Preface

This book teaches Urdu one word at a time, and it teaches each word by taking it apart. It assumes no Urdu and no Perso-Arabic script: every section takes one small expression, introduces only the letters, sounds, and grammar that expression needs, connects it to words you may already know, and ends by asking for it back. Urdu reads right to left — but you will be reading real words long before you have met the whole alphabet.

Urdu makes several histories visible at once. Its grammar and much of its everyday vocabulary are Indo-Aryan, closely related to Hindi, while Persian and Arabic have contributed a large literary and formal layer on top. Etymology in this book is a memory aid — never a claim that a borrowed word is any less fully Urdu today.

Urdu is traditionally printed in the flowing, descending Nastaliq style. This edition uses the vendored Noto Nastaliq Urdu family, so the script's diagonal word shape and joining behaviour reproduce identically in local and published builds. The book keeps romanization beside each new form while the script becomes familiar.

This is a starter edition: fifteen short chapters, complete in themselves, with more being written.

How to use this book

Every numbered section is one word, or one small phrase, and takes a few minutes — the length of a queue, an errand, or the walk to the bus. Read them in order the first time through: each section stands on the ones before it, and nothing is used before it has been taught. After that the book becomes reference, and you can open it anywhere.

Say the Urdu out loud wherever you can. The prompts under Your turn are written to be spoken, and saying a word is most of what makes it stay. The questions under Before you move on carry their own answers in brackets: cover them, answer from memory, then look.

Chapter 1

Greetings and responses

Modes: voice (1) eyes (3) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can greet someone in Urdu, respond courteously, and close the exchange naturally. I can also write the three shapes inside shukriyā and the letter sīn from memory.
> Complete UR-C01-nahin, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: greet someone in Urdu, respond courteously, and close the exchange naturally, then pick out shīn, kāf and re and write one sīn.

1.1 Salām — hello across a family of languages

> This is the first Urdu word in this book, and the one you will reach for most. Nothing has to be written today. Look, listen, say it.

Script — notice the direction

Urdu is written right to left, traditionally in the flowing Nastaliq style. So salām begins at the right edge with س s and ends at the left with م m. Right before that م stands a tall ا, long ā.

Letters usually connect inside a word, but the tall ا does not connect onward to the final م, so the written word shows a visible break there. One more letter sits between س and ا; it, and the whole joined spelling, wait for later lessons. That is enough script for today.

Each of these letters gets a lesson of its own later; their shapes and names here follow Zero Zabar: the Urdu alphabet.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

salām is both a greeting and the word "peace." Urdu received it through the Persian-Arabic literary world. Its consonants s-l-m belong to a Semitic family concerned with peace, safety, and wholeness. Persian salâm and Arabic salām are the same historical word; Hebrew shalom is a relative.

Your turn — use it

Say salām as a friendly short greeting. You will later extend it into the full conventional exchange. For now the safest reply is the same word back.

- A: salām!
- B: salām!

Before you move on

Which letter begins salām on the right? س. Which one carries the long ā? ا. Now say salām once, picturing "peace."

1.2 ر ک ش — three shapes, then stop

Urdu runs from right to left. Point to the right-hand edge of your page. Today you will meet only three shapes from the spoken word shukriyā. The complete joined word waits for the next lesson.

Script — recognize three shapes

Take one shape at a time:

shape	sound	one thing to notice
ش	sh	three dots above
ک	k	a long slash inside the upper shape
ر	r	a simple falling curve

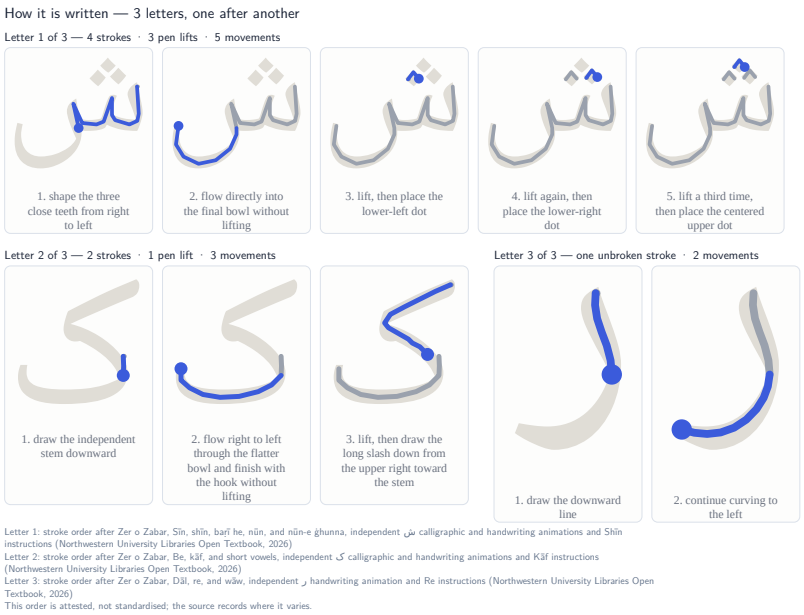
Read them from right to left once: ش · ک · ر — sh · k · r.

Writing — trace before you copy



How these letters are written, one after another, stroke by stroke: ش, ک, ر

Write these out:

- trace ش once; pause before adding its three dots
- trace ک once; notice the separate slash
- trace ر once; let the curve fall

Tracing is enough. Do not join the shapes or write from memory yet.

Before you move on

Point in this order: sh, k, r. Stop after three. The next short lesson adds the final two shapes and only then lets you copy the whole word.

1.3 شکریہ — thank you

Point to ش · ک · ر and say sh · k · r. You traced those three shapes already. Keep your pen down while you meet only two more.

Script — add two shapes

Urdu normally omits short-vowel marks. In شکریہ, the visible letters guide you, while the vowels complete the learned word:

ش · ک · ر · ی · ہ → shukriyā

You already know ش sh, ک k, and ر r. Add ی y/i and final ہ. That is two new shapes, not five. The final vowel is pronounced long ā in this familiar expression.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The central consonants sh-k-r belong to the Arabic family for gratitude and thanks; Arabic shukran is a close comparison. Urdu shukriyā reflects the centuries-long Persian-Arabic layer of its vocabulary — and for all that history it is an ordinary, everyday modern Urdu expression.

Your turn

- salām — Hello. You can say it; its letters are still ahead of you, so it is printed here the way you say it.
- شکریہ — shukriyā — Thank you. This one you can already read.

Say the second word slowly once, then at a natural pace. Keep shuk-ri-yā as three light beats.

- Write it: copy شکریہ once while looking at the model; do not write it from memory yet

- Say it: shukriyā once after the pen stops

Before you move on

Which two shapes did this lesson add? ی and final ہ. Greet, then thank: salām — shukriyā. Copying with a model is enough for today.

1.4 ہاں جی — yes, respectfully

Say شکریہ once. Point to: its first three shapes, then its final two
Your pen can rest; this lesson is for a spoken respectful answer.

The two words

The phrase is written right to left, so جی is the word on the right:

جی jī + ہاں hã̃ → jī hã̃ → yes

In جی, ج gives j and ی stretches the vowel to ī. In ہاں, the final sign ں marks a nasal vowel: let some air pass through your nose as you say ā. It is not a full English n at the end.

That sign has a name — nūn ghunna — and you will meet it again.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ہاں جی (jī hã̃) joins two inherited words. jī is Sanskrit jīva, "long live!", the command form of jīvati, "lives" (CDIAL 5240). hã̃ comes from Sanskrit ām, "yes", with an h- that CDIAL calls emphatic or taken from the verb "to be" (CDIAL 1235).

Grammar Lens: respect inside "yes"

ہاں alone means "yes." جی adds respect and attentive warmth; it can also be used by itself as a polite response. Learning jī hã̃ first gives you a safe answer for many situations.

Your turn

- "Do you understand?" — ہاں۔ جی — jī hã̃ā.
- "Would you like to continue?" — شکریہ۔ ہاں، جی — Yes, thank you.

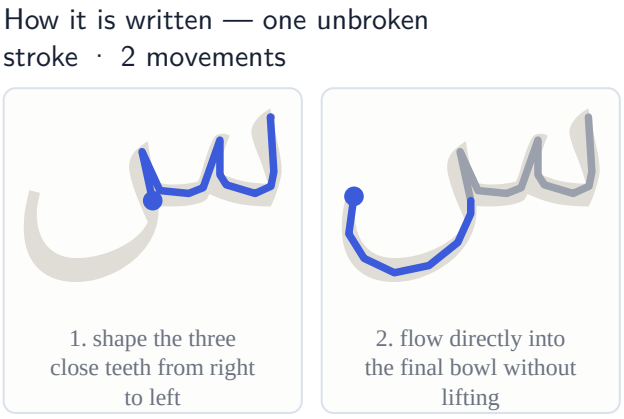
Before you move on

Which mark makes the vowel nasal? Final ں. Answer politely: jī hã̃ā.

1.5 س — three teeth, then a bowl, without lifting

Point at ش, the first shape inside shukriyā. Three teeth in a row, a bowl, and three dots floating above.

Script — the shape



How س is written, stroke by stroke

س

Three small teeth close together — short upward points in a row — and then the line flows straight on into a bowl below the baseline.

Remember which way you are working: the first tooth you draw is the rightmost one.

No lift anywhere. Teeth and bowl are one continuous movement, and letting the pen stop between them is the commonest way a beginner's sīn comes out looking like two letters.

Its name is sīn and it says s.

You have seen this shape before. ش shīn, from shukriyā, is this exact letter wearing three dots above it. Take the dots off and you have س. That is the first pair of many: in Urdu a great deal of the alphabet is one skeleton shared by two or three letters, told apart only by dots.

Your turn

- Write it: س — three teeth from the right, flowing into the bowl, one movement
- Say it: s

Before you move on

Which tooth comes first? (The rightmost.)

1.6 نہیں — no, and later "not"

Say jī hā̃, shukriyā — "yes, thank you." Now learn the answer that contrasts with yes.

Script — recombine known shapes

You have seen ہ, ی, and nasal ں. Add ن n at the right:

ن · ہ · ی · ں → nahī̃

Stretch ī slightly and nasalize it. The final ں does not add a strong separate n sound.

Grammar Lens: one word, two future jobs

As a complete answer, nahī̃ means "no." Inside a sentence it commonly means "not." That second job will matter when the track introduces verbs. Today you only need the complete answer.
Unlike the Persian-Arabic vocabulary that opened this chapter, this word is inherited Indo-Aryan, part of Urdu's own core. Hindi says the same spoken word, nahī̃, and writes it in a different script — which you do not need here. The page looks different; the word and its grammar align closely.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

نہیں (nahī̃) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from Sanskrit nahi, "surely not", built from na, "not", and hi, "surely" (CDIAL 7035).

Your turn

- jī hā̃ — yes. Said, not yet read: its first letter is one you have not met.
- نہیں — nahī̃ — no. This one you built out of known shapes a moment ago.

Your turn — say it back

This is the chapter's last lesson, so gather the rest of it without the earlier pages.

- Greet someone. (salām.) What does the word itself mean? (Peace.)

Script — the chapter's shapes, from memory

ر · ش · ک

- Point to: sh, then k, then r — the three shapes out of their usual order

(ش wears the three dots, ک the long slash, ر is the falling curve.)

- What letter is ش without its three dots, and what does it say? (س, sīn — it says s.)
- Write it: س once — three teeth from the rightmost, flowing into the bowl with no lift

Before you move on

What does final ں do? It nasalizes the vowel. Answer "no": nahĩ.

Chapter 2

Give your name

Modes: voice (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 2 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say my name in Urdu in one sentence, keeping hai at the end where Urdu puts it. I can write alif, and say both directions a Nastaliq word runs in.
> One sentence with a slot for your own name: merā nām … hai, with the copula held to the end of the line.

2.1 میرا نام ... ہے — my name is ...

> Greet once, then answer yes and no. The next line gives you one reliable Urdu sentence for your own name.

The exchange

Read it: the line right to left, but keep its spoken order

> میرا | نام | ... | ہے — merā nām … hai

- میرا merā = my
- نام nām = name
- your name goes in the open slot
- ہے hai = is

The word nām goes back to Sanskrit nāman, "name", and is a distant cousin of English name. CDIAL lists merā under the Sanskrit first-person base ma- (CDIAL 9691), and hai is usually traced to Sanskrit asti, "is". Both show Urdu's inherited grammatical core, shared closely with Hindi even though the two languages use different scripts.

Nearly every shape here is one you have already met. میرا opens with م, the letter that ends salām, then reuses ی, ر and ا. نام is ن plus that same ا and م. Only the final ے in ہے is new — it is called baṛī ye, the "big ye", and here the whole word is said hai. Learn that vowel with this word and you will meet it again everywhere.

Grammar Lens: the verb waits

Urdu puts hai at the end. That is the only sentence-pattern fact to learn now: my + name + NAME + is. Keep this one frame; broader word-order and agreement rules can wait.

Your turn

میرا نام سارا ہے۔ — merā nām Sārā hai. — My name is Sara.

Replace Sārā with your own name. Do not add agreement rules yet; this exact frame is enough for the introduction.

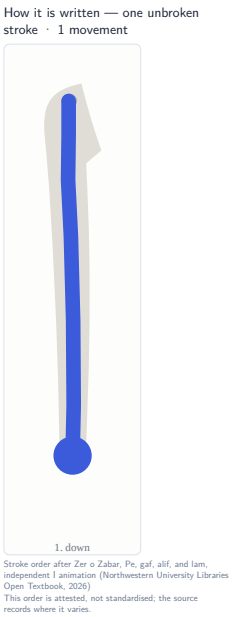
Before you move on

Where does "is" go in this Urdu sentence? At the end. Say the four slots, then say the full sentence with your name.

2.2 ا — one stroke, and a page that runs the other way

Write س. Three teeth from the right, flowing straight on into the bowl, no lift. That is one letter drawn from memory; here is the easiest one in the alphabet to put beside it.

Script — first, which way the page runs



How ا is written, stroke by stroke

You met this in your first week, told rather than explained. Here is the whole rule, and it governs every shape from now on.

English marches left to right. Urdu marches right to left. Your pen starts at the right edge of a word and travels towards the left, so the letter you meet first is the rightmost one.

There is a second direction, and it belongs to Urdu in a way it does not belong to Arabic. Urdu is written in a style called Nastaliq, and Nastaliq does not sit flat on the line. A word cascades downward as it moves left, each letter hanging a little below the one before it, so a word reads like a short diagonal staircase running down to the left.

That is why Urdu looks different from Arabic even where the letters are the same. It is not decoration and it is not optional: it is how Urdu is set.

Script — the letter itself

ا

One tall downstroke. Draw it from the top down and lift. Nothing else.

Its name is alif, and one thing about it matters more than its shape: alif does not join to the letter that follows it. Hold that; the next few lessons will make it pay.

Your turn

- Write it: ا — one stroke, top to bottom
- Point to: the right edge of an Urdu word, where your pen would begin

Before you move on

How many strokes in alif? (One.)

Chapter 3

Ask and Answer Names

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask someone's name with respectful āp, answer with my own, and close the introduction politely. I can write lām and mīm from memory.
> A six-line first meeting: greet, ask āp kā nām kyā hai?, answer with your own name, and close with āp se mil kar khushī huī.

3.1 Āp / tum / tū — three relationships inside "you"

Say nahĩ once, then merā nām ... hai with your own name. To ask the other person's name, begin with the respectful form.

You'll want to know first — three forms

Urdu	read	use
آپ	āp	respectful: a new adult, elder, or anyone you wish to honor
تم	tum	familiar: friends and peers
(next lesson)	tū	intimate, or downward; unsafe as a beginner default

آپ begins with آ, an alif carrying the long ā mark, then پ p. تم is ت t plus the م that ends salām. The third form, tū, shares that ت; its written form, with one new shape for the long ū, waits for the next lesson.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

All three forms are inherited. آپ (āp) comes from Sanskrit ātman, "self", and became a respectful "you" (CDIAL 1135). tū comes from Sanskrit tvam, "thou", the same ancient word as English thou (CDIAL 5889). CDIAL lists تم (tum) under yuṣmad, the Sanskrit base of the plural "you", with its t- taken from tvam (CDIAL 10511).

Grammar Lens: choose the relationship first

English flattened these choices into one you. Urdu keeps three. Use āp in a first meeting. Move to tum when the relationship supports familiarity. Save tū for relationships where you already know it is welcome; used badly, it can sound belittling.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a new adult — āp
- a friend — tum
- the old family — tum, tvam, thou

Before you move on

Which form is safest when unsure? (Āp.) Which familiar forms share history with English thou? (Tum/tū.)
Source: Basic Urdu: Cultural Notes.

3.2 (آپ / تم / تو, continued) — The word, taken apart

Before going on: say آپ / تم / تو again, and what it means.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Tum/tū belong to the old Indo-European familiar-"you" family: Sanskrit tvam, English thou, and Latin tū are relatives. Āp followed another route: a word connected with "self/oneself" became honorific address.
On the page, tū is تو: the same ت t that opens تم, then و, which carries the long ū.

Your turn

- Say it: what this lesson added to آپ / تم / تو, in one sentence

Before you move on

What did this lesson add to آپ / تم / تو? Say it once more, without looking.

3.3 کیا — what

Which "you" opens a respectful first meeting? (āp.) Now add the question word.

You'll want to know first — کیا

کیا — kyā — what

Right to left: ک k, ی supplying the y glide here, then ا long ā. Read it: the word right to left

The same ی carried long ī in jī and nahī̃ — words you say but cannot spell yet. Its job depends on the word; here the learned shape is kyā.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Urdu kyā and Hindi kyā are the same inherited Indo-Aryan word in different scripts. Their history reaches Sanskrit kim, "what" (CDIAL 3164), and the old Indo-European k/kw- question family behind English wh- words such as what, who, and which. The bridge helps memory; Urdu کیا remains the form you must read here.

