Preface

This book teaches Hindi one word at a time, and it teaches each word by taking it apart. It is written for someone starting from zero — who may not read a single Devanagari letter — so the script is taught inside the word lessons themselves: each word introduces exactly the letters it needs, so you learn to read नमस्ते and learn that it means "I bow to you" in the same few minutes. There is no alphabet drill to sit through first. (A reader who already knows Devanagari simply skims the "letters in this word" notes.)

Hindi's depth comes from a double inheritance. Much of its core vocabulary is Sanskrit — नमस्ते and धन्यवाद sit on ancient roots (nam, "to bow"; dhanya, "worthy"). But centuries of Persian as the language of courts layered on a second vocabulary, Persian and (through it) Arabic — so "thanks" is also शुक्रिया (shukriyā, the same Semitic root as Arabic shukran), and "farewell" is अलविदा (alvidā, "the farewell," carrying the Arabic article al-). The book keeps both streams in view.

How to use this book

Every numbered section is one word, or one small phrase, and takes a few minutes — the length of a queue, an errand, or the walk to the bus. Read them in order the first time through: each section stands on the ones before it, and nothing is used before it has been taught. After that the book becomes reference, and you can open it anywhere.

Say the Hindi out loud wherever you can. The prompts under Your turn are written to be spoken, and saying a word is most of what makes it stay. The questions under Before you move on carry their own answers in brackets: cover them, answer from memory, then look.

Nothing here is gated behind the alphabet. Each lesson introduces exactly the letters and sounds its own word needs, so you are reading real words from the first page rather than drilling a chart. The whole script is gathered in a reference at the back of the book — somewhere to look things up when you are curious, never a chapter to sit through first.

Chapter 1

Greetings

Modes: voice (1) eyes (5) pen (4) Hands-free start: the first 5 of 10 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can greet, thank, and take my leave in Hindi, and write by hand the first Devanagari letters those words are built from.
> Greet, thank formally and casually, and take a weighty leave in Hindi from memory; name each word's heritage; then write न, म, क and त by hand, body first and bar last, and say what orders the stop families along the mouth.

1.1 Namaste — "I bow to you"

The first Hindi word, and the most important — a greeting that is literally a small act of reverence. You'll meet its first and last written pieces today; the middle comes next lesson.

The letters in this word

(If you already read Devanagari, skim this — it's here so the book needs no prior knowledge.) Hindi is written left to right, and every consonant carries a built-in "a" unless something changes it.

- न = "na" — the word's first letter, with its built-in a.
- त = "ta" — another consonant, with the same built-in a.

- ◌े is a vowel sign (a mātrā) that changes the built-in a to "e": त + ◌े → ते = "te."

So the word begins with न na and ends with ते te. The middle — a ma and a bare s — comes in the next lesson; the whole written word follows later in this chapter.

Two facts already: consonants carry a, and a mātrā changes the vowel. The next lesson adds the third.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Namaste = namaḥ ("a bow, reverence, homage") + ते (te, "to you") = literally "reverence to you," "I bow to you." The root is Sanskrit nam, "to bow, bend, pay homage" — the same root behind namaskār (next lesson) and borrowed whole into English as namaste and namaskar.

Why it's said this way

namaste is a genuine gesture, not a neutral "hi": it's said with the palms pressed together (the añjali gesture), acknowledging the other person with respect. It works as both hello and goodbye, at any time of day, and it's polite/respectful without being stiff — safe with almost anyone. (Hindi also has warmer and more casual options you'll meet, and a whole second, Persian- flavored set of words — coming in a few lessons.)

The letters in this word

Hindi reads left to right, and every consonant carries a built-in "a": न na, त ta. A vowel sign changes the vowel: ◌े makes "e" (ते = te). Say the four beats: na · ma · s · te. The s has no vowel of its own and leans straight into te.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- its beats — na · ma · s · te → "namaste"
- read ते — "te" — and what the sign ◌े did to त (changed a to e)
- "namaste," and mean it — "I bow to you"

Before you move on

Read it: न and ते (na, te.) What does namaste literally mean? ("I bow to you" — namaḥ + te.) What does a mātrā do to a consonant? (Changes its built-in a.)

1.2 Namaskār — the more formal bow

The dressier sibling of namaste — same root, one new piece, and the letters that finish namaste on the page.

What to know first

- namaste — you already know न, the syllable te, and how consonants carry "a."

The letters in this word

- म = "ma" · स = "sa."
- ् , the halant, kills a consonant's vowel: स् = a bare "s," which leans onto the next consonant as a conjunct.

So नमस् (namas, "a bow") reads न · म · स्. Add the last lesson's te and every piece of namaste is yours. Three facts did it: consonants carry a, a mātrā changes the vowel, a halant removes it.

The second half, kār, needs three more shapes; the whole written word waits for the end of this chapter.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Namaskār = namaḥ ("a bow," from root नम् nam, as in namaste) + kāra ("the making or doing of" — from the Sanskrit root kṛ, "to do, make"). So namaskār is literally "the making of a bow," "the act of homage." Where namaste says "bow to you," namaskār names the bow itself — a touch more formal and ceremonial.
That piece -kāra ("the making/doing of") is a Sanskrit building block you'll see again — e.g. in ahaṃkāra ("the making of 'I'" → ego). Learn it once as "the act of _____."

Why it's said this way

namaskār is a notch more formal than namaste — common in respectful, official, or ceremonial settings, and as a courteous greeting to elders or in writing. Both are "hello"; namaskār wears a tie.

The letters in this word

New: म ma, स sa, and the halant ् (स् = s). Together न · म · स् spell namas. Read it: न · म · स् Say namaskār in its beats: na · ma · s · kā · r.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- read "नमस्" — na · ma · s — and what the halant under स does
- the shared root — nam ("bow") in both namaste and namaskār
- which is more formal? (namaskār)

Before you move on

What does the piece -kāra mean? ("The making/doing of.") So namaskār literally names what? ("The making of a bow.") What does a halant do to a consonant? (Removes its built-in a.)

1.3 Dhanyavād — "thank you," the Sanskrit way

"Thank you" — and the first hint of a big fact about Hindi: it has two vocabularies for many everyday things, one Sanskrit, one Persian. This is the Sanskrit one.

What to know first

- namaskār — you know the halant/conjunct idea and how a mātrā changes a vowel.

The letters in this word

New today: ध = "dha," the breathy d that opens the word · व = "va" · द = "da." With a halant, the last two spell the Sanskrit root behind the word's second half: वद् (vad, "to speak").

The rest — a ya joined to न as a conjunct, and the long ā of vād — waits, and so does the whole written word, for a later chapter. Today, say it and read ध and वद्.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Dhanyavād = dhanya ("worthy, blessed, fortunate") + vāda ("a saying, an utterance," from the Sanskrit root वद् vad, "to speak"). So dhanyavād literally offers "an utterance of [you are] worthy/ blessed" — a formal, almost literary way to say thanks. (dhanya comes from dhana, "wealth" — to call someone dhanya is to call them enriched, fortunate.)

Why it's said this way

dhanyavād is the formal, Sanskritic "thank you" — the one you'd write, or say in respectful or official settings. It can even feel a little heavy for small everyday thanks, where Hindi speakers often reach for a lighter, Persian- derived word instead — shukriyā, your next lesson. Holding those two side by side is the single best window into how Hindi works.

The letters in this word

New: ध dha (a breathy d), व va, द da. Together व · द् spell vad, "to speak." Read it: व · द् Say the whole word in its beats: dha · n · ya · vā · d.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- its beats — dha · n · ya · vā · d → "dhanyavād"
- the two pieces — dhanya ("worthy") + vāda ("saying")
- read "ध" and "वद्" — dha, vad — and which one carries the breath

Before you move on

Read it: वद् (vad, "to speak.") What are the two parts of dhanyavād? (dhanya "worthy" + vāda "saying.") Is it the formal or casual "thanks"? (Formal, Sanskritic — the casual one is Persian-derived, next.)

1.4 Shukriyā — "thanks," Hindi's other heritage

The everyday "thanks" — and it is not a Sanskrit word at all. It came into Hindi from Persian and, before that, Arabic. This lesson is where you meet Hindi's second bloodstream.

What to know first

- dhanyavād — the formal, Sanskrit "thanks"; this is its casual counterpart.

The letters in this word

New: क = "ka," र = "ra," and the vowel sign ि for "i" (note: ि is written before the consonant but read after it).

- क् + र → क्र = "kra" (halant on क, joined to र — another conjunct).
- रि = "ri" (with the ि sign). So the middle of the word, क्रि, reads kri.

The opening shu and the closing yā need letters you have not met yet, so the whole written word waits for a later chapter. Today, say it and read क्रि.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Shukriyā comes, through Persian (shukriya), from Arabic shukr ("gratitude, thanks") — root sh-k-r. It is the same word as the Arabic shukran ("thank you"): Hindi and Arabic, two utterly different languages and scripts, saying thanks with one Semitic root. No Sanskrit here at all.

Why does Hindi have an Arabic word for "thanks"? Centuries of Persian as the language of courts and administration in South Asia poured thousands of Persian

(and, through Persian, Arabic) words into everyday Hindi/Urdu. So Hindi carries two vocabularies: a Sanskrit layer (dhanyavād, namaste) and a Perso-Arabic layer (shukriyā, and alvidā next). Often the Sanskrit word feels formal/literary and the Persian one feels everyday — though both are fully Hindi.

Why it's said this way

shukriyā is the casual, everyday "thanks" — what you'd say to a friend, a shopkeeper, a waiter. dhanyavād is its formal twin. Choosing between them is choosing a register — and, quietly, a heritage.

The letters in this word

New: क ka, र ra, and the sign ि for "i" (written before the consonant, read after). With a conjunct क् + र → क्र ("kra"), the middle of the word reads क्रि → kri.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- its beats — shu · k · ri · yā — then read "क्रि," kri
- "shukriyā" — and note it shares a root with Arabic shukran
- formal vs casual "thanks" — dhanyavād / shukriyā

Before you move on

Where does shukriyā come from — Sanskrit or Persian/Arabic? (Persian, from Arabic shukr — same root as Arabic shukran.) What are Hindi's two vocabulary layers? (Sanskrit and Perso-Arabic.)

1.5 अलविदा (alvidā) — "farewell," and the Arabic al- again

A goodbye — and another Perso-Arabic word, carrying a piece of Arabic grammar you may have met from the other side.

What to know first

- shukriyā — Hindi's Persian/Arabic layer; here's another word from it.

The letters in this word

New: the independent vowel अ = "a" (used when a word starts with a vowel — consonants have their built-in a, but a standalone one needs its own letter), ल = "la," and ा, the mātrā for long "ā". Reusing व द and the ि sign:

- अल = "al" · वि = "vi" (with the ि sign) · दा = "dā" (द + ा).

अलविदा = alvidā

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अलविदा comes through Persian/Urdu from Arabic al-widā^{c} ("the farewell"), from the Arabic root w-d-^{c}, "to leave, to bid farewell." And there at the front is अल — the Arabic article al-, "the," the very same "the" that rode into English on algebra and alcohol. So alvidā is literally "the farewell."

Why it's said this way

alvidā carries a note of finality — it's the goodbye for a long or final parting, more weighted than an everyday "see you." For casual "bye," Hindi speakers more often use namaste again, or the English "bye," or phir milenge ("we'll meet again"). But alvidā is the word when the parting matters — and, like shukriyā, it quietly carries centuries of Persian in it.

The letters in this word

New: the independent vowel अ ("a," for a word that starts with a vowel), ल la, and the sign ा for long "ā." अ · ल · वि · दा → alvidā.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- read "अलविदा" — a · l · vi · dā
- the al- at the front — the Arabic "the," as in "the farewell"
- when would you use alvidā vs a casual bye? (a weighty/final parting)

Before you move on alvidā literally means what, and what's the little al- doing there? ("The farewell" — al- is the Arabic "the.") Sanskrit or Perso-Arabic? (Perso-Arabic.)

1.6 The line on top — Devanagari's head-line

Look at any line of Hindi:

नमस्ते

Before any individual letter, notice the thing you cannot miss: a horizontal line running across the top of the whole word. Latin letters sit on a line. Devanagari letters hang from one.

You'll want to know — The shirorekhā

That line is the शिरोरेखा (shirorekhā) — literally the "head-line": śiras "head" + rekhā "line."

Śiras is worth a moment. It descends from Proto-Indo-European *$k^{\hat{}}erh_2$-, "head, horn" — the root behind Latin cornu ("horn"), Latin cerebrum ("brain"), Greek kara ("head"), and English horn. The line across the top of Hindi writing is, by ancestry, its horn.

Two habits about it, and they are the opposite of what you'd guess:

1. You draw it last. Write the letter's body first, then cap it.
2. Across a word it is one line. Rather than capping each letter separately, write the letters and then draw a single bar over the whole word. That is why Hindi words look like they're strung on a wire: they are.

A caveat you should have from the first lesson: this is the common convention, not a rule. Plenty of writers cap each letter as they go, and some draw the bar first. Stroke orders in this track are how it is usually taught, not a standard you can be wrong about.

And one note about the word shirorekhā itself, written शिरोरेखा: it contains a letter — ख — that this book does not give a stroke order for. Read the word; don't try to draw it. This track only asks you to hand-write letters whose stroke data actually exists, and it will say so every time that gap shows up.

Your turn

Keep नमस्ते visible. Finger-trace only its horizontal head-line once, from left edge to right edge. Then trace that same visible line once with a pencil. Do not copy the letter bodies yet. Say शिरोरेखा — head-line after your hand stops, and compare your traced line with the model immediately.

Before you move on

What is the line across the top called, and what does the word literally mean? (Shirorekhā — "head-line".) When is it usually drawn? (Last — and as one line across the whole word. Usually: it is the common convention, not a rule.) What ancient root sits inside śiras, "head"? (PIE ḱerh₂-, also behind horn.) Next: hang your first two letters from it.

1.7 न and म — two bodies under one head-line

You know the bar is usually drawn last. Now give it two letter bodies to cap.

You'll want to know — न — "na"

Three pieces:

1. a left bowl — a rounded scoop on the left.
2. a right spine — a vertical downstroke on the right.
3. the top bar — capping both. Last.

You'll want to know — म — "ma"

Four movements — the same spine, but the body starts at the top:

1. down and round — descend, loop, sweep right.
2. up the right spine, without lifting.
3. back down it.
4. the top bar — last, again.

You'll want to know — The shared frame

Both letters have a vertical spine on the right, with the distinguishing shape hanging to its left. This is Devanagari's commonest skeleton: spine on the right, character on the left, bar across the top. Learn the frame once and many new letters are only a new left-hand part.

"Commonest," not "only" — a minority of letters (द and र among them) have no right-hand spine at all. You will meet them as they come.

Your turn

How these letters are written, one after another, stroke by stroke: न, म

Keep न म visible. Copy न once, looking back after any piece you need. Then copy म once the same way. Put them side by side and add one headline across both. Compare each copy with the visible model immediately. Memory is not the task yet; one careful, supported copy is enough.

Before you move on

Draw न — its three pieces? (Bowl, spine, bar.) Draw म — what makes it different? (It starts at the top and runs into the spine.) Where does the spine sit in both? (On the right — though a minority of letters have none.) Next: the vowel already hiding inside each consonant.

1.8 The vowel that is already there — the abugida

Here is the thing that trips up every English speaker, and it is better to meet it now than to be confused for a month.

क is not "k". क is "ka".

You'll want to know — Consonants come with a vowel attached

In the Latin alphabet, k is a bare consonant and you must add a vowel to say anything. In Devanagari, every consonant already contains the vowel "a":

letter	says	not
क	ka	~~k~~
न	na	~~n~~
म	ma	~~m~~
त	ta	~~t~~

That built-in "a" is the inherent vowel. You get it free, whether you want it or not — and the next two lessons are entirely about what to do when you don't want it.

So the two letters you learned last lesson were never "n" and "m." They were na and ma — and if you write them together you have already written a real syllable pair: नम, nama, the first half of namaste.

You'll want to know — What this kind of script is called

A script that works this way — consonants carrying a default vowel — is an abugida.

The word comes from Ge'ez, the old liturgical language of Ethiopia, whose script works the same way — and it is built more cleverly than "alphabet" is.

ʾä — bu — gi — da names two things at once:

- the consonants ʾ, b, g, d — the first four of the old Semitic letter order (the same order that gives Greek alpha, beta, gamma, delta);
- the vowels ä, u, i, a — the first four of Ge'ez's vowel series.

So the word doesn't just recite the start of a list, the way alphabet recites alpha-beta. It demonstrates the system it names: consonant plus vowel, consonant plus vowel, four times over. A term that performs its own definition.

(Ge'ez's own traditional recitation order is different — hä-lä-ḥä-mä… — so abugida is a scholar's coinage drawing on the inherited Semitic order, not the Ethiopian schoolroom one.)

Your turn

- Say it: "क is ka, not k"
- Write it: नम — two letters, one bar across both — "nama"
- Say it: "abugida — a consonant plus its built-in vowel"

Before you move on

What does क say on its own? ("ka" — the vowel is built in.) What is that vowel called? (The inherent vowel.) What kind of script is this, and where does the word come from? (An abugida — ʾä-bu-gi-da, from Ge'ez, naming four consonants of the old Semitic order and four vowel series at once, so the word performs its own definition.) Write नम — what does it say? (Nama.) Next: two more letters, and the sound-map that orders them.

1.9 क and त — two letters on a map of the mouth

The built-in vowel means these are ka and ta, not bare k and t. Their shapes share the frame you already know.

You'll want to know — क — "ka"

1. a left loop
2. a vertical spine on the right
3. the top bar — last.

You'll want to know — त — "ta"

1. a small left curl
2. a tall spine
3. the top bar — last.

Same frame as before: spine right, shape left, bar on top. Only the left-hand part changes.

You'll want to know — Why the letters are in this order

The heart of the Devanagari consonant order is not a historical accident like A-B-C. Its five stop families (vargas) are sorted by where in your mouth the closure happens, starting at the soft palate and walking forward to the lips:

क (soft palate) → च (hard palate) → ट (roof, tongue curled back) → त (teeth) → प (lips)

Say those five and feel the closure travel forward. Indian phoneticians organised sounds this way well over two thousand years ago — Pāṇini's work is roughly fourth century BCE — producing a phonetics chart memorised as an alphabet long before Europe attempted the same analysis.

Two honest footnotes: this walk describes the five stop families, not the whole list; and this book does not give a stroke order for ट. Read it here, and wait for a source you trust before you write it.

Your turn

- Write it: क — "loop, spine, bar last"
- Write it: त — "curl, spine, bar last"
- Say it: "ka … ca … ṭa … ta … pa", back to front

Before you move on

What do क and त say alone? (Ka, ta — each has an inherent vowel.) What orders the five stop families? (Place of articulation, from the soft palate forward to the lips.) Next: replace that built-in vowel.

1.10 Practice — the Hindi greetings and the first four letters

No new words or letters. Read it: each aloud, then recall its meaning and which of Hindi's two heritages it comes from

What you've built

- नमस्ते namaste — "I bow to you" (Sanskrit nam, "bow"); hello & bye.
- नमस्कार namaskār — "the making of a bow" (Sanskrit); more formal.
- dhanyavād — "thanks" (Sanskrit dhanya "worthy" + vāda "saying"); formal.
- shukriyā — "thanks" (Persian, ← Arabic shukr); everyday.
- alvidā — "the farewell" (Persian, ← Arabic al-widāᶜ); weighty.

Two big ideas from one small chapter: how Devanagari reads (consonants carry a; a mātrā changes the vowel; a halant removes it and makes a conjunct), and Hindi's double heritage — a Sanskrit layer (namaste, dhanyavād) and a Perso-Arabic layer (shukriyā, alvidā), often the formal vs. the everyday word for the same thing.

Your turn — the first letters, by hand

Write it: न, म, क, त — each body first, the bar last — then compare with the shapes in this chapter and repair one

- The line on top: its name, and when is it drawn? (Shirorekhā, "head-line"; last, one line across the word.)
- What frame do the four share? (Spine right, shape left, bar on top — म starts at the top, क with a loop, त with a curl.)
- What does क say alone? (Ka, not k: the inherent vowel is built in — the mark of an abugida, a name from Ge'ez.)
- What orders क … त? (Where the mouth closes, from the soft palate forward to the lips.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all five words from memory — the two hellos, the two thanks, and the farewell
- greet someone (namaste), thank them formally (dhanyavād) then casually (shukriyā), and take a weighty leave (alvidā)
- for each of the five, Sanskrit or Perso-Arabic?

Before you move on

Which "thanks" is Sanskrit and which is Persian? (dhanyavād / shukriyā.) What three facts let you read Devanagari? (Consonants carry a; a mātrā changes the vowel; a halant removes it.) Next chapter: āp and tum — Hindi's formal and informal "you" — and introducing yourself.

Chapter 2

Introducing Yourself

Modes: voice (4) eyes (5) pen (15) Hands-free start: the first 8 of 24 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give my name and ask for someone else's in Hindi, then independently write a two-sentence greeting and practice-name card in Devanagari.
> With no visible model, greet a new classmate and give the practice name in two complete Devanagari sentences and repair one dimension; then hold the introduction exchange aloud, name the cousins of nām, merā, hai and kyā, and say what mātrās, the virama and conjuncts do to the letters you just wrote.

2.1 नाम (nām) — "name," a word older than Europe

To introduce yourself you need "name." Hindi's is one you already own in English — from before either language was born.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) Left to right: न (na) + ा (the long-ā mātrā) → ना (nā), then म (ma). Read ना · म → nām.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

नाम (nām) ← Sanskrit नामन् (nāman), from Proto-Indo-European h₃nómn (its final n syllabic) — the same ancient root as:

- English name, Latin nōmen (→ English noun, nominate), Greek onoma.

So Hindi nām and English name are cousins from before either language existed — one of the clearest bridges between the Indian and European branches of one family.

Three letters, left to right: न (na), ा the long-ā mātrā (ना = nā), म (ma). Read it: ना · म → nām

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "nām"
- the cousins — Hindi nām, English name, Latin nōmen → noun

Before you move on

What Sanskrit and PIE root is नाम from, and what English words share it? (nāman / h₃nómn* — name, noun, nominate.)

2.2 मेरा / मेरी / मेरे — "my" agrees with what is owned

The word for "my" — and, like name, a first-person word English shares to the root.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) म (ma) + े (the e-mātrā) → मे (me); र (ra) + ा (long ā) → रा (rā). Read मे · रा → merā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मेरा (merā, "my") is listed by CDIAL under the Sanskrit first-person base ma- (CDIAL 9691) — the same ma-/me- behind English me, my, mine and Latin meus. Hindi "my" and English "my" are, at root, one word.

Grammar Lens: "my" agrees with the noun

Hindi possessives change to match what's owned: मेरा (merā, masculine), मेरी (merī, feminine), मेरे (mere, plural). nām is masculine → merā nām. (You'll meet merī at your first feminine noun.)

The letters in this word

म (ma) + े (the e-mātrā) → मे (me); then र (ra) + ा (long ā) → रा (rā). Read it: मे · रा → merā

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "merā"
- the cousins — merā / English my, mine
- the three forms — मेरा (merā, m.) / मेरी (merī, f.) / मेरे (mere, pl.)

Before you move on

What root is मेरा built on, and its English cousins? (ma- — me, my, mine.) Why merā nām and not merī? (nām is masculine.)

2.3 है (hai) — "is," cousin of English is

The little verb "is" — and it's the same "is" spoken from Ireland to India.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) ह (ha) + ै (the ai-mātrā) → है (hai). One syllable.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

है (hai, "is") ← Sanskrit अस्ति (asti, "is"), from Proto-Indo-European h₁es- — the root of "to be" across the whole family:

- English is, German ist, Latin est, Spanish es, French est.

Hindi hai is the Indian cousin of the same tiny verb. "Is" really is one word, stretched across a continent.

Grammar Lens: the verb comes last

Hindi is subject–object–verb: "my name Arun is." hai sits at the end of the sentence, where English puts "is" in the middle. Bank the shape — in Hindi the verb waits until the end.

The letters in this word

ह (ha) + ै (the ai-mātrā) → है (hai). One syllable.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "hai"
- the family — hai / is / ist / est / es
- "merā nām Arun hai" — note hai at the end

Before you move on

What Sanskrit/PIE root is है from, and its cousins? (asti / h₁es-* — is, ist, est, es.) Where does the verb sit in a Hindi sentence? (At the end.)

2.4 मेरा नाम ... है (merā nām ... hai) — "my name is..."

Assemble the three atoms you just traced — merā, nām, hai — into the sentence for meeting anyone.

The two words — assembled

Three atoms, each already rooted — merā (my, ← ma-), nām (name, ← nāman), hai (is, ← asti):

> मेरा नाम ... है = "my name … is" = "my name is..."

Merā nām Arun hai. → "My name is Arun." Slot your name into the gap; hai stays at the end.

Grammar Lens: subject–object–verb

Literally the Hindi is "my name Arun is" — the verb last. English puts "is" in the middle ("my name is Arun"); Hindi holds it to the end. Every Hindi sentence you build will end on its verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "merā nām … hai" with your own name
- notice the order — my / name / [name] / is

Before you move on

Give your name in Hindi. (Merā nām … hai.) What's different about where "is" sits, versus English? (Hindi puts the verb last.)

2.5 आप / तुम (āp / tum) — "you," respectful and familiar

To ask someone's name, you need "you" — and Hindi grades it in three levels of respect.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) आप: independent vowel आ (ā, word-initial) + प (pa) → āp. तुम: त (ta) + ु (the u-sign) + म (ma) → tum.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

- तुम (tum, familiar "you") ← Sanskrit yuṣmad-, the plural "you", with its t- taken from tvam (CDIAL 10511); tvam is from PIE tū — the same root as English archaic thou, Latin tū, French tu.
- आप (āp, respectful "you") is a separate honorific word, from Sanskrit ātman, "self" (CDIAL 1135).

Grammar Lens: three levels of "you"

Hindi grades respect three ways: āp (respectful — strangers, elders), tum (familiar — friends, peers), tū (intimate or to a child; can insult if misused). The European tracks had two levels each; Hindi has three. For a first meeting, always āp.

The letters in this word

आप: the independent vowel आ (ā, word-initial) + प (pa) → āp. तुम: त (ta) + ु (the u-sign) + म (ma) → tum.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "āp" (respectful), "tum" (familiar)
- the cousin of tum — archaic English thou
- which to use with a stranger (āp)

Before you move on

Name Hindi's three "you"s and when āp is used. (āp / tum / tū; āp for respect, strangers, first meetings.) What English word is tum's cousin? (thou.)

2.6 क्या (kyā) — "what"

German asks a name with "how"; Hindi uses "what" — so here's kyā.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) A conjunct: क (ka) loses its vowel (a halant) and joins य (ya) → क्य (kya); add the long-ā mātrā → क्या (kyā).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

क्या (kyā, "what") ← Sanskrit kim / the interrogative stem ka-, from PIE k^{w}o- — the same question-root behind English wh- words (what, who, which) and Latin qu-. Hindi's question-words nearly all start with this k-: kyā (what), kaun (who), kab (when), kyūn (why).

The letters in this word

A conjunct: क (ka) loses its vowel (halant) and joins य (ya) → क्य (kya); add the long-ā mātrā → क्या (kyā).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kyā"
- the English wh- cousins — what, who, which
- the Hindi k- question family — kyā, kaun, kab

Before you move on

What root is क्या from, and its English cousins? (ka- / k^{w}o-* — what, who, which.) What sound do most Hindi question-words start with? (k-.)

2.7 आपका नाम क्या है? (āpkā nām kyā hai?) — "what's your name?"

Assemble the question: your + name + what + is.

The two words — assembled

- आपका (āpkā, "your") = आप (you) + का (kā, the possessive "of," the same agreeing kā/kī/ke that matches the noun).

आपका नाम क्या है? = literally "your name what is?" = "what's your name?"

Hindi keeps the verb last again, and simply drops the question-word kyā into the object slot — no reordering, no inversion.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Every word in this question is inherited: āp from Sanskrit ātman, "self" (CDIAL 1135), with -kā, "of"; nām from nāman; kyā from kim (CDIAL 3164); hai, usually traced to asti.

Grammar Lens: answer, and the informal version

Answer with the sentence you built: Merā nām Arun hai. The informal "your" swaps āpkā for tumhārā: tumhārā nām kyā hai?

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "āpkā nām kyā hai?"
- ask, then answer — "āpkā nām kyā hai?" / "merā nām … hai"
- the informal — "tumhārā nām kyā hai?"

Before you move on

What does आपका नाम क्या है? literally say, and where's the verb? ("Your name what is?"; the verb hai is last.) What's āpkā made of? (āp + kā, "you" + possessive.)

2.8 ख़ुशी (khushī) — "happiness," and "pleased to meet you"

The close to an introduction — and a word from Hindi's other vocabulary.

The two words

The Hindi "pleased to meet you" is आपसे मिलकर ख़ुशी हुई (āp-se milkar khushī huī) — literally "having met you, happiness happened."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The key word ख़ुशी (khushī, "happiness") is not Sanskrit — it's Persian (khush, "happy, pleasant"), one of the thousands of Persian words in everyday Hindi. (The dot under ख़ — a nukta — marks the Persian kh sound.) So even introducing yourself draws on Hindi's two vocabularies: Sanskrit (nām, hai) and Perso-Arabic (khushī) — the same double heritage you met with shukriyā and alvidā in Chapter 1.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "āpse milkar khushī huī"
- the key word — khushī ("happiness"), a Persian word
- the two heritages — Sanskrit nām, Persian khushī

Before you move on

What does the Hindi "pleased to meet you" literally mean, and where is khushī from? ("Having met you, happiness happened"; Persian.) What does the nukta dot under ख़ mark? (A Persian/Arabic sound.)

2.9 Mātrās — swapping the built-in vowel

Last lesson: every consonant carries a free "a". So how do you write ni, or mo, or nā?

You overwrite the inherent vowel with a small mark called a mātrā.

You'll want to know — The word itself

मात्रा (mātrā) means "a measure" — from the verb mā-, "to measure." That root is Proto-Indo-European meh₁*-, and it is the ancestor of English meter, measure, immense ("un-measurable"), and — by the oldest measuring instrument of all — month, the moon being what humans first counted time with.

A vowel sign is a measure of the syllable. The name is a description.

You'll want to know — Two to start with

◌ा — the vowel ā (a long "aa"). A vertical bar to the right:

न + ◌ा → ना (nā)

◌े — the vowel e. A stroke above the top bar:

म + ◌े → मे (me)

Notice the mātrā did not add a vowel. It replaced one. न was already "na"; now it is "nā". The inherent vowel is gone the moment a mātrā arrives.

You'll want to know — Now write a word you already know

You have न, ◌ा, म. That is enough for the Hindi word for "name" (Chapter 2):

न + ◌ा + म → नाम (nām)

Write the three characters, then draw one bar across all of them.

Your turn

- Write it: ना — "na, then the bar to the right" — nā
- Write it: मे — "ma, then the stroke above" — me
- Write it: नाम — three characters, one bar, "nām"
- Say it: "मात्रा = a measure"

Before you move on

What does a mātrā do to the inherent vowel? (Replaces it — never adds to it.) What does the word mātrā mean, and what English words share its root? ("Measure" — meter, measure, month.) Where does ा attach, and where does े? (Right; above the bar.) Write नाम — what does it mean? ("Name".) Next: the one mātrā whose position tries to fool your eye.

2.10 ि — left on the page, right in the mouth

ा sits to the right and े above. One Hindi vowel sign goes somewhere that will feel wrong for a while.

You'll want to know — The famous mātrā

ि — the vowel i — is written before the consonant, to its left, but pronounced after it:

श + ि → शि, and that says śi, not iś.

Read it aloud in the order you might guess and you get the wrong word. The mark leans left on the page and lands right in the mouth.

There is no satisfying modern logic behind the placement. It comes down from the script's Brahmi ancestry and simply stuck. Your eye will learn it faster than your intuition will.

The rule to carry away:

A mātrā replaces the inherent vowel. And ि — the only Hindi mātrā that does this — is written before the consonant it follows.

Your turn

- Trace it: ि + श as the visual order in शि
- Say it: "śi — the mark leans left and lands right"
- Contrast: ना nā · मे me · शि śi

Before you move on

शि — śi or iś? (Śi.) Where is ि written, and where is it pronounced? (Before the consonant on the page, after it in speech.) Does it add to the inherent vowel? (No — it replaces it.) Next: र and स, then your own name phrase.

2.11 र and स — a spineless letter and a possible cousin

Two more letters put every consonant in "my name" within reach.

You'll want to know — र — "ra", your first spineless letter

Every letter you have written so far has had a vertical spine on the right. र doesn't:

1. a shoulder — a small hook at the top left.
2. a downstroke — falling away from it.
3. the top bar — last.

That's all. A shoulder and a stroke.

र is the first of these you write, but not the only one in the script — द is spineless too, and you have already read it in dhanyavād (Chapter 1). Think of "no right-hand post" as a small family to learn, not as र's private signature.

You'll want to know — स — "sa"

Back to the normal frame, with a curl and a body:

1. a left curl
2. a body
3. the right spine
4. the top bar — last.

A possible very distant cousin

स and English S may be related — and the story is worth telling carefully, because half of it is certain and half is not.

The certain half: English S comes from Latin, Latin from Greek sigma, and Greek from the Phoenician letter šin. That western line is not in doubt.

The uncertain half: Brahmi, the ancestor of Devanagari, is most likely descended from the same Semitic family, arriving in India by way of Aramaic. That is the leading scholarly view, but it is not settled — some scholars argue Brahmi was an indigenous invention, and even among those who accept a Semitic source, which letter became which is disputed.

So: if the mainstream account holds, स and S share a great-great-grandparent some three thousand years back, with no family resemblance left at all. Say "probably cousins," not "cousins."

Your turn

- Write it: र — "shoulder, downstroke, bar" — no spine
- Write it: स — "curl, body, spine, bar"
- Say it: the probable cousins — "sigma · S from šin … and probably स too"

Before you move on

What makes र unlike the letters you've written so far? (No right-hand spine — just a shoulder and a downstroke.) Is it the only spineless letter? (No — द is one too, and there are a few others.) Draw स — four pieces? (Curl, body, spine, bar.) Which English letter might स be related to, and how sure are we? (S — certainly šin → sigma → S going west; the eastern leg through Aramaic to Brahmi is the leading view, not settled.) Next: assemble those letters into "my name" and let the word boundary break the head-line.

2.12 मेरा नाम — two words, two head-lines

You now know every piece of merā nām, "my name." This lesson only asks you to assemble them and make the word boundary visible.

You'll want to know — Build the phrase

मेरा	म + े + र + ा — merā, "my"
नाम	न + ा + म — nām, "name"

मेरा नाम

Two words means two bars. Modern Hindi separates words with an ordinary space, exactly like English. Because the shirorekhā is drawn over each word, that space appears as a break in the line. The gap in the bar is the result of the space, not a substitute for it.

Classical Sanskrit manuscripts often ran words together without spaces, so the bar could continue across a whole line. Modern Hindi does not ask you to copy that manuscript habit.

Your turn

Write these out:

- मेरा — four pieces, one bar
- नाम — three pieces, one bar
- मेरा नाम — two words, two separate bars

Before you move on

Write मेरा नाम. How many bars, and why? (Two — Hindi uses an ordinary space, and the bar breaks because of it.) Is the gap itself the space? (No — it is the visible result of the space.) Next: stop an inherent vowel, then use that power inside namaste.

2.13 The vowel killer — virama and halant

Every consonant carries a free "a." Mātrās replace it. But what if you need no vowel at all — just a bare consonant?

You'll want to know — The virama ्

् is the virama — a small stroke below the consonant that removes the inherent vowel:

क = ka → क् = k

The name says exactly what it does. विराम (virāma) is "a stopping, a cessation" — vi- + ram-, "to rest, to come to a halt." The vowel is told to stop.

And the word is still working elsewhere in Hindi punctuation: a full stop is पूर्ण विराम ("complete stop"), a comma is अल्प विराम ("slight stop"), a semicolon अर्ध विराम ("half stop"). One word, graded by how long you rest.

A naming note: virāma is the Sanskrit term, and the one Unicode uses. In everyday Hindi the mark is usually called the हलंत (halant). Same mark, two names — you'll meet both.

Your turn

- Write it: क् — "क with the stroke below" — the vowel is dead
- Say it: "virāma — stopping; halant — the everyday Hindi name"
- Contrast: क ka → क् k

Before you move on

What does the virama ् do, and what does its name mean? (Kills the inherent vowel; virāma = "a stopping" — and a full stop in Hindi is पूर्ण विराम, a "complete stop".) What is the mark usually called in everyday Hindi? (The halant.) Next: watch a stopped consonant squeeze into the one that follows.

2.14 स्त — two consonants squeezed together

A visible virama can stop a vowel. In ordinary writing, the stopped consonant often goes one step further and fuses with the consonant after it.

You'll want to know — The usual squeeze

The fused shape is a conjunct:

स् + त → स्त (sta)

Look at स. It loses its right-hand spine, shrinks, and leans into त. For spine-bearing letters this is the usual move: the first consonant gives up its spine and hands the syllable to the second.

You'll want to know — Spineless and irregular shapes

र has no spine to give up, so it behaves differently: as a hook above a later letter (र् + क → र्क) or as a small stroke under an earlier one (क + ् → क्र). Other spineless letters, द among them, stack or take special shapes. A few common conjuncts — क्ष, त्र, ज्ञ — are irregular and must be learned whole.

This is why Devanagari seems to have so many shapes: it is not only 40-odd letters, but also the ligatures they form when they collide. Do not memorise every conjunct as a separate character. Learn to recognise the squeeze.

Your turn

- Write it: स् — स with the vowel stopped
- Write it: स्त — watch स lose its spine and lean into त
- Trace it: र्क and क्र — two special jobs for spineless र

Before you move on

What usually happens instead of leaving a virama visible? (The first consonant fuses with the next into a conjunct.) In स्त, what does स give up? (Its spine.) Why does र need different forms? (It has no spine to give up.) Next: use स्त inside the first greeting you learned.

2.15 नमस्ते — assemble the greeting at last

You have learned every piece separately. Now the writing track pays off in the first word of this book.

You'll want to know — Assemble नमस्ते piece

न	na	Lesson 1
म	ma	Lesson 1
स्	s — स with its vowel killed	last lesson
ते	te — त + the े mātrā	Lessons 2 and 3

न · म · स् · ते → नमस्ते

Write it, then draw one bar across the whole word.

You'll want to know — What you have been writing all along नमस्ते joins namas + te:

- namas — "a bow, an obeisance," from nam-, "to bend"
- te — "to you"

So namaste is literally "a bowing to you." It describes the physical gesture, which is why the word and folded hands go together. The greeting is the bow said aloud.

Namaskār is the same namas with kāra, "making": "making a bow." One root, two greetings.

Your turn

- Write it: स्त — the conjunct at the center
- Write it: ते — त plus the stroke above
- Write it: नमस्ते — one bar across all of it
- Say it: "namas = a bow, te = to you"

Before you move on

Write नमस्ते. How many bars? (One — it is one word.) What does it literally mean? (A bowing to you: namas, "bow," + te, "to you.") And namaskār? (The same namas + kāra, "making a bow.")

2.16 नमस्ते — look, hide, write, compare

Look at नमस्ते for five seconds. Point to न, म, स्, and ते. Do not copy while the model is visible.

Writing — delayed copy

- cover नमस्ते
- wait five seconds
- write it once from memory
- uncover the model and compare the four known pieces

If one piece differs, circle it and repair only that place. Repair is part of the exercise, not a failure. There is no tracing and no romanized answer model.

Before you move on

Read your repaired word aloud and remember its literal sense: a bow to you. Stop after one memory attempt.

2.17 One heard greeting — write what you know

Cover the answer lower on this page. You will hear one familiar greeting. No new Hindi and no new Devanagari shape is hiding in this lesson.

Writing — short dictation

Hear: namaste — "a bow to you"

Write the Devanagari word from sound alone. Do not use a visible model, romanized answer, or tracing guide. Now uncover and compare: नमस्ते. Check न, म, स्, and ते in that order. Repair one place if needed.

Before you move on

Writing one known word from sound completes this first tiny stage runway. It does not complete Hindi writing: later lessons grow into phrases, messages, and timed assessment tasks.

2.18 Chapter 2 — the introduction, whole

Every atom is built and rooted. Here's the exchange it was for.

The exchange

Hindi	English
merā nām Mira hai	My name is Mira.
āpkā nām kyā hai?	What's your name?
merā nām Arun hai	My name is Arun.
āpse milkar khushī huī	Pleased to meet you.

Every atom traced:

- nām ← Sanskrit nāman (English name, noun)
- merā ← root ma- (English me, my, mine)
- hai ← Sanskrit asti (English is, German ist, Latin est)
- kyā ← stem ka- (English what, who)
- khushī ← Persian khush (Hindi's second, Perso-Arabic vocabulary)

Two Hindi habits: the verb goes last (subject–object–verb), and "you" has three respect-levels (āp / tum / tū).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the whole exchange, both voices
- your own introduction — "merā nām … hai"
- ask it back — "āpkā nām kyā hai?"

Before you move on

Give your name, ask someone else's, say you're pleased to meet them. (Merā nām … hai. / Āpkā nām kyā hai? / …khushī huī.) Which two words here come from Hindi's Persian vocabulary rather than Sanskrit? (khushī — and you'll recall shukriyā, alvidā from Ch1.)

Next chapter: āp kaise haiṁ? ("how are you?") and answering with ṭhīk — the responding cycle.

2.19 One frame, one small choice

Write the two known words मेरा नाम once. Leave an ordinary space after each word. Today adds no new letter and no new grammar.

Writing — complete the visible frame

मेरा नाम _____ है

Choose one name already used in Chapter 2: मीरा or अरुण. Put it in the gap, then write है. The order stays:

1. मेरा नाम — my name
2. the chosen practice name
3. है — is

Write only one sentence. Keep four visible word groups; punctuation comes in the next tiny lesson.

Before you move on

Read the sentence once. Stop after one choice and one bounded repair.

2.20 One sentence, one stop

Read मेरा नाम मीरा है. Count four word groups. Do not change their order.

Writing — add only the boundary

Hindi can close this sentence with the vertical पूर्ण विराम:

मेरा नाम मीरा है।

The mark । is not part of है. Leave the word intact, then place one vertical stop after it. This lesson changes only the sentence boundary.

Write the known sentence once and add ।. Check the four spaces first, then the one stop.

Before you move on

Stop after one sentence and one single-dimension repair.

2.21 Hide the sentence; keep the order

Look for five seconds:

मेरा नाम मीरा है।

Point to the four word groups and the final stop. Do not write while the model is visible.

Writing — delayed sentence production

Cover the model. Wait ten seconds. From the meaning cue "My name is Mira", write the whole Hindi sentence with no visible answer and no romanization.

Uncover it only after writing. Compare in this order: word order, spaces, spelling, then ।. Circle one differing dimension and repair only that one.

Before you move on

One delayed attempt is enough today.

2.22 Hear one known sentence; write it

Cover the answer below. The heard sentence uses only the familiar frame and the familiar practice name Arun.

Writing — sentence dictation

Hear: merā nām Aruṇ hai — "my name is Arun"

Write the Hindi sentence from sound alone. Add its final sentence stop. Do not use a visible Devanagari model or a romanized written answer.

Now uncover and compare: मेरा नाम अरुण है। Check word order first. If the order is right, check spelling; if spelling is right, check ।. Repair only the first differing dimension.

Before you move on

Stop after one heard sentence.

2.23 A two-sentence card for a new classmate

You have already practised both pieces separately:

- the greeting नमस्ते।
- the name sentence मेरा नाम मीरा है।

Writing — assemble for one reader and purpose

Your reader is a new classmate. Your purpose is to greet them and give the practice name. Put the greeting first and the name second:

नमस्ते। मेरा नाम मीरा है।

Write the two separately practised pieces once. Check two sentence stops, then the space between the sentences. No new word is introduced here.

Before you move on

Next, the model disappears.

2.24 No model — greet and give the name

Close the preceding lesson. Wait ten seconds. Keep only this purpose cue:

Write to a new classmate. Greet them, then give the practice name Mira.

There is no Devanagari model and no romanized answer.

Writing — independent delayed checkpoint

Write two sentences from the purpose cue. Do not reopen the model until the attempt is complete. Then compare in four separate passes:

1. two meanings in the requested order;
2. word and sentence spacing;
3. spelling;
4. one । after each sentence.

Choose the first differing pass, repair only that dimension, and stop.

Your turn — the introduction, said back

- Give your name, ask theirs, say you're pleased. (Merā nām … hai. Āpkā nām kyā hai? Āpse milkar khushī huī.)
- English cousins of nām, merā, hai, kyā? (Name, my, is, what.)
- Why merā, not merī? (Nām is masculine.) Where does hai go? (Last.)
- Which "you" for a stranger? (Āp.) And khushī's origin? (Persian.)

Script — the pieces you wrote

- Mātrā means? What does one do? ("A measure"; it replaces the inherent vowel.)
- Where do ा, े and ि sit? (Right, above — ि before, said after.)
- Which of र and स has no spine? (र — conjuncts give it a hook or stroke.)
- What does ् do? (Stops the vowel: the halant.) What does स lose in स्त? (Its spine.)

Before you move on

This completes only the short connected pre-A1 writing bridge. It is not a timed mock and does not claim A1 or exam readiness.

Chapter 3

How Are You?

Modes: voice (1) eyes (6) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how someone is in Hindi, answer naturally, and return the question.
> Complete HI-C03-practice, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: ask how someone is in Hindi, answer naturally, and return the question.

3.1 कैसा / कैसी / कैसे — agreeing forms of "what kind?" and "how?"

You already met kyā ("what"). Here is its sibling — and, like all of Hindi's question-words, it starts with k-.

The letters in this word

(Skim if you read Devanagari.) क (ka) + ै (the ai-mātrā) → कै (kai); स (sa) + े (the e-mātrā) → से (se). Read कै · से → kaise.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कैसे (kaise, "how") ← Sanskrit kīdṛśa ("of what kind") / the interrogative stem क- (ka-), from Proto-Indo-European k^{w}o- — the same question-root behind English wh- (what, who, how) and Latin qu-. Notice the pattern: Hindi's question-words are nearly all k- words — kyā (what), kaun (who), kab (when), kahāṁ (where), kaise (how). Learn to hear the k- and you can spot a question.

Grammar Lens: कैसा agrees

The adjective form कैसा (kaisā) changes to match what it describes: kaisā (m.), kaisī (f.), kaise (m. plural / respectful). Because the respectful "you" (āp) takes a plural verb, "how are you?" uses the plural कैसे — that is the form you will use next.

The letters in this word

क (ka) + ै (the ai-mātrā) → कै (kai); स (sa) + े (the e-mātrā) → से (se). Read it: कै · से → kaise

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kaise"
- the agreeing set — कैसा, कैसी, कैसे (kaisā, kaisī, kaise)
- the k- question family — kyā, kaun, kab, kahāṁ, kaise
- which English question-words share the root (what, who, how)

Before you move on

What root do all of Hindi's question-words share, and what English family is it cousin to? (The interrogative k-, PIE $*k^{w}o$-; the English wh- words.) Which form is masculine singular, which is feminine, and which is respectful or masculine plural? (कैसा, कैसी, कैसे.)

3.2 आप कैसे हैं? (āp kaise haiṁ?) — "how are you?"

Three words you already own, assembled into the first thing you ask after hello.

The letters in this word

हैं is है (hai, "is") + the anusvāra dot ं → हैं (haiṁ), the nasalised plural. Everything else — आप (āp), कैसे (kaise) — you have met.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आप कैसे हैं? = आप (āp, respectful "you") + कैसे (kaise, "how") + हैं (haiṁ, "are") — literally "you how are?" Hindi keeps the verb last, exactly as in Chapter 2's merā nām … hai. And because āp is grammatically plural (that is how Hindi shows respect), its verb is the plural haiṁ, not the singular hai.
आप comes from Sanskrit ātman, "self" (CDIAL 1135), and कैसे from kīdṛśa, "of what kind" (CDIAL 3197).

Grammar Lens: respect is plural

To an elder or a stranger: आप कैसे हैं? To a friend (tum): तुम कैसे हो? (tum kaise ho? — ho is the familiar "are"). To no one in particular you would never drop to tū. Match the "you" to the verb: āp … haiṁ, tum … ho.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the respectful question — āp kaise haiṁ?
- the familiar version — tum kaise ho?
- where the verb sits (at the end)

Before you move on

Why is it haiṁ (plural) and not hai with āp? (Because respect in Hindi is grammatically plural — āp always takes the plural verb.)

3.3 मैं (maiṁ) — "I," the m- of the first person

To answer "how are you?" you first need "I." In Chapter 2 you learned merā ("my"); here is its owner.

The letters in this word

म (ma) + ै (the ai-mātrā) + the anusvāra nasal ं → मैं (maiṁ). One nasal syllable.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मैं (maiṁ, "I") ← Sanskrit mayā ("by me"), on the first-person root म- (ma-) — the same root that gave you merā ("my") last chapter, and the same m- behind English me, my, mine and Latin mē. Hindi's "I," its "my," and English's "me/my" all grow from one ancient first-person sound.

Grammar Lens: the pronoun you can often drop

Hindi verbs carry the person in their ending, so maiṁ is frequently left out once context is clear — much like Spanish or Latin. You will still learn it first, because the answer to āp kaise haiṁ? begins with it: maiṁ …

The letters in this word

म (ma) + ै (ai) + the anusvāra ं → मैं (maiṃ). One nasal syllable.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "maiṁ"
- the m- family — maiṁ (I), merā (my), English me, my

Before you move on

What root links maiṁ, merā, and English me? (The first-person m-, from Sanskrit ma- / PIE me-*.)

3.4 हूँ (hūṁ) — "am," cousin of English am

Chapter 2 gave you hai ("is"). This is the same verb in the first person — "I am."

The letters in this word

ह (ha) + ू (the long-u mātrā) → हू (hū); the chandrabindu ँ nasalises it → हूँ (hūṁ).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हूँ (hūṁ, "am") ← Sanskrit अस्मि (asmi, "I am") — the first-person of the very root that gave you hai. That root, PIE h₁es-, is the "to be" of the whole family: Sanskrit asmi → English am, Latin sum, Greek eimi; Sanskrit asti → hai / English is. So the Hindi copula lines up with English person by person: हूँ am, है is, हैं are.

Grammar Lens: the "to be" table so far person	Hindi	English

I	maiṁ hūṁ	I am
you (resp.)	āp haiṁ	you are
he/she/it	vah hai	he/she is

The verb होना (honā, "to be") is the frame every sentence hangs on; you now have three of its faces.

The letters in this word

ह (ha) + ू (long u) → हू (hū); the chandrabindu ँ nasalises → हूँ (hūṃ).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "hūṁ"
- the copula trio — hūṁ (am), hai (is), haiṁ (are)
- "maiṁ … hūṁ" — I am …

Before you move on

What Sanskrit word is hūṁ from, and its English cousin? (Asmi, "I am"; English am — same PIE root h₁es-*.)

3.5 ठीक (ṭhīk) — "fine," and how to answer

The word that answers "how are you?" — and does a dozen other jobs besides.

The letters in this word

ठ (ṭha, a retroflex th — tongue curled back to the roof of the mouth) + ी (the long-ī mātrā) + क (ka) → ठीक (ṭhīk). The retroflex ṭ-ṭh-ḍ series is a hallmark of Indian languages; the tongue touches further back than for an English "t."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ठीक (ṭhīk) means "correct, right, fine, exactly, OK." It comes from a reconstructed ṭhīkka*, "firm, right", probably from Sanskrit sthita, "standing" (CDIAL 5503). It is one of the most useful words in the language: ṭhīk hai ("OK / agreed"), ṭhīk samay ("the right time"), sab ṭhīk? ("all well?").

The exchange — the reply

Put it together with Chapter 3's atoms: maiṁ ṭhīk hūṁ — "I am fine." Literally "I fine am," verb last. Add thanks: maiṁ ṭhīk hūṁ, dhanyavād. And the whole exchange stands:

> — āp kaise haiṁ? ("How are you?") — maiṁ ṭhīk hūṁ, dhanyavād. ("I'm fine, thank you.")

The letters in this word

ठ (ṭha, a retroflex th — tongue curled to the roof of the mouth) + ी (long ī) + क (ka) → ठीक. The retroflex ṭ-ṭh-ḍ series is a hallmark of Indian sound.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ṭhīk" — feel the retroflex ṭh
- the full reply — maiṁ ṭhīk hūṁ
- the casual "OK" — ṭhīk hai

Before you move on

Give the whole reply to āp kaise haiṁ?, and say where ṭhīk probably comes from. (Maiṁ ṭhīk hūṁ; from Sanskrit sthita, "standing".)

3.6 आपका स्वागत है (āpkā svāgat hai) — "you're welcome"

When someone thanks you, this is what you say back — and it hides a word Sanskrit uses whole, unchanged.

The letters in this word

The key word is स्वागत (svāgat): the conjunct स्व (स् s + व va → sva) + ग (ga) + त (ta). Add आपका (āpkā, "your," from Chapter 2) and है (hai, "is").

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आपका स्वागत है = "your welcome is" → "you are welcome." The heart of it, स्वागत (svāgat, "welcome"), is Sanskrit सु (su-, "well, good") + आगत (āgata, "come") — literally "well come," exactly like English welcome. Two deep roots hide inside:

- su- "good" is the twin of Greek eu- (euphoria, eulogy).
- āgata is from the root गम् (gam, "to go/come"), cousin of English come.

Sanskrit's own svāgatam is this very word, unchanged — here it is again, worn into everyday Hindi.

The letters in this word

The key word स्वागत (svāgat): the conjunct स्व (स् s + व va → sva) + ग (ga) + त (ta), with आपका (āpkā, "your") and है (hai).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "āpkā svāgat hai"

- what svāgat is built from (su "well" + āgata "come")
- the exchange — dhanyavād / āpkā svāgat hai

Before you move on

What does svāgat literally mean, and what English word matches it piece for piece? ("Well come"; English welcome.)

3.7 Chapter 3 — The how-are-you exchange

No new words. The whole responding cycle, assembled from atoms you now own.

The exchange

Say these aloud:

- "How are you?" (respectful) — āp kaise haiṁ?
- "I'm fine, thank you." — maiṁ ṭhīk hūṁ, dhanyavād.
- "You're welcome." — āpkā svāgat hai.
- the familiar version of the question — tum kaise ho?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Say these aloud:

- the k- question-word for "how" (kaise)
- "I" and "am" (maiṁ, hūṁ)
- the copula trio you now hold (hūṁ / hai / haiṁ)

What you've built — roots you now carry

- kaise ← the interrogative k- (PIE $*k^wo$-), cousin of English how/what
- maiṁ ← ma- (PIE me-*), cousin of English me/my
- hūṁ ← Sanskrit asmi, cousin of English am

- svāgat ← su + āgata = "well come," matching English welcome

Before you move on

A stranger asks āp kaise haiṁ? — give a complete, polite reply, then thank-and-welcome the exchange back. (Maiṁ ṭhīk hūṁ, dhanyavād. — and if thanked, āpkā svāgat hai.)

Chapter 4

Farewells

Modes: voice (2) eyes (4) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can end a Hindi conversation politely and choose a farewell that fits the situation.
> Complete HI-C04-practice, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: end a Hindi conversation politely and choose a farewell that fits the situation.

4.1 फिर (phir) — "again," the seed of "see you again"

One small word turns a goodbye from "farewell" into "till next time." Here it is.

The letters in this word

फ (pha, an aspirated p — a puff of breath) + ि (the i-mātrā, written before the consonant but read after) + र (ra) → फिर (phir).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

फिर (phir) means "again, then, afterwards." It is a native Indo-Aryan adverb (the form "having turned" of a reconstructed phirati*, "turns", CDIAL 9078) with no tidy English cognate — but its job is one English shares: it turns a parting into a promise. English "see you again," Hindi phir milenge ("we'll meet again"). The optimism is the same; only the word is Indian.

The letters in this word

फ (pha, an aspirated p) + ि (the i-mātrā, written before but read after) + र (ra) → फिर.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "phir" — mind the aspirated ph
- what it adds to a goodbye ("again / then")

Before you move on

What does phir mean, and what does it do to a farewell? ("Again / then"; it makes the parting a promise of return.)

4.2 मिलेंगे (milenge) — "(we) will meet"

Your first future-tense verb — and the other half of "see you again."

The letters in this word

म (ma) + ि→मि (mi); adding ल (la) + े completes मिले (mile). The anusvāra ं nasalises; गे (ge). Read the complete मिलेंगे → milenge.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मिलेंगे (milenge, "we/they will meet") is the future of the verb मिलना (milnā, "to meet, to be found, to get"), from Sanskrit मिल् (mil-, "to join, unite") — the root behind milan ("a union, a meeting"), a common word and name. The ending -एंगे (-enge) is the plural future: milenge = "(we) will meet."

Grammar Lens: how Hindi builds the future

Hindi marks the future with an ending on the verb stem: mil- ("meet") + -enge ("we/they will") → milenge. No helper-word like English "will" — the tense lives in the ending, the way Hindi's person lives in hūṁ/hai/haiṁ.

The letters in this word

मि (mi) + ल (la) with े makes मिले (mile); add the anusvāra + गे (ge) → मिलेंगे (milenge).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "milenge"
- the root and its cousin-noun (mil- "to join," milan "a meeting")
- how the future is marked (an ending on the stem, not a helper-word)

Before you move on

What verb is milenge from, and how does Hindi show "will"? (Milnā "to meet," from Sanskrit mil-; with the ending -enge, not a separate word.)

4.3 फिर मिलेंगे (phir milenge) — "we'll meet again"

The warm, everyday goodbye — the one you actually hear, far more than Chapter 1's formal alvidā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

फिर मिलेंगे = फिर (phir, "again") + मिलेंगे (milenge, "we will meet") — "we'll meet again." Where Chapter 1's अलविदा (alvidā) is a grave, final farewell (and, fittingly, a Perso-Arabic word — al-widā, "the farewell"), phir milenge is native, everyday, and hopeful: फिर goes back to phirati*, "turns" (CDIAL 9078), and मिलेंगे to Sanskrit milati, "meets" (CDIAL 10133). It is the exact sibling of the "promise of return" goodbyes across South Asia — Tamil, Bengali, Marathi all say "I'll come again" rather than "goodbye."

Grammar Lens: two registers of goodbye

- अलविदा (alvidā) — formal, final, Perso-Arabic; for long or last partings.
- फिर मिलेंगे (phir milenge) — everyday, warm, native; "till we meet again." Even more casual: phir milte haiṁ ("(we) meet again," present for a near future).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the warm goodbye — phir milenge
- how it differs from alvidā (everyday/hopeful vs. formal/final)
- the two words it's built from (phir + milenge)

Before you move on

What does phir milenge literally say, and when would you use it over alvidā? ("We'll meet again"; for everyday partings, where alvidā is formal and final.)

4.4 कल मिलते हैं (kal milte haiṁ) — "see you tomorrow"

A goodbye for tomorrow — built on a word that means both tomorrow and yesterday.

The letters in this word

क (ka) + ल (la) → कल (kal). Two of the simplest letters, one of the trickiest words.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कल (kal) means both "tomorrow" and "yesterday" — the same word for the day on either side of today. It is from Sanskrit kalya, "dawn, tomorrow", built on काल (kāla, "time") (CDIAL 3104) — the very root that sits inside Punjabi's akāl ("timeless"). Hindi trusts context (and the verb's tense) to tell which kal you mean: kal milte haiṁ (present-ish → "tomorrow"), kal milā (past → "yesterday"). कल मिलते हैं = kal ("tomorrow") + milte haiṁ ("we meet," present used for a near-certain future) → "see you tomorrow."

Grammar Lens: the present-for-future

milte haiṁ is literally "(we) meet" — Hindi, like English ("I'm seeing you tomorrow"), uses the present for a scheduled future. Milte (the habitual participle) + haiṁ (the "are" you learned in Chapter 3).

The letters in this word

क (ka) + ल (la) → कल (kal). Two simple letters, one tricky word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kal milte haiṁ"
- the puzzle — kal means both tomorrow and yesterday
- the root and its Punjabi cousin (kāla "time"; akāl "timeless")

Before you move on

What two opposite days does kal mean, and what tells them apart? (Both tomorrow and yesterday; the sentence's tense/context.)

4.5 चलता हूँ (chaltā hūṁ) — "I'll be off"

The casual "I'm heading out" — and your first taste of how a Hindi verb changes for a man or a woman speaking.

The letters in this word

च (ca) + ल (la) + the long-ā mātrā → चलता (chaltā); with हूँ (hūṁ, "am," from Chapter 3). Read chaltā hūṁ.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The phrase चलता हूँ, chaltā hūṁ, literally means "I go / I move," used the way English says "I'll be off / I'll get going." The verb is चलना (chalnā, "to move, walk, go"), from Sanskrit चल् (cal-, "to move, stir") — the root behind cal ("move!"), calan ("circulation"), and cañcal ("restless"). Like Bengali āshi ("I come") and Marathi yeto, Hindi prefers to leave by saying "I'm moving," never a blunt "I'm leaving."

Grammar Lens: the verb agrees with the speaker's gender

- a man says चलता हूँ (chaltā hūṁ)
- a woman says चलती हूँ (chaltī hūṁ)

The -tā / -tī ending marks the speaker's gender — a feature English has no trace of, and one you will meet again and again. (Compare Marathi yeto m. / yete f.)

The letters in this word

च (ca) + ल (la) + long ā → चलता (caltā), with हूँ (hūṃ).

Your turn

- Say it (m.): chaltā hūṁ · (f.): chaltī hūṁ
- Say it: the verb and root (chalnā "to move," Sanskrit cal-)
- Say it: why Hindi says "I move" and not "I leave" (the softer, non-final parting)

Before you move on

What does chaltā hūṁ literally mean, and how does a woman say it? ("I go/move" = I'll be off; chaltī hūṁ, with the feminine -tī.)

4.6 Chapter 4 — The farewells

No new words. Four ways to part, from the formal to the offhand.

Why it's said this way

Say these aloud:

- formal, final (Perso-Arabic) — alvidā
- everyday, "we'll meet again" — phir milenge
- "see you tomorrow" — kal milte haiṁ
- casual "I'll be off" (m./f.) — caltā hūṁ / caltī hūṁ

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Say these aloud:

- "again" and "(we) will meet" (phir, milenge)
- the word that means BOTH tomorrow and yesterday (kal)
- the verb behind "I'll be off" (calnā, "to move")

What you've built — roots you now carry

- milenge ← mil- "to join" (milan, "a meeting")
- kal ← kāla "time" (cousin of Punjabi akāl, "timeless")
- caltā ← cal- "to move"; the -tā/-tī ending marks the speaker's gender
- alvidā ← Perso-Arabic al-widā, "the farewell"

Before you move on

You're leaving a friend and expect to see them next week. Which goodbye fits, and how would a woman sign off casually? (Phir milenge; caltī hūṁ.)

Chapter 5

The First Verbs

5.1 बोलना / बोल (bolnā / bol) — "to speak" and its stem

Until now, "to be." Here is a verb that does something — and it comes in a shape you'll see on every Hindi verb.

The letters in this word

ब (ba) + ो (the o-mātrā) → बो (bo); ल (la); ना (nā). Read बो · ल · ना → bolnā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बोलना (bolnā, "to speak") is a native Indo-Aryan verb (from Prakrit bolla-, "to utter"). Notice its ending: -ना (-nā). Every Hindi verb, named in the dictionary, ends in -nā — it is the infinitive marker, Hindi's "to _____": bol-nā "to speak," cal-nā "to move" (you met it in caltā hūṁ), mil-nā "to meet" (from milenge). Strip the -nā and you have the stem (bol-) that takes all the other endings.

Grammar Lens: stem + ending

The stem बोल (bol-) is where the action lives; endings pin down who and when: bol-tā (speaking, m.), bol-tī (speaking, f.), bol-o (speak!, familiar command). You will build every tense by adding to a stem like this.

The letters in this word

ब (ba) + ो (the o-mātrā) → बो (bo); ल (la); ना (nā). Read it: बो · ल · ना → bolnā

Your turn

- Say it: "bolnā"
- Say it: strip -ना from बोलना
- Read it: the stem बोल (bol-)
- Say it: the infinitive marker every Hindi verb ends in (-nā)
- Say it: three -nā verbs you now know (bolnā, calnā, milnā)

Before you move on

What ending does every Hindi infinitive carry, and what is bolnā's stem? (-nā; the stem is bol-.)

5.2 रहना (rahnā) — "to live, to stay"

A second verb, so you can say where you live — and see the stem + ending machine work all over again.

The letters in this word

र (ra) + ह (ha) + ना (nā) → रहना (rahnā). The familiar infinitive -ना.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रहना (rahnā, "to live, to remain, to stay") is from Sanskrit रह् (rah-, "to remain, be left"). It covers both "reside" and "keep on": maiṁ Dillī meṁ rahtā hūṁ ("I live in Delhi"), ṭhīk rahnā ("stay well" — a warm sign-off). Stem rah- + -tā/-tī + honā, exactly like bolnā.

Grammar Lens: "in" comes after the noun maiṁ Dillī meṁ rahtā hūṁ ("I live in Delhi"). The little word में (meṁ, "in") sits after Delhi, not before — Hindi uses postpositions where English uses prepositions. "Delhi-in I live." The verb, as ever, is last.

The letters in this word

र (ra) + ह (ha) + ना (nā) → रहना. The familiar infinitive -ना.

Your turn

- Say it (m.): maiṁ Dillī meṁ rahtā hūṁ · (f.): … rahtī hūṁ
- Say it: the root (rah- "to remain")
- Say it: where "in" (meṁ) sits — after the noun, not before

Before you move on

Say "I live in Delhi," and note what is odd (to English ears) about the word "in." (Maiṁ Dillī meṁ rahtā/rahtī hūṁ; meṁ "in" comes after Delhi — a postposition.)

5.3 करना — "to do," "to work," and their present forms

One verb powers a thousand phrases — and its root already sits inside a word you learned back in Chapter 1.

The letters in this word

क (ka) + र (ra) + ना (nā) → करना (karnā). Simple letters, enormous reach.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

करना (karnā, "to do, to make") is from Sanskrit √kṛ ("to do, make") — one of the most productive roots in all of Sanskrit, and from Proto-Indo-European k^{w}er-. You have met its family already:

- कर्म (karma) = "a thing done," an action and its consequence.
- नमस्कार (namaskār) = "the making of a bow" (namas + kār) — the greeting from Chapter 1.
- saṃskṛta ("Sanskrit") = "put together, perfected."

So karnā is the everyday face of the root behind karma, namaskār, and the name Sanskrit itself.

Grammar Lens: करना makes verbs out of anything

Hindi builds countless verbs as noun + करना:

- काम करना (kām karnā) = "work-do" = "to work" (kām, "work")
- bāt karnā = "talk-do" = "to converse"
- intazār karnā = "to wait"

So maiṁ kām kartā hūṁ = "I work" (lit. "I work-do am"). Learn karnā and you unlock a whole grammar of "do-verbs."

The letters in this word

क (ka) + र (ra) + ना (nā) → करना.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "karnā"
- "I work" (m./f.) — maiṁ kām kartā hūṁ / kartī hūṁ
- the Chapter 1 word that shares its root (namaskār — the "making" of a bow)

Before you move on

What Sanskrit root is karnā from, and name two words built on it. (√kṛ "to do"; any two of karma, namaskār, Sanskrit.)

5.4 बोलता हूँ (boltā hūṁ) — one stem, and the two things Hindi makes it agree with

You have the stem bol-. This lesson is the machine that turns any stem into a sentence about what someone does — and it is the single biggest piece of leverage in this book so far, because it fits every verb you will ever meet.

What to know first

- बोलना — the infinitive, and how to strip -nā to get the stem.
- हूँ — "I am," the verb this template leans on.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

bol- goes back to a reconstructed boll-*, "speak" (CDIAL 9321). The -tā continues the old present participle in -nt-, as in Prakrit homta, "being" (CDIAL 9416).

Grammar Lens: stem + -tā/-tī/-te + honā

To say what someone does in general, Hindi builds three pieces in a row: the stem, a participle ending, and the "to be" verb.

who	the pieces	the whole thing
I (a man)	-ता -tā + हूँ hūṁ	बोलता हूँ boltā hūṁ
I (a woman)	-ती -tī + हूँ hūṁ	बोलती हूँ boltī hūṁ
āp (you, respectful)	-ते -te + हैं haiṁ	बोलते हैं bolte haiṁ

Strip -nā, add the ending, add honā. That is the whole rule, and it does not change from verb to verb.

Grammar Lens: the two agreements, and why they are two

This is the part worth slowing down for, because Hindi is doing two separate jobs at once and a beginner naturally expects one.

- -ता / -ती / -ते agrees with gender and number. It does not care who is speaking. A woman says boltī whether she is talking about herself or being addressed.
- हूँ / है / हैं agrees with person. It does not care about gender. Hūṁ is "I am" for a man and a woman alike.

So boltī hūṁ is not one ending chosen from a list of six. It is two choices made independently and then set side by side — feminine on the participle, first-person on the verb. Once you treat them as two dials rather than one, the whole present tense stops needing to be memorised.
English does this too, and hides it: "I am speaking" is also participle plus to be. Hindi simply puts the to be last, where Hindi always puts its verbs.

Your turn

- Say it (m.): "I speak" — boltā hūṁ
- Say it (f.): "I speak" — boltī hūṁ
- Say it: "you (respectful) speak" — āp bolte haiṁ
- Say it: which of the two endings changed when you switched from a man to a woman, and which one did not (-tā→-tī changed; hūṁ did not)

Before you move on

Hindi's present habitual makes two agreements at once. Name what each of the two pieces agrees with. (-tā/-tī/-te agrees with gender and number; hūṁ/hai/haiṁ agrees with person.)

5.5 मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ (maiṁ hindī boltā hūṁ) — "I speak Hindi"

Your first complete, moving sentence — subject, object, and a verb that acts.

The letters in this word

हिंदी (hindī): ह (ha) + ि→हि + the anusvāra ं + दी (dī). And बोलता (boltā) = the stem bol- + -ता (-tā), the present-habitual, masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ = मैं (maiṁ, "I") + हिंदी (hindī, "Hindi," the object) + बोलता (boltā, "speak," m.) + हूँ (hūṁ, "am") → literally "I Hindi speaking am." Verb-frame last, exactly as always.
The name हिंदी itself is a traveller: from सिन्धु (sindhu, the river Indus) → Persian hind (the land past that river) → hindī ("of Hind"). The same sindhu gave Greek Indos → English India, Indus, Hindu. The language is named, at two removes, after a river.

Grammar Lens: the frame you already have

The verb here is the present habitual — stem + -tā/-tī/-te + honā — which बोलता हूँ built one lesson ago. Nothing about it is new; this sentence is the first place you get to use it on a real object.
What is new is the word order: मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ puts the object before the verb frame, so the sentence ends on hūṁ. Hindi's verb goes last, always.

Your turn

- Say it (m.): maiṁ hindī boltā hūṁ · (f.): maiṁ hindī boltī hūṁ
- Say it: "you (resp.) speak Hindi" — āp hindī bolte haiṁ
- Say it: the river hidden in the word hindī (sindhu, the Indus)

Before you move on

Build "I speak Hindi" as a woman, and name the river behind hindī. (Maiṁ hindī boltī hūṁ; the Sindhu/Indus.)

5.6 Chapter 5 — The first verbs

No new words. Three verbs, one engine — build real sentences about yourself.

How to answer — build the sentences

Say these aloud:

- "I speak Hindi" (m./f.) — maiṁ hindī boltā/boltī hūṁ
- "I live in Delhi" — maiṁ Dillī meṁ rahtā/rahtī hūṁ
- "I work" — maiṁ kām kartā/kartī hūṁ
- "you (resp.) speak Hindi" — āp hindī bolte haiṁ

Grammar lens — the engine

Say these aloud:

- the ending every infinitive carries (-nā)
- the two agreements in a present sentence (-tā/-tī/-te for gender/number; hūṁ/hai/haiṁ for person)
- where the verb sits, and where "in" sits (verb last; meṁ after the noun)

What you've built — roots you now carry

- bolnā "to speak" (Prakrit bolla-)
- rahnā "to live" ← rah- "to remain"
- karnā "to do" ← √kṛ — the root of karma, namaskār, Sanskrit
- hindī ← sindhu, the river Indus

Before you move on

In one breath, tell me your language, your city, and your work in Hindi (as a woman). (Maiṁ hindī boltī hūṁ. Maiṁ … meṁ rahtī hūṁ. Maiṁ kām kartī hūṁ.)

Chapter 6

Numbers One to Five

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from one to five in Hindi and hear the older Sanskrit shapes still sitting inside तीन, चार and पाँच.
> Count एक to पाँच*, trace* तीन and चार back through the Prakrits to neuter Sanskrit forms, then say पाँच beside pañca and point to the moon-dot that is all that survives of the lost nasal consonant.

6.1 एक, दो, तीन, चार, पाँच — the five forms

Five words, and a story about how languages age.

You'll want to know — The five

	Hindi	said
1	एक	ek
2	दो	do
3	तीन	tīn
4	चार	chār
5	पाँच	pāṁch

If you did the writing track you'll recognise some pieces: क (Lesson 2), त (Lesson 2), न (Lesson 1), र (Lesson 4), and the ा mātrā (Lesson 3).

Plenty here you haven't been taught to draw yet — ए, च, द, प, the ी and ो mātrās, and the ँ. Read it: these letters

You'll draw them when the writing track reaches them.

The ँ over pāṁch is a chandrabindu, "moon-dot" — it nasalises the vowel, the way French does in bon.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

All five are tadbhavas, Sanskrit numbers reshaped by sound change: ek from a doubled form of eka (CDIAL 2462), do from dva (CDIAL 6648), tīn from trīṇi (CDIAL 5994), chār from catvāraḥ (CDIAL 4655), and pāṁch from pañca (CDIAL 7655).

Your turn

- Say it: "ek, do, tīn, chār, pāṁch"
- Point to: the familiar क, त, न, र and ा inside the five words
- Trace it: the ँ moon-dot over pāṁch

Before you move on

Count to five in Hindi. (Ek, do, tīn, chār, pāṁch.) Which mark nasalises the vowel in पाँच? (The chandrabindu, "moon-dot.") Do you need to draw every unfamiliar letter today? (No — read them now and draw them when their stroke lessons arrive.) Next: watch the Sanskrit forms wear smooth.

6.2 तीन and चार — weight moves from consonants to vowels

The five modern forms did not jump straight from Sanskrit. The Prakrits did most of the wearing-down in between.

You'll want to know — Put the stages side by side

Sanskrit	→ Prakrit →	Hindi
éka-	ekka	ek
dvá-	do	do
neuter trī́ṇi	tiṇṇi	tīn
neuter catvā́ri	cattāri	chār
páñca	pañca	pāṁch

Three and four come from the neuter forms. Sanskrit also had masculine tráyaḥ, but Hindi tīn continues trī́ṇi. The same choice gives catvā́ri → chār.

You'll want to know — The two-step weight trade

1. trī́ṇi* → *tiṇṇi: r is lost and ṇ doubles to make up the weight. Long ī shortens because the doubled consonant already makes the syllable heavy.

2. tiṇṇi* → *tīn: the double simplifies and the vowel lengthens to pay for the lost consonant weight.

The vowel ends long again after being short in the middle. Ekka → ek shows the second half of the same trade.

This is not decay in a bad sense; it is what heavy use does over two thousand years. The same ancient number wore down on another continent:

	ancient	modern
Latin → Spanish	quattuor	cuatro
Sanskrit → Hindi	catvā́ri	chār

Same PIE word, two continents, two ordinary histories.

Your turn

- Say it: "trī́ṇi … tiṇṇi … tīn"
- Say it: "catvā́ri … cattāri … chār"
- Compare: "quattuor → cuatro · catvā́ri → chār"

Before you move on

Which Sanskrit forms underlie tīn and chār? (Neuter trī́ṇi and catvā́ri.) What sits between Sanskrit and Hindi? (The Prakrits.) In trī́ṇi → tiṇṇi → tīn, what trades places? (The lost r is paid for by a double consonant, then the simplified double by a long vowel.) Next: follow the nasal that stayed inside pāṁch.

6.3 पाँच — the nasal moved into the vowel

Tīn moved weight between consonants and vowels. Pāṁch moves a whole nasal sound into the vowel itself.

You'll want to know — The nasal that stayed

Sanskrit pañca → Hindi pāṁch. The n did not vanish; Sanskrit's ñ consonant became Hindi's nasalised ā. The ँ chandrabindu records that nasality above the word.

Say pāṁch and pañca one after the other. You can hear the nasal migrating backward from its own consonant into the vowel.

Your turn

- Say it: "pañca … pāṁch"
- Hum: hold the nasal through the vowel in pāṁch
- Point to: ँ, the moon-dot that records it

Your turn — the five, and how they wore down

This is the chapter's checkpoint, so gather the earlier two lessons too.

- Count from one to five. (Ek, do, tīn, chār, pāṁch.)
- Which Sanskrit forms gave tīn and chār, and what stood in between? (The neuter trīṇi and catvāri; the Prakrits.)
- In trīṇi → tiṇṇi → tīn, what pays for the lost r, and then for the lost double? (A doubled ṇ; then a long vowel.)
- Which number wore down the same way on another continent? (Latin quattuor → Spanish cuatro, beside catvāri → chār.)

Before you move on

Did the nasal in pañca disappear? (No — it moved into the vowel.) What records it in पाँच? (The chandrabindu.)

6.4 म — one character, met inside words you already say

A horizontal head-line (shirorekha) runs across the top; letters hang beneath it like laundry on a line.

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: म

म — ma.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not m, it is ma.

What it is made of:

- a lower loop
- an upper loop
- right spine
- top bar

You already say these, and every one of them has म somewhere inside it:

- नमस्ते namaste — hello / goodbye (namaste — "I bow to you")
- न, म na, ma — the first two Devanagari letters
- मेरा merā — my
- मेरा नाम merā nām — assemble my name from known letters and show word spacing as two head-lines

Writing: म — follow the numbered strip

How म is written, stroke by stroke

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your pen makes it. Then write म yourself — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

The strip shows where to start the character and which way to travel, in one attested order. That is taught with real variation from school to school, so the strip names its source beneath it: treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

Your turn

- Look: at these words, and find म in the ones that have it

  नमस्ते · न, म · शिरोरेखा

- Trace it: म three times, saying ma as you finish each one
- Look: back at any page of this chapter and find म once more

Before you move on

Which character is this — म? What sound does it carry? (ma.) Name one word you already say that contains it.

6.5 र — one character, met inside words you already say

A horizontal head-line (shirorekha) runs across the top; letters hang beneath it like laundry on a line.

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: र

र — ra.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not r, it is ra.

What it is made of:

- a top-to-bottom stem curling clockwise around the lower loop
- a diagonal tail
- the top shirorekhā

You already say these, and every one of them has र somewhere inside it:

- शिरोरेखा shirorekhā — the head-line that Devanagari letters hang from
- मेरा merā — my
- र, स ra, sa — र (ra) and स (sa)
- मेरा नाम merā nām — assemble my name from known letters and show word spacing as two head-lines

Writing: र

How it is written — 2 strokes · 1 pen lift · 3 movements

Stroke order after Opiaterein, 'Deva-order.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How र is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start at the headline junction, descend the stem, and curl left and clockwise around the lower loop to the tail junction
- 2. without lifting, draw the diagonal tail down-right
- 3. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 1. The pen comes up once.

The source shows three movements; most native writers draw र in two strokes (96% of HP Labs India's native-writer samples). This path keeps every movement in order and direction, and lifts only before the headline.

This is one attested teaching order and not a national standard — handwriting here is taught with school-to-school variation. Source: Opiaterein, 'Deva-र-order.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009.

Your turn

- Look: at these words, and find र in the ones that have it

  शिरोरेखा · मेरा · नमस्ते

Chapter 7

Yes and No

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say yes and no in Hindi and use नहीं to negate a whole sentence.
> Answer yes with हाँ and politely with जी हाँ, then say नहीं, put it in front of a verb — मैं नहीं जानता *— and hear the single PIE ne behind no, non and nein.

7.1 हाँ / जी हाँ / जी (hāṃ / jī hāṃ / jī) — yes / polite yes

A single open vowel, said through the nose — that's Hindi's yes.

You'll want to know — The word

हाँ = yes, said hāṃ. It's the letter ह (h) with the ा sign for long ā, and — the key mark — the ँ on top: the chandrabindu, the "moon-dot." It does one thing: it nasalises the vowel. So hāṃ isn't "hah" but a humming $h\tilde{a}\tilde{a}^n$, the sound sent up through the nose, the way French does in bon.

(Don't confuse the moon-dot ँ with the plain dot ं anusvara you'll see in the next word — both nasalise, but the moon-dot rides a vowel that has nothing above it, like ा.)

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हाँ comes from Sanskrit ām, "yes", with an h- that CDIAL calls emphatic or taken from the verb "to be" (CDIAL 1235). The polite जी is from jīva, “long live!” (CDIAL 5240).

You’ll want to know — Saying it politely

A bare hāṃ is a normal, friendly yes. To an elder, a stranger, or anyone you’d show respect, Hindi adds the honorific जी (jī):

> जी हाँ — jī hāṃ — “yes” (polite)

jī on its own is already a respectful “yes.” You met -jī on names; here it warms up a plain yes into a courteous one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- “hāṃ” — let the ā hum through your nose
- polite — “jī hāṃ”
- spot the mark — the moon-dot ँ is what nasalises it

Before you move on

How do you say yes in Hindi? (hāṃ, हाँ.) What does the chandrabindu ँ do to the vowel? (Nasalises it — sends it through the nose.) How do you make hāṃ polite? (Add जी — jī hāṃ.) Next: the word for no.

7.2 नहीं (nahīṃ) — no / not

> Hindi’s “no” carries a sound so old it also sits inside German and Latin.

You’ll want to know — The word

नहीं = no, said nahīṃ — न (na) + ह (h) + ी (long ī) + the ं anusvara that nasalises the end. The heart of it is that first syllable na, which is Hindi’s ancient negator, straight from Sanskrit na.

You'll want to know — The oldest "no" you'll meet

That na is not just Sanskrit's — it is the same negative root that runs across nearly every Indo-European language, all descended from one ancient sound, PIE *ne:

from *ne
Sanskrit na	→ Hindi nahīṃ
Latin nōn	→ Spanish no, French non
Germanic	→ German nein, English no / not

German's nein carries this exact idea ("not one"); here it is again at the other end of the family, in Hindi. The word for no is one of the most stubbornly unchanged things human languages have.

You'll want to know — One word, two jobs

Like Spanish no, nahīṃ is both the answer and the sentence-negator:

- answer: kyā āp ṭhīk haiṁ? — नहीं (nahīṃ). ("Are you well?" — "No.")
- negator: मैं नहीं (nahīṃ) जानता — "I do not know."

So this single word gives you both "no" and how to make a sentence negative.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "nahīṃ" — nasal at the end, from the anusvara
- the ancient root — "na… nōn… nein… no": one PIE ne
- as a negator — "maĩ nahīṃ jāntā", "I don't know"

Your turn — yes, then no

- Kyā āp ṭhīk haiṁ? Answer yes, then no. (Hāṃ … nahīṃ.)
- Which mark makes hāṃ hum through the nose? (The moon-dot, the chandrabindu.)
- Now say yes to an elder. (Jī hāṃ — जी makes it courteous.)

Before you move on

How do you say no in Hindi? (nahīṃ, नहीं.) What Sanskrit word is its core, and what ancient sound is that from? (na, from PIE *ne.) Which other course words share that root? (Latin nōn, German nein, English no/not — and Spanish/French no/non.) Besides "no," what else does nahīṃ do? (It negates a sentence — maĩ nahīṃ jāntā, "I don't know.")

7.3 न — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: म — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: न

न — na.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not n, it is na.

What it is made of:

- a left bowl
- right spine
- top bar

You already say these, and every one of them has न somewhere inside it:

- नमस्ते namaste — hello / goodbye (namaste — "I bow to you")
- न, म na, ma — the first two Devanagari letters
- मेरा नाम merā nām — assemble my name from known letters and show word spacing as two head-lines
- नमस्ते namaste — assemble namaste

Writing: न — follow the numbered strip

7.4 क — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: र — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: क

क — ka.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not k, it is ka.

What it is made of:

- a counterclockwise left bowl
- a top-to-bottom central stem
- a right-hand arch
- the top shirorekhā

You already say these, and every one of them has क somewhere inside it:

- नमस्कार — hello (namaskār — more formal)
- क, त ka, ta — write ka and ta
- क्या kyā — what
- कैसे kaise — how (also कैसा/कैसी, agreeing)

Writing: क

How क is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start at the bowl's upper-right junction and sweep left over the top, down around the left side, and back to the lower-right junction
- 2. without lifting, climb up the central stem to the headline
- 3. descend the central stem top-to-bottom
- 4. climb back up the stem to the upper junction
- 5. sweep the right-hand arch clockwise down to its open lower tip
- 6. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 1. The pen comes up once.

The source shows four movements; most native writers draw क in two strokes (74% of HP Labs India's native-writer samples). This path keeps every movement in order and direction, and lifts only before the headline.

Chapter 8

Please

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say please in Hindi, both with कृपया and with the polite verb ending everyday speech actually prefers.
> Complete HI-C08-checkpoint, the chapter's closing checkpoint: say कृपया and unpack it as 'of your compassion', switch to the everyday बैठिए*, say why* कृ is read kri, find अ and े in words you already say, then write कृ, अ and मे from sound.

8.1 कृपया (kṛpayā) — please (kindly)

First, the word you already use to thank someone: धन्यवाद.

Hindi's dictionary word for "please" is really the word compassion in disguise — and it's more formal than you might expect.

You'll want to know — The word

कृपया = please, literally "kindly / graciously." It's built on the Sanskrit noun कृपा (kṛpā), "grace, compassion, mercy" — so asking with kṛpayā means, at heart, "of your compassion."

That places Hindi in good company: Arabic asks min faḍlik ("from your grace"), and the Dravidian languages ask with daya ("compassion"). A whole swathe of Asia says please by naming the kindness it hopes for — a different instinct from French's "if it pleases you."

The first syllable hides a sound worth noticing: कृ is ka carrying the vocalic r (the ृ mark) — kṛ, the same ṛ vowel Sanskrit and the Dravidian scripts share. The next lesson takes that mark out of this word and writes it on its own.

You'll want to know — Be honest about how it's used

Here's the catch a textbook often hides: कृपया is formal and bookish. You'll see it on signs and hear it in announcements ("kṛpayā mind the gap"), but in everyday speech Hindi speakers rarely say it. Real politeness usually rides on the verb instead — the respectful request ending -iye / -iyegā: *baiṭhiye "please sit," *suniye "please listen." And very often, people simply say the English word "please."

So learn kṛpayā to read it and to be formally polite — but know that the living "please" of Hindi is baked into the verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kṛpayā" — kṛ with the vocalic r, then -payā
- the root — "kṛpā = compassion" → "of your compassion"
- the everyday way — the verb ending: "baiṭhiye" = "please sit"

Before you move on

What is the formal Hindi word for please? (कृपया kṛpayā.) What does its root kṛpā mean, and which other languages ask the same way? ("Grace / compassion" — like Arabic min faḍlik and Dravidian daya.) Is kṛpayā what people usually say out loud? (No — it's formal; everyday politeness rides on the verb ending -iye/-iyegā, or people say English "please.")

8.2 ृ — written as one vowel, said as another

You have been saying कृपया (kṛpayā). Its first syllable, कृ, carries the mark this lesson writes.

Before the new one: क — what sound does it carry?

Something is about to go underneath it.

Script you'll notice: ृ

ृ — a small hook below the consonant.

It is a vowel sign, so it attaches to a consonant rather than standing on its own, and it replaces the a built into that consonant.

Worked through: क + ृ = कृ.

Script: the name and the sound have come apart

This mark is called the vocalic ṛ — a vowel made out of an r, which is a thing Sanskrit had and Hindi does not.

So a Hindi speaker says it as ri. You will see कृ written and hear kri. The spelling records where the word came from; the mouth does something simpler.

That is worth knowing early, because it explains a word that would otherwise look unreadable to you on the page and sound perfectly ordinary out loud.

written	said
ृ	ri

Nearly every word carrying this mark is one Hindi took from Sanskrit, which is why the mark is uncommon and the words that carry it are not.

Writing: ृ — follow the numbered strip

8.3 अ — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: न — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: अ

अ — a.

It is an independent vowel — the shape the vowel a takes when a word begins with it, rather than the sign it becomes inside a word.

What it is made of:

- a joined upper-and-lower left body
- a middle shoulder running into the right stem
- a right vertical stem
- the top shirorekhā

You already say these, and every one of them has अ somewhere inside it:

- अलविदा — goodbye (alvidā — a final farewell, Persian/Arabic-derived)

Writing: अ

How अ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. curve around the upper bowl, then continue down and around the lower bowl without lifting
- 2. lift and sweep the middle shoulder right
- 3. without lifting, climb up the right stem to the headline
- 4. descend the right stem top-to-bottom
- 5. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 2. The pen comes up 2 times and no more.

The source shows four movements; most native writers draw अ in three strokes (74% of HP Labs India's native-writer samples). This path keeps every movement in order and direction, and lifts only before the shoulder and the headline.

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

े — e.

It is a vowel sign. It is not a letter and never stands alone: it attaches to a consonant and replaces the a built into it with e. Replaces, not adds — the a is gone.

Where it sits: a stroke above the top bar.

Worked through: म + े = मे — me.

You already say these, and every one of them has े somewhere inside it:

- नमस्ते namaste — hello / goodbye (namaste — "I bow to you")
- शिरोरेखा shirorekhā — the head-line that Devanagari letters hang from
- मेरा merā — my

8.5 Chapter 8 checkpoint — please, two ways, and three marks

Nothing new here. Please out loud first, both ways, then the three marks this chapter put on the page.

Your turn — please, two ways

Say these aloud:

- the formal word for "please", the one on signs and in announcements
- "please sit", the way everyday speech asks

(Kṛpayā; baiṭhiye.)

- What does the root kṛpā mean, and which other languages ask the same way? ("Grace, compassion": like Arabic min faḍlik and the Dravidian daya.)
- Is kṛpayā what people usually say out loud? (No: it is formal. Everyday politeness rides on the verb ending -iye or -iyegā, or on English "please".)

Script — ◌ृ, अ and ◌े

- कृ opens कृपया. What does the hook under क do, and how does a Hindi speaker say कृ? (It replaces the a with the vocalic ṛ, which Hindi says as ri: kri.)
- अलविदा opens on अ. Why a full letter there and not a sign? (The word starts on the vowel a, so the vowel stands on its own.)
- Which mark turns म into मे, and where does it sit? (◌े, a stroke above the top bar.)

Read it: कृपया aloud as kripayā, and point to the ृ Read it: नमस्ते aloud, and point to the े Writing — from sound

Cover: the Script block above, so no model stays in view
Write it: kri — the hook goes under its consonant
Write it: a as it stands at the start of a word, then me
Check: against the key — कृ, अ, मे
Write it: one repaired shape, then stop

Before you move on

A guest arrives at your door. Ask them to sit, the everyday way. (Baiṭhiye.) That is the chapter: please as a word and as a verb ending, and the three marks inside the words you already say. Next chapter: sorry, and asking forgiveness.

Chapter 9

Sorry

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can apologise in Hindi with माफ़ कीजिए and reach for its more formal cousin when the moment calls for it.
> Say माफ़ कीजिए as 'please do forgiveness', then क्षमा करें when the setting is formal.

9.1 माफ़ कीजिए (māf kījiye) — please forgive me / sorry

You already know the formal कृपया (kṛpayā), "please." Hindi's everyday "sorry" is built the same way you build a request: name the kindness, ask for it to be done.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

- माफ़ (māf) = "forgiven, pardoned" — not a native Hindi word at all! It's borrowed through Persian from Arabic عفو (ᶜafw), "to pardon, efface, wipe away [a wrong]." Notice the spelling: the dot under फ (called a nuqtā) turns the plain pha sound into fa — Hindi's way of writing sounds that arrived from Persian and Arabic.
- कीजिए (kījiye) = the respectful imperative "please do," from करना (karnā), "to do."

So माफ़ कीजिए is literally "please do forgiven[-ness]" — please make [this] forgiven. It's the same light-verb move you've already met: naming a state (forgiveness, kindness, compassion) and asking someone to do it.

You'll want to know — Be honest about register — and about English creeping in माफ़ कीजिए is warm and genuinely everyday — but Hindi keeps a more formal, Sanskritic cousin for writing and ceremony: क्षमा करें (kṣamā karēṁ), "please grant kṣamā" — from Sanskrit क्षमा (kṣamā), "patience, forbearance, forgiveness." Where kṛpayā was the bookish "please," kṣamā karēṁ is the bookish "sorry."

And here's the honest twist: in casual conversation, many Hindi speakers simply say the English word "sorry" outright — it has been fully adopted into everyday Hindi, the same way English "please" sometimes stands in for kṛpayā.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "māf" — forgiven — then "kījiye," please do
- the whole phrase — "māf kījiye" = please forgive me
- the formal cousin — "kṣamā karēṁ"

Before you move on

What does माफ़ कीजिए literally mean? ("Please do forgiven[-ness]" — māf "forgiven" + kījiye "please do.") Where does māf come from? (Borrowed via Persian from Arabic ᶜafw, "to pardon.") What's the more formal, Sanskritic cousin? (क्षमा करें kṣamā karēṁ, from kṣamā "patience/forgiveness.") What do many Hindi speakers just say instead, casually? (The English word "sorry.")

9.2 आ — one character, met inside words you already say

Chapter 10

Days of the Week

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name all seven days of the week in Hindi and say which planet each day is named for.
> Recite सोमवार through रविवार end to end, name each day's deity and the Babylonian sky behind the whole planet-week, and close it with Saturn's day and the Sun's day.

10.1 सोमवार to शुक्रवार — Hindi's own planet-week

You've seen Spanish, Latin, and French name their weekdays for planet-gods. Here's the surprise: Hindi does too — with its own, independent set of gods.

You'll want to know — The pattern: [deity] + वार, "day"

Every Hindi weekday is a deity's name plus वार (vār), "day" (Sanskrit vāra):

Hindi	literally, and its deity/planet	day
सोमवार (somavār)	Soma's day: the Moon	Monday
मंगलवार (maṅgalvār)	Mangala's day: Mars	Tuesday
बुधवार (budhvār)	Budha's day: Mercury	Wednesday
गुरुवार (guruvār)	Guru's day: Jupiter (Bṛhaspati, called "Guru," teacher of the gods)	Thursday
शुक्रवार (śukravār)	Śukra's day: Venus	Friday

You'll want to know — Be honest about where this system came from

This is the same seven-body idea as Rome's planetary week — Sun, Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn — and it is not an isolated Indian invention: historians trace it, ultimately, to a shared source in Babylonian astronomy, and most accounts hold that it reached both Rome and India through the same Hellenistic-Greek channel of transmission (India's own horoscopic-astrology texts, like the Yavanajātaka, are explicitly adapted from Greek originals). The exact path and timing into India are still debated among historians of astronomy, but the system isn't a case of Rome and India copying each other directly — both are more like cousins, downstream of one much older shared idea of the sky.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "somavār" — Soma/Moon's day — then "maṅgalvār," Mangala/Mars's day
- the pattern — "[deity] + vār" = [deity]'s day
- "guruvār" — Thursday — Bṛhaspati, called "Guru"

Before you move on

What does every Hindi weekday end in, and what does it mean? (वार vār, "day.") Which planet is गुरुवार, and what title does its deity carry? (Jupiter — the deity Bṛhaspati, called "Guru," teacher of the gods — an ancient title Bṛhaspati bears, not the source of the word itself.) Did Hindi borrow its planet-week from Rome? (No — both likely trace back through Hellenistic Greece to a shared Babylonian astronomical source, though the exact route into India is still debated.)

10.2 शनिवार and रविवार — Saturday and Sunday, no rewrite needed

You've met five Hindi weekdays, each a deity's name plus वार (vār), "day." The last two complete the set — and here, unlike Spanish or French, nothing ever got renamed.

You'll want to know — The last two days

- शनिवार (śanivār) = "Śani's day" — Saturn.
- रविवार (ravivār) = "Ravi's day" — the Sun (Ravi, one of the Sun's many Sanskrit names).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Both are Sanskrit compounds taken over whole, tatsamas: śani, "Saturn", and ravi, "the Sun", each with vāra, "one's turn", which Sanskrit also used for "day of the week" (CDIAL 11547).

You'll want to know — Be honest about the contrast with Spanish and French

Remember: Spanish's sábado/domingo and French's samedi/dimanche are not simple planet-names — Christianity renamed both (Saturn's day became the Sabbath; the Sun's day became "the Lord's day"). Hindi's weekend went through no such rewrite: शनिवार and रविवार are still, today, plainly "Saturn's day" and "Sun's day" — the full planet-week, all seven days, standing untouched by any later religious relabeling.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "śanivār" — Saturn's day — then "ravivār," Sun's day
- the whole week — "somavār, maṅgalvār, budhvār, guruvār, śukravār, śanivār, ravivār"
- the contrast — Spanish/French renamed their weekend; Hindi never did

Your turn — the first five, from memory

- What is every weekday built from? (A deity's name + वार vār, "day.")
- Whose days are somavār and śukravār? (The Moon's; Venus's.)
- Did India copy its planet-week from Rome? (No — the two are cousins, both traced to Babylonian astronomy, most likely through Hellenistic Greece.)

Before you move on

What do शनिवार and रविवार literally mean? ("Saturn's day" and "Sun's day.") How is Hindi's weekend different from Spanish's or French's? (No religious rewrite ever happened — Hindi kept the plain planet-names for all seven days, while Spanish/French swapped in Sabbath / Lord's day for the weekend.)

10.3 ◌ — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: आ — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: ◌्

◌् — no sound of its own — it takes one away.

It is a vowel-killer. Every consonant in this script arrives with an a already inside it — that is what an abugida is. This mark takes the a back, leaving the bare consonant. It is how the script writes two consonants in a row.

Where it sits: a stroke below that removes the inherent 'a' and forms a conjunct with the next consonant.

Worked through: क + ◌् = क् — k.

You already say these, and every one of them has ◌् somewhere inside it:

- नमस्ते namaste — hello / goodbye (namaste — "I bow to you")
- क्या kyā — what
- स्त sta — a vowel-less consonant usually fuses with the next consonant into a conjunct
- नमस्ते namaste — assemble namaste

Writing: ◌् — follow the numbered strip

How ् is written, stroke by stroke

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your pen makes it. Then write ् yourself — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

10.4 ह — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: प — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: ह

ह — ha.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not h, it is ha.

What it is made of:

- a descending right stem joined to the leftward shoulder and clockwise hooked body
- a separate down-right outer curve and tail
- the top shirorekhā

You already say these, and every one of them has ह somewhere inside it:

- मेरा नाम ... है — my name is…
- आपका नाम क्या है? — what's your name?
- आप कैसे हैं? — how are you? (respectful)
- आपका स्वागत है — you're welcome (also "welcome!")

Writing: ह

Stroke order after Opiaterein, 'Deva-ह-order.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 9 May 2009
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ह is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start at the right stem's headline junction, descend, sweep left through the shoulder, then curve clockwise around the hooked body to its lower-right tip without lifting

- 2. lift at the body's left junction and sweep down-left around the outer curve, then continue diagonally down-right through the tail
- 3. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 2. The pen comes up 2 times and no more.

Verified three-stroke teaching form; the corroborating deskbook stages the joined first body in more component steps.

Chapter 11

Four Core Colours

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name black, white, red and blue in Hindi and say which of them came from Sanskrit and which from Persian.
> Say लाल and नीला beside काला and सफ़ेद*, keeping nīla and 'indigo' honestly linked by trade rather than by sound.*

11.1 काला, सफ़ेद (kālā, safed) — black and white

Hindi's word for black has a look-alike: the Sanskrit word for time, and for death, sounds the same.

You'll want to know — काला — black, and a look-alike for time

Sanskrit has a second काल (kāla), "time," and so "fate, death" (CDIAL 3084); as Time the destroyer it is linked with Yama, the god of death. CDIAL gives the two separate entries, and Monier-Williams lists them as two words. MW wonders whether "black" shares the root kal-, "to count," of "time," and marks the guess as uncertain. Sanskrit poetry and religious tradition still pair them: time devours everything, and that devouring is pictured as dark. That pairing is a cultural association, not the word's history.

You'll want to know — सफ़ेद — a Persian loan

सफ़ेद (safed) = "white" — borrowed from Persian (سفید safēd), the same kind of Persian-into-Hindi borrowing you've already met in माफ़ (māf, "forgiven," from the "sorry" lesson). Notice the नुक़्ता (nuqtā, the dot under फ): it turns pha into fa, the tell-tale mark of a sound that arrived from Persian or Arabic.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kālā" — black; then the other काल, "time," a separate word
- "safed" — white, a Persian loan
- the dot — नुक़्ता under फ turns pha into fa

Before you move on

What does the other Sanskrit काल (kāla) mean? ("Time" — and so fate and death.) Is it the काल in काला? (No — CDIAL and MW list them as two words; the dark-and-time pairing is a cultural association.) Where does सफ़ेद come from? (Persian safēd — the same kind of loan as māf, "sorry.")

11.2 लाल, नीला (lāl, nīlā) — a gemstone's name, and India's dye

One more color pair, and one more Persian loan — plus a Sanskrit word connected to why English itself says "indigo."

You'll want to know — लाल — named for a gem, not a color

You'll want to know — नीला — Sanskrit's dark blue, and the world's word for indigo नीला (nīlā) = "blue," from Sanskrit नील (nīla), "dark blue" — also the name of the indigo plant and its dye. Here's the honest, careful version of a famous connection: English "indigo" does not come from nīla by sound change. It comes from Greek indikón, simply meaning "the Indian [thing]" — because Greek and Roman traders imported the blue dye from India. So nīlā and "indigo" aren't the same word evolving — they're two separate words for the same dye, one Indian (nīla, describing the color) and one foreign (indikón, describing the dye's origin). The connection is real, but it's a connection of history and trade, not of sound.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "lāl" — red, originally a gemstone's name
- "nīlā" — blue, from Sanskrit nīla
- the honest distinction — nīla and "indigo" are two different words linked by trade, not by sound

Your turn — black and white, from memory

- What else does काला's root काल kāla name, besides black? (Time — and through it the goddess Kālī; one root or two fused is still debated.)
- Where is safed, "white", from, and what does the nuqtā dot in its spelling do? (Persian safēd; it turns pha into fa.)

Before you move on

What did लाल originally name, before it meant "red"? (A deep red gemstone, borrowed from Persian.) Does English "indigo" come directly from Sanskrit नील nīla? (No — indigo is from Greek indikón, "the Indian [thing]," describing where the dye came from; nīla and "indigo" are two separate words connected by history, not by sound change.)

11.3 ा — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: ् — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: ा

ा — ā.

It is a vowel sign. It is not a letter and never stands alone: it attaches to a consonant and replaces the a built into it with ā. Replaces, not adds — the a is gone.

Where it sits: a vertical bar to the right of the consonant.

Worked through: न + ा = ना — nā.

You already say these, and every one of them has ा somewhere inside it:

- शिरोरेखा shirorekhā — the head-line that Devanagari letters hang from
- मेरा merā — my
- क्या kyā — what
- मेरा नाम merā nām — assemble my name from known letters and show word spacing as two head-lines

Writing: ◌ा — follow the numbered strip

11.4 य — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: ह — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: य

य — ya.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not y, it is ya.

What it is made of:

- a clockwise inner curl
- a lower bowl rising to the right-stem junction
- a top-to-bottom right stem
- the top shirorekhā

You already say these, and every one of them has य somewhere inside it:

- धन्यवाद — thank you (dhanyavād — formal, Sanskritic)
- शुक्रिया — thanks (shukriyā — everyday, Persian/Arabic-derived)
- क्या kyā — what
- कृपया kṛpayā — please (kṛpayā — "kindly," from kṛpā "grace/compassion")

Writing: य

How य is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start beneath the headline, curve clockwise around the inner curl, and finish at the left waist
- 2. without lifting, curve down and right around the lower bowl, and rise to the right-stem junction
- 3. climb up the right stem to the headline
- 4. descend the right stem top-to-bottom
- 5. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 1. The pen comes up once.

The source shows four movements; most native writers draw य in two strokes (89% of HP Labs India's native-writer samples). This path keeps every movement in order and direction, and lifts only before the headline.

Chapter 12

Family

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my father, mother, brother and sister in Hindi.
> Say भाई and बहन beside पिता and माता, and name which one is a true cousin of English 'brother' and which is not.

12.1 पिता, माता (pitā, mātā) — father and mother, cousins across a huge family

You've already met Latin pater/māter and their English cousins father/mother — all descending from one ancient shared word. Hindi keeps a cousin of its own, in the very same family.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

- पिता (pitā) = "father" — Sanskrit पितृ (pitṛ), from the same PIE root, ph₂tḗr, as Latin pater and English father.
- माता (mātā) = "mother" — Sanskrit मातृ (mātṛ), from méh₂tēr, the same root as Latin māter and English mother.

So pitā and father are, at the deepest level, the same ancient word — reaching you here through Sanskrit rather than through Latin or Germanic, one more branch of the same very old family tree.

You'll want to know — Be honest about register — the everyday words

पिता/माता are correct, respectable Hindi — but the words you'll hear most often in daily life are different: बाप (bāp, "father," an everyday/colloquial word) and माँ (māṁ, "mother," universally the warm, everyday word — closer to English "mom" than "mother"). They came by different roads. बाप has nothing to do with pitṛ: CDIAL traces it to bāppa*, "father", a nursery word of the baby-talk kind that it reconstructs from its descendants, with bābū beside it (CDIAL 9209). माँ does belong with mātā: CDIAL lists Hindi mā, "mother", under Sanskrit mātṛ (CDIAL 10016), worn down in speech while mātā kept the fuller shape.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "pitā, mātā" — the Sanskrit-descended, formal pair
- "bāp, māṁ" — the everyday, spoken pair
- the deep cousin — "pitā and father are the same ancient PIE word"

Before you move on

What are पिता and माता cousins of, in Latin and English? (Pater/father and māter/mother — all from the same PIE roots.) What are the everyday, spoken words instead? (बाप bāp and माँ māṁ.) Where do bāp and māṁ come from? (bāp from bāppa*, a nursery word, not from pitṛ; māṁ from mātṛ, like mātā.)

12.2 भाई, बहन (bhāī, bahin) — one cousin word, one different word entirely

You've met frāter and soror as PIE cousins of "brother" and "sister." Hindi's pair has a genuine surprise hiding in it: only one of these two continues that ancient family.

You'll want to know — भाई — the expected cousin

भाई (bhāī) = "brother" — from Sanskrit भ्रातृ (bhrātṛ), which does continue the same PIE root, b^{h}réh$_2$tēr, as Latin frāter and English brother. This one is exactly what you'd expect: one more cousin in the same old family.

You'll want to know — बहन — NOT the expected cousin

Sanskrit did have a direct PIE-cognate word for "sister" too: स्वसृ (svasṛ), the very cousin of Latin soror and English sister. But that word faded from use. In its place, Sanskrit built a different word, भगिनी (bhaginī) — and that word, not svasṛ, is the confirmed ancestor of Hindi's everyday बहन (bahin). (Where bhaginī itself comes from is the less certain part: it's often explained as भग (bhaga, "a share, good fortune") plus a feminine suffix, "the one who shares" — but Sanskritists don't all agree on this, and some suspect it's a reshaping of an older form avoiding an unrelated, indelicate sense of bhaga. That deeper question is worth a linguist's extra check; the bahin $\neq$ svasṛ finding itself is solid.)

So Hindi's brother/sister pair is lopsided in its ancestry: bhāī genuinely continues the ancient PIE word; bahin comes from an entirely different Sanskrit formation that replaced the PIE-cognate word before Hindi ever inherited it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bhāī" — brother — the true PIE cousin of "brother"
- "bahin" — sister — from bhaginī, "the one who shares," NOT from the PIE word for sister
- the asymmetry — one cousin, one completely different word

Your turn — father and mother, from memory

- Which Latin and English words are पिता and माता cousins of? (Pater, father; māter, mother — one PIE root each.)
- What do people say at home instead? (बाप bāp and माँ māṁ — also Sanskrit-descended.)

Before you move on

Does भाई continue the same ancient root as English "brother"? (Yes — Sanskrit bhrātṛ < PIE $b^h réh_2 tēr$, same as Latin frāter.) Does बहन continue the same ancient root as English "sister"? (No — Sanskrit's PIE-cognate word, svasṛ, faded; bahin comes from भगिनी bhaginī, an unrelated Sanskrit formation — often glossed "the one who shares," though bhaginī's own deeper origin is itself debated.)

Head and Hand

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the head and the hand in Hindi and trace both back to the Sanskrit words they wore down from.
> Say सिर and the śiras it wore down from, then हाथ*, then* हस्त*, and the shape of the change between them: the -st- cluster simplifies and the vowel lengthens.*

13.1 सिर (sir) — the head

A short, everyday word — and, once you look, a worn-down piece of a much older Sanskrit word you may recognize from yoga or anatomy.

You'll want to know — The word

सिर (sir) = "head" — from Sanskrit शिरस् (śiras), "head." Centuries of everyday use wore the word down from the fuller, formal Sanskrit shape to the short, simple sir you use every day.

Sanskrit's śiras root is still alive in more formal/technical registers too — related śīrṣa-based vocabulary shows up in yoga and Ayurvedic anatomical terms (as in poses and positions named for the head), even while everyday Hindi kept the shorter, worn-down sir.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "sir" — head
- the fuller Sanskrit source — "śiras"
- worn down over time — "śiras → sir"

Before you move on

What does सिर mean, and what Sanskrit word is it worn down from? ("Head" — from शिरस् śiras.) Where else does this root show up, in a more formal register? (Yoga/anatomical terms built on the related śīrṣa root.)

13.2 हाथ (hāth) — the hand

This word looks nothing like its Sanskrit ancestor at first glance — but the change between them follows a real, traceable pattern, not a random drift.

You'll want to know — The word

हाथ (hāth) = "hand" — from Sanskrit हस्त (hasta), "hand."

You'll want to know — The honest sound-change story

Getting from hasta to hāth isn't one clean step — it passed through Prakrit (the everyday spoken languages that stood between Sanskrit and modern Hindi) along the way: Sanskrit's -st- consonant cluster regularly simplified in Prakrit into a geminate (doubled), aspirated consonant (giving an intermediate form like hattha). Later, as that doubled consonant simplified further down to modern Hindi's single -th-, the vowel just before it lengthened — a becoming ā — as if to make up for the sound that was lost. That's the general shape of the change: - st- → (Prakrit geminate aspirate) → single aspirate + a longer vowel — a recognized pattern in how Sanskrit consonant clusters evolved into modern Hindi, not a one-off coincidence for this word alone.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "hāth" — hand
- the Sanskrit source — "hasta"
- the shape of the change — "-st- cluster → simplified consonant + longer vowel"

Your turn — the head, from memory

- What is "head", and which Sanskrit word wore down to it? (सिर sir, from शिरस् śiras.)
- Where does the fuller root still live? (In yoga and anatomical terms built on the related śīrṣa.)

Before you move on

What does हाथ mean, and what Sanskrit word is it from? ("Hand" — from हस्त hasta.) What's the general shape of the sound change between them? (Sanskrit's -st- cluster simplified through Prakrit into a geminate aspirated consonant (hattha), which later simplified to a single consonant — and the vowel before it lengthened to compensate.)

13.3 स — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: त — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: स

स — sa.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not s, it is sa.

What it is made of:

- a left curl
- a body
- right spine
- top bar

You already say these, and every one of them has स somewhere inside it:

- नमस्ते namaste — hello / goodbye (namaste — "I bow to you")
- र, स ra, sa — र (ra) and स (sa)
- स्त sta — a vowel-less consonant usually fuses with the next consonant into a conjunct
- नमस्ते namaste — assemble namaste

Writing: स — follow the numbered strip

How स is written, stroke by stroke

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your pen makes it. Then write स yourself — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> The strip shows where to start the character and which way to travel, in one attested order. That is taught with real variation from school to school, so the strip names its source beneath it: treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

Your turn

13.4 च — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: ी — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: च

च — ca.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not c, it is ca.

What it is made of:

- a short upper bar joined to a rounded body opening right
- a top-to-bottom right stem
- the top shirorekhā

You already say these, and every one of them has च somewhere inside it:

- चलता हूँ — I'll be off (lit. "I go"), gendered
- एक दो तीन चार पाँच — one to five

- तीन, चार — three and four descend from Sanskrit neuter forms through Prakrit weight trades
- पाँच pāṁch — Sanskrit's nasal consonant survives inside the Hindi vowel

Writing: च

How च is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. draw the short upper bar left-to-right, turn down and left through the shoulder, then curve around the rounded body to its open right junction without lifting
- 2. without lifting, climb up the right stem to the headline
- 3. descend the right stem top-to-bottom
- 4. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 1. The pen comes up once.

The source shows three movements; most native writers draw च in two strokes (76% of HP Labs India's native-writer samples). This path keeps every movement in order and direction, and lifts only before the headline.

Chapter 14

Seasons

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ✓ pen (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name all six traditional Indian seasons in Hindi, including the one the four-season frame has no word for.
> Complete HI-C14-checkpoint, the chapter's closing checkpoint: say all six ऋतु in order and point to वर्षा, recall ghī, say what ँ does and what घ carries, tell ऋ from र*, then write* ऋ*,* घ and ँ from memory.

14.1 घी (ghī) — ghee, clarified butter

> Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: घी

घी — ghī — "ghee, clarified butter".

Say it: ghī. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, घ, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

घी (ghī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from ghṛta, "clarified butter, ghee" (CDIAL 4501).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ghī
- ghī, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "ghee, clarified butter"? (घी, ghī.)

14.2 वसंत, ग्रीष्म, वर्षा, शरद्, हेमंत, शिशिर — six seasons, not four

European languages generally split the year into four seasons. Hindi's own tradition doesn't — it recognizes six, and this isn't extra vocabulary bolted onto a four-season frame. It's a genuinely different way of dividing the year.

You'll want to know — The six ऋतु (ṛtu, "seasons")

Hindi	rough Western match
वसंत (vasant)	spring
ग्रीष्म (grīṣma)	summer
वर्षा (varṣā)	monsoon/rains — no Western equivalent
शरद् (śarad)	autumn
हेमंत (hemant)	pre-winter/late autumn
शिशिर (śiśir)	deep winter

This six-season calendar, ऋतु (ṛtu), is rooted in classical Sanskrit tradition and Indian astronomy/astrology, and it maps onto the actual climate of much of the Indian subcontinent far better than a four-season frame does: the monsoon (varṣā) is a real, distinct, and hugely important season there — not a subdivision of "summer" or "autumn," but its own season with no clean Western counterpart. And the cold season splits into two stages, hemant (the onset) and śiśir (deep winter), rather than being lumped into one "winter."

ऋतु is Sanskrit ṛtu, "season", taken over whole, and so are the six season names.

You'll want to know — Be honest: don't force the four-season frame onto this

It would be a mistake to just match these six words one-to-one against Spanish's four or French's four the way earlier lessons matched tala to talai. The structure itself is different — six real seasons, not four plus two extras. Everyday spoken Hindi does also use looser, more casual four-part talk about seasons (borrowing straightforwardly from the idea of "summer," "winter," etc.), but the traditional, classical ऋतु system is genuinely six-fold, and it's worth learning as its own thing rather than squeezed into someone else's frame.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all six — "vasant, grīṣma, varṣā, śarad, hemant, śiśir"
- the one with no Western match — "varṣā," the monsoon
- the honest point — six seasons is a different STRUCTURE, not extra vocabulary

Your turn — one more word from this chapter

- What is "ghee, clarified butter"? (Ghī.)

Before you move on

How many seasons does Hindi's traditional ऋतु calendar recognize? (Six, not four.) Which season has no clean Western equivalent, and why? (वर्षा varṣā, the monsoon — a real, distinct season central to the subcontinent's climate.) Is this just extra vocabulary added to a four-season frame? (No — it's a genuinely different structural division of the year.)

14.3 ँ — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: च — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: ँ

ँ — a nasal, ridden on the syllable before it.

It is a nasal vowel mark — the vowel itself is spoken through the nose, rather than a nasal consonant being added after it.

You already say these, and every one of them has ँ somewhere inside it:

- चलता हूँ — I'll be off (lit. "I go"), gendered
- मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ — I speak Hindi (gendered)
- बोलता हूँ, बोलती हूँ, बोलते हैं — the present-habitual template — stem + -tā/-tī/-te + honā
- पाँच pāṁch — Sanskrit's nasal consonant survives inside the Hindi vowel

Writing: ँ — follow the numbered strip

Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Devanagari recognizer, class 59 (ँ candrabindu): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native writers (MIT licence, 2012)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ँ is written, stroke by stroke

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your pen makes it. Then write ँ yourself — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> The strip shows where to start the character and which way to travel, in one attested order. That is taught with real variation from school to school, so the strip names its source beneath it: treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

Your turn

- Look: at these words, and find ँ in the ones that have it

  नमस्ते

- Trace it: ँ three times, humming the nasal at the end of the syllable as you finish each one
- Look: back at any page of this chapter and find ँ once more

Before you move on

Which character is this — ँ? What does it add to the syllable before it? (A nasal.) Name one word you already say that contains it.

14.4 घ — a letter arriving before its words

Before the new one: ँ — what does it do to the vowel it sits over?

This next character is one you have not met inside anything yet.

Script you'll notice: घ

घ — gha, with a puff of breath.
What it is made of:

- a continuous upper curl, middle hook, lower bowl, and rising right side
- a short descending lower stem
- the top shirorekhā

Script: ahead of its words, on purpose

Almost every character in this book was taught out of a word you were already saying — you met the shape inside something familiar and then learned to draw it. This one has nothing to be found inside yet.

That is deliberate and it will not happen again after the next letter. Only two characters are still ahead of their first word; the rest of the alphabet has already been overtaken by the vocabulary, and those will have to be met the other way round.

So learn the shape and the breath now. The word will arrive already readable, which is the order this ought to happen in and rarely does.

Writing: घ

How घ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start below the headline at the upper-left, curve down and clockwise around the upper curl, turn back left through the middle hook, continue clockwise around the lower bowl, and rise along the right side to the headline
- 2. without lifting, come back down the right side to the lower junction
- 3. descend the short stem below the bowl
- 4. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 1. The pen comes up once.

The source shows three movements; most native writers draw घ in two strokes (83% of HP Labs India's native-writer samples). This path keeps every movement in order and direction, and lifts only before the headline.

This is one attested teaching order and not a national standard — handwriting here is taught with school-to-school variation. Source: Opiaterein, 'Deva-घ-order.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 9 May 2009.

Your turn

- Trace it: घ three times, saying gha as you finish each one
- Say it: how many times the pen comes up (once)
- Say it: what is unusual about when this letter arrived

Before you move on

What sound does घ carry? (gha, with breath.) Have you met a word that uses it yet? (No — it arrived first.) How many pen lifts? (One.)

14.5 ऋ — the independent vowel waiting inside ऋतु

You have said ऋतु (ṛtu), "season". Its first letter is the one this lesson writes.

Find च in चार. Say ca. Then put the word away.

One new character comes next: the first letter of the word you have met.

Script you'll notice: ऋ and its Hindi value

ऋ is an independent vowel. The careful transliteration is ṛ. In modern Hindi words such as ऋतु, you will normally hear it as ri, so ऋतु is said ritu. Keep both labels honest: ṛ tells you which inherited Devanagari vowel this is; ri tells you what ordinary Hindi speech does with it.

Look for the right stem and headline, then the hooked and rounded body hanging to their left. Do not confuse ऋ with र: र is the consonant ra; ऋ stands on its own as a vowel letter.

Writing: ऋ — supported formation

How ऋ is written, stroke by stroke

Keep ऋ visible for this first pass.

- 1. sweep the short upper-left shoulder right, then turn down-left through its hook
- 2. lift and curve around the rounded middle body, continuing into the lower rightward tail
- 3. lift and draw the right stem from top to bottom
- 4. lift and draw the headline from left to right

Pen lifts: 3. This is one sourced learner order, not a claim that every school joins the strokes identically. Source: Saurmandal, "Devanagari ऋ stroke order.svg," panels 1–4, Wikimedia Commons, 5 August 2023.

- Trace it: ऋ twice while saying ri
- Copy: ऋ once beside the visible model
- Point to: the letter, then say "independent vowel — not र"

Your turn — delayed recall

Cover the model. Which independent vowel did you learn? Say ri, then write it once. Reopen the model only after the attempt and repair only the first differing stroke.

Before you move on

Close the model again. You have met the word ritu, "season." Write its first Devanagari character from memory.
What is the careful transliteration of ऋ? (ṛ.) How is it normally pronounced in Hindi ऋतु? (ri.) Write ऋ once more without looking.

14.6 Chapter 14 checkpoint — six seasons, and ऋ from memory

Nothing new here. The seasons out loud first, then a mark and two letters on the page.

Your turn — the six seasons

- Say it: the six seasons, in order

(Vasant, grīṣma, varṣā, śarad, hemant, śiśir.)

- Which one has no Western match? (Varṣā, the monsoon.)
- Is this a four-season frame with two extras? (No: six seasons is a different way of dividing the year, with the cold split into hemant and śiśir.)

Your turn — one more word from this chapter

- What is "ghee, clarified butter"? (Ghī.)

Script — ँ, घ and ऋ

- What does ँ do in पाँच? (The vowel under it is said through the nose.)
- Which letter opens घी, and what sound does it carry? (घ, gha, with a puff of breath.)
- ऋ opens ऋतु. Is it the consonant र? (No: it is an independent vowel, written ṛ and said ri in Hindi.)

Read it: घी and ऋतु aloud, and point to the घ and the ऋ

Writing — from memory

Cover: the Script block above, so no model stays in view
Write it: the first letter of ritu, then the letter for gha
Write it: the mark that sends a vowel through the nose
Check: against the key — ऋ, घ, ँ
Write it: one repaired stroke, then stop

Before you move on

Which season follows the monsoon, and which two split the cold? (Śarad; hemant and śiśir.) That is the chapter: six seasons, and the vowel letter that opens their name.
Next chapter: water and bread.

Chapter 15

Water and Bread

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for water and bread in Hindi and say what पानी literally means.
> Ask for पानी and रोटी, then unpack पानी as 'the drinkable one' — pā, to drink, plus -nīya, fit for.

15.1 ढोल (ḍhol) — a drum

> Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: ढोल

ढोल — ḍhol — "a drum".

Say it: ḍhol. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, ढ, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ढोल (ḍhol) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from ḍhola, "large drum" (CDIAL 5608).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ḍhol
- ḍhol, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a drum"? (ढोल, ḍhol.)

15.2 पानी, रोटी (pānī, roṭī) — water (the "drinkable thing") and bread

Hindi's everyday word for water isn't the ancient Sanskrit word you might expect — it names water by what you do with it, not by what it is.

You'll want to know — पानी — "the drinkable thing"

पानी (pānī) = "water." Sanskrit actually has older, more "basic" words for water — आप् (āp) and जल (jala) among them — but Hindi's everyday word descends from neither. It comes from Sanskrit पानीय (pānīya), built on the verb पा (pā), "to drink," plus a suffix meaning roughly "fit for." So pānīya, and Hindi's pānī after it, literally means "the drinkable thing" — water defined by its use, not named as a substance in its own right.

You'll want to know — रोटी — bread, honestly uncertain in origin

रोटी (roṭī) = "bread, flatbread" — the everyday word for the flatbreads (roti, chapati-style breads) central to North Indian meals. Be honest: unlike pānī, roṭī's deeper history is not cleanly traced back through Sanskrit the way many everyday Hindi words are. It comes through Prakrit रोट्ट (roṭṭa, "a kind of bread") from Sanskrit रोटिका (roṭikā); beyond that, one proposal (Turner's Indo-Aryan dictionary) tentatively links it to a root meaning "to strike / to press or crush" — perhaps evoking the pounding and flattening of dough — but this is genuinely uncertain, one guess among scholars rather than a settled chain. Worth knowing honestly rather than forcing a confident derivation that isn't there.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "pānī" — water, "the drinkable thing"
- the root — "pā," to drink, + "-nīya," fit for
- "roṭī" — bread, flatbread

Your turn — the drum

- One more word from this chapter: what is "a drum"? (Ḍhol.)

Before you move on

Does पानी come from Sanskrit's ancient water-words, āp or jala? (No — from पानीय pānīya, "the drinkable thing," from पा pā, "to drink.") Is रोटी's etymology as clearly traced as pānī's? (No — it traces to Prakrit roṭṭa < Sanskrit roṭikā, but beyond that the deeper root is genuinely uncertain — one proposal links it to "striking/pressing" dough, not a settled chain.)

15.3 ष — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: ँ — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: ष

ष — ssa.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not ss, it is ssa.

You already say these, and every one of them has ष somewhere inside it:

- वसंत ग्रीष्म वर्षा शरद् हेमंत शिशिर — SIX traditional seasons, not four

Writing: ष — follow the numbered strip

How ष is written, stroke by stroke

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your pen makes it. Then write ष yourself — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

15.4 ढ — one lift, and the last one to come early

> Before the new one: घ — how many pen lifts did it take?
> This one takes the same.

Script you'll notice: ढ

ढ — ḍha, curled back and breathy.

What it is made of:

- a descending stem joined to a broad outer bowl and closed inner loop
- the top shirorekhā

Two parts, where most characters have three or four.

Script: the shortest build, and the last one early

One pen lift. Everything below the headline is a single unbroken run — stem, shoulder, outer bowl and inner loop without the pen leaving the paper — and then the headline goes on top. Many consonants are drawn in these two strokes; घ, the letter before it, was one.

It is also the last letter you will meet before the words that use it. From here on, every remaining character will be one you have already been reading without being shown, and each of those lessons will say so.

Chapter 16

Months

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the twelve months in Hindi and explain why the festivals move against the Gregorian calendar.
> Say जनवरी through दिसंबर*, then name Chaitra and Vaiśākh and explain that the festivals are dated by Vikram Samvat instead.*

16.1 जनवरी to दिसंबर — borrowed names, and a second calendar underneath

Like Arabic, Hindi doesn't have just one set of months — everyday civil life and traditional/religious life run on two different calendars.

You'll want to know — The Gregorian months — recent, borrowed

For dates, school, business, and government, Hindi uses month names borrowed straightforwardly from English:

जनवरी, फ़रवरी, मार्च, अप्रैल, मई, जून, जुलाई, अगस्त, सितंबर, अक्टूबर, नवंबर, दिसंबर (janvarī, farvarī, mārc, aprail, maī, jūn, julāī, agast, sitambar, aktūbar, navambar, disambar) — you can hear "January," "March," "August" right through the Hindi pronunciation. This is a modern civil borrowing, not an ancient Sanskrit system.

You'll want to know — Be honest: the traditional calendar is a genuinely different structure

Hindu tradition keeps its own, much older lunisolar calendar — Vikram Samvat — with twelve different month names: Chaitra, Vaiśākh, Jyeṣṭha, Āṣāḍh, Śrāvaṇ, Bhādrapad, Āśvin, Kārtik, Mārgaśīrṣ, Pauṣ, Māgh, Phālgun.

This isn't just a second set of labels for the same twelve solar months — these months are tied to the six-ṛtu seasonal calendar from the seasons lesson (in the traditional/classical scheme, each pair of Vikram Samvat months corresponds to one of the six ṛtu), and major festivals (Holi, Diwali, and many others) are dated by this calendar, not the Gregorian one — which is why their Gregorian-calendar date shifts from year to year.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "janvarī, mārc, agast" — hear the borrowed English names
- the traditional calendar — "Chaitra, Vaiśākh, Jyeṣṭha"
- the honest point — festivals shift on the Gregorian calendar because they're dated by Vikram Samvat instead

Before you move on

Where do Hindi's everyday civil month names come from? (Borrowed from English — janvarī, mārc, agast...) What traditional calendar runs alongside it, and what is it tied to? (Vikram Samvat — tied to the six ṛtu seasons, not the four-season Western frame.) Why do festivals like Holi and Diwali fall on different Gregorian dates each year? (They're dated by Vikram Samvat, a different calendar system entirely.)

16.2 ु — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: ष — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: ु

ु — u.

It is a vowel sign. It is not a letter and never stands alone: it attaches to a consonant and replaces the a built into it with u. Replaces, not adds — the a is gone.

Where it sits: a small hook below the consonant.

Worked through: त + ु = तु — tu.

You already say these, and every one of them has ु somewhere inside it:

- शुक्रिया — thanks (shukriyā — everyday, Persian/Arabic-derived)
- आप / तुम — you (respectful / familiar)
- ख़ुशी — happiness / pleased to meet you
- सोमवार मंगलवार बुधवार गुरुवार शुक्रवार — Monday–Friday

16.3 ं — the dot above the line

The hook from before sat below the consonant. Say what it did.

Today's mark sits above the head-line, and you have been reading it since your first week.

Script you'll notice: ं

ं — the anusvāra. A single dot, sitting on top of the shirorekhā.

It sends the syllable through the nose. It is not a vowel and it does not replace one: the vowel stays exactly as it was, and the air changes route.

Worked through: स + ं = सं.

Script: you have been saying it all along

Look at the dot above the line in each of these:

- मैं — I
- हैं — are

- मिलेंगे — we will meet
- में — in
- हिंदी — Hindi

These are not decorative words. मैं and हैं are how you say who you are and how things stand, and you have been reading that dot in them without a lesson ever naming it.

There is a second nasal mark, a crescent with a dot inside it, and which of the two a word takes depends on what else is sitting above the letter.

Writing: ं — follow the numbered strip

How ं is written, stroke by stroke

Draw the letter and its head-line as you already do. Then put one dot above the line, over the middle of the letter.

> The strip shows where to start the character and which way to travel, in one attested order. That is taught with real variation from school to school, so the strip names its source beneath it: treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

Your turn

- Look: at these two words and find the dot above the line

  मैं · हैं

- Trace it: मैं three times, saying maĩ as you finish each one
- Say it: whether this mark changes the vowel or the air

Before you move on

Where does ँ sit? (Above the head-line.) What does it change? (The route of the air, not the vowel.) Name the word for I that carries it.

Chapter 17

Noon and Midnight

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say noon and midnight in Hindi and explain the old three-hour pahar hidden inside दोपहर.
> Say दोपहर as 'two pahars' and आधी रात as 'half night', contrasting one built on an old time-unit with one built plainly.

17.1 दोपहर, आधी रात — noon by an old clock, midnight fully transparent

Hindi's word for noon hides a whole traditional timekeeping system inside it — one very different from hours and minutes.

You'll want to know — दोपहर — "two pahars"

दोपहर (dopahar) = "noon, midday" — literally "two (do) + pahar." A पहर (pahar, from Sanskrit prahara, "a watch"; CDIAL 8900 wonders whether prahara is Persian pahra, "watch", put into Sanskrit form) is a traditional Indian unit of time, roughly three hours long, with the day traditionally divided into eight pahars (four for daytime, four for night), counted from sunrise. Noon falls right around the end of the second daytime pahar after sunrise — so do-pahar, "two pahars [in]," became the everyday word for midday. (This traditional pahar-based account is the standard one, though — as with any folk-timekeeping etymology this old — treat the exact number of pahars as the general shape of the story rather than a precisely dated fact.)

You'll want to know — आधी रात — fully transparent "half night"

आधी रात (ādhī rāt) = "midnight," literally "half night" — आधी (ādhī, "half," in the form it takes before a feminine noun) + रात (rāt, "night"). No erosion, no double meaning — structurally identical to Latin's media nox and Spanish's medianoche.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "pahar" — a traditional ~3-hour watch — then "do-pahar," two pahars, noon
- "ādhī rāt" — half night, midnight
- the contrast — dopahar counts an old time-unit; ādhī rāt is plainly "half" + "night"

Before you move on

What does दोपहर literally mean, and what's a pahar? ("Two pahars" — a pahar being a traditional ~3-hour time-unit, with noon falling around the end of the second one after sunrise.) What does आधी रात literally mean? ("Half night" — ādhī "half" + rāt "night," fully transparent, like Latin's media nox.)

17.2 ल — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: ु — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: ल

ल — la.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not l, it is la.

What it is made of:

- a clockwise open left loop
- an up-right diagonal arm
- a top-to-bottom right stem
- the top shirorekhā

You already say these, and every one of them has ल somewhere inside it:

- अलविदा — goodbye (alvidā — a final farewell, Persian/ Arabic-derived)
- मिलेंगे milenge — (we) will meet
- फिर मिलेंगे — we'll meet again (goodbye)
- कल मिलते हैं — see you tomorrow (and the कल puzzle)

Writing: ल

How ल is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start at the open lower-left tip, curve up and clockwise around the left loop, and finish at the inner junction
- 2. without lifting, sweep the diagonal arm up-right to the right stem
- 3. climb up the right stem to the headline
- 4. descend the right stem top-to-bottom
- 5. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 1. The pen comes up once.

The source shows four movements; most native writers draw ल in two strokes (54% of HP Labs India's native-writer samples). This path keeps every movement in order and direction, and lifts only before the headline.

This is one attested teaching order and not a national standard — handwriting here is taught with school-to-school variation. Source: Opiaterein, 'Deva-ल-order.gif', strokes 1–4, Wikimedia Commons, 11 May 2009.

Your turn

- Look: at these words, and find ल in the ones that have it

  अलविदा · मिलेंगे · नमस्ते

- Trace it: ल three times, saying la as you finish each one
- Look: back at any page and find ल once more

Before you move on

Which character is this — ल? What sound does it carry? (la.) Name one word you already say that contains it.

17.3 ू — the same hook, held longer

Yesterday's dot sat above the line. Where does today's mark go?

Below — and you can already draw its shorter twin.

Script you'll notice: ू

ू — ū.

It is a vowel sign: it attaches under a consonant and replaces the a built into it.

Where it sits: a longer hook below the consonant.

Worked through: त + ू = तू.

Script: length is the whole difference

mark	vowel	hook
ु	u	short
ू	ū	long

The shape is the same and the tail is longer, and so is the vowel. That matching of the writing to the sound is a small gift, and it is worth noticing because it is not always true elsewhere in the script.

Words already yours that carry the long one:

- मूँ — I am
- पूर्ण विराम — the full stop

Writing: ू — follow the numbered strip

Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Devanagari recognizer, class 51 (ू uu sign): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native writers (MIT licence, 2012)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ू is written, stroke by stroke

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your pen makes it. Then write ू yourself — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> The strip shows where to start the character and which way to travel, in one attested order. That is taught with real variation from school to school, so the strip names its source beneath it: treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

Your turn

- Look: at this word and find the long hook under its first letter

  ᠪᠤᠤᠯᠠᠭᠠᠨ

- Trace it: ᠤᠭ three times, saying ū as you finish each one
- Say it: the one thing that tells the short hook from the long one

Before you move on

Where does ᠤᠭ sit? (Below the consonant.) How does it differ from ᠤᠨ? (Longer hook, longer vowel.) Name the word for I am that carries it.

Chapter 18

Telling Time

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell someone what o'clock it is in Hindi.
> Say एक बज रहा है and दो बज रहे हैं — the hour striking, exactly as the ghaṇṭā bell once did.

18.1 घंटा / बजना — the bell and the hours that strike

Here's a word that wears its history on its sleeve: Hindi's word for "hour" is the exact same word as "bell."

You'll want to know — घंटा — bell AND hour, one word

घंटा (ghaṇṭā) = "hour" — and it means "bell, gong" just as commonly. It comes from Sanskrit घण्टा (ghaṇṭā), "bell, gong." The connection isn't a coincidence: temples, towns, and later clock towers historically marked the passing of time by striking a bell — the hour was announced by sound, not read off a face — so the word for the bell itself came to mean the unit of time it announced. Compare this to English o'clock, itself a worn-down "of the clock," or French's il est ... heures: different languages, but time-telling vocabulary keeps circling back to the instrument used to mark it.

Grammar Lens: बजना — "to strike, to toll"

Hindi tells the time with the verb बजना (bajnā), "to strike, to toll" — the same imagery as a bell striking the hour:

> एक बज रहा है। — "It is one o'clock." (literally "one is striking") दो बज रहे हैं। — "It is two o'clock." (literally "two are striking")

Just like Spanish switches from singular es to plural son after "one," Hindi switches बज रहा है (singular) to बज रहे हैं (plural) once the count passes one — matching the number, not just tacking on "o'clock."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ghanṭā" — hour, also "bell"
- "ek baj raha hai" — it is one o'clock, "one is striking"
- "do baj rahe hain" — it is two o'clock, "two are striking"

Before you move on

What does घंटा literally mean besides "hour"? ("Bell, gong" — from Sanskrit ghaṇṭā.) Why did "bell" come to mean "hour"? (Because clocks/towns historically struck a bell to announce the hour.) What verb does Hindi use to tell the time, and what does it literally mean? (बजना, bajnā — "to strike, to toll," as in ek baj raha hai, "one is striking.")

18.2 ख — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: ल — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: ख

ख — kha.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not kh, it is kha.

You already say these, and every one of them has ख somewhere inside it:

- शिरोरेखा shirorekhā — the head-line that Devanagari letters hang from
- ख़ुशी — happiness / pleased to meet you

Writing: ख — follow the numbered strip

How ख is written, stroke by stroke

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your pen makes it. Then write ख yourself — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> The strip shows where to start the character and which way to travel, in one attested order. That is taught with real variation from school to school, so the strip names its source beneath it: treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

Your turn

- Look: at these words, and find ख in the ones that have it

  शिरोरेखा · ख़ुशी · नमस्ते

- Trace it: ख three times, saying kha as you finish each one
- Look: back at any page and find ख once more

Before you move on

Which character is this — ख? What sound does it carry? (kha.)
Name one word you already say that contains it.

18.3 ◌ो — a bar and a stroke

The last two marks went below the letter and above the line.
Say which did which.

This one does both sides at once.

Script you'll notice: ◌ो

◌ो — o.

It is a vowel sign: it attaches to a consonant and replaces the a built into it.

Where it sits: the ā bar on the right, plus a stroke above the head-line. Two pieces, one mark.

Worked through: द + ◌ो = दो.

Script: the second number you ever counted

You met this mark before you could name a single letter:

- दो — two
- बोलना — to speak
- शिरोरेखा — the head-line itself

दो is the plainest example in the language: one consonant, one mark, one word. Look at it and the two pieces are easy to separate — the upright bar to the right of द, and the short stroke riding on top.

Writing: ो — follow the numbered strip

Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Devanagari recognizer, class 55 (ो, o sign): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native writers (MIT licence, 2012)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ो is written, stroke by stroke

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your pen makes it. Then write ो yourself — slowly, and larger than it is printed. The short bar on top stays grey in the strip: in a word it is part of the headline, which you draw last, once, across the whole word.

> The strip shows where to start the character and which way to travel, in one attested order. That is taught with real variation from school to school, so the strip names its source beneath it: treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

Your turn

- Look: at this word and name its two pieces

  दो

- Trace it: दो three times, saying do as you finish each one
- Say it: which side of the letter each piece of the mark sits on

Before you move on

What two pieces make ◌ो? (A bar on the right and a stroke above.) What vowel does it put on its consonant? Name the number you count that is one consonant and this mark.

Chapter 19

Asking Someone's Age

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask someone's age in Hindi and give my own in the belonging-to-years shape Hindi uses.
> Name उम्र as the everyday Perso-Arabic word for age beside formal आयु, then ask तुम कितने साल के हो? and answer मैं बीस साल का हूँ, with के/का carrying the 'belonging to' work.

19.1 उम्र / आयु — everyday and formal words for age

You just met Arabic's ᶜumr. Hindi's everyday word for "age" is the exact same word, carried through Persian.

You'll want to know — उम्र — a Perso-Arabic loan, and a native alternative उम्र (umr) = "age" — this is Arabic's ᶜumr, borrowed into Hindi through Persian, and it's the everyday, colloquial word most Hindi speakers use. Hindi also has a fully native Sanskrit alternative, आयु (āyu, "age, lifespan"), which feels more formal or literary — a register split you've now seen several times (compare Kannada's Sanskrit-tatsama madhyāhna vs. Tamil's native words for the same concepts, just flipped here: the borrowed word is the everyday one, the native word is the formal one).

Your turn

- Say it: "umr" — age, same word as Arabic's ᶜumr
- Contrast: everyday umr · formal/literary āyu

Before you move on

What language does Hindi's उम्र come from, and what's the native Sanskrit alternative? (Arabic ᶜumr, via Persian; native alternative is आयु, āyu.) Which one is ordinary conversational Hindi? (Umr.) Next: use a genitive marker to say how many years someone belongs to.

19.2 कितने साल के हो? — belonging to so many years

Languages do not agree on whether age is something you have, are, were born with, or state without a verb. Hindi gives the idea a fifth shape.

You'll want to know — The two sentences

तुम कितने साल के हो? — "How old are you?" (informal), literally "you, of how many years, are?" (tum kitne sāl ke ho?)

मैं बीस साल का हूँ। — "I am twenty years old," literally "I [am one] belonging to twenty years." (maiṅ bīs sāl kā hūṅ.)

के/का (ke/kā) is Hindi's genitive postposition, "of, belonging to." The same marker family handles possession elsewhere: merā ghar, "my house."

So Hindi does not copy Romance's "I have years," Germanic's simple "I am [a number]," Latin's "born + N years," or Arabic's verbless "my age [is] N." It says "I am [one] belonging to N years," with a genitive marker plus होना (honā, "to be").

Your turn

- Say it: "tum kitne sāl ke ho?" — how old are you?
- Say it: "maiṅ bīs sāl kā hūṅ" — I belong to twenty years
- Point to: ke/kā — the genitive, "of/belonging to"

Your turn — the word for age

- Which word for "age" is everyday talk, and where is it from? (Umr — Arabic ᶜumr, via Persian.) And the formal, native one? (आयु āyu.)

Before you move on

What does के/का mark? (A genitive/possessive relationship.) Does Hindi use Romance "have," simple Germanic "be," Latin "born," or Arabic's verbless sentence? (None: it says "belonging to N years" + honā.)

19.3 द — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: ख — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: द

द — da.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not d, it is da.

What it is made of:

- a short top-to-bottom stem
- an outer body joined to an inward curl and down-right tail
- the top shirorekhā

You already say these, and every one of them has द somewhere inside it:

- धन्यवाद — thank you (dhanyavād — formal, Sanskritic)
- अलविदा — goodbye (alvidā — a final farewell, Persian/Arabic-derived)
- मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ — I speak Hindi (gendered)
- एक दो तीन चार पाँच — one to five

Chapter 20

Weather

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what the weather is doing in Hindi and stay out of the बारिश / वर्षा false-friend trap.
> Say मौसम*, then* गर्मी है and ठंड है, and keep everyday बारिश apart from formal वर्षा despite the resemblance.

20.1 मौसम — another Perso-Arabic loan, and a false-friend trap

You've already seen Hindi borrow umr from Arabic. Here's another one — and this time, English borrowed the SAME root too.

You'll want to know — मौसम — the same root as "monsoon"

मौसम (mausam) = "weather" — borrowed from Classical Persian موسم (mawsim), itself from Arabic مَوْسِم (mawsim, "season, time of year, occasion"; likely originally used by Arab sailors for seasonal winds). This is the exact same root that gave English monsoon — carried into English in the 1580s, well before the British Raj, via Portuguese and Dutch traders in the Indian Ocean spice trade (Portuguese monção, Dutch monssoen, both from this same Arabic mawsim). So "monsoon" and Hindi's everyday word for "weather" are, quite directly, the same word.

You'll want to know — गर्मी है, ठंड है — heat and cold, native words

गर्मी है। — "It's hot." — literally "there is heat." (garmī hai.)
ठंड है। — "It's cold." — literally "there is cold." (ṭhanḍ hai.)

Both use ordinary Hindi nouns (गर्मी, "heat"; ठंड, "cold") plus है (hai, "is/there is") — simpler in shape than Arabic's fully verbless pattern, since Hindi still needs hai here.

You'll want to know — बारिश vs. वर्षा — a genuine false-friend trap

Hindi has two words for "rain" that sound similar enough to assume they're related — don't make that assumption:

- बारिश (baarish) — from Persian بارش (bāriš) — the everyday, colloquial word: बारिश हो रही है ("it's raining," literally "rain is happening").
- वर्षा (varṣā) — fully native Sanskrit, from वर्ष (varṣá, "rain"), tracing to Proto-Indo-European *h₁wers- ("to rain") — cousin of Greek hérsē ("dew") and Old Irish frass ("rain-shower"). This is the more formal/literary word.

Despite the similar sound, dictionaries flag baarish and varṣā as probably not related — one's a Persian loan, the other a native Sanskrit inheritance from deep in the Indo-European family. A likely false-friend trap, not a confirmed doublet.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mausam" — weather, same root as English "monsoon"
- "garmī hai. ṭhanḍ hai." — it's hot / it's cold
- "baarish hai" (everyday) vs. "varṣā" (formal) — probably NOT related despite sounding alike

Before you move on

What English word shares मौसम's exact root, and how did it reach English? (Monsoon — from Arabic mawsim via Persian, carried into English in the 1580s by Portuguese/Dutch traders, well before the British Raj.) Are बारिश and वर्षा related words? (Probably not — despite sounding similar, baarish is a Persian loan and varṣā is native Sanskrit; dictionaries flag them as likely unrelated.) What PIE root does वर्षा trace to, and what's its Greek cousin? ($h_1$wers-, "to rain" — cousin of Greek hérsē, "dew.")

20.2 ध — one character, met inside words you already say

Before the new one: द — what does it do?

One character this time. Just one — and you have been saying it for pages without knowing which mark on the page it was.

Script you'll notice: ध

ध — dha.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not dh, it is dha.

What it is made of:

- an upper spiral ending in a rightward shoulder
- a lower bowl
- a top-to-bottom right stem
- the top shirorekhā

You already say these, and every one of them has ध somewhere inside it:

- धन्यवाद — thank you (dhanyavād — formal, Sanskritic)
- सोमवार मंगलवार बुधवार गुरुवार शुक्रवार — Monday–Friday
- दोपहर आधी रात — noon (literally "two pahars," a traditional ~3-hour time unit) and midnight ("half night," fully transparent)

Writing: ध

How ध is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start at the upper spiral's inner crossing, curl around the small opening, widen left and down around the outer loop, then sweep right through the shoulder
- 2. without lifting, turn back left along the shoulder to the left waist
- 3. sweep down and around the lower bowl to its right junction
- 4. climb up the right stem to the headline
- 5. descend the right stem top-to-bottom
- 6. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 1. The pen comes up once.

20.3 थ — the last empty seat in a row you have nearly filled

Before the new one: ध — what does it do?

One character this time. It is the fourth of four, and the other three are already yours.

Script you'll notice: थ

थ — tha.

It is a consonant, and in this script a consonant is never bare: it comes with an a already in it. So it is not th, it is tha.

What it is made of:

- an upper spiral joined continuously to a broad lower bowl
- a top-to-bottom right stem
- the top shirorekhā

One word you already say ends in it:

- हाथ — hand (hāth)

Script: the seat थ fills

Your tongue tip touches the back of your top teeth for all four of these. Two things separate them: whether your voice is switched on, and whether a puff of breath escapes after the release.

character	sound	puff of breath
त	ta	no
थ	tha	yes
द	da	no
ध	dha	yes

You had three of the four seats and one gap. थ is the gap, and the shape tells you so: like ध, it carries a bowl and a right stem, so the eye that already finds ध will find this one.

Writing: थ

How थ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start at the upper spiral's inner-right tip, curl clockwise around the small opening and outward to the left waist, then continue down and clockwise around the broad lower bowl to the right-stem junction without lifting

You have met this arrangement once before, with त and थ. It is about to happen again.

Script you'll notice: छ

छ — chha.

It is the breathy partner of च, exactly as थ is the breathy partner of त. Say cha, then say it again with a puff of air behind it, and you have the difference.

What it is made of:

- a continuous upper-left loop, lower bowl, outer-right rise and inner loop
- a short upper stem
- the top shirorekhā

Script: the pattern, a second time

character	sound	puff of breath
च	ca	no
छ	chha	yes
त	ta	no
थ	tha	yes

Four characters, two pairs, one distinction running through both. This script pairs its letters by breath, and once you have heard the pair once you can expect it everywhere — there are more pairs waiting, and each will cost you less than the last.

Unlike त and थ, the two shapes here look nothing alike. The sound is paired; the drawing is not.

- 2. lift and draw the short upper stem top-to-bottom
- 3. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Your turn

- Look: at च and छ side by side, and say which one carries the puff

  च · छ

- Trace it: छ three times, saying chha as you finish each one
- Say it: the other pair in this script that works the same way

Before you move on

Which letter is छ the breathy partner of? (च.) Which earlier pair works the same way? (त and थ.) Do the two shapes resemble each other? (No — the sound is paired, the drawing is not.)

21.2 छह, सात, आठ, नौ, दस — six to ten, the same erosion twice more

You already watched trīṇi wear down to tīn in two careful steps. Two more numbers here do exactly the same thing.

You'll want to know — The five

	Hindi	said
6	छह	chhah
7	सात	sāt
8	आठ	āṭh
9	नौ	nau
10	दस	das

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

All five are tadbhavas: chhah from kṣaṭ*, a variant CDIAL reconstructs beside ṣaṭ, "six" (CDIAL 12803); sāt from sapta (CDIAL 13139); āṭh from aṣṭā (CDIAL 941); nau from nava (CDIAL 6984); and das from daśa (CDIAL 6227).

You'll want to know — sapta → satta → sāt, aṣṭa → aṭṭha → āṭh — the same mechanism again

Put seven and eight beside their Sanskrit ancestors:

Sanskrit	→ Prakrit →	Hindi
saptá	satta	sāt
aṣṭá	aṭṭha	āṭh

This is the identical two-step process you already watched turn trīṇi into tīn:

1. The consonant cluster (-pt-, -ṣṭ-) simplifies into a doubled consonant (-tt-, -ṭṭh-) — the same weight, packed into one place.
2. The doubled consonant simplifies again, and the vowel lengthens to pay for what was lost — satta → sāt, aṭṭha → āṭh.

Same trade, same reason, two more numbers. This is exactly what the anchor lesson meant by "not decay in any bad sense" — it's the standard Prakrit weight-conservation move, and by now you've seen it three times.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "chhah, sāt, āṭh, nau, das"
- the repeated mechanism — "saptá … satta … sāt" and "aṣṭá … aṭṭha … āṭh"

Before you move on

Count six to ten in Hindi. (Chhah, sāt, āṭh, nau, das.) What mechanism do sāt and āṭh share with lesson 6's tīn? (Cluster simplifies to a geminate, then the geminate simplifies again and the vowel lengthens — the same weight-conservation move, three numbers running.) Next: compare the three different histories inside six, nine, and ten.

21.3 छह, नौ, दस — three different paths

> Seven and eight repeated a familiar weight trade. Six, nine, and ten show that not every number took the same road.

You'll want to know — ṣaṣ → chhah — a sibilant moves forward

छह (chhah) continues Sanskrit ṣaṣ, "six." The retroflex sibilant ṣ shifted forward into Hindi छ (ch). This is separate from cluster simplification, but it is still two thousand years of ordinary speech reshaping a Sanskrit word.

You'll want to know — nava → nau — a consonant dissolves

नौ (nau) continues Sanskrit nava. The v between vowels weakened and disappeared; the vowels on either side contracted into the diphthong -ava- → -au-. Compare pāṁch: there a nasal moved into the vowel; here an intervocalic consonant dissolved between two vowels.

You'll want to know — daśa → das — the quiet path

दस (das) continues Sanskrit daśa most plainly: the final vowel drops. There is no cluster to simplify and no middle consonant to lose.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ṣaṣ … chhah" — the sibilant shifts
- "nava … nau" — v dissolves into a diphthong
- "daśa … das" — only the final vowel drops

Before you move on

What happened to v in nava → nau? (It dissolved between vowels, which contracted.) Which form changed least? (Das — only the final vowel dropped.) Count six to ten once more. (Chhah, sāt, āṭh, nau, das.)

Chapter 22

Numbers Eleven to Twenty

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from eleven to twenty in Hindi and spot the subtractive nineteen sitting inside the list.
> Say ओस and ऊन*, pick out* उ*,* ऊ and ओ*, count* ग्यारह to बीस*, then read* उन्नीस as 'one less than twenty', the same logic as Latin's ūndēvīgintī.

22.1 उ — the same vowel, standing on its own feet

You already have the little hook that adds a u underneath a consonant. Before the new one: which mark is it, and where does it sit?

Script you'll notice: उ

उ — u.

This is the independent vowel. The hook you already know rides under a consonant and cannot stand alone. When a word begins with u, there is no consonant to hang the hook on, so the vowel gets a full letter of its own.

What it is made of:

- a joined upper bowl and lower loop
- the top shirorekhā

Script: two ways to write one sound

where the u falls	how it is written under a consonant	the hook you already have
at the start of a word	उ

Both say u. Which one a word uses is settled by what comes before it, and nothing else. Every vowel in this script works this way, so learning the pair once tells you what to expect from all of them.

- Trace it: उ three times, saying u as you finish each one
- Say it: whether a word starting with u uses the hook or the full letter
- Look: at उ and say how many times the pen leaves the page

Before you move on

Why can the hook not open a word? (It has nothing to hang from.) What does उ carry? (u.) How many pen lifts? (One.)

22.2 ऊन (ūn) — wool

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: ऊन

ऊन — ūn — "wool".

Say it: ūn. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, ऊ, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ऊन (ūn) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from ūrṇā, "wool" (CDIAL 2424).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ūn
- ūn, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "wool"? (ऊन, ūn.)

22.3 ऊ — the same letter, holding the note longer

Before the new one: उ — what sound does it carry, and when does a word use it instead of the hook?

Script you'll notice: ऊ

ऊ — ū, the long one.

The sound is the same vowel held for longer, and the letter says so: it is उ with one loop added on the right.

What it is made of:

- the continuous body of उ
- a separate right-hand loop
- the top shirorekhā

Script: the pair, side by side

letter	sound	body
उ	u	bowl and loop
ऊ	ū	the same, plus a right loop

Put them next to each other and the extra loop is the only difference. That is not a coincidence of shape — the script pairs short and long vowels by building the long one out of the short one, and you will see the same trick again.

This letter is worth having before you can use it. The Hindi for I will come begins with a long ū sitting where no consonant can carry it, so the whole of the future tense waits on this one loop.

Writing: ऊ

How ऊ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. curve down and left around the upper bowl, then sweep back through the waist and around the lower loop without lifting
- 2. lift at the waist and sweep the right-hand loop up, around, and down-left
- 3. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

  उ · ऊ

- Trace it: ऊ three times, holding the vowel long as you finish each one
- Say it: which of the two takes more pen lifts, and how many

Before you move on

What is added to उ to make ऊ? (One loop on the right.) What does the extra loop do to the sound? (Holds it longer.) How many pen lifts does ऊ take? (Two.)

22.4 ओस (os) — dew

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: ओस

ओस — os — "dew".

Say it: os. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, ओ, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ओस (os) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from avaśyā, "hoar-frost, dew" (CDIAL 855).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- os
- os, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "dew"? (ओस, os.)

22.5 ओ — a letter you can already draw most of

Before the new one: आ — what does it do? Picture its shape, and keep the picture.

Script you'll notice: ओ

ओ — o.

Another independent vowel, for a word that begins with o and has no consonant to carry the mark.

What it is made of:

- the joined upper and lower bowls of आ
- a swept middle shoulder, an inner stem and a trailing stem
- a separate arc over the top
- the top shirorekhā

Script: what is new and what is not

letter	what you see
आ	the body
ओ	the same body, with an arc above

Everything below the headline you have drawn before. The only new mark is the arc, and it sits above the line rather than on it, so it is easy to spot and easy to miss.

This is the third time a letter has turned out to be an old one with a piece added. That is how the script is built, and it is why the alphabet gets faster rather than slower as you go.

Writing: ओ

Stroke order after Saurmandal, 'Devanagari stroke order.svg', panels 1–6, Wikimedia Commons, 5 August 2023

- 4. descend the inner stem
- 5. lift and descend the trailing stem
- 6. lift at the trailing stem's headline junction and sweep the upper arc upward and left
- 7. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 4. The pen comes up 4 times and no more.

The source shows six movements; most native writers draw ओ in five strokes (60% of HP Labs India's native-writer samples). This path keeps every movement in order and direction, and lifts four times: the shoulder runs on up the inner stem and back down it.

- Trace it: ओ three times, saying o as you finish each one
- Say it: which part of ओ sits above the headline

22.6 ग्यारह, बीस — genuinely irregular, and one honest exception

First, two words from this chapter: what are dew and wool? (ओस os; ऊन ūn.) Now the teens: honestly irregular, with one echo of Latin hiding inside.

The two words — Eleven to twenty

	Hindi	said
11	ग्यारह	gyārah
12	बारह	bārah
13	तेरह	terah
14	चौदह	chaudah
15	पंद्रह	pandrah
16	सोलह	solah
17	सत्रह	satrah
18	अठारह	aṭhārah
19	उन्नीस	unnīs
20	बीस	bīs

The two words — Honest irregularity

Unlike Spanish's transparent dieciséis-diecinueve, Hindi's 11-18 each descend from their own Sanskrit number-word (ekādaśa, dvādaśa, trayodaśa...) through individually unpredictable erosion. Most end in -rah, a worn-down echo of Sanskrit's "-daśa" ("ten"), but each front half has to be memorized one by one, the way English speakers memorize "eleven" and "twelve".

The two words — उन्नीस

Here's the honest exception: उन्नीस (unnīs, 19) most likely continues Sanskrit's own subtractive name for 19: ऊनविंशति (ūnaviṃśati), "one less than twenty" (ūna, "less," + viṃśati, "twenty" — a shortened form of the Vedic ekonaviṃśati, with eka, "one," dropped). Sanskrit named every number ending in 9 up through 99 this way.

That is the logic of Latin's ūndēvīgintī ("one from twenty"), from the numbers-11-20 lesson: Indo-Aryan and Italic, separated for thousands of years, each landed on nineteen as twenty minus one.

The two words — बीस

बीस (bīs, "twenty") continues Sanskrit विंशति (viṃśati, "twenty").

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "gyārah, bārah, terah" — 11, 12, 13, each individually memorized
- "unnīs" — 19, most likely "one less than twenty" (ūnaviṃśati), echoing Latin's ūndēvīgintī
- "bīs" — twenty

Script — the chapter's three vowels

उ · ऊ · ओ

- Point to: ū, then o, then u
- What sets ऊ apart from उ, and ओ apart from आ? (A loop on the right, for the longer sound; an arc above the line.)

Before you move on

Do Hindi's numbers 11-18 follow a predictable pattern the way Spanish's teens do? (No — each is individually eroded from its own Sanskrit ancestor and must be memorized.) What does उन्नीस most likely preserve from Sanskrit, and what does it mean? (Sanskrit's subtractive ūnaviṃśati, "one less than twenty.") What Latin number from an earlier lesson uses the exact same subtractive logic? (ūndēvīgintī, "one from twenty" — two unrelated language families, the same idea.)

Chapter 23

Dog and Cat

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a dog and a cat in Hindi and say honestly how far back each word can actually be traced.
> Trace बिल्ली back through biḍālikā to biḍāla, then say out loud where the evidence stops being solid.

23.1 कुत्ता — a third mystery dog-word

> Spanish has a mystery dog-word, and English/German another. Hindi genuinely gives you a third.

You'll want to know — कुत्ता — a third mystery, displacing Sanskrit's own PIE word

Sanskrit's actual, inherited word for dog was श्वान (śvān) — the exact same PIE root, *ḱwon-, behind Latin's canis, English's hound, and German's Hund. It's the only word for dog found in the Rigveda. But everyday Hindi doesn't use śvān at all — the ordinary word is कुत्ता (kuttā), which traces through Prakrit to a Sanskrit form, कुर्कुर (kurkura). Its ultimate origin is honestly unresolved — serious proposals split between an onomatopoeic origin (imitating a dog's bark) and a non-Indo-Aryan substrate word borrowed from an unrelated language family, with no consensus on which is right. Either way, kuttā quietly pushed śvān into rare, formal, literary use — the exact same shape of story as Spanish's perro displacing can, and English's dog displacing hound. Three unrelated language families, three mystery words, all crowding out the same inherited PIE word for "dog."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kuttā" — dog, genuinely uncertain origin, displacing Sanskrit's own śvān
- "śvān" — the PIE-inherited word, now rare and formal

Before you move on

What was Sanskrit's actual inherited word for "dog," and what family does it belong to? (श्वान, śvān — same PIE root as Latin canis, English hound, German Hund.) Does everyday Hindi use śvān? (No — kuttā displaced it, echoing Spanish's perro and English's dog.) Is kuttā's own origin settled? (No — genuinely disputed between an onomatopoeic origin and a non-Indo-Aryan substrate word.) Next: follow Hindi's cat-word into a probable fourth family.

23.2 बिल्ली — a probable fourth cat-word family

Hindi's dog-word joined three mysteries. Its cat-word probably opens a family separate from the widespread qiṭṭ/cattus/gato/chat/Katze story.

You'll want to know — The route into Hindi

बिल्ली (billī, "cat") traces through Sauraseni Prakrit to Sanskrit biḍālikā, a diminutive of biḍāla ("cat").

Be honest about the deeper step: most linguists consider biḍāla a loanword into Sanskrit from Dravidian, but this is not universal. Some scholars are skeptical of the comparison; another serious proposal derives it from an unattested native compound, vidāla, "that which tears apart small birds."*

If the leading Dravidian account is right, billī belongs to a probable fourth cat-word family. Arabic qiṭṭ, Latin cattus, Spanish gato, French chat, and German Katze are usually linked to one Afro-Asiatic source; Hindi's word would instead descend from a word Sanskrit borrowed from Dravidian.

Your turn

- Say it: "billī" — cat
- Trace it: biḍāla → biḍālikā → Prakrit → billī
- Qualify: "probably Dravidian, not proven"

Before you move on

Where does बिल्ली most likely come from? (Dravidian, via Sanskrit biḍāla.) Is that universally agreed? (No — it is the leading account with serious alternatives.) Why is this a new cat-word family? (It is probably separate from the qiṭṭ/cattus family.)

Chapter 24

Green and Yellow

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name green and yellow in Hindi and trace पीला step by step back to Sanskrit.
> Trace pīta · pītala · pīala · pīlā in order, and flag the drink-to-yellow link as uncertain rather than settled.

24.1 हरा — a color cousin hiding in plain sight

> Hindi's green word shares deep roots with words other languages use for yellow.

You'll want to know — हरा — a hidden cousin of jaune and gelb

हरा (harā, "green") comes from Sanskrit हरित (harita, "green, yellowish, tawny") — a well-documented descendant of Proto-Indo-European ǵʰelh₃-, "to shine." That confirmed root is also behind German's gelb (via Proto-Germanic gelwaz*) and English's own "yellow" and "gold" — making Hindi's word for GREEN a genuine cousin of German's word for YELLOW. French's jaune is usually traced to this same family too, via Latin galbinus — though, honestly, that particular link is less secure than the others: some modern Latin scholarship treats galbus's origin as unknown rather than confirming the ǵʰelh₃-* connection. So here's the honest surprise: Hindi's word for GREEN and German's word for YELLOW are, at the deepest level, cousins — not a contradiction, since this root originally covered a blurry "shining, yellow-to-green" zone before languages carved out different pieces of it. Sanskrit harita itself kept some of that blur, historically covering shades from green through yellowish and tawny, before Hindi's harā settled specifically on "green."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "हरा" — green, a hidden PIE cousin of German's gelb
- "ǵʰelh₃- — shine, then a yellow-to-green color zone"

Before you move on

What ancient Proto-Indo-European root connects harā to German's gelb? (ǵʰelh₃-, "to shine" — Hindi's GREEN word is a genuine cousin of German's YELLOW word; French's jaune is usually placed in this family too, though that link is less secure.) Why can one root yield green and yellow words? (It once covered a broader shining yellow-to-green zone.) Next: the yellow word, whose sound history is clear, and the Sanskrit look-alike to keep apart from it.

24.2 पीला — clear sounds, and a look-alike to keep apart

Harā gave a secure ancient color family. Hindi's yellow word gives a secure sound chain, and a Sanskrit look-alike to keep out of it.

You'll want to know — The chain

Sanskrit also has a pīta that means "drunk, quaffed," from the root pā-, "to drink." It is a different word. Monier-Williams lists the two as separate headwords, and CDIAL gives them separate entries (8229 and 8230): they only sound alike. MW suggests "yellow" may come from a root meaning "to swell," after the colour of butter and oil, and marks that as possible, not settled.

What is solid is the ordinary sound history:

pīta* → pītala → pīala → *pīlā

Keep the evidence levels separate: trust the forms; do not let the look-alike into the chain.

Your turn

- Say it: "pīlā" — yellow
- Trace it: "pīta · pītala · pīala · pīlā"
- Qualify: "pīta, drunk, is a different word"

Before you move on

Say whether pīta "drunk" is the word behind pīlā. (No: it is a separate word that only sounds like pīta "yellow".) Then name the part that is secure. (The sound chain pīta → pītala → pīala → pīlā.)

Chapter 25

Day

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 2 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say day in Hindi and explain how दिन both is and is not related to Latin's diēs.
> Say दिन*, put it and diēs on the same PIE dyew- root but different branches, then name द्यु/दिव् as the closer cousins.

25.1 दिन (din) — "day," the same root as diēs, a different branch

You've already met this word once, tucked inside dopahar ("noon," literally "two pahars" of the day). Now it stands alone — and its connection to Latin's diēs is real, but more careful than it first looks.

You'll want to know — दिन — "day"

दिन (din) — "day" — is the ordinary Hindi word for "day," already implicit in दोपहर (dopahar, "noon," Chapter 17).

You'll want to know — The same ultimate root as diēs — but a separate branch

Din traces to Sanskrit दिन (dina), from Proto-Indo-Iranian *dinám — a suffixed formation built on Proto-Indo-European *dyew- ("to shine, sky"), the same ultimate root behind Latin's own diēs. But be careful: din and diēs aren't the closest possible cousins — they took separate derivational paths off that shared root. Din's own closest relatives are actually the Baltic/Slavic "day"-words, Lithuanian diena and Proto-Slavic dьnь. The genuinely direct, unsuffixed cousins of diēs are Sanskrit's own द्यु (dyu, "heaven, sky") and दिव् (div, "sky") — which give दिवस (divasa), yet another everyday Hindi word for "day." So the honest picture: din and diēs share one distant ancestor, but dyu/div are the tighter match.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "din" — "day," already met inside dopahar
- the shared root — din and Latin's diēs, same PIE root dyew-, "to shine," but different derivational branches
- the closer cousins — dyu, div, "heaven/sky" — the tighter, unsuffixed match for diēs

Before you move on

Where have you already met दिन before this lesson? (दोपहर, dopahar, "noon.") What ancient PIE root connects Hindi's din to Latin's diēs, and what does it mean? (dyew-, "to shine, sky" — but through separate branches, not as the closest cousins.) Which Sanskrit words are actually the tighter, more direct cousins of diēs? (द्यु dyu and दिव् div.)

25.2 ग — the other way round

Before the new one: ढ — how many pen lifts did it take?

That one came before any word that used it. This one comes long after.

Script you'll notice: ग

ग — ga.

What it is made of:

- a counterclockwise left loop joined to an ascending stem

- a top-to-bottom right stem
- the top shirorekhā

Script: you have been reading it for twenty-two chapters

Every one of these was yours before this page:

- स्वागत — the welcome you were greeted with early on
- मिलेंगे — we will meet
- मंगलवार — Tuesday

So this is the opposite arrangement from the last two letters. They arrived before their words; this one is late, and there is no honest way to dress that up.

The book taught its opening by copying whole words — a real sentence in two chapters, which is worth a great deal — and the cost is that the letters inside those words went unnamed. You have been recognising ग by its company. Now you get the letter itself.

Writing: ग

How it is written — 3 strokes · 2 pen lifts · 3 movements

Chapter 26

Night

Modes: 🎧 voice (1) ✓ pen (1) 🎧 Hands-free start: the first of 2 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say night in Hindi and explain why रात and Latin's nox are not cousins at all.
> Trace rātri → ratti → raat, then state the honest twist: unlike दिन and diēs, रात and nox share no root.

26.1 रात (raat) — "night," and an honest false cousin of Latin's nox

Last lesson, din turned out to be a real (if distant) cousin of Latin's diēs. This lesson is the mirror image: raat looks like it should be nox's cousin too — but it genuinely isn't.

You'll want to know — रात — "night"

रात (raat) — "night" — is the word already hiding inside आधी रात (ādhī rāt, "midnight," Chapter 17). It comes down through a completely ordinary sound-change chain: Sanskrit रात्रि (rātri) → Prakrit रत्ति (ratti, consonant cluster simplifying) → Hindi रात (raat) — the same shape of erosion you've already seen in Hindi's numbers (saptá → sāt, aṣṭá → āṭh).

You'll want to know — A genuine false cousin — not a true cognate

Here's the honest twist: रात्रि (rātri) traces to Proto-Indo- Iranian HráHtriH, from Proto-Indo-European h_1reh_1-$trih_2$ — built from a root meaning "to rest, remain still," plus a feminine suffix. This is a completely different PIE root from Latin's nox (from nók^{w}ts, the root behind English "night" itself, German Nacht, Greek nyx). Both rātri and nox are genuine Indo-European "night" words, in related language branches — but they are not cousins. Unlike din and diēs last lesson, which really do share one ancestor, raat and nox just happen to both mean "night," from two entirely separate ancient roots. Sanskrit actually does keep a true nók^{w}ts cousin of its own — नक्तम् (naktam, "by night") — but it's an archaic, adverbial word; it's rātri, not naktam, that won the job of everyday Hindi's raat.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "raat" — "night," already met inside ādhī rāt
- the sound chain — rātri → ratti → raat, the same erosion pattern as saptá → sāt
- the honest twist — raat and nox are NOT cousins, unlike din and diēs

Before you move on

Where have you already met रात before this lesson? (आधी रात, ādhī rāt, "midnight.") What Sanskrit word, and what sound-change chain, gives Hindi raat? (रात्रि rātri → Prakrit ratti → raat.) Are raat and Latin's nox true cognates, the way din and diēs are? (No — genuinely different PIE roots, *$h_1reh_1$- "to rest" vs. *$nók^wts$ — a false cousin, despite both meaning "night.")

Chapter 27

Good Night

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 2 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can wish someone good night in Hindi and say why the phrase uses literary रात्रि rather than everyday रात.
> Say शुभ रात्रि at parting, name the raat / rātri register pair, and trace śubh from 'to shine' to 'auspicious'.

27.1 शुभ रात्रि (śubh rātri) — "good night," the formal doublet in action

Hindi keeps two versions of "night" side by side — one for everyday speech, one for set phrases. Here's where the formal one gets used.

You'll want to know — शुभ रात्रि — "auspicious night"

शुभ रात्रि (śubh rātri) — "good night" — literally "auspicious night." Notice: this uses रात्रि (rātri), the very Sanskrit word last lesson's raat descended from — but here, kept in its full, unworn Sanskrit form. This is a classic tatsama/tadbhava doublet: rātri (tatsama, a direct, unchanged Sanskrit borrowing) sits alongside raat (tadbhava, the same word worn down by centuries of ordinary sound change) — Hindi keeps both, one for everyday speech, one for set formal phrases like this one.

You'll want to know — शुभ — "auspicious," from a root meaning "to shine"

शुभ (śubh) — "auspicious, good, fortunate" — comes from the Sanskrit verbal root शुभ् (śubh), whose core sense is "to be beautiful, splendid." This traces to a well-sourced Proto-Indo-European root, ḱewb^h- ("to be beautiful"). Some scholars propose a further, more speculative connection beyond that — to (s)kewh$_1$- ("to perceive") or ḱew-* ("to shine") — but that deeper link, not the ḱewb^h-* root itself, is the genuinely uncertain part. Either way, the underlying idea is a familiar one: auspiciousness imagined as a kind of radiance or beauty — something good "shines."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "śubh rātri" — "good night," literally "auspicious night"
- the formal doublet — rātri here, raat in everyday speech
- śubh's own root — śubh, "to shine" → "auspicious"

Before you move on

Does शुभ रात्रि use the everyday raat or the formal rātri? (The formal rātri — Hindi keeps both versions, one for everyday speech, one for set phrases.) What does शुभ literally trace back to? (A root meaning "to be beautiful, splendid," PIE ḱewb^h- — auspiciousness as a kind of radiance.) Is that root itself uncertain, or is a further proposed connection the shakier part? (The root ḱewb^h-* itself is well-sourced — it's the deeper proposed link, to "to shine" or "to perceive," that's genuinely speculative.)

27.2 ट — one run, then the headline

Before the new one: फ — how many pen lifts did it take?

This one takes fewer.

Script you'll notice: ट

ट — ṭa.

What it is made of:

- a descending central stem joined to a counterclockwise open round body
- the top shirorekhā

The word open is doing real work there. The round part comes back up toward the stem and stops short of meeting it, leaving a gap at the upper right. Keep that gap when you draw it.

Script: the tongue goes back

ट is a retroflex: the tongue curls back and taps the roof of the mouth, further back than it goes for त. Two different letters for what an English ear hears as one t, and Hindi uses both.

Chapter 28

Morning

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 2 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say morning in Hindi and recognise सुबह as a Persian-Arabic loan rather than a Sanskrit word.
> Say सुबह*, find the ṣ-b-ḥ root it shares with Arabic ṣabāḥ, and name the break from Sanskrit* दिन and रात*.*

28.1 सुबह (subah) — "morning," and a root that also sits in Arabic

> दिन and रात were both Sanskrit words, straight through. This one breaks that pattern completely — and lands on a root that also sits inside a different language entirely.

You'll want to know — सुबह — a real surprise: not Sanskrit at all सुबह (subah) — "morning" — is Hindi's everyday, ordinary word for morning. Unlike दिन (din) and रात (raat, both Sanskrit tatsama, met the last two lessons), subah is genuinely borrowed: from Persian صبح (subh), itself from Arabic صبح (ṣubḥ), built on the Arabic triliteral root ص-ب-ح (ṣ-b-ḥ, "dawn, to become morning").

You'll want to know — A root that also sits inside an Arabic goodnight

Here's the honest connection: this is the exact same Arabic root that sits inside the Arabic goodnight خير على تصبح (tuṣbiḥ ᶜalā khayr, "good night," literally "may you wake into goodness," built on this very root). Hindi's everyday word for "morning" and Arabic's own good-night farewell — a phrase that never even mentions "night" — both trace to the same three Arabic consonants, ص-ب-ح, arriving in Hindi by a completely different route (via Persian) than they did staying in Arabic.

You'll want to know — Be honest: din and raat didn't prepare you for this

Don't assume every Hindi time-word will be Sanskrit just because din and raat were. Subah is a genuine break in the pattern — a reminder that "everyday Hindi word" and "Sanskrit tatsama" aren't the same category, even when the last two examples made it look that way.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "subah" — "morning," genuinely a Persian/Arabic loan
- the shared root — ṣ-b-ḥ, the same three consonants inside Arabic's tuṣbiḥ ᶜalā khayr
- the honest break — unlike din and raat, subah is NOT Sanskrit

Before you move on

Is सुबह a Sanskrit tatsama, like दिन and रात? (No — a genuine Persian/Arabic loanword.) Which Arabic phrase, met earlier in this lesson, shares सुबह's exact root? (خير على تصبح, tuṣbiḥ ᶜalā khayr, "good night" — both trace to the Arabic root ص-ب-ح, ṣ-b-ḥ.)

28.2 ठ — the gap closed

Draw ट once from memory, then look at it. Where is its gap?

Close that gap and you are most of the way to today's letter.

Script you'll notice: ठ

ठ — ṭha.

What it is made of:

- a short top-to-bottom central stem
- a counterclockwise closed round body
- the top shirorekhā

letter	round body	stem
ट	open at the upper right	part of the same run
ठ	closed	part of the same run

Two differences, one you can hear and one you can only see: the breath, and the body that closes. The pen still runs from the stem into the body without lifting.

Chapter 29

Evening

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 2 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say evening in Hindi and refuse the tempting but false link between शाम and Sanskrit śyāmā.
> Say शाम*, reject the śyāmā resemblance as a false cognate, and pair it with* सुबह as two loans from the same source.

29.1 शाम (shaam) — "evening," and a tempting false cognate

Last lesson's सुबह was Persian, not Sanskrit. This word is the same story — but this time there's a Sanskrit look-alike close enough to trip you up on purpose.

You'll want to know — शाम — Persian again, not Sanskrit

शाम (shaam) — "evening" — is, like subah, a genuine Persian loanword: from Persian شام (šām), which traces back through Proto-Iranian *xšáfnyah to Proto-Indo-Iranian *kšápā ("night"). Hindi's two everyday time-words for "morning" and "evening" both entered the language via Persian, not Sanskrit — though their deeper roots differ: subah's traces further back to Arabic, while shaam's is native Indo-Iranian, a sister branch to Sanskrit itself. Persian is what they share directly; their ultimate origins are not the same.

You'll want to know — Be careful: a tempting, but FALSE, cognate

Here's the trap: Sanskrit has its own word, श्यामा (śyāmā, "dark, night-colored"), that looks like it should be shaam's cousin — similar sound, overlapping "darkness/night" meaning, right in the neighborhood you'd expect. It isn't. Shaam and śyāmā trace to two completely separate roots that simply converged on similar sounds and meanings by coincidence — a genuine false cognate, not a shared one. Don't let the resemblance fool you into inventing a connection that isn't there.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "shaam" — "evening," another genuine Persian loan
- the tempting trap — Sanskrit śyāmā looks related but ISN'T
- subah and shaam — both Persian, Hindi's whole "morning and evening" pair borrowed from the same source language

Before you move on

Is शाम Sanskrit or Persian? (Persian — from شام, śām, like subah.) Is शाम related to Sanskrit श्यामा (śyāmā, "dark")? (No — a genuine false cognate; the resemblance is coincidental, not a shared root.) What do subah and shaam have in common, beyond both meaning a time of day? (Both are Persian loanwords — Hindi's morning/evening pair, unlike din/raat, isn't Sanskrit at all.)

29.2 ए — the vowel that had only ever been a mark

Before the new one: े — what does it do to the consonant it sits on?

That mark has a standing form, and this is it.

Script you'll notice: ए

ए — e.

It is the independent vowel. The mark े is what this sound looks like when it rides on a consonant; ए is what it looks like when it stands on its own, with no consonant to attach to.

What it is made of:

- a long left stem joined to the descending tail
- a shorter right stem with an inward hook
- the top shirorekhā

Script: two shapes, one sound

what you see	where it stands
े	on a consonant
ए	alone

Every vowel in this script works this way, and you have met the arrangement twice before with अ / ा and with उ / ु. A vowel sign and its letter are the same vowel in two postures, and which one a word uses is decided by whether a consonant is there to carry it.

ए turns up at the ends of words far more than at the beginnings, because that is where a vowel most often has nothing in front of it to ride on.

Chapter 30

Afternoon

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 2 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say afternoon in Hindi using दोपहर in its modern, widened sense.
> Say दोपहर में for 'in the afternoon' — the Chapter 17 word doing a wider job than its etymology promises.

30.1 दोपहर — the same word, a wider job than its etymology promised

You already know दोपहर means "noon" — two pahars after sunrise, precisely. This lesson's honest twist is that the word doesn't stay that precise in everyday use.

You'll want to know — दोपहर — same word, a broader modern meaning

दोपहर (dopahar) is the exact word you met in Chapter 17, still literally "two pahars" (traditional ~3-hour watches, counted from sunrise) — but in modern, everyday Hindi, it no longer points only at that precise midday instant. Say दोपहर में (dopahar mein, "in the dopahar") to arrange a meeting, and you're pointing at a stretch of time — roughly noon through late afternoon — not a single moment. The historical etymology gave the word a very specific target (the end of the second daytime pahar); everyday usage has since widened that target into the general block of time most languages call "the afternoon."

You'll want to know — Be honest: etymology and modern meaning have drifted apart

This is worth sitting with: दोपहर's literal story still holds up the way Chapter 17 described it — "two pahars," with noon falling around the end of the second — though, as that lesson itself noted, treat the exact pahar-count as the general shape of the story rather than a precisely dated fact. Either way, the word's job in the language has moved on well past that etymology. This kind of drift — a word for one precise instant loosening into a name for a whole surrounding stretch of time — isn't unique to Hindi, but here it's visible because Chapter 17 showed you exactly how tight the original math was. पहर is Sanskrit prahara, "a watch" (CDIAL 8900), perhaps itself from Persian pahra.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dopahar" — the same word from Chapter 17, "two pahars"
- "dopahar mein" — "in the afternoon," a modern, widened usage
- the honest twist — the etymology stayed precise; the word's actual job widened past it

Before you move on

Is दोपहर a new word, or the same one from Chapter 17? (The same word — "two pahars.") Does modern Hindi use दोपहर to mean only the exact instant of noon? (No — it's widened to cover the whole afternoon, roughly noon through late afternoon.) Has दोपहर's etymology itself changed to match this wider modern use? (No — the etymology still points precisely at noon; only the word's everyday job has widened.)

30.2 ज — a letter you have been reading without being taught

Before the new one: ए — does it sit on a consonant or stand alone?

This next one is not new to your eye. It is new to your hand.

Script you'll notice: ज

ज — ja.

What it is made of:

- an open left hook curling clockwise around the lower bowl and continuing through the middle bar
- a top-to-bottom right stem
- the top shirorekhā

Script: where it has been hiding

You have been reading this letter for a long time without anyone stopping to name it:

- जी — the respect-marker in जी हाँ
- जनवरी — January, and जून and जुलाई after it

That is worth saying out loud rather than passing over. A letter can appear on every other page and still never be taught, because the words that carry it were introduced for their meanings and the shapes inside them were left to look after themselves.

Seeing a shape often is not the same as being shown it. The first gives you a guess; the second gives you the letter.

Chapter 31

Good Morning

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can wish someone good morning in Hindi and judge when सुप्रभात fits and when नमस्ते is the better choice.
> Say सुप्रभात*, split it into su + prabhāt, and set that native Sanskrit dawn against the Persian loan* सुबह*.*

31.1 सुप्रभात / प्रभात — "good morning," built from "dawn"

> सुबह was Persian, borrowed whole. This lesson's "good morning" isn't built on it at all — it reaches for entirely different, native vocabulary.

The two words — सुप्रभात

सुप्रभात (suprabhāt) — "good morning" — is built from सु (su, "good") plus प्रभात (prabhāta, "dawn, daybreak") — and prabhāta is native Sanskrit, from प्रभा (prabhā, "light, splendour"), itself from the root भा ("to shine") plus the preverb प्र- ("forth"), plus the suffix -त (-ta). This is a completely different word from सुबह (subah, HI-C28), the Persian/Arabic loan you use for the everyday noun "morning." Hindi's "morning" and "good morning" don't share a root at all.

The exchange — Formal register

Here's a genuine, checked-not-assumed finding — hedged carefully, because the evidence behind it is thin: some sources describe Telugu speakers often code-switching to English "good night" instead of their own Sanskrit-descended phrase, though that claim might apply more broadly across South Asian languages, not just Telugu. सुप्रभात's own story is different again, and just as worth hedging: it skews toward formal, written contexts — speeches, radio, the well-known Hindi WhatsApp-forward "good morning image" culture — rather than casual spoken conversation, where नमस्ते commonly covers mornings too. That's a real formal/everyday split, but it isn't the same thing as being displaced by English specifically — there's no strong evidence for that particular substitution here. Don't assume every "good _____" greeting in every language follows the same displacement story; verify each one on its own, and don't flatten a hedge into a fact either way.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- प्रभात (prabhāt) — "dawn, daybreak"
- "suprabhāt" — "good morning," su + prabhāt
- the root contrast — subah is Persian, prabhāt is native Sanskrit — completely different words
- the honest note — suprabhāt skews formal/written; नमस्ते covers casual mornings; no strong evidence of English displacement

Before you move on

Does सुप्रभात share a root with सुबह? (No — सुबह is Persian/Arabic; प्रभात, inside suprabhāt, is native Sanskrit, ultimately from भा, "to shine.") What does प्रभात mean by itself? (Dawn, daybreak.) Is सुप्रभात commonly used in casual spoken Hindi? (Not especially — it skews formal/written, with नमस्ते commonly covering mornings in everyday speech.) Is it being displaced by English "good morning," the way some sources (thinly) suggested for other languages' night greetings? (No strong evidence of that — its own story is a formal/everyday split, not an English substitution.)

Chapter 32

Good Evening

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can wish someone good evening in Hindi and choose between शुभ संध्या and नमस्ते by register.
> Unpack संध्या as 'holding together' and साँझ as its doublet, pick out श and झ*, then pick* शुभ संध्या for a written evening card and नमस्ते for a casual 7 p.m. hello, treating the split as a tendency, not a ban.

32.1 शुभ संध्या (shubh sandhyā) — "good evening," a twilight word with two lives

> शाम was Persian. This greeting reaches for something else again — a native Sanskrit word for the exact moment day and night meet.

You'll want to know — संध्या — "the junction of day and night"

संध्या (sandhyā) — "evening, twilight" — is native Sanskrit, from सम् (sam-, "together") + धा (dhā, "to hold, to place"), literally "holding together" — the junction where day and night meet. This is a genuinely different word from शाम (shaam, HI-C29's Persian loan): Hindi's everyday evening noun and its "good evening" greeting don't share a root, the same pattern already found for morning.

You'll want to know — साँझ — a doublet, but not a simple "casual" version संध्या has its own Hindi tadbhava doublet, साँझ (sāñjh), worn down through Prakrit the same way रात्रि became रात (HI-C26/27). But be careful not to force that exact parallel: unlike rātri/raat, where the tadbhava form clearly became the everyday word and the tatsama stayed formal, sources describe साँझ as used across both literary/poetic and everyday communication — not simply "the casual one." The doublet exists; the clean formal/casual split doesn't carry over as neatly this time.

Your turn

- Say it: "shubh sandhyā" — "good evening," su + sandhyā
- Say it: sandhyā's own meaning — "holding together," the junction of day and night
- Contrast: tatsama sandhyā · evolved doublet sāñjh

Before you move on

What does संध्या literally mean, and what is it built from? ("Holding together" — सम् + धा — i.e. the junction of day and night.) Does साँझ work the same way रात्रि/रात's tatsama/tadbhava split did — one strictly formal, one strictly casual? (No — साँझ is used across both literary and everyday registers, not confined to one.) Next: choose between the written greeting and the casual all-day greeting.

32.2 झ — the puff, on the letter you drew last

You know साँझ (sāñjh), "dusk". This lesson writes its last letter.

Before the new one: ज — what sound does it carry?

You know what is coming. It has happened twice already.

Script you'll notice: झ

झ — jha.

It is the breathy partner of ज, the third such pair you have met. Say ja, then say it again with a puff of air behind it.

What it is made of:

- a joined short upper stem, upper bowl, lower loop, and diagonal tail
- a left-to-right middle crossbar
- a top-to-bottom right stem
- the top shirorekhā

Script: the third pair

plain	breathy
त	थ
च	छ
ज	झ

Three pairs now, one distinction. This script pairs its letters by breath, and each pair has cost less than the last because the idea was learned once and only the shapes change.

This one arrives before any word that needs it — the first letter in this book to do so. There is nothing to find it inside yet. Learn the shape and the breath, and the word will arrive already readable.

Writing: झ

How झ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. descend the short upper stem, turn left and curve clockwise around the upper bowl, continue through the waist and clockwise around the lower loop, then finish down-right through the diagonal tail without lifting

- 2. lift at the central junction and draw the middle crossbar left-to-right
- 3. without lifting, climb up the right stem to the headline
- 4. descend the right stem top-to-bottom
- 5. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 2. The same as ज: the crossbar runs into the stem.

The source shows four movements; most native writers draw झ in three strokes (53% of HP Labs India's native-writer samples). This path keeps every movement in order and direction, and lifts only before the crossbar and the headline.

This is one attested teaching order and not a national standard — handwriting here is taught with school-to-school variation. Source: Opiaterein, 'Deva-झ-order.gif', strokes 1–4, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009.

Your turn

- Look: at ज and झ side by side, and say which one carries the puff

  ज · झ

- Trace it: झ three times, saying jha as you finish each one
- Say it: the two earlier pairs that work the same way

Before you move on

Which letter is झ the breathy partner of? (ज.) How many pen lifts does it take? (Two.) Which word did it come from? (साँझ.)

32.3 श — the letter you have been thanking people with

The hook from before: where did it sit, and what did it replace?

Today is a whole letter, and one you have been looking at since your first page.

Script you'll notice: श

श — śa, the sh of English ship.

What it is made of:

- a joined upper loop, descending outer curve, lower loop and diagonal tail
- a top-to-bottom right stem
- the top shirorekhā

The left-hand side is more work than most letters ask for, and it is all one run — the pen does not come up until the tail is finished.

Script: the third sibilant

letter	sound
स	sa
ष	ṣa
श	śa

You could already draw two of the three. This is the last one, and with it the hissing letters are complete.

Words that have been yours from the start:

- शुक्रिया — thank you
- शाम — evening
- शनिवार — Saturday

The first of those was among the first words in the book, and the letter that opens it is only being drawn now. The opening chapters taught whole words, and the letters inside them went unnamed.

Writing: श

How it is written — 3 strokes · 2 pen lifts · 3 movements

Stroke order after Opiaterein, 'Deva-श-order.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How श is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start at the upper loop's lower inner tip, sweep left and clockwise around the upper loop, descend the outer curve, curl around the lower loop, and continue down-right through the diagonal tail without lifting
- 2. lift and draw the right stem top-to-bottom
- 3. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 2.

Verified three-stroke teaching form; everyday handwriting may join or simplify the body differently.

This is one attested teaching order and not a national standard — handwriting here is taught with school-to-school variation. Source: Opiaterein, 'Deva-श-order.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009.

Your turn

- Look: at these two words and find श in each one

शुक्रिया · शाम

- Trace it: श three times, saying śa as you finish each one
- Say it: how many pen lifts the whole letter took

Before you move on

What sound does श carry? (śa.) Which three letters make the hissing set? Name the word of thanks it opens.

32.4 शुभ संध्या or नमस्ते? — choose by setting

Shubh sandhyā is structurally transparent. The final question is where Hindi speakers actually reach for it.

You'll want to know — Written warmth and casual speech

Like सुप्रभात, शुभ संध्या appears heavily in written and social greeting-card culture: greeting poetry, WhatsApp messages, and evening well-wishes. It is less likely to open an ordinary mid-conversation exchange.

नमस्ते works at any time of day, evenings included, and is more common in casual conversation than either shubh prabhāt or shubh sandhyā. The native language has divided the jobs: a Sanskrit "good ____" phrase for formal or written warmth, and another native greeting for everyday speech.

This is not English displacing a Hindi greeting. It is Hindi choosing between two of its own expressions by register and medium.

Your turn

- Choose: a WhatsApp evening card → शुभ संध्या
- Choose: greeting someone casually at 7 p.m. → नमस्ते
- Say it: "formal/written is a tendency, not an absolute ban"

Your turn — the evening word, from memory

- What does संध्या literally say, and from what? ("Holding together" — sam- + dhā, the junction of day and night.)
- What is its worn-down doublet, and is that the casual one? (साँझ sāñjh; no — it serves literary and everyday speech alike.)

Script — two letters from this chapter

शुभ संध्या · साँझ

- Point to: श in the greeting, then झ in साँझ
- Which letter is झ the breathy partner of, and which two complete the hissing set with श? (ज; स and ष.)

Before you move on

Where does शुभ संध्या especially thrive? (Written and social greeting-card culture.) Does नमस्ते genuinely work in the evening? (Yes — it works at any time and is common casually.) Is the distinction Hindi versus English? (No — it is a native register/ medium choice.)

Chapter 33

Good Afternoon

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 2 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can wish someone good afternoon in Hindi and say honestly how rarely शुभ दोपहर is actually used.
> Say शुभ दोपहर with दोपहर in its widened sense, then rank it honestly below नमस्ते/नमस्कार for everyday afternoons.

33.1 शुभ दोपहर (shubh dopahar) — "good afternoon," this arc's rarest greeting

You already know दोपहर's meaning widened from "precisely noon" to "the afternoon." This greeting rides that widened sense — but it's the least commonly heard of the three you've now met.

You'll want to know — शुभ दोपहर — "good afternoon," using the widened sense

शुभ दोपहर (shubh dopahar) — "good afternoon" — pairs शुभ ("good") with दोपहर used in the widened, modern sense from last lesson: "the afternoon" generally, not the narrow etymological "exactly noon." Good news for consistency: this greeting confirms दोपहर's widened meaning is the one people actually reach for here — nobody uses शुभ दोपहर to mean "good [precise instant of] noon."

शुभ is Sanskrit śubha, "bright, auspicious", a tatsama (CDIAL 12532).

You'll want to know — Be honest: the rarest of the three, not just another formal phrase

Here's the twist this lesson adds, verified independently rather than assumed from सुप्रभात or शुभ संध्या's pattern: of this arc's three शुभ+timeword greetings, शुभ दोपहर is described as the rarest in actual spoken use — even more so than the other two. Sources call it formal/written, note that casual alternatives like आपका दोपहर शुभ हो ("may your afternoon be good") exist but are themselves still uncommon, and confirm नमस्ते/नमस्कार do the real everyday greeting work across the whole afternoon, same as for morning and evening. This isn't just "another formal Sanskrit-style greeting" — it's the weakest-attested of the three, a genuine difference in degree, not just the same story repeated a third time.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "shubh dopahar" — "good afternoon," using दोपहर's widened modern sense
- the honest ranking — of सुप्रभात, शुभ संध्या, and शुभ दोपहर, this one is the rarest in actual spoken use
- नमस्ते/नमस्कार — the real everyday greeting, covering afternoons too

Before you move on

Does शुभ दोपहर use दोपहर's narrow "noon" sense or its widened "afternoon" sense? (The widened sense — "good afternoon," not "good [exact] noon.") Is शुभ दोपहर the most, or least, commonly used of this arc's three शुभ+timeword greetings? (Least — described as the rarest of the three in actual spoken use.) What covers the real everyday afternoon greeting instead? (नमस्ते/नमस्कार.)

33.2 ौ — the same mark, one stroke more

Before the new one: झ — what sound does it carry?

Now look at दो and find the mark riding on the द. The new one is that mark with a second stroke added.

Script you'll notice: ौ

ौ — au.

It is a vowel sign, so it never stands alone: it attaches to a consonant and replaces the a built into it.

Where it sits: the ā bar on the right, plus a double stroke above.

Worked through: क + ौ = कौ — kau.

Script: the pair that differs by one stroke

mark	sound	above the bar
ो	o	one stroke
ौ	au	two strokes

The only difference is the count, which makes this the easiest mark in the script to misread and the easiest to fix: when you meet one, stop and count the strokes above the headline.

You already say these, and every one has ौ somewhere inside it:

- नौ — nine
- मौसम — weather
- चौदह — fourteen

Writing: ौ — copy what you see

Put your pen on ौ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start the character or which way to travel. That is a real thing, taught with real variation from school to school, and it is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at these two words and say which mark each one carries

  दो · नौ

- Trace it: ौ three times, saying au as you finish each one
- Say it: the one thing that tells the two marks apart

Before you move on

What vowel does ौ put on its consonant? (au.) How does it differ from ो? (One more stroke above the bar.) Name a number you already say that contains it.

Chapter 34

Four Verbs of the Mind

Modes: voice (1) eyes (3) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I think, understand, read and write in Hindi, run all four through the present habitual, and say "Sorry, I don't understand" when I need to.
> Run सोचना, समझना, पढ़ना and लिखना through मैं ...ता/ती हूँ, spell out मेरा नाम from the letters you first wrote by hand, and name the one meaning — to scratch — that four unrelated families each chose for "write".

34.1 सोचना — "to think," its present forms, and an older grief

You can already run a Hindi verb: strip the -ना, keep the stem, add -ता/-ती/-ते and होना. Here is a verb worth running that machine on, because its history is a small shock.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सोचना (sochnā) = "to think." It behaves itself completely: the infinitive ends in -ना like every Hindi verb, and the stem is सोच- (soch-). So मैं सोचता हूँ (maiṁ sochtā hūṁ, m.) / मैं सोचती हूँ (sochtī, f.) — "I think." Respectfully, आप सोचते हैं (āp sochte haiṁ).
The stem is also a noun on its own. सोच (soch) means "a thought" — and, as often, "worry." Hold on to that double meaning.

You'll want to know — thinking that started out as grieving सोचना comes down from Sanskrit śocyate, "is made to feel pain" (CDIAL 12621), on the root शुच् (śuc-), "burn, grieve". Through Prakrit the sound softened and the sense drifted: burn → be consumed by something → brood on it → plain think. Hindi's ordinary word for thinking is an old word for sorrow that cooled down.

Be honest about the limits: शुच् has no secure English cousin, and inventing one would be worse than saying so.

What travels instead is the shape of the change. English think and thank are one Germanic root — to thank someone was to think well of them. Latin pēnsāre meant "to weigh," which is why English has pensive. Three families, and no mind-verb that began as "think."

Your turn

- Say it (m.): मैं सोचता हूँ (maiṁ sochtā hūṁ) · (f.): मैं सोचती हूँ (maiṁ sochtī hūṁ)
- Say it: "you (resp.) think" — आप सोचते हैं (āp sochte haiṁ)
- Say it: nahīṁ on its own, then slide it in front of the verb — मैं नहीं सोचता / सोचती (maiṁ nahīṁ sochtā / sochtī), "I don't think so." Hindi's negator sits before the verb, never after it
- Say it: the noun soch, and both things it means — a thought, and a worry

Before you move on

What did the root śuc- mean before it meant "think"? (To burn, to grieve.) Which everyday Hindi noun still carries both halves, and where does nahīṁ sit in maiṁ nahīṁ sochtā? (सोच, a thought and a worry; nahīṁ goes before the verb.) Is there an English cousin of śuc-? (No.)

34.2 समझना (samajhnā) — "to understand," which is to say "to wake up"

Sochnā got you thinking. This verb gets you the single most useful sentence a beginner owns — the one you say when you have not understood.

The letters in this word

स (sa) + म (ma) → सम; then झ (jha), the breathy pair of ja; then ना (nā). Read स · म · झ · ना → samajhnā. The झ is one puff of air heavier than a plain j, the same aspiration that separates Hindi's k from its kh.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

समझना (samajhnā) = "to understand." Stem समझ-, so मैं समझता हूँ (m.) / मैं समझती हूँ (f.), and respectfully आप समझते हैं.
Like soch, the bare stem is a noun: समझ (samajh) is "understanding, sense, judgement."
And the sentence to bank tonight: मैं नहीं समझता / समझती — "I don't understand." Put माफ़ कीजिए in front of it and you have a complete, polite repair: māf kījiye, maiṁ nahīṁ samajhtā — "Sorry, I don't understand." Every word of that you already had.

You'll want to know — the root that gave the Buddha his name

The standard derivation takes समझना, samajhnā, back to Sanskrit सम् (sam-, "fully, together") + the root बुध् (budh-, "to wake, to become aware"). Older Hindi still says समुझना (samujhnā), and that surviving -u- is the fingerprint of budh- before it wore down.

So you already know this root in English, twice over, because English took the words whole:

- बुद्ध (buddha) — "the one who woke up." English Buddha.
- बोधि (bodhi) — the awakening itself; and बुद्धि (buddhi), intellect.

Further back, budh- rests on the reconstructed root bheudh-, and its Germanic branch surfaces in English bode, forebode and forbid (for- + "announce"). Hindi's "I understand," then, is a claim to have woken up — and the Buddha's title is the same claim, made once and for all.

Your turn

- Say it (m.): maiṁ samajhtā hūṁ · (f.): maiṁ samajhtī hūṁ

- Say it: the repair, slowly — māf kījiye, maiṁ nahīṁ samajhtā / samajhtī
- Say it: maiṁ sochtā hūṁ then maiṁ samajhtā hūṁ — thinking, then getting it
- Say it: buddha and bodhi, and what budh- means underneath them (to wake)

Before you move on

What are the two pieces inside samajhnā? (सम् "fully" + बुध् "to wake.") Say "Sorry, I don't understand." (Māf kījiye, maiṁ nahīṁ samajhtā / samajhtī.) Which famous title is built on the same root, and what does it mean? (Buddha — "the one who woke up.")

34.3 पढ़ना (paṛhnā) — "to read," and just as often "to study"

One verb, two English words. And one letter you have never had to say out loud before.

The letters in this word

प (pa), then ढ़, then ना (nā) → प · ढ़ · ना.

That middle letter is ढ (ḍha) wearing the nuqtā — the same small dot you met under फ़ in māf, Hindi's mark for a sound the plain letter cannot carry. Dotted, ढ becomes a flap: curl the tongue back to the roof of the mouth and let it snap forward, with a breath behind it. That is ṛh. The word is paṛhnā, not padhna.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पढ़ना (paṛhnā) = "to read" — and, with no change at all, "to study."
Stem पढ़-: मैं पढ़ता हूँ (m.) / मैं पढ़ती हूँ (f.); आप पढ़ते हैं.
Two words grow straight off that stem, and both are everywhere in Indian life: पढ़ाई (paṛhāī) = "studies, schooling," and पढ़ाना (paṛhānā) = "to teach" — literally "to cause to read."

You'll want to know — reading, when reading meant reciting

The ancestor is Sanskrit पठति (paṭhati) — "recites; reads aloud." Not scans a page. Sanskrit's name for its oldest texts is श्रुति (śruti), "that which is heard": the Veda was memorised and spoken, and to "read" it was to say it. That is why one Hindi verb still covers reading and studying — for centuries they were the same act.

The sound wore down on the ordinary road: paṭhati → Prakrit paḍhaï → paṛhnā, the hard ṭh loosening between two vowels into the flap you just made.

And the honest note: paṭh- has no secure Indo-European ancestry. No English cousin, and possibly not an inherited Indo-Aryan word at all. Where the trail stops, this book stops with it.

Your turn

- Say it: the flap alone — ṛh, ṛh — then the whole word, paṛhnā
- Say it (m.): maiṁ paṛhtā hūṁ · (f.): maiṁ paṛhtī hūṁ — and mean both "I read" and "I study"
- Say it: do what the verb originally meant — recite एक, दो, तीन, चार, पाँच, छह, सात, आठ, नौ, दस aloud, one to ten, then say maiṁ paṛhtā hūṁ
- Say it: maiṁ paṛhtā hūṁ, then maiṁ samajhtā hūṁ — read it, then get it

Before you move on

What two English verbs does paṛhnā cover? (Read and study.) What did paṭhati mean, and why does that explain the pair? (To recite aloud — reading was saying.) Recite one to five in Hindi from memory. (Ek, do, tīn, chār, pāṁch.)

34.4 लिखना (likhnā) — "to write," which everywhere means "to scratch"

Reading has its verb. Here is the other half — and the chapter's four mind-verbs come back together at the end of it.

The letters in this word

ल (la) with the short ि → लि (li); then ख (kha); then ना (nā) → लि · ख · ना.

The ि is the one that runs ahead of itself: it is drawn to the left of ल but sounded after it, exactly as in हिंदी. Devanagari writes the mark first and your mouth says it second — li, never il.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

लिखना (likhnā) = "to write." Stem लिख-: मैं लिखता हूँ (m.) / मैं लिखती हूँ (f.); आप लिखते हैं.
Its Sanskrit ancestor is लिखति (likhati), and likhati's first meaning is not "writes" at all. It is "scratches, scrapes, furrows." Writing entered the verb afterwards, once there was something to scratch a mark into.

You'll want to know — five families, one picture

Now the striking part. Ask what "write" meant before it meant writing, and the same answer comes back from languages that never borrowed it from each other:

- Sanskrit लिखति — to scratch.
- Latin scrībere — to incise, cut. English took scribe, script, describe, manuscript from it.
- Greek gráphein — to scratch, carve; behind graph and every -graphy. It is genuinely cousin to English carve.
- Old English wrītan — to score, cut; that is English write itself.

These are four different roots, not one worn four ways. Nobody handed this metaphor around. Four peoples with wax, stone, bark and bone each looked at their sharp tool and named the act after the damage it did. Hindi's verb is one of them, and it kept the older sense honestly enough that likhati still glosses as "scrapes."

Your turn

- Say it (m.): maiṁ likhtā hūṁ · (f.): maiṁ likhtī hūṁ

- Say it: the chapter in one breath — maiṁ sochtā hūṁ, maiṁ samajhtā hūṁ, maiṁ paṛhtā hūṁ, maiṁ likhtā hūṁ; then the same four as a woman, in -tī
- Say it: spell out मेरा नाम, the two words you first assembled by hand — म, the e-mātrā above it, र, the ā-tail; then न, ā, म — and finish with maiṁ likhtā hūṁ
- Say it: likhati, scrībere, gráphein, wrītan — and the one meaning all four started from (to scratch)

Before you move on

What did likhati mean first? (To scratch.) Are Sanskrit likh-, Latin scrībere and English write one root or four? (Four — the picture is shared, the word is not.) Run the chapter's four verbs in the maiṁ … hūṁ frame. (Sochtā, samajhtā, paṛhtā, likhtā.)

Chapter 35

Taking, Asking, Helping — and Liking

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I take, ask and help in Hindi, build a conjunct verb out of any noun plus करना, and say what I like the way Hindi says it — with the thing liked as the subject and me in the dative.
> Say लेना, पूछना and मदद करना, then turn the sentence inside out: मुझे रोटी पसंद है is bread being pleasing to me, so है agrees with the bread and I move into मुझे — the same inversion Spanish and Italian reached on their own.

35.1 लेना / ले / लेता / लेती / लेते — "to take" and its present forms

Four verbs of the mind are behind you. This chapter puts your hands back in the world — starting with the shortest verb in it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

लेना (lenā) = "to take." Two syllables, and one of the most-used verbs in the language. Stem ले-: मैं लेता हूँ (m.) / मैं लेती हूँ (f.); आप लेते हैं. The pattern is regular: remove infinitive -ना, then add -ता for the masculine form, -ती for the feminine, or -ते for respectful आप and plural subjects. That gives ले → लेता / लेती / लेते.

It reaches further than English "take". Offered a drink, a Hindi speaker answers मैं पानी लेता हूँ — "I'll have water," the same lenā. It pairs with its opposite in the fixed phrase लेन-देन (len-den), "taking and giving" — Hindi's word for dealings, transactions, business between people.

You'll want to know — the consonant that fell out

लेना looks too short to have a history. It has a long one. Sanskrit's verb was लभते (labhate) — "takes, obtains, receives." Through Prakrit lahaï the -bh- thinned to a breath and then vanished, and the two vowels left behind fused into the single ले- you now say. Almost the whole word eroded.

The proof is sitting in Hindi's own vocabulary. लाभ (lābh) — "profit, gain, benefit" — was borrowed back from Sanskrit later, straight out of the books, so it never went through that erosion. Verb and noun are the same word at two different ages: one worn smooth by mouths, one preserved on the shelf.

Further out, the standard comparison lines labh- up with Greek lambánein, "to take" — and English quietly holds three of its descendants: a syllable is letters "taken together"; epilepsy is "a seizing upon"; so is catalepsy.

Your turn

- Say it (m.): maiṁ letā hūṁ · (f.): maiṁ letī hūṁ
- Say it: "you (resp.) take" — आप लेते हैं (āp lete haiṁ)
- Say it: accept a drink — maiṁ pānī letā hūṁ; then a meal — maiṁ roṭī letā hūṁ. Object first, verb last, as always
- Say it: pānī and what it literally means (the drinkable thing), then roṭī
- Say it: lenā and lābh one after the other — the same Sanskrit verb, worn down and preserved

Before you move on

Which Sanskrit verb is lenā, and which consonant did it lose? (लभते labhate; the -bh-.) Which Hindi noun still shows that consonant, and why? (लाभ — borrowed back from Sanskrit, so it never eroded.)

Give the stem, then the masculine, feminine, and respectful or plural forms. (ले; लेता / लेती / लेते.) Say "I'll have water." (Maiṁ pānī letā / letī hūṁ.)

35.2 व — the loop you have drawn before

Before the new one: श — how many runs did its left side take?

This one is easier, and its left side is a shape already in your hand.

Script you'll notice: व

व — va, somewhere between an English v and w.

What it is made of:

- a counterclockwise left loop
- a top-to-bottom right stem
- the top shirorekhā

Look back at ग and you have seen this before: the same counterclockwise loop and the same right stem. What differs is where the loop sits and how it meets the stem.

Script: the last of the four letter	sound

य	ya
र	ra
ल	la
व	va

These four sit between the consonants and the vowels — you shape them like consonants and they glide like vowels. Three were already yours. This is the fourth, and the set is complete.

Words you have said since the beginning:

- धन्यवाद — thank you

- अलविदा — goodbye
- स्वागत — welcome
- सोमवार — Monday

Writing: व

How व is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start at the upper-right of the body, travel left around the top, and continue counterclockwise around the loop to the right-side junction
- 2. without lifting, climb up the right stem to the headline
- 3. descend the right stem top-to-bottom
- 4. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 1. One fewer than श: the loop runs on into the right stem.

The source shows three movements; most native writers draw व in two strokes (69% of HP Labs India's native-writer samples). This path keeps every movement in order and direction, and lifts only before the headline.

This is one attested teaching order and not a national standard — handwriting here is taught with school-to-school variation. Source: JackPotte, 'Devanagari v व.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 29 March 2009.

Your turn

- Look: at these two words and find व in each one

  धन्यवाद · अलविदा

- Trace it: व three times, saying va as you finish each one
- Say it: which letter you already draw that shares its loop

Before you move on

What sound does व carry? (va.) Which four letters glide between consonant and vowel? Name the word of thanks that ends in it.

35.3 पूछना / पूछ / पूछता / पूछती / पूछते — asking and English "pray"

You have been asking questions since chapter two. Here, at last, is the verb for doing it.

The letters in this word

प (pa) with the long ू hanging beneath it → पू (pū); then छ (cha), the breathy pair of ca; then ना (nā) → पू · छ · ना.

The ū is genuinely long, and छ takes a puff of air, one degree heavier than the च in sochnā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पूछना (pūchnā) = "to ask," in the sense of asking a question. Stem पूछ-: मैं पूछता हूँ (m.) / मैं पूछती हूँ (f.); आप पूछते हैं.
The pattern is regular: remove infinitive -ना, then add -ता for the masculine form, -ती for the feminine, or -ते for respectful आप and plural subjects. That gives पूछ → पूछता / पूछती / पूछते.
You already own a question — कितने साल के हो, "how many years are you of." Now you can name the act itself: मैं उम्र पूछता हूँ, "I ask (someone's) age." The thing asked about sits in front of the verb, where every object has gone.

You'll want to know — asking a person, asking a god

Behind पूछना stands Sanskrit पृच्छति (pṛcchati, "asks") and the reconstructed root prek-, "to ask":

- Latin precārī, "to beg, to entreat" — English pray, prayer, deprecate, imprecation.
- Latin precārius, "held at another's pleasure" — English precarious.
- German fragen, Dutch vragen — everyday "to ask" to this day.

English's inherited cousin, Old English frignan, died out; unrelated ask replaced it. The prek- word survived in English only as pray: asking a person and asking a god once shared a name.

Your turn

- Say it (m.): maiṁ pūchtā hūṁ · (f.): maiṁ pūchtī hūṁ
- Say it: "you (resp.) ask" — आप पूछते हैं (āp pūchte haiṁ)
- Say it: maiṁ pūchtā hūṁ, then maiṁ letā hūṁ — I ask, I take
- Say it: pūchnā, then pray, precarious, fragen — one root, three destinations

Before you move on

Which English verb is pūchnā's true cousin — ask or pray? (Pray — ask is unrelated.) Give the stem, then the masculine, feminine, and respectful or plural forms. (पूछ; पूछता / पूछती / पूछते.) Say "I ask (someone's) age." (Maiṁ umr pūchtā / pūchtī hūṁ.)

35.4 मदद करना (madad karnā) — "to help," and the machine that builds it

This one is not a verb. It is a noun with a verb attached — and once you spot the join, you can build hundreds more.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मदद (madad) is a noun: "help, aid." On its own it does nothing. Bolt करना (karnā, "to do") on the end and you have the verb मदद करना, madad karnā — literally "to do help."
Only करना ever conjugates. The noun sits still:

- मैं मदद करता हूँ (m.) / मैं मदद करती हूँ (f.) — "I help."
- आप मदद करते हैं — "you (resp.) help."

This is the conjunct verb, and you have already used two without being told: काम करना, "to do work" = to work; and माफ़ कीजिए, "please do forgiveness" = sorry. One join, three verbs.

You'll want to know — a stretched-out hand, and why the pattern matters मदद is Arabic madad, on the root م-د-د (m-d-d), "to stretch out, to extend." Help, in Arabic, is a thing extended toward you — the picture English reaches for when it extends a hand. It came into Hindi through Persian, the same road as उम्र (age) and माफ़ (forgiven).

State the gap plainly: English inherited nothing from m-d-d, and English help is a Germanic word unrelated to any of this. The picture is shared; the word is not.

Now why this matters more than one verb. A borrowed noun cannot be conjugated — Hindi would have to bend a foreign word through its own endings. With करना it never has to: the loan stays a frozen noun and native grammar does the work. That is how Hindi swallowed centuries of Persian and Arabic vocabulary without disturbing its verb system at all.

Your turn

- Say it (m.): maiṁ madad kartā hūṁ · (f.): maiṁ madad kartī hūṁ
- Say it: the three joins in a row — kām karnā, māf karnā, madad karnā; hear that only the second word ever moves
- Say it: maiṁ pūchtā hūṁ, then maiṁ madad kartā hūṁ — I ask, I help
- Say it: what m-d-d means underneath madad (to stretch out, extend)

Before you move on

Which half of madad karnā takes the endings? (करना — the noun never changes.) Name two conjunct verbs you had already used. (काम करना; माफ़ कीजिए.) Why does this pattern let Hindi borrow so freely? (The loan stays a noun; native karnā carries the grammar.)

35.5 पसंद (pasand) — Hindi does not like things; things please Hindi

Every verb so far let you be the one doing something. This last one takes that away.

You'll want to know — मुझे, the shape of "to me"

मुझे (mujhe) = "to me." It is what मैं ("I") becomes when the sentence will not let you be its subject. Mujhe is not "I."

Grammar Lens: the thing you like is the subject

मुझे रोटी पसंद है = "I like bread" — or, taken apart: मुझे ("to me") + रोटी ("bread") + पसंद ("pleasing") + है ("is"). "To me, bread is pleasing."
रोटी is the subject, and that is what है agrees with. You are only the person it happens to. Hindi has no "I like bread" with I in front.
Two languages walked here alone: Spanish me gusta el café ("to me, the coffee pleases") and Italian mi piace. Those two are close cousins; Hindi is not, and nobody borrowed it. Two families, one decision — liking happens to you.

You'll want to know — a Persian word doing a verb's job

Because पसंद is not a verb. It is Persian — from پسندیدن (pasandīdan, "to approve, to find pleasing") — and it entered Hindi as a noun and adjective, "liked, one's choice." A non-verb cannot carry the person doing the liking, so the grammar put them elsewhere: मुझे.

It came by the Persian road that also gave you शाम (evening) — and see what these two chapters have shown. Hindi's verbs of the mind (sochnā, samajhnā, paṛhnā, likhnā) are inherited Indo-Aryan to a word, while madad and pasand — helping and liking — are borrowed. Thinking stayed home; the social vocabulary travelled.

For an active "like", Hindi uses last lesson's join: पसंद करना, "to do liking," nearer to "I choose, I prefer." For everyday liking, मुझे ... पसंद है.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mujhe roṭī pasand hai, then the Hindi meaning — "to me, bread is pleasing"
- swap the thing, leaving mujhe … pasand hai untouched — mujhe pānī pasand hai · mujhe kuttā pasand hai · mujhe shām pasand hai
- the chapter end to end — maiṁ letā hūṁ, maiṁ pūchtā hūṁ, maiṁ madad kartā hūṁ, mujhe roṭī pasand hai
- pasand karnā beside madad karnā — one join, twice

Before you move on

In mujhe roṭī pasand hai, what is the subject? (रोटी — which is why it is hai.) What part of speech is pasand, and from where? (A noun/adjective, from Persian — not a verb.) Say "I like the dog," then what it literally means. (Mujhe kuttā pasand hai — "to me, dog is pleasing.")

Chapter 36

One House, Four Languages

Modes: 👁 eyes (4) 🎧 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a house, its door, a room and the chair I am offered, give each one the possessive its gender demands, and say where each of the four words came from — Sanskrit, Persian, Portuguese and Arabic.
> Run घर, दरवाज़ा, कमरा and कुर्सी with the right possessive — and hear मेरा turn into मेरी at the first feminine noun, the promise chapter 2 made and never kept. Then name the four languages one room drew on, spell कुर्सी with its virāma and its conjunct, and say नमस्ते at the door coming in and शुभ रात्रि going out.

36.1 घर (ghar) — "house," and the fence that came first

You can say your name. Now say where you live — and meet the one thing every Hindi noun carries that English nouns do not.

The letters in this word

Two letters. घ (gha), the breathy pair of ga, then र (ra), already yours from मेरा.

र is the spineless one: no upright stroke of its own, so the शिरोरेखा, the head-line, is all that ties it to its neighbour. Both letters keep their inherent $a \rightarrow$ घर, ghar.

Grammar Lens: the word arrives with a gender

घर (ghar) = "house, home." And it is masculine.
Every Hindi noun is masculine or feminine. Not the thing — the word: the gender is a fact about ghar the way its spelling is.
It is not decoration: it changes the words around the noun. Because ghar is masculine, "my house" is मेरा घर (merā ghar), the masculine मेरा, exactly as in मेरा नाम.
Whole sentence: घर मेरा है (ghar merā hai), "the house is mine."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

घर comes from ghara, "house", already in the Pali canon (CDIAL 4428). It is usually taken as the spoken form of Sanskrit गृह (gṛha), but CDIAL calls that sound change phonetically difficult: likely, not proven. Hindi kept गृह too, for formal use.
Further back, gṛha descends from an ancient root meaning enclosure, g^{h}erd^h- — and English holds two plain descendants of it: yard and garden. Slavic holds the -grad in Belgrade, "town."
So, if the link holds, the oldest sense is not walls and a roof but a fenced-in piece of ground.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ghar — house; then merā ghar; then ghar merā hai
- merā nām and merā ghar one after the other — the same merā, because both nouns are masculine
- the two letters, gha and ra, and which of them has no spine
- gṛha, then ghar — the Sanskrit shape and the worn one; then the old meaning, enclosure

Before you move on

Is घर masculine or feminine, and how do you know from the sentence? (Masculine — merā, not merī.) What did the root behind gṛha mean before it meant a building? (An enclosure — the root behind yard and garden.) Which of घ and र hangs from the head-line without a spine of its own? (र.)

36.2 दरवाज़ा (darvāzā) — the door, and the oldest word you already know

You have a house. This is what you stand at to be let into one — and it is where नमस्ते is said and where śubh rātri is said back.

The letters in this word

द · र · वा · ज़ा — and the ा you already write does two of the four.

The new mark is the dot under ज़: the nuqta. Plain ज is ja. Persian arrived carrying a z Devanagari had no letter for, so the script put a dot beneath the nearest shape and made one — ज़, za. The same dot makes फ़ (fa) and ख़, the sound in ख़ुशी.

A nuqta is a small confession in ink: this sound came from somewhere else.

Grammar Lens: the shape that usually tells you

दरवाज़ा (darvāzā) = "door," and it is masculine — so मेरा दरवाज़ा.
Here is your first piece of help. A noun ending in long -ā is usually masculine, and darvāzā ends in -ा. Keep it as a lean, not a law: later chapters will show you where it fails, in both directions.
घर (ghar) ends in a consonant and is masculine too — so a consonant ending tells you nothing at all. That one you simply learn.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दरवाज़ा is Persian, دروازه (darvāza), and its first syllable is where this gets remarkable. Persian در (dar) means "door," and it descends from the ancient root d^{h}wer- — as do English door, Latin forēs, Greek thúrā and Sanskrit द्वार (dvāra).
Now the twist. Hindi also has द्वार (dvār), taken straight out of Sanskrit for formal use. So the borrowed Persian word and the learned Sanskrit one are the same ancient word, arrived twice, by two roads, centuries apart.
The -vāza part is less settled: usually connected to a Persian word for "open," but disputed, and worth leaving open.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- darvāzā, then merā darvāzā, then merā ghar — one merā, two masculine nouns
- the arrival and the leaving at the same door — namaste going in, shubh rātri going out
- ja, then za — the letter, then the letter with the dot
- dar, door, thúrā, dvāra — one word, four languages

Before you move on

What does the dot under ज़ tell you? (That the sound is borrowed — Devanagari had no z.) Persian dar and English door — coincidence or cousins? (Cousins, from d^{h}wer- — and Hindi's own द्वार is the third.) Which ending gives you a fair guess at masculine? (Long -ā, as in darvāzā. A consonant ending, as in ghar, tells you nothing.)

36.3 कमरा (kamrā) — the room that is also a camera

Through the door, and into this. A short, ordinary word — which travelled to India by sea, on Portuguese ships.

The letters in this word

क · म · रा — and म (ma) is one of the first two letters you ever wrote, beside न.

Both of those hang from the head-line and both stand on a right-hand spine; that upright is what your eye follows along a line of Devanagari. क and र you have as well, so this word costs you nothing new — only the ा riding on the final र.

Grammar Lens: the lean holds

कमरा (kamrā) = "room," and it is masculine — मेरा कमरा.
Long -ā, masculine again, exactly as दरवाज़ा was. Three nouns in, and the possessive has not changed once: merā ghar, merā darvāzā, merā kamrā.
Hold on to that flatness. It is about to break.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कमरा is neither Sanskrit nor Persian. It is Portuguese — câmara, "chamber, room" — left behind on India's western coast by the traders who ran that shore from the sixteenth century, along with चाबी (chābī, "key") and अलमारी (almārī, "cupboard").
Portuguese câmara is Latin camera, "a vaulted chamber," and Latin took it from Greek kamára — where the trail honestly stops; the Greek word's own origin is unknown.
Then the good part. English camera is that same Latin word: a camera obscura was literally a "dark room," and when the dark room shrank into a box the name went with it. And Hindi later borrowed it back through English as कैमरा (kaimrā) for the device.
So कमरा and कैमरा are the same Latin word, arrived twice by two different routes — the second time carrying a machine that did not exist when the first one landed.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kamrā, then merā kamrā
- the three so far, in one breath — merā ghar, merā darvāzā, merā kamrā
- kamrā and kaimrā — one Latin word, two arrivals
- where each of the three came from — Sanskrit, Persian, Portuguese

Before you move on

Which language handed Hindi कमरा, and how did it get there? (Portuguese, by sea, on the western coast.) What does kamrā share with English camera? (One Latin word, camera, "vaulted chamber" — Hindi has it twice, as kamrā and kaimrā.) Say "my house, my door, my room." (Merā ghar, merā darvāzā, merā kamrā.)

36.4 कुर्सी (kursī) — sit down, and watch मेरा change

House, door, room — and now what you are offered once inside. This word breaks the pattern the other three set.

The letters in this word

कु · र् · सी — three old letters, क, र, स, and two working marks.

क takes ु for ku. Then र with the virāma, the stroke that kills a consonant's built-in a: a bare र् cannot stand alone, so it fuses with the स, and the hook above स is that र — the fusing you met in स्त.

Then सी: the long ी stands after its consonant and sounds after it, while ि stands before and still sounds after. One of the two lies to your eye.

Grammar Lens: your first feminine noun

कुर्सी (kursī) = "chair," and it is feminine.
So मेरी कुर्सी, not merā. When you learnt मेरा you were told you would meet मेरी at your first feminine noun. Here it is.
Nothing about a chair is female. The gender belongs to the word, and it changes मेरा. Get it wrong and every word beside the noun goes wrong too.

Grammar Lens: the lean, and where it leans wrong

The rule of thumb: long -ā tends masculine, long -ī tends feminine, a consonant ending tells you nothing. A lean, not a law: darvāzā, kamrā and kursī obey it, ghar sits outside it, and later words will disobey it outright.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कुर्सी is Arabic, كرسي (kursī), "seat, throne," reaching Hindi through Persian, the road most Arabic words took.

Arabic did not invent it either. It has passed along the Near East for four thousand years: Sumerian guza, Akkadian kussû, then Ugaritic, Hebrew and Aramaic, Arabic most likely taking it from Aramaic. Not one family — the word crossed between unrelated families because the object did.
English chair? Greek kathédra, through Latin and French. No relation at all.
And what this chapter has done: घर Sanskrit, दरवाज़ा Persian, कमरा Portuguese, कुर्सी Arabic. One room, four languages — that is Hindi, not an accident of these four words.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- merī kursī, then merā kamrā — one possessive, two shapes
- the chapter — merā ghar, merā darvāzā, merā kamrā, merī kursī
- each word's source — Sanskrit, Persian, Portuguese, Arabic
- namaste at the darvāzā, then shubh rātri at the same door

Before you move on

Why मेरी कुर्सी? (कुर्सी is feminine; the possessive agrees with the noun.) How far back does kursī go, and did it stay in one family? (Sumerian — and no, it crossed unrelated families.) Name the chapter's four sources. (Sanskrit, Persian, Portuguese, Arabic.)

Chapter 37

One Tea, Please

Modes: voice (2) eyes (2) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for tea, milk, food or a book in the words Hindi speakers actually use rather than the dictionary's, I know that कृपया belongs on a sign and दीजिए in the street, and I can name which of the four nouns take मेरी.
> Ask for all four — एक चाय दीजिए*,* एक दूध दीजिए*,* खाना दीजिए*, and the* किताब that is मेरी — then unpack the Arabic root k-t-b into book, scribe and school, and place कृपया where it belongs, beside पुस्तक at the formal end of the language.

37.1 चाय (chāy) — tea, and how to actually ask for one

You are in the chair, in the room Portuguese named.
Somebody is about to offer you this — and by the end of these few minutes you will be able to ask for it yourself, in the words people actually use.

Grammar Lens: the lean fails, quietly

चाय (chāy) = "tea," and it is feminine.
Nothing outside the word says so. It does not end in -ी the way कुर्सी does; it ends in a consonant, and the lean warned you a consonant ending tells you nothing. चाय is feminine and you simply learn it — now, with the word.

You'll want to know — how you really ask

एक चाय दीजिए (ek chāy dījie) — "one tea, please."

दीजिए is "give" spoken to आप: the polite request form. That -िए ending is the politeness. Nothing else is needed.

Which means a correction. You learnt कृपया as "please," and it is a real word — but it belongs to signs, forms and station announcements. Across a counter it lands like kindly furnish me with tea.

So: कृपया when you write, दीजिए when you speak. And you already have the shape — माफ़ कीजिए carries the very same -िए.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चाय is Chinese. In most of China the word for the leaf is chá, which Persian took as چای (chāy) and Hindi borrowed.
Now the English word: tea. French thé, Dutch thee — a different sound entirely, for the identical leaf.
They are the same word. China writes it with one character everywhere, but reads that character differently: in the Hokkien of the south-eastern coast it is tê, and Dutch ships bought their tea there.
The tempting story is overland versus sea. It is wrong: Portuguese say chá, and Portuguese tea came by sea. The variable is which Chinese port a trader dealt with. Your word for tea records a harbour.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chāy; then ek chāy dījie
- the same request for water — ek pānī dījie
- dījie and māf kījie one after the other — hear the shared -ie
- chā and tê — the two Chinese pronunciations, and which one English bought

Before you move on

Is चाय masculine or feminine, and does its ending help? (Feminine — and no, a consonant ending never does.) Where does कृपया belong, and what carries the politeness when you speak? (Signs and announcements — in speech the -िए of dījie does it.) Are chāy and tea related? (The same Chinese word, bought at two different ports.)

37.2 दूध (dūdh) — "milk," which is really a verb wearing a noun's coat

What goes into the tea. And it is named the same sly way पानी was — by what happens to it, not by what it is.

Grammar Lens: the pair that disagrees

दूध (dūdh) = "milk," and it is masculine.
Which makes these two a useful pair, because they sit side by side in every cup and disagree: चाय feminine — the leaf that came by way of a Chinese port — and दूध masculine. Both end in consonants. Neither ending tells you anything. This is the ordinary state of a Hindi noun, and it is why the gender is part of the word, not an afterthought.
एक दूध दीजिए — same request, new noun.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दूध comes from Sanskrit दुग्ध (dugdha) — and dugdha is not a noun at all. It is a past participle of the verb दुह् (duh-), "to milk." It means "milked."
So the substance is named for the act. Somebody said "the milked" often enough that the adjective hardened into a thing. You have seen this exact move already: पानी is pānīya, "the drinkable." Hindi's two commonest liquids are both named by what is done to them.
Behind duh- stands the old root $\boldsymbol{d^h ewg^h}$-, and its meaning is broader than milk: "to yield, to be strong, to be of use." Greek teúkhein, "to produce," is from it, and so is English doughty, "stout, valiant."
One trap, since the shape invites it: English dough is not related. It comes from a different root meaning "to knead, to form." Dūdh and dough look like cousins and are strangers.

Your turn

- Say it: dūdh; then ek dūdh dījie

- Say it: the disagreeing pair — chāy feminine, dūdh masculine
- Say it: what each one literally is — dugdha, "the milked"; pānīya, "the drinkable"
- Say it: dūdh and dough — and that they are not related
- Recall: say lenā, then say pūchnā
- Read it: मदद करना

Before you move on

What part of speech was dugdha before it was milk? (A past participle — "milked.") Which Hindi word plays the same trick, and how? (पानी — pānīya, "the drinkable thing.") Is English dough a cousin of dūdh? (No — different root; doughty is the real one.)

37.3 खाना (khānā) — "food," and the dot that separates it from a house

Drink is behind you. This is the general word for what you eat — and it has a twin on the page that means something else entirely.

The letters in this word

खा · ना — two syllables, and the ा does both.

ख (kha) takes ा → खा. Then न (na), your very first letter, takes ा → ना. The ा is the mātrā that replaces a consonant's built-in a with a long one, exactly as in नाम.

Two consonants, one mark used twice, and the word is yours.

Grammar Lens: one word doing two jobs

खाना (khānā) = "food," and it is masculine — long -ā, and this time the lean holds. Unlike दूध, whose name is a participle, this one is plainly a thing.

It is also the verb "to eat." Same spelling, same sound: the infinitive doubles as a noun, the way English says the eating was good.

So खाना दीजिए is "give me food," and खाना alone can be the act. Which one you mean, the sentence decides.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Both come from Sanskrit खाद् (khād-), "to eat" — the noun through खादन (khādana), "the act of eating, food," and the verb through खादति (khādati), "eats."
Now the twin. Hindi also has ख़ाना (khāna) — with the nuqta under the first letter — and it is Persian, خانه (xāna), "house, compartment, section." You meet it inside दवाख़ाना (davākhāna), a "medicine-house": a pharmacy.
Two unrelated words, one from Sanskrit and one from Persian, separated on the page by a single dot. And here is the honest part: that dot is very often left off. In ordinary printing and handwriting both are simply written खाना, and the reader is expected to sort it out from context. The nuqta tells you where a sound came from — when somebody bothers to write it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- khānā; then khānā dījie
- the three requests together — ek chāy dījie, ek dūdh dījie, khānā dījie
- roṭī and khānā — the particular bread and the general word for food
- khānā and khāna — food and house; then davākhāna, the medicine-house

Before you move on

What two jobs does खाना do? (Food, and the verb to eat.) What is ख़ाना, and where does it come from? (House, compartment — Persian خانه, as in davākhāna.) Can you always tell them apart on the page? (No — the nuqta is often dropped, and context decides.)

37.4 किताब (kitāb) — a book, and the root it is cut from

Not something to eat — something to ask for. Its Arabic root hands you three more words free.

The letters in this word

कि · ता · ब — the first mark is the tricky one.

क with the short ि gives कि (ki): the ि is drawn to the left of क and sounded after it, never ik. Then ता, then ब keeping its built-in a.

क and त showed you Devanagari's mouth-map: क far back at the soft palate, त at the teeth. Say ki-tā-b and feel the tongue travel.

Grammar Lens: feminine, and no ending to prove it

किताब (kitāb) = "book," and it is feminine — मेरी किताब.
The second consonant-final noun to turn out feminine, after चाय. Two of this chapter's four disobey any guess their shape allows.
Which is the real lesson: Hindi gender is information about the word, not the thing and not the spelling.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

किताब is Arabic, كتاب, come by the Persian road कुर्सी took.
Arabic builds words on three-consonant roots, and this one is k-t-b, "write." Slot those three into different patterns and a family appears:

- كتاب kitāb — a book, the thing written.
- كاتب kātib — a scribe, the one writing.
- مكتب maktab — a place of writing: an office, a school.

Learn the root and you have a family, which is how much of Hindi's Perso-Arabic vocabulary is built underneath.

You'll want to know — three books, three registers

Hindi has three words for a book, and they are not synonyms — they are registers.

- किताब — Perso-Arabic, the ordinary word. Say this one.
- पुस्तक (pustak) — straight out of Sanskrit. Libraries, textbooks, formal writing.
- पोथा (pothā) — the inherited descendant of that Sanskrit word. Old, homely, a bit dusty.

You have met this split: कृपया is the pustak end of "please," दीजिए the kitāb end.

And that is the chapter — चाय from a Chinese port, दूध named for what was done to it, खाना shadowed by a Persian house, किताब cut from an Arabic root.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kitāb, then merī kitāb
- the chapter's four — merī chāy, merā dūdh, merā khānā, merī kitāb
- the k-t-b family — kitāb, kātib, maktab
- kṛpayā for the sign; ek chāy dījie and māf kījie for the street

Before you move on

Which two words here are feminine, and does their shape say so? (चाय and किताब — no, both end in consonants.) Give the k-t-b family. (Kitāb, kātib, maktab.) Which word for "book" do you say, and which belongs with कृपया? (किताब — पुस्तक is the formal one.)

Chapter 38

Six Words for Where It Hurts

Modes: voice (1) eyes (3) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name six parts of my body, say that one of them is not well, and tell which three are word-for-word cousins of their English translations — and which one has no traceable ancestry at all.
> Say all six body words with the possessive each one demands — मेरा सिर*,* मेरा हाथ*,* मेरी आँख*,* मेरा दाँत*,* मेरा पैर*,* मेरा पेट — then say मेरा पेट ठीक नहीं है, and separate the three exact Indo-European cousins from the two words, पेट and रोटी, whose histories genuinely stop.

38.1 आँख (āṁkh) — the eye, which is the same word in English

You have a head and a hand. Here is the part of the face — and this one is not merely related to its English translation. It is the same word.

The letters in this word

आँ · ख — and the mark on top is an old friend.

आ is the standalone long ā. Over it sits ँ, the chandrabindu, the moon-dot, which sends the vowel up through the nose — exactly what it does in हाँ. Then ख (kha), breathy, with its inherent a still attached.

So the word is a nasalised ā followed by kh: āṁkh, humming at the start.

Grammar Lens: feminine, and one you will use daily

आँख (āṁkh) = "eye," and it is feminine — मेरी आँख.
Third feminine noun, third consonant ending: चाय, किताब, आँख. If you were still hoping the spelling would rescue you, let this settle it.
And it is worth the effort, because these are the words a doctor asks about. मेरी आँख ठीक नहीं है — "my eye is not well."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आँख comes from Sanskrit अक्षि (akṣi), "eye" — and akṣi comes from the root h₃ek^w-, which is one of the securest words in the whole family.
Its descendants:

- Latin oculus — inside English ocular, monocle, binoculars.
- Old English ēage, which is English eye itself.
- Lithuanian akìs, Armenian akn, and Greek ósse, the old dual form meaning "the two eyes."

A caution on the Greek, because the obvious candidate is a trap: ophthalmós is usually connected here, but its first part has never been explained, and serious opinion treats it as a pre-Greek word. Cite ósse and stay honest.
हाथ had to travel a long, battered road from hasta. आँख barely travelled at all — akṣi to āṁkh is a short, clean walk, and at the far end of it an English speaker is saying a version of the same word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āṁkh, then merī āṁkh
- the three body words you now have — sir, hāth, āṁkh
- hāṁ and āṁkh — the same moon-dot, the same hum
- akṣi, oculus, eye — one root, three languages

Before you move on

Is आँख masculine or feminine? (Feminine — merī āṁkh.) Which Greek word is the safe cousin, and which is the trap? (ósse is safe; ophthalmós is unexplained.) What does the ँ over the आ do, and where did you first meet it? (Nasalises the vowel — on हाँ.)

38.2 दाँत (dāṁt) — the tooth, and the gender trap of this chapter

Built like the last word, spelled like the last word, and the opposite gender. This is the pair learners get wrong most often.

The letters in this word

दाँ · त — three known parts and no new letter at all.

द (da) takes ा, and the ँ rides above the head-line for the nasal hum — the same chandrabindu that turns ह into हाँ, "yes." Then त (ta).

Both द and त are made at the teeth — which is the whole point of Devanagari's mouth-map. The word for tooth is spelled with the two consonants your tongue makes against your teeth. Say dāṁt and feel where it happens.

Grammar Lens: the trap

दाँत (dāṁt) = "tooth," and it is masculine — मेरा दाँत.
Now put the two side by side. आँख and दाँत: same long ā, same chandrabindu, same single final consonant, both parts of the body, both everyday. आँख is feminine. दाँत is masculine.
There is no rule underneath that. There is no reasoning that gets you from one to the other. This is the pair to hold up whenever you are tempted to guess: मेरी आँख, मेरा दाँत.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दाँत is Sanskrit दन्त (danta), from h₃dónts — and like akṣi this is one of the family's best-attested words.

- Latin dēns, stem dentis — English dentist, dental, trident (a "three-tooth").

- Greek odoús — English odontology.
- Old English tōþ, which is tooth.

Two body parts in a row, both plain cousins of their English translations. That is not a coincidence about eyes and teeth; it is what a core inherited vocabulary looks like from the inside.
And the older reading of h₃dónts makes it a participle of h₃ed-, "to bite" — so a tooth is "the biting one," which is what खाना needs it for. Same move as दूध, "the milked one": name the thing after what happens.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dāṁt, then merā dāṁt
- the trap pair, twice — merī āṁkh, merā dāṁt; again
- hāṁ, then dāṁt — the same moon-dot doing the same job
- danta, dēns, odoús, tooth — one word, four languages
- the two "named for the action" words — dugdha, the milked; the tooth, the biting one

Before you move on

आँख and दाँत look alike — do they share a gender? (No — merī āṁkh, merā dāṁt.) Which English words carry the Latin form? (Dentist, dental, trident.) What does the older reading make a tooth? (The biting one — from a root meaning "to bite.")

38.3 पैर (pair) — the foot, and the ancestor it does not have

Down from the head, past the hand, to what carries you. And this word's obvious ancestor turns out to belong to a different Hindi word.

Grammar Lens: masculine, and the sentence that uses it

पैर (pair) = "foot," and it is masculine — मेरा पैर.
The ै is a single mātrā for one vowel, ai — not a then i. One sign, one sound, sitting above the head-line on प.
Now the sentence you would actually say to a doctor, using the नहीं you already have: मेरा पैर ठीक नहीं है — "my foot is not well." Watch the नहीं sit directly before है, which is where Hindi puts its negation.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Here is the obvious guess, and it is wrong. Sanskrit has पाद (pāda), "foot" — long ā, famous, the source of English's borrowed pada- words. It looks like it must be the parent of pair. It is not.
पाँव (pāṁv), Hindi's other everyday word for foot, is the descendant of पाद. पैर comes from the shorter Sanskrit stem पद् (pad-), through Prakrit paya, picking up a Middle Indo-Aryan -ra- ending on the way. So Hindi inherited the same body part twice, down two different stems of the same word — and both survive, side by side, meaning the same thing.
Further back both are ped-, "to walk, to tread":

- Latin pēs, stem pedis — pedal, pedestrian, pedicure.
- Greek poús, stem podós — podium, and the eight of an octopus.
- Old English fōt, which is foot.

Three body words in three lessons, and every one of them is the same word your own language uses. हाथ had to be argued for through a sound change. These three simply are the cousins.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pair, then merā pair
- the four body words with their possessives — merā hāth, merī āṁkh, merā dāṁt, merā pair
- merā pair ṭhīk nahīṁ hai — and hear where the nahīṁ sits

- which Hindi word came from pāda, and which from pad- (pāṁv; pair)

Before you move on

Does पैर come from पाद? (No — from पद्; पाँव is the pāda one.) Which English words carry the Latin and Greek forms? (Pedal, pedestrian; podium, octopus.) Say "my foot is not well," and say where नहीं goes. (Merā pair ṭhīk nahīṁ hai — immediately before है.)

38.4 पेट (peṭ) — the belly, and a trail that genuinely stops

Three clean cousins in a row. This one breaks the run — and the break is worth more than another neat answer.

The letters in this word

पे · ट — one known letter, one known mātrā, one consonant to feel.

प takes े, the mātrā that perches on the head-line and turns the built-in a into e — the second of the two vowel signs you practised on नाम and मेरा.

Then ट: a retroflex ṭ, tongue-tip curled back, not the त of दाँत made flat against the teeth. Say dāṁt, then peṭ.

Grammar Lens: masculine, and the whole set together

पेट (peṭ) = "stomach, belly," and it is masculine — मेरा पेट.
Now you can answer a doctor, and exactly one of the six takes मेरी: merā sir, merā hāth, merī āṁkh, merā dāṁt, merā pair, merā peṭ — feminine company for कुर्सी and किताब.
The sentence, with नहीं in its usual place just before है: मेरा पेट ठीक नहीं है — which, said in India, means what it says and rather more.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पेट goes back to Prakrit पेट्ट (peṭṭa) — and there the clean line ends. The mainstream account treats it as a Dravidian word taken into Indo-Aryan; compare reconstructed Dravidian poṭṭ-. Turner's comparative dictionary does not name Dravidian, but neither does he derive peṭṭa from any Sanskrit word: he only remarks that it sits close to Indo-Aryan words for "basket." That resemblance is a note, not a derivation, and it is often quoted as one.

So: the origin of पेट is unsettled, with Dravidian leading — the honesty रोटी needed, one lesson away from पानी, whose story is exact. A language is made of what people said, and some of that came from neighbours speaking something else.
There is even a fingerprint: the retroflex consonants, the ट you just curled your tongue for, are the feature of Indian Indo-Aryan most often credited to long contact with Dravidian.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all six — merā sir, merā hāth, merī āṁkh, merā dāṁt, merā pair, merā peṭ
- merā peṭ ṭhīk nahīṁ hai; then merī āṁkh ṭhīk nahīṁ hai
- every feminine noun you own — kursī, chāy, kitāb, āṁkh
- the three exact ancestries — āṁkh, dāṁt, pair; then the two unsettled — peṭ, roṭī

Before you move on

Where does पेट come from? (Unsettled — Prakrit peṭṭa, most likely a Dravidian loan; the "basket" link is a resemblance.) Of your six body words, which takes मेरी? (आँख.) Which earlier word had the same honest dead end? (रोटी, beside पानी.)

Chapter 39

The People Around You

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 4 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the friend, the child, the man and the woman around me, I know that दोस्त takes its possessive from the person while आँख never does, and I can choose between औरत and महिला by register.
> Say the whole household with every possessive right — मेरा पिता, मेरी माता, मेरा भाई*,* मेरी बहन*,* मेरा बच्चा, मेरी बच्ची — then मेरा दोस्त or मेरी दोस्त depending on who the friend is, and say why Arabic ᶜ*awra does not mean "woman" even though* औरत does.

39.1 दोस्त (dost) — the friend, who is "the one chosen"

You can name a brother and a sister. Here is the person you picked rather than were given, and the word says exactly that.

The letters in this word

दो · स्त — an ending you have already assembled by hand.

द with ो gives दो. Then स्त — स stripped of its built-in a by the virāma, fusing with त into one conjunct: the cluster inside नमस्ते, the first conjunct you ever wrote.

So मेरा दोस्त is built entirely from strokes already yours.

Grammar Lens: the noun that leans on who you mean

दोस्त (dost) = "friend," and in the dictionary it is masculine — मेरा दोस्त.
But it bends. When the friend is a woman, ordinary modern Hindi says मेरी दोस्त. The word has not changed shape; the possessive followed the person. Both are current; neither is a mistake.
That is unlike everything so far. आँख is feminine whatever you mean. दोस्त takes its gender from who the friend is.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दोस्त is Persian, دوست (dōst); Old Persian had dauštā, an agent noun, "the one held dear."
Its root is ǵews-, and the old meaning is not "love" but "to taste, to try, to choose." Sanskrit inherited it as जुष् (juṣ-). Latin has gustāre — English gusto, disgust — and English choose is the same root.
So a dōst is one you have tried and chosen; the narrowing to "beloved" happened inside the Indo-Iranian branch alone.

You'll want to know — why it starts with a d

The consonant at the front of this root came out as z- in Avestan and d- in Old Persian, by a regular sound law across the vocabulary.

Which is why "friend" starts with द in Persian and Hindi while its Sanskrit cousin juṣ- starts with something else. An initial consonant is a passport stamp: it says which road the word came by.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- merā dost for a man, merī dost for a woman
- the given and the chosen — merā bhāī, merī bahin, merā dost
- namaste, then dost — one conjunct
- dōst, juṣ-, gustāre, choose

Before you move on

How do you say "my friend" about a woman? (मेरी दोस्त — the possessive follows the person.) What did the root behind dōst first mean? (To taste, try, choose.) Why does Persian say d- where Avestan says z-? (A regular sound law.)

39.2 बच्चा / बच्ची / बछड़ा — children and the inherited "yearling"

You have पिता and माता. Here is the third person at that table.

Grammar Lens: a pair you can see

बच्चा (bacchā) = "child," masculine — मेरा बच्चा.
Swap the final -ा for -ी and you get बच्ची (bacchī), a girl child, feminine — मेरी बच्ची.
This is what दरवाज़ा and कुर्सी only hinted at: for this class of noun -ā/-ī is not a lean but the machinery, and the word changes with the person. Which is exactly what दोस्त would not do.
You already know how to ask this child's age: कितने साल के हो? — how many years someone is of, rather than how many they have.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बच्चा is usually traced to Persian, بچه (bacca), and the obvious story about it is wrong.
Persian bacca did not come from Sanskrit वत्स (vatsa), "calf." They are sisters, one Indo-Iranian word down two branches, and Hindi had already inherited the Sanskrit one as बछड़ा (bachṛā), "calf" (CDIAL 11241 records it as bacheṛā, under vatsatara).
So Hindi holds both, one word by two roads, as with दरवाज़ा and द्वार, through the Persian relay that brought दोस्त.
Behind both stands wet-, "year": Latin vetus, "old," and vitulus, "calf," and English wether, a yearling sheep.
CDIAL offers another road: it sets Panjabi baccā, "child", under Sanskrit apatya, "offspring" (CDIAL 424), and its addenda beside Persian bača (CDIAL 14226). Hindi is listed in neither, so the Persian road is usual, not settled.

On that road, a child is a yearling, named by age, where पिता and माता are named by relationship.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bacchā and bacchī; then merā bacchā, merī bacchī
- the family — merā pitā, merī mātā, merā bacchā
- the two roads — bacchā usually from Persian, bachṛā inherited; one word
- vetus, vitulus, wether — and the meaning under all of them (year)

Before you move on

What is the feminine of बच्चा, and how does the possessive move? (बच्ची — merā bacchā, merī bacchī.) Is Persian bacca descended from Sanskrit vatsa? (No — they are sisters; Hindi's inherited cousin is बछड़ा.) What does the root mean? (Year — a child is a yearling.)

39.3 आदमी (ādmī) — the man, and the lean breaking backwards

The child has grown up. And this word does what none so far has — it ends in -ी and is masculine anyway.

Grammar Lens: the lean breaks the other way

आदमी (ādmī) = "man, person," and it is masculine. Say एक आदमी — it is also the ordinary word for "person" in general, and stays masculine doing that. Ask कितने साल के हो? of him and you are asking how many years he is of, the way Hindi counts age.
A warning before you reach for the possessive: मेरा आदमी is real Hindi but means what English's my man means. Keep एक आदमी.
The gender still shows the instant anything agrees with the noun. Put it beside कुर्सी: both end in long -ी, one is feminine, one masculine, and no reasoning takes you from the ending to the answer. Beside बच्चा / बच्ची, where the ending does carry the gender, the contrast is sharper. So the lean has failed in both directions: चाय and किताब feminine with no -ी, आदमी masculine with one.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आदमी is Arabic, آدمي (ādamī), and it came the Persian way — the road of कुर्सी and किताब.
Now the ending. That -ī is not Hindi at all. It is the Arabic ending meaning "belonging to, of the kind of." Attach it to آدم (Ādam) and you get "of Adam." A human being, in this word, is one of Adam's.
آدم is Hebrew ʾādām, and here care is needed. You have probably heard that ʾādām comes from ʾadāmāh, "ground" — man made of earth. Genesis sets the two side by side and means you to notice: a deliberate pun, and a famous one.
It is not the etymology. The prevailing view links the root ʾ-d-m to redness — behind Hebrew ʾādōm, "red," and Edom. Beyond that, unsettled.
Worth keeping: a wordplay a text makes on purpose is not where a word came from.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ādmī, then ek ādmī
- kursī feminine, ādmī masculine; then merī kursī, and stop
- the lean, and both ways it fails — chāy, kitāb, ādmī
- what the -ī on ādamī means

Before you move on

कुर्सी and आदमी end alike — same gender? (No.) What is the -ī of ādamī doing? (Arabic "belonging to" — "of Adam.") Is ʾādām from the word for ground? (No — Genesis is making a deliberate pun; the root is usually connected to redness.)

39.4 औरत (aurat) — the word for "woman," and which one to use

The last word of the chapter, and the one where Hindi hands you a choice rather than a word.

Grammar Lens: the pair, and the family complete

औरत (aurat) = "woman," and it is feminine. Say एक औरत — and for the reason एक आदमी was the safe phrase, leave मेरी औरत alone: it means my woman, a wife. औ is one vowel letter, au, standing alone. Consonant ending, feminine — as चाय, किताब and आँख were. Beside it आदमी: -ी ending, masculine. Neither adult's gender is reachable from spelling. Where you can hear the agreement is on the child: मेरा बच्चा, मेरी बच्ची, the yearling who takes the ending seriously.
The family: पिता, माता, bhāī, बहन, बच्चा, आदमी, औरत — and the chosen one, दोस्त.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Then the fact that changes what you do with all that: Arabic ᶜawra does not mean "woman." That sense is a Persian development. Persian moved the noun to mean a woman or a wife and handed that to Hindi and Urdu, on record from around 1420 — the same Persian relay that carried दोस्त.
So the harsh root sense is not a claim Arabic makes about women. It is the earlier life of a word another language repurposed.

You'll want to know — three words, and which to say

Three words, and the choice is register, exactly as for किताब / पुस्तक / पोथा.

- औरत — Perso-Arabic, plain and everyday. Common in speech; some speakers avoid it formally, partly because of the origin above.
- महिला (mahilā) — a Sanskrit borrowing, the respectful, public word: signs, announcements, official prose. Its Sanskrit origin is uncertain; one serious proposal traces it to Dravidian.

- स्त्री (strī) — Sanskrit, older and literary. Secure back to Indo-Iranian, no further.

महिला where you would write, औरत where you would talk.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ek aurat, then ek ādmī — neither ending gives its gender away
- merā pitā, merī mātā, merā bhāī, merī bahin, merā bacchā, merī bacchī
- merā dost, then merī dost
- every feminine noun you own — kursī, chāy, kitāb, āṁkh, bacchī

Before you move on

Does Arabic عورة mean "woman"? (No — that sense is Persian.) Which goes on a public sign, which in conversation? (महिला written; औरत spoken.) Your family, minding every possessive? (Merā pitā, merī mātā, merā bhāī, merī bahin, merā bacchā.)

39.5 औ — the standing form, and the longest build

You have said औरत (aurat), "woman". Its first letter is the one this lesson writes.

Before the new one: ौ — how does it differ from ो?

That mark has a standing form, and it is the most elaborate character in this book.

Script you'll notice: औ

औ — au.

Same vowel, standing on its own with no consonant to ride on. Like झ, it arrives before any word that needs it, so there is nothing to find it inside yet.

What it is made of:

- the joined upper and lower bowls of अ
- a middle shoulder running into the inner stem
- the inner stem
- the trailing stem
- two separate upper arcs
- the top shirorekhā

Script: built out of a letter you have

what you see	what it is
अ	the base, taught long ago
two upper arcs	what makes it au
ौ	the same vowel, riding on a consonant

The two arcs are the same two that the sitting mark carries above the bar. Whichever posture the vowel is in, au is the one with a pair of strokes — one idea, two shapes, and a count that decides it.

Writing: औ

How औ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. curve right around the upper bowl and continue down and around the lower bowl without lifting

- 2. lift and sweep the middle shoulder right
- 3. without lifting, climb up the inner stem to the headline
- 4. descend the inner stem
- 5. lift and descend the trailing stem
- 6. lift at the trailing stem's headline junction and sweep the lower upper arc upward and left
- 7. lift at the same junction and sweep the taller upper arc upward and left
- 8. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 5. One more than ओ, and more than any other — take it slowly.

> The source shows seven movements; most native writers draw औ in six strokes (60% of HP Labs India's native-writer samples). This path keeps every movement in order and lifts five times; only the shoulder runs on, up the inner stem.
> This is one attested teaching order and not a national standard — handwriting here is taught with school-to-school variation. Source: Saurmandal, 'Devanagari औ stroke order.svg', panels 1–7, Wikimedia Commons, 5 August 2023.

Your turn

- Look: at the mark and the letter side by side, and count the arcs on each ौ · औ

- Trace it: औ once, slowly, counting the lifts
- Say it: which base letter you can see inside it

Before you move on

What sound is औ? (au.) What is its sitting form? (ौ.) How many pen lifts does it take? (Five — one more than ओ, the most in the book.)

Chapter 40

Pointing, and Asking

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can point at something in Hindi and ask who or where it is — and I can say what the six words have in common.
> Say the near word, the far word and the question word in a row, and name the part that changed.

40.1 यह (yah) — this one — the thing near me

You can already name things. This is how you POINT at them.

You'll want to know: यह

यह — yah — this one — the thing near me.

Say it, and picture the thing it lands on as you say it. That is the whole word: it does not mean anything on its own, it means whatever the speaker is pointing at.

Its partner, the far one, comes in the next lesson. The two of them differ by one sound at the front — y- for near — and that is not a coincidence. It is the whole system, and the last lesson of this chapter says so.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

यह (yah) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from eṣa, "this" (CDIAL 2530).

Your turn

- Say it: "यह" three times, picturing something different each time
- Say it: it once with a word you already know after it
- Recall: say dūdh
- Read it: आँख

Before you move on

What is yah? (this one — the thing near me.) What sound does it start with, and does that sound mean near, far, or a question? (y- — near.)

40.2 वह (vah) — that one — the thing over there

You can already name things. This is how you POINT at them.

You'll want to know: वह

वह — vah — that one — the thing over there.

Say it, and picture the thing it lands on as you say it. That is the whole word: it does not mean anything on its own, it means whatever the speaker is pointing at.

Its partner is यह yah, which you met in the last lesson. The two of them differ by one sound at the front — v- for far — and that is not a coincidence. It is the whole system, and the last lesson of this chapter says so.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वह (vah) is inherited. CDIAL lists it under Sanskrit asau, "that", and notes that the other forms of that word, built on a stem amu-, gave the later words for "that" (CDIAL 972).

Your turn

- Say it: "वह" three times, picturing something different each time
- Say it: it once with a word you already know after it
- Read it: दाँत

Before you move on

What is vah? (that one — the thing over there.) What sound does it start with, and does that sound mean near, far, or a question? (v- — far.)

40.3 यहाँ (yahã̃) — here — where I am

You can already name things. This is how you POINT at them.

You'll want to know: यहाँ

यहाँ — yahã̃ — here — where I am.

Say it, and picture the thing it lands on as you say it. That is the whole word: it does not mean anything on its own, it means whatever the speaker is pointing at.

Its partner, the far one, comes in the next lesson. The two of them differ by one sound at the front — y- for near — as यह and वह do, and that is not a coincidence. It is the whole system, and the last lesson of this chapter says so.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

यहाँ (yahāṁ) is inherited. CDIAL sets it beside Sanskrit iha, "here", as a form ultimately connected with it rather than its direct descendant (CDIAL 1605).

Your turn

- Say it: "यहाँ" three times, picturing something different each time
- Say it: it once with a word you already know after it
- Recall: say khānā

Before you move on

What is yahã̃? (here — where I am.) What sound does it start with, and does that sound mean near, far, or a question? (y- — near.)

40.4 वहाँ (vahā̃) — there — where I am not

You can already name things. This is how you POINT at them.

You'll want to know: वहाँ

वहाँ — vahā̃ — there — where I am not.

Say it, and picture the thing it lands on as you say it. That is the whole word: it does not mean anything on its own, it means whatever the speaker is pointing at.

Its partner is यहाँ yahā̃, which you met in the last lesson. The two of them differ by one sound at the front — v- for far — and that is not a coincidence. It is the whole system, and the last lesson of this chapter says so.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वहाँ (vahāṁ) pairs the stem of वह, "that", with the same place ending -hāṁ that यहाँ, "here", has. CDIAL has no entry for it, so its older history is uncertain.

Your turn

- Say it: "वहाँ" three times, picturing something different each time
- Say it: it once with a word you already know after it
- Read it: पैर / पाँव

Before you move on

What is vahā̃? (there — where I am not.) What sound does it start with, and does that sound mean near, far, or a question? (v- — far.)

40.5 कौन (kaun) — who? — asking about a person

You can already name things. This is how you ASK about them.

You'll want to know: कौन

कौन — kaun — who? — asking about a person.

Say it with an asking voice. It points at no one: it asks your listener to name the person.

Its partner, the question word for place, comes in the next lesson, and it opens with the same k-. That is the pattern: the near words you know open with y- (यह yah, यहाँ yahā̃), the far ones with v- (वह vah, वहाँ vahā̃), and the asking words with k-. The last lesson of this chapter lays it out.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कौन (kaun) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from kaḥ punar, literally "who, then", which CDIAL glosses "who" (CDIAL 2575).

Your turn

- Say it: "कौन" three times, asking about a different person each time
- Say it: it once with a word you already know after it
- Recall: say kitāb / pustak / pothā
- Read it: पेट

Before you move on

What is kaun? (who? — asking about a person.) What sound does it start with, and does that sound mean near, far, or a question? (k- — ask.)

40.6 कहाँ (kahā̃) — where? — asking about a place

You can already name things. This is how you ASK about them.

You'll want to know: कहाँ

कहाँ — kahā̃ — where? — asking about a place.

Say it with an asking voice. It points at no place: it asks your listener to point one out.

Its partner is कौन kaun, which you met in the last lesson: both open with k-, the asking sound. Its other partners, यहाँ yahā̃ and वहाँ vahā̃, differ from it only at the front. That is the whole system, and the last lesson of this chapter says so.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कहाँ (kahāṁ) pairs the question stem k- of क्या and कौन with the place ending -hāṁ of यहाँ, "here", and वहाँ, "there". CDIAL has no entry for it, so its older history is uncertain.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "कहाँ" three times, asking about a different place each time
- it once with a word you already know after it

Before you move on

What is kahā̃? (where? — asking about a place.) What sound does it start with, and does that sound mean near, far, or a question? (k- — ask.)

40.7 y- / v- / k- — six words, one machine

Say the six words from this chapter out loud, in order. Listen to how they begin.

Grammar lens: one slot changes

You did not learn six words. You learned three beginnings and reused them.

meaning	word
near	यहाँ yahā̃
far	वहाँ vahā̃
question	कहाँ kahā̃

Hindi runs the same machine on different consonants: यहाँ, वहाँ, कहाँ. Change the front, and the meaning walks from near to far to a question. Nothing else in the word moves.
The same three beginnings run the thing-words too: यह yah and वह vah start exactly like the first two rows. This chapter did not teach you the matching question word for things — that one arrives later, and when it does you will already know what it has to start with. This is worth more than the six words are. When you meet a new word in this family later, you will not have to be taught all three of it — you will be taught one and work out the others.

Your turn

- Say it: the near word, then the far word, then the question word
- Say it: them again for place, not for things
- Notice: the part that did NOT change

Before you move on

Which beginning means near? (y-) Far? (v-) And which one turns the word into a question? (k-)

Chapter 41

Describing Things

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can point at something in Hindi and ask who or where it is — and I can say what the six words have in common.
> Say the near word, the far word and the question word in a row, and name the part that changed.

41.1 बड़ा (baṛā) — big

You can already name things. This is how you DESCRIBE them.

You'll want to know: बड़ा

बड़ा — baṛā — big.

Put it in front of a word you already know and you have said something new. That is all an adjective does in this language.

The last lesson of this chapter gives the one rule that governs every adjective you will ever meet here.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बड़ा (baṛā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from vaḍra, "big" (CDIAL 11225). CDIAL notes that the Sanskrit word is known only from the old word-lists, and doubts a link with vṛddha, "grown".

Your turn

- Say it: "बड़ा" three times, picturing something different each time
- Say it: it once with a word you already know after it
- Recall: say dost
- Read it: यह
- Recall: say vah

Before you move on

What is baṛā? (big.) Where does it go — before the word it describes, or after? (Before.)

41.2 छोटा (choṭā) — small

You can already name things. This is how you DESCRIBE them.

You'll want to know: छोटा

छोटा — choṭā — small.

Put it in front of a word you already know and you have said something new. That is all an adjective does in this language.

You met बड़ा baṛā a moment ago. Put them side by side and nothing about either one changes.

The last lesson of this chapter gives the one rule that governs every adjective you will ever meet here.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

छोटा (choṭā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from choṭṭa*, "small", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 5071).

Your turn

- Say it: "छोटा" three times, picturing something different each time

- Say it: it once with a word you already know after it
- Read it: बच्चा
- Recall: say yahā̃

Before you move on

What is choṭā? (small.) Where does it go — before the word it describes, or after? (Before.)

41.3 अच्छा (acchā) — good

You can already name things. This is how you DESCRIBE them.

You'll want to know: अच्छा

अच्छा — acchā — good.

Put it in front of a word you already know and you have said something new. That is all an adjective does in this language.

You met छोटा choṭā a moment ago. Put them side by side and nothing about either one changes.

The last lesson of this chapter gives the one rule that governs every adjective you will ever meet here.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अच्छा (acchā) goes back to Sanskrit accha, "clear, transparent" (CDIAL 142). CDIAL lists Hindi āchā, "good", and marks acchā itself as taken over from Punjabi. CDIAL adds that the Sanskrit word may once have meant "shadowless".

Your turn

- Say it: "अच्छा" three times, picturing something different each time
- Say it: it once with a word you already know after it
- Recall: say ādmī
- Read it: वहाँ

Before you move on

What is acchā? (good.) Where does it go — before the word it describes, or after? (Before.)

41.4 नया (nayā) — new

You can already name things. This is how you DESCRIBE them.

You'll want to know: नया

नया — nayā — new.

Put it in front of a word you already know and you have said something new. That is all an adjective does in this language.

You met अच्छा acchā a moment ago. Put them side by side and nothing about either one changes.

The last lesson of this chapter gives the one rule that governs every adjective you will ever meet here.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

नया (nayā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from naviya, a by-form of Sanskrit navya, "new", which the Rigveda uses where the metre needs an extra syllable. CDIAL lists Hindi nayā and its feminine naī under naviya (CDIAL 7025).

Your turn

- Say it: "नया" three times, picturing something different each time
- Say it: it once with a word you already know after it
- Recall: say aurat / mahilā / strī, then say kaun

Before you move on

What is nayā? (new.) Where does it go — before the word it describes, or after? (Before.)

41.5 पुराना (purānā) — old — of a thing, not of a person

You can already name things. This is how you DESCRIBE them.

You'll want to know: पुराना

पुराना — purānā — old — of a thing, not of a person.

Put it in front of a word you already know and you have said something new. That is all an adjective does in this language.

You met नया nayā a moment ago. Put them side by side and nothing about either one changes.

The last lesson of this chapter gives the one rule that governs every adjective you will ever meet here.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पुराना (purānā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from purāṇa, "ancient" (CDIAL 8283).

Your turn

- Say it: "पुराना" three times, picturing something different each time
- Say it: it once with a word you already know after it
- Recall: say kahā̃

Before you move on

What is purānā? (old — of a thing, not of a person.) Where does it go — before the word it describes, or after? (Before.)

41.6 before the noun, and it AGREES — five words, one rule

Say the five words from this chapter out loud, then say each one in front of a noun you already know.

Grammar lens: where an adjective goes

You did not learn five separate words. You learned where an adjective goes, and five words that go there.

meaning	word
big	बड़ा baṛā
small	छोटा choṭā
good	अच्छा acchā

Hindi is the one that changes: बड़ा for a masculine noun, बड़ी for a feminine one.

This is worth more than the five words are. Every noun you already know — your name, the house, the water, the day — can now take any of them in front, and every adjective you meet from here goes in the same place.

Your turn

- Say it: each of the five in front of a noun you already know
- Say it: two of them with the same noun, one after the other
- Notice: whether the adjective changed shape when the noun did

Before you move on

Where does an adjective go in this language? (In front of the noun.) Does it change shape to match the noun? (and it AGREES.)

Chapter 42

More Everyday Verbs

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name four everyday actions in Hindi and recognise the infinitive ending they share.
> Complete HI-C42-give and say all four verbs in order.

42.1 आना / आता / आती / आते — to come and its present forms

A short run of everyday verbs, one at a time.

You'll want to know: आना

आना (ānā) — "to come".

Every Hindi infinitive ends in -ना (-nā), so this is 'to come' in the form a dictionary lists.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आना (ānā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. CDIAL lists it under āpayati, "causes to reach", from the verb whose old form āpa meant "came towards"; Prakrit already had āvaï, "comes" (CDIAL 1200).

What you've built

Take off -ना and add the endings you already know: आता (ātā, masculine), आती (ātī, feminine), आते (āte, respectful or plural). The action-chaining lesson will put आता हूँ after a chained action; now the form will already be yours.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ānā
- आता / आती / आते (ātā / ātī / āte)
- it again, to someone standing in a doorway

Before you move on

What does आना mean? ("to come".) Give its masculine, feminine, and respectful or plural forms. (आता / आती / आते.)

42.2 बैठना (baiṭhnā) — to sit

Before the new one: what did ānā mean?

You'll want to know: बैठना

बैठना (baiṭhnā) — "to sit".

Same -ना ending. Once you see it, you can spot an infinitive anywhere in a text without knowing the verb.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बैठना (baiṭhnā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from upaviśati, "sits down" (CDIAL 2245). The -ṭh- goes back to its past form upaviṣṭa, "seated".

What you've built

One more everyday action. Three more follow, and each reuses the ones before it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- baiṭhnā
- it again, to someone standing in a doorway
- it after ānā, so the two sit together

Before you move on

What does बैठना mean? ("to sit".) Say it once more.

42.3 खड़ा होना (khaṛā honā) — to stand

Before the new one: what did baiṭhnā mean?

You'll want to know: खड़ा होना

खड़ा होना (khaṛā honā) — "to stand".

Two words: an adjective khaṛā, 'upright', plus honā, 'to be'. Hindi builds many verbs this way, from a word plus a light verb.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खड़ा होना (khaṛā honā) is two inherited words. खड़ा (khaṛā), "standing", is listed by CDIAL under Sanskrit khaḍaka, "a bolt, a post", for which it sets up an older sense "erect" (CDIAL 3784). The same entry reconstructs a verb khaḍati*, "stands", but lists only a few hill-dialect verbs under it; khaṛā sits with the post. होना (honā), "to be, to become", comes from Sanskrit bhavati, "becomes, is" (CDIAL 9416).

What you've built

One more everyday action. Three more follow, and each reuses the ones before it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- khaṛā honā
- it again, to someone standing in a doorway
- it after baiṭhnā, so the two sit together

Before you move on

What does खड़ा होना mean? ("to stand".) Say it once more.

42.4 देना (denā) — to give

Before the new one: what did khaṛā honā mean?

You'll want to know: देना

देना (denā) — "to give".

The plain 'give', and one of the light verbs Hindi uses to build compounds of its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

देना (denā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from dadāti, "gives" (CDIAL 6141).

What you've built

One more everyday action. That closes the run: four everyday actions, each met on its own.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- denā
- it again, to someone standing in a doorway
- it after khaṛā honā, so the two sit together

Before you move on

What does देना mean? ("to give".) Say it once more.

Chapter 43

Verbs of Seeing and Saying

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name four verbs of perceiving and expressing in Hindi and recognise the infinitive ending they share.
> Complete HI-C43-write and say all four verbs in order.

43.1 देखना / देख / देखता / देखती / देखते — looking and seeing

Four verbs for taking things in and putting them out, one at a time.

You'll want to know: देखना

देखना (dekhnā) — "to look, to see."

Remove infinitive -ना to find the stem देख-. Add the present endings you already know: देखता (dekhtā, masculine), देखती (dekhtī, feminine), and देखते (dekhte, respectful or plural). Later you will use देखता हूँ with an object; now the verb form will already be yours.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

देखना (dekhnā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from dekṣati*, "sees", a variant CDIAL reconstructs beside dṛkṣati* (CDIAL 6507).

What you've built

One more regular verb. Three follow, and each reuses the ones before.

Your turn

- Say it: dekhnā
- Say it: देख / देखता / देखती / देखते (dekh / dekhtā / dekhtī / dekhte)
- Say it (m.): मैं देखता हूँ · (f.): मैं देखती हूँ
- Recall: say baṛā, then say choṭā

Before you move on

What does देखना mean? ("to look, to see.") Give its stem, then the masculine, feminine, and respectful or plural forms. (देख; देखता / देखती / देखते.)

43.2 सुनना / सुन / सुनता / सुनती / सुनते — listening and hearing

Before the new one: what did dekhnā mean?

You'll want to know: सुनना

सुनना (sunnā) — "to listen, to hear".

Hindi does not separate listening from hearing; context does the work that a second verb does in English.

Remove infinitive -ना to find the stem सुन-. Add the present endings you already know: सुनता (suntā, masculine), सुनती (suntī, feminine), and सुनते (sunte, respectful or plural). Later you will say आप सुनते हैं — "you listen."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सुनना (sunnā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from śṛṇoti, "hears" (CDIAL 12598).

What you've built

One more regular verb. Three follow, and each reuses the ones before.

Your turn

- Say it: sunnā
- Say it: सुन / सुनता / सुनती / सुनते (sun / suntā / suntī / sunte)
- Say it: "you (resp.) listen" — आप सुनते हैं (āp sunte haiṁ)
- Say it: it after dekhnā, so the two sit together
- Recall: say acchā

Before you move on

What does सुनना mean? ("to listen, to hear".) Give its stem, then the masculine, feminine, and respectful or plural forms. (सुन; सुनता / सुनती / सुनते.)

43.3 बोलना (bolnā) — to speak

Before the new one: what did sunnā mean?

You'll want to know: बोलना

बोलना (bolnā) — "to speak".

'To speak' as an activity. Hindi has a second verb, kahnā, for saying a particular thing — the difference English draws between speak and say.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बोलना (bolnā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from boll*, "speak", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 9321). CDIAL calls a borrowing from Dravidian very doubtful.

What you've built

One more. Three follow, and each reuses the ones before.

Your turn

- Say it: bolnā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: it after sunnā, so the two sit together
- Recall: say nayā

Before you move on

What does बोलना mean? ("to speak".) Say it once more.

43.4 लिखना (likhnā) — to write

Before the new one: what did bolnā mean?

You'll want to know: लिखना

लिखना (likhnā) — "to write".

From the Sanskrit root √लिख् (likh), 'to scratch' — writing named after what a stylus did to a surface, long before ink.

What you've built

That closes the run: look, listen, speak, write.

Your turn

- Say it: likhnā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: it after bolnā, so the two sit together
- Read it: पुराना

Before you move on

What does लिखना mean? ("to write".) Say it once more.

Chapter 44

Sons, Daughters, and Everyone Else

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name four more family and people words in this language.
> Complete HI-C44-people and say all four words in order.

44.1 बेटा (beṭā) — son

Before the new one: what did likhnā mean?

You'll want to know: बेटा

बेटा (beṭā) — "son".

The everyday word, not the Sanskrit putra that formal Hindi holds in reserve. Its -ā is the masculine ending you already met on बच्चा. Where the word itself came from is genuinely unsettled: comparative dictionaries reconstruct a Middle Indo-Aryan child-word behind it, with cousins in Punjabi, Gujarati and Marathi, and no agreed Sanskrit source.

What you've built

The first of four words for the people around you. Three follow, and each reuses the ones before.

Your turn

- Say it: beṭā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: it after likhnā, so the two sit together
- Recall: say ānā

Before you move on

What does बेटा mean? ("son".) Say it once more.

44.2 बेटी (beṭī) — daughter

Before the new one: what did beṭā mean?

You'll want to know: बेटी

बेटी (beṭī) — "daughter".

The same stem, with -ī in place of -ā — exactly the swap that turns बच्चा into बच्ची. A great deal of Hindi gender lives in that one final vowel, and this pair is the cleanest example you have met so far: nothing else in the word moves.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बेटी (beṭī) is the feminine of बेटा, "son". CDIAL lists both under a reconstructed beṭṭa*, in an entry headed biḍḍa*, "defective", beside Prakrit biṭṭa, "boy" (CDIAL 9238). No Sanskrit source is agreed.

What you've built

Two of four, and one vowel doing all the work.

Your turn

- Say it: beṭī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: it after beṭā, and hear only the last vowel move

- Read it: बैठना

Before you move on

What does बेटी mean? ("daughter".) Say it once more.

44.3 परिवार (parivār) — family

Before the new one: what did beṭī mean?

You'll want to know: परिवार

परिवार (parivār) — "family".

Sanskrit, and it comes apart in the hand: pari-, 'around', on the root vṛ, 'to cover, to enclose'. Your family, in this word, is what surrounds you. The same root gives आवरण (āvaraṇ), 'a covering' — one root, two very different everyday words.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

परिवार (parivār) is Sanskrit parivāra, "surroundings; followers", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama (CDIAL 7876). Hindi narrowed it to the people around you: the family.

What you've built

Three of four, and a word you can take apart rather than memorise.

Your turn

- Say it: parivār
- Say it: it once more, slowly, hearing pari- at the front
- Say it: it after beṭī, so the two sit together
- Recall: say khaṛā honā

Before you move on

What does परिवार mean? ("family".) Say it once more.

44.4 लोग (log) — people

Before the new one: what did parivār mean?

You'll want to know: लोग

लोग (log) — "people".

Usually traced to Sanskrit लोक (loka), 'open space, world', which already meant 'people' in Manu: the word for the world slid across to mean the people in it. Latin lucus, a clearing in a forest, and lux, 'light', grow from the same ancient root — an open, lit space first, then whoever stands in it. Hindi hears लोग as already plural, so it needs no further ending.

The road is not the plain inherited one, though. CDIAL lists the worn-down Hindi descendants of loka as loī and loe, 'people', and not log (CDIAL 11119). Log keeps the shape of Prakrit loga, so it may be a semi-learned word, one that stayed closer to the older form than ordinary speech would have left it.

What you've built

That closes the run: son, daughter, family, and everyone else.

Your turn

- Say it: log
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: it after parivār, so the two sit together
- Read it: देना

Before you move on

What does लोग mean? ("people".) Say it once more.

Chapter 45

Things You Ask For

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five everyday things I might ask someone for in Hindi, and say which of them came down from Sanskrit and which walked in with Persian.
> Complete HI-C45-soap and say all five words in order.

45.1 फल (phal) — a fruit

Before the new run of words: what did parivār mean, and what did log mean?

You'll want to know: फल

फल (phal) — "a fruit".

Sanskrit phala, which named the fruit on the tree and, in the same breath, the result of anything you did. Hindi still carries both senses: the mango in your hand and the outcome of a year's work take the same word.

English readers meet the second sense in translations of the Gita, where "the fruit of action" is a word-for-word rendering rather than a figure the translator reached for. The Persian layer of Hindi later brought mevā for dried fruit and nuts, so the orchard and the shop shelf can be named separately — an inherited word and a borrowed one dividing the work between them, which is a habit worth watching for.

What you've built

The first of five things you might ask someone for.

Your turn

- Say it: phal
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: phal, then log, so the new one sits beside the last one you learned
- Recall: say dekhnā

Before you move on

What does फल mean? ("a fruit".) Say it once more.

45.2 कपड़ा (kapṛā) — cloth

Before the new one: what did phal mean?

You'll want to know: कपड़ा

कपड़ा (kapṛā) — "cloth".

The plain, unceremonious word: the bolt on the shelf, the washing on the line, the shirt on your back. Behind it is Sanskrit karpaṭa, a rag or a patched garment, and the ड़ in the middle is what a thousand years of ordinary speech did to that -ṭ- caught between two vowels.

Beside it Hindi keeps vastra, lifted from Sanskrit untouched, which turns up on a wedding invitation rather than over a washing line. Two words, one meaning, and the register telling them apart.

What you've built

Two: a fruit and a cloth.

Your turn

- Say it: kapṛā

- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: phal, then kapṛā, and ask for each with kṛpayā in front
- Read it: सुनना
- Recall: say beṭā

Before you move on

What does कपड़ा mean? ("cloth".) Say it once more.

45.3 दीया (dīyā) — an oil lamp

Before the new one: what did kapṛā mean?

You'll want to know: दीया

दीया (dīyā) — "an oil lamp".

A small clay lamp with a wick floating in oil — the kind lit in rows along a wall at Diwali. Behind it is Sanskrit dīpa, 'lamp', on the root dīp-, 'to blaze'.

The p softened away in everyday speech and left दीया behind, while the formal dīpak kept it. Diwali is that same dīpāvalī, 'a row of lamps', worn down in the same direction: the lamps are still in the name of the festival, only harder to see.

What you've built

Three: a fruit, a cloth, and a lamp.

Your turn

- Say it: dīyā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: dīyā, then kapṛā, so the two objects sit together
- Recall: say bolnā
- Read it: बेटी

Before you move on

What does दीया mean? ("an oil lamp".) Say it once more.

45.4 नमक (namak) — salt

Before the new one: what did dīyā mean?

You'll want to know: नमक

नमक (namak) — "salt".

Persian namak, taken whole, and one of the plainest examples of Hindi's second inheritance. The word that came down from Sanskrit is lavaṇa, and it survives mostly in careful writing and in chemistry, while the borrowed word does the cooking.

Persian salt also handed Hindi a measure of character: namak-halāl is someone true to the salt they have eaten at your table, and namak-harām is the one who is not. A pantry word doing moral work.

What you've built

Four, and one of them is not a thing you can hold.

Your turn

- Say it: namak
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: namak, then dīyā, then kapṛā, backwards down the run
- Read it: लिखना
- Recall: say parivār

Before you move on

What does नमक mean? ("salt".) Say it once more.

45.5 साबुन (sābun) — soap

Before the new one: what did namak mean?

You'll want to know: साबुन

साबुन (sābun) — "soap".

Arabic ṣābūn, reaching Hindi through Persian — and behind the Arabic sits Latin sāpō, which the Romans had themselves borrowed from their northern neighbours, who used the stuff on their hair before anyone used it for washing.

So the word went north to south, south to east, and arrived here. English "soap" and साबुन are the same ancient word arriving by two different roads, one short and one very long.

What you've built

Five, and the run is closed: a fruit, cloth, a lamp, salt, soap.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sābun
- it once more, slowly
- all five in order — phal, kapṛā, dīyā, namak, sābun

Before you move on

What does साबुन mean? ("soap".) Say it once more.

Chapter 46

Hair, Ear, and Throat

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five more parts of the body in Hindi, and follow the wearing-down that turned each Sanskrit word into the one people say.
> Complete HI-C46-throat and say all five words in order.

46.1 बाल (bāl) — hair

Before the new run of words: what did namak mean, and what did sābun mean?

You'll want to know: बाल

बाल (bāl) — "hair".

One hair, and by extension all the hair on a head. Sanskrit vāla, a hair or a horse's tail, stands behind it, and the turn from v- to b- is regular enough between Sanskrit and Hindi that you can use it as a rule of thumb.

Take care with its neighbour: bāl- also means 'child' in words borrowed straight from Sanskrit, as in bālak. Those are two different words that happened to fall together in sound, and only the sentence around them says which one is meant.

What you've built

The first of five more body words.

Your turn

- Say it: bāl
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: bāl, then sābun, so the washing and the washed sit together
- Recall: say beṭā
- Read it: फल

Before you move on

What does बाल mean? ("hair".) Say it once more.

46.2 उँगली (uṅglī) — a finger

Before the new one: what did bāl mean?

You'll want to know: उँगली

उँगली (uṅglī) — "a finger".

Sanskrit aṅgulī, a finger, built on aṅga, 'a limb'. That one root supports a whole small household of hand-words: aṅgūṭhā is the thumb and aṅgūṭhī is the ring that goes on it.

The mark above the line here is doing the work the ṅ used to do. The nasal consonant dissolved into the vowel and left only the little moon-and-dot behind, which is the same trade you already saw inside pāṁch.

What you've built

Two of five.

Your turn

- Say it: uṅglī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: uṅglī, then bāl, picturing each as you name it
- Read it: बेटी
- Recall: say kapṛā

Before you move on

What does उँगली mean? ("a finger".) Say it once more.

46.3 कान (kān) — an ear

Before the new one: what did uṅglī mean?

You'll want to know: कान

कान (kān) — "an ear".

Sanskrit karṇa, the ear — also the name of the warrior in the Mahabharata who was born wearing earrings. The path to कान is the ordinary one: the -rṇ- cluster collapses, the vowel that survives it lengthens, and a two-syllable word becomes one.

The same collapse is what turned suvarṇa, 'good colour', into sonā, gold. Once you have seen it twice it stops looking like an accident and starts looking like the machine it is.

What you've built

Three: hair, a finger, an ear.

Your turn

- Say it: kān
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: kān, then uṅglī, then bāl, back down the run
- Recall: say parivār
- Read it: दीया

Before you move on

What does कान mean? ("an ear".) Say it once more.

46.4 नाक (nāk) — a nose

Before the new one: what did kān mean?

You'll want to know: नाक

नाक (nāk) — "a nose".

From Prakrit ṇakka, 'nose', which CDIAL traces, with a "possibly", to the old word nas-, 'nose' (CDIAL 6909) — and nas- is a cousin of Latin nāsus and of English "nose", so the family resemblance is probably real.

Hindi puts the nose where English puts the face: to have your नाक cut is to be humiliated, and to keep it high is to keep your honour. The idiom is old enough that the literal sense has stopped showing through.

What you've built

Four, and the last one is on the inside.

Your turn

- Say it: nāk
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: nāk, then kān, so the two openings of the head sit together
- Read it: लोग
- Recall: say namak

Before you move on

What does नाक mean? ("a nose".) Say it once more.

46.5 गला (galā) — the throat

Before the new one: what did nāk mean?

You'll want to know: गला

गला (galā) — "the throat".

Sanskrit gala, the throat, a cousin of Latin gula, the gullet — the word English took twice over, once as "gullet" and once, by a longer road, as "gluttony".

Hindi keeps the plain sense and adds the obvious extension: your गला is also your voice, and to say that it has gone is to say you have gone hoarse.

The organ and what comes out of it share one word, which is a bargain most languages strike somewhere.

What you've built

Five, and the run is closed: hair, a finger, an ear, a nose, the throat.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- galā
- it once more, slowly
- all five in order — bāl, uṅglī, kān, nāk, galā

Before you move on

What does गला mean? ("the throat".) Say it once more.

Chapter 47

Who Someone Is

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what someone's work is in Hindi, and tell an inherited word for a person from a borrowed one.
> Complete HI-C47-neighbour and say all five words in order.

47.1 शिक्षक (śikṣak) — a teacher

Before the new run of words: what did nāk mean, and what did galā mean?

You'll want to know: शिक्षक

शिक्षक (śikṣak) — "a teacher".

Sanskrit, and it comes apart cleanly in the hand: the root śikṣ-, 'to learn, to be taught', with the agent ending -aka — the one who brings the learning about. The same root gives śikṣā, education, and śikṣit, educated.

Everyday speech reaches for ustād or guru depending on what is being taught and by whom, but शिक्षक is the word on the school form, and the feminine śikṣikā is built from it by the ending alone.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

शिक्षक (śikṣak) is Sanskrit śikṣaka, "one who teaches", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama. It is built on śikṣā, "learning, study", which also came down into everyday Hindi as sīkh, "advice" (CDIAL 12432).

What you've built

The first of five words for who someone is.

Your turn

- Say it: śikṣak
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: śikṣak, then galā, so the teacher and the voice sit together
- Recall: say phal
- Read it: बाल

Before you move on

What does शिक्षक mean? ("a teacher".) Say it once more.

47.2 छात्र (chātra) — a student

Before the new one: what did śikṣak mean?

You'll want to know: छात्र

छात्र (chātra) — "a student".

Sanskrit chātra, and the picture inside it is unexpected. Chattra is a parasol, and the traditional Indian etymologists read chātra as the one who stands in the teacher's shade. Whether that is the true history is argued about; that it is the story the tradition told is not.

The feminine is chātrā. The transparent alternative is vidyārthī, 'one who seeks knowledge', which says on its face what छात्र only hints at.

What you've built

Two: a teacher and a student.

Your turn

- Say it: chātra
- Say it: it once more, slowly

- Say it: chātra, then śikṣak, the pair that needs each other
- Recall: say kapṛā, then say uṅglī

Before you move on

What does छात्र mean? ("a student".) Say it once more.

47.3 किसान (kisān) — a farmer

Before the new one: what did chātra mean?

You'll want to know: किसान

किसान (kisān) — "a farmer".

From kṛṣāṇa, on the Sanskrit root kṛṣ-, 'to plough, to drag through the ground' — the same root behind kṛṣi, agriculture. A farmer, in this word, is simply the one who drags the plough.

Latin reached for the same picture and got there with different material: sulcus, a furrow, is not related to kṛṣ- at all. Two families, no shared word, and the identical image — which is worth noticing precisely because it proves nothing about descent.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

किसान (kisān) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from kṛṣāṇa, "ploughing" (CDIAL 3447). It is the present participle of kṛṣati, "ploughs": a farmer is "the one ploughing".

What you've built

Three, and each one names work rather than family.

Your turn

- Say it: kisān
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: kisān, then chātra, then śikṣak, back down the run

- Recall: say dīyā
- Read it: कान

Before you move on

What does किसान mean? ("a farmer".) Say it once more.

47.4 मेहमान (mehmān) — a guest

Before the new one: what did kisān mean?

You'll want to know: मेहमान

मेहमान (mehmān) — "a guest".

Persian mihmān, and Hindi took the whole vocabulary of hospitality along with it: mehmān-nawāzī, hospitality, is literally the cherishing of guests.

The inherited word is atithi, and it is built out of a small argument: a-tithi, 'without a date' — a guest being, by definition, someone who has not told you when they are coming. Two words, two theories of the thing. One names the arrival, the other names the welcome.

What you've built

Four, and this one arrives at your door.

Your turn

- Say it: mehmān
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: mehmān, then kisān, so the visitor and the host sit together
- Read it: नमक
- Recall: say nāk

Before you move on

What does मेहमान mean? ("a guest".) Say it once more.

47.5 पड़ोसी (paṛosī) — a neighbour

Before the new one: what did mehmān mean?

You'll want to know: पड़ोसी

पड़ोसी (paṛosī) — "a neighbour".

It sits beside paṛos, the neighbourhood, and its -ī sounds like the ending that makes आदमी out of Adam. The history is a little different. CDIAL derives paṛosī from prativeśiya*, a by-form it reconstructs beside Sanskrit prativeśya, "neighbour" (CDIAL 8599), so the -ī continues that old -iya. The place-word paṛos comes separately from Sanskrit prativeśa, "neighbouring" (CDIAL 8598).

Both are built on prati-, "towards, facing", and the verb viś-, "to enter, to settle". CDIAL prefers that verb to the older idea of a compound with veśa, "dwelling".

What you've built

Five, and the run is closed: a teacher, a student, a farmer, a guest, a neighbour.

Your turn

- Say it: paṛosī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: all five in order — śikṣak, chātra, kisān, mehmān, paṛosī
- Recall: say sābun
- Read it: गला

Before you move on

What does पड़ोसी mean? ("a neighbour".) Say it once more.

Chapter 48

Short Replies

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can answer someone in Hindi with one word, and pick how certain that one word sounds.
> Complete HI-C48-absolutely and say all five words in order.

48.1 सच (sac) — true

Before the new run of words: what did mehmān mean, and what did paṛosī mean?

You'll want to know: सच

सच (sac) — "true".

Sanskrit satya, 'true, real', worn down to a single syllable — and satya is itself built on sat, the participle of the verb 'to be'. What is true, at the bottom of this word, is simply what is.

Hindi keeps the long form as well, in names and in solemn speech, so one idea can arrive dressed either way. सच is the one you say when somebody tells you something you did not expect.

What you've built

The first of five short replies.

Your turn

- Say it: sac
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: sac, then paṛosī, so the reply and the person sit together
- Recall: say bāl
- Read it: शिक्षक

Before you move on

What does सच mean? ("true".) Say it once more.

48.2 बस (bas) — enough, that's all

Before the new one: what did sac mean?

You'll want to know: बस

बस (bas) — "enough, that's all".

Persian bas, 'enough'. One syllable that stops a pouring hand, ends a list, or closes an argument, and it does all three on tone alone.

Doubled, bas bas, it is the polite way to say enough while somebody is still serving you. Stretched out, it is what you say when they are plainly not listening. Very few words in the language do this much work for so little.

What you've built

Two, and both are one syllable.

Your turn

- Say it: bas
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: bas, then sac, one after the other, as answers
- Recall: say uṅglī, then say chātra

Before you move on

What does बस mean? ("enough, that's all".) Say it once more.

48.3 ज़रूर (zarūr) — certainly

Before the new one: what did bas mean?

You'll want to know: ज़रूर

ज़रूर (zarūr) — "certainly".

Arabic ḍarūr, 'necessity', arriving through Persian — and the word has walked from necessity to certainty by the shortest possible route: what must be, will be. Its relative zarūrat is still the plain Hindi word for a need.

The dot written under the ज़ marks a sound that came in with the Persian layer rather than down from Sanskrit. The letter underneath it was already here; the dot is the passport.

What you've built

Three: true, enough, certainly.

Your turn

- Say it: zarūr
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: zarūr, then bas, then sac, back down the run
- Recall: say kān
- Read it: किसान

Before you move on

What does ज़रूर mean? ("certainly".) Say it once more.

48.4 शायद (śāyad) — perhaps

Before the new one: what did zarūr mean?

You'll want to know: शायद

शायद (śāyad) — "perhaps".

Persian shāyad, 'it may be', out of shāyistan, 'to be fitting, to be possible'. A whole conjugated form collapsed into a single hedge.

The inherited alternative is sambhavataḥ, four syllables of Sanskrit that belong to written prose and to careful speeches. When somebody is guessing out loud in a kitchen, they say शायद.

What you've built

Four, and this one takes a step back.

Your turn

- Say it: śāyad
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: śāyad, then zarūr, the two ends of how sure you are
- Read it: नाक
- Recall: say mehmān

Before you move on

What does शायद mean? ("perhaps".) Say it once more.

48.5 बिलकुल (bilkul) — absolutely

Before the new one: what did śāyad mean?

You'll want to know: बिलकुल

बिलकुल (bilkul) — "absolutely".

Arabic bi-l-kull, 'with the whole' — a preposition, the definite article al-, and kull, 'all', fused into one Hindi word. That same al- is sitting, equally hidden, inside अलविदा.

It answers a yes-or-no question with more weight than a bare yes. Put nahīṁ after it and it does exactly the same for no, which makes it the most emphatic thing on this page in either direction.

What you've built

Five, and the run is closed: true, enough, certainly, perhaps, absolutely.

Your turn

- Say it: bilkul
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: all five in order — sac, bas, zarūr, śāyad, bilkul
- Recall: say galā, then say paṛosī

Before you move on

What does बिलकुल mean? ("absolutely".) Say it once more.

Chapter 49

Taking Your Leave

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say when I am leaving and when I will be back in Hindi.
> Complete HI-C49-meeting and say all five words in order.

49.1 अभी (abhī) — right now

Before the new run of words: what did śāyad mean, and what did bilkul mean?

You'll want to know: अभी

अभी (abhī) — "right now".

Ab, 'now', with the emphatic -hī welded onto it: now and nothing but now. CDIAL traces ab to Sanskrit evam eva, 'exactly so', crossed with the pronoun stem a- (CDIAL 2528).

That little -hī is one of the most useful pieces in the language. It narrows whatever it lands on, and you will meet it stuck to other words later. Here it turns a vague present into a pointed one — not now-ish, but this moment, and no other.

What you've built

The first of five words for leaving.

Your turn

- Say it: abhī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: abhī, then bilkul, so the timing and the emphasis sit together
- Recall: say śikṣak
- Read it: सच

Before you move on

What does अभी mean? ("right now".) Say it once more.

49.2 परसों (parsoṁ) — the day after tomorrow

Before the new one: what did abhī mean?

You'll want to know: परसों

परसों (parsoṁ) — "the day after tomorrow".

And also the day before yesterday. Like कल, which does duty for both tomorrow and yesterday, परसों counts two days out from today and leaves the direction to the sentence.

Sanskrit paraśvas, 'the day after tomorrow', lies underneath (CDIAL 7799j), and the language evidently never felt the lack of two separate words. Time is being measured here by distance from now, with the direction supplied by whatever the sentence is already doing.

What you've built

Two, and both of them are about when.

Your turn

- Say it: parsoṁ
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: parsoṁ, then abhī, the far day beside this very moment

- Recall: say chātra
- Read it: बस

Before you move on

What does परसों mean? ("the day after tomorrow".) Say it once more.

49.3 सफ़र (safar) — a journey

Before the new one: what did parsoṁ mean?

You'll want to know: सफ़र

सफ़र (safar) — "a journey".

Arabic safar, 'travel', through Persian. The same root gives safīr, an ambassador — somebody sent out on a journey and expected back.

The inherited word is yātrā, from the Sanskrit root yā-, 'to go', and it leans toward pilgrimage. So a सफ़र is the road itself, while a yātrā is the road with a reason at the end of it.

What you've built

Three: right now, the far day, a journey.

Your turn

- Say it: safar
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: safar, then parsoṁ, then abhī, back down the run
- Recall: say kisān
- Read it: ज़रूर

Before you move on

What does सफ़र mean? ("a journey".) Say it once more.

49.4 निकलना (nikalnā) — to set out, to leave

Before the new one: what did safar mean?

You'll want to know: निकलना

निकलना (nikalnā) — "to set out, to leave".

What you say when you are on the point of walking out of a door. It is the going-out kind of action, where the thing leaves under its own steam, and it has a partner, nikālnā, with a long ā, which means to take something out.

Lengthen the vowel and the doer changes: that pairing is one of Hindi's tidiest machines, and it runs through dozens of everyday words. Sanskrit niṣkal-, 'to go forth', stands behind both.

What you've built

Four, and this one is something you do.

Your turn

- Say it: nikalnā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: nikalnā, then safar, the leaving and the road it opens
- Read it: मेहमान
- Recall: say śāyad

Before you move on

What does निकलना mean? ("to set out, to leave".) Say it once more.

49.5 मुलाक़ात (mulāqāt) — a meeting

Before the new one: what did nikalnā mean?

You'll want to know: मुलाक़ात

मुलाक़ात (mulāqāt) — "a meeting".

Arabic mulāqāt, on laqiya, 'to meet', arriving through Persian. It covers everything from bumping into somebody on a street to a scheduled interview in an office.

It sits inside the ordinary parting line phir mulāqāt hogī, 'there will be a meeting again' — which is what फिर मिलेंगे says using inherited material instead of borrowed. Same farewell, two vocabularies, and a speaker can pick either without changing the meaning by a hair.

What you've built

Five, and the run is closed: right now, the far day, a journey, setting out, a meeting.

Your turn

- Say it: mulāqāt
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: all five in order — abhī, parsoṁ, safar, nikalnā, mulāqāt
- Recall: say paṛosī
- Read it: बिलकुल

Before you move on

What does मुलाक़ात mean? ("a meeting".) Say it once more.

Courtesy Words

50.1 आभार (ābhār) — gratitude

Before the new run of words: what did nikalnā mean, and what did mulāqāt mean?

You'll want to know: आभार

आभार (ābhār) — "gratitude".

Sanskrit ā-bhāra, 'a load carried toward' — built on bhṛ-, 'to bear', which is the same ancient root as Latin ferre and English "bear". To be grateful, on the evidence of this word, is to be carrying a weight that somebody else put there.

It stands above धन्यवाद in formality, and well above शुक्रिया. It is the word a written speech uses, or a letter, or the last line of a printed programme.

What you've built

The first of five courtesy words.

Your turn

- Say it: ābhār
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: ābhār, then mulāqāt, the thanks and the meeting it ends
- Recall: say sac, then say abhī

Before you move on

What does आभार mean? ("gratitude".) Say it once more.

50.2 एहसान (ehsān) — a favour

Before the new one: what did ābhār mean?

You'll want to know: एहसान

एहसान (ehsān) — "a favour".

Arabic iḥsān, 'the doing of what is good', on the root ḥ-s-n, which carries both beauty and goodness and also gives the names ḥasan and ḥusn. Persian passed it on to Hindi as the word for a kindness done to you and not forgotten.

Two phrases live on it and point opposite ways. Ehsān mānnā is to acknowledge a favour; ehsān jatānā is to keep reminding somebody that you did them one. The language leaves you in no doubt which of the two it thinks less of.

What you've built

Two: gratitude, and the thing it is owed for.

Your turn

- Say it: ehsān
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: ehsān, then ābhār, the favour and the thanks for it
- Read it: बस

- Recall: say parsoṁ

Before you move on

What does एहसान mean? ("a favour".) Say it once more.

50.3 आदर (ādar) — respect

Before the new one: what did ehsān mean?

You'll want to know: आदर

आदर (ādar) — "respect".

Sanskrit ādara, 'regard, attentiveness', from ā-dṛ-, 'to heed'. Hindi carries this word inside its own machinery: the आप form is called ādar-sūcak, the respect-marking form.

So this is not only a word for a feeling somebody has. It is the name of a choice the language makes you make in nearly every sentence you speak, whether you have thought about it or not.

What you've built

Three, and this one is built into the grammar.

Your turn

- Say it: ādar
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: ādar, then ehsān, then ābhār, back down the run
- Recall: say zarūr
- Read it: सफ़र

Before you move on

What does आदर mean? ("respect".) Say it once more.

50.4 आशीर्वाद (āśīrvād) — a blessing

Before the new one: what did ādar mean?

You'll want to know: आशीर्वाद

आशीर्वाद (āśīrvād) — "a blessing".

Sanskrit āśīr-vāda: āśis, 'a wish, a prayer', joined to vāda, 'speech'. A blessing is literally a wish said out loud. The s turning into r before the v is a regular joint in Sanskrit rather than a quirk of this one word.

It travels downward. An elder gives आशीर्वाद; the younger person asks for it by bending to touch the elder's feet, and the giving is spoken over the bent head.

What you've built

Four, and this one is given rather than said.

Your turn

- Say it: āśīrvād
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: āśīrvād, then ādar, the blessing and the respect that asks for it
- Read it: शायद
- Recall: say nikalnā

Before you move on

What does आशीर्वाद mean? ("a blessing".) Say it once more.

50.5 प्रणाम (praṇām) — a bow, a salutation

Before the new one: what did āśīrvād mean?

You'll want to know: प्रणाम

प्रणाम (praṇām) — "a bow, a salutation".

Sanskrit pra-ṇāma, 'a bending forward', on nam-, 'to bow' — the identical root standing inside नमस्ते and नमस्कार. Three words, one gesture, three heights of formality.

प्रणाम is what a younger person says to an elder, often while bending to touch the feet, and what it expects back is आशीर्वाद. The pair of words is the pair of movements: one goes down, one comes back over the top.

What you've built

Five, and the run is closed: gratitude, a favour, respect, a blessing, a bow.

Your turn

- Say it: praṇām
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: all five in order — ābhār, ehsān, ādar, āśīrvād, praṇām
- Recall: say bilkul
- Read it: मुलाक़ात

Before you move on

What does प्रणाम mean? ("a bow, a salutation".) Say it once more.

50.6 ण — the last one

You have said प्रणाम (praṇām). The letter in its middle, before the ◌ा, is the one this lesson writes.

Before the new one: व — which letter shares its loop?

Today's letter finishes something.

Script you'll notice: ण

ण — ṇa.

What it is made of:

- a joined left stem, clockwise lower bowl and inner right stem
- a separate top-to-bottom outer right stem
- the top shirorekhā

It has two right-hand stems, which is unusual: the inner one is the end of the body's run, and the outer one is drawn on its own.

Script: the retroflex row is complete

letter	sound
ट	ṭa
ठ	ṭha
ड	ḍa
ढ	ḍha
ण	ṇa

The tongue curls back for all five. ण is the nasal of that row — the same family as न, made in the retroflex place instead of against the teeth.

Where you have already met it — and there is one place:

- पूर्ण विराम — the name of the full stop

That is the term this book taught you for the mark that ends a sentence, and its letters went unnamed at the time. One sighting in the whole book so far is a fair measure of how rare this letter is in everyday words, and it is the reason it waited this long.

Writing: ण

How it is written — 3 strokes · 2 pen lifts · 3 movements

Stroke order after Opiaterein, 'Deva-ण-order.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ण is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start at the left stem's headline junction, descend, curve clockwise around the lower bowl, and rise along the inner right stem back to the headline without lifting
- 2. lift and draw the outer right stem top-to-bottom
- 3. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 2.

Verified three-stroke teaching form fitted to the bundled printed outline; everyday handwriting may narrow or simplify the bowl differently.

This is one attested teaching order and not a national standard — handwriting here is taught with school-to-school variation. Source: Opiaterein, 'Deva-ण-order.gif', strokes 1–3, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009.

Your turn

- Look: at this phrase and find ण in it

  पूर्ण विराम

- Trace it: ण three times, saying ṇa as you finish each one
- Say it: how many right-hand stems this letter has

Before you move on

What sound does ण carry? (ṇa.) Which row does it close? Which dental letter is it the retroflex partner of? (न.) Where have you read it?

Chapter 51

Welcoming a Guest

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name what a Hindi household puts in front of a guest at the door.
> Complete HI-C51-sweet and say all five words in order.

51.1 फूल (phūl) — a flower

Before the new run of words: what did āśīrvād mean, and what did praṇām mean?

You'll want to know: फूल

फूल (phūl) — "a flower".

Sanskrit phulla, 'blossomed, opened out', from phull-, 'to bloom'. So the Hindi word for a flower is at bottom a word for the act of opening, with the object named after the event.

The double ll collapsed and paid for itself by lengthening the vowel in front of it, which is the standard trade in this family — the same bargain that gave you कान out of karṇa. It is also the measure of lightness: something that weighs nothing at all is phūl jaisā.

What you've built

The first of five things at a welcome.

Your turn

- Say it: phūl
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: phūl, then praṇām, the flower and the bow at the door
- Recall: say abhī, then say ābhār

Before you move on

What does फूल mean? ("a flower".) Say it once more.

51.2 माला (mālā) — a garland

Before the new one: what did phūl mean?

You'll want to know: माला

माला (mālā) — "a garland".

Sanskrit mālā, a garland or a string of beads, and the second sense has travelled furthest: the string of a hundred and eight beads counted through the fingers is a mālā, and English borrowed the word back, unchanged, for that same object.

Around the neck of a guest it is a welcome. Around the frame of a photograph it is mourning. The object does not change at all; where it is hung decides everything.

What you've built

Two: a flower and a garland made of them.

Your turn

- Say it: mālā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: mālā, then phūl, the string and the thing it is made of
- Read it: परसों
- Recall: say ehsān

Before you move on

What does माला mean? ("a garland".) Say it once more.

51.3 आँगन (āṁgan) — a courtyard

Before the new one: what did mālā mean?

You'll want to know: आँगन

आँगन (āṁgan) — "a courtyard".

Sanskrit aṅgaṇa, the open ground a house encloses — the room with no roof over it. Old town houses are built around one, and a great deal of what English would put in a living room happens there instead: the drying, the talking, the sitting with a guest.

The mark above the line marks a nasal that used to be a whole consonant, exactly as it does in uṅglī.

What you've built

Three, and this one is where you seat the guest.

Your turn

- Say it: āṁgan
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: āṁgan, then mālā, then phūl, back down the run
- Recall: say safar
- Read it: आदर

Before you move on

What does आँगन mean? ("a courtyard".) Say it once more.

51.4 मेज़ (mez) — a table

Before the new one: what did āṁgan mean?

You'll want to know: मेज़

मेज़ (mez) — "a table".

Persian mez, and behind the Persian, on the usual account, Portuguese mesa, out of Latin mēnsa. Portuguese ships carried the object and its name into the Indian Ocean, which is the same route that brought कमरा in from camera.

There was no inherited word for a raised surface on four legs because the household had not had one; people ate and wrote and worked at floor level. The word arrived with the furniture, which is usually how that happens.

What you've built

Four, and one of them came off a ship.

Your turn

- Say it: mez
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: mez, then āṁgan, one of them standing inside the other
- Read it: निकलना
- Recall: say āśīrvād

Before you move on

What does मेज़ mean? ("a table".) Say it once more.

51.5 मिठाई (miṭhāī) — a sweet

Before the new one: what did mez mean?

You'll want to know: मिठाई

मिठाई (miṭhāī) — "a sweet".

From mīṭhā, 'sweet', with the -āī ending that turns a quality into a thing you can hold — sweetness first, then the sweet itself. Behind mīṭhā is Sanskrit miṣṭa, 'sweetened, relished'.

Nothing closes a welcome better: the garland at the door, the seat in the courtyard, and something sweet in the hand before anybody says why they have come.

What you've built

Five, and the run is closed: a flower, a garland, a courtyard, a table, a sweet.

Your turn

- Say it: miṭhāī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: all five in order — phūl, mālā, āṁgan, mez, miṭhāī
- Recall: say mulāqāt, then spell प्रणाम aloud letter by letter, naming its ण as you reach it

Before you move on

What does मिठाई mean? ("a sweet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 52

In the Kitchen

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five things in a Hindi kitchen and ask for them politely.
> Complete HI-C52-vegetable and say all five words in order.

52.1 चावल (chāval) — rice

Before the new run of words: what did the last two words of the chapter before mean?

You'll want to know: चावल

चावल (chāval) — "rice".

Sanskrit's own word for rice is तण्डुल (taṇḍula), and it is not the ancestor of this one. Where chāval came from is genuinely unsettled — the dictionaries record the Prakrit forms behind it without agreeing on what stands behind those.

That makes it the fourth everyday Hindi word you have met whose origin is honestly unknown, after बिल्ली, कुत्ता and पेट. It is worth noticing the pattern: the words a language uses most are not always the words whose history it kept.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चावल (chāval) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from cāvala*, "husked rice", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 4749). CDIAL suggests, with a "possibly", that it shares a non-Aryan origin with Sanskrit taṇḍula, "rice".

What you've built

The first of five things a kitchen is stocked with.

Your turn

- Say it: chāval
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: chāval, the grain the rest of the meal is served over
- Recall: say ābhār
- Read it: फूल

Before you move on

What does चावल mean? ("rice".) Say it once more.

52.2 दाल (dāl) — lentils, split pulses

What did the word before this one mean?

You'll want to know: दाल

दाल (dāl) — "lentils, split pulses".

From Sanskrit दल् (dal-), 'to split', through the noun दल (dala), 'a piece torn off'. दाल is not the name of a plant at all — it is the name of what was done to the seed.

Whole pulses are not दाल; split ones are. So the word draws its line through the middle of the lentil rather than around the outside of the species, which is why one plant can give both a दाल and a not-दाल.

What you've built

The second of five, and the one named after a knife rather than a plant.

Your turn

- Say it: dāl
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: dāl, then chāval — the pair that makes a meal
- Read it: एहसान
- Recall: say mālā

Before you move on

What does दाल mean? ("lentils, split pulses".) Say it once more.

52.3 तेल (tel) — oil

Name the 2 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: तेल

तेल (tel) — "oil".

From Sanskrit तैल (taila), which is built on तिल (tila), 'sesame'. तेल is therefore 'the sesame stuff' — oil named after the one seed that was pressed for it.

English did the same thing by a different road: oil goes back to Latin oleum, from Greek élaion, 'olive oil' — oil named after the olive. Two languages, two plants, one habit of naming the substance after whatever you happened to press.

What you've built

The third of five, and a word that still smells of one particular seed.

Your turn

- Say it: tel
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: tel, the thing the दाल is finished with

- Recall: say ādar
- Read it: आँगन

Before you move on

What does तेल mean? ("oil".) Say it once more.

52.4 चीनी (chīnī) — sugar

Name the 3 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: चीनी

चीनी (chīnī) — "sugar".

चीनी means, quite literally, 'Chinese'. The everyday Hindi word for sugar names the country the refining technique was associated with — the same shape as calling a thing china because of where it was made.

The traffic ran the other way too. English sugar came through Arabic sukkar from Sanskrit शर्करा (śarkarā), 'grit, gravel' — so India exported the word for sugar to Europe and then named its own everyday sugar after China. Both halves of that are true at once.

What you've built

The fourth of five, and the only one that is a nationality.

Your turn

- Say it: chīnī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: chīnī, and then chāy, which you have had for a long time now
- Read it: आशीर्वाद
- Recall: say mez

Before you move on

What does चीनी mean? ("sugar".) Say it once more.

52.5 सब्ज़ी (sabzī) — a vegetable, vegetables

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: सब्ज़ी

सब्ज़ी (sabzī) — "a vegetable, vegetables".

A Persian word: sabz means 'green', and -ī turns an adjective into a noun. सब्ज़ी is 'greenery' — the green things, taken together.

You have met this suffix already without being told: ख़ुशी (khushī), 'happiness', is khush, 'pleased', with the same -ī on the end. One ending, two words, both Persian.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सब्ज़ी (sabzī) is a loan, usually traced to Persian sabzī, "greenness, greens". It is built on sabz, "green".

What you've built

The fifth of five. The kitchen is stocked.

Your turn

- Say it: sabzī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: sabzī, then dāl, then chāval — say the shelf in order
- Recall: say praṇām, then say miṭhāī

Before you move on

What does सब्ज़ी mean? ("a vegetable, vegetables".) Say it once more.

Chapter 53

More of the Body

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five more parts of the body when I say how I am.
> Complete HI-C53-lip and say all five words in order.

53.1 कंधा (kandhā) — a shoulder

Before the new run of words: what did the last two words of the chapter before mean?

You'll want to know: कंधा

कंधा (kandhā) — "a shoulder".

From Sanskrit स्कन्ध (skandha), 'shoulder'. The initial sk- cluster could not survive into everyday Hindi and lost its s, which is the ordinary fate of a cluster like that in this family.

Skandha had a second life meaning 'the trunk of a tree' and then 'a section, a division' — the sense Buddhist texts use for the five aggregates. Hindi kept the shoulder and let the philosophy go.

What you've built

The first of five more parts of the body.

Your turn

- Say it: kandhā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: kandhā, picturing your shoulder
- Recall: say phūl
- Read it: चावल

Before you move on

What does कंधा mean? ("a shoulder".) Say it once more.

53.2 घुटना (ghuṭnā) — a knee

What did the word before this one mean?

You'll want to know: घुटना

घुटना (ghuṭnā) — "a knee".

Behind it stands a family of Sanskrit words for the ankle, ghuṭa and ghuṇṭa, though the details of how the knee-word grew out of them are not agreed on.

Be careful with this one in a dictionary: घुटना is also a verb meaning 'to be stifled', and the two are unrelated. Hindi has a small number of these exact collisions, and the only way through is the sentence around the word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

घुटना (ghuṭnā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. CDIAL lists it under ghuṭṭa*, a form it reconstructs beside Sanskrit ghuṭa, "ankle", and takes the whole family from Dravidian. It also allows a second road, through a form ghũṭanā* built on the variant ghuṇṭa (CDIAL 4479).

What you've built

The second of five, and a word with a twin that means something else entirely.

Your turn

- Say it: ghuṭnā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: ghuṭnā, then kandhā — the joint low, the joint high
- Read it: माला
- Recall: say dāl

Before you move on

What does घुटना mean? ("a knee".) Say it once more.

53.3 माथा (māthā) — a forehead

Name the 2 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: माथा

माथा (māthā) — "a forehead".

From Sanskrit मस्तक (mastaka), 'head'. The everyday word narrowed as it wore down: what meant the whole head now means the front of it.

मस्तक itself is still in Hindi, unworn, in formal and literary registers. So you have another register doublet of the kind you met with सुबह beside prabhāt — the same ancestor arriving twice, once eroded and everyday, once intact and bookish.

What you've built

The third of five, and a narrowing you can watch happen.

Your turn

- Say it: māthā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: māthā, and then सिर, which you met when the head was first named

- Recall: say āṁgan
- Read it: तेल

Before you move on

What does माथा mean? ("a forehead".) Say it once more.

53.4 पीठ (pīṭh) — the back

Name the 3 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: पीठ

पीठ (pīṭh) — "the back".

From Sanskrit pṛṣṭi, 'back', a sister of पृष्ठ (pṛṣṭha), also "back" (CDIAL 8370). The heavy -ṛṣṭ- in the middle collapsed and paid for itself by lengthening the vowel in front of it.

That is the same bargain that gave you कान out of karṇa when the ear was named — a cluster gives way, and the vowel before it grows to keep the syllable's weight. Once you have seen the trade twice it stops looking like an exception.

What you've built

The fourth of five, and the second time you have seen that trade.

Your turn

- Say it: pīṭh
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: pīṭh, then kandhā — the back and the shoulder above it
- Read it: मेज़
- Recall: say chīnī

Before you move on

What does पीठ mean? ("the back".) Say it once more.

53.5 होंठ (hoṇṭh) — a lip

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: होंठ

होंठ (hoṇṭh) — "a lip".

From Sanskrit ओष्ठ (oṣṭha), 'lip'. Hindi added the nasal in the middle and an h at the front, both of which are ordinary enough in this line of descent.

Do not reach for Latin labium as a cousin here — it is not one. Two Indo-European languages can have perfectly ordinary words for the same body part that descend from completely different roots, which you have already met with रात beside nox.

What you've built

The fifth of five. That is the body, from the forehead down.

Your turn

- Say it: hoṇṭh
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: hoṇṭh, māthā, kandhā, pīṭh, ghuṭnā — top to bottom
- Recall: say miṭhāī
- Read it: सब्ज़ी

Before you move on

What does होंठ mean? ("a lip".) Say it once more.

Chapter 54

Animals

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five common animals when I say what something is called.
> Complete HI-C54-goat and say all five words in order.

54.1 गाय (gāy) — a cow

Before the new run of words: what did the last two words of the chapter before mean?

You'll want to know: गाय

गाय (gāy) — "a cow".

From Sanskrit गो (go), 'cow' — and this one goes all the way back. The reconstructed ancestor is $g^w\acute{o}ws$, which gives Latin bōs, Greek boûs, and English cow.

So गाय and cow are the same word, separated by five thousand years and most of a continent. It is one of the cleanest cousins in this whole book: no borrowing, no detour, just two ends of one inheritance.

What you've built

The first of five animals, and a word English owns too.

Your turn

- Say it: gāy
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: gāy, and hear the c- of cow inside it
- Recall: say chāval
- Read it: कंधा

Before you move on

What does गाय mean? ("a cow".) Say it once more.

54.2 घोड़ा (ghoṛā) — a horse

What did the word before this one mean?

You'll want to know: घोड़ा

घोड़ा (ghoṛā) — "a horse".

From Sanskrit घोटक (ghoṭaka), 'horse' — a word whose own origin is uncertain and may not be Indo-European at all.

What makes it worth stopping on is what did not happen. Sanskrit had अश्व (aśva), the inherited horse-word, a straight cousin of Latin equus and Greek híppos. It lost. Everyday Hindi rides घोड़ा, and the ancient word survives only in names and formal compounds.

What you've built

The second of five, and an inherited word that was pushed out.

Your turn

- Say it: ghoṛā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: ghoṛā, then gāy — the one that was replaced, the one that was not

- Read it: दाल
- Recall: say ghuṭnā

Before you move on

What does घोड़ा mean? ("a horse".) Say it once more.

54.3 मछली (machhlī) — a fish

Name the 2 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: मछली

मछली (machhlī) — "a fish".

From Sanskrit मत्स्य (matsya), 'fish', through a Prakrit form in which the -tsy- cluster fused into the -chh- you now say.

The -ī on the end is the same feminine ending you have met on कुर्सी and बिल्ली, and मछली is feminine like them. The ending is doing grammatical work here, not naming anything.

What you've built

The third of five, and another cluster that gave way.

Your turn

- Say it: machhlī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: machhlī, and remember it is feminine
- Recall: say tel, then say māthā

Before you move on

What does मछली mean? ("a fish".) Say it once more.

54.4 चिड़िया (chiṛiyā) — a small bird

Name the 3 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: चिड़िया

चिड़िया (chiṛiyā) — "a small bird".

The origin of चिड़िया is not settled. It is usually grouped with a family of words for small birds that look as though they were built from the noise a bird makes, but that is a description of the family, not a documented derivation.

It is worth saying plainly that 'sounds like a bird' is a guess and not evidence. The honest position is that this everyday word has no agreed ancestor, and that is the fifth such word you have met.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चिड़िया (chiṛiyā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from caṭaka, "sparrow" (CDIAL 4571). It came through a variant ciṭaka*. CDIAL calls the word imitative of the bird's call, with similar words in Dravidian and Munda.

What you've built

The fourth of five, and a guess that this book will not make.

Your turn

- Say it: chiṛiyā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: chiṛiyā, small and feminine
- Read it: चीनी
- Recall: say pīṭh

Before you move on

What does चिड़िया mean? ("a small bird".) Say it once more.

54.5 बकरी (bakrī) — a goat

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: बकरी

बकरी (bakrī) — "a goat".

From Sanskrit बर्कर (barkara), 'a kid, a young goat'. The masculine बकरा and feminine बकरी split the animal by sex, as Hindi does with बेटा and बेटी.

Notice what the pair does that English does not: goat covers both, and English has to add a word to say which. Hindi has already said it in the ending.

What you've built

The fifth of five. That is the yard.

Your turn

- Say it: bakrī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: bakrī, gāy, ghoṛā, machhlī, chiṛiyā — name them round
- Recall: say sabzī
- Read it: होंठ

Before you move on

What does बकरी mean? ("a goat".) Say it once more.

Chapter 55

The Sky

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five things in the sky and answer a simple question about them.
> Complete HI-C55-sky and say all five words in order.

55.1 सूरज (sūraj) — the sun

Before the new run of words: what did the last two words of the chapter before mean?

You'll want to know: सूरज

सूरज (sūraj) — "the sun".

From Sanskrit सूर्य (sūrya), and behind that the Proto-Indo-European word for the sun, which also gives Latin sōl, Greek hḗlios, and English sun.

That makes सूरज a cousin of solar and of sun at once — the Latin word arriving in English through scholarship, the inherited one having been there all along. Same root, two doors.

What you've built

The first of five things overhead.

Your turn

- Say it: sūraj

- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: sūraj, and hear sol inside it
- Recall: say kandhā
- Read it: गाय

Before you move on

What does सूरज mean? ("the sun".) Say it once more.

55.2 चाँद (chā̃d) — the moon

What did the word before this one mean?

You'll want to know: चाँद

चाँद (chā̃d) — "the moon".

From Sanskrit चन्द्र (candra), 'shining, the moon', on a root meaning 'to glow'. The moon is named for what it does, not for what it is.

The same root surfaces in Latin candēre, 'to shine white' — which is where English gets candle, candid and incandescent. A candle and the moon are the same idea in two languages.

What you've built

The second of five, and a word that means 'the shining one'.

Your turn

- Say it: chā̃d
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: chā̃d, then sūraj — night first, then day
- Recall: say ghuṭnā, then say ghoṛā

Before you move on

What does चाँद mean? ("the moon".) Say it once more.

55.3 तारा (tārā) — a star

Name the 2 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: तारा

तारा (tārā) — "a star".

CDIAL files it under Sanskrit tāraka, 'belonging to the stars', a form beside tārā, 'fixed star' (CDIAL 5798). That family is usually traced to the reconstructed h_2*stḗr* — the same root as Latin stella, Greek astḗr, and English star. CDIAL itself compares Vedic stṛ-, 'star'.

So the three biggest things in the sky are, in Hindi, three separate PIE inheritances: सूरज with sun, चाँद with candle, तारा with star. Three for three, all genuine, which is rarer than it sounds.

What you've built

The third of five, and the third clean cousin in a row.

Your turn

- Say it: tārā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: tārā, and hear star in it
- Recall: say māthā, then say machhlī

Before you move on

What does तारा mean? ("a star".) Say it once more.

55.4 बादल (bādal) — a cloud

Name the 3 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: बादल

बादल (bādal) — "a cloud".

बादल is usually traced to a Sanskrit adjective for 'cloudy' built on वारि (vāri), 'water', though the route is less tidy than the three words before it and the sources do not all agree on the steps.

That is worth marking. Three clean etymologies in a row can make the fourth look clean too, and this one is not — it is probable rather than settled, and the difference matters.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बादल (bādal) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from vārdala, "rainy day, bad weather" (CDIAL 11567).

What you've built

The fourth of five, and the first this chapter has had to hedge on.

Your turn

- Say it: bādal
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: bādal, and let the doubt sit there
- Read it: पीठ
- Recall: say chiṛiyā

Before you move on

What does बादल mean? ("a cloud".) Say it once more.

55.5 आसमान (āsmān) — the sky

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: आसमान

आसमान (āsmān) — "the sky".

A Persian word, āsmān, whose older Iranian form is a cousin of Sanskrit अश्मन् (aśman) — and aśman means 'stone'. The sky was imagined as a stone vault overhead.

Sanskrit's own everyday word for sky, आकाश (ākāśa), is a different word from a different root, and Hindi has both. So the sky above a Hindi speaker can be a Persian stone dome or a Sanskrit open space, depending on which word is reached for.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आसमान (āsmān) is a loan, usually traced to Persian āsmān, "sky".

What you've built

The fifth of five. The sky is furnished.

Your turn

- Say it: āsmān
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: āsmān, and under it sūraj, chā̃d, tārā, bādal
- Recall: say hoṇṭh
- Read it: बकरी

Before you move on

What does आसमान mean? ("the sky".) Say it once more.

Chapter 56

The Road

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five places along the way when I take my leave.
> Complete HI-C56-field and say all five words in order.

56.1 सड़क (saṛak) — a road

Before the new run of words: what did the last two words of the chapter before mean?

You'll want to know: सड़क

सड़क (saṛak) — "a road".

सड़क is an everyday word with a disputed history; the derivations offered for it do not agree, and none has become standard.

It sits oddly beside the four words after it in this chapter, which are all traceable. A chapter of five words is a fair sample of a language, and one unsettled origin in five is about the honest rate.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सड़क (saṛak) is inherited, but CDIAL gives two sources. It first lists the word under Sanskrit sṛti, "road, path" (CDIAL 13577), and in its addenda under śaṭati, "goes" (CDIAL 12269).

What you've built

The first of five places along the way.

Your turn

- Say it: saṛak
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: saṛak, the thing you set out along
- Recall: say gāy
- Read it: सूरज

Before you move on

What does सड़क mean? ("a road".) Say it once more.

56.2 गाँव (gā̃v) — a village

What did the word before this one mean?

You'll want to know: गाँव

गाँव (gā̃v) — "a village".

From Sanskrit ग्राम (grāma), 'village'. The gr- cluster simplified and the m left its nasality behind in the vowel as it went — which is exactly what you watched happen to पाँच when you first counted to five.

Grāma has not disappeared. It is still there, unworn, in the names of thousands of places and in the formal register, so the old form and the new one sit on the same map.

What you've built

The second of five, and the same nasal trade as पाँच.

Your turn

- Say it: gā̃v
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: gā̃v, and feel the nasal where the m used to be
- Recall: say ghoṛā
- Read it: चाँद

Before you move on

What does गाँव mean? ("a village".) Say it once more.

56.3 बाज़ार (bāzār) — a market

Name the 2 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: बाज़ार

बाज़ार (bāzār) — "a market".

Persian bāzār, a market. English borrowed the same word — bazaar — from the same Persian source, by way of Italian traders.

So this is not a cousin but a shared borrowing: Hindi and English both took it from Persian, separately. You met that shape with चाय, which the world took from Chinese by two different roads.

What you've built

The third of five, and a word English took from the same place.

Your turn

- Say it: bāzār
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: bāzār, on the saṛak
- Recall: say machhlī
- Read it: तारा

Before you move on

What does बाज़ार mean? ("a market".) Say it once more.

56.4 दुकान (dukān) — a shop

Name the 3 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: दुकान

दुकान (dukān) — "a shop".

An Arabic word, dukkān, meaning a shop or the raised bench a shopkeeper sits on, which reached Hindi through Persian.

That is the same road that brought you शुक्रिया and मुलाक़ात: Arabic word, Persian carrier, Hindi destination. By now the route should be as familiar as the words on it.

What you've built

The fourth of five, and a well-travelled road you have walked before.

Your turn

- Say it: dukān
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: dukān, in the bāzār
- Recall: say chiṛiyā
- Read it: बादल

Before you move on

What does दुकान mean? ("a shop".) Say it once more.

56.5 खेत (khet) — a field

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: खेत

खेत (khet) — "a field".

From Sanskrit क्षेत्र (kṣetra), 'field, ground'. The kṣ- cluster wore down to kh-, and what is left is one short syllable.

क्षेत्र survives beside it, intact, meaning 'a region, a domain, a field of study' — the abstract sense. One ancestor, two descendants: the dirt and the discipline.

What you've built

The fifth of five. That is the way out of the village.

Your turn

- Say it: khet
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: khet, gãv, saṛak, bāzār, dukān — walk it in order
- Recall: say bakrī
- Read it: आसमान

Before you move on

What does खेत mean? ("a field".) Say it once more.

Chapter 57

A Gift and a Feast

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five things that go with thanks in Hindi.
> Complete HI-C57-sweetness and say all five words in order.

57.1 तोहफ़ा (tohfā) — a present

Before the new run of words: what did the last two words of the chapter before mean?

You'll want to know: तोहफ़ा

तोहफ़ा (tohfā) — "a present".

An Arabic word, tuḥfa, 'a gift, a rarity', arriving through Persian on the same road as दुकान in the chapter before.

It carries a shade the English word does not: a tuḥfa is a gift that is choice, something a little rarer than what the occasion required. That shade is faint in modern Hindi but it has not gone.

What you've built

The first of five things that travel with thanks.

Your turn

- Say it: tohfā

- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: tohfā, as if offering it
- Recall: say sūraj, then say saṛak

Before you move on

What does तोहफ़ा mean? ("a present".) Say it once more.

57.2 दावत (dāvat) — a feast, an invitation

What did the word before this one mean?

You'll want to know: दावत

दावत (dāvat) — "a feast, an invitation".

From Arabic دعوة (da^{c}wa), 'a call, a summons, an invitation', on the root d-^{c}-w, 'to call'.

The meaning slid from the invitation to the meal you were invited to, which is a short slide and a common one. In Hindi दावत can still be either — the calling or the eating — and the sentence decides which.

What you've built

The second of five, and a word that means both the calling and the meal.

Your turn

- Say it: dāvat
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: dāvat, and the tohfā you bring to it
- Read it: चाँद
- Recall: say g̃āv

Before you move on

What does दावत mean? ("a feast, an invitation".) Say it once more.

57.3 थाली (thālī) — a metal platter

Name the 2 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: थाली

थाली (thālī) — "a metal platter".

From Sanskrit स्थाली (sthālī), a cooking pot or dish. The initial sth- cluster lost its s, the same simplification you watched in कंधा.

A थाली is not a plate in the English sense but the round metal tray a whole meal is laid out on at once, small bowls and all — which is why the word names a way of eating and not just an object.

What you've built

The third of five, and the thing the दावत arrives on.

Your turn

- Say it: thālī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: thālī, and on it the dāl and the chāval
- Recall: say tārā
- Read it: बाज़ार

Before you move on

What does थाली mean? ("a metal platter".) Say it once more.

57.4 ख़ुशबू (khushbū) — fragrance

Name the 3 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: ख़ुशबू

ख़ुशबू (khushbū) — "fragrance".

Two Persian pieces, and you already own one of them: khush, 'pleasant', is the khush- inside ख़ुशी, from the first time you were pleased to meet someone. bū is 'smell'. ख़ुशबू is a pleasant smell, said in the plainest way available.

Persian builds a great many words like this, and Hindi took the habit along with the words. Once you can hear the seam in the middle, a whole shelf of vocabulary stops being arbitrary.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ख़ुशबू (khushbū) is a loan, usually traced to Persian khushbū, "fragrance". It is built from khush, "pleasant", the word inside ख़ुशी, "happiness", and bū, "smell".

What you've built

The fourth of five, and the first word you have been able to take apart.

Your turn

- Say it: khushbū
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: khushbū, and hear ख़ुशी in its first half
- Read it: बादल
- Recall: say dukān

Before you move on

What does ख़ुशबू mean? ("fragrance".) Say it once more.

57.5 मिठास (miṭhās) — sweetness

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: मिठास

मिठास (miṭhās) — "sweetness".

मीठा (mīṭhā, 'sweet', from Sanskrit मिष्ट miṣṭa) + -आस (-ās) → मिठास

The long ī shortens to i, and the ending makes an abstract noun out of the adjective, not the sweet thing but the quality itself.

मिठाई, which you met at the end of the welcome chapter, is the same stem with a different ending — the sweet you can hand someone. मिठास is what is in it. One root, one for the tray and one for the taste.

What you've built

The fifth of five. That is what goes with thanks.

Your turn

- Say it: miṭhās
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: miṭhās, and मिठाई beside it
- Recall: say āsmān
- Read it: खेत

Before you move on

What does मिठास mean? ("sweetness".) Say it once more.

Chapter 58

Inside the House

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five parts of a house when I greet someone at it.
> Complete HI-C58-sheet and say all five words in order.

58.1 दीवार (dīvār) — a wall

Before the new run of words: what did the last two words of the chapter before mean?

You'll want to know: दीवार

दीवार (dīvār) — "a wall".

A Persian word, dīvār, 'wall'. Its older Iranian form was a compound, and the piece at the front of it is not certainly identified, so this book will name the Persian and stop there.

It is a loan and not a cousin, which is worth keeping straight: दरवाज़ा, which you already own, is Persian too, and the two of them furnish most of the outside of a Hindi house between them.

What you've built

The first of five parts of the house.

Your turn

- Say it: dīvār
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: dīvār, and दरवाज़ा in it
- Recall: say saṛak
- Read it: तोहफ़ा

Before you move on

What does दीवार mean? ("a wall".) Say it once more.

58.2 छत (chat) — a roof

What did the word before this one mean?

You'll want to know: छत

छत (chat) — "a roof".

From a reconstructed chatti*, 'covering' (CDIAL 4971), on Sanskrit chad-, 'to cover' — the root of छत्र (chatra), a parasol held over a person's head. Roof and parasol are both coverings.

A flat छत in North India is a place people go, not only a lid: it is where washing dries and where the evening is sat out. The word covers the surface and the use at once.

What you've built

The second of five, and a covering that became a roof.

Your turn

- Say it: chat
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: chat, over the dīvār
- Read it: गाँव

- Recall: say dāvat

Before you move on

What does छत mean? ("a roof".) Say it once more.

58.3 खिड़की (khiṛkī) — a window

Name the 2 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: खिड़की

खिड़की (khiṛkī) — "a window".

The origin of खिड़की is not settled, and the derivations offered for it are guesses of varying quality rather than an agreed line.

This is the second time this book has had to say that about a piece of an ordinary house, and it will not be the last. A word being everywhere is no guarantee that its history was written down.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खिड़की (khiṛkī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from khaṭakkikā, "side door" (CDIAL 3770). The Sanskrit word is known only from the old word-lists.

What you've built

The third of five, and another honest gap.

Your turn

- Say it: khiṛkī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: khiṛkī, cut into the dīvār
- Recall: say bāzār, then say thālī

Before you move on

What does खिड़की mean? ("a window".) Say it once more.

58.4 सीढ़ी (sīṛhī) — a staircase, a ladder

Name the 3 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: सीढ़ी

सीढ़ी (sīṛhī) — "a staircase, a ladder".

सीढ़ी is traced to a Sanskrit word for a flight of steps, but the exact form behind it is disputed and the sources differ on which one it was.

The word does not distinguish a staircase from a ladder. Both are सीढ़ी, because what the word names is the going up, not the thing's construction.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सीढ़ी (sīṛhī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from śrīḍhi*, "resting-place, ladder", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 12709).

What you've built

The fourth of five, and one word for two objects.

Your turn

- Say it: sīṛhī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: sīṛhī, up to the chat
- Read it: दुकान
- Recall: say khushbū

Before you move on

What does सीढ़ी mean? ("a staircase, a ladder".) Say it once more.

58.5 चादर (chādar) — a sheet

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: चादर

चादर (chādar) — "a sheet".

Persian chādar, a sheet or a veil — a single broad piece of cloth, whatever it is spread over. English borrowed it too, as chuddar.

So it ends the chapter the way दीवार began it: a Persian word for a plain domestic thing, taken whole. A Hindi house is furnished in two languages at once, and neither of them is hiding.

What you've built

The fifth of five. That is the house, wall to roof.

Your turn

- Say it: chādar
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: chādar, sīṛhī, khiṛkī, chat, dīvār — name the house
- Recall: say khet
- Read it: मिठास

Before you move on

What does चादर mean? ("a sheet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 59

The Vowel You Write and Do Not Say

Modes: ✓ pen (11) 🎧 Hands-free start: none of the 11 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can apply Hindi's word-final schwa deletion so a word I sound out letter by letter comes out the length a speaker says it, write three more matras and both forms of two vowels, nasalise with the chandrabindu, and produce the aspirated and retroflex contrasts English does not have.
> The retroflex position – the single most audible foreign-accent tell in Hindi – closing a chapter that opened with the vowel Hindi writes and does not say.

59.1 नाम — the vowel at the end of a word that you write and do not say

You already hold the whole system: inherent vowel, matra, matra position, virama and conjunct. What is left is shapes – and one rule nobody told you.

Script

How नाम is written, letter by letter, then one headline, stroke by stroke

You know that a bare consonant carries an inherent a. Here is the exception that governs almost every Hindi word, and nobody tells a beginner until they have already mispronounced a hundred of them.

At the end of a word, that inherent vowel is not pronounced.

Take the word for name. Written out piece by piece it is न + ा + म, and reading each piece aloud gives nā-ma. But the word is nām. The final म carries an inherent a that Hindi simply does not say.

This is called schwa deletion, and it is why:

- नाम is nām, not nāma
- घर is ghar, not ghara
- राम is Rām, not Rāma

Sanskrit says the final vowel. Hindi drops it. The spelling is inherited from Sanskrit and never changed; the pronunciation moved on a thousand years ago. Both are true, and the script keeps the older one — exactly as English keeps the k in knight.

Two things follow, and the second is the useful one:

1. A word you sound out letter by letter will end one vowel too long. Trim it.
2. This is not a special case to memorise per word. It is the default. Say the final consonant bare unless something is written after it.

Your turn

- Write it: नाम
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What happens to the inherent vowel at the end of a Hindi word? (It is not pronounced.) So how is नाम said? (nām, not nāma.) And why is the vowel still written? (The spelling is inherited from Sanskrit; the sound moved on.)
Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

59.2 ी — the long ee, and the mātrā that blocks more words than any other

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How it is written — one unbroken stroke · 3 movements

Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Devanagari recognizer, class 49 (ii sign): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native writers (MIT licence, 2012)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ी is written, stroke by stroke

ī, the long ee of English see. It stands to the right of its consonant, with a curve that rises and hooks back over the head-line to the left.

Keep it apart from the ā mātrā you already know: that one is a plain upright, this one carries the hook. In fast handwriting the hook is the only difference, and it changes the word.

Of every piece of Devanagari this book still owes you, this one unlocks the most words — it appears in more of the lessons ahead than any other single mark.

Your turn

- Write it: ी
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What sound does ी add? (ī, the ee of see.) How do you tell it from the ā mātrā? (The hook back over the head-line.)
Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

59.3 ु — a mātrā that hangs BELOW the letter

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How ु is written, stroke by stroke

u, the short oo of English put. And it introduces a position you have not met: it hangs below the consonant, tucked under its foot.

You now have mātrās in three places — to the right, above, and below. Position is part of a character's identity, not decoration, and a reader learns to look all the way around a consonant rather than only after it.

The long version of this vowel hangs below too, with an extra tail. Both are written under the letter they belong to, never beside it.

Your turn

- Write it: ु
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Where does this mātrā sit? (Below the consonant.) How many positions have you now met? (Three — right, above, below.) Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

59.4 ै — two strokes above the head-line, and one of the commonest endings in the language

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

ai, roughly the vowel of English cat in most of Hindi. It sits above the head-line as two short strokes.

Its single-stroke relative is the e mātrā, and the difference is exactly one stroke — one stroke for e, two for ai. Miscount and you have a different word.

This one is worth the attention because of where it turns up: है, the word for is, ends in it, and that word appears in almost every sentence you will ever read.

Your turn

- Write it: ै
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How many strokes above the head-line? (Two — one is a different vowel.) And which very common word ends in it? (है, is.)
Source: Unicode Devanagari chart.

59.5 आ — the independent vowel, for when a word begins with it

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How आ is written, stroke by stroke

आ

You know the ā mātrā. It only works attached to a consonant, so when a word begins with that vowel there is nothing to attach it to.

This is the character for that job: an independent vowel, standing on its own.

These are two different characters, not two styles of one. A font, a keyboard and this book treat them as entirely separate, and confusing them is the commonest spelling error in every Indic script. What decides which you write is position, not sound — this one begins a word, the mātrā rides on a consonant.

Look at the shape: it is the independent a with the same upright the mātrā uses added on the right. The relationship is visible, which is a rare kindness.

Your turn

- Write it: आ
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which one begins a word? (आ.) Which rides on a consonant? (ा.)

59.6 ई — the independent form of the long ee

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How ई is written, stroke by stroke

ई

The same job as the last lesson, for the vowel you learned two lessons ago: this is ī standing on its own, for a word that begins with it.

The pattern is now visible and it is worth naming, because it repeats for every vowel in the script:

> every vowel has two forms — one independent, for the start of a word, and one mātrā, for riding on a consonant.

That is not two alphabets. It is one alphabet with a positional rule, and you have now met it three times.

Your turn

How many forms does a Devanagari vowel have? (Two — independent and mātrā.) What decides which you write? (Position in the word.)

59.7 ँ — a moon and a dot that send the vowel through the nose

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ँ is written, stroke by stroke

Not a vowel. The chandrabindu — chandra "moon", bindu "dot" — a crescent with a dot inside it, sitting above the head-line.

It does not change which vowel you say. It says: send that vowel through your nose.

English does this constantly and never writes it. Say bad, then ban — the vowel in the second is nasalised before you reach the n. Hindi writes what English leaves implicit, and here it is meaning-bearing: drop the mark and you have a different word.

You already draw the plain dot without the crescent — the anusvāra — and it does the same job. Which of the two a word takes depends on what else is sitting above the letter: where there is no room for the crescent, the plain dot does the work. Crescent plus dot, or dot alone, both mean through the nose.

What does the chandrabindu do? (Nasalises the vowel.) Does it change which vowel you say? (No.) And what do its two parts mean? (Moon and dot.)

59.8 भ — an aspirated consonant

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How भ is written, stroke by stroke

भ

bha — and the h is not decoration. This is b followed by a real puff of breath, and Hindi has a separate letter for it.

Hold your palm in front of your mouth. English bin gives almost no air; this letter demands a clear push. English treats the difference as an accident of emphasis; Hindi treats it as the difference between two words.

Devanagari is systematic about it: nearly every consonant has an unaspirated and an aspirated partner, written as different letters, and the aspirated one usually looks like a variation on its plain twin. Once you know the pattern you can read half the alphabet from the other half.

Your turn

- Write it: भ
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

What does the h in bha mean? (A real puff of breath.) Does Hindi treat that as a different letter? (Yes — and a different word.)

59.9 य — the consonant ya

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How य is written, stroke by stroke

य ya, the y of English yes, plus the inherent vowel.

A plain consonant with no new machinery — and by now that sentence should feel like the point rather than an apology. Everything you learn from here is a shape. The rules were all taught in the first script chapters: inherent vowel, mātrā, mātrā position, virama and conjunct, and the two forms of every vowel.

Your turn

- Write it: य
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is the inherent vowel in य? (a — but not at the end of a word.) And what remains to learn in this script — rules, or shapes? (Shapes.)

59.10 ब — the plain twin of an aspirated letter you already know

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How ब is written, stroke by stroke

ब

ba — the b of English bin, with no puff of air.

Now put it beside the aspirated letter from a moment ago. Same family, same basic skeleton, one extra stroke on the aspirated one. That is the pattern this script uses across the whole consonant chart, and seeing it once here means you can guess at pairs you have not met.

Two letters, one distinction, and English speakers hear it as no distinction at all — which is why it is worth the whole lesson.

Your turn

- Write it: ब

Which of the two has the puff of air? (भ.) And what is the shape relationship? (The aspirated one is a variation on the plain twin.)

59.11 ड — a consonant made with the tongue curled back

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

Stroke order after Opiaterein, 'Deva-21-order.gif', strokes 1–2, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ड is written, stroke by stroke

ड

ḍa — and the dot under the transliteration is doing real work.

This is a retroflex: the tongue tip curls back and touches the roof of the mouth well behind the teeth. Hindi has a full retroflex set, and each one contrasts with a dental partner made with the tongue against the back of the teeth.

English has neither. Its d sits between the two, which is why an English speaker saying a Hindi word usually lands in the gap and is understood as neither. This is the single most audible foreign-accent tell in Hindi, more than any vowel.

The good news is that it is a position, not a sound to hear. Curl the tongue back and the rest follows.

Chapter 60

Animals in the Yard

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five more animals when I greet the house that keeps them.
> Complete HI-C60-peacock and say all five words in order.

60.1 बंदर (bandar) — a monkey

Before the new run of words: which letter did the piece before this one give you, and where does the tongue go for it?

You'll want to know: बंदर

बंदर (bandar) — "a monkey".

From Sanskrit वानर (vānara), 'monkey', a word many readers of Sanskrit connect with वन (vana), 'forest' — the one who belongs to the woods. Prakrit wore it down and a nasal crept in at the front, and बंदर came out the other end.

Keep one thing straight before you travel. Persian has its own bandar, spelt the same in our letters, and it means a harbour — it is the bandar inside a dozen port names on the Indian Ocean. Two different words that happen to sound alike, not one word with two jobs.

What you've built

The first of five animals.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bandar
- it once more, slowly
- bandar, then ghoṛā, and say which of them a house keeps on purpose

Before you move on

What does बंदर mean? ("a monkey".) Say it once more.

60.2 ़ — the dot you have been reading and nobody named

Two letters you can draw: ड and ढ. Say each one.

Now look at बड़ा and पढ़ना. Something is under the letter in each of them that is not under the bare letter above.

Script you'll notice: ़

़ — a single dot, sitting below the consonant.

It is not a vowel sign. A vowel sign changes the vowel a consonant carries. This one changes the consonant itself into a different sound, and the letter underneath keeps its shape.

Worked through: ड + ़ = ड़.

The order is carrier first, dot second. The reference that defines this mark describes where the dot sits and what it combines with, not the order a hand should move in, so take carrier-first as a convention of this book rather than a rule handed down. Source: The Unicode Consortium, The Unicode Standard, Version 17.0, Core Specification, section 12.1.3 'Combining Marks', U+093C Devanagari Sign Nukta, 2025.

Script: the two that flap

letter	with the dot	sound
ड	ड़	ṛa
ढ	ढ़	ṛha

The tongue taps the roof of the mouth once and flicks forward. It is a flap rather than a held sound.

Every one of these was yours long before this page:

- बड़ा — big
- सड़क — road
- खिड़की — window
- पढ़ना — to read
- सीढ़ी — stair

Read them again and this time the dot is part of what you are reading. Look at where in each word the dotted letter falls.

Writing: ़ — follow the numbered strip

How it is written — one unbroken stroke · 1 movement

Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Devanagari recognizer, class 62 (nukta): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native writers (MIT licence, 2012)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ़ is written, stroke by stroke

Draw the consonant the way you already draw it. Then put one dot below it, under the middle of the letter, clear of the line.

Put your pen on ड़ and follow it. Copy the shape slowly and larger than it is printed.

> The strip shows where to start the dot and which way to make it, in one attested order. That is taught with real variation from school to school, so the strip names its source beneath it: treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

Your turn

- Look: at these two words and find the dot in each

  सड़क · सीढ़ी

- Trace it: ड़ three times, saying ṛa as you finish each one
- Say it: what the dot changes — the vowel, or the consonant

Before you move on

Where does ़ sit? (Below the consonant.) What does it change? (The consonant, not the vowel.) Name a word you have read for weeks that carries it.

60.3 साँप (sā̃p) — a snake

Before the new one: what did bandar mean?

You'll want to know: साँप

साँप (sā̃p) — "a snake".

From Sanskrit सर्प (sarpa), 'snake', built on सृप् (sṛp-), 'to creep'. The animal is named for what it does, and Latin did exactly the same thing: serpēns is 'the creeping one', from the very same ancient root.

So English serpent and Hindi साँप are the same word, four thousand years apart, and neither of them borrowed it from the other. The r of सर्प melted into the p, and the nose-vowel you learnt to write is what is left standing where it was.

What you've built

Two.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sā̃p
- it once more, slowly
- sā̃p, then bandar, and say which one you would rather meet

Before you move on

What does साँप mean? ("a snake".) Say it once more.

60.4 मुर्गी (murgī) — a hen

Before the new one: what did sā̃p mean?

You'll want to know: मुर्गी

मुर्गी (murgī) — "a hen".

Persian مرغ (murgh) meant a bird of any kind, and Hindi narrowed it to the one bird a household actually keeps. मुर्गा (murgā) is the cock, मुर्गी the hen.

This one earns its place at dawn. A मुर्गा wakes a village well before any clock does, which is a large part of why nobody in that village ever needed a घंटा to do the same job. And note what it is not: चिड़िया, which you already own, stays with the small wild birds.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मुर्गी (murgī) is a loan, usually traced to Persian murgh, "bird, fowl". Hindi names the hen with -ī and the cock murgā.

What you've built

Three.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- murgī
- it once more, slowly
- murgī, then chiṛiyā, and say which one lives in the yard

Before you move on

What does मुर्गी mean? ("a hen".) Say it once more.

60.5 भैंस (bhaĩs) — a buffalo

Before the new one: what did murgī mean?

You'll want to know: भैंस

भैंस (bhaĩs) — "a buffalo".

From Sanskrit महिषी (mahiṣī), the female of महिष (mahiṣa), 'buffalo'. The feminine is the form that survived into everyday Hindi, because the female is the animal a household has reason to talk about every day.

Most of the milk in North India comes from a भैंस and not from a गाय, which is the opposite of what an English speaker expects. दूध and the sweets built on it all start here.

What you've built

Four.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bhaĩs
- it once more, slowly
- bhaĩs, then gāy, and say which one fills the दूध pail

Before you move on

What does भैंस mean? ("a buffalo".) Say it once more.

60.6 मोर (mor) — a peacock

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: मोर

मोर (mor) — "a peacock".

From Sanskrit मयूर (mayūra). The y dropped out, the two vowels ran together, and a three-piece word became a one-piece one — the same wearing-down you have watched happen to a dozen words by now.

मयूर itself is still alive in formal Hindi and in names, so the two forms sit side by side: the old one on a wedding card, मोर in the yard. And the yard is where you meet it — a मोर walks into a village at dusk the way a pigeon walks into a city square.

What you've built

Five: बंदर, साँप, मुर्गी, भैंस, मोर. Enough to name what lives around a house you are greeting.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mor
- it once more, slowly
- all five in order, then namaste to whoever keeps them

Before you move on

What does मोर mean? ("a peacock".) Say it once more.

Chapter 61

At the Cooking Fire

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five things at a Hindi cooking fire and ask for them politely.
> Complete HI-C61-stove and say all five words in order.

61.1 बर्तन (bartan) — a cooking vessel

Before the new run of words: what did mor mean, and what did bhaĩs mean?

You'll want to know: बर्तन

बर्तन (bartan) — "a cooking vessel".

बर्तन is the word that goes with बरतना (baratnā), 'to handle, to make use of', and behind both stands Sanskrit वृत् (vṛt-), 'to turn, to carry on'. A बर्तन is, quite literally, a thing in use.

That is why one word covers the whole shelf. A pot, a pan, a tray, a lid — each has its own name, and all of them together are बर्तन. Ask politely for बर्तन and you have asked for whatever the cooking needs.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of बर्तन (bartan) is uncertain. It is often traced to Sanskrit vartana, but CDIAL does not list it, and its vartana means "turning, rolling" (CDIAL 11354).

What you've built

The first of five things at the fire.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bartan
- it once more, slowly
- bartan, then thālī, and say which of them is the whole shelf

Before you move on

What does बर्तन mean? ("a cooking vessel".) Say it once more.

61.2 ज़ फ़ ख़ क़ — the same dot, a different job

The mark from before: where does it sit, and what does it change?

On ड and ढ it made a flap. On these four it does something else — it lets the letter carry a sound that came into Hindi from outside it.

Script you'll notice: ज़ फ़ ख़ क़

letter	with the dot	sound
ज	ज़	za
फ	फ़	fa
ख	ख़	xa
क	क़	qa

ज़ is the z of English zoo. फ़ is the f of far. ख़ is made further back than ख, at the soft palate. क़ is made further back than क, at the very top of the throat.

Many speakers say the plain letter for all four and are understood. The dot is still printed, so a reader has to know it.

Script: words you already say

- ज़रूर — certainly · मेज़ — table · दरवाज़ा — door
- सफ़ेद — white · सफ़र — a journey · तोहफ़ा — a gift
- ख़ुशी — happiness · ख़ुशबू — fragrance
- मुलाक़ात — a meeting

One pair you have met already. खाना and ख़ाना were taught together, and the dot between them was named there as a fact about those two words. It is the same dot, and it is doing the same job in every word on this page. That lesson also told you the truth about it: the dot is often left off in print, and a reader sorts the two out from context.

Writing: the dotted four — copy what you see

The letter is drawn exactly as you draw it bare. One dot goes below, clear of the line.

Put your pen on ज़ and follow it, then फ़. Copy slowly and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not tell you where to start the character or which way to travel. That is a real thing, taught with real variation from school to school, and it is not written down here until it can be written down with a source.

Your turn

- Look: at these two words and say which one means food

  खाना · ख़ाना

- Say it: ज़रूर and मेज़ aloud, letting the dotted letter buzz like z
- Trace it: फ़ three times, saying fa as you finish each one

Before you move on

Which four letters take the dot for a borrowed sound? Name the sound each one carries. What tells खाना from ख़ाना on the page?

61.3 चम्मच (chammach) — a spoon

Before the new one: what did bartan mean?

You'll want to know: चम्मच

चम्मच (chammach) — "a spoon".

Sanskrit had चमस (camasa), a wooden ladle lifted at sacrifices, and चम्मच sits close enough to it that the two are often printed together. The road between them is not clean, though, so this book will show you the pair and stop there.

What is certain is the shape of the modern word: a doubled m in the middle, and the stress landing forward. Say it twice and you will hear that it is built to be said quickly, the way the names of small everyday objects usually are.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चम्मच (chammach) is a loan, usually traced to Persian chamcha, "spoon, ladle", a word Persian itself took from Turkic.

What you've built

Two.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chammach
- it once more, slowly
- chammach, then bartan, and say which one goes inside the other

Before you move on

What does चम्मच mean? ("a spoon".) Say it once more.

61.4 गिलास (gilās) — a tumbler

Before the new one: what did chammach mean?

You'll want to know: गिलास

गिलास (gilās) — "a tumbler".

This one is English glass, taken whole. It arrived with the object, the way कैमरा arrived with the camera, and Hindi gave it a vowel in the middle so that a Hindi mouth could get through the gl- at the front.

Watch what happened to the meaning on the way in. A Hindi गिलास is a drinking tumbler and is very often made of steel, so the English word for the material now names an object in a language where the object is usually not made of it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

गिलास (gilās) is a loan from English glass.

What you've built

Three.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- gilās
- it once more, slowly
- gilās, then pānī in it

Before you move on

What does गिलास mean? ("a tumbler".) Say it once more.

61.5 तवा (tavā) — a flat iron griddle

Before the new one: what did gilās mean?

You'll want to know: तवा

तवा (tavā) — "a flat iron griddle".

Usually traced to a Sanskrit word on the root तप् (tap-), 'to heat, to burn' — the heater. The same root is inside तपस्, the heat of hard practice, so the kitchen and the hermitage turn out to share a syllable.

A तवा is a flat iron disc over the fire, and it is what रोटी is made on. No तवा, no रोटी: the bread you met early on is defined by the surface it is cooked on as much as by the flour.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तवा (tavā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from tapaka*, "frying pan", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 5670). It is built on the verb tap-, "to heat".

What you've built

Four.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tavā
- it once more, slowly
- tavā, then roṭī, and say which one comes off the other

Before you move on

What does तवा mean? ("a flat iron griddle".) Say it once more.

61.6 चूल्हा (chūlhā) — a cooking fire

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: चूल्हा

चूल्हा (chūlhā) — "a cooking fire".

From Sanskrit चुल्ली (cullī), 'fireplace, hearth'. The oldest चूल्हा is a horseshoe of packed clay on the floor, fed with wood at the front, with the तवा sitting on top of it.

It also counts households. To say two brothers have separate चूल्हे is to say they no longer eat as one family — the fire, not the roof, is what marks where one household ends. A gas ring in a city flat inherits the word and the meaning both.

What you've built

Five: बर्तन, चम्मच, गिलास, तवा, चूल्हा. Enough to ask for what the cooking needs.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chūlhā
- it once more, slowly
- all five in order, then kṛpayā in front of it

Before you move on

What does चूल्हा mean? ("a cooking fire".) Say it once more.

Chapter 62

What Hands Work With

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five things a pair of hands works with when I say what something is called.
> Complete HI-C62-wood and say all five words in order.

62.1 रस्सी (rassī) — a rope

Before the new run of words: what did chūlhā mean, and what did tavā mean?

You'll want to know: रस्सी

रस्सी (rassī) — "a rope".

From Sanskrit रश्मि (raśmi), which meant a cord or a rein — and also a ray of the sun. One word held both, because a ray was pictured as a thread let down from the sky.

Hindi kept the thread and let the light go: रस्सी is plain rope, the kind that draws a bucket up out of the ground. The bright half of रश्मि survives in names and in poetry, so the two halves of the old word now live in different registers.

What you've built

The first of five things hands work with.

Your turn

- Say it: rassī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: rassī, then sūraj, and say what the old word held in common
- Recall: say bandar
- Read it: बर्तन

Before you move on

What does रस्सी mean? ("a rope".) Say it once more.

62.2 सूई (sūī) — a needle

Before the new one: what did rassī mean?

You'll want to know: सूई

सूई (sūī) — "a needle".

From Sanskrit sūcī, 'needle', on सूच् (sūc-), 'to point out, to indicate'. A needle is named for the fact that it points.

The same root gives Hindi's everyday word for 'information', the one on every notice board and news bulletin — a thing pointed out to you. A tailor's tool and a public announcement, off one small Sanskrit word about pointing.

What you've built

Two.

Your turn

- Say it: sūī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: sūī, then kapṛā, and say which one goes through the other
- Read it: साँप
- Recall: say chammach

Before you move on

What does सूई mean? ("a needle".) Say it once more.

62.3 टोकरी (ṭokrī) — a basket

Before the new one: what did sūī mean?

You'll want to know: टोकरी

टोकरी (ṭokrī) — "a basket".

Here the trail stops early. टोकरी has no agreed Sanskrit ancestor, and the retroflex ट at the front is the sound most often credited to old contact with the Dravidian languages of the south — the same honest gap you already met under पेट.

A टोकरी is woven, usually from split cane or from the ribs of a leaf, and it is what सब्ज़ी comes home from the बाज़ार in. Light, cheap, and mended rather than replaced.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

टोकरी (ṭokrī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from ṭokka*, "basket", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 5477). The -r- is an added suffix.

What you've built

Three.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭokrī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: ṭokrī, then sabzī in it
- Recall: say murgī
- Read it: गिलास

Before you move on

What does टोकरी mean? ("a basket".) Say it once more.

62.4 मिट्टी (miṭṭī) — clay, earth

Before the new one: what did ṭokrī mean?

You'll want to know: मिट्टी

मिट्टी (miṭṭī) — "clay, earth".

From Sanskrit मृत्तिका (mṛttikā), 'earth, clay', on मृद् (mṛd), 'soil'. Five syllables became two, and the meaning did not move at all.

One word does the work of two English ones. मिट्टी is the ground under a field and the material a दीया is pinched out of — and the दीया you already own is the clearest case, since it is thrown away after one night and goes back to being मिट्टी.

What you've built

Four.

Your turn

- Say it: miṭṭī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: miṭṭī, then dīyā, and say which one the other is made of
- Read it: भैंस
- Recall: say tavā

Before you move on

What does मिट्टी mean? ("clay, earth".) Say it once more.

62.5 लकड़ी (lakṛī) — wood, a stick of firewood

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: लकड़ी

लकड़ी (lakṛī) — "wood, a stick of firewood".

Usually traced back to Sanskrit लगुड (laguḍa), 'a club, a staff', through a Prakrit form with a doubled consonant in the middle. A word for a stick you swing became the word for the stuff a stick is made of.

लकड़ी is both, in fact: the material and one piece of it. A bundle of it under the arm is what feeds the चूल्हा, which is why this word and that one turn up in the same sentence more often than any other pair in this book.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

लकड़ी (lakṛī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from lakuṭa, "club, stick" (CDIAL 10875). It came through a variant lakkuṭa*.

What you've built

Five: रस्सी, सूई, टोकरी, मिट्टी, लकड़ी. Enough to say what a working pair of hands is holding.

Your turn

- Say it: lakṛī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: all five in order, then merā nām and your own name
- Recall: say mor
- Read it: चूल्हा

Before you move on

What does लकड़ी mean? ("wood, a stick of firewood".) Say it once more.

Chapter 63

What the Body Tells You

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what my body is telling me when someone asks how I am.
> Complete HI-C63-pain and say all five words in order.

63.1 भूख (bhūkh) — hunger

Before the new run of words: what did lakṛī mean, and what did miṭṭī mean?

You'll want to know: भूख

भूख (bhūkh) — "hunger".

From Sanskrit बुभुक्षा (bubhukṣā), 'the wish to eat', built on भुज् (bhuj-), 'to eat, to enjoy'. The old form doubles its own first syllable, which is how Sanskrit marked wanting to do a thing rather than doing it.

So भूख was never the state of an empty stomach — it was the appetite, the wanting. A speaker says भूख belongs to them rather than that they are it, and the wanting is the thing that is owned.

What you've built

The first of five things a body reports.

Your turn

- Say it: bhūkh
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: bhūkh, then roṭī, and say which one settles the other
- Recall: say bartan
- Read it: रस्सी

Before you move on

What does भूख mean? ("hunger".) Say it once more.

63.2 प्यास (pyās) — thirst

Before the new one: what did bhūkh mean?

You'll want to know: प्यास

प्यास (pyās) — "thirst".

From Sanskrit पिपासा (pipāsā), 'the wish to drink', on पा (pā-), 'to drink' — and doubling its first syllable exactly the way बुभुक्षा does. The two words were made in the same workshop on the same day.

पा is the root under पानी, the word you have had since the water lesson: 'the drinkable one'. So प्यास and पानी are the wanting and the thing wanted, cut from a single syllable.

What you've built

Two.

Your turn

- Say it: pyās
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: pyās, then pānī, and say which one ends the other
- Read it: चम्मच
- Recall: say sūī

Before you move on

What does प्यास mean? ("thirst".) Say it once more.

63.3 नींद (nīnd) — sleep

Before the new one: what did pyās mean?

You'll want to know: नींद

नींद (nīnd) — "sleep".

From Sanskrit निद्रा (nidrā), 'sleep'. The r went, the vowel picked up the nose-mark you learnt to write, and निद्रा turned into नींद without changing its meaning by a hair.

It patterns with भूख and प्यास: a speaker says नींद is coming to them, not that they are sleepy. Three states in a row that Hindi treats as visitors rather than as things you are.

What you've built

Three.

Your turn

- Say it: nīnd
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: nīnd, then rāt, and say which one brings the other
- Recall: say gilās
- Read it: टोकरी

Before you move on

What does नींद mean? ("sleep".) Say it once more.

63.4 बुख़ार (bukhār) — a fever

Before the new one: what did nīnd mean?

You'll want to know: बुख़ार

बुख़ार (bukhār) — "a fever".

An Arabic word, bukhār, that came in through Persian. Its plain sense is steam or vapour — the mist that comes off hot water.

Older medicine pictured a fever as exactly that: a vapour rising inside a body. The picture was wrong and the word stayed, which happens more often than not. Note the dot under the ख़, the same dot you have already met inside ख़ुशी.

What you've built

Four.

Your turn

- Say it: bukhār
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: bukhār, then ṭhīk, and say which one you would rather report
- Read it: तवा
- Recall: say miṭṭī

Before you move on

What does बुख़ार mean? ("a fever".) Say it once more.

63.5 दर्द (dard) — pain

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: दर्द

दर्द (dard) — "pain".

A Persian word, dard, and it is usually traced to a very old root meaning 'to split, to tear' — the same root that surfaces in English tear, in the sense of ripping cloth.

दर्द covers the ache in a घुटना and the grief in a chest with one word, and Urdu poetry leans on that double reach so hard that the word now sounds a little literary even when it is plainly medical.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दर्द (dard) is a loan, usually traced to Persian dard, "pain".

What you've built

Five: भूख, प्यास, नींद, बुख़ार, दर्द. Enough to answer honestly when someone asks how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: dard
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: all five in order, then ṭhīk, if you are
- Recall: say chūlhā
- Read it: लकड़ी

Before you move on

What does दर्द mean? ("pain".) Say it once more.

Chapter 64

How Much and How Fast

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how much and how fast in Hindi when I answer someone.
> Complete HI-C64-more and say all five words in order.

64.1 अब (ab) — now, from this point on

Before the new run of words: what did dard mean, and what did bukhār mean?

You'll want to know: अब

अब (ab) — "now, from this point on".

The dictionaries do not agree on where अब came from, and this book will say so rather than invent a chain. What it does is clear enough, and that is worth more here than a pedigree.

अब draws a line: everything before it was one way, and from here on things are another. That is what separates it from अभी, which you already own — अभी is this very second, अब is from this second onward. ab and abhī look alike and do different work.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अब (ab) is inherited. CDIAL lists it under Sanskrit evam eva, "exactly so", crossed with the pronoun stem a-, "this", and lists kab, "when", tab, "then", and jab, "when", beside it, each crossed with its own pronoun stem (CDIAL 2528).

What you've built

The first of five words of degree and pace.

Your turn

- Say it: ab
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: ab, then abhī, and say which one draws a line
- Recall: say rassī
- Read it: भूख

Before you move on

What does अब mean? ("now, from this point on".) Say it once more.

64.2 जल्दी (jaldī) — quickly, soon

Before the new one: what did ab mean?

You'll want to know: जल्दी

जल्दी (jaldī) — "quickly, soon".

From Persian jald, 'brisk, quick', itself an Arabic word, with the ending Persian hangs on such words to make a quality-word. So जल्दी began as 'quickness' and ended up doing the work of 'quickly' and 'soon' at once.

Hindi still keeps both jobs alive. जल्दी on its own tells someone to hurry; जल्दी beside a plan means it will happen before long. The word does not distinguish speed from nearness in time, and speakers hear which one from the sentence around it.

What you've built

Two.

Your turn

- Say it: jaldī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: jaldī, then phir milenge
- Read it: सूई
- Recall: say pyās

Before you move on

What does जल्दी mean? ("quickly, soon".) Say it once more.

64.3 धीरे (dhīre) — slowly

Before the new one: what did jaldī mean?

You'll want to know: धीरे

धीरे (dhīre) — "slowly".

From Sanskrit धीर (dhīra), which meant steady, calm, firm of mind. Hindi's word for slow is the old word for unhurried, and the compliment inside it never quite left.

Doubled — धीरे धीरे — it means 'little by little', and that doubled form is the one you will hear most. Saying a word twice to mean a gentle continuing is one of the most useful habits Hindi has.

What you've built

Three.

Your turn

- Say it: dhīre
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: dhīre, then jaldī, and say which one you would ask a speaker for

- Recall: say ṭokrī
- Read it: नींद

Before you move on

What does धीरे mean? ("slowly".) Say it once more.

64.4 कम (kam) — little, not much

Before the new one: what did dhīre mean?

You'll want to know: कम

कम (kam) — "little, not much".

Persian kam, 'few, little', taken in whole. It answers 'how much' with a shrug downward, and it can sit in front of almost anything a speaker wants to play down.

One warning, and it is about our letters rather than about Hindi. कमरा, the room you learnt in the house arc, begins with the same two sounds and has nothing whatever to do with कम — it walked in from Portuguese. In Devanagari nobody would confuse them; in a romanization kam and kamrā sit uncomfortably close.

What you've built

Four.

Your turn

- Say it: kam
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: kam, then kamrā, and say which one is Persian
- Read it: मिट्टी
- Recall: say bukhār

Before you move on

What does कम mean? ("little, not much".) Say it once more.

64.5 ज़्यादा (zyādā) — a lot, more

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: ज़्यादा

ज़्यादा (zyādā) — "a lot, more".

Arabic زيادة (ziyāda), 'an increase', through Persian. It is the exact counterweight of कम, and the two of them are the fastest way in Hindi to answer 'how much' without naming a number.

The nukta under the ज़ is doing real work, the same as in ज़रूर. Drop it and you have a different consonant; keep it and you have the sound Persian and Arabic brought with the word.

What you've built

Five: अब, जल्दी, धीरे, कम, ज़्यादा. Enough to answer how much and how fast.

Your turn

- Say it: zyādā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: all five in order, then bilkul
- Recall: say lakṛī
- Read it: दर्द

Before you move on

What does ज़्यादा mean? ("a lot, more".) Say it once more.

Chapter 65

Asking Nicely

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for something in Hindi with the courtesy word the occasion asks for.
> Complete HI-C65-manners and say all five words in order.

65.1 मेहरबानी (mehrabānī) — kindness

Before the new run of words: what did zyādā mean, and what did kam mean?

You'll want to know: मेहरबानी

मेहरबानी (mehrabānī) — "kindness".

Persian mihrbān, 'kind', with the quality-ending on the back of it. Under mihrbān is mihr, an old Iranian word for love and for the sun, and the god Mithra before either.

Two words in your Hindi now begin meh- and are not related at all: मेहमान, the guest, is Persian mihmān, a different word entirely. Same opening syllable in our letters, separate families.

What you've built

The first of five words for asking well.

Your turn

- Say it: mehrabānī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: mehrabānī, then mehmān, and say which one is the guest
- Recall: say bhūkh
- Read it: अब

Before you move on

What does मेहरबानी mean? ("kindness".) Say it once more.

65.2 विनती (vintī) — an entreaty

Before the new one: what did mehrabānī mean?

You'll want to know: विनती

विनती (vintī) — "an entreaty".

Usually derived from Sanskrit विज्ञप्ति (vijñapti), 'a respectful making-known', which is what a petition to a king was called. The heavy conjunct in the middle collapsed on its way through Prakrit and left विनती.

It sits above कृपया in weight. कृपया goes in front of a request the way 'please' does; विनती is the request itself, offered from below, and it turns up in prayer and in a plea as often as in ordinary speech.

What you've built

Two.

Your turn

- Say it: vintī
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: vintī, then kṛpayā, and say which one is the asking itself
- Read it: प्यास
- Recall: say jaldī

Before you move on

What does विनती mean? ("an entreaty".) Say it once more.

65.3 अनुमति (anumati) — permission

Before the new one: what did vintī mean?

You'll want to know: अनुमति

अनुमति (anumati) — "permission".

Sanskrit, and transparent: अनु (anu), 'along with, after', plus मति (mati), 'thought'. Permission is thinking along with someone — agreeing in mind before agreeing in words.

It is the formal one. On a form, at a desk, or in front of anyone whose yes carries weight, अनुमति is the word; among friends nobody says it. Hindi keeps a Sanskrit word in reserve for exactly these rooms.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अनुमति (anumati) is Sanskrit anumati, "assent, permission", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama.

What you've built

Three.

Your turn

- Say it: anumati
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: anumati, then dhanyavād
- Recall: say nīnd
- Read it: धीरे

Before you move on

What does अनुमति mean? ("permission".) Say it once more.

65.4 भरोसा (bharosā) — trust

Before the new one: what did anumati mean?

You'll want to know: भरोसा

भरोसा (bharosā) — "trust".

Usually built on भर (bhara), 'a load, a support', from the root भृ (bhṛ-), 'to bear, to carry'. Trust is named as the thing that takes your weight.

That picture runs through the way the word is said, too: a speaker puts भरोसा on someone rather than in them. The load goes on top, and the person underneath either holds or does not.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

भरोसा (bharosā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from bharavaśya*, "dependence on support", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 9398). It is built from bhara, "support", and vaśa, "power, control".

What you've built

Four.

Your turn

- Say it: bharosā
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: bharosā, then dost, and say who takes the weight
- Read it: बुख़ार
- Recall: say kam

Before you move on

What does भरोसा mean? ("trust".) Say it once more.

65.5 अदब (adab) — good manners

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: अदब

अदब (adab) — "good manners".

Arabic adab, and here is the surprise: the same word means literature. Courtesy and letters were one idea — the cultivation that makes a person fit company, whether it shows in a bow or on a page.

Guard it against आदर, which you already own. ādar is respect you feel and show upward; adab is the whole trained manner a person carries. Close in our letters, and not the same word.

What you've built

Five: मेहरबानी, विनती, अनुमति, भरोसा, अदब. Enough to ask for a thing at the weight the room asks for.

Your turn

- Say it: adab
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: all five in order, then dhanyavād
- Recall: say dard
- Read it: ज़्यादा

Before you move on

What does अदब mean? ("good manners".) Say it once more.

Chapter 66

The Field and the Well

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five things in a Hindi field before I take my leave.
> Complete HI-C66-well and say all five words in order.

66.1 बीज (bīj) — a seed

Before the new run of words: what did adab mean, and what did bharosā mean?

You'll want to know: बीज

बीज (bīj) — "a seed".

Sanskrit बीज (bīja), 'seed', carried into Hindi with nothing changed but the final vowel, which the schwa rule you have just learnt takes off the end.

It reaches well past the field. बीज is the seed of a plant, the germ of an idea, and the origin of anything at all — one of a small set of Hindi words that a farmer and a philosopher both use without either sounding odd.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बीज (bīj) is Sanskrit bīja, "seed", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama (CDIAL 9250). CDIAL lists the inherited forms of the same word as biyā and bīā.

What you've built

The first of five things a field holds.

Your turn

- Say it: bīj
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: bīj, then khet, and say which one goes into the other
- Recall: say ab
- Read it: मेहरबानी

Before you move on

What does बीज mean? ("a seed".) Say it once more.

66.2 फ़सल (fasal) — a crop

Before the new one: what did bīj mean?

You'll want to know: फ़सल

फ़सल (fasal) — "a crop".

Arabic faṣl, whose plain sense is a division or a section — a cut piece of something larger. From there it came to name a season, and from there the thing a season yields.

North India counts its year in two of them, the winter sowing and the monsoon sowing, so फ़सल names the harvest and the stretch of months that produced it at once. Ask a किसान how the फ़सल is and you have asked about the weather, the work and the money together.

What you've built

Two.

Your turn

- Say it: fasal
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: fasal, then kisān, and say who watches the other
- Read it: जल्दी
- Recall: say vintī

Before you move on

What does फ़सल mean? ("a crop".) Say it once more.

66.3 अनाज (anāj) — grain

Before the new one: what did fasal mean?

You'll want to know: अनाज

अनाज (anāj) — "grain".

Usually traced to Sanskrit अन्न (anna), 'food', through a longer form meaning 'the food that is to be eaten'. The word for food narrowed onto the one food everything else is built around.

अनाज is grain in the bulk sense — what is stored, weighed and sold. चावल is one kind of it, wheat is another, and अनाज is the sack all of them come out of.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अनाज (anāj) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from annādya, "food" (CDIAL 398). It is built from anna, "food", and ādya, "to be eaten".

What you've built

Three.

Your turn

- Say it: anāj
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: anāj, then chāval, and say which one is the sack
- Recall: say dhīre
- Read it: अनुमति

Before you move on

What does अनाज mean? ("grain".) Say it once more.

66.4 घास (ghās) — grass

Before the new one: what did anāj mean?

You'll want to know: घास

घास (ghās) — "grass".

Sanskrit घास (ghāsa), 'fodder', on the root घस् (ghas-), 'to eat'. Grass is named from the eating end: it is not a plant, it is what an animal is given.

That is still how the word behaves. Cut घास travels home on a head or a bicycle for the भैंस and the गाय, and the lawn sense — grass you keep and do not feed to anything — is the newer, city meaning laid on top.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

घास (ghās) is inherited from Sanskrit ghāsa, "food, pasture grass", and has come down with almost no change (CDIAL 4471).

What you've built

Four.

Your turn

- Say it: ghās
- Say it: it once more, slowly

- Say it: ghās, then bhaĩs, and say which one is waiting for the other
- Read it: कम
- Recall: say bharosā

Before you move on

What does घास mean? ("grass".) Say it once more.

66.5 कुआँ (kuã̄) — a well

Name the 4 words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: कुआँ

कुआँ (kuã̄) — "a well".

From Sanskrit कूप (kūpa), 'a pit, a well'. The p softened away and the vowel came through the nose, leaving a word you write with the moon-and-dot you learnt in the letters chapter.

कूप has cousins a long way west: Latin cūpa, a tub or a cask, is the same ancient word, and English cup and coop come down from it. A hole in the ground and a thing you drink out of, both named for being hollow.

What you've built

Five: बीज, फ़सल, अनाज, घास, कुआँ. Enough to name a field and the water that keeps it.

Your turn

- Say it: kuã̄
- Say it: it once more, slowly
- Say it: all five in order, then phir milenge
- Recall: say zyādā
- Read it: अदब

Before you move on

What does कुआँ mean? ("a well".) Say it once more.

Chapter 67

The First Form Line: Name

Modes: ✓ pen (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can recognise the Hindi name label and fill one requested name line from a nonverbal cue without a model.
> Complete HI-A1F01-name-no-model and fill one Hindi name field from a nonverbal identity cue after separate label, selection, supported-entry, delayed-entry, spelling, spacing, and repair passes.

67.1 नाम — the first A1 form label

Read the known word नाम. Say what it means, then write it once from the word you already know.

You'll want to know first — read the label

नाम: _____

On a form, नाम asks for a name. The colon belongs to the form; it is not a Devanagari letter. Point to the label, then point to the empty answer line.

Writing — one bounded copy

How नाम is written, letter by letter, then one headline, stroke by stroke

Copy only नाम once, following the numbered strip: न, the stem of ा, then म, and last one head-line across the whole word. Do not add a value yet. This visible copy is supported script practice, not independent form writing.

Before you move on

Find नाम among कान · नाम · शाम without writing the other words.

67.2 Two people, two known practice names

Read both names from the earlier sentence work:

मीरा · अरुण

The two words — attach one nonverbal cue to each person

For this closed practice bank only:

- A → मीरा
- B → अरुण

Look for five seconds. Cover the Devanagari names. Point to A and recall its name; point to B and recall its name. Uncover and compare.

Your turn — select, do not copy

With the bank visible, choose the value requested by B, then the value requested by A. Do not write either one. This pass separates selection from spelling.

Before you move on

Stop after the two-way contrast. No third name enters this field bank.

67.3 Fill one field with the bank visible

Read the label नाम. Recall the visible bank: A मीरा · B अरुण.

Your turn — supported entry

Keep the bank visible. Card A requests its known value:

A — नामः _____

Select मीरा and copy it on the line. Read the completed field from label to value. This is supported entry, not independent writing evidence.

Writing — separate spelling and placement passes

First check only spelling: मी | रा. Then check one ordinary space after the colon. If one dimension differs, repair that dimension and stop.

Before you move on

Stop after one supported field.

67.4 Hide the bank, then fill one line

Look once: A मीरा · B अरुण. Cover the complete bank and wait ten seconds.

Writing — delayed requested entry

Keep the bank hidden. Complete only this field:

B — नाम: _____

The requested value comes from memory; there is no copyable answer beside the line. Reveal the bank only after writing.

Your turn — separate repair passes

Compare in order: (1) requested person, (2) four written positions, (3) vowel marks and headline, (4) spacing after the colon. Repair the first differing dimension and stop.

Before you move on

This is one delayed choice, not the published six-field A1 form.

67.5 One no-model Hindi name field

Close the preceding lessons. Keep only the two learned identity symbols in memory. There is no Devanagari value bank, support-language name, romanization, or completed model below.

Writing — independent controlled choice

Complete the requested field:

A — नाम: _____

Choose the known value attached to A and write it from memory. Do not open an earlier lesson until the attempt is complete.

Your turn — separate repair passes

After writing, compare in four bounded passes: requested person, spelling, vowel marks/headline, then label-value placement. Repair only the first differing dimension.

Before you move on

This completes one field pattern. Five field families remain before the published six-to-eight-item A1 practical-form task can be attempted. This one-field checkpoint is untimed and does not claim full A1 readiness.

Chapter 68

And, Or, But

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can join two Hindi sentences with aur, offer a choice with yaa, and take something back with lekin.
> Complete HI-R68-three-joins and fill the same slot three ways with chay and dudh: added, offered, contradicted.

68.1 aur — "and", and the letter this book owed you

You can name two drinks: chāy, dūdh. You can ask for either. What you cannot do — after sixty-seven chapters — is put both in one sentence.

You'll want to know: aur

aur — and

mujhe chāy aur dūdh pasand hai. — I like tea and milk.

aur stands BETWEEN the two things and changes neither of them. That is the whole rule, and it is why this one word is worth more than any noun in the book: every word you have learned in sixty-seven chapters just doubled its reach.

It joins two whole sentences the same way, and that is the use that matters most — a written message of thirty words is a message with aur in it.

aur comes down from Sanskrit apara, "other, further." Hindi's word for one more started as a word for the other one. Marathi did the identical thing out of a different Sanskrit word, anya, and English does it from the third side: another is an other.

The letters in this word — the debt is paid

Look at the headword above and read it. Its opening vowel is the independent au, and you were taught to draw it thirty-four chapters ago — the standing form with two arcs, whose sitting version rides on the k of nau.

This lesson is still written gloss-first, with the body in Roman letters, because it was composed while that letter was still owed and the debt was written down rather than hidden. The roman is now a crutch you no longer need: the headword is four characters you can take apart.

Your turn

- Say it: chāy aur dūdh — tea and milk
- Say it: mujhe chāy aur dūdh pasand hai
- Say it: which letter of aur you have not been taught — the opening *au
- Recall: say bīj
- Read it: फ़सल

Before you move on

Where does aur stand, and what does it change? (Between the two pieces; nothing.) What did it mean in Sanskrit? (Other, further.)
Sources: Wiktionary: aur.

68.2 ... या ... (yā) — "or"

One lesson ago you got aur, which adds. Say chāy aur dūdh. Now the word that does the opposite: it puts two things side by side and asks the listener to take exactly one.

You'll want to know: या

या — yā — or

चाय या दूध? — chāy yā dūdh? — Tea or milk?

It sits exactly where aur sat. The two are a matched pair: same slot, opposite job. aur hands you both; या makes you choose.

Two syllables of good news about the writing: या is य plus the long ा, and you have had both for a long time. Unlike aur, you can write this one today.

Offering a choice is a whole conversational move, not just a word. चाय या दूध? is a complete, polite offer with no verb in it at all, and it is how a host asks and how an examiner's role-play begins.

या is Sanskrit वा (vā), the ancient particle of alternatives, with the v- softened to y-. Latin kept the same particle as the -ve in sīve, "or if," and Marathi still carries it compounded inside किंवा — kim + vā, "what-or." One old word, three descendants.

Your turn

- Say it: chāy yā dūdh?
- Say it: the same pair with aur, and hear the offer become a list
- Say it: which of the two you can also WRITE today — या
- Read it: अनाज
- Recall: say ghās

Before you move on

Which of the two joining words makes the listener choose? (या.)
Which Sanskrit particle is it? (वा.)
Sources: Wiktionary: या.

68.3 लेकिन (lekin) — "but"

Two joining words are yours: aur adds, या offers. Both are agreeable. Neither can disagree with anything, and until one of them can, every sentence you build only ever confirms itself.

You'll want to know: लेकिन

> लेकिन — lekin — but
> चाय है लेकिन दूध नहीं है. — chāy hai lekin dūdh nahīṁ hai. — There is tea but there is no milk.

लेकिन takes the same slot as the other two and does the one thing they cannot: it lets the second half push back against the first. Notice that neither half changed — नहीं is doing its own separate work inside the second clause, and लेकिन only says how the two halves stand to each other.

Every letter in it is one you have: ल, े, क, ि, न.

लेकिन is Arabic — لكن (lākin) — and it walked into Hindi through Persian, in the same company as शुक्रिया. Beside it Hindi keeps an inherited word for but, from Sanskrit परम्, "beyond." Two words for but, one Persianate and one Sanskritic, is exactly what this language looks like: it almost never replaced a word, it collected a second one.

Your turn

- Say it: chāy hai lekin dūdh nahīṁ hai
- Say it: the three joiners in a row — aur, yā, lekin
- Say it: the five pieces लेकिन is written with, in the order you hear them
- Recall: say kuā̃

Before you move on

Which joining word lets the second half disagree with the first? (लेकिन.) Which language did Hindi take it from, and through which? (Arabic, through Persian.)
Sources: Wiktionary: लेकिन.

68.4 The same gap, three ways

> Three words landed in this chapter and all three go in the same place. Name them in the order you met them, and say which one you cannot yet write.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chāy aur dūdh
- chāy yā dūdh?
- chāy hai lekin dūdh nahīṁ hai

Before you move on

Which one hands over both? (aur.) Which makes you pick? (या.) Which takes something back? (लेकिन.) Then stop.

Chapter 69

Where a Clause Ends, and What Goes Inside One

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say where a Hindi clause ends – on its verb – and hang a whole second clause on a thinking verb with ki.
> Complete HI-R69-reported and say that you think the tea is good, then name the last word of each of the two halves.

69.1 The verb goes last

Say two sentences you have had since chapter two and chapter five: मेरा नाम मीरा है, and मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ. Now listen to where each one ENDS.

Grammar Lens: a rule you have been obeying for sixty-eight chapters

Every Hindi sentence in this book puts its verb at the end:

- मेरा नाम मीरा है — my name Mira is
- मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ — I Hindi speak
- घर मेरा है — house mine is

You have seen this a hundred times and no lesson has ever said it out loud. It is being said now because you are about to start joining clauses, and the moment a sentence has two halves you need to know where each half stops. The verb is the boundary marker. In चाय है लेकिन दूध नहीं है, the first है is what tells the ear the first clause has ended.

English is the odd one here, not Hindi. Hindi's order is subject, object, verb — so is Japanese's, so is Turkish's, and so is roughly half the world's. English puts the verb in the middle and makes it look normal. The practical form of the rule: when you build a Hindi sentence, decide the verb first and then say it last. A learner who starts translating word by word from English will hit the verb too early, every time.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three sentences, and stop hard on the last word of each
- where the first clause of the lekin sentence ends — at the first है
- the order Hindi uses — subject, object, verb

Before you move on

Where does the verb of a Hindi sentence go? (Last.) Why does that matter more now than it did in chapter two? (Because a joined sentence has two halves, and the verb is what marks the end of each.)

69.2 कि (ki) — "that"

Retrieve the two items before this one by name: लेकिन, which sets two clauses against each other, and the rule that the verb comes last. Then say मैं सोचता हूँ — I think. You have had that verb for a long time and have never once been able to say WHAT you think.

Grammar Lens: कि opens the room the thought goes into > मैं सोचता हूँ कि चाय ठीक है. — maiṁ sochtā hūṁ ki chāy ṭhīk hai. — I think that the tea is fine.

Word for word: I think that tea fine is. Everything after कि is an ordinary complete Hindi sentence — चाय ठीक है — with its verb in the ordinary last place, doing the job of an object.
That is the trick worth seeing, and it is why the last lesson came first: you do not need any new grammar to report a thought. You need one word and a sentence you could already say. Every sentence in this book just became something you can think, know or say about.
लेकिन joins two halves as EQUALS. कि does something different: it puts one clause INSIDE the other, as the second verb's object. Hindi keeps the main clause first — सोचता हूँ comes before what is thought, never after — so the word order is the one you would say anyway.
कि is not an inherited word. It is Persian که (ke), taken whole, and it pushed aside the older Sanskrit-derived form in exactly this slot. Marathi imported the same word as की. Two languages, one borrowing, the same job.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chāy ṭhīk hai on its own
- maiṁ sochtā hūṁ ki chāy ṭhīk hai
- what changed inside the second half when you put it after कि — nothing

Before you move on

What goes after कि? (A whole ordinary sentence, verb last, unchanged.) How is कि unlike लेकिन? (लेकिन joins two equals; कि puts one clause inside the other.)
Sources: Wiktionary: कि.

69.3 Two clauses, two verbs, two ends

A joined Hindi sentence has two verbs in it, and each one is the last word of its own half. Say the lekin sentence and name both.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- maiṁ sochtā hūṁ ki chāy ṭhīk hai
- the two verbs in it, in order — hūṁ, hai
- chāy aur dūdh — and notice aur joins two THINGS while कि joins two CLAUSES

Before you move on

How many verbs does a कि sentence have, and where are they? (Two — each at the end of its own half.) Then stop.

Chapter 70

Able, and Willing

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I am able to do, what I want to do, and tell the bare-stem construction apart from the one that keeps the whole -naa form.
> Complete HI-R70-can-want and produce all three unaided: I can come, I want to come, and I cannot come tomorrow.

70.1 सकना / सकता (saknā / saktā) — to be able to / can

Two verbs you own: आना, to come, and बोलना, to speak. You can say that you speak. You cannot say that you can speak, and until you can, a whole examiner's question — can you come tomorrow? — has no answer.

You'll want to know: सकना

सकना — saknā — to be able to; can, may

मैं हिंदी बोल सकता हूँ. — maiṁ hindī bol saktā hūṁ. — I can speak Hindi.

Hindi has no separate words for can, could, may and be able to. All four run through this one verb, which is why it is worth more than its size.

सकना comes from Sanskrit śaknoti, "is able" (CDIAL 12252).

Grammar Lens: सकना never stands alone

One move does it: strip the -ना off the first verb and put सकना behind it.

- बोलना → बोल सकता हूँ — I can speak
- आना → आ सकता हूँ — I can come

The bare stem carries the meaning and सकना carries the grammar, so it is सकना that takes the ending and sits last, exactly where the verb belongs. सकना can never appear on its own: there is no Hindi sentence that is just maiṁ saktā hūṁ.
Negate it and you have the most useful excuse in the language: मैं कल नहीं आ सकता. — I can't come tomorrow.

Your turn

- Say it: बोलना (bolnā) → बोल सकता हूँ (bol saktā hūṁ), then आना (ānā) → आ सकता हूँ (ā saktā hūṁ)
- Say it: मैं कल नहीं आ सकता (maiṁ kal nahīṁ ā saktā)
- Say it: which of the two verbs takes the ending — सकना, and it goes last
- Recall: say aur
- Read it: ... या **...

Before you move on

What happens to the first verb in front of सकना? (It drops to its bare stem.) Can सकना be used on its own? (No — it always needs another verb in front of it.)
Sources: Wiktionary: सकना.

70.2 चाहना / चाह / चाहता — to want, longing, and "want"

Say मैं हिंदी बोल सकता हूँ. You can now say what you are ABLE to do. The next question an interviewer asks is what you WANT to do.

You'll want to know: चाहना

चाहना — chāhnā — to want

मैं हिंदी बोलना चाहता हूँ. — maiṁ hindī bolnā chāhtā hūṁ. — I want to speak Hindi.

Put it beside the sentence from last lesson and one letter is different, and it is the important one:

- मैं हिंदी बोल सकता हूँ — bare stem बोल
- मैं हिंदी बोलना चाहता हूँ — full infinitive बोलना

सकना takes the stem; चाहना takes the whole dictionary form. Both then sit last and take the ending themselves. Getting the two mixed up is the ordinary beginner's error, and hearing them back to back is the cure.

मैं आना चाहता हूँ — I want to come. Say it against मैं आ सकता हूँ and listen for the -ना.

Inside चाहना sits the noun चाह (chāh), "longing" or "desire." Add -ना and the noun becomes the dictionary verb: चाह → चाहना. A cousin of it is how Hindi wants a THING rather than an action; that separate construction comes in a later chapter.

चाहना comes through Prakrit cāhaï, "wishes", from a root of uncertain source (CDIAL 4775).

Your turn

- Say it: मैं हिंदी बोलना चाहता हूँ (maiṁ hindī bolnā chāhtā hūṁ)
- Say it: the pair back to back — बोल सकता हूँ (bol saktā hūṁ) / बोलना चाहता हूँ (bolnā chāhtā hūṁ)
- Say it: मैं आना चाहता हूँ (maiṁ ānā chāhtā hūṁ) against मैं आ सकता हूँ (maiṁ ā saktā hūṁ)
- Say it: चाह (chāh), "longing"; then चाहना (chāhnā), "to want"
- Read it: लेकिन

Before you move on

Which of the two takes the FULL -ना form in front of it? (चाहना.) Which takes the bare stem? (सकना.) What noun meaning "longing" sits inside चाहना? (चाह.)
Sources: Wiktionary: चाहना.

70.3 One verb inside another

Say both sentences from this chapter: मैं हिंदी बोल सकता हूँ and मैं हिंदी बोलना चाहता हूँ. Something is going on in the second one that is worth naming.

Grammar Lens: the -ना form is a noun

In मैं हिंदी बोलना चाहता हूँ, the word बोलना is not doing verb work. It is sitting where किताब sits in मैं किताब देखता हूँ — in the object slot. The dictionary form of a Hindi verb is also a noun, and it can go anywhere a noun can go:

- मैं किताब देखता हूँ. — I look at the book. — an ordinary noun object
- मैं बोलना चाहता हूँ. — I want to speak. — a VERB in the same slot

That is a bigger gift than it looks. You have sixty-nine chapters of verbs, and every single one of their -ना forms is now also a thing you can like, want, or talk about.
The order is unchanged, because it never changes: the inner verb comes first as a noun, the outer verb last as the verb. सकना is the same construction with one shortcut — it wears the -ना away and takes the bare stem — which is why the two lessons before this one belonged together.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- maiṁ kitāb dekhtā hūṁ

- maiṁ bolnā chāhtā hūṁ
- which word in each sentence is the object — kitāb, then bolnā

Before you move on

What part of speech is बोलना in मैं बोलना चाहता हूँ? (A noun, in the object slot.) What does सकना do to that same form? (Wears the -ना away and takes the bare stem.)

70.4 Can, want, and cannot

One of this chapter's two verbs eats the -ना off the verb in front of it and one leaves it alone. Name which is which before you go on.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- maiṁ ā saktā hūṁ · maiṁ ānā chāhtā hūṁ
- maiṁ kal nahīṁ ā saktā
- maiṁ sochtā hūṁ ki maiṁ ā saktā hūṁ — a clause inside a clause, with an ability inside that

Before you move on

Which of the two can never stand without another verb in front of it? (सकना.) Which one leaves that verb's -ना in place? (चाहना.) Then stop.

Chapter 71

Why, and Because

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask why in Hindi and answer it with a whole reason clause after kyonki, including the one an exam message needs: why I cannot come.
> Complete HI-R71-reasons and take both turns unaided: ask kyon, then answer with the claim first and kyonki before the reason.

71.1 क्यों (kyoṁ) — why

Retrieve the two items before this one by name: सकना and चाहना. Then run the k- words the deixis lesson gave you — क्या, कहाँ, and kaun. There is one more in that family, and it is the one a listener most often wants.

You'll want to know: क्यों

क्यों — kyoṁ — why

आप क्यों नहीं आ सकते? — āp kyoṁ nahīṁ ā sakte? — Why can't you come?

क्यों goes where any Hindi question word goes: in the sentence's ordinary slot, in front of the verb — not dragged to the front the way English drags why. The rest of the sentence keeps the order it always had, verb last.

On its own, क्यों? is a complete turn. It is how you ask somebody to explain what they have just said, and it costs one syllable.

The deixis lesson generalised the य- / व- / क- system and listed the k-words. This is one of the ones it listed and did not teach. Its क- is the same ancient stem as क्या and kaun, and it is Latin's qu- in quis and English's wh- in who — one Indo-European k^{w}-, three different spellings of the same sound.

क्यों is built on Sanskrit ka-, the question stem behind क्या (CDIAL 3164).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kyoṁ? on its own, as a whole turn
- āp kyoṁ nahīṁ ā sakte?
- the four k- words together — kyā, kaun, kahāṁ, kyoṁ

Before you move on

Where does क्यों stand in the sentence? (In its ordinary slot, in front of the verb — not fronted.) Which family does it belong to? (The k- question words.)
Sources: Wiktionary: क्यों.

71.2 क्योंकि (kyoṁki) — because

Ask क्यों? out loud. Then notice that you have no way at all to answer it. Now say कि — the word from the last chapter that hangs a clause on a verb. The answer is those two words stuck together.

Grammar Lens: क्यों + कि

मैं कल नहीं आ सकता क्योंकि मैं काम करता हूँ. — maiṁ kal nahīṁ ā saktā kyoṁki maiṁ kām kartā hūṁ. — I can't come tomorrow because I work.

Take the word apart: क्योंकि is क्यों + कि, why-that. Nothing is hidden in it. Hindi answers why by saying why-that and then a whole ordinary sentence, verb last, exactly as after plain कि.
The order is fixed and it is the useful way round: the claim first, the reason second. English can lead with because; the ordinary Hindi sentence does not.

That example is worth memorising whole, because it is the shape of an entire exam task: a written message that says you cannot meet and why. It needs three things this book has now given you — the negation, सकना, and क्योंकि — and it needed all three.
Look at what the word is made of one more time. क्यों comes down from Sanskrit; कि was borrowed from Persian. Hindi welded them into a single conjunction and nobody notices the seam. That is this language in one word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the two pieces separately — kyoṁ, ki — then welded, kyoṁki
- maiṁ kal nahīṁ ā saktā kyoṁki maiṁ kām kartā hūṁ
- which half of that sentence comes first — the claim

Before you move on

What two words is क्योंकि made of? (क्यों + कि.) Which half of a क्योंकि sentence comes first? (The claim; the reason follows.)
Sources: Wiktionary: क्योंकि.

71.3 Two turns: why, and because क्योंकि is two words you already had. Say them apart, then together, then say where the verb of each half sits.

Reach back three chapters while you are here: या offers a choice and लेकिन contradicts. Neither can give a reason, which is what this chapter added.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kyoṁ? — then kyoṁki …

- maiṁ kal nahīṁ ā saktā kyoṁki maiṁ kām kartā hūṁ
- maiṁ ānā chāhtā hūṁ lekin maiṁ nahīṁ ā saktā — the joiner and the two modal verbs in one sentence

Before you move on

Which word asks for a reason, and which gives one? (क्यों asks, क्योंकि gives.) What is the second one made of? (The first one, plus कि.) Then stop.

Chapter 72

When, and Then

Modes: voice (2) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first of 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask when with kab and set one event against another with the jab/tab frame, hearing each word's job from its first letter.
> Complete HI-R72-when and run all three: ask when the listener can come, say when you feel happiness, and give a reason you cannot come.

72.1 कब (kab) — when?

Run the k- words you now hold: क्या, कहाँ, क्यों, and kaun. One question a traveller asks more than any of those is still missing.

You'll want to know: कब

> कब — kab — when?
> आप कब आ सकते हैं? — āp kab ā sakte haiṁ? — When can you come?

Like every Hindi question word, कब stays in the sentence's own slot in front of the verb; nothing is fronted and nothing is reordered. Two letters, both of which you can already write.

You have had कल since chapter four — tomorrow, and also yesterday, the same word for both. कब is how you ask which day somebody means, and it is the question the whole timetable half of a listening paper is made of.

कब is Sanskrit कदा, worn down. Its two partners are coming in the next lesson, and they are the same word with different first letters.

Your turn

- Say it: āp kab ā sakte haiṁ?
- Say it: the same question with kyoṁ instead — āp kyoṁ ā sakte haiṁ?
- Say it: the five k- words together — kyā, kaun, kahāṁ, kyoṁ, kab
- Recall: say saknā
- Read it: चाहना

Before you move on

What does कब ask? (When.) Where does it stand? (In the sentence's own slot, in front of the verb.)
Sources: Wiktionary: कब.

72.2 जब ... तब ... (jab ... tab ...) — when, then

Retrieve the two items before this one by name: क्योंकि, and कब. Then say the pair the deixis lesson gave you — यह and वह, this and that, the य- shape and the व- shape. That machine is about to run again.

Grammar Lens: three first letters, one word

> जब मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ, तब आप सुनते हैं. — jab maiṁ hindī boltā hūṁ, tab āp sunte haiṁ. — When I speak Hindi, then you listen.

Look at the three words side by side:

कब	when? — the question
जब	when — the clause that sets the time
तब	then — the clause that answers it

One word, three first letters. क- asks, ज- points back at something, त- points at it again. It is exactly the machine the deixis lesson taught with यह and वह, and Hindi is unusually tidy about it: once you have seen the pattern once you can hear which job a word is doing from its first letter alone.

Hindi says both halves. English drops the then and leaves when I speak Hindi, I feel happiness; Hindi keeps तब, and it earns its place — it is what tells the listener the first clause has finished, which matters far more in a language where every clause ends on a verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kab · jab · tab
- jab maiṁ hindī boltā hūṁ, tab āp sunte haiṁ
- which of the three asks a question — कब

Before you move on

What must follow a जब clause? (तब.) What do the three first letters do? (क- asks, ज- sets the time, त- answers it.)
Sources: Wiktionary: जब.

72.3 One letter tells you the job

Say कब, जब, तब. Then say what each first letter does, and name the other pair in the book built the same way.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āp kab ā sakte haiṁ?
- jab maiṁ hindī boltā hūṁ, tab āp sunte haiṁ
- kyoṁ? and answer it with kyoṁki …

Before you move on

Which of the three is a question? (कब.) Which two come as a pair in one sentence? (जब and तब.) Then stop.

Chapter 73

Two Actions, One Clause

Modes: voice (2) Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can chain two actions inside a single Hindi clause with -kar, conjugating only the last verb.
> Complete HI-R73-chain and say the same two actions twice – joined with aur, then chained with -kar – and count the person endings in each.

73.1 -कर / देखकर / करके — chaining actions in sequence

Say the जब ... तब frame. Two clauses, two verbs, a word at each end. That is a lot of scaffolding for first this, then that — and Hindi has a much shorter way that it uses far more often.

Grammar Lens: put -कर on the stem and the clause disappears

> मैं किताब देखकर आता हूँ. — maiṁ kitāb dekhkar ātā hūṁ. — "I look at the book and come." (Literally: having looked, I come.)

The move is the same shape as सकना: take the -ना off the first verb and put -कर on the bare stem.

- देखना → देखकर — having looked
- करना → करके — having done (this one is irregular, and it is the commonest of all)

What you get is not a second clause. It is one clause with a chained action inside it, and only the LAST verb takes a person ending. That is why Hindi reaches for it constantly: a speaker can string three actions together and conjugate once.
The order is the order of events. देखकर आता हूँ is look-then-come, never the other way round, so you say the actions in the sequence they happen.
The ending is the verb करना frozen solid. Having looked is literally look-do. Marathi does the same job with its own -ūn; both languages inherited the construction from Sanskrit and each reinforced it with its own material.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- देखना (dekhnā) → देखकर (dekhkar), then करना (karnā) → करके (karke)
- मैं किताब देखकर आता हूँ (maiṁ kitāb dekhkar ātā hūṁ)
- which of the two verbs carries the person ending — the last one

Before you move on

What does -कर attach to? (The bare stem, after the -ना comes off.) How many verbs in a -कर sentence take a person ending? (One — the last.)
Sources: Wiktionary: कर.

73.2 One clause or two

You now have three ways to put two actions in one sentence: aur between two clauses, the जब ... तब frame, and -कर inside a single clause. Only one of them conjugates just once.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- maiṁ kitāb dekhtā hūṁ aur ātā hūṁ — two endings

- maiṁ kitāb dekhkar ātā hūṁ — one ending
- which of the two a Hindi speaker says more often — the -कर one

Before you move on

How many person endings does a -कर sentence carry? (One.) And an aur sentence with two verbs? (Two.) Then stop.

Chapter 74

Asking Without a Question Word

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can turn any statement I own into a yes-or-no question with a fronted kya, ask the same question with the voice alone, and check a fact with the naa tag.
> Complete HI-R74-ask and run every joining word in the book once, then both question shapes: the one that does not know the answer and the one that expects agreement.

74.1 क्या ...? — the yes-or-no question

Retrieve the two items before this one by name: -कर and जब ... तब. Then say हाँ and नहीं — two answers with no question.

Grammar Lens: क्या at the FRONT means nothing

> क्या आप कल आ सकते हैं? — kyā āp kal ā sakte haiṁ? —
> Can you come tomorrow?

Put क्या at the very front and it stops meaning what: it marks the sentence as a yes-or-no question and nothing else moves, because Hindi cannot invert the way English does with can you.
Position is the whole difference:

- आप क्या कर सकते हैं? — what can you do? — inside
- क्या आप आ सकते हैं? — can you come? — in front

Answer either with हाँ or नहीं. A language that cannot invert reaches for a particle; Persian and Russian do the same.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kyā āp kal ā sakte haiṁ? and answer — hāṁ or nahīṁ
- the pair — āp kyā kar sakte haiṁ? / kyā āp ā sakte haiṁ?

Before you move on

What does क्या mean at the very front? (Nothing — it marks a yes-or-no question.) What else moves? (Nothing.)
Sources: Wiktionary: क्या.

74.2 The question that is only a voice

Say क्या आप आ सकते हैं? — the question you got one lesson ago. Now say it again and leave the first word out.

The letters in this word

आप आ सकते हैं? — āp ā sakte haiṁ? — Can you come?

Word for word that is a statement. What makes it a question is the pitch of the last two syllables going up, and nothing else. Speakers drop क्या far more often than they use it, so this is the ordinary form and the particle is the careful one.
Say the pair and listen, do not read:

- आप आ सकते हैं. — flat at the end — you can come
- आप आ सकते हैं? — rising at the end — can you come?

Two things follow. First, you can ask any yes-or-no question in Hindi today without learning another word — every statement in this book is already a question if you lift the end of it. Second, and less comfortable: a listening paper will hand you the rise without the particle, so the ear has to catch it. A candidate reading only for क्या will hear a statement and answer nothing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āp ā sakte haiṁ. flat, then āp ā sakte haiṁ? rising
- the same sentence with the particle — kyā āp ā sakte haiṁ?
- which of the three a Hindi speaker uses most — the rise

Before you move on

What turns आप आ सकते हैं into a question with no extra word? (The pitch rising at the end.) Which form do speakers use more often, that or क्या? (The rise.)

74.3 ... है ना? — "isn't it?"

क्या at the front asks something you do not know. Often you DO know, and want it confirmed. Different move, different word, other end.

Grammar Lens: hanging a check on the end

चाय ठीक है ना? — chāy ṭhīk hai nā? — The tea is fine, isn't it?

Take any statement you can make, put ना on the end, and it becomes a check: you say what you believe and invite the listener to agree. The answer comes back as हाँ or नहीं.
Set the two questions side by side:

- क्या चाय ठीक है? — is the tea fine? — I do not know
- चाय ठीक है ना? — the tea is fine, isn't it? — I think so; agree with me

Use the tag when you mean the particle and you have claimed to know the answer already.
One syllable buys a whole conversational turn: every sentence in this book is now something you can offer for agreement. The tag is the old negative न used as an invitation — a negative asking for a yes, exactly as English does in isn't it? and Marathi with the same syllable.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chāy ṭhīk hai nā? then answer yourself — hāṁ
- the pair — kyā chāy ṭhīk hai? / chāy ṭhīk hai nā?
- which one already believes the answer — the tag

Before you move on

What does ना on the end of a statement do? (Asks the listener to confirm it.) How is that different from क्या at the front? (क्या does not know the answer; ना expects agreement.)
Sources: Wiktionary: ना.

74.4 Everything that joins, and everything that asks

Seven chapters ago you could name a thousand Hindi things and say nothing about two of them at once. Name the three joiners this run opened with, and say where the verb of each half goes.

Your turn — clauses underneath

Say each of the four, and after each one name what the underneath clause is doing: a content, a reason, a time, a sequence.

Your turn — the two questions

Say these aloud:

- kyā āp kal ā sakte haiṁ? — you do not know
- chāy ṭhīk hai nā? — you think you do
- āp kab ā sakte haiṁ? · āp kyoṁ nahīṁ ā sakte?
- āp kal ā sakte haiṁ? with no particle at all, on a rising voice

Before you move on

Which joining words treat the two halves as EQUALS? (aur, या, लेकिन.) Which ones put one half UNDERNEATH the other? (कि, क्योंकि, जब … तब, -कर.) And which single word means what in the middle of a sentence and nothing at all at the front? (क्या.) Then stop.

Chapter 75

Where You Come From

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what country I am in, what city I live in and what language I speak when I meet somebody.
> Complete HI-C68-english and say all five words in order, then name the two languages you can put beside भाषा.

75.1 देश (desh) — a country

Two lessons back you learnt to ask with nothing but your voice, and one lesson back to hang a check on the end: say चाय ठीक है flat, then with the end lifted, then say चाय ठीक है ना? and name what each one does. You have also filled in a नाम line without a model, and a form asks for more than a name. The next five words are what it asks for.

You'll want to know: देश

देश (desh) — "a country".

Sanskrit देश (deśa) meant a place, a region, a stretch of land — and it comes from the root दिश् (diś-), "to point out, to show". A देश began as whatever a pointing hand took in.

That root travelled. Latin dīcere, "to say", and index, the pointing finger, grew from the same ancient root as दिश्. The finger you use to show someone where you are from is the finger the word is named after.

Every Hindi form you will ever fill in has a देश line on it, and every conversation that starts with a greeting reaches it within a minute.

What you've built

The first of five words for saying where you are from.

Your turn

- Recall: say ghās
- Read it: कुआँ, then say what it means
- Hear: desh, said once slowly and once at speed
- Say it: desh
- Say it: yah ek desh hai nā? — last chapter's tag, on your new word
- Read it: देश, then say what it means
- Recall: say kyoṁ
- Read it: कब

Before you move on

What does देश mean? ("a country".) Say it once more.

75.2 भारत (Bhārat) — India

Say desh. Write it: देश from memory

Three letters and one matra: द, then े on top of it, then श.
You have been taught all three.

You'll want to know: भारत

भारत (Bhārat) — "India", the country's name in its own language.

The name is older than the country. भरत (Bharata) is a figure the Sanskrit epics name, and भारत is the form meaning "belonging to Bharata" — the land of his people. English India took a different route entirely, through Greek and Persian from सिंधु (Sindhu), the river.

So one country carries two names that started as two different things: a people and a river. In Hindi you will hear भारत on the news and हिंदुस्तान in the street, and both mean the same place.

What you've built

A देश and the name of one: भारत एक देश है.

Your turn

- Read it: कुआँ, then say it without looking
- Say it: Bhārat
- Say it: Bhārat ek desh hai
- Say it: the same sentence twice — flat, then with the end lifted — and then Bhārat ek desh hai nā?
- Write it: a नाम line with no model, then देश on the line under it
- Write it: देश once more, without looking

Before you move on

What does भारत mean? ("India".) And देश? ("a country".)

75.3 शहर (shahar) — a city, a town

Which of the two words you have is the name of a country, and which is the word for any country at all?

You'll want to know: शहर

शहर (shahar) — "a city, a town".

Persian شهر (shahr), "city", and behind it Old Persian xšaça, "kingdom, dominion" — a शहर was first the seat of a king rather than a crowd of people. The same word ends dozens of place names across the region.

Set it against गाँव (gā̃v), the village you already own. गाँव and शहर are the pair Hindi uses for the whole of settled life, and a speaker will place themselves in one or the other within a sentence of meeting you.

A form asks for your शहर on the line under your देश.

What you've built

Three: देश, भारत, शहर. A country, its name, and the place in it you live.

Your turn

- Hear: shahar, then gā̃v
- Say it: shahar
- Contrast: shahar and gā̃v, and say which one is bigger

Before you move on

What does शहर mean? ("a city".) Say it once more.

75.4 भाषा (bhāshā) — a language

Write it: शहर from memory — श, then ह, then र

No matras at all in this one — three bare letters in a row.

You'll want to know: भाषा

भाषा (bhāshā) — "a language".

Sanskrit भाषा (bhāṣā), "speech, what is spoken", from भाष् (bhāṣ-), "to speak". The word names the act before it names the thing: a भाषा is speaking, turned into a noun.

You have been saying मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ for a long time. भाषा is the word that lets you talk about हिंदी rather than only in it — and it is a printed line on both of the writing papers you will one day sit, right under देश and शहर.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

भाषा (bhāshā) is Sanskrit bhāṣā, "speech", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama (CDIAL 9479). Prakrit bhāsā already meant "speech, language".

What you've built

Four of the five lines a form asks for: देश, भारत, शहर, भाषा.

Your turn

- Say it: bhāshā
- Say it: hindī ek bhāshā hai

- Write it: शहर once more, without looking

Before you move on

What does भाषा mean? ("a language".) Say it once more.

75.5 अंग्रेज़ी (angrezī) — English, the language

Name the four words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: अंग्रेज़ी

अंग्रेज़ी (angrezī) — "English", the language.

The route is long and worth following. Portuguese traders said inglês; Persian took it as انگریز (angrez), "an Englishman"; Hindi added the ending -ी that turns a people into their language, and अंग्रेज़ी came out. The nuqta under ज़ is the z you learnt with the letters.

Set it beside हिंदी, which is built the same way: हिंद, the land, plus the same ending. भाषा is the word for the class of thing; हिंदी and अंग्रेज़ी are two members of it.

Both listening papers you will one day sit key on somebody speaking two of these, so the pair matters more than either word alone.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अंग्रेज़ी (angrezī) is usually traced, through Persian angrez, "an Englishman", to Portuguese inglês, "English". The -ī makes it "the language of the English".

What you've built

Five: देश, भारत, शहर, भाषा, अंग्रेज़ी. Enough to say what country you are in, what city you live in, and what you speak.

Your turn

- Say it: angrezī
- Say it: hindī aur angrezī, do bhāshā
- Write it: भाषा from memory, then अंग्रेज़ी beside the printed model

- Say it: all five in order

Before you move on

What does अंग्रेज़ी mean? ("English".) And what is the word for a language itself? (bhāshā.)

Chapter 76

Ways of Going

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name what carries me, ask for a ticket, and say that I am going somewhere.
> Complete HI-C69-go and say all five words in order, then say that you go to the station.

76.1 गाड़ी (gāṛī) — a vehicle; a train

Two words back before anything new: what does bhāshā mean, and what is अंग्रेज़ी? The next five words are how you leave the शहर you live in.

You'll want to know: गाड़ी

गाड़ी (gāṛī) — "a vehicle".

From a reconstructed gāḍḍa*, 'cart', which CDIAL tentatively links to words for a seat, such as Sanskrit garta, a chariot seat (CDIAL 4116). It began as the thing oxen pulled and it has taken in everything since: a car is a गाड़ी, a train is a गाड़ी, a bullock cart is a गाड़ी.

That width is the reason to learn it first. बस you already own, and बस names one thing only. गाड़ी names whatever is carrying you, so it is the word that never leaves you stuck — point at anything with wheels and गाड़ी is right.

The ड़ in the middle is the flapped retroflex, made by flicking the tongue down off the roof of the mouth. It is ड with the nuqta underneath.

What you've built

The first of five words for getting somewhere.

Your turn

- Recall: say bhāshā
- Read it: अंग्रेज़ी, then say what it means
- Hear: gāṛī, slowly, with the flap in the middle
- Say it: gāṛī
- Contrast: gāṛī and bas, and say which one is wider

Before you move on

What does गाड़ी mean? ("a vehicle".) Say it once more.

76.2 रेल (rel) — the railway

Say gāṛī. Write it: गाड़ी — ग, then the ा stroke, then ड with its nuqta, then ी

Four pieces, all of them yours already.

You'll want to know: रेल

रेल (rel) — "the railway".

English rail, borrowed whole in the nineteenth century and spelt with the े matra, which is where an English ay sound usually lands in Devanagari.

रेल on its own is the system: the network, the line, the railway as an institution. The train itself is रेलगाड़ी — रेल plus the गाड़ी you learnt in the last lesson — and in speech people shorten that back to plain गाड़ी. Two words you now hold combine into the third without anything new.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रेल (rel) is a loan from English rail.

What you've built

गाड़ी and रेल, and the compound they make between them.

Your turn

- Read it: अंग्रेज़ी, then say it without looking
- Say it: rel
- Say it: rel, then gāṛī, then relgāṛī
- Write it: गाड़ी once more, without looking

Before you move on

What does रेल mean? ("the railway".) What is a रेलगाड़ी? ("a train".)

76.3 स्टेशन (sṭeshan) — a station

Which of your two words names the network, and which names the thing that moves along it?

You'll want to know: स्टेशन

स्टेशन (sṭeshan) — "a station".

English station, and it shows its seams. Hindi does not open a word with two consonants stuck together, so the writing does it the Devanagari way instead: स with the vowel-killer ् underneath, then ट. That stack is the same virama you met inside नमस्ते.

The retroflex ट rather than dental त is deliberate. When Hindi borrows an English t, it hears the English tongue as curled back, so station becomes स्टेशन and not स्तेशन. Every English t you meet in a Hindi loan will do this.

The word is painted on every platform board in the country, in Devanagari and in Latin letters side by side.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

स्टेशन (sṭeshan) is a loan from English station.

What you've built

Three: गाड़ी, रेल, स्टेशन. A vehicle, a network, and the place you wait.

Your turn

- Read it: स्टेशन, and find the ् that stacks the first two letters
- Say it: sṭeshan
- Say it: rel sṭeshan

Before you move on

What does स्टेशन mean? ("a station".) Say it once more.

76.4 टिकट (ṭikaṭ) — a ticket

Write it: स्टेशन from memory — start with the stacked स्, then ट, then े on top, then श, then न

You'll want to know: टिकट

टिकट (ṭikaṭ) — "a ticket".

English ticket, and both of its t sounds land on retroflex ट for the reason the last lesson gave. The ि in the middle is the short i matra, and it is written before the letter it is sounded after — you learnt that trick when you first wrote a name.

This is the word you actually say at a window. You already know how to ask for one thing politely: एक चाय दीजिए got you a cup of tea. एक टिकट दीजिए is the same frame with a new word dropped in, and it will get you onto a train.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

टिकट (ṭikaṭ) is a loan from English ticket.

What you've built

Four, and a request you can already make with the fourth.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭikaṭ
- Say it: ek ṭikaṭ dījie
- Write it: टिकट, putting the ि down before the ट it belongs to

Before you move on

How do you ask for one ticket? (ek ṭikaṭ dījie.) Say it once more.

76.5 जाना (jānā) — to go

Name the four words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: जाना

जाना (jānā) — "to go".

Sanskrit या (yā-), "to go", is the root; Hindi turned the initial y- into j-, which it does to many inherited words, and added the -ना ending that every Hindi doing word carries when you name it plain.

You already own three that end the same way: बोलना, देखना, सुनना. The ending is the pattern, not a coincidence, and जाना, jānā, now joins them.

जाना, jānā, is the one doing word a traveller cannot do without. मैं स्टेशन जाता हूँ uses the same shape as मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ, which you have been saying since the early chapters — the same frame, a different word inside it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

जाना (jānā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from yāti, "goes" (CDIAL 10452). Sanskrit y- regularly became Hindi j-.

What you've built

Five: गाड़ी, रेल, स्टेशन, टिकट, जाना, jānā. A way to travel and a way to say you are going.

Your turn

- Say it: jānā
- Say it: maiṁ sṭeshan jātā hūṁ
- Write it: टिकट and then जाना, jānā, both from memory
- Say it: all five in order

Before you move on

What does जाना, jānā, mean? ("to go".) Say that you go to the station.

Chapter 77

After the Work Is Done

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what game I play and how I rest when somebody I have just met asks what I do.
> Complete HI-C70-rest and say all five words in order, then say what game you play.

77.1 खेल (khel) — a game

Two words back: what does ṭikaṭ mean, and what is जाना? The next five words are what you do when you are not going anywhere.

You'll want to know: खेल

खेल (khel) — "a game".

Sanskrit खेल (khela), "play, sport", from a root that meant shaking or moving about. The final vowel dropped away by the schwa rule and left the bare consonant ending Hindi likes.

खेल covers more than a sport with rules. A child's game is a खेल, a match is a खेल, and a thing somebody is not taking seriously is a खेल too. When somebody you have just met asks what you do with your evenings, this is the word the answer starts from.

The ख is the aspirated one — a real puff of breath after the k, which is what separates खेल from क, and the difference changes the word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खेल (khel) is inherited from a reconstructed khel-*, "play" (CDIAL 3918). CDIAL links it with Sanskrit krīḍati, "plays": if that verb has a non-Aryan source, these forms may share it.

What you've built

The first of five words for the hours after work.

Your turn

- Recall: say ṭikaṭ
- Read it: जाना, then say what it means
- Hear: khel, with the breath on the first sound
- Say it: khel
- Contrast: khel said with the puff, and the same shape said without it
- Recall: say desh
- Read it: गाड़ी

Before you move on

What does खेल mean? ("a game".) Say it once more.

77.2 खेलना / खेलता / खेलती / खेलते — playing in the present

Say khel. Write it: खेल — ख, then े above it, then ल

You'll want to know: खेलना

खेलना (khelnā) — "to play".

The same खेल you learnt in the last lesson, with -ना on the end. That is the whole of it: Hindi makes a doing word out of a naming word by adding those two letters, and you have now watched it happen once.

Look at what that gives you. जाना was built the same way, and so were बोलना, लिखना, सुनना. Four you already own and one you have just made — the ending is a tool, not a list to memorise.

Remove -ना to recover खेल-, then add the present endings you know: खेलता (masculine), खेलती (feminine), and खेलते (respectful आप or plural). So मैं खेलता हूँ / मैं खेलती हूँ means "I play," while आप खेलते हैं means "you play."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खेलना (khelnā) is inherited from a reconstructed khel-*, "play" (CDIAL 3918), the verb behind khel, "a game". CDIAL links it with Sanskrit krīḍati, "plays": if that verb has a non-Aryan source, these forms may share it.

What you've built

A game, and the doing word that comes out of it.

Your turn

- Read it: जाना, then say it without looking
- Say it: khel, then khelnā
- Say it: मैं खेलता हूँ (maiṁ kheltā hūṁ) if masculine; मैं खेलती हूँ (maiṁ kheltī hūṁ) if feminine
- Say it: "you (resp.) play" — आप खेलते हैं (āp khelte haiṁ)
- Write it: खेल, then add ना to the end of it
- Read it: भारत
- Recall: say rel

Before you move on

What does खेलना mean? ("to play".) And खेल? ("a game".) Give the masculine, feminine, and respectful or plural present forms. (खेलता / खेलती / खेलते.)

77.3 क्रिकेट (krikeṭ) — cricket, the game

Which of your two words is the game, and which is the doing word made out of it?

You'll want to know: क्रिकेट

क्रिकेट (krikeṭ) — "cricket".

English, borrowed whole, and written with two things you have already met. The opening क्र is क stacked on र by the same vowel-killer ् that stacks स्ट in स्टेशन. The final ट is retroflex, because an English t always lands there.

The ि after the stack is the short i matra, and it sits to the left of the whole cluster even though it is sounded after it — the same preposed matra you first met in a name.

If you learn one game word in Hindi, learn this one. मैं क्रिकेट खेलता हूँ puts three of this chapter's ideas into a single sentence.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

क्रिकेट (krikeṭ) is a loan from English cricket.

What you've built

Three: खेल, खेलना, क्रिकेट. A game, playing it, and one to name.

Your turn

- Read it: क्रिकेट, and find the ि sitting to the left of the stack
- Say it: krikeṭ
- Say it: maiṁ krikeṭ kheltā hūṁ
- Recall: say shahar
- Read it: स्टेशन

Before you move on

What does क्रिकेट mean? ("cricket".) Say that you play it.

77.4 गाना (gānā) — a song

Write क्रिकेट from memory, starting with the ि you put down first.

You'll want to know: गाना

गाना (gānā) — "a song".

Sanskrit गान (gāna), "singing", from गै (gai-), "to sing". The root is one of the oldest in the language and it has never stopped working.

Now notice the shape. गाना ends in -ना, exactly like खेलना — and that is not an accident. गाना is also the doing word "to sing". One spelling, two jobs: the song, and the singing of it. Which one is meant is settled by the sentence around it and never by the word.

Hindi does this often enough that it is worth expecting rather than being surprised by. You will meet another word with the same double life before this run of chapters is out.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

गाना (gānā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. CDIAL lists it under gāpayati, the second form it gives beside gāyati, "sings" (CDIAL 4135). The noun is the verb gānā, "to sing", used for what is sung.

What you've built

Four, and the first word you have met that is two words at once.

Your turn

- Say it: gānā
- Contrast: gānā as the song, and gānā as the singing
- Write it: गाना, then खेलना under it, and look at the ending they share
- Recall: read भाषा, then say ṭikaṭ

Before you move on

What two things can गाना mean? ("a song", and "to sing".)

77.5 आराम (ārām) — rest, ease

Name the four words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: आराम

आराम (ārām) — "rest, ease".

Persian آرام (ārām), "quiet, calm, repose". It came in with the Persian half of the vocabulary and settled deep: आरामकुर्सी is an easy chair, built from आराम and the कुर्सी you already own.

आराम is not sleep. नींद is sleep, and you have that word. आराम is the state of not being pushed — sitting down, breathing out, nothing owed to anybody for an hour. आराम करना is what you say for taking that hour.

It is also an answer. When somebody asks आप कैसे हैं?, one ordinary reply is that you are at आराम, and it says more warmly than ठीक does.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आराम (ārām) is a loan, usually traced to Persian ārām, "rest, ease".

What you've built

Five: खेल, खेलना, क्रिकेट, गाना, आराम. Enough to say what you do when the day lets go of you.

Your turn

- Say it: ārām
- Say it: ārām karnā
- Write it: गाना and then आराम, both from memory
- Say it: all five in order
- Recall: say angrezī
- Read it: जाना

Before you move on

What does आराम mean? ("rest".) And गाना? ("a song", or "to sing".)

Chapter 78

Today, and How Much

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can place a thing in today, add myself to it, and raise it when I ask after somebody.
> Complete HI-C71-very and say all three words in order, then say something is very big and add yourself to it.

78.1 आज (ājj) — today

Two words back: what does gānā mean, and what is आराम? The next five words are the small ones that hold a conversation together.

You'll want to know: आज

आज (ājj) — "today".

Sanskrit अद्य (adya), "today", built from "this" and "day". Latin did exactly the same thing with hōc diē, "on this day", which wore down to hodiē and then to French aujourd'hui and Spanish hoy. Two families, the same idea, the same squeezing.

You already own कल and परसों, which reach forward and back. आज is the missing middle of that set, and it is the one you will say most.

आज आप कैसे हैं? is the greeting you have been making, with one word added that makes it about now rather than in general.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आज (āj) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from adya, "today" (CDIAL 242).

What you've built

The first of five small words that do a great deal of work.

Your turn

- Recall: say gānā
- Read it: आराम, then say what it means
- Hear: āj, then kal, then parsoṁ
- Say it: āj
- Say it: āj āp kaise haiṁ?
- Recall: say gāṛī
- Read it: रेल

Before you move on

What does आज mean? ("today".) Say it once more.

78.2 भी (bhī) — also, too

Say āj. Write it: आज

Two letters, no matras: आ, then ज.

You'll want to know: भी

भी (bhī) — "also, too".

Sanskrit अपि (api), "also", is the ancestor. The Prakrits dropped the opening vowel and left a bare vi; that hardened on the way into Hindi and came out as भी. Two letters at the end of two thousand years, and the meaning has not moved at all.

The thing to hold on to is where it stands: भी comes after the word it adds to, never before. मैं भी is "me too". आज भी is "today as well". Put it first and a Hindi ear hears nothing.

Watch out for one collision. You already own अभी, "right now", and भी is sitting inside it — but they are separate words with separate jobs, the way अब and अभी were. The eye will confuse them long before the ear does.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

भी (bhī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from api, "also, even" (CDIAL 485).

What you've built

आज and भी, and a pair to keep apart.

Your turn

- Read it: आराम, then say it without looking
- Say it: maiṁ bhī
- Say it: āj bhī
- Write it: आज once more, then भी beside it
- Read it: स्टेशन
- Recall: say ṭikaṭ

Before you move on

Where does भी stand, before or after the word it adds to? (After.)

78.3 बहुत (bahut) — very, a lot

Say "me too" in Hindi, and then "today as well".

You'll want to know: बहुत

बहुत (bahut) — "very, a lot, much".

Sanskrit बहु (bahu), "much, many". The same ancient root gave Greek pakhús, "thick", so the family has always been about quantity of stuff.

बहुत goes before what it strengthens, which is the opposite of भी. You now have one small word that leans forward and one that leans back, and putting each on the wrong side is the commonest mistake a beginner makes with them.

Three you can say immediately, from words you already hold: बहुत बड़ा, बहुत धन्यवाद, बहुत जल्दी. That last one means "very soon" as readily as "very fast", which is how बहुत behaves throughout: it takes the colour of whatever it is standing in front of.

Set it against कम and ज़्यादा, which you learnt for measuring. बहुत is not a comparison; it is an intensity.

What you've built

Three: आज, भी, बहुत. One that places the day, one that adds, one that raises.

Your turn

- Say it: bahut baṛā
- Say it: bahut dhanyavād
- Contrast: bahut before its word, and bhī after its word
- Recall: say jānā

Before you move on

What does बहुत mean? ("very".) Say that something is very big.

Chapter 79

What It Costs

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask what something costs, say that it is expensive, and say that I am buying it.
> Complete HI-C72-buy and say all five words in order, then ask what a thing costs and call it expensive.

79.1 पैसा (paisā) — money

Two words back: what does bhī mean, and what is बहुत? The next five words are what you need at a counter.

You'll want to know: पैसा

पैसा (paisā) — "money".

It began as a fraction. Sanskrit पाद (pāda) is a quarter and अंश (aṁśa) is a part, and the coin they named was a small share of a larger one. For a long while a पैसा was one hundredth of a rupee.

Then the small coin ate the whole idea. Today पैसा as one coin is nearly gone, and पैसा as money in general is what people say: paisā nahīṁ hai is "there is no money", about a wallet or about a country.

The ै on the प is the ai matra, two strokes above the headline, and it is the same one inside कैसे.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पैसा (paisā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from padāmśa*, "quarter part", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 7761). CDIAL glosses the Hindi word "quarter anna", a small coin; from there it came to mean money.

What you've built

The first of five words for buying something.

Your turn

- Recall: say bhī
- Read it: बहुत, then say what it means
- Hear: paisā
- Say it: paisā
- Read it: पैसा, and find the ै it shares with कैसे
- Recall: say khel

Before you move on

What does पैसा mean? ("money".) Say it once more.

79.2 रुपया (rupayā) — a rupee

Say paisā. Write it: पैसा — प with ै above it, then स, then ा

You'll want to know: रुपया

रुपया (rupayā) — "a rupee".

Sanskrit रूप्य (rūpya) is "wrought silver, a stamped coin", and it comes straight from रूप (rūpa), "form, shape". A rupee is a piece of metal that has been given a shape — the name says nothing about value and everything about the stamping.

That is worth holding beside पैसा. पैसा was named for being a fraction; रुपया was named for being formed. One word looks at how small it is, the other at how it was made.

The ु under the र is the short u matra, hanging below the letter rather than above it.

A price is said in रुपये: दस रुपये, and you have counted to ten already.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रुपया (rupayā) is usually traced to Sanskrit rūpya, "bearing a stamp; silver" (CDIAL 10805). CDIAL lists the same word in Hindi as rūpā, "silver".

What you've built

Money in general, and the unit it is counted in.

Your turn

- Read it: बहुत, then say it without looking
- Say it: rupayā
- Say it: das rupaye
- Write it: पैसा once more, then रुपया beside the printed model
- Read it: खेलना

Before you move on

What does रुपया mean? ("a rupee".) And पैसा? ("money".)

79.3 दाम (dām) — a price

Say the unit a price is counted in, and then say ten of them.

You'll want to know: दाम

दाम (dām) — "a price".

This one has travelled further than any word in the chapter. The Greek coin was the drachmē; traders carried the name east; Sanskrit wrote it द्रम्म (dramma); Hindi wore it down to दाम. A Greek weight of silver ended up as the ordinary Hindi word for what a thing costs.

Now put it with a word you have had since the second chapter. क्या is "what", and is a whole question, built from one new word and two you already own. This is the sentence a market runs on, and you can now say it.

> दाम क्या है? — dām kyā hai? — "what is the price?"

Set it beside नाम and शाम, two words you own: only the first letter changes, and the word changes with it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दाम (dām) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from dramma, "a coin" (CDIAL 6622). CDIAL traces the Sanskrit word itself to Greek drachmē, through Middle Persian.

What you've built

Three: पैसा, रुपया, दाम — and a question you can ask with the third.

Your turn

- Say it: dām
- Say it: dām kyā hai?
- Say it: it again, picturing something you might buy
- Recall: say kriketṛ
- Read it: आज

Before you move on

How do you ask what something costs? (dām kyā hai?) Say it once more.

79.4 महँगा (mahãgā) — expensive

> Write it: दाम from memory — द, then ा, then म
> Then say the question you built with it.

You'll want to know: महँगा

महँगा (mahãgā) — "expensive".

Sanskrit महार्घ (mahārgha): महा is "great" and अर्घ is "value, price". So the word is "great-priced", which is what it still means.

The moon-and-dot ँ over the ह sends the vowel through the nose. Say it aloud with the nasal and without it, and you will hear that the nasal is not decoration — it is part of the word.

महँगा behaves like बड़ा and पुराना, which you already own: it comes before the thing it describes and changes its ending to agree with it. You do not have to work the agreement yet. Hear it, and notice the -आ ending it shares with those two.

बहुत महँगा puts last chapter's word to work on this one.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

महँगा (mahãgā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from mahārgha, "high-priced" (CDIAL 9954). It is built from mahā, "great", and argha, "price".

What you've built

Four: a price, and a judgement to pass on it.

Your turn

- Say it: mahãgā, with the nose in the middle
- Say it: bahut mahãgā
- Write it: महँगा, putting the ँ above the ह
- Read it: गाना
- Recall: say bhī

Before you move on

What does महँगा mean? ("expensive".) Say that the price is very high.

79.5 ख़रीदना (kharīdnā) — to buy

Name the four words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: ख़रीदना

ख़रीदना (kharīdnā) — "to buy".

Persian خریدن (kharīdan), "to buy", with the Persian ending swapped for the Hindi -ना you now recognise on sight. The whole Persian half of the shopping vocabulary came in this way, over centuries of trade.

The dot under the ख़ is the nuqta, and it matters. Plain ख is the aspirated k you met in खेल; ख़ with the dot is a scraped sound further back in the throat, the one Persian and Arabic brought with them. Many printers leave the dot off and the word still reads, but the two letters are not the same.

Put the chapter together and you can shop: दाम क्या है? to ask, बहुत महँगा to complain, and ख़रीदना for what you came to do.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ख़रीदना (kharīdnā) is a loan, usually traced to Persian kharīdan, "to buy". Hindi took its stem kharīd- and added the verb ending -nā.

What you've built

Five: पैसा, रुपया, दाम, महँगा, ख़रीदना. Enough to stand at a counter and settle what a thing costs.

Your turn

- Say it: kharīdnā
- Say it: dām kyā hai?, then bahut mahãgā
- Write it: महँगा from memory, then ख़रीदना beside the printed model
- Say it: all five in order
- Recall: say ārām
- Read it: बहुत

Before you move on

What does ख़रीदना mean? ("to buy".) Ask what a thing costs.

79.6 सौ — the round figure

Say the word for a rupee, and the word for buying. You can ask what a thing costs — but you cannot yet say the number the answer usually is.

You'll want to know: सौ

सौ (sau) — a hundred.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सौ (sau) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from śata, "hundred" (CDIAL 12278).

Grammar Lens: two letters, and the number a price lands on

said	meaning
सौ	a hundred
सौ रुपये	a hundred rupees

Number first, then the thing. That is the whole construction, and both halves are now yours.

रुपये rather than रुपया, because more than one is being counted — the same bend the track has been making since the adjectives, costing nothing new here.

It is two letters, the shortest number word you will meet, and it does more work than any of the bigger ones: a price, an age, a distance, and the round figure anybody reaches for when they mean a great many. Your counting still stops at बीस, so the numbers between twenty and this one are still ahead of you. सौ arrives early because a price cannot wait for them.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- सौ
- सौ रुपये
- why the last word is रुपये rather than रुपया

Before you move on

What number is सौ? How do you say a hundred rupees? Which comes first, the number or the thing?

Chapter 80

The Eating House

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the place I eat, the meal, the bill and the person who brings it, and say that I eat and drink.
> Complete HI-C73-drink and say all five words in order, then say the eating-and-drinking pair and what each half can mean.

80.1 होटल (hoṭal) — an eating house

Two words back: what does mahãgā mean, and what is ख़रीदना? The next five words are for the place you buy a meal.

You'll want to know: होटल

होटल (hoṭal) — "an eating house".

English hotel, and behind it Latin hospitāle, a house for guests. The same Latin word gave English hospital and hospitality: one root for the place that takes a stranger in, whether to feed, to lodge or to heal.

Here is the part a dictionary will not tell you loudly enough. In everyday Hindi a होटल is most often somewhere you eat, not somewhere you sleep. A small roadside place with six tables and no rooms at all calls itself a होटल, and चाय होटल is a tea shop.

So take the word as "eating house" first and "hotel" second, and you will read far more signboards correctly.

The ो is the o matra, a single stroke above the headline with a tail.

What you've built

The first of five words for a meal you did not cook.

Your turn

- Recall: say mahãgā
- Read it: ख़रीदना, then say what it means
- Hear: hoṭal
- Say it: hoṭal
- Say it: chāy hoṭal
- Recall: say āj
- Read it: पैसा

Before you move on

What does होटल usually mean on an Indian signboard? (A place to eat.)

80.2 नाश्ता (nāshtā) — breakfast

Say hoṭal. Write it: होटल — ह with ो above it, then ट, then ल

You'll want to know: नाश्ता

नाश्ता (nāshtā) — "breakfast".

Persian ناشتا (nāshtā) means "not having eaten, on an empty stomach". The meal took its name from the emptiness it ends.

English did the identical thing and nobody notices any more: breakfast is the breaking of the fast. Two languages, no contact, the same picture — the night is a fast and the morning meal is what ends it.

The middle of the word stacks श on त with the vowel-killer ्, the same stack you have written in नमस्ते and read in स्टेशन.

नाश्ता is also a doing word's companion: नाश्ता करना is "to have breakfast", built the way आराम करना was.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

नाश्ता (nāshtā) is a loan, usually traced to Persian nāshtā, "not having eaten".

What you've built

A place to eat, and the first meal of the day to eat there.

Your turn

- Read it: ख़रीदना, then say it without looking
- Say it: nāshtā
- Say it: nāshtā karnā
- Write it: होटल once more, then नाश्ता beside the printed model
- Read it: भी
- Recall: say rupayā

Before you move on

What does नाश्ता mean? ("breakfast".) What does the Persian word say about your stomach? (That it is empty.)

80.3 बिल (bil) — the bill

Which of your two words is the place, and which is the meal?

You'll want to know: बिल

बिल (bil) — "the bill".

English bill, borrowed for the slip of paper and used for nothing else. Three letters: ब, the ि matra written to its left, and ल.

Now a warning your eye needs. You already hold बिलकुल, "absolutely", and you have met बिल्ली, a cat. All three open on the same three letters and none of them is related to the others — बिलकुल is Arabic, बिल्ली is Sanskrit, बिल is English. Reading the first syllable and guessing will send you to the wrong word.

बिल दीजिए asks for it, in the same polite frame that got you a ticket and a cup of tea.

What you've built

Three: होटल, नाश्ता, बिल. A place, a meal, and what arrives afterwards.

Your turn

- Say it: bil
- Say it: bil dījie
- Contrast: bil and bilkul, and say which one is a piece of paper

Before you move on

How do you ask for the bill? (bil dījie.) Say it once more.

80.4 वेटर (veṭar) — a waiter

Write it: बिल from memory, remembering that the ि goes down before the ल it is heard after

You'll want to know: वेटर

वेटर (veṭar) — "a waiter".

English waiter, and the spelling shows two habits you have now seen three times. The English w is written व, because Hindi has one letter where English splits v and w. The English t is written ट, retroflex, as it was in टिकट and स्टेशन.

This is the word on the sign and on the pay slip, so it is the one to be able to read. Across a table it is used far less than you would expect: people catch an eye rather than call a title, and a raised hand does the work.

So hold वेटर for reading, and expect the room itself to be quieter than the word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वेटर (veṭar) is a loan from English waiter.

What you've built

Four, and the person you ask for the fourth thing.

Your turn

- Say it: veṭar
- Say it: hoṭal, then veṭar, then bil
- Write it: वेटर, with व for the English w and ट for the English t
- Read it: बहुत
- Recall: say mahãgā

Before you move on

Which Hindi letter carries an English w? (व.) And an English t? (ट.)

80.5 पीना (pīnā) — to drink

Name the four words of this chapter so far.

You'll want to know: पीना

पीना (pīnā) — "to drink".

Sanskrit पिबति (pibati), "drinks", from a root so old that Latin bibere, "to drink", is the same word wearing different clothes. English potion and potable come down the Latin side of that family.

Now the pair. खाना you already own as "food" — and खाना is also "to eat", exactly as गाना was both the song and the singing. Put them together and Hindi has one of its most-used pairs:

खाना — food, and to eat. पीना, pīnā — to drink.

मैं चाय पीता हूँ is "I drink tea", in the frame you have used all along. And मैं खाना खाता हूँ puts the word into one breath twice — once for the food, once for the eating — with nothing between them but the ending.

What you've built

Five: होटल, नाश्ता, बिल, वेटर, पीना, pīnā. A place, a meal, a bill, the person who brings it, and the two doing words that made you come in.

Your turn

- Say it: pīnā
- Say it: maiṁ chāy pītā hūṁ
- Contrast: khānā as the food, and khānā as the eating
- Write it: पीना, then say pīnā and all five of this chapter in order

Before you move on

What does पीना, pīnā, mean? ("to drink".) What two things can खाना mean? ("food", and "to eat".)

Chapter 81

Words on the Door

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read whether a place is open or closed, find the entrance and the exit, and understand that a train is late before I take my leave.
> Complete HI-C74-late and say all five words in order, then name the word an announcement uses when a train is late.

81.1 खुला (khulā) — open

Two words back: what does veṭar mean, and what is पीना? The last five words of this run are the ones painted on doors.

You'll want to know: खुला

खुला (khulā) — "open".

It is built from खुलना, "to open", and it names the state that opening leaves behind — the way English opened stands to open. Hindi makes these already-done forms constantly, and this is one you will meet before you are taught the pattern.

खुला (khulā) is the word on a shutter, a shop board, a gate and a ticket window. It is also used of a thing that is loose or unpacked: खुला (khulā) पैसा is loose change, coins rather than a note, which is the phrase that will save you at a counter.

The ु under the ख is the short u matra, hanging below.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खुला (khulā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from khull*, "to be open", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 3945).

What you've built

The first of five words you read rather than say.

Your turn

- Recall: say veṭar
- Read it: पीना, then say what it means
- Read it: खुला (khulā), as though it were painted on a shutter
- Say it: khulā
- Say it: khulā paisā
- Recall: say paisā
- Read it: होटल

Before you move on

What does खुला (khulā) mean? ("open".) Say it once more.

81.2 बंद (band) — closed

Say khulā. Write it: खुला — ख with ु beneath it, then ल, then ा

You'll want to know: बंद

बंद (band) — "closed".

Persian بند (band), "tied, shut", and its family is enormous. The ancient root meant "to bind", and English bind, band and bond are its western cousins. A closed door is a tied door.

Two things to keep straight. First, बंद is not the beginning of बंदर, the monkey you met among the animals — the eye will want to join them and they are unrelated. Second, बंद stands opposite खुला (khulā) on exactly the same signboards, so learn them as one pair and you have read half a street.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बंद (band) is a loan, usually traced to Persian band, "shut, bound".

What you've built

The pair every shutter in the country is painted with.

Your turn

- Read it: पीना, then say it without looking
- Say it: khulā, then band
- Read it: बंद, and check that it is not बंदर
- Write it: खुला (khulā) once more, then बंद beside it
- Read it: रुपया
- Recall: say nāshtā

Before you move on

What does बंद mean? ("closed".) And its opposite? (khulā.)

81.3 प्रवेश (pravesh) — entrance

Say the pair a shutter is painted with, in both orders.

You'll want to know: प्रवेश

प्रवेश (pravesh) — "entrance".

Two Sanskrit pieces. प्र- is "forward", and विश् (viś-) is "to enter". Going forward into a place: प्रवेश.

That प्र- is worth keeping. It is the same ancient piece as Latin pro- and English fore-, and once you can see it you will spot it at the front of a great many formal Hindi words.

This is a written register, not a spoken one. Nobody says प्रवेश to a friend at a doorway; it is painted over the door, printed on a form, and read out in a station announcement. That is the same shelf कृपया sits on — the please of signs rather than the please of counters.

The opening प्र stacks प on र with the vowel-killer, as क्र did in क्रिकेट.

What you've built

Three: खुला (khulā), बंद, प्रवेश. Two states of a door and one of its two labels.

Your turn

- Read it: प्रवेश, and find the stacked प्र
- Say it: pravesh
- Say it: pravesh band hai
- Recall: say dām
- Read it: बिल

Before you move on

What does प्रवेश mean? ("entrance".) Where do you meet it, on a sign or in speech? (On a sign.)

81.4 निकास (nikās) — exit

Write it: प्रवेश from memory, starting with the stacked प्र

You'll want to know: निकास

निकास (nikās) — "exit".

You have most of this word already. निकलना, "to set out, to go out", has been yours since the chapter on leaving; निकास is what that doing word turns into when you need a noun. Going out, named.

Watch the vowel change as the noun is made: निकलना has a short a, निक◌ास takes the long ◌ा. Hindi lengthens a vowel to build a name out of an action often enough that you should expect it rather than be surprised.

निकास is painted opposite प्रवेश over every second doorway in a station, and the two are read together or not at all.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

निकास (nikās) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from niṣkāsa, "going out" (CDIAL 7485).

What you've built

Four, and the second pair of this chapter: प्रवेश and निकास.

Your turn

- Say it: nikalnā, then nikās
- Say it: pravesh, then nikās
- Write it: निकास, lengthening the vowel that निकलना keeps short
- Read it: महँगा
- Recall: say veṭar

Before you move on

What does निकास mean? ("exit".) And प्रवेश? ("entrance".)

81.5 देर (der) — lateness, a delay

Name the four words of this chapter so far, in their two pairs.

You'll want to know: देर

देर (der) — "lateness, a delay".

Persian دیر (der), "late, a long while". It is a naming word rather than a describing one: Hindi does not say "the train is late", it says the train is with lateness, using a small word for with that a later chapter teaches.

Set it against जल्दी, which you already own for speed and for earliness. जल्दी and देर are the two ends of the same measure, and a station announcement will use one or the other of them about your train.

That is where this chapter lands. Listen for देर in an announcement about गाड़ी, your train: it is the single most useful word a traveller can catch on a platform.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

देर (der) is a loan, usually traced to Persian der, "late; a long time".

What you've built

Five: खुला (khulā), बंद, प्रवेश, निकास, देर. Enough to read a door, find a way through it, and understand why the train has not come.

Your turn

- Say it: der
- Say it: gāṛī, then der — the two words an announcement about a late train turns on
- Contrast: jaldī and der
- Write it: निकास, then देर, and say all five in order
- Recall: say kharīdnā
- Read it: पीना

Before you move on

Which word in an announcement tells you the train is late? (der, lateness.) Which word sits at the other end of the same measure? (jaldī.)

Chapter 82

First, Second, Third

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say first to fifth in Hindi with the right ending for the noun, and say why the first four have to be learned as words and the fifth does not.
> The fifth ordinal states the -van rule against the four irregular words that came before it.

82.1 पहला (pahlā) — first

A new kind of counting starts here, so the recalls come first, at the four growing distances this book measures.

- Recall: say der — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say khulā — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say the two form names, Mīrā and Aruṇ — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say deś — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say ghaṇṭā — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say harā — R4, a second word from the same distance

You'll want to know: पहला

पहला (pahlā) — "first".

एक, दो, तीन answer how many. This answers which one in the line, and Hindi keeps a second set of words for that.

It agrees like any -ā adjective: पहला दिन (pahlā din), the first day, but पहली किताब (pahlī kitāb), the first book — feminine noun, feminine ending.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

There is no एक inside पहला (pahlā). It comes down from prathilla*, a form CDIAL reconstructs beside prathila*, "first", and builds on Sanskrit प्रथम (prathama), a word that already meant "foremost" before Hindi existed (CDIAL 8652). The number was never part of it.
You will meet its close relative constantly: पहले (pahle) — "before, earlier, first of all". खाने से पहले is "before eating". So in Hindi the word for first and the word for before are the same word wearing a different ending, which is a reasonable thing for a language to decide: putting one thing before another is putting it first.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pahlā
- pahlā din — the first day
- pahlī kitāb — the first book

Before you move on

Say "the first day". (पहला (pahlā) दिन.) What changes in पहली किताब, and why? (The ending — kitāb is feminine.) And what does पहले mean? (Before, earlier — the same word.)

82.2 दूसरा (dūsrā) — second, and the other one

Recalls before the second ordinal, at the four measured distances.

- Recall: say pahlā — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

- Recall: say band — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say the supported name entry — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say Bhārat — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say the letter kha — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say pīlā — R4, a second word from the same distance

You'll want to know: दूसरा

दूसरा (dūsrā) — "second".

दूसरा दिन (dūsrā din) — the second day. दूसरी किताब (dūsrī kitāb) — the second book.

Like pahlā, there is no दो visible in it, though this one does descend from the Sanskrit word for two.

You'll want to know: the other meaning

दूसरा (dūsrā) also means "other, another", and that is not a separate word to learn — it is the same one.

- दूसरा आदमी (dūsrā ādmī) — the other man.
- दूसरा घर (dūsrā ghar) — the other house.

Hold both senses together. A chapter two ahead turns on them: once you can say ek and dūsrā in one breath, you can say "one ... the other", which is a thing Hindi does with no extra machinery at all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dūsrā
- dūsrā din — the second day
- dūsrā ādmī — the other man

Before you move on

Say "the second book". (दूसरी किताब.) What is the other thing दूसरा (dūsrā) means? (Other, another.) And say "the other man". (दूसरा (dūsrā) आदमी.)

82.3 तीसरा (tīsrā) — third

Recalls first, then the third.

- Recall: say dūsrā — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say praveś — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say the delayed name entry — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say śahar — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say umr — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say din — R4, a second word from the same distance

You'll want to know: तीसरा

तीसरा (tīsrā) — "third".

तीसरा दिन (tīsrā din), तीसरी किताब (tīsrī kitāb).

Say तीन and then तीसरा and you can hear the number this time — the first ordinal where you can. And say dūsrā, tīsrā together: they rhyme, because they share an ending, -सरा, that they share with nothing else in the language.

Two words with a private ending is not a pattern; it is a pair. The next lesson goes a third way, and the one after that finally states a rule.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तीसरा (tīsrā) comes from a reconstructed triḥsara*, "triple", built on Sanskrit tris, "three times" (CDIAL 6018). दूसरा (dūsrā) comes the same way from dviḥsara*, "twofold" (CDIAL 6676).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tīsrā
- the join — tīn → tīsrā
- the pair — dūsrā, tīsrā

Before you move on

Say the third day. (तीसरा दिन.) Which number can you hear inside it? (तीन.) And how many words share the -सरा ending? (Two — dūsrā and tīsrā.)

82.4 चौथा (cauthā) — fourth

Recalls first, then the fourth.

- Recall: say tīsrā — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say nikās — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say cāhnā — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say bhāṣā — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say kitne sāl ke ho? — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say rāt — R4, a second word from the same distance

You'll want to know: चौथा

चौथा (cauthā) — "fourth".

चौथा दिन (cauthā din), चौथी किताब (cauthī kitāb).

चार is four, and cauthā comes from Sanskrit चतुर्थ (caturtha) — you can hear the four, but the ending is -था, not the -सरा of the last two.

Count what has happened. Four ordinals, and four different shapes: pahlā from a word that never meant one, dūsrā and tīsrā sharing a private ending, and now cauthā with an ending of its own. Nothing so far has generalised.

That is the honest state of it, and it is also the good news: these four are the whole of the memorising. The next lesson states the rule, and it holds for everything after — with one hole, which gets a lesson of its own.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- cauthā
- the join — cār → cauthā
- the four so far — pahlā, dūsrā, tīsrā, cauthā

Before you move on

Say the fourth day. (चौथा (cauthā) दिन.) What ending does it take? (-था, not the -सरा of the last two.) And how many of the ordinals have to be learned as separate words? (Four — and you now have them.)

82.5 पाँचवाँ (pā̃cvā̃) — fifth, and the rule at last

Recalls first, then the fifth — and the ending that ends the memorizing.

- Recall: say cauthā — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say der — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say the infinitive as an object — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say aṅgrezī — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say the letter da — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say śubh rātri — R4, a second word from the same distance

You'll want to know: पाँचवाँ

पाँचवाँ (pā̃cvā̃) — "fifth".

पाँचवाँ दिन (pā̃cvā̃ din), पाँचवीं किताब (pā̃cvī̃ kitāb).

Two nasal hooks in one word: one over the पाँ, one over the वाँ. The chandrabindu you learned in the writing chapters is doing both.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पाँचवाँ (pāṁcvāṁ) comes from Sanskrit pañcama, "fifth" (CDIAL 7669), the ordinal built on pañca, "five".

Grammar Lens: the number, plus -वाँ

पाँच → पाँचवाँ (pā̃cvā̃). Nothing is taken away and nothing is reshaped: the cardinal stands whole and -वाँ goes on the end.
It goes on doing that for every number above five. बीस gives बीसवाँ, twentieth; सौ gives सौवाँ, hundredth. The four words before this one were the exceptions, and you met them first because a learner needs first and second on the first day and cannot wait for a rule.
One number after this breaks it. Everything else obeys.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pā̃cvā̃ — two nasal hooks
- the rule — pā̃c + -vā̃
- bīs → bīsvā̃, twentieth

Before you move on

How is an ordinal made from five upward? (The plain number, plus -वाँ.) How many nasal hooks are in पाँचवाँ (pā̃cvā̃)? (Two.) And say "twentieth". (बीसवाँ.)

Chapter 83

Sixth to Tenth

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count in order all the way to tenth in Hindi, and say why chhatha is the one number the rule does not reach.
> The tenth closes the series and carries the ending past ten, so there is no second list to learn.

83.1 छठा (chaṭhā) — the one hole in the rule

Recalls open the chapter, at the four measured distances.

- Recall: say pā̃cvā̃ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say pahlā — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say kyoṁ — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say gāṛī — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say mausam — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say subah — R4, a second word from the same distance

You'll want to know: छठा

छठा (chaṭhā) — "sixth".

छठा दिन (chaṭhā din), छठी किताब (chaṭhī kitāb).

The last lesson gave you a rule one lesson ago and this is where it fails. छह is six, and the sixth is not chhahvā̃. It is छठा (chaṭhā), with a retroflex ठ that comes from nowhere in the cardinal.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Sanskrit had षष्ठ (ṣaṣṭha) for sixth, and Hindi inherited it directly, worn down to chaṭhā. It never went through the -वाँ machinery because it was already there when the machinery was built.
Which is the ordinary shape of this kind of hole: a rule spreads through a language and the words that are said most often resist it longest, because they are already known and nobody has to work them out. English does the same thing — went is not goed for exactly this reason. So the ordinals are five inherited words and one ending: pahlā, dūsrā, tīsrā, cauthā, chaṭhā, and -वाँ for everything else. That is the whole system, and the rest of this chapter is the ending doing its work.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chaṭhā — retroflex ṭh
- not chhahvā̃ — the rule does not reach it
- the five that are words — pahlā, dūsrā, tīsrā, cauthā, chaṭhā

Before you move on

Say the sixth day. (छठा (chaṭhā) दिन.) Why is it not chhahvā̃? (It was inherited whole from Sanskrit ṣaṣṭha, before the -वाँ rule existed.) And how many ordinals are separate words? (Five.)

83.2 सातवाँ (sātvā̃) — seventh

Recalls first, then the seventh.

- Recall: say chaṭhā — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

- Recall: say dūsrā — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say kyoṁki — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say rel — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say the letter dha — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say śām — R4, a second word from the same distance

You'll want to know: सातवाँ

सातवाँ (sātvā̃) — "seventh".

सातवाँ दिन (sātvā̃ din), सातवीं किताब (sātvī̃ kitāb).

सात stands whole and -वाँ goes on. After the hole at six the ending runs without interruption, and it will keep running for the rest of the number line.

Notice what you are now doing: you are not learning a word, you are applying something. Say sāt and the seventh follows from it without a second act of memory. That is what a rule buys, and it is why the four irregular ones were worth meeting first — they were the price, and it has been paid.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सातवाँ (sātvāṁ) comes from Sanskrit saptama, "seventh" (CDIAL 13151), the ordinal built on sapta, "seven".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sātvā̃
- the rule — sāt + -vā̃
- sātvī̃ kitāb — the seventh book

Before you move on

Say the seventh day. (सातवाँ (sātvā̃) दिन.) What happens to सात on the way? (Nothing — it stands whole.) And what changes for a feminine noun? (सातवीं.)

83.3 आठवाँ (āṭhvā̃) — eighth

Recalls first, then the eighth.

- Recall: say sātvā̃ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say tīsrā — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say kab — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say sṭeśan — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say chhah, sāt, āṭh, nau, das — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say dopahar — R4, a second word from the same distance

You'll want to know: आठवाँ

आठवाँ (āṭhvā̃) — "eighth".

आठवाँ दिन (āṭhvā̃ din), आठवीं किताब (āṭhvī̃ kitāb).

आठ + -वाँ. The retroflex ठ of the cardinal is kept exactly as it is — the ending arrives after it and changes nothing on its way.

Hold chaṭhā and āṭhvā̃ side by side and hear the difference. Both have a retroflex ठ; in the sixth it belongs to the ordinal and not to the cardinal, and in the eighth it belongs to the cardinal and the ordinal borrowed nothing.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आठवाँ (āṭhvāṁ) comes from Sanskrit aṣṭama, "eighth" (CDIAL 937), the ordinal built on aṣṭā, "eight".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āṭhvā̃
- the rule — āṭh + -vā̃
- āṭhvī̃ kitāb — the eighth book
- chaṭhā against āṭhvā̃ — one is a word, one is a sum

Before you move on

Say the eighth day. (आठवाँ (āṭhvā̃) दिन.) What happened to the ṭh of āṭh? (Nothing — the ending follows it.) What changes for a feminine noun? (आठवीं.) And which of chaṭhā and āṭhvā̃ had to be memorised? (Chaṭhā.)

83.4 नौवाँ (nauvā̃) — ninth

Recalls first, then the ninth.

- Recall: say āṭhvā̃ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say cauthā — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say the verb at the end — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say ṭikaṭ — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say where chhah, nau and das came from — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say suprabhāt — R4, a second word from the same distance

You'll want to know: नौवाँ

नौवाँ (nauvā̃) — "ninth".
नौवाँ दिन (nauvā̃ din), नौवीं किताब (nauvī̃ kitāb).

नौ ends in a vowel where sāt and āṭh ended in consonants, and -वाँ attaches anyway. That is worth one sentence of attention: an ending that does not care what the word before it ends in is a suffix, not a reshaping — it is added, not fused.

Compare cauthā, where cār had to change shape to accept its ending. That is a fused form. This is not. Same language, two different ages of word-making, and you can hear which is which.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

नौवाँ (nauvāṁ) comes from Sanskrit navama, "ninth" (CDIAL 7006), the ordinal built on nava, "nine".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nauvã̃
- the rule — nau + -vã̃, after a vowel
- nauvī̃ kitāb — the ninth book
- cauthā is fused; nauvã̃ is added

Before you move on

Say the ninth day. (नौवाँ (nauvã̃) दिन.) What does नौ end in, and does the ending care? (A vowel, and no.) What changes for a feminine noun? (नौवीं.) And which of cauthā and nauvã̃ was fused rather than added? (Cauthā.)

83.5 दसवाँ (dasvã̃) — tenth

Recalls first, then the tenth, which closes the series.

- Recall: say nauvã̃ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say pã̃cvã̃ — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say ki — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back

- Recall: say jānā — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say gyārah to bīs — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say śubh sandhyā — R4, a second word from the same distance

You'll want to know: दसवाँ

दसवाँ (dasvā̃) — "tenth".

दसवाँ दिन (dasvā̃ din), दसवीं किताब (dasvī̃ kitāb).

That is the ten. Say them in order — pahlā, dūsrā, tīsrā, cauthā, pā̃cvā̃, chaṭhā, sātvā̃, āṭhvā̃, nauvā̃, dasvā̃ — and count what you actually had to learn: five words and one ending.

And ten is not a boundary. ग्यारहवाँ is eleventh, बीसवाँ twentieth, सौवाँ hundredth. There is no second list above ten and no third above a hundred; the ending you learned at five reaches every number you will ever say.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दसवाँ (dasvāṁ) comes from Sanskrit daśama, "tenth" (CDIAL 6233), the ordinal built on daśa, "ten".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dasvā̃
- dasvī̃ kitāb — the tenth book
- the ten in order, pahlā to dasvā̃
- past ten — gyārahvā̃, bīsvā̃, sauvā̃

Before you move on

Say the tenth day. (दसवाँ (dasvā̃) दिन.) What changes for a feminine noun? (दसवीं.) Now say the ten in order. (Pahlā through dasvā̃.) How much had to be learned as words? (Five — and one ending for the rest.) And say "eleventh". (ग्यारहवाँ.)

Chapter 84

One and the Other

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say one thing and the other with ek and dusra, and tell that apart from naming a thing's place in a line.
> The ordinals and ek … dusra worked on the same set, so the difference between naming a place and sorting two things is done rather than stated.

84.1 एक … दूसरा (ek … dūsrā) — one and the other

Recalls open the chapter's last stretch, at the four measured distances.

- Recall: say dasvā̃ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say chaṭhā — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say jab … tab … — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say -kar — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say kuttā — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say when to say śubh sandhyā — R4, a second word from the same distance

Grammar Lens: one, and the other

> एक ... दूसरा — "one ... the other". एक किताब नई है, दूसरी पुरानी। — One book is new, the other old. एक आदमी यहाँ है, दूसरा वहाँ। — One man is here, the other there.

The second ordinal lesson said to hold both senses of दूसरा together, and this is why. Hindi needs no third word to say "one … the other": it puts एक in the first half and दूसरा in the second, and the second sense of dūsrā does the rest.
Both halves agree with what they name, so a feminine noun gives एक ... दूसरी.
That is a thing worth having. Sorting two of anything — two books, two men, two roads — needs this and nothing else.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ek … dūsrā
- ek kitāb merī hai, dūsrī uskī — one book is mine, the other is his
- ek ādmī andar thā, dūsrā bāhar

Before you move on

How does Hindi say "one … the other"? (एक ... दूसरा — no third word.) Which sense of dūsrā is doing the work? (Other, not second.) And what changes for a feminine noun? (दूसरी.)

84.2 Putting things in order — the ordinals and एक ... दूसरा together

Recalls first, and then the work of the last three chapters: everything in one place.

- Recall: say ek … dūsrā — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

- Recall: say sātvā̃ — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say saknā — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say kyā …? — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say billī — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say śubh dopahar — R4, a second word from the same distance

You'll want to know: two ways of ordering

You have ten ordinals, an ending that makes the rest, and एक … दूसरा. They do two different jobs, and the difference is easiest to feel on one small set.

Three books on a shelf:

- पहली किताब, दूसरी किताब, तीसरी किताब — the first, second and third. Each one is named by where it sits, and the naming works however many there are.
- एक किताब नई है, दूसरी पुरानी। — One is new, the other old. Nothing is numbered; two things are sorted against each other, and this only works when there are two.

So: पहले the first, and after it the second. Say the three books in order, then say the two-book version, and you have used both systems on the same shelf.

पहला दिन, दूसरा दिन, तीसरा दिन — and if you can say those, you can say the fortieth, because the ending does not stop.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three books — pahlī, dūsrī, tīsrī kitāb
- the two books — ek kitāb merī hai, dūsrī uskī
- pahlā din, dūsrā din, tīsrā din

Before you move on

What does an ordinal name? (Where a thing sits in a line.) What does ek … dūsrā do instead? (Sorts two things against each other.) And how many things does that second one work for? (Two.)

Chapter 85

Reading — Signs, Notices, and a First Paragraph

Modes: 👁 eyes (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read Devanagari off a sign, a notice, and a short paragraph, without translating word by word.
> Seventy-eight words of Hindi in a row, and not one of them new — the first time the track asks for a whole paragraph at once.

85.1 (reading) — six signs

Every word below, you have already been taught. Not one of them is new.

What is new is that nobody is going to tell you which one is coming.

Read this

प्रवेश निकास खुला बंद दुकान स्टेशन

Read down the list once. Do not sound each letter out — look at the whole word and let it arrive.
Now again, and notice which ones came instantly and which ones you had to assemble. Both are fine. The difference is what practice removes.

Why it's said this way

प्रवेश and निकास are the two you will meet at every door in India, and they are worth knowing by shape rather than by letter, because you usually read them while walking.
A sign is the one kind of Hindi that gives you no sentence to lean on — no verb at the end, no है to tell you what is going on. One word, and it has to carry everything.
That is why this is the place reading starts. Six words is not much to hold, and holding them without help is the whole exercise.

Your turn

- Say it: the six words down the list, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
What was new, then? (Nobody said them first. You read them.)

85.2 (reading) — six notices

The last lesson gave you single words. This one gives each word something to stand on.

Still nothing new — the same signs, with है behind them.

Read this

दुकान बंद है। स्टेशन खुला है। यहाँ पानी है। टिकट यहाँ है। प्रवेश यहाँ है। कृपया धीरे।

Read it: the six notices down once, without stopping
Read it: the six notices again, and this time notice you did not have to work out what was shut
The notice said so.

Why it's said this way

दुकान बंद है। Three words, and the last one is the verb. Hindi puts it there every time, so the end of a notice is where you find out whether something is or is not.
That is worth more than it looks. It means you can read the first two words of any notice, guess, and then have your guess confirmed or corrected by the last word — which is exactly how a fluent reader reads.
The last line breaks the pattern: कृपया धीरे। No verb at all. Signs drop the verb when nobody could mistake the meaning, and please, slowly needs no help.

Your turn

- Say it: the six notices, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

Where does a Hindi notice keep its verb? (At the end.)
And how many new words were in these six lines? (None.)

85.3 (reading) — the first paragraph

Six words, then six lines. Now a whole paragraph.

Ninety-one words, and the rule has not changed: not one of them is new.

Read this

मेरा नाम अरुण है। मैं भारत में रहता हूँ। मेरा घर छोटा है, लेकिन अच्छा है। घर में एक कमरा, एक दरवाज़ा और दो खिड़की हैं। सुबह मैं चाय और दूध पीता हूँ। फिर मैं रोटी खाता हूँ। आज मैं बाज़ार जाता हूँ, क्योंकि मुझे फल पसंद हैं। बाज़ार में एक दुकान है। वहाँ एक आदमी काम करता है। वह मेरा दोस्त है। वह हिंदी बोलता है। वह किताब पढ़ता है, लेकिन वह रात में दुकान में काम करता है। फिर मैं घर आता हूँ। रात में मैं किताब पढ़ता हूँ।

Read it: the passage once, without stopping or translating
Read it: the passage again, and notice how little work it took

Why it's said this way

Look at what is holding it together, because it is not vocabulary. और adds. लेकिन holds two true things apart. क्योंकि gives a reason. फिर puts one thing after another. Each of those was a chapter, and each was small.
This is the first time the track has asked you to hold a whole paragraph at once — and the reason it can is that everything in it was paid for, one chapter at a time.

Your turn

- Say it: the paragraph aloud, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many words in that paragraph were new to you? (None.) And what made it readable? (Everything in it had already been paid for, one chapter at a time.)

85.4 (म र न अ प ह य त ् ा ी) — eleven, and three kinds of thing

Two letters from the book's first script pages. Read म, then न, and name each.

Script: eight letters, one killer, two hangers

They arrived one or two per chapter and no page has gathered them. Sorted by what kind of thing each one is:

kind	pieces
consonants — each carries a built-in a	म ma · र ra · न na · प pa · ह ha · य ya · त ta
a standing vowel	अ a — the full-size letter, for when a word opens on the vowel
the killer	् — removes the built-in a
hangers	ा ā · ी ī — replace the built-in a

अ is the one worth pausing on, because it is the same sound the consonants already carry. A consonant has a inside it; अ is what you write when there is no consonant to put it in.

Your turn

The three marks, cold, and what each does to the letter it touches.

Read these aloud:

- ् — say what it takes away
- ा — say what it replaces, and with what
- ी — the same, and say how it differs from the one above

All three depend on one fact: a bare consonant is not silent. It already has a vowel, and these either remove it or swap it.

Before you move on

What vowel is inside a bare Devanagari consonant? (A short a.) What does ् do? (Removes it.) And when do you need अ rather than relying on that built-in vowel? (When the word opens on the vowel.)

85.5 (स ष ल ठ ण ऋ ो ौ औ ज़) — the thin eleven

Read स, then ल. Two consonants you have been reading for a long time without being asked for them by name.

Script: five consonants, and the retroflex row they belong to letter	sound	what marks it

स	sa	the plain sibilant
ल	la	the plain lateral
ष	ṣa	retroflex — tongue curled back
ठ	ṭha	retroflex, with breath behind it
ण	ṇa	retroflex nasal

Three of the five are retroflex, and that is the group worth seeing together: Hindi distinguishes a whole row of consonants made with the tongue curled back against the roof of the mouth from the dental row made against the teeth. The difference is inaudible to most English speakers at first and load-bearing in Hindi.

Your turn: a vowel written like a letter, and a dot

- Read it: ऋ — inherited from Sanskrit, a vowel that behaves like a consonant. Hindi says it ri
- Write it: ऋ once, from memory
- Read it: औ and ौ — the same vowel standing alone, then hanging off a consonant
- Read it: ो — the hanger for o

औ against ौ is the pairing the whole system runs on: a vowel gets a full-size letter when nothing precedes it and a hanging sign when a consonant does.

Before you move on

What does the dot under ज़, फ़, ख़, क़ tell you? (The sound is borrowed — Persian or Arabic, and not native to Devanagari.)
Which of the eleven is a vowel that behaves like a consonant? (ऋ.)
Name the retroflex nasal. (ण.)

Chapter 86

Writing — With A Clock

Modes: ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can complete the A1 writing paper's two tasks inside its published twenty minutes, filling every form field and keeping the message between thirty and forty words.
> Complete HI-W10-a1-con-reloj: seven minutes for the form and thirteen for the message, then count the words and check the form for blanks before mistakes.

86.1 The same form, with a clock

You have done this writing with as long as you liked.

A task you can only do untimed is not yet a task you can do. Here are the conditions the assessment actually publishes.

Writing — timed production

What the contract publishes. This track's A1 writing paper runs 20 minutes and holds two tasks:

- a practical form asking for six to eight completed fields, worth 40 of the paper's 100 points;
- a message for a named reader and a stated purpose, 30 to 40 words, worth the other 60.

Those numbers are read out of `task-shapes/a1.json`, the same file the assessment contract points at. They are not invented here.

Notice what the split says before you write a word: the message is worth more than the form, and it is the shorter of the two. Time spent perfecting a field is time taken from the part that scores.

Give the form its share and no more: seven minutes, starting now. Fill every field. A blank field scores nothing and cannot be argued with.

Now the message: thirteen minutes, thirty to forty words, to one named reader.

When the time is up, stop even if a line is unfinished. An unfinished paper is information. An untimed one is not.

Before you move on

Count the words in your message. Under thirty and the task is half done; well past forty and you spent time the paper did not give you. Both are worth learning from your own clock rather than from an examiner.

Then check the form, and check it for blanks before mistakes. A field with a wrong answer can still earn something; a field left empty cannot.

This is the last of the seven writing stages. Everything before it asked you to produce the language. This one asks whether you can produce it when the conditions are not yours to choose — which is the only version of the question an assessment ever asks.

Chapter 87

Lunch and Dinner

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name all three meals of the day, and say which one is a borrowed word and which two are phrases Hindi builds from a time plus khana.
> Say all three meals in order, morning to night, and name the odd one out: nashta is borrowed whole, while dopahar ka khana and rat ka khana are built from a time the learner already has plus khana.

87.1 दोपहर का खाना / रात का खाना — the two meals you already know the words for

You have खाना (khānā), "food". You have दोपहर (dopahar) and रात (rāt). Before reading on, guess what दोपहर का खाना is.

You'll want to know: दोपहर का खाना and रात का खाना

दोपहर का खाना (dopahar kā khānā) — "lunch." रात का खाना (rāt kā khānā) — "dinner."

You guessed them, and that is the point of putting them here rather than in a word list. Neither is a new word. Each is a time you already have, plus का, plus the food-word you already have — "the afternoon's food", "the night's food."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The transparency runs deeper than the compound.
दोपहर is itself two pieces you can see: दो ("two") + पहर, a traditional watch of roughly three hours. Two watches into the day is noon — the word is a clock reading that turned into a time of day.
रात comes from Sanskrit रात्रि (rātri), the formal word that shows up in शुभ रात्रि ("good night"). The everyday रात is the same word worn down by use, which is why the greeting sounds more ceremonious than the noun.
So a three-word phrase for "dinner" contains a number, an obsolete time unit, and a Sanskrit noun — and a learner who has met all three can read it cold.

Grammar Lens: the pattern, not the pair

Set the day's three meals beside each other:

meal	Hindi	what it is built from breakfast	नाश्ता	its own word, borrowed whole
lunch	दोपहर का खाना	a time + का + खाना
dinner	रात का खाना	a time + का + खाना

नाश्ता is the odd one out: a single borrowed noun with no parts to see. The other two are phrases Hindi builds on demand. That asymmetry is worth noticing because it keeps recurring — Hindi borrows a whole word where it has one, and builds a transparent phrase where it does not.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "दोपहर का खाना" — dopahar kā khānā, lunch
- "रात का खाना" — rāt kā khānā, dinner
- all three meals in order, morning to night (नाश्ता, दोपहर का खाना, रात का खाना)

Before you move on

Which of the three meal names is a single borrowed word rather than a built phrase? (नाश्ता.) What is दोपहर made of, and what does it add up to? (दो "two" + पहर a three-hour watch — two watches in, so noon.)

Chapter 88

Four Adjectives That Do Not Agree

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say easy, difficult, beautiful and ugly, and tell from an adjective's ending whether it will change to match its noun.
> Name all four adjectives and say which of them would change ending before a feminine noun: none, because a Hindi adjective bends only when it ends in -aa.

88.1 आसान / मुश्किल — easy, difficult, and two words that refuse to agree

You know that काला changes its ending to match the noun and सफ़ेद never does. Before reading on: which of those two do you expect a word borrowed from Persian to behave like?

You'll want to know: आसान and मुश्किल

आसान (āsān) — "easy." मुश्किल (mushkil) — "difficult."

Both are borrowed, and both behave like सफ़ेद: they sit in front of the noun and do not change ending for anything. Whatever the noun's gender or number, the adjective is the same shape you learned.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आसान comes from Persian āsān, "easy" — a plain everyday word in both languages, with no complication to report, which is fitting.
मुश्किल is the more interesting half. It is Arabic mushkil, from the root ش-ك-ل (sh-k-l), which is about form and shape. A mushkil thing is one whose shape is unclear — something you cannot make out the outline of. The same root gives shakl, "shape," a word many Hindi speakers also use.
So "difficult" in Hindi is not "heavy" or "hard" but "hard to make out." That is a different metaphor from the English one, and worth carrying with you.

Grammar Lens: which adjectives bend, and why

Line the four up:

adjective	origin	changes ending?
काला	Sanskrit, ends in -आ	yes
सफ़ेद	Persian loan	no
आसान	Persian loan	no
मुश्किल	Arabic loan	no

There is a pattern under this, and it is about shape rather than about borrowing. A Hindi adjective bends when it ends in -आ; otherwise it stays put. Loanwords land on the "no" side so often because they mostly arrive ending in a consonant.
That means you do not have to remember a list. Listen for the ending.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "आसान" — āsān, easy
- "मुश्किल" — mushkil, difficult
- whether either one would change its ending in front of a feminine noun (no — neither ends in -आ)

Before you move on

What shape does a Hindi adjective need before it will bend? (An ending in -आ.) What is the literal idea inside मुश्किल? (Something whose shape is unclear — from the Arabic root for form.)

88.2 सुंदर / बदसूरत — beautiful, ugly, and a prefix you already own

You met सुप्रभात as "good morning." Say it again and listen to the first syllable. You are about to meet it a second time, in a word that has nothing to do with mornings.

You'll want to know: सुंदर and बदसूरत

सुंदर (sundar) — "beautiful." बदसूरत (badsūrat) — "ugly."

Neither ends in -आ, so neither bends. You can put both to work with what you learned last lesson and nothing else.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सुंदर opens with Sanskrit सु- — the prefix meaning "good, well." It is the same सु- sitting at the front of सुप्रभात ("good dawn"). Once you have noticed it, you will keep finding it: सु- marks the favourable version of whatever follows.

बदसूरत is two borrowings glued together. बद is Persian for "bad," and सूरत is Arabic ṣūrat, "face" or "form." Ugly, in Hindi, is literally "bad-faced."

> बद and English bad look like the same word and are not related. The resemblance is one of the most famous coincidences in etymology — two unconnected languages landing on nearly the same sound for nearly the same meaning. Enjoy it, and do not build a rule on it.

So the pair is built from opposite halves of Hindi's vocabulary: सुंदर is Sanskrit through and through, बदसूरत is Persian plus Arabic. The language names beauty with its inherited words and ugliness with its borrowed ones, which is an accident of history rather than a judgement, but it is a useful one to notice — it tells you which dictionary each word's relatives live in.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "सुंदर" — sundar, beautiful
- "बदसूरत" — badsūrat, ugly
- which of the four adjectives you now have would change ending in front of a feminine noun (none of them — not one ends in -आ)

Before you move on

Where have you seen सु- before this lesson, and what does it do? (In सुप्रभात — it marks the good version of what follows.) What are the two pieces of बदसूरत, and what do they add up to? (Persian बद "bad" plus Arabic सूरत "face" — bad-faced.)

Chapter 89

School: The Borrowed Word and the Built One

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 4 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the school in both registers, say who is in it, and tell which of the two words belongs on a sign and which in a spoken sentence.
> Say where the teacher and the student are using the casual word, then read the sign that calls the same building by the formal one.

89.1 स्कूल (skūl) — the building the teacher and the student were always in Say शिक्षक and chātra. You have had both of them for a long time. Now say the place they meet — and notice that you cannot yet.

You'll want to know: स्कूल

स्कूल (skūl) — "school". Masculine.

Write it: स्कूल once

स + ् + क gives the conjunct स्क, then ू above the ल... no: the ू belongs to क, so it is स्कू and then ल. Three pieces, one of them a conjunct you have seen before.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

This one is borrowed straight from English, and the English word has a joke inside it that Hindi inherited without asking.
English school comes from Latin schola, from Greek skholē — which meant leisure. Free time. The hours you did not have to work.
The Greeks thought study was what a person did with their leisure, so the word for time off slid across to mean the place you spend it learning. Every language that borrowed it borrowed the joke: Spanish escuela, German Schule, Russian shkola, and now Hindi स्कूल.
So when you say skūl, you are saying a Greek word for "spare time" that has travelled through Latin, English and into Devanagari without anyone noticing what it used to mean.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "स्कूल" — skūl
- the teacher, the student, and the school, in that order (शिक्षक, chātra, स्कूल)
- what the Greek ancestor of this word meant (leisure)

Before you move on

What did skholē mean before it meant school? (Leisure — the time you did not have to work.) Which two people did this track already know how to name before it could name the building? (शिक्षक and chātra.)

89.2 विद्यालय (vidyālay) — an abode of knowledge

You have स्कूल, borrowed whole. Hindi also has its own word, built out of two pieces you can take apart. Guess which register it belongs to before reading on — the sign above the gate, or the sentence a child says?

You'll want to know: विद्यालय

विद्यालय (vidyālay) — "school", masculine, and noticeably more formal than स्कूल. It is what you read on the gate, on a form, in a newspaper. A child telling you where they are going says skūl.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Two Sanskrit pieces, joined the way Sanskrit joins everything:

> विद्या (vidyā) — "knowledge" — plus आलय (ālaya) — "abode". An abode of knowledge.

आलय is productive on its own: himālaya is हिम ("snow") + आलय — the abode of snow. You already know that mountain's name; now you know it is a compound, and the second half is sitting in this word too. And विद्या rests on the root विद् (vid), "to know" — which is one of the furthest-travelled roots in any language on earth:

- Sanskrit वेद (veda) — knowledge, the name of the oldest texts.
- Latin vidēre "to see", giving video, vision, evidence.
- English wit, wisdom, and the -wise in likewise.

So vidyālay and the English word wit are built on the same ancient syllable. The borrowed स्कूल carried a Greek word for leisure into Hindi; the native विद्यालय was here all along, and its root reaches English by a different road entirely.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "विद्यालय" — vidyālay
- which of the two words goes on the gate and which a child says
- the other famous compound ending in आलय, and what its first half means (हिमालय — हिम, snow)

Before you move on

What are the two pieces of विद्यालय? (विद्या knowledge + आलय abode.) Which English word for cleverness comes from the same root as विद्या? (Wit — and wisdom with it.)

89.3 स्कूल or विद्यालय — the same building, two registers

Both words mean school. Say each one, and decide which you would write on an official form.

Grammar Lens: borrowed whole, or built from parts

This is the third time this pattern has turned up, and it is worth naming:

meaning	borrowed whole	built from parts
a meal	नाश्ता	दोपहर का खाना
a school	स्कूल	विद्यालय

Hindi keeps both kinds and uses them at different heights. The borrowed word is what people say; the built word is what institutions write. Neither is more correct, and a learner who only has one of them will sound wrong in half the situations they meet.
Note which way round it falls here: the borrowed word is the casual one. That is not a rule — it is what happened to these two.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the casual word, then the formal one
- the student, and where the student goes, casually (chātra, स्कूल)
- what विद्यालय is made of, in two pieces

Before you move on

Which of the two would appear on a gate, and which in a child's sentence? (विद्यालय on the gate, स्कूल in the sentence.) Which other pair in this book splits the same way? (नाश्ता and दोपहर का खाना.)

89.4 शिक्षक स्कूल में हैं — the building, with people in it

A place you can name is not yet a place you can put somebody in. Say where the teacher is, out loud, before reading on.

Read this

Every word here is one you have met:

शिक्षक स्कूल में हैं। chātra भी स्कूल में हैं। विद्यालय बड़ा है।

Three short lines, and the third one changes register on purpose: the sign over the door calls the building विद्यालय, even though the two sentences before it called the same building स्कूल.

Grammar Lens: why the reading paper cares

This matters beyond the vocabulary. An exam reading paper is built out of signs, forms and notices — exactly the places where the formal word appears — while the listening paper is built out of people talking, where the casual word does.
A candidate who knows only स्कूल can follow the conversation and stall on the sign. A candidate who knows only विद्यालय does the reverse.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "शिक्षक स्कूल में हैं।"
- the same sentence about the student (chātra)
- the third line, with the formal word (विद्यालय बड़ा है।)

Before you move on

Which of the two school words would you expect on a sign in a reading paper, and which in a spoken exchange? (विद्यालय on the sign, स्कूल in the exchange.) Say where the student is.

89.5 (नाम, कैसे, फिर) — the opening of the book, eighty chapters later

Ask a stranger their name, respectfully. Then say the word for again.

You'll want to know: why this page gives you no cues

The opening chapters built the four moves that open and close a meeting. Every page since leaned on them; none asked you to produce them cold. An examiner will, so this page names a move and waits.

The exchange — four of them, by what each one does the move	what you produce

open	the greeting, and the answer to a thank-you trade names	the question, your answer, the pleased-to-meet-you ask after them	the how-are-you, and a reply
close	one of three farewells, chosen by formality

Cover the right-hand column; the left one is the whole cue.

Grammar Lens: कैसा, कैसी, कैसे — the one that bends कैसा masculine singular, कैसी feminine, कैसे for a respectful आप or a masculine plural.

That last cell is why आप कैसे हैं? takes कैसे for one person: आप counts as plural whoever it points at, and adjective and verb follow it.

You'll want to know: आपका स्वागत है, and where ख़ुशी belongs

One phrase, two moments: it answers a thank-you (you're welcome) and greets an arrival (welcome), with no change to the Hindi. आपसे मिलकर ख़ुशी हुई is narrower — the first minute, nowhere else.

Why it's said this way

what you say	how it lands	who it is for
अलविदा	final, weighty	a long parting
फिर मिलेंगे	warm, ordinary	almost anyone
चलता हूँ / चलती हूँ	casual, spoken	people you know

फिर on its own means again or then, and it turns the middle row into a promise of a further meeting rather than an ending. चलता हूँ announces your own going, so its ending matches whoever speaks.

Your turn

Both sides, out loud, page covered.

Say these aloud:

- the opening — greet, and answer a thank-you
- the name trade, both sides
- the how-are-you to an elder, and a reply
- the close, all three ways
- आपका स्वागत है answering thanks, then opening a door
- कैसा, कैसी, कैसे, and what each is for

Before you move on

Which farewell announces your own going rather than the meeting's end, and which ending does कैसा take after आप? (चलता हूँ; कैसे, since आप counts as plural.)

Chapter 90

Four Adjectives That Always Agree

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a person as tall, short, thin or stout, and make each adjective agree, because all four end in -aa.
> Say the same sentence about a man and about a woman, and hear that vah and hai never move while the adjective carries the whole gender load.

90.1 लंबा — tall and long are the same word, and this one bends

The last chapter gave you four adjectives and not one of them changed its ending. Say आसान and remember why it stayed put. This chapter gives you three that do the opposite, and you can hear it coming from the ending.

You'll want to know: लंबा

लंबा (lambā) — "tall," and also "long."

Hindi does not split those two. A person is lambā, a road is lambā, a film is lambā. English keeps three words for one measurement and chooses between them by what the thing is doing: tall if it stands up, long if it lies down, lengthy if it is made of time. Hindi measures the distance and stops there.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

लंबा is Sanskrit लम्ब (lamba), "hanging down, drooping." The idea began as what dangles — and a thing that dangles is measured by how far down it reaches.
CDIAL glosses the Sanskrit word "pendent", and notes that Sanskrit already used it for "long" in compounds (CDIAL 10951).

Grammar Lens: this one ends in -आ, so it bends

Nothing new here — the shape you already learned, meeting a new word:

shape	masculine singular	feminine
ends in -आ	लंबा	लंबी
ends in a consonant	आसान	आसान

लंबा ends in -आ, so it behaves like काला: lambā for a man, lambī for a woman, lambe for more than one man.
This is the whole reason the easy-and-difficult lesson and this one belong next to each other. That one gave you four adjectives that never move, and every one of them ended in a consonant. These three all end in -आ, and every one of them moves. Nothing has to be memorised — listen for the last sound.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "लंबा" — lambā, tall
- the form you would use about a woman (lambī)
- "लंबा दिन" — a long day, the same word doing the other job

Before you move on

How many English words does लंबा cover? (At least three: tall, long, lengthy.) What did the Sanskrit root mean? (Hanging down.) What tells you this adjective will bend? (It ends in -आ.)

90.2 पतला — thin, and a root that fell over

Say लंबा and its feminine form. The next word has the same ending, so you already know what it will do.

You'll want to know: पतला

पतला (patlā) — "thin."

It works for a person, for a sheet of paper, and for a soup that has too much water in it. English needs thin, slim, slender and watery for that range; Hindi uses one word and lets the noun decide which English word you would have reached for.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पतला goes back to Sanskrit pattrala, "leafy", which CDIAL takes to have meant "leaf-like, thin" (CDIAL 7736). It is built on पत्र (pattra), "leaf" (first "wing-feather"), from the root पत् (pat), "to fly". A thin thing is as flat as a leaf.

The leaf word is still in everyday Hindi:

word	what it is
पत्ता (pattā)	a leaf
patjhaṛ	autumn: pat, "leaf", with jhaṛ, "fall"

Autumn in Hindi is named exactly the way American English names it: fall. Two languages that never discussed it reached for the same picture.

Grammar Lens: the second of the three

adjective	masculine	feminine
लंबा	लंबा	लंबी
पतला	पतला	पतली

Same ending, same behaviour, no exception to learn. This is what a rule that actually works looks like: you were told the shape, and every new word that has the shape does the thing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "पतला" — patlā, thin
- the feminine form (patlī)
- lambā aur patlā — tall and thin, both bending the same way
- what Hindi calls autumn, and what it literally means (patjhaṛ, the leaf-fall)

Before you move on

What did pattrala, behind पतला, mean? (Leafy, leaf-like.) What is a thin thing, by that picture? (Something as flat as a leaf.) Which English name for autumn matches the Hindi one? (Fall.)

90.3 मोटा — thick, and the word that refuses to be only about people

Say पतला and its feminine. The word in this lesson is its opposite, and it ends the same way.

You'll want to know: मोटा

मोटा (moṭā) — "thick, stout, heavy."

Set it against पतला and the pair covers the whole range at once:

thing	पतला	मोटा
a person	slim	stout
a rope	thin	thick
a book	slim	fat
a voice	reedy	deep

That last row is the one to keep. A मोटी आवाज़ is a deep voice, not a fat one — the metaphor runs from the thickness of the string to the lowness of the note, exactly as it does on any instrument.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मोटा comes from a reconstructed mōṭṭa*, one of a group of related forms that CDIAL heads muṭṭa*, "defective" (CDIAL 10187): words for things stumpy, blunt or lumpish. CDIAL glosses the Hindi word "fat", and it means something thick, with body to it.

Hindi extends it to mean rough or approximate, which follows from the same picture: a मोटा estimate is one drawn with a thick line rather than a thin one, so it has no fine detail. English does this with broadly, and the metaphor is identical.

Grammar Lens: all three of them, and the rule holds

adjective	masculine	feminine
लंबा	लंबा	लंबी
पतला	पतला	पतली
मोटा	मोटा	मोटी

Three words, one ending, one behaviour. Against the four from the last chapter — none of which ended in -आ and none of which moved — that is the cleanest demonstration this book can give you that the ending is the rule.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मोटा" — moṭā, thick
- the feminine form (moṭī)
- patlā aur moṭā — the pair
- what a मोटी आवाज़ is (a deep voice)

Before you move on

What does मोटा mean when it describes a voice? (Deep.) And when it describes an estimate? (Rough, approximate.) Does it bend? (Yes — it ends in -आ.)

90.4 नाटा — the gap that a word you already knew could not fill

You have लंबा for tall. Reach for its opposite using a word you already know, and then go on to find out why that reach does not work.

You'll want to know: नाटा

नाटा (nāṭā) — "short, of a person's height."

The obvious guess is choṭā, and the obvious guess is wrong — not because it is rude, but because it means something else.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

This is the clearest case in the chapter of a word existing because another word is busy:

word	about a thing	about a person
choṭā	small	younger
नाटा	—	short in height

Choṭā bhāī is a younger brother regardless of how tall he is. Hindi took the size word for a person's age and left the height meaning without an owner, and नाटा is what filled the hole.

CDIAL traces it to a reconstructed naṭṭa*, "defective", one of its groups of words for things stunted or lacking, and glosses the Hindi word "short, dwarfish" (CDIAL 6935).

A note on using it. नाटा is plain rather than polite, and about a person it can land as blunt. When you want neutral, Hindi says qad meṅ choṭā, "short in height" — which spells out the height part that choṭā on its own leaves ambiguous. Recognise नाटा; reach for the longer phrase.

Grammar Lens: the fourth of four, and the rule has not moved

adjective	masculine	feminine
लंबा	लंबा	लंबी
पतला	पतला	पतली
मोटा	मोटा	मोटी
नाटा	नाटा	नाटी

Four words for the shape of a person, all four ending in -आ, all four bending. You can now answer a question about anyone's build without once needing to remember which words agree.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "नाटा" — nāṭā, short
- the feminine form (nāṭī)
- lambā and its real opposite, rather than the one you first reached for
- the neutral phrase for short in height (qad meṅ choṭā)

Before you move on

Why can choṭā not mean short about a person? (About a person it means younger.) What does CDIAL reconstruct behind नाटा? (naṭṭa*, "defective": something stunted.)

90.5 chhah ākār — six shapes, and the two that were only ever about things

Name the four new adjectives with their feminine forms before reading on.

Grammar Lens: which ones a person can be

You had two size words already, and they were taught about objects. The four new ones are the ones a person gets described with:

adjective	feminine	used of a person?
बड़ा	बड़ी	as elder, not as large
choṭā	choṭī	as younger, not as small
लंबा	लंबी	yes — tall
नाटा	नाटी	yes — short in height
पतला	पतली	yes — thin
मोटा	मोटी	yes — stout

The first two rows are the ones worth pausing on. बड़ा and choṭā applied to a person almost always mean older and younger, not big and small — baṛā bhāī is an elder brother, whatever his height. So the track could size a box long before it could describe a body, which is why these four were needed — and why nāṭā had to be a separate word rather than a reuse of choṭā.

All six end in -आ. All six bend. That is not a coincidence: size and shape words are old inherited vocabulary, and inherited Hindi adjectives are the ones that kept the ending.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all six in the masculine, then all six in the feminine
- which two mean older and younger when they describe a person
- lambā aur patlā, then the same about a woman
- the one that also means deep, about a voice (moṭā)

Before you move on

What does बड़ा भाई mean — a big brother or an elder one? (An elder one.) Which of the six bend? (All of them: every one ends in -आ.)

90.6 वह लंबी है — the sentence that makes you choose the ending

Say लंबा and पतला. In a list they sit still. In a sentence about a real person they will not.

Grammar Lens: the ending is chosen by who you are talking about

about	sentence	the ending
a man	वह लंबा है	-आ
a woman	वह लंबी है	-ई

वह does not change. है does not change. The adjective carries the whole load, which is the opposite of English, where he and she do the work and tall never moves.
That is worth saying plainly: in English the pronoun tells you the gender and the adjective is inert. In Hindi the pronoun is silent about it and the adjective tells you. A listener who misses the ending has missed the information.

Read this

Read it: the lines below aloud
Every word has been taught:

वह लंबी है। वह पतली है। वह लंबा है। वह मोटा है। वह नाटा है।

Five sentences, two people, and the only thing telling you which is which is the last letter of the adjective.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "वह लंबा है" and then "वह लंबी है", hearing only the ending move
- the same pair with पतला
- the same pair with मोटा
- the same pair with नाटा
- two sentences describing someone you know

Before you move on

In वह लंबी है, which word tells you the person is a woman? (The adjective — वह is the same for both.) What would the masculine sentence be? (वह लंबा है.)

Chapter 91

Character, Not Mood

Modes: voice (5) eyes (3) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what a person is like rather than how they feel today, using seven disposition adjectives and predicting from the ending alone which of them change for a woman.
> Answer the question what is he or she like, noticing that kaisaa itself bends, so the gender is announced in the question before any adjective arrives.

91.1 बुरा — bad, and the phrase you will hear it in first

You have had acchā for a long time and have never had its opposite. Say it, then notice that you cannot yet say the other thing.

You'll want to know: बुरा

बुरा (burā) — "bad."

It ends in -आ, so by now you know without being told: burā, burī, bure. The shape rule you learned about size words works on character words too, because it was never about meaning.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बुरा is the word inside one of the most-heard sentences in everyday Hindi:

बुरा मत मानो — burā mat māno — "don't take it badly."

Literally: do not consider it bad. It is what a speaker adds after saying something blunt, and it is closer to English "no offence" than to any apology. You will hear it long before you need to produce it, so recognising it is worth more right now than being able to build it.
A second everyday one: बुरा लगना — burā lagnā, "to feel hurt," literally to strike one as bad. Hindi describes being offended as something the remark does, not something you do.
बुरा comes from a reconstructed bura*, "defective" (CDIAL 9289).

Grammar Lens: a pair that behaves identically

adjective	masculine	feminine
acchā	acchā	acchī
बुरा	बुरा	बुरी

Both inherited, both ending in -आ, both bending. The pair is the easiest one in the chapter, and the rest of the chapter is where it stops being easy: four of the six words ahead do not bend.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "बुरा" — burā, bad
- the feminine form (burī)
- acchā aur burā — the pair
- what burā mat māno means (roughly, "no offence")

Before you move on

What does Hindi's "no offence" literally say? (Do not consider it bad.) Does बुरा bend? (Yes — it ends in -आ.) And मोटा, from the last chapter? (Also yes — same ending, same behaviour.)

91.2 होशियार — holding your wits, which is a compliment and a warning at once

Say आसान. It ends in a consonant and never bends. The word in this lesson ends in a consonant too — so predict what it will do before reading on.

You'll want to know: होशियार

होशियार (hośiyār) — "clever, sharp, alert."

It ends in र, a consonant, so it does not bend. Ek hośiyār laṛkā, ek hośiyār laṛkī — the adjective is the same shape for both.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Persian, and built from two pieces:

- होश (hoś) — consciousness, one's senses, one's wits
- -यार (-yār) — holding, keeping

So a hośiyār person is one who keeps hold of their senses. Not one who knows a great deal — one who is awake.
That is why the word does double duty. Called out sharply, होशियार! means "look out!" — the Indian Railways used it as the standard shouted warning. The same word praises a bright child and stops a man walking into a moving cart, because both are about being alert.
होश on its own is worth keeping. Hoś meṅ ānā is "to come to one's senses," and hoś uṛnā is literally "for one's wits to fly away" — to be stunned.

Grammar Lens: the first one that does not bend

adjective	masculine	feminine
बुरा	बुरा	बुरी
होशियार	होशियार	होशियार

The difference is not that one is about character and the other about worth. It is the last letter, and nothing else. बुरा is inherited and ends in -आ; होशियार is Persian and ends in a consonant.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "होशियार" — hośiyār, clever
- the form you would use about a woman (the same one)
- what होशियार! shouted on a platform means (look out)
- what the two pieces of the word mean (wits and holding)

Before you move on

What does होश mean on its own? (One's senses or wits.) Why does होशियार not bend? (It ends in a consonant, not in -आ.)

91.3 मेहनती — an ending that makes a person out of a thing

Say होशियार. It ends in a consonant and stays put. This word ends in -ई, which is a third shape, and it also stays put — for a different reason.

You'll want to know: मेहनती

मेहनती (mehnatī) — "hard-working, industrious."

It is built out of a noun you can see inside it: मेहनत (mehnat), "hard work, toil," plus the ending -ई.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मेहनत is Arabic miḥna, which did not start out meaning honest labour. It meant a trial, an ordeal, a testing — the thing that puts a person through it. Work became the name for the ordeal, which is a judgement about work that several languages independently agreed on. The -ई on the end is one of the most useful endings in Hindi. Attach it to a noun and you get the person characterised by that thing:

noun	the person
मेहनत — toil	मेहनती — one who toils
शरम — shame	शर्मीला — one who feels it
ज़रूरत — need	ज़रूरी — necessary

It is the same job English does with -y in wealthy, greedy, speedy — and, in fact, the very same job Persian does with -ī in Hindī, "belonging to Hind."

Grammar Lens: the third shape, and why it also stays put ending	example	changes for a woman?

-आ	बुरा	yes, to -ई
consonant	होशियार	no
-ई	मेहनती	no

The reason the third row does not move is worth seeing rather than memorising: the feminine ending an -आ adjective changes to is -ई. A word that already ends in -ई has nowhere to go. It is not an exception — it is the rule arriving at a word that is already there.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मेहनती" — mehnatī, hard-working
- the noun hiding inside it (mehnat)
- the feminine form (the same one — it already ends in -ई)
- hośiyār aur mehnatī — clever and hard-working, neither one moving

Before you move on

What did Arabic miḥna mean before it meant work? (A trial or ordeal.) Why does an -ई adjective not change for a woman? (-ई is already the feminine ending; there is nowhere further to go.)

91.4 शर्मीला — the ending that turns a feeling into a character

Say मेहनती. You saw an ending build a person out of a noun. The same thing happens here with a different ending, and this one bends.

You'll want to know: शर्मीला

शर्मीला (śarmīlā) — "shy, bashful."

Built from a noun and an ending: शरम / शर्म (śaram, "shame, modesty") + -ईला → शर्मीला.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The ending -ईला is not the same as the -ई of mehnatī, and the difference is exactly the difference this chapter is about.
-ई says has this thing. -ईला says is made of this thing — it builds a settled quality, a disposition rather than an episode:

noun	with -ईला
शरम — shame	शर्मीला — shy by nature
रंग — colour	रंगीला — colourful, flamboyant
नशा — intoxication	नशीला — intoxicating

That is why शर्मीला is the right word for an exam question about character. Someone can feel shame at a moment; a śarmīlā person is one for whom it is a standing trait. This is settled character, not mood — the distinction the whole chapter turns on.
शर्म itself came into Hindi from Persian šarm. It only sounds like English shame: the English word is Germanic, and no shared root is established.

Grammar Lens: back to the bending shape

adjective	masculine	feminine
बुरा	बुरा	बुरी
मेहनती	मेहनती	मेहनती
शर्मीला	शर्मीला	शर्मीली

-ईला ends in -आ, so the rule applies as usual and the word bends. The long ending does not protect it: look at the last letter, always.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "शर्मीला" — śarmīlā, shy
- the feminine form (śarmīlī)
- the noun inside it (śaram)
- the difference between feeling ashamed once and being śarmīlā

Before you move on

What does the ending -ईला add that -ई does not? (A settled quality rather than merely having the thing.) Does शर्मीला bend? (Yes — it ends in -आ.)

91.5 मिलनसार — the opposite of shy, built out of a word you have had for ages

Say शर्मीला. Now think of the opposite kind of person — the one who is easy with strangers. Hindi builds that word out of something you learned in order to say goodbye.

You'll want to know: मिलनसार

मिलनसार (milansār) — "sociable, friendly, easy to get on with."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Two pieces, and you already have the first:

- मिलन (milan) — a meeting, from मिलना, "to meet" — the verb inside phir milenge, the farewell you learned early
- -सार (-sār) — a Persian ending meaning inclined toward, full of

So a milansār person is inclined toward meeting. Hindi names the trait after the act rather than after the feeling, which is a plainer way to describe a person than English manages: sociable goes back to Latin socius, a companion, and is a noun about a relationship; milansār is a verb about what someone actually does.

The -सार ending is rare enough to be worth flagging as a small set rather than a rule to apply. You will meet शर्मसार (śarmsār), "ashamed" — built on the same śaram as the last lesson.

Grammar Lens: a consonant ending, so it stands still

adjective	masculine	feminine
शर्मीला	शर्मीला	शर्मीली
होशियार	होशियार	होशियार
मिलनसार	मिलनसार	मिलनसार

The pair शर्मीला / मिलनसार is the sharpest demonstration in the chapter: two opposite traits, and one bends while the other does not. Meaning has nothing to do with it. Only the last letter does.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मिलनसार" — milansār, sociable
- the verb hiding inside it (milnā, to meet)
- the form for a woman (the same one)
- śarmīlā aur milansār — and hear that only the first one could move

Before you move on

What verb is inside मिलनसार? (Milnā, to meet.) Why does it not bend while शर्मीला does? (It ends in a consonant; शर्मीला ends in -आ.)

91.6 गंभीर — deep, which is how three separate languages say serious

You learned that मोटा describes a deep voice. Hold on to that idea of depth — this lesson takes it somewhere else entirely.

You'll want to know: गंभीर

गंभीर (gambhīr) — "serious, grave, solemn."

It ends in र, a consonant, so it does not bend.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Sanskrit गम्भीर, and its first meaning was deep — of water, of a well, of a voice.

What is striking is how many unrelated languages reached for depth or weight when they needed a word for gravity of manner:

language	word	first meaning
Hindi	गंभीर	deep
Latin	gravis	heavy
English	profound	deep

A serious person, in all three, is one you cannot see the bottom of.

Hindi still uses the literal sense freely: a gambhīr river is a deep one, and a gambhīr illness is a grave one.

One useful distinction, and it is the same one English draws. A gambhīr person is solemn and weighty. A gambhīr situation is dangerous. The word does not decide which; the noun does.

Grammar Lens: all six, sorted by ending ending	the words	feminine

-आ	बुरा, शर्मीला	बुरी, शर्मीली
consonant	होशियार, मिलनसार, गंभीर	unchanged
-ई	मेहनती	unchanged

Two bend and four do not, and you can sort them without knowing what a single one means.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "गंभीर" — gambhīr, serious
- the form for a woman (the same one)
- gambhīr aur mehnatī — two words, neither one moving

- what a गंभीर river is (a deep one)

Before you move on

What did गंभीर first mean? (Deep.) Which Latin word for heavy took the same path to "serious"? (Gravis.) Does it bend? (No — it ends in a consonant.)

91.7 सात शब्द स्वभाव के — seven words, three endings, and one pair of opposites

Name as many of the seven as you can before reading the table. Aim for five.

Grammar Lens: the ending decides, and the meaning never does

All seven, sorted by what their last letters allow:

word	meaning	feminine
acchā	good	acchī
बुरा	bad	बुरी
शर्मीला	shy	शर्मीली
होशियार	clever	होशियार
मिलनसार	sociable	मिलनसार
गंभीर	serious	गंभीर
मेहनती	hard-working	मेहनती

Read the third column against the first. Where the two differ, the word moves for a woman; where they are identical, it does not. Three move and four stay.

Grammar Lens: where each word came from

The split is not random, and seeing why makes the endings predictable:

source	the words	ends in inherited from Sanskrit	acchā, बुरा, गंभीर	mostly -आ
Persian	होशियार, मिलनसार, शर्मीला	mostly a consonant
Arabic through Persian	मेहनती	-ई

Inherited words are the ones that kept the -आ ending, because they are the ones that went through the whole sound history of the language. Borrowed words arrived later, in whatever shape the lending language had them, and mostly that shape ended in a consonant. गंभीर is the exception that proves it is a tendency rather than a law: it is inherited from Sanskrit and still ends in a consonant. So the origin explains the pattern — the ending is what you act on.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three that move, in their feminine forms
- the four that stay put
- the one pair of outright opposites (acchā and burā)
- the two that describe how a person is with strangers (śarmīlā and milansār)

Before you move on

Which of the seven is inherited and still refuses to bend? (गंभीर.) Why does मेहनती not bend? (It already ends in -ई, which is where a bending adjective would go.)

91.8 वह कैसी है? — the question the seven were assembled to answer

Say होशियार and मेहनती. Two words no reference letter could do without, and the track had neither until now.

Grammar Lens: the question word bends too

कैसा is itself an -आ word, so the question agrees before the answer does:

about	question	a possible answer
a man	वह कैसा है?	वह गंभीर है।
a woman	वह कैसी है?	वह शर्मीली है।

Notice what that means in practice. The gender is announced in the question, before any adjective arrives. A listener who catches only kaisī already knows a woman is being asked about — and knows that any bending adjective in the answer must end in -ई.

Read this

Read it: the lines below aloud
Every word has been taught:

> — आपकी बहन कैसी है? — वह होशियार है। वह मेहनती भी है। वह शर्मीली है। — आपका भाई कैसा है? — वह मिलनसार है। वह गंभीर भी है।

Five adjectives in that exchange, and only शर्मीली had to change its ending. The other four were decided by their own last letters rather than by who was being described — which is the entire point of the chapter, put into one conversation.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "वह कैसी है?" and answer it with two of the seven
- the same answer about a man, changing only what can change
- "वह मिलनसार है" and then the feminine version, and hear that nothing moved
- acchā and burā, the one outright pair of opposites among the seven
- one sentence about somebody you know

Before you move on

In वह कैसी है?, what has already told you a woman is being asked about? (The question word itself — कैसी, not कैसा.) Which adjectives in the answer would have to follow suit? (Only the ones ending in -आ.)

Chapter 92

Whose, And What A Postposition Does To It

Modes: voice (7) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 6 of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say whose something is for any owner, use apna when the owner is the subject, and say what I have, using the oblique form a postposition demands.
> Ask what somebody has and answer, noticing that no word in either line means have and that every possessive has bent to -e because a postposition follows it.

92.1 uskā — one word for his, her and its

You have had merā, merī, mere since the second chapter. Say all three. You have been able to say whose something is for exactly one person: your own.

You'll want to know: uskā uskā — "his," "her," or "its."

Hindi does not choose between those three, and the reason is the point of the lesson: the possessive agrees with the thing owned, not with the owner.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

उसका (uskā) is us, the form वह, "that", takes before an ending, with the possessive -kā. CDIAL lists us under Sanskrit asau, "that" (CDIAL 972).

Grammar Lens: English agrees with the owner, Hindi with the thing

This is the single biggest difference between the two systems, and it runs the opposite way from what an English speaker expects:

	what decides the form
English his / her	the owner's gender
Hindi uskā / uskī	the owned thing's gender

So uskā before a masculine noun and uskī before a feminine one — and whether the owner is a man or a woman changes nothing at all. A sentence with uskī kitāb tells you the book is feminine and tells you nothing about whose it is.

This is not a new rule. It is the -आ agreement you already have, doing its ordinary job: uskā ends in -आ, so it bends like every other -आ word in the book.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- uskā — his, her, or its
- the form before a feminine noun (uskī)
- merā and uskā one after the other, and hear the same ending
- what uskī tells you about the owner (nothing)

Before you move on

Does uskā mean his or her? (Either — Hindi does not distinguish.) What decides between uskā and uskī? (The gender of the thing owned.)

92.2 हमारा — our, and the places Hindi prefers it to "my"

Say merā and uskā. Both end the same way and bend the same way, so the next word brings no new grammar — only a new owner.

You'll want to know: हमारा

हमारा (hamārā) — "our."

Built on the pronoun for we: हम (ham) + a possessive ending → हमारा. The pronoun gets its own lesson soon. Before a feminine noun it is hamārī; before a plural or an oblique it is hamāre, exactly as merā behaves.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हमारा (hamārā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from asmāka, "ours" (CDIAL 988). CDIAL notes an added -r- element.

Grammar Lens: where Hindi says "our" and English says "my"

The grammar is easy; the usage is the thing worth carrying:

talking about	English habit	Hindi habit
the house you grew up in	my house	hamārā ghar
your family	my family	hamārā parivār
your country	my country	hamārā deś

A Hindi speaker describing their family will very often say hamārā parivār where an English speaker says my family, because the thing is understood as belonging to the household rather than to the speaker. Neither is wrong in either language — but the preference is real, and a listening paper will play you the Hindi one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hamārā — our
- the form before a feminine noun (hamārī)

- the word for we that it is built on (ham)
- hamārā parivār, and notice that an English speaker would have said my

Before you move on

What pronoun is hamārā built on? (Ham, we.) Which of uskā and hamārā tells you something about the owner? (Hamārā — it says the owner is a group including the speaker.)

92.3 तुम्हारा — your, at the middle level of three

Say hamārā. You have had āpkā for your since early on. This lesson gives you the other one, and says when each is right.

You'll want to know: तुम्हारा

तुम्हारा (tumhārā) — "your," said to someone you are familiar with.
Built on तुम (tum), the middle of Hindi's three *you*s.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तुम्हारा (tumhārā) is inherited. It comes from yuṣmāka, the possessive of the Sanskrit plural "you", with its t- taken from tuvam, the singular "you" (CDIAL 10511).

Grammar Lens: three levels, and the possessive that goes with each pronoun	possessive	who

आप āp	āpkā	a stranger, an elder, anyone respected
तुम tum	tumhārā	a friend, a sibling, a younger colleague
तू tū	terā	intimate, or rude — rarely the right choice for a learner

The safe default for a learner is आप, and the reason is asymmetric: using āp with a close friend sounds a little formal, while using tum with a stranger or an elder sounds rude. One error is a small stiffness; the other is an offence.

But tumhārā is not optional to know. A listening paper is full of friends talking to each other, and it is the form they use.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tumhārā — your, to a friend
- the form before a feminine noun (tumhārī)
- the pronoun it is built on (tum)
- which of the two *your*s you would use with somebody's grandmother (āpkā)

Before you move on

Which pronoun is tumhārā built on? (Tum.) Which of the two mistakes costs more — āp to a friend, or tum to an elder? (Tum to an elder; the other is only a little formal.)

92.4 अपना — the word that takes over when the owner is the subject

Say merā and tumhārā. Now try to say "I do my work" in Hindi using merā, and go on to find out why that sentence is wrong.

You'll want to know: अपना

अपना (apnā) — "one's own."

When the owner of a thing is the subject of the same sentence, Hindi replaces the ordinary possessive with apnā. This is a requirement rather than a preference:

wrong	maiṅ merā kām kartā hūṅ
right	maiṅ apnā kām kartā hūṅ

Both would be "I do my work." The first is what an English speaker builds, and a Hindi ear hears it as a mistake straight away.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अपना (apnā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from ātmanaka*, "own", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 1135). It is built on ātman, "self", the word behind the respectful āp, "you".

Grammar Lens: one word covering every person

The saving is large, because apnā does not care who the subject is:

subject	English	Hindi
I	my own	apnā
you	your own	apnā
he or she	their own	apnā
we	our own	apnā

Four English possessives, one Hindi word. It still agrees with the thing owned in the ordinary way — apnā kām, apnī kitāb, apne dost — because it ends in -आ like all the others.
And it removes a real ambiguity. Vah uskī kitāb paṛhtā hai means he reads somebody else's book; vah apnī kitāb paṛhtā hai means he reads his own. English he reads his book cannot tell those apart without more words.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- apnā — one's own
- maiṅ apnā kām kartā hūṅ, and stop yourself from reaching for merā
- the difference between apnī kitāb and uskī kitāb
- the form before a plural or an oblique (apne)

Before you move on

When does apnā replace the ordinary possessive? (When the owner is the subject of the sentence.) Whose book is uskī kitāb when the subject is he? (Somebody else's.)

92.5 मेरे पास — Hindi has no word for "have"

Say merā, merī, mere. You have had all three since the second chapter. This lesson shows you that the third one has a second job nobody mentioned.

You'll want to know: मेरे पास

मेरे पास (mere pās) — "I have." Literally: near me.

पास (pās) means "near, at hand." Hindi has no verb meaning to have, so possession is built out of location:

> मेरे पास एक किताब है। mere pās ek kitāb hai — "Near me there is a book" = I have a book.

The thing owned is the subject of that sentence, which is why hai agrees with kitāb and not with the speaker.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

pās, "near", comes from Sanskrit pārśva, "side", whose form pārśve already meant "near" (CDIAL 8118).

Grammar Lens: mere is not the plural here

This is the part that repays attention. You learned mere as the plural of merā. It is also the oblique — the form a word takes in front of a postposition — and the two happen to look identical:

phrase	why mere
mere dost	plural — my friends
mere pās	oblique — pās is a postposition

So mere pās is not "my nears." It is merā bending because something stands after it. Every -आ possessive does this: uskā → uske pās, hamārā → hamāre pās, apnā → apne pās.

That single habit — -आ becomes -ए in front of a postposition — is worth more than the phrase itself, because it governs every postposition in the language.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mere pās ek kitāb hai — I have a book
- the same about him or her (uske pās)
- the same about us (hamāre pās)
- the same about the subject's own (apne pās)
- what mere is doing in mere pās — plural, or oblique? (oblique)

Before you move on

What does mere pās literally say? (Near me.) What agrees with hai in mere pās ek kitāb hai? (Kitāb — the thing owned is the subject.) What happens to an -आ possessive before a postposition? (It becomes -ए.)

92.6 मेरे लिए — the same bend, in front of a different postposition

Say mere pās. Say why it is mere and not merā. The word in this lesson works the same way, which is the whole point of putting them together.

You'll want to know: मेरे लिए

मेरे लिए (mere liye) — "for me." mere sāth — "with me."

Three phrases, one shape. The possessive goes oblique and the postposition follows:

phrase	meaning
mere pās	near me — I have
mere liye	for me
mere sāth	with me

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मेरे लिए (mere liye) is mere, "my", with liye, "for". liye is usually explained as a form of lenā, "to take", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit labhate, "catches, takes" (CDIAL 10948).

Grammar Lens: the pattern generalises to every person

Once the bend is automatic, the whole grid follows without memorising a single new form:

owner	oblique	with *liye
I	mere	mere liye
he, she	uske	uske liye
we	hamāre	hamāre liye
the subject's own	apne	apne liye

The last row is the one both practice papers reach for. Phrases like apne dost ke sāth — "with one's own friend" — put three of this chapter's ideas in four words: the reflexive possessive, the oblique bend, and a two-word postposition.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mere liye — for me
- mere sāth — with me
- the same two about him or her (uske liye, uske sāth)
- apne dost ke sāth, and name the three things happening in it

Before you move on

Why is it mere liye and not merā liye? (A postposition follows, so the possessive goes oblique.) What is the oblique of apnā? (Apne.)

92.7 pā̃ch mālik, ek niyam — five owners, and one bend that covers them all

Name as many possessives as you can before reading the table. Aim for five.

Grammar Lens: the whole grid

Every one of these ends in -आ, so every one bends the same way:

owner	masculine	feminine
my	merā	merī
your (respectful)	āpkā	āpkī
your (familiar)	tumhārā	tumhārī
his, her, its	uskā	uskī
our	hamārā	hamārī
the subject's own	apnā	apnī

Six forms in the first column and not one of them is irregular. The agreement is with the thing owned throughout, which is why nothing in the middle column tells you anything about the owner.

Grammar Lens: the bend, and the two jobs of -ए

Put a postposition after any of them and the -आ becomes -ए:

direct	before a postposition
merā	mere pās
uskā	uske liye
hamārā	hamāre ghar meṅ
apnā	apne dost ke sāth

The form -ए therefore has two jobs, and the sentence tells you which:

- mere dost — no postposition follows, so this is the plural: my friends.
- mere pās — a postposition follows, so this is the oblique: near me.

Nothing in the spelling distinguishes them. What comes next does.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all six possessives in the masculine, then all six in the feminine
- the one that replaces the others when the owner is the subject (apnā)
- mere pās, uske pās, hamāre pās in a run
- which job -ए is doing in mere dost, and which in mere pās

Before you move on

What does a possessive agree with — the owner or the thing owned? (The thing owned.) What are the two jobs of the -ए ending? (Plural, and oblique before a postposition.)

92.8 आपके पास क्या है? — asking what somebody has, without a verb for having

Say mere pās ek kitāb hai. Now turn it into a question addressed to somebody you would call āp, and notice that āpkā will have to bend.

Grammar Lens: the question bends too sentence

question	आपके पास क्या है?
answer	मेरे पास एक किताब है।

Āpkā becomes āpke for the same reason merā becomes mere: पास stands after it. The question and the answer are the identical construction with the owner swapped.
There is no verb for have anywhere in either line. है is the ordinary copula, and it is agreeing with kitāb.

Read this

Read it: the lines below aloud
Every word has been taught:

— आपके पास क्या है? — मेरे पास एक किताब है। — तुम्हारे पास क्या है? — मेरे पास एक कलम है। — हमारे घर में क्या है? — हमारे घर में सब है।

Six lines, three different owners, and the same bend in every one of them: āpke, tumhāre, hamāre — every possessive ending in -ए because a postposition stands after it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āpke pās kyā hai? and answer it about yourself
- the same question to a friend, using the familiar possessive (tumhāre pās)
- apne dost ke sāth, and say why it is apne rather than apnā
- one true sentence about something you have

Before you move on

Which word in mere pās ek kitāb hai means have? (None — the construction is near me there is.) Why is it āpke pās rather than āpkā pās? (Pās is a postposition, so the possessive goes oblique.)

Chapter 93

Telling Somebody To Do Something

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 4 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give a command at the right level of politeness, say you are at the familiar level, tell somebody not to do something, and read the negative notices a public sign is made of.
> Read a public notice and say the same thing as a friend would say it, noticing that a sign is at the aap level because it addresses a stranger.

93.1 बोलो — a command at the level you already know how to choose

Say tumhārā. You learned that Hindi has three levels of you and that the possessive changes with each. Say the verb bolnā. This chapter does the same thing to the verb.

You'll want to know: बोलो

बोलो (bolo) — "speak," said to somebody you would call तुम.

Take the verb, drop the -ना, add -o:

bolnā → bol → bolo

The same operation on any verb: karnā → karo, sunnā → suno, calnā → calo.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बोलो (bolo) is the verb बोलना, "to speak", with the command ending -o. CDIAL traces the verb to a reconstructed boll-*, "speak" (CDIAL 9321).

Grammar Lens: the command carries the level, and nothing else has to

This is the part that makes the imperative economical. In English a command is one word for everybody — speak — and politeness has to be added around it: speak, please speak, would you mind speaking.
In Hindi the verb ending itself carries the level:

level	the form	to whom
तुम	बोलो	a friend, a sibling
आप	boliye	a stranger, an elder
तू	bol	intimate, or rude

You already know how to choose between those three, because you chose between tumhārā, āpkā and terā the same way. The pronoun does not even have to be said: बोलो on its own tells the listener which one you meant.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "बोलो" — bolo, speak
- the two steps that build it from bolnā
- suno and karo, built the same way
- who you would say bolo to, and who you would not

Before you move on

How is bolo built from bolnā? (Drop the -ना, add -o.) Which of the three *you*s does it belong to? (Tum.) Does the pronoun have to be spoken? (No — the ending says it.)

93.2 बोलिए — the ending you have been saying for eighty chapters

Say māf kījiye. You learned it as one lump meaning "sorry."
Say it again and listen to the end of the second word.

You'll want to know: बोलिए

बोलिए (boliye) — "please speak," said to somebody you would call आप.

The ending is -iye, on the same stem as before:

bolnā → bol → boliye

And now the lump comes apart. कीजिए is karnā, "to do," with this same ending: kar + -iye. Māf kījiye is literally "please do forgiveness." You have been giving a respectful command since the ninth chapter without knowing it was one.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बोलिए (boliye) is the verb बोलना, "to speak", with the respectful ending -iye. CDIAL traces the verb to a reconstructed boll-*, "speak" (CDIAL 9321).

Grammar Lens: politeness is built in, not added on command	how politeness is carried

English	speak	by adding please
Hindi तुम	बोलो	by the ending
Hindi आप	बोलिए	by the ending

बोलिए already contains the respect, so it needs no kṛpayā. Adding one is not wrong — it is warmer, the way would you mind is warmer than please — but the bare form is complete and polite on its own.
A stem ending in a vowel lengthens slightly before -iye: karnā gives kījiye, not kariye, and denā gives dījiye. Those two are the ones you will meet most, and you already had the first.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "बोलिए" — boliye, please speak
- bolo and boliye one after the other, and name who each is for
- what māf kījiye literally asks for (please do forgiveness)
- whether boliye needs kṛpayā in front of it (no)

Before you move on

What ending makes the respectful command? (-iye.) What verb is hiding inside kījiye? (Karnā, to do.) Which of bolo and boliye would you use with a stranger? (Boliye.)

93.3 तुम हो — the copula that was hiding inside one question

Say tumhārā. You can name the tum level and command at it. Say "you are" at that level, and notice you have never been given the word.

You'll want to know: तुम हो

तुम हो (tum ho) — "you are," at the tum level.
हो is the copula that goes with तुम, and nothing else takes it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तुम हो (tum ho) is two inherited words. tum comes from yuṣmad-, the Sanskrit plural "you", with its t- from the singular tuvam (CDIAL 10511). ho is a form of honā, "to be", from Sanskrit bhavati, "becomes, is" (CDIAL 9416).

Grammar Lens: the copula, completed

You have had the others for a long time. Here they are together, which is the first time the set has been complete:

subject	copula
मैं	हूँ
तुम	हो
आप	हैं
वह	है

Four forms and no irregularity beyond having to learn them. हो is the one that was missing, and it was missing in an awkward way: the track has been saying it inside the age question all along, as a lump, without the form ever standing on its own.
Now it can. Tum acchhe ho, tum śarmīle ho — any of the character adjectives you have, at the familiar level.

Grammar Lens: matching the level all the way through

A sentence has to keep one level from end to end:

level	copula	command
तुम	हो	बोलो
आप	हैं	बोलिए

Mixing them — āp ho, or tum boliye — is the error a listener notices at once, in the way an English speaker notices you was.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the four copula forms with their subjects
- "तुम हो", and then the same meaning at the āp level
- a sentence describing a friend, keeping the tum level throughout
- why āp ho sounds wrong

Before you move on

Which subject takes हो? (Tum, and only tum.) What goes wrong in tum boliye? (The pronoun is at one level and the verb at another.)

93.4 मत — the word Hindi keeps for saying "don't"

Say bolo and boliye. Now say the opposite of each — and notice that the negative you already know is not the one Hindi uses here.

You'll want to know: मत

मत (mat) — "don't," and it goes in front of the verb:

> मत बोलिए — mat boliye — please don't speak. मत बोलो — mat bolo — don't speak.

Hindi has a negative for statements, which you already have, and a separate one reserved for commands. Using the statement negative to tell somebody not to do something is the mistake an English speaker makes, because English uses not for both.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मत (mat) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from mā, "don't (forbidding)" (CDIAL 9981). CDIAL notes that mā went with commands and wishes, which is the job mat still does.

Grammar Lens: the sign you will actually meet it on

A negative command is what a public notice is. This is the shape:

notice	meaning
यहाँ मत बैठिए	please do not sit here

Three pieces, and you have all three: yahā̃ here, mat don't, baiṭhiye the respectful command from baiṭhnā, built with the ending from the last lesson.

Notice the politeness level. A public sign addresses a stranger, so it uses the आप form — which is why a reading paper's notices are full of -iye and why that ending was worth taking apart.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मत बोलो" and "मत बोलिए", and name who each is for
- "यहाँ मत बैठिए", and take it apart into its three pieces
- where mat stands relative to the verb (in front)
- why a public sign uses the -iye form

Before you move on

Which negative does Hindi keep for commands? (मत.) Where does it stand? (In front of the verb.) Why do public notices use the respectful ending? (A sign addresses a stranger.)

93.5 tīn star, ek kriyā — three levels running through everything

Say the command for "speak" at both levels you can now use, and name who each one is for.

Grammar Lens: the same choice, made four times

The level is not a fact about the verb. It is a fact about who you are talking to, and every part of the sentence agrees to it:

level	possessive	copula
तू	तेरा	है
तुम	तुम्हारा	हो
आप	आपका	हैं

level	command	negative command
तू	बोल	मत बोल
तुम	बोलो	मत बोलो
आप	बोलिए	मत बोलिए

Read each row straight across. Choosing a person picks the whole row, and every cell in it follows. That is the saving: one decision, not four. The तू row is there for recognition. A learner should read it and not produce it — it is intimate between close friends and insulting to anyone else, and the risk of getting it wrong is much larger than the benefit of using it.

Grammar Lens: how each command is built level	from bolnā	ending

तू	बोल	the bare stem
तुम	बोलो	-o
आप	बोलिए	-iye

Three endings, one stem. And as the table above showed, मत is the same word at every level — the negative does not change with politeness, only the verb does.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the tum row straight across — possessive, copula, command
- the āp row the same way
- suno and suniye, built from sunnā with the two endings
- the negative of each command you have made

Before you move on

What does choosing a level of you decide? (A whole row — possessive, copula and command together.) Which row should a learner read but not use? (तू.) Does the negative change with the level? (No — mat is the same at all three.)

93.6 यहाँ मत बैठिए — a notice is the whole chapter in three words

Say the negative command word and the respectful ending. A public sign is made of nothing else.

Grammar Lens: why a notice is always at the aap level

A sign does not know who is reading it, so it addresses a stranger — and a stranger takes आप. That single fact explains the shape of almost every notice a reading paper prints:

on the sign	at the tum level it would be
यहाँ मत बैठिए	यहाँ मत बैठो

The second is what a friend says to you. The first is what a wall says to everybody, which is why -iye is worth more to a reader than -o.

Read this

Read it: the three notices aloud
Every word has been taught:

यहाँ मत बैठिए। यहाँ मत बोलिए। कृपया सुनिए।

Three notices, and the pattern is identical in all three: the respectful ending, with mat in front when the notice forbids and nothing in front when it asks.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "यहाँ मत बैठिए", and translate it
- the same notice as a friend would say it to you
- a notice telling people not to speak
- why a sign uses āp rather than tum
- "तुम हो", and say which of the two notices above matches that level

Before you move on

Why is a public notice at the āp level? (It addresses a stranger.) What turns an asking notice into a forbidding one? (Mat, in front of the verb.)

Chapter 94

The Pronouns, And The Article Hindi Does Not Have

Modes: voice (6) eyes (2) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can use the whole subject-pronoun set including we and they, choose the right oblique pronoun for the person I am addressing, and stop reaching for a word to translate the.
> Read the station sentence a mock paper prints, notice that no word for the appears in it, and ask the liking question at both levels of address.

94.1 हम — the word that was already inside hamārā

Say hamārā. You learned it as "our" and were told what it was built on. Say that word on its own — you have been carrying it for a chapter without being given it.

You'll want to know: हम

हम (ham) — "we."

The possessive chapter said hamārā was built on हम, and there the matter rested. Here is the word itself.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हम (ham) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from asmad, "we, us (the base of the plural forms)" (CDIAL 986).

Grammar Lens: where Hindi says "we" and English says "I"

हम does a second job that has no English equivalent. In much ordinary speech it stands in for मैं, "I," when the speaker is being modest or speaking as part of a household:

said	usually means
ham jāte haiṅ	we go — or, often, I go
hamārā ghar	our house — or my house

This is the same instinct that made hamārā parivār the natural way to say "my family." A Hindi speaker places themselves inside a group by default where an English speaker steps out of it.
A listening paper will play you ham where you expect maiṅ, and nothing marks the difference but context.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "हम" — ham, we
- the possessive built on it (hamārā)
- ham and maiṅ one after the other
- why a speaker might choose ham when talking about themselves

Before you move on

What possessive is built on हम? (Hamārā.) What else can ham mean besides "we"? (I, said modestly or as part of a household.)

94.2 वे — they, and the respect that looks like a plural

Say वह and हम. You can point at one person and you can include yourself in a group. Say "they," and notice the gap.

You'll want to know: वे

वे (ve) — "they."

It is the plural of वह, and the relationship is visible: the same word with a different vowel.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वे (ve) is the plural partner of वह, "that". CDIAL lists vah under Sanskrit asau, "that" (CDIAL 972), but does not list ve itself.

Grammar Lens: the plural that is also a courtesy

The same habit you met with आप appears here. Hindi shows respect by using a plural form for one person:

form	about
वह	one person, familiar or neutral
वे	several people — or one person spoken of with respect

So ve ā rahe haiṅ can be "they are coming" or "he is coming," said of someone senior. This is the third time the pattern has appeared: āp for a respected listener, the -iye command for a respected listener, and now ve for a respected third person.

In everyday speech many speakers say वो for both vah and ve. Recognise it; in writing, use the forms above.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "वे" — ve, they
- वह and वे together, and hear that only the vowel moves
- the two things ve can mean
- the other place Hindi uses a plural to show respect (āp)

Before you move on

What is वे the plural of? (वह.) What else can it mean about one person? (Respect.) What do many speakers say for both in conversation? (Vo.)

94.3 हमें / तुम्हें — what mujhe was all along

Say mujhe … pasand hai. You learned it as a frame for saying what you like. Say the first word on its own and ask what it actually is.

You'll want to know: हमें and तुम्हें

हमें (hamẽ) — "to us." तुम्हें (tumhẽ) — "to you," at the tum level.

Mujhe is the same kind of word: मैं in its oblique form, meaning to me. The liking frame was never a lump — it was a pronoun in a case, and now the rest of the set arrives with it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हमें / तुम्हें (hamẽ / tumhẽ) is ham, "we", and tum, "you", with an ending -ẽ, "to". CDIAL lists ham under the Sanskrit plural base asmad- (CDIAL 986) and tum under yuṣmad- (CDIAL 10511).

Grammar Lens: the same bend, a third time

subject	oblique	meaning
मैं	mujhe	to me
हम	हमें	to us
तुम	तुम्हें	to you

The possessive chapter bent -आ to -ए in front of a postposition. The imperative chapter bent the verb to match the listener. Here the pronoun itself bends, and the ending it takes is the nasal -ँ.
That is three separate systems doing the same thing, which is the reason Hindi rewards a learner who looks for patterns rather than lists: the language keeps asking the same question — what stands after this word? — and answering it the same way.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "हमें" and "तुम्हें"
- mujhe … pasand hai, and then the same frame about us
- what mujhe actually is, now that you can see the set
- the three subjects and their oblique forms in a run

Before you move on

What is mujhe the oblique of? (मैं.) What ending do these oblique pronouns take? (The nasal -ें.) How would you say "we like it"? (Hamẽ … pasand hai.)

94.4 āpko / use — the paradigm closes

Say hamẽ and tumhẽ. Two corners of the set are filled. Say the respectful one and the third-person one, and notice you cannot yet.

You'll want to know: āpko and use

आपको (āpko) — "to you," respectfully. use — "to him, to her."

These two are built differently from the last pair. Instead of the nasal ending they take a postposition, ko, meaning to:

आप + को → आपको

Use is the worn-down version of the same thing: us + ko, squeezed together by centuries of use, exactly as maiṅ + ko became mujhe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आपको / उसे (āpko / use) is āp, "you", with ko, "to", and us, "him, her", with the ending -e. āp comes from Sanskrit ātman, "self" (CDIAL 1135); CDIAL lists us under asau, "that" (CDIAL 972).

Grammar Lens: the whole set, at last

subject	oblique
मैं	mujhe
हम	हमें
तुम	तुम्हें
आप	आपको
वह	use

Five forms, and only the first and the last look irregular — because they are the two that wore down. The middle three still show their parts.
वे has one too — unhẽ — built the same way, which the review lesson adds.
Note that the level you learned to choose in the possessive and imperative chapters is here too: tumhẽ to a friend, āpko to a stranger. The same decision, for the fourth time.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "आपको", and name the two pieces it is built from
- use, and say which subject it belongs to
- all five obliques in a run
- which one you would use asking a stranger what they like

Before you move on

What postposition is inside āpko? (ko, to.) Which two of the five wore down until their parts stopped showing? (Mujhe and use.)

94.5 binā ārṭikal — the word Hindi does not have

Say वह, "that." Now try to say "the book" in Hindi, and go on when you find you have no word for the.

You'll want to know: there is no article

Hindi has no article. No word for the, and no word for a.

This is the largest single structural difference between Hindi and English, and it is worth being told once rather than discovered slowly:

> किताब — kitāb — can mean a book or the book.

The bare noun covers both. Nothing is missing from the sentence; the slot the English article fills does not exist.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

binā comes from Sanskrit vinā, "without" (CDIAL 11772); ārṭikal is English article.

Grammar Lens: what does the work instead

Hindi has three ways to be more specific when it needs to be, and you have all three already:

want to say	Hindi reaches for	example
a book, one book	एक	ek kitāb
that book, the one there	वह	vah kitāb
plain "book"	nothing at all	kitāb

एक is the numeral one, pressed into service when indefiniteness matters — which is why ek chāy dījiye is "a tea, please" rather than a fixed café formula. It was a number the whole time.

वह points, and pointing is how Hindi says the when the really means that particular one.

Most of the time neither is needed, and this is the habit to build: do not reach for a word to translate the. There isn't one, and putting vah in every place English puts the sounds as odd as saying that book in English every time you mean the book.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kitāb, and give both English meanings it covers
- ek kitāb, and say what ek is doing

- vah kitāb, and say when you would choose it
- what you should do when you want to say "the" (nothing)
- āpko ek kitāb pasand hai, and notice there is still no article in it

Before you move on

How many articles does Hindi have? (None.) What was ek before it marked indefiniteness? (The numeral one.) What is the commonest correct translation of English the? (Nothing at all.)

94.6 sarvanām kī tālikā — subject and oblique, side by side

Name the five subject pronouns and as many obliques as you can, before reading the table.

Grammar Lens: the table, complete

subject	oblique
मैं	mujhe
हम	हमें
तुम	तुम्हें
आप	आपको
वह	use
वे	unhẽ

Two of the obliques visibly carry ko, to: āpko plainly (आप + को → आपको), use after wear. Three take the nasal ending. The set is small and none of it is arbitrary once you know that a postposition is hiding in each one.

Grammar Lens: the fourth appearance of one decision system	at the tum level	at the āp level

possessive	तुम्हारा	आपका
copula	हो	हैं
command	बोलो	बोलिए
oblique pronoun	तुम्हें	आपको

Four systems, one decision. Choosing how to address someone settles all four at once, which is why the grid has been worth building across three chapters rather than learning four unrelated lists.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the six subject pronouns
- the obliques that take ko, and the ones that take the nasal
- the tum row across all four systems
- how many articles Hindi has, and what does the work instead

Before you move on

Which postposition shows plainly in āpko? (ko, to.) How many systems does the level decision now settle? (Four.) What translates English the? (Nothing.)

94.7 हम स्टेशन पर मिलेंगे — the sentence the paper actually prints

Say हम. Until this chapter the track could not say it, and a reading item that opens with it was unreadable from the first word.

Read this

Read it: the lines below aloud
Every word has been taught:

हम स्टेशन पर मिलेंगे। वे भी आ रहे हैं।

Two sentences. Note what is not in the first one: no word for the in front of ṣteśan, because there is none to put there. An English speaker reads "we will meet at the station" and supplies the article themselves.

Grammar Lens: choosing between the obliques in a real question

asking	form
a friend	तुम्हें क्या पसंद है?
a stranger	आपको क्या पसंद है?

The frame is the one the track has had since its liking chapter. What is new is that the pronoun in it can now change — it was never a fixed phrase, and the first word was always a pronoun in a case.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "हम स्टेशन पर मिलेंगे"
- what an English reader adds that the Hindi does not contain
- the liking question to a friend, then to a stranger
- one sentence about what you and somebody else will do, using ham

Before you move on

What word for the appears before ṣteśan? (None — Hindi has no article.) Which oblique would you use asking a stranger? (Āpko.)

94.8 (पेट, औरत, सीढ़ी, चादर) — five pockets nobody returned to

Two words from the chapter that furnished a house: the one you climb, and the one you spread on a bed.

You'll want to know: why these five

Most of this book circles back on itself, so a word meets you five times over and you end up owning it. Five things escaped that. दोपहर का खाना and रात का खाना are the clearest — say both now.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पेट goes back to Prakrit पेट्ट, and there the clean line ends. The mainstream account takes it as Dravidian; Turner declines that and offers no Sanskrit source either. So: unsettled, Dravidian leading — and the retroflex ट is itself the feature most credited to that contact.

Grammar Lens: औरत — three things to hold

what you need	the answer
its gender	feminine, though the ending does not say so its source	Arabic عورة (ᶜawra), root ᶜ-w-r, senses near a gap
the sense woman	from Persian, handed on around 1420
which to say	औरत spoken, महिला public, स्त्री literary

The middle rows belong together: the harsh root sense is the earlier life of a word Persian repurposed, not a claim Arabic makes about women. And मेरी औरत means my wife, in a register most avoid.

You'll want to know: सीढ़ी and चादर

सीढ़ी (sīṛhī) is a staircase and also a ladder — you go up both in steps. चादर (chādar) is a sheet, from Persian chādar, a broad piece of cloth; English took it as chuddar.

You'll want to know: the नाम field, twice over

The A1 form ladder gave you one field under two conditions, and the difference is the point.

condition	beside the line	what it proves supported	the bank A मीरा · B अरुण, visible	you read the label and copy its value delayed	nothing; the bank is covered	the spelling came from memory

An exam form gives you the second.

Your turn

Cover: everything above

- Say it: the two named meals, and what each is built from
- Say it: the word for a staircase, and its second sense
- Say it: the word for a sheet
- Say it: which of औरत, महिला, स्त्री goes on a public sign
- Say it: the gender of औरत, and whether its ending told you
- Say it: where the trail behind पेट stops
- Write it: नामः अरुण, nothing to copy

Before you move on

Which language gave औरत the sense woman, the one it came from or the one it travelled through? (Persian.) Which meal is रात का खाना?

Chapter 95

The Past, And Where You Were

Modes: voice (6) eyes (2) Hands-free start: the first 5 of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say where I was and what I used to do, put the sentence in the negative, and use the postposition that pins a person to a place.
> Ask where somebody was and answer for yourself, using the exact sentence the first practice paper prints as reading item 14 and moving it one step into the past.

95.1 पर — the word that follows the place instead of leading it

You can name घर and स्टेशन. Try to say at home — and notice that you have the place and no way to stand in it.

You'll want to know: पर

पर (par) — "at," pinning you to one point.
घर पर — at home. स्टेशन पर — at the station.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

English sets at in front of the place. Hindi sets पर behind it:

English	Hindi
at home	घर पर
at the station	स्टेशन पर

That ordering is why these words are called postpositions. Every one of them trails its noun, so once you have the noun you know exactly where the small word goes.
What पर wants is a point rather than an interior — a house you are at, a platform you are standing on. A place you are inside reaches for a different small word, which arrives later.
पर is usually traced to Sanskrit upari, "above, upon".

Grammar Lens: where the pieces land

sentence	meaning
मैं घर पर हूँ।	I am at home.
वह स्टेशन पर है।	He is at the station.

Person, then place, then the small word, then the verb. The verb goes last and stays last, which is the shape every Hindi sentence you have met so far has had.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "घर पर" — at home
- "मैं घर पर हूँ"
- "वह स्टेशन पर है"
- whether पर goes before or after the place it marks

Before you move on

Where does पर sit, before the place or after it? (After.) Say at the station. (स्टेशन पर.)

95.2 था — one word swapped, and the sentence is behind you

Say I am at home in Hindi. Now try to say where you were an hour ago, and watch the sentence stop at its last word.

You'll want to know: था

था (thā) — "was," spoken by or about a male subject.

Every other word in the sentence stays where it is. Take out the present-tense word, put था in its place, and you have moved:

now	earlier
मैं घर पर हूँ।	मैं घर पर था।
वह स्टेशन पर है।	वह स्टेशन पर था।

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

था is worn down from Sanskrit स्थित (sthita), "standing, situated." To have been somewhere was, once, to have been standing there.
English arrives at the same picture along a different road. Station comes from Latin stāre, to stand — and Latin stāre and Sanskrit sthā- are the same inherited word, separated long before either language was written down. The Hindi for was and the English for station are distant relatives.

Grammar Lens: two present words, one past word

subject	now	earlier
मैं	हूँ	था
वह	है	था

In the present, the verb changes to match who you are talking about. In the past it stops caring about that. One word covers both rows — which is a small mercy, and a short-lived one, because the next lesson shows what the past listens to instead.

Your turn

- Look: at था and name the character carrying its first sound (थ), the one you met in हाथ
- Say it: "था" — thā, was
- Say it: "मैं घर पर था"
- Say it: "वह स्टेशन पर था"

- Say it: which word in मैं घर पर हूँ you replace, and which words you leave alone

Before you move on

How many words change when you move मैं घर पर हूँ into the past? (One.) What did the Sanskrit ancestor of था mean? (Standing, situated.)

95.3 थी — the ending you have bent a dozen times, arriving somewhere new था ends in -आ. Before reading on: what has every other word ending in -आ done when a woman was the subject?

You'll want to know: थी

थी (thī) — "was," spoken by or about a female subject.

speaker	earlier
a man	मैं घर पर था।
a woman	मैं घर पर थी।

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

This is not a new pattern. It is the oldest one you have:

masculine	feminine
काला	काली
बोलता	बोलती
था	थी

A word ending in -आ swaps that ending for -ई. You learned it on adjectives, met it again on the habitual verb, and here it is a third time. The past copula behaves like an adjective because, historically, it once was one — a participle meaning situated, agreeing with whoever was situated.

था comes from Sanskrit sthita, "standing, settled" (CDIAL 13768).

Grammar Lens: what each tense listens to tense	listens to the person	listens to gender present	yes (हूँ, है, हैं)	no

past	no	yes (था, थी)

The two tenses divide the work differently, and neither one asks you to track both at once. A woman says थी whether she is talking about herself or about another woman.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "थी" — thī, was
- "मैं घर पर थी"
- "वह स्टेशन पर थी"
- the two endings that mark the pair, and one adjective that shows them

Before you move on

Which ending replaces -आ for a female subject? (-ई.) Does the present-tense verb bend for gender the way था does? (No — that is what is new here.)

95.4 थे — the third ending, and the politeness you have already paid for

You have था and थी for one person. Name the pronoun for we, and guess which ending a group will want.

You'll want to know: थे

थे (the) — "were."

subject	earlier
हम	हम घर पर थे।
वे	वे स्टेशन पर थे।
आप	आप कहाँ थे?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

-ए is the plural ending on the same family of words as -आ and -ई, so थे sits beside था and थी without being a new thing to learn.
The row worth pausing on is the last one. आप takes थे even when you are speaking to exactly one person, for the same reason it takes हैं for one person: the polite level in Hindi is built out of plural forms.
Asking a single guest आप कहाँ थे? is grammatically a question to a crowd, and that is the courtesy.
For a group of women, थे adds a nasal and becomes थीं — worth recognising on a page now, and not worth drilling yet.
था comes from Sanskrit sthita, "standing, settled" (CDIAL 13768).

Grammar Lens: the level decision, once more system	at the तुम level	at the आप level

copula now	हो	हैं
command	बोलो	बोलिए
copula earlier	थे	थे

The past does not split the two levels at all: तुम and आप both take थे. One fewer decision, in the one place you might have expected another.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "थे" — the, were
- "हम घर पर थे"
- "वे स्टेशन पर थे"
- the question where were you? to one person you address as आप

Before you move on

Which ending does आप take in the past, for one person? (थे.) Why does a single person get a plural word? (The polite level is built out of plurals.)

95.5 नहीं था — saying where you were not

Where does नहीं stand in a present-tense sentence? Put it there in a past-tense one and check yourself against what follows.

You'll want to know: नहीं था

नहीं था (nahīṃ thā) — "was not."

नहीं keeps the seat it has always had: directly in front of the verb, at the end of the sentence.

present	past
मैं घर पर नहीं हूँ।	मैं घर पर नहीं था।
वह स्टेशन पर नहीं है।	वह स्टेशन पर नहीं थी।

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

English rebuilds the sentence to negate it: I am at home becomes I am not at home, and I was becomes I was not — but I go has to become I do not go, with a helper verb appearing out of nowhere.

Hindi asks for none of that. One word, one seat, every tense. Learning the past costs you nothing extra here, because there was nothing extra to learn.

नहीं comes from Sanskrit nahi, "surely not" (CDIAL 7035), and था from sthita, "standing" (CDIAL 13768).

Grammar Lens: the seat in front of the verb sentence	who is speaking

मैं घर पर नहीं था।	a man
मैं घर पर नहीं थी।	a woman
हम घर पर नहीं थे।	a group

नहीं never changes shape. Everything that bends in these three lines bends after it, not because of it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मैं घर पर नहीं था"
- the same sentence as a woman would say it
- "हम स्टेशन पर नहीं थे"
- which word in the sentence नहीं stands in front of

Before you move on

Does नहीं take a different shape in the past? (No.) Where does it stand? (Immediately before the verb, which is at the end.)

95.6 बोलता था — what you used to do

Say I speak Hindi. Then look at the last word of it and ask what you would put there instead.

You'll want to know: बोलता था

बोलता था (boltā thā) — "used to speak."

now	earlier
मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ।	मैं हिंदी बोलता था।

One word replaced, and the habit is one you no longer have.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Two pieces, two jobs:

piece	its job
बोलता	this happens repeatedly
हूँ / था	and it happens now / it happened then

-ता carries the habit. The word after it carries the time. They were never welded together, which is why moving the sentence into the past costs a single swap rather than a new conjugation.

English needs a whole phrase for this — used to — and Hindi needs one letter's worth of change.
था comes from Sanskrit sthita, "standing" (CDIAL 13768).

Grammar Lens: both halves bend

speaker	earlier
a man	मैं हिंदी बोलता था।
a woman	मैं हिंदी बोलती थी।

Both words end in -आ for a man and both swap to -ई for a woman. They move together, so you are still tracking one decision rather than two.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मैं हिंदी बोलता था"
- the same sentence as a woman would say it
- which piece carries the habit and which carries the time
- I did not use to speak Hindi, putting नहीं in its usual seat

Before you move on

How many words change between बोलता हूँ and बोलता था? (One.)
What does the -ता ending tell you, in either tense? (That the action is a habit rather than a single event.)

95.7 atīt kī tālikā — the past, on one page

Name all three past endings and say who each one belongs to, before you look at the table.

Grammar Lens: the three endings

subject	earlier
मैं, वह — a man	था
मैं, वह — a woman	थी
हम, वे, आप, तुम	थे

Three words, and their endings are -आ, -ई and -ए — the same three you have been bending adjectives with since the colours.

Grammar Lens: the swap, in every sentence you own

now	earlier
मैं घर पर हूँ।	मैं घर पर था।
वह स्टेशन पर है।	वह स्टेशन पर था।
मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ।	मैं हिंदी बोलता था।

One word out, one word in. The place phrase, the postposition पर and the word order all sit still while the tense moves around them.

Grammar Lens: with नहीं

sentence	meaning
हम घर पर नहीं थे।	We were not at home.
वे स्टेशन पर नहीं थे।	They were not at the station.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three past endings in order
- "मैं घर पर था" and then the same thing as a woman
- "आप कहाँ थे?"
- "मैं हिंदी बोलता था"
- any one of those four with नहीं added in the right seat

Before you move on

Which past word does आप take? (थे.) Which side of the place does पर go? (After it.) Which piece of बोलता था carries the habit? (-ता.)

95.8 आप कहाँ थे? — the paper's own sentence, one step into the past

Read it: the sentence and say what it means before going on

मैं घर पर हूँ।

Grammar Lens: the sentence a paper prints

That line is reading item 14 of the first practice paper, word for word. Until this chapter it had one unreadable piece in it, and the piece was पर.

Now take one step:

the paper's line	one step back
मैं घर पर हूँ।	मैं घर पर था।

Everything that made the first line readable makes the second line readable too.

The exchange

— आप कहाँ थे? — मैं घर पर था।

Three things are doing their job at once here. कहाँ asks for a place. पर attaches the answer to one. थे is the past word आप takes, and था is the one the answer needs, because the answer is about one man speaking for himself.

A woman answering the same question says मैं घर पर थी, and the question itself does not change: the asker does not know yet who will answer.

How to answer — three ways

Answer the question three ways, out loud:

- you were at home
- you were at the station

- you were not at home

Then ask it of somebody you address as आप, and listen for which of था, थी or थे comes back.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "आप कहाँ थे?"
- "मैं घर पर था"
- "मैं स्टेशन पर नहीं था"
- the answer a woman would give to the same question

Before you move on

Which past word does the question to आप use? (थे.) Which one does a man use to answer about himself? (था.) Which word in the answer puts him at a place? (पर.)

Chapter 96

The Future, And The Two Letters It Needed

Modes: voice (7) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 6 of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I will do, what somebody else will do, and arrange to meet at a named hour.
> Read reading item 8 of the first practice paper word for word – main panch baje aunga – and answer the same question as a conversation at the aap level.

96.1 करूँगा — the third tense, and the one with no helper word

You can say what you do and what you did. Say the stem of to do, and hold it — the next tense attaches to it rather than standing beside it.

You'll want to know: करूँगा

करूँगा (karūṅgā) — "I will do," said by a man. करूँगी (karūṅgī) — the same, said by a woman.

The stem is कर-. Everything after it is the tense.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Three pieces, and each one has a job:

piece	what it carries
कर-	the action
-ऊँ-	who is acting — I
-गा / -गी	the future itself, agreeing with the speaker

English needs a second word for this: I will do. Hindi has none. The tense is welded onto the verb, the way the person is welded into hūṁ and hai.

You have met the -गा family once before, in the farewell milenge, where the plural -एंगे was named as the future ending. That was one cell of a grid. This chapter is the grid.

कर- is from Sanskrit karoti, "does" (CDIAL 2814); the -गा is usually traced to gata, "gone".

Grammar Lens: the piece that comes from the old subjunctive

-गा is not a random syllable. It comes from Sanskrit गत (gata), "gone" — the participle of to go. A future in Hindi is built out of a word meaning gone, which is the same instinct behind English I am going to do it.

speaker	form
a man	करूँगा
a woman	करूँगी

Only the last letter moves, and it moves the way every -आ / -ई pair in this language moves.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "करूँगा" — karūṅgā, I will do
- the same as a woman would say it
- the three pieces, and what each one carries
- how many words English needs for this, and how many Hindi needs

Before you move on

Which piece carries the future? (-गा, agreeing as -गी.) What did its Sanskrit ancestor mean? (Gone.) How many separate words does Hindi use to say will? (None — it is an ending.)

96.2 आऊँगा — the same ending, and the letter that was waiting for it

Say I will do. Now take the stem of to come and try to put the same ending on it — and listen for what happens when two vowels meet.

You'll want to know: आऊँगा

आऊँगा (āūṅgā) — "I will come," said by a man. आऊँगी (āūṅgī) — the same, said by a woman.

Nothing new has been added. The stem आ- has taken the ending you learned one lesson ago.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

stem	first person, future
कर-	करूँगा
आ-	आऊँगा

The ending is identical. What changes is how it has to be written, and that is worth a moment.

कर- ends in a consonant, so the long ū rides underneath it as the small mark you have used for a long time. आ- ends in a vowel, so there is nothing to ride on — and the ū has to be written as a full letter of its own.

The stem आ- is listed by CDIAL under Sanskrit āpayati, "causes to reach" (CDIAL 1200).

Grammar Lens: the letter arrives where it was promised

Find: ऊ inside the word

आ ऊँ गा

That is the letter you were told was coming — the one with the extra loop on the right — and this is the word it was waiting for. A vowel that opens a syllable needs the full letter, and the first-person future of every vowel-stem verb puts one there.
The same thing happens to to go:

verb	I will
आना	आऊँगा
जाना	जाऊँगा

Both of these appear on a practice paper, in the first scored part.

Your turn

- Say it: "आऊँगा" — āūṅgā, I will come
- Say it: the same as a woman would say it
- Look: at आऊँगा and put your finger on the letter ऊ
- Say it: why this word needs the full letter where karūṅgā needs only a mark

Before you move on

What decides whether the long ū is a mark or a full letter? (Whether the stem ends in a consonant or a vowel.) Say I will go. (Jāūṅgā — जाऊँगा.)

96.3 आएगा — the ending that tells you who, not when

You can say I will come. Think of somebody else and try to say it about them — and notice which part of the word has to move.

You'll want to know: आएगा

आएगा (āegā) — "he will come." आएगी (āegī) — "she will come."
वह आएगा। — He will come. वह आएगी। — She will come.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Set the two first persons beside the third:

who	ending
मैं	-ऊँगा
वह	-एगा

The -गा has not moved. It is the piece in front of it that changed, from -ऊँ- to -ए-, and that piece is the one carrying the person.
So the future has the same division of labour the present had: one slot for who, one slot for when. Learning the tense is learning that the two slots are separate.
The -गा is usually traced to Sanskrit gata, "gone".

Grammar Lens: the form a paper prints

This is the commonest future in reading material, because most sentences on a page are about somebody other than the reader:

sentence	meaning
वह आएगा।	He will come.
वह जाएगी।	She will go.

A bus, a train or a shop takes the same ending as a person, and the gender of the noun decides which one. A practice paper prints the bus will come with -एगी, because बस is feminine.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "वह आएगा" — he will come
- "वह आएगी" — she will come
- which slot changed between āūṅgā and āegā, and which stayed
- "वह जाएगी"

Before you move on

Which piece of the future word says who? (The one before -गा.)
Which piece says when? (-गा itself.) What ending does a feminine noun take? (-एगी.)

96.4 आएँगे — the ending you have been saying since the first goodbye

Say the farewell that means see you again. The last two syllables of it are about to become a rule.

You'll want to know: आएँगे

आएँगे (āeṅge) — "we will come," "they will come," and "you will come" to somebody you address as आप.

हम आएँगे। — We will come. आप कब आएँगे? — When will you come?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

You met this ending in your fourth chapter, inside मिलेंगे — we will meet. It was named there as the plural future, and it was true, but it was one word. Now it is a slot you can fill:

stem	plural future
मिल-	मिलेंगे
आ-	आएँगे
कर-	करेंगे

The farewell was never a lump. It was this ending, on a verb meaning to meet.

The -गे is usually traced to Sanskrit gata, "gone".

Grammar Lens: आप takes the plural, again

subject	future
हम	आएँगे
वे	आएँगे
आप	आएँगे

आप takes the plural ending even for one person, for the reason it has taken a plural everywhere else: the polite level in this language is built out of plural forms. That is now the fifth system in which one decision about how you address somebody settles the whole row.

For a group of women, the ending nasalises differently and becomes आएँगी — worth recognising, because a practice paper asks आप कब आएँगी? of a woman.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "हम आएँगे" — we will come
- "आप कब आएँगे?" — when will you come?
- the farewell, and then name the ending inside it
- "हम करेंगे"

Before you move on

Which ending does आप take in the future? (The plural one.) Which familiar farewell is built from it? (Milenge.) What was that farewell really made of? (A stem plus this ending.)

96.5 आओगे — the तुम row, and a vowel that has shown up before

Say the command you would give a friend using तुम. Hold on to the vowel at its end — the future is about to reuse it.

You'll want to know: आओगे

आओगे (āoge) — "you will come," to somebody you address as तुम. करोगे (karoge) — "you will do," at the same level.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The तुम level has a vowel of its own, and you have already used it:

where	form
the command	बोलो
the future	आओगे

Both are -ओ. That is not two facts to learn — it is one vowel that belongs to तुम wherever it appears, and you have had it since the commands chapter.
The -गे is usually traced to Sanskrit gata, "gone".

Grammar Lens: where the full letter shows up again

The same writing question as the first person, and the same answer:

stem	you will
कर-	करोगे
आ-	आओगे

करोगे carries the o as a mark on the consonant. आओगे cannot, because आ- is a vowel, so the o is written as the full letter ओ — the one built on आ with an arc above it.
Two vowel-stem words in one chapter, two full letters, and the same rule producing both.

Your turn

- Say it: "तुम आओगे" — you will come
- Say it: "तुम करोगे"
- Look: at आओगे and put your finger on the letter ओ
- Say it: the same question at the आप level instead

Before you move on

Which vowel belongs to the तुम level? (-ओ.) Where else have you used it? (On the command.) Why does āoge need the full letter and karoge does not? (The stem ends in a vowel, so nothing can carry the mark.)

96.6 पाँच बजे — reading the hour, and arranging to meet at it

You can say what the clock is doing — the verb that strikes.
Now try to say at five, and notice that telling the time and fixing a time are not the same job.

You'll want to know: पाँच बजे

पाँच बजे (pā̃c baje) — "at five o'clock."
मैं पाँच बजे आऊँगा। — I will come at five.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बजे comes from the verb you already have — the one meaning to strike, to toll, because clocks and towns once marked the hour by striking a bell.
What is new is the shape of it. You learned it as something the clock is doing right now. This form is not doing anything: it sits beside a number and turns it into a time to meet at.

what it does	the form
tells you the hour	the striking form you know
fixes a time to act	बजे

There is no separate word for at. The number plus बजे is the whole of it.
The verb comes from Sanskrit vādyate, "is made to sound" (CDIAL 11513).

Grammar Lens: where it stands in the sentence

sentence	meaning
मैं पाँच बजे आऊँगा।	I will come at five.
वह चार बजे आएगी।	She will come at four.

The time phrase goes after the person and before the verb, in the same seat the place phrase took. Hindi keeps the verb at the end and fills the middle with whatever the sentence needs.
Both practice papers ask for exactly this pairing — a number, बजे, and a future verb — in the first scored part.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "पाँच बजे" — at five

- "मैं पाँच बजे आऊँगा"
- the same sentence as a woman would say it
- which word Hindi uses for at, and hear that there is none

Before you move on

Which verb is बजे from? (The one meaning to strike.) How does Hindi say at in front of a clock time? (It does not — the number plus बजे carries it.) Where does the time phrase stand? (After the person, before the verb.)

96.7 bhaviṣya kī tālikā — the future, on one page

Name the ending for I and the ending for he, and say which piece of each one is the tense, before you look at the table.

Grammar Lens: the grid

subject	with आ-
मैं	आऊँगा / आऊँगी
तुम	आओगे
वह	आएगा / आएगी
हम, वे, आप	आएँगे / आएँगी

Four rows, one verb, and -गा in every single cell. What moves is the vowel in front of it, and that vowel is the person.

Grammar Lens: two slots, three tenses

tense	how it is built
now	stem + -ता + हूँ / है
earlier	stem + -ता + था
later	stem + person vowel + -गा

The first two share a shape: the habit is in -ता and the time is in the word after it. The future is the odd one out — it has no separate word at all, and packs the person and the tense into one ending.

Grammar Lens: where the full letters appear stem ends in	how the vowel is written a consonant (कर-)	a mark on the letter

a vowel (आ-, जा-)	a full letter — ऊ or ओ

That is the whole reason two new letters were needed before this chapter could be written.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all four rows of the grid, top to bottom
- the same grid with कर- instead of आ-
- "मैं पाँच बजे आऊँगा"
- which two forms need a full letter, and why

Before you move on

Which piece is in every cell of the grid? (-गा.) Which tense uses no separate word for time? (The future.) How does Hindi say at five? (Pãc baje — no word for at.)

96.8 मैं पाँच बजे आऊँगा — the item the paper prints

Read it: the sentence out loud before going on

मैं पाँच बजे आऊँगा।

Grammar Lens: four words, four things you were taught

That line is reading item 8 of the first practice paper, word for word. Until this chapter two of its four words were unreadable.

word	what it does
मैं	who
पाँच बजे	when
आऊँगा	the verb, carrying the tense

The answer the paper wants is I will come at five, and the two wrong answers offered are past and present. The only thing telling them apart is the ending on the last word.

The exchange

The second paper asks the same thing as a conversation:

— आप कब आएँगे? — चार बजे।

आएँगे because the question is to somebody addressed as आप. The answer needs no verb at all: a number and बजे is a complete reply, the way at four is in English.

How to answer

Say each of these out loud:

- you will come at five
- you will go by train, not by bus
- she will come in ten minutes

The second and third are items 13 and 11 of the same papers. All three are the same shape: a person, a circumstance, and a verb whose ending does the work.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मैं पाँच बजे आऊँगा"
- the same sentence as a woman would say it
- "आप कब आएँगे?" and answer it with two words
- "वह आएगी"

Before you move on

Which single word in the paper's line tells you it is the future? (आऊँगा — its ending.) How many words does a full answer to when need? (Two — the number and बजे.) Which ending does a question to आप take? (The plural, आएँगे.)

Chapter 97

What Is Going On Right Now

Modes: voice (6) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 5 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I am doing at this moment, ask somebody else what they are doing, and keep that apart from what I do in general.
> Ask what somebody is doing at the aap level and answer for yourself, then say the same thing as a habit rather than as a moment.

97.1 कर रहा हूँ — one word slid into the middle

Say I do — the habit. Now try to say what you are doing at this moment, and notice the habit form does not quite mean it.

You'll want to know: कर रहा हूँ

कर रहा हूँ (kar rahā hũ) — "I am doing," right now, said by a man.

Three words: the bare stem, then रहा, then the copula you have had since your third chapter.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

piece	what it carries
कर	the action, bare
रहा	that it is in progress
हूँ	who, and that it is now

रहा is the past participle of रहना, "to stay, to remain." So the sentence says, almost literally, doing — having stayed — I am. The action is pictured as one you are still inside.
English does the same thing from a different angle: I am doing uses a participle too, and I remain at work is the same metaphor spelled out. रहना comes from a reconstructed rahati*, "remains" (CDIAL 10666).

Grammar Lens: the stem is bare, and that is the point

Look at what happens to the verb in each tense:

what you say	the verb
I do (habit)	करता
I am doing (now)	कर

The habit puts an ending on the stem. The continuous takes the ending off and puts a separate word after it instead. Nothing else in the sentence moves.
That means the pattern works on any verb you know. Take the stem, add रहा, keep the copula: बोल रहा हूँ, जा रहा हूँ, खा रहा हूँ.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "कर रहा हूँ" — I am doing
- "बोल रहा हूँ"
- the three pieces, and what each one carries
- what रहना means on its own

Before you move on

Which word carries in progress? (रहा.) What shape is the verb stem in? (Bare — the habit ending comes off.) What does रहना mean by itself? (To stay, to remain.)

97.2 कर रही हूँ — which of the three words listens

रहा ends in -आ. Before reading on, guess what it does when a woman is speaking, and guess which of the other two words joins in.

You'll want to know: कर रही हूँ

कर रही हूँ (kar rahī hũ) — "I am doing," said by a woman.
One letter has changed, and it is in the middle word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

speaker	the three words
a man	कर रहा हूँ
a woman	कर रही हूँ

The stem stays bare either way. The copula हूँ is about who is speaking rather than about gender, so it does not move. Only रहा bends, and it bends the way every -आ word you have met bends.
That is the tidiest arrangement you have seen yet: one word per job, and only the one that describes the action listens to gender.
रही is a form of रहना, from a reconstructed rahati*, "remains" (CDIAL 10666).

Grammar Lens: the same ending, a fourth time

masculine	feminine
काला	काली
बोलता	बोलती
था	थी
रहा	रही

Four places, one alternation. Every time a Hindi word ends in -आ and describes somebody, -ई is what it becomes for a woman — and by now you should expect it before you are told.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "कर रही हूँ" — I am doing
- both forms one after the other, and hear the one letter
- "बोल रही हूँ"

- which of the three words does not care about gender, and why

Before you move on

Which of the three words bends? (The middle one, रहा / रही.) Why does the copula stay put? (It is about who, not about gender.) What is the fourth pair on the list? (रहा / रही.)

97.3 कर रहा है — two words doing two different jobs

Say I am doing. Now think of somebody else and change only what has to change.

You'll want to know: कर रहा है

वह कर रहा है। — He is doing (it). वह कर रही है। — She is doing (it).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Only the last word moved when the subject changed from I to he:

subject	middle	last
मैं	रहा / रही	हूँ
वह	रहा / रही	है

Two independent dials. The middle word answers what is the subject like and the last word answers which person is it. Turning one does nothing to the other, which is why you can build any combination without a table to memorise.
रहा is a form of रहना, from a reconstructed rahati*, "remains" (CDIAL 10666).

Grammar Lens: it works on things as well as people

sentence	meaning
वह जा रहा है।	He is going.
वह आ रही है।	She is coming.

A noun that is not a person still has a gender, and the middle word follows the noun rather than any person. That is how the weather sentence you learned long ago was put together — the rain is feminine, so the middle word ended in -ई — and the review lesson takes it apart.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "वह कर रहा है"
- the same about a woman
- which word changed when you moved from I to he
- "वह जा रहा है"

Before you move on

Which word answers which person? (The last one.) Which answers what is the subject like? (The middle one.) Do the two ever interfere? (No — they are separate dials.)

97.4 कर रहे हैं — both dials turned to plural

You have two dials: the middle word and the last. Say the pronoun for we, and guess what a group does to each dial.

You'll want to know: कर रहे हैं

हम कर रहे हैं। — We are doing (it). आप क्या कर रहे हैं? — What are you doing?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

This time both words move:

subject	middle	last
मैं	रहा	हूँ
वह	रहा	है
हम, वे, आप	रहे	हैं

रहे is the plural of the same -आ / -ई / -ए set. हैं is the plural copula. Nothing here is new — it is the two dials you already have, both turned one notch.

At the तुम level the last word is हो: तुम क्या कर रहे हो?
रहे is a form of रहना, from a reconstructed rahati*, "remains" (CDIAL 10666).

Grammar Lens: the question a listening paper asks level	the question

आप	आप क्या कर रहे हैं?
तुम	तुम क्या कर रहे हो?

What are you doing? is one of the commonest openings in spoken Hindi, and the whole difference between the two rows is the last word. That is the level decision again, settling one more system.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "हम कर रहे हैं"
- "आप क्या कर रहे हैं?"
- the same question at the tum level
- which two words moved, and which stayed bare

Before you move on

What is the plural of रहा? (रहे.) Which word separates the āp question from the tum one? (The last — हैं against हो.) What shape is the stem in, still? (Bare.)

97.5 do vartamān — the habit and the moment

Say both forms of to do that you now have — the habit and the one in progress — and try to say in English what separates them.

You'll want to know: the pair

Hindi	English
मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ।	I speak Hindi.
मैं हिंदी बोल रहा हूँ।	I am speaking Hindi.

The first is a fact about you. The second is a report about this minute.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

This distinction is worth pausing on, because English speakers have it and most European learners of Hindi do not. French, German and Spanish all translate both of those lines with a single present tense; Hindi and English each keep two.

So the good news is that your instinct is already right. Where English says I am doing, Hindi says कर रहा हूँ. Where English says I do, Hindi says करता हूँ. Translate the shape, not the words.

One caution. Hindi leans on the habit form in a place English does not: for something happening in the near future that is already arranged, Hindi is happy with the habitual, where English reaches for I am.

वर्तमान is Sanskrit vartamāna, "existing, present", a tatsama.

Grammar Lens: which word in the sentence tells you

form	the shape of the verb
habit	stem + -ता, then the copula
in progress	bare stem, then रहा, then the copula

The copula is in both, so it tells you nothing. What decides it is whether the stem carries -ता or stands bare with रहा behind it.

अभी — the word for right now — sits comfortably with the second and strangely with the first, which is the quickest way to hear the difference.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ" — the fact
- "मैं हिंदी बोल रहा हूँ" — the minute

- which one you would use to answer what are you doing?
- the one that takes अभी without sounding odd

Before you move on

Which form states a fact about you? (The habit, with -ता.) Which reports this minute? (The one with रहा.) Does the copula help you tell them apart? (No — it is in both.)

97.6 abhī kī tālikā — two dials, and two sentences you already knew

Name the three pieces of a continuous sentence, and say which two of them move, before you look at the table.

Grammar Lens: the grid

subject	middle and last
मैं (m)	रहा हूँ
मैं (f)	रही हूँ
वह (m)	रहा है
वह (f)	रही है
हम, वे, आप	रहे हैं
तुम	रहे हो

The stem in front of all of them is bare, every time. Six rows and not one of them touches the verb.

Grammar Lens: two sentences that were built this way all along

You have been saying this pattern for a long time without being given it:

sentence	what it is
एक बज रहा है	baj- bare, रहा, है
बारिश हो रही है	ho- bare, रही, है

Neither was a lump. The clock one is masculine and the rain one is feminine, which is the only difference between them, and it is the middle word that shows it — exactly as the grid above says it should.

Grammar Lens: against the habit

form	the verb
habit	बोलता हूँ
in progress	बोल रहा हूँ
earlier habit	बोलता था

Three tenses off one stem, and the only thing you have to look at is what sits immediately after it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all six rows of the grid
- the clock sentence, and name its three pieces
- the rain sentence, and say why its middle word ends in -ई
- the habit and the continuous of to speak, one after the other

Before you move on

What shape is the stem in, in every row? (Bare.) Why does the rain sentence use रही? (Bārish is feminine.) What separates the habit from the continuous? (What sits after the stem.)

97.7 आप क्या कर रहे हैं? — the question, and four ways to answer it

You have क्या for what. Put it in front of the plural continuous and you have the question this lesson is about.

The exchange

— आप क्या कर रहे हैं? — मैं हिंदी बोल रहा हूँ।

Three things are at work. क्या asks. रहे हैं is the plural because the question is to somebody addressed as आप. The answer drops back to रहा

हूँ, because the answer is about one man speaking for himself — a woman answers बोल रही हूँ, and the question does not change, because the asker does not know yet who will answer.

How to answer

Answer it four ways, out loud:

- you are speaking Hindi
- you are going home
- you are eating
- and then say what you do in general, rather than now

The fourth one is the trap and the test. What are you doing? takes the continuous; what do you do? takes the habit, and the two questions sound nearly the same in English.

Grammar Lens: what a listening paper does with this

what you hear	what it tells you
...रहा है	one man, right now
...रही है	one woman, right now
...रहे हैं	more than one, or आप

The middle word is doing almost all the work, and it sits at the end of the sentence where a listener hears it last. Train the ear on those three shapes and a personal-account listening item becomes three decisions instead of one guess.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "आप क्या कर रहे हैं?"
- "मैं हिंदी बोल रहा हूँ"
- the answer a woman would give
- the same sentence as a habit rather than as a moment

Before you move on

Why is the question रहे हैं and the answer रहा हूँ? (The question is to आप; the answer is about one person.) Which word carries the gender? (The middle one.) Which form answers what do you do? (The habit.)

Chapter 98

A Day, In The Order It Happens

Modes: voice (7) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 6 of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe my daily routine in order – what time I get up, how I travel, where I go, and what happens before and after.
> Read a four-sentence daily routine in which every word is taught, then say your own, and say it again as the other gender changing nothing but the endings.

98.1 से — where you came from, and what you came by

You have पर for being at a place. Try to say you came from one, and notice you have the place and no way to leave it.

You'll want to know: से

से (se) — "from," and also "by."
घर से — from home. हाथ से — by hand.
Like पर, it trails its noun.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

English splits this into two words and Hindi does not:

English	Hindi
from home	घर से
by hand	हाथ से

Both are the same idea seen from two angles. Where something starts and what it travels through are, to Hindi, one relation: the thing proceeds from the noun. A journey proceeds from your house; an action proceeds from your hand.

Once you see that, the second use stops being a second word to learn. A vehicle you travel in takes से for exactly the same reason your hand does.

CDIAL traces से to Sanskrit sahita, "together with" (CDIAL 13310), and lists it under sama, "equal", too (CDIAL 13173).

Grammar Lens: two postpositions, one habit

postposition	what it marks
पर	at a point
से	from it, or by way of it

Both trail the noun, both are one syllable, and neither has an English word sitting in the same place. That is the whole class: the small word comes second, and knowing the noun tells you where to put it. A question you will be asked in a speaking interview turns on this word: आप कहाँ से हैं? — where are you from?

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "घर से" — from home
- "हाथ से" — by hand
- "आप कहाँ से हैं?"
- what the two uses have in common

Before you move on

Which side of the noun does से sit on? (After it.) What single idea covers from and by? (The thing proceeds from the noun.) Which question in a speaking interview needs it? (आप कहाँ से हैं?)

98.2 बस से — the same three letters, twice over

You already read बस as a reply meaning enough, that's all. Now meet it in बस से and notice it cannot possibly mean that here.

You'll want to know: बस से

बस — the vehicle. बस से — by bus.
मैं बस से स्कूल जाता हूँ। — I go to school by bus.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

These are two different words that happen to be spelled alike:

word	where it comes from	what it means
बस	Persian bas	enough, that's all
बस	English bus	the vehicle

The first has been in the language for centuries. The second arrived with the vehicle, and English had shortened it from omnibus — Latin for "for everybody" — which is a fair description of a bus and a strange thing to find inside three Devanagari letters.
Nothing marks them apart on the page. The sentence does the work: a reply on its own is the old word, and a noun with a postposition behind it is the vehicle.

Grammar Lens: reading the one from the other

what you see	which word
बस।	enough
बस से	by bus

The moment से follows it, it is a thing you can travel in. That is the sort of decision a reading paper tests without ever saying so, and you now make it from the shape of the sentence rather than from the word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "बस से" — by bus
- "मैं बस से स्कूल जाता हूँ"
- the other word spelled the same, and what it means
- what tells the two apart in a sentence

Before you move on

What did English shorten bus from? (Omnibus, Latin for for everybody.) How do you know which बस you are reading? (From what stands around it — a postposition behind it means the vehicle.)

98.3 उठना — where a day starts

You can say सुबह and you can build a habit with -ता. Try to say what you do first every morning, and find the verb missing.

You'll want to know: उठना

उठना (uṭhnā) — to get up, to rise.

मैं सुबह उठता हूँ। — I get up in the morning. मैं सुबह सात बजे उठती हूँ। — I get up at seven in the morning.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The stem is उठ-, and it opens with a vowel where no consonant can carry the mark — so the word begins with the full letter उ, which is why this is the first word in the track to start that way.

The verb is broader than English get up. It covers a person leaving a bed, a person standing from a chair, smoke rising, and a price going up. What all of those share is movement away from the ground, and Hindi treats that as one action.

Its opposite, बैठना, is to sit — the same idea in the other direction. उठना comes from a reconstructed ut-sthāti*, "stands up" (CDIAL 1900).

Grammar Lens: it takes the endings you already have what you mean	the form

I get up (habit)	उठता हूँ
I am getting up	उठ रहा हूँ
I used to get up	उठता था
I will get up	उठूँगा

Four tenses on one new stem, and you had all four endings before you had the verb. That is what a stem costs you now: one word, and the whole grid comes with it.

Your turn

- Say it: "मैं सुबह उठता हूँ"
- Say it: the same as a woman would say it
- Say it: "मैं सुबह सात बजे उठती हूँ"
- Look: at उठना and name the letter it opens with

Before you move on

What do a person, smoke and a price have in common in this verb? (They all move away from the ground.) Why does the word open with a full letter? (There is no consonant to carry the mark.) What is its opposite? (बैठना, to sit.)

98.4 काम — the noun that was there all along

You learned काम करना long ago as one expression meaning to work. Say it, and then ask yourself what the first half of it means on its own.

You'll want to know: काम

काम (kām) — work, a job, a task.
काम पर — at work. मैं काम पर जाता हूँ। — I go to work.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

काम करना was never one word. It is काम plus करना — literally to do work — and Hindi builds an enormous number of verbs this way: a noun, plus the verb to do.

the pattern	what it makes
काम + करना	to work
a noun + करना	to do that noun

Knowing this turns a memorised phrase into a machine. Any noun you meet can be handed to करना, and the result is usually the verb a learner would otherwise look up separately.
The word comes from Sanskrit कर्म (karma), "act, deed" — the same word English borrowed whole. A karma is a thing done, and a काम is a thing to do.

Grammar Lens: which postposition a workplace takes

sentence	meaning
मैं काम पर जाता हूँ।	I go to work.
मैं बस से काम पर जाता हूँ।	I go to work by bus.

पर for the place you end up at, से for what carries you there. Both of them trail their nouns, and the verb stays at the end however many of them you stack in front of it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "काम" — work
- "मैं काम पर जाता हूँ"
- "मैं बस से काम पर जाता हूँ"
- what karma means, and how it is the same word

Before you move on

What is kaam karnaa made of? (The noun काम plus करना.) Which postposition marks the workplace? (पर.) Which English word is the same Sanskrit root? (Karma.)

98.5 पहले — putting one thing in front of another

You can say that you get up and that you go to work. Try to say which of the two happens first, and notice the track has never given you a way.

You'll want to know: पहले

पहले (pahle) — first, beforehand, earlier.
पहले मैं उठता हूँ। — First I get up.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पहला is first, the ordinal, and पहले is the same word in the shape an adverb takes — the -ए ending you have now met on adjectives, on the past copula and on the continuous.
It does two jobs, and the difference is where it stands:

position	what it means
in front of the sentence	first, to begin with
after a time word	before that time

सुबह से पहले is before morning — the time word, से, then पहले. That is the second use, and it is why this lesson comes after the one on से.
पहला comes from a reconstructed prathila*, "first" (CDIAL 8652).

Grammar Lens: sequencing a day

sentence	meaning
पहले मैं उठता हूँ।	First I get up.
मैं काम पर जाता हूँ।	I go to work.

Two sentences and an order between them. That is the whole of what a one-minute spoken description needs — and until this word existed, every sentence in such a description floated free of the others.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "पहले" — first
- "पहले मैं उठता हूँ"
- the ordinal it comes from
- "सुबह से पहले"

Before you move on

Which ordinal is पहले built on? (पहला, first.) What decides whether it means first or before? (Where it stands.) What must come in front of it for the second use? (A time word and से.)

98.6 के बाद — the other end of the pair

You have पहले for first. Guess its partner, and then go on to see what Hindi makes you put in front of it.

You'll want to know: के बाद

बाद (bād) — after. In a sentence it almost always arrives as के बाद.
काम के बाद — after work.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बाद comes from Arabic بعد (ba^{c}d), "after" — a plain borrowing that kept its job exactly.
What is Hindi's own is the के in front of it. A two-part postposition like this one is built out of the possessive you already have: the after of work. Hindi has a shelf of these, and they all share the shape:

shape	example
noun + के + a word	काम के बाद

So के बाद is not a new kind of thing. It is the possessive का / के / की you met with uskā and hamārā, put to work as glue.

Grammar Lens: the pair, and a day in order

what you mean	the shape
first	पहले
before X	X से पहले
after X	X के बाद

Notice the asymmetry: before takes से and after takes के. There is no tidy reason to give you; it is a pair of fixed habits, and the way to keep them apart is to say each one a few times rather than to reason about it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "काम के बाद" — after work
- "काम से पहले" — before work
- both one after the other, and hear which small word goes with which
- what language बाद was borrowed from

Before you move on

Which small word goes with बाद? (के.) Which goes with पहले? (से.) What is के doing there? (It is the possessive, used as glue — the after of work.)

98.7 dincaryā kī tālikā — a day, in the order it happens

Name the verb a day starts with and the noun you travel to, before you look at the table.

Grammar Lens: the six

word	what it adds to a day
उठना	the action it starts with
काम	the place it goes to
बस	what carries you there
से	from, and by
पहले	which of two came first
के बाद	which came second

Four of the six are not vocabulary in the ordinary sense. They are joints: things that let two sentences be put in a relation instead of standing side by side.

Grammar Lens: the three small words, side by side

small word	what it marks
पर	at a point
से	from it, or by way of it
के बाद	later than it

All three trail their noun. That is now the whole postposition habit, and the only thing left to learn about any new one is which meaning it carries.

Grammar Lens: a day, assembled

sentence	meaning
पहले मैं सुबह उठता हूँ।	First I get up in the morning.
मैं बस से काम पर जाता हूँ।	I go to work by bus.
काम के बाद मैं घर आता हूँ।	After work I come home.

Three sentences, in order, every word of which is yours.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three sentences in order
- the three small words, and what each one marks
- which small word goes with पहले and which with बाद

- the two words spelled बस, and how a sentence tells them apart

Before you move on

Which side of a noun does every postposition sit on? (After it.) Which small word does before take, and which does after take? (से and के.) What does से mean besides from? (By — what carries you.)

98.8 मेरी दिनचर्या — the minute you are asked to fill

Say what time you get up, using the clock word from the future chapter. That is the first line of what follows.

Read this

पहले मैं सुबह सात बजे उठती हूँ। मैं बस से काम पर जाती हूँ। काम के बाद मैं घर आती हूँ। घर पर मैं हिंदी बोलती हूँ।

Four sentences, and every word in them is one you have been taught. Read it: the four sentences twice — once for meaning, once listening for how the joints do the work

Grammar Lens: what is holding it together

joint	what it does
पहले	opens the sequence
से	names what carries her
पर	names where she ends up
के बाद	hooks sentence three to sentence two

Take those four out and you have four unrelated statements. Put them back and you have a description, which is what the one-minute task is graded on.

How to answer

Say your own, out loud, in four sentences:

- what time you get up

- how you travel, and where to
- what you do after that
- what you do once you are home

Say it a second time and change nothing but the endings, as the other gender would. The habit endings and the joints stay exactly where they are.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "पहले मैं सुबह सात बजे उठता हूँ"
- "मैं बस से काम पर जाता हूँ"
- "काम के बाद मैं घर आता हूँ"
- all four sentences straight through, as your own day

Before you move on

Which four words turn four statements into a description? (पहले, से, पर, के बाद.) Which tense is a routine told in? (The habit, with -ता.) What changes when a woman says the same day? (Only the endings.)

Chapter 99

The Noun, And The Ending That Means Two Things

Modes: voice (8) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can make any A1 noun plural, read the oblique form a noun takes in front of a postposition, and put a demonstrative in front of a noun.
> Read the clause a practice paper prints in a personal account – do bhaashaaen boltii hai – and tell a plural -e apart from an oblique one by the postposition behind it.

99.1 बच्चे — more than one, and an ending you have seen four times

You can say बच्चा for one child. Try to say children, and notice the track has taught you a great many words and never how to have two of anything.

You'll want to know: बच्चे

बच्चे (bacce) — children.
एक बच्चा — one child. दो बच्चे — two children.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The ending moved from -आ to -ए, and you have watched that happen four times already:

where	singular	plural or masculine-plural adjectives	काला	काले
the habitual	बोलता	बोलते
the past copula	था	थे
a noun	बच्चा	बच्चे

Nouns bend the same way adjectives do, which is not a coincidence: to Hindi they are the same kind of word wearing the same endings. Learning noun plurals is not a new system — it is the one system arriving at a new place.

This applies to masculine nouns ending in -आ and to those only. A noun shaped otherwise does something else, and the next lessons take those in turn.

बच्चा itself is the loan usually traced to Persian bacca, "child".

Grammar Lens: what changes with it

sentence	meaning
बच्चा लंबा है।	The child is tall.
बच्चे लंबे हैं।	The children are tall.

Three words moved and the reason is one. The noun went plural, so the adjective followed it and the copula followed the adjective. Agreement travels outward from the noun, and once the noun is right the rest is automatic.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "एक बच्चा" and then "दो बच्चे"
- "बच्चे लंबे हैं"
- which other words in the sentence had to move, and why
- the four places you have met the -आ / -ए change

Before you move on

What does a masculine -आ noun do in the plural? (Ends in -ए.) Which other words follow it? (The adjective and the copula.) Is this a new system? (No — it is the adjective ending arriving on a noun.)

99.2 किताबें — nothing to change, so something is added

बच्चा ends in -आ and swapped it for -ए. किताब ends in a consonant. Ask yourself what there is to swap.

You'll want to know: किताबें

किताबें (kitābeṁ) — books.
एक किताब — one book. दो किताबें — two books.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

A word with no vowel at the end has nothing to exchange, so Hindi adds a syllable: -एँ, the same -ए as before with a nasal on it.

shape of the noun	how it makes a plural
ends in -आ	swaps the ending for -ए
ends in a consonant	adds -एँ

That is the whole difference, and it follows from the shape rather than from a list to memorise: change what is there, or add where nothing is.
Feminine nouns ending in a consonant, like किताब, are much the commonest case, and the nasal is what your ear should catch.
किताब is Arabic kitāb, "book", which reached Hindi through Persian.

Grammar Lens: the nasal you already write

The mark over the ending is the anusvāra, which you have been writing since हैं and मिलेंगे. It is doing the same job here that it does there: this is a plural, and the nasal is the sign of it.

singular	plural
किताब	किताबें
रात	रातें

Say both aloud and let the nasal fall on the last syllable rather than swallowing it — that is what a listening paper is asking you to hear.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "एक किताब" and then "दो किताबें"
- the plural of रात
- what a consonant-final noun adds, and why it adds rather than swaps
- the plural of बच्चा, to hear the two side by side

Before you move on

What does a consonant-final noun add? (-एँ.) Why does it add instead of swapping? (There is no final vowel to swap.) Which mark carries the plural? (The nasal you already write in हैं.)

99.3 भाषाएँ — an -आ ending that does not behave like the others

भाषा ends in -आ, exactly like बच्चा. Guess its plural from that, and then go on to find out why the guess is wrong.

You'll want to know: भाषाएँ

भाषाएँ (bhāṣāẽ) — languages.

दो भाषाएँ — two languages. That phrase is printed in a practice paper, in a personal account: she speaks two languages.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

भाषा is feminine, and that is the whole story. The -आ → -ए swap belongs to masculine nouns; a feminine noun adds instead, exactly as किताब did.

noun	gender	plural
बच्चा	masculine	बच्चे
किताब	feminine	किताबें
भाषा	feminine	भाषाएँ

So the question to ask a noun is not "how does it end" on its own. It is gender first, ending second — and the two feminine rows do the same thing despite ending differently.
The ए is written as a full letter here rather than as a mark, because भाषा ends in a vowel and there is nothing for a mark to sit on. That is the same rule that gave you आऊँगा and आओगे.
भाषा is Sanskrit bhāṣā, "speech", a tatsama (CDIAL 9479).

Grammar Lens: the three shapes, in the order to ask them

ask this	then this is it masculine?	-आ swaps to -ए
is it feminine?	it adds a nasal ending

Two questions and you have the plural of any A1 noun. The number in front — दो, तीन — does not change either way; Hindi marks the plural on the noun, not on the numeral.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "दो भाषाएँ" — two languages
- the plurals of बच्चा, किताब and भाषा in a row
- which question you ask a noun first
- why the ए is a full letter in this word

Before you move on

Why does भाषा not become भाषे? (It is feminine; the swap is for masculine nouns.) What do both feminine nouns do? (Add a nasal ending.) Which question comes first? (Gender.)

99.4 दो आदमी — the plural you cannot see

आदमी is masculine and ends in -ई, not -आ. You have a rule for -आ and a rule for feminine nouns. Notice this word fits neither.

You'll want to know: दो आदमी

एक आदमी — one man. दो आदमी — two men.

The word does not change.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

A masculine noun that does not end in -आ has no plural form at all. It stands still, and the sentence around it does the work:

what tells you	how
the numeral	दो, तीन
the verb	हैं rather than है
an adjective	लंबे rather than लंबा

दो आदमी लंबे हैं। — Two men are tall. The noun is the only word in that sentence with nothing to show for it.

This is worth expecting rather than being surprised by, because a reading paper will give you an unchanged noun and ask you to count. The number lives in the sentence, not always in the word.

आदमी is an Arabic word, ādamī, "human", borrowed through Persian.

Grammar Lens: the whole plural system, now complete

noun	plural
बच्चा (m, -आ)	बच्चे
आदमी (m, other)	आदमी
किताब (f)	किताबें
भाषा (f)	भाषाएँ

Four rows and every A1 noun you will meet is in one of them. Two of the four add a nasal, one swaps a vowel, and one does nothing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "एक आदमी" and then "दो आदमी"
- "दो आदमी लंबे हैं"
- the three things in that sentence that tell you it is plural
- all four rows of the table

Before you move on

What does a masculine noun ending in -ई do in the plural? (Nothing.) So what tells you there is more than one? (The numeral, the verb and any adjective.) How many shapes does the whole system have? (Four.)

99.5 को — the word that was inside आपको

Say आपको. Say it slowly, in two pieces, and you have already said this lesson's word.

You'll want to know: को

को (ko) — "to," and the marker a definite or human object wears.
आदमी को — to the man, and also the man when he is the thing acted on.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

You met it fused. आपको is आप + को, and it was named as such when the oblique pronouns arrived. Here it stands on its own, in front of a noun instead of a pronoun, and it is the third postposition the track now has.

It does two jobs that English keeps apart:

job	example
a recipient	आदमी को — to the man
a definite or human object	आदमी को — the man, as the thing acted on

The second is the strange one to an English ear. English marks a direct object by word order and nothing else. Hindi puts को on an object when it is a person or a particular thing, and leaves it bare otherwise. Spanish does the same with a before a human object, so the demand is not unique to Hindi — only the marker is.

CDIAL lists को under Sanskrit kakṣa, "armpit" (CDIAL 14342): "at the side of" became "to".

Grammar Lens: three postpositions, one habit

postposition	what it marks
पर	at a point
से	from it, or by way of it
को	to it, or it as a definite object

All three trail the noun. All three are one syllable. And all three do something to the noun in front of them, which is what the next lesson is about.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "आदमी को" — to the man
- आपको slowly, in its two pieces
- the two jobs को does
- the three postpositions you now have, and what each marks

Before you move on

What is आपको made of? (आप plus को.) When does a direct object take को? (When it is a person, or a particular thing.) Which European language marks a human object the same way? (Spanish, with a.)

99.6 बच्चे को — the same ending, and this time it is not a plural

You know बच्चे as children. Take बच्चे को and notice it cannot mean to the children and one child at the same time — so which is it?

You'll want to know: बच्चे को

बच्चे को — to the child. One child.

A noun standing in front of a postposition changes shape, and for a masculine -आ noun that shape is -ए — the same ending the plural uses.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

This is not a new rule. It is the one the possessives taught you, arriving on a noun:

word	plain	in front of a postposition
मेरा	मेरा	मेरे पास
उसका	उसका	उसके बाद
बच्चा	बच्चा	बच्चे को

Hindi calls this shape the oblique. Every -आ word in the language wears it — possessives, adjectives, and now nouns — and it is always the same -ए.

So the track has taught this bend four times on four kinds of word, and this is the fourth and last kind.

बच्चा is usually traced to Persian bacca, "child".

Grammar Lens: how to tell the two -ए apart

what you see	what it is
बच्चे हैं	plural — nothing follows the noun
बच्चे को	singular oblique — a postposition follows

The postposition is the whole signal. If one is standing behind the noun, the -ए is oblique and the noun may well be singular. If nothing is, the -ए is a plural.
A plural in front of a postposition takes yet another shape, which is one step past A1 — recognise बच्चों को on a page and leave it there for now.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "बच्चे को" — to the child
- "बच्चे हैं" — and say how many children that is
- what tells you which बच्चे you are reading
- the possessive pair that bends the same way

Before you move on

How many children is बच्चे को? (One.) What forces the noun into that shape? (The postposition behind it.) Which earlier words wore the same -ए? (The possessives, in front of a postposition.)

99.7 यह किताब — the same word, one step to the left

You have यह and वह as answers to which one — standing alone, meaning this one and that one. Try putting one in front of a noun.

You'll want to know: यह किताब

यह किताब — this book. वह आदमी — that man.

Nothing is added and nothing bends. The word you already have is placed in front of a noun, and that is the whole of it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

how it stands	what it means
यह	this one
यह किताब	this book

English does exactly the same thing with the same two words — this is a pronoun in this is mine and a determiner in this book — so there is nothing here to translate differently. The reason it needs saying is that the track taught these words only as standalone answers, and a reading paper uses them in front of nouns far more often.

There is a second reason it matters. Hindi has no article, so यह and वह are what a writer reaches for when the would have been enough in English. A sentence that begins वह आदमी is often best read as the man rather than that man.

CDIAL lists यह under Sanskrit eṣa, "this" (CDIAL 2530).

Grammar Lens: what fills the space before a noun

in front of the noun	what it does nothing	a book, or the book
एक	one book, a book
यह / वह	this book, that book

Three choices and the reader picks from context. That is the whole of Hindi definiteness at this level, and it is why the track has spent no time on articles: there are none to spend it on.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "यह किताब" — this book
- "वह आदमी" — that man, or the man
- the same two words standing alone, as answers

- the three things that can stand in front of a Hindi noun

Before you move on

What changes when यह moves in front of a noun? (Nothing — it is placed there.) Why does Hindi lean on these two words more than English does? (It has no article.) How is वह आदमी often best read? (The man.)

99.8 saṁjñā kī tālikā — the noun, on one page

Name the first question you ask a noun before making it plural, and say why it comes first.

Grammar Lens: the four plurals

noun	plural
बच्चा (m, -आ)	बच्चे
आदमी (m, other)	आदमी
किताब (f, consonant)	किताबें
भाषा (f, -आ)	भाषाएँ

Gender first, ending second. One row swaps a vowel, two add a nasal, and one does nothing at all.

Grammar Lens: the ending that means two things

what you see	how many	why
बच्चे लंबे हैं	more than one	nothing follows the noun
बच्चे को	one	a postposition follows

The postposition is the signal. That is the single most useful thing in this chapter, because -ए is everywhere and a reader who cannot tell the two apart will miscount every sentence that has one.

Grammar Lens: the space in front of the noun

before the noun	after the noun
nothing, एक, यह, वह	पर, से, को

A Hindi noun phrase is a noun with an optional word in front and an optional word behind. Everything this chapter taught fits in that one picture.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all four plurals in a row
- "बच्चे को" and "बच्चे लंबे हैं", and say how many children each has
- the three postpositions, and the three things that go in front
- "दो भाषाएँ" and "यह किताब"

Before you move on

What tells you an -ए is oblique rather than plural? (A postposition behind it.) Which two rows add a nasal? (Both feminine ones.) Which noun shape does nothing at all? (A masculine noun not ending in -आ.)

99.9 दो भाषाएँ बोलती है — counting from one word

Read it: the line and say how many languages, before going on

दो भाषाएँ बोलती है।

Grammar Lens: the line a paper prints

That clause is lifted from a personal account in the second practice paper. Until this chapter, भाषाएँ was an unreadable shape.

word	what it does
दो	the number
भाषाएँ	the noun, carrying the plural nasal
बोलती है	the habit, and the speaker is a woman

Two things say plural here and neither is the verb: the numeral and the ending on the noun. The verb agrees with the person, not with the count.

The exchange

The other half of the chapter, in two lines that look almost alike:

> — बच्चे कहाँ हैं? — बच्चे को घर भेजा।

The first बच्चे is a plural and the second is one child in the oblique. Nothing but the postposition separates them, and a reader who misses it counts wrong.

How to answer

Say each of these out loud, as a plural:

- one child, then two children
- one book, then two books
- one language, then two languages
- one man, then two men

The fourth is the one that sounds wrong and is right. Say it twice.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "दो भाषाएँ बोलती है"
- which two words in it carry the plural
- "बच्चे को", and say how many children
- "यह किताब" and "वह आदमी"

Before you move on

Does the verb tell you how many? (No — it agrees with the person.) What separates a plural बच्चे from an oblique one? (A postposition behind it.) Which noun shape shows no plural at all? (A masculine noun not ending in -आ.)

Chapter 100

How Much, How Well, How Big

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can hedge an answer, say that something was done well or badly, compare two things, ask a quantity and pay a compliment.
> Answer the listening item the first practice paper sets – haan, thodii – and say why the ending rather than the word is what the item tests.

100.1 थोड़ा — the honest yes

Somebody asks whether you speak Hindi. You can say yes and you can say no. Try to say a little, which is the true answer, and find you cannot.

You'll want to know: थोड़ा

थोड़ा (thoṛā) — a little, a bit, some.

हाँ, थोड़ी। — Yes, a little. That two-word answer is a listening item on a practice paper.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

It ends in -आ, so it bends like every other word that does:

what is being hedged	the form
a masculine thing	थोड़ा
a feminine thing	थोड़ी

That is why the paper's answer is थोड़ी rather than थोड़ा — the question was about हिंदी, and hindī is feminine. The hedge agrees with what it hedges, not with the person speaking.
This catches English speakers out, because a little in English is a fixed lump that never changes. Here it is an adjective, and adjectives agree. थोड़ा comes from Sanskrit stoka, "a drop; a little" (CDIAL 13720).

Grammar Lens: where it stands

sentence	meaning
मैं थोड़ी हिंदी बोलता हूँ।	I speak a little Hindi.
हाँ, थोड़ी।	Yes, a little.

In front of the noun, like any adjective. And on its own as a complete answer, where the noun it agrees with is the one the question named.
A hedge is worth more at this level than it looks. It is the difference between claiming fluency and being believed, and an examiner hears the difference.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "थोड़ा" and then "थोड़ी"
- "मैं थोड़ी हिंदी बोलता हूँ"
- "हाँ, थोड़ी" — and say why it is not थोड़ा
- the same answer as a woman would say the whole sentence

Before you move on

Why is the paper's answer थोड़ी? (Hindī is feminine, and the hedge agrees with what it hedges.) Does English change a little the same way? (No — it is a fixed lump there.)

100.2 अच्छा / बुरा — well and badly, from words you already own

You have अच्छा for good and बुरा for bad. English needs two different words to say well and badly. Guess what Hindi needs.

You'll want to know: the manner use

अच्छा is also well. बुरा is also badly.

वह अच्छा बोलता है। — He speaks well. वह बुरा बोलता है। — He speaks badly.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

English keeps two shelves of words — good / well, bad / badly — and puts -ly on the second shelf. Hindi keeps one. The same word describes a thing or describes an action, and its position in the sentence says which:

where it stands	what it describes beside a noun	the thing — a good book
in front of a verb	the action — speaks well

So he is good and he speaks well use the same word in Hindi, and an English speaker's instinct to reach for a second form is the thing to unlearn.

अच्छा is also where you can now read the letter छ, which arrived a moment ago in the alphabet. It sits in the middle of the word. Find: छ in अच्छा

बुरा comes from a reconstructed bura*, "defective" (CDIAL 9289).

Grammar Lens: it still agrees

speaker	sentence
a man	वह अच्छा बोलता है।
a woman	वह अच्छी बोलती है।

Even doing the work of an English adverb, it is still an adjective, so it still bends. English adverbs never do, which is the second half of the same instinct to unlearn.

The ordinary spoken way to say well is also अच्छी तरह, "in a good manner" — useful to recognise, and the bare adjective is enough to produce.

Your turn

- Say it: "वह अच्छा बोलता है" — he speaks well
- Say it: "वह बुरा बोलता है" — he speaks badly
- Say it: the same pair as a woman would say them
- Look: at अच्छा and put your finger on the letter छ

Before you move on

How many words does Hindi need for good and well? (One.) What tells you which job it is doing? (Where it stands.) Does it still bend for gender when it means well? (Yes — it is still an adjective.)

100.3 से बड़ा — bigger, with no word for -er

You have बड़ा and छोटा. Try to say that one thing is bigger than another, and notice English changed the adjective to do it.

You'll want to know: से बड़ा

आदमी बच्चे से बड़ा है। — The man is bigger than the child.

The adjective does not change. The thing compared against takes से.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

English has two machines for this — -er on short adjectives and more in front of long ones — and both are extra grammar. Hindi has neither:

English	Hindi
bigger than X	X से बड़ा
smaller than X	X से छोटा

The postposition you learned for from and by is doing this too, and the logic holds: the comparison proceeds from the thing measured against. Measured from that book, this one is big.

So there is no comparative form to learn in this language. There is one more use of a word you already have.

से comes from Sanskrit sahita, "together with" (CDIAL 13310), or perhaps sama (CDIAL 13173).

Grammar Lens: word order, and the reason the note was wrong

slot	what goes in it
first	the thing being described second	what it is measured against, plus से
third	the adjective, then the verb

Note what बच्चे से is doing there: that is the oblique from the last chapter, earning its keep the very next time a postposition turns up. English puts than X after the adjective; Hindi puts it before. That reversal is the only thing to drill, and it follows from the rule that has held since the first sentence you read: the verb goes last, and everything else queues in front of it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "आदमी बच्चे से बड़ा है"
- "बच्चा आदमी से छोटा है" — the same fact from the other end
- what happens to the adjective in a Hindi comparison (nothing)
- which side of the adjective the compared thing sits on

Before you move on

What marks the thing compared against? (से.) Does the adjective change? (No.) Where does the compared thing stand, against English? (Before the adjective rather than after it.)

100.4 कितना — a word let out of one sentence

Say the question you learned for asking somebody's age. One word in it means something on its own, and you have never used it anywhere else.

You'll want to know: कितना

कितना (kitnā) — how much, how many.
कितनी किताबें? — How many books?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

You met it inside the age question, where it was one syllable of a memorised lump. It is a word, and it behaves like every -आ word in this language:

what is being counted	the form
a masculine thing	कितना
a feminine thing, or a plural	कितनी

कितनी किताबें is feminine and plural, so the question word bends to match its noun — which is the same agreement you have now seen on adjectives, verbs, the past copula, the continuous and the hedge.
Hindi does not split how much from how many. English needs two phrases because it sorts nouns into countable and uncountable; Hindi asks one question and lets the noun answer.
कितना comes from a reconstructed kiyatta*, "how great" (CDIAL 3167).

Grammar Lens: the shape of a quantity question

question	answer
कितनी किताबें?	दो किताबें।
कितनी हिंदी?	थोड़ी।

The second pair is the one a listening paper sets: a quantity question, and a hedge for an answer. Both words in that exchange bend to the same feminine noun, which is why they rhyme.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "कितनी किताबें?" — how many books?
- an answer with a number
- "कितनी हिंदी?" and answer it with the hedge
- the age question, and name the word inside it you now own

Before you move on

How many words does Hindi use for how much and how many? (One.) Why is it कितनी in front of किताबें? (The noun is feminine and plural.) Where had you already been saying it? (Inside the age question.)

100.5 कितना अच्छा! — a question that has stopped asking

You have कितना for how much and अच्छा for good. Put them together and listen to what the pair wants to be.

You'll want to know: कितना अच्छा!

कितना अच्छा! — How good! How lovely!
कितनी अच्छी किताब! — What a good book!

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Nothing has been added. This is the question word in front of an adjective, with the question taken out of it.

what you say	what it is
कितना अच्छा है?	how good is it?
कितना अच्छा!	how good!

The difference is the verb and the voice. Drop है, let the pitch fall at the end, and a question becomes an exclamation. English does the identical thing — how good is it? against how good! — so there is nothing new to translate, only a habit to notice.
कितना comes from a reconstructed kiyatta*, "how great" (CDIAL 3167).

Grammar Lens: it still agrees, both words at once

what is being admired	what you say
a masculine thing	कितना अच्छा!
a feminine thing	कितनी अच्छी!

Both words move together, because both are -आ words and both are agreeing with the same noun. That is why the phrase rhymes with itself in either gender, and the rhyme is a useful check: if the two endings do not match, one of them is wrong.

This is the commonest way a Hindi speaker pays a compliment, and it costs you nothing you did not already have.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "कितना अच्छा!" — how good!
- "कितनी अच्छी किताब!" — what a good book!
- the question form of the same phrase
- what you take away to turn the question into the exclamation

Before you move on

What is removed to make the exclamation? (The verb, and the rising voice.) How many words bend in कितनी अच्छी? (Both.) What does the rhyme tell you? (That the two endings agree — if they do not match, one is wrong.)

100.6 mātrā kī tālikā — degree, on one page

Name the word that hedges an answer and the word that asks a quantity, and say what the two have in common.

Grammar Lens: the five

what you want to do	what you say
hedge an answer	थोड़ा / थोड़ी
describe how an action went	अच्छा / बुरा
measure one thing against another	X से बड़ा
ask a quantity	कितना / कितनी
admire something	कितना अच्छा!

Every one of the five ends in -आ and bends. That is the thread through the chapter, and it means none of them is a new kind of word — they are adjectives doing five different jobs.

Grammar Lens: what Hindi does without

English has	Hindi has good and well	one word
how much and how many	one word
bigger, more interesting	the adjective, unchanged

Three places where English carries extra machinery and Hindi carries none. A learner coming the other way has to build those distinctions; you get to drop them.

Grammar Lens: से, doing a third job

use	example
from	घर से
by way of	बस से
measured against	आदमी से बड़ा

One postposition, three jobs, and the same idea under all three: the thing proceeds from the noun. A comparison starts at the thing you measure against.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- all five rows of the first table
- "आदमी बच्चे से बड़ा है"
- "कितनी अच्छी किताब!"
- the three jobs से now does

Before you move on

What do all five words in this chapter have in common? (They end in -आ and bend.) Does a Hindi adjective change to make a comparison? (No.) How many jobs does से now do? (Three.)

100.7 हाँ, थोड़ी — two words, and one of them is the test

You have हाँ for yes and the hedge from this chapter. Put them together and you have a complete answer.

The exchange

— क्या आप हिंदी बोलती हैं? — हाँ, थोड़ी।

That answer is a listening item on the first practice paper. Two words, and the second one carries the whole thing: a bare hā̃ would claim fluency, and thoṛī is what makes the answer true.

The ending is not decoration either. It is थोड़ी and not थोड़ा because hindī is feminine — so a listener who hears the wrong ending hears a speaker who has not noticed what they are talking about.

How to answer

Say each of these out loud:

- yes, a little
- I speak a little Hindi
- he speaks well
- what a good book!

Every one of the four ends in a word that had to agree with something. Say them again and listen for the ending each time rather than for the word.

Grammar Lens: the chapter in one sentence

what a paper asks	what it is testing
how much do you speak?	the hedge, and its ending
how well does he speak?	an adjective doing an adverb's job which is bigger?	से, and an unchanged adjective

Three questions, and none of them needs a word you did not already half have. This chapter added five words and no new machinery.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "हाँ, थोड़ी"
- why the ending is -ई and not -आ
- "वह अच्छा बोलता है"
- "आदमी बच्चे से बड़ा है"

Before you move on

Which of the two words in the answer carries the meaning? (थोड़ी — hã alone would overclaim.) Why that ending? (Hindī is feminine.) What marks the thing a comparison measures against? (से.)

Chapter 101

Two Words Where English Has One

Modes: voice (5) eyes (4) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say who I am with and without, place a thing in front of, behind or near a landmark, say who something is for, and say what I am doing something in order to do.
> Answer a directions question with a landmark rather than a distance, and say which of the three place words would be the wrong answer to a question about side.

101.1 के साथ — with, in two words

Say his and her in Hindi, and notice that both were the same word wearing different endings. Now try to say with my friend, and notice that English needs exactly one word to do it.

You'll want to know: के साथ

मैं दोस्त के साथ हूँ। — I am with a friend.

English spends one word on this. Hindi spends two, and only the second one is new.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

sāth, "with", comes from Sanskrit sārthena, "in company with", the instrumental case of sārtha, "caravan, company"; CDIAL lists the Hindi word under that case form (CDIAL 13364).

The two words

Take the phrase apart and something familiar falls out:

piece	what it is
दोस्त	the noun
के	उसका's ending, standing on its own
साथ	the new word — company

So दोस्त के साथ is, piece by piece, the friend's company. Hindi is not reaching for a preposition at all. It is building a possessive and then naming the relation as a thing.

That is why the first word is के and never का: a possessive agrees with what follows it, and साथ is masculine and standing in front of a further word, so it takes the oblique ending you met on nouns one chapter ago.

Grammar Lens: a shape, not a word

Write it: the shape below, once

The rest of this chapter is the same shape six more times:

slot	contents
1	the noun
2	के
3	the relation word

अपने दोस्त के साथ — with my own friend — puts अपना in slot 1's ordinary spot, bent to अपने because a postposition is coming. Everything in front of a postposition bends. That has now been true of possessives, of pronouns and of nouns, and it is true here.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मैं दोस्त के साथ हूँ"
- "अपने दोस्त के साथ"
- which of the two words is the new one
- why the first word is के and not का

Before you move on

How many words does Hindi use for with? (Two.) Which one is new? (साथ.) What is the other one? (The possessive ending, in its oblique form.)

101.2 के बिना — the opposite, for the price of one word

Say with a friend in Hindi. Now say it again and listen to how much of it you would have to change to mean the opposite.

You'll want to know: के बिना

चाय के बिना — without tea.

One word changed. The shape did not move.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

binā comes from Sanskrit vinā, "without" (CDIAL 11772).

The two words

slot 3	the whole phrase	English
साथ	दोस्त के साथ	with a friend
बिना	चाय के बिना	without tea

This is what the shape buys. Once slot 3 is a swappable position, every new relation costs exactly one word instead of a new piece of grammar — and this chapter is going to swap it five more times.

English does not work this way. With and without look related because one is built out of the other, but in front of and behind are unrelated words that share nothing. In Hindi all of them share के, and that is the part that is doing the grammatical work.

Grammar Lens: two ways to write it

बिना is the one relation word in this chapter that is also allowed to stand in front of its noun — बिना चाय के is said too, and means the same thing.

Learn the slot-3 version. It is the one that matches everything else you are about to meet, and a reader who knows the ordinary order will still understand the other one when a paper prints it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "चाय के बिना"
- "दोस्त के बिना"
- the one slot that changed between with and without
- the word that stayed put in the middle

Before you move on

What is without tea? (चाय के बिना.) Which slot carries the meaning? (The third.) Which slot carries the grammar? (The second — के.)

101.3 घर के पास — the word that was hiding in I have

Say I have in Hindi. Now look at the two words you said and ask what the second one actually means, because so far you have never been told.

You'll want to know: के पास

दुकान घर के पास है। — The shop is near the house.
पास means near. It has meant near the whole time.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ghar comes from ghara, "house", which CDIAL finds hard to derive from Sanskrit gṛha (CDIAL 4428); pās, "near", from pārśva, "side", whose form pārśve meant "near" (CDIAL 8118).

The two words

phrase	word for word	the job it does
मेरे पास	near me	I have
घर के पास	near the house	it is nearby

The same three slots, and the same slot-3 word. What changed is only what sits in slot 1 — a person or a place.

So Hindi says having by saying nearness, and the physical sense you are meeting now is the original one. A language with no verb for have reached for the nearest true thing: whatever is beside you is, for practical purposes, yours. The possessive chapter taught you the borrowed meaning first because it is the one a beginner needs first. This is the meaning it was borrowed from.

Grammar Lens: a place answer

You have been able to ask where something is for sixty chapters. This is the first shape that lets you answer with anything more exact than a room:

question	answer
दुकान कहाँ है?	घर के पास।

An A1 listening paper does this constantly, because near is how people actually give directions — not in metres, but relative to a landmark both speakers already know.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "दुकान घर के पास है"
- what पास means on its own
- "मेरे पास" and the job it does
- why a language with no verb for have might use this word

Before you move on

What does पास mean? (Near.) Which slot does it occupy? (The third.) Which of its two jobs did you learn first, and which came first in the language? (Having, then nearness — the other way round.)

101.4 के सामने — in front of

Say near the house. Now say the word for a railway station. You are one word away from the sentence an A1 listening paper is most likely to set you.

You'll want to know: के सामने

दुकान स्टेशन के सामने है। — The shop is in front of the station.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

sāmne is a form of sāmnā, "the front", a tadbhava of Sanskrit saṁmukha, "facing" (CDIAL 12982).

The two words

Hindi	English
स्टेशन के पास	near the station
स्टेशन के सामने	in front of the station

English changed from one word to three. Hindi changed from one word to one.

Notice what सामने does not do. It ends in -ए, which on an adjective would be an ending that agrees with something — but this word never changes, whoever or whatever is in front of whatever. A slot-three word is fixed. The bending in this shape all happens in slot 2, and slot 2 is already done before slot 3 arrives.

Grammar Lens: front of what

English in front of is ambiguous in a way Hindi's is not. In front of the station can mean the near side of the building, or it can mean a position further along the road. के सामने means the first: facing it, across from it, on the side you would stand to look at it. That is the reading a direction-giver intends, and the reading an exam item expects.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "दुकान स्टेशन के सामने है"
- "दुकान स्टेशन के पास है" — the weaker claim
- whether सामने ever changes its ending
- which slot does all the bending in this shape

Before you move on

What is in front of the station? (स्टेशन के सामने.) Does the third word agree with anything? (No — it is fixed.) Which side of a building does it put you on? (Facing it.)

101.5 के पीछे — behind

Say in front of the station. Then say the word for a table, which you have had since the chapter on furniture.

You'll want to know: के पीछे

कुर्सी मेज़ के पीछे है। — The chair is behind the table.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

pīche, "behind", is a tadbhava: CDIAL lists it under a reconstructed paśca*, "hinder part", as an old case form that replaced Sanskrit paścāt (CDIAL 7990).

The two words

Three place words, and they do not all do the same kind of job:

slot-three word	what it tells you
पास	how far — close, no direction
सामने	which side — facing
पीछे	which side — away

पास answers a different question from the other two, and mixing them is the commonest way to get a direction item wrong. A shop can be near a station and still be behind it; it cannot be in front of it and behind it at once.

Grammar Lens: the one glyph worth pausing on पीछे carries छ, the breathy partner of च that the previous chapter taught. This is its first outing in an ordinary word rather than a number, and it is worth saying slowly: the breath belongs to the छ, not to the vowel either side of it.

Get that wrong and you say a different word. The pair च / छ does the same work here that त / थ does elsewhere, and both pairs punish the same inattention.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "कुर्सी मेज़ के पीछे है"
- "कुर्सी मेज़ के सामने है"
- which of the three place words says nothing about direction
- the two facts a listener gets from पीछे that पास withholds

Before you move on

What is behind the table? (मेज़ के पीछे.) Which place word gives distance without direction? (पास.) Which two are opposite ends of one axis? (सामने and पीछे.)

101.6 परिवार के लिए — for, with a noun in front

Say for me in Hindi — you have had it since the possessive chapter. Then say the word for a family.

You'll want to know: के लिए

यह परिवार के लिए है। — This is for the family.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

liye, "for", is usually explained as a form of lenā, "to take", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit labhate, "takes" (CDIAL 10948).

The two words

मेरे लिए was taught as a phrase to memorise. It was never a phrase. It was this shape with a possessive in slot 1:

slot 1	slot 2	slot 3
मेरे	—	लिए
परिवार	के	लिए

The top row has no separate slot 2 because मेरे already is the possessive, bent. When slot 1 is a noun instead, the possessive has to be supplied, and के is what supplies it.

That is the whole difference between the two rows, and it is the same difference that runs through this chapter: a pronoun carries its own के inside itself, a noun does not.

Grammar Lens: what for covers

के लिए covers two things English also puts under for:

sense	example
who benefits	यह परिवार के लिए है।
what something is meant to do	यह चाय के लिए है।

The second sense is the one the next lesson builds on, because a purpose is usually an action rather than a thing, and an action needs one more change before it can stand in slot 1.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "यह परिवार के लिए है"
- "यह मेरे लिए है"
- why the second one has no के in it
- the two senses के लिए carries

Before you move on

What is for the family? (परिवार के लिए.) Why does मेरे लिए lack a middle word? (The pronoun is already carrying the possessive.) What is still missing before you can say for doing something? (A change to the verb.)

101.7 करने के लिए — in order to Say the infinitive to do. Now say for the family. To put the first inside the second, one of them has to bend — and by now you can guess which.

You'll want to know: करने के लिए

मैं काम करने के लिए जाता हूँ। — I go in order to work.
करना became करने. Nothing else moved.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Look at the ending that changed, and then look at where you have seen that change before:

kind of word	plain	before a postposition
possessive	मेरा	मेरे
demonstrative	उसका	उसके possessive
own	अपना	अपने
noun	बच्चा	बच्चे
infinitive	करना	करने

Five kinds of word, one ending, one trigger. The infinitive is the last of the five, and it needs no new rule at all: -ना ends in -आ, so it bends exactly as बच्चा does.
The reason it can bend like a noun is that in Hindi it is one. करना is both to do and the doing, which is why it could already sit where a noun sits. A word that behaves like a noun bends like a noun.
करना goes back to Sanskrit karoti, "does" (CDIAL 2814). लिए is usually explained as a form of लेना, "to take".

Grammar Lens: where the purpose goes

slot	contents
1	who
2	the purpose: काम करने के लिए
3	the main verb, last

English puts the purpose after the verb — I go to work. Hindi puts it before — because the verb goes last, and that has not changed since the first sentence you read.
So the order reverses, and the reversal is the only thing to practise. The pieces themselves are all old.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मैं काम करने के लिए जाता हूँ"
- what करना turns into, and what it turns into it for
- the five kinds of word that wear this ending
- which end of the sentence a Hindi purpose sits at

Before you move on

What is in order to work? (काम करने के लिए.) What made करना bend? (A postposition was coming.) Why can an infinitive bend like a noun? (Because it is one.)

101.8 sambandh kī tālikā — relation, on one page

Name the word for with and the word for in front of, and say what the two phrases have in the middle.

Grammar Lens: the six

slot 3	English	what it does
साथ	with	company
बिना	without	absence
पास	near	distance

Grammar Lens: and the other three

slot 3	English	what it does
सामने	in front of	facing side
पीछे	behind	far side
लिए	for	benefit or purpose

Six words, and not one of them is a new piece of grammar. Each is a noun sitting in a possessive phrase. दोस्त के साथ is the friend's company and घर के पास is the house's nearness, and Hindi is content to leave it at that.

Grammar Lens: the one word that never changes

Slot 2 is के every single time, whatever stands on either side of it.

slot 1	slot 2	slot 3
दोस्त	के	साथ
घर	के	पास
करने	के	लिए

It is के rather than का or की because there is a further word coming, and a possessive in front of a further word goes oblique. That is the same rule the noun chapter taught and the same rule the possessive chapter taught, applied a third time.
When slot 1 is a pronoun, slot 2 disappears into it: मेरे पास, मेरे लिए. The के is still there — it is the -ए you can hear on मेरे.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "चाय के बिना"
- "मेज़ के पीछे"

- "काम करने के लिए"
- the one word that sits in slot 2 every time

Before you move on

How many slots does a Hindi relation phrase have? (Three.) Which slot is always the same? (The second.) What happens to that slot when slot 1 is a pronoun? (It fuses into the pronoun's own ending.)

101.9 दुकान कहाँ है? — answering with a landmark

Ask where the shop is. You have been able to ask this for a long time, and until this chapter you could not answer it.

The exchange

speaker	Hindi
A	दुकान कहाँ है?
B	स्टेशन के सामने है।
A	स्टेशन के पास?
B	हाँ, पास है।

B's first answer gives a side; the second gives only a distance. B is not repeating — B is conceding the weaker claim, because A asked for less.

How to answer

Find the landmark — the noun before के — then take the word after it, because that word alone carries the relation.

पास gives distance and no side. सामने and पीछे give a side and no distance. Do not upgrade पास into a side.

Grammar Lens: the chapter in one sentence

Hindi has no prepositions. It has possessive phrases whose head noun names a relation.
मैं दोस्त के साथ काम करने के लिए जाता हूँ। — Two relation phrases, one sentence, three slots each.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "दुकान कहाँ है?"
- "स्टेशन के सामने है"
- "मैं दोस्त के साथ काम करने के लिए जाता हूँ"
- which of the place words would be a wrong answer to which side?

Before you move on

Where in a relation phrase does the landmark sit? (Before के.) Which word carries the relation? (The one after के.) Which relation word tells you nothing about direction? (पास.)

Chapter 102

From, Until, and Instead

Modes: voice (6) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a span of days or hours with a marker on each end, name a second way of travelling, and correct somebody's guess by naming the option they got wrong and then the right one.
> Read the correction a practice paper prints – bas se nahiin, tren se – and say which side of the negative holds the true answer, then tell a span se from a means se in one sentence carrying both.

102.1 तक — where it stops

Say the word that marks where something comes from. Then say at five o'clock. One of those two words has been doing its job alone.

You'll want to know: तक

पाँच बजे तक — until five o'clock.

से marks a start. तक marks a stop.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

word	what it marks
से	the point something begins at
तक	the point something ends at

Both are postpositions, so both come after the word they attach to.

English puts until in front and Hindi puts तक behind, and that is not a quirk of this word — it is the same fact about the language that put के in the middle of every phrase in the last chapter.
तक also stretches across space, not only time: घर तक is as far as the house. One word covers both, because a stopping point is a stopping point whether you measure it in hours or in streets.
तक comes from Sanskrit tāvatka, built on tāvant, "so much" (CDIAL 5805).

Grammar Lens: it does not have to be a pair

पाँच बजे तक on its own is a complete and ordinary thing to say. It names only the end, and leaves the beginning to be understood — usually now.
That matters because the next lesson pairs the two words, and a reader who has only ever seen the pair will not recognise तक standing by itself on a sign or in a notice, which is where it most often appears.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "पाँच बजे तक"
- "घर तक"
- which of से and तक marks the end
- which side of its noun a Hindi postposition stands on

Before you move on

What does तक mark? (The stopping point.) Where does it stand? (After its word.) Does it need से to be present? (No.)

102.2 सोमवार से शुक्रवार तक — a span, marked at both ends

Say the first and last weekdays of the working week. Then say the word that marks a stopping point.

You'll want to know: से ... तक

सोमवार से शुक्रवार तक — from Monday to Friday.

Two days, and each one carries its own marker.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL traces se, "from", to Sanskrit sahita, "accompanied by" (CDIAL 13310), and lists it under sama too (CDIAL 13173); tak, "until", comes from tāvatka (CDIAL 5805).

The two words

piece	job
सोमवार से	start here
शुक्रवार तक	stop here

English builds a span out of from and to standing in front of their days. Hindi builds it out of से and तक standing behind theirs.

The shape looks harder than it is, because both halves are already familiar and neither is doing anything new. What is new is only that they are allowed to appear together, and that when they do, the whole thing is one idea rather than two.

Grammar Lens: order is not optional

The से half comes first. Always, and for the same reason English says from Monday to Friday and not the other way round: a span is told in the direction it runs.

What Hindi does not copy is the position of the markers. Read the pair as two small packages rather than as one long phrase:

[सोमवार से] [शुक्रवार तक]

Read it that way and a longer span — a written account of somebody's week — comes apart at the right seams the first time.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "सोमवार से शुक्रवार तक"
- the marker the first day carries

- the marker the last day carries
- which half of the span is said first

Before you move on

How many markers does a Hindi span carry? (Two — one on each end.) Where do they stand? (After their days.) Which end is named first? (The start.)

102.3 सुबह से शाम तक — the same frame, smaller units

Say morning and evening, the two Persian loanwords you met early on. Then guess how a span between them is built.

You'll want to know: सुबह से शाम तक

सुबह से शाम तक — from morning until evening.

If you guessed, you guessed right. Nothing about the frame changed.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

subah is Arabic ṣubḥ, "morning", through Persian (Lane, root ṣ-b-ḥ); śām is usually traced to Persian shām, "evening"; se and tak are inherited (CDIAL 13310, 5805).

The two words

what is spanned	Hindi
days	सोमवार से शुक्रवार तक
parts of a day	सुबह से शाम तक
clock hours	दस बजे से पाँच बजे तक

Three different units, one frame. से and तक do not care what they are attached to, and that is worth noticing because English does not always manage it either — from ten to five is fine, but from Monday until Friday and until the house pull on different senses of the same word.

Grammar Lens: the clock row is two packages, not four words

दस बजे से is one package and पाँच बजे तक is another. Each already had its own marker — बजे — before the span marker arrived, so the clock row stacks two postposition-like endings on one side.
Read it inside out:
दस → दस बजे (at ten) → दस बजे से (from ten)
Nothing is being negotiated between them. Each step adds one word to the right of what came before, which is the direction this language always builds in.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "सुबह से शाम तक"
- "दस बजे से पाँच बजे तक"
- what changed in the frame between days and hours (nothing)
- the two packages inside the clock span

Before you move on

Does the span frame change when the units change? (No.) What sits between दस and से? (बजे.) Which direction does the phrase grow in? (Rightwards, one word at a time.)

102.4 ट्रेन — a word that travelled with the thing

Say by bus. Say station. You have had a station for a while without a second way of reaching it.

You'll want to know: ट्रेन

ट्रेन से — by train.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Both of your vehicles are borrowed words, and they are borrowed the same way:

Hindi	from	by ...
बस	English bus	बस से
ट्रेन	English train	ट्रेन से

The से that makes them by bus and by train is the one already taught for means — the same word that says from, and that this chapter has been using for the start of a span.
Look at the first letter. ट is the retroflex one, made with the tongue curled back — and it is used here because English t in train sounds, to a Hindi ear, much more like ट than like the dental त. That is the regular habit for English loanwords, and it is why ट्रेन and not त्रेन.

Grammar Lens: a word Hindi also has its own name for Hindi does have an inherited word for a railway train, and an A1 reader will still meet ट्रेन far more often — on a board, in a timetable, in the middle of an ordinary sentence about getting to work.

Learn the borrowed one first because it is the one that is said. The other is worth recognising later, when reading formal notices is the task.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ट्रेन से"
- "बस से"
- the word that makes both of them mean by
- why the first letter is the curled-back one

Before you move on

What is by train? (ट्रेन से.) Which त-family letter does it start with, and why? (The retroflex ट, because that is what English t sounds like here.) What else has से done in this chapter? (Marked the start of a span.)

102.5 nahīṁ kī jagah — how much the negative takes back

Say by bus and by train. Now imagine somebody has guessed the first one and you need to give them the second.

You'll want to know: X से नहीं, Y से

बस से नहीं, ट्रेन से। — Not by bus — by train.

नहीं stands between the two options, and the one it rejects is the one before it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

nahīṁ comes from Sanskrit nahi, "surely not" (CDIAL 7035); jagah, "place", is usually traced to Persian jāygāh.

The two words

Read the frame as three beats:

beat	contents
1	the wrong option, with its own से
2	नहीं
3	the right option, with its own से

Each option keeps its marker. That is the part to watch, because English drops the second one — not by bus, by train has one by, and Hindi has two से. A sentence with only one से is not this frame.

Grammar Lens: what नहीं is negating

In every sentence so far, नहीं has stood in front of the verb and denied the whole thing. Here it stands after a noun-plus-postposition and denies only that phrase.

what is denied	example
the whole sentence	मैं नहीं जाता
one option in it	बस से नहीं, ट्रेन से

So the position of नहीं tells a reader how much of the sentence is being taken back — and getting it wrong turns a correction into a refusal. The English speaker's instinct is to reach for a word like but; this frame has no word in the middle beyond the negative itself, and the comma carries the pause.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "बस से नहीं, ट्रेन से"
- "ट्रेन से नहीं, बस से" — the correction the other way round
- which option नहीं rejects, the one before or the one after
- how many times से appears (twice)

Before you move on

Which option does नहीं deny? (The one before it.) How many से does the frame need? (Two — one per option.) What does the position of नहीं tell you in general? (How much of the sentence is being denied.)

102.6 se kī tālikā — five jobs, one word

Name two things से has done before this chapter, and the word that has now joined it.

Grammar Lens: everything से does

job	example
from a place	स्टेशन से
by a means	ट्रेन से
measured against	बच्चे से बड़ा
the start of a span	सोमवार से
one option in a correction	बस से नहीं

Five jobs and no change of form. से never bends, whatever it is doing and whatever stands in front of it — unlike का, which had to become के the moment another word followed.
The reason is worth keeping: का is a possessive and possessives agree, while से is a plain postposition and has nothing to agree with.

Grammar Lens: the partner, and where it stands

span	start	stop
days	सोमवार से	शुक्रवार तक
parts of a day	सुबह से	शाम तक
clock hours	दस बजे से	पाँच बजे तक

तक can stand alone — पाँच बजे तक needs no से. से can stand alone too. The pair is a choice, not a requirement.

Grammar Lens: the one place two से are compulsory

बस से नहीं, ट्रेन से।
English keeps one by and lets it cover both halves. Hindi gives each option its own से, because each option is a complete phrase in its own right and नहीं sits between two complete phrases rather than inside one. Count the से when you read a correction. Two means a swap is being offered; one means something else is going on.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "सोमवार से शुक्रवार तक"
- "सुबह से शाम तक"

- "बस से नहीं, ट्रेन से"
- the number of jobs से now has (five)

Before you move on

Does से ever change its form? (No.) Does तक need से? (No.) How many से does a correction need? (Two.)

102.7 मैं ट्रेन से जाऊँगा — reading a correction in a paper

Say I will do. Then say the verb for going. The future ending you learned on one verb attaches to any stem, and this is the sentence that wants it.

The exchange

speaker	Hindi
A	आप बस से जाएँगे?
B	मैं बस से नहीं, ट्रेन से जाऊँगा।

B does two things at once: rejects A's guess and supplies the replacement, in one sentence with one verb at the end of it.

How to answer

Find नहीं first. Everything before it is what is being denied; everything after it up to the verb is what replaces it.

Then check the count: two से means a swap. An item that asks how will B travel is answered by the phrase after the negative, and the commonest wrong answer is the phrase before it — which is exactly why the paper prints the rejected option first.

Grammar Lens: the chapter in one sentence

से marks a start and तक marks a stop, and between them they carry both a week and a working day:
मैं सोमवार से शुक्रवार तक ट्रेन से जाऊँगा।
Two से in that sentence, doing different jobs — the first opens a span, the second names a means. Neither is a mistake, and telling them apart is a matter of looking for a तक further along.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मैं बस से नहीं, ट्रेन से जाऊँगा"
- "मैं सोमवार से शुक्रवार तक ट्रेन से जाऊँगा"
- which phrase answers how will B travel
- how to tell a span से from a means से

Before you move on

Which side of नहीं holds the true answer? (The side after it.) What tells you a से opens a span? (A तक further along.) What is by train? (ट्रेन से.)

Chapter 103

What I Know and What I Want

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I know something rather than only that I do not, ask somebody whether they know, and ask for a thing at a counter.
> Answer the counter question aapko kyaa chaahiye with mujhe chaay chaahiye, and say which of the three words carries the information.

103.1 मैं जानता हूँ — the half that was missing

Say I do not know — you have had that sentence since the chapter on नहीं. Now try to say the opposite of it.

You'll want to know: जानता

मैं जानता हूँ। — I know.

Nothing about that is new except the permission.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

You have been saying मैं नहीं जानता for a very long time. The negative lesson used it as its example sentence, and everything in it was explained except the last word.

what you had	what you have now
मैं नहीं जानता	मैं जानता हूँ

Take नहीं out and one thing has to come back: हूँ. A Hindi present needs its to be on the end, and the negative sentence dropped it — which is ordinary and which is why the affirmative does not look like the negative with a word removed.

The verb is जानना, and its ज is the letter drawn two chapters before this one. It was on the page long before that, inside जी and आज. जानना comes from Sanskrit jānāti, "knows" (CDIAL 5193).

Grammar Lens: a word carried and never handed over

This is worth naming because it is a real gap and not a quirk of your memory. The negative lesson's headword names jāntā and glosses it as the masculine present of to know — but everything that lesson actually teaches is about नहीं: its Sanskrit root, its Indo-European cousins, its two jobs.
The word rode along in an example and was never handed over. You could deny knowing something and not claim it, which is a strange shape for a vocabulary to have.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मैं जानता हूँ"
- "मैं नहीं जानता"
- which word comes back when the negative goes away
- the infinitive this form is built from

Before you move on

What is I know? (मैं जानता हूँ.) What did the negative version leave off? (हूँ.) Which half of this verb did you have first? (The denial.)

103.2 क्या आप जानते हैं? — asking it

Say I know. Then say the little word that turns a Hindi statement into a yes-or-no question.

You'll want to know: जानते हैं

क्या आप जानते हैं? — Do you know?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Every piece is old and the assembly is regular:

piece	job
क्या	marks the whole thing as a question
आप	the respectful you
जानते	the verb, agreeing with आप
हैं	to be, also agreeing with आप

आप is grammatically plural, which is why both the verb and to be take their plural endings even when you are speaking to one person. That is not a new rule — it is the same respect-as-plural the track has used since the second chapter, turning up on a new verb.
जानना comes from Sanskrit jānāti, "knows" (CDIAL 5193).

Grammar Lens: where क्या sits क्या goes at the front, and the rest of the sentence keeps its ordinary order behind it. English reshuffles a question — you know becomes do you know — and Hindi does not move anything at all.

So a yes-or-no question costs one word and no rearrangement, which makes it one of the cheapest things in the language to build once you can say the statement.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "क्या आप जानते हैं?"
- "मैं जानता हूँ" — the answer
- why the verb is जानते and not जानता
- where क्या stands in the sentence

Before you move on

What turns a statement into a yes-or-no question? (क्या, at the front.) Does anything else move? (No.) Why is आप followed by plural endings? (It is grammatically plural, however many people you mean.)

103.3 चाहिए — wanting a thing rather than an action

Say the verb for wanting, the one you met with सकना. Then try to use it to want a cup of tea rather than to want to do something.

You'll want to know: चाहिए

चाहिए — is wanted, is needed.

It is built from the same root as चाहना, and it does a job that verb cannot.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

form	what follows it
चाहता / चाहती	another verb
चाहिए	a thing

चाहना wants an action. It was taught alongside the rule that a Hindi verb can swallow another verb whole, and that is exactly what it does: I want to go.

चाहिए wants a noun. I want tea. English uses one word for both jobs and hides the difference; Hindi uses two forms and makes it visible.

The other difference is that चाहिए does not change. It has no masculine and feminine, no singular and plural — the same five letters whoever is speaking and whatever is wanted. After a chapter of endings that agree with everything in sight, that is a relief worth noticing.

चाहिए comes from a reconstructed cāh*, "desire", whose source CDIAL calls uncertain (CDIAL 4775).

Grammar Lens: the ए on the end

The word ends in ए, the standing vowel drawn a few chapters back — not the sitting mark े, because there is no consonant after हि for the vowel to ride on.
That is the rule from the letter lesson doing its first real work: which of the two shapes a word uses is decided by whether a consonant is there to carry the vowel, and a word ending in a vowel sound has nothing behind it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "चाहिए"
- which of the two forms takes a thing after it
- which takes an action after it
- why the last letter is the standing ए

Before you move on

What does चाहिए take after it? (A thing.) What does चाहता take? (Another verb.) Does चाहिए change for gender or number? (No — never.)

103.4 मुझे चाय चाहिए — the wanter is not the subject

Say I like tea in Hindi. Look at the first word you said, and keep it in mind.

You'll want to know: मुझे ... चाहिए

मुझे चाय चाहिए। — I want tea.
Not मैं. मुझे — to me.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL lists mujh, "me", under the Sanskrit first-person base ma- (CDIAL 9691), and cāh, "wish", under a reconstructed cāh*, "see, desire", of uncertain source (CDIAL 4775).

The two words

This is the liking sentence again, with one word swapped:

Hindi	word for word
मुझे चाय पसंद है	to me, tea is pleasing
मुझे चाय चाहिए	to me, tea is wanted

The person is in the dative both times, and the thing is what the sentence is really about. Hindi treats wanting and liking as things that happen to you rather than things you do, and puts the person on the receiving end of both.

That is not a Hindi peculiarity. The proxy language reaches the same shape in me gusta, and Italian in mi piace — three languages in two unrelated families building the same idea the same way. What makes Hindi's version worth a lesson is that चाहिए extends it to wanting, where those languages switch back to an ordinary verb.

Grammar Lens: what agrees with what चाहिए does not change, so there is nothing to agree. The sentence has no word that bends, which is unusual enough to be a useful landmark: if you hear चाहिए, stop looking for agreement.

And मुझे carries झ, the breathy partner drawn a few chapters back. It was in your mouth from the liking chapter onwards and only recently on your hand.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मुझे चाय चाहिए"
- "मुझे चाय पसंद है"
- which word is not मैं, and why

- what in the sentence agrees with anything (nothing)

Before you move on

What is I want tea? (मुझे चाय चाहिए.) Which case is the wanter in? (The dative — to me.) Which other sentence you know puts the person there? (The liking one.)

103.5 cāh kī tālikā — wanting, on one page

Name the two forms of the wanting verb, and say what each one wants after it.

Grammar Lens: one root, two forms

form	what follows	example
चाहता / चाहती	a verb	मैं जाना चाहता हूँ
चाहिए	a thing	मुझे चाय चाहिए

Ask what comes next, not what it means. Both translate into English as want, so the meaning will not tell the two apart — the shape of what follows will, every time.

Grammar Lens: who sits where sentence	the person is

मैं जाना चाहता हूँ	मैं — the subject
मुझे चाय चाहिए	मुझे — the dative
मुझे चाय पसंद है	मुझे — the dative

Two of the three put the person on the receiving end, and the one that does not is the one where the person is genuinely doing something — going. Wanting a thing and liking a thing happen to you; wanting to act is something you do, and Hindi draws that line with the case of the first word.

Grammar Lens: the verb that was only ever denied

what you can now say	what you had before
मैं जानता हूँ	only मैं नहीं जानता
क्या आप जानते हैं?	nothing

The affirmative needed no new grammar at all — it needed somebody to introduce the word, which the negative lesson used and never taught.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "मुझे चाय चाहिए"
- "मैं जानता हूँ"
- "क्या आप जानते हैं?"
- the question that tells the two wanting forms apart

Before you move on

Which wanting form takes a noun? (चाहिए.) Which case is its wanter in? (The dative.) Does चाहिए ever bend? (No.)

103.6 आपको क्या चाहिए? — answering at a counter

Say to you in its respectful form, and the word that marks a question. Both have been yours for a while.

The exchange

speaker	Hindi
A	आपको क्या चाहिए?
B	मुझे चाय चाहिए।

The two lines are the same sentence with the person swapped — आपको for मुझे — and क्या standing where the answer will go.

How to answer

A listening item built on this keys on the noun between the two fixed words. Everything else in B's reply is predictable:

1. The first word is the dative person — it tells you who, not what.
2. The last word is चाहिए — it never changes, so it carries no information.
3. The answer is whatever sits between them.

That is why the item is answerable even if the middle word is the only one you catch. Listen to the middle.

Grammar Lens: the chapter in one sentence

Hindi puts the person on the receiving end of wanting, and gives the wanting word no endings at all — so the sentence's whole meaning lives in the noun in the middle and the case of the word in front. क्या आप जानते हैं? works the other way round: there the endings do all the agreeing, because somebody is genuinely doing the knowing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "आपको क्या चाहिए?"
- "मुझे चाय चाहिए"
- which word in the answer carries the information
- what changed between the question and the answer

Before you move on

Where in the answer is the information? (The noun in the middle.) What does चाहिए tell you? (Nothing — it never changes.) What replaces क्या when the question is answered? (The thing wanted.)

Chapter 104

Counting Past Twenty

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count the tens from twenty to ninety, and say a price out loud.
> Say pachaas rupaye, then tiis, chaaliis, sattar and sau rupaye, and say which of the two words carries the number.

104.1 तीस चालीस — two rungs past where the counting stopped

Count from ग्यारह to बीस. Then stop, because that is where your counting has ended until now.

You'll want to know: तीस, चालीस

तीस (tīs) — thirty.
चालीस (cālīs) — forty.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तीस चालीस (tīs cālīs) is two tadbhavas, words inherited and reshaped by sound change. tīs comes from Sanskrit triṁśat, "thirty" (CDIAL 6015), and cālīs from catvāriṁśat, "forty" (CDIAL 4656).

Grammar Lens: the tens are the part worth learning

number	word
20	बीस
30	तीस
40	चालीस

Say those three in a row and the family resemblance is audible: –ीस at the end of all of them. It is the same ending, worn down from the same Sanskrit word for ten, and it will carry you as far as fifty. तीन is three and तीस is thirty. चार is four and चालीस is forty. The openings are not identical to the small numbers, but they are close enough to hold on to, and that is the most help Hindi gives with numbers at this size.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- बीस, तीस, चालीस — three times, as a run
- the small number each of the two new words leans on
- the ending all three share

Before you move on

Which number is तीस? Which is चालीस? Which three of them so far end in the same sound?

104.2 पचास साठ — where the pattern stops helping

Say बीस, तीस, चालीस. Listen to the ending they share.

You'll want to know: पचास, साठ

पचास (pacās) — fifty.
साठ (sāṭh) — sixty.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पचास साठ (pacās sāṭh) is two tadbhavas, words inherited and reshaped by sound change. pacās comes from Sanskrit pañcāśat, "fifty" (CDIAL 7682), and sāṭh from ṣaṣṭi, "sixty" (CDIAL 12804).

Grammar Lens: one keeps the ending, one drops it number	word	the shared ending

40	चालीस	yes
50	पचास	a worn version
60	साठ	gone

पचास still leans on पाँच, the five you have counted since the opening chapters, and it still carries a trace of that ending. साठ leans on छह and keeps nothing else.

That is the shape of the rest of this chapter: the words get less helpful as the numbers get bigger. Knowing that in advance is worth more than a rule that would not hold.

पचास is the one to hold on to hardest. It is the price on a tea stall sign and the age of somebody's father, and it is the most common of the four so far.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- बीस, तीस, चालीस, पचास, साठ — the whole run
- which of the five keeps least of the shared ending
- the small number पचास leans on

Before you move on

Which number is पचास? Which is साठ? Which of the two still sounds like the ending you have been hearing?

104.3 सत्तर अस्सी नब्बे — the last three rungs

Say पचास and साठ. One of them kept the old ending and one dropped it.

You'll want to know: सत्तर, अस्सी, नब्बे

सत्तर (sattar) — seventy.
अस्सी (assī) — eighty.
नब्बे (nabbe) — ninety.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सत्तर अस्सी नब्बे (sattar assī nabbe) is three tadbhavas. sattar comes from Sanskrit saptati, "seventy" (CDIAL 13143), assī from aśīti, "eighty" (CDIAL 911), and nabbe from navati, "ninety" (CDIAL 6995).

Grammar Lens: each one leans on a number you already count

small number	ten times it
सात	सत्तर
आठ	अस्सी
नौ	नब्बे

Go down the left of that table and you are counting seven, eight, nine — which you have done since early on. Go down the right and you are counting seventy, eighty, ninety.
The opening consonant survives in all three, and that is the whole of the help on offer. Beyond the first sound, each word has been worn into its own shape and has to be met as a word.
Say the pairs across, one after another: sāt, sattar. āṭh, assī. nau, nabbe. Hearing them together is what makes them stick.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- सात — सत्तर, आठ — अस्सी, नौ — नब्बे, as three pairs
- the whole run from बीस to नब्बे
- what the three new words keep from their small numbers

Before you move on

Which number is सत्तर? Which is अस्सी? Which is नब्बे? Which small number does each one lean on?

104.4 गिनती की तालिका — eight rungs, and what sits between them

Say the last of the three words you met, the one for ninety.

Grammar Lens: the ladder

number	word
20	बीस
30	तीस
40	चालीस
50	पचास
60	साठ
70	सत्तर
80	अस्सी
90	नब्बे

Eight words, on top of the hundred you already say. Every price, every age and every house number you are likely to meet sits on or between them.

Grammar Lens: what sits between them

Here is the honest part, and it is better to hear it than to guess wrong. Hindi puts the small number first. Twenty-five is five-twenty: पच्चीस (paccīs) opens with the sound of पाँच. Twenty-two is बाईस (bāīs) and opens with दो's vowel.

That order is the opposite of English, and it is the one thing about the in-between numbers a learner can rely on.

What a learner cannot rely on is reassembling them. पच्चीस is not पाँच and बीस stuck together in any way you could work out from the pieces — the two halves have worn into each other. Each of the numbers between the rungs is its own word, and they are met one at a time, over a long while.

So: recognise the shape, know the small number is in front, and learn the rungs cold. That is the part that pays.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the eight rungs in order, without stopping

- them backwards, from नब्बे down to बीस
- which end of पच्चीस holds the small number

Before you move on

How many rungs did this chapter add? Which comes first in पच्चीस, the five or the twenty? Can you build twenty-five out of its two pieces? (No — it has to be learned as a word.)

104.5 पचास रुपये — a price, said out loud

Say the word for a rupee. You learned where its name came from — a piece of metal that has been given a shape.

Grammar Lens: put the two together

पचास रुपये — fifty rupees.
Number first, then the thing. That is the whole construction, and you have both halves already: the number arrived in this chapter and the rupee arrived a long way back.
रुपये rather than रुपया, because more than one is being counted. That bend is the same one the track has been making since the adjectives, and it costs nothing new here.

Grammar Lens: the prices you can now read

said	meaning
तीस रुपये	thirty rupees
चालीस रुपये	forty rupees
पचास रुपये	fifty rupees
सत्तर रुपये	seventy rupees
सौ रुपये	a hundred rupees

Five prices, and between them most of what a tea stall, a bus fare or a bag of vegetables will ask of you.
This is what the counting was for. A number on its own is a recitation; a number in front of a thing is a price, an age or an address, and that is where the nine rungs stop being a list and start being useful.

Your turn

- Say it: पचास रुपये
- Say it: तीस रुपये, चालीस रुपये, सत्तर रुपये, then सौ रुपये
- Say it: why the last word is रुपये rather than रुपया
- Listen: for the number first and the thing second

Before you move on

How do you say fifty rupees? Which comes first, the number or the thing? Which form does the rupee take when it is counted?

Chapter 105

Speaking to Somebody

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can address somebody by name, in speech and on paper, and write a short message to a named reader.
> Write the whole message to a named reader from a purpose cue alone: the opening line that names them, two sentences underneath, and your own name at the foot.

105.1 मीरा जी — putting a name in front of somebody

Say the small word you learned that turns a bare हाँ into a polite one.

You'll want to know: मीरा जी

मीरा जी (Mīrā jī) — how you address somebody called Mira.
A name, then जी. That is the whole of it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मीरा जी (Mīrā jī) puts the respectful jī after a name. CDIAL traces jī, "a word of assent or respect", to Sanskrit jīva, "long live!", the command form of jīvati, "lives" (CDIAL 5240).

Grammar Lens: the word you already had, in a new position

what you say	what it does
जी हाँ	makes a yes polite
मीरा जी	makes a name an address

जी has been in your mouth since the early chapters, doing politeness work after a yes. Behind a name it does the same work in a different place: it turns somebody being talked about into somebody being talked to.

Hindi has no separate ending for this the way some languages do. The position is the grammar — the name comes first, जी follows it, and nothing else in the sentence changes.

It works for anybody you would use आप with, which is most people you have not known since childhood. With a close friend or a child, the bare name on its own is the ordinary thing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- मीरा जी
- अरुण जी
- which of the two words carries the respect
- what changes in the rest of the sentence (nothing)

Before you move on

How do you address somebody called Mira? Which word goes first, the name or जी? Where had you met जी before this?

105.2 प्रिय — the word a letter starts with

Address somebody called Mira out loud. Today's word does the same work on the page.

You'll want to know: प्रिय

प्रिय (priya) — dear.

It goes before the name: प्रिय मीरा.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

प्रिय (priya) is Sanskrit priya, "beloved", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama (CDIAL 8974). CDIAL lists the inherited forms of the same word, such as piyā, "beloved".

Grammar Lens: the opposite side of the name

written	said
प्रिय मीरा	मीरा जी

One goes in front and one goes behind, which is worth noticing because it is the kind of thing a reader gets backwards once and then remembers. प्रिय is an adjective describing the person, so it leads; जी is an honorific attached to them, so it follows.

प्रिय belongs to writing. Saying it to somebody's face is the sort of thing that would make them look up. A note, a card or a letter is where it lives, and that is the one place this chapter is heading.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- प्रिय मीरा
- the spoken version of the same address
- which of the two words comes before the name

Before you move on

What does प्रिय mean? Which side of the name does it sit on? Is it for speaking or for writing?

105.3 संबोधन — two openings, one question to pick between them

Say the word a written message opens with, and say which side of the name it sits on.

Grammar Lens: the two side by side

where	what you say or write out loud	मीरा जी
on paper	प्रिय मीरा

One question chooses between them: are you speaking or writing? Answer it and the opening is decided, along with which side of the name the extra word goes on.

Grammar Lens: what the two have in common

Neither of them changes the sentence that follows. Hindi marks address by putting a word beside the name rather than bending anything, so whatever you were going to say stays exactly as it was and the opening sits in front of it.
That is worth holding on to, because a great deal of what this track has taught you does the opposite. Endings agree, vowels shorten, verbs bend for who is speaking. Address is the corner of the grammar that asks nothing of the rest of the sentence.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the opening for somebody called Arun, out loud
- the opening for a note to Arun
- which of the two puts its extra word after the name
- what changes in the sentence after the opening (nothing)

Before you move on

Which question picks the opening for you? Which of the two belongs to the page rather than the mouth? What does the rest of the sentence do when an opening is added? (Nothing.)

105.4 प्रिय मीरा — a page with somebody at the top of it

Say the written opening for a reader called Mira. Then recall the upright stroke that closes a Hindi sentence.

Writing: the three parts, with the model in front of you

A short Hindi message has three parts stacked down the page:

प्रिय मीरा,

नमस्ते। कल मिलते हैं।

— अरुण

Copy it once, keeping the three parts on their three lines.

Every word of that is something you have written before. What is new is the arrangement — two sentences you could already produce, lifted onto a page that now has a reader at the top of it and a writer at the bottom.

Grammar Lens: why the opening earns its own line

part	what it carries
प्रिय मीरा,	who is being written to
नमस्ते। कल मिलते हैं।	what is being said
— अरुण	who is writing

The opening is not a sentence and takes no । after it. A comma does that work, which is the one piece of punctuation here that behaves the way English punctuation does.

The two sentences underneath keep their । each. Being inside a message leaves the end of a Hindi sentence exactly as it was.

Before you move on

What are the three parts of a message? Which of them takes a comma rather than a ।? Who goes at the foot of the page?

105.5 No model — a whole message to a named reader

Close the preceding lesson. Wait ten seconds. Name the three parts of a message to yourself without looking at them.

Writing: produce the message from the cue alone

There is no Devanagari model and no romanized answer below. Keep only this cue:

> Write to Arun. Greet him, then say you will meet tomorrow. Put your own practice name at the foot.

Write all three parts from memory. Then compare in four separate passes:

1. three parts present, in order;
2. the comma after the opening and one । after each sentence;
3. spelling and vowel marks;
4. the name at the foot.

Choose the first differing pass, repair only that dimension, and stop.

Before you move on

Which part of a message names the reader? Which takes a comma rather than a ।? Whose name sits at the foot?
This is the short message the A1 writing task asks for in outline. It is not a timed mock, and its length is well under what that task sets.

105.6 (स, ऋ, चादर, खाना) — the last page, and a second look at ten things

Two characters, cold. Read स, then ऋ, and name the sound each one carries.

What you've built, and what this page does with it

Everything here has appeared twice in your reading: once where it was taught, and once on a retrieval page in this final stretch. A second pass is where memory starts holding without the book, and the widest gap on offer runs from the opening pages to this one.

Script: स and ऋ — one you read, one you also draw

स is sa, carrying the built-in short vowel every bare consonant has. You have read it inside words since the early script pages without once being asked to name it alone.

ऋ differs in two ways. It is an independent vowel — a full-size letter, for a vowel with no consonant to sit on — and your hand has to produce it, not only your eye. It sounds like ri in modern Hindi, and it opens ऋतु, season.

- Read it: स, and name the vowel inside it
- Write it: ऋ, without looking back at this line

You'll want to know: चादर, and the two meals

what you want	the Hindi	how it is put together
a sheet	चादर	one Persian word, taken whole
lunch	दोपहर का खाना	the afternoon's food
dinner	रात का खाना	the night's food

Say the bottom two aloud rather than reading them. Their difficulty was never vocabulary — every piece was yours already — but assembly at speed, when somebody asks what you ate.

The exchange — four of them, unprompted

The book opened with four, and an examiner opens with the same four:

1. the greeting, and the answer to a thank-you
2. the name trade, both sides, ending with the pleased-to-meet-you
3. the how-are-you, and a reply that returns it
4. the close — the final farewell, the warm one, or the casual one

No cue beyond those labels. Run each one whole, out loud, both parts.

Your turn

Page covered.

- Say it: the two named meals, in either order
- Say it: the word for a sheet
- Write it: ऋ
- Read it: स, and name it
- Say it: exchange 2 above, both sides
- Say it: exchange 3 above, both sides
- Say it: exchange 1, then exchange 4, back to back

Before you move on

Which of the two characters here is a vowel that stands on its own, and which meal is दोपहर का खाना? (ऋ; lunch.) Write ऋ one last time, then close the book.

Chapter 106

Not Feeling Well

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I am tired, have a cold or a cough, or am ill, and ask how someone is feeling.
> Complete HI-C106-tabiyat: say what is wrong and ask how someone feels.

106.1 थकान (thakān) — tiredness

> Before the new one: say the Hindi for a fever, then the Hindi for pain.

You'll want to know: थकान

थकान (thakān) — "tiredness".

आज बहुत थकान है — "I am very tired today", literally "today there is a lot of tiredness". The बहुत and आज are both yours already.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

थकान (thakān) is built on thaknā, "to get tired", with the ending -ān. CDIAL lists thaknā under a reconstructed sthakk*, "stop, halt", and calls its link with sthā-, "to stand", probable but not clear (CDIAL 13737).

What you've built

A first word for how the body feels at the end of a day.

Your turn

- Say it: thakān
- Say it: thakān, once more
- Say it: say āj bahut thakān hai
- Recall: say the Hindi for a fever, then the Hindi for pain, then say thakān again

Before you move on

What does थकान mean? ("Tiredness".) Say it once more.

106.2 ज़ुकाम (zukām) — a cold, a runny nose

Before the new one: say the Hindi for pain, then the Hindi for tiredness.

You'll want to know: ज़ुकाम

ज़ुकाम (zukām) — "a cold", the kind with a runny nose.

मुझे ज़ुकाम है — "I have a cold", literally "to me there is a cold". The person sits in मुझे, as in मुझे चाय चाहिए.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ज़ुकाम (zukām) is a loan from Arabic zukām, "a cold, catarrh", which reached Hindi through Persian. Its Arabic root is z-k-m (Lane).

What you've built

An illness, in the to-me frame you already use for wanting.

Your turn

- Say it: zukām
- Say it: zukām, once more
- Say it: say mujhe zukām hai

- Recall: say the Hindi for pain, then the Hindi for tiredness, then say zukām again

Before you move on

What does ज़ुकाम mean? ("A cold, a runny nose".) Say it once more.

106.3 खाँसी (khā̃sī) — a cough

Before the new one: say the Hindi for tiredness, then the Hindi for a cold.

You'll want to know: खाँसी

खाँसी (khā̃sī) — "a cough". It is feminine.
मुझे खाँसी है — "I have a cough". Same frame, new word in the middle.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खाँसी (khāṁsī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from kāsa, "cough" (CDIAL 3138). CDIAL notes the kh- as imitating the sound.

What you've built

A second complaint in the same frame.

Your turn

- Say it: khā̃sī
- Say it: khā̃sī, once more
- Say it: say mujhe khā̃sī hai
- Recall: say the Hindi for tiredness, then the Hindi for a cold, then say khā̃sī again

Before you move on

What does खाँसी mean? ("A cough".) Say it once more.

106.4 बीमार (bīmār) — ill, sick

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a cold, then the Hindi for a cough.

You'll want to know: बीमार

बीमार (bīmār) — "ill, sick".

मैं बीमार हूँ — "I am ill". This one describes you, so it takes मैं ... हूँ, not मुझे.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बीमार (bīmār) is a loan, usually traced to Persian bīmār, "ill, sick".

What you've built

The difference between having an illness and being ill.

Your turn

- Say it: bīmār
- Say it: bīmār, once more
- Say it: say maiṁ bīmār hūṁ
- Recall: say the Hindi for a cold, then the Hindi for a cough, then say bīmār again

Before you move on

What does बीमार mean? ("Ill, sick".) Say it once more.

106.5 तबीयत (tabīyat) — health, how one is feeling

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a cough, then the Hindi for ill.

You'll want to know: तबीयत

तबीयत (tabīyat) — "how one is feeling", one's health on the day.

आपकी तबीयत कैसी है? — "how are you feeling?", the question to ask someone who has been ill. तबीयत ठीक नहीं है — "I am not well".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तबीयत (tabīyat) is a loan from Arabic ṭabī^{c}a, "nature, temperament", which reached Hindi through Persian. Its Arabic root is ṭ-b-^{c} (Lane).

What you've built

The question after how are you, when you know someone has been unwell.

Your turn

- Say it: tabīyat
- Say it: tabīyat, once more
- Say it: ask āpkī tabīyat kaisī hai?
- Recall: say the Hindi for a cough, then the Hindi for ill, then say tabīyat again

Before you move on

What does तबीयत mean? ("Health, how one is feeling".) Say it once more.

Chapter 107

At the Doctor

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk to a doctor, find a hospital, say I am hurt or feel weak, and talk about health.
> Complete HI-C107-sehat: a visit to the doctor, from injury to health.

107.1 डाक्टर (ḍākṭar) — a doctor

What does ग़लत mean? ("Wrong, incorrect".) Say it once more.

112.3 पक्का (pakkā) — sure, certain; firm

Before the new one: say the Hindi for right, then the Hindi for wrong.

You'll want to know: पक्का

पक्का (pakkā) — "sure, certain", and of a thing, "firm, ripe".
पक्का? — "for sure?". पक्का! — "definitely!".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पक्का (pakkā) goes back to Sanskrit pakva, "cooked, ripe" (CDIAL 7621). CDIAL marks the Hindi form as taken over from Punjabi; "firm, sure" grew out of "ripe, mature".

What you've built

A question and an answer in one word.

Your turn

- Say it: pakkā
- Say it: pakkā, once more
- Say it: ask pakkā?, then answer pakkā!
- Recall: say the Hindi for right, then the Hindi for wrong, then say pakkā again

Before you move on

What does पक्का mean? ("Sure, certain; firm".) Say it once more.

112.4 सच में? (sac meṁ?) — really?

Before the new one: say the Hindi for wrong, then the Hindi for sure.

You'll want to know: सच में?

सच में? (sac meṁ?) — "really?", literally "in truth?".
सच is the "true" you know, with में, "in".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सच में? (sac meṁ?) is sac, "truth", with meṁ, "in". sac comes from Sanskrit satya, "true" (CDIAL 13112), and meṁ from madhye, "in, among" (CDIAL 9804).

What you've built

A way to show surprise.

Your turn

- Say it: sac meṁ?
- Say it: sac meṁ?, once more
- Say it: ask sac meṁ?
- Recall: say the Hindi for wrong, then the Hindi for sure, then say sac meṁ? again

Before you move on

What does सच में? mean? ("Really?".) Say it once more.

112.5 अरे (are) — oh!, hey!

Before the new one: say the Hindi for sure, then the Hindi for really.

You'll want to know: अरे

अरे (are) — "oh!", "hey!", a cry of surprise.
अरे, सच में? — "oh, really?". It is informal: use it with friends.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अरे (are) is inherited from Sanskrit are, "a call to someone", and has come down with almost no change (CDIAL 621). Sanskrit already had it in its oldest prose.

What you've built

Right, wrong, sure, really, oh: five reactions.

Your turn

- Say it: are
- Say it: are, once more
- Say it: say are, sac meṁ?
- Recall: say the Hindi for sure, then the Hindi for really, then say are again

Before you move on

What does अरे mean? ("Oh!, hey!".) Say it once more.

Chapter 113

Nothing, Not Yet, Maybe

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can answer with nothing, not yet, that's enough, that's the one, and maybe.
> Complete HI-C113-ho-sakta-hai: five short answers that close a question.

113.1 कुछ नहीं (kuch nahīṁ) — nothing

Before the new one: say the Hindi for really, then the Hindi for oh.

You'll want to know: कुछ नहीं

कुछ नहीं (kuch nahīṁ) — "nothing".

क्या हुआ? — कुछ नहीं. — "what happened? — nothing". It ends on the नहीं you know.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कुछ नहीं (kuch nahīṁ) is two tadbhavas. kuch, "something", comes from Sanskrit kiṁcid, "anything", taking its -ch- from the masculine kaścid (CDIAL 3144); nahīṁ comes from nahi, "surely not" (CDIAL 7035).

What you've built

An answer that closes a question kindly.

Your turn

- Say it: kuch nahīṁ
- Say it: kuch nahīṁ, once more
- Say it: say kuch nahīṁ
- Recall: say the Hindi for really, then the Hindi for oh, then say kuch nahīṁ again

Before you move on

What does कुछ नहीं mean? ("Nothing".) Say it once more.

113.2 अभी नहीं (abhī nahīṁ) — not yet, not now

Before the new one: say the Hindi for oh, then the Hindi for nothing.

You'll want to know: अभी नहीं

अभी नहीं (abhī nahīṁ) — "not yet", "not now".

Two words you own: अभी, "right now", and नहीं.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अभी नहीं (abhī nahīṁ) is abhī, "right now", with nahīṁ, "not". CDIAL lists ab and abhī under Sanskrit evam eva, "exactly so", crossed with the pronoun stem a- (CDIAL 2528); nahīṁ comes from nahi, "surely not" (CDIAL 7035).

What you've built

An answer from two old words.

Your turn

- Say it: abhī nahīṁ
- Say it: abhī nahīṁ, once more
- Say it: say abhī nahīṁ

- Recall: say the Hindi for oh, then the Hindi for nothing, then say abhī nahīṁ again

Before you move on

What does अभी नहीं mean? ("Not yet, not now".) Say it once more.

113.3 काफ़ी (kāfī) — enough; quite

Before the new one: say the Hindi for nothing, then the Hindi for not yet.

You'll want to know: काफ़ी

काफ़ी (kāfī) — "enough", and before an adjective, "quite".

बस, काफ़ी है — "that's enough", with the बस you know. काफ़ी अच्छा — "quite good".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

काफ़ी (kāfī) is a loan from Arabic kāfī, "sufficient", which reached Hindi through Persian. Its Arabic root is k-f-y (Lane).

What you've built

Enough, and quite.

Your turn

- Say it: kāfī
- Say it: kāfī, once more
- Say it: say bas, kāfī hai
- Recall: say the Hindi for nothing, then the Hindi for not yet, then say kāfī again

Before you move on

What does काफ़ी mean? ("Enough; quite".) Say it once more.

113.4 वही (vahī) — that very one, the same

Before the new one: say the Hindi for not yet, then the Hindi for enough.

You'll want to know: वही

वही (vahī) — "that very one", "the same".

It is वह, "that", with ही, "exactly". When someone names what you meant: हाँ, वही!

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वही (vahī) is वह, "that", with the emphatic -hī: "that one and no other". CDIAL lists vah under Sanskrit asau, "that" (CDIAL 972).

What you've built

That one, exactly.

Your turn

- Say it: vahī
- Say it: vahī, once more
- Say it: say hā̃, vahī!
- Recall: say the Hindi for not yet, then the Hindi for enough, then say vahī again

Before you move on

What does वही mean? ("That very one, the same".) Say it once more.

113.5 हो सकता है (ho saktā hai) — maybe, it could be

Before the new one: say the Hindi for enough, then the Hindi for that very one.

You'll want to know: हो सकता है

हो सकता है (ho saktā hai) — "maybe", literally "it can be".

It is होना, "to be", and the सकना of "can". Compare शायद, "perhaps".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हो सकता है (ho saktā hai) is "it can be". ho is a form of honā, "to be", from Sanskrit bhavati (CDIAL 9416), and saknā, "to be able", comes from śaknoti, "is able" (CDIAL 12252).

What you've built

Nothing, not yet, enough, that one, maybe.

Your turn

- Say it: ho saktā hai
- Say it: ho saktā hai, once more
- Say it: say ho saktā hai
- Recall: say the Hindi for enough, then the Hindi for that very one, then say ho saktā hai again

Before you move on

What does हो सकता है mean? ("Maybe, it could be".) Say it once more.

Chapter 114

Sorry, No Problem, Congratulations

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can apologise, answer an apology, congratulate, give good wishes, and talk about an invitation.
> Complete HI-C114-nimantran: the courtesies that come around a visit.

114.1 माफ़ी (māfī) — an apology, pardon

Before the new one: say the Hindi for that very one, then the Hindi for maybe.

You'll want to know: माफ़ी

माफ़ी (māfī) — "an apology, pardon", the noun.

माफ़ी चाहता हूँ — "I beg your pardon" (a woman says चाहती). It shares its root with माफ़ कीजिए.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

माफ़ी (māfī) is māf with -ī. māf is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic mu^{c}āf, "excused, let off", on the root ^{c}-f-w, "to pardon" (Lane). The same māf is inside māf kījie, "forgive me".

What you've built

The apology as a thing you ask for.

Your turn

- Say it: māfī
- Say it: māfī, once more
- Say it: say māfī cāhtā hūṁ
- Recall: say the Hindi for that very one, then the Hindi for maybe, then say māfī again

Before you move on

What does माफ़ी mean? ("An apology, pardon".) Say it once more.

114.2 कोई बात नहीं (koī bāt nahīṁ) — no problem, never mind

Before the new one: say the Hindi for maybe, then the Hindi for an apology.

You'll want to know: कोई बात नहीं

कोई बात नहीं (koī bāt nahīṁ) — "no problem", "never mind", literally "no matter".

It is the answer to माफ़ कीजिए, and to thanks for a small favour.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कोई बात नहीं (koī bāt nahīṁ) is "not any matter". koī comes from Sanskrit kaścid, "someone, anyone" (CDIAL 2967), and bāt, "matter, talk", from vārttā, "tidings, business" (CDIAL 11564).

What you've built

The answer to an apology.

Your turn

- Say it: koī bāt nahīṁ
- Say it: koī bāt nahīṁ, once more
- Say it: answer māf kījie with koī bāt nahīṁ
- Recall: say the Hindi for maybe, then the Hindi for an apology, then say koī bāt nahīṁ again

Before you move on

What does कोई बात नहीं mean? ("No problem, never mind".) Say it once more.

114.3 बधाई (badhāī) — congratulations

Before the new one: say the Hindi for an apology, then the Hindi for no problem.

You'll want to know: बधाई

बधाई (badhāī) — "congratulations".
बधाई हो! — "congratulations!", for an exam passed, a new job, a birth.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बधाई (badhāī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from vardhāpayati, "increases, gladdens, congratulates" (CDIAL 11383). CDIAL glosses the Hindi word "congratulations on the birth of a child".

What you've built

Praise for good news.

Your turn

- Say it: badhāī
- Say it: badhāī, once more

- Say it: say badhāī ho!
- Recall: say the Hindi for an apology, then the Hindi for no problem, then say badhāī again

Before you move on

What does बधाई mean? ("Congratulations".) Say it once more.

114.4 शुभकामनाएँ (śubhkāmnāẽ) — good wishes

Before the new one: say the Hindi for no problem, then the Hindi for congratulations.

You'll want to know: शुभकामनाएँ

शुभकामनाएँ (śubhkāmnāẽ) — "good wishes".

It opens on the शुभ of शुभ रात्रि, "auspicious". आपको शुभकामनाएँ — "good wishes to you".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

शुभकामनाएँ (śubhkāmnāẽ) is two Sanskrit words taken over whole, tatsamas: śubha, "auspicious, good", and kāmanā, "a wish", with the Hindi plural ending.

What you've built

Wishes for what is coming, beside congratulations for what is done.

Your turn

- Say it: śubhkāmnāẽ
- Say it: śubhkāmnāẽ, once more
- Say it: say āpko śubhkāmnāẽ
- Recall: say the Hindi for no problem, then the Hindi for congratulations, then say śubhkāmnāẽ again

Before you move on

What does शुभकामनाएँ mean? ("Good wishes".) Say it once more.

114.5 निमंत्रण (nimantraṇ) — an invitation

Before the new one: say the Hindi for congratulations, then the Hindi for good wishes.

You'll want to know: निमंत्रण

निमंत्रण (nimantraṇ) — "an invitation", the formal word.

निमंत्रण के लिए धन्यवाद — "thank you for the invitation", with के लिए and धन्यवाद.

A written invitation has the three parts of the short message you learned to write: the line that names the reader, प्रिय मीरा,; the sentences under it; and the writer's name at the foot.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

निमंत्रण (nimantraṇ) is Sanskrit nimantraṇa, "invitation", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama. CDIAL lists its verb, nimantrayate, "invites", whose inherited forms survive as nyotnā, "to invite" (CDIAL 7235).

What you've built

Sorry, no problem, congratulations, wishes, and thanks for an invitation.

Your turn

- Say it: nimantraṇ
- Say it: nimantraṇ, once more
- Say it: say nimantraṇ ke lie dhanyavād
- Recall: say the Hindi for congratulations, then the Hindi for good wishes, then say nimantraṇ again

Before you move on

What does निमंत्रण mean? ("An invitation".) Say it once more.

Chapter 115

Come In, Here You Are

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can welcome a guest in, offer something, answer by all means, and say no politely.
> Complete HI-R115-second-pass-courtesy: courtesies and reactions, from cold.

115.1 आइए (āie) — please come (in)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for good wishes, then the Hindi for an invitation.

You'll want to know: आइए

आइए (āie) — "please come", "come in".

It is आना, "to come", with the respectful -इए. आइए, आइए! — doubled, it is a warm welcome at the door.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आइए (āie) is the respectful command of आना, "to come". CDIAL lists the verb under Sanskrit āpayati, "causes to reach" (CDIAL 1200).

What you've built

A welcome at the door.

Your turn

- Say it: āie
- Say it: āie, once more
- Say it: say āie, āie!
- Recall: say the Hindi for good wishes, then the Hindi for an invitation, then say āie again

Before you move on

What does आइए mean? ("Please come (in)".) Say it once more.

115.2 पधारिए (padhārie) — please come (formal)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for an invitation, then the Hindi for please come in.

You'll want to know: पधारिए

पधारिए (padhārie) — "please come", in its most formal, honouring form.

The everyday āie comes first in this chapter; पधारिए is what you say to an honoured guest.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पधारिए (padhārie) is the respectful command of padhārnā, "to come, to grace with one's presence". CDIAL lists it under a reconstructed paddhārayati*, "steps", perhaps from pad, "foot", and dhārayati, "holds" (CDIAL 7768).

What you've built

A second welcome, for an honoured guest.

Your turn

- Say it: padhārie
- Say it: padhārie, once more

- Say it: say padhārie, then āie
- Recall: say the Hindi for an invitation, then the Hindi for please come in, then say padhārie again

Before you move on

What does पधारिए mean? ("Please come (formal)".) Say it once more.

115.3 लीजिए (līje) — please take; here you are

Before the new one: say the Hindi for please come in, then the Hindi for please come, formally.

You'll want to know: लीजिए

लीजिए (līje) — "please take", "here you are", as you hand something over.

It is लेना, "to take", with the respectful ending of बोलिए. चाय लीजिए — "have some tea".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

लीजिए (līje) is the respectful command of lenā, "to take". CDIAL lists lenā under Sanskrit labhate, "catches, takes" (CDIAL 10948).

What you've built

An offer as you hand it over.

Your turn

- Say it: līje
- Say it: līje, once more
- Say it: say cāy līje
- Recall: say the Hindi for please come in, then the Hindi for please come, formally, then say līje again

Before you move on

What does लीजिए mean? ("Please take; here you are".) Say it once more.

115.4 शौक़ से (śauq se) — by all means, gladly

Before the new one: say the Hindi for please come, formally, then the Hindi for here you are.

You'll want to know: शौक़ से

शौक़ से (śauq se) — "by all means", "gladly", literally "with pleasure".

The answer when someone asks if they may: क्या मैं बैठ सकता हूँ? — शौक़ से!

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

शौक़ से (śauq se) is "with relish". śauq comes from Arabic shawq, "longing, desire", which reached Hindi through Persian; its root is sh-w-q (Lane). se is inherited (CDIAL 13310).

What you've built

A generous yes.

Your turn

- Say it: śauq se
- Say it: śauq se, once more
- Say it: say śauq se!
- Recall: say the Hindi for please come, formally, then the Hindi for here you are, then say śauq se again

Before you move on

What does शौक़ से mean? ("By all means, gladly".) Say it once more.

115.5 जी नहीं (jī nahīṁ) — no, politely

Before the new one: say the Hindi for here you are, then the Hindi for by all means.

You'll want to know: जी नहीं

जी नहीं (jī nahīṁ) — "no", said politely.

It pairs with the जी हाँ you know: जी makes either answer respectful.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

जी नहीं (jī nahīṁ) is jī, the respectful word that CDIAL traces to Sanskrit jīva, "long live!" (CDIAL 5240), with nahīṁ, "not", from nahi, "surely not" (CDIAL 7035).

What you've built

Come in, please come, here you are, by all means, and a polite no.

Your turn

- Say it: jī nahīṁ
- Say it: jī nahīṁ, once more
- Say it: say jī nahīṁ
- Recall: say the Hindi for here you are, then the Hindi for by all means, then say jī nahīṁ again

Before you move on

What does जी नहीं mean? ("No, politely".) Say it once more.

115.6 A visit, start to finish — a second pass

A guest is at your door. Welcome them in, and hand them a cup of tea.

Grammar Lens: the respectful ending

word	from āie	come
लीजिए	take
पधारिए	arrive, formally

One ending turns a verb into a polite request, as it did for बोलिए.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- you bumped into someone: beg their pardon; they answer "no problem"
- congratulate a friend; then send them good wishes
- thank someone for an invitation
- a guest asks to sit: say "by all means"; offered more food, say a polite no

Before you move on

An apology? (माफ़ी.) No problem? (कोई बात नहीं.) Congratulations? (बधाई.) Good wishes? (शुभकामनाएँ.) An invitation? (निमंत्रण.) Come in? (āie.) Please come, formally? (पधारिए.) Here you are? (लीजिए.) By all means? (शौक़ से.) A polite no? (जी नहीं.)

115.7 Reacting and answering — a second pass

Someone gives an answer. Tell them it is right; then tell them it is wrong.

Grammar Lens: two words you already had, joined answer	built from

कुछ नहीं	something + not
अभी नहीं	right now + not
सच में?	truth + in
वही	that + exactly

Most short answers are two small words you already own, put side by side.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- react to surprising news: oh, really?
- ask if someone is sure; answer "definitely"
- asked what happened, say nothing; asked if you have finished, say not yet
- say that's enough; say "that's the one"; say maybe
- answer a request with "by all means", then with a polite no

Before you move on

Right? (सही.) Wrong? (ग़लत.) Sure? (पक्का.) Really? (सच में?) Oh? (अरे.) Nothing? (कुछ नहीं.) Not yet? (अभी नहीं.) Enough? (काफ़ी.) That very one? (वही.) Maybe? (हो सकता है.)

Chapter 116

Grandparents, and Which Side

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my four grandparents and my father's younger brother, and say which side of the family each is on.
> Complete HI-C116-chacha: introduce the family, side by side.

116.1 दादा (dādā) — grandfather, the father's father

Before the new one: say the Hindi for by all means, then the Hindi for a polite no.

You'll want to know: दादा

दादा (dādā) — "grandfather", your FATHER's father.

English has one word for both grandfathers; Hindi has two, and says which side of the family you mean. मेरे दादा — "my grandfather", with the respectful plural मेरे.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दादा (dādā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from dādda*, "father or other elderly relative", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 6261).

What you've built

A grandfather, on your father's side.

Your turn

- Say it: dādā
- Say it: dādā, once more
- Say it: say mere dādā
- Recall: say the Hindi for by all means, then the Hindi for a polite no, then say dādā again

Before you move on

What does दादा mean? ("Grandfather, the father's father".) Say it once more.

116.2 दादी (dādī) — grandmother, the father's mother

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a polite no, then the Hindi for the father's father.

You'll want to know: दादी

दादी (dādī) — "grandmother", your father's mother.

It pairs with दादा: the -ई ending marks the woman, as in बच्ची beside बच्चा.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दादी (dādī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from dādda*, "father or other elderly relative", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 6261). dādī is its feminine.

What you've built

The father's side, both grandparents.

Your turn

- Say it: dādī
- Say it: dādī, once more
- Say it: say mere dādā aur merī dādī
- Recall: say the Hindi for a polite no, then the Hindi for the father's father, then say dādī again

Before you move on

What does दादी mean? ("Grandmother, the father's mother".) Say it once more.

116.3 नाना (nānā) — grandfather, the mother's father

Before the new one: say the Hindi for the father's father, then the Hindi for the father's mother.

You'll want to know: नाना

नाना (nānā) — "grandfather", your MOTHER's father.

So दादा and नाना are both "grandfather" in English, and never the same man in Hindi.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

नाना (nānā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from nānna*, "a term of respect for an older relative", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 7059). CDIAL compares Sanskrit nanā, "mother".

What you've built

A grandfather, on your mother's side.

Your turn

- Say it: nānā
- Say it: nānā, once more
- Say it: say mere nānā
- Recall: say the Hindi for the father's father, then the Hindi for the father's mother, then say nānā again

Before you move on

What does नाना mean? ("Grandfather, the mother's father".) Say it once more.

116.4 नानी (nānī) — grandmother, the mother's mother

Before the new one: say the Hindi for the father's mother, then the Hindi for the mother's father.

You'll want to know: नानी

नानी (nānī) — "grandmother", your mother's mother.

नानी का घर — "grandmother's house", the mother's family home, where many summer holidays are spent.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

नानी (nānī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from nānna*, "a term of respect for an older relative", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 7059). nānī is its feminine. CDIAL compares Sanskrit nanā, "mother".

What you've built

All four grandparents, each with a name of their own.

Your turn

- Say it: nānī
- Say it: nānī, once more
- Say it: say nānī kā ghar
- Recall: say the Hindi for the father's mother, then the Hindi for the mother's father, then say nānī again

Before you move on

What does नानी mean? ("Grandmother, the mother's mother".) Say it once more.

116.5 चाचा (cācā) — uncle, the father's younger brother

Before the new one: say the Hindi for the mother's father, then the Hindi for the mother's mother.

You'll want to know: चाचा

चाचा (cācā) — "uncle", your father's younger brother.

Like the grandparents, an uncle's name says whose brother he is. मेरे चाचा — "my uncle".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चाचा (cācā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from cācca*, "uncle", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 4734). CDIAL suggests, with a query, a nursery word.

What you've built

Four grandparents and an uncle: the family says which side.

Your turn

- Say it: cācā

- Say it: cācā, once more
- Say it: say mere cācā
- Recall: say the Hindi for the mother's father, then the Hindi for the mother's mother, then say cācā again

Before you move on

What does चाचा mean? ("Uncle, the father's younger brother".) Say it once more.

Chapter 117

Aunts, Uncles, In-Laws

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name aunts and uncles on both sides, a brother's wife, and the home of the in-laws.

117.1 मौसी (mausī) — aunt, the mother's sister

Before the new one: say the Hindi for the mother's mother, then the Hindi for the father's younger brother.

You'll want to know: मौसी

मौसी (mausī) — "aunt", your mother's sister.

It is often explained as माँ जैसी, "like a mother": the aunt closest to a mother's place.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मौसी (mausī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from mātuḥṣvasṛ, "mother's sister" (CDIAL 10001). It is built from mātṛ, "mother", and svasṛ, "sister".

What you've built

An aunt, on your mother's side.

Your turn

- Say it: mausī
- Say it: mausī, once more
- Say it: say merī mausī
- Recall: say the Hindi for the mother's mother, then the Hindi for the father's younger brother, then say mausī again

117.2 बुआ (buā) — aunt, the father's sister

Before the new one: say the Hindi for the father's younger brother, then the Hindi for the mother's sister.

You'll want to know: बुआ

बुआ (buā) — "aunt", your father's sister.

मौसी and बुआ are both "aunt" in English; in Hindi the side of the family decides.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बुआ (buā) is close to the Hindi words phūphī and phūā, "father's sister", which CDIAL lists under a reconstructed phupphī* (CDIAL 9089). CDIAL does not list buā itself, so its exact path is uncertain.

What you've built

Both aunts, and the side each belongs to.

Your turn

- Say it: buā
- Say it: buā, once more

- Say it: say merī mausī aur merī buā
- Recall: say the Hindi for the father's younger brother, then the Hindi for the mother's sister, then say buā again

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बिलकुल नहीं (bilkul nahīṁ) is bilkul, "absolutely", with nahīṁ, "not". bilkul is Arabic bi-l-kull, "with the whole"; kull, "all", is on the root k-l-l (Lane).

What you've built

The strongest no.

Your turn

- Say it: bilkul nahīṁ
- Say it: bilkul nahīṁ, once more
- Say it: say bilkul nahīṁ

- Recall: say the Hindi for one more time, then the Hindi for don't know, then say bilkul nahīṁ again

Before you move on

What does बिलकुल नहीं mean? ("Not at all".) Say it once more.

127.3 सचमुच (sacmuc) — truly, really

Before the new one: say the Hindi for don't know, then the Hindi for not at all.

You'll want to know: सचमुच

सचमुच (sacmuc) — "truly, really".

It opens on the सच you know. सचमुच? — "really?", a stronger सच में?.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सचमुच (sacmuc) is sac, "true", from Sanskrit satya (CDIAL 13112), followed by a rhyming muc. CDIAL does not list the pair, and muc has no clear source.

What you've built

Truly.

Your turn

- Say it: sacmuc
- Say it: sacmuc, once more
- Say it: ask sacmuc?
- Recall: say the Hindi for don't know, then the Hindi for not at all, then say sacmuc again

Before you move on

What does सचमुच mean? ("Truly, really".) Say it once more.

127.4 अच्छा जी (acchā jī) — is that so?; all right then

Before the new one: say the Hindi for not at all, then the Hindi for truly.

You'll want to know: अच्छा जी

अच्छा जी (acchā jī) — "is that so?", or "all right then", by tone.

अच्छा is the "good" you know; alone it already means "oh, I see". जी makes it polite.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अच्छा जी (acchā jī) is acchā, "good", which goes back to Sanskrit accha, "clear", and reached Hindi through Punjabi (CDIAL 142), with the respectful jī, from jīva, "long live!" (CDIAL 5240).

What you've built

A polite way to show you are listening.

Your turn

- Say it: acchā jī
- Say it: acchā jī, once more
- Say it: say acchā jī
- Recall: say the Hindi for not at all, then the Hindi for truly, then say acchā jī again

Before you move on

What does अच्छा जी mean? ("Is that so?; all right then".) Say it once more.

127.5 चलेगा (calegā) — that'll do, that works

Before the new one: say the Hindi for truly, then the Hindi for is that so.

You'll want to know: चलेगा

चलेगा (calegā) — "that'll do", "that works", literally "it will go".

It is चलना, "to go", in the future. Offered a choice, चलेगा accepts it without fuss.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चलेगा (calegā) is the future of calnā, "to move, go", which comes from Sanskrit calati, "goes away" (CDIAL 4715). "It will go" means "it will do".

What you've built

Don't know, not at all, truly, is that so, that'll do.

Your turn

- Say it: calegā
- Say it: calegā, once more
- Say it: say calegā
- Recall: say the Hindi for truly, then the Hindi for is that so, then say calegā again

Before you move on

What does चलेगा mean? ("That'll do, that works".) Say it once more.

127.6 When you are lost, and short answers — a second pass

You did not understand. Say so, and ask for it once more.

Grammar Lens: two ways to say I don't know

phrase	literally
मुझे नहीं पता	to me, no knowing
मालूम नहीं	not known

Both keep the knower out of the subject slot, the way Hindi does for wanting.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ask what someone said; ask for it one more time
- say you don't know, two ways
- say "not at all"; then "truly?"
- show you are listening politely; accept a plan with "that'll do"

Before you move on

Once more? (फिर से.) Didn't understand? (समझ नहीं आया.) What did you say? (क्या कहा?) I don't know? (मुझे नहीं पता.) One more time? (एक बार और.) Don't know? (मालूम नहीं.) Not at all? (बिलकुल नहीं.) Truly? (सचमुच.) Is that so? (अच्छा जी.) That'll do? (चलेगा.)

127.7 What the body needs, and how you feel — a second pass

You have walked all afternoon. Say you are hungry, and thirsty.

Grammar Lens: things that come to you

phrase	literally
नींद आ रही है	sleep is coming
पसीना आ रहा है	sweat is coming
मज़ा आया	fun came

Sleep, sweat and fun all come to you, on आना.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- say you are sleepy; say you have a headache

- say you are sweating a lot
- ask a nervous friend to stay calm; say you feel restless
- say you don't feel like it today; then that you enjoyed it
- a friend offers a plan: "is that so?" then "that'll do"

Before you move on

Hungry? (भूखा.) Thirsty? (प्यासा.) Sleepy? (नींद आ रही है.) Sweat? (पसीना.) A headache? (सिरदर्द.) Calm? (शांत.) Nervousness? (घबराहट.) Restless? (बेचैन.) Not in the mood? (मन नहीं है.) Fun? (मज़ा.)

Chapter 128

Letters You Have Read All Along

Modes: 👁 eyes (2) ✓ pen (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write the short i sign, the letter i and the letter nya, and find each one in a word I already say.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 128: I can write the short i sign, the letter i and the letter nya, and find each one in a word I already say.

128.1 ि (i kī mātrā) — the short i sign in शुक्रिया

> Before the new one: write ड and ़ once each, and name them.
> Now say शुक्रिया (shukriyā), "thanks". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ि

ि — the short i sign.

It is inside शुक्रिया (shukriyā), "thanks", one of the first words in this book. Look at क्रि: the sign stands before the consonants and is said after them, kri. It is the one Hindi vowel sign written ahead of the sound it follows.

Writing: ि

Put your pen on ि and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at शुक्रिया and point at ि inside it
- Trace it: ि three times, saying i as you finish each one
- Write it: ़, then ि, from memory
- Read it: शुक्रिया aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ि? (i kī mātrā, i.) Which word did it come from? (शुक्रिया, shukriyā, "thanks".)

128.2 इ (i) — the letter inside दिखाइए

Before the new one: write ़ and ि once each, and name them.

Now say दिखाइए (dikhāie), "please show me". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: इ

इ — the letter i.

It is inside दिखाइए (dikhāie), "please show me". After ा comes another vowel, and a vowel that follows a vowel has no consonant to ride on, so it is written as its own letter. ि, from the last lesson, is the same vowel as a sign.

Writing: इ

How इ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: descend the upright from the headline
- 2. turn left and curve around the upper bowl without lifting
- 3. without lifting, sweep right through the waist and around the lower bowl
- 4. finish down-right through the tail without lifting
- 5. lift, then draw the shirorekha left-to-right — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 1.

Stroke order is one attested teaching order; hands and teachers vary. Source: Saurmandal, 'Devanagari इ stroke order.svg', panels 1–2, Wikimedia Commons, 5 August 2023.

Your turn

- Look: at दिखाइए and point at इ inside it
- Trace it: इ three times, saying i as you finish each one
- Write it: ि, then इ, from memory
- Read it: दिखाइए aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — इ? (i, i.) Which word did it come from? (दिखाइए, dikhāie, "please show me".)

128.3 ञ (ña) — the letter hidden inside ज्ञ

Before the new one: write ि and इ once each, and name them.

Now say संज्ञा (saṁjñā), "noun". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ञ

ञ — ña, a nasal made where j is made.

It is hidden inside संज्ञा (saṁjñā), "noun". The joined letter ज्ञ is ज and ञ written as one, and Hindi says the pair gy. You have been reading ञ inside that join without seeing it on its own.

Writing: ञ

How ञ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: sweep clockwise around the open-left bowl
- 2. lift, then sweep the shoulder right and rise to the headline
- 3. lift, then descend the short lower stem
- 4. lift, then draw the shirorekha left-to-right — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 3.

Stroke order is one attested teaching order; hands and teachers vary. Source: Opiaterein, 'Deva-ञ-order.gif', strokes 1–4, Wikimedia Commons, 10 May 2009.

Your turn

- Look: at संज्ञा and point at ञ inside it
- Trace it: ञ three times, saying ñ as you finish each one
- Write it: इ, then ञ, from memory
- Read it: संज्ञा aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ञ? (ña, ñ.) Which word did it come from? (संज्ञा, saṁjñā, "noun".)

128.4 (three letters) — From the letter to the word — a first pass

Say शुक्रिया (shukriyā), then write the letter it gave you.

Your turn

letter	name	the word it came from
ि	i kī mātrā	शुक्रिया shukriyā
इ	i	दिखाइए dikhāie
ञ	ña	संज्ञा saṁjñā

- Write it: each letter in the table from memory, then check it
- Say it: the word each one came from
- Read it: each word in the table aloud, and point at its letter

Before you move on

Which word did each letter come from? (ि from शुक्रिया; इ from दिखाइए; ञ from संज्ञा.)

128.5 (three letters) — From the word back to the letter — a second pass

Write ञ without looking, then say the word it came from.

Your turn

letter	name	the word it came from
ि	i kī mātrā	शुक्रिया shukriyā
इ	i	दिखाइए dikhāie
ञ	ña	संज्ञा saṁjñā

- Say it: each word in the table, then write the letter it gave you without looking
- Write it: each letter once more, slowly, larger than it is printed

Before you move on

Say each word in the table once more, and name the letter you took from it.

Chapter 129

Lock, Pillow, Blanket, Curtain, Bucket

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a lock, a pillow, a blanket, a curtain and a bucket.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 129: I can say a lock, a pillow, a blanket, a curtain and a bucket.

129.1 ताला (tālā) — a lock

Before the new one: say the Hindi for is that so?; all right then, then the Hindi for that'll do, that works.

Build two answers about yourself: मैं हिंदी बोलता हूँ and मैं भारत में रहता हूँ.

You'll want to know: ताला

ताला — tālā — "a lock".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ताला (tālā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from tāla, "latch, bolt" (CDIAL 5749). CDIAL compares a Tamil word for "bar, bolt, latch".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tālā
- Say it: tālā, once more
- Say it: say tālā
- Recall: say the Hindi for is that so?; all right then, then the Hindi for that'll do, that works, then say tālā again

Before you move on

What does ताला mean? ("A lock".) Say it once more.

129.2 तकिया (takiyā) — a pillow

Before the new one: say the Hindi for that'll do, that works, then the Hindi for a lock.

You'll want to know: तकिया

तकिया — takiyā — "a pillow".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तकिया (takiyā) is a loan, usually traced to Persian takya, "pillow, support", which Persian took from Arabic, on the root w-k-ʾ, "to lean" (Lane).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: takiyā
- Say it: takiyā, once more

- Say it: say takiyā
- Recall: say the Hindi for that'll do, that works, then the Hindi for a lock, then say takiyā again

Before you move on

What does तकिया mean? ("A pillow".) Say it once more.

129.3 कंबल (kambal) — a blanket

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a lock, then the Hindi for a pillow.

Build रहना from its pieces: र, ह, ना.

You'll want to know: कंबल

कंबल — kambal — "a blanket".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कंबल (kambal) goes back to Sanskrit kambala, "woollen blanket" (CDIAL 2771). CDIAL marks the Hindi form as taken over from Punjabi, and mentions a possible Austroasiatic source for the Sanskrit word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: kambal
- Say it: kambal, once more
- Say it: say kambal
- Recall: say the Hindi for a lock, then the Hindi for a pillow, then say kambal again

Before you move on

What does कंबल mean? ("A blanket".) Say it once more.

129.4 परदा (pardā) — a curtain

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a pillow, then the Hindi for a blanket.

You'll want to know: परदा

परदा — pardā — "a curtain".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

परदा (pardā) is a loan, usually traced to Persian parda, "curtain, veil".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pardā
- Say it: pardā, once more
- Say it: say pardā
- Recall: say the Hindi for a pillow, then the Hindi for a blanket, then say pardā again

Before you move on

What does परदा mean? ("A curtain".) Say it once more.

129.5 बाल्टी (bālṭī) — a bucket

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a blanket, then the Hindi for a curtain.

You'll want to know: बाल्टी

बाल्टी — bālṭī — "a bucket".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बाल्टी (bālṭī) is usually traced to Portuguese balde, "bucket".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bālṭī
- Say it: bālṭī, once more
- Say it: say bālṭī
- Recall: say the Hindi for a blanket, then the Hindi for a curtain, then say bālṭī again

Before you move on

What does बाल्टी mean? ("A bucket".) Say it once more.

Chapter 130

Hammer, Nail, Scissors, Thread, Comb

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a hammer, a nail, scissors, thread and a comb.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 130: I can say a hammer, a nail, scissors, thread and a comb.

130.1 हथौड़ा (hathauṛā) — a hammer

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a curtain, then the Hindi for a bucket.

You'll want to know: हथौड़ा

हथौड़ा — hathauṛā — "a hammer".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हथौड़ा (hathauṛā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from hastakūṭa*, "hand hammer", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 14028). It is built from hasta, "hand", and kūṭa, "hammer".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hathauṛā
- Say it: hathauṛā, once more
- Say it: say hathauṛā
- Recall: say the Hindi for a curtain, then the Hindi for a bucket, then say hathauṛā again

Before you move on

What does हथौड़ा mean? ("A hammer".) Say it once more.

130.2 कील (kīl) — a nail (to hammer)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a bucket, then the Hindi for a hammer.

You'll want to know: कील

कील — kīl — "a nail (to hammer)".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कील (kīl) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from kīla, "stake, peg" (CDIAL 3202). CDIAL notes that both an Indo-European and a non-Aryan source have been proposed.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: kīl
- Say it: kīl, once more
- Say it: say kīl

- Recall: say the Hindi for a bucket, then the Hindi for a hammer, then say kīl again

Before you move on

What does कील mean? ("A nail (to hammer)".) Say it once more.

130.3 कैंची (kaĩcī) — scissors

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a hammer, then the Hindi for a nail.

You'll want to know: कैंची

कैंची — kaĩcī — "scissors".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कैंची (kaĩcī) is usually traced, through Persian qaichī, "scissors", to Turkish.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: kaĩcī
- Say it: kaĩcī, once more
- Say it: say kaĩcī
- Recall: say the Hindi for a hammer, then the Hindi for a nail, then say kaĩcī again

Before you move on

What does कैंची mean? ("Scissors".) Say it once more.

130.4 धागा (dhāgā) — thread

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a nail, then the Hindi for scissors.

You'll want to know: धागा

धागा — dhāgā — "thread".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

धागा (dhāgā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from dhāgga*, "thread", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 6770). Where dhāgga* came from is not settled: CDIAL says it was possibly crossed with dhara, "a flock of raw cotton", but points as well to a second thread-word, trāgga*.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dhāgā
- Say it: dhāgā, once more
- Say it: say dhāgā
- Recall: say the Hindi for a nail, then the Hindi for scissors, then say dhāgā again

Before you move on

131.4 थैला (thailā) — a bag

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a broom, then the Hindi for a box.

You'll want to know: थैला

थैला — thailā — "a bag".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

थैला (thailā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from sthavi, "sack, bag" (CDIAL 13746). The -l- is an added suffix; the Sanskrit word is known only from the old word-lists.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: thailā
- Say it: thailā, once more
- Say it: say thailā
- Recall: say the Hindi for a broom, then the Hindi for a box, then say thailā again

What does थैला mean? ("A bag".) Say it once more.

131.5 मोमबत्ती (mombattī) — a candle

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a box, then the Hindi for a bag.

You'll want to know: मोमबत्ती

मोमबत्ती — mombattī — "a candle".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मोमबत्ती (mombattī) is "wax-wick". mom, "wax", is usually traced to Persian mom, and battī, "wick", comes from Sanskrit varti, "wick" (CDIAL 11359).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mombattī
- Say it: mombattī, once more
- Say it: say mombattī
- Recall: say the Hindi for a box, then the Hindi for a bag, then say mombattī again

Before you move on

What does मोमबत्ती mean? ("A candle".) Say it once more.

132.1 माचिस (māchis) — matches

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a bag, then the Hindi for a candle.

You'll want to know: माचिस

माचिस — māchis — "matches".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

माचिस (māchis) is a loan from English matches.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: māchis
- Say it: māchis, once more
- Say it: say māchis

Describe with words that never bend: आसान, मुश्किल, सुंदर, बदसूरत.

You'll want to know: जवान

जवान — javān — "young".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

जवान (javān) is usually taken as a loan from Persian javān, "young". That may not be the whole story: CDIAL lists a Hindi juwān, "a youth", under yuvāna*, "young", a form it builds on the Sanskrit yuvan, "young" (CDIAL 10510). So Hindi may have this word by an inherited road as well as a borrowed one.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: javān

Before the new one: say the Hindi for the police, then the Hindi for a pharmacy.

You'll want to know: रोगी

रोगी — rogī — "a patient, a sick person".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रोगी (rogī) is Sanskrit rogin, "sick", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama. Hindi took its nominative, rogī. It is built on roga, "disease".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rogī
- Say it: rogī, once more
- Say it: say rogī
- Recall: say the Hindi for the police, then the Hindi for a pharmacy, then say rogī again

Before you move on

What does रोगी mean? ("A patient, a sick person".) Say it once more.

273.4 रोग (rog) — a disease

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a pharmacy, then the Hindi for a patient.

You'll want to know: रोग

रोग — rog — "a disease".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रोग (rog) is Sanskrit roga, "disease", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama (CDIAL 10829).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rog
- Say it: rog, once more
- Say it: say rog
- Recall: say the Hindi for a pharmacy, then the Hindi for a patient, then say rog again

Before you move on

What does रोग mean? ("A disease".) Say it once more.

273.5 बीमारी (bīmārī) — an illness

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a patient, then the Hindi for a disease.

You'll want to know: बीमारी

बीमारी — bīmārī — "an illness".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बीमारी (bīmārī) is bīmār, "sick", usually traced to Persian bīmār, with the ending -ī that makes a noun.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bīmārī
- Say it: bīmārī, once more
- Say it: say bīmārī
- Recall: say the Hindi for a patient, then the Hindi for a disease, then say bīmārī again

Before you move on

What does बीमारी mean? ("An illness".) Say it once more.

Chapter 274

A heartbeat, Breath, An itch, A burning feeling, A swelling

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a heartbeat, breath, an itch, a burning feeling and a swelling.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 274: I can say a heartbeat, breath, an itch, a burning feeling and a swelling.

274.1 धड़कन (dhaṛkan) — a heartbeat

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a disease, then the Hindi for an illness.

You'll want to know: धड़कन

धड़कन — dhaṛkan — "a heartbeat".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

धड़कन (dhaṛkan) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from dhaḍ*, "throb, beat", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 6711). dhaṛkan is the noun of dhaṛaknā, "to throb".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dhaṛkan
- Say it: dhaṛkan, once more
- Say it: say dhaṛkan
- Recall: say the Hindi for a disease, then the Hindi for an illness, then say dhaṛkan again

Before you move on

What does धड़कन mean? ("A heartbeat".) Say it once more.

274.2 साँस (sā̃s) — breath

Before the new one: say the Hindi for an illness, then the Hindi for a heartbeat.

You'll want to know: साँस

साँस — sā̃s — "breath".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

साँस (sāṁs) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from śvāsa, "breath, breathing" (CDIAL 12769).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sā̃s
- Say it: sā̃s, once more
- Say it: say sā̃s
- Recall: say the Hindi for an illness, then the Hindi for a heartbeat, then say sā̃s again

Before you move on

What does साँस mean? ("Breath".) Say it once more.

274.3 खुजली (khujlī) — an itch

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a heartbeat, then the Hindi for breath.

You'll want to know: खुजली

खुजली — khujlī — "an itch".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खुजली (khujlī) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from kharju, "itching, scab" (CDIAL 3827). CDIAL takes the word from Dravidian. The Sanskrit word is known only from the old word-lists.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: khujlī
- Say it: khujlī, once more
- Say it: say khujlī
- Recall: say the Hindi for a heartbeat, then the Hindi for breath, then say khujlī again

Before you move on

What does खुजली mean? ("An itch".) Say it once more.

274.4 जलन (jalan) — a burning feeling

Before the new one: say the Hindi for breath, then the Hindi for an itch.

You'll want to know: जलन

जलन — jalan — "a burning feeling".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

जलन (jalan) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from jvalana, "burning" (CDIAL 5307).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: jalan
- Say it: jalan, once more
- Say it: say jalan
- Recall: say the Hindi for breath, then the Hindi for an itch, then say jalan again

Before you move on

What does जलन mean? ("A burning feeling".) Say it once more.

274.5 सूजन (sūjan) — a swelling

Before the new one: say the Hindi for an itch, then the Hindi for a burning feeling.

You'll want to know: सूजन

सूजन — sūjan — "a swelling".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सूजन (sūjan) is the noun of sūjnā, "to swell", which comes from Sanskrit śūyate, "is swollen" (CDIAL 12568).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sūjan
- Say it: sūjan, once more
- Say it: say sūjan
- Recall: say the Hindi for an itch, then the Hindi for a burning feeling, then say sūjan again

Before you move on

What does सूजन mean? ("A swelling".) Say it once more.

Chapter 275

A sprain, A hiccup, A nap, Turning over, A stretch

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a sprain, a hiccup, a nap, turning over and a stretch.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 275: I can say a sprain, a hiccup, a nap, turning over and a stretch.

275.1 मोच (moc) — a sprain

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a burning feeling, then the Hindi for a swelling.

You'll want to know: मोच

मोच — moc — "a sprain".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of मोच (moc) is uncertain. CDIAL has a reconstructed mocc*, "twist, wring" (CDIAL 10351), but lists no Hindi form under it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: moc
- Say it: moc, once more
- Say it: say moc
- Recall: say the Hindi for a burning feeling, then the Hindi for a swelling, then say moc again

Before you move on

What does मोच mean? ("A sprain".) Say it once more.

275.2 हिचकी (hickī) — a hiccup

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a swelling, then the Hindi for a sprain.

You'll want to know: हिचकी

हिचकी — hickī — "a hiccup".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हिचकी (hickī) belongs with Hindi hīk, "hiccup", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit hikkā, "hiccup" (CDIAL 14075). The word imitates the sound.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hickī
- Say it: hickī, once more
- Say it: say hickī
- Recall: say the Hindi for a swelling, then the Hindi for a sprain, then say hickī again

Before you move on

What does हिचकी mean? ("A hiccup".) Say it once more.

275.3 झपकी (jhapkī) — a nap

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a sprain, then the Hindi for a hiccup.

You'll want to know: झपकी

झपकी — jhapkī — "a nap".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of झपकी (jhapkī) is uncertain. It may belong with jhapaknā, which CDIAL lists under a reconstructed jhapp*, "sudden movement" (CDIAL 5336).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: jhapkī
- Say it: jhapkī, once more
- Say it: say jhapkī
- Recall: say the Hindi for a sprain, then the Hindi for a hiccup, then say jhapkī again

Before you move on

What does झपकी mean? ("A nap".) Say it once more.

275.4 करवट (karvaṭ) — turning over (in bed)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a hiccup, then the Hindi for a nap.

You'll want to know: करवट

करवट — karvaṭ — "turning over (in bed)".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

करवट (karvaṭ) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from kaṭavṛtti*, "turning on one's side", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 2635). It is built from kaṭi, "hip", and vṛtti, "turning".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: karvaṭ
- Say it: karvaṭ, once more
- Say it: say karvaṭ
- Recall: say the Hindi for a hiccup, then the Hindi for a nap, then say karvaṭ again

Before you move on

What does करवट mean? ("Turning over (in bed)".) Say it once more.

275.5 अंगड़ाई (aṅgṛāī) — a stretch (of the body)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a nap, then the Hindi for turning over.

You'll want to know: अंगड़ाई

अंगड़ाई — aṅgṛāī — "a stretch (of the body)".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अंगड़ाई (aṅgṛāī) is built on aṅg, "limb, body", from Sanskrit aṅga (CDIAL 114), but CDIAL does not list the word itself, so its exact path is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aṅgṛāī
- Say it: aṅgṛāī, once more
- Say it: say aṅgṛāī
- Recall: say the Hindi for a nap, then the Hindi for turning over, then say aṅgṛāī again

Before you move on

What does अंगड़ाई mean? ("A stretch (of the body)".) Say it once more.

275.6 Words from chapters 270-272 — a first pass

Say the words for turning over and a stretch.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a grater, a lid, a jug, a water jar, a clay pot
- an office, insurance, interest, a tenant, a neighbourhood
- a lane, a street corner, a fair, a procession, a speech

Before you move on

A grater? (कद्दूकस, kaddūkas.) A lid? (ढक्कन, dhakkan.) A jug? (जग, jag.) A water jar? (सुराही, surāhī.) A clay pot? (मटका, maṭkā.) An office? (कार्यालय, kāryālay.) Insurance? (बीमा, bīmā.) Interest? (ब्याज, byāj.) A tenant? (किरायेदार, kirāyedār.) A neighbourhood? (मोहल्ला, mohallā.) A lane? (गली, galī.) A street corner? (नुक्कड़, nukkaṛ.) A fair? (मेला, melā.) A procession? (जुलूस, jalūs.) A speech? (भाषण, bhāṣaṇ.)

275.7 Words from chapters 273-275 — a second pass

Say the words for the police and a pharmacy.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the police, a pharmacy, a patient, a disease, an illness
- a heartbeat, breath, an itch, a burning feeling, a swelling
- a sprain, a hiccup, a nap, turning over, a stretch

Before you move on

The police? (पुलिस, pulis.) A pharmacy? (दवाख़ाना, davākhānā.) A patient? (रोगी, rogī.) A disease? (रोग, rog.) An illness? (बीमारी, bīmārī.) A heartbeat? (धड़कन, dhaṛkan.) Breath? (साँस, sā̃s.) An itch? (खुजली, khujlī.) A burning feeling? (जलन, jalan.) A swelling? (सूजन, sūjan.) A sprain? (मोच, moc.) A hiccup? (हिचकी, hickī.) A nap? (झपकी, jhapkī.) Turning over? (करवट, karvaṭ.) A stretch? (अंगड़ाई, aṅgṛāī.)

Chapter 276

What Happened, and Who Did It

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what happened (vah gayā, vah āī) and who did something, with ne and a verb that follows the thing (usne roṭī khāī).
> Complete HI-R276-what-happened: say what happened and who did it, in the past.

276.1 वह गया (vah gayā) — the past, by who did it

Before the new one: say turning over and a stretch. (karvaṭ, aṅgṛāī.) Then the host's question खाना खाया?, "have you eaten?" Its खाया is a past, and this chapter builds every past like it.

You'll want to know: the past, by who did it

> कल मैं बाज़ार गया।
> kal maiṁ bāzār gayā. — "Yesterday I went to the market."

With a past, कल is yesterday. गया is जाना in the past, with no है after it. Its ending follows the one who went, as अच्छा, अच्छी, अच्छे follow a noun:

who went	the past
a man: मैं, वह	गया (gayā)
a woman	गई (gaī)
men, or आप, तुम, हम	गए (gae)
women	गईं (gaīṁ)

You'll want to know: how a stem takes the ending

Most verbs put the ending on the stem: बैठना → वह बैठा, वह बैठी (vah baiṭhā, vah baiṭhī). A stem ending in a vowel adds -या for a man: आना → आया, आई (āyā, āī). Two change the stem: जाना → गया, and होना → हुआ, हुई (huā, huī): क्या हुआ?, "what happened?"

"Did not": मैं नहीं गया (maiṁ nahīṃ gayā). A bare stem with गया says the change is complete, as in देर हो गई and वह सो गया (vah so gayā), "he fell asleep".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "She came home in the evening" — vah śām ko ghar āī
- "We sat down. Then we slept." — ham baiṭhe. phir ham soe.

Before you move on

"He came"? (आया.) "She went"? (गई.) "What happened?" (क्या हुआ?) "I didn't go"? (मैं नहीं गया.)

276.2 उसने रोटी खाई (usne roṭī khāī) — the past that follows the thing

Say "she went". (vah gaī.) खाना खाया? leaves the eater out; this lesson puts the eater in.

Grammar Lens: the doer takes ने

उसने खाना खाया।

usne khānā khāyā. — "He (or she) ate the meal."

With a verb that has an object, such as eating, reading or saying, the past changes: the doer takes ने (ne). The pronouns fuse with it: मैंने, तुमने, आपने, उसने, हमने, उन्होंने (maiṁne, tumne, āpne, usne, hamne, unhoṁne), the last from वे. A name takes ने after it: मीरा ने. उसने is "he" or "she"; the verb no longer says which.

You'll want to know: the verb follows the thing

मीरा ने रोटी खाई।

Mīrā ne roṭī khāī. — "Mira ate a roti."

रोटी is feminine, so खाई, whoever ate it. With खाना, masculine, खाया; with books, मैंने किताबें पढ़ीं (maiṁne kitābeṁ paṛhīṁ). When the thing takes को, or there is none, the verb stays -आ: उसने मीरा को देखा (usne Mīrā ko dekhā), "he saw Mira".

sentence	the verb follows
वह गई — no thing	the one who went
उसने रोटी खाई — ने and a thing	the thing
उसने मीरा को देखा — the thing has को	nothing: -आ

Four verbs make this past their own way, for a masculine thing and a feminine one: किया / की, दिया / दी, लिया / ली, पिया / पी (kiyā / kī, diyā / dī, liyā / lī, piyā / pī), from करना, देना, लेना and पीना.

कहना (kahnā), "to say", is regular. Your क्या कहा? was its past: उसने कहा कि वह कल आएगा (usne kahā ki vah kal āegā), "he said he would come tomorrow". लाना, "to bring", does not take ने: वह फल लाया (vah phal lāyā).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Mira drank tea" — Mīrā ne cāy pī
- "She saw Arun" — usne Aruṇ ko dekhā

Before you move on

Why खाई in उसने रोटी खाई? (रोटी is feminine.) Now the other way: "he ate the meal"? (उसने खाना खाया.) Why देखा in उसने मीरा को देखा? (The thing has को.) "He said"? (उसने कहा.)

276.3 Review — what happened, and who did it

Say "Yesterday I went to the market". (kal maiṁ bāzār gayā.)
Then "she came" and "what happened?" (vah āī, kyā huā?)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- I came home in the evening, and then I slept.
- Mira ate a roti. Arun ate the meal.
- What did you do yesterday? I went to the market.
- She saw Arun at the station.
- He said that he would come tomorrow.

Before you move on

Which past follows the one who went? (A verb with no thing: वह गई.) Which follows the thing? (The past with ने: मीरा ने रोटी खाई.) Now the other way round: in उसने खाना खाया, which word tells you that खाना is masculine? (खाया.) And when the thing takes को? (The verb stays -आ: उसने मीरा को देखा.)

Chapter 277

What Will Happen

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what will happen, for every person (karūṅgā, karoge, karegā, kareṅge), and what will be (hogā, hogī).
> Complete HI-R277-what-will-happen: say what will happen and what will be.

277.1 वह करेगा (vah karegā) — the future, for every person

Say "I will do", then "he will come", "they will come" and "you will come". (karūṅgā, āegā, āeṅge, āoge.) They are four cells of one grid. This lesson fills in the rest.

You'll want to know: the whole grid

> कल मैं बाज़ार जाऊँगा।
> kal maiṁ bāzār jāūṅgā. — "Tomorrow I will go to the market."

who	करना	जाना
मैं	करूँगा / करूँगी	जाऊँगा / जाऊँगी
तुम	करोगे / करोगी	जाओगे / जाओगी
आप	करेंगे / करेंगी	जाएँगे / जाएँगी
वह	करेगा / करेगी	जाएगा / जाएगी
हम	करेंगे	जाएँगे
वे	करेंगे / करेंगी	जाएँगे / जाएँगी

After the stem comes a vowel for the person: ऊँ for I, ओ for तुम, ए for he or she, एँ for several or for आप. Then -गा, -गी or -गे, which follows the gender as था, थी, थे do. A man says करूँगा, a woman करूँगी.

लेना and देना shorten the stem: मैं लूँगा (maiṁ lūṅgā), वह लेगा (vah legā), हम लेंगे (ham leṅge); मैं दूँगा (maiṁ dūṅgā), वह देगा (vah degā). पीना gives वह पिएगा (vah piegā).

"Will not" puts नहीं in front: मैं नहीं जाऊँगा (maiṁ nahīṁ jāūṅgā).

You'll want to know: होगा, will be कल बारिश होगी।

kal bāriś hogī. — "It will rain tomorrow."

है and था have a future too: होगा (hogā), होगी (hogī), होंगे (hoṅge). It follows its subject as था, थी, थे do. बारिश is feminine, so होगी.

- वह घर पर होगा (vah ghar par hogā) — he will be at home
- कल ठंड होगी (kal ṭhaṇḍ hogī) — it will be cold tomorrow
- मेरे दोस्त वहाँ होंगे (mere dost vahā̃ hoṅge) — my friends will be there

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Tomorrow I will go to the market" — kal maiṁ bāzār jāūṅgā
- "What will you do?", to a friend — tum kyā karoge?

Before you move on

"He will do"? (करेगा.) "We will go"? (जाएँगे.) "I will take"? (लूँगा, or लूँगी.) "It will rain"? (बारिश होगी: होगी, because बारिश is feminine.)

277.2 Review — what will happen

Say "Yesterday I went to the market". (kal maiṁ bāzār gayā.) Now move it: "Tomorrow I will go to the market". (kal maiṁ bāzār jāūṅgā.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Tomorrow I will go to the market, and then I will come home.
- Will you come?, to a friend. Yes, I will come.
- The train will come at five o'clock.
- It will be cold tomorrow, and it will rain.
- Arun and Mira will eat at home.

Before you move on

"You will go", to a friend? (जाओगे, or जाओगी.) "He will give"? (देगा.) "It will be"? (होगा, or होगी for a feminine thing.) "The train will come"? (ट्रेन आएगी: ट्रेन is feminine.)

Chapter 278

What Was Going On

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can set a scene in the past with kar rahā thā and jab … tab, and say last week or last year with pichlā.
> Complete HI-R278-the-scene-and-the-event: set a scene in the past and say what happened inside it.

278.1 मैं पढ़ रहा था (maiṁ paṛh rahā thā) — what was going on

Say "I am doing" and "he was". (maiṁ kar rahā hūṁ, vah thā.) Then "she came". (vah āī.) The first two make this lesson; the third will interrupt it.

You'll want to know: was …-ing

मैं किताब पढ़ रहा था।

maiṁ kitāb paṛh rahā thā. — "I was reading a book."

You know कर रहा हूँ, "I am doing". Put था where हूँ stood and the same action moves into the past. Both रहा and था follow the one doing it:

- मैं पढ़ रहा था (maiṁ paṛh rahā thā) — I was reading; a woman says मैं पढ़ रही थी (maiṁ paṛh rahī thī)
- वह सो रहा था (vah so rahā thā) — he was sleeping; वह सो रही थी (vah so rahī thī) — she was sleeping

- बारिश हो रही थी (bāriś ho rahī thī) — it was raining

There is no ने here, even with a thing: मैं खाना खा रहा था, never मैंने. ने belongs to the plain past alone.

Grammar Lens: a scene and an event

> जब मैं खाना खा रहा था, तब मीरा आई।
> jab maiṁ khānā khā rahā thā, tab Mīrā āī. — "When I was eating, Mira came."

A story needs two kinds of past. खा रहा था is the scene: it was going on, and the sentence does not say when it began or ended. आई is the event: it happened, once, inside the scene. जब ... तब ..., the frame you know for "when … then …", holds the two together.

- जब बारिश हो रही थी, तब बिजली गई। (jab bāriś ho rahī thī, tab bijlī gaī.) — While it was raining, the power went.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "What were you doing yesterday evening?" — tum kal śām ko kyā kar rahe the?
- "We were drinking tea when the power went" — jab ham cāy pī rahe the, tab bijlī gaī

Before you move on

"I was reading"? (मैं पढ़ रहा था, or पढ़ रही थी.) "It was raining"? (बारिश हो रही थी.) In जब मैं खाना खा रहा था, तब मीरा आई, which is the scene and which is the event? (खा रहा था is the scene; आई is the event.) Why no ने in मैं खाना खा रहा था? (ने belongs to the plain past alone.)

278.2 पिछला (pichlā) — last, previous

Before the new one: say "I was reading a book". (maiṁ kitāb paṛh rahā thā.) Then the words for a week and a year. (haftā, sāl.)

You'll want to know: पिछला

पिछला — pichlā — "last, previous": the one before this one.

> पिछले हफ़्ते मैं गाँव गया।
> pichle hafte maiṁ gā̃v gayā. — "Last week I went to the village."

पिछला is an adjective, and it agrees: पिछला हफ़्ता (pichlā haftā), "last week", but पिछली बार (pichlī bār), "last time", because बार is feminine.

Said as a time, "last week" or "last year" takes the form you met in बच्चे को: पिछले हफ़्ते, पिछले साल.

> पिछले साल हम बहुत व्यस्त थे।
> pichle sāl ham bahut vyast the. — "Last year we were very busy."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पिछला (pichlā) has no row of its own in CDIAL. It is usually connected with पीछे (pīche), "behind", which CDIAL traces to paśca*, "hinder part" (CDIAL 7990). The last week, on that picture, is the one behind you.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pichlā, then pichle hafte
- "Last week I went to the village" — pichle hafte maiṁ gā̃v gayā
- "Last time it was raining" — pichlī bār bāriś ho rahī thī

Before you move on

What does पिछला mean? ("Last, previous".) "Last year"? (पिछले साल.) "Last time"? (पिछली बार: बार is feminine.)

278.3 Review — the scene and the event

Say "I was reading a book". (maiṁ kitāb paṛh rahā thā.) Then "last week" and "last time". (pichle hafte, pichlī bār.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Last week I went to the village.
- What were you doing yesterday evening? I was cooking.
- When we were drinking tea, Arun came.
- It was raining, and suddenly the power went.
- Last year Mira read many books.

Before you move on

Which past is the scene? (रहा था: बारिश हो रही थी.) Which is the event? (The plain past: मीरा आई.) "Last year she read many books"? (पिछले साल उसने बहुत किताबें पढ़ीं: ने, and पढ़ीं for the books.)

Chapter 279

Telling It in Order

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell a story in order with pahle, phir, uske bād and ākhir meṁ, join actions with -kar, and read a short story.
> Complete HI-R279-a-story-in-order: tell a short story in order, after reading Mira's holiday in the village.

279.1 खाना खाकर (khānā khākar) — one action, then the next

You met -कर with देखकर and करके: मैं किताब देखकर आता हूँ, "I'll look at the book and come". Say it once. Then "she came". (vah āī.)

This lesson takes -कर into the past, where stories are told.

You'll want to know: -कर in a story

मैंने हाथ धोकर खाना खाया।

maiṁne hāth dhokar khānā khāyā. — "I washed my hands and ate."

One doer, two actions, in the order they happened. The first drops its -ना and takes -कर; only the last verb carries the past. करना still gives करके.

The last verb decides ने. If it takes a thing, the doer takes ने: मैंने हाथ धोकर खाना खाया. If it does not, there is no ने, though something was eaten on the way: मैं खाना खाकर सो गया (maiṁ khānā khākar so gayā), "I ate and fell asleep".

- वह सुबह उठकर नहाया। (vah subah uṭhkar nahāyā.) — He got up in the morning and bathed.
- मीरा ने घर आकर चाय पी। (Mīrā ne ghar ākar cāy pī.) — Mira came home and drank tea.

You'll want to know: after doing

> नाश्ते के बाद हम बाज़ार गए।
> nāśte ke bād ham bāzār gae. — "After breakfast we went to the market."

के बाद, "after", follows a noun in its oblique form: नाश्ते के बाद. It follows a verb too, as के लिए does in करने के लिए: the -ना becomes -ने.

- खाना खाने के बाद (khānā khāne ke bād) — after eating
- काम करने के बाद मैं घर आया। (kām karne ke bād maiṁ ghar āyā.) — After work I came home.

-कर needs one doer for both actions. When the doers differ, tell it in two sentences, or with जब ... तब ....

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I washed my hands and ate" — maiṁne hāth dhokar khānā khāyā
- "Mira came home and drank tea" — Mīrā ne ghar ākar cāy pī

Before you move on

How many verbs in a -कर sentence carry the past? (One: the last.) Which verb decides ने? (The last: मैंने हाथ धोकर खाना खाया, but मैं खाना खाकर सो गया.) "After breakfast"? (नाश्ते के बाद.) "After eating"?

(खाना खाने के बाद.)

279.2 आख़िर (ākhir) — at last, in the end

Before the new one: say "I ate and fell asleep". (maiṁ khānā khākar so gayā.) A story needs a word for its last step, and for a wait that ends.

You'll want to know: आख़िर

आख़िर — ākhir — "at last, finally".

दो घंटे के बाद आख़िर ट्रेन आई। do ghaṇṭe ke bād ākhir ṭren āī. — "After two hours the train came at last."

With में it closes a story: आख़िर में (ākhir meṁ), "in the end".

आख़िर में हम घर पहुँचे।

ākhir meṁ ham ghar pahũce. — "In the end we reached home."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आख़िर (ākhir) is usually traced to Arabic ākhir, "last, the end", which reached Hindi through Persian. Its ख़, with the dot below, is the letter Hindi writes in many words that came this way.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ākhir, then ākhir meṁ
- "After two hours the train came at last" — do ghaṇṭe ke bād ākhir ṭren āī
- "In the end we reached home" — ākhir meṁ ham ghar pahũce

Before you move on

What does आख़िर mean? ("At last, finally".) "In the end"? (आख़िर में.)

279.3 पहले ... फिर ... (pahle ... phir ...) — first, then, after that, in the end

You know पहले, "first, earlier", and फिर, "again, then". Say both. Then "in the end". (ākhir meṁ.)

You'll want to know: the order words

पहले मैं स्टेशन गया, फिर मैंने टिकट लिया। pahle maiṁ sṭeśan gayā, phir maiṁne ṭikaṭ liyā. — "First I went to the station, then I bought a ticket."

A story marks its steps:

step	the word
the first	पहले (pahle)
the next	फिर (phir)
the one after	उसके बाद (uske bād)
the last	आख़िर में (ākhir meṁ)

Each one opens its sentence, and the verb after it is the plain past. टिकट is masculine, so लिया.

You'll want to know: उसके बाद

उसके बाद is "after that": उस, the form वह takes before a postposition, as in उसका, then के बाद. इसके बाद (iske bād), "after this", is built the same way, on इस, the form यह takes before a postposition.

उसके बाद हम गाड़ी में बैठे। uske bād ham gāṛī meṁ baiṭhe. — "After that we got on the train."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "First we ate, then we went to the market" — pahle hamne khānā khāyā, phir ham bāzār gae
- "After that I went home" — uske bād maiṁ ghar gayā

Before you move on

Which word opens the first step? (पहले.) The next? (फिर.) "After that"? (उसके बाद.) The last? (आख़िर में.) Which past follows them? (The plain past.)

279.4 (reading) — a summer holiday in the village

Eighty-nine words, every one met before. Mira is writing. She went to her village last summer, and she tells it in order.

Read this

पिछले साल गर्मी की छुट्टी में मैं अपने गाँव गई। मुझे गाँव बहुत पसंद है। पहले मैंने स्टेशन पर टिकट लिया। फिर मैं गाड़ी में बैठी। गाड़ी में मैं एक किताब पढ़ रही थी। अचानक तेज़ बारिश हुई। शाम को मैं गाँव पहुँची। वहाँ दादी खाना बना रही थीं। मैंने हाथ धोकर दादी के साथ खाना खाया। खाना खाने के बाद दादी ने मुझे एक कहानी सुनाई। उसके बाद मैं छत पर गई। आसमान में बहुत तारे थे। आख़िर में मैं थककर सो गई। वह दिन बहुत अच्छा था।

Read it: the passage once without stopping; do not translate
Read it: the passage again, and sort every past verb: a scene or an event

Why it's said this way

गई, बैठी and पहुँची end in -ई: Mira is a woman, and these verbs have no thing. मैंने टिकट लिया and मैंने ... खाना खाया follow the thing, and टिकट and खाना are masculine. दादी ने मुझे एक कहानी सुनाई follows कहानी, which is feminine; मुझे is the one it was told to.

पढ़ रही थी and बना रही थीं are the scene. थीं, with the dot, is for the grandmother, said with respect. तेज़ बारिश is heavy rain: तेज़ is "fast, sharp", and rain can be sharp.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- what Mira did first, at the station
- what her grandmother was doing when she arrived
- how the day ended, with ākhir meṁ

Before you move on

Why is बना रही थीं in the scene form? (The cooking was going on when Mira arrived.) Which words keep the steps in order? (पहले, फिर, उसके बाद, आख़िर में.)

279.5 Review — a story in order

Say "I washed my hands and ate". (maiṁne hāth dhokar khānā khāyā.) Then tell this morning in two steps, with पहले and फिर.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- First I got up, then I bathed.
- After breakfast I went to the station and bought a ticket.
- I was reading on the train when it suddenly rained.
- After that we sat in the courtyard, and in the end we slept.
- Mira's holiday in four sentences, with pahle, phir, uske bād and ākhir meṁ.

Before you move on

"I ate and fell asleep"? (मैं खाना खाकर सो गया: no ने, because सो गया has no thing.) "After eating"? (खाना खाने के बाद.) "After that"? (उसके बाद.) "At last"? (आख़िर.) Who told Mira a story, and why सुनाई? (Her grandmother: दादी ने ... कहानी सुनाई, and कहानी is feminine.)

Chapter 280

What I Think, and Why

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I think with mujhe lagtā hai ki and merī rāy meṁ, give a reason with kī vajah se and ke kāraṇ, and read and write ऐ in aisā.
> Complete HI-R280-opinion-and-reason: say what you think and give a reason for it.

280.1 लगना (lagnā) — to seem, to be felt

Before the new one: say "nice to meet you" the way you say it as you part. (मिलकर अच्छा लगा, milkar acchā lagā.) Then "I have been hurt". (मुझे चोट लगी है.) लगा and लगी belong to the verb in this lesson.

You'll want to know: लगना

लगना — lagnā — "to seem; to be felt".

> मुझे भूख लगी है।
> mujhe bhūkh lagī hai. — "I'm hungry."

Word for word, "hunger has struck me". The one who feels it takes मुझे, as in मुझे चाय चाहिए, and the verb follows the thing felt: भूख is feminine, so लगी.

यह खाना मुझे अच्छा लगता है।

yah khānā mujhe acchā lagtā hai. — "I like this food."

Word for word, "this food seems good to me". खाना is masculine, so लगता. It says much what मुझे ... पसंद है says.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

लगना (lagnā) is a tadbhava. CDIAL traces it to Sanskrit lagyati, "adheres to" (CDIAL 10895), and gives "to be attached to" as a Hindi sense: a hunger, a hurt or a liking attaches itself to the one who feels it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- lagnā, then mujhe bhūkh lagī hai
- "I'm thirsty" — mujhe pyās lagī hai
- "I like this food" — yah khānā mujhe acchā lagtā hai

Before you move on

What does लगना mean? ("To seem, to be felt".) "I'm hungry"? (मुझे भूख लगी है.) Why लगी? (भूख is feminine, and the verb follows the thing felt.)

280.2 ऐसा (aisā) — like this, such

Before the new one: ask "How are you?" (आप कैसे हैं?) कैसा asks "what kind?". This lesson's word answers it.

You'll want to know: ऐसा

ऐसा — aisā — "like this, such; so".

मुझे ऐसा लगता है।

mujhe aisā lagtā hai. — "I think so."

Word for word, "it seems so to me". ऐसा agrees, as कैसा does: ऐसा, ऐसी, ऐसे (aisā, aisī, aise).

> ऐसा मत करो।
> aisā mat karo. — "Don't do that."

- ऐसी बात (aisī bāt) — such a thing; बात is feminine
- ऐसे लिखिए। (aise likhiye.) — Write it like this.

Its first letter is new to you: ऐ. The next lesson is about it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ऐसा (aisā) is a tadbhava, worn down from Sanskrit īdṛśa, "such, like this" (CDIAL 1611). Its question partner has the same history: कैसा goes back to kīdṛśa, "of what kind?" (CDIAL 3197).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- aisā, aisī, aise
- "I think so" — mujhe aisā lagtā hai
- "Don't do that" — aisā mat karo

Before you move on

What does ऐसा mean? ("Like this, such".) Its question partner? (कैसा.) "I think so"? (मुझे ऐसा लगता है.)

280.3 ऐ — the vowel you have read since है, standing alone

Before the new one: say ऐसा, "like this". Then look at है. How many strokes sit above its head-line? (Two: ै, ai.)

That sign has a standing form, and ऐसा opens with it.

Script you'll notice: ऐ

ऐ — ai.

It is the independent vowel. ै is how ai looks when it rides on a consonant (है, मैं, पैसा); ऐ is how it looks when it stands on its own, with no consonant to carry it.

What it is made of:

- the long stem and descending tail of ए
- the shorter hooked stem of ए
- a separate upper arc
- the top shirorekhā

In print, then, ऐ is ए with one arc that rises from the right end of the head-line and curves up and over to the left.

Script: two shapes, one sound

what you see	where it stands
ै	on a consonant: है, मैं
ऐ	alone: ऐसा

Count the strokes above the line. े has one and ै two; ए has none and ऐ one. Miscount, and e becomes ai, or the other way round.

Writing: ऐ

How ऐ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. descend the long left stem, curve right through the lower shoulder, and sweep down through the tail without lifting
- 2. lift and descend the shorter right stem into its inward hook
- 3. lift at the headline junction and sweep the upper arc upward and left
- 4. lift and draw the top shirorekhā left-to-right

Pen lifts: 3. The first two strokes are the ones you write for ए; the arc comes third, and the head-line last.

Verified modern printed teaching form; everyday handwriting may simplify the curves.

This is one attested teaching order and not a national standard — handwriting here is taught with school-to-school variation. Source: Saurmandal, 'Devanagari ऐ stroke order.svg', panels 1–4, Wikimedia Commons, 5 August 2023.

Your turn

- Look: at the sign and the letter side by side, and say what they share

  ै · ऐ

- Trace it: ऐ three times, saying ai as you finish each one
- Write it: ऐसा, then ऐसी

Before you move on

What sound is ऐ? (ai.) What is its sitting form? (ै, as in है.) How is ऐ unlike ए? (One arc rises above its head-line.)

280.4 मुझे लगता है कि ... (mujhe lagtā hai ki ...) — what I think

Say "I think so". (मुझे ऐसा लगता है.) Then कि, "that", the word that turns a sentence into the thing you think or know.

You'll want to know: मुझे लगता है कि

मुझे लगता है कि आज बारिश होगी।

mujhe lagtā hai ki āj bāriś hogī. — "I think it will rain today."

Word for word, "it seems to me that …". The thinker takes मुझे, and लगता है stays as it is whatever follows कि.

- आपको क्या लगता है? (āpko kyā lagtā hai?) — What do you think?
- तुम्हें क्या लगता है? (tumhẽ kyā lagtā hai?) — the same, to a friend
- मुझे नहीं लगता कि वह आएगा। (mujhe nahīṃ lagtā ki vah āegā.) — I don't think he will come. With नहीं, the है drops.
- मुझे लगा कि तुम नहीं आओगे। (mujhe lagā ki tum nahīṃ āoge.) — I thought you wouldn't come.

You'll want to know: in my opinion

मेरी राय में हिंदी आसान है।

merī rāy meṁ hindī āsān hai. — "In my opinion Hindi is easy."

राय is feminine, so मेरी राय में, "in my opinion". विचार is masculine: मेरे विचार से (mere vicār se) says the same, a little more formally. To ask: आपकी क्या राय है? (āpkī kyā rāy hai?), "What is your opinion?"

मैं सोचता हूँ कि … (maiṁ soctā hūṁ ki …) puts the thinker in charge: it is for a thought you are turning over, not for an impression.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "What do you think?" — āpko kyā lagtā hai?
- "I don't think he will come" — mujhe nahīṃ lagtā ki vah āegā
- "I thought you wouldn't come" — mujhe lagā ki tum nahīṃ āoge

Before you move on

"I think that …"? (मुझे लगता है कि …) "What do you think?" (आपको क्या लगता है?) "In my opinion"? (मेरी राय में: राय is feminine.) "I thought that …"? (मुझे लगा कि **…)

280.5 की वजह से (kī vajah se) — because of

Answer a क्यों with क्योंकि: "Why didn't you come? Because I was ill." (तुम क्यों नहीं आए? क्योंकि मैं बीमार था।)

क्योंकि needs a whole sentence after it. This lesson gives a reason in a single noun.

You'll want to know: की वजह से, के कारण

बारिश की वजह से हम घर पर रहे।

bāriś kī vajah se ham ghar par rahe. — "Because of the rain we stayed at home."

वजह (vajah), "a reason", is feminine, so की वजह से: "from the reason of". कारण, which you know, is masculine and does the same job a little more formally: के कारण (ke kāraṇ).

- भीड़ की वजह से मुझे देर हुई। (bhīṛ kī vajah se mujhe der huī.) — Because of the crowd I was late.
- बीमारी के कारण वह नहीं आया। (bīmārī ke kāraṇ vah nahīṃ āyā.) — Because of illness he didn't come.

A pronoun takes its -की form: मेरी वजह से (merī vajah se), "because of me"; उसकी वजह से (uskī vajah se), "because of him", or her.

You'll want to know: the reason is that …

वजह यह है कि मैं बीमार था। vajah yah hai ki maiṁ bīmār thā. — "The reason is that I was ill."

वजह यह है कि ... names the reason and then gives it as a whole sentence. Mind the order of the three ways:

the reason	where it stands
बारिश की वजह से	before the result
वजह यह है कि ...	in a sentence of its own, after the result
क्योंकि ...	after the result, in the same sentence

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Because of the crowd I was late" — bhīṛ kī vajah se mujhe der huī
- "He didn't come, because he was ill" — vah nahīṃ āyā, kyoṁki vah bīmār thā
- "Because of me she was late" — merī vajah se use der huī

Before you move on

"Because of the rain"? (बारिश की वजह से.) Why की? (वजह is feminine.) Its formal partner? (के कारण.) "The reason is that …"? (वजह यह है कि ...) Which one comes after the result, in the same sentence? (क्योंकि.)

280.6 Review — what I think, and why

Say "I'm hungry" and "I think so". (mujhe bhūkh lagī hai, mujhe aisā lagtā hai.) Then write ऐ from memory: the strokes of ए, the arc, the head-line.

Your turn

- Say it: I think it will rain tomorrow.
- Say it: What do you think? In my opinion this book is good.
- Say it: Because of the rain the train came late.

- Say it: I'm thirsty. I like this tea.
- Write it: ऐसा, then मुझे ऐसा लगता है।

Before you move on

"I think that …"? (मुझे लगता है कि …) "In my opinion"? (मेरी राय में.) "Because of"? (की वजह से, or के कारण.) "The reason is that …"? (वजह यह है कि …) How is ऐ unlike ए? (One arc above the head-line.)

Chapter 281

Should, Must, and So

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what someone should do (jānā cāhiye) and has to do (jānā paṛegā), join a cause to its result with isliye and to, and read and write ः in ataḥ.
> Complete HI-R281-advice-and-reasons: give advice, say what must be done, and draw the result.

281.1 तुम्हें जाना चाहिए (tumhẽ jānā cāhiye) — should, and have to Say "I need tea". (मुझे चाय चाहिए.) Then "I have to go", the way you take leave. (जाना है.)

You'll want to know: should > तुम्हें आराम करना चाहिए।

> tumhẽ ārām karnā cāhiye. — "You should rest."

चाहिए after a thing is "is needed". After a verb in -ना it is "should". The one who should takes को (आपको), or a pronoun's short form of it (मुझे, तुम्हें, उसे), and चाहिए does not change.

- आपको डाक्टर के पास जाना चाहिए। (āpko ḍākṭar ke pās jānā cāhiye.) — You should go to the doctor.

- हमें पानी पीना चाहिए। (hamẽ pānī pīnā cāhiye.) — We should drink water.

"Should not" puts नहीं before the verb: तुम्हें ऐसा नहीं करना चाहिए (tumhẽ aisā nahīṃ karnā cāhiye), "you shouldn't do that".

You'll want to know: have to > कल मुझे दफ़्तर जाना पड़ेगा।

> kal mujhe daftar jānā paṛegā. — "Tomorrow I will have to go to the office."

पड़ना (paṛnā) after a verb in -ना says there is no choice: something outside you makes it so. The one it falls on takes मुझे again.

- मुझे रोज़ जाना पड़ता है। (mujhe roz jānā paṛtā hai.) — I have to go every day.
- मुझे जाना पड़ा। (mujhe jānā paṛā.) — I had to go.
- मुझे जाना पड़ेगा। (mujhe jānā paṛegā.) — I will have to go.

Three shades, then: जाना है, which you say as you leave, is a plan; जाना चाहिए is advice; जाना पड़ेगा is a necessity.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "You should go to the doctor" — āpko ḍākṭar ke pās jānā cāhiye
- "You shouldn't do that" — tumhẽ aisā nahīṃ karnā cāhiye
- "Tomorrow I will have to work" — kal mujhe kām karnā paṛegā

Before you move on

"You should rest"? (तुम्हें आराम करना चाहिए.) Does चाहिए change? (No.) "I had to go"? (मुझे जाना पड़ा.) "I will have to go"? (मुझे जाना पड़ेगा.) Which one says there is no choice? (पड़ना.)

281.2 अतः (ataḥ) — therefore, in formal writing

Before the new one: say "so, therefore" the everyday way. (इसलिए, isliye.)

You'll want to know: अतः

अतः — ataḥ — "therefore". It is formal. You will read it in notices, letters and the news; in speech, Hindi says इसलिए.

> कल छुट्टी है, अतः दफ़्तर बंद रहेगा।
> kal chuṭṭī hai, ataḥ daftar band rahegā. — "Tomorrow is a holiday; the office will therefore stay closed."

Its last sign, the two dots ः, is new, and it has the next lesson to itself. It is said as a light breath of h after the vowel: ataḥ.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अतः (ataḥ) is a tatsama, a Sanskrit word Hindi uses unchanged. Monier-Williams gives its sense as "from this", and so "hence, for this reason": the result comes from what was said before. CDIAL has no row for it.

Your turn

- Say it: ataḥ, with the light breath at the end
- Read it: कल छुट्टी है, अतः दफ़्तर बंद रहेगा।
- Say it: the same sentence the everyday way — kal chuṭṭī hai, isliye daftar band rahegā

Before you move on

What does अतः mean? ("Therefore".) Where would you meet it? (In notices, letters and the news.) What does speech say instead? (इसलिए.)

281.3 ः — two dots and a breath

Say अतः, "therefore". Then find the dot of ं in मैं: one dot, above the head-line.

Today's sign has two dots, and they stand beside the line, not above it.

Script you'll notice: ः

ः — the visarga, ḥ: a light breath of h after the vowel before it.

Where it sits: to the right of its syllable, two dots one above the other. In print they hang under a short piece of head-line.

What it is made of:

- an upper dot
- a lower dot
- a short piece of headline above them

Worked through: त + ः = तः, the end of अतः.

It is rare in everyday Hindi. You will meet it in formal words taken straight from Sanskrit, such as अतः.

Writing: ः — follow the numbered strip

Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Devanagari recognizer, class 60 (ः, visarga): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native writers (MIT licence, 2012)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ः is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start at the top of the upper dot and curve down its left side
- 2. without lifting, round the bottom and up the right side to close the loop
- 3. lift, then start at the top of the lower dot and curve down its left side
- 4. without lifting, round the bottom and up the right side to close the loop — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 1. The upper dot first, then the lower.

The short piece of head-line stays grey in the strip: in a word it is part of the head-line, which you draw last, once, across the whole word.

> Two strokes — four movements, one pen lift; the upper dot, then the lower, each a small loop drawn anticlockwise from its top, as ः is; the short piece of headline the printed sign carries is left undrawn, because in a word it is part of the one headline drawn last across the whole word; cited to native writers' pen traces in HP Labs India's LipiTk Devanagari recognizer, class 60.

This is one attested order, and handwriting varies by writer. Source: HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Devanagari recognizer, class 60 (ः, visarga): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native writers (MIT licence, 2012).

Your turn

- Look: at these two signs, and say where each one sits

- Trace it: ः three times, the upper dot first
- Write it: अतः, then read it aloud

Before you move on

Where does ः sit? (To the right of its syllable.) Which dot comes first? (The upper.) What does it add? (A light breath of h.) Which word brought it? (अतः.)

281.4 बारिश हो रही थी, इसलिए ... (bāriś ho rahī thī, isliye ...) — the cause, then so

Say "because of the rain". (बारिश की वजह से.) Then the two words for "therefore", the everyday one and the formal one. (इसलिए, अतः.)

You'll want to know: cause, इसलिए, result

बारिश हो रही थी, इसलिए मैं नहीं गया।

bāriś ho rahī thī, isliye maiṁ nahīṃ gayā. — "It was raining, so I didn't go."

इसलिए stands between two whole sentences: the cause first, then the result. क्योंकि turns the order round.

order	sentence
cause, इसलिए, result	बारिश हो रही है, इसलिए मैं घर पर हूँ। (bāriś ho rahī hai, isliye maiṁ ghar par hūṁ.)
result, क्योंकि, cause	मैं घर पर हूँ, क्योंकि बारिश हो रही है। (maiṁ ghar par hūṁ, kyoṁki bāriś ho rahī hai.)

In formal writing, अतः takes the place of इसलिए.

You'll want to know: तो, so then

बारिश हो रही है? तो छाता लीजिए।

bāriś ho rahī hai? to chātā lījie. — "It's raining? Then take an umbrella."

तो (to), "so, then", takes up what was said and draws the next step from it. It opens a reply:

- तो चलिए। (to calie.) — So let's go.
- ठीक है, तो कल मिलते हैं। (ṭhīk hai, to kal milte haiṁ.) — All right, so see you tomorrow.

तो has a bigger job still, after अगर, "if"; it comes when the book reaches conditions.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "It's raining, so I'm at home" — bāriś ho rahī hai, isliye maiṁ ghar par hūṁ
- "All right, so see you tomorrow" — ṭhīk hai, to kal milte haiṁ
- "You're ill? Then you should rest" — tum bīmār ho? to tumhẽ ārām karnā cāhiye

Before you move on

Where does इसलिए go? (Between the cause and the result.) And क्योंकि? (After the result, before the cause.) "So let's go"? (तो चलिए.) What does formal writing put for इसलिए? (अतः.)

281.5 Review — advice, and so

Say "you should rest". (tumhẽ ārām karnā cāhiye.) Then read अतः aloud, and write its last sign: the upper dot, then the lower.

Your turn

- Say it: You should drink water. I had to go to the office.
- Say it: It was raining, so we stayed at home.
- Say it: You're ill? Then you should rest.
- Say it: I think we will have to leave early.
- Read it: कल छुट्टी है, अतः दफ़्तर बंद रहेगा। Then say it the everyday way.

Before you move on

"Should"? (चाहिए, after a verb in -ना.) "Had to"? (पड़ा.) "So", between two sentences? (इसलिए, or in writing अतः.) "So then", opening a reply? (तो.) Where does ः sit? (To the right of its syllable.)

Chapter 282

Asking the Way

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how to get somewhere and how far it is (sṭeśan kaise jāte haiṁ?, kitnī dūr hai?), follow the answer (sīdhe jāie, bāẽ muṛiye), and ask someone to tell me (batāie).
> Complete HI-R282-asking-the-way: ask the way, ask how far, and follow the answer.

282.1 बताना (batānā) — to tell, to let someone know

Before the new one: say "he said that he would come tomorrow". (usne kahā ki vah kal āegā.) कहना reports words. This lesson's verb hands someone a piece of information.

You'll want to know: बताना

बताना — batānā — "to tell, to let someone know".

> मुझे रास्ता बताइए।
> mujhe rāstā batāie. — "Please tell me the way."

The one who is told takes को or its short form: मुझे, उसे. What is told is the thing, and in the past the verb follows it:

- उसने मुझे अपना नाम बताया। (usne mujhe apnā nām batāyā.) — She told me her name.

- क्या आप मुझे बता सकते हैं? (kyā āp mujhe batā sakte haiṁ?) — Can you tell me?

कहना reports what someone said: उसने कहा कि .... बताना gives someone news or directions: उसने मुझे बताया कि ... (usne mujhe batāyā ki …), "she told me that …".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बताना (batānā) has no row in CDIAL, and its origin is not settled. Its ending is the -आना of दिखाना, "to show", and समझाना, "to explain": verbs of passing something on to someone.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- batānā, then mujhe rāstā batāie
- "She told me her name" — usne mujhe apnā nām batāyā
- "Can you tell me?" — kyā āp mujhe batā sakte haiṁ?

Before you move on

What does बताना mean? ("To tell, to let someone know".) "Please tell me the way"? (मुझे रास्ता बताइए.) Which verb reports what someone said? (कहना.)

282.2 दूर (dūr) — far

Before the new one: say "near the house". (घर के पास.) This lesson's word is its opposite.

You'll want to know: दूर

दूर — dūr — "far, far away".

स्टेशन यहाँ से कितनी दूर है?

sṭeśan yahā̃ se kitnī dūr hai? — "How far is the station from here?"

Hindi asks कितनी दूर, with the feminine कितनी, whatever the place. दूर itself never changes: गाँव दूर है, नदी दूर है. The place you measure from takes से, as in यहाँ से.

- बहुत दूर नहीं है। (bahut dūr nahīṃ hai.) — It's not very far.
- मेरा घर स्टेशन से दूर है। (merā ghar sṭeśan se dūr hai.) — My house is far from the station.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दूर (dūr) comes from Sanskrit dūra, "distant" (CDIAL 6495), and has kept its shape almost unchanged.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dūr, then kitnī dūr
- "How far is the station from here?" — sṭeśan yahā̃ se kitnī dūr hai?
- "It's not very far" — bahut dūr nahīṃ hai

Before you move on

What does दूर mean? ("Far".) "How far is it?" (कितनी दूर है?) "From here"? (यहाँ से.)

282.3 स्टेशन कैसे जाते हैं? (sṭeśan kaise jāte haiṁ?) — asking the way, and following it

Say "Please tell me the way" and "How far is it?" (mujhe rāstā batāie, kitnī dūr hai?)

You'll want to know: asking the way

माफ़ कीजिए, स्टेशन कैसे जाते हैं?

māf kījiye, sṭeśan kaise jāte haiṁ? — "Excuse me, how do I get to the station?"

जाते हैं with no one named is "people go": it asks for the way, not for anyone's plans. Or ask where it is: स्टेशन कहाँ है? (sṭeśan kahā̃ hai?)

The answer often comes in minutes: पाँच मिनट का रास्ता है (pā̃c minaṭ kā rāstā hai), "it's five minutes away".

You'll want to know: following the way

> सीधे जाइए, फिर बाएँ मुड़िए।
> sīdhe jāie, phir bāẽ muṛiye. — "Go straight on, then turn left."

मुड़ना (muṛnā) is "to turn", and मुड़िए asks it politely, as बोलिए does. सीधे, बाएँ, दाएँ (sīdhe, bāẽ, dāẽ) are the forms of सीधा, बायाँ and दायाँ that say which way.

- चौराहे से दाएँ मुड़िए। (caurāhe se dāẽ muṛiye.) — Turn right at the crossroads.
- पुल के बाद दूसरी गली में बाएँ मुड़िए। (pul ke bād dūsrī galī meṁ bāẽ muṛiye.) — After the bridge, take the second side street on the left. गली is feminine, so दूसरी.

Your turn

- Say it: "Excuse me, where is the post office?" — māf kījiye, ḍākghar kahā̃ hai?

Before you move on

How do you ask the way to the station? (स्टेशन कैसे जाते हैं?) Then say "go straight on" and "turn left". (सीधे जाइए, बाएँ मुड़िए.)

282.4 Review — asking the way

> Ask "How do I get to the station?" (sṭeśan kaise jāte haiṁ?)
> Then "How far is it?" (kitnī dūr hai?)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Excuse me, how do I get to the market?
- Is it far? No, it's ten minutes away.
- Go straight on, then turn right at the crossroads.
- Can you tell me the way to the hospital?
- Yesterday a man told me the way.

Before you move on

"Please tell me the way"? (मुझे रास्ता बताइए.) "How far?" (कितनी दूर?) "Turn right"? (दाएँ मुड़िए.) "A man told me the way"? (एक आदमी ने मुझे रास्ता बताया: ने, and बताया for रास्ता.)

Chapter 283

Tickets, Trains and Trouble

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can buy a ticket and ask when the next train leaves (aglī ṭren kitne baje calegī?), and report a lost bag or a missed train (merā thailā kho gayā, merī ṭren chūṭ gaī).
> Complete HI-R283-at-the-station: buy a ticket, ask about the next train, and report what went wrong.

283.1 अगला (aglā) — next

Before the new one: say "last week". (पिछले हफ़्ते.) Then आगे, "ahead". This lesson's word is the partner of the first.

You'll want to know: अगला

अगला — aglā — "next".

> अगली ट्रेन कब आएगी?
> aglī ṭren kab āegī? — "When will the next train come?"

It agrees as पिछला does: अगला स्टेशन (aglā sṭeśan), "the next station", but अगली ट्रेन, because ट्रेन is feminine. As a time it takes the form of पिछले हफ़्ते: अगले हफ़्ते (agle hafte), "next week"; अगले साल (agle sāl), "next year".

> अगले हफ़्ते हम गाँव जाएँगे।
> agle hafte ham gā̃v jāeṅge. — "Next week we will go to the village."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अगला (aglā) has no row of its own in CDIAL. It is usually connected with आगे (āge), "ahead", which CDIAL traces to Sanskrit agra, "top, front" (CDIAL 68); under the same entry CDIAL lists a Hindi āgil, "foremost". पिछला and अगला make a pair: the one behind you and the one in front.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- aglā, then aglī ṭren
- "When will the next train come?" — aglī ṭren kab āegī?
- "Last week I was at home; next week I will go to the village" — pichle hafte maiṁ ghar par thā; agle hafte maiṁ gā̃v jāūṅgā

Before you move on

What does अगला mean? ("Next".) "Next week"? (अगले हफ़्ते.) "The next train"? (अगली ट्रेन: ट्रेन is feminine.)

283.2 शहर के लिए दो टिकट दीजिए (śahar ke liye do ṭikaṭ dījie) — at the ticket window

You have asked for a ticket since you first learned the word: एक टिकट दीजिए. Say it, then "the next train". (aglī ṭren.) This lesson buys the right ticket for the right train.

You'll want to know: buying a ticket

शहर के लिए दो टिकट दीजिए।

śahar ke liye do ṭikaṭ dījie. — "Two tickets for the city, please."

The place you are going takes के लिए, "for". टिकट is masculine in standard Hindi, though you will hear it made feminine too, and it does not change for two.

- एक टिकट कितने का है? (ek ṭikaṭ kitne kā hai?) — How much is one ticket?
- सौ रुपये का है। (sau rupaye kā hai.) — It's a hundred rupees.

In कितने का, "of how much", the का agrees with the ticket.

You'll want to know: when it leaves, and how long

> अगली ट्रेन कितने बजे चलेगी?
> aglī ṭren kitne baje calegī? — "What time does the next train leave?"

A train चलती है, "moves off", and चलेगी is its future. "At what time" is कितने बजे, and the answer is a time you know: पाँच बजे.

How long will it take? लगना again, with the time as the thing:

- कितना समय लगेगा? (kitnā samay lagegā?) — How long will it take?
- दो घंटे लगेंगे। (do ghaṇṭe lageṅge.) — It will take two hours.

लगेगा follows समय; लगेंगे follows दो घंटे.

Your turn

- Say it: "It will take two hours" — do ghaṇṭe lageṅge

Before you move on

"Two tickets for the city"? (शहर के लिए दो टिकट दीजिए.) "How much is one ticket?" (एक टिकट कितने का है?) "What time does it leave?" (कितने बजे चलेगी?) "How long will it take?" (कितना समय लगेगा?)

283.3 खोना (khonā) — to lose, to be lost

> Before the new one: say a bag and a key. (thailā, cābī.) Then "he fell asleep". (vah so gayā.) The new verb works like that last one.

You'll want to know: खोना

खोना — khonā — "to lose; to be lost".

> मेरा थैला खो गया।
> merā thailā kho gayā. — "My bag got lost."

With गया after it, as in सो गया, the lost thing is the subject, and the verb follows it: मेरी चाबी खो गई (merī cābī kho gaī), "my key got lost", because चाबी is feminine.

With दिया after it, you are the one who lost it, and ने comes in:

> मैंने अपनी चाबी खो दी।
> maiṁne apnī cābī kho dī. — "I lost my key."

दी follows चाबी. अपनी is "my own", the अपना you use wherever the owner is also the doer.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खोना (khonā) is a tadbhava. CDIAL traces it to Sanskrit kṣapayati, "destroys; throws" (CDIAL 3651), and gives "to lose, waste, throw away" for Hindi.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- khonā, then kho gayā
- "My key got lost" — merī cābī kho gaī
- "I lost my key" — maiṁne apnī cābī kho dī

Before you move on

What does खोना mean? ("To lose; to be lost".) "My bag got lost"? (मेरा थैला खो गया.) Why खो गई for a key? (चाबी is feminine.)

283.4 मेरी ट्रेन छूट गई (merī ṭren chūṭ gaī) — when something goes wrong

Say "my bag got lost". (merā thailā kho gayā.) Then छूटना, "to be left behind". (chūṭnā.)

You'll want to know: reporting a loss

मेरा थैला खो गया। उसमें मेरा बटुआ था।

merā thailā kho gayā. usmeṁ merā baṭuā thā. — "My bag got lost. My wallet was in it."

उसमें is उस with में: "in it". Then ask for help, and say whom you told:

- मेरी मदद कीजिए। (merī madad kījiye.) — Please help me. मदद is feminine: मेरी.
- मैंने पुलिस को बताया। (maiṁne pulis ko batāyā.) — I told the police.
- थाना कहाँ है? (thānā kahā̃ hai?) — Where is the police station?

You'll want to know: missing a train

मेरी ट्रेन छूट गई।

merī ṭren chūṭ gaī. — "I missed my train."

Word for word, "my train got left behind". The train is the subject, so छूट गई follows it, and there is no मैंने. With a bus, the same: मेरी बस छूट गई (merī bas chūṭ gaī).

The cause goes first, with इसलिए:

मुझे देर हो गई, इसलिए मेरी ट्रेन छूट गई।

mujhe der ho gaī, isliye merī ṭren chūṭ gaī. — "I was late, so I missed my train."

And what it cost you, with पड़ना: मुझे बस से जाना पड़ा (mujhe bas se jānā paṛā), "I had to go by bus".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Please help me" — merī madad kījiye
- "I told the police" — maiṁne pulis ko batāyā
- "I was late, so I missed my bus" — mujhe der ho gaī, isliye merī bas chūṭ gaī

Before you move on

"My bag got lost"? (मेरा थैला खो गया.) "My wallet was in it"? (उसमें मेरा बटुआ था.) "I missed my train"? (मेरी ट्रेन छूट गई.) Why no मैंने? (The train is the subject: it got left behind.)

283.5 Review — at the station

Say "the next train" and "next week". (aglī ṭren, agle hafte.)
Then "my bag got lost". (merā thailā kho gayā.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Excuse me, where is the ticket office? Go straight on, then turn left.
- One ticket for the village, please. How much is it?
- When will the next train come? How long will it take?
- My key got lost. Then the other way: I lost my key.
- I was late, so I missed my train. Please help me.
- Next week I will go by bus.

Before you move on

"The next train"? (अगली ट्रेन.) "How much is one ticket?" (एक टिकट कितने का है?) "What time does it leave?" (कितने बजे चलेगी?) "I lost my key"? (मैंने अपनी चाबी खो दी: ने, and दी for the key.) "I missed my train"? (मेरी ट्रेन छूट गई.)

Chapter 284

Feelings and Hopes

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how I feel (mujhe ḍar lagtā hai, maiṁ khuś hūṁ, mujhe acchā lagā), what I want to become and what I hope for (maiṁ adhyāpak bannā cāhtā hūṁ, mujhe ummīd hai ki …).
> Complete HI-R284-feelings-and-hopes: say how you feel, what you want to become and what you hope for.

284.1 ख़ुश (khuś) — happy, glad

Before the new one: say the line from your first meeting. (आपसे मिलकर ख़ुशी हुई.) Its ख़ुशी is "happiness". Then "sad". (उदास, udās.)

You'll want to know: ख़ुश

ख़ुश — khuś — "happy, glad".

> आज मैं बहुत ख़ुश हूँ।
> āj maiṁ bahut khuś hūṁ. — "I am very happy today."

ख़ुश never changes: वह ख़ुश है for him and for her, हम ख़ुश हैं for us. It is the word ख़ुशी is built on: ख़ुश, "happy", and ख़ुशी (khuśī), "happiness".

With होना in the past, it says the gladness came: वह बहुत ख़ुश हुई (vah bahut khuś huī), "she was very pleased". The one you are pleased with takes से, written as one word with a pronoun: तुमसे is तुम with से. मैं तुमसे ख़ुश हूँ (maiṁ tumse khuś hūṁ), "I am pleased with you".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ख़ुश (khuś) is usually traced to Persian khush, "happy, pleasant". ख़ुशी adds -ई, the ending of many Hindi nouns of feeling, and ख़ुशबू, "fragrance", opens with the same word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- khuś, then khuśī
- "I am very happy today" — āj maiṁ bahut khuś hūṁ
- "She was very pleased" — vah bahut khuś huī

Before you move on

What does ख़ुश mean? ("Happy, glad".) Does it change for a woman? (No: वह ख़ुश है.) "Happiness"? (ख़ुशी.)

284.2 मुझे डर लगता है (mujhe ḍar lagtā hai) — saying how you feel

Say "I'm hungry" and "I am happy". (mujhe bhūkh lagī hai, maiṁ khuś hūṁ.) Two ways of feeling, and this lesson sets them side by side.

You'll want to know: a feeling that comes to you

मुझे कुत्तों से डर लगता है।

mujhe kuttoṁ se ḍar lagtā hai. — "I'm afraid of dogs."

Some feelings come to you, and Hindi says so. The one who feels takes मुझे, the feeling is the subject of लगना, and what you fear takes से.

the feeling	the sentence
डर, masculine	मुझे डर लगता है (mujhe ḍar lagtā hai) — I'm afraid
ठंड, feminine	मुझे ठंड लग रही है (mujhe ṭhaṇḍ lag rahī hai) — I'm cold
how it seemed	मुझे अच्छा लगा (mujhe acchā lagā) — I liked it; it felt good

Anger comes with आना, "to come": मुझे गुस्सा आया (mujhe gussā āyā), "I got angry".

You'll want to know: a feeling you are in मीरा आज उदास है।

Mīrā āj udās hai. — "Mira is sad today."

Other feelings are a state you are in, said with होना: मैं ख़ुश हूँ; वह परेशान है (vah pareśān hai), "he is worried". ख़ुश, उदास and परेशान never change; अकेला agrees: वह अकेली है (vah akelī hai), "she is alone".

With हो गया, the feeling sets in: वह उदास हो गई (vah udās ho gaī), "she became sad". To ask: क्या हुआ? तुम परेशान क्यों हो? (kyā huā? tum pareśān kyoṁ ho?), "What happened? Why are you worried?"

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I'm cold" — mujhe ṭhaṇḍ lag rahī hai
- "I liked the food" — mujhe khānā acchā lagā
- "Why are you worried?" — tum pareśān kyoṁ ho?

Before you move on

"I'm afraid"? (मुझे डर लगता है.) "I got angry"? (मुझे गुस्सा आया.) "She is sad"? (वह उदास है.) "She became sad"? (वह उदास हो गई.) Which feelings take मुझे? (The ones that come to you: डर, ठंड, गुस्सा.)

284.3 मैं अध्यापक बनना चाहता हूँ (maiṁ adhyāpak bannā cāhtā hūṁ) — what I want to become

Say "I want to go". (मैं जाना चाहता हूँ.) Then बनना, "to become", and सपना, "a dream".

You'll want to know: wanting to become

मैं अध्यापक बनना चाहता हूँ।

maiṁ adhyāpak bannā cāhtā hūṁ. — "I want to become a teacher."

चाहना takes a verb in -ना, as in मैं जाना चाहता हूँ. With बनना, "to become", it says what you want to be. A woman says चाहती हूँ: मैं डाक्टर बनना चाहती हूँ (maiṁ ḍākṭar bannā cāhtī hūṁ).

"When I grow up" is बड़ा होकर (baṛā hokar), the -कर of होना: बड़ा होकर मैं अध्यापक बनूँगा (baṛā hokar maiṁ adhyāpak banūṅgā), "when I grow up I will be a teacher". A girl says बड़ी होकर ... बनूँगी.

To ask: तुम क्या बनना चाहते हो? (tum kyā bannā cāhte ho?), "What do you want to be?"

You'll want to know: hopes and dreams

मेरा सपना है कि एक दिन मेरा अपना घर होगा।

merā sapnā hai ki ek din merā apnā ghar hogā. — "My dream is that one day I will have a house of my own."

सपना is masculine: मेरा सपना. After कि, the dream is told in the future, with होगा. A dream can also be a verb in -ना: मेरा सपना अध्यापक बनना है (merā sapnā adhyāpak bannā hai), "my dream is to become a teacher".

Hope works the same way: मुझे उम्मीद है कि ... (mujhe ummīd hai ki ...), "I hope that ...", with the future after it: मुझे उम्मीद है कि तुम आओगे (mujhe ummīd hai ki tum āoge), "I hope you will come".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "My dream is to become a doctor" — merā sapnā ḍākṭar bannā hai
- "I hope it won't rain tomorrow" — mujhe ummīd hai ki kal bāriś nahīṃ hogī

Before you move on

"I want to become a teacher"? (मैं अध्यापक बनना चाहता हूँ, or चाहती हूँ.) "When I grow up"? (बड़ा होकर.) "I hope that you will come"? (मुझे उम्मीद है कि तुम आओगे.) Why मेरा सपना? (सपना is masculine.)

284.4 Review — feelings and hopes

Say "I am happy" and "I'm afraid". (maiṁ khuś hūṁ, mujhe ḍar lagtā hai.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- I'm afraid of dogs. I'm cold.
- I liked your village very much.
- Why are you sad? What happened?
- What do you want to become? I want to become a doctor.
- I hope that next year I will go to the village.

Before you move on

"I liked it"? (मुझे अच्छा लगा.) "I got angry"? (मुझे गुस्सा आया.) "She is happy"? (वह ख़ुश है: ख़ुश does not change.) "I want to become …"? (मैं … बनना चाहता हूँ.) "I hope that …"? (मुझे उम्मीद है कि …, then the future.)

Chapter 285

Taller, the Tallest, and How Long

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can compare two things (se zyādā, se kam), say which is the most (sabse), and say how long something has gone on (do sāl se, din bhar).
> Complete HI-R285-comparing-and-time: compare, pick the most, and say how long.

285.1 सबसे (sabse) — most, of all

Before the new one: say "all" (सब) and "the man is bigger than the child". (आदमी बच्चे से बड़ा है.)

You'll want to know: सबसे

सबसे — sabse — "most, of all".

> मेरे परिवार में मीरा सबसे लंबी है। > mere parivār meṁ Mīrā sabse lambī hai. — "In my family Mira is the tallest."

It is सब, "all", with the से of बच्चे से बड़ा: "taller than all". The adjective after it agrees as always: सबसे लंबी for Mira, सबसे लंबा for Arun. The group you choose from takes में.

- यह सबसे अच्छा है। (yah sabse acchā hai.) — This is the best.
- सबसे पहले (sabse pahle) — first of all

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सबसे (sabse) is two words written as one: सब, which CDIAL traces to Sanskrit sarva, "all, whole" (CDIAL 13276), and से.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sabse, then sabse acchā
- "In my family Mira is the tallest" — mere parivār meṁ Mīrā sabse lambī hai
- "First of all we drank tea" — sabse pahle hamne cāy pī

Before you move on

What does सबसे mean? ("Most, of all".) "The best"? (सबसे अच्छा.) "First of all"? (सबसे पहले.)

285.2 मीरा अरुण से लंबी है (Mīrā Aruṇ se lambī hai) — comparing two, and choosing the most

Say "the man is bigger than the child", as you first learned it. (आदमी बच्चे से बड़ा है.) Then "the best". (सबसे अच्छा.)

You'll want to know: more and less

मीरा अरुण से लंबी है।

Mīrā Aruṇ se lambī hai. — "Mira is taller than Arun."

You know the frame: what is measured against takes से, and the adjective agrees with the one described, लंबी for Mira. Two words sharpen it:

- से ज़्यादा (se zyādā), "more than": यह कमरा उस कमरे से ज़्यादा बड़ा है। (yah kamrā us kamre se zyādā baṛā hai.) — This room is bigger than that one.
- से कम (se kam), "less than": यह साड़ी उससे कम महँगी है। (yah sāṛī usse kam mahãgī hai.) — This sari is less expensive than that one.

उस कमरे से and उससे both use उस, the form वह takes when a postposition follows, as in उसके बाद; उससे is उस with से, "than that one".

They work with nouns too: मेरे पास तुमसे ज़्यादा पैसे हैं (mere pās tumse zyādā paise haiṁ), "I have more money than you".

You'll want to know: the most, in a group

> मुझे फलों में आम सबसे ज़्यादा पसंद है।
> mujhe phaloṁ meṁ ām sabse zyādā pasand hai. — "Of all fruits I like mangoes the most."

सबसे picks one from a group, and the group takes में: फलों में, इस शहर में. With a liking, "the most" is सबसे ज़्यादा. A place can be the group too, with का:

- यह शहर का सबसे बड़ा बाज़ार है। (yah śahar kā sabse baṛā bāzār hai.) — This is the biggest market in the city.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "This sari is less expensive than that one" — yah sāṛī usse kam mahãgī hai
- "I have more money than you" — mere pās tumse zyādā paise haiṁ
- "Of all fruits I like mangoes the most" — mujhe phaloṁ meṁ ām sabse zyādā pasand hai

Before you move on

"Taller than Arun"? (अरुण से लंबी, or लंबा.) "More than"? (से ज़्यादा.) "Less than"? (से कम.) "The biggest market in the city"? (शहर का सबसे बड़ा बाज़ार.)

285.3 दो साल से (do sāl se) — for how long

> Say "from morning to evening". (सुबह से शाम तक.) Then "I am doing". (मैं कर रहा हूँ.)

You'll want to know: since, and for > मैं दो साल से हिंदी सीख रहा हूँ।

> maiṁ do sāl se hindī sīkh rahā hūṁ. — "I have been learning Hindi for two years."

English says "have been learning". Hindi says "am learning", in the present, because it is still going on, and puts से, "from", on the stretch so far or on the time it began:

- बारिश सुबह से हो रही है। (bāriś subah se ho rahī hai.) — It has been raining since the morning.
- वह पाँच साल से यहाँ रहती है। (vah pā̃c sāl se yahā̃ rahtī hai.) — She has lived here for five years.
- कब से? (kab se?) — Since when? कितने दिनों से? (kitne dinoṁ se?) — For how many days?

से ... तक, which you know, gives a stretch with both ends: सुबह से शाम तक. से on its own counts up to now.

You'll want to know: all day long

> कल मैं दिन भर काम कर रहा था।
> kal maiṁ din bhar kām kar rahā thā. — "Yesterday I was working all day."

भर (bhar) after a stretch of time is "all through it": दिन भर (din bhar), all day; रात भर (rāt bhar), all night; साल भर (sāl bhar), all year. पूरा says the same as an adjective: पूरे दिन (pūre din), the whole day.

- रात भर बारिश हो रही थी। (rāt bhar bāriś ho rahī thī.) — It was raining all night.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Since when?" — kab se?
- "It has been raining since the morning" — bāriś subah se ho rahī hai
- "She has lived here for five years" — vah pā̃c sāl se yahā̃ rahtī hai

Before you move on

"For two years"? (दो साल से.) Why the present in मैं दो साल से हिंदी सीख रहा हूँ? (It is still going on.) "All night"? (रात भर.) "From morning to evening"? (सुबह से शाम तक.)

285.4 Review — comparing, and how long

Say "Mira is taller than Arun". (Mīrā Aruṇ se lambī hai.)
Then "the best". (sabse acchā.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- This shop is more expensive than that one.
- In my opinion this is the best book in the library.
- I have wanted to become a teacher for two years.
- Yesterday it rained all day.
- Since when have you lived here?

Before you move on

"More expensive than"? (से ज़्यादा महँगा.) "The best in the library"? (पुस्तकालय की सबसे अच्छी किताब: किताब is feminine.) "For two years"? (दो साल से, with the present.) "All day"? (दिन भर.)

Chapter 286

If, and Otherwise

Modes: voice (4) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what will happen if something happens (agar … to …), with the future or the plain past after agar, and warn with nahīṃ to and varnā.
> Complete HI-R286-if-and-otherwise: say what will happen if, and what will happen otherwise.

286.1 अगर ... तो ... (agar ... to ...) — if, then

Say "if". (अगर, agar.) Then open a reply with "so, then": तो चलिए. The two words meet in this lesson.

You'll want to know: अगर ... तो ... with the future

> अगर बारिश होगी, तो हम घर पर रहेंगे।
> agar bāriś hogī, to ham ghar par raheṅge. — "If it rains, we will stay at home."

अगर opens the condition and तो opens what follows from it. When both halves are still to come, Hindi puts both in the future: होगी, रहेंगे. English says "if it rains"; Hindi says "if it will rain".

- अगर तुम आओगे, तो मुझे अच्छा लगेगा। (agar tum āoge, to mujhe acchā lagegā.) — If you come, I'll be glad.

Keep both words: अगर at the start, तो at the turn.

You'll want to know: if it is so now

> अगर तुम्हें भूख लगी है, तो खाना खाओ।
> agar tumhẽ bhūkh lagī hai, to khānā khāo. — "If you're hungry, eat."

When the condition is true now, it stays in the present, and the second half can ask, advise or tell:

- अगर समय है, तो आइए। (agar samay hai, to āie.) — If you have time, do come.
- अगर आप बीमार हैं, तो आपको आराम करना चाहिए। (agar āp bīmār haiṁ, to āpko ārām karnā cāhiye.) — If you're ill, you should rest.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "If you come, I'll be glad" — agar tum āoge, to mujhe acchā lagegā
- "If you have time, do come" — agar samay hai, to āie
- "If you're ill, you should rest" — agar āp bīmār haiṁ, to āpko ārām karnā cāhiye

Before you move on

Which word opens the condition? (अगर.) Which opens what follows? (तो.) "If it rains, we will stay at home"? (अगर बारिश होगी, तो हम घर पर रहेंगे: the future in both halves.) "If you're hungry, eat"? (अगर तुम्हें भूख लगी है, तो खाना खाओ.)

286.2 अगर ट्रेन छूट गई, तो ... (agar ṭren chūṭ gaī, to ...) — if it happens, and otherwise

Say "I missed my train". (मेरी ट्रेन छूट गई.) Then "if it rains, we will stay at home". (अगर बारिश होगी, तो हम घर पर रहेंगे.)

You'll want to know: the plain past after अगर

> अगर मेरी ट्रेन छूट गई, तो मैं बस से आऊँगा।
> agar merī ṭren chūṭ gaī, to maiṁ bas se āūṅgā. — "If I miss my train, I'll come by bus."

For one event that may or may not happen, Hindi can put it in the plain past after अगर, as if it had already happened: छूट गई. The result stays in the future. It is the past of a story, used to try a case out.

- अगर आपको देर हो गई, तो मुझे फ़ोन कीजिए। (agar āpko der ho gaī, to mujhe fon kījiye.) — If you're running late, phone me.
- अगर उसने हाँ कहा, तो हम कल चलेंगे। (agar usne hā̃ kahā, to ham kal caleṅge.) — If she says yes, we'll go tomorrow.

You'll want to know: नहीं तो, otherwise

> जल्दी चलो, नहीं तो देर हो जाएगी।
> jaldī calo, nahīṃ to der ho jāegī. — "Hurry up, otherwise we'll be late."

नहीं तो (nahīṃ to) is "if not, then": a warning about what follows if the first part does not happen. The first part is often a request. The warning is in the future: here हो जाएगी, the future of हो गई.

- खाना खाओ, नहीं तो भूख लगेगी। (khānā khāo, nahīṃ to bhūkh lagegī.) — Eat, or you'll get hungry.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "If you're running late, phone me" — agar āpko der ho gaī, to mujhe fon kījiye
- "If she says yes, we'll go tomorrow" — agar usne hā̃ kahā, to ham kal caleṅge
- "Eat, or you'll get hungry" — khānā khāo, nahīṃ to bhūkh lagegī

Before you move on

"If I miss my train"? (अगर मेरी ट्रेन छूट गई.) Which tense goes in the result? (The future.) "Otherwise"? (नहीं तो.) "We'll be late"? (देर हो जाएगी.)

286.3 वरना (varnā) — otherwise, or else

Before the new one: say "hurry up, otherwise we'll be late". (जल्दी चलो, नहीं तो देर हो जाएगी.)

You'll want to know: वरना

वरना — varnā — "otherwise, or else".

> जल्दी उठो, वरना ट्रेन छूट जाएगी।
> jaldī uṭho, varnā ṭren chūṭ jāegī. — "Get up early, or you'll miss the train."

It does the work of नहीं तो in one word, and stands in the same place, before the warning.

- धीरे बोलो, वरना बच्चा जाग जाएगा। (dhīre bolo, varnā baccā jāg jāegā.) — Speak softly, or the child will wake up.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वरना (varnā) is usually traced to Persian varna, "otherwise". It ends like a Hindi verb in -ना, but it is not one, and it never changes.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- varnā
- "Get up early, or you'll miss the train" — jaldī uṭho, varnā ṭren chūṭ jāegī
- "Speak softly, or the child will wake up" — dhīre bolo, varnā baccā jāg jāegā

Before you move on

What does वरना mean? ("Otherwise, or else".) Which two words does it stand for? (नहीं तो.) Is it a verb? (No: it never changes.)

286.4 Review — if, and otherwise

Say "if it rains, we will stay at home". (agar bāriś hogī, to ham ghar par raheṅge.) Then "or else". (varnā.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- I hope it won't rain tomorrow. If it rains, we will stay at home.
- If you have time, come to the market with me.
- If I miss the bus, I'll have to come by train.
- It has been raining since the morning. If it doesn't stop, we will stay at home.
- Eat now, otherwise you'll be hungry later.
- Leave early, or you'll be late.

Before you move on

"If it rains, we will stay at home"? (अगर बारिश होगी, तो हम घर पर रहेंगे.) "If you have time, come"? (अगर समय है, तो आइए.) "If I miss the bus"? (अगर मेरी बस छूट गई.) "Otherwise"? (नहीं तो, or वरना.)

Chapter 287

It Depends, and What Would Be

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what something depends on (… par nirbhar kartā hai), say what would happen if things were different (agar samay hotā, to maiṁ ātā), and write six connected lines.
> Complete HI-R287-depends-and-would: say what it depends on and what would have been.

287.1 निर्भर करना (nirbhar karnā) — to depend

Before the new one: "Will we go tomorrow? If it rains, we will stay at home." (अगर बारिश होगी, तो हम घर पर रहेंगे.) There is a shorter answer: "it depends on the weather".

You'll want to know: निर्भर करना

निर्भर करना — nirbhar karnā — "to depend (on)".

> यह मौसम पर निर्भर करता है।
> yah mausam par nirbhar kartā hai. — "It depends on the weather."

What it depends on takes पर, "on". निर्भर stays as it is, and करना carries the ending.

- सब कुछ तुम पर निर्भर करता है। (sab kuch tum par nirbhar kartā hai.) — Everything depends on you.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

निर्भर (nirbhar) is a tatsama. Monier-Williams gives Sanskrit nirbhara as "full of; excessive"; how it came to mean "depending on" in Hindi is not recorded there. करना is the everyday "to do", from Sanskrit karoti, "does" (CDIAL 2814).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nirbhar karnā
- "It depends on the weather" — yah mausam par nirbhar kartā hai
- "Everything depends on you" — sab kuch tum par nirbhar kartā hai

Before you move on

What does निर्भर करना mean? ("To depend".) What does the thing it depends on take? (पर.)

287.2 ... पर निर्भर करता है (... par nirbhar kartā hai) — it depends

Say "it depends on the weather". (यह मौसम पर निर्भर करता है.) Then "if it rains, we will stay at home". (अगर बारिश होगी, तो हम घर पर रहेंगे.)

You'll want to know: X पर निर्भर करता है

हमारी यात्रा मौसम पर निर्भर करती है।

hamārī yātrā mausam par nirbhar kartī hai. — "Our trip depends on the weather."

The subject is what depends, and करता follows it: यात्रा is feminine, so करती है. What it depends on takes पर.

- यह तुम पर निर्भर करता है। (yah tum par nirbhar kartā hai.) — It's up to you.

- किस पर निर्भर करता है? (kis par nirbhar kartā hai?) — What does it depend on? किस is the form क्या and कौन take before a postposition.
- टिकट का दाम ट्रेन पर निर्भर करता है। (ṭikaṭ kā dām ṭren par nirbhar kartā hai.) — The price of a ticket depends on the train.

You'll want to know: it depends whether …

> यह इस पर निर्भर करता है कि बारिश होगी या नहीं।
> yah is par nirbhar kartā hai ki bāriś hogī yā nahīṃ. — "It depends on whether it rains or not."

When what it depends on is a whole sentence, Hindi says इस पर, "on this", and then gives the sentence after कि. It is often a question with या नहीं, "or not", in the future.

- यह इस पर निर्भर करता है कि तुम कब आओगे। (yah is par nirbhar kartā hai ki tum kab āoge.) — It depends on when you come.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "It's up to you" — yah tum par nirbhar kartā hai
- "It depends on when you come" — yah is par nirbhar kartā hai ki tum kab āoge

Before you move on

"It depends on the weather"? (यह मौसम पर निर्भर करता है.) Why करती in हमारी यात्रा मौसम पर निर्भर करती है? (यात्रा is feminine.) "It depends on whether …"? (यह इस पर निर्भर करता है कि …)

287.3 अगर समय होता, तो मैं आता (agar samay hotā, to maiṁ ātā) — what would be

Say "if it rains, we will stay at home". (अगर बारिश होगी, तो हम घर पर रहेंगे.) Then "used to speak". (बोलता था.) The new form looks like that बोलता with its था taken away.

You'll want to know: if it were so

> अगर मेरे पास समय होता, तो मैं आता।
> agar mere pās samay hotā, to maiṁ ātā. — "If I had time, I would come."

When the condition is not true, both halves take the -ता form with nothing after it: होता, आता. It agrees as the present does: आती for a woman, आते for several, and होती for a feminine thing.

- अगर मेरे पास पैसे होते, तो मैं यह घर ख़रीदता। (agar mere pās paise hote, to maiṁ yah ghar kharīdtā.) — If I had the money, I would buy this house.
- अगर मैं तुम्हारी जगह होता, तो मैं डाक्टर के पास जाता। (agar maiṁ tumhārī jagah hotā, to maiṁ ḍākṭar ke pās jātā.) — If I were you, I would go to the doctor.

There is no ने with this form, even with a thing: मैं घर ख़रीदता, never मैंने.

You'll want to know: if it had been so

> अगर मुझे पता होता, तो मैं तुम्हें बताता।
> agar mujhe patā hotā, to maiṁ tumhẽ batātā. — "If I had known, I would have told you."

The same form looks back at a past that did not happen. Only the sense tells you which it is: "if I knew" or "if I had known".

- अगर तुम कल आते, तो अच्छा होता। (agar tum kal āte, to acchā hotā.) — If you had come yesterday, it would have been nice.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "If I had the money, I would buy this house" — agar mere pās paise hote, to maiṁ yah ghar kharīdtā
- "If you had come yesterday, it would have been nice" — agar tum kal āte, to acchā hotā

Before you move on

"If I had time"? (अगर मेरे पास समय होता.) "I would come"? (मैं आता, or आती.) Does this form take ने? (No: मैं घर ख़रीदता.) "If I had known"? (अगर मुझे पता होता.)

287.4 Six lines about a trip

Your first written message gave a reader a few practised lines. This task asks for six lines, and they tell a story: a trip, to a village or anywhere else.

Pick one reader: Mira, or a friend you name. Say ऐसा and अतः aloud; one of them will go in.

What to know first

A told story is not a list of events. It has a scene, in -रहा था or with जब ... तब .... It has events in the plain past, kept in order with पहले, फिर, उसके बाद and आख़िर में, and joined with -कर. It has a reason, with इसलिए, क्योंकि or की वजह से, and a feeling, with मुझे ... लगा or मैं ख़ुश हुआ.

A good one ends by looking at what might have been: अगर ..., तो ..., with -ता in both halves.

Writing — connected composition

On paper, in Devanagari, write six lines to your reader about a trip, real or invented, one line for each of these:

1. the scene: when it was, with पिछले (पिछले साल, पिछले हफ़्ते), and what you were doing as it began, with -रहा था or जब ... तब ...;
2. the first thing that happened, with पहले: buying a ticket, with टिकट, and when the train left, with बजे;
3. what happened next, with फिर or a -कर form, and one thing that went wrong: खो गया or छूट गई;
4. why, with इसलिए, क्योंकि, की वजह से or वजह यह है कि;
5. how it ended and how you felt, with आख़िर में and मुझे ... लगा, मैं ख़ुश हुआ or मैं उदास हो गया;

6. what might have been, with अगर ..., तो ... and the -ता form (अगर मुझे पता होता ...), and one word with ऐ or ः: ऐसा, अतः.

There is no model in this lesson. Use only words you already write. The work is choosing the right past for each line, and joining the lines.

Before you move on

Now read your lines as you read Mira's holiday. Mark every past verb s for scene and e for event. Line one should be mostly s; lines two and three mostly e.
Then three checks. A plain past with a thing takes ने on its doer and follows the thing: मैंने टिकट लिया, मैंने चाय पी. A -रहा था verb does not take ने. ऐ has one arc above its head-line, and ः has its upper dot drawn first.
Last, read line six alone. Do both halves wear -ता?

287.5 Review — it depends, and what would have been

Say "leave early, or you'll be late". (jaldī niklo, varnā der ho jāegī.) Then "of all fruits I like mangoes the most". (mujhe phaloṁ meṁ ām sabse zyādā pasand hai.) Then read aloud one of your six lines that has ऐ or **ः.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Will we go tomorrow? It depends on the weather.
- Is the bus cheaper than the train? It depends on the day.
- If I had worked all day, I would have been tired.
- If I had time, I would come.
- If it hadn't rained, we would have gone to the river.
- one trip that depends on something, and one that would have gone better if …

Before you move on

"It depends on"? (... पर निर्भर करता है.) "It depends on whether …"? (यह इस पर निर्भर करता है कि ...) "I would come"? (मैं आता.) "If I had known"? (अगर मुझे पता होता.) Which letters did ऐसा and अतः bring? (ऐ and ः.)

Chapter 288

A Theft in the Lane

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what was stolen and who saw it.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 288: I can say what was stolen and who saw it.

288.1 चोरी (corī) — a theft

Before the new one: say the Hindi for turning over (in bed), then the Hindi for a stretch (of the body).

You'll want to know: चोरी

चोरी — corī — "a theft".

> चोरी के बाद क्या होगा, यह पुलिस पर निर्भर करता है।
> corī ke bād kyā hogā, yah pulis par nirbhar kartā hai.
> What happens after the theft depends on the police.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family is inherited from Sanskrit caurikā, "theft" (CDIAL 4937). It sits beside चोर, a thief: चोर is the person, चोरी is what the person does, and चोरी होना is for a theft to take place.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: corī
- Say it: corī, once more
- Say it: corī ke bād kyā hogā, yah pulis par nirbhar kartā hai. — What happens after the theft depends on the police.
- Recall: say the Hindi for turning over (in bed), then the Hindi for a stretch (of the body), then say corī again

Before you move on

What does चोरी mean? ("A theft".) Say it once more.

288.2 चुराना (curānā) — to steal

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a stretch (of the body), then the Hindi for a theft.

You'll want to know: चुराना

चुराना — curānā — "to steal".

चोर ने मेरी साइकिल चुराई।

cor ne merī sāikil curāī.

The thief stole my bicycle.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने बटुआ चुराया, usne baṭuā curāyā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चुराना (curānā) belongs with Sanskrit corayati, "steals" (CDIAL 4933), where CDIAL records an older Hindi verb cornā. With ने the verb agrees with the thing taken: साइकिल चुराई, but बटुआ चुराया.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: curānā
- Say it: curānā, once more
- Say it: cor ne merī sāikil curāī. — The thief stole my bicycle.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a stretch (of the body), then the Hindi for a theft, then say curānā again

Before you move on

What does चुराना mean? ("To steal".) Say it once more.

288.3 चौकीदार (caukīdār) — a watchman

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a theft, then the Hindi for to steal.

You'll want to know: चौकीदार

चौकीदार — caukīdār — "a watchman".

चौकीदार रात भर गली में घूम रहा था। caukīdār rāt bhar galī meṁ ghūm rahā thā.

The watchman was walking up and down the lane all night.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चौकीदार (caukīdār) joins caukī, a guard post, from Sanskrit catuṣka, "a set of four, a square" (CDIAL 4629), with -dār, usually traced to Persian dār, "holding": the one who keeps the post. दुकानदार is built with the same ending.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: caukīdār
- Say it: caukīdār, once more
- Say it: caukīdār rāt bhar galī meṁ ghūm rahā thā. — The watchman was walking up and down the lane all night.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a theft, then the Hindi for to steal, then say caukīdār again

Before you move on

What does चौकीदार mean? ("A watchman".) Say it once more.

288.4 गवाह (gavāh) — a witness

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to steal, then the Hindi for a watchman.

You'll want to know: गवाह

गवाह — gavāh — "a witness".

गवाह ने पुलिस को सब कुछ बताया। gavāh ne pulis ko sab kuch batāyā.

The witness told the police everything.

Masculine or feminine, by the person meant.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

गवाह (gavāh) is usually traced to Persian gavāh, "a witness", a word that reached Hindi through the courts. It is used of a man or a woman: वह गवाह है.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: gavāh
- Say it: gavāh, once more
- Say it: gavāh ne pulis ko sab kuch batāyā. — The witness told the police everything.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to steal, then the Hindi for a watchman, then say gavāh again

Before you move on

What does गवाह mean? ("A witness".) Say it once more.

288.5 बाहर (bāhar) — outside

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a watchman, then the Hindi for a witness.

You'll want to know: बाहर

बाहर — bāhar — "outside".

चोरी के बाद हम सब घर से बाहर आए।

corī ke bād ham sab ghar se bāhar āe.

After the theft we all came out of the house.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बाहर (bāhar) is inherited from bāhira*, "outer", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 9226). It pairs with अंदर: घर से बाहर, out of the house, against घर के अंदर, inside it.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: bāhar
- Say it: bāhar, once more
- Say it: corī ke bād ham sab ghar se bāhar āe. — After the theft we all came out of the house.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a watchman, then the Hindi for a witness, then say bāhar again

Before you move on

What does बाहर mean? ("Outside".) Say it once more.

Chapter 289

The Thief Got Away

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how a thief got away and who went after him.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 289: I can say how a thief got away and who went after him.

289.1 जेबकतरा (jebkatrā) — a pickpocket

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a witness, then the Hindi for outside.

You'll want to know: जेबकतरा

जेबकतरा — jebkatrā — "a pickpocket".

> बाज़ार में एक जेबकतरा घूम रहा था।
> bāzār meṁ ek jebkatrā ghūm rahā thā.
> A pickpocket was wandering through the market.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

जेबकतरा (jebkatrā) is जेब, a pocket, and katrā, one who snips, from katarnā, to clip, which CDIAL 2858 lists for Hindi under Sanskrit kartarī, "scissors": the one who cuts into pockets.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: jebkatrā
- Say it: jebkatrā, once more
- Say it: bāzār meṁ ek jebkatrā ghūm rahā thā. — A pickpocket was wandering through the market.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a witness, then the Hindi for outside, then say jebkatrā again

Before you move on

What does जेबकतरा mean? ("A pickpocket".) Say it once more.

289.2 छीनना (chīnnā) — to snatch

Before the new one: say the Hindi for outside, then the Hindi for a pickpocket.

You'll want to know: छीनना

छीनना — chīnnā — "to snatch".

उसने मीरा के हाथ से मोबाइल छीन लिया। usne Mīrā ke hāth se mobāil chīn liyā.

He snatched the mobile phone out of Mira's hand.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने थैला छीना, usne thailā chīnā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

छीनना (chīnnā) is set by CDIAL under Sanskrit chinna, "cut off" (CDIAL 5047): what is snatched is torn away from its owner. It often takes लेना: छीन लिया, snatched it away.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: chīnnā
- Say it: chīnnā, once more
- Say it: usne Mīrā ke hāth se mobāil chīn liyā. — He snatched the mobile phone out of Mira's hand.
- Recall: say the Hindi for outside, then the Hindi for a pickpocket, then say chīnnā again

Before you move on

What does छीनना mean? ("To snatch".) Say it once more.

289.3 झपटना (jhapaṭnā) — to lunge; to swoop

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a pickpocket, then the Hindi for to snatch.

You'll want to know: झपटना

झपटना — jhapaṭnā — "to lunge; to swoop".

चोर मेरे थैले पर झपटा और भाग गया।

cor mere thaile par jhapṭā aur bhāg gayā.

The thief lunged at my bag and ran off.

Past (he …): वह थैले पर झपटा, vah thaile par jhapṭā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

झपटना (jhapaṭnā) comes from jhapp*, a sudden movement, a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 5336). A hawk झपटता है on its prey; a thief झपटता है on a bag: थैले पर झपटा.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

फ़रार — farār — "on the run".

चोर दो हफ़्ते से फ़रार है।

cor do hafte se farār hai.

The thief has been on the run for two weeks.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

फ़रार (farār) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic firār, "flight". It describes the person, not the running: चोर फ़रार है, the thief got away and has not been found.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: farār
- Say it: farār, once more
- Say it: cor do hafte se farār hai. — The thief has been on the run for two weeks.

290.1 शिकायत (śikāyat) — a complaint

Before the new one: say the Hindi for on the run, then the Hindi for a chase.

You'll want to know: शिकायत

शिकायत — śikāyat — "a complaint".

> पुलिस क्या करेगी, यह आपकी शिकायत पर निर्भर करता है। > pulis kyā karegī, yah āpkī śikāyat par nirbhar kartā hai.
> What the police will do depends on your complaint.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic shikāya, "a complaint". शिकायत करना is to complain; at a police station, शिकायत is the formal complaint.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: śikāyat
- Say it: śikāyat, once more
- Say it: pulis kyā karegī, yah āpkī śikāyat par nirbhar kartā hai. — What the police will do depends on your complaint.

रिपोर्ट — riporṭ — "a report (to the police)".

मीरा ने थाने जाकर चोरी की रिपोर्ट की।

Mīrā ne thāne jākar corī kī riporṭ kī.

Mira went to the police station and reported the theft.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रिपोर्ट (riporṭ) is borrowed from English report, taken into Hindi as a feminine noun: चोरी की रिपोर्ट, the report of a theft, and रिपोर्ट करना, to report it.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: riporṭ
- Say it: riporṭ, once more
- Say it: Mīrā ne thāne jākar corī kī riporṭ kī. — Mira went to the police station and reported the theft.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a chase, then the Hindi for a complaint, then say riporṭ again

Before you move on

What does रिपोर्ट mean? ("A report (to the police)".) Say it once more.

290.3 लिखवाना (likhvānā) — to have written down

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a complaint, then the Hindi for a report (to the police).

You'll want to know: लिखवाना

लिखवाना — likhvānā — "to have written down".

अरुण ने पुलिस से अपनी शिकायत लिखवाई।

Aruṇ ne pulis se apnī śikāyat likhvāī.

Arun had the police write down his complaint.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने रिपोर्ट लिखवाई, usne riporṭ likhvāī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

लिखवाना (likhvānā) is the second causative of लिखना, to write, which goes back to Sanskrit likhati, "scratches, writes" (CDIAL 11048). The ending -vā- hands the work to someone else: शिकायत लिखवाई, got the complaint written down.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: likhvānā
- Say it: likhvānā, once more
- Say it: Aruṇ ne pulis se apnī śikāyat likhvāī. — Arun had the police write down his complaint.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a complaint, then the Hindi for a report (to the police), then say likhvānā again

Before you move on

What does लिखवाना mean? ("To have written down".) Say it once more.

290.4 दरोगा (darogā) — a police inspector

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a report (to the police), then the Hindi for to have written down.

You'll want to know: दरोगा

दरोगा — darogā — "a police inspector".

दरोगा ने चौकीदार से बात की। darogā ne caukīdār se bāt kī.

The inspector talked to the watchman.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दरोगा (darogā) is usually traced to Persian dārōġa, "an overseer", a title that once named many kinds of official. In Hindi it is the inspector in charge of a police station.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: darogā
- Say it: darogā, once more

Before you move on

What does दरोगा mean? ("A police inspector".) Say it once more.

290.5 हवालात (havālāt) — a lock-up

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to have written down, then the Hindi for a police inspector.

You'll want to know: हवालात

हवालात — havālāt — "a lock-up".

पुलिस ने चोर को रात भर हवालात में रखा। pulis ne cor ko rāt bhar havālāt meṁ rakhā.

The police kept the thief in the lock-up all night.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic ḥawāla, "a handing over, custody": the room where a person handed over to the police is held. It is not जेल, prison: हवालात is for a night or two.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: havālāt
- Say it: havālāt, once more
- Say it: pulis ne cor ko rāt bhar havālāt meṁ rakhā. — The police kept the thief in the lock-up all night.

291.1 चश्मदीद (caśmdīd) — an eyewitness

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a police inspector, then the Hindi for a lock-up.

You'll want to know: चश्मदीद

चश्मदीद — caśmdīd — "an eyewitness".

> अगर कोई चश्मदीद होता तो पुलिस का काम आसान होता।
> agar koī caśmdīd hotā to pulis kā kām āsān hotā.
> If there had been an eyewitness, the police's job would have been easy.

Masculine or feminine, by the person meant.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चश्मदीद (caśmdīd) is usually traced to Persian čašm-dīd, built from čašm, "eye", the word behind चश्मा, and dīd, "seen": a person who saw it with their own eyes.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: caśmdīd
- Say it: caśmdīd, once more
- Say it: agar koī caśmdīd hotā to pulis kā kām āsān hotā. — If there had been an eyewitness, the police's job would have been easy.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a police inspector, then the Hindi for a lock-up, then say caśmdīd again

Before you move on

What does चश्मदीद mean? ("An eyewitness".) Say it once more.

291.2 बयान (bayān) — a statement

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a lock-up, then the Hindi for an eyewitness.

You'll want to know: बयान

बयान — bayān — "a statement".

गवाह ने थाने में अपना बयान दिया। gavāh ne thāne meṁ apnā bayān diyā.

The witness gave a statement at the police station.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बयान (bayān) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic bayān, "an explanation, a making clear". बयान देना is to give a statement.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

Before you move on

What does बयान mean? ("A statement".) Say it once more.

291.3 पहचानना (pahcānnā) — to recognize

Before the new one: say the Hindi for an eyewitness, then the Hindi for a statement.

You'll want to know: पहचानना

पहचानना — pahcānnā — "to recognize".

मीरा ने चोर को पहचान लिया।

Mīrā ne cor ko pahcān liyā.

Mira recognized the thief.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने चोर को पहचाना, usne cor ko pahcānā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

पहचानना (pahcānnā) goes back to Sanskrit pratyabhijānāti, "recognizes" (CDIAL 8637). The noun पहचान, identity or recognition, belongs with it; the verb is what you do when a face is one you know.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: pahcānnā
- Say it: pahcānnā, once more
- Say it: Mīrā ne cor ko pahcān liyā. — Mira recognized the thief.

Before you move on

What does पहचानना mean? ("To recognize".) Say it once more.

291.4 शक (śak) — suspicion; doubt

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a statement, then the Hindi for to recognize.

You'll want to know: शक

शक — śak — "suspicion; doubt".

मुझे उस आदमी पर शक है।

mujhe us ādmī par śak hai.

I suspect that man.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

शक (śak) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic shakk, "doubt". The person you suspect takes पर: मुझे उस पर शक है.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: śak
- Say it: śak, once more
- Say it: mujhe us ādmī par śak hai. — I suspect that man.

घूरना — ghūrnā — "to stare".

वह आदमी मुझे घूर रहा था।

vah ādmī mujhe ghūr rahā thā.

That man was staring at me.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने मुझे घूरा, usne mujhe ghūrā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

घूरना (ghūrnā) comes from ghūra*, a frown, a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 4496). It is a hard, long look, never a friendly one.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ghūrnā
- Say it: ghūrnā, once more
- Say it: vah ādmī mujhe ghūr rahā thā. — That man was staring at me.

292.1 डाकू (ḍākū) — a bandit

Before the new one: say the Hindi for suspicion, then the Hindi for to stare.

You'll want to know: डाकू

डाकू — ḍākū — "a bandit".

> रात को दरवाज़ा बंद रखो, नहीं तो डाकू आ जाएँगे।
> rāt ko darvāzā band rakho, nahīṃ to ḍākū ā jāeṅge.
> Keep the door shut at night, or the bandits will get in.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family comes from ḍākka*, "robbery", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 5543). A डाकू belongs to a gang that robs on the roads and in villages, not a single चोर who steals in secret.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ḍākū
- Say it: ḍākū, once more
- Say it: rāt ko darvāzā band rakho, nahīṃ to ḍākū ā jāeṅge. — Keep the door shut at night, or the bandits will get in.

Before you move on

What does डकैती mean? ("A robbery (by a gang)".) Say it once more.

292.4 बंदूक़ (bandūq) — a gun

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to rob, then the Hindi for a robbery (by a gang).

You'll want to know: बंदूक़

बंदूक़ — bandūq — "a gun".

एक डाकू के हाथ में बंदूक़ थी।

ek ḍākū ke hāth meṁ bandūq thī.

One of the bandits had a gun in his hand.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बंदूक़ (bandūq) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic bunduq, a hazelnut and then a small round pellet; the step from pellet to gun is said to have come through the pellet-bow. Hindi also writes it without the dot.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: bandūq
- Say it: bandūq, once more

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a robbery (by a gang), then the Hindi for a gun.

You'll want to know: बाँधना

बाँधना — b̃ādhnā — "to tie up; to bind".

डाकुओं ने चौकीदार को रस्सी से बाँधा। ḍākuoṁ ne caukīdār ko rassī se b̃ādhā.

The bandits tied the watchman up with rope.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने रस्सी बाँधी, usne rassī b̃ādhī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बाँधना (bā̃dhnā) goes back to Sanskrit bandhati, "binds" (CDIAL 9139). A person tied up takes को and the verb stays masculine: चौकीदार को बाँधा; a thing tied agrees: रस्सी बाँधी.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: bā̃dhnā
- Say it: bā̃dhnā, once more > hādse kī vajah yah thī ki ḍrāivar bahut tez gāṛī calā rahā thā.

> The cause of the accident was that the driver was going too fast.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हादसा (hādsā) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic ḥāditha, "something that happens". It is the everyday word beside the formal दुर्घटना.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: hādsā
- Say it: hādsā, once more
- Say it: hādse kī vajah yah thī ki ḍrāivar bahut tez gāṛī calā rahā thā. — The cause of the accident was that the driver was going too fast.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to be grazed, then the Hindi for covered in blood, then say hādsā again

Before you move on

What does हादसा mean? ("A mishap; an accident".) Say it once more.

302.4 सावधान (sāvdhān) — careful; on guard

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a warning, then the Hindi for an announcement.

You'll want to know: सावधान

सावधान — sāvdhān — "careful; on guard".

ऐलान के बाद सब लोग सावधान हो गए।

ailān ke bād sab log sāvdhān ho gae.

After the announcement everyone was on their guard.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सावधान (sāvdhān) is Sanskrit sāvadhāna, "attentive, heedful" (Monier-Williams), taken over whole. Said alone on a sign it means "Beware!"

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: sāvdhān
- Say it: sāvdhān, once more
- Say it: ailān ke bād sab log sāvdhān ho gae. — After the announcement everyone was on their guard.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a warning, then the Hindi for an announcement, then say sāvdhān again

Before you move on

What does सावधान mean? ("Careful; on guard".) Say it once more.

302.5 टलना (ṭalnā) — to be averted; to be put off

Before the new one: say the Hindi for an announcement, then the Hindi for careful.

You'll want to know: टलना

टलना — ṭalnā — "to be averted; to be put off".

सबकी मदद से बड़ा ख़तरा टल गया।

sabkī madad se baṛā khatrā ṭal gayā.

With everyone's help a great danger was averted.

Past (it …): वह ख़तरा टल गया, vah khatrā ṭal gayā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

टलना (ṭalnā) is set by CDIAL under Sanskrit ṭalati, "moves aside" (CDIAL 5450). A danger that टल गया moved away from you; a meeting that टल गई was put off.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭalnā
- Say it: ṭalnā, once more
- Say it: sabkī madad se baṛā khatrā ṭal gayā. — With everyone's help a great danger was averted.

Before you move on

What does झटका mean? ("A jolt; a tremor".) Say it once more.

303.3 दरार (darār) — a crack

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to shake (by itself), then the Hindi for a jolt.

You'll want to know: दरार

दरार — darār — "a crack".

झटके से दीवार में दरार आ गई। jhaṭke se dīvār mem darār ā gaī.

The jolt left a crack in the wall.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दरार (darār) is listed by CDIAL under darākāra*, "shaped like a crack", a reconstructed form (CDIAL 6193). A crack आती है or पड़ती है in a wall.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: darār
- Say it: darār, once more
- Say it: jhaṭke se dīvār meṁ darār ā gaī. — The jolt left a crack in the wall.

Before you move on

What does दरार mean? ("A crack".) Say it once more.

303.4 धँसना (dhãsnā) — to cave in; to sink in

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a jolt, then the Hindi for a crack.

You'll want to know: धँसना

धँसना — dhãsnā — "to cave in; to sink in".

भूकंप में सड़क नीचे धँस गई। bhūkamp meṁ saṛak nīce dhãs gaī.

In the earthquake the road caved in.

Past (it …): वह सड़क धँस गई, vah saṛak dhãs gaī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

धँसना (dhãsnā) goes back to Sanskrit dhvaṁsati, "falls to pieces" (CDIAL 6896). Ground, a road or a foot in mud धँसता है: it goes down into what is under it.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: dhãsnā
- Say it: dhãsnā, once more
- Say it: bhūkamp meṁ saṛak nīce dhãs gaī. — In the earthquake the road caved in.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a jolt, then the Hindi for a crack, then say dhãsnā again

Before you move on

What does धँसना mean? ("To cave in; to sink in".) Say it once more.

303.5 दबना (dabnā) — to be pressed down; to be trapped under

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a crack, then the Hindi for to cave in.

You'll want to know: दबना

दबना — dabnā — "to be pressed down; to be trapped under".

दीवार गिरी और दो बकरियाँ उसके नीचे दब गईं।

dīvār girī aur do bakriyā̃ uske nīce dab gaīṁ.

The wall fell and two goats were trapped under it.

Past (he …): वह आदमी दब गया, vah ādmī dab gayā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दबना (dabnā) is inherited from dabb*, "press", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 6173). It is the intransitive partner of दबाना, to press: what is pressed down दबता है.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: dabnā
- Say it: dabnā, once more
- Say it: dīvār girī aur do bakriyā̃ uske nīce dab gaīṁ. — The wall fell and two goats were trapped under it.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a crack, then the Hindi for to cave in, then say dabnā again

Before you move on

What does दबना mean? ("To be pressed down; to be trapped under".) Say it once more.

303.6 Looking back: from A Crash on the Road to When the Ground Shook

Say the Hindi for speed and to collide.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- speed, to collide, a passenger, a wheel, to overturn
- to slip, a stumble, to stagger, to be grazed, covered in blood
- a mishap, injured, unconscious, to crush, to steady oneself
- an ember, to smoulder, a flame, to flare up, dry straw

- to blaze, to glow red-hot, a blaze, light, scorching heat
- a siren, to be flustered, to go out (of a fire or light), to melt, a blister
- a disaster, a warning, an announcement, careful, to be averted
- to shake (by itself), a jolt, a crack, to cave in, to be pressed down

Before you move on

Speed? (रफ़्तार, raftār.) To collide? (टकराना, ṭakrānā.) A passenger? (सवारी, savārī.) A wheel? (पहिया, pahiyā.) To overturn? (पलटना, palaṭnā.) To slip? (फिसलना, phisalnā.) A stumble? Chapter 304

The Storm

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a storm as it came.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 304: I can describe a storm as it came.

304.1 अँधेरा (ãdherā) — darkness

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to cave in, then the Hindi for to be pressed down.

You'll want to know: अँधेरा

अँधेरा — ãdherā — "darkness".

> दोपहर में ही अँधेरा हो गया।
> dopahar meṁ hī ãdherā ho gayā.
> It grew dark in the middle of the afternoon.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अँधेरा (ãdherā) goes back to Sanskrit andhakāra, "darkness" (CDIAL 386), built on andha, blind. अँधेरा होना is for it to grow dark; its opposite is उजाला.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ãdherā
- Say it: ãdherā, once more
- Say it: dopahar meṁ hī ãdherā ho gayā. — It grew dark in the middle of the afternoon.

You'll want to know: गरजना

गरजना — garajnā — "to thunder; to roar".

बादल ज़ोर से गरजे।

bādal zor se garje.

The clouds thundered loudly.

Past (it …): वह शेर गरजा, vah śer garjā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

गरजना (garajnā) comes from the Sanskrit verb garj, garjati, "roars, thunders" (Monier-Williams). Clouds गरजते हैं, and so do lions and angry people.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: garajnā
- Say it: garajnā, once more
- Say it: bādal zor se garje. — The clouds thundered loudly.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to be pressed down, then the Hindi for darkness, then say garajnā again

Before you move on

What does गरजना mean? ("To thunder; to roar".) Say it once more.

304.3 चमकना (camaknā) — to flash; to gleam

Before the new one: say the Hindi for darkness, then the Hindi for to thunder.

You'll want to know: चमकना

चमकना — camaknā — "to flash; to gleam".

आसमान में बिजली चमकी।

āsmān meṁ bijlī camkī.

Lightning flashed in the sky.

Past (it …): वह बिजली चमकी, vah bijlī camkī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

चमकना (camaknā) is inherited from camakka*, a sudden movement, a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 4676). चमकदार, shiny, is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: camaknā
- Say it: camaknā, once more
- Say it: āsmān meṁ bijlī camkī. — Lightning flashed in the sky.
- Recall: say the Hindi for darkness, then the Hindi for to thunder, then say camaknā again

Before you move on

What does चमकना mean? ("To flash; to gleam".) Say it once more.

304.4 मूसलाधार (mūslādhār) — torrential (of rain)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to thunder, then the Hindi for to flash.

You'll want to know: मूसलाधार

मूसलाधार — mūslādhār — "torrential (of rain)".

शाम को मूसलाधार बारिश हुई।

śām ko mūslādhār bāriś huī.

In the evening there was torrential rain.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

मूसलाधार (mūslādhār) joins Sanskrit musala, "a pestle", and dhārā, "a stream" (Monier-Williams): rain falling in streams as thick as a pestle. It is used of rain and of nothing else.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: mūslādhār
- Say it: mūslādhār, once more
- Say it: śām ko mūslādhār bāriś huī. — In the evening there was torrential rain.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to thunder, then the Hindi for to flash, then say mūslādhār again

Before you move on

You'll want to know: तबाही

तबाही — tabāhī — "destruction; havoc".

तूफ़ान ने पूरे शहर में तबाही की। tūfān ne pūre śahar meṁ tabāhī kī.

The storm wreaked havoc across the whole city.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

तबाही (tabāhī) is usually traced to Persian tabāhī, "ruin", from tabāh, ruined. A storm or a war तबाही करता है, or तबाही मचाता है.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: tabāhī
- Say it: tabāhī, once more
- Say it: tūfān ne pūre śahar meṁ tabāhī kī. — The storm wreaked havoc across the whole city.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to flash, then the Hindi for torrential (of rain), then say tabāhī again

Before you move on

What does तबाही mean? ("Destruction; havoc".) Say it once more.

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 305: I can say how a flood rose little by little.

305.1 उफनना (uphannā) — to swell up; to boil over

Before the new one: say the Hindi for torrential (of rain), then the Hindi for destruction.

You'll want to know: उफनना

उफनना — uphannā — "to swell up; to boil over".

> भारी बारिश के बाद नदी उफन गई।
> bhārī bāriś ke bād nadī uphan gaī.
> After the heavy rain the river swelled over its banks.

Past (it …): वह नदी उफनी, vah nadī uphnī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

उफनना (uphannā) is inherited from utphaṇati*, a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 1836). Milk on the fire उफनता है, and so does a river in flood.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: uphannā
- Say it: uphannā, once more
- Say it: bhārī bāriś ke bād nadī uphan gaī. — After the heavy rain the river swelled over its banks.
- Recall: say the Hindi for torrential (of rain), then the Hindi for destruction, then say uphannā again

Before you move on

What does उफनना mean? ("To swell up; to boil over".) Say it once more.

305.2 बाँध (b*ā̃*dh) — a dam; an embankment

Before the new one: say the Hindi for destruction, then the Hindi for to swell up.

You'll want to know: बाँध

बाँध — bā̃dh — "a dam; an embankment".

पानी के ज़ोर से बाँध टूट गया।

pānī ke zor se bā̃dh ṭūṭ gayā.

The force of the water broke the dam.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

comes from Sanskrit bandha, "a binding, a fastening" (Monier-Williams), the family of बाँधना, to tie: a बाँध ties the water in.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: bãdh
- Say it: bãdh, once more
- Say it: pānī ke zor se bãdh ṭūṭ gayā. — The force of the water broke the dam.

305.3 क्रमशः (kramśaḥ) — little by little; by degrees

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to swell up, then the Hindi for a dam.

You'll want to know: क्रमशः

क्रमशः — kramśaḥ — "little by little; by degrees".

नदी का पानी क्रमशः ऊपर आ रहा था। nadī kā pānī kramśaḥ ūpar ā rahā thā.

The river water was rising little by little.

Formal and written; speech says धीरे-धीरे.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

क्रमशः (kramśaḥ) is Sanskrit kramaśas, "step by step, by degrees" (Monier-Williams), from krama, a step. It ends in the sign ः. At the end of a newspaper story printed in parts it means "to be continued".

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: kramśaḥ
- Say it: kramśaḥ, once more
- Say it: nadī kā pānī kramśaḥ ūpar ā rahā thā. — The river water was rising little by little.

305.4 सैलाब (sailāb) — a deluge; a flood

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a dam, then the Hindi for little by little.

You'll want to know: सैलाब

सैलाब — sailāb — "a deluge; a flood".

इस साल का सैलाब पिछले साल से ज़्यादा बड़ा था। is sāl kā sailāb pichle sāl se zyādā baṛā thā.

This year's flood was bigger than last year's.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सैलाब (sailāb) is usually traced to Persian sailāb, "a flood", which joins Arabic sayl, a torrent, and Persian āb, water. Beside बाढ़, it is the word for a great rush of water.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: sailāb
- Say it: sailāb, once more
- Say it: is sāl kā sailāb pichle sāl se zyādā baṛā thā. — This year's flood was bigger than last year's.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a dam, then the Hindi for little by little, then say sailāb again

Before you move on

What does सैलाब mean? ("A deluge; a flood".) Say it once more.

305.5 भँवर (bhãvar) — a whirlpool

Before the new one: say the Hindi for little by little, then the Hindi for a deluge.

You'll want to know: भँवर

भँवर — bhãvar — "a whirlpool".

भँवर में एक नाव डूब गई।

bhãvar meṁ ek nāv ḍūb gaī.

A boat went down in the whirlpool.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family is listed by CDIAL under Sanskrit bhramara, “moving unsteadily, revolving” (CDIAL 9650), beside bhramaraka, a spinning top or a whirlpool, of the family of bhram, to whirl about. Water that turns round and round is a भँवर.

What you’ve built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: bhãvar
- Say it: bhãvar, once more
- Say it: bhãvar meṁ ek nāv ḍūb gaī. — A boat went down in the whirlpool.
- Recall: say the Hindi for little by little, then the Hindi for a deluge, then say bhãvar again

Before you move on

What does भँवर mean? (“A whirlpool”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 306

Famine and Sickness

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how hunger and disease spread.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 306: I can tell how hunger and disease spread.

306.1 अकाल (akāl) — a famine

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a deluge, then the Hindi for a whirlpool.

You'll want to know: अकाल

अकाल — akāl — "a famine".

> अकाल की वजह यह थी कि उस साल बारिश नहीं हुई।
> akāl kī vajah yah thī ki us sāl bāriś nahīṃ huī.
> The reason for the famine was that the rains failed that year.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अकाल (akāl) is Sanskrit akāla, "a wrong or bad time" (Monier-Williams). In Hindi it means a famine; the dictionary gives the older sense, and the step to a time of hunger is the language's own. A famine पड़ता है: it falls.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: akāl
- Say it: akāl, once more
- Say it: akāl kī vajah yah thī ki us sāl bāriś nahīṃ huī. — The reason for the famine was that the rains failed that year.

Before you move on

What does अकाल mean? ("A famine".) Say it once more.

306.2 भुखमरी (bhukhmarī) — starvation

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a whirlpool, then the Hindi for a famine.

You'll want to know: भुखमरी

भुखमरी — bhukhmarī — "starvation".

अकाल में बहुत लोग भुखमरी से मरे।

akāl meṁ bahut log bhukhmarī se mare.

Many people died of starvation in the famine.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

भुखमरी (bhukhmarī) joins भूख, hunger, from Sanskrit bubhukṣā (CDIAL 9286), with मरना, to die: dying of hunger. The vowel of भूख shortens inside the word.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: bhukhmarī
- Say it: bhukhmarī, once more
- Say it: akāl meṁ bahut log bhukhmarī se mare. — Many people died of starvation in the famine.

306.3 सड़ना (saṛnā) — to rot

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a famine, then the Hindi for starvation.

You'll want to know: सड़ना

सड़ना — saṛnā — "to rot".

बाढ़ के बाद खेतों में फ़सल सड़ गई।

bāṛh ke bād khetoṁ meṁ fasal saṛ gaī.

After the flood the crop rotted in the fields.

Past (it …): वह फल सड़ गया, vah phal saṛ gayā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सड़ना (saṛnā) is set by CDIAL under Sanskrit śaṭati (CDIAL 12268), with Hindi saṛnā, to rot. Fruit, grain and water सड़ते हैं.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: saṛnā
- Say it: saṛnā, once more
- Say it: bāṛh ke bād khetoṁ meṁ fasal saṛ gaī. — After the flood the crop rotted in the fields.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a famine, then the Hindi for starvation, then say saṛnā again

Before you move on

What does सड़ना mean? ("To rot".) Say it once more.

306.4 महामारी (mahāmārī) — an epidemic

Before the new one: say the Hindi for starvation, then the Hindi for to rot.

You'll want to know: महामारी

महामारी — mahāmārī — "an epidemic".

उस साल शहर में महामारी फैली।

us sāl śahar meṁ mahāmārī phailī.

That year an epidemic spread through the city.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

महामारी (mahāmārī) is Sanskrit mahāmārī (Monier-Williams), mahā, great, and mārī, pestilence, a word of the family of mṛ, to die. It is a disease that spreads to a whole people.

हुक्म (hukm) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic ḥukm, "a judgement, a ruling". हुक्म देना is to give an order.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: hukm
- Say it: hukm, once more
- Say it: rājā ke hukm se sipāhī gā̃v meṁ āe. — On the king's orders, soldiers came to the village.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a treaty, then the Hindi for the subjects (of a king), then say hukm again

Before you move on

What does हुक्म mean? ("An order; a command".) Say it once more.

324.3 ग़ुलाम (ġulām) — a slave

Before the new one: say the Hindi for the subjects (of a king), then the Hindi for an order.

You'll want to know: ग़ुलाम

ग़ुलाम — ġulām — "a slave".

उस राजा के महल में सौ ग़ुलाम थे। us rājā ke mahal meṁ sau ġulām the.

There were a hundred slaves in that king's palace.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ग़ुलाम (ġulām) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic ghulām, "a youth, a servant". In the history of freedom movements it also means a people ruled by others.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ġulām
- Say it: ġulām, once more
- Say it: us rājā ke mahal meṁ sau ġulām the. — There were a hundred slaves in that king's palace.
- Recall: say the Hindi for the subjects (of a king), then the Hindi for an order, then say ġulām again

Before you move on

What does ग़ुलाम mean? ("A slave".) Say it once more.

324.4 विद्रोह (vidroh) — a rebellion; a revolt

Before the new one: say the Hindi for an order, then the Hindi for a slave.

You'll want to know: विद्रोह

विद्रोह — vidroh — "a rebellion; a revolt".

भूख की वजह से किसानों ने विद्रोह किया। bhūkh kī vajah se kisānoṁ ne vidroh kiyā.

The farmers rose up because they were going hungry.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

विद्रोह (vidroh) is built from vi- and Sanskrit droha, "injury, treachery"; Monier-Williams gives droha and the verb vi-druh, "to injure, to do wrong", but not vidroha itself, and the sense of a revolt is probably the later language's own. Hindi uses it for a revolt: विद्रोह करना is to rise up against a ruler.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: vidroh
- Say it: vidroh, once more
- Say it: bhūkh kī vajah se kisānoṁ ne vidroh kiyā. — The farmers rose up because they were going hungry.
- Recall: say the Hindi for an order, then the Hindi for a slave, then say vidroh again

Before you move on

What does विद्रोह mean? ("A rebellion; a revolt".) Say it once more.

324.5 ललकारना (lalkārnā) — to challenge; to call out (an enemy)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a slave, then the Hindi for a rebellion.

You'll want to know: ललकारना

ललकारना — lalkārnā — "to challenge; to call out (an enemy)".

एक किसान ने राजा के सिपाहियों को ललकारा।

ek kisān ne rājā ke sipāhiyoṁ ko lalkārā.

A farmer challenged the king's soldiers.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने दुश्मन को ललकारा, usne duśman ko lalkārā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ललकारना (lalkārnā) is the verb of lalkār, a challenge, which CDIAL 10973 lists under lallakka*, a noise made to threaten: to shout at an enemy to come and fight.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: lalkārnā
- Say it: lalkārnā, once more
- Say it: ek kisān ne rājā ke sipāhiyoṁ ko lalkārā. — A farmer challenged the king's soldiers.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a slave, then the Hindi for a rebellion, then say lalkārnā again

Before you move on

What does ललकारना mean? ("To challenge; to call out (an enemy)".) Say it once more.

325.1 अंग्रेज़ (aṅgrez) — an English person

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a rebellion, then the Hindi for to challenge.

You'll want to know: अंग्रेज़

अंग्रेज़ — aṅgrez — "an English person".

> अंग्रेज़ दो सौ साल तक इस देश में रहे।
> aṅgrez do sau sāl tak is deś meṁ rahe.
> The English stayed in this country for two hundred years.

Masculine or feminine, by the person meant.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अंग्रेज़ (aṅgrez) is usually traced to Portuguese inglês, "English", through Persian angrez. अंग्रेज़ी, the English language, is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: aṅgrez
- Say it: aṅgrez, once more
- Say it: aṅgrez do sau sāl tak is deś meṁ rahe. — The English stayed in this country for two hundred years.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a rebellion, then the Hindi for to challenge, then say aṅgrez again

Before you move on

आंदोलन — āndolan — "a movement (of people)".

आज़ादी का आंदोलन पूरे देश में फैल गया।

āzādī kā āndolan pūre deś meṁ phail gayā.

The freedom movement spread across the whole country.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आंदोलन (āndolan) is Sanskrit āndolana, "a swinging, a rocking" (Monier-Williams). Modern Hindi uses it for a political movement; the dictionary has only the older sense.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: āndolan
- Say it: āndolan, once more
- Say it: āzādī kā āndolan pūre deś meṁ phail gayā. — The freedom movement spread across the whole country.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to challenge, then the Hindi for an English person, then say āndolan again

Before you move on

What does आंदोलन mean? ("A movement (of people)".) Say it once more.

325.3 संघर्ष (saṅgharṣ) — a struggle

Before the new one: say the Hindi for an English person, then the Hindi for a movement (of people).

You'll want to know: संघर्ष

संघर्ष — saṅgharṣ — "a struggle".

आज़ादी के लिए लोगों ने लंबा संघर्ष किया। āzādī ke liye logoṁ ne lambā saṅgharṣ kiyā.

People waged a long struggle for freedom.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

संघर्ष (saṅgharṣ) is Sanskrit saṁgharṣa (Monier-Williams), a rubbing together and so a rivalry: in Hindi, a long fight against hardship or against a ruler.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: saṅgharṣ
- Say it: saṅgharṣ, once more
- Say it: āzādī ke liye logoṁ ne lambā saṅgharṣ kiyā. — People waged a long struggle for freedom.
- Recall: say the Hindi for an English person, then the Hindi for a movement (of people), then say saṅgharṣ again

Before you move on

What does संघर्ष mean? ("A struggle".) Say it once more.

325.4 बलिदान (balidān) — a sacrifice

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a movement (of people), then the Hindi for a struggle.

You'll want to know: बलिदान

बलिदान — balidān — "a sacrifice".

उस आंदोलन में हज़ारों लोगों ने बलिदान दिया। us āndolan meṁ hazāroṁ logoṁ ne balidān diyā.

Thousands of people gave their lives in that movement.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बलिदान (balidān) is Sanskrit balidāna, bali, an offering, and dāna, giving (Monier-Williams). In history it is giving one's life for others.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: balidān
- Say it: balidān, once more
- Say it: us āndolan meṁ hazāroṁ logoṁ ne balidān diyā. — Thousands of people gave their lives in that movement.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a movement (of people), then the Hindi for a struggle, then say balidān again

Before you move on

What does बलिदान mean? ("A sacrifice".) Say it once more.

325.5 सौंपना (saumpnā) — to entrust; to hand over

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a struggle, then the Hindi for a sacrifice.

You'll want to know: सौंपना

सौंपना — saumpnā — "to entrust; to hand over".

जाने से पहले राजा ने क़िले की चाबी अपने बेटे को सौंपी। jāne se pahle rājā ne qile kī cābī apne beṭe ko saumpī.

Before leaving, the king handed the key of the fort to his son.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने चाबी सौंपी, usne cābī saumpī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सौंपना (saumpnā) goes back to Sanskrit samarpayati, "hands over" (CDIAL 13192). What is handed over agrees with the verb: चाबी सौंपी; the person who receives it takes को.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: saumpnā
- Say it: saumpnā, once more
- Say it: jāne se pahle rājā ne qile kī cābī apne beṭe ko saumpī. — Before leaving, the king handed the key of the fort to his son.

Chapter 326

Ruins of the Past

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe old ruins and what was found there.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 326: I can describe old ruins and what was found there.

326.1 खंडहर (khaṇḍhar) — ruins

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a sacrifice, then the Hindi for to entrust.

You'll want to know: खंडहर

खंडहर — khaṇḍhar — "ruins".

> खंडहर के लिए सीधे जाइए और मंदिर के बाद दाएँ मुड़िए।
> khaṇḍhar ke liye sīdhe jāie aur mandir ke bād dāẽ muṛiye.
> For the ruins, go straight on and turn right after the temple.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खंडहर (khaṇḍhar) is probably khaṇḍ, broken, from Sanskrit khaṇḍa, "a piece, a fragment" (Monier-Williams), with घर, a house, worn down: a house in pieces.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: khaṇḍhar
- Say it: khaṇḍhar, once more
- Say it: khaṇḍhar ke liye sīdhe jāie aur mandir ke bād dāẽ muṛiye. — For the ruins, go straight on and turn right after the temple.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a sacrifice, then the Hindi for to entrust, then say khaṇḍhar again

Before you move on

What does खंडहर mean? ("Ruins".) Say it once more.

326.2 खोदना (khodnā) — to dig

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to entrust, then the Hindi for ruins.

You'll want to know: खोदना

खोदना — khodnā — "to dig".

मज़दूरों ने खंडहर के पास मिट्टी खोदी। mazdūroṁ ne khaṇḍhar ke pās miṭṭī khodī.

The labourers dug up the earth near the ruins.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने कुआँ खोदा, usne kuā̃ khodā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

खोदना (khodnā) is inherited from khōdd*, a form CDIAL reconstructs for digging (CDIAL 3934). What is dug agrees: मिट्टी खोदी, कुआँ खोदा.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: khodnā
- Say it: khodnā, once more
- Say it: mazdūroṁ ne khaṇḍhar ke pās miṭṭī khodī. — The labourers dug up the earth near the ruins.

शिलालेख — śilālekh — "an inscription (on stone)".

उस शिलालेख पर एक राजा का नाम है। us śilālekh par ek rājā kā nām hai.

That inscription bears a king's name.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

शिलालेख (śilālekh) joins Sanskrit śilā, "a stone", and lekha, "a writing" (Monier-Williams): words cut into rock, one of the oldest sources of history.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: śilālekh
- Say it: śilālekh, once more
- Say it: us śilālekh par ek rājā kā nām hai. — That inscription bears a king's name.

Before you move on

What does शिलालेख mean? ("An inscription (on stone)".) Say it once more.

326.5 अवशेष (avśeṣ) — remains

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a statue, then the Hindi for an inscription (on stone).

You'll want to know: अवशेष

अवशेष — avśeṣ — "remains".

खंडहर में एक पुराने मंदिर के अवशेष भी हैं। khaṇḍhar meṁ ek purāne mandir ke avśeṣ bhī haiṁ.

Among the ruins are the remains of an old temple too.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अवशेष (avśeṣ) is Sanskrit avaśeṣa, "a remainder, what is left" (Monier-Williams). It is mostly used in the plural sense: what is left of a building or a body.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: avśeṣ
- Say it: avśeṣ, once more
- Say it: khaṇḍhar meṁ ek purāne mandir ke avśeṣ bhī haiṁ. — Among the ruins are the remains of an old temple too.

327.3 वंश (vaṁś) — a family line; a dynasty

Before the new one: say the Hindi for an ancestor, then the Hindi for to settle.

You'll want to know: वंश

वंश — vaṁś — "a family line; a dynasty".

उस राजा का वंश तीन सौ साल चला। us rājā kā vaṁś tīn sau sāl calā.

That king's dynasty lasted three hundred years.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

वंश (vaṁś) is Sanskrit vaṁśa (Monier-Williams), a bamboo and then a lineage, one joint growing out of the last.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: vaṁś
- Say it: vaṁś, once more
- Say it: us rājā kā vaṁś tīn sau sāl calā. — That king's dynasty lasted three hundred years.

You'll want to know: युग

युग — yug — "an age; an era".

वह युग अब बीत गया।

vah yug ab bīt gayā.

That age has passed now.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

युग (yug) is Sanskrit yuga (Monier-Williams), a yoke and then an age of the world. Hindi uses it for any long period: आधुनिक युग, the modern age.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: yug
- Say it: yug, once more

328.1 रंगोली (raṅgolī) — a rangoli, a coloured pattern on the floor

Before the new one: say the Hindi for an age, then the Hindi for to be ruined.

You'll want to know: रंगोली

रंगोली — raṅgolī — "a rangoli, a coloured pattern on the floor".

> मीरा ने आँगन में रंगोली बनाई।
> Mīrā ne āṁgan meṁ raṅgolī banāī.
> Mira made a rangoli in the courtyard.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रंगोली (raṅgolī) is probably built on रंग, colour, from Sanskrit raṅga (Monier-Williams); the rest of the word is not settled. It is drawn on the floor at the door for a festival.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: raṅgolī
- Say it: raṅgolī, once more
- Say it: Mīrā ne āṁgan meṁ raṅgolī banāī. — Mira made a rangoli in the courtyard.

- Recall: say the Hindi for a compromise, then the Hindi for a dispute, then say ulajhnā again

Before you move on

What does उलझना mean? ("To get tangled, to get bogged down".) Say it once more.

359.5 छेड़ना (cheṛnā) — to raise (a topic); to tease

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a dispute, then the Hindi for to get tangled.

You'll want to know: छेड़ना

छेड़ना — cheṛnā — "to raise (a topic); to tease".

बैठक में अरुण ने पानी का मुद्दा छेड़ा। baiṭhak meṁ Aruṇ ne pānī kā muddā cheṛā.

At the meeting Arun brought up the water issue.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने वही बात फिर छेड़ी, usne vahī bāt phir cheṛī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

छेड़ना (cheṛnā) is inherited from chēḍ-, a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants and files under ciḍ, "be angry" (CDIAL 4794). CDIAL glosses the Hindi verb "to touch, to irritate"; raising a topic is a sense it does not give.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: cheṛnā
- Say it: cheṛnā, once more
- Say it: baiṭhak meṁ Aruṇ ne pānī kā muddā cheṛā. — At the meeting Arun brought up the water issue.

360.1 आपत्ति (āpatti) — an objection

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to get tangled, then the Hindi for to raise (a topic).

You'll want to know: आपत्ति

आपत्ति — āpatti — "an objection".

> मुझे तुम्हारे विचार पर कोई आपत्ति नहीं है।
> mujhe tumhāre vicār par koī āpatti nahīṃ hai.
> I have no objection to your idea.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आपत्ति (āpatti) is a tatsama, borrowed from Sanskrit āpatti, "an occurrence; a mishap" (Monier-Williams). Monier-Williams does not give the sense of an objection, which is a later Hindi one.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

फुसलाना — phuslānā — "to coax, to wheedle".

बच्चा दवा नहीं पी रहा था, इसलिए माँ ने उसे फुसलाया। baccā davā nahīṃ pī rahā thā, isliye māṁ ne use phuslāyā.

The child wouldn't take the medicine, so his mother coaxed him.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने बच्चे को फुसलाया, usne bacce ko phuslāyā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

फुसलाना (phuslānā) is a tadbhava, inherited from Sanskrit spṛśati, "touches" (CDIAL 13815). CDIAL lists the Hindi verb, "to cajole", under this entry; the step from touching to coaxing is not spelled out there.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: phuslānā
- Say it: phuslānā, once more
- Say it: baccā davā nahīṃ pī rahā thā, isliye māṁ ne use phuslāyā. — The child wouldn't take the medicine, so his mother coaxed him.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a point of view, then the Hindi for to threaten, then say phuslānā again

Before you move on

What does फुसलाना mean? ("To coax, to wheedle".) Say it once more.

> The porter sat my grandmother down in a seat.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने मेहमान को कुर्सी पर बिठाया, usne mehmān ko kursī par biṭhāyā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बिठाना (biṭhānā) is the causative partner of बैठना, "to sit", which goes back to Sanskrit upaviśati, "sits down" (CDIAL 2245): you बैठना yourself, and you बिठाना someone else.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: biṭhānā
- Say it: biṭhānā, once more
- Say it: kulī ne dādī ko sīṭ par biṭhāyā. — The porter sat my grandmother down in a seat.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to haul, then the Hindi for to load (onto), then say biṭhānā again

Before you move on

What does बिठाना mean? ("To seat (someone); to make (someone) sit".) Say it once more.

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 399: I can talk about the railway line, the engine and the carriages, and a train sliding forward.

399.1 लाइन (lāin) — a line; a railway line

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to load (onto), then the Hindi for to seat (someone).

You'll want to know: लाइन

लाइन — lāin — "a line; a railway line".

> रेल की लाइन नदी के किनारे जाती है।
> rel kī lāin nadī ke kināre jātī hai.
> The railway line runs along the river bank.

Feminine.
Also a queue of people: लाइन में खड़े रहिए, stay in the line.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

लाइन (lāin) is borrowed from English line, used in Hindi for a railway line, a row of people and a line on a page.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: lāin
- Say it: lāin, once more
- Say it: rel kī lāin nadī ke kināre jātī hai. — The railway line runs along the river bank.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to load (onto), then the Hindi for to seat (someone), then say lāin again

Before you move on

What does लाइन mean? ("A line; a railway line".) Say it once more.

399.2 इंजन (injan) — an engine

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to seat (someone), then the Hindi for a line.

You'll want to know: इंजन

इंजन — injan — "an engine".

इंजन बहुत पुराना था, पर तेज़ चलता था। injan bahut purānā thā, par tez caltā thā.

The engine was very old, but it ran fast.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

इंजन (injan) is English engine, taken over with the railways; the English soft g is said with ज.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: injan
- Say it: injan, once more
- Say it: injan bahut purānā thā, par tez caltā thā. — The engine was very old, but it ran fast.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to seat (someone), then the Hindi for a line, then say injan again

Before you move on

What does इंजन mean? ("An engine".) Say it once more.

399.3 स्लीपर (slīpar) — a sleeper carriage; sleeper class

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a line, then the Hindi for an engine.

You'll want to know: स्लीपर

स्लीपर — slīpar — "a sleeper carriage; sleeper class".

मेरा टिकट स्लीपर में है।

merā ṭikaṭ slīpar meṁ hai.

My ticket is for the sleeper class.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

स्लीपर (slīpar) is borrowed from English sleeper, short for a sleeper carriage, where the seats fold out into berths for the night.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: slīpar
- Say it: slīpar, once more
- Say it: merā ṭikaṭ slīpar meṁ hai. — My ticket is for the sleeper class.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a line, then the Hindi for an engine, then say slīpar again

Before you move on

What does स्लीपर mean? ("A sleeper carriage; sleeper class".) Say it once more.

399.4 सीटी (sīṭī) — a whistle

Before the new one: say the Hindi for an engine, then the Hindi for a sleeper carriage.

You'll want to know: सीटी

सीटी — sīṭī — "a whistle".

ट्रेन ने लंबी सीटी दी।

ṭren ne lambī sīṭī dī.

The train gave a long whistle.

Feminine.
सीटी देना or सीटी बजाना, to blow a whistle.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सीटी (sīṭī) goes back to sīṭṭa*, "whistle", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants and treats as imitative of the sound itself (CDIAL 13427).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: sīṭī
- Say it: sīṭī, once more
- Say it: ṭren ne lambī sīṭī dī. — The train gave a long whistle.
- Recall: say the Hindi for an engine, then the Hindi for a sleeper carriage, then say sīṭī again

Before you move on

What does सीटी mean? ("A whistle".) Say it once more.

399.5 सरकना (saraknā) — to slide; to shift along

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a sleeper carriage, then the Hindi for a whistle.

You'll want to know: सरकना

सरकना — saraknā — "to slide; to shift along".

ट्रेन धीरे आगे सरक रही थी।

ṭren dhīre āge sarak rahī thī.

The train was sliding slowly forward.

Past (it …): वह मेज़ थोड़ी आगे सरकी, vah mez thoṛī āge sarkī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सरकना (saraknā) goes back to Sanskrit sarati, "runs, flows, glides" (CDIAL 13250), which lists Hindi saraknā in the sense of drawing back; in everyday Hindi it is a slow slide along a surface.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: saraknā
- Say it: saraknā, once more
- Say it: ṭren dhīre āge sarak rahī thī. — The train was sliding slowly forward.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a sleeper carriage, then the Hindi for a whistle, then say saraknā again

Before you move on

What does सरकना mean? ("To slide; to shift along".) Say it once more.

Chapter 400

Reservations and Berths

Modes: 🚌 voice (5) 🚌 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I have a reservation and a berth, wait for a train and have my ticket checked.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 400: I can say I have a reservation and a berth, wait for a train and have my ticket checked.

400.1 आरक्षण (ārakṣaṇ) — a reservation (of a seat)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a whistle, then the Hindi for to slide.

You'll want to know: आरक्षण

आरक्षण — ārakṣaṇ — "a reservation (of a seat)".

> मेरे पास इस ट्रेन में आरक्षण है।
> mere pās is ṭren meṁ ārakṣaṇ hai.
> I have a reservation on this train.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

आरक्षण (ārakṣaṇ) is a learned word built from Sanskrit ā- and rakṣaṇa, "guarding, protecting" (Monier-Williams). A reserved seat is one kept safe for you; the railway sense is modern.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ārakṣaṇ
- Say it: ārakṣaṇ, once more
- Say it: mere pās is ṭren meṁ ārakṣaṇ hai. — I have a reservation on this train.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a whistle, then the Hindi for to slide, then say ārakṣaṇ again

Before you move on

What does आरक्षण mean? ("A reservation (of a seat)".) Say it once more.

400.2 बर्थ (barth) — a berth (on a train)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to slide, then the Hindi for a reservation (of a seat).

You'll want to know: बर्थ

बर्थ — barth — "a berth (on a train)".

मेरी बर्थ ऊपर है और मीरा की नीचे।

merī barth ūpar hai aur Mīrā kī nīce.

My berth is the upper one and Mira's is the lower one.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बर्थ (barth) is borrowed from English berth, a sleeping place on a ship or a train; the English th is said with थ.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: barth
- Say it: barth, once more
- Say it: merī barth ūpar hai aur Mīrā kī nīce. — My berth is the upper one and Mira's is the lower one.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to slide, then the Hindi for a reservation (of a seat), then say barth again

Before you move on

What does बर्थ mean? ("A berth (on a train)".) Say it once more.

400.3 प्रतीक्षा (pratīkṣā) — waiting; a wait (formal)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a reservation (of a seat), then the Hindi for a berth.

You'll want to know: प्रतीक्षा

प्रतीक्षा — pratīkṣā — "waiting; a wait (formal)".

हम दो घंटे से ट्रेन की प्रतीक्षा कर रहे हैं। ham do ghaṇṭe se ṭren kī pratīkṣā kar rahe haiṁ.

We have been waiting for the train for two hours.

Feminine.

Station signs read प्रतीक्षालय, the waiting room; a ticket on the waiting list is on the प्रतीक्षा सूची.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

प्रतीक्षा (pratīkṣā) is a tatsama, the Sanskrit word pratīkṣā, "expectation, looking out for" (Monier-Williams), kept unchanged. It belongs to signs and announcements; in talk people say इंतज़ार.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pratīkṣā
- Say it: pratīkṣā, once more
- Say it: ham do ghaṇṭe se ṭren kī pratīkṣā kar rahe haiṁ. — We have been waiting for the train for two hours.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a reservation (of a seat), then the Hindi for a berth, then say pratīkṣā again

Before you move on

What does प्रतीक्षा mean? ("Waiting; a wait (formal)".) Say it once more.

400.4 जाँचना (jā̃cnā) — to check; to examine

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a berth, then the Hindi for waiting.

You'll want to know: जाँचना

जाँचना — jā̃cnā — "to check; to examine".

एक आदमी ने हमारे टिकट जाँचे।

ek ādmī ne hamāre ṭikaṭ jā̃ce.

A man checked our tickets.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने टिकट जाँचा, usne ṭikaṭ jā̃cā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

जाँचना (jā̃cnā) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit yācyate, "is asked" (CDIAL 10449), which lists Hindi jā̃cnā, "to test". Asking turned into questioning a thing until you know it is right.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: jā̃cnā
- Say it: jā̃cnā, once more
- Say it: ek ādmī ne hamāre ṭikaṭ jā̃ce. — A man checked our tickets.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a berth, then the Hindi for waiting, then say jā̃cnā again

Before you move on

What does जाँचना mean? ("To check; to examine".) Say it once more.

400.5 रवाना (ravānā) — setting off; on its way

Before the new one: say the Hindi for waiting, then the Hindi for to check.

You'll want to know: रवाना

रवाना — ravānā — "setting off; on its way".

ट्रेन सुबह छह बजे रवाना हुई।

ṭren subah chah baje ravānā huī.

The train set off at six in the morning.

रवाना होना, to set off; रवाना करना, to send off.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रवाना (ravānā) is usually traced to Persian ravāna, "going, flowing, setting out". It does not change for gender: ट्रेन रवाना हुई, the train left.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ravānā
- Say it: ravānā, once more
- Say it: ṭren subah chah baje ravānā huī. — The train set off at six in the morning.
- Recall: say the Hindi for waiting, then the Hindi for to check, then say ravānā again

Before you move on

What does रवाना mean? ("Setting off; on its way".) Say it once more.

401.1 फाटक (phāṭak) — a gate; a level crossing

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to check, then the Hindi for setting off.

You'll want to know: फाटक

फाटक — phāṭak — "a gate; a level crossing".

> फाटक बंद था, इसलिए हमें रुकना पड़ा।
> phāṭak band thā, isliye hamẽ ruknā paṛā.
> The crossing gate was shut, so we had to stop.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

फाटक (phāṭak) goes back to phāṭṭakka*, "gate, door", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 9069), which lists Hindi phāṭak. Beside a railway line it is the barrier that drops across the road.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: phāṭak
- Say it: phāṭak, once more
- Say it: phāṭak band thā, isliye hamẽ ruknā paṛā. — The crossing gate was shut, so we had to stop.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to check, then the Hindi for setting off, then say phāṭak again

Before you move on

What does फाटक mean? ("A gate; a level crossing".) Say it once more.

401.2 सिग्नल (signal) — a signal

Before the new one: say the Hindi for setting off, then the Hindi for a gate.

You'll want to know: सिग्नल

सिग्नल — signal — "a signal".

सिग्नल लाल था, तो ट्रेन रुक गई। signal lāl thā, to ṭren ruk gaī.

The signal was red, so the train stopped.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सिग्नल (signal) is borrowed from English signal, for the railway signal and the traffic light alike.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: signal
- Say it: signal, once more
- Say it: signal lāl thā, to ṭren ruk gaī. — The signal was red, so the train stopped.

401.3 जंक्शन (jaṅkśan) — a junction; a railway junction

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a gate, then the Hindi for a signal.

You'll want to know: जंक्शन

जंक्शन — jaṅkśan — "a junction; a railway junction".

यह स्टेशन एक बड़ा जंक्शन है।

yah sṭeśan ek baṛā jaṅkśan hai.

This station is a big junction.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

जंक्शन (jaṅkśan) is borrowed from English junction, a station where railway lines meet; many station names end in it.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: jaṅkśan
- Say it: jaṅkśan, once more
- Say it: yah sṭeśan ek baṛā jaṅkśan hai. — This station is a big junction.

Before you move on

What does जंक्शन mean? ("A junction; a railway junction".) Say it once more.

401.4 लाँघना (lā̃ghnā) — to step over; to cross (a line)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a signal, then the Hindi for a junction.

You'll want to know: लाँघना

लाँघना — lā̃ghnā — "to step over; to cross (a line)".

रेल की लाइन लाँघना ख़तरनाक है।

rel kī lāin lā̃ghnā khatarnāk hai.

Crossing the railway line on foot is dangerous.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने दीवार लाँघी, usne dīvār lā̃ghī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

लाँघना (lā̃ghnā) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit laṅghayati, "leaps over" (CDIAL 10905); the nasal before gh has become the nasal vowel ã.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: lā̃ghnā
- Say it: lā̃ghnā, once more
- Say it: rel kī lāin lā̃ghnā khatarnāk hai. — Crossing the railway line on foot is dangerous.

Before you move on

What does लाँघना mean? ("To step over; to cross (a line)".) Say it once more.

401.5 ताकना (tāknā) — to look out (at); to stare

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a junction, then the Hindi for to step over.

You'll want to know: ताकना

ताकना — tāknā — "to look out (at); to stare".

मीरा खिड़की से खेतों को ताक रही थी।

Mīrā khiṛkī se khetoṁ ko tāk rahī thī.

Mira was gazing at the fields from the window.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने आसमान को ताका, usne āsmān ko tākā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ताकना (tāknā) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit tarkayati, "guesses, thinks" (CDIAL 5716), which lists Hindi tāknā, "to look for". How the sense moved to a long, fixed look is not spelled out there, so take the path as likely, not proven.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: tāknā
- Say it: tāknā, once more
- Say it: Mīrā khiṛkī se khetoṁ ko tāk rahī thī. — Mira was gazing at the fields from the window.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a junction, then the Hindi for to step over, then say tāknā again

Before you move on

What does ताकना mean? ("To look out (at); to stare".) Say it once more.

ek rāhgīr ne hamẽ rāstā batāyā.

A passer-by showed us the way.

Masculine or feminine, by the person meant.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

राहगीर (rāhgīr) is usually traced to Persian rāhgīr, "one who takes the road", from rāh, "road": anyone walking past whom you might ask the way.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: rāhgīr
- Say it: rāhgīr, once more
- Say it: ek rāhgīr ne hamẽ rāstā batāyā. — A passer-by showed us the way.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to rest a while, then the Hindi for a stand, then say rāhgīr again

Before you move on

What does राहगीर mean? ("A passer-by".) Say it once more.

403.3 फ़ुटपाथ (fuṭpāth) — a pavement, a footpath

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a stand, then the Hindi for a passer-by.

You'll want to know: फ़ुटपाथ

फ़ुटपाथ — fuṭpāth — "a pavement, a footpath".

फ़ुटपाथ पर बहुत भीड़ थी।

fuṭpāth par bahut bhīṛ thī.

The pavement was very crowded.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

फ़ुटपाथ (fuṭpāth) is borrowed from English footpath, in India the raised pavement beside a city road.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: fuṭpāth
- Say it: fuṭpāth, once more
- Say it: fuṭpāth par bahut bhīṛ thī. — The pavement was very crowded.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a stand, then the Hindi for a passer-by, then say fuṭpāth again

Before you move on

What does फ़ुटपाथ mean? ("A pavement, a footpath".) Say it once more.

403.4 टहलना (ṭahalnā) — to take a stroll; to walk up and down

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a passer-by, then the Hindi for a pavement.

You'll want to know: टहलना

टहलना — ṭahalnā — "to take a stroll; to walk up and down".

हम शाम को पार्क में टहलते हैं। ham śām ko pārk meṁ ṭahalte haiṁ.

We stroll in the park in the evening.

Past (he …): वह नदी के किनारे टहला, vah nadī ke kināre ṭahlā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

टहलना (ṭahalnā) goes back to ṭahall*, "walk up and down", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 5453), which lists Hindi ṭahalnā, "to take a walk". घूमना wanders; टहलना strolls for the pleasure of it.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭahalnā
- Say it: ṭahalnā, once more
- Say it: ham śām ko pārk meṁ ṭahalte haiṁ. — We stroll in the park in the evening.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a passer-by, then the Hindi for a pavement, then say ṭahalnā again

Before you move on sīṛhiyā̃ caṛhkar maiṁ hā̃ph rahā thā.

I was panting after climbing the stairs.

Past (he …): वह बहुत हाँफा, vah bahut hā̃phā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हाँफना (hā̃phnā) goes back to hamph*, "pant", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 13973), which lists Hindi hā̃phnā; the word itself sounds like the breathing it names.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: hā̃phnā
- Say it: hā̃phnā, once more
- Say it: sīṛhiyā̃ caṛhkar maiṁ hā̃ph rahā thā. — I was panting after climbing the stairs.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a pavement, then the Hindi for to take a stroll, then say hā̃phnā again

Before you move on

What does हाँफना mean? ("To pant".) Say it once more.

> शाम को सड़क पर बहुत ट्रैफ़िक होता है।
> śām ko saṛak par bahut ṭraifik hotā hai.
> There is a lot of traffic on the road in the evening.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ट्रैफ़िक (ṭraifik) is borrowed from English traffic, and like its source it takes no plural: बहुत ट्रैफ़िक, a lot of traffic.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭraifik
- Say it: ṭraifik, once more
- Say it: śām ko saṛak par bahut ṭraifik hotā hai. — There is a lot of traffic on the road in the evening.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to take a stroll, then the Hindi for to pant, then say ṭraifik again

Before you move on

What does ट्रैफ़िक mean? ("Traffic".) Say it once more.

404.4 रेंगना (reṅgnā) — to crawl

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a traffic jam, then the Hindi for a motorcycle.

You'll want to know: रेंगना

रेंगना — reṅgnā — "to crawl".

जाम में गाड़ियाँ रेंग रही थीं। jām meṁ gāṛiyā̃ reṅg rahī thīṁ.

The cars were crawling along in the jam.

Past (it …): वह साँप घास में रेंगा, vah sā̃p ghās meṁ reṅgā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रेंगना (reṅgnā) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit riṅgati, "crawls" (CDIAL 10739), which lists Hindi rẽgnā. A baby, a snake and a jammed lane of traffic all crawl.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: reṅgnā
- Say it: reṅgnā, once more

Before you move on

What does रेंगना mean? ("To crawl".) Say it once more.

404.5 हाँकना (hā̃knā) — to drive (animals); to drive (a cart)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a motorcycle, then the Hindi for to crawl.

You'll want to know: हाँकना

हाँकना — hā̃knā — "to drive (animals); to drive (a cart)".

एक किसान सड़क पर भैंसें हाँक रहा था।

ek kisān saṛak par bhaĩsẽ hā̃k rahā thā.

A farmer was driving buffaloes along the road.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने गायें हाँकीं, usne gāyẽ hā̃kīṁ.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

हाँकना (hā̃knā) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit hakkayati, "calls to" (CDIAL 13939), which lists Hindi hā̃knā, "to cry out, drive off": cattle are driven by shouting at them.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: hā̃knā
- Say it: hā̃knā, once more

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 405: I can talk about speed, potholes and the conductor, a bumpy ride and a road that branches off.

405.1 गति (gati) — speed (formal); motion

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to crawl, then the Hindi for to drive (animals).

You'll want to know: गति

गति — gati — "speed (formal); motion".

> इस सड़क पर गति सीमा चालीस है।
> is saṛak par gati sīmā cālīs hai.
> The speed limit on this road is forty.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

गति (gati) is a tatsama, Sanskrit gati, "going, moving, motion" (Monier-Williams), kept unchanged; road signs and the news use it: गति सीमा, the speed limit.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: gati
- Say it: gati, once more
- Say it: is saṛak par gati sīmā cālīs hai. — The speed limit on this road is forty.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to crawl, then the Hindi for to drive (animals), then say gati again

Before you move on

गड्ढा — gaḍḍhā — "a pothole; a pit".

इस सड़क में बहुत गड्ढे हैं। is saṛak meṁ bahut gaḍḍhe haiṁ.

This road has a lot of potholes.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

गड्ढा (gaḍḍhā) belongs with gaḍḍa*, "hole, pit", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 3981); CDIAL gives Hindi gāṛā, "hole", there, but not this form with ḍḍh, so the link is probable rather than shown.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: gaḍḍhā
- Say it: gaḍḍhā, once more
- Say it: is saṛak meṁ bahut gaḍḍhe haiṁ. — This road has a lot of potholes.

405.4 उछलना (uchalnā) — to bounce; to jump up

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a pothole, then the Hindi for a conductor.

You'll want to know: उछलना

उछलना — uchalnā — "to bounce; to jump up".

गड्ढे में बस उछली और सब लोग हँस पड़े।

gaḍḍhe meṁ bas uchlī aur sab log hãs paṛe.

The bus bounced in the pothole and everyone burst out laughing.

Past (he ...): वह बच्चा ख़ुशी से उछला, vah baccā khuśī se uchlā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

उछलना (uchalnā) goes back to ut-śalati*, "springs up", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 1843), which lists Hindi uchalnā, "to leap".

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: uchalnā
- Say it: uchalnā, once more
- Say it: gaḍḍhe meṁ bas uchlī aur sab log hãs paṛe. — The bus bounced in the pothole and everyone burst out laughing.

Before you move on

What does उछलना mean? ("To bounce; to jump up".) Say it once more.

405.5 कटना (kaṭnā) — to be cut; to branch off (of a road)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a conductor, then the Hindi for to bounce.

You'll want to know: कटना

कटना — kaṭnā — "to be cut; to branch off (of a road)".

आगे से एक सड़क बाएँ कटती है।

āge se ek saṛak bāẽ kaṭtī hai.

Further on, a road branches off to the left.

Past (it …): वह पतंग कट गई, vah patang kaṭ gaī.
बिजली कट गई, the power went off.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कटना (kaṭnā) is the intransitive partner of काटना, both from Sanskrit kartati, "cuts" (CDIAL 2854), which lists Hindi kaṭnā, "to be cut". A side road कटती where it cuts away from the main one.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kaṭnā
- Say it: kaṭnā, once more
- Say it: āge se ek saṛak bāẽ kaṭtī hai. — Further on, a road branches off to the left.

नाका — nākā — "a checkpoint (on a road)".

शहर के नाके पर पुलिस गाड़ियाँ रोक रही थी। śahar ke nāke par pulis gāṛiyā̃ rok rahī thī.

At the checkpoint into the town the police were stopping cars.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

नाका (nākā) goes back to nākka*, "like a nose, projecting", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 7037), which lists Hindi nākā, "the end of a road, a passage, a gap": the narrow point where a road enters a town, and so the post that watches it.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: nākā
- Say it: nākā, once more
- Say it: śahar ke nāke par pulis gāṛiyā̃ rok rahī thī. — At the checkpoint into the town the police were stopping cars.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a highway, then the Hindi for a toll, then say nākā again

Before you move on

What does नाका mean? ("A checkpoint (on a road)".) Say it once more.

407.4 क़ाफ़िला (qāfilā) — a convoy; a caravan

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a toll, then the Hindi for a checkpoint.

You'll want to know: क़ाफ़िला

क़ाफ़िला — qāfilā — "a convoy; a caravan".

राजमार्ग पर ट्रकों का एक लंबा क़ाफ़िला जा रहा था। rājmārg par ṭrakoṁ kā ek lambā qāfilā jā rahā thā.

A long convoy of lorries was moving along the highway.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

क़ाफ़िला (qāfilā) is usually traced to Arabic qāfila, "a caravan", which came to Hindi through Persian: once a line of camels and travellers crossing the desert together, now any line of vehicles on the move.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: qāfilā

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a checkpoint, then the Hindi for a convoy.

You'll want to know: बहाना

बहाना — bahānā — "to wash away; to make (water) flow".

बाढ़ ने पुराना पुल बहा दिया। bāṛh ne purānā pul bahā diyā.

The flood washed away the old bridge.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने नाली में पानी बहाया, usne nālī meṁ pānī bahāyā.

A different word, the noun बहाना, an excuse, is spelled the same way.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बहाना (bahānā) is the causative partner of बहना, "to flow", from Sanskrit vahati, "carries along" (CDIAL 11453): to make water flow, or to let it carry a thing away.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bahānā
- Say it: bahānā, once more
- Say it: bāṛh ne purānā pul bahā diyā. — The flood washed away the old bridge.

- Say it: sulānā, once more
- Say it: māṁ ne bacce ko kheme meṁ sulāyā. — The mother put the child to sleep in the tent.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to send for, then the Hindi for a tent (for camping), then say sulānā again

Before you move on

What does सुलाना mean? ("To put to sleep; to lull (someone) to sleep".) Say it once more.

416.3 बसेरा (baserā) — a roost; a night's shelter

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a tent (for camping), then the Hindi for to put to sleep.

You'll want to know: बसेरा

बसेरा — baserā — "a roost; a night's shelter".

शाम को चिड़ियाँ अपने बसेरे में लौटती हैं। śām ko ciṛiyā̃ apne basere meṁ lauṭṭī haiṁ.

In the evening the birds go back to their roost.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बसेरा (baserā) goes back to vāsakara*, "making a stay", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 11594), which lists Hindi baserā, "a place of staying": a bird's roost, or a traveller's bed for one night.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: baserā
- Say it: baserā, once more
- Say it: śām ko ciṛiyā̃ apne basere meṁ lauṭṭī haiṁ. — In the evening the birds go back to their roost.

416.4 गुज़ारना (guzārnā) — to spend (time); to get through

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to put to sleep, then the Hindi for a roost.

You'll want to know: गुज़ारना

गुज़ारना — guzārnā — "to spend (time); to get through".

हमने जंगल में दो रातें गुज़ारीं। hamne jaṅgal meṁ do rāteṁ guzārīṁ.

We spent two nights in the forest.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने वहाँ एक साल गुज़ारा, usne vahā̃ ek sāl guzārā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

गुज़ारना (guzārnā) is the causative partner of गुज़रना, "to pass by", usually traced to Persian guzār, "passing": time passes, and you make it pass.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: guzārnā
- Say it: guzārnā, once more
- Say it: hamne jaṅgal meṁ do rāteṁ guzārīṁ. — We spent two nights in the forest.

416.5 बिताना (bitānā) — to pass (time)

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a roost, then the Hindi for to spend (time).

You'll want to know: बिताना

बिताना — bitānā — "to pass (time)".

हमने छुट्टियाँ गाँव में बिताईं।

hamne chuṭṭiyā̃ gā̃v meṁ bitāīṁ.

We spent the holidays in the village.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने बचपन गाँव में बिताया, usne bacpan gā̃v meṁ bitāyā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बिताना (bitānā) is the causative partner of बीतना, "to pass (of time)", from Sanskrit vṛtta, "turned; passed" (CDIAL 12069). गुज़ारना and बिताना say the same thing; बिताना is the plainer, warmer word.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bitānā
- Say it: bitānā, once more
- Say it: hamne chuṭṭiyā̃ gā̃v meṁ bitāīṁ. — We spent the holidays in the village.

Before the new one: say the Hindi for towards, then the Hindi for a route.

You'll want to know: रुख़

रुख़ — rukh — "a direction; the way something faces".

शाम को हवा का रुख़ बदल गया।

śām ko havā kā rukh badal gayā.

In the evening the wind changed direction.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रुख़ (rukh) is usually traced to Persian rukh, "the face, the cheek": the way a face is turned, and so the direction of the wind, a road or a person's mood.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: rukh
- Say it: rukh, once more

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 421: I can talk about a settlement, a small town and the countryside, and the people who live there.

421.1 बस्ती (bastī) — a settlement; a poor quarter

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to roll, then the Hindi for to dig into.

You'll want to know: बस्ती

बस्ती — bastī — "a settlement; a poor quarter".

> नदी के पार एक छोटी बस्ती है।
> nadī ke pār ek choṭī bastī hai.
> There is a small settlement across the river.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

बस्ती (bastī) is usually traced to Sanskrit vasati, "staying, a dwelling-place" (Monier-Williams), from the root vas, "to dwell". A बस्ती can be a hamlet or a crowded poor quarter of a city.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bastī
- Say it: bastī, once more
- Say it: nadī ke pār ek choṭī bastī hai. — There is a small settlement across the river.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to roll, then the Hindi for to dig into, then say bastī again

मेरे नाना एक छोटे क़स्बे में रहते हैं। mere nānā ek choṭe qasbe meṁ rahte haiṁ.

My grandfather lives in a small town.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

क़स्बा (qasbā) is usually traced to Arabic qaṣaba, "a chief town, a fortress", which came through Persian; in Hindi a क़स्बा is bigger than a village and smaller than a city.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: qasbā
- Say it: qasbā, once more
- Say it: mere nānā ek choṭe qasbe meṁ rahte haiṁ. — My grandfather lives in a small town.

434.1 असली (aslī) — real, genuine

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a weekly market, then the Hindi for to hand (to).

You'll want to know: असली

असली — aslī — "real, genuine".

> यह असली चाँदी है।
> yah aslī cā̃dī hai.
> This is real silver.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

असली (aslī) is usually traced to Arabic aṣlī, "original", from aṣl, "a root", through Persian: the thing itself, not a copy.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: aslī
- Say it: aslī, once more
- Say it: yah aslī cãdī hai. — This is real silver.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a weekly market, then the Hindi for to hand (to), then say aslī again

Before you move on

What does असली mean? ("Real, genuine".) Say it once more.

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to hand (to), then the Hindi for real.

You'll want to know: शुद्ध

शुद्ध — śuddh — "pure; unmixed".

सुनार ने कहा कि यह शुद्ध सोना है। sunār ne kahā ki yah śuddh sonā hai.

The goldsmith said that this is pure gold.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

शुद्ध (śuddh) is a tatsama, Sanskrit śuddha, "cleansed, clear, pure" (Monier-Williams): gold with nothing mixed in, or water fit to drink.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: śuddh
- Say it: śuddh, once more
- Say it: sunār ne kahā ki yah śuddh sonā hai. — The goldsmith said that this is pure gold.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to hand (to), then the Hindi for real, then say śuddh again

Before you move on

What does शुद्ध mean? ("Pure; unmixed".) Say it once more.

434.3 रगड़ना (ragaṛnā) — to rub

Before the new one: say the Hindi for real, then the Hindi for pure.

You'll want to know: रगड़ना

रगड़ना — ragaṛnā — "to rub".

सुनार ने सोने को पत्थर पर रगड़ा।

sunār ne sone ko patthar par ragaṛā.

The goldsmith rubbed the gold on a stone.

Past, with ने (he or she …): उसने हाथ रगड़े, usne hāth ragaṛe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

रगड़ना (ragaṛnā) goes back to ragg*, "rub", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 10558), which lists Hindi ragaṛnā. Goldsmiths test gold by the streak it leaves when rubbed on a dark stone.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ragaṛnā
- Say it: ragaṛnā, once more
- Say it: sunār ne sone ko patthar par ragaṛā. — The goldsmith rubbed the gold on a stone.
- Recall: say the Hindi for real, then the Hindi for pure, then say ragaṛnā again

You'll want to know: फबना

फबना — phabnā — "to suit; to look good on".

> यह लाल कुर्ता तुम पर बहुत फबता है।
> yah lāl kurtā tum par bahut phabtā hai.
> This red kurta really suits you.

Past (it …): वह साड़ी उस पर फबी, vah sāṛī us par phabī.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

फबना (phabnā) is filed by CDIAL under sparvati*, "releases, succeeds, is fitting", a form it reconstructs (CDIAL 13808), with Hindi phabnā, "to be fitting".

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: phabnā
- Say it: phabnā, once more

You'll want to know: कसौटी

कसौटी — kasauṭī — "a touchstone; a test".

> सुनार कसौटी पर सोना रगड़कर देखता है।
> sunār kasauṭī par sonā ragaṛkar dekhtā hai.
> The goldsmith tests gold by rubbing it on a touchstone.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कसौटी (kasauṭī) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit kaṣapaṭṭikā, "a touchstone" (CDIAL 2973), which lists Hindi kasauṭī; CDIAL suspects the Sanskrit spelling is itself a learned remaking of an older form. The goldsmith's dark stone also stands for any real test: समय की कसौटी, the test of time.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kasauṭī
- Say it: kasauṭī, once more
- Say it: sunār kasauṭī par sonā ragaṛkar dekhtā hai. — The goldsmith tests gold by rubbing it on a touchstone.
- Recall: say the Hindi for to rub, then the Hindi for to suit, then say kasauṭī again

Before you move on

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a feeling and say that I felt it.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 452: I can name a feeling and say that I felt it.

452.1 भावना (bhāvnā) — a feeling; an emotion

Before the new one: say the Hindi for turning over (in bed), then the Hindi for a stretch (of the body).

You'll want to know: भावना

भावना — bhāvnā — "a feeling; an emotion".

> हर इंसान की भावना अलग होती है।
> har insān kī bhāvnā alag hotī hai.
> Every person's feelings are different.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

भावना (bhāvnā) is a tatsama, borrowed from Sanskrit bhāvanā, which Monier-Williams gives with senses such as imagining and a feeling of devotion (Monier-Williams). Hindi uses it for any feeling.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: bhāvnā
- Say it: bhāvnā, once more
- Say it: har insān kī bhāvnā alag hotī hai. — Every person's feelings are different.
- Recall: say the Hindi for turning over (in bed), then the Hindi for a stretch (of the body), then say bhāvnā again

Before you move on

What does भावना mean? ("A feeling; an emotion".) Say it once more.

452.2 एहसास (ehsās) — an awareness; a sense of something

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a stretch (of the body), then the Hindi for a feeling.

You'll want to know: एहसास

एहसास — ehsās — "an awareness; a sense of something".

अरुण को अपनी ग़लती का एहसास हुआ।

Aruṇ ko apnī ġaltī kā ehsās huā.

Arun realized he had made a mistake.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

एहसास (ehsās) is usually traced to Arabic iḥsās, "perceiving, feeling", which reached Hindi through Persian.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: ehsās
- Say it: ehsās, once more
- Say it: Aruṇ ko apnī ġaltī kā ehsās huā. — Arun realized he had made a mistake.
- Recall: say the Hindi for a stretch (of the body), then the Hindi for a feeling, then say ehsās again

Before you move on

452.3 अनुभूति (anubhūti) — a deep feeling; an inner sense

Before the new one: say the Hindi for a feeling, then the Hindi for an awareness.

You'll want to know: अनुभूति

अनुभूति — anubhūti — "a deep feeling; an inner sense".

गाना सुनकर मीरा को शांति की अनुभूति हुई।

gānā sunkar Mīrā ko śānti kī anubhūti huī.

Listening to the song, Mira felt a deep sense of peace.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

अनुभूति (anubhūti) is a tatsama, borrowed from Sanskrit anubhūti, "perception, knowledge" (Monier-Williams). It is a formal word for a feeling sensed deep inside; anubhav is the experience itself.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: anubhūti
- Say it: anubhūti, once more

Before you move on

What does डराना mean? ("To frighten".) Say it once more.

457.4 कायर (kāyar) — cowardly; a coward

Before the new one: say the Hindi for to panic, then the Hindi for to frighten.

You'll want to know: कायर

कायर — kāyar — "cowardly; a coward".

मेरा कुत्ता बहुत कायर है, चूहे से भी डरता है। merā kuttā bahut kāyar hai, cūhe se bhī ḍartā hai.

My dog is a real coward; it's even afraid of a mouse.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

कायर (kāyar) is a tadbhava: CDIAL lists Hindi kāyar, "coward", under Sanskrit kātara, "cowardly, timid" (CDIAL 3027); the t between vowels wore away to y.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

Before the new one: say the Hindi for forbearance, then the Hindi for impatient.

You'll want to know: झक्की

झक्की — jhakkī — "cranky; set in odd ways".

मेरे नाना थोड़े झक्की हैं, हर काम अपने तरीक़े से करते हैं। mere nānā thoṛe jhakkī haiṁ, har kām apne tarīqe se karte haiṁ.

My grandfather is a bit cranky; he does everything his own way.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

झक्की (jhakkī) is a tadbhava: CDIAL lists Hindi jhakkī, "stubborn", under jhakk*, a form it reconstructs (CDIAL 5319). It is the stubbornness of odd, fixed habits.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: jhakkī
- Say it: jhakkī, once more

A Wedding

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a wedding.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 500: I can describe a wedding.

500.1 दूल्हा (dūlhā) — a bridegroom

Before the new one: say the Hindi for the prime of youth, then the Hindi for to whimper.

You'll want to know: दूल्हा

दूल्हा — dūlhā — "a bridegroom".

> दूल्हा घोड़े पर बैठकर आया।
> dūlhā ghoṛe par baiṭhkar āyā.
> The bridegroom arrived on horseback.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

दूल्हा (dūlhā) is a tadbhava: CDIAL lists Hindi dūlhā, "bridegroom", under Sanskrit durlabha, "hard to get, precious" (CDIAL 6446): the dear one. The bride is dulhan, the feminine of the same word, listed in the same entry.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: dūlhā
- Say it: dūlhā, once more
- Say it: dūlhā ghoṛe par baiṭhkar āyā. — The bridegroom arrived on horseback.

सगाई — sagāī — "an engagement (to marry)".

पिछले साल मीरा की सगाई हुई।

pichle sāl Mīrā kī sagāī huī.

Mira got engaged last year.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

सगाई (sagāī) is probably the noun of sagā, "of full blood relationship", which CDIAL lists under svagya-*, a form it reconstructs (CDIAL 13896b): the promise that makes two families kin. CDIAL does not give the "engagement" sense itself.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: sagāī
- Say it: sagāī, once more
- Say it: pichle sāl Mīrā kī sagāī huī. — Mira got engaged last year.

Devanagari — a reference

A reference, not a chapter — a place to look things up. You are not meant to read this before the lessons: the lessons teach reading through real words, introducing each letter as a word needs it. This page just gathers the system in one spot.

How Devanagari works (the three facts the lessons teach)

1. Consonants carry a built-in "a". क = "ka," न = "na," म = "ma." You never write the short a — it's already there.
2. A vowel sign (mātrā) changes that built-in vowel. Attached to a consonant, it swaps the a for another vowel: ा = ā (का = kā) · ि = i (कि = ki, written before, read after) · ी = ī · ु = u · ू = ū · े = e (के = ke) · ै = ai · ो = o · ौ = au.
3. A halant (्) removes the built-in vowel. क् = bare "k." A vowel-less consonant leans onto the next, forming a conjunct: स् + त → स्त ("st"), न् + य → न्य ("ny"), क् + र → क्र ("kr").

Independent vowels (word-initial)

When a word starts with a vowel (no consonant to attach to), a full vowel letter is used: अ a · आ ā · इ i · ई ī · उ u · ऊ ū · ए e · ऐ ai · ओ o · औ au.

Sounds worth flagging

- Aspirated vs. plain consonants are different letters and change meaning: क k / ख kh, ग g / घ gh, त t / थ th, द d / ध dh, प p / फ ph, etc. The “h” is a real puff of breath.

- Retroflex consonants (ट ṭ, ड ḍ, ण ṇ, etc.) are made with the tongue curled back — distinct from the dental त/द (tongue on the teeth).
- Nasalization: a dot (anusvāra ं) or moon-dot (candrabindu ँ) nasalizes the vowel.
- Nukta letters (a dot under a letter) mark sounds borrowed mostly from Persian/Arabic/English: क़ q, ख़ x/kh, ग़ ġ, ज़ z, फ़ f, ड़/ढ़ retroflex flaps.

The two vocabularies

Not pronunciation, but the key to Hindi: many everyday ideas have two words — a Sanskrit (tatsama) one, often formal/literary, and a Perso-Arabic one, often everyday: dhanyavād / shukriyā (“thanks”), namaste / alvidā. The lessons trace which is which.
