Latin, Step by Step, Root by Root

An etymology-driven curriculum, built one word at a time

Adhithya Rajasekaran

This edition compiled incrementally — new chapters added as they are written.

Copyright © Adhithya Rajasekaran. Licensed under Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International (CC BY-SA 4.0).

Preface

Latin is not learned the way most languages are learned. Nobody is going to greet you in it, and this book will not pretend otherwise — you learn Latin to read it, and to find out why so much of the vocabulary you already own looks the way it does.

Latin is a taproot: the ancestor of Spanish, French, Italian, and Portuguese, and the single largest source of English's vocabulary after English's own Germanic core. Almost every lesson here pays a double dividend — you learn a Latin word and you see why a dozen English words, and their Romance cousins, look the way they do.

Latin uses the alphabet you are reading, so there is no script to decode; the work is the words and the endings. Latin carries meaning in its endings rather than in word order or helper-words, which is why it can drop pronouns and still be perfectly clear (agō already means "I do"). Each chapter introduces that machinery one piece at a time, exactly where a real phrase needs it — never as a front-loaded grammar table.

We use classical pronunciation (Caesar's v was a w, his c always hard) and mark long vowels with a macron (ā ē īo ū), as teaching texts do, though Romans themselves wrote none. Roots are traced back toward Proto-Indo-European where the trail is clear, and forward into English and the Romance languages — every form supplied in full.

How to use this book

Every numbered section is one word, or one small phrase, and takes a few minutes — the length of a queue, an errand, or the walk to the bus. Read them in order the first time through: each section stands on the ones before it, and nothing is used before it has been taught. After that the book becomes reference, and you can open it anywhere.

Say the Latin out loud wherever you can. The prompts under Your turn are written to be spoken, and saying a word is most of what makes it stay. The questions under Before you move on carry their own answers in brackets: cover them, answer from memory, then look.

Nothing here is gated behind pronunciation. Each lesson names the one or two sounds its own word needs, exactly where they are needed. The whole system is gathered in a reference at the back of the book — somewhere to look things up when you are curious, never a chapter to sit through first.

Released under CC BY-SA 4.0 — share it, adapt it, teach from it.

Contents

Preface iii

1 Greetings 1
1.1 salvē / salvēte 1
1.2 salvē / salvēte 2
1.3 salvē 3
1.4 heard greeting 4
1.5 avē / avēte 4
1.6 valē / valēte 5
1.7 grātiās (tibi) agō 7
1.8 ita / nōn 8
1.9 Practice 9

2 Numbers One to Ten 11
2.1 ūnus duo trēs quattuor quīnque 11
2.2 sex septem octō novem decem 13

3 Please 15
3.1 quaesō 15

4 Sorry 17
4.1 ignōsce mihi 17

5 Days of the Week 19
5.1 diēs Lūnae, Mārtis, Mercuriī, Iovis … 19
5.2 diēs Saturnī, diēs Sōlis 21

6 Colours 23
6.1 niger, albus 23
6.2 ruber, caeruleus 25

7 Family 27
7.1 pater, mater 27
7.2 frater, soror 28

8 Head and Hand 31
8.1 caput 31
8.2 manus 33

9 Seasons 35
9.1 vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems 35

10 Water, Wine, and Bread 39
10.1 aqua, vīnum 39
10.2 pānis 40

11 Months 43
11.1 Iānuārius, Februārius, Mārtius … 43

12 Noon and Midnight 47
12.1 medius diēs, media nox 47

13 Telling Time 51
13.1 hōra 51

14 Asking Someone's Age 53
14.1 vīgintī annōs nātus sum 53

15 Weather 57
15.1 tempestās 57
15.2 pluit, calor, sol 58

16 Numbers Eleven to Twenty 61
16.1 ūndecim — vīgintī 61

17 Dog and Cat 65
17.1 canis, fēlēs, cattus 65

18 Green and Yellow 69
18.1 viridis, flāvus 69

19 How Are You? 71
19.1 quid agis? 71
19.2 ut valēs? 72
19.3 valeō, valē 73
19.4 Practice 74

20 Exchanging Names 77
20.1 quid tibi nōmen est? / mihi nōmen est... 77
20.2 puerō nōmen est Mārcus / Mārcō 78

21 Nice to Meet You 81
21.1 volup est convēnisse 81
21.2 tē volup est convēnisse 82
21.3 Practice 83

22 You, Singular and Plural 87
22.1 tū / vōs 87

23 You're Welcome 91
23.1 nihil est 91

24 See You Soon 93
24.1 propediem tē vidēbō 93

25 See You Tomorrow 95
25.1 crās tē vidēbō 95

26 How 99
26.1 quōmodo 99

27 Well 101
27.1 bene 101

28 Day 103
28.1 diēs 103

29 Night 105
29.1 nox 105

30 Good Night 107
30.1 bonam noctem 107

31 Morning 109
31.1 māne . . . 109

32 Good Morning 111
32.1 bonum māne . . . 111

33 Evening 115
33.1 vesper . . . 115
33.2 Hesperia, víspera, vespers . . . 116
33.3 Practice . . . 117

34 Good Evening 119
34.1 bonum vesperum . . . 119

35 Noon and Afternoon 123
35.1 merīdiēs . . . 123

36 Good Afternoon 125
36.1 salvē (post merīdiem) . . . 125
36.2 salvē / salvēte . . . 126
36.3 Practice . . . 127

37 Eight Verbs at the Core 129
37.1 sum, esse . . . 129
37.2 habeō, habēre . . . 131
37.3 eō, īre . . . 132
37.4 veniō, venīre . . . 134
37.5 dīcō, dīcere . . . 135
37.6 videō, vidēre . . . 137
37.7 sciō, scīre . . . 138
37.8 dō, dare . . . 140

38 Thinking, Reading, Writing 143
38.1 cōgitō, cōgitāre . . . 143
38.2 legō, legere . . . 145
38.3 intellegō, intellegere . . . 146
38.4 scrībō, scrībere . . . 148

39 Taking, Asking, Helping, Loving 151
39.1 capiō, capere . . . 151
39.2 rogō, rogāre . . . 153

39.3 adiuvō, adiuvāre 154
39.4 amō, amāre 156

40 Hearing, Sleeping, Sitting, Standing 159
40.1 audiō, audīre 159
40.2 dormiō, dormīre 161
40.3 sedeō, sedēre 163
40.4 stō, stāre 164

41 Walking, Running, Opening, Closing 167
41.1 ambulō, ambulāre 167
41.2 currō, currere 169
41.3 aperiō, aperīre 171
41.4 claudō, claudere 172

42 Bringing, Getting, Playing, Waiting 175
42.1 ferō, ferre 175
42.2 accipiō, obtineō 177
42.3 lūdō, lūdere 178
42.4 exspectō, exspectāre 180

43 Answering, Meeting, Buying 183
43.1 respondeō, respondēre 183
43.2 conveniō, occurrō 185
43.3 emō, emere 187

44 The House, and Who Is Inside It 189
44.1 domus, domūs 189
44.2 porta, portae 190
44.3 mūrus, mūrī 191
44.4 hortus, hortī 192
44.5 focus, focī 193

45 Earth, Fire, Wind, Sky, Sea 195
45.1 terra, terrae 195
45.2 ignis, ignis 196
45.3 ventus, ventī 197
45.4 caelum, caelī 198
45.5 mare, maris 199

46 Light, Shadow, and Going to Sleep 201
46.1 lūx, lūcis . . . 201
46.2 umbra, umbrae . . . 202
46.3 stēlla, stēllae . . . 203
46.4 lūna, lūnae . . . 204
46.5 somnus, somnī . . . 205

47 Salt, Honey, Milk, Egg, Fish 207
47.1 sāl, salis . . . 207
47.2 mel, mellis . . . 208
47.3 lac, lactis . . . 209
47.4 ōvum, ōvī . . . 210
47.5 piscis, piscis . . . 211
47.6 ignōsce mihi · nihil est · quōmodo … . . . 212

48 Nescio, Male, Malus, Sed, Aut 215
48.1 nesciō, nescīre . . . 215
48.2 male . . . 217
48.3 focus · mare · somnus . . . 218
48.4 malus, mala, malum . . . 220
48.5 sed . . . 221
48.6 aut . . . 222

49 Possum, Volo, Qui, Et, Quando 225
49.1 possum, posse . . . 225
49.2 volō, velle . . . 226
49.3 quī, quae, quod . . . 228
49.4 et . . . 229
49.5 quandō . . . 231

50 Hic, Iste, Ille, Is, Ibi 233
50.1 hic, haec, hoc . . . 233
50.2 iste, ista, istud . . . 235
50.3 ille, illa, illud . . . 236
50.4 is, ea, id . . . 237
50.5 ibi . . . 239

51 Amicus, Pecunia, Medicus, Miles, Epistula 241
51.1 amīcus, amīcī . . . 241
51.2 pecūnia, pecūniae . . . 242

51.3 medicus, medicī 244
51.4 mīles, mīlitis 245
51.5 epistula, epistulae 247

52 Ubi, Cur, Quia, Meus, Tuus 249
52.1 ubi 249
52.2 cūr 250
52.3 quia 252
52.4 meus, mea, meum 253
52.5 tuus, tua, tuum 254

53 Iterum, Magister, Discipulus, Schola, Liber 257
53.1 iterum 257
53.2 magister, magistrī 258
53.3 discipulus, discipulī 260
53.4 schola, scholae 261
53.5 liber, librī 262

54 Edo, Bibo, Oculus, Auris, Pes 265
54.1 edō, esse 265
54.2 bibō, bibere 266
54.3 oculus, oculī 268
54.4 auris, auris 269
54.5 pēs, pedis 270

55 Numerī Ōrdinis 273
55.1 prīmus, prīma, prīmum 273
55.2 secundus, secunda, secundum 274
55.3 tertius, tertia, tertium 276
55.4 quārtus, quārta, quārtum 277
55.5 quīntus, quīnta, quīntum 278

56 Sextus ad Decimum 281
56.1 sextus, sexta, sextum 281
56.2 septimus, septima, septimum 282
56.3 octāvus, octāva, octāvum 284
56.4 nōnus, nōna, nōnum 285
56.5 decimus, decima, decimum 286

57 Ante et Post 289
57.1 ante . . . 289
57.2 post . . . 290
57.3 prīma hōra — sexta hōra — nōna hōra . . . 292

58 Reading — Words, Lines, and a First Passage 295
58.1 (reading) . . . 295
58.2 (reading) . . . 296
58.3 (reading) . . . 297

59 Reading — Objects, Places, and a Day 299
59.1 aqua -> aquam; epistula -> epistulam … . . . 299
59.2 amicus -> amicum; magister -> … . . . 300
59.3 ad scholam; in scholā; domum . . . 302
59.4 (reading) . . . 303
59.5 (reading) . . . 304

60 Writing — My Own Line 307
60.1 (versus meus) . . . 307

61 Writing — With A Clock 309
61.1 (cum horologio) . . . 309

62 Writing — Four Lines, And The Word That Has A Twin 311
62.1 quia . . . 311

63 Arm, Finger, Tooth 313
63.1 bracchium, bracchiī . . . 313
63.2 digitus, digitī . . . 314
63.3 dēns, dentis . . . 315
63.4 lingua, linguae . . . 316
63.5 nāsus, nāsī . . . 316

64 Neck, Shoulder, Knee, Heart 319
64.1 collum, collī . . . 319
64.2 umerus, umerī . . . 320
64.3 genū, genūs . . . 321
64.4 cor, cordis . . . 322
64.5 sanguis, sanguinis . . . 322

65 Hair, Belly, Back, Forehead, Beard 325
65.1 capillus, capillī . . . 325
65.2 venter, ventris . . . 326
65.3 tergum, tergī . . . 327
65.4 frōns, frontis . . . 328
65.5 barba, barbae . . . 328

66 Chest, Leg, Cheek, Nail, Healthy 331
66.1 pectus, pectoris . . . 331
66.2 crūs, crūris . . . 332
66.3 gena, genae . . . 333
66.4 unguis, unguis . . . 333
66.5 sānus, sāna, sānum . . . 334

67 Fever, Cough, Pain 337
67.1 febris, febris . . . 337
67.2 tussis, tussis . . . 338
67.3 dolor, dolōris . . . 339
67.4 medicīna, medicīnae . . . 339
67.5 morbus, morbī . . . 340

68 Sick, Tired, Hungry, Thirsty 343
68.1 aeger, aegra, aegrum . . . 343
68.2 fessus, fessa, fessum . . . 344
68.3 famēs, famis . . . 345
68.4 sitis, sitis . . . 346
68.5 cūra, cūrae . . . 346

69 Joy, Anger, Fear 349
69.1 gaudium, gaudiī . . . 349
69.2 īra, īrae . . . 350
69.3 timor, timōris . . . 351
69.4 laetus, laeta, laetum . . . 351
69.5 trīstis, trīste . . . 352

70 Son, Daughter, Grandparents 355
70.1 fīlius, fīliī . . . 355
70.2 fīlia, fīliae . . . 356
70.3 avus, avī . . . 357
70.4 avia, aviae . . . 357

70.5 familia, familiae 358

71 Husband, Wife, Children 361
71.1 marītus, marītī 361
71.2 uxor, uxōris 362
71.3 līberī, līberōrum 363
71.4 īnfāns, īnfantis 363
71.5 patruus, patruī 364

72 Aunt, Neighbour, Guest, Man, Woman 367
72.1 amita, amitae 367
72.2 vīcīnus, vīcīnī 368
72.3 hospes, hospitis 369
72.4 vir, virī 370
72.5 fēmina, fēminae 370

73 Girl, Old Man, Queen, Sailor, Poet 373
73.1 puella, puellae 373
73.2 senex, senis 374
73.3 rēgīna, rēgīnae 375
73.4 nauta, nautae 375
73.5 poēta, poētae 376

74 Citizen, Cook, Merchant, Farmer 379
74.1 cīvis, cīvis 379
74.2 coquus, coquī 380
74.3 mercātor, mercātōris 381
74.4 agricola, agricolae 381
74.5 ager, agrī 382

75 Work, Sing, Dance, Laugh, Weep 385
75.1 labōrō, labōrāre 385
75.2 canō, canere 386
75.3 saltō, saltāre 387
75.4 rīdeō, rīdēre 387
75.5 fleō, flēre 388

76 Wash, Cook, Sell, Swim, Call 391
76.1 lavō, lavāre 391
76.2 coquō, coquere 392
76.3 vendō, vendere 393

76.4 natō, natāre 394
76.5 vocō, vocāre 394

77 Send, Stay, Fall, Put, Find 397
77.1 mittō, mittere 397
77.2 maneō, manēre 398
77.3 cadō, cadere 399
77.4 pōnō, pōnere 399
77.5 inveniō, invenīre 400

78 Live, Enter, Return, Fear, Rejoice 403
78.1 vīvō, vīvere 403
78.2 intrō, intrāre 404
78.3 redeō, redīre 405
78.4 timeō, timēre 405
78.5 gaudeō, gaudēre 406

79 Food and Meals 409
79.1 cibus, cibī 409
79.2 cēna, cēnae 410
79.3 prandium, prandiī 411
79.4 ientāculum, ientāculī 412
79.5 carō, carnis 412

80 Cheese, Oil, Grapes, Olives 415
80.1 cāseus, cāseī 415
80.2 oleum, oleī 416
80.3 ūva, ūvae 417
80.4 holus, holeris 417
80.5 olīva, olīvae 418

81 Grain, Flour, Pear, Fig, Nut 421
81.1 frūmentum, frūmentī 421
81.2 farīna, farīnae 422
81.3 pirum, pirī 423
81.4 fīcus, fīcī 423
81.5 nux, nucis 424

82 Table, Chair, Bed, Window 427
82.1 mēnsa, mēnsae . . . 427
82.2 sella, sellae . . . 428
82.3 lectus, lectī . . . 429
82.4 fenestra, fenestrae . . . 429
82.5 cubiculum, cubiculī . . . 430

83 Kitchen, Roof, Lamp, Cup, Knife 433
83.1 culīna, culīnae . . . 433
83.2 tēctum, tēctī . . . 434
83.3 lucerna, lucernae . . . 435
83.4 pōculum, pōculī . . . 436
83.5 culter, cultrī . . . 436

84 Chest, Paper, Pen, Tablet, Mirror 439
84.1 arca, arcae . . . 439
84.2 charta, chartae . . . 440
84.3 stilus, stilī . . . 441
84.4 tabula, tabulae . . . 442
84.5 speculum, speculī . . . 442

85 Ball, Wheel, Sword, Crown, Ring 445
85.1 pila, pilae . . . 445
85.2 rota, rotae . . . 446
85.3 gladius, gladiī . . . 447
85.4 corōna, corōnae . . . 447
85.5 ānulus, ānulī . . . 448
85.6 (dialogue) . . . 449
85.7 (dialogue) . . . 450

86 Tree, Flower, Leaf, Forest, Mountain 453
86.1 arbor, arboris . . . 453
86.2 flōs, flōris . . . 454
86.3 folium, foliī . . . 455
86.4 silva, silvae . . . 455
86.5 mōns, montis . . . 456

87 River, Lake, Stream, Spring, Coast 459
87.1 flūmen, flūminis . . . 459
87.2 lacus, lacūs . . . 460

87.3 rīvus, rīvī 461
87.4 fōns, fontis 461
87.5 ōra, ōrae 462

88 Stone, Sand, Hill, Valley, Cave 465
88.1 lapis, lapidis 465
88.2 harēna, harēnae 466
88.3 collis, collis 467
88.4 vallis, vallis 467
88.5 spēlunca, spēluncae 468

89 Cloud, Rain, Snow, Plain, Shore 471
89.1 nūbēs, nūbis 471
89.2 pluvia, pluviae 472
89.3 nix, nivis 473
89.4 campus, campī 473
89.5 lītus, lītoris 474

90 Horse, Ox, Sheep, Goat, Pig 477
90.1 equus, equī 477
90.2 bōs, bovis 478
90.3 ovis, ovis 479
90.4 capra, caprae 480
90.5 porcus, porcī 480

91 Bird, Wolf, Lion, Bear, Snake 483
91.1 avis, avis 483
91.2 lupus, lupī 484
91.3 leō, leōnis 485
91.4 ursus, ursī 486
91.5 serpēns, serpentis 486

92 Mouse, Hen, Donkey, Elephant, Deer 489
92.1 mūs, mūris 489
92.2 gallīna, gallīnae 490
92.3 asinus, asinī 491
92.4 elephantus, elephantī 491
92.5 cervus, cervī 492

93 Big and Small, Long and Short, High 495
93.1 magnus, magna, magnum 495
93.2 parvus, parva, parvum 496
93.3 longus, longa, longum 497
93.4 brevis, breve 498
93.5 altus, alta, altum 498

94 New, Old, Light, Fast, Slow 501
94.1 novus, nova, novum 501
94.2 vetus, veteris 502
94.3 levis, leve 503
94.4 celer, celeris, celere 504
94.5 lentus, lenta, lentum 504

95 Hot, Cold, Dry, Wet, Sweet 507
95.1 calidus, calida, calidum 507
95.2 frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum 508
95.3 siccus, sicca, siccum 509
95.4 ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum 510
95.5 dulcis, dulce 510

96 Beautiful, Round, Empty, Bright, Dark 513
96.1 pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum 513
96.2 rotundus, rotunda, rotundum 514
96.3 vacuus, vacua, vacuum 515
96.4 clārus, clāra, clārum 516
96.5 obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum 516

97 Easy, Hard, Dear, Brave, Wise 519
97.1 facilis, facile 519
97.2 difficilis, difficile 520
97.3 cārus, cāra, cārum 521
97.4 fortis, forte 521
97.5 sapiēns, sapientis 522

98 Rich, Poor, Foolish, Enough, Too Much 525
98.1 dīves, dīvitis 525
98.2 pauper, pauperis 526
98.3 stultus, stulta, stultum 527
98.4 satis 528

98.5 nimis 528

99 Get to Know, Care For, Tell, Praise, Move 531
99.1 cognōscō, cognōscere 531
99.2 cūrō, cūrāre 532
99.3 nārrō, nārrāre 533
99.4 laudō, laudāre 534
99.5 moveō, movēre 534

100 Fight, Sail, Prepare, Touch, Pull 537
100.1 pugnō, pugnāre 537
100.2 nāvigō, nāvigāre 538
100.3 parō, parāre 539
100.4 tangō, tangere 539
100.5 trahō, trahere 540

101 Get Up, Wander, Run Away, At Once, Then 543
101.1 surgō, surgere 543
101.2 errō, errāre 544
101.3 fugiō, fugere 545
101.4 statim 546
101.5 deinde 546

102 Far, Above, Below, Inside, Outside 549
102.1 procul 549
102.2 suprā 550
102.3 īnfrā 551
102.4 intrā 551
102.5 extrā 552

103 Today, Yesterday, Year, Month, Dawn 555
103.1 hodiē 555
103.2 herī 556
103.3 annus, annī 557
103.4 mēnsis, mēnsis 557
103.5 aurōra, aurōrae 558

104 Often, Always, Never, Now, Soon 561
104.1 saepe 561
104.2 semper 562
104.3 numquam 563

104.4 nunc . . . 563
104.5 mox . . . 564

105 Rarely, Already, Then, Much, Little 567
105.1 rārō . . . 567
105.2 iam . . . 568
105.3 tum . . . 569
105.4 multum . . . 569
105.5 parum . . . 570

106 Thirty to a Thousand 573
106.1 trīgintā . . . 573
106.2 quadrāgintā . . . 574
106.3 quīnquāgintā . . . 575
106.4 centum . . . 575
106.5 mīlle . . . 576

107 City, Town, Forum, Temple, Shop 579
107.1 urbs, urbis . . . 579
107.2 oppidum, oppidī . . . 580
107.3 forum, forī . . . 581
107.4 templum, templī . . . 581
107.5 taberna, tabernae . . . 582

108 Bridge, Farmhouse, Clothes, Tunic, Shoe 585
108.1 pōns, pontis . . . 585
108.2 vīlla, vīllae . . . 586
108.3 vestis, vestis . . . 587
108.4 tunica, tunicae . . . 588
108.5 calceus, calceī . . . 588
108.6 (dialogue) . . . 589
108.7 (dialogue) . . . 591

109 To be able, To dare, To have to, To be used to, Power 593
109.1 queō, quīre . . . 593
109.2 audeō, audēre . . . 594
109.3 dēbeō, dēbēre . . . 595
109.4 soleō, solēre . . . 595
109.5 potestās, potestātis . . . 596

110 Chance, Skill, It is necessary, It is allowed, To not want 599
110.1 facultās, facultātis 599
110.2 ars, artis 600
110.3 oportet 601
110.4 licet 602
110.5 nōlō, nōlle 602

111 To prefer, To desire, To wish for, To miss, Wish 605
111.1 mālō, mālle 605
111.2 cupiō, cupere 606
111.3 optō, optāre 607
111.4 dēsīderō, dēsīderāre 608
111.5 voluntās, voluntātis 608

112 Desire, Hope, Longing, Why?, Why? 611
112.1 cupiditās, cupiditātis 611
112.2 spēs, speī 612
112.3 dēsīderium, dēsīderiī 613
112.4 quārē 614
112.5 quamobrem 614

113 For, For, For that reason, And so, Reason 617
113.1 nam 617
113.2 enim 618
113.3 ideō 619
113.4 itaque 619
113.5 causa, causae 620

114 Reason, Because of that, Place, Right, Left 623
114.1 ratiō, ratiōnis 623
114.2 propterea 624
114.3 locus, locī 625
114.4 dexter, dextra, dextrum 625
114.5 sinister, sinistra, sinistrum 626

115 To here, To there, Theatre, Bath, Military camp 629
115.1 hūc 629
115.2 illūc 630
115.3 theātrum, theātrī 631
115.4 balneum, balneī 632

115.5 castra, castrōrum 632

116 Building, Prison, Main hall of a house, Corner, Street 635
116.1 aedificium, aedificiī 635
116.2 carcer, carceris 636
116.3 ātrium, ātriī 637
116.4 angulus, angulī 638
116.5 vīcus, vīcī 638

117 Step, Library, Food market, Eating-house, Inn 641
117.1 gradus, gradūs 641
117.2 bibliothēca, bibliothēcae 642
117.3 macellum, macellī 643
117.4 popīna, popīnae 644
117.5 caupōna, caupōnae 645

118 Floor, Well, Bakery, Workshop, Tomb 647
118.1 pavīmentum, pavīmentī 647
118.2 puteus, puteī 648
118.3 pistrīnum, pistrīnī 649
118.4 officīna, officīnae 650
118.5 sepulcrum, sepulcrī 650

119 Open space, Milestone, Around, Next to, Opposite 653
119.1 ārea, āreae 653
119.2 mīliārium, mīliāriī 654
119.3 circā 655
119.4 iūxtā 656
119.5 contrā 656
119.6 (dialogue) 657
119.7 (dialogue) 658

120 Sack, Box, Cushion, Blanket, Napkin 661
120.1 saccus, saccī 661
120.2 cista, cistae 662
120.3 pulvīnus, pulvīnī 663
120.4 strāgulum, strāgulī 664
120.5 mappa, mappae 664

121 Spoon, Cooking pot, Dish, Bowl, Candle 667
121.1 cochlear, cochleāris 667
121.2 ōlla, ōllae 668
121.3 patina, patinae 669
121.4 catīnus, catīnī 670
121.5 candēla, candēlae 670

122 Nail, Hammer, Saw, Axe, Ladder 673
122.1 clāvus, clāvī 673
122.2 malleus, malleī 674
122.3 serra, serrae 675
122.4 secūris, secūris 676
122.5 scālae, scālārum 676

123 Vessel, Two-handled jar, Flask, Purse, Coin 679
123.1 vās, vāsis 679
123.2 amphora, amphorae 680
123.3 lagoena, lagoenae 681
123.4 crumēna, crumēnae 682
123.5 nummus, nummī 682

124 Book, Ink, Reed pen, Wax, Picture 685
124.1 cōdex, cōdicis 685
124.2 ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī 686
124.3 calamus, calamī 687
124.4 cēra, cērae 687
124.5 pictūra, pictūrae 688

125 Statue, Sign, Sail, Wagon, Long dress 691
125.1 statua, statuae 691
125.2 signum, signī 692
125.3 vēlum, vēlī 693
125.4 plaustrum, plaustrī 694
125.5 stola, stolae 694

126 Cloak, Belt, Fruit, Onion, Garlic 697
126.1 pallium, palliī 697
126.2 zōna, zōnae 698
126.3 pōmum, pōmī 699
126.4 cēpa, cēpae 700

126.5 ālium, ālīī 700

127 Bean, Pea, Cucumber, Chicken, Pepper 703
127.1 faba, fabae 703
127.2 pīsum, pīsī 704
127.3 cucumis, cucumeris 705
127.4 pullus, pullī 706
127.5 piper, piperis 706

128 Flat cake, Beer, Juice, Rose, Lily 709
128.1 placenta, placentae 709
128.2 cervīsia, cervīsiae 710
128.3 sūcus, sūcī 711
128.4 rosa, rosae 712
128.5 līlium, līlīī 712

129 Branch, Tree trunk, Seed, Rock, River bank 715
129.1 rāmus, rāmī 715
129.2 truncus, truncī 716
129.3 sēmen, sēminis 717
129.4 saxum, saxī 718
129.5 rīpa, rīpae 718

130 Wave, Ice, Hail, Thunder, Lightning 721
130.1 unda, undae 721
130.2 glaciēs, glaciēī 722
130.3 grandō, grandinis 723
130.4 tonitrus, tonitrūs 723
130.5 fulgur, fulguris 724
130.6 (dialogue) 725
130.7 (dialogue) 726

131 Fog, Eagle, Dove, Raven, Duck 729
131.1 nebula, nebulae 729
131.2 aquila, aquilae 730
131.3 columba, columbae 731
131.4 corvus, corvī 732
131.5 anas, anatis 732

132 Goose, Bee, Fly, Ant, Butterfly 735
132.1 ānser, ānseris 735
132.2 apis, apis 736
132.3 musca, muscae 737
132.4 formīca, formīcae 737
132.5 pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis 738

133 Spider, Frog, Hare, Fox, Bull 741
133.1 arānea, arāneae 741
133.2 rāna, rānae 742
133.3 lepus, leporis 743
133.4 vulpēs, vulpis 743
133.5 taurus, taurī 744

134 Cow, Mule, Camel, Monkey, Dolphin 747
134.1 vacca, vaccae 747
134.2 mūlus, mūlī 748
134.3 camēlus, camēlī 749
134.4 sīmia, sīmiae 749
134.5 delphīnus, delphīnī 750

135 Whale, Cockerel, Lip, Chin, Back 753
135.1 balaena, balaenae 753
135.2 gallus, gallī 754
135.3 labrum, labrī 755
135.4 mentum, mentī 756
135.5 dorsum, dorsī 756

136 Elbow, Thumb, Skin, Bone, Stomach 759
136.1 cubitum, cubitī 759
136.2 pollex, pollicis 760
136.3 cutis, cutis 761
136.4 os, ossis 761
136.5 stomachus, stomachī 762

137 Craftsman, Baker, Shoemaker, Barber, Shepherd 765
137.1 faber, fabrī 765
137.2 pistor, pistōris 766
137.3 sūtor, sūtōris 767
137.4 tōnsor, tōnsōris 767

137.5 pāstor, pāstōris 768

138 Fisherman, Slave, Mistress, Friend, Cupboard 771
138.1 piscātor, piscātōris 771
138.2 servus, servī 772
138.3 domina, dominae 773
138.4 amīca, amīcae 774
138.5 armārium, armāriī 775

139 Chair with a back, Bench, Carpet, Torch, Lantern 777
139.1 cathedra, cathedrae 777
139.2 scamnum, scamnī 778
139.3 tapēte, tapētis 779
139.4 fax, facis 780
139.5 lanterna, lanternae 780

140 Comb, Scissors, Needle, Thread, Wool 783
140.1 pecten, pectinis 783
140.2 forfex, forficis 784
140.3 acus, acūs 785
140.4 fīlum, fīlī 785
140.5 lāna, lānae 786
140.6 (dialogue) 787
140.7 (dialogue) 788

141 Linen cloth, Soap, Sponge, Water jar, Cup 791
141.1 linteum, linteī 791
141.2 sāpō, sāpōnis 792
141.3 spongia, spongiae 793
141.4 urna, urnae 794
141.5 calix, calicis 794

142 Fork, Plough, Bell, Flute, Lyre 797
142.1 furca, furcae 797
142.2 arātrum, arātrī 798
142.3 tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī 799
142.4 tībia, tībiae 800
142.5 lyra, lyrae 800

143 Hard, Soft, Lukewarm, Ancient, Narrow 803
143.1 dūrus, dūra, dūrum 803
143.2 mollis, molle 804
143.3 tepidus, tepida, tepidum 805
143.4 antīquus, antīqua, antīquum 806
143.5 angustus, angusta, angustum 806

144 Low, Thick, Thin, Blind, Sharp 809
144.1 humilis, humile 809
144.2 crassus, crassa, crassum 810
144.3 tenuis, tenue 811
144.4 caecus, caeca, caecum 812
144.5 acūtus, acūta, acūtum 812

145 Sour, Alive, Gentle, Fierce, Pleasant 815
145.1 acerbus, acerba, acerbum 815
145.2 vīvus, vīva, vīvum 816
145.3 mītis, mīte 817
145.4 ferōx, ferōcis 818
145.5 iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum 818

146 Annoying, Useful, Clean, Dirty, Straight 821
146.1 molestus, molesta, molestum 821
146.2 ūtilis, ūtile 822
146.3 pūrus, pūra, pūrum 823
146.4 sordidus, sordida, sordidum 823
146.5 rēctus, rēcta, rēctum 824

147 Deaf, False, Sure, Safe, Dangerous 827
147.1 surdus, surda, surdum 827
147.2 falsus, falsa, falsum 828
147.3 certus, certa, certum 829
147.4 tūtus, tūta, tūtum 829
147.5 perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum 830

148 Lucky, Wretched, Angry, Quiet, Purple 833
148.1 fēlīx, fēlīcis 833
148.2 miser, misera, miserum 834
148.3 īrātus, īrāta, īrātum 835
148.4 quiētus, quiēta, quiētum 835

148.5 purpureus, purpurea, purpureum 836

149 Dark, Grey, Golden, Silver, Wise 839
149.1 fuscus, fusca, fuscum 839
149.2 cānus, cāna, cānum 840
149.3 aureus, aurea, aureum 841
149.4 argenteus, argentea, argenteum 842
149.5 prūdēns, prūdentis 842

150 Careful, Lazy, Hard-working, Timid, Bold 845
150.1 cautus, cauta, cautum 845
150.2 piger, pigra, pigrum 846
150.3 dīligēns, dīligentis 847
150.4 timidus, timida, timidum 848
150.5 audāx, audācis 848
150.6 (dialogue) 849
150.7 (dialogue) 850

151 Proud, Kind, Cruel, Ugly, Beautiful 853
151.1 superbus, superba, superbum 853
151.2 benignus, benigna, benignum 854
151.3 crūdēlis, crūdēle 855
151.4 turpis, turpe 856
151.5 fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum 856

152 Strong, Weak, Alone, Icy, Clear 859
152.1 validus, valida, validum 859
152.2 īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum 860
152.3 sōlus, sōla, sōlum 861
152.4 gelidus, gelida, gelidum 862
152.5 serēnus, serēna, serēnum 862

153 Cloudy, Windy, To build, To climb, To go down 865
153.1 nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum 865
153.2 ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum 866
153.3 aedificō, aedificāre 867
153.4 ascendō, ascendere 868
153.5 dēscendō, dēscendere 868

154 To join, To visit, To sing, To paint, To lead 871
154.1 iungō, iungere 871
154.2 vīsitō, vīsitāre 872
154.3 cantō, cantāre 873
154.4 pingō, pingere 874
154.5 dūcō, dūcere 874

155 To make, To carry, To put on, To take off, To clean 877
155.1 faciō, facere 877
155.2 gerō, gerere 878
155.3 induō, induere 879
155.4 exuō, exuere 880
155.5 pūrgō, pūrgāre 880

156 To break, To throw, To carry, To carry, To untie 883
156.1 frangō, frangere 883
156.2 iaciō, iacere 884
156.3 vehō, vehere 885
156.4 portō, portāre 886
156.5 solvō, solvere 886

157 To give back, To show, To shine, To lose, To win 889
157.1 reddō, reddere 889
157.2 ostendō, ostendere 890
157.3 lūceō, lūcēre 891
157.4 perdō, perdere 891
157.5 vincō, vincere 892

158 To grow, To hurry, To stay awake, To dine, To taste 895
158.1 crēscō, crēscere 895
158.2 festīnō, festīnāre 896
158.3 vigilō, vigilāre 897
158.4 cēnō, cēnāre 898
158.5 gustō, gustāre 898

159 To feel, To hang, To be silent, To keep, To change 901
159.1 sentiō, sentīre 901
159.2 pendeō, pendēre 902
159.3 taceō, tacēre 903
159.4 servō, servāre 903

159.5 mūtō, mūtāre 904

160 To count, To destroy, To go away, To arrive, To live 907
160.1 numerō, numerāre 907
160.2 dēleō, dēlēre 908
160.3 discēdō, discēdere 909
160.4 adveniō, advenīre 910
160.5 habitō, habitāre 910
160.6 (dialogue) 911
160.7 (dialogue) 912

161 Nothing, Nobody, No, Which of Two, Neither ... Nor 915
161.1 nihil 915
161.2 nēmō, nēminis 916
161.3 nūllus, nūlla, nūllum 917
161.4 uter, utra, utrum 918
161.5 neque 918

162 Recently, the Day before Yesterday, Once, Before, To Happen 921
162.1 nūper 921
162.2 nudiustertius 922
162.3 ōlim 923
162.4 anteā 924
162.5 accidō, accidere 925

163 The Day after Tomorrow, Afterwards, a Plan, To Decide, To Foresee 927
163.1 perendiē 927
163.2 posteā 928
163.3 cōnsilium, cōnsiliī 929
163.4 cōnstituō, cōnstituere 930
163.5 prōvideō, prōvidēre 931

164 A Notice, an Inscription, a Price, For Sale, Goods 933
164.1 titulus, titulī 933
164.2 īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis 934
164.3 pretium, pretiī 935
164.4 vēnālis, vēnāle 936
164.5 merx, mercis 937

164.6 (dialogue) 937
164.7 (dialogue) 938

165 To light, To put out, To jump, To smile, To shout 939
165.1 accendō, accendere 939
165.2 exstinguō, exstinguere 940
165.3 saliō, salīre 941
165.4 subrīdeō, subrīdēre 942
165.5 clāmō, clāmāre 942

166 To approve, To mark, To discuss, To promise, To allow 945
166.1 probō, probāre 945
166.2 signō, signāre 946
166.3 disputō, disputāre 947
166.4 prōmittō, prōmittere 948
166.5 permittō, permittere 948

167 To burn, To set on fire, To throw away, To calculate, To knock 951
167.1 ārdeō, ārdēre 951
167.2 incendō, incendere 952
167.3 abiciō, abicere 953
167.4 computō, computāre 954
167.5 pulsō, pulsāre 954

168 To fold, To own, To make ready in advance, To lend, To propose 957
168.1 plicō, plicāre 957
168.2 possideō, possidēre 958
168.3 praeparō, praeparāre 959
168.4 commodō, commodāre 960
168.5 prōpōnō, prōpōnere 960

169 To kill, To get used to, To make haste, To move back, To approach 963
169.1 interficiō, interficere 963
169.2 cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere 964
169.3 properō, properāre 965
169.4 recēdō, recēdere 966
169.5 appropinquō, appropinquāre 966

170 To slip, To lighten, To admire, To suspect, To press 969
170.1 lābor, lābī . . . 969
170.2 levō, levāre . . . 970
170.3 admīror, admīrārī . . . 971
170.4 suspicor, suspicārī . . . 972
170.5 premō, premere . . . 972

171 To deceive, To endure, To found, To create, To believe 975
171.1 fallō, fallere . . . 975
171.2 tolerō, tolerāre . . . 976
171.3 condō, condere . . . 977
171.4 creō, creāre . . . 978
171.5 crēdō, crēdere . . . 979

172 To sow, To reap, To hunt, To go fishing, To deny 981
172.1 serō, serere . . . 981
172.2 metō, metere . . . 982
172.3 vēnor, vēnārī . . . 983
172.4 piscor, piscārī . . . 984
172.5 negō, negāre . . . 984

173 Health, Brain, Lung, Liver, Kidney 987
173.1 valētūdō, valētūdinis . . . 987
173.2 cerebrum, cerebrī . . . 988
173.3 pulmō, pulmōnis . . . 989
173.4 iecur, iecoris . . . 990
173.5 rēn, rēnis . . . 990
173.6 (dialogue) . . . 991
173.7 (dialogue) . . . 992

174 Patience, Tear, Laugh, Voice, Mind 995
174.1 patientia, patientiae . . . 995
174.2 lacrima, lacrimae . . . 996
174.3 rīsus, rīsūs . . . 997
174.4 vōx, vōcis . . . 997
174.5 animus, animī . . . 998

175 At last, From now on, Still, Suddenly, Until 1001
175.1 tandem . . . 1001
175.2 posthāc . . . 1002

175.3 adhūc 1003
175.4 subitō 1003
175.5 dōnec 1004

176 Earlier, Every year, Now and then, Once, Twice 1007
176.1 prius 1007
176.2 quotannīs 1008
176.3 nōnnumquam 1009
176.4 semel 1009
176.5 bis 1010

177 Far, Elsewhere, Over there, Within, Out of doors 1013
177.1 longē 1013
177.2 alibī 1014
177.3 illīc 1015
177.4 intus 1015
177.5 forīs 1016

178 Therefore, However, Although, Even if, Unless 1019
178.1 igitur 1019
178.2 tamen 1020
178.3 quamquam 1021
178.4 etsī 1021
178.5 nisi 1022

179 Especially, Rather, Most, Very, Quite 1025
179.1 praesertim 1025
179.2 potius 1026
179.3 maximē 1027
179.4 valdē 1027
179.5 admodum 1028

180 Convenient, Polite, Of the country, Cheerful, Shy 1031
180.1 commodus, commoda, commodum 1031
180.2 urbānus, urbāna, urbānum 1032
180.3 rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum 1033
180.4 hilaris, hilare 1034
180.5 verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum 1035

181 Free of charge, Fresh, Raw, Cooked, Distant 1037
181.1 grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum 1037
181.2 recēns, recentis 1038
181.3 crūdus, crūda, crūdum 1039
181.4 coctus, cocta, coctum 1040
181.5 longinquus, longinqua, longinquum 1040

182 Public, Private, Common, Hollow, Heavy 1043
182.1 pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum 1043
182.2 prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum 1044
182.3 commūnis, commūne 1045
182.4 inānis, ināne 1046
182.5 gravis, grave 1046
182.6 (dialogue) 1047
182.7 (dialogue) 1048

183 Known, Famous, Honourable, Middle, Highest 1051
183.1 nōtus, nōta, nōtum 1051
183.2 celeber, celebris, celebre 1052
183.3 honestus, honesta, honestum 1053
183.4 medius, media, medium 1054
183.5 summus, summa, summum 1054

184 Wasteful, Moderate, Eloquent, Mute, Lame 1057
184.1 prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum 1057
184.2 modestus, modesta, modestum 1058
184.3 fācundus, fācunda, fācundum 1059
184.4 mūtus, mūta, mūtum 1060
184.5 claudus, clauda, claudum 1060

185 Storeroom, Study, Colonnaded garden, Rain basin, Foundation 1063
185.1 cella, cellae 1063
185.2 tablīnum, tablīnī 1064
185.3 peristylium, peristyliī 1065
185.4 impluvium, impluviī 1066
185.5 fundāmentum, fundāmentī 1066

186 Helmsman, Market, Weight, Measure, Pound 1069
186.1 gubernātor, gubernātōris 1069
186.2 mercātus, mercātūs 1070
186.3 pondus, ponderis 1071
186.4 mēnsūra, mēnsūrae 1072
186.5 lībra, lībrae 1072

187 Peace, Leader, Victory, Freedom, Glory 1075
187.1 pāx, pācis 1075
187.2 dux, ducis 1076
187.3 victōria, victōriae 1077
187.4 lībertās, lībertātis 1077
187.5 glōria, glōriae 1078

188 Architect, Weaver, Potter, Farm manager, Tenant farmer 1081
188.1 architectus, architectī 1081
188.2 textor, textōris 1082
188.3 figulus, figulī 1083
188.4 vīlicus, vīlicī 1084
188.5 colōnus, colōnī 1084

189 Kin, Uncle, Aunt, Truth, Lie 1087
189.1 cognātus, cognātī 1087
189.2 avunculus, avunculī 1088
189.3 mātertera, māterterae 1089
189.4 vēritās, vēritātis 1090
189.5 mendācium, mendāciī 1090

190 Tax, Tribute, Wages, Denarius, Sesterce 1093
190.1 vectīgal, vectīgālis 1093
190.2 tribūtum, tribūtī 1094
190.3 mercēs, mercēdis 1095
190.4 dēnārius, dēnāriī 1096
190.5 sēstertius, sēstertiī 1097

191 Charcoal, Crag, Constellation, Storm, Rain cloud 1099
191.1 carbō, carbōnis 1099
191.2 scopulus, scopulī 1100
191.3 sīdus, sīderis 1101

191.4 procella, procellae 1102
191.5 nimbus, nimbī 1102
191.6 (dialogue) 1103
191.7 (dialogue) 1104

192 Crab, Sparrow, Stork, Owl, Peacock 1107
192.1 cancer, cancrī 1107
192.2 passer, passeris 1108
192.3 cicōnia, cicōniae 1109
192.4 noctua, noctuae 1109
192.5 pāvō, pāvōnis 1110

193 Drum, Knucklebone, Gaming die, Bracelet, Necklace 1113
193.1 tympanum, tympanī 1113
193.2 tālus, tālī 1114
193.3 tessera, tesserae 1115
193.4 armilla, armillae 1116
193.5 monīle, monīlis 1116

194 Opinion, Conversation, Speech, Rumour, History 1119
194.1 sententia, sententiae 1119
194.2 sermō, sermōnis 1120
194.3 ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis 1121
194.4 rūmor, rūmōris 1122
194.5 historia, historiae 1122

195 Cake, Vinegar, Fish sauce, Ham, Birthday 1125
195.1 lībum, lībī 1125
195.2 acētum, acētī 1126
195.3 garum, garī 1127
195.4 perna, pernae 1127
195.5 diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis 1128

196 Running stream, Marsh, Meadow, Grove, Sacred grove 1131
196.1 fluvius, fluviī 1131
196.2 palūs, palūdis 1132
196.3 prātum, prātī 1133
196.4 nemus, nemoris 1133
196.5 lūcus, lūcī 1134
196.6 (dialogue) 1135

196.7 (dialogue) 1136

197 To kiss, To greet, To invite, To explain, To interpret 1137
197.1 ōsculor, ōsculārī 1137
197.2 salūtō, salūtāre 1138
197.3 invītō, invītāre 1139
197.4 explicō, explicāre 1139
197.5 interpretor, interpretārī 1140

198 To forbid, To defend, To die, To marry, To rest 1143
198.1 vetō, vetāre 1143
198.2 dēfendō, dēfendere 1144
198.3 morior, morī 1145
198.4 nūbō, nūbere 1145
198.5 quiēscō, quiēscere 1146

199 To compare, To persuade, To blame, To share, To avoid 1149
199.1 comparō, comparāre 1149
199.2 persuādeō, persuādēre 1150
199.3 reprehendō, reprehendere 1151
199.4 partior, partīrī 1152
199.5 vītō, vītāre 1152

200 To lift, To reach, To recognise, To refuse, To fly about 1155
200.1 tollō, tollere 1155
200.2 perveniō, pervenīre 1156
200.3 agnōscō, agnōscere 1157
200.4 recūsō, recūsāre 1158
200.5 volitō, volitāre 1158

201 To talk together, To hand over, To straighten, To celebrate, To pursue 1161
201.1 colloquor, colloquī 1161
201.2 trādō, trādere 1162
201.3 corrigō, corrigere 1163
201.4 celebrō, celebrāre 1164
201.5 persequor, persequī 1164

202 To advise, To tremble, To welcome, To do, To go forward 1167
202.1 suādeō, suādēre 1167
202.2 tremō, tremere 1168
202.3 excipiō, excipere 1169
202.4 agō, agere 1170
202.5 prōcēdō, prōcēdere 1170

203 To doubt, To look for, To use up, To annoy, To forget 1173
203.1 dubitō, dubitāre 1173
203.2 quaerō, quaerere 1174
203.3 cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere 1175
203.4 vexō, vexāre 1176
203.5 oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī 1176

204 To state firmly, To hurt, To decorate, To throw together, To cease 1179
204.1 affirmō, affirmāre 1179
204.2 doleō, dolēre 1180
204.3 ōrnō, ōrnāre 1181
204.4 coniciō, conicere 1182
204.5 dēsinō, dēsinere 1182

205 Wound, Scar, Head cold, Drug, Ointment 1185
205.1 vulnus, vulneris 1185
205.2 cicātrīx, cicātrīcis 1186
205.3 gravēdō, gravēdinis 1187
205.4 medicāmentum, medicāmentī 1188
205.5 unguentum, unguentī 1188
205.6 (dialogue) 1189
205.7 (dialogue) 1190

206 Breath, Memory, Wisdom, Talent, Habit 1193
206.1 anima, animae 1193
206.2 memoria, memoriae 1194
206.3 sapientia, sapientiae 1195
206.4 ingenium, ingeniī 1196
206.5 cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis 1196

207 Generation, Age, Sunset, Sunrise, First light 1199
207.1 saeculum, saeculī 1199
207.2 aetās, aetātis 1200
207.3 occāsus, occāsūs 1201
207.4 ortus, ortūs 1202
207.5 dīlūculum, dīlūculī 1202

208 Finally, Lastly, On the spot, Formerly, Long since 1205
208.1 dēnique 1205
208.2 postrēmō 1206
208.3 illicō 1207
208.4 quondam 1207
208.5 iamdūdum 1208

209 Region, Province, From there, In the way, All the way 1211
209.1 regiō, regiōnis 1211
209.2 prōvincia, prōvinciae 1212
209.3 inde 1213
209.4 obviam 1213
209.5 usque 1214

210 Moreover, Indeed, Surely, About, Only 1217
210.1 autem 1217
210.2 vērō 1218
210.3 profectō 1219
210.4 ferē 1219
210.5 tantum 1220

211 Altogether, Hardly, Of one's own accord, In vain, Back again 1223
211.1 omnīnō 1223
211.2 vix 1224
211.3 sponte 1225
211.4 frūstrā 1225
211.5 rūrsus 1226

212 Inquisitive, Envious, Anxious, Peaceful, Silent 1229
212.1 cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum 1229
212.2 invidus, invida, invidum 1230
212.3 anxius, anxia, anxium 1231

212.4 placidus, placida, placidum 1232
212.5 tacitus, tacita, tacitum 1232

213 Foreign, Honest, Patient, Generous, Idle 1235
213.1 peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum 1235
213.2 probus, proba, probum 1236
213.3 patiēns, patientis 1237
213.4 līberālis, līberāle 1238
213.5 ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum 1238

214 Savage, Wild, Of the home, Rare, Frequent 1241
214.1 saevus, saeva, saevum 1241
214.2 ferus, fera, ferum 1242
214.3 domesticus, domestica, domesticum 1243
214.4 rārus, rāra, rārum 1244
214.5 crēber, crēbra, crēbrum 1244
214.6 (dialogue) 1245
214.7 (dialogue) 1246

215 Today's, Yesterday's, Tomorrow's, True, Uncertain 1249
215.1 hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum 1249
215.2 hesternus, hesterna, hesternum 1250
215.3 crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum 1251
215.4 vērus, vēra, vērum 1252
215.5 incertus, incerta, incertum 1252

216 Bald, Bearded, Charming, Worn out, Wakeful 1255
216.1 calvus, calva, calvum 1255
216.2 barbātus, barbāta, barbātum 1256
216.3 venustus, venusta, venustum 1257
216.4 dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum 1258
216.5 vigil, vigilis 1258

217 Roof tile, Furnace, Litter, Vehicle, Chariot 1261
217.1 tēgula, tēgulae 1261
217.2 fornāx, fornācis 1262
217.3 lectīca, lectīcae 1263
217.4 vehiculum, vehiculī 1264
217.5 currus, currūs 1264

218 Pace, Witness, Defendant, Punishment, Charge 1267
218.1 passus, passūs 1267
218.2 testis, testis 1268
218.3 reus, reī 1269
218.4 poena, poenae 1269
218.5 crīmen, crīminis 1270

219 Reputation, Messenger, Show, Actor, Story 1273
219.1 fāma, fāmae 1273
219.2 nūntius, nūntiī 1274
219.3 spectāculum, spectāculī 1275
219.4 histriō, histriōnis 1276
219.5 fābula, fābulae 1276

220 Maidservant, Freedman, Newcomer, Young person, Widow 1279
220.1 ancilla, ancillae 1279
220.2 lībertus, lībertī 1280
220.3 advena, advenae 1281
220.4 adulēscēns, adulēscentis 1281
220.5 vidua, viduae 1282

221 Rule, Difference, Outcome, Fortune, Accident 1285
221.1 rēgula, rēgulae 1285
221.2 discrīmen, discrīminis 1286
221.3 ēventus, ēventūs 1287
221.4 fortūna, fortūnae 1288
221.5 cāsus, cāsūs 1288

222 Gold, Silver, Bronze, Iron, Metal lead 1291
222.1 aurum, aurī 1291
222.2 argentum, argentī 1292
222.3 aes, aeris 1293
222.4 ferrum, ferrī 1293
222.5 plumbum, plumbī 1294

223 Mist, Breeze, Root, Thorn, Crop 1297
223.1 cālīgō, cālīginis 1297
223.2 aura, aurae 1298
223.3 rādīx, rādīcis 1299

223.4 spīna, spīnae 1299
223.5 seges, segetis 1300
223.6 (dialogue) 1301
223.7 (dialogue) 1302

224 Lizard, Wild boar, Billy goat, Lamb, Calf 1305
224.1 lacerta, lacertae 1305
224.2 aper, aprī 1306
224.3 caper, caprī 1307
224.4 agnus, agnī 1307
224.5 vitulus, vitulī 1308

225 Gem, Garment, Sandal, Fold of a garment, Mattress 1311
225.1 gemma, gemmae 1311
225.2 vestīmentum, vestīmentī 1312
225.3 solea, soleae 1313
225.4 sinus, sinūs 1314
225.5 culcita, culcitae 1314

226 Grammar, Philosophy, Eagerness, Question, Answer 1317
226.1 grammatica, grammaticae 1317
226.2 philosophia, philosophiae 1318
226.3 studium, studiī 1319
226.4 quaestiō, quaestiōnis 1320
226.5 respōnsum, respōnsī 1320

227 Fate, Lair, Hospitality, Lodging house, Traveller 1323
227.1 fātum, fātī 1323
227.2 cubīle, cubīlis 1324
227.3 hospitium, hospitiī 1325
227.4 dēversōrium, dēversōriī 1326
227.5 viātor, viātōris 1326

228 Woodland pass, Peak, Yoke, Whirlpool, Order 1329
228.1 saltus, saltūs 1329
228.2 cacūmen, cacūminis 1330
228.3 iugum, iugī 1331
228.4 vertex, verticis 1332
228.5 ōrdō, ōrdinis 1332
228.6 (dialogue) 1333

228.7 (dialogue) 1334

229 To decree, To try, To go on, To hold off, To remove 1335
229.1 dēcernō, dēcernere 1335
229.2 temptō, temptāre 1336
229.3 pergō, pergere 1337
229.4 cessō, cessāre 1338
229.5 removeō, removēre 1338

230 To wake up, To accompany, To add, To announce, To appear 1341
230.1 expergīscor, expergīscī 1341
230.2 comitor, comitārī 1342
230.3 addō, addere 1343
230.4 nūntiō, nūntiāre 1344
230.5 appāreō, appārēre 1344

231 To turn, To enjoy, To shape, To complain, To be missing 1347
231.1 vertō, vertere 1347
231.2 fruor, fruī 1348
231.3 fingō, fingere 1349
231.4 queror, querī 1350
231.5 dēsum, deesse 1350

232 To steal, To uncover, To seem, To serve, To suffer 1353
232.1 fūror, fūrārī 1353
232.2 dētegō, dētegere 1354
232.3 videor, vidērī 1355
232.4 serviō, servīre 1356
232.5 patior, patī 1356

233 To press on, To break off, To tie, To mix, To obey 1359
233.1 īnstō, īnstāre 1359
233.2 interrumpō, interrumpere 1360
233.3 ligō, ligāre 1361
233.4 misceō, miscēre 1362
233.5 pāreō, pārēre 1362

234 To let down, To gather, To vanish, To entrust, To hold back 1365
234.1 dēmittō, dēmittere 1365
234.2 colligō, colligere 1366
234.3 ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere 1367
234.4 mandō, mandāre 1368
234.5 retineō, retinēre 1368

235 To remember, To speak, To follow, To set out, To use 1371
235.1 meminī, meminisse 1371
235.2 loquor, loquī 1372
235.3 sequor, sequī 1373
235.4 proficīscor, proficīscī 1374
235.5 ūtor, ūtī 1374

236 Plaster, Remedy, Dream, Love, Friendship 1377
236.1 emplastrum, emplastrī 1377
236.2 remedium, remediī 1378
236.3 somnium, somniī 1379
236.4 amor, amōris 1379
236.5 amīcitia, amīcitiae 1380

237 End, Delay, Sometimes, Every day, Day before 1383
237.1 fīnis, fīnis 1383
237.2 mora, morae 1384
237.3 interdum 1385
237.4 cotīdiē 1386
237.5 prīdiē 1386
237.6 (dialogue) 1387
237.7 (dialogue) 1388

238 Beyond, On this side, At the house of, Face to face, By which way 1391
238.1 ultrā 1391
238.2 citrā 1392
238.3 apud 1393
238.4 cōram 1393
238.5 quā 1394

239 At the same time, Perhaps, Also, As if, Because of 1397
239.1 simul . . . 1397
239.2 fortasse . . . 1398
239.3 quoque . . . 1399
239.4 quasi . . . 1399
239.5 propter . . . 1400

240 Rough, Deep, Unknown, Necessary, Useless 1403
240.1 asper, aspera, asperum . . . 1403
240.2 profundus, profunda, profundum . . . 1404
240.3 ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum . . . 1405
240.4 necessārius, necessāria, necessārium . . . 1406
240.5 inūtilis, inūtile . . . 1406

241 Industrious, Talkative, Worried, Unmarried, Rainy 1409
241.1 industrius, industria, industrium . . . 1409
241.2 loquāx, loquācis . . . 1410
241.3 sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum . . . 1411
241.4 caelebs, caelibis . . . 1412
241.5 pluvius, pluvia, pluvium . . . 1412

242 Few, All, Whole, Others, Other 1415
242.1 paucī, paucae, pauca . . . 1415
242.2 omnis, omne . . . 1416
242.3 tōtus, tōta, tōtum . . . 1417
242.4 cēterī, cēterae, cētera . . . 1417
242.5 alius, alia, aliud . . . 1418

243 Doubtful, Faithful, Loyal, Unlucky, Blessed 1421
243.1 dubius, dubia, dubium . . . 1421
243.2 fīdus, fīda, fīdum . . . 1422
243.3 fīdēlis, fīdēle . . . 1423
243.4 īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis . . . 1424
243.5 beātus, beāta, beātum . . . 1424

244 Travelling carriage, Broad street, Aqueduct, Public baths, Amphitheatre 1427
244.1 raeda, raedae . . . 1427
244.2 platēa, platēae . . . 1428
244.3 aquaeductus, aquaeductūs . . . 1429

244.4 thermae, thermārum 1430
244.5 amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī 1431

245 Thief, Robber, Consul, General, Kingdom 1433
245.1 fūr, fūris 1433
245.2 latrō, latrōnis 1434
245.3 cōnsul, cōnsulis 1435
245.4 imperātor, imperātōris 1435
245.5 rēgnum, rēgnī 1436

246 Song, Line of verse, Writer, Painter, Music 1439
246.1 carmen, carminis 1439
246.2 versus, versūs 1440
246.3 scrīptor, scrīptōris 1441
246.4 pictor, pictōris 1442
246.5 mūsica, mūsicae 1442
246.6 (dialogue) 1443
246.7 (dialogue) 1444

247 A Twin and the In-Laws 1447
247.1 geminus, geminī 1447
247.2 socer, socerī 1448
247.3 socrus, socrūs 1449
247.4 gener, generī 1450
247.5 nurus, nurūs 1450

248 Opportunity, Danger, Kindness, Duty, Work 1453
248.1 occāsiō, occāsiōnis 1453
248.2 perīculum, perīculī 1454
248.3 beneficium, beneficiī 1455
248.4 officium, officiī 1456
248.5 labor, labōris 1456

249 Wood, Marble, Glass, Hide, Linen 1459
249.1 lignum, lignī 1459
249.2 marmor, marmoris 1460
249.3 vitrum, vitrī 1461
249.4 corium, coriī 1461
249.5 līnum, līnī 1462

250 Vine, Oak, Pine, Laurel, Violet 1465
250.1 vītis, vītis . . . 1465
250.2 quercus, quercūs . . . 1466
250.3 pīnus, pīnūs . . . 1467
250.4 laurus, laurī . . . 1468
250.5 viola, violae . . . 1468

251 Puppy, Tiger, Club, Chain, Shield 1471
251.1 catulus, catulī . . . 1471
251.2 tigris, tigris . . . 1472
251.3 clāva, clāvae . . . 1473
251.4 catēna, catēnae . . . 1473
251.5 scūtum, scūtī . . . 1474

252 Small flask, Frying pan, Oven, Candlestick, Small tablet 1477
252.1 ampulla, ampullae . . . 1477
252.2 sartāgō, sartāginis . . . 1478
252.3 furnus, furnī . . . 1479
252.4 candēlābrum, candēlābrī . . . 1480
252.5 tabella, tabellae . . . 1480

253 Holidays, Banquet, Sacrifice, Altar, Goddess 1483
253.1 fēriae, fēriārum . . . 1483
253.2 convīvium, convīviī . . . 1484
253.3 sacrificium, sacrificiī . . . 1485
253.4 āra, ārae . . . 1486
253.5 dea, deae . . . 1486

254 Pack, Satchel, Money bag, Tent, Flag 1489
254.1 sarcina, sarcinae . . . 1489
254.2 pēra, pērae . . . 1490
254.3 marsuppium, marsuppiī . . . 1491
254.4 tabernāculum, tabernāculī . . . 1491
254.5 vexillum, vexillī . . . 1492
254.6 (dialogue) . . . 1493
254.7 (dialogue) . . . 1494

255 To hold, To burst, To warm, To fill, To measure 1495
255.1 teneō, tenēre . . . 1495
255.2 rumpō, rumpere . . . 1496

255.3 calefaciō, calefacere 1497
255.4 impleō, implēre 1498
255.5 mētior, mētīrī 1498

256 To clap, To cross, To increase, To lessen, To warn 1501
256.1 plaudō, plaudere 1501
256.2 trānseō, trānsīre 1502
256.3 augeō, augēre 1503
256.4 minuō, minuere 1504
256.5 moneō, monēre 1504

257 To deserve, To correct, To offer, To watch, To stroll 1507
257.1 mereor, merērī 1507
257.2 ēmendō, ēmendāre 1508
257.3 offerō, offerre 1509
257.4 observō, observāre 1510
257.5 spatior, spatiārī 1510

258 To dream, To push, To go past, To make no sound, To dread 1513
258.1 somniō, somniāre 1513
258.2 pellō, pellere 1514
258.3 praetereō, praeterīre 1515
258.4 sileō, silēre 1516
258.5 metuō, metuere 1516

259 To pray, To recommend, To breathe, To give up, To exchange 1519
259.1 ōrō, ōrāre 1519
259.2 commendō, commendāre 1520
259.3 spīrō, spīrāre 1521
259.4 dēsistō, dēsistere 1522
259.5 permūtō, permūtāre 1522

260 To press out, To feed, To put together, To notice, To blush 1525
260.1 exprimō, exprimere 1525
260.2 alō, alere 1526
260.3 compōnō, compōnere 1527
260.4 animadvertō, animadvertere 1528

260.5 ērubēscō, ērubēscere 1528

261 To give birth to, To order, To force, To mourn, To dig 1531
261.1 gignō, gignere 1531
261.2 iubeō, iubēre 1532
261.3 cōgō, cōgere 1533
261.4 lūgeō, lūgēre 1534
261.5 fodiō, fodere 1534

262 Trust, Courage, Shame, Envy, Boredom 1537
262.1 fidēs, fideī 1537
262.2 virtūs, virtūtis 1538
262.3 pudor, pudōris 1539
262.4 invidia, invidiae 1540
262.5 taedium, taediī 1540

263 Next day, Meanwhile, At some time, For a long time, Shortly 1543
263.1 postrīdiē 1543
263.2 intereā 1544
263.3 aliquandō 1545
263.4 diū 1546
263.5 brevī 1546
263.6 (dialogue) 1547
263.7 (dialogue) 1548

264 Nowhere, From all sides, Here and there, Upwards, Downwards 1551 264.1 nusquam 1551
264.2 undique 1552
264.3 passim 1553
264.4 sūrsum 1553
264.5 deorsum 1554

265 Even as, As, If only, On the contrary, At least 1557
265.1 sīcut 1557
265.2 velut 1558
265.3 utinam 1559
265.4 immō 1559
265.5 saltem 1560

266 Wonderful, Different, Similar, Fair, Unjust 1563
266.1 mīrus, mīra, mīrum 1563
266.2 dīversus, dīversa, dīversum 1564
266.3 similis, simile 1565
266.4 iūstus, iūsta, iūstum 1566
266.5 iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum 1566

267 Fat, Clever, Special, Former, Nearest 1569
267.1 pinguis, pingue 1569
267.2 callidus, callida, callidum 1570
267.3 praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum 1571
267.4 prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum 1572
267.5 proximus, proxima, proximum 1572

268 Second of two, Suitable, Fit, Ready, Facing 1575
268.1 alter, altera, alterum 1575
268.2 idōneus, idōnea, idōneum 1576
268.3 aptus, apta, aptum 1577
268.4 parātus, parāta, parātum 1578
268.5 adversus, adversa, adversum 1578

269 Gloomy, Drunk, Sober, Greedy, Thrifty 1581
269.1 maestus, maesta, maestum 1581
269.2 ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium 1582
269.3 sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium 1583
269.4 avārus, avāra, avārum 1584
269.5 parcus, parca, parcum 1584

270 Racecourse, Hall of justice, Senate house, Anchor, Oar 1587
270.1 circus, circī 1587
270.2 basilica, basilicae 1588
270.3 cūria, cūriae 1589
270.4 ancora, ancorae 1590
270.5 rēmus, rēmī 1590

271 People, State, Homeland, Enemy, War 1593
271.1 populus, populī 1593
271.2 cīvitās, cīvitātis 1594
271.3 patria, patriae 1595
271.4 hostis, hostis 1596

271.5 bellum, bellī 1596

272 Butcher, Innkeeper, Banker, Envoy, Clerk 1599
272.1 lanius, laniī 1599
272.2 caupō, caupōnis 1600
272.3 argentārius, argentāriī 1601
272.4 lēgātus, lēgātī 1602
272.5 scrība, scrībae 1602
272.6 (dialogue) 1603
272.7 (dialogue) 1604

273 Wedding, Husband or wife, Parent, Grandson, Granddaughter 1607
273.1 nūptiae, nūptiārum 1607
273.2 coniūnx, coniugis 1608
273.3 parēns, parentis 1609
273.4 nepōs, nepōtis 1610
273.5 neptis, neptis 1610

274 Leisure, Business, Profit, Loss, Debt 1613
274.1 ōtium, ōtiī 1613
274.2 negōtium, negōtiī 1614
274.3 lucrum, lucrī 1615
274.4 damnum, damnī 1615
274.5 dēbitum, dēbitī 1616

275 Silk, Mud, Dust, Smoke, Ash 1619
275.1 sēricum, sēricī 1619
275.2 lutum, lutī 1620
275.3 pulvis, pulveris 1621
275.4 fūmus, fūmī 1621
275.5 cinis, cineris 1622

276 Wasp, Gnat, Flea, Worm, Tortoise 1625
276.1 vespa, vespae 1625
276.2 culex, culicis 1626
276.3 pūlex, pūlicis 1627
276.4 vermis, vermis 1628
276.5 testūdō, testūdinis 1628

277 Helmet, Spear, Bow, Arrow, Trumpet 1631
277.1 galea, galeae 1631
277.2 hasta, hastae 1632
277.3 arcus, arcūs 1633
277.4 sagitta, sagittae 1634
277.5 tuba, tubae 1634

278 Book-roll, Page, Letter of the alphabet, Word, Name 1637
278.1 volūmen, volūminis 1637
278.2 pāgina, pāginae 1638
278.3 littera, litterae 1639
278.4 verbum, verbī 1640
278.5 nōmen, nōminis 1640

279 Cherry, Plum, Cabbage, Leek, Porridge 1643
279.1 cerasum, cerasī 1643
279.2 prūnum, prūnī 1644
279.3 brassica, brassicae 1645
279.4 porrum, porrī 1645
279.5 puls, pultis 1646

280 Tower, Column, City walls, Ditch, Rampart 1649
280.1 turris, turris 1649
280.2 columna, columnae 1650
280.3 moenia, moenium 1651
280.4 fossa, fossae 1652
280.5 vallum, vallī 1652
280.6 (dialogue) 1653
280.7 (dialogue) 1654

How Latin sounds (reference) 1657

Glossary 1659

Review Questions 1751

Answer Key 1753

Index 1755

Chapter 1

Greetings

Modes: voice (5) pen (4) Hands-free start: the first of 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can greet someone in Latin, thank them, answer yes or no, and say goodbye.
>
> The whole doorway sequence on cue: write salvē independently from its sound, use salvē or avē on arrival, say grātiās tibi agō, answer ita or nōn, and use valē on the way out.

1.1 salvē / salvēte — "hello" (be well)

The first Latin word — and it already contains save, safe, and salute.

Sounds you'll need

Latin is read as written, every letter sounded. A macron (ā ē ī ō ū) marks a long vowel — held longer, same quality. Classical v = w. So salvē = SAL-weh, not "sal-vay."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Salvē (to one person) / salvēte (to several) is the imperative of salvēre, "to be in good health," from salvus "safe, sound, whole." To greet in Latin is to wish someone health. That root fans out into English — save, safe, salvage, salvation, salute, salubrious, the toast "salut!" — and into the Romance children as the word for health itself: Spanish salud, Italian salute, French salut.

Grammar Lens

salvē vs. salvēte: Latin changes the ending to mark one listener (-e) or many (-ēte). This is the feature that defines Latin — meaning carried in endings, not in word order or extra words. English lost almost all of it; its Romance grandchildren kept some. You will meet it in every chapter.

Writing — follow one greeting you can see

Keep salvē visible. First point to the line over the final ē: that macron says to hold the vowel longer. Trace the whole word once, from s through ē, then say SAL-weh. Stop there.

This is not a spelling test. Your eye and hand are only following a greeting whose sound and meaning are already on the page.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- greet one friend — salvē (SAL-weh)
- greet a whole room — salvēte
- two English words from salvus (save, safe, salute, salvation…)

Before you move on

What does salvē literally wish, and how do you greet more than one person? ("Be well / be in good health"; salvēte, with the plural -ēte ending.)

1.2 salvē — copy one greeting with help

Point to salvē and say it once: SAL-weh. The model stays on the page.

Writing — one guided copy

Copy salvē once on the line below it. Write salve first, then add the short macron over the final ē. Look back at the model whenever you want.

Say the word as you finish. The macron belongs to the vowel: it records the long sound you already heard; it is not a new letter and not something to guess.

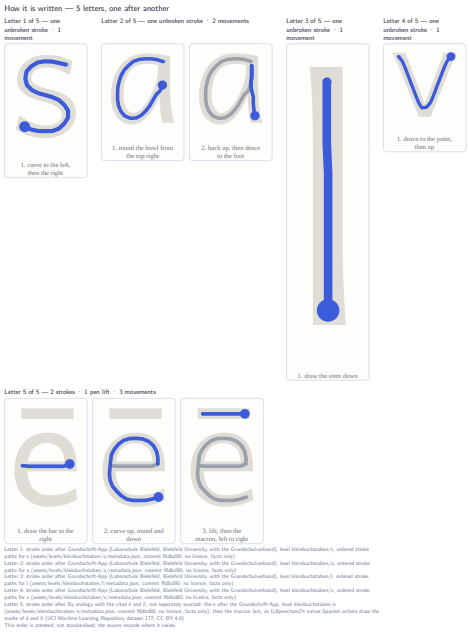

Before you move on

Compare your copy with the model. If one mark differs, repair only that mark. No hiding, no spelling from memory, and no second word today.

1.3 salvē — look, hide, write, check

Say salvē once: SAL-weh, "be well." Its sound and meaning are already familiar. Today only the amount of visual help changes.

Writing — delayed copy

How salvē is written, letter by letter, stroke by stroke

Look at salvē for five seconds. Notice the five letters and the short macron over the final ē. Cover the model completely. From memory, write the greeting once. Say SAL-weh as you finish.

Uncover the model and compare one feature at a time: s-a-l-v-ē. If one feature differs, repair only that feature. This is one gentle memory step, not a speed test.

Before you move on

Writing pass: 1/1 only when the covered-model attempt contains s-a-l-v-ē with the macron. Saying the greeting correctly does not replace the writing point.

1.4 Hear the greeting; write it independently

Cover the previous lesson and the answer box below. Hear this cue without looking at Latin spelling: "Greet one person: SAL-weh — literally, be well."

Writing — dictation and transcription

Write the one-word Latin greeting from the sound and meaning cue. Remember that the final vowel is long, so its written vowel carries the macron. Do not copy from an earlier page. Stop after one attempt.

Before you move on

Now uncover the answer: salvē.

- Writing: 1/1 for all five letters plus the final macron; otherwise 0/1.
- Listening: 1/1 if the cue selected the one-person greeting; otherwise 0/1.

Each skill must pass on its own. A correct listening choice cannot compensate for a missing or incorrect written form.

1.5 avē / avēte — "hail" (a formal greeting)

The ceremonious greeting — the one you still hear in Ave Maria.

Sounds you'll need

Avē = AH-weh (again the w-sound for v). Two syllables, the second long.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Avē is the more formal greeting — "hail" — from avēre "to fare well, to be eager." It survives in English essentially unchanged inside the prayer "Ave Maria" ("Hail, Mary"), and stands in Catullus's famous avē atque valē — "hail and farewell" — spoken at his brother's grave, pairing the word you say on arrival with the one you say on leaving (next lesson). Romans heard avē as a form of avēre; many scholars now think it began as a Punic greeting meaning "live!".

Why it's said this way

Avē carried rank and ritual — addressed to emperors and gods (avē, Caesar). For an everyday "hi," Romans reached for salvē; avē was the bow, not the wave.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- read it — AH-weh
- where English still uses it (Ave Maria, "Hail Mary")
- which is more formal, avē or salvē? (avē)

Before you move on

What register does avē carry, and in what famous phrase does English keep it? (Formal / ceremonial, for emperors and gods; Ave Maria.)

1.6 valē / valēte — "goodbye" (be strong)

Latin's goodbye wishes you strength — and hides inside value, valid, and prevail.

Sounds you'll need

Valē = WAH-leh. Like salvē, a health-and-strength wish frozen into a command.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Valē (singular) / valēte (plural) is the imperative of valēre, "to be strong, to be well." So goodbye in Latin literally wishes you strength. Valēre is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European walh₂-*, "to be strong" (EtymDB 2.1). The root is an English gold mine: value, valid, valiant, valour, valence, prevail, convalesce, ambivalent ("strong both ways"). And the Romance children carry valēre as their verb "to be worth": Spanish valer, Italian valere, French valoir.

Grammar Lens

salvē, avē, valē are all the same shape — a bare imperative, a command form of a verb about health or strength. Latin doesn't say "hello/goodbye"; it orders you to thrive. Feel the -ē / -ēte pair recur: know it once, and you can address one friend or a whole room in any of the three.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- say goodbye to one person — valē (WAH-leh)
- to several — valēte
- the whole "hail and farewell" — avē atque valē
- two English words from valēre (value, valid, valiant, prevail…)

Before you move on

What does valē literally wish, and what everyday English noun comes straight from its root? ("Be strong / be well"; value — from valēre "to be worth.")

1.7 grātiās (tibi) agō — "thank you" (I give thanks)

Say this and you have said grace, gratitude, gracias, and grazie all at once.

Sounds you'll need

Grātiās = GRAH-tee-ās; agō = AH-go. In classical Latin c and t before i stay hard — GRA-tee, never "GRA-shee."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The full phrase is grātiās tibi agō — literally "I give thanks to you" (grātiās "thanks," tibi "to you," agō "I do/drive"). The noun grātia means "favour, grace, gratitude," from grātus "pleasing, thankful." Into English: grace, gratitude, gratis, grateful, gracious, ingratiate, congratulate. And straight into the Romance "thank you" you already learned — Italian grazie, Spanish gracias, Portuguese graças — all just the plural grātiās, "thanks," worn smooth.

Grammar Lens

agō means "I do" — the -ō ending is "I," so no separate pronoun is needed. This is Latin's great habit: the verb ending tells you who acts. Agō itself is a root you know: agent, act, agenda ("things to be done"), agile, navigate.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the phrase — grātiās tibi agō
- the Romance descendants of grātiās (grazie, gracias, graças)
- what the -ō on agō already means (the pronoun "I")

Before you move on

Grātiās agō literally says what, and why is there no word for "I"? ("I give thanks"; the -ō verb-ending already carries "I.")

1.8 ita / nōn — “yes” and “no”

A surprise: Latin had no plain word for “yes.” Here is what Romans said instead.

Sounds you’ll need

Ita = IH-tah; nōn = nōne, with a long ō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Classical Latin had no simple “yes.” To agree you said ita (“thus, so”), sīc (“so, in this way”), certē (“certainly”), or you repeated the verb — asked “are you coming?”, you answered “I’m coming.” It was sīc that hardened into the Romance “yes”: Spanish and Italian sí / sì, French si (the emphatic yes). “No” is easier: nōn (“not”), from older ne-oenum “not one thing” — the ancient negative ne- that also gives English no, not, none, never, and which you will meet again as Sanskrit na and Hindi nahīṃ.

Why it’s said this way

A language that carries so much in its verb endings barely needs a “yes” word — the verb is the answer. This is a real window into how Latin thinks: agreement lives in the sentence, not in a little particle bolted on.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- three Latin ways to say “yes” (ita, sīc, certē)
- which one became Spanish/Italian sí/sì? (sīc)
- the English cousins of nōn (no, not, none, never)

Before you move on

How did Romans say “yes,” and what Romance word grew out of sīc? (With ita/sīc/certē or by repeating the verb; sí / sì.)

1.9 Chapter 1 — Practice and Recall

No new words. Just the greetings — and the English and Romance words they secretly contain.

Your turn: Rapid recall

Say these aloud:

- hello, one person — salvē
- hail, formally — avē
- goodbye, one person — valē
- thank you — grātiās tibi agō
- "thus" (a way to say yes) and "not" — ita / nōn

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Each greeting is an etymological hub. Trace them:
Say these aloud:

- which greeting root gives save, safe, salute? (salvus, from salvē)
- which gives value, valid, prevail? (valēre, from valē)
- which gives grace, gratitude, grazie, gracias? (grātia, from grātiās)

Before you move on

- salvus "safe" → save, safe, salvage, salvation, salute
- valēre "be strong" → value, valid, valiant, prevail, convalesce
- grātia "grace" → grace, gratitude, gratis, congratulate; Romance grazie/gracias
- nōn ← ne- → English no, not, none; cousin of Sanskrit na

Before you move on

Catullus wrote avē atque valē at his brother's tomb. Translate it, and say what each verb literally wishes. ("Hail and farewell"; avē "fare well" on meeting, valē "be strong" on parting.)

Chapter 2

Numbers One to Ten

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from one to ten in Latin and say why September sits in the ninth month.
>
> Count ūnus to decem aloud, then read the Roman tally VI-X and place September against Rome's March-start year.

2.1 ūnus, duo, trēs, quattuor, quīnque — one to five

You've seen these numbers before — worn down. Here they are new, before a thousand years of erosion set to work.

You'll want to know: The five

numeral	Latin	said
I (1)	ūnus	OO-nus
II (2)	duo	DOO-oh
III (3)	trēs	trayss
IV (4)	quattuor	KWAT-twor
V (5)	quīnque	KWEEN-kwe

The Roman numerals I II III IV V are the tally you already half-know from clock faces — one, two, three strokes, then IV (one before five) and V (five itself). (The qu in quattuor/quīnque is said kw, and every Latin v is a w — so quīnque is KWEEN-kwe.)

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Latin is the well the Romance tracks keep drawing from. Line these up against their descendants and the erosion shows itself:

Latin	→ French	→ Spanish
ūnus	un	uno
duo	deux	dos
trēs	trois	tres
quattuor	quatre	cuatro
quīnque	cinq	cinco

(A purist's note: French deux and Spanish dos actually descend from the accusative duōs, not the duo shown — as Romance words generally do.)

Quattuor → quatre → cuatro is the same wearing-down Hindi shows in catvāri → chār — two branches of one ancient word (PIE *k^{w}etwóres), one softening in Europe, one in India. And they seed English too: ūnus in unit and union, duo in duo and dual, trēs in trio and triple, quīnque in quintet.

Grammar Lens: A grammar seed: the first three bend

Here's something Latin does that its children mostly dropped: one, two and three change their endings to match what they count — ūnus/ūna/ūnum, duo/duae, trēs/tria — while four and up stay fixed. You don't need the full tables yet; just notice that ūnus is really ūn- with a changeable tail, and file away that Latin makes even its numbers agree.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ūnus, duo, trēs, quattuor, quīnque" — remember v = w, qu = kw
- the erosion — "quattuor → quatre → cuatro"
- the tally — I, II, III, IV, V

Before you move on

Count to five in Latin. (Ūnus, duo, trēs, quattuor, quīnque.) Which Latin word is the source of both French quatre and Spanish cuatro? (quattuor.) How is the qu in quīnque pronounced? (kw — KWEEN-kwe.) Which of the first five numbers change their endings to match what they count? (One, two, three — four and up stay fixed.) Next: six to ten, and the numbers hiding in the calendar.

2.2 sex, septem, octō, novem, decem — six to ten

Four of these five are hiding in your calendar right now — with the wrong numbers on them. Here's why.

You'll want to know: The five

numeral	Latin	said
VI (6)	sex	sex
VII (7)	septem	SEP-tem
VIII (8)	octō	OK-toh
IX (9)	novem	NO-wem
X (10)	decem	DEK-em

The numerals climb by adding to five — VI VII VIII (five-and-one, -two, -three) — then IX (one before ten) and X. (Remember $v = w$, so novem is NO-wem; and c is always hard k, so decem is DEK-em.)

You'll want to know: The numbers frozen in the calendar

Say the last four out loud, then add the month-name ending -ber to each (where the ending itself comes from is uncertain):

septem + -ber → September
octō + -ber → Octōber
novem + -ber → November
decem + -ber → December

The first literally means "the seventh," yet it sits in ninth place, and the other three are two places off as well. The old Roman year began in March — so month one was March, and the seventh month was the one your calendar now counts ninth. When January and February were later pushed to the front, the names never moved. Rome renumbered the calendar and forgot to rename the months.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

- sex → sextet, sextant (and sex- "six" in sexagesimal, base-60)
- octō → octave, October — while its Greek twin oktṓ gives octagon and octopus
- decem → decimal, and — via duodecim "twelve" — dozen (its Greek cousin dekás "group of ten" adds decade)

All five numbers are cousins of English six to ten (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "sex, septem, octō, novem, decem" — v = w, c = k
- the calendar — the month named for septem, "seven", and the place it sits in now (ninth)
- the tally — VI, VII, VIII, IX, X

Before you move on

Count six to ten in Latin. (Sex, septem, octō, novem, decem.) Why does the month named for septem, "seven", fall ninth? (Rome's year began in March; two months were later added at the front and the names never changed.) How is novem said, and why? (NO-wem — Latin v is a w.) What everyday base-ten word comes straight from decem? (decimal.) You can now count to ten in the language every Romance number came from.

Chapter 3

Please

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can soften a Latin request the way Romans did, with quaesō or sīs instead of a word for please.
>
> Attach quaesō to a real request — dā mihi aquam, quaesō — and swap in sīs for the if-you-wish version.

3.1 quaesō — please (I ask)

Latin has no word that simply means "please." Instead you say what you're actually doing: asking.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quaesō — said KWAI-so (qu = kw, ae = eye) — literally means "I ask" or "I beg." Romans dropped it into a sentence exactly where English drops please:

> Dā mihi aquam, quaesō — "Give me water, please" (lit. "…I ask").

It's a worn-down cousin of Latin's everyday verb for "to seek, to ask" (a later chapter teaches it) — the same root English took for query, quest, question, require and inquire. So quaesō is, at heart, "I'm seeking [this] of you."

Why it's said this way

Because there's no single word, Latin had a small kit of polite moves — worth meeting so the absence doesn't feel like a gap:

- sīs — a squeezed sī vīs, "if you wish" (to one person); plural sultis (sī vultis). This is the same "if you wish" strategy French will use in s'il te plaît.
- amābō tē — literally "I will love you" — a warm, coaxing "please," the way English might say "be a dear."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "quaesō" — KWAI-so, "I ask"
- in place — "Dā mihi aquam, quaesō"
- the "if you wish" version — "sīs" (from sī vīs)

Before you move on

What did Romans literally say instead of "please"? (quaesō — "I ask/beg.") What verb is it from, and which English words share that root? (The verb "to seek, to ask" — query, quest, require.) What does sīs stand for? (sī vīs, "if you wish" — the same idea French uses in s'il te plaît.)

Chapter 4

Sorry

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can apologise in Latin with ignōsce mihi, and use paenitet mē when I want to name the regret instead.
>
> Apologise to someone's face with ignōsce mihi, then contrast it with paenitet mē, which names regret rather than asking pardon.

4.1 ignōsce mihi — "forgive me" / I'm sorry

You've met quaesō, the worn-down "I ask" Romans used for please. Their word for sorry is built the very same way — a small verb carrying the whole apology.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

- ignōsce — the imperative "forgive!," from ignōscere, itself in- (here appearing as ig-, "not") + (g)nōscere, "to know." Literally, ignōscere means "to not-know" — i.e. to overlook, to treat as unseen. Asking forgiveness in Latin is asking someone not to hold something against you, as if they hadn't noticed it.
- mihi — "to me," the dative pronoun.

So ignōsce mihi is "forgive [it] to me" — don't hold this against me. That root (g)nōscere, "to know," reaches deep into English: know itself traces to the very same ancient root, alongside recognize ("know again"), cognition, and notice. Latin's word for "sorry" and English's word for "know" are, at bottom, blood relatives.

Why it's said this way

Latin also had an impersonal construction for plain regret — no imperative, no "you" at all: paenitet mē, literally "it grieves me" (mē here is accusative, "me," the one afflicted by the regret) — "I regret [it]." It comes from the verb paenitēre, "to cause regret," the direct ancestor of English penitent, penitence, and repent. Where ignōsce mihi asks someone to forgive you, paenitet mē simply names your own regret — closer to "I'm sorry [that happened]" than to "please forgive me." The same regret/forgiveness split you'll meet again and again across languages.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ignōsce" — forgive — then "mihi," to me
- the whole phrase — "ignōsce mihi" = forgive me
- the other one — "paenitet mē" = I regret it

Before you move on

What does ignōsce mihi literally mean, piece by piece? ("Forgive to me" — ignōscere "to not-know/overlook" + mihi "to me.") What English words share the (g)nōscere root? (Know, recognize, cognition, notice.) What's Latin's other way to express regret, and how is it different? (Paenitet mē, "it grieves me" — names the regret, rather than asking to be forgiven.)

Chapter 5

Days of the Week

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name all seven Roman weekdays and say which modern names kept Rome's gods and which were rewritten.
>
> Name the full seven-day planetary week, then sort Saturday and Sunday by which languages kept Rome's gods and which renamed them.

5.1 diēs Lūnae to diēs Veneris — the week, before it wore down

Spanish says lunes; French says lundi. Both are worn-down descendants of something Latin still says in full: diēs Lūnae, "the day of the Moon." This lesson gives you the un-eroded originals.

You'll want to know: The five weekdays, spelled out in full

Each weekday is simply diēs ("day") plus a planet-god's name in the genitive ("of ____"):

Latin	literally (planet-god)	worn down to (Spanish / French)
diēs Lūnae	day of the Moon (Luna)	lunes / lundi
diēs Mārtis	day of Mars	martes / mardi
diēs Mercuriī	day of Mercury	miércoles / mercredi
diēs Iovis	day of Jupiter (Iuppiter)	jueves / jeudi
diēs Veneris	day of Venus	viernes / vendredi

Later languages kept only fragments of this phrase — a bare -s, a bare -di — but you now have the whole thing, still standing.

Why it's said this way

Rome didn't always keep a seven-day planetary week. For much of the Republic, Romans ran an eight-day market cycle (letters A through H, not planets at all). The planetary week — the Sun, Moon, and five visible planets, each ruling a day, in a fixed order — spread into Rome later, from Hellenistic astrology, and only gradually displaced the older market cycle. So diēs Lūnae and its siblings are themselves a Roman adoption, not an ancient Roman invention — a system Rome picked up and then passed on, worn down, to Spanish and French centuries later.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

diēs Lūnae and its siblings all start from diēs "day", which is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dyew-*, "sky; to shine" (EtymDB 2.1). Iovis "of Jupiter" belongs to the same root: it stands for an older Diovis, kin to the name of the Greek sky god Zeus (Lewis & Short). Lūna "moon" was built on the root of lūceō "I shine" (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "diēs Lūnae" — day of the Moon — then "diēs Mārtis," day of Mars
- all five in a row — "diēs Lūnae, Mārtis, Mercuriī, Iovis, Veneris"

- the wear-down — "diēs Mārtis" became Spanish "martes," French "mardi"

Before you move on

What does diēs Mārtis literally mean, and what does it become in Spanish and French? ("Day of Mars" — martes / mardi.) Did Rome always use a seven-day planetary week? (No — for much of the Republic it ran an eight-day market cycle; the planetary week arrived later, from Hellenistic astrology.) What holds every Latin weekday name together? (diēs "day" + the planet-god's name in the genitive, "of _____.")

5.2 diēs Saturnī, diēs Sōlis — Saturday and Sunday, before the renaming

The Roman planetary week had seven days, not five. The last two — Saturn's and the Sun's — tell a story neither Spanish nor French kept: a religious renaming that some languages accepted, and others didn't.

You'll want to know: The two original names

- diēs Saturnī — "day of Saturn." This one survives almost untouched in English: Saturday (Old English Sæternesdæg) is a direct borrowing of the Latin god's own name — the one weekday English kept a Roman god outright, rather than swapping in a Germanic equivalent, because there was no obvious Germanic god to stand in for stern old Saturn.
- diēs Sōlis — "day of the Sun." Also a direct hit in English: Sunday (Sunnandæg), a plain translation — the Sun didn't need a separate Germanic identity to be swapped in.

Why it's said this way

As Christianity spread through the Empire, Latin usage replaced both pagan names:

- diēs Saturnī → Sabbatum, borrowing the Jewish Sabbath (Hebrew shabbāt, "to rest").

- diēs Sōlis → diēs Dominica, "the Lord's day" (Dominus, "lord").

Spanish (sábado, domingo) and French (samedi, dimanche) inherited these newer, Christianized names. English never made the swap — so, unexpectedly, English's Saturday and Sunday are the older, more pagan forms, while Spanish and French's weekend names are the newer, religiously rewritten ones. The direction of "old vs. new" flips depending which language you're standing in.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "diēs Saturnī" — day of Saturn — then "diēs Sōlis," day of the Sun
- English kept these directly — "Saturday, Sunday"
- Spanish/French renamed them — "sábado/samedi (Sabbath), domingo/ dimanche (the Lord's day)"

Before you move on

What did Rome originally call Saturday and Sunday? (Diēs Saturnī "day of Saturn," diēs Sōlis "day of the Sun.") Which modern language kept these pagan names directly, and which two languages renamed them? (English kept them (Saturday, Sunday); Spanish and French replaced them with the Christian Sabbatum / diēs Dominica.) So which is actually "older" — English's weekend names, or Spanish's? (English's — Spanish's are the later, Christianized rewrite.)

Chapter 6

Colours

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say black, white, red, and blue in Latin, and explain why its blue was never as settled as its red.
>
> Say niger, albus, ruber, and caeruleus in turn, and split ruber's two children between French rouge and Spanish rojo.

6.1 niger, albus — Latin's black and white, each with a shine-twin

You've seen niger already, hiding inside French noir and Spanish negro. Here's what those daughter languages left behind: Latin didn't have just one word for black, or just one for white — it had two of each, split by brightness, not just hue.

You'll want to know: Two blacks, two whites

- niger = "black" with a gleam — a shiny, lustrous black. This is the one that survives into Romance (noir, negro, nero).
- āter = "black" that's dull, matte, lightless — the flatter, duller black. (English keeps a fossil of it in atrocious and atrocity — something so dark/dreadful it's "black" in the āter sense.)
- albus = "white" that's plain, dull, matte — this is the one that mostly faded from Romance's everyday vocabulary (surviving in Spanish alba/French aube, "dawn," rather than as the everyday color word).

- candidus = "white" with a shine, a gleam, a glow — bright white. English keeps this one working hard: candid (originally "shining bright," then "morally bright/honest"), candidate (Romans running for office wore a bleached, gleaming-white toga, the toga candida), and candle.

Why it's said this way

Romance languages mostly dropped this shine-vs-matte split and kept only one word per color (niger survived for black; albus and candidus both survive, but neither became the plain everyday "white" in most daughter languages — Spanish and French instead borrowed a Germanic word, blanco/ blanc, for their everyday white, as you may already have seen). So Latin's four color-words shrank to cover just two basic ideas — brightness stopped being how Latin-descended languages sort black and white.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

niger has no agreed origin outside Latin. albus "white" is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2elbhos*, "white" (EtymDB 2.1). āter "dull black" may come from a root for "fire" (EtymDB 2.1), and candidus "shining white" was built on candeō "I shine" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "niger" — gleaming black — then "āter," dull black
- "albus" — dull white — then "candidus," shining white
- the English fossils — "atrocious" (āter), "candid, candidate" (candidus)

Before you move on

What distinguished Latin's two black words, and its two white words? (Brightness — niger "gleaming black" vs. āter "dull black"; candidus "shining white" vs. albus "dull white.") Which two English words come from candidus, and why does candidate mean what it does? (Candid and candidate — Roman office-seekers wore a bleached-white toga candida.) Did Romance keep this four-way split? (No — it settled on one plain word per color, and Spanish/French even borrowed a Germanic word for everyday white.)

6.2 ruber, caeruleus — a rock-solid red, and a shaky blue

One of these two words is about as old and stable a color-word as language gets. The other is a genuine puzzle — because Latin, like a surprising number of ancient languages, never quite settled on a clean word for "blue."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ruber ("red") descends from PIE h₁rewdʰ-, a root so old it also gives English red, rust, ruddy, and German rot. Latin's own family used two everyday variants of this root — rubeus and russus — and Romance split them between languages: French rouge comes from rubeus; Spanish rojo comes from russus. Different Latin words, same ancient root, same color.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

You might expect a clean Latin ancestor for "blue" the way ruber is for red. There isn't really one. Caeruleus is the closest word Latin had — and it's a much fuzzier idea than ruber: it covers the color of the sky and the sea (caeruleum mare, "the blue/dark sea"), but it can also shade toward dark green or simply "dark," depending on context. It isn't a fixed, single hue-word the way ruber clearly is.
This isn't just a Latin quirk. Classicists and linguists have long noted that many ancient languages lacked a clean, stable basic word for blue — Ancient Greek is the most famous case (Homer's "wine-dark sea," never a simple "blue sea"). Across many language families, "blue" tends to be one of the last basic color words to settle into place, historically — sometimes splitting off late from words that also covered green, dark, or grey. Latin's caeruleus looks like part of that same broader pattern, though the exact reasons are still debated among linguists rather than fully settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ruber" — red — the ancient, PIE-rooted color word
- its two children — "rubeus → French rouge," "russus → Spanish rojo"
- "caeruleus" — sea/sky-colored — Latin's shakiest, least fixed color word

Before you move on

What PIE root gives ruber, and what English words share it? (h₁rewdʰ- — red, rust, ruddy.) Which two Latin red-words split between French and Spanish, and which went where? (Rubeus → French rouge; russus → Spanish rojo.) Why is caeruleus a shakier word than ruber? (It covers sea/sky and can shade toward dark or green — it was never a single fixed "blue," a pattern linguists have noticed across many ancient languages, most famously Greek's "wine-dark sea.")

Chapter 7

Family

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my father, mother, brother, and sister in Latin, and say why Spanish stopped using frāter.
>
> Name the four household members aloud, then trace frāter germānus down to Spanish hermano.

7.1 pater, mater — the oldest words, kept close to the source

"Father" and "mother" are among the oldest reconstructible words in human language. Latin kept them almost exactly as they were; English took the very same ancestor down a different road.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

- pater ("father") ← PIE ph₂tḗr.
- māter ("mother") ← PIE méh₂tēr.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Here's the point worth getting exactly right: pater and English father are not one derived from the other. Both descend independently, in parallel, from the same PIE word. Latin simply kept the ancestral p and t close to unchanged; the Germanic branch that produced English took a separate route through Grimm's Law, which shifted that same inherited p → f and t → th:

PIE ancestor	Latin	Germanic → English
ph₂tḗr	pater	father
méh₂tēr	māter	mother

So pater and father are siblings, sharing one parent-word thousands of years back — not a case of English borrowing or descending from Latin. Pater also gives Latin (and later English, through Latin) the whole "of-a-parent" family: paternus ("fatherly," → English paternal) and māternus (→ maternal).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "pater, māter" — father, mother
- the relationship — "cousins, not ancestor and descendant"
- "pater → paternus → paternal; māter → māternus → maternal"

Before you move on

Does English father come from Latin pater? (No — both descend independently from the same PIE word, ph₂tḗr.) What sound-law explains the difference between them? (Grimm's Law — the Germanic branch shifted the inherited p → f, t → th; Latin kept them.) What Latin adjectives give English paternal and maternal? (Paternus, māternus.)

7.2 frater, soror — Latin's original siblings, before Spanish moved on

Two more ancient words — and a preview of a twist: these are the very words that later got pushed aside in everyday Latin, on the road to Spanish.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

- frāter ("brother") ← PIE bʰréh₂tēr.
- soror ("sister") ← PIE swésōr.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Same rule as pater/māter: frāter is not the source of English "brother" — they're cousins, both from bʰréh₂tēr, with Grimm's Law shifting the Germanic branch's bʰ → b while Latin developed its own f (from an earlier bʰ → f shift already inside Latin itself). Soror is the more surprising one. English sister looks nothing like soror — and that's because Latin dropped the w from the PIE cluster sw- (giving plain s-), while the Germanic branch kept the w far longer (Old English had sweostor). So soror and sister are, once again, cousins from the same PIE word, swésōr — neither one turned into the other; each branch just handled that opening sw- differently.

Why it's said this way

Here's the twist: classical Latin could say frāter germānus, "a brother of the same blood," to mark a full sibling. Over time, in everyday (Vulgar) Latin, that adjective germānus took over the whole job, and frāter itself faded out of common use — which is exactly why Spanish says hermano, not a descendant of frāter at all. (French frère took the opposite path and kept frāter as its everyday word — different Latin regions, different survivors.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "frāter, soror" — brother, sister
- the cousin relationship — "frāter/brother and soror/sister are BOTH parallel descendants, not one from the other"
- the twist — "frāter germānus" → just "germānus" → Spanish "hermano"

Before you move on

Is English "sister" descended from Latin soror? (No — both are cousins from PIE swésōr; Latin dropped the w, Germanic kept it longer.) What Latin phrase eventually replaced frāter in everyday speech, and where does it show up today? (Frāter germānus → just germānus → Spanish hermano.) Did every Romance language make that same swap? (No — French kept frāter as frère; Spanish moved on to germānus.)

Chapter 8

Head and Hand

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say head and hand in Latin, and explain why manus is feminine when its declension usually is not.
>
> Say caput and manus with the correct gender, then list the manus words English still runs on.

8.1 caput — the head, still working two thousand years later

Few Latin words stayed as busy in English as this one. And yet — one of Latin's own descendants abandoned it for the actual body part.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caput, capitis — "head." A perfectly ordinary noun, and one of Latin's most productive exports:

English	literally
captain	the "head" of a ship or unit
capital	the "head" city, or the "head" sum of money
decapitate	to remove the head
capitulate	to arrange terms under "little-head" headings — hence, to yield

Spanish kept caput as its everyday word too: cabeza descends from it (by way of Vulgar Latin capitia).

Why it's said this way

French had caput available — and dropped it for the body part entirely. Instead French says tête, from Latin testa, "an earthenware pot, a shell." Roman soldiers joked about the skull the way English speakers say "noggin" (a small mug), and in Gaul, that joke eventually replaced caput as the everyday word. Caput didn't disappear from French, though — it survives there too, just not for the actual head: chef ("chief"), chapitre, capital, capitaine.
So three languages took three different paths with the very same word: Spanish kept caput as the plain, everyday "head"; French demoted it to "chief/chapter/capital" and reached for a pot-joke instead; English never used it for the body part at all, only for these borrowed "head of something" senses.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "caput, capitis" — head
- the English family — "captain, capital, decapitate, capitulate"
- the twist — French swapped caput out for testa, "pot"

Before you move on

What does caput mean, and what English words come from it? ("Head" — captain, capital, decapitate, capitulate.) Did every Romance language keep it as the everyday word for "head"? (No — Spanish did (cabeza); French replaced it with testa, "pot," soldiers' slang for the skull.) Where does caput survive in French, if not as "head"? (Chef, chapitre, capital, capitaine.)

8.2 manus — the hand, and a famous grammatical exception

Here's a word that's productive in English and grammatically odd in Latin itself — an oddity that then rode straight through into Spanish.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

manus, manūs — "hand." It belongs to Latin's 4th declension — a group of nouns ending in -us that runs overwhelmingly masculine: frūctus ("fruit"), exercitus ("army"), senātus ("senate"), portus ("port") are all masculine. Manus is one of only a handful of exceptions in that declension — feminine, alongside anus ("old woman") and Latin's word for "house" (which is even messier: it mixes 4th- and 2nd-declension endings throughout its own paradigm) — for reasons tied to each noun's own ancient history, not a rule you could predict from the -us ending alone.
That oddity didn't stay buried in Latin grammar books: Spanish's word for hand, mano, inherited manus's feminine gender directly — which is exactly why mano is famously feminine despite ending in -o, the ending that signals masculine in nearly every other Spanish noun. One small Latin exception, carried whole into a completely different pattern in a daughter language, centuries later.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

English	literally
manual	done by hand
manufacture	made by hand (manus + facere, "to make") manuscript	written by hand (manus + scrībere)
maintain	hold in the hand (manū tenēre)
manage	to handle

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "manus, manūs" — hand
- the exception — "feminine, unlike frūctus, exercitus, senātus"
- the English family — "manual, manufacture, maintain, manage"

Before you move on

What gender is manus, and is that typical for its declension? (Feminine — unusual, since the 4th declension runs mostly masculine; manus is one of a few exceptions, alongside anus and the word for "house".) What Spanish word inherited this exact oddity? (Mano — feminine despite ending in -o.) Give an English word from manus. (Manual, manufacture, manuscript, maintain, manage.)

Chapter 9

Seasons

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the four seasons in Latin and say which ones Romance rebuilt out of a phrase instead.
>
> Name vēr, aestās, autumnus, and hiems, then sort which survived plainly and which Romance rebuilt from phrases: "first spring" and hībernum.

9.1 vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems — Latin's own four seasons

Four Latin nouns, one for each season — and a genuine surprise about which ones actually survived into Spanish and French as ordinary words.

You'll want to know: The four seasons, plain and simple

Latin	meaning
vēr, vēris	spring
aestās, aestātis	summer (also just "heat")
autumnus, autumnī	autumn
hiems, hiemis	winter

Why it's said this way

autumnus survived plainly: it's the direct ancestor of Spanish otoño, French automne, and English autumn itself — no detours.
But vēr and hiems, the plain nouns for spring and winter, mostly didn't make it into everyday Romance vocabulary. Instead, Spanish and French built brand-new words out of adjective phrases describing those seasons.
Spring was not vēr alone, but a Vulgar Latin phrase/reanalysis, roughly "first spring":
prīma ("first") + vēra (vēr, reshaped) → primavera
That gives Spanish primavera, Italian primavera (still the everyday word there), and French (originally) primevère — later displaced there by printemps ("first time," the same "first" put with tempus: the very same "adjective + tempus" recipe as winter's word below). Primevère narrowed to just mean "primrose" today.
Winter was not hiems alone, but hībernum (tempus), "the wintry [time]" → Spanish invierno, French hiver — the same root as English hibernate.
Aestās ("summer/heat") did survive directly into French été — but Spanish took yet another path: it built vērānum (tempus) ("of spring") from vēr itself, and that word's meaning later drifted forward to name summer instead of spring, giving Spanish verano — leaving primavera to do spring's job.
So the picture is mixed, not a clean split: autumnus cruised straight through into Spanish, French, and English unchanged; aestās cruised through into French (été) but got replaced in Spanish; vēr and hiems, the plain nouns for spring and winter, essentially left no everyday trace in either language — both were replaced by phrase-built words instead (or, in verano's case, by a related word whose meaning simply moved).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems" — the four seasons
- the one that survived plainly — "autumnus → otoño, automne, autumn"
- the two built from phrases — "first spring" → primavera, "hībernum → invierno, hiver"

Before you move on

What are Latin's four season-nouns? (Vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems.) Which one survived plainly into Spanish, French, and English? (Autumnus → otoño, automne, autumn.) What did Spanish and French build instead of the plain words vēr and hiems? (Adjective phrases — "first spring" → primavera/primevère; hībernum "wintry" → invierno/hiver.)

Chapter 10

Water, Wine, and Bread

Modes: voice (2) Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name water, wine, and bread in Latin, and explain why a companion is someone you share bread with.
>
> Ask for aqua, vīnum, and pānis, then unpack com- plus pānis into companion.

10.1 aqua, vīnum — one word worn thin, one word untouched

Two everyday Latin nouns — and two wildly different fates. One of Rome's daughters wore this word down to almost nothing. The other word barely moved at all, anywhere.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aqua, aquae — "water." Spanish and Italian kept it close to whole: agua, acqua. French, though, eroded it further than almost any other word it inherited from Latin: aqua → ewe → eaue → eau — three written letters, e-a-u, spelling one bare vowel sound, "oh." Compare caput, which French similarly abandoned as an everyday word (for testa) — aqua wasn't replaced, but it was worn down almost to nothing while staying in place.
English kept the whole, undamaged word as a learned borrowing: aquatic, aquarium, aqueduct, aqualung all sound exactly like their Latin ancestor.

You'll want to know: vīnum — survived, everywhere, almost untouched vīnum, vīnī — "wine." Unlike aqua and caput, this word simply didn't erode much in any direction: Spanish vino, French vin, Italian vino — all close to the original. Germanic borrowed it directly and early, giving English wine itself. Centuries later, English picked up more of the family — this time secondhand, through French: vine (< OF vigne < vīnea, "vineyard"), vinegar (< OF vinaigre, vin + aigre, ultimately acer "sour"), vintage (< OF vendage < vīndēmia, vīnum + dēmere "to harvest"). Vineyard isn't a borrowing at all — English built it at home, compounding the already-borrowed "wine" with native "yard." Few Latin words traveled this far, by this many different roads, and stayed this recognizable.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "aqua" — water — then the daughters: "agua, acqua, eau"
- "vīnum" — wine — then: "vino, vin, vino, wine"
- the contrast — aqua wore thin in French; vīnum stayed solid everywhere

Before you move on

Which Latin word for a drink got worn down almost to nothing, and in which language? (Aqua, in French — down to a bare "eau.") Which word barely changed anywhere, surviving into every Romance daughter and into English too? (Vīnum — wine, vino, vin, vino.) Where did the whole, undamaged form of aqua survive in English? (Aquatic, aquarium, aqueduct — learned borrowings, not everyday words.)

10.2 pānis — bread, and the friend who shares it

One Latin word for bread, surviving whole across every Romance daughter — and hiding, inside a compound, one of the loveliest word-stories in English.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pānis, pānis — "bread." Spanish pan, French pain, Italian pane all continue it directly — bread mattered enough to keep its own name everywhere. Pānis itself is inherited, built on an old root for feeding, peh$_2$-* (EtymDB 2.1).

You'll want to know: com- + pānis — "sharing bread"

Add the prefix com- ("with, together") and you get compānio/ compānia — a Vulgar Latin coinage, not a Classical-era word — literally "one you share bread with," the direct ancestor of English companion and company. A company was, at first, nothing more than a group who ate together.

Why it's said this way

English only kept the friendship half of this word — companion has nothing to do with actual bread anymore to an English speaker. Spanish, though, still keeps both halves traceably related: pan (the bread itself) and compañero (the friend, "one who shares pan") sit right next to each other in the same language, both transparently built from the same root. Latin's pānis split into two separate lives in English, but stayed one visible family in Spanish.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "pānis" — bread — then "pan, pain, pane"
- "com- + pānis" — "with bread" — companion, company
- the contrast — English kept only the friend; Spanish kept both the bread and the friend

Before you move on

What does pānis give Spanish, French, and Italian directly? (Pan, pain, pane — bread.) What English words come from com- + pānis, and what do they literally mean? (Companion, company — "one you share bread with.") Does English still connect

"companion" to actual bread? (No — only Spanish keeps both pan and compañero traceably related.)

Chapter 11

Months

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name all twelve Roman months and say what July and August were called before they were renamed.
>
> Recite the twelve months in order, then restore Quīntīlis and Sextīlis to July and August's slots.

11.1 Iānuārius to December — the twelve months, before and after the rename

These twelve names turn up again, worn down, in Spanish and French. Latin lets you see something they can't show you directly: two of these months used to have completely different names.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Latin	who / what
Iānuārius	Janus, the two-faced god of doors and beginnings
Februārius	Februa, the Roman purification festival
Mārtius	Mars, the war-god
Aprīlis	perhaps aperīre, "to open" (buds opening)
Māius	Maia, goddess of growth
Iūnius	Juno, queen of the gods
Quīntīlis	literally "the fifth" (quīntus) — later renamed Iūlius
Sextīlis	literally "the sixth" (sextus) — later renamed Augustus
September	"the seventh" (septem)
Octōber	"the eighth" (octō)
November	"the ninth" (novem)
December	"the tenth" (decem)

Each name comes from the god, festival or number beside it; Aprīlis is the least certain.

Why it's said this way

You'll often hear that Julius Caesar and Augustus "added" two months to the calendar, which is why September through December no longer match their numbers. That's not what happened. Rome's year, centuries earlier, had already been expanded from ten months to twelve by adding Iānuārius and Februārius at the front — that's the real reason September ("seventh") ended up as the ninth month. Quīntīlis ("the fifth") and Sextīlis ("the sixth") already existed as ordinary, plainly-numbered months, right alongside September through December. In 44 BC, the year Julius Caesar was killed, Rome renamed Quīntīlis to Iūlius in his honor; decades later, Augustus received the same honor, and Sextīlis became Augustus. No months were created — two old, numbered ones got new names, and Latin's fifth and sixth months quietly disappeared from view, hiding inside julio/juillet and agosto/août in every daughter language.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the twelve — "Iānuārius, Februārius, Mārtius, Aprīlis, Māius, Iūnius, Quīntīlis, Sextīlis, September, Octōber, November, December"
- the originals — "Quīntīlis, the fifth" / "Sextīlis, the sixth"
- the correction — "renamed, not inserted"

Before you move on

What were Iūlius and Augustus called before they were renamed, and what did those names mean? (Quīntīlis "the fifth" and Sextīlis "the sixth.") Did Julius Caesar and Augustus add new months to the calendar? (No — they got two already-existing months renamed after them.) What actually caused September–December to fall out of step with their numbers? (Adding Iānuārius and Februārius to the front of the year, centuries earlier.)

Chapter 12

Noon and Midnight

Modes: voice (1) Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say noon and midnight in Latin, and explain why English's noon does not come from either.
>
> Say medius diēs and media nox, then follow both halves into Spanish and French, and trace English noon to an unrelated "ninth hour".

12.1 medius diēs, media nox — the source phrase, worn down at different rates

Here's the same Latin phrase, followed into three languages — and each one treated it completely differently.

You'll want to know: The two phrases

- medius diēs — literally "the middle day," meaning "midday, noon" (medius, "middle" + diēs, "day").
- media nox — literally "the middle night," meaning "midnight" (media, the feminine of medius + nox, noctis, "night").

Why it's said this way

- Spanish kept both halves of both phrases as fully ordinary, living words: medio/media ("middle") and día/noche ("day/night") — giving mediodía and medianoche, entirely transparent.
- French eroded the same phrase unevenly. Nox survived as the everyday word nuit (“night”) — still fully transparent inside minuit. But diēs did not survive as French’s everyday word for “day” (that’s jour instead) — so inside midi, the -di fragment is a fossil, recognizable only from weekday names like lundi, mardi, not from any living, standalone word for “day.”

- English didn’t inherit this phrase for “noon” at all. Instead, English’s noon comes from an entirely different Latin phrase, “the ninth hour” (the next lesson meets its second word) — originally meaning roughly 3 p.m. (counting from a sunrise start), it drifted steadily earlier over the centuries until it settled on midday.

One Latin phrase, three completely different fates: fully kept, half-worn, and simply replaced by another Latin phrase altogether.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

medius diēs joins two inherited words: diēs “day”, met with the weekday names, and medius “middle”, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European medhyos*, “middle” (EtymDB 2.1), a cousin of English mid.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- “medius diēs” — mid-day, then “media nox” — mid-night
- the three fates — “Spanish kept both halves, French kept only night, English used a different phrase entirely”
- what English’s real ancestor for “noon” meant — “the ninth hour”

Before you move on

What do medius diēs and media nox literally mean? (“The middle day” = noon; “the middle night” = midnight.) Which language kept both halves of both phrases fully transparent? (Spanish — mediodía, medianoche.) Which language kept “night” but not “day”? (French — nuit stayed alive, -di became a fossil.)

Does English's noon come from this same phrase? (No — from a Latin phrase meaning "the ninth hour," which drifted from afternoon to midday.)

Chapter 13

Telling Time

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the hour in Latin, and explain why a Roman hour was not a fixed sixty minutes.
>
> Say hōra, then work out how long a Roman hour actually was on a winter day against a summer one.

13.1 hōra — the source word, and an hour that wasn't always 60 minutes

> The last lesson traced English noon to a Latin phrase, "the ninth hour" — now meet its word for "hour" itself, and an honest surprise about what a Roman "hour" actually was.

You'll want to know: hōra ← Greek hṓrā hōra = "hour" — borrowed from Greek hṓrā, "a season, the right time, a time of day" (the Greek goddesses of the seasons, the Hōrai, share this root). Latin narrowed the broader Greek sense down to today's specific meaning: one twelfth of the day.

Why it's said this way

Here's the part that trips people up: the Romans divided daylight — sunrise to sunset — into 12 equal hōrae, and night into another 12. But since daylight itself is longer in summer and shorter in winter, each hōra stretched or shrank with the seasons: a summer daytime hōra in Rome could run close to 75 modern minutes, a winter one closer to 45. Only at the two equinoxes did an hōra land close to today's fixed 60 minutes. This is exactly why the ninth hōra (counted from sunrise) landed around 3 p.m. at the equinox but could shift earlier or later depending on the season — and why it drifted, over centuries, into the fixed clock-time we call "noon."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

language	word	what happened
Spanish	hora	inherited almost unchanged
French	heure	inherited, worn down further
German	Uhr	not inherited — borrowed centuries later, separately
English	hour	inherited via French

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "hōra" — the source word, Greek hṓrā underneath
- the honest surprise — a Roman hōra stretched and shrank with the seasons, it wasn't a fixed 60 minutes
- "hōra / hora / heure / hour" — one root, four different fates

Before you move on

What Greek word is hōra from, and what did it originally mean? (hṓrā — "a season, the right time.") Was a Roman hōra always 60 minutes long? (No — it was 1/12 of that day's actual daylight or nighttime span, so it stretched in summer and shrank in winter.) Which of Spanish, French, and German did not directly inherit this word from Latin? (German — it borrowed Uhr separately, much later.)

Chapter 14

Asking Someone's Age

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how old I am in Latin, using the classical born-so-many-years construction.
>
> State your own age as vīgintī annōs nātus sum, and set that pattern against Romance's have-your-years and English's be-your-years.

14.1 vīgintī annōs nātus sum — a THIRD way to say your age

You already know that Spanish and French say "I HAVE my years," and German/English say "I AM my years." Here's the honest surprise: Latin itself did neither.

You'll want to know: vīgintī annōs nātus sum — "twenty years born"

vīgintī annōs nātus sum = "I am twenty years old" — literally "I am, having been born, twenty years" (a man speaking; a woman says nāta). Taken apart:

- nātus/nāta — "born," the perfect passive participle of nāscor, "to be born" (the same root behind English nature, native, nation, innate).
- annōs — "years," in the accusative case, marking duration — "for twenty years [of life so far]." This is the same accusative-of-duration you'd use for "I studied for three years" (trēs annōs).

- sum — "I am."

So the whole phrase reads: "I am — having been born [and living] twenty years [so far]." Cicero uses exactly this pattern in Cato Maior de Senectute (§14): it gives Ennius's age as annōs septuāgintā nātus, "having been born seventy years," i.e., "at seventy years old" — and in the same section Cato gives his own age, sixty-five, in the very same shape.

Why it's said this way

You've already met the clean Romance/Germanic split for this concept — Romance languages have their years (tengo, j'ai, ho), Germanic languages are their years (ich bin, I am). Here's the twist: Latin itself used neither construction. Classical Latin's nātus + accusative-of-duration pattern is a third, distinct grammatical shape — not "having" years, not simply "being" a number, but "being born-for-that-long." The Romance "have your years" pattern ("have" + years) that Spanish, French, and Italian all inherited is a Vulgar Latin innovation that arose after Classical Latin, replacing the older nātus construction — so Spanish's tengo veinte años is NOT a direct continuation of how Cicero would have said it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vīgintī annōs nātus sum" — I am twenty years old, literally "born twenty years"
- "nātus" — born, same root as English "native, nature, nation"
- the honest surprise — this is a THIRD pattern, neither "have" nor simple "be"

Before you move on

What does vīgintī annōs nātus sum literally mean? ("I am, having been born, twenty years" — using the perfect participle nātus + the accusative of duration.) Does this match Romance's

"have your years" pattern? (No — that's a later Vulgar Latin innovation, not what Classical Latin did.) What English words share the root of nātus? (Native, nature, nation, innate.)

Chapter 15

Weather

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say it is raining, and name heat and sun in Latin, using its subjectless weather verbs.
>
> Say pluit with no subject at all, then name calor and sol, and check the pl- to ll- path into llueve.

15.1 tempestās — one Latin word widened, its own derivative narrowed

> You've seen Spanish's tiempo mean both "time" and "weather" at once. Here's the honest history: Classical Latin actually kept these apart — but it wasn't Spanish that changed that. It happened inside Latin itself.

You'll want to know: tempestās — a derivative of tempus, specialized for weather, then narrowed further tempestās = "weather, storm" — grammatically a derivative noun built on tempus ("time"), and by Classical Latin it had already specialized: tempus stayed strictly "time," while tempestās carried the weather/storm sense on its own. (English kept this split too: tempestās gives tempest, "a violent storm," while tempus gives temporal, tempo.)

Be careful with what happened next, though: Spanish's single tiempo is not these two words merging back together. Later — still within Latin's own history, before Spanish, French, or Italian existed as separate languages — tempus itself re-widened to also cover "weather" (that's why French temps and Italian tempo carry the exact same double sense; this happened at the shared Latin stage, not as a Spanish-only development). Meanwhile tempestās kept going too, narrowing further to mean specifically "storm" — and it's still alive in Spanish today as its own separate word, tempestad ("storm, tempest"), sitting right alongside tiempo. So it's one word (tempus) widening back out, not two words fusing into one.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tempestās was built inside Latin on tempus "time" (EtymDB 2.1). tempus itself has no sure origin: one proposal traces it to Proto-Indo-European tempos*, "stretch", time seen as a stretch (EtymDB 2.1), and Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "tempestās" — weather/storm, a derivative of tempus, "time," narrowed today to Spanish's "tempestad"
- "tempus" — time, later widened inside Latin to weather too

Before you move on

Were tempus and tempestās the same word in Classical Latin? (No — tempestās is a derivative that specialized for weather/storm, while tempus stayed strictly "time.") Did Spanish merge these two words back together? (No — tempus itself re-widened to cover "weather" already within Latin's own history, shared by French/ Italian too; tempestās kept narrowing and survives separately as Spanish tempestad.)

15.2 pluit, calor, sol — three pieces of weather language

You know the history of tempestās. Now learn how Latin actually states rain, heat, and sun.

Grammar Lens: pluit — a subjectless weather verb

Latin uses dedicated impersonal verbs with no subject at all:

- pluit — it rains
- ningit — it snows
- tonat — it thunders

Pluit is the ancestor of Spanish llueve. Its opening follows the same pl- → ll- path as plovere → llover and plēnus → lleno; fl- went the same way, flamma → llama.
This verb pattern resembles English "it rains" more closely than Spanish hace calor. Spanish kept the dedicated verb for rain but built a new hacer expression for heat, cold, and sun.

You'll want to know: calor and sol — carried straight through

Latin calor ("heat") and sol ("sun") are also Spanish calor and sol. These words needed no visible sound change at all.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pluit is a form of pluō "I rain", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pleweti* (EtymDB 2.1), from a root plew-*, "to flow, to float". calor "heat" was built inside Latin on caleō "I am warm" (Lewis & Short). sōl "sun" is inherited, usually traced to soh2wl*, "sun" (EtymDB 2.1), a cousin of English sun.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "pluit" — it rains; ancestor of Spanish llueve
- "calor" — heat, unchanged in Spanish
- "sol" — sun, unchanged in Spanish

Before you move on

How does Latin say “it rains”? (Pluit, with no subject.) What sound path connects it to Spanish llueve? (pl- → ll-.) Which two weather nouns pass into Spanish unchanged? (Calor and sol.) Does Latin use a counterpart of Spanish hacer for all three ideas? (No — it uses dedicated impersonal weather verbs.)

Chapter 16

Numbers Eleven to Twenty

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from eleven to twenty in Latin, including its backwards eighteen and nineteen.
>
> Count ūndecim to vīgintī aloud, then say duodēvīgintī and ūndēvīgintī and explain what they are counting backwards from.

16.1 ūndecim, vīgintī — the source numbers, including a genuine oddity

You've seen Spanish's once through quince as fused, worn-down compounds. Here are the whole, un-fused Latin originals — plus a real quirk in Latin's own counting system that Spanish quietly dropped.

You'll want to know: ūndecim–quīndecim — plain "X-ten" compounds

Latin	literally
ūndecim	ūnus + decim, "one-ten"
duodecim	duo + decim, "two-ten"
tredecim	trēs + decim, "three-ten"
quattuordecim	quattuor + decim, "four-ten"
quīndecim	quīnque + decim, "five-ten"

Straightforward additive compounds — number, then decim ("ten," from decem). These are the direct, whole ancestors of Spanish's once, doce, trece, catorce, quince — fused down over the centuries into single words.

You'll want to know: sēdecim, septendecim — still additive sēdecim (16, "six-ten") and septendecim (17, "seven-ten") keep the same additive pattern.

Why it's said this way

Here's the real oddity. Latin didn't say "eight-ten" or "nine-ten" for 18 and 19 — it counted backward from twenty instead:

> duodēvīgintī — "two FROM twenty" (18)
> ūndēvīgintī — "one FROM twenty" (19)

This is genuinely subtractive counting, not additive — the same logic behind how Latin also names the day before the Kalends. It's a real irregularity sitting right in the middle of an otherwise perfectly additive system. Spanish did not inherit this quirk: dieciocho and diecinueve are built fresh on the simple "ten-and-X" template, quietly regularizing away something genuinely odd in Latin's own counting.

You'll want to know: vīgintī vīgintī ("twenty") — the direct, unchanged source of Spanish's veinte.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūndecim was put together inside Latin from ūnus "one" and decem "ten" (Lewis & Short), and decem is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dekm*, "ten" (EtymDB 2.1). vīgintī "twenty" is inherited too, usually traced to h1wih1kmti*, "twenty", read as "two tens" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek eikosi "twenty" is its cousin (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ūndecim, duodecim, tredecim, quattuordecim, quīndecim" — the plain "X-ten" compounds
- "duodēvīgintī, ūndēvīgintī" — 18 and 19, counted BACKWARD from twenty
- "vīgintī" — twenty

Before you move on

- What pattern do ūndecim through quīndecim follow? (Additive — number + decim, "ten.")
- What's genuinely odd about Latin's 18 and 19? (They're subtractive — duodēvīgintī/ūndēvīgintī, literally "two/one FROM twenty," not "eight/nine-ten.")
- Did Spanish keep this pattern? (No — dieciocho/diecinueve use plain addition, regularizing away Latin's quirk.)

Chapter 17

Dog and Cat

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a dog and a cat in Latin, and say which of its two cat-words came first.
>
> Name canis, fēlēs, and cattus, then say which cat-word is Classical Latin's own and where the newcomer arrived from.

17.1 canis, fēlēs, cattus — the expected word, and the word that pushed it out

Spanish's perro mysteriously displaced the word Latin gave it. Here is that word, and a parallel story about "cat."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

canis ("dog") is the direct source of English canine, French chien, Italian cane — and it's also the Latin word Spanish inherited first, as can. But Spanish's everyday word for dog is perro instead, a word with no confirmed etymology at all — can survives only in archaic or literary use, quietly pushed aside by a newcomer nobody can fully explain.

You'll want to know: fēlēs and cattus — a similar displacement, this time INSIDE Latin

Here is a parallel that happened within Latin itself, before any Romance language existed:

- fēlēs was Classical Latin's own, original word for "cat" — used by Cicero, Pliny, and others, and still preserved today in the scientific name for the domestic cat, Felis catus.
- cattus (also catta) is a later word that entered Latin as domestic cats themselves spread along Roman trade routes, out of their point of domestication in Egypt (c. 2000 BCE). Cattus is most likely ultimately an Afro-Asiatic word (compare Nubian kadis, "cat") — the word traveled with the animal.

By around 700 CE, cattus had pushed fēlēs out of everyday use almost everywhere — it's cattus, not fēlēs, that gives Spanish gato, Italian gatto, French chat, and more.

Why it's said this way

Both "dog" and "cat" show a Latin-inherited word getting pushed aside by a newcomer — but the two stories aren't equally well understood. Cattus replacing fēlēs is a well-documented, well-sourced piece of history, with a real trade-route explanation. Perro replacing canis-derived can is genuinely unexplained — a real gap in the historical record, not just a simplification for beginners.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "canis" — dog, source of English "canine"
- "fēlēs" — Classical Latin's own word for cat
- "cattus" — the newcomer that replaced it, probably from Egypt via Africa

Before you move on

- What English word is a direct cousin of canis? (Canine.)
- Which Latin word for "cat" is older? (Fēlēs — Classical Latin's own word, later displaced by cattus.)
- Where does cattus most likely come from? (An Afro-Asiatic word, probably from Egypt, that traveled with the cat itself.)

- Are the two displacements equally well understood? (No — cattus has a sourced history; Spanish perro remains a genuine mystery.)

Chapter 18

Green and Yellow

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say green and yellow in Latin, and explain why almost no Romance language kept flāvus.
>
> Say viridis and flāvus, then follow verde one way and galbinus the other into jaune, giallo, and galben.

18.1 viridis, flāvus — the kept word, and the word Romance abandoned twice over

One of Latin's color words survived cleanly into Spanish. The other one is a genuine oddity: Latin had a perfectly good word for yellow — and virtually no Romance language kept it, though most of them agreed on a surprising replacement together.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

viridis ("green") comes from virēre, "to flourish, to be green, to be vigorous" — and this is the direct source of Spanish's verde, worn down by entirely ordinary sound change (syncope of the medial vowel: viridis → virdis → verde). A clean, uneventful inheritance.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flāvus ("yellow, golden, blond," often specifically of hair) is a genuine, well-attested Classical Latin color word, from Proto-Indo-European bhleh₃w- ("shining, light-colored") — though lūteus was Latin's more neutral, plain "yellow" word in everyday prose. Here's the honest oddity: almost no Romance language kept flāvus as its everyday word for "yellow." Spanish and Portuguese independently reinvented amarillo/amarelo from amarus, "bitter." But here's the genuinely surprising twist: French's jaune, Italian's giallo, and Romanian's galben all converge on a different shared Latin word instead — galbinus, which meant "light green," not yellow at all. So this isn't every daughter language scattering off in its own direction — it's closer to two major replacement stories: Ibero-Romance's shared "bitter" reinvention, and a much wider swath of Romance sharing galbinus instead. Flāvus itself didn't vanish completely — it survives today mainly in Roman personal names, like Flāvius and Flāvia.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "viridis" — green, direct source of verde
- "flāvus" — yellow, Latin's own word, almost universally abandoned
- "galbinus" — "light green," yet somehow the shared source of French's jaune, Italian's giallo, AND Romanian's galben
- "Flāvius" — a Roman name preserving flāvus, where the color word itself didn't survive

Before you move on

What Latin verb gives viridis, and what Spanish word does it directly become? (Virēre, "to flourish" → verde.) Did most Romance languages keep flāvus as their word for yellow? (No.) What are the two main replacement stories, and which languages fall into each? (Ibero-Romance — Spanish/Portuguese — independently reinvented amarillo/amarelo from "bitter"; French, Italian, and Romanian all instead converge on the same Latin word, galbinus, "light green," not yellow at all.) Where does flāvus mainly survive today? (Roman personal names, like Flāvius and Flāvia.)

Chapter 19

How Are You?

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask someone in Latin how they are, and answer that I am well.
>
> A five-line exchange run end to end: salvē, quid agis?, valeō with grātiās tibi agō, ut valēs?, and valē from both voices.

19.1 quid agis? — how are you?

Roman comedy gives you a short wellbeing question: quid agis?

Why it's said this way

Quid agis? literally means "What are you doing?" In the comedies of Plautus and Terence, it also works like "How are you?" or "How is it going?"
Say it in two pieces: quid … agis. Keep Latin qu as kw.
That is the whole step. A second attested question comes next, after this one is comfortable.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quid agis pairs two inherited words: quid "what", from the Proto-Indo-European question stem kwis*, and agis "you do", from agō, usually traced to h2eg-*, "to drive" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

- Say it: quid agis?
- Recall: its literal meaning — "what are you doing?"
- Recall: its conversational use — "how are you?"

Before you move on

Ask "How are you?" with today's Roman question. (Quid agis?) What does it say literally? (What are you doing?)

19.2 ut valēs? — how do you fare?

You know quid agis? Add one alternative built from the farewell valē: ut valēs?

Why it's said this way

Ut valēs? literally asks "How do you fare?" Its verb is valēre, "to be strong or well," the same family as valē, "be well." Plautus and Terence use this question in ordinary dialogue.
You may also meet a modern "how are you?" question in spoken-Latin courses (a later lesson shows it). It is grammatical, but it is not found in surviving classical texts. Ut valēs? is the one Romans can be heard asking.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ut valēs opens on ut "how", also spelled utī, built on the same question stem as quid "what" (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

- Say it: ut valēs?
- Recall: valē — "be well"
- Choose: Which is classically attested: ut valēs? or the modern spoken-Latin question? (Ut valēs?)

Before you move on

Ask "How do you fare?" (Ut valēs?) Which familiar farewell shares its verb? (Valē.) Where can you hear Romans ask it? (In Plautus and Terence.)

19.3 valeō and valē — answer and farewell from one verb

You can ask ut valēs?, "how do you fare?" Its most direct answer is already hiding inside the first farewell you learned.

You'll want to know: valeō — I fare well

The attested reply is valeō: "I fare well" or "I am strong." Plautus's characters can intensify it as valeō rēctē ("I am properly well"), or go on to say they are safe and sound too.

The dictionary verb is valēre, "to be strong, be well." Watch one stem move through the exchange:

- ut valēs? — how do you fare?
- valeō — I fare well
- valē! — be well!

That last imperative became the Chapter 1 goodbye. Latin's farewell is therefore a wish for the other person to remain well.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

valeō is inherited, usually traced through Proto-Italic walēō*, "to be strong", to Proto-Indo-European h2welh1-*, "to rule, to be strong" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ut valēs?" — how do you fare?

- "valeō" — I fare well
- "valē" — be well; goodbye

Before you move on

What verb unites ut valēs?, valeō, and valē? (Valēre, "to be strong or well.") Which form answers the question? (Valeō.) What does the farewell valē literally command? (Be well.)

19.4 Practice — open, check, answer, close

Nothing new. You already own every word below; this lesson only puts them in order, so that for the first time you can carry a whole Latin exchange from the first breath to the last.

The exchange — five lines, all of them already yours

A: Salvē! Quid agis? Be well! What are you doing? — "hello, how's it going?"

B: Valeō, grātiās tibi agō. Ut valēs? I fare well, I give thanks to you. How do you fare?

A: Valeō. — I fare well.

B: Valē! — Be well!, the parting wish

A: Valē!

Hear what holds it together. One verb, valēre ("to be strong, to be well"), supplies the second question (valēs), both answers (valeō), and the farewell (valē). Latin does not need a separate word for "I": the -ō of valeō and agō already is it. And the exchange opens and closes on the same wish — salvē "be well," valē "be well" — because a Roman greeting is a wish for the other person's health, coming and going.

Your turn

- Run through: both voices, aloud, once straight through
- Choose: you meet a whole room, not one person → salvēte
- Say it: the ending that already means "I" in valeō and agō — -ō

Before you move on

Run the exchange once more without looking. Then: which single verb supplies valēs, valeō, and valē? (Valēre.) Which of the two Roman "how are you?" questions is not attested? (Neither — both quid agis? and ut valēs? are real; only the spoken-Latin courses' question is modern.)

Chapter 20

Exchanging Names

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask someone's name in Latin and give my own, using the classical dative of possession.
>
> Ask quid tibi nōmen est? and answer mihi nōmen est, holding the possessor in the dative while the name itself may go either way.

20.1 quid tibi nōmen est?, mihi nōmen est... — "what's your name?", the dative way

> English says you have a name. German says you're called something. Latin does neither — it says the name belongs to you, using nothing but a case ending.

You'll want to know: quid tibi nōmen est? — literally "what is the name TO YOU?"

Quid tibi nōmen est? ("what's your name?") is, word for word, "what [is] the-name [to] you?" — no verb for "have," no verb for "be called." The name simply exists, and tibi ("to you," dative case) says who it belongs to.

You'll want to know: mihi nōmen est... — the same construction, in reply

The reply follows the identical pattern: mihi nōmen est [name] — "[the-name] [is] to-me [name]." This is Latin's genuine "dative of possession":

instead of a possessive verb, the possessor simply sits in the dative case, and the thing possessed — here, nōmen, "name" — stays in the nominative, as the sentence's real subject.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quid tibi nōmen est rests on inherited words. nōmen "name" is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1nomn*, "name" (EtymDB 2.1), a cousin of English name. tibi "to you" is an old dative, usually traced to tebhye*, "to you" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "quid tibi nōmen est?" — literally "what's the name to you?"
- "mihi nōmen est..." — "the name is to me..."
- the case doing the work — dative tibi/mihi, not a verb

Before you move on

What case does the possessor sit in, in mihi nōmen est? (Dative — mihi, "to me.") Does Latin use a verb like "have" or "be called" for this? (No — the name simply exists; possession is shown by the dative case alone.) What noun remains the sentence's grammatical subject? (Nōmen, "name.")

20.2 Mārcus or Mārcō? — a real classical variation

The possessor in Latin's naming construction is reliably dative. The personal name beside nōmen, however, is not locked to one case in every author.

Grammar Lens: The stable frame

The dative possessor appears across authors from Plautus through Livy and Sallust:

puerō nōmen est ... — to the boy the name is ...

That puerō does not change. It marks the person who possesses the name.

Grammar Lens: Two habits for the personal name

Cicero tends to keep the personal name nominative, agreeing with nōmen, the sentence's subject:

puerō nōmen est Mārcus

Livy and Sallust more often pull the personal name into the dative to match the possessor:

puerō nōmen est Mārcō

The underlying dative-of-possession construction is the same. The choice between Mārcus and Mārcō is authorial variation, not evidence that one sentence has stopped using the dative of possession.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "puerō" — to the boy; always the dative possessor
- "Mārcus" — Cicero's usual nominative pattern
- "Mārcō" — the matching dative found more often in Livy/Sallust

Before you move on

- Which case remains constant for the possessor? (Dative.)
- Which author tends toward nominative Mārcus? (Cicero.)
- Which authors more often use matching dative Mārcō? (Livy and Sallust.)
- Do the two forms represent different possession constructions? (No.)

Chapter 21

Nice to Meet You

Modes: voice (3) Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say in Latin that it is a pleasure to have met someone, and say what that phrase really proves.

Two meeting scenes: names traded with quid tibi nōmen est? between strangers, and volup est convēnisse kept for the chance re-encounter Plautus actually wrote it for.

21.1 volup est convēnisse — the phrase Latin uses instead of a fixed idiom

Modern languages generally have one fixed phrase for "nice to meet you." Latin, honestly, does not — but it has something better: a real line from a Roman comedy that does the job.

Why it's said this way

Plautus's comedy Miles Gloriosus (Act 2, Scene 3) gives us a real line that does exactly this work: "Tē, [name], volup est convēnisse" — literally "you, [name], [it] is-a-pleasure to-have-met," or naturally, "it's a pleasure to have met you, [name]." Break it down:

- volup — an old, indeclinable word for "pleasant, pleasing" (functioning here the way iuvat, "it pleases," would)
- est — "[it] is"

- convēnisse — the perfect infinitive of convenīre, "to come together, to meet" — "to have met"

Put together: "to have met [you] is a pleasure." This is a genuine, attested line — not a modern reconstruction.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

volup est convēnisse is built from Latin parts. volup "pleasant" goes with voluptās "pleasure"; Lewis & Short connect both with Greek elpis "hope" and compare volō "I want", a link still made but not certain. convēnisse comes from conveniō "I meet", made of con- "together" and veniō "I come" (EtymDB 2.1); veniō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwem-*, "to step" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "volup est convēnisse" — "it's a pleasure to have met you"
- the pieces — volup (pleasant) + est (is) + convēnisse (to have met)
- the grammar — convēnisse is a perfect infinitive

Before you move on

Does Classical Latin have one single fixed idiom for "nice to meet you"? (No — Romans expressed the sentiment according to context.) What real, attested phrase can do the job, and where does it come from? ("Volup est convēnisse", literally "to have met [you] is a pleasure" — Plautus, Miles Gloriosus.) What kind of infinitive is convēnisse? (Perfect — "to have met.")

21.2 Useful phrase, honest context

Volup est convēnisse is genuinely Roman. Now place it in its scene so you know exactly what that evidence does—and does not—prove.

Why it's said this way

In Miles Gloriosus, Sceledrus and Palaestrio are fellow slaves who already know one another. The line welcomes a chance encounter. It does not document a fixed formula that Romans always used when introduced to a stranger for the first time.
The phrase still expresses the right sentiment: "to have met you is a pleasure." Use it as an attested way to do that conversational work, while remembering that Classical Latin has no single fixed counterpart to Spanish encantado or German freut mich.

Why it's said this way

Modern spoken-Latin guides may teach mihi pergrātum est tē convenīre: "it is very pleasing to me to meet you." Its grammar is sound, but the formula does not occur in surviving classical texts. It is useful modern Latin, not direct evidence of Roman conversational convention.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "volup est convēnisse" — classically attested
- its scene — a chance encounter between people already acquainted
- "mihi pergrātum est tē convenīre" — grammatical, but modern

Before you move on

Is the Plautine line a first-time introduction? (No — it is a chance encounter between acquaintances.) Is it still genuinely attested? (Yes.) Is mihi pergrātum est tē convenīre bad grammar? (No.) Is it classically attested? (No — it is a modern spoken-Latin formula.)

21.3 Practice — two meetings, each with the right words

English uses one formula for both meetings. Latin does not, and the chapter told you why. So you get two scenes, and the payoff is knowing which words go in which.

The exchange — scene one: strangers, so trade names

A: Salvē! Quid tibi nōmen est? Be well! What is the name to you?

B: Mihi nōmen est Mārcus. Quid tibi nōmen est? The name to me is Marcus.

A: Mihi nōmen est Iūlia.

B: Valē! A: Valē!

Mārcus and Iūlia are only slots — put your own name there. Notice what is missing: no verb for "have," no verb for "be called." The dative tibi/mihi carries the possession by itself, and nōmen stays the subject.

Scene two is the chance re-encounter — the situation Plautus actually wrote the line for:

A: Salvē! Quid agis?

B: Valeō. Volup est convēnisse! I fare well. It is a pleasure to have met [you].

A: Valē!

Your turn

- Run through: scene one with your own name in the slot
- Choose: a stranger → names; someone you already know → volup est convēnisse
- Choose: greeting several people at once → salvēte

Before you move on

Which case does mihi sit in, and what work does it do? (Dative; it owns the name without any verb.) Cicero would write puerō nōmen est Mārcus; who prefers Mārcō? (Livy and Sallust.) Is mihi pergrātum est tē convenīre good Latin, and is it Roman? (Good grammar; not attested — modern.)

Chapter 22

You, Singular and Plural

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can choose tū or vōs correctly in Latin, knowing the choice is about number and not politeness.
>
> Address one person as tū and a group as vōs, then say why neither carries politeness the way German's Sie does.

22.1 tū, vōs — "you," before politeness got involved

German's two words for "you" are about formality — du against Sie. Latin's two words for "you" split on something completely different: plain number. Formality hadn't been invented yet.

You'll want to know: tū — you, one person

Tū = "you," addressing one person. That's the whole rule — no formal/informal split, just singular number. You've already used its dative form, tibi, in quid tibi nōmen est?

You'll want to know: vōs — you, more than one person

Vōs = "you," addressing more than one person — plain plural, nothing more.

Why it's said this way

Here's the real teaching point: in Classical Latin, this is a purely grammatical number distinction. There is no formal/informal dimension at all — using vōs to politely address a single powerful person had not yet started. That habit — plural pronoun used respectfully for one person — only developed later, in Late Latin, well after the classical period. It's the direct ancestor of French's polite vous. Careful, though: it is not the ancestor of German's Sie from the last lesson — Sie solves the same politeness problem in a completely different way, by repurposing an unrelated pronoun (3rd-person plural "they"), not by descending from vōs at all. Classical Romans simply didn't have this option yet: one person was always tū, no matter how important they were — though Romans still had other ways to show deference, like respectful titles (domine, "sir/lord"), just not through the pronoun itself.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tū is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tuh2*, "you" (EtymDB 2.1), a cousin of English thou. vōs "you all" is usually traced to Proto-Italic wos*, "you all" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "tū" — you, singular, one person
- "vōs" — you, plural, more than one person
- the honest twist — Classical Latin's tū/vōs is PURE number, no politeness at all, unlike German's du/Sie

Before you move on

What's the difference between tū and vōs in Classical Latin — number, or politeness? (Pure number — tū is singular, vōs is plural; no formality dimension existed yet.) When did using vōs to politely address one person begin? (Late Latin, after the classical period — the direct ancestor of French's polite vous.) Is German's Sie descended from vōs the same way? (No — Sie solves the same problem independently, by repurposing 3rd-person plural "they," not by inheriting from vōs at all.)

Chapter 23

You're Welcome

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can reply to thanks in Latin with nihil est, and say honestly how classical that reply is.
>
> Answer grātiās tibi agō with nihil est, and state plainly that the reply is modern convention built from real words.

23.1 nihil est — "you're welcome," another honest gap

You already learned that Latin has no fixed "nice to meet you." Here's the same honest gap again: no fixed reply to "thank you" either.

You'll want to know: nihil est — "it's nothing"

Nihil est = literally "[it] is nothing" — nihil ("nothing") + est ("is"). This is the phrase modern conversational-Latin communities commonly reach for as "you're welcome," parallel to English "it's nothing" or Spanish de nada.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Nihil itself is genuinely classical and richly attested, from an older nihilum, itself built from ne- ("not") + hīlum ("a tiny thing, a trifle" — said to have originally meant "the eye of a bean," though its own ultimate origin is uncertain). So "nothing" in Latin literally started life as "not [even] a tiny bit" — the same shape of story as French's pas ("not," originally "a step") or Spanish's nada (from nāta, "a thing born").

Why it's said this way

Here's the careful part: nihil and est are both thoroughly classical, and nihil est itself appears in real Latin texts — but always meaning things like "there's nothing to it" ("nihil est, nūgae", "nothing, trifles," Plautus's Bacchidēs) or "that's nothing" ("istuc quidem [edepol] nihil est", Plautus's The Braggart Soldier), never specifically attested as a reply to thanks. No surviving Roman text shows someone answering grātiās agō with nihil est. Treat it the way you already treated the modern "how are you?" of spoken-Latin courses: real Latin words, put to a genuinely useful modern job, but not a citation from a Roman play.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "nihil est" — "it's nothing," Latin's answer to "thank you"
- nihil's own history — ne- + hīlum, "not a tiny bit"
- the honest caveat — real words, modern job, not an ancient citation

Before you move on

What does nihil est literally mean, and what job does it do here? ("[It] is nothing" — the reply to grātiās agō, "thank you.") What does nihil itself literally break down into? (ne- "not" + hīlum "a tiny thing" — "not a tiny bit.") Is nihil est specifically attested in a classical text as a reply to thanks? (No — a modern conversational-Latin convention built from real words, not an ancient citation.)

Chapter 24

See You Soon

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell someone in Latin that I will see them soon, using a phrase Cicero actually wrote.
>
> Say propediem tē vidēbō as a parting line, split propediem into prope and diem, and locate it in Cicero's letters.

24.1 propediem tē vidēbō — a real change of pace: solidly attested, twice

> The last few lessons were honest about real gaps — no fixed "how are you," no fixed "nice to meet you," no fixed "you're welcome." This one is different: a genuine, repeated Ciceronian phrase.

You'll want to know: propediem tē vidēbō — "I shall see you soon"

Propediem tē vidēbō — "I shall see you soon" — is genuinely attested, not once but twice, in Cicero's own letters:

- Ad Familiārēs 2.12 (to Caelius): "…ut spērō, propediem tē vidēbō" — "...as I hope, I shall see you soon."
- Ad Familiārēs 15.6 (to Cato): "Ego, ut spērō, tē propediem vidēbō" — the same phrase, word order reshuffled, "I, as I hope, shall see you soon."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Propediem is built from prope ("near") + diem (accusative of diēs, "day") — literally "near the day," meaning "very soon, shortly." That's the same diēs from your days-of-week lessons (diēs Lūnae, diēs Veneris) — a familiar root showing up in a brand-new job.

Grammar Lens: vidēbō — the verb ending doing the work, again

vidē- (the stem of "to see") + -bō ("I will") → vidēbō
Vidēbō is the future tense of the verb "to see", which a later chapter teaches on its own — and just like agō back in "thank you," the -bō ending already carries "I will," so no separate pronoun for "I" is needed. Tē ("you") is simply the direct object: "[I] will-see you."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "propediem tē vidēbō" — "I shall see you soon"
- propediem's own pieces — prope (near) + diem (the day)
- the honest contrast — unlike the last few lessons, this phrase IS solidly attested, twice, in Cicero

Before you move on

Where is propediem tē vidēbō genuinely attested, and how many times? (Twice, in Cicero's letters — Ad Familiārēs 2.12 and 15.6.) What does propediem literally break down into? (Prope "near" + diem "the day" — the same diēs from the days-of-week lessons.) Does vidēbō need a separate word for "I"? (No — the -bō future ending already carries it, the same way agō's -ō did.)

Chapter 25

See You Tomorrow

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say in Latin that I will see someone tomorrow, and say which piece of it Romance mostly abandoned.
>
> Say crās tē vidēbō on the same pattern, and say honestly that this combination is not itself a surviving quotation.

25.1 crās tē vidēbō — the same pattern, honestly not the same citation

> Last lesson's phrase was a direct quote from Cicero. This one uses the exact same grammatical machinery — but be honest: it isn't itself pulled from a surviving letter.

You'll want to know: crās tē vidēbō — built from known-good pieces

Crās tē vidēbō — "I'll see you tomorrow" — swaps crās ("tomorrow") in for propediem ("soon") from the last lesson, keeping the same vidēbō ("I will see") you already learned. Both pieces are genuinely classical: crās is a real, common Latin adverb, and vidēbō is the same attested future-tense verb as before. But be careful: unlike propediem tē vidēbō, this specific combination isn't itself quoted in any surviving Roman letter — it's a well-formed construction built by analogy, not a direct citation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Crās traces back to Proto-Italic krās — but past that point, its ultimate origin is genuinely uncertain, with scholars proposing several different, competing Proto-Indo-European sources. Some things in etymology just don't resolve cleanly, even for a word this ordinary.

Why it's said this way

Here's the real teaching point: crās didn't survive as the everyday word for "tomorrow" in most of its major daughter languages. French's demain, Italian's domani, and Catalan's demà all rebuilt "tomorrow" from a Latin phrase meaning "in the morning" instead: dē ("from") + māne ("morning") → dē māne → French demain That is the same morning-based logic reappearing three separate times. Sardinian and Sicilian are the main holdouts that kept crās itself as an everyday word. Spanish, too, moved away from it, building its own mañana on that same word for "morning" rather than keeping crās. A genuinely ordinary Latin word, abandoned by most of the family — echoing, if less completely, the same shape of story as flāvus from the colors lesson (which survives nowhere as an everyday word, only in names like Flāvius).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "crās tē vidēbō" — "I'll see you tomorrow"
- the honest caveat — same pattern as propediem tē vidēbō, but not itself a direct quotation
- the Romance twist — nearly everyone replaced crās with a morning-based word instead

Before you move on

Is crās tē vidēbō itself quoted in a surviving Cicero letter, the way propediem tē vidēbō was? (No — same grammatical pattern, built from two genuinely classical pieces, but not itself a direct citation.) Which Romance language kept crās as its everyday word for "tomorrow"? (Sardinian and Sicilian — most of the rest rebuilt it from a phrase meaning “in the morning,” instead.)

Chapter 26

How

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how in Latin with quōmodo, and trace it into cómo, come, and comment.
>
> Say quōmodo, split it into quō and modō, and show how comment double-marks the manner that come and cómo mark once.

26.1 quōmodo — the real word behind "how," in three Romance languages at once

> An earlier lesson warned that a modern spoken-Latin "how are you" greeting is not classically attested. This is its first word — and the word itself is completely genuine.

You'll want to know: quōmodo — genuinely classical, "by what manner"

Quōmodo ("how, in what way") is a real, common Classical Latin word — a fusion of quō (ablative of quis/quid, "what") + modō (ablative of modus, "manner, measure"), literally "by what manner." It's attested in both Cicero (Dē Inventiōne) and Seneca (the Moral Letters) — genuinely classical, unlike the specific greeting quōmodo tē habēs? ("how do you hold yourself?"), which is a modern construction. The word is real; it was only that one exact phrase that wasn't.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Quōmodo is the direct source of Italian's come and Spanish's cómo — both simply continue quōmodo, worn down by ordinary sound change.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Here's the honest surprise: French's comment is not a simple continuation of quōmodo the way Italian and Spanish's words are. French's comme ("how, as, like") continues quōmodo just like Italian's come does — but then comment picks up French's own -ment adverb ending on top of that, from mente (ablative of mēns, "mind") — the same -ment that turns any adjective into an adverb (rapide → rapidement, "quickly"). One well-attested account of this history holds that comment therefore marks "manner" twice — once via quōmodo's own modō, once via -ment's mente — where Italian and Spanish mark it only once, though the exact historical steps have more than one scholarly account.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "quōmodo" — "how," genuinely classical
- quō (what) + modō (manner) — "by what manner"
- the honest surprise — French's comment double-marks "manner"; Italian/Spanish's come/cómo mark it once

Before you move on

Is quōmodo itself genuinely classical, even though the specific phrase quōmodo tē habēs? wasn't? (Yes — the word is real, attested in Cicero and Seneca; only that one specific greeting was modern.) What are quōmodo's two Latin pieces, and what do they mean? (Quō "what" + modō "manner" — "by what manner.") Is French's comment a simple continuation of quōmodo, the way Italian's come is? (No — it adds a second "manner" marker, mente, doubling up where Italian/Spanish only carry the sense once.)

Chapter 27

Well

Modes: voice (1) Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can answer well in Latin with bene, and show how one regular sound change turns it into bien.
>
> Answer bene when asked how you fare, then derive bien from it in one regular sound change.

27.1 bene — a morphologically simple inheritance

Last lesson's "how" took a roundabout path into Romance, picking up an extra piece along the way. This one is refreshingly simple: one Latin word, one regular sound change, nothing grafted on.

You'll want to know: bene — "well," related to bonus

Bene ("well") is a genuine Classical Latin adverb, closely related to bonus ("good") — both descend from the same Old Latin ancestor, duenos/duonus (found in the famous Duenos inscription, one of the oldest surviving Latin texts). Past that point, the ultimate Proto-Indo-European root is debated, with more than one proposal on the table.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Here's the refreshing part: French's bien and Spanish's bien both continue bene through one single, regular sound change — short stressed e diphthongizing to "ie," the exact same shift behind mel → miel and terra → tierra/terre — and nothing else. No extra suffix gets grafted on, unlike quōmodo's roundabout, multi-step journey into come/cómo/comment. When two Romance languages agree this closely, picking up only one shared, ordinary sound change between them, you're looking almost straight at the Latin parent itself.

Why it's said this way

Bene is attested being used alone, repeated, in Plautus's Stichus, line 709 — though be honest about the context: it's a drinking toast, not literally an answer to "how are you." The characters raise their cups and say: "bene vōs, bene nōs, bene tē, bene mē, bene nostram etiam Stephanium" — "well to you, well to us, well to you, well to me, well to our Stephanium too." A real, attested use of bene standing alone — just repurposed here for the same conversational slot "well" fills, the way volup est convēnisse was for "nice to meet you."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bene" — "well," related to bonus
- the morphologically simple inheritance — French/Spanish bien is bene plus one regular sound change, nothing grafted on
- the honest context — bene vōs, bene nōs... is a drinking toast in Plautus, not literally "how are you"

Before you move on

What Latin word is French and Spanish's bien, continued through one regular sound change? (Bene, "well.") Is quōmodo's path into Romance as morphologically simple as bene's? (No — quōmodo picked up an extra grafted-on suffix along the way; bene → bien picked up only one ordinary sound change and nothing more.) Where is bene genuinely attested standing alone, and in what context? (Plautus's Stichus, around line 708-709 — a drinking toast, not an answer to "how are you.")

Chapter 28

Day

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can use diēs on its own for day, after meeting it inside the weekday and noon phrases.
>
> Say diēs alone, point to it inside diēs Lūnae and medius diēs, and separate journal and journey from diary.

28.1 diēs — the word you already know, now standing alone

You've used this word twice already without a lesson of its own — inside diēs Lūnae and medius diēs. Time to meet it directly.

You'll want to know: diēs — "day"

Diēs — "day" — is a genuinely common, everyday Classical Latin word, not a rare or bookish one. You've already met it embedded in:

- diēs Lūnae ("Monday," literally "day of the Moon" — Chapter 5)
- medius diēs ("noon," literally "mid-day" — Chapter 12)

Now it's the headword itself.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Diēs has its own derivative, diurnum ("daytime, daily"), which gives English diurnal directly — and, through French's jour, journée, and jornel (all descendants of diurnum in their own right), journal and journey as well (a "journey" was originally "a day's travel"). Diary takes a separate path: it comes from a sibling derivative of diēs, diārium ("daily allowance"), not from diurnum itself — two related but distinct branches off the same root. Further out, a genuine Proto-Indo-European root, *dyēws- ("to shine, sky"), connects diēs to Latin's own deus ("god") and to Iuppiter (Jupiter, literally "sky-father") — the same root that shines through the sky-god imagery of gods across the Indo-European world.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "diēs" — "day"
- where you've already met it — diēs Lūnae, medius diēs
- the English cousins — diurnal, diary, journal, journey

Before you move on

Where have you already met diēs twice before this lesson? (Diēs Lūnae, "Monday"; medius diēs, "noon.") What English word comes from diēs's derivative diurnum directly? (Diurnal.) What two words come through French descendants of diurnum — jour, journée, jornel? (Journal, journey.) Does diary also come from diurnum? (No — a separate sibling derivative, diārium, "daily allowance.")

Chapter 29

Night

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say night in Latin as nox, noctis, and see English night sitting inside it.
>
> Say nox and noctis, match it against English night, and build equinox out of aequus plus nox.

29.1 nox — English's own word, wearing a Roman toga

Last lesson gave diēs its own moment. Here's its partner from media nox — and this time, the English cousin isn't hiding behind centuries of sound change. It's staring you in the face.

You'll want to know: nox — "night"

Nox (genitive noctis) — "night" — is the word you've already met inside media nox ("midnight," Chapter 12).

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Trace nox back far enough and you land on Proto-Indo-European nók^{w}ts — and this is about as solid a reconstruction as historical linguistics gets. The cognates read almost like the same word spelled differently across a dozen languages: English's own night, German Nacht, Greek nyx, Sanskrit nakta, Old Norse nátt, Gothic nahts. Nox and "night" aren't just related — they're about as close to being the same word as two languages 6,000 years apart can get.

Grammar Lens: The same suffix as diurnum, and a name for equal nights

Nox's own derivative, nocturnus ("of the night"), wasn't built from scratch — it was coined directly on the analogy of diēs's own diurnum, reusing its exact -urnus suffix on purpose: the same suffix-machine, deliberately applied to a second time-word. Nocturnus gives English nocturnal and nocturne directly. And aequus ("equal") + nox's stem noct- gives equinox — literally "equal night," the day when day and night balance.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "nox" — "night," genitive noctis
- the tight cousin — nox/night, nearly the same word
- nocturnus's shared suffix with diurnum — the same -urnus pattern, two different times of day

Before you move on

Where have you already met nox before this lesson? (Media nox, "midnight.") What English word is nox almost identical to, both descending from PIE nók^{w}ts*? (Night.) What suffix does nocturnus share with diēs's diurnum? (-urnus.) What does aequus + nox give in English? (Equinox, "equal night.")

Chapter 30

Good Night

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can wish someone a good night in Latin, and say why the wish takes the accusative case.
>
> Wish someone bonam noctem, and say why it is not bona nox — Latin wishes take the accusative.

30.1 bonam noctem — real grammar, not a real citation

You already have bonus (good) and nox (night, last lesson). Put them together for "good night" — but the case they end up in is the real lesson here.

Grammar Lens: bonam noctem — why accusative, not nominative

Bonam noctem = "good night" — but notice: not bona nox (nominative). Latin wishes and exclamations conventionally use the accusative case — the same "Accusative of Exclamation" behind the genuinely attested Fēlīcem nātālem! ("happy birthday!," short for tibi fēlīcem diem nātālem exoptō, "I wish you a happy birthday"). Grammatically, bonam noctem is a compressed exclamation — something like "[I wish you] a good night," with the verb left unstated, the same kind of ellipsis you'd find in a letter opening like "Cicero Atticō salūtem [dīcit]" ("Cicero sends greetings to Atticus"). The bare nominative bona nox would work too (with an implied "sit,"

"may it be"), but the accusative is the more natural, idiomatic choice for a wish like this.

Grammar Lens: Be honest: real grammar, not a real citation

Here's the careful part, matching the same honesty already applied to quōmodo tē habēs?, nihil est, and crās tē vidēbō: the accusative-of-wishing principle itself is genuine, solid Classical Latin grammar. But this specific fixed phrase, bonam noctem, is not actually attested as a Roman farewell formula in any surviving classical text — it appears to be a later, post-classical convention, built correctly from real grammar but not itself a citation. Treat the grammar as reliable and the exact phrase as a well-formed construction, not a quotation from a Roman text.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bonam noctem builds on bonus "good", which Old Latin wrote duenos (EtymDB 2.1). It is usually traced to Proto-Italic dwenos*, "good", and perhaps to a root for "to show favour" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bonam noctem" — "good night," accusative
- the case rule — Latin wishes take the accusative, not the nominative bona nox
- the honest caveat — solid grammar, but not itself an attested ancient farewell

Before you move on

Why is it bonam noctem and not bona nox? (Latin wishes/exclamations conventionally take the accusative case, not the nominative.) Is the accusative-of-wishing rule itself solid Classical Latin grammar? (Yes.) Is bonam noctem as one specific fixed phrase directly attested as a Roman farewell in any surviving classical text? (No — the grammar is real, but this exact phrase appears to be a later, post-classical convention.)

Chapter 31

Morning

Modes: voice (1) Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say morning in Latin with māne, and keep it apart from manus, the hand.
>
> Say māne, recover it inside dē māne and mañana, and keep long-ā mānus apart from short-a manus, the hand.

31.1 māne — the word already hiding inside "tomorrow," in four languages

You've already met this word once, without a lesson of its own — buried inside the very phrase that replaced crās across half the Romance family. Time to meet it directly.

Grammar Lens: māne — "morning," an indeclinable word

Māne — "morning, early" — is an indeclinable neuter noun (and adverb): unlike diēs or nox, it never changes its ending, no matter its grammatical role. You've already met it once, inside dē māne ("in the morning," Chapter 25) — the exact phrase that French's demain, Italian's domani, and Catalan's demà all independently rebuilt as their new word for "tomorrow," abandoning crās. Spanish's mañana took a related but distinct path: built directly on māne itself, without the dē- (Vulgar Latin maneāna*) — the same root, one step closer to the source.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Māne traces to mānus, an archaic Latin adjective meaning "good." Watch the vowel length carefully: this is a completely different word from the everyday manus ("hand," short a) — same spelling once macrons are dropped, unrelated meaning, a genuine false friend. From that "good" root comes mātūrus ("ripe, timely, early"), the direct source of English mature — and mātūtīnus ("of the morning," tied to Matūta, the Roman goddess of dawn), which gives English, via Old French matines/matin, both matins ("morning prayers") and matinee ("afternoon performance") — the same root splitting into two very different senses of "a scheduled morning-adjacent thing."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "māne" — "morning," already met inside dē māne
- the false-friend warning — mānus "good" (long ā) vs. manus "hand" (short a)
- the English cousins — mature, matins, matinee, all from the same root as māne

Before you move on

Where did you already meet māne before this lesson? (Inside dē māne, "in the morning," Chapter 25 — source of French demain, Italian domani, and Catalan demà.) Did Spanish mañana come from dē māne too? (Not quite — it was built directly on māne alone, without the dē-.) Is māne's root mānus the same word as manus, "hand"? (No — a false friend; mānus "good" has a long ā, manus "hand" a short a.) What two very different English words both trace to māne's "good" root, via mātūtīnus? (Matins and matinee.)

Chapter 32

Good Morning

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say good morning in Latin, and describe the salūtātiō Romans actually performed at dawn.
>
> Say bonum māne, note that its neuter case is invisible, and describe the dawn salūtātiō Romans really used.

32.1 bonum māne — a phrase Romans didn't say, and a ritual they actually did

You have bonus (good) and māne (morning, last lesson). Put them together for "good morning" — but this time, watch for what's missing, not just what's uncertain.

Why it's said this way

Bonum māne = "good morning." Like bonam noctem two lessons ago, this specific phrase is not classically attested as a fixed Roman greeting. But here the honesty runs one level deeper: bonam noctem showed you real, solid grammar — the accusative noctem, distinct from nominative nox, demonstrating Latin's genuine "Accusative of Exclamation." Māne, though, is neuter and indeclinable — and Latin neuter nouns never distinguish nominative from accusative, in any word, ever. Bonum works identically whether you imagine it as nominative or accusative. The grammar point that made bonam noctem interesting simply isn't visible here — not because it's missing, but because neuter words never show it, for anyone, anywhere in Latin.

Why it's said this way

Here's what Romans did have, richly documented: the salūtātiō (mātūtīna salūtātiō, "morning greeting") — clients arriving at their patron's house at dawn, formally dressed, to pay respects, ask favors, and sometimes receive the sportula (a small cash or food allowance) in return. It structured the start of the Roman day the way a verbal "good morning" structures yours — just as a ritual visit, not a spoken phrase.
salūtā- ("greet") + -tiō ("the act of") → salūtātiō
The verb "to greet" comes from salūs ("health, safety, wholeness") — and salūs is a genuine doublet of salvus ("safe, sound"), the very root behind salvē (Chapter 1's first word). Both salūs and salvus descend from the same Proto-Indo-European root, *solh₂- ("whole"). So Rome's real morning greeting and its very first "hello" share one root, arrived at by two separate paths — a wish for someone's wholeness, whether spoken as salvē or enacted at dawn as the salūtātiō.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bonum māne" — "good morning," a modern phrase, not classical
- why its grammar is invisible — māne is neuter, and neuters never show nominative vs. accusative
- "salūtātiō" — the real Roman morning greeting, a dawn visit, not a phrase — from the same root as salvē

Before you move on

Does bonum māne show the same accusative-of-wishing grammar that bonam noctem did? (No — māne is neuter, and Latin neuters never distinguish nominative from accusative, so the case is invisible either way.) What was Rome's real, richly documented "morning greeting"? (The salūtātiō — clients visiting a patron's house at dawn.) What word, already taught in Chapter 1, shares its root with salūtātiō? (Salvē — both salūs and salvus descend from the same PIE root, solh₂-*, “whole.”)

Chapter 33

Evening

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say evening in Latin, and follow the vesper root into Hesperia, víspera, and vespers.
>
> Sort any European evening word into the vesper family or the sērus family, then produce vesper and the everyday vespere Cicero uses for in the evening.

33.1 vesper — the evening word its own daughters mostly abandoned

A genuinely ordinary Latin word for "evening" — and a root that quietly reaches all the way to the English word west.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Vesper (also vespera) — "evening" — is a genuine, ordinary Classical Latin word, not a rare or poetic one: vespere ("in the evening") shows up routinely in Cicero's own letters. It traces to Proto-Indo-European wekero- ("evening, night"), itself an enlarged form of a root *we-, which some reconstructions gloss as "down" (the direction the sun sets) — though this specific piece is more contested than the vesper/west link itself. That same conceptual root, through a completely separate Germanic branch, gives English its own word for "west" — evening and west, sharing one deep idea: the direction the sun goes down.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vesper" — "evening," genuinely everyday Classical Latin
- the deep root — wekero-, shared with English "west," the direction of sunset
- the careful hedge — a lower root meaning "down" is more contested

Before you move on

What English word shares vesper's deep PIE root, and what's the connecting idea? (West — both trace to the direction the sun sets.) Is the proposed still-deeper root meaning "down" equally secure? (No — that sub-root is more contested than the vesper/west link.)

33.2 Hesperia, víspera, vespers — the root after Latin

Latin vesper and English west share the sunset idea. Now follow the evening root through Greek, English, Spanish, French, and Italian.

You'll want to know: Greek hesperos

The Greek cognate hesperos gives English Hesperus, the evening star (Venus at dusk), and Hesperia, "land of the west." The name is relative: Greeks used it for Italy, west of Greece; Romans could use it for Spain, west of Italy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

English borrowed vespers, the evening prayer service, and vespertine, "of the evening," directly from Latin.
Spanish inherited vespera as víspera, but narrowed its meaning to "the eve" or "the day before" an event. French soir and Italian sera do not descend from vesper at all. They rebuilt "evening" from Latin sērus, "late," through the idea of the "late day."

One ordinary Latin word therefore leaves three different outcomes: a learned English loan, a narrowed Spanish descendant, and replacement by a different root in French and Italian.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Hesperia" — land of the west
- "víspera" — the eve or day before, narrowed from evening
- "soir, sera" — from sērus, "late," not from vesper

Before you move on

What is Hesperus? (The evening star.) What does Spanish víspera mean now? (The eve or day before an event.) Which Latin root supplies French soir and Italian sera? (Sērus, "late.") Name one direct English borrowing from vesper. (Vespers or vespertine.)

33.3 Practice — sort the evening words, then read the Latin

Be honest about what this chapter can give you. There is no Roman "good evening" yet — that arrives next chapter, and even then it is modern. What you can do today is triage: hear any European evening word and place it in the right family.

You'll want to know: the two families, and the test that separates them

Everything in this chapter falls into exactly two lines, and one question separates them: does the word still carry a v or an h from the sunset root, or does it come from "late"?

- Sunset family — from vesper, or its Greek cousin hesperos: vespers, vespertine, víspera, Hesperus, Hesperia.

- Late family — from sērus, "late": French soir, Italian sera.

Two traps worth naming. Víspera is in the sunset family but no longer means "evening" — it narrowed to "the eve, the day before." And soir and sera look like the closest heirs of all, being the everyday words in Latin's two nearest daughters, yet they are the ones that are not descended from vesper at all.

Your turn

- Sort: vespers, sera, Hesperus, soir, víspera → sunset or late
- Say it: the noun — vesper; and "in the evening" — vespere, the form Cicero uses in his letters
- Say it: the deep link that started it — vesper and English west, one idea: where the sun goes down

Before you move on

Sort these three without looking: vespertine, sera, Hesperia. (Sunset, late, sunset.) What does víspera mean in Spanish now? (The eve, the day before — narrowed, not lost.) And which everyday Latin form means "in the evening"? (Vespere.)

Chapter 34

Good Evening

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can wish someone a good evening in Latin, and point to the accusative that bonum māne could not show.
>
> Wish someone bonum vesperum, and use its masculine ending to show the accusative rule bonum māne could not.

34.1 bonum vesperum — the accusative rule returns, this time visibly

Two lessons ago, bonum māne couldn't show you Latin's real wish-grammar, because māne is neuter. This time it's back — because vesper isn't.

Grammar Lens: bonum vesperum — masculine, and the case shows again

Bonum vesperum = "good evening." Like bonam noctem and bonum māne, this specific phrase is not classically attested as a fixed Roman greeting — the same honest gap, a third time. But the grammar here is different from bonum māne's: vesper is masculine, and Latin masculine nouns genuinely do distinguish nominative (vesper) from accusative (vesperum) — unlike neuter māne, where the two forms were always identical. So bonum vesperum does demonstrate the real Accusative-of-Exclamation rule again, the same wish-construction behind bonam noctem and the genuinely attested Fēlīcem nātālem! — just dressed in masculine endings instead of feminine ones.

Grammar Lens: A feminine alternate: bonam vesperam

Latin also has a separate feminine noun for evening, vespera (distinct from masculine vesper, though built from the same root — both headwords appeared together last lesson, though without their genders spelled out). Paired with bonus, its accusative gives bonam vesperam — agreeing the same way bonam noctem does: the adjective, bonam, matches bonam exactly. But watch the nouns carefully — they do not share an ending. Vespera is 1st declension (accusative -am, vesperam), while nox is 3rd declension (accusative -em, noctem — not -am). Same adjective agreement, genuinely different noun declensions underneath.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bonum vesperum keeps vesper "evening", whose Greek cousin is hesperos "evening" (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bonum vesperum" — "good evening," masculine accusative
- why this one shows the case rule, unlike bonum māne — vesper is masculine, not neuter
- "bonam vesperam" — the feminine alternate, matching bonam noctem's own shape

Before you move on

Is bonum vesperum itself directly attested as a classical Roman greeting? (No — a modern, pedagogical phrase, like bonam noctem and bonum māne.) Why does bonum vesperum show the real Accusative-of-Exclamation rule, when bonum māne couldn't? (Vesper is masculine, and masculine nouns distinguish nominative from accusative; māne is neuter, where the two are always identical.) What's the feminine alternate, and how does its adjective agreement compare to bonam noctem's? (Bonam vesperam — the adjective bonam matches bonam exactly, but the NOUNS don't share an ending: vesperam is 1st declension -am, while noctem is 3rd declension -em, not -am.)

Chapter 35

Noon and Afternoon

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say midday in Latin, and use ante merīdiem and post merīdiem to place any hour of the day.
>
> Say merīdiēs, place an hour with ante merīdiem or post merīdiem, and say why Rome needed no separate afternoon noun.

35.1 merīdiēs — the word you already know, one sound-change later

You already have medius diēs. Rome had no separate word for "afternoon"; it split the whole day around this word.

Sounds you'll need

Merīdiēs — "midday, noon" — is the same phrase as medius diēs (Chapter 12), just contracted: an earlier medīdiēs dropped its repeated d-sound (dissimilation) to become merīdiēs, a fifth-declension noun in its own right (accusative merīdiem). It's the ultimate root of English meridian, via the Latin adjective merīdiānus ("of midday").

Why it's said this way

Here's the twist: Spanish has tarde, French has après-midi, German has Nachmittag — a single word naming "the afternoon" as its own block of time. Latin doesn't. Instead, Romans split the entire day around merīdiēs into two large halves: ante merīdiem ("before noon") and post merīdiem ("after noon") — the direct ancestors of English's own a.m. and p.m., used on every clock and phone today, often without anyone realizing they're speaking Latin.

This wasn't just a loose figure of speech — it carried real legal weight. Under the Twelve Tables, Rome's foundational law code, a civil case had to be argued before noon, with both parties present; if one party failed to appear, the magistrate could rule against them, in absentia, once it passed noon. Ante and post merīdiem divided not just clock time, but courtroom procedure.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

You've already met tardus ("slow, late") through Spanish's own tarde — the very word Spanish reshaped into its "afternoon." In Latin itself, tardus never made that leap: it stayed a plain adjective, "slow, late," and never became a Latin noun for "afternoon." Spanish's shift from "late" to "the afternoon" happened entirely on its own, after Latin.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "merīdiēs" — the same medius diēs, contracted
- "ante merīdiem," "post merīdiem" — before/after noon, the source of a.m./p.m.
- the honest twist — no separate Latin word for "afternoon," just a line drawn at noon

Before you move on

What earlier phrase is merīdiēs a contracted form of? (Medius diēs, Chapter 12.) What two English abbreviations, used on every clock, come directly from ante merīdiem and post merīdiem? (a.m. and p.m..) Did this noon-based division matter beyond just telling time? (Yes — under the Twelve Tables, Roman court cases had a real legal deadline at noon.) Does Latin have its own separate word for "afternoon," the way Spanish has tarde? (No — Romans split the whole day around merīdiēs instead.)

Chapter 36

Good Afternoon

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can greet someone in Latin in the afternoon with salvē or salvēte, and explain why nothing more is needed.
>
> One Roman day in four meetings — morning, afternoon, evening, and parting at night — with salvē and valē marked as the attested pair and the three bonus phrases marked as modern.

36.1 salvē (post merīdiem) — the one that isn't there

Three lessons in a row, you've met a modern phrase built on real (if sometimes invisible) Latin grammar for "good _____." This lesson is different: there's honestly nothing to build.

Why it's said this way

Bonam noctem, bonum māne, and bonum vesperum are all modern, pedagogical phrases — not classically attested — but each pairs bonus directly with a single noun in the accusative: noctem, māne, vesperum. "Good afternoon" can't take that same shape, because you already learned last lesson that Latin has no simplex noun for "afternoon" at all — there's no afternoonem for bonus to modify. Bonum post merīdiem doesn't work: post merīdiem ("after noon") is a whole prepositional phrase, not a noun, so bonus has nothing to agree with. A three-word workaround, bonum tempus pōmerīdiānum (“good afternoon time”), actually is grammatical — pōmerīdiānus (“of the afternoon”) is a real word Cicero himself uses, and here bonus agrees with a genuine noun, tempus (“time”). But it’s a periphrasis, not a direct two-word match for the other three phrases — and it isn’t itself attested anywhere as something Romans actually said as a greeting.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōmerīdiānus “of the afternoon” was built inside Latin from post “after” and merīdiānus “of midday” (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- why “bonum post merīdiem” doesn’t work — no noun for bonus to agree with; why “bonum tempus pōmerīdiānum” DOES work, but isn’t attested as a real greeting
- the grammatical adjective — pōmerīdiānum, “of the afternoon”

Before you move on

Does Latin have a two-word phrase for “good afternoon” the way it has bonum vesperum for evening? (No — Latin has no simplex noun for “afternoon” for bonus to pair with.) Is there ANY grammatical Latin phrase at all? (Yes — bonum tempus pōmerīdiānum is real grammar, but a three-word periphrasis, not attested as an actual greeting.) What did Romans say in the afternoon instead? (Salvē — the same everyday greeting from Chapter 1.) Why doesn’t bonum post merīdiem work grammatically? (Post merīdiem is a whole prepositional phrase, not a single noun bonus can agree with.)

36.2 salvē — the greeting that does not watch the clock

Latin cannot build a neat two-word “good afternoon.” What did Romans actually need in that time slot? Nothing beyond a greeting you already know.

Why it's said this way

Salvē to one person and salvēte to several people mean "be well." Neither form contains a morning, afternoon, or evening boundary. Romans could use the greeting whenever they met someone.
English encourages a learner to search for four matched clock-based formulas. Latin everyday greetings do not divide the day that way. The missing afternoon formula is therefore not a hole in Roman conversation.
The time-of-day arc now has three different kinds of evidence:

- a real institution, the morning salūtātiō
- grammatical but modern phrases such as bonam noctem
- no dedicated formula at all for afternoon—just salvē

Learning those differences is more faithful than forcing four symmetrical translations into Latin.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "salvē" — be well, to one person
- "salvēte" — be well, to several people
- the time restriction — none

Before you move on

What can one Roman say on meeting another in the afternoon? (Salvē.) What is the plural? (Salvēte.) Do these words encode a time of day? (No.) Why is there no conversational gap? (The everyday greeting already works whenever people meet.)

36.3 Practice — one whole day, in the words you have

Nine chapters of time-of-day words end here. This is the one place they all have to work at once — four meetings, one day, and no inventing.

The exchange — morning to night, with the honest label on each line

Morning. A: Salvē! Quid agis? B: Valeō. Salvē!

Afternoon. A: Salvē! B: Salvē!

Evening. A: Bonum vesperum! B: Salvē!

Parting at night. A: Bonam noctem! B: Valē!

Now the label, which is half the payoff. Salvē, salvēte and valē are genuinely Roman and carry no clock inside them, so they work in every one of those four rows. The three bonus phrases — bonum māne, bonum vesperum, bonam noctem — are well-formed modern teaching phrases, not lines from any surviving Roman text. And the afternoon row has only salvē in it, because Latin never had a noun for "afternoon" for bonus to agree with.

So the safe rule you leave with: when in doubt, salvē on arrival and valē on departure, at any hour.

Your turn

- Run through: all four rows aloud, both voices
- Choose: mid-afternoon, and you want to be Roman → salvē
- Say it: why it is noctem and vesperum, not nox and vesper — Latin wishes take the accusative
- Choose: a room full of people → salvēte

Before you move on

Which two words in the whole day-cycle are genuinely attested? (Salvē and valē.) What did Rome actually have in the morning instead of a phrase? (The salūtātiō — a dawn visit, an action.) Why can bonum māne not show the accusative rule? (Māne is neuter; neuters never distinguish the two cases.)

Chapter 37

Eight Verbs at the Core

Modes: 🚗 voice (8) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I am, I have, I go, I come, I say, I see, I know and I give in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, and name the English words each verb left behind.
>
> The chapter's eighth verb closes the set: after learning dō, the reader produces all eight first-person forms and all eight third-person forms in sequence — sum, habeō, eō, veniō, dīcō, videō, sciō, dō and est, habet, it, venit, dīcit, videt, scit, dat.

37.1 sum — the verb English never stopped sharing

> You can already say valeō, "I fare well." Now meet the verb that sits under every such statement: "to be."

You'll want to know: sum — "I am"

Sum means "I am." The form a dictionary lists it under is esse, "to be."

- sum — I am
- es — you are, to one person
- est — he is, she is, it is
- sumus — we are

- estis — you are, to several people
- sunt — they are

Latin packs the person into the ending, so sum on its own is already a whole sentence. No separate word for "I" is required.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Two English words are not merely cousins of these forms — they are the same inherited word. Am and is come from the Proto-Indo-European root *h₁es- ("to be"), and so do sum and est. Latin builds its past from a second root entirely: fuī ("I was") and futūrus ("about to be") come from *bʰuH- ("to grow, become") — which also gives English be and been, and Greek phúsis ("nature"), the source of physics. English patches its own verb from three roots the same way: am/is, be, and was/were.
From esse Latin built essentia, giving English essence and essential. Its participle -sēns supplies present (prae-, "before") and absent (ab-, "away"), while the phrase inter est ("it is between, it matters") hardened into interest.
Flag one false friend: Latin sum has nothing to do with an English "sum." That word comes from summa, "the highest, the total."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "sum" — I am
- "es, est" — you are, he or she is
- "sumus, estis, sunt" — we, you all, they
- the two English forms of the same root — am, is

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I am"? (Sum.) "They are"? (Sunt.) What form does a dictionary list? (Esse.) Which two English words come from the very same root as sum and est? (Am and is.) Where does Latin's past fuī come from instead? (A second root, *bʰuH-, which also gives English be.)

37.2 habeō — the twin that is not a twin

You can say sum, "I am." The next verb says what you hold. It resembles its English translation so closely that the resemblance is a trap.

You'll want to know: habeō — "I have"

Habeō means "I have," and more literally "I hold." The dictionary form is habēre.

- habeō — I have
- habēs — you have, to one person
- habet — he has, she has, it has
- habēmus — we have
- habētis — you have, to several people
- habent — they have

The h was already weak in everyday Roman speech, and every Romance descendant dropped it: the letter is written, barely breathed.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Here is the trap. English have is not descended from habēre. It comes from the Proto-Indo-European root *keh₂p- ("to seize"), whose Latin outcome is the verb "to take, to seize" (a later lesson teaches it) — the verb behind capture, captive, and capable. Two languages, two unrelated verbs, one accidental match of sound and sense. Etymologists cite this pair as the standard warning against trusting a resemblance. The genuine English family of habēre is large. From habitus ("condition, bearing") come habit and habitual; from habitāre ("to keep having, to dwell") come inhabit and habitat. Prefixed, the verb yields exhibit ("hold out"), prohibit ("hold away"), and inhibit. The adjective habilis ("easily held, handy") passes through French into able and ability. And dē + habēre — "to have from someone" — contracts to dēbēre, which supplies debt, debit, due, and duty.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "habeō" — I have
- "habēs, habet" — you have, he or she has
- "habēmus, habētis, habent" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — habit, inhabit, exhibit, able, debt

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I have"? (Habeō.) "They have"? (Habent.) Is English have descended from habēre? (No — it comes from the root behind Latin's verb "to seize", the one in capture.) Which English word hides dē + habēre? (Debt, and with it debit and due.) Which everyday word comes from habilis, "handy"? (Able.)

37.3 eō — a whole verb in one vowel

Habeō gave you a comfortable two-syllable stem. The next verb has almost no stem at all — and you have been reading one of its forms in English theatres your whole life.

You'll want to know: eō — "I go"

Eō means "I go." The dictionary form is īre, "to go." Strip the endings and what remains is a single vowel, i-.

- eō — I go
- īs — you go, to one person
- it — he goes, she goes, it goes
- īmus — we go

- ītis — you go, to several people
- eunt — they go

Two cautions worth hearing once. Latin it means "he or she goes" and has no connection to English "it." And the long ī of īs is a held vowel, which is what keeps it distinct from other short words.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *h₁ey-, "to go." Latin prefixed it relentlessly, and English took the results wholesale.
Exit is not derived from a Latin verb — it is one: exit, "he or she goes out," borrowed straight from Roman stage directions. Alongside it come transit and transient (trāns, "across"), initial and initiate (in-īre, "to go in," hence initium, "a beginning"), perish (per-īre, "to go away utterly"), circuit (circum, "around"), and obituary (ob-īre, "to go to meet" one's death).
Two are less obvious. Ambition is ambīre, "to go around" — what a Roman candidate did, walking the city to canvass for votes. Sudden is subitus, from sub-īre, "to come up from underneath," unnoticed until it arrives. The related noun iter, itineris ("a journey"), gives itinerary. Beyond Latin, the Greek participle ión ("going") was borrowed by Michael Faraday in 1834 to name a particle that travels through a solution: ion.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "eō" — I go
- "īs, it" — you go, he or she goes
- "īmus, ītis, eunt" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — exit, transit, initial, perish, sudden

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I go"? (Eō.) "They go"? (Eunt.) What does Latin it mean? (He or she goes — not English "it".) Which

English stage direction is an untouched Latin verb form? (Exit.) What did a Roman candidate literally do to earn the word ambition? (Go around, canvassing the city.)

37.4 veniō — the one that really is English "come"

Eō takes you away. Its opposite number brings you in — and this time the English translation genuinely is the same ancient word.

You'll want to know: veniō — "I come"

Veniō means "I come." The dictionary form is venīre. Remember that Latin v is pronounced like English w, so this opens weh-.

- veniō — I come
- venīs — you come, to one person
- venit — he comes, she comes, it comes
- venīmus — we come
- venītis — you come, to several people
- veniunt — they come

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *gʷem-, "to step, to come." That initial g^w hardens to k in the Germanic branch, which is exactly how English come arises — so veniō and come are the same word, split apart several thousand years ago. In the Greek branch the root became baínō, "I step," which supplies base, basis, and acrobat ("one who walks on tiptoe").

The Latin branch is where English got rich. Prefixed, venīre produces advent and adventure (ad, "toward"), convene, convenient and convent (con-, "together" — what is convenient literally "comes together" well), event (ē-, "out"), invent (in-, "to come upon" — an inventor originally found rather than made), prevent (prae-, "to come before"), intervene, and revenue (re-, "what comes back"). Through French come avenue, venue, and souvenir (subvenīre, "to come to mind").

Flag a false friend: Venus, venerate, and venom look like members of this family and are not. They belong to a separate root, wenh₁-, "to desire" — the same one that gives English win and wish.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "veniō" — I come, with a w-sound
- "venīs, venit" — you come, he or she comes
- "venīmus, venītis, veniunt" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — advent, convenient, invent, revenue

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I come"? (Veniō, opening with a w-sound.) "They come"? (Veniunt.) Which everyday English verb is the same inherited word? (Come.) What does invent literally mean? (To come upon, to find.) Do Venus and venom belong to this family? (No — a separate root meaning "to desire".)

37.5 dīcō — saying began as pointing

You know valē, the farewell from Chapter 1. Learn the verb for "say," and one of English's grandest school words falls open.

You'll want to know: dīcō — "I say"

Dīcō means "I say" or "I tell." The dictionary form is dīcere. The c is always hard, as in English "keep," so this is DEE-koh.

- dīcō — I say
- dīcis — you say, to one person

- dīcit — he says, she says
- dīcimus — we say
- dīcitis — you say, to several people
- dīcunt — they say

Latin also had a near-twin with a short i, dicāre, "to proclaim formally, to consecrate." That sibling — not dīcere itself — is where dedicate and abdicate come from.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The Proto-Indo-European root deyḱ- meant "to point out, to show." Saying is a late specialisation of showing, and the family keeps both senses visible.

Pointing survives in index ("the pointer," which is also the name of the forefinger) and indicate. Saying dominates the rest: dictate, dictator, dictionary, diction, edict, predict, contradict, and benediction ("speaking well"). A verdict is vērē dictum, "truly said." A judge is a iūdex, from iūs ("law") plus this root — the one who points out the law.

One word ties the chapter back to your first: a valedictorian is the person who says valē, the farewell you learned in Chapter 1.

The Germanic branch kept the older sense. English teach descends from Old English tæcan, "to show," and token from tācen, "a sign" — both from the same root as dīcō. Greek deíknumi ("I show") gives paradigm, literally "a thing shown side by side."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dīcō" — I say, with a hard c
- "dīcis, dīcit" — you say, he or she says
- "dīcimus, dīcitis, dīcunt" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — dictionary, verdict, predict, teach

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I say"? (Dīcō, hard c.) "They say"? (Dīcunt.)
What did the root originally mean? (To point out, to show.)
What does a valedictorian literally do? (Says valē, the farewell.)
Which everyday English verb keeps the old "show" sense? (Teach.)

37.6 videō — where seeing and knowing were the same act

You can already promise crās tē vidēbō, "tomorrow I shall see you." The verb inside that promise deserves its own lesson: it has the widest family of any word in this chapter.

You'll want to know: videō — "I see"

Videō means "I see." The dictionary form is vidēre. The v is again a w-sound, so this is WEE-day-oh.

- videō — I see
- vidēs — you see, to one person
- videt — he sees, she sees
- vidēmus — we see
- vidētis — you see, to several people
- vident — they see

The future you already know, vidēbō ("I shall see"), is built on this same stem.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The Proto-Indo-European root *weyd- meant both "to see" and, by the obvious step, "to know" — because what you have seen, you know. The Latin harvest is enormous. Plain derivatives give vision, visible, video, visit, and vista. Prefixed ones are richer: evident (ē-, "seen out, unmissable"), provide and provision (prō-, "to see ahead"), and prudent, which is simply prōvidēns worn down. Survey is super plus vidēre, "to look over"; review and revise look again; advice is what you are shown. Envy is the sourest of them: invidēre meant "to look against," to cast an eye upon what belongs to someone else.

The other branches keep the knowing half. English wit, wise, and wisdom are Germanic outcomes of the same root. Greek turned it into idéa ("the look of a thing") — English idea — and into hístōr ("one who knows because he has seen"), giving history and story. Sanskrit made it Veda, "knowledge."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "videō" — I see, with a w-sound
- "vidēs, videt" — you see, he or she sees
- "vidēmus, vidētis, vident" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — vision, evident, provide, survey, envy

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I see"? (Videō, with a w-sound.) "They see"? (Vident.) What second meaning did the root carry besides "see"? (To know.) What does envy literally describe? (Looking against someone.) Which English word for wisdom comes from this root? (Wit, and with it wise and wisdom.)

37.7 sciō — the knowing that cuts things apart

> Videō already carried a shade of "know." Latin nevertheless keeps two dedicated verbs for knowing, and this lesson takes the first.

You'll want to know: sciō — "I know"

Sciō means "I know" — know a fact, know that something is so. The dictionary form is scīre. The sc is a plain sk, so this is SKEE-oh.

- sciō — I know

- scīs — you know, to one person
- scit — he knows, she knows
- scīmus — we know
- scītis — you know, to several people
- sciunt — they know

Its negative is a single word, with the "not" fused onto the front. That is a genuinely useful thing to be able to say, and a later chapter builds it.

Latin's other knowing verb is nōscō, "to get to know, to recognise." A Roman used sciō for knowing a fact and nōscō for becoming acquainted.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Scīre is generally traced to the Proto-Indo-European root skey-, "to cut, to split" — knowing as the act of telling one thing from another. The link is the standard account rather than a certainty, and careful dictionaries mark it as probable. The same root gives Greek skhízein, "to split," behind schism and schizo-, and English shed in its old sense of dividing.

From scīre directly: science and scientific (scientia, "knowledge"), conscience and conscious (con-, "knowing with"), omniscient ("all-knowing"), and prescient. A plebiscite is a plēbis scītum, "a thing the people have decided."

The prize of the family is nice. It comes from nescius, "not knowing," which passed into Old French as nice, "simple, foolish," then drifted through "fussy" and "delicate" to today's mild compliment.

Now the false friend, and it is a big one. English know is not related to sciō. It descends from ǵneh₃-, the root behind Latin nōscō — the source of notice, notion, cognition, recognise, and ignore, and of Greek gnōsis in diagnosis.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "sciō" — I know, opening sk-
- "scīs, scit" — you know, he or she knows

- "scīmus, sciunt" — we know, they know
- the English relatives — science, conscience, nice

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I know"? (Sciō.) "They know"? (Sciunt.) What older sense probably sits under the root? (To cut or separate — telling one thing from another.) Which mild English compliment began as nescius, "not knowing"? (Nice.) Is English know from this verb? (No — from the root behind nōscō, which gives notice and cognition.)

37.8 dō — the eighth verb, and the whole set together

Seven verbs so far: to be, to have, to go, to come, to say, to see, to know. One remains, and then the set closes.

You'll want to know: dō — "I give"

Dō means "I give." The dictionary form is dare, and the a in it is short — DAH-reh, not DAH-ray. That short vowel is unusual and marks dare out as irregular.

- dō — I give
- dās — you give, to one person
- dat — he gives, she gives
- damus — we give
- datis — you give, to several people
- dant — they give

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *deh₃-, "to give." From the noun dōnum ("a gift") English takes donate, donor, condone, and pardon (per-dōnāre, "to give thoroughly, to forgive").

From the participle datum, "a thing given," come data and dative, the giving case — and also date. A Roman letter closed with data Rōmae, "given at Rome," followed by the day; the word for "given" became the word for the day itself.
trāns ("across") + dare ("to give") → trādere
The -ns drops out, and the compound means "to give across": "to hand over." That single compound splits into tradition (handed down), traitor and treason (handed over to the enemy), betray, and extradite. Dōs, dōtis ("dowry") gives dowry and endow. Greek dídōmi supplies dose and anecdote ("things not given out").
Two flags. English give is not from this root, despite the matching sense — it is Germanic and separate. And Latin compounds ending in -dere — addere ("to add"), condere ("to found") — belong to a different root, *dʰeh₁- ("to put"), the one behind Greek títhēmi and English theme and thesis. So add is not a relative of dare.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dō, dās, dat" — I give, you give, he or she gives
- the eight "I" forms — sum, habeō, eō, veniō, dīcō, videō, sciō, dō
- the eight "he or she" forms — est, habet, it, venit, dīcit, videt, scit, dat
- the English relatives of dare — donate, data, date, tradition

Before you move on

Give the eight "I" forms of this chapter. (Sum, habeō, eō, veniō, dīcō, videō, sciō, dō.) Now the eight "he or she" forms. (Est, habet, it, venit, dīcit, videt, scit, dat.) Which English words come from datum, "a thing given"? (Data, dative, and date.) What do trāns and dare make together? (To hand over — hence tradition and traitor.) Is English give a relative? (No.)

Chapter 38

Thinking, Reading, Writing

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I think, I read, I understand and I write in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, and name the English words each verb built.
>
> The chapter closes on scrībō: after learning it the reader produces all four first-person forms and all four third-person forms in sequence — cōgitō, legō, intellegō, scrībō and cōgitat, legit, intellegit, scrībit.

38.1 cōgitō — thinking as driving things together

> Sciō is knowing a fact you already hold. This verb is the work you do before you hold it.

You'll want to know: cōgitō — "I think"

Cōgitō means "I think," in the sense of turning something over. The dictionary form is cōgitāre. Both o-vowels are long and the g is hard: KOH-ghee-TAH-reh.

- cōgitō — I think
- cōgitās — you think, to one person
- cōgitat — he thinks, she thinks
- cōgitāmus — we think
- cōgitātis — you think, to several people

- cōgitant — they think

Latin's other everyday verb here is putō, "I reckon, I suppose" — lighter, closer to English "I guess."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Cōgitāre is co- ("together") welded onto agitāre, "to keep driving about" — itself the restless form of agere, "to drive, to do." Thinking, to a Roman, is not stillness: it is driving your material together and keeping it in motion.
English took the verb whole in cogitate and cogitation, and took the most quoted sentence in philosophy with it: cōgitō ergō sum, "I think, therefore I am" — whose second word is the sum you already know.
The engine underneath, agere, is one of Latin's great suppliers: act, action, agent, agenda ("things to be driven forward"), agile, agitate, exact, and navigate (nāvis, "ship," plus agere). The root is Proto-Indo-European ag-, "to drive," which in Greek became ágō and gave pedagogue ("child-leader") and demagogue.
Putāre is worth its own paragraph. It first meant "to prune a tree," then "to settle an account," then "to consider" — and English inherited all three stages: amputate, compute (and its worn-down form count), dispute, deputy, impute, and reputation.
One flag. English think is Germanic, from the root that also gives thank — a thought and a grateful thought. It is not related to cōgitō. Nor is cognition, which belongs to nōscō, the other knowing verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "cōgitō" — I think, hard g
- "cōgitās, cōgitat" — you think, he or she thinks
- "cōgitāmus, cōgitātis, cōgitant" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — cogitate, agent, agenda, compute

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I think"? (Cōgitō.) "They think"? (Cōgitant.) What two pieces is the verb built from? (Co-, "together," and agitāre, "to keep driving about".) Which philosopher's sentence carries it, and which chapter-37 verb closes that sentence? (Cōgitō ergō sum — and sum.) Which English word began as putāre, "to prune"? (Amputate — and compute, and count.)

38.2 legō — reading is picking things up

Cōgitō drives ideas together. The next verb gathers something more concrete — and it is the single richest word in this book.

You'll want to know: legō — "I read"

Legō means "I read." Its older and wider sense is "I gather, I pick out." The dictionary form is legere. Every g is hard and every vowel here is short: LEH-goh, LEH-geh-reh.

- legō — I read
- legis — you read, to one person
- legit — he reads, she reads
- legimus — we read
- legitis — you read, to several people
- legunt — they read

Reading is the younger meaning, and you can feel how it arrived: you pick the letters up, one after another. A Roman normally did this aloud.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The Proto-Indo-European root is *leg-, "to gather, to collect." Straight from legere English has legible, legend ("things to be read"), lectern, lecture, and — through Old French leçon, from lectiōnem, "a reading" — lesson. A Roman legion was a legiō, a levy of men picked out for service.

Prefixed, the verb becomes a machine. Con- gives collect (gather together); sē- gives select (gather apart); ē- gives elect (pick out). Neglect is nec legere, "not to pick up." Elegant is ēlegāns — originally an insult, "too choosy."
Greek inherited the same root as légō, "I gather, I speak," and its noun lógos, "word, reason." From those come logic, catalogue, dialogue, analogy, anthology (a flower-gathering), and the -logy ending on every science you can name.
One caution. Latin lēx, lēgis ("law") — behind legal, legislate, loyal, and privilege — is often derived from legere, "what is read out." That link is debated; treat it as a maybe.
And a false friend: English read is Germanic, from a word meaning "to advise," still visible in riddle. It has nothing to do with legō.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "legō" — I read, hard g
- "legis, legit" — you read, he or she reads
- "legimus, legitis, legunt" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — legible, collect, select, elegant

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I read"? (Legō.) "They read"? (Legunt.) What did the verb mean before it meant "read"? (To gather, to pick out.) What does neglect literally say? (Nec legere, "not to pick up".) Is English read a relative? (No — it is Germanic, from a word meaning "to advise".)

38.3 intellegō — reading between

Legō picks things out. Put one small word in front of it and you get the verb behind intelligence itself.

You'll want to know: intellegō — "I understand"

Intellegō means "I understand." The dictionary form is intellegere. It is legō with a prefix, so the endings are the ones you have just learned: in-TEL-leh-goh.

- intellegō — I understand
- intellegis — you understand, to one person
- intellegit — he understands, she understands
- intellegimus — we understand
- intellegitis — you understand, to several people
- intellegunt — they understand

Nōn intellegō — "I do not understand" — is the single most useful sentence in this chapter.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The prefix is inter, "between, among." Before an l it wore down to intel-. So intellegere is to pick out from among, to read between one thing and another. Latin says outright what English only implies: understanding is discrimination.

The family in English is one of the most familiar in the language: intellect, intellectual, intelligent, intelligence, intelligible and unintelligible, and — borrowed back through Russian — intelligentsia. Military and diplomatic intelligence is the older sense of the noun: information gathered.

There is a spelling puzzle here worth solving. Classical Latin wrote intellegō with an e, keeping the vowel of legō; later Latin respelled it intelligō. English took both, at different dates, which is why intellect keeps the e while intelligent carries the i. Two spellings, one verb.

Inter on its own gave English interval, interior, interrupt, international, and interest — that last one already met as inter est, "it is between."

Two flags. Latin had a second word for understanding, comprehendere, "to grasp together," which gives comprehend and comprehensive; it is a different image and a different root. And English understand is Germanic, a compound of under and stand — no connection at all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "intellegō" — I understand
- "intellegis, intellegit" — you understand, he or she understands
- "nōn intellegō" — I do not understand
- the English relatives — intellect, intelligent, intelligible

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I understand"? (Intellegō.) "I do not understand"? (Nōn intellegō.) What two pieces is it built from? (Inter, "between," and legere, "to pick out".) Why does English have both intellect and intelligent? (Two Latin spellings — classical intellegō, later intelligō.) Is English understand related? (No — it is Germanic.)

38.4 scrībō — writing began as scratching, and the four together

Cōgitō turns things over, legō takes words off a surface, intellegō picks them apart. One verb is left: the one that put them there.

You'll want to know: scrībō — "I write"

Scrībō means "I write." The dictionary form is scrībere. The sc is a plain sk and the ī is long and held: SKREE-boh.

- scrībō — I write
- scrībis — you write, to one person
- scrībit — he writes, she writes
- scrībimus — we write
- scrībitis — you write, to several people

- scrībunt — they write

Note that the endings match legō exactly. Two verbs, one pattern.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European skreyb^{h}-, "to cut, to scratch, to incise." That is not a metaphor. A Roman writing a note pressed a pointed stylus into a wax-coated board; writing was scratching, and the verb never forgot it.
The English family is enormous and almost entirely transparent. Bare: scribe, scribble, script, scripture, scrivener. Compounded with a noun: manuscript, "written by hand," from manus, the hand. Prefixed with a preposition, the verb runs the whole set — describe (write down), prescribe (write in advance), subscribe (write underneath, which is what signing a document was), transcribe (write across), inscribe (write into), circumscribe (write around), proscribe (post a name publicly, which in Rome meant a death sentence), ascribe, conscript, and postscript.
One quiet survivor: Old English borrowed scrībere as scrīfan, "to impose a penance in writing," and that gives shrive, shrift, and the Tuesday before Lent, Shrove Tuesday. When somebody gets short shrift, they are being given very little confession time.
Now the honest part. English write is not from this verb. It is Germanic, from a word that also meant "to scratch, to tear" — two languages reaching the same image with two different words. Scrape and scrub are likewise Germanic and unrelated, however much they sound the part.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "scrībō, scrībis, scrībit" — I write, you write, he or she writes
- this chapter's four "I" forms — cōgitō, legō, intellegō, scrībō
- the four "he or she" forms — cōgitat, legit, intellegit, scrībit
- the English relatives — scribe, script, describe, manuscript

Before you move on

Give this chapter's four "I" forms. (Cōgitō, legō, intellegō, scrībō.) Now the four "he or she" forms. (Cōgitat, legit, intellegit, scrībit.) What did scrībere's root originally mean? (To scratch, to incise — a stylus in wax.) What does subscribe literally say? (Write underneath — to sign.) Is English write from this verb? (No — it is Germanic, and happens to mean "scratch" too.)

Chapter 39

Taking, Asking, Helping, Loving

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I take, I ask, I help and I love in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, and name the English words each verb built.
>
> The chapter closes on amō: after learning it the reader produces all four first-person forms and all four third-person forms in sequence — capiō, rogō, adiuvō, amō and capit, rogat, adiuvat, amat.

39.1 capiō — the verb behind English "have"

> The last chapter closed on scrībō. This one opens by paying a debt: when you learned habeō, you were told that English have is not its descendant but belongs to another verb. This is that other verb.

You'll want to know: capiō — "I take"

Capiō means "I take," and also "I seize, I catch, I hold." The dictionary form is capere. Both vowels are short and the c is hard: KAH-pee-oh.

- capiō — I take
- capis — you take, to one person
- capit — he takes, she takes
- capimus — we take

- capitis — you take, to several people
- capiunt — they take

For "take up, take on" Latin also used sūmō, sūmere.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *keh₂p-, "to grasp." Latin made capere of it; the Germanic branch made English have and heave. So capiō and have really are the same inherited word — the resemblance habeō seemed to offer was the false one, and this is the true one.
Plain derivatives: capture, captive, captor, caption, capable, capacity. Prefixed, the a often weakens to i or e, which is what disguises the family: accept and except, intercept, anticipate ("to take beforehand"), participate (pars plus capere, "to take a part"), occupy, recuperate, and emancipate — ex plus manus plus capere, "to take out of the hand." Through French the same stem gives receive and reception, deceive and deception, conceive and concept, perceive, and susceptible. Vulgar Latin captiāre produced both chase and catch, which are therefore the same word twice.
Sūmere is sub plus emere, "to take up," and it supplies assume, consume, presume, resume, and sumptuous. Emere itself ("to buy") gives exempt, redeem, example, and premium.
Now the trap. Latin caput, "head," looks like a member of this family and is not. It is a separate word, and it — not capere — gives capital, captain, chapter, chief, and cape the headland.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "capiō" — I take, hard c
- "capis, capit" — you take, he or she takes
- "capimus, capitis, capiunt" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — capture, accept, receive, concept

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I take"? (Capiō.) "They take"? (Capiunt.) Which English verb is the same inherited word? (Have — and heave.) What does emancipate literally say? (To take out of the hand.) Do capital and captain belong here? (No — those are from caput, "head".)

39.2 rogō — asking as reaching straight out

Dīcō tells someone something. Capiō takes. This verb is what you do when you want to take and have to ask first.

You'll want to know: rogō — "I ask"

Rogō means "I ask" — both asking a question and asking for a thing. The dictionary form is rogāre. The g is hard: ROH-goh.

- rogō — I ask
- rogās — you ask, to one person
- rogat — he asks, she asks
- rogāmus — we ask
- rogātis — you ask, to several people
- rogant — they ask

Latin's harder-edged partner is petō, petere, "I seek, I aim at, I ask for" — asking with an object in view.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Rogāre is generally traced to the Proto-Indo-European root reg-, "to move in a straight line, to direct" — asking pictured as reaching straight out toward somebody. That last step is the standard account rather than a certainty, so hold it loosely. The root itself is a giant: it gives Latin regō ("I rule") and rēx ("king"), hence regal, regent, region, direct, correct, and erect. In the Germanic branch it gives English right; in Sanskrit it gives the raja of maharaja.

From rogāre itself English has interrogate ("to ask thoroughly"), arrogant and arrogate (ad-rogāre, "to claim for oneself"), abrogate ("to ask away," to repeal), derogatory, and surrogate (sub-rogāre, "to ask in someone's place").
Petere runs a second family: petition, appetite, compete, repeat, impetus, perpetual, and centripetal. Its root meant "to fly, to rush," and that is why Latin penna, "feather," belongs to it — so pen is a cousin of petō, and Greek supplies helicopter, a spiral wing.
Two flags. English ask is Germanic and unrelated. And rogue is often guessed to come from rogāre; its origin is genuinely unknown.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "rogō" — I ask, hard g
- "rogās, rogat" — you ask, he or she asks
- "rogāmus, rogātis, rogant" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — interrogate, arrogant, prerogative

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I ask"? (Rogō.) "They ask"? (Rogant.) Which root is it generally traced to, and how sure is that? (reg-, "to move in a straight line" — the standard account, not a certainty.) Which everyday writing tool comes from petere's family? (Pen, from penna, "feather".)

39.3 adiuvō — the verb inside "aid"

You can ask now — rogō. This is the verb for what you are hoping the other person will do.

You'll want to know: adiuvō — "I help"

Adiuvō means "I help." The dictionary form is adiuvāre. Two sounds to place: the i between vowels is a consonant, said like English y, and the v is a w. So this is ah-DYOO-woh.

- adiuvō — I help
- adiuvās — you help, to one person
- adiuvat — he helps, she helps
- adiuvāmus — we help
- adiuvātis — you help, to several people
- adiuvant — they help

The plain verb iuvō, iuvāre, means "to help" and also "to please," and ad- simply aims it at somebody.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Latin built a busier form of adiuvāre — adiūtāre — and Old French wore that down to aidier. English borrowed it as aid, and later took the French agent-noun as aide, which is why first aid and an aide-de-camp both hold this Roman verb without showing a letter of it.
Straight from Latin come adjutant (adiūtor, "a helper") and adjuvant, the medical term for something given alongside a treatment to help it work. A bishop's assistant is a coadjutor.
Latin's other word for help is auxilium, and its family is a surprise. It comes from augēre, "to increase" — help as an increase of your strength. That verb gives auxiliary, augment, auction (a sale where the price grows), author (auctor, one who makes a thing grow), and the month August, for the emperor Augustus, "the increased one."
The Germanic branch gives English eke — and a nickname is an eke-name, an also-name, with the n of an stuck to the front.
Two flags, and the first is a real trap. Iuvō ("help") is not the source of juvenile. That comes from iuvenis, "young," a separate word which also gives junior and rejuvenate. And English help is Germanic, unrelated to any of this.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "adiuvō" — I help, with a y and a w inside

- "adiuvās, adiuvat" — you help, he or she helps
- "adiuvāmus, adiuvātis, adiuvant" — we, you all, they
- the English relatives — aid, aide, adjutant, adjuvant

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I help"? (Adiuvō.) "They help"? (Adiuvant.) How is the i in the middle pronounced? (Like English y.) Which two everyday English words came from it through French? (Aid and aide.) Is juvenile a relative? (No — that is iuvenis, "young," a different word.)

39.4 amō — the fourth verb, and the four together

Three verbs so far in this chapter: to take, to ask, to help. One remains, and it is the one every Latin class in history has started with.

You'll want to know: amō — "I love"

Amō means "I love," and, more mildly, "I like." The dictionary form is amāre. The a of amō is short, the ā of amās is long.

- amō — I love
- amās — you love, to one person
- amat — he loves, she loves
- amāmus — we love
- amātis — you love, to several people
- amant — they love

Amō, amās, amat is the oldest teaching formula in the subject. You meet it here in its proper place: as the last of four ordinary verbs.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Begin with the honest limit. Almost every other verb in this book walks back to a reconstructed Proto-Indo-European root. Amāre does not. It is usually explained as a nursery word — the am- sound small children make — which is a respectable account and not a reconstruction. The trail stops earlier here, and saying so is better than inventing a root.

The forward journey makes up for it. Amateur came through French and means "one who loves it"; the sneer is a late arrival. Beside it stand amatory, amorous, enamoured, and paramour ("by love"). From Latin's word for "friend," built on the same am- (a later lesson teaches it), come amicable, amity, and — Spanish being another daughter of Latin — amigo. Amanda means "she who is to be loved."

The best of them is upside down. Put the negative in- on that word for "friend":

in- ("not") + amīcus ("friend") → inimīcus

The a weakens to i inside the compound, and "not-friend" is English enemy, and enmity, and inimical. The word for an enemy is the word for love with a "not" in front of it.

Two flags. Amen is Hebrew, borrowed through Greek, and has nothing to do with amō. And amenable comes through French amener, "to lead to."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "amō, amās, amat" — I love, you love, he or she loves
- this chapter's four "I" forms — capiō, rogō, adiuvō, amō
- the four "he or she" forms — capit, rogat, adiuvat, amat
- the English relatives of amāre — amateur, amicable, enemy

Before you move on

Give this chapter's four "I" forms. (Capiō, rogō, adiuvō, amō.)
Now the four "he or she" forms. (Capit, rogat, adiuvat, amat.)
Why does this lesson name no ancient root? (Because amāre has none securely reconstructed — it is taken as a nursery word.)

Which English word is Latin's "friend" with a "not" on the front? (Enemy.)

Chapter 40

Hearing, Sleeping, Sitting, Standing

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I hear, I sleep, I sit and I stand in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, name the conjugation each belongs to, and tell an English word inherited from the shared ancestor apart from one borrowed out of Latin.
>
> The chapter closes on stō: after learning it the reader produces all four first-person forms and all four third-person forms in sequence — audiō, dormiō, sedeō, stō and audit, dormit, sedet, stat — sorts stand from station as inherited against borrowed, and reaches back three chapters to retrieve sum and eō, neither of which had been revisited since chapter 37.

40.1 audiō — hearing, and the word for obeying

> The last chapter ended on amō, whose trail stopped early — no secure ancient root to walk back to. This verb is the opposite case: its trail runs all the way back, and forward into a surprising English word. It is also the natural partner of rogō: you ask, and then you hear.

You'll want to know: audiō — "I hear"

Audiō means "I hear," and also "I listen to." The dictionary form is audīre. The au is one sound, close to English ow in "now."

- audiō — I hear
- audīs — you hear, to one person
- audit — he hears, she hears
- audīmus — we hear
- audītis — you hear, to several people
- audiunt — they hear

This is a fourth-conjugation verb — the group whose dictionary form ends in -īre. Note the "they" form: audiunt, with a u slipped in.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *au-, "to perceive." Latin built audīre on it, and English borrowed the results wholesale: audio, audible, audience, audition, auditor, auditorium.
Audit is the best of them. An audit was literally a hearing: accounts were read out loud and checked by ear, long before anyone checked them by eye. The word kept the procedure and lost the sound.
Now the one nobody guesses. Put ob- ("toward") in front of audīre and Latin gives oboedīre, "to listen toward" — which through French becomes English obey, obedient and disobey. To obey is to listen hard at someone. The town crier's oyez is the same verb, an Old French imperative: "hear ye."
The Greek branch of *au- produced words for perceiving in general: aesthetic, and anaesthesia, "no perception at all."
One flag. English hear is not a relative. It is Germanic, from another root — the one that also gives Greek akoúein and so English acoustic. Audio and acoustic mean nearly the same thing and are not cousins.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "audiō" — I hear
- "audīs, audit" — you hear, he or she hears
- "audīmus, audītis, audiunt" — we, you all, they

- the pair from the last chapter beside it — rogō, amō
- the English relatives — audience, audit, obey

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I hear"? (Audiō.) "They hear"? (Audiunt.) Which conjugation is it? (The fourth — the -īre group.) What was an audit originally, and which everyday word is ob- plus audīre? (A hearing, accounts read aloud — and obey.) Which verb from the last chapter had no securely reconstructed root, and which one means "I ask"? (Amō, and rogō.)

40.2 dormiō — the verb you do with your senses off

Audiō is hearing; videō, from an earlier chapter, is seeing. This verb is the state in which you do neither.

You'll want to know: dormiō — "I sleep"

Dormiō means "I sleep." The dictionary form is dormīre. The first o is short, the ī of dormīre is long: dor-MEE-reh.

- dormiō — I sleep
- dormīs — you sleep, to one person
- dormit — he sleeps, she sleeps
- dormīmus — we sleep
- dormītis — you sleep, to several people
- dormiunt — they sleep

This is the same fourth conjugation as the verb before it, and it takes the same endings — including that u in dormiunt. Two verbs in the group is enough to hear the pattern.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *drem-, "to sleep." It is a quiet root: Sanskrit drāti, Greek darthánein, Old Church Slavonic drěmati. Latin dormīre is the western member, and English inherited none of it — every English word here is a loan.

Borrowed whole: dormitory (dormītōrium, "a sleeping place"), and its clipped form dorm. Dormant, from French, is a thing that is sleeping rather than dead. A dormer window began as the window of a sleeping room.

Now a warning, because this one is a trap dressed as a gift. Dormouse looks like the perfect example and is not securely one. The animal's name is attested in English before the French word for a sleeper it is supposed to come from, and the -mouse half may simply be English speakers making sense of a syllable they did not recognise. A hook you have to defend is not a hook.

Latin's other word for sleep is a noun from a different root: English took insomnia ("no sleep") and somnolent from it, and soporific from its cousin sopor. The verb gave the rooms you sleep in; the noun gave the sleep.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dormiō" — I sleep
- "dormīs, dormit" — you sleep, he or she sleeps
- "dormīmus, dormītis, dormiunt" — we, you all, they
- the two senses this verb switches off — audiō, videō
- the English relatives — dormitory, dormant

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I sleep"? (Dormiō.) "They sleep"? (Dormiunt.) Which conjugation, and which other verb shares it here? (The fourth — with audiō.) Why is dormouse not a safe example? (Because the connection is not secure — the English word is older than the French one it supposedly comes from.) What does insomnia literally mean? (No sleep.) Which verb means "I see"? (Videō.)

40.3 sedeō — the same word English already had

Dormīre left English nothing but loans. This verb is the reverse, and it lets us name a distinction this book has been using without stating it.

You'll want to know: sedeō — "I sit"

Sedeō means "I sit," and also "I stay put." The dictionary form is sedēre, with a long ē.

- sedeō — I sit
- sedēs — you sit, to one person
- sedet — he sits, she sits
- sedēmus — we sit
- sedētis — you sit, to several people
- sedent — they sit

This one is second conjugation — the -ēre group. That long ē is the whole signal, so give it room.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *sed-, "to sit," and English has it by two different routes — which is the point.
Inherited, down the Germanic line, with no Latin involved: sit, seat, set ("cause to sit"), settle, saddle. Two are hidden: nest is "the place where one sits down," and soot is what settles.
Borrowed, later, out of Latin sedēre: session, sedentary, sediment, sedate, preside, reside, dissident ("sitting apart"), assiduous ("sitting at it"), possess. Siege is a seat too — an army sitting down in front of a town.
Hold the two apart. An inherited word came down to English from the shared ancestor without passing through Latin; a borrowed word was taken out of Latin, usually centuries later. Sit and session are one ancient word by two roads, and they look nothing alike because one wore down for three thousand years while the other was copied out of a book. You met this shape when capiō turned out to be the true relative of English have, with the borrowed capture beside it.

One flag. Sedan is often attached to sedēre, and the connection is not established. Leave it out.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "sedeō" — I sit, long ē in sedēre
- "sedēs, sedet" — you sit, he or she sits
- "sedēmus, sedētis, sedent" — we, you all, they
- the three verbs of this chapter so far — audiō, dormiō, sedeō
- the inherited word, then the borrowed one — sit, session

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I sit"? (Sedeō.) "They sit"? (Sedent.) Which conjugation? (The second — the long -ēre group.) Is English sit borrowed from Latin, and what about session? (Sit is inherited, by a different road; session is borrowed.) Which earlier verb showed that same shape, and why is dormouse not usable that way? (Capiō — cousin of have, source of capture; and dormouse's link to sleeping is not secure.)

40.4 stō — standing, and the four together

Three verbs so far: hearing, sleeping, sitting. One remains. It is the opposite of the last, and it shows the inherited-and-borrowed pattern sedeō just taught all over.

You'll want to know: stō — "I stand"

Stō means "I stand," and by extension "I stay." The dictionary form is stāre. Two letters in the "I" form makes it the shortest verb you have met.

- stō — I stand
- stās — you stand, to one person
- stat — he stands, she stands
- stāmus — we stand
- stātis — you stand, to several people
- stant — they stand

This is first conjugation, the -āre group, and in the present tense perfectly regular: the long ā runs through every form after the first.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European sta-, "to stand." Sort the English by the two roads that gave sit and session.
Inherited: stand — with an extra n wedged into the middle, which is why it looks unlike stō — plus stead (as in instead), steed, stall and stool.
Borrowed from stāre: station, statue, status, state, stable, estate, stage, substance, circumstance ("standing around"), obstacle ("standing in the way"), constant, instant, distance. Two are so worn down they hide: constāre, "to stand at a price," is English cost, and restāre, "to stand back," is the rest that means the remainder. The doubled-up sistere gives consist, resist, insist and assist.
Set this beside the verb for being. Sum and est are inherited cousins of English am and is — the same two-road picture, only there the English side kept the meaning exactly. And set it against eō, "I go": stāre is what you do when you are not going, and English holds both halves, station from this verb and exit from that one.
One flag. English still is often thrown in here and does not belong.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "stō, stās, stat" — I stand, you stand, he or she stands
- this chapter's four "I" forms — audiō, dormiō, sedeō, stō
- the four "he or she" forms — audit, dormit, sedet, stat
- the two from an earlier chapter beside them — sum, eō
- inherited, then borrowed — stand, station

Before you move on

Give this chapter's four "I" forms. (Audiō, dormiō, sedeō, stō.) Now the four "he or she" forms. (Audit, dormit, sedet, stat.) Which of the four is second conjugation? (Sedeō — the long -ēre group.) Which English word for standing is inherited, which is borrowed, and what is cost taken apart? (Stand inherited, station borrowed; constāre, what a thing stands at.) Which earlier verb has am and is as its inherited English cousins, and which one means "I go"? (Sum, and eō — the verb behind exit.)

Chapter 41

Walking, Running, Opening, Closing

Modes: voice (4) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I walk, I run, I open and I close in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, name the conjugation each belongs to, and say what a Latin prefix does to the verb it sits on.
>
> The chapter closes on claudō: after learning it the reader produces all four first-person forms and all four third-person forms in sequence — ambulō, currō, aperiō, claudō and ambulat, currit, aperit, claudit — reads include/exclude beside accept/except and intellegō as one prefix rule, and so retrieves capiō and intellegō from two and three chapters back, neither of them revisited before now.

41.1 ambulō — walking about

> The last chapter left you sitting and standing — sedeō and stō, both of them staying put. This chapter moves.

You'll want to know: ambulō — "I walk"

Ambulō means "I walk," with a flavour of walking about rather than walking to somewhere. The dictionary form is ambulāre.

- ambulō — I walk
- ambulās — you walk, to one person

- ambulat — he walks, she walks
- ambulāmus — we walk
- ambulātis — you walk, to several people
- ambulant — they walk

Like stō, this is first conjugation — the -āre group — with the same endings hung on a longer stem.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Start with the honest limit, because this word has one. The front half is secure: amb-, "around," the same element as in ambi-. The back half is not settled — usually connected with an old root meaning "to wander" or "to go," but the join has never been nailed down, so the standard gloss is a reasonable guess rather than a proof.

The harvest is not in doubt at all. Amble came through French and kept the leisurely sense exactly. Ambulatory is both an adjective and the walking-gallery of a church. Perambulate gave the Victorian perambulator and, clipped, the pram. A preamble walks in front (prae-, "before").

Two compounds are worth saying out loud. A funambulist walks a rope (fūnis). A somnambulist walks in sleep — and somnus is the Latin sleep-noun named in the last chapter, so that word is two pieces you already have.

The best is ambulance. A French military hospital that followed the army instead of waiting for it was an hôpital ambulant — a walking hospital. English took the second word and forgot the first, so the vehicle is named for moving.

Two flags. English walk is Germanic and no relation. And French aller, "to go" — with alley behind it — is often derived from ambulāre by heavy wear, but that derivation is disputed. Do not lean on it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ambulō" — I walk
- "ambulās, ambulat" — you walk, he or she walks

- "ambulāmus, ambulātis, ambulant" — we, you all, they
- the two still verbs it moves away from — sedeō, stō
- the English relatives — amble, preamble, ambulance

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I walk"? (Ambulō.) "They walk"? (Ambulant.) Which conjugation, and which earlier verb shares it? (The first, the -āre group — with stō.) Which half of the word is uncertain, and why is a vehicle called an ambulance? (The back half; and because the hospital walked — it followed the army.) Which verb means "I sit"? (Sedeō.)

41.2 currō — running, and the root that came by two roads

Ambulō is walking about, and its own back half is a guess. This verb is the fast one, and its ancestry is not a guess at all.

You'll want to know: currō — "I run"

Currō means "I run," and also "I race." The dictionary form is currere. Every vowel is short, the *r*s are rolled, the c is hard: KOOR-reh-reh.

- currō — I run
- curris — you run, to one person
- currit — he runs, she runs
- currimus — we run
- curritis — you run, to several people
- currunt — they run

This is third conjugation, whose dictionary form ends in -ere with a short second-to-last vowel. Say currere with the stress at the front to hear the difference from the long -ēre of the second.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *kers-, "to run," and it reached English by two very different roads.
Through the Latin verb: current (a running of water, then of electricity), currency (money that runs), cursor, cursive, course, discourse, occur ("to run to meet"), recur, excursion, precursor, and succour — sub- plus currere, to run underneath someone and hold them up. Corridor is Italian for "a running-place," and curriculum is simply a racecourse.
Through a wagon: the Gauls had a word karros for a war chariot, from the very same root, and Latin borrowed it as carrus. From that noun English has car, carry, carriage, cargo, charge (which began as loading a wagon), and career — first a road for carts, then the speed you take one at. Carpenter is there too: a carpentārius made wagons.
Set this beside veniō, "I come." Veniō is arriving; currō is the speed. English keeps them apart the same way — an event comes out, a course is the running of it.
Two flags. English hurry is not related. And the claim that English horse belongs to this root is a proposal, not a settled fact.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "currō" — I run, hard c, rolled r
- "curris, currit" — you run, he or she runs
- "currimus, curritis, currunt" — we, you all, they
- the three speeds so far — stō, ambulō, currō
- the relatives — current, curriculum, car

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I run"? (Currō.) "They run"? (Currunt.) Which conjugation? (The third — short -ere.) What is a curriculum literally, and how did car get into the family? (A racecourse; and through a Gaulish wagon-word Latin borrowed, from the same root.) Which earlier verb means "I come", the arriving to this verb's speed, and which means "I walk about"? (Veniō, and ambulō.)

41.3 aperiō — to un-cover

Currō showed one root reaching English by two roads. This verb shows something rarer: one root standing inside two Latin words that mean the opposite of each other.

You'll want to know: aperiō — "I open"

Aperiō means "I open," and also "I uncover, I reveal." The dictionary form is aperīre, with a long ī.

- aperiō — I open
- aperīs — you open, to one person
- aperit — he opens, she opens
- aperīmus — we open
- aperītis — you open, to several people
- aperiunt — they open

This is fourth conjugation, the -īre group, and it takes exactly the endings audiō and dormiō took — including that u before the ending in aperiunt.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Aperīre is taken apart as ap-, "off, away," welded onto an old root *wer- meaning "to cover." To open, in Latin, is to cover away.
Now the elegant part. Latin has a second verb on the very same root: operīre, "to cover, to shut" — op-, "over," on wer-*. The two verbs differ in one syllable at the front, and that syllable turns covering into uncovering:

- aperīre — cover away → open
- operīre — cover over → shut

English took both halves and never noticed they were a pair. From the opening verb: aperture, an opening; aperitif, the drink that opens a meal; and, worn down through French ouvrir, overt and overture. From the shutting verb, mostly with co- in front (cooperīre, "to cover completely"): cover, covert, and discover, which is dis- undoing the covering. Two French phrases came in whole: a curfew is couvre-feu, "cover the fire," and a kerchief is couvre-chef.
Two honest notes. The Vulgar Latin descendants of these verbs blurred into each other, which is why French ouvrir and couvrir rhyme today. And April — you will see it explained as "the opening month," from aperīre. That is folk etymology; the real origin is unsettled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "aperiō" — I open
- "aperīs, aperit" — you open, he or she opens
- "aperīmus, aperītis, aperiunt" — we, you all, they
- the pair, and what each prefix does — aperīre, cover away; operīre, cover over
- the chapter so far — ambulō, currō, aperiō

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I open", and how "they open"? (Aperiō, aperiunt.) Which conjugation, and what does aperīre literally say? (The fourth, the -īre group; and cover away — un-cover.) What is its opposite, and what does that prefix change? (Operīre — op-, "over," so cover over.) Which English word is couvre-feu, is April from this verb, and which verb means "I run"? (Curfew; no, that is folk etymology; and currō.)

41.4 claudō — closing, and the four together

Aperiō opened by covering away, and named its own Latin opposite. But that opposite is not the verb a Roman reached for to shut a door. This one is, and it is the word English says every day.

You'll want to know: claudō — "I close"

Claudō means "I close," "I shut in." The dictionary form is claudere. The au is one sound, as in audiō; the c is hard: KLOW-deh-reh.

- claudō — I close
- claudis — you close, to one person
- claudit — he closes, she closes
- claudimus — we close
- clauditis — you close, to several people
- claudunt — they close

Like currō, this is third conjugation — short -ere. That is three classes across this chapter's four verbs, worth noticing and not worth memorising: the class only tells you the endings.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European klau-, and it did not mean "shut." It meant hook or peg — the crooked wood you jam a door with. The action is named after the object, and Latin kept it: clāvis, "key."
English close is this verb. Not a cousin — the verb itself, borrowed through French from clausum. That matters, because you learned to sort the two ways apart: sit was inherited, session was a loan. Close is a loan that stopped looking like one. Beside it stand closet, closure, disclose, and the noun clause. A cloister is a claustrum, a bolted place, and sluice is exclūsa, "water shut out."
Then the prefixes, where the chapter's two halves meet. Claudere takes them by the handful: include, exclude, conclude, preclude, recluse. Set include and exclude beside accept and except — the same two prefixes on capere. Set them beside intellegō, where inter- turns picking into understanding. A prefix carries the meaning.
From clāvis, the key: clavicle (a little key — the collarbone), clef, and conclave, a room locked with a key. Greek kleís is the same inherited word and means both those things too.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "claudō, claudis, claudit" — I close, you close, he or she closes
- this chapter's four "I" forms — ambulō, currō, aperiō, claudō
- the four "he or she" forms — ambulat, currit, aperit, claudit
- two prefixes, two verbs — include, exclude; accept, except

Before you move on

Give this chapter's four "I" forms, then the four "he or she" forms. (Ambulō, currō, aperiō, claudō; ambulat, currit, aperit, claudit.) Which two share the third conjugation? (Currō and claudō.) Is English close inherited or borrowed, and what did the root name? (Borrowed — this Latin verb itself; and a hook or peg.) Which verb gives accept and except, the same prefixes as include and exclude, and which is inter- plus "to pick out"? (Capiō, and intellegō.)

Chapter 42

Bringing, Getting, Playing, Waiting

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I bring, I get, I play and I wait in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, and say whether a verb is welded together from two roots, built from a prefix on an older verb, or of ancestry nobody has settled.
>
> The chapter closes on exspectō: after learning it the reader produces all four first-person forms and all four third-person forms in sequence — ferō, accipiō, lūdō, exspectō and fert, accipit, lūdit, exspectat — sorts a verb's children from its siblings (expect against spectacle), and reaches back five chapters to retrieve videō and dō, neither of which had been revisited since chapter 37.

42.1 ferō — one verb, two ancestors

> Claudō shut the door that aperiō opened, and its root named a hook. This verb is stranger: it is not one word at all.

You'll want to know: ferō — "I bring"

Ferō means "I carry," and so also "I bring" and "I bear." The dictionary form is ferre, not the -ere you would expect.

- ferō — I bring
- fers — you bring, to one person

- fert — he brings, she brings
- ferimus — we bring
- fertis — you bring, to several people
- ferunt — they bring

Say fers and fert slowly. Every verb so far put a vowel between the stem and the ending — claudis, claudit. Here the ending is jammed straight onto fer-. That happens in the s, t and r forms only; ferimus and ferunt keep their vowel.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Ferre comes from Proto-Indo-European *bʰer-, "to carry." English inherited that root directly, as the verb bear — so ferō and bear are blood relatives, not borrowings.

Now the odd part. To say "I brought," a Roman said tulī; the participle was lātum. Neither is from bʰer-*: both come from *telh₂-, "to lift." One verb, two ancestries, welded together because each root had gone missing where the other survived. Grammarians call this suppletion, and you met a smaller case: sum, "I am," takes its past from another root.

Both halves are generous. From ferre: transfer (carry across), refer, prefer, confer, offer, suffer (bear from under), and fertile, a field that carries a crop. Differ is dis- plus ferre, "to carry apart" — and defer is that same Latin word split into two English ones. From lātum: relate and translate.

Set this beside dō, "I give." Dō hands a thing over; ferō carries it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ferō, fers, fert" — I bring, you bring, he or she brings
- "ferimus, fertis, ferunt" — we, you all, they
- the two past pieces from the other root — tulī, lātum
- the giving verb beside the carrying one — dō, ferō

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I bring", and "he brings"? (Ferō, fert.) Which two forms keep a vowel before the ending? (Ferimus and ferunt.) How many roots make this verb, and what is that called? (Two — bʰer-* and telh₂-*; suppletion.) Which English verb is the same word as ferō by inheritance? (Bear.) Which earlier verb means "I give", and which means "I close"? (Dō, and claudō.)

42.2 accipiō and obtineō — getting, two ways

Ferō carried a thing toward somebody. These two verbs are what happens at the other end — and neither is a new word. Each is a prefix welded onto a verb you have.

You'll want to know: accipiō — "I receive"

Accipiō means "I receive," "I get," "I accept." Latin has no all-purpose verb for English get; it uses the precise one.

- accipiō — I receive
- accipis — you receive, to one person
- accipit — he receives, she receives
- accipimus — we receive
- accipitis — you receive, to several people
- accipiunt — they receive

Those endings should feel familiar: they are capiō's, because capiō is what is inside this word.

You'll want to know: obtineō — "I get hold of"

Obtineō is the other half of "get": not receive but acquire and keep — getting hold of a thing and holding it. It is second conjugation, -ēre: obtineō, obtinēs, obtinet, obtinēmus, obtinētis, obtinent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Accipere is ad, "to, toward," plus capere, "to take." Take it toward yourself, and you have received it. Two things happened at the seam. The d of ad turned into the c it was leaning on — ad-capere becoming accipere. And the a of capere, now buried in a longer word, thinned to i. English accept and acceptance come from here.
ob ("over against") + tenēre ("to hold") → obtinēre
The same thinning shows: e to i. English took it whole as obtain.
Now put adiuvō next to them. It is ad plus iuvāre — the same ad, sitting in front of a vowel, where it had nothing to lean on and so stayed itself. One prefix, two states: kept in adiuvō, swallowed in accipiō.
Two flags. English receive is from recipere, a different prefix on the same verb. And retain and contain belong to the plain hold-verb at large, not to obtinēre.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "accipiō, accipis, accipit" — I, you, he or she receives
- "obtineō, obtinēs, obtinet" — I, you, he or she gets hold of
- the verb inside accipiō — capiō
- the prefix in three states — adiuvō, accipiō, obtineō

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I receive", and "they receive"? (Accipiō, accipiunt.) Which verb is buried inside it, and what happened to that verb's a? (Capiō; it thinned to *i.) What are the two pieces of obtinēre? (Ob, "over against," and the verb "to hold.") Which earlier verb shows the same ad- unswallowed? (Adiuvō.) And which verb means "I bring"? (Ferō.)

42.3 lūdō — playing, and being played

Accipiō and obtineō were built out of older parts. This verb is the opposite case: a short word whose own parentage is unknown, and which still went on to father a crowd.

You'll want to know: lūdō — "I play"

Lūdō means "I play" — a game, a sport, an instrument, a part on stage. The dictionary form is lūdere, with a long ū and a short e.

- lūdō — I play
- lūdis — you play, to one person
- lūdit — he plays, she plays
- lūdimus — we play
- lūditis — you play, to several people
- lūdunt — they play

Third conjugation, the short -ere group — the endings of claudō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Begin with the honest limit. Where lūdere came from before Latin is not settled. Dictionaries offer a root along the lines of loid-*, "play," but specialists disagree about its form and about whether the Greek word usually cited belongs at all. Some sources state a root confidently; they are more confident than the evidence.
The noun is lūdus, and it means two things at once: a game, and a school. The elementary school where a Roman child learned letters was the lūdus litterārius — the place you went to legō and scrībō, called by the word for play. Both senses sit in the one Latin word.
The English harvest is almost all about deception, because lūdere also meant "to make sport of." Illusion is in- plus the root: a playing-upon. Delude plays you down, elude plays you away, allude plays toward a thing without naming it, and to collude is to play together against someone. Ludicrous kept the plain sense — fit for a game. A prelude plays before, an interlude between.
Two flags. English play is Germanic and is no relation. And the board game Ludo, sold in Britain from the 1890s, is named with exactly the form you just said: lūdō, "I play."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "lūdō, lūdis, lūdit" — I play, you play, he or she plays
- "lūdimus, lūditis, lūdunt" — we, you all, they
- the two things a lūdus was — a game, and a school
- what you did at that school — legō, scrībō

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I play", and "they play"? (Lūdō, lūdunt.) Is this verb's older ancestry known? (No — it is unsettled, whatever a confident dictionary says.) What were the two senses of lūdus, and which two earlier verbs happened at the second one? (Game and school; legō and scrībō.) Which English word means a playing-upon? (Illusion.) And which verb means "I receive"? (Accipiō.)

42.4 exspectō — waiting is looking out

> Lūdō was a plain word with an unknown parent. This last verb of the chapter is the reverse: you can see straight through it to its two pieces.

You'll want to know: exspectō — "I wait"

Exspectō means "I wait," and more exactly "I wait for" — it usually has an object. It is first conjugation, the -āre group.

- exspectō — I wait
- exspectās — you wait, to one person
- exspectat — he waits, she waits
- exspectāmus — we wait
- exspectātis — you wait, to several people

- exspectant — they wait

Romans wrote it both exspectō and expectō, since only one s was ever pronounced. The longer spelling is the one that shows the seam, so it is the one worth learning.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Exspectāre is ex, "out," plus spectāre, "to watch." To wait is to look out for. And spectāre is itself built: it is the over-and-over form of specere, "to look" — so the middle piece already means "keep looking."
English expect is the direct child. Be careful with the rest.
Spectacle, spectator, inspect, respect and suspect are not from exspectāre; they are its brothers and sisters, the same spectāre with other prefixes on the front. Saying they come from "expect" gets the family tree upside down.
Set this beside videō, "I see." Videō is a wholly different root, and its English children — vision, video, evident — are a separate family. Latin had one word for the eye receiving a thing and another for the eye going out after it.
One good flag. English wait looks Romance, because it reached English through French. It is not. It is a Germanic word the French had borrowed first, and its true relatives are watch and wake.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "exspectō, exspectās, exspectat" — I, you, he or she waits
- this chapter's four "I" forms — ferō, accipiō, lūdō, exspectō
- the four "he or she" forms — fert, accipit, lūdit, exspectat
- the two eye-verbs — videō, exspectō

Before you move on

Give the chapter's four "I" forms, then the four "he or she" forms. (Ferō, accipiō, lūdō, exspectō; fert, accipit, lūdit, exspectat.) What does exspectāre literally say? (Look out — ex plus spectāre.) Is spectacle a child of exspectāre? (No — a sibling, from spectāre directly.) Which verb is welded from two roots, and which two are prefix plus an older verb? (Ferō; accipiō and obtineō.) Which verb's own ancestry is unknown, and which earlier verb means "I see"? (Lūdō; and videō.)

Chapter 43

Answering, Meeting, Buying

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I answer, I meet and I buy in Latin, produce the he-or-she form of each, and read an English word by recovering the older sense of the Latin verb inside it.
>
> The chapter closes on emō: after learning it the reader produces all three first-person forms and all three third-person forms in sequence — respondeō, conveniō, emō and respondet, convenit, emit — recovers redeem and example from the root's older sense 'take', and ranks the four getting-verbs capiō, accipiō, obtineō, emō against dō, retrieving capiō and dō from chapters 39 and 37.

43.1 respondeō — to pledge back

> Exspectō waited by looking out. This verb is what ends the waiting — and what a Roman heard in it was not "reply" but something much more binding.

You'll want to know: respondeō — "I answer"

Respondeō means "I answer," "I reply." The dictionary form is respondēre, with a long ē — second conjugation.

- respondeō — I answer
- respondēs — you answer, to one person
- respondet — he answers, she answers

- respondēmus — we answer
- respondētis — you answer, to several people
- respondent — they answer

The -eō of the I-form and the long -ē- everywhere after it are the mark of that class, exactly as in obtineō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Respondēre is re-, "back," plus spondēre, "to pledge, to promise solemnly." So an answer, at the root, is a pledge given back — you are not merely saying words, you are matching someone's undertaking with your own.

Spondēre was a heavy word. Its relative in Greek is spondḗ, a libation — wine poured out to seal an agreement — and in the plural it simply means a truce. Promises were made by pouring.

The English family is unusually wide. Straight from this verb: respond, response, responsible (able to answer for a thing) and correspond, two people answering each other by letter. From spondēre on its own: a sponsor is one who pledges. From its participle spōnsus and spōnsa, "pledged," English has spouse — a husband or wife is, etymologically, a promise. And dē-spondēre, "to promise away," gives despondent, the state of having given your hope to somebody else.

Set the verb among the ones you have. Rogō asks, audiō hears, sciō knows, dīcō says, and respondeō answers. Five verbs, one conversation — and audiō is the one that made obey, through ob-audīre, "to listen toward." Latin thought obeying was a kind of answering too.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "respondeō, respondēs, respondet" — I, you, he or she answers
- "respondēmus, respondētis, respondent" — we, you all, they
- the conversation, in order — rogō, audiō, sciō, dīcō, respondeō
- what the root really means — to pledge

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I answer", and "they answer"? (Respondeō, respondent.) What are its two pieces, and what does the second one mean? (Re- and spondēre, "to pledge.") Why is a husband a spouse? (Because spōnsus means pledged.) Which five verbs make the conversation? (Rogō, audiō, sciō, dīcō, respondeō.) And which verb means "I wait"? (Exspectō.)

43.2 conveniō and occurrō — coming together, running into

Respondeō answered by pledging back. This verb needs nothing new from you: both halves of it are already yours.

You'll want to know: conveniō — "I meet"

Conveniō means "I meet," "I come together with." Fourth conjugation, because veniō is:

- conveniō — I meet
- convenīs — you meet, to one person
- convenit — he meets, she meets
- convenīmus — we meet
- convenītis — you meet, to several people
- conveniunt — they meet

You'll want to know: occurrō — "I run into"

Occurrō is the other kind of meeting: not arranged, but stumbled into. Third conjugation, like currō: occurrō, occurris, occurrit, occurrimus, occurritis, occurrunt.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Convenīre is con-, "together," plus venīre, "to come." To meet is to come together. English has convene, convention, a convent

(those who came together), and convenient, which began as things coming together well. A covenant is this verb's present participle, picked up through Old French.
Occurrere is ob-, "toward, against," plus currere, "to run." To meet by chance is to run into — the English idiom says the same thing, and gives occur. A thought that occurs to you has run at you.
That con- is worth collecting. It sits on cōgitō, "I think" — con- plus a verb of shaking, so thinking is shaking things together. It sits on claudō: conclūdere shuts things in together, whence conclude. And it sits on ferō, where cōnferre gives confer and conference, people carrying their views together — a compound inherits its parent's oddity, so cōnferre's past is contulī, borrowing that second root exactly as ferō does.
One more piece is already yours. Chapter 21 taught volup est convēnisse, "it is a pleasure to have met." Convēnisse is this verb — you have been saying conveniō for twenty-two chapters without knowing it.

Your turn

- Say it: "conveniō, convenīs, convenit" — I, you, he or she meets
- Say it: "occurrō, occurris, occurrit" — I, you, he or she runs into
- Say it: the verb inside each — veniō, currō
- Run through: the meeting scene — "Salvē! Quid agis?" / "Valeō. Volup est convēnisse!"

Before you move on

How does Latin say "I meet", arranged and by chance? (Conveniō, occurrō.) What are the pieces of each? (Con plus veniō; ob plus currō.) Which chapter-21 phrase holds this verb? (Volup est convēnisse.) Which earlier verb is con- plus a shaking-verb, and what does con- plus ferō give English? (Cōgitō; confer and conference.) And which verb means "I answer"? (Respondeō.)

43.3 emō — buying, which used to be taking

> Conveniō and occurrō wore their older verbs on the outside. This last one hides something instead, and its English children give it away.

You'll want to know: emō — "I buy"

Emō means "I buy." Short word, short vowels, third conjugation: emere.

- emō — I buy
- emis — you buy, to one person
- emit — he buys, she buys
- emimus — we buy
- emitis — you buy, to several people
- emunt — they buy

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

The root is Proto-Indo-European *h₁em-, and it did not mean "buy." It meant take. Buying is a late, narrow specialisation of taking — the same slide English makes when a shopper says "I'll take it."

The old sense never left the compounds, and that is where the payoff is. Redimere is red- plus emere, "to take back" — to buy back. From it English has redeem, redemption, and, through French, ransom: literally a buying-back of a person. Eximere is ex- plus emere, "to take out," giving exempt — someone taken out of an obligation. Its noun exemplum is "a thing taken out" as a specimen, and English took that noun by two roads at once: as example, and, worn down through Anglo-French, as sample. Praemium is prae- plus the same root, "what is taken first," and is English premium.

You have met this verb once before without being told. In the taking-verb lesson, sūmere was taken apart as sub plus emere. That was this word.

Now set the three getting-verbs side by side, because Latin keeps them apart. Capiō takes. Accipiō receives what is handed over. Obtineō gets and holds. Emō takes by paying. And facing all four is dō, "I give" — because a sale is both at once: one side gives, the other takes.

One flag, and it is the last in this book. English buy is Germanic, and unusually it has no secure relatives outside Germanic at all. The whole h₁em-* family reached English only as loans: redeem, ransom, example, premium.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "emō, emis, emit" — I buy, you buy, he or she buys
- this chapter's three "I" forms — respondeō, conveniō, emō
- the three "he or she" forms — respondet, convenit, emit
- the four ways of getting — capiō, accipiō, obtineō, emō

Before you move on

Give this chapter's three "I" forms, then the three "he or she" forms. (Respondeō, conveniō, emō; respondet, convenit, emit.) What did the root of emere originally mean? (To take.) So what is a redemption, and what is an example? (A buying back; a thing taken out.) Which verb receives what is handed over, and which gets and holds? (Accipiō; obtineō.) And which verb faces them all by giving? (Dō.)

Chapter 44

The House, and Who Is Inside It

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the parts of a house in Latin — the building, its door, its wall, its garden and its hearth — and point to the English words each one left behind.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

44.1 domus — the building a family lives in, and the root under domestic, dome and dominate

A new group of five words begins here. Nothing is assumed but the alphabet you already read.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

domus — "a house."
Not the walls. Latin has another word for those. Domus is the household as a thing: the building and the family in it, the way English house can mean a dynasty.
Its owner is the dominus, the master of it — and that word travelled further than almost any other in this book. It is the don of Spanish, the Dom of Portuguese, and, softened through French, the dame and madam of English. A domain is what a dominus holds. To dominate is to act like one. And a dungeon is the same word: French donjon, the lord's own tower, which came to mean the cell beneath it.

The building itself gave English domestic and domicile, and — through Italian duomo, "the house of God" — the dome on top of a cathedral.
One honest note. English home is not from domus. It is Germanic, from a different root entirely. The resemblance is close enough to be tempting and it is a coincidence, and this book will always tell you when a resemblance is one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- domus, domūs
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is a dominus? (The master of the house.) Name two English words from him. (Dominate, domain, dame, dungeon.) And is English home related? (No — Germanic, and the likeness is a coincidence.)

44.2 porta — and the reason a harbour, a porch and a portal are all the same word

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

porta — "a door," or a gate.
The root is Proto-Indo-European per-, "to pass through," and that is worth holding onto, because it explains a family of English words that look unrelated.
A portal is a porta made grand. A porch is a porticus, the covered way in front of one. And a port is a portus — the same root again, a place where you pass through, but from the sea rather than from the street.
Rome named its gates and remembered them: the Porta Capēna, the Porta Flāminia. A city's gates were its addresses.

Two things to keep apart, because Latin does. Porta is the opening. Ianua — the door leaf that swings in it — is a different word, and it is the one that named January, the month standing in the doorway of the year.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- porta, portae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does the root of porta mean? (To pass through.) So what is a port? (A way in, from the sea.) And which Latin word for a door named a month? (Ianua — January.)

44.3 mūrus — the one that keeps things out, not the one that divides a room

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūrus — "a wall."
Latin splits what English lumps together. A mūrus is a wall that defends: the wall around a city, the wall of a fort. The wall between two rooms is a pariēs, a different word altogether, and no Roman would confuse them.
English has one word for both and has to add an adjective — city wall, interior wall. That is a small, ordinary example of something this book will show you again and again: a language's vocabulary records what its speakers needed to tell apart. Mūrus is inherited: Old Latin spelled it moerus, and Lewis & Short links it with moenia, "city walls".
From mūrus English has mural, a painting made on a wall, and immure, to shut someone inside one. The Roman wall of Britain is still called by its builder's name rather than this word — but Hadrian's Wall is a mūrus in every sense Latin meant.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mūrus, mūrī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which kind of wall is a mūrus? (One that defends.) What is the other word? (Pariēs, a partition.) And what is a mural? (A painting on a wall.)

44.4 hortus — an enclosed piece of ground, and a true blood relative of English yard and garden

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hortus — "a garden."
This one is a cousin, not a loan, and that distinction is the engine of this whole book.
The root is Proto-Indo-European *ǵʰórtos, "an enclosure" — a piece of ground with something round it. Latin took it as hortus. Germanic took the same word down its own road and English inherited it twice: as yard, the enclosed ground by a house, and — through Frankish and Old French — as garden. Three words, one ancestor, no borrowing between them.
The Latin form did lend as well: horticulture is the cultivation of a hortus, and it entered English from books rather than from speech, which is why it sounds bookish beside yard.
Look at what the enclosure meant. A garden is not defined by what grows in it. It is defined by the fence.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hortus, hortī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English yard borrowed from hortus, or descended from the same ancestor? (Descended — a cousin.) What did the root mean? (An enclosure.) And what is horticulture? (Cultivating a garden.)

44.5 focus — the fire in the middle of the house, and the reason a lens has a focus

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

focus — "the hearth."
The fireplace. The one warm point a Roman house was arranged around — and Latin had a different word for fire itself, which you will meet shortly.
Two roads out of this word, and they could hardly be less alike.
The spoken road. In late spoken Latin focus stopped meaning the fireplace and started meaning the fire, the way English hearth can. That is the word the Romance languages inherited: French feu, Spanish fuego, Italian fuoco, Portuguese fogo. None of them descends from Latin's own word for fire.
The written road. In 1604 Kepler needed a name for the point where a lens gathers light — the point where it would burn — and reached back into Latin for focus, the burning-place. That is the focus English uses today, and the verb to focus comes from it.
So the same word gives you a Spanish campfire and a camera lens, by two roads fifteen centuries apart.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- focus, focī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What did focus mean in classical Latin? (The hearth.) What became of it in spoken Latin? (It came to mean fire — French feu, Spanish fuego.) And why did Kepler choose it for a lens? (Because it is the burning-point.)

Chapter 45

Earth, Fire, Wind, Sky, Sea

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the five great outdoor things in Latin and say which of them English inherited by descent and which it borrowed from books.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

45.1 terra — dry land as opposed to sea, and the root under terrain, terrace and Mediterranean

A new group of five words begins here. Nothing is assumed but the alphabet you already read.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

terra — "the earth," and specifically dry land.
That contrast is built into the word. Terra is what is not sea — and the Romans named the Mediterranean on exactly that pattern, as the sea in the middle of the land. You will have the second half of that name shortly, and when you do the whole thing stops being a proper noun and becomes a description you can read.
English took terra freely: terrain, terrestrial, subterranean, a terrace (a raised bank of earth), and a terrier — a dog that goes to ground after its quarry. Even inter, to bury, is in plus terra: to put into the earth.

And terra firma, "solid ground," is still said in Latin because no English phrase does the job as briefly.
English earth is Germanic and unrelated. Another coincidence worth naming rather than assuming.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- terra, terrae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does terra contrast with? (The sea.) So what does Mediterranean literally say? (In the middle of the land.) And what does it mean to inter someone? (To put them into the earth.)

45.2 ignis — the classical word, which the Romance languages abandoned and English kept

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ignis — "fire."
This is Latin's own word, and it has a long pedigree: it is a genuine cousin of Sanskrit agni, the fire the Vedic hymns address, and of Russian ogon'. Two of this book's tracks meet here, which is the point of having a Sanskrit track at all.
Now the strange part, and it is worth pausing on.
No Romance language kept it. French, Spanish, Italian and Portuguese all threw ignis away and built their word for fire on focus, the hearth. The classical word for the commonest thing in the house simply lost.
But English kept it — as a loan from books. To ignite is to set on fire; igneous rock is rock that was once molten. So an English speaker saying ignite is using Caesar's word for fire, while a Spanish speaker saying fuego is not.

That is a good corrective to a natural assumption. The daughter languages are not always the better guide to the parent.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ignis, ignis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which Latin word did the Romance languages keep for fire — ignis or focus? (Focus.) Which one did English borrow? (Ignis — ignite, igneous.) And which Sanskrit word is its cousin? (Agni.)

45.3 ventus — and a true Germanic cousin, with the sound change that proves it

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ventus — "the wind."
Another cousin. Proto-Indo-European *h₂weh₁-nto- gave Latin ventus and Germanic windaz, which is English wind. Latin's v against English's w is not a coincidence and not a corruption — it is regular, and once you have seen it you will see it everywhere.
The borrowed branch came later and from French: a vent is a hole for wind, to ventilate is to move wind through, and ventilation is what results.
And a window is a Norse gift, vindauga — a wind-eye. The hole in the wall that the wind looks through. Even the Germanic side of the family named it after this word.
So English holds the same root three ways: inherited as wind, borrowed as vent, and compounded by the Vikings as window.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ventus, ventī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English wind borrowed from ventus or descended alongside it? (Descended — a cousin.) What regular difference marks the two branches? (Latin v-, Germanic w-.) And what does window literally mean? (Wind-eye.)

45.4 caelum — the word under celestial, and under a ceiling painted like the sky

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caelum — "the sky," and also "the heavens."
One word for both, which is why Latin can be ambiguous in exactly the places theology cares about. When a Roman said caelum, the weather and the gods were the same place.
English took it directly as celestial, anything of the sky or the heavens, and in Celeste as a name. The blue called cerulean is from the related caeruleus, which you have already met as a colour.
Ceiling is very probably the same word, arriving through French — a vaulted ceiling in a great hall was painted to look like sky, and the name stuck to the surface. The etymology is not perfectly settled, and this book will say so rather than round it off.
Two more you may already carry: the equinox you met with nox, and cyan, which is Greek rather than Latin and arrived by its own road.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- caelum, caelī

- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What two things does caelum name? (The sky and the heavens.) What is something celestial? (Of the sky.) And how confident is the ceiling connection? (Probable, not certain — and the book says so.)

45.5 mare — the word that finishes Mediterranean and names every marine thing in English

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mare — "the sea."
You met its partner a moment ago. Terra is the land; mare is what is not land, and together they make the mediterrāneum — the sea in the middle of the earth. Two words you now hold explain a name most people use without reading.
The loans came thickly: marine, maritime, a mariner, a submarine (under the sea), and — through French — a mermaid, whose first half is this word.
And there is a cousin. Proto-Indo-European mori- also went down the Germanic road and gave English mere, an old word for a lake that survives in place names — Windermere, Grasmere. Small, standing water rather than an ocean, but the same ancestor.
So once again: a borrowed branch that sounds learned, and an inherited branch that sounds like a field in the north of England.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mare, maris
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does mare pair with to make Mediterranean? (Terra — the land.) Which English word is its inherited cousin? (Mere, a lake.) And which are loans? (Marine, maritime, mermaid.)

Chapter 46

Light, Shadow, and Going to Sleep

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name light, shadow, star, moon and sleep in Latin, and use them to close a day the way a Latin speaker would.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

46.1 lūx — the root of lucid, translucent and Lucifer, and a cousin of English light itself

A new group of five words begins here. Nothing is assumed but the alphabet you already read.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūx — "light."
Proto-Indo-European *lewk- is one of the best-attested roots there is, and it reaches English from three directions at once.
Inherited: English light is the Germanic descendant. Same ancestor, no borrowing.
Borrowed from Latin: something lucid is clear as light; something translucent lets light through; to elucidate is to shed light on. And Lucifer is lūx plus ferre — the light-bringer, which was the Romans' name for the morning star long before it was anything else.
Borrowed from Greek: the same root gave Greek leukos, "white," which English carries in leukemia, named for white blood cells.

Three roads, one root — and the everyday word is the inherited one, which is the usual pattern in English rather than an accident here.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- lūx, lūcis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does Lucifer literally mean? (Light-bringer — the morning star.) Is English light inherited or borrowed? (Inherited.) And which Greek word for white is the same root? (Leukos — leukemia.)

46.2 umbra — and the reason a little shade is called an umbrella

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

umbra — "shade," or a shadow.
The English word that gives it away is umbrella — Italian ombrella, a little shade. It was a sunshade first and a rain shield only later, which is why a language of northern rain borrowed a word about southern sun.
To take umbrage is to take shade — offence, in the sense of being overshadowed. And sombre is sub plus umbra worn down through French: under shadow.
Astronomers kept the Latin bare. In an eclipse the umbra is the full shadow and the penumbra — paene, "almost" — is the partial one at its edge. That prefix is worth having: a peninsula is paene plus īnsula, an almost- island.
You have already met the shade of evening under a different word, when this book taught you vesper.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- umbra, umbrae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does umbrella literally mean? (A little shade.) What was it for first? (Sun, not rain.) And what does paene add in penumbra and peninsula? (Almost.)

46.3 stēlla — a cousin of English star, and the word inside constellation and disaster

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stēlla — "a star."
A cousin again. Proto-Indo-European *h₂stḗr gave Latin stēlla, Greek astēr, and — by inheritance down the Germanic line — English star. Three branches, one ancestor.
From the Latin: something stellar is of the stars, and a constellation is a set of them standing together (con- plus stēlla).
From the Greek: an asterisk is a little star, astronomy is the naming of stars, and an asteroid is a star-shaped thing.
And one word that carries a whole worldview. Disaster is Italian disastro — dis-, "ill," plus astro, "star." A bad star. The word only makes sense in a world where the stars decide what happens to you, and English has kept using it for four hundred years after it stopped believing that.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- stēlla, stēllae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English star a cousin or a loan? (A cousin.) What does constellation literally say? (Stars standing together.) And what does disaster literally say? (An ill star.)

46.4 lūna — the same root as lux, worn down to mean 'the shining one'

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūna — "the moon."
Look at what it is made of, because you have just met the pieces. Lūna is *lewk-snā: the shining one. It is the same root as lūx, worn down until the join stopped showing.
You already know one place it lives. The Latin name for Monday is diēs Lūnae, the moon's day — which this book taught you before you could take it apart, and which is exactly what German Montag and English Monday say too, in their own words.
Lunar is the plain loan. Lunatic is the interesting one: Latin lūnāticus meant "moon-struck," from a belief that the moon's phases moved the mind. English has kept the word and dropped the theory, the same way it kept disaster.
English moon is the inherited Germanic cousin — not from lūna, but from a root meaning measure, because the moon is what a month is counted by.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- lūna, lūnae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is lūna built from? (Lūx — the shining one.) Which weekday is diēs Lūnae? (Monday.) And what did lunatic originally claim? (Moon-struck — the moon moved the mind.)

46.5 somnus — the word under insomnia and somnolent, and a cousin of Sanskrit svapna

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

somnus — "sleep."
The last word of this chapter, and the right one to end a day on.
The root is Proto-Indo-European *swep-, "to sleep," and it reaches a long way: Sanskrit svapna, "sleep" or "dream," is the same word, and Old English had sweven for a dream — a word that died out but is still in Chaucer.
Insomnia is in-, "not," plus somnus: no sleep. Someone somnolent is sleepy, and a somnambulist walks (ambulāre — you have that verb) in their sleep.
The Roman god of sleep is Somnus, and his Greek counterpart Hypnos gave English hypnosis. Two languages, two gods, one job.
Now put the chapter together. Lūx goes, umbra comes, the stēllae and the lūna appear, and then somnus. That is a Latin evening in five words.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- somnus, somnī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does insomnia literally say? (No sleep.) What does a somnambulist do? (Walks in their sleep — ambulāre.) And which Sanskrit word is somnus's cousin? (Svapna.)

Chapter 47

Salt, Honey, Milk, Egg, Fish

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five things on a Latin table, and I can use Grimm's Law to tell an inherited English cousin from a borrowed Latin loan.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

47.1 sāl — a cousin of English salt, and the word a Roman soldier's salary was named for

A new group of five words begins here. Nothing is assumed but the alphabet you already read.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sāl — "salt."
A cousin: Proto-Indo-European *séh₂ls gave Latin sāl and Germanic saltom, which is English salt. And then Latin lent the same root back into English several more times, all through food.
A salad is herba salāta, salted greens. A sauce is salsa, the salted thing — and Spanish salsa is the very same word, arriving by a different road. A sausage is salsīcia, salted meat. Four English food words, one Latin root.
Then salary. Latin salārium was money paid to Roman soldiers, and the ancient explanation — that it was an allowance for salt — is what Pliny reports. Treat it as the standard account rather than as settled fact: no document actually records soldiers being paid in salt, and some historians think salārium simply meant a ration allowance generally. The word is certainly from sāl. What the money bought is less certain than the story suggests.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sāl, salis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English salt a cousin or a loan? (A cousin.) Name three loans from the same root. (Salad, sauce, sausage, salsa.) And how solid is the salary story? (Standard, not proven — the word is from sāl, the salt payment is Pliny's account.)

47.2 mel — the root of mellifluous and marmalade, and of molasses by way of Portuguese

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mel — "honey."
Proto-Indo-European melit-, and it is one of those roots that turns up in languages that otherwise share very little — Greek meli, Hittite milit, and Latin mel, all honey.
Something mellifluous is mel plus fluere, flowing with honey — used of a voice. Mellow is probably from the same family, though the road is not clean.
Two food words came in through Portuguese, which is why they look nothing alike. Marmalade is marmelada, a quince paste — Portuguese marmelo, "quince," from Greek melimēlon, a honey-apple. And molasses is Portuguese melaço, the honey-like residue left when sugar is refined.

English honey itself is Germanic and comes from a root meaning "golden." Unrelated — a different language naming the same substance by a different property.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mel, mellis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does mellifluous literally say? (Flowing with honey.) Which two food words came through Portuguese? (Marmalade, molasses.) And is English honey related? (No — Germanic, from a root meaning golden.)

47.3 lac — the root of lactose, lettuce and, at one remove, of the Milky Way itself

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lac — "milk." The stem is lact-, which is where every English relative comes from.
Lactose is milk sugar; lactic acid is named from souring milk; to lactate is to produce it.
Then a word nobody expects. Lettuce is Latin lactūca — "the milky one," named for the white sap that bleeds from a cut lettuce stem. Pick one and you can watch the etymology happen.
And the Greek sibling is gala, stem galakt-, also "milk." The Greeks called the band of light across the night sky the galaxías kúklos, the milky circle — which Latin rendered as via lactea and English as the Milky Way. So galaxy and lactose are the same word, and the Milky Way is a translation.
You met stēlla and lūna a moment ago. This is the sky they are in.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- lac, lactis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is lettuce named for? (Its milky sap.) What does galaxy mean? (Milky — the same root, through Greek.) And what is the Milky Way a translation of? (Greek galaxías, Latin via lactea.)

47.4 ōvum — a cousin of English egg, with two sound changes that hide the relationship completely

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōvum — "an egg."
Ōvum and egg are cousins — the same Proto-Indo-European *h₂ōwyóm — and they look nothing like each other, which makes this a good place to see how much sound change can hide.
The loans are transparent: something oval is egg-shaped, an ovary is where eggs are made, ovulation is their release.
The inherited word had a rougher time. Old English had æg, and it was losing ground when Norse settlers brought their own form, egg. For a while both were in use — Caxton complained in 1490 that a merchant asking for eggys in Kent was not understood, because there they said eyren. The Norse form won, and the native English one vanished.
So the everyday word is a Viking word that replaced a cousin of itself, and the learned words came from Latin. English is full of this.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ōvum, ōvī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Are ōvum and egg related? (Yes — cousins, heavily disguised.) What was the native English word? (Æg, plural eyren.) And why do we say egg? (It is the Norse form, and it won.)

47.5 piscis — and the single clearest demonstration in this book of the sound law linking Latin to English

Recall the previous word in this chapter before adding another.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piscis — "a fish."
Keep this word. It is the cleanest single demonstration in this book of how a Latin word and an English one can be the same word.
Latin p*-iscis*. English f*-ish*. Same word.
The change is not random. Around two thousand years ago the Germanic branch shifted every inherited p to f, and it did so without exception. That is Grimm's Law, and you have already met it once, in the family chapter:

- pater → father
- piscis → fish

Two pairs, one rule. Once you have it, you can run it yourself: Latin plēnus against English full, Latin prō against for.
The loans came separately and kept the p: Pisces the constellation, something piscine, a piscina. So English holds both the inherited form and the borrowed one, and now you can tell which is which by looking at a single letter.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- piscis, piscis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What sound does Latin p correspond to in inherited English words? (F — Grimm's Law.) Give two more pairs. (Pater/father, plēnus/full.) And why does Pisces keep its p? (It is a loan, not inherited.)

47.6 Attested, or agreed on

From memory: the reply to grātiās, and the one-word answer to how are you. Then hold the question this lesson asks of both — would a Roman have said it in that job?

You'll want to know: three shelves, not one

quōmodo	fully classical, in Cicero and Seneca — "by what manner"
bene	attested standing alone in Plautus, though in a drinking toast
nihil est	real words, real texts — but never attested answering thanks

ignōsce mihi belongs on the first shelf: a plain imperative of ignōscere, "to overlook, pardon." Beside it Latin kept an impersonal form with no "you" in it at all — paenitet mē, "it grieves me" — which is where English gets penitent and repent.

The middle shelf is the interesting one. bene on its own is genuinely attested; what is not attested is bene answering how are you, because that exchange is itself a modern habit. A phrase can be real and its job modern, and those are two different claims.

Why it's said this way

tū is one person, vōs is more than one, and in Classical Latin that is the whole of it. There is no formal-against-familiar dimension — addressing one powerful person as vōs had not started yet.

It started in Late Latin, and French vous is that habit's direct descendant. German solved the same problem separately and reached for a different pronoun altogether. So the polite plural is real, and it is younger than the Latin you are reading.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ignōsce mihi, then the impersonal one beside it
- nihil est — then say what is modern about it
- tū to one person, vōs to several, with no change of respect
- quōmodo, and which two words fused to make it

Before you move on

Which of the three is fully classical in its job? (Quōmodo.) What is modern about nihil est? (The job — no text shows it answering thanks.) Where is bene attested alone? (A drinking toast in Plautus.) And what did vōs mean to a Roman? (More than one person — no politeness in it.)

Chapter 48

Nescio, Male, Malus, Sed, Aut

Modes: voice (6) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say that I do not know, that something went badly, and I can set one thing against another or offer a choice between two.

The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

48.1 nesciō — and the rule the whole chapter turns on: nōn stands in front of the verb

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say piscis — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say sāl — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say bonum māne — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say Hesperia — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say caput — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say manus — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nesciō — "I do not know."
Take it apart. It is ne- ("not") welded onto sciō, the verb the eight-verb chapter gave you. Latin fused the negative into the verb once and kept it: nesciō is one word, and it is the word a Roman actually said.
Now the rule that unlocks everything else. For every other verb, Latin puts nōn — the word your very first lesson taught you as "no" — immediately in front of the finite verb:

- nōn valeō — "I am not well."
- nōn intellegō — "I do not understand."
- nōn videō — "I do not see."

That is the whole of it. No auxiliary, no change to the verb, no word order to learn. You have had nōn since your first day and every one of these verbs since the eight-verb chapter, and until now nothing told you that you could put them together.
English nescience is nesciō borrowed whole. Nice is the same word by a long road: Latin nescius ("ignorant") became Old French nice ("silly"), and seven centuries of drift turned an insult into a compliment.

Grammar Lens: non goes in front of the verb

State it once, plainly, because everything else in this tranche leans on it.

nōn + a finite verb = the negative of that verb.

- nōn valeō — I am not well.
- nōn intellegō — I do not understand.
- nōn sciō — I do not know (and nesciō is the word a Roman preferred).
- nōn audiō — I do not hear.

Nothing else changes. Latin does not add an auxiliary, does not move the verb and does not have a second negative word to pair it with. One word, in front.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nesciō, nescīre
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How does Latin negate an ordinary verb? (nōn immediately before it.) Say "I do not understand." (Nōn intellegō.) And what two words are inside nesciō? (Ne- and sciō.)

48.2 male — the other end of the scale bene has had to itself all along

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say nesciō — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say lūna — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say bonum vesperum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say merīdiēs — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say manus — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say vēr — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

male — "badly."
The bene lesson gave you bene, "well," and left you with half a scale. This is the other half, and it is built the same way: an adverb ending in -e, formed from an adjective: malus, "bad", inherited from Proto-Italic malos* (EtymDB 2.1), whose origin further back is uncertain.

> Valeō. — I fare well. Male valeō. — I fare badly. (Or, more usually: nōn valeō.)

English keeps male- as a prefix that means "wrongly": malice, malady, malign, malpractice, malfunction. Malaria is Italian mal'aria, "bad air" — what people thought caused it before the mosquito was known. Dismal is diēs malī, "bad days," the unlucky days of the medieval calendar.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- male
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is the opposite of bene? (Male.) What two Latin words are inside dismal? (Diēs malī — bad days.)

48.3 focus · mare · somnus — hearth, sea, sleep

Three words, one from the end of each of the last three chapters: the hearth, the sea, and sleep. Say all three before reading on.

You'll want to know: each one is a shelf of English

Latin	what it named	what English took focus	the hearth	focus — the point a lens gathers to mare	the sea	marine, maritime, mariner, submarine
somnus	sleep	insomnia, somnolent

focus is the odd one. English did not borrow the fireplace; it borrowed the idea of the one point a house is arranged around and handed it to optics. Meanwhile spoken Latin took the other road and let focus drift from the fireplace to the fire itself, which is where the Romance words for fire come from.

mare and terra together make mediterrāneum, the sea in the middle of the earth — two words you hold explaining a name most people never read. And somnus goes back to a root that reached Sanskrit svapna and Old English sweven, a word for a dream that Chaucer still used.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three words, then their three meanings
- what focus named first, and what it names now
- the two words inside mediterrāneum
- two English words built on somnus

Before you move on

What did focus name in a Roman house? (The hearth.) Which two words make mediterrāneum? (Mare and terra.) What does somnus mean, and which English word denies it? (Sleep — insomnia.) And which of the three drifted, in speech, to mean fire? (Focus.)

48.4 malus — the adjective under male, and the word Rome punned on for the apple

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say male — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say stēlla — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say merīdiēs — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say habeō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say vēr — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say aqua — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

malus — "bad."
The adjective that male was cut from. It changes its ending to match its noun, exactly as bonus does in bonam noctem: malus (m.), mala (f.), malum (n.).
Now the coincidence that changed a story. Latin also had mālum, "apple," borrowed from Greek mēlon — a different word, with a long ā, and in writing without macrons the two look identical. Genesis names no fruit at all: it says only "the fruit of the tree." When Latin translators wrote of the tree of mālum, the pun with malum, "evil," was there for the taking, and medieval art took it.
Treat that as the standard account rather than as settled fact: the pun is real and the timing is right, and no single document records anybody deciding it. English malevolent, malefactor and malcontent are all malus.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- malus, mala, malum
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does malus mean, and what does mālum mean? (Bad; apple.) What separates them in writing? (The macron — vowel length.)

48.5 sed — the word that sets one thing against another

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say malus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say umbra — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say eō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say vesper — vespere — sērus — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say aqua — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say pānis — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sed — "but."
You have met its sentence already. The propediem tē vidēbō lesson quoted Cicero's own letter, trimmed to "…ut spērō, propediem tē vidēbō". In the letter the line opens with this word: "Sed, ut spērō, propediem tē vidēbō" — "But, as I hope, I shall see you before long." A real sentence by a real Roman, and now you have its first word too. Sed joins two statements and marks the second as a correction or a contrast:

> Nōn valeō, sed nōn male valeō. — I am not well, but I am not badly off.

Here is the strange part. Sed is one of the commonest words in surviving Latin prose and not one Romance language kept it. Spanish and Italian took magis ("more") for mas and ma; French took mais from the same magis; Portuguese mas likewise. A word Cicero could not write a page without vanished completely.
Where sed came from is uncertain; Lewis & Short thinks it most likely an old ablative of the reflexive stem se-, "by itself, apart".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sed
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does sed mean? (But.) Which Roman did you first meet it from? (Cicero, in the propediem lesson.) Did any daughter language keep it? (No — they all took magis instead.)

48.6 aut — and the second or, which asks a different question

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say sed — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say lūx — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say bonum vesperum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back

- Recall: say merīdiēs — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say pānis — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say Iānuārius — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aut — "or."
The word that lets you offer a choice, which until now you could not do:

Aquam aut vīnum? — Water or wine?

Latin has two words here and they are not interchangeable. Aut offers an exclusive choice: one or the other, not both. It is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h₂ewti*, "on the other hand" (EtymDB 2.1). Vel offers an indifferent one: either will do. Vel is literally an old command form of the verb "to want" — "choose, if you like" — and that verb is the next chapter's.
Logicians still use the distinction. The inclusive-or of Boolean algebra is called vel after the Latin, and it is inclusive precisely because vel was; exclusive-or is aut … aut. A grammatical nicety of a dead language is sitting inside every computer you have ever used.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- aut
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which or excludes, and which does not? (Aut excludes; vel does not.) What is vel literally? (An old command form of "to want" — choose if you like.)

Chapter 49

Possum, Volo, Qui, Et, Quando

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I can do and what I want, join two statements, and put a when-clause or a who-clause after a noun.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

49.1 possum — potis plus sum, and the verb that will not sit still

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say aut — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say nesciō — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say salvē (post merīdiem) — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say salvē / salvēte — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say pānis — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say Iānuārius — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

possum — "I am able, I can."
Two words in a coat. Potis meant "able," and Latin bolted it onto sum, the verb the eight-verb chapter gave you. Where sum begins with s, the t of potis flattens into it — pot-sum becomes possum — and where it does not, the t survives:

person	form	built from
I can	possum	pot- + sum
you can	potes	pot- + es
he/she can	potest	pot- + est
we can	possumus	pot- + sumus
they can	possunt	pot- + sunt

What follows possum is an infinitive, which is the form every verb in this book is already stored under: possum vidēre, "I can see." Nōn possum vidēre, "I cannot see," using last chapter's rule.
English potent, possible, potential and omnipotent are all potis; so is power, by way of French pouvoir.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- possum, posse
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What two words are inside possum? (Potis and sum.) What form follows it? (The infinitive.) Say "I cannot see." (Nōn possum vidēre.)

49.2 volō — and the root inside voluntary, benevolent and will itself

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say possum — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say male — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say salvē — bonum vesperum — bonam noctem — valē — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say sum — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say medius diēs — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say hōra — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

volō — "I want, I wish."
The word that turns everything you own into a request. Like possum, it takes an infinitive:

> Volō bibere. — I want to drink. Nōn volō dormīre. — I do not want to sleep.

Its forms are irregular and worth hearing once: volō, vīs, vult, volumus, vultis, volunt. The infinitive is velle, not volere — an old form that survived because the verb was too common to regularise.
The root is Proto-Indo-European *welh₁-, "to choose." English inherited it directly as will — a blood cousin, not a loan — and borrowed it back from Latin many times over: voluntary, volition, benevolent ("well-wishing"), malevolent (with last chapter's male), and voluptuous.
And you have already met its imperative. Vel, "or," from the last lesson of the denying chapter, is literally volō telling you to choose.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- volō, velle
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What form follows volō? (The infinitive.) Which English word is a blood cousin rather than a loan? (Will.) And where have you already met volō's imperative? (In *vel, "or.")

49.3 quī — the commonest word in Latin prose, and the one that joins two sentences into one

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say volō — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say malus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say sum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say habeō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say medius diēs — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say hōra — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quī, quae, quod — "who, which, that."
This is the single most common word in surviving Latin prose, and it does one job: it hangs a second statement onto a noun in the first.

> Amīcus quī venit. — The friend who comes. Liber quem legō. — The book which I am reading.

Three forms, because it agrees with the noun it hangs on: quī for a masculine one, quae for a feminine one, quod for a neuter one.

You already know its relatives. Quid ("what") from the wellbeing exchange and quis ("who") are the question words built on the same Proto-Indo-European stem *kwi-. And Grimm's Law — the piscis law, p to f — does kw to hw as well, which is why English who, what, which and why are inherited cousins of this word rather than borrowings from it. The spelling wh- is the old hw- with its letters swapped.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- quī, quae, quod
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does quī do to two sentences? (Joins them — hangs the second on a noun in the first.) Are English who and what cousins or loans? (Cousins, by Grimm's Law.)

49.4 et — and the enclitic -que, which does the same job glued to the back of a word

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say quī — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say sed — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say caelum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say eō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance

- Recall: say hōra — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say vīgintī annōs nātus sum — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

et — "and."
The plainest word in this book, and the corpus went forty-seven chapters without teaching it.

> Aqua et vīnum. — Water and wine. Pater et māter. — Father and mother.

Latin has a second way of saying it, and a reader meets it constantly: -que, glued onto the back of the second word rather than standing between the two.

> Senātus populusque Rōmānus — "The Senate and the Roman people," the SPQR on every Roman standard. The -que is that fourth letter.

-que is Proto-Indo-European *kwe, an enclitic Sanskrit kept as ca and Greek as te. Et went the other way: it is Spanish y, French et, Italian e and Portuguese e, and every Romance daughter kept it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- et
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Two ways to say and in Latin? (Et, and -que glued to the back.)
What does the Q in SPQR stand for? (-que, "and.")

49.5 quandō — as a question and as the hinge of a clause

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say et — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say aut — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say mare — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say veniō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say vīgintī annōs nātus sum — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say tempestās — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quandō — "when."
Built on the same *kwo- stem as quī and quid, three lessons back. It does two jobs.
As a question: Quandō venīs? — "When are you coming?"
As a hinge, joining two statements in time: Quandō veniō, videō — "When I come, I see."
Every Romance daughter kept it unchanged: Spanish cuándo, Italian and Portuguese quando, French quand. English quandary is often attached to it and the connection is not established — the word appears in the sixteenth century from nowhere obvious, and quandō is a guess rather than an etymology. This book will always tell you when a resemblance is only a resemblance.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- quandō

- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Two jobs for quandō? (Asking when, and joining two statements in time.) Is English quandary from it? (Not established — a guess, not an etymology.)

Chapter 50

Hic, Iste, Ille, Is, Ibi

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can point at something near me, something near you and something over there, refer back to a person already named, and say that a thing is there.

The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

50.1 hic — the near point of a three-way system Spanish still keeps

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say quandō — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say possum — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say lūx — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say veniō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say pluit — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

- Recall: say ūndecim — vīgintī — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hic, haec, hoc — "this," the one near me.
Latin points three ways, and this is the first of the three. Hic is the thing in the speaker's own hand or reach.

Hic liber. — This book (here, mine).

Three forms because it agrees with its noun: hic for a masculine one, haec for a feminine one, hoc for a neuter one — the same three-way agreement quī showed you last chapter.
The system survived. Spanish still points three ways — este, ese, aquel — and it is Latin's system, arriving through a different set of words. Italian, French and Portuguese all collapsed to two. So a Spanish speaker meeting hic, iste, ille is meeting the shape of their own grammar in its original three pieces.
Hic itself is inherited, usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European pointing word for "this, here" (EtymDB 2.1).
English ad hoc is hoc, "for this"; a hic jacet is what an old gravestone says: "here lies."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hic, haec, hoc
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How many ways does Latin point? (Three.) Which one is hic? (The one near me.) Which modern language kept all three? (Spanish.)

50.2 iste — the middle point, and the one Latin used to sneer with

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say hic — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say volō — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say umbra — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say dīcō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say pluit — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say ūndecim — vīgintī — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iste, ista, istud — "that," the one near you.
The middle term, and the one with an attitude. Iste is literally "that of yours," and Roman orators used it to keep a thing at arm's length. Cicero's speeches are full of iste meaning "that man of yours" with a curl of the lip — the word does the sneering, and no adjective is needed.

> Iste liber. — That book of yours.

Then the words moved. Spanish este ("this") is from iste, not from hic — the middle term slid down into the near slot when hic dropped out, and ipse slid in behind it to make ese. So Spanish still points three ways and does it with a different three words, which is a good demonstration that a SYSTEM can outlive every word in it. Iste itself is built from is, "he, that", with a pointing ending -te (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- iste, ista, istud
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Where is iste? (Near you.) What tone can it carry? (Contempt — Cicero's "that man of yours".) Which Spanish word came from it? (Este — and it moved slot.)

50.3 ille — the far point, and the word that became the Romance article

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say iste — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say quī — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say stēlla — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say dīcō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say ūndecim — vīgintī — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say canis — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ille, illa, illud — "that," the one over there, away from both of us. The far term, and the most consequential word in this chapter — because it did not stay a demonstrative.

Latin had no article (this book's inventory records that as a demand it never states). Vulgar Latin invented one, and it invented it out of ille. Say ille often enough and unstressed, in front of a noun, and it wears down:

Latin	wore down to
ille	Italian il, French le, Spanish el
illa	Italian and Spanish la, French la
illī	Spanish ellos, French ils

The same word became the definite article and the third-person pronoun in every Romance language. Your very first lesson taught you that Latin's endings carry what other languages carry in extra words; here is the reverse motion, a demonstrative flattening into an extra word.

Ille goes back to Old Latin olle (Lewis & Short, EtymDB 2.1); beyond that its origin is uncertain.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ille, illa, illud
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Where is ille? (Over there, away from both.) What did it become? (The definite article and the third-person pronoun of every Romance language.)

50.4 is — the pronoun Latin does not really have, doing the job anyway

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say ille — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

- Recall: say et — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say lūna — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say videō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say ūndecim — vīgintī — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say canis — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

is, ea, id — "he, she, it."
Latin has no dedicated third-person pronoun. What it has is is, ea, id — a demonstrative with no deixis left in it, neither near nor far, pressed into the job. Hic points at something; is merely refers back to something already named.

> Amīcus venit. Is bene valet. — A friend is coming. He is well.

Its neuter, id, is a word English took whole: Freud's das Es was rendered into English as the id, Latin for "it." Identical and identity are idem, "the same one." And an idiom is not from this at all — that is Greek idios, "one's own," and the resemblance is a coincidence.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- is, ea, id
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Does Latin have a real third-person pronoun? (No — is, ea, id does the job.) Where does Freud's id come from? (Latin *id, "it".)

50.5 ibi — the place word the corpus has gone fifty chapters without

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say is — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say quandō — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say somnus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say videō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say canis — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say viridis — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ibi — "there."
Every demonstrative in this chapter has an adverb beside it, and this is the pair that matters most: hīc ("here") and ibi ("there").

> Canis hīc est. Fēlēs ibi est. — The dog is here. The cat is there.

Note the macron. The pronoun is hic, short; the adverb "here" is hīc, long. Same four letters, different words, and only the vowel length tells them apart — which is the whole argument for writing macrons, made once more.
Ibi survives into Italian ivi and, worn down almost to nothing, into the French y of il y a — "there is." A single letter of modern French is this Latin word. Ibi is built on the pronoun stem of is, "he, that" (Lewis & Short).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ibi
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Say "the dog is here" and "the cat is there." (Canis hīc est. Fēlēs ibi est.) What separates the pronoun hic from the adverb hīc? (Vowel length — the macron.)

Chapter 51

Amicus, Pecunia, Medicus, Miles, Epistula

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a friend, money, a doctor, a soldier and a letter — five words a Roman town could not be described without.

The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

51.1 amīcus — from the verb to love, and the word the bread lesson pointed at and did not give

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say ibi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say hic — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say sāl — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say sciō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance

- Recall: say viridis — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say quid agis? — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amīcus — "a friend."
The bread lesson traced pānis to companion — the one you share bread with — and to "the friendship-word every Romance daughter still shares." This is that word, and it took forty-one chapters to arrive. It is built straight onto amō, "I love," from the amō lesson: a friend is one who is loved, and nothing more than that. And its negative is the interesting half. In-amīcus becomes inimīcus, "not-friend," and inimīcus is English enemy. The most hostile word in the language is the friendliest one with two letters in front of it.
Spanish amigo, Italian amico, Portuguese amigo and French ami are all this word unchanged. English borrowed amicable, amity and amiable from it, and took enemy from its opposite by way of French.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- amīcus, amīcī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What verb is amīcus built on? (Amō, I love.) What is inimīcus, and what English word is it? (Not-friend; enemy.)

51.2 pecūnia — and the cattle it is named after

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say amīcus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

- Recall: say iste — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say mel — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say dō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say ut valēs? — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say valeō — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children pecūnia — "money."

The word is a fossil of what wealth used to be. Pecū meant "cattle," and a Roman's pecūnia was originally his livestock. When Rome began to strike coins it stamped an ox on them, and the name of the herd became the name of the money.
The English family is larger than it looks:

- pecuniary — to do with money, straight from pecūnia.
- impecunious — having none.
- peculiar — from pecūlium, the private property a Roman slave or son was allowed to keep. "One's own" narrowed to "odd" over the centuries.
- fee — a Germanic cousin, not a loan: Old English feoh meant both cattle and property, from the same Proto-Indo-European root.

The same picture is behind English capital, from caput — a head of cattle — and caput is the first body word this book taught.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pecūnia, pecūniae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What did pecūnia originally mean? (Cattle.) Is English fee a cousin or a loan? (A cousin.) And which body word tells the same story? (Caput — capital, a head of cattle.)

51.3 medicus — from measuring, not from healing

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say pecūnia — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say ille — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say lac — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say cōgitō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say salvē — quid agis? — valeō — valē — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say quid tibi nōmen est? / mihi nōmen est... — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

medicus — "a doctor."
Not, as you might expect, from a word for healing. Medicus is from medeor, "I attend to," and behind that is Proto-Indo-European med-, "to measure, to take the appropriate measures." A doctor, to a Roman, is someone who works out the right amount.
The root spread widely on that meaning:

- meditate — to measure a thing over in the mind.

- moderate and modest — kept within measure.
- mete, as in "mete out" — an inherited English cousin, not a loan.
- remedy — re- plus medeor, attending to a thing again.

Every Romance language kept the word: Spanish médico, Italian medico, Portuguese médico. English took medicine, medical and medic from the same family, and French gave us medico back as slang.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- medicus, medicī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does the root behind medicus really mean? (To measure, to take the right measures.) Name two English words from it that are not about health. (Moderate, modest, meditate.)

51.4 mīles — the noun every Latin narrative turns on

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say medicus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say is — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say ōvum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back

- Recall: say legō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say quid tibi nōmen est? / mihi nōmen est... — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say puerō nōmen est Mārcus / Mārcō — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mīles — "a soldier."
The noun a reader of Latin meets on the first page of almost any history, and one this book went fifty chapters without.
Note the shape: nominative mīles, genitive mīlitis. The -t- that appears in the genitive is the real stem, and every English derivative is built on the genitive rather than the nominative — military, militia, militant, militarise. That is a general habit worth having: when an English word from Latin looks nothing like the Latin nominative, look at the genitive.
Where the word came from is not settled. The old suggestion is mille, "thousand" — a soldier as one of a thousand-strong unit — and it is a guess with no evidence behind it. Some scholars propose an Etruscan borrowing. Treat the etymology as open.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mīles, mīlitis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which form do the English derivatives come from? (The genitive, mīlitis — hence military.) Is the etymology settled? (No — the mille story is a guess.)

51.5 epistula — a Greek word Rome borrowed, and the thing Cicero wrote in his letters

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say mīles — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say ibi — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say piscis — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say intellegō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say puerō nōmen est Mārcus / Mārcō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say volup est convēnisse — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

epistula — "a letter."
The farewell lessons quoted two of Cicero's letters and never gave you the word for one. Here it is, and it is Greek: epistolē, "a thing sent to somebody," from epi- ("to, upon") plus stellō ("I send"). Rome borrowed the object and the word together.
The same stellō is inside apostle — apo-stolos, "one sent away" — so an epistle and an apostle are the same verb with opposite prefixes, which is why the letters of the apostles are called epistles twice over.
scrībō, from the verbs of mind, is the verb this noun needed. Epistulam scrībō: "I am writing a letter." The verbs of mind gave you the writing and the propediem lesson gave you the reading, and this is the thing itself.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- epistula, epistulae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What language is epistula from? (Greek.) What do epistle and apostle share? (The verb *stellō, send — with opposite prefixes.)

Chapter 52

Ubi, Cur, Quia, Meus, Tuus

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can ask where and why, answer with a because-clause, and say that a thing is mine or yours.

The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

52.1 ubi — the question the quōmodo lesson left half-finished

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say epistula — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say amīcus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say nesciō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say nesciō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say tē volup est convēnisse — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

- Recall: say quid tibi nōmen est? — volup est convēnisse — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ubi — "where."
The quōmodo lesson gave you "how," and stopped. This is the other half of the pair every beginner needs, and the corpus went fifty-one chapters without it.

> Ubi est liber? — Where is the book? Ibi. — There.
> (Last chapter's word, finally with a question to answer.)

Like quī and quandō, it is built on the *kwo- stem. Latin also has quō ("to where") and unde ("from where") — Latin distinguishes three directions where English says only where, and this is the resting one. Ubique is "everywhere," and English ubiquitous is that word: being in every where at once. Spanish donde and French où both descend from ubi with dē in front of it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ubi
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which earlier question word is ubi the pair of? (Quōmodo, how.)
What does ubique mean, and what English word is it?
(Everywhere; ubiquitous.)

52.2 cūr — and the two words that answer it

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say ubi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say pecūnia — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say male — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say capiō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say tē volup est convēnisse — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say tū / vōs — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūr — "why."
The third of this chapter's question words, and the one that opens the only question a learner cannot fake an answer to.

> Cūr nōn venīs? — Why are you not coming? (with the nescio lesson's rule.)

Cūr is an older quor, the same *kwo- stem again — quī, quandō, ubi, cūr, quid, quis, all one family. Recognise the qu- and you can spot a Latin question word without knowing which one it is.
And like sed, it left no descendant. Spanish asks ¿por qué?, Italian perché, French pourquoi, all rebuilt from per or pro plus quid — "for what." Latin's own word for why did not survive its own daughters.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- cūr
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What do quī, quandō, ubi and cūr share? (The kwo-* stem — Latin's question family.) Did any Romance language keep cūr? (No

— all rebuilt it from per + quid.)

52.3 quia — the answer cūr asks for

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say cūr — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say medicus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say malus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say rogō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say tū / vōs — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say nihil est — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quia — "because."
The word that completes the pair. Cūr asks; quia answers, and it hangs a whole second statement onto the first:

> Cūr nōn venīs? Quia nōn possum. — Why are you not coming? Because I cannot.

That sentence uses four things this tranche has given you — cūr, quia, the nōn in front of a verb, and possum — and nothing else. It is the first question-and-reason exchange this book can build.
Latin has three words here and they are not quite the same: quia states a plain cause, quod states one the hearer already accepts, and quoniam ("since now") states one both parties take for granted. A reader meets all three. Start with quia.
Quia is built on the stem of quis, "who, what", inherited from Proto-Indo-European k^{w}is* (EtymDB 2.1); the exact form behind it is disputed.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- quia
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Answer cūr nōn venīs? using this chapter and the last two. (Quia nōn possum.) How many Latin words mean because? (Three — quia, quod, quoniam.)

52.4 meus — the possessive the name lesson did without

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say quia — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say mīles — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say sed — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say adiuvō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say tū / vōs — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say nihil est — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

meus, mea, meum — "my."
The name-exchange lesson taught you to say mihi nōmen est, "the name is to me," and called it the genuinely classical way to give your name. That is Latin's dative of possession, and it is why this word waited so long: for a name, a Roman preferred the case to the adjective.
For everything else, the adjective is what you want, and it agrees with what is owned rather than with the owner:

> liber meus — my book (masculine, so meus) epistula mea — my letter (feminine, so mea)

That is the opposite of English, where my never changes. It matches French mon livre / ma lettre and Spanish mi only in part — Spanish flattened the gender out of mi and kept it in mío.
Meus is built on the stem of mē, "me", inherited from Proto-Indo-European (e)me-* (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- meus, mea, meum
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does meus agree with, the owner or the thing owned? (The thing owned.) What did the name exchange use instead for a name? (Mihi nōmen est — the dative of possession.)

52.5 tuus — and the pair of forms the tū / vōs lesson promised

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say meus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say epistula — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say aut — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say amō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say nihil est — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say propediem tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tuus, tua, tuum — "your," to one person.
The tū / vōs lesson made a point of it: in Classical Latin the difference is number only, with no politeness in it at all. This is tū's possessive, and it inherits that: tuus is not familiar or rude; it means only that the thing belongs to one person. For several, Latin says vester.

> Quid tibi nōmen est? — the name question, with tibi, the dative. Liber tuus. — Your book, with the adjective.

Tibi and tuus are the same pronoun by two routes, which is worth hearing once: the case form and the adjective come from one word, and Latin lets you choose.
Spanish tu, Italian tuo, French ton and Portuguese teu all descend from this — and every one of them acquired the politeness dimension that Latin's had not got.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tuus, tua, tuum
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is tuus familiar or polite? (Neither — Classical Latin marks number only.) Which earlier word is its case-form twin? (Tibi.)

Chapter 53

Iterum, Magister, Discipulus, Schola, Liber

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can ask for something to be said again, and name the teacher, the pupil, the school and the book.

The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

53.1 iterum — and the repair move this book could not make

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say tuus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say ubi — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say possum — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say audiō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say propediem tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

- Recall: say crās tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iterum — "again."
This one word closes the largest hole in this book. The quaesō lesson gave you "please"; the eight-verb chapter gave you dīcō, "I say." Fifty-two chapters went by without a way of joining them, and here it is:

> Iterum, quaesō. — Again, please. Quid dīcis? — What are you saying? Lentē, quaesō. — Slowly, please.

That is a repair: the move you make when you did not catch what somebody said. Every language teaches it in its first week, and this book — which could greet, thank, apologise and say please within four chapters — could not until now ask anyone to repeat anything.
Iterum is built on the same i- stem as is from the pointing chapter, with an old comparative suffix: literally "the other of the two," hence "a second time." English iterate and reiteration are loans from it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- iterum
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How do you ask a Roman to say it again? (Iterum, quaesō.)
Which two earlier lessons did the parts come from? (The quaesō lesson, and the eight-verb chapter for dīcō.)

53.2 magister — the greater one, against minister, the lesser

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say iterum — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say cūr — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say volō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say dormiō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say propediem tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say crās tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

magister — "a teacher, a master."
The word is one half of a matched pair and the other half is minister. Magis means "more," minus means "less," and both take the same old contrastive suffix -ter: the greater one and the lesser one (Lewis & Short). A Roman magister outranks a Roman minister, and a modern government minister is still, etymologically, a servant.
The English family is enormous, and all of it is one Latin word: master, mister, Mr, mistress, Mrs, Miss, magistrate, maestro, magisterial — and Spanish maestro, French maître, Italian maestro. And magis itself you have met: The sed lesson recorded that sed died and magis became Spanish mas and Italian ma, "but." The same "more" is inside both.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- magister, magistrī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is the pair magister belongs to? (Minister — greater and lesser.) Which earlier word is magis also behind? (The Romance *but — Spanish mas, Italian ma.)

53.3 discipulus — from learning, and the reason discipline means what it does

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say magister — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say quia — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say quī — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say sedeō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say crās tē vidēbō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say quōmodo — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

discipulus — "a pupil."
Built on discō, "I learn," which is itself a reduplicated form of the same root as doceō, "I teach." Learning and teaching are one word split in two, and the pupil is named for the learning half.
Then the word that grew out of it. Disciplīna originally meant no more than "teaching, instruction" — what a discipulus receives. Only later did it narrow to the training that keeps order, and later still to punishment. English discipline carries all three senses at once, and a disciple is the discipulus of the Latin Bible.

Note the shape against the last lesson's. Magister and discipulus are the two ends of a Roman classroom, and Latin names one for rank and the other for what he does.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- discipulus, discipulī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What verb is discipulus built on? (Discō, I learn.) What did disciplīna first mean? (Teaching — not punishment.)

53.4 schola — a Greek word that first meant leisure

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say discipulus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say meus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say et — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say stō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say quōmodo — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say bene — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

schola — "a school."
Greek, and the meaning has turned completely over. Scholē meant leisure — spare time, the opposite of work. Only a person with leisure could spend it on learned discussion, so the word moved to the discussion, then to the place the discussion happened, then to the building children are sent to.
A word that meant free time now means the place you must be at nine. Latin borrowed it as schola, and every daughter kept it: Spanish escuela, Italian scuola, French école, Portuguese escola — and each of them props up the sc- with a vowel in front, exactly the way Portuguese props up escrever. English school, scholar and scholastic are loans; schedule is not, and the resemblance is a coincidence.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- schola, scholae
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What did scholē originally mean? (Leisure.) Why do Spanish and French put a vowel in front of sc-? (They prop up the cluster — escuela, école.)

53.5 liber — and the bark it was written on

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say schola — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say tuus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say quandō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say ambulō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say quōmodo — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say bene — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

liber — "a book."
The word for the thing this whole book is trying to let you read, and it arrives here, in the second-to-last chapter written so far.
Liber first meant the inner bark of a tree — the surface Romans wrote on before papyrus was easy to get. The material became the text and the text became the book, the same journey English paper made from papyrus and volume made from volvō, "I roll," because a Roman book was a scroll.
Watch out for the homograph. Līber with a long ī means "free," and gives English liberty, liberal and deliver. Liber with a short i is the book. Two different words, four identical letters, and only the macron between them — the same lesson hic and hīc taught in the pointing chapter.
Spanish libro, Italian libro, French livre, Portuguese livro. English library and libretto ("little book") are loans.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- liber, librī
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What did liber first mean? (Tree bark — the writing surface.)
What separates liber from līber? (The macron — book against free.)

Chapter 54

Edo, Bibo, Oculus, Auris, Pes

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I eat and drink, and name the eye, the ear and the foot beside the head and hand I already had.
>
> The fifth word of the group, taken apart against the four before it.

54.1 edō — and the infinitive that collides with to be

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say liber — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say iterum — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say hic — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say currō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say bene — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say diēs — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

edō — "I eat."
Fifty-three chapters gave you bread, salt, honey, milk, eggs, fish, water and wine, and no verb to do anything with them. Here it is.
The root is Proto-Indo-European *h₁ed-, and English eat is an inherited cousin, not a loan — the same relationship piscis and fish have, by the same Grimm's Law. So are etch and, at a distance, fret (fra-etan, "to eat away").
And then a trap worth meeting once. The infinitive of edō is ēsse, and the infinitive of sum, "to be," is esse. Four identical letters again. Only the long ē separates eating from being, and only in speech; a Roman reader took it from the sentence.
Edible and comestible are loans from this verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- edō, esse
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English eat a cousin or a loan? (A cousin.) What two verbs share the spelling esse? (Edō and sum — separated by vowel length.)

54.2 bibō — the verb inside beverage, bib and imbibe

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say edō — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say magister — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say iste — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say aperiō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say diēs — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say nox — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bibō — "I drink."
The other half of the pair, and the one that finally does something with the aqua and vīnum of the bread-and-wine lesson.

> Aquam bibō. — I drink water. Aquam aut vīnum bibō? — Do I drink water or wine? (with the aut of the denying chapter.)

The form is odd and the oddity is old: bibō is a reduplicated verb, the root syllable said twice, from Proto-Indo-European peh₃-. Latin regularly turns that initial p into b here, which is why bibō looks nothing like Greek pīnō although they are the same word.
English beverage is Old French bevrage, from bibere; imbibe and bibulous are direct loans; and a baby's bib is probably from the same verb, the thing you drink over — probably, not certainly.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bibō, bibere
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Say "I drink water." (Aquam bibō.) Is bib certainly from bibō? (Probably, not certainly.)

54.3 oculus — and the eye already hiding inside a word you know

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say bibō — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say discipulus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say ille — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say claudō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say nox — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say salvē / salvēte — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oculus — "an eye."
The third body word this book has, after caput and manus.
English eye is an inherited cousin — Proto-Indo-European *h₃ekʷ- gave Latin oculus and Germanic augon, which is eye. And the loans are everywhere: ocular, binoculars, monocle, oculist.
The best of them is inoculate. Latin inoculāre was a gardening word: to graft a bud — an oculus, an "eye" — into a plant. Eighteenth-century physicians borrowed the gardener's word for grafting a little disease into a person, and that is why an injection is named after an eye.
Italian occhio and Spanish ojo both descend from it, by the same -cl- to -cchi- change Italian makes on occhio.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- oculus, oculī

- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is English eye a cousin or a loan? (A cousin.) Why is inoculate named after an eye? (It was a gardening word — grafting a bud.)

54.4 auris — and the reason a Roman listened by obeying

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say oculus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say schola — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say is — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say ferō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say salvē / salvēte — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say avē / avēte — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

auris — "an ear."
English ear is an inherited cousin again — the same Proto-Indo-European *h₂ews- on both sides.
And it connects to a verb you already have. The audiō lesson gave you "I hear," and noted that obey is hidden inside it. Now you can see why: audiō is itself built on this root — aus-diō, roughly "I put the ear to" — so hearing, in Latin, is an action performed with the named organ. Ob-audīre, "to listen towards," wore down through French into obey.
Auricle, aural and auscultate are loans. Watch the near-collision:

aural (of the ear) and oral (of the mouth) are different words from different roots, and English pronounces them identically — which is why careful writers avoid both.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- auris, auris
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which earlier verb is built on this root? (Audiō.) What is the difference between aural and oral? (Ear against mouth — different roots, same sound.)

54.5 pēs — the clearest Grimm's Law pair in the book, and the last word of the tranche

Six recalls before the new word, at growing distances. They are not decoration: each one is the retrieval window this book measures, and each names a word far enough back that saying it is work.

- Recall: say auris — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say liber — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say ibi — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say accipiō — R3, durable again, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say videō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say salvē / salvēte — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pēs, pedis — "a foot."
The piscis lesson taught Grimm's Law on piscis and fish, and promised the other pairs. This is the cleanest of them: Latin p against English f, pēs against foot, on the same Proto-Indo-European *ped-. And the genitive matters again, exactly as it did for mīles. The nominative is pēs; the stem is ped-; and every English loan is built on the stem: pedal, pedestrian, impede ("to shackle the feet"), expedite ("to free them"), biped, pedicure.
Pedigree is the best of them: French pied de grue, "crane's foot," because the three-line mark that shows descent on a genealogical chart looks like a bird's footprint.
That is thirty-five words in seven chapters. Say the five of this chapter in order, then say the head and the hand you have had from the start, and you have named a body.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pēs, pedis
- every word this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What sound does Latin p correspond to in inherited English? (F — Grimm's Law.) Which form do the English loans use? (The genitive stem ped-.) And why is a pedigree a foot? (The chart mark looks like a crane's footprint.)

Chapter 55

Numerī Ōrdinis

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 4 of 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say first, second, third, fourth and fifth in Latin, and use them to say which hour or which day I mean.

The fifth ordinal, said against the four before it, and the month whose name it is.

55.1 prīmus — counting in order, and the word with no ūnus in it

A new kind of counting starts here, so the recalls come first, at the four growing distances this book measures.

- Recall: say pēs — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say edō — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say lūdō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say amīcus — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say ūnus, duo, trēs, quattuor, quīnque — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīmus, prīma, prīmum — "first."
Counting does two different jobs. Ūnus, duo, trēs answer how many. This word answers which one in the line, and Latin keeps a whole second series for that job.
Then the surprise. There is no ūnus anywhere in prīmus. It is a superlative of an old pri-, "in front" — so the word means "foremost", not "one-th". That is why it looks nothing like the number it stands next to.
It changes its ending with the thing it counts, exactly as bonus and malus do: prīma hōra, "the first hour"; prīmus diēs, "the first day".
English took the whole family: prime, primary, premier, primitive — and prince, from prīnceps, "the one who takes the first place".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- prīmus, prīma, prīmum
- prīma hōra — the first hour
- prīmus diēs — the first day

Before you move on

Which question does prīmus answer — how many, or which one in the line? (Which one in the line.) What number word is hiding inside it? (None — it is built on pri-, "in front", and means "foremost".) And what does the ending do when the thing counted changes? (It changes with it — prīma hōra, prīmus diēs.)

55.2 secundus — the one that follows

Recalls before the second ordinal, at the four measured distances.

- Recall: say prīmus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say bibō — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say exspectō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say pecūnia — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say valē / valēte — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

secundus, secunda, secundum — "second."
Like prīmus, it is not built on its own number. There is no duo in it. It comes from the Latin verb "to follow" (a later chapter teaches it) — so second place is the place that comes after, named by what it does rather than by where it falls in a count.
That single fact explains a shelf of English words. Second is this word, borrowed whole. So are sequel, sequence, consequence and subsequent; every one of them still carries "follow" in it.
And the second on a clock is the same word twice over. The Romans cut the hour into small parts, pars minūta prīma, "the first small part" — our minute — and then cut that again into pars minūta secunda, "the second small part." English kept the adjective and threw the noun away, so a second is literally "the following one".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- secundus, secunda, secundum
- secunda hōra — the second hour
- the pair — prīmus, secundus

Before you move on

What did the root behind secundus mean? (To follow.) So what is second place, in Latin's own terms? (The place that comes after.) And why is a second on a clock called that? (It is the pars minūta secunda — the second cutting of the hour, after the minute.)

55.3 tertius — where the number starts to show through

Recalls first, then the third ordinal — and the first one you can see a number inside.

- Recall: say secundus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say oculus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say respondeō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say medicus — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say grātiās tibi agō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tertius, tertia, tertium — "third."
Two ordinals have now gone past with no number in them at all. This one is different: trēs is three, and ter- is trēs worn down to fit an ending. Say them together and the join is audible — trēs, tertius.
So the third word in the series is the first one that is built the way you would expect all of them to be built: take the number, put an ending on it, and let the ending agree with the thing counted. Tertia hōra, "the third hour".
English borrowed it late and kept it formal: tertiary, a tercet (three lines of verse), tierce. Spanish wore it down instead of borrowing it, into tercero — which is what happens to a word that stays in a language's mouth rather than being fetched out of a book.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tertius, tertia, tertium
- the join — trēs → tertius
- the three so far — prīmus, secundus, tertius

Before you move on

Which number is inside tertius, and what shape does it take? (Trēs, worn down to ter-.) Why is that worth noticing here rather than earlier? (The first two ordinals had no number in them at all.) And what did Spanish do with this word instead of borrowing it? (Wore it down into tercero.)

55.4 quārtus — the shape the rest of the series keeps

Recalls first, then the fourth — and the shape that carries the rest of the way.

- Recall: say tertius — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say auris — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say conveniō and occurrō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say mīles — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say ita and nōn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quārtus, quārta, quārtum — "fourth."
Quattuor is four, and quārtus is quattuor with the middle squeezed out and an ending put on. Quattuor is inherited, a cousin of English four (EtymDB 2.1). After the odd pair at the front, that is the shape the series keeps: the number you already know, wearing an ending, behaving like a describing word and agreeing with whatever it counts. Which means the first three were the hard part, and they are behind you. From here, if you can say the number you can nearly say the ordinal.
Quārta hōra, "the fourth hour". Quārta pars, "the fourth part" — and that phrase went into English three separate times: a quart (a fourth of a gallon), a quarter, and a quarto (a sheet folded into four). A quartet is four players; a quatrain is four lines.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- quārtus, quārta, quārtum
- the join — quattuor → quārtus
- the four so far — prīmus, secundus, tertius, quārtus

Before you move on

What happens to quattuor on the way to quārtus? (The middle is squeezed out and an ending goes on.) Which of the first four ordinals do NOT have their number inside them? (Prīmus and secundus.) And what does the ending of quārtus do? (Agrees with the thing counted — quārta hōra, quārtus diēs.)

55.5 quīntus — the fifth, and a month you have already met

Recalls first, then the fifth — and a payoff from a chapter long behind you.

- Recall: say quārtus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say pēs — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say emō — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say epistula — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say avē / avēte — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say the first chapter's own recombining — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quīntus, quīnta, quīntum — "fifth."
Quīnque is five; quīntus is that number with the ending on it, exactly as quārtus was. Two in a row now behave the same way. Quīnque is inherited, a cousin of English five (EtymDB 2.1).
And here is where the series pays back something you were already told. The month lesson listed Quīntīlis among the twelve and translated it "the fifth" — the month that was later renamed Iūlius. You could read that translation then. Now you can see the word: Quīntīlis is quīntus turned into a month's name, and Sextīlis beside it is the next ordinal doing the same.
English has quintet (five players), quintuplets, and quintessence — the quīnta essentia, the "fifth being", which mediaeval writers put above earth, water, air and fire.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- quīntus, quīnta, quīntum
- the join — quīnque → quīntus
- the month — Quīntīlis, the fifth

Before you move on

What number is inside quīntus? (Quīnque, five.) What was Quīntīlis, and what is it called now? (The fifth month; it was renamed Iūlius.) And what is a quīnta essentia? (A fifth being — the one put above earth, water, air and fire.)

Chapter 56

Sextus ad Decimum

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count in order all the way to tenth, and say why noon and siesta are ordinal numbers wearing a disguise.
>
> The tenth ordinal, and the whole series said in order from primus to decimus.

56.1 sextus — the sixth, and the hour that became a nap

Recalls open the chapter, at the four measured distances.

- Recall: say quīntus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say prīmus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say domus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say ubi — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say sex, septem, octō, novem, decem — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sextus, sexta, sextum — "sixth."
Sex is six; sextus is the same word with the ending. And Sextīlis, the other renamed month, is what Quīntīlis was: an ordinal doing duty as a name, later handed over to Augustus.
The better story is the hour. A Roman day was cut into twelve hours running from sunrise to sunset, so prīma hōra began at dawn and the sixth hour landed on the middle of the day — which is why sexta hōra meant noon and the heat of it. That hour became a rest, the rest kept the hour's name, and the name wore down through Spanish into siesta. A word for a nap that is, underneath, an ordinal number.
English took the plainer ones: a sextet, a sextant (a sixth of a circle), and sexagēsimus behind sexagesimal, counting by sixties.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sextus, sexta, sextum
- the join — sex → sextus
- sexta hōra — the sixth hour, the middle of the day

Before you move on

Which hour of a Roman day was sexta hōra, and where did it fall? (The sixth, counted from sunrise — so the middle of the day.) What everyday Spanish word came out of it? (Siesta.) And which month was Sextīlis renamed after? (Augustus.)

56.2 septimus — the seventh, and the week that is a seven

Recalls first, then the seventh.

- Recall: say sextus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say secundus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say porta — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say cūr — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say quaesō — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say ignōsce mihi — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

septimus, septima, septimum — "seventh."
Septem is seven, inherited, a cousin of English seven (EtymDB 2.1). Put the ending on and the vowel in the middle goes quiet: septem → septimus, with e worn down to i because nothing is leaning on it. Latin does that to unstressed middles constantly, and once you have heard it here you will hear it everywhere.
September is this number in a name, and the calendar lesson explained why it sits in ninth place: two months were pushed in at the front and the names never moved.
The prettier descendant is the week. Septimāna was "a set of seven" — seven days — and it went into Spanish as semana and French as semaine. So in two of Latin's daughters the ordinary word for a week is a number word, and the number is this one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- septimus, septima, septimum
- the join — septem → septimus
- septima hōra — the seventh hour

Before you move on

What happens to the vowel in the middle of septem when the ending goes on? (It wears down — e to i.) Which month keeps this number, and why is it two places out? (September; two months were added at the front.) And what is a semana, taken apart? (A set of seven — septimāna.)

56.3 octāvus — the eighth, and the ending that breaks step

Recalls first, then the eighth — the one that does not do what the last four did.

- Recall: say septimus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say tertius — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say mūrus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say quia — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say diēs Lūnae — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say diēs Sōlis — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

octāvus, octāva, octāvum — "eighth."
Octō is eight. By now you would expect octus, and it is not that. This one takes -āvus, and it is the only ordinal in the ten that does.
EtymDB 2.1 traces octāvus straight to a Proto-Indo-European ordinal built on "eight".
Worth stopping on, because it shows what a pattern in a language actually is. Four ordinals in a row behaved alike, so the shape looked settled; the eighth breaks step, and then the ninth breaks it differently, and the tenth goes back to behaving. A learner who was told a rule and then met these would think the rule was broken. A learner who was shown the shape and then shown where it bends has learned the language instead.
October is this number in a month's name. And an octave in music is the eighth note, the one at which the names begin again — do to do — so the interval is named for the count that closes it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- octāvus, octāva, octāvum
- the ending that breaks step — not octus
- the eight so far, in order

Before you move on

What ending does octāvus take, and how many of the ten take it? (-āvus, and only this one.) What is an octave, counted out? (The eighth note — where the names start again.) And what is October, taken literally? (The eighth month.)

56.4 nōnus — the ninth, and where noon comes from Recalls first, then the ninth — and the best word-history in the chapter.

- Recall: say octāvus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say quārtus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say hortus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say meus — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say niger and albus — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say ruber and caeruleus — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōnus, nōna, nōnum — "ninth."
Novem is nine, and this time the word is not lengthened but squeezed: noven- collapses in on itself and comes out as nōnus, with a long ō where the ove used to be (Lewis & Short). Novem is inherited, a cousin of English nine (EtymDB 2.1). Two ordinals running have now bent the shape in two different ways.
November is this number in a name.
And then nōna hōra. Counting from sunrise, the ninth hour is the middle of the afternoon, and it was the hour of a fixed prayer. Over centuries that prayer crept earlier and earlier in the day, until it was being said at midday — and the name went with it. English noon is nōna, still meaning "the ninth", attached now to an hour three hours away from the one it was named for. The word stayed put; the clock moved under it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nōnus, nōna, nōnum
- the squeeze — novem → nōnus
- nōna hōra — the ninth hour, once mid-afternoon

Before you move on

How is nōnus made out of novem? (By squeezing it shut, not by adding — noven- to nōn-.) Which English word is nōna hōra? (Noon.) And what moved, the word or the hour? (The hour — the name stayed and the time it named drifted to midday.)

56.5 decimus — the tenth, and the ten complete

Recalls first, then the tenth, which closes the series.

- Recall: say nōnus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say quīntus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say focus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say tuus — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say pater and mater — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say frater and soror — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

decimus, decima, decimum — "tenth."
Decem is ten, and the ending goes on with the same worn-down middle you met in septimus: decem → decimus. Remember that c is hard — DEK-imus. Decem is inherited, a cousin of English ten (EtymDB 2.1). December is this number in a name, and it is the last of the four the calendar froze.
Decima on its own means "a tenth part", and that noun did a great deal of work. Decimate is the Roman army's punishment: a unit that broke was made to draw lots and one man in ten was killed by the other nine. A dime is a tenth of a dollar. A tithe is a tenth of a harvest, and décima is still the word for it in Spanish.
That is the ten. Say them in order and you have a series that no cardinal count gives you: the place a thing holds, not how many of it there are.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- decimus, decima, decimum — DEK-imus
- the join — decem → decimus
- all ten in order, prīmus to decimus

Before you move on

How is c said in decimus? (Hard — DEK-imus.) What did the Roman army actually do when it decimated a unit? (Killed one man in ten, chosen by lot.) And how many of the ten ordinals have their own number visible inside them? (Eight — every one but prīmus and secundus.)

Chapter 57

Ante et Post

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can put one thing before or after another with ante and post, and place an event in a Roman day.
>
> The hours and the halves of the day put together: prima, sexta and nona hora against ante and post meridiem.

57.1 ante — before, in place and in time

Recalls open the chapter, at the four measured distances.

- Recall: say decimus — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say sextus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say terra — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say iterum — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say caput — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say nox — R4, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say bonam noctem — R4, a third word from that distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ante — "before", "in front of".
The ordinals tell you which place a thing holds. This word and its partner tell you how two things stand relative to each other, which is the other half of putting anything in order.
Ante does both senses at once, and Latin does not separate them. In space it is "in front of": ante portam, "in front of the gate". In time it is "before": ante merīdiem, "before midday" — which you have already seen on a clock face, because that phrase is the a.m. you write every day. You have been reading this word for years in an abbreviation.
English borrowed it whole and left it visible: an antechamber is the room in front of the room, an antecedent is what went before, anterior means towards the front, and a poker player who antes up puts the money in beforehand.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ante
- ante portam — in front of the gate
- ante merīdiem — before midday

Before you move on

What two senses does ante carry at once? (In front of, in space, and before, in time.) What everyday abbreviation is ante merīdiem? (a.m.) And what is an antechamber? (The room in front of the room.)

57.2 post — after, and the pair completed

Recalls first, then the word that finishes the pair.

- Recall: say ante — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say septimus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say ignis — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say magister — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say mānе — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say bonum mānе — R4, a second word from the same distance

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

post — "after", "behind".
The mirror of ante, and the same double life. In space it is "behind": post mūrum, "behind the wall". In time it is "after". Post is inherited, and Lewis & Short compares a Sanskrit word for "behind".
This book has quoted it once already and walked past it. The afternoon greeting was given as salvē (post merīdiem), and post merīdiem was translated without the word ever being taught — which is exactly the sort of debt a course collects when a phrase is more useful than its parts. Now the phrase comes apart: post + merīdiem, "after midday", the p.m. that stands opposite the a.m. you had one lesson ago.
English keeps it everywhere and rarely notices: posterior, posterity, postpone ("to place after"), post mortem ("after death"), post-war, and a postscript, the thing written after the writing.
With ante and post you can now put two things in order without counting them at all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- post
- post mūrum — behind the wall
- the pair — ante merīdiem, post merīdiem

Before you move on

What are the two senses of post? (Behind, in space, and after, in time.) What is post merīdiem on a clock face? (p.m.) And what can you do with ante and post that the ordinals do not do for you? (Put two things in order without counting them.)

57.3 Putting a day in order — prīma, sexta, nōna, ante and post

Recalls first, and then the chapter's work: everything in one place.

- Recall: say post — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say octāvus — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say ventus — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say discipulus — R3, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say vesper — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say Hesperia and víspera — R4, a second word from the same distance
- Recall: say the vesper triage — R4, a third word from that distance

You'll want to know: the three chapters, on one clock

You have the hour. You have the ordinals. You have ante and post. That is enough to say when something happens, and this is what the three chapters were for.

A Roman day ran sunrise to sunset and was cut into twelve, so an hour was a twelfth of the daylight — long in June, short in December, and never the same length twice. Three of those hours now have names you can say:

- prīma hōra — the first hour, beginning at sunrise.

- sexta hōra — the sixth, the middle of the day. Its name is in siesta.
- nōna hōra — the ninth, mid-afternoon. Its name is in noon, which moved.

And the day splits in two at the middle: everything up to merīdiēs is ante merīdiem, everything past it post merīdiem.

Now place three things. Say prīma hōra and then ante merīdiem, and you have said early morning twice over, once by counting and once by dividing. Say nōna hōra, post merīdiem, and you have said mid-afternoon the same two ways. That is the whole point of having both.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three hours — prīma hōra, sexta hōra, nōna hōra
- the halves — ante merīdiem, post merīdiem
- all ten ordinals in order, prīmus to decimus

Before you move on

How long was a Roman hour? (A twelfth of the daylight — so it changed with the season.) Which hour was the middle of the day, and which word still carries its name? (The sixth; siesta.) And say mid-afternoon two ways. (Nōna hōra — and post merīdiem.)

Chapter 58

Reading — Words, Lines, and a First Passage

Modes: eyes (3) Hands-free start: none of the 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read a Latin word cold and know its job from its ending, follow a line whose subject lives inside the verb, and hold a whole passage without translating it word by word.
>
> Forty-two words of Latin with no new word in them, where the verb goes last, the subject hides inside it, and bonus changes to bona without anyone explaining agreement.

58.1 (reading) — six words, each one already a claim

Every word below you have met. Not one is new.

What is new is that nothing surrounds them.

Read this

aqua liber schola magister discipulus oculus

Read it: down the list once, without stopping
Read it: the list again, and notice that five of the six end in -us, -a or -er, and that you know what that ending means

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

An English word standing alone tells you almost nothing about its job. Book could be the thing doing or the thing done to.
Liber cannot. That ending says it is the one doing, before any sentence has been built around it. A Latin noun carries its job with it. That is what makes Latin readable in a way its word order is not. The endings do the work English does with position, and they do it one word at a time.

Your turn

- Say it: the six words down the list, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
What does a Latin ending tell you that an English word cannot? (Its job — before the sentence exists.)

58.2 (reading) — six lines, two of them one word

The last lesson gave you words alone. These are whole lines.

You have said every one of them.

Read this

Salvē! Valē! Magister meus bonus est. Ego sum discipulus.
Iterum! Bonus est.

Read it: the six lines down once, without stopping
Read it: the six lines again, and notice that two of the six are a single word, and that both of them are things you say to somebody

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Salvē and Valē are commands. Be well. Be strong. A Roman greeting and a Roman farewell are both orders, which is why neither needs anything around it.

Bonus est has no subject on the page at all. Latin puts the person in the verb, so est is already he is or it is, and the sentence is complete with two words.
That is the second thing reading Latin asks of you: expect the subject to be missing, and expect the verb to have it.

Your turn

- Say it: the six lines, once, in order, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
Where is the subject of Bonus est? (Inside the verb.)

58.3 (reading) — the first passage

Six words, then six lines. Now twelve of them together.

Forty-two words, and not one of them is new.

Read this

Salvē! Mihi nōmen est Mārcus. Ego sum discipulus.
Magister meus bonus est. Liber meus bonus est. Ego legō et bibō. Amīcus meus est discipulus. Schola bona est.
Prīmus liber bonus est. Sextus liber bonus est. Iterum legō, quia liber bonus est. Valē!

Read it: the passage once without stopping; do not translate as you go — let the sentences arrive
Read it: the passage again, and notice where est falls

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

Nearly every line ends in est. That is not a habit of this passage; it is how Latin was written. The verb goes last, and the reader holds everything before it open until it arrives.
Two lines break the pattern on purpose. Mihi nōmen est Mārcus puts est in the middle, because the name is the point and Latin moves what matters. And the last full line is the longest, because quia hangs a whole reason off a sentence that was already complete.

Notice also bonus, bona, bonus — the same word three times, changing to match what it describes. You are reading agreement, not being told about it.
This is the first whole passage the book has asked you to hold at once, and it works because everything in it was paid for.

Your turn

- Say it: the passage aloud, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

Where does a Latin sentence usually keep its verb? (Last.)
Why is it schola bona and not schola bonus? (The adjective agrees — and you read it before anyone explained it.)

Chapter 59

Reading — Objects, Places, and a Day

Modes: voice (2) eyes (3) Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can track direct objects and place phrases through a social exchange and a short first-person account without translating sentence by sentence.
>
> A 140-word adapted account whose time anchors, place phrases and visible object endings let a beginning reader follow one full day.

59.1 aqua -> aquam — when the action reaches the thing

You already know aqua: water. Read it: one new sentence

Aquam bibō. — I drink water.

Nothing new has happened to the water. Its ending changed because it is now the thing the action reaches.

You'll want to know: -a becomes -am

Latin marks the direct object with the accusative case. For the familiar nouns ending in -a, the first useful move is small:

- aqua -> aquam — I drink aquam
- epistula -> epistulam — I write epistulam

- porta -> portam — I open portam

The -m is a reading signal. It tells you that this word receives the action even if Latin moves the word somewhere English would not.

Grammar Lens: actor, action, object

In epistulam scrībō, the verb scrībō already says "I write." The ending -am tells you what I write.
Read from the endings rather than from position: portam aperiō and aperiō portam mean the same basic thing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- aquam bibō — the water receives the action
- epistulam scrībō — the letter receives the action
- portam aperiō — the gate receives the action

Twice through:

Before you move on

What does -am tell you here? (This familiar -a noun is the direct object.)
Change epistula for "I write a letter." (Epistulam scrībō.)

59.2 amīcus -> amīcum — a second road to the same object marker

You saw -a -> -am. Now read amīcum videō — I see the friend.

The noun changed more visibly, but the final signal is familiar: the word ends in -m because the seeing reaches it.

You'll want to know: -us and -er reach -um

Three known nouns give you the useful masculine pattern:

- amīcus -> amīcum — amīcum adiuvō, I help the friend
- magister -> magistrum — magistrum audiō, I hear the teacher
- liber -> librum — librum legō, I read the book

Magister and liber drop their nominative -er before -um. The genitives you learned — magistrī, librī — already showed the shorter stems magistr- and libr-.

Grammar Lens: the ending frees the order

Librum legō does not need English order to tell you what is read. The -um has already done that work.
Put the two lessons together: epistulam scrībō; librum legō. Two actions, two objects, two visible endings.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- amīcum adiuvō
- magistrum audiō
- librum legō

Twice through:

Before you move on

What is the object form of liber? (Librum.)
What ending do amīcum, magistrum and librum share? (-um, ending in the accusative -m.)

59.3 ad scholam, in scholā, domum — toward, at, and homeward

The form scholam is no longer new. Read it: scholam after a tiny word — ad scholam

Ad points toward an endpoint: ad scholam ambulō — I walk to or toward school.

You'll want to know: motion and rest do not look alike

These three short shapes carry a whole route:

- ad scholam ambulō — I walk toward school
- in scholā sedeō — I sit in school
- domum eō — I go home

Motion toward takes ad plus the accusative scholam. Rest in a place takes in plus ablative scholā, whose long final -ā matters. Domum is the old compact exception: homeward needs no preposition.

Grammar Lens: follow the case, then the journey

A reader can now follow three stages without translating every word: movement toward, rest inside, movement home.
Add the object from the last lesson: in scholā librum legō. The long -ā locates the action; -um shows what the reading reaches.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ad scholam ambulō — movement toward
- in scholā sedeō — rest inside
- domum eō — movement home

Twice through:

Before you move on

Which form means "in school"? (In scholā, with long -ā.)
Which destination needs no preposition? (Domum — homeward.)

59.4 (reading) — a whole meeting, one turn at a time

The first passage was forty-two words. This exchange is seventy-three.

Do not race. Follow who asks, who answers, and where the two people go. The endings will keep the objects visible.

Read this

— Salvē! — Salvē! — Quid tibi nōmen est? — Mihi nōmen est Iūlia. Quid tibi nōmen est? — Mihi nōmen est Mārcus. — Quōmodo valēs? — Bene valeō. Et tū? — Bene valeō. — Ubi schola tua est? — Schola mea ibi est. Ubi schola tua est? — Schola mea hic est. — Māne ad scholam ambulō. In scholā sedeō. — Ego māne librum legō. Post merīdiem epistulam scrībō. — Librum iterum legō. — Cūr? — Quia liber meus bonus est. — Bene. — Crās tē vidēbō. — Ita. Valē! — Valē!

Read it: the dialogue once for the route — names, wellbeing, school, work, reason, farewell
Read it: the dialogue again for the two things handled — librum, epistulam

Grammar Lens: a dialogue is a chain of answers

You do not need to translate every turn. Quid tibi nōmen est? predicts a name. Quōmodo valēs? predicts wellbeing. Ubi predicts a place. Cūr? predicts quia.
That prediction is reading. It lets the shape of one turn prepare you for the next.

Your turn

- Say it: the exchange once, preserving each turn

Before you move on

Where does the first speaker's school stand? (Ibi — there.)
Why is the book read again? (Quia liber meus bonus est.)

59.5 (reading) — diēs meus, my day

The exchange gave you seventy-three words in turns. This account gives you one hundred forty words in one voice.

First follow the day words. Then follow the objects. You already know every form.

Read this

Mihi nōmen est Mārcus. Ego sum discipulus. Domus mea bona est. Canis meus hīc est, et fēlēs mea ibi est. Māne prīma hōra est. Ego stō, lac bibō, et mel et ōvum edō. Portam aperiō et portam claudō, et ad scholam ambulō. Schola mea bona est. In scholā sedeō. Magister meus bonus est. Magistrum videō et audiō. Prīmum librum accipiō et legō. Secundum librum nōn accipiō, quia secundus liber malus est. Epistulam scrībō. Cōgitō et intellegō. Amīcum meum videō et adiuvō. Amīcus meus discipulus est. Sexta hōra est. Lac bibō, et mel et ōvum edō. Vīnum nōn bibō. Aquam bibō. Mare et caelum videō. Post merīdiem domum eō. Hic sedeō, et librum iterum legō. Cūr iterum legō? Quia liber meus bonus est. Vesper est. Nox est. Bene valeō. Dormiō. Crās iterum ad scholam veniō. Crās magistrum et amīcum meum videō.

Read it: the account once for time — morning, first hour, sixth hour, after midday, evening, night, tomorrow
Read it: the account again for the route — home, toward school, in school, homeward

Grammar Lens: the account has two maps

The time words make one map. The place phrases make another. Inside both, the object endings tell you what each action reaches: portam, magistrum, librum, epistulam, amīcum, aquam.
The account repeats librum for a reason. The first book is read; the second is refused; the good book is read again. That is a connected thread, not a list of unrelated sentences.

Your turn

- Say it: the account once, pausing only at full stops

Twice through:

Before you move on

Put the route in order. (Domus — ad scholam — in scholā — domum.)
What happens tomorrow? (He goes to school again and sees his teacher and friend.)

Chapter 60

Writing — My Own Line

Modes: ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can write one line of Latin about myself from a closed supply of known words and forms, choosing not only which word but which ending it wears.
>
> Complete LA-W02-versus-meus: one line chosen rather than copied, using only forms the book has shown rather than forms guessed from a pattern.

60.1 Your own line — the first writing with no model

Everything you have written so far had something to reach for.

This does not. You choose the words, from a supply that is closed: only what this book has taught you.

Writing — controlled composition

Write one line in Latin about yourself.

And here is what makes this step harder in Latin than it is in most languages. Choosing the words is not enough. You must also choose which ending each word wears.

In English or French the shape of a word is given and its job comes from where you put it. In Latin the job comes from the ending, so a word you have only ever met in one form is a word you cannot yet place — you know it, and you still have to decide what it is doing.

Write the line. Use only forms the book has actually shown you, not forms you have guessed at from a pattern.

Before you move on

In Latin, what tells a reader what a word is doing in the sentence? (Its ending.)
So what did you have to choose here that a French writer does not? (The form of each word, not only which word.)

Chapter 61

Writing — With A Clock

Modes: ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can complete the Latin A1 writing paper's three parts inside its published thirty minutes and meet each part's word floor.
>
> Complete LA-W03-cum-horologio: six minutes of dictation, ten of controlled sentences, fourteen for the personal note, then check each against its published range.

61.1 The same writing, with a clock

You wrote your own line with as long as you liked.

A task you can only do untimed is not yet a task you can do.

Writing — timed production

What this track's contract publishes. The Latin A1 writing paper runs 30 minutes and holds three parts, which is one more than most:

- dictation and orthography — 5 items, 8 to 15 words;
- controlled sentences — 4 items, 20 to 35 words;
- a short personal note — 3 items, 35 to 50 words.

Those numbers come out of `task-shapes/a1.json`, not from this page.

Split the clock the way the parts are weighted: six minutes, ten minutes, fourteen minutes. Start.

Stop when the time is up, even mid-word. An unfinished paper is information; an untimed one is not.

Before you move on

Now the rule this track states more sharply than any other, and the reason it does.

Latin is the language most people meet only as reading. Centuries of teaching it that way have made "I know Latin" mean "I can construe a page", and a four-skill contract has to refuse that or it is not measuring the same thing at all.

So: each of the four papers is worth 25 points and each must independently reach 15. The aggregate must also reach 60 out of 100. Reading strength cannot hide absent writing. That is a project standard rather than an external certificate — Latin has no awarding body issuing one — and it is stated openly as this project's own choice.

Count your words against the three ranges. Being under the floor on any one of them is the same as not having attempted it.

Chapter 62

Writing — Four Lines, And The Word That Has A Twin

Modes: ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can write four connected lines to a named reader, joining with et, sed or aut and giving a reason with quia rather than the ambiguous quod.
>
> Complete LA-W04-quattuor-versus: four lines to one reader, at least one joined and at least one reasoned with quia, then name which of Latin's two because-words can also mean which.

62.1 Four lines, and the word that has a twin

> The last lesson asked for writing finished on time. This one asks for writing that holds together.
>
> Pick one person who will read it.

What to know first

Connected writing is not longer writing. Four short lines can be connected; one long line can fail to be. What makes it connected is that a sentence stops standing on its own.

You hold four joiners. et adds. sed sets against. aut offers. quia gives the reason.

Use quia for your reason, and use it deliberately, because Latin has a second word that also means because — quod — and that one is doing two jobs at once. quod is also the ordinary word for which.

So a sentence built on quod hands the reader a small decision the writer may not have noticed making: is this a reason, or is it a relative clause? quia hands them nothing to decide. At this level, write the word that can only mean one thing.

That is a real habit and not a beginner's crutch. Choosing the unambiguous word where one exists is most of what clear writing is, in any language.

Writing — connected composition

Write four lines to the person you picked.

At least one must use et, sed or aut. At least one must use quia.

Use only words and forms the book has shown you. This lesson adds no vocabulary; the whole exercise is the joining.

Before you move on

Cover your first line and read the second alone. Does it still make sense without the first? If it does, you wrote a list — which is where you were one lesson ago.

Which of Latin's two words for because can also mean which? (quod.) And which one did you write? (quia — the one that cannot be mistaken.)

Chapter 63

Arm, Finger, Tooth

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name an arm, a finger, a tooth, the tongue and the nose.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 63: I can name an arm, a finger, a tooth, the tongue and the nose.

63.1 bracchium, bracchiī — an arm

Before the new one: say the Latin for before, then the Latin for after.

You'll want to know: bracchium, bracchiī

bracchium, bracchiī — "an arm".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bracchium is usually taken as a loan from Greek brakhiōn, "arm" (EtymDB 2.1). Lewis & Short only call the two words kindred. English bracelet comes from bracchium through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bracchium
- Say it: bracchium, once more
- Say it: say bracchium
- Recall: say the Latin for before, then the Latin for after, then say bracchium again

Before you move on

What does bracchium, bracchiī mean? ("An arm".) Say it once more.

63.2 digitus, digitī — a finger

Before the new one: say the Latin for after, then the Latin for an arm.

You'll want to know: digitus, digitī

digitus, digitī — "a finger". English digit keeps it: we first counted on our fingers.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

digitus has no certain origin. It is often linked to Proto-Indo-European deik-*, "to show, to point out" (EtymDB 2.1): the finger as the pointer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: digitus
- Say it: digitus, once more
- Say it: say digitus

- Recall: say the Latin for after, then the Latin for an arm, then say digitus again

Before you move on

What does digitus, digitī mean? ("A finger".) Say it once more.

63.3 dēns, dentis — a tooth

Before the new one: say the Latin for an arm, then the Latin for a finger.

You'll want to know: dēns, dentis

dēns, dentis — "a tooth". A dentist looks after them.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēns is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3dent-*, "tooth" (EtymDB 2.1). English tooth is a distant cousin (Lewis & Short), and English dental comes from dēns itself.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēns
- Say it: dēns, once more
- Say it: say dēns
- Recall: say the Latin for an arm, then the Latin for a finger, then say dēns again

Before you move on

What does dēns, dentis mean? ("A tooth".) Say it once more.

63.4 lingua, linguae — the tongue; a language

Before the new one: say the Latin for a finger, then the Latin for a tooth.

You'll want to know: lingua, linguae lingua, linguae — "the tongue; a language". Both meanings, as in English tongue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children lingua is inherited. Early Latin had dingua, "tongue" (Lewis & Short), and the word is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dnghweh2s*, "tongue" (EtymDB 2.1); English tongue is a cousin. The l is often put down to the pull of lingō, "to lick".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lingua
- Say it: lingua, once more
- Say it: say lingua
- Recall: say the Latin for a finger, then the Latin for a tooth, then say lingua again

Before you move on

What does lingua, linguae mean? ("The tongue; a language".) Say it once more.

63.5 nāsus, nāsī — the nose

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tooth, then the Latin for the tongue; a language.

You'll want to know: nāsus, nāsī nāsus, nāsī — "the nose". English nasal.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nāsus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European neh2s-*, "nose" (EtymDB 2.1). English nose is a cousin from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nāsus
- Say it: nāsus, once more
- Say it: say nāsus
- Recall: say the Latin for a tooth, then the Latin for the tongue; a language, then say nāsus again

Before you move on

What does nāsus, nāsī mean? ("The nose".) Say it once more.

Chapter 64

Neck, Shoulder, Knee, Heart

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the neck, a shoulder, a knee, the heart and blood.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 64: I can name the neck, a shoulder, a knee, the heart and blood.

64.1 collum, collī — the neck

> Before the new one: say the Latin for the tongue; a language, then the Latin for the nose.

You'll want to know: collum, collī

collum, collī — "the neck". A collar goes round it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

collum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwolso-, "neck" (EtymDB 2.1), perhaps from a root kwel-, "to turn".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: collum
- Say it: collum, once more
- Say it: say collum
- Recall: say the Latin for the tongue; a language, then the Latin for the nose, then say collum again

Before you move on

What does collum, collī mean? ("The neck".) Say it once more.

64.2 umerus, umerī — the shoulder

Before the new one: say the Latin for the nose, then the Latin for the neck.

You'll want to know: umerus, umerī

umerus, umerī — "the shoulder".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

umerus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3emsos*, "shoulder" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek ōmos, "shoulder", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English humerus, the upper-arm bone, is the same word with a later h.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: umerus
- Say it: umerus, once more
- Say it: say umerus

- Recall: say the Latin for the nose, then the Latin for the neck, then say umerus again

Before you move on

What does umerus, umerī mean? ("The shoulder".) Say it once more.

64.3 genū, genūs — a knee

Before the new one: say the Latin for the neck, then the Latin for the shoulder.

You'll want to know: genū, genūs

genū, genūs — "a knee". Genuflect: to bend the knee.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children genū is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gonu*, "knee" (EtymDB 2.1). English knee is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: genū
- Say it: genū, once more
- Say it: say genū
- Recall: say the Latin for the neck, then the Latin for the shoulder, then say genū again

Before you move on

What does genū, genūs mean? ("A knee".) Say it once more.

64.4 cor, cordis — the heart

Before the new one: say the Latin for the shoulder, then the Latin for a knee.

You'll want to know: cor, cordis

cor, cordis — "the heart". English cordial, from the genitive cordis.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cor is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European krd-*, "heart" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek kardia, "heart", and English heart are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cor
- Say it: cor, once more
- Say it: say cor
- Recall: say the Latin for the shoulder, then the Latin for a knee, then say cor again

Before you move on

What does cor, cordis mean? ("The heart".) Say it once more.

64.5 sanguis, sanguinis — blood

Before the new one: say the Latin for a knee, then the Latin for the heart.

You'll want to know: sanguis, sanguinis

sanguis, sanguinis — "blood".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sanguis has no agreed origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. EtymDB 2.1 records a proposal that ties it to Proto-Indo-European h1esh2r*, "blood", but not everyone accepts it. English sanguine comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sanguis
- Say it: sanguis, once more
- Say it: say sanguis
- Recall: say the Latin for a knee, then the Latin for the heart, then say sanguis again

Before you move on

What does sanguis, sanguinis mean? ("Blood".) Say it once more.

Chapter 65

Hair, Belly, Back, Forehead, Beard

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name hair, the belly, the back, the forehead and a beard.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 65: I can name hair, the belly, the back, the forehead and a beard.

65.1 capillus, capillī — a hair, the hair

> Before the new one: say the Latin for the heart, then the Latin for blood.

You'll want to know: capillus, capillī

capillus, capillī — "a hair, the hair". A capillary is hair-thin.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

capillus is linked to caput, "head": it is often read as caput plus pilus, "a single hair", so head-hair (EtymDB 2.1), while Lewis & Short see a diminutive beside caput.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: capillus
- Say it: capillus, once more
- Say it: say capillus
- Recall: say the Latin for the heart, then the Latin for blood, then say capillus again

Before you move on

What does capillus, capillī mean? ("A hair, the hair".) Say it once more.

65.2 venter, ventris — the belly

Before the new one: say the Latin for blood, then the Latin for a hair.

You'll want to know: venter, ventris venter, ventris — "the belly". A ventriloquist speaks from the belly.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

venter may be inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European wendtri-*, "belly" (EtymDB 2.1), though its relatives in other languages are few and uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: venter
- Say it: venter, once more
- Say it: say venter

- Recall: say the Latin for blood, then the Latin for a hair, then say venter again

Before you move on

What does venter, ventris mean? (“The belly”.) Say it once more.

65.3 tergum, tergī — the back

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hair, then the Latin for the belly.

You’ll want to know: tergum, tergī

tergum, tergī — “the back”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tergum, “the back”, has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English tergiversation, “turning one’s back, evasion”, is built on it.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tergum
- Say it: tergum, once more
- Say it: say tergum
- Recall: say the Latin for a hair, then the Latin for the belly, then say tergum again

Before you move on

What does tergum, tergī mean? (“The back”.) Say it once more.

65.4 frōns, frontis — the forehead, the front

Before the new one: say the Latin for the belly, then the Latin for the back.

You'll want to know: frōns, frontis

frōns, frontis — "the forehead, the front". English front and frontier.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frōns, frontis, is often traced to Proto-Indo-European bhront-*, "forehead" (EtymDB 2.1), but the link is not certain. It is a different word from frōns, frondis, "leafy branches".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frōns
- Say it: frōns, once more
- Say it: say frōns
- Recall: say the Latin for the belly, then the Latin for the back, then say frōns again

Before you move on

What does frōns, frontis mean? ("The forehead, the front".) Say it once more.

65.5 barba, barbae — a beard

Before the new one: say the Latin for the back, then the Latin for the forehead.

You'll want to know: barba, barbae barba, barbae — "a beard". A barber trims it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

barba is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhardheh2*, "beard" (EtymDB 2.1); English beard is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: barba
- Say it: barba, once more
- Say it: say barba
- Recall: say the Latin for the back, then the Latin for the forehead, then say barba again

Before you move on

What does barba, barbae mean? ("A beard".) Say it once more.

Chapter 66

Chest, Leg, Cheek, Nail, Healthy

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the chest, a leg, a cheek and a nail, and say healthy.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 66: I can name the chest, a leg, a cheek and a nail, and say healthy.

66.1 pectus, pectoris — the chest, the breast

Before the new one: say the Latin for the forehead, then the Latin for a beard.

You'll want to know: pectus, pectoris

pectus, pectoris — "the chest, the breast".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pectus is probably inherited: EtymDB 2.1 traces it through Proto-Italic pektos*, "chest", to a Proto-Indo-European peg-*, "breast", a root with few other witnesses. English pectoral comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pectus
- Say it: pectus, once more
- Say it: say pectus
- Recall: say the Latin for the forehead, then the Latin for a beard, then say pectus again

Before you move on

What does pectus, pectoris mean? ("The chest, the breast".) Say it once more.

66.2 crūs, crūris — a leg, a shin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a beard, then the Latin for the chest.

You'll want to know: crūs, crūris

crūs, crūris — "a leg, a shin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crūs, "leg, shin", has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful, and no later proposal has won general agreement.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crūs
- Say it: crūs, once more
- Say it: say crūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a beard, then the Latin for the chest, then say crūs again

Before you move on

What does crūs, crūris mean? (“A leg, a shin”.) Say it once more.

66.3 gena, genae — a cheek

Before the new one: say the Latin for the chest, then the Latin for a leg.

You’ll want to know: gena, genae

gena, genae — “a cheek”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gena is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European genu-*, “jaw, cheek” (EtymDB 2.1). Greek genys, “jaw” (Lewis & Short), and English chin are cousins.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gena
- Say it: gena, once more
- Say it: say gena
- Recall: say the Latin for the chest, then the Latin for a leg, then say gena again

Before you move on

What does gena, genae mean? (“A cheek”.) Say it once more.

66.4 unguis, unguis — a fingernail, a claw

Before the new one: say the Latin for a leg, then the Latin for a cheek.

You'll want to know: unguis, unguis

unguis, unguis — "a fingernail, a claw".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

unguis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3nogwh-, "nail, claw" (EtymDB 2.1 writes h3negh-, without the w that the Latin gu needs). Greek onyx, "claw, nail" (Lewis & Short), and English nail are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: unguis
- Say it: unguis, once more
- Say it: say unguis
- Recall: say the Latin for a leg, then the Latin for a cheek, then say unguis again

Before you move on

What does unguis, unguis mean? ("A fingernail, a claw".) Say it once more.

66.5 sānus, sāna, sānum — healthy, sound

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cheek, then the Latin for a fingernail.

You'll want to know: sānus, sāna, sānum

sānus, sāna, sānum — "healthy, sound". English sane: sound in mind.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sānus has no secure origin. Lewis & Short compare Greek sōs, "safe and sound", and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European swan-*, "healthy", but neither link is settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sānus
- Say it: sānus, once more
- Say it: say sānus
- Recall: say the Latin for a cheek, then the Latin for a fingernail, then say sānus again

Before you move on

What does sānus, sāna, sānum mean? ("Healthy, sound".) Say it once more.

Chapter 67

Fever, Cough, Pain

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a fever, a cough, pain, medicine and an illness.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 67: I can name a fever, a cough, pain, medicine and an illness.

67.1 febris, febris — a fever

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fingernail, then the Latin for healthy.

You'll want to know: febris, febris

febris, febris — "a fever". English fever and febrile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

febris is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root dhegwh-*, "to burn" (EtymDB 2.1): a fever as a burning.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: febris
- Say it: febris, once more
- Say it: say febris
- Recall: say the Latin for a fingernail, then the Latin for healthy, then say febris again

Before you move on

What does febris, febris mean? ("A fever".) Say it once more.

67.2 tussis, tussis — a cough

Before the new one: say the Latin for healthy, then the Latin for a fever.

You'll want to know: tussis, tussis

tussis, tussis — "a cough".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tussis is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root (s)tewd-*, "to push, to strike" (EtymDB 2.1). Doctors still say pertussis, "whooping cough", built from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tussis
- Say it: tussis, once more
- Say it: say tussis
- Recall: say the Latin for healthy, then the Latin for a fever, then say tussis again

Before you move on

What does tussis, tussis mean? ("A cough".) Say it once more.

67.3 dolor, dolōris — pain, grief

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fever, then the Latin for a cough.

You'll want to know: dolor, dolōris

dolor, dolōris — "pain, grief".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dolor is built on doleō, "to hurt, to grieve" (Lewis & Short), with the ending -or, "a state". The family is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European delh1-*, "to split, to hew" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dolor
- Say it: dolor, once more
- Say it: say dolor
- Recall: say the Latin for a fever, then the Latin for a cough, then say dolor again

Before you move on

What does dolor, dolōris mean? ("Pain, grief".) Say it once more.

67.4 medicīna, medicīnae — medicine

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cough, then the Latin for pain.

You'll want to know: medicīna, medicīnae medicīna, medicīnae — "medicine". What a medicus gives you.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

medicīna is built on medicus, "a doctor", which comes from medeor, "to heal" (EtymDB 2.1). English medicine comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: medicīna
- Say it: medicīna, once more
- Say it: say medicīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a cough, then the Latin for pain, then say medicīna again

Before you move on

What does medicīna, medicīnae mean? ("Medicine".) Say it once more.

67.5 morbus, morbī — an illness, a disease

Before the new one: say the Latin for pain, then the Latin for medicine.

You'll want to know: morbus, morbī morbus, morbī — "an illness, a disease". English morbid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

morbus has no certain origin. It is often linked with morior, "to die" (Lewis & Short), and EtymDB 2.1 traces it to Proto-Indo-European mer-*, "to die", but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: morbus
- Say it: morbus, once more
- Say it: say morbus
- Recall: say the Latin for pain, then the Latin for medicine, then say morbus again

Before you move on

What does morbus, morbī mean? ("An illness, a disease".) Say it once more.

Chapter 68

Sick, Tired, Hungry, Thirsty

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say sick and tired, and name hunger, thirst and worry.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 68: I can say sick and tired, and name hunger, thirst and worry.

68.1 aeger, aegra, aegrum — sick, ill

Before the new one: say the Latin for medicine, then the Latin for an illness.

You'll want to know: aeger, aegra, aegrum

aeger, aegra, aegrum — "sick, ill". The opposite of sānus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aeger, "sick", has no sure origin; Lewis & Short list only tentative comparisons, and no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aeger
- Say it: aeger, once more
- Say it: say aeger
- Recall: say the Latin for medicine, then the Latin for an illness, then say aeger again

Before you move on

What does aeger, aegra, aegrum mean? ("Sick, ill".) Say it once more.

68.2 fessus, fessa, fessum — tired

Before the new one: say the Latin for an illness, then the Latin for sick.

You'll want to know: fessus, fessa, fessum

fessus, fessa, fessum — "tired".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fessus is the old participle of fatīscor, "to grow weary, to gape open". It belongs with fatīgō, "to tire out" (Lewis & Short). English fatigue comes from that verb through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fessus
- Say it: fessus, once more
- Say it: say fessus

- Recall: say the Latin for an illness, then the Latin for sick, then say fessus again

Before you move on

What does fessus, fessa, fessum mean? (“Tired”.) Say it once more.

68.3 famēs, famis — hunger

Before the new one: say the Latin for sick, then the Latin for tired.

You’ll want to know: famēs, famis

famēs, famis — “hunger”. English famine.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

famēs has no sure origin. One proposal, which EtymDB 2.1 records, ties it to a Proto-Indo-European root dhH-*, “to disappear”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: famēs
- Say it: famēs, once more
- Say it: say famēs
- Recall: say the Latin for sick, then the Latin for tired, then say famēs again

Before you move on

What does famēs, famis mean? (“Hunger”.) Say it once more.

68.4 sitis, sitis — thirst

Before the new one: say the Latin for tired, then the Latin for hunger.

You'll want to know: sitis, sitis

sitis, sitis — "thirst". aqua answers it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sitis is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhgwhitis*, "a wasting, a decline" (EtymDB 2.1), the form behind Greek phthisis, "decline, consumption"; Lewis & Short still called it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sitis
- Say it: sitis, once more
- Say it: say sitis
- Recall: say the Latin for tired, then the Latin for hunger, then say sitis again

Before you move on

What does sitis, sitis mean? ("Thirst".) Say it once more.

68.5 cūra, cūrae — care, worry

Before the new one: say the Latin for hunger, then the Latin for thirst.

You'll want to know: cūra, cūrae cūra, cūrae — "care, worry". English cure and curator.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūra has no sure origin. EtymDB 2.1 records a proposal that traces it to Proto-Indo-European kweys-*, "to heed", but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cūra
- Say it: cūra, once more
- Say it: say cūra
- Recall: say the Latin for hunger, then the Latin for thirst, then say cūra again

Before you move on

What does cūra, cūrae mean? ("Care, worry".) Say it once more.

Chapter 69

Joy, Anger, Fear

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name joy, anger and fear, and say happy and sad.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 69: I can name joy, anger and fear, and say happy and sad.

69.1 gaudium, gaudiī — joy

Before the new one: say the Latin for thirst, then the Latin for care.

You'll want to know: gaudium, gaudiī

gaudium, gaudiī — "joy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gaudium is built on gaudeō, "to rejoice" (EtymDB 2.1). English joy comes from its plural through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gaudium
- Say it: gaudium, once more
- Say it: say gaudium
- Recall: say the Latin for thirst, then the Latin for care, then say gaudium again

Before you move on

What does gaudium, gaudiī mean? ("Joy".) Say it once more.

69.2 īra, īrae — anger

Before the new one: say the Latin for care, then the Latin for joy.

You'll want to know: īra, īrae

īra, īrae — "anger". English ire and irate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īra is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root h1eysh2-*, "to fall upon, to act sharply" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īra
- Say it: īra, once more
- Say it: say īra
- Recall: say the Latin for care, then the Latin for joy, then say īra again

Before you move on

What does īra, īrae mean? ("Anger".) Say it once more.

69.3 timor, timōris — fear

Before the new one: say the Latin for joy, then the Latin for anger.

You'll want to know: timor, timōris timor, timōris — "fear". English timid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

timor is built on timeō, "to fear" (EtymDB 2.1), with the ending -or, "a state". Where timeō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: timor
- Say it: timor, once more
- Say it: say timor
- Recall: say the Latin for joy, then the Latin for anger, then say timor again

Before you move on

What does timor, timōris mean? ("Fear".) Say it once more.

69.4 laetus, laeta, laetum — happy, glad

Before the new one: say the Latin for anger, then the Latin for fear.

You'll want to know: laetus, laeta, laetum

laetus, laeta, laetum — "happy, glad".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

laetus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. Lewis & Short give it the sense "rich, fertile" for crops and fields.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: laetus
- Say it: laetus, once more
- Say it: say laetus
- Recall: say the Latin for anger, then the Latin for fear, then say laetus again

Before you move on

What does laetus, laeta, laetum mean? ("Happy, glad".) Say it once more.

69.5 trīstis, trīste — sad

Before the new one: say the Latin for fear, then the Latin for happy.

You'll want to know: trīstis, trīste

trīstis, trīste — "sad".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trīstis has no sure origin. Lewis & Short call it doubtful; EtymDB 2.1 records a reconstructed Proto-Indo-European treystis*, "in a bad mood", but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trīstis
- Say it: trīstis, once more
- Say it: say trīstis
- Recall: say the Latin for fear, then the Latin for happy, then say trīstis again

Before you move on

What does trīstis, trīste mean? ("Sad".) Say it once more.

Chapter 70

Son, Daughter, Grandparents

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a son, a daughter, a grandfather, a grandmother and a family.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 70: I can name a son, a daughter, a grandfather, a grandmother and a family.

70.1 fīlius, fīliī — a son

> Before the new one: say the Latin for happy, then the Latin for sad.

You'll want to know: fīlius, fīliī

fīlius, fīliī — "a son". English filial.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīlius is inherited. Old Latin had fīlios, "son", and the word is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1ylios*, "a suckling" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for nursing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīlius
- Say it: fīlius, once more
- Say it: say fīlius
- Recall: say the Latin for happy, then the Latin for sad, then say fīlius again

Before you move on

What does fīlius, fīliī mean? ("A son".) Say it once more.

70.2 fīlia, fīliae — a daughter

Before the new one: say the Latin for sad, then the Latin for a son.

You'll want to know: fīlia, fīliae

fīlia, fīliae — "a daughter".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīlia is the feminine of fīlius, "a son" (Lewis & Short); the pair is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1ylios*, "a suckling" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīlia
- Say it: fīlia, once more
- Say it: say fīlia
- Recall: say the Latin for sad, then the Latin for a son, then say fīlia again

Before you move on

What does fīlia, fīliae mean? ("A daughter".) Say it once more.

70.3 avus, avī — a grandfather

Before the new one: say the Latin for a son, then the Latin for a daughter.

You'll want to know: avus, avī

avus, avī — "a grandfather".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

avus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ewh2os*, "grandfather, elder male relative" (EtymDB 2.1). Its family includes avunculus, "mother's brother", the source of English uncle.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avus
- Say it: avus, once more
- Say it: say avus
- Recall: say the Latin for a son, then the Latin for a daughter, then say avus again

Before you move on

What does avus, avī mean? ("A grandfather".) Say it once more.

70.4 avia, aviae — a grandmother

Before the new one: say the Latin for a daughter, then the Latin for a grandfather.

You'll want to know: avia, aviae

avia, aviae — "a grandmother".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

avia is the feminine of avus, "a grandfather" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ewh2os*, "grandfather" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avia
- Say it: avia, once more
- Say it: say avia
- Recall: say the Latin for a daughter, then the Latin for a grandfather, then say avia again

Before you move on

What does avia, aviae mean? ("A grandmother".) Say it once more.

70.5 familia, familiae — a family, a household

Before the new one: say the Latin for a grandfather, then the Latin for a grandmother.

You'll want to know: familia, familiae

familia, familiae — "a family, a household".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

familia is built on famulus, "a household slave, a servant" (Lewis & Short): a familia was first everyone under one master's roof, the slaves included. English family comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: familia
- Say it: familia, once more
- Say it: say familia
- Recall: say the Latin for a grandfather, then the Latin for a grandmother, then say familia again

Before you move on

What does familia, familiae mean? ("A family, a household".) Say it once more.

Chapter 71

Husband, Wife, Children

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a husband, a wife, children, a baby and an uncle.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 71: I can name a husband, a wife, children, a baby and an uncle.

71.1 marītus, marītī — a husband

Before the new one: say the Latin for a grandmother, then the Latin for a family.

You'll want to know: marītus, marītī marītus, marītī — "a husband". English marital.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

marītus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European word for a young man of an age to marry, meryo-*, "young man" (EtymDB 2.1). English marry comes from its family through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: marītus
- Say it: marītus, once more
- Say it: say marītus
- Recall: say the Latin for a grandmother, then the Latin for a family, then say marītus again

Before you move on

What does marītus, marītī mean? ("A husband".) Say it once more.

71.2 uxor, uxōris — a wife

Before the new one: say the Latin for a family, then the Latin for a husband.

You'll want to know: uxor, uxōris

uxor, uxōris — "a wife".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

uxor, "wife", has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful, and no later proposal has won agreement. English uxorious, "doting on one's wife", comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: uxor
- Say it: uxor, once more
- Say it: say uxor
- Recall: say the Latin for a family, then the Latin for a husband, then say uxor again

Before you move on

What does uxor, uxōris mean? (“A wife”.) Say it once more.

71.3 līberī, līberōrum — children

Before the new one: say the Latin for a husband, then the Latin for a wife.

You’ll want to know: līberī, līberōrum

līberī, līberōrum — “children”. Only in the plural.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līberī, “children”, is the plural of līber, “free” (EtymDB 2.1): the free-born members of a household, as against its slaves. līber is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1lewdheros*, “free” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: līberī
- Say it: līberī, once more
- Say it: say līberī
- Recall: say the Latin for a husband, then the Latin for a wife, then say līberī again

Before you move on

What does līberī, līberōrum mean? (“Children”.) Say it once more.

71.4 īnfāns, īnfantis — a baby, an infant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wife, then the Latin for children.

You'll want to know: īnfāns, īnfantis

īnfāns, īnfantis — "a baby, an infant". Literally "not speaking".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnfāns is built from in-, "not", and for, "I speak" (Lewis & Short): a baby is one who cannot yet speak. Its second part is fāns, "speaking". English infant comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnfāns
- Say it: īnfāns, once more
- Say it: say īnfāns
- Recall: say the Latin for a wife, then the Latin for children, then say īnfāns again

Before you move on

What does īnfāns, īnfantis mean? ("A baby, an infant".) Say it once more.

71.5 patruus, patruī — an uncle (father's brother)

Before the new one: say the Latin for children, then the Latin for a baby.

You'll want to know: patruus, patruī

patruus, patruī — "an uncle (father's brother)". Built on pater.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patruus is built on pater, "father" (Lewis & Short): the uncle on the father's side. pater is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ph2ter*, "father" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patruus
- Say it: patruus, once more
- Say it: say patruus
- Recall: say the Latin for children, then the Latin for a baby, then say patruus again

Before you move on

What does patruus, patruī mean? ("An uncle (father's brother)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 72

Aunt, Neighbour, Guest, Man, Woman

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name an aunt, a neighbour, a guest, a man and a woman.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 72: I can name an aunt, a neighbour, a guest, a man and a woman.

72.1 amita, amitae — an aunt (father's sister)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a baby, then the Latin for an uncle.

You'll want to know: amita, amitae

amita, amitae — "an aunt (father's sister)". English aunt comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amita is probably built on a nursery word, Proto-Indo-European amma-*, "mother" (EtymDB 2.1), with a suffix.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amita
- Say it: amita, once more
- Say it: say amita
- Recall: say the Latin for a baby, then the Latin for an uncle, then say amita again

Before you move on

What does amita, amitae mean? ("An aunt (father's sister)".) Say it once more.

72.2 vīcīnus, vīcīnī — a neighbour

Before the new one: say the Latin for an uncle, then the Latin for an aunt.

You'll want to know: vīcīnus, vīcīnī vīcīnus, vīcīnī — "a neighbour". English vicinity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīcīnus is built on vīcus, "a village, a street" (Lewis & Short): a neighbour lives in the same vīcus. vīcus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weik-*, "settlement" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīcīnus
- Say it: vīcīnus, once more
- Say it: say vīcīnus

- Recall: say the Latin for an uncle, then the Latin for an aunt, then say vīcīnus again

Before you move on

What does vīcīnus, vīcīnī mean? ("A neighbour".) Say it once more.

72.3 hospes, hospitis — a guest; a host

Before the new one: say the Latin for an aunt, then the Latin for a neighbour.

You'll want to know: hospes, hospitis

hospes, hospitis — "a guest; a host". English hospitality and hospital.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hospes is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghostipotis*, "master of guests" (EtymDB 2.1), a compound of words for "stranger, guest" and "master". English host comes from it too.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hospes
- Say it: hospes, once more
- Say it: say hospes
- Recall: say the Latin for an aunt, then the Latin for a neighbour, then say hospes again

Before you move on

What does hospes, hospitis mean? ("A guest; a host".) Say it once more.

72.4 vir, virī — a man

Before the new one: say the Latin for a neighbour, then the Latin for a guest; a host.

You'll want to know: vir, virī vir, virī — "a man". English virile and virtue.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vir is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wiHros*, "man" (EtymDB 2.1). Old English wer, "man", is a cousin and survives in English werewolf.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vir
- Say it: vir, once more
- Say it: say vir
- Recall: say the Latin for a neighbour, then the Latin for a guest; a host, then say vir again

Before you move on

What does vir, virī mean? ("A man".) Say it once more.

72.5 fēmina, fēminae — a woman

Before the new one: say the Latin for a guest; a host, then the Latin for a man.

You'll want to know: fēmina, fēminae fēmina, fēminae — "a woman". English feminine.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fēmina is inherited, usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European form of dheh1-, "to suckle", dheh1mh1neh2, "the one who nurses" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fēmina
- Say it: fēmina, once more
- Say it: say fēmina
- Recall: say the Latin for a guest; a host, then the Latin for a man, then say fēmina again

Before you move on

What does fēmina, fēminae mean? ("A woman".) Say it once more.

Chapter 73

Girl, Old Man, Queen, Sailor, Poet

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a girl, an old man, a queen, a sailor and a poet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 73: I can name a girl, an old man, a queen, a sailor and a poet.

73.1 puella, puellae — a girl

Before the new one: say the Latin for a man, then the Latin for a woman.

You'll want to know: puella, puellae

puella, puellae — "a girl".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

puella is the feminine of puellus, "a little boy" (Lewis & Short), a diminutive of puer, "a boy, a child": so "a little girl".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: puella
- Say it: puella, once more
- Say it: say puella
- Recall: say the Latin for a man, then the Latin for a woman, then say puella again

Before you move on

What does puella, puellae mean? ("A girl".) Say it once more.

73.2 senex, senis — an old man

Before the new one: say the Latin for a woman, then the Latin for a girl.

You'll want to know: senex, senis senex, senis — "an old man". English senior and senate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

senex is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European senos*, "old" (EtymDB 2.1). senātus, "the senate", was first the council of elders.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: senex
- Say it: senex, once more
- Say it: say senex
- Recall: say the Latin for a woman, then the Latin for a girl, then say senex again

Before you move on

What does senex, senis mean? (“An old man”.) Say it once more.

73.3 rēgīna, rēgīnae — a queen

Before the new one: say the Latin for a girl, then the Latin for an old man.

You’ll want to know: rēgīna, rēgīnae

rēgīna, rēgīnae — “a queen”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēgīna is built on rēx, rēgis, “a king” (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3reg-*, “to rule, a chief” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēgīna
- Say it: rēgīna, once more
- Say it: say rēgīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a girl, then the Latin for an old man, then say rēgīna again

Before you move on

What does rēgīna, rēgīnae mean? (“A queen”.) Say it once more.

73.4 nauta, nautae — a sailor

Before the new one: say the Latin for an old man, then the Latin for a queen.

You'll want to know: nauta, nautae

nauta, nautae — "a sailor". English nautical.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nauta was borrowed from Greek nautēs, "a sailor" (EtymDB 2.1). Latin also had a home-grown nāvita, "sailor", built on nāvis, "a ship" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nauta
- Say it: nauta, once more
- Say it: say nauta
- Recall: say the Latin for an old man, then the Latin for a queen, then say nauta again

Before you move on

What does nauta, nautae mean? ("A sailor".) Say it once more.

73.5 poēta, poētae — a poet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a queen, then the Latin for a sailor.

You'll want to know: poēta, poētae

poēta, poētae — "a poet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

poēta was borrowed from Greek poiētēs, "a maker, a poet" (Lewis & Short), from poieō, "to make" (EtymDB 2.1): a poet was a maker of verses.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: poētа
- Say it: poētа, once more
- Say it: say poētа
- Recall: say the Latin for a queen, then the Latin for a sailor, then say poētа again

Before you move on

What does poēta, poētae mean? ("A poet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 74

Citizen, Cook, Merchant, Farmer

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a citizen, a cook, a merchant, a farmer and a field.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 74: I can name a citizen, a cook, a merchant, a farmer and a field.

74.1 cīvis, cīvis — a citizen

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a sailor, then the Latin for a poet.

You'll want to know: cīvis, cīvis cīvis, cīvis — "a citizen". English civil and city.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cīvis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European keywos*, "intimate, friendly" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root kei-*, "to lie down, to settle".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cīvis
- Say it: cīvis, once more
- Say it: say cīvis
- Recall: say the Latin for a sailor, then the Latin for a poet, then say cīvis again

Before you move on

What does cīvis, cīvis mean? ("A citizen".) Say it once more.

74.2 coquus, coquī — a cook

Before the new one: say the Latin for a poet, then the Latin for a citizen.

You'll want to know: coquus, coquī

coquus, coquī — "a cook".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coquus is built on coquō, "to cook", which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pekw-*, "to cook, to ripen" (EtymDB 2.1). English cook came from coquus very early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: coquus
- Say it: coquus, once more
- Say it: say coquus
- Recall: say the Latin for a poet, then the Latin for a citizen, then say coquus again

Before you move on

What does coquus, coquī mean? (“A cook”.) Say it once more.

74.3 mercātor, mercātōris — a merchant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a citizen, then the Latin for a cook.

You’ll want to know: mercātor, mercātōris

mercātor, mercātōris — “a merchant”. English merchant.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mercātor is built on mercor, “to trade”, from merx, “goods, wares” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mercātor
- Say it: mercātor, once more
- Say it: say mercātor
- Recall: say the Latin for a citizen, then the Latin for a cook, then say mercātor again

Before you move on

What does mercātor, mercātōris mean? (“A merchant”.) Say it once more.

74.4 agricola, agricolae — a farmer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cook, then the Latin for a merchant.

You'll want to know: agricola, agricolae agricola, agricolae — "a farmer". English agriculture.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

agricola is a compound of ager, "a field", and colō, "to till, to tend" (Lewis & Short): a field-tiller.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: agricola
- Say it: agricola, once more
- Say it: say agricola
- Recall: say the Latin for a cook, then the Latin for a merchant, then say agricola again

Before you move on

What does agricola, agricolae mean? ("A farmer".) Say it once more.

74.5 ager, agrī — a field

Before the new one: say the Latin for a merchant, then the Latin for a farmer.

You'll want to know: ager, agrī ager, agrī — "a field". Where the agricola works.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ager is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2egros*, "field" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek agros, "field", and English acre are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ager
- Say it: ager, once more
- Say it: say ager
- Recall: say the Latin for a merchant, then the Latin for a farmer, then say ager again

Before you move on

What does ager, agrī mean? ("A field".) Say it once more.

Chapter 75

Work, Sing, Dance, Laugh, Weep

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to work, to sing, to dance, to laugh and to weep.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 75: I can say to work, to sing, to dance, to laugh and to weep.

75.1 labōrō, labōrāre — to work

Before the new one: say the Latin for a farmer, then the Latin for a field.

You'll want to know: labōrō, labōrāre labōrō, labōrāre — "to work". English labour.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

labōrō is built on labor, "toil, effort" (Lewis & Short): to work is to put in labor. Where labor itself comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: labōrō
- Say it: labōrō, once more
- Say it: say labōrō
- Recall: say the Latin for a farmer, then the Latin for a field, then say labōrō again

Before you move on

What does labōrō, labōrāre mean? ("To work".) Say it once more.

75.2 canō, canere — to sing

Before the new one: say the Latin for a field, then the Latin for to work.

You'll want to know: canō, canere

canō, canere — "to sing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

canō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European keh2n-*, "to sing" (EtymDB 2.1). English hen, the "singing" bird, is a distant cousin, and English chant comes from canō itself.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: canō
- Say it: canō, once more
- Say it: say canō
- Recall: say the Latin for a field, then the Latin for to work, then say canō again

Before you move on

What does canō, canere mean? ("To sing".) Say it once more.

75.3 saltō, saltāre — to dance

Before the new one: say the Latin for to work, then the Latin for to sing.

You'll want to know: saltō, saltāre

saltō, saltāre — "to dance".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saltō is a frequentative of saliō, "to leap" (Lewis & Short): to keep leaping, and so to dance.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saltō
- Say it: saltō, once more
- Say it: say saltō
- Recall: say the Latin for to work, then the Latin for to sing, then say saltō again

Before you move on

What does saltō, saltāre mean? ("To dance".) Say it once more.

75.4 rīdeō, rīdēre — to laugh

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sing, then the Latin for to dance.

You'll want to know: rīdeō, rīdēre

rīdeō, rīdēre — "to laugh". English ridiculous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rīdeō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English deride comes from it too.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rīdeō
- Say it: rīdeō, once more
- Say it: say rīdeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to sing, then the Latin for to dance, then say rīdeō again

Before you move on

What does rīdeō, rīdēre mean? ("To laugh".) Say it once more.

75.5 fleō, flēre — to weep

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dance, then the Latin for to laugh.

You'll want to know: fleō, flēre

fleō, flēre — "to weep".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fleō is inherited through Proto-Italic flēō*, "to weep", and probably goes back to Proto-Indo-European bhleh1-*, "to cry out, to howl" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fleō
- Say it: fleō, once more
- Say it: say fleō
- Recall: say the Latin for to dance, then the Latin for to laugh, then say fleō again

Before you move on

What does fleō, flēre mean? ("To weep".) Say it once more.

Chapter 76

Wash, Cook, Sell, Swim, Call

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to wash, to cook, to sell, to swim and to call.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 76: I can say to wash, to cook, to sell, to swim and to call.

76.1 lavō, lavāre — to wash

Before the new one: say the Latin for to laugh, then the Latin for to weep.

You'll want to know: lavō, lavāre

lavō, lavāre — "to wash". English lavatory.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lavō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European lewh3-*, "to wash" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek louō, "to wash", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lavō
- Say it: lavō, once more
- Say it: say lavō
- Recall: say the Latin for to laugh, then the Latin for to weep, then say lavō again

Before you move on

What does lavō, lavāre mean? ("To wash".) Say it once more.

76.2 coquō, coquere — to cook

Before the new one: say the Latin for to weep, then the Latin for to wash.

You'll want to know: coquō, coquere coquō, coquere — "to cook". What a coquus does.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coquō is inherited from Proto-Italic kwekwō*, "I cook", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pekw-*, "to cook, to ripen" (EtymDB 2.1); the first p changed to match the second sound. Greek peptō, "to cook, to digest", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: coquō
- Say it: coquō, once more
- Say it: say coquō

- Recall: say the Latin for to weep, then the Latin for to wash, then say coquō again

Before you move on

What does coquō, coquere mean? ("To cook".) Say it once more.

76.3 vendō, vendere — to sell

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wash, then the Latin for to cook.

You'll want to know: vendō, vendere

vendō, vendere — "to sell". English vendor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vendō is a contraction of vēnum dō, "I put up for sale", from vēnum, "sale", and dō, "I give" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vendō
- Say it: vendō, once more
- Say it: say vendō
- Recall: say the Latin for to wash, then the Latin for to cook, then say vendō again

Before you move on

What does vendō, vendere mean? ("To sell".) Say it once more.

76.4 natō, natāre — to swim

Before the new one: say the Latin for to cook, then the Latin for to sell.

You'll want to know: natō, natāre

natō, natāre — "to swim".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

natō is a frequentative of the older verb nō, "to swim, to float" (Lewis & Short): to keep swimming.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: natō
- Say it: natō, once more
- Say it: say natō
- Recall: say the Latin for to cook, then the Latin for to sell, then say natō again

Before you move on

What does natō, natāre mean? ("To swim".) Say it once more.

76.5 vocō, vocāre — to call

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sell, then the Latin for to swim.

You'll want to know: vocō, vocāre vocō, vocāre — "to call". English vocal.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vocō belongs with vōx, “voice”, and the pair is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wekw-*, “to speak” (EtymDB 2.1). English invoke comes from this family.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vocō
- Say it: vocō, once more
- Say it: say vocō
- Recall: say the Latin for to sell, then the Latin for to swim, then say vocō again

Before you move on

What does vocō, vocāre mean? (“To call”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 77

Send, Stay, Fall, Put, Find

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to send, to stay, to fall, to put and to find.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 77: I can say to send, to stay, to fall, to put and to find.

77.1 mittō, mittere — to send

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to swim, then the Latin for to call.

You'll want to know: mittō, mittere

mittō, mittere — "to send". English mission.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mittō has no secure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European meyth2-*, "to exchange, to remove", and Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English admit comes from it too.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mittō
- Say it: mittō, once more
- Say it: say mittō
- Recall: say the Latin for to swim, then the Latin for to call, then say mittō again

Before you move on

What does mittō, mittere mean? ("To send".) Say it once more.

77.2 maneō, manēre — to stay, to remain

Before the new one: say the Latin for to call, then the Latin for to send.

You'll want to know: maneō, manēre

maneō, manēre — "to stay, to remain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maneō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European men-*, "to stay" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek menō, "to stay", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English remain and mansion come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: maneō
- Say it: maneō, once more
- Say it: say maneō
- Recall: say the Latin for to call, then the Latin for to send, then say maneō again

Before you move on

What does maneō, manēre mean? (“To stay, to remain”.) Say it once more.

77.3 cadō, cadere — to fall

Before the new one: say the Latin for to send, then the Latin for to stay.

You’ll want to know: cadō, cadere

cadō, cadere — “to fall”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cadō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kad-*, “to fall” (EtymDB 2.1). English cadence, case and accident come from it.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cadō
- Say it: cadō, once more
- Say it: say cadō
- Recall: say the Latin for to send, then the Latin for to stay, then say cadō again

Before you move on

What does cadō, cadere mean? (“To fall”.) Say it once more.

77.4 pōnō, pōnere — to put, to place

Before the new one: say the Latin for to stay, then the Latin for to fall.

You'll want to know: pōnō, pōnere pōnō, pōnere — "to put, to place". English position.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children pōnō is contracted from an older posinō* (Lewis & Short), made of a prefix po-, "off, away", and sinō, "to let, to leave": to let something down in its place.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pōnō
- Say it: pōnō, once more
- Say it: say pōnō
- Recall: say the Latin for to stay, then the Latin for to fall, then say pōnō again

Before you move on

What does pōnō, pōnere mean? ("To put, to place".) Say it once more.

77.5 inveniō, invenīre — to find, to come upon

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fall, then the Latin for to put.

You'll want to know: inveniō, invenīre

inveniō, invenīre — "to find, to come upon". English invent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inveniō is built from in, "on, upon", and veniō, "to come": to come upon a thing (Lewis & Short). English invent first meant "to find".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inveniō
- Say it: inveniō, once more
- Say it: say inveniō
- Recall: say the Latin for to fall, then the Latin for to put, then say inveniō again

Before you move on

What does inveniō, invenīre mean? ("To find, to come upon".) Say it once more.

Chapter 78

Live, Enter, Return, Fear, Rejoice

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to live, to enter, to return, to fear and to rejoice.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 78: I can say to live, to enter, to return, to fear and to rejoice.

78.1 vīvō, vīvere — to live

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put, then the Latin for to find.

You'll want to know: vīvō, vīvere vīvō, vīvere — "to live". English vivid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīvō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gweih3w-*, "to live" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek bios, "life", and English quick, which once meant "alive", are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīvō
- Say it: vīvō, once more
- Say it: say vīvō
- Recall: say the Latin for to put, then the Latin for to find, then say vīvō again

Before you move on

What does vīvō, vīvere mean? ("To live".) Say it once more.

78.2 intrō, intrāre — to enter

Before the new one: say the Latin for to find, then the Latin for to live.

You'll want to know: intrō, intrāre

intrō, intrāre — "to enter".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

intrō is built on intrā, "inside, within" (EtymDB 2.1): to go inside. English enter comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: intrō
- Say it: intrō, once more
- Say it: say intrō
- Recall: say the Latin for to find, then the Latin for to live, then say intrō again

Before you move on

What does intrō, intrāre mean? ("To enter".) Say it once more.

78.3 redeō, redīre — to go back, to return

Before the new one: say the Latin for to live, then the Latin for to enter.

You'll want to know: redeō, redīre

redeō, redīre — "to go back, to return". re-, back, with eō, go.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

redeō is built from red-, "back", and eō, "to go" (EtymDB 2.1); red- is the older form of the prefix, kept before a vowel.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: redeō
- Say it: redeō, once more
- Say it: say redeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to live, then the Latin for to enter, then say redeō again

Before you move on

What does redeō, redīre mean? ("To go back, to return".) Say it once more.

78.4 timeō, timēre — to fear

Before the new one: say the Latin for to enter, then the Latin for to go back.

You'll want to know: timeō, timēre

timeō, timēre — "to fear". The verb of timor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

timeō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English timid and intimidate come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: timeō
- Say it: timeō, once more
- Say it: say timeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to enter, then the Latin for to go back, then say timeō again

Before you move on

What does timeō, timēre mean? ("To fear".) Say it once more.

78.5 gaudeō, gaudēre — to rejoice, to be glad

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go back, then the Latin for to fear.

You'll want to know: gaudeō, gaudēre gaudeō, gaudēre — "to rejoice, to be glad". The verb of gaudium.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gaudeō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European geh2w-*, "to rejoice" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek gētheō, "to rejoice", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gaudeō
- Say it: gaudeō, once more
- Say it: say gaudeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to go back, then the Latin for to fear, then say gaudeō again

Before you move on

What does gaudeō, gaudēre mean? ("To rejoice, to be glad".) Say it once more.

Chapter 79

Food and Meals

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name food, dinner, lunch, breakfast and meat.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 79: I can name food, dinner, lunch, breakfast and meat.

79.1 cibus, cibī — food

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fear, then the Latin for to rejoice.

You'll want to know: cibus, cibī

cibus, cibī — "food".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cibus, "food", has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cibus

- Say it: cibus, once more
- Say it: say cibus
- Recall: say the Latin for to fear, then the Latin for to rejoice, then say cibus again

Before you move on

What does cibus, cibī mean? ("Food".) Say it once more.

79.2 cēna, cēnae — dinner, the main meal

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rejoice, then the Latin for food.

You'll want to know: cēna, cēnae

cēna, cēnae — "dinner, the main meal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēna is inherited. An older spelling was caesna (Lewis & Short), and it is usually traced through Proto-Italic kertsnā*, "a portion", to Proto-Indo-European (s)ker-*, "to cut" (EtymDB 2.1): the meal as one's share.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cēna
- Say it: cēna, once more
- Say it: say cēna
- Recall: say the Latin for to rejoice, then the Latin for food, then say cēna again

Before you move on

What does cēna, cēnae mean? ("Dinner, the main meal".) Say it once more.

79.3 prandium, prandiī — lunch

Before the new one: say the Latin for food, then the Latin for dinner.

You'll want to know: prandium, prandiī

prandium, prandiī — "lunch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prandium probably began as "the early meal". Its first part is an old word for "early", which Lewis & Short compare with Doric Greek prān, "early". The second part is often taken as the root of edō, "to eat", but that is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prandium
- Say it: prandium, once more
- Say it: say prandium
- Recall: say the Latin for food, then the Latin for dinner, then say prandium again

Before you move on

What does prandium, prandiī mean? ("Lunch".) Say it once more.

79.4 ientāculum, ientāculī — breakfast

Before the new one: say the Latin for dinner, then the Latin for lunch.

You'll want to know: ientāculum, ientāculī

ientāculum, ientāculī — "breakfast".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ientāculum is built on ientō, "to have breakfast" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a thing. Where ientō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ientāculum
- Say it: ientāculum, once more
- Say it: say ientāculum
- Recall: say the Latin for dinner, then the Latin for lunch, then say ientāculum again

Before you move on

What does ientāculum, ientāculī mean? ("Breakfast".) Say it once more.

79.5 carō, carnis — meat

Before the new one: say the Latin for lunch, then the Latin for breakfast.

You'll want to know: carō, carnis

carō, carnis — "meat". English carnivore.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)ker-*, "to cut" (EtymDB 2.1): meat as a cut piece.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: carō
- Say it: carō, once more
- Say it: say carō
- Recall: say the Latin for lunch, then the Latin for breakfast, then say carō again

Before you move on

What does carō, carnis mean? ("Meat".) Say it once more.

Chapter 80

Cheese, Oil, Grapes, Olives

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name cheese, oil, a grape, vegetables and an olive.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 80: I can name cheese, oil, a grape, vegetables and an olive.

80.1 cāseus, cāseī — cheese

Before the new one: say the Latin for breakfast, then the Latin for meat.

You'll want to know: cāseus, cāseī

cāseus, cāseī — "cheese".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cāseus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root kwat-*, "to ferment, to turn sour" (EtymDB 2.1). English cheese was borrowed from cāseus very early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cāseus
- Say it: cāseus, once more
- Say it: say cāseus
- Recall: say the Latin for breakfast, then the Latin for meat, then say cāseus again

Before you move on

What does cāseus, cāseī mean? ("Cheese".) Say it once more.

80.2 oleum, oleī — oil

Before the new one: say the Latin for meat, then the Latin for cheese.

You'll want to know: oleum, oleī oleum, oleī — "oil". Pressed from the olive.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oleum was borrowed from Greek elaion, "olive oil" (Lewis & Short), probably from an older Greek elaiwon* (EtymDB 2.1). English oil comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: oleum
- Say it: oleum, once more
- Say it: say oleum
- Recall: say the Latin for meat, then the Latin for cheese, then say oleum again

Before you move on

What does oleum, oleī mean? (“Oil”.) Say it once more.

80.3 ūva, ūvae — a grape

Before the new one: say the Latin for cheese, then the Latin for oil.

You’ll want to know: ūva, ūvae ūva, ūvae — “a grape”. What vīnum is made from.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūva, “grape”, has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ūva
- Say it: ūva, once more
- Say it: say ūva
- Recall: say the Latin for cheese, then the Latin for oil, then say ūva again

Before you move on

What does ūva, ūvae mean? (“A grape”.) Say it once more.

80.4 holus, holeris — vegetables, greens

Before the new one: say the Latin for oil, then the Latin for a grape.

You'll want to know: holus, holeris

holus, holeris — "vegetables, greens".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

holus is inherited. Old Latin had helus, "greens", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghelh3-*, "green, yellow" (EtymDB 2.1). English yellow is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: holus
- Say it: holus, once more
- Say it: say holus
- Recall: say the Latin for oil, then the Latin for a grape, then say holus again

Before you move on

What does holus, holeris mean? ("Vegetables, greens".) Say it once more.

80.5 olīva, olīvae — an olive

Before the new one: say the Latin for a grape, then the Latin for vegetables.

You'll want to know: olīva, olīvae

olīva, olīvae — "an olive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

olīva was borrowed from Greek elaia, "olive" (Lewis & Short), probably from an older Greek elaiwa* (EtymDB 2.1). English olive comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: olīva
- Say it: olīva, once more
- Say it: say olīva
- Recall: say the Latin for a grape, then the Latin for vegetables, then say olīva again

Before you move on

What does olīva, olīvae mean? ("An olive".) Say it once more.

Chapter 81

Grain, Flour, Pear, Fig, Nut

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name grain, flour, a pear, a fig and a nut.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 81: I can name grain, flour, a pear, a fig and a nut.

81.1 frūmentum, frūmentī — grain, corn

Before the new one: say the Latin for vegetables, then the Latin for an olive.

You'll want to know: frūmentum, frūmentī

frūmentum, frūmentī — "grain, corn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frūmentum is built on the stem of fruor, "to enjoy, to have the use of" (Lewis & Short), with -mentum, an ending for a thing. fruor is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhrug-*, "to make use of" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frūmentum
- Say it: frūmentum, once more
- Say it: say frūmentum
- Recall: say the Latin for vegetables, then the Latin for an olive, then say frūmentum again

Before you move on

What does frūmentum, frūmentī mean? ("Grain, corn".) Say it once more.

81.2 farīna, farīnae — flour

Before the new one: say the Latin for an olive, then the Latin for grain.

You'll want to know: farīna, farīnae

farīna, farīnae — "flour". English farinaceous.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

farīna is built on far, "spelt", a hardy wheat (Lewis & Short): flour is ground grain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: farīna
- Say it: farīna, once more
- Say it: say farīna
- Recall: say the Latin for an olive, then the Latin for grain, then say farīna again

Before you move on

What does farīna, farīnae mean? ("Flour".) Say it once more.

81.3 pirum, pirī — a pear

Before the new one: say the Latin for grain, then the Latin for flour.

You'll want to know: pirum, pirī

pirum, pirī — "a pear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pirum, "pear", has no sure origin; it is often thought to be a loan from a lost Mediterranean language. English pear was borrowed from it early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pirum
- Say it: pirum, once more
- Say it: say pirum
- Recall: say the Latin for grain, then the Latin for flour, then say pirum again

Before you move on

What does pirum, pirī mean? ("A pear".) Say it once more.

81.4 fīcus, fīcī — a fig, a fig tree

Before the new one: say the Latin for flour, then the Latin for a pear.

You'll want to know: fīcus, fīcī

fīcus, fīcī — "a fig, a fig tree".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīcus has no sure origin. Lewis & Short compare Greek sykon, "fig"; both are often taken as loans from an unknown Mediterranean language. English fig comes from fīcus through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīcus
- Say it: fīcus, once more
- Say it: say fīcus
- Recall: say the Latin for flour, then the Latin for a pear, then say fīcus again

Before you move on

What does fīcus, fīcī mean? ("A fig, a fig tree".) Say it once more.

81.5 nux, nucis — a nut

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pear, then the Latin for a fig.

You'll want to know: nux, nucis

nux, nucis — "a nut".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nux may be inherited: EtymDB 2.1 traces it to Proto-Indo-European knew-*, "nut", but Lewis & Short call its origin doubtful, and the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nux
- Say it: nux, once more
- Say it: say nux
- Recall: say the Latin for a pear, then the Latin for a fig, then say nux again

Before you move on

What does nux, nucis mean? ("A nut".) Say it once more.

Chapter 82

Table, Chair, Bed, Window

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a table, a chair, a bed, a window and a bedroom.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 82: I can name a table, a chair, a bed, a window and a bedroom.

82.1 mēnsa, mēnsae — a table

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fig, then the Latin for a nut.

You'll want to know: mēnsa, mēnsae

mēnsa, mēnsae — "a table".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mēnsa, "table", has no sure origin. It is often linked to mēnsus, "measured", the participle of mētior, "to measure", but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mēnsa
- Say it: mēnsa, once more
- Say it: say mēnsa
- Recall: say the Latin for a fig, then the Latin for a nut, then say mēnsa again

Before you move on

What does mēnsa, mēnsae mean? ("A table".) Say it once more.

82.2 sella, sellae — a chair, a seat

Before the new one: say the Latin for a nut, then the Latin for a table.

You'll want to know: sella, sellae

sella, sellae — "a chair, a seat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sella comes from an older sedla* (Lewis & Short), built on Proto-Indo-European sed-*, "to sit" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of sedeō, "to sit". English saddle is a cousin from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sella
- Say it: sella, once more
- Say it: say sella
- Recall: say the Latin for a nut, then the Latin for a table, then say sella again

Before you move on

What does sella, sellae mean? ("A chair, a seat".) Say it once more.

82.3 lectus, lectī — a bed, a couch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a table, then the Latin for a chair.

You'll want to know: lectus, lectī

lectus, lectī — "a bed, a couch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lectus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European legh-*, "to lie" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek lekhos, "bed", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English lie. It is a different word from lēctus, "chosen".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lectus
- Say it: lectus, once more
- Say it: say lectus
- Recall: say the Latin for a table, then the Latin for a chair, then say lectus again

Before you move on

What does lectus, lectī mean? ("A bed, a couch".) Say it once more.

82.4 fenestra, fenestrae — a window

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chair, then the Latin for a bed.

You'll want to know: fenestra, fenestrae

fenestra, fenestrae — "a window".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fenestra has no sure origin; it is often thought to be a loan from Etruscan, and the old link with Greek phainō, "to show", that Lewis & Short give is not generally accepted. English defenestrate is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fenestra
- Say it: fenestra, once more
- Say it: say fenestra
- Recall: say the Latin for a chair, then the Latin for a bed, then say fenestra again

Before you move on

What does fenestra, fenestrae mean? ("A window".) Say it once more.

82.5 cubiculum, cubiculī — a bedroom

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bed, then the Latin for a window.

You'll want to know: cubiculum, cubiculī

cubiculum, cubiculī — "a bedroom". English cubicle.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cubiculum is built on cubō, "to lie down" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a place or tool: a room to lie down in.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cubiculum
- Say it: cubiculum, once more
- Say it: say cubiculum
- Recall: say the Latin for a bed, then the Latin for a window, then say cubiculum again

Before you move on

What does cubiculum, cubiculī mean? ("A bedroom".) Say it once more.

Chapter 83

Kitchen, Roof, Lamp, Cup, Knife

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a kitchen, a roof, a lamp, a cup and a knife.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 83: I can name a kitchen, a roof, a lamp, a cup and a knife.

83.1 culīna, culīnae — a kitchen

Before the new one: say the Latin for a window, then the Latin for a bedroom.

You'll want to know: culīna, culīnae culīna, culīnae — "a kitchen". English culinary.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

culīna has no sure origin; a link with coquō, "to cook", is often suggested but not proven.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: culīna
- Say it: culīna, once more
- Say it: say culīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a window, then the Latin for a bedroom, then say culīna again

Before you move on

What does culīna, culīnae mean? ("A kitchen".) Say it once more.

83.2 tēctum, tēctī — a roof

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bedroom, then the Latin for a kitchen.

You'll want to know: tēctum, tēctī

tēctum, tēctī — "a roof".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tēctum is the past participle of tegō, "to cover", used as a noun: "what covers" (Lewis & Short). tegō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)teg-*, "to cover with a roof" (EtymDB 2.1); English thatch is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tēctum
- Say it: tēctum, once more
- Say it: say tēctum

- Recall: say the Latin for a bedroom, then the Latin for a kitchen, then say tēctum again

Before you move on

What does tēctum, tēctī mean? ("A roof".) Say it once more.

83.3 lucerna, lucernae — a lamp

Before the new one: say the Latin for a kitchen, then the Latin for a roof.

You'll want to know: lucerna, lucernae

lucerna, lucernae — "a lamp". It gives lūx.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lucerna is built on lūceō, "to shine" (Lewis & Short), with -erna, a suffix also seen in caverna, "a hollow". lūceō belongs with lūx, "light".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lucerna
- Say it: lucerna, once more
- Say it: say lucerna
- Recall: say the Latin for a kitchen, then the Latin for a roof, then say lucerna again

Before you move on

What does lucerna, lucernae mean? ("A lamp".) Say it once more.

83.4 pōculum, pōculī — a cup

Before the new one: say the Latin for a roof, then the Latin for a lamp.

You'll want to know: pōculum, pōculī

pōculum, pōculī — "a cup".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōculum is inherited, usually traced through Proto-Italic pōtlom*, "drinking cup", to Proto-Indo-European peh3tlom*, "a thing to drink from" (EtymDB 2.1). pōtō, "to drink", belongs to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pōculum
- Say it: pōculum, once more
- Say it: say pōculum
- Recall: say the Latin for a roof, then the Latin for a lamp, then say pōculum again

Before you move on

What does pōculum, pōculī mean? ("A cup".) Say it once more.

83.5 culter, cultrī — a knife

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lamp, then the Latin for a cup.

You'll want to know: culter, cultrī

culter, cultrī — "a knife".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

culter is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European kelHtro-, "knife", built on (s)kelH-, "to split, to cut" (EtymDB 2.1). English coulter, the blade in front of a ploughshare, comes from culter.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: culter
- Say it: culter, once more
- Say it: say culter
- Recall: say the Latin for a lamp, then the Latin for a cup, then say culter again

Before you move on

What does culter, cultrī mean? ("A knife".) Say it once more.

Chapter 84

Chest, Paper, Pen, Tablet, Mirror

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a chest, paper, a writing stick, a tablet and a mirror.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 84: I can name a chest, paper, a writing stick, a tablet and a mirror.

84.1 arca, arcae — a chest, a box

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cup, then the Latin for a knife.

You'll want to know: arca, arcae

arca, arcae — "a chest, a box".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arca is usually linked with arceō, "to shut in, to keep off" (Lewis & Short): a chest keeps things shut away. English ark comes from arca.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: arca
- Say it: arca, once more
- Say it: say arca
- Recall: say the Latin for a cup, then the Latin for a knife, then say arca again

Before you move on

What does arca, arcae mean? ("A chest, a box".) Say it once more.

84.2 charta, chartae — paper, a sheet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a knife, then the Latin for a chest.

You'll want to know: charta, chartae charta, chartae — "paper, a sheet". English chart and card.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

charta was borrowed from Greek khartēs, "a sheet of papyrus" (Lewis & Short), which may come from kharassō, "to scratch, to engrave" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: charta
- Say it: charta, once more
- Say it: say charta
- Recall: say the Latin for a knife, then the Latin for a chest, then say charta again

Before you move on

What does charta, chartae mean? ("Paper, a sheet".) Say it once more.

84.3 stilus, stilī — a stylus, a writing stick

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chest, then the Latin for paper.

You'll want to know: stilus, stilī stilus, stilī — "a stylus, a writing stick". English style.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stilus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root steyg-*, "to prick, to pierce" (EtymDB 2.1); English stick is a cousin (Lewis & Short). The spelling with y came later, from a mistaken link with Greek stylos, "pillar".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: stilus
- Say it: stilus, once more
- Say it: say stilus
- Recall: say the Latin for a chest, then the Latin for paper, then say stilus again

Before you move on

What does stilus, stilī mean? ("A stylus, a writing stick".) Say it once more.

84.4 tabula, tabulae — a writing tablet, a board

Before the new one: say the Latin for paper, then the Latin for a stylus.

You'll want to know: tabula, tabulae

tabula, tabulae — "a writing tablet, a board". English table.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tabula has no sure origin. Lewis & Short connect it with taberna, "a booth, a shop", but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tabula
- Say it: tabula, once more
- Say it: say tabula
- Recall: say the Latin for paper, then the Latin for a stylus, then say tabula again

Before you move on

What does tabula, tabulae mean? ("A writing tablet, a board".) Say it once more.

84.5 speculum, speculī — a mirror

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stylus, then the Latin for a writing tablet.

You'll want to know: speculum, speculī

speculum, speculī — "a mirror".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

speculum is built on speciō, "to look at" (Lewis & Short), with -ulum, an ending for a tool: the thing one looks into. speciō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European spek-*, "to look" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: speculum
- Say it: speculum, once more
- Say it: say speculum
- Recall: say the Latin for a stylus, then the Latin for a writing tablet, then say speculum again

Before you move on

What does speculum, speculī mean? ("A mirror".) Say it once more.

Chapter 85

Ball, Wheel, Sword, Crown, Ring

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a ball, a wheel, a sword, a crown and a ring.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 85: I can name a ball, a wheel, a sword, a crown and a ring.

85.1 pila, pilae — a ball

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a writing tablet, then the Latin for a mirror.

You'll want to know: pila, pilae

pila, pilae — "a ball".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pila, "ball", has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. It is a different word from pīla, "a pillar", and from pīla, "a mortar".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pila
- Say it: pila, once more
- Say it: say pila
- Recall: say the Latin for a writing tablet, then the Latin for a mirror, then say pila again

Before you move on

What does pila, pilae mean? ("A ball".) Say it once more.

85.2 rota, rotae — a wheel

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mirror, then the Latin for a ball.

You'll want to know: rota, rotae rota, rotae — "a wheel". English rotate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rota is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European Hroth2-o-, "wheel", from a root Hret-, "to run, to roll" (EtymDB 2.1). German Rad, "wheel", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rota
- Say it: rota, once more
- Say it: say rota
- Recall: say the Latin for a mirror, then the Latin for a ball, then say rota again

Before you move on

What does rota, rotae mean? ("A wheel".) Say it once more.

85.3 gladius, gladiī — a sword

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ball, then the Latin for a wheel.

You'll want to know: gladius, gladiī gladius, gladiī — "a sword". A gladiator carried one.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gladius is usually thought to be a loan from a Celtic language; Old Irish claideb, "sword", is often compared. Lewis & Short offer only an uncertain Latin link.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gladius
- Say it: gladius, once more
- Say it: say gladius
- Recall: say the Latin for a ball, then the Latin for a wheel, then say gladius again

Before you move on

What does gladius, gladiī mean? ("A sword".) Say it once more.

85.4 corōna, corōnae — a crown, a garland

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wheel, then the Latin for a sword.

You'll want to know: corōna, corōnae

corōna, corōnae — "a crown, a garland".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

corōna was borrowed from Greek korōnē, "a curved thing, a wreath" (Lewis & Short), probably from korōnos, "curved" (EtymDB 2.1). English crown comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: corōna
- Say it: corōna, once more
- Say it: say corōna
- Recall: say the Latin for a wheel, then the Latin for a sword, then say corōna again

Before you move on

What does corōna, corōnae mean? ("A crown, a garland".) Say it once more.

85.5 ānulus, ānulī — a ring

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sword, then the Latin for a crown.

You'll want to know: ānulus, ānulī

ānulus, ānulī — "a ring".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ānulus is built on ānus, "a ring" (Lewis & Short), with -ulus, a suffix. ānus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1eh2no-*, "ring"

(EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ānulus
- Say it: ānulus, once more
- Say it: say ānulus
- Recall: say the Latin for a sword, then the Latin for a crown, then say ānulus again

Before you move on

What does ānulus, ānulī mean? ("A ring".) Say it once more.

85.6 The body, health and people — a first pass

Say the words for a crown and a ring.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an arm, a finger, a tooth, the tongue; a language, the nose
- the neck, the shoulder, a knee, the heart, blood
- a hair, the belly, the back, the forehead, a beard
- the chest, a leg, a cheek, a fingernail, healthy
- a fever, a cough, pain, medicine, an illness
- sick, tired, hunger, thirst, care
- joy, anger, fear, happy, sad

- a son, a daughter, a grandfather, a grandmother, a family
- a husband, a wife, children, a baby, an uncle
- an aunt, a neighbour, a guest; a host, a man, a woman
- a girl, an old man, a queen, a sailor, a poet

Before you move on

An arm? (bracchium, bracchiī.) A finger? (digitus, digitī.) A tooth? (dēns, dentis.) The tongue; a language? (lingua, linguae.) The nose? (nāsus, nāsī.) The neck? (collum, collī.) The shoulder? (umerus, umerī.) A knee? (genū, genūs.) The heart? (cor, cordis.) Blood? (sanguis, sanguinis.) A hair? (capillus, capillī.) The belly? (venter, ventris.) The back? (tergum, tergī.) The forehead? (frōns, frontis.) A beard? (barba, barbae.) The chest? (pectus, pectoris.) A leg? (crūs, crūris.) A cheek? (gena, genae.) A fingernail? (unguis, unguis.) Healthy? (sānus, sāna, sānum.) A fever? (febris, febris.) A cough? (tussis, tussis.) Pain? (dolor, dolōris.) Medicine? (medicīna, medicīnae.) An illness? (morbus, morbī.) Sick? (aeger, aegra, aegrum.) Tired? (fessus, fessa, fessum.) Hunger? (famēs, famis.) Thirst? (sitis, sitis.) Care? (cūra, cūrae.) Joy? (gaudium, gaudiī.) Anger? (īra, īrae.) Fear? (timor, timōris.) Happy? (laetus, laeta, laetum.) Sad? (trīstis, trīste.) A son? (fīlius, fīliī.) A daughter? (fīlia, fīliae.) A grandfather? (avus, avī.) A grandmother? (avia, aviae.) A family? (familia, familiae.) A husband? (marītus, marītī.) A wife? (uxor, uxōris.) Children? (līberī, līberōrum.) A baby? (īnfāns, īnfantis.) An uncle? (patruus, patruī.) An aunt? (amita, amitae.) A neighbour? (vīcīnus, vīcīnī.) A guest; a host? (hospes, hospitis.) A man? (vir, virī.) A woman? (fēmina, fēminae.) A girl? (puella, puellae.) An old man? (senex, senis.) A queen? (rēgīna, rēgīnae.) A sailor? (nauta, nautae.) A poet? (poēta, poētae.)

85.7 Verbs, food, the house and things — a second pass

Say the words for a citizen and a cook.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a citizen, a cook, a merchant, a farmer, a field
- to work, to sing, to dance, to laugh, to weep
- to wash, to cook, to sell, to swim, to call
- to send, to stay, to fall, to put, to find
- to live, to enter, to go back, to fear, to rejoice
- food, dinner, lunch, breakfast, meat
- cheese, oil, a grape, vegetables, an olive
- grain, flour, a pear, a fig, a nut
- a table, a chair, a bed, a window, a bedroom
- a kitchen, a roof, a lamp, a cup, a knife
- a chest, paper, a stylus, a writing tablet, a mirror
- a ball, a wheel, a sword, a crown, a ring

Before you move on

A citizen? (cīvis, cīvis.) A cook? (coquus, coquī.) A merchant? (mercātor, mercātōris.) A farmer? (agricola, agricolae.) A field? (ager, agrī.) To work? (labōrō, labōrāre.) To sing? (canō, canere.) To dance? (saltō, saltāre.) To laugh? (rīdeō, rīdēre.) To weep? (fleō, flēre.) To wash? (lavō, lavāre.) To cook? (coquō, coquere.) To sell? (vendō, vendere.) To swim? (natō, natāre.) To call? (vocō, vocāre.) To send? (mittō, mittere.) To stay? (maneō, manēre.) To fall? (cadō, cadere.) To put? (pōnō, pōnere.) To find? (inveniō, invenīre.) To live? (vīvō, vīvere.) To enter? (intrō, intrāre.) To go back? (redeō, redīre.) To fear? (timeō, timēre.) To rejoice? (gaudeō, gaudēre.) Food? (cibus, cibī.) Dinner? (cēna, cēnae.) Lunch? (prandium, prandiī.) Breakfast? (ientāculum, ientāculī.) Meat? (carō, carnis.) Cheese? (cāseus, cāseī.) Oil? (oleum, oleī.) A grape? (ūva, ūvae.) Vegetables? (holus, holeris.) An olive? (olīva, olīvae.) Grain? (frūmentum, frūmentī.) Flour? (farīna, farīnae.) A pear? (pirum, pirī.) A fig? (fīcus, fīcī.) A nut? (nux, nucis.) A table? (mēnsa, mēnsae.) A chair? (sella, sellae.) A bed? (lectus, lectī.) A window? (fenestra, fenestrae.) A bedroom? (cubiculum, cubiculī.) A kitchen? (culīna, culīnae.) A roof? (tēctum, tēctī.) A lamp? (lucerna, lucernae.) A cup? (pōculum, pōculī.) A knife? (culter, cultrī.) A chest? (arca, arcae.) Paper? (charta, chartae.) A stylus? (stilus, stilī.) A writing tablet? (tabula, tabulae.) A mirror? (speculum, speculī.) A ball? (pila, pilae.) A wheel? (rota, rotae.) A sword? (gladius, gladiī.) A crown? (corōna, corōnae.) A ring? (ānulus, ānulī.)

Chapter 86

Tree, Flower, Leaf, Forest, Mountain

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a tree, a flower, a leaf, a forest and a mountain.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 86: I can name a tree, a flower, a leaf, a forest and a mountain.

86.1 arbor, arboris — a tree

Before the new one: say the Latin for a crown, then the Latin for a ring.

You'll want to know: arbor, arboris arbor, arboris — "a tree". English arboretum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children arbor had an older form arbōs (Lewis & Short). Its deeper origin is uncertain; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed link with Proto-Indo-European h3erdh-*, "high, to grow".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: arbor
- Say it: arbor, once more
- Say it: say arbor
- Recall: say the Latin for a crown, then the Latin for a ring, then say arbor again

Before you move on

What does arbor, arboris mean? ("A tree".) Say it once more.

86.2 flōs, flōris — a flower

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ring, then the Latin for a tree.

You'll want to know: flōs, flōris flōs, flōris — "a flower". English floral.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flōs is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhleh3-*, "to thrive, to bloom" (EtymDB 2.1). English bloom and blossom are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: flōs
- Say it: flōs, once more
- Say it: say flōs
- Recall: say the Latin for a ring, then the Latin for a tree, then say flōs again

Before you move on

What does flōs, flōris mean? ("A flower".) Say it once more.

86.3 folium, foliī — a leaf

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tree, then the Latin for a flower.

You'll want to know: folium, foliī folium, foliī — "a leaf". English foliage.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

folium is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bholh3yom*, "leaf" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek phyllon, "leaf", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: folium
- Say it: folium, once more
- Say it: say folium
- Recall: say the Latin for a tree, then the Latin for a flower, then say folium again

Before you move on

What does folium, foliī mean? ("A leaf".) Say it once more.

86.4 silva, silvae — a forest, a wood

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flower, then the Latin for a leaf.

You'll want to know: silva, silvae

silva, silvae — "a forest, a wood".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

silva has no sure origin. Lewis & Short compare Greek hylē, "wood, forest", and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European swel-*, "forest", but neither link is settled. English sylvan comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: silva
- Say it: silva, once more
- Say it: say silva
- Recall: say the Latin for a flower, then the Latin for a leaf, then say silva again

Before you move on

What does silva, silvae mean? ("A forest, a wood".) Say it once more.

86.5 mōns, montis — a mountain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a leaf, then the Latin for a forest.

You'll want to know: mōns, montis mōns, montis — "a mountain". English mount.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mōns is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root men-*, "to stand out" (EtymDB 2.1); ēmineō, "to stand out", and mentum, "chin", are often put in the same family (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mōns
- Say it: mōns, once more
- Say it: say mōns
- Recall: say the Latin for a leaf, then the Latin for a forest, then say mōns again

Before you move on

What does mōns, montis mean? ("A mountain".) Say it once more.

Chapter 87

River, Lake, Stream, Spring, Coast

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a river, a lake, a stream, a spring and a coast.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 87: I can name a river, a lake, a stream, a spring and a coast.

87.1 flūmen, flūminis — a river

Before the new one: say the Latin for a forest, then the Latin for a mountain.

You'll want to know: flūmen, flūminis

flūmen, flūminis — "a river".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

flūmen is built on fluō, "to flow" (EtymDB 2.1), with -men, an ending for a thing or a result: the flowing. fluō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhlew-*, "to swell, to flow" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: flūmen
- Say it: flūmen, once more
- Say it: say flūmen
- Recall: say the Latin for a forest, then the Latin for a mountain, then say flūmen again

Before you move on

What does flūmen, flūminis mean? ("A river".) Say it once more.

87.2 lacus, lacūs — a lake

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mountain, then the Latin for a river.

You'll want to know: lacus, lacūs lacus, lacūs — "a lake". English lake.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lacus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European lokus*, "pond, pool" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lacus
- Say it: lacus, once more
- Say it: say lacus
- Recall: say the Latin for a mountain, then the Latin for a river, then say lacus again

Before you move on

What does lacus, lacūs mean? ("A lake".) Say it once more.

87.3 rīvus, rīvī — a stream

Before the new one: say the Latin for a river, then the Latin for a lake.

You'll want to know: rīvus, rīvī rīvus, rīvī — "a stream". English rival: people who share a stream.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rīvus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3rih2wos*, "brook, small stream" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for flowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rīvus
- Say it: rīvus, once more
- Say it: say rīvus
- Recall: say the Latin for a river, then the Latin for a lake, then say rīvus again

Before you move on

What does rīvus, rīvī mean? ("A stream".) Say it once more.

87.4 fōns, fontis — a spring, a fountain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lake, then the Latin for a stream.

You'll want to know: fōns, fontis fōns, fontis — "a spring, a fountain". English fountain.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fōns has no sure origin; Lewis & Short tie it to fundō, "to pour", but that link is doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fōns
- Say it: fōns, once more
- Say it: say fōns
- Recall: say the Latin for a lake, then the Latin for a stream, then say fōns again

Before you move on

What does fōns, fontis mean? ("A spring, a fountain".) Say it once more.

87.5 ōra, ōrae — a coast, an edge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stream, then the Latin for a spring.

You'll want to know: ōra, ōrae

ōra, ōrae — "a coast, an edge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōra is of uncertain origin; it is often linked with ōs, ōris, "mouth, opening": an edge as a rim.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōra
- Say it: ōra, once more
- Say it: say ōra
- Recall: say the Latin for a stream, then the Latin for a spring, then say ōra again

Before you move on

What does ōra, ōrae mean? ("A coast, an edge".) Say it once more.

Chapter 88

Stone, Sand, Hill, Valley, Cave

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a stone, sand, a hill, a valley and a cave.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 88: I can name a stone, sand, a hill, a valley and a cave.

88.1 lapis, lapidis — a stone

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spring, then the Latin for a coast.

You'll want to know: lapis, lapidis

lapis, lapidis — "a stone".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lapis has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. Greek lepas, "bare rock", is sometimes compared.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lapis
- Say it: lapis, once more
- Say it: say lapis
- Recall: say the Latin for a spring, then the Latin for a coast, then say lapis again

Before you move on

What does lapis, lapidis mean? ("A stone".) Say it once more.

88.2 harēna, harēnae — sand

Before the new one: say the Latin for a coast, then the Latin for a stone.

You'll want to know: harēna, harēnae

harēna, harēnae — "sand". An arena was floored with it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

harēna has no sure origin. Lewis & Short record a Sabine form fasēna, "sand", and the word may have reached Latin from a neighbouring language.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: harēna
- Say it: harēna, once more
- Say it: say harēna
- Recall: say the Latin for a coast, then the Latin for a stone, then say harēna again

Before you move on

What does harēna, harēnae mean? ("Sand".) Say it once more.

88.3 collis, collis — a hill

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stone, then the Latin for sand.

You'll want to know: collis, collis

collis, collis — "a hill".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

collis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European klHnis*, "hill", from kelH-*, "to rise" (EtymDB 2.1); excellō, "to rise above", comes from the same root (Lewis & Short). English hill is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: collis
- Say it: collis, once more
- Say it: say collis
- Recall: say the Latin for a stone, then the Latin for sand, then say collis again

Before you move on

What does collis, collis mean? ("A hill".) Say it once more.

88.4 vallis, vallis — a valley

Before the new one: say the Latin for sand, then the Latin for a hill.

You'll want to know: vallis, vallis vallis, vallis — "a valley". English valley.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vallis has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vallis
- Say it: vallis, once more
- Say it: say vallis
- Recall: say the Latin for sand, then the Latin for a hill, then say vallis again

Before you move on

What does vallis, vallis mean? ("A valley".) Say it once more.

88.5 spēlunca, spēluncae — a cave

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hill, then the Latin for a valley.

You'll want to know: spēlunca, spēluncae

spēlunca, spēluncae — "a cave".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spēlunca was borrowed from Greek spēlynx, "cave, grotto" (Lewis & Short), from speos, "cave" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spēlunca
- Say it: spēlunca, once more
- Say it: say spēlunca
- Recall: say the Latin for a hill, then the Latin for a valley, then say spēlunca again

Before you move on

What does spēlunca, spēluncae mean? (“A cave”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 89

Cloud, Rain, Snow, Plain, Shore

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a cloud, rain, snow, a plain and a shore.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 89: I can name a cloud, rain, snow, a plain and a shore.

89.1 nūbēs, nūbis — a cloud

Before the new one: say the Latin for a valley, then the Latin for a cave.

You'll want to know: nūbēs, nūbis

nūbēs, nūbis — "a cloud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūbēs is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root (s)newdh-*, "to cover, to veil" (EtymDB 2.1): a cloud covers the sky.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūbēs
- Say it: nūbēs, once more
- Say it: say nūbēs
- Recall: say the Latin for a valley, then the Latin for a cave, then say nūbēs again

Before you move on

What does nūbēs, nūbis mean? ("A cloud".) Say it once more.

89.2 pluvia, pluviae — rain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cave, then the Latin for a cloud.

You'll want to know: pluvia, pluviae

pluvia, pluviae — "rain". The noun beside pluit, it rains.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pluvia is the feminine of pluvius, "rainy", used as a noun with aqua, "water", understood (Lewis & Short): rainy water. pluvius is built on pluit, "it rains" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pluvia
- Say it: pluvia, once more
- Say it: say pluvia
- Recall: say the Latin for a cave, then the Latin for a cloud, then say pluvia again

Before you move on

What does pluvia, pluviae mean? (“Rain”.) Say it once more.

89.3 nix, nivis — snow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cloud, then the Latin for rain.

You’ll want to know: nix, nivis

nix, nivis — “snow”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nix, nivis, is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European snigwhs*, “snow” (EtymDB 2.1); Latin lost the first s. English snow and Greek nipha, “snow” (Lewis & Short), are cousins.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nix
- Say it: nix, once more
- Say it: say nix
- Recall: say the Latin for a cloud, then the Latin for rain, then say nix again

Before you move on

What does nix, nivis mean? (“Snow”.) Say it once more.

89.4 campus, campī — a plain, an open field

Before the new one: say the Latin for rain, then the Latin for snow.

You'll want to know: campus, campī campus, campī — "a plain, an open field". English campus.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

campus has no sure origin. EtymDB 2.1 tentatively links it to a Proto-Indo-European root kamp-*, "to bend", and Lewis & Short compare Greek kēpos, "garden"; neither link is settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: campus
- Say it: campus, once more
- Say it: say campus
- Recall: say the Latin for rain, then the Latin for snow, then say campus again

Before you move on

What does campus, campī mean? ("A plain, an open field".) Say it once more.

89.5 līt̄us, līt̄oris — a shore, a beach

Before the new one: say the Latin for snow, then the Latin for a plain.

You'll want to know: līt̄us, līt̄oris

līt̄us, līt̄oris — "a shore, a beach".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līt̄us has no sure origin; Lewis & Short compare Greek limēn, "harbour", but the link is uncertain. It is a different word from litus,

"smeared", from linō, "to smear".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lītus
- Say it: lītus, once more
- Say it: say lītus
- Recall: say the Latin for snow, then the Latin for a plain, then say lītus again

Before you move on

What does lītus, lītoris mean? ("A shore, a beach".) Say it once more.

Chapter 90

Horse, Ox, Sheep, Goat, Pig

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a horse, an ox, a sheep, a goat and a pig.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 90: I can name a horse, an ox, a sheep, a goat and a pig.

90.1 equus, equī — a horse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plain, then the Latin for a shore.

You'll want to know: equus, equī equus, equī — "a horse". English equestrian.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

equus is inherited. Old Latin wrote equos, and it is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1ekwos*, "horse" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hippos, "horse", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: equus
- Say it: equus, once more
- Say it: say equus
- Recall: say the Latin for a plain, then the Latin for a shore, then say equus again

Before you move on

What does equus, equī mean? ("A horse".) Say it once more.

90.2 bōs, bovis — an ox, a cow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shore, then the Latin for a horse.

You'll want to know: bōs, bovis

bōs, bovis — "an ox, a cow". English bovine.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bōs is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwows*, "cow" (EtymDB 2.1), but its b suggests it reached Latin from a neighbouring Italic language such as Oscan or Umbrian: Latin's own sound changes turned that gw into v. English cow is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bōs
- Say it: bōs, once more
- Say it: say bōs

- Recall: say the Latin for a shore, then the Latin for a horse, then say bōs again

Before you move on

What does bōs, bovis mean? ("An ox, a cow".) Say it once more.

90.3 ovis, ovis — a sheep

Before the new one: say the Latin for a horse, then the Latin for an ox.

You'll want to know: ovis, ovis

ovis, ovis — "a sheep".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ovis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2owis*, "sheep" (EtymDB 2.1). English ewe is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ovis
- Say it: ovis, once more
- Say it: say ovis
- Recall: say the Latin for a horse, then the Latin for an ox, then say ovis again

Before you move on

What does ovis, ovis mean? ("A sheep".) Say it once more.

90.4 capra, caprae — a goat

Before the new one: say the Latin for an ox, then the Latin for a sheep.

You'll want to know: capra, caprae

capra, caprae — "a goat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

capra is the feminine of caper, "a he-goat" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kapros*, "buck, he-goat" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: capra
- Say it: capra, once more
- Say it: say capra
- Recall: say the Latin for an ox, then the Latin for a sheep, then say capra again

Before you move on

What does capra, caprae mean? ("A goat".) Say it once more.

90.5 porcus, porcī — a pig

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sheep, then the Latin for a goat.

You'll want to know: porcus, porcī

porcus, porcī — "a pig". English pork.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

porcus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European porkos*, "young pig" (EtymDB 2.1). English farrow, "a litter of pigs", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: porcus
- Say it: porcus, once more
- Say it: say porcus
- Recall: say the Latin for a sheep, then the Latin for a goat, then say porcus again

Before you move on

What does porcus, porcī mean? ("A pig".) Say it once more.

Chapter 91

Bird, Wolf, Lion, Bear, Snake

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a bird, a wolf, a lion, a bear and a snake.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 91: I can name a bird, a wolf, a lion, a bear and a snake.

91.1 avis, avis — a bird

Before the new one: say the Latin for a goat, then the Latin for a pig.

You'll want to know: avis, avis avis, avis — "a bird". English aviation.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

avis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ewis*, "bird" (EtymDB 2.1). auspex, "a bird-watcher", the priest who read omens from birds, is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avis
- Say it: avis, once more
- Say it: say avis
- Recall: say the Latin for a goat, then the Latin for a pig, then say avis again

Before you move on

What does avis, avis mean? ("A bird".) Say it once more.

91.2 lupus, lupī — a wolf

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pig, then the Latin for a bird.

You'll want to know: lupus, lupī

lupus, lupī — "a wolf".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lupus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wlkwos*, "wolf" (EtymDB 2.1), with Greek lykos, "wolf", and English wolf as cousins (Lewis & Short). Its p, where Latin would have qu, suggests it came in from a neighbouring Italic language such as Sabine.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lupus
- Say it: lupus, once more
- Say it: say lupus

- Recall: say the Latin for a pig, then the Latin for a bird, then say lupus again

Before you move on

What does lupus, lupī mean? ("A wolf".) Say it once more.

91.3 leō, leōnis — a lion

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bird, then the Latin for a wolf.

You'll want to know: leō, leōnis

leō, leōnis — "a lion".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

leō was borrowed from Greek leōn, "lion" (Lewis & Short); where Greek got the word is uncertain. English lion comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: leō
- Say it: leō, once more
- Say it: say leō
- Recall: say the Latin for a bird, then the Latin for a wolf, then say leō again

Before you move on

What does leō, leōnis mean? ("A lion".) Say it once more.

91.4 ursus, ursī — a bear

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wolf, then the Latin for a lion.

You'll want to know: ursus, ursī

ursus, ursī — "a bear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ursus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2rtkos*, "bear" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek arktos, "bear", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English Arctic, the region under the stars of the Bear, comes from the Greek.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ursus
- Say it: ursus, once more
- Say it: say ursus
- Recall: say the Latin for a wolf, then the Latin for a lion, then say ursus again

Before you move on

What does ursus, ursī mean? ("A bear".) Say it once more.

91.5 serpēns, serpentis — a snake

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lion, then the Latin for a bear.

You'll want to know: serpēns, serpentis

serpēns, serpentis — "a snake". Literally "the creeper".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

serpēns is the present participle of serpō, "to creep" (Lewis & Short), used as a noun: the creeping thing. serpō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European serp-*, "to crawl, to creep" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: serpēns
- Say it: serpēns, once more
- Say it: say serpēns
- Recall: say the Latin for a lion, then the Latin for a bear, then say serpēns again

Before you move on

What does serpēns, serpentis mean? ("A snake".) Say it once more.

Chapter 92

Mouse, Hen, Donkey, Elephant, Deer

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a mouse, a hen, a donkey, an elephant and a deer.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 92: I can name a mouse, a hen, a donkey, an elephant and a deer.

92.1 mūs, mūris — a mouse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bear, then the Latin for a snake.

You'll want to know: mūs, mūris

mūs, mūris — "a mouse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūs is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European muh2s*, "mouse" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek mys, "mouse" (Lewis & Short), and English mouse are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mūs
- Say it: mūs, once more
- Say it: say mūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a bear, then the Latin for a snake, then say mūs again

Before you move on

What does mūs, mūris mean? ("A mouse".) Say it once more.

92.2 gallīna, gallīnae — a hen

Before the new one: say the Latin for a snake, then the Latin for a mouse.

You'll want to know: gallīna, gallīnae

gallīna, gallīnae — "a hen". It lays the ōvum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gallīna is built on gallus, "a rooster" (Lewis & Short): the hen is the rooster's female. Where gallus comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gallīna
- Say it: gallīna, once more
- Say it: say gallīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a snake, then the Latin for a mouse, then say gallīna again

Before you move on

What does gallīna, gallīnae mean? (“A hen”.) Say it once more.

92.3 asinus, asinī — a donkey

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mouse, then the Latin for a hen.

You’ll want to know: asinus, asinī

asinus, asinī — “a donkey”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

asinus is probably a loan from an eastern language, as Lewis & Short already suspected; Greek onos, “donkey”, may share the source, which is unknown. English ass comes from asinus.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: asinus
- Say it: asinus, once more
- Say it: say asinus
- Recall: say the Latin for a mouse, then the Latin for a hen, then say asinus again

Before you move on

What does asinus, asinī mean? (“A donkey”.) Say it once more.

92.4 elephantus, elephantī — an elephant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hen, then the Latin for a donkey.

You'll want to know: elephantus, elephantī

elephantus, elephantī — "an elephant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

elephantus was borrowed from Greek elephas, elephantos, "elephant, ivory" (Lewis & Short). Where Greek got the word is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: elephantus
- Say it: elephantus, once more
- Say it: say elephantus
- Recall: say the Latin for a hen, then the Latin for a donkey, then say elephantus again

Before you move on

What does elephantus, elephantī mean? ("An elephant".) Say it once more.

92.5 cervus, cervī — a deer, a stag

Before the new one: say the Latin for a donkey, then the Latin for an elephant.

You'll want to know: cervus, cervī

cervus, cervī — "a deer, a stag".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cervus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European krh2wos*, "deer, stag", from kerh2-*, "horn" (EtymDB 2.1): the horned one. cornū, "horn", comes from the same root (Lewis & Short), and English hart is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cervus
- Say it: cervus, once more
- Say it: say cervus
- Recall: say the Latin for a donkey, then the Latin for an elephant, then say cervus again

Before you move on

What does cervus, cervī mean? ("A deer, a stag".) Say it once more.

Chapter 93

Big and Small, Long and Short, High

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say big, small, long, short and high.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 93: I can say big, small, long, short and high.

93.1 magnus, magna, magnum — big, great

Before the new one: say the Latin for an elephant, then the Latin for a deer.

You'll want to know: magnus, magna, magnum magnus, magna, magnum — "big, great". English magnify.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

magnus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mgh2nos*, "big", from megh2s*, "great" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek megas, "great", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: magnus
- Say it: magnus, once more
- Say it: say magnus
- Recall: say the Latin for an elephant, then the Latin for a deer, then say magnus again

Before you move on

What does magnus, magna, magnum mean? (“Big, great”.) Say it once more.

93.2 parvus, parva, parvum — small

Before the new one: say the Latin for a deer, then the Latin for big.

You’ll want to know: parvus, parva, parvum

parvus, parva, parvum — “small”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parvus has no sure origin; it may belong with paucus, “few”, and paulum, “a little”, but the details are disputed.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parvus
- Say it: parvus, once more
- Say it: say parvus
- Recall: say the Latin for a deer, then the Latin for big, then say parvus again

Before you move on

What does parvus, parva, parvum mean? ("Small".) Say it once more.

93.3 longus, longa, longum — long

Before the new one: say the Latin for big, then the Latin for small.

You'll want to know: longus, longa, longum

longus, longa, longum — "long".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

longus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dlongh-*, "long" (EtymDB 2.1), with the first d lost. English long is probably a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: longus
- Say it: longus, once more
- Say it: say longus
- Recall: say the Latin for big, then the Latin for small, then say longus again

Before you move on

What does longus, longa, longum mean? ("Long".) Say it once more.

93.4 brevis, breve — short, brief

Before the new one: say the Latin for small, then the Latin for long.

You'll want to know: brevis, breve

brevis, breve — "short, brief". English brief.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

brevis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mreghus*, "short" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek brakhys, "short", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: brevis
- Say it: brevis, once more
- Say it: say brevis
- Recall: say the Latin for small, then the Latin for long, then say brevis again

Before you move on

What does brevis, breve mean? ("Short, brief".) Say it once more.

93.5 altus, alta, altum — high; deep

Before the new one: say the Latin for long, then the Latin for short.

You'll want to know: altus, alta, altum

altus, alta, altum — "high; deep". English altitude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

altus is the old past participle of alō, “to nourish, to make grow” (Lewis & Short): high was first “grown tall”. The root is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2el-*, “to grow, to nourish” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: altus
- Say it: altus, once more
- Say it: say altus
- Recall: say the Latin for long, then the Latin for short, then say altus again

Before you move on

What does altus, alta, altum mean? (“High; deep”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 94

New, Old, Light, Fast, Slow

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say new, old, light, fast and slow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 94: I can say new, old, light, fast and slow.

94.1 novus, nova, novum — new

Before the new one: say the Latin for short, then the Latin for high; deep.

You'll want to know: novus, nova, novum

novus, nova, novum — "new". English novel.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

novus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European newos*, "new" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek neos, "new", and English new are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: novus
- Say it: novus, once more
- Say it: say novus
- Recall: say the Latin for short, then the Latin for high; deep, then say novus again

Before you move on

What does novus, nova, novum mean? ("New".) Say it once more.

94.2 vetus, veteris — old

Before the new one: say the Latin for high; deep, then the Latin for new.

You'll want to know: vetus, veteris

vetus, veteris — "old". English veteran.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vetus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wetos*, "year" (EtymDB 2.1): old meant "full of years". Greek etos, "year", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vetus
- Say it: vetus, once more
- Say it: say vetus
- Recall: say the Latin for high; deep, then the Latin for new, then say vetus again

Before you move on

What does vetus, veteris mean? ("Old".) Say it once more.

94.3 levis, leve — light (not heavy)

Before the new one: say the Latin for new, then the Latin for old.

You'll want to know: levis, leve levis, leve — "light (not heavy)". English levity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children levis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1lengwh-*, "light in weight" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek elakhys, "small", and English light are cousins (Lewis & Short). It is a different word from lēvis, "smooth".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: levis
- Say it: levis, once more
- Say it: say levis
- Recall: say the Latin for new, then the Latin for old, then say levis again

Before you move on

What does levis, leve mean? ("Light (not heavy)".) Say it once more.

94.4 celer, celeris, celere — fast, quick

Before the new one: say the Latin for old, then the Latin for light.

You'll want to know: celer, celeris, celere

celer, celeris, celere — "fast, quick".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

celer has no sure origin; Greek kelēs, "a racehorse", is often compared. English accelerate is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: celer
- Say it: celer, once more
- Say it: say celer
- Recall: say the Latin for old, then the Latin for light, then say celer again

Before you move on

What does celer, celeris, celere mean? ("Fast, quick".) Say it once more.

94.5 lentus, lenta, lentum — slow

Before the new one: say the Latin for light, then the Latin for fast.

You'll want to know: lentus, lenta, lentum lentus, lenta, lentum — "slow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lentus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European lentos*, "pliant, gentle" (EtymDB 2.1); its first sense was "pliant, supple". English lithe is often given as a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lentus
- Say it: lentus, once more
- Say it: say lentus
- Recall: say the Latin for light, then the Latin for fast, then say lentus again

Before you move on

What does lentus, lenta, lentum mean? ("Slow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 95

Hot, Cold, Dry, Wet, Sweet

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say hot, cold, dry, wet and sweet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 95: I can say hot, cold, dry, wet and sweet.

95.1 calidus, calida, calidum — hot, warm

Before the new one: say the Latin for fast, then the Latin for slow.

You'll want to know: calidus, calida, calidum

calidus, calida, calidum — "hot, warm".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calidus is built on caleō, "to be warm" (EtymDB 2.1), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives. caleō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kelh1-*, "warm" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calidus
- Say it: calidus, once more
- Say it: say calidus
- Recall: say the Latin for fast, then the Latin for slow, then say calidus again

Before you move on

What does calidus, calida, calidum mean? ("Hot, warm".) Say it once more.

95.2 frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum — cold

Before the new one: say the Latin for slow, then the Latin for hot.

You'll want to know: frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum

frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum — "cold". English frigid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frīgidus is built on frīgeō, "to be cold" (Lewis & Short), from frīgus, "cold", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sriHgos-*, "cold" (EtymDB 2.1). Greek rhigos, "frost", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frīgidus
- Say it: frīgidus, once more
- Say it: say frīgidus

- Recall: say the Latin for slow, then the Latin for hot, then say frīgidus again

Before you move on

What does frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum mean? ("Cold".) Say it once more.

95.3 siccus, sicca, siccum — dry

Before the new one: say the Latin for hot, then the Latin for cold.

You'll want to know: siccus, sicca, siccum

siccus, sicca, siccum — "dry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

siccus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root seyk-*, "dry" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: siccus
- Say it: siccus, once more
- Say it: say siccus
- Recall: say the Latin for hot, then the Latin for cold, then say siccus again

Before you move on

What does siccus, sicca, siccum mean? ("Dry".) Say it once more.

95.4 ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum — wet, damp

Before the new one: say the Latin for cold, then the Latin for dry.

You'll want to know: ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum — "wet, damp". English humid.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūmidus is built on ūmeō, "to be moist" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives. The spelling with h came later.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ūmidus
- Say it: ūmidus, once more
- Say it: say ūmidus
- Recall: say the Latin for cold, then the Latin for dry, then say ūmidus again

Before you move on

What does ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum mean? ("Wet, damp".) Say it once more.

95.5 dulcis, dulce — sweet

Before the new one: say the Latin for dry, then the Latin for wet.

You'll want to know: dulcis, dulce dulcis, dulce — "sweet". Honey, mel, is the sweetest thing.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dulcis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dlku-*, "sweet" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek glykys, "sweet", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dulcis
- Say it: dulcis, once more
- Say it: say dulcis
- Recall: say the Latin for dry, then the Latin for wet, then say dulcis again

Before you move on

What does dulcis, dulce mean? ("Sweet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 96

Beautiful, Round, Empty, Bright, Dark

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say beautiful, round, empty, bright and dark.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 96: I can say beautiful, round, empty, bright and dark.

96.1 pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum — beautiful

> Before the new one: say the Latin for wet, then the Latin for sweet.

You'll want to know: pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum

pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum — "beautiful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulcher has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. The ch, imitating Greek spelling, came in later; early Latin wrote pulcer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pulcher
- Say it: pulcher, once more
- Say it: say pulcher
- Recall: say the Latin for wet, then the Latin for sweet, then say pulcher again

Before you move on

What does pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum mean? ("Beautiful".) Say it once more.

96.2 rotundus, rotunda, rotundum — round

Before the new one: say the Latin for sweet, then the Latin for beautiful.

You'll want to know: rotundus, rotunda, rotundum

rotundus, rotunda, rotundum — "round".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rotundus is built on rota, "a wheel" (Lewis & Short): wheel-shaped. English round comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rotundus
- Say it: rotundus, once more
- Say it: say rotundus
- Recall: say the Latin for sweet, then the Latin for beautiful, then say rotundus again

Before you move on

What does rotundus, rotunda, rotundum mean? ("Round".) Say it once more.

96.3 vacuus, vacua, vacuum — empty

Before the new one: say the Latin for beautiful, then the Latin for round.

You'll want to know: vacuus, vacua, vacuum

vacuus, vacua, vacuum — "empty". English vacuum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vacuus is built on vacō, "to be empty, to be free" (Lewis & Short). Where vacō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vacuus
- Say it: vacuus, once more
- Say it: say vacuus
- Recall: say the Latin for beautiful, then the Latin for round, then say vacuus again

Before you move on

What does vacuus, vacua, vacuum mean? ("Empty".) Say it once more.

96.4 clārus, clāra, clārum — bright, clear; famous

Before the new one: say the Latin for round, then the Latin for empty.

You'll want to know: clārus, clāra, clārum

clārus, clāra, clārum — "bright, clear; famous".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clārus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European klh1ros*, "clear, bright", from kelh1-*, "to call, to shout" (EtymDB 2.1): it may first have meant "loud", like clāmō, "to shout" (Lewis & Short). English clear comes from clārus through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: clārus
- Say it: clārus, once more
- Say it: say clārus
- Recall: say the Latin for round, then the Latin for empty, then say clārus again

Before you move on

What does clārus, clāra, clārum mean? ("Bright, clear; famous".) Say it once more.

96.5 obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum — dark, obscure

Before the new one: say the Latin for empty, then the Latin for bright.

You'll want to know: obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum

obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum — "dark, obscure".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obscūrus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)kewH-*, "to cover" (EtymDB 2.1), with the prefix ob-, "over": covered over, so dark.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: obscūrus
- Say it: obscūrus, once more
- Say it: say obscūrus
- Recall: say the Latin for empty, then the Latin for bright, then say obscūrus again

Before you move on

What does obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum mean? ("Dark, obscure".) Say it once more.

Chapter 97

Easy, Hard, Dear, Brave, Wise

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say easy, difficult, dear, brave and wise.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 97: I can say easy, difficult, dear, brave and wise.

97.1 facilis, facile — easy

Before the new one: say the Latin for bright, then the Latin for dark.

You'll want to know: facilis, facile

facilis, facile — "easy". English facile.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

facilis is built on faciō, "to do, to make" (Lewis & Short), with -ilis, an ending for "able to be": doable, so easy. faciō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1-*, "to put, to place" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: facilis
- Say it: facilis, once more
- Say it: say facilis
- Recall: say the Latin for bright, then the Latin for dark, then say facilis again

Before you move on

What does facilis, facile mean? ("Easy".) Say it once more.

97.2 difficilis, difficile — difficult

Before the new one: say the Latin for dark, then the Latin for easy.

You'll want to know: difficilis, difficile

difficilis, difficile — "difficult". dis-, not, with facilis.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

difficilis is facilis, "easy" (Lewis & Short), with the prefix dis-, "not"; the prefix's s became f before the f.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: difficilis
- Say it: difficilis, once more
- Say it: say difficilis
- Recall: say the Latin for dark, then the Latin for easy, then say difficilis again

Before you move on

What does difficilis, difficile mean? ("Difficult".) Say it once more.

97.3 cārus, cāra, cārum — dear; costly

Before the new one: say the Latin for easy, then the Latin for difficult.

You'll want to know: cārus, cāra, cārum

cārus, cāra, cārum — "dear; costly". English charity.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cārus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European keh2ros*, "dear, loved", from keh2-*, "to desire, to wish" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cārus
- Say it: cārus, once more
- Say it: say cārus
- Recall: say the Latin for easy, then the Latin for difficult, then say cārus again

Before you move on

What does cārus, cāra, cārum mean? ("Dear; costly".) Say it once more.

97.4 fortis, forte — brave, strong

Before the new one: say the Latin for difficult, then the Latin for dear; costly.

You'll want to know: fortis, forte fortis, forte — "brave, strong". English fortitude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fortis had an Old Latin form forctis (EtymDB 2.1). Its origin is uncertain: one proposal, which EtymDB 2.1 records, traces it to Proto-Indo-European bhergh-*, "high"; Lewis & Short link it with firmus, "firm".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fortis
- Say it: fortis, once more
- Say it: say fortis
- Recall: say the Latin for difficult, then the Latin for dear; costly, then say fortis again

Before you move on

What does fortis, forte mean? ("Brave, strong".) Say it once more.

97.5 sapiēns, sapientis — wise

Before the new one: say the Latin for dear; costly, then the Latin for brave.

You'll want to know: sapiēns, sapientis

sapiēns, sapientis — "wise".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sapiēns is the present participle of sapiō, "to have taste, to be wise" (Lewis & Short): first "tasting", then "discerning". Homo sapiens, "the wise human", uses it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sapiēns
- Say it: sapiēns, once more
- Say it: say sapiēns
- Recall: say the Latin for dear; costly, then the Latin for brave, then say sapiēns again

Before you move on

What does sapiēns, sapientis mean? ("Wise".) Say it once more.

Chapter 98

Rich, Poor, Foolish, Enough, Too Much

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say rich, poor and foolish, and enough and too much.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 98: I can say rich, poor and foolish, and enough and too much.

98.1 dīves, dīvitis — rich

Before the new one: say the Latin for brave, then the Latin for wise.

You'll want to know: dīves, dīvitis

dīves, dīvitis — "rich".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīves is often derived from dīvus, "godlike, divine" (Lewis & Short): the rich as those the gods favour. That account is old and still uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dīves
- Say it: dīves, once more
- Say it: say dīves
- Recall: say the Latin for brave, then the Latin for wise, then say dīves again

Before you move on

What does dīves, dīvitis mean? ("Rich".) Say it once more.

98.2 pauper, pauperis — poor

Before the new one: say the Latin for wise, then the Latin for rich.

You'll want to know: pauper, pauperis pauper, pauperis — "poor". English pauper and poverty.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pauper is usually explained as pau-, "little", as in paucus, "few", plus the root of pariō, "to produce" (Lewis & Short): one who gets or produces little.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pauper
- Say it: pauper, once more
- Say it: say pauper
- Recall: say the Latin for wise, then the Latin for rich, then say pauper again

Before you move on

What does pauper, pauperis mean? ("Poor".) Say it once more.

98.3 stultus, stulta, stultum — foolish

Before the new one: say the Latin for rich, then the Latin for poor.

You'll want to know: stultus, stulta, stultum

stultus, stulta, stultum — "foolish".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stultus is probably related to stolidus, "dull, stupid" (Lewis & Short), and both are often traced to Proto-Indo-European ster-*, "stiff" (EtymDB 2.1): a fool as one stiff of mind.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: stultus
- Say it: stultus, once more
- Say it: say stultus
- Recall: say the Latin for rich, then the Latin for poor, then say stultus again

Before you move on

What does stultus, stulta, stultum mean? ("Foolish".) Say it once more.

98.4 satis — enough

Before the new one: say the Latin for poor, then the Latin for foolish.

You'll want to know: satis

satis — "enough". English satisfy.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

satis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sh2tis*, "fullness", from seh2-*, "to satisfy, to fill" (EtymDB 2.1). English sad is a cousin: it first meant "having had enough".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: satis
- Say it: satis, once more
- Say it: say satis
- Recall: say the Latin for poor, then the Latin for foolish, then say satis again

Before you move on

What does satis mean? ("Enough".) Say it once more.

98.5 nimis — too much

Before the new one: say the Latin for foolish, then the Latin for enough.

You'll want to know: nimis

nimis — "too much".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nimis probably begins with the negative ne-, "not", but the rest is disputed: some link it to the stem of minus, "less", while Lewis & Short tie it to a root for measuring.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nimis
- Say it: nimis, once more
- Say it: say nimis
- Recall: say the Latin for foolish, then the Latin for enough, then say nimis again

Before you move on

What does nimis mean? ("Too much".) Say it once more.

Chapter 99

Get to Know, Care For, Tell, Praise, Move

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to get to know, to care for, to tell, to praise and to move.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 99: I can say to get to know, to care for, to tell, to praise and to move.

99.1 cognōscō, cognōscere — to get to know, to learn

Before the new one: say the Latin for enough, then the Latin for too much.

You'll want to know: cognōscō, cognōscere cognōscō, cognōscere — "to get to know, to learn". English recognise.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cognōscō is built on nōscō, "to come to know" (Lewis & Short), older gnōscō, with con-, a prefix that strengthens it. The root is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gneh3-*, "to know" (EtymDB 2.1); English know is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cognōscō
- Say it: cognōscō, once more
- Say it: say cognōscō
- Recall: say the Latin for enough, then the Latin for too much, then say cognōscō again

Before you move on

What does cognōscō, cognōscere mean? ("To get to know, to learn".) Say it once more.

99.2 cūrō, cūrāre — to care for

Before the new one: say the Latin for too much, then the Latin for to get to know.

You'll want to know: cūrō, cūrāre cūrō, cūrāre — "to care for". The verb of cūra.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūrō is the verb made from cūra, "care" (Lewis & Short), whose own origin is uncertain. English cure comes from the noun and the verb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cūrō
- Say it: cūrō, once more

- Say it: say cūrō
- Recall: say the Latin for too much, then the Latin for to get to know, then say cūrō again

Before you move on

What does cūrō, cūrāre mean? ("To care for".) Say it once more.

99.3 nārrō, nārrāre — to tell, to relate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to get to know, then the Latin for to care for.

You'll want to know: nārrō, nārrāre

nārrō, nārrāre — "to tell, to relate". English narrate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nārrō is usually derived from gnārus, "knowing, acquainted with" (Lewis & Short): to tell is to make known.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nārrō
- Say it: nārrō, once more
- Say it: say nārrō
- Recall: say the Latin for to get to know, then the Latin for to care for, then say nārrō again

Before you move on

What does nārrō, nārrāre mean? ("To tell, to relate".) Say it once more.

99.4 laudō, laudāre — to praise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to care for, then the Latin for to tell.

You'll want to know: laudō, laudāre

laudō, laudāre — "to praise". English laud.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

laudō is built on laus, laudis, "praise" (Lewis & Short). Where laus comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: laudō
- Say it: laudō, once more
- Say it: say laudō
- Recall: say the Latin for to care for, then the Latin for to tell, then say laudō again

Before you move on

What does laudō, laudāre mean? ("To praise".) Say it once more.

99.5 moveō, movēre — to move

Before the new one: say the Latin for to tell, then the Latin for to praise.

You'll want to know: moveō, movēre

moveō, movēre — "to move".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

moveō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mew-*, "to move, to push away" (EtymDB 2.1). English move comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: moveō
- Say it: moveō, once more
- Say it: say moveō
- Recall: say the Latin for to tell, then the Latin for to praise, then say moveō again

Before you move on

What does moveō, movēre mean? ("To move".) Say it once more.

Chapter 100

Fight, Sail, Prepare, Touch, Pull

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to fight, to sail, to prepare, to touch and to pull.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 100: I can say to fight, to sail, to prepare, to touch and to pull.

100.1 pugnō, pugnāre — to fight

Before the new one: say the Latin for to praise, then the Latin for to move.

You'll want to know: pugnō, pugnāre

pugnō, pugnāre — "to fight".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pugnō is built on pugnus, "a fist" (EtymDB 2.1), so it probably first meant to fight with fists. pugnus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peug-*, "to prick, to punch" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of pungō, "to prick" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pugnō
- Say it: pugnō, once more
- Say it: say pugnō
- Recall: say the Latin for to praise, then the Latin for to move, then say pugnō again

Before you move on

What does pugnō, pugnāre mean? ("To fight".) Say it once more.

100.2 nāvigō, nāvigāre — to sail

Before the new one: say the Latin for to move, then the Latin for to fight.

You'll want to know: nāvigō, nāvigāre nāvigō, nāvigāre — "to sail". English navigate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nāvigō is built from nāvis, "a ship", and agō, "to drive" (Lewis & Short): to drive a ship. nāvis is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European neh2us*, "boat" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nāvigō
- Say it: nāvigō, once more
- Say it: say nāvigō
- Recall: say the Latin for to move, then the Latin for to fight, then say nāvigō again

Before you move on

What does nāvigō, nāvigāre mean? ("To sail".) Say it once more.

100.3 parō, parāre — to prepare

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fight, then the Latin for to sail.

You'll want to know: parō, parāre parō, parāre — "to prepare". English prepare.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parō is probably related to pariō, "to bring forth, to procure", and is traced to a Proto-Indo-European root per-*, "to produce, to procure" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parō
- Say it: parō, once more
- Say it: say parō
- Recall: say the Latin for to fight, then the Latin for to sail, then say parō again

Before you move on

What does parō, parāre mean? ("To prepare".) Say it once more.

100.4 tangō, tangere — to touch

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sail, then the Latin for to prepare.

You'll want to know: tangō, tangere tangō, tangere — "to touch". English tangible.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tangō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tag-*, "to touch" (EtymDB 2.1). The n inside the present stem is an old way of marking the verb and is missing from its perfect tetigī, "I touched".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tangō
- Say it: tangō, once more
- Say it: say tangō
- Recall: say the Latin for to sail, then the Latin for to prepare, then say tangō again

Before you move on

What does tangō, tangere mean? ("To touch".) Say it once more.

100.5 trahō, trahere — to pull, to drag

Before the new one: say the Latin for to prepare, then the Latin for to touch.

You'll want to know: trahō, trahere

trahō, trahere — "to pull, to drag". English tractor.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trahō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tragh-*, "to draw, to drag" (EtymDB 2.1). English attract comes from it too.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trahō
- Say it: trahō, once more
- Say it: say trahō
- Recall: say the Latin for to prepare, then the Latin for to touch, then say trahō again

Before you move on

What does trahō, trahere mean? ("To pull, to drag".) Say it once more.

Chapter 101

Get Up, Wander, Run Away, At Once, Then

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to rise, to wander and to flee, and at once and then.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 101: I can say to rise, to wander and to flee, and at once and then.

101.1 surgō, surgere — to rise, to get up

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to touch, then the Latin for to pull.

You'll want to know: surgō, surgere

surgō, surgere — "to rise, to get up". English surge.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

surgō is contracted from surrigō, "to raise up", built from sub, "up from under", and regō, "to direct, to keep straight" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: surgō
- Say it: surgō, once more
- Say it: say surgō
- Recall: say the Latin for to touch, then the Latin for to pull, then say surgō again

Before you move on

What does surgō, surgere mean? ("To rise, to get up".) Say it once more.

101.2 errō, errāre — to wander; to be wrong

Before the new one: say the Latin for to pull, then the Latin for to rise.

You'll want to know: errō, errāre

errō, errāre — "to wander; to be wrong". English err and error.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

errō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1ers-*, "to be in motion, to wander" (EtymDB 2.1); German irren, "to err", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: errō
- Say it: errō, once more
- Say it: say errō

- Recall: say the Latin for to pull, then the Latin for to rise, then say errō again

Before you move on

What does errō, errāre mean? ("To wander; to be wrong".) Say it once more.

101.3 fugiō, fugere — to flee, to run away

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rise, then the Latin for to wander; to be wrong.

You'll want to know: fugiō, fugere

fugiō, fugere — "to flee, to run away". English fugitive.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fugiō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhewg-*, "to flee" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek pheugō, "to flee", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fugiō
- Say it: fugiō, once more
- Say it: say fugiō
- Recall: say the Latin for to rise, then the Latin for to wander; to be wrong, then say fugiō again

Before you move on

What does fugiō, fugere mean? ("To flee, to run away".) Say it once more.

101.4 statim — at once, immediately

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wander; to be wrong, then the Latin for to flee.

You'll want to know: statim

statim — "at once, immediately".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

statim is built on the root of stō, "to stand" (Lewis & Short): first "standing firm, on the spot", then "at once".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: statim
- Say it: statim, once more
- Say it: say statim
- Recall: say the Latin for to wander; to be wrong, then the Latin for to flee, then say statim again

Before you move on

What does statim mean? ("At once, immediately".) Say it once more.

101.5 deinde — then, next

Before the new one: say the Latin for to flee, then the Latin for at once.

You'll want to know: deinde

deinde — "then, next".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

deinde is built from dē, "from", and inde, "from there, thence" (Lewis & Short): from that point on.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: deinde
- Say it: deinde, once more
- Say it: say deinde
- Recall: say the Latin for to flee, then the Latin for at once, then say deinde again

Before you move on

What does deinde mean? ("Then, next".) Say it once more.

Chapter 102

Far, Above, Below, Inside, Outside

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say far away, above, below, inside and outside.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 102: I can say far away, above, below, inside and outside.

102.1 procul — far away

Before the new one: say the Latin for at once, then the Latin for then.

You'll want to know: procul

procul — "far away".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

procul probably begins with prō, "forward, forth", but the rest is unclear; Lewis & Short's link with procellō, "to throw down", is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: procul
- Say it: procul, once more
- Say it: say procul
- Recall: say the Latin for at once, then the Latin for then, then say procul again

Before you move on

What does procul mean? ("Far away".) Say it once more.

102.2 suprā — above

Before the new one: say the Latin for then, then the Latin for far away.

You'll want to know: suprā suprā — "above". English supra and super-.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suprā comes from superus, "upper" (Lewis & Short), as if "on the upper side". Old Latin wrote suprād (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: suprā
- Say it: suprā, once more
- Say it: say suprā
- Recall: say the Latin for then, then the Latin for far away, then say suprā again

Before you move on

What does suprā mean? ("Above".) Say it once more.

102.3 īnfrā — below

Before the new one: say the Latin for far away, then the Latin for above.

You'll want to know: īnfrā

īnfrā — "below".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnfrā comes from īnferus, "lower" (Lewis & Short), as if "on the lower side". English inferior belongs to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnfrā
- Say it: īnfrā, once more
- Say it: say īnfrā
- Recall: say the Latin for far away, then the Latin for above, then say īnfrā again

Before you move on

What does īnfrā mean? ("Below".) Say it once more.

102.4 intrā — inside, within

Before the new one: say the Latin for above, then the Latin for below.

You'll want to know: intrā

intrā — "inside, within".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

intrā is contracted from interā, "on the inner side", with parte, "side", understood (Lewis & Short); it belongs with inter, "between".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: intrā
- Say it: intrā, once more
- Say it: say intrā
- Recall: say the Latin for above, then the Latin for below, then say intrā again

Before you move on

What does intrā mean? ("Inside, within".) Say it once more.

102.5 extrā — outside, beyond

Before the new one: say the Latin for below, then the Latin for inside.

You'll want to know: extrā extrā — "outside, beyond". English extra.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

extrā is contracted from exterā, "on the outer side" (Lewis & Short), from exter, "being on the outside" (EtymDB 2.1). Old Latin wrote extrād (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: extrā
- Say it: extrā, once more
- Say it: say extrā
- Recall: say the Latin for below, then the Latin for inside, then say extrā again

Before you move on

What does extrā mean? ("Outside, beyond".) Say it once more.

Chapter 103

Today, Yesterday, Year, Month, Dawn

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say today and yesterday, and name a year, a month and the dawn.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 103: I can say today and yesterday, and name a year, a month and the dawn.

103.1 hodiē — today

Before the new one: say the Latin for inside, then the Latin for outside.

You'll want to know: hodiē

hodiē — "today". hōc diē, "on this day".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hodiē is contracted from hōc diē, "on this day" (Lewis & Short); diē, "on the day", is a form of diēs, "day".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hodiē
- Say it: hodiē, once more
- Say it: say hodiē
- Recall: say the Latin for inside, then the Latin for outside, then say hodiē again

Before you move on

What does hodiē mean? ("Today".) Say it once more.

103.2 herī — yesterday

Before the new one: say the Latin for outside, then the Latin for today.

You'll want to know: herī

herī — "yesterday".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

herī is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhghyes-, "yesterday" (EtymDB 2.1). An older hesī shows in hesternus, "of yesterday", and English yesterday is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: herī
- Say it: herī, once more
- Say it: say herī
- Recall: say the Latin for outside, then the Latin for today, then say herī again

Before you move on

What does herī mean? ("Yesterday".) Say it once more.

103.3 annus, annī — a year

Before the new one: say the Latin for today, then the Latin for yesterday.

You'll want to know: annus, annī annus, annī — "a year". English annual.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

annus is inherited, usually traced through Proto-Italic atnos*, "year", to a Proto-Indo-European root h2et-*, "to go" (EtymDB 2.1). Gothic aþn, "year", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: annus
- Say it: annus, once more
- Say it: say annus
- Recall: say the Latin for today, then the Latin for yesterday, then say annus again

Before you move on

What does annus, annī mean? ("A year".) Say it once more.

103.4 mēnsis, mēnsis — a month

Before the new one: say the Latin for yesterday, then the Latin for a year.

You'll want to know: mēnsis, mēnsis

mēnsis, mēnsis — "a month".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mēnsis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European meh1ns*, "moon, month", from meh1-*, "to measure" (EtymDB 2.1). English moon and month are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mēnsis
- Say it: mēnsis, once more
- Say it: say mēnsis
- Recall: say the Latin for yesterday, then the Latin for a year, then say mēnsis again

Before you move on

What does mēnsis, mēnsis mean? ("A month".) Say it once more.

103.5 aurōra, aurōrae — the dawn

Before the new one: say the Latin for a year, then the Latin for a month.

You'll want to know: aurōra, aurōrae

aurōra, aurōrae — "the dawn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aurōra is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ewsōs*, "dawn" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek ēōs, "dawn", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English east.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aurōra
- Say it: aurōra, once more
- Say it: say aurōra
- Recall: say the Latin for a year, then the Latin for a month, then say aurōra again

Before you move on

What does aurōra, aurōrae mean? ("The dawn".) Say it once more.

Chapter 104

Often, Always, Never, Now, Soon

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say often, always, never, now and soon.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 104: I can say often, always, never, now and soon.

104.1 saepe — often

Before the new one: say the Latin for a month, then the Latin for the dawn.

You'll want to know: saepe

saepe — "often".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saepe is usually explained as an old neuter form of saepis, "thick, crowded" (Lewis & Short): what comes thick and fast comes often.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saepe
- Say it: saepe, once more
- Say it: say saepe
- Recall: say the Latin for a month, then the Latin for the dawn, then say saepe again

Before you move on

What does saepe mean? (“Often”.) Say it once more.

104.2 semper — always

Before the new one: say the Latin for the dawn, then the Latin for often.

You’ll want to know: semper

semper — “always”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

semper is usually linked with semel, “once”, and the particle -per, “through, all along” (Lewis & Short): all in one stretch, so always.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: semper
- Say it: semper, once more
- Say it: say semper
- Recall: say the Latin for the dawn, then the Latin for often, then say semper again

Before you move on

What does semper mean? (“Always”.) Say it once more.

104.3 numquam — never

Before the new one: say the Latin for often, then the Latin for always.

You’ll want to know: numquam

numquam — “never”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

numquam is ne, “not”, fused with umquam, “ever” (Lewis & Short): not ever.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: numquam
- Say it: numquam, once more
- Say it: say numquam
- Recall: say the Latin for often, then the Latin for always, then say numquam again

Before you move on

What does numquam mean? (“Never”.) Say it once more.

104.4 nunc — now

Before the new one: say the Latin for always, then the Latin for never.

You'll want to know: nunc

nunc — "now".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nunc is an old num, "now", with the pointing particle -ce, "here" (Lewis & Short). num is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nu*, "now" (EtymDB 2.1); English now is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nunc
- Say it: nunc, once more
- Say it: say nunc
- Recall: say the Latin for always, then the Latin for never, then say nunc again

Before you move on

What does nunc mean? ("Now".) Say it once more.

104.5 mox — soon

Before the new one: say the Latin for never, then the Latin for now.

You'll want to know: mox

mox — "soon".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mox is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European moks*, "quickly, soon" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short still call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mox
- Say it: mox, once more
- Say it: say mox
- Recall: say the Latin for never, then the Latin for now, then say mox again

Before you move on

What does mox mean? ("Soon".) Say it once more.

Chapter 105

Rarely, Already, Then, Much, Little

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say rarely, already and then, and much and little.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 105: I can say rarely, already and then, and much and little.

105.1 rārō — rarely

> Before the new one: say the Latin for now, then the Latin for soon.

You'll want to know: rārō rārō — "rarely". English rare.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rārō is the adverb of rārus, "thin, scattered, rare" (Lewis & Short). Where rārus comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rārō
- Say it: rārō, once more
- Say it: say rārō
- Recall: say the Latin for now, then the Latin for soon, then say rārō again

Before you move on

What does rārō mean? ("Rarely".) Say it once more.

105.2 iam — already, now

Before the new one: say the Latin for soon, then the Latin for rarely.

You'll want to know: iam

iam — "already, now".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iam is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European adverb Hyām*, "already, then" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iam
- Say it: iam, once more
- Say it: say iam
- Recall: say the Latin for soon, then the Latin for rarely, then say iam again

Before you move on

What does iam mean? ("Already, now".) Say it once more.

105.3 tum — then, at that time

Before the new one: say the Latin for rarely, then the Latin for already.

You'll want to know: tum

tum — "then, at that time".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tom*, "that" (EtymDB 2.1), a form of the pointing stem that also gave tam, "so" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tum
- Say it: tum, once more
- Say it: say tum
- Recall: say the Latin for rarely, then the Latin for already, then say tum again

Before you move on

What does tum mean? ("Then, at that time".) Say it once more.

105.4 multum — much, a lot

Before the new one: say the Latin for already, then the Latin for then.

You'll want to know: multum multum — "much, a lot". English multitude.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

multum is the neuter of multus, "much, many" (Lewis & Short), used as an adverb. Where multus comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: multum
- Say it: multum, once more
- Say it: say multum
- Recall: say the Latin for already, then the Latin for then, then say multum again

Before you move on

What does multum mean? ("Much, a lot".) Say it once more.

105.5 parum — too little, not enough

Before the new one: say the Latin for then, then the Latin for much.

You'll want to know: parum

parum — "too little, not enough".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parum is related to parvus, "small" (Lewis & Short), though how the two forms fit together is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parum
- Say it: parum, once more
- Say it: say parum
- Recall: say the Latin for then, then the Latin for much, then say parum again

Before you move on

What does parum mean? ("Too little, not enough".) Say it once more.

Chapter 106

Thirty to a Thousand

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count thirty, forty and fifty, a hundred and a thousand.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 106: I can count thirty, forty and fifty, a hundred and a thousand.

106.1 trīgintā — thirty

Before the new one: say the Latin for much, then the Latin for too little.

You'll want to know: trīgintā

trīgintā — "thirty".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trīgintā is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European trid-komt*, "three tens" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek triakonta, "thirty", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trīgintā
- Say it: trīgintā, once more
- Say it: say trīgintā
- Recall: say the Latin for much, then the Latin for too little, then say trīgintā again

Before you move on

What does trīgintā mean? ("Thirty".) Say it once more.

106.2 quadrāgintā — forty

Before the new one: say the Latin for too little, then the Latin for thirty.

You'll want to know: quadrāgintā

quadrāgintā — "forty".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quadrāgintā is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwetwr-dkomt*, "four tens" (EtymDB 2.1); its first part is the word behind quattuor, "four" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quadrāgintā
- Say it: quadrāgintā, once more
- Say it: say quadrāgintā
- Recall: say the Latin for too little, then the Latin for thirty, then say quadrāgintā again

Before you move on

What does quadrāgintā mean? (“Forty”.) Say it once more.

106.3 quīnquāgintā — fifty

Before the new one: say the Latin for thirty, then the Latin for forty.

You’ll want to know: quīnquāgintā

quīnquāgintā — “fifty”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quīnquāgintā is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European penkwe-dkomt*, “five tens” (EtymDB 2.1), built on the word behind quīnque, “five”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quīnquāgintā
- Say it: quīnquāgintā, once more
- Say it: say quīnquāgintā
- Recall: say the Latin for thirty, then the Latin for forty, then say quīnquāgintā again

Before you move on

What does quīnquāgintā mean? (“Fifty”.) Say it once more.

106.4 centum — a hundred

Before the new one: say the Latin for forty, then the Latin for fifty.

You'll want to know: centum centum — "a hundred". English century and cent.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

centum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kmtom*, "hundred" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hekaton, "hundred", and English hundred are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: centum
- Say it: centum, once more
- Say it: say centum
- Recall: say the Latin for forty, then the Latin for fifty, then say centum again

Before you move on

What does centum mean? ("A hundred".) Say it once more.

106.5 mīlle — a thousand

Before the new one: say the Latin for fifty, then the Latin for a hundred.

You'll want to know: mīlle mīlle — "a thousand". English mile: a thousand paces.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mīlle is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European sm-gheslo-*, "one thousand" (EtymDB 2.1), whose first part meant "one".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mīlle
- Say it: mīlle, once more
- Say it: say mīlle
- Recall: say the Latin for fifty, then the Latin for a hundred, then say mīlle again

Before you move on

What does mīlle mean? ("A thousand".) Say it once more.

Chapter 107

City, Town, Forum, Temple, Shop

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a city, a town, the forum, a temple and a shop.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 107: I can name a city, a town, the forum, a temple and a shop.

107.1 urbs, urbis — a city

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hundred, then the Latin for a thousand.

You'll want to know: urbs, urbis urbs, urbis — "a city". English urban.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

urbs has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: urbs

- Say it: urbs, once more
- Say it: say urbs
- Recall: say the Latin for a hundred, then the Latin for a thousand, then say urbs again

Before you move on

What does urbs, urbis mean? ("A city".) Say it once more.

107.2 oppidum, oppidī — a town

Before the new one: say the Latin for a thousand, then the Latin for a city.

You'll want to know: oppidum, oppidī

oppidum, oppidī — "a town".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oppidum is usually explained as ob, "on, over", and a word for "ground, place", the one in Greek pedon, "ground" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: oppidum
- Say it: oppidum, once more
- Say it: say oppidum
- Recall: say the Latin for a thousand, then the Latin for a city, then say oppidum again

Before you move on

What does oppidum, oppidī mean? ("A town".) Say it once more.

107.3 forum, forī — a forum, a market square

Before the new one: say the Latin for a city, then the Latin for a town.

You'll want to know: forum, forī

forum, forī — "a forum, a market square".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

forum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhworom*, "enclosure", from dhwer-*, "door" (EtymDB 2.1); forās, "out of doors", and English door belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: forum
- Say it: forum, once more
- Say it: say forum
- Recall: say the Latin for a city, then the Latin for a town, then say forum again

Before you move on

What does forum, forī mean? ("A forum, a market square".) Say it once more.

107.4 templum, templī — a temple

Before the new one: say the Latin for a town, then the Latin for a forum.

You'll want to know: templum, templī

templum, templī — "a temple".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

templum first meant a space marked out for watching the sky. Its origin is uncertain: Lewis & Short link it with Greek temnō, "to cut", and temenos, "a sacred precinct"; EtymDB 2.1 traces it to a root temp-*, "to stretch".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: templum
- Say it: templum, once more
- Say it: say templum
- Recall: say the Latin for a town, then the Latin for a forum, then say templum again

Before you move on

What does templum, templī mean? ("A temple".) Say it once more.

107.5 taberna, tabernae — a shop, an inn

Before the new one: say the Latin for a forum, then the Latin for a temple.

You'll want to know: taberna, tabernae

taberna, tabernae — "a shop, an inn". English tavern.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

taberna has no sure origin; one common view derives it from trabs, "a beam": a hut of planks.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: taberna
- Say it: taberna, once more
- Say it: say taberna
- Recall: say the Latin for a forum, then the Latin for a temple, then say taberna again

Before you move on

What does taberna, tabernae mean? (“A shop, an inn”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 108

Bridge, Farmhouse, Clothes, Tunic, Shoe

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a bridge, a farmhouse, clothing, a tunic and a shoe.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 108: I can name a bridge, a farmhouse, clothing, a tunic and a shoe.

108.1 pōns, pontis — a bridge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a temple, then the Latin for a shop.

You'll want to know: pōns, pontis

pōns, pontis — "a bridge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōns is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ponteh1s*, "path, road" (EtymDB 2.1): a bridge as a way across.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pōns
- Say it: pōns, once more
- Say it: say pōns
- Recall: say the Latin for a temple, then the Latin for a shop, then say pōns again

Before you move on

What does pōns, pontis mean? ("A bridge".) Say it once more.

108.2 vīlla, vīllae — a farmhouse, a country house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shop, then the Latin for a bridge.

You'll want to know: vīlla, vīllae

vīlla, vīllae — "a farmhouse, a country house".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīlla is probably a diminutive formed on vīcus, "a village, a homestead" (Lewis & Short). English village comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīlla
- Say it: vīlla, once more
- Say it: say vīlla

- Recall: say the Latin for a shop, then the Latin for a bridge, then say vīlla again

Before you move on

What does vīlla, vīllae mean? ("A farmhouse, a country house".) Say it once more.

108.3 vestis, vestis — clothing, a garment

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bridge, then the Latin for a farmhouse.

You'll want to know: vestis, vestis

vestis, vestis — "clothing, a garment". English vest.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vestis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European westis*, "garment", from wes-*, "to be dressed" (EtymDB 2.1). English wear is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vestis
- Say it: vestis, once more
- Say it: say vestis
- Recall: say the Latin for a bridge, then the Latin for a farmhouse, then say vestis again

Before you move on

What does vestis, vestis mean? ("Clothing, a garment".) Say it once more.

108.4 tunica, tunicae — a tunic

Before the new one: say the Latin for a farmhouse, then the Latin for clothing.

You'll want to know: tunica, tunicae

tunica, tunicae — "a tunic".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tunica is probably a loan from the eastern Mediterranean: it is often compared with Greek khitōn, "tunic", and with Semitic words for a linen garment.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tunica
- Say it: tunica, once more
- Say it: say tunica
- Recall: say the Latin for a farmhouse, then the Latin for clothing, then say tunica again

Before you move on

What does tunica, tunicae mean? ("A tunic".) Say it once more.

108.5 calceus, calceī — a shoe

Before the new one: say the Latin for clothing, then the Latin for a tunic.

You'll want to know: calceus, calceī

calceus, calceī — "a shoe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calceus is built on calx, calcis, "the heel" (Lewis & Short): a shoe covers the heel.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calceus
- Say it: calceus, once more
- Say it: say calceus
- Recall: say the Latin for clothing, then the Latin for a tunic, then say calceus again

Before you move on

What does calceus, calceī mean? ("A shoe".) Say it once more.

108.6 The land, animals and describing words — a first pass

Say the words for a tunic and a shoe.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a tree, a flower, a leaf, a forest, a mountain
- a river, a lake, a stream, a spring, a coast
- a stone, sand, a hill, a valley, a cave
- a cloud, rain, snow, a plain, a shore
- a horse, an ox, a sheep, a goat, a pig

- a bird, a wolf, a lion, a bear, a snake
- a mouse, a hen, a donkey, an elephant, a deer
- big, small, long, short, high; deep
- new, old, light, fast, slow
- hot, cold, dry, wet, sweet
- beautiful, round, empty, bright, dark

Before you move on

A tree? (arbor, arboris.) A flower? (flōs, flōris.) A leaf? (folium, foliī.) A forest? (silva, silvae.) A mountain? (mōns, montis.) A river? (flūmen, flūminis.) A lake? (lacus, lacūs.) A stream? (rīvus, rīvī.) A spring? (fōns, fontis.) A coast? (ōra, ōrae.) A stone? (lapis, lapidis.) Sand? (harēna, harēnae.) A hill? (collis, collis.) A valley? (vallis, vallis.) A cave? (spēlunca, spēluncae.) A cloud? (nūbēs, nūbis.) Rain? (pluvia, pluviae.) Snow? (nix, nivis.) A plain? (campus, campī.) A shore? (lītus, lītoris.) A horse? (equus, equī.) An ox? (bōs, bovis.) A sheep? (ovis, ovis.) A goat? (capra, caprae.) A pig? (porcus, porcī.) A bird? (avis, avis.) A wolf? (lupus, lupī.) A lion? (leō, leōnis.) A bear? (ursus, ursī.) A snake? (serpēns, serpentis.) A mouse? (mūs, mūris.) A hen? (gallīna, gallīnae.) A donkey? (asinus, asinī.) An elephant? (elephantus, elephantī.) A deer? (cervus, cervī.) Big? (magnus, magna, magnum.) Small? (parvus, parva, parvum.) Long? (longus, longa, longum.) Short? (brevis, breve.) High; deep? (altus, alta, altum.) New? (novus, nova, novum.) Old? (vetus, veteris.) Light? (levis, leve.) Fast? (celer, celeris, celere.) Slow? (lentus, lenta, lentum.) Hot? (calidus, calida, calidum.) Cold? (frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum.) Dry? (siccus, sicca, siccum.) Wet? (ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum.) Sweet? (dulcis, dulce.) Beautiful? (pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum.) Round? (rotundus, rotunda, rotundum.) Empty? (vacuus, vacua, vacuum.) Bright? (clārus, clāra, clārum.) Dark? (obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum.)

108.7 Verbs, time, numbers and the town — a second pass

Say the words for easy and difficult.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- easy, difficult, dear; costly, brave, wise
- rich, poor, foolish, enough, too much
- to get to know, to care for, to tell, to praise, to move
- to fight, to sail, to prepare, to touch, to pull
- to rise, to wander; to be wrong, to flee, at once, then
- far away, above, below, inside, outside
- today, yesterday, a year, a month, the dawn
- often, always, never, now, soon
- rarely, already, then, much, too little
- thirty, forty, fifty, a hundred, a thousand
- a city, a town, a forum, a temple, a shop
- a bridge, a farmhouse, clothing, a tunic, a shoe

Before you move on

Easy? (facilis, facile.) Difficult? (difficilis, difficile.) Dear; costly? (cārus, cāra, cārum.) Brave? (fortis, forte.) Wise? (sapiēns, sapientis.) Rich? (dīves, dīvitis.) Poor? (pauper, pauperis.) Foolish? (stultus, stulta, stultum.) Enough? (satis.) Too much? (nimis.) To get to know? (cognōscō, cognōscere.) To care for? (cūrō, cūrāre.) To tell? (nārrō, nārrāre.) To praise? (laudō, laudāre.) To move? (moveō, movēre.) To fight? (pugnō, pugnāre.) To sail? (nāvigō, nāvigāre.) To prepare? (parō, parāre.) To touch? (tangō, tangere.) To pull? (trahō, trahere.) To rise? (surgō, surgere.) To wander; to be wrong? (errō, errāre.) To flee? (fugiō, fugere.) At once? (statim.) Then? (deinde.) Far away? (procul.) Above? (suprā.) Below? (īnfrā.) Inside? (intrā.) Outside? (extrā.) Today? (hodiē.) Yesterday? (herī.) A year? (annus, annī.) A month? (mēnsis, mēnsis.) The dawn? (aurōra, aurōrae.) Often? (saepe.) Always? (semper.) Never? (numquam.) Now? (nunc.) Soon? (mox.) Rarely? (rārō.) Already? (iam.) Then? (tum.) Much? (multum.) Too little? (parum.) Thirty? (trīgintā.) Forty? (quadrāgintā.) Fifty? (quīnquāgintā.) A hundred? (centum.) A thousand? (mīlle.) A city? (urbs, urbis.) A town? (oppidum, oppidī.) A forum? (forum, forī.) A temple? (templum, templī.) A shop? (taberna, tabernae.) A bridge? (pōns, pontis.) A farmhouse? (vīlla, vīllae.) Clothing? (vestis, vestis.) A tunic? (tunica, tunicae.) A shoe? (calceus, calceī.)

Chapter 109

To be able, To dare, To have to, To be used to, Power

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to be able, to dare, to have to, to be used to and power.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 109: I can say to be able, to dare, to have to, to be used to and power.

109.1 queō, quīre — to be able, can

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a tunic, then the Latin for a shoe.

You'll want to know: queō, quīre

queō, quīre — "to be able, can".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

queō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. It is the verb behind nequeō, "to be unable".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: queō
- Say it: queō, once more
- Say it: say queō
- Recall: say the Latin for a tunic, then the Latin for a shoe, then say queō again

Before you move on

What does queō, quīre mean? ("To be able, can".) Say it once more.

109.2 audeō, audēre — to dare

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shoe, then the Latin for to be able.

You'll want to know: audeō, audēre

audeō, audēre — "to dare".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

audeō is usually traced to avidus, "eager, greedy" (EtymDB 2.1), from aveō, "to long for": to dare was first to be eager.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: audeō
- Say it: audeō, once more
- Say it: say audeō
- Recall: say the Latin for a shoe, then the Latin for to be able, then say audeō again

Before you move on

What does audeō, audēre mean? ("To dare".) Say it once more.

109.3 dēbeō, dēbēre — to have to, must; to owe

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be able, then the Latin for to dare.

You'll want to know: dēbeō, dēbēre

dēbeō, dēbēre — "to have to, must; to owe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēbeō is contracted from dē, "away from", and habeō, "to have" (Lewis & Short): to have what belongs to someone else, so to owe.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēbeō
- Say it: dēbeō, once more
- Say it: say dēbeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to be able, then the Latin for to dare, then say dēbeō again

Before you move on

What does dēbeō, dēbēre mean? ("To have to, must; to owe".) Say it once more.

109.4 soleō, solēre — to be used to, usually do

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dare, then the Latin for to have to.

You'll want to know: soleō, solēre

soleō, solēre — "to be used to, usually do".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

soleō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short compare suēscō, "to become used to", but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: soleō
- Say it: soleō, once more
- Say it: say soleō
- Recall: say the Latin for to dare, then the Latin for to have to, then say soleō again

Before you move on

What does soleō, solēre mean? ("To be used to, usually do".) Say it once more.

109.5 potestās, potestātis — power, the ability to act

Before the new one: say the Latin for to have to, then the Latin for to be used to.

You'll want to know: potestās, potestātis

potestās, potestātis — "power, the ability to act".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

potestās is built on possum, "to be able" (Lewis & Short), through its stem pot-, with -tās, an ending for a quality.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: potestās
- Say it: potestās, once more
- Say it: say potestās
- Recall: say the Latin for to have to, then the Latin for to be used to, then say potestās again

Before you move on

What does potestās, potestātis mean? ("Power, the ability to act".) Say it once more.

Chapter 110

Chance, Skill, It is necessary, It is allowed, To not want

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a chance, a skill, it is necessary, it is allowed and to not want.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 110: I can say a chance, a skill, it is necessary, it is allowed and to not want.

110.1 facultās, facultātis — a chance, the means to do something

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be used to, then the Latin for power.

You'll want to know: facultās, facultātis

facultās, facultātis — "a chance, the means to do something".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

facultās is built on facul, "easily", an old form of facilis, "easy" (Lewis & Short): ease, and so the means to do something.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: facultās
- Say it: facultās, once more
- Say it: say facultās
- Recall: say the Latin for to be used to, then the Latin for power, then say facultās again

Before you move on

What does facultās, facultātis mean? (“A chance, the means to do something”.) Say it once more.

110.2 ars, artis — a skill, a craft

Before the new one: say the Latin for power, then the Latin for a chance.

You’ll want to know: ars, artis

ars, artis — “a skill, a craft”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ars is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2rtis*, “skill, a fitting together” (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for fitting that also gave arma, “tools, weapons” (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ars
- Say it: ars, once more
- Say it: say ars

- Recall: say the Latin for power, then the Latin for a chance, then say ars again

Before you move on

What does ars, artis mean? ("A skill, a craft".) Say it once more.

110.3 oportet — it is necessary, one ought

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chance, then the Latin for a skill.

You'll want to know: oportet

oportet — "it is necessary, one ought".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oportet is usually linked with opus, "need, work" (Lewis & Short), but how it was formed is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: oportet
- Say it: oportet, once more
- Say it: say oportet
- Recall: say the Latin for a chance, then the Latin for a skill, then say oportet again

Before you move on

What does oportet mean? ("It is necessary, one ought".) Say it once more.

110.4 licet — it is allowed, one may

Before the new one: say the Latin for a skill, then the Latin for it is necessary.

You'll want to know: licet

licet — "it is allowed, one may".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

licet is related to liceō, "to be for sale, to be valued" (Lewis & Short), but where the pair comes from is uncertain. English licence comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: licet
- Say it: licet, once more
- Say it: say licet
- Recall: say the Latin for a skill, then the Latin for it is necessary, then say licet again

Before you move on

What does licet mean? ("It is allowed, one may".) Say it once more.

110.5 nōlō, nōlle — to not want, to refuse

Before the new one: say the Latin for it is necessary, then the Latin for it is allowed.

You'll want to know: nōlō, nōlle

nōlō, nōlle — "to not want, to refuse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōlō is ne, "not", fused with volō, "to want". Old forms such as nevis, "you do not want", show the join (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nōlō
- Say it: nōlō, once more
- Say it: say nōlō
- Recall: say the Latin for it is necessary, then the Latin for it is allowed, then say nōlō again

Before you move on

What does nōlō, nōlle mean? ("To not want, to refuse".) Say it once more.

Chapter 111

To prefer, To desire, To wish for, To miss, Wish

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to prefer, to desire, to wish for, to miss and a wish.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 111: I can say to prefer, to desire, to wish for, to miss and a wish.

111.1 mālō, mālle — to prefer

> Before the new one: say the Latin for it is allowed, then the Latin for to not want.

You'll want to know: mālō, mālle

mālō, mālle — "to prefer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mālō is contracted from magis, "more", and volō, "to want" (Lewis & Short): to want more, so to prefer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mālō
- Say it: mālō, once more
- Say it: say mālō
- Recall: say the Latin for it is allowed, then the Latin for to not want, then say mālō again

Before you move on

What does mālō, mālle mean? (“To prefer”.) Say it once more.

111.2 cupiō, cupere — to desire, to long for

Before the new one: say the Latin for to not want, then the Latin for to prefer.

You’ll want to know: cupiō, cupere

cupiō, cupere — “to desire, to long for”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cupiō is probably inherited; Lewis & Short compare Sanskrit kup-, “to be stirred, to be angry”, a link still often made. English covet comes from its family through French.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cupiō
- Say it: cupiō, once more
- Say it: say cupiō
- Recall: say the Latin for to not want, then the Latin for to prefer, then say cupiō again

Before you move on

What does cupiō, cupere mean? ("To desire, to long for".) Say it once more.

111.3 optō, optāre — to wish for, to choose

Before the new one: say the Latin for to prefer, then the Latin for to desire.

You'll want to know: optō, optāre

optō, optāre — "to wish for, to choose".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

optō has no sure origin; the link with a Greek root for seeing that Lewis & Short give is uncertain. English option and adopt come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: optō
- Say it: optō, once more
- Say it: say optō
- Recall: say the Latin for to prefer, then the Latin for to desire, then say optō again

Before you move on

What does optō, optāre mean? ("To wish for, to choose".) Say it once more.

111.4 dēsīderō, dēsīderāre — to miss, to long for

Before the new one: say the Latin for to desire, then the Latin for to wish for.

You'll want to know: dēsīderō, dēsīderāre

dēsīderō, dēsīderāre — "to miss, to long for".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēsīderō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. A common account builds it, like cōnsīderō, "to examine closely", from dē-, "away from", and sīdus, sīderis, "star", but the story behind that is unclear.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēsīderō
- Say it: dēsīderō, once more
- Say it: say dēsīderō
- Recall: say the Latin for to desire, then the Latin for to wish for, then say dēsīderō again

Before you move on

What does dēsīderō, dēsīderāre mean? ("To miss, to long for".) Say it once more.

111.5 voluntās, voluntātis — a wish, the will

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wish for, then the Latin for to miss.

You'll want to know: voluntās, voluntātis

voluntās, voluntātis — "a wish, the will".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

voluntās is built on volō, velle, "to want" (Lewis & Short), with -tās, an ending for a quality. volō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European welh1-*, "to choose, to wish".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: voluntās
- Say it: voluntās, once more
- Say it: say voluntās
- Recall: say the Latin for to wish for, then the Latin for to miss, then say voluntās again

Before you move on

What does voluntās, voluntātis mean? ("A wish, the will".) Say it once more.

Chapter 112

Desire, Hope, Longing, Why?, Why?

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a desire, hope, a longing, why? and why?.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 112: I can say a desire, hope, a longing, why? and why?.

112.1 cupiditās, cupiditātis — a desire, eagerness

Before the new one: say the Latin for to miss, then the Latin for a wish.

You'll want to know: cupiditās, cupiditātis

cupiditās, cupiditātis — "a desire, eagerness".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cupiditās is built on cupidus, "eager, desirous" (Lewis & Short), from cupiō, "to desire", with -itās, an ending for a quality.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cupiditās
- Say it: cupiditās, once more
- Say it: say cupiditās
- Recall: say the Latin for to miss, then the Latin for a wish, then say cupiditās again

Before you move on

What does cupiditās, cupiditātis mean? ("A desire, eagerness".) Say it once more.

112.2 spēs, speī — hope

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wish, then the Latin for a desire.

Greet the whole day in order: bonum māne, salvē, bonum vesperum, bonam noctem.

You'll want to know: spēs, speī

spēs, speī — "hope".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spēs is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European speh1-*, "to prosper, to turn out well" (EtymDB 2.1). prosperus, "favourable", and English speed, which once meant "success", are often given as cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spēs
- Say it: spēs, once more

- Say it: say spēs
- Recall: say the Latin for a wish, then the Latin for a desire, then say spēs again

Before you move on

What does spēs, speī mean? ("Hope".) Say it once more.

112.3 dēsīderium, dēsīderiī — a longing

Before the new one: say the Latin for a desire, then the Latin for hope.

You'll want to know: dēsīderium, dēsīderiī

dēsīderium, dēsīderiī — "a longing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēsīderium is built on dēsīderō, "to miss, to long for" (Lewis & Short), whose own origin is unclear.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēsīderium
- Say it: dēsīderium, once more
- Say it: say dēsīderium
- Recall: say the Latin for a desire, then the Latin for hope, then say dēsīderium again

Before you move on

What does dēsīderium, dēsīderiī mean? ("A longing".) Say it once more.

112.4 quārē — why?, for what reason?

Before the new one: say the Latin for hope, then the Latin for a longing.

You'll want to know: quārē

quārē — "why?, for what reason?".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quārē is fused from quā rē, "by what thing, for what reason" (Lewis & Short); rē, "by the thing", is a form of rēs, "thing".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quārē
- Say it: quārē, once more
- Say it: say quārē
- Recall: say the Latin for hope, then the Latin for a longing, then say quārē again

Before you move on

What does quārē mean? ("Why?, for what reason?".) Say it once more.

112.5 quamobrem — why?, on account of what?

Before the new one: say the Latin for a longing, then the Latin for why?.

You'll want to know: quamobrem

quamobrem — "why?, on account of what?".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quamobrem is fused from quam ob rem, "on account of which thing" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quamobrem
- Say it: quamobrem, once more
- Say it: say quamobrem
- Recall: say the Latin for a longing, then the Latin for why?, then say quamobrem again

Before you move on

What does quamobrem mean? ("Why?, on account of what?".) Say it once more.

Chapter 113

For, For, For that reason, And so, Reason

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say for, for, for that reason, and so and a reason.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 113: I can say for, for, for that reason, and so and a reason.

113.1 nam — for (giving a reason)

> Before the new one: say the Latin for why?, then the Latin for why?.

You'll want to know: nam

nam — "for (giving a reason)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nam is usually explained as an old case form of a pronoun stem na-, "that" (Lewis & Short): "for that".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nam
- Say it: nam, once more
- Say it: say nam
- Recall: say the Latin for why?, then the Latin for why?, then say nam again

Before you move on

What does nam mean? (“For (giving a reason)”.) Say it once more.

113.2 enim — for, you see

Before the new one: say the Latin for why?, then the Latin for for.

You’ll want to know: enim

enim — “for, you see”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

enim is often explained as a short pointing element followed by nam, “for” (Lewis & Short), but its make-up is uncertain.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: enim
- Say it: enim, once more
- Say it: say enim
- Recall: say the Latin for why?, then the Latin for for, then say enim again

Before you move on

What does enim mean? (“For, you see”.) Say it once more.

113.3 ideō — for that reason

Before the new one: say the Latin for for, then the Latin for for.

You’ll want to know: ideō

ideō — “for that reason”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ideō is built from id, “that”, and eō, “for that” (Lewis & Short): for that reason.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ideō
- Say it: ideō, once more
- Say it: say ideō
- Recall: say the Latin for for, then the Latin for for, then say ideō again

Before you move on

What does ideō mean? (“For that reason”.) Say it once more.

113.4 itaque — and so, therefore

Before the new one: say the Latin for for, then the Latin for for that reason.

You'll want to know: itaque

itaque — "and so, therefore".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

itaque is ita, "so, thus", with -que, "and" (EtymDB 2.1): and so.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: itaque
- Say it: itaque, once more
- Say it: say itaque
- Recall: say the Latin for for, then the Latin for for that reason, then say itaque again

Before you move on

What does itaque mean? ("And so, therefore".) Say it once more.

113.5 causa, causae — a reason, a cause

Before the new one: say the Latin for for that reason, then the Latin for and so.

You'll want to know: causa, causae

causa, causae — "a reason, a cause".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

causa was spelled caussa in older Latin (EtymDB 2.1); where it comes from is unknown. English cause and because come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: causa
- Say it: causa, once more
- Say it: say causa
- Recall: say the Latin for for that reason, then the Latin for and so, then say causa again

Before you move on

What does causa, causae mean? (“A reason, a cause”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 114

Reason, Because of that, Place, Right, Left

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a reason, because of that, a place, right and left.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 114: I can say a reason, because of that, a place, right and left.

114.1 ratiō, ratiōnis — a reason, a way of thinking

Before the new one: say the Latin for and so, then the Latin for a reason.

You'll want to know: ratiō, ratiōnis

ratiō, ratiōnis — "a reason, a way of thinking".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ratiō is built on ratus, "reckoned", the participle of reor, "to reckon, to think" (Lewis & Short): a reckoning. English reason comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ratiō
- Say it: ratiō, once more
- Say it: say ratiō
- Recall: say the Latin for and so, then the Latin for a reason, then say ratiō again

Before you move on

What does ratiō, ratiōnis mean? ("A reason, a way of thinking".) Say it once more.

114.2 propterea — because of that

Before the new one: say the Latin for a reason, then the Latin for a reason.

You'll want to know: propterea

propterea — "because of that".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

propterea is propter, "because of", with ea, "these things" (EtymDB 2.1): because of that.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: propterea
- Say it: propterea, once more
- Say it: say propterea
- Recall: say the Latin for a reason, then the Latin for a reason, then say propterea again

Before you move on

What does propterea̅ mean? (“Because of that”.) Say it once more.

114.3 locus, locī — a place

Before the new one: say the Latin for a reason, then the Latin for because of that.

You’ll want to know: locus, locī

locus, locī — “a place”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

locus comes from Old Latin stlocus, “place” (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European stel-*, “to put, to place” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: locus
- Say it: locus, once more
- Say it: say locus
- Recall: say the Latin for a reason, then the Latin for because of that, then say locus again

Before you move on

What does locus, locī mean? (“A place”.) Say it once more.

114.4 dexter, dextra, dextrum — right (not left)

Before the new one: say the Latin for because of that, then the Latin for a place.

You'll want to know: dexter, dextra, dextrum

dexter, dextra, dextrum — "right (not left)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dexter is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European deks-*, "right side" (EtymDB 2.1), with -ter, an ending that sets one of two sides against the other; Greek dexios, "on the right", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dexter
- Say it: dexter, once more
- Say it: say dexter
- Recall: say the Latin for because of that, then the Latin for a place, then say dexter again

Before you move on

What does dexter, dextra, dextrum mean? ("Right (not left)".) Say it once more.

114.5 sinister, sinistra, sinistrum — left (not right)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a place, then the Latin for right.

You'll want to know: sinister, sinistra, sinistrum

sinister, sinistra, sinistrum — "left (not right)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sinister has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. It ends in -ter, an ending that sets one of two sides against the other, as in dexter, "right".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sinister
- Say it: sinister, once more
- Say it: say sinister
- Recall: say the Latin for a place, then the Latin for right, then say sinister again

Before you move on

What does sinister, sinistra, sinistrum mean? ("Left (not right)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 115

To here, To there, Theatre, Bath, Military camp

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to here, to there, a theatre, a bath and a military camp.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 115: I can say to here, to there, a theatre, a bath and a military camp.

115.1 hūc — to here, hither

Before the new one: say the Latin for right, then the Latin for left.

You'll want to know: hūc

hūc — "to here, hither".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hūc is an old case form of hic, "this": "to this place". Early Latin wrote it hoc (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hūc
- Say it: hūc, once more
- Say it: say hūc
- Recall: say the Latin for right, then the Latin for left, then say hūc again

Before you move on

What does hūc mean? ("To here, hither".) Say it once more.

115.2 illūc — to there, thither

Before the new one: say the Latin for left, then the Latin for to here.

You'll want to know: illūc

illūc — "to there, thither".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

illūc goes with illic, "there" (Lewis & Short), and is built on ille, "that": to that place.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: illūc
- Say it: illūc, once more
- Say it: say illūc
- Recall: say the Latin for left, then the Latin for to here, then say illūc again

Before you move on

What does illūc mean? ("To there, thither".) Say it once more.

115.3 theātrum, theātrī — a theatre

Before the new one: say the Latin for to here, then the Latin for to there.

Read it: the exchange aloud as one run — Salvē! Quid agis? Bene. Valē!

You'll want to know: theātrum, theātrī theātrum, theātrī — "a theatre".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

theātrum was borrowed from Greek theatron, "a place for viewing" (Lewis & Short), from theaomai, "to watch" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: theātrum
- Say it: theātrum, once more
- Say it: say theātrum
- Recall: say the Latin for to here, then the Latin for to there, then say theātrum again

Before you move on

What does theātrum, theātrī mean? ("A theatre".) Say it once more.

115.4 balneum, balneī — a bath, a bathhouse

Before the new one: say the Latin for to there, then the Latin for a theatre.

You'll want to know: balneum, balneī

balneum, balneī — "a bath, a bathhouse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

balneum is contracted from balineum, "a bath" (Lewis & Short), which was borrowed from Greek balaneion, "bath" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: balneum
- Say it: balneum, once more
- Say it: say balneum
- Recall: say the Latin for to there, then the Latin for a theatre, then say balneum again

Before you move on

What does balneum, balneī mean? ("A bath, a bathhouse".) Say it once more.

115.5 castra, castrōrum — a military camp

Before the new one: say the Latin for a theatre, then the Latin for a bath.

You'll want to know: castra, castrōrum

castra, castrōrum — "a military camp".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

castra is the plural of castrum, "a fort" (Lewis & Short). Where castrum comes from is uncertain. English Chester and Lancaster take their names from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: castra
- Say it: castra, once more
- Say it: say castra
- Recall: say the Latin for a theatre, then the Latin for a bath, then say castra again

Before you move on

What does castra, castrōrum mean? ("A military camp".) Say it once more.

Chapter 116

Building, Prison, Main hall of a house, Corner, Street

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a building, a prison, the main hall of a house, a corner and a street.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 116: I can say a building, a prison, the main hall of a house, a corner and a street.

116.1 aedificium, aedificiī — a building

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bath, then the Latin for a military camp.

You'll want to know: aedificium, aedificiī

aedificium, aedificiī — "a building".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aedificium is built on aedificō, "to build" (Lewis & Short), from aedēs, "a building, a temple" (EtymDB 2.1), and faciō, "to make".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aedificium
- Say it: aedificium, once more
- Say it: say aedificium
- Recall: say the Latin for a bath, then the Latin for a military camp, then say aedificium again

Before you move on

What does aedificium, aedificiī mean? ("A building".) Say it once more.

116.2 carcer, carceris — a prison

Before the new one: say the Latin for a military camp, then the Latin for a building.

You'll want to know: carcer, carceris

carcer, carceris — "a prison".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carcer is probably inherited from Proto-Italic karkros*, "enclosure" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short note a Sicilian Greek karkaron, "prison", and call the origin doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: carcer
- Say it: carcer, once more
- Say it: say carcer

- Recall: say the Latin for a military camp, then the Latin for a building, then say carcer again

Before you move on

What does carcer, carceris mean? ("A prison".) Say it once more.

116.3 ātrium, ātriī — the main hall of a house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a building, then the Latin for a prison.

You'll want to know: ātrium, ātriī

ātrium, ātriī — "the main hall of a house".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ātrium has no sure origin. Lewis & Short report the ancient guesses: a Greek aithrion, "open court", or the Etruscan town of Atria. A link with āter, "black", from the smoke of the hearth, is also old; none is certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ātrium
- Say it: ātrium, once more
- Say it: say ātrium
- Recall: say the Latin for a building, then the Latin for a prison, then say ātrium again

Before you move on

What does ātrium, ātriī mean? ("The main hall of a house".) Say it once more.

116.4 angulus, angulī — a corner

Before the new one: say the Latin for a prison, then the Latin for the main hall of a house.

You'll want to know: angulus, angulī

angulus, angulī — "a corner".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

angulus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2engulos*, "corner, angle" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for bending; Greek ankylos, "crooked", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: angulus
- Say it: angulus, once more
- Say it: say angulus
- Recall: say the Latin for a prison, then the Latin for the main hall of a house, then say angulus again

Before you move on

What does angulus, angulī mean? ("A corner".) Say it once more.

116.5 vīcus, vīcī — a street, a village

Before the new one: say the Latin for the main hall of a house, then the Latin for a corner.

Read it: the two lines you would say at a door — Salvē! Ubi est porta?

You'll want to know: vīcus, vīcī

vīcus, vīcī — "a street, a village".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīcus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weik-*, "settlement, household" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek oikos, "house", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English place names in -wick and -wich, such as Norwich, come from vīcus, borrowed early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīcus
- Say it: vīcus, once more
- Say it: say vīcus
- Recall: say the Latin for the main hall of a house, then the Latin for a corner, then say vīcus again

Before you move on

What does vīcus, vīcī mean? ("A street, a village".) Say it once more.

Chapter 117

Step, Library, Food market, Eating-house, Inn

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a step, a library, a food market, an eating-house and an inn.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 117: I can say a step, a library, a food market, an eating-house and an inn.

117.1 gradus, gradūs — a step, a stair

Before the new one: say the Latin for a corner, then the Latin for a street.

You'll want to know: gradus, gradūs

gradus, gradūs — "a step, a stair".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gradus belongs with gradior, "to step, to walk" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghredh-*, "to walk, to go" (EtymDB 2.1). English grade and degree come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gradus
- Say it: gradus, once more
- Say it: say gradus
- Recall: say the Latin for a corner, then the Latin for a street, then say gradus again

Before you move on

What does gradus, gradūs mean? ("A step, a stair".) Say it once more.

117.2 bibliothēca, bibliothēcae — a library

Before the new one: say the Latin for a street, then the Latin for a step.

You'll want to know: bibliothēca, bibliothēcae

bibliothēca, bibliothēcae — "a library".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bibliothēca was borrowed from Greek bibliothēkē, "a book-room, a library" (Lewis & Short), from biblion, "book", and thēkē, "a box, a storeplace" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bibliothēca
- Say it: bibliothēca, once more
- Say it: say bibliothēca

- Recall: say the Latin for a street, then the Latin for a step, then say bibliothēca again

Before you move on

What does bibliothēca, bibliothēcae mean? ("A library".) Say it once more.

117.3 macellum, macellī — a food market

Before the new one: say the Latin for a step, then the Latin for a library.

At a market you buy and sell: say emō, I buy, then vendō, I sell.

You'll want to know: macellum, macellī

macellum, macellī — "a food market".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

macellum probably came into Latin from Greek makellon, "an enclosure, a meat market", which may itself be a Semitic loan; Lewis & Short's link with Greek makhomai, "to fight", is unlikely.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: macellum
- Say it: macellum, once more
- Say it: say macellum
- Recall: say the Latin for a step, then the Latin for a library, then say macellum again

Before you move on

What does macellum, macellī mean? ("A food market".) Say it once more.

117.4 popīna, popīnae — an eating-house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a library, then the Latin for a food market.

You'll want to know: popīna, popīnae

popīna, popīnae — "an eating-house".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

popīna is usually taken as the Oscan or Umbrian twin of coquīna, "kitchen": those languages had p where Latin had qu. Both go back to the root of coquō, "to cook" (Lewis & Short compare Greek peptō, "to cook").

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: popīna
- Say it: popīna, once more
- Say it: say popīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a library, then the Latin for a food market, then say popīna again

Before you move on

What does popīna, popīnae mean? ("An eating-house".) Say it once more.

117.5 caupōna, caupōnae — an inn

Before the new one: say the Latin for a food market, then the Latin for an eating-house.

You'll want to know: caupōna, caupōnae

caupōna, caupōnae — "an inn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caupōna is built on caupō, "an innkeeper, a shopkeeper" (Lewis & Short): first the woman who kept the shop, then the inn itself. Where caupō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: caupōna
- Say it: caupōna, once more
- Say it: say caupōna
- Recall: say the Latin for a food market, then the Latin for an eating-house, then say caupōna again

Before you move on

What does caupōna, caupōnae mean? ("An inn".) Say it once more.

Chapter 118

Floor, Well, Bakery, Workshop, Tomb

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a floor, a well, a bakery, a workshop and a tomb.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 118: I can say a floor, a well, a bakery, a workshop and a tomb.

118.1 pavīmentum, pavīmentī — a floor

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an eating-house, then the Latin for an inn.

You'll want to know: pavīmentum, pavīmentī

pavīmentum, pavīmentī — "a floor".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pavīmentum is built on paviō, "to beat, to tread down" (Lewis & Short), with -mentum, an ending for a thing: a floor of beaten earth or stone. English pavement comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pavīmentum
- Say it: pavīmentum, once more
- Say it: say pavīmentum
- Recall: say the Latin for an eating-house, then the Latin for an inn, then say pavīmentum again

Before you move on

What does pavīmentum, pavīmentī mean? ("A floor".) Say it once more.

118.2 puteus, puteī — a well

Before the new one: say the Latin for an inn, then the Latin for a floor.

You'll want to know: puteus, puteī

puteus, puteī — "a well".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

puteus has no sure origin. EtymDB 2.1 tentatively links it to a Proto-Indo-European root pewH-*, "to strike, to hew", as a hole cut into the ground, but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: puteus
- Say it: puteus, once more
- Say it: say puteus

- Recall: say the Latin for an inn, then the Latin for a floor, then say puteus again

Before you move on

What does puteus, puteī mean? (“A well”.) Say it once more.

118.3 pistrīnum, pistrīnī — a bakery, a mill

Before the new one: say the Latin for a floor, then the Latin for a well.

You’ll want to know: pistrīnum, pistrīnī

pistrīnum, pistrīnī — “a bakery, a mill”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pistrīnum is built on pistor, “a miller, a baker” (Lewis & Short), from pīnsō, “to pound, to crush”: grain was pounded before it was ground.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pistrīnum
- Say it: pistrīnum, once more
- Say it: say pistrīnum
- Recall: say the Latin for a floor, then the Latin for a well, then say pistrīnum again

Before you move on

What does pistrīnum, pistrīnī mean? (“A bakery, a mill”.) Say it once more.

118.4 officīna, officīnae — a workshop

Before the new one: say the Latin for a well, then the Latin for a bakery.

You'll want to know: officīna, officīnae

officīna, officīnae — "a workshop".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

officīna is contracted from opificīna, "a workshop" (Lewis & Short), built on opifex, "a workman", from opus, "work", and faciō, "to make".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: officīna
- Say it: officīna, once more
- Say it: say officīna
- Recall: say the Latin for a well, then the Latin for a bakery, then say officīna again

Before you move on

What does officīna, officīnae mean? ("A workshop".) Say it once more.

118.5 sepulcrum, sepulcrī — a tomb

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bakery, then the Latin for a workshop.

You'll want to know: sepulcrum, sepulcrī

sepulcrum, sepulcrī — "a tomb".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sepulcrum is built on sepeliō, "to bury" (Lewis & Short), with -crum, an ending for a place or tool, as in fulcrum, "a support". English sepulchre comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sepulcrum
- Say it: sepulcrum, once more
- Say it: say sepulcrum
- Recall: say the Latin for a bakery, then the Latin for a workshop, then say sepulcrum again

Before you move on

What does sepulcrum, sepulcrī mean? ("A tomb".) Say it once more.

Chapter 119

Open space, Milestone, Around, Next to, Opposite

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say an open space, a milestone, around, next to and opposite.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 119: I can say an open space, a milestone, around, next to and opposite.

119.1 ārea, āreae — an open space, a courtyard

Before the new one: say the Latin for a workshop, then the Latin for a tomb.

You'll want to know: ārea, āreae

ārea, āreae — "an open space, a courtyard".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ārea has no sure origin. Varro tied it to āreō, "to be dry" (Lewis & Short), as a dry, level space, but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ārea
- Say it: ārea, once more
- Say it: say ārea
- Recall: say the Latin for a workshop, then the Latin for a tomb, then say ārea again

Before you move on

What does ārea, āreae mean? ("An open space, a courtyard".) Say it once more.

119.2 mīliārium, mīliāriī — a milestone

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tomb, then the Latin for an open space.

Read it: the three signs aloud, the way a traveller reads them — theātrum, balneum, forum

You'll want to know: mīliārium, mīliāriī

mīliārium, mīliāriī — "a milestone".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mīliārium is built on mīlia, "thousands", the plural of mīlle, "a thousand": a Roman mile was a thousand paces, and a stone marked each one.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mīliārium
- Say it: mīliārium, once more

- Say it: say mīliārium
- Recall: say the Latin for a tomb, then the Latin for an open space, then say mīliārium again

Before you move on

What does mīliārium, mīliāriī mean? ("A milestone".) Say it once more.

119.3 circā — around

Before the new one: say the Latin for an open space, then the Latin for a milestone.

You'll want to know: circā

circā — "around".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

circā is a later form beside circum, "around" (Lewis & Short), which is the accusative of circus, "a ring".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: circā
- Say it: circā, once more
- Say it: say circā
- Recall: say the Latin for an open space, then the Latin for a milestone, then say circā again

Before you move on

What does circā mean? ("Around".) Say it once more.

119.4 iūxtā — next to, close by

Before the new one: say the Latin for a milestone, then the Latin for around.

You'll want to know: iūxtā

iūxtā — "next to, close by".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūxtā is an old superlative adverb built on the root of iungō, "to join" (Lewis & Short): "most closely joined", so right next to.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iūxtā
- Say it: iūxtā, once more
- Say it: say iūxtā
- Recall: say the Latin for a milestone, then the Latin for around, then say iūxtā again

Before you move on

What does iūxtā mean? ("Next to, close by".) Say it once more.

119.5 contrā — opposite, against

Before the new one: say the Latin for around, then the Latin for next to.

You'll want to know: contrā

contrā — "opposite, against".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

contrā is built on cum, "with", in its old form com-, through a comparative form like the one in intrā, "inside" (Lewis & Short): "on the facing side".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: contrā
- Say it: contrā, once more
- Say it: say contrā
- Recall: say the Latin for around, then the Latin for next to, then say contrā again

Before you move on

What does contrā mean? ("Opposite, against".) Say it once more.

119.6 Can, want and why — a first pass

Say the words for next to and opposite.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to be able, to dare, to have to, to be used to, power
- a chance, a skill, it is necessary, it is allowed, to not want
- to prefer, to desire, to wish for, to miss, a wish
- a desire, hope, a longing, why?, why?
- for, for, for that reason, and so, a reason

Before you move on

To be able? (queō, quīre.) To dare? (audeō, audēre.) To have to? (dēbeō, dēbēre.) To be used to? (soleō, solēre.) Power? (potestās, potestātis.) A chance? (facultās, facultātis.) A skill? (ars, artis.) It is necessary? (oportet.) It is allowed? (licet.) To not want? (nōlō, nōlle.) To prefer? (mālō, mālle.) To desire? (cupiō, cupere.) To wish for? (optō, optāre.) To miss? (dēsīderō, dēsīderāre.) A wish? (voluntās, voluntātis.) A desire? (cupiditās, cupiditātis.) Hope? (spēs, speī.) A longing? (dēsīderium, dēsīderiī.) Asking why? (quārē.) Asking why, another way? (quamobrem.) For? (nam.) For? (enim.) For that reason? (ideō.) And so? (itaque.) A reason? (causa, causae.)

119.7 Places — a second pass

Say the words for a reason and because of that.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a reason, because of that, a place, right, left
- to here, to there, a theatre, a bath, a military camp
- a building, a prison, the main hall of a house, a corner, a street
- a step, a library, a food market, an eating-house, an inn
- a floor, a well, a bakery, a workshop, a tomb
- an open space, a milestone, around, next to, opposite

Before you move on

A reason? (ratiō, ratiōnis.) Because of that? (propterea.) A place? (locus, locī.) Right? (dexter, dextra, dextrum.) Left? (sinister, sinistra, sinistrum.) To here? (hūc.) To there? (illūc.) A theatre? (theātrum, theātrī.) A bath? (balneum, balneī.) A military camp? (castra, castrōrum.) A building? (aedificium, aedificiī.) A prison? (carcer, carceris.) The main hall of a house? (ātrium, ātriī.) A corner? (angulus, angulī.) A street? (vīcus, vīcī.) A step? (gradus, gradūs.) A library? (bibliothēca, bibliothēcae.) A food market? (macellum, macellī.) An eating-house? (popīna, popīnae.) An inn? (caupōna, caupōnae.) A floor? (pavīmentum, pavīmentī.) A well? (puteus, puteī.) A bakery? (pistrīnum, pistrīnī.) A workshop? (officīna, officīnae.) A tomb? (sepulcrum, sepulcrī.) An open space? (ārea, āreae.) A milestone? (mīliārium, mīliāriī.) Around? (circā.) Next to? (iūxtā.) Opposite? (contrā.)

Chapter 120

Sack, Box, Cushion, Blanket, Napkin

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a sack, a box, a cushion, a blanket and a napkin.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 120: I can say a sack, a box, a cushion, a blanket and a napkin.

120.1 saccus, saccī — a sack, a bag

Before the new one: say the Latin for next to, close by, then the Latin for opposite, against.

You'll want to know: saccus, saccī

saccus, saccī — "a sack, a bag".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saccus was borrowed from Greek sakkos, "a bag of coarse cloth" (Lewis & Short), which Greek took from a Semitic language. English sack comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saccus
- Say it: saccus, once more
- Say it: say saccus
- Recall: say the Latin for next to, close by, then the Latin for opposite, against, then say saccus again

Before you move on

What does saccus, saccī mean? ("A sack, a bag".) Say it once more.

120.2 cista, cistae — a box, a chest

Before the new one: say the Latin for opposite, against, then the Latin for a sack.

You'll want to know: cista, cistae

cista, cistae — "a box, a chest".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cista was borrowed from Greek kistē, "a box, a basket" (Lewis & Short). English chest was borrowed from it very early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cista
- Say it: cista, once more
- Say it: say cista
- Recall: say the Latin for opposite, against, then the Latin for a sack, then say cista again

Before you move on

What does cista, cistae mean? (“A box, a chest”.) Say it once more.

120.3 pulvīnus, pulvīnī — a cushion, a pillow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sack, then the Latin for a box.

You’ll want to know: pulvīnus, pulvīnī

pulvīnus, pulvīnī — “a cushion, a pillow”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulvīnus has no sure origin; the link with pulvis, “dust”, that EtymDB 2.1 records is doubtful.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pulvīnus
- Say it: pulvīnus, once more
- Say it: say pulvīnus
- Recall: say the Latin for a sack, then the Latin for a box, then say pulvīnus again

Before you move on

What does pulvīnus, pulvīnī mean? (“A cushion, a pillow”.) Say it once more.

120.4 strāgulum, strāgulī — a blanket, a bedspread

Before the new one: say the Latin for a box, then the Latin for a cushion.

You'll want to know: strāgulum, strāgulī

strāgulum, strāgulī — "a blanket, a bedspread".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

strāgulum is the neuter of strāgulus, "for spreading out" (Lewis & Short), built on the root of sternō, "to spread, to lay out".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: strāgulum
- Say it: strāgulum, once more
- Say it: say strāgulum
- Recall: say the Latin for a box, then the Latin for a cushion, then say strāgulum again

Before you move on

What does strāgulum, strāgulī mean? ("A blanket, a bedspread".) Say it once more.

120.5 mappa, mappae — a napkin, a cloth

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cushion, then the Latin for a blanket.

You'll want to know: mappa, mappae

mappa, mappae — "a napkin, a cloth".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mappa came from Punic, the language of Carthage: Quintilian already called mappa a Punic word (Lewis & Short). English map comes from it, through mappa mundi, "cloth of the world".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mappa
- Say it: mappa, once more
- Say it: say mappa
- Recall: say the Latin for a cushion, then the Latin for a blanket, then say mappa again

Before you move on

What does mappa, mappae mean? ("A napkin, a cloth".) Say it once more.

Chapter 121

Spoon, Cooking pot, Dish, Bowl, Candle

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a spoon, a cooking pot, a dish, a bowl and a candle.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 121: I can say a spoon, a cooking pot, a dish, a bowl and a candle.

121.1 cochlear, cochleāris — a spoon

Before the new one: say the Latin for a blanket, then the Latin for a napkin.

You'll want to know: cochlear, cochleāris

cochlear, cochleāris — "a spoon".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cochlear is built on cochlea, "a snail" (EtymDB 2.1), a word Latin took from Greek kokhlias, "snail, spiral": the spoon was first for eating snails, its pointed end for picking them out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cochlear
- Say it: cochlear, once more
- Say it: say cochlear
- Recall: say the Latin for a blanket, then the Latin for a napkin, then say cochlear again

Before you move on

What does cochlear, cochleāris mean? ("A spoon".) Say it once more.

121.2 ōlla, ōllae — a cooking pot

Before the new one: say the Latin for a napkin, then the Latin for a spoon.

You'll want to know: ōlla, ōllae

ōlla, ōllae — "a cooking pot".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōlla is inherited, usually traced through Proto-Italic aukslā*, "pot", to Proto-Indo-European Hukwsleh2*, "cooking pot" (EtymDB 2.1). An older Latin spelling was aula (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōlla
- Say it: ōlla, once more
- Say it: say ōlla

- Recall: say the Latin for a napkin, then the Latin for a spoon, then say ōlla again

Before you move on

What does ōlla, ōllae mean? ("A cooking pot".) Say it once more.

121.3 patina, patinae — a dish, a pan

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spoon, then the Latin for a cooking pot.

You'll want to know: patina, patinae

patina, patinae — "a dish, a pan".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patina was probably borrowed from Greek patanē, "a flat dish" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short's link with pateō, "to lie open", is less likely. English patina is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patina
- Say it: patina, once more
- Say it: say patina
- Recall: say the Latin for a spoon, then the Latin for a cooking pot, then say patina again

Before you move on

What does patina, patinae mean? ("A dish, a pan".) Say it once more.

121.4 catīnus, catīnī — a bowl, a deep dish

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cooking pot, then the Latin for a dish.

You'll want to know: catīnus, catīnī

catīnus, catīnī — "a bowl, a deep dish".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

catīnus has no sure origin; Varro compared a Sicilian Greek katinon, "dish" (Lewis & Short), and it may be a loan from there.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: catīnus
- Say it: catīnus, once more
- Say it: say catīnus
- Recall: say the Latin for a cooking pot, then the Latin for a dish, then say catīnus again

Before you move on

What does catīnus, catīnī mean? ("A bowl, a deep dish".) Say it once more.

121.5 candēla, candēlae — a candle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dish, then the Latin for a bowl.

Put three hours in order, first to last: prīma hōra, sexta hōra, nōna hōra. Which of them is ante merīdiem?

You'll want to know: candēla, candēlae

candēla, candēlae — "a candle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

candēla is built on candeō, "to shine, to glow white" (Lewis & Short), with -ēla, an ending for a tool. candeō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)kand-*, "to shine" (EtymDB 2.1). English candle comes from candēla.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: candēla
- Say it: candēla, once more
- Say it: say candēla
- Recall: say the Latin for a dish, then the Latin for a bowl, then say candēla again

Before you move on

What does candēla, candēlae mean? ("A candle".) Say it once more.

Chapter 122

Nail, Hammer, Saw, Axe, Ladder

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a nail, a hammer, a saw, an axe and a ladder.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 122: I can say a nail, a hammer, a saw, an axe and a ladder.

122.1 clāvus, clāvī — a nail (to hammer)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bowl, then the Latin for a candle.

You'll want to know: clāvus, clāvī

clāvus, clāvī — "a nail (to hammer)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clāvus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)kleh2w-*, "nail, pin, hook" (EtymDB 2.1); clāvis, "key", and claudō, "to shut", belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: clāvus
- Say it: clāvus, once more
- Say it: say clāvus
- Recall: say the Latin for a bowl, then the Latin for a candle, then say clāvus again

Before you move on

What does clāvus, clāvī mean? ("A nail (to hammer)".) Say it once more.

122.2 malleus, malleī — a hammer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a candle, then the Latin for a nail.

You'll want to know: malleus, malleī

malleus, malleī — "a hammer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

malleus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root melh2-*, "to grind, to crush" (EtymDB 2.1). English mallet and maul come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: malleus
- Say it: malleus, once more
- Say it: say malleus

- Recall: say the Latin for a candle, then the Latin for a nail, then say malleus again

Before you move on

What does malleus, malleī mean? ("A hammer".) Say it once more.

122.3 serra, serrae — a saw

Before the new one: say the Latin for a nail, then the Latin for a hammer.

You'll want to know: serra, serrae

serra, serrae — "a saw".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

serra has no sure origin; Lewis & Short suggest a link with secō, "to cut", but it is uncertain. English serrated, "saw-toothed", comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: serra
- Say it: serra, once more
- Say it: say serra
- Recall: say the Latin for a nail, then the Latin for a hammer, then say serra again

Before you move on

What does serra, serrae mean? ("A saw".) Say it once more.

122.4 secūris, secūris — an axe

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hammer, then the Latin for a saw.

You'll want to know: secūris, secūris

secūris, secūris — "an axe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

secūris is built on secō, "to cut" (Lewis & Short): the cutting tool.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: secūris
- Say it: secūris, once more
- Say it: say secūris
- Recall: say the Latin for a hammer, then the Latin for a saw, then say secūris again

Before you move on

What does secūris, secūris mean? ("An axe".) Say it once more.

122.5 scālae, scālārum — a ladder, stairs

Before the new one: say the Latin for a saw, then the Latin for an axe.

You'll want to know: scālae, scālārum

scālae, scālārum — "a ladder, stairs".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scālae is usually derived from scandō, "to climb": the things one climbs. English scale, "to climb", comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scālae
- Say it: scālae, once more
- Say it: say scālae
- Recall: say the Latin for a saw, then the Latin for an axe, then say scālae again

Before you move on

What does scālae, scālārum mean? ("A ladder, stairs".) Say it once more.

Chapter 123

Vessel, Two-handled jar, Flask, Purse, Coin

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a vessel, a two-handled jar, a flask, a purse and a coin.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 123: I can say a vessel, a two-handled jar, a flask, a purse and a coin.

123.1 vās, vāsis — a vessel, a container

Before the new one: say the Latin for an axe, then the Latin for a ladder.

You'll want to know: vās, vāsis

vās, vāsis — "a vessel, a container".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vās has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. It is a different word from vas, vadis, "a guarantor, bail". English vase comes from vās through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vās
- Say it: vās, once more
- Say it: say vās
- Recall: say the Latin for an axe, then the Latin for a ladder, then say vās again

Before you move on

What does vās, vāsis mean? ("A vessel, a container".) Say it once more.

123.2 amphora, amphorae — a two-handled jar

Before the new one: say the Latin for a ladder, then the Latin for a vessel.

You'll want to know: amphora, amphorae

amphora, amphorae — "a two-handled jar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amphora was borrowed from Greek amphoreus, "a two-handled jar" (Lewis & Short), from amphi, "on both sides", and pherō, "to carry": a jar carried by both handles.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amphora
- Say it: amphora, once more
- Say it: say amphora

- Recall: say the Latin for a ladder, then the Latin for a vessel, then say amphora again

Before you move on

What does amphora, amphorae mean? ("A two-handled jar".) Say it once more.

123.3 lagoena, lagoenae — a flask, a bottle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a vessel, then the Latin for a two-handled jar.

You'll want to know: lagoena, lagoenae

lagoena, lagoenae — "a flask, a bottle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lagoena is another spelling of lagēna, "a flask" (Lewis & Short), a word borrowed from Greek lagynos, "a flask".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lagoena
- Say it: lagoena, once more
- Say it: say lagoena
- Recall: say the Latin for a vessel, then the Latin for a two-handled jar, then say lagoena again

Before you move on

What does lagoena, lagoenae mean? ("A flask, a bottle".) Say it once more.

123.4 crumēna, crumēnae — a purse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a two-handled jar, then the Latin for a flask.

You'll want to know: crumēna, crumēnae

crumēna, crumēnae — "a purse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crumēna has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crumēna
- Say it: crumēna, once more
- Say it: say crumēna
- Recall: say the Latin for a two-handled jar, then the Latin for a flask, then say crumēna again

Before you move on

What does crumēna, crumēnae mean? ("A purse".) Say it once more.

123.5 nummus, nummī — a coin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flask, then the Latin for a purse.

You'll want to know: nummus, nummī

nummus, nummī — "a coin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nummus probably came from the Greek of Sicily and south Italy, where noummos, "a coin", was in use; Lewis & Short connect it with Greek nemō, "to distribute". English numismatic, "of coins", comes from the Greek family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nummus
- Say it: nummus, once more
- Say it: say nummus
- Recall: say the Latin for a flask, then the Latin for a purse, then say nummus again

Before you move on

What does nummus, nummī mean? ("A coin".) Say it once more.

Chapter 124

Book, Ink, Reed pen, Wax, Picture

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a book, ink, a reed pen, wax and a picture.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 124: I can say a book, ink, a reed pen, wax and a picture.

124.1 cōdex, cōdicis — a book (of bound pages)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a purse, then the Latin for a coin.

Read it: the account aloud as one run — Māne surgō. In scholā legō et scrībō. Vespere domum redeō.

You'll want to know: cōdex, cōdicis

cōdex, cōdicis — "a book (of bound pages)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōdex is another form of caudex, "a tree trunk, a block of wood" (Lewis & Short): the first such books were wooden tablets fastened together. Where caudex comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōdex
- Say it: cōdex, once more
- Say it: say cōdex
- Recall: say the Latin for a purse, then the Latin for a coin, then say cōdex again

Before you move on

What does cōdex, cōdicis mean? ("A book (of bound pages)".) Say it once more.

124.2 ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī — ink

Before the new one: say the Latin for a coin, then the Latin for a book.

You'll want to know: ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī

ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī — "ink".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ātrāmentum is built on āter, "black" (Lewis & Short), with -mentum, an ending for a thing: what blackens.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ātrāmentum
- Say it: ātrāmentum, once more
- Say it: say ātrāmentum
- Recall: say the Latin for a coin, then the Latin for a book, then say ātrāmentum again

Before you move on

What does ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī mean? ("Ink".) Say it once more.

124.3 calamus, calamī — a reed pen

Before the new one: say the Latin for a book, then the Latin for ink.

You'll want to know: calamus, calamī

calamus, calamī — "a reed pen".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calamus was borrowed from Greek kalamos, "a reed, a reed pen" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calamus
- Say it: calamus, once more
- Say it: say calamus
- Recall: say the Latin for a book, then the Latin for ink, then say calamus again

Before you move on

What does calamus, calamī mean? ("A reed pen".) Say it once more.

124.4 cēra, cērae — wax; a wax tablet

Before the new one: say the Latin for ink, then the Latin for a reed pen.

You'll want to know: cēra, cērae

cēra, cērae — "wax; a wax tablet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēra is usually taken as a loan from Greek kēros, "wax" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cēra
- Say it: cēra, once more
- Say it: say cēra
- Recall: say the Latin for ink, then the Latin for a reed pen, then say cēra again

Before you move on

What does cēra, cērae mean? ("Wax; a wax tablet".) Say it once more.

124.5 pictūra, pictūrae — a picture, a painting

Before the new one: say the Latin for a reed pen, then the Latin for wax; a wax tablet.

You'll want to know: pictūra, pictūrae

pictūra, pictūrae — "a picture, a painting".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pictūra is built on pingō, "to paint" (Lewis & Short), through its participle pictus, "painted", with -ūra, an ending for a result. pingō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peyk-*, "to mark, to colour"

(EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pictūra
- Say it: pictūra, once more
- Say it: say pictūra
- Recall: say the Latin for a reed pen, then the Latin for wax; a wax tablet, then say pictūra again

Before you move on

What does pictūra, pictūrae mean? ("A picture, a painting".) Say it once more.

Chapter 125

Statue, Sign, Sail, Wagon, Long dress

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a statue, a sign, a sail, a wagon and a long dress.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 125: I can say a statue, a sign, a sail, a wagon and a long dress.

125.1 statua, statuae — a statue

Before the new one: say the Latin for wax; a wax tablet, then the Latin for a picture.

You'll want to know: statua, statuae

statua, statuae — "a statue".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

statua is built on statuō, "to set up" (Lewis & Short): a thing set up. statuō comes from status, "a standing", from stō, "to stand".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: statua
- Say it: statua, once more
- Say it: say statua
- Recall: say the Latin for wax; a wax tablet, then the Latin for a picture, then say statua again

Before you move on

What does statua, statuae mean? ("A statue".) Say it once more.

125.2 signum, signī — a sign, a signal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a picture, then the Latin for a statue.

You'll want to know: signum, signī

signum, signī — "a sign, a signal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

signum is often traced to Proto-Indo-European sek-*, "to cut" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of secō, "to cut": a sign as a notch or mark. The link is likely but not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: signum
- Say it: signum, once more
- Say it: say signum
- Recall: say the Latin for a picture, then the Latin for a statue, then say signum again

Before you move on

What does signum, signī mean? ("A sign, a signal".) Say it once more.

125.3 vēlum, vēlī — a sail; a curtain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a statue, then the Latin for a sign.

You'll want to know: vēlum, vēlī

vēlum, vēlī — "a sail; a curtain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēlum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weg-, "to weave" (EtymDB 2.1), through an older wegslom; vexillum, "a banner", is its diminutive.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vēlum
- Say it: vēlum, once more
- Say it: say vēlum
- Recall: say the Latin for a statue, then the Latin for a sign, then say vēlum again

Before you move on

What does vēlum, vēlī mean? ("A sail; a curtain".) Say it once more.

125.4 plaustrum, plaustrī — a wagon, a cart

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sign, then the Latin for a sail; a curtain.

You'll want to know: plaustrum, plaustrī

plaustrum, plaustrī — "a wagon, a cart".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plaustrum has no sure origin; the links with words for floating that Lewis & Short and EtymDB 2.1 record are doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: plaustrum
- Say it: plaustrum, once more
- Say it: say plaustrum
- Recall: say the Latin for a sign, then the Latin for a sail; a curtain, then say plaustrum again

Before you move on

What does plaustrum, plaustrī mean? ("A wagon, a cart".) Say it once more.

125.5 stola, stolae — a long dress

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sail; a curtain, then the Latin for a wagon.

You'll want to know: stola, stolae

stola, stolae — "a long dress".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stola was borrowed from Greek stolē, "a garment, equipment" (Lewis & Short), from stellō, "to make ready, to equip" (EtymDB 2.1). English stole comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: stola
- Say it: stola, once more
- Say it: say stola
- Recall: say the Latin for a sail; a curtain, then the Latin for a wagon, then say stola again

Before you move on

What does stola, stolae mean? ("A long dress".) Say it once more.

Chapter 126

Cloak, Belt, Fruit, Onion, Garlic

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a cloak, a belt, a fruit, an onion and garlic.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 126: I can say a cloak, a belt, a fruit, an onion and garlic.

126.1 pallium, palliī — a cloak

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wagon, then the Latin for a long dress.

You'll want to know: pallium, palliī

pallium, palliī — "a cloak".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pallium belongs with palla, "a woman's mantle" (Lewis & Short); where the pair comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pallium
- Say it: pallium, once more
- Say it: say pallium
- Recall: say the Latin for a wagon, then the Latin for a long dress, then say pallium again

Before you move on

What does pallium, palliī mean? ("A cloak".) Say it once more.

126.2 zōna, zōnae — a belt

Before the new one: say the Latin for a long dress, then the Latin for a cloak.

You'll want to know: zōna, zōnae

zōna, zōnae — "a belt".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

zōna was borrowed from Greek zōnē, "a belt, a girdle" (Lewis & Short). English zone is the same word: the climate belts of the earth.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: zōna
- Say it: zōna, once more
- Say it: say zōna
- Recall: say the Latin for a long dress, then the Latin for a cloak, then say zōna again

Before you move on

What does zōna, zōnae mean? ("A belt".) Say it once more.

126.3 pōmum, pōmī — a fruit, an apple

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cloak, then the Latin for a belt.

You'll want to know: pōmum, pōmī

pōmum, pōmī — "a fruit, an apple".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pōmum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2epo*, "off, away", and h1em-, "to take" (EtymDB 2.1), through an older po-emom, "what is taken off, picked". English pomegranate is built on it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pōmum
- Say it: pōmum, once more
- Say it: say pōmum
- Recall: say the Latin for a cloak, then the Latin for a belt, then say pōmum again

Before you move on

What does pōmum, pōmī mean? ("A fruit, an apple".) Say it once more.

126.4 cēpa, cēpae — an onion

Before the new one: say the Latin for a belt, then the Latin for a fruit.

You'll want to know: cēpa, cēpae

cēpa, cēpae — "an onion".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēpa, also spelled caepa (Lewis & Short), has no sure origin. English chive comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cēpa
- Say it: cēpa, once more
- Say it: say cēpa
- Recall: say the Latin for a belt, then the Latin for a fruit, then say cēpa again

Before you move on

What does cēpa, cēpae mean? ("An onion".) Say it once more.

126.5 ālium, āliī — garlic

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fruit, then the Latin for an onion.

You'll want to know: ālium, āliī

ālium, āliī — "garlic".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ālium, also spelled allium (Lewis & Short), has no sure origin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ālium
- Say it: ālium, once more
- Say it: say ālium
- Recall: say the Latin for a fruit, then the Latin for an onion, then say ālium again

Before you move on

What does ālium, āliī mean? ("Garlic".) Say it once more.

Chapter 127

Bean, Pea, Cucumber, Chicken, Pepper

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a bean, a pea, a cucumber, a chicken and pepper.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 127: I can say a bean, a pea, a cucumber, a chicken and pepper.

127.1 faba, fabae — a bean

Before the new one: say the Latin for an onion, then the Latin for garlic.

You'll want to know: faba, fabae

faba, fabae — "a bean".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

faba is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhabh-*, "bean" (EtymDB 2.1). English bean may be a distant cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: faba
- Say it: faba, once more
- Say it: say faba
- Recall: say the Latin for an onion, then the Latin for garlic, then say faba again

Before you move on

What does faba, fabae mean? ("A bean".) Say it once more.

127.2 pīsum, pīsī — a pea

Before the new one: say the Latin for garlic, then the Latin for a bean.

You'll want to know: pīsum, pīsī

pīsum, pīsī — "a pea".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pīsum was borrowed from Greek pison, "pea" (Lewis & Short). English pea comes from it: older English pease was heard as a plural.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pīsum
- Say it: pīsum, once more
- Say it: say pīsum
- Recall: say the Latin for garlic, then the Latin for a bean, then say pīsum again

Before you move on

What does pīsum, pīsī mean? ("A pea".) Say it once more.

127.3 cucumis, cucumeris — a cucumber

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bean, then the Latin for a pea.

You'll want to know: cucumis, cucumeris

cucumis, cucumeris — "a cucumber".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cucumis has no sure origin; it is probably a loan from a lost Mediterranean language. English cucumber comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cucumis
- Say it: cucumis, once more
- Say it: say cucumis
- Recall: say the Latin for a bean, then the Latin for a pea, then say cucumis again

Before you move on

What does cucumis, cucumeris mean? ("A cucumber".) Say it once more.

127.4 pullus, pullī — a chicken, a young animal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pea, then the Latin for a cucumber.

You'll want to know: pullus, pullī

pullus, pullī — "a chicken, a young animal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pullus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European polH-*, "young animal" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek pōlos, "foal", and English foal are cousins (Lewis & Short). English pullet comes from pullus through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pullus
- Say it: pullus, once more
- Say it: say pullus
- Recall: say the Latin for a pea, then the Latin for a cucumber, then say pullus again

Before you move on

What does pullus, pullī mean? ("A chicken, a young animal".) Say it once more.

127.5 piper, piperis — pepper

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cucumber, then the Latin for a chicken.

You'll want to know: piper, piperis

piper, piperis — "pepper".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piper was borrowed from Greek peperi, "pepper" (Lewis & Short), which came by trade from an Indian word like Sanskrit pippalī, "long pepper" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: piper
- Say it: piper, once more
- Say it: say piper
- Recall: say the Latin for a cucumber, then the Latin for a chicken, then say piper again

Before you move on

What does piper, piperis mean? ("Pepper".) Say it once more.

Chapter 128

Flat cake, Beer, Juice, Rose, Lily

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a flat cake, beer, juice, a rose and a lily.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 128: I can say a flat cake, beer, juice, a rose and a lily.

128.1 placenta, placentae — a flat cake

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chicken, then the Latin for pepper.

You'll want to know: placenta, placentae

placenta, placentae — "a flat cake".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

placenta was borrowed from Greek plakous, plakountos, "a flat cake" (Lewis & Short). Anatomists later gave the name to a flat organ of the womb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: placenta
- Say it: placenta, once more
- Say it: say placenta
- Recall: say the Latin for a chicken, then the Latin for pepper, then say placenta again

Before you move on

What does placenta, placentae mean? ("A flat cake".) Say it once more.

128.2 cervīsia, cervīsiae — beer

Before the new one: say the Latin for pepper, then the Latin for a flat cake.

You'll want to know: cervīsia, cervīsiae

cervīsia, cervīsiae — "beer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cervīsia came from Gaulish, the Celtic language of Gaul: Lewis & Short mark cervīsia as Gallic, a Celtic word for beer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cervīsia
- Say it: cervīsia, once more
- Say it: say cervīsia
- Recall: say the Latin for pepper, then the Latin for a flat cake, then say cervīsia again

Before you move on

What does cervīsia, cervīsiae mean? (“Beer”.) Say it once more.

128.3 sūcus, sūcī — juice

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flat cake, then the Latin for beer.

You’ll want to know: sūcus, sūcī

sūcus, sūcī — “juice”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sūcus belongs with sūgō, “to suck” (Lewis & Short), and both are usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sug-*, “to suck” (EtymDB 2.1). English suck is a cousin.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sūcus
- Say it: sūcus, once more
- Say it: say sūcus
- Recall: say the Latin for a flat cake, then the Latin for beer, then say sūcus again

Before you move on

What does sūcus, sūcī mean? (“Juice”.) Say it once more.

128.4 rosa, rosae — a rose

Before the new one: say the Latin for beer, then the Latin for juice.

Say amō, I love, and then amīcum amō.

You'll want to know: rosa, rosae

rosa, rosae — "a rose".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rosa is related to Greek rhodon, "rose" (Lewis & Short), but it is not a direct borrowing: it probably reached Latin through another language of Italy. The word is often traced further back to Iranian.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rosa
- Say it: rosa, once more
- Say it: say rosa
- Recall: say the Latin for beer, then the Latin for juice, then say rosa again

Before you move on

What does rosa, rosae mean? ("A rose".) Say it once more.

128.5 līlium, līliī — a lily

Before the new one: say the Latin for juice, then the Latin for a rose.

You'll want to know: līlium, līliī

līlium, līliī — "a lily".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līlium was borrowed from Greek leirion, "lily" (Lewis & Short), probably through another language; the word may go back to Egyptian.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: līlium
- Say it: līlium, once more
- Say it: say līlium
- Recall: say the Latin for juice, then the Latin for a rose, then say līlium again

Before you move on

What does līlium, līliī mean? ("A lily".) Say it once more.

Chapter 129

Branch, Tree trunk, Seed, Rock, River bank

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a branch, a tree trunk, a seed, a rock and a river bank.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 129: I can say a branch, a tree trunk, a seed, a rock and a river bank.

129.1 rāmus, rāmī — a branch

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a rose, then the Latin for a lily.

You'll want to know: rāmus, rāmī

rāmus, rāmī — "a branch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rāmus is probably related to rādīx, "root", from an older rādmus* (Lewis & Short); both are traced to Proto-Indo-European wreh2d-*, "root, branch" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rāmus
- Say it: rāmus, once more
- Say it: say rāmus
- Recall: say the Latin for a rose, then the Latin for a lily, then say rāmus again

Before you move on

What does rāmus, rāmī mean? ("A branch".) Say it once more.

129.2 truncus, truncī — a tree trunk

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lily, then the Latin for a branch.

You'll want to know: truncus, truncī

truncus, truncī — "a tree trunk".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

truncus is the adjective truncus, "cut off, maimed" (Lewis & Short), used as a noun: the stem of a tree, without its branches. English trunk comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: truncus
- Say it: truncus, once more
- Say it: say truncus
- Recall: say the Latin for a lily, then the Latin for a branch, then say truncus again

Before you move on

What does truncus, truncī mean? (“A tree trunk”.) Say it once more.

129.3 sēmen, sēminis — a seed

Before the new one: say the Latin for a branch, then the Latin for a tree trunk.

You’ll want to know: sēmen, sēminis

sēmen, sēminis — “a seed”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sēmen is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European seh1mn*, “seed”, from seh1-*, “to sow” (EtymDB 2.1); serō, “to sow”, belongs to the same family (Lewis & Short), and English seed is a cousin.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sēmen
- Say it: sēmen, once more
- Say it: say sēmen
- Recall: say the Latin for a branch, then the Latin for a tree trunk, then say sēmen again

Before you move on

What does sēmen, sēminis mean? (“A seed”.) Say it once more.

129.4 saxum, saxī — a rock, a boulder

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tree trunk, then the Latin for a seed.

You'll want to know: saxum, saxī

saxum, saxī — "a rock, a boulder".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saxum is often traced to Proto-Indo-European sek-*, "to cut" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of secāre, "to cut" (Lewis & Short), but the link is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saxum
- Say it: saxum, once more
- Say it: say saxum
- Recall: say the Latin for a tree trunk, then the Latin for a seed, then say saxum again

Before you move on

What does saxum, saxī mean? ("A rock, a boulder".) Say it once more.

129.5 rīpa, rīpae — a river bank

Before the new one: say the Latin for a seed, then the Latin for a rock.

You'll want to know: rīpa, rīpae

rīpa, rīpae — "a river bank".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rīpa is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European h1reypeh2*, "steep slope", from a root for tearing (EtymDB 2.1); Greek ereipō, "to tear down", is often compared. Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rīpa
- Say it: rīpa, once more
- Say it: say rīpa
- Recall: say the Latin for a seed, then the Latin for a rock, then say rīpa again

Before you move on

What does rīpa, rīpae mean? ("A river bank".) Say it once more.

Chapter 130

Wave, Ice, Hail, Thunder, Lightning

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a wave, ice, hail, thunder and lightning.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 130: I can say a wave, ice, hail, thunder and lightning.

130.1 unda, undae — a wave

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a rock, then the Latin for a river bank.

You'll want to know: unda, undae

unda, undae — "a wave".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

unda is inherited, usually traced to the Proto-Indo-European root wed-*, "water", in a form with an n. Greek hydōr, "water", and English water are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: unda
- Say it: unda, once more
- Say it: say unda
- Recall: say the Latin for a rock, then the Latin for a river bank, then say unda again

Before you move on

What does unda, undae mean? ("A wave".) Say it once more.

130.2 glaciēs, glaciēī — ice

Before the new one: say the Latin for a river bank, then the Latin for a wave.

You'll want to know: glaciēs, glaciēī

glaciēs, glaciēī — "ice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

glaciēs is related to gelū, "frost", and both are usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gel-*, "cold, to freeze" (EtymDB 2.1). English cold is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: glaciēs
- Say it: glaciēs, once more
- Say it: say glaciēs
- Recall: say the Latin for a river bank, then the Latin for a wave, then say glaciēs again

Before you move on

What does glaciēs, glaciēī mean? (“Ice”.) Say it once more.

130.3 grandō, grandinis — hail

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wave, then the Latin for ice.

You’ll want to know: grandō, grandinis

grandō, grandinis — “hail”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

grandō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European greh3d-*, “hail” (EtymDB 2.1); Greek khalaza, “hail”, is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: grandō
- Say it: grandō, once more
- Say it: say grandō
- Recall: say the Latin for a wave, then the Latin for ice, then say grandō again

Before you move on

What does grandō, grandinis mean? (“Hail”.) Say it once more.

130.4 tonitrus, tonitrūs — thunder

Before the new one: say the Latin for ice, then the Latin for hail.

You'll want to know: tonitrus, tonitrūs

tonitrus, tonitrūs — "thunder".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tonitrus is built on tonō, "to thunder" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)tenh2-*, "to thunder"; English thunder is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tonitrus
- Say it: tonitrus, once more
- Say it: say tonitrus
- Recall: say the Latin for ice, then the Latin for hail, then say tonitrus again

Before you move on

What does tonitrus, tonitrūs mean? ("Thunder".) Say it once more.

130.5 fulgur, fulguris — lightning

Before the new one: say the Latin for hail, then the Latin for thunder.

You'll want to know: fulgur, fulguris

fulgur, fulguris — "lightning".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fulgur is built on fulgeō, "to flash, to lighten" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhleg-*, "to shine, to burn". fulmen, "a thunderbolt", is from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fulgur
- Say it: fulgur, once more
- Say it: say fulgur
- Recall: say the Latin for hail, then the Latin for thunder, then say fulgur again

Before you move on

What does fulgur, fulguris mean? ("Lightning".) Say it once more.

130.6 Places and things in the house — a first pass

Say the words for thunder and lightning.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a sack, a box, a cushion, a blanket, a napkin
- a spoon, a cooking pot, a dish, a bowl, a candle
- a nail, a hammer, a saw, an axe, a ladder
- a vessel, a two-handled jar, a flask, a purse, a coin
- a book, ink, a reed pen, wax; a wax tablet, a picture

Before you move on

A sack? (saccus, saccī.) A box? (cista, cistae.) A cushion? (pulvīnus, pulvīnī.) A blanket? (strāgulum, strāgulī.) A napkin? (mappa, mappae.) A spoon? (cochlear, cochleāris.) A cooking pot? (ōlla, ōllae.) A dish? (patina, patinae.) A bowl? (catīnus, catīnī.) A candle? (candēla, candēlae.) A nail? (clāvus, clāvī.) A hammer? (malleus, malleī.) A saw? (serra, serrae.) An axe? (secūris, secūris.) A ladder? (scālae, scālārum.) A vessel? (vās, vāsis.) A two-handled jar? (amphora, amphorae.) A flask? (lagoena, lagoenae.) A purse? (crumēna, crumēnae.) A coin? (nummus, nummī.) A book? (cōdex, cōdicis.) Ink? (ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī.) A reed pen? (calamus, calamī.) Wax; a wax tablet? (cēra, cērae.) A picture? (pictūra, pictūrae.)

130.7 Things you use — a second pass

Say the words for a statue and a sign.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a statue, a sign, a sail; a curtain, a wagon, a long dress
- a cloak, a belt, a fruit, an onion, garlic
- a bean, a pea, a cucumber, a chicken, pepper
- a flat cake, beer, juice, a rose, a lily
- a branch, a tree trunk, a seed, a rock, a river bank
- a wave, ice, hail, thunder, lightning

Before you move on

A statue? (statua, statuae.) A sign? (signum, signī.) A sail; a curtain? (vēlum, vēlī.) A wagon? (plaustrum, plaustrī.) A long dress? (stola, stolae.) A cloak? (pallium, palliī.) A belt? (zōna, zōnae.) A fruit? (pōmum, pōmī.) An onion? (cēpa, cēpae.) Garlic? (ālium, āliī.) A bean? (faba, fabae.) A pea? (pīsum, pīsī.) A cucumber? (cucumis, cucumeris.) A chicken? (pullus, pullī.) Pepper? (piper, piperis.) A flat cake? (placenta, placentae.) Beer? (cervīsia, cervīsiae.) Juice? (sūcus, sūcī.) A rose? (rosa, rosae.) A lily? (līlium, līlīī.) A branch? (rāmus, rāmī.) A tree trunk? (truncus, truncī.) A seed? (sēmen, sēminis.) A rock? (saxum, saxī.) A river bank? (rīpa, rīpae.) A wave? (unda, undae.) Ice? (glaciēs, glaciēī.) Hail? (grandō, grandinis.) Thunder? (tonitrus, tonitrūs.) Lightning? (fulgur, fulguris.)

Chapter 131

Fog, Eagle, Dove, Raven, Duck

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say fog, an eagle, a dove, a raven and a duck.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 131: I can say fog, an eagle, a dove, a raven and a duck.

131.1 nebula, nebulae — fog, mist

Before the new one: say the Latin for thunder, then the Latin for lightning.

You'll want to know: nebula, nebulae

nebula, nebulae — "fog, mist".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nebula is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nebhos*, "cloud" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek nephelē, "cloud", is a close cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nebula
- Say it: nebula, once more
- Say it: say nebula
- Recall: say the Latin for thunder, then the Latin for lightning, then say nebula again

Before you move on

What does nebula, nebulae mean? ("Fog, mist".) Say it once more.

131.2 aquila, aquilae — an eagle

Before the new one: say the Latin for lightning, then the Latin for fog.

You'll want to know: aquila, aquilae

aquila, aquilae — "an eagle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aquila may come from aquilus, "dark brown" (Lewis & Short), after the bird's colour, but this is uncertain. English eagle comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aquila
- Say it: aquila, once more
- Say it: say aquila
- Recall: say the Latin for lightning, then the Latin for fog, then say aquila again

Before you move on

What does aquila, aquilae mean? ("An eagle".) Say it once more.

131.3 columba, columbae — a dove, a pigeon

Before the new one: say the Latin for fog, then the Latin for an eagle.

You'll want to know: columba, columbae

columba, columbae — "a dove, a pigeon".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

columba is the feminine of columbus, "a male dove" (Lewis & Short). Its origin is uncertain; Greek kolymbos, "a diving bird", is often compared (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: columba
- Say it: columba, once more
- Say it: say columba
- Recall: say the Latin for fog, then the Latin for an eagle, then say columba again

Before you move on

What does columba, columbae mean? ("A dove, a pigeon".) Say it once more.

131.4 corvus, corvī — a raven

Before the new one: say the Latin for an eagle, then the Latin for a dove.

You'll want to know: corvus, corvī

corvus, corvī — "a raven".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

corvus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European korh2wos*, "raven" (EtymDB 2.1), perhaps imitating the bird's croak; Greek korax, "raven", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: corvus
- Say it: corvus, once more
- Say it: say corvus
- Recall: say the Latin for an eagle, then the Latin for a dove, then say corvus again

Before you move on

What does corvus, corvī mean? ("A raven".) Say it once more.

131.5 anas, anatis — a duck

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dove, then the Latin for a raven.

You'll want to know: anas, anatis

anas, anatis — "a duck".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

anas is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2enh2ts*, "duck" (EtymDB 2.1); German Ente, "duck", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: anas
- Say it: anas, once more
- Say it: say anas
- Recall: say the Latin for a dove, then the Latin for a raven, then say anas again

Before you move on

What does anas, anatis mean? ("A duck".) Say it once more.

Chapter 132

Goose, Bee, Fly, Ant, Butterfly

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a goose, a bee, a fly, an ant and a butterfly.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 132: I can say a goose, a bee, a fly, an ant and a butterfly.

132.1 ānser, ānseris — a goose

Before the new one: say the Latin for a raven, then the Latin for a duck.

You'll want to know: ānser, ānseris

ānser, ānseris — "a goose".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ānser is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghh2ens*, "goose" (EtymDB 2.1); Latin lost the first sound. Greek khēn, "goose", and English goose and gander are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ānser
- Say it: ānser, once more
- Say it: say ānser
- Recall: say the Latin for a raven, then the Latin for a duck, then say ānser again

Before you move on

What does ānser, ānseris mean? ("A goose".) Say it once more.

132.2 apis, apis — a bee

Before the new one: say the Latin for a duck, then the Latin for a goose.

You'll want to know: apis, apis

apis, apis — "a bee".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

apis has no sure origin; it is often thought to be a loan from a lost language of Europe. It is a different word from Āpis, "the sacred bull of Egypt".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: apis
- Say it: apis, once more
- Say it: say apis
- Recall: say the Latin for a duck, then the Latin for a goose, then say apis again

Before you move on

What does apis, apis mean? (“A bee”.) Say it once more.

132.3 musca, muscae — a fly

Before the new one: say the Latin for a goose, then the Latin for a bee.

You’ll want to know: musca, muscae

musca, muscae — “a fly”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

musca is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mus-*, “fly, gnat” (EtymDB 2.1); Greek myia, “fly”, and English midge are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: musca
- Say it: musca, once more
- Say it: say musca
- Recall: say the Latin for a goose, then the Latin for a bee, then say musca again

Before you move on

What does musca, muscae mean? (“A fly”.) Say it once more.

132.4 formīca, formīcae — an ant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bee, then the Latin for a fly.

You'll want to know: formīca, formīcae

formīca, formīcae — "an ant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

formīca is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European morwi-*, "ant" (EtymDB 2.1), with its first sound changed; Greek myrmēx, "ant", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: formīca
- Say it: formīca, once more
- Say it: say formīca
- Recall: say the Latin for a bee, then the Latin for a fly, then say formīca again

Before you move on

What does formīca, formīcae mean? ("An ant".) Say it once more.

132.5 pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis — a butterfly

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fly, then the Latin for an ant.

You'll want to know: pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis

pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis — "a butterfly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāpiliō has no sure origin; it looks like a doubled, playful form, and Lewis & Short compare palpitāre, "to flutter". English pavilion, a tent spread like wings, comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāpiliō
- Say it: pāpiliō, once more
- Say it: say pāpiliō
- Recall: say the Latin for a fly, then the Latin for an ant, then say pāpiliō again

Before you move on

What does pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis mean? ("A butterfly".) Say it once more.

Chapter 133

Spider, Frog, Hare, Fox, Bull

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a spider, a frog, a hare, a fox and a bull.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 133: I can say a spider, a frog, a hare, a fox and a bull.

133.1 arānea, arāneae — a spider

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an ant, then the Latin for a butterfly.

You'll want to know: arānea, arāneae

arānea, arāneae — "a spider".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arānea is closely related to Greek arakhnē, "spider" (Lewis & Short); whether Latin borrowed it or both took it from a third language is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: arānea
- Say it: arānea, once more
- Say it: say arānea
- Recall: say the Latin for an ant, then the Latin for a butterfly, then say arānea again

Before you move on

What does arānea, arāneae mean? ("A spider".) Say it once more.

133.2 rāna, rānae — a frog

Before the new one: say the Latin for a butterfly, then the Latin for a spider.

You'll want to know: rāna, rānae

rāna, rānae — "a frog".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rāna has no sure origin; it is often thought to imitate the frog's croak.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rāna
- Say it: rāna, once more
- Say it: say rāna
- Recall: say the Latin for a butterfly, then the Latin for a spider, then say rāna again

Before you move on

What does rāna, rānae mean? ("A frog".) Say it once more.

133.3 lepus, leporis — a hare

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spider, then the Latin for a frog.

You'll want to know: lepus, leporis

lepus, leporis — "a hare".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lepus has no sure origin; Varro already compared a Sicilian Greek leporis, "hare" (Lewis & Short), and it may be a loan from a language of the Mediterranean.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lepus
- Say it: lepus, once more
- Say it: say lepus
- Recall: say the Latin for a spider, then the Latin for a frog, then say lepus again

Before you move on

What does lepus, leporis mean? ("A hare".) Say it once more.

133.4 vulpēs, vulpis — a fox

Before the new one: say the Latin for a frog, then the Latin for a hare.

You'll want to know: vulpēs, vulpis

vulpēs, vulpis — "a fox".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vulpēs is inherited from Proto-Italic wolpi-*, "fox" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek alōpēx, "fox", is often compared (Lewis & Short), but the details are uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vulpēs
- Say it: vulpēs, once more
- Say it: say vulpēs
- Recall: say the Latin for a frog, then the Latin for a hare, then say vulpēs again

Before you move on

What does vulpēs, vulpis mean? ("A fox".) Say it once more.

133.5 taurus, taurī — a bull

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hare, then the Latin for a fox.

You'll want to know: taurus, taurī

taurus, taurī — "a bull".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

taurus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tauros*, "bull" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek tauros, "bull", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: taurus
- Say it: taurus, once more
- Say it: say taurus
- Recall: say the Latin for a hare, then the Latin for a fox, then say taurus again

Before you move on

What does taurus, taurī mean? ("A bull".) Say it once more.

Chapter 134

Cow, Mule, Camel, Monkey, Dolphin

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a cow, a mule, a camel, a monkey and a dolphin.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 134: I can say a cow, a mule, a camel, a monkey and a dolphin.

134.1 vacca, vaccae — a cow

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a fox, then the Latin for a bull.

You'll want to know: vacca, vaccae

vacca, vaccae — "a cow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vacca is probably inherited, traced to Proto-Indo-European wokeh2*, "cow" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short compare Sanskrit vacā, "cow".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vacca
- Say it: vacca, once more
- Say it: say vacca
- Recall: say the Latin for a fox, then the Latin for a bull, then say vacca again

Before you move on

What does vacca, vaccae mean? ("A cow".) Say it once more.

134.2 mūlus, mūlī — a mule

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bull, then the Latin for a cow.

You'll want to know: mūlus, mūlī

mūlus, mūlī — "a mule".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūlus has no sure origin; Greek myklos, "a donkey" (Lewis & Short), is often compared, and both may come from a language of the Balkans or Asia Minor.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mūlus
- Say it: mūlus, once more
- Say it: say mūlus
- Recall: say the Latin for a bull, then the Latin for a cow, then say mūlus again

Before you move on

What does mūlus, mūlī mean? ("A mule".) Say it once more.

134.3 camēlus, camēlī — a camel

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cow, then the Latin for a mule.

You'll want to know: camēlus, camēlī

camēlus, camēlī — "a camel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

camēlus was borrowed from Greek kamēlos, "camel" (Lewis & Short), which Greek took from a Semitic word like Hebrew gāmāl, "camel" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: camēlus
- Say it: camēlus, once more
- Say it: say camēlus
- Recall: say the Latin for a cow, then the Latin for a mule, then say camēlus again

Before you move on

What does camēlus, camēlī mean? ("A camel".) Say it once more.

134.4 sīmia, sīmiae — a monkey

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mule, then the Latin for a camel.

You'll want to know: sīmia, sīmiae

sīmia, sīmiae — "a monkey".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sīmia is built on sīmus, "snub-nosed" (EtymDB 2.1), a word Latin took from Greek simos, "snub-nosed": the monkey as the flat-nosed one.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sīmia
- Say it: sīmia, once more
- Say it: say sīmia
- Recall: say the Latin for a mule, then the Latin for a camel, then say sīmia again

Before you move on

What does sīmia, sīmiae mean? ("A monkey".) Say it once more.

134.5 delphīnus, delphīnī — a dolphin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a camel, then the Latin for a monkey.

You'll want to know: delphīnus, delphīnī

delphīnus, delphīnī — "a dolphin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

delphīnus was borrowed from Greek delphis, delphinos, "dolphin" (Lewis & Short), which may be related to delphys, "womb" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: delphīnus
- Say it: delphīnus, once more
- Say it: say delphīnus
- Recall: say the Latin for a camel, then the Latin for a monkey, then say delphīnus again

Before you move on

What does delphīnus, delphīnī mean? ("A dolphin".) Say it once more.

Chapter 135

Whale, Cockerel, Lip, Chin, Back

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a whale, a cockerel, a lip, the chin and the back.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 135: I can say a whale, a cockerel, a lip, the chin and the back.

135.1 balaena, balaenae — a whale

Before the new one: say the Latin for a monkey, then the Latin for a dolphin.

You'll want to know: balaena, balaenae

balaena, balaenae — "a whale".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

balaena was borrowed from Greek phalaina, "whale" (Lewis & Short), with b for the Greek ph.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: balaena
- Say it: balaena, once more
- Say it: say balaena
- Recall: say the Latin for a monkey, then the Latin for a dolphin, then say balaena again

Before you move on

What does balaena, balaenae mean? ("A whale".) Say it once more.

135.2 gallus, gallī — a cockerel

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dolphin, then the Latin for a whale.

You'll want to know: gallus, gallī

gallus, gallī — "a cockerel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gallus is often traced to Proto-Italic galso-*, "the crier" (EtymDB 2.1), after the bird's call, but this is uncertain. It is a different word from Gallus, "a Gaul".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gallus
- Say it: gallus, once more
- Say it: say gallus
- Recall: say the Latin for a dolphin, then the Latin for a whale, then say gallus again

Before you move on

What does gallus, gallī mean? ("A cockerel".) Say it once more.

135.3 labrum, labrī — a lip

Before the new one: say the Latin for a whale, then the Latin for a cockerel.

You'll want to know: labrum, labrī

labrum, labrī — "a lip".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

labrum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European leb-*, "lip, to hang loosely" (EtymDB 2.1); English lip is a cousin. It is a different word from labrum, "a basin", contracted from lavābrum, "a bath" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: labrum
- Say it: labrum, once more
- Say it: say labrum
- Recall: say the Latin for a whale, then the Latin for a cockerel, then say labrum again

Before you move on

What does labrum, labrī mean? ("A lip".) Say it once more.

135.4 mentum, mentī — the chin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cockerel, then the Latin for a lip.

You'll want to know: mentum, mentī

mentum, mentī — "the chin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mentum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European men-*, "to project, to stick out" (EtymDB 2.1): the chin as the part that juts. minae, "overhanging points, threats", is often put in the same family (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mentum
- Say it: mentum, once more
- Say it: say mentum
- Recall: say the Latin for a cockerel, then the Latin for a lip, then say mentum again

Before you move on

What does mentum, mentī mean? ("The chin".) Say it once more.

135.5 dorsum, dorsī — the back

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lip, then the Latin for the chin.

You'll want to know: dorsum, dorsī

dorsum, dorsī — "the back".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dorsum has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English dorsal and endorse, "to write on the back", come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dorsum
- Say it: dorsum, once more
- Say it: say dorsum
- Recall: say the Latin for a lip, then the Latin for the chin, then say dorsum again

Before you move on

What does dorsum, dorsī mean? ("The back".) Say it once more.

Chapter 136

Elbow, Thumb, Skin, Bone, Stomach

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say an elbow, a thumb, the skin, a bone and the stomach.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 136: I can say an elbow, a thumb, the skin, a bone and the stomach.

136.1 cubitum, cubitī — an elbow

> Before the new one: say the Latin for the chin, then the Latin for the back.

You'll want to know: cubitum, cubitī

cubitum, cubitī — "an elbow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cubitum is built on cubō, "to lie down, to recline" (EtymDB 2.1): the elbow is what one leans on at table. English cubit, the length from elbow to fingertip, comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cubitum
- Say it: cubitum, once more
- Say it: say cubitum
- Recall: say the Latin for the chin, then the Latin for the back, then say cubitum again

Before you move on

What does cubitum, cubitī mean? ("An elbow".) Say it once more.

136.2 pollex, pollicis — a thumb

Before the new one: say the Latin for the back, then the Latin for an elbow.

You'll want to know: pollex, pollicis

pollex, pollicis — "a thumb".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pollex was linked by the Romans with polleō, "to be strong" (Lewis & Short): the strongest finger. Modern scholars are less sure.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pollex
- Say it: pollex, once more
- Say it: say pollex
- Recall: say the Latin for the back, then the Latin for an elbow, then say pollex again

Before you move on

What does pollex, pollicis mean? (“A thumb”.) Say it once more.

136.3 cutis, cutis — the skin

Before the new one: say the Latin for an elbow, then the Latin for a thumb.

You’ll want to know: cutis, cutis

cutis, cutis — “the skin”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cutis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kuHt-*, “skin, hide” (EtymDB 2.1); Greek kytos, “a hollow, a skin”, is compared (Lewis & Short), and English hide may be a cousin.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cutis
- Say it: cutis, once more
- Say it: say cutis
- Recall: say the Latin for an elbow, then the Latin for a thumb, then say cutis again

Before you move on

What does cutis, cutis mean? (“The skin”.) Say it once more.

136.4 os, ossis — a bone

Before the new one: say the Latin for a thumb, then the Latin for the skin.

You'll want to know: os, ossis

os, ossis — "a bone".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

os, ossis, is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3esth1*, "bone" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek osteon, "bone", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). It is a different word from ōs, ōris, "mouth".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: os
- Say it: os, once more
- Say it: say os
- Recall: say the Latin for a thumb, then the Latin for the skin, then say os again

Before you move on

What does os, ossis mean? ("A bone".) Say it once more.

136.5 stomachus, stomachī — the stomach

Before the new one: say the Latin for the skin, then the Latin for a bone.

You'll want to know: stomachus, stomachī

stomachus, stomachī — "the stomach".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

stomachus was borrowed from Greek stomakhos, "throat, gullet" (Lewis & Short), from stoma, "mouth" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: stomachus
- Say it: stomachus, once more
- Say it: say stomachus
- Recall: say the Latin for the skin, then the Latin for a bone, then say stomachus again

Before you move on

What does stomachus, stomachī mean? ("The stomach".) Say it once more.

Chapter 137

Craftsman, Baker, Shoemaker, Barber, Shepherd

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a craftsman, a baker, a shoemaker, a barber and a shepherd.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 137: I can say a craftsman, a baker, a shoemaker, a barber and a shepherd.

137.1 faber, fabrī — a craftsman, a smith

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bone, then the Latin for the stomach.

You'll want to know: faber, fabrī

faber, fabrī — "a craftsman, a smith".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

faber is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhh2ebh-*, "to fit, to fashion" (EtymDB 2.1). English fabric and fabricate come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: faber
- Say it: faber, once more
- Say it: say faber
- Recall: say the Latin for a bone, then the Latin for the stomach, then say faber again

Before you move on

What does faber, fabrī mean? ("A craftsman, a smith".) Say it once more.

137.2 pistor, pistōris — a baker

Before the new one: say the Latin for the stomach, then the Latin for a craftsman.

You'll want to know: pistor, pistōris

pistor, pistōris — "a baker".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pistor is built on pīnsō, "to pound, to crush" (Lewis & Short): a pounder of grain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pistor
- Say it: pistor, once more
- Say it: say pistor
- Recall: say the Latin for the stomach, then the Latin for a craftsman, then say pistor again

Before you move on

What does pistor, pistōris mean? (“A baker”.) Say it once more.

137.3 sūtor, sūtōris — a shoemaker

Before the new one: say the Latin for a craftsman, then the Latin for a baker.

You’ll want to know: sūtor, sūtōris

sūtor, sūtōris — “a shoemaker”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sūtor is built on suō, “to sew, to stitch” (EtymDB 2.1), with -tor, “one who does it”: the stitcher. suō is a cousin of English sew.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sūtor
- Say it: sūtor, once more
- Say it: say sūtor
- Recall: say the Latin for a craftsman, then the Latin for a baker, then say sūtor again

Before you move on

What does sūtor, sūtōris mean? (“A shoemaker”.) Say it once more.

137.4 tōnsor, tōnsōris — a barber

Before the new one: say the Latin for a baker, then the Latin for a shoemaker.

You'll want to know: tōnsor, tōnsōris

tōnsor, tōnsōris — "a barber".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tōnsor is built on tondeō, "to shear, to clip" (EtymDB 2.1), with -tor, "one who does it". English tonsure comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tōnsor
- Say it: tōnsor, once more
- Say it: say tōnsor
- Recall: say the Latin for a baker, then the Latin for a shoemaker, then say tōnsor again

Before you move on

What does tōnsor, tōnsōris mean? ("A barber".) Say it once more.

137.5 pāstor, pāstōris — a shepherd

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shoemaker, then the Latin for a barber.

You'll want to know: pāstor, pāstōris

pāstor, pāstōris — "a shepherd".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāstor is built on pāscō, "to feed, to graze" (Lewis & Short), with -tor, "one who does it". pāscō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peh2-*, "to guard, to graze" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāstor
- Say it: pāstor, once more
- Say it: say pāstor
- Recall: say the Latin for a shoemaker, then the Latin for a barber, then say pāstor again

Before you move on

What does pāstor, pāstōris mean? ("A shepherd".) Say it once more.

Chapter 138

Fisherman, Slave, Mistress, Friend, Cupboard

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a fisherman, a slave, a mistress, a friend and a cupboard.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 138: I can say a fisherman, a slave, a mistress, a friend and a cupboard.

138.1 piscātor, piscātōris — a fisherman

Before the new one: say the Latin for a barber, then the Latin for a shepherd.

You'll want to know: piscātor, piscātōris

piscātor, piscātōris — "a fisherman".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piscātor is built on piscor, "to fish", from piscis, "a fish" (EtymDB 2.1), with -tor, "one who does it". piscis is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pisk-*, "fish" (EtymDB 2.1); English fish is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: piscātor
- Say it: piscātor, once more
- Say it: say piscātor
- Recall: say the Latin for a barber, then the Latin for a shepherd, then say piscātor again

Before you move on

What does piscātor, piscātōris mean? ("A fisherman".) Say it once more.

138.2 servus, servī — a slave, a servant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shepherd, then the Latin for a fisherman.

You'll want to know: servus, servī

servus, servī — "a slave, a servant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

servus has no sure origin. Romans tied it to servō, "to keep, to save" (Lewis & Short), and an Etruscan source has also been suggested; neither is proven.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: servus
- Say it: servus, once more
- Say it: say servus

- Recall: say the Latin for a shepherd, then the Latin for a fisherman, then say servus again

Before you move on

What does servus, servī mean? ("A slave, a servant".) Say it once more.

138.3 domina, dominae — a mistress, the lady of the house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fisherman, then the Latin for a slave.

You'll want to know: domina, dominae

domina, dominae — "a mistress, the lady of the house".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

domina is the feminine of dominus, "master of the house" (Lewis & Short), built on domus, "house", which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dom-*, "house" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: domina
- Say it: domina, once more
- Say it: say domina
- Recall: say the Latin for a fisherman, then the Latin for a slave, then say domina again

Before you move on

What does domina, dominae mean? ("A mistress, the lady of the house".) Say it once more.

138.4 amīca, amīcae — a friend (a woman)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a slave, then the Latin for a mistress.

You'll want to know: amīca, amīcae

amīca, amīcae — "a friend (a woman)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amīca is the feminine of amīcus, "a friend" (Lewis & Short), which is built on amō, "to love".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amīca
- Say it: amīca, once more
- Say it: say amīca
- Recall: say the Latin for a slave, then the Latin for a mistress, then say amīca again

Before you move on

What does amīca, amīcae mean? ("A friend (a woman)".) Say it once more.

138.5 armārium, armāriī — a cupboard

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mistress, then the Latin for a friend.

You'll want to know: armārium, armāriī

armārium, armāriī — "a cupboard".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

armārium is built on arma, "tools, gear" (Lewis & Short), with -ārium, an ending for a place to keep things.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: armārium
- Say it: armārium, once more
- Say it: say armārium
- Recall: say the Latin for a mistress, then the Latin for a friend, then say armārium again

Before you move on

What does armārium, armāriī mean? ("A cupboard".) Say it once more.

Chapter 139

Chair with a back, Bench, Carpet, Torch, Lantern

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a chair with a back, a bench, a carpet, a torch and a lantern.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 139: I can say a chair with a back, a bench, a carpet, a torch and a lantern.

139.1 cathedra, cathedrae — a chair with a back

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a friend, then the Latin for a cupboard.

You'll want to know: cathedra, cathedrae

cathedra, cathedrae — "a chair with a back".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cathedra was borrowed from Greek kathedra, "a seat, a chair" (Lewis & Short), from kata, "down", and hedra, "seat" (EtymDB 2.1). A bishop's cathedra gave English cathedral its name.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cathedra
- Say it: cathedra, once more
- Say it: say cathedra
- Recall: say the Latin for a friend, then the Latin for a cupboard, then say cathedra again

Before you move on

What does cathedra, cathedrae mean? ("A chair with a back".) Say it once more.

139.2 scamnum, scamnī — a bench

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cupboard, then the Latin for a chair with a back.

You'll want to know: scamnum, scamnī

scamnum, scamnī — "a bench".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scamnum is inherited from Proto-Italic skabnom*, "bench", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European skabh-*, "to prop up" (EtymDB 2.1); scabellum, "a footstool", is its diminutive (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scamnum
- Say it: scamnum, once more
- Say it: say scamnum

- Recall: say the Latin for a cupboard, then the Latin for a chair with a back, then say scamnum again

Before you move on

What does scamnum, scamnī mean? ("A bench".) Say it once more.

139.3 tapēte, tapētis — a carpet, a rug

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chair with a back, then the Latin for a bench.

You'll want to know: tapēte, tapētis

tapēte, tapētis — "a carpet, a rug".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tapēte was borrowed from Greek tapēs, tapētos, "a carpet, a rug" (EtymDB 2.1). English tapestry belongs to its family, through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tapēte
- Say it: tapēte, once more
- Say it: say tapēte
- Recall: say the Latin for a chair with a back, then the Latin for a bench, then say tapēte again

Before you move on

What does tapēte, tapētis mean? ("A carpet, a rug".) Say it once more.

139.4 fax, facis — a torch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bench, then the Latin for a carpet.

You'll want to know: fax, facis

fax, facis — "a torch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fax has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European gwheh2k-*, "to shine", but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fax
- Say it: fax, once more
- Say it: say fax
- Recall: say the Latin for a bench, then the Latin for a carpet, then say fax again

Before you move on

What does fax, facis mean? ("A torch".) Say it once more.

139.5 lanterna, lanternae — a lantern

Before the new one: say the Latin for a carpet, then the Latin for a torch.

Count on past the ninth hour: nōnus, decimus. Say decima hōra, then say whether it is ante or post merīdiem.

You'll want to know: lanterna, lanternae

lanterna, lanternae — "a lantern".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lanterna comes from Greek lamptēr, "a torch, a lamp" (Lewis & Short), from lampō, "to shine", reshaped with the ending of lucerna, "lamp".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lanterna
- Say it: lanterna, once more
- Say it: say lanterna
- Recall: say the Latin for a carpet, then the Latin for a torch, then say lanterna again

Before you move on

What does lanterna, lanternae mean? ("A lantern".) Say it once more.

Chapter 140

Comb, Scissors, Needle, Thread, Wool

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a comb, scissors, a needle, a thread and wool.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 140: I can say a comb, scissors, a needle, a thread and wool.

140.1 pecten, pectinis — a comb

Before the new one: say the Latin for a torch, then the Latin for a lantern.

You'll want to know: pecten, pectinis

pecten, pectinis — "a comb".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pecten is built on pectō, "to comb" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pek-*, "to pluck wool or hair" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pecten
- Say it: pecten, once more
- Say it: say pecten
- Recall: say the Latin for a torch, then the Latin for a lantern, then say pecten again

Before you move on

What does pecten, pectinis mean? ("A comb".) Say it once more.

140.2 forfex, forficis — scissors

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lantern, then the Latin for a comb.

You'll want to know: forfex, forficis

forfex, forficis — "scissors".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

forfex has no sure origin; it is often linked with forceps, "tongs", but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: forfex
- Say it: forfex, once more
- Say it: say forfex
- Recall: say the Latin for a lantern, then the Latin for a comb, then say forfex again

Before you move on

What does forfex, forficis mean? (“Scissors”.) Say it once more.

140.3 acus, acūs — a needle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a comb, then the Latin for scissors.

You’ll want to know: acus, acūs

acus, acūs — “a needle”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

acus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ek-*, “sharp” (EtymDB 2.1), the root of ācer, “sharp” (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: acus
- Say it: acus, once more
- Say it: say acus
- Recall: say the Latin for a comb, then the Latin for scissors, then say acus again

Before you move on

What does acus, acūs mean? (“A needle”.) Say it once more.

140.4 fīlum, fīlī — a thread

Before the new one: say the Latin for scissors, then the Latin for a needle.

You'll want to know: fīlum, fīlī

fīlum, fīlī — "a thread".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīlum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwhiHslo-*, "thread" (EtymDB 2.1). English filament and file, a row, come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīlum
- Say it: fīlum, once more
- Say it: say fīlum
- Recall: say the Latin for scissors, then the Latin for a needle, then say fīlum again

Before you move on

What does fīlum, fīlī mean? ("A thread".) Say it once more.

140.5 lāna, lānae — wool

Before the new one: say the Latin for a needle, then the Latin for a thread.

You'll want to know: lāna, lānae

lāna, lānae — "wool".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lāna is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2wlh1neh2*, "wool" (EtymDB 2.1); Latin lost the first w. English wool is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lāna
- Say it: lāna, once more
- Say it: say lāna
- Recall: say the Latin for a needle, then the Latin for a thread, then say lāna again

Before you move on

What does lāna, lānae mean? ("Wool".) Say it once more.

140.6 Food and nature — a first pass

Say the words for a thread and wool.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- fog, an eagle, a dove, a raven, a duck
- a goose, a bee, a fly, an ant, a butterfly
- a spider, a frog, a hare, a fox, a bull
- a cow, a mule, a camel, a monkey, a dolphin
- a whale, a cockerel, a lip, the chin, the back

Before you move on

Fog? (nebula, nebulae.) An eagle? (aquila, aquilae.) A dove? (columba, columbae.) A raven? (corvus, corvī.) A duck? (anas, anatis.) A goose? (ānser, ānseris.) A bee? (apis, apis.) A fly? (musca, muscae.) An ant? (formīca, formīcae.) A butterfly? (pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis.) A spider? (arānea, arāneae.) A frog? (rāna, rānae.) A hare? (lepus, leporis.) A fox? (vulpēs, vulpis.) A bull? (taurus, taurī.) A cow? (vacca, vaccae.) A mule? (mūlus, mūlī.) A camel? (camēlus, camēlī.) A monkey? (sīmia, sīmiae.) A dolphin? (delphīnus, delphīnī.) A whale? (balaena, balaenae.) A cockerel? (gallus, gallī.) A lip? (labrum, labrī.) The chin? (mentum, mentī.) The back? (dorsum, dorsī.)

140.7 Animals and the body — a second pass

Say the words for an elbow and a thumb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an elbow, a thumb, the skin, a bone, the stomach
- a craftsman, a baker, a shoemaker, a barber, a shepherd
- a fisherman, a slave, a mistress, a friend, a cupboard
- a chair with a back, a bench, a carpet, a torch, a lantern
- a comb, scissors, a needle, a thread, wool

Before you move on

An elbow? (cubitum, cubitī.) A thumb? (pollex, pollicis.) The skin? (cutis, cutis.) A bone? (os, ossis.) The stomach? (stomachus, stomachī.) A craftsman? (faber, fabrī.) A baker? (pistor, pistōris.) A shoemaker? (sūtor, sūtōris.) A barber? (tōnsor, tōnsōris.) A shepherd? (pāstor, pāstōris.) A fisherman? (piscātor, piscātōris.) A slave? (servus, servī.) A mistress? (domina, dominae.) A friend? (amīca, amīcae.) A cupboard? (armārium, armāriī.) A chair with a back? (cathedra, cathedrae.) A bench? (scamnum, scamnī.) A carpet? (tapēte, tapētis.) A torch? (fax, facis.) A lantern? (lanterna, lanternae.) A comb? (pecten, pectinis.) Scissors?

(forfex, forficis.) A needle? (acus, acūs.) A thread? (fīlum, fīlī.) Wool? (lāna, lānae.)

Chapter 141

Linen cloth, Soap, Sponge, Water jar, Cup

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a linen cloth, soap, a sponge, a water jar and a cup.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 141: I can say a linen cloth, soap, a sponge, a water jar and a cup.

141.1 linteum, linteī — a linen cloth, a towel

Before the new one: say the Latin for a thread, then the Latin for wool.

You'll want to know: linteum, linteī

linteum, linteī — "a linen cloth, a towel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children linteum comes from līnum, "flax" (Lewis & Short), through linteus, "made of linen". English linen and line belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: linteum
- Say it: linteum, once more
- Say it: say linteum
- Recall: say the Latin for a thread, then the Latin for wool, then say linteum again

Before you move on

What does linteum, linteī mean? ("A linen cloth, a towel".) Say it once more.

141.2 sāpō, sāpōnis — soap

Before the new one: say the Latin for wool, then the Latin for a linen cloth.

You'll want to know: sāpō, sāpōnis

sāpō, sāpōnis — "soap".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sāpō was borrowed from Germanic, as Lewis & Short note. The Germanic word is usually reconstructed as Proto-Germanic saipōn*, "soap, salve" (EtymDB 2.1); English soap comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sāpō
- Say it: sāpō, once more
- Say it: say sāpō

- Recall: say the Latin for wool, then the Latin for a linen cloth, then say sāpō again

Before you move on

What does sāpō, sāpōnis mean? ("Soap".) Say it once more.

141.3 spongia, spongiae — a sponge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a linen cloth, then the Latin for soap.

You'll want to know: spongia, spongiae

spongia, spongiae — "a sponge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spongia was borrowed from Greek spongia, "sponge" (Lewis & Short), from spongos, "sponge" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spongia
- Say it: spongia, once more
- Say it: say spongia
- Recall: say the Latin for a linen cloth, then the Latin for soap, then say spongia again

Before you move on

What does spongia, spongiae mean? ("A sponge".) Say it once more.

141.4 urna, urnae — a water jar

Before the new one: say the Latin for soap, then the Latin for a sponge.

You'll want to know: urna, urnae

urna, urnae — "a water jar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

urna is linked by Lewis & Short with ūrō, "to burn", as a vessel of fired clay, but that account is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: urna
- Say it: urna, once more
- Say it: say urna
- Recall: say the Latin for soap, then the Latin for a sponge, then say urna again

Before you move on

What does urna, urnae mean? ("A water jar".) Say it once more.

141.5 calix, calicis — a cup

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sponge, then the Latin for a water jar.

You'll want to know: calix, calicis

calix, calicis — "a cup".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calix is related to Greek kylix, "a drinking cup" (EtymDB 2.1), though whether Latin borrowed it is uncertain. It is a different word from Greek kalyx, "a flower bud". English chalice comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calix
- Say it: calix, once more
- Say it: say calix
- Recall: say the Latin for a sponge, then the Latin for a water jar, then say calix again

Before you move on

What does calix, calicis mean? ("A cup".) Say it once more.

Chapter 142

Fork, Plough, Bell, Flute, Lyre

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a fork, a plough, a bell, a flute and a lyre.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 142: I can say a fork, a plough, a bell, a flute and a lyre.

142.1 furca, furcae — a fork, a pitchfork

Before the new one: say the Latin for a water jar, then the Latin for a cup.

You'll want to know: furca, furcae

furca, furcae — "a fork, a pitchfork".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

furca has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English fork was borrowed from it early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: furca
- Say it: furca, once more
- Say it: say furca
- Recall: say the Latin for a water jar, then the Latin for a cup, then say furca again

Before you move on

What does furca, furcae mean? ("A fork, a pitchfork".) Say it once more.

142.2 arātrum, arātrī — a plough

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cup, then the Latin for a fork.

You'll want to know: arātrum, arātrī

arātrum, arātrī — "a plough".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arātrum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2erh3trom*, "plough", from h2erh3-*, "to plough" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek arotron, "plough", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). arō, "to plough", is the Latin verb from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: arātrum
- Say it: arātrum, once more
- Say it: say arātrum

- Recall: say the Latin for a cup, then the Latin for a fork, then say arātrum again

Before you move on

What does arātrum, arātrī mean? (“A plough”.) Say it once more.

142.3 tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī — a bell

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fork, then the Latin for a plough.

You’ll want to know: tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī

tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī — “a bell”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tintinnābulum is built on tintinnō, “to ring, to jingle” (Lewis & Short), an imitation of the sound, with -bulum, an ending for a tool.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tintinnābulum
- Say it: tintinnābulum, once more
- Say it: say tintinnābulum
- Recall: say the Latin for a fork, then the Latin for a plough, then say tintinnābulum again

Before you move on

What does tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī mean? (“A bell”.) Say it once more.

142.4 tībia, tībiae — a flute, a pipe

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plough, then the Latin for a bell.

You'll want to know: tībia, tībiae

tībia, tībiae — "a flute, a pipe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tībia first meant the shin-bone: Lewis & Short give tībia that sense first. The pipe may have taken its name from pipes made of bone. Where the word comes from is unknown.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tībia
- Say it: tībia, once more
- Say it: say tībia
- Recall: say the Latin for a plough, then the Latin for a bell, then say tībia again

Before you move on

What does tībia, tībiae mean? ("A flute, a pipe".) Say it once more.

142.5 lyra, lyrae — a lyre

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bell, then the Latin for a flute.

You'll want to know: lyra, lyrae

lyra, lyrae — "a lyre".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lyra was borrowed from Greek lyra, "lyre" (Lewis & Short); where Greek got the word is unknown. English lyric comes from the Greek family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lyra
- Say it: lyra, once more
- Say it: say lyra
- Recall: say the Latin for a bell, then the Latin for a flute, then say lyra again

Before you move on

What does lyra, lyrae mean? ("A lyre".) Say it once more.

Chapter 143

Hard, Soft, Lukewarm, Ancient, Narrow

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say hard, soft, lukewarm, ancient and narrow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 143: I can say hard, soft, lukewarm, ancient and narrow.

143.1 dūrus, dūra, dūrum — hard

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flute, then the Latin for a lyre.

You'll want to know: dūrus, dūra, dūrum

dūrus, dūra, dūrum — "hard".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dūrus has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. A link with Proto-Indo-European deru-*, "firm, solid", the root of words for tree, is often proposed (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dūrus
- Say it: dūrus, once more
- Say it: say dūrus
- Recall: say the Latin for a flute, then the Latin for a lyre, then say dūrus again

Before you move on

What does dūrus, dūra, dūrum mean? ("Hard".) Say it once more.

143.2 mollis, molle — soft

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lyre, then the Latin for hard.

You'll want to know: mollis, molle

mollis, molle — "soft".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mollis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European moldus*, "soft, weak", from mel-*, "soft" (EtymDB 2.1); the ld became ll. Greek amalos, "weak", is compared (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mollis
- Say it: mollis, once more
- Say it: say mollis
- Recall: say the Latin for a lyre, then the Latin for hard, then say mollis again

Before you move on

What does mollis, molle mean? ("Soft".) Say it once more.

143.3 tepidus, tepida, tepidum — lukewarm

Before the new one: say the Latin for hard, then the Latin for soft.

You'll want to know: tepidus, tepida, tepidum

tepidus, tepida, tepidum — "lukewarm".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tepidus is built on tepeō, "to be warm" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives. tepeō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tep-*, "warm".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tepidus
- Say it: tepidus, once more
- Say it: say tepidus
- Recall: say the Latin for hard, then the Latin for soft, then say tepidus again

Before you move on

What does tepidus, tepida, tepidum mean? ("Lukewarm".) Say it once more.

143.4 antīquus, antīqua, antīquum — ancient, old-fashioned

Before the new one: say the Latin for soft, then the Latin for lukewarm.

You'll want to know: antīquus, antīqua, antīquum

antīquus, antīqua, antīquum — "ancient, old-fashioned".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

antīquus is built on ante, "before" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2enti-h3kwos*, "having been before" (EtymDB 2.1): what stood before, so old.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: antīquus
- Say it: antīquus, once more
- Say it: say antīquus
- Recall: say the Latin for soft, then the Latin for lukewarm, then say antīquus again

Before you move on

What does antīquus, antīqua, antīquum mean? ("Ancient, old-fashioned".) Say it once more.

143.5 angustus, angusta, angustum — narrow

Before the new one: say the Latin for lukewarm, then the Latin for ancient.

You'll want to know: angustus, angusta, angustum

angustus, angusta, angustum — "narrow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

angustus is built on angō, "to squeeze, to choke" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2engh-*, "narrow, tight" (EtymDB 2.1). English anguish and anxious belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: angustus
- Say it: angustus, once more
- Say it: say angustus
- Recall: say the Latin for lukewarm, then the Latin for ancient, then say angustus again

Before you move on

What does angustus, angusta, angustum mean? ("Narrow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 144

Low, Thick, Thin, Blind, Sharp

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say low, thick, thin, blind and sharp.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 144: I can say low, thick, thin, blind and sharp.

144.1 humilis, humile — low

Before the new one: say the Latin for ancient, then the Latin for narrow.

You'll want to know: humilis, humile

humilis, humile — "low".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

humilis is built on humus, "earth, ground" (Lewis & Short): low, near the ground. humus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhéghōm*, "earth" (EtymDB 2.1). English humble comes from humilis through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: humilis
- Say it: humilis, once more
- Say it: say humilis
- Recall: say the Latin for ancient, then the Latin for narrow, then say humilis again

Before you move on

What does humilis, humile mean? ("Low".) Say it once more.

144.2 crassus, crassa, crassum — thick, fat

Before the new one: say the Latin for narrow, then the Latin for low.

You'll want to know: crassus, crassa, crassum

crassus, crassa, crassum — "thick, fat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crassus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European krtsus*, "woven thick", from kert-*, "to twist together" (EtymDB 2.1). English crass comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crassus
- Say it: crassus, once more
- Say it: say crassus
- Recall: say the Latin for narrow, then the Latin for low, then say crassus again

Before you move on

What does crassus, crassa, crassum mean? (“Thick, fat”.) Say it once more.

144.3 tenuis, tenue — thin

Before the new one: say the Latin for low, then the Latin for thick.

You’ll want to know: tenuis, tenue

tenuis, tenue — “thin”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tenuis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tenh2us*, “thin”, from ten-*, “to stretch” (EtymDB 2.1): thin as stretched out. English thin is a cousin.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tenuis
- Say it: tenuis, once more
- Say it: say tenuis
- Recall: say the Latin for low, then the Latin for thick, then say tenuis again

Before you move on

What does tenuis, tenue mean? (“Thin”.) Say it once more.

144.4 caecus, caeca, caecum — blind

Before the new one: say the Latin for thick, then the Latin for thin.

You'll want to know: caecus, caeca, caecum

caecus, caeca, caecum — "blind".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caecus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kaykos*, "one-eyed, blind" (EtymDB 2.1). Gothic haihs, "one-eyed", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: caecus
- Say it: caecus, once more
- Say it: say caecus
- Recall: say the Latin for thick, then the Latin for thin, then say caecus again

Before you move on

What does caecus, caeca, caecum mean? ("Blind".) Say it once more.

144.5 acūtus, acūta, acūtum — sharp

Before the new one: say the Latin for thin, then the Latin for blind.

You'll want to know: acūtus, acūta, acūtum

acūtus, acūta, acūtum — "sharp".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

acūtus is the past participle of acuō, "to sharpen" (Lewis & Short): sharpened. acuō belongs with acus, "a needle".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: acūtus
- Say it: acūtus, once more
- Say it: say acūtus
- Recall: say the Latin for thin, then the Latin for blind, then say acūtus again

Before you move on

What does acūtus, acūta, acūtum mean? ("Sharp".) Say it once more.

Chapter 145

Sour, Alive, Gentle, Fierce, Pleasant

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say sour, alive, gentle, fierce and pleasant.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 145: I can say sour, alive, gentle, fierce and pleasant.

145.1 acerbus, acerba, acerbum — sour, unripe

Before the new one: say the Latin for blind, then the Latin for sharp.

You'll want to know: acerbus, acerba, acerbum

acerbus, acerba, acerbum — "sour, unripe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

acerbus is built on ācer, "sharp" (Lewis & Short), like superbus, "proud", on super, "above". ācer is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2kros*, "sharp" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: acerbus
- Say it: acerbus, once more
- Say it: say acerbus
- Recall: say the Latin for blind, then the Latin for sharp, then say acerbus again

Before you move on

What does acerbus, acerba, acerbum mean? ("Sour, unripe".) Say it once more.

145.2 vīvus, vīva, vīvum — alive

Before the new one: say the Latin for sharp, then the Latin for sour.

You'll want to know: vīvus, vīva, vīvum

vīvus, vīva, vīvum — "alive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīvus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwih3wos*, "alive" (EtymDB 2.1), and belongs with vīvō, "to live" (Lewis & Short). English quick, once "alive", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīvus
- Say it: vīvus, once more
- Say it: say vīvus

- Recall: say the Latin for sharp, then the Latin for sour, then say vīvus again

Before you move on

What does vīvus, vīva, vīvum mean? ("Alive".) Say it once more.

145.3 mītis, mīte — gentle, mild

Before the new one: say the Latin for sour, then the Latin for alive.

You'll want to know: mītis, mīte

mītis, mīte — "gentle, mild".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mītis is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European meh1y-*, "mild, soft" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mītis
- Say it: mītis, once more
- Say it: say mītis
- Recall: say the Latin for sour, then the Latin for alive, then say mītis again

Before you move on

What does mītis, mīte mean? ("Gentle, mild".) Say it once more.

145.4 ferōx, ferōcis — fierce

Before the new one: say the Latin for alive, then the Latin for gentle.

You'll want to know: ferōx, ferōcis

ferōx, ferōcis — "fierce".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ferōx is built on ferus, "wild" (Lewis & Short), with -ōx, an ending of strong character: wild-looking, fierce. ferus is a cousin of Greek thēr, "wild beast" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ferōx
- Say it: ferōx, once more
- Say it: say ferōx
- Recall: say the Latin for alive, then the Latin for gentle, then say ferōx again

Before you move on

What does ferōx, ferōcis mean? ("Fierce".) Say it once more.

145.5 iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum — pleasant

Before the new one: say the Latin for gentle, then the Latin for fierce.

You'll want to know: iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum

iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum — "pleasant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūcundus is usually derived from iuvō, "to help, to delight"; the link with iocus, "a joke", that Lewis & Short give is a later popular one.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iūcundus
- Say it: iūcundus, once more
- Say it: say iūcundus
- Recall: say the Latin for gentle, then the Latin for fierce, then say iūcundus again

Before you move on

What does iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum mean? ("Pleasant".) Say it once more.

Chapter 146

Annoying, Useful, Clean, Dirty, Straight

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say annoying, useful, clean, dirty and straight.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 146: I can say annoying, useful, clean, dirty and straight.

146.1 molestus, molesta, molestum — annoying

Before the new one: say the Latin for fierce, then the Latin for pleasant.

You'll want to know: molestus, molesta, molestum

molestus, molesta, molestum — "annoying".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

molestus is built on mōlēs, "a heavy mass, a burden" (Lewis & Short): burdensome. English molest comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: molestus
- Say it: molestus, once more
- Say it: say molestus
- Recall: say the Latin for fierce, then the Latin for pleasant, then say molestus again

Before you move on

What does molestus, molesta, molestum mean? ("Annoying".) Say it once more.

146.2 ūtilis, ūtile — useful

Before the new one: say the Latin for pleasant, then the Latin for annoying.

You'll want to know: ūtilis, ūtile

ūtilis, ūtile — "useful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūtilis is built on ūtor, "to use" (Lewis & Short), with -ilis, an ending for "fit for": usable.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ūtilis
- Say it: ūtilis, once more
- Say it: say ūtilis
- Recall: say the Latin for pleasant, then the Latin for annoying, then say ūtilis again

Before you move on

What does ūtilis, ūtile mean? ("Useful".) Say it once more.

146.3 pūrus, pūra, pūrum — clean, pure

Before the new one: say the Latin for annoying, then the Latin for useful.

You'll want to know: pūrus, pūra, pūrum

pūrus, pūra, pūrum — "clean, pure".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūrus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pewH-*, "to cleanse, to purify" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pūrus
- Say it: pūrus, once more
- Say it: say pūrus
- Recall: say the Latin for annoying, then the Latin for useful, then say pūrus again

Before you move on

What does pūrus, pūra, pūrum mean? ("Clean, pure".) Say it once more.

146.4 sordidus, sordida, sordidum — dirty

Before the new one: say the Latin for useful, then the Latin for clean.

You'll want to know: sordidus, sordida, sordidum

sordidus, sordida, sordidum — "dirty".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sordidus is built on sordeō, "to be dirty" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sordidus
- Say it: sordidus, once more
- Say it: say sordidus
- Recall: say the Latin for useful, then the Latin for clean, then say sordidus again

Before you move on

What does sordidus, sordida, sordidum mean? ("Dirty".) Say it once more.

146.5 rēctus, rēcta, rēctum — straight, right

Before the new one: say the Latin for clean, then the Latin for dirty.

You'll want to know: rēctus, rēcta, rēctum

rēctus, rēcta, rēctum — "straight, right".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēctus is the past participle of regō, "to keep straight, to direct" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3regtos*, "straightened" (EtymDB 2.1). English right is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēctus
- Say it: rēctus, once more
- Say it: say rēctus
- Recall: say the Latin for clean, then the Latin for dirty, then say rēctus again

Before you move on

What does rēctus, rēcta, rēctum mean? ("Straight, right".) Say it once more.

Chapter 147

Deaf, False, Sure, Safe, Dangerous

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say deaf, false, sure, safe and dangerous.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 147: I can say deaf, false, sure, safe and dangerous.

147.1 surdus, surda, surdum — deaf

Before the new one: say the Latin for dirty, then the Latin for straight.

You'll want to know: surdus, surda, surdum

surdus, surda, surdum — "deaf".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

surdus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: surdus

- Say it: surdus, once more
- Say it: say surdus
- Recall: say the Latin for dirty, then the Latin for straight, then say surdus again

Before you move on

What does surdus, surda, surdum mean? ("Deaf".) Say it once more.

147.2 falsus, falsa, falsum — false

Before the new one: say the Latin for straight, then the Latin for deaf.

You'll want to know: falsus, falsa, falsum

falsus, falsa, falsum — "false".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

falsus is the past participle of fallō, "to deceive, to trip up" (Lewis & Short): deceived, so false. Where fallō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: falsus
- Say it: falsus, once more
- Say it: say falsus
- Recall: say the Latin for straight, then the Latin for deaf, then say falsus again

Before you move on

What does falsus, falsa, falsum mean? ("False".) Say it once more.

147.3 certus, certa, certum — sure, certain

Before the new one: say the Latin for deaf, then the Latin for false.

You'll want to know: certus, certa, certum

certus, certa, certum — "sure, certain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

certus was first a participle of cernō, "to sift, to decide" (Lewis & Short): decided, so sure.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: certus
- Say it: certus, once more
- Say it: say certus
- Recall: say the Latin for deaf, then the Latin for false, then say certus again

Before you move on

What does certus, certa, certum mean? ("Sure, certain".) Say it once more.

147.4 tūtus, tūta, tūtum — safe

Before the new one: say the Latin for false, then the Latin for sure.

You'll want to know: tūtus, tūta, tūtum

tūtus, tūta, tūtum — "safe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tūtus is the past participle of tueor, "to watch over, to protect" (Lewis & Short): protected, so safe.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tūtus
- Say it: tūtus, once more
- Say it: say tūtus
- Recall: say the Latin for false, then the Latin for sure, then say tūtus again

Before you move on

What does tūtus, tūta, tūtum mean? ("Safe".) Say it once more.

147.5 perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum — dangerous

Before the new one: say the Latin for sure, then the Latin for safe.

You'll want to know: perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum

perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum — "dangerous".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perīculōsus is built on perīculum, "a trial, a danger" (Lewis & Short), with -ōsus, "full of". perīculum is built on the root of experior, "to try".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perīculōsus
- Say it: perīculōsus, once more
- Say it: say perīculōsus
- Recall: say the Latin for sure, then the Latin for safe, then say perīculōsus again

Before you move on

What does perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum mean? ("Dangerous".) Say it once more.

Chapter 148

Lucky, Wretched, Angry, Quiet, Purple

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say lucky, wretched, angry, quiet and purple.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 148: I can say lucky, wretched, angry, quiet and purple.

148.1 fēlīx, fēlīcis — lucky, happy

Before the new one: say the Latin for safe, then the Latin for dangerous.

You'll want to know: fēlīx, fēlīcis

fēlīx, fēlīcis — "lucky, happy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fēlīx is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1-*, "to suck, to suckle" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of fēmina, "woman": it first meant "fruitful", then lucky.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fēlīx
- Say it: fēlīx, once more
- Say it: say fēlīx
- Recall: say the Latin for safe, then the Latin for dangerous, then say fēlīx again

Before you move on

What does fēlīx, fēlīcis mean? ("Lucky, happy".) Say it once more.

148.2 miser, misera, miserum — wretched, unhappy

Before the new one: say the Latin for dangerous, then the Latin for lucky.

You'll want to know: miser, misera, miserum

miser, misera, miserum — "wretched, unhappy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

miser has no sure origin; Lewis & Short's comparisons are uncertain. English misery comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: miser
- Say it: miser, once more
- Say it: say miser
- Recall: say the Latin for dangerous, then the Latin for lucky, then say miser again

Before you move on

What does miser, misera, miserum mean? ("Wretched, unhappy".) Say it once more.

148.3 īrātus, īrāta, īrātum — angry

Before the new one: say the Latin for lucky, then the Latin for wretched.

You'll want to know: īrātus, īrāta, īrātum

īrātus, īrāta, īrātum — "angry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īrātus is the participle of īrāscor, "to grow angry" (Lewis & Short), from īra, "anger" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īrātus
- Say it: īrātus, once more
- Say it: say īrātus
- Recall: say the Latin for lucky, then the Latin for wretched, then say īrātus again

Before you move on

What does īrātus, īrāta, īrātum mean? ("Angry".) Say it once more.

148.4 quiētus, quiēta, quiētum — quiet, calm

Before the new one: say the Latin for wretched, then the Latin for angry.

You'll want to know: quiētus, quiēta, quiētum

quiētus, quiēta, quiētum — "quiet, calm".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quiētus is the participle of quiēscō, "to rest" (Lewis & Short), from quiēs, "rest", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwyeh1-*, "to rest" (EtymDB 2.1). English quiet and quit come from this family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quiētus
- Say it: quiētus, once more
- Say it: say quiētus
- Recall: say the Latin for wretched, then the Latin for angry, then say quiētus again

Before you move on

What does quiētus, quiēta, quiētum mean? ("Quiet, calm".) Say it once more.

148.5 purpureus, purpurea, purpureum — purple

Before the new one: say the Latin for angry, then the Latin for quiet.

You'll want to know: purpureus, purpurea, purpureum

purpureus, purpurea, purpureum — "purple".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

purpureus is built on purpura, "purple dye, the purple-fish" (Lewis & Short), a word Latin took from Greek porphyra, "purple-fish".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: purpureus
- Say it: purpureus, once more
- Say it: say purpureus
- Recall: say the Latin for angry, then the Latin for quiet, then say purpureus again

Before you move on

What does purpureus, purpurea, purpureum mean? ("Purple".) Say it once more.

Chapter 149

Dark, Grey, Golden, Silver, Wise

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say dark, grey, golden, silver and wise.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 149: I can say dark, grey, golden, silver and wise.

149.1 fuscus, fusca, fuscum — dark, dusky

> Before the new one: say the Latin for quiet, then the Latin for purple.

You'll want to know: fuscus, fusca, fuscum

fuscus, fusca, fuscum — "dark, dusky".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fuscus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root dhewh2-*, "smoke, dust" (EtymDB 2.1): smoky, so dark.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fuscus
- Say it: fuscus, once more
- Say it: say fuscus
- Recall: say the Latin for quiet, then the Latin for purple, then say fuscus again

Before you move on

What does fuscus, fusca, fuscum mean? ("Dark, dusky".) Say it once more.

149.2 cānus, cāna, cānum — grey

Before the new one: say the Latin for purple, then the Latin for dark.

You'll want to know: cānus, cāna, cānum

cānus, cāna, cānum — "grey".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cānus is inherited from Proto-Italic kaznos*, "grey", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kas-*, "grey, white" (EtymDB 2.1). English hare, the grey animal, is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cānus
- Say it: cānus, once more
- Say it: say cānus

- Recall: say the Latin for purple, then the Latin for dark, then say cānus again

Before you move on

What does cānus, cāna, cānum mean? ("Grey".) Say it once more.

149.3 aureus, aurea, aureum — golden

Before the new one: say the Latin for dark, then the Latin for grey.

You'll want to know: aureus, aurea, aureum

aureus, aurea, aureum — "golden".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aureus is built on aurum, "gold" (Sabine ausum), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2eh2us-*, "glow" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aureus
- Say it: aureus, once more
- Say it: say aureus
- Recall: say the Latin for dark, then the Latin for grey, then say aureus again

Before you move on

What does aureus, aurea, aureum mean? ("Golden".) Say it once more.

149.4 argenteus, argentea, argenteum — silver

Before the new one: say the Latin for grey, then the Latin for golden.

You'll want to know: argenteus, argentea, argenteum

argenteus, argentea, argenteum — "silver".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

argenteus is built on argentum, "silver" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2rgntom*, "silver", from h2erg-*, "white, shining" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: argenteus
- Say it: argenteus, once more
- Say it: say argenteus
- Recall: say the Latin for grey, then the Latin for golden, then say argenteus again

Before you move on

What does argenteus, argentea, argenteum mean? ("Silver".) Say it once more.

149.5 prūdēns, prūdentis — wise, sensible

Before the new one: say the Latin for golden, then the Latin for silver.

You'll want to know: prūdēns, prūdentis

prūdēns, prūdentis — "wise, sensible".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prūdēns is contracted from prōvidēns, "foreseeing" (Lewis & Short), from prōvideō, "to see ahead".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prūdēns
- Say it: prūdēns, once more
- Say it: say prūdēns
- Recall: say the Latin for golden, then the Latin for silver, then say prūdēns again

Before you move on

What does prūdēns, prūdentis mean? ("Wise, sensible".) Say it once more.

Chapter 150

Careful, Lazy, Hard-working, Timid, Bold

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say careful, lazy, hard-working, timid and bold.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 150: I can say careful, lazy, hard-working, timid and bold.

150.1 cautus, cauta, cautum — careful

Before the new one: say the Latin for silver, then the Latin for wise.

You'll want to know: cautus, cauta, cautum

cautus, cauta, cautum — "careful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cautus is the past participle of caveō, "to beware, to take care" (Lewis & Short): on one's guard. English caution comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cautus
- Say it: cautus, once more
- Say it: say cautus
- Recall: say the Latin for silver, then the Latin for wise, then say cautus again

Before you move on

What does cautus, cauta, cautum mean? ("Careful".) Say it once more.

150.2 piger, pigra, pigrum — lazy

Before the new one: say the Latin for wise, then the Latin for careful.

You'll want to know: piger, pigra, pigrum

piger, pigra, pigrum — "lazy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piger belongs with piget, "it irks, it annoys" (Lewis & Short): one who finds work irksome. Where piget comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: piger
- Say it: piger, once more
- Say it: say piger
- Recall: say the Latin for wise, then the Latin for careful, then say piger again

Before you move on

What does piger, pigra, pigrum mean? ("Lazy".) Say it once more.

150.3 dīligēns, dīligentis — hard-working

Before the new one: say the Latin for careful, then the Latin for lazy.

You'll want to know: dīligēns, dīligentis

dīligēns, dīligentis — "hard-working".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīligēns is the present participle of dīligō, "to value, to love" (Lewis & Short), from dis-, "apart", and legō, "to choose": one who chooses with care.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dīligēns
- Say it: dīligēns, once more
- Say it: say dīligēns
- Recall: say the Latin for careful, then the Latin for lazy, then say dīligēns again

Before you move on

What does dīligēns, dīligentis mean? ("Hard-working".) Say it once more.

150.4 timidus, timida, timidum — timid, shy

Before the new one: say the Latin for lazy, then the Latin for hard-working.

You'll want to know: timidus, timida, timidum

timidus, timida, timidum — "timid, shy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

timidus is built on timeō, "to fear" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: timidus
- Say it: timidus, once more
- Say it: say timidus
- Recall: say the Latin for lazy, then the Latin for hard-working, then say timidus again

Before you move on

What does timidus, timida, timidum mean? ("Timid, shy".) Say it once more.

150.5 audāx, audācis — bold

Before the new one: say the Latin for hard-working, then the Latin for timid.

You'll want to know: audāx, audācis

audāx, audācis — "bold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

audāx is built on audeō, "to dare" (Lewis & Short), with -āx, an ending for a strong tendency, as capāx, "roomy", is built on capiō, "to take".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: audāx
- Say it: audāx, once more
- Say it: say audāx
- Recall: say the Latin for hard-working, then the Latin for timid, then say audāx again

Before you move on

What does audāx, audācis mean? ("Bold".) Say it once more.

150.6 People and describing words — a first pass

Say the words for timid and bold.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a linen cloth, soap, a sponge, a water jar, a cup
- a fork, a plough, a bell, a flute, a lyre
- hard, soft, lukewarm, ancient, narrow
- low, thick, thin, blind, sharp
- sour, alive, gentle, fierce, pleasant

Before you move on

A linen cloth? (linteum, linteī.) Soap? (sāpō, sāpōnis.) A sponge? (spongia, spongiae.) A water jar? (urna, urnae.) A cup? (calix, calicis.) A fork? (furca, furcae.) A plough? (arātrum, arātrī.) A bell? (tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī.) A flute? (tībia, tībiae.) A lyre? (lyra, lyrae.) Hard? (dūrus, dūra, dūrum.) Soft? (mollis, molle.) Lukewarm? (tepidus, tepida, tepidum.) Ancient? (antīquus, antīqua, antīquum.) Narrow? (angustus, angusta, angustum.) Low? (humilis, humile.) Thick? (crassus, crassa, crassum.) Thin? (tenuis, tenue.) Blind? (caecus, caeca, caecum.) Sharp? (acūtus, acūta, acūtum.) Sour? (acerbus, acerba, acerbum.) Alive? (vīvus, vīva, vīvum.) Gentle? (mītis, mīte.) Fierce? (ferōx, ferōcis.) Pleasant? (iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum.)

150.7 Describing words — a second pass

Say the words for annoying and useful.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- annoying, useful, clean, dirty, straight
- deaf, false, sure, safe, dangerous
- lucky, wretched, angry, quiet, purple
- dark, grey, golden, silver, wise
- careful, lazy, hard-working, timid, bold

Before you move on

Annoying? (molestus, molesta, molestum.) Useful? (ūtilis, ūtile.) Clean? (pūrus, pūra, pūrum.) Dirty? (sordidus, sordida, sordidum.) Straight? (rēctus, rēcta, rēctum.) Deaf? (surdus, surda, surdum.) False? (falsus, falsa, falsum.) Sure? (certus, certa, certum.) Safe? (tūtus, tūta, tūtum.)

Dangerous? (perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum.) Lucky? (fēlīx, fēlīcis.) Wretched? (miser, misera, miserum.) Angry? (īrātus, īrāta, īrātum.) Quiet? (quiētus, quiēta, quiētum.) Purple? (purpureus, purpurea, purpureum.) Dark? (fuscus, fusca, fuscum.) Grey? (cānus, cāna, cānum.) Golden? (aureus, aurea, aureum.) Silver? (argenteus, argentea, argenteum.) Wise? (prūdēns, prūdentis.) Careful? (cautus, cauta, cautum.) Lazy? (piger, pigra, pigrum.) Hard-working? (dīligēns, dīligentis.) Timid? (timidus, timida, timidum.) Bold? (audāx, audācis.)

Chapter 151

Proud, Kind, Cruel, Ugly, Beautiful

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say proud, kind, cruel, ugly and beautiful.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 151: I can say proud, kind, cruel, ugly and beautiful.

151.1 superbus, superba, superbum — proud

Before the new one: say the Latin for timid, shy, then the Latin for bold.

You'll want to know: superbus, superba, superbum

superbus, superba, superbum — "proud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

superbus is built on super, "above" (Lewis & Short): one who sets himself above others. Greek hyperbios, "overbearing", is a close parallel (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: superbus
- Say it: superbus, once more
- Say it: say superbus
- Recall: say the Latin for timid, shy, then the Latin for bold, then say superbus again

Before you move on

What does superbus, superba, superbum mean? ("Proud".) Say it once more.

151.2 benignus, benigna, benignum — kind

Before the new one: say the Latin for bold, then the Latin for proud.

You'll want to know: benignus, benigna, benignum

benignus, benigna, benignum — "kind".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

benignus is usually explained as bene, "well", plus the root of genus, "birth, kind" (Lewis & Short), on the model of malignus, "ill-natured": kindly by nature.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: benignus
- Say it: benignus, once more
- Say it: say benignus

- Recall: say the Latin for bold, then the Latin for proud, then say benignus again

Before you move on

What does benignus, benigna, benignum mean? ("Kind".) Say it once more.

151.3 crūdēlis, crūdēle — cruel

Before the new one: say the Latin for proud, then the Latin for kind.

You'll want to know: crūdēlis, crūdēle

crūdēlis, crūdēle — "cruel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crūdēlis is built on crūdus, "raw, bloody" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European krewh2-*, "raw flesh, blood" (EtymDB 2.1). English raw is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crūdēlis
- Say it: crūdēlis, once more
- Say it: say crūdēlis
- Recall: say the Latin for proud, then the Latin for kind, then say crūdēlis again

Before you move on

What does crūdēlis, crūdēle mean? ("Cruel".) Say it once more.

151.4 turpis, turpe — ugly, shameful

Before the new one: say the Latin for kind, then the Latin for cruel.

You'll want to know: turpis, turpe

turpis, turpe — "ugly, shameful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

turpis has no sure origin; neither Lewis & Short's comparison nor the root that EtymDB 2.1 records is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: turpis
- Say it: turpis, once more
- Say it: say turpis
- Recall: say the Latin for kind, then the Latin for cruel, then say turpis again

Before you move on

What does turpis, turpe mean? ("Ugly, shameful".) Say it once more.

151.5 fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum — beautiful

Before the new one: say the Latin for cruel, then the Latin for ugly.

You'll want to know: fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum

fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum — "beautiful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fōrmōsus is built on fōrma, "shape, beauty" (Lewis & Short), with -ōsus, "full of": well-shaped. Where fōrma comes from is uncertain; a link with Greek morphē, "shape", is often suggested (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fōrmōsus
- Say it: fōrmōsus, once more
- Say it: say fōrmōsus
- Recall: say the Latin for cruel, then the Latin for ugly, then say fōrmōsus again

Before you move on

What does fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum mean? ("Beautiful".) Say it once more.

Chapter 152

Strong, Weak, Alone, Icy, Clear

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say strong, weak, alone, icy and clear.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 152: I can say strong, weak, alone, icy and clear.

152.1 validus, valida, validum — strong

Before the new one: say the Latin for ugly, then the Latin for beautiful.

You'll want to know: validus, valida, validum

validus, valida, validum — "strong".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

validus is built on valeō, "to be strong" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives. valeō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2welh1-*, "to be strong, to rule" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: validus
- Say it: validus, once more
- Say it: say validus
- Recall: say the Latin for ugly, then the Latin for beautiful, then say validus again

Before you move on

What does validus, valida, validum mean? ("Strong".) Say it once more.

152.2 īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum — weak

Before the new one: say the Latin for beautiful, then the Latin for strong.

You'll want to know: īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum

īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum — "weak".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnfirmus is in-, "not", with firmus, "firm, strong" (Lewis & Short). firmus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dher-*, "to hold, to support" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnfirmus
- Say it: īnfirmus, once more
- Say it: say īnfirmus

- Recall: say the Latin for beautiful, then the Latin for strong, then say īnfirmus again

Before you move on

What does īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum mean? ("Weak".) Say it once more.

152.3 sōlus, sōla, sōlum — alone, only

Before the new one: say the Latin for strong, then the Latin for weak.

You'll want to know: sōlus, sōla, sōlum

sōlus, sōla, sōlum — "alone, only".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sōlus has no sure origin. It may belong with the reflexive sē, "oneself" (EtymDB 2.1 records Proto-Indo-European swe*, "self, alone"); Lewis & Short link it with sollus, "whole".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sōlus
- Say it: sōlus, once more
- Say it: say sōlus
- Recall: say the Latin for strong, then the Latin for weak, then say sōlus again

Before you move on

What does sōlus, sōla, sōlum mean? ("Alone, only".) Say it once more.

152.4 gelidus, gelida, gelidum — icy

Before the new one: say the Latin for weak, then the Latin for alone.

You'll want to know: gelidus, gelida, gelidum

gelidus, gelida, gelidum — "icy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gelidus is built on gelū, "frost" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gel-*, "cold" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gelidus
- Say it: gelidus, once more
- Say it: say gelidus
- Recall: say the Latin for weak, then the Latin for alone, then say gelidus again

Before you move on

What does gelidus, gelida, gelidum mean? ("Icy".) Say it once more.

152.5 serēnus, serēna, serēnum — clear, fine (of weather)

Before the new one: say the Latin for alone, then the Latin for icy.

You'll want to know: serēnus, serēna, serēnum

serēnus, serēna, serēnum — "clear, fine (of weather)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

serēnus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: serēnus
- Say it: serēnus, once more
- Say it: say serēnus
- Recall: say the Latin for alone, then the Latin for icy, then say serēnus again

Before you move on

What does serēnus, serēna, serēnum mean? ("Clear, fine (of weather)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 153

Cloudy, Windy, To build, To climb, To go down

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say cloudy, windy, to build, to climb and to go down.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 153: I can say cloudy, windy, to build, to climb and to go down.

153.1 nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum — cloudy

> Before the new one: say the Latin for icy, then the Latin for clear.

You'll want to know: nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum

nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum — "cloudy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūbilus is built on nūbēs, "a cloud" (Lewis & Short), which probably goes back to Proto-Indo-European (s)newdh-*, "to cover" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūbilus
- Say it: nūbilus, once more
- Say it: say nūbilus
- Recall: say the Latin for icy, then the Latin for clear, then say nūbilus again

Before you move on

What does nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum mean? ("Cloudy".) Say it once more.

153.2 ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum — windy

Before the new one: say the Latin for clear, then the Latin for cloudy.

You'll want to know: ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum

ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum — "windy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ventōsus is built on ventus, "wind" (Lewis & Short), with -ōsus, "full of". ventus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2weh1nts*, "blowing, wind", from h2weh1-*, "to blow" (EtymDB 2.1); English wind is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ventōsus
- Say it: ventōsus, once more
- Say it: say ventōsus

- Recall: say the Latin for clear, then the Latin for cloudy, then say ventōsus again

Before you move on

What does ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum mean? ("Windy".) Say it once more.

153.3 aedificō, aedificāre — to build

Before the new one: say the Latin for cloudy, then the Latin for windy.

You'll want to know: aedificō, aedificāre

aedificō, aedificāre — "to build".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aedificō is built from aedēs, "a building, a temple", and faciō, "to make" (Lewis & Short), which takes the form -ficō in compounds: to make a building. English edifice comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aedificō
- Say it: aedificō, once more
- Say it: say aedificō
- Recall: say the Latin for cloudy, then the Latin for windy, then say aedificō again

Before you move on

What does aedificō, aedificāre mean? ("To build".) Say it once more.

153.4 ascendō, ascendere — to climb, to go up

Before the new one: say the Latin for windy, then the Latin for to build.

You'll want to know: ascendō, ascendere

ascendō, ascendere — "to climb, to go up".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ascendō is ad, "to, towards", with scandō, "to climb" (Lewis & Short); the a of the verb weakened to e in the compound.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ascendō
- Say it: ascendō, once more
- Say it: say ascendō
- Recall: say the Latin for windy, then the Latin for to build, then say ascendō again

Before you move on

What does ascendō, ascendere mean? ("To climb, to go up".) Say it once more.

153.5 dēscendō, dēscendere — to go down

Before the new one: say the Latin for to build, then the Latin for to climb.

You'll want to know: dēscendō, dēscendere

dēscendō, dēscendere — "to go down".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēscendō is dē, "down from", with scandō, "to climb" (EtymDB 2.1): to climb down.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēscendō
- Say it: dēscendō, once more
- Say it: say dēscendō
- Recall: say the Latin for to build, then the Latin for to climb, then say dēscendō again

Before you move on

What does dēscendō, dēscendere mean? ("To go down".) Say it once more.

Chapter 154

To join, To visit, To sing, To paint, To lead

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to join, to visit, to sing, to paint and to lead.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 154: I can say to join, to visit, to sing, to paint and to lead.

154.1 iungō, iungere — to join

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to climb, then the Latin for to go down.

You'll want to know: iungō, iungere

iungō, iungere — "to join".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iungō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European yewg-*, "to join, to yoke" (EtymDB 2.1); the n inside the present stem is an old mark of the verb. Greek zeugnymi, "to yoke", and English yoke are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iungō
- Say it: iungō, once more
- Say it: say iungō
- Recall: say the Latin for to climb, then the Latin for to go down, then say iungō again

Before you move on

What does iungō, iungere mean? ("To join".) Say it once more.

154.2 vīsitō, vīsitāre — to visit

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go down, then the Latin for to join.

You'll want to know: vīsitō, vīsitāre

vīsitō, vīsitāre — "to visit".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīsitō is a frequentative of vīsō, "to go and see" (Lewis & Short), itself built on videō, "to see": to keep going to see.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīsitō
- Say it: vīsitō, once more
- Say it: say vīsitō
- Recall: say the Latin for to go down, then the Latin for to join, then say vīsitō again

Before you move on

What does vīsitō, vīsitāre mean? ("To visit".) Say it once more.

154.3 cantō, cantāre — to sing

Before the new one: say the Latin for to join, then the Latin for to visit.

You'll want to know: cantō, cantāre

cantō, cantāre — "to sing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cantō is a frequentative of canō, "to sing" (Lewis & Short), built on its stem cant-, and in everyday Latin it came to replace canō. canō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European keh2n-*, "to sing" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cantō
- Say it: cantō, once more
- Say it: say cantō
- Recall: say the Latin for to join, then the Latin for to visit, then say cantō again

Before you move on

What does cantō, cantāre mean? ("To sing".) Say it once more.

154.4 pingō, pingere — to paint

Before the new one: say the Latin for to visit, then the Latin for to sing.

You'll want to know: pingō, pingere

pingō, pingere — "to paint".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pingō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peyk-*, "to mark, to colour" (EtymDB 2.1); the n inside the present stem is missing from its participle pictus, "painted".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pingō
- Say it: pingō, once more
- Say it: say pingō
- Recall: say the Latin for to visit, then the Latin for to sing, then say pingō again

Before you move on

What does pingō, pingere mean? ("To paint".) Say it once more.

154.5 dūcō, dūcere — to lead

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sing, then the Latin for to paint.

You'll want to know: dūcō, dūcere

dūcō, dūcere — "to lead".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dūcō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dewk-*, "to lead, to pull" (EtymDB 2.1); Gothic tiuhan, "to lead, to draw", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so are English tug and tow.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dūcō
- Say it: dūcō, once more
- Say it: say dūcō
- Recall: say the Latin for to sing, then the Latin for to paint, then say dūcō again

Before you move on

What does dūcō, dūcere mean? ("To lead".) Say it once more.

Chapter 155

To make, To carry, To put on, To take off, To clean

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to make, to carry, to put on, to take off and to clean.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 155: I can say to make, to carry, to put on, to take off and to clean.

155.1 faciō, facere — to make, to do

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to paint, then the Latin for to lead.

You'll want to know: faciō, facere

faciō, facere — "to make, to do".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

faciō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1-*, "to put, to place, to set" (EtymDB 2.1), with a k added to the root. English do is a cousin from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: faciō
- Say it: faciō, once more
- Say it: say faciō
- Recall: say the Latin for to paint, then the Latin for to lead, then say faciō again

Before you move on

What does faciō, facere mean? ("To make, to do".) Say it once more.

155.2 gerō, gerere — to carry, to wear

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lead, then the Latin for to make.

You'll want to know: gerō, gerere

gerō, gerere — "to carry, to wear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gerō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English gesture and digest come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gerō
- Say it: gerō, once more
- Say it: say gerō
- Recall: say the Latin for to lead, then the Latin for to make, then say gerō again

Before you move on

What does gerō, gerere mean? ("To carry, to wear".) Say it once more.

155.3 induō, induere — to put on (clothes)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make, then the Latin for to carry.

You'll want to know: induō, induere

induō, induere — "to put on (clothes)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

induō is built from indu-, "into", an old form of in, and a verb -uō, "to put on" (EtymDB 2.1), found also in exuō, "to take off".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: induō
- Say it: induō, once more
- Say it: say induō
- Recall: say the Latin for to make, then the Latin for to carry, then say induō again

Before you move on

What does induō, induere mean? ("To put on (clothes)".) Say it once more.

155.4 exuō, exuere — to take off (clothes)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to put on.

You'll want to know: exuō, exuere

exuō, exuere — "to take off (clothes)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exuō is ex, "out of", with the verb -uō, "to put on", found also in induō, "to put on clothes" (Lewis & Short): to get out of one's clothes.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: exuō
- Say it: exuō, once more
- Say it: say exuō
- Recall: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to put on, then say exuō again

Before you move on

What does exuō, exuere mean? ("To take off (clothes)".) Say it once more.

155.5 pūrgō, pūrgāre — to clean

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put on, then the Latin for to take off.

You'll want to know: pūrgō, pūrgāre

pūrgō, pūrgāre — "to clean".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūrgō is contracted from pūrigō, "to make clean", from pūrum, "clean", and agō, "to make" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pūrgō
- Say it: pūrgō, once more
- Say it: say pūrgō
- Recall: say the Latin for to put on, then the Latin for to take off, then say pūrgō again

Before you move on

What does pūrgō, pūrgāre mean? ("To clean".) Say it once more.

Chapter 156

To break, To throw, To carry, To carry, To untie

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to break, to throw, to carry, to carry and to untie.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 156: I can say to break, to throw, to carry, to carry and to untie.

156.1 frangō, frangere — to break

Before the new one: say the Latin for to take off, then the Latin for to clean.

You'll want to know: frangō, frangere

frangō, frangere — "to break".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frangō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhreg-*, "to break" (EtymDB 2.1); English break is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frangō
- Say it: frangō, once more
- Say it: say frangō
- Recall: say the Latin for to take off, then the Latin for to clean, then say frangō again

Before you move on

What does frangō, frangere mean? ("To break".) Say it once more.

156.2 iaciō, iacere — to throw

Before the new one: say the Latin for to clean, then the Latin for to break.

You'll want to know: iaciō, iacere

iaciō, iacere — "to throw".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iaciō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (H)yeh1-*, "to throw, to let go" (EtymDB 2.1), with a k added to the root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iaciō
- Say it: iaciō, once more
- Say it: say iaciō
- Recall: say the Latin for to clean, then the Latin for to break, then say iaciō again

Before you move on

What does iaciō, iacere mean? ("To throw".) Say it once more.

156.3 vehō, vehere — to carry (by cart or ship)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to break, then the Latin for to throw.

You'll want to know: vehō, vehere

vehō, vehere — "to carry (by cart or ship)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vehō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wegh-*, "to carry, to convey" (EtymDB 2.1); English wagon is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vehō
- Say it: vehō, once more
- Say it: say vehō
- Recall: say the Latin for to break, then the Latin for to throw, then say vehō again

Before you move on

What does vehō, vehere mean? ("To carry (by cart or ship)".) Say it once more.

156.4 portō, portāre — to carry

Before the new one: say the Latin for to throw, then the Latin for to carry.

You'll want to know: portō, portāre

portō, portāre — "to carry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

portō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root per-*, "to go across, to bring over" (EtymDB 2.1); porta, "a gate", and portus, "a harbour", belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: portō
- Say it: portō, once more
- Say it: say portō
- Recall: say the Latin for to throw, then the Latin for to carry, then say portō again

Before you move on

What does portō, portāre mean? ("To carry".) Say it once more.

156.5 solvō, solvere — to untie, to pay

Before the new one: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to carry.

You'll want to know: solvō, solvere

solvō, solvere — "to untie, to pay".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

solvō is contracted from se-, "apart", and luō, "to loosen, to release" (Lewis & Short): to loosen apart. English solve and dissolve come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: solvō
- Say it: solvō, once more
- Say it: say solvō
- Recall: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to carry, then say solvō again

Before you move on

What does solvō, solvere mean? ("To untie, to pay".) Say it once more.

Chapter 157

To give back, To show, To shine, To lose, To win

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to give back, to show, to shine, to lose and to win.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 157: I can say to give back, to show, to shine, to lose and to win.

157.1 reddō, reddere — to give back

Before the new one: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to untie.

You'll want to know: reddō, reddere

reddō, reddere — "to give back".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

reddō is red-, "back", with dō, "to give" (Lewis & Short): to give back.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: reddō
- Say it: reddō, once more
- Say it: say reddō
- Recall: say the Latin for to carry, then the Latin for to untie, then say reddō again

Before you move on

What does reddō, reddere mean? ("To give back".) Say it once more.

157.2 ostendō, ostendere — to show

Before the new one: say the Latin for to untie, then the Latin for to give back.

You'll want to know: ostendō, ostendere

ostendō, ostendere — "to show".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ostendō is obs-, "in front of", an old form of ob, with tendō, "to stretch" (Lewis & Short): to stretch out before someone, to show.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ostendō
- Say it: ostendō, once more
- Say it: say ostendō
- Recall: say the Latin for to untie, then the Latin for to give back, then say ostendō again

Before you move on

What does ostendō, ostendere mean? ("To show".) Say it once more.

157.3 lūceō, lūcēre — to shine

Before the new one: say the Latin for to give back, then the Latin for to show.

You'll want to know: lūceō, lūcēre

lūceō, lūcēre — "to shine".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūceō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European lowkeye-*, "to make shine" (EtymDB 2.1), from the same root as lūx, "light"; Greek leukos, "white, bright", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lūceō
- Say it: lūceō, once more
- Say it: say lūceō
- Recall: say the Latin for to give back, then the Latin for to show, then say lūceō again

Before you move on

What does lūceō, lūcēre mean? ("To shine".) Say it once more.

157.4 perdō, perdere — to lose

Before the new one: say the Latin for to show, then the Latin for to shine.

You'll want to know: perdō, perdere

perdō, perdere — "to lose".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perdō is per-, "through, to destruction", with dō, "to give, to put" (Lewis & Short): to make away with, so to lose.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perdō
- Say it: perdō, once more
- Say it: say perdō
- Recall: say the Latin for to show, then the Latin for to shine, then say perdō again

Before you move on

What does perdō, perdere mean? ("To lose".) Say it once more.

157.5 vincō, vincere — to win, to defeat

Before the new one: say the Latin for to shine, then the Latin for to lose.

You'll want to know: vincō, vincere

vincō, vincere — "to win, to defeat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vincō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weyk-, "to fight, to conquer", with an n inside the present stem, wi-n-k-, "to conquer" (EtymDB 2.1); the n is missing from vīcī, "I won".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vincō
- Say it: vincō, once more
- Say it: say vincō
- Recall: say the Latin for to shine, then the Latin for to lose, then say vincō again

Before you move on

What does vincō, vincere mean? ("To win, to defeat".) Say it once more.

Chapter 158

To grow, To hurry, To stay awake, To dine, To taste

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to grow, to hurry, to stay awake, to dine and to taste.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 158: I can say to grow, to hurry, to stay awake, to dine and to taste.

158.1 crēscō, crēscere — to grow

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lose, then the Latin for to win.

You'll want to know: crēscō, crēscere

crēscō, crēscere — "to grow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crēscō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ker-*, "to grow" (EtymDB 2.1), with -scō, the ending of verbs of becoming. creō, "to create, to make grow", is its partner (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crēscō
- Say it: crēscō, once more
- Say it: say crēscō
- Recall: say the Latin for to lose, then the Latin for to win, then say crēscō again

Before you move on

What does crēscō, crēscere mean? ("To grow".) Say it once more.

158.2 festīnō, festīnāre — to hurry

Before the new one: say the Latin for to win, then the Latin for to grow.

You'll want to know: festīnō, festīnāre

festīnō, festīnāre — "to hurry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

festīnō is built on an adjective festīnus, "hasty" (EtymDB 2.1), and belongs with cōnfestim, "at once"; the deeper origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: festīnō
- Say it: festīnō, once more
- Say it: say festīnō
- Recall: say the Latin for to win, then the Latin for to grow, then say festīnō again

Before you move on

What does festīnō, festīnāre mean? (“To hurry”.) Say it once more.

158.3 vigilō, vigilāre — to stay awake

Before the new one: say the Latin for to grow, then the Latin for to hurry.

You’ll want to know: vigilō, vigilāre

vigilō, vigilāre — “to stay awake”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vigilō is built on vigil, “awake, watchful” (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weg-*, “to be lively, to be awake” (EtymDB 2.1). English wake is a cousin.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vigilō
- Say it: vigilō, once more
- Say it: say vigilō
- Recall: say the Latin for to grow, then the Latin for to hurry, then say vigilō again

Before you move on

What does vigilō, vigilāre mean? (“To stay awake”.) Say it once more.

158.4 cēnō, cēnāre — to dine

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hurry, then the Latin for to stay awake.

You'll want to know: cēnō, cēnāre

cēnō, cēnāre — "to dine".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēnō is the verb made from cēna, "dinner" (EtymDB 2.1), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)ker-*, "to cut": the meal as one's portion.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cēnō
- Say it: cēnō, once more
- Say it: say cēnō
- Recall: say the Latin for to hurry, then the Latin for to stay awake, then say cēnō again

Before you move on

What does cēnō, cēnāre mean? ("To dine".) Say it once more.

158.5 gustō, gustāre — to taste

Before the new one: say the Latin for to stay awake, then the Latin for to dine.

You'll want to know: gustō, gustāre

gustō, gustāre — "to taste".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gustō is built on gustus, "a tasting" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gews-*, "to taste, to choose" (EtymDB 2.1). English choose is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gustō
- Say it: gustō, once more
- Say it: say gustō
- Recall: say the Latin for to stay awake, then the Latin for to dine, then say gustō again

Before you move on

What does gustō, gustāre mean? ("To taste".) Say it once more.

Chapter 159

To feel, To hang, To be silent, To keep, To change

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to feel, to hang, to be silent, to keep and to change.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 159: I can say to feel, to hang, to be silent, to keep and to change.

159.1 sentiō, sentīre — to feel

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to dine, then the Latin for to taste.

You'll want to know: sentiō, sentīre

sentiō, sentīre — "to feel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sentiō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sent-*, "to head for, to go" (EtymDB 2.1). English send is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sentiō
- Say it: sentiō, once more
- Say it: say sentiō
- Recall: say the Latin for to dine, then the Latin for to taste, then say sentiō again

Before you move on

What does sentiō, sentīre mean? ("To feel".) Say it once more.

159.2 pendeō, pendēre — to hang

Before the new one: say the Latin for to taste, then the Latin for to feel.

You'll want to know: pendeō, pendēre

pendeō, pendēre — "to hang".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pendeō is the intransitive partner of pendō, "to weigh, to hang up" (Lewis & Short): to be hanging. The pair is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)pend-*, "to stretch, to pull" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pendeō
- Say it: pendeō, once more
- Say it: say pendeō
- Recall: say the Latin for to taste, then the Latin for to feel, then say pendeō again

Before you move on

What does pendeō, pendēre mean? ("To hang".) Say it once more.

159.3 taceō, tacēre — to be silent

Before the new one: say the Latin for to feel, then the Latin for to hang.

You'll want to know: taceō, tacēre

taceō, tacēre — "to be silent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

taceō is inherited from Proto-Italic takēō*, "to be silent" (EtymDB 2.1), but Lewis & Short call its deeper origin doubtful. Gothic þahan, "to be silent", is often compared.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: taceō
- Say it: taceō, once more
- Say it: say taceō
- Recall: say the Latin for to feel, then the Latin for to hang, then say taceō again

Before you move on

What does taceō, tacēre mean? ("To be silent".) Say it once more.

159.4 servō, servāre — to keep, to save

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hang, then the Latin for to be silent.

You'll want to know: servō, servāre

servō, servāre — "to keep, to save".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

servō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ser-*, "to watch over, to protect" (EtymDB 2.1). It is probably not the same word as servus, "a slave".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: servō
- Say it: servō, once more
- Say it: say servō
- Recall: say the Latin for to hang, then the Latin for to be silent, then say servō again

Before you move on

What does servō, servāre mean? ("To keep, to save".) Say it once more.

159.5 mūtō, mūtāre — to change

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be silent, then the Latin for to keep.

You'll want to know: mūtō, mūtāre

mūtō, mūtāre — "to change".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūtō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mey-*, "to change, to exchange", the root of mūtuus, "borrowed, mutual"; Lewis & Short's link with moveō, “to move”, is less likely.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mūtō
- Say it: mūtō, once more
- Say it: say mūtō
- Recall: say the Latin for to be silent, then the Latin for to keep, then say mūtō again

Before you move on

What does mūtō, mūtāre mean? (“To change”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 160

To count, To destroy, To go away, To arrive, To live

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to count, to destroy, to go away, to arrive and to live.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 160: I can say to count, to destroy, to go away, to arrive and to live.

160.1 numerō, numerāre — to count

Before the new one: say the Latin for to keep, then the Latin for to change.

You'll want to know: numerō, numerāre

numerō, numerāre — "to count".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

numerō is built on numerus, "a number" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nem-*, "to allot, to distribute" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: numerō
- Say it: numerō, once more
- Say it: say numerō
- Recall: say the Latin for to keep, then the Latin for to change, then say numerō again

Before you move on

What does numerō, numerāre mean? ("To count".) Say it once more.

160.2 dēleō, dēlēre — to destroy, to wipe out

Before the new one: say the Latin for to change, then the Latin for to count.

You'll want to know: dēleō, dēlēre

dēleō, dēlēre — "to destroy, to wipe out".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēleō probably begins with dē-, "away, off", but the rest is uncertain; a link with linō, "to smear", is sometimes suggested (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēleō
- Say it: dēleō, once more
- Say it: say dēleō
- Recall: say the Latin for to change, then the Latin for to count, then say dēleō again

Before you move on

What does dēleō, dēlēre mean? ("To destroy, to wipe out".) Say it once more.

160.3 discēdō, discēdere — to go away, to leave

Before the new one: say the Latin for to count, then the Latin for to destroy.

You'll want to know: discēdō, discēdere

discēdō, discēdere — "to go away, to leave".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

discēdō is dis-, "apart", with cēdō, "to go, to withdraw" (EtymDB 2.1): to go off in different directions, to leave.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: discēdō
- Say it: discēdō, once more
- Say it: say discēdō
- Recall: say the Latin for to count, then the Latin for to destroy, then say discēdō again

Before you move on

What does discēdō, discēdere mean? ("To go away, to leave".) Say it once more.

160.4 adveniō, advenīre — to arrive

Before the new one: say the Latin for to destroy, then the Latin for to go away.

You'll want to know: adveniō, advenīre

adveniō, advenīre — "to arrive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

adveniō is ad, "to", with veniō, "to come" (EtymDB 2.1). veniō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwem-*, "to step, to come" (EtymDB 2.1). English advent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: adveniō
- Say it: adveniō, once more
- Say it: say adveniō
- Recall: say the Latin for to destroy, then the Latin for to go away, then say adveniō again

Before you move on

What does adveniō, advenīre mean? ("To arrive".) Say it once more.

160.5 habitō, habitāre — to live (somewhere)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go away, then the Latin for to arrive.

Read it: Hodiē labōrō. Vespere domum redeō et dormiō. aloud as one account

You'll want to know: habitō, habitāre

habitō, habitāre — "to live (somewhere)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

habitō is a frequentative of habeō, "to have, to hold" (Lewis & Short): to keep holding a place, so to dwell.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: habitō
- Say it: habitō, once more
- Say it: say habitō
- Recall: say the Latin for to go away, then the Latin for to arrive, then say habitō again

Before you move on

What does habitō, habitāre mean? ("To live (somewhere)".) Say it once more.

160.6 Describing words and verbs — a first pass

Say the words for to arrive and to live.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- proud, kind, cruel, ugly, beautiful
- strong, weak, alone, icy, clear
- cloudy, windy, to build, to climb, to go down
- to join, to visit, to sing, to paint, to lead

- to make, to carry, to put on, to take off, to clean

Before you move on

Proud? (superbus, superba, superbum.) Kind? (benignus, benigna, benignum.) Cruel? (crūdēlis, crūdēle.) Ugly? (turpis, turpe.) Beautiful? (fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum.) Strong? (validus, valida, validum.) Weak? (īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum.) Alone? (sōlus, sōla, sōlum.) Icy? (gelidus, gelida, gelidum.) Clear? (serēnus, serēna, serēnum.) Cloudy? (nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum.) Windy? (ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum.) To build? (aedificō, aedificāre.) To climb? (ascendō, ascendere.) To go down? (dēscendō, dēscendere.) To join? (iungō, iungere.) To visit? (vīsitō, vīsitāre.) To sing? (cantō, cantāre.) To paint? (pingō, pingere.) To lead? (dūcō, dūcere.) To make? (faciō, facere.) To carry? (gerō, gerere.) To put on? (induō, induere.) To take off? (exuō, exuere.) To clean? (pūrgō, pūrgāre.)

160.7 Verbs — a second pass

Say the words for to break and to throw.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to break, to throw, to carry, to carry, to untie
- to give back, to show, to shine, to lose, to win
- to grow, to hurry, to stay awake, to dine, to taste
- to feel, to hang, to be silent, to keep, to change
- to count, to destroy, to go away, to arrive, to live

Before you move on

To break? (frangō, frangere.) To throw? (iaciō, iacere.) To carry? (vehō, vehere.) To carry? (portō, portāre.) To untie?

(solvō, solvere.) To give back? (reddō, reddere.) To show? (ostendō, ostendere.) To shine? (lūceō, lūcēre.) To lose? (perdō, perdere.) To win? (vincō, vincere.) To grow? (crēscō, crēscere.) To hurry? (festīnō, festīnāre.) To stay awake? (vigilō, vigilāre.) To dine? (cēnō, cēnāre.) To taste? (gustō, gustāre.) To feel? (sentiō, sentīre.) To hang? (pendeō, pendēre.) To be silent? (taceō, tacēre.) To keep? (servō, servāre.) To change? (mūtō, mūtāre.) To count? (numerō, numerāre.) To destroy? (dēleō, dēlēre.) To go away? (discēdō, discēdere.) To arrive? (adveniō, advenīre.) To live? (habitō, habitāre.)

Chapter 161

Nothing, Nobody, No, Which of Two, Neither … Nor

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say that there is nothing, nobody and none, and ask which of two.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 161: I can say that there is nothing, nobody and none, and ask which of two.

161.1 nihil — nothing

Before the new one: say the Latin for to arrive, then the Latin for to live (somewhere).

You'll want to know: nihil

nihil — "nothing". Nihil videō. — "I see nothing." Latin needs no second negative: nihil already means "not anything". English keeps it in nil and annihilate.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nihil is ne, "not", fused with hīlum, "a trifle, the least thing" (Lewis & Short): not the least thing. Its short form is nīl, "nothing".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nihil
- Say it: nihil, once more
- Say it: say nihil
- Recall: say the Latin for to arrive, then the Latin for to live (somewhere), then say nihil again

Before you move on

What does nihil mean? (“Nothing”.) Say it once more.

161.2 nēmō, nēminis — nobody, no one

Before the new one: say the Latin for to live (somewhere), then the Latin for nothing.

You’ll want to know: nēmō, nēminis

nēmō, nēminis — “nobody, no one”. Nēmō venit. — “Nobody is coming.” It is ne-, “not”, with an old form of homō, “a person”: “not a person”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nēmō comes from ne hemō, “not a person” (EtymDB 2.1): hemō is an older form of homō, “a human being”. Festus already took nēmō apart this way (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nēmō, nēminis
- Say it: nēmō, nēminis, once more
- Say it: say nēmō, nēminis

- Recall: say the Latin for to live (somewhere), then the Latin for nothing, then say nēmō, nēminis again

Before you move on

What does nēmō, nēminis mean? ("Nobody, no one".) Say it once more.

161.3 nūllus, nūlla, nūllum — no, not any

Before the new one: say the Latin for nothing, then the Latin for nobody.

You'll want to know: nūllus, nūlla, nūllum nūllus, nūlla, nūllum — "no, not any". It agrees with its noun: nūlla epistula — "no letter at all". English null and annul come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūllus is ne, "not", fused with ūllus, "any" (Lewis & Short): not any. ūllus itself is a diminutive of ūnus, "one".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūllus, nūlla, nūllum
- Say it: nūllus, nūlla, nūllum, once more
- Say it: say nūllus, nūlla, nūllum
- Recall: say the Latin for nothing, then the Latin for nobody, then say nūllus, nūlla, nūllum again

Before you move on

What does nūllus, nūlla, nūllum mean? ("No, not any".) Say it once more.

161.4 uter, utra, utrum — which (of two)

Before the new one: say the Latin for nobody, then the Latin for no.

You'll want to know: uter, utra, utrum

uter, utra, utrum — "which (of two)". A question that picks one of two: Uter liber? — "Which of the two books?" neuter, "neither of the two", gave English neuter and neutral.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

uter comes from an older cuter*, a comparative form of the question word quis, "who" (Lewis & Short): which of two. It is a different word from ūter, "a leather bag".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: uter, utra, utrum
- Say it: uter, utra, utrum, once more
- Say it: say uter, utra, utrum
- Recall: say the Latin for nobody, then the Latin for no, then say uter, utra, utrum again

Before you move on

What does uter, utra, utrum mean? ("Which (of two)".) Say it once more.

161.5 neque — and not, nor

Before the new one: say the Latin for no, then the Latin for which.

You'll want to know: neque

neque — "and not, nor". neque ... neque is "neither ... nor": Neque aquam neque vīnum bibō. — "I drink neither water nor wine." It is often shortened to nec.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

neque is ne, "not", with -que, "and" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nekwe*, "and not, nor" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: neque
- Say it: neque, once more
- Say it: say neque
- Recall: say the Latin for no, then the Latin for which, then say neque again

Before you move on

What does neque mean? ("And not, nor".) Say it once more.

Chapter 162

Recently, the Day before Yesterday, Once, Before, To Happen

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what happened, and when: recently, the day before yesterday, long ago.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 162: I can say what happened, and when: recently, the day before yesterday, long ago.

162.1 nūper — recently

Before the new one: say the Latin for which, then the Latin for and not.

You'll want to know: nūper nūper — "recently". Latin's past tense, the perfect, has its own endings: vīdī — "I saw", vēnī — "I came". Nūper librum lēgī. — "I recently read a book."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūper is usually explained as novum, "new", with -per, "through", the ending of semper, "always" (Lewis & Short): newly, of late.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūper
- Say it: nūper, once more
- Say it: say nūper
- Recall: say the Latin for which, then the Latin for and not, then say nūper again

Before you move on

What does nūper mean? ("Recently".) Say it once more.

162.2 nudiustertius — the day before yesterday

Before the new one: say the Latin for and not, then the Latin for recently.

You'll want to know: nudiustertius nudiustertius — "the day before yesterday". It is nunc diēs tertius, "now (is) the third day": counting today, yesterday is the second. Nudiustertius epistulam scrīpsī. — "The day before yesterday I wrote a letter."

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nudiustertius is fused from nunc diēs tertius, "now (is) the third day". Latin also said nudiusquārtus, "three days ago", on the same pattern.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nudiustertius
- Say it: nudiustertius, once more
- Say it: say nudiustertius
- Recall: say the Latin for and not, then the Latin for recently, then say nudiustertius again

Before you move on

What does nudiustertius mean? ("The day before yesterday".) Say it once more.

162.3 ōlim — once, long ago; one day

Before the new one: say the Latin for recently, then the Latin for the day before yesterday.

You'll want to know: ōlim ōlim — "once, long ago; one day". It points to a time far off, usually long past: Ōlim Rōma parva erat. — "Long ago Rome was small." erat is "was", from sum.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōlim is built on ollus, "that", the archaic form of ille (Lewis & Short), with -im, an ending for a point in time: "at that time".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōlim
- Say it: ōlim, once more
- Say it: say ōlim

- Recall: say the Latin for recently, then the Latin for the day before yesterday, then say ōlim again

Before you move on

What does ōlim mean? ("Once, long ago; one day".) Say it once more.

162.4 anteā — before, previously

Before the new one: say the Latin for the day before yesterday, then the Latin for once.

You'll want to know: anteā anteā — "before, previously". It is ante, "before", with eā. Anteā Rōmae habitāvī. — "Before, I lived in Rome." habitāvī is the perfect of habitō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

anteā is ante, "before", with eā, "that" (Lewis & Short), like posteā, "afterwards", and propterea, "because of that". ante is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2enti*, "facing, in front" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: anteā
- Say it: anteā, once more
- Say it: say anteā
- Recall: say the Latin for the day before yesterday, then the Latin for once, then say anteā again

Before you move on

What does anteā mean? ("Before, previously".) Say it once more.

162.5 accidō, accidere — to happen

Before the new one: say the Latin for once, then the Latin for before.

You'll want to know: accidō, accidere

accidō, accidere — "to happen". Quid accidit? — "What happened?" Its perfect is spelled like its present in this form: accidit. It is ad + cadō, "to fall towards", the source of English accident.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

accidō is ad, "towards", with cadō, "to fall" (Lewis & Short), its a weakened to i: to fall towards, to befall. It is a different word from accīdō, "to cut into", built on caedō, "to cut".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: accidō, accidere
- Say it: accidō, accidere, once more
- Say it: say accidō, accidere
- Recall: say the Latin for once, then the Latin for before, then say accidō, accidere again

Before you move on

What does accidō, accidere mean? ("To happen".) Say it once more.

Chapter 163

The Day after Tomorrow, Afterwards, a Plan, To Decide, To Foresee

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what will happen, and when: the day after tomorrow, afterwards, and what I plan.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 163: I can say what will happen, and when: the day after tomorrow, afterwards, and what I plan.

163.1 perendiē — the day after tomorrow

> Before the new one: say the Latin for before, then the Latin for to happen.

You'll want to know: perendiē

perendiē — "the day after tomorrow". One day further on than crās: Perendiē Rōmam ībō. — "The day after tomorrow I will go to Rome." ībō is the future of eō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perendiē is usually explained as a word for "beyond", like Greek peran, "on the other side" (Lewis & Short), with diē, "on the day": on the day beyond tomorrow.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perendiē
- Say it: perendiē, once more
- Say it: say perendiē
- Recall: say the Latin for before, then the Latin for to happen, then say perendiē again

Before you move on

What does perendiē mean? ("The day after tomorrow".) Say it once more.

163.2 posteā — afterwards, later

Before the new one: say the Latin for to happen, then the Latin for the day after tomorrow.

You'll want to know: posteā posteā — "afterwards, later". It is post, "after", with eā. Posteā tē vidēbō. — "I will see you afterwards." vidēbō is the future you met in crās tē vidēbō.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

posteā is post, "after", with eā, "that" (Lewis & Short), like anteā, "before": after that.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: posteā
- Say it: posteā, once more
- Say it: say posteā
- Recall: say the Latin for to happen, then the Latin for the day after tomorrow, then say posteā again

Before you move on

What does posteā mean? ("Afterwards, later".) Say it once more.

163.3 cōnsilium, cōnsiliī — a plan; advice

Before the new one: say the Latin for the day after tomorrow, then the Latin for afterwards.

You'll want to know: cōnsilium, cōnsiliī

cōnsilium, cōnsiliī — "a plan; advice". Quod cōnsilium habēs? — "What plan have you got?" English counsel comes from it, by way of French.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsilium belongs with cōnsul, "a consul" (Lewis & Short), and with cōnsulō, "to consult, to deliberate"; where their root comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsilium, cōnsiliī
- Say it: cōnsilium, cōnsiliī, once more
- Say it: say cōnsilium, cōnsiliī

- Recall: say the Latin for the day after tomorrow, then the Latin for afterwards, then say cōnsilium, cōnsiliī again

Before you move on

What does cōnsilium, cōnsiliī mean? ("A plan; advice".) Say it once more.

163.4 cōnstituō, cōnstituere — to decide, to set up

Before the new one: say the Latin for afterwards, then the Latin for a plan; advice.

You'll want to know: cōnstituō, cōnstituere

cōnstituō, cōnstituere — "to decide, to set up". Third-conjugation verbs, with a short -ere, make their future with -am, -ēs, -et: Crās cōnstituam. — "I will decide tomorrow." English constitute and constitution come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnstituō is con-, "together, firmly", with statuō, "to set up" (Lewis & Short), its a weakened to i: to set firmly in place.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnstituō, cōnstituere
- Say it: cōnstituō, cōnstituere, once more
- Say it: say cōnstituō, cōnstituere
- Recall: say the Latin for afterwards, then the Latin for a plan; advice, then say cōnstituō, cōnstituere again

Before you move on

What does cōnstituō, cōnstituere mean? (“To decide, to set up”.) Say it once more.

163.5 prōvideō, prōvidēre — to foresee, to provide for

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plan; advice, then the Latin for to decide.

You’ll want to know: prōvideō, prōvidēre

prōvideō, prōvidēre — “to foresee, to provide for”. It is videō with prō, “ahead”: seeing a thing before it comes. Its future follows vidēbō: prōvidēbō. English provide and provident come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōvideō is prō, “ahead”, with videō, “to see” (EtymDB 2.1). videō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weyd-*, “to see, to know” (EtymDB 2.1); English wit and wise are cousins.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōvideō, prōvidēre
- Say it: prōvideō, prōvidēre, once more
- Say it: say prōvideō, prōvidēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a plan; advice, then the Latin for to decide, then say prōvideō, prōvidēre again

Before you move on

What does prōvideō, prōvidēre mean? (“To foresee, to provide for”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 164

A Notice, an Inscription, a Price, For Sale, Goods

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can read a notice, an inscription, a price and a sale sign, and act on what they say.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 164: I can read a notice, an inscription, a price and a sale sign, and act on what they say.

164.1 titulus, titulī — a notice, a label; a title

Before the new one: say the Latin for to decide, then the Latin for to foresee.

You'll want to know: titulus, titulī

titulus, titulī — "a notice, a label; a title". A shop or house could carry one by its door. The famous Pompeian doorway warning is a mosaic, but it reads like one: Cavē canem. — "Beware of the dog." English title comes from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

titulus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: titulus, titulī
- Say it: titulus, titulī, once more
- Say it: say titulus, titulī
- Recall: say the Latin for to decide, then the Latin for to foresee, then say titulus, titulī again

Before you move on

What does titulus, titulī mean? ("A notice, a label; a title".) Say it once more.

164.2 īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis — an inscription

Before the new one: say the Latin for to foresee, then the Latin for a notice.

You'll want to know: īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis

īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis — "an inscription".

Read it: the stone

The stone says SPQR, which is Senātus Populusque Rōmānus, "the Senate and People of Rome". It is in + scrībō: writing cut into something.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnscrīptiō is built on īnscrībō, "to write on" (Lewis & Short), with -tiō, an ending for an act or its result. scrībō, "to write", is probably related to Greek skariphos, "a scratch, a sketch".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis
- Say it: īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis, once more

- Say it: say īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for to foresee, then the Latin for a notice, then say īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis again

Before you move on

What does īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis mean? ("An inscription".) Say it once more.

164.3 pretium, pretiī — a price

Before the new one: say the Latin for a notice, then the Latin for an inscription.

You'll want to know: pretium, pretiī pretium, pretiī — "a price". Quantī cōnstat? — "How much does it cost?" English price and precious come from it.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pretium is probably inherited, from a form built on Proto-Indo-European per-*, "back, in return" (EtymDB 2.1): what one gives in return.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pretium, pretiī
- Say it: pretium, pretiī, once more
- Say it: say pretium, pretiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a notice, then the Latin for an inscription, then say pretium, pretiī again

Before you move on

What does pretium, pretiī mean? ("A price".) Say it once more.

164.4 vēnālis, vēnāle — for sale

Before the new one: say the Latin for an inscription, then the Latin for a price.

You'll want to know: vēnālis, vēnāle

vēnālis, vēnāle — "for sale".

Read it: the sign

The sign says Domus vēnālis. — "House for sale." It comes from vēnum, "sale", like vendō, "to sell".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēnālis is built on vēnum, "sale" (EtymDB 2.1), with -ālis, "belonging to": for sale. vēnum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wesno-*, "price"; English venal, "bribable", comes from vēnālis.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vēnālis, vēnāle
- Say it: vēnālis, vēnāle, once more
- Say it: say vēnālis, vēnāle
- Recall: say the Latin for an inscription, then the Latin for a price, then say vēnālis, vēnāle again

Before you move on

What does vēnālis, vēnāle mean? ("For sale".) Say it once more.

164.5 merx, mercis — goods, merchandise

Before the new one: say the Latin for a price, then the Latin for for sale.

You'll want to know: merx, mercis merx, mercis — "goods, merchandise". What a shop sells is usually said in the plural:

merc- (the stem, as in mercis) + -ēs (the plural ending) → mercēs
English merchant and commerce come from this word.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

merx has no sure origin. Lewis & Short tie it to mereō, "to earn"; others think it may be a loan, perhaps from Etruscan. English market comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: merx, mercis
- Say it: merx, mercis, once more
- Say it: say merx, mercis
- Recall: say the Latin for a price, then the Latin for for sale, then say merx, mercis again

Before you move on

What does merx, mercis mean? ("Goods, merchandise".) Say it once more.

164.6 Saying no and looking back — a first pass

Say the words for for sale and goods.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nothing, nobody, no, which, and not
- recently, the day before yesterday, once, before, to happen

Before you move on

Nothing? (nihil.) Nobody? (nēmō, nēminis.) No? (nūllus, nūlla, nūllum.) Which? (uter, utra, utrum.) And not? (neque.) Recently? (nūper.) The day before yesterday? (nudiustertius.) Once? (ōlim.) Before? (anteā.) To happen? (accidō, accidere.)

164.7 Looking ahead and reading signs — a second pass

Say the words for the day after tomorrow and afterwards.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the day after tomorrow, afterwards, a plan; advice, to decide, to foresee
- a notice, an inscription, a price, for sale, goods

Before you move on

The day after tomorrow? (perendiē.) Afterwards? (posteā.) A plan; advice? (cōnsilium, cōnsiliī.) To decide? (cōnstituō, cōnstituere.) To foresee? (prōvideō, prōvidēre.) A notice? (titulus, titulī.) An inscription? (īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis.) A price? (pretium, pretiī.) For sale? (vēnālis, vēnāle.) Goods? (merx, mercis.)

Chapter 165

To light, To put out, To jump, To smile, To shout

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to light, to put out, to jump, to smile and to shout.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 165: I can say to light, to put out, to jump, to smile and to shout.

165.1 accendō, accendere — to light, to kindle

> Before the new one: say the Latin for for sale, then the Latin for goods.

You'll want to know: accendō, accendere

accendō, accendere — "to light, to kindle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

accendō is ad, "to", with a verb -cendō, "to set alight", related to candeō, "to glow white" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: accendō, accendere
- Say it: accendō, accendere, once more
- Say it: say accendō, accendere
- Recall: say the Latin for for sale, then the Latin for goods, then say accendō, accendere again

Before you move on

What does accendō, accendere mean? ("To light, to kindle".) Say it once more.

165.2 exstinguō, exstinguere — to put out

Before the new one: say the Latin for goods, then the Latin for to light.

You'll want to know: exstinguō, exstinguere

exstinguō, exstinguere — "to put out".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exstinguō is ex, "out", with stinguō, "to quench, to put out": to put out entirely. English extinguish and extinct come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: exstinguō, exstinguere
- Say it: exstinguō, exstinguere, once more
- Say it: say exstinguō, exstinguere
- Recall: say the Latin for goods, then the Latin for to light, then say exstinguō, exstinguere again

Before you move on

What does exstinguō, exstinguere mean? (“To put out”.) Say it once more.

165.3 saliō, salīre — to jump

Before the new one: say the Latin for to light, then the Latin for to put out.

You’ll want to know: saliō, salīre

saliō, salīre — “to jump”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saliō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sel-*, “to spring, to leap” (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hallomai, “to leap”, is a cousin. It is a different word from saliō, “to salt”, built on sāl, “salt”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saliō, salīre
- Say it: saliō, salīre, once more
- Say it: say saliō, salīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to light, then the Latin for to put out, then say saliō, salīre again

Before you move on

What does saliō, salīre mean? (“To jump”.) Say it once more.

165.4 subrīdeō, subrīdēre — to smile

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put out, then the Latin for to jump.

You'll want to know: subrīdeō, subrīdēre

subrīdeō, subrīdēre — "to smile".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

subrīdeō is sub, "under, a little", with rīdeō, "to laugh" (EtymDB 2.1): to laugh a little, to smile.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: subrīdeō, subrīdēre
- Say it: subrīdeō, subrīdēre, once more
- Say it: say subrīdeō, subrīdēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to put out, then the Latin for to jump, then say subrīdeō, subrīdēre again

Before you move on

What does subrīdeō, subrīdēre mean? ("To smile".) Say it once more.

165.5 clāmō, clāmāre — to shout

Before the new one: say the Latin for to jump, then the Latin for to smile.

You'll want to know: clāmō, clāmāre

clāmō, clāmāre — "to shout".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clāmō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kelh1-*, "to call, to shout" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek kaleō, "to call", and clārus, "clear, loud", are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: clāmō, clāmāre
- Say it: clāmō, clāmāre, once more
- Say it: say clāmō, clāmāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to jump, then the Latin for to smile, then say clāmō, clāmāre again

Before you move on

What does clāmō, clāmāre mean? ("To shout".) Say it once more.

Chapter 166

To approve, To mark, To discuss, To promise, To allow

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to approve, to mark, to discuss, to promise and to allow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 166: I can say to approve, to mark, to discuss, to promise and to allow.

166.1 probō, probāre — to approve, to prove

Before the new one: say the Latin for to smile, then the Latin for to shout.

You'll want to know: probō, probāre

probō, probāre — "to approve, to prove".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

probō is built on probus, "good, honest" (Lewis & Short): to find something good, to test and approve. probus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pro-bhwo-*, "being in front, outstanding" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: probō, probāre
- Say it: probō, probāre, once more
- Say it: say probō, probāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to smile, then the Latin for to shout, then say probō, probāre again

Before you move on

What does probō, probāre mean? ("To approve, to prove".) Say it once more.

166.2 signō, signāre — to mark, to seal

Before the new one: say the Latin for to shout, then the Latin for to approve.

You'll want to know: signō, signāre

signō, signāre — "to mark, to seal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

signō is the verb made from signum, "a sign, a mark" (Lewis & Short): to put a mark on. English sign comes from both.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: signō, signāre
- Say it: signō, signāre, once more
- Say it: say signō, signāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to shout, then the Latin for to approve, then say signō, signāre again

Before you move on

What does signō, signāre mean? (“To mark, to seal”.) Say it once more.

166.3 disputō, disputāre — to discuss, to argue

Before the new one: say the Latin for to approve, then the Latin for to mark.

You’ll want to know: disputō, disputāre

disputō, disputāre — “to discuss, to argue”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

disputō is dis-, “apart”, with putō, “to reckon” (EtymDB 2.1). Lewis & Short note that disputō was first a word of accounts: to go over a reckoning item by item.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: disputō, disputāre
- Say it: disputō, disputāre, once more
- Say it: say disputō, disputāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to approve, then the Latin for to mark, then say disputō, disputāre again

Before you move on

What does disputō, disputāre mean? (“To discuss, to argue”.) Say it once more.

166.4 prōmittō, prōmittere — to promise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to mark, then the Latin for to discuss.

You'll want to know: prōmittō, prōmittere

prōmittō, prōmittere — "to promise".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōmittō is prō, "forward", with mittō, "to send" (EtymDB 2.1): to send one's word ahead.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōmittō, prōmittere
- Say it: prōmittō, prōmittere, once more
- Say it: say prōmittō, prōmittere
- Recall: say the Latin for to mark, then the Latin for to discuss, then say prōmittō, prōmittere again

Before you move on

What does prōmittō, prōmittere mean? ("To promise".) Say it once more.

166.5 permittō, permittere — to allow

Before the new one: say the Latin for to discuss, then the Latin for to promise.

You'll want to know: permittō, permittere

permittō, permittere — "to allow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

permittō is per, "through", with mittō, "to send, to let go" (EtymDB 2.1). Lewis & Short give permittō first as "to let go through", hence to allow.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: permittō, permittere
- Say it: permittō, permittere, once more
- Say it: say permittō, permittere
- Recall: say the Latin for to discuss, then the Latin for to promise, then say permittō, permittere again

Before you move on

What does permittō, permittere mean? ("To allow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 167

To burn, To set on fire, To throw away, To calculate, To knock

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to burn, to set on fire, to throw away, to calculate and to knock.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 167: I can say to burn, to set on fire, to throw away, to calculate and to knock.

167.1 ārdeō, ārdēre — to burn, to be on fire

Before the new one: say the Latin for to promise, then the Latin for to allow.

You'll want to know: ārdeō, ārdēre

ārdeō, ārdēre — "to burn, to be on fire".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ārdeō is usually linked with āreō, "to be dry, to be parched" (EtymDB 2.1): to burn as to be dried up by heat.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ārdeō, ārdēre
- Say it: ārdeō, ārdēre, once more
- Say it: say ārdeō, ārdēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to promise, then the Latin for to allow, then say ārdeō, ārdēre again

Before you move on

What does ārdeō, ārdēre mean? ("To burn, to be on fire".) Say it once more.

167.2 incendō, incendere — to set on fire

Before the new one: say the Latin for to allow, then the Latin for to burn.

You'll want to know: incendō, incendere

incendō, incendere — "to set on fire".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incendō is in, "on, into", with the verb seen in candeō, "to glow white" (Lewis & Short): to set alight.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: incendō, incendere
- Say it: incendō, incendere, once more
- Say it: say incendō, incendere
- Recall: say the Latin for to allow, then the Latin for to burn, then say incendō, incendere again

Before you move on

What does incendō, incendere mean? ("To set on fire".) Say it once more.

167.3 abiciō, abicere — to throw away

Before the new one: say the Latin for to burn, then the Latin for to set on fire.

You'll want to know: abiciō, abicere

abiciō, abicere — "to throw away".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

abiciō is ab, "away", with iaciō, "to throw" (Lewis & Short), its a weakened to i.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: abiciō, abicere
- Say it: abiciō, abicere, once more
- Say it: say abiciō, abicere
- Recall: say the Latin for to burn, then the Latin for to set on fire, then say abiciō, abicere again

Before you move on

What does abiciō, abicere mean? ("To throw away".) Say it once more.

167.4 computō, computāre — to calculate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to set on fire, then the Latin for to throw away.

You'll want to know: computō, computāre

computō, computāre — "to calculate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

computō is com-, "together", with putō, "to reckon" (EtymDB 2.1): to reckon up. English count and compute both come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: computō, computāre
- Say it: computō, computāre, once more
- Say it: say computō, computāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to set on fire, then the Latin for to throw away, then say computō, computāre again

Before you move on

What does computō, computāre mean? ("To calculate".) Say it once more.

167.5 pulsō, pulsāre — to knock, to beat

Before the new one: say the Latin for to throw away, then the Latin for to calculate.

You'll want to know: pulsō, pulsāre

pulsō, pulsāre — "to knock, to beat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulsō is a frequentative of pellō, "to push, to strike" (EtymDB 2.1), built on its participle pulsus, "struck": to keep striking. English pulse comes from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pulsō, pulsāre
- Say it: pulsō, pulsāre, once more
- Say it: say pulsō, pulsāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to throw away, then the Latin for to calculate, then say pulsō, pulsāre again

Before you move on

What does pulsō, pulsāre mean? ("To knock, to beat".) Say it once more.

Chapter 168

To fold, To own, To make ready in advance, To lend, To propose

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to fold, to own, to make ready in advance, to lend and to propose.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 168: I can say to fold, to own, to make ready in advance, to lend and to propose.

168.1 plicō, plicāre — to fold

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to calculate, then the Latin for to knock.

You'll want to know: plicō, plicāre

plicō, plicāre — "to fold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plicō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European plek-*, "to fold, to plait" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek plekō, "to plait", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English ply and complicate come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: plicō, plicāre
- Say it: plicō, plicāre, once more
- Say it: say plicō, plicāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to calculate, then the Latin for to knock, then say plicō, plicāre again

Before you move on

What does plicō, plicāre mean? ("To fold".) Say it once more.

168.2 possideō, possidēre — to own, to possess

Before the new one: say the Latin for to knock, then the Latin for to fold.

You'll want to know: possideō, possidēre

possideō, possidēre — "to own, to possess".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

possideō is usually explained as potis, "master, able", with sedeō, "to sit" (EtymDB 2.1): to sit as master of something, so to own.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: possideō, possidēre
- Say it: possideō, possidēre, once more
- Say it: say possideō, possidēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to knock, then the Latin for to fold, then say possideō, possidēre again

Before you move on

What does possideō, possidēre mean? (“To own, to possess”.) Say it once more.

168.3 praeparō, praeparāre — to make ready in advance

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fold, then the Latin for to own.

You’ll want to know: praeparō, praeparāre

praeparō, praeparāre — “to make ready in advance”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praeparō is prae, “before”, with parō, “to make ready” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: praeparō, praeparāre
- Say it: praeparō, praeparāre, once more
- Say it: say praeparō, praeparāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to fold, then the Latin for to own, then say praeparō, praeparāre again

Before you move on

What does praeparō, praeparāre mean? (“To make ready in advance”.) Say it once more.

168.4 commodō, commodāre — to lend

Before the new one: say the Latin for to own, then the Latin for to make ready in advance.

You'll want to know: commodō, commodāre

commodō, commodāre — "to lend".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commodō is built on commodus, "fitting, convenient" (Lewis & Short), itself con-, "with", and modus, "a measure": to make something available, to lend.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: commodō, commodāre
- Say it: commodō, commodāre, once more
- Say it: say commodō, commodāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to own, then the Latin for to make ready in advance, then say commodō, commodāre again

Before you move on

What does commodō, commodāre mean? ("To lend".) Say it once more.

168.5 prōpōnō, prōpōnere — to propose, to put forward

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make ready in advance, then the Latin for to lend.

You'll want to know: prōpōnō, prōpōnere

prōpōnō, prōpōnere — "to propose, to put forward".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōpōnō is prō, "forward", with pōnō, "to put" (EtymDB 2.1): to put forward.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōpōnō, prōpōnere
- Say it: prōpōnō, prōpōnere, once more
- Say it: say prōpōnō, prōpōnere
- Recall: say the Latin for to make ready in advance, then the Latin for to lend, then say prōpōnō, prōpōnere again

Before you move on

What does prōpōnō, prōpōnere mean? ("To propose, to put forward".) Say it once more.

Chapter 169

To kill, To get used to, To make haste, To move back, To approach

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to kill, to get used to, to make haste, to move back and to approach.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 169: I can say to kill, to get used to, to make haste, to move back and to approach.

169.1 interficiō, interficere — to kill

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to lend, then the Latin for to propose.

You'll want to know: interficiō, interficere

interficiō, interficere — "to kill".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

interficiō is inter, "between", with faciō, "to make" (Lewis & Short): first to put out of the way, then to kill.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: interficiō, interficere
- Say it: interficiō, interficere, once more
- Say it: say interficiō, interficere
- Recall: say the Latin for to lend, then the Latin for to propose, then say interficiō, interficere again

Before you move on

What does interficiō, interficere mean? ("To kill".) Say it once more.

169.2 cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere — to get used to

Before the new one: say the Latin for to propose, then the Latin for to kill.

You'll want to know: cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere

cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere — "to get used to".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsuēscō is con-, "thoroughly", with suēscō, "to become used to" (EtymDB 2.1). suēscō is usually traced to the reflexive swe-*, "one's own": to make something one's own.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere
- Say it: cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere, once more
- Say it: say cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to propose, then the Latin for to kill, then say cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere again

Before you move on

What does cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere mean? ("To get used to".) Say it once more.

169.3 properō, properāre — to make haste

Before the new one: say the Latin for to kill, then the Latin for to get used to.

You'll want to know: properō, properāre

properō, properāre — "to make haste".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

properō is built on properus, "quick, hasty" (Lewis & Short), which is often explained as pro-, "forward", plus the root of parō, "to make ready".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: properō, properāre
- Say it: properō, properāre, once more
- Say it: say properō, properāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to kill, then the Latin for to get used to, then say properō, properāre again

Before you move on

What does properō, properāre mean? ("To make haste".) Say it once more.

169.4 recēdō, recēdere — to move back, to withdraw

Before the new one: say the Latin for to get used to, then the Latin for to make haste.

You'll want to know: recēdō, recēdere

recēdō, recēdere — "to move back, to withdraw".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

recēdō is re-, "back", with cēdō, "to go" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: recēdō, recēdere
- Say it: recēdō, recēdere, once more
- Say it: say recēdō, recēdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to get used to, then the Latin for to make haste, then say recēdō, recēdere again

Before you move on

What does recēdō, recēdere mean? ("To move back, to withdraw".) Say it once more.

169.5 appropinquō, appropinquāre — to approach

Before the new one: say the Latin for to make haste, then the Latin for to move back.

You'll want to know: appropinquō, appropinquāre

appropinquō, appropinquāre — "to approach".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

appropinquō is ad, "to", with propinquō, "to come near" (EtymDB 2.1), from propinquus, "near", built on prope, "near".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: appropinquō, appropinquāre
- Say it: appropinquō, appropinquāre, once more
- Say it: say appropinquō, appropinquāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to make haste, then the Latin for to move back, then say appropinquō, appropinquāre again

Before you move on

What does appropinquō, appropinquāre mean? ("To approach".)
Say it once more.

Chapter 170

To slip, To lighten, To admire, To suspect, To press

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to slip, to lighten, to admire, to suspect and to press.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 170: I can say to slip, to lighten, to admire, to suspect and to press.

170.1 lābor, lābī — to slip, to glide

Before the new one: say the Latin for to move back, then the Latin for to approach.

You'll want to know: lābor, lābī

lābor, lābī — "to slip, to glide".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lābor is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root (s)leh2b-*, "to hang loosely, to droop" (EtymDB 2.1). English lapse comes from its participle lāpsus, "slipped".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lābor, lābī
- Say it: lābor, lābī, once more
- Say it: say lābor, lābī
- Recall: say the Latin for to move back, then the Latin for to approach, then say lābor, lābī again

Before you move on

What does lābor, lābī mean? ("To slip, to glide".) Say it once more.

170.2 levō, levāre — to lighten, to lift

Before the new one: say the Latin for to approach, then the Latin for to slip.

You'll want to know: levō, levāre

levō, levāre — "to lighten, to lift".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

levō is built on levis, "light" (Lewis & Short): to make light, to lift. It is a different word from lēvō, "to make smooth".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: levō, levāre
- Say it: levō, levāre, once more
- Say it: say levō, levāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to approach, then the Latin for to slip, then say levō, levāre again

Before you move on

What does levō, levāre mean? (“To lighten, to lift”.) Say it once more.

170.3 admīror, admīrārī — to admire

Before the new one: say the Latin for to slip, then the Latin for to lighten.

You’ll want to know: admīror, admīrārī

admīror, admīrārī — “to admire”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

admīror is ad, “at”, with mīror, “to wonder” (EtymDB 2.1), from mīrus, “wonderful”, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)meyh2-*, “to smile, to be astonished” (EtymDB 2.1). English smile is a cousin.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: admīror, admīrārī
- Say it: admīror, admīrārī, once more
- Say it: say admīror, admīrārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to slip, then the Latin for to lighten, then say admīror, admīrārī again

Before you move on

What does admīror, admīrārī mean? (“To admire”.) Say it once more.

170.4 suspicor, suspicārī — to suspect

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lighten, then the Latin for to admire.

You'll want to know: suspicor, suspicārī

suspicor, suspicārī — "to suspect".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suspicor belongs with suspiciō, "to look up at, to suspect" (Lewis & Short), built from sub, "up from under", and speciō, "to look": to look at someone from below.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: suspicor, suspicārī
- Say it: suspicor, suspicārī, once more
- Say it: say suspicor, suspicārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to lighten, then the Latin for to admire, then say suspicor, suspicārī again

Before you move on

What does suspicor, suspicārī mean? ("To suspect".) Say it once more.

170.5 premō, premere — to press, to squeeze

Before the new one: say the Latin for to admire, then the Latin for to suspect.

You'll want to know: premō, premere

premō, premere — "to press, to squeeze".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

premō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European pres-*, "to press" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English press comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: premō, premere
- Say it: premō, premere, once more
- Say it: say premō, premere
- Recall: say the Latin for to admire, then the Latin for to suspect, then say premō, premere again

Before you move on

What does premō, premere mean? ("To press, to squeeze".) Say it once more.

Chapter 171

To deceive, To endure, To found, To create, To believe

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to deceive, to endure, to found, to create and to believe.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 171: I can say to deceive, to endure, to found, to create and to believe.

171.1 fallō, fallere — to deceive

Before the new one: say the Latin for to suspect, then the Latin for to press.

You'll want to know: fallō, fallere

fallō, fallere — "to deceive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fallō has no sure origin; Greek sphallō, "to trip up" (Lewis & Short), is often compared, and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed root ghwel-*, "to deceive".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fallō, fallere
- Say it: fallō, fallere, once more
- Say it: say fallō, fallere
- Recall: say the Latin for to suspect, then the Latin for to press, then say fallō, fallere again

Before you move on

What does fallō, fallere mean? ("To deceive".) Say it once more.

171.2 tolerō, tolerāre — to endure, to put up with

Before the new one: say the Latin for to press, then the Latin for to deceive.

You'll want to know: tolerō, tolerāre

tolerō, tolerāre — "to endure, to put up with".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tolerō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European telh2-*, "to bear, to endure" (EtymDB 2.1); tollō, "to lift", comes from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tolerō, tolerāre
- Say it: tolerō, tolerāre, once more
- Say it: say tolerō, tolerāre

- Recall: say the Latin for to press, then the Latin for to deceive, then say tolerō, tolerāre again

Before you move on

What does tolerō, tolerāre mean? ("To endure, to put up with".) Say it once more.

171.3 condō, condere — to found; to hide away

Before the new one: say the Latin for to deceive, then the Latin for to endure.

You'll want to know: condō, condere

condō, condere — "to found; to hide away".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

condō is con-, "together", with -dō, "to put" (Lewis & Short): to put together, to found, or to put away. This -dō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1-*, "to put, to place" (EtymDB 2.1), and merged in form with dō, "to give".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: condō, condere
- Say it: condō, condere, once more
- Say it: say condō, condere
- Recall: say the Latin for to deceive, then the Latin for to endure, then say condō, condere again

Before you move on

What does condō, condere mean? ("To found; to hide away".) Say it once more.

171.4 creō, creāre — to create, to elect

Before the new one: say the Latin for to endure, then the Latin for to found; to hide away.

You'll want to know: creō, creāre

creō, creāre — "to create, to elect".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

creō is inherited from Proto-Italic krēāō*, "to make grow", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ker-*, "to grow" (EtymDB 2.1); crēscō, "to grow", is its partner. English create comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: creō, creāre
- Say it: creō, creāre, once more
- Say it: say creō, creāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to endure, then the Latin for to found; to hide away, then say creō, creāre again

Before you move on

What does creō, creāre mean? ("To create, to elect".) Say it once more.

171.5 crēdō, crēdere — to believe, to trust

Before the new one: say the Latin for to found; to hide away, then the Latin for to create.

You'll want to know: crēdō, crēdere

crēdō, crēdere — "to believe, to trust".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crēdō is inherited, usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European phrase kred dheh1-, "to put one's heart" (EtymDB 2.1), from kerd-, "heart", and dheh1-*, "to put".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crēdō, crēdere
- Say it: crēdō, crēdere, once more
- Say it: say crēdō, crēdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to found; to hide away, then the Latin for to create, then say crēdō, crēdere again

Before you move on

What does crēdō, crēdere mean? ("To believe, to trust".) Say it once more.

Chapter 172

To sow, To reap, To hunt, To go fishing, To deny

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to sow, to reap, to hunt, to go fishing and to deny.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 172: I can say to sow, to reap, to hunt, to go fishing and to deny.

172.1 serō, serere — to sow, to plant

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to create, then the Latin for to believe.

You'll want to know: serō, serere

serō, serere — "to sow, to plant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

serō, "to sow", is inherited from Proto-Italic sizō*, "I sow", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European si-sh1-*, "to sow", a doubled form of the root (EtymDB 2.1); sēmen, "seed", has the same root. It is a different word from serō, "to join, to bind".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: serō, serere
- Say it: serō, serere, once more
- Say it: say serō, serere
- Recall: say the Latin for to create, then the Latin for to believe, then say serō, serere again

Before you move on

What does serō, serere mean? ("To sow, to plant".) Say it once more.

172.2 metō, metere — to reap, to harvest

Before the new one: say the Latin for to believe, then the Latin for to sow.

You'll want to know: metō, metere

metō, metere — "to reap, to harvest".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

metō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2meh1-*, "to mow, to reap" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek amaō, "to reap", and English mow are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: metō, metere
- Say it: metō, metere, once more
- Say it: say metō, metere

- Recall: say the Latin for to believe, then the Latin for to sow, then say metō, metere again

Before you move on

What does metō, metere mean? (“To reap, to harvest”.) Say it once more.

172.3 vēnor, vēnārī — to hunt

Before the new one: say the Latin for to sow, then the Latin for to reap.

You’ll want to know: vēnor, vēnārī

vēnor, vēnārī — “to hunt”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēnor has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records proposed links with Proto-Indo-European wenh1-, “to strive for, to desire”, and weyh1-, “to pursue”. English venison, “hunted meat”, comes from it through French.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vēnor, vēnārī
- Say it: vēnor, vēnārī, once more
- Say it: say vēnor, vēnārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to sow, then the Latin for to reap, then say vēnor, vēnārī again

Before you move on

What does vēnor, vēnārī mean? (“To hunt”.) Say it once more.

172.4 piscor, piscārī — to go fishing

Before the new one: say the Latin for to reap, then the Latin for to hunt.

You'll want to know: piscor, piscārī

piscor, piscārī — "to go fishing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

piscor is the verb made from piscis, "a fish" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pisk-*, "fish" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: piscor, piscārī
- Say it: piscor, piscārī, once more
- Say it: say piscor, piscārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to reap, then the Latin for to hunt, then say piscor, piscārī again

Before you move on

What does piscor, piscārī mean? ("To go fishing".) Say it once more.

172.5 negō, negāre — to deny, to say no

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hunt, then the Latin for to go fishing.

You'll want to know: negō, negāre

negō, negāre — "to deny, to say no".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

negō is built on the negative ne, "not", perhaps through nec, "and not"; how the verb was formed is uncertain. English negative and deny come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: negō, negāre
- Say it: negō, negāre, once more
- Say it: say negō, negāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to hunt, then the Latin for to go fishing, then say negō, negāre again

Before you move on

What does negō, negāre mean? ("To deny, to say no".) Say it once more.

Chapter 173

Health, Brain, Lung, Liver, Kidney

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say health, the brain, a lung, the liver and a kidney.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 173: I can say health, the brain, a lung, the liver and a kidney.

173.1 valētūdō, valētūdinis — health

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to go fishing, then the Latin for to deny.

You'll want to know: valētūdō, valētūdinis

valētūdō, valētūdinis — "health".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

valētūdō is built on valeō, "to be strong, to be well" (Lewis & Short), with -tūdō, an ending for a state: one's state of health, good or bad.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: valētūdō, valētūdinis
- Say it: valētūdō, valētūdinis, once more
- Say it: say valētūdō, valētūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for to go fishing, then the Latin for to deny, then say valētūdō, valētūdinis again

Before you move on

What does valētūdō, valētūdinis mean? ("Health".) Say it once more.

173.2 cerebrum, cerebrī — the brain

Before the new one: say the Latin for to deny, then the Latin for health.

You'll want to know: cerebrum, cerebrī

cerebrum, cerebrī — "the brain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cerebrum is inherited from Proto-Italic kerazrom*, "brain", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kerh2s-*, "head" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek karē, "head", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cerebrum, cerebrī
- Say it: cerebrum, cerebrī, once more
- Say it: say cerebrum, cerebrī

- Recall: say the Latin for to deny, then the Latin for health, then say cerebrum, cerebrī again

Before you move on

What does cerebrum, cerebrī mean? (“The brain”.) Say it once more.

173.3 pulmō, pulmōnis — a lung

Before the new one: say the Latin for health, then the Latin for the brain.

You’ll want to know: pulmō, pulmōnis

pulmō, pulmōnis — “a lung”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulmō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European plewmō*, “lung” (EtymDB 2.1); Greek pleumōn, “lung”, is a cousin (Lewis & Short), later reshaped as pneumōn, “lung”, by a link with pneō, “to breathe”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pulmō, pulmōnis
- Say it: pulmō, pulmōnis, once more
- Say it: say pulmō, pulmōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for health, then the Latin for the brain, then say pulmō, pulmōnis again

Before you move on

What does pulmō, pulmōnis mean? (“A lung”.) Say it once more.

173.4 iecur, iecoris — the liver

Before the new one: say the Latin for the brain, then the Latin for a lung.

You'll want to know: iecur, iecoris

iecur, iecoris — "the liver".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iecur is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European Hyekwr*, "liver" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hēpar, "liver", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iecur, iecoris
- Say it: iecur, iecoris, once more
- Say it: say iecur, iecoris
- Recall: say the Latin for the brain, then the Latin for a lung, then say iecur, iecoris again

Before you move on

What does iecur, iecoris mean? ("The liver".) Say it once more.

173.5 rēn, rēnis — a kidney

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lung, then the Latin for the liver.

You'll want to know: rēn, rēnis

rēn, rēnis — "a kidney".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēn is probably inherited from Proto-Italic hrēn*, "kidney" (EtymDB 2.1), but its deeper origin is unknown. It is mostly used in the plural, rēnēs, "the kidneys".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēn, rēnis
- Say it: rēn, rēnis, once more
- Say it: say rēn, rēnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a lung, then the Latin for the liver, then say rēn, rēnis again

Before you move on

What does rēn, rēnis mean? ("A kidney".) Say it once more.

173.6 Words from chapters 165-168 — a first pass

Say the words for the liver and a kidney.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to light, to put out, to jump, to smile, to shout
- to approve, to mark, to discuss, to promise, to allow
- to burn, to set on fire, to throw away, to calculate, to knock
- to fold, to own, to make ready in advance, to lend, to propose

Before you move on

To light? (accendō, accendere.) To put out? (exstinguō, exstinguere.) To jump? (saliō, salīre.) To smile? (subrīdeō, subrīdēre.) To shout? (clāmō, clāmāre.) To approve? (probō, probāre.) To mark? (signō, signāre.) To discuss? (disputō, disputāre.) To promise? (prōmittō, prōmittere.) To allow? (permittō, permittere.) To burn? (ārdeō, ārdēre.) To set on fire? (incendō, incendere.) To throw away? (abiciō, abicere.) To calculate? (computō, computāre.) To knock? (pulsō, pulsāre.) To fold? (plicō, plicāre.) To own? (possideō, possidēre.) To make ready in advance? (praeparō, praeparāre.) To lend? (commodō, commodāre.) To propose? (prōpōnō, prōpōnere.)

173.7 Words from chapters 169-173 — a second pass

Say the words for to kill and to get used to.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to kill, to get used to, to make haste, to move back, to approach
- to slip, to lighten, to admire, to suspect, to press
- to deceive, to endure, to found; to hide away, to create, to believe
- to sow, to reap, to hunt, to go fishing, to deny
- health, the brain, a lung, the liver, a kidney

Before you move on

To kill? (interficiō, interficere.) To get used to? (cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere.) To make haste? (properō, properāre.) To move back? (recēdō, recēdere.) To approach? (appropinquō, appropinquāre.) To slip? (lābor, lābī.) To lighten? (levō, levāre.) To admire? (admīror, admīrārī.) To suspect?

(suspicor, suspicārī.) To press? (premō, premere.) To deceive? (fallō, fallere.) To endure? (tolerō, tolerāre.) To found; to hide away? (condō, condere.) To create? (creō, creāre.) To believe? (crēdō, crēdere.) To sow? (serō, serere.) To reap? (metō, metere.) To hunt? (vēnor, vēnārī.) To go fishing? (piscor, piscārī.) To deny? (negō, negāre.) Health? (valētūdō, valētūdinis.) The brain? (cerebrum, cerebrī.) A lung? (pulmō, pulmōnis.) The liver? (iecur, iecoris.) A kidney? (rēn, rēnis.)

Chapter 174

Patience, Tear, Laugh, Voice, Mind

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say patience, a tear, a laugh, a voice and mind.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 174: I can say patience, a tear, a laugh, a voice and mind.

174.1 patientia, patientiae — patience

> Before the new one: say the Latin for the liver, then the Latin for a kidney.

You'll want to know: patientia, patientiae

patientia, patientiae — "patience".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patientia is built on patior, "to suffer" (Lewis & Short), through patiēns, "enduring", with -ia, an ending for a quality.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patientia, patientiae
- Say it: patientia, patientiae, once more
- Say it: say patientia, patientiae
- Recall: say the Latin for the liver, then the Latin for a kidney, then say patientia, patientiae again

Before you move on

What does patientia, patientiae mean? ("Patience".) Say it once more.

174.2 lacrima, lacrimae — a tear

Before the new one: say the Latin for a kidney, then the Latin for patience.

You'll want to know: lacrima, lacrimae

lacrima, lacrimae — "a tear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lacrima is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dakru-*, "tear" (EtymDB 2.1). Old Latin had dacruma with d (Lewis & Short); Greek dakry, "tear", and English tear are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lacrima, lacrimae
- Say it: lacrima, lacrimae, once more
- Say it: say lacrima, lacrimae

- Recall: say the Latin for a kidney, then the Latin for patience, then say lacrima, lacrimae again

Before you move on

What does lacrima, lacrimae mean? ("A tear".) Say it once more.

174.3 rīsus, rīsūs — a laugh

Before the new one: say the Latin for patience, then the Latin for a tear.

You'll want to know: rīsus, rīsūs

rīsus, rīsūs — "a laugh".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rīsus is built on rīdeō, "to laugh", from its stem rīs-: a laughing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rīsus, rīsūs
- Say it: rīsus, rīsūs, once more
- Say it: say rīsus, rīsūs
- Recall: say the Latin for patience, then the Latin for a tear, then say rīsus, rīsūs again

Before you move on

What does rīsus, rīsūs mean? ("A laugh".) Say it once more.

174.4 vōx, vōcis — a voice

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tear, then the Latin for a laugh.

You'll want to know: vōx, vōcis

vōx, vōcis — "a voice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vōx is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wōkws*, "voice", from wekw-*, "to speak" (EtymDB 2.1); vocō, "to call", is its verb (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vōx, vōcis
- Say it: vōx, vōcis, once more
- Say it: say vōx, vōcis
- Recall: say the Latin for a tear, then the Latin for a laugh, then say vōx, vōcis again

Before you move on

What does vōx, vōcis mean? ("A voice".) Say it once more.

174.5 animus, animī — mind, spirit

Before the new one: say the Latin for a laugh, then the Latin for a voice.

You'll want to know: animus, animī

animus, animī — "mind, spirit".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children animus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2enh1mos*, "breath", from h2enh1-*, "to breathe" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek anemos, "wind", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). anima, "breath, soul", is its partner.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: animus, animī
- Say it: animus, animī, once more
- Say it: say animus, animī
- Recall: say the Latin for a laugh, then the Latin for a voice, then say animus, animī again

Before you move on

What does animus, animī mean? ("Mind, spirit".) Say it once more.

Chapter 175

At last, From now on, Still, Suddenly, Until

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say at last, from now on, still, suddenly and until.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 175: I can say at last, from now on, still, suddenly and until.

175.1 tandem — at last

Before the new one: say the Latin for a voice, then the Latin for mind.

You'll want to know: tandem tandem — "at last".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tandem is tam, "so far", with -dem, a pointing ending (Lewis & Short): so far and no further, at last.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tandem
- Say it: tandem, once more
- Say it: say tandem
- Recall: say the Latin for a voice, then the Latin for mind, then say tandem again

Before you move on

What does tandem mean? ("At last".) Say it once more.

175.2 posthāc — from now on

Before the new one: say the Latin for mind, then the Latin for at last.

You'll want to know: posthāc

posthāc — "from now on".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

posthāc is post, "after", with hāc, "this" (Lewis & Short): after this time.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: posthāc
- Say it: posthāc, once more
- Say it: say posthāc
- Recall: say the Latin for mind, then the Latin for at last, then say posthāc again

Before you move on

What does posthāc mean? ("From now on".) Say it once more.

175.3 adhūc — still, until now

Before the new one: say the Latin for at last, then the Latin for from now on.

You'll want to know: adhūc

adhūc — "still, until now".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

adhūc is ad, "up to", with hūc, "to here" (Lewis & Short): up to this point, first in space, then in time.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: adhūc
- Say it: adhūc, once more
- Say it: say adhūc
- Recall: say the Latin for at last, then the Latin for from now on, then say adhūc again

Before you move on

What does adhūc mean? ("Still, until now".) Say it once more.

175.4 subitō — suddenly

Before the new one: say the Latin for from now on, then the Latin for still.

You'll want to know: subitō

subitō — "suddenly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

subitō comes from the participle of subeō, "to come up from under" (Lewis & Short), subitus, "sudden": coming up unseen.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: subitō
- Say it: subitō, once more
- Say it: say subitō
- Recall: say the Latin for from now on, then the Latin for still, then say subitō again

Before you move on

What does subitō mean? ("Suddenly".) Say it once more.

175.5 dōnec — until; while

Before the new one: say the Latin for still, then the Latin for suddenly.

You'll want to know: dōnec

dōnec — "until; while".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dōnec comes from older dōnicum (Lewis & Short), but how that was formed is uncertain; Lewis & Short suggest an old word for "day" with cum, "when".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dōnec
- Say it: dōnec, once more
- Say it: say dōnec
- Recall: say the Latin for still, then the Latin for suddenly, then say dōnec again

Before you move on

What does dōnec mean? ("Until; while".) Say it once more.

Chapter 176

Earlier, Every year, Now and then, Once, Twice

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say earlier, every year, now and then, once and twice.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 176: I can say earlier, every year, now and then, once and twice.

176.1 prius — earlier, sooner

> Before the new one: say the Latin for suddenly, then the Latin for until; while.

You'll want to know: prius

prius — "earlier, sooner".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prius is the neuter of prior, "former, earlier" (Lewis & Short), used as an adverb. prior is a comparative built on the root of prō, "before".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prius
- Say it: prius, once more
- Say it: say prius
- Recall: say the Latin for suddenly, then the Latin for until; while, then say prius again

Before you move on

What does prius mean? ("Earlier, sooner".) Say it once more.

176.2 quotannīs — every year

Before the new one: say the Latin for until; while, then the Latin for earlier.

You'll want to know: quotannīs

quotannīs — "every year".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quotannīs is quot, "as many as", with annīs, "years" (EtymDB 2.1): in as many years as there are.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quotannīs
- Say it: quotannīs, once more
- Say it: say quotannīs
- Recall: say the Latin for until; while, then the Latin for earlier, then say quotannīs again

Before you move on

What does quotannīs mean? (“Every year”.) Say it once more.

176.3 nōnnumquam — now and then

Before the new one: say the Latin for earlier, then the Latin for every year.

You’ll want to know: nōnnumquam

nōnnumquam — “now and then”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōnnumquam is nōn, “not”, with numquam, “never” (Lewis & Short): not never, so sometimes.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nōnnumquam
- Say it: nōnnumquam, once more
- Say it: say nōnnumquam
- Recall: say the Latin for earlier, then the Latin for every year, then say nōnnumquam again

Before you move on

What does nōnnumquam mean? (“Now and then”.) Say it once more.

176.4 semel — once, a single time

Before the new one: say the Latin for every year, then the Latin for now and then.

You'll want to know: semel

semel — "once, a single time".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

semel is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sm-meh1lom*, "one time" (EtymDB 2.1), built on the root for "one"; simplex, "simple", and singulus, "single", share the root (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: semel
- Say it: semel, once more
- Say it: say semel
- Recall: say the Latin for every year, then the Latin for now and then, then say semel again

Before you move on

What does semel mean? ("Once, a single time".) Say it once more.

176.5 bis — twice

Before the new one: say the Latin for now and then, then the Latin for once.

You'll want to know: bis

bis — "twice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bis comes from older duis, "two times" (Lewis & Short), built on duo, "two"; Latin turned an initial dw into b, as in bellum, "war", from older duellum.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bis
- Say it: bis, once more
- Say it: say bis
- Recall: say the Latin for now and then, then the Latin for once, then say bis again

Before you move on

What does bis mean? ("Twice".) Say it once more.

Chapter 177

Far, Elsewhere, Over there, Within, Out of doors

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say far, elsewhere, over there, within and out of doors.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 177: I can say far, elsewhere, over there, within and out of doors.

177.1 longē — far, by far

> Before the new one: say the Latin for once, then the Latin for twice.

You'll want to know: longē

longē — "far, by far".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

longē is the adverb of longus, "long" (Lewis & Short), with -ē, the adverb ending: at length, far off, and so by far.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: longē
- Say it: longē, once more
- Say it: say longē
- Recall: say the Latin for once, then the Latin for twice, then say longē again

Before you move on

What does longē mean? ("Far, by far".) Say it once more.

177.2 alibī — elsewhere

Before the new one: say the Latin for twice, then the Latin for far.

You'll want to know: alibī

alibī — "elsewhere".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

alibī is contracted from alius, "other", and ibī, "there" (Lewis & Short): in another place. English alibi is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: alibī
- Say it: alibī, once more
- Say it: say alibī
- Recall: say the Latin for twice, then the Latin for far, then say alibī again

Before you move on

What does alibī mean? ("Elsewhere".) Say it once more.

177.3 illīc — over there

Before the new one: say the Latin for far, then the Latin for elsewhere.

You'll want to know: illīc

illīc — "over there".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

illīc is ille, "that", with the pointing particle -ce, "here" (Lewis & Short): there, at that place.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: illīc
- Say it: illīc, once more
- Say it: say illīc
- Recall: say the Latin for far, then the Latin for elsewhere, then say illīc again

Before you move on

What does illīc mean? ("Over there".) Say it once more.

177.4 intus — within, indoors

Before the new one: say the Latin for elsewhere, then the Latin for over there.

You'll want to know: intus

intus — "within, indoors".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

intus is in, "in", with -tus, an old ending meaning "from" (Lewis & Short); Greek entos, "within", is built the same way.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: intus
- Say it: intus, once more
- Say it: say intus
- Recall: say the Latin for elsewhere, then the Latin for over there, then say intus again

Before you move on

What does intus mean? ("Within, indoors".) Say it once more.

177.5 forīs — out of doors

Before the new one: say the Latin for over there, then the Latin for within.

You'll want to know: forīs

forīs — "out of doors".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

forīs is an old case form of foris, "a door" (Lewis & Short): at the doors, so outside. The word for door is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhwer-*, "door" (EtymDB 2.1), and English door is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: forīs
- Say it: forīs, once more
- Say it: say forīs
- Recall: say the Latin for over there, then the Latin for within, then say forīs again

Before you move on

What does forīs mean? ("Out of doors".) Say it once more.

Chapter 178

Therefore, However, Although, Even if, Unless

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say therefore, however, although, even if and unless.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 178: I can say therefore, however, although, even if and unless.

178.1 igitur — therefore

Before the new one: say the Latin for within, then the Latin for out of doors.

You'll want to know: igitur

igitur — "therefore".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

igitur has no sure origin; Lewis & Short build it from the pronoun stem of is, "he, that", with old adverb endings, but this is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: igitur
- Say it: igitur, once more
- Say it: say igitur
- Recall: say the Latin for within, then the Latin for out of doors, then say igitur again

Before you move on

What does igitur mean? ("Therefore".) Say it once more.

178.2 tamen — however, nevertheless

Before the new one: say the Latin for out of doors, then the Latin for therefore.

You'll want to know: tamen

tamen — "however, nevertheless".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tamen probably begins with tam, "so" (Lewis & Short), but the ending is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tamen
- Say it: tamen, once more
- Say it: say tamen
- Recall: say the Latin for out of doors, then the Latin for therefore, then say tamen again

Before you move on

What does tamen mean? (“However, nevertheless”.) Say it once more.

178.3 quamquam — although

Before the new one: say the Latin for therefore, then the Latin for however.

You’ll want to know: quamquam

quamquam — “although”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quamquam is quam, “how, as”, doubled (Lewis & Short): however much, so although.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quamquam
- Say it: quamquam, once more
- Say it: say quamquam
- Recall: say the Latin for therefore, then the Latin for however, then say quamquam again

Before you move on

What does quamquam mean? (“Although”.) Say it once more.

178.4 etsī — even if

Before the new one: say the Latin for however, then the Latin for although.

You'll want to know: etsī

etsī — "even if".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

etsī is et, "even", with sī, "if" (EtymDB 2.1): even if.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: etsī
- Say it: etsī, once more
- Say it: say etsī
- Recall: say the Latin for however, then the Latin for although, then say etsī again

Before you move on

What does etsī mean? ("Even if".) Say it once more.

178.5 nisi — unless, if not

Before the new one: say the Latin for although, then the Latin for even if.

You'll want to know: nisi

nisi — "unless, if not".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nisi is sī, "if" (EtymDB 2.1), with the negative ne, "not", in front: if not.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nisi
- Say it: nisi, once more
- Say it: say nisi
- Recall: say the Latin for although, then the Latin for even if, then say nisi again

Before you move on

What does nisi mean? (“Unless, if not”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 179

Especially, Rather, Most, Very, Quite

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say especially, rather, most, very and quite.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 179: I can say especially, rather, most, very and quite.

179.1 praesertim — especially

Before the new one: say the Latin for even if, then the Latin for unless.

You'll want to know: praesertim

praesertim — "especially".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praesertim is built on praeserō, "to put in front of a row" (Lewis & Short), from prae, "before", and serō, "to join, to line up", with -tim, an adverb ending: placed first, so especially.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: praesertim
- Say it: praesertim, once more
- Say it: say praesertim
- Recall: say the Latin for even if, then the Latin for unless, then say praesertim again

Before you move on

What does praesertim mean? ("Especially".) Say it once more.

179.2 potius — rather

Before the new one: say the Latin for unless, then the Latin for especially.

You'll want to know: potius

potius — "rather".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

potius is the comparative adverb of potis, "able, powerful" (Lewis & Short): more powerfully, so rather.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: potius
- Say it: potius, once more
- Say it: say potius
- Recall: say the Latin for unless, then the Latin for especially, then say potius again

Before you move on

What does potius mean? (“Rather”.) Say it once more.

179.3 maximē — most, especially

Before the new one: say the Latin for especially, then the Latin for rather.

You’ll want to know: maximē

maximē — “most, especially”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maximē is the adverb of the superlative of magnus, “big” (Lewis & Short): maximus, “greatest”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: maximē
- Say it: maximē, once more
- Say it: say maximē
- Recall: say the Latin for especially, then the Latin for rather, then say maximē again

Before you move on

What does maximē mean? (“Most, especially”.) Say it once more.

179.4 valdē — very

Before the new one: say the Latin for rather, then the Latin for most.

You'll want to know: valdē

valdē — "very".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

valdē is a shortened adverb of validus, "strong" (Lewis & Short): strongly, so very.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: valdē
- Say it: valdē, once more
- Say it: say valdē
- Recall: say the Latin for rather, then the Latin for most, then say valdē again

Before you move on

What does valdē mean? ("Very".) Say it once more.

179.5 admodum — quite, very

Before the new one: say the Latin for most, then the Latin for very.

You'll want to know: admodum

admodum — "quite, very".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

admodum is ad, "up to", with modum, "the measure" (Lewis & Short): up to the full measure, so quite.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: admodum
- Say it: admodum, once more
- Say it: say admodum
- Recall: say the Latin for most, then the Latin for very, then say admodum again

Before you move on

What does admodum mean? ("Quite, very".) Say it once more.

Chapter 180

Convenient, Polite, Of the country, Cheerful, Shy

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say convenient, polite, of the country, cheerful and shy.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 180: I can say convenient, polite, of the country, cheerful and shy.

180.1 commodus, commoda, commodum — convenient, comfortable

Before the new one: say the Latin for very, then the Latin for quite.

You'll want to know: commodus, commoda, commodum

commodus, commoda, commodum — "convenient, comfortable".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commodus is com-, "with", and modus, "measure" (Lewis & Short): having its due measure, so fitting.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: commodus, commoda, commodum
- Say it: commodus, commoda, commodum, once more
- Say it: say commodus, commoda, commodum
- Recall: say the Latin for very, then the Latin for quite, then say commodus, commoda, commodum again

Before you move on

What does commodus, commoda, commodum mean? ("Convenient, comfortable".) Say it once more.

180.2 urbānus, urbāna, urbānum — polite, of the city

Before the new one: say the Latin for quite, then the Latin for convenient.

You'll want to know: urbānus, urbāna, urbānum

urbānus, urbāna, urbānum — "polite, of the city".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

urbānus is built on urbs, "a city" (Lewis & Short), with -ānus, "belonging to": of the city, then polished, witty. English urbane and urban both come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: urbānus, urbāna, urbānum
- Say it: urbānus, urbāna, urbānum, once more
- Say it: say urbānus, urbāna, urbānum

- Recall: say the Latin for quite, then the Latin for convenient, then say urbānus, urbāna, urbānum again

Before you move on

What does urbānus, urbāna, urbānum mean? ("Polite, of the city".) Say it once more.

180.3 rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum — of the country, boorish

Before the new one: say the Latin for convenient, then the Latin for polite.

You'll want to know: rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum

rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum — "of the country, boorish".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rūsticus is built on rūs, "the countryside" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European Hrewos*, "open space, field" (EtymDB 2.1). English room is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum
- Say it: rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum, once more
- Say it: say rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum
- Recall: say the Latin for convenient, then the Latin for polite, then say rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum again

Before you move on

What does rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum mean? ("Of the country, boorish".) Say it once more.

180.4 hilaris, hilare — cheerful

Before the new one: say the Latin for polite, then the Latin for of the country.

You'll want to know: hilaris, hilare

hilaris, hilare — "cheerful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hilaris was borrowed from Greek hilaros, "cheerful" (Lewis & Short), from hilaos, "gracious, kindly" (EtymDB 2.1). English hilarious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hilaris, hilare
- Say it: hilaris, hilare, once more
- Say it: say hilaris, hilare
- Recall: say the Latin for polite, then the Latin for of the country, then say hilaris, hilare again

Before you move on

What does hilaris, hilare mean? ("Cheerful".) Say it once more.

180.5 verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum — shy, modest

Before the new one: say the Latin for of the country, then the Latin for cheerful.

You'll want to know: verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum

verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum — "shy, modest".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

verēcundus is built on vereor, "to stand in awe of, to fear" (Lewis & Short), with -cundus, an ending for a lasting disposition. vereor is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wer-*, "to guard, to protect" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum
- Say it: verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum, once more
- Say it: say verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum
- Recall: say the Latin for of the country, then the Latin for cheerful, then say verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum again

Before you move on

What does verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum mean? ("Shy, modest".) Say it once more.

Chapter 181

Free of charge, Fresh, Raw, Cooked, Distant

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say free of charge, fresh, raw, cooked and distant.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 181: I can say free of charge, fresh, raw, cooked and distant.

181.1 grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum — free of charge

> Before the new one: say the Latin for cheerful, then the Latin for shy.

You'll want to know: grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum

grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum — "free of charge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

grātuītus is built on grātia, "favour" (Lewis & Short): done as a favour, without pay. English gratuitous and gratis belong to the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum
- Say it: grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum, once more
- Say it: say grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum
- Recall: say the Latin for cheerful, then the Latin for shy, then say grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum again

Before you move on

What does grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum mean? ("Free of charge".) Say it once more.

181.2 recēns, recentis — fresh, recent

Before the new one: say the Latin for shy, then the Latin for free of charge.

You'll want to know: recēns, recentis

recēns, recentis — "fresh, recent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

recēns has no sure origin; Greek kainos, "new", is often compared (Lewis & Short), but the details are uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: recēns, recentis
- Say it: recēns, recentis, once more
- Say it: say recēns, recentis
- Recall: say the Latin for shy, then the Latin for free of charge, then say recēns, recentis again

Before you move on

What does recēns, recentis mean? (“Fresh, recent”.) Say it once more.

181.3 crūdus, crūda, crūdum — raw

Before the new one: say the Latin for free of charge, then the Latin for fresh.

You’ll want to know: crūdus, crūda, crūdum

crūdus, crūda, crūdum — “raw”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crūdus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European krewh2-*, “raw flesh, blood” (EtymDB 2.1); cruor, “blood”, is its cousin in Latin (Lewis & Short), and English raw is a cousin too.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crūdus, crūda, crūdum
- Say it: crūdus, crūda, crūdum, once more
- Say it: say crūdus, crūda, crūdum
- Recall: say the Latin for free of charge, then the Latin for fresh, then say crūdus, crūda, crūdum again

Before you move on

What does crūdus, crūda, crūdum mean? (“Raw”.) Say it once more.

181.4 coctus, cocta, coctum — cooked

Before the new one: say the Latin for fresh, then the Latin for raw.

You'll want to know: coctus, cocta, coctum

coctus, cocta, coctum — "cooked".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coctus is the past participle of coquō, "to cook" (Lewis & Short): cooked.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: coctus, cocta, coctum
- Say it: coctus, cocta, coctum, once more
- Say it: say coctus, cocta, coctum
- Recall: say the Latin for fresh, then the Latin for raw, then say coctus, cocta, coctum again

Before you move on

What does coctus, cocta, coctum mean? ("Cooked".) Say it once more.

181.5 longinquus, longinqua, longinquum — distant

Before the new one: say the Latin for raw, then the Latin for cooked.

You'll want to know: longinquus, longinqua, longinquum

longinquus, longinqua, longinquum — "distant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

longinquus is built on longus, "long" (Lewis & Short), with an ending also found in propinquus, "near": far off.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: longinquus, longinqua, longinquum
- Say it: longinquus, longinqua, longinquum, once more
- Say it: say longinquus, longinqua, longinquum
- Recall: say the Latin for raw, then the Latin for cooked, then say longinquus, longinqua, longinquum again

Before you move on

What does longinquus, longinqua, longinquum mean? ("Distant".) Say it once more.

Chapter 182

Public, Private, Common, Hollow, Heavy

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say public, private, common, hollow and heavy.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 182: I can say public, private, common, hollow and heavy.

182.1 pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum — public

> Before the new one: say the Latin for cooked, then the Latin for distant.

You'll want to know: pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum

pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum — "public".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūblicus comes from older poplicus, "of the people", as inscriptions write it (Lewis & Short), built on populus, "the people"; its spelling was probably influenced by pūbēs, "the grown men".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum
- Say it: pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum, once more
- Say it: say pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum
- Recall: say the Latin for cooked, then the Latin for distant, then say pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum again

Before you move on

What does pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum mean? ("Public".) Say it once more.

182.2 prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum — private

Before the new one: say the Latin for distant, then the Latin for public.

You'll want to know: prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum

prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum — "private".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīvātus is the past participle of prīvō, "to set apart, to deprive" (Lewis & Short), from prīvus, "single, one's own": set apart from the public.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum
- Say it: prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum, once more
- Say it: say prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum

- Recall: say the Latin for distant, then the Latin for public, then say prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum again

Before you move on

What does prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum mean? ("Private".) Say it once more.

182.3 commūnis, commūne — common, shared

Before the new one: say the Latin for public, then the Latin for private.

You'll want to know: commūnis, commūne

commūnis, commūne — "common, shared".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commūnis is inherited; Old Latin wrote comoinis, and it is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kom-moyni-, "held in common", from mey-, "to exchange" (EtymDB 2.1). mūnus, "a duty, a gift", has the same root (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: commūnis, commūne
- Say it: commūnis, commūne, once more
- Say it: say commūnis, commūne
- Recall: say the Latin for public, then the Latin for private, then say commūnis, commūne again

Before you move on

What does commūnis, commūne mean? ("Common, shared".) Say it once more.

182.4 inānis, ināne — hollow, vain

Before the new one: say the Latin for private, then the Latin for common.

You'll want to know: inānis, ināne

inānis, ināne — "hollow, vain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inānis has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English inane comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inānis, ināne
- Say it: inānis, ināne, once more
- Say it: say inānis, ināne
- Recall: say the Latin for private, then the Latin for common, then say inānis, ināne again

Before you move on

What does inānis, ināne mean? ("Hollow, vain".) Say it once more.

182.5 gravis, grave — heavy, serious

Before the new one: say the Latin for common, then the Latin for hollow.

You'll want to know: gravis, grave

gravis, grave — "heavy, serious".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gravis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwreh2us*, "heavy" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek barys, "heavy", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English gravity and grave, "serious", come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gravis, grave
- Say it: gravis, grave, once more
- Say it: say gravis, grave
- Recall: say the Latin for common, then the Latin for hollow, then say gravis, grave again

Before you move on

What does gravis, grave mean? ("Heavy, serious".) Say it once more.

182.6 Words from chapters 174-177 — a first pass

Say the words for hollow and heavy.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- patience, a tear, a laugh, a voice, mind
- at last, from now on, still, suddenly, until; while
- earlier, every year, now and then, once, twice
- far, elsewhere, over there, within, out of doors

Before you move on

Patience? (patientia, patientiae.) A tear? (lacrima, lacrimae.) A laugh? (rīsus, rīsūs.) A voice? (vōx, vōcis.) Mind? (animus, animī.) At last? (tandem.) From now on? (posthāc.) Still? (adhūc.) Suddenly? (subitō.) Until; while? (dōnec.) Earlier? (prius.) Every year? (quotannīs.) Now and then? (nōnnumquam.) Once? (semel.) Twice? (bis.) Far? (longē.) Elsewhere? (alibī.) Over there? (illīc.) Within? (intus.) Out of doors? (forīs.)

182.7 Words from chapters 178-182 — a second pass

Say the words for therefore and however.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- therefore, however, although, even if, unless
- especially, rather, most, very, quite
- convenient, polite, of the country, cheerful, shy
- free of charge, fresh, raw, cooked, distant
- public, private, common, hollow, heavy

Before you move on

Therefore? (igitur.) However? (tamen.) Although? (quamquam.) Even if? (etsī.) Unless? (nisi.) Especially? (praesertim.) Rather? (potius.) Most? (maximē.) Very? (valdē.) Quite? (admodum.) Convenient? (commodus, commoda, commodum.) Polite? (urbānus, urbāna, urbānum.) Of the country? (rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum.) Cheerful? (hilaris, hilare.) Shy? (verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum.) Free of charge? (grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum.) Fresh? (recēns, recentis.) Raw? (crūdus, crūda, crūdum.) Cooked? (coctus, cocta, coctum.) Distant? (longinquus, longinqua, longinquum.) Public? (pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum.) Private? (prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum.) Common? (commūnis, commūne.) Hollow? (inānis, ināne.) Heavy? (gravis, grave.)

Chapter 183

Known, Famous, Honourable, Middle, Highest

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say known, famous, honourable, middle and highest.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 183: I can say known, famous, honourable, middle and highest.

183.1 nōtus, nōta, nōtum — known, famous

> Before the new one: say the Latin for hollow, vain, then the Latin for heavy, serious.

You'll want to know: nōtus, nōta, nōtum

nōtus, nōta, nōtum — "known, famous".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōtus is the past participle of nōscō, "to get to know" (Lewis & Short): known. nōscō, older gnōscō, is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gneh3-*, "to know".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nōtus, nōta, nōtum
- Say it: nōtus, nōta, nōtum, once more
- Say it: say nōtus, nōta, nōtum
- Recall: say the Latin for hollow, vain, then the Latin for heavy, serious, then say nōtus, nōta, nōtum again

Before you move on

What does nōtus, nōta, nōtum mean? ("Known, famous".) Say it once more.

183.2 celeber, celebris, celebre — famous, crowded

Before the new one: say the Latin for heavy, serious, then the Latin for known.

You'll want to know: celeber, celebris, celebre

celeber, celebris, celebre — "famous, crowded".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

celeber has no sure origin; it first meant "crowded, much visited", and Lewis & Short's comparison with a root for hearing is uncertain. English celebrate comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: celeber, celebris, celebre
- Say it: celeber, celebris, celebre, once more
- Say it: say celeber, celebris, celebre

- Recall: say the Latin for heavy, serious, then the Latin for known, then say celeber, celebris, celebre again

Before you move on

What does celeber, celebris, celebre mean? ("Famous, crowded".) Say it once more.

183.3 honestus, honesta, honestum — honourable

Before the new one: say the Latin for known, then the Latin for famous.

You'll want to know: honestus, honesta, honestum

honestus, honesta, honestum — "honourable".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

honestus is built on honōs, "honour, office" (Lewis & Short), the older form of honor: endowed with honour. Where honōs comes from is unknown.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: honestus, honesta, honestum
- Say it: honestus, honesta, honestum, once more
- Say it: say honestus, honesta, honestum
- Recall: say the Latin for known, then the Latin for famous, then say honestus, honesta, honestum again

Before you move on

What does honestus, honesta, honestum mean? ("Honourable".) Say it once more.

183.4 medius, media, medium — middle, the middle of

Before the new one: say the Latin for famous, then the Latin for honourable.

You'll want to know: medius, media, medium

medius, media, medium — "middle, the middle of".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

medius is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European medhyos*, "middle" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek mesos, "middle", and English mid are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: medius, media, medium
- Say it: medius, media, medium, once more
- Say it: say medius, media, medium
- Recall: say the Latin for famous, then the Latin for honourable, then say medius, media, medium again

Before you move on

What does medius, media, medium mean? ("Middle, the middle of".) Say it once more.

183.5 summus, summa, summum — highest, the top of

Before the new one: say the Latin for honourable, then the Latin for middle.

You'll want to know: summus, summa, summum

summus, summa, summum — "highest, the top of".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

summus is the superlative belonging to superus, "upper" (Lewis & Short), from an older supimos*, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)up-*, "up, over" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: summus, summa, summum
- Say it: summus, summa, summum, once more
- Say it: say summus, summa, summum
- Recall: say the Latin for honourable, then the Latin for middle, then say summus, summa, summum again

Before you move on

What does summus, summa, summum mean? ("Highest, the top of".) Say it once more.

Chapter 184

Wasteful, Moderate, Eloquent, Mute, Lame

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say wasteful, moderate, eloquent, mute and lame.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 184: I can say wasteful, moderate, eloquent, mute and lame.

184.1 prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum — wasteful

> Before the new one: say the Latin for middle, then the Latin for highest.

You'll want to know: prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum

prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum — "wasteful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōdigus is built on prōdigō, "to drive forth, to squander" (Lewis & Short), from prōd-, "forth", and agō, "to drive".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum
- Say it: prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum, once more
- Say it: say prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum
- Recall: say the Latin for middle, then the Latin for highest, then say prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum again

Before you move on

What does prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum mean? ("Wasteful".) Say it once more.

184.2 modestus, modesta, modestum — moderate, restrained

Before the new one: say the Latin for highest, then the Latin for wasteful.

You'll want to know: modestus, modesta, modestum

modestus, modesta, modestum — "moderate, restrained".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

modestus is built on modus, "measure" (Lewis & Short): keeping to measure. modus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European med-*, "to measure" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: modestus, modesta, modestum
- Say it: modestus, modesta, modestum, once more
- Say it: say modestus, modesta, modestum

- Recall: say the Latin for highest, then the Latin for wasteful, then say modestus, modesta, modestum again

Before you move on

What does modestus, modesta, modestum mean? ("Moderate, restrained".) Say it once more.

184.3 fācundus, fācunda, fācundum — eloquent

Before the new one: say the Latin for wasteful, then the Latin for moderate.

You'll want to know: fācundus, fācunda, fācundum

fācundus, fācunda, fācundum — "eloquent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fācundus is built on fārī, "to speak" (Lewis & Short), with -cundus, an ending for a lasting disposition: given to speaking well.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fācundus, fācunda, fācundum
- Say it: fācundus, fācunda, fācundum, once more
- Say it: say fācundus, fācunda, fācundum
- Recall: say the Latin for wasteful, then the Latin for moderate, then say fācundus, fācunda, fācundum again

Before you move on

What does fācundus, fācunda, fācundum mean? ("Eloquent".) Say it once more.

184.4 mūtus, mūta, mūtum — mute, silent

Before the new one: say the Latin for moderate, then the Latin for eloquent.

You'll want to know: mūtus, mūta, mūtum

mūtus, mūta, mūtum — "mute, silent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūtus is probably built on an imitative sound, the mu of closed lips; Sanskrit mūka-, "dumb", is often compared (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mūtus, mūta, mūtum
- Say it: mūtus, mūta, mūtum, once more
- Say it: say mūtus, mūta, mūtum
- Recall: say the Latin for moderate, then the Latin for eloquent, then say mūtus, mūta, mūtum again

Before you move on

What does mūtus, mūta, mūtum mean? ("Mute, silent".) Say it once more.

184.5 claudus, clauda, claudum — lame

Before the new one: say the Latin for eloquent, then the Latin for mute.

You'll want to know: claudus, clauda, claudum

claudus, clauda, claudum — "lame".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

claudus has no sure origin; Lewis & Short link it with claudō, "to shut, to hem in", but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: claudus, clauda, claudum
- Say it: claudus, clauda, claudum, once more
- Say it: say claudus, clauda, claudum
- Recall: say the Latin for eloquent, then the Latin for mute, then say claudus, clauda, claudum again

Before you move on

What does claudus, clauda, claudum mean? ("Lame".) Say it once more.

Chapter 185

Storeroom, Study, Colonnaded garden, Rain basin, Foundation

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a storeroom, a study, a colonnaded garden, a rain basin and a foundation.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 185: I can say a storeroom, a study, a colonnaded garden, a rain basin and a foundation.

185.1 cella, cellae — a storeroom, a small room

> Before the new one: say the Latin for mute, then the Latin for lame.

You'll want to know: cella, cellae

cella, cellae — "a storeroom, a small room".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cella is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kelneh2*, "a small room" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for hiding seen in cēlō, "to hide" (Lewis & Short). English cell comes from it, and English hall is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cella, cellae
- Say it: cella, cellae, once more
- Say it: say cella, cellae
- Recall: say the Latin for mute, then the Latin for lame, then say cella, cellae again

Before you move on

What does cella, cellae mean? ("A storeroom, a small room".) Say it once more.

185.2 tablīnum, tablīnī — a study (room)

Before the new one: say the Latin for lame, then the Latin for a storeroom.

You'll want to know: tablīnum, tablīnī

tablīnum, tablīnī — "a study (room)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tablīnum is built on tabula, "a writing tablet, records" (EtymDB 2.1): the room where the family's records were kept.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tablīnum, tablīnī
- Say it: tablīnum, tablīnī, once more
- Say it: say tablīnum, tablīnī
- Recall: say the Latin for lame, then the Latin for a storeroom, then say tablīnum, tablīnī again

Before you move on

What does tablīnum, tablīnī mean? ("A study (room)".) Say it once more.

185.3 peristylium, peristyliī — a colonnaded garden

Before the new one: say the Latin for a storeroom, then the Latin for a study.

You'll want to know: peristylium, peristyliī

peristylium, peristyliī — "a colonnaded garden".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

peristylium was borrowed from Greek peristylion, "a place ringed with columns" (Lewis & Short), from peri, "around", and stylos, "a column".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: peristylium, peristyliī
- Say it: peristylium, peristyliī, once more
- Say it: say peristylium, peristyliī
- Recall: say the Latin for a storeroom, then the Latin for a study, then say peristylium, peristyliī again

Before you move on

What does peristylium, peristyliī mean? ("A colonnaded garden".) Say it once more.

185.4 impluvium, impluviī — a rain basin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a study, then the Latin for a colonnaded garden.

You'll want to know: impluvium, impluviī

impluvium, impluviī — "a rain basin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

impluvium is built on impluō, "to rain into" (Lewis & Short), from in, "into", and pluit, "it rains": the basin the rain falls into.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: impluvium, impluviī
- Say it: impluvium, impluviī, once more
- Say it: say impluvium, impluviī
- Recall: say the Latin for a study, then the Latin for a colonnaded garden, then say impluvium, impluviī again

Before you move on

What does impluvium, impluviī mean? ("A rain basin".) Say it once more.

185.5 fundāmentum, fundāmentī — a foundation

Before the new one: say the Latin for a colonnaded garden, then the Latin for a rain basin.

You'll want to know: fundāmentum, fundāmentī

fundāmentum, fundāmentī — "a foundation".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fundāmentum is built on fundō, "to lay the bottom, to found", from fundus, "bottom" (EtymDB 2.1), with -mentum, an ending for a thing. fundus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhudhmen*, "bottom" (EtymDB 2.1); English bottom is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fundāmentum, fundāmentī
- Say it: fundāmentum, fundāmentī, once more
- Say it: say fundāmentum, fundāmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a colonnaded garden, then the Latin for a rain basin, then say fundāmentum, fundāmentī again

Before you move on

What does fundāmentum, fundāmentī mean? ("A foundation".) Say it once more.

Chapter 186

Helmsman, Market, Weight, Measure, Pound

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a helmsman, a market, a weight, a measure and a pound.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 186: I can say a helmsman, a market, a weight, a measure and a pound.

186.1 gubernātor, gubernātōris — a helmsman

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a rain basin, then the Latin for a foundation.

You'll want to know: gubernātor, gubernātōris

gubernātor, gubernātōris — "a helmsman".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gubernātor is built on gubernō, "to steer" (EtymDB 2.1), a verb Latin took from Greek kybernaō, "to steer, to pilot", with -tor, "one who does it". English governor comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gubernātor, gubernātōris
- Say it: gubernātor, gubernātōris, once more
- Say it: say gubernātor, gubernātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a rain basin, then the Latin for a foundation, then say gubernātor, gubernātōris again

Before you move on

What does gubernātor, gubernātōris mean? ("A helmsman".) Say it once more.

186.2 mercātus, mercātūs — a market, a fair

Before the new one: say the Latin for a foundation, then the Latin for a helmsman.

You'll want to know: mercātus, mercātūs

mercātus, mercātūs — "a market, a fair".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mercātus is built on mercor, "to trade" (EtymDB 2.1), from merx, "goods". English market comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mercātus, mercātūs
- Say it: mercātus, mercātūs, once more
- Say it: say mercātus, mercātūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a foundation, then the Latin for a helmsman, then say mercātus, mercātūs again

Before you move on

What does mercātus, mercātūs mean? ("A market, a fair".) Say it once more.

186.3 pondus, ponderis — a weight

Before the new one: say the Latin for a helmsman, then the Latin for a market.

You'll want to know: pondus, ponderis

pondus, ponderis — "a weight".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pondus belongs with pendō, "to weigh" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)pend-*, "to stretch, to pull" (EtymDB 2.1). English pound comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pondus, ponderis
- Say it: pondus, ponderis, once more
- Say it: say pondus, ponderis
- Recall: say the Latin for a helmsman, then the Latin for a market, then say pondus, ponderis again

Before you move on

What does pondus, ponderis mean? ("A weight".) Say it once more.

186.4 mēnsūra, mēnsūrae — a measure

Before the new one: say the Latin for a market, then the Latin for a weight.

You'll want to know: mēnsūra, mēnsūrae

mēnsūra, mēnsūrae — "a measure".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mēnsūra is built on mēnsus, "measured", the participle of mētior, "to measure" (EtymDB 2.1), with -ūra, an ending for an act or result.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mēnsūra, mēnsūrae
- Say it: mēnsūra, mēnsūrae, once more
- Say it: say mēnsūra, mēnsūrae
- Recall: say the Latin for a market, then the Latin for a weight, then say mēnsūra, mēnsūrae again

Before you move on

What does mēnsūra, mēnsūrae mean? ("A measure".) Say it once more.

186.5 lībra, lībrae — a pound; a pair of scales

Before the new one: say the Latin for a weight, then the Latin for a measure.

You'll want to know: lībra, lībrae

lībra, lībrae — "a pound; a pair of scales".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lībra has no sure origin; Greek litra, "a pound", is often compared (Lewis & Short), and both may come from a common Mediterranean word. The abbreviation lb for the pound comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lībra, lībrae
- Say it: lībra, lībrae, once more
- Say it: say lībra, lībrae
- Recall: say the Latin for a weight, then the Latin for a measure, then say lībra, lībrae again

Before you move on

What does lībra, lībrae mean? ("A pound; a pair of scales".) Say it once more.

Chapter 187

Peace, Leader, Victory, Freedom, Glory

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say peace, a leader, victory, freedom and glory.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 187: I can say peace, a leader, victory, freedom and glory.

187.1 pāx, pācis — peace

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a measure, then the Latin for a pound; a pair of scales.

You'll want to know: pāx, pācis pāx, pācis — "peace".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāx is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peh2k-*, "to fasten, to fix" (EtymDB 2.1): peace as a pact fixed between two sides. pacīscō, "to make a bargain", is from the same root (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāx, pācis
- Say it: pāx, pācis, once more
- Say it: say pāx, pācis
- Recall: say the Latin for a measure, then the Latin for a pound; a pair of scales, then say pāx, pācis again

Before you move on

What does pāx, pācis mean? ("Peace".) Say it once more.

187.2 dux, ducis — a leader

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pound; a pair of scales, then the Latin for peace.

You'll want to know: dux, ducis

dux, ducis — "a leader".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dux is built on dūcō, "to lead" (Lewis & Short): the one who leads. English duke comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dux, ducis
- Say it: dux, ducis, once more
- Say it: say dux, ducis
- Recall: say the Latin for a pound; a pair of scales, then the Latin for peace, then say dux, ducis again

Before you move on

What does dux, ducis mean? ("A leader".) Say it once more.

187.3 victōria, victōriae — victory

Before the new one: say the Latin for peace, then the Latin for a leader.

You'll want to know: victōria, victōriae

victōria, victōriae — "victory".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

victōria is built on victor, "a winner" (Lewis & Short), from vincō, "to win".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: victōria, victōriae
- Say it: victōria, victōriae, once more
- Say it: say victōria, victōriae
- Recall: say the Latin for peace, then the Latin for a leader, then say victōria, victōriae again

Before you move on

What does victōria, victōriae mean? ("Victory".) Say it once more.

187.4 lībertās, lībertātis — freedom

Before the new one: say the Latin for a leader, then the Latin for victory.

You'll want to know: lībertās, lībertātis

lībertās, lībertātis — "freedom".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lībertās is built on līber, "free" (Lewis & Short), with -tās, an ending for a quality. līber is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1lewdheros*, "free" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lībertās, lībertātis
- Say it: lībertās, lībertātis, once more
- Say it: say lībertās, lībertātis
- Recall: say the Latin for a leader, then the Latin for victory, then say lībertās, lībertātis again

Before you move on

What does lībertās, lībertātis mean? ("Freedom".) Say it once more.

187.5 glōria, glōriae — glory

Before the new one: say the Latin for victory, then the Latin for freedom.

You'll want to know: glōria, glōriae

glōria, glōriae — "glory".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

glōria has no sure origin. Lewis & Short connect it with Greek kleos, "fame", and EtymDB 2.1 records a reconstructed older gnōria*. Some tie that form to the root of nōscō, "to know"; neither account is settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: glōria, glōriae
- Say it: glōria, glōriae, once more
- Say it: say glōria, glōriae
- Recall: say the Latin for victory, then the Latin for freedom, then say glōria, glōriae again

Before you move on

What does glōria, glōriae mean? ("Glory".) Say it once more.

Chapter 188

Architect, Weaver, Potter, Farm manager, Tenant farmer

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say an architect, a weaver, a potter, a farm manager and a tenant farmer.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 188: I can say an architect, a weaver, a potter, a farm manager and a tenant farmer.

188.1 architectus, architectī — an architect

Before the new one: say the Latin for freedom, then the Latin for glory.

You'll want to know: architectus, architectī

architectus, architectī — "an architect".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

architectus was borrowed from Greek arkhitektōn, "a master builder" (Lewis & Short), from arkhi-, "chief", and tektōn, "builder" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: architectus, architectī
- Say it: architectus, architectī, once more
- Say it: say architectus, architectī
- Recall: say the Latin for freedom, then the Latin for glory, then say architectus, architectī again

Before you move on

What does architectus, architectī mean? ("An architect".) Say it once more.

188.2 textor, textōris — a weaver

Before the new one: say the Latin for glory, then the Latin for an architect.

You'll want to know: textor, textōris

textor, textōris — "a weaver".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

textor is built on texō, "to weave" (Lewis & Short), with -tor, "one who does it". texō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European teks-*, "to weave, to fashion"; English text and textile come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: textor, textōris
- Say it: textor, textōris, once more
- Say it: say textor, textōris

- Recall: say the Latin for glory, then the Latin for an architect, then say textor, textōris again

Before you move on

What does textor, textōris mean? ("A weaver".) Say it once more.

188.3 figulus, figulī — a potter

Before the new one: say the Latin for an architect, then the Latin for a weaver.

You'll want to know: figulus, figulī

figulus, figulī — "a potter".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

figulus is built on fingō, "to shape, to mould" (Lewis & Short), on its root without the n: the moulder of clay.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: figulus, figulī
- Say it: figulus, figulī, once more
- Say it: say figulus, figulī
- Recall: say the Latin for an architect, then the Latin for a weaver, then say figulus, figulī again

Before you move on

What does figulus, figulī mean? ("A potter".) Say it once more.

188.4 vīlicus, vīlicī — a farm manager

Before the new one: say the Latin for a weaver, then the Latin for a potter.

You'll want to know: vīlicus, vīlicī

vīlicus, vīlicī — "a farm manager".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vīlicus is built on vīlla, "a farmhouse" (Lewis & Short): the man in charge of the farm.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vīlicus, vīlicī
- Say it: vīlicus, vīlicī, once more
- Say it: say vīlicus, vīlicī
- Recall: say the Latin for a weaver, then the Latin for a potter, then say vīlicus, vīlicī again

Before you move on

What does vīlicus, vīlicī mean? ("A farm manager".) Say it once more.

188.5 colōnus, colōnī — a tenant farmer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a potter, then the Latin for a farm manager.

You'll want to know: colōnus, colōnī

colōnus, colōnī — "a tenant farmer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

colōnus is built on colō, "to till, to tend" (Lewis & Short): one who tills the land. colō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwel-*, "to turn, to move about" (EtymDB 2.1). English colony comes from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: colōnus, colōnī
- Say it: colōnus, colōnī, once more
- Say it: say colōnus, colōnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a potter, then the Latin for a farm manager, then say colōnus, colōnī again

Before you move on

What does colōnus, colōnī mean? ("A tenant farmer".) Say it once more.

Chapter 189

Kin, Uncle, Aunt, Truth, Lie

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a blood relative, a mother's brother, a mother's sister, truth and a lie.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 189: I can say a blood relative, a mother's brother, a mother's sister, truth and a lie.

189.1 cognātus, cognātī — a blood relative

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a farm manager, then the Latin for a tenant farmer.

You'll want to know: cognātus, cognātī

cognātus, cognātī — "a blood relative".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cognātus is built on nātus, "born" (Lewis & Short), older gnātus, with con-, "together": born into the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cognātus, cognātī
- Say it: cognātus, cognātī, once more
- Say it: say cognātus, cognātī
- Recall: say the Latin for a farm manager, then the Latin for a tenant farmer, then say cognātus, cognātī again

Before you move on

What does cognātus, cognātī mean? ("A blood relative".) Say it once more.

189.2 avunculus, avunculī — a mother's brother, an uncle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tenant farmer, then the Latin for a blood relative.

You'll want to know: avunculus, avunculī

avunculus, avunculī — "a mother's brother, an uncle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

avunculus is a diminutive built on avus, "a grandfather" (Lewis & Short): "little grandfather", an old name for the mother's brother. English uncle comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avunculus, avunculī
- Say it: avunculus, avunculī, once more
- Say it: say avunculus, avunculī

- Recall: say the Latin for a tenant farmer, then the Latin for a blood relative, then say avunculus, avunculī again

Before you move on

What does avunculus, avunculī mean? ("A mother's brother, an uncle".) Say it once more.

189.3 mātertera, māterterae — a mother's sister, an aunt

Before the new one: say the Latin for a blood relative, then the Latin for a mother's brother.

You'll want to know: mātertera, māterterae

mātertera, māterterae — "a mother's sister, an aunt".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mātertera is built on māter, "mother" (Lewis & Short), with an ending like the one in altera, "the other of two": a second mother.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mātertera, māterterae
- Say it: mātertera, māterterae, once more
- Say it: say mātertera, māterterae
- Recall: say the Latin for a blood relative, then the Latin for a mother's brother, then say mātertera, māterterae again

Before you move on

What does mātertera, māterterae mean? ("A mother's sister, an aunt".) Say it once more.

189.4 vēritās, vēritātis — truth

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mother's brother, then the Latin for a mother's sister.

You'll want to know: vēritās, vēritātis

vēritās, vēritātis — "truth".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vēritās is built on vērus, "true" (Lewis & Short), with -tās, an ending for a quality. vērus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weh1ros*, "true" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vēritās, vēritātis
- Say it: vēritās, vēritātis, once more
- Say it: say vēritās, vēritātis
- Recall: say the Latin for a mother's brother, then the Latin for a mother's sister, then say vēritās, vēritātis again

Before you move on

What does vēritās, vēritātis mean? ("Truth".) Say it once more.

189.5 mendācium, mendāciī — a lie

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mother's sister, then the Latin for truth.

You'll want to know: mendācium, mendāciī

mendācium, mendāciī — "a lie".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mendācium is built on mendāx, "lying, a liar" (Lewis & Short). Where mendāx comes from is uncertain; a link with mendum, "a fault", is often suggested.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mendācium, mendāciī
- Say it: mendācium, mendāciī, once more
- Say it: say mendācium, mendāciī
- Recall: say the Latin for a mother's sister, then the Latin for truth, then say mendācium, mendāciī again

Before you move on

What does mendācium, mendāciī mean? ("A lie".) Say it once more.

Chapter 190

Tax, Tribute, Wages, Denarius, Sesterce

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a tax, a tribute, wages, a denarius and a sesterce.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 190: I can say a tax, a tribute, wages, a denarius and a sesterce.

190.1 vectīgal, vectīgālis — a tax, a toll

> Before the new one: say the Latin for truth, then the Latin for a lie.

You'll want to know: vectīgal, vectīgālis

vectīgal, vectīgālis — "a tax, a toll".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vectīgal is built on vectus, "carried", the participle of vehō, "to carry" (Lewis & Short): first a toll on goods carried in, then any tax.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vectīgal, vectīgālis
- Say it: vectīgal, vectīgālis, once more
- Say it: say vectīgal, vectīgālis
- Recall: say the Latin for truth, then the Latin for a lie, then say vectīgal, vectīgālis again

Before you move on

What does vectīgal, vectīgālis mean? ("A tax, a toll".) Say it once more.

190.2 tribūtum, tribūtī — a tribute, a tax

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lie, then the Latin for a tax.

You'll want to know: tribūtum, tribūtī

tribūtum, tribūtī — "a tribute, a tax".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tribūtum is the past participle of tribuō, "to assign, to pay out" (Lewis & Short), used as a noun: what is paid. tribuō is built on tribus, "a tribe": first to share out among the tribes.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tribūtum, tribūtī
- Say it: tribūtum, tribūtī, once more
- Say it: say tribūtum, tribūtī

- Recall: say the Latin for a lie, then the Latin for a tax, then say tribūtum, tribūtī again

Before you move on

What does tribūtum, tribūtī mean? ("A tribute, a tax".) Say it once more.

190.3 mercēs, mercēdis — wages, pay

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tax, then the Latin for a tribute.

You'll want to know: mercēs, mercēdis

mercēs, mercēdis — "wages, pay".

It is not the same word as merx, mercis, "goods", even though the plural of merx is spelled mercēs too. The second form tells them apart: mercēdis here, mercis there.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mercēs is usually linked with mereō, "to earn" (Lewis & Short): what one has earned. It may share a root with merx, "goods" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mercēs, mercēdis
- Say it: mercēs, mercēdis, once more
- Say it: say mercēs, mercēdis
- Recall: say the Latin for a tax, then the Latin for a tribute, then say mercēs, mercēdis again

Before you move on

What does mercēs, mercēdis mean? ("Wages, pay".) Say it once more.

190.4 dēnārius, dēnāriī — a denarius (silver coin)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tribute, then the Latin for wages.

You'll want to know: dēnārius, dēnāriī

dēnārius, dēnāriī — "a denarius (silver coin)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēnārius is built on dēnī, "ten each" (Lewis & Short): the coin was first worth ten bronze coins. dēnī comes from decem, "ten".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēnārius, dēnāriī
- Say it: dēnārius, dēnāriī, once more
- Say it: say dēnārius, dēnāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a tribute, then the Latin for wages, then say dēnārius, dēnāriī again

Before you move on

What does dēnārius, dēnāriī mean? ("A denarius (silver coin)".) Say it once more.

190.5 sēstertius, sēstertiī — a sesterce (coin)

Before the new one: say the Latin for wages, then the Latin for a denarius.

You'll want to know: sēstertius, sēstertiī

sēstertius, sēstertiī — "a sesterce (coin)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sēstertius is contracted from sēmis "half" and tertius "third" (Lewis & Short): two whole units and half of the third, the coin's first value.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sēstertius, sēstertiī
- Say it: sēstertius, sēstertiī, once more
- Say it: say sēstertius, sēstertiī
- Recall: say the Latin for wages, then the Latin for a denarius, then say sēstertius, sēstertiī again

Before you move on

What does sēstertius, sēstertiī mean? ("A sesterce (coin)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 191

Charcoal, Crag, Constellation, Storm, Rain cloud

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say charcoal, a crag, a constellation, a storm and a rain cloud.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 191: I can say charcoal, a crag, a constellation, a storm and a rain cloud.

191.1 carbō, carbōnis — charcoal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a denarius, then the Latin for a sesterce.

You'll want to know: carbō, carbōnis

carbō, carbōnis — "charcoal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carbō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root ker-*, "to burn" (EtymDB 2.1), though the details are uncertain. English carbon comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: carbō, carbōnis
- Say it: carbō, carbōnis, once more
- Say it: say carbō, carbōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a denarius, then the Latin for a sesterce, then say carbō, carbōnis again

Before you move on

What does carbō, carbōnis mean? ("Charcoal".) Say it once more.

191.2 scopulus, scopulī — a crag, a cliff

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sesterce, then the Latin for charcoal.

You'll want to know: scopulus, scopulī

scopulus, scopulī — "a crag, a cliff".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scopulus was borrowed from Greek skopelos, "a lookout rock, a peak" (Lewis & Short), from skopeō, "to look out" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scopulus, scopulī
- Say it: scopulus, scopulī, once more
- Say it: say scopulus, scopulī
- Recall: say the Latin for a sesterce, then the Latin for charcoal, then say scopulus, scopulī again

Before you move on

What does scopulus, scopulī mean? ("A crag, a cliff".) Say it once more.

191.3 sīdus, sīderis — a constellation, a star

Before the new one: say the Latin for charcoal, then the Latin for a crag.

You'll want to know: sīdus, sīderis

sīdus, sīderis — "a constellation, a star".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sīdus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. cōnsīderō, "to examine", and dēsīderō, "to miss", are often linked with it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sīdus, sīderis
- Say it: sīdus, sīderis, once more
- Say it: say sīdus, sīderis
- Recall: say the Latin for charcoal, then the Latin for a crag, then say sīdus, sīderis again

Before you move on

What does sīdus, sīderis mean? ("A constellation, a star".) Say it once more.

191.4 procella, procellae — a storm, a gale

Before the new one: say the Latin for a crag, then the Latin for a constellation.

You'll want to know: procella, procellae

procella, procellae — "a storm, a gale".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

procella is built on procellō, "to hurl forward, to dash down" (EtymDB 2.1), from prō-, "forward": the gale that throws things down.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: procella, procellae
- Say it: procella, procellae, once more
- Say it: say procella, procellae
- Recall: say the Latin for a crag, then the Latin for a constellation, then say procella, procellae again

Before you move on

What does procella, procellae mean? ("A storm, a gale".) Say it once more.

191.5 nimbus, nimbī — a rain cloud

Before the new one: say the Latin for a constellation, then the Latin for a storm.

You'll want to know: nimbus, nimbī

nimbus, nimbī — "a rain cloud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nimbus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nebhos*, "cloud" (EtymDB 2.1), in a form with an n inside; Greek nephos, "cloud", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is nebula, "mist".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nimbus, nimbī
- Say it: nimbus, nimbī, once more
- Say it: say nimbus, nimbī
- Recall: say the Latin for a constellation, then the Latin for a storm, then say nimbus, nimbī again

Before you move on

What does nimbus, nimbī mean? ("A rain cloud".) Say it once more.

191.6 Words from chapters 183-186 — a first pass

Say the words for a storm and a rain cloud.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- known, famous, honourable, middle, highest
- wasteful, moderate, eloquent, mute, lame
- a storeroom, a study, a colonnaded garden, a rain basin, a foundation
- a helmsman, a market, a weight, a measure, a pound; a pair of scales

Before you move on

Known? (nōtus, nōta, nōtum.) Famous? (celeber, celebris, celebre.) Honourable? (honestus, honesta, honestum.) Middle? (medius, media, medium.) Highest? (summus, summa, summum.) Wasteful? (prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum.) Moderate? (modestus, modesta, modestum.) Eloquent? (fācundus, fācunda, fācundum.) Mute? (mūtus, mūta, mūtum.) Lame? (claudus, clauda, claudum.) A storeroom? (cella, cellae.) A study? (tablīnum, tablīnī.) A colonnaded garden? (peristylium, peristyliī.) A rain basin? (impluvium, impluviī.) A foundation? (fundāmentum, fundāmentī.) A helmsman? (gubernātor, gubernātōris.) A market? (mercātus, mercātūs.) A weight? (pondus, ponderis.) A measure? (mēnsūra, mēnsūrae.) A pound; a pair of scales? (lībra, lībrae.)

191.7 Words from chapters 187-191 — a second pass

Say the words for peace and a leader.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- peace, a leader, victory, freedom, glory
- an architect, a weaver, a potter, a farm manager, a tenant farmer
- a blood relative, a mother's brother, a mother's sister, truth, a lie
- a tax, a tribute, wages, a denarius, a sesterce
- charcoal, a crag, a constellation, a storm, a rain cloud

Before you move on

Peace? (pāx, pācis.) A leader? (dux, ducis.) Victory? (victōria, victōriae.) Freedom? (lībertās, lībertātis.) Glory? (glōria, glōriae.) An architect? (architectus, architectī.) A weaver? (textor, textōris.) A potter? (figulus, figulī.) A farm manager?

(vīlicus, vīlicī.) A tenant farmer? (colōnus, colōnī.) A blood relative? (cognātus, cognātī.) A mother's brother? (avunculus, avunculī.) A mother's sister? (mātertera, māterterae.) Truth? (vēritās, vēritātis.) A lie? (mendācium, mendāciī.) A tax? (vectīgal, vectīgālis.) A tribute? (tribūtum, tribūtī.) Wages? (mercēs, mercēdis.) A denarius? (dēnārius, dēnāriī.) A sesterce? (sēstertius, sēstertiī.) Charcoal? (carbō, carbōnis.) A crag? (scopulus, scopulī.) A constellation? (sīdus, sīderis.) A storm? (procella, procellae.) A rain cloud? (nimbus, nimbī.)

Chapter 192

Crab, Sparrow, Stork, Owl, Peacock

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a crab, a sparrow, a stork, an owl and a peacock.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 192: I can say a crab, a sparrow, a stork, an owl and a peacock.

192.1 cancer, cancrī — a crab

Before the new one: say the Latin for a storm, a gale, then the Latin for a rain cloud.

You'll want to know: cancer, cancrī

cancer, cancrī — "a crab".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cancer is probably inherited, from a doubled form of a root for "hard"; Greek karkinos, "crab", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and the n came in by dissimilation.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cancer, cancrī
- Say it: cancer, cancrī, once more
- Say it: say cancer, cancrī
- Recall: say the Latin for a storm, a gale, then the Latin for a rain cloud, then say cancer, cancrī again

Before you move on

What does cancer, cancrī mean? ("A crab".) Say it once more.

192.2 passer, passeris — a sparrow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rain cloud, then the Latin for a crab.

You'll want to know: passer, passeris

passer, passeris — "a sparrow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

passer may be inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European pettro-, "flier, bird", from peth2-, "to fly" (EtymDB 2.1); the details are uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: passer, passeris
- Say it: passer, passeris, once more
- Say it: say passer, passeris
- Recall: say the Latin for a rain cloud, then the Latin for a crab, then say passer, passeris again

Before you move on

What does passer, passeris mean? ("A sparrow".) Say it once more.

192.3 cicōnia, cicōniae — a stork

Before the new one: say the Latin for a crab, then the Latin for a sparrow.

You'll want to know: cicōnia, cicōniae

cicōnia, cicōniae — "a stork".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cicōnia is probably a doubled form of the root keh2n-*, "to sing, to cry" (EtymDB 2.1). At Praeneste the bird was called cōnia, "stork" (Lewis & Short), and canō, "to sing", has the same root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cicōnia, cicōniae
- Say it: cicōnia, cicōniae, once more
- Say it: say cicōnia, cicōniae
- Recall: say the Latin for a crab, then the Latin for a sparrow, then say cicōnia, cicōniae again

Before you move on

What does cicōnia, cicōniae mean? ("A stork".) Say it once more.

192.4 noctua, noctuae — an owl

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sparrow, then the Latin for a stork.

You'll want to know: noctua, noctuae

noctua, noctuae — "an owl".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

noctua is built on nox, noctis, "night" (Lewis & Short): the night bird.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: noctua, noctuae
- Say it: noctua, noctuae, once more
- Say it: say noctua, noctuae
- Recall: say the Latin for a sparrow, then the Latin for a stork, then say noctua, noctuae again

Before you move on

What does noctua, noctuae mean? ("An owl".) Say it once more.

192.5 pāvō, pāvōnis — a peacock

Before the new one: say the Latin for a stork, then the Latin for an owl.

You'll want to know: pāvō, pāvōnis

pāvō, pāvōnis — "a peacock".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāvō is probably a loan from the east, like Greek taōs, "peacock" (Lewis & Short); both are thought to go back to a language of India, but the path is uncertain. English peacock begins with it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāvō, pāvōnis
- Say it: pāvō, pāvōnis, once more
- Say it: say pāvō, pāvōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a stork, then the Latin for an owl, then say pāvō, pāvōnis again

Before you move on

What does pāvō, pāvōnis mean? ("A peacock".) Say it once more.

Chapter 193

Drum, Knucklebone, Gaming die, Bracelet, Necklace

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a drum, a knucklebone, a gaming die, a bracelet and a necklace.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 193: I can say a drum, a knucklebone, a gaming die, a bracelet and a necklace.

193.1 tympanum, tympanī — a drum

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an owl, then the Latin for a peacock.

You'll want to know: tympanum, tympanī

tympanum, tympanī — "a drum".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tympanum was borrowed from Greek tympanon, "a drum" (Lewis & Short), from typtō, "to strike, to beat" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tympanum, tympanī
- Say it: tympanum, tympanī, once more
- Say it: say tympanum, tympanī
- Recall: say the Latin for an owl, then the Latin for a peacock, then say tympanum, tympanī again

Before you move on

What does tympanum, tympanī mean? ("A drum".) Say it once more.

193.2 tālus, tālī — a knucklebone; an ankle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a peacock, then the Latin for a drum.

You'll want to know: tālus, tālī

tālus, tālī — "a knucklebone; an ankle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tālus comes from an older taxlus* (Lewis & Short), as its diminutive taxillus, "a small die", shows; EtymDB 2.1 gives Proto-Italic tākslos*, "knucklebone", but the deeper origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tālus, tālī
- Say it: tālus, tālī, once more
- Say it: say tālus, tālī

- Recall: say the Latin for a peacock, then the Latin for a drum, then say tālus, tālī again

Before you move on

What does tālus, tālī mean? ("A knucklebone; an ankle".) Say it once more.

193.3 tessera, tesserae — a gaming die; a token

Before the new one: say the Latin for a drum, then the Latin for a knucklebone; an ankle.

You'll want to know: tessera, tesserae

tessera, tesserae — "a gaming die; a token".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tessera comes from Greek tesseres, "four" (Lewis & Short): a square piece, with four corners. English tessellated, "made of small square tiles", comes from its diminutive.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tessera, tesserae
- Say it: tessera, tesserae, once more
- Say it: say tessera, tesserae
- Recall: say the Latin for a drum, then the Latin for a knucklebone; an ankle, then say tessera, tesserae again

Before you move on

What does tessera, tesserae mean? ("A gaming die; a token".) Say it once more.

193.4 armilla, armillae — a bracelet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a knucklebone; an ankle, then the Latin for a gaming die; a token.

You'll want to know: armilla, armillae

armilla, armillae — "a bracelet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

armilla is built on armus, "the upper arm, the shoulder" (Lewis & Short), with -illa, a diminutive ending: a band for the arm.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: armilla, armillae
- Say it: armilla, armillae, once more
- Say it: say armilla, armillae
- Recall: say the Latin for a knucklebone; an ankle, then the Latin for a gaming die; a token, then say armilla, armillae again

Before you move on

What does armilla, armillae mean? ("A bracelet".) Say it once more.

193.5 monīle, monīlis — a necklace

Before the new one: say the Latin for a gaming die; a token, then the Latin for a bracelet.

You'll want to know: monīle, monīlis

monīle, monīlis — "a necklace".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

monīle is usually linked with a Proto-Indo-European word mon-*, "neck", seen in Old Irish muin, "neck"; English mane is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: monīle, monīlis
- Say it: monīle, monīlis, once more
- Say it: say monīle, monīlis
- Recall: say the Latin for a gaming die; a token, then the Latin for a bracelet, then say monīle, monīlis again

Before you move on

What does monīle, monīlis mean? ("A necklace".) Say it once more.

Chapter 194

Opinion, Conversation, Speech, Rumour, History

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say an opinion, conversation, a speech, a rumour and history.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 194: I can say an opinion, conversation, a speech, a rumour and history.

194.1 sententia, sententiae — an opinion; a sentence

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bracelet, then the Latin for a necklace.

You'll want to know: sententia, sententiae

sententia, sententiae — "an opinion; a sentence".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sententia is shortened from an older sentientia*, "a feeling" (Lewis & Short), built on sentiō, "to feel, to think": what one thinks.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sententia, sententiae
- Say it: sententia, sententiae, once more
- Say it: say sententia, sententiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a bracelet, then the Latin for a necklace, then say sententia, sententiae again

Before you move on

What does sententia, sententiae mean? ("An opinion; a sentence".) Say it once more.

194.2 sermō, sermōnis — conversation, speech

Before the new one: say the Latin for a necklace, then the Latin for an opinion; a sentence.

You'll want to know: sermō, sermōnis

sermō, sermōnis — "conversation, speech".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sermō is often linked with serō, "to join, to string together" (Lewis & Short): talk as words strung together. The link is likely but not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sermō, sermōnis
- Say it: sermō, sermōnis, once more
- Say it: say sermō, sermōnis

- Recall: say the Latin for a necklace, then the Latin for an opinion; a sentence, then say sermō, sermōnis again

Before you move on

What does sermō, sermōnis mean? ("Conversation, speech".) Say it once more.

194.3 ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis — a speech

Before the new one: say the Latin for an opinion; a sentence, then the Latin for conversation.

You'll want to know: ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis

ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis — "a speech".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrātiō is built on ōrō, "to speak, to plead, to pray" (Lewis & Short), with -tiō, an ending for an act. ōrō is often linked with ōs, "mouth" (EtymDB 2.1), but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis
- Say it: ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis, once more
- Say it: say ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for an opinion; a sentence, then the Latin for conversation, then say ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis again

Before you move on

What does ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis mean? ("A speech".) Say it once more.

194.4 rūmor, rūmōris — a rumour

Before the new one: say the Latin for conversation, then the Latin for a speech.

You'll want to know: rūmor, rūmōris

rūmor, rūmōris — "a rumour".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rūmor is often traced to a Proto-Indo-European root rewH-*, "to roar, to shout", but the link is not certain. Lewis & Short put raucus, "hoarse", in the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rūmor, rūmōris
- Say it: rūmor, rūmōris, once more
- Say it: say rūmor, rūmōris
- Recall: say the Latin for conversation, then the Latin for a speech, then say rūmor, rūmōris again

Before you move on

What does rūmor, rūmōris mean? ("A rumour".) Say it once more.

194.5 historia, historiae — history

Before the new one: say the Latin for a speech, then the Latin for a rumour.

You'll want to know: historia, historiae

historia, historiae — "history".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

historia was borrowed from Greek historia, “inquiry, a narrative” (Lewis & Short), from histōr, “one who knows” (EtymDB 2.1), whose root is usually given as weyd-*, “to see, to know”, the root of videō, “to see”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: historia, historiae
- Say it: historia, historiae, once more
- Say it: say historia, historiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a speech, then the Latin for a rumour, then say historia, historiae again

Before you move on

What does historia, historiae mean? (“History”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 195

Cake, Vinegar, Fish sauce, Ham, Birthday

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a cake, vinegar, fish sauce, a ham and a birthday.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 195: I can say a cake, vinegar, fish sauce, a ham and a birthday.

195.1 līb̄um, līb̄ī — a cake

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a rumour, then the Latin for history.

You'll want to know: līb̄um, līb̄ī

līb̄um, līb̄ī — "a cake".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līb̄um has no sure origin; Varro tied it to līb̄ō, "to pour out an offering" (Lewis & Short), since such cakes were offered to the gods.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lībum, lībī
- Say it: lībum, lībī, once more
- Say it: say lībum, lībī
- Recall: say the Latin for a rumour, then the Latin for history, then say lībum, lībī again

Before you move on

What does lībum, lībī mean? ("A cake".) Say it once more.

195.2 acētum, acētī — vinegar

Before the new one: say the Latin for history, then the Latin for a cake.

You'll want to know: acētum, acētī

acētum, acētī — "vinegar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

acētum is the participle of aceō, "to be sour" (Lewis & Short), with vīnum, "wine", understood: soured wine. aceō belongs with ācer, "sharp".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: acētum, acētī
- Say it: acētum, acētī, once more
- Say it: say acētum, acētī
- Recall: say the Latin for history, then the Latin for a cake, then say acētum, acētī again

Before you move on

What does acētum, acētī mean? ("Vinegar".) Say it once more.

195.3 garum, garī — fish sauce

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cake, then the Latin for vinegar.

You'll want to know: garum, garī

garum, garī — "fish sauce".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

garum was borrowed from Greek garon, "fish sauce" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: garum, garī
- Say it: garum, garī, once more
- Say it: say garum, garī
- Recall: say the Latin for a cake, then the Latin for vinegar, then say garum, garī again

Before you move on

What does garum, garī mean? ("Fish sauce".) Say it once more.

195.4 perna, pernae — a ham

Before the new one: say the Latin for vinegar, then the Latin for fish sauce.

You'll want to know: perna, pernae

perna, pernae — "a ham".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perna is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European persneh2*, "heel" (EtymDB 2.1): first the leg of meat with the heel, then the ham. Gothic fairzna, "heel", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perna, pernae
- Say it: perna, pernae, once more
- Say it: say perna, pernae
- Recall: say the Latin for vinegar, then the Latin for fish sauce, then say perna, pernae again

Before you move on

What does perna, pernae mean? ("A ham".) Say it once more.

195.5 diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis — a birthday

Before the new one: say the Latin for fish sauce, then the Latin for a ham.

You'll want to know: diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis

diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis — "a birthday".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

diēs nātālis is diēs, "day", with nātālis, "of one's birth", built on nātus, "born", from nāscor, "to be born". English natal comes from the second word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis
- Say it: diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis, once more
- Say it: say diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis
- Recall: say the Latin for fish sauce, then the Latin for a ham, then say diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis again

Before you move on

What does diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis mean? ("A birthday".) Say it once more.

Chapter 196

Running stream, Marsh, Meadow, Grove, Sacred grove

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a running stream, a marsh, a meadow, a grove and a sacred grove.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 196: I can say a running stream, a marsh, a meadow, a grove and a sacred grove.

196.1 fluvius, fluviī — a running stream, a river

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a ham, then the Latin for a birthday.

You'll want to know: fluvius, fluviī

fluvius, fluviī — "a running stream, a river".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fluvius is built on fluō, "to flow"; inscriptions also spell it flovios (Lewis & Short). fluō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhlew-*, "to swell, to flow".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fluvius, fluviī
- Say it: fluvius, fluviī, once more
- Say it: say fluvius, fluviī
- Recall: say the Latin for a ham, then the Latin for a birthday, then say fluvius, fluviī again

Before you move on

What does fluvius, fluviī mean? ("A running stream, a river".) Say it once more.

196.2 palūs, palūdis — a marsh

Before the new one: say the Latin for a birthday, then the Latin for a running stream.

You'll want to know: palūs, palūdis

palūs, palūdis — "a marsh".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

palūs, palūdis, has no sure origin; Lewis & Short compare Greek pēlos, "mud". It is a different word from pālus, "a stake".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: palūs, palūdis
- Say it: palūs, palūdis, once more
- Say it: say palūs, palūdis
- Recall: say the Latin for a birthday, then the Latin for a running stream, then say palūs, palūdis again

Before you move on

What does palūs, palūdis mean? (“A marsh”.) Say it once more.

196.3 prātum, prātī — a meadow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a running stream, then the Latin for a marsh.

You’ll want to know: prātum, prātī

prātum, prātī — “a meadow”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prātum has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prātum, prātī
- Say it: prātum, prātī, once more
- Say it: say prātum, prātī
- Recall: say the Latin for a running stream, then the Latin for a marsh, then say prātum, prātī again

Before you move on

What does prātum, prātī mean? (“A meadow”.) Say it once more.

196.4 nemus, nemoris — a grove

Before the new one: say the Latin for a marsh, then the Latin for a meadow.

You'll want to know: nemus, nemoris

nemus, nemoris — "a grove".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nemus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nemos*, "a sacred place, a clearing" (EtymDB 2.1), from nem-*, "to allot"; Greek nemos, "a woodland pasture", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nemus, nemoris
- Say it: nemus, nemoris, once more
- Say it: say nemus, nemoris
- Recall: say the Latin for a marsh, then the Latin for a meadow, then say nemus, nemoris again

Before you move on

What does nemus, nemoris mean? ("A grove".) Say it once more.

196.5 lūcus, lūcī — a sacred grove

Before the new one: say the Latin for a meadow, then the Latin for a grove.

You'll want to know: lūcus, lūcī

lūcus, lūcī — "a sacred grove".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūcus is inherited; Old Latin wrote loucos, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European lowkos*, "a clearing", from the root for light (EtymDB 2.1). Lewis & Short explain lūcus as the shining, open place in a wood. English lea, "a meadow", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lūcus, lūcī
- Say it: lūcus, lūcī, once more
- Say it: say lūcus, lūcī
- Recall: say the Latin for a meadow, then the Latin for a grove, then say lūcus, lūcī again

Before you move on

What does lūcus, lūcī mean? ("A sacred grove".) Say it once more.

196.6 Words from chapters 192-193 — a first pass

Say the words for a grove and a sacred grove.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a crab, a sparrow, a stork, an owl, a peacock
- a drum, a knucklebone; an ankle, a gaming die; a token, a bracelet, a necklace

Before you move on

A crab? (cancer, cancrī.) A sparrow? (passer, passeris.) A stork? (cicōnia, cicōniae.) An owl? (noctua, noctuae.) A peacock? (pāvō, pāvōnis.) A drum? (tympanum, tympanī.) A knucklebone; an ankle? (tālus, tālī.) A gaming die; a token? (tessera, tesserae.) A bracelet? (armilla, armillae.) A necklace?

(monīle, monīlis.)

196.7 Words from chapters 194-196 — a second pass

Say the words for an opinion; a sentence and conversation.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an opinion; a sentence, conversation, a speech, a rumour, history
- a cake, vinegar, fish sauce, a ham, a birthday
- a running stream, a marsh, a meadow, a grove, a sacred grove

Before you move on

An opinion; a sentence? (sententia, sententiae.) Conversation? (sermō, sermōnis.) A speech? (ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis.) A rumour? (rūmor, rūmōris.) History? (historia, historiae.) A cake? (lībum, lībī.) Vinegar? (acētum, acētī.) Fish sauce? (garum, garī.) A ham? (perna, pernae.) A birthday? (diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis.) A running stream? (fluvius, fluviī.) A marsh? (palūs, palūdis.) A meadow? (prātum, prātī.) A grove? (nemus, nemoris.) A sacred grove? (lūcus, lūcī.)

Chapter 197

To kiss, To greet, To invite, To explain, To interpret

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to kiss, to greet, to invite, to explain and to interpret.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 197: I can say to kiss, to greet, to invite, to explain and to interpret.

197.1 ōsculor, ōsculārī — to kiss

Before the new one: say the Latin for a grove, then the Latin for a sacred grove.

You'll want to know: ōsculor, ōsculārī

ōsculor, ōsculārī — "to kiss".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōsculor is built on ōsculum, "a kiss", a diminutive of ōs, "mouth" (EtymDB 2.1): a little mouth, then a kiss.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōsculor, ōsculārī
- Say it: ōsculor, ōsculārī, once more
- Say it: say ōsculor, ōsculārī
- Recall: say the Latin for a grove, then the Latin for a sacred grove, then say ōsculor, ōsculārī again

Before you move on

What does ōsculor, ōsculārī mean? ("To kiss".) Say it once more.

197.2 salūtō, salūtāre — to greet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sacred grove, then the Latin for to kiss.

You'll want to know: salūtō, salūtāre

salūtō, salūtāre — "to greet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

salūtō is built on salūs, salūtis, "health, safety" (Lewis & Short): to wish someone health. salūs is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European solh2-*, "whole" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: salūtō, salūtāre
- Say it: salūtō, salūtāre, once more
- Say it: say salūtō, salūtāre
- Recall: say the Latin for a sacred grove, then the Latin for to kiss, then say salūtō, salūtāre again

Before you move on

What does salūtō, salūtāre mean? (“To greet”.) Say it once more.

197.3 invītō, invītāre — to invite

Before the new one: say the Latin for to kiss, then the Latin for to greet.

You’ll want to know: invītō, invītāre

invītō, invītāre — “to invite”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

invītō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: invītō, invītāre
- Say it: invītō, invītāre, once more
- Say it: say invītō, invītāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to kiss, then the Latin for to greet, then say invītō, invītāre again

Before you move on

What does invītō, invītāre mean? (“To invite”.) Say it once more.

197.4 explicō, explicāre — to explain, to unfold

Before the new one: say the Latin for to greet, then the Latin for to invite.

You'll want to know: explicō, explicāre

explicō, explicāre — "to explain, to unfold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

explicō is ex, "out", with plicō, "to fold" (EtymDB 2.1): to unfold, so to explain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: explicō, explicāre
- Say it: explicō, explicāre, once more
- Say it: say explicō, explicāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to greet, then the Latin for to invite, then say explicō, explicāre again

Before you move on

What does explicō, explicāre mean? ("To explain, to unfold".) Say it once more.

197.5 interpretor, interpretārī — to interpret, to translate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to invite, then the Latin for to explain.

You'll want to know: interpretor, interpretārī

interpretor, interpretārī — "to interpret, to translate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

interpretor is built on interpres, "a go-between, an agent" (Lewis & Short), whose first part is inter, "between"; the second part is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: interpretor, interpretārī
- Say it: interpretor, interpretārī, once more
- Say it: say interpretor, interpretārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to invite, then the Latin for to explain, then say interpretor, interpretārī again

Before you move on

What does interpretor, interpretārī mean? ("To interpret, to translate".) Say it once more.

Chapter 198

To forbid, To defend, To die, To marry, To rest

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to forbid, to defend, to die, to marry and to rest.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 198: I can say to forbid, to defend, to die, to marry and to rest.

198.1 vetō, vetāre — to forbid

Before the new one: say the Latin for to explain, then the Latin for to interpret.

You'll want to know: vetō, vetāre

vetō, vetāre — "to forbid".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vetō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English veto, "I forbid", is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vetō, vetāre
- Say it: vetō, vetāre, once more
- Say it: say vetō, vetāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to explain, then the Latin for to interpret, then say vetō, vetāre again

Before you move on

What does vetō, vetāre mean? ("To forbid".) Say it once more.

198.2 dēfendō, dēfendere — to defend

Before the new one: say the Latin for to interpret, then the Latin for to forbid.

You'll want to know: dēfendō, dēfendere

dēfendō, dēfendere — "to defend".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēfendō is dē, "away", with an old verb fendō, "to strike" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwhen-*, "to strike, to ward off" (EtymDB 2.1): to strike away, to ward off.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēfendō, dēfendere
- Say it: dēfendō, dēfendere, once more
- Say it: say dēfendō, dēfendere
- Recall: say the Latin for to interpret, then the Latin for to forbid, then say dēfendō, dēfendere again

Before you move on

What does dēfendō, dēfendere mean? ("To defend".) Say it once more.

198.3 morior, morī — to die

Before the new one: say the Latin for to forbid, then the Latin for to defend.

You'll want to know: morior, morī

morior, morī — "to die".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

morior is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mer-*, "to die" (EtymDB 2.1). English murder is a distant cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: morior, morī
- Say it: morior, morī, once more
- Say it: say morior, morī
- Recall: say the Latin for to forbid, then the Latin for to defend, then say morior, morī again

Before you move on

What does morior, morī mean? ("To die".) Say it once more.

198.4 nūbō, nūbere — to marry (of a bride)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to defend, then the Latin for to die.

You'll want to know: nūbō, nūbere

nūbō, nūbere — "to marry (of a bride)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūbō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European snewbh-*, "to marry, to wed" (EtymDB 2.1). English nuptial comes from its participle nūptus, "married".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūbō, nūbere
- Say it: nūbō, nūbere, once more
- Say it: say nūbō, nūbere
- Recall: say the Latin for to defend, then the Latin for to die, then say nūbō, nūbere again

Before you move on

What does nūbō, nūbere mean? ("To marry (of a bride)".) Say it once more.

198.5 quiēscō, quiēscere — to rest

Before the new one: say the Latin for to die, then the Latin for to marry.

You'll want to know: quiēscō, quiēscere

quiēscō, quiēscere — "to rest".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quiēscō is built on quiēs, "rest" (Lewis & Short), with -scō, the ending of verbs of becoming: to come to rest. quiēs is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwyeh1-*, “to rest” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quiēscō, quiēscere
- Say it: quiēscō, quiēscere, once more
- Say it: say quiēscō, quiēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to die, then the Latin for to marry, then say quiēscō, quiēscere again

Before you move on

What does quiēscō, quiēscere mean? (“To rest”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 199

To compare, To persuade, To blame, To share, To avoid

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to compare, to persuade, to blame, to share and to avoid.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 199: I can say to compare, to persuade, to blame, to share and to avoid.

199.1 comparō, comparāre — to compare; to get ready

Before the new one: say the Latin for to marry, then the Latin for to rest.

You'll want to know: comparō, comparāre

comparō, comparāre — "to compare; to get ready".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

comparō is two verbs in one form. "To compare" is built on compar, "matched, equal" (Lewis & Short), from com-, "together", and pār, "equal"; "to get ready" is com- with parō, "to prepare".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: comparō, comparāre
- Say it: comparō, comparāre, once more
- Say it: say comparō, comparāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to marry, then the Latin for to rest, then say comparō, comparāre again

Before you move on

What does comparō, comparāre mean? ("To compare; to get ready".) Say it once more.

199.2 persuādeō, persuādēre — to persuade

Before the new one: say the Latin for to rest, then the Latin for to compare; to get ready.

You'll want to know: persuādeō, persuādēre

persuādeō, persuādēre — "to persuade".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

persuādeō is per, "thoroughly", with suādeō, "to advise, to urge": to urge someone all the way. suādeō belongs with suāvis, "sweet", and is inherited from Proto-Italic swādēō*, "to advise" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: persuādeō, persuādēre
- Say it: persuādeō, persuādēre, once more
- Say it: say persuādeō, persuādēre

- Recall: say the Latin for to rest, then the Latin for to compare; to get ready, then say persuādeō, persuādēre again

Before you move on

What does persuādeō, persuādēre mean? ("To persuade".) Say it once more.

199.3 reprehendō, reprehendere — to blame, to criticise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to compare; to get ready, then the Latin for to persuade.

You'll want to know: reprehendō, reprehendere

reprehendō, reprehendere — "to blame, to criticise".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

reprehendō is re-, "back", with prehendō, "to seize" (EtymDB 2.1): to pull back, to hold someone back with blame.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: reprehendō, reprehendere
- Say it: reprehendō, reprehendere, once more
- Say it: say reprehendō, reprehendere
- Recall: say the Latin for to compare; to get ready, then the Latin for to persuade, then say reprehendō, reprehendere again

Before you move on

What does reprehendō, reprehendere mean? ("To blame, to criticise".) Say it once more.

199.4 partior, partīrī — to share, to divide

Before the new one: say the Latin for to persuade, then the Latin for to blame.

You'll want to know: partior, partīrī

partior, partīrī — "to share, to divide".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

partior is built on pars, partis, "a part": to make into parts. English partition comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: partior, partīrī
- Say it: partior, partīrī, once more
- Say it: say partior, partīrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to persuade, then the Latin for to blame, then say partior, partīrī again

Before you move on

What does partior, partīrī mean? ("To share, to divide".) Say it once more.

199.5 vītō, vītāre — to avoid

Before the new one: say the Latin for to blame, then the Latin for to share.

You'll want to know: vītō, vītāre

vītō, vītāre — "to avoid".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vītō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short's proposal is uncertain, and no other is generally accepted. English inevitable comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vītō, vītāre
- Say it: vītō, vītāre, once more
- Say it: say vītō, vītāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to blame, then the Latin for to share, then say vītō, vītāre again

Before you move on

What does vītō, vītāre mean? ("To avoid".) Say it once more.

Chapter 200

To lift, To reach, To recognise, To refuse, To fly about

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to lift, to reach, to recognise, to refuse and to fly about.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 200: I can say to lift, to reach, to recognise, to refuse and to fly about.

200.1 tollō, tollere — to lift, to raise; to remove

Before the new one: say the Latin for to share, then the Latin for to avoid.

You'll want to know: tollō, tollere

tollō, tollere — "to lift, to raise; to remove".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tollō is inherited from Proto-Italic tolnō*, "to lift up", usually traced to Proto-Indo-European tl-neh2-*, "to lift, to bear" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek talanton, "a balance, a weight", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tollō, tollere
- Say it: tollō, tollere, once more
- Say it: say tollō, tollere
- Recall: say the Latin for to share, then the Latin for to avoid, then say tollō, tollere again

Before you move on

What does tollō, tollere mean? ("To lift, to raise; to remove".) Say it once more.

200.2 perveniō, pervenīre — to reach, to arrive at

Before the new one: say the Latin for to avoid, then the Latin for to lift.

You'll want to know: perveniō, pervenīre perveniō, pervenīre — "to reach, to arrive at".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perveniō is per, "through", with veniō, "to come" (EtymDB 2.1): to come all the way.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perveniō, pervenīre
- Say it: perveniō, pervenīre, once more
- Say it: say perveniō, pervenīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to avoid, then the Latin for to lift, then say perveniō, pervenīre again

Before you move on

What does perveniō, pervenīre mean? (“To reach, to arrive at”.) Say it once more.

200.3 agnōscō, agnōscere — to recognise

Before the new one: say the Latin for to lift, then the Latin for to reach.

You’ll want to know: agnōscō, agnōscere

agnōscō, agnōscere — “to recognise”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

agnōscō is ad, “to”, with gnōscō, “to get to know”, the older form of nōscō (Lewis & Short): the g of the old form survives here.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: agnōscō, agnōscere
- Say it: agnōscō, agnōscere, once more
- Say it: say agnōscō, agnōscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to lift, then the Latin for to reach, then say agnōscō, agnōscere again

Before you move on

What does agnōscō, agnōscere mean? (“To recognise”.) Say it once more.

200.4 recūsō, recūsāre — to refuse

Before the new one: say the Latin for to reach, then the Latin for to recognise.

You'll want to know: recūsō, recūsāre

recūsō, recūsāre — "to refuse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

recūsō is built on causa, "a case, a reason" (Lewis & Short), with re-, "back": to plead against, to refuse.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: recūsō, recūsāre
- Say it: recūsō, recūsāre, once more
- Say it: say recūsō, recūsāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to reach, then the Latin for to recognise, then say recūsō, recūsāre again

Before you move on

What does recūsō, recūsāre mean? ("To refuse".) Say it once more.

200.5 volitō, volitāre — to fly about

Before the new one: say the Latin for to recognise, then the Latin for to refuse.

You'll want to know: volitō, volitāre

volitō, volitāre — "to fly about".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

volitō is a frequentative of volō, "to fly" (Lewis & Short): to keep flying, to flit about. It is a different verb from volō, "to want".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: volitō, volitāre
- Say it: volitō, volitāre, once more
- Say it: say volitō, volitāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to recognise, then the Latin for to refuse, then say volitō, volitāre again

Before you move on

What does volitō, volitāre mean? ("To fly about".) Say it once more.

Chapter 201

To talk together, To hand over, To straighten, To celebrate, To pursue

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to talk together, to hand over, to straighten, to celebrate and to pursue.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 201: I can say to talk together, to hand over, to straighten, to celebrate and to pursue.

201.1 colloquor, colloquī — to talk together

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to refuse, then the Latin for to fly about.

You'll want to know: colloquor, colloquī

colloquor, colloquī — "to talk together".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

colloquor is con-, "together", with loquor, "to speak" (EtymDB 2.1). English colloquial comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: colloquor, colloquī
- Say it: colloquor, colloquī, once more
- Say it: say colloquor, colloquī
- Recall: say the Latin for to refuse, then the Latin for to fly about, then say colloquor, colloquī again

Before you move on

What does colloquor, colloquī mean? ("To talk together".) Say it once more.

201.2 trādō, trādere — to hand over

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fly about, then the Latin for to talk together.

You'll want to know: trādō, trādere

trādō, trādere — "to hand over".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trādō is contracted from trāns, "across", and dō, "to give" (Lewis & Short): to hand across. English tradition and traitor come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trādō, trādere
- Say it: trādō, trādere, once more
- Say it: say trādō, trādere
- Recall: say the Latin for to fly about, then the Latin for to talk together, then say trādō, trādere again

Before you move on

What does trādō, trādere mean? ("To hand over".) Say it once more.

201.3 corrigō, corrigere — to straighten, to correct

Before the new one: say the Latin for to talk together, then the Latin for to hand over.

You'll want to know: corrigō, corrigere

corrigō, corrigere — "to straighten, to correct".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

corrigō is regō, "to keep straight" (Lewis & Short), with con-, "thoroughly": to make fully straight.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: corrigō, corrigere
- Say it: corrigō, corrigere, once more
- Say it: say corrigō, corrigere
- Recall: say the Latin for to talk together, then the Latin for to hand over, then say corrigō, corrigere again

Before you move on

What does corrigō, corrigere mean? ("To straighten, to correct".) Say it once more.

201.4 celebrō, celebrāre — to celebrate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hand over, then the Latin for to straighten.

You'll want to know: celebrō, celebrāre

celebrō, celebrāre — "to celebrate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

celebrō is built on celeber, "crowded, much visited" (Lewis & Short): to throng a place, then to honour it with crowds.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: celebrō, celebrāre
- Say it: celebrō, celebrāre, once more
- Say it: say celebrō, celebrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to hand over, then the Latin for to straighten, then say celebrō, celebrāre again

Before you move on

What does celebrō, celebrāre mean? ("To celebrate".) Say it once more.

201.5 persequor, persequī — to pursue

Before the new one: say the Latin for to straighten, then the Latin for to celebrate.

You'll want to know: persequor, persequī

persequor, persequī — "to pursue".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

persequor is per, "through", with sequor, "to follow" (EtymDB 2.1). sequor is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sekw-*, "to follow" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: persequor, persequī
- Say it: persequor, persequī, once more
- Say it: say persequor, persequī
- Recall: say the Latin for to straighten, then the Latin for to celebrate, then say persequor, persequī again

Before you move on

What does persequor, persequī mean? ("To pursue".) Say it once more.

Chapter 202

To advise, To tremble, To welcome, To do, To go forward

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to advise, to tremble, to welcome, to do and to go forward.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 202: I can say to advise, to tremble, to welcome, to do and to go forward.

202.1 suādeō, suādēre — to advise, to urge

Before the new one: say the Latin for to celebrate, then the Latin for to pursue.

You'll want to know: suādeō, suādēre

suādeō, suādēre — "to advise, to urge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

suādeō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sweh2d-*, "sweet" (EtymDB 2.1): to advise was to make a thing sweet to someone. suāvis, "sweet", and English sweet are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: suādeō, suādēre
- Say it: suādeō, suādēre, once more
- Say it: say suādeō, suādēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to celebrate, then the Latin for to pursue, then say suādeō, suādēre again

Before you move on

What does suādeō, suādēre mean? ("To advise, to urge".) Say it once more.

202.2 tremō, tremere — to tremble

Before the new one: say the Latin for to pursue, then the Latin for to advise.

You'll want to know: tremō, tremere

tremō, tremere — "to tremble".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tremō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European trem-*, "to tremble" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek tremō, "to tremble", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tremō, tremere
- Say it: tremō, tremere, once more
- Say it: say tremō, tremere

- Recall: say the Latin for to pursue, then the Latin for to advise, then say tremō, tremere again

Before you move on

What does tremō, tremere mean? ("To tremble".) Say it once more.

202.3 excipiō, excipere — to welcome, to receive

Before the new one: say the Latin for to advise, then the Latin for to tremble.

You'll want to know: excipiō, excipere

excipiō, excipere — "to welcome, to receive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

excipiō is ex, "out", with capiō, "to take" (EtymDB 2.1), its a weakened to i: to take out, to receive. capiō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European keh2p-*, "to grab" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: excipiō, excipere
- Say it: excipiō, excipere, once more
- Say it: say excipiō, excipere
- Recall: say the Latin for to advise, then the Latin for to tremble, then say excipiō, excipere again

Before you move on

What does excipiō, excipere mean? ("To welcome, to receive".) Say it once more.

202.4 agō, agere — to do, to drive

Before the new one: say the Latin for to tremble, then the Latin for to welcome.

You'll want to know: agō, agere

agō, agere — "to do, to drive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

agō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2eg-*, "to drive, to lead" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek agō, "to lead", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: agō, agere
- Say it: agō, agere, once more
- Say it: say agō, agere
- Recall: say the Latin for to tremble, then the Latin for to welcome, then say agō, agere again

Before you move on

What does agō, agere mean? ("To do, to drive".) Say it once more.

202.5 prōcēdō, prōcēdere — to go forward, to advance

Before the new one: say the Latin for to welcome, then the Latin for to do.

You'll want to know: prōcēdō, prōcēdere

prōcēdō, prōcēdere — "to go forward, to advance".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōcēdō is prō, "forward", with cēdō, "to go" (EtymDB 2.1). English proceed and process come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōcēdō, prōcēdere
- Say it: prōcēdō, prōcēdere, once more
- Say it: say prōcēdō, prōcēdere
- Recall: say the Latin for to welcome, then the Latin for to do, then say prōcēdō, prōcēdere again

Before you move on

What does prōcēdō, prōcēdere mean? ("To go forward, to advance".) Say it once more.

Chapter 203

To doubt, To look for, To use up, To annoy, To forget

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to doubt, to look for, to use up, to annoy and to forget.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 203: I can say to doubt, to look for, to use up, to annoy and to forget.

203.1 dubitō, dubitāre — to doubt, to hesitate

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to do, then the Latin for to go forward.

You'll want to know: dubitō, dubitāre

dubitō, dubitāre — "to doubt, to hesitate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dubitō is built on dubius, "doubtful" (Lewis & Short), whose first part is duo, "two": to be of two minds.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dubitō, dubitāre
- Say it: dubitō, dubitāre, once more
- Say it: say dubitō, dubitāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to do, then the Latin for to go forward, then say dubitō, dubitāre again

Before you move on

What does dubitō, dubitāre mean? ("To doubt, to hesitate".) Say it once more.

203.2 quaerō, quaerere — to look for, to ask

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go forward, then the Latin for to doubt.

You'll want to know: quaerō, quaerere

quaerō, quaerere — "to look for, to ask".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quaerō has no sure origin. Old Latin wrote it quairō, and quaesō, "I beg", is an older form of the same verb (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quaerō, quaerere
- Say it: quaerō, quaerere, once more
- Say it: say quaerō, quaerere
- Recall: say the Latin for to go forward, then the Latin for to doubt, then say quaerō, quaerere again

Before you move on

What does quaerō, quaerere mean? ("To look for, to ask".) Say it once more.

203.3 cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere — to use up

Before the new one: say the Latin for to doubt, then the Latin for to look for.

You'll want to know: cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere

cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere — "to use up".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsūmō is con-, "completely", with sūmō, "to take" (EtymDB 2.1): to take wholly, to use up.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere
- Say it: cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere, once more
- Say it: say cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere
- Recall: say the Latin for to doubt, then the Latin for to look for, then say cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere again

Before you move on

What does cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere mean? ("To use up".) Say it once more.

203.4 vexō, vexāre — to annoy, to harass

Before the new one: say the Latin for to look for, then the Latin for to use up.

You'll want to know: vexō, vexāre

vexō, vexāre — "to annoy, to harass".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vexō is usually taken as a frequentative of vehō, "to carry" (Lewis & Short): to keep carrying about, to toss, so to harass.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vexō, vexāre
- Say it: vexō, vexāre, once more
- Say it: say vexō, vexāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to look for, then the Latin for to use up, then say vexō, vexāre again

Before you move on

What does vexō, vexāre mean? ("To annoy, to harass".) Say it once more.

203.5 oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī — to forget

Before the new one: say the Latin for to use up, then the Latin for to annoy.

You'll want to know: oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī

oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī — "to forget".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

oblīvīscor is usually explained as ob, "over", with a root for smearing or smoothing: the mind wiped over. Lewis & Short tie it instead to līvor, "a dark colour".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī
- Say it: oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī, once more
- Say it: say oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī
- Recall: say the Latin for to use up, then the Latin for to annoy, then say oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī again

Before you move on

What does oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī mean? ("To forget".) Say it once more.

Chapter 204

To state firmly, To hurt, To decorate, To throw together, To cease

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to state firmly, to hurt, to decorate, to throw together and to cease.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 204: I can say to state firmly, to hurt, to decorate, to throw together and to cease.

204.1 affirmō, affirmāre — to state firmly

Before the new one: say the Latin for to annoy, then the Latin for to forget.

You'll want to know: affirmō, affirmāre

affirmō, affirmāre — "to state firmly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

affirmō is ad, "to", with firmō, "to make firm" (EtymDB 2.1), from firmus, "firm": to make a statement firm.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: affirmō, affirmāre
- Say it: affirmō, affirmāre, once more
- Say it: say affirmō, affirmāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to annoy, then the Latin for to forget, then say affirmō, affirmāre again

Before you move on

What does affirmō, affirmāre mean? ("To state firmly".) Say it once more.

204.2 doleō, dolēre — to hurt, to grieve

Before the new one: say the Latin for to forget, then the Latin for to state firmly.

You'll want to know: doleō, dolēre

doleō, dolēre — "to hurt, to grieve".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

doleō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European delh1-*, "to split, to cut" (EtymDB 2.1): pain as a cutting.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: doleō, dolēre
- Say it: doleō, dolēre, once more
- Say it: say doleō, dolēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to forget, then the Latin for to state firmly, then say doleō, dolēre again

Before you move on

What does doleō, dolēre mean? (“To hurt, to grieve”.) Say it once more.

204.3 ōrnō, ōrnāre — to decorate

Before the new one: say the Latin for to state firmly, then the Latin for to hurt.

You’ll want to know: ōrnō, ōrnāre

ōrnō, ōrnāre — “to decorate”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrnō is often explained as a shortened ordināre*, “to put in order”, from ōrdō, “a row, an order”, but this is uncertain.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrnō, ōrnāre
- Say it: ōrnō, ōrnāre, once more
- Say it: say ōrnō, ōrnāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to state firmly, then the Latin for to hurt, then say ōrnō, ōrnāre again

Before you move on

What does ōrnō, ōrnāre mean? (“To decorate”.) Say it once more.

204.4 coniciō, conicere — to throw together; to guess

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hurt, then the Latin for to decorate.

You'll want to know: coniciō, conicere

coniciō, conicere — "to throw together; to guess".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coniciō is con-, "together", with iaciō, "to throw" (EtymDB 2.1): to throw together, then to put facts together, to guess. English conjecture comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: coniciō, conicere
- Say it: coniciō, conicere, once more
- Say it: say coniciō, conicere
- Recall: say the Latin for to hurt, then the Latin for to decorate, then say coniciō, conicere again

Before you move on

What does coniciō, conicere mean? ("To throw together; to guess".) Say it once more.

204.5 dēsinō, dēsinere — to cease

Before the new one: say the Latin for to decorate, then the Latin for to throw together; to guess.

You'll want to know: dēsinō, dēsinere

dēsinō, dēsinere — "to cease".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēsinō is dē, "off, away", with sinō, "to let, to leave": to leave off. Sinō is inherited, but its deeper origin is uncertain: EtymDB 2.1 records two different roots.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēsinō, dēsinere
- Say it: dēsinō, dēsinere, once more
- Say it: say dēsinō, dēsinere
- Recall: say the Latin for to decorate, then the Latin for to throw together; to guess, then say dēsinō, dēsinere again

Before you move on

What does dēsinō, dēsinere mean? ("To cease".) Say it once more.

Chapter 205

Wound, Scar, Head cold, Drug, Ointment

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a wound, a scar, a head cold, a drug and an ointment.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 205: I can say a wound, a scar, a head cold, a drug and an ointment.

205.1 vulnus, vulneris — a wound

Before the new one: say the Latin for to throw together; to guess, then the Latin for to cease.

You'll want to know: vulnus, vulneris

vulnus, vulneris — "a wound".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vulnus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root wel-*, "to tear, to wound". Lewis & Short link it with vellō, "to pluck, to tear".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vulnus, vulneris
- Say it: vulnus, vulneris, once more
- Say it: say vulnus, vulneris
- Recall: say the Latin for to throw together; to guess, then the Latin for to cease, then say vulnus, vulneris again

Before you move on

What does vulnus, vulneris mean? ("A wound".) Say it once more.

205.2 cicātrīx, cicātrīcis — a scar

Before the new one: say the Latin for to cease, then the Latin for a wound.

You'll want to know: cicātrīx, cicātrīcis

cicātrīx, cicātrīcis — "a scar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cicātrīx has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cicātrīx, cicātrīcis
- Say it: cicātrīx, cicātrīcis, once more
- Say it: say cicātrīx, cicātrīcis
- Recall: say the Latin for to cease, then the Latin for a wound, then say cicātrīx, cicātrīcis again

Before you move on

What does cicātrīx, cicātrīcis mean? ("A scar".) Say it once more.

205.3 gravēdō, gravēdinis — a head cold

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wound, then the Latin for a scar.

You'll want to know: gravēdō, gravēdinis

gravēdō, gravēdinis — "a head cold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gravēdō is built on gravis, "heavy" (Lewis & Short): the heaviness of a head cold.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gravēdō, gravēdinis
- Say it: gravēdō, gravēdinis, once more
- Say it: say gravēdō, gravēdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a wound, then the Latin for a scar, then say gravēdō, gravēdinis again

Before you move on

What does gravēdō, gravēdinis mean? ("A head cold".) Say it once more.

205.4 medicāmentum, medicāmentī — a drug, a medicine

Before the new one: say the Latin for a scar, then the Latin for a head cold.

You'll want to know: medicāmentum, medicāmentī

medicāmentum, medicāmentī — "a drug, a medicine".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

medicāmentum is built on medicor, "to heal, to treat" (Lewis & Short), with -mentum, an ending for a means: the means of healing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: medicāmentum, medicāmentī
- Say it: medicāmentum, medicāmentī, once more
- Say it: say medicāmentum, medicāmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a scar, then the Latin for a head cold, then say medicāmentum, medicāmentī again

Before you move on

What does medicāmentum, medicāmentī mean? ("A drug, a medicine".) Say it once more.

205.5 unguentum, unguentī — an ointment

Before the new one: say the Latin for a head cold, then the Latin for a drug.

You'll want to know: unguentum, unguentī

unguentum, unguentī — "an ointment".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

unguentum is built on unguō, "to smear, to anoint" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h3engw-*, "to salve, to anoint" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: unguentum, unguentī
- Say it: unguentum, unguentī, once more
- Say it: say unguentum, unguentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a head cold, then the Latin for a drug, then say unguentum, unguentī again

Before you move on

What does unguentum, unguentī mean? ("An ointment".) Say it once more.

205.6 Words from chapters 197-200 — a first pass

Say the words for a drug and an ointment.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to kiss, to greet, to invite, to explain, to interpret
- to forbid, to defend, to die, to marry, to rest
- to compare; to get ready, to persuade, to blame, to share, to avoid
- to lift, to reach, to recognise, to refuse, to fly about

Before you move on

To kiss? (ōsculor, ōsculārī.) To greet? (salūtō, salūtāre.) To invite? (invītō, invītāre.) To explain? (explicō, explicāre.) To interpret? (interpretor, interpretārī.) To forbid? (vetō, vetāre.) To defend? (dēfendō, dēfendere.) To die? (morior, morī.) To marry? (nūbō, nūbere.) To rest? (quiēscō, quiēscere.) To compare; to get ready? (comparō, comparāre.) To persuade? (persuādeō, persuādēre.) To blame? (reprehendō, reprehendere.) To share? (partior, partīrī.) To avoid? (vītō, vītāre.) To lift? (tollō, tollere.) To reach? (perveniō, pervenīre.) To recognise? (agnōscō, agnōscere.) To refuse? (recūsō, recūsāre.) To fly about? (volitō, volitāre.)

205.7 Words from chapters 201-205 — a second pass

Say the words for to talk together and to hand over.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to talk together, to hand over, to straighten, to celebrate, to pursue
- to advise, to tremble, to welcome, to do, to go forward
- to doubt, to look for, to use up, to annoy, to forget
- to state firmly, to hurt, to decorate, to throw together; to guess, to cease
- a wound, a scar, a head cold, a drug, an ointment

Before you move on

To talk together? (colloquor, colloquī.) To hand over? (trādō, trādere.) To straighten? (corrigō, corrigere.) To celebrate? (celebrō, celebrāre.) To pursue? (persequor, persequī.) To advise? (suādeō, suādēre.) To tremble? (tremō, tremere.) To welcome? (excipiō, excipere.) To do? (agō, agere.) To go forward? (prōcēdō, prōcēdere.) To doubt? (dubitō, dubitāre.) To look for? (quaerō, quaerere.) To use up? (cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere.) To annoy? (vexō, vexāre.) To forget? (oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī.) To state firmly? (affirmō, affirmāre.) To hurt? (doleō, dolēre.) To decorate? (ōrnō, ōrnāre.) To throw together; to guess? (coniciō, conicere.) To cease? (dēsinō, dēsinere.) A wound? (vulnus, vulneris.) A scar? (cicātrīx, cicātrīcis.) A head cold? (gravēdō, gravēdinis.) A drug? (medicāmentum, medicāmentī.) An ointment? (unguentum, unguentī.)

Chapter 206

Breath, Memory, Wisdom, Talent, Habit

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say breath, memory, wisdom, talent and a habit.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 206: I can say breath, memory, wisdom, talent and a habit.

206.1 anima, animae — breath, soul

Before the new one: say the Latin for a drug, a medicine, then the Latin for an ointment.

You'll want to know: anima, animae

anima, animae — "breath, soul".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

anima is the partner of animus, "mind, spirit" (EtymDB 2.1), and both are usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2enh1-*, "to breathe" (EtymDB 2.1): the soul as breath.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: anima, animae
- Say it: anima, animae, once more
- Say it: say anima, animae
- Recall: say the Latin for a drug, a medicine, then the Latin for an ointment, then say anima, animae again

Before you move on

What does anima, animae mean? ("Breath, soul".) Say it once more.

206.2 memoria, memoriae — memory

Before the new one: say the Latin for an ointment, then the Latin for breath.

You'll want to know: memoria, memoriae

memoria, memoriae — "memory".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

memoria is built on memor, "mindful" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)mer-*, "to remember, to be mindful" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: memoria, memoriae
- Say it: memoria, memoriae, once more
- Say it: say memoria, memoriae
- Recall: say the Latin for an ointment, then the Latin for breath, then say memoria, memoriae again

Before you move on

What does memoria, memoriae mean? ("Memory".) Say it once more.

206.3 sapientia, sapientiae — wisdom

Before the new one: say the Latin for breath, then the Latin for memory.

You'll want to know: sapientia, sapientiae

sapientia, sapientiae — "wisdom".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sapientia is built on sapiēns, "wise" (Lewis & Short), from sapiō, "to taste, to be wise", with -ia, an ending for a quality.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sapientia, sapientiae
- Say it: sapientia, sapientiae, once more
- Say it: say sapientia, sapientiae
- Recall: say the Latin for breath, then the Latin for memory, then say sapientia, sapientiae again

Before you move on

What does sapientia, sapientiae mean? ("Wisdom".) Say it once more.

206.4 ingenium, ingeniī — talent, character

Before the new one: say the Latin for memory, then the Latin for wisdom.

You'll want to know: ingenium, ingeniī

ingenium, ingeniī — "talent, character".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ingenium is in, "in", with the root of gignō, "to beget, to give birth to" (Lewis & Short): what is born in a person, one's nature. English engine and ingenious come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ingenium, ingeniī
- Say it: ingenium, ingeniī, once more
- Say it: say ingenium, ingeniī
- Recall: say the Latin for memory, then the Latin for wisdom, then say ingenium, ingeniī again

Before you move on

What does ingenium, ingeniī mean? ("Talent, character".) Say it once more.

206.5 cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis — a habit, a custom

Before the new one: say the Latin for wisdom, then the Latin for talent.

You'll want to know: cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis

cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis — "a habit, a custom".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsuētūdō is built on cōnsuēscō, "to get used to" (Lewis & Short), with -tūdō, an ending for a state. English custom comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis
- Say it: cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis, once more
- Say it: say cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for wisdom, then the Latin for talent, then say cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis again

Before you move on

What does cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis mean? ("A habit, a custom".) Say it once more.

Chapter 207

Generation, Age, Sunset, Sunrise, First light

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a generation, age, sunset, sunrise and first light.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 207: I can say a generation, age, sunset, sunrise and first light.

207.1 saeculum, saeculī — a generation, a century

Before the new one: say the Latin for talent, then the Latin for a habit.

You'll want to know: saeculum, saeculī

saeculum, saeculī — "a generation, a century".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saeculum has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. Welsh hoedl, "lifetime", is sometimes compared. English secular comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saeculum, saeculī
- Say it: saeculum, saeculī, once more
- Say it: say saeculum, saeculī
- Recall: say the Latin for talent, then the Latin for a habit, then say saeculum, saeculī again

Before you move on

What does saeculum, saeculī mean? ("A generation, a century".) Say it once more.

207.2 aetās, aetātis — age, a lifetime

Before the new one: say the Latin for a habit, then the Latin for a generation.

You'll want to know: aetās, aetātis

aetās, aetātis — "age, a lifetime".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aetās is contracted from older aevitās (Lewis & Short), built on aevum, "a lifetime, an age", which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2eyu-*, "life force".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aetās, aetātis
- Say it: aetās, aetātis, once more
- Say it: say aetās, aetātis

- Recall: say the Latin for a habit, then the Latin for a generation, then say aetās, aetātis again

Before you move on

What does aetās, aetātis mean? ("Age, a lifetime".) Say it once more.

207.3 occāsus, occāsūs — sunset; a setting

Before the new one: say the Latin for a generation, then the Latin for age.

You'll want to know: occāsus, occāsūs

occāsus, occāsūs — "sunset; a setting".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

occāsus is built on occidō, "to fall down, to set" (Lewis & Short), from ob, "towards", and cadō, "to fall": the sun's going down.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: occāsus, occāsūs
- Say it: occāsus, occāsūs, once more
- Say it: say occāsus, occāsūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a generation, then the Latin for age, then say occāsus, occāsūs again

Before you move on

What does occāsus, occāsūs mean? ("Sunset; a setting".) Say it once more.

207.4 ortus, ortūs — sunrise; a rising

Before the new one: say the Latin for age, then the Latin for sunset; a setting.

You'll want to know: ortus, ortūs

ortus, ortūs — "sunrise; a rising".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ortus is built on orior, "to rise" (Lewis & Short): the sun's rising. English orient, "the east", comes from the same verb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ortus, ortūs
- Say it: ortus, ortūs, once more
- Say it: say ortus, ortūs
- Recall: say the Latin for age, then the Latin for sunset; a setting, then say ortus, ortūs again

Before you move on

What does ortus, ortūs mean? ("Sunrise; a rising".) Say it once more.

207.5 dīlūculum, dīlūculī — first light, daybreak

Before the new one: say the Latin for sunset; a setting, then the Latin for sunrise; a rising.

You'll want to know: dīlūculum, dīlūculī

dīlūculum, dīlūculī — "first light, daybreak".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīlūculum is built on dīlūceō, "to grow light" (Lewis & Short), from lūx, "light", with -culum, a diminutive ending: the first glimmer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dīlūculum, dīlūculī
- Say it: dīlūculum, dīlūculī, once more
- Say it: say dīlūculum, dīlūculī
- Recall: say the Latin for sunset; a setting, then the Latin for sunrise; a rising, then say dīlūculum, dīlūculī again

Before you move on

What does dīlūculum, dīlūculī mean? ("First light, daybreak".) Say it once more.

Chapter 208

Finally, Lastly, On the spot, Formerly, Long since

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say finally, lastly, on the spot, formerly and long since.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 208: I can say finally, lastly, on the spot, formerly and long since.

208.1 dēnique — finally

Before the new one: say the Latin for sunrise; a rising, then the Latin for first light.

You'll want to know: dēnique

dēnique — "finally".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēnique has no sure origin; it may be built on dē, "down from", with -que, "and", but Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēnique
- Say it: dēnique, once more
- Say it: say dēnique
- Recall: say the Latin for sunrise; a rising, then the Latin for first light, then say dēnique again

Before you move on

What does dēnique mean? ("Finally".) Say it once more.

208.2 postrēmō — lastly

Before the new one: say the Latin for first light, then the Latin for finally.

You'll want to know: postrēmō

postrēmō — "lastly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

postrēmō is the adverb of postrēmus, "last", the superlative of posterus, "coming after" (Lewis & Short), from post, "after".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: postrēmō
- Say it: postrēmō, once more
- Say it: say postrēmō
- Recall: say the Latin for first light, then the Latin for finally, then say postrēmō again

Before you move on

What does postrēmō mean? ("Lastly".) Say it once more.

208.3 illicō — on the spot

Before the new one: say the Latin for finally, then the Latin for lastly.

You'll want to know: illicō

illicō — "on the spot".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

illicō is usually explained as in locō, "on the spot", run together (Lewis & Short, which prefers the spelling īlicō).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: illicō
- Say it: illicō, once more
- Say it: say illicō
- Recall: say the Latin for finally, then the Latin for lastly, then say illicō again

Before you move on

What does illicō mean? ("On the spot".) Say it once more.

208.4 quondam — formerly, at one time

Before the new one: say the Latin for lastly, then the Latin for on the spot.

You'll want to know: quondam

quondam — "formerly, at one time".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quondam is quom, "when", the old form of cum, with -dam, a pointing ending (Lewis & Short): at some time, once.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quondam
- Say it: quondam, once more
- Say it: say quondam
- Recall: say the Latin for lastly, then the Latin for on the spot, then say quondam again

Before you move on

What does quondam mean? ("Formerly, at one time".) Say it once more.

208.5 iamdūdum — long since

Before the new one: say the Latin for on the spot, then the Latin for formerly.

You'll want to know: iamdūdum

iamdūdum — "long since".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iamdūdum is iam, "already", with dūdum, "a while ago" (Lewis & Short): already long ago.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iamdūdum
- Say it: iamdūdum, once more
- Say it: say iamdūdum
- Recall: say the Latin for on the spot, then the Latin for formerly, then say iamdūdum again

Before you move on

What does iamdūdum mean? ("Long since".) Say it once more.

Chapter 209

Region, Province, From there, In the way, All the way

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a region, a province, from there, in the way and all the way.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 209: I can say a region, a province, from there, in the way and all the way.

209.1 regiō, regiōnis — a region

> Before the new one: say the Latin for formerly, then the Latin for long since.

You'll want to know: regiō, regiōnis

regiō, regiōnis — "a region".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

regiō is built on regō, "to direct, to draw straight" (Lewis & Short): first a straight line, a boundary, then the area it marks out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: regiō, regiōnis
- Say it: regiō, regiōnis, once more
- Say it: say regiō, regiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for formerly, then the Latin for long since, then say regiō, regiōnis again

Before you move on

What does regiō, regiōnis mean? ("A region".) Say it once more.

209.2 prōvincia, prōvinciae — a province

Before the new one: say the Latin for long since, then the Latin for a region.

You'll want to know: prōvincia, prōvinciae

prōvincia, prōvinciae — "a province".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prōvincia has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. A link with vincō, "to conquer", is popular but not proven.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prōvincia, prōvinciae
- Say it: prōvincia, prōvinciae, once more
- Say it: say prōvincia, prōvinciae
- Recall: say the Latin for long since, then the Latin for a region, then say prōvincia, prōvinciae again

Before you move on

What does prōvincia, prōvinciae mean? (“A province”.) Say it once more.

209.3 inde — from there; then

Before the new one: say the Latin for a region, then the Latin for a province.

You’ll want to know: inde

inde — “from there; then”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inde is usually explained as built on the pronoun stem of is, “he, that”, with an ending -de, “from” (Lewis & Short): from there.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inde
- Say it: inde, once more
- Say it: say inde
- Recall: say the Latin for a region, then the Latin for a province, then say inde again

Before you move on

What does inde mean? (“From there; then”.) Say it once more.

209.4 obviam — in the way, to meet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a province, then the Latin for from there; then.

You'll want to know: obviam

obviam — "in the way, to meet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

obviam is ob, "towards, in front of", with viam, "the way" (Lewis & Short): in the way, so to meet someone.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: obviam
- Say it: obviam, once more
- Say it: say obviam
- Recall: say the Latin for a province, then the Latin for from there; then, then say obviam again

Before you move on

What does obviam mean? ("In the way, to meet".) Say it once more.

209.5 usque — all the way, continuously

Before the new one: say the Latin for from there; then, then the Latin for in the way.

You'll want to know: usque

usque — "all the way, continuously".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

usque is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European uds-kwe*, "and up to" (EtymDB 2.1); its ending is the -que, "and", of Latin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: usque
- Say it: usque, once more
- Say it: say usque
- Recall: say the Latin for from there; then, then the Latin for in the way, then say usque again

Before you move on

What does usque mean? ("All the way, continuously".) Say it once more.

Chapter 210

Moreover, Indeed, Surely, About, Only

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say moreover, indeed, surely, about and only.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 210: I can say moreover, indeed, surely, about and only.

210.1 autem — moreover; however

> Before the new one: say the Latin for in the way, then the Latin for all the way.

You'll want to know: autem

autem — "moreover; however".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

autem belongs with aut, "or" (Lewis & Short), but how the two were formed is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: autem
- Say it: autem, once more
- Say it: say autem
- Recall: say the Latin for in the way, then the Latin for all the way, then say autem again

Before you move on

What does autem mean? ("Moreover; however".) Say it once more.

210.2 vērō — indeed; but

Before the new one: say the Latin for all the way, then the Latin for moreover; however.

You'll want to know: vērō

vērō — "indeed; but".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vērō is an old case form of vērus, "true" (Lewis & Short): in truth.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vērō
- Say it: vērō, once more
- Say it: say vērō
- Recall: say the Latin for all the way, then the Latin for moreover; however, then say vērō again

Before you move on

What does vērō mean? ("Indeed; but".) Say it once more.

210.3 profectō — surely

Before the new one: say the Latin for moreover; however, then the Latin for indeed; but.

You'll want to know: profectō

profectō — "surely".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

profectō is prō factō, "for a fact" (Lewis & Short): surely.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: profectō
- Say it: profectō, once more
- Say it: say profectō
- Recall: say the Latin for moreover; however, then the Latin for indeed; but, then say profectō again

Before you move on

What does profectō mean? ("Surely".) Say it once more.

210.4 ferē — about, nearly

Before the new one: say the Latin for indeed; but, then the Latin for surely.

You'll want to know: ferē

ferē — "about, nearly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ferē has no sure origin; it is often linked through a root dher-*, "to hold fast" (EtymDB 2.1), with firmus, "firm", but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ferē
- Say it: ferē, once more
- Say it: say ferē
- Recall: say the Latin for indeed; but, then the Latin for surely, then say ferē again

Before you move on

What does ferē mean? ("About, nearly".) Say it once more.

210.5 tantum — only; so much

Before the new one: say the Latin for surely, then the Latin for about.

You'll want to know: tantum

tantum — "only; so much".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tantum is the neuter of tantus, "so great", used as an adverb (Lewis & Short): so much, and only so much.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tantum
- Say it: tantum, once more
- Say it: say tantum
- Recall: say the Latin for surely, then the Latin for about, then say tantum again

Before you move on

What does tantum mean? ("Only; so much".) Say it once more.

Chapter 211

Altogether, Hardly, Of one's own accord, In vain, Back again

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say altogether, hardly, of one's own accord, in vain and back again.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 211: I can say altogether, hardly, of one's own accord, in vain and back again.

211.1 omnīnō — altogether

> Before the new one: say the Latin for about, then the Latin for only; so much.

You'll want to know: omnīnō

omnīnō — "altogether".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

omnīnō is built on omnis, "all" (Lewis & Short): altogether. Where omnis comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: omnīnō
- Say it: omnīnō, once more
- Say it: say omnīnō
- Recall: say the Latin for about, then the Latin for only; so much, then say omnīnō again

Before you move on

What does omnīnō mean? ("Altogether".) Say it once more.

211.2 vix — hardly

Before the new one: say the Latin for only; so much, then the Latin for altogether.

You'll want to know: vix

vix — "hardly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vix has no sure origin; Lewis & Short suggest the root of vincō, "to win": won with effort. That is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vix
- Say it: vix, once more
- Say it: say vix
- Recall: say the Latin for only; so much, then the Latin for altogether, then say vix again

Before you move on

What does vix mean? (“Hardly”.) Say it once more.

211.3 sponte — of one’s own accord

Before the new one: say the Latin for altogether, then the Latin for hardly.

You’ll want to know: sponte

sponte — “of one’s own accord”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sponte is the ablative of an old noun for “free will”; Lewis & Short link it with spondeō, “to pledge”, but that is uncertain.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sponte
- Say it: sponte, once more
- Say it: say sponte
- Recall: say the Latin for altogether, then the Latin for hardly, then say sponte again

Before you move on

What does sponte mean? (“Of one’s own accord”.) Say it once more.

211.4 frūstrā — in vain

Before the new one: say the Latin for hardly, then the Latin for of one’s own accord.

You'll want to know: frūstrā

frūstrā — "in vain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

frūstrā is usually linked with fraus, "deceit, harm" (Lewis & Short): to one's harm, so in vain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frūstrā
- Say it: frūstrā, once more
- Say it: say frūstrā
- Recall: say the Latin for hardly, then the Latin for of one's own accord, then say frūstrā again

Before you move on

What does frūstrā mean? ("In vain".) Say it once more.

211.5 rūrsus — back again, once more

Before the new one: say the Latin for of one's own accord, then the Latin for in vain.

You'll want to know: rūrsus

rūrsus — "back again, once more".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rūrsus is contracted from revorsus, "turned back" (Lewis & Short), the participle of revertō, "to turn back".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rūrsus
- Say it: rūrsus, once more
- Say it: say rūrsus
- Recall: say the Latin for of one's own accord, then the Latin for in vain, then say rūrsus again

Before you move on

What does rūrsus mean? ("Back again, once more".) Say it once more.

Chapter 212

Inquisitive, Envious, Anxious, Peaceful, Silent

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say inquisitive, envious, anxious, peaceful and silent.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 212: I can say inquisitive, envious, anxious, peaceful and silent.

212.1 cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum — inquisitive, painstaking

Before the new one: say the Latin for in vain, then the Latin for back again.

You'll want to know: cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum

cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum — "inquisitive, painstaking".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūriōsus is built on cūra, "care" (Lewis & Short), with -ōsus, "full of": full of care, so careful or prying. English curious comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum
- Say it: cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum, once more
- Say it: say cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum
- Recall: say the Latin for in vain, then the Latin for back again, then say cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum again

Before you move on

What does cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum mean? ("Inquisitive, painstaking".) Say it once more.

212.2 invidus, invida, invidum — envious

Before the new one: say the Latin for back again, then the Latin for inquisitive.

You'll want to know: invidus, invida, invidum

invidus, invida, invidum — "envious".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

invidus is built on invideō, "to look askance at, to envy" (Lewis & Short), from in, "against", and videō, "to see". English envy comes from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: invidus, invida, invidum
- Say it: invidus, invida, invidum, once more
- Say it: say invidus, invida, invidum

- Recall: say the Latin for back again, then the Latin for inquisitive, then say invidus, invida, invidum again

Before you move on

What does invidus, invida, invidum mean? ("Envious".) Say it once more.

212.3 anxius, anxia, anxium — anxious

Before the new one: say the Latin for inquisitive, then the Latin for envious.

You'll want to know: anxius, anxia, anxium

anxius, anxia, anxium — "anxious".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

anxius is built on angō, "to squeeze, to choke, to distress" (Lewis & Short): choked with worry.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: anxius, anxia, anxium
- Say it: anxius, anxia, anxium, once more
- Say it: say anxius, anxia, anxium
- Recall: say the Latin for inquisitive, then the Latin for envious, then say anxius, anxia, anxium again

Before you move on

What does anxius, anxia, anxium mean? ("Anxious".) Say it once more.

212.4 placidus, placida, placidum — peaceful, placid

Before the new one: say the Latin for envious, then the Latin for anxious.

You'll want to know: placidus, placida, placidum

placidus, placida, placidum — "peaceful, placid".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

placidus is built on placeō, "to please" (Lewis & Short), with -idus, the ending of state adjectives: pleasing, mild.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: placidus, placida, placidum
- Say it: placidus, placida, placidum, once more
- Say it: say placidus, placida, placidum
- Recall: say the Latin for envious, then the Latin for anxious, then say placidus, placida, placidum again

Before you move on

What does placidus, placida, placidum mean? ("Peaceful, placid".) Say it once more.

212.5 tacitus, tacita, tacitum — silent

Before the new one: say the Latin for anxious, then the Latin for peaceful.

You'll want to know: tacitus, tacita, tacitum

tacitus, tacita, tacitum — "silent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tacitus is the past participle of taceō, "to be silent" (Lewis & Short): passed over in silence, then silent. English tacit comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tacitus, tacita, tacitum
- Say it: tacitus, tacita, tacitum, once more
- Say it: say tacitus, tacita, tacitum
- Recall: say the Latin for anxious, then the Latin for peaceful, then say tacitus, tacita, tacitum again

Before you move on

What does tacitus, tacita, tacitum mean? ("Silent".) Say it once more.

Chapter 213

Foreign, Honest, Patient, Generous, Idle

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say foreign, honest, patient, generous and idle.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 213: I can say foreign, honest, patient, generous and idle.

213.1 peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum — foreign

Before the new one: say the Latin for peaceful, then the Latin for silent.

You'll want to know: peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum

peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum — "foreign".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

peregrīnus is built on peregrē, "abroad, from abroad" (Lewis & Short), from per, "through", and ager, "field, territory": beyond one's own lands. English pilgrim comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum
- Say it: peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum, once more
- Say it: say peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum
- Recall: say the Latin for peaceful, then the Latin for silent, then say peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum again

Before you move on

What does peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum mean? ("Foreign".) Say it once more.

213.2 probus, proba, probum — honest, upright

Before the new one: say the Latin for silent, then the Latin for foreign.

You'll want to know: probus, proba, probum

probus, proba, probum — "honest, upright".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

probus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pro-bhwo-, "being in front, outstanding" (EtymDB 2.1), from pro, "forward", and bhu-*, "to be"; Sanskrit prabhu-, "mighty", is a close cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: probus, proba, probum
- Say it: probus, proba, probum, once more
- Say it: say probus, proba, probum

- Recall: say the Latin for silent, then the Latin for foreign, then say probus, proba, probum again

Before you move on

What does probus, proba, probum mean? ("Honest, upright".) Say it once more.

213.3 patiēns, patientis — patient

Before the new one: say the Latin for foreign, then the Latin for honest.

You'll want to know: patiēns, patientis

patiēns, patientis — "patient".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patiēns is the present participle of patior, "to suffer, to endure" (Lewis & Short): enduring.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patiēns, patientis
- Say it: patiēns, patientis, once more
- Say it: say patiēns, patientis
- Recall: say the Latin for foreign, then the Latin for honest, then say patiēns, patientis again

Before you move on

What does patiēns, patientis mean? ("Patient".) Say it once more.

213.4 līberālis, līberāle — generous

Before the new one: say the Latin for honest, then the Latin for patient.

You'll want to know: līberālis, līberāle

līberālis, līberāle — "generous".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

līberālis is built on līber, "free" (Lewis & Short), with -ālis, "belonging to": fit for a free person, so generous.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: līberālis, līberāle
- Say it: līberālis, līberāle, once more
- Say it: say līberālis, līberāle
- Recall: say the Latin for honest, then the Latin for patient, then say līberālis, līberāle again

Before you move on

What does līberālis, līberāle mean? ("Generous".) Say it once more.

213.5 ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum — idle, cowardly

Before the new one: say the Latin for patient, then the Latin for generous.

You'll want to know: ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum

ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum — "idle, cowardly".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ignāvus is in-, "not", with gnāvus, "busy, active" (Lewis & Short), the older form of nāvus: not active.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum
- Say it: ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum, once more
- Say it: say ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum
- Recall: say the Latin for patient, then the Latin for generous, then say ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum again

Before you move on

What does ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum mean? ("Idle, cowardly".) Say it once more.

Chapter 214

Savage, Wild, Of the home, Rare, Frequent

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say savage, wild, of the home, rare and frequent.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 214: I can say savage, wild, of the home, rare and frequent.

214.1 saevus, saeva, saevum — savage, cruel

Before the new one: say the Latin for generous, then the Latin for idle.

You'll want to know: saevus, saeva, saevum

saevus, saeva, saevum — "savage, cruel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saevus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European seh2y-wo-*, "fierce, afflicting" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saevus, saeva, saevum
- Say it: saevus, saeva, saevum, once more
- Say it: say saevus, saeva, saevum
- Recall: say the Latin for generous, then the Latin for idle, then say saevus, saeva, saevum again

Before you move on

What does saevus, saeva, saevum mean? ("Savage, cruel".) Say it once more.

214.2 ferus, fera, ferum — wild

Before the new one: say the Latin for idle, then the Latin for savage.

You'll want to know: ferus, fera, ferum

ferus, fera, ferum — "wild".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ferus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghwer-*, "wild animal" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek thēr, "wild beast", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English fierce comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ferus, fera, ferum
- Say it: ferus, fera, ferum, once more
- Say it: say ferus, fera, ferum

- Recall: say the Latin for idle, then the Latin for savage, then say ferus, fera, ferum again

Before you move on

What does ferus, fera, ferum mean? ("Wild".) Say it once more.

214.3 domesticus, domestica, domesticum — of the home, tame

Before the new one: say the Latin for savage, then the Latin for wild.

You'll want to know: domesticus, domestica, domesticum

domesticus, domestica, domesticum — "of the home, tame".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

domesticus is built on domus, "house" (Lewis & Short), with -ticus, "belonging to": of the house. domus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dom-*, "house" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: domesticus, domestica, domesticum
- Say it: domesticus, domestica, domesticum, once more
- Say it: say domesticus, domestica, domesticum
- Recall: say the Latin for savage, then the Latin for wild, then say domesticus, domestica, domesticum again

Before you move on

What does domesticus, domestica, domesticum mean? ("Of the home, tame".) Say it once more.

214.4 rārus, rāra, rārum — rare, thin

Before the new one: say the Latin for wild, then the Latin for of the home.

You'll want to know: rārus, rāra, rārum

rārus, rāra, rārum — "rare, thin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rārus is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root er(e)-*, "loose, spaced apart" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short call it doubtful. Its first sense is "thin, with gaps".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rārus, rāra, rārum
- Say it: rārus, rāra, rārum, once more
- Say it: say rārus, rāra, rārum
- Recall: say the Latin for wild, then the Latin for of the home, then say rārus, rāra, rārum again

Before you move on

What does rārus, rāra, rārum mean? ("Rare, thin".) Say it once more.

214.5 crēber, crēbra, crēbrum — frequent, crowded

Before the new one: say the Latin for of the home, then the Latin for rare.

You'll want to know: crēber, crēbra, crēbrum

crēber, crēbra, crēbrum — "frequent, crowded".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crēber is often linked with crēscō, "to grow" (Lewis & Short), and traced to Proto-Indo-European ker-*, "to grow" (EtymDB 2.1): thick-growing, so crowded.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crēber, crēbra, crēbrum
- Say it: crēber, crēbra, crēbrum, once more
- Say it: say crēber, crēbra, crēbrum
- Recall: say the Latin for of the home, then the Latin for rare, then say crēber, crēbra, crēbrum again

Before you move on

What does crēber, crēbra, crēbrum mean? ("Frequent, crowded".) Say it once more.

214.6 Words from chapters 206-209 — a first pass

Say the words for rare and frequent.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- breath, memory, wisdom, talent, a habit
- a generation, age, sunset; a setting, sunrise; a rising, first light
- finally, lastly, on the spot, formerly, long since
- a region, a province, from there; then, in the way, all the way

Before you move on

Breath? (anima, animae.) Memory? (memoria, memoriae.) Wisdom? (sapientia, sapientiae.) Talent? (ingenium, ingeniī.) A habit? (cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis.) A generation? (saeculum, saeculī.) Age? (aetās, aetātis.) Sunset; a setting? (occāsus, occāsūs.) Sunrise; a rising? (ortus, ortūs.) First light? (dīlūculum, dīlūculī.) Finally? (dēnique.) Lastly? (postrēmō.) On the spot? (illicō.) Formerly? (quondam.) Long since? (iamdūdum.) A region? (regiō, regiōnis.) A province? (prōvincia, prōvinciae.) From there; then? (inde.) In the way? (obviam.) All the way? (usque.)

214.7 Words from chapters 210-214 — a second pass

Say the words for moreover; however and indeed; but.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- moreover; however, indeed; but, surely, about, only; so much
- altogether, hardly, of one's own accord, in vain, back again
- inquisitive, envious, anxious, peaceful, silent
- foreign, honest, patient, generous, idle
- savage, wild, of the home, rare, frequent

Before you move on

Moreover; however? (autem.) Indeed; but? (vērō.) Surely? (profectō.) About? (ferē.) Only; so much? (tantum.) Altogether? (omnīnō.) Hardly? (vix.) Of one's own accord? (sponte.) In vain? (frūstrā.) Back again? (rūrsus.) Inquisitive? (cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum.) Envious? (invidus, invida, invidum.) Anxious? (anxius, anxia, anxium.) Peaceful? (placidus, placida, placidum.) Silent? (tacitus, tacita, tacitum.) Foreign? (peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum.) Honest? (probus, proba, probum.) Patient? (patiēns, patientis.) Generous? (līberālis, līberāle.) Idle? (ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum.) Savage? (saevus, saeva, saevum.) Wild? (ferus, fera, ferum.) Of the home? (domesticus, domestica, domesticum.) Rare? (rārus, rāra, rārum.) Frequent? (crēber, crēbra, crēbrum.)

Chapter 215

Today's, Yesterday's, Tomorrow's, True, Uncertain

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say today's, yesterday's, tomorrow's, true and uncertain.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 215: I can say today's, yesterday's, tomorrow's, true and uncertain.

215.1 hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum — today's

Before the new one: say the Latin for rare, thin, then the Latin for frequent, crowded.

You'll want to know: hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum

hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum — "today's".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hodiernus is built on hodiē, "today" (Lewis & Short), with -ernus, an ending for time: of today.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum
- Say it: hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum, once more
- Say it: say hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum
- Recall: say the Latin for rare, thin, then the Latin for frequent, crowded, then say hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum again

Before you move on

What does hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum mean? ("Today's".) Say it once more.

215.2 hesternus, hesterna, hesternum — yesterday's

Before the new one: say the Latin for frequent, crowded, then the Latin for today's.

You'll want to know: hesternus, hesterna, hesternum

hesternus, hesterna, hesternum — "yesterday's".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hesternus is built on the old stem hes-, "yesterday", the stem behind herī, "yesterday" (Lewis & Short), with -ternus, an ending for time.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hesternus, hesterna, hesternum
- Say it: hesternus, hesterna, hesternum, once more
- Say it: say hesternus, hesterna, hesternum

- Recall: say the Latin for frequent, crowded, then the Latin for today's, then say hesternus, hesterna, hesternum again

Before you move on

What does hesternus, hesterna, hesternum mean? ("Yesterday's".) Say it once more.

215.3 crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum — tomorrow's

Before the new one: say the Latin for today's, then the Latin for yesterday's.

You'll want to know: crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum

crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum — "tomorrow's".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crāstinus is built on crās, "tomorrow" (Lewis & Short), with -tinus, an ending for time. Where crās comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum
- Say it: crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum, once more
- Say it: say crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum
- Recall: say the Latin for today's, then the Latin for yesterday's, then say crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum again

Before you move on

What does crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum mean? ("Tomorrow's".) Say it once more.

215.4 vērus, vēra, vērum — true, real

Before the new one: say the Latin for yesterday's, then the Latin for tomorrow's.

You'll want to know: vērus, vēra, vērum

vērus, vēra, vērum — "true, real".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vērus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weh1ros*, "true" (EtymDB 2.1); German wahr, "true", is a cousin. Lewis & Short still called it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vērus, vēra, vērum
- Say it: vērus, vēra, vērum, once more
- Say it: say vērus, vēra, vērum
- Recall: say the Latin for yesterday's, then the Latin for tomorrow's, then say vērus, vēra, vērum again

Before you move on

What does vērus, vēra, vērum mean? ("True, real".) Say it once more.

215.5 incertus, incerta, incertum — uncertain

Before the new one: say the Latin for tomorrow's, then the Latin for true.

You'll want to know: incertus, incerta, incertum

incertus, incerta, incertum — "uncertain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

incertus is in-, "not", with certus, "sure" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: incertus, incerta, incertum
- Say it: incertus, incerta, incertum, once more
- Say it: say incertus, incerta, incertum
- Recall: say the Latin for tomorrow's, then the Latin for true, then say incertus, incerta, incertum again

Before you move on

What does incertus, incerta, incertum mean? ("Uncertain".) Say it once more.

Chapter 216

Bald, Bearded, Charming, Worn out, Wakeful

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say bald, bearded, charming, worn out and wakeful.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 216: I can say bald, bearded, charming, worn out and wakeful.

216.1 calvus, calva, calvum — bald

Before the new one: say the Latin for true, then the Latin for uncertain.

You'll want to know: calvus, calva, calvum

calvus, calva, calvum — "bald".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calvus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European klh2wos*, "bald" (EtymDB 2.1); German kahl, "bald", is often compared (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calvus, calva, calvum
- Say it: calvus, calva, calvum, once more
- Say it: say calvus, calva, calvum
- Recall: say the Latin for true, then the Latin for uncertain, then say calvus, calva, calvum again

Before you move on

What does calvus, calva, calvum mean? ("Bald".) Say it once more.

216.2 barbātus, barbāta, barbātum — bearded

Before the new one: say the Latin for uncertain, then the Latin for bald.

You'll want to know: barbātus, barbāta, barbātum

barbātus, barbāta, barbātum — "bearded".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

barbātus is built on barba, "beard" (Lewis & Short), with -ātus, "provided with": bearded.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: barbātus, barbāta, barbātum
- Say it: barbātus, barbāta, barbātum, once more
- Say it: say barbātus, barbāta, barbātum
- Recall: say the Latin for uncertain, then the Latin for bald, then say barbātus, barbāta, barbātum again

Before you move on

What does barbātus, barbāta, barbātum mean? ("Bearded".) Say it once more.

216.3 venustus, venusta, venustum — charming

Before the new one: say the Latin for bald, then the Latin for bearded.

You'll want to know: venustus, venusta, venustum

venustus, venusta, venustum — "charming".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

venustus is built on venus, "charm, loveliness", the word that is also the goddess's name, Venus (Lewis & Short). It is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wenh1-*, "to desire, to love".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: venustus, venusta, venustum
- Say it: venustus, venusta, venustum, once more
- Say it: say venustus, venusta, venustum
- Recall: say the Latin for bald, then the Latin for bearded, then say venustus, venusta, venustum again

Before you move on

What does venustus, venusta, venustum mean? ("Charming".) Say it once more.

216.4 dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum — worn out

Before the new one: say the Latin for bearded, then the Latin for charming.

You'll want to know: dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum

dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum — "worn out".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēfessus is the participle of dēfetīscor, "to grow weary" (Lewis & Short): dē-, "completely", with the verb behind fessus, "tired".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum
- Say it: dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum, once more
- Say it: say dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum
- Recall: say the Latin for bearded, then the Latin for charming, then say dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum again

Before you move on

What does dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum mean? ("Worn out".) Say it once more.

216.5 vigil, vigilis — wakeful, watchful

Before the new one: say the Latin for charming, then the Latin for worn out.

You'll want to know: vigil, vigilis

vigil, vigilis — "wakeful, watchful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vigil is built on vigeō, "to be lively, to thrive" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weg-*, "to be fresh, to be awake" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vigil, vigilis
- Say it: vigil, vigilis, once more
- Say it: say vigil, vigilis
- Recall: say the Latin for charming, then the Latin for worn out, then say vigil, vigilis again

Before you move on

What does vigil, vigilis mean? ("Wakeful, watchful".) Say it once more.

Chapter 217

Roof tile, Furnace, Litter, Vehicle, Chariot

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a roof tile, a furnace, a litter, a vehicle and a chariot.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 217: I can say a roof tile, a furnace, a litter, a vehicle and a chariot.

217.1 tēgula, tēgulae — a roof tile

Before the new one: say the Latin for worn out, then the Latin for wakeful.

You'll want to know: tēgula, tēgulae

tēgula, tēgulae — "a roof tile".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tēgula is built on tegō, "to cover" (EtymDB 2.1), with -ula, an ending for a tool: the thing that covers. English tile was borrowed from it early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tēgula, tēgulae
- Say it: tēgula, tēgulae, once more
- Say it: say tēgula, tēgulae
- Recall: say the Latin for worn out, then the Latin for wakeful, then say tēgula, tēgulae again

Before you move on

What does tēgula, tēgulae mean? ("A roof tile".) Say it once more.

217.2 fornāx, fornācis — a furnace, a kiln

Before the new one: say the Latin for wakeful, then the Latin for a roof tile.

You'll want to know: fornāx, fornācis

fornāx, fornācis — "a furnace, a kiln".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fornāx belongs with fornus, furnus, "an oven" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwher-*, "warm"; English warm is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fornāx, fornācis
- Say it: fornāx, fornācis, once more
- Say it: say fornāx, fornācis
- Recall: say the Latin for wakeful, then the Latin for a roof tile, then say fornāx, fornācis again

Before you move on

What does fornāx, fornācis mean? (“A furnace, a kiln”.) Say it once more.

217.3 lectīca, lectīcae — a litter (carried chair)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a roof tile, then the Latin for a furnace.

You’ll want to know: lectīca, lectīcae

lectīca, lectīcae — “a litter (carried chair)”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lectīca is built on lectus, “a bed, a couch” (EtymDB 2.1): a couch carried on poles.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lectīca, lectīcae
- Say it: lectīca, lectīcae, once more
- Say it: say lectīca, lectīcae
- Recall: say the Latin for a roof tile, then the Latin for a furnace, then say lectīca, lectīcae again

Before you move on

What does lectīca, lectīcae mean? (“A litter (carried chair)”.) Say it once more.

217.4 vehiculum, vehiculī — a vehicle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a furnace, then the Latin for a litter.

You'll want to know: vehiculum, vehiculī

vehiculum, vehiculī — "a vehicle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vehiculum is built on vehō, "to carry" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a means: a means of carrying.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vehiculum, vehiculī
- Say it: vehiculum, vehiculī, once more
- Say it: say vehiculum, vehiculī
- Recall: say the Latin for a furnace, then the Latin for a litter, then say vehiculum, vehiculī again

Before you move on

What does vehiculum, vehiculī mean? ("A vehicle".) Say it once more.

217.5 currus, currūs — a chariot

Before the new one: say the Latin for a litter, then the Latin for a vehicle.

You'll want to know: currus, currūs

currus, currūs — "a chariot".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

currus is built on currō, “to run” (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kers-*, “to run” (EtymDB 2.1). English car comes from a Celtic cousin of the same root, through Latin carrus, “a wagon”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: currus, currūs
- Say it: currus, currūs, once more
- Say it: say currus, currūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a litter, then the Latin for a vehicle, then say currus, currūs again

Before you move on

What does currus, currūs mean? (“A chariot”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 218

Pace, Witness, Defendant, Punishment, Charge

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a pace, a witness, a defendant, a punishment and a charge.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 218: I can say a pace, a witness, a defendant, a punishment and a charge.

218.1 passus, passūs — a pace

Before the new one: say the Latin for a vehicle, then the Latin for a chariot.

You'll want to know: passus, passūs

passus, passūs — "a pace".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

passus is built on pandō, "to spread out, to stretch" (EtymDB 2.1): a pace as the stretch of the legs. A Roman mile was mīlle passūs, "a thousand paces".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: passus, passūs
- Say it: passus, passūs, once more
- Say it: say passus, passūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a vehicle, then the Latin for a chariot, then say passus, passūs again

Before you move on

What does passus, passūs mean? ("A pace".) Say it once more.

218.2 testis, testis — a witness

Before the new one: say the Latin for a chariot, then the Latin for a pace.

You'll want to know: testis, testis

testis, testis — "a witness".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

testis is usually explained as an old compound, tri-stis*, "the third who stands by", from the root of trēs, "three", and stō, "to stand": a witness as the third party.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: testis, testis
- Say it: testis, testis, once more
- Say it: say testis, testis
- Recall: say the Latin for a chariot, then the Latin for a pace, then say testis, testis again

Before you move on

What does testis, testis mean? ("A witness".) Say it once more.

218.3 reus, reī — a defendant

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pace, then the Latin for a witness.

You'll want to know: reus, reī

reus, reī — "a defendant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

reus is built on rēs, "a thing, a matter, a lawsuit" (Lewis & Short): the one the case concerns.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: reus, reī
- Say it: reus, reī, once more
- Say it: say reus, reī
- Recall: say the Latin for a pace, then the Latin for a witness, then say reus, reī again

Before you move on

What does reus, reī mean? ("A defendant".) Say it once more.

218.4 poena, poenae — a punishment

Before the new one: say the Latin for a witness, then the Latin for a defendant.

You'll want to know: poena, poenae

poena, poenae — "a punishment".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

poena was borrowed from Greek poinē, "a fine, blood-money" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwoyneh2*, "penalty" (EtymDB 2.1). English pain comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: poena, poenae
- Say it: poena, poenae, once more
- Say it: say poena, poenae
- Recall: say the Latin for a witness, then the Latin for a defendant, then say poena, poenae again

Before you move on

What does poena, poenae mean? ("A punishment".) Say it once more.

218.5 crīmen, crīminis — a charge, a crime

Before the new one: say the Latin for a defendant, then the Latin for a punishment.

You'll want to know: crīmen, crīminis

crīmen, crīminis — "a charge, a crime".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

crīmen belongs with cernō, "to sift, to decide" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kreymn*, "a verdict, a sifting"

(EtymDB 2.1): first a judgement, then a charge.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crīmen, crīminis
- Say it: crīmen, crīminis, once more
- Say it: say crīmen, crīminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a defendant, then the Latin for a punishment, then say crīmen, crīminis again

Before you move on

What does crīmen, crīminis mean? ("A charge, a crime".) Say it once more.

Chapter 219

Reputation, Messenger, Show, Actor, Story

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say reputation, a messenger, a show, an actor and a story.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 219: I can say reputation, a messenger, a show, an actor and a story.

219.1 fāma, fāmae — reputation, rumour

Before the new one: say the Latin for a punishment, then the Latin for a charge.

You'll want to know: fāma, fāmae

fāma, fāmae — "reputation, rumour".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fāma is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bheh2meh2*, "talk, report", from bheh2-*, "to speak" (EtymDB 2.1); fārī, "to speak", has the same root (Lewis & Short). Greek phēmē, "a saying", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fāma, fāmae
- Say it: fāma, fāmae, once more
- Say it: say fāma, fāmae
- Recall: say the Latin for a punishment, then the Latin for a charge, then say fāma, fāmae again

Before you move on

What does fāma, fāmae mean? ("Reputation, rumour".) Say it once more.

219.2 nūntius, nūntiī — a messenger; news

Before the new one: say the Latin for a charge, then the Latin for reputation.

You'll want to know: nūntius, nūntiī

nūntius, nūntiī — "a messenger; news".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūntius has no sure origin; it is often explained as noventius*, "one who brings something new", from novus, "new" (Lewis & Short), but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūntius, nūntiī
- Say it: nūntius, nūntiī, once more
- Say it: say nūntius, nūntiī

- Recall: say the Latin for a charge, then the Latin for reputation, then say nūntius, nūntiī again

Before you move on

What does nūntius, nūntiī mean? ("A messenger; news".) Say it once more.

219.3 spectāculum, spectāculī — a show

Before the new one: say the Latin for reputation, then the Latin for a messenger; news.

You'll want to know: spectāculum, spectāculī

spectāculum, spectāculī — "a show".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spectāculum is built on spectō, "to look at, to watch" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a means or place: something to watch.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spectāculum, spectāculī
- Say it: spectāculum, spectāculī, once more
- Say it: say spectāculum, spectāculī
- Recall: say the Latin for reputation, then the Latin for a messenger; news, then say spectāculum, spectāculī again

Before you move on

What does spectāculum, spectāculī mean? ("A show".) Say it once more.

219.4 histriō, histriōnis — an actor

Before the new one: say the Latin for a messenger; news, then the Latin for a show.

You'll want to know: histriō, histriōnis

histriō, histriōnis — "an actor".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

histriō came from Etruscan: Livy says the Etruscans called a player hister, "actor" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: histriō, histriōnis
- Say it: histriō, histriōnis, once more
- Say it: say histriō, histriōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a messenger; news, then the Latin for a show, then say histriō, histriōnis again

Before you move on

What does histriō, histriōnis mean? ("An actor".) Say it once more.

219.5 fābula, fābulae — a story, a play

Before the new one: say the Latin for a show, then the Latin for an actor.

You'll want to know: fābula, fābulae

fābula, fābulae — "a story, a play".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fābula is built on fārī, "to speak" (Lewis & Short), with -bula, an ending for a means or result: what is told. English fable comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fābula, fābulae
- Say it: fābula, fābulae, once more
- Say it: say fābula, fābulae
- Recall: say the Latin for a show, then the Latin for an actor, then say fābula, fābulae again

Before you move on

What does fābula, fābulae mean? ("A story, a play".) Say it once more.

Chapter 220

Maidservant, Freedman, Newcomer, Young person, Widow

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a maidservant, a freedman, a newcomer, a young person and a widow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 220: I can say a maidservant, a freedman, a newcomer, a young person and a widow.

220.1 ancilla, ancillae — a maidservant

> Before the new one: say the Latin for an actor, then the Latin for a story.

You'll want to know: ancilla, ancillae

ancilla, ancillae — "a maidservant".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ancilla is a diminutive of ancula, "a maidservant" (Lewis & Short), an old word whose origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ancilla, ancillae
- Say it: ancilla, ancillae, once more
- Say it: say ancilla, ancillae
- Recall: say the Latin for an actor, then the Latin for a story, then say ancilla, ancillae again

Before you move on

What does ancilla, ancillae mean? ("A maidservant".) Say it once more.

220.2 lībertus, lībertī — a freedman

Before the new one: say the Latin for a story, then the Latin for a maidservant.

You'll want to know: lībertus, lībertī

lībertus, lībertī — "a freedman".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lībertus is built on līberō, "to set free" (Lewis & Short), from līber, "free": one who has been freed.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lībertus, lībertī
- Say it: lībertus, lībertī, once more
- Say it: say lībertus, lībertī
- Recall: say the Latin for a story, then the Latin for a maidservant, then say lībertus, lībertī again

Before you move on

What does lībertus, lībertī mean? ("A freedman".) Say it once more.

220.3 advena, advenae — a newcomer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a maidservant, then the Latin for a freedman.

You'll want to know: advena, advenae

advena, advenae — "a newcomer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

advena is built on adveniō, "to arrive" (Lewis & Short), from ad, "to", and veniō, "to come": one who has come.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: advena, advenae
- Say it: advena, advenae, once more
- Say it: say advena, advenae
- Recall: say the Latin for a maidservant, then the Latin for a freedman, then say advena, advenae again

Before you move on

What does advena, advenae mean? ("A newcomer".) Say it once more.

220.4 adulēscēns, adulēscentis — a young person

Before the new one: say the Latin for a freedman, then the Latin for a newcomer.

You'll want to know: adulēscēns, adulēscentis

adulēscēns, adulēscentis — "a young person".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

adulēscēns is the present participle of adolēscō, "to grow up": growing up. adolēscō is built on alō, "to nourish". English adolescent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: adulēscēns, adulēscentis
- Say it: adulēscēns, adulēscentis, once more
- Say it: say adulēscēns, adulēscentis
- Recall: say the Latin for a freedman, then the Latin for a newcomer, then say adulēscēns, adulēscentis again

Before you move on

What does adulēscēns, adulēscentis mean? ("A young person".) Say it once more.

220.5 vidua, viduae — a widow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a newcomer, then the Latin for a young person.

You'll want to know: vidua, viduae

vidua, viduae — "a widow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vidua is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1widhewh2*, "widow" (EtymDB 2.1); English widow is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vidua, viduae
- Say it: vidua, viduae, once more
- Say it: say vidua, viduae
- Recall: say the Latin for a newcomer, then the Latin for a young person, then say vidua, viduae again

Before you move on

What does vidua, viduae mean? ("A widow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 221

Rule, Difference, Outcome, Fortune, Accident

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a rule, a difference, an outcome, fortune and an accident.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 221: I can say a rule, a difference, an outcome, fortune and an accident.

221.1 rēgula, rēgulae — a rule, a ruler

Before the new one: say the Latin for a young person, then the Latin for a widow.

You'll want to know: rēgula, rēgulae

rēgula, rēgulae — "a rule, a ruler".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēgula is built on regō, "to keep straight, to rule" (Lewis & Short), with -ula, an ending for a tool: a straight stick, a ruler. English rule comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēgula, rēgulae
- Say it: rēgula, rēgulae, once more
- Say it: say rēgula, rēgulae
- Recall: say the Latin for a young person, then the Latin for a widow, then say rēgula, rēgulae again

Before you move on

What does rēgula, rēgulae mean? ("A rule, a ruler".) Say it once more.

221.2 discrīmen, discrīminis — a difference; a crisis

Before the new one: say the Latin for a widow, then the Latin for a rule.

You'll want to know: discrīmen, discrīminis

discrīmen, discrīminis — "a difference; a crisis".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

discrīmen is built on crī-, the root of discernō, "to separate, to distinguish" (Lewis & Short), also seen in crīmen, "a charge", with -men, an ending for a result: a dividing line, then a turning point.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: discrīmen, discrīminis
- Say it: discrīmen, discrīminis, once more
- Say it: say discrīmen, discrīminis

- Recall: say the Latin for a widow, then the Latin for a rule, then say discrīmen, discrīminis again

Before you move on

What does discrīmen, discrīminis mean? ("A difference; a crisis".) Say it once more.

221.3 ēventus, ēventūs — an outcome

Before the new one: say the Latin for a rule, then the Latin for a difference; a crisis.

You'll want to know: ēventus, ēventūs

ēventus, ēventūs — "an outcome".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēventus is built on ēveniō, "to come out, to happen" (Lewis & Short), from ē, "out", and veniō, "to come": how things come out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ēventus, ēventūs
- Say it: ēventus, ēventūs, once more
- Say it: say ēventus, ēventūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a rule, then the Latin for a difference; a crisis, then say ēventus, ēventūs again

Before you move on

What does ēventus, ēventūs mean? ("An outcome".) Say it once more.

221.4 fortūna, fortūnae — fortune, luck

Before the new one: say the Latin for a difference; a crisis, then the Latin for an outcome.

You'll want to know: fortūna, fortūnae

fortūna, fortūnae — "fortune, luck".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fortūna is built on fors, "chance, luck" (Lewis & Short), with -tūna, an ending also in Neptūnus, "Neptune". fors is usually traced to the root of ferō, "to bring": what chance brings.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fortūna, fortūnae
- Say it: fortūna, fortūnae, once more
- Say it: say fortūna, fortūnae
- Recall: say the Latin for a difference; a crisis, then the Latin for an outcome, then say fortūna, fortūnae again

Before you move on

What does fortūna, fortūnae mean? ("Fortune, luck".) Say it once more.

221.5 cāsus, cāsūs — an accident, a fall

Before the new one: say the Latin for an outcome, then the Latin for fortune.

You'll want to know: cāsus, cāsūs

cāsus, cāsūs — "an accident, a fall".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cāsus is built on cadō, "to fall" (Lewis & Short): a falling, then what befalls. English case comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cāsus, cāsūs
- Say it: cāsus, cāsūs, once more
- Say it: say cāsus, cāsūs
- Recall: say the Latin for an outcome, then the Latin for fortune, then say cāsus, cāsūs again

Before you move on

What does cāsus, cāsūs mean? ("An accident, a fall".) Say it once more.

Chapter 222

Gold, Silver, Bronze, Iron, Metal lead

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say gold, silver, bronze, iron and the metal lead.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 222: I can say gold, silver, bronze, iron and the metal lead.

222.1 aurum, aurī — gold

> Before the new one: say the Latin for fortune, then the Latin for an accident.

You'll want to know: aurum, aurī

aurum, aurī — "gold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aurum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2eh2usom*, "a glow", from h2ews-*, "to dawn, to grow light" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of aurōra, "dawn". Festus records a Sabine ausum, "gold", which keeps the older s (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aurum, aurī
- Say it: aurum, aurī, once more
- Say it: say aurum, aurī
- Recall: say the Latin for fortune, then the Latin for an accident, then say aurum, aurī again

Before you move on

What does aurum, aurī mean? ("Gold".) Say it once more.

222.2 argentum, argentī — silver

Before the new one: say the Latin for an accident, then the Latin for gold.

You'll want to know: argentum, argentī

argentum, argentī — "silver".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

argentum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2rgntom*, "silver", from h2erg-*, "white, shining" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek argēs, "white, bright", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: argentum, argentī
- Say it: argentum, argentī, once more
- Say it: say argentum, argentī
- Recall: say the Latin for an accident, then the Latin for gold, then say argentum, argentī again

Before you move on

What does argentum, argentī mean? ("Silver".) Say it once more.

222.3 aes, aeris — bronze; money

Before the new one: say the Latin for gold, then the Latin for silver.

You'll want to know: aes, aeris

aes, aeris — "bronze; money".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aes is usually traced to Proto-Italic aos*, "copper, bronze" (EtymDB 2.1); Gothic aiz, "bronze", and English ore are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aes, aeris
- Say it: aes, aeris, once more
- Say it: say aes, aeris
- Recall: say the Latin for gold, then the Latin for silver, then say aes, aeris again

Before you move on

What does aes, aeris mean? ("Bronze; money".) Say it once more.

222.4 ferrum, ferrī — iron

Before the new one: say the Latin for silver, then the Latin for bronze; money.

You'll want to know: ferrum, ferrī

ferrum, ferrī — "iron".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ferrum has no sure origin; it is often thought to be a loan from a language of the eastern Mediterranean, perhaps through Etruscan, but the source is unknown.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ferrum, ferrī
- Say it: ferrum, ferrī, once more
- Say it: say ferrum, ferrī
- Recall: say the Latin for silver, then the Latin for bronze; money, then say ferrum, ferrī again

Before you move on

What does ferrum, ferrī mean? ("Iron".) Say it once more.

222.5 plumbum, plumbī — the metal lead

Before the new one: say the Latin for bronze; money, then the Latin for iron.

You'll want to know: plumbum, plumbī

plumbum, plumbī — "the metal lead".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plumbum is related to Greek molybdos, "lead" (Lewis & Short), but neither came straight from the other; both are thought to be loans from an unknown language. English plumb and plumber come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: plumbum, plumbī
- Say it: plumbum, plumbī, once more
- Say it: say plumbum, plumbī
- Recall: say the Latin for bronze; money, then the Latin for iron, then say plumbum, plumbī again

Before you move on

What does plumbum, plumbī mean? ("The metal lead".) Say it once more.

Chapter 223

Mist, Breeze, Root, Thorn, Crop

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say mist, a breeze, a root, a thorn and a crop.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 223: I can say mist, a breeze, a root, a thorn and a crop.

223.1 cālīgō, cālīginis — mist, darkness

Before the new one: say the Latin for iron, then the Latin for the metal lead.

You'll want to know: cālīgō, cālīginis

cālīgō, cālīginis — "mist, darkness".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cālīgō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cālīgō, cālīginis

- Say it: cālīgō, cālīginis, once more
- Say it: say cālīgō, cālīginis
- Recall: say the Latin for iron, then the Latin for the metal lead, then say cālīgō, cālīginis again

Before you move on

What does cālīgō, cālīginis mean? ("Mist, darkness".) Say it once more.

223.2 aura, aurae — a breeze

Before the new one: say the Latin for the metal lead, then the Latin for mist.

You'll want to know: aura, aurae

aura, aurae — "a breeze".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aura was borrowed from Greek aura, "a breeze, a breath of air" (EtymDB 2.1). English aura is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aura, aurae
- Say it: aura, aurae, once more
- Say it: say aura, aurae
- Recall: say the Latin for the metal lead, then the Latin for mist, then say aura, aurae again

Before you move on

What does aura, aurae mean? ("A breeze".) Say it once more.

223.3 rādīx, rādīcis — a root

Before the new one: say the Latin for mist, then the Latin for a breeze.

You'll want to know: rādīx, rādīcis

rādīx, rādīcis — "a root".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rādīx is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wreh2ds*, "root" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek rhiza, "root", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English wort, "a plant". English radish comes from rādīx.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rādīx, rādīcis
- Say it: rādīx, rādīcis, once more
- Say it: say rādīx, rādīcis
- Recall: say the Latin for mist, then the Latin for a breeze, then say rādīx, rādīcis again

Before you move on

What does rādīx, rādīcis mean? ("A root".) Say it once more.

223.4 spīna, spīnae — a thorn

Before the new one: say the Latin for a breeze, then the Latin for a root.

You'll want to know: spīna, spīnae

spīna, spīnae — "a thorn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spīna is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European spey-*, "a sharp point" (EtymDB 2.1); spīca, "an ear of grain", has the same root (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spīna, spīnae
- Say it: spīna, spīnae, once more
- Say it: say spīna, spīnae
- Recall: say the Latin for a breeze, then the Latin for a root, then say spīna, spīnae again

Before you move on

What does spīna, spīnae mean? ("A thorn".) Say it once more.

223.5 seges, segetis — a crop, a cornfield

Before the new one: say the Latin for a root, then the Latin for a thorn.

You'll want to know: seges, segetis

seges, segetis — "a crop, a cornfield".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

seges has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: seges, segetis
- Say it: seges, segetis, once more
- Say it: say seges, segetis
- Recall: say the Latin for a root, then the Latin for a thorn, then say seges, segetis again

Before you move on

What does seges, segetis mean? ("A crop, a cornfield".) Say it once more.

223.6 Words from chapters 215-218 — a first pass

Say the words for a thorn and a crop.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- today's, yesterday's, tomorrow's, true, uncertain
- bald, bearded, charming, worn out, wakeful
- a roof tile, a furnace, a litter, a vehicle, a chariot
- a pace, a witness, a defendant, a punishment, a charge

Before you move on

Today's? (hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum.) Yesterday's? (hesternus, hesterna, hesternum.) Tomorrow's? (crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum.) True? (vērus, vēra, vērum.) Uncertain? (incertus, incerta, incertum.) Bald? (calvus, calva, calvum.)

Bearded? (barbātus, barbāta, barbātum.) Charming? (venustus, venusta, venustum.) Worn out? (dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum.) Wakeful? (vigil, vigilis.) A roof tile? (tēgula, tēgulae.) A furnace? (fornāx, fornācis.) A litter? (lectīca, lectīcae.) A vehicle? (vehiculum, vehiculī.) A chariot? (currus, currūs.) A pace? (passus, passūs.) A witness? (testis, testis.) A defendant? (reus, reī.) A punishment? (poena, poenae.) A charge? (crīmen, crīminis.)

223.7 Words from chapters 219-223 — a second pass

Say the words for reputation and a messenger; news.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- reputation, a messenger; news, a show, an actor, a story
- a maidservant, a freedman, a newcomer, a young person, a widow
- a rule, a difference; a crisis, an outcome, fortune, an accident
- gold, silver, bronze; money, iron, the metal lead
- mist, a breeze, a root, a thorn, a crop

Before you move on

Reputation? (fāma, fāmae.) A messenger; news? (nūntius, nūntiī.) A show? (spectāculum, spectāculī.) An actor? (histriō, histriōnis.) A story? (fābula, fābulae.) A maidservant? (ancilla, ancillae.) A freedman? (lībertus, lībertī.) A newcomer? (advena, advenae.) A young person? (adulēscēns, adulēscentis.) A widow? (vidua, viduae.) A rule? (rēgula, rēgulae.) A difference; a crisis? (discrīmen, discrīminis.) An outcome? (ēventus, ēventūs.) Fortune? (fortūna, fortūnae.) An accident? (cāsus, cāsūs.) Gold? (aurum, aurī.) Silver? (argentum, argentī.) Bronze; money? (aes, aeris.) Iron?

(ferrum, ferrī.) The metal lead? (plumbum, plumbī.) Mist? (cālīgō, cālīginis.) A breeze? (aura, aurae.) A root? (rādīx, rādīcis.) A thorn? (spīna, spīnae.) A crop? (seges, segetis.)

Chapter 224

Lizard, Wild boar, Billy goat, Lamb, Calf

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a lizard, a wild boar, a billy goat, a lamb and a calf.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 224: I can say a lizard, a wild boar, a billy goat, a lamb and a calf.

224.1 lacerta, lacertae — a lizard

Before the new one: say the Latin for a thorn, then the Latin for a crop, a cornfield.

You'll want to know: lacerta, lacertae

lacerta, lacertae — "a lizard".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lacerta has no sure origin; it may be linked with lacertus, "the upper arm, a muscle", but that is uncertain. English lizard comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lacerta, lacertae
- Say it: lacerta, lacertae, once more
- Say it: say lacerta, lacertae
- Recall: say the Latin for a thorn, then the Latin for a crop, a cornfield, then say lacerta, lacertae again

Before you move on

What does lacerta, lacertae mean? ("A lizard".) Say it once more.

224.2 aper, aprī — a wild boar

Before the new one: say the Latin for a crop, a cornfield, then the Latin for a lizard.

You'll want to know: aper, aprī

aper, aprī — "a wild boar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aper is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1epr-*, "boar" (EtymDB 2.1); German Eber, "boar", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aper, aprī
- Say it: aper, aprī, once more
- Say it: say aper, aprī
- Recall: say the Latin for a crop, a cornfield, then the Latin for a lizard, then say aper, aprī again

Before you move on

What does aper, aprī mean? (“A wild boar”.) Say it once more.

224.3 caper, caprī — a billy goat

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lizard, then the Latin for a wild boar.

You’ll want to know: caper, caprī

caper, caprī — “a billy goat”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caper is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kapros*, “buck, he-goat” (EtymDB 2.1); Greek kapros, “wild boar”, is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: caper, caprī
- Say it: caper, caprī, once more
- Say it: say caper, caprī
- Recall: say the Latin for a lizard, then the Latin for a wild boar, then say caper, caprī again

Before you move on

What does caper, caprī mean? (“A billy goat”.) Say it once more.

224.4 agnus, agnī — a lamb

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wild boar, then the Latin for a billy goat.

You'll want to know: agnus, agnī

agnus, agnī — "a lamb".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

agnus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2egwnos*, "lamb" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek amnos, "lamb", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English yean, "to give birth to lambs".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: agnus, agnī
- Say it: agnus, agnī, once more
- Say it: say agnus, agnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a wild boar, then the Latin for a billy goat, then say agnus, agnī again

Before you move on

What does agnus, agnī mean? ("A lamb".) Say it once more.

224.5 vitulus, vitulī — a calf

Before the new one: say the Latin for a billy goat, then the Latin for a lamb.

You'll want to know: vitulus, vitulī

vitulus, vitulī — "a calf".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vitulus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wetelo-, "yearling", from wet-, "year" (EtymDB 2.1): a calf as a one-year-old. The name Italia, "Italy", is often explained as "land of calves" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vitulus, vitulī
- Say it: vitulus, vitulī, once more
- Say it: say vitulus, vitulī
- Recall: say the Latin for a billy goat, then the Latin for a lamb, then say vitulus, vitulī again

Before you move on

What does vitulus, vitulī mean? ("A calf".) Say it once more.

Chapter 225

Gem, Garment, Sandal, Fold of a garment, Mattress

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a gem, a garment, a sandal, a fold of a garment and a mattress.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 225: I can say a gem, a garment, a sandal, a fold of a garment and a mattress.

225.1 gemma, gemmae — a gem; a bud

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lamb, then the Latin for a calf.

You'll want to know: gemma, gemmae

gemma, gemmae — "a gem; a bud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gemma has no sure origin. It meant both a bud and a precious stone; Lewis & Short note that ancient writers took the stone as the first sense.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gemma, gemmae
- Say it: gemma, gemmae, once more
- Say it: say gemma, gemmae
- Recall: say the Latin for a lamb, then the Latin for a calf, then say gemma, gemmae again

Before you move on

What does gemma, gemmae mean? ("A gem; a bud".) Say it once more.

225.2 vestīmentum, vestīmentī — a garment

Before the new one: say the Latin for a calf, then the Latin for a gem; a bud.

You'll want to know: vestīmentum, vestīmentī

vestīmentum, vestīmentī — "a garment".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vestīmentum is built on vestiō, "to clothe", from vestis, "clothing" (EtymDB 2.1), with -mentum, an ending for a thing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vestīmentum, vestīmentī
- Say it: vestīmentum, vestīmentī, once more
- Say it: say vestīmentum, vestīmentī
- Recall: say the Latin for a calf, then the Latin for a gem; a bud, then say vestīmentum, vestīmentī again

Before you move on

What does vestīmentum, vestīmentī mean? ("A garment".) Say it once more.

225.3 solea, soleae — a sandal

Before the new one: say the Latin for a gem; a bud, then the Latin for a garment.

You'll want to know: solea, soleae

solea, soleae — "a sandal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

solea is built on solum, "the ground, the sole of the foot" (Lewis & Short): what goes under the sole. English sole, of a shoe, comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: solea, soleae
- Say it: solea, soleae, once more
- Say it: say solea, soleae
- Recall: say the Latin for a gem; a bud, then the Latin for a garment, then say solea, soleae again

Before you move on

What does solea, soleae mean? ("A sandal".) Say it once more.

225.4 sinus, sinūs — a fold of a garment; a bay

Before the new one: say the Latin for a garment, then the Latin for a sandal.

You'll want to know: sinus, sinūs

sinus, sinūs — "a fold of a garment; a bay".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sinus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted. English sinus, a hollow in a bone, is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sinus, sinūs
- Say it: sinus, sinūs, once more
- Say it: say sinus, sinūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a garment, then the Latin for a sandal, then say sinus, sinūs again

Before you move on

What does sinus, sinūs mean? ("A fold of a garment; a bay".) Say it once more.

225.5 culcita, culcitae — a mattress

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sandal, then the Latin for a fold of a garment; a bay.

You'll want to know: culcita, culcitae

culcita, culcitae — "a mattress".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

culcita has no sure origin. Varro tied it to calcō, "to tread, to press down", but Lewis & Short call that doubtful. English quilt comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: culcita, culcitae
- Say it: culcita, culcitae, once more
- Say it: say culcita, culcitae
- Recall: say the Latin for a sandal, then the Latin for a fold of a garment; a bay, then say culcita, culcitae again

Before you move on

What does culcita, culcitae mean? ("A mattress".) Say it once more.

Chapter 226

Grammar, Philosophy, Eagerness, Question, Answer

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say grammar, philosophy, eagerness, a question and an answer.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 226: I can say grammar, philosophy, eagerness, a question and an answer.

226.1 grammatica, grammaticae — grammar

Before the new one: say the Latin for a fold of a garment; a bay, then the Latin for a mattress.

You'll want to know: grammatica, grammaticae

grammatica, grammaticae — "grammar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

grammatica was borrowed from Greek grammatikē, "the art of letters" (EtymDB 2.1), from gramma, "a letter", and graphō, "to write".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: grammatica, grammaticae
- Say it: grammatica, grammaticae, once more
- Say it: say grammatica, grammaticae
- Recall: say the Latin for a fold of a garment; a bay, then the Latin for a mattress, then say grammatica, grammaticae again

Before you move on

What does grammatica, grammaticae mean? ("Grammar".) Say it once more.

226.2 philosophia, philosophiae — philosophy

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mattress, then the Latin for grammar.

You'll want to know: philosophia, philosophiae

philosophia, philosophiae — "philosophy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

philosophia was borrowed from Greek philosophia, "love of wisdom" (Lewis & Short), from philos, "loving", and sophia, "wisdom" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: philosophia, philosophiae
- Say it: philosophia, philosophiae, once more
- Say it: say philosophia, philosophiae

- Recall: say the Latin for a mattress, then the Latin for grammar, then say philosophia, philosophiae again

Before you move on

What does philosophia, philosophiae mean? ("Philosophy".) Say it once more.

226.3 studium, studiī — eagerness; study

Before the new one: say the Latin for grammar, then the Latin for philosophy.

You'll want to know: studium, studiī

studium, studiī — "eagerness; study".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

studium is built on studeō, "to be eager, to apply oneself" (Lewis & Short). Where studeō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: studium, studiī
- Say it: studium, studiī, once more
- Say it: say studium, studiī
- Recall: say the Latin for grammar, then the Latin for philosophy, then say studium, studiī again

Before you move on

What does studium, studiī mean? ("Eagerness; study".) Say it once more.

226.4 quaestiō, quaestiōnis — a question, an inquiry

Before the new one: say the Latin for philosophy, then the Latin for eagerness; study.

You'll want to know: quaestiō, quaestiōnis

quaestiō, quaestiōnis — "a question, an inquiry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quaestiō is built on quaerō, "to seek, to ask" (Lewis & Short), with -tiō, an ending for an act: a seeking.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quaestiō, quaestiōnis
- Say it: quaestiō, quaestiōnis, once more
- Say it: say quaestiō, quaestiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for philosophy, then the Latin for eagerness; study, then say quaestiō, quaestiōnis again

Before you move on

What does quaestiō, quaestiōnis mean? ("A question, an inquiry".) Say it once more.

226.5 respōnsum, respōnsī — an answer

Before the new one: say the Latin for eagerness; study, then the Latin for a question.

You'll want to know: respōnsum, respōnsī

respōnsum, respōnsī — "an answer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

respōnsum is the past participle of respondeō, "to answer" (Lewis & Short), used as a noun. respondeō is re-, "back", with spondeō, "to pledge" (EtymDB 2.1): to pledge back.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: respōnsum, respōnsī
- Say it: respōnsum, respōnsī, once more
- Say it: say respōnsum, respōnsī
- Recall: say the Latin for eagerness; study, then the Latin for a question, then say respōnsum, respōnsī again

Before you move on

What does respōnsum, respōnsī mean? ("An answer".) Say it once more.

Chapter 227

Fate, Lair, Hospitality, Lodging house, Traveller

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say fate, a lair, hospitality, a lodging house and a traveller.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 227: I can say fate, a lair, hospitality, a lodging house and a traveller.

227.1 fātum, fātī — fate

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a question, then the Latin for an answer.

You'll want to know: fātum, fātī

fātum, fātī — "fate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fātum is the past participle of fārī, "to speak" (EtymDB 2.1), used as a noun: what has been spoken, the word of the gods.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fātum, fātī
- Say it: fātum, fātī, once more
- Say it: say fātum, fātī
- Recall: say the Latin for a question, then the Latin for an answer, then say fātum, fātī again

Before you move on

What does fātum, fātī mean? ("Fate".) Say it once more.

227.2 cubīle, cubīlis — a lair, a resting place

Before the new one: say the Latin for an answer, then the Latin for fate.

You'll want to know: cubīle, cubīlis

cubīle, cubīlis — "a lair, a resting place".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cubīle is built on cubō, "to lie down" (Lewis & Short), with -īle, an ending for a place: a place to lie.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cubīle, cubīlis
- Say it: cubīle, cubīlis, once more
- Say it: say cubīle, cubīlis
- Recall: say the Latin for an answer, then the Latin for fate, then say cubīle, cubīlis again

Before you move on

What does cubīle, cubīlis mean? (“A lair, a resting place”.) Say it once more.

227.3 hospitium, hospitiī — hospitality; lodging

Before the new one: say the Latin for fate, then the Latin for a lair.

You’ll want to know: hospitium, hospitiī

hospitium, hospitiī — “hospitality; lodging”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hospitium is built on hospes, hospitis, “a guest, a host” (Lewis & Short), with -ium, an ending for a state or place.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hospitium, hospitiī
- Say it: hospitium, hospitiī, once more
- Say it: say hospitium, hospitiī
- Recall: say the Latin for fate, then the Latin for a lair, then say hospitium, hospitiī again

Before you move on

What does hospitium, hospitiī mean? (“Hospitality; lodging”.) Say it once more.

227.4 dēversōrium, dēversōriī — a lodging house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lair, then the Latin for hospitality; lodging.

You'll want to know: dēversōrium, dēversōriī

dēversōrium, dēversōriī — "a lodging house".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēversōrium is built on dēvertō, "to turn aside" (EtymDB 2.1), from dē, "away", and vertō, "to turn": a place where travellers turn aside for the night.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēversōrium, dēversōriī
- Say it: dēversōrium, dēversōriī, once more
- Say it: say dēversōrium, dēversōriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a lair, then the Latin for hospitality; lodging, then say dēversōrium, dēversōriī again

Before you move on

What does dēversōrium, dēversōriī mean? ("A lodging house".) Say it once more.

227.5 viātor, viātōris — a traveller

Before the new one: say the Latin for hospitality; lodging, then the Latin for a lodging house.

You'll want to know: viātor, viātōris

viātor, viātōris — "a traveller".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

viātor is built on viō, “to travel” (Lewis & Short), from via, “a road”, with -tor, “one who does it”. via is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wegh-*, “to go, to carry” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: viātor, viātōris
- Say it: viātor, viātōris, once more
- Say it: say viātor, viātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for hospitality; lodging, then the Latin for a lodging house, then say viātor, viātōris again

Before you move on

What does viātor, viātōris mean? (“A traveller”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 228

Woodland pass, Peak, Yoke, Whirlpool, Order

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a woodland pass, a peak, a yoke, a whirlpool and order.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 228: I can say a woodland pass, a peak, a yoke, a whirlpool and order.

228.1 saltus, saltūs — a woodland pass; a leap

Before the new one: say the Latin for a lodging house, then the Latin for a traveller.

You'll want to know: saltus, saltūs

saltus, saltūs — "a woodland pass; a leap".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saltus is two words in one form. A leap is built on saliō, "to jump" (Lewis & Short); a woodland pass has no sure origin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saltus, saltūs
- Say it: saltus, saltūs, once more
- Say it: say saltus, saltūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a lodging house, then the Latin for a traveller, then say saltus, saltūs again

Before you move on

What does saltus, saltūs mean? ("A woodland pass; a leap".) Say it once more.

228.2 cacūmen, cacūminis — a peak, a tip

Before the new one: say the Latin for a traveller, then the Latin for a woodland pass; a leap.

You'll want to know: cacūmen, cacūminis

cacūmen, cacūminis — "a peak, a tip".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cacūmen has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cacūmen, cacūminis
- Say it: cacūmen, cacūminis, once more
- Say it: say cacūmen, cacūminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a traveller, then the Latin for a woodland pass; a leap, then say cacūmen, cacūminis again

Before you move on

What does cacūmen, cacūminis mean? (“A peak, a tip”.) Say it once more.

228.3 iugum, iugī — a yoke; a ridge

Before the new one: say the Latin for a woodland pass; a leap, then the Latin for a peak.

You’ll want to know: iugum, iugī

iugum, iugī — “a yoke; a ridge”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iugum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European yugom*, “yoke”, from yewg-*, “to join” (EtymDB 2.1); Greek zygon, “yoke”, and English yoke are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iugum, iugī
- Say it: iugum, iugī, once more
- Say it: say iugum, iugī
- Recall: say the Latin for a woodland pass; a leap, then the Latin for a peak, then say iugum, iugī again

Before you move on

What does iugum, iugī mean? (“A yoke; a ridge”.) Say it once more.

228.4 vertex, verticis — a whirlpool; the top

Before the new one: say the Latin for a peak, then the Latin for a yoke; a ridge.

You'll want to know: vertex, verticis

vertex, verticis — "a whirlpool; the top".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vertex is built on vertō, "to turn" (Lewis & Short): a whirl, then the crown of the head where the hair whirls, then the top. vortex, "a whirl", is the older spelling of the same word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vertex, verticis
- Say it: vertex, verticis, once more
- Say it: say vertex, verticis
- Recall: say the Latin for a peak, then the Latin for a yoke; a ridge, then say vertex, verticis again

Before you move on

What does vertex, verticis mean? ("A whirlpool; the top".) Say it once more.

228.5 ōrdō, ōrdinis — order, a row

Before the new one: say the Latin for a yoke; a ridge, then the Latin for a whirlpool; the top.

You'll want to know: ōrdō, ōrdinis

ōrdō, ōrdinis — "order, a row".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrdō is probably inherited, from Proto-Italic ordon-*, "a row, an order" (EtymDB 2.1), but its deeper origin is uncertain; it may first have been a weaving word, a row of threads.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrdō, ōrdinis
- Say it: ōrdō, ōrdinis, once more
- Say it: say ōrdō, ōrdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a yoke; a ridge, then the Latin for a whirlpool; the top, then say ōrdō, ōrdinis again

Before you move on

What does ōrdō, ōrdinis mean? ("Order, a row".) Say it once more.

228.6 Words from chapters 224-225 — a first pass

Say the words for a whirlpool; the top and order.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a lizard, a wild boar, a billy goat, a lamb, a calf
- a gem; a bud, a garment, a sandal, a fold of a garment; a bay, a mattress

Before you move on

A lizard? (lacerta, lacertae.) A wild boar? (aper, aprī.) A billy goat? (caper, caprī.) A lamb? (agnus, agnī.) A calf? (vitulus, vitulī.) A gem; a bud? (gemma, gemmae.) A garment? (vestīmentum, vestīmentī.) A sandal? (solea, soleae.) A fold of a garment; a bay? (sinus, sinūs.) A mattress? (culcita, culcitae.)

228.7 Words from chapters 226-228 — a second pass

Say the words for grammar and philosophy.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- grammar, philosophy, eagerness; study, a question, an answer
- fate, a lair, hospitality; lodging, a lodging house, a traveller
- a woodland pass; a leap, a peak, a yoke; a ridge, a whirlpool; the top, order

Before you move on

Grammar? (grammatica, grammaticae.) Philosophy? (philosophia, philosophiae.) Eagerness; study? (studium, studiī.) A question? (quaestiō, quaestiōnis.) An answer? (respōnsum, respōnsī.) Fate? (fātum, fātī.) A lair? (cubīle, cubīlis.) Hospitality; lodging? (hospitium, hospitiī.) A lodging house? (dēversōrium, dēversōriī.) A traveller? (viātor, viātōris.) A woodland pass; a leap? (saltus, saltūs.) A peak? (cacūmen, cacūminis.) A yoke; a ridge? (iugum, iugī.) A whirlpool; the top? (vertex, verticis.) Order? (ōrdō, ōrdinis.)

Chapter 229

To decree, To try, To go on, To hold off, To remove

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to decree, to try, to go on, to hold off and to remove.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 229: I can say to decree, to try, to go on, to hold off and to remove.

229.1 dēcernō, dēcernere — to decree, to settle

Before the new one: say the Latin for a whirlpool; the top, then the Latin for order, a row.

You'll want to know: dēcernō, dēcernere

dēcernō, dēcernere — "to decree, to settle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēcernō is dē, "down, off", with cernō, "to sift, to decide" (EtymDB 2.1): to decide finally. cernō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European krey-*, "to sift" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēcernō, dēcernere
- Say it: dēcernō, dēcernere, once more
- Say it: say dēcernō, dēcernere
- Recall: say the Latin for a whirlpool; the top, then the Latin for order, a row, then say dēcernō, dēcernere again

Before you move on

What does dēcernō, dēcernere mean? ("To decree, to settle".) Say it once more.

229.2 temptō, temptāre — to try, to test

Before the new one: say the Latin for order, a row, then the Latin for to decree.

You'll want to know: temptō, temptāre

temptō, temptāre — "to try, to test".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

temptō, also spelled tentō (EtymDB 2.1), is often taken as a frequentative of teneō, "to hold", but its origin is uncertain. English tempt and attempt come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: temptō, temptāre
- Say it: temptō, temptāre, once more
- Say it: say temptō, temptāre

- Recall: say the Latin for order, a row, then the Latin for to decree, then say temptō, temptāre again

Before you move on

What does temptō, temptāre mean? ("To try, to test".) Say it once more.

229.3 pergō, pergere — to go on, to continue

Before the new one: say the Latin for to decree, then the Latin for to try.

You'll want to know: pergō, pergere

pergō, pergere — "to go on, to continue".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pergō is contracted from per, "through", and regō, "to direct" (Lewis & Short): to keep on one's course.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pergō, pergere
- Say it: pergō, pergere, once more
- Say it: say pergō, pergere
- Recall: say the Latin for to decree, then the Latin for to try, then say pergō, pergere again

Before you move on

What does pergō, pergere mean? ("To go on, to continue".) Say it once more.

229.4 cessō, cessāre — to hold off, to be idle

Before the new one: say the Latin for to try, then the Latin for to go on.

You'll want to know: cessō, cessāre

cessō, cessāre — "to hold off, to be idle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cessō is a frequentative of cēdō, "to go, to give way" (Lewis & Short): to keep giving way, so to hang back. English cease comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cessō, cessāre
- Say it: cessō, cessāre, once more
- Say it: say cessō, cessāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to try, then the Latin for to go on, then say cessō, cessāre again

Before you move on

What does cessō, cessāre mean? ("To hold off, to be idle".) Say it once more.

229.5 removeō, removēre — to remove

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go on, then the Latin for to hold off.

You'll want to know: removeō, removēre

removeō, removēre — "to remove".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

removeō is re-, "back, away", with moveō, "to move" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: removeō, removēre
- Say it: removeō, removēre, once more
- Say it: say removeō, removēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to go on, then the Latin for to hold off, then say removeō, removēre again

Before you move on

What does removeō, removēre mean? ("To remove".) Say it once more.

Chapter 230

To wake up, To accompany, To add, To announce, To appear

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to wake up, to accompany, to add, to announce and to appear.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 230: I can say to wake up, to accompany, to add, to announce and to appear.

230.1 expergīscor, expergīscī — to wake up

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to hold off, then the Latin for to remove.

You'll want to know: expergīscor, expergīscī

expergīscor, expergīscī — "to wake up".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

expergīscor is built on expergō, "to wake up" (Lewis & Short), with -scor, the ending of verbs of becoming; expergō is often explained as ex, "out", with pergō, "to go on".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: expergīscor, expergīscī
- Say it: expergīscor, expergīscī, once more
- Say it: say expergīscor, expergīscī
- Recall: say the Latin for to hold off, then the Latin for to remove, then say expergīscor, expergīscī again

Before you move on

What does expergīscor, expergīscī mean? ("To wake up".) Say it once more.

230.2 comitor, comitārī — to accompany

Before the new one: say the Latin for to remove, then the Latin for to wake up.

You'll want to know: comitor, comitārī

comitor, comitārī — "to accompany".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

comitor is built on comes, comitis, "a companion" (Lewis & Short): to be someone's companion. comes is con-, "together", with the root of eō, "to go": one who goes along.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: comitor, comitārī
- Say it: comitor, comitārī, once more
- Say it: say comitor, comitārī

- Recall: say the Latin for to remove, then the Latin for to wake up, then say comitor, comitārī again

Before you move on

What does comitor, comitārī mean? ("To accompany".) Say it once more.

230.3 addō, addere — to add

Before the new one: say the Latin for to wake up, then the Latin for to accompany.

You'll want to know: addō, addere

addō, addere — "to add".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

addō is ad, "to", with dō, "to put, to give" (Lewis & Short): to put to.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: addō, addere
- Say it: addō, addere, once more
- Say it: say addō, addere
- Recall: say the Latin for to wake up, then the Latin for to accompany, then say addō, addere again

Before you move on

What does addō, addere mean? ("To add".) Say it once more.

230.4 nūntiō, nūntiāre — to announce

Before the new one: say the Latin for to accompany, then the Latin for to add.

You'll want to know: nūntiō, nūntiāre

nūntiō, nūntiāre — "to announce".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūntiō is the verb made from nūntius, "a messenger, news" (Lewis & Short), whose origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūntiō, nūntiāre
- Say it: nūntiō, nūntiāre, once more
- Say it: say nūntiō, nūntiāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to accompany, then the Latin for to add, then say nūntiō, nūntiāre again

Before you move on

What does nūntiō, nūntiāre mean? ("To announce".) Say it once more.

230.5 appāreō, appārēre — to appear

Before the new one: say the Latin for to add, then the Latin for to announce.

You'll want to know: appāreō, appārēre

appāreō, appārēre — "to appear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

appāreō is ad, "to", with pāreō, "to come into view" (EtymDB 2.1). English appear comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: appāreō, appārēre
- Say it: appāreō, appārēre, once more
- Say it: say appāreō, appārēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to add, then the Latin for to announce, then say appāreō, appārēre again

Before you move on

What does appāreō, appārēre mean? ("To appear".) Say it once more.

Chapter 231

To turn, To enjoy, To shape, To complain, To be missing

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to turn, to enjoy, to shape, to complain and to be missing.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 231: I can say to turn, to enjoy, to shape, to complain and to be missing.

231.1 vertō, vertere — to turn

Before the new one: say the Latin for to announce, then the Latin for to appear.

You'll want to know: vertō, vertere

vertō, vertere — "to turn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vertō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wert-*, "to turn" (EtymDB 2.1); Sanskrit vart-, "to turn", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English -ward in words like toward.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vertō, vertere
- Say it: vertō, vertere, once more
- Say it: say vertō, vertere
- Recall: say the Latin for to announce, then the Latin for to appear, then say vertō, vertere again

Before you move on

What does vertō, vertere mean? ("To turn".) Say it once more.

231.2 fruor, fruī — to enjoy

Before the new one: say the Latin for to appear, then the Latin for to turn.

You'll want to know: fruor, fruī

fruor, fruī — "to enjoy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fruor is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhrug-*, "to make use of, to enjoy" (EtymDB 2.1). English fruit comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fruor, fruī
- Say it: fruor, fruī, once more
- Say it: say fruor, fruī
- Recall: say the Latin for to appear, then the Latin for to turn, then say fruor, fruī again

Before you move on

What does fruor, fruī mean? ("To enjoy".) Say it once more.

231.3 fingō, fingere — to shape, to imagine

Before the new one: say the Latin for to turn, then the Latin for to enjoy.

You'll want to know: fingō, fingere

fingō, fingere — "to shape, to imagine".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fingō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheygh-*, "to mould, to shape" (EtymDB 2.1). English dough is a cousin, and English fiction and figure come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fingō, fingere
- Say it: fingō, fingere, once more
- Say it: say fingō, fingere
- Recall: say the Latin for to turn, then the Latin for to enjoy, then say fingō, fingere again

Before you move on

What does fingō, fingere mean? ("To shape, to imagine".) Say it once more.

231.4 queror, querī — to complain

Before the new one: say the Latin for to enjoy, then the Latin for to shape.

You'll want to know: queror, querī

queror, querī — "to complain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

queror is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kwes-*, "to puff, to sigh" (EtymDB 2.1). English wheeze is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: queror, querī
- Say it: queror, querī, once more
- Say it: say queror, querī
- Recall: say the Latin for to enjoy, then the Latin for to shape, then say queror, querī again

Before you move on

What does queror, querī mean? ("To complain".) Say it once more.

231.5 dēsum, deesse — to be missing, to fail

Before the new one: say the Latin for to shape, then the Latin for to complain.

You'll want to know: dēsum, deesse

dēsum, deesse — "to be missing, to fail".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēsum is dē, “away from”, with sum, “to be”: to be away, to be missing. Sum is inherited from Proto-Indo-European h₁es-*, “to be” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēsum, deesse
- Say it: dēsum, deesse, once more
- Say it: say dēsum, deesse
- Recall: say the Latin for to shape, then the Latin for to complain, then say dēsum, deesse again

Before you move on

What does dēsum, deesse mean? (“To be missing, to fail”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 232

To steal, To uncover, To seem, To serve, To suffer

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to steal, to uncover, to seem, to serve and to suffer.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 232: I can say to steal, to uncover, to seem, to serve and to suffer.

232.1 fūror, fūrārī — to steal

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to complain, then the Latin for to be missing.

You'll want to know: fūror, fūrārī

fūror, fūrārī — "to steal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fūror is built on fūr, "a thief" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhōr*, "thief" (EtymDB 2.1), from the root of ferō, "to carry": one who carries off. It is a different word from furor, "rage".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fūror, fūrārī
- Say it: fūror, fūrārī, once more
- Say it: say fūror, fūrārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to complain, then the Latin for to be missing, then say fūror, fūrārī again

Before you move on

What does fūror, fūrārī mean? ("To steal".) Say it once more.

232.2 dētegō, dētegere — to uncover, to discover

Before the new one: say the Latin for to be missing, then the Latin for to steal.

You'll want to know: dētegō, dētegere

dētegō, dētegere — "to uncover, to discover".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dētegō is dē, "off", with tegō, "to cover" (EtymDB 2.1): to take the cover off. English detect comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dētegō, dētegere
- Say it: dētegō, dētegere, once more
- Say it: say dētegō, dētegere
- Recall: say the Latin for to be missing, then the Latin for to steal, then say dētegō, dētegere again

Before you move on

What does dētegō, dētegere mean? ("To uncover, to discover".) Say it once more.

232.3 videor, vidērī — to seem

Before the new one: say the Latin for to steal, then the Latin for to uncover.

You'll want to know: videor, vidērī

videor, vidērī — "to seem".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

videor is the passive of videō, "to see": to be seen, so to seem. Videō is inherited from Proto-Indo-European weyd-*, "to see, to know" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: videor, vidērī
- Say it: videor, vidērī, once more
- Say it: say videor, vidērī
- Recall: say the Latin for to steal, then the Latin for to uncover, then say videor, vidērī again

Before you move on

What does videor, vidērī mean? ("To seem".) Say it once more.

232.4 serviō, servīre — to serve, to be a slave

Before the new one: say the Latin for to uncover, then the Latin for to seem.

You'll want to know: serviō, servīre

serviō, servīre — "to serve, to be a slave".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

serviō is the verb made from servus, "a slave" (EtymDB 2.1): to be a slave, to serve. English serve comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: serviō, servīre
- Say it: serviō, servīre, once more
- Say it: say serviō, servīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to uncover, then the Latin for to seem, then say serviō, servīre again

Before you move on

What does serviō, servīre mean? ("To serve, to be a slave".) Say it once more.

232.5 patior, patī — to suffer, to allow

Before the new one: say the Latin for to seem, then the Latin for to serve.

You'll want to know: patior, patī

patior, patī — "to suffer, to allow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patior has no sure origin. Lewis & Short compare Greek penthos, "grief", and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed root pe(i)-*, "to hurt", but neither link is settled. English passion and patient come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patior, patī
- Say it: patior, patī, once more
- Say it: say patior, patī
- Recall: say the Latin for to seem, then the Latin for to serve, then say patior, patī again

Before you move on

What does patior, patī mean? ("To suffer, to allow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 233

To press on, To break off, To tie, To mix, To obey

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to press on, to break off, to tie, to mix and to obey.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 233: I can say to press on, to break off, to tie, to mix and to obey.

233.1 īnstō, īnstāre — to press on, to insist

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to serve, then the Latin for to suffer.

You'll want to know: īnstō, īnstāre

īnstō, īnstāre — "to press on, to insist".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnstō is in, "on, upon", with stō, "to stand" (EtymDB 2.1): to stand upon, to press on. English instant comes from its participle.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnstō, īnstāre
- Say it: īnstō, īnstāre, once more
- Say it: say īnstō, īnstāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to serve, then the Latin for to suffer, then say īnstō, īnstāre again

Before you move on

What does īnstō, īnstāre mean? ("To press on, to insist".) Say it once more.

233.2 interrumpō, interrumpere — to break off, to interrupt

Before the new one: say the Latin for to suffer, then the Latin for to press on.

You'll want to know: interrumpō, interrumpere

interrumpō, interrumpere — "to break off, to interrupt".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

interrumpō is inter, "between", with rumpō, "to break" (EtymDB 2.1): to break in between. rumpō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European Hrewp-*, "to break".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: interrumpō, interrumpere
- Say it: interrumpō, interrumpere, once more
- Say it: say interrumpō, interrumpere

- Recall: say the Latin for to suffer, then the Latin for to press on, then say interrumpō, interrumpere again

Before you move on

What does interrumpō, interrumpere mean? ("To break off, to interrupt".) Say it once more.

233.3 ligō, ligāre — to tie

Before the new one: say the Latin for to press on, then the Latin for to break off.

You'll want to know: ligō, ligāre

ligō, ligāre — "to tie".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ligō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root leyg-*, "to bind" (EtymDB 2.1). English ligament comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ligō, ligāre
- Say it: ligō, ligāre, once more
- Say it: say ligō, ligāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to press on, then the Latin for to break off, then say ligō, ligāre again

Before you move on

What does ligō, ligāre mean? ("To tie".) Say it once more.

233.4 misceō, miscēre — to mix

Before the new one: say the Latin for to break off, then the Latin for to tie.

You'll want to know: misceō, miscēre

misceō, miscēre — "to mix".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

misceō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European meyk-*, "to mix" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek mignymi, "to mix", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English mix comes from its participle mixtus, "mixed".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: misceō, miscēre
- Say it: misceō, miscēre, once more
- Say it: say misceō, miscēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to break off, then the Latin for to tie, then say misceō, miscēre again

Before you move on

What does misceō, miscēre mean? ("To mix".) Say it once more.

233.5 pāreō, pārēre — to obey

Before the new one: say the Latin for to tie, then the Latin for to mix.

You'll want to know: pāreō, pārēre

pāreō, pārēre — "to obey".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāreō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European peh2s-*, "to watch, to see" (EtymDB 2.1): first to appear, to be at hand, then to be at someone's call, to obey.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāreō, pārēre
- Say it: pāreō, pārēre, once more
- Say it: say pāreō, pārēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to tie, then the Latin for to mix, then say pāreō, pārēre again

Before you move on

What does pāreō, pārēre mean? ("To obey".) Say it once more.

Chapter 234

To let down, To gather, To vanish, To entrust, To hold back

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to let down, to gather, to vanish, to entrust and to hold back.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 234: I can say to let down, to gather, to vanish, to entrust and to hold back.

234.1 dēmittō, dēmittere — to let down, to lower

Before the new one: say the Latin for to mix, then the Latin for to obey.

You'll want to know: dēmittō, dēmittere

dēmittō, dēmittere — "to let down, to lower".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēmittō is dē, "down", with mittō, "to send, to let go" (EtymDB 2.1): to let down.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēmittō, dēmittere
- Say it: dēmittō, dēmittere, once more
- Say it: say dēmittō, dēmittere
- Recall: say the Latin for to mix, then the Latin for to obey, then say dēmittō, dēmittere again

Before you move on

What does dēmittō, dēmittere mean? ("To let down, to lower".) Say it once more.

234.2 colligō, colligere — to gather, to collect

Before the new one: say the Latin for to obey, then the Latin for to let down.

You'll want to know: colligō, colligere

colligō, colligere — "to gather, to collect".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

colligō is con-, "together", with legō, "to gather, to pick" (EtymDB 2.1): to gather together. legō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European leg-*, "to gather" (EtymDB 2.1). English collect comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: colligō, colligere
- Say it: colligō, colligere, once more
- Say it: say colligō, colligere

- Recall: say the Latin for to obey, then the Latin for to let down, then say colligō, colligere again

Before you move on

What does colligō, colligere mean? ("To gather, to collect".) Say it once more.

234.3 ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere — to vanish

Before the new one: say the Latin for to let down, then the Latin for to gather.

You'll want to know: ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere

ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere — "to vanish".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēvanēscō is ex, "out", with vānēscō, "to become empty", from vānus, "empty" (EtymDB 2.1): to empty out, to vanish. English vanish comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere
- Say it: ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere, once more
- Say it: say ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to let down, then the Latin for to gather, then say ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere again

Before you move on

What does ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere mean? ("To vanish".) Say it once more.

234.4 mandō, mandāre — to entrust, to order

Before the new one: say the Latin for to gather, then the Latin for to vanish.

You'll want to know: mandō, mandāre

mandō, mandāre — "to entrust, to order".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mandō is usually explained as manus, "hand", with dō, "to put" (Lewis & Short): to put into someone's hand. It is a different word from mandō, "to chew".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mandō, mandāre
- Say it: mandō, mandāre, once more
- Say it: say mandō, mandāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to gather, then the Latin for to vanish, then say mandō, mandāre again

Before you move on

What does mandō, mandāre mean? ("To entrust, to order".) Say it once more.

234.5 retineō, retinēre — to hold back, to keep

Before the new one: say the Latin for to vanish, then the Latin for to entrust.

You'll want to know: retineō, retinēre

retineō, retinēre — "to hold back, to keep".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

retineō is re-, "back", with teneō, "to hold" (Lewis & Short), its e weakened to i: to hold back.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: retineō, retinēre
- Say it: retineō, retinēre, once more
- Say it: say retineō, retinēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to vanish, then the Latin for to entrust, then say retineō, retinēre again

Before you move on

What does retineō, retinēre mean? ("To hold back, to keep".) Say it once more.

Chapter 235

To remember, To speak, To follow, To set out, To use

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to remember, to speak, to follow, to set out and to use.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 235: I can say to remember, to speak, to follow, to set out and to use.

235.1 meminī, meminisse — to remember

Before the new one: say the Latin for to entrust, then the Latin for to hold back.

You'll want to know: meminī, meminisse

meminī, meminisse — "to remember".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

meminī is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European memone*, "has in mind", a doubled perfect of men-*, "to think" (EtymDB 2.1). English mind is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: meminī, meminisse
- Say it: meminī, meminisse, once more
- Say it: say meminī, meminisse
- Recall: say the Latin for to entrust, then the Latin for to hold back, then say meminī, meminisse again

Before you move on

What does meminī, meminisse mean? ("To remember".) Say it once more.

235.2 loquor, loquī — to speak

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hold back, then the Latin for to remember.

You'll want to know: loquor, loquī

loquor, loquī — "to speak".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

loquor is probably inherited from Proto-Italic tlokwōr*, "to speak" (EtymDB 2.1); its deeper origin is uncertain. English eloquent comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: loquor, loquī
- Say it: loquor, loquī, once more
- Say it: say loquor, loquī

- Recall: say the Latin for to hold back, then the Latin for to remember, then say loquor, loquī again

Before you move on

What does loquor, loquī mean? ("To speak".) Say it once more.

235.3 sequor, sequī — to follow

Before the new one: say the Latin for to remember, then the Latin for to speak.

You'll want to know: sequor, sequī

sequor, sequī — "to follow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sequor is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sekw-*, "to follow" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hepomai, "to follow", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sequor, sequī
- Say it: sequor, sequī, once more
- Say it: say sequor, sequī
- Recall: say the Latin for to remember, then the Latin for to speak, then say sequor, sequī again

Before you move on

What does sequor, sequī mean? ("To follow".) Say it once more.

235.4 proficīscor, proficīscī — to set out

Before the new one: say the Latin for to speak, then the Latin for to follow.

You'll want to know: proficīscor, proficīscī

proficīscor, proficīscī — "to set out".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

proficīscor is built on prōficiō, "to make headway" (EtymDB 2.1), from prō, "forward", and faciō, "to make", with -scor, the ending of verbs of becoming: to put oneself forward, to set out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: proficīscor, proficīscī
- Say it: proficīscor, proficīscī, once more
- Say it: say proficīscor, proficīscī
- Recall: say the Latin for to speak, then the Latin for to follow, then say proficīscor, proficīscī again

Before you move on

What does proficīscor, proficīscī mean? ("To set out".) Say it once more.

235.5 ūtor, ūtī — to use

Before the new one: say the Latin for to follow, then the Latin for to set out.

You'll want to know: ūtor, ūtī

ūtor, ūtī — "to use".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ūtor is probably inherited from Proto-Italic oitōr*, "to use" (EtymDB 2.1), but Lewis & Short call its deeper origin doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ūtor, ūtī
- Say it: ūtor, ūtī, once more
- Say it: say ūtor, ūtī
- Recall: say the Latin for to follow, then the Latin for to set out, then say ūtor, ūtī again

Before you move on

What does ūtor, ūtī mean? ("To use".) Say it once more.

Chapter 236

Plaster, Remedy, Dream, Love, Friendship

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a plaster, a remedy, a dream, love and friendship.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 236: I can say a plaster, a remedy, a dream, love and friendship.

236.1 emplastrum, emplastrī — a plaster, a dressing

Before the new one: say the Latin for to set out, then the Latin for to use.

You'll want to know: emplastrum, emplastrī

emplastrum, emplastrī — "a plaster, a dressing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

emplastrum was borrowed from Greek emplastron, "a plaster" (Lewis & Short), from en, "on", and plassō, "to mould" (EtymDB 2.1). English plaster comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: emplastrum, emplastrī
- Say it: emplastrum, emplastrī, once more
- Say it: say emplastrum, emplastrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to set out, then the Latin for to use, then say emplastrum, emplastrī again

Before you move on

What does emplastrum, emplastrī mean? ("A plaster, a dressing".) Say it once more.

236.2 remedium, remediī — a remedy

Before the new one: say the Latin for to use, then the Latin for a plaster.

You'll want to know: remedium, remediī

remedium, remediī — "a remedy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

remedium is re-, "back", with medeor, "to heal" (Lewis & Short): what brings back health.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: remedium, remediī
- Say it: remedium, remediī, once more
- Say it: say remedium, remediī
- Recall: say the Latin for to use, then the Latin for a plaster, then say remedium, remediī again

Before you move on

What does remedium, remediī mean? ("A remedy".) Say it once more.

236.3 somnium, somniī — a dream

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plaster, then the Latin for a remedy.

You'll want to know: somnium, somniī

somnium, somniī — "a dream".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

somnium is built on somnus, "sleep": what one sees in sleep. somnus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European swepnos*, "sleep".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: somnium, somniī
- Say it: somnium, somniī, once more
- Say it: say somnium, somniī
- Recall: say the Latin for a plaster, then the Latin for a remedy, then say somnium, somniī again

Before you move on

What does somnium, somniī mean? ("A dream".) Say it once more.

236.4 amor, amōris — love

Before the new one: say the Latin for a remedy, then the Latin for a dream.

You'll want to know: amor, amōris

amor, amōris — "love".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amor is built on amō, "to love" (Lewis & Short), with -or, "a state". Where amō comes from is uncertain; it may be a nursery word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amor, amōris
- Say it: amor, amōris, once more
- Say it: say amor, amōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a remedy, then the Latin for a dream, then say amor, amōris again

Before you move on

What does amor, amōris mean? ("Love".) Say it once more.

236.5 amīcitia, amīcitiae — friendship

Before the new one: say the Latin for a dream, then the Latin for love.

You'll want to know: amīcitia, amīcitiae

amīcitia, amīcitiae — "friendship".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amīcitia is built on amīcus, "a friend" (Lewis & Short), with -itia, an ending for a state: being friends.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amīcitia, amīcitiae
- Say it: amīcitia, amīcitiae, once more
- Say it: say amīcitia, amīcitiae
- Recall: say the Latin for a dream, then the Latin for love, then say amīcitia, amīcitiae again

Before you move on

What does amīcitia, amīcitiae mean? ("Friendship".) Say it once more.

Chapter 237

End, Delay, Sometimes, Every day, Day before

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say the end, a delay, sometimes, every day and the day before.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 237: I can say the end, a delay, sometimes, every day and the day before.

237.1 fīnis, fīnis — the end; a boundary

Before the new one: say the Latin for love, then the Latin for friendship.

You'll want to know: fīnis, fīnis

fīnis, fīnis — "the end; a boundary".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīnis has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European dhnh2-*, "end", but no account is generally accepted. English final and finish come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīnis, fīnis
- Say it: fīnis, fīnis, once more
- Say it: say fīnis, fīnis
- Recall: say the Latin for love, then the Latin for friendship, then say fīnis, fīnis again

Before you move on

What does fīnis, fīnis mean? ("The end; a boundary".) Say it once more.

237.2 mora, morae — a delay

Before the new one: say the Latin for friendship, then the Latin for the end; a boundary.

You'll want to know: mora, morae

mora, morae — "a delay".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mora is often linked with Proto-Indo-European (s)mer-*, "to be mindful, to linger in thought" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of memor, "mindful" (Lewis & Short), but the link is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mora, morae
- Say it: mora, morae, once more
- Say it: say mora, morae

- Recall: say the Latin for friendship, then the Latin for the end; a boundary, then say mora, morae again

Before you move on

What does mora, morae mean? ("A delay".) Say it once more.

237.3 interdum — sometimes

Before the new one: say the Latin for the end; a boundary, then the Latin for a delay.

You'll want to know: interdum

interdum — "sometimes".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

interdum is inter, "between", with dum, "while" (Lewis & Short): at times in between.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: interdum
- Say it: interdum, once more
- Say it: say interdum
- Recall: say the Latin for the end; a boundary, then the Latin for a delay, then say interdum again

Before you move on

What does interdum mean? ("Sometimes".) Say it once more.

237.4 cotīdiē — every day

Before the new one: say the Latin for a delay, then the Latin for sometimes.

You'll want to know: cotīdiē

cotīdiē — "every day".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cotīdiē is fused from quot, "as many as", and diē, "on the day": on every day there is. English quotidian comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cotīdiē
- Say it: cotīdiē, once more
- Say it: say cotīdiē
- Recall: say the Latin for a delay, then the Latin for sometimes, then say cotīdiē again

Before you move on

What does cotīdiē mean? ("Every day".) Say it once more.

237.5 prīdiē — the day before

Before the new one: say the Latin for sometimes, then the Latin for every day.

You'll want to know: prīdiē

prīdiē — "the day before".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīdiē is usually explained as an old prī*, "before", the root of prior, "earlier", with diē, "on the day" (Lewis & Short): on the day before.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prīdiē
- Say it: prīdiē, once more
- Say it: say prīdiē
- Recall: say the Latin for sometimes, then the Latin for every day, then say prīdiē again

Before you move on

What does prīdiē mean? ("The day before".) Say it once more.

237.6 Words from chapters 229-232 — a first pass

Say the words for every day and the day before.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to decree, to try, to go on, to hold off, to remove
- to wake up, to accompany, to add, to announce, to appear
- to turn, to enjoy, to shape, to complain, to be missing
- to steal, to uncover, to seem, to serve, to suffer

Before you move on

To decree? (dēcernō, dēcernere.) To try? (temptō, temptāre.) To go on? (pergō, pergere.) To hold off? (cessō, cessāre.) To remove? (removeō, removēre.) To wake up? (expergīscor, expergīscī.) To accompany? (comitor, comitārī.) To add? (addō, addere.) To announce? (nūntiō, nūntiāre.) To appear? (appāreō, appārēre.) To turn? (vertō, vertere.) To enjoy? (fruor, fruī.) To shape? (fingō, fingere.) To complain? (queror, querī.) To be missing? (dēsum, deesse.) To steal? (fūror, fūrārī.) To uncover? (dētegō, dētegere.) To seem? (videor, vidērī.) To serve? (serviō, servīre.) To suffer? (patior, patī.)

237.7 Words from chapters 233-237 — a second pass

Say the words for to press on and to break off.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to press on, to break off, to tie, to mix, to obey
- to let down, to gather, to vanish, to entrust, to hold back
- to remember, to speak, to follow, to set out, to use
- a plaster, a remedy, a dream, love, friendship
- the end; a boundary, a delay, sometimes, every day, the day before

Before you move on

To press on? (īnstō, īnstāre.) To break off? (interrumpō, interrumpere.) To tie? (ligō, ligāre.) To mix? (misceō, miscēre.) To obey? (pāreō, pārēre.) To let down? (dēmittō, dēmittere.) To gather? (colligō, colligere.) To vanish? (ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere.) To entrust? (mandō, mandāre.) To hold back? (retineō, retinēre.) To remember? (meminī, meminisse.) To speak? (loquor, loquī.) To follow? (sequor, sequī.) To set out? (proficīscor, proficīscī.) To use? (ūtor, ūtī.) A plaster? (emplastrum, emplastrī.) A remedy? (remedium, remediī.) A dream? (somnium, somniī.) Love? (amor, amōris.) Friendship? (amīcitia, amīcitiae.) The end; a boundary? (fīnis, fīnis.) A delay? (mora, morae.) Sometimes? (interdum.) Every day? (cotīdiē.) The day before? (prīdiē.)

Chapter 238

Beyond, On this side, At the house of, Face to face, By which way

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say beyond, on this side, at the house of, face to face and by which way.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 238: I can say beyond, on this side, at the house of, face to face and by which way.

238.1 ultrā — beyond

> Before the new one: say the Latin for every day, then the Latin for the day before.

You'll want to know: ultrā

ultrā — "beyond".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ultrā is an old case form of ulter, "lying beyond" (Lewis & Short), built on uls, "beyond", with parte, "side", understood: on the far side. English ultra- comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ultrā
- Say it: ultrā, once more
- Say it: say ultrā
- Recall: say the Latin for every day, then the Latin for the day before, then say ultrā again

Before you move on

What does ultrā mean? ("Beyond".) Say it once more.

238.2 citrā — on this side

Before the new one: say the Latin for the day before, then the Latin for beyond.

You'll want to know: citrā

citrā — "on this side".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

citrā is an old case form of citer, "on this side" (Lewis & Short), built on the pointing element of cis, "on this side".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: citrā
- Say it: citrā, once more
- Say it: say citrā
- Recall: say the Latin for the day before, then the Latin for beyond, then say citrā again

Before you move on

What does citrā mean? ("On this side".) Say it once more.

238.3 apud — at the house of, among

Before the new one: say the Latin for beyond, then the Latin for on this side.

You'll want to know: apud

apud — "at the house of, among".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

apud has no sure origin; old inscriptions also write aput (Lewis & Short). A link with Greek apo, "from", is often suggested.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: apud
- Say it: apud, once more
- Say it: say apud
- Recall: say the Latin for beyond, then the Latin for on this side, then say apud again

Before you move on

What does apud mean? ("At the house of, among".) Say it once more.

238.4 cōram — face to face

Before the new one: say the Latin for on this side, then the Latin for at the house of.

You'll want to know: cōram

cōram — "face to face".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōram is usually linked with ōs, ōris, "the face, the mouth" (Lewis & Short), with con-, "with": face to face.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōram
- Say it: cōram, once more
- Say it: say cōram
- Recall: say the Latin for on this side, then the Latin for at the house of, then say cōram again

Before you move on

What does cōram mean? ("Face to face".) Say it once more.

238.5 quā — by which way

Before the new one: say the Latin for at the house of, then the Latin for face to face.

You'll want to know: quā

quā — "by which way".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quā is the ablative feminine of quī, "who, which" (Lewis & Short), with viā, "way", understood: by which way.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quā
- Say it: quā, once more
- Say it: say quā
- Recall: say the Latin for at the house of, then the Latin for face to face, then say quā again

Before you move on

What does quā mean? ("By which way".) Say it once more.

Chapter 239

At the same time, Perhaps, Also, As if, Because of

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say at the same time, perhaps, also, as if and because of.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 239: I can say at the same time, perhaps, also, as if and because of.

239.1 simul — at the same time

> Before the new one: say the Latin for face to face, then the Latin for by which way.

You'll want to know: simul

simul — "at the same time".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

simul is inherited, usually traced to the Proto-Indo-European root sem-*, "one, together". Greek hama, "together", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English same.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: simul
- Say it: simul, once more
- Say it: say simul
- Recall: say the Latin for face to face, then the Latin for by which way, then say simul again

Before you move on

What does simul mean? ("At the same time".) Say it once more.

239.2 fortasse — perhaps

Before the new one: say the Latin for by which way, then the Latin for at the same time.

You'll want to know: fortasse

fortasse — "perhaps".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fortasse is usually explained as built on forte, "by chance", and an, "whether" (Lewis & Short): perhaps.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fortasse
- Say it: fortasse, once more
- Say it: say fortasse
- Recall: say the Latin for by which way, then the Latin for at the same time, then say fortasse again

Before you move on

What does fortasse mean? (“Perhaps”.) Say it once more.

239.3 quoque — also, too

Before the new one: say the Latin for at the same time, then the Latin for perhaps.

You’ll want to know: quoque

quoque — “also, too”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quoque has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. It is a different word from quōque, “and by which”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quoque
- Say it: quoque, once more
- Say it: say quoque
- Recall: say the Latin for at the same time, then the Latin for perhaps, then say quoque again

Before you move on

What does quoque mean? (“Also, too”.) Say it once more.

239.4 quasi — as if

Before the new one: say the Latin for perhaps, then the Latin for also.

You'll want to know: quasi quasi — "as if".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

quasi is contracted from quam sī, "as if" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quasi
- Say it: quasi, once more
- Say it: say quasi
- Recall: say the Latin for perhaps, then the Latin for also, then say quasi again

Before you move on

What does quasi mean? ("As if".) Say it once more.

239.5 propter — because of

Before the new one: say the Latin for also, then the Latin for as if.

You'll want to know: propter

propter — "because of".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

propter is contracted from an older propiter*, built on prope, "near" (Lewis & Short): near by, then because of.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: propter
- Say it: propter, once more
- Say it: say propter
- Recall: say the Latin for also, then the Latin for as if, then say propter again

Before you move on

What does propter mean? (“Because of”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 240

Rough, Deep, Unknown, Necessary, Useless

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say rough, deep, unknown, necessary and useless.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 240: I can say rough, deep, unknown, necessary and useless.

240.1 asper, aspera, asperum — rough, harsh

Before the new one: say the Latin for as if, then the Latin for because of.

You'll want to know: asper, aspera, asperum

asper, aspera, asperum — "rough, harsh".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

asper has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful, and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed root h2esp-*, "to cut".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: asper, aspera, asperum
- Say it: asper, aspera, asperum, once more
- Say it: say asper, aspera, asperum
- Recall: say the Latin for as if, then the Latin for because of, then say asper, aspera, asperum again

Before you move on

What does asper, aspera, asperum mean? ("Rough, harsh".) Say it once more.

240.2 profundus, profunda, profundum — deep

Before the new one: say the Latin for because of, then the Latin for rough.

You'll want to know: profundus, profunda, profundum

profundus, profunda, profundum — "deep".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

profundus is prō, "forward, down", with fundus, "bottom" (EtymDB 2.1): reaching far down. English profound comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: profundus, profunda, profundum
- Say it: profundus, profunda, profundum, once more
- Say it: say profundus, profunda, profundum
- Recall: say the Latin for because of, then the Latin for rough, then say profundus, profunda, profundum again

Before you move on

What does profundus, profunda, profundum mean? (“Deep”.) Say it once more.

240.3 ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum — unknown

Before the new one: say the Latin for rough, then the Latin for deep.

You’ll want to know: ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum

ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum — “unknown”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ignōtus is in-, “not”, with gnōtus, “known”, the older form of nōtus (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum
- Say it: ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum, once more
- Say it: say ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum
- Recall: say the Latin for rough, then the Latin for deep, then say ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum again

Before you move on

What does ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum mean? (“Unknown”.) Say it once more.

240.4 necessārius, necessāria, necessārium — necessary

Before the new one: say the Latin for deep, then the Latin for unknown.

You'll want to know: necessārius, necessāria, necessārium

necessārius, necessāria, necessārium — "necessary".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

necessārius is built on necesse, "unavoidable" (Lewis & Short), which is usually explained as ne, "not", with the root of cēdō, "to give way": not to be avoided.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: necessārius, necessāria, necessārium
- Say it: necessārius, necessāria, necessārium, once more
- Say it: say necessārius, necessāria, necessārium
- Recall: say the Latin for deep, then the Latin for unknown, then say necessārius, necessāria, necessārium again

Before you move on

What does necessārius, necessāria, necessārium mean? ("Necessary".) Say it once more.

240.5 inūtilis, inūtile — useless

Before the new one: say the Latin for unknown, then the Latin for necessary.

You'll want to know: inūtilis, inūtile

inūtilis, inūtile — "useless".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

inūtilis is in-, "not", with ūtilis, "useful" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inūtilis, inūtile
- Say it: inūtilis, inūtile, once more
- Say it: say inūtilis, inūtile
- Recall: say the Latin for unknown, then the Latin for necessary, then say inūtilis, inūtile again

Before you move on

What does inūtilis, inūtile mean? ("Useless".) Say it once more.

Chapter 241

Industrious, Talkative, Worried, Unmarried, Rainy

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say industrious, talkative, worried, unmarried and rainy.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 241: I can say industrious, talkative, worried, unmarried and rainy.

241.1 industrius, industria, industrium — industrious, active

Before the new one: say the Latin for necessary, then the Latin for useless.

You'll want to know: industrius, industria, industrium

industrius, industria, industrium — "industrious, active".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

industrius is usually explained as indu-, "within", the old form of in, with the root of struō, "to build" (Lewis & Short): building from within, so active.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: industrius, industria, industrium
- Say it: industrius, industria, industrium, once more
- Say it: say industrius, industria, industrium
- Recall: say the Latin for necessary, then the Latin for useless, then say industrius, industria, industrium again

Before you move on

What does industrius, industria, industrium mean? ("Industrious, active".) Say it once more.

241.2 loquāx, loquācis — talkative

Before the new one: say the Latin for useless, then the Latin for industrious.

You'll want to know: loquāx, loquācis

loquāx, loquācis — "talkative".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

loquāx is built on loquor, "to speak" (Lewis & Short), with -āx, an ending for a strong tendency: much given to talking.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: loquāx, loquācis
- Say it: loquāx, loquācis, once more
- Say it: say loquāx, loquācis
- Recall: say the Latin for useless, then the Latin for industrious, then say loquāx, loquācis again

Before you move on

What does loquāx, loquācis mean? ("Talkative".) Say it once more.

241.3 sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum — worried

Before the new one: say the Latin for industrious, then the Latin for talkative.

You'll want to know: sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum

sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum — "worried".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sollicitus is built from sollus, "whole", and cieō, "to stir up" (Lewis & Short): stirred up through and through. English solicitous comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum
- Say it: sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum, once more
- Say it: say sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum
- Recall: say the Latin for industrious, then the Latin for talkative, then say sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum again

Before you move on

What does sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum mean? ("Worried".) Say it once more.

241.4 caelebs, caelibis — unmarried

Before the new one: say the Latin for talkative, then the Latin for worried.

You'll want to know: caelebs, caelibis

caelebs, caelibis — "unmarried".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caelebs has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English celibate comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: caelebs, caelibis
- Say it: caelebs, caelibis, once more
- Say it: say caelebs, caelibis
- Recall: say the Latin for talkative, then the Latin for worried, then say caelebs, caelibis again

Before you move on

What does caelebs, caelibis mean? ("Unmarried".) Say it once more.

241.5 pluvius, pluvia, pluvium — rainy

Before the new one: say the Latin for worried, then the Latin for unmarried.

You'll want to know: pluvius, pluvia, pluvium

pluvius, pluvia, pluvium — "rainy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pluvius is built on pluō, "to rain" (Lewis & Short), whose third person is pluit, "it rains".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pluvius, pluvia, pluvium
- Say it: pluvius, pluvia, pluvium, once more
- Say it: say pluvius, pluvia, pluvium
- Recall: say the Latin for worried, then the Latin for unmarried, then say pluvius, pluvia, pluvium again

Before you move on

What does pluvius, pluvia, pluvium mean? ("Rainy".) Say it once more.

Chapter 242

Few, All, Whole, Others, Other

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say few, all, whole, the others and other.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 242: I can say few, all, whole, the others and other.

242.1 paucī, paucae, pauca — few

Before the new one: say the Latin for unmarried, then the Latin for rainy.

You'll want to know: paucī, paucae, pauca

paucī, paucae, pauca — "few".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

paucī is the plural of paucus, "few" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peh2w-*, "few, small" (EtymDB 2.1); English few is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: paucī, paucae, pauca
- Say it: paucī, paucae, pauca, once more
- Say it: say paucī, paucae, pauca
- Recall: say the Latin for unmarried, then the Latin for rainy, then say paucī, paucae, pauca again

Before you move on

What does paucī, paucae, pauca mean? ("Few".) Say it once more.

242.2 omnis, omne — all, every

Before the new one: say the Latin for rainy, then the Latin for few.

You'll want to know: omnis, omne

omnis, omne — "all, every".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

omnis has no sure origin; Lewis & Short call it doubtful, and EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European h3ep-ni-*, "working". Neither account is settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: omnis, omne
- Say it: omnis, omne, once more
- Say it: say omnis, omne
- Recall: say the Latin for rainy, then the Latin for few, then say omnis, omne again

Before you move on

What does omnis, omne mean? ("All, every".) Say it once more.

242.3 tōtus, tōta, tōtum — whole

Before the new one: say the Latin for few, then the Latin for all.

You'll want to know: tōtus, tōta, tōtum

tōtus, tōta, tōtum — "whole".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tōtus has no sure origin; Lewis & Short link it with tot, "so many", but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tōtus, tōta, tōtum
- Say it: tōtus, tōta, tōtum, once more
- Say it: say tōtus, tōta, tōtum
- Recall: say the Latin for few, then the Latin for all, then say tōtus, tōta, tōtum again

Before you move on

What does tōtus, tōta, tōtum mean? ("Whole".) Say it once more.

242.4 cēterī, cēterae, cētera — the others, the remaining

Before the new one: say the Latin for all, then the Latin for whole.

You'll want to know: cēterī, cēterae, cētera

cēterī, cēterae, cētera — "the others, the remaining".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cēterī has no sure origin; it is often explained as a pointing element ce-, "here", with a word like Greek heteros, "the other", but this is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cēterī, cēterae, cētera
- Say it: cēterī, cēterae, cētera, once more
- Say it: say cēterī, cēterae, cētera
- Recall: say the Latin for all, then the Latin for whole, then say cēterī, cēterae, cētera again

Before you move on

What does cēterī, cēterae, cētera mean? ("The others, the remaining".) Say it once more.

242.5 alius, alia, aliud — other, another

Before the new one: say the Latin for whole, then the Latin for the others.

You'll want to know: alius, alia, aliud

alius, alia, aliud — "other, another".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

alius is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2elyos*, "other" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek allos, "other", and English else are cousins.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: alius, alia, aliud
- Say it: alius, alia, aliud, once more
- Say it: say alius, alia, aliud
- Recall: say the Latin for whole, then the Latin for the others, then say alius, alia, aliud again

Before you move on

What does alius, alia, aliud mean? ("Other, another".) Say it once more.

Chapter 243

Doubtful, Faithful, Loyal, Unlucky, Blessed

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say doubtful, faithful, loyal, unlucky and blessed.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 243: I can say doubtful, faithful, loyal, unlucky and blessed.

243.1 dubius, dubia, dubium — doubtful

> Before the new one: say the Latin for the others, then the Latin for other.

You'll want to know: dubius, dubia, dubium

dubius, dubia, dubium — "doubtful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dubius is usually traced to an old compound of duo, "two", and a root for "being": being two ways at once, so in doubt.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dubius, dubia, dubium
- Say it: dubius, dubia, dubium, once more
- Say it: say dubius, dubia, dubium
- Recall: say the Latin for the others, then the Latin for other, then say dubius, dubia, dubium again

Before you move on

What does dubius, dubia, dubium mean? ("Doubtful".) Say it once more.

243.2 fīdus, fīda, fīdum — faithful

Before the new one: say the Latin for other, then the Latin for doubtful.

You'll want to know: fīdus, fīda, fīdum

fīdus, fīda, fīdum — "faithful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fīdus belongs with fīdō, "to trust" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bheydh-*, "to trust, to persuade" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek peithō, "to persuade", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīdus, fīda, fīdum
- Say it: fīdus, fīda, fīdum, once more
- Say it: say fīdus, fīda, fīdum

- Recall: say the Latin for other, then the Latin for doubtful, then say fīdus, fīda, fīdum again

Before you move on

What does fīdus, fīda, fīdum mean? ("Faithful".) Say it once more.

243.3 fīdēlis, fīdēle — loyal

Before the new one: say the Latin for doubtful, then the Latin for faithful.

You'll want to know: fīdēlis, fīdēle

fīdēlis, fīdēle — "loyal".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children fīdēlis is built on fidēs, "trust, faith" (Lewis & Short), with -ēlis, "having the quality of": faithful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fīdēlis, fīdēle
- Say it: fīdēlis, fīdēle, once more
- Say it: say fīdēlis, fīdēle
- Recall: say the Latin for doubtful, then the Latin for faithful, then say fīdēlis, fīdēle again

Before you move on

What does fīdēlis, fīdēle mean? ("Loyal".) Say it once more.

243.4 īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis — unlucky, unhappy

Before the new one: say the Latin for faithful, then the Latin for loyal.

You'll want to know: īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis

īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis — "unlucky, unhappy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

īnfēlīx is in-, "not", with fēlīx, "fruitful, lucky" (Lewis & Short): first an unfruitful tree, then an unlucky person.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis
- Say it: īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis, once more
- Say it: say īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis
- Recall: say the Latin for faithful, then the Latin for loyal, then say īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis again

Before you move on

What does īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis mean? ("Unlucky, unhappy".) Say it once more.

243.5 beātus, beāta, beātum — blessed, fortunate

Before the new one: say the Latin for loyal, then the Latin for unlucky.

You'll want to know: beātus, beāta, beātum

beātus, beāta, beātum — "blessed, fortunate".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

beātus is the past participle of beō, "to make happy, to bless" (Lewis & Short): made happy. Where beō comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: beātus, beāta, beātum
- Say it: beātus, beāta, beātum, once more
- Say it: say beātus, beāta, beātum
- Recall: say the Latin for loyal, then the Latin for unlucky, then say beātus, beāta, beātum again

Before you move on

What does beātus, beāta, beātum mean? ("Blessed, fortunate".)
Say it once more.

Chapter 244

Travelling carriage, Broad street, Aqueduct, Public baths, Amphitheatre

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a travelling carriage, a broad street, an aqueduct, the public baths and an amphitheatre.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 244: I can say a travelling carriage, a broad street, an aqueduct, the public baths and an amphitheatre.

244.1 raeda, raedae — a travelling carriage

Before the new one: say the Latin for unlucky, then the Latin for blessed.

You'll want to know: raeda, raedae

raeda, raedae — "a travelling carriage".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

raeda was probably borrowed from Gaulish: Quintilian counts raeda among the Gallic words in Latin (Lewis & Short). Its Celtic root is the one for riding, a cousin of English ride.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: raeda, raedae
- Say it: raeda, raedae, once more
- Say it: say raeda, raedae
- Recall: say the Latin for unlucky, then the Latin for blessed, then say raeda, raedae again

Before you move on

What does raeda, raedae mean? ("A travelling carriage".) Say it once more.

244.2 platēa, platēae — a broad street, a square

Before the new one: say the Latin for blessed, then the Latin for a travelling carriage.

You'll want to know: platēa, platēae

platēa, platēae — "a broad street, a square".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

platēa was borrowed from Greek plateia, "a broad street" (Lewis & Short), from platys, "broad". English place comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: platēa, platēae

- Say it: platēa, platēae, once more
- Say it: say platēa, platēae
- Recall: say the Latin for blessed, then the Latin for a travelling carriage, then say platēa, platēae again

Before you move on

What does platēa, platēae mean? ("A broad street, a square".) Say it once more.

244.3 aquaeductus, aquaeductūs — an aqueduct

Before the new one: say the Latin for a travelling carriage, then the Latin for a broad street.

You'll want to know: aquaeductus, aquaeductūs

aquaeductus, aquaeductūs — "an aqueduct".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aquaeductus is aquae ductus, "a leading of water" (Lewis & Short): aqua, "water", and ductus, "a leading", from dūcō, "to lead".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aquaeductus, aquaeductūs
- Say it: aquaeductus, aquaeductūs, once more
- Say it: say aquaeductus, aquaeductūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a travelling carriage, then the Latin for a broad street, then say aquaeductus, aquaeductūs again

Before you move on

What does aquaeductus, aquaeductūs mean? ("An aqueduct".) Say it once more.

244.4 thermae, thermārum — the public baths

Before the new one: say the Latin for a broad street, then the Latin for an aqueduct.

You'll want to know: thermae, thermārum

thermae, thermārum — "the public baths".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

thermae comes from Greek thermos, "warm": Lewis & Short gloss thermae as warm springs and warm baths.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: thermae, thermārum
- Say it: thermae, thermārum, once more
- Say it: say thermae, thermārum
- Recall: say the Latin for a broad street, then the Latin for an aqueduct, then say thermae, thermārum again

Before you move on

What does thermae, thermārum mean? ("The public baths".) Say it once more.

244.5 amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī — an amphitheatre

Before the new one: say the Latin for an aqueduct, then the Latin for the public baths.

You'll want to know: amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī

amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī — "an amphitheatre".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

amphitheātrum was borrowed from Greek amphitheatron, "a double theatre" (Lewis & Short), from amphi, "around, on both sides", and theatron, "a theatre" (EtymDB 2.1): seats all the way round.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī
- Say it: amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī, once more
- Say it: say amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī
- Recall: say the Latin for an aqueduct, then the Latin for the public baths, then say amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī again

Before you move on

What does amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī mean? ("An amphitheatre".) Say it once more.

Chapter 245

Thief, Robber, Consul, General, Kingdom

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a thief, a robber, a consul, a general and a kingdom.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 245: I can say a thief, a robber, a consul, a general and a kingdom.

245.1 fūr, fūris — a thief

> Before the new one: say the Latin for the public baths, then the Latin for an amphitheatre.

You'll want to know: fūr, fūris

fūr, fūris — "a thief".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fūr is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhōr*, "thief" (EtymDB 2.1), from the root of ferō, "to carry"; Greek phōr, "thief", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fūr, fūris
- Say it: fūr, fūris, once more
- Say it: say fūr, fūris
- Recall: say the Latin for the public baths, then the Latin for an amphitheatre, then say fūr, fūris again

Before you move on

What does fūr, fūris mean? ("A thief".) Say it once more.

245.2 latrō, latrōnis — a robber

Before the new one: say the Latin for an amphitheatre, then the Latin for a thief.

You'll want to know: latrō, latrōnis

latrō, latrōnis — "a robber".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

latrō was probably borrowed from Greek: latron, "pay, hire" (EtymDB 2.1), and latris, "a hired servant" (Lewis & Short). A latrō was first a hired soldier, then a robber.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: latrō, latrōnis
- Say it: latrō, latrōnis, once more
- Say it: say latrō, latrōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for an amphitheatre, then the Latin for a thief, then say latrō, latrōnis again

Before you move on

What does latrō, latrōnis mean? ("A robber".) Say it once more.

245.3 cōnsul, cōnsulis — a consul

Before the new one: say the Latin for a thief, then the Latin for a robber.

You'll want to know: cōnsul, cōnsulis

cōnsul, cōnsulis — "a consul".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōnsul belongs with cōnsulō, "to consult, to deliberate" (EtymDB 2.1); Old Latin wrote it consol. Where the root comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōnsul, cōnsulis
- Say it: cōnsul, cōnsulis, once more
- Say it: say cōnsul, cōnsulis
- Recall: say the Latin for a thief, then the Latin for a robber, then say cōnsul, cōnsulis again

Before you move on

What does cōnsul, cōnsulis mean? ("A consul".) Say it once more.

245.4 imperātor, imperātōris — a general, an emperor

Before the new one: say the Latin for a robber, then the Latin for a consul.

You'll want to know: imperātor, imperātōris

imperātor, imperātōris — "a general, an emperor".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

imperātor is built on imperō, "to command" (EtymDB 2.1), itself in, "in, upon", with parō, "to prepare, to order", with -tor, "one who does it". English emperor comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: imperātor, imperātōris
- Say it: imperātor, imperātōris, once more
- Say it: say imperātor, imperātōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a robber, then the Latin for a consul, then say imperātor, imperātōris again

Before you move on

What does imperātor, imperātōris mean? ("A general, an emperor".) Say it once more.

245.5 rēgnum, rēgnī — a kingdom

Before the new one: say the Latin for a consul, then the Latin for a general.

You'll want to know: rēgnum, rēgnī

rēgnum, rēgnī — "a kingdom".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēgnum is built on rēx, rēgis, "a king" (Lewis & Short): what a king rules. English reign comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēgnum, rēgnī
- Say it: rēgnum, rēgnī, once more
- Say it: say rēgnum, rēgnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a consul, then the Latin for a general, then say rēgnum, rēgnī again

Before you move on

What does rēgnum, rēgnī mean? ("A kingdom".) Say it once more.

Chapter 246

Song, Line of verse, Writer, Painter, Music

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a song, a line of verse, a writer, a painter and music.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 246: I can say a song, a line of verse, a writer, a painter and music.

246.1 carmen, carminis — a song, a poem

Before the new one: say the Latin for a general, then the Latin for a kingdom.

You'll want to know: carmen, carminis

carmen, carminis — "a song, a poem".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

carmen is usually explained as can-men*, "a singing", built on canō, "to sing", with -men, an ending for a result: a song. Varro gives an old form casmen (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: carmen, carminis
- Say it: carmen, carminis, once more
- Say it: say carmen, carminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a general, then the Latin for a kingdom, then say carmen, carminis again

Before you move on

What does carmen, carminis mean? ("A song, a poem".) Say it once more.

246.2 versus, versūs — a line of verse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a kingdom, then the Latin for a song.

You'll want to know: versus, versūs

versus, versūs — "a line of verse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

versus is built on vertō, "to turn" (Lewis & Short): first the turn of the plough at the end of a furrow, then a line of writing. English verse comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: versus, versūs
- Say it: versus, versūs, once more
- Say it: say versus, versūs

- Recall: say the Latin for a kingdom, then the Latin for a song, then say versus, versūs again

Before you move on

What does versus, versūs mean? ("A line of verse".) Say it once more.

246.3 scrīptor, scrīptōris — a writer

Before the new one: say the Latin for a song, then the Latin for a line of verse.

You'll want to know: scrīptor, scrīptōris

scrīptor, scrīptōris — "a writer".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scrīptor is built on scrībō, "to write" (Lewis & Short), with -tor, "one who does it". scrībō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)kreybh-*, "to scratch, to cut" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scrīptor, scrīptōris
- Say it: scrīptor, scrīptōris, once more
- Say it: say scrīptor, scrīptōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a song, then the Latin for a line of verse, then say scrīptor, scrīptōris again

Before you move on

What does scrīptor, scrīptōris mean? ("A writer".) Say it once more.

246.4 pictor, pictōris — a painter

Before the new one: say the Latin for a line of verse, then the Latin for a writer.

You'll want to know: pictor, pictōris

pictor, pictōris — "a painter".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pictor is built on pingō, "to paint" (Lewis & Short), with -tor, "one who does it".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pictor, pictōris
- Say it: pictor, pictōris, once more
- Say it: say pictor, pictōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a line of verse, then the Latin for a writer, then say pictor, pictōris again

Before you move on

What does pictor, pictōris mean? ("A painter".) Say it once more.

246.5 mūsica, mūsicae — music

Before the new one: say the Latin for a writer, then the Latin for a painter.

You'll want to know: mūsica, mūsicae

mūsica, mūsicae — "music".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mūsica was borrowed from Greek mousikē, "the art of the Muses" (Lewis & Short), from Mousa, "a Muse".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mūsica, mūsicae
- Say it: mūsica, mūsicae, once more
- Say it: say mūsica, mūsicae
- Recall: say the Latin for a writer, then the Latin for a painter, then say mūsica, mūsicae again

Before you move on

What does mūsica, mūsicae mean? ("Music".) Say it once more.

246.6 Words from chapters 238-241 — a first pass

Say the words for a painter and music.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- beyond, on this side, at the house of, face to face, by which way
- at the same time, perhaps, also, as if, because of
- rough, deep, unknown, necessary, useless
- industrious, talkative, worried, unmarried, rainy

Before you move on

Beyond? (ultrā.) On this side? (citrā.) At the house of? (apud.) Face to face? (cōram.) By which way? (quā.) At the same time? (simul.) Perhaps? (fortasse.) Also? (quoque.) As if? (quasi.) Because of? (propter.) Rough? (asper, aspera, asperum.) Deep? (profundus, profunda, profundum.) Unknown? (ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum.) Necessary? (necessārius, necessāria, necessārium.) Useless? (inūtilis, inūtile.) Industrious? (industrius, industria, industrium.) Talkative? (loquāx, loquācis.) Worried? (sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum.) Unmarried? (caelebs, caelibis.) Rainy? (pluvius, pluvia, pluvium.)

246.7 Words from chapters 242-246 — a second pass

Say the words for few and all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- few, all, whole, the others, other
- doubtful, faithful, loyal, unlucky, blessed
- a travelling carriage, a broad street, an aqueduct, the public baths, an amphitheatre
- a thief, a robber, a consul, a general, a kingdom
- a song, a line of verse, a writer, a painter, music

Before you move on

Few? (paucī, paucae, pauca.) All? (omnis, omne.) Whole? (tōtus, tōta, tōtum.) The others? (cēterī, cēterae, cētera.) Other? (alius, alia, aliud.) Doubtful? (dubius, dubia, dubium.) Faithful? (fīdus, fīda, fīdum.) Loyal? (fīdēlis, fīdēle.) Unlucky? (īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis.) Blessed? (beātus, beāta, beātum.)

A travelling carriage? (raeda, raedae.) A broad street? (platēa, platēae.) An aqueduct? (aquaeductus, aquaeductūs.) The public baths? (thermae, thermārum.) An amphitheatre? (amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī.) A thief? (fūr, fūris.) A robber? (latrō, latrōnis.) A consul? (cōnsul, cōnsulis.) A general? (imperātor, imperātōris.) A kingdom? (rēgnum, rēgnī.) A song? (carmen, carminis.) A line of verse? (versus, versūs.) A writer? (scrīptor, scrīptōris.) A painter? (pictor, pictōris.) Music? (mūsica, mūsicae.)

Chapter 247

A Twin and the In-Laws

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a twin, a father-in-law, a mother-in-law, a son-in-law and a daughter-in-law.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 247: I can say a twin, a father-in-law, a mother-in-law, a son-in-law and a daughter-in-law.

247.1 geminus, geminī — a twin

Before the new one: say the Latin for a painter, then the Latin for music.

You'll want to know: geminus, geminī

geminus, geminī — "a twin".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

geminus has no sure origin; Lewis & Short's link with gignō, "to beget", is uncertain. English Gemini, "the Twins", is its plural.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: geminus, geminī
- Say it: geminus, geminī, once more
- Say it: say geminus, geminī
- Recall: say the Latin for a painter, then the Latin for music, then say geminus, geminī again

Before you move on

What does geminus, geminī mean? ("A twin".) Say it once more.

247.2 socer, socerī — a father-in-law

Before the new one: say the Latin for music, then the Latin for a twin.

You'll want to know: socer, socerī

socer, socerī — "a father-in-law".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

socer is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European swekuros*, "father-in-law" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek hekyros, "father-in-law", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is German Schwager, "brother-in-law".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: socer, socerī
- Say it: socer, socerī, once more
- Say it: say socer, socerī
- Recall: say the Latin for music, then the Latin for a twin, then say socer, socerī again

Before you move on

What does socer, socerī mean? ("A father-in-law".) Say it once more.

247.3 socrus, socrūs — a mother-in-law

Before the new one: say the Latin for a twin, then the Latin for a father-in-law.

You'll want to know: socrus, socrūs

socrus, socrūs — "a mother-in-law".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

socrus is usually traced to Proto-Italic swekrus*, "mother-in-law" (EtymDB 2.1), the partner of socer, "father-in-law" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: socrus, socrūs
- Say it: socrus, socrūs, once more
- Say it: say socrus, socrūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a twin, then the Latin for a father-in-law, then say socrus, socrūs again

Before you move on

What does socrus, socrūs mean? ("A mother-in-law".) Say it once more.

247.4 gener, generī — a son-in-law

Before the new one: say the Latin for a father-in-law, then the Latin for a mother-in-law.

You'll want to know: gener, generī

gener, generī — "a son-in-law".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gener is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gmros*, "son-in-law" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek gambros, "son-in-law", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gener, generī
- Say it: gener, generī, once more
- Say it: say gener, generī
- Recall: say the Latin for a father-in-law, then the Latin for a mother-in-law, then say gener, generī again

Before you move on

What does gener, generī mean? ("A son-in-law".) Say it once more.

247.5 nurus, nurūs — a daughter-in-law

Before the new one: say the Latin for a mother-in-law, then the Latin for a son-in-law.

You'll want to know: nurus, nurūs

nurus, nurūs — "a daughter-in-law".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nurus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European snusos*, "daughter-in-law" (EtymDB 2.1); Latin lost the first s, and Old High German snur, "daughter-in-law", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nurus, nurūs
- Say it: nurus, nurūs, once more
- Say it: say nurus, nurūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a mother-in-law, then the Latin for a son-in-law, then say nurus, nurūs again

Before you move on

What does nurus, nurūs mean? ("A daughter-in-law".) Say it once more.

Chapter 248

Opportunity, Danger, Kindness, Duty, Work

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say an opportunity, danger, a kindness, a duty and work.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 248: I can say an opportunity, danger, a kindness, a duty and work.

248.1 occāsiō, occāsiōnis — an opportunity

Before the new one: say the Latin for a son-in-law, then the Latin for a daughter-in-law.

You'll want to know: occāsiō, occāsiōnis

occāsiō, occāsiōnis — "an opportunity".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

occāsiō is built on occidō, "to fall, to happen" (Lewis & Short), from ob, "towards", and cadō, "to fall": what falls one's way.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: occāsiō, occāsiōnis
- Say it: occāsiō, occāsiōnis, once more
- Say it: say occāsiō, occāsiōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for a son-in-law, then the Latin for a daughter-in-law, then say occāsiō, occāsiōnis again

Before you move on

What does occāsiō, occāsiōnis mean? ("An opportunity".) Say it once more.

248.2 perīculum, perīculī — danger

Before the new one: say the Latin for a daughter-in-law, then the Latin for an opportunity.

You'll want to know: perīculum, perīculī

perīculum, perīculī — "danger".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

perīculum is built on the root of experior, "to try, to test" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a means: a trial, then a danger. English peril comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perīculum, perīculī
- Say it: perīculum, perīculī, once more
- Say it: say perīculum, perīculī

- Recall: say the Latin for a daughter-in-law, then the Latin for an opportunity, then say perīculum, perīculī again

Before you move on

What does perīculum, perīculī mean? ("Danger".) Say it once more.

248.3 beneficium, beneficiī — a kindness, a favour

Before the new one: say the Latin for an opportunity, then the Latin for danger.

You'll want to know: beneficium, beneficiī

beneficium, beneficiī — "a kindness, a favour".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

beneficium is built on beneficus, "doing good" (Lewis & Short), from bene, "well", and faciō, "to do".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: beneficium, beneficiī
- Say it: beneficium, beneficiī, once more
- Say it: say beneficium, beneficiī
- Recall: say the Latin for an opportunity, then the Latin for danger, then say beneficium, beneficiī again

Before you move on

What does beneficium, beneficiī mean? ("A kindness, a favour".) Say it once more.

248.4 officium, officiī — a duty

Before the new one: say the Latin for danger, then the Latin for a kindness.

You'll want to know: officium, officiī

officium, officiī — "a duty".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

officium is contracted from older opificium (Lewis & Short), from opus, "work", and faciō, "to do": the work one must do. English office comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: officium, officiī
- Say it: officium, officiī, once more
- Say it: say officium, officiī
- Recall: say the Latin for danger, then the Latin for a kindness, then say officium, officiī again

Before you move on

What does officium, officiī mean? ("A duty".) Say it once more.

248.5 labor, labōris — work, toil

Before the new one: say the Latin for a kindness, then the Latin for a duty.

You'll want to know: labor, labōris

labor, labōris — "work, toil".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

labor, "work", has no sure origin. EtymDB 2.1 tentatively ties it to the same root as lābor, "to slip", (s)leh2b-*, "to hang loosely, to be weak": toil as staggering under a load. The link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: labor, labōris
- Say it: labor, labōris, once more
- Say it: say labor, labōris
- Recall: say the Latin for a kindness, then the Latin for a duty, then say labor, labōris again

Before you move on

What does labor, labōris mean? ("Work, toil".) Say it once more.

Chapter 249

Wood, Marble, Glass, Hide, Linen

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say wood, marble, glass, hide and linen.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 249: I can say wood, marble, glass, hide and linen.

249.1 lignum, lignī — wood, timber

Before the new one: say the Latin for a duty, then the Latin for work.

You'll want to know: lignum, lignī

lignum, lignī — "wood, timber".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lignum is usually traced to the root of legō, "to gather" (Lewis & Short): what is gathered for the fire, firewood. EtymDB 2.1 gives a reconstructed Proto-Indo-European leg-no-*, "that which is collected".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lignum, lignī
- Say it: lignum, lignī, once more
- Say it: say lignum, lignī
- Recall: say the Latin for a duty, then the Latin for work, then say lignum, lignī again

Before you move on

What does lignum, lignī mean? ("Wood, timber".) Say it once more.

249.2 marmor, marmoris — marble

Before the new one: say the Latin for work, then the Latin for wood.

You'll want to know: marmor, marmoris

marmor, marmoris — "marble".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

marmor was borrowed from Greek marmaros, "a gleaming stone, marble" (Lewis & Short). English marble comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: marmor, marmoris
- Say it: marmor, marmoris, once more
- Say it: say marmor, marmoris
- Recall: say the Latin for work, then the Latin for wood, then say marmor, marmoris again

Before you move on

What does marmor, marmoris mean? (“Marble”.) Say it once more.

249.3 vitrum, vitrī — glass

Before the new one: say the Latin for wood, then the Latin for marble.

You’ll want to know: vitrum, vitrī

vitrum, vitrī — “glass”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vitrum is often traced to Proto-Italic wedrom*, “glass”, from Proto-Indo-European wed-*, “water” (EtymDB 2.1): glass as the water-like stuff. The link is not certain.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vitrum, vitrī
- Say it: vitrum, vitrī, once more
- Say it: say vitrum, vitrī
- Recall: say the Latin for wood, then the Latin for marble, then say vitrum, vitrī again

Before you move on

What does vitrum, vitrī mean? (“Glass”.) Say it once more.

249.4 corium, coriī — hide, leather

Before the new one: say the Latin for marble, then the Latin for glass.

You'll want to know: corium, coriī

corium, coriī — "hide, leather".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

corium is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European (s)ker-*, "to cut" (EtymDB 2.1): a hide as what is cut off. Its family includes scortum, "a skin, a hide" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: corium, coriī
- Say it: corium, coriī, once more
- Say it: say corium, coriī
- Recall: say the Latin for marble, then the Latin for glass, then say corium, coriī again

Before you move on

What does corium, coriī mean? ("Hide, leather".) Say it once more.

249.5 līnum, līnī — linen, flax

Before the new one: say the Latin for glass, then the Latin for hide.

You'll want to know: līnum, līnī

līnum, līnī — "linen, flax".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children līnum belongs with Greek linon, "flax" (Lewis & Short), and Gothic lein, "linen". EtymDB 2.1 gives a reconstructed Proto-Indo-European līno-*, "flax", but many think it is an old loan shared across Europe.

English linen and line belong to its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: līnum, līnī
- Say it: līnum, līnī, once more
- Say it: say līnum, līnī
- Recall: say the Latin for glass, then the Latin for hide, then say līnum, līnī again

Before you move on

What does līnum, līnī mean? ("Linen, flax".) Say it once more.

Chapter 250

Vine, Oak, Pine, Laurel, Violet

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a vine, an oak, a pine, a laurel and a violet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 250: I can say a vine, an oak, a pine, a laurel and a violet.

250.1 vītis, vītis — a vine

Before the new one: say the Latin for hide, then the Latin for linen.

You'll want to know: vītis, vītis

vītis, vītis — "a vine".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vītis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European weh1itis*, "a twining plant", from weh1y-*, "to twist, to weave" (EtymDB 2.1); vieō, "to plait", is from the same root (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vītis, vītis
- Say it: vītis, vītis, once more
- Say it: say vītis, vītis
- Recall: say the Latin for hide, then the Latin for linen, then say vītis, vītis again

Before you move on

What does vītis, vītis mean? ("A vine".) Say it once more.

250.2 quercus, quercūs — an oak

Before the new one: say the Latin for linen, then the Latin for a vine.

You'll want to know: quercus, quercūs

quercus, quercūs — "an oak".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children quercus is inherited, probably from Proto-Italic kwerkus*, "oak" (EtymDB 2.1). It is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European perkwus*, "oak", with the first sound changed to match the second, as in coquō, "to cook". English fir is a distant cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quercus, quercūs
- Say it: quercus, quercūs, once more
- Say it: say quercus, quercūs

- Recall: say the Latin for linen, then the Latin for a vine, then say quercus, quercūs again

Before you move on

What does quercus, quercūs mean? (“An oak”.) Say it once more.

250.3 pīnus, pīnūs — a pine

Before the new one: say the Latin for a vine, then the Latin for an oak.

You’ll want to know: pīnus, pīnūs

pīnus, pīnūs — “a pine”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pīnus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European piHnu-, “pine”, from peyH-, “sap, resin” (EtymDB 2.1); Greek pitys, “pine”, is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pīnus, pīnūs
- Say it: pīnus, pīnūs, once more
- Say it: say pīnus, pīnūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a vine, then the Latin for an oak, then say pīnus, pīnūs again

Before you move on

What does pīnus, pīnūs mean? (“A pine”.) Say it once more.

250.4 laurus, laurī — a laurel

Before the new one: say the Latin for an oak, then the Latin for a pine.

You'll want to know: laurus, laurī

laurus, laurī — "a laurel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

laurus has no sure origin; it is usually thought to be a loan from a lost Mediterranean language. German Lorbeer, "laurel", was borrowed from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: laurus, laurī
- Say it: laurus, laurī, once more
- Say it: say laurus, laurī
- Recall: say the Latin for an oak, then the Latin for a pine, then say laurus, laurī again

Before you move on

What does laurus, laurī mean? ("A laurel".) Say it once more.

250.5 viola, violae — a violet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pine, then the Latin for a laurel.

You'll want to know: viola, violae

viola, violae — "a violet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

viola is related to Greek ion, "violet" (Lewis & Short), which once began with a w sound; both are probably loans from a lost Mediterranean language.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: viola, violae
- Say it: viola, violae, once more
- Say it: say viola, violae
- Recall: say the Latin for a pine, then the Latin for a laurel, then say viola, violae again

Before you move on

What does viola, violae mean? ("A violet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 251

Puppy, Tiger, Club, Chain, Shield

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a puppy, a tiger, a club, a chain and a shield.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 251: I can say a puppy, a tiger, a club, a chain and a shield.

251.1 catulus, catulī — a puppy

Before the new one: say the Latin for a laurel, then the Latin for a violet.

You'll want to know: catulus, catulī

catulus, catulī — "a puppy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

catulus, "a young animal, a puppy", has no sure origin. Lewis & Short make it a diminutive of catus, "a cat", but catulus is far older than that word for cat, so the link is unlikely.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: catulus, catulī
- Say it: catulus, catulī, once more
- Say it: say catulus, catulī
- Recall: say the Latin for a laurel, then the Latin for a violet, then say catulus, catulī again

Before you move on

What does catulus, catulī mean? ("A puppy".) Say it once more.

251.2 tigris, tigris — a tiger

Before the new one: say the Latin for a violet, then the Latin for a puppy.

You'll want to know: tigris, tigris

tigris, tigris — "a tiger".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tigris was borrowed from Greek tigris, "tiger" (EtymDB 2.1), which probably came from an Iranian language.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tigris, tigris
- Say it: tigris, tigris, once more
- Say it: say tigris, tigris
- Recall: say the Latin for a violet, then the Latin for a puppy, then say tigris, tigris again

Before you move on

What does tigris, tigris mean? ("A tiger".) Say it once more.

251.3 clāva, clāvae — a club

Before the new one: say the Latin for a puppy, then the Latin for a tiger.

You'll want to know: clāva, clāvae

clāva, clāvae — "a club".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

clāva is often traced to Proto-Indo-European kelh2-*, "to beat, to break" (EtymDB 2.1), with percellō, "to strike down", in the same family (Lewis & Short); the link is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: clāva, clāvae
- Say it: clāva, clāvae, once more
- Say it: say clāva, clāvae
- Recall: say the Latin for a puppy, then the Latin for a tiger, then say clāva, clāvae again

Before you move on

What does clāva, clāvae mean? ("A club".) Say it once more.

251.4 catēna, catēnae — a chain

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tiger, then the Latin for a club.

You'll want to know: catēna, catēnae

catēna, catēnae — "a chain".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

catēna has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European kat-*, "to twist, to plait". English chain comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: catēna, catēnae
- Say it: catēna, catēnae, once more
- Say it: say catēna, catēnae
- Recall: say the Latin for a tiger, then the Latin for a club, then say catēna, catēnae again

Before you move on

What does catēna, catēnae mean? ("A chain".) Say it once more.

251.5 scūtum, scūtī — a shield

Before the new one: say the Latin for a club, then the Latin for a chain.

You'll want to know: scūtum, scūtī

scūtum, scūtī — "a shield".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scūtum is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root skei-*, "to cut, to split" (EtymDB 2.1): a shield of split boards. Old Irish sciath, "shield", is a cousin; Lewis & Short's link with Greek skytos, “leather”, is less likely.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scūtum, scūtī
- Say it: scūtum, scūtī, once more
- Say it: say scūtum, scūtī
- Recall: say the Latin for a club, then the Latin for a chain, then say scūtum, scūtī again

Before you move on

What does scūtum, scūtī mean? (“A shield”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 252

Small flask, Frying pan, Oven, Candlestick, Small tablet

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a small flask, a frying pan, an oven, a candlestick and a small tablet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 252: I can say a small flask, a frying pan, an oven, a candlestick and a small tablet.

252.1 ampulla, ampullae — a small flask, a phial

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a chain, then the Latin for a shield.

You'll want to know: ampulla, ampullae

ampulla, ampullae — "a small flask, a phial".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ampulla is usually taken as a diminutive of amphora, "a two-handled jar" (EtymDB 2.1): a little jar. English ampoule comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ampulla, ampullae
- Say it: ampulla, ampullae, once more
- Say it: say ampulla, ampullae
- Recall: say the Latin for a chain, then the Latin for a shield, then say ampulla, ampullae again

Before you move on

What does ampulla, ampullae mean? ("A small flask, a phial".) Say it once more.

252.2 sartāgō, sartāginis — a frying pan

Before the new one: say the Latin for a shield, then the Latin for a small flask.

You'll want to know: sartāgō, sartāginis

sartāgō, sartāginis — "a frying pan".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sartāgō has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sartāgō, sartāginis
- Say it: sartāgō, sartāginis, once more
- Say it: say sartāgō, sartāginis
- Recall: say the Latin for a shield, then the Latin for a small flask, then say sartāgō, sartāginis again

Before you move on

What does sartāgō, sartāginis mean? (“A frying pan”.) Say it once more.

252.3 furnus, furnī — an oven

Before the new one: say the Latin for a small flask, then the Latin for a frying pan.

You’ll want to know: furnus, furnī

furnus, furnī — “an oven”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

furnus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gwhrnos*, “warm, an oven”, from gwher-*, “warm, hot” (EtymDB 2.1); English warm is a cousin. fornāx, “a furnace”, is built on it.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: furnus, furnī
- Say it: furnus, furnī, once more
- Say it: say furnus, furnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a small flask, then the Latin for a frying pan, then say furnus, furnī again

Before you move on

What does furnus, furnī mean? (“An oven”.) Say it once more.

252.4 candēlābrum, candēlābrī — a candlestick

Before the new one: say the Latin for a frying pan, then the Latin for an oven.

You'll want to know: candēlābrum, candēlābrī

candēlābrum, candēlābrī — "a candlestick".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

candēlābrum is built on candēla, "a candle" (Lewis & Short), with -brum, an ending for a holder: a candle-holder.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: candēlābrum, candēlābrī
- Say it: candēlābrum, candēlābrī, once more
- Say it: say candēlābrum, candēlābrī
- Recall: say the Latin for a frying pan, then the Latin for an oven, then say candēlābrum, candēlābrī again

Before you move on

What does candēlābrum, candēlābrī mean? ("A candlestick".) Say it once more.

252.5 tabella, tabellae — a small tablet, a note

Before the new one: say the Latin for an oven, then the Latin for a candlestick.

You'll want to know: tabella, tabellae

tabella, tabellae — "a small tablet, a note".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tabella is a diminutive of tabula, "a board, a writing tablet" (Lewis & Short): a small tablet.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tabella, tabellae
- Say it: tabella, tabellae, once more
- Say it: say tabella, tabellae
- Recall: say the Latin for an oven, then the Latin for a candlestick, then say tabella, tabellae again

Before you move on

What does tabella, tabellae mean? ("A small tablet, a note".) Say it once more.

Chapter 253

Holidays, Banquet, Sacrifice, Altar, Goddess

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say holidays, a banquet, a sacrifice, an altar and a goddess.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 253: I can say holidays, a banquet, a sacrifice, an altar and a goddess.

253.1 fēriae, fēriārum — holidays

Before the new one: say the Latin for a candlestick, then the Latin for a small tablet.

You'll want to know: fēriae, fēriārum

fēriae, fēriārum — "holidays".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fēriae comes from an older fēsiae (Lewis & Short), from the same root as fēstus, "festive". Both are usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dheh1s-*, "god, sacred" (EtymDB 2.1). English fair, a market, comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fēriae, fēriārum
- Say it: fēriae, fēriārum, once more
- Say it: say fēriae, fēriārum
- Recall: say the Latin for a candlestick, then the Latin for a small tablet, then say fēriae, fēriārum again

Before you move on

What does fēriae, fēriārum mean? ("Holidays".) Say it once more.

253.2 convīvium, convīviī — a banquet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a small tablet, then the Latin for holidays.

You'll want to know: convīvium, convīviī

convīvium, convīviī — "a banquet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

convīvium is con-, "together", with the root of vīvō, "to live" (Lewis & Short): living together, then a shared meal.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: convīvium, convīviī
- Say it: convīvium, convīviī, once more
- Say it: say convīvium, convīviī
- Recall: say the Latin for a small tablet, then the Latin for holidays, then say convīvium, convīviī again

Before you move on

What does convīvium, convīviī mean? ("A banquet".) Say it once more.

253.3 sacrificium, sacrificiī — a sacrifice

Before the new one: say the Latin for holidays, then the Latin for a banquet.

You'll want to know: sacrificium, sacrificiī

sacrificium, sacrificiī — "a sacrifice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sacrificium is built from sacer, "holy", and faciō, "to make" (EtymDB 2.1): to make something holy. sacer is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European sh2kros*, "sacred" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sacrificium, sacrificiī
- Say it: sacrificium, sacrificiī, once more
- Say it: say sacrificium, sacrificiī
- Recall: say the Latin for holidays, then the Latin for a banquet, then say sacrificium, sacrificiī again

Before you move on

What does sacrificium, sacrificiī mean? ("A sacrifice".) Say it once more.

253.4 āra, ārae — an altar

Before the new one: say the Latin for a banquet, then the Latin for a sacrifice.

You'll want to know: āra, ārae

āra, ārae — "an altar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

āra comes from an older āsa, as Oscan aasa, "altar", shows (Lewis & Short); it is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2eHs-*, "to burn, a hearth" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: āra, ārae
- Say it: āra, ārae, once more
- Say it: say āra, ārae
- Recall: say the Latin for a banquet, then the Latin for a sacrifice, then say āra, ārae again

Before you move on

What does āra, ārae mean? ("An altar".) Say it once more.

253.5 dea, deae — a goddess

Before the new one: say the Latin for a sacrifice, then the Latin for an altar.

You'll want to know: dea, deae

dea, deae — "a goddess".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dea is the feminine of deus, "a god" (Lewis & Short); Old Latin wrote it deiva (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dea, deae
- Say it: dea, deae, once more
- Say it: say dea, deae
- Recall: say the Latin for a sacrifice, then the Latin for an altar, then say dea, deae again

Before you move on

What does dea, deae mean? ("A goddess".) Say it once more.

Chapter 254

Pack, Satchel, Money bag, Tent, Flag

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a pack, a satchel, a money bag, a tent and a flag.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 254: I can say a pack, a satchel, a money bag, a tent and a flag.

254.1 sarcina, sarcinae — a pack, a bundle

Before the new one: say the Latin for an altar, then the Latin for a goddess.

You'll want to know: sarcina, sarcinae

sarcina, sarcinae — "a pack, a bundle".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sarcina belongs with sarciō, "to patch, to mend": a bundle tied together. The pair is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European serk-*, "to mend, to make whole" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sarcina, sarcinae
- Say it: sarcina, sarcinae, once more
- Say it: say sarcina, sarcinae
- Recall: say the Latin for an altar, then the Latin for a goddess, then say sarcina, sarcinae again

Before you move on

What does sarcina, sarcinae mean? ("A pack, a bundle".) Say it once more.

254.2 pēra, pērae — a satchel

Before the new one: say the Latin for a goddess, then the Latin for a pack.

You'll want to know: pēra, pērae

pēra, pērae — "a satchel".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pēra was borrowed from Greek pēra, "a bag, a pouch" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pēra, pērae
- Say it: pēra, pērae, once more
- Say it: say pēra, pērae
- Recall: say the Latin for a goddess, then the Latin for a pack, then say pēra, pērae again

Before you move on

What does pēra, pērae mean? ("A satchel".) Say it once more.

254.3 marsuppium, marsuppiī — a money bag

Before the new one: say the Latin for a pack, then the Latin for a satchel.

You'll want to know: marsuppium, marsuppiī

marsuppium, marsuppiī — "a money bag".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

marsuppium was borrowed from Greek marsypion, "a little bag, a purse", a diminutive of marsipos, "a bag".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: marsuppium, marsuppiī
- Say it: marsuppium, marsuppiī, once more
- Say it: say marsuppium, marsuppiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a pack, then the Latin for a satchel, then say marsuppium, marsuppiī again

Before you move on

What does marsuppium, marsuppiī mean? ("A money bag".) Say it once more.

254.4 tabernāculum, tabernāculī — a tent

Before the new one: say the Latin for a satchel, then the Latin for a money bag.

You'll want to know: tabernāculum, tabernāculī

tabernāculum, tabernāculī — "a tent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tabernāculum is built on taberna, "a booth, a hut" (Lewis & Short), with -culum, an ending for a means: a small shelter, a tent. English tabernacle comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tabernāculum, tabernāculī
- Say it: tabernāculum, tabernāculī, once more
- Say it: say tabernāculum, tabernāculī
- Recall: say the Latin for a satchel, then the Latin for a money bag, then say tabernāculum, tabernāculī again

Before you move on

What does tabernāculum, tabernāculī mean? ("A tent".) Say it once more.

254.5 vexillum, vexillī — a flag, a banner

Before the new one: say the Latin for a money bag, then the Latin for a tent.

You'll want to know: vexillum, vexillī

vexillum, vexillī — "a flag, a banner".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vexillum is a diminutive of vēlum, "a sail, a cloth" (Lewis & Short): a small cloth on a pole.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vexillum, vexillī
- Say it: vexillum, vexillī, once more
- Say it: say vexillum, vexillī
- Recall: say the Latin for a money bag, then the Latin for a tent, then say vexillum, vexillī again

Before you move on

What does vexillum, vexillī mean? ("A flag, a banner".) Say it once more.

254.6 Words from chapters 247-250 — a first pass

Say the words for a tent and a flag.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a twin, a father-in-law, a mother-in-law, a son-in-law, a daughter-in-law
- an opportunity, danger, a kindness, a duty, work
- wood, marble, glass, hide, linen
- a vine, an oak, a pine, a laurel, a violet

Before you move on

A twin? (geminus, geminī.) A father-in-law? (socer, socerī.) A mother-in-law? (socrus, socrūs.) A son-in-law? (gener, generī.) A daughter-in-law? (nurus, nurūs.) An opportunity? (occāsiō, occāsiōnis.) Danger? (perīculum, perīculī.) A kindness? (beneficium, beneficiī.) A duty? (officium, officiī.) Work? (labor, labōris.) Wood? (lignum, lignī.) Marble? (marmor, marmoris.) Glass? (vitrum, vitrī.) Hide? (corium, coriī.) Linen? (līnum, līnī.) A vine? (vītis, vītis.) An oak? (quercus, quercūs.) A pine? (pīnus, pīnūs.) A laurel? (laurus, laurī.) A violet? (viola, violae.)

254.7 Words from chapters 251-254 — a second pass

Say the words for a puppy and a tiger.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a puppy, a tiger, a club, a chain, a shield
- a small flask, a frying pan, an oven, a candlestick, a small tablet
- holidays, a banquet, a sacrifice, an altar, a goddess
- a pack, a satchel, a money bag, a tent, a flag

Before you move on

A puppy? (catulus, catulī.) A tiger? (tigris, tigris.) A club? (clāva, clāvae.) A chain? (catēna, catēnae.) A shield? (scūtum, scūtī.) A small flask? (ampulla, ampullae.) A frying pan? (sartāgō, sartāginis.) An oven? (furnus, furnī.) A candlestick? (candēlābrum, candēlābrī.) A small tablet? (tabella, tabellae.) Holidays? (fēriae, fēriārum.) A banquet? (convīvium, convīviī.) A sacrifice? (sacrificium, sacrificiī.) An altar? (āra, ārae.) A goddess? (dea, deae.) A pack? (sarcina, sarcinae.) A satchel? (pēra, pērae.) A money bag? (marsuppium, marsuppiī.) A tent? (tabernāculum, tabernāculī.) A flag? (vexillum, vexillī.)

Chapter 255

To hold, To burst, To warm, To fill, To measure

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to hold, to burst, to warm, to fill and to measure.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 255: I can say to hold, to burst, to warm, to fill and to measure.

255.1 teneō, tenēre — to hold

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a tent, then the Latin for a flag, a banner.

You'll want to know: teneō, tenēre

teneō, tenēre — "to hold".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

teneō is inherited from Proto-Italic tenēō*, "to hold" (EtymDB 2.1), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ten-*, "to stretch" (Lewis & Short compare Greek teinō, "to stretch"). English tenant comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: teneō, tenēre
- Say it: teneō, tenēre, once more
- Say it: say teneō, tenēre
- Recall: say the Latin for a tent, then the Latin for a flag, a banner, then say teneō, tenēre again

Before you move on

What does teneō, tenēre mean? ("To hold".) Say it once more.

255.2 rumpō, rumpere — to burst, to break apart

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flag, a banner, then the Latin for to hold.

You'll want to know: rumpō, rumpere

rumpō, rumpere — "to burst, to break apart".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children rumpō is inherited, usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European present Hrunepti*, "breaks" (EtymDB 2.1), with an n inside the root. English rupture comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rumpō, rumpere
- Say it: rumpō, rumpere, once more
- Say it: say rumpō, rumpere

- Recall: say the Latin for a flag, a banner, then the Latin for to hold, then say rumpō, rumpere again

Before you move on

What does rumpō, rumpere mean? ("To burst, to break apart".) Say it once more.

255.3 calefaciō, calefacere — to warm, to heat

Before the new one: say the Latin for to hold, then the Latin for to burst.

You'll want to know: calefaciō, calefacere

calefaciō, calefacere — "to warm, to heat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

calefaciō is built from faciō, "to make" (EtymDB 2.1), with the stem of caleō, "to be warm": to make warm.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calefaciō, calefacere
- Say it: calefaciō, calefacere, once more
- Say it: say calefaciō, calefacere
- Recall: say the Latin for to hold, then the Latin for to burst, then say calefaciō, calefacere again

Before you move on

What does calefaciō, calefacere mean? ("To warm, to heat".) Say it once more.

255.4 impleō, implēre — to fill

Before the new one: say the Latin for to burst, then the Latin for to warm.

You'll want to know: impleō, implēre

impleō, implēre — "to fill".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

impleō is in, "in", with pleō, "to fill" (EtymDB 2.1), a verb found only in compounds. pleō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pleh1-*, "to fill"; English full is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: impleō, implēre
- Say it: impleō, implēre, once more
- Say it: say impleō, implēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to burst, then the Latin for to warm, then say impleō, implēre again

Before you move on

What does impleō, implēre mean? ("To fill".) Say it once more.

255.5 mētior, mētīrī — to measure

Before the new one: say the Latin for to warm, then the Latin for to fill.

You'll want to know: mētior, mētīrī

mētior, mētīrī — "to measure".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mētior is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European meh1-*, "to measure" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek metron, "a measure", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mētior, mētīrī
- Say it: mētior, mētīrī, once more
- Say it: say mētior, mētīrī
- Recall: say the Latin for to warm, then the Latin for to fill, then say mētior, mētīrī again

Before you move on

What does mētior, mētīrī mean? ("To measure".) Say it once more.

Chapter 256

To clap, To cross, To increase, To lessen, To warn

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to clap, to cross, to increase, to lessen and to warn.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 256: I can say to clap, to cross, to increase, to lessen and to warn.

256.1 plaudō, plaudere — to clap, to applaud

Before the new one: say the Latin for to fill, then the Latin for to measure.

You'll want to know: plaudō, plaudere

plaudō, plaudere — "to clap, to applaud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

plaudō has no sure origin; it may imitate the sound of clapping. A by-form plōdō, "to clap", is also found (Lewis & Short). English applaud and explode, first "to clap a player off the stage", come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: plaudō, plaudere
- Say it: plaudō, plaudere, once more
- Say it: say plaudō, plaudere
- Recall: say the Latin for to fill, then the Latin for to measure, then say plaudō, plaudere again

Before you move on

What does plaudō, plaudere mean? ("To clap, to applaud".) Say it once more.

256.2 trānseō, trānsīre — to cross, to go over

Before the new one: say the Latin for to measure, then the Latin for to clap.

You'll want to know: trānseō, trānsīre

trānseō, trānsīre — "to cross, to go over".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

trānseō is trāns, "across", with eō, "to go" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trānseō, trānsīre
- Say it: trānseō, trānsīre, once more
- Say it: say trānseō, trānsīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to measure, then the Latin for to clap, then say trānseō, trānsīre again

Before you move on

What does trānseō, trānsīre mean? ("To cross, to go over".) Say it once more.

256.3 augeō, augēre — to increase

Before the new one: say the Latin for to clap, then the Latin for to cross.

You'll want to know: augeō, augēre

augeō, augēre — "to increase".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

augeō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2ewg-*, "to increase, to grow" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek auxō, "to increase", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so is English eke, as in to eke out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: augeō, augēre
- Say it: augeō, augēre, once more
- Say it: say augeō, augēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to clap, then the Latin for to cross, then say augeō, augēre again

Before you move on

What does augeō, augēre mean? ("To increase".) Say it once more.

256.4 minuō, minuere — to lessen, to decrease

Before the new one: say the Latin for to cross, then the Latin for to increase.

You'll want to know: minuō, minuere

minuō, minuere — "to lessen, to decrease".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

minuō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European mi-nu-*, "to lessen, to make small" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek minythō, "to lessen", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and minor, "smaller", shares the root.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: minuō, minuere
- Say it: minuō, minuere, once more
- Say it: say minuō, minuere
- Recall: say the Latin for to cross, then the Latin for to increase, then say minuō, minuere again

Before you move on

What does minuō, minuere mean? ("To lessen, to decrease".) Say it once more.

256.5 moneō, monēre — to warn, to remind

Before the new one: say the Latin for to increase, then the Latin for to lessen.

You'll want to know: moneō, monēre

moneō, monēre — "to warn, to remind".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

moneō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European moneye-*, "to make think" (EtymDB 2.1), a causative of the root of meminī, "to remember" (Lewis & Short): to remind, to warn.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: moneō, monēre
- Say it: moneō, monēre, once more
- Say it: say moneō, monēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to increase, then the Latin for to lessen, then say moneō, monēre again

Before you move on

What does moneō, monēre mean? ("To warn, to remind".) Say it once more.

Chapter 257

To deserve, To correct, To offer, To watch, To stroll

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to deserve, to correct, to offer, to watch and to stroll.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 257: I can say to deserve, to correct, to offer, to watch and to stroll.

257.1 mereor, merērī — to deserve, to earn

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to lessen, then the Latin for to warn.

You'll want to know: mereor, merērī

mereor, merērī — "to deserve, to earn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mereor is the deponent twin of mereō, "to earn, to deserve" (Lewis & Short). It is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European smer-*, "to get a share"; Greek meiromai, "to receive one's share", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mereor, merērī
- Say it: mereor, merērī, once more
- Say it: say mereor, merērī
- Recall: say the Latin for to lessen, then the Latin for to warn, then say mereor, merērī again

Before you move on

What does mereor, merērī mean? ("To deserve, to earn".) Say it once more.

257.2 ēmendō, ēmendāre — to correct (a fault)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to warn, then the Latin for to deserve.

You'll want to know: ēmendō, ēmendāre

ēmendō, ēmendāre — "to correct (a fault)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēmendō is built on mendum, "a fault, a blemish" (Lewis & Short), with ex, "out": to take the faults out. English amend and mend come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ēmendō, ēmendāre
- Say it: ēmendō, ēmendāre, once more
- Say it: say ēmendō, ēmendāre

- Recall: say the Latin for to warn, then the Latin for to deserve, then say ēmendō, ēmendāre again

Before you move on

What does ēmendō, ēmendāre mean? (“To correct (a fault)”.) Say it once more.

257.3 offerō, offerre — to offer

Before the new one: say the Latin for to deserve, then the Latin for to correct.

You’ll want to know: offerō, offerre

offerō, offerre — “to offer”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

offerō is ob, “towards”, with ferō, “to carry, to bring” (Lewis & Short): to bring before someone.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: offerō, offerre
- Say it: offerō, offerre, once more
- Say it: say offerō, offerre
- Recall: say the Latin for to deserve, then the Latin for to correct, then say offerō, offerre again

Before you move on

What does offerō, offerre mean? (“To offer”.) Say it once more.

257.4 observō, observāre — to watch, to observe

Before the new one: say the Latin for to correct, then the Latin for to offer.

You'll want to know: observō, observāre

observō, observāre — "to watch, to observe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

observō is ob, "towards, before", with servō, "to watch over" (EtymDB 2.1): to keep watch on.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: observō, observāre
- Say it: observō, observāre, once more
- Say it: say observō, observāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to correct, then the Latin for to offer, then say observō, observāre again

Before you move on

What does observō, observāre mean? ("To watch, to observe".) Say it once more.

257.5 spatior, spatiārī — to stroll

Before the new one: say the Latin for to offer, then the Latin for to watch.

You'll want to know: spatior, spatiārī

spatior, spatiārī — "to stroll".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spatior is built on spatium, "space, room": to take up room, to walk about. Where spatium comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spatior, spatiārī
- Say it: spatior, spatiārī, once more
- Say it: say spatior, spatiārī
- Recall: say the Latin for to offer, then the Latin for to watch, then say spatior, spatiārī again

Before you move on

What does spatior, spatiārī mean? ("To stroll".) Say it once more.

Chapter 258

To dream, To push, To go past, To make no sound, To dread

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to dream, to push, to go past, to make no sound and to dread.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 258: I can say to dream, to push, to go past, to make no sound and to dread.

258.1 somniō, somniāre — to dream

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to watch, then the Latin for to stroll.

You'll want to know: somniō, somniāre

somniō, somniāre — "to dream".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

somniō is the verb made from somnium, "a dream" (Lewis & Short), which is built on somnus, "sleep".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: somniō, somniāre
- Say it: somniō, somniāre, once more
- Say it: say somniō, somniāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to watch, then the Latin for to stroll, then say somniō, somniāre again

Before you move on

What does somniō, somniāre mean? ("To dream".) Say it once more.

258.2 pellō, pellere — to push, to drive

Before the new one: say the Latin for to stroll, then the Latin for to dream.

You'll want to know: pellō, pellere

pellō, pellere — "to push, to drive".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pellō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pel-*, "to drive, to thrust". Greek pallō, "to brandish, to shake", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English repel and pulse come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pellō, pellere
- Say it: pellō, pellere, once more
- Say it: say pellō, pellere
- Recall: say the Latin for to stroll, then the Latin for to dream, then say pellō, pellere again

Before you move on

What does pellō, pellere mean? (“To push, to drive”.) Say it once more.

258.3 praetereō, praeterīre — to go past

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dream, then the Latin for to push.

You’ll want to know: praetereō, praeterīre

praetereō, praeterīre — “to go past”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praetereō is eō, “to go” (EtymDB 2.1), with praeter, “past, beyond”: to go past.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: praetereō, praeterīre
- Say it: praetereō, praeterīre, once more
- Say it: say praetereō, praeterīre
- Recall: say the Latin for to dream, then the Latin for to push, then say praetereō, praeterīre again

Before you move on

What does praetereō, praeterīre mean? (“To go past”.) Say it once more.

258.4 sileō, silēre — to make no sound

Before the new one: say the Latin for to push, then the Latin for to go past.

You'll want to know: sileō, silēre

sileō, silēre — "to make no sound".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sileō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European seyl-*, "still, quiet" (EtymDB 2.1); Gothic anasilan, "to grow quiet", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sileō, silēre
- Say it: sileō, silēre, once more
- Say it: say sileō, silēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to push, then the Latin for to go past, then say sileō, silēre again

Before you move on

What does sileō, silēre mean? ("To make no sound".) Say it once more.

258.5 metuō, metuere — to dread

Before the new one: say the Latin for to go past, then the Latin for to make no sound.

You'll want to know: metuō, metuere

metuō, metuere — "to dread".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

metuō is the verb made from metus, "fear" (Lewis & Short), whose origin is unknown.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: metuō, metuere
- Say it: metuō, metuere, once more
- Say it: say metuō, metuere
- Recall: say the Latin for to go past, then the Latin for to make no sound, then say metuō, metuere again

Before you move on

What does metuō, metuere mean? ("To dread".) Say it once more.

Chapter 259

To pray, To recommend, To breathe, To give up, To exchange

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to pray, to recommend, to breathe, to give up and to exchange.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 259: I can say to pray, to recommend, to breathe, to give up and to exchange.

259.1 ōrō, ōrāre — to pray, to beg

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to make no sound, then the Latin for to dread.

You'll want to know: ōrō, ōrāre

ōrō, ōrāre — "to pray, to beg".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōrō is often linked with ōs, ōris, "the mouth" (Lewis & Short), though the link is uncertain: to speak, then to plead and pray. ōs is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1oh3s*, "mouth" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōrō, ōrāre
- Say it: ōrō, ōrāre, once more
- Say it: say ōrō, ōrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to make no sound, then the Latin for to dread, then say ōrō, ōrāre again

Before you move on

What does ōrō, ōrāre mean? ("To pray, to beg".) Say it once more.

259.2 commendō, commendāre — to recommend, to entrust

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dread, then the Latin for to pray.

You'll want to know: commendō, commendāre

commendō, commendāre — "to recommend, to entrust".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

commendō is mandō, "to entrust" (Lewis & Short), with con-, "thoroughly", its a weakened to e.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: commendō, commendāre
- Say it: commendō, commendāre, once more
- Say it: say commendō, commendāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to dread, then the Latin for to pray, then say commendō, commendāre again

Before you move on

What does commendō, commendāre mean? ("To recommend, to entrust".) Say it once more.

259.3 spīrō, spīrāre — to breathe

Before the new one: say the Latin for to pray, then the Latin for to recommend.

You'll want to know: spīrō, spīrāre

spīrō, spīrāre — "to breathe".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

spīrō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European (s)peys-*, "to blow, to breathe" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short call it doubtful. English spirit and inspire come from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: spīrō, spīrāre
- Say it: spīrō, spīrāre, once more
- Say it: say spīrō, spīrāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to pray, then the Latin for to recommend, then say spīrō, spīrāre again

Before you move on

What does spīrō, spīrāre mean? ("To breathe".) Say it once more.

259.4 dēsistō, dēsistere — to give up

Before the new one: say the Latin for to recommend, then the Latin for to breathe.

You'll want to know: dēsistō, dēsistere

dēsistō, dēsistere — "to give up".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēsistō is dē, "away", with sistō, "to stand, to stop" (EtymDB 2.1): to stand off, to give up.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēsistō, dēsistere
- Say it: dēsistō, dēsistere, once more
- Say it: say dēsistō, dēsistere
- Recall: say the Latin for to recommend, then the Latin for to breathe, then say dēsistō, dēsistere again

Before you move on

What does dēsistō, dēsistere mean? ("To give up".) Say it once more.

259.5 permūtō, permūtāre — to exchange

Before the new one: say the Latin for to breathe, then the Latin for to give up.

You'll want to know: permūtō, permūtāre

permūtō, permūtāre — "to exchange".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

permūtō is per, "thoroughly", with mūtō, "to change" (EtymDB 2.1): to change completely, to exchange.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: permūtō, permūtāre
- Say it: permūtō, permūtāre, once more
- Say it: say permūtō, permūtāre
- Recall: say the Latin for to breathe, then the Latin for to give up, then say permūtō, permūtāre again

Before you move on

What does permūtō, permūtāre mean? ("To exchange".) Say it once more.

Chapter 260

To press out, To feed, To put together, To notice, To blush

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to press out, to feed, to put together, to notice and to blush.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 260: I can say to press out, to feed, to put together, to notice and to blush.

260.1 exprimō, exprimere — to press out, to express

Before the new one: say the Latin for to give up, then the Latin for to exchange.

You'll want to know: exprimō, exprimere

exprimō, exprimere — "to press out, to express".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

exprimō is ex, "out", with premō, "to press" (Lewis & Short), its e weakened to i: to press out. English express comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: exprimō, exprimere
- Say it: exprimō, exprimere, once more
- Say it: say exprimō, exprimere
- Recall: say the Latin for to give up, then the Latin for to exchange, then say exprimō, exprimere again

Before you move on

What does exprimō, exprimere mean? ("To press out, to express".) Say it once more.

260.2 alō, alere — to feed, to nourish

Before the new one: say the Latin for to exchange, then the Latin for to press out.

You'll want to know: alō, alere

alō, alere — "to feed, to nourish".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

alō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2el-*, "to grow, to nourish" (EtymDB 2.1). Its old participle is altus, "grown tall, high".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: alō, alere
- Say it: alō, alere, once more
- Say it: say alō, alere

- Recall: say the Latin for to exchange, then the Latin for to press out, then say alō, alere again

Before you move on

What does alō, alere mean? ("To feed, to nourish".) Say it once more.

260.3 compōnō, compōnere — to put together, to arrange

Before the new one: say the Latin for to press out, then the Latin for to feed.

You'll want to know: compōnō, compōnere

compōnō, compōnere — "to put together, to arrange".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

compōnō is con-, "together", with pōnō, "to put" (EtymDB 2.1). English compose and component come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: compōnō, compōnere
- Say it: compōnō, compōnere, once more
- Say it: say compōnō, compōnere
- Recall: say the Latin for to press out, then the Latin for to feed, then say compōnō, compōnere again

Before you move on

What does compōnō, compōnere mean? ("To put together, to arrange".) Say it once more.

260.4 animadvertō, animadvertere — to notice

Before the new one: say the Latin for to feed, then the Latin for to put together.

You'll want to know: animadvertō, animadvertere

animadvertō, animadvertere — "to notice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

animadvertō is contracted from animum advertō, "I turn the mind towards" (Lewis & Short): animus, "mind", and advertō, "to turn to".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: animadvertō, animadvertere
- Say it: animadvertō, animadvertere, once more
- Say it: say animadvertō, animadvertere
- Recall: say the Latin for to feed, then the Latin for to put together, then say animadvertō, animadvertere again

Before you move on

What does animadvertō, animadvertere mean? ("To notice".) Say it once more.

260.5 ērubēscō, ērubēscere — to blush

Before the new one: say the Latin for to put together, then the Latin for to notice.

You'll want to know: ērubēscō, ērubēscere

ērubēscō, ērubēscere — "to blush".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ērubēscō is ex, “out”, with rubēscō, “to grow red” (EtymDB 2.1), from ruber, “red”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ērubēscō, ērubēscere
- Say it: ērubēscō, ērubēscere, once more
- Say it: say ērubēscō, ērubēscere
- Recall: say the Latin for to put together, then the Latin for to notice, then say ērubēscō, ērubēscere again

Before you move on

What does ērubēscō, ērubēscere mean? (“To blush”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 261

To give birth to, To order, To force, To mourn, To dig

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to give birth to, to order, to force, to mourn and to dig.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 261: I can say to give birth to, to order, to force, to mourn and to dig.

261.1 gignō, gignere — to give birth to, to produce

Before the new one: say the Latin for to notice, then the Latin for to blush.

You'll want to know: gignō, gignere

gignō, gignere — "to give birth to, to produce".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

gignō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European gi-gnh1-*, "to beget", a doubled form of the root (EtymDB 2.1); Greek gignomai, "to be born", is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gignō, gignere
- Say it: gignō, gignere, once more
- Say it: say gignō, gignere
- Recall: say the Latin for to notice, then the Latin for to blush, then say gignō, gignere again

Before you move on

What does gignō, gignere mean? ("To give birth to, to produce".) Say it once more.

261.2 iubeō, iubēre — to order, to tell (someone to)

Before the new one: say the Latin for to blush, then the Latin for to give birth to.

You'll want to know: iubeō, iubēre

iubeō, iubēre — "to order, to tell (someone to)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iubeō is inherited; Old Latin wrote ioubeō, and it is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European Hyowdheye-, "to set in motion", from Hyewdh-, "to move" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iubeō, iubēre
- Say it: iubeō, iubēre, once more
- Say it: say iubeō, iubēre

- Recall: say the Latin for to blush, then the Latin for to give birth to, then say iubeō, iubēre again

Before you move on

What does iubeō, iubēre mean? (“To order, to tell (someone to)”.) Say it once more.

261.3 cōgō, cōgere — to force; to collect

Before the new one: say the Latin for to give birth to, then the Latin for to order.

You’ll want to know: cōgō, cōgere

cōgō, cōgere — “to force; to collect”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cōgō is contracted from co-, “together”, and agō, “to drive” (Lewis & Short): to drive together, to compel.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cōgō, cōgere
- Say it: cōgō, cōgere, once more
- Say it: say cōgō, cōgere
- Recall: say the Latin for to give birth to, then the Latin for to order, then say cōgō, cōgere again

Before you move on

What does cōgō, cōgere mean? (“To force; to collect”.) Say it once more.

261.4 lūgeō, lūgēre — to mourn

Before the new one: say the Latin for to order, then the Latin for to force; to collect.

You'll want to know: lūgeō, lūgēre

lūgeō, lūgēre — "to mourn".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lūgeō is probably inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root lewg-*, "to break" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek lygros, "mournful", is often compared (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lūgeō, lūgēre
- Say it: lūgeō, lūgēre, once more
- Say it: say lūgeō, lūgēre
- Recall: say the Latin for to order, then the Latin for to force; to collect, then say lūgeō, lūgēre again

Before you move on

What does lūgeō, lūgēre mean? ("To mourn".) Say it once more.

261.5 fodiō, fodere — to dig

Before the new one: say the Latin for to force; to collect, then the Latin for to mourn.

You'll want to know: fodiō, fodere

fodiō, fodere — "to dig".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fodiō is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bhod-*, "to pierce, to dig" (EtymDB 2.1). English fossil, "dug up", comes from its participle fossus, "dug".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fodiō, fodere
- Say it: fodiō, fodere, once more
- Say it: say fodiō, fodere
- Recall: say the Latin for to force; to collect, then the Latin for to mourn, then say fodiō, fodere again

Before you move on

What does fodiō, fodere mean? ("To dig".) Say it once more.

Chapter 262

Trust, Courage, Shame, Envy, Boredom

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say trust, courage, shame, envy and boredom.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 262: I can say trust, courage, shame, envy and boredom.

262.1 fidēs, fideī — trust, faith

> Before the new one: say the Latin for to mourn, then the Latin for to dig.

You'll want to know: fidēs, fideī

fidēs, fideī — "trust, faith".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fidēs belongs with fīdō, "to trust" (Lewis & Short), and is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European bheydh-*, "to trust, to persuade" (EtymDB 2.1). It is a different word from fidēs, "a lyre string".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fidēs, fideī
- Say it: fidēs, fideī, once more
- Say it: say fidēs, fideī
- Recall: say the Latin for to mourn, then the Latin for to dig, then say fidēs, fideī again

Before you move on

What does fidēs, fideī mean? ("Trust, faith".) Say it once more.

262.2 virtūs, virtūtis — courage, virtue

Before the new one: say the Latin for to dig, then the Latin for trust.

You'll want to know: virtūs, virtūtis

virtūs, virtūtis — "courage, virtue".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

virtūs is built on vir, "a man" (Lewis & Short), with -tūs, an ending for a quality: manliness, then courage and any excellence. English virtue comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: virtūs, virtūtis
- Say it: virtūs, virtūtis, once more
- Say it: say virtūs, virtūtis
- Recall: say the Latin for to dig, then the Latin for trust, then say virtūs, virtūtis again

Before you move on

What does virtūs, virtūtis mean? (“Courage, virtue”.) Say it once more.

262.3 pudor, pudōris — shame, modesty

Before the new one: say the Latin for trust, then the Latin for courage.

You’ll want to know: pudor, pudōris

pudor, pudōris — “shame, modesty”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pudor is built on pudeō, “to be ashamed” (Lewis & Short), with -or, “a state”. Where pudeō comes from is uncertain.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pudor, pudōris
- Say it: pudor, pudōris, once more
- Say it: say pudor, pudōris
- Recall: say the Latin for trust, then the Latin for courage, then say pudor, pudōris again

Before you move on

What does pudor, pudōris mean? (“Shame, modesty”.) Say it once more.

262.4 invidia, invidiae — envy

Before the new one: say the Latin for courage, then the Latin for shame.

You'll want to know: invidia, invidiae

invidia, invidiae — "envy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

invidia is built on invidus, "envious" (Lewis & Short), from invideō, "to look askance at": the evil eye. English envy comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: invidia, invidiae
- Say it: invidia, invidiae, once more
- Say it: say invidia, invidiae
- Recall: say the Latin for courage, then the Latin for shame, then say invidia, invidiae again

Before you move on

What does invidia, invidiae mean? ("Envy".) Say it once more.

262.5 taedium, taediī — boredom, weariness

Before the new one: say the Latin for shame, then the Latin for envy.

You'll want to know: taedium, taediī

taedium, taediī — "boredom, weariness".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

taedium is built on taedet, "it wearies, it disgusts" (Lewis & Short). Where taedet comes from is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: taedium, taediī
- Say it: taedium, taediī, once more
- Say it: say taedium, taediī
- Recall: say the Latin for shame, then the Latin for envy, then say taedium, taediī again

Before you move on

What does taedium, taediī mean? ("Boredom, weariness".) Say it once more.

Chapter 263

Next day, Meanwhile, At some time, For a long time, Shortly

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say the next day, meanwhile, at some time, for a long time and shortly.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 263: I can say the next day, meanwhile, at some time, for a long time and shortly.

263.1 postrīdiē — the next day

Before the new one: say the Latin for envy, then the Latin for boredom.

You'll want to know: postrīdiē

postrīdiē — "the next day".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

postrīdiē is a locative of posterus, "coming after" (Lewis & Short), with diē, "on the day": on the day after.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: postrīdiē
- Say it: postrīdiē, once more
- Say it: say postrīdiē
- Recall: say the Latin for envy, then the Latin for boredom, then say postrīdiē again

Before you move on

What does postrīdiē mean? ("The next day".) Say it once more.

263.2 intereā — meanwhile

Before the new one: say the Latin for boredom, then the Latin for the next day.

You'll want to know: intereā

intereā — "meanwhile".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

intereā is inter, "between, during", with eā, "that" (Lewis & Short): during that time.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: intereā
- Say it: intereā, once more
- Say it: say intereā
- Recall: say the Latin for boredom, then the Latin for the next day, then say intereā again

Before you move on

What does intereā mean? ("Meanwhile".) Say it once more.

263.3 aliquandō — at some time, once

Before the new one: say the Latin for the next day, then the Latin for meanwhile.

You'll want to know: aliquandō

aliquandō — "at some time, once".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aliquandō is built on quandō, "when" (EtymDB 2.1), with ali-, "some, other", the stem of alius, as in aliquis, "someone": at some time or other.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aliquandō
- Say it: aliquandō, once more
- Say it: say aliquandō
- Recall: say the Latin for the next day, then the Latin for meanwhile, then say aliquandō again

Before you move on

What does aliquandō mean? ("At some time, once".) Say it once more.

263.4 diū — for a long time

Before the new one: say the Latin for meanwhile, then the Latin for at some time.

You'll want to know: diū

diū — "for a long time".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

diū is an old case form from the root of diēs, "day" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dyewi*, "during the day" (EtymDB 2.1): first "by day", then "for a long time".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: diū
- Say it: diū, once more
- Say it: say diū
- Recall: say the Latin for meanwhile, then the Latin for at some time, then say diū again

Before you move on

What does diū mean? ("For a long time".) Say it once more.

263.5 brevī — shortly, soon

Before the new one: say the Latin for at some time, then the Latin for for a long time.

You'll want to know: brevī

brevī — "shortly, soon".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

brevī is the ablative of brevis, "short", with tempore, "in a time", understood: in a short time. Brevis is inherited, usually traced to a Proto-Indo-European word for "short" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: brevī
- Say it: brevī, once more
- Say it: say brevī
- Recall: say the Latin for at some time, then the Latin for for a long time, then say brevī again

Before you move on

What does brevī mean? ("Shortly, soon".) Say it once more.

263.6 Words from chapters 255-258 — a first pass

Say the words for for a long time and shortly.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to hold, to burst, to warm, to fill, to measure
- to clap, to cross, to increase, to lessen, to warn
- to deserve, to correct, to offer, to watch, to stroll
- to dream, to push, to go past, to make no sound, to dread

Before you move on

To hold? (teneō, tenēre.) To burst? (rumpō, rumpere.) To warm? (calefaciō, calefacere.) To fill? (impleō, implēre.) To measure? (mētior, mētīrī.) To clap? (plaudō, plaudere.) To cross? (trānseō, trānsīre.) To increase? (augeō, augēre.) To lessen? (minuō, minuere.) To warn? (moneō, monēre.) To deserve? (mereor, merērī.) To correct? (ēmendō, ēmendāre.) To offer? (offerō, offerre.) To watch? (observō, observāre.) To stroll? (spatior, spatiārī.) To dream? (somniō, somniāre.) To push? (pellō, pellere.) To go past? (praetereō, praeterīre.) To make no sound? (sileō, silēre.) To dread? (metuō, metuere.)

263.7 Words from chapters 259-263 — a second pass

Say the words for to pray and to recommend.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to pray, to recommend, to breathe, to give up, to exchange
- to press out, to feed, to put together, to notice, to blush
- to give birth to, to order, to force; to collect, to mourn, to dig
- trust, courage, shame, envy, boredom
- the next day, meanwhile, at some time, for a long time, shortly

Before you move on

To pray? (ōrō, ōrāre.) To recommend? (commendō, commendāre.) To breathe? (spīrō, spīrāre.) To give up? (dēsistō, dēsistere.) To exchange? (permūtō, permūtāre.) To press out? (exprimō, exprimere.) To feed? (alō, alere.) To put together? (compōnō, compōnere.) To notice? (animadvertō, animadvertere.) To blush? (ērubēscō, ērubēscere.) To give birth to? (gignō, gignere.) To order? (iubeō, iubēre.) To force;

to collect? (cōgō, cōgere.) To mourn? (lūgeō, lūgēre.) To dig? (fodiō, fodere.) Trust? (fidēs, fideī.) Courage? (virtūs, virtūtis.) Shame? (pudor, pudōris.) Envy? (invidia, invidiae.) Boredom? (taedium, taedīī.) The next day? (postrīdiē.) Meanwhile? (intereā.) At some time? (aliquandō.) For a long time? (diū.) Shortly? (brevī.)

Chapter 264

Nowhere, From all sides, Here and there, Upwards, Downwards

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say nowhere, from all sides, here and there, upwards and downwards.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 264: I can say nowhere, from all sides, here and there, upwards and downwards.

264.1 nusquam — nowhere

Before the new one: say the Latin for for a long time, then the Latin for shortly, soon.

You'll want to know: nusquam

nusquam — "nowhere".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nusquam is ne, "not", fused with usquam, "anywhere" (Lewis & Short): not anywhere.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nusquam
- Say it: nusquam, once more
- Say it: say nusquam
- Recall: say the Latin for for a long time, then the Latin for shortly, soon, then say nusquam again

Before you move on

What does nusquam mean? ("Nowhere".) Say it once more.

264.2 undique — from all sides

Before the new one: say the Latin for shortly, soon, then the Latin for nowhere.

You'll want to know: undique

undique — "from all sides".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

undique is unde, "from where", with -que, "and, any" (Lewis & Short): from wherever, so from all sides.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: undique
- Say it: undique, once more
- Say it: say undique
- Recall: say the Latin for shortly, soon, then the Latin for nowhere, then say undique again

Before you move on

What does undique mean? ("From all sides".) Say it once more.

264.3 passim — here and there

Before the new one: say the Latin for nowhere, then the Latin for from all sides.

You'll want to know: passim

passim — "here and there".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

passim is built on passus, "spread out", the participle of pandō, "to spread" (Lewis & Short), with -im, an adverb ending: scattered about.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: passim
- Say it: passim, once more
- Say it: say passim
- Recall: say the Latin for nowhere, then the Latin for from all sides, then say passim again

Before you move on

What does passim mean? ("Here and there".) Say it once more.

264.4 sūrsum — upwards

Before the new one: say the Latin for from all sides, then the Latin for here and there.

You'll want to know: sūrsum

sūrsum — "upwards".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sūrsum is contracted from subvorsum, "turned up from below" (Lewis & Short), from sub, "up from under", and vertō, "to turn".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sūrsum
- Say it: sūrsum, once more
- Say it: say sūrsum
- Recall: say the Latin for from all sides, then the Latin for here and there, then say sūrsum again

Before you move on

What does sūrsum mean? ("Upwards".) Say it once more.

264.5 deorsum — downwards

Before the new one: say the Latin for here and there, then the Latin for upwards.

You'll want to know: deorsum

deorsum — "downwards".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

deorsum is contracted from dēvorsum, "turned down" (Lewis & Short), from dē, "down", and vertō, "to turn".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: deorsum
- Say it: deorsum, once more
- Say it: say deorsum
- Recall: say the Latin for here and there, then the Latin for upwards, then say deorsum again

Before you move on

What does deorsum mean? ("Downwards".) Say it once more.

Chapter 265

Even as, As, If only, On the contrary, At least

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say even as, as, if only, on the contrary and at least.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 265: I can say even as, as, if only, on the contrary and at least.

265.1 sīcut — even as, in the same way as

Before the new one: say the Latin for upwards, then the Latin for downwards.

You'll want to know: sīcut

sīcut — "even as, in the same way as".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sīcut is sīc, "so", with ut, "as" (Lewis & Short): even as.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sīcut
- Say it: sīcut, once more
- Say it: say sīcut
- Recall: say the Latin for upwards, then the Latin for downwards, then say sīcut again

Before you move on

What does sīcut mean? ("Even as, in the same way as".) Say it once more.

265.2 velut — as, like

Before the new one: say the Latin for downwards, then the Latin for even as.

You'll want to know: velut

velut — "as, like".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

velut is vel, "or, even", with ut, "as" (Lewis & Short): even as, like.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: velut
- Say it: velut, once more
- Say it: say velut
- Recall: say the Latin for downwards, then the Latin for even as, then say velut again

Before you move on

What does velut mean? (“As, like”.) Say it once more.

265.3 utinam — if only

Before the new one: say the Latin for even as, then the Latin for as.

You’ll want to know: utinam

utinam — “if only”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

utinam is ut, “how, that”, with the particle nam, “for, indeed” (EtymDB 2.1): oh that, if only.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: utinam
- Say it: utinam, once more
- Say it: say utinam
- Recall: say the Latin for even as, then the Latin for as, then say utinam again

Before you move on

What does utinam mean? (“If only”.) Say it once more.

265.4 immō — on the contrary

Before the new one: say the Latin for as, then the Latin for if only.

You'll want to know: immō

immō — "on the contrary".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

immō has no sure origin; Lewis & Short suggest a superlative form built on in, "in", like summus, "highest", but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: immō
- Say it: immō, once more
- Say it: say immō
- Recall: say the Latin for as, then the Latin for if only, then say immō again

Before you move on

What does immō mean? ("On the contrary".) Say it once more.

265.5 saltem — at least

Before the new one: say the Latin for if only, then the Latin for on the contrary.

You'll want to know: saltem

saltem — "at least".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

saltem has no sure origin; Lewis & Short tie it to salvus, "safe", but that is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saltem
- Say it: saltem, once more
- Say it: say saltem
- Recall: say the Latin for if only, then the Latin for on the contrary, then say saltem again

Before you move on

What does saltem mean? ("At least".) Say it once more.

Chapter 266

Wonderful, Different, Similar, Fair, Unjust

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say wonderful, different, similar, fair and unjust.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 266: I can say wonderful, different, similar, fair and unjust.

266.1 mīrus, mīra, mīrum — wonderful, strange

Before the new one: say the Latin for on the contrary, then the Latin for at least.

You'll want to know: mīrus, mīra, mīrum

mīrus, mīra, mīrum — "wonderful, strange".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

mīrus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European smeyros*, "smiling, astonishing", from (s)mey-*, "to smile, to wonder" (EtymDB 2.1). English smile is a cousin, and English miracle comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mīrus, mīra, mīrum
- Say it: mīrus, mīra, mīrum, once more
- Say it: say mīrus, mīra, mīrum
- Recall: say the Latin for on the contrary, then the Latin for at least, then say mīrus, mīra, mīrum again

Before you move on

What does mīrus, mīra, mīrum mean? ("Wonderful, strange".) Say it once more.

266.2 dīversus, dīversa, dīversum — different

Before the new one: say the Latin for at least, then the Latin for wonderful.

You'll want to know: dīversus, dīversa, dīversum

dīversus, dīversa, dīversum — "different".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dīversus is the past participle of dīvertō, "to turn in different directions" (Lewis & Short), from dis-, "apart", and vertō, "to turn".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dīversus, dīversa, dīversum
- Say it: dīversus, dīversa, dīversum, once more
- Say it: say dīversus, dīversa, dīversum
- Recall: say the Latin for at least, then the Latin for wonderful, then say dīversus, dīversa, dīversum again

Before you move on

What does dīversus, dīversa, dīversum mean? ("Different".) Say it once more.

266.3 similis, simile — similar, like

Before the new one: say the Latin for wonderful, then the Latin for different.

You'll want to know: similis, simile

similis, simile — "similar, like".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

similis is inherited, usually traced to the Proto-Indo-European root sem-*, "one, together" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek homoios, "like", and English same are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: similis, simile
- Say it: similis, simile, once more
- Say it: say similis, simile
- Recall: say the Latin for wonderful, then the Latin for different, then say similis, simile again

Before you move on

What does similis, simile mean? ("Similar, like".) Say it once more.

266.4 iūstus, iūsta, iūstum — fair, righteous

Before the new one: say the Latin for different, then the Latin for similar.

You'll want to know: iūstus, iūsta, iūstum

iūstus, iūsta, iūstum — "fair, righteous".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iūstus is built on iūs, iūris, "law, right" (Lewis & Short), which is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2yewos*, "rule, right" (EtymDB 2.1). English justice comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iūstus, iūsta, iūstum
- Say it: iūstus, iūsta, iūstum, once more
- Say it: say iūstus, iūsta, iūstum
- Recall: say the Latin for different, then the Latin for similar, then say iūstus, iūsta, iūstum again

Before you move on

What does iūstus, iūsta, iūstum mean? ("Fair, righteous".) Say it once more.

266.5 iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum — unjust

Before the new one: say the Latin for similar, then the Latin for fair.

You'll want to know: iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum

iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum — "unjust".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

iniūstus is in-, "not", with iūstus, "fair, righteous" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum
- Say it: iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum, once more
- Say it: say iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum
- Recall: say the Latin for similar, then the Latin for fair, then say iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum again

Before you move on

What does iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum mean? ("Unjust".) Say it once more.

Chapter 267

Fat, Clever, Special, Former, Nearest

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say fat, clever, special, former and nearest.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 267: I can say fat, clever, special, former and nearest.

267.1 pinguis, pingue — fat

Before the new one: say the Latin for fair, then the Latin for unjust.

You'll want to know: pinguis, pingue

pinguis, pingue — "fat".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pinguis has no sure origin; it is often linked with a Proto-Indo-European root peyH-*, "fat, to swell" (EtymDB 2.1), or with Greek pakhys, "thick" (Lewis & Short), but neither link is settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pinguis, pingue
- Say it: pinguis, pingue, once more
- Say it: say pinguis, pingue
- Recall: say the Latin for fair, then the Latin for unjust, then say pinguis, pingue again

Before you move on

What does pinguis, pingue mean? ("Fat".) Say it once more.

267.2 callidus, callida, callidum — clever, cunning

Before the new one: say the Latin for unjust, then the Latin for fat.

You'll want to know: callidus, callida, callidum

callidus, callida, callidum — "clever, cunning".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

callidus is built on calleō, "to be thick-skinned, to be practised" (Lewis & Short), from callum, "hard skin": hardened by experience, so shrewd. English callous comes from the same family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: callidus, callida, callidum
- Say it: callidus, callida, callidum, once more
- Say it: say callidus, callida, callidum

- Recall: say the Latin for unjust, then the Latin for fat, then say callidus, callida, callidum again

Before you move on

What does callidus, callida, callidum mean? ("Clever, cunning".) Say it once more.

267.3 praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum — special, chief

Before the new one: say the Latin for fat, then the Latin for clever.

You'll want to know: praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum

praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum — "special, chief".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

praecipuus is built on praecipiō, "to take beforehand" (Lewis & Short), from prae, "before", and capiō, "to take": taken first, so chief.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum
- Say it: praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum, once more
- Say it: say praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum
- Recall: say the Latin for fat, then the Latin for clever, then say praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum again

Before you move on

What does praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum mean? ("Special, chief".) Say it once more.

267.4 prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum — former, of old

Before the new one: say the Latin for clever, then the Latin for special.

You'll want to know: prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum

prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum — "former, of old".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prīstinus belongs with prīscus, "ancient" (Lewis & Short), and with prior, "earlier", all built on what is usually reconstructed as pri-*, "before".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum
- Say it: prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum, once more
- Say it: say prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum
- Recall: say the Latin for clever, then the Latin for special, then say prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum again

Before you move on

What does prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum mean? ("Former, of old".) Say it once more.

267.5 proximus, proxima, proximum — nearest, next

Before the new one: say the Latin for special, then the Latin for former.

You'll want to know: proximus, proxima, proximum

proximus, proxima, proximum — "nearest, next".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

proximus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European prokwismmos*, "nearest" (EtymDB 2.1), the superlative belonging to prope, "near"; Lewis & Short list it under propior, "nearer".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: proximus, proxima, proximum
- Say it: proximus, proxima, proximum, once more
- Say it: say proximus, proxima, proximum
- Recall: say the Latin for special, then the Latin for former, then say proximus, proxima, proximum again

Before you move on

What does proximus, proxima, proximum mean? ("Nearest, next".) Say it once more.

Chapter 268

Second of two, Suitable, Fit, Ready, Facing

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say the second of two, suitable, fit, ready and facing.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 268: I can say the second of two, suitable, fit, ready and facing.

268.1 alter, altera, alterum — the second of two, the other

Before the new one: say the Latin for former, then the Latin for nearest.

You'll want to know: alter, altera, alterum

alter, altera, alterum — "the second of two, the other".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

alter is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2elteros*, "the other of two" (EtymDB 2.1): the root of alius, "other", with -ter, an ending that sets one of two against the other.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: alter, altera, alterum
- Say it: alter, altera, alterum, once more
- Say it: say alter, altera, alterum
- Recall: say the Latin for former, then the Latin for nearest, then say alter, altera, alterum again

Before you move on

What does alter, altera, alterum mean? ("The second of two, the other".) Say it once more.

268.2 idōneus, idōnea, idōneum — suitable

Before the new one: say the Latin for nearest, then the Latin for the second of two.

You'll want to know: idōneus, idōnea, idōneum

idōneus, idōnea, idōneum — "suitable".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

idōneus has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: idōneus, idōnea, idōneum
- Say it: idōneus, idōnea, idōneum, once more
- Say it: say idōneus, idōnea, idōneum
- Recall: say the Latin for nearest, then the Latin for the second of two, then say idōneus, idōnea, idōneum again

Before you move on

What does idōneus, idōnea, idōneum mean? ("Suitable".) Say it once more.

268.3 aptus, apta, aptum — fit, suited

Before the new one: say the Latin for the second of two, then the Latin for suitable.

You'll want to know: aptus, apta, aptum

aptus, apta, aptum — "fit, suited".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

aptus is the old participle of apō, "to fasten, to attach" (Lewis & Short): fastened on, so fitted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aptus, apta, aptum
- Say it: aptus, apta, aptum, once more
- Say it: say aptus, apta, aptum
- Recall: say the Latin for the second of two, then the Latin for suitable, then say aptus, apta, aptum again

Before you move on

What does aptus, apta, aptum mean? ("Fit, suited".) Say it once more.

268.4 parātus, parāta, parātum — ready

Before the new one: say the Latin for suitable, then the Latin for fit.

You'll want to know: parātus, parāta, parātum

parātus, parāta, parātum — "ready".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parātus is the past participle of parō, "to prepare" (Lewis & Short): prepared, ready.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parātus, parāta, parātum
- Say it: parātus, parāta, parātum, once more
- Say it: say parātus, parāta, parātum
- Recall: say the Latin for suitable, then the Latin for fit, then say parātus, parāta, parātum again

Before you move on

What does parātus, parāta, parātum mean? ("Ready".) Say it once more.

268.5 adversus, adversa, adversum — facing, unfavourable

Before the new one: say the Latin for fit, then the Latin for ready.

You'll want to know: adversus, adversa, adversum

adversus, adversa, adversum — "facing, unfavourable".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

adversus is the past participle of advertō, "to turn towards" (Lewis & Short): turned towards, facing, and so against. English adverse comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: adversus, adversa, adversum
- Say it: adversus, adversa, adversum, once more
- Say it: say adversus, adversa, adversum
- Recall: say the Latin for fit, then the Latin for ready, then say adversus, adversa, adversum again

Before you move on

What does adversus, adversa, adversum mean? ("Facing, unfavourable".) Say it once more.

Chapter 269

Gloomy, Drunk, Sober, Greedy, Thrifty

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say gloomy, drunk, sober, greedy and thrifty.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 269: I can say gloomy, drunk, sober, greedy and thrifty.

269.1 maestus, maesta, maestum — gloomy, mournful

Before the new one: say the Latin for ready, then the Latin for facing.

You'll want to know: maestus, maesta, maestum

maestus, maesta, maestum — "gloomy, mournful".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

maestus belongs with maereō, "to grieve, to mourn" (Lewis & Short), whose origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: maestus, maesta, maestum
- Say it: maestus, maesta, maestum, once more
- Say it: say maestus, maesta, maestum
- Recall: say the Latin for ready, then the Latin for facing, then say maestus, maesta, maestum again

Before you move on

What does maestus, maesta, maestum mean? ("Gloomy, mournful".) Say it once more.

269.2 ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium — drunk

Before the new one: say the Latin for facing, then the Latin for gloomy.

You'll want to know: ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium

ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium — "drunk".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ēbrius may be inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root h1egwh-*, "to drink" (EtymDB 2.1); Lewis & Short still called it doubtful. Its opposite is sōbrius, "sober".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium
- Say it: ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium, once more
- Say it: say ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium

- Recall: say the Latin for facing, then the Latin for gloomy, then say ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium again

Before you move on

What does ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium mean? ("Drunk".) Say it once more.

269.3 sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium — sober

Before the new one: say the Latin for gloomy, then the Latin for drunk.

You'll want to know: sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium

sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium — "sober".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sōbrius is usually explained as sē-, "without", with ēbrius, "drunk" (EtymDB 2.1): not drunk. English sober comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium
- Say it: sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium, once more
- Say it: say sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium
- Recall: say the Latin for gloomy, then the Latin for drunk, then say sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium again

Before you move on

What does sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium mean? ("Sober".) Say it once more.

269.4 avārus, avāra, avārum — greedy

Before the new one: say the Latin for drunk, then the Latin for sober.

You'll want to know: avārus, avāra, avārum

avārus, avāra, avārum — "greedy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

avārus is built on aveō, "to long for, to crave" (Lewis & Short): craving. English avarice comes from its family.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avārus, avāra, avārum
- Say it: avārus, avāra, avārum, once more
- Say it: say avārus, avāra, avārum
- Recall: say the Latin for drunk, then the Latin for sober, then say avārus, avāra, avārum again

Before you move on

What does avārus, avāra, avārum mean? ("Greedy".) Say it once more.

269.5 parcus, parca, parcum — thrifty, sparing

Before the new one: say the Latin for sober, then the Latin for greedy.

You'll want to know: parcus, parca, parcum

parcus, parca, parcum — "thrifty, sparing".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parcus belongs with parcō, “to spare, to be sparing” (Lewis & Short), whose origin is uncertain.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parcus, parca, parcum
- Say it: parcus, parca, parcum, once more
- Say it: say parcus, parca, parcum
- Recall: say the Latin for sober, then the Latin for greedy, then say parcus, parca, parcum again

Before you move on

What does parcus, parca, parcum mean? (“Thrifty, sparing”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 270

Racecourse, Hall of justice, Senate house, Anchor, Oar

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a racecourse, a hall of justice, the senate house, an anchor and an oar.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 270: I can say a racecourse, a hall of justice, the senate house, an anchor and an oar.

270.1 circus, circī — a racecourse

Before the new one: say the Latin for greedy, then the Latin for thrifty.

You'll want to know: circus, circī

circus, circī — "a racecourse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

circus is usually taken from Greek kirkos, "a ring, a circle" (Lewis & Short), a form beside krikos, "ring". English circle comes from its diminutive circulus, "a small ring".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: circus, circī
- Say it: circus, circī, once more
- Say it: say circus, circī
- Recall: say the Latin for greedy, then the Latin for thrifty, then say circus, circī again

Before you move on

What does circus, circī mean? ("A racecourse".) Say it once more.

270.2 basilica, basilicae — a hall of justice

Before the new one: say the Latin for thrifty, then the Latin for a racecourse.

You'll want to know: basilica, basilicae

basilica, basilicae — "a hall of justice".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

basilica was borrowed from Greek basilikē, "royal", short for a royal hall (EtymDB 2.1), from basileus, "king".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: basilica, basilicae
- Say it: basilica, basilicae, once more
- Say it: say basilica, basilicae
- Recall: say the Latin for thrifty, then the Latin for a racecourse, then say basilica, basilicae again

Before you move on

What does basilica, basilicae mean? (“A hall of justice”.) Say it once more.

270.3 cūria, cūriae — the senate house

Before the new one: say the Latin for a racecourse, then the Latin for a hall of justice.

You’ll want to know: cūria, cūriae

cūria, cūriae — “the senate house”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cūria is often explained as co-viria*, “a gathering of men” (EtymDB 2.1), from co-, “together”, and vir, “a man”, but this is uncertain.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cūria, cūriae
- Say it: cūria, cūriae, once more
- Say it: say cūria, cūriae
- Recall: say the Latin for a racecourse, then the Latin for a hall of justice, then say cūria, cūriae again

Before you move on

What does cūria, cūriae mean? (“The senate house”.) Say it once more.

270.4 ancora, ancorae — an anchor

Before the new one: say the Latin for a hall of justice, then the Latin for the senate house.

You'll want to know: ancora, ancorae

ancora, ancorae — "an anchor".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ancora was borrowed from Greek ankyra, "anchor" (EtymDB 2.1), from a root for bending: a hooked thing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ancora, ancorae
- Say it: ancora, ancorae, once more
- Say it: say ancora, ancorae
- Recall: say the Latin for a hall of justice, then the Latin for the senate house, then say ancora, ancorae again

Before you move on

What does ancora, ancorae mean? ("An anchor".) Say it once more.

270.5 rēmus, rēmī — an oar

Before the new one: say the Latin for the senate house, then the Latin for an anchor.

You'll want to know: rēmus, rēmī

rēmus, rēmī — "an oar".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

rēmus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1reh1-*, "to row". Greek eretmos, "oar", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), and so are English row and rudder.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rēmus, rēmī
- Say it: rēmus, rēmī, once more
- Say it: say rēmus, rēmī
- Recall: say the Latin for the senate house, then the Latin for an anchor, then say rēmus, rēmī again

Before you move on

What does rēmus, rēmī mean? ("An oar".) Say it once more.

Chapter 271

People, State, Homeland, Enemy, War

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a people, a state, a homeland, an enemy and war.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 271: I can say a people, a state, a homeland, an enemy and war.

271.1 populus, populī — a people, a nation

Before the new one: say the Latin for an anchor, then the Latin for an oar.

You'll want to know: populus, populī

populus, populī — "a people, a nation".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

populus has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 gives Proto-Italic poplos*, "army", for its oldest sense, a body of armed men. It may be a loan, perhaps from Etruscan. English people comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: populus, populī
- Say it: populus, populī, once more
- Say it: say populus, populī
- Recall: say the Latin for an anchor, then the Latin for an oar, then say populus, populī again

Before you move on

What does populus, populī mean? ("A people, a nation".) Say it once more.

271.2 cīvitās, cīvitātis — a state; citizenship

Before the new one: say the Latin for an oar, then the Latin for a people.

You'll want to know: cīvitās, cīvitātis

cīvitās, cīvitātis — "a state; citizenship".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cīvitās is built on cīvis, "a citizen" (Lewis & Short), with -tās, an ending for a quality: the body of citizens. English city comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cīvitās, cīvitātis
- Say it: cīvitās, cīvitātis, once more
- Say it: say cīvitās, cīvitātis

- Recall: say the Latin for an oar, then the Latin for a people, then say cīvitās, cīvitātis again

Before you move on

What does cīvitās, cīvitātis mean? ("A state; citizenship".) Say it once more.

271.3 patria, patriae — a homeland

Before the new one: say the Latin for a people, then the Latin for a state; citizenship.

You'll want to know: patria, patriae

patria, patriae — "a homeland".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

patria is the feminine of patrius, "of a father" (Lewis & Short), with terra, "land", understood: the land of one's fathers.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patria, patriae
- Say it: patria, patriae, once more
- Say it: say patria, patriae
- Recall: say the Latin for a people, then the Latin for a state; citizenship, then say patria, patriae again

Before you move on

What does patria, patriae mean? ("A homeland".) Say it once more.

271.4 hostis, hostis — an enemy (of the state)

Before the new one: say the Latin for a state; citizenship, then the Latin for a homeland.

You'll want to know: hostis, hostis

hostis, hostis — "an enemy (of the state)".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hostis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghostis*, "a stranger, a guest" (EtymDB 2.1): the stranger became the enemy in Latin, the guest in Germanic. English guest is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hostis, hostis
- Say it: hostis, hostis, once more
- Say it: say hostis, hostis
- Recall: say the Latin for a state; citizenship, then the Latin for a homeland, then say hostis, hostis again

Before you move on

What does hostis, hostis mean? ("An enemy (of the state)".) Say it once more.

271.5 bellum, bellī — war

Before the new one: say the Latin for a homeland, then the Latin for an enemy.

You'll want to know: bellum, bellī

bellum, bellī — "war".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

bellum comes from older duellum (Lewis & Short); Latin turned an initial dw into b, as in bis, "two times", from older duis. The deeper origin of duellum is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bellum, bellī
- Say it: bellum, bellī, once more
- Say it: say bellum, bellī
- Recall: say the Latin for a homeland, then the Latin for an enemy, then say bellum, bellī again

Before you move on

What does bellum, bellī mean? ("War".) Say it once more.

Chapter 272

Butcher, Innkeeper, Banker, Envoy, Clerk

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a butcher, an innkeeper, a banker, an envoy and a clerk.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 272: I can say a butcher, an innkeeper, a banker, an envoy and a clerk.

272.1 lanius, laniī — a butcher

Before the new one: say the Latin for an enemy, then the Latin for war.

You'll want to know: lanius, laniī

lanius, laniī — "a butcher".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lanius belongs with laniō, "to tear to pieces" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European lek-*, "to tear" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lanius, laniī
- Say it: lanius, laniī, once more
- Say it: say lanius, laniī
- Recall: say the Latin for an enemy, then the Latin for war, then say lanius, laniī again

Before you move on

What does lanius, laniī mean? ("A butcher".) Say it once more.

272.2 caupō, caupōnis — an innkeeper

Before the new one: say the Latin for war, then the Latin for a butcher.

You'll want to know: caupō, caupōnis

caupō, caupōnis — "an innkeeper".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

caupō has no sure origin; Greek kapēlos, "a retail dealer", is often compared (Lewis & Short). German kaufen, "to buy", was probably borrowed from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: caupō, caupōnis
- Say it: caupō, caupōnis, once more
- Say it: say caupō, caupōnis
- Recall: say the Latin for war, then the Latin for a butcher, then say caupō, caupōnis again

Before you move on

What does caupō, caupōnis mean? (“An innkeeper”.) Say it once more.

272.3 argentārius, argentāriī — a banker

Before the new one: say the Latin for a butcher, then the Latin for an innkeeper.

You’ll want to know: argentārius, argentāriī

argentārius, argentāriī — “a banker”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

argentārius is built on argentum, “silver, money” (Lewis & Short), with -ārius, “one who deals in”: a money-dealer.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: argentārius, argentāriī
- Say it: argentārius, argentāriī, once more
- Say it: say argentārius, argentāriī
- Recall: say the Latin for a butcher, then the Latin for an innkeeper, then say argentārius, argentāriī again

Before you move on

What does argentārius, argentāriī mean? (“A banker”.) Say it once more.

272.4 lēgātus, lēgātī — an envoy

Before the new one: say the Latin for an innkeeper, then the Latin for a banker.

You'll want to know: lēgātus, lēgātī

lēgātus, lēgātī — "an envoy".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lēgātus is the past participle of lēgō, "to send as an envoy, to appoint" (Lewis & Short), built on lēx, lēgis, "a law": one sent with a charge.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lēgātus, lēgātī
- Say it: lēgātus, lēgātī, once more
- Say it: say lēgātus, lēgātī
- Recall: say the Latin for an innkeeper, then the Latin for a banker, then say lēgātus, lēgātī again

Before you move on

What does lēgātus, lēgātī mean? ("An envoy".) Say it once more.

272.5 scrība, scrībae — a clerk

Before the new one: say the Latin for a banker, then the Latin for an envoy.

You'll want to know: scrība, scrībae

scrība, scrībae — "a clerk".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

scrība is built on scrībō, "to write" (Lewis & Short): one who writes. English scribe comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: scrība, scrībae
- Say it: scrība, scrībae, once more
- Say it: say scrība, scrībae
- Recall: say the Latin for a banker, then the Latin for an envoy, then say scrība, scrībae again

Before you move on

What does scrība, scrībae mean? ("A clerk".) Say it once more.

272.6 Words from chapters 264-267 — a first pass

Say the words for an envoy and a clerk.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nowhere, from all sides, here and there, upwards, downwards
- even as, as, if only, on the contrary, at least
- wonderful, different, similar, fair, unjust
- fat, clever, special, former, nearest

Before you move on

Nowhere? (nusquam.) From all sides? (undique.) Here and there? (passim.) Upwards? (sūrsum.) Downwards? (deorsum.) Even as? (sīcut.) As? (velut.) If only? (utinam.) On the contrary? (immō.) At least? (saltem.) Wonderful? (mīrus, mīra, mīrum.) Different? (dīversus, dīversa, dīversum.) Similar? (similis, simile.) Fair? (iūstus, iūsta, iūstum.) Unjust? (iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum.) Fat? (pinguis, pingue.) Clever? (callidus, callida, callidum.) Special? (praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum.) Former? (prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum.) Nearest? (proximus, proxima, proximum.)

272.7 Words from chapters 268-272 — a second pass

Say the words for the second of two and suitable.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the second of two, suitable, fit, ready, facing
- gloomy, drunk, sober, greedy, thrifty
- a racecourse, a hall of justice, the senate house, an anchor, an oar
- a people, a state; citizenship, a homeland, an enemy, war
- a butcher, an innkeeper, a banker, an envoy, a clerk

Before you move on

The second of two? (alter, altera, alterum.) Suitable? (idōneus, idōnea, idōneum.) Fit? (aptus, apta, aptum.) Ready? (parātus, parāta, parātum.) Facing? (adversus, adversa, adversum.) Gloomy? (maestus, maesta, maestum.) Drunk? (ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium.) Sober? (sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium.) Greedy? (avārus, avāra, avārum.) Thrifty? (parcus, parca, parcum.) A racecourse? (circus, circī.) A hall of justice?

(basilica, basilicae.) The senate house? (cūria, cūriae.) An anchor? (ancora, ancorae.) An oar? (rēmus, rēmī.) A people? (populus, populī.) A state; citizenship? (cīvitās, cīvitātis.) A homeland? (patria, patriae.) An enemy? (hostis, hostis.) War? (bellum, bellī.) A butcher? (lanius, laniī.) An innkeeper? (caupō, caupōnis.) A banker? (argentārius, argentāriī.) An envoy? (lēgātus, lēgātī.) A clerk? (scrība, scrībae.)

Chapter 273

Wedding, Husband or wife, Parent, Grandson, Granddaughter

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a wedding, a husband or wife, a parent, a grandson and a granddaughter.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 273: I can say a wedding, a husband or wife, a parent, a grandson and a granddaughter.

273.1 nūptiae, nūptiārum — a wedding

Before the new one: say the Latin for an envoy, then the Latin for a clerk.

You'll want to know: nūptiae, nūptiārum

nūptiae, nūptiārum — "a wedding".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nūptiae is built on nūpta, "a bride" (Lewis & Short), the participle of nūbō, "to marry" (EtymDB 2.1). English nuptial comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nūptiae, nūptiārum
- Say it: nūptiae, nūptiārum, once more
- Say it: say nūptiae, nūptiārum
- Recall: say the Latin for an envoy, then the Latin for a clerk, then say nūptiae, nūptiārum again

Before you move on

What does nūptiae, nūptiārum mean? ("A wedding".) Say it once more.

273.2 coniūnx, coniugis — a husband or wife, a spouse

Before the new one: say the Latin for a clerk, then the Latin for a wedding.

You'll want to know: coniūnx, coniugis

coniūnx, coniugis — "a husband or wife, a spouse".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

coniūnx is built on coniungō, "to join together", from con-, "together", and iungō, "to join": one joined in marriage. Its root is the one in iugum, "a yoke".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: coniūnx, coniugis
- Say it: coniūnx, coniugis, once more
- Say it: say coniūnx, coniugis

- Recall: say the Latin for a clerk, then the Latin for a wedding, then say coniūnx, coniugis again

Before you move on

What does coniūnx, coniugis mean? ("A husband or wife, a spouse".) Say it once more.

273.3 parēns, parentis — a parent

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wedding, then the Latin for a husband or wife.

You'll want to know: parēns, parentis

parēns, parentis — "a parent".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

parēns is the present participle of pariō, "to bring forth, to give birth to" (EtymDB 2.1): the one who brings forth. It is a different word from pārēns, "obeying", from pāreō, "to obey".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parēns, parentis
- Say it: parēns, parentis, once more
- Say it: say parēns, parentis
- Recall: say the Latin for a wedding, then the Latin for a husband or wife, then say parēns, parentis again

Before you move on

What does parēns, parentis mean? ("A parent".) Say it once more.

273.4 nepōs, nepōtis — a grandson

Before the new one: say the Latin for a husband or wife, then the Latin for a parent.

You'll want to know: nepōs, nepōtis

nepōs, nepōtis — "a grandson".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nepōs is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European nepōts*, "grandson, nephew" (EtymDB 2.1); German Neffe, "nephew", is a cousin (Lewis & Short). English nephew comes from nepōs through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nepōs, nepōtis
- Say it: nepōs, nepōtis, once more
- Say it: say nepōs, nepōtis
- Recall: say the Latin for a husband or wife, then the Latin for a parent, then say nepōs, nepōtis again

Before you move on

What does nepōs, nepōtis mean? ("A grandson".) Say it once more.

273.5 neptis, neptis — a granddaughter

Before the new one: say the Latin for a parent, then the Latin for a grandson.

You'll want to know: neptis, neptis

neptis, neptis — "a granddaughter".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

neptis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European neptih2*, "granddaughter, niece" (EtymDB 2.1), the feminine partner of nepōs, "grandson" (Lewis & Short). English niece comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: neptis, neptis
- Say it: neptis, neptis, once more
- Say it: say neptis, neptis
- Recall: say the Latin for a parent, then the Latin for a grandson, then say neptis, neptis again

Before you move on

What does neptis, neptis mean? ("A granddaughter".) Say it once more.

Chapter 274

Leisure, Business, Profit, Loss, Debt

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say leisure, business, profit, loss and a debt.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 274: I can say leisure, business, profit, loss and a debt.

274.1 ōtium, ōtiī — leisure

Before the new one: say the Latin for a grandson, then the Latin for a granddaughter.

You'll want to know: ōtium, ōtiī

ōtium, ōtiī — "leisure".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

ōtium has no sure origin; no proposal is generally accepted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ōtium, ōtiī
- Say it: ōtium, ōtiī, once more
- Say it: say ōtium, ōtiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a grandson, then the Latin for a granddaughter, then say ōtium, ōtiī again

Before you move on

What does ōtium, ōtiī mean? ("Leisure".) Say it once more.

274.2 negōtium, negōtiī — business

Before the new one: say the Latin for a granddaughter, then the Latin for leisure.

You'll want to know: negōtium, negōtiī

negōtium, negōtiī — "business".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

negōtium is nec, "not", with ōtium, "leisure" (Lewis & Short): no leisure, so business. Festus already took it apart this way.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: negōtium, negōtiī
- Say it: negōtium, negōtiī, once more
- Say it: say negōtium, negōtiī
- Recall: say the Latin for a granddaughter, then the Latin for leisure, then say negōtium, negōtiī again

Before you move on

What does negōtium, negōtiī mean? (“Business”.) Say it once more.

274.3 lucrum, lucrī — profit

Before the new one: say the Latin for leisure, then the Latin for business.

You’ll want to know: lucrum, lucrī

lucrum, lucrī — “profit”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lucrum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European leh2w-*, “to take as booty, to profit” (EtymDB 2.1), with an ending for a means; German Lohn, “wages”, is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lucrum, lucrī
- Say it: lucrum, lucrī, once more
- Say it: say lucrum, lucrī
- Recall: say the Latin for leisure, then the Latin for business, then say lucrum, lucrī again

Before you move on

What does lucrum, lucrī mean? (“Profit”.) Say it once more.

274.4 damnum, damnī — loss, damage

Before the new one: say the Latin for business, then the Latin for profit.

You'll want to know: damnum, damnī

damnum, damnī — "loss, damage".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

damnum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dh2pnom*, "an outlay, an expense" (EtymDB 2.1), the source also of Greek dapanē, "expense"; Lewis & Short still preferred a link with dare, "to give".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: damnum, damnī
- Say it: damnum, damnī, once more
- Say it: say damnum, damnī
- Recall: say the Latin for business, then the Latin for profit, then say damnum, damnī again

Before you move on

What does damnum, damnī mean? ("Loss, damage".) Say it once more.

274.5 dēbitum, dēbitī — a debt

Before the new one: say the Latin for profit, then the Latin for loss.

You'll want to know: dēbitum, dēbitī

dēbitum, dēbitī — "a debt".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

dēbitum is the past participle of dēbeō, "to owe" (EtymDB 2.1), used as a noun: what is owed. English debt comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dēbitum, dēbitī
- Say it: dēbitum, dēbitī, once more
- Say it: say dēbitum, dēbitī
- Recall: say the Latin for profit, then the Latin for loss, then say dēbitum, dēbitī again

Before you move on

What does dēbitum, dēbitī mean? ("A debt".) Say it once more.

Chapter 275

Silk, Mud, Dust, Smoke, Ash

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say silk, mud, dust, smoke and ash.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 275: I can say silk, mud, dust, smoke and ash.

275.1 sēricum, sēricī — silk

Before the new one: say the Latin for loss, then the Latin for a debt.

You'll want to know: sēricum, sēricī

sēricum, sēricī — "silk".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sēricum is built on Sērēs, "the Seres", the people of the far east whom the Romans knew as makers of silk (Lewis & Short): the Seric stuff. English silk probably comes from the same name.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sēricum, sēricī
- Say it: sēricum, sēricī, once more
- Say it: say sēricum, sēricī
- Recall: say the Latin for loss, then the Latin for a debt, then say sēricum, sēricī again

Before you move on

What does sēricum, sēricī mean? ("Silk".) Say it once more.

275.2 lutum, lutī — mud

Before the new one: say the Latin for a debt, then the Latin for silk.

You'll want to know: lutum, lutī

lutum, lutī — "mud".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

lutum is usually linked with luō, "to wash" (Lewis & Short), or with a root for dirt seen in polluō, "to soil"; the details are uncertain. It is a different word from lūtum, "a plant used for yellow dye".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lutum, lutī
- Say it: lutum, lutī, once more
- Say it: say lutum, lutī
- Recall: say the Latin for a debt, then the Latin for silk, then say lutum, lutī again

Before you move on

What does lutum, lutī mean? ("Mud".) Say it once more.

275.3 pulvis, pulveris — dust

Before the new one: say the Latin for silk, then the Latin for mud.

You'll want to know: pulvis, pulveris

pulvis, pulveris — "dust".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pulvis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European pel-*, "flour, dust" (EtymDB 2.1); pollen, "fine flour", is from the same root. English powder comes from pulvis through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pulvis, pulveris
- Say it: pulvis, pulveris, once more
- Say it: say pulvis, pulveris
- Recall: say the Latin for silk, then the Latin for mud, then say pulvis, pulveris again

Before you move on

What does pulvis, pulveris mean? ("Dust".) Say it once more.

275.4 fūmus, fūmī — smoke

Before the new one: say the Latin for mud, then the Latin for dust.

You'll want to know: fūmus, fūmī

fūmus, fūmī — "smoke".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fūmus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European dhuh2mos*, "smoke" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek thymos, "spirit, passion", is a cousin (Lewis & Short), as is English dust.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fūmus, fūmī
- Say it: fūmus, fūmī, once more
- Say it: say fūmus, fūmī
- Recall: say the Latin for mud, then the Latin for dust, then say fūmus, fūmī again

Before you move on

What does fūmus, fūmī mean? ("Smoke".) Say it once more.

275.5 cinis, cineris — ash

Before the new one: say the Latin for dust, then the Latin for smoke.

You'll want to know: cinis, cineris

cinis, cineris — "ash".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cinis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ken-*, "dust, ashes" (EtymDB 2.1); Greek konis, "dust", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cinis, cineris
- Say it: cinis, cineris, once more
- Say it: say cinis, cineris
- Recall: say the Latin for dust, then the Latin for smoke, then say cinis, cineris again

Before you move on

What does cinis, cineris mean? ("Ash".) Say it once more.

Chapter 276

Wasp, Gnat, Flea, Worm, Tortoise

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a wasp, a gnat, a flea, a worm and a tortoise.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 276: I can say a wasp, a gnat, a flea, a worm and a tortoise.

276.1 vespa, vespae — a wasp

Before the new one: say the Latin for smoke, then the Latin for ash.

You'll want to know: vespa, vespae

vespa, vespae — "a wasp".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vespa is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wobhseh2*, "wasp", from webh-*, "to weave" (EtymDB 2.1): the insect that weaves its nest. English wasp is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vespa, vespae
- Say it: vespa, vespae, once more
- Say it: say vespa, vespae
- Recall: say the Latin for smoke, then the Latin for ash, then say vespa, vespae again

Before you move on

What does vespa, vespae mean? ("A wasp".) Say it once more.

276.2 culex, culicis — a gnat, a mosquito

Before the new one: say the Latin for ash, then the Latin for a wasp.

You'll want to know: culex, culicis

culex, culicis — "a gnat, a mosquito".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

culex has no sure origin; EtymDB 2.1 records a proposed Proto-Indo-European source, but the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: culex, culicis
- Say it: culex, culicis, once more
- Say it: say culex, culicis
- Recall: say the Latin for ash, then the Latin for a wasp, then say culex, culicis again

Before you move on

What does culex, culicis mean? (“A gnat, a mosquito”.) Say it once more.

276.3 pūlex, pūlicis — a flea

Before the new one: say the Latin for a wasp, then the Latin for a gnat.

You’ll want to know: pūlex, pūlicis

pūlex, pūlicis — “a flea”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pūlex is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European plusis*, “flea” (EtymDB 2.1), with its sounds rearranged; Greek psylla, “flea”, is a cousin.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pūlex, pūlicis
- Say it: pūlex, pūlicis, once more
- Say it: say pūlex, pūlicis
- Recall: say the Latin for a wasp, then the Latin for a gnat, then say pūlex, pūlicis again

Before you move on

What does pūlex, pūlicis mean? (“A flea”.) Say it once more.

276.4 vermis, vermis — a worm

Before the new one: say the Latin for a gnat, then the Latin for a flea.

You'll want to know: vermis, vermis

vermis, vermis — "a worm".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vermis is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European wrmis*, "worm" (EtymDB 2.1); Gothic waurms, "serpent", and English worm are cousins (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vermis, vermis
- Say it: vermis, vermis, once more
- Say it: say vermis, vermis
- Recall: say the Latin for a gnat, then the Latin for a flea, then say vermis, vermis again

Before you move on

What does vermis, vermis mean? ("A worm".) Say it once more.

276.5 testūdō, testūdinis — a tortoise

Before the new one: say the Latin for a flea, then the Latin for a worm.

You'll want to know: testūdō, testūdinis

testūdō, testūdinis — "a tortoise".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

testūdō is built on testa, "a piece of baked clay, a shell" (Lewis & Short), with -ūdō, an ending for a quality: the shelled creature.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: testūdō, testūdinis
- Say it: testūdō, testūdinis, once more
- Say it: say testūdō, testūdinis
- Recall: say the Latin for a flea, then the Latin for a worm, then say testūdō, testūdinis again

Before you move on

What does testūdō, testūdinis mean? ("A tortoise".) Say it once more.

Chapter 277

Helmet, Spear, Bow, Arrow, Trumpet

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a helmet, a spear, a bow, an arrow and a trumpet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 277: I can say a helmet, a spear, a bow, an arrow and a trumpet.

277.1 galea, galeae — a helmet

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a worm, then the Latin for a tortoise.

You'll want to know: galea, galeae

galea, galeae — "a helmet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

galea is probably a loan from Greek galeē, "a weasel, a marten", for a cap of animal skin; Lewis & Short's comparison with Sanskrit is doubtful.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: galea, galeae
- Say it: galea, galeae, once more
- Say it: say galea, galeae
- Recall: say the Latin for a worm, then the Latin for a tortoise, then say galea, galeae again

Before you move on

What does galea, galeae mean? ("A helmet".) Say it once more.

277.2 hasta, hastae — a spear

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tortoise, then the Latin for a helmet.

You'll want to know: hasta, hastae

hasta, hastae — "a spear".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

hasta is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European ghast-*, "a rod, a branch" (EtymDB 2.1). Gothic gazds, "a goad", is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hasta, hastae
- Say it: hasta, hastae, once more
- Say it: say hasta, hastae
- Recall: say the Latin for a tortoise, then the Latin for a helmet, then say hasta, hastae again

Before you move on

What does hasta, hastae mean? ("A spear".) Say it once more.

277.3 arcus, arcūs — a bow; an arch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a helmet, then the Latin for a spear.

You'll want to know: arcus, arcūs

arcus, arcūs — "a bow; an arch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

arcus is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h2erkwo-*, "bow, arch" (EtymDB 2.1); English arrow is a cousin. English arc and arch come from arcus.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: arcus, arcūs
- Say it: arcus, arcūs, once more
- Say it: say arcus, arcūs
- Recall: say the Latin for a helmet, then the Latin for a spear, then say arcus, arcūs again

Before you move on

What does arcus, arcūs mean? ("A bow; an arch".) Say it once more.

277.4 sagitta, sagittae — an arrow

Before the new one: say the Latin for a spear, then the Latin for a bow; an arch.

You'll want to know: sagitta, sagittae

sagitta, sagittae — "an arrow".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

sagitta has no sure origin; it may be a loan from a lost Mediterranean language, perhaps through Etruscan.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sagitta, sagittae
- Say it: sagitta, sagittae, once more
- Say it: say sagitta, sagittae
- Recall: say the Latin for a spear, then the Latin for a bow; an arch, then say sagitta, sagittae again

Before you move on

What does sagitta, sagittae mean? ("An arrow".) Say it once more.

277.5 tuba, tubae — a trumpet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a bow; an arch, then the Latin for an arrow.

You'll want to know: tuba, tubae

tuba, tubae — "a trumpet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

tuba belongs with tubus, "a pipe, a tube" (Lewis & Short); where the pair comes from is uncertain. English tube comes from tubus.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tuba, tubae
- Say it: tuba, tubae, once more
- Say it: say tuba, tubae
- Recall: say the Latin for a bow; an arch, then the Latin for an arrow, then say tuba, tubae again

Before you move on

What does tuba, tubae mean? ("A trumpet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 278

Book-roll, Page, Letter of the alphabet, Word, Name

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a book-roll, a page, a letter of the alphabet, a word and a name.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 278: I can say a book-roll, a page, a letter of the alphabet, a word and a name.

278.1 volūmen, volūminis — a book-roll

Before the new one: say the Latin for an arrow, then the Latin for a trumpet.

You'll want to know: volūmen, volūminis

volūmen, volūminis — "a book-roll".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

volūmen is built on volvō, "to roll" (Lewis & Short), with -men, an ending for a result: something rolled up. volvō is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European welw-*, "to roll" (EtymDB 2.1). English volume comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: volūmen, volūminis
- Say it: volūmen, volūminis, once more
- Say it: say volūmen, volūminis
- Recall: say the Latin for an arrow, then the Latin for a trumpet, then say volūmen, volūminis again

Before you move on

What does volūmen, volūminis mean? ("A book-roll".) Say it once more.

278.2 pāgina, pāginae — a page

Before the new one: say the Latin for a trumpet, then the Latin for a book-roll.

You'll want to know: pāgina, pāginae

pāgina, pāginae — "a page".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

pāgina is built on the root of pangō, "to fasten, to fix" (Lewis & Short): first a row of vines fastened together, then a column of writing. The root is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European peh2g-*, "to fasten" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pāgina, pāginae
- Say it: pāgina, pāginae, once more
- Say it: say pāgina, pāginae

- Recall: say the Latin for a trumpet, then the Latin for a book-roll, then say pāgina, pāginae again

Before you move on

What does pāgina, pāginae mean? ("A page".) Say it once more.

278.3 littera, litterae — a letter of the alphabet

Before the new one: say the Latin for a book-roll, then the Latin for a page.

You'll want to know: littera, litterae

littera, litterae — "a letter of the alphabet".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

littera has no sure origin; the old link with linō, "to smear", is doubtful, and a loan from Greek diphthera, "a hide for writing on", through Etruscan has also been suggested.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: littera, litterae
- Say it: littera, litterae, once more
- Say it: say littera, litterae
- Recall: say the Latin for a book-roll, then the Latin for a page, then say littera, litterae again

Before you move on

What does littera, litterae mean? ("A letter of the alphabet".) Say it once more.

278.4 verbum, verbī — a word

Before the new one: say the Latin for a page, then the Latin for a letter of the alphabet.

You'll want to know: verbum, verbī

verbum, verbī — "a word".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

verbum is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European werdhom*, "word" (EtymDB 2.1); English word is a cousin (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: verbum, verbī
- Say it: verbum, verbī, once more
- Say it: say verbum, verbī
- Recall: say the Latin for a page, then the Latin for a letter of the alphabet, then say verbum, verbī again

Before you move on

What does verbum, verbī mean? ("A word".) Say it once more.

278.5 nōmen, nōminis — a name

Before the new one: say the Latin for a letter of the alphabet, then the Latin for a word.

You'll want to know: nōmen, nōminis

nōmen, nōminis — "a name".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

nōmen is inherited, usually traced to Proto-Indo-European h1nomn*, "name" (EtymDB 2.1); English name is a cousin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nōmen, nōminis
- Say it: nōmen, nōminis, once more
- Say it: say nōmen, nōminis
- Recall: say the Latin for a letter of the alphabet, then the Latin for a word, then say nōmen, nōminis again

Before you move on

What does nōmen, nōminis mean? ("A name".) Say it once more.

Chapter 279

Cherry, Plum, Cabbage, Leek, Porridge

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a cherry, a plum, cabbage, a leek and porridge.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 279: I can say a cherry, a plum, cabbage, a leek and porridge.

279.1 cerasum, cerasī — a cherry

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a word, then the Latin for a name.

You'll want to know: cerasum, cerasī

cerasum, cerasī — "a cherry".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

cerasum was borrowed from Greek kerasos, "cherry tree", itself probably from a language of Asia Minor. English cherry comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cerasum, cerasī
- Say it: cerasum, cerasī, once more
- Say it: say cerasum, cerasī
- Recall: say the Latin for a word, then the Latin for a name, then say cerasum, cerasī again

Before you move on

What does cerasum, cerasī mean? ("A cherry".) Say it once more.

279.2 prūnum, prūnī — a plum

Before the new one: say the Latin for a name, then the Latin for a cherry.

You'll want to know: prūnum, prūnī

prūnum, prūnī — "a plum".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

prūnum was borrowed from Greek prounon, "plum" (EtymDB 2.1), a word probably from a language of Asia Minor. English prune and plum, an earlier borrowing, both come from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prūnum, prūnī
- Say it: prūnum, prūnī, once more
- Say it: say prūnum, prūnī
- Recall: say the Latin for a name, then the Latin for a cherry, then say prūnum, prūnī again

Before you move on

What does prūnum, prūnī mean? ("A plum".) Say it once more.

279.3 brassica, brassicae — cabbage

Before the new one: say the Latin for a cherry, then the Latin for a plum.

You'll want to know: brassica, brassicae

brassica, brassicae — "cabbage".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

brassica has no sure origin; a Celtic source is sometimes suggested.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: brassica, brassicae
- Say it: brassica, brassicae, once more
- Say it: say brassica, brassicae
- Recall: say the Latin for a cherry, then the Latin for a plum, then say brassica, brassicae again

Before you move on

What does brassica, brassicae mean? ("Cabbage".) Say it once more.

279.4 porrum, porrī — a leek

Before the new one: say the Latin for a plum, then the Latin for cabbage.

You'll want to know: porrum, porrī

porrum, porrī — "a leek".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

porrum is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European prso-*, "leek" (EtymDB 2.1), which makes Greek prason, "leek", a cousin (Lewis & Short); some think both are instead loans from a lost language.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: porrum, porrī
- Say it: porrum, porrī, once more
- Say it: say porrum, porrī
- Recall: say the Latin for a plum, then the Latin for cabbage, then say porrum, porrī again

Before you move on

What does porrum, porrī mean? ("A leek".) Say it once more.

279.5 puls, pultis — porridge

Before the new one: say the Latin for cabbage, then the Latin for a leek.

You'll want to know: puls, pultis

puls, pultis — "porridge".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

puls is usually linked with Greek poltos, "porridge" (Lewis & Short), and may have been borrowed from it; both go back to a root for meal, pel-*, "flour, dust" (EtymDB 2.1). English pulse, "beans and lentils", comes from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: puls, pultis
- Say it: puls, pultis, once more
- Say it: say puls, pultis
- Recall: say the Latin for cabbage, then the Latin for a leek, then say puls, pultis again

Before you move on

What does puls, pultis mean? ("Porridge".) Say it once more.

Chapter 280

Tower, Column, City walls, Ditch, Rampart

Modes: voice (3) eyes (4) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a tower, a column, city walls, a ditch and a rampart.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 280: I can say a tower, a column, city walls, a ditch and a rampart.

280.1 turris, turris — a tower

> Before the new one: say the Latin for a leek, then the Latin for porridge.

You'll want to know: turris, turris

turris, turris — "a tower".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

turris was borrowed from Greek tyrris, "a tower" (Lewis & Short), a word perhaps from Asia Minor. English tower comes from it through French.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: turris, turris
- Say it: turris, turris, once more
- Say it: say turris, turris
- Recall: say the Latin for a leek, then the Latin for porridge, then say turris, turris again

Before you move on

What does turris, turris mean? ("A tower".) Say it once more.

280.2 columna, columnae — a column

Before the new one: say the Latin for porridge, then the Latin for a tower.

You'll want to know: columna, columnae

columna, columnae — "a column".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

columna is a form beside columen, "a top, a pillar" (Lewis & Short), usually traced to Proto-Indo-European kelH-*, "to rise" (EtymDB 2.1), the root of collis, "a hill".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: columna, columnae
- Say it: columna, columnae, once more
- Say it: say columna, columnae
- Recall: say the Latin for porridge, then the Latin for a tower, then say columna, columnae again

Before you move on

What does columna, columnae mean? (“A column”.) Say it once more.

280.3 moenia, moenium — city walls

Before the new one: say the Latin for a tower, then the Latin for a column.

You’ll want to know: moenia, moenium

moenia, moenium — “city walls”.

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

moenia belongs with mūniō, “to fortify, to wall in” (Lewis & Short); the deeper origin is uncertain.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: moenia, moenium
- Say it: moenia, moenium, once more
- Say it: say moenia, moenium
- Recall: say the Latin for a tower, then the Latin for a column, then say moenia, moenium again

Before you move on

What does moenia, moenium mean? (“City walls”.) Say it once more.

280.4 fossa, fossae — a ditch

Before the new one: say the Latin for a column, then the Latin for city walls.

You'll want to know: fossa, fossae

fossa, fossae — "a ditch".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

fossa is the feminine past participle of fodiō, "to dig" (Lewis & Short), with terra, "earth", understood: dug earth, a ditch.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fossa, fossae
- Say it: fossa, fossae, once more
- Say it: say fossa, fossae
- Recall: say the Latin for a column, then the Latin for city walls, then say fossa, fossae again

Before you move on

What does fossa, fossae mean? ("A ditch".) Say it once more.

280.5 vallum, vallī — a rampart

Before the new one: say the Latin for city walls, then the Latin for a ditch.

You'll want to know: vallum, vallī

vallum, vallī — "a rampart".

The word, taken apart — its English and Romance children

vallum is built on vallus, "a stake" (Lewis & Short): a line of stakes, a palisade. vallus is usually traced to Proto-Indo-European welH-*, "to turn, to twist" (EtymDB 2.1). English wall was borrowed from it early.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vallum, vallī
- Say it: vallum, vallī, once more
- Say it: say vallum, vallī
- Recall: say the Latin for city walls, then the Latin for a ditch, then say vallum, vallī again

Before you move on

What does vallum, vallī mean? ("A rampart".) Say it once more.

280.6 Words from chapters 273-276 — a first pass

Say the words for a ditch and a rampart.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a wedding, a husband or wife, a parent, a grandson, a granddaughter
- leisure, business, profit, loss, a debt
- silk, mud, dust, smoke, ash
- a wasp, a gnat, a flea, a worm, a tortoise

Before you move on

A wedding? (nūptiae, nūptiārum.) A husband or wife? (coniūnx, coniugis.) A parent? (parēns, parentis.) A grandson? (nepōs, nepōtis.) A granddaughter? (neptis, neptis.) Leisure? (ōtium, ōtiī.) Business? (negōtium, negōtiī.) Profit? (lucrum, lucrī.) Loss? (damnum, damnī.) A debt? (dēbitum, dēbitī.) Silk? (sēricum, sēricī.) Mud? (lutum, lutī.) Dust? (pulvis, pulveris.) Smoke? (fūmus, fūmī.) Ash? (cinis, cineris.) A wasp? (vespa, vespae.) A gnat? (culex, culicis.) A flea? (pūlex, pūlicis.) A worm? (vermis, vermis.) A tortoise? (testūdō, testūdinis.)

280.7 Words from chapters 277-280 — a second pass

Say the words for a helmet and a spear.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a helmet, a spear, a bow; an arch, an arrow, a trumpet
- a book-roll, a page, a letter of the alphabet, a word, a name
- a cherry, a plum, cabbage, a leek, porridge
- a tower, a column, city walls, a ditch, a rampart

Before you move on

A helmet? (galea, galeae.) A spear? (hasta, hastae.) A bow; an arch? (arcus, arcūs.) An arrow? (sagitta, sagittae.) A trumpet? (tuba, tubae.) A book-roll? (volūmen, volūminis.) A page? (pāgina, pāginae.) A letter of the alphabet? (littera, litterae.) A word? (verbum, verbī.) A name? (nōmen, nōminis.) A cherry? (cerasum, cerasī.) A plum? (prūnum, prūnī.) Cabbage? (brassica, brassicae.) A leek? (porrum, porrī.) Porridge? (puls, pultis.) A tower? (turris, turris.) A column?

(columna, columnae.) City walls? (moenia, moenium.) A ditch? (fossa, fossae.) A rampart? (vallum, vallī.)

How Latin sounds — a reference

A reference, not a chapter — the lessons teach the sounds through real words. This page gathers the classical scheme (the one this course uses).

The three facts

1. Every letter is sounded, always the same way. No silent letters and, in the classical scheme, no "soft" consonants: c and g are always hard (Cicero = KIH-keh-ro, not "SIS-er-o"), v is w, s is always hissed (never "z"), r is trilled.
2. Vowels come long or short, marked by a macron. ā ē ī ō ū are held longer than a e i o u — same quality, more time. Length can change meaning (malum "evil" vs. mālum "apple"), which is why teaching texts print macrons Romans never wrote.
3. Diphthongs: ae = "eye" (Caesar = KYE-sar), au = "ow," oe = "oy"; otherwise adjacent vowels each keep their value.

Worth flagging

- v* = w, i = y as consonants: vīnum ("wine") = WEE-noom, Iulius = YOO-lee-oos. The "v as vee / soft c" you may have heard is later Church Latin.
- Stress is predictable: two-syllable words stress the first; longer words stress the second-to-last syllable if it is long, else the one before. No accent marks are needed once you hear vowel length.
- No j, u/v split, or w: classical Latin wrote I and V for both vowel and glide; j, u, w are medieval/modern additions.

Latin in the family

Latin is Italic, a branch of Indo-European — cousin to Greek, to the Germanic languages (English among them), and, further off, to Sanskrit. It was the speech of Rome, then of an empire, then of the medieval church and the learned world; as it fragmented in daily use it became Spanish, Portuguese, French, Italian, Romanian, and the rest. This curriculum treats Latin as a taproot: nearly every word has both English and Romance descendants, traced in the lessons — and its sister taproot, Sanskrit, shares the same Indo-European negative (nōn / na) and the family of mother/ father words.

Glossary

This glossary collects every word and phrase taught in the book. Pronunciation appears when it differs from the written form; chapter numbers show where each entry is introduced.

abiciō, abicere
to throw away
Introduced in Chapter 167.

accendō, accendere
to light, to kindle
Introduced in Chapter 165.

accidō, accidere
to happen
Introduced in Chapter 162.

accipiō, obtineō
"I get" — two verbs, each one a prefix bolted onto a verb you already know, and each one bent out of shape by the join
Introduced in Chapter 42.

acerbus, acerba, acerbum
sour, unripe
Introduced in Chapter 145.

acētum, acētī
vinegar
Introduced in Chapter 195.

acus, acūs
a needle
Introduced in Chapter 140.

acūtus, acūta, acūtum
sharp
Introduced in Chapter 144.

addō, addere
to add
Introduced in Chapter 230.

adhūc
still, until now
Introduced in Chapter 175.

adiuvō, adiuvāre
"I help" — the verb hiding inside English aid, aide and adjutant, and no relation to juvenile Introduced in Chapter 39.

admīror, admīrārī
to admire
Introduced in Chapter 170.

admodum
quite, very
Introduced in Chapter 179.

adulēscēns, adulēscentis
a young person
Introduced in Chapter 220.

advena, advenae
a newcomer
Introduced in Chapter 220.

adveniō, advenīre
to arrive
Introduced in Chapter 160.

adversus, adversa, adversum
facing, unfavourable
Introduced in Chapter 268.

aedificium, aedificiī
a building
Introduced in Chapter 116.

aedificō, aedificāre
to build
Introduced in Chapter 153.

aeger, aegra, aegrum
sick, ill
Introduced in Chapter 68.

aes, aeris
bronze; money
Introduced in Chapter 222.

aetās, aetātis
age, a lifetime
Introduced in Chapter 207.

affirmō, affirmāre
to state firmly
Introduced in Chapter 204.

ager, agrī
a field
Introduced in Chapter 74.

agnōscō, agnōscere
to recognise
Introduced in Chapter 200.

agnus, agnī
a lamb
Introduced in Chapter 224.

agō, agere
to do, to drive
Introduced in Chapter 202.

agricola, agricolae
a farmer
Introduced in Chapter 74.

alibī
elsewhere
Introduced in Chapter 177.

aliquandō
at some time, once
Introduced in Chapter 263.

ālium, āliī
garlic
Introduced in Chapter 126.

alius, alia, aliud
other, another
Introduced in Chapter 242.

alō, alere
to feed, to nourish
Introduced in Chapter 260.

alter, altera, alterum
the second of two, the other
Introduced in Chapter 268.

altus, alta, altum
high; deep
Introduced in Chapter 93.

ambulō, ambulāre
"I walk" — the verb behind ambulance, preamble and the pram, and a rare case where the front half is clear and the back half is not
Introduced in Chapter 41.

amīca, amīcae
a friend (a woman)
Introduced in Chapter 138.

amīcitia, amīcitiae
friendship
Introduced in Chapter 236.

amīcus, amīcī
the friend — from the verb to love, and the word the bread lesson pointed at and did not give Introduced in Chapter 51.

amita, amitae
an aunt (father's sister)
Introduced in Chapter 72.

amō, amāre
"I love" — the chapter's fourth verb, the first thing generations of pupils ever chanted, and the word inside enemy
Introduced in Chapter 39.

amor, amōris
love
Introduced in Chapter 236.

amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī
an amphitheatre
Introduced in Chapter 244.

amphora, amphorae
a two-handled jar
Introduced in Chapter 123.

ampulla, ampullae
a small flask, a phial
Introduced in Chapter 252.

anas, anatis
a duck
Introduced in Chapter 131.

ancilla, ancillae
a maidservant
Introduced in Chapter 220.

ancora, ancorae
an anchor
Introduced in Chapter 270.

angulus, angulī
a corner
Introduced in Chapter 116.

angustus, angusta, angustum narrow
Introduced in Chapter 143.

anima, animae
breath, soul
Introduced in Chapter 206.

animadvertō, animadvertere
to notice
Introduced in Chapter 260.

animus, animī
mind, spirit
Introduced in Chapter 174.

annus, annī
a year
Introduced in Chapter 103.

ānser, ānseris
a goose
Introduced in Chapter 132.

ante
before, in front of — the word that puts one thing ahead of another Introduced in Chapter 57.

anteā
before, previously
Introduced in Chapter 162.

antīquus, antīqua, antīquum
ancient, old-fashioned
Introduced in Chapter 143.

ānulus, ānulī
a ring
Introduced in Chapter 85.

anxius, anxia, anxium anxious Introduced in Chapter 212.

aper, aprī
a wild boar
Introduced in Chapter 224.

aperiō, aperīre
"I open" — half of a matched pair, built from one root with two opposite prefixes
Introduced in Chapter 41.

apis, apis
a bee
Introduced in Chapter 132.

appāreō, appārēre
to appear
Introduced in Chapter 230.

appropinquō, appropinquāre
to approach
Introduced in Chapter 169.

aptus, apta, aptum
fit, suited
Introduced in Chapter 268.

apud
at the house of, among
Introduced in Chapter 238.

aqua, vīnum
water and wine — one word French wore down to almost nothing, one that barely changed anywhere Introduced in Chapter 10.

aquaeductus, aquaeductūs
an aqueduct
Introduced in Chapter 244.

aquila, aquilae
an eagle
Introduced in Chapter 131.

āra, ārae
an altar
Introduced in Chapter 253.

arānea, arāneae
a spider
Introduced in Chapter 133.

arātrum, arātrī
a plough
Introduced in Chapter 142.

arbor, arboris
a tree
Introduced in Chapter 86.

arca, arcae
a chest, a box
Introduced in Chapter 84.

architectus, architectī
an architect
Introduced in Chapter 188.

arcus, arcūs
a bow; an arch
Introduced in Chapter 277.

ārdeō, ārdēre
to burn, to be on fire
Introduced in Chapter 167.

ārea, āreae
an open space, a courtyard
Introduced in Chapter 119.

argentārius, argentāriī
a banker
Introduced in Chapter 272.

argenteus, argentea, argenteum
silver
Introduced in Chapter 149.

argentum, argentī
silver
Introduced in Chapter 222.

armārium, armāriī
a cupboard
Introduced in Chapter 138.

armilla, armillae
a bracelet
Introduced in Chapter 193.

ars, artis
a skill, a craft
Introduced in Chapter 110.

ascendō, ascendere
to climb, to go up
Introduced in Chapter 153.

asinus, asinī
a donkey
Introduced in Chapter 92.

asper, aspera, asperum
rough, harsh
Introduced in Chapter 240.

ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī
ink
Introduced in Chapter 124.

ātrium, ātriī
the main hall of a house
Introduced in Chapter 116.

audāx, audācis
bold
Introduced in Chapter 150.

audeō, audēre
to dare
Introduced in Chapter 109.

audiō, audīre
"I hear" — the verb inside audio, audience and audit, and, less obviously, inside obey
Introduced in Chapter 40.

augeō, augēre
to increase
Introduced in Chapter 256.

aura, aurae
a breeze
Introduced in Chapter 223.

aureus, aurea, aureum
golden
Introduced in Chapter 149.

auris, auris
the ear — and the reason a Roman listened by obeying
Introduced in Chapter 54.

aurōra, aurōrae
the dawn
Introduced in Chapter 103.

aurum, aurī
gold
Introduced in Chapter 222.

aut
or — and the second or, which asks a different question
Introduced in Chapter 48.

autem
moreover; however
Introduced in Chapter 210.

avārus, avāra, avārum
greedy
Introduced in Chapter 269.

avē / avēte
hail (a formal greeting)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

avia, aviae
a grandmother
Introduced in Chapter 70.

avis, avis
a bird
Introduced in Chapter 91.

avunculus, avunculī
a mother's brother, an uncle
Introduced in Chapter 189.

avus, avī
a grandfather
Introduced in Chapter 70.

balaena, balaenae
a whale
Introduced in Chapter 135.

balneum, balneī
a bath, a bathhouse
Introduced in Chapter 115.

barba, barbae
a beard
Introduced in Chapter 65.

barbātus, barbāta, barbātum bearded
Introduced in Chapter 216.

basilica, basilicae
a hall of justice
Introduced in Chapter 270.

beātus, beāta, beātum
blessed, fortunate
Introduced in Chapter 243.

bellum, bellī
war
Introduced in Chapter 271.

bene
"well" — a morphologically simple inheritance: French bien and Spanish bien are just bene plus one regular sound change (the same short-e-diphthongizes-to-ie shift as mel→miel), with no extra grafted-on suffix, unlike quōmodo's more roundabout Romance history
Introduced in Chapter 27.

beneficium, beneficiī
a kindness, a favour
Introduced in Chapter 248.

benignus, benigna, benignum
kind
Introduced in Chapter 151.

bibliothēca, bibliothēcae
a library
Introduced in Chapter 117.

bibō, bibere
I drink — the verb inside beverage, bib and imbibe
Introduced in Chapter 54.

bis
twice
Introduced in Chapter 176.

bonam noctem
"good night" — genuine Latin grammar (wishes take the accusative, not the nominative), though the fixed phrase itself may be a later/modern convention rather than a directly-attested ancient formula Introduced in Chapter 30.

bonum māne
"good morning" — a modern, pedagogical phrase (not classically attested); unlike bonam noctem, its grammar is genuinely invisible, since māne is neuter and Latin neuters never distinguish nominative from accusative — Romans instead had a real, richly documented morning GREETING RITUAL, the salūtātiō, whose root is a doublet of salvē's own
Introduced in Chapter 32.

bonum vesperum
"good evening" — a modern, pedagogical phrase (not classically attested), but unlike bonum māne, this one CAN show the real Accusative-of-Exclamation grammar again, since vesper is masculine, not neuter
Introduced in Chapter 34.

bōs, bovis
an ox, a cow
Introduced in Chapter 90.

bracchium, bracchiī
an arm
Introduced in Chapter 63.

brassica, brassicae
cabbage
Introduced in Chapter 279.

brevī
shortly, soon
Introduced in Chapter 263.

brevis, breve
short, brief
Introduced in Chapter 93.

cacūmen, cacūminis
a peak, a tip
Introduced in Chapter 228.

cadō, cadere
to fall
Introduced in Chapter 77.

caecus, caeca, caecum
blind
Introduced in Chapter 144.

caelebs, caelibis
unmarried
Introduced in Chapter 241.

caelum, caelī
the sky, and the heavens — the word under celestial, and under a ceiling painted like the sky
Introduced in Chapter 45.

calamus, calamī
a reed pen
Introduced in Chapter 124.

calceus, calceī
a shoe
Introduced in Chapter 108.

calefaciō, calefacere
to warm, to heat
Introduced in Chapter 255.

calidus, calida, calidum
hot, warm
Introduced in Chapter 95.

cālīgō, cālīginis
mist, darkness
Introduced in Chapter 223.

calix, calicis
a cup
Introduced in Chapter 141.

callidus, callida, callidum
clever, cunning
Introduced in Chapter 267.

calvus, calva, calvum
bald
Introduced in Chapter 216.

camēlus, camēlī
a camel
Introduced in Chapter 134.

campus, campī
a plain, an open field
Introduced in Chapter 89.

cancer, cancrī
a crab
Introduced in Chapter 192.

candēla, candēlae
a candle
Introduced in Chapter 121.

candēlābrum, candēlābrī
a candlestick
Introduced in Chapter 252.

canis, fēlēs, cattus
dog and (two words for) cat — canis is the "expected" ancestor Spanish's perro mysteriously replaced; fēlēs was Classical Latin's OWN word for cat, later pushed out by the newcomer cattus
Introduced in Chapter 17.

canō, canere
to sing
Introduced in Chapter 75.

cantō, cantāre
to sing
Introduced in Chapter 154.

cānus, cāna, cānum
grey
Introduced in Chapter 149.

caper, caprī
a billy goat
Introduced in Chapter 224.

capillus, capillī
a hair, the hair
Introduced in Chapter 65.

capiō, capere
"I take" — the verb the habeō lesson promised, and the true relative of English have Introduced in Chapter 39.

capra, caprae
a goat
Introduced in Chapter 90.

caput
the head — the word French abandoned, but Spanish and English kept working hard Introduced in Chapter 8.

carbō, carbōnis
charcoal
Introduced in Chapter 191.

carcer, carceris
a prison
Introduced in Chapter 116.

carmen, carminis
a song, a poem
Introduced in Chapter 246.

carō, carnis
meat
Introduced in Chapter 79.

cārus, cāra, cārum
dear; costly
Introduced in Chapter 97.

cāseus, cāseī
cheese
Introduced in Chapter 80.

castra, castrōrum
a military camp
Introduced in Chapter 115.

cāsus, cāsūs
an accident, a fall
Introduced in Chapter 221.

catēna, catēnae
a chain
Introduced in Chapter 251.

cathedra, cathedrae
a chair with a back
Introduced in Chapter 139.

catīnus, catīnī
a bowl, a deep dish
Introduced in Chapter 121.

catulus, catulī
a puppy
Introduced in Chapter 251.

caupō, caupōnis
an innkeeper
Introduced in Chapter 272.

caupōna, caupōnae
an inn
Introduced in Chapter 117.

causa, causae
a reason, a cause
Introduced in Chapter 113.

cautus, cauta, cautum
careful
Introduced in Chapter 150.

celeber, celebris, celebre
famous, crowded
Introduced in Chapter 183.

celebrō, celebrāre
to celebrate
Introduced in Chapter 201.

celer, celeris, celere
fast, quick
Introduced in Chapter 94.

cella, cellae
a storeroom, a small room
Introduced in Chapter 185.

cēna, cēnae
dinner, the main meal
Introduced in Chapter 79.

cēnō, cēnāre
to dine
Introduced in Chapter 158.

centum
a hundred
Introduced in Chapter 106.

cēpa, cēpae
an onion
Introduced in Chapter 126.

cēra, cērae
wax; a wax tablet
Introduced in Chapter 124.

cerasum, cerasī
a cherry
Introduced in Chapter 279.

cerebrum, cerebrī
the brain
Introduced in Chapter 173.

certus, certa, certum
sure, certain
Introduced in Chapter 147.

cervīsia, cervīsiae
beer
Introduced in Chapter 128.

cervus, cervī
a deer, a stag
Introduced in Chapter 92.

cessō, cessāre
to hold off, to be idle
Introduced in Chapter 229.

cēterī, cēterae, cētera
the others, the remaining
Introduced in Chapter 242.

charta, chartae
paper, a sheet
Introduced in Chapter 84.

cibus, cibī
food
Introduced in Chapter 79.

cicātrīx, cicātrīcis
a scar
Introduced in Chapter 205.

cicōnia, cicōniae
a stork
Introduced in Chapter 192.

cinis, cineris
ash
Introduced in Chapter 275.

circā around
Introduced in Chapter 119.

circus, circī
a racecourse
Introduced in Chapter 270.

cista, cistae
a box, a chest
Introduced in Chapter 120.

citrā
on this side
Introduced in Chapter 238.

cīvis, cīvis
a citizen
Introduced in Chapter 74.

cīvitās, cīvitātis
a state; citizenship
Introduced in Chapter 271.

clāmō, clāmāre
to shout
Introduced in Chapter 165.

clārus, clāra, clārum
bright, clear; famous
Introduced in Chapter 96.

claudō, claudere
"I close" — the word English calls close, and the fourth of four
Introduced in Chapter 41.

claudus, clauda, claudum
lame
Introduced in Chapter 184.

clāva, clāvae
a club
Introduced in Chapter 251.

clāvus, clāvī
a nail (to hammer)
Introduced in Chapter 122.

cochlear, cochleāris
a spoon
Introduced in Chapter 121.

coctus, cocta, coctum
cooked
Introduced in Chapter 181.

cōdex, cōdicis
a book (of bound pages)
Introduced in Chapter 124.

cōgitō, cōgitāre
"I think" — the verb of cōgitō ergō sum, built from a word meaning "to shake together"
Introduced in Chapter 38.

cognātus, cognātī
a blood relative
Introduced in Chapter 189.

cognōscō, cognōscere
to get to know, to learn
Introduced in Chapter 99.

cōgō, cōgere
to force; to collect
Introduced in Chapter 261.

colligō, colligere
to gather, to collect
Introduced in Chapter 234.

collis, collis
a hill
Introduced in Chapter 88.

colloquor, colloquī
to talk together
Introduced in Chapter 201.

collum, collī
the neck
Introduced in Chapter 64.

colōnus, colōnī
a tenant farmer
Introduced in Chapter 188.

columba, columbae
a dove, a pigeon
Introduced in Chapter 131.

columna, columnae
a column
Introduced in Chapter 280.

comitor, comitārī
to accompany
Introduced in Chapter 230.

commendō, commendāre
to recommend, to entrust
Introduced in Chapter 259.

commodō, commodāre
to lend
Introduced in Chapter 168.

commodus, commoda, commodum
convenient, comfortable
Introduced in Chapter 180.

commūnis, commūne
common, shared
Introduced in Chapter 182.

comparō, comparāre
to compare; to get ready
Introduced in Chapter 199.

compōnō, compōnere
to put together, to arrange Introduced in Chapter 260.

computō, computāre
to calculate
Introduced in Chapter 167.

condō, condere
to found; to hide away
Introduced in Chapter 171.

coniciō, conicere
to throw together; to guess
Introduced in Chapter 204.

coniūnx, coniugis
a husband or wife, a spouse
Introduced in Chapter 273.

cōnsilium, cōnsiliī
a plan; advice
Introduced in Chapter 163.

cōnstituō, cōnstituere
to decide, to set up
Introduced in Chapter 163.

cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere
to get used to
Introduced in Chapter 169.

cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis
a habit, a custom
Introduced in Chapter 206.

cōnsul, cōnsulis
a consul
Introduced in Chapter 245.

cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere
to use up
Introduced in Chapter 203.

contrā
opposite, against
Introduced in Chapter 119.

conveniō, occurrō
"I meet" — two verbs for meeting, each one a prefix on a verb you already know, and the verb hiding inside a phrase from chapter 21
Introduced in Chapter 43.

convīvium, convīviī a banquet
Introduced in Chapter 253.

coquō, coquere
to cook
Introduced in Chapter 76.

coquus, coquī
a cook
Introduced in Chapter 74.

cor, cordis
the heart
Introduced in Chapter 64.

cōram
face to face
Introduced in Chapter 238.

corium, coriī
hide, leather
Introduced in Chapter 249.

corōna, corōnae
a crown, a garland
Introduced in Chapter 85.

corrigō, corrigere
to straighten, to correct
Introduced in Chapter 201.

corvus, corvī
a raven
Introduced in Chapter 131.

cotīdiē
every day
Introduced in Chapter 237.

crās tē vidēbō
"see you tomorrow" — built from two genuinely classical pieces (crās, "tomorrow," and vidēbō, already met last lesson) using the exact same pattern as the attested propediem tē vidēbō, though this specific combination isn't itself pulled from one surviving letter
Introduced in Chapter 25.

crassus, crassa, crassum
thick, fat
Introduced in Chapter 144.

crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum
tomorrow's
Introduced in Chapter 215.

crēber, crēbra, crēbrum
frequent, crowded
Introduced in Chapter 214.

crēdō, crēdere
to believe, to trust
Introduced in Chapter 171.

creō, creāre
to create, to elect
Introduced in Chapter 171.

crēscō, crēscere
to grow
Introduced in Chapter 158.

crīmen, crīminis
a charge, a crime
Introduced in Chapter 218.

crūdēlis, crūdēle
cruel
Introduced in Chapter 151.

crūdus, crūda, crūdum
raw
Introduced in Chapter 181.

crumēna, crumēnae
a purse
Introduced in Chapter 123.

crūs, crūris
a leg, a shin
Introduced in Chapter 66.

cubiculum, cubiculī
a bedroom
Introduced in Chapter 82.

cubīle, cubīlis
a lair, a resting place
Introduced in Chapter 227.

cubitum, cubitī
an elbow
Introduced in Chapter 136.

cucumis, cucumeris
a cucumber
Introduced in Chapter 127.

culcita, culcitae
a mattress
Introduced in Chapter 225.

culex, culicis
a gnat, a mosquito
Introduced in Chapter 276.

culīna, culīnae
a kitchen
Introduced in Chapter 83.

culter, cultrī
a knife
Introduced in Chapter 83.

cupiditās, cupiditātis
a desire, eagerness
Introduced in Chapter 112.

cupiō, cupere
to desire, to long for Introduced in Chapter 111.

cūr
why — and the two words that answer it
Introduced in Chapter 52.

cūra, cūrae
care, worry
Introduced in Chapter 68.

cūria, cūriae
the senate house
Introduced in Chapter 270.

cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum
inquisitive, painstaking
Introduced in Chapter 212.

cūrō, cūrāre
to care for
Introduced in Chapter 99.

currō, currere
"I run" — the verb inside current, curriculum, courier and corridor, and, by way of a Celtic wagon, inside car
Introduced in Chapter 41.

currus, currūs
a chariot
Introduced in Chapter 217.

cutis, cutis
the skin
Introduced in Chapter 136.

damnum, damnī
loss, damage
Introduced in Chapter 274.

dea, deae
a goddess
Introduced in Chapter 253.

dēbeō, dēbēre
to have to, must; to owe
Introduced in Chapter 109.

dēbitum, dēbitī
a debt
Introduced in Chapter 274.

dēcernō, dēcernere
to decree, to settle
Introduced in Chapter 229.

decimus, decima, decimum
tenth — and the tax that took one in ten
Introduced in Chapter 56.

dēfendō, dēfendere
to defend
Introduced in Chapter 198.

dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum
worn out Introduced in Chapter 216.

deinde
then, next
Introduced in Chapter 101.

dēleō, dēlēre
to destroy, to wipe out
Introduced in Chapter 160.

delphīnus, delphīnī
a dolphin
Introduced in Chapter 134.

dēmittō, dēmittere
to let down, to lower
Introduced in Chapter 234.

dēnārius, dēnāriī
a denarius (silver coin)
Introduced in Chapter 190.

dēnique
finally
Introduced in Chapter 208.

dēns, dentis
a tooth
Introduced in Chapter 63.

deorsum
downwards
Introduced in Chapter 264.

dēscendō, dēscendere
to go down
Introduced in Chapter 153.

dēsīderium, dēsīderiī
a longing
Introduced in Chapter 112.

dēsīderō, dēsīderāre
to miss, to long for
Introduced in Chapter 111.

dēsinō, dēsinere
to cease
Introduced in Chapter 204.

dēsistō, dēsistere
to give up
Introduced in Chapter 259.

dēsum, deesse
to be missing, to fail
Introduced in Chapter 231.

dētegō, dētegere
to uncover, to discover
Introduced in Chapter 232.

dēversōrium, dēversōriī
a lodging house
Introduced in Chapter 227.

dexter, dextra, dextrum
right (not left)
Introduced in Chapter 114.

dīcō, dīcere
"I say" — a verb that originally meant "point out", which is why English got both dictionary and teach from it
Introduced in Chapter 37.

diēs
"day" — the word you've already been using all along, inside diēs Lūnae and medius diēs, now on its own
Introduced in Chapter 28.

diēs Lūnae, Mārtis, Mercuriī, Iovis, Veneris the weekdays (Monday–Friday) — the full, un-worn-down planet-god phrases
Introduced in Chapter 5.

diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis
a birthday
Introduced in Chapter 195.

diēs Saturnī, diēs Sōlis
Saturday and Sunday — Rome's own pagan names, and how Christianity later renamed them
Introduced in Chapter 5.

difficilis, difficile difficult
Introduced in Chapter 97.

digitus, digitī
a finger
Introduced in Chapter 63.

dīligēns, dīligentis
hard-working
Introduced in Chapter 150.

dīlūculum, dīlūculī
first light, daybreak
Introduced in Chapter 207.

discēdō, discēdere
to go away, to leave
Introduced in Chapter 160.

discipulus, discipulī
the pupil — from learning, and the reason discipline means what it does Introduced in Chapter 53.

discrīmen, discrīminis
a difference; a crisis
Introduced in Chapter 221.

disputō, disputāre
to discuss, to argue Introduced in Chapter 166.

diū
for a long time
Introduced in Chapter 263.

dīversus, dīversa, dīversum different
Introduced in Chapter 266.

dīves, dīvitis
rich
Introduced in Chapter 98.

dō, dare
"I give" — the last of the chapter's eight verbs, and the one that gave English data, date, tradition and dose
Introduced in Chapter 37.

doleō, dolēre
to hurt, to grieve
Introduced in Chapter 204.

dolor, dolōris
pain, grief
Introduced in Chapter 67.

domesticus, domestica, domesticum
of the home, tame
Introduced in Chapter 214.

domina, dominae
a mistress, the lady of the house
Introduced in Chapter 138.

domus, domūs
the house — the building a family lives in, and the root under domestic, dome and dominate Introduced in Chapter 44.

dōnec
until; while
Introduced in Chapter 175.

dormiō, dormīre
"I sleep" — the verb behind dormitory and dormant, and the one word English may only look as though it borrowed Introduced in Chapter 40.

dorsum, dorsī
the back
Introduced in Chapter 135.

dubitō, dubitāre
to doubt, to hesitate
Introduced in Chapter 203.

dubius, dubia, dubium
doubtful
Introduced in Chapter 243.

dūcō, dūcere
to lead
Introduced in Chapter 154.

dulcis, dulce
sweet
Introduced in Chapter 95.

dūrus, dūra, dūrum
hard
Introduced in Chapter 143.

dux, ducis
a leader
Introduced in Chapter 187.

ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium
drunk
Introduced in Chapter 269.

edō, esse
I eat — and the infinitive that collides with to be Introduced in Chapter 54.

elephantus, elephantī
an elephant
Introduced in Chapter 92.

ēmendō, ēmendāre
to correct (a fault)
Introduced in Chapter 257.

emō, emere
"I buy" — a verb that once meant simply "I take", which is the only reason redeem, example and premium mean what they do
Introduced in Chapter 43.

emplastrum, emplastrī
a plaster, a dressing
Introduced in Chapter 236.

enim
for, you see
Introduced in Chapter 113.

eō, īre
"I go" — the shortest verb in Latin, whose bare stem is a single vowel
Introduced in Chapter 37.

epistula, epistulae
a letter — a Greek word Rome borrowed, and the thing Cicero wrote in his letters Introduced in Chapter 51.

equus, equī
a horse
Introduced in Chapter 90.

errō, errāre
to wander; to be wrong
Introduced in Chapter 101.

ērubēscō, ērubēscere
to blush
Introduced in Chapter 260.

et
and — and the enclitic -que, which does the same job glued to the back of a word Introduced in Chapter 49.

etsī
even if
Introduced in Chapter 178.

ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere
to vanish
Introduced in Chapter 234.

ēventus, ēventūs
an outcome
Introduced in Chapter 221.

excipiō, excipere
to welcome, to receive
Introduced in Chapter 202.

expergīscor, expergīscī
to wake up
Introduced in Chapter 230.

explicō, explicāre
to explain, to unfold
Introduced in Chapter 197.

exprimō, exprimere
to press out, to express
Introduced in Chapter 260.

exspectō, exspectāre
"I wait" — to wait, in Latin, is to look out for something, and the four verbs of this chapter together
Introduced in Chapter 42.

exstinguō, exstinguere
to put out
Introduced in Chapter 165.

extrā outside, beyond
Introduced in Chapter 102.

exuō, exuere
to take off (clothes)
Introduced in Chapter 155.

faba, fabae
a bean
Introduced in Chapter 127.

faber, fabrī
a craftsman, a smith
Introduced in Chapter 137.

fābula, fābulae
a story, a play
Introduced in Chapter 219.

facilis, facile
easy
Introduced in Chapter 97.

faciō, facere
to make, to do
Introduced in Chapter 155.

facultās, facultātis
a chance, the means to do something
Introduced in Chapter 110.

fācundus, fācunda, fācundum eloquent Introduced in Chapter 184.

fallō, fallere
to deceive
Introduced in Chapter 171.

falsus, falsa, falsum
false
Introduced in Chapter 147.

fāma, fāmae
reputation, rumour
Introduced in Chapter 219.

famēs, famis
hunger
Introduced in Chapter 68.

familia, familiae
a family, a household
Introduced in Chapter 70.

farīna, farīnae
flour
Introduced in Chapter 81.

fātum, fātī
fate
Introduced in Chapter 227.

fax, facis
a torch
Introduced in Chapter 139.

febris, febris
a fever
Introduced in Chapter 67.

fēlīx, fēlīcis
lucky, happy
Introduced in Chapter 148.

fēmina, fēminae
a woman
Introduced in Chapter 72.

fenestra, fenestrae
a window
Introduced in Chapter 82.

ferē about, nearly
Introduced in Chapter 210.

fēriae, fēriārum
holidays
Introduced in Chapter 253.

ferō, ferre
"I bring, I carry" — one verb built out of two unrelated roots, and the parent of transfer, refer, prefer, differ, offer and suffer
Introduced in Chapter 42.

ferōx, ferōcis
fierce
Introduced in Chapter 145.

ferrum, ferrī
iron
Introduced in Chapter 222.

ferus, fera, ferum
wild
Introduced in Chapter 214.

fessus, fessa, fessum
tired
Introduced in Chapter 68.

festīnō, festīnāre
to hurry
Introduced in Chapter 158.

fīcus, fīcī
a fig, a fig tree
Introduced in Chapter 81.

fīdēlis, fīdēle
loyal
Introduced in Chapter 243.

fidēs, fideī
trust, faith
Introduced in Chapter 262.

fīdus, fīda, fīdum
faithful
Introduced in Chapter 243.

figulus, figulī
a potter
Introduced in Chapter 188.

fīlia, fīliae
a daughter
Introduced in Chapter 70.

fīlius, fīliī
a son
Introduced in Chapter 70.

fīlum, fīlī
a thread
Introduced in Chapter 140.

fingō, fingere
to shape, to imagine
Introduced in Chapter 231.

fīnis, fīnis
the end; a boundary
Introduced in Chapter 237.

fleō, flēre
to weep
Introduced in Chapter 75.

flōs, flōris
a flower
Introduced in Chapter 86.

flūmen, flūminis
a river
Introduced in Chapter 87.

fluvius, fluviī
a running stream, a river
Introduced in Chapter 196.

focus, focī
the hearth — the fire in the middle of the house, and the reason a lens has a focus Introduced in Chapter 44.

fodiō, fodere
to dig
Introduced in Chapter 261.

folium, foliī
a leaf
Introduced in Chapter 86.

fōns, fontis
a spring, a fountain
Introduced in Chapter 87.

forfex, forficis
scissors
Introduced in Chapter 140.

forīs
out of doors
Introduced in Chapter 177.

formīca, formīcae
an ant
Introduced in Chapter 132.

fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum
beautiful
Introduced in Chapter 151.

fornāx, fornācis
a furnace, a kiln
Introduced in Chapter 217.

fortasse
perhaps
Introduced in Chapter 239.

fortis, forte
brave, strong
Introduced in Chapter 97.

fortūna, fortūnae
fortune, luck
Introduced in Chapter 221.

forum, forī
a forum, a market square
Introduced in Chapter 107.

fossa, fossae
a ditch
Introduced in Chapter 280.

frangō, frangere
to break
Introduced in Chapter 156.

frater, soror
brother and sister — the words Vulgar Latin later abandoned in favor of germanus
Introduced in Chapter 7.

frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum
cold
Introduced in Chapter 95.

frōns, frontis
the forehead, the front
Introduced in Chapter 65.

frūmentum, frūmentī
grain, corn
Introduced in Chapter 81.

fruor, fruī
to enjoy
Introduced in Chapter 231.

frūstrā
in vain
Introduced in Chapter 211.

fugiō, fugere
to flee, to run away
Introduced in Chapter 101.

fulgur, fulguris
lightning
Introduced in Chapter 130.

fūmus, fūmī
smoke
Introduced in Chapter 275.

fundāmentum, fundāmentī
a foundation
Introduced in Chapter 185.

fūr, fūris
a thief
Introduced in Chapter 245.

furca, furcae
a fork, a pitchfork
Introduced in Chapter 142.

furnus, furnī
an oven
Introduced in Chapter 252.

fūror, fūrārī
to steal
Introduced in Chapter 232.

fuscus, fusca, fuscum
dark, dusky
Introduced in Chapter 149.

galea, galeae
a helmet
Introduced in Chapter 277.

gallīna, gallīnae
a hen
Introduced in Chapter 92.

gallus, gallī
a cockerel
Introduced in Chapter 135.

garum, garī
fish sauce
Introduced in Chapter 195.

gaudeō, gaudēre
to rejoice, to be glad
Introduced in Chapter 78.

gaudium, gaudiī
joy
Introduced in Chapter 69.

gelidus, gelida, gelidum
icy
Introduced in Chapter 152.

geminus, geminī
a twin
Introduced in Chapter 247.

gemma, gemmae
a gem; a bud
Introduced in Chapter 225.

gena, genae
a cheek
Introduced in Chapter 66.

gener, generī
a son-in-law
Introduced in Chapter 247.

genū, genūs
a knee
Introduced in Chapter 64.

gerō, gerere
to carry, to wear
Introduced in Chapter 155.

gignō, gignere
to give birth to, to produce
Introduced in Chapter 261.

glaciēs, glaciēī
ice
Introduced in Chapter 130.

gladius, gladiī
a sword
Introduced in Chapter 85.

glōria, glōriae
glory
Introduced in Chapter 187.

gradus, gradūs
a step, a stair
Introduced in Chapter 117.

grammatica, grammaticae
grammar
Introduced in Chapter 226.

grandō, grandinis
hail
Introduced in Chapter 130.

grātiās (tibi) agō
thank you (lit. “I give thanks to you”)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum
free of charge
Introduced in Chapter 181.

gravēdō, gravēdinis
a head cold
Introduced in Chapter 205.

gravis, grave
heavy, serious
Introduced in Chapter 182.

gubernātor, gubernātōris
a helmsman
Introduced in Chapter 186.

gustō, gustāre
to taste
Introduced in Chapter 158.

habeō, habēre
“I have” — a verb that looks exactly like its English translation and is not related to it at all
Introduced in Chapter 37.

habitō, habitāre
to live (somewhere)
Introduced in Chapter 160.

harēna, harēnae
sand
Introduced in Chapter 88.

hasta, hastae
a spear
Introduced in Chapter 277.

herī yesterday
Introduced in Chapter 103.

hesternus, hesterna, hesternum
yesterday’s
Introduced in Chapter 215.

hic, haec, hoc
this, here by me — the near point of a three-way system Spanish still keeps Introduced in Chapter 50.

hilaris, hilare
cheerful
Introduced in Chapter 180.

historia, historiae
history
Introduced in Chapter 194.

histriō, histriōnis
an actor
Introduced in Chapter 219.

hodiē
today
Introduced in Chapter 103.

hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum
today's
Introduced in Chapter 215.

holus, holeris
vegetables, greens
Introduced in Chapter 80.

honestus, honesta, honestum
honourable
Introduced in Chapter 183.

hōra
hour — the source word itself, and the Roman hour was NOT a fixed length Introduced in Chapter 13.

hortus, hortī
the garden — an enclosed piece of ground, and a true blood relative of English yard and garden
Introduced in Chapter 44.

hospes, hospitis
a guest; a host
Introduced in Chapter 72.

hospitium, hospitiī
hospitality; lodging
Introduced in Chapter 227.

hostis, hostis
an enemy (of the state)
Introduced in Chapter 271.

hūc
to here, hither
Introduced in Chapter 115.

humilis, humile
low
Introduced in Chapter 144.

iaciō, iacere
to throw Introduced in Chapter 156.

iam
already, now
Introduced in Chapter 105.

iamdūdum
long since
Introduced in Chapter 208.

Iānuārius, Februārius, Mārtius, Aprīlis, Māius, Iūnius, Quīntīlis, Sextīlis, September, Octōber, November, December
the twelve months — and the two ORIGINAL names, Quintilis and Sextilis, before Rome renamed them Introduced in Chapter 11.

ibi
there — the place word the corpus has gone fifty chapters without Introduced in Chapter 50.

ideō
for that reason
Introduced in Chapter 113.

idōneus, idōnea, idōneum suitable
Introduced in Chapter 268.

iecur, iecoris
the liver
Introduced in Chapter 173.

ientāculum, ientāculī
breakfast
Introduced in Chapter 79.

igitur
therefore
Introduced in Chapter 178.

ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum
idle, cowardly
Introduced in Chapter 213.

ignis, ignis
fire itself — the classical word, which the Romance languages abandoned and English kept Introduced in Chapter 45.

ignōsce mihi
forgive me / I'm sorry (imperative of ignōscere, "to not-know, overlook, pardon")
Introduced in Chapter 4.

ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum
unknown
Introduced in Chapter 240.

ille, illa, illud
that, over there — the far point, and the word that became the Romance article Introduced in Chapter 50.

illīc
over there
Introduced in Chapter 177.

illicō
on the spot
Introduced in Chapter 208.

illūc
to there, thither
Introduced in Chapter 115.

immō
on the contrary
Introduced in Chapter 265.

imperātor, imperātōris
a general, an emperor
Introduced in Chapter 245.

impleō, implēre
to fill
Introduced in Chapter 255.

impluvium, impluviī
a rain basin
Introduced in Chapter 185.

inānis, ināne
hollow, vain
Introduced in Chapter 182.

incendō, incendere
to set on fire
Introduced in Chapter 167.

incertus, incerta, incertum
uncertain
Introduced in Chapter 215.

inde
from there; then
Introduced in Chapter 209.

induō, induere
to put on (clothes)
Introduced in Chapter 155.

industrius, industria, industrium industrious, active
Introduced in Chapter 241.

īnfāns, īnfantis
a baby, an infant
Introduced in Chapter 71.

īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis
unlucky, unhappy
Introduced in Chapter 243.

īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum
weak
Introduced in Chapter 152.

īnfrā
below
Introduced in Chapter 102.

ingenium, ingeniī
talent, character
Introduced in Chapter 206.

iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum
unjust
Introduced in Chapter 266.

īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis
an inscription
Introduced in Chapter 164.

īnstō, īnstāre
to press on, to insist
Introduced in Chapter 233.

intellegō, intellegere
"I understand" — literally inter plus legō, "to read between", and the ancestor of intellect and intelligence
Introduced in Chapter 38.

interdum sometimes
Introduced in Chapter 237.

intereā
meanwhile
Introduced in Chapter 263.

interficiō, interficere
to kill
Introduced in Chapter 169.

interpretor, interpretārī
to interpret, to translate
Introduced in Chapter 197.

interrumpō, interrumpere
to break off, to interrupt
Introduced in Chapter 233.

intrā
inside, within
Introduced in Chapter 102.

intrō, intrāre
to enter
Introduced in Chapter 78.

intus
within, indoors
Introduced in Chapter 177.

inūtilis, inūtile
useless
Introduced in Chapter 240.

inveniō, invenīre
to find, to come upon
Introduced in Chapter 77.

invidia, invidiae
envy
Introduced in Chapter 262.

invidus, invida, invidum
envious
Introduced in Chapter 212.

invītō, invītāre
to invite Introduced in Chapter 197.

īra, īrae
anger
Introduced in Chapter 69.

īrātus, īrāta, īrātum
angry
Introduced in Chapter 148.

is, ea, id
he, she, it — the pronoun Latin does not really have, doing the job anyway
Introduced in Chapter 50.

iste, ista, istud
that, near you — the middle point, and the one Latin used to sneer with Introduced in Chapter 50.

ita / nōn
yes / no (lit. “thus” / “not”)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

itaque
and so, therefore Introduced in Chapter 113.

iterum
again — and the repair move this book could not make Introduced in Chapter 53.

iubeō, iubēre
to order, to tell (someone to)
Introduced in Chapter 261.

iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum
pleasant
Introduced in Chapter 145.

iugum, iugī
a yoke; a ridge
Introduced in Chapter 228.

iungō, iungere
to join
Introduced in Chapter 154.

iūstus, iūsta, iūstum
fair, righteous
Introduced in Chapter 266.

iūxtā
next to, close by
Introduced in Chapter 119.

lābor, lābī
to slip, to glide
Introduced in Chapter 170.

labor, labōris
work, toil
Introduced in Chapter 248.

labōrō, labōrāre
to work
Introduced in Chapter 75.

labrum, labrī
a lip
Introduced in Chapter 135.

lac, lactis
milk — the root of lactose, lettuce and, at one remove, of the Milky Way itself
Introduced in Chapter 47.

lacerta, lacertae
a lizard
Introduced in Chapter 224.

lacrima, lacrimae
a tear
Introduced in Chapter 174.

lacus, lacūs
a lake
Introduced in Chapter 87.

laetus, laeta, laetum
happy, glad
Introduced in Chapter 69.

lagoena, lagoenae
a flask, a bottle
Introduced in Chapter 123.

lāna, lānae
wool
Introduced in Chapter 140.

lanius, laniī
a butcher
Introduced in Chapter 272.

lanterna, lanternae
a lantern
Introduced in Chapter 139.

lapis, lapidis
a stone
Introduced in Chapter 88.

latrō, latrōnis
a robber
Introduced in Chapter 245.

laudō, laudāre
to praise
Introduced in Chapter 99.

laurus, laurī
a laurel
Introduced in Chapter 250.

lavō, lavāre
to wash
Introduced in Chapter 76.

lectīca, lectīcae
a litter (carried chair)
Introduced in Chapter 217.

lectus, lectī
a bed, a couch
Introduced in Chapter 82.

lēgātus, lēgātī
an envoy
Introduced in Chapter 272.

legō, legere
"I read" — a verb that first meant "to gather", which is why English got collect, elegant, lecture and legible from it
Introduced in Chapter 38.

lentus, lenta, lentum
slow
Introduced in Chapter 94.

leō, leōnis
a lion
Introduced in Chapter 91.

lepus, leporis
a hare
Introduced in Chapter 133.

levis, leve
light (not heavy)
Introduced in Chapter 94.

levō, levāre
to lighten, to lift
Introduced in Chapter 170.

liber, librī
the book — and the bark it was written on
Introduced in Chapter 53.

līberālis, līberāle
generous
Introduced in Chapter 213.

līberī, līberōrum
children
Introduced in Chapter 71.

lībertās, lībertātis
freedom
Introduced in Chapter 187.

lībertus, lībertī
a freedman
Introduced in Chapter 220.

lībra, lībrae
a pound; a pair of scales
Introduced in Chapter 186.

lībum, lībī
a cake
Introduced in Chapter 195.

licet
it is allowed, one may
Introduced in Chapter 110.

lignum, lignī
wood, timber
Introduced in Chapter 249.

ligō, ligāre
to tie
Introduced in Chapter 233.

līlium, līlīī
a lily
Introduced in Chapter 128.

lingua, linguae
the tongue; a language
Introduced in Chapter 63.

linteum, linteī
a linen cloth, a towel
Introduced in Chapter 141.

līnum, līnī
linen, flax
Introduced in Chapter 249.

littera, litterae
a letter of the alphabet
Introduced in Chapter 278.

lītus, lītoris
a shore, a beach
Introduced in Chapter 89.

locus, locī
a place
Introduced in Chapter 114.

longē
far, by far
Introduced in Chapter 177.

longinquus, longinqua, longinquum
distant
Introduced in Chapter 181.

longus, longa, longum
long
Introduced in Chapter 93.

loquāx, loquācis
talkative
Introduced in Chapter 241.

loquor, loquī
to speak
Introduced in Chapter 235.

lūceō, lūcēre
to shine
Introduced in Chapter 157.

lucerna, lucernae
a lamp
Introduced in Chapter 83.

lucrum, lucrī
profit
Introduced in Chapter 274.

lūcus, lūcī
a sacred grove
Introduced in Chapter 196.

lūdō, lūdere
"I play" — a small verb with an outsized English family, most of which is about being fooled rather than about play
Introduced in Chapter 42.

lūgeō, lūgēre
to mourn
Introduced in Chapter 261.

lūna, lūnae
the moon — the same root as lux, worn down to mean 'the shining one'
Introduced in Chapter 46.

lupus, lupī
a wolf
Introduced in Chapter 91.

lutum, lutī
mud
Introduced in Chapter 275.

lūx, lūcis
light — the root of lucid, translucent and Lucifer, and a cousin of English light itself
Introduced in Chapter 46.

lyra, lyrae
a lyre
Introduced in Chapter 142.

macellum, macellī
a food market
Introduced in Chapter 117.

maestus, maesta, maestum
gloomy, mournful
Introduced in Chapter 269.

magister, magistrī
the teacher — the greater one, against minister, the lesser
Introduced in Chapter 53.

magnus, magna, magnum
big, great
Introduced in Chapter 93.

male
badly — the other end of the scale bene has had to itself all along
Introduced in Chapter 48.

malleus, malleī
a hammer
Introduced in Chapter 122.

mālō, mālle
to prefer
Introduced in Chapter 111.

malus, mala, malum
bad — the adjective under male, and the word Rome punned on for the apple Introduced in Chapter 48.

mandō, mandāre
to entrust, to order
Introduced in Chapter 234.

māne
"morning, early" — the word already hiding inside dē māne (the source of French demain, Italian domani, and Catalan demà, all rebuilt "tomorrow" from this phrase) and, without the dē-, the direct base of Spanish mañana too, now standing alone
Introduced in Chapter 31.

maneō, manēre
to stay, to remain
Introduced in Chapter 77.

manus
the hand — a rare feminine noun in an overwhelmingly masculine group of Latin words
Introduced in Chapter 8.

mappa, mappae
a napkin, a cloth
Introduced in Chapter 120.

mare, maris
the sea — the word that finishes Mediterranean and names every marine thing in English Introduced in Chapter 45.

marītus, marītī
a husband
Introduced in Chapter 71.

marmor, marmoris
marble
Introduced in Chapter 249.

marsuppium, marsuppiī
a money bag
Introduced in Chapter 254.

mātertera, māterterae
a mother's sister, an aunt Introduced in Chapter 189.

maximē
most, especially
Introduced in Chapter 179.

medicāmentum, medicāmentī
a drug, a medicine
Introduced in Chapter 205.

medicīna, medicīnae
medicine
Introduced in Chapter 67.

medicus, medicī
the doctor — from measuring, not from healing
Introduced in Chapter 51.

medius diēs, media nox
noon and midnight — the source phrase daughters kept whole, wore down unevenly, or eroded almost entirely
Introduced in Chapter 12.

medius, media, medium
middle, the middle of Introduced in Chapter 183.

mel, mellis
honey — the root of mellifluous and marmalade, and of molasses by way of Portuguese Introduced in Chapter 47.

meminī, meminisse
to remember
Introduced in Chapter 235.

memoria, memoriae
memory
Introduced in Chapter 206.

mendācium, mendācīī
a lie
Introduced in Chapter 189.

mēnsa, mēnsae
a table
Introduced in Chapter 82.

mēnsis, mēnsis
a month
Introduced in Chapter 103.

mēnsūra, mēnsūrae
a measure
Introduced in Chapter 186.

mentum, mentī
the chin
Introduced in Chapter 135.

mercātor, mercātōris
a merchant
Introduced in Chapter 74.

mercātus, mercātūs
a market, a fair
Introduced in Chapter 186.

mercēs, mercēdis
wages, pay
Introduced in Chapter 190.

mereor, merērī
to deserve, to earn Introduced in Chapter 257.

merīdiēs
"midday, noon" — the same medius diēs you already know, contracted into one word; Romans split the day around IT (ante/post merīdiem), not into a separate colloquial "afternoon" the way Spanish's tarde or French's après-midi do
Introduced in Chapter 35.

merx, mercis
goods, merchandise
Introduced in Chapter 164.

mētior, mētīrī
to measure
Introduced in Chapter 255.

metō, metere
to reap, to harvest
Introduced in Chapter 172.

metuō, metuere
to dread
Introduced in Chapter 258.

meus, mea, meum
my — the possessive the name lesson did without
Introduced in Chapter 52.

mīles, mīlitis
the soldier — the noun every Latin narrative turns on Introduced in Chapter 51.

mīliārium, mīliāriī
a milestone
Introduced in Chapter 119.

mīlle
a thousand
Introduced in Chapter 106.

minuō, minuere
to lessen, to decrease
Introduced in Chapter 256.

mīrus, mīra, mīrum
wonderful, strange
Introduced in Chapter 266.

misceō, miscēre
to mix
Introduced in Chapter 233.

miser, misera, miserum
wretched, unhappy
Introduced in Chapter 148.

mītis, mīte
gentle, mild
Introduced in Chapter 145.

mittō, mittere
to send
Introduced in Chapter 77.

modestus, modesta, modestum
moderate, restrained
Introduced in Chapter 184.

moenia, moenium
city walls
Introduced in Chapter 280.

molestus, molesta, molestum
annoying
Introduced in Chapter 146.

mollis, molle
soft
Introduced in Chapter 143.

moneō, monēre
to warn, to remind
Introduced in Chapter 256.

monīle, monīlis
a necklace
Introduced in Chapter 193.

mōns, montis
a mountain
Introduced in Chapter 86.

mora, morae
a delay
Introduced in Chapter 237.

morbus, morbī
an illness, a disease
Introduced in Chapter 67.

morior, morī
to die
Introduced in Chapter 198.

moveō, movēre
to move
Introduced in Chapter 99.

mox
soon
Introduced in Chapter 104.

multum
much, a lot
Introduced in Chapter 105.

mūlus, mūlī
a mule
Introduced in Chapter 134.

mūrus, mūrī
the wall — the one that keeps things out, not the one that divides a room
Introduced in Chapter 44.

mūs, mūris
a mouse
Introduced in Chapter 92.

musca, muscae
a fly
Introduced in Chapter 132.

mūsica, mūsicae
music
Introduced in Chapter 246.

mūtō, mūtāre
to change
Introduced in Chapter 159.

mūtus, mūta, mūtum
mute, silent
Introduced in Chapter 184.

nam
for (giving a reason)
Introduced in Chapter 113.

nārrō, nārrāre
to tell, to relate
Introduced in Chapter 99.

nāsus, nāsī
the nose
Introduced in Chapter 63.

natō, natāre
to swim
Introduced in Chapter 76.

nauta, nautae
a sailor
Introduced in Chapter 73.

nāvigō, nāvigāre
to sail
Introduced in Chapter 100.

nebula, nebulae
fog, mist
Introduced in Chapter 131.

necessārius, necessāria, necessārium
necessary
Introduced in Chapter 240.

negō, negāre
to deny, to say no
Introduced in Chapter 172.

negōtium, negōtiī
business
Introduced in Chapter 274.

nēmō, nēminis nobody, no one
Introduced in Chapter 161.

nemus, nemoris
a grove
Introduced in Chapter 196.

nepōs, nepōtis
a grandson
Introduced in Chapter 273.

neptis, neptis
a granddaughter
Introduced in Chapter 273.

neque
and not, nor
Introduced in Chapter 161.

nesciō, nescīre
I do not know — and the rule the whole chapter turns on: nōn stands in front of the verb
Introduced in Chapter 48.

niger, albus
black and white — the source words for Spanish/French/Italian, each with a shine-vs-matte twin Introduced in Chapter 6.

nihil
nothing
Introduced in Chapter 161.

nihil est
"you're welcome" — another honest gap: Classical Latin has no single fixed reply to thanks, and nihil est ("it's nothing") is a modern conversational-Latin convention built from genuinely real words, not a specific classical citation for this exact job
Introduced in Chapter 23.

nimbus, nimbī
a rain cloud
Introduced in Chapter 191.

nimis too much
Introduced in Chapter 98.

nisi
unless, if not
Introduced in Chapter 178.

nix, nivis
snow
Introduced in Chapter 89.

noctua, noctuae
an owl
Introduced in Chapter 192.

nōlō, nōlle
to not want, to refuse
Introduced in Chapter 110.

nōmen, nōminis
a name
Introduced in Chapter 278.

nōnnumquam
now and then
Introduced in Chapter 176.

nōnus, nōna, nōnum
ninth — and the hour that turned into noon
Introduced in Chapter 56.

nōtus, nōta, nōtum
known, famous
Introduced in Chapter 183.

novus, nova, novum
new Introduced in Chapter 94.

nox
"night" — the word already hiding inside media nox ('midnight'), one of the most rock-solid PIE roots in the whole Indo-European family
Introduced in Chapter 29.

nūbēs, nūbis
a cloud
Introduced in Chapter 89.

nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum
cloudy
Introduced in Chapter 153.

nūbō, nūbere
to marry (of a bride)
Introduced in Chapter 198.

nudiustertius
the day before yesterday
Introduced in Chapter 162.

nūllus, nūlla, nūllum
no, not any
Introduced in Chapter 161.

numerō, numerāre
to count
Introduced in Chapter 160.

nummus, nummī
a coin
Introduced in Chapter 123.

numquam never Introduced in Chapter 104.

nunc
now
Introduced in Chapter 104.

nūntiō, nūntiāre
to announce
Introduced in Chapter 230.

nūntius, nūntiī
a messenger; news
Introduced in Chapter 219.

nūper
recently
Introduced in Chapter 162.

nūptiae, nūptiārum
a wedding
Introduced in Chapter 273.

nurus, nurūs
a daughter-in-law
Introduced in Chapter 247.

nusquam
nowhere
Introduced in Chapter 264.

nux, nucis
a nut
Introduced in Chapter 81.

oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī
to forget
Introduced in Chapter 203.

obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum
dark, obscure
Introduced in Chapter 96.

observō, observāre
to watch, to observe Introduced in Chapter 257.

obviam
in the way, to meet
Introduced in Chapter 209.

occāsiō, occāsiōnis
an opportunity
Introduced in Chapter 248.

occāsus, occāsūs
sunset; a setting
Introduced in Chapter 207.

octāvus, octāva, octāvum
eighth — the one that takes a different ending
Introduced in Chapter 56.

oculus, oculī
the eye — and the eye already hiding inside a word you know
Introduced in Chapter 54.

offerō, offerre
to offer
Introduced in Chapter 257.

officīna, officīnae
a workshop
Introduced in Chapter 118.

officium, officiī
a duty
Introduced in Chapter 248.

oleum, oleī
oil
Introduced in Chapter 80.

ōlim
once, long ago; one day
Introduced in Chapter 162.

olīva, olīvae
an olive
Introduced in Chapter 80.

ōlla, ōllae
a cooking pot
Introduced in Chapter 121.

omnīnō
altogether
Introduced in Chapter 211.

omnis, omne
all, every Introduced in Chapter 242.

oportet
it is necessary, one ought
Introduced in Chapter 110.

oppidum, oppidī
a town
Introduced in Chapter 107.

optō, optāre
to wish for, to choose Introduced in Chapter 111.

ōra, ōrae
a coast, an edge
Introduced in Chapter 87.

ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis
a speech
Introduced in Chapter 194.

ōrdō, ōrdinis
order, a row
Introduced in Chapter 228.

ōrnō, ōrnāre
to decorate
Introduced in Chapter 204.

ōrō, ōrāre
to pray, to beg
Introduced in Chapter 259.

ortus, ortūs
sunrise; a rising
Introduced in Chapter 207.

os, ossis
a bone
Introduced in Chapter 136.

ōsculor, ōsculārī
to kiss
Introduced in Chapter 197.

ostendō, ostendere
to show
Introduced in Chapter 157.

ōtium, ōtiī
leisure
Introduced in Chapter 274.

ovis, ovis
a sheep
Introduced in Chapter 90.

ōvum, ōvī
the egg — a cousin of English egg, with two sound changes that hide the relationship completely Introduced in Chapter 47.

pāgina, pāginae
a page
Introduced in Chapter 278.

pallium, palliī
a cloak
Introduced in Chapter 126.

palūs, palūdis
a marsh
Introduced in Chapter 196.

pānis
bread — the source of "companion," and of the friendship-word every Romance daughter still shares with it
Introduced in Chapter 10.

pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis
a butterfly
Introduced in Chapter 132.

parātus, parāta, parātum ready
Introduced in Chapter 268.

parcus, parca, parcum
thrifty, sparing
Introduced in Chapter 269.

parēns, parentis
a parent
Introduced in Chapter 273.

pāreō, pārēre
to obey
Introduced in Chapter 233.

parō, parāre
to prepare
Introduced in Chapter 100.

partior, partīrī
to share, to divide
Introduced in Chapter 199.

parum
too little, not enough
Introduced in Chapter 105.

parvus, parva, parvum
small
Introduced in Chapter 93.

passer, passeris
a sparrow
Introduced in Chapter 192.

passim
here and there
Introduced in Chapter 264.

passus, passūs
a pace
Introduced in Chapter 218.

pāstor, pāstōris
a shepherd
Introduced in Chapter 137.

pater, mater
father and mother — the PIE ancestor Latin and English both inherited, in parallel Introduced in Chapter 7.

patiēns, patientis
patient
Introduced in Chapter 213.

patientia, patientiae
patience
Introduced in Chapter 174.

patina, patinae
a dish, a pan
Introduced in Chapter 121.

patior, patī
to suffer, to allow
Introduced in Chapter 232.

patria, patriae
a homeland
Introduced in Chapter 271.

patruus, patruī
an uncle (father's brother)
Introduced in Chapter 71.

paucī, paucae, pauca
few
Introduced in Chapter 242.

pauper, pauperis
poor
Introduced in Chapter 98.

pavīmentum, pavīmentī
a floor
Introduced in Chapter 118.

pāvō, pāvōnis
a peacock
Introduced in Chapter 192.

pāx, pācis
peace
Introduced in Chapter 187.

pecten, pectinis
a comb
Introduced in Chapter 140.

pectus, pectoris
the chest, the breast
Introduced in Chapter 66.

pecūnia, pecūniae
money — and the cattle it is named after
Introduced in Chapter 51.

pellō, pellere
to push, to drive
Introduced in Chapter 258.

pendeō, pendēre
to hang
Introduced in Chapter 159.

pēra, pērae
a satchel
Introduced in Chapter 254.

perdō, perdere
to lose
Introduced in Chapter 157.

peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum foreign Introduced in Chapter 213.

perendiē
the day after tomorrow
Introduced in Chapter 163.

pergō, pergere
to go on, to continue
Introduced in Chapter 229.

perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum
dangerous
Introduced in Chapter 147.

perīculum, perīculī
danger
Introduced in Chapter 248.

peristylium, peristylīī
a colonnaded garden
Introduced in Chapter 185.

permittō, permittere
to allow
Introduced in Chapter 166.

permūtō, permūtāre
to exchange
Introduced in Chapter 259.

perna, pernae
a ham
Introduced in Chapter 195.

persequor, persequī
to pursue
Introduced in Chapter 201.

persuādeō, persuādēre
to persuade
Introduced in Chapter 199.

perveniō, pervenīre
to reach, to arrive at Introduced in Chapter 200.

pēs, pedis
the foot — the clearest Grimm's Law pair in the book, and the last word of the tranche
Introduced in Chapter 54.

philosophia, philosophiae
philosophy
Introduced in Chapter 226.

pictor, pictōris
a painter
Introduced in Chapter 246.

pictūra, pictūrae
a picture, a painting
Introduced in Chapter 124.

piger, pigra, pigrum
lazy
Introduced in Chapter 150.

pila, pilae
a ball
Introduced in Chapter 85.

pingō, pingere
to paint
Introduced in Chapter 154.

pinguis, pingue
fat
Introduced in Chapter 267.

pīnus, pīnūs
a pine
Introduced in Chapter 250.

piper, piperis
pepper
Introduced in Chapter 127.

pirum, pirī
a pear
Introduced in Chapter 81.

piscātor, piscātōris
a fisherman
Introduced in Chapter 138.

piscis, piscis
the fish — and the single clearest demonstration in this book of the sound law linking Latin to English
Introduced in Chapter 47.

piscor, piscārī
to go fishing
Introduced in Chapter 172.

pistor, pistōris
a baker
Introduced in Chapter 137.

pistrīnum, pistrīnī
a bakery, a mill
Introduced in Chapter 118.

pīsum, pīsī
a pea
Introduced in Chapter 127.

placenta, placentae
a flat cake
Introduced in Chapter 128.

placidus, placida, placidum
peaceful, placid
Introduced in Chapter 212.

platēa, platēae
a broad street, a square
Introduced in Chapter 244.

plaudō, plaudere
to clap, to applaud
Introduced in Chapter 256.

plaustrum, plaustrī
a wagon, a cart
Introduced in Chapter 125.

plicō, plicāre
to fold
Introduced in Chapter 168.

plumbum, plumbī
the metal lead
Introduced in Chapter 222.

pluvia, pluviae
rain
Introduced in Chapter 89.

pluvius, pluvia, pluvium
rainy
Introduced in Chapter 241.

pōculum, pōculī
a cup
Introduced in Chapter 83.

poena, poenae
a punishment
Introduced in Chapter 218.

poēta, poētae
a poet
Introduced in Chapter 73.

pollex, pollicis
a thumb
Introduced in Chapter 136.

pōmum, pōmī
a fruit, an apple
Introduced in Chapter 126.

pondus, ponderis
a weight
Introduced in Chapter 186.

pōnō, pōnere
to put, to place
Introduced in Chapter 77.

pōns, pontis
a bridge
Introduced in Chapter 108.

popīna, popīnae
an eating-house
Introduced in Chapter 117.

populus, populī
a people, a nation
Introduced in Chapter 271.

porcus, porcī
a pig
Introduced in Chapter 90.

porrum, porrī
a leek
Introduced in Chapter 279.

porta, portae
the door or gate — and the reason a harbour, a porch and a portal are all the same word
Introduced in Chapter 44.

portō, portāre
to carry
Introduced in Chapter 156.

possideō, possidēre
to own, to possess
Introduced in Chapter 168.

possum, posse
I can — potis plus sum, and the verb that will not sit still Introduced in Chapter 49.

post
after, behind — the other half of a phrase this book quoted long ago and never taught Introduced in Chapter 57.

posteā
afterwards, later
Introduced in Chapter 163.

posthāc
from now on Introduced in Chapter 175.

postrēmō
lastly Introduced in Chapter 208.

postrīdiē
the next day
Introduced in Chapter 263.

potestās, potestātis
power, the ability to act
Introduced in Chapter 109.

potius
rather
Introduced in Chapter 179.

praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum
special, chief
Introduced in Chapter 267.

praeparō, praeparāre
to make ready in advance
Introduced in Chapter 168.

praesertim
especially
Introduced in Chapter 179.

praetereō, praeterīre
to go past
Introduced in Chapter 258.

prandium, prandiī
lunch
Introduced in Chapter 79.

prātum, prātī
a meadow
Introduced in Chapter 196.

premō, premere
to press, to squeeze
Introduced in Chapter 170.

pretium, pretiī
a price
Introduced in Chapter 164.

prīdiē
the day before
Introduced in Chapter 237.

prīmus, prīma, prīmum
first — the counting word for order rather than amount, and the one with no ūnus in it
Introduced in Chapter 55.

prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum
former, of old
Introduced in Chapter 267.

prius
earlier, sooner
Introduced in Chapter 176.

prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum private
Introduced in Chapter 182.

probō, probāre
to approve, to prove
Introduced in Chapter 166.

probus, proba, probum
honest, upright
Introduced in Chapter 213.

prōcēdō, prōcēdere
to go forward, to advance
Introduced in Chapter 202.

procella, procellae
a storm, a gale
Introduced in Chapter 191.

procul
far away
Introduced in Chapter 102.

prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum
wasteful
Introduced in Chapter 184.

profectō
surely
Introduced in Chapter 210.

proficīscor, proficīscī
to set out
Introduced in Chapter 235.

profundus, profunda, profundum deep
Introduced in Chapter 240.

prōmittō, prōmittere
to promise
Introduced in Chapter 166.

propediem tē vidēbō
"see you later/soon" — a genuine change of pace from the last few lessons: this one IS solidly attested, twice, in Cicero's own letters
Introduced in Chapter 24.

properō, properāre
to make haste
Introduced in Chapter 169.

prōpōnō, prōpōnere
to propose, to put forward
Introduced in Chapter 168.

propter
because of Introduced in Chapter 239.

proptereā
because of that
Introduced in Chapter 114.

prōvideō, prōvidēre
to foresee, to provide for
Introduced in Chapter 163.

prōvincia, prōvinciae
a province
Introduced in Chapter 209.

proximus, proxima, proximum
nearest, next
Introduced in Chapter 267.

prūdēns, prūdentis
wise, sensible
Introduced in Chapter 149.

prūnum, prūnī
a plum
Introduced in Chapter 279.

pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum
public
Introduced in Chapter 182.

pudor, pudōris
shame, modesty
Introduced in Chapter 262.

puella, puellae
a girl
Introduced in Chapter 73.

pugnō, pugnāre
to fight
Introduced in Chapter 100.

pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum
beautiful
Introduced in Chapter 96.

pūlex, pūlicis
a flea
Introduced in Chapter 276.

pullus, pullī
a chicken, a young animal
Introduced in Chapter 127.

pulmō, pulmōnis
a lung
Introduced in Chapter 173.

puls, pultis
porridge
Introduced in Chapter 279.

pulsō, pulsāre
to knock, to beat
Introduced in Chapter 167.

pulvīnus, pulvīnī
a cushion, a pillow
Introduced in Chapter 120.

pulvis, pulveris
dust
Introduced in Chapter 275.

pūrgō, pūrgāre
to clean
Introduced in Chapter 155.

purpureus, purpurea, purpureum
purple
Introduced in Chapter 148.

pūrus, pūra, pūrum
clean, pure
Introduced in Chapter 146.

puteus, puteī
a well
Introduced in Chapter 118.

quā
by which way
Introduced in Chapter 238.

quadrāgintā
forty
Introduced in Chapter 106.

quaerō, quaerere
to look for, to ask Introduced in Chapter 203.

quaesō
please (literally "I ask, I beg")
Introduced in Chapter 3.

quaestiō, quaestiōnis
a question, an inquiry
Introduced in Chapter 226.

quamobrem
why?, on account of what?
Introduced in Chapter 112.

quamquam
although Introduced in Chapter 178.

quandō
when — as a question and as the hinge of a clause
Introduced in Chapter 49.

quārē
why?, for what reason?
Introduced in Chapter 112.

quārtus, quārta, quārtum
fourth — where the series settles into a shape
Introduced in Chapter 55.

quasi
as if
Introduced in Chapter 239.

queō, quīre
to be able, can
Introduced in Chapter 109.

quercus, quercūs
an oak
Introduced in Chapter 250.

queror, querī
to complain
Introduced in Chapter 231.

quī, quae, quod
who, which — the commonest word in Latin prose, and the one that joins two sentences into one Introduced in Chapter 49.

quia
because — the answer cūr asks for
Introduced in Chapter 52.

quid agis?
how are you? — literally, what are you doing?
Introduced in Chapter 19.

quid tibi nōmen est? / mihi nōmen est...
what's your name? / my name is... — the genuinely classical dative of possession, literally what is the name to you?
Introduced in Chapter 20.

quiēscō, quiēscere
to rest
Introduced in Chapter 198.

quiētus, quiēta, quiētum
quiet, calm
Introduced in Chapter 148.

quīnquāgintā
fifty
Introduced in Chapter 106.

quīntus, quīnta, quīntum
fifth — and the month that was once called The Fifth Introduced in Chapter 55.

quōmodo
"how, in what way" — the genuine classical word behind Italian come, Spanish cómo, and French comment, which went one step further and double-marked "manner"
Introduced in Chapter 26.

quondam
formerly, at one time
Introduced in Chapter 208.

quoque
also, too
Introduced in Chapter 239.

quotannīs
every year
Introduced in Chapter 176.

rādīx, rādīcis
a root
Introduced in Chapter 223.

raeda, raedae
a travelling carriage
Introduced in Chapter 244.

rāmus, rāmī
a branch
Introduced in Chapter 129.

rāna, rānae
a frog
Introduced in Chapter 133.

rārō rarely
Introduced in Chapter 105.

rārus, rāra, rārum
rare, thin
Introduced in Chapter 214.

ratiō, ratiōnis
a reason, a way of thinking
Introduced in Chapter 114.

recēdō, recēdere
to move back, to withdraw
Introduced in Chapter 169.

recēns, recentis
fresh, recent
Introduced in Chapter 181.

rēctus, rēcta, rēctum
straight, right
Introduced in Chapter 146.

recūsō, recūsāre
to refuse
Introduced in Chapter 200.

reddō, reddere
to give back
Introduced in Chapter 157.

redeō, redīre
to go back, to return
Introduced in Chapter 78.

rēgīna, rēgīnae
a queen
Introduced in Chapter 73.

regiō, regiōnis
a region
Introduced in Chapter 209.

rēgnum, rēgnī
a kingdom
Introduced in Chapter 245.

rēgula, rēgulae
a rule, a ruler
Introduced in Chapter 221.

remedium, remediī
a remedy
Introduced in Chapter 236.

removeō, removēre
to remove
Introduced in Chapter 229.

rēmus, rēmī
an oar
Introduced in Chapter 270.

rēn, rēnis
a kidney
Introduced in Chapter 173.

reprehendō, reprehendere
to blame, to criticise
Introduced in Chapter 199.

respondeō, respondēre
"I answer" — literally "I pledge back", from the verb Romans used for a solemn promise, and the reason a husband is a spouse
Introduced in Chapter 43.

respōnsum, respōnsī
an answer
Introduced in Chapter 226.

retineō, retinēre
to hold back, to keep Introduced in Chapter 234.

reus, reī
a defendant
Introduced in Chapter 218.

rīdeō, rīdēre
to laugh
Introduced in Chapter 75.

rīpa, rīpae
a river bank
Introduced in Chapter 129.

rīsus, rīsūs
a laugh
Introduced in Chapter 174.

rīvus, rīvī
a stream
Introduced in Chapter 87.

rogō, rogāre
"I ask" — a verb probably built on "stretching straight out", and a cousin of regal, direct and right
Introduced in Chapter 39.

rosa, rosae
a rose
Introduced in Chapter 128.

rota, rotae
a wheel
Introduced in Chapter 85.

rotundus, rotunda, rotundum
round
Introduced in Chapter 96.

ruber, caeruleus
red (rock-solid) and blue (surprisingly shaky) — Latin's clearest color word, and one of its weakest
Introduced in Chapter 6.

rūmor, rūmōris
a rumour
Introduced in Chapter 194.

rumpō, rumpere
to burst, to break apart
Introduced in Chapter 255.

rūrsus
back again, once more
Introduced in Chapter 211.

rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum
of the country, boorish
Introduced in Chapter 180.

saccus, saccī
a sack, a bag
Introduced in Chapter 120.

sacrificium, sacrificiī
a sacrifice
Introduced in Chapter 253.

saeculum, saeculī
a generation, a century
Introduced in Chapter 207.

saepe often
Introduced in Chapter 104.

saevus, saeva, saevum
savage, cruel
Introduced in Chapter 214.

sagitta, sagittae
an arrow
Introduced in Chapter 277.

sāl, salis
salt — a cousin of English salt, and the word a Roman soldier's salary was named for Introduced in Chapter 47.

saliō, salīre
to jump
Introduced in Chapter 165.

saltem
at least
Introduced in Chapter 265.

saltō, saltāre
to dance
Introduced in Chapter 75.

saltus, saltūs
a woodland pass; a leap
Introduced in Chapter 228.

salūtō, salūtāre
to greet
Introduced in Chapter 197.

salvē (post merīdiem)
why no two-word good-afternoon phrase exists — Latin has no simplex afternoon noun, and a grammatical three-word workaround is not attested as a greeting
Introduced in Chapter 36.

salvē / salvēte
hello (lit. “be well”)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

sanguis, sanguinis
blood
Introduced in Chapter 64.

sānus, sāna, sānum
healthy, sound
Introduced in Chapter 66.

sapiēns, sapientis
wise
Introduced in Chapter 97.

sapientia, sapientiae
wisdom
Introduced in Chapter 206.

sāpō, sāpōnis
soap
Introduced in Chapter 141.

sarcina, sarcinae
a pack, a bundle
Introduced in Chapter 254.

sartāgō, sartāginis
a frying pan
Introduced in Chapter 252.

satis
enough
Introduced in Chapter 98.

saxum, saxī
a rock, a boulder
Introduced in Chapter 129.

scālae, scālārum
a ladder, stairs
Introduced in Chapter 122.

scamnum, scamnī
a bench
Introduced in Chapter 139.

schola, scholae
the school — a Greek word that first meant leisure
Introduced in Chapter 53.

sciō, scīre
"I know" — one of Latin's two verbs for knowing, and the one that gave English science and nice
Introduced in Chapter 37.

scopulus, scopulī
a crag, a cliff
Introduced in Chapter 191.

scrība, scrībae
a clerk
Introduced in Chapter 272.

scrībō, scrībere
"I write" — a verb whose root means "to scratch", and the fourth of this chapter's four
Introduced in Chapter 38.

scrīptor, scrīptōris
a writer
Introduced in Chapter 246.

scūtum, scūtī
a shield
Introduced in Chapter 251.

secundus, secunda, secundum
second — and the verb hiding inside it
Introduced in Chapter 55.

secūris, secūris
an axe
Introduced in Chapter 122.

sed
but — the word that sets one thing against another
Introduced in Chapter 48.

sedeō, sedēre
"I sit" — the verb that is English sit by descent and English session by loan, and the clearest case of the difference
Introduced in Chapter 40.

seges, segetis
a crop, a cornfield
Introduced in Chapter 223.

sella, sellae
a chair, a seat
Introduced in Chapter 82.

semel
once, a single time
Introduced in Chapter 176.

sēmen, sēminis
a seed
Introduced in Chapter 129.

semper always Introduced in Chapter 104.

senex, senis
an old man
Introduced in Chapter 73.

sententia, sententiae
an opinion; a sentence
Introduced in Chapter 194.

sentiō, sentīre
to feel
Introduced in Chapter 159.

septimus, septima, septimum
seventh — the ending wears the vowel down
Introduced in Chapter 56.

sepulcrum, sepulcrī
a tomb
Introduced in Chapter 118.

sequor, sequī
to follow
Introduced in Chapter 235.

serēnus, serēna, serēnum
clear, fine (of weather)
Introduced in Chapter 152.

sēricum, sēricī
silk
Introduced in Chapter 275.

sermō, sermōnis
conversation, speech
Introduced in Chapter 194.

serō, serere
to sow, to plant
Introduced in Chapter 172.

serpēns, serpentis
a snake
Introduced in Chapter 91.

serra, serrae
a saw
Introduced in Chapter 122.

serviō, servīre
to serve, to be a slave
Introduced in Chapter 232.

servō, servāre
to keep, to save
Introduced in Chapter 159.

servus, servī
a slave, a servant
Introduced in Chapter 138.

sēstertius, sēstertiī
a sesterce (coin)
Introduced in Chapter 190.

sex septem octō novem decem
six to ten — and the four that got frozen into the calendar
Introduced in Chapter 2.

sextus, sexta, sextum
sixth — and the nap named after the sixth hour
Introduced in Chapter 56.

siccus, sicca, siccum
dry
Introduced in Chapter 95.

sīcut
even as, in the same way as Introduced in Chapter 265.

sīdus, sīderis
a constellation, a star
Introduced in Chapter 191.

signō, signāre
to mark, to seal
Introduced in Chapter 166.

signum, signī
a sign, a signal
Introduced in Chapter 125.

sileō, silēre
to make no sound
Introduced in Chapter 258.

silva, silvae
a forest, a wood
Introduced in Chapter 86.

sīmia, sīmiae
a monkey
Introduced in Chapter 134.

similis, simile
similar, like
Introduced in Chapter 266.

simul
at the same time
Introduced in Chapter 239.

sinister, sinistra, sinistrum
left (not right)
Introduced in Chapter 114.

sinus, sinūs
a fold of a garment; a bay
Introduced in Chapter 225.

sitis, sitis
thirst
Introduced in Chapter 68.

sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium
sober
Introduced in Chapter 269.

socer, socerī
a father-in-law
Introduced in Chapter 247.

socrus, socrūs
a mother-in-law
Introduced in Chapter 247.

solea, soleae
a sandal
Introduced in Chapter 225.

soleō, solēre
to be used to, usually do
Introduced in Chapter 109.

sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum worried
Introduced in Chapter 241.

sōlus, sōla, sōlum
alone, only
Introduced in Chapter 152.

solvō, solvere
to untie, to pay
Introduced in Chapter 156.

somniō, somniāre
to dream
Introduced in Chapter 258.

somnium, somniī
a dream
Introduced in Chapter 236.

somnus, somnī
sleep — the word under insomnia and somnolent, and a cousin of Sanskrit svapna
Introduced in Chapter 46.

sordidus, sordida, sordidum
dirty
Introduced in Chapter 146.

spatior, spatiārī
to stroll
Introduced in Chapter 257.

spectāculum, spectāculī
a show
Introduced in Chapter 219.

speculum, speculī
a mirror
Introduced in Chapter 84.

spēlunca, spēluncae
a cave
Introduced in Chapter 88.

spēs, speī
hope
Introduced in Chapter 112.

spīna, spīnae
a thorn
Introduced in Chapter 223.

spīrō, spīrāre
to breathe
Introduced in Chapter 259.

spongia, spongiae
a sponge
Introduced in Chapter 141.

sponte
of one's own accord
Introduced in Chapter 211.

statim
at once, immediately
Introduced in Chapter 101.

statua, statuae
a statue
Introduced in Chapter 125.

stēlla, stēllae
the star — a cousin of English star, and the word inside constellation and disaster
Introduced in Chapter 46.

stilus, stilī
a stylus, a writing stick
Introduced in Chapter 84.

stō, stāre
"I stand" — the shortest verb in the chapter and the most productive in English, and the fourth of four
Introduced in Chapter 40.

stola, stolae
a long dress
Introduced in Chapter 125.

stomachus, stomachī
the stomach
Introduced in Chapter 136.

strāgulum, strāgulī
a blanket, a bedspread
Introduced in Chapter 120.

studium, studiī
eagerness; study
Introduced in Chapter 226.

stultus, stulta, stultum
foolish
Introduced in Chapter 98.

suādeō, suādēre
to advise, to urge Introduced in Chapter 202.

subitō
suddenly
Introduced in Chapter 175.

subrīdeō, subrīdēre
to smile
Introduced in Chapter 165.

sūcus, sūcī
juice
Introduced in Chapter 128.

sum, esse
"I am" — the verb every sentence leans on, and the one whose forms English still shares outright
Introduced in Chapter 37.

summus, summa, summum
highest, the top of
Introduced in Chapter 183.

superbus, superba, superbum
proud Introduced in Chapter 151.

suprā
above
Introduced in Chapter 102.

surdus, surda, surdum
deaf
Introduced in Chapter 147.

surgō, surgere
to rise, to get up
Introduced in Chapter 101.

sūrsum
upwards
Introduced in Chapter 264.

suspicor, suspicārī
to suspect
Introduced in Chapter 170.

sūtor, sūtōris
a shoemaker
Introduced in Chapter 137.

tabella, tabellae
a small tablet, a note
Introduced in Chapter 252.

taberna, tabernae
a shop, an inn
Introduced in Chapter 107.

tabernāculum, tabernāculī
a tent
Introduced in Chapter 254.

tablīnum, tablīnī
a study (room)
Introduced in Chapter 185.

tabula, tabulae
a writing tablet, a board
Introduced in Chapter 84.

taceō, tacēre
to be silent
Introduced in Chapter 159.

tacitus, tacita, tacitum
silent
Introduced in Chapter 212.

taedium, taediī
boredom, weariness
Introduced in Chapter 262.

tālus, tālī
a knucklebone; an ankle
Introduced in Chapter 193.

tamen
however, nevertheless Introduced in Chapter 178.

tandem
at last
Introduced in Chapter 175.

tangō, tangere
to touch
Introduced in Chapter 100.

tantum
only; so much
Introduced in Chapter 210.

tapēte, tapētis
a carpet, a rug
Introduced in Chapter 139.

taurus, taurī
a bull
Introduced in Chapter 133.

tēctum, tēctī
a roof
Introduced in Chapter 83.

tēgula, tēgulae
a roof tile
Introduced in Chapter 217.

tempestās
weather or storm — a derivative of tempus that specialized for weather in Classical Latin, while tempus itself meant only time; later tempus widened to weather and tempestās narrowed to storm
Introduced in Chapter 15.

templum, templī
a temple
Introduced in Chapter 107.

temptō, temptāre
to try, to test
Introduced in Chapter 229.

teneō, tenēre
to hold
Introduced in Chapter 255.

tenuis, tenue
thin
Introduced in Chapter 144.

tepidus, tepida, tepidum
lukewarm
Introduced in Chapter 143.

tergum, tergī
the back
Introduced in Chapter 65.

terra, terrae
the earth — dry land as opposed to sea, and the root under terrain, terrace and Mediterranean
Introduced in Chapter 45.

tertius, tertia, tertium
third — the first ordinal with its own number visible inside it Introduced in Chapter 55.

tessera, tesserae
a gaming die; a token
Introduced in Chapter 193.

testis, testis
a witness
Introduced in Chapter 218.

testūdō, testūdinis
a tortoise
Introduced in Chapter 276.

textor, textōris
a weaver
Introduced in Chapter 188.

theātrum, theātrī
a theatre
Introduced in Chapter 115.

thermae, thermārum
the public baths
Introduced in Chapter 244.

tībia, tībiae
a flute, a pipe
Introduced in Chapter 142.

tigris, tigris
a tiger
Introduced in Chapter 251.

timeō, timēre
to fear
Introduced in Chapter 78.

timidus, timida, timidum
timid, shy
Introduced in Chapter 150.

timor, timōris
fear
Introduced in Chapter 69.

tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī
a bell
Introduced in Chapter 142.

titulus, titulī
a notice, a label; a title
Introduced in Chapter 164.

tolerō, tolerāre
to endure, to put up with
Introduced in Chapter 171.

tollō, tollere
to lift, to raise; to remove
Introduced in Chapter 200.

tonitrus, tonitrūs
thunder
Introduced in Chapter 130.

tōnsor, tōnsōris
a barber
Introduced in Chapter 137.

tōtus, tōta, tōtum
whole
Introduced in Chapter 242.

trādō, trādere
to hand over
Introduced in Chapter 201.

trahō, trahere
to pull, to drag
Introduced in Chapter 100.

trānseō, trānsīre
to cross, to go over
Introduced in Chapter 256.

tremō, tremere
to tremble
Introduced in Chapter 202.

tribūtum, tribūtī
a tribute, a tax
Introduced in Chapter 190.

trīgintā
thirty
Introduced in Chapter 106.

trīstis, trīste
sad
Introduced in Chapter 69.

truncus, truncī
a tree trunk
Introduced in Chapter 129.

tū / vōs
you (singular) / you (plural) — a PURELY grammatical number distinction in Classical Latin, with no politeness dimension at all; the polite-vous pattern (a Late Latin innovation) is vōs's own direct descendant, unlike German's Sie, which solved the same politeness problem independently via a completely different pronoun (3rd-person plural, not 2nd) Introduced in Chapter 22.

tuba, tubae
a trumpet
Introduced in Chapter 277.

tum
then, at that time
Introduced in Chapter 105.

tunica, tunicae
a tunic
Introduced in Chapter 108.

turpis, turpe
ugly, shameful
Introduced in Chapter 151.

turris, turris
a tower
Introduced in Chapter 280.

tussis, tussis
a cough
Introduced in Chapter 67.

tūtus, tūta, tūtum
safe
Introduced in Chapter 147.

tuus, tua, tuum
your — and the pair of forms the tū / vōs lesson promised Introduced in Chapter 52.

tympanum, tympanī
a drum
Introduced in Chapter 193.

ubi
where — the question the quōmodo lesson left half-finished Introduced in Chapter 52.

ultrā
beyond
Introduced in Chapter 238.

umbra, umbrae
the shade or shadow — and the reason a little shade is called an umbrella
Introduced in Chapter 46.

umerus, umerī
the shoulder
Introduced in Chapter 64.

ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum
wet, damp
Introduced in Chapter 95.

unda, undae
a wave
Introduced in Chapter 130.

ūndecim — vīgintī
11-20, the source numbers themselves — including Latin's own genuine oddity, SUBTRACTIVE 18 and 19, which Spanish quietly regularized away
Introduced in Chapter 16.

undique
from all sides
Introduced in Chapter 264.

unguentum, unguentī
an ointment
Introduced in Chapter 205.

unguis, unguis
a fingernail, a claw
Introduced in Chapter 66.

ūnus duo trēs quattuor quīnque
one to five — the Roman originals that became every Romance number Introduced in Chapter 2.

urbānus, urbāna, urbānum
polite, of the city
Introduced in Chapter 180.

urbs, urbis
a city
Introduced in Chapter 107.

urna, urnae
a water jar
Introduced in Chapter 141.

ursus, ursī
a bear
Introduced in Chapter 91.

usque
all the way, continuously Introduced in Chapter 209.

ut valēs?
how do you fare?
Introduced in Chapter 19.

uter, utra, utrum
which (of two)
Introduced in Chapter 161.

ūtilis, ūtile
useful
Introduced in Chapter 146.

utinam
if only
Introduced in Chapter 265.

ūtor, ūtī
to use
Introduced in Chapter 235.

ūva, ūvae
a grape
Introduced in Chapter 80.

uxor, uxōris
a wife
Introduced in Chapter 71.

vacca, vaccae
a cow
Introduced in Chapter 134.

vacuus, vacua, vacuum
empty
Introduced in Chapter 96.

valdē
very
Introduced in Chapter 179.

valē / valēte
goodbye (lit. “be strong”)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

valētūdō, valētūdinis
health
Introduced in Chapter 173.

validus, valida, validum
strong
Introduced in Chapter 152.

vallis, vallis
a valley
Introduced in Chapter 88.

vallum, vallī
a rampart
Introduced in Chapter 280.

vās, vāsis
a vessel, a container
Introduced in Chapter 123.

vectīgal, vectīgālis
a tax, a toll
Introduced in Chapter 190.

vehiculum, vehiculī
a vehicle
Introduced in Chapter 217.

vehō, vehere
to carry (by cart or ship)
Introduced in Chapter 156.

vēlum, vēlī
a sail; a curtain
Introduced in Chapter 125.

velut
as, like
Introduced in Chapter 265.

vēnālis, vēnāle
for sale
Introduced in Chapter 164.

vendō, vendere
to sell
Introduced in Chapter 76.

veniō, venīre
"I come" — a Latin verb that really is the same inherited word as English come
Introduced in Chapter 37.

vēnor, vēnārī
to hunt
Introduced in Chapter 172.

venter, ventris
the belly
Introduced in Chapter 65.

ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum
windy
Introduced in Chapter 153.

ventus, ventī
the wind — and a true Germanic cousin, with the sound change that proves it Introduced in Chapter 45.

venustus, venusta, venustum charming
Introduced in Chapter 216.

vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems
the four seasons — and why Romance languages often skipped the plain noun for an adjective phrase instead
Introduced in Chapter 9.

verbum, verbī
a word
Introduced in Chapter 278.

verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum
shy, modest
Introduced in Chapter 180.

vēritās, vēritātis
truth
Introduced in Chapter 189.

vermis, vermis
a worm
Introduced in Chapter 276.

vērō indeed; but
Introduced in Chapter 210.

versus, versūs
a line of verse
Introduced in Chapter 246.

vertex, verticis
a whirlpool; the top
Introduced in Chapter 228.

vertō, vertere
to turn
Introduced in Chapter 231.

vērus, vēra, vērum
true, real
Introduced in Chapter 215.

vespa, vespae
a wasp
Introduced in Chapter 276.

vesper
evening — a genuine everyday classical word sharing a deep root with English west through the direction of sunset
Introduced in Chapter 33.

vestīmentum, vestīmentī
a garment
Introduced in Chapter 225.

vestis, vestis
clothing, a garment
Introduced in Chapter 108.

vetō, vetāre
to forbid
Introduced in Chapter 198.

vetus, veteris
old
Introduced in Chapter 94.

vexillum, vexillī
a flag, a banner
Introduced in Chapter 254.

vexō, vexāre
to annoy, to harass
Introduced in Chapter 203.

viātor, viātōris
a traveller
Introduced in Chapter 227.

vīcīnus, vīcīnī
a neighbour
Introduced in Chapter 72.

victōria, victōriae
victory
Introduced in Chapter 187.

vīcus, vīcī
a street, a village
Introduced in Chapter 116.

videō, vidēre
"I see" — the widest root in this chapter, because seeing and knowing were once one idea
Introduced in Chapter 37.

videor, vidērī
to seem
Introduced in Chapter 232.

vidua, viduae
a widow
Introduced in Chapter 220.

vigil, vigilis
wakeful, watchful
Introduced in Chapter 216.

vigilō, vigilāre
to stay awake
Introduced in Chapter 158.

vīgintī annōs nātus sum
"I am twenty years old" — literally "I am, having been born, twenty years [so far]"; NEITHER Romance's "have" NOR Germanic's "be my years" — Latin used a THIRD construction, later abandoned
Introduced in Chapter 14.

vīlicus, vīlicī
a farm manager
Introduced in Chapter 188.

vīlla, vīllae
a farmhouse, a country house
Introduced in Chapter 108.

vincō, vincere
to win, to defeat
Introduced in Chapter 157.

viola, violae
a violet
Introduced in Chapter 250.

vir, virī
a man
Introduced in Chapter 72.

viridis, flāvus
green and yellow — viridis is the direct, kept source of Spanish's verde; flāvus is Latin's own real word for yellow, and almost NO Romance language kept it as their everyday color word — most (French, Italian, Romanian) converged on a DIFFERENT shared Latin word instead Introduced in Chapter 18.

virtūs, virtūtis
courage, virtue
Introduced in Chapter 262.

vīsitō, vīsitāre
to visit
Introduced in Chapter 154.

vītis, vītis
a vine
Introduced in Chapter 250.

vītō, vītāre
to avoid
Introduced in Chapter 199.

vitrum, vitrī
glass
Introduced in Chapter 249.

vitulus, vitulī
a calf
Introduced in Chapter 224.

vīvō, vīvere
to live
Introduced in Chapter 78.

vīvus, vīva, vīvum
alive
Introduced in Chapter 145.

vix hardly
Introduced in Chapter 211.

vocō, vocāre
to call
Introduced in Chapter 76.

volitō, volitāre
to fly about
Introduced in Chapter 200.

volō, velle
I want — and the root inside voluntary, benevolent and will itself
Introduced in Chapter 49.

volūmen, volūminis
a book-roll
Introduced in Chapter 278.

voluntās, voluntātis
a wish, the will
Introduced in Chapter 111.

volup est convēnisse
"it is a pleasure to have met you" — an attested Plautine phrase that can fill a conversational slot for which Classical Latin has no single fixed idiom
Introduced in Chapter 21.

vōx, vōcis
a voice
Introduced in Chapter 174.

vulnus, vulneris
a wound
Introduced in Chapter 205.

vulpēs, vulpis
a fox
Introduced in Chapter 133.

zōna, zōnae
a belt
Introduced in Chapter 126.

Review Questions

Try these without looking ahead. Every prompt comes from the same canonical lesson data as its chapter. Answers begin in the next section.

Chapter 1

1.1 salvē — look, hide, write, check
Cover the model and write the one-person Latin greeting meaning be well. Then uncover it and check every letter and the macron.

1.2 Hear the greeting; write it independently
From the cue SAL-weh, meaning be well to one person, write the Latin greeting with its long-vowel mark.

1.3 Chapter 1 — Practice and Recall
Which Latin root links vale to English valid and value?

Chapter 19

19.1 Practice — open, check, answer, close
Someone has just asked you ut vales? Type the one-word Latin answer.

Chapter 21

21.1 Practice — two meetings, each with the right words
You have been asked quid tibi nomen est? Type the first three Latin words of your reply.

Chapter 33

33.1 Practice — sort the evening words, then read the Latin
French soir and Italian sera descend from which Latin word?

Chapter 36

36.1 Practice — one whole day, in the words you have
You meet one person at three in the afternoon and want words a Roman would have used. Type them.

Chapter 58

58.1 (reading) — six words, each one already a claim
Which word is the teacher?

58.2 (reading) — six lines, two of them one word
Which line would you read as you leave?

58.3 (reading) — the first passage
Why does he read again?

Chapter 59

59.1 aqua -> aquam — when the action reaches the thing
Complete the sentence meaning I drink water: ____ bibo.

59.2 amīcus -> amīcum — a second road to the same object marker
Complete the sentence meaning I read the book: ____ lego.

59.3 ad scholam, in scholā, domum — toward, at, and homeward
Which two Latin words mean toward school?

59.4 (reading) — a whole meeting, one turn at a time
What does one speaker write after midday?

59.5 (reading) — diēs meus, my day
Which book is not taken, and why?

Answer Key

The first response is the canonical display answer. When a question accepts other authored forms, they appear underneath.

Chapter 1

1.1 salvē — look, hide, write, check
Answer: salvē
1.2 Hear the greeting; write it independently
Answer: salvē
1.3 Chapter 1 — Practice and Recall
Answer: valere
Also accepted: valēre

Chapter 19

19.1 Practice — open, check, answer, close
Answer: valeo
Also accepted: valeō

Chapter 21

21.1 Practice — two meetings, each with the right words
Answer: mihi nomen est
Also accepted: mihi nōmen est

Chapter 33

33.1 Practice — sort the evening words, then read the Latin
Answer: serus
Also accepted: sērus; serus (late)

Chapter 36

36.1 Practice — one whole day, in the words you have Answer: salve
Also accepted: salvē

Chapter 58

58.1 (reading) — six words, each one already a claim
Answer: magister
Also accepted: the teacher

58.2 (reading) — six lines, two of them one word
Answer: vale
Also accepted: Valē; Valē!; farewell

58.3 (reading) — the first passage
Answer: because the book is good
Also accepted: quia liber bonus est; the book is good

Chapter 59

59.1 aqua -> aquam — when the action reaches the thing
Answer: aquam

59.2 amīcus -> amīcum — a second road to the same object marker
Answer: librum

59.3 ad scholam, in scholā, domum — toward, at, and homeward
Answer: ad scholam

59.4 (reading) — a whole meeting, one turn at a time
Answer: a letter
Also accepted: epistulam; an epistle; letter

59.5 (reading) — diēs meus, my day
Answer: the second book, because it is bad
Also accepted: secundum librum, quia secundus liber malus est; the second because it is bad

Index

Look up an English meaning, a dedicated language topic, or a chapter topic. Each linked reference opens the chapter where the material is introduced; the focus labels name only explicitly typed lesson sections.

0–9

11-20, the source numbers themselves — including Latin's own genuine oddity, SUBTRACTIVE 18 and 19, which Spanish quietly regularized away ūndecim — vīgintī
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 16, p. 61

A

a baby, an infant īnfāns, īnfantis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 361
a baker pistor, pistōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 765
a bakery, a mill pistrīnum, pistrīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 647
a ball pila, pilae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 445
a banker argentārius, argentāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 272, p. 1599
a banquet convīvium, convīviī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1483
a barber tōnsor, tōnsōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 765
a bath, a bathhouse balneum, balneī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 629
a bean faba, fabae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 703

a bear ursus, ursī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 483
a beard barba, barbae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 325
a bed, a couch lectus, lectī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 427
a bedroom cubiculum, cubiculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 427
a bee apis, apis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 735
a bell tintinnābulum, tintinnābulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 797
a belt zōna, zōnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 697
a bench scamnum, scamnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 777
a billy goat caper, caprī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1305
a bird avis, avis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 483
a birthday diēs nātālis, diēī nātālis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1125
a blanket, a bedspread strāgulum, strāgulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 661
a blood relative cognātus, cognātī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1087
a bone os, ossis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 759
a book (of bound pages) cōdex, cōdicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 685
a book-roll volūmen, volūminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 278, p. 1637
a bow; an arch arcus, arcūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 277, p. 1631
a bowl, a deep dish catīnus, catīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 667
a box, a chest cista, cistae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 661
a bracelet armilla, armillae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1113
a branch rāmus, rāmī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 715
a breeze aura, aurae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1297

a bridge pōns, pontis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 585
a broad street, a square platēa, platēae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1427
a building aedificium, aedificiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 635
a bull taurus, taurī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 741
a butcher lanius, laniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 272, p. 1599
a butterfly pāpiliō, pāpiliōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 735
a cake lībum, lībī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1125
a calf vitulus, vitulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1305
a camel camēlus, camēlī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 747
a candle candēla, candēlae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 667
a candlestick candēlābrum, candēlābrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1477
a carpet, a rug tapēte, tapētis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 777
a cave spēlunca, spēluncae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 465
a chain catēna, catēnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1471
a chair, a seat sella, sellae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 427
a chair with a back cathedra, cathedrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 777
a chance, the means to do something facultās, facultātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 599
a charge, a crime crīmen, crīminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1267
a chariot currus, currūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1261
a cheek gena, genae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 331
a cherry cerasum, cerasī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 279, p. 1643
a chest, a box arca, arcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 439

a chicken, a young animal pullus, pullī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 703
a citizen cīvis, cīvis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 379
a city urbs, urbis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 579
a clerk scrība, scrībae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 272, p. 1599
a cloak pallium, palliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 697
a cloud nūbēs, nūbis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 471
a club clāva, clāvae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1471
a coast, an edge ōra, ōrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 459
a cockerel gallus, gallī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 753
a coin nummus, nummī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 679
a colonnaded garden peristylium, peristyliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1063
a column columna, columnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 280, p. 1649
a comb pecten, pectinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 783
a constellation, a star sīdus, sīderis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1099
a consul cōnsul, cōnsulis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1433
a cook coquus, coquī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 379
a cooking pot ōlla, ōllae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 667
a corner angulus, angulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 635
a cough tussis, tussis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 337
a cow vacca, vaccae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 747
a crab cancer, cancrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1107 a craftsman, a smith faber, fabrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 765

a crag, a cliff scopulus, scopulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1099
a crop, a cornfield seges, segetis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1297
a crown, a garland corōna, corōnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 445
a cucumber cucumis, cucumeris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 703
a cup calix, calicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 791
a cup pōculum, pōculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 433
a cupboard armārium, armāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 771
a cushion, a pillow pulvīnus, pulvīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 661
a daughter fīlia, fīliae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 355
a daughter-in-law nurus, nurūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1447
a debt dēbitum, dēbitī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 274, p. 1613
a deer, a stag cervus, cervī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 489
a defendant reus, reī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1267
a delay mora, morae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1383
a denarius (silver coin) dēnārius, dēnāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1093
a desire, eagerness cupiditās, cupiditātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 611
a difference; a crisis discrīmen, discrīminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1285
a dish, a pan patina, patinae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 667
a ditch fossa, fossae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 280, p. 1649
a dolphin delphīnus, delphīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 747
a donkey asinus, asinī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 489
a dove, a pigeon columba, columbae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 729

a dream somnium, somniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1377
a drug, a medicine medicāmentum, medicāmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1185
a drum tympanum, tympanī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1113
a duck anas, anatis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 729
a duty officium, officiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1453
a family, a household familia, familiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 355
a farm manager vīlicus, vīlicī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1081
a farmer agricola, agricolae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 379
a farmhouse, a country house vīlla, vīllae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 585
a father-in-law socer, socerī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1447
a fever febris, febris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 337
a field ager, agrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 379
a fig, a fig tree fīcus, fīcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 421
a finger digitus, digitī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 313
a fingernail, a claw unguis, unguis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 331
a fisherman piscātor, piscātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 771
a flag, a banner vexillum, vexillī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1489
a flask, a bottle lagoena, lagoenae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 679
a flat cake placenta, placentae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 709
a flea pūlex, pūlicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 276, p. 1625
a floor pavīmentum, pavīmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 647
a flower flōs, flōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 453

a flute, a pipe tībia, tībiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 797
a fly musca, muscae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 735
a fold of a garment; a bay sinus, sinūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1311
a food market macellum, macellī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 641
a forest, a wood silva, silvae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 453
a fork, a pitchfork furca, furcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 797
a forum, a market square forum, forī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 579
a foundation fundāmentum, fundāmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1063
a fox vulpēs, vulpis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 741
a freedman lībertus, lībertī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1279
a friend (a woman) amīca, amīcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 771
a frog rāna, rānae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 741
a fruit, an apple pōmum, pōmī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 697
a frying pan sartāgō, sartāginis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1477
a furnace, a kiln fornāx, fornācis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1261
a gaming die; a token tessera, tesserae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1113
a garment vestīmentum, vestīmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1311
a gem; a bud gemma, gemmae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1311
a general, an emperor imperātor, imperātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1433
a generation, a century saeculum, saeculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1199
a girl puella, puellae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 373
a gnat, a mosquito culex, culicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 276, p. 1625

a goat capra, caprae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 477
a goddess dea, deae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1483
a goose ānser, ānseris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 735
a granddaughter neptis, neptis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 273, p. 1607
a grandfather avus, avī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 355
a grandmother avia, aviae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 355
a grandson nepōs, nepōtis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 273, p. 1607
a grape ūva, ūvae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 415
a grove nemus, nemoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1131
a guest; a host hospes, hospitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 367
a habit, a custom cōnsuētūdō, cōnsuētūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1193
a hair, the hair capillus, capillī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 325
a hall of justice basilica, basilicae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 270, p. 1587
a ham perna, pernae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1125
a hammer malleus, malleī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 673
a hare lepus, leporis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 741
a head cold gravēdō, gravēdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1185
a helmet galea, galeae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 277, p. 1631
a helmsman gubernātor, gubernātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1069
a hen gallīna, gallīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 489
a hill collis, collis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 465
a homeland patria, patriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 271, p. 1593

a horse equus, equī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 477
a hundred centum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 573
a husband marītus, marītī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 361
a husband or wife, a spouse coniūnx, coniugis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 273, p. 1607
a kidney rēn, rēnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 987
a kindness, a favour beneficium, beneficiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1453
a kingdom rēgnum, rēgnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1433
a kitchen culīna, culīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 433
a knee genū, genūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 319
a knife culter, cultrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 433
a knucklebone; an ankle tālus, tālī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1113
a ladder, stairs scālae, scālārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 673
a lair, a resting place cubīle, cubīlis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1323
a lake lacus, lacūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 459
a lamb agnus, agnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1305
a lamp lucerna, lucernae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 433
a lantern lanterna, lanternae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 777
a laugh rīsus, rīsūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 995
a laurel laurus, laurī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1465
a leader dux, ducis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1075
a leaf folium, foliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 453
a leek porrum, porrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 279, p. 1643

a leg, a shin crūs, crūris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 331
a letter — a Greek word Rome borrowed, and the thing Cicero wrote in his letters epistula, epistulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 241
a letter of the alphabet littera, litterae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 278, p. 1637
a library bibliothēca, bibliothēcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 641
a lie mendācium, mendāciī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1087
a lily līlium, līliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 709
a line of verse versus, versūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1439
a linen cloth, a towel linteum, linteī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 791
a lion leō, leōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 483
a lip labrum, labrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 753
a litter (carried chair) lectīca, lectīcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1261
a lizard lacerta, lacertae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1305
a lodging house dēversōrium, dēversōriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1323
a long dress stola, stolae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 691
a longing dēsīderium, dēsīderiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 611
a lung pulmō, pulmōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 987
a lyre lyra, lyrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 797
a maidservant ancilla, ancillae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1279
a man vir, virī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 367
a market, a fair mercātus, mercātūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1069
a marsh palūs, palūdis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1131
a mattress culcita, culcitae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1311

a meadow prātum, prātī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1131
a measure mēnsūra, mēnsūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1069
a merchant mercātor, mercātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 379
a messenger; news nūntius, nūntiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1273
a milestone mīliārium, mīliāriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 653
a military camp castra, castrōrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 629
a mirror speculum, speculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 439
a mistress, the lady of the house domina, dominae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 771
a money bag marsuppium, marsuppiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1489
a monkey sīmia, sīmiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 747
a month mēnsis, mēnsis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 555
a mother-in-law socrus, socrūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1447
a mother's brother, an uncle avunculus, avunculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1087
a mother's sister, an aunt mātertera, māterterae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1087
a mountain mōns, montis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 453
a mouse mūs, mūris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 489
a mule mūlus, mūlī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 747
a nail (to hammer) clāvus, clāvī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 673
a name nōmen, nōminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 278, p. 1637
a napkin, a cloth mappa, mappae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 661
a necklace monīle, monīlis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1113
a needle acus, acūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 783

a neighbour vīcīnus, vīcīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 367
a newcomer advena, advenae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1279
a notice, a label; a title titulus, titulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 933
A Notice, an Inscription, a Price, For Sale, Goods
chapter topic; Chapter 164, p. 933
a nut nux, nucis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 421
a pace passus, passūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1267
a pack, a bundle sarcina, sarcinae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1489
a page pāgina, pāginae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 278, p. 1637
a painter pictor, pictōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1439
a parent parēns, parentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 273, p. 1607
a pea pīsum, pīsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 703
a peacock pāvō, pāvōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1107 a peak, a tip cacūmen, cacūminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1329
a pear pirum, pirī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 421
a people, a nation populus, populī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 271, p. 1593
a picture, a painting pictūra, pictūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 685
a pig porcus, porcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 477
a pine pīnus, pīnūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1465
a place locus, locī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 623
a plain, an open field campus, campī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 471
a plan; advice cōnsilium, cōnsiliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 927
a plaster, a dressing emplastrum, emplastrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1377

a plough arātrum, arātrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 797
a plum prūnum, prūnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 279, p. 1643
a poet poēta, poētae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 373
a potter figulus, figulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1081
a pound; a pair of scales lībra, lībrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1069
a price pretium, pretiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 933
a prison carcer, carceris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 635
a province prōvincia, prōvinciae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1211
a punishment poena, poenae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1267
a puppy catulus, catulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1471
a purse crumēna, crumēnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 679
a queen rēgīna, rēgīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 373
a question, an inquiry quaestiō, quaestiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1317
a racecourse circus, circī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 270, p. 1587
a rain basin impluvium, impluviī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1063
a rain cloud nimbus, nimbī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1099
a rampart vallum, vallī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 280, p. 1649
a raven corvus, corvī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 729
a reason, a cause causa, causae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 617
a reason, a way of thinking ratiō, ratiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 623
a reed pen calamus, calamī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 685
a region regiō, regiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1211
a remedy remedium, remediī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1377

a ring ānulus, ānulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 445
a river flūmen, flūminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 459
a river bank rīpa, rīpae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 715
a robber latrō, latrōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1433
a rock, a boulder saxum, saxī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 715
a roof tēctum, tēctī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 433
a roof tile tēgula, tēgulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1261
a root rādīx, rādīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1297
a rose rosa, rosae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 709
a rule, a ruler rēgula, rēgulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1285
a rumour rūmor, rūmōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1119
a running stream, a river fluvius, fluviī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1131
a sack, a bag saccus, saccī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 661
a sacred grove lūcus, lūcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1131
a sacrifice sacrificium, sacrificiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1483
a sail; a curtain vēlum, vēlī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 691
a sailor nauta, nautae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 373
a sandal solea, soleae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1311
a satchel pēra, pērae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1489
a saw serra, serrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 673
a scar cicātrīx, cicātrīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1185
a seed sēmen, sēminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 715

a sesterce (coin) sēstertius, sēstertiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1093
a sheep ovis, ovis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 477
a shepherd pāstor, pāstōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 765
a shield scūtum, scūtī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1471
a shoe calceus, calceī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 585
a shoemaker sūtor, sūtōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 765
a shop, an inn taberna, tabernae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 579
a shore, a beach lītus, lītoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 471
a show spectāculum, spectāculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1273
a sign, a signal signum, signī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 691
a skill, a craft ars, artis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 599
a slave, a servant servus, servī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 771
a small flask, a phial ampulla, ampullae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1477
a small tablet, a note tabella, tabellae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1477
a snake serpēns, serpentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 483
a son fīlius, fīliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 355
a son-in-law gener, generī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1447
a song, a poem carmen, carminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1439
a sparrow passer, passeris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1107 a spear hasta, hastae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 277, p. 1631
a speech ōrātiō, ōrātiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1119
a spider arānea, arāneae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 741

a sponge spongia, spongiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 791
a spoon cochlear, cochleāris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 667
a spring, a fountain fōns, fontis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 459
a state; citizenship cīvitās, cīvitātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 271, p. 1593
a statue statua, statuae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 691
a step, a stair gradus, gradūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 641
a stone lapis, lapidis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 465
a storeroom, a small room cella, cellae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1063
a stork cicōnia, cicōniae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1107 a storm, a gale procella, procellae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1099
a story, a play fābula, fābulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1273
a stream rīvus, rīvī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 459
a street, a village vīcus, vīcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 635
a study (room) tablīnum, tablīnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1063
a stylus, a writing stick stilus, stilī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 439
a sword gladius, gladiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 445
a table mēnsa, mēnsae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 427
a tax, a toll vectīgal, vectīgālis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1093
a tear lacrima, lacrimae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 995
a temple templum, templī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 579
a tenant farmer colōnus, colōnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1081
a tent tabernāculum, tabernāculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1489

a theatre theātrum, theātrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 629
a thief fūr, fūris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1433
a thorn spīna, spīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1297
a thousand mīlle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 573
a thread fīlum, fīlī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 783
a thumb pollex, pollicis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 759
a tiger tigris, tigris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1471
a tomb sepulcrum, sepulcrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 647
a tooth dēns, dentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 313
a torch fax, facis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 777
a tortoise testūdō, testūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 276, p. 1625
a tower turris, turris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 280, p. 1649
a town oppidum, oppidī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 579
a traveller viātor, viātōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1323
a travelling carriage raeda, raedae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1427
a tree arbor, arboris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 453
a tree trunk truncus, truncī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 715
a tribute, a tax tribūtum, tribūtī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1093
a trumpet tuba, tubae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 277, p. 1631
a tunic tunica, tunicae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 585
a twin geminus, geminī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1447
A Twin and the In-Laws
chapter topic; Chapter 247, p. 1447

a two-handled jar amphora, amphorae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 679
a valley vallis, vallis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 465
a vehicle vehiculum, vehiculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1261
a vessel, a container vās, vāsis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 679
a vine vītis, vītis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1465
a violet viola, violae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1465
a voice vōx, vōcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 995
a wagon, a cart plaustrum, plaustrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 691
a wasp vespa, vespae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 276, p. 1625
a water jar urna, urnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 791
a wave unda, undae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 721
a weaver textor, textōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1081
a wedding nūptiae, nūptiārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 273, p. 1607
a weight pondus, ponderis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1069
a well puteus, puteī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 647
a whale balaena, balaenae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 753
a wheel rota, rotae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 445
a whirlpool; the top vertex, verticis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1329
a widow vidua, viduae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1279
a wife uxor, uxōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 361
a wild boar aper, aprī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1305
a window fenestra, fenestrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 427

a wish, the will voluntās, voluntātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 605
a witness testis, testis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1267
a wolf lupus, lupī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 483
a woman fēmina, fēminae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 367
a woodland pass; a leap saltus, saltūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1329
a word verbum, verbī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 278, p. 1637
a workshop officīna, officīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 647
a worm vermis, vermis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 276, p. 1625
a wound vulnus, vulneris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1185
a writer scrīptor, scrīptōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1439
a writing tablet, a board tabula, tabulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 439
a year annus, annī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 555
a yoke; a ridge iugum, iugī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1329
a young person adulēscēns, adulēscentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1279
about, nearly ferē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1217
above suprā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 549
ad scholam, in scholā, domum — toward, at, and homeward
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 59, p. 299
after, behind — the other half of a phrase this book quoted long ago and never taught post
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 57, p. 289
afterwards, later posteā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 927
again — and the repair move this book could not make iterum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 257
age, a lifetime aetās, aetātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1199
alive vīvus, vīva, vīvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 815

all, every omnis, omne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1415
all the way, continuously usque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1211
alone, only sōlus, sōla, sōlum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 859
already, now iam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 567
also, too quoque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1397 although quamquam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1019
altogether omnīnō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1223
Altogether, Hardly, Of one's own accord, In vain, Back again
chapter topic; Chapter 211, p. 1223
always semper
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 561
amīcus -> amīcum — a second road to the same object marker
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 59, p. 299
Amicus, Pecunia, Medicus, Miles, Epistula
chapter topic; Chapter 51, p. 241
an accident, a fall cāsus, cāsūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1285
an actor histriō, histriōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1273
an altar āra, ārae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1483
an amphitheatre amphitheātrum, amphitheātrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1427
an anchor ancora, ancorae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 270, p. 1587
an answer respōnsum, respōnsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1317
an ant formīca, formīcae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 735
an aqueduct aquaeductus, aquaeductūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1427
an architect architectus, architectī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1081
an arm bracchium, bracchiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 313
an arrow sagitta, sagittae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 277, p. 1631

an aunt (father's sister) amita, amitae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 367
an axe secūris, secūris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 673
an eagle aquila, aquilae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 729
an eating-house popīna, popīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 641
an elbow cubitum, cubitī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 759
an elephant elephantus, elephantī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 489
an enemy (of the state) hostis, hostis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 271, p. 1593
an envoy lēgātus, lēgātī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 272, p. 1599
an illness, a disease morbus, morbī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 337
an inn caupōna, caupōnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 641
an innkeeper caupō, caupōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 272, p. 1599
an inscription īnscrīptiō, īnscrīptiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 933
an oak quercus, quercūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1465
an oar rēmus, rēmī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 270, p. 1587
an ointment unguentum, unguentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1185
an old man senex, senis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 373
an olive olīva, olīvae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 415
an onion cēpa, cēpae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 697
an open space, a courtyard ārea, āreae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 653
an opinion; a sentence sententia, sententiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1119
an opportunity occāsiō, occāsiōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1453
an outcome ēventus, ēventūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1285

an oven furnus, furnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1477
an owl noctua, noctuae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1107 an ox, a cow bōs, bovis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 477
an uncle (father's brother) patruus, patruī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 361
ancient, old-fashioned antīquus, antīqua, antīquum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 803
and — and the enclitic -que, which does the same job glued to the back of a word et
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 225
and not, nor neque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 915
and so, therefore itaque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 617
anger īra, īrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 349
angry īrātus, īrāta, īrātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 833
annoying molestus, molesta, molestum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 821
Annoying, Useful, Clean, Dirty, Straight
chapter topic; Chapter 146, p. 821
Answering, Meeting, Buying
chapter topic; Chapter 43, p. 183
Ante et Post
chapter topic; Chapter 57, p. 289
anxious anxius, anxia, anxium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1229
aqua -> aquam — when the action reaches the thing
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 59, p. 299
Architect, Weaver, Potter, Farm manager, Tenant farmer
chapter topic; Chapter 188, p. 1081
Arm, Finger, Tooth
chapter topic; Chapter 63, p. 313
around circā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 653
as if quasi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1397
as, like velut
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 265, p. 1557
ash cinis, cineris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 275, p. 1619

Asking Someone's Age
chapter topic; Chapter 14, p. 53
at last tandem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1001
At last, From now on, Still, Suddenly, Until
chapter topic; Chapter 175, p. 1001
at least saltem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 265, p. 1557
at once, immediately statim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 543
at some time, once aliquandō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 263, p. 1543
at the house of, among apud
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1391
at the same time simul
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1397
At the same time, Perhaps, Also, As if, Because of
chapter topic; Chapter 239, p. 1397
Aunt, Neighbour, Guest, Man, Woman
chapter topic; Chapter 72, p. 367

B

back again, once more rūrsus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1223
bad — the adjective under male, and the word Rome punned on for the apple malus, mala, malum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 48, p. 215 badly — the other end of the scale bene has had to itself all along male
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 48, p. 215
bald calvus, calva, calvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1255
Bald, Bearded, Charming, Worn out, Wakeful
chapter topic; Chapter 216, p. 1255
Ball, Wheel, Sword, Crown, Ring
chapter topic; Chapter 85, p. 445
Bean, Pea, Cucumber, Chicken, Pepper
chapter topic; Chapter 127, p. 703
bearded barbātus, barbāta, barbātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1255
beautiful fōrmōsus, fōrmōsa, fōrmōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 853

beautiful pulcher, pulchra, pulchrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 513
Beautiful, Round, Empty, Bright, Dark
chapter topic; Chapter 96, p. 513
because of propter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1397
because of that proptereā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 623
because — the answer cūr asks for quia
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 249
beer cervīsia, cervīsiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 709 before, in front of — the word that puts one thing ahead of another ante
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 57, p. 289
before, previously anteā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 921
below īnfrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 549
beyond ultrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1391
Beyond, On this side, At the house of, Face to face, By which way
chapter topic; Chapter 238, p. 1391
Big and Small, Long and Short, High
chapter topic; Chapter 93, p. 495
big, great magnus, magna, magnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 495
Bird, Wolf, Lion, Bear, Snake
chapter topic; Chapter 91, p. 483
black and white — the source words for Spanish/French/Italian, each with a shine-vs-matte twin niger, albus
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 6, p. 23
blessed, fortunate beātus, beāta, beātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1421
blind caecus, caeca, caecum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 809
blood sanguis, sanguinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 319
bold audāx, audācis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 845
Book, Ink, Reed pen, Wax, Picture
chapter topic; Chapter 124, p. 685
Book-roll, Page, Letter of the alphabet, Word, Name
chapter topic; Chapter 278, p. 1637

boredom, weariness taedium, taediī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 262, p. 1537
Branch, Tree trunk, Seed, Rock, River bank
chapter topic; Chapter 129, p. 715
brave, strong fortis, forte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 519
bread — the source of "companion," and of the friendship-word every Romance daughter still shares with it pānis
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 10, p. 39
breakfast ientāculum, ientāculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 409
Breath, Memory, Wisdom, Talent, Habit
chapter topic; Chapter 206, p. 1193
breath, soul anima, animae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1193
Bridge, Farmhouse, Clothes, Tunic, Shoe
chapter topic; Chapter 108, p. 585
bright, clear; famous clārus, clāra, clārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 513
Bringing, Getting, Playing, Waiting
chapter topic; Chapter 42, p. 175
bronze; money aes, aeris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1291
brother and sister — the words Vulgar Latin later abandoned in favor of germanus frater, soror
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 7, p. 27
Building, Prison, Main hall of a house, Corner, Street
chapter topic; Chapter 116, p. 635
business negōtium, negōtiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 274, p. 1613
but — the word that sets one thing against another sed
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 48, p. 215
Butcher, Innkeeper, Banker, Envoy, Clerk
chapter topic; Chapter 272, p. 1599
by which way quā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1391

C

cabbage brassica, brassicae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 279, p. 1643
Cake, Vinegar, Fish sauce, Ham, Birthday
chapter topic; Chapter 195, p. 1125

care, worry cūra, cūrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 343
careful cautus, cauta, cautum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 845
Careful, Lazy, Hard-working, Timid, Bold
chapter topic; Chapter 150, p. 845
Chair with a back, Bench, Carpet, Torch, Lantern
chapter topic; Chapter 139, p. 777
Chance, Skill, It is necessary, It is allowed, To not want
chapter topic; Chapter 110, p. 599
charcoal carbō, carbōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1099
Charcoal, Crag, Constellation, Storm, Rain cloud
chapter topic; Chapter 191, p. 1099
charming venustus, venusta, venustum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1255
cheerful hilaris, hilare
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1031
cheese cāseus, cāseī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 415
Cheese, Oil, Grapes, Olives
chapter topic; Chapter 80, p. 415
Cherry, Plum, Cabbage, Leek, Porridge
chapter topic; Chapter 279, p. 1643
Chest, Leg, Cheek, Nail, Healthy
chapter topic; Chapter 66, p. 331
Chest, Paper, Pen, Tablet, Mirror
chapter topic; Chapter 84, p. 439
children līberī, līberōrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 361
Citizen, Cook, Merchant, Farmer
chapter topic; Chapter 74, p. 379
City, Town, Forum, Temple, Shop
chapter topic; Chapter 107, p. 579
city walls moenia, moenium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 280, p. 1649
clean, pure pūrus, pūra, pūrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 821
clear, fine (of weather) serēnus, serēna, serēnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 859
clever, cunning callidus, callida, callidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 267, p. 1569
Cloak, Belt, Fruit, Onion, Garlic
chapter topic; Chapter 126, p. 697

clothing, a garment vestis, vestis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 585
Cloud, Rain, Snow, Plain, Shore
chapter topic; Chapter 89, p. 471
cloudy nūbilus, nūbila, nūbilum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 865
Cloudy, Windy, To build, To climb, To go down
chapter topic; Chapter 153, p. 865
cold frīgidus, frīgida, frīgidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 507
Colours
chapter topic; Chapter 6, p. 23
Comb, Scissors, Needle, Thread, Wool
chapter topic; Chapter 140, p. 783
common, shared commūnis, commūne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1043
convenient, comfortable commodus, commoda, commodum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1031
Convenient, Polite, Of the country, Cheerful, Shy
chapter topic; Chapter 180, p. 1031
conversation, speech sermō, sermōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1119
cooked coctus, cocta, coctum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1037
courage, virtue virtūs, virtūtis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 262, p. 1537
Cow, Mule, Camel, Monkey, Dolphin
chapter topic; Chapter 134, p. 747
Crab, Sparrow, Stork, Owl, Peacock
chapter topic; Chapter 192, p. 1107
Craftsman, Baker, Shoemaker, Barber, Shepherd
chapter topic; Chapter 137, p. 765
cruel crūdēlis, crūdēle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 853

D

danger perīculum, perīculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1453
dangerous perīculōsus, perīculōsa, perīculōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 827
dark, dusky fuscus, fusca, fuscum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 839

Dark, Grey, Golden, Silver, Wise
chapter topic; Chapter 149, p. 839
dark, obscure obscūrus, obscūra, obscūrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 513
Day
chapter topic; Chapter 28, p. 103
"day" — the word you've already been using all along, inside diēs Lūnae and medius diēs, now on its own diēs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 28, p. 103
Days of the Week
chapter topic; Chapter 5, p. 19
deaf surdus, surda, surdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 827
Deaf, False, Sure, Safe, Dangerous
chapter topic; Chapter 147, p. 827
dear; costly cārus, cāra, cārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 519
deep profundus, profunda, profundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1403
Desire, Hope, Longing, Why?, Why?
chapter topic; Chapter 112, p. 611
different dīversus, dīversa, dīversum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 266, p. 1563
difficult difficilis, difficile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 519
dinner, the main meal cēna, cēnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 409
dirty sordidus, sordida, sordidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 821
distant longinquus, longinqua, longinquum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1037
Dog and Cat
chapter topic; Chapter 17, p. 65
dog and (two words for) cat — canis is the "expected" ancestor Spanish's perro mysteriously replaced; fēlēs was Classical Latin's OWN word for cat, later pushed out by the newcomer cattus canis, fēlēs, cattus
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 17, p. 65
doubtful dubius, dubia, dubium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1421
Doubtful, Faithful, Loyal, Unlucky, Blessed
chapter topic; Chapter 243, p. 1421
downwards deorsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 264, p. 1551

Drum, Knucklebone, Gaming die, Bracelet, Necklace
chapter topic; Chapter 193, p. 1113
drunk ēbrius, ēbria, ēbrium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 269, p. 1581
dry siccus, sicca, siccum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 507
dust pulvis, pulveris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 275, p. 1619

E

eagerness; study studium, studiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1317
Earlier, Every year, Now and then, Once, Twice
chapter topic; Chapter 176, p. 1007
earlier, sooner prius
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1007
Earth, Fire, Wind, Sky, Sea
chapter topic; Chapter 45, p. 195
easy facilis, facile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 519
Easy, Hard, Dear, Brave, Wise
chapter topic; Chapter 97, p. 519
Edo, Bibo, Oculus, Auris, Pes
chapter topic; Chapter 54, p. 265
Eight Verbs at the Core
chapter topic; Chapter 37, p. 129
eighth — the one that takes a different ending octāvus, octāva, octāvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 281
Elbow, Thumb, Skin, Bone, Stomach
chapter topic; Chapter 136, p. 759
eloquent fācundus, fācunda, fācundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1057
elsewhere alibī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1013
empty vacuus, vacua, vacuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 513
End, Delay, Sometimes, Every day, Day before
chapter topic; Chapter 237, p. 1383
enough satis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 525
envious invidus, invida, invidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1229

envy invidia, invidiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 262, p. 1537
especially praesertim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1025
Especially, Rather, Most, Very, Quite
chapter topic; Chapter 179, p. 1025
Even as, As, If only, On the contrary, At least
chapter topic; Chapter 265, p. 1557
even as, in the same way as sīcut
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 265, p. 1557
even if etsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1019
Evening
chapter topic; Chapter 33, p. 115
evening — a genuine everyday classical word sharing a deep root with English west through the direction of sunset vesper
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 33, p. 115
every day cotīdiē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1383
every year quotannīs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1007
Exchanging Names
chapter topic; Chapter 20, p. 77

F

face to face cōram
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1391
facing, unfavourable adversus, adversa, adversum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 268, p. 1575
fair, righteous iūstus, iūsta, iūstum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 266, p. 1563
faithful fīdus, fīda, fīdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1421
false falsus, falsa, falsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 827
Family
chapter topic; Chapter 7, p. 27
famous, crowded celeber, celebris, celebre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1051
Far, Above, Below, Inside, Outside
chapter topic; Chapter 102, p. 549
far away procul
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 549

far, by far longē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1013
Far, Elsewhere, Over there, Within, Out of doors
chapter topic; Chapter 177, p. 1013
fast, quick celer, celeris, celere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 501 fat pinguis, pingue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 267, p. 1569
Fat, Clever, Special, Former, Nearest
chapter topic; Chapter 267, p. 1569
fate fātum, fātī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1323
Fate, Lair, Hospitality, Lodging house, Traveller
chapter topic; Chapter 227, p. 1323
father and mother — the PIE ancestor Latin and English both inherited, in parallel pater, mater
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 7, p. 27
fear timor, timōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 349
Fever, Cough, Pain
chapter topic; Chapter 67, p. 337
few paucī, paucae, pauca
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1415
Few, All, Whole, Others, Other
chapter topic; Chapter 242, p. 1415
fierce ferōx, ferōcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 815
fifth — and the month that was once called The Fifth quīntus, quīnta, quīntum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 273
fifty quīnquāgintā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 573
Fight, Sail, Prepare, Touch, Pull
chapter topic; Chapter 100, p. 537
finally dēnique
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1205
Finally, Lastly, On the spot, Formerly, Long since
chapter topic; Chapter 208, p. 1205
fire itself — the classical word, which the Romance languages abandoned and English kept ignis, ignis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 45, p. 195
first light, daybreak dīlūculum, dīlūculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1199

first — the counting word for order rather than amount, and the one with no ūnus in it prīmus, prīma, prīmum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 273
fish sauce garum, garī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1125
Fisherman, Slave, Mistress, Friend, Cupboard
chapter topic; Chapter 138, p. 771
fit, suited aptus, apta, aptum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 268, p. 1575
Flat cake, Beer, Juice, Rose, Lily
chapter topic; Chapter 128, p. 709
Floor, Well, Bakery, Workshop, Tomb
chapter topic; Chapter 118, p. 647
flour farīna, farīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 421
Fog, Eagle, Dove, Raven, Duck
chapter topic; Chapter 131, p. 729
fog, mist nebula, nebulae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 729
food cibus, cibī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 409
Food and Meals
chapter topic; Chapter 79, p. 409
foolish stultus, stulta, stultum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 525
for a long time diū
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 263, p. 1543
For, For, For that reason, And so, Reason
chapter topic; Chapter 113, p. 617
for (giving a reason) nam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 617
for sale vēnālis, vēnāle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 933
for that reason ideō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 617
for, you see enim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 617
foreign peregrīnus, peregrīna, peregrīnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1235
Foreign, Honest, Patient, Generous, Idle
chapter topic; Chapter 213, p. 1235
forgive me / I'm sorry (imperative of ignōscere, "to not-know, overlook, pardon") ignōsce mihi
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 4, p. 17

Fork, Plough, Bell, Flute, Lyre
chapter topic; Chapter 142, p. 797 former, of old prīstinus, prīstina, prīstinum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 267, p. 1569
formerly, at one time quondam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1205
fortune, luck fortūna, fortūnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1285
forty quadrāgintā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 573
Four lines, and the word that has a twin script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 62, p. 311
fourth — where the series settles into a shape quārtus, quārta, quārtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 273
free of charge grātuītus, grātuīta, grātuītum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1037
Free of charge, Fresh, Raw, Cooked, Distant
chapter topic; Chapter 181, p. 1037
freedom lībertās, lībertātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1075 frequent, crowded crēber, crēbra, crēbrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1241
fresh, recent recēns, recentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1037
friendship amīcitia, amīcitiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1377
from all sides undique
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 264, p. 1551
from now on posthāc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1001
from there; then inde
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1211

G

garlic ālium, āliī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 697
Gem, Garment, Sandal, Fold of a garment, Mattress
chapter topic; Chapter 225, p. 1311
Generation, Age, Sunset, Sunrise, First light
chapter topic; Chapter 207, p. 1199
generous līberālis, līberāle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1235

gentle, mild mītis, mīte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 815
Get to Know, Care For, Tell, Praise, Move
chapter topic; Chapter 99, p. 531
Get Up, Wander, Run Away, At Once, Then
chapter topic; Chapter 101, p. 543
Girl, Old Man, Queen, Sailor, Poet
chapter topic; Chapter 73, p. 373
glass vitrum, vitrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1459
Gloomy, Drunk, Sober, Greedy, Thrifty
chapter topic; Chapter 269, p. 1581
gloomy, mournful maestus, maesta, maestum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 269, p. 1581
glory glōria, glōriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1075
gold aurum, aurī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1291
Gold, Silver, Bronze, Iron, Metal lead
chapter topic; Chapter 222, p. 1291
golden aureus, aurea, aureum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 839
Good Afternoon
chapter topic; Chapter 36, p. 125
Good Evening
chapter topic; Chapter 34, p. 119
"good evening" — a modern, pedagogical phrase (not classically attested), but unlike bonum māne, this one CAN show the real Accusative-of-Exclamation grammar again, since vesper is masculine, not neuter bonum vesperum
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 34, p. 119
Good Morning
chapter topic; Chapter 32, p. 111
"good morning" — a modern, pedagogical phrase (not classically attested); unlike bonam noctem, its grammar is genuinely invisible, since māne is neuter and Latin neuters never distinguish nominative from accusative — Romans instead had a real, richly documented morning GREETING RITUAL, the salūtātiō, whose root is a doublet of salvē's own bonum māne
explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 32, p. 111
Good Night
chapter topic; Chapter 30, p. 107

"good night" — genuine Latin grammar (wishes take the accusative, not the nominative), though the fixed phrase itself may be a later/modern convention rather than a directly-attested ancient formula bonam noctem
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 30, p. 107
goodbye (lit. "be strong") valē / valēte
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1
goods, merchandise merx, mercis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 933
Goose, Bee, Fly, Ant, Butterfly
chapter topic; Chapter 132, p. 735
grain, corn frūmentum, frūmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 421
Grain, Flour, Pear, Fig, Nut
chapter topic; Chapter 81, p. 421
grammar grammatica, grammaticae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1317
Grammar, Philosophy, Eagerness, Question, Answer
chapter topic; Chapter 226, p. 1317
greedy avārus, avāra, avārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 269, p. 1581
Green and Yellow
chapter topic; Chapter 18, p. 69
green and yellow — viridis is the direct, kept source of Spanish's verde; flāvus is Latin's own real word for yellow, and almost NO Romance language kept it as their everyday color word — most (French, Italian, Romanian) converged on a DIFFERENT shared Latin word instead viridis, flāvus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 18, p. 69
Greetings
chapter topic; Chapter 1, p. 1
grey cānus, cāna, cānum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 839

H

hail grandō, grandinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 721
hail (a formal greeting) avē / avēte
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 1, p. 1
Hair, Belly, Back, Forehead, Beard
chapter topic; Chapter 65, p. 325

happy, glad laetus, laeta, laetum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 349
hard dūrus, dūra, dūrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 803
Hard, Soft, Lukewarm, Ancient, Narrow
chapter topic; Chapter 143, p. 803
hard-working dīligēns, dīligentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 845 hardly vix
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1223
he, she, it — the pronoun Latin does not really have, doing the job anyway is, ea, id
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 233
Head and Hand
chapter topic; Chapter 8, p. 31
health valētūdō, valētūdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 987
Health, Brain, Lung, Liver, Kidney
chapter topic; Chapter 173, p. 987
healthy, sound sānus, sāna, sānum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 331
Hear the greeting; write it independently
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 1, p. 1
Hearing, Sleeping, Sitting, Standing
chapter topic; Chapter 40, p. 159
heavy, serious gravis, grave
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1043
hello (lit. "be well") salvē / salvēte
explicit focus: pronunciation, writing, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1
Helmet, Spear, Bow, Arrow, Trumpet
chapter topic; Chapter 277, p. 1631
Helmsman, Market, Weight, Measure, Pound
chapter topic; Chapter 186, p. 1069
here and there passim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 264, p. 1551
Hesperia, víspera, vespers — the root after Latin etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 33, p. 115
Hic, Iste, Ille, Is, Ibi
chapter topic; Chapter 50, p. 233
hide, leather corium, coriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1459
high; deep altus, alta, altum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 495
highest, the top of summus, summa, summum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1051

history historia, historiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1119
holidays fēriae, fēriārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1483
Holidays, Banquet, Sacrifice, Altar, Goddess
chapter topic; Chapter 253, p. 1483
hollow, vain inānis, ināne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1043
honest, upright probus, proba, probum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1235
honey — the root of mellifluous and marmalade, and of molasses by way of Portuguese mel, mellis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 47, p. 207
honourable honestus, honesta, honestum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1051
hope spēs, speī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 611
Horse, Ox, Sheep, Goat, Pig
chapter topic; Chapter 90, p. 477
hospitality; lodging hospitium, hospitiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1323
Hot, Cold, Dry, Wet, Sweet
chapter topic; Chapter 95, p. 507
hot, warm calidus, calida, calidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 507
hour — the source word itself, and the Roman hour was NOT a fixed length hōra
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 13, p. 51
How
chapter topic; Chapter 26, p. 99
How Are You?
chapter topic; Chapter 19, p. 71
how are you? — literally, what are you doing? quid agis?
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 19, p. 71
how do you fare? ut valēs?
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 19, p. 71
"how, in what way" — the genuine classical word behind Italian come, Spanish cómo, and French comment, which went one step further and double-marked "manner" quōmodo
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 26, p. 99
however, nevertheless tamen
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1019
hunger famēs, famis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 343

Husband, Wife, Children
chapter topic; Chapter 71, p. 361

I

"I am" — the verb every sentence leans on, and the one whose forms English still shares outright sum, esse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I am twenty years old" — literally "I am, having been born, twenty years [so far]"; NEITHER Romance's "have" NOR Germanic's "be my years" — Latin used a THIRD construction, later abandoned vīgintī annōs nātus sum
explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 14, p. 53
"I answer" — literally "I pledge back", from the verb Romans used for a solemn promise, and the reason a husband is a spouse respondeō, respondēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 43, p. 183
"I ask" — a verb probably built on "stretching straight out", and a cousin of regal, direct and right rogō, rogāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 151
"I bring, I carry" — one verb built out of two unrelated roots, and the parent of transfer, refer, prefer, differ, offer and suffer ferō, ferre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 175
"I buy" — a verb that once meant simply "I take", which is the only reason redeem, example and premium mean what they do emō, emere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 43, p. 183
I can — potis plus sum, and the verb that will not sit still possum, posse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 225
"I close" — the word English calls close, and the fourth of four claudō, claudere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 167
"I come" — a Latin verb that really is the same inherited word as English come veniō, venīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
I do not know — and the rule the whole chapter turns on: nōn stands in front of the verb nesciō, nescīre
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 48, p. 215
I drink — the verb inside beverage, bib and imbibe bibō, bibere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 265

I eat — and the infinitive that collides with to be edō, esse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 265
"I get" — two verbs, each one a prefix bolted onto a verb you already know, and each one bent out of shape by the join accipiō, obtineō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 175
"I give" — the last of the chapter's eight verbs, and the one that gave English data, date, tradition and dose dō, dare
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I go" — the shortest verb in Latin, whose bare stem is a single vowel eō, īre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I have" — a verb that looks exactly like its English translation and is not related to it at all habeō, habēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I hear" — the verb inside audio, audience and audit, and, less obviously, inside obey audiō, audīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 159
"I help" — the verb hiding inside English aid, aide and adjutant, and no relation to juvenile adiuvō, adiuvāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 151
"I know" — one of Latin's two verbs for knowing, and the one that gave English science and nice sciō, scīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I love" — the chapter's fourth verb, the first thing generations of pupils ever chanted, and the word inside enemy amō, amāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 151
"I meet" — two verbs for meeting, each one a prefix on a verb you already know, and the verb hiding inside a phrase from chapter 21 conveniō, occurrō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 43, p. 183
"I open" — half of a matched pair, built from one root with two opposite prefixes aperiō, aperīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 167
"I play" — a small verb with an outsized English family, most of which is about being fooled rather than about play lūdō, lūdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 175
"I read" — a verb that first meant "to gather", which is why English got collect, elegant, lecture and legible from it legō, legere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 143
"I run" — the verb inside current, curriculum, courier and corridor, and, by way of a Celtic wagon, inside car currō, currere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 167

"I say" — a verb that originally meant "point out", which is why English got both dictionary and teach from it dīcō, dīcere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I see" — the widest root in this chapter, because seeing and knowing were once one idea videō, vidēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 37, p. 129
"I sit" — the verb that is English sit by descent and English session by loan, and the clearest case of the difference sedeō, sedēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 159
"I sleep" — the verb behind dormitory and dormant, and the one word English may only look as though it borrowed dormiō, dormīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 159
"I stand" — the shortest verb in the chapter and the most productive in English, and the fourth of four stō, stāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 159
"I take" — the verb the habeō lesson promised, and the true relative of English have capiō, capere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 151
"I think" — the verb of cōgitō ergō sum, built from a word meaning "to shake together" cōgitō, cōgitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 143
"I understand" — literally inter plus legō, "to read between", and the ancestor of intellect and intelligence intellegō, intellegere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 143
"I wait" — to wait, in Latin, is to look out for something, and the four verbs of this chapter together exspectō, exspectāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 175
"I walk" — the verb behind ambulance, preamble and the pram, and a rare case where the front half is clear and the back half is not ambulō, ambulāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 167
I want — and the root inside voluntary, benevolent and will itself volō, velle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 225
"I write" — a verb whose root means "to scratch", and the fourth of this chapter's four scrībō, scrībere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 143
ice glaciēs, glaciēī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 721
icy gelidus, gelida, gelidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 859

idle, cowardly ignāvus, ignāva, ignāvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1235
if only utinam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 265, p. 1557
in the way, to meet obviam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1211
in vain frūstrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1223
indeed; but vērō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1217
industrious, active industrius, industria, industrium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1409
Industrious, Talkative, Worried, Unmarried, Rainy
chapter topic; Chapter 241, p. 1409
ink ātrāmentum, ātrāmentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 685
Inquisitive, Envious, Anxious, Peaceful, Silent
chapter topic; Chapter 212, p. 1229
inquisitive, painstaking cūriōsus, cūriōsa, cūriōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1229
inside, within intrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 549
iron ferrum, ferrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1291
"it is a pleasure to have met you" — an attested Plautine phrase that can fill a conversational slot for which Classical Latin has no single fixed idiom volup est convēnisse
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 21, p. 81
it is allowed, one may licet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 599
it is necessary, one ought oportet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 599
Iterum, Magister, Discipulus, Schola, Liber
chapter topic; Chapter 53, p. 257

J

joy gaudium, gaudiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 349
Joy, Anger, Fear
chapter topic; Chapter 69, p. 349
juice sūcus, sūcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 709

K

Kin, Uncle, Aunt, Truth, Lie
chapter topic; Chapter 189, p. 1087
kind benignus, benigna, benignum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 853
Kitchen, Roof, Lamp, Cup, Knife
chapter topic; Chapter 83, p. 433
known, famous nōtus, nōta, nōtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1051
Known, Famous, Honourable, Middle, Highest
chapter topic; Chapter 183, p. 1051

L

lame claudus, clauda, claudum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1057
lastly postrēmō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1205
lazy piger, pigra, pigrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 845
left (not right) sinister, sinistra, sinistrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 623
leisure ōtium, ōtiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 274, p. 1613
Leisure, Business, Profit, Loss, Debt
chapter topic; Chapter 274, p. 1613
light (not heavy) levis, leve
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 501 Light, Shadow, and Going to Sleep
chapter topic; Chapter 46, p. 201
light — the root of lucid, translucent and Lucifer, and a cousin of English light itself lūx, lūcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 46, p. 201
lightning fulgur, fulguris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 721
Linen cloth, Soap, Sponge, Water jar, Cup
chapter topic; Chapter 141, p. 791
linen, flax līnum, līnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1459
Live, Enter, Return, Fear, Rejoice
chapter topic; Chapter 78, p. 403
Lizard, Wild boar, Billy goat, Lamb, Calf
chapter topic; Chapter 224, p. 1305

long longus, longa, longum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 495
long since iamdūdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1205
loss, damage damnum, damnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 274, p. 1613
love amor, amōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1377
low humilis, humile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 809
Low, Thick, Thin, Blind, Sharp
chapter topic; Chapter 144, p. 809
loyal fīdēlis, fīdēle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1421
lucky, happy fēlīx, fēlīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 833
Lucky, Wretched, Angry, Quiet, Purple
chapter topic; Chapter 148, p. 833
lukewarm tepidus, tepida, tepidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 803
lunch prandium, prandiī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 409

M

Maidservant, Freedman, Newcomer, Young person, Widow
chapter topic; Chapter 220, p. 1279
marble marmor, marmoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1459
Mārcus or Mārcō? — a real classical variation
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 20, p. 77
meanwhile intereā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 263, p. 1543
meat carō, carnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 409
medicine medicīna, medicīnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 337
memory memoria, memoriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1193
"midday, noon" — the same medius diēs you already know, contracted into one word; Romans split the day around IT (ante/post merīdiem), not into a separate colloquial "afternoon" the way Spanish's tarde or French's après-midi do merīdiēs explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 35, p. 123

middle, the middle of medius, media, medium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1051
milk — the root of lactose, lettuce and, at one remove, of the Milky Way itself lac, lactis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 47, p. 207 mind, spirit animus, animī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 995
Mist, Breeze, Root, Thorn, Crop
chapter topic; Chapter 223, p. 1297
mist, darkness cālīgō, cālīginis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1297
moderate, restrained modestus, modesta, modestum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1057
money — and the cattle it is named after pecūnia, pecūniae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 241
Months
chapter topic; Chapter 11, p. 43
moreover; however autem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1217
Moreover, Indeed, Surely, About, Only
chapter topic; Chapter 210, p. 1217
Morning
chapter topic; Chapter 31, p. 109
"morning, early" — the word already hiding inside dē māne (the source of French demain, Italian domani, and Catalan demà, all rebuilt "tomorrow" from this phrase) and, without the dē-, the direct base of Spanish mañana too, now standing alone māne
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 31, p. 109
most, especially maximē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1025
Mouse, Hen, Donkey, Elephant, Deer
chapter topic; Chapter 92, p. 489
much, a lot multum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 567
mud lutum, lutī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 275, p. 1619
music mūsica, mūsicae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1439
mute, silent mūtus, mūta, mūtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1057
my — the possessive the name lesson did without meus, mea, meum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 249

N

Nail, Hammer, Saw, Axe, Ladder
chapter topic; Chapter 122, p. 673
narrow angustus, angusta, angustum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 803
nearest, next proximus, proxima, proximum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 267, p. 1569
necessary necessārius, necessāria, necessārium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1403
Neck, Shoulder, Knee, Heart
chapter topic; Chapter 64, p. 319
Nescio, Male, Malus, Sed, Aut
chapter topic; Chapter 48, p. 215
never numquam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 561
new novus, nova, novum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 501
New, Old, Light, Fast, Slow
chapter topic; Chapter 94, p. 501
Next day, Meanwhile, At some time, For a long time, Shortly
chapter topic; Chapter 263, p. 1543
next to, close by iūxtā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 653
Nice to Meet You
chapter topic; Chapter 21, p. 81
Night
chapter topic; Chapter 29, p. 105
"night" — the word already hiding inside media nox ('midnight'), one of the most rock-solid PIE roots in the whole Indo-European family nox
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 29, p. 105
ninth — and the hour that turned into noon nōnus, nōna, nōnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 281
no, not any nūllus, nūlla, nūllum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 915
nobody, no one nēmō, nēminis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 915
Noon and Afternoon
chapter topic; Chapter 35, p. 123
Noon and Midnight
chapter topic; Chapter 12, p. 47
noon and midnight — the source phrase daughters kept whole, wore down unevenly, or eroded almost entirely medius diēs, media nox
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 12, p. 47

nothing nihil
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 915
Nothing, Nobody, No, Which of Two, Neither ... Nor
chapter topic; Chapter 161, p. 915
now nunc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 561
now and then nōnnumquam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1007
nowhere nusquam
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 264, p. 1551
Nowhere, From all sides, Here and there, Upwards, Downwards
chapter topic; Chapter 264, p. 1551
Numbers Eleven to Twenty
chapter topic; Chapter 16, p. 61
Numbers One to Ten
chapter topic; Chapter 2, p. 11
Numerī Ōrdinis
chapter topic; Chapter 55, p. 273

O

of one's own accord sponte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1223
of the country, boorish rūsticus, rūstica, rūsticum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1031
of the home, tame domesticus, domestica, domesticum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1241
often saepe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 561
Often, Always, Never, Now, Soon
chapter topic; Chapter 104, p. 561
oil oleum, oleī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 415
old vetus, veteris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 501 on the contrary immō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 265, p. 1557
on the spot illicō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1205
on this side citrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1391
once, a single time semel
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1007

once, long ago; one day ōlim
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 921
one to five — the Roman originals that became every Romance number ūnus duo trēs quattuor quīnque
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 2, p. 11
only; so much tantum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1217
Open space, Milestone, Around, Next to, Opposite
chapter topic; Chapter 119, p. 653
Opinion, Conversation, Speech, Rumour, History
chapter topic; Chapter 194, p. 1119
Opportunity, Danger, Kindness, Duty, Work
chapter topic; Chapter 248, p. 1453
opposite, against contrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 653
or — and the second or, which asks a different question aut
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 48, p. 215
order, a row ōrdō, ōrdinis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1329
other, another alius, alia, aliud
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1415
out of doors forīs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1013
outside, beyond extrā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 549
over there illīc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1013

P

Pace, Witness, Defendant, Punishment, Charge
chapter topic; Chapter 218, p. 1267
Pack, Satchel, Money bag, Tent, Flag
chapter topic; Chapter 254, p. 1489
pain, grief dolor, dolōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 337
paper, a sheet charta, chartae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 439
patience patientia, patientiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 995
Patience, Tear, Laugh, Voice, Mind
chapter topic; Chapter 174, p. 995
patient patiēns, patientis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1235

peace pāx, pācis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1075
Peace, Leader, Victory, Freedom, Glory
chapter topic; Chapter 187, p. 1075
peaceful, placid placidus, placida, placidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1229
People, State, Homeland, Enemy, War
chapter topic; Chapter 271, p. 1593
pepper piper, piperis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 703
perhaps fortasse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1397
philosophy philosophia, philosophiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1317
Plaster, Remedy, Dream, Love, Friendship
chapter topic; Chapter 236, p. 1377
pleasant iūcundus, iūcunda, iūcundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 815
Please
chapter topic; Chapter 3, p. 15
please (literally "I ask, I beg") quaesō
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 3, p. 15
pluit, calor, sol — three pieces of weather language
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 15, p. 57 polite, of the city urbānus, urbāna, urbānum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1031
poor pauper, pauperis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 525
porridge puls, pultis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 279, p. 1643
Possum, Volo, Qui, Et, Quando
chapter topic; Chapter 49, p. 225
power, the ability to act potestās, potestātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 593
private prīvātus, prīvāta, prīvātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1043
profit lucrum, lucrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 274, p. 1613
proud superbus, superba, superbum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 853
Proud, Kind, Cruel, Ugly, Beautiful
chapter topic; Chapter 151, p. 853
public pūblicus, pūblica, pūblicum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1043

Public, Private, Common, Hollow, Heavy
chapter topic; Chapter 182, p. 1043
Puppy, Tiger, Club, Chain, Shield
chapter topic; Chapter 251, p. 1471
purple purpureus, purpurea, purpureum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 833

Q

quiet, calm quiētus, quiēta, quiētum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 833
quite, very admodum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1025

R

Racecourse, Hall of justice, Senate house, Anchor, Oar
chapter topic; Chapter 270, p. 1587
rain pluvia, pluviae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 471
rainy pluvius, pluvia, pluvium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1409
rare, thin rārus, rāra, rārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1241
rarely rārō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 567
Rarely, Already, Then, Much, Little
chapter topic; Chapter 105, p. 567
rather potius
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1025
raw crūdus, crūda, crūdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1037
Reading — Objects, Places, and a Day
chapter topic; Chapter 59, p. 299
Reading — Words, Lines, and a First Passage
chapter topic; Chapter 58, p. 295
ready parātus, parāta, parātum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 268, p. 1575
Reason, Because of that, Place, Right, Left
chapter topic; Chapter 114, p. 623
recently nūper
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 921

Recently, the Day before Yesterday, Once, Before, To Happen
chapter topic; Chapter 162, p. 921
red (rock-solid) and blue (surprisingly shaky) — Latin's clearest color word, and one of its weakest ruber, caeruleus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 6, p. 23
Region, Province, From there, In the way, All the way
chapter topic; Chapter 209, p. 1211
Reputation, Messenger, Show, Actor, Story
chapter topic; Chapter 219, p. 1273
reputation, rumour fāma, fāmae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1273
rich dīves, dīvitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 525
Rich, Poor, Foolish, Enough, Too Much
chapter topic; Chapter 98, p. 525
right (not left) dexter, dextra, dextrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 623
River, Lake, Stream, Spring, Coast
chapter topic; Chapter 87, p. 459
Roof tile, Furnace, Litter, Vehicle, Chariot
chapter topic; Chapter 217, p. 1261
Rough, Deep, Unknown, Necessary, Useless
chapter topic; Chapter 240, p. 1403
rough, harsh asper, aspera, asperum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1403
round rotundus, rotunda, rotundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 513
Rule, Difference, Outcome, Fortune, Accident
chapter topic; Chapter 221, p. 1285
Running stream, Marsh, Meadow, Grove, Sacred grove
chapter topic; Chapter 196, p. 1131

S

Sack, Box, Cushion, Blanket, Napkin
chapter topic; Chapter 120, p. 661
sad trīstis, trīste
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 349
safe tūtus, tūta, tūtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 827
salt — a cousin of English salt, and the word a Roman soldier's salary was named for sāl, salis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 47, p. 207

Salt, Honey, Milk, Egg, Fish
chapter topic; Chapter 47, p. 207
salvē — copy one greeting with help
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 1, p. 1
salvē — look, hide, write, check
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 1, p. 1
salvē — the greeting that does not watch the clock
culture and usage topic; explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 36, p. 125
sand harēna, harēnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 465
Saturday and Sunday — Rome's own pagan names, and how Christianity later renamed them diēs Saturnī, diēs Sōlis
explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 5, p. 19
savage, cruel saevus, saeva, saevum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1241
Savage, Wild, Of the home, Rare, Frequent
chapter topic; Chapter 214, p. 1241
scissors forfex, forficis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 783
Seasons
chapter topic; Chapter 9, p. 35
second — and the verb hiding inside it secundus, secunda, secundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 273
Second of two, Suitable, Fit, Ready, Facing
chapter topic; Chapter 268, p. 1575
"see you later/soon" — a genuine change of pace from the last few lessons: this one IS solidly attested, twice, in Cicero's own letters propediem tē vidēbō
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 24, p. 93
See You Soon
chapter topic; Chapter 24, p. 93
See You Tomorrow
chapter topic; Chapter 25, p. 95
"see you tomorrow" — built from two genuinely classical pieces (crās, "tomorrow," and vidēbō, already met last lesson) using the exact same pattern as the attested propediem tē vidēbō, though this specific combination isn't itself pulled from one surviving letter crās tē vidēbō
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 25, p. 95
Send, Stay, Fall, Put, Find
chapter topic; Chapter 77, p. 397
seventh — the ending wears the vowel down septimus, septima, septimum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 281

Sextus ad Decimum
chapter topic; Chapter 56, p. 281
shame, modesty pudor, pudōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 262, p. 1537
sharp acūtus, acūta, acūtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 809
short, brief brevis, breve
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 495
shortly, soon brevī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 263, p. 1543
shy, modest verēcundus, verēcunda, verēcundum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1031
sick, ill aeger, aegra, aegrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 343
Sick, Tired, Hungry, Thirsty
chapter topic; Chapter 68, p. 343
silent tacitus, tacita, tacitum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1229
silk sēricum, sēricī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 275, p. 1619
Silk, Mud, Dust, Smoke, Ash
chapter topic; Chapter 275, p. 1619
silver argenteus, argentea, argenteum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 839
silver argentum, argentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1291
similar, like similis, simile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 266, p. 1563
six to ten — and the four that got frozen into the calendar sex septem octō novem decem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 2, p. 11
sixth — and the nap named after the sixth hour sextus, sexta, sextum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 281
sleep — the word under insomnia and somnolent, and a cousin of Sanskrit svapna somnus, somnī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 46, p. 201
slow lentus, lenta, lentum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 501 small parvus, parva, parvum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 495
Small flask, Frying pan, Oven, Candlestick, Small tablet
chapter topic; Chapter 252, p. 1477
smoke fūmus, fūmī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 275, p. 1619

snow nix, nivis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 471
soap sāpō, sāpōnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 791
sober sōbrius, sōbria, sōbrium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 269, p. 1581
soft mollis, molle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 803
sometimes interdum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1383
Son, Daughter, Grandparents
chapter topic; Chapter 70, p. 355
Song, Line of verse, Writer, Painter, Music
chapter topic; Chapter 246, p. 1439
soon mox
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 561
Sorry
chapter topic; Chapter 4, p. 17
Sour, Alive, Gentle, Fierce, Pleasant
chapter topic; Chapter 145, p. 815
sour, unripe acerbus, acerba, acerbum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 815
special, chief praecipuus, praecipua, praecipuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 267, p. 1569
Spider, Frog, Hare, Fox, Bull
chapter topic; Chapter 133, p. 741
Spoon, Cooking pot, Dish, Bowl, Candle
chapter topic; Chapter 121, p. 667
Statue, Sign, Sail, Wagon, Long dress
chapter topic; Chapter 125, p. 691
Step, Library, Food market, Eating-house, Inn
chapter topic; Chapter 117, p. 641
still, until now adhūc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1001
Stone, Sand, Hill, Valley, Cave
chapter topic; Chapter 88, p. 465
Storeroom, Study, Colonnaded garden, Rain basin, Foundation
chapter topic; Chapter 185, p. 1063
straight, right rēctus, rēcta, rēctum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 821
strong validus, valida, validum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 859
Strong, Weak, Alone, Icy, Clear
chapter topic; Chapter 152, p. 859

suddenly subitō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1001 suitable idōneus, idōnea, idōneum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 268, p. 1575
sunrise; a rising ortus, ortūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1199
sunset; a setting occāsus, occāsūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1199
sure, certain certus, certa, certum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 827
surely profectō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1217
sweet dulcis, dulce
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 507

T

Table, Chair, Bed, Window
chapter topic; Chapter 82, p. 427
Taking, Asking, Helping, Loving
chapter topic; Chapter 39, p. 151
talent, character ingenium, ingeniī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1193
talkative loquāx, loquācis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1409
Tax, Tribute, Wages, Denarius, Sesterce
chapter topic; Chapter 190, p. 1093
Telling Time
chapter topic; Chapter 13, p. 51
tenth — and the tax that took one in ten decimus, decima, decimum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 281
thank you (lit. "I give thanks to you") grātiās (tibi) agō
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1
that, near you — the middle point, and the one Latin used to sneer with iste, ista, istud
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 233
that, over there — the far point, and the word that became the Romance article ille, illa, illud
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 233
the back dorsum, dorsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 753
the back tergum, tergī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 325

the belly venter, ventris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 325
the book — and the bark it was written on liber, librī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 257
the brain cerebrum, cerebrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 987
the chest, the breast pectus, pectoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 331
the chin mentum, mentī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 753
the dawn aurōra, aurōrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 555
the day after tomorrow perendiē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 927
The Day after Tomorrow, Afterwards, a Plan, To Decide, To Foresee
chapter topic; Chapter 163, p. 927
the day before prīdiē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1383
the day before yesterday nudiustertius
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 921
the doctor — from measuring, not from healing medicus, medicī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 241
the door or gate — and the reason a harbour, a porch and a portal are all the same word porta, portae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 189
the ear — and the reason a Roman listened by obeying auris, auris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 265
the earth — dry land as opposed to sea, and the root under terrain, terrace and Mediterranean terra, terrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 45, p. 195
the egg — a cousin of English egg, with two sound changes that hide the relationship completely ōvum, ōvī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 47, p. 207
the end; a boundary fīnis, fīnis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1383
the eye — and the eye already hiding inside a word you know oculus, oculī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 265
the fish — and the single clearest demonstration in this book of the sound law linking Latin to English piscis, piscis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 47, p. 207

the foot — the clearest Grimm's Law pair in the book, and the last word of the tranche pēs, pedis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 265
the forehead, the front frōns, frontis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 325
the four seasons — and why Romance languages often skipped the plain noun for an adjective phrase instead vēr, aestās, autumnus, hiems
explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 9, p. 35
the friend — from the verb to love, and the word the bread lesson pointed at and did not give amīcus, amīcī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 241
the garden — an enclosed piece of ground, and a true blood relative of English yard and garden hortus, hortī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 189
the hand — a rare feminine noun in an overwhelmingly masculine group of Latin words manus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 8, p. 31
the head — the word French abandoned, but Spanish and English kept working hard caput
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 8, p. 31
the heart cor, cordis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 319
the hearth — the fire in the middle of the house, and the reason a lens has a focus focus, focī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 189
The House, and Who Is Inside It
chapter topic; Chapter 44, p. 189
the house — the building a family lives in, and the root under domestic, dome and dominate domus, domūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 189
the liver iecur, iecoris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 987
the main hall of a house ātrium, ātriī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 635
the metal lead plumbum, plumbī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1291
the moon — the same root as lux, worn down to mean 'the shining one' lūna, lūnae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 46, p. 201
the neck collum, collī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 319
the next day postrīdiē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 263, p. 1543

the nose nāsus, nāsī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 313
the others, the remaining cēterī, cēterae, cētera
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1415
the public baths thermae, thermārum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1427
the pupil — from learning, and the reason discipline means what it does discipulus, discipulī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 257
The same writing, with a clock
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 61, p. 309
the school — a Greek word that first meant leisure schola, scholae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 257
the sea — the word that finishes Mediterranean and names every marine thing in English mare, maris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 45, p. 195
the second of two, the other alter, altera, alterum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 268, p. 1575
the senate house cūria, cūriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 270, p. 1587
the shade or shadow — and the reason a little shade is called an umbrella umbra, umbrae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 46, p. 201
the shoulder umerus, umerī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 319
the skin cutis, cutis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 759
the sky, and the heavens — the word under celestial, and under a ceiling painted like the sky caelum, caelī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 45, p. 195
the soldier — the noun every Latin narrative turns on mīles, mīlitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 241
the star — a cousin of English star, and the word inside constellation and disaster stēlla, stēllae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 46, p. 201
the stomach stomachus, stomachī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 759
the teacher — the greater one, against minister, the lesser magister, magistrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 257
the tongue; a language lingua, linguae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 313

the twelve months — and the two ORIGINAL names, Quintilis and Sextilis, before Rome renamed them Iānuārius, Februārius, Mārtius, Aprīlis, Māius, Iūnius, Quīntīlis, Sextīlis, September, Octōber, November, December
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 11, p. 43
the wall — the one that keeps things out, not the one that divides a room mūrus, mūrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 189
the weekdays (Monday–Friday) — the full, un-worn-down planet-god phrases diēs Lūnae, Mārtis, Mercuriī, Iovis, Veneris
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 5, p. 19
the wind — and a true Germanic cousin, with the sound change that proves it ventus, ventī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 45, p. 195
then, at that time tum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 567
then, next deinde
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 543
there — the place word the corpus has gone fifty chapters without ibi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 233
therefore igitur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1019
Therefore, However, Although, Even if, Unless
chapter topic; Chapter 178, p. 1019
thick, fat crassus, crassa, crassum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 809
Thief, Robber, Consul, General, Kingdom
chapter topic; Chapter 245, p. 1433
thin tenuis, tenue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 809
Thinking, Reading, Writing
chapter topic; Chapter 38, p. 143
third — the first ordinal with its own number visible inside it tertius, tertia, tertium
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 273
thirst sitis, sitis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 343
thirty trīgintā
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 573
Thirty to a Thousand
chapter topic; Chapter 106, p. 573

this, here by me — the near point of a three-way system Spanish still keeps hic, haec, hoc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 233
thrifty, sparing parcus, parca, parcum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 269, p. 1581
thunder tonitrus, tonitrūs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 721
timid, shy timidus, timida, timidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 845
tired fessus, fessa, fessum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 343
to accompany comitor, comitārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1341
to add addō, addere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1341
to admire admīror, admīrārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 969
To advise, To tremble, To welcome, To do, To go forward
chapter topic; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to advise, to urge suādeō, suādēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to allow permittō, permittere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 945
to announce nūntiō, nūntiāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1341
to annoy, to harass vexō, vexāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1173
to appear appāreō, appārēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1341
to approach appropinquō, appropinquāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 963
To approve, To mark, To discuss, To promise, To allow
chapter topic; Chapter 166, p. 945
to approve, to prove probō, probāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 945
to arrive adveniō, advenīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 907
to avoid vītō, vītāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1149
to be able, can queō, quīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 593
To be able, To dare, To have to, To be used to, Power
chapter topic; Chapter 109, p. 593
to be missing, to fail dēsum, deesse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1347

to be silent taceō, tacēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 901
to be used to, usually do soleō, solēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 593
to believe, to trust crēdō, crēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 975
to blame, to criticise reprehendō, reprehendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1149
to blush ērubēscō, ērubēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 260, p. 1525
to break frangō, frangere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 883
to break off, to interrupt interrumpō, interrumpere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1359
To break, To throw, To carry, To carry, To untie
chapter topic; Chapter 156, p. 883
to breathe spīrō, spīrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 259, p. 1519
to build aedificō, aedificāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 865
to burn, to be on fire ārdeō, ārdēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 951
To burn, To set on fire, To throw away, To calculate, To knock
chapter topic; Chapter 167, p. 951
to burst, to break apart rumpō, rumpere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1495
to calculate computō, computāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 951
to call vocō, vocāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 391
to care for cūrō, cūrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 531
to carry portō, portāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 883
to carry (by cart or ship) vehō, vehere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 883
to carry, to wear gerō, gerere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 877
to cease dēsinō, dēsinere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1179
to celebrate celebrō, celebrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1161
to change mūtō, mūtāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 901

to clap, to applaud plaudō, plaudere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1501
To clap, To cross, To increase, To lessen, To warn
chapter topic; Chapter 256, p. 1501
to clean pūrgō, pūrgāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 877
to climb, to go up ascendō, ascendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 865
to compare; to get ready comparō, comparāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1149
To compare, To persuade, To blame, To share, To avoid
chapter topic; Chapter 199, p. 1149
to complain queror, querī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1347
to cook coquō, coquere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 391
to correct (a fault) ēmendō, ēmendāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to count numerō, numerāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 907
To count, To destroy, To go away, To arrive, To live
chapter topic; Chapter 160, p. 907
to create, to elect creō, creāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 975
to cross, to go over trānseō, trānsīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1501
to dance saltō, saltāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 385
to dare audeō, audēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 593
to deceive fallō, fallere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 975
To deceive, To endure, To found, To create, To believe
chapter topic; Chapter 171, p. 975
to decide, to set up cōnstituō, cōnstituere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 927
to decorate ōrnō, ōrnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1179
to decree, to settle dēcernō, dēcernere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1335
To decree, To try, To go on, To hold off, To remove
chapter topic; Chapter 229, p. 1335
to defend dēfendō, dēfendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1143

to deny, to say no negō, negāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 981
To deserve, To correct, To offer, To watch, To stroll
chapter topic; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to deserve, to earn mereor, merērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to desire, to long for cupiō, cupere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 605
to destroy, to wipe out dēleō, dēlēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 907
to die morior, morī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1143
to dig fodiō, fodere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to dine cēnō, cēnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 895
to discuss, to argue disputō, disputāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 945
to do, to drive agō, agere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to doubt, to hesitate dubitō, dubitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1173
To doubt, To look for, To use up, To annoy, To forget
chapter topic; Chapter 203, p. 1173
to dread metuō, metuere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 258, p. 1513
to dream somniō, somniāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 258, p. 1513
To dream, To push, To go past, To make no sound, To dread
chapter topic; Chapter 258, p. 1513
to endure, to put up with tolerō, tolerāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 975
to enjoy fruor, fruī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1347
to enter intrō, intrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 403
to entrust, to order mandō, mandāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1365
to exchange permūtō, permūtāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 259, p. 1519
to explain, to unfold explicō, explicāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1137
to fall cadō, cadere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 397

to fear timeō, timēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 403
to feed, to nourish alō, alere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 260, p. 1525
to feel sentiō, sentīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 901
To feel, To hang, To be silent, To keep, To change
chapter topic; Chapter 159, p. 901
to fight pugnō, pugnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 537
to fill impleō, implēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1495
to find, to come upon inveniō, invenīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 397
to flee, to run away fugiō, fugere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 543
to fly about volitō, volitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1155
to fold plicō, plicāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 957
To fold, To own, To make ready in advance, To lend, To propose
chapter topic; Chapter 168, p. 957
to follow sequor, sequī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1371
to forbid vetō, vetāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1143
To forbid, To defend, To die, To marry, To rest
chapter topic; Chapter 198, p. 1143
to force; to collect cōgō, cōgere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to foresee, to provide for prōvideō, prōvidēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 927
to forget oblīvīscor, oblīvīscī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1173
to found; to hide away condō, condere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 975
to gather, to collect colligō, colligere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1365
to get to know, to learn cognōscō, cognōscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 531
to get used to cōnsuēscō, cōnsuēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 963
to give back reddō, reddere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 889

To give back, To show, To shine, To lose, To win
chapter topic; Chapter 157, p. 889
To give birth to, To order, To force, To mourn, To dig
chapter topic; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to give birth to, to produce gignō, gignere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to give up dēsistō, dēsistere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 259, p. 1519
to go away, to leave discēdō, discēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 907
to go back, to return redeō, redīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 403
to go down dēscendō, dēscendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 865
to go fishing piscor, piscārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 981
to go forward, to advance prōcēdō, prōcēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to go on, to continue pergō, pergere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1335
to go past praetereō, praeterīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 258, p. 1513
to greet salūtō, salūtāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1137
to grow crēscō, crēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 895
To grow, To hurry, To stay awake, To dine, To taste
chapter topic; Chapter 158, p. 895
to hand over trādō, trādere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1161
to hang pendeō, pendēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 901
to happen accidō, accidere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 921
to have to, must; to owe dēbeō, dēbēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 593
to here, hither hūc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 629
To here, To there, Theatre, Bath, Military camp
chapter topic; Chapter 115, p. 629
to hold teneō, tenēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1495
to hold back, to keep retineō, retinēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1365

to hold off, to be idle cessō, cessāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1335
To hold, To burst, To warm, To fill, To measure
chapter topic; Chapter 255, p. 1495
to hunt vēnor, vēnārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 981
to hurry festīnō, festīnāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 895
to hurt, to grieve doleō, dolēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1179
to increase augeō, augēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1501
to interpret, to translate interpretor, interpretārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1137
to invite invītō, invītāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1137
to join iungō, iungere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 871
To join, To visit, To sing, To paint, To lead
chapter topic; Chapter 154, p. 871
to jump saliō, salīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 939
to keep, to save servō, servāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 901
to kill interficiō, interficere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 963
To kill, To get used to, To make haste, To move back, To approach
chapter topic; Chapter 169, p. 963
to kiss ōsculor, ōsculārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1137
To kiss, To greet, To invite, To explain, To interpret
chapter topic; Chapter 197, p. 1137
to knock, to beat pulsō, pulsāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 951
to laugh rīdeō, rīdēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 385
to lead dūcō, dūcere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 871
to lend commodō, commodāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 957
to lessen, to decrease minuō, minuere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1501
To let down, To gather, To vanish, To entrust, To hold back
chapter topic; Chapter 234, p. 1365

to let down, to lower dēmittō, dēmittere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1365
to lift, to raise; to remove tollō, tollere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1155
To lift, To reach, To recognise, To refuse, To fly about
chapter topic; Chapter 200, p. 1155
to light, to kindle accendō, accendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 939
To light, To put out, To jump, To smile, To shout
chapter topic; Chapter 165, p. 939
to lighten, to lift levō, levāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 969
to live vīvō, vīvere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 403
to live (somewhere) habitō, habitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 907
to look for, to ask quaerō, quaerere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1173
to lose perdō, perdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 889
to make haste properō, properāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 963
to make no sound sileō, silēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 258, p. 1513
to make ready in advance praeparō, praeparāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 957
To make, To carry, To put on, To take off, To clean
chapter topic; Chapter 155, p. 877
to make, to do faciō, facere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 877
to mark, to seal signō, signāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 945
to marry (of a bride) nūbō, nūbere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1143
to measure mētior, mētīrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1495
to miss, to long for dēsīderō, dēsīderāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 605
to mix misceō, miscēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1359
to mourn lūgeō, lūgēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to move moveō, movēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 531

to move back, to withdraw recēdō, recēdere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 963
to not want, to refuse nōlō, nōlle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 599
to notice animadvertō, animadvertere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 260, p. 1525
to obey pāreō, pārēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1359
to offer offerō, offerre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to order, to tell (someone to) iubeō, iubēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 261, p. 1531
to own, to possess possideō, possidēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 957
to paint pingō, pingere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 871
to persuade persuādeō, persuādēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1149
to praise laudō, laudāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 531
to pray, to beg ōrō, ōrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 259, p. 1519
To pray, To recommend, To breathe, To give up, To exchange
chapter topic; Chapter 259, p. 1519
to prefer mālō, mālle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 605
To prefer, To desire, To wish for, To miss, Wish
chapter topic; Chapter 111, p. 605
to prepare parō, parāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 537
To press on, To break off, To tie, To mix, To obey
chapter topic; Chapter 233, p. 1359
to press on, to insist īnstō, īnstāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1359
to press out, to express exprimō, exprimere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 260, p. 1525
To press out, To feed, To put together, To notice, To blush
chapter topic; Chapter 260, p. 1525
to press, to squeeze premō, premere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 969
to promise prōmittō, prōmittere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 945
to propose, to put forward prōpōnō, prōpōnere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 957

to pull, to drag trahō, trahere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 537
to pursue persequor, persequī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1161
to push, to drive pellō, pellere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 258, p. 1513
to put on (clothes) induō, induere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 877
to put out exstinguō, exstinguere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 939
to put, to place pōnō, pōnere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 397
to put together, to arrange compōnō, compōnere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 260, p. 1525
to reach, to arrive at perveniō, pervenīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1155
to reap, to harvest metō, metere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 981
to recognise agnōscō, agnōscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1155
to recommend, to entrust commendō, commendāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 259, p. 1519
to refuse recūsō, recūsāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1155
to rejoice, to be glad gaudeō, gaudēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 403
to remember meminī, meminisse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1371
To remember, To speak, To follow, To set out, To use
chapter topic; Chapter 235, p. 1371
to remove removeō, removēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1335
to rest quiēscō, quiēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1143
to rise, to get up surgō, surgere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 543
to sail nāvigō, nāvigāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 537
to seem videor, vidērī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1353
to sell vendō, vendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 391
to send mittō, mittere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 397

to serve, to be a slave serviō, servīre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1353
to set on fire incendō, incendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 951
to set out proficīscor, proficīscī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1371
to shape, to imagine fingō, fingere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1347
to share, to divide partior, partīrī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1149
to shine lūceō, lūcēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 889
to shout clāmō, clāmāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 939
to show ostendō, ostendere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 889
to sing canō, canere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 385
to sing cantō, cantāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 871
to slip, to glide lābor, lābī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 969
To slip, To lighten, To admire, To suspect, To press
chapter topic; Chapter 170, p. 969
to smile subrīdeō, subrīdēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 939
to sow, to plant serō, serere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 981
To sow, To reap, To hunt, To go fishing, To deny
chapter topic; Chapter 172, p. 981
to speak loquor, loquī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1371
to state firmly affirmō, affirmāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1179
To state firmly, To hurt, To decorate, To throw together, To cease
chapter topic; Chapter 204, p. 1179
to stay awake vigilō, vigilāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 895
to stay, to remain maneō, manēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 397
to steal fūror, fūrārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1353
To steal, To uncover, To seem, To serve, To suffer
chapter topic; Chapter 232, p. 1353

to straighten, to correct corrigō, corrigere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1161
to stroll spatior, spatiārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to suffer, to allow patior, patī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1353
to suspect suspicor, suspicārī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 969
to swim natō, natāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 391
to take off (clothes) exuō, exuere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 877
to talk together colloquor, colloquī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1161
To talk together, To hand over, To straighten, To celebrate, To pursue
chapter topic; Chapter 201, p. 1161
to taste gustō, gustāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 895
to tell, to relate nārrō, nārrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 531
to there, thither illūc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 629
to throw iaciō, iacere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 883
to throw away abiciō, abicere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 951
to throw together; to guess coniciō, conicere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1179
to tie ligō, ligāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1359
to touch tangō, tangere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 537
to tremble tremō, tremere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to try, to test temptō, temptāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1335
to turn vertō, vertere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1347
To turn, To enjoy, To shape, To complain, To be missing
chapter topic; Chapter 231, p. 1347
to uncover, to discover dētegō, dētegere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1353
to untie, to pay solvō, solvere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 883

to use ūtor, ūtī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1371
to use up cōnsūmō, cōnsūmere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1173
to vanish ēvanēscō, ēvanēscere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1365
to visit vīsitō, vīsitāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 871
to wake up expergīscor, expergīscī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1341
To wake up, To accompany, To add, To announce, To appear
chapter topic; Chapter 230, p. 1341
to wander; to be wrong errō, errāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 543
to warm, to heat calefaciō, calefacere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1495
to warn, to remind moneō, monēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1501
to wash lavō, lavāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 391
to watch, to observe observō, observāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1507
to weep fleō, flēre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 385
to welcome, to receive excipiō, excipere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1167
to win, to defeat vincō, vincere
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 889
to wish for, to choose optō, optāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 605
to work labōrō, labōrāre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 385
today hodiē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 555
today's hodiernus, hodierna, hodiernum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1249
Today's, Yesterday's, Tomorrow's, True, Uncertain
chapter topic; Chapter 215, p. 1249
Today, Yesterday, Year, Month, Dawn
chapter topic; Chapter 103, p. 555
tomorrow's crāstinus, crāstina, crāstinum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1249
too little, not enough parum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 567

too much nimis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 525
Tower, Column, City walls, Ditch, Rampart
chapter topic; Chapter 280, p. 1649
Travelling carriage, Broad street, Aqueduct, Public baths, Amphitheatre
chapter topic; Chapter 244, p. 1427
Tree, Flower, Leaf, Forest, Mountain
chapter topic; Chapter 86, p. 453
true, real vērus, vēra, vērum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1249
Trust, Courage, Shame, Envy, Boredom
chapter topic; Chapter 262, p. 1537
trust, faith fidēs, fideī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 262, p. 1537
truth vēritās, vēritātis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1087
twice bis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1007

U

Ubi, Cur, Quia, Meus, Tuus
chapter topic; Chapter 52, p. 249
ugly, shameful turpis, turpe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 853
uncertain incertus, incerta, incertum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1249
unjust iniūstus, iniūsta, iniūstum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 266, p. 1563
unknown ignōtus, ignōta, ignōtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1403
unless, if not nisi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1019
unlucky, unhappy īnfēlīx, īnfēlīcis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1421
unmarried caelebs, caelibis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1409
until; while dōnec
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1001
upwards sūrsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 264, p. 1551
useful ūtilis, ūtile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 821

Useful phrase, honest context
culture and usage topic; explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 21, p. 81 useless inūtilis, inūtile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1403

V

valeō and valē — answer and farewell from one verb
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 19, p. 71
vegetables, greens holus, holeris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 415
very valdē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1025
Vessel, Two-handled jar, Flask, Purse, Coin
chapter topic; Chapter 123, p. 679
victory victōria, victōriae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1075
Vine, Oak, Pine, Laurel, Violet
chapter topic; Chapter 250, p. 1465
vinegar acētum, acētī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1125

W

wages, pay mercēs, mercēdis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1093
wakeful, watchful vigil, vigilis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1255
Walking, Running, Opening, Closing
chapter topic; Chapter 41, p. 167
war bellum, bellī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 271, p. 1593
Wash, Cook, Sell, Swim, Call
chapter topic; Chapter 76, p. 391
Wasp, Gnat, Flea, Worm, Tortoise
chapter topic; Chapter 276, p. 1625
wasteful prōdigus, prōdiga, prōdigum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1057
Wasteful, Moderate, Eloquent, Mute, Lame
chapter topic; Chapter 184, p. 1057
water and wine — one word French wore down to almost nothing, one that barely changed anywhere aqua, vīnum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 10, p. 39

Water, Wine, and Bread
chapter topic; Chapter 10, p. 39
Wave, Ice, Hail, Thunder, Lightning
chapter topic; Chapter 130, p. 721
wax; a wax tablet cēra, cērae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 685
weak īnfirmus, īnfirma, īnfirmum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 859
Weather
chapter topic; Chapter 15, p. 57
weather or storm — a derivative of tempus that specialized for weather in Classical Latin, while tempus itself meant only time; later tempus widened to weather and tempestās narrowed to storm tempestās
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 15, p. 57
Wedding, Husband or wife, Parent, Grandson, Granddaughter
chapter topic; Chapter 273, p. 1607
Well
chapter topic; Chapter 27, p. 101
"well" — a morphologically simple inheritance: French bien and Spanish bien are just bene plus one regular sound change (the same short-e-diphthongizes-to-ie shift as mel→miel), with no extra grafted-on suffix, unlike quōmodo's more roundabout Romance history bene
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 27, p. 101
wet, damp ūmidus, ūmida, ūmidum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 507
Whale, Cockerel, Lip, Chin, Back
chapter topic; Chapter 135, p. 753
what's your name? / my name is... — the genuinely classical dative of possession, literally what is the name to you? quid tibi nōmen est? / mihi nōmen est...
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 20, p. 77
when — as a question and as the hinge of a clause quandō
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 225
where — the question the quōmodo lesson left half-finished ubi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 249
which (of two) uter, utra, utrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 915
who, which — the commonest word in Latin prose, and the one that joins two sentences into one quī, quae, quod
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 225
whole tōtus, tōta, tōtum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1415

why — and the two words that answer it cūr
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 249
why?, for what reason? quārē
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 611
why no two-word good-afternoon phrase exists — Latin has no simplex afternoon noun, and a grammatical three-word workaround is not attested as a greeting salvē (post merīdiem)
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 36, p. 125
why?, on account of what? quamobrem
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 611
wild ferus, fera, ferum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1241
windy ventōsus, ventōsa, ventōsum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 865
wisdom sapientia, sapientiae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1193
wise sapiēns, sapientis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 519
wise, sensible prūdēns, prūdentis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 839
within, indoors intus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1013
Wonderful, Different, Similar, Fair, Unjust
chapter topic; Chapter 266, p. 1563
wonderful, strange mīrus, mīra, mīrum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 266, p. 1563
Wood, Marble, Glass, Hide, Linen
chapter topic; Chapter 249, p. 1459
wood, timber lignum, lignī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1459
Woodland pass, Peak, Yoke, Whirlpool, Order
chapter topic; Chapter 228, p. 1329
wool lāna, lānae
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 783
Work, Sing, Dance, Laugh, Weep
chapter topic; Chapter 75, p. 385
work, toil labor, labōris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1453
worn out dēfessus, dēfessa, dēfessum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1255
worried sollicitus, sollicita, sollicitum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1409
Wound, Scar, Head cold, Drug, Ointment
chapter topic; Chapter 205, p. 1185

wretched, unhappy miser, misera, miserum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 833
Writing — Four Lines, And The Word That Has A Twin
chapter topic; Chapter 62, p. 311
Writing — My Own Line
chapter topic; Chapter 60, p. 307
Writing — With A Clock
chapter topic; Chapter 61, p. 309

Y

yes / no (lit. "thus" / "not") ita / nōn explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 1, p. 1
yesterday herī
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 555
yesterday's hesternus, hesterna, hesternum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1249
You're Welcome
chapter topic; Chapter 23, p. 91
"you're welcome" — another honest gap: Classical Latin has no single fixed reply to thanks, and nihil est ("it's nothing") is a modern conversational-Latin convention built from genuinely real words, not a specific classical citation for this exact job nihil est
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 23, p. 91
You, Singular and Plural
chapter topic; Chapter 22, p. 87
you (singular) / you (plural) — a PURELY grammatical number distinction in Classical Latin, with no politeness dimension at all; the polite-vous pattern (a Late Latin innovation) is vōs's own direct descendant, unlike German's Sie, which solved the same politeness problem independently via a completely different pronoun (3rd-person plural, not 2nd) tū / vōs
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 22, p. 87
your — and the pair of forms the tū / vōs lesson promised tuus, tua, tuum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 249
Your own line — the first writing with no model
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 60, p. 307