. ش gives sh. Persian commonly pronounces ق here with the merged gh/q sound of contemporary Iranian speech.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

- khosh — pleasant, happy; inherited Persian vocabulary.
- vaqt (pronounced vaght here) — time; an Arabic loan fully at home in Persian.

- -am — I am, the first-person ending.

So the word builds "pleasant-time-I-am" into the idiomatic feeling "I am pleased." The history is layered; the expression is ordinary modern Persian.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- khoshvaghtam as one smooth response
- the three pieces — khosh + vaqt + -am
- which piece came from Arabic — vaqt

Before you move on

Which response closes the introduction? (Khoshvaghtam.) Which three layers can you hear inside it? (Khosh + vaqt + -am.) Source: Persian Online: Introducing Yourself.

3.6 Practice — a complete Persian name exchange

Recall the four moves without adding anything: greet, ask, answer, acknowledge.

The exchange

A: سلام! — Salâm! B: سلام! — Salâm! A: چیست؟ شما اسم — Esm-e shomâ chist? B: Esm-e man Sârâ ast. A: خوشوقتم. — Khoshvaghtam. B: Mamnun.

Every line is already known. Shomâ keeps the first meeting respectful; the answer returns to man. The question mark sits at the left end of the right-to-left question.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- both voices, using your own name
- the exchange again without romanization
- only the three name moves — question, answer, response

Before you move on

Run the meeting once from salâm to mamnun. If one line stalls, review that single micro-lesson rather than rereading the whole chapter.

Chapter 4

How Are You?

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how someone is in careful respectful Persian and answer that I am well, thank you.
> The careful wellbeing exchange in two moves: hâl-e shomâ chetor ast? answered khubam, mamnun; then hâl, chetor and khub taken apart by meaning and history, and حال, چطور, خوب and خوبم read off the page.

4.1 حال — the "state" in a wellbeing question

Run only the opening of the meeting you know: salâm and the name question. The next move asks about the other person's present state.

You'll want to know first — one useful word

حال — hâl — state, condition

From right to left: ح h + ا long â + ل l. Read it: the word from right to left

The first letter is a breathier h than English normally uses; a clear ordinary h is a safe beginner approximation. Keep the whole written word attached to its meaning.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Persian borrowed hâl from Arabic, then uses it with Persian grammar. You will soon say hâl-e shomâ, literally "the state of you." That -e is the same spoken ezafe already learned in esm-e shomâ.

Your turn

- Say it: hâl — state or condition
- Read it: حال from right to left
- Connect: an Arabic-rooted noun inside Persian ezafe grammar

Before you move on

What does hâl name? (A state or condition.) Which familiar linker will attach an owner to it? (Ezafe -e.)
Source: Persian Online: Greetings List.

4.2 چطور — "how?" one layer at a time

Say the Persian noun for a state or condition. (Hâl.) Now ask about the manner of that state with one question word.

You'll want to know first — the question word

چطور؟ — chetor? — how? / in what manner?

You already met چ ch in chist. Here it is followed by ط t, و o, and ر r. The short e is not written. Learn the sound from the whole word: che-tor.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Persian Online takes چطور apart as Persian che, "what," plus طور tor, "manner," borrowed from Arabic ṭawr, "time, state, manner" (Lane). The literal picture is "in what manner?" That layered history is useful memory, but chetor is one everyday Persian question word now.

Your turn

- Say it: chetor? — how?
- Point to: familiar چ at the right edge
- Rebuild: che "what" + tor "manner"

Before you move on

Which part means "what"? (Che.) Which borrowed part means "manner"? (Tor.)
Source: Persian Online: Interrogatives.

4.3 چطور شما حال است؟ — ask "How are you?" respectfully

Recall hâl "state," shomâ respectful "you," chetor "how," and careful ast "is." The only assembly move is familiar ezafe.

The exchange

چطور شما حال است؟ — hâl-e shomâ chetor ast? — How are you?

Build it without translating English word for word:

state + -e + respectful-you + how + is?

The unwritten ezafe in hâl-e shomâ works exactly like esm-e shomâ. Persian asks, literally, "the state of you, in what manner is?"

Grammar Lens: one reliable careful form

This chapter asks you to produce the careful written form with ast. Everyday Iranian speech often contracts the end to chetore?; recognize that preview, but keep the uncontracted line until the careful pattern is secure.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Two layers meet in this line. hâl, "state", is borrowed from Arabic ḥāl (root ḥ-w-l, Lane), and chetor is Persian che, "what", with Arabic ṭawr, "manner". shomâ, ast and the linking -e are inherited Persian.

Your turn

- Say it: hâl-e shomâ chetor ast?
- Trace it: hâl-e shomâ — state-of-you
- Choose: careful production now — final ast

Before you move on

Ask once from memory. What already-known grammar holds hâl and shomâ together? (Ezafe -e.)
Source: Persian Online: Greetings List.

4.4 خوب — "good" and "well"

Ask hâl-e shomâ chetor ast? The smallest positive answer begins with one word.

You'll want to know first — the answer word

خوب — khub — good, well

At the right edge, خ is kh, made farther back than English h. و carries long u, as it did in mamnun; final ب closes the word with b. Say it as one beat: khub.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Persian's everyday vocabulary is layered. Hâl and the tor inside chetor came through Arabic; khub belongs to the inherited Persian layer. All three are fully ordinary Persian now. History helps memory without ranking one layer as more authentic than another.

Your turn

- Say it: khub — good, well
- Read it: خ + long-u و + final ب
- Contrast: inherited khub beside borrowed hâl

Before you move on

Give the answer word once without romanization. Which letter carries its long u? (و.)
Source: Persian Online: Greetings List.

4.5 ممنون خوبم، — "I am well, thank you"

Say khub "well," then the thanks you learned in Chapter 1: mamnun. One small ending turns the first word into a full answer.

The exchange

ممنون خوبم، — Khubam, mamnun. — I am well, thank you.

The new final م is m. Attach it directly to خوب: خوب + م → خوبم. Persian script and speech both keep the answer compact.

Grammar Lens: one copula ending, not a table

The attached ending -am means "I am" here. Persian Online notes that خوبم by itself already means "I am fine"; the separate pronoun man is unnecessary. Learn only this useful first-person ending today. The rest of the copula set can arrive one form at a time later.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

khubam is khub, "good, well", which continues Middle Persian xūb (EtymDB), with the inherited ending -am, "I am". mamnun is borrowed from Arabic mamnūn, "favoured, obliged" (root m-n-n, Lane).

Your turn

- Build: khub + -am → khubam
- Say it: khubam, mamnun
- Point to: final م carrying "I am"

Before you move on

What does final -am contribute? ("I am.") Do you need a separate man in this answer? (No.)
Sources: Persian Online: Verb "To Be" and Greetings List.

4.6 Practice — a Persian wellbeing exchange

Recall the two moves only: ask about the other person's state, then answer "I am well, thank you."

A: سلام! حال شما چطور است؟ Salâm! Hâl-e shomâ chetor ast? B: خوبم، ممنون. Khubam, mamnun.

Every piece is already owned. The question reuses respectful shomâ, ezafe, and careful ast. The answer's final -am carries "I am," so no new pronoun is hiding between the lines.

Grammar Lens: keep the social choice visible

Use this careful question in a first meeting. You may hear shorter conversational forms, but producing one stable respectful line first prevents script, register, and contraction from arriving as one oversized step.

Your turn — the words inside the exchange

Take the two lines apart without the page.

- What does hâl name? (A state or condition.) Where is it from? (Arabic, now used inside Persian ezafe grammar.)

- Which word asks "how?" (Chetor.) Its two parts? (Persian che, "what," plus the Arabic loan tor, "manner": "in what manner?")
- What does khub mean? (Good, well.) Which layer is it from? (The inherited Persian layer, beside borrowed hâl and tor.)

Script — the four words on the page

حال · چطور · خوب · خوبم

- Read it: each word from the right edge — hâl, chetor, khub, khubam
- Point to: the چ opening چطور, the long-u و in خوب, and the final م that makes خوبم

(ح h, ا long â, ل l spell حال; in چطور the short e is not written.)

Your turn

- Say it: both voices with the script visible
- Say it: both voices without romanization
- Switch: ask first, then answer after a pause

Before you move on

Run the exchange once from salâm to mamnun. If one side stalls, return to that single micro-lesson rather than rereading the chapter.

Chapter 5

Take Leave

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can open a short Persian conversation, check how the other person is, and close it with khodâ hâfez.
> A four-line interaction with a beginning and an end: salâm, the wellbeing check, then khodâ hâfez from both voices; then the farewell taken apart into khodâ and hâfez, and خدا*,* حافظ and خداحافظ read off the page.

5.1 خدا — the Persian half of a farewell

Run the known wellbeing exchange once. The next chapter adds only the final social move: ending that interaction.

You'll want to know first — one word

خدا — khodâ — God

From right to left: خ kh + د d + ا long â. Read it: the word from right to left

The short o is learned with the word rather than written as a separate letter. Keep the back-of-the-mouth kh gentle; clarity matters more than force.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Modern khodâ continues Middle Persian xwadây, "lord." The everyday farewell will pair this inherited Persian word with an Arabic loan. That mixed history is normal Persian vocabulary, not an exception to memorize away.

Your turn

- Say it: khodâ — God
- Read it: خدا from the right edge
- Connect: modern khodâ ← Middle Persian xwadây "lord"

Before you move on

Which letter carries the final long â? (ا.) Which vowel is heard but not written separately? (The short o.)
Source: Wiktionary: خدا.

5.2 حافظ — "guardian" or "protector"

Say it: khodâ, "God," the word from the last lesson

Keep it separate: this lesson adds only the second word behind the farewell.

You'll want to know first — one word

حافظ — hâfez — guardian, protector

Read it: ح ا ف ظ from right to left

ا carries long â. In contemporary Persian, final ظ is pronounced z here, so say hâ-fez, not an English th sound. The short e is part of the learned word and is normally unwritten.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Arabic ḥāfiẓ is an active participle from the root ḥ-f-ẓ, "guard, preserve." Persian borrowed the word and uses its Persian pronunciation hâfez. Keep the useful meaning first; the root is a memory hook.

Your turn

- Say it: hâfez — guardian, protector
- Read it: حافظ
- Connect: Arabic ḥ-f-ẓ — guard, preserve

Before you move on

What does hâfez contribute to the farewell? (The idea of guarding or protecting.)
Source: American Heritage Dictionary: hafiz.

5.3 خداحافظ — goodbye

Retrieve khodâ and hâfez separately: "God" + "guardian."
Now let them become one everyday social move.

The two words — put the known pieces together

خداحافظ — khodâ hâfez — goodbye

Persian normally writes the two spoken pieces together. Start with خدا, add حافظ. Read it: the joined spelling خداحافظ from the right edge

Keep the two meaning layers available underneath the complete form.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

khodâ hâfez is "God, the guardian". khodâ is inherited, from Middle Persian xwadāy, "lord"; hâfez is borrowed from Arabic ḥāfiẓ, "guardian, keeper" (EtymDB; root ḥ-f-ẓ, Lane).

Your turn

- Build: khodâ + hâfez
- Read it: joined خداحافظ
- Use: say it only when the interaction ends

Before you move on

When do you use khodâ hâfez? (At parting, not at the opening.)
Source: Persian Online: Greetings List.

5.4 (خداحافظ, continued) — Grammar Lens — a complete wish without a full sentence

Before going on: say خداحافظ again, and what it means.

Grammar Lens — a complete wish without a full sentence

The expression carries the protective sense "God [be] guardian," but everyday speakers use the whole formula simply as goodbye. No new verb is required for beginner production. It is a broadly polite, reliable way to end the short respectful interaction built in Chapters 1–4.

Your turn

- Say it: what this lesson added to خداحافظ, in one sentence

Before you move on

What did this lesson add to خداحافظ? Say it once more, without looking.

5.5 Practice — open, check, and close

Without looking ahead, retrieve the expression for the beginning and the expression for the end. Do not add a new middle line.

The exchange — the complete interaction

A: سلام! Hâl-e shomâ chetor ast? Salâm! Hâl-e shomâ chetor ast? B: Khubam, mamnun. A: خداحافظ. Khodâ hâfez. B: خداحافظ. Khodâ hâfez.

Every line is already learned. Salâm opens; khodâ hâfez closes. The same farewell works for both voices, so no pronoun, agreement ending, or new register table is hiding inside the practice.

Your turn — the two halves of goodbye

Take the farewell apart without the page.

- What does khodâ mean? (God.) Where is it from? (Inherited Persian: Middle Persian xwadây, "lord.")
- What does hâfez mean? (Guardian, protector.) Where is it from? (Arabic ḥāfiẓ, from the root ḥ-f-ẓ, "guard, preserve.")
- The pieces picture "God [be] guardian." Is a verb needed to say goodbye? (No: the whole formula means goodbye.)

Script — the halves, then the whole

خدا · حافظ · خداحافظ

- Read it: خدا, then حافظ, then the joined خداحافظ, each from the right edge

(خ kh, د d, ا long â spell خدا; the final ظ of حافظ is said z.)

Your turn

- Choose: meeting begins → salâm
- Choose: interaction ends → khodâ hâfez
- Run through: both voices once with script, once without romanization

Before you move on

Run the full exchange once. If the final line stalls, return only to the assembled-farewell lesson rather than rereading the chapter.

Chapter 6

Name a Verb, Find Its Stem

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five core Persian verbs in their dictionary form, recognise the -tan/-dan ending that marks any Persian infinitive, and give the present stem that each verb carries beside it.
> The five pairs run back to back from memory — budan, raftan/rav-, âmadan/â-, goftan/gu-, dânestan/dân- — with the infinitive ending named and the stem produced for each.

6.1 بودن — "to be," and the ending every Persian verb wears

Chapter 4 ended on khubam, "I am well." That -am carried "I am" with no verb beside it. This chapter names the verb it belongs to.

You'll want to know first — one verb

بودن — budan — to be

Four letters, all of them already yours. From the right edge: ب b, و long u, د d, ن n. Persian و never joins to the letter on its left, so the word falls into two clumps, بو and دن — the same kind of break ا makes inside سلام.

Grammar Lens: how a Persian verb announces itself

English names a verb with a word in front of it: to be, to go, to know. Persian names it with an ending on the back. Every Persian infinitive — every one, with no list of exceptions — finishes in -tan or -دن -dan. بودن is bu + dan. Whenever a Persian word ends in -tan or -dan, you are holding a verb in its naming form.
Persian rewards you here: one set of personal endings serves every verb. What it asks instead is one extra fact per verb — the next lesson is about that fact.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

budan continues Middle Persian būdan, from the Indo-European root bheu-*, "to grow, to become, to be." English be and been are that root, worn smooth. So are German bin, Latin fuī "I was" — the ancestor of English future — and Sanskrit bhavati.
The resemblance runs through Persian's plainest words: mâdar is mother, pedar is father, barâdar is brother, dokhtar is daughter, نام nâm is name. Nobody borrowed these; both languages inherited them.
One caution to carry through the chapter: lookalikes lie. Persian بد bad does mean "bad," but its history and the English word's are unconnected. A cousin has to be traced, not guessed.

Your turn

- Say it: budan — to be
- Read it: بودن from the right edge, in its two clumps
- Name: the ending that marks a Persian infinitive — -tan / -dan
- Connect: budan ← bheu-* → English be, been
- Retrieve: the ending on khubam that already meant "I am"

Before you move on

How does a Persian verb announce that it is a verb? (It ends in -tan or -dan.) Which English word is budan? (Be — the same inherited root.) Is Persian bad a cousin of English bad? (No; that one is coincidence.)
Source: Wiktionary: بودن.

6.2 رفتن — "to go," and the second form that travels with it

Retrieve the Persian for "to be," and the ending that marked it as a verb. That ending returns here, on a word that brings the extra fact Persian asks of you.

رفتن — raftan — to go

From the right edge: ر r, ف f, ت t, ن n — all four familiar, ر from chetor and ف from hâfez. ر does not join leftward, so it stands alone and فتن follows as one run. The ending is the -tan you met on budan.

Grammar Lens: the second fact every Persian verb carries

Persian keeps two forms for each verb, and you learn them as a pair. The first is the infinitive, رفتن raftan. Strip its -an and you have رفت raft, the past stem; everything about yesterday is built on that.
The second is the present stem, and it cannot be predicted from the infinitive. For raftan it is rav. Everything about now is built on rav-: mi-ravam "I go," mi-ravad "she goes."
So the fact to store is not raftan alone but raftan → rav-, said in one breath. Get the pair and the whole verb opens: the endings that follow a stem are the same for every Persian verb.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

رفتن raftan is inherited: it is usually traced to Middle Persian raftan. Its deeper Indo-European ancestry is not settled, so no English cousin is claimed for it here.
The split itself needs no excuse — English does the same thing. Go and went are two unrelated words sharing one verb; so are be and was. English calls that irregularity and buries it in a list. Persian makes it the ordinary shape of a verb and says so up front.
rav is short: ر, then the letter vâv, with no join between them. Say the pair aloud until it sounds like one item — raftan, rav.

Your turn

- Say it: raftan — to go

- Say it: the pair as one item — raftan, rav
- Read it: رفتن, and say its stem rav
- Name: the ending that made raftan an infinitive
- Retrieve: the Chapter 6 verb meaning "to be" — budan

Before you move on

Which two facts does a Persian verb ask you to store? (The infinitive and its present stem.) What is the pair for "to go"? (Raftan, rav.) Could rav- have been worked out from raftan? (No — which is why it is learned with the word.)
Source: Wiktionary: رفتن.

6.3 آمدن — "to come," and an alef that wears a hat

Say the pair for "to go" as one item. Now expect the same two-part shape from every verb that follows, including this one, which travels in the opposite direction.

You'll want to know first — one verb and one new shape

آمدن — âmadan — to come

The last three letters are old friends: م m, د d, ن n, and the -dan ending tells you at once that this is an infinitive. The first shape is new. آ is plain ا with a small wavy stroke over it, called madde, and it is what Persian writes when a word opens on long â. Plain ا at the start of a word carries a short vowel — that is the ا in اسم esm. The hat is the difference between esm and âmadan.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

âmadan was built from a prefix â-, "toward," and the very old verb root gwem-, "to go, to come." In Old Iranian that gave a form like â-gmata-, "come toward"; the g wore away, the m survived, and Middle Persian âmad is what was left.
That root is one of the family's great travellers. English kept it almost bare as come. Latin turned it into venīre, which English then borrowed back dozens of times over: advent, adventure, convene, convenient, event, invent, avenue, revenue, prevent, souvenir. Sanskrit has gacchati, "goes." So âmadan and come are not lookalikes; they are the same word, four thousand years apart.

The present stem is آ â — a single letter — heard as ây- before an ending: mi-âyam "I come." Store the pair as âmadan, â-. It comes from a different ancient root than the infinitive does, which is exactly why the two look nothing alike.

Your turn

- Say it: âmadan — to come
- Say it: the pair as one item — âmadan, â-
- Read it: آمدن, starting at the hatted alef
- Connect: âmadan ← gwem-* → English come, advent, event
- Contrast: raftan, rav- going out; âmadan, â- coming in

Before you move on

What does the little hat on آ tell you? (The word opens on long â.) Which everyday English verb shares âmadan's root? (Come.) And what is the pair for "to come"? (Âmadan, â-.)
Source: Wiktionary: آمدن.

6.4 گفتن — "to say," written with a letter Arabic does not have

Say the pair for "to come." Then hold the shape in mind: a name, and a present stem that has to be learned beside it. Here is a third verb built the same way.

You'll want to know first — one verb and one new letter

گفتن — goftan — to say, to tell

Read it: the word from the right

The last three, ف f, ت t, ن n, close the word with the familiar -tan. The opening shape is گ g, called gâf: a long slanting stroke with a second slanting stroke laid above it.

Arabic has no g, so Persian made one. Persian adds four letters to the inherited Arabic set, for p, ch, zh, and g (گ), and you have already met one of them, the ch of chist. Each is an Arabic letter with extra strokes: گ is the k shape wearing a second bar.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The present stem is gu: گ then the letter vâv, no join between them. Mi-guyam is "I say." Store the pair as goftan, gu-.

Now the part that makes the pair unforgettable. Persian has an ordinary, everyday word for "conversation": goftogu. Pull it apart and it is the past stem گفت goft, a linking -o- meaning "and," and the present stem gu. A conversation is literally said-and-say. The two halves of the verb, sitting next to each other in a noun you can hear on any Iranian news broadcast.

The verb is old. Old Persian, the language of Darius's cliff inscriptions, already had the root gaub-, "to say, to call oneself." Outside the Iranian branch its relatives are not securely established, so no English cousin is claimed here — and English gab and gossip, which look tempting, come from somewhere else entirely.

Your turn

- Say it: goftan — to say
- Say it: the pair as one item — goftan, gu-
- Read it: گ, then گفتن, and say the stem gu
- Build: goft + -o- + gu → goftogu, conversation
- Retrieve: the pair for "to come" — âmadan, â-

Before you move on

Which letter opens گفتن, and why is it not in Arabic? (گ gâf; Arabic has no g sound.) What two pieces of the verb hide inside goftogu? (The past stem goft and the present stem gu.) Say the pair. (Goftan, gu-.)

Source: Wiktionary: گفتن.

6.5 دانستن — "to know," and five pairs held together

Name the ending that marks a Persian infinitive. The last verb of the chapter wears it, and every letter in the word is one you can already read.

You'll want to know first — one verb and its stem

دانستن — dânestan — to know

From the right: د d, ا long â, ن n, س s, ت t, ن n. Nothing new to decode, which is a good place to be six lessons into a script.

The present stem is دان dân: mi-dânam, "I know." The pair is dânestan, dân- — and this stem is one you can watch working. dânesh is "knowledge"; add gâh, "place," and you get dâneshgâh, university — a knowledge-place, built straight off the stem.

dânestan belongs to the Indo-European root gnō-*, "to know."
English inherited it three times over: know, and also can (originally "to know how"), ken, cunning, and uncouth, which is literally "un-known." Latin's nōscere sent English notice, notion, note, recognise, cognition, and noble — a noble person being a known one. Greek gnōsis gives diagnosis, prognosis, agnostic. Sanskrit has jânâti, "knows."
One honest footnote: specialists still argue about how this root arrived in Persian wearing a d, when its Iranian relatives usually show a z or zh. The membership in the family is standard; the road it took is disputed, and this book flags that rather than smoothing it over.
Persian's other "know" is shenâkhtan, used for knowing a person rather than a fact. Its stem shenâs- shows the same root more plainly — it is the gnos- of gnosis, wearing Iranian clothes.
And budan has a present stem too: bâsh-. It waits for the chapter where the present tense arrives.

Your turn

- Say it: dânestan, dân- — to know
- Say it: raftan, rav- — to go
- Say it: âmadan, â- — to come
- Say it: goftan, gu- — to say
- Say it: budan — to be
- Build: dân → dânesh → dâneshgâh, university
- Connect: dânestan ← gnō-* → English know, can, diagnosis

Before you move on

Which two things does a Persian verb ask you to store? (Its name in -tan or -dan, and its present stem.) Which English words share dânestan's root? (Know, can, and the gnosis family.) Now run all five pairs once, out loud, without the page.

Chapter 7

Four Verbs of the Mind

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say think, understand, read and write in Persian, give the present stem of each, and tell which of the three ways a Persian verb is built each one uses.
> The chapter closes on neveshtan, nevis-, then runs its four verbs back to back — fekr kardan with kon-, fahmidan with fahm-, khândan with khân-, neveshtan with nevis- — and names which is a compound, which hands its stem over free, and which two had to be told. The five pairs from Chapter 6 run after them, so all nine are produced from memory in one sitting.

7.1 فکر کردن — "to think," written as two words

Name the two facts every Persian verb has asked you to store. This one brings a third shape: it is spelled as two words, and only the second is the verb.

You'll want to know first — one verb in two pieces

فکر کردن — fekr kardan — to think

The first word, فکر fekr, is a noun: "thought." From the right — ف f, ک k, ر r.

The second, کردن kardan, is the verb, and it means to do, to make. Its ending is the -dan you have collected since budan. Word for word, the phrase is thought to-do.

Grammar Lens: Persian asks less of you than you fear

Persian has no grammatical gender, so nothing has to agree. It has no noun cases: a noun keeps one shape everywhere. Its adjectives never change. And it has exactly one set of personal endings — -am, -i, -ad, -im, -id, -and — taken by every verb in the language.
What it asks instead is the present stem, and this: many of its commonest verbs are two words. A noun sits in front, and a plain verb behind it does the grammatical work. کردن kardan is the workhorse — put almost any noun in front of it and you have a verb.
You met the same instinct in khoshvaghtam, which welded khosh, "good," to vaqt, "time."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The halves come from opposite ends of Persian's history.
فکر fekr is a loan from Arabic fikr, "thought," on the root f-k-r, and it takes Persian grammar completely.
کردن kardan is as Persian as a word gets: Old Persian kar-, "to do," from the Indo-European root $*k^{w}er$-, "to make." That root gave Sanskrit karoti, "he does," and karman, "deed" — which English borrowed outright as karma. English has no inherited cousin here, so that is a borrowing, not a family resemblance, and this book says which is which.
The present stem is کن kon: mi-konam, "I do." Store kardan, kon-, and note the opening ک kâf — the shape gâf is built from, as goftan wears it with a second bar.

Your turn

- Say it: fekr kardan — to think
- Split: fekr, thought — kardan, to do
- Say it: the pair as one item — kardan, kon-
- Read it: ک in کردن, then gâf in goftan — one bar apart
- Retrieve: the two words welded inside khoshvaghtam
- Name: the ending that marks kardan as an infinitive

Before you move on

Which half of fekr kardan is the verb, and what is its present stem? (Kardan; kon-.) Name two of the four things Persian does without. (Gender, cases, adjective agreement, a second set of endings.)
Source: Wiktionary: کردن.

7.2 فهمیدن — "to understand," and the class that gives its stem away

Say the two words meaning "to think," and which of them is the verb. Then say the pair for "to know." This lesson adds the verb that sits between them.

You'll want to know first — one verb, one word this time

فهمیدن — fahmidan — to understand

One word, not two. From the right: ف f, ه h, م m, ی long i, د d, ن n. The ی is the letter you first read inside chist.

Persian keeps dânestan and فهمیدن fahmidan apart the way English keeps know and understand apart. Dânestan stores a fact; fahmidan grasps a point.

Grammar Lens: the one stem you never have to be told

Every verb so far handed you an unpredictable stem: raftan gave rav-, goftan gave gu-. Here is the relief.
When a Persian infinitive ends in -یدن -idan, its present stem is what is left once you take the -idan off. Nothing shifts. فهمیدن fahmidan minus -idan leaves فهم fahm: mi-fahmam, "I understand." The pair is fahmidan, fahm-, and you could have worked it out yourself.
This is no small exception. -idan is the suffix Persian reaches for whenever it needs a new verb, so the predictable class is large and growing. The verbs that fight you are the old inherited ones.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

فهم fahm is Arabic, "understanding," from the root f-h-m. Persian took the noun and did something Arabic would not: it glued a native Persian suffix onto it and made a verb.
You have now watched Arabic words arrive three ways. vaqt, inside khoshvaghtam, came as a noun and stayed one. hâl came as a noun and took Persian's own linking grammar. hâfez came as a participle and became a name. And فهم fahm was turned into a Persian verb outright. Against all of them stands khub, inherited Persian from the start, borrowed from nobody. Persian vocabulary is layered, and neither layer is less Persian than the other today.

Your turn

- Say it: fahmidan — to understand
- Derive: strip -idan from fahmidan → the stem fahm-
- Contrast: dânestan stores a fact; fahmidan grasps a point
- Retrieve: the pair for "to know" — dânestan, dân-
- Name: three Arabic arrivals — vaqt, hâl, hâfez — and one inherited word, khub
- Read it: the ی inside فهمیدن, the letter you first met in chist

Before you move on

How do you get the present stem of any -idan verb? (Take the -idan off.) Which of Persian's layers did fahm arrive from, and which layer does khub belong to? (Fahm is Arabic; khub is inherited Persian.)
Source: Wiktionary: فهمیدن.

7.3 خواندن — "to read," and a letter that is written but not said

Say the pair for "to understand," and how you got its stem without being told. This verb is not so obliging — and its spelling hides something.

You'll want to know first — one verb with a silent letter

خواندن — khândan — to read

From the right: خ kh, و, ا long â, ن n, د d, ن n. Six letters — but only five sounds. The و in second position is written and not pronounced. The word is khândan, never khwândan.

That خ opens khub, "good," where the و works as a vowel. Here it does nothing.

The silent و belongs to a small, closed set of words — always after خ, before ا. Not a rule to apply, just words you recognize.

Grammar Lens: one verb, four English verbs

The present stem is خوان khân — same silent و, so khân-. Mi-khânam, "I read." The pair is khândan, khân-.
Now the surprise. خواندن also means to recite, to sing and to study. English splits those jobs across separate words; Persian does not, and the reason is in the word's history.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

khândan is from Proto-Iranian hwanH-, "to call," from the Indo-European root swenh₂-, "to sound." The four meanings become one idea: reading, reciting and singing all make a text sound. For most of history, reading was reading aloud.
Latin took the root as sonus, which English borrowed over and over: sound, sonic, resonate, consonant, sonata. Sanskrit has svanati, "it sounds." And English inherited one word directly, without Latin's help — swan, most likely "the sounding one."
The silent و is a fossil of this: the Iranian root began hw-, and Persian spelled the cluster long after it stopped saying it. خدا khodâ comes from the same xw- family, continuing Middle Persian xwadây — gone from both mouths, surviving in one spelling.
One contrast to fix: the long â here is plain ا because it sits inside the word. When a word opens on long â, Persian puts a hat on the alef, as âmadan does.

Your turn

- Say it: khândan — to read

- Say it: the pair as one item — khândan, khân-
- Read it: خواندن, sounding the خ and skipping the و
- List: the four jobs of one verb — read, recite, sing, study
- Connect: khândan ← swenh₂-* → English sound, swan
- Contrast: ا inside a word, the hatted alef when a word opens on long â

Before you move on

How many letters does خواندن have, and how many sounds? (Six and five.) Which four English verbs does it cover, and why those four together? (Read, recite, sing, study — its root means to sound.) Source: Wiktionary: خواندن.

7.4 نوشتن — "to write," and four verbs of the mind held together

Say the pair for "to read," and name the letter in it that is written but never said. Its natural partner closes this chapter.

You'll want to know first — one verb and its stem

نوشتن — neveshtan — to write

From the right: ن n, و v, ش sh, ت t, ن n. Here the و is pronounced — a plain consonant v — the exact contrast the last lesson set up.

The present stem is nevis: mi-nevisam, "I write." The pair is neveshtan, nevis-, as unpredictable as raftan, rav- was. Name the price plainly: the stem of an inherited verb cannot be worked out, so it is learned in the same breath as the infinitive.

Watch the stem earn its keep: nevis- plus -ande gives nevisande, "writer." The stem, not the infinitive, is what Persian builds on.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

neveshtan is an Old Persian compound: ni-, "down," plus the root paiš-*, "to adorn, to mark, to paint." To write was to paint something down — a verb Darius had carved into a cliff at Behistun.

The root is Indo-European peyḱ-*, "to cut, to mark, to paint." Latin made it pingere, and English has borrowed from that ever since: paint, picture, pigment, depict. So neveshtan and picture are one root, one branch writing, the other painting.
Trace the p if you like a puzzle: it softened to b in Middle Persian nibištan, then to the v in nevis-.

Grammar Lens: what this chapter has actually given you

Four verbs, three ways a Persian verb can be built.
fekr kardan is a compound: noun plus kardan. fahmidan is a -idan verb, stem free. khândan and نوشتن neveshtan are inherited verbs, stems you must be told.
Three shapes, one set of personal endings for all of them — the whole verb system in outline.

Your turn

Run the chapter's four, then the five that came before, without the page.

- Say it: fekr kardan — to think; kardan, kon-
- Say it: fahmidan, fahm- — to understand
- Say it: khândan, khân- — to read
- Say it: neveshtan, nevis- — to write
- Say it: budan — to be; raftan, rav-; âmadan, â-; goftan, gu-; dânestan, dân-
- Build: nevis + -ande → nevisande, writer
- Connect: neveshtan ← peyḱ-* → English paint, picture
- Name: the English cousins of budan and dânestan — be and know

Before you move on

Which of this chapter's four verbs is a compound, and which one hands you its stem for free? (Fekr kardan; fahmidan.) What did neveshtan originally mean? (To paint down.) Now say all nine pairs you hold, in any order.

Chapter 8

Taking, Asking, Helping, Loving

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say take, ask, help and love in Persian, give the present stem where a verb has one, and sort all thirteen verbs I hold into compounds, -idan verbs and inherited verbs.
> The chapter closes on dust dâshtan — to have as friend — and its dâr- stem, then runs all thirteen verbs the track has taught: this chapter's four, Chapter 7's four, and Chapter 6's five, each with its stem, sorted into the three shapes a Persian verb can take.

8.1 گرفتن — "to take," and a cousin you can hear

Say the pair for "to write." Then get ready for a Persian verb whose English relative you will recognize the moment you hear it.

گرفتن — gereftan — to take

From the right: گ g, ر r, ف f, ت t, ن n. The opening shape is گ gâf, the letter Persian added because Arabic has no g — the same one that opens گفتن goftan. Neither گ nor ر joins leftward, so the word arrives in three small pieces and closes on the familiar -tan.

The present stem is gir: mi-giram, "I take." The pair is gereftan, gir- — inherited, and so unpredictable, exactly as promised.

Persian uses it widely: to take, to get, to catch, to hold, to seize. It is a hand closing around something.

gereftan continues Middle Persian griftan, from Old Persian grab-, "to seize," from the Indo-European root $*g^h rebh_2$-, "to grab, to seize."
Say gir- and grip one after the other. Say gereftan and grab. That is not a coincidence and it is not a loan in either direction — English and Persian both inherited the word from a common ancestor, and four thousand years later the consonants g-r-b are still sitting in both. English kept grab, grip, grasp, grope and gripe; German kept greifen; Sanskrit has gṛhṇāti, "he seizes"; Russian has grabit', "to rob." Collect the evidence you already hold. budan is English be. to is English thou — the old familiar you, which English has nearly retired and Persian uses daily. Persian is not a distant relative of English in an unfamiliar script; it is a cousin.
Persian has repaid the family too. English bazaar, caravan, khaki, pyjama, lemon, spinach and paradise all came from Persian — the last of them from Old Persian paridaida, "a walled garden."

Your turn

- Say it: gereftan — to take
- Say it: the pair as one item — gereftan, gir-
- Read it: گ opening گرفتن, then گ opening گفتن
- Connect: gir- → English grip; gereftan → English grab
- Retrieve: two cousins you already hold — budan is be, to is thou
- Name: three English words Persian gave away — bazaar, khaki, paradise

Before you move on

Which English verbs are gereftan's own relatives? (Grab, grip, grasp.) Did English borrow it from Persian? (No — both inherited it.) Say the pair once more. (Gereftan, gir-.)
Source: Wiktionary: گرفتن.

8.2 پرسیدن — "to ask," and the questions you could already ask

Say the pair for "to take." Then put the respectful name question you have had since Chapter 3. You have been asking without owning the verb.

You'll want to know first — one verb that behaves

پرسیدن — porsidan — to ask

From the right: پ p, ر r, س s, ی long i, د d, ن n. The opening پ pe is another letter Persian added — a b shape with three dots beneath instead of one.

Now the ending: -یدن -idan. Strip it, and the present stem remains: پرس pors. Mi-porsam, "I ask." The pair is porsidan, pors- — the same free ride fahmidan gave you.

Grammar Lens: asking a question and asking a person

Two chapters ago you learned to put a question — esm-e shomâ chist?, hâl-e shomâ chetor ast? Both work by word order and a question word, with no verb meaning "ask" in them.
That is the ordinary case, as in English: you do not say "I ask you what your name is," you just ask it. پرسیدن is for talking about the asking.
The noun from the same stem is porsesh, "a question": stem plus -esh, the machine that turned دان dân- into dânesh, "knowledge."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

porsidan continues Middle Persian pursīdan, from Old Persian pars- — a word Darius used on stone — and beyond that the Indo-European root preḱ-*, "to ask." Sanskrit has pṛcchati; German still says fragen. English is the interesting case. It had this root and lost it: Old English friġnan, "to ask," died out. Then English borrowed the root back from Latin, which had turned it into precārī, "to pray." So English says pray, prayer, precarious — "held by prayer," and so uncertain — and deprecate. A root the language once owned now survives only as loans.

Your turn

- Say it: porsidan — to ask
- Derive: strip -idan → the stem pors-
- Pair: porsidan, pors- beside fahmidan, fahm- — both free
- Contrast: gereftan, gir- had to be told; these two did not
- Build: pors + -esh → porsesh, a question
- Connect: porsidan ← prek̑-* → English pray, precarious

Before you move on

Which two verbs so far gave you their stems for free, and what do they have in common? (Fahmidan and porsidan — both end in -idan.) Why does English say pray rather than an inherited word here? (It lost its own and borrowed the root back from Latin.) Source: Wiktionary: پرسیدن.

8.3 کردن کمک — "to help," and the machine on its second run

Say the pair for "to ask." Then the two words meaning "to think," and which half of them is the verb. That half is about to do the same job twice over.

You'll want to know first — one verb in two pieces, once more

کردن کمک — komak kardan — to help

Two words, and you already know the second one. کمک komak is a noun, "help, assistance." From the right: ک k, م m, ک k — the same kâf twice, once joined and once standing free at the word's end.

Behind it sits کردن kardan, doing exactly what it did in fekr kardan. Noun in front, kardan behind, and the pair is a verb. Its present stem is still کن kon-: komak mi-konam, "I help."

This is the point of the pattern. You are not learning a second verb; you are learning a second noun and dropping it into a slot you already own.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کمک komak is neither inherited Persian nor Arabic. It came from Turkic — Azerbaijani kömək, "help," from Proto-Turkic kömek*. Turkic and Persian have been neighbours for a thousand years, and words crossed both ways.
So everyday Persian vocabulary holds three layers, and you have a word from each. khub, "good," is inherited Iranian. vaqt, "time," inside khoshvaghtam, is Arabic. کمک komak is Turkic. All three are ordinary Persian words today, and none is more Persian than the others.
The verb half is the oldest thing here: کردن kardan on the Indo-European root $*k^{w}er$-, "to make." A Turkic noun and an Indo-European verb in one phrase — Persian's history in three syllables.
One script note: the ک kâf opening komak is the shape gâf is built from, one bar apart.

Your turn

- Say it: komak kardan — to help
- Split: komak, help — kardan, to do
- Match: fekr kardan and komak kardan — one machine, two nouns
- Say it: the stem still in place — kardan, kon-
- Sort: khub inherited, vaqt Arabic, komak Turkic
- Retrieve: the two words welded inside khoshvaghtam
- Read it: ک in کمک, then the gâf shape — one bar apart

Before you move on

Which half of komak kardan did you already know? (Kardan.)
Which of Persian's three vocabulary layers did komak come from? (Turkic.) Name a word from each of the other two. (Khub, inherited; vaqt, Arabic.)
Source: Wiktionary: کمک.

8.4 داشتن دوست — "to love," which Persian says as "to have as friend"

Say the two words meaning "to help," and the pair for "to ask." This last verb is a compound too — but not with kardan.

You'll want to know first — one verb in two pieces, a new second half

داشتن دوست — dust dâshtan — to like, to love

داشتن dâshtan is the verb, to have, to hold. Its present stem is dâr: the pair is dâshtan, dâr-.

So dust dâshtan is, word for word, to have as friend. Dust dâram is "I love" — literally "I hold [it] a friend," built out of friendship rather than passion.

Notice what changed. kardan made a noun into a doing. داشتن dâshtan makes it a holding. Two light verbs, one pattern.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Both halves are old, and both have English relatives.
دوست dust goes back through Old Persian dauštā to the Indo-European root ǵews-*, "to taste, to choose." A friend is the one chosen. English inherited it directly as choose; Latin took it as gustus, "taste," giving English gusto and disgust.
داشتن dâshtan continues Old Persian dāraya-, "to hold," from $*d^h er$-.
English has no inherited cousin here, but the root fills its borrowings: Latin firmus, "held fast," gave firm; Greek thronos gave throne; Sanskrit built dharma, "that which holds the world together."
So Persian builds "I love you" from choose and hold.

Grammar Lens: what the two chapters add up to Thirteen verbs now, and every one fits one of three shapes.

Compounds — fekr kardan, komak kardan, dust dâshtan: noun plus light verb. -idan verbs — fahmidan, porsidan: stem free. Inherited verbs — budan, raftan, âmadan, goftan, dânestan, khândan, neveshtan, gereftan: stem told, never guessed.
Behind all three: one infinitive ending; one set of personal endings; no gender, no cases, no agreement. The hard part of Persian is a list of stems.

Your turn

All thirteen, from memory.

- Say it: gereftan, gir-; porsidan, pors-; komak kardan; dust dâshtan, dâr-
- Say it: fekr kardan, kon-; fahmidan, fahm-; khândan, khân-; neveshtan, nevis-
- Say it: budan; raftan, rav-; âmadan, â-; goftan, gu-; dânestan, dân-
- Split: dust, friend — dâshtan, to hold
- Sort: which three are compounds, which two are -idan, which eight are inherited
- Connect: dust ← ǵews-* → English choose; gereftan → grab; neveshtan → paint

Before you move on

What does dust dâshtan say word for word? (To have as friend.) Which light verb makes a doing, and which makes a holding? (Kardan; dâshtan.) Now name all thirteen, with a stem for each that has one.

Chapter 9

Please: Water, Bread, Tea, Key

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can politely ask for water, bread, tea, or my key in Persian, and I can name the four vocabulary layers those four words come from.
> The chapter closes on kelid, a Greek loan, then runs all four requests back to back — âb, nân, chây, kelid, each with lotfan — and reuses the ezafe from Chapter 2 to ask for kelid-e man, my key.

9.1 آب — water, and Persian's first "please"

The last chapter closed on dâshtan, "to have," stem dâr. This chapter names what to ask for when you do not have it yet.

You'll want to know first — one word

آب — âb — water

Two letters, both already yours: آ, alef with madde, from âmadan; then ب b.

Grammar Lens: your first Persian "please" âb, lotfan. — Water, please.

Name the thing you want, add lotfan, and the request is complete — no verb required. lotfan ends in a small doubled stroke above its alef, called tanvin: an Arabic grammatical ending, pronounced -an, that survives in Persian only inside a short list of frozen Arabic adverbs borrowed whole — lotfan and taghriban, "approximately," are two of them — and plays no part in ordinary Persian spelling. This is the first request this track has built.

آب continues Old Persian āp-, from Indo-European *h_2ep-, "water" — the root Sanskrit kept as áp-, still visible today inside a place-name: Punjab is usually explained as this same word, panj âb, "five waters," naming the region's five rivers.
Hindi and Marathi's everyday word for water, pānī, is not this word at all. Sanskrit holds a second, unrelated root for water too — pā-, "to drink," from *peh_3-, the root hiding inside English potion and poison — and it is that second root modern Hindi and Marathi kept for everyday use. آب and pānī are not cousins; they are two different ancient words for the same thing, and Persian happened to keep the older one.

Your turn

- Say it: âb — water
- Say it: âb, lotfan. — water, please
- Connect: âb ← *h_2ep- → Sanskrit áp-, and the -âb inside Punjab
- Contrast: âb against Hindi's pānī — two different old words, not cousins
- Retrieve: dâshtan, dâr- — "to have," from the chapter just closed

Before you move on

Ask for water politely. (Âb, lotfan.) What is the small doubled stroke at the end of lotfan called, and where else does Persian use it? (Tanvin; only inside a few frozen Arabic adverbs.) Is Persian آب related to Hindi's pānī? (No — two separate old words.)
Source: Wiktionary: آب; Wiktionary: lotfan.

9.2 نان — bread, and a root this track cannot trace

Say âb, lotfan. This chapter's second request names the other thing on every Persian table.

You'll want to know first — one word

نان — nân — bread

nân, lotfan. — Bread, please.

Three letters, all already yours: ن ا ن — n, long â, n again.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

نان continues Middle Persian nān, and there this word's trail runs cold: no secure root beyond that form is agreed, and no English cousin can honestly be claimed. Not every word in this book gets a family tree, and this one is named plainly rather than forced into one.
The word travelled anyway, just not by inheritance. Persian نان passed into Hindi-Urdu as nān, and from there into English as naan — the bread on a restaurant menu is this exact word, arriving by borrowing three languages after Persian, not by any shared ancestor.

Your turn

- Say it: nân — bread
- Say it: nân, lotfan. — bread, please
- Name: the one fact this word's history gives you — Middle Persian nān, root beyond that unknown
- Trace it: nân → Hindi-Urdu nān → English naan — a borrowing, not a cousin
- Run through: âb, lotfan — nân, lotfan — two requests back to back

Before you move on

What does نان mean? (Bread.) Does it have a secure Indo-European cousin? (No — the trail runs cold at Middle Persian nān.) Which English word is this same word, borrowed rather than inherited? (Naan, via Hindi-Urdu.)
Source: Wiktionary: نان.

9.3 چای — tea, and the road that gave everyone but Europe the same word

Say nân, lotfan. Here is the drink that usually comes with it.

You'll want to know first — one word

چای — chây — tea

chây, lotfan. — Tea, please.

Three letters, all already yours: چ ch, from chist; long ا â; ی as a closing glide.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چای is not an inherited Persian word at all — it is a loan, and a comparatively recent one. It comes from Northern Chinese chá, carried overland through Central Asia into Persian, the same road Russian chai and Turkish çay travelled.
The word did not stop at Persian. چای itself passed onward into Urdu as chāy, the same three-step road: Chinese into Persian into Urdu. Tea that instead reached Europe by sea carried a different, southern-Chinese form, which is why English says tea and French says thé rather than chai: one drink, two words, sorted by whether it travelled by land or by water.

Your turn

- Say it: chây — tea
- Say it: chây, lotfan. — tea, please

- Name: the road — Chinese chá → Persian chây → Urdu chāy
- Contrast: chây, which travelled by land, against tea, which travelled by sea
- Run through: âb, lotfan — nân, lotfan — chây, lotfan

Before you move on

Which language gave Persian چای? (Chinese, overland.) Which language borrowed this exact Persian word onward? (Urdu, as chāy.) Why does English say tea instead? (It arrived by sea, carrying a different Chinese form.)
Source: Wiktionary: چای.

9.4 کلید — key, a Greek word Persian has held for two thousand years

Say chây, lotfan. Then recall the small linking -e the first sentence taught inside esm-e man — you will need it again in a moment.

You'll want to know first — one word

کلید — kelid — key

Four letters, all already yours: ک k, from کمک; ل l; ی long i; د d.

Grammar Lens: a possessive request, built from an old part kelid-e man, lotfan. — My key, please.

No new grammar here — this reuses the ezafe -e exactly as esm-e man did, now linking a household word to its owner instead of a name. A request can carry an owner the same way a name did.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کلید is not inherited Persian at all — it is a loan from Greek kleidíon, "little key," one of a handful of Greek words that entered Persian in the Hellenistic centuries after Alexander's conquest, when Greek-speaking rulers governed Iranian land for generations. The parent word, kleís, shares its Indo-European root with Latin claudere, "to close" — the root behind English close, conclude, and exclude. This chapter's four words now stand for all three of Persian's vocabulary layers: inherited âb, an untraceable nân, an overland Chinese loan in chây, and a Greek loan in کلید.

Your turn

- Say it: kelid — key; then kelid-e man, lotfan — my key, please
- Connect: kelid ← Greek kleidíon; the same old root in Latin claudere → English close, conclude, exclude
- Run through: âb, nân, chây, kelid — each with , lotfan
- Sort: which of the four is inherited, which is untraceable, which travelled by land, which came from Greek
- Retrieve: the ezafe -e from esm-e man, now on kelid-e man

Before you move on

Which language did Persian borrow کلید from, and when? (Greek, after Alexander.) Say "my key, please." (Kelid-e man, lotfan.) Name all four polite requests this chapter built. (Âb, nân, chây, kelid, each with lotfan.)
Source: Wiktionary: کلید.

Chapter 10

Mother, Father, Brother, Daughter

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my mother, father, brother, and daughter in Persian, the four secure English cousins Chapter 6 named without teaching.
> The chapter closes on dokhtar, daughter, then runs all four family words back to back and reuses the ezafe from esm-e man ast and kelid-e man to say dokhtar-e man, my daughter.

10.1 مادر — mother, a word this track already promised you

The budan lesson traced it back to English be, and in passing named four plainest inherited cousins the track had not yet taught as their own lessons: مادر, pedar, barâdar, dokhtar. This chapter and the next finally give each one its own lesson, starting here.

You'll want to know first — one word

مادر — mâdar — mother

Four letters, all already yours: م ا د ر — m, long â, d, r.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

مادر continues Middle Persian mādar, from Indo-European *$méh_2tēr$ — the same root English wore down to mother, German to Mutter, Latin to māter (giving English maternal), and Sanskrit to mātṛ. Few words in any language family stay this recognisable after four thousand years; a mother is called almost the same thing across most of Eurasia because small children the world over reach for the same easy sounds.

Your turn

- Say it: mâdar — mother
- Connect: mâdar ← *$méh_2tēr$ → English mother, Latin māter, Sanskrit mātṛ
- Retrieve: kelid-e man, lotfan — my key, please
- Name: which four family words the budan lesson promised, and which one this lesson delivers

Before you move on

What does مادر mean? (Mother.) Which lesson first named it as an English cousin, without teaching it as its own word? (The budan lesson, in passing.) Which three family words does the track still owe you? (pedar, barâdar, dokhtar.)
Source: Wiktionary: مادر.

10.2 پدر — father, mâdar's oldest partner

Say مادر, and its English cousin. This lesson's word has kept the same partnership for four thousand years.

You'll want to know first — one word

پدر — pedar — father

Three letters, all already yours: پ p, from porsidan; د d; ر r.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پدر continues Middle Persian pidar, from Indo-European *$ph_2tḗr$ — the direct cousin of English father, German Vater, and Latin pater (giving English paternal, patriot). مادر and پدر are not just similar in meaning; they are built the same way, both old Indo-European kinship words carrying a shared -ar/-tar ending that once meant something close to "the one who [does the kin role]."

Your turn

- Say it: pedar — father
- Connect: pedar ← *$ph_2tḗr$ → English father, Latin pater
- Pair: mâdar — pedar, both carrying the same old kinship ending
- Run through: mâdar, pedar — mother, father

Before you move on

What does پدر mean? (Father.) Which English word is it the direct cousin of? (Father, via pater.) What ending do مادر and پدر share? (An old kinship ending, -ar/-tar.)
Source: Wiktionary: پدر.

10.3 برادر — brother, the cousin that never drifted

Say مادر and pedar. One family word from the budan lesson's list is still owed to you, and it is the sibling one.

You'll want to know first — one word

برادر — barâdar — brother

Five letters, all already yours: ب ا ر د ر — b, r, long â, d, r again. Notice ر opens and closes the word.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

برادر continues Middle Persian brād(ar), from Indo-European *$b^h réh_2tēr$ — the direct cousin of English brother, German Bruder, and Latin frāter (giving English fraternal). Unlike some kinship cousins, whose meanings narrow or shift as they travel, brother has meant exactly the same thing in every branch that kept it, for as long as anyone can trace it: this is as clean an inheritance as the family survives with.

Your turn

- Say it: barâdar — brother
- Connect: barâdar ← $*b^h réh_2 tēr$ → English brother, Latin frāter
- Run through: mâdar, pedar, barâdar — mother, father, brother
- Name: the one word the budan lesson still owes you

Before you move on

What does برادر mean? (Brother.) Which English word is it the direct cousin of? (Brother.) Which family word from the budan lesson's list is still owed? (dokhtar, daughter.)
Source: Wiktionary: برادر.

10.4 دختر — daughter, and the family the budan lesson promised is complete

Say barâdar. Say it: esm-e man … ast once more — the very first sentence this track ever built, and the pattern this lesson reuses to close a family

You'll want to know first — one word

دختر — dokhtar — daughter

Four letters, all already yours: د خ ت ر — d, kh, t, r.

Grammar Lens: naming a family member as your own

dokhtar-e man — my daughter

The same ezafe -e from esm-e man and kelid-e man links a family word to its owner exactly the way it linked a name and a request. One grammar habit, three completely different kinds of noun.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دختر continues Middle Persian duxtar, from Indo-European $*d^h ugh_2 t\acute{e}r$ — the direct cousin of English daughter and German Tochter. An earlier lesson named four inherited family cousins in passing — مادر, pedar, barâdar, دختر — while it was really teaching budan. This chapter and the last have now taught all four as full lessons: a promise made early, kept three chapters later.

Your turn

- Say it: dokhtar — daughter; then dokhtar-e man — my daughter
- Connect: dokhtar ← $*d^h ugh_2 t\bar{e}r$ → English daughter
- Run through: mâdar, pedar, barâdar, dokhtar — all four, from memory
- Retrieve: esm-e man … ast, the first sentence this track built, and its ezafe
- Name: which of the four family words is the odd one out in sound — دختر's kh, where the other three have none

Before you move on

Name all four family words this chapter and the last have taught, in order. (Mâdar, pedar, barâdar, dokhtar.) Say "my daughter." (Dokhtar-e man.) Which earlier sentence used the same ezafe? (esm-e man … ast, the very first sentence this track built.)
Source: Wiktionary: دختر.

Chapter 11

Eye, Hand, Foot, Tongue

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my eye, hand, foot, and tongue in Persian, and I can say zabân for both tongue and language — the word for the thing this whole track teaches.
> The chapter and the tranche close on zabân, tongue and language together, then run a short scene built from every chapter so far: the name exchange, the wellbeing question, this chapter's own requests and family and body words, and khodâhâfez to close.

11.1 چشم — eye, and what "how are you" was really pointing at

Say dokhtar. Say it: hâl-e shomâ chetor ast? once more

An earlier lesson asked about your hâl, your state, but never once named the parts of you that state belongs to. This chapter does.

You'll want to know first — one word

چشم — cheshm — eye

Three letters, all already yours: چ ch, from chist; ش sh, from شما; م m.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چشم continues Middle Persian čašm, and Old Persian had čašman-, "eye" (EtymDB). EtymDB takes it back to an Indo-Iranian word for the eye; its cousin is Sanskrit cakṣus, "eye," from a verb meaning "to see." English eye comes from a different root, and so do spy and spectacle: no English cousin is claimed here.

Your turn

- Say it: cheshm — eye
- Connect: cheshm ← Middle Persian čašm ← Old Persian čašman-
- Retrieve: hâl-e shomâ chetor ast? — the question this chapter's body words could actually answer
- Run through: mâdar, pedar, barâdar, dokhtar, cheshm — five family and body words in one breath

Before you move on

What does چشم mean? (Eye.) Which Middle Persian word does it continue? (Čašm.) Which earlier question could a body-part chapter actually answer? (Hâl-e shomâ chetor ast?)

11.2 دست — hand, and a sound law that hides a cousin in plain sight

Say cheshm. This lesson's word looks nothing like its closest Indo-Iranian relative — and that mismatch is not an accident.

You'll want to know first — one word

دست — dast — hand

Three letters, all already yours: د س ت — d, s, t.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دست continues Old Persian dastā-, from Indo-European *$\acute{g}^h$es-to-, "hand." Sanskrit's word for hand, hasta, is the very same root — and so, further out, is Greek kheír, which English kept indirectly in surgery (literally "hand-work") and chiropractic ("done by hand"). Old Persian's d, Avestan's z, and Sanskrit's h look like three unrelated sounds, but they are the completely regular Indo-Iranian outcome of the same ancestral sound in each of the three branches — the kind of correspondence a false cousin never has, and a real one always does.

Your turn

- Say it: dast — hand
- Connect: dast ← *$\acute{g}^h$es-to- → Sanskrit hasta, Greek kheír → English surgery, chiropractic
- Contrast: Persian d, Avestan z, Sanskrit h — three sounds, one regular law
- Run through: cheshm, dast — eye, hand

Before you move on

What does دست mean? (Hand.) Which Sanskrit word is its direct cousin? (hasta.) Which two English words trace to the same root through Greek kheír? (Surgery, chiropractic.)
Source: Wiktionary: دست.

11.3 پا — foot, the plainest cousin in the whole track

Say cheshm and dast. One more body word closes this chapter, and for once its history needs no caution at all.

You'll want to know first — one word

پا — pâ — foot

Two letters, both already yours: پ p, from pedar; long ا â.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پا continues Old Persian pād-, from Indo-European ped-/pod-, "foot." Unlike dast, this cousin needs no sound-law explanation to see: English foot, Latin pes/pedis (pedal, pedestrian), Greek pous/podos (podiatry, tripod), and Sanskrit pāda all sit close enough to hear the family resemblance directly. Some Indo-European cousins take a page of sound changes to prove; this one barely needs a sentence.

Your turn

- Say it: pâ — foot
- Connect: pâ ← ped-/pod- → English foot, Latin pes, Greek pous, Sanskrit pāda
- Run through: cheshm, dast, pâ — eye, hand, foot
- Name: which of this chapter's three cousins needed a sound law, and which one did not

Before you move on

What does پا mean? (Foot.) Name four language families that keep a recognisable version of this word. (English, Latin, Greek, Sanskrit.) Which earlier body word needed a sound law to prove its cousin? (dast, hand.)
Source: Wiktionary: پا.

11.4 زبان — tongue, and language, and everything this track has built

Say cheshm, dast, pâ — eye, hand, foot. One organ this list has left out names something bigger than itself.

You'll want to know first — one word, one new letter

زبان — zabân — tongue, and also language

Four letters, three of them already yours — ن ا ب — plus one this track has never needed before: ز ze, an ordinary letter from the inherited Arabic set, read simply as English z. ز-ب-ا-ن.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

زبان continues Middle Persian zabān, tracing to the ancient Indo-European word for "tongue." English tongue is the same root, worn down at home. Latin took the same root and, by a well-documented but still debated d-to-l shift, turned it into lingua — the ancestor of English language and linguistics. Persian, like English, never split the organ from the ability: zabân-e fârsi, "the Persian tongue," is simply the Persian language — the same word this whole track has been teaching you to use.

Your turn — everything this track has taught

One short scene, built entirely from independently learned pieces, chapter by chapter:

- Say it: esm-e man ... ast — the very first sentence this track built
- Say it: shomâ against to — the register this track built next
- Say it: hâl-e shomâ chetor ast? — the careful question that followed
- Say it: khubam — the reply that answered it
- Say it: âb, lotfan / kelid-e man, lotfan — this chapter's own requests
- Name: mâdar, pedar, barâdar, dokhtar, cheshm, dast, pâ, zabân — eight new words, three chapters
- Say it: khodâ hâfez, and recall what it leaves unsaid — no verb, just the two halves an earlier lesson joined
- Connect: zabân ← old "tongue" word → English tongue, Latin lingua → language, linguistics

Before you move on

What does زبان mean, in both of its senses? (Tongue, and language.) Which new letter did it need? (ز, ze.) Which two English words trace to the same root by a disputed sound shift? (Tongue directly; language and linguistics through Latin's d-to-l turn.) What is zabân-e fârsi? (The Persian language — the one this whole track teaches.)

Chapter 12

Name, Heart, Door, Book

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say name, heart, door, and book in Persian, and I can tell which of the four is inherited and which is a later Arabic loan.
> The chapter closes on ketâb, an Arabic loan, then runs all four words back to back — nâm, del, dar, ketâb — sorts them by vocabulary layer, and rebuilds the earlier name exchange the reappearance of nâm reopens.

12.1 نام — name, the word Persian never borrowed

Say zabân, starting on its letter ze. Then say the very first sentence this track ever built, esm-e man … ast. Both words in that sentence for "name" are about to get company.

You'll want to know first — one word

نام — nâm — name

Three letters, all already yours: ن ا م — n, long â, m.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

نام continues Old Persian nāma, from Indo-European $*h_1nómn$, "name" — one of the most widely shared words in the whole family:

English kept it as name, Greek as ónoma (→ onomastics), Italian as nome, and Sanskrit as nāman. اسم esm, the word this track taught first, is a separate, later Arabic loan for the identical idea — so Persian now holds two words for "name," inherited and borrowed, sitting side by side the way khub and vaqt already showed the track's vocabulary layers working.

Your turn

- Say it: nâm — name
- Connect: nâm ← $*h_1nómn$ → English name, Greek ónoma, Sanskrit nāman
- Contrast: نام, inherited, against اسم, the Arabic loan the name-exchange lesson taught first
- Retrieve: zabân — tongue, and language, the word that closed the last chapter — and its English cousin, tongue

Before you move on

What does نام mean? (Name.) Which other Persian word means the same thing, and which language did it arrive through? (اسم, through Arabic.) Which English word shares نام's own root? (Name.)
Source: Wiktionary: نام.

12.2 دل — heart

Say nâm, and its English cousin. This lesson's word has an even more famous one.

You'll want to know first — one word

دل — del — heart

Two letters, both already yours: د ل — d, l.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دل continues Middle Persian dil, from the ancient Indo-European word for heart, ḱḗr* — the same root English wore down to heart, Armenian kept as sirt, and Sanskrit built into hṛdaya. Persian uses دل far beyond anatomy, the way English leans on heart for courage and feeling rather than only the organ — a later chapter's word for "want" will lean on it too.

Your turn

- Say it: del — heart
- Connect: del ← ḱḗr* → English heart, Sanskrit hṛdaya, Armenian sirt
- Run through: nâm, del — name, heart
- Retrieve: dokhtar — daughter, from a few lessons back, and its English cousin, daughter itself

Before you move on

What does دل mean? (Heart.) Which English word is its direct cousin? (Heart.) Name one other language that kept the same root. (Sanskrit hṛdaya, or Armenian sirt.)
Source: Wiktionary: دل.

12.3 در — door

Say دل, and the root it shares with heart. This lesson's word shares its own root with an equally ordinary English word.

You'll want to know first — one word

در — dar — door

Two letters, both already yours: د ر — d, r.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

در continues Old Persian duvar-, "door, gate," from Indo-European $*d^h wer$-. Few Indo-European words are this well attested across every branch of the family at once: English door, German Tür, Latin foris (→ foreign, "outside the door"), Greek thýra, and Sanskrit dvāra all continue the identical ancient word. در is Persian's contribution to a cognate set most Indo-European languages still carry.

Your turn

- Say it: dar — door
- Connect: dar ← $*d^h wer$- → English door, German Tür, Latin foris, Sanskrit dvāra
- Run through: nâm, del, dar — name, heart, door

Before you move on

What does در mean? (Door.) Name three other languages that kept the same root. (English door, German Tür, Sanskrit dvāra, among others.)
Source: Wiktionary: در.

12.4 کتاب — book, and the name exchange this chapter reopens

Say dar, and the four languages that share its root. This chapter's last word breaks that pattern completely.

You'll want to know first — one word

کتاب — ketâb — book

Four letters, all already yours: ک ت ا ب — k, t, long â, b.

Grammar Lens: a possessed object, the pattern one more time

ketâb-e man, lotfan. — My book, please.

The same ezafe -e from esm-e man, kelid-e man, and dokhtar-e man links a fourth kind of noun to its owner. Four different words, one grammar habit.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کتاب is not inherited Persian at all: it is borrowed whole from Arabic kitāb, "book," built on the three-consonant root k-t-b, "to write." Persian's four new words this chapter show its vocabulary layers running in both directions at once — nâm is inherited where اسم, taught first, is Arabic; کتاب is Arabic where Persian has no single inherited word of its own for the idea. del and dar are older still, each carrying an Indo-European root beside a whole set of English cousins.

Your turn — the chapter, then the name exchange it reopens

- Say it: ketâb — book; then ketâb-e man, lotfan — my book, please
- Run through: nâm, del, dar, ketâb — all four of this chapter's words
- Sort: which words are inherited, and which one is Arabic
- Rebuild: shomâ / to — the register choice; esm-e shomâ chist? — the question, joining chi and ast; khoshvaghtam — the reply that closes an introduction
- Connect: nâm, this chapter's own name-word, back to the exchange that first taught اسم
- Retrieve: pâ — foot, one more body word from a few lessons back

Before you move on

Which language did Persian borrow کتاب from? (Arabic.) Say "my book, please." (Ketâb-e man, lotfan.) Which of this chapter's four words is inherited Persian, and which is the Arabic loan? (nâm, del, dar inherited; کتاب Arabic.) Which earlier word for "name" does nâm now stand beside? (اسم.)

Chapter 13

Sky, Sun, Moon, Star, Rain

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the sky, sun, moon, star, and rain in Persian, and I can say which of those words has no established English cousin.
> The chapter closes on bârân, a word with no English cousin, then runs all five sky words back to back and rebuilds the careful wellbeing question the weather now follows in ordinary small talk.

13.1 آسمان — sky

Say ketâb, and which language it came from. This chapter turns from things in the house to the world above it, starting with the biggest word of all.

You'll want to know first — one word

آسمان — âsemân — sky

Five letters, all already yours: آ س م ا ن — alef with madde, s, m, long â, n.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

آسمان continues Old Persian asmānam, from Indo-European h₂éḱmō*, "stone." Sanskrit kept the plain sense as aśman, "stone," while Avestan's cousin word already carried both meanings, "stone" and "sky," at once. Picturing the sky as a stone dome overhead was a widespread Indo-European habit, not a Persian invention — one old word doing two jobs, the way zabân later did for tongue and language.

Your turn

- Say it: âsemân — sky
- Connect: âsemân ← *h_2éḱmō → Sanskrit aśman, "stone"
- Name: the old Indo-European habit آسمان preserves — picturing the sky as stone
- Retrieve: zabân — tongue and language, with its letter ze

Before you move on

What does آسمان mean? (Sky.) What did its root originally mean, and which Sanskrit word still keeps that older sense? (Stone; aśman.)
Source: Wiktionary: آسمان.

13.2 خورشید — sun, a word built from two old pieces

Say âsemân, and the root sense it once carried. Picture the sky, and this lesson names what is in it.

You'll want to know first — one word

خورشید — khorshid — sun

Six letters, all already yours: خ و ر ش ی د — kh, و carrying its learned o value, r, sh, long i, d.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

خورشید is a compound, not a single old root. Its first half, خور khor, "sun," descends from the ancient Indo-European word for the sun, sóh$_2$wl* — the same distant root behind English sun, Latin sol (→ solar), Greek hḗlios (→ heliotrope), and Sanskrit sūrya, though it reached Persian by a completely different branch of the family. Its second half, شید shid, "shining," is an unrelated word that Avestan had already paired with خور long before Persian existed.

Your turn

- Say it: khorshid — sun
- Split: خور, sun — شید, shining
- Connect: خور ← *$sóh_2wl$ → English sun, Latin sol, Greek hḗlios, Sanskrit sūrya
- Run through: âsemân, khorshid — sky, sun

Before you move on

What does خورشید mean, and what are its two parts? (Sun; خور "sun" plus شید "shining.") Which English word shares خور's distant root? (Sun.)
Source: Wiktionary: خورشید.

13.3 ماه — moon, and month

Say khorshid, and the two old pieces fused inside it. The sky's other light gives Persian one more word doing double duty.

You'll want to know first — one word

ماه — mâh — moon, and also month

Three letters, all already yours: م ا ه — m, long â, h.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ماه continues Old Persian māha-, from Indo-European *$mḗh_1ns$, "moon." The same root split into two related English words, moon and month — a month was, for most of human history, one full cycle of the moon — and Persian's single word still holds both senses together, the way zabân later holds "tongue" and "language" in one word. Latin kept the root as mensis (→ month, menstrual), Greek as mēn, and Sanskrit as māsa.

Your turn

- Say it: mâh — moon, and month
- Connect: mâh ← *$mḗh_1ns$ → English moon and month, Latin mensis, Sanskrit māsa
- Run through: âsemân, khorshid, mâh — sky, sun, moon

Before you move on

What two English words does ماه's root split into? (Moon and month.) Which earlier Persian word did the same double duty for tongue and language? (zabân.)
Source: Wiktionary: ماه.

13.4 ستاره — star

Say ماه, and the two English words its root split into. One more light in the sky, and a new small spelling habit.

You'll want to know first — one word, one small spelling habit

ستاره — setâre — star

Five letters, all already yours: س ت ا ر ه — s, t, long â, r, and a final ه read as the vowel -e rather than as a consonant — the first time this track has met ه doing that particular job.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ستاره continues Middle Persian stārag, built on the old Iranian star- that Avestan records, from Indo-European *$h_2stḗr$, "star." Few Indo-European roots survive this cleanly across the whole family: English star, Latin stella (→ stellar, constellation), Greek astron (→ astronomy, disaster — "ill-starred"), and Persian's own ستاره all continue the identical ancient word, alongside dar's door and ماه's moon as the tranche's clearest cousins.

Your turn

- Say it: setâre — star
- Connect: setâre ← *$h_2$stḗr → English star, Latin stella, Greek astron
- Read it: the final ه in ستاره as -e, not as a consonant
- Run through: âsemân, khorshid, mâh, setâre — sky, sun, moon, star
- Retrieve: dar — door, and its own well-attested cousin set

Before you move on

What does ستاره mean? (Star.) How is its final ه read? (As the vowel -e, not a consonant.) Name two other languages whose word for star shares the same root. (English star, Latin stella, or Greek astron.)
Source: Wiktionary: ستاره.

13.5 باران — rain, and the wellbeing question this chapter answers differently

Say setâre, and its root's three attested cousins. Not every sky word gets to keep company like that.

You'll want to know first — one word

باران — bârân — rain

Five letters, all already yours: ب ا ر ا ن — b, long â, r, long â, n.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

باران continues Middle Persian wārān, from Indo-Iranian wáHr*, "water, rain," itself from Indo-European weh$_1$r*-, "water." Its cousins stayed close to home: Avestan vāra, "rain," and Sanskrit vār, "water," share the identical root. English rain is not part of this family at all — its own origin is disputed and confined to the Germanic languages, with no secure Indo-European cousin beyond them — so, as with raftan and goftan far earlier, the honest answer here is that no English cousin is claimed.

Grammar Lens: what small talk about the sky follows

Weather small talk in Persian commonly follows the wellbeing exchange, the same slot English fills right after "how are you?" Rebuild the question: hâl-e shomâ chetor ast?, careful ast, not a contraction, then its reply, khubam, mamnun — a shape a sky word can now attach to.

Your turn — every sky word, then the exchange it follows

- Say it: bârân — rain
- Connect: bârân ← *weh_1r- → Sanskrit vār, Avestan vāra — no English cousin
- Run through: âsemân, khorshid, mâh, setâre, bârân — all five sky words
- Rebuild: hâl-e shomâ chetor ast? and its reply khubam, mamnun

Before you move on

What does باران mean? (Rain.) Does it share a root with English rain? (No.) Which two Indo-Iranian languages keep the closest cousins? (Avestan, Sanskrit.) Name all five sky words. (Âsemân, khorshid, mâh, setâre, bârân.)
Source: Wiktionary: باران.

Chapter 14

Sister, Son, Man, Woman, Friend

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my sister, son, and friend in Persian, tell man and woman apart, and open and close a short interaction with all of them.
> The chapter and the tranche close on dust, friend, then run all five people-words back to back and rebuild a complete short interaction with a friend: a polite request for tea, a request for a key, and the standard farewell both voices share.

14.1 خواهر — sister, the family word the earlier tranche skipped

Say bârân, and whether it has an English cousin. The sky words are done; the family the earlier tranche built — mâdar, pedar, barâdar, dokhtar — is missing exactly one member.

You'll want to know first — one word, a familiar silent letter

خواهر — khâhar — sister

Five letters, all already yours: ر ه ا و خ. The و here is silent, exactly the pattern khândan taught: written after خ and before ا, never pronounced. Say it kh-â-har.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

خواهر continues Middle Persian xwāhar, from Indo-European swésōr*, "sister" — as secure a cognate as barâdar's own b^hréh$_2$tēr*. English kept it as sister (through Old Norse, replacing the native Old English form), Latin as soror (→ sorority), and Sanskrit as svasṛ. mâdar, pedar, barâdar, dokhtar, khâhar now give the track all five of Indo-European's plainest kinship words.

Your turn

- Say it: khâhar — sister
- Connect: khâhar ← swésōr* → English sister, Latin soror, Sanskrit svasṛ
- Read it: the silent و in خواهر, the same pattern khândan taught
- Name: all five family words this track now holds — mâdar, pedar, barâdar, dokhtar, khâhar
- Retrieve: ketâb — book, from a few lessons back

Before you move on

What does خواهر mean? (Sister.) Which letter in it is silent, and which earlier word taught the same pattern? (و; khândan.) Which English word is its direct cousin? (Sister.)
Source: Wiktionary: خواهر.

14.2 پسر — son, dokhtar's missing counterpart

Say khâhar, and its secure English cousin. Then say barâdar — its own family tranche taught dokhtar, "daughter," but never gave her brother's counterpart a lesson of its own, until now.

You'll want to know first — one word

پسر — pesar — son

Three letters, all already yours: پ س ر — پ pe, from porsidan, then s, r.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پسر continues Old Persian puça, cognate with Sanskrit putra, "son" — an Indo-Iranian word Persian and Sanskrit still share with each other. English son is not part of this family: it descends from an entirely different Indo-European root, so — as with bârân and raftan before it — no English cousin is claimed here. پسر and dokhtar now give the track a complete pair for "son" and "daughter," even though only one of the two has an English relative.

Your turn

- Say it: pesar — son
- Connect: pesar ← Old Persian puça → Sanskrit putra — no English cousin
- Run through: barâdar, pesar — brother, son — the two words this pair now completes
- Run through: khâhar, pesar — sister, son

Before you move on

What does پسر mean? (Son.) Which Sanskrit word is its direct cousin? (Putra.) Does English son share the same root? (No.) Source: Wiktionary: پسر.

14.3 مرد — man, but its root says "mortal"

Say pesar, and the Sanskrit word it shares a root with. This lesson's word looks like it should be an easy English cousin. It is not.

You'll want to know first — one word

مرد — mard — man

Three letters, all already yours: م ر د — m, r, d.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

مرد continues Middle Persian mard, from Indo-European mer-*, "to die." Its literal sense is not "man" at all — it is "mortal," "one who dies." The same root gives Latin mortuus, "dead" (→ English mortal, mortician), Greek brotós (→ ambrosia, "not mortal"), and Sanskrit martya. English man looks like an obvious match for مرد and is not one — it descends from a completely different root — so this is one place where guessing a cousin from sound alone would mislead rather than help.

Your turn

- Say it: mard — man
- Connect: mard ← mer-* → Latin mortuus, mortal; Greek brotós; Sanskrit martya — not English man
- Run through: pesar, mard — son, man

Before you move on

What does مرد mean? (Man.) What does its root literally mean, and which English word keeps that sense? (Mortal; mortal itself.) Does English man share the same root? (No — a false friend.) Source: Wiktionary: مرد.

14.4 زن — woman, a root hiding behind a royal title

Say mard, and why it is not a cousin of English man. This lesson's word finds its English cousin in an unexpected place.

You'll want to know first — one word

زن — zan — woman

Two letters, both already yours: ز ن — ز ze, from zabân, then n.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

زن continues Middle Persian zan, from Indo-European *g^w*ḗn(h₂)*-, "woman." English kept the same root, but only inside a narrowed, elevated word: queen was once simply "woman," the way mard narrowed "mortal" down to "man." Greek kept the plain sense directly as gynē (→ gynecology), and Russian as žena. mard and زن give the track its first pair of person words that are not family roles.

Your turn

- Say it: zan — woman
- Connect: zan ← *g^w*ḗn(h₂)*- → English queen, Greek gynē
- Run through: mard, zan — man, woman
- Contrast: mard narrowed from "mortal"; زن widened English's cousin down to royalty alone
- Retrieve: setâre — star, one more well-attested cousin

Before you move on

What does زن mean? (Woman.) Which English word is its cousin, and what did that word originally mean before it narrowed? (Queen; simply "woman.") Which Greek word shares the same root? (Gynē.)
Source: Wiktionary: زن.

14.5 دوست — friend, and everything this tranche has built

Say mard, zan — man, woman. One more person word closes the tranche, and it is a word this track has half-taught already.

You'll want to know first — one word, already half-known

دوست — dust — friend

Four letters, all already yours: د و س ت — d, long u, s, t. The compound verb for "to love" already ran on this exact word; here it stands alone, as the person it names.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دوست goes back through Old Persian dauštā to Indo-European ǵews-*, "to taste, to choose" — a friend is the one chosen. English inherited the root directly as choose; Latin took it as gustus, "taste," giving English gusto and disgust. The compound-verb lesson that first taught this root only ever used دوست glued to dâshtan; this is its first lesson as a free-standing noun.

Your turn — the tranche, start to finish

One short scene, built entirely from independently learned pieces:

- Say it: dust — friend; then khâhar, pesar, mard, zan, dust — all five people-words this closing chapter taught
- Connect: dust ← ǵews-* → English choose, Latin gustus
- Say it: chây, lotfan — offer your friend tea in the bârân, rain, reusing the very first polite request this track built

Chapter 15

Nine Letters, and the Words You Already Knew

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (9) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 11 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write nine Perso-Arabic letters from memory, read salâm, bale, na, mamnun, nân, nâm and mâh off the page rather than from the romanization, and explain why Persian leaves its short vowels unwritten.
> Seven words the book had only ever given by ear, read letter by letter from the right – and the reason a Persian word can be read only once you have heard it.

15.1 ا — one stroke, and the direction of the page

Return to the right-to-left direction and the one alef stroke you first copied beside salâm. Now make both durable before adding a second letter.

Script — first, which way the page runs

English marches left to right. Persian marches right to left.

Your pen starts at the right edge of a word and travels towards the left. So in a Persian word the letter you meet first is the rightmost one, and the letter you meet last is the leftmost — the exact reverse of what your eye has been trained on for your whole reading life.

This takes a few minutes to stop feeling strange and then stops mattering entirely. Numbers, incidentally, still run left to right, which surprises people more than the letters do.

Script — the letter itself

ا

One downstroke. That is the whole letter, and there is nothing in the alphabet simpler. Draw it from the top down, straight, and lift.

Its name is alef. What it sounds like is a longer story than what it looks like, and this book will take that slowly: for now, treat alef as the letter that carries a long â, the vowel in English father.

Your turn

- Write it: ا — one stroke, top to bottom
- Say it: â, the vowel of father
- Point to: the right edge of a Persian word, where your pen would begin

Before you move on

How many strokes in alef? (One.)

15.2 ل — alef, with a bowl at its foot

Write ا. One stroke, top to bottom.

Script — the shape

Stroke order after Persian Online, How to Write Persian Characters, ل demonstration at 02:29–02:32 (Liberal Arts Instructional Technology Services, Univ. of Texas at Austin)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ل is written, stroke by stroke

ل

Start exactly as you started alef — a tall stroke coming down — and then, instead of lifting, swing left into a shallow bowl at the foot and come back up a little.

One movement, no pen lift. If you can write ا you are most of the way to ل already; the difference is what happens at the bottom.

Its name is lâm and it says l, as in English long.

Your turn

- Write it: ا, then ل — the same descent, and then the bowl
- Say it: l

Before you move on

Do you lift the pen between the stroke and the bowl? (No — one movement.)

15.3 س — three teeth, then a bowl

Write ل. Descent, then bowl.

Script — the shape

How it is written — one unbroken stroke · 2 movements

Stroke order after Persian Online, How to Write Persian Characters, س demonstration at 01:23–01:28 (Liberal Arts Instructional Technology Services, Univ. of Texas at Austin)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How س is written, stroke by stroke

س

Three small teeth — short upward points in a row — and then the line drops into a bowl and comes back up, the same kind of bowl you drew on lâm.

Remember you are working right to left: the first tooth you draw is the rightmost one.

All of it is one movement. No lifts at all.

Its name is sin and it says s, as in English see.

Your turn

- Write it: س — three teeth from the right, then the bowl, without lifting
- Say it: s

Before you move on

Which tooth do you draw first? (The rightmost.)

15.4 م — a loop, and a tail below the line

Write س. Three teeth, then the bowl.

Script — the shape

Stroke order after Persian Online, How to Write Persian Characters, م demonstration at 02:33–02:36 (Liberal Arts Instructional Technology Services, Univ. of Texas at Austin)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How م is written, stroke by stroke

م

A small closed loop sitting on the line, and from it a tail dropping straight down below the line.

The loop is small and round; keep it tight, or it starts to look like other letters you will meet later. The tail is what makes mim unmistakable standing on its own — very few letters drop below the line, and your eye will learn to use that. Joined into the middle of a word the tail is trimmed away and the loop is what survives, which is the same trimming you will meet everywhere.

One movement, no lift.

Its name is mim and it says m.

Your turn

- Write it: م — the small loop, then the tail dropping below the line
- Say it: m

Before you move on

Is the loop open or closed? (Closed.)

15.5 Letters that hold hands, and two that will not

Write س, then م. Four letters are now yours.

Script — the running line

Persian is not written as separate letters sitting side by side. Letters join, running into one another along a single line, the way English cursive does — except that in Persian it is not a style. It is the ordinary way to write, and printed text does it too.

Because they join, most letters change shape depending on where they sit: a letter at the start of a joined run, one in the middle, one at the end, and one standing alone can all look different. They are the same letter.

That sounds like four times the work. It is not, and here is why: the changes are almost always the same trimming. A letter's identifying part stays, and the finishing flourish is cut short so the next letter can begin.

Look at sin, which you can already write:

alone: س — in the middle of a run: ـسـ

The three teeth survive. The bowl is what gets trimmed away.

Script — and the letters that refuse

Now the rule that saves you the most trouble.

A few letters join to the letter before them, but never to the letter after. They connect on the right, and refuse on the left, so the run breaks and the next letter starts fresh as though beginning a new word.

alef is one of them. So when you meet a gap in the middle of a Persian word, it is very often not a gap at all — it is one of these non-joining letters doing exactly what it always does.

That single fact turns a page of Persian from an unbroken puzzle into something with visible seams.

What you've built

Four letters, and they spell a word you have been saying since the very first lesson:

Read it right to left: س s, ل l, ا â, م m. Say it: salâm.
Two things to notice. The short vowel between s and l is not written — Persian normally prints only the long vowels, and readers supply the rest. And the break before the final م is alef refusing to join, exactly as promised.

Your turn

- Read it: سلام — name each letter from the right, then say the word
- Write it: سلام — and let the run break after alef
- Say it: salâm

Before you move on

Which part of sin survives when it joins? (The teeth; the bowl is trimmed.)

15.6 ب — a bowl, and one dot underneath

Write سلام. Four letters, one break.

Script — the shape

How it is written — 2 strokes · 1 pen lift · 2 movements

Stroke order after Persian Online, How to Write Persian Characters, opening ب demonstration at 00:11–00:15 (Liberal Arts Instructional Technology Services, Univ. of Texas at Austin)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ب is written, stroke by stroke

ب

A single shallow bowl, wider and flatter than the one on lâm, sitting on the line — and one dot below it.

Draw the bowl first, then lift and place the dot. That lift is the only one.

Its name is be and it says b.

Now the part worth more than the letter. This bowl is a skeleton that several letters share. On its own it means nothing; the dots decide which letter it is — how many, and whether they sit above or below.

That is why dots in Persian are not decoration and not optional. Move one dot from below to above and you have written a different letter. Your eye has to learn to look at the dots as hard as it looks at the shape.

Your turn

- Write it: ب — the shallow bowl, then one dot beneath it
- Say it: b

Before you move on

Is the bowl alone enough to identify a letter? (No — the dots decide.)

15.7 ت and ن — the same bowl, dotted differently

Write ب. Bowl, then one dot below.

Script — two dots above

How these letters are written, one after another, stroke by stroke: ت, ن

ت

The same bowl as be. Two dots, and they sit above it.

That is the entire difference, and it is a whole different letter: te, saying t.

Script — one dot above, and a deeper bowl

ن

One dot above — and a bowl that is noticeably deeper and rounder than be's, curving well below the line before coming back up.

Its name is nun and it says n.

Standing alone, nun's deeper bowl helps you. In the middle of a joined run the bowl gets trimmed like everyone else's, and then the dot is doing nearly all the work: one above is nun, two above is te, one below is be.

What you've built

Three letters, one shape:

ب — one dot below

ت — two dots above

ن — one dot above

You learned one bowl and got three letters out of it. That is the trade Persian keeps offering: fewer shapes than you feared, and dots you cannot afford to skim.

Your turn

- Write it: ب, then ت, then ن — same hand movement, different dots
- Say it: b, t, n

Before you move on

Which of the three has the deepest bowl? (nun.)

15.8 ه — the letter with four costumes

Write ت, then ن. Same bowl, different dots.

Script — the shape

How it is written — one unbroken stroke · 1 movement

Stroke order after Persian Online, How to Write Persian Characters, ه demonstration at 02:47–02:50 (Liberal Arts Instructional Technology Services, Univ. of Texas at Austin)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ه is written, stroke by stroke

ه

A small round letter, standing on the line, no dots at all.

Its name is he. It says h at the start of a word — and at the end of a word it usually says nothing like an h: it carries a final e sound, the vowel that ends so many Persian words.

This letter will test what you learned about joining, because its four forms differ more than most:

alone: ه — at the start: هـ — in the middle: ـهـ — at the end: ـه

Do not try to memorise four shapes. Recognise the round body, notice where in the run it is sitting, and let the shape follow from that. Persian readers are not holding four pictures in mind either.

Your turn

- Write it: ه — small and round, no dots
- Say it: h at the front of a word; a soft e at the end of one

Before you move on

Does he carry any dots? (None.)

15.9 و — one shape, three jobs, and no hand offered to the left

Write هو. Small, round, no dots.

Script — the shape

How و is written, stroke by stroke

و

A small loop at the top with a tail sweeping down and to the left, below the line. One movement.

Its name is vâv, and it is unusually hard-working. Depending on the word it is:

- the consonant v

- the long vowel u, as in English food
- the vowel o

You cannot tell which from the letter alone. You learn it with the word — and that is a fair trade, because it means Persian needs no separate letters for those vowels at all.

And vâv is a non-joiner, the second one this chapter has given you. Like alef, it takes the hand of the letter on its right and offers nothing to the left, so the run breaks after it.

Your turn

- Write it: و — the small loop, then the tail below the line
- Say it: v, then u, then o — one letter, three jobs

Before you move on

Can you tell from the shape alone whether vâv is v, u or o? (No — the word tells you.)

15.10 Practice — seven words you already knew, now read

Write your nine letters in a row, right to left, saying each name as you go.

Script — the words come back

Nothing new is taught here. Every word below is one this book already gave you to say, and every letter in them is one you can now write.

Read each from the right, naming its letters before you say it:

سلام

بله

نه

ممنون

نان

نام

ماه

salâm — bale — na — mamnun — nân — nâm — mâh.

Seven words. Nine letters. That ratio is the point: a small closed set of shapes unlocks far more than its own size, and it keeps doing so as the set grows.

Why it's said this way

Count the letters in بله and count the sounds in bale. Three letters, four sounds.

Persian normally does not write its short vowels. The long ones get letters — that is part of what alef and vâv are for — but the short a, e and o are left off the page, and the reader supplies them.

This sounds alarming and is not, for the same reason English readers cope with read and read: you are not decoding letter by letter for long. You recognise the word.

It does mean one thing, though, and it is worth accepting early. You cannot reliably sound out a Persian word you have never heard. Reading and listening have to grow together in this language, more tightly than in one that spells every vowel. That is why this book taught you these seven words by ear first, and is only now handing you the page.

What you've built this chapter

Nine letters, and three ideas that matter more than any of them:

- the page runs right to left, and your pen starts at the right edge
- letters join, changing shape by position — but the change is a trimming, not a new letter, and alef and vâv refuse to join to the left, which is what makes the gaps inside a word
- dots carry the identity — one bowl gave you ب, ت and ن

Nine of Persian's thirty-two letters. The remaining twenty-three are mostly more of what you have just done: familiar skeletons, re-dotted.

Your turn

- Read it: ممنون نه بله سلام — name the letters of each before saying it
- Write it: نان and نام — one letter apart, and check which
- Say it: mamnun, and count how many letters are written for it

Before you move on

Which two of your nine letters refuse to join to the left? (ا and و.)

15.11 ممنون · زن · دوست — three words the letters have caught up with

Say the word you have used for thank you since the first page. You have had it in your mouth far longer than you have had it on the page.

You'll want to know: the letters have caught up with the words

Three words you already say, now taken apart with letters you can name:

word		its letters
ممنون mamnun	thank you	م · م · ن · و · ن
زن zan	woman	ز · ن
دوست dust	friend	د · و · س · ت

Look at what is not there. Mamnun has an a you say and no a you read, because Persian leaves the short vowels off the page — the rule you were told on the very first word, now visible in a word you can spell. Dust has the opposite: the و is written, because a long u earns a letter.

Short vowels are heard and not written; long ones are both. That single sentence is most of what makes Persian readable.

Your turn

- Look: at ممنون and name each letter from the right
- Say it: zan — woman; then name its two letters
- Say it: dust — friend; then say which of its four letters is the long u

- Say it: mamnun — and say where the a you hear has gone on the page

Before you move on

Which word means thank you, and which vowel of it is unwritten? (ممنون — the short a.) Which two letters spell woman? (ن ز.) Which letter of دوست carries the long u? (و.) And what is the rule the three words share? (Short vowels are not written; long ones are.)

Chapter 16

One to Five, and the Words English Already Says

Modes: voice (6) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 6 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say, hear and recognise the Persian numbers one to five, write the one of them made only of letters I have been taught, and name the English cousin of each.
> Five numbers, five Indo-European roots and five everyday English cousins — retrieved shuffled rather than recited, with the one writable form written.

16.1 یک — one, and the first number this book has ever taught

Read it: سلام and نان off the page, without the romanization

Nine letters, and the words they finish.

You'll want to know first — one word

یک — yek — one

Fifteen chapters of names, verbs, kinship, the body and the sky, and not one number. That has a cost the book has been carrying quietly: no age, no price, no telephone number, no quantity, no time of day. It starts being paid here.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

یک continues Middle Persian ēk, from Proto-Iranian Haywah* and Indo-Iranian Háywas*, ultimately Indo-European óywos*, "one."
That root did not stay in Iran. Sanskrit eka, Ancient Greek oios, Latin ūnus, French un, German ein and English one are all the same word, worn down differently. Of the ten numbers this slice teaches, nine have a cousin an English speaker already says every day — which makes the count the cheapest vocabulary in the whole book, not the most expensive.

Your turn

- Say it: yek — one
- Connect: yek ← óywos* → English one, Latin ūnus, Sanskrit eka

Before you move on

What does یک mean? (One.) Which everyday English word is the same root? (One.)
Sources: Wiktionary: یک; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

16.2 دو — two, and a letter doing its third job

Say yek, and the English word that is the same root.

You'll want to know first — one word

دو — do — two

Two letters. The second is و, the hard-working letter from the script chapter that can be v, u or o; here it is o, and the word tells you so.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دو continues Middle Persian dō, from Proto-Iranian duwā*, from Indo-European dwoh*, "two." English two, Latin duo, Greek dýo and Sanskrit dvá are the same word.
Say do and two one after the other. Nothing has to be learned there; it has to be recognised.

Your turn

- Say it: do — two
- Connect: do ← dwoh* → English two, Latin duo
- Run through: yek, do

Before you move on

Which of و's three jobs is it doing in دو? (o.)
Sources: Wiktionary: دو; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

16.3 سه — three, and the first number the hand can make

Say yek, do.

You'll want to know first — one word

سه — se — three

س and ه. Both were taught in the script chapter, so this is the first number in the book you can write as well as say. Of the twelve numbers this slice covers, exactly two are in that position — the other is nine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

سه continues Middle Persian sē, from Indo-European tréyes*, "three." English three, Latin trēs, Greek treîs and Sanskrit tri are the same word.
The Persian form looks further away than do did, and it is: the initial consonant and the r have both gone. Hearing se as three takes a moment where hearing do as two took none — that is worth noticing now, because the next two numbers are further still.

Your turn

- Say it: se — three
- Connect: se ← tréyes* → English three, Latin trēs

- Write it: سه — sin, then he. Right to left.
- Run through: yek, do, se

Before you move on

Which two numbers can this book write so far? (سه and, later, نه.)
Sources: Wiktionary: سه; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

16.4 چهار — four, and one consonant taking three different paths

Say se and its English cousin, then do.

You'll want to know first — one word

چهار — chahâr — four

Two syllables, and the long â of باران in the second.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چهار continues Middle Persian čahār, from Proto-Iranian čathwārah* (EtymDB) and Indo-European k^wetwóres*, "four."
That opening k^w* is the interesting part, because three languages did three different things with it. Latin kept it whole: quattuor. English lost the lip-rounding and then the k itself softened to f: four. Persian pushed it forward to a ch. One sound, three descendants, and the numbers still line up.

Your turn

- Say it: chahâr — four
- Connect: chahâr ← k^wetwóres* → Latin quattuor, English four
- Run through: yek, do, se, chahâr

Before you move on

Which language kept the original kw whole? (Latin.)
Sources: Wiktionary: چهار; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

16.5 پنج — five, and the word you have already met on a map

Say chahâr, and what three languages did with its first sound.

You'll want to know first — one word

پنج — panj — five

پ is Persian's own letter, one of the four the alphabet added for sounds Arabic does not have.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پنج continues Middle Persian panj, from Indo-European *$pénk^we$, "five." Greek pénte, Latin quīnque and English five are the same word.
This one an English speaker has probably already met without knowing it. Punjab is panj + âb, "five waters" — the land of the five rivers. So is the fruit drink punch, named for its five ingredients. The number was in the language before the lesson was.

Your turn

- Say it: panj — five
- Connect: panj ← *$pénk^we$ → Greek pénte, Latin quīnque, English five
- Run through: yek, do, se, chahâr, panj — the whole first five

Before you move on

What does the panj in Punjab mean? (Five.)
Sources: Wiktionary: پنج; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

16.6 Payoff — one to five, out of order

Say panj, then yek.

Your turn

A run learned forwards is a rhyme. Break it four ways.

1. Hear each of the five named singly and out of order, and say what it is.
2. Count backwards from panj to yek.
3. Read it: the five printed shuffled — دو سه، چهار، یک، پنج، — then say each
4. Write it: سه, the one of the five whose letters are already yours

Then say each number's English cousin: one, two, three, four, five. Every one of the five has one, and that is not a coincidence — it is the same set of words, five thousand years apart.

Before you move on

Source: Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

16.7 دوست یک — counting the people you can name

Two person words, from memory: the one for woman, and the one for friend. Neither is a family role, which is what made them worth learning.

You'll want to know: numbers go in front, and nothing else changes

Put a number you now have in front of a person word you now have:

دوست یک yek dust	one friend
دوست دو do dust	two friends
se zan	three women

Read the middle column down and notice what stays still. دوست does not change between one friend and two, and neither does zan. Persian does not reach for a plural ending once a number has already said how many — the number has done that job, so the noun does not repeat it.

دوست is also the one to hold on to. It goes back to a root meaning to choose, so a friend in Persian is the one chosen — and the same root gave English choose.

Your turn

- Say it: one friend, then two friends — the noun does not move
- Say it: three women
- Say it: dust — and what a friend is, literally
- Run through: yek, do, se in front of dust, one after the other

Before you move on

How do you say two friends? (دو دوست do dust — the noun is unchanged.) Why is there no plural ending? (The number already said how many.) What does دوست mean literally? (The one chosen.) And which English word shares its root? (Choose.) And zan: which English word kept its root, narrowed to one woman? (Queen — and Greek kept the plain sense in gynecology.)

Chapter 17

Six to Ten, and One Sound Law

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say, hear and recognise every Persian number from one to ten, write the two of them made only of letters I have been taught, and explain why haft begins with h where septem begins with s.
> Five more numbers, the Iranian s-to-h rule that explains one of them, the analogy that explains the next, and the whole run of ten shuffled.

17.1 شش — six, and the short vowel you cannot see

Count one to five, then five to one.

You'll want to know first — one word

شش — shesh — six

Two letters, and they are the same letter. The vowel between them is short, so Persian does not write it — which is the script chapter's rule doing exactly what it said it would: a Persian word can be read only once you have heard it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

شش continues Middle Persian shash, from Indo-European swéḱs*, "six." English six, Latin sex, Greek héx and Sanskrit ṣaṣ are the same word.

Your turn

- Say it: shesh — six
- Connect: shesh ← swéks* → English six, Latin sex
- Run through: chahâr, panj, shesh

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: شش; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

17.2 هفت — seven, and the rule behind it

Say shesh and its English cousin.

You'll want to know first — one word

هفت — haft — seven

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

هفت comes from Proto-Iranian haptá*, from Indo-European septm*, "seven." Latin septem, English seven and Sanskrit saptá all keep the s.
Persian does not, and that is not an accident about this word. Iranian turned Indo-European s into h at the front of a word, everywhere, and once you know that one change a great many Persian words stop looking foreign. Set the pairs side by side:

- Sanskrit saptá — Persian haft
- Sanskrit sindhu, "river" — Persian hind (and, through Persian, India)
- Sanskrit soma — Avestan haoma

This is the single most useful sound law in the language for a reader who knows any European one, and a number is where it is easiest to see.

Your turn

- Say it: haft — seven
- Connect: haft ← septm* → Latin septem, English seven
- Apply: s at the front becomes h — saptá → haft
- Run through: panj, shesh, haft

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: هفت; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

17.3 هشت — eight, and a rule that does not apply

Say haft, and what Iranian did to every word-initial s.

You'll want to know first — one word

هشت — hasht — eight

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

هشت goes back to Indo-European oḱtṓw*, "eight" — Latin octō, Greek oktō̃, English eight. There is no s anywhere in that history, so the rule you learned one lesson ago cannot be what put the h on the front. What put it there was haft standing next to it. Seven and eight are said together more often than almost any other pair of words, and the h- of haft spread onto its neighbour. A rule and an exception, one lesson apart, and the exception is the more human of the two.

Your turn

- Say it: hasht — eight
- Connect: hasht ← oḱtṓw* → Latin octō, English eight
- Run through: shesh, haft, hasht

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: هشت; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

17.4 نه — nine, and the word it is spelled exactly like

Say hasht, and why its h is there.

You'll want to know first — one word

نه — noh — nine

ن and ه. Both are yours from the script chapter, so this is the second of the twelve numbers you can write as well as say — the other was سه.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

نه continues Middle Persian noh, from Indo-European h1newn*, "nine." Latin novem, English nine and Sanskrit náva are the same word.
Now look at the spelling against a word from the opening chapter. نه is also na, "no" — the same two letters, because the vowel that tells them apart is short and Persian does not write short vowels. Only the sentence separates nine from no.
This is the clearest case in the book of the trade the script chapter named. Persian writes fewer signs than it says, and the reader pays for it exactly here.

Your turn

- Say it: noh — nine
- Connect: noh ← h1newn* → Latin novem, English nine
- Write it: نه — nun, then he
- Contrast: the same two letters said na are "no"

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: نه; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

17.5 ده — ten, and the building block for nine more numbers

Say noh and haft, and what نه can also mean.

You'll want to know first — one word

ده — dah — ten

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ده continues Middle Persian dah, from Indo-European dekm*, "ten." Latin decem (and through it decimal, December), English ten and Sanskrit dáśa are the same word.
Hold on to this one. Persian builds every number from eleven to nineteen by putting a unit in front of dah — yâz-dah, si-dah, chahâr-dah — so the next chapter costs one rule rather than nine words. Ten has to be learned before the teens can be, and now it is.

Your turn

- Say it: dah — ten
- Connect: dah ← dekm* → Latin decem, English ten
- Run through: haft, hasht, noh, dah

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: ده; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

17.6 Payoff — one to ten

Count one to five, then say what Iranian did to word-initial s.

Your turn

1. Hear all ten named singly and out of order, and say each.
2. Count backwards from dah to yek.
3. Read it: the ten printed shuffled, then say each
4. Write it: سه and نه, the two whose letters the script chapter gave you
5. Say the English cousin of each of the ten. Every one has one.

Then group them by what happened to the first sound: haft shows the s-to-h rule, hasht borrowed its h from haft, and shesh kept its s because the rule only touches the front of a word.

Chapter 18

The Teens Are a Rule, Not Nine Words

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can build any number from eleven to nineteen by putting a unit in front of dah, say twenty and a hundred, and write the tenth letter of this book.
> Three teens taught and six built from the rule, then the two round amounts a price actually names — and the one letter a hundred needs that no lesson yet teaches the hand to make.

18.1 یازده — eleven, and one rule for nine numbers

Count one to ten, then say dah on its own and what it means.

You'll want to know first — one word, and then a rule

یازده — yâzdah — eleven

Say it slowly and the ten is audible at the end: yâz + dah. The first piece is yek worn down; the second is the word for ten you learned in the last lesson.

That is the whole of the teens. Persian puts the unit in front of ten and stops:

12	davâz-dah — from do
14	chahâr-dah — chahâr unchanged
19	nuz-dah — from noh

Nine numbers, one rule, and the unit is a number you already have. This is why ten had to come first.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

yâzdah is inherited: it is usually traced to Middle Persian yāzdah, built from the old words for "one" and "ten", Middle Persian ēk and dah.

Your turn

- Say it: yâzdah — eleven
- Split: yâz + dah
- Build: chahâr + dah → chahârdah, fourteen

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: یازده; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

18.2 سیزده — thirteen, and how far a unit can bend

Say yâzdah, split it in two, and build fourteen.

You'll want to know first — one word

سیزده — sizdah — thirteen

si + dah. The unit is se, with its vowel lengthened and darkened — and English does the same thing without anyone noticing: three becomes thir- in thirteen, and five becomes fif- in fifteen.

Listen past the bending, then, and hear what does not bend: the ten stays the same, on the end, every time.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sizdah is inherited: it is usually traced to Middle Persian sēzdah, built from se, "three", and dah, "ten".

Your turn

- Say it: sizdah — thirteen
- Split: si + dah
- Compare: se → si, as English three → thir-

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: سیزده; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

18.3 پانزده — fifteen, and the one irregularity worth naming

Say sizdah and split it, then say panj.

You'll want to know first — one word

پانزده — pânzdah — fifteen

pân + z + dah. There is an n in there that panj does not have in the place you would expect it, and there is a z that came from the j.

Sixteen does the same thing: shânzdah, from shesh. Fifteen and sixteen are the only two of the nine teens that bend this far, and they bend the same way — so it is one irregularity, met once, not two.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pânzdah is inherited: it is usually traced to Middle Persian pānzdah, built from panj, "five", and dah, "ten".

Your turn

- Say it: pânzdah — fifteen
- Say it: shânzdah — sixteen, the same bend
- Run through: yâzdah, sizdah, pânzdah and the ten inside each

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: پانزده; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

18.4 بیست and صد — twenty and a hundred

Say pânzdah and sizdah, and split each in two.

You'll want to know first — two words

بیست — bist — twenty

صد — sad — a hundred

Two words, taken together because a price names one or the other far more often than it names any of the eighteen numbers between them.

صد is two letters and it is the largest number in this book. Its first letter, ص, is one no lesson has taught the hand to make — it enters this book by eye only, the way most of the track's words have, and reading is what the number needs.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

بیست goes back to Indo-European wikmtih*, "twenty" — Latin vīgintī, Sanskrit vimshati.
صد goes back to kmtom*, "hundred" — Latin centum, Greek hekatón, English hundred. The Latin form is the one English borrowed twice over, in century and per cent, so a reader who has ever seen a percentage has already met sad's cousin.
The spelling is the joke: صد is written with a borrowed Arabic letter for a word that is not Arabic at all.

Your turn

- Say it: bist — twenty; sad — a hundred
- Connect: sad ← kmtom* → Latin centum, English hundred
- Run through: dah, bist, sad — the three round amounts

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: صد; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

18.5 Payoff — one to twenty, and the hundred above it

Count one to ten, then say a hundred.

Your turn

Three of the nine teens were taught. Build the other six rather than recalling them.

1. From do, chahâr, haft, hasht and noh, build twelve, fourteen, seventeen, eighteen and nineteen by putting the unit in front of dah. Check: each against a printed list, and repair only what missed
2. Say sixteen, and say which taught number it bends like.
3. Count one to twenty straight through.
4. Hear twelve amounts named singly, from yek to sad, and say each.

The point of the chapter is that six of these nine numbers were never taught and you can say them anyway. That is what a rule buys and a word list does not.

Chapter 19

The Ten Persian Digits

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read and write the ten Persian digits, read a price, a page number and a telephone number off an Iranian page, and say which way a number runs inside a right-to-left line.
> Ten signs across four lessons, grouped by what makes each pair hard: the reversed direction, the one-tooth pair, the three Arabic draws differently, and the mirror pair.

19.1 ۰ ۱ — two digits, and a direction that reverses

Which way does a Persian line run? Say yek.

Script — the shapes, and the direction

How these digits are written, one after another, stroke by stroke: ۰, ۱

۰ — sefr, zero ۱ — yek, one

Persian has its own ten digit signs, and every price ticket, telephone number and page number in Iran is written in them. A reader who can say yek and cannot read ۱ still cannot read a price.

۰ is a dot, not a ring. Fix that first, because a European eye reads a dot as a decimal point — and Persian's nine is the ring.

Now the part no earlier chapter has had to say: numbers run left to right, inside a line that runs right to left. Ten is ۱۰ — one, then zero, in the European order — while the words around it move the other way. The page changes direction at the number and changes back after it.

Your turn

- Write it: ۰ — a dot; ۱ — a stroke
- Read it: ۱۰ — dah, ten, left to right

Before you move on

Sources: Unicode Arabic chart; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

19.2 ۲ ۳ — one tooth apart

Write ۰ and ۱, then read ۱۰.

Script — the shapes

How these digits are written, one after another, stroke by stroke: ۲, ۳

۲ — do, two ۳ — se, three

۳ is ۲ with one more tooth. That is the whole difference, and it is small enough that the two have to be written as a pair rather than one at a time — say do and se aloud as the hand makes them and the shapes stop competing.

Your turn

- Write it: ۲, then ۳ beside it
- Read it: ۱۲, ۱۳, ۲۳, left to right

Before you move on

Sources: Unicode Arabic chart; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

19.3 ۴ ۵ ۶ — the three Persian keeps for itself

Write ۲ and ۳, and say which has the extra tooth.

Script — the shapes

How these digits are written, one after another, stroke by stroke: ۴, ۵, ۶

۴ — chahâr, four ۵ — panj, five ۶ — shesh, six

These three are the reason this chapter exists as more than a list.

Seven of the ten digits are drawn the same way in Persian and in Arabic. ۴, ۵ and ۶ are not: Arabic writes those three with quite different shapes. A reader who picked up the digits from an Arabic book will read an Iranian price wrongly at exactly these three places and nowhere else.

If you drill three of the ten harder than the rest, drill these.

Your turn

- Write it: ۴, ۵, ۶, saying chahâr, panj, shesh
- Read it: ۱۴, ۱۵, ۱۶, left to right

Before you move on

Sources: Unicode Arabic chart; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

19.4 ∨ ∧ ۹ — a mirror pair, and the ring

Write ۴, ۵, ۶ — the three Arabic draws differently.

Script — the shapes

How these digits are written, one after another, stroke by stroke: ∨, ∧, ۹

∨ — haft, seven ∧ — hasht, eight ۹ — noh, nine

∨ and ∧ are mirror images of each other, one opening upward and one downward. Write them as a pair, every time, and the mirror stops being a problem — the same trick that worked on ۲ and ۳.

۹ is a ring with a tail, and this is where a dot-shaped zero pays off. Had ۰ been a ring too, the page would carry two rings and no way to separate them.

Ten signs, four lessons. The set is closed.

Your turn

- Write it: ∨ and ∧ as a pair, then ۹
- Run through: ۰ ۱ ۲ ۳ ۴ ۵ ۶ ∨ ∧ ۹ once, slowly

Before you move on

Sources: Unicode Arabic chart; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

19.5 Payoff — reading the figures

Count one to twenty, then say which way digits run inside a Persian line.

Your turn

1. Read it: all ten signs shuffled, then say each as a Persian word
2. Read it: ۱۰, ۱۱, ۲۰ and ۱۰۰, then say each — dah, yâzdah, bist, sad
3. Hear ten amounts named. Write it: each in Persian figures
4. Write it: the ten signs from dictation, out of order, and check ۴, ۵ and ۶ against the models rather than against memory

Say what a reader can now do that could not be done four chapters ago: read a price, a page number and a telephone number off an Iranian page.

Before you move on

Chapter 20

Which One: the Ordinals

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say first, second, third and fourth, build the ordinal of any number I can count to, and write two of them from memory.
> One borrowed ordinal at the head of the series, one ending that makes all the rest, and the two forms whose letters chapter 15 already gave.

20.1 اول — first, and the one ordinal Persian did not build

Read it: ۱, ۵ and ۱۰, then say yek

You'll want to know first — one word

اول — avval — first

Counting says how many. Ordering says which one, and a floor number, a date on a notice, a chapter heading and a queue all need the second.

Three letters — ا, و, ل — and every one of them was taught in the script chapter, so this is the third word in the book you can write from memory without meeting a new sign.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

اول is Arabic, from the root ʾ-w-l. Persian did not build it from yek. Every other ordinal in the language is built from its own number, as the next lesson shows. So the series opens with a borrowed word and continues with native ones — the same shape English has in first and second, which are not built from one and two either, before third, fourth, fifth fall into line.

Your turn

- Say it: avval — first
- Write it: اول — alef, vâv, lam
- Contrast: yek counts, اول orders

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: اول; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

20.2 دوم and سوم — second, third, and one ending

Say avval, and where it came from. Then say do and se.

You'll want to know first — two words and a rule

دوم — dovvom — second

سوم — sevvom — third

The rule is one ending: ـم, -om, on the cardinal. do + -om → dovvom; se + -om → sevvom. The consonant doubles at the join, which is the only thing you have to hear.

سوم is written س، و، م — three letters, all yours from the script chapter. That makes it the fourth word in this book you can write unaided, after se, noh and avval, whose written forms the script chapter already gave.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dovvom and sevvom are built from the inherited numbers do and se with the ordinal ending -om (EtymDB); do continues Middle Persian dō (EtymDB).

Your turn

- Say it: dovvom — second; sevvom — third
- Split: do + -om, se + -om
- Write it: سوم — sin, vâv, mim

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: سوم; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

20.3 چهارم — fourth, with nothing bending

Say the ordinal ending, then dovvom and sevvom.

You'll want to know first — one word

چهارم — chahârom — fourth

chahâr + -om, and nothing happens at the join. panjom, "fifth," is the same: the cardinal ends in a consonant, so the ending simply follows it.

dovvom and sevvom doubled a consonant only because their cardinals end in a vowel. Two and three are the exception; four onwards is the rule, all the way up. dahom is "tenth", bistom is "twentieth", sadom is "hundredth."

So a reader who has twelve cardinals and one ending has twelve ordinals, minus the borrowed first.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chahârom is built from chahâr, "four", with the ordinal ending -om (EtymDB); chahâr is inherited, from Middle Persian čahār (EtymDB).

Your turn

- Say it: chahârom — fourth
- Build: panj + -om → panjom, fifth
- Build: dah + -om → dahom, tenth

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: چهارم; Omniglot, Numbers in Persian.

20.4 Payoff — which one

Count one to twenty. Read it: ۷, ۱۲ and ۱۰۰

Your turn

1. Say the first four in order, then out of order.
2. Build, do not recall: fifth, seventh, tenth, twentieth, hundredth, from the cardinals and the ending.
3. Say which one of the whole series is not built that way, and where it came from.
4. Write it: اول and سوم from memory — both are made entirely of letters the script chapter taught
5. Use one: name the floor a room is on, and the day of the month a notice gives.

Before you move on

Chapter 21

Reading — Words, Answers, and the Figures

Modes: 👁 eyes (3) 🎧 Hands-free start: none of the 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read a Persian word, an answer and a figure off a page, without anyone saying them first.
> The ten digits read as amounts rather than drawn as shapes — the first Persian a traveller can take off a page without knowing a single letter.

21.1 (reading) — six words, nothing said first

You have written every letter in every one of these. Not one word is new, and not one shape inside them is new either.

What is new is that nobody says them before you read them.

Read this

ماه نان نه بله ممنون سلام

Read down the list once. Do not take each word apart — look at the whole shape and let it arrive.
Again, and notice which came at once and which you had to unpick. Both are fine. The difference is what practice removes.

What to know first

Persian joins its letters, so a word is not five shapes standing in a row. It is one shape.

That is why reading a word cold is a different skill from writing it. Writing, you make the joins one at a time and know what is coming. Reading, the joins are already made and the whole word has to land at once.

Look at نان and نه. Both open with the same letter, and the difference is at the end, which is exactly where a reader is most likely to stop looking.

Your turn

- Say it: the six words down the list, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
Which two open with the same letter? (نان and نه.)

21.2 (reading) — the answers, on the page

The last lesson gave you six words. These are six you would answer with.

Nothing here is new. What is new is meeting them where nobody is speaking.

Read this

سوم اول سلام ممنون نه بله

Read it: the six lines down once, without stopping
Read it: the six lines again, and notice the list changes halfway
The first four are things you say to a person. The last two are things you read off a door.

What to know first

اول and سوم are the two you are most likely to meet written before you ever meet them spoken: a floor, a platform, a queue.

That is the argument for reading them now. An answer you can only recognise by ear is one you can only give when somebody asks out loud. The same words on a sign do not wait for you.

Six lines, and the last two are the ones a street will hand you first.

Your turn

- Say it: the six lines, once, in order, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
Which two would you read off a door? (اول and سوم.)

21.3 (reading) — the figures

Six words, then six answers. These are not words at all.

You drew every one of them. Reading them is the same ten signs coming the other way.

Read this

۰ ۱ ۲ ۳ ۴ ۵ ۶ ۷ ۸ ۹ ۱۰ ۲۰ ۱۰۰

Read it: across each line once, without stopping
Read it: the lines again, and this time take the last three as amounts rather than as signs
Ten. Twenty. A hundred.

What to know first

These ten signs are the only Persian most travellers read before they read any word at all. A price, a floor, a platform, a phone number: none of them waits for you to know the letters.

Notice also which way they run. The digits go left to right inside a number even though the words around them run right to left, so ۱۰۰ is a one and two zeros in the order you already expect.

That is the whole trick, and it is why a figure is the first thing a reader can take from a Persian page.

Your turn

- Say it: the six lines aloud, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the ten signs were new? (None.)
Which way does a Persian number run? (Left to right, inside a line that runs the other way.)

Chapter 22

Letters That Never Join Forward

22.1 ر (re) — the letter that ends چطور

Before the new one: write ه and و once each, and name them.

Now say چطور (chetor), "how". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ر

ر — re, the sound r.

It ends چطور (chetor), "how", from "how are you?". ر is a non-connector, like ا and و, which you already write: it joins the letter before it but never the one after, so a small gap always follows it.

Writing: ر

How ر is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: begin at the upper tip and descend through the short stroke
- 2. without lifting, sweep left through the lower curve — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 0. The pen never leaves the paper.

- Write it: و, then ر, from memory
- Read it: چطور aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ر? (re, r.) Which word did it come from? (چطور, chetor, "how".)

22.2 ز (ze) — the letter that opens زبان

Before the new one: write و and ر once each, and name them.

Now say زبان (zabân), "language". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ز

ز — ze, the sound z.

It opens زبان (zabân), "language", the thing you are learning. It is ر, from the last lesson, with one dot above, and like ر it never joins the letter after it.

Writing: ز

How ز is written, stroke by stroke

- 2. without lifting, sweep left through the lower curve
- 3. lift once, then place the dot above — and only now lift

22.3 د (dâl) — the letter inside خدا

Before the new one: write ر and ز once each, and name them.

Now say خدا (khodâ), "God". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: د

د — dâl, the sound d.

It is inside خدا (khodâ), the first half of the farewell حافظ خدا. It is the third letter that never joins forward: after د, as after ر and ا, the pen lifts and the next letter starts fresh.

23.1 ح (he-ye jimi) — the letter that opens حال

Before the new one: write ز and د once each, and name them.

Now say حال (hâl), "state, how you are". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ح

ح — he-ye jimi, the sound h.

It opens حال (hâl), the "how you are" in چطور حالت است؟. Persian already has an h, ه, which you write; this second one came in with Arabic words and sounds the same. Its name, he-ye jimi, means "the h shaped like jim": a short head and a deep bowl, with no dots.

Now say پنج (panj), "five". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ج

ج — jim, the sound j.

It ends پنج (panj), "five". It is ح, from the last lesson, with one dot below the head.

Writing: ج

Put your pen on ج and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at پنج and point at ج inside it
- Trace it: ج three times, saying j as you finish each one
- Write it: ح, then ج, from memory
- Read it: پنج aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ج? (jim, j.) Which word did it come from? (پنج, panj, "five".)

23.3 خ (khe) — the letter that opens خدا

Before the new one: write ح and ج once each, and name them.

Now say خدا (khodâ), "God". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: خ

خ — khe, a kh scraped at the back of the throat.

It opens خدا (khodâ). The same head and bowl as ح, with one dot above. One skeleton, and the dot decides the sound.

Writing: خ

How it is written — 2 strokes · 1 pen lift · 3 movements

- Read it: خدا aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — خ? (khe, kh.) Which word did it come from? (خدا, khodâ, "God".)

23.4 چ (che) — the letter that opens چیست

Before the new one: write ج and خ once each, and name them.

Now say چیست (chist), "what is?". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: چ

چ — che, the sound ch.

It opens چیست (chist), "what is?", one of your first questions. It is one of the four letters Persian added to the Arabic alphabet: the same skeleton as ح, with three dots below.

Writing: چ

How چ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: draw the short upper head from left to right
- 2. continue down and around the deep bowl without lifting
- 3. lift, then place the lower-left dot
- 4. lift again and place the lower-right dot
- 5. lift again and place the lower-center dot — and only now lift

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 24: I can write pe, ye, kaf and gaf, and find each one in a word I already say.

24.1 پ (pe) — the letter that opens پرسیدن

Before the new one: write خ and چ once each, and name them.

Now say پرسیدن (porsidan), "to ask". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: پ

پ — pe, the sound p.

It opens پرسیدن (porsidan), "to ask". It is ب with three dots below instead of one, another letter Persian added to the Arabic alphabet, because Arabic has no p.

Writing: پ

How پ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: sweep the shallow bowl from right to left
- 2. lift, then place the left dot below
- 3. lift again and place the right dot below
- 4. lift again and place the lower-center dot — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 3.

- Read it: پرسیدن aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — پ? (pe, p.) Which word did it come from? (پرسیدن, porsidan, "to ask".)

24.2 ی (ye) — the letter inside چیست

Before the new one: write چ and پ once each, and name them.

Now say چیست (chist), "what is?". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ی

ی — ye, the sound y, or a long i.

It is inside چیست (chist), where it gives the long i. Persian ی changes its coat by position: two dots below at the start or in the middle of a word, and no dots when it ends a word or stands alone, which is the shape this lesson writes.

Writing: ی

How ی is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: sweep left from the upper right and descend through the S curve
- 2. continue around the below-baseline bowl and finish at its rising tip without lifting — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 0. The pen never leaves the paper.

24.3 ک (kâf) — the letter inside فکر کردن

Before the new one: write پ and ی once each, and name them.

Now say فکر کردن (fekr kardan), "to think". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ک

ک — kâf, the sound k.

It is in both halves of فکر کردن (fekr kardan), "to think". A tall stem, a shallow bowl, and one slash across the top.

Writing: ک

24.4 گ (gâf) — the letter that opens گفتن

Before the new one: write ی and ک once each, and name them.

Now say گفتن (goftan), "to say". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: گ

گ — gâf, the sound g.

It opens گفتن (goftan), "to say". It is ک, from the last lesson, with a second slash above the first, the last of Persian's four added letters you will write here.

Writing: گ

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 25: I can write shin, sad, ta and za, and say which letter I already know sounds the same.

25.1 ش (shin) — the letter that opens شما

Before the new one: write ک and گ once each, and name them.

Now say شما (shomâ), "you (respectful)". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ش

ش — shin, the sound sh.

It opens شما (shomâ), the respectful "you". It is س, which you already write, with three dots above.

Writing: ش

How ش is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: form the three teeth from right to left
- 2. flow into the final bowl without lifting
- 3. lift, then place the lower-left dot
- 4. lift again and place the lower-right dot
- 5. lift again and place the centered upper dot — and only now lift

- Trace it: ش three times, saying sh as you finish each one
- Write it: گ, then ش, from memory
- Read it: شما aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ش? (shin, sh.) Which word did it come from? (شما, shomâ, "you (respectful)".)

25.2 ص (sâd) — the letter that opens صد

Before the new one: write گ and ش once each, and name them.

Now say صد (sad), "a hundred". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ص

ص — sâd, the sound s.

It opens صد (sad), "a hundred". In Persian it sounds exactly like س: the two letters are spelled differently and said the same, because ص came in with Arabic words and kept its Arabic spelling. The letter is a closed oval with a bowl after it.

Writing: ص

Put your pen on ص and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ص? (sâd, s.) Which word did it come from? (صد, sad, "a hundred".)

25.3 ط (tâ) — the letter inside چطور

Before the new one: write ش and ص once each, and name them.

Now say چطور (chetor), "how". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ط

ط — tâ, the sound t.

It is inside چطور (chetor), "how". Like ص, it sounds exactly like a letter you know, here ت. A closed oval on the line and a tall upright drawn from the top down.

Writing: ط

How it is written — 2 strokes · 1 pen lift · 3 movements

Which letter is this — ط? (tâ, t.) Which word did it come from? (چطور, chetor, "how".)

25.4 ظ (zâ) — the letter that ends حافظ

Before the new one: write ص and ط once each, and name them.

Now say حافظ (hâfez), "guardian". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ظ

ظ — zâ, the sound z.

It ends حافظ (hâfez), the second half of حافظ خدا. It is ط with one dot above, and in Persian it sounds exactly like ز.

Writing: ظ

How ظ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: loop counterclockwise around the closed oval
- 2. finish left along the baseline without lifting
- 3. lift once, then draw the tall upright top-to-bottom
- 4. lift again, then place the upper dot — and only now lift

26.1 ف (fe) — the letter that opens فکر

Before the new one: write ط and ظ once each, and name them.

Now say فکر کردن (fekr kardan), "to think". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ف

ف — fe, the sound f.

It opens فکر (fekr), "thought", in فکر کردن. A small closed head on a broad bowl, with one dot above.

Writing: ف

26.2 ق (ghâf) — the letter inside خوشوقتم

Before the new one: write ظ and ف once each, and name them.

Now say خوشوقتم (khoshvaghtam), "pleased to meet you". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ق

ق — ghâf, a gh made far back in the throat.

It is inside خوشوقتم (khoshvaghtam), "pleased to meet you". Its head is the head of ف, from the last lesson, but it carries two dots, and standing alone its bowl dips below the line.

Writing: ق

How ق is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: loop counterclockwise around the small closed head

- 2. continue down and left through the deep bowl without lifting
- 3. lift once, then place the upper-right dot
- 4. lift again, then place the upper-left dot — and only now lift

Which letter is this — ق? (ghâf, gh.) Which word did it come from? (خوشوقتم, khoshvaghtam, "pleased to meet you".)

26.3 آ (alef-e madd) — the alef that opens آمدن

Before the new one: write ف and ق once each, and name them.

Now say آمدن (âmadan), "to come". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: آ

آ — alef with a madd, the long â at the start of a word.

It opens آمدن (âmadan), "to come". It is ا, which you already write, wearing a small wavy hat. A plain ا at the start of a word says a short a; the hat makes it a long â.

Writing: آ

Put your pen on آ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Chapter 27

Head, Ear, Nose, Mouth, Tooth

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say the head, an ear, a nose, a mouth and a tooth.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 27: I can say the head, an ear, a nose, a mouth and a tooth.

27.1 سر (sar) — the head

Before the new one: say the Persian for first, then the Persian for fourth.

You'll want to know: سر

سر — sar — "the head".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sar is a native Persian word, inherited rather than borrowed: it continues Middle Persian sar, "head" (EtymDB). EtymDB takes it further back to Proto-Iranian sarah-*, "head". (EtymDB also lists Arabic sirr, "secret", but that is a different word that happens to look alike.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sar
- Say it: sar, once more
- Say it: say sar
- Recall: say the Persian for first, then the Persian for fourth, then say sar again

Before you move on

What does سر mean? ("The head".) Say it once more.

27.2 گوش (gush) — an ear

Before the new one: say the Persian for fourth, then the Persian for the head.

You'll want to know: گوش

گوش — gush — "an ear".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gush is a native Persian word, inherited rather than borrowed: it continues Middle Persian gōš, "ear" (EtymDB). Old Persian had gauša-, "ear" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gush
- Say it: gush, once more
- Say it: say gush
- Recall: say the Persian for fourth, then the Persian for the head, then say gush again

Before you move on

What does گوش mean? ("An ear".) Say it once more.

27.3 بینی (bini) — a nose

Before the new one: say the Persian for the head, then the Persian for an ear.

You'll want to know: بینی

بینی — bini — "a nose".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bini is a native Persian word, inherited rather than borrowed: it continues Middle Persian wēnīg, "nose" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bini
- Say it: bini, once more
- Say it: say bini
- Recall: say the Persian for the head, then the Persian for an ear, then say bini again

Before you move on

What does بینی mean? ("A nose".) Say it once more.

27.4 دهان (dahân) — a mouth

Before the new one: say the Persian for an ear, then the Persian for a nose.

You'll want to know: دهان

دهان — dahân — "a mouth".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dahân is a native Persian word, inherited rather than borrowed; it is usually traced to Middle Persian dahān, "mouth".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dahân
- Say it: dahân, once more
- Say it: say dahân
- Recall: say the Persian for an ear, then the Persian for a nose, then say dahân again

Before you move on

What does دهان mean? ("A mouth".) Say it once more.

27.5 دندان (dandân) — a tooth

Before the new one: say the Persian for a nose, then the Persian for a mouth.

You'll want to know: دندان

دندان — dandân — "a tooth".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dandân is a native Persian word, inherited rather than borrowed: it continues Middle Persian dandān, "tooth" (EtymDB). EtymDB takes it back to the Indo-European word for "tooth", h₃dónts*, the same word behind Latin dens and English tooth.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dandân
- Say it: dandân, once more
- Say it: say dandân
- Recall: say the Persian for a nose, then the Persian for a mouth, then say dandân again

Before you move on

What does دندان mean? ("A tooth".) Say it once more.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say noon, the day before yesterday, tonight, last night and time.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 79: I can say noon, the day before yesterday, tonight, last night and time.

79.1 ظهر (zohr) — noon, midday

Before the new one: say the Persian for a country, then the Persian for a story.

You'll want to know: ظهر

ظهر — zohr — "noon, midday".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

zohr is borrowed from Arabic ẓuhr, "noon". Its Arabic root is ẓ-h-r (Lane).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: zohr
- Say it: zohr, once more
- Say it: say zohr
- Recall: say the Persian for a country, then the Persian for a story, then say zohr again

Before you move on

What does ظهر mean? ("Noon, midday".) Say it once more.

79.2 پریروز (pariruz) — the day before yesterday

Before the new one: say the Persian for a story, then the Persian for noon.

You'll want to know: پریروز

پریروز — pariruz — "the day before yesterday".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pariruz is pari-, "before", with ruz, "day". ruz continues Middle Persian rōz (EtymDB), and pari- is usually traced to an old prefix meaning "before".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pariruz
- Say it: pariruz, once more
- Say it: say pariruz
- Recall: say the Persian for a story, then the Persian for noon, then say pariruz again

Before you move on

What does پریروز mean? ("The day before yesterday".) Say it once more.

79.3 امشب (emshab) — tonight

Before the new one: say the Persian for noon, then the Persian for the day before yesterday.

You'll want to know: امشب

امشب — emshab — "tonight".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

emshab is em-, "this", with shab, "night": "this night". Both are native Persian; shab is usually traced to Middle Persian šab.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: emshab
- Say it: emshab, once more
- Say it: say emshab
- Recall: say the Persian for noon, then the Persian for the day before yesterday, then say emshab again

What does پستچی mean? ("A postman".) Say it once more.

284.4 کتابدار (ketâbdâr) — a librarian

Before the new one: say the Persian for a hairdresser, then the Persian for a postman.

You'll want to know: کتابدار

کتابدار — ketâbdâr — "a librarian".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ketâbdâr is ketâb, "book", with -dâr, "holder": the book-keeper. ketâb is borrowed from Arabic kitāb (root k-t-b, Lane); -dâr is native Persian.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ketâbdâr
- Say it: ketâbdâr, once more
- Say it: say ketâbdâr

What does کتابدار mean? ("A librarian".) Say it once more.

284.5 حسابدار (hesâbdâr) — an accountant

Before the new one: say the Persian for a postman, then the Persian for a librarian.

You'll want to know: حسابدار

حسابدار — hesâbdâr — "an accountant".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

hesâbdâr is hesâb, "account", with -dâr, "holder": the account-keeper. hesâb is borrowed from Arabic ḥisāb, "reckoning" (root ḥ-s-b, Lane); -dâr is native.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hesâbdâr
- Say it: hesâbdâr, once more
- Say it: say hesâbdâr
- Recall: say the Persian for a postman, then the Persian for a librarian, then say hesâbdâr again

285.1 فیزیک (fizik) — physics

Before the new one: say the Persian for a librarian, then the Persian for an accountant.

You'll want to know: فیزیک

فیزیک — fizik — "physics".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fizik is a loan, usually traced to French physique, "physics".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fizik

What does فیزیک mean? ("Physics".) Say it once more.

285.2 شیمی (shimi) — chemistry

Before the new one: say the Persian for an accountant, then the Persian for physics.

You'll want to know: شیمی

شیمی — shimi — "chemistry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

shimi is borrowed from French chimie, "chemistry" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: shimi
- Say it: shimi, once more
- Say it: say shimi

What does شیمی mean? ("Chemistry".) Say it once more.

285.3 ادبیات (adabiyât) — literature

Before the new one: say the Persian for physics, then the Persian for chemistry.

You'll want to know: ادبیات

ادبیات — adabiyât — "literature".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

adabiyât is borrowed from Arabic adabiyyāt, "literature, letters". Its Arabic root is ʾ-d-b (Lane).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: adabiyât

285.4 انگلیسی (engelisi) — English (the language)

Before the new one: say the Persian for chemistry, then the Persian for literature.

You'll want to know: انگلیسی

انگلیسی — engelisi — "English (the language)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

engelisi is Engelis, "England, the English", with the ending -i. Engelis is a loan from European languages, whose name for the English appears as French anglais and Italian inglese; which one passed it to Persian is not certain.

What you've built

What does انگلیسی mean? ("English (the language)".) Say it once more.

285.5 هندسه (hendese) — geometry

Before the new one: say the Persian for literature, then the Persian for English.

You'll want to know: هندسه

هندسه — hendese — "geometry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

hendese is borrowed from Arabic handasa, “geometry”, which EtymDB traces back to Persian andâze, “measure”: a Persian word home again from Arabic.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hendese

286.1 خشکشویی (khoshkshuyi) — a dry cleaner's

Before the new one: say the Persian for English, then the Persian for geometry.

You'll want to know: خشکشویی

خشکشویی — khoshkshuyi — "a dry cleaner's".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

khoshkshuyi is built from khoshk, "dry", shu, "washing", and -i: the dry-washing shop. khoshk is inherited, usually traced to Middle Persian xušk.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

286.2 پیشخوان (pishkhân) — a counter

Before the new one: say the Persian for geometry, then the Persian for a dry cleaner's.

You'll want to know: پیشخوان

پیشخوان — pishkhân — "a counter".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pishkhân is built from pish, "front", and khân, "table, tray": the table in front. pish is inherited, usually traced to Middle Persian pēš.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

286.5 خودپرداز (khodpardâz) — a cash machine

Before the new one: say the Persian for a cashier, then the Persian for an invoice.

You'll want to know: خودپرداز

خودپرداز — khodpardâz — "a cash machine".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

khodpardâz is built from khod, "self", and pardâz, "paying" (from pardâkhtan, "to pay"): the self-payer, a modern Persian coinage. pardâkhtan is inherited, usually traced to Middle Persian pardāxtan.

Chapter 287

Writing — My Own Line

Modes: ✓ pen (1) Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can write one line of Persian about myself from words I know, with no model to copy, and check every dot before anything else.
> Complete FA-W287-khat-e-khodam: one line chosen rather than copied, with the dots checked letter by letter.

287.1 My own line — the first Persian writing with no model

Everything you have written so far had something to reach for: a letter to trace, a word to copy, a voice to take down.

This does not. You choose the words, from a supply that is closed: only what this book has taught you.

Writing — controlled composition

Write one line about yourself in Persian script, right to left: your name, and how you are today. Every dot and every join is now yours to place.

There is no Persian model, word bank, or romanization on this page. Choose the pieces yourself and put them in Persian order. If your name needs a letter you have not yet written, write the rest and check only the letters you own. This first composition is untimed: finish the line before you look back at any earlier lesson.

Your turn — check the dots first

Copying hid a decision from you, because the model always had the right dots. In Persian script a dot is part of the letter, not a mark on top of it. ب and پ share one body: one dot below, or three. Move a dot or drop one and you have written a different letter, and often a different word.

And ی changes its coat: two dots below at the start or in the middle of a word, and no dots when it ends one. Your line may end a word on it.

Read your line back, letter by letter, and count the dots on each one before you check anything else. Repair the first wrong dot, then write the whole line once more from meaning.

Before you move on

What separates ب from پ? (Only the dots: one below, or three below.)
How many dots does ی carry at the end of a word? (None.)
One chosen line closes this writing rung. It does not prove A1 attainment, readiness, human validation, or completion of the timed writing task that comes next.

Chapter 288

Writing — With A Clock

Modes: ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can fill in a short practical form in Persian script against a three-minute clock, and I know what this track's A1 writing paper asks for.
> Complete FA-W288-ba-saat: all six form fields in Persian script before the three-minute timer rings, then stop.

288.1 The same writing, with a clock

You wrote your own line with as long as you liked. A task you can only do untimed is not yet a task you can do.

This page will not show you any copyable Persian answer. Put away the earlier lessons, romanization, dictionaries, translators, and spell-checkers.

You'll want to know — what the A1 paper is

This book found no widely used international A1 writing paper for Persian. SAMFA, the Iranian exam this book names as its far destination, is one academic test: its writing section is two essays in one hour, and the provider notice this book checked maps it to no CEFR level at all. So there is no SAMFA A1 paper to rehearse.

This book's A1 writing paper is therefore its own, modelled on what the Council of Europe's framework expects of A1 writing: a form with personal details, and a short, simple message. It runs 20 minutes: a practical form, then a 30 to 40 word Persian message to a named reader. Today you rehearse the form, for three minutes.

Writing — timed assessment production

One practical form — three minutes

Set a three-minute timer. Complete all six fields in Persian script for a new neighbourhood reading group. Write one short answer in every field, right to left. Start the timer when you begin the first field; leave any unfinished field as evidence when it rings.

1. Your name
2. How you are today
3. One person in your family
4. One drink you would like at the meeting
5. One thing you will bring
6. A goodbye

When the three-minute timer rings, stop. Record the number of completed fields. An honest short attempt is more useful than a perfect untimed one.

Before you move on

Spend at most one minute looking at this first attempt. Check the dots and the joins in one field, note one field to practise next, and do not rewrite the timed answer. Keep the page as evidence.

One fact about the full assessment changes how you study. Its four papers are each out of 100, and you need 60 on every one in the same sitting. Nothing averages: strong reading cannot carry weak writing. And one of writing's four scored dimensions is Persian orthographic control, so a missing dot costs marks.

This checkpoint is not the complete A1 writing paper, which still needs its mocks, rubric, calibration, and human review. It does not establish A1 attainment, readiness, completeness, or human validation.

Chapter 289

Writing — Four Lines, And The Gap Inside A Word

Modes: ✓ pen (1) Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can write four connected lines of Persian to a named reader, setting one thing against another with vali and giving a reason with chon.
> Complete FA-W289-chahar-khat: four lines to one reader, at least one with vali and one with chon, then check the spacing around every vav.

289.1 Four lines, and the gap that sits inside a word

The last lesson asked for writing finished on time. This one asks for writing that holds together.

Pick one person who will read it: a friend, by name.

You'll want to know — two joiners, one letter that will not join

Connected writing is not longer writing. Four short lines can be connected; one long line can fail to be. What makes it connected is that a sentence stops standing on its own.

You hold two joiners. ولی sets one thing against another. چون gives the reason.

And both of them carry و, the letter that takes the hand of the letter on its right and offers nothing to the left. So each word breaks open after it: و then لی, and چو then ن. A Persian word can have a gap inside it.

That makes your spacing part of the spelling. The gap between words has to be clearly wider than the break inside one. Make them equal and a reader cannot tell whether ولی is one word or two.

Writing — connected composition

Write four lines to the person you picked, right to left.

At least one line must use ولی. At least one must use چون to give a reason.

Use only words you already write. This lesson adds no vocabulary; the whole exercise is the joining, and a simpler familiar line is better than an invented one. This attempt is untimed.

Before you move on

Cover your first line and read the second alone. Does it still make complete sense without the first? If it does, you wrote a list, like the form one lesson ago.
Then find every و you wrote. Is the break after it smaller than the space between your words? It should be.
Four untimed lines close this writing rung. They are not the 30 to 40 word message of the full A1 paper, and they do not prove A1 attainment, readiness, or human validation.

Chapter 290

The Past, Seen Two Ways

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I do now, what I did, and what was going on, setting a scene in the mi- past and dropping events into it with the plain past.
> Complete FA-R290-the-past-two-ways: a scene in the mi- past and an event that cuts into it, joined with dar hali ke.

290.1 میروم (miravam) — the present tense, built from the stem you stored

Give the pair for "to go": the infinitive, then its present stem. (Raftan, rav-.) Then the present stem of kardan. (Kon-.)

Chapter six asked you to store those stems before there was a tense to run them on. This lesson is the tense.

Grammar Lens: three pieces, in one order

A Persian present is three pieces: mi-, then the present stem, then an ending for the person.

mi- + rav + -am → میروم — miravam — I go, I'm going

The endings are the six chapter seven named: -am, -i, -ad, -im, -id, -and. So: miravam, I go; miravi, you go; miravad, he or she goes; miravim, we go; miravid, you go, to several people or politely; miravand, they go.

The pronouns are man, to, u for "he" or "she", mâ for "we", shomâ and ânhâ. The ending already says who, so میروم is a whole sentence. Any stored stem works the same way: mikonam, I do; mikhânam, I read; midânam, I know. A compound verb keeps its noun in front, فکر میکنم, fekr mikonam, "I think".
One tense covers "I go", "I'm going" and often "I'll go": میروم فردا — fardâ miravam — I'm going tomorrow.
Printed Persian often sets می off with a narrow break. This book writes it joined to the verb, میروم, and it is read the same either way.

Grammar Lens: ne-, and the verb that refuses mi-

"Not" is ne-, in front of everything: نمیروم, nemiravam, I'm not going; نمیدانم, nemidânam, I don't know.
Dâshtan, "to have", takes no mi- in this tense: دارم, dâram, I have, and dust dâram, I like. Its "not" is na-: nadâram, dust nadâram. A few compounds on dâshtan do take it, such as negah dâshtan, "to keep": negah midâram.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Histories of Persian usually trace mi- to an older adverb, hamē, "continually", once a word of its own in front of the verb. EtymDB has no entry for the prefix, so this is the usual account rather than a sourced one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- miravam, miravi, miravad, then miravim, miravid, miravand
- "I know", then "I don't know" — midânam, nemidânam
- "I'm going tomorrow" — fardâ miravam
- "I like", then "I don't like" — dust dâram, dust nadâram

Before you move on

What are the three pieces of a present? (Mi-, the present stem, an ending.) "We go"? (Miravim.) "I think"? (Fekr mikonam.) "I'm not going"? (Nemiravam.) Which verb leaves mi- off? (Dâshtan: dâram.)

290.2 رفتم (raftam) — the past, and the mark on an object you mean

Say "I'm going", then "I'm not going". (Miravam, nemiravam.)

Now move it to yesterday. The past needs no new stem at all: the infinitive already holds it.

Grammar Lens: the past stem, and the same endings

Take an infinitive and drop its -an: raftan gives رفت, raft, the past stem chapter six named. Add the endings you know, with one change: "he" or "she" takes no ending at all.

رفتم — raftam, I went · rafti, you went · raft, she went · raftim, we went · raftid, you went · raftand, they went

Every verb gives up its past stem this way, -tan and -dan alike: budan, budam, I was, and bud, it was; khordan, khordam, I ate; didan, didam, I saw. "Not" here is na-: naraftam, I didn't go.

رفتم خانه به دیروز. — diruz be khâne raftam — Yesterday I went home.

Be is "to". The verb comes last, and the time usually comes first.

Grammar Lens: râ, for the one you mean

دیدم را فیلم. — film râ didam — I saw the film.

را, râ, follows an object that is a particular one, the film both of you have in mind. Leave it out and the object is any film: film didam, "I watched a film". خواندم را کتاب, ketâb râ khândam: I read the book.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Grammars of Persian usually trace the -t or -d at the end of a past stem to an old participle ending, so raft first meant "gone" and kard, "done". Old Persian kṛta, "done", is usually given as the older shape of kard. That is why the stem stands alone for "she went": raft is "gone" with nobody added.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- raftam, rafti, raft, then raftim, raftid, raftand
- "Yesterday I went home" — diruz be khâne raftam
- "I saw the film", then its "not" — film râ didam, film râ nadidam
- "I was", then "it was" — budam, bud

Before you move on

How do you find a past stem? (Drop the -an of the infinitive.) "I ate"? (Khordam.) Which person takes no ending? ("He" or "she": raft.) What does râ tell you? (That the object is a particular one.)

290.3 گذشته (gozashte) — last year, last month, and the past itself

Say "I went", then "we went". (Raftam, raftim.) Then the one word for "last year". (Pârsâl.)

Pârsâl works only for the year. For last month and last week, Persian has one word that fits them all.

You'll want to know: گذشته

گذشته — gozashte — "last", of a stretch of time, and "the past".

It follows its noun with the ezafe, the same -e as in esm-e man:

رفتم تهران به گذشته سال. — sâl-e gozashte be Tehrân raftam —
Last year I went to Tehran.

So mâh-e gozashte is "last month", and hafte-ye gozashte is "last week": after a final vowel the ezafe is said -ye, and after a final -e, as here, plain print often leaves it unwritten, هفته گذشته.

Standing alone it is a noun: در گذشته, dar gozashte, "in the past".

Say it in three beats, go-zash-te. Its second letter is one you have not written yet. The next lesson takes it out and puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gozashte is a past stem with -e on the end, the way Persian makes a participle: گذشت, gozasht, the past stem of the verb "to pass", and then -e: "passed", the time that has gone by. Rafte, "gone", is built the same way from raft.
EtymDB takes that verb back to a Middle Persian one, written wtštn' in Pahlavi letters, "to pass, to cross". It records no older parent, so no English cousin is claimed here.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- gozashte, slowly, then at speed — go-zash-te
- "Last year I went to Tehran" — sâl-e gozashte be Tehrân raftam
- "last month", then "last week" — mâh-e gozashte, hafte-ye gozashte
- "in the past" — dar gozashte

Before you move on

"Last month"? (Mâh-e gozashte.) What does gozashte mean, taken apart? (Passed: the past stem gozasht with -e.) Which word still does the same job for the year alone? (Pârsâl.)

290.4 ذ (zâl) — the letter inside گذشته

Before the new one: write د and ز once each, and name them.

> Now say گذشته (gozashte), "last", as in sâl-e gozashte. You met it a moment ago. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ذ

ذ — zâl, the sound z.

It is the second letter of گذشته, straight after گ. It is د with one dot above, and like د it takes the hand of the letter on its right and offers nothing to the left: after ذ the pen lifts, and شته starts fresh.

You now hold three ways to write z: ز, ظ, and ذ. Persian says them the same. Most words with ذ came from Arabic; گذشته is one of a few Persian words that kept it. The usual explanation is that early New Persian softened a d after a vowel towards the th of English this, and scribes wrote that sound with ذ.

Writing: ذ

Put your pen on ذ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ذ inside گذشته
- Trace it: ذ three times, saying z as you finish each one
- Write it: د, then ذ, from memory
- Write it: گذشته, with the break after ذ
- Read it: گذشته aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ذ? (zâl, z.) Which word did it come from? (گذشته, gozashte, "last".) What is the difference between د and ذ? (One dot above.)

290.5 میرفتم (miraftam) — the past that is still running

Say "I'm going", then "I went". (Miravam, raftam.)

Raftam has an edge: the going happened, and it is over. Persian has a second past with no edge on it, and a story needs both.

Grammar Lens: mi- on the past stem

Put the mi- of the present onto the past stem, and keep the past endings:

> mi- + raft + -am → میرفتم — miraftam — I was going; I used to go

So mikhândam, I was reading; mikhordam, I was eating; nemiraftam, I wasn't going. "She" again takes no ending: miraft, she was going.
It answers two English shapes. "Was -ing": the action was under way. "Used to": it happened again and again.

> هر روز به مدرسه میرفتم. — har ruz be madrese miraftam — Every day I used to go to school.

Budan normally takes no mi- in the past. Bud is already the background: هوا سرد بود, havâ sard bud, it was cold.

Grammar Lens: the scene, and the events

A told story splits its verbs in two. The mi- past paints the scene: what was going on, what things were like. The plain past drops the events into it: what happened next.

> در حالی که کتاب میخواندم، تلفن زنگ زد. — dar hâli ke ketâb mikhândam, telefon zang zad — While I was reading a book, the phone rang.

The reading is scene, still running when the ring cuts into it. The ring is an event, over in a moment. Dar hâli ke, "while", is the joint between them.

هوا سرد بود و خورشید میتابید. — havâ sard bud va khorshid mitâbid — It was cold, and the sun was shining.

Two pieces of scene, and nothing has happened yet. That is how a story opens.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- miraftam, mirafti, miraft — then raftam, the one with an edge
- "Every day I used to go to school" — har ruz be madrese miraftam
- dar hâli ke ketâb mikhândam, telefon zang zad
- a scene for last year — sâl-e gozashte havâ sard bud

Before you move on

How do you build "I was reading"? (Mi- on the past stem: mikhândam.) In the phone sentence, which verb is the scene? (Mikhândam, still running.) Which is the event? (Zang zad, over in a moment.) Why is there no mi- in havâ sard bud? (Budan normally takes none: bud is already background.)

290.6 Review — the scene, and what cut into it

Say "I read" for today, then for yesterday. (Mikhânam, khândam.) Then "I was reading". (Mikhândam.)

What you've built

Four lessons, and three tenses from two stems. The present stem with mi-: miravam, I go. The past stem alone: raftam, I went, an event with an edge. The past stem with mi-: miraftam, I was going, the scene. And ne- or na- in front for "not".

Gozashte sets the time, and râ marks the object you mean:

> هفته گذشته فیلم را دیدم. — hafte-ye gozashte film râ didam — Last week I saw the film.

And dar hâli ke joins a scene to the event that cut into it:

> در حالی که فیلم را میدیدم، تلفن زنگ زد. — dar hâli ke film râ mididam, telefon zang zad — While I was watching the film, the phone rang.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a scene in two — havâ sard bud. ketâb mikhândam.
- "Last week I saw the film" — hafte-ye gozashte film râ didam
- dar hâli ke film râ mididam, telefon zang zad
- one of your own: dar hâli ke with a mi- past, then one thing that happened

Before you move on

After dar hâli ke, which past? (The mi- past, the scene.) Which past has an edge? (The plain one: didam.) "Last month"? (Mâh-e gozashte.) Which letter in گذشته is new to your hand? (ذ, zâl.)

Chapter 291

Then, And In The End — A Story In Order

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell a short story in order with avval, ba'd and dar akhar, join events with vaqti, and read a connected story of about a hundred words.
> Complete FA-R291-a-story-in-order: retell a short trip in order, with a scene, two events and an ending.

291.1 کردن تعریف (ta'rif kardan) — to tell what happened

Say "a story", then "I was reading". (Dâstân, mikhândam.)

Chapter two hundred and ninety gave you the two pasts a story is made of. This is the verb for telling one.

You'll want to know: کردن تعریف

کردن تعریف — ta'rif kardan — "to tell", of a story or of what happened.

> کرد تعریف را سفر داستان او. — u dâstân-e safar râ ta'rif kard — She told the story of the trip.

It runs on kardan, so the tenses come for free: ta'rif mikonam, I tell; ta'rif kardam, I told; ta'rif mikardam, I was telling.

Put az, "from", in front of a thing and the verb turns to praise: هتل از کرد تعریف, az hotel ta'rif kard, "he spoke well of the hotel".

Say it ta'-rif, with a small catch after ta, as if the word drew breath. That catch is a letter of its own, and the next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ta'rif is borrowed from Arabic ta^{c}rīf (EtymDB 2.1). It is usually explained as "making known", a noun on the root ^{c}-r-f of Arabic ^{c}arafa, "to know". Kardan is the Persian verb "to do" from chapter seven. So ta'rif kardan is "to do a making-known": you tell a story, and now the listener knows it. To praise a hotel is to make its good side known.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ta'rif kardan, with the catch — ta'-rif
- "She told the story of the trip" — u dâstân-e safar râ ta'rif kard
- "I tell", "I told", "I was telling" — ta'rif mikonam, ta'rif kardam, ta'rif mikardam
- "He spoke well of the hotel" — az hotel ta'rif kard

Before you move on

"To tell a story"? (Dâstân ta'rif kardan.) What changes when az comes in front? (It becomes to speak well of.) Which Arabic root is inside ta'rif? (^{c}-r-f, "to know".)

291.2 ع ('eyn) — the catch inside تعریف

Before the new one: write ت and ر once each, and name them.

Now say کردن تعریف (ta'rif kardan), "to tell". You met it a moment ago. This lesson takes the catch out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ع

ع — 'eyn, the small catch written ' in this book's romanization.

It is the second letter of تعریف, straight after ت. In Persian it is a light stop in the throat, ta'-rif, or no more than a slightly longer vowel before it. Arabic says it deeper in the throat; Persian does not.

It changes shape more than most letters. At the start of a word it is an open hook, عـ. In the middle it closes into a small flat loop, ـعـ, which is the shape inside تعریف. Standing alone, ع, the hook sits on a tail that curls down below the line.

Almost every Persian word with ع came from Arabic, and Persian has thousands of them.

Writing: ع

Put your pen on ع and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: the closed ع inside تعریف
- Trace it: ع standing alone three times, saying the catch as you finish each one
- Write it: ت, then تع, joined, from memory
- Write it: تعریف
- Read it: کردن تعریف aloud once more, with the catch

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ع? ('eyn, a light catch.) Which word did it come from? (کردن تعریف, ta'rif kardan, "to tell".) Which shape does it take in the middle of a word? (A small closed loop.)

291.3 اول، بعد، آخر در (avval, ba'd, dar âkhar) — first, then, in the end

Say "first", then "then, afterwards", then "at last". (Avval, sepas, bâlâkhare.)

You hold the words already. This lesson strings them through a run of events, and adds the one people use most in speech.

Grammar Lens: three events, in order

اول صبحانه خوردم. بعد به کتابخانه رفتم. در آخر به خانه برگشتم.

avval sobhâne khordam. ba'd be ketâbkhâne raftam. dar âkhar be khâne bargashtam.

First I had breakfast. Then I went to the library. In the end I went back home.

بعد, ba'd, "then", opens the next event. It does the job sepas does, and it is the one you hear at a kitchen table; sepas sounds written.
With az after it, ba'd az is "after": بعد از صبحانه, ba'd az sobhâne, "after breakfast". Pas az, from chapter one hundred and fifty-two, means the same and sounds more formal.
The events stay in the plain past, one after another, each with its edge.

Grammar Lens: in the end, and at last

در آخر, dar âkhar, is "in the end": dar, "in", and âkhar, "the end". It closes the run.
Bâlâkhare, "at last", closes it too, with relief in it: the thing you were waiting for has come. Bâlâkhare residam: I got there at last.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ba'd is borrowed from Arabic ba^{c}d, "after" (EtymDB 2.1), and it carries the catch you wrote one lesson ago: ب, then ع, then د. Avval and âkhar are Arabic as well (EtymDB 2.1). In these three sentences the words that order the events are Arabic, and the verbs are Persian.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- avval sobhâne khordam. ba'd be ketâbkhâne raftam.
- add the end — dar âkhar be khâne bargashtam
- "after breakfast", two ways — ba'd az sobhâne, pas az sobhâne
- three things you did yesterday, with avval, ba'd and dar âkhar

Before you move on

Which word for "then" sounds like speech, and which sounds written? (Ba'd for speech, sepas for writing.) "After breakfast"? (Ba'd az sobhâne.) What does bâlâkhare add that dar âkhar does not? (Relief: at last.)

291.4 وقتی (vaqti) — when, and a story told in order

Say "first", "then", "in the end". (Avval, ba'd, dar âkhar.) Then ask "when?" (Che vaqt?)

Grammar Lens: vaqti, the joint for a moment

وقتی, vaqti, is "when" in the middle of a story, not in a question. It ties what follows to a moment:

> .میوزید باد رسیدم، هتل به وقتی — vaqti be hotel residam, bâd mivazid — When I got to the hotel, the wind was blowing.

Vaqti takes the event, residam, and the rest paints what was going on at that moment, mivazid.
It is vaqt, "time", with -i: "at the time that". Vaqt is the word inside che vaqt and sar-e vaqt. The letter ق is written q here, so chapter seventy's ghatâr, "a train", appears as qatâr.

Grammar Lens: bâ, "with"

با, bâ, is "with": bâ yek dust, with a friend. For travel it is "by": bâ qatâr, by train. And bâ ham is "together".

Grammar Lens: the order a told story keeps

A story you tell, that you ta'rif mikonid, keeps three parts in one order. First the time and the scene, in bud and the mi- past: sâl-e gozashte... havâ sard bud. Then the events, in the plain past, strung on avval, ba'd and vaqti. Then the close, with dar âkhar.

> اول .بود سرد هوا رسیدم، وقتی .رفتم تهران به قطار با گذشته سال
> رفتم هتل به. خوردم شام دوست یک با بعد. برگشتم هتل به آخر در.

> sâl-e gozashte bâ qatâr be Tehrân raftam. vaqti residam, havâ sard bud. avval be hotel raftam. ba'd bâ yek dust shâm khordam. dar âkhar be hotel bargashtam.

> Last year I went to Tehran by train. When I arrived, it was cold. First I went to the hotel. Then I had dinner with a friend. In the end I went back to the hotel.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- vaqti be hotel residam, bâd mivazid
- "by train", then "with a friend" — bâ qatâr, bâ yek dust
- the Tehran story, once, without stopping
- your own: one line of scene, two events with avval and ba'd, and a close with dar âkhar

Before you move on

What does vaqti do that che vaqt does not? (It joins two parts of a story and asks nothing.) "Together"? (Bâ ham.) What comes first in a told story? (The time and the scene.)

291.5 (reading) — a winter trip, told in both pasts

Chapter twenty-one gave you six words to read cold. This passage is ninety-three words long, and it happened last winter.

Every word in it was taught before this lesson.

Read this

سرد خیلی هوا .رفتم تهران به دوست یک با زمستان، در گذشته، سال
یک در بعد .رفتیم هتل به اول رسیدیم، وقتی .میوزید باد و بود
که حالی در .بود آرام و گرم رستوران .خوردیم شام قدیمی رستوران
.میدادم گوش من و میکرد تعریف جالب داستان یک او میخوردیم، شام

هنوز ولی میتابید، خورشید .زدیم قدم پارک در و رفتیم موزه به صبح
قطار با آخر در .خریدیم کیف یک و رفتیم بازار به ناهار از بعد .بود سرد
تهران به دوباره .بود خوب خیلی ولی بود، کوتاه سفر .برگشتیم خانه به
.میروم

Read it once without stopping. Do not translate as you go; let the sentences arrive.
Then read it a second time and sort every verb into one of two piles: the scene, or what happened.

Why it's said this way

The events: raftam, residim, raftim, khordim, qadam zadim, kharidim, bargashtim. Each one happened and was over, and avval, ba'd and dar âkhar keep them in order.
The scene: the cold, the wind, the warm quiet restaurant, the sun. Bud paints it, and so does the mi- past: mivazid, mitâbid.
At dinner both verbs are scene: ta'rif mikard and gush midâdam ran side by side, with dar hâli ke in front. The last line is in the present, miravam, because it is a plan.

Your turn

- Say it: the passage aloud, once, without stopping

Before you move on

How many words in that passage were new? (None.)
Why is mivazid in the mi- past? (The wind was blowing: it is scene.)
Which word opened the line where they arrived? (Vaqti.)

291.6 Review — telling the trip back

Say "she was telling a story". (U dâstân ta'rif mikard.) Then "I was listening". (Gush midâdam.)

What you've built

Two chapters, and a whole story fits in your mouth. The time first, with gozashte. The scene in bud and the mi- past. The events in the plain past, strung on avval, ba'd and vaqti. The close with dar âkhar. Bâ tells you who came along and how you travelled, and ta'rif kardan is what you are doing while you say it.
Now tell the winter trip back, not word for word, and in the first person plural, mâ. The skeleton:

> sâl-e gozashte be Tehrân raftim... havâ sard bud... vaqti residim... avval... ba'd... dar âkhar bâ qatâr bargashtim.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the skeleton, filled in, in at least five sentences
- one thing they did not do — be sinemâ naraftim, they didn't go to the cinema
- "When we arrived, it was cold" — vaqti residim, havâ sard bud
- "Last week I told the story" — hafte-ye gozashte dâstân râ ta'rif kardam

Before you move on

What are the three parts of a told story, in order? (The time and scene, the events, the close.) Which joint ties an event to its moment? (Vaqti.) Which letter in تعریف is the catch? (ع, 'eyn.) And which one in گذشته says z? (ذ, zâl.)

Chapter 292

What I Think, And So

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give an opinion with be nazar-e man or fekr mikonam ke, and draw a result from it with bara-ye hamin or pas.
> Complete FA-R292-opinion-and-result: an opinion, then the result drawn from it.

292.1 به نظر من (be nazar-e man) — to my view, which is to say, in my opinion

Say "to seem", then "to think". (Be nazar residan, fekr kardan.)

A story says what happened. Giving reasons starts one step earlier, with what you think about it.

You'll want to know: به نظر من

به نظر من — be nazar-e man — "in my opinion", "if you ask me".

> به نظر من این فیلم خیلی خوب است. — be nazar-e man in film kheyli khub ast — In my opinion this film is very good.

Word for word it is "to the view of me": be, "to", nazar, "view", and the ezafe joining man as its owner. Change the owner to hand the opinion back: به نظر شما؟, be nazar-e shomâ?, "what do you think?".

It is the nazar of be nazar residan, "to seem", "to reach the view". The present of that verb opens a careful opinion: به نظر میرسد که..., be nazar miresad ke..., "it seems that...".

Grammar Lens: fekr mikonam ke

The verb you have held since chapter seven, in the present, with که, ke, "that":

> فکر میکنم که قطار دیر میرسد. — fekr mikonam ke qatâr dir miresad — I think the train will be late.

Ke opens the thought, and the thought keeps its ordinary verb, miresad. In speech ke is often dropped: fekr mikonam qatâr dir miresad.
"I don't think so" is the negative with nothing after it: فکر نمیکنم, fekr nemikonam.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nazar is borrowed from Arabic naẓar, "a look, a view" (EtymDB 2.1); be and man are Persian. So the phrase sets an Arabic noun inside a Persian frame, the way fekr kardan sets Arabic fekr, "thought", in front of a Persian verb.

Your turn

- Say it: be nazar-e man in film kheyli khub ast
- Say it: hand it back — be nazar-e shomâ?
- Say it: fekr mikonam ke qatâr dir miresad, then without ke
- Answer: qatâr dir miresad? with "I don't think so" — fekr nemikonam

Before you move on

What does be nazar-e man say, word for word? (To the view of me.) "What do you think?" (Be nazar-e shomâ?) What does ke do after fekr mikonam? (It opens the thought, and the verb after it stays ordinary.)

292.2 همین برای (barâ-ye hamin) — so: the arrow that points forward

Say "because", two ways. (Chon, zirâ.) Then "in my opinion". (Be nazar-e man.)

An opinion needs its reasons, and a reason needs a result. Persian can join the two from either end.

Grammar Lens: two arrows

One fact, three ways to join it:

> خسته، خوابیدم زود همین برای بودم. — khaste budam, barâ-ye hamin zud khâbidam — I was tired, so I went to sleep early.
> چون خسته، خوابیدم زود بودم. — chon khaste budam, zud khâbidam — Because I was tired, I went to sleep early.
> زود، خوابیدم زیرا خسته بودم. — zud khâbidam, zirâ khaste budam — I went to sleep early, because I was tired.

همین برای, barâ-ye hamin, comes after the cause and points forward to the result. Barâ-ye is "for", and hamin is "this very": "for this very reason". Chon and zirâ sit on the cause itself and point back to it. Chon can open the sentence; zirâ mostly follows the result, and sounds written.

Grammar Lens: pas, the short one

پس, pas, is "so" when you draw a conclusion, often at the front of what you conclude:

> پس قطار دیر میرسد. — pas qatâr dir miresad — So the train will be late.

Banâbarin, "therefore", does the same job in writing. Pas is also the pas of pas az, "after": a result comes after its cause.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

hamin is ham, "same", with in, "this". EtymDB 2.1 takes ham through Middle and Old Persian back to an Indo-European word for "same", the one English kept as same. Pas goes back, in EtymDB, through Middle Persian ps, read pas, to an Indo-European word meaning "behind, afterwards".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- khaste budam, barâ-ye hamin zud khâbidam
- the same, with the cause first and chon in front
- a conclusion — pas qatâr dir miresad
- an opinion and its result — be nazar-e man film khub ast, barâ-ye hamin miravam

Before you move on

Which joiner points forward to the result? (Barâ-ye hamin, or pas.) Which point back to the cause? (Chon and zirâ.) What does hamin say, taken apart? (This very: ham and in.)

292.3 Review — what I think, and what follows

Say "in my opinion", then "I think that". (Be nazar-e man, fekr mikonam ke.)

What you've built

Two lessons, and an opinion now has both ends. It opens with be nazar-e man or fekr mikonam ke, or carefully with be nazar miresad ke. Its cause comes with chon. Its result comes with barâ-ye hamin, or with pas when you are drawing a conclusion.
Think back to the winter trip in chapter two hundred and ninety-one, and give your view of it:

به نظر من سفر خوب بود، چون هتل گرم بود. — be nazar-e man

safar khub bud, chon hotel garm bud — In my opinion the trip was good, because the hotel was warm.

Your turn

- Say it: be nazar-e man safar khub bud, chon hotel garm bud
- Say it: the same view with the result after it — … barâ-ye hamin dobâre miravam
- Answer: be nazar-e shomâ? — with fekr mikonam ke and a reason
- Say it: vaqti bâ qatâr bargashtim, khaste budim, barâ-ye hamin zud khâbidim

Before you move on

Which joiner goes on the cause, and which on the result? (Chon on the cause; barâ-ye hamin on the result.) "I don't think so"? (Fekr nemikonam.) Which one draws a conclusion in two letters? (Pas.)

Chapter 293

Advice, And Why

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give advice with bayad or behtar ast and the subjunctive, and explain a reason in a full sentence with dalil in ast ke.
> Complete FA-R293-advice-and-reasons: a piece of advice, then the reason for it.

293.1 بروم (beravam) — a going that is wanted, not stated

Say "I'm going", then "I'm not going". (Miravam, nemiravam.)

Both are statements. Advice, plans and wishes talk about a going that has not happened, and Persian gives that its own shape.

Grammar Lens: be- in place of mi-

Swap mi- for be- and keep the present stem and the endings:

> be- + rav + -am → بروم — beravam — that I go, for me to go

So beravi, beravad, beravim, beravid, beravand. The same swap works on any stored stem: bekhânam, benevisam, begiram, and bekharam from kharidan. This is the subjunctive: the verb shape for something wanted, needed or possible rather than reported.

Three habits to know. A compound verb often leaves be- off, above all in writing: komak konam, fekr konam. Budan has a stem of its own here: bâsham, bâshi, bâshad. And "not" is na- in place of be-: naravam.

Grammar Lens: mikhâham, and the verb after it

Khâstan, "to want", from chapter thirty-eight, has the present stem khâh-: mikhâham, I want; mikhâhi, you want. Whatever you want to do comes after it in the subjunctive:

بروم میخواهم. — mikhâham beravam — I want to go.

بخوانم کتاب میخواهم. — mikhâham ketâb bekhânam — I want to read a book.

بروی؟ میخواهی — mikhâhi beravi? — Do you want to go?

English says "want to go", with the plain verb. Persian gives the wanted verb its own person: "I want that I go".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

khâstan goes back, in EtymDB 2.1, to a Middle Persian verb written hwʾstn' in Pahlavi letters, xwāstan. EtymDB has no entry for the prefix be-, so no history is claimed for it here.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- beravam, beravi, beravad, then beravim, beravid, beravand
- "I want to go" — mikhâham beravam
- "I want to read a book", then "I want to write" — mikhâham ketâb bekhânam, mikhâham benevisam
- a want and its reason — film khub ast, barâ-ye hamin mikhâham beravam

Before you move on

What replaces mi- in the subjunctive? (Be-.) "That it be"? (Bâshad.) "Do you want to go?" (Mikhâhi beravi?) Which verbs often leave be- off? (Compound verbs: komak konam.)

293.2 بروی باید (bâyad beravi) — you should go

Say "I want to go". (Mikhâham beravam.) Then the word for "must, should". (Bâyad.)

Advice is a want that belongs to someone else. It takes the same verb shape.

Grammar Lens: bâyad, and the verb that carries the person

باید does not change for the person. The verb after it does, in the subjunctive:

بروی باید. — bâyad beravi — You should go. You have to go.

بخوابم باید. — bâyad bekhâbam — I must sleep.

One word covers "must", "have to" and "should"; the situation and your tone decide how strong it is. With na- it forbids or warns:

برسی دیر نباید. — nabâyad dir beresi — You mustn't arrive late.

Grammar Lens: behtar ast, the softer one

Behtar, "better", from chapter one hundred and sixty-four, with ast, "it is", and the subjunctive after it:

بخوابی زود است بهتر. — behtar ast zud bekhâbi — You'd better sleep early. It would be better to sleep early.

Behtar ast advises without pressing. With be nazar-e man in front it is gentler still.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bâyad is usually traced to Middle Persian abāyēd, "it is needed". Its last sound is usually read as the -ad of "he, she, it": a verb frozen in its "it" form, "it is necessary". That fits what it does here. It takes no ending of its own, so the person travels to the next verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "You should go", then "I must sleep" — bâyad beravi, bâyad bekhâbam
- "You mustn't arrive late" — nabâyad dir beresi
- soft advice — behtar ast zud bekhâbi
- a conclusion and the advice from it — pas bâyad zud beravim

Before you move on

Which word carries the person in bâyad beravi? (Beravi.) Why does bâyad stay still? (It is a frozen "it" form.) Which is softer, bâyad or behtar ast? (Behtar ast.)

293.3 دادن توضیح (towzih dâdan) — to explain

Say "you should go". (Bâyad beravi.) Then "to give". (Dâdan.)

Advice is stronger with its reason. Before the reason, the verb for laying one out.

You'll want to know: دادن توضیح

دادن توضیح — towzih dâdan — "to explain".

داد توضیح را مشکل او. — u moshkel râ towzih dâd — She explained the problem.

It runs on dâdan, "to give", whose present stem is deh-: towzih midaham, I explain; towzih bedahid, in the subjunctive, "that you explain". So باید بدهم توضیح, bâyad towzih bedaham, is "I have to explain".

You have sharh dâdan from chapter two hundred and twenty-three. It lays a thing out at length. Towzih dâdan is the one you reach for every day: make it clear.

Say tow-zih, two beats, with a breathy h at the end. Its third letter is a z you have not written yet, and the next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

EtymDB 2.1 has no entry for towzih itself. It is the Arabic noun tawḍīḥ, usually explained as "making clear", on the root w-ḍ-ḥ of Arabic wāḍiḥ, "clear, obvious", which EtymDB does list.
Dâdan is Persian, and EtymDB takes it back to the Indo-European root for "to give" that also gave Latin dō, "I give". So the compound is "to give clarity".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- towzih dâdan, then tow-zih in two beats
- "She explained the problem" — u moshkel râ towzih dâd
- "I explain", then "I have to explain" — towzih midaham, bâyad towzih bedaham
- "to lay out at length" against "to make clear" — sharh dâdan, towzih dâdan

Before you move on

"To explain"? (Towzih dâdan.) What is the present stem of dâdan? (Deh-: midaham.) What is the compound, word for word? (To give clarity.)

293.4 ض (zâd) — the letter inside توضیح

Before the new one: write ص and ذ once each, and name them.

Now say دادن توضیح (towzih dâdan), "to explain". You met it a moment ago. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ض

ض — zâd, the sound z.

It is the third letter of توضیح. The و before it offers nothing to the left, so ض starts a fresh run, ضیح, in its opening shape.

It is ص, from chapter twenty-five, with one dot above: the same wide oval body and the same trailing bowl. That makes four ways to write z: ز, ذ, ض and ظ, and Persian says all four alike. Arabic keeps them apart in sound; Persian keeps them apart only in spelling, so each word has to be learned with its own z.

Writing: ض

Put your pen on ض and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ض inside توضیح
- Trace it: ض three times, saying z as you finish each one
- Write it: ص, then ض, from memory
- Write it: توضیح, with the break after و
- Read it: دادن توضیح aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ض? (zâd, z.) Which word did it come from? (دادن توضیح, towzih dâdan, "to explain".) How many ways to write z do you hold now? (Four: ظ ض ذ ز.)

293.5 که است این دلیل (dalil in ast ke) — the reason is that

Say "a reason", then "to explain". (Dalil, towzih dâdan.)

An explanation is more than chon. Sometimes the reason needs a sentence to itself.

Grammar Lens: the reason, in a sentence of its own

رسیدم دیر. آمد دیر قطار که است این دلیل. — dir residam. dalil in ast ke qatâr dir âmad — I arrived late. The reason is that the train came late.

Dalil, "the reason", in ast, "is this", and ke, "that", which opens the reason the way it opened the thought after fekr mikonam. The event comes first and stands alone; then the reason gets the floor.
Before a longer explanation, offer it: توضیح بدهم؟, towzih bedaham?, "shall I explain?". The subjunctive makes it a question about a thing not yet done.

Grammar Lens: a noun, or a sentence

A cause that is one thing takes be khâter-e, with the ezafe joining the noun:

رسیدم دیر باران خاطر به. — be khâter-e bârân dir residam — I arrived late because of the rain.

A cause that is a whole happening takes chon, and a full sentence:

رسیدم دیر بود، سرد هوا چون. — chon havâ sard bud, dir residam — Because it was cold, I arrived late.

So: a noun after be khâter-e, a verb after chon. "Because of the rain", but "because it was cold".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dir residam. dalil in ast ke qatâr dir âmad.

- offer to explain — towzih bedaham?
- "because of the rain" — be khâter-e bârân dir residam
- the same cause as a sentence — chon havâ sard bud, dir residam

Before you move on

"The reason is that..."? (Dalil in ast ke...) Which takes a noun, be khâter-e or chon? (Be khâter-e.) "Shall I explain?" (Towzih bedaham?)

293.6 Review — advice, and why

Say "I want to go", then "you should go". (Mikhâham beravam, bâyad beravi.)

What you've built

Four lessons, and one new verb shape doing a great deal of work. Be- in place of mi- gives the subjunctive, and it follows mikhâham, bâyad and behtar ast: a thing wanted, needed or advised. The reason comes after, with chon and a sentence, be khâter-e and a noun, or dalil in ast ke when it needs a sentence of its own. Towzih dâdan names what you are doing.
One piece of advice, built the whole way:

> بخوابی زود است بهتر من نظر به. دلیل این است که فردا باید زود بروی.
> be nazar-e man behtar ast zud bekhâbi. dalil in ast ke fardâ bâyad zud beravi.
> If you ask me, you'd better sleep early. The reason is that tomorrow you have to leave early.

Your turn

- Say it: the advice you heard, in two sentences, without stopping
- Say it: the same advice with the cause first — fardâ bâyad zud beravi, barâ-ye hamin behtar ast zud bekhâbi

- Say it: a conclusion — pas nabâyad dir bekhâbi
- Answer: cherâ? — with dalil in ast ke and a reason of your own

Before you move on

Which three words call for the subjunctive after them? (Mikhâham, bâyad, behtar ast.) "Shall I explain?" (Towzih bedaham?) Which letter in توضیح is new to your hand? (ض, zâd.)

Chapter 294

Asking The Way

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can stop someone politely, ask how to get somewhere, and follow directions to the right, to the left and straight on.
> Complete FA-R294-asking-the-way: ask the way to the station and repeat the directions back.

294.1 ببخشید (bebakhshid) — excuse me, and the way to the station

Say "to forgive", then "where?". (Bakhshidan, kojâ.) Then "I want to go". (Mikhâham beravam.)

On the street the first word you need is the one that stops a stranger politely.

You'll want to know: ببخشید

ببخشید — bebakhshid — "excuse me", before a question; "sorry", after a bump.

It is bakhshidan, "to forgive", with be- and the shomâ ending, the shape a polite request takes: "forgive". Persian stops a stranger by asking pardon first.

> ببخشید، ایستگاه کجاست؟ — bebakhshid, istgâh kojâst? — Excuse me, where is the station?

Kojâst is kojâ with ast fused on, the way chi and ast became chist. The answer may start است نزدیک, nazdik ast, "it's near".

Grammar Lens: chetor mitavânam be ... beravam?

Tavânestan, "to be able", has the present stem tavân-: mitavânam, I can; mitavânid, you can. Like mikhâham, it takes the subjunctive after it. Put chetor, "how", in front and you have the way:

> ببخشید، چطور میتوانم به ایستگاه بروم؟ — bebakhshid, chetor mitavânam be istgâh beravam? — Excuse me, how can I get to the station?

Swap the place and the question still works: be muze, to the museum; be hotel, to the hotel.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bakhshidan is native Persian. EtymDB 2.1 takes it back to a Middle Persian verb written bhš- in Pahlavi letters, and lists it in two senses, "to give, to grant" and "to forgive". Forgiving is a kind of granting, and bebakhshid asks for it in advance.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bebakhshid, istgâh kojâst?
- bebakhshid, chetor mitavânam be istgâh beravam?
- the same question for the museum — be muze
- the thanks after the answer — mamnun

Before you move on

What does bebakhshid say, word for word? (Forgive, said politely.) "Where is the station?" (Istgâh kojâst?) "How can I get to the station?" (Chetor mitavânam be istgâh beravam?)

294.2 راست دست (dast-e râst) — on the right, and how directions are given

Say "right", "left" and "straight ahead". (Râst, chap, mostaqim.) Then ask the way to the station. (Bebakhshid, chetor mitavânam be istgâh beravam?)

Now the answer, which arrives fast, so it pays to know its shape.

You'll want to know: راست دست

> است راست دست ایستگاه. — istgâh dast-e râst ast — The station is on the right.

The ezafe joins the hand to its side, the same -e as in esm-e man.

Grammar Lens: the polite instruction

A stranger gives directions in the subjunctive with the shomâ ending, said as an instruction. You hold the shape already:

> بروید مستقیم. — mostaqim beravid — Go straight on.

Bepichid is pichidan, "to turn", from chapter one hundred and thirty-three, on its stem pich-. Sar-e chahârrâh is "at the head of the crossroads". To a friend, someone you call to, the ending drops: bepich, turn.
So a whole answer runs: mostaqim beravid, ba'd be dast-e râst bepichid. istgâh dast-e chap ast.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Both words are inherited. dast, "hand", continues Old Persian dasta, on the same Indo-European root as Sanskrit hasta, "hand" (EtymDB 2.1). râst continues Old Persian rāsta, "right, straight", and EtymDB sets it beside English right: both go back to an Indo-European word for “moved in a straight line”.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- istgâh dast-e râst ast, then the same on the left
- “Go straight on” — mostaqim beravid
- sar-e chahârrâh be dast-e chap bepichid
- the whole answer back, as you would to check it: mostaqim, ba’d dast-e râst…

Before you move on

“On the left”? (Dast-e chap.) “Turn right”, politely? (Be dast-e râst bepichid.) Which English word does EtymDB set beside râst? (Right.)

294.3 Review — on the street, asking the way

Stop someone and ask the way to the museum. (Bebakhshid, chetor mitavânam be muze beravam?)

What you’ve built

Two lessons, and a whole exchange. You open with bebakhshid, ask with chetor mitavânam be … beravam? or … kojâst?, and the answer comes back in the polite instruction: mostaqim beravid, be dast-e chap bepichid.
Here is one exchange, start to finish:

> — bebakhshid, muze kojâst? — mostaqim beravid. sar-e chahârrâh be dast-e râst bepichid. muze dast-e chap ast. — mostaqim, ba’d dast-e râst, ba’d dast-e chap. mamnun.

The third line is the habit worth keeping: say the directions back, and any mistake shows up while the stranger is still there.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three lines of the exchange, playing both people
- the same, for the station
- a reason you are lost — dalil in ast ke naqshe nadâram, the reason is that I don't have a map
- advice to a visitor — bâyad mostaqim beravid

Before you move on

What do you say before the question? (Bebakhshid.) "Turn left"? (Be dast-e chap bepichid.) Why say the directions back? (So a mistake shows up at once.)

Chapter 295

A Ticket, And A Missed Train

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for a return ticket, say that I missed the train or lost something, and ask for the person in charge.
> Complete FA-R295-at-the-station: buy a return ticket, report a missed train, and ask for the person in charge.

295.1 برگشت و رفت بلیت (bilit-e raft-o bargasht) — a return ticket

Say "a ticket", "a train" and "to come back". (Bilit, qatâr, bargashtan.)

You found the station. At the window, one phrase does nearly all the work.

You'll want to know: برگشت و رفت بلیت

برگشت و رفت بلیت — bilit-e raft-o bargasht — "a return ticket".

> میخواهم تهران به برگشت و رفت بلیت یک. — yek bilit-e raft-o bargasht be Tehrân mikhâham — I'd like a return ticket to Tehran.

Mikhâham here is a request, "I'd like", and it is how people ask at the window. Add the day after the place: barâ-ye fardâ, "for tomorrow".

If you are not coming back by train, the ticket is for the going alone: bilit-e raft. The clerk may check with faqat raft?, "one way only?".

Say raft-o bargasht as one run. The va, "and", shrinks to -o and leans on the word before it, as -e does.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bilit is the French loan from chapter one hundred and thirteen, billet (EtymDB). The other two words are verbs you already own, with their endings taken off. Raft is the past stem of raftan: "going". Bargasht is the past stem of bargashtan: "coming back", from the prefix bar-, which here gives the sense "back", and gashtan, "to turn". Persian makes nouns this way: a past stem, standing alone, names the action.

Your turn

- Say it: bilit-e raft-o bargasht, as one run
- Say it: yek bilit-e raft-o bargasht be Tehrân mikhâham
- Say it: the same, for tomorrow — ... barâ-ye fardâ
- Answer: faqat raft? — no, a return: na, raft-o bargasht

Before you move on

"A return ticket"? (Bilit-e raft-o bargasht.) What are raft and bargasht, taken apart? (Two past stems, used as nouns.) "One way only?" (Faqat raft?)

295.2 از دست دادن (az dast dâdan) — I missed the train

Say "to lose", then "late". (Gom kardan, dir.) Then ask for a return ticket to Tehran. (Yek bilit-e raft-o bargasht be Tehrân mikhâham.)

A ticket does not guarantee the train. Sooner or later something goes wrong, and you have to say what.

You'll want to know: از دست دادن

از دست دادن — az dast dâdan — "to miss" a train or a bus, "to lose" a chance.

دادم دست از را قطار. — qatâr râ az dast dâdam — I missed the train.

Word for word, "I gave the train from the hand". The train is a particular one, so it takes râ. Only dâdan changes: az dast midaham, I miss; az dast dâdam, I missed.

Grammar Lens: saying what went wrong

A problem is reported in the plain past: it happened, and it is done.

کردم گم را من کیف. — kif-e man râ gom kardam — I lost my bag.

رفت قطار و رسیدم دیر. — dir residam va qatâr raft — I arrived late, and the train left.

Then the question that asks for help, in the subjunctive, because the doing has not happened yet:

کنم؟ کار چه — che kâr konam? — What should I do?

Che, "what", is the che inside chetor; kâr konam is kâr kardan, "to work, to do", in the subjunctive without be-, as compounds often go.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

All three words are Persian. Dast is "hand", inherited from Old Persian (EtymDB 2.1). Dâdan is "to give", on the Indo-European root EtymDB also gives for Latin dō. Az is "from". What you let slip from your hand is gone: a train, a chance.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I missed the train" — qatâr râ az dast dâdam
- "I lost my bag" — kif-e man râ gom kardam
- the cause and the problem — dir residam va qatâr raft
- ask for help, then answer yourself — che kâr konam? ... bâyad fardâ beravam

Before you move on

"I missed the train"? (Qatâr râ az dast dâdam.) What is the phrase, word for word? (To give from the hand.) Why is che kâr konam? in the subjunctive? (The doing has not happened yet.)

295.3 مسئول (mas'ul) — the person in charge

Say "I missed the train", then "what should I do?". (Qatâr râ az dast dâdam, che kâr konam?)

The person who can answer that question has a title of their own.

You'll want to know: مسئول

مسئول — mas'ul — "the person in charge"; as a description, "responsible".

> ببخشید، مسئول ایستگاه کجاست؟ — bebakhshid, mas'ul-e istgâh kojâst? — Excuse me, where is the person in charge of the station?

The ezafe hangs the place on it: mas'ul-e istgâh, mas'ul-e hotel. As a description it follows its noun: او مسئول است, u mas'ul ast, "she is responsible", "she's in charge".

Say it mas-'ul, with the catch after mas, the same catch as in ta'rif. It is written with a letter of its own, and the next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mas'ul is borrowed from Arabic masʾūl (EtymDB 2.1). The Arabic word is usually read as the passive participle of saʾala, "to ask", which EtymDB lists on its own: masʾūl is "asked", and so the one who has to answer when a thing goes wrong. EtymDB itself does not link the two, so that step is given as the usual account.
The catch here is not ع. It is the other catch Arabic spells, the glottal stop called hamze, and in Persian the two sound the same.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mas'ul, slowly, with the catch — mas-'ul

- bebakhshid, mas'ul-e istgâh kojâst?
- the same, at the hotel — mas'ul-e hotel
- "she's in charge" — u mas'ul ast

Before you move on

"The person in charge of the station"? (Mas'ul-e istgâh.) Which Arabic verb is usually read inside mas'ul? (Saʾala, "to ask".) Is its catch the letter ع? (No: it is hamze.)

295.4 ئ (hamze) — the catch inside مسئول

Before the new one: write ی and ع once each, and name them.

Now say مسئول (mas'ul), "the person in charge". You met it a moment ago. This lesson takes its catch out and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ئ

ئ — hamze, a glottal catch, written ʼ in this book's romanization.

It is the third letter of مسئول, between س and و. It is two pieces. Below sits a small tooth like the tooth of ی in the middle of a word, with no dots: that is the seat. On top sits a little mark like a small hook, the hamze itself. The seat takes the hand of س on its right and joins on to و.

In Persian the hamze and ع sound alike, a light stop in the throat, so mas'ul and ta'rif share their catch. Spelling keeps them apart, the way it keeps four letters for z. Most words with hamze on this seat came into Persian from Arabic.

Writing: ئ

Put your pen on ئ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: the seat and the mark of ئ inside مسئول
- Trace it: ئ three times, saying the catch as you finish each one
- Write it: مسئ, joined, then the و after it
- Write it: مسئول, then تعریف: two catches, two letters
- Read it: مسئول aloud once more

Before you move on

What is this — ئ? (Hamze on its seat, a catch.) Which word did it come from? (مسئول, mas'ul, "the person in charge".) Which other letter sounds the same in Persian? (ع, 'eyn.)

295.5 Review — a bad morning at the station

Ask for a return ticket to Tehran. (Yek bilit-e raft-o bargasht be Tehrân mikhâham.) Then say you missed the train. (Qatâr râ az dast dâdam.)

What you've built

Two chapters, and most of a journey: ask the way, follow it, buy the ticket, and when it goes wrong, say what happened and find someone who can help.
One morning, start to finish:

> — bebakhshid, mas'ul-e istgâh kojâst? — dast-e chap ast.
> — bebakhshid, qatâr râ az dast dâdam. dir residam va qatâr raft. che kâr konam? — bâyad fardâ beravid. bilit-e raft-o bargasht dârid? — bale.

The problem is all plain past. The help comes in the subjunctive: konam, beravid.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the traveller's lines of the morning, without stopping
- the reason you were late — dalil in ast ke otobus dir âmad, then with a noun: be khâter-e bârân
- the same story with a lost bag — kîf-e man râ gom kardam
- the clerk's advice — bâyad fardâ beravid

Before you move on

"A return ticket"? (Bilit-e raft-o bargasht.) Who do you ask for when it goes wrong? (The mas'ul.) Which letter carries the catch in مسئول? (ئ, hamze on its seat.)

Chapter 296

Glad, Tired, Hopeful

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how I felt and what I became, describe a meal, and say what I hope for and would like to do.
> Complete FA-R296-feelings-and-hopes: how a day made you feel, and one thing you hope for.

296.1 بودم خوشحال (khoshhâl budam) — I was happy, and I became happy

Say "happy", "tired", "upset". (Khoshhâl, khaste, nârâhat.) Then "to become". (Shodan.)

You can say what happened on a trip. Describing it means saying how it felt, and Persian gives a feeling two pasts as well.

Grammar Lens: the feeling as scene

The adjective, then budan in the past:

بودم خوشحال. — khoshhâl budam — I was happy.

Khaste budam, I was tired; nârâhat budim, we were upset; shâd bud, she was cheerful. The adjective stays the same for every person, and the ending rides on bud-. This is the feeling as background, there for a while.

Grammar Lens: the feeling as event

Swap budan for shodan, "to become", and the feeling arrives at a moment:

> شدم خسته. — khaste shodam — I got tired.
> شدم ناراحت دادم، دست از را قطار وقتی. — vaqti qatâr râ az dast dâdam, nârâhat shodam — When I missed the train, I got upset.

The cause can come with az, "from", and the infinitive works as a noun:

> شدم خوشحال شما دیدن از. — az didan-e shomâ khoshhâl shodam — I was glad to see you.

Word for word, "from the seeing of you I became happy". It is a thing people say at the end of a first meeting.
So khoshhâl budam is the mood of the whole day, and khoshhâl shodam is the moment the news arrived.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Shodan is usually traced to Middle Persian šudan, "to go". Becoming is going into a state: khaste shodam is "I went tired". Khoshhâl is khosh, "good", with hâl, "state", the same hâl as in hâl-e shomâ chetor ast?

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I was happy", then "I was tired" — khoshhâl budam, khaste budam
- "I got tired" — khaste shodam
- vaqti qatâr râ az dast dâdam, nârâhat shodam
- at the end of a first meeting — az didan-e shomâ khoshhâl shodam

Before you move on

Which is the mood of the day, khoshhâl budam or khoshhâl shodam? (Budam: scene.) Which is the moment? (Shodam: event.) "I was glad to see you"? (Az didan-e shomâ khoshhâl shodam.)

296.2 غذا (ghazâ) — food, and how it was

Say "I was happy", then "I got tired". (Khoshhâl budam, khaste shodam.) Then "delicious". (Khoshmaze.)

Talk about a trip, and sooner or later the food comes up.

You'll want to know: غذا

غذا — ghazâ — "food", and "a meal".

بود خوشمزه خیلی رستوران این غذای. — ghazâ-ye in resturân kheyli khoshmaze bud — The food at this restaurant was very tasty.

After its long â the ezafe is -ye, and here it is written, as ی: غذای. Ghazâ khordan is "to eat, to have a meal": ghazâ khordim, we ate.

Say gha-zâ, with the gh far back, like a soft gargle. Its first letter is new, and the next lesson puts it in your hand. The second is ذ, which you wrote in chapter two hundred and ninety.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ghazâ is borrowed from Arabic ghidhāʾ, "nourishment, food" (EtymDB 2.1). Arabic says its middle letter as the th of English this. Persian kept the letter ذ in the spelling and says it z, which is why ghazâ sounds nothing like the Arabic it is spelled from.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ghazâ, with the gh far back
- ghazâ-ye in resturân kheyli khoshmaze bud
- "we ate", with the noun — ghazâ khordim

- an opinion of a meal — be nazar-e man ghazâ khoshmaze bud

Before you move on

"Food"? (Ghazâ.) How is the ezafe written after it? (-ye, as ی: غذای.) Which letter of غذا sounds z? (ذ, zâl.)

296.3 غ (gheyn) — the letter that opens غذا

Before the new one: write ع and ق once each, and name them.

Now say غذا (ghazâ), "food". You met it a moment ago. This lesson takes its first letter out and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: غ

غ — gheyn, the sound gh, made far back, like a soft gargle.

It opens غذا, in its opening shape, غـ, joined to ذ. It is ع with one dot above, and it changes shape the same way: an open hook at the start, a small closed loop in the middle, a tail at the end.

In Tehran speech غ and ق sound alike: ghazâ and qatâr open on the same sound. Spelling keeps them apart, and so does this book's romanization: ق is written q, as in qatâr, and غ is written gh, as in ghazâ. Each word has to be learned with its own letter.

Writing: غ

Put your pen on غ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: غ at the start of غذا
- Trace it: غ standing alone three times, saying gh as you finish each one

- Write it: ع, then غ, from memory: one dot apart
- Write it: غذا, then قطار: one sound, two letters
- Read it: غذا aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — غ? (gheyn, gh.) Which word did it come from? (غذا, ghazâ, "food".) Which other letter sounds the same in Tehran? (ق, written q.)

296.4 که امیدوارم (omidvâram ke) — I hope that, I'd like to, I dream of

Say "to hope", then "I want to go". (Omidvâr budan, mikhâham beravam.) Then "I'm well", in one word. (Khubam.)

Describing an experience runs forward as well as back: what you hope for next, and what you would like to become.

Grammar Lens: omidvâram ke, and the subjunctive

Omidvâr takes the -am of khubam: امیدوارم, omidvâram, "I am hopeful", "I hope". What you hope for follows ke in the subjunctive, because it has not happened:

> بروم تهران به دیگر سال که امیدوارم. — omidvâram ke sâl-e digar be Tehrân beravam — I hope to go to Tehran next year.

Chapter one hundred and thirty-eight showed omidvâram hâlat khub bâshad, "I hope you are well". The bâshad there is this subjunctive, and the ke has been left out, as speech often does.

Grammar Lens: what you'd like, and what you dream of Dust dâram, "I like", with a subjunctive after it is "I'd like to":

> بشوم مهندس دارم دوست. — dust dâram mohandes beshavam — I'd like to become an engineer.

Beshavam is shodan in the subjunctive, on its stem shav-; in speech it is shortened to besham. Ârezu, "a wish, a dream", works the same way with dâram:

> آرزو دارم که یک روز خلبان بشوم. — ârezu dâram ke yek ruz khalabân beshavam — My dream is to become a pilot one day.

So three strengths: mikhâham, I want; dust dâram, I'd like; ârezu dâram, I dream of. All three take the subjunctive.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- omidvâram ke sâl-e digar be Tehrân beravam
- "I'd like to become an engineer" — dust dâram mohandes beshavam
- a dream of your own, with ârezu dâram ke and beshavam
- a meal, then a hope — ghazâ khoshmaze bud. omidvâram ke dobâre beravim

Before you move on

What is omidvâram, taken apart? (Omidvâr with -am, "I am".) Why is the verb after it in the subjunctive? (The hoped-for thing has not happened.) Which letter opens غذا? (غ, gheyn.)

296.5 Review — how it felt, and what you hope for

Say "I was tired", then "I got tired". (Khaste budam, khaste shodam.)

What you've built

Three lessons, and an experience now has its colour. Budam gives the feeling of a whole stretch; shodam gives the moment it arrived. Ghazâ brings in the meal, and omidvâram ke, dust dâram and ârezu dâram carry the hope forward, each with the subjunctive after it.

Back to the bad morning at the station, told as an experience:

> qatâr râ az dast dâdam va nârâhat shodam. ba'd mas'ul-e istgâh bilit-e fardâ râ be man dâd, barâ-ye hamin khoshhâl shodam. ghazâ-ye istgâh khoshmaze bud. omidvâram ke fardâ dir naresam.

The last verb, naresam, is the subjunctive with na-: "that I don't arrive".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the station morning, told as an experience, without stopping
- a whole day as mood — ruz khub bud, the day was good, then khoshhâl budam
- something you'd like, and something you dream of — dust dâram..., ârezu dâram ke...
- the hope at the end — omidvâram ke fardâ dir naresam

Before you move on

Which tells the mood of a day, budam or shodam? (Budam.) "I hope I won't be late tomorrow"? (Omidvâram ke fardâ dir naresam.) Which two letters of this run are new to your hand? (غ in غذا, ئ in مسئول.)

Chapter 297

Better Than, And Years Ago

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can compare two things with -tar az, name the best with -tarin, say what something is like, and say how long something has lasted or how long ago it happened.
> Complete FA-R297-comparing-and-time: compare two places and say how long ago and for how long.

297.1 از بزرگتر (bozorgtar az) — bigger than, and the biggest

Say "big", "small" and "better". (Bozorg, kuchek, behtar.)

Behtar already holds the pattern. This lesson opens it up for every adjective you know.

Grammar Lens: -tar, and az for "than"

Add -tar to the adjective, and put az, "from", in front of the thing you compare against:

> این اتاق از آن اتاق بزرگتر است. — in otâq az ân otâq bozorgtar ast — This room is bigger than that room.
> قطار از اتوبوس زودتر میرسد. — qatâr az otobus zudtar miresad — The train arrives earlier than the bus.

So kuchektar, smaller; zudtar, earlier; dirtar, later. The az phrase usually sits before the -tar word; bozorgtar az ân otâq is heard as well.

Behtar is the same pattern on beh, "good", a word that lives today mostly inside behtar and behtarin.

Grammar Lens: -tarin, in front of the noun

For "the most", add -tarin and move the adjective in front of its noun, with no ezafe between them:

> غذا بهترین — behtarin ghazâ — the best food
> این بهترین رستوران شهر است. — in behtarin resturân-e shahr ast — This is the best restaurant in town.

An ordinary adjective follows its noun with the ezafe, ghazâ-ye khub. The -tarin one jumps ahead.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

EtymDB 2.1 traces the suffix -tar back to an Indo-European suffix that set one of two things against the other. The same suffix is usually seen at the end of English other, one of two, though EtymDB does not draw that link itself. -tarin is -tar with a further -in.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- in otâq az ân otâq bozorgtar ast
- "The train arrives earlier than the bus" — qatâr az otobus zudtar miresad
- "the best food", then "the biggest city" — behtarin ghazâ, bozorgtarin shahr
- a hope with a comparison — omidvâram ke fardâ behtar bâshad

Before you move on

Which little word says "than"? (Az.) "Smaller"? (Kuchektar.) Where does a -tarin word go? (In front of its noun, with no ezafe.) Which English word carries the same old suffix as -tar?

(Other.)

297.2 مثل (mesl) — like, as

Say "this room is bigger than that room". (In otâq az ân otâq bozorgtar ast.) Then "the best food". (Behtarin ghazâ.)

-tar says how two things differ. Describing a place needs a word for how they are the same.

You'll want to know: مثل

مثل — mesl — "like, as".

> این شهر مثل تهران است. — in shahr mesl-e Tehrân ast — This city is like Tehran.

It takes the ezafe, mesl-e, and then the thing it matches: mesl-e khâne, like home; mesl-e ghazâ-ye mâdar, like mother's cooking.

One use to keep whole: همیشه مثل, mesl-e hamishe, "as usual", word for word "like always":

> مثل همیشه دیر رسید. — mesl-e hamishe dir resid — As usual, he arrived late.

Say it in one beat, mesl, with a clear s. Its second letter is new: the next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mesl is borrowed from Arabic mithl, "like" (EtymDB 2.1), on the Arabic root m-th-l, usually glossed "to be like". Arabic says its middle letter as the th of English thin. Persian says it s and keeps the Arabic letter in the spelling, the way it kept ذ in ghazâ and says it z.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mesl, then mesl-e, with the ezafe

- "This city is like Tehran" — in shahr mesl-e Tehrân ast
- "As usual, he arrived late" — mesl-e hamishe dir resid
- sameness, then difference — mesl-e Tehrân ast, vali kuchektar ast

Before you move on

"Like home"? (Mesl-e khâne.) "As usual"? (Mesl-e hamishe.) Which says sameness and which says difference? (Mesl for sameness, -tar for difference.)

297.3 ث (se) — the letter inside مثل

Before the new one: write ت and ص once each, and name them.

Now say مثل (mesl), "like". You met it a moment ago. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ث

ث — se, the sound s.

It is the middle letter of مثل, joined on both sides, ـثـ. Its body is the body of ت, from chapter fifteen, but it carries three dots above instead of two. In the middle of a word that body shrinks to a single small tooth, and only the dots tell ث from ت.

You now hold three ways to write s: س, ص and ث. As with the four z letters, Persian says them alike, and the spelling remembers which came from where. Nearly all words with ث came from Arabic.

Writing: ث

Put your pen on ث and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: the tooth and three dots of ث inside مثل
- Trace it: ث standing alone three times, saying s as you finish each one
- Write it: ت, then ث, from memory: two dots, then three
- Write it: مثل, joined
- Read it: مثل aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ث? (se, s.) Which word did it come from? (مثل, mesl, "like".) How many dots, and where? (Three, above.)

297.4 که است سال سه (se sâl ast ke) — for three years now, and three years ago

Say "ago", then "a length of time". (Pish, moddat.) Then "like Tehran". (Mesl-e Tehrân.)

An experience has a length. Persian measures it two ways, and the verb changes with them.

Grammar Lens: ... ast ke, with the present

For a stretch that is still going on, name it, add ast ke, "it is that", and keep the verb in the present:

> میکنم زندگی تهران در که است سال سه. — se sâl ast ke dar Tehrân zendegi mikonam — I have lived in Tehran for three years.

Word for word, "it is three years that I live in Tehran". English switches to "have lived"; Persian stays in the present, because the living has not stopped. Zendegi kardan is "to live", zendegi, "life", on kardan.

> میکنم کار اینجا که است هفته دو. — do hafte ast ke injâ kâr mikonam — I've been working here for two weeks.

To ask: چه مدت است که اینجا کار میکنید؟, che moddat ast ke injâ kâr mikonid?, "how long have you been working here?".

Grammar Lens: pish, with the plain past

For a point in the past, the time goes first with pish after it, and the verb is the plain past:

> سه سال پیش به تهران آمدم. — se sâl pish be Tehrân âmadam
> — I came to Tehran three years ago.

And a stretch that is over takes barâ-ye, "for", with the plain past: barâ-ye do hafte be Tehrân raftam, "I went to Tehran for two weeks". So the first two fit together: se sâl pish âmadam. se sâl ast ke injâ zendegi mikonam.

Your turn

- Say it: se sâl ast ke dar Tehrân zendegi mikonam
- Say it: "I came to Tehran three years ago" — se sâl pish be Tehrân âmadam
- Ask: che moddat ast ke injâ kâr mikonid?
- Say it: your own — how long ago you started something, and how long it has gone on

Before you move on

Why does se sâl ast ke … zendegi mikonam keep the present? (The living has not stopped.) "Three years ago"? (Se sâl pish.) "How long?" (Che moddat?)

297.5 Review — two places, and how long

Say "smaller than that room". (Az ân otâq kuchektar.) Then "three years ago". (Se sâl pish.)

What you've built

Two chapters, and an experience can now be measured. -tar az sets one thing against another, -tarin crowns one, and mesl says two are alike. Pish fixes a moment in the past; ... ast ke with the present measures a stretch that is still running.
Someone who moved, describing it:

> do sâl pish be in shahr âmadam. do sâl ast ke injâ zendegi mikonam. in shahr mesl-e Tehrân ast, vali kuchektar ast. ghazâ-ye injâ behtar ast! avval nârâhat budam, vali ba'd khoshhâl shodam.

The last line goes back to chapter two hundred and ninety-six: a mood that lasted, budam, and a change that arrived, shodam.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the mover's five lines, without stopping
- the same about a place you know, with pish, ast ke and mesl
- the best thing there — behtarin...
- a hope to finish — omidvâram ke... or dust dâram...

Before you move on

"I've lived here for two years"? (Do sâl ast ke injâ zendegi mikonam.) Where does behtarin go? (In front of its noun.) Which letter in مثل says s? (ث, se.) And which one opens غذا? (غ, gheyn.)

Chapter 298

If It Rains

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can state a real condition with agar and the subjunctive, give its result, and answer a plan with bastegi darad.
> Complete FA-R298-if-and-it-depends: a plan that depends on the weather, said with agar and bastegi darad.

298.1 اگر ... باشد (agar ... bâshad) — if it is

Say "if", then "otherwise". (Agar, vagarna.) Then the subjunctive of budan for "she": "that she be". (Bâshad.)

Agar has waited since chapter one hundred and fifty-eight. Now you hold the verb shape it asks for.

Grammar Lens: the condition first, in the subjunctive

اگر, agar, opens the condition. The condition usually comes first, then a pause, then what follows from it:

> اگر هوا خوب باشد، به پارک میرویم. — agar havâ khub bâshad, be pârk miravim — If the weather is good, we'll go to the park.

The condition is about later, and it may not come true, so its verb is in the subjunctive: bâshad, not ast. The second half is a plain present, which in Persian also covers the future.

اگر خسته باشی، بهتر است بخوابی. — agar khaste bâshi, behtar ast bekhâbi — If you're tired, you'd better sleep.

Agar can also sit after the person it is about: to agar khaste bâshi…. Either way, agar stays inside the condition half.

Grammar Lens: vagarna, the other branch

Vagarna, "otherwise", is the condition turned round, "and if not":

زود بروید، وگرنه قطار را از دست میدهید. — zud beravid, vagarna qatâr râ az dast midahid — Leave early, otherwise you'll miss the train.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

agar continues Middle Persian agar, "if" (EtymDB 2.1). Vagarna is va, "and", agar, and na, "not", run together: the same "if" with "not" on the end.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- agar havâ khub bâshad, be pârk miravim
- agar khaste bâshi, behtar ast bekhâbi
- zud beravid, vagarna qatâr râ az dast midahid
- a plan of your own for tomorrow, with agar and bâshad

Before you move on

Which half comes first? (Usually the condition, with agar.) Why bâshad and not ast? (The condition is about later, and may not come true.) "Otherwise"? (Vagarna.)

298.2 ژاکت (zhâkat) — a cardigan, in case it turns cold

Say "if the weather is good". (Agar havâ khub bâshad.) Then a padded jacket and a pullover. (Kâpshan, poliver.)

A condition is easiest to practise on the weather, and on what to wear for it.

You'll want to know: ژاکت

ژاکت — zhâkat — "a cardigan", a knitted jacket that buttons down the front.

> اگر هوا سرد باشد، ژاکت بپوشید. — agar havâ sard bâshad, zhâkat bepushid — If it's cold, put on a cardigan.

Bepushid is pushidan, "to put on, to wear", on its stem push-. A zhâkat is lighter than a kâpshan, the padded jacket from chapter one hundred and twenty, and it opens at the front where a poliver goes over the head.

Say zhâ-kat. The zh is the sound in the middle of English measure, and its letter is one Persian added to the Arabic alphabet. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

EtymDB 2.1 has no entry for zhâkat. It is usually traced to French jaquette, a jacket. EtymDB takes English jacket back to Middle French jacquet, from the same French family.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- zhâkat, with the zh of measure
- agar havâ sard bâshad, zhâkat bepushid
- a comparison — zhâkat az kâpshan saboktar ast, a cardigan is lighter than a padded jacket
- the same advice to a friend — zhâkat bepush

Before you move on

"A cardigan"? (Zhâkat.) "If it's cold, put on a cardigan"? (Agar havâ sard bâshad, zhâkat bepushid.) Which English word comes from the same French family? (Jacket.)

298.3 ژ (zhe) — the letter that opens ژاکت

Before the new one: write ز and پ once each, and name them.

Now say ژاکت (zhâkat), "a cardigan". You met it a moment ago. This lesson takes its first letter out and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ژ

ژ — zhe, the sound in the middle of English measure.

It opens ژاکت. It is ز with three dots in place of one, and like ز it takes nothing on its left: after ژ the pen lifts, and ا stands on its own before کت.

Arabic has no zh, so the Arabic alphabet had no letter for it. Persian made four letters of its own from Arabic ones, with extra dots or an extra stroke: پ from ب, چ from ج, گ from ک, and ژ from ز. You have now written all four.

Writing: ژ

Put your pen on ژ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ژ at the start of ژاکت, and its three dots
- Trace it: ژ three times, saying zh as you finish each one
- Write it: ز, then ژ, from memory: one dot, then three

- Write it: ژاکت, lifting the pen after ژ and after ا
- Read it: ژاکت aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ژ? (zhe, the zh of measure.) Which word did it come from? (ژاکت, zhâkat, "a cardigan".) Name the four letters Persian added. (گ ژ چ پ.)

298.4 اگر باران بیاید (agar bârân biyâyad) — if it rains

Say "if it's cold, put on a cardigan". (Agar havâ sard bâshad, zhâkat bepushid.) Then "to come", and its present stem. (Âmadan, â-.)

In everyday Persian, rain comes: bârân miâyad, "it's raining", is word for word "rain is coming". That puts âmadan into a rainy condition.

Grammar Lens: biyâyad, the subjunctive of âmadan

Be- meets the stem â-, and a y slips in to keep the two vowels apart: بیاید, biyâyad, "that it come". So biyâyam, biyâyi, biyâyad.

> اگر باران بیاید، در خانه میمانیم. — agar bârân biyâyad, dar khâne mimânim — If it rains, we'll stay at home.

Word for word, "if rain come, we stay in the house". Mimânim is mândan, "to stay", on its stem mân-.

Grammar Lens: three shapes for the result

A real condition can come true, and its result takes one of three shapes. What will happen, in the plain present:

> اگر دیر برسی، قطار را از دست میدهی. — agar dir beresi, qatâr râ az dast midahi — If you arrive late, you'll miss the train.

What to do, as a polite instruction: agar bârân biyâyad, zhâkat bepushid, if it rains, put on a cardigan.

What must happen, with bâyad: agar bârân biyâyad, bâyad zud beravim, if it rains, we have to leave early.
The agar half keeps its subjunctive in all three. Only the result changes.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- biyâyam, biyâyi, biyâyad
- agar bârân biyâyad, dar khâne mimânim
- agar dir beresi, qatâr râ az dast midahi
- one condition, three results — agar bârân biyâyad, then a present, an instruction, and bâyad

Before you move on

"That it come"? (Biyâyad.) Why the y? (To keep two vowels apart.) What are the three shapes of the result? (A present, a polite instruction, bâyad.) What stays the same in the agar half? (The subjunctive.)

298.5 دارد بستگی (bastegi dârad) — it depends

Say "if it rains, we'll stay at home". (Agar bârân biyâyad, dar khâne mimânim.) Then "to tie, to close". (Bastan.)

Asked about a plan, you often cannot answer yes or no yet. The honest answer is "it depends", and then the condition.

You'll want to know: دارد بستگی

دارد بستگی — bastegi dârad — "it depends".

— میروید؟ پارک به فردا — fardâ be pârk miravid? — Are you going to the park tomorrow?

— دارد بستگی. اگر هوا خوب باشد، بله. — bastegi dârad. agar havâ khub bâshad, bale. — It depends. If the weather is good, yes.

To name what it depends on, add be, "to": هوا به دارد بستگی, bastegi dârad be havâ, "it depends on the weather". The be phrase can also come first: be havâ bastegi dârad. And be shomâ bastegi dârad, "it depends on you", is a polite "it's up to you".

The verb is dâshtan, so it takes no mi-: dârad.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bastegi is baste, "bound, tied", with -gi, which makes a noun of it: "boundness". Baste is the participle of bastan, "to tie, to close", built the way gozashte was built from its past stem gozasht. So bastegi dârad be havâ is "it has a binding to the weather".
EtymDB 2.1 takes bastan back to an Indo-European root meaning "to bind, to tie", the same root it gives for English bind.

Your turn

- Say it: bastegi dârad. agar havâ khub bâshad, bale.
- Say it: "it depends on the weather", both ways — bastegi dârad be havâ, be havâ bastegi dârad
- Say it: "it's up to you" — be shomâ bastegi dârad
- Answer: fardâ be muze miravid? — with bastegi dârad and a condition of your own

Before you move on

"It depends on the weather"? (Bastegi dârad be havâ.) What is bastegi, taken apart? (Baste, "bound", with -gi: boundness.) Which English verb shares its root? (Bind.)

298.6 Review — a plan that depends on the weather

Say "if the weather is good", then "if it rains". (Agar havâ khub bâshad, agar bârân biyâyad.)

What you've built

Four lessons, and a plan can now hang on something. Agar opens the condition and takes the subjunctive, bâshad or biyâyad. The result is a present, a polite instruction, or bâyad. And when you cannot say yet, bastegi dârad holds the answer open.
Two friends, making a plan:

> — fardâ be pârk miravim? — bastegi dârad be havâ. agar havâ khub bâshad, miravim. agar bârân biyâyad, dar khâne mimânim. — agar sard bâshad? — zhâkat bepush!

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the four lines of the plan, playing both friends
- a plan with a comparison — agar havâ behtar bâshad, be pârk miravim
- agar havâ mesl-e diruz bâshad, be behtarin pârk-e shahr miravim
- a fact and a plan — do hafte ast ke bârân miâyad; agar fardâ biyâyad, dar khâne mimânam
- a past point and a plan — se ruz pish be pârk raftim; agar havâ khub bâshad, dobâre miravim

Before you move on

"It depends on the weather"? (Bastegi dârad be havâ.) What verb shape follows agar? (The subjunctive.) Which letter opens ژاکت? (ژ, zhe.) And which sits in the middle of مثل? (ث, se.)

Chapter 299

Would, And Six Lines About A Trip

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I would do if things were different, say what I would like, and write six connected lines about a trip.
> Complete FA-W299-shesh-khat: six connected lines to one reader about a trip, with a scene, events in order, a reason and a condition.

299.1 اگر وقت داشتم، میرفتم (agar vaqt dâshtam, miraftam) — if I had time, I would go

Say "if the weather is good, we'll go". (Agar havâ khub bâshad, miravim.) Then "it depends". (Bastegi dârad.)

That condition may come true. The last turn in this run is a condition that is not true at all, and what would follow if it were.

Grammar Lens: a past after agar, the mi- past after it

> اگر وقت داشتم، میرفتم سفر به. — agar vaqt dâshtam, be safar miraftam — If I had time, I would go on a trip.

I have no time, and I am not going. The agar half says so by moving into the plain past, dâshtam, the way English moves to "had". The result goes into the mi- past, miraftam.
That plain past belongs mostly to dâshtan and budan. Most other verbs take the mi- past in the agar half too: agar bârân nemiâmad, miraftim, if it weren't raining, we would go.

Set it beside the real one: agar havâ khub bâshad, miravim, it may be fine, and then we'll go; agar havâ khub bud, miraftim, it is not fine, so we are not going.

Grammar Lens: the mi- past as "would"

The shape from chapter two hundred and ninety, miraftam, "I was going", does a third job here: "I would go".

> اگر پول داشتم، یک ماشین میخریدم. — agar pul dâshtam, yek mâshin mikharidam — If I had the money, I'd buy a car.

> اگر جای تو بودم، زودتر میخوابیدم. — agar jâ-ye to budam, zudtar mikhâbidam — If I were you, I'd go to bed earlier.

Jâ-ye to is "your place", so the advice is "if I were in your place". Budam and dâshtam keep their plain past here too, with no mi-.
The same pair can also look back, "if I had had time, I would have gone": agar vaqt dâshtam, miraftam covers both. The situation tells you which.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- agar vaqt dâshtam, be safar miraftam
- agar pul dâshtam, yek mâshin mikharidam
- advice — agar jâ-ye to budam, zudtar mikhâbidam
- real, then unreal — agar havâ khub bâshad, miravim; agar havâ khub bud, miraftim

Before you move on

Which past goes after agar when the condition is not true? (A past: the plain dâshtam or budam, and for most other verbs the mi- past.) Which says "would"? (The mi- past: miraftam.) "If I were you"? (Agar jâ-ye to budam.)

299.2 داشتم دوست (dust dâshtam) — I would like, and if only

Say "I'd like to go". (Dust dâram beravam.) Then "if I had time, I would go". (Agar vaqt dâshtam, miraftam.)

Put those two together and you have a polite way to turn something down.

Grammar Lens: dust dâshtam, for a wish held back

Dust dâram beravam is open: I'd like to go, and I may. Move dâshtan into the past and the wish steps back from what is happening:

> ندارم وقت ولی بیایم، داشتم دوست. — dust dâshtam biyâyam, vali vaqt nadâram — I'd love to come, but I don't have time.

The wished-for verb stays in the subjunctive, biyâyam, as it did after dust dâram. Only dâshtan moves. Said about the past, it is "I would have liked": dust dâshtam ân film râ bebinam, "I'd have liked to see that film". Bebinam is didan in the subjunctive, on its stem bin-.

Grammar Lens: kâsh, "if only"

کاش, kâsh, is a wish with no result attached. With the plain past it wishes against what is true now:

> داشتم وقت کاش. — kâsh vaqt dâshtam — If only I had time.

With the subjunctive it wishes for something still open:

> باشد خوب هوا فردا کاش. — kâsh fardâ havâ khub bâshad — I do hope the weather is good tomorrow.

That second one sits close to omidvâram ke, with more longing in it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- turn an invitation down kindly — dust dâshtam biyâyam, vali vaqt nadâram

- "If only I had time" — kâsh vaqt dâshtam
- an open wish — kâsh fardâ havâ khub bâshad
- open, then held back — dust dâram beravam, dust dâshtam beravam

Before you move on

Which is open, dust dâram or dust dâshtam? (Dust dâram.) Which verb stays in the subjunctive after either? (The wished-for one: biyâyam.) "If only I had time"? (Kâsh vaqt dâshtam.)

299.3 Review — what would be, and what may be

Say "if I had the money, I'd buy a car". (Agar pul dâshtam, yek mâshin mikharidam.)

What you've built

Two chapters, and two kinds of "if". A condition that may come true takes the subjunctive: agar bârân biyâyad, dar khâne mimânim. One that is not true moves into the past, the plain past for budan and dâshtan, and its result takes the mi- past: agar havâ khub bud, be pârk miraftim, "if the weather were good, we'd go to the park".
The mi- past has now done three jobs. In chapter two hundred and ninety it painted a scene, mikhândam, and told a habit, har ruz miraftam. Here it says what would happen, miraftim.
Dust dâshtam holds a wish back, and kâsh sighs for one:

> dust dâshtam be safar beravam, vali vaqt nadâram. kâsh vaqt dâshtam!

Your turn

- Say it: may be, then is not — agar bârân biyâyad, dar khâne mimânim; agar havâ khub bud, be pârk miraftim
- Say it: dust dâshtam be safar beravam, vali vaqt nadâram. kâsh vaqt dâshtam!

- Answer: fardâ be pârk miravi? — with bastegi dârad and a real condition
- Say it: advice with agar jâ-ye to budam and a cardigan — … zhâkat mipushidam

Before you move on

"If it rains" and "if the weather were good": which verb follows agar in each? (Biyâyad, the subjunctive; bud, the plain past.) "If only"? (Kâsh.) Which letter opens ژاکت? (ژ, zhe.)

299.4 Six lines about a trip

Chapter two hundred and eighty-nine asked for four lines that held together. This one asks for six, and they tell a story.

Pick one reader: a friend, by name.

What to know first

A told story is not a list of events. It has a scene, in bud and the mi- past. It has events in the plain past, put in order with avval, ba'd, vaqti and dar âkhar. It has at least one reason, with chon or barâ-ye hamin, and a feeling, with budam or shodam.

A good one ends by looking forward or wishing: omidvâram ke…, agar … bâshad, …, or agar vaqt dâshtam, … miraftam.

The B1 writing paper asks for a connected text of 130 to 170 words. Six lines is the first step towards it, not the whole of it.

Writing — connected composition

On paper, right to left, write six lines to your reader about a trip, real or invented, one line for each of these:

1. the scene: when it was, with gozashte or pish, and the weather;
2. where you went, who was with you, with bâ, and for how long;
3. the first thing that happened, with avval;
4. the next thing, with ba'd or vaqti, and a reason, with chon, be khâter-e or barâ-ye hamin;

5. how it ended and how you felt, with dar âkhar and budam or shodam;
6. one line forward: omidvâram ke, a real agar, or agar vaqt dâshtam.

Use only words you already write. The whole exercise is choosing the right past for each line, and joining them.

Before you move on

Now read your lines as you read the winter trip in chapter two hundred and ninety-one. Mark every verb S for scene or E for event. Line one should be mostly S; lines three and four mostly E. A line about the weather marked E is the commonest slip: change sard shod back to sard bud.
Then three spelling checks. Every mi- is joined to its verb, میرفتم. Every و is followed by a break smaller than the space between words. And each word keeps its own letter: غذا with غ, قطار with ق, though the two sound alike.
Last, read line six alone. If it has agar and something that may happen, is the verb after agar in the subjunctive? If it is a wish against the facts, is it in the plain past, with the mi- past after it?

Chapter 300

Suddenly and at once

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that something happened suddenly, immediately, without delay, the moment something else happened, and by chance.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 300: I can say that something happened suddenly, immediately, without delay, the moment something else happened, and by chance.

300.1 ناگهان (nâgahân) — suddenly, all of a sudden

Before the new one: say the Persian for an invoice, then the Persian for a cash machine.

You'll want to know: ناگهان

ناگهان (nâgahân) — "suddenly, all of a sudden".

> شد تاریک خانه و رفت برق ناگهان.
> Nâgahân barq raft va khâne târik shod.
> Suddenly the power went off and the house went dark.

Neutral and common in stories; in everyday speech Iranians also say yekhow. It usually opens the clause.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nâgahân is inherited: EtymDB derives it from nâgah (also nâgâh), which continues Middle Persian anāgāh, "unaware, unwitting". A sudden thing comes on you unawares.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nâgahân
- Say it: nâgahân, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nâgahân
- Recall: say the Persian for an invoice, then the Persian for a cash machine, then say nâgahân again

Before you move on

What does ناگهان mean? ("Suddenly, all of a sudden".) Say it once more.

300.2 بلافاصله (belâfâsele) — immediately, right away

Before the new one: say the Persian for a cash machine, then the Persian for suddenly.

You'll want to know: بلافاصله

بلافاصله (belâfâsele) — "immediately, right away".

رسید محل به بلافاصله پلیس.

Polis belâfâsele be mahal resid.

The police arrived at the scene immediately.

Literally "without a gap". Belâfâsele ba'd az means "right after": belâfâsele ba'd az shâm "right after dinner".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

belâfâsele is an Arabic phrase taken over whole: bi- "with", lā "no" and fāṣila "an interval, a gap" (EtymDB lists Arabic fāṣila). Persian uses it as a single adverb.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: belâfâsele
- Say it: belâfâsele, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with belâfâsele
- Recall: say the Persian for a cash machine, then the Persian for suddenly, then say belâfâsele again

Before you move on

What does بلافاصله mean? ("Immediately, right away".) Say it once more.

300.3 بی درنگ (bi derang) — without delay, at once

Before the new one: say the Persian for suddenly, then the Persian for immediately.

You'll want to know: بی درنگ

بی درنگ (bi derang) — "without delay, at once".

زد زنگ آمبولانس به درنگ بی او.

U bi derang be âmbulâns zang zad.

She called an ambulance without delay.

Formal and literary; in speech fowran or zud is more usual. Built from bi "without" and derang "delay".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bi derang is built from bi "without" and derang "a delay, a pause", which is inherited from Middle Persian dērang, "a period, a duration" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bi derang
- Say it: bi derang, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bi derang
- Recall: say the Persian for suddenly, then the Persian for immediately, then say bi derang again

Before you move on

What does بی درنگ mean? ("Without delay, at once".) Say it once more.

300.4 همین که (hamin ke) — the moment that, as soon as

Before the new one: say the Persian for immediately, then the Persian for without delay.

You'll want to know: همین که

همین که (hamin ke) — "the moment that, as soon as".

همین که در را باز کردم، گربه فرار کرد.

Hamin ke dar râ bâz kardam, gorbe farâr kard.

The moment I opened the door, the cat ran away.

It opens a clause, with the past for a past event: hamin ke residam "as soon as I arrived".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

hamin ke joins hamin “this very”, built on ham “same, also” and in “this”, with the linking word ke “that”. All of its parts are inherited Persian words.

What you’ve built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: hamin ke
- Say it: hamin ke, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with hamin ke
- Recall: say the Persian for immediately, then the Persian for without delay, then say hamin ke again

Before you move on

What does همین که mean? (“The moment that, as soon as”.) Say it once more.

300.5 اتفاقی (ettefâqi) — by chance, accidentally

Before the new one: say the Persian for without delay, then the Persian for the moment that.

You’ll want to know: اتفاقی

اتفاقی (ettefâqi) — “by chance, accidentally”.

دیدم بازار در را ام مدرسه دوست اتفاقی دیروز.

Diruz ettefâqi dust-e madrese-am râ dar bâzâr didam.

Yesterday I ran into my school friend at the bazaar by chance.

Also an adjective: yek didâr-e ettefâqi “a chance meeting”. Built on ettefâq “an event”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ettefâqi adds the Persian suffix -i to ettefâq "an event", which is borrowed from Arabic ittifāq (EtymDB). In Arabic the word is usually glossed "agreement, coincidence".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ettefâqi
- Say it: ettefâqi, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ettefâqi
- Recall: say the Persian for without delay, then the Persian for the moment that, then say ettefâqi again

Before you move on

What does اتفاقی mean? ("By chance, accidentally".) Say it once more.

Chapter 301

Things happen

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that something happened, occurred, came about, took place and lasted.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 301: I can say that something happened, occurred, came about, took place and lasted.

301.1 افتادن اتفاق (ettefâq oftâdan) — to happen

Before the new one: say the Persian for the moment that, then the Persian for by chance.

You'll want to know: افتادن اتفاق

افتادن اتفاق (ettefâq oftâdan) — "to happen".

افتاد عجیب اتفاق یک ما خیابان در دیشب.

Dishab dar khiyâbân-e mâ yek ettefâq-e 'ajib oftâd.

Last night something strange happened in our street.

Literally "an event falls". Present stem oft-: in ziyâd ettefâq mioftad "this happens a lot". Che ettefâqi oftâd? "What happened?"

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The noun ettefâq is borrowed from Arabic ittifāq (EtymDB). The verb oftâdan "to fall" is inherited Persian, so the phrase is a Persian compound verb built on an Arabic noun.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ettefâq oftâdan
- Say it: ettefâq oftâdan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ettefâq oftâdan
- Recall: say the Persian for the moment that, then the Persian for by chance, then say ettefâq oftâdan again

Before you move on

What does افتادن اتفاق mean? ("To happen".) Say it once more.

301.2 دادن روی (ruy dâdan) — to occur, to happen (formal)

Before the new one: say the Persian for by chance, then the Persian for to happen.

You'll want to know: دادن روی

دادن روی (ruy dâdan) — "to occur, to happen (formal)".

داد روی شب ده ساعت اتفاق این.

In ettefâq sâ'at-e dah-e shab ruy dâd.

This happened at ten at night.

Formal and common in the news. Literally "to give a face", to show itself. Present stem dah-: ruy midahad.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ruy dâdan joins ruy "face" and dâdan "to give", both inherited Persian; EtymDB takes dâdan back to the Indo-European root deh₃-, "to give".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ruy dâdan
- Say it: ruy dâdan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ruy dâdan
- Recall: say the Persian for by chance, then the Persian for to happen, then say ruy dâdan again

Before you move on

What does دادن روی mean? ("To occur, to happen (formal)".) Say it once more.

301.3 پیوستن وقوع به (be voqu' peyvastan) — to come about, to take place (formal)

Before the new one: say the Persian for to happen, then the Persian for to occur.

You'll want to know: پیوستن وقوع به

پیوستن وقوع به (be voqu' peyvastan) — "to come about, to take place (formal)".

پیوست وقوع به پیش سال دو اتفاق این.

In ettefâq do sâl pish be voqu' peyvast.

This came about two years ago.

Very formal: news and history writing. voqu' "occurrence" + peyvastan "to join"; present stem peyvand-.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

voqu' is usually traced to Arabic wuqū', "a falling, an occurrence"; EtymDB lists no entry. peyvastan "to join" is inherited from Middle Persian paywastan (EtymDB). Literally "to join with occurrence".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: be voqu' peyvastan
- Say it: be voqu' peyvastan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with be voqu' peyvastan
- Recall: say the Persian for to happen, then the Persian for to occur, then say be voqu' peyvastan again

Before you move on

What does پیوستن وقوع به mean? ("To come about, to take place (formal)".) Say it once more.

301.4 گرفتن صورت (surat gereftan) — to take place, to be carried out

Before the new one: say the Persian for to occur, then the Persian for to come about.

You'll want to know: گرفتن صورت

گرفتن صورت (surat gereftan) — "to take place, to be carried out".

گرفت صورت صبح دیروز جلسه.

Jalase diruz sobh surat gereft.

The meeting took place yesterday morning.

Formal, for planned actions. Literally "to take form". Present stem gir-: surat migirad.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

surat is borrowed from Arabic ṣūra, "form, image" (EtymDB). gereftan "to take" is inherited Persian, from the Old Persian root grab- "to seize".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: surat gereftan
- Say it: surat gereftan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with surat gereftan
- Recall: say the Persian for to occur, then the Persian for to come about, then say surat gereftan again

Before you move on

What does گرفتن صورت mean? ("To take place, to be carried out".) Say it once more.

301.5 آوردن دوام (davâm âvardan) — to last, to hold out

Before the new one: say the Persian for to come about, then the Persian for to take place.

You'll want to know: آوردن دوام

آوردن دوام (davâm âvardan) — "to last, to hold out".

نیاورد دوام سنگین برف زیر خانه سقف.

Saqf-e khâne zir-e barf-e sangin davâm nayâvard.

The roof of the house did not hold out under the heavy snow.

Literally "to bring durability". Present stem âvar-: davâm miâvarad; the negative past is davâm nayâvard.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

davâm "duration, lasting" is borrowed from Arabic dawām; EtymDB lists the Arabic word, though not the Persian one. âvardan "to bring" is inherited Persian.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: davâm âvardan
- Say it: davâm âvardan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with davâm âvardan
- Recall: say the Persian for to come about, then the Persian for to take place, then say davâm âvardan again

Before you move on

What does آوردن دوام mean? ("To last, to hold out".) Say it once more.

Chapter 302

Beginnings and endings

> By the end of this chapter: I can say when something began and when it came to an end.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 302: I can say when something began and when it came to an end.

302.1 آغاز (âghâz) — a beginning, a start

Before the new one: say the Persian for to take place, then the Persian for to last.

You'll want to know: آغاز

آغاز (âghâz) — "a beginning, a start".

> آغاز کلاس ساعت هشت است.
> Âghâz-e kelâs sâ'at-e hasht ast.
> The start of the class is at eight o'clock.

More formal than shoru'. Dar âghâz "at the beginning".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

âghâz is a native Persian word. EtymDB lists it without a parent, and its deeper origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: âghâz
- Say it: âghâz, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with âghâz
- Recall: say the Persian for to take place, then the Persian for to last, then say âghâz again

Before you move on

What does آغاز mean? ("A beginning, a start".) Say it once more.

302.2 آغاز شدن (âghâz shodan) — to begin, to start (formal)

Before the new one: say the Persian for to last, then the Persian for a beginning.

You'll want to know: آغاز شدن

آغاز شدن (âghâz shodan) — "to begin, to start (formal)".

جشن ساعت هفت شب آغاز شد.

Jashn sâ'at-e haft-e shab âghâz shod.

The celebration began at seven in the evening.

The thing itself begins: âghâz mishavad. With a doer the verb is âghâz kardan, "to begin something".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

âghâz shodan joins âghâz "a beginning", a native word whose deeper origin is not settled, with shodan "to become", inherited Persian.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: âghâz shodan
- Say it: âghâz shodan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with âghâz shodan
- Recall: say the Persian for to last, then the Persian for a beginning, then say âghâz shodan again

Before you move on

What does آغاز شدن mean? ("To begin, to start (formal)".) Say it once more.

302.3 پایان (pâyân) — an end, an ending

Before the new one: say the Persian for a beginning, then the Persian for to begin.

You'll want to know: پایان

پایان (pâyân) — "an end, an ending".

ندا‌شتم دوست را فیلم پایان.

Pâyân-e film râ dust nadâshtam.

I did not like the end of the film.

Dar pâyân "in the end"; be pâyân residan "to come to an end".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pâyân is a native Persian word, usually traced to Middle Persian pāyān, "end"; EtymDB lists no entry.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pâyân
- Say it: pâyân, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pâyân
- Recall: say the Persian for a beginning, then the Persian for to begin, then say pâyân again

Before you move on

What does پایان mean? ("An end, an ending".) Say it once more.

302.4 یافتن پایان (pâyân yâftan) — to come to an end

Before the new one: say the Persian for to begin, then the Persian for an end.

You'll want to know: یافتن پایان

یافتن پایان (pâyân yâftan) — "to come to an end".

یافت پایان سال هشت از بعد جنگ.

Jang ba'd az hasht sâl pâyân yâft.

The war came to an end after eight years.

Formal; in speech tamâm shod. Present stem yâb-: pâyân miyâbad.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pâyân yâftan joins pâyân "end" and yâftan "to find, to attain", both native Persian words: literally "to find an end". EtymDB lists neither.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: pâyân yâftan
- Say it: pâyân yâftan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with pâyân yâftan
- Recall: say the Persian for to begin, then the Persian for an end, then say pâyân yâftan again

Before you move on

What does یافتن پایان mean? ("To come to an end".) Say it once more.

302.5 سرانجام (saranjâm) — finally, at last

Before the new one: say the Persian for an end, then the Persian for to come to an end.

You'll want to know: سرانجام

سرانجام (saranjâm) — "finally, at last".

رسیدیم خانه به ساعت سه از بعد سرانجام.

Saranjâm ba'd az se sâ'at be khâne residim.

Finally, after three hours, we reached home.

Written and storytelling Persian; in speech bel-akhare. Also a noun, "outcome": saranjâm-e kâr "the outcome of the affair".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins saranjâm joins sar "head" and anjâm "end, completion", both native Persian words. EtymDB lists the compound with no parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: saranjâm
- Say it: saranjâm, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with saranjâm
- Recall: say the Persian for an end, then the Persian for to come to an end, then say saranjâm again

Before you move on

303.1 ابتدا (ebtedâ) — at first, at the start

Before the new one: say the Persian for to come to an end, then the Persian for finally.

You'll want to know: ابتدا

ابتدا (ebtedâ) — "at first, at the start".

> بودند ساکت همه ابتدا.
> Ebtedâ hame sâket budand.
> At first everyone was quiet.

Formal; in speech avval. Also a noun: dar ebtedâ-ye râh "at the start of the road".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ebtedâ is borrowed from Arabic ibtidā', "a beginning" (EtymDB lists the Arabic source).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ebtedâ

303.2 نخست (nakhost) — first, firstly

Before the new one: say the Persian for finally, then the Persian for at first.

You'll want to know: نخست

نخست (nakhost) — "first, firstly".

نخست نامه را خواند و بعد گریه کرد.

Nakhost nâme râ khând va ba'd gerye kard.

First she read the letter, and then she cried.

Literary; nakhost vazir "prime minister". In speech avval.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nakhost is inherited from Middle Persian naxust, "first" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nakhost
- Say it: nakhost, once more

Before the new one: say the Persian for at first, then the Persian for first.

You'll want to know: آنگاه

آنگاه (ângâh) — "then, at that point".

رفتیم پارک به آنگاه و خوردیم شام.

Shâm khordim va ângâh be pârk raftim.

We had dinner and then went to the park.

Literary; in speech ba'd. In writing it can answer an agar clause: "if ..., then ...".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ângâh is built from Persian ân "that" and gâh "time, place", both native words: "that time".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ângâh
- Say it: ângâh, once more

303.4 آخر دست (dast-e âkhar) — at the very end, in the end (colloquial)

Before the new one: say the Persian for first, then the Persian for then.

You'll want to know: آخر دست

آخر دست (dast-e âkhar) — "at the very end, in the end (colloquial)".

خوردیم شام هم با همه آخر دست.

Dast-e âkhar hame bâ ham shâm khordim.

In the end we all had dinner together.

Conversational. Literally "the last hand", as in a card game. Written without the ezafe sign, read dast-e.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dast "hand" is inherited, from Old Persian dasta- (EtymDB); âkhar "last" is borrowed from Arabic ākhir (EtymDB). The phrase is the last hand of a game.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dast-e âkhar
- Say it: dast-e âkhar, once more

303.5 نهایت در (dar nahâyat) — ultimately, in the end

Before the new one: say the Persian for then, then the Persian for at the very end.

You'll want to know: نهایت در

نهایت در (dar nahâyat) — "ultimately, in the end".

بمانیم خانه در گرفتیم تصمیم نهایت در.

Dar nahâyat tasmim gereftim dar khâne bemânim.

Ultimately we decided to stay at home.

nahâyat alone means "the utmost": nahâyat-e lotf "the height of kindness".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nahâyat is borrowed from Arabic nihāya, "end, limit" (EtymDB lists the Arabic source); dar "in" is inherited Persian.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dar nahâyat
- Say it: dar nahâyat, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dar nahâyat
- Recall: say the Persian for then, then the Persian for at the very end, then say dar nahâyat again

Before you move on

What does نهایت در mean? ("Ultimately, in the end".) Say it once more.

304.1 در زمان آن (dar ân zamân) — at that time, back then

Before the new one: say the Persian for at the very end, then the Persian for ultimately.

You'll want to know: در زمان آن

در زمان آن (dar ân zamân) — "at that time, back then".

> در ما زمان آن در روستا یک زندگی میکردیم.
> Dar ân zamân mâ dar yek rustâ zendegi mikardim.
> At that time we lived in a village.

It sets the scene, so the verb is often the past continuous: zendegi mikardim. In speech un moqe'.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dar "in" and ân "that" are inherited Persian. zamân "time" is found in Middle Persian and in Arabic alike; EtymDB lists it with no parent, and its origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dar ân zamân
- Say it: dar ân zamân, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dar ân zamân

What does در آن زمان mean? ("At that time, back then".) Say it once more.

304.2 قدیم (qadim) — the old days, olden times

Before the new one: say the Persian for ultimately, then the Persian for at that time.

You'll want to know: قدیم

قدیم (qadim) — "the old days, olden times".

در قدیم مردم با اسب سفر میکردند.

Dar qadim mardom bâ asb safar mikardand.

In the old days people travelled on horseback.

Qadim-hâ "long ago" in speech. The adjective for old things is qadimi.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

qadim is borrowed from Arabic qadīm, "old, ancient" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: qadim
- Say it: qadim, once more

304.3 بعدها (ba'dhâ) — later on, afterwards

Before the new one: say the Persian for at that time, then the Persian for the old days.

You'll want to know: بعدها

بعدها (ba'dhâ) — "later on, afterwards".

میگفت راست او که فهمیدم بعدها.

Ba'dhâ fahmidam ke u râst migoft.

Later on I realised that he had been telling the truth.

It looks forward from a point in the story, often by years. Built on ba'd "after" with the plural -hâ.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ba'dhâ adds the Persian plural ending -hâ to ba'd "after", which is borrowed from Arabic ba'd (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ba'dhâ
- Say it: ba'dhâ, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ba'dhâ
- Recall: say the Persian for at that time, then the Persian for the old days, then say ba'dhâ again

Before you move on

What does بعدها mean? ("Later on, afterwards".) Say it once more.

304.4 پس آن از (az ân pas) — from then on, after that

Before the new one: say the Persian for the old days, then the Persian for later on.

You'll want to know: پس آن از

پس آن از (az ân pas) — "from then on, after that".

پس آن از روز هر ورزش میکرد.

Az ân pas har ruz varzesh mikard.

From then on he exercised every day.

Formal; in speech az un be ba'd. With the past continuous it describes a new habit.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

az "from", ân "that" and pas "after" are all inherited Persian; pas continues Middle Persian pas, "then, afterwards, behind" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: az ân pas
- Say it: az ân pas, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with az ân pas
- Recall: say the Persian for the old days, then the Persian for later on, then say az ân pas again

Before you move on

What does پس آن از mean? ("From then on, after that".) Say it once more.

304.5 اخیرا (akhiran) — recently, lately

Before the new one: say the Persian for later on, then the Persian for from then on.

You'll want to know: اخیرا

اخیرا (akhiran) — "recently, lately".

خریدم جدید کتاب یک اخیرا.

Akhiran yek ketâb-e jadid kharidam.

I recently bought a new book.

Formal; in speech tâzegi-hâ.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

akhiran is usually traced to Arabic akhīran, "lately", the adverb of akhīr "last" with the ending -an; EtymDB lists no entry for it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: akhiran
- Say it: akhiran, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with akhiran
- Recall: say the Persian for later on, then the Persian for from then on, then say akhiran again

305.1 دم سپیده (sepide dam) — dawn, daybreak

Before the new one: say the Persian for from then on, then the Persian for recently.

You'll want to know: دم سپیده

دم سپیده (sepide dam) — "dawn, daybreak".

> افتادیم راه دم سپیده ما.
> Mâ sepide dam râh oftâdim.
> We set off at dawn.

Literary; in speech sobh-e zud. sepide "whiteness" + dam "breath, moment".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sepide "whiteness, the dawn" (EtymDB) is built on sepid "white", and dam here is the Persian word for "breath, moment": the moment of whiteness. EtymDB gives neither a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: sepide dam
- Say it: sepide dam, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with sepide dam

بامداد (bâmdâd) — "early morning, the small hours".

افتاد اتفاق بامداد چهار ساعت زلزله.

Zelzele sâ'at-e chahâr-e bâmdâd ettefâq oftâd.

The earthquake happened at four in the morning.

The news gives night-time hours with bâmdâd: sâ'at-e se-ye bâmdâd "3 a.m.".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bâmdâd is inherited from Middle Persian bāmdād, "dawn, morning" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bâmdâd
- Say it: bâmdâd, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bâmdâd
- Recall: say the Persian for recently, then the Persian for dawn, then say bâmdâd again

Before you move on

What does بامداد mean? ("Early morning, the small hours".) Say it once more.

305.3 روز آن فردای (fardâ-ye ân ruz) — the next day, the following day

Before the new one: say the Persian for dawn, then the Persian for early morning.

You'll want to know: روز آن فردای

روز آن فردای (fardâ-ye ân ruz) — "the next day, the following day".

رفتیم بیمارستان به دوباره روز آن فردای.

Fardâ-ye ân ruz dobâre be bimârestân raftim.

The next day we went to the hospital again.

In a story set in the past, fardâ alone would mean "tomorrow"; this phrase, or ruz-e ba'd, gives "the day after".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fardâ "tomorrow", ân "that" and ruz "day" are inherited Persian; EtymDB takes ruz back through Middle Persian to Old Persian rauča-, "day".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: fardâ-ye ân ruz
- Say it: fardâ-ye ân ruz, once more

305.5 روز شبانه (shabâne ruz) — round the clock, day and night; a full day

Before the new one: say the Persian for the next day, then the Persian for the time.

You’ll want to know: روز شبانه

روز شبانه (shabâne ruz) — “round the clock, day and night; a full day”.

او در بیمارستان شبانه روز کار میکرد.

U dar bimârestân shabâne ruz kâr mikard.

She worked round the clock at the hospital.

Also a noun, a full twenty-four hours: do shabâne ruz “two days and nights”. Built from shab “night” with -âne and ruz “day”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

shabâne ruz joins shabâne “nightly”, built on shab “night”, with ruz “day”; both are inherited Persian. EtymDB takes ruz back through Middle Persian to Old Persian rauča-, and sets shab beside Sanskrit kṣap- “night”.

What you’ve built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: shabâne ruz
- Say it: shabâne ruz, once more

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 360: I can give my opinion and my point of view, say what I believe and name a theory.

360.1 عقیده (’aqide) — an opinion, a belief

Before the new one: say the Persian for an invoice, then the Persian for a cash machine.

You’ll want to know: عقیده

عقیده (’aqide) — “an opinion, a belief”.

> میگوید راست او که است این من عقیده.
> ’aqide-ye man in ast ke u râst miguyad.
> My opinion is that he is telling the truth.

Plural ’aqâyed, an Arabic broken plural. Be ’aqide-ye man — in my opinion, a little more formal than be nazar-e man.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

عقیده was borrowed from Arabic 'aqīda "a creed, a firm belief" (EtymDB). A belief, in this picture, is something you have tied fast.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: 'aqide
- Say it: 'aqide, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with 'aqide
- Recall: say the Persian for an invoice, then the Persian for a cash machine, then say 'aqide again

Before you move on

What does عقیده mean? ("An opinion, a belief".) Say it once more.

360.2 دیدگاه (didgâh) — a point of view, a viewpoint

Before the new one: say the Persian for a cash machine, then the Persian for an opinion.

You'll want to know: دیدگاه

دیدگاه (didgâh) — "a point of view, a viewpoint".

از دیدگاه پدرم، این کار خطرناک است.

az didgâh-e pedaram, in kâr khatarnâk ast.

From my father's point of view, this is dangerous.

Az didgâh-e … — from the point of view of … . Plural didgâhhâ.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دیدگاه is a native Persian compound built from did "sight", the past stem of didan "to see", and -gâh "place". A point of view is the place you look from.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: didgâh
- Say it: didgâh, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with didgâh
- Recall: say the Persian for a cash machine, then the Persian for an opinion, then say didgâh again

Before you move on

Before you move on

What does معتقد بودن mean? ("To believe, to be convinced".) Say it once more.

360.5 نظریه (nazariye) — a theory

Before the new one: say the Persian for an attitude, then the Persian for to believe.

You'll want to know: نظریه

نظریه (nazariye) — "a theory".

این نظریه خیلی قدیمی است.

in nazariye kheyli qadimi ast.

This theory is very old.

Built on nazar "view" with the suffix -iye. Plural nazariyehâ.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

نظریه comes from Arabic naẓariyya “theory” (EtymDB), built on naẓar “a look, a view”, the same word that gave Persian nazar. A theory is a way of viewing the facts.

What you’ve built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nazariye
- Say it: nazariye, once more

362.5 کردن قانع (qâne' kardan) — to convince, to persuade

Before the new one: say the Persian for logic, then the Persian for logical.

You'll want to know: کردن قانع

کردن قانع (qâne' kardan) — "to convince, to persuade".

کردم قانع را دوستم بالاخره.

bâlâkhare dustam râ qâne' kardam.

In the end I convinced my friend.

Qâne' "satisfied, content" + kardan. Qâne' shodan — to be convinced. The person takes râ.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

قانع is usually traced to Arabic qāni' "content, satisfied"; with the Persian verb kardan "to do", to convince someone is to make them content with your view.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: qâne' kardan
- Say it: qâne' kardan, once more

363.4 شدن ثابت (sâbet shodan) — to be proven

Before the new one: say the Persian for to claim, then the Persian for to prove.

You'll want to know: شدن ثابت

شدن ثابت (sâbet shodan) — "to be proven".

شد ثابت او حرف.

harf-e u sâbet shod.

What she said was proven.

Sâbet "fixed, firm" + shodan "to become" (present stem shav-). Sâbet kardan — to prove.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ثابت comes from Arabic thābit "firm, constant, unchanging" (EtymDB), from the same Arabic family as ithbāt. A claim that is proven has become firm.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

367.1 از دیگر طرف (az taraf-e digar) — on the other hand

Before the new one: say the Persian for an objection, then the Persian for to give an example.

You'll want to know: از دیگر طرف

از دیگر طرف (az taraf-e digar) — "on the other hand".

> این خانه بزرگ است. از طرف دیگر، خیلی گران است.
> in khâne bozorg ast. az taraf-e digar, kheyli gerân ast.
> This house is big. On the other hand, it is very expensive.

Often paired with az yek taraf "on the one hand". A whole clause follows it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

از دیگر طرف is literally "from the other side": az "from" and digar "other" are inherited Persian (EtymDB traces digar to PIE dwóh₁ "two"), and taraf was borrowed from Arabic ṭaraf "side" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

What does به دیگر عبارت mean? ("In other words".) Say it once more.

367.3 اما (ammâ) — but, however

Before the new one: say the Persian for on the other hand, then the Persian for in other words.

You'll want to know: اما

اما (ammâ) — "but, however".

رفتیم بیرون ما اما بود، سرد هوا.

havâ sard bud, ammâ mâ birun raftim.

It was cold, but we went out.

A little more formal than vali; both join two clauses, and ammâ can also open a sentence.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

اما comes from Arabic ammā "as for, as regards" (EtymDB); Persian uses it to mean "but".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ammâ
- Say it: ammâ, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ammâ
- Recall: say the Persian for on the other hand, then the Persian for in other words, then say ammâ again

Before you move on

What does اما mean? ("But, however".) Say it once more.

367.4 وجود این با (bâ in vojud) — nevertheless, even so

Before the new one: say the Persian for in other words, then the Persian for but.

You'll want to know: وجود این با

وجود این با (bâ in vojud) — "nevertheless, even so".

میآمد باران. با این وجود، مسابقه ادامه پیدا کرد.

bârân miâmad. bâ in vojud, mosâbeqe edâme peydâ kard.

It was raining. Nevertheless, the match went on.

Like bâ in hâl; a whole clause follows it. Compare bâ vojud-e + a noun, "despite".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

وجود این با is literally "with this existing": bâ "with" and in "this" are inherited Persian, and vojud comes from Arabic wujūd "existence" (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bâ in vojud
- Say it: bâ in vojud, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bâ in vojud

Before you move on

What does وجود این با mean? ("Nevertheless, even so".) Say it once more.

367.5 هرچند (harchand) — although, even though

Before the new one: say the Persian for but, then the Persian for nevertheless.

You'll want to know: هرچند

هرچند (harchand) — "although, even though".

هرچند خسته بودم، تا آخر فیلم را دیدم.

harchand khaste budam, tâ âkhar film râ didam.

Although I was tired, I watched the film to the end.

Takes an indicative clause, like agarche; the main clause follows without a linking word.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

هرچند is a native Persian compound built from har "every" and chand "how many, however much": however much that is so, the main clause still holds.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: harchand
- Say it: harchand, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with harchand
- Recall: say the Persian for but, then the Persian for nevertheless, then say harchand again

Before you move on

What does هرچند mean? ("Although, even though".) Say it once more.

367.6 Reasons and opinions — a review

Say the Persian for an opinion and a point of view.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an opinion, a point of view, an attitude, to believe, a theory
- to agree, to oppose, opposed, to believe in, to doubt

- an argument, to argue, logic, logical, to convince
- a claim, to claim, to prove, to be proven, evidence
- a fact, the truth, in fact, a rumour, to deny
- to judge, criticism, to criticise, to exaggerate, to justify
- a discussion, to discuss, a negotiation, an objection, to give an example
- on the other hand, in other words, but, nevertheless, although

368.1 تحلیل (tahlil) — an analysis

Before the new one: say the Persian for nevertheless, then the Persian for although.

You'll want to know: تحلیل

تحلیل (tahlil) — "an analysis".

> بود خوب خیلی بازی از او تحلیل.
> tahlil-e u az bâzi kheyli khub bud.
> His analysis of the game was very good.

Plural tahlilhâ. Tahlilgar — an analyst.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

تحلیل is usually traced to Arabic taḥlīl "analysis", a verbal noun usually explained as untying or breaking something into its parts.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tahlil
- Say it: tahlil, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tahlil
- Recall: say the Persian for nevertheless, then the Persian for although, then say tahlil again

> برداشت من این بود که او ناراحت است.
> bardâsht-e man in bud ke u nârâhat ast.
> My impression was that he was upset.

The past stem of bardâshtan "to pick up": what you take from something. It is also a harvest.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

برداشت is native Persian, built from bar "up, on" + dâsht, the past stem of dâshtan "to have, to hold". It is what you pick up from a text or a meeting.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bardâsht
- Say it: bardâsht, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bardâsht

Before the new one: say the Persian for to analyse, then the Persian for an impression.

You'll want to know: گیری نتیجه

گیری نتیجه (natije giri) — "a conclusion (drawn)".

بود منطقی او گیری نتیجه.

natije giri-ye u manteqi bud.

His conclusion was logical.

Natije "result" + giri "taking", from gereftan. Also the last part of an essay.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

گیری نتیجه joins natije, from Arabic natīja "result" (EtymDB), to giri "taking", built on gir-, the present stem of the inherited Persian verb gereftan "to take".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: natije giri
- Say it: natije giri, once more

368.5 کردن اشاره (eshâre kardan) — to mention, to refer to

Before the new one: say the Persian for an impression, then the Persian for a conclusion.

You'll want to know: کردن اشاره

کردن اشاره (eshâre kardan) — "to mention, to refer to".

کرد اشاره مشکل این به نامه در او.

u dar nâme be in moshkel eshâre kard.

In the letter he mentioned this problem.

Takes be: be chizi eshâre kardan. Literally to make a sign towards something.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

اشاره was borrowed from Arabic ishāra “a sign, a gesture” (EtymDB); with the Persian verb kardan it means to refer to something, in a gesture or in words.

What you’ve built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

369.1 علت (’ellat) — a cause, a reason

Before the new one: say the Persian for a conclusion, then the Persian for to mention.

You’ll want to know: علت

علت (’ellat) — “a cause, a reason”.

> نیست معلوم هنوز او بیماری علت.
> ’ellat-e bimâri-ye u hanuz ma’lum nist.
> The cause of his illness is still not known.

Plural ’elal, an Arabic broken plural. Be ’ellat-e — because of.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

علت comes from Arabic ’illa (EtymDB), a word for both a cause and an illness; in Persian it means the cause or reason for something.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: 'ellat
- Say it: 'ellat, once more

Taqsir-e kasi budan — to be someone's fault. Very common in speech.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

تقصیر comes from Arabic taqṣīr (EtymDB), a verbal noun usually explained as falling short; in Persian it is the fault or the blame.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: taqsir
- Say it: taqsir, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with taqsir
- Recall: say the Persian for to be worth it, then the Persian for to pay off, then say taqsir again

Before you move on

What does تقصیر mean? ("A fault, the blame".) Say it once more.

376.2 گناه (gonâh) — a sin; guilt

Before the new one: say the Persian for to pay off, then the Persian for a fault.

You'll want to know: گناه

گناه (gonâh) — "a sin; guilt".

است گناه دزدی.

dozdi gonâh ast.

Stealing is a sin.

Gonâh-e u nist — it is not his fault. Gonâhkâr — guilty.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

گناه is an inherited Persian word, usually traced to Middle Persian wināh "sin, offence"; EtymDB lists it without a parent.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: gonâh
- Say it: gonâh, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with gonâh

میمانیم خانه در بیاید، باران که صورتی در.

dar surati ke bârân biyâyad, dar khâne mimânim.

If it rains, we will stay at home.

It takes the subjunctive, like agar, and sounds more formal. With the indicative it can also mean "whereas".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

در صورتی که is literally "in a form that": surat comes from Arabic ṣūra "form, image" (EtymDB), here a state of affairs, and dar "in" and ke "that" are Persian.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dar surati ke
- Say it: dar surati ke, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dar surati ke
- Recall: say the Persian for addiction, then the Persian for provided that, then say dar surati ke again

Before you move on

What does در صورتی که mean? ("In the event that, if".) Say it once more.

390.3 در صورت (dar surat-e) — in case of, in the event of

Before the new one: say the Persian for provided that, then the Persian for in the event that.

You'll want to know: در صورت

در صورت (dar surat-e) — "in case of, in the event of".

در صورت نیاز، دکتر به خانه میآید.

dar surat-e niyâz, doktor be khâne miâyad.

If needed, the doctor comes to the house.

It takes a noun with ezafe: dar surat-e niyâz "if needed", dar surat-e bârân "if it rains".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

در صورت joins the Persian preposition dar "in" to surat, from Arabic ṣūra "form, image" (EtymDB): in the shape of, in the case of.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dar surat-e
- Say it: dar surat-e, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dar surat-e
- Recall: say the Persian for provided that, then the Persian for in the event that, then say dar surat-e again

Before you move on

What does در صورت mean? ("In case of, in the event of".) Say it once more.

390.4 اینکه مگر (magar inke) — unless

Before the new one: say the Persian for in the event that, then the Persian for in case of.

You'll want to know: اینکه مگر

اینکه مگر (magar inke) — "unless".

بیاید برف اینکه مگر میرویم، فردا.

fardâ miravim, magar inke barf biyâyad.

We will go tomorrow, unless it snows.

It takes the subjunctive: magar inke + biyâyad.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

اینکه مگر is native Persian, built from magar, which EtymDB traces to a Middle Persian phrase glossed "perhaps; lest", + inke "that", from in "this" and ke "that".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: magar inke
- Say it: magar inke, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with magar inke
- Recall: say the Persian for in the event that, then the Persian for in case of, then say magar inke again

Before you move on

What does اینکه مگر mean? ("Unless".) Say it once more.

390.5 صورت این غیر در (dar gheyr-e in surat) — otherwise, if not

Before the new one: say the Persian for in case of, then the Persian for unless.

You'll want to know: صورت این غیر در

صورت این غیر در (dar gheyr-e in surat) — "otherwise, if not".

میشود جریمه صورت این غیر در بدهد، فردا تا را پول باید او.

u bâyad pul râ tâ fardâ bedahad, dar gheyr-e in surat jarime mishavad.

He must pay by tomorrow; otherwise he will be fined.

A formal vagarna; a whole clause follows.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

صورت این غیر در is literally "in other than this form": gheyr comes from Arabic ghayr "other than" and surat from Arabic ṣūra "form" (both in EtymDB), held together by the Persian words dar "in" and in "this".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dar gheyr-e in surat
- Say it: dar gheyr-e in surat, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dar gheyr-e in surat
- Recall: say the Persian for in case of, then the Persian for unless, then say dar gheyr-e in surat again

Before you move on

What does صورت این غیر در mean? ("Otherwise, if not".) Say it once more.

Chapter 391

Supposing

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can make an assumption, put forward a hypothesis, set a formal condition with if, concede a point and say that I imagined something wrongly.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 391: I can make an assumption, put forward a hypothesis, set a formal condition with if, concede a point and say that I imagined something wrongly.

391.1 کردن فرض (farz kardan) — to suppose, to assume

Before the new one: say the Persian for unless, then the Persian for otherwise.

You'll want to know: کردن فرض

کردن فرض (farz kardan) — "to suppose, to assume".

> دارد خبر او که کردم فرض من.
> man farz kardam ke u khabar dârad.
> I assumed that he knew.

Farz "assumption" + kardan (stem kon-). Farz konim ke … — let us suppose that … .

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

فرض was borrowed from Arabic farḍ (EtymDB), a word for something laid down; in Persian it means an assumption. Kardan "to do" is inherited Persian.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: farz kardan
- Say it: farz kardan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with farz kardan
- Recall: say the Persian for unless, then the Persian for otherwise, then say farz kardan again

Before you move on

What does فرض کردن mean? ("To suppose, to assume".) Say it once more.

391.2 فرضیه (farziye) — a hypothesis

Before the new one: say the Persian for otherwise, then the Persian for to suppose.

You'll want to know: فرضیه

فرضیه (farziye) — "a hypothesis".

دانشمندها این فرضیه را آزمایش کردند.

dâneshmandhâ in farziye râ âzmâyesh kardand.

The scientists tested this hypothesis.

Farz "assumption" + -iye. Plural farziyehâ.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

فرضیه is built on farz "assumption", from Arabic farḍ (EtymDB), with the ending -iye, as in nazariye "theory".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: farziye
- Say it: farziye, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with farziye
- Recall: say the Persian for otherwise, then the Persian for to suppose, then say farziye again

Before you move on

What does فرضیه mean? ("A hypothesis".) Say it once more.

391.3 چنانچه (chenânche) — if (formal), in case

Before the new one: say the Persian for to suppose, then the Persian for a hypothesis.

You'll want to know: چنانچه

چنانچه (chenânche) — "if (formal), in case".

چنانچه هوا خوب باشد، مسابقه برگزار میشود.

chenânche havâ khub bâshad, mosâbeqe bargozâr mishavad.

If the weather is good, the match will be held.

Formal and written, like agar; it takes the subjunctive.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چنانچه is a native Persian compound built from chenân "so, in that way" and che "what": in such a way that, if.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: chenânche
- Say it: chenânche, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with chenânche
- Recall: say the Persian for to suppose, then the Persian for a hypothesis, then say chenânche again

Before you move on

What does چنانچه mean? ("If (formal), in case".) Say it once more.

391.4 اینکه وجود با (bâ vojud-e inke) — even though, despite the fact that

Before the new one: say the Persian for a hypothesis, then the Persian for if.

You'll want to know: اینکه وجود با

اینکه وجود با (bâ vojud-e inke) — "even though, despite the fact that".

رفتیم بیرون میآمد، باران اینکه وجود با.

bâ vojud-e inke bârân miâmad, birun raftim.

Even though it was raining, we went out.

It takes an indicative clause, like agarche. With a noun, bâ vojud-e alone.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

اینکه وجود با is literally "with the existence of the fact that": vojud comes from Arabic wujūd "existence" (EtymDB), and bâ "with" and inke "that" are Persian.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: bâ vojud-e inke
- Say it: bâ vojud-e inke, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with bâ vojud-e inke
- Recall: say the Persian for a hypothesis, then the Persian for if, then say bâ vojud-e inke again

Before you move on

What does اینکه وجود با mean? ("Even though, despite the fact that".) Say it once more.

391.5 خیال کردن (khiyâl kardan) — to imagine; to think wrongly

Before the new one: say the Persian for if, then the Persian for even though.

You'll want to know: خیال کردن

خیال کردن (khiyâl kardan) — "to imagine; to think wrongly".

بود خانه اما است، رفته او کردم خیال.

khiyâl kardam u rafte ast, ammâ khâne bud.

I thought he had gone, but he was at home.

Often a belief that turns out wrong. Khiyâl "imagination" + kardan.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

خیال was borrowed from Arabic khayāl "imagination" (EtymDB); with the inherited verb kardan "to do", it means to imagine, often wrongly.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: khiyâl kardan
- Say it: khiyâl kardan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with khiyâl kardan
- Recall: say the Persian for if, then the Persian for even though, then say khiyâl kardan again

Before you move on

What does خیال کردن mean? ("To imagine; to think wrongly".) Say it once more.

391.6 Words from chapters 384–391 — a review

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 392: I can say how likely something is, that it is possible, that it is unlikely and that it is not yet definite.

392.1 احتمال (ehtemâl) — a probability, a chance

Before the new one: say the Persian for even though, then the Persian for to imagine.

You'll want to know: احتمال

احتمال (ehtemâl) — "a probability, a chance".

> احتمال باران امروز زیاد است.
> ehtemâl-e bârân emruz ziyâd ast.
> There is a good chance of rain today.

Ehtemâl dârad ke + subjunctive — it is likely that. The adverb is ehtemâlan.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

احتمال is usually traced to Arabic iḥtimāl "likelihood, what can be borne", on the root ḥ-m-l "to carry", the same source as ehtemâlan "probably".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ehtemâl
- Say it: ehtemâl, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ehtemâl
- Recall: say the Persian for even though, then the Persian for to imagine, then say ehtemâl again

Before you move on

What does احتمال mean? ("A probability, a chance".) Say it once more.

392.2 دادن احتمال (ehtemâl dâdan) — to think likely, to suspect

Before the new one: say the Persian for to imagine, then the Persian for a probability.

You'll want to know: دادن احتمال

دادن احتمال (ehtemâl dâdan) — "to think likely, to suspect".

بیاید دیر او که میدهم احتمال من.

man ehtemâl midaham ke u dir biyâyad.

I think he will probably come late.

Ehtemâl + dâdan (stem deh-); ke + subjunctive follows.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

احتمال دادن is literally "to give a likelihood": ehtemâl is usually traced to Arabic iḥtimāl, and dâdan "to give" is traced by EtymDB to PIE deh₃-.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ehtemâl dâdan
- Say it: ehtemâl dâdan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ehtemâl dâdan
- Recall: say the Persian for to imagine, then the Persian for a probability, then say ehtemâl dâdan again

Before you move on

What does احتمال دادن mean? ("To think likely, to suspect".) Say it once more.

392.3 امکان (emkân) — a possibility; a facility

Before the new one: say the Persian for a probability, then the Persian for to think likely.

You'll want to know: امکان

امکان (emkân) — "a possibility; a facility".

بیاید برف فردا که دارد امکان.

emkân dârad ke fardâ barf biyâyad.

It may snow tomorrow.

Emkân dârad ke + subjunctive — it is possible that. Plural emkânât, facilities.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

امکان is usually traced to Arabic imkān "possibility", from the same Arabic family as mumkin, the source of Persian momken "possible".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: emkân
- Say it: emkân, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with emkân
- Recall: say the Persian for a probability, then the Persian for to think likely, then say emkân again

Before you move on

What does امکان mean? ("A possibility; a facility".) Say it once more.

392.4 بعید (ba'id) — unlikely; far-fetched

Before the new one: say the Persian for to think likely, then the Persian for a possibility.

You'll want to know: بعید

بعید (ba'id) — "unlikely; far-fetched".

بیاید امروز او که است بعید.

ba'id ast ke u emruz biyâyad.

It is unlikely that he will come today.

Ba'id ast ke + subjunctive. Its first meaning is "far".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

بعید is usually traced to Arabic ba'īd "far, remote": an unlikely thing is far from happening.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ba'id
- Say it: ba'id, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ba'id
- Recall: say the Persian for to think likely, then the Persian for a possibility, then say ba'id again

Before you move on

What does بعید mean? ("Unlikely; far-fetched".) Say it once more.

392.5 قطعی (qat'i) — definite, final

Before the new one: say the Persian for a possibility, then the Persian for unlikely.

You'll want to know: قطعی

قطعی (qat'i) — "definite, final".

نیست قطعی هنوز سفر تاریخ.

târikh-e safar hanuz qat'i nist.

The date of the trip is not definite yet.

From qat' "cutting" + -i: a cut-and-dried decision.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

قطعی is usually traced to Arabic qaṭ'ī "decisive", built on qaṭ' "cutting": a definite answer cuts off doubt.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: qat'i
- Say it: qat'i, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with qat'i
- Recall: say the Persian for a possibility, then the Persian for unlikely, then say qat'i again

Before you move on

What does قطعی mean? ("Definite, final".) Say it once more.

Chapter 393

Sure and unsure

393.1 قطعا (qat'an) — definitely, certainly

Before the new one: say the Persian for unlikely, then the Persian for definite.

You'll want to know: قطعا

قطعا (qat'an) — "definitely, certainly".

> او قطعا فردا میآید.
> u qat'an fardâ miâyad.
> He is definitely coming tomorrow.

Close to hatman in meaning, and a little more formal.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

قطعا is usually traced to Arabic qaṭ'an "decisively", an adverb built on qaṭ' "cutting", like qat'i "definite".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: qat'an
- Say it: qat'an, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with qat'an
- Recall: say the Persian for unlikely, then the Persian for definite, then say qat'an again

Before you move on

What does قطعا mean? ("Definitely, certainly".) Say it once more.

393.2 تردید (tardid) — doubt, hesitation

Before the new one: say the Persian for definite, then the Persian for definitely.

You'll want to know: تردید

تردید (tardid) — "doubt, hesitation".

> است راه بهترین این تردید بدون.
> bedun-e tardid in behtarin râh ast.
> Without doubt this is the best way.

Tardid dâshtan — to be in doubt, to hesitate.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

تردید is usually traced to Arabic tardīd, a verbal noun usually explained as going back and forth: a doubting mind wavers.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tardid
- Say it: tardid, once more

393.3 اطمینان (etminân) — certainty, confidence

Before the new one: say the Persian for definitely, then the Persian for doubt.

You'll want to know: اطمینان

اطمینان (etminân) — "certainty, confidence".

توست با حق که میگویم اطمینان با.

bâ etminân miguyam ke haq bâ tost.

I can say for certain that you are right.

Etminân dâshtan — to be sure; etminân dâdan — to reassure.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

اطمینان was borrowed from Arabic iṭmi'nān "calm, assurance" (EtymDB), from the same Arabic family as muṭma'inn "sure", the source of Persian motma'en.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: etminân
- Say it: etminân, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with etminân

393.4 شدن مطمئن (motma'en shodan) — to make sure, to become sure

Before the new one: say the Persian for doubt, then the Persian for certainty.

You'll want to know: شدن مطمئن

شدن مطمئن (motma'en shodan) — "to make sure, to become sure".

قبل از رفتن مطمئن شدم که در قفل است.

qabl az raftan motma'en shodam ke dar qofl ast.

Before leaving I made sure that the door was locked.

Motma'en "sure" + shodan. Motma'en budan — to be sure. It is spelled with ئ.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

مطمئن comes from Arabic muṭma'inn "calm, sure" (EtymDB); with the inherited Persian verb shodan "to become", it means to become sure.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: motma'en shodan
- Say it: motma'en shodan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with motma'en shodan

Before you move on

What does مطمئن شدن mean? ("To make sure, to become sure".) Say it once more.

393.5 ظاهرا (zâheran) — apparently, seemingly

Before the new one: say the Persian for certainty, then the Persian for to make sure.

You'll want to know: ظاهرا

ظاهرا (zâheran) — "apparently, seemingly".

ظاهرا قطار امروز دیر میآید.

zâheran qatâr emruz dir miâyad.

Apparently the train is late today.

From zâher "outward appearance". For what seems true from the outside.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ظاهرا is usually traced to Arabic ẓāhiran "outwardly", an adverb built on ẓāhir "visible, apparent".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: zâheran

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 394: I can make a wish with if only, assess a plan, say what nobody can guarantee and talk about taking a risk.

394.1 کاش ای (ey kâsh) — if only, I wish

Before the new one: say the Persian for to make sure, then the Persian for apparently.

You'll want to know: کاش ای

کاش ای (ey kâsh) — "if only, I wish".

> داشتم بیشتری وقت کاش ای.
> ey kâsh vaqt-e bishtari dâshtam.
> If only I had more time.

It takes the past for a wish about now: ey kâsh dâshtam. Kâsh alone means the same.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ای کاش is native Persian, built from ey "oh", the calling word, + kâsh "would that". The origin of kâsh is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ey kâsh

394.2 کردن ارزیابی (arzyâbi kardan) — to assess, to evaluate

Before the new one: say the Persian for apparently, then the Persian for if only.

You'll want to know: کردن ارزیابی

کردن ارزیابی (arzyâbi kardan) — "to assess, to evaluate".

میکند ارزیابی را آموز دانش هر کار معلم.

mo'allem kâr-e har dânesh âmuz râ arzyâbi mikonad.

The teacher assesses each pupil's work.

Arz "worth" + yâbi "finding", from yâftan, + kardan.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ارزیابی is a modern native coinage built from arz "worth", the stem behind arzesh "value", + yâbi "finding", built on yâb-, the present stem of yâftan "to find". To assess is to find the worth.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: arzyâbi kardan
- Say it: arzyâbi kardan, once more

419.1 خصوصی حریم (harim-e khosusi) — privacy

Before the new one: say the Persian for to upload, then the Persian for technical support.

You'll want to know: خصوصی حریم

خصوصی حریم (harim-e khosusi) — "privacy".

> نمیگذارد احترام ما خصوصی حریم به برنامه این.
> in barnâme be harim-e khosusi-ye mâ ehterâm nemigozârad.
> This app does not respect our privacy.

Harim "protected space" + ezafe + khosusi "private".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

خصوصی حریم is literally "the private protected space": harim is usually traced to Arabic ḥarīm "a protected precinct", and khosusi to Arabic khuṣūṣī "particular, private".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: harim-e khosusi
- Say it: harim-e khosusi, once more

419.3 ویروس (virus) — a virus

Before the new one: say the Persian for privacy, then the Persian for to hack.

You'll want to know: ویروس

ویروس (virus) — "a virus".

کامپیوترم ویروس گرفته است.

kâmpyuteram virus gerefte ast.

My computer has caught a virus.

For computers and for illness alike.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ویروس came into Persian from European languages, usually traced through French virus to Latin vīrus "slime, poison" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: virus
- Say it: virus, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with virus
- Recall: say the Persian for privacy, then the Persian for to hack, then say virus again

Before you move on

What does ویروس mean? ("A virus".) Say it once more.

419.4 گذاشتن اشتراک به (be eshterâk gozâshtan) — to share (online)

Before the new one: say the Persian for to hack, then the Persian for a virus.

You'll want to know: گذاشتن اشتراک به

گذاشتن اشتراک به (be eshterâk gozâshtan) — "to share (online)".

گذاشت اشتراک به را سفرش عکسهای او.

u 'akshâ-ye safarash râ be eshterâk gozâsht.

She shared the photos from her trip.

Eshterâk "sharing; subscription" + gozâshtan "to put" (stem gozâr-).

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

گذاشتن اشتراک به is literally "to put into sharing": eshterâk is usually traced to Arabic ishtirāk "sharing, taking part", and gozâshtan "to put" is native Persian.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: be eshterâk gozâshtan
- Say it: be eshterâk gozâshtan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with be eshterâk gozâshtan
- Recall: say the Persian for to hack, then the Persian for a virus, then say be eshterâk gozâshtan again

Before you move on

What does گذاشتن اشتراک به mean? ("To share (online)".) Say it once more.

419.5 مصنوعی هوش (hush-e masnu'i) — artificial intelligence

Before the new one: say the Persian for a virus, then the Persian for to share.

You'll want to know: مصنوعی هوش

مصنوعی هوش (hush-e masnu'i) — "artificial intelligence".

میکند عوض را مردم از خیلی کار مصنوعی هوش.

hush-e masnu'i kâr-e kheyli az mardom râ 'avaz mikonad.

Artificial intelligence is changing many people's work.

Hush "intelligence" + ezafe + masnu'i "artificial".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

مصنوعی هوش joins hush "intelligence", which EtymDB traces to a Middle Persian word for consciousness, to masnu'i "artificial", built on Arabic maṣnū' "made".

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: hush-e masnu'i
- Say it: hush-e masnu'i, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with hush-e masnu'i
- Recall: say the Persian for a virus, then the Persian for to share, then say hush-e masnu'i again

Before you move on

What does هوش مصنوعی mean? ("Artificial intelligence".) Say it once more.

419.6 Conditions and rules — a review

Say the Persian for a user and a password.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a user, a password, to save, to delete, an update
- a network, a social network, a connection, access, virtual
- software, hardware, a computer file, to upload, technical support
- privacy, to hack, a virus, to share, artificial intelligence

Before you move on

A user? (کاربر.) A password? (عبور رمز.) To save? (کردن ذخیره.) To delete? (کردن حذف.) An update? (رسانی روز به.) A network? (شبکه.)

A social network? (اجتماعی شبکه.) A connection? (اتصال.) Access? (دسترسی.) Virtual? (مجازی.) Software? (افزار نرم.) Hardware? (سخت افزار.) A computer file? (فایل.) To upload? (کردن آپلود.) Technical support? (پشتیبانی.) Privacy? (خصوصی حریم.) To hack? (کردن هک.) A virus? (ویروس.) To share? (گذاشتن اشتراک به.) Artificial intelligence? (مصنوعی هوش.)

419.7 Staying safe online — once more

Say the Persian for privacy and to hack.

Your turn

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 420: I can talk about driving: the steering wheel, driving, the gears, changing gear and the clutch.

420.1 فرمان (farmân) — a steering wheel; a command, an order

Before the new one: say the Persian for an invoice, then the Persian for a cash machine.

You'll want to know: فرمان

فرمان (farmân) — "a steering wheel; a command, an order".

> میگیرد دست دو با را ماشین فرمان پدرم.
> Pedaram farmân-e mâshin râ bâ do dast migirad.
> My father holds the steering wheel with both hands.

The older sense is a command or a royal decree. Posht-e farmân — at the wheel, driving.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

farmân is inherited: EtymDB traces it through Middle Persian framān to Old Persian framānā 'command'. The wheel is the part of the car that gives the orders.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: farmân
- Say it: farmân, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with farmân
- Recall: say the Persian for an invoice, then the Persian for a cash machine, then say farmân again

Before you move on

What does فرمان mean? ("A steering wheel; a command, an order".) Say it once more.

420.2 کردن رانندگی (rânandegi kardan) — to drive (a car)

Before the new one: say the Persian for a cash machine, then the Persian for a steering wheel.

You'll want to know: کردن رانندگی

کردن رانندگی (rânandegi kardan) — "to drive (a car)".

میکند رانندگی دفتر تا روز هر خواهرم.

Khâharam har ruz tâ daftar rânandegi mikonad.

My sister drives to the office every day.

rânandegi — driving, from rânande (a driver), + kardan. Present stem kon-: rânandegi mikonam — I drive.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rânandegi kardan is built from rânandegi 'driving', formed on the native verb rândan 'to drive', and kardan 'to do', which is inherited from Middle Persian kardan (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: rânandegi kardan
- Say it: rânandegi kardan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with rânandegi kardan
- Recall: say the Persian for a cash machine, then the Persian for a steering wheel, then say rânandegi kardan again

Before you move on

What does رانندگی کردن mean? ("To drive (a car)".) Say it once more.

420.3 دنده (dande) — a gear (of a car); a rib

Before the new one: say the Persian for a steering wheel, then the Persian for to drive.

You'll want to know: دنده

دنده (dande) — "a gear (of a car); a rib".

این ماشین پنج دنده دارد.

In mâshin panj dande dârad.

This car has five gears.

Also a rib of the body. Dande-ye 'aqab — reverse gear.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dande is a native Persian word for a rib, later also for the teeth and gears of a wheel. Its older history is not settled, and EtymDB does not list it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dande
- Say it: dande, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dande
- Recall: say the Persian for a steering wheel, then the Persian for to drive, then say dande again

Before you move on

What does دنده mean? ("A gear (of a car); a rib".) Say it once more.

420.4 کردن عوض دنده (dande 'avaz kardan) — to change gear

Before the new one: say the Persian for to drive, then the Persian for a gear.

You'll want to know: کردن عوض دنده

کردن عوض دنده (dande 'avaz kardan) — "to change gear".

میکند عوض دنده پیچ از قبل او.

U qabl az pich dande 'avaz mikonad.

He changes gear before the bend.

dande 'gear' + 'avaz 'a change, an exchange' + kardan. 'Avaz kardan on its own means to change or swap.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dande 'avaz kardan is built from native dande 'gear', 'avaz 'exchange', a loan usually traced to Arabic ᶜiwaḍ 'a substitute', and kardan 'to do', inherited from Middle Persian kardan (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: dande 'avaz kardan
- Say it: dande 'avaz kardan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with dande 'avaz kardan
- Recall: say the Persian for to drive, then the Persian for a gear, then say dande 'avaz kardan again

Before you move on

What does عوض دنده کردن mean? ("To change gear".) Say it once more.

420.5 کلاچ (kelâch) — a clutch (pedal)

Before the new one: say the Persian for a gear, then the Persian for to change gear.

You'll want to know: کلاچ

کلاچ (kelâch) — "a clutch (pedal)".

کلاچ ماشین برادرم خیلی سفت است.

Kelâch-e mâshin-e barâdaram kheyli seft ast.

The clutch in my brother's car is very stiff.

Kelâch gereftan — to press the clutch. Automatic cars have no kelâch.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

kelâch was borrowed from a European language and is usually traced to English clutch, the pedal that grips and frees the engine. EtymDB does not list the Persian word.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: kelâch
- Say it: kelâch, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with kelâch
- Recall: say the Persian for a gear, then the Persian for to change gear, then say kelâch again

Before you move on

What does کلاچ mean? ("A clutch (pedal)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 421

Horn, lights and mirrors

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the horn, honking, the lights, the wipers and the side mirror.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 421: I can talk about the horn, honking, the lights, the wipers and the side mirror.

421.1 بوق (buq) — a horn (of a car)

Before the new one: say the Persian for to change gear, then the Persian for a clutch.

You'll want to know: بوق

بوق (buq) — "a horn (of a car)".

> بوق این ماشین خیلی بلند است.
> Buq-e in mâshin kheyli boland ast.
> This car's horn is very loud.

Also an old trumpet made of horn or brass.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

buq was borrowed from Arabic and is usually traced to Arabic būq 'a trumpet'. EtymDB does not list the word, so the line is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: buq
- Say it: buq, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with buq
- Recall: say the Persian for to change gear, then the Persian for a clutch, then say buq again

Before you move on

What does بوق mean? ("A horn (of a car)".) Say it once more.

421.2 زدن بوق (buq zadan) — to honk, to sound the horn

Before the new one: say the Persian for a clutch, then the Persian for a horn.

You'll want to know: زدن بوق

زدن بوق (buq zadan) — "to honk, to sound the horn".

زد بوق بار دو ما خانه جلوی تاکسی راننده.

Rânande-ye tâksi jolow-ye khâne-ye mâ do bâr buq zad.

The taxi driver honked twice in front of our house.

buq + zadan (to strike). Present stem zan-: buq mizanad — he honks.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

buq zadan is built from buq 'horn', a loan usually traced to Arabic būq 'a trumpet', and the native verb zadan 'to strike'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: buq zadan
- Say it: buq zadan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with buq zadan
- Recall: say the Persian for a clutch, then the Persian for a horn, then say buq zadan again

Before you move on

What does زدن بوق mean? ("To honk, to sound the horn".) Say it once more.

421.3 چراغ (cherâgh) — a light, a lamp

Before the new one: say the Persian for a horn, then the Persian for to honk.

You'll want to know: چراغ

چراغ (cherâgh) — "a light, a lamp".

میکنیم روشن را ماشین چراغهای شب.

Shab cherâgh-hâ-ye mâshin râ roshan mikonim.

At night we switch on the car's lights.

Cherâgh-e qermez — a red light; cherâgh-e râhnamâ — an indicator.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cherâgh is inherited: EtymDB traces it to Middle Persian čirāgh 'lamp' and also links it with a Parthian form of the same word.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: cherâgh
- Say it: cherâgh, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with cherâgh
- Recall: say the Persian for a horn, then the Persian for to honk, then say cherâgh again

Before you move on

What does چراغ mean? ("A light, a lamp".) Say it once more.

421.4 کن پاک برف (barfpâkkon) — a windscreen wiper

Before the new one: say the Persian for to honk, then the Persian for a light.

You'll want to know: کن پاک برف

کن پاک برف (barfpâkkon) — "a windscreen wiper".

میکند کار تند کن پاک برف باران در.

Dar bârân barfpâkkon tond kâr mikonad.

In the rain the wiper works fast.

Literally 'snow-cleaner': barf 'snow' + pâk 'clean' + kon 'doing'.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

barfpâkkon is a native compound of barf 'snow', inherited from Middle Persian wafr (EtymDB), pâk 'clean', from Middle Persian pāk (EtymDB), and kon, the present stem of kardan 'to do'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: barfpâkkon
- Say it: barfpâkkon, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with barfpâkkon
- Recall: say the Persian for to honk, then the Persian for a light, then say barfpâkkon again

Before you move on

What does برف پاک کن mean? ("A windscreen wiper".) Say it once more.

421.5 بغل آینه (âyene-baghal) — a side mirror (of a car)

Before the new one: say the Persian for a light, then the Persian for a windscreen wiper.

You'll want to know: بغل آینه

بغل آینه (âyene-baghal) — "a side mirror (of a car)".

شکست من ماشین بغل آینه.

Âyene-baghal-e mâshin-e man shekast.

The side mirror of my car broke.

âyene 'mirror' + baghal 'side'. The mirror inside the car is âyene-ye vasat.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

âyene-baghal is built from native âyene 'mirror' and baghal 'side, armpit', whose origin is not settled. EtymDB lists neither âyene with older forms nor the Persian baghal, so both parts are hedged.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: âyene-baghal
- Say it: âyene-baghal, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with âyene-baghal
- Recall: say the Persian for a light, then the Persian for a windscreen wiper, then say âyene-baghal again

Before you move on

What does بغل آینه mean? ("A side mirror (of a car)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 422

Under the bonnet

Before the new one: say the Persian for a side mirror, then the Persian for a bonnet.

You'll want to know: موتور

موتور (motor) — "an engine, a motor; a motorbike (colloquial)".

میکند کار خوب هنوز قدیمی ماشین این موتور.

Motor-e in mâshin-e qadimi hanuz khub kâr mikonad.

This old car's engine still works well.

In everyday speech motor is also a motorbike.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

motor was borrowed from French moteur, which EtymDB derives from Latin motor 'a mover', built on movere 'to move' (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: motor
- Say it: motor, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with motor
- Recall: say the Persian for a side mirror, then the Persian for a bonnet, then say motor again

422.3 روغن (roghan) — oil (for an engine or for cooking)

Before the new one: say the Persian for a bonnet, then the Persian for an engine.

You'll want to know: روغن

روغن (roghan) — "oil (for an engine or for cooking)".

مکانیک گفت ماشین روغن لازم دارد.

Mekânik goft mâshin roghan lâzem dârad.

The mechanic said the car needs oil.

Roghan-e motor — engine oil; roghan-e zeytun — olive oil.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

roghan is inherited: EtymDB traces it to Middle Persian rōghn 'oil; butter'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: roghan
- Say it: roghan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with roghan
- Recall: say the Persian for a bonnet, then the Persian for an engine, then say roghan again

Before you move on

What does روغن mean? ("Oil (for an engine or for cooking)".) Say it once more.

422.4 زدن استارت (estârt zadan) — to start (an engine), to turn the key

Before the new one: say the Persian for an engine, then the Persian for oil.

You'll want to know: زدن استارت

زدن استارت (estârt zadan) — "to start (an engine), to turn the key".

زدم استارت بار سه من و بود سرد صبح.

Sobh sard bud va man se bâr estârt zadam.

The morning was cold and I turned the key three times.

estârt (from English) + zadan. Present stem zan-: estârt mizanam.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

estârt zadan is built from estârt, a loan usually traced to English start, and the native verb zadan 'to strike'. EtymDB does not list the loan.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: estârt zadan
- Say it: estârt zadan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with estârt zadan
- Recall: say the Persian for an engine, then the Persian for oil, then say estârt zadan again

ta'mir + kardan. Present stem kon-: ta'mir mikonad.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ta'mir kardan is built from ta'mir 'repair', usually traced to Arabic ta^{c}mīr 'restoring', and kardan 'to do', inherited from Middle Persian kardan (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: ta'mir kardan
- Say it: ta'mir kardan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with ta'mir kardan
- Recall: say the Persian for a driving licence, then the Persian for a garage, then say ta'mir kardan again

Before you move on

What does تعمیر کردن mean? ("To repair, to fix".) Say it once more.

427.3 آوردن جوش (jush âvardan) — to overheat (of an engine); to boil over; to lose your temper

Before the new one: say the Persian for a garage, then the Persian for to repair.

You'll want to know: آوردن جوش

آوردن جوش (jush âvardan) — "to overheat (of an engine); to boil over; to lose your temper".

آورد جوش ما ماشین تابستان گرمای در.

Dar garmâ-ye tâbestân mâshin-e mâ jush âvard.

In the summer heat our car overheated.

jush 'boiling' + âvardan 'to bring'. Said of people too: jush âvard — he lost his temper.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jush âvardan is built from jush 'boiling, simmering', a native word that EtymDB lists, and âvardan 'to bring', usually traced to Middle Persian āwurdan.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: jush âvardan
- Say it: jush âvardan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with jush âvardan

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 436: I can talk about travelling by sea: the pier, the captain, the deck, a dhow and dropping anchor.

436.1 اسکله (eskele) — a pier, a jetty, a quay

Before the new one: say the Persian for a porter, then the Persian for to give someone a lift.

You'll want to know: اسکله

اسکله (eskele) — "a pier, a jetty, a quay".

> کرد حرکت اسکله از قایق صبح.
> Sobh qâyeq az eskele harekat kard.
> In the morning the boat left the pier.

Ports on the Persian Gulf have long eskele for boats to the islands.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

eskele came into Persian from Turkish iskele 'a landing place'; EtymDB lists the Turkish word without a gloss. The Turkish word is usually traced to Italian scala 'ladder, landing'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: eskele
- Say it: eskele, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with eskele
- Recall: say the Persian for a porter, then the Persian for to give someone a lift, then say eskele again

Before you move on

What does اسکله mean? ("A pier, a jetty, a quay".) Say it once more.

436.2 ناخدا (nâkhodâ) — a captain (of a ship), a skipper

Before the new one: say the Persian for to give someone a lift, then the Persian for a pier.

You'll want to know: ناخدا

ناخدا (nâkhodâ) — "a captain (of a ship), a skipper".

ناخدا سی سال روی دریا کار کرده است.

Nâkhodâ si sâl ru-ye daryâ kâr karde ast.

The captain has worked at sea for thirty years.

Literally 'ship-master'. The navy rank is also nâkhodâ.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nâkhodâ is a native compound, which EtymDB analyses as nâv 'ship' and khodâ 'chief, master': the master of the ship. Khodâ is usually traced to Middle Persian xwadāy 'lord'.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: nâkhodâ
- Say it: nâkhodâ, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with nâkhodâ
- Recall: say the Persian for to give someone a lift, then the Persian for a pier, then say nâkhodâ again

Before you move on

What does ناخدا mean? ("A captain (of a ship), a skipper".) Say it once more.

436.3 عرشه ('arshe) — a deck (of a ship)

Before the new one: say the Persian for a pier, then the Persian for a captain.

You'll want to know: عرشه

عرشه ('arshe) — "a deck (of a ship)".

بودند ایستاده عرشه روی مسافران.

Mosâferân ru-ye 'arshe istâde budand.

The passengers were standing on the deck.

Ru-ye 'arshe — on deck.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

'arshe was borrowed from Arabic and is usually traced to Arabic ʿarš 'a roof, a raised platform, a throne'. EtymDB does not list it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: 'arshe
- Say it: 'arshe, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with 'arshe
- Recall: say the Persian for a pier, then the Persian for a captain, then say 'arshe again

Before you move on

What does عرشه mean? ("A deck (of a ship)".) Say it once more.

436.4 لنج (lenj) — a dhow, a wooden cargo boat (of the Gulf)

Before the new one: say the Persian for a captain, then the Persian for a deck.

You'll want to know: لنج

لنج (lenj) — "a dhow, a wooden cargo boat (of the Gulf)".

میرود جزیره به بندر از لنج این.

In lenj az bandar be jazire miravad.

This dhow goes from the port to the island.

Built of wood in the ports of the south, and still in use for trade.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The origin of lenj is not settled, and EtymDB does not list it. It names the large wooden boats of the Persian Gulf.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: lenj
- Say it: lenj, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with lenj
- Recall: say the Persian for a captain, then the Persian for a deck, then say lenj again

Before you move on

What does لنج mean? ("A dhow, a wooden cargo boat (of the Gulf)".) Say it once more.

436.5 انداختن لنگر (langar andâkhtan) — to drop anchor, to anchor

Before the new one: say the Persian for a deck, then the Persian for a dhow.

You'll want to know: انداختن لنگر

انداختن لنگر (langar andâkhtan) — "to drop anchor, to anchor".

انداخت لنگر ساحل نزدیک کشتی.

Kashti nazdik-e sâhel langar andâkht.

The ship dropped anchor near the shore.

langar 'anchor' + andâkhtan 'to throw'. Present stem andâz-: langar miandâzad.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

langar andâkhtan is built from langar 'anchor', which EtymDB links with Greek ánkyra 'anchor', and andâkhtan 'to throw', usually traced to Middle Persian handāxtan.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: langar andâkhtan
- Say it: langar andâkhtan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with langar andâkhtan
- Recall: say the Persian for a deck, then the Persian for a dhow, then say langar andâkhtan again

Before you move on

What does انداختن لنگر mean? ("To drop anchor, to anchor".) Say it once more.

437.1 مسافرخانه (mosâferkhâne) — a guesthouse, a cheap inn

Before the new one: say the Persian for a dhow, then the Persian for to drop anchor.

You'll want to know: مسافرخانه

مسافرخانه (mosâferkhâne) — "a guesthouse, a cheap inn".

> ماندیم ارزان مسافرخانه یک در شب.
> Shab dar yek mosâferkhâne-ye arzân mândim.
> We spent the night in a cheap guesthouse.

mosâfer 'traveller' + khâne 'house'. Simpler and cheaper than a hotel.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mosâferkhâne is built from mosâfer 'traveller', borrowed from Arabic musāfir, and native khâne 'house', usually traced to Middle Persian xānag.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: mosâferkhâne
- Say it: mosâferkhâne, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with mosâferkhâne
- Recall: say the Persian for a dhow, then the Persian for to drop anchor, then say mosâferkhâne again

Before you move on

What does مسافرخانه mean? ("A guesthouse, a cheap inn".) Say it once more.

437.2 اقامتگاه (eqâmatgâh) — lodgings, a place to stay; a residence

Before the new one: say the Persian for to drop anchor, then the Persian for a guesthouse.

You'll want to know: اقامتگاه

اقامتگاه (eqâmatgâh) — "lodgings, a place to stay; a residence".

بود دریا نزدیک ما اقامتگاه.

Eqâmatgâh-e mâ nazdik-e daryâ bud.

Our lodgings were near the sea.

Eqâmatgâh-e bumgardi — a guesthouse in a village home, now common in the countryside.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

eqâmatgâh is built from eqâmat 'a stay', a loan usually traced to Arabic iqāma 'staying, residing', and native gâh 'place'. EtymDB does not list it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: eqâmatgâh

437.4 سوئیت (su'it) — a suite; a small self-contained flat

Before the new one: say the Persian for lodgings, then the Persian for a boarding house.

You'll want to know: سوئیت

سوئیت (su'it) — "a suite; a small self-contained flat".

در شمال یک سوئیت کوچک اجاره کردیم.

Dar shomâl yek su'it-e kuchek ejâre kardim.

In the north we rented a small flat.

At the seaside in Iran a su'it is often a one-room holiday flat with a kitchen.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

su'it was borrowed from a European language and is usually traced to French suite 'a set of rooms'. EtymDB does not list the Persian word.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: su'it
- Say it: su'it, once more

437.5 اقامت کردن (eqâmat kardan) — to stay (somewhere), to reside

Before the new one: say the Persian for a boarding house, then the Persian for a suite.

You'll want to know: اقامت کردن

اقامت کردن (eqâmat kardan) — "to stay (somewhere), to reside".

سه شب در این هتل اقامت کردیم.

Se shab dar in hotel eqâmat kardim.

We stayed three nights in this hotel.

eqâmat 'stay' + kardan: more formal than mândan.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

eqâmat kardan is built from eqâmat 'a stay', a loan usually traced to Arabic iqāma 'staying, residing', and kardan 'to do', inherited from Middle Persian kardan (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: eqâmat kardan
- Say it: eqâmat kardan, once more

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 480: I can talk about pride and modesty.

480.1 غرور (ghorur) — pride; vanity

Before the new one: say the Persian for an invoice, then the Persian for a cash machine.

You'll want to know: غرور

غرور (ghorur) — "pride; vanity".

> غرور او دوستانش را ناراحت میکند.
> ghorur-e u dustânash râ nârâhat mikonad.
> His pride upsets his friends.

A noun, usually with a bad sense: too much pride. ghorur dâshtan — to be vain.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ghorur was borrowed from Arabic ġurūr, which EtymDB glosses 'pride' (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

480.5 کردن خودنمایی (khodnamâyi kardan) — to show off

Before the new one: say the Persian for humble, then the Persian for to be proud.

You'll want to know: کردن خودنمایی

کردن خودنمایی (khodnamâyi kardan) — "to show off".

میکند خودنمایی دوستانش جلوی او.

u jelo-ye dustânash khodnamâyi mikonad.

He shows off in front of his friends.

khod 'self' + namâyi 'showing' (stem namâ-, from namudan 'to show') + kardan. Present: khodnamâyi mikonad.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

khodnamâyi is built on native Persian parts: khod, 'self', and namâ-, the present stem of namudan, 'to show', with the noun ending -i: showing oneself. kardan, 'to do', turns it into a verb; none of it is borrowed.

513.1 بازنده (bâzande) — a loser (of a game)

Before the new one: say the Persian for a league, then the Persian for a point.

You'll want to know: بازنده

بازنده (bâzande) — "a loser (of a game)".

> داد دست لبخند با بازی بازنده.
> bâzande-ye bâzi bâ labkhand dast dâd.
> The loser of the match shook hands with a smile.

From bâz-, the present stem of bâkhtan 'to lose (a game)', + -ande 'one who'.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bâzande is built on native Persian bâz-, the present stem of bâkhtan, 'to lose a game', with the ending -ande, 'one who'. EtymDB has no entry for it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about playing an instrument.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 518: I can talk about playing an instrument.

518.1 تار سه (setâr) — a setar (a three-stringed lute)

Before the new one: say the Persian for a santur, then the Persian for a tombak.

You'll want to know: تار سه

تار سه (setâr) — "a setar (a three-stringed lute)".

> میزند تار سه خودش برای شبها او.
> u shabhâ barâ-ye khodash setâr mizanad.
> At night she plays the setar for herself.

se 'three' + târ 'string'. The Indian sitar is usually traced to it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

setâr is built on two native Persian words, se, 'three', and târ, 'string'. Hindi and Urdu sitār are usually traced to it.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: setâr
- Say it: setâr, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with setâr
- Recall: say the Persian for a santur, then the Persian for a tombak, then say setâr again

Before you move on

What does سه تار mean? ("A setar (a three-stringed lute)".) Say it once more.

518.2 دف (daf) — a daf (a frame drum)

Before the new one: say the Persian for a tombak, then the Persian for a setar.

You'll want to know: دف

دف (daf) — "a daf (a frame drum)".

میزدند دف جشن در زنها.

zanhâ dar jashn daf mizadand.

The women were playing frame drums at the celebration.

daf zadan — to play the daf.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

daf is inherited: EtymDB traces it to Middle Persian daf (EtymDB).

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: daf
- Say it: daf, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with daf
- Recall: say the Persian for a tombak, then the Persian for a setar, then say daf again

Before you move on

What does دف mean? ("A daf (a frame drum)".) Say it once more.

518.3 طبل (tabl) — a drum

Before the new one: say the Persian for a setar, then the Persian for a daf.

You'll want to know: طبل

طبل (tabl) — "a drum".

پسر کوچک طبل میزند و همه را بیدار میکند.

pesar-e kuchek tabl mizanad va hame râ bidâr mikonad.

The little boy bangs a drum and wakes everyone up.

tabl zadan — to beat a drum.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tabl comes from Arabic ṭabl, 'drum' (EtymDB); Hindi tabla goes back to the same word.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: tabl
- Say it: tabl, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with tabl
- Recall: say the Persian for a setar, then the Persian for a daf, then say tabl again

Before you move on

What does طبل mean? ("A drum".) Say it once more.

518.4 نواختن (navâkhtan) — to play (an instrument)

Before the new one: say the Persian for a daf, then the Persian for a drum.

You'll want to know: نواختن

نواختن (navâkhtan) — "to play (an instrument)".

او پیانو را خیلی زیبا مینوازد.

u piyâno râ kheyli zibâ minavâzad.

She plays the piano beautifully.

Formal; present stem navâz-. In speech people say zadan: piyâno mizanad.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

navâkhtan is a native Persian verb, with the present stem navâz- seen in navâzesh. EtymDB lists it without a source, so its older history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: navâkhtan
- Say it: navâkhtan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with navâkhtan
- Recall: say the Persian for a daf, then the Persian for a drum, then say navâkhtan again

Before you move on

518.5 کردن کوک (kuk kardan) — to tune (an instrument); to wind (a clock)

Before the new one: say the Persian for a drum, then the Persian for to play.

You'll want to know: کردن کوک

کردن کوک (kuk kardan) — "to tune (an instrument); to wind (a clock)".

کرد کوک را تارش کنسرت از قبل او.

u qabl az konsert târash râ kuk kard.

He tuned his tar before the concert.

kuk 'tuning' + kardan. kuk budan — to be in tune, and in speech 'to be in good form'.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

kuk means 'tuning' and 'winding', but no source used here gives its history, and its origin is not settled. kardan is inherited Persian.

What you've built

One more word for telling, explaining and describing at B1.

Your turn

- Say it: kuk kardan
- Say it: kuk kardan, once more
- Say it: a sentence of your own with kuk kardan
- Recall: say the Persian for a drum, then the Persian for to play, then say kuk kardan again

Before you move on

What does کوک کردن mean? ("To tune (an instrument); to wind (a clock)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 519

Pronunciation & Script Reference

A reference, not a chapter. Look up a sound when a lesson names it; do not memorize this page first. The lessons introduce Persian script inside language the learner can already understand, one word-sized pattern at a time.

This track uses a learner romanization: â marks long a; u marks the long vowel in mamnun. Romanization is temporary scaffolding. Train your eye on the Persian form and gradually cover the Latin line.

The script in three facts

1. Read right to left (`rtl`). Words and sentences begin at the right edge.
2. Most letters join, and their shape responds to position. Some letters do not connect leftward to the next letter. In سلام, ا creates the visible break before final م.
3. Short vowels are normally unwritten (`short-vowels-unwritten`). Learn the vowel pattern with the word. The long vowels are represented with ا â, و u, and ی i.

Persian has no uppercase/lowercase distinction. Its alphabet adds پ p, چ ch, ژ zh, and گ g to the inherited Arabic inventory; the lessons will introduce them only when a useful word needs them.

Sound ids used by the starter lessons

- Sound id: `rtl`
  What to do: start at the right edge and follow the word leftward
  First anchor: سلام salâm

- Sound id: `long-a`
  What to do: hold ا as a steady â, near the vowel in "father"
  First anchor: سلام salâm
- Sound id: `long-u`
  What to do: hold و as u, near "oo" in "food," without an English off-glide
  First anchor: ممنون mamnun
- Sound id: `long-i`
  What to do: hold ی as long i in the learned word
  First anchor: چیست chist
- Sound id: `short-vowels-unwritten`
  What to do: supply learned a, e, or o even when no separate vowel letter appears
  First anchor: بله bale, نه na
- Sound id: `ezafe-e`
  What to do: say a light linking -e after a noun before its owner or description; ordinary text often leaves it unmarked
  First anchor: من اسمِ esm-e man
- Sound id: `sh`
  What to do: read three-dotted ش as sh
  First anchor: شما shomâ
- Sound id: `persian-che`
  What to do: read Persian چ as ch
  First anchor: چیست chist
- Sound id: `kh`
  What to do: make خ farther back than English h; a gentle approximation is acceptable first
  First anchor: خوب khub
- Sound id: `gh`
  What to do: use the modern Iranian Persian voiced back-of-the-mouth sound for غ
  First anchor: خوشوقتم khoshvaghtam
- Sound id: `vav-o`
  What to do: let و carry the learned o value in this word
  First anchor: چطور chetor

- Sound id: `persian-question-mark`
  What to do: recognize ؟ at the left end of a right-to-left question
  First anchor: چیست؟ شما اسم
- Sound id: `alef-madde`
  What to do: read آ — alef under a wavy madde — as a word-initial long â
  First anchor: آمدن âmadan
- Sound id: `persian-gaf`
  What to do: read گ gâf as English g in "go"; it is a Persian addition to the Arabic set
  First anchor: گفتن goftan
- Sound id: `persian-pe`
  What to do: read پ pe as English p; a ب shape with three dots beneath, and the third of Persian's four additions
  First anchor: پرسیدن porsidan
- Sound id: `silent-vav`
  What to do: after خ and before ا, leave و unpronounced — it is written, never said
  First anchor: خواندن khândan
- Sound id: `ze`
  What to do: read ز as English z; an ordinary letter from the inherited Arabic set
  First anchor: زبان zabân
- Sound id: `heh-e`
  What to do: read a word-final ه as the vowel -e, not as a consonant
  First anchor: ستاره setâre

Read the current word before the whole alphabet

- سلام gives س ل ا م, right-to-left direction, joining, and long â.
- ممنون reuses م, adds ن و, and assigns و its long-u job in this word.
- بله and نه make the missing short vowels visible by contrast: the spelling supplies a consonantal frame; the learned word supplies a/e.
- من اسم ... است recombines familiar letters and adds one spoken grammar cue, ezafe -e. The cue is often heard but not printed.

- شما, چیست, and خوشوقتم add sh, Persian چ, and the back sounds in خ/غ only inside the name exchange.
- حال شما چطور است؟ reuses ezafe and the Persian question mark; چطور gives و its learned o value, while خوبم returns to long-u و.
- خدا reuses خ and long-â ا; حافظ adds a clear initial h and a final ظ pronounced z in modern Persian. The complete farewell is normally joined in Persian as خداحافظ.
- بودن, رفتن, and دانستن need no new letters at all; the verb chapter adds only آ (alef wearing a madde, for a word opening on long â) inside آمدن, and گ gâf inside گفتن — the second of the four Persian additions گ ژ چ پ the learner has now met.
- The requests, family, and body chapters need only one new letter across all twelve words: ز ze, an ordinary member of the inherited Arabic set, inside زبان zabân. Every other word in those three chapters — آب, نان, چای, کلید, مادر, پدر, برادر, دختر, چشم, دست, پا — reuses letters already met.
- The next fourteen words — نام, دل, در, کتاب, آسمان, خورشید, ماه, ستاره, باران, خواهر, پسر, مرد, زن, دوست — need no new letters at all, only one new habit: ستاره's final ه carries the vowel -e rather than a consonant, the sound id `heh-e`.

One spelling symbol can do more than one job in later words—especially و and ی—so read from the word and context rather than assigning each shape one English value forever.