Your turn

- Say it: kyā — what
- Read it: کیا as k + yā
- Say it: the family — kyā, what, who, which
- Recall: say salām, then say shukriyā

Before you move on

Which letter acts as y here but as long ī in jī? (ی.) What does کیا mean? (What.)

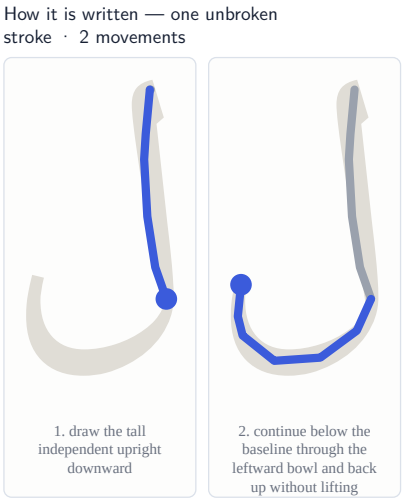
3.4 ل — alif, and then a bowl under the line

Write ا. One stroke, top to bottom.

Script — the shape



How ل is written, stroke by stroke

ل

Start exactly as you started alif — a tall upright coming down — and then, without lifting, carry on below the baseline into a leftward bowl and back up.

One movement, no pen lift. The bowl going below the line is the part to get right; it is what tells lām apart from alif at a glance.

Its name is lām and it says l.

Your turn

- Write it: ا, then ل — the same descent, then the bowl below the line
- Say it: l

Before you move on

Do you lift the pen between the upright and the bowl? (No.)

3.5 آپ کا نام کیا ہے؟ — ask a name respectfully

Recall āp "you," kyā "what," and the answer merā nām ... hai. The question reuses all three.

The exchange

آپ کا نام کیا ہے؟ — āp kā nām kyā hai? — What is your name?

Build it in spoken order:

you + kā + name + what + is?

Āp kā means "your" in this frame. The possessive form agrees with the thing owned: nām is masculine singular, so use kā. Keep that one pairing; the full kā/kī/ke system can wait. As in your answer, hai stays at the end.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

آپ کا نام کیا ہے (āp kā nām kyā hai) is built from inherited words. āp comes from Sanskrit ātman, "self" (CDIAL 1135); nām goes back to Sanskrit nāman, "name"; kyā comes from Sanskrit kim, "what" (CDIAL 3164); and hai is usually traced to Sanskrit asti, "is".

Script: the question mark

Urdu ends the question with ؟, curved for a right-to-left line. Begin at آپ on the right and reach the punctuation at the far left.

Your turn

- Say it: āp kā nām kyā hai?
- Say it: ask, then answer — merā nām ... hai
- Point to: ؟ at the end

Before you move on

Ask once without romanization. Where does hai remain? (At the end.)
Source: Basic Urdu: Greetings and Introductions.

3.6 ہوئی خوشی کر مل سے آپ — pleased to meet you

Say the opening ladder once: shukriyā — jī hā̃ — nahī̃.
Point to: the three shapes you traced before the joined thank-you word

Then ask āp kā nām kyā hai? and answer merā nām ... hai.

The exchange

ہوئی۔ خوشی کر مل سے آپ āp se mil kar khushī huī Pleased to meet you.

For now, hold three meaning-sized chunks:

- āp se — with you
- mil kar — having met
- khushī huī — happiness happened

That yields the memorable literal picture: "Having met you, happiness happened." The phrase is one social move; later lessons can generalize se, -kar, and past agreement one at a time.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Khushī "happiness" comes from Persian khosh/khush "pleasant, happy." Mil "meet" and huī "happened" belong to Urdu's inherited Indo-Aryan grammar: CDIAL lists milnā under Sanskrit milati, "meets" (CDIAL 10133), and huā, of which huī is the feminine, under bhūta, "become" (CDIAL 9552). The sentence therefore joins Urdu's two major historical layers without becoming any less ordinary Urdu.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āp se | mil kar | khushī huī in three beats
- the literal picture — "having met you, happiness happened"
- which word came through Persian — khushī

Before you move on

Say the response once as a whole. Which chunk means "happiness happened"? (Khushī huī.)
Source: Basic Urdu: Greetings and Introductions.

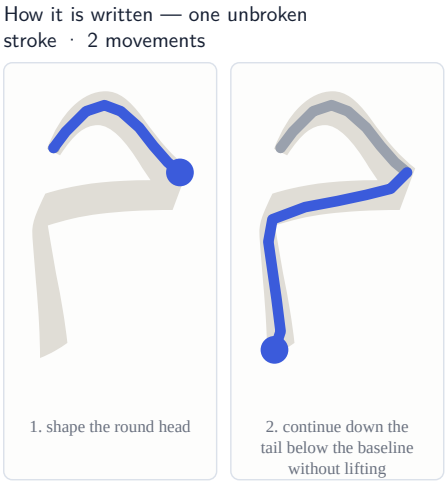
3.7 م — a round head, and a tail under the line

Write س. Three teeth, then the bowl, no lift. Now write ل beside it: upright, then the bowl below the line.

Script — the shape



Stroke order after Zer o Zabar, Te, mīm, jīm, che, and more diacritics, independent ـمـ calligraphic and handwriting animations and Mīm instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How م is written, stroke by stroke

A small round head sitting on the line, and from it a tail running straight down below the baseline.

Keep the head small and closed. Plenty of letters dip below the line — you have already written one in lām — but mīm's drop is a straight tail hanging off a round head, and that combination is what makes it easy to spot standing alone. Joined into the middle of a word the tail is trimmed away and the head survives.

One movement, no lift.

Its name is mīm and it says m.

Your turn

- Write it: م — the round head, then the tail below the line
- Say it: m

Before you move on

Is the head open or closed? (Closed.)

3.8 Practice — a complete Urdu name exchange

Recall the four moves without adding anything: greet, ask, answer, acknowledge.

The exchange

A: سلام! — Salām! B: سلام! — Salām! A: آپ کا نام کیا ہے؟ — Āp kā nām kyā hai? B: میرا نام سارا ہے۔ — Merā nām Sārā hai. A: آپ سے مل کر خوشی ہوئی۔ — Āp se mil kar khushī huī. B: شکریہ۔ — Shukriyā.

Every line is already known. Āp keeps the meeting respectful; hai stays at the end of both name sentences; ؟ ends the question at the line's left.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- both voices, using your own name
- the exchange again without romanization
- only the three name moves — question, answer, response

Before you move on

Run the meeting once from salām to shukriyā. If a line stalls, review only that micro-lesson.

Chapter 4

How Are You?

Modes: voice (6) eyes (1) pen (3) Hands-free start: the first of 10 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how someone is with respectful āp, choose kaise or kaisī for the person I am addressing, and reply that I am fine, thank you. I can join four letters into salām, and write kāf and nūn.
> The wellbeing exchange run both ways — āp kaise haiṅ? and āp kaisī haiṅ? — answered with the unchanging maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ, shukriyā; then its pieces recalled without the page, its words read in script, and سلام*, kāf and nūn written by hand.*

4.1 کیسے / کیسی — "how" follows the addressee

Say kyā "what." Urdu's next question word begins with the same k family, but its ending changes with the person being addressed.

The two words

Urdu	read	use in the respectful question
کیسے	kaise	addressing a man
کیسی	kaisī	addressing a woman

Both begin ک k + ی carrying the ai sound. At the left edge, کیسے ends in broad ے e, while کیسی ends in ی long ī. Read it: the whole word before isolating the final shape

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کیسے / کیسی (kaise / kaisī) are forms of kaisā, "of what kind", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit kīdṛśa, "of what kind", with the question stem ka- in place of kī-, after jaisā, "such as" (CDIAL 3197).

Grammar Lens: one agreement contrast

English keeps how unchanged. Urdu makes this describing form agree with the person addressed: kaise for a man, kaisī for a woman. Learn only this pair today—not a table of adjective endings. Respectful āp itself remains the same for everyone.

Your turn

- Say it: addressing a man — kaise
- Say it: addressing a woman — kaisī
- Point to: broad final ے versus long-ī ی
- Recall: say nahĩ

Before you move on

Which form addresses a man? (Kaise.) A woman? (Kaisī.)
Source: Basic Urdu: Formal Conversation.

4.2 Letters that hold hands, and the one that will not Write س, then م. Four letters are now yours.

Script — the running, falling line

Urdu letters join. They run into one another along a single connected line, and because this is Nastaliq that line is also falling — each joined letter sits a little lower and further left than the one before it.

Because they join, most letters change shape by position. A letter opening a joined run, one buried in the middle, one closing it, and one standing alone can all look different. They are the same letter.

That sounds like four times the work and it is not, because the change is almost always the same trimming: the part that identifies the letter stays, and the finishing flourish is cut short so the next letter can start. You saw it already in mīm, where joining costs the tail and keeps the head.

Script — and the letter that refuses

Now the rule that saves the most confusion.

Some letters take the hand of the letter on their right and offer nothing to the left. The run stops dead after them, and the next letter begins as though starting a fresh word.

alif is one of these. So a gap in the middle of an Urdu word is usually not a word break at all — it is a non-joining letter doing exactly what it always does. Without that fact a page of Urdu looks like it has been spaced at random.

What you've built

Four letters, and they spell the word this book opened with:

سلام

From the right: س s, ل l, ا ā, م m. Say it: salām.
Two things to see. The short vowel between s and l is not written — Urdu prints the long vowels and leaves the short ones to the reader. And the break before the final م is alif refusing to join, exactly as promised.

Your turn

- Read it: سلام — name each letter from the right, then say the word
- Write it: سلام — let the line fall as it goes, and let it break after alif

- Say it: salām

Before you move on

What does mīm lose when it joins? (Its tail.)

4.3 آپ کیسے ہیں؟ / آپ کیسی ہیں؟ — ask respectfully

Choose respectful āp. Then choose kaise for a man or kaisī for a woman. One final copula completes the question.

The exchange

to a man: آپ کیسے ہیں؟ — āp kaise haiṅ? to a woman: آپ کیسی ہیں؟ — āp kaisī haiṅ?

The order is you + how + are? Keep ہیں haiṅ final, exactly as ہے hai stayed final in the name question. Respectful āp takes this plural-shaped copula even when speaking to one person.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The two questions آپ کیسے ہیں and آپ کیسی ہیں (āp kaise haiṅ, āp kaisī haiṅ) are built from inherited words. āp comes from Sanskrit ātman, "self" (CDIAL 1135); kaise and kaisī are forms of kaisā, which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit kīdṛśa, "of what kind" (CDIAL 3197); and haiṅ, "are", is the plural partner of hai, usually traced to Sanskrit asti, "is".

Grammar Lens: respect does not erase agreement

Both lines are respectful. The choice between kaise and kaisī tracks the person addressed, not greater or lesser politeness. If you do not know how a person wishes to be addressed, listen for their usage or ask rather than guess; the grammar lesson does not replace social judgment.

Your turn

- Say it: to a man — āp kaise haiṅ?
- Say it: to a woman — āp kaisī haiṅ?
- Keep: respectful āp and final haiṅ in both

Before you move on

What stays the same in both lines? (Āp ... haiṅ.) What changes? (Kaise / kaisī.)
Sources: Basic Urdu: Formal Conversation and Personal Pronouns with "To Be".

4.4 ہوں ... میں — one frame for "I am ..."

Ask āp kaise haiṅ? You know the respectful "you are" ending haiṅ. Your answer needs the first-person pair "I ... am."

You'll want to know first — the frame

میں ... ہوں — maiṅ ... hūṅ — I am ...

میں maiṅ means "I." Final ں marks a nasal ending. ہوں hūṅ means "am" and carries long ū with و, followed again by nasal ں. Leave a space for the state word that comes next.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

میں ... ہوں (maiṅ ... hūṅ) is inherited. CDIAL lists maiṅ, "I", under the Sanskrit first-person base ma-, whose form mayā meant "by me" (CDIAL 9691); it is the same m- as English me. hūṅ, "am", is the first-person form of the inherited verb "to be".

Your turn

- Say it: maiṅ — I
- Say it: hūṅ — am
- Frame: maiṅ ... hūṅ, leaving the middle open

Before you move on

Which word opens the answer? (Maiṅ.) Which copula closes it? (Hūṅ.)
Source: Basic Urdu: Personal Pronouns with "To Be".

4.5 (ہوں ... میں, continued) — the verb closes the frame

Before going on: say ہوں ... میں again, and what it means.

Grammar Lens: the verb closes the frame

Urdu puts the copula at the end:

maiṅ + [state] + hūṅ — I + [state] + am

Learn only this first-person frame. You do not need the full copula chart to answer one wellbeing question. Notice the useful contrast: respectful āp ... haiṅ, but first-person maiṅ ... hūṅ.

Your turn

- Say it: what this lesson added to ہوں ... میں, in one sentence

Before you move on

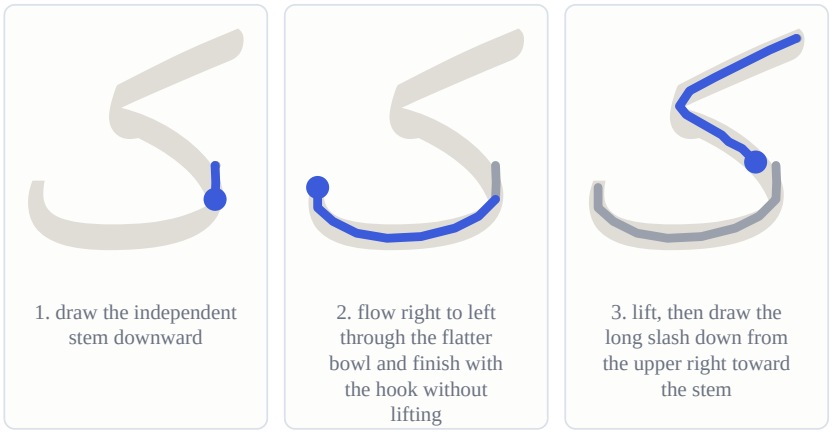
What did this lesson add to ہوں ... میں? Say it once more, without looking.

4.6 ک — a bowl with a slash laid over it

Write سلام. Four letters, one break.

Script — the shape

How it is written — 2 strokes · 1 pen lift · 3 movements



Stroke order after Zer o Zabar, Be, kāf, and short vowels, independent ک calligraphic and handwriting animations and Kāf instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ک is written, stroke by stroke

ک

Two movements, and exactly one lift between them.

1. a stem down, flowing right to left through a flatter bowl and finishing with a pronounced hook — all without lifting
2. lift once, then a long slash drawn down from the upper right towards the stem

The slash is not a dot and not decoration; it is part of the letter, and leaving it off writes nothing at all.

Its name is kāf and it says k.

Worth knowing: this is the Urdu kāf. Arabic writes the same sound with a different shape, and if you have seen Arabic you will notice the difference immediately. Urdu keeps the Perso-Arabic alphabet and does not keep every Arabic shape.

Your turn

- Write it: ک — stem, bowl and hook in one movement, then lift and lay the slash across
- Say it: k

Before you move on

Is the slash optional? (No — without it the letter is not written.)

4.7 ٹھیک — "fine," "well," and "correct"

Open and close the answer frame: maiṅ ... hūṅ. The middle now gets one high-frequency state word.

You'll want to know first — the word

ٹھیک — ṭhīk — fine, well, correct

The first sound is retroflex and aspirated: curl the tongue slightly back for ٹ ṭ, then release a puff marked by ھ. A plain English t is a useful first approximation while the contrast settles. ی carries long ī before final ک k.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Urdu ٹھیک and Hindi ṭhīk are the same everyday Hindustani word. Their grammar is closely shared; their scripts make different literary histories visible. This Urdu lesson leaves the Hindi side romanized: mixed-language practice may show both scripts only after each form has been learned in its own right.
Its history is inherited: CDIAL lists ṭhīk, "firm, correct", under a reconstructed ṭhīkka*, "firm, right", which it derives, probably, from Sanskrit sthita, "standing" (CDIAL 5503).

Your turn

- Say it: ṭhīk — fine, well

- Feel: tongue slightly back, then a small puff
- Connect: Urdu ٹھیک ↔ Hindi ṭhīk
- Recall: say āp / tum / tū, then say kyā

Before you move on

Where will ṭhīk go in the frame maiṅ ... hūṅ? (In the middle.)
Source: Basic Urdu: Greetings and Introductions.

4.8 شکریہ ہوں، ٹھیک میں — "I am fine, thank you"

Fill the frame maiṅ ... hūṅ with ṭhīk, then recall Chapter 1's shukriyā.

The exchange

شکریہ۔ ہوں، ٹھیک میں Maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ, shukriyā. I am fine, thank you.

No word is new. The step is assembling the words quickly enough to answer a real person.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

شکریہ ہوں، ٹھیک میں (maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ, shukriyā) mixes Urdu's two layers. maiṅ, "I" (CDIAL 9691), ṭhīk, "fine", from a reconstructed ṭhīkka*, "firm, right" (CDIAL 5503), and hūṅ, "am", are inherited; shukriyā is built on Arabic shukr, "thanks", which reached Urdu through Persian (Lane, root sh-k-r).

Grammar Lens: keep the copula final

The core reply is:

I + fine + am → maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ

English places "am" after "I"; Urdu closes the clause with hūṅ.

Shukriyā comes after the completed answer as the courtesy move you already own.

Your turn

- Build: maiṅ + ṭhīk + hūṅ
- Add: shukriyā
- Say it: the full reply without translating each word

Before you move on

Which word must close the core answer? (Hūṅ.)
Source: Basic Urdu: Formal Conversation.

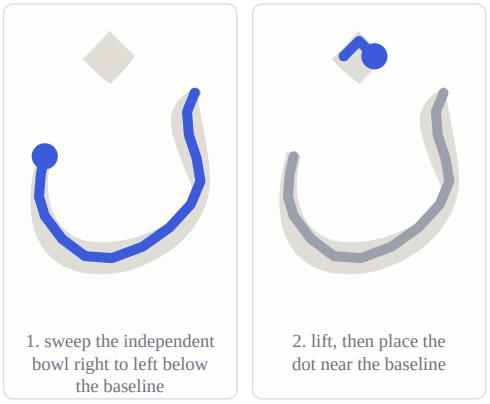
4.9 ن — a deep bowl, and one dot

Write ک. Bowl and hook, lift, slash.

Script — the shape

How it is written — 2 strokes · 1 pen lift · 2 movements



Stroke order after Zer o Zabar, Sīn, shīn, baṛī he, nūn, and nūn-e ġhunna, independent ں calligraphic and handwriting animations and Nūn instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ن is written, stroke by stroke

ن

A bowl swept from right to left, dropping well below the baseline and rising again — then one lift, and a single dot placed near the baseline, inside the curve.

Two parts, one lift. The bowl is deeper and rounder than the flatter one you drew in kāf, and the dot sits low rather than floating above.

Its name is nūn and it says n.

Your turn

- Write it: ن — the deep bowl, then lift and place the dot low inside it
- Say it: n

Before you move on

Which bowl is deeper, nūn's or kāf's? (nūn's.)

4.10 Practice — an Urdu wellbeing exchange

Choose the question ending for the person addressed, then retrieve the complete answer before looking below.

The exchange

A to a man: سلام! آپ کیسے ہیں؟ Salām! Āp kaise haiṅ? A to a woman: سلام! آپ کیسی ہیں؟ Salām! Āp kaisī haiṅ? B: میں ٹھیک ہوں، شکریہ۔ Maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ, shukriyā.

The question keeps respectful āp and final haiṅ while kaise/kaisī agrees with the addressee. The reply is unchanged for the speaker's gender: ṭhīk does not change, and first-person hūṅ closes the line.

Grammar Lens: separate grammar from guessing

The two question forms are a grammatical contrast, not an instruction to infer someone's identity. In real interaction, follow the person's own language or ask. The stable beginner default is respect: āp ... haiṅ.

Your turn — the pieces of the exchange

- "How," to a man? (Kaise.) To a woman? (Kaisī.) What decides? (The person addressed.)
- "I"? (Maiṅ.) "Am"? (Hūṅ.) Which comes last? (Hūṅ, closing the frame maiṅ ... hūṅ.)
- What does ṭhīk mean? (Fine, well, correct.) The same word in Hindi? (Yes, ṭhīk: one Hindustani word, two scripts.)

Script — the shapes in both lines

کیسے · کیسی · میں · ٹھیک · ہوں

- Read it: each word from the right — kaise, kaisī, maiṅ, ṭhīk, hūṅ
- Point to: the broad final ے of کیسے, the long-ī ی of کیسی, and the nasal ں closing میں and ہوں
- Write it: سلام, falling and breaking after alif; then ک, slash after one lift; then ن, dot low in its deep bowl

(Alif joins on its right only; ھ marks the puff in ٹھیک.)

Your turn

- Say it: the man-addressed exchange
- Say it: the woman-addressed exchange
- Answer: maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ, shukriyā after either question

Before you move on

Run both question variants once. If the choice stalls, review only kaise/kaisī; if the answer order stalls, review only maiṅ … hūṅ.

Chapter 5

Take Leave

Modes: voice (3) eyes (2) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can open a short Urdu conversation, ask how the other person is, and close it with khudā hāfiz. I can write choṭī ye and gol he, and name the face gol he wears in each position of a word.
> A four-line interaction with a beginning and an end: salām, the wellbeing check, then khudā hāfiz from both voices; then the farewell taken apart into khudā and hāfiz, read with its Urdu space, and choṭī ye and gol he written by hand.

5.1 خدا — the first half of an Urdu farewell

> Run one known wellbeing exchange. Chapter 5 will add only the move that ends it.

You'll want to know first — one word

خدا — khudā — God

From right to left: خ kh + و d + ا long ā. Read it: the word from right to left

The short u is learned with the word and is normally unwritten. Let kh come from farther back than English h, but keep the sound relaxed.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Urdu borrowed khudā from Persian khodā, whose older Middle Persian ancestor xwadāy meant "lord." Learn the Urdu sound and script first; the Persian connection then explains why both tracks will share the phrase's first historical layer.

Your turn

- Say it: khudā — God
- Read it: خدا from the right edge
- Connect: Urdu khudā ← Persian khodā
- Recall: say kaise / kaisī

Before you move on

Which final letter carries long ā? (ا.) Which short vowel must be remembered with the word? (u.)
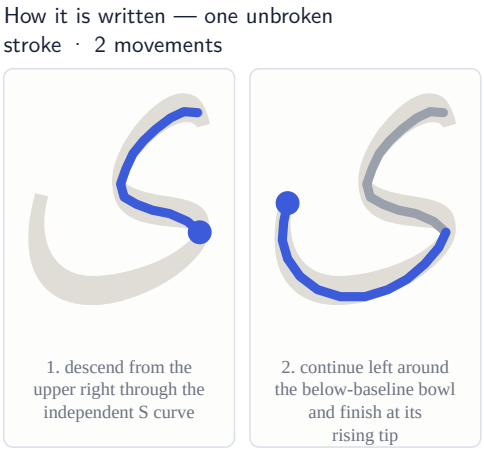
Sources: Basic Urdu: Greetings and Introductions; Wiktionary: خدا.

5.2 ی — one S-curve, no dots

Write ن. Deep bowl, lift, low dot.

Script — the shape



How ی is written, stroke by stroke

ی

Start at the upper right and descend through an S-shaped curve, then carry on left around a bowl that drops below the baseline, and finish at its rising tip.

One movement. No lift, and no dots at all. Standing alone, ye is one of the few letters in this book with nothing added to it — no dot, no slash — and that emptiness is how you recognise it.

Its name is ye, and it does three jobs: the consonant y, the long vowel ī, and a second long vowel e. Which one it is comes from the word, not from the shape — there is nothing on the page to tell them apart.

You have met one already: کیا kyā, from two chapters back, uses the consonant. The other two are still ahead of you, in words later chapters teach — one with the long ī, one with the e — and when they come, every letter in them will be one you can already draw. One letter, three values, and only having heard the word tells you which.

Your turn

- Write it: ی — the S-curve down, round the bowl, and up at the tip
- Say it: y, then ī, then e — one letter, three jobs

Before you move on

Can the shape alone tell you which of its three values it carries? (No — the word tells you.)

5.3 حافظ — "guardian" or "protector"

Say khudā — a word you hold by ear, not yet by eye. Keep it separate while one second word is added.

You'll want to know first — one word

حافظ — hāfiz — guardian, protector

Read it: ظ ف ا ح from right to left ا carries long ā. Final ظ is pronounced z in this Urdu word. The short i is heard in hāfiz but is normally not written as a separate letter.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Arabic ḥāfiẓ is an active participle from ḥ-f-ẓ, "guard, preserve." Urdu receives hāfiz through its Persian-Arabic literary layer. Keep "guardian" as the useful meaning; the three-consonant root is a memory hook.

Your turn

- Say it: hāfiz — guardian, protector
- Read it: حافظ
- Connect: Arabic ḥ-f-ẓ — guard, preserve

Before you move on

What does hāfiz contribute to the farewell? (The idea of guarding or protecting.)
Source: American Heritage Dictionary: hafiz.

5.4 حافظ خدا — goodbye

Retrieve khudā and hāfiz separately: "God" + "guardian."
Now use the two known pieces as one parting move.

The two words — put the known pieces together

حافظ خدا — khudā hāfiz — goodbye

Urdu keeps a visible space between the two words. Read it: خدا first, then حافظ, and preserve that space in the complete spelling حافظ خدا
Say the whole expression smoothly.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

حافظ خدا (khudā hāfiz) is "God is the guardian". khudā is usually traced to Persian khudā, "God", from Middle Persian xwadāy, "lord"; hāfiz is Arabic ḥāfiẓ, "guardian", which reached Urdu through Persian (Lane, root ḥ-f-ẓ).

Your turn

- Build: khudā + hāfiz
- Read it: spaced Urdu حافظ خدا
- Use: say it when the interaction ends

Before you move on

Where is the local writing contrast? (Urdu shows a space; Persian joins its spelling.)
Source: Basic Urdu: Greetings and Introductions.

5.5 (حافظ خدا, continued) — Grammar Lens — a whole social move

Before going on: say حافظ خدا again, and what it means.

Grammar Lens — a whole social move

The protective sense is "God [be] guardian," but everyday speakers use the formula as goodbye and nothing more. No new verb or agreement ending is needed. It is a reliable polite close for the short interaction learned so far.

Script Bridge — shared history, local spacing

Urdu حافظ خدا and Persian خداحافظ share the same historical pieces. Urdu conventionally keeps the visible space; Persian normally joins them. Mixed practice may compare the two only now that each local phrase is independently readable.

Your turn

- Say it: what this lesson added to حافظ خدا, in one sentence

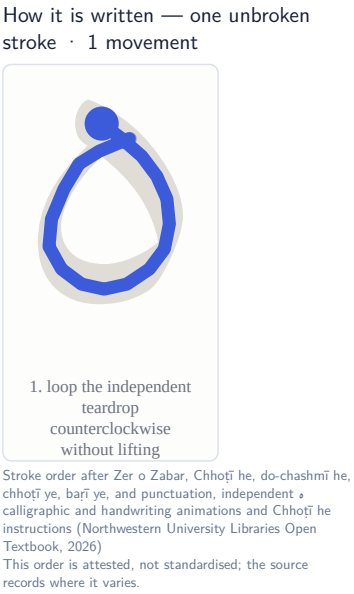
Before you move on

What did this lesson add to حافظ خدا? Say it once more, without looking.

5.6 ہ — the round he, and its four faces

Write ی. The S-curve that sweeps below the line and hooks up at the tip. Now say shukriyā and think about the shape it ends on.

Script — the shape



How ہ is written, stroke by stroke

ہ

Standing on its own it is one small closed loop with a short curved tail falling away to the left. Draw the loop clockwise from the top, then let the tail drop. Its name is ہ gol he — "round he" — and it says h.

You have already met this letter without drawing it: شکریہ shukriyā ends on it, and it has been sitting at the end of that word since your first week.

Joining trims a letter, you were told. Gol he is where that promise gets tested, because it changes more than any letter you have written. Four positions, four faces:

- standing alone, and at the end of a word after a non-joining letter: the small loop with its tail
- opening a word: the loop stays, the tail is cut short so the next letter can begin

- in the middle: the loop splits into two small loops side by side, low on the line
- closing a joined word: the loop flattens into a single round curl hanging off the letter before it

The middle form is the one to look at twice. It does not resemble the standing loop at all, and a reader who knows only the standing form meets it mid-word and thinks a new letter has arrived. Same letter, doing its middle job.

The letters in this word

Three words, one letter, three positions. Read each from the right, then copy it while the model is still in front of you.

ہم

کہانی

شکریہ

ہم ham "we" — gol he opens it, tail trimmed, running into م. کہانی kahānī "story" — gol he sits in the middle, wearing the two-loop face. شکریہ shukriya "thank you" — gol he closes it, flattened into a round curl hanging off the ی in front of it. Three positions, one letter, and every other shape in all three is one you have already drawn.

Your turn

- Write it: ہ standing alone — the loop, then the falling tail
- Write it: ہم — and say ham
- Read it: کہانی — name its five letters, and say which face its he wears
- Point to: the gol he that closes شکریہ

Before you move on

Which word have you been saying since chapter one that ends on this letter? (شکریہ.) What sound does gol he carry? (h.)

5.7 Practice — open, check, and close

Retrieve the known expression for the beginning and the new expression for the end. Keep the middle unchanged.

The exchange — the complete interaction

A: Salām! Āp kaise haiṅ? B: Maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ, shukriyā. A: خدا حافظ — Khudā hāfiz. B: خدا حافظ — Khudā hāfiz.

Every line is already learned by ear. Salām opens; khudā hāfiz closes. The same farewell works for both speakers, so this practice adds no gender choice, pronoun, or copula form.

Only the closing line is printed in script for both voices, because it is the only one whose letters you have all been given. Three pieces of the exchange sit inside your ladder right now — سلام, شکریہ, خدا حافظ — and the two middle lines wait on letters the next three chapters hand you. Nothing in them is new to say, only new to see.

Your turn

- Choose: meeting begins → salām
- Choose: interaction ends → khudā hāfiz
- Run through: both voices once from the romanization
- Read it: the closing line off the script alone

Your turn — the two halves of goodbye

- What does khudā mean? (God.) Where did Urdu get it? (From Persian khodā, whose Middle Persian ancestor xwadāy meant "lord.")

- What does hāfiz mean? (Guardian, protector.) Its root? (Arabic ḥ-f-ẓ, "guard, preserve.")
- The pieces picture "God [be] guardian." Is a verb needed to say goodbye? (No: the formula means goodbye.)

Script — the farewell and two new letters

خدا · حافظ · حافظ خدا

- Read it: خدا, then حافظ, then حافظ خدا with its space, each from the right
- Write it: ی, one S-curve with no dots; then ه alone, the loop and its falling tail

How does Persian spell the same farewell? (Joined: خداحافظ.) The final ظ of حافظ is said z; mid-word, ه splits into two small loops.

Before you move on

Run the full exchange once. If the final line stalls, return only to the assembled-farewell lesson.

Chapter 6

Five Verbs at the Core

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five everyday Urdu verbs by their shared -nā ending, take that ending off to reach the stem, and say what I do in the present with the participle agreeing for gender and the copula agreeing for person. I can write nūn ghunna and baṛī ye, and read maiṅ, haiṅ, nahīṅ and the copula hai off the page.
> The fifth verb runs the whole machine at once: strip -nā from all five infinitives, hold the doubled nūn that keeps jānnā apart from jānā, and put the stem into maiṅ jāntā/jāntī hūṅ.

6.1 ہونا — "to be," and the ending every Urdu verb wears

You can already close an Urdu sentence with hūṅ — "am." It is still spoken rather than written: its last shape is a nūn with no dot, and that letter arrives in the very next lesson. That small word is a fragment of something larger. Here is the whole verb it was broken off.

You'll want to know first — one word

ہونا — honā — to be

From the right edge: ہ h, then و carrying o, then ن n, then ا long ā. Read it: the word from the right edge

Every one of those four shapes has already turned up in a word you have met. There is nothing new to decode here, which is rare, and worth enjoying.

Grammar Lens: the ending that names every verb honā ends in -نا -nā. So does every Urdu verb when you name it. English marks a verb's plain name by putting a word in front — to be, to go, to come. Urdu marks it by putting -nā on the end, and never uses a separate word for it.

That ending is also a tool. Strip -nā off and what remains is the stem, the piece everything else in the verb is built on. honā minus -nā leaves ho-. Learn the ending once, and every new verb hands you its own stem for free.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

honā comes from Sanskrit bhavati, "becomes" (CDIAL 9416), built on the root bhū-. The middle stage of Indo-Aryan softened that bh- to h-, so bhavati thinned to hoi and then to honā.
The root is Indo-European: $*b^huH$-, "grow, become." English kept it in be and been, and — by way of "the place where one dwells" — in build, booth, and bower. Latin held it as fuī "I was" and futūrus, which English borrowed as future. Greek held it as phúsis "nature," which English borrowed as physics.

Your turn

- Say it: honā — to be
- Strip: honā minus -nā leaves the stem ho-
- Read it: ہونا from the right edge
- Connect: honā ← Sanskrit bhavati → English be
- Recall: say ṭhīk

Before you move on

Which ending names an Urdu verb? (-nā.) What is left of honā once you take that ending off? (Ho-.) Which English verb grew from the same ancient root? (Be.)

6.2 ں — nūn with the dot taken off

Write ن. The deep bowl, a lift, and one dot placed low inside the curve.

Script — the shape

How ں is written, stroke by stroke

ں

The same deep bowl you drew two chapters ago, swept right to left below the baseline — and then you stop. No lift. No dot.

Every other letter so far was identified by what was added to it: nūn's dot, kāf's slash, the three teeth of sīn. This one is identified by what was taken away, and the taking away is the meaning. Its name is ں nūn ghunna, and ghunna is the Urdu word for a nasal hum.

Here is the difference it makes. A dotted ن is a full consonant: your tongue touches the roof of your mouth and you say n. A dotless ں asks for no consonant at all. It tells you to send the vowel before it through your nose and then stop. In maiṅ the tongue never lands.

Two more facts and the letter is yours:

- ں closes a word and appears nowhere else. Inside a word, that same nasal hum is carried by the ordinary dotted ن, which therefore does two jobs depending on where it stands — a real n in some words, a hum in others. Only at the end of a word does Urdu bother to spell the difference.
- Because it ends the word, ں has one shape to learn and no joined faces.

The letters in this word

Three words, all of them already in your mouth, none of them readable until now. From the right:

میں

ہیں

نہیں

maiṅ "I" — haiṅ "are" — nahīṅ "no."

The one to dwell on is نہیں. It is the word you learned for saying no, in the very first handful of words this book gave you, and it is four letters you can now name one by one: ن، ہ، ی، ں — with a dotted nūn opening it and a dotless one closing it, doing two entirely different jobs in a single short word.

Your turn

- Write it: ں — the deep bowl, and then nothing
- Write it: میں, then ہیں, then نہیں
- Say it: maiṅ, letting the vowel hum and keeping your tongue down
- Point to: the two nūns in نہیں and say what each one does
- Read it: ہیں — and say why it ends on a hum rather than an n

Before you move on

Write "no." (نہیں.) Write "I." (میں.) Does your tongue touch the roof of your mouth at the end of maiṅ? (No — the hum goes through the nose.)

6.3 جانا — "to go," and two agreements in one sentence

Take the ending off honā and say the stem aloud. The next verb gives that same ending a second workout.

You'll want to know first — one word

جانا — jānā — to go

From the right edge: ج j, then ا long ā, then ن n, then ا long ā. The ج is the one from جی jī. Strip the -nā and the stem is jā-.

Grammar Lens: the present tense agrees twice

"I go" in Urdu is two words after the pronoun, not one:

maiṅ jātā hūṅ — I go (man speaking) maiṅ jātī hūṅ — I go (woman speaking)

The frame is printed the way you say it rather than the way it is spelled. The t of jātā and the ū of hūṅ both ride letters you have not been given yet, and a line you cannot decode is not reading practice. The first word is the stem jā- plus -tā. It says going, and it agrees with the gender and number of the person doing it: -tā for one man, -tī for one woman, -te for more than one man or for a respectful singular. The second word is hūṅ, which you already own, and it agrees with person — who is speaking.

Two agreements, split across two words, in one short clause. English makes one agreement at most, and usually none. Say both Urdu lines and let the difference sit in the ear rather than on paper.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jānā continues Sanskrit yāti, "goes" (CDIAL 10452), from the root yā-, "travel." The change from y- to j- is not a quirk of this word: initial y- regularly hardened to j- on the road from Sanskrit into the middle stage of Indo-Aryan that Urdu descends from. Meet the law once and it decodes other words later.
English gives nothing here. The yā- root travelled north and west into Lithuanian and Slavic rather than into Germanic, so this is a word where Sanskrit is the whole hook and English cannot help.

Your turn

- Say it: jānā — to go
- Strip: jānā minus -nā leaves jā-
- Say it: maiṅ jātā hūṅ, then maiṅ jātī hūṅ
- Choose: the ending that fits you — -tā or -tī

Before you move on

Which word in maiṅ jātā hūṅ carries gender? (Jātā — the one built on the stem.) Which one carries person? (Hūṅ.) And which Sanskrit verb stands behind jānā? (Yā-, "travel.")
Source: Wiktionary: جانا.

6.4 آنا — "to come," which is "go" pointed back at you Say jānā, then its stem jā-. The opposite direction is a different verb.

You'll want to know first — one word

آنا — ānā — to come

From the right edge: آ, then ن n, then ا long ā. That first shape is alif madd — alif wearing a small wave — and it is how Urdu writes a long ā at the start of a word. It opens āp too, which you will be able to spell out once pe arrives. Strip the -nā and the stem is ā-.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ānā is inherited. CDIAL lists it under Sanskrit āpayati, "causes to reach", beside the older āpa, "came towards", through Prakrit āvaï, "comes" (CDIAL 1200). So the Urdu verb for coming is, underneath, a verb of reaching: to come is to arrive where the speaker is.
It is tempting to take ānā from āyāti, "comes near", ā- "toward" plus yā- "go", which would make it a twin of jānā. CDIAL lists no Hindi or Urdu word under āyāti (CDIAL 1288), though, and puts jānā under yāti, "goes" (CDIAL 10452): two verbs, not one.
The root āp-, "reach, obtain", is usually compared with Latin apīscī, "to reach", whose participle aptus, "fitted", gave English apt and adapt.

Your turn

- Say it: ānā — to come
- Pair: jānā away, ānā toward
- Connect: ānā ← āpayati, "causes to reach"
- Read it: آنا, starting from alif madd
- Recall: say khudā

Before you move on

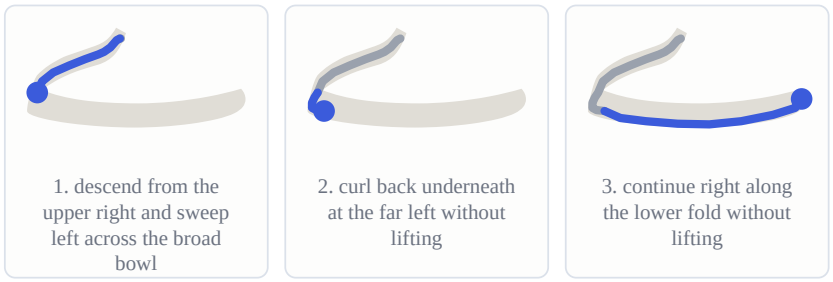
Which Sanskrit verb of reaching stands behind ānā? (Āpayati, "causes to reach.") Does jānā come from the same verb? (No: jānā comes from yāti, "goes.") And what does the stem become once -nā comes off? (Ā-.)
Source: Wiktionary: آنا.

6.5 ے — the big ye, and the end of the sentence

Write ی, then ہ, then ں. An S-curve, a loop, a bowl with no dot.

Script — the shape

How it is written — one unbroken stroke · 3 movements



Stroke order after Zer o Zabar, Chhoṭī he, do-chashmī he, chhoṭī ye, baṛī ye, and punctuation, independent ے calligraphic and handwriting animations and Baṛī ye instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ے is written, stroke by stroke

ے

A wide, flat sweep. Start high on the right, drop through a long shallow curve that goes well below the baseline, and carry it a long way to the left, finishing flat — with no hook, no lift at the tip, and no dots.

Its name is ے baṛī ye, "big ye," and the letter you already know, ی, is choṭī ye, "small ye." Two names, one family, and one test that separates them at a glance:

- ی choṭī ye is narrow and curls back up at its tip
- ے baṛī ye is broad and runs out flat

There is a second difference, and it is about where each one lives. Small ye turns up anywhere in a word — opening it, in the middle, closing it. Big ye belongs to the end of a word and turns up nowhere else, which means you will never have to work out its middle face. It has none.

Big ye carries a final e or ai sound.

The letters in this word

Two letters, and the smallest word in Urdu that does real work:

ہے

From the right: ہ, then ے. Say it: hai — "is."

That is the word you have been ending sentences with since you first said your name, four chapters ago. Read it now.

Two more, both already in your ear:

کیسے

میرے

کیسے kaise — "how," with small ye in the middle and big ye at the end, so the pair sit in one word and you can see the difference for yourself. میرے mere — "my" before a plural, every letter of it now yours.

What you've built

Twelve letters. Now read the first sentence this book ever gave you, whole, with nothing taken on trust:

میرا نام ... ہے

merā nām ... hai — "my name is ...". Every letter in it is one you can form: ے ہ، — م ا، ن، — ا ر، ی، م،.

Your turn

- Write it: ے — wide, flat, below the line, no hook at the tip
- Write it: ہے — and say hai
- Read it: کیسے — and point at the small ye and the big ye in turn
- Write it: میرا نام ... ہے — and say it with your own name in the gap

Before you move on

Which ye curls up at the tip? (Small ye, ی.) Which runs out flat? (Big ye, ے.) Write "is." (ہے.)

6.6 بولنا — "to speak," and the two layers of Urdu

> Retrieve the opening without looking: shukriyā — jī hā̃ — nahī̃. Air-trace the five shapes of the thank-you word once. Then return to the three verbs whose stems you pulled from the same ending. Here is a fourth, with one new letter.

You'll want to know first — one word

بولنا — bolnā — to speak

From the right edge: ب b, then و carrying o, then ل l, then ن n, then ا long ā. Strip the -nā and the stem is bol-.

ب is new, and it is worth one careful second. Its body is a single low scoop with one dot below. Hold that skeleton in mind: the very next chapter adds pe, which is the identical scoop with three dots below — the p you already say in āp. Same skeleton, different dot count, different consonant. Urdu builds much of its alphabet this way, so counting dots is a real reading skill and not a fussy detail.

Grammar Lens: put it in the frame

The stem takes the same two-agreement frame as before:

> maiṅ boltā hūṅ — I speak (man speaking) maiṅ boltī hūṅ — I speak (woman speaking)

Nothing new is being learned there. That is the point of a stem: the machine is already built, and each verb walks into it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bolnā goes back to Prakrit bollaï, "speaks" — and then the trail stops. CDIAL reconstructs it as boll-*, "speak" (CDIAL 9321), and reports proposals that tie it to Sanskrit vadati or bravīti, both "speaks"; none is settled, so treat them as maybes rather than facts.

That plainness is the lesson. Urdu's everyday verbs are inherited Indo-Aryan and often short-rooted like this, while its formal and literary vocabulary was borrowed from Persian and Arabic and tends to be long, elegant, and easy to trace. Beside homely bolnā sits Persian-derived guftagū, "conversation," from Persian guftan, "to speak." Both are fully Urdu. One is the floor of the house; the other is the ornament on it — and the flowing nasta'līq hand Urdu is traditionally written in belongs to that same Persian inheritance.

Your turn

- Say it: bolnā — to speak
- Count: ب one dot below — and say what the three-dot version will be
- Say it: maiṅ boltā hūṅ, then maiṅ boltī hūṅ
- Sort: bolnā inherited, guftagū borrowed

Before you move on

How many dots does ب carry, and where? (One, below.) How far back can bolnā be traced with confidence? (To Prakrit bollaï, and no further.) Which layer of Urdu does guftagū belong to? (The Persian one.)

6.7 جاننا — "to know," a word English has been carrying all along

Run the four verbs you have — honā, jānā, ānā, bolnā — and pull the stem off each one. The fifth is the closest of them to English.

جاننا — jānnā — to know

From the right edge: ج j, ا long ā, then ن, then ن a second time, then ا long ā. Two separate nūns, written out one after the other, and both are pronounced: hold the n long, jān-nā, the way English does across the seam of thin · ness. Strip the final -nā and the stem is jān-.

That doubling is what keeps jānnā "to know" apart from jānā "to go." One letter, and the whole meaning turns.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jānnā continues Sanskrit jānāti, "knows" (CDIAL 5193), from the root jñā-, "know." That root is Indo-European ǵneh₃-*, and English is stuffed with it.
Straight down the Germanic line: know, knowledge, can (once "to know how"), cunning, ken, and uncouth — literally "un-known." Borrowed from Latin (g)nōscere: notice, note, notion, cognition, recognize, acquaint, and ignore, which is "not to know." Borrowed from Greek gnōsis: diagnosis, prognosis, and agnostic.
So the Urdu verb is not a stranger. It is a first cousin of the plainest word English has for the same idea, and every one of those borrowings is another place to hang it.

Your turn

- Say it: jānnā — to know, holding the long n
- Contrast: jānā to go, jānnā to know
- Say it: maiṅ jāntā hūṅ, then maiṅ jāntī hūṅ
- Run through: all five — honā, jānā, ānā, bolnā, jānnā — stripping each stem
- Connect: jānnā ← jñā- → English know, notice, diagnosis
- Recall: say hāfiz, then say honā

Before you move on

What single written difference separates jānā from jānnā? (A second ن, held long in speech.) Which two words in maiṅ jāntī hūṅ agree, and with what? (Jāntī with gender, hūṅ with person.) And which English verb is the same word as jānnā? (Know.)

Chapter 7

Four Verbs of the Mind

Modes: 👁 eyes (4) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I think, understand, read and write in Urdu, take the -nā off each verb to reach its stem, and read the two-eyed he that turns a plain consonant into an aspirated one. I can write alif madda and pe, and say which spelling a long ā takes at the start of a word and which inside it.
> The fourth verb arrives with no new letters at all: read لکھنا straight off, then run all four stems through maiṅ …tā/tī hūṅ and sort the chapter's inherited verbs from the borrowed words for pen, book and script.

7.1 سوچنا — "to think," and it used to mean "to grieve"

> Say jānnā — the one with the doubled n, the one that turned out to be English know. Knowing is where the mind arrives. Here is the verb for the work it does on the way.

You'll want to know first — one word

> سوچنا — sochnā — to think

Strip the -nā and the stem is soch-. That stem is also a noun: سوچ soch, "a thought" — and, no less ordinarily, "a worry." Both meanings matter; the history explains them.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: س s, then و carrying o, then چ ch, then ن n, then ا long ā.

چ is new, and you own the trick already. It is the body of jīm, the j you say in jī and jānā, carrying three dots below instead of one. Second time this has happened: be has one dot below the low scoop, pe has three. Counting dots stays a reading skill — one you are given by ear here, a lesson before the shapes arrive.

Grammar Lens: nothing new to run it maiṅ sochtā hūṅ — I think (man speaking) maiṅ sochtī hūṅ — I think (woman speaking)

The participle takes gender, ہوں takes person. The machine is built; every new verb walks into it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sochnā goes back, CDIAL says, to Sanskrit śocyate, "is made to feel pain", the passive of śocayati, "sets alight, burns" (CDIAL 12621), on the root śuc-, "burn; grieve". The sense cooled by stages: burn → be consumed by something → brood on it → plain think. Urdu's everyday word for thinking is an old word for sorrow that went quiet, which is why soch is still a thought and a worry.

State the limit plainly: śuc- has no secure English cousin. Inventing one would be worse than admitting it.

What is worth noticing sits inside Urdu. Beside inherited soch, Urdu keeps Arabic fikr, "thought, reflection," on the root f-k-r — and fikr also means worry: koī fikr nahīṅ, "no worries." Two words, two unrelated languages, opposite sides of Urdu's vocabulary, each sliding from thinking to fretting on its own.

Your turn

- Say it: sochnā — to think; then the stem soch-
- Count: jīm one dot below, چ three dots below
- Say it: maiṅ sochtā hūṅ, then maiṅ sochtī hūṅ
- Run through: bolnā, jānnā, sochnā — speak, know, think

- Say it: both meanings of the noun soch — a thought, and a worry

Before you move on

How many dots does چ carry, and where? (Three, below.) What did śuc- mean before it meant "think"? (To burn, to grieve.) Is there an English cousin of śuc-? (No.)

7.2 آ — alif, with a wave on its head

Write ا. One tall downstroke, top to bottom, and it refuses to join to whatever comes after it.

Script — the shape

آ

The tall stroke you already know, and then one small wave laid across the top of it, drawn left to right like a shallow lazy S. Two movements: the downstroke, a lift, the wave.

Its name is آ alif madda — madda means "an extension" — and it says a long ā.

Now the reason it exists, which is the useful part.

Plain ا does two different jobs. At the start of a word it is a carrier: a place for a short vowel to sit, with the vowel itself left off the page. Inside a word it is the long ā you have been reading in kām, nām, salām.

So what does a writer do when a word starts with a long ā? Both jobs want the same stroke, and the answer used to be to write alif twice — carrier plus vowel — which is awkward to write and worse to read. The wave is the shorthand that replaced it. آ at the front of a word means: this begins on a long ā.

That gives you a rule you can apply on sight. Long ā at the start of a word is written آ; the same long ā in the middle of a word is written plain ا. One sound, two spellings, decided by position.

The letters in this word

Two words, every letter already yours. Copy each with the model in view.

آنا

آسان

آنا ānā "to come" — a word you can now write rather than take on trust. آسان āsān "easy" — look closely: آ at the front, plain ا in the middle, one long vowel spelled two ways inside a single word.

Your turn

- Write it: آ — the downstroke, lift, then the wave across its head
- Write it: آنا, then آسان
- Point to: both alifs in آسان and say which is which
- Say it: ānā, and name the two movements that make آ

Before you move on

How many movements make آ? (Two — stroke, then wave.) Which verb can you now write? (آنا.) Which of آسان's two alifs carries the wave? (The first.)

7.3 سمجھنا — "to understand," which is a way of waking up

You can think — sochnā, three dots under its che. You can know — jānnā. Between brooding and knowing sits the moment a thing clicks, and Urdu has a verb for exactly that.

You'll want to know first — one word

سمجھنا — samajhnā — to understand

Strip the -nā and the stem is samajh-. The stem is a noun too: سمجھ samajh, "understanding, sense."

The letters in this word

From the right edge: س s, م m, ج j, then ھ, then ن n, then ا long ā.

ھ is do-chashmī he, "two-eyed he," named for its two loops. It is not a consonant you pronounce. Its whole job is to grab the letter before it and add a puff of breath: ج j plus ھ gives جھ jh.

You have used it once already. In ṭhīk, the retroflex ṭe takes this same ھ — retroflex ṭ, then the breath. One letter, one job.

Keep it apart from ہ, gol he, "round he," which is a real h and which you write in hūṅ and honā. Round ہ speaks; two-eyed ھ only breathes on its right-hand neighbour.

Grammar Lens: into the frame

maiṅ samajhtā hūṅ — I understand (man speaking) maiṅ samajhtī hūṅ — I understand (woman speaking)

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

samajhnā comes through Prakrit saṃbujjhaï from Sanskrit saṃbudhyate, "wakes up, understands" (CDIAL 12959): sam-, "fully, together," plus budh-, "to wake; to become aware." To understand something is to come awake to it.

That root has a famous derivative. Buddha is buddha, "the woken one" — the same budh-, as are bodhi, the awakening, and buddhi, "intellect." English borrowed all three without noticing they were relatives of anything.

One stage back the root is Indo-European *b^hewd^h-, "be awake, be aware." Its English descendants are quieter: bode and forebode, about being warned, and forbid — Old English bēodan, "to announce, to command," a word for making someone aware of your will.

So Urdu's plainest way of saying I get it and the Buddha's title are one word.

Your turn

- Say it: samajhnā — to understand; then the stem samajh-
- Say it: ṭhīk, then samajhnā — hear the same ھ breath in both
- Contrast: ہ speaks in hūṅ; ھ only aspirates in samajh-

- Say it: maiṅ sochtā hūṅ, then maiṅ samajhtā hūṅ — I think, I understand
- Connect: samajhnā ← budh- → Buddha, "the woken one"

Before you move on

What does ھ do, and does it sound by itself? (It aspirates the letter before it; no.) What did budh- mean, and which famous title is built on it? (To wake; Buddha.)

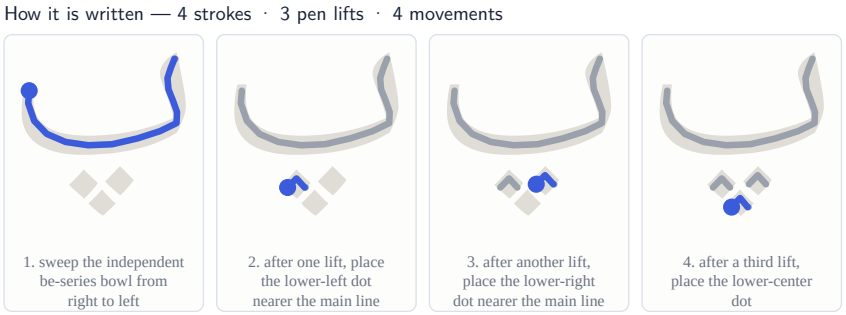
7.4 پ — three dots under a boat

Write آنا and آسان, and say which alif wears the wave.

Script — the shape



How پ is written, stroke by stroke

پ

A shallow open curve lying along the baseline, like a small flat-bottomed boat — and then three dots placed underneath it, arranged as a triangle with its point downward, each after its own lift.

Two parts, three lifts. Its name is پ pe and it says p.

The shapes it wears by position follow the pattern you have already seen twice:

- standing alone and closing a joined word: the full boat, dots beneath
- opening a word and in the middle: the boat shrinks to a small tooth — a short upward point on the line — with the three dots still beneath it

Note what survives the shrinking. The curve goes; the three dots stay. On a page of Nastaliq you find pe by counting dots below the line, not by looking for a boat.

That triangle of dots is worth one sentence of history. Arabic has no p, so the Arabic alphabet has no letter for it. Persian needed one, invented it by taking the shape that carries a single dot below and giving it three, and Urdu inherited the invention along with the script. The same trick made letters for ch, zh and g. So the dots under pe are a record of a borrowed alphabet being altered to fit a language it was not built for — which every language that took this alphabet has done, Urdu among them. Sindhi went furthest of Urdu's neighbours, and carries around fifty letters to Urdu's thirty-nine.

Three words, pe in three different places, and no letter in any of them that is not already yours. Copy each with the model in view.

آپ

پیر

اپنا

آپ āp — the respectful "you," and the word this book has addressed you with from the beginning. Pe closes it, wearing the full boat, because alif madda hands nothing to the left.

پیر pair "foot" — pe opens it, shrunk to a tooth with its three dots still underneath.

اپنا apnā "one's own" — pe sits in the middle, the same tooth, hemmed in on both sides.

Your turn

- Write it: پ — the boat, then three dots beneath, lifting before each one
- Write it: آپ, then پیر, then اپنا
- Point to: the pe in پیر and the pe in آپ, and say what changed
- Say it: āp, and say who you would use it with rather than tum

Before you move on

How many dots does pe carry, and where? (Three, underneath.) Why did Persian have to invent this letter? (Arabic has no p.) Write "you." (آپ.)

7.5 پڑھنا — "to read," and "to study," and "to recite"

Say samajhnā, strip its -nā, and hear the breath the two-eyed ھ puts into the stem. This verb uses that letter and one more.

You'll want to know first — one word

پڑھنا — paṛhnā — to read

It is also the ordinary word for "to study": the noun paṛhāī is "studies, schooling." Urdu does not keep reading and studying in separate boxes. Strip the -nā and the stem is paṛh-.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: پ p, then ڑ, then ھ, then ن n, then ا long ā.

Two are yours: پ, the low scoop with three dots below, from آپ āp; and ھ, the two-eyed he from samajhnā — ڑ plus ھ gives ṛh.

ڑ is new, and built from two things you have met. Its body is ر r, from شکریہ shukriyā. On top sits the very mark that ṭe carries in ṭhīk: Urdu's retroflex sign, meaning curl the tongue back. Ṭe is a curled t; ڑ is a curled r, flicked rather than rolled. You meet the mark here, on the letter that is yours today, and meet its other bearer by ear until the shape is handed to you.

Grammar Lens: into the frame

maiṅ paṛhtā hūṅ — I read (man speaking) maiṅ paṛhtī hūṅ — I read (woman speaking)

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

paṛhnā comes from Prakrit paḍhaï, from Sanskrit paṭh-, "to recite; to read aloud" (CDIAL 7712). Its ṭh softened into the flapped ṛh you have learned, and the meaning widened from reciting to reading to studying.

Be honest about the far end: CDIAL takes paṭh- as a Middle Indo-Aryan form of an older pṛthati*, and there is no English cousin. The near end is better. The oldest sense — speaking a text you hold in memory — is everyday, not a fossil. To perform the Muslim ritual prayer is namāz paṛhnā, literally "to read the prayer," and nobody performing it holds a book. You already met the word for someone who does that with the whole Quran: a hāfiz, on the Arabic root ḥ-f-ẓ, "to guard, to preserve." Guarding a text and reciting it are two halves of one practice — one word borrowed, one inherited.

Your turn

- Say it: paṛhnā — to read, and to study; then the stem paṛh-
- Count: پ three dots below, and name the word it opens
- Trace it: the retroflex mark on ڑ — the same mark ṭe carries
- Say it: maiṅ paṛhtā hūṅ, then maiṅ samajhtā hūṅ — I read, I understand

Before you move on

Name the two everyday meanings of paṛhnā. (To read; to study.) What does the mark on ڑ tell you to do, and which other letter carries it? (Curl the tongue back; ṭe.) Does paṭh- have an

7.6 لکھنا — "to write," with nothing new left to decode

Three verbs so far: sochnā, samajhnā, paṛhnā. Strip the ending off each and say the three stems. The fourth completes the set, and every letter in it is one you already own.

You'll want to know first — one word

لکھنا — likhnā — to write

Strip the -nā and the stem is likh-.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: ل l, from سلام salām; ک k, from کیا kyā; then ھ, the two-eyed he, aspirating the ک to give کھ kh; then ن n and ا long ā.

Not one new shape — a whole verb you can read straight off.

Grammar Lens: all four in the frame

maiṅ likhtā hūṅ — I write (man speaking) maiṅ likhtī hūṅ — I write (woman speaking)

Run the chapter through that frame without changing anything but the stem: maiṅ sochtā hūṅ, maiṅ samajhtā hūṅ, maiṅ paṛhtā hūṅ, maiṅ likhtā hūṅ. One machine, four verbs, and maiṅ … hūṅ holding the ends of every sentence.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

likhnā is Sanskrit likhati, "scratches, scrapes" (CDIAL 11048). Writing was cutting a mark into a surface. Three other families reached for that picture out of three unrelated roots: Latin scrībere "to incise," behind scribe and script; Greek gráphein "to scratch," behind graph; Old English wrītan "to score, to cut," which is write. Four families, each deciding that writing is scratching.

Now the part only Urdu can show you. All four verbs of this chapter are inherited Indo-Aryan, the plain floor of the language — but the things writing needs are borrowed to a word: qalam, the pen, Arabic from Greek kálamos, "a reed"; kitāb, the book, from the Arabic root k-t-b, "to write"; and nastaʿlīq, the Persian name of the flowing hand Urdu is set in. All three are printed the way you say them: each is spelled with letters still ahead of you. The deed is inherited; the equipment came by ship.

Your turn

- Say it: likhnā — to write; then the stem likh-
- Run through: all four — sochnā, samajhnā, paṛhnā, likhnā — stripping each stem
- Say it: the four in the frame — maiṅ sochtā hūṅ … maiṅ likhtā hūṅ
- Name: which letter is che, which is ṛe, and what ھ does to a neighbour
- Trace it: soch- from grieving, samajh- from waking, paṛh- from reciting
- Sort: likhnā inherited; qalam and kitāb borrowed

Before you move on

Name the four verbs of this chapter and their four stems. What did likhati mean before it meant "write"? (Scratches.) Which layer of Urdu does qalam belong to? (The borrowed one.)

Chapter 8

Four Verbs Between People

Modes: voice (1) eyes (3) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can take, ask and help in Urdu, build a verb by bolting a borrowed noun onto karnā, and say what I like in the sentence where the thing liked is the subject and I am only the person it happens to. I can write vāʾo, and name both letters that refuse to join to their left.
> mujhe paṛhnā pasand hai — the first Urdu sentence the learner cannot open with maiṅ. It closes over the chapter's own four verbs by dropping each -nā infinitive into the liked-thing slot, and reuses madad karnā's join in pasand karnā.

8.1 لینا — "to take," and the letter that will not sit still

Last chapter's four verbs were about the mind. Say likhnā, and name which layer of Urdu qalam came from. Now the hands take over: four verbs about what happens between people.

You'll want to know first — one word

لینا — lenā — to take

Strip the -nā and the stem is le-. That is the whole stem: one syllable, no consonant after the vowel. It is the shortest verb you have met, and the etymology says why.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: ل l, then ی, then ن n, then ا long ā.

ی here carries a long e — le-, rhyming with English lay. That is its third job: it supplied a consonantal y in کیا kyā and stood for long ī in jī.

A fourth relative is yours too: broad final ے, which ends کیسے kaise and is not the shape that ends کیسی kaisī. One family of ye shapes covering y, ī and e, with the learned word telling you which — the abjad recording enough, not everything.

Grammar Lens: a two-letter stem in the same frame maiṅ letā hūṅ — I take (man speaking) maiṅ letī hūṅ — I take (woman speaking)

No stem is too small for the machine. le- plus -tā/-tī plus hūṅ.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lenā goes back to Sanskrit labh-, "to gain, to obtain": CDIAL lists it under labhate, "catches, takes" (CDIAL 10948). Prakrit softened it to lahaï, then the -h- went too and the vowels fused into a single le. A three-consonant root worn down to one syllable — the erosion that makes a language's commonest words its shortest.

Prakrit then did something tidy: it levelled le- "take" against de- "give" so the pair matched. That is why لینا lenā and denā still rhyme. They are not related; they were made to sound like partners.

On the standard comparison, labh- matches Greek lambánein, "to take, to seize" — which English borrowed repeatedly without noticing. Syllable is syn- plus lambánein, "letters taken together"; epilepsy is "a seizing upon"; a lemma is something taken as given, which is why an argument with two of them is a dilemma.

Your turn

- Say it: lenā — to take; then the stem, which is le- alone
- Name: ی three ways — y in kyā, ī in jī, e in lenā

- Say it: maiṅ letā hūṅ, then maiṅ letī hūṅ
- Say it: maiṅ likhtā hūṅ, then maiṅ letā hūṅ — I write, I take
- Connect: lenā ← labh- → Greek lambánein → English syllable

Before you move on

What sound does ی carry in lenā, and name one other value it takes elsewhere. (Long *e; y in kyā or ī in jī.) What did labh- mean? (To gain, to obtain.) Why do lenā and denā rhyme? (Prakrit levelled the pair.)

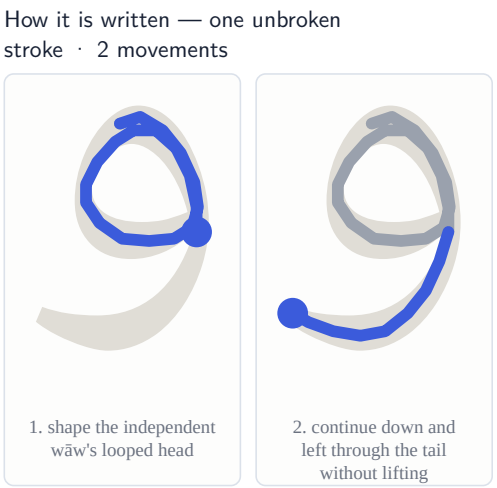
8.2 و — a head, a tail, and no hand to the left

Name the letter that takes the hand of what is on its right and offers nothing to the left, so that a gap opens inside a word. (ا.)

Script — the shape



How و is written, stroke by stroke

و

A small round head at the top, closed like a tiny loop, and then a tail that sweeps down and away to the left, dropping below the baseline. One movement, no dots.

Its name is و vāᵓo.

Now the part that matters more than the shape. vāᵓo is a non-joiner, the second one you have met. Like alif, it accepts the letter on its right and hands nothing to the letter on its left, so the run stops after it and whatever follows begins as if starting fresh. When you see a break inside an Urdu word, you now have two suspects instead of one.

With nothing ever attached on its left, vāᵓo has no separate middle face to learn. It looks the same wherever it stands; only whether something is joined to its right changes.

And it carries more than one sound. Vāᵓo does four jobs:

- the consonant v or w
- the long vowel ū
- the long vowel o
- and in some Persian borrowings, nothing at all — a letter written and not said

Which one it is comes from the word, not the shape, exactly as with ye. Having heard the word is what tells you.

The letters in this word

Three words, three of vāᵓo's values. Copy each with the model in front of you.

وکیل

ہوں

کون

وکیل vakīl "lawyer" — vāʾo opens it as a consonant, and because it hands nothing leftward, ک begins a fresh run right after it. The gap you see inside the word is the letter refusing to join, not a space.

ہوں hūṅ — "I am." Vāʾo is the long ū here, and the break after it is the same non-joining behaviour, with ں starting clean.

کون kaun — "who." Vāʾo is the o of the diphthong.

One letter, three sounds, in three words you already say.

Your turn

- Write it: و — the closed head, then the tail sweeping down and left
- Write it: وکیل, then ہوں, then کون
- Write it: میں ... ہوں۔ — and say it with something true about yourself
- Point to: the break after vāʾo in ہوں and say why it is there

Before you move on

Write "I am." (میں ... ہوں۔) How many sounds can vāʾo carry? (Four, counting the silent one.) What tells you which? (Having heard the word.)

8.3 پوچھنا — "to ask," a word Urdu inherited and borrowed at the same time

Say lenā and name the sound ی carries in it. You also hold کیا kyā, "what," and two whole questions built with it. Here is the verb for the act itself.

You'll want to know first — one word

پوچھنا — pūchhnā — to ask

Strip the -nā and the stem is pūchh-. It covers both asking a question and asking after someone.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: پ p, then و carrying long ū, then چ ch, then ھ, then ن n, then ا long ā.

Every shape is already earned, and two are the dot-counting pair: پ has three dots below a low scoop, چ three below the taller jīm body. Then the ھ aspirates it, چ + ھ → چھ chh — its job in samajhnā and paṛhnā too.

Grammar Lens: into the frame

maiṅ pūchhtā hūṅ — I ask (man speaking) maiṅ pūchhtī hūṅ — I ask (woman speaking)

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pūchhnā is Sanskrit pṛcchati, "asks" (CDIAL 8352), on the Indo-European root prek-*, "to ask." Latin took it as precārī, "to beg, to pray" — hence English pray, prayer, and precarious, a thing held only as long as someone is willing to be asked. German still asks with it: fragen. English's own inherited cousin, Old English friġnan, died out, so English prays with the related word and asks with an unrelated one.

Here is the part that is Urdu's alone. Persian asks with porsīdan, and porsīdan is the same root, carried west into Iran rather than east into India. Urdu borrowed it back: پرسش pursish is "inquiry, asking after someone's health," and pursān-e-ḥāl is "one who asks how you are." So pūchhnā came down the inherited road, pursish came in sideways off a Persian ship, and they are cousins. Urdu is the room where the two roads meet, and the wellbeing question آپ کیسے ہیں؟ is what either of them names.

Your turn

- Say it: pūchhnā — to ask; then the stem pūchh-
- Count: three dots below پ, three below چ, then ھ for the breath
- Say it: maiṅ pūchhtā hūṅ, then maiṅ pūchhtī hūṅ

- Say it: kyā, then āp kaise haiṅ — a word and a question about asking
- Connect: pūchhnā and Persian pursish ← one root → English pray

Before you move on

Which English word for praying shares a root with pūchhnā, and are Persian porsīdan and Urdu pūchhnā related? (Pray; the same root, by two roads.)
Sources: Wiktionary: پوچھنا; Wiktionary: porsīdan; Rekhta Dictionary: pursish.

8.4 مدد کرنا — "to help," and the join that built half of Urdu

Say pūchhnā and name the English word for praying that shares its root. Every verb so far was one word ending in -nā. This one is two, and only the second half moves.

You'll want to know first — two words

مدد کرنا — madad karnā — to help

مدد madad is a noun: "help, aid." Alone it does nothing. کرنا karnā is the verb "to do," already readable: ک from kyā, ر from shukriyā, then -نا. Bolt them together: "to do help."

Grammar Lens: only the second half conjugates maiṅ madad kartā hūṅ — I help (man speaking) maiṅ madad kartī hūṅ — I help (woman speaking)

Madad never changes. It is not a verb and never becomes one; karnā carries every ending. This is the conjunct verb, the most productive verb-making device Urdu owns: name a noun, add karnā, and you have a verb.

You have met karnā's stem before without being told. āp se mil kar khushī huī — the line that closed a first introduction — holds کر kar in the middle doing a different job: "having met." One little word, two pieces of machinery.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

مدد is Arabic, on the three-consonant root د-د-م (m-d-d, Lane), whose verb madda means "to stretch out, to extend." Help, in Arabic, is something extended toward you — the picture English reaches for when it extends a hand, though English inherited nothing from m-d-d and its own help is unrelated Germanic. Better said plainly than dressed up as a cousin.

The root pattern is not new. hāfiz sits on ḥ-f-ẓ, "to guard, to preserve." Three consonants carrying a meaning, vowels poured in around them: that is how Arabic builds words, and now you have two. Madad travelled the same road as khudā — into Persian first, then into Urdu. Here is why the join matters more than the word. A borrowed noun cannot be conjugated. With karnā it never has to: the loan stays a frozen noun and native grammar does the work. That is how Urdu took in centuries of Persian and Arabic vocabulary without changing its verb system by one letter.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- madad karnā — to help; and which half is the noun
- maiṅ madad kartā hūṅ, then maiṅ madad kartī hūṅ
- two Arabic roots — ḥ-f-ẓ to guard, m-d-d to extend
- maiṅ pūchhtā hūṅ, then maiṅ madad kartā hūṅ — I ask, I help

Before you move on

Which half of madad karnā takes the endings, and what does m-d-d mean underneath? (کرنا; to stretch out, to extend.) Why does this join let Urdu borrow so freely? (The loan stays a noun; native karnā carries the grammar.)

Sources: Wiktionary: مدد; Wiktionary: مد (Arabic).

8.5 پسند — Urdu does not like things; things please Urdu

Say maiṅ madad kartā hūṅ and name which half takes the endings. Every sentence so far opened with میں maiṅ, "I." This one takes that away.

You'll want to know first — mujhe, the shape of "to me"

mujhe — to me

Mujhe is what میں maiṅ becomes when the sentence refuses to let you be its subject. It is not "I."

The letters in this word

From the right edge: م m, then jīm carrying j, then the two-eyed he aspirating it to jh, then broad final ے for e — the shape that ends کیسے kaise. All four already yours.

Grammar Lens: the thing you like is the subject mujhe paṛhnā pasand hai. — I like reading.

Taken apart: mujhe + paṛhnā ("reading") + pasand ("pleasing") + hai. Literally: "To me, reading is pleasing." paṛhnā is the subject, which is what ہے agrees with. No Urdu sentence puts I in front of like. And any -nā infinitive drops into that slot, because an Urdu infinitive doubles as a noun — so every verb of the last three chapters is likeable.

mujhe likhnā pasand hai. — I like writing.

Urdu keeps company with unrelated languages: Spanish me gusta el libro, "to me the book pleases"; Italian mi piace; Tamil enakku piḍikkum, "it catches me"; Bengali āmār bhālo lāge, "good sticks to me." Three families borrowing nothing from each other, each deciding liking happens to you.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پسند is not a verb. It is Persian, from پسندیدن pasandīdan, "to approve, to find pleasing" — pati-, "towards," plus sand, "to look good." It arrived as a noun and adjective, and a non-verb cannot carry the liker, so the grammar put that person elsewhere: mujhe.

Where sand goes next is genuinely disputed. One proposal ties it to the root behind Latin candēre, "to glow" — English candid, incendiary — and Sanskrit candra, "moon," Urdu's chānd. Lovely, but unsettled.

It came by the Persian road that gave you khushī, and sits beside Arabic مدد madad. Lenā and pūchhnā are inherited; madad and pasand are borrowed. Urdu's hands stayed home; its social words travelled.

پسند کرنا pasand karnā, "to do liking," reuses madad karnā's join; پسند آنا pasand ānā uses آنا ānā, "to come" — liking that comes.

Your turn

- Say it: mujhe paṛhnā pasand hai, then its literal sense
- Swap: hold mujhe ... pasand hai, change the middle — likhnā · sochnā · pūchhnā
- Say it: the chapter — maiṅ letā hūṅ, maiṅ pūchhtā hūṅ, maiṅ madad kartā hūṅ, mujhe paṛhnā pasand hai
- Sort: lenā, pūchhnā inherited; madad, pasand borrowed

Before you move on

In mujhe paṛhnā pasand hai, what is the subject, and what part of speech is pasand? (paṛhnā; a noun and adjective from Persian.) Sources: Wiktionary: پسند; Wiktionary: پسندیدن.

Chapter 9

People You'd Introduce

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my brother, sister, friend and family in Urdu, and choose merā or merī correctly for each noun's grammatical gender.
> Say merā bhāī, merī bahan, merā dost and merā khāndān with merā/merī chosen correctly for each noun, and sort the four into inherited bhāī/bahan against Persian dost/khāndān — the same native-versus-borrowed split Chapter 8's verbs drew.

9.1 بھائی — "brother," and the first real English cousin among these nouns

Say mujhe paṛhnā pasand hai. That closed the verb chapters. This chapter opens a new kind of word: nouns for the people you would actually introduce.

You'll want to know first — one word

بھائی — bhāī — brother

بھائی۔ میرا — merā bhāī. — "[He's] my brother."

Urdu, like English, can drop the subject when it is obvious from context — pointing at someone while you say this is enough.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: ب b, then ھ aspirating it to bh, then ا long ā, then ئ, then ی ī.

ئ is new: ye with hamza above. It is a fourth shape in the ye family, alongside consonantal y in کیا, long ī in jī, and broad final e in کیسے. Its job is narrower than any of those: it marks a glide between two vowels that would otherwise collide — here, between ā and ī. بھ is new too, extending the two-eyed he you already know from jh, ṭh, ṛh and chh to a fifth base letter, ب.

Grammar Lens: a noun with a gender

بھائی is grammatically masculine — the same class as نام in merā nām. That is why merā needs no change here. Not every noun agrees this easily; the next lesson breaks the pattern.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bhāī comes from Sanskrit bhrā́tṛ, "brother" (CDIAL 9661), from Proto-Indo-Iranian b^{h}ráHtā, from Proto-Indo-European b^{h}réh$_2$tēr. English brother comes from the very same root. Unlike pasand's disputed link to candēre two lessons ago, this one is settled: Sanskrit and English are both Indo-European, so bhāī and brother are real relatives, not two languages landing on the same idea by accident.

Your turn

- Say it: bhāī — brother; then merā bhāī
- Name: the fourth ye shape — hamza above, between two vowels
- Connect: bhāī ← bhrā́tṛ → English brother, real cousins
- Say it: mujhe paṛhnā pasand hai once more, then merā bhāī
- Recall: say ānā, then say bolnā

Before you move on

What does بھائی mean, and is بھائی masculine or feminine? (Brother; masculine.) Which English word is its real cousin, not only a resemblance? (Brother.) Name the four jobs of the ye family now. (Consonantal y, long ī, final e, and hamza-glide.) Sources: Wiktionary: بھائی.

9.2 بہن — "sister," and the word that makes میرا move

Say merā bhāī — my brother, a real cousin of the English word. Here is the other half of the pair, and it changes something you have used unchanged since Chapter 2.

You'll want to know first — one word

بہن — bahan — sister

بہن ہے میری — merī bahan. — "[She's] my sister."

Not میرا بہن. The reason comes next.

Grammar Lens: میرا bends to the noun, not to you بہن is grammatically feminine. Urdu's word for "my" carries that agreement: میرا merā before a masculine noun, میری merī before a feminine one — regardless of whether the speaker is a man or a woman. It is the noun's gender that decides, never the speaker's.

merā bhāī, merī bahan. — my brother, my sister.

نام in Chapter 2's merā nām is masculine, which is why that phrase never had to teach you this rule — one gender, hidden in plain sight, until a feminine noun finally showed up.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bahan continues Sanskrit bhaginī, "sister" (CDIAL 9349). Where bhaginī comes from is debated. One view, which CDIAL reports as the more probable, takes it from bhagin, "fortunate", on bhaj-, "to share, to portion out", as a good wish for an unmarried sister; other derivations have been proposed. CDIAL also flags a problem with the sound history: the breathy h that bhaginī has at its start sits in the middle of bahan, a shift that is hard to explain. Hold this one loosely, the way pasand's candēre link was held loosely — a plausible story, not a settled one like bhāī's.

Your turn

- Say it: bahan — sister; then merī bahan
- Contrast: merā bhāī — merī bahan
- Say it: why merā changed — the noun's gender, not the speaker's
- Say it: bahan ← bhaginī ← bhaj-, "to share" — held loosely
- Recall: say jānnā

Before you move on

Why is it بہن میری and not بہن میرا? (بہن is feminine, and merā/merī agrees with the noun's gender.) What does bhaj- mean, and is the connection to bahan certain? ("To share"; no, it is debated.)
Sources: Wiktionary: بہن.

9.3 دوست — "friend," and the relationship تم was made for

Back in Chapter 3 you learned three Urdu words for "you" — respectful āp, familiar tum, intimate tū — and were told to use tum once a relationship supports familiarity. Here is the relationship that phrase meant.

You'll want to know first — one word

دوست — dost — friend

میرا دوست۔ — merā dost. — "[He's/She's] my friend."

Grammar Lens: a noun that will not pick a gender bhāī was masculine and needed merā. bahan was feminine and needed merī. دوست breaks the pattern on purpose: it takes the same form for a male or a female friend, and merā dost works for either. Native Urdu nouns almost always commit to a gender; this Persian loan does not carry the machinery that would make it agree.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dost is Persian, inherited from Old Persian dauštā, from Proto-Iranian jawštā̆, from Proto-Indo-European ǵews-, "to taste, to choose, to enjoy." That root also gave English choose and Latin gustus — behind English gusto. A friend, on this history, is someone tasted and chosen, the same picture as lenā's worn-down "take." Persian's own word for "ask," porsīdan, turned out to share one root with Urdu's inherited pūchhnā. دوست is not that kind of cousin — Urdu has no inherited word from ǵews-* to compare it against — but it is the same general shape: an old Indo-European root, arriving in Urdu by the Persian road alone.

Grammar Lens: where تم (tum) actually lives

Chapter 3 taught āp / tum / tū and told you to move to tum once familiarity is safe. A دوست is exactly that relationship: someone you have moved off āp for. You do not need a new rule — only the word for the person the old rule was describing.

Your turn

- Say it: dost — friend; then merā dost, for either a man or a woman
- Contrast: merā bhāī, merī bahan, merā dost — two that agree, one that does not
- Connect: dost ← ǵews-* → English choose, gusto

- Say it: āp, tum, tū — then name which one fits a دوست

Before you move on

Does دوست change form for a male or female friend? (No — it stays دوست either way.) Which two English words share دوست's root? (Choose and gusto.) Which of āp / tum / tū fits a دوست? (tum.)
Sources: Wiktionary: دوست.

9.4 خاندان — "family," the word your three new nouns never needed

Three people-words so far: bhāī, bahan, dost — a specific brother, a specific sister, a specific friend. Not one of them names the group they belong to.

You'll want to know first — one word

خاندان — khāndān — family

خاندان۔ میرا — merā khāndān. — "[This is] my family."

خاندان is grammatically masculine, so merā stays unchanged — the same class as bhāī.

خاندان is Classical Persian, borrowed into Urdu whole. Unlike khudā hāfiz, whose Persian khudā and Arabic-rooted hāfiz this book could pull apart piece by piece, no source here commits to what خاندان is built from internally — so this one stays a single unanalyzed loan, not a compound to take apart.
Line up this chapter's four nouns by where they came from. bhāī and bahan are inherited, straight from Sanskrit, the same road as every kin word before them. dost and خاندان are Persian, the same road as خدا and hāfiz back in Chapter 5. The people you would point to and name stayed native; the words for choosing them as friends and grouping them as family reached outside the language.

Your turn

- Say it: khāndān — family; then merā khāndān
- Say it: all four — bhāī, bahan, dost, khāndān
- Sort: inherited — bhāī, bahan; Persian — dost, khāndān
- Choose: merā or merī for each of the four

Before you move on

Which two of this chapter's nouns are inherited from Sanskrit, and which two are Persian loans? (bhāī, bahan inherited; dost, خاندان Persian.) Say all four people-words with merā or merī correctly chosen for each.

Chapter 10

Four Words on the Face

Modes: voice (1) eyes (3) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my ear, nose, eye and mouth in Urdu, notice that kān and nāk share the same three letters reversed, and read the nūn that marks a nasal vowel instead of a spoken consonant.
> Name kān, nāk, āṅkh and muṅh, explain the plain nūn that nasalizes āṅkh and muṅh against the dedicated ں of maiṅ and hūṅ, and count three settled Indo-European cousins found this chapter — nāk/nose, āṅkh/eye — against kān's honest dead end.

10.1 کان — "ear," where the body words start

> Say merā khāndān — my family, closing the last chapter. This chapter turns from the people around you to the wellbeing check itself: four words for the body, starting with the one you use to hear the question.

You'll want to know first — one word

کان — kān — ear

میرا کان۔ — merā kān. — "my ear."

کان is masculine, so merā keeps the form you already know from bhāī and khāndān.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

kān continues Sanskrit karṇa, "ear", by way of Prakrit and Apabhramsa kaṇṇa (CDIAL 2830). That much is solid. Where karṇa itself comes from is not: the trail runs out inside Indo-Aryan, with only a loose, unconfirmed suggestion linking it to Persian کر (kar), "deaf." No English cousin, no settled Indo-European root — the same honest dead end paṛhnā's paṭh- hit two chapters ago.
Notice the pattern from last chapter still holds: کان is inherited, straight from Sanskrit, the same road as bhāī and bahan. khāndān, the word that closed that chapter, was Persian instead — the body's own words stay native even where their history goes quiet.

Your turn

- Say it: kān — ear; then merā kān
- Say it: khāndān, then kān — one word ends, the body words begin
- Name: what's uncertain about karṇa's own origin
- Recall: say sochnā, then say samajhnā, then say paṛhnā

Before you move on

Is کان masculine or feminine? (Masculine.) Does karṇa have a secure English cousin? (No — the origin is unsettled.)
Sources: Wiktionary: کان.

10.2 ناک — "nose," the same three letters as کان, backwards

Say merā kān — my ear, masculine, unchanged merā. This word shares every letter with it.

You'll want to know first — one word

ناک — nāk — nose

میری ناک — merī nāk. — "my nose."

ناک is feminine — merī, not merā. Grammatical gender does not follow shape or sound; it has to be learned noun by noun.

The letters in this word

کان is ن ا ک — k, ā, n. ناک is ک ا ن — n, ā, k. The same three letters, in exactly the opposite order. Ear and nose, spelled as mirror images of each other — a coincidence of Urdu's script, not of its history; the two words are not related.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nāk continues Sauraseni Prakrit ṇakka, which CDIAL derives, possibly, from nas-ka-*, built on Sanskrit nas-, "nose" (CDIAL 6909); nas- comes from Proto-Indo-Iranian náHs, from Proto-Indo-European néh₂s, "nose." English nose comes from that very root. Where کان's ancestry ran out unanswered — recall karṇa's own origin was left unsettled last lesson — ناک's does not: nāk and nose are genuine cousins, joining bhāī and brother as this book's settled Indo-European matches.

Your turn

- Say it: nāk — nose; then merī nāk
- Spell: kān forward, then nāk — the same three letters, reversed
- Connect: nāk ← néh₂s* → English nose, real cousins
- Contrast: merā kān — merī nāk
- Recall: say likhnā, then say pūchhnā

Before you move on

What is the letter relationship between کان and ناک? (Same three letters, reversed order.) Is ناک's English cousin settled or disputed? (Settled — nose shares its root.) Is ناک masculine or feminine? (Feminine.)

Sources: Wiktionary: ناک.

10.3 آنکھ — "eye," and a fifth letter learns to breathe

Say merī nāk — my nose, feminine. The next word on the face is feminine too, and it puts the two-eyed ھ on a letter it has never touched.

You'll want to know first — one word

آنکھ — āṅkh — eye

آنکھ ـ میری — merī āṅkh. — "my eye."

The letters in this word

From the right edge: آ, alif carrying long ā (the same mark you already read in آپ), then ن, then ک k, then ھ.

کھ extends the two-eyed he to a fifth base letter. It has already aspirated jīm in samajh-, ṭe in ṭhīk, ṛe in paṛh-, and che in pūchh-; here it does the same job to ک, giving kh.

The ن in this word is not pronounced as its own consonant. It marks the آ before it as nasal — the vowel said through the nose, with no separate n sound following it. Say āṅkh by nasalizing the ā, not by adding a clean n.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

āṅkh continues Sanskrit ákṣi, "eye" (CDIAL 43), from Proto-Indo-European h₃ekʷ-, "eye, to see." English eye descends from that same root. This chapter has now found two settled Indo-European cousins in a row — ناک/nose, آنکھ/eye — after کان's honest dead end.

Your turn

- Say it: āṅkh — eye; then merī āṅkh
- Nasalize: ā through the nose, no separate n
- Count: five letters now carrying ھ — jīm, ṭe, ṛe, che, kāf
- Connect: āṅkh ← *$h₃ek^w$- → English eye
- Recall: say lenā

Before you move on

Which letter does کھ newly pair the two-eyed he with, and name two letters it already paired with? (ک; any two of jīm، ṭe، ṛe، che.) What job does ن do in آنکھ? (Marks the آ as nasal — it is not its own consonant.) Is آنکھ's English cousin settled? (Yes — eye.)

Sources: Wiktionary: آنکھ.

10.4 منہ — "mouth," and the نون ānkh already used without explaining

Three face words: kān, nāk, āṅkh — recall that کان and ناک shared the same three letters, reversed. One more word closes the chapter, and it finally explains something āṅkh already did.

You'll want to know first — one word

منہ — muṅh — mouth (also: face)

میرا منہ — merā muṅh. — "my mouth."

منہ is masculine.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: م m, then ن, then ہ, the round he you already write in ہوں and ہونا — a real, spoken h, not the two-eyed aspirator.

That middle ن does the same job it did in ānkh, unglossed at the time: it marks the vowel before it as nasal, not a separate n sound. Say muṅh by nasalizing the u, with no clean n in between.

Keep this apart from میں maiṅ and ہوں hūṅ, whose nasal ending is written with a different letter entirely: ں, nūn ghunna, a dedicated nasalization mark. منہ and ānkh nasalize with a plain ن doing double duty; میں and ہوں nasalize with ں, a letter built for exactly that job and nothing else. Same sound, two different letters, depending on which word you are in.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

muṅh continues Sanskrit múkha, "mouth, face" (CDIAL 10158). One proposal, from the Sanskrit etymologist Manfred Mayrhofer, ties it to a Proto-Indo-European gesture-root mu-, "pressed lips" — the same root that would sit behind Greek mŷthos ("word," behind English myth) and German Maul, "mouth." Mayrhofer himself calls a non-Indo-European origin less likely but does not rule it out. Hold this one the way you held bahan's link to bhaj- — a real proposal, not a verdict.

Your turn

- Say it: muṅh — mouth; then merā muṅh
- Contrast: plain ن nasalizing in āṅkh and muṅh; ں nūn ghunna nasalizing in maiṅ and hūṅ
- Say it: four face words now — kān, nāk, āṅkh, muṅh
- Connect: muṅh possibly ← mu-* → Greek mŷthos → English myth, held loosely

Before you move on

Which earlier word in this chapter used a plain نون for nasalization the same way منہ does? (ānkh.) Which letter does میں use instead? (ں, nūn ghunna.) Is منہ's link to Greek mŷthos certain? (No — a proposal, held loosely.)

Sources: Wiktionary: منہ.

Chapter 11

The Heart

Modes: voice (1) Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my heart in Urdu and trace dil to the same Indo-European root as Sanskrit hṛdaya and English heart, arriving by the Persian road instead of the Sanskrit one.
> *Say merā dil, and trace it through Middle Persian and Proto-Iranian back to the same PIE ḱērd- that gives Sanskrit hṛdaya, English heart, Latin cor and Greek kardía — dil and hṛdaya split at the Indo-Iranian fork, not opposite lineages but the same root by two roads, echoing pūchhnā and porsīdan.

11.1 دل — "heart," Persian, and still a cousin of the English word

Recall منہ: its plain ن marked a nasal vowel, and its possible tie to Greek mŷthos was held loosely. Recall also pūchhnā: one root, two roads into Urdu — inherited pūchhnā and borrowed pursish, cousins by two different paths. This chapter's single word runs that same two-roads shape one level deeper, on the body's most-named part.

You'll want to know first — one word

دل — dil — heart

میرا دل — merā dil. — "my heart."

دل is masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دل is Persian — borrowed into Urdu from Middle Persian dil, by the same road as khudā back in Chapter 5. But unlike khudā, whose Sanskrit side this book never named, دل has one, and it is worth naming precisely.

Middle Persian dil is itself inherited, not borrowed, within the Iranian branch of Indo-Iranian: from Proto-Iranian jārd, from Proto-Indo-Iranian ǰʰārd, from Proto-Indo-European ḱērd-, "heart." That is the exact same root behind Sanskrit hṛdaya, English heart, Latin cor (behind courage, cordial), and Greek kardía (behind cardiac).

So دل and Sanskrit's word for heart are not opposites, and they did not arrive by accident on the same idea. They are the same PIE root, split at the Indo-Iranian fork: one branch went east into Sanskrit and became hṛdaya; the other went west into Iranian and became dil, then travelled back into Urdu as a loan. Persian and Sanskrit both keep the family's heart-word — Urdu happens to have taken the Iranian branch's copy.

Your turn

- Say it: dil — heart; then merā dil
- Say it: the four PIE cousins so far — bhāī/brother, nāk/nose, āṅkh/eye, dil/heart
- Trace it: dil ← Middle Persian ← Proto-Iranian ← PIE ḱērd-* → Sanskrit hṛdaya
- Say it: one root, two roads — Iranian and Indo-Aryan, the same shape as pūchhnā/pursish

Before you move on

Is دل's resemblance to Sanskrit hṛdaya a coincidence, like پسند and candēre? (No — both come from PIE ḱērd-, real cousins.)

Which branch of Indo-Iranian gave Urdu دل, and which gave Sanskrit hṛdaya? (Iranian; Indo-Aryan.) Name three other English words from the same root as دل. (Heart, cardiac, courage or cordial.)

Sources: Wiktionary: دل.

Chapter 12

Water, Tea, Milk, Bread

Modes: voice (2) eyes (2) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name water, tea, milk and bread in Urdu, say what I like using the frame Chapter 8 built, and sort each word as inherited or Persian.

Say mujhe roṭī pasand hai, reusing Chapter 8's dative-experiencer frame on a plain noun instead of an infinitive, and sort pānī/dūdh/roṭī as inherited against chāy's Persian loan — with pānī reusing lenā's verb frame and dūdh correcting a tempting false cognate with English dough.

12.1 پانی — "water," and لینا put back to work

Say merā dil — my heart, closing the body words, and recall that its PIE root reached Urdu by the Persian road while the same root reached Sanskrit's hṛdaya by a different one. This chapter turns to the four things you would actually ask for. لینا, "to take," from three chapters back, gets its first real use since it was taught.

You'll want to know first — one word

پانی — pānī — water

پانی is masculine.

Grammar Lens: naming what you'd take maiṅ pānī letā hūṅ. — I take/get water (man speaking).

maiṅ pānī letī hūṅ. — I take/get water (woman speaking).

لینا's stem le- slots a noun in front of it the same way any transitive verb does. You already hold the whole verb; پانی is the first noun you have had to put in front of it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pānī continues Sanskrit pānīya, "water, drink" (CDIAL 8082), built on pā-, "to drink," from Proto-Indo-European peh₃-. English water is unrelated — it comes from an entirely different PIE root. But peh₃-* itself did reach English, by a different door: Latin potare, "to drink," gave English potion and, by way of a sense narrowed to "a poisoned drink," poison. پانی is, underneath, "the drinkable thing" — the same idea English kept for what you drink, not for the substance itself.

Your turn

- Say it: pānī — water; then merā pānī
- Say it: maiṅ pānī letā hūṅ, then maiṅ pānī letī hūṅ
- Connect: pānī ← pā- → Latin potare → English potion, poison — not water
- Recall: say madad karnā

Before you move on

Is پانی related to English water? (No.) Name two English words that do share its root. (Potion and poison.) Say "I take/get water," once as a man would, once as a woman would.
Sources: Wiktionary: پانی.

12.2 چائے — "tea," which walked to Urdu rather than sailed

Say merā pānī — my water, underneath "the drinkable thing." Here is the drink you would politely ask for right after it, and a letter from Chapter 9 makes a second appearance.

You'll want to know first — one word

چائے — chāy — tea

میری چائے۔ — merī chāy. — "my tea."

چائے is feminine.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: چ ch, already yours from sochnā and samajhnā; then ا long ā; then ئ, hamza-ye, the vowel-glide letter bhāī introduced; then ے, broad final e from kaise. چائے's ئ does the same job it did in bhāī: keeping ā and the vowel after it from colliding.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چائے is borrowed from Classical Persian چای (chāy), which traces back to Northern Chinese chá, carried overland through Central Asia into Persian before Urdu ever had it. That is the same road khudā and dil travelled in earlier chapters — Persian into Urdu — with a Chinese starting point this time instead of one further west.
Tea that instead reached Europe by sea kept a different form, from southern coastal Chinese, which is why English says tea and French says thé instead of chai. One drink, two words, sorted by whether it travelled by land or by water.

Your turn

- Say it: chāy — tea; then merī chāy
- Name: the hamza-ye letter's two words so far — bhāī, chāy

- Say it: the road — chá ... chāy ... chāy
- Contrast: merā pānī — merī chāy
- Recall: say pasand

Before you move on

Which three languages did چائے pass through, in order? (Chinese, then Persian, then Urdu.) Why does English say "tea" instead of "chai"? (It arrived by sea, carrying a different Chinese form.) Which earlier Urdu word already used the hamza-ye letter? (bhāī.)
Sources: Wiktionary: چائے.

12.3 دودھ — "milk," and a false friend worth naming before you fall for it

Say merī chāy — my tea, which walked overland from China through Persian before reaching Urdu. This word is what turns it milky, and it hands the two-eyed ھ a sixth letter to aspirate.

You'll want to know first — one word

دودھ — dūdh — milk

میرا دودھ۔ — merā dūdh. — "my milk."

دودھ is masculine.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: د d, then و carrying long ū, then د again, then ھ. دھ extends the two-eyed he to a sixth base letter: it has now aspirated jīm, ṭe, ṛe, che, kāf, and here it aspirates د, giving dh.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins dūdh continues Sanskrit dugdhá, literally "milked" (CDIAL 6391), from Proto-Indo-European d^{h}ewg^{h}-, "to be fit, to yield, to produce." That root also gives Sanskrit duh-, "to milk" — the verb sitting directly under this noun.

Here is the trap. English dough looks like the obvious match, and it is not: dough comes from a completely different PIE root, d^{h}eig^{h}-, "to knead, to form" — the root behind the shape of bread, not the substance of milk. The real English cousin of دودھ is a quieter word: doughty, "brave, capable," from the very same d^{h}ewg^{h}-, "fit for, of use." A doughty person and milked milk share an ancestor; bread dough does not.

Your turn

- Say it: dūdh — milk; then merā dūdh
- Count: six letters now carrying ھ — jīm, ṭe, ṛe, che, kāf, dāl
- Reject: دودھ is NOT related to English dough
- Connect: دودھ ← *$d^{h}ewg^{h}$- → English doughty, the real cousin

Before you move on

Which English word looks like a match for دودھ but is not one? (Dough.) Which English word actually is the cousin? (Doughty.) What Sanskrit verb sits directly under دودھ? (duh-, "to milk.") Sources: Wiktionary: دودھ; Etymonline: doughty.

12.4 روٹی — "bread," and pasand closes the chapter

Three drinks so far: pānī, chāy, dūdh — and recall dūdh's real English cousin was doughty, not the tempting dough. This chapter's fourth and final word is the one you would eat, not drink.

You'll want to know first — one word

روٹی — roṭī — bread

میری روٹی — merī roṭī. — "my bread."

روٹی is feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

roṭī goes back to a form CDIAL reconstructs as roṭṭa*, "bread"; late Sanskrit has roṭikā (CDIAL 10837). One view relates it to Sanskrit roṭate, "strikes against" — the pounding and rolling that turns grain into flatbread. The trail stops there: no proposed Proto-Indo-European ancestor, no English cousin. کان and paṛhnā hit the same honest wall earlier in this book. Not every word gets a Greek or Latin relative, and saying so plainly is better than inventing one.

Grammar Lens: mujhe ... pasand ہے, one more time mujhe roṭī pasand hai. — I like bread.

The dative-experiencer frame from Chapter 8 was built for -nā infinitives — paṛhnā, likhnā. It works as well for a plain noun: whatever pleases you sits in the subject slot, and ہے agrees with it, not with you.

Your turn

- Say it: roṭī — bread; then merī roṭī
- Say it: mujhe roṭī pasand hai, then swap in pānī, then dūdh
- Sort: inherited — pānī, dūdh, roṭī; Persian — chāy
- Say it: all four foods with merā or merī correctly chosen

Before you move on

Does روٹی have a secure English cousin? (No — the trail stops at Sanskrit.) Of this chapter's four foods, which one is the Persian loan? (chāʾe.) Say "I like bread" using the frame from Chapter 8.

Sources: Wiktionary: روٹی.

Chapter 13

Four Colors

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name red, white, black and blue in Urdu, and tell which colors change their ending for the noun they describe and which never do.
> Say all four colors — لال, سفید, کالا, نیلا — sorting the two that agree with the noun's gender from the two that never change, and trace نیلا's cousin nīlī forward through Persian and Arabic into English aniline.

13.1 لال — "red," and a word that never changes shape

Recall roṭī — bread, an honest dead end with no English cousin. This lesson opens a new kind of word: colors, starting with the one you'd use for a ripe tomato or a bride's dress.

You'll want to know first — one word

لال — lāl — red merā koṭ lāl hai. — "My coat is red."

Grammar Lens: a color that never agrees

لال ends in a consonant, not in ا. That matters: it stays لال whether the thing it describes is masculine or feminine, singular or plural. merā kamīz lāl hai, merī ṭopī lāl hai — same word, no change. Not every color in this book will be this simple.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

لال is borrowed from Classical Persian lāl, "red." No further ancestor is documented for the Persian word itself — the trail stops, the same honest kind of dead end roṭī's Sanskrit root hit last lesson, except this time on the Persian side of the book's two layers rather than the inherited one.

Your turn

- Say it: lāl — red; then merā koṭ lāl hai
- Note: لال never changes its ending, unlike the colors still to come
- Connect: lāl ← Persian, no further root — like roṭī's Sanskrit root, but on the other side of the book's two layers
- Recall: say bhāī, then say bahan

Before you move on

What does لال mean, and which layer does it belong to — inherited or Persian? (Red; Persian.) Does لال change its ending for a feminine noun? (No — it stays لال.) Does لال have a documented ancestor before Persian? (No — an honest dead end.) Is khudā hāfiz written as one word or two in Urdu spelling? (Two, spaced — unlike Persian's joined form.) When you read میرا نام ... ہے right to left, does the spoken order of the words change? (No — the script direction changes, the spoken order does not.) Sources: Wiktionary: لال.

13.2 سفید — "white," and English joins the family this time

Recall لال — red, Persian, and a dead end. This word is also Persian, also ends in a consonant, and also never changes shape. But its root does not stop where لال's did.

You'll want to know first — one word

سفید — safed — white

merī ṭopī safed hai. — "My cap is white."

Like لال, سفید never changes its ending.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

سفید continues Middle Persian spēt, from Old Iranian spaita-, from Proto-Indo-Iranian ćwaytás, from Proto-Indo-European ḱweyt-, "to shine, white." That is the exact same root behind Sanskrit śvetá, "white" — so سفید and Sanskrit's word for white split at the Indo-Iranian fork, one road east into Sanskrit, one road west into Iranian and then Urdu, the same shape as ول and hṛdaya two chapters back.
This time a third road leads somewhere new: that same PIE root, through Proto-Germanic, gives English white as well. pūchhnā and porsīdan were cousins by two roads; سفید, śvetá, and white are cousins by three.

Your turn

- Say it: safed — white; then merī ṭopī safed hai
- Contrast: لال — Persian, dead end; سفید — Persian, and the root keeps going
- Trace it: safed ← Middle Persian ← PIE ḱweyt-* → Sanskrit śvetá → English white
- Say it: one root, three roads this time, not two

Before you move on

What does سفید mean? (White.) Name its two settled cousins in other languages. (Sanskrit śvetá; English white.) Recall ṭhīk and how a short Urdu word once bridged to a Hindi cognate — how is that bridge different from what سفید did? (ṭhīk's bridge was Urdu-to-Hindi, the same modern language pair; سفید's is a PIE root three languages deep.) How did the earlier take-leave dialogue end? (With khudā hāfiz, spoken by both voices.)

13.3 کالا — "black," and the first color that agrees

Recall safed — white, cousin of Sanskrit śvetá and English white, three roads from one PIE root. This word is inherited rather than Persian, and it breaks the "never changes" rule the last two colors kept.

You'll want to know first — one word

کالا — kālā — black merā koṭ kālā hai. — "My coat is black."

merī ṭopī kālī hai. — "My cap is black."

Grammar Lens: a color that agrees like میرا

کالا ends in ا — and a color ending in ا changes with the noun it describes, exactly the way merā/merī changed for gender back in the family chapter. Masculine stays کالا; feminine becomes کالی. لال and safed never had to make this choice, because neither one ends in ا. Watch for it again on the last color of this chapter.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کالا is inherited from Sanskrit kāla, "black, dark" — so far, the same kind of story as bhāī or āṅkh. But کالا's root does not continue into Proto-Indo-European at all. CDIAL takes it instead, through a form kāḍa-*, from Dravidian (CDIAL 3083), where Tamil has karu, "black" (DEDR 1278): Sanskrit itself borrowed this color word from its Dravidian neighbours, long before any of it reached Urdu. Inherited from Sanskrit, yes — but Sanskrit's own source sits outside the Indo-European family this book has been tracing.

Your turn

- Say it: kālā — black, masculine; kālī — black, feminine
- Choose: merā koṭ kālā hai against merī ṭopī kālī hai
- Contrast: safed never changes; کالا always agrees
- Name: کالا's root sits outside Indo-European, in Dravidian — unlike every other inherited word so far

Before you move on

What does کالا mean, and what does it become before a feminine noun? (Black; kālī.) Is کالا's ultimate root Indo-European? (No — Proto-Dravidian, borrowed into Sanskrit.) Which two colors so far never change their ending? (لال and safed.) Does khudā hāfiz need a verb or an agreement ending to work as a farewell? (No — speakers use the fixed formula as "goodbye" and nothing more, no conjugation required.) When choosing kaise or kaisī, whose gender decides the choice — yours, or the person you're addressing? (The person you're addressing.)

13.4 نیلا — "blue," and this book's fourth color closes the set

Recall کالا/کالی, the color that agrees, against لال, the color that never does. This chapter's last word decides which kind it is, then does something none of the other three managed: it left Urdu again, centuries later, and became an English word.

You'll want to know first — one word

نیلا — nīlā — blue merā koṭ nīlā hai. — "My coat is blue."

نیلا ends in ا, so it agrees exactly like کالا: feminine نیلی.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

نیلا comes from Sanskrit nīla, "dark blue" (CDIAL 7563). No further root is documented behind it — an honest dead end backward, unlike کالا's root, which kept going sideways into Dravidian.
But Sanskrit's related word nīlī, "the indigo plant," did not stop there. It travelled forward: into Persian nīla, then Arabic an-nīl ("the indigo"), then Portuguese anil, and finally into English as aniline, the name nineteenth-century chemists gave the dye compound first found in indigo. safed reached English through a shared PIE root, inherited by both languages independently. نیلا's route to English is a completely different shape: one word, borrowed forward through four languages, arriving in English only a couple of centuries ago.

Your turn

- Say it: nīlā — blue, masculine; nīlī — blue, feminine
- Sort: agrees — کالا, نیلا; never changes — lāl, safed
- Trace it: nīlā's cousin nīlī → Persian → Arabic an-nīl → Portuguese anil → English aniline
- Say it: all four colors — lāl, safed, kālā, nīlā — with koṭ or ṭopī

Before you move on

Which two of this chapter's four colors agree with the noun they describe, and which two never change? (Agree: کالا, نیلا. Never change: لال, safed.) What English word ultimately comes from the same root as نیلا's cousin nīlī? (Aniline.) Recall the phrase that closed a first introduction with a pleased response — say it now. (آپ سے مل کر khushī huī.) Does Urdu spell khudā hāfiz joined, the way Persian does, or spaced? (Spaced.) Reading نام میرا ... ہے right to left changes which direction — the script's, or the spoken word order's? (Only the script's.)

Chapter 14

Four Things You Wear

Modes: voice (2) eyes (2) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a shirt, shoe, cap and coat in Urdu, and sort each word by which direction it was borrowed: into Urdu, out of Urdu into English, or straight from English.
> Name قمیض, جوتا, ٹوپی and کوٹ, then sort all four by the direction their loan travelled: Persian and Arabic into Urdu, Urdu out into English, or English straight into Urdu — three directions in one small set of words.

14.1 قمیض — "shirt," and a word that meets its English cousin in a wardrobe

Recall نیلا's long trip forward into English aniline. This lesson opens a new chapter — four things you wear — and its first word makes an even stranger connection than blue did.

You'll want to know first — one word

قمیض — qamīz — shirt

میری قمیض نیلی ہے۔ — merī qamīz nīlī hai. — "My shirt is blue."

قمیض is feminine — that is why نیلا becomes نیلی here.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: ق, م, ی, ض.

ق qāf is a new letter, said with the back of the tongue drawn further back in the throat than ک kāf — in relaxed speech many speakers merge the two, but careful and formal pronunciation keeps them apart. ض zād is also new: like zoʾe, already known from hāfiz, it represents the plain z sound in Urdu, even though Arabic once told the two letters apart. Urdu keeps both spellings without keeping the sound distinction Arabic makes.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

قمیض is borrowed from Classical Persian qamīs, from Arabic qamīṣ, probably from Latin camisia, from Proto-West Germanic hamiþi, from Proto-Indo-European ǩam-, "cover, clothes." That same Latin camisia also gives French chemise, borrowed straight into English as chemise. Two roads out of one Late Latin word: one east through Arabic and Persian into Urdu, one north through French into English — and both landed, centuries later, meaning a piece of clothing worn on the upper body.

Your turn

- Say it: qamīz — shirt; then merī qamīz nīlī hai
- Name: ق and ض, the two new letters, and what each is close to — ک and zoʾe
- Connect: qamīz ← Latin camisia → English chemise, two roads, one Late Latin source
- Say it: قمیض نیلی — a blue shirt

Before you move on

What does قمیض mean, and is it masculine or feminine? (Shirt; feminine.) Which English word probably shares قمیض's Latin source? (Chemise.) What does آپ کا نام کیا ہے؟ ask, and which word is fixed there regardless of who is asked? ("What is your name?"; کا, in this frame.) Name the two new letters in this word and one letter each is close to. (ق, close to ک; ض, close to zoᵊe.)

Sources: Wiktionary: قمیض, Wiktionary: chemise.

14.2 جوتا — "shoe," a cousin of yoke, and a cousin of yoga too

Recall qamīz and its long-shot cousin English chemise. This word's English cousin is even closer, and its Sanskrit cousin is a word you likely already know.

You'll want to know first — one word

جوتا — jūtā — shoe

میرا جوتا کالا ہے۔ — merā jūtā kālā hai. — "My shoe is black."

جوتا is masculine — that is why کالا stays کالا here rather than becoming کالی.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: ج, و, ت, ا.

ت te is new, and it shares its base shape with ṭe, already known from ṭhīk: the same scoop, but ت carries two dots above where ṭe carries a small raised loop instead. Two dots make it plain dental t; the loop makes it the retroflex ṭ the tongue curls back for.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jūtā continues Prakrit jutta, "joined," from Sanskrit yukta, "joined, yoked" (CDIAL 10479), from Proto-Indo-European yewg-, "to yoke." That root gives English yoke directly, the wooden bar that joins two oxen. It also gives Sanskrit its own word yoga — literally "a joining, a yoking" — the same root, kept inside one language this time rather than split across two. جوتا keeps the oldest, plainest sense: a thing joined onto the foot.

Your turn

- Say it: jūtā — shoe; then merā jūtā kālā hai
- Contrast: ت, two dots, plain t; ṭe, raised loop, retroflex ṭ
- Connect: jūtā ← yukta ← PIE yewg-* → English yoke, and → Sanskrit's own yoga
- Say it: nīlī qamīz and جوتا کالا together

Before you move on

What does جوتا mean, and is it masculine or feminine? (Shoe; masculine.) Name جوتا's two English-family cousins. (Yoke, and Sanskrit's own yoga.) What marks ت apart from the already-known ṭe? (Two dots above, instead of a raised loop.) When asking how someone is, does kaise/kaisī agree with your own gender or the gender of the person you're asking? (The person you're asking.) Recall ṭhīk's Hindi bridge — does it come before or after you can already read the Urdu form yourself? (After.) What line closes the take-leave dialogue this book opened early on? (khudā hāfiz, spoken by both voices.)
Sources: Wiktionary: جوتا, Wiktionary: yukta.

14.3 ٹوپی — "cap," a dead end behind it, a loan ahead of it

Recall jūtā, cousin of English yoke and Sanskrit yoga. This word has no such cousin behind it — but it made one of its own, going the other direction.

You'll want to know first — one word

ٹوپی — ṭopī — cap, hat

merī ṭopī safed hai. — "My cap is white."

ٹوپی is feminine, like روٹی and qamīz.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ٹوپی is inherited: CDIAL lists it under a reconstructed ṭoppa*, "hat, covering", beside Prakrit ṭopiā, "helmet", and late Sanskrit ṭopikā, "turban" (CDIAL 5481). No further root is documented behind that — another honest dead end, like روٹی and کان.

But ٹوپی did something those two never did: it left Urdu and Hindi and became an English word. Topee, first recorded in English between 1825 and 1835, is borrowed directly from Hindi ṭopī, "hat" — the lightweight sun hat worn across British India. نیلا's cousin nīlī took four languages and a chemistry lab to become English aniline. ٹوپی walked straight into English as itself.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭopī — cap; then merī ṭopī safed hai
- Name: ٹوپی's own root stops at Prakrit — a dead end, like روٹی
- Connect: ṭopī → English topee, borrowed directly, no intermediate language
- Say it: kālā jūtā and safed ṭopī together
- Recall: say kān

Before you move on

What does ٹوپی mean, and is it masculine or feminine? (Cap/hat; feminine.) Does ٹوپی have a documented root before Prakrit? (No — a dead end.) What English word borrows ٹوپی directly, and roughly when? (Topee, 1825–35.) Recall the frame that put ṭhīk inside a full sentence — say it now with میں. (میں ṭhīk ہوں۔) Does khudā hāfiz need a conjugated verb to work as a farewell? (No — it's used as a fixed formula, no agreement ending required.)

Sources: Wiktionary: ٹوپی, Dictionary.com: topee.

14.4 کوٹ — "coat," and every direction a loan can travel

Recall this chapter's three words: qamīz, borrowed from Arabic through Persian; jūtā, inherited all the way from Proto-Indo-European; ٹوپی, borrowed out of Urdu into English as topee.
This chapter's last word takes the shortest road of all.

You'll want to know first — one word

کوٹ — koṭ — coat

میرا کوٹ نیلا ہے۔ — merā koṭ nīlā hai. — "My coat is blue."

کوٹ is masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کوٹ is borrowed directly from English coat — a modern loan, one generation old rather than a thousand years. It happens to look identical to an older, unrelated کوٹ meaning "fort," inherited from Sanskrit koṭṭa (CDIAL 3500) — the two are homographs, not cousins, and the spelling gives no warning either way.
This book has named two layers before now: the inherited Indo-Aryan core, and the Persian-Arabic literary layer borrowed centuries ago. کوٹ is the first clear example of a third layer — everyday English loans, arriving through more recent contact. And this chapter has now shown every direction a loanword can travel in one small set of four: Persian and Arabic into Urdu (qamīz), Urdu straight out into English (ٹوپی), and English straight into Urdu (کوٹ).

Your turn

- Say it: koṭ — coat; then merā koṭ nīlā hai
- Name: three layers now — inherited, Persian-Arabic, and modern English
- Sort: qamīz in, ٹوپی out, کوٹ in — three loans, three directions
- Say it: all four clothing words — qamīz, jūtā, ṭopī, koṭ — each with a color from the earlier chapter

Before you move on

What does کوٹ mean, and where does it come from? (Coat; borrowed directly from English.) Which of this chapter's four words was borrowed out of Urdu rather than into it? (ٹوپی, into English as topee.) Recall the farewell that closes almost any Urdu conversation — say it now. (khudā hāfiz.) What does the standard reply to the wellbeing question say about the speaker? (میں ṭhīk ہوں، شکریہ — "I am fine, thank you.")

Chapter 15

Rain, Sun, Wind, Heat, Cold

By the end of this chapter: I can name rain, sunshine, wind, heat and cold in Urdu, and tell which of these words' roots reach back to a documented ancestor and which stop at an honest dead end.

Say all five weather words in one breath and sort each by how far its root reaches: two Persian dead ends, one inherited dead end, one loan of a loan, and گرمی*'s own root reaching all the way to Greek thermós — the same two-roads shape* دل showed on the body's most-named part.

15.1 بارش — "rain," and why you'd wear the last chapter's coat

Recall koṭ, the modern English loan that closed the last chapter. This chapter gives you a reason to wear it: four words for weather, the small talk that follows almost any "how are you."

You'll want to know first — one word

بارش — bārish — rain

بارش ہو رہی ہے۔ — bārish ho rahī hai. — "It's raining."

بارش is feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

بارش is borrowed from Classical Persian bāriš, itself built from bār-, the stem of bāridan, "to rain," plus the ending -eš that turns a verb stem into an action noun. This book traces it no further back than Persian — an honest dead end, the same shape as لال's.

Your turn

- Say it: bārish — rain; then bārish ho rahī hai
- Name: بارش's two Persian parts — bār plus the -eš ending
- Connect: بارش's dead end is the same shape as لال's — Persian, and no further
- Say it: āj bārish hai, is liye merā koṭ chāhiye. — "Today there's rain, so I need my coat."
- Recall: say āṅkh

Before you move on

What does بارش mean, and is it masculine or feminine? (Rain; feminine.) What two Persian pieces build the word? (bār, "load/downpour," plus the -eš ending.) Recall the three respect levels a single Urdu word for "you" once had to distinguish — name them. (āp, tum, tū.) Which letter in hāfiz carries the f sound? (fe.) Sources: Wiktionary: بارش.

15.2 دھوپ — "sunshine," rain's opposite and its etymological twin

Recall bārish — rain, Persian, and a dead end. This word means the opposite in the sky, and reaches a dead end from the other side of the book's two layers.

You'll want to know first — one word

دھوپ — dhūp — sunshine

āj dhūp hai. — "There's sunshine today."

دھوپ is feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دھوپ is inherited from a form CDIAL reconstructs as dhuppā, "sunshine" (CDIAL 6825). No further root is traced behind that. bārish hit its dead end on the Persian side; دھوپ hits the same kind of honest wall on the inherited side — the same shape کان and roṭī already showed, not every inherited word traces back to a tidy Indo-European root.

Your turn

- Say it: dhūp — sunshine; then āj dhūp hai
- Contrast: bārish, Persian dead end; دھوپ, inherited dead end — opposite weather, same kind of etymological wall
- Name: two other inherited dead ends already met — کان and roṭī
- Say it: āj bārish hai yā dhūp? — "Is it rain today, or sunshine?"
- Read it: منہ

Before you move on

What does دھوپ mean, and is it masculine or feminine? (Sunshine; feminine.) Is دھوپ's root documented past Prakrit? (No — a dead end.) Recall whether khudā hāfiz is written as one word or two in Urdu spelling. (Two, spaced, unlike Persian's joined form.) What does آنکھ mean? (Eye.)
Sources: Wiktionary: دھوپ.

15.3 ہوا — "wind," a loan carried twice rather than split once

Recall dhūp — sunshine, an inherited dead end. This word moves with the sunshine and the rain both, and its history takes a shape this book has not shown yet: not two roads from one root, but one word handed across two borrowings in a row.

You'll want to know first — one word

ہوا — hawā — air, wind āj hawā chal rahī hai. — "There's wind blowing today."

ہوا is feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ہوا is borrowed from Classical Persian hawā — but Persian did not invent it either. Persian itself borrowed the word from Arabic hawāʾ. khudā, back in the take-leave chapter, came into Urdu directly from Persian, inherited within Iranian the whole way. dil and safed each split from one PIE root into two independent roads, Iranian and Indo-Aryan. ہوا is a different shape again: a single word passed hand to hand, Arabic to Persian, Persian to Urdu — a loan of a loan, not a shared inheritance at all.

Your turn

- Say it: hawā — wind; then āj hawā chal rahī hai
- Name: three shapes a word's history can take — one root split two ways (dil), a word carried straight through one language (khudā), or borrowed twice in a row (ہوا)
- Say it: bārish, dhūp, aur hawā — rain, sunshine, and wind
- Connect: ہوا ← Persian ← Arabic hawā, a loan of a loan
- Recall: say dil

Before you move on

What does ہوا mean, and is it masculine or feminine? (Air, wind; feminine.) How is ہوا's history different from dil's? (Dil split from one root into two roads; ہوا is one word borrowed twice in a row.) Name your sister and your friend in Urdu. (bahan; dost.)
Sources: Wiktionary: ہوا.

15.4 گرمی — "heat," a secure cousin and a disputed one

Recall ہوا — wind, a loan of a loan. This word is Persian too, but its root behaves like dil's and safed's: it keeps going back to a shared PIE root, with a genuine cousin waiting on the other side — though this time the cousin needs a careful claim, not a confident one.

You'll want to know first — one word

گرمی — garmī — heat

āj bahut garmī hai. — "It's very hot today."

گرمی is feminine.

The letters in this word

From the right edge: گ, ر, م, ی.

گ gāf is new: it is ک kāf, already known, with one extra stroke laid across the top — the same dot-count logic that separated be from پ, except this time the letter gains a stroke rather than a dot.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

گرمی continues Middle Persian garmīh, from Proto-Iranian garmáh, from Proto-Indo-Iranian g^{h}armás, from Proto-Indo-European g^{wh}er-, "warm." That root securely gives Greek thermós, "hot" — the source of English thermal and thermometer. English warm is often mentioned beside it, but dictionaries only call warm a "distant doublet" of thermós: a proposed relative, not a settled one, with a separate and more likely Germanic root offered as warm's real source. گرمی's certain family is Greek's, not English's plainest weather word.

Your turn

- Say it: garmī — heat; then āj bahut garmī hai
- Name: گ's relation to ک — one extra stroke, not a dot
- Sort: secure cousin — Greek thermós; disputed cousin — English warm
- Say it: bārish, dhūp, hawā, garmī — all four weather words so far

Before you move on

What does گرمی mean, and is it masculine or feminine? (Heat; feminine.) Which English word is گرمی's secure cousin, and which is only disputed? (Secure: thermal/thermometer, via Greek thermós. Disputed: warm.) Name your family in Urdu. (khāndān.) What does منہ mean? (Mouth.)

Sources: Wiktionary: گرمی, Wiktionary: warm.

15.5 سردی — "cold," and one ending that ties this whole book's weather and warmth together

Recall garmī — heat, with a secure cousin in Greek thermós and only a disputed one in English warm. This chapter's last word is its exact opposite, in meaning and in how far its own root travels.

You'll want to know first — one word

سردی — sardī — cold

āj bahut sardī hai. — "It's very cold today."

سردی is feminine, exactly like garmī.

Grammar Lens: one ending, two weather words garmī and سردی are built the same way: the plain adjective — garm "hot," سرد sard "cold" — plus the ending ی that turns it into a noun naming the weather itself. Neither word is a one-off; the ending is a small, reusable tool, the same kind of thing -نا was for verbs many chapters back.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

سردی is borrowed from Classical Persian sardī, from sard, "cold." This book traces that Persian base no further back — a dead end here, the same shape as لال's and bārish's, and the mirror image of garmī, whose root reaches all the way to Greek thermós.
Five weather words, every shape this book's etymology has found: bārish and سردی, Persian dead ends; dhūp, an inherited dead end; ہوا, a loan of a loan; garmī, a root reaching a real if disputed cousin — the same two-roads shape دل showed on the body's most-named part.

Your turn

- Say it: sardī — cold; then āj bahut sardī hai
- Contrast: garmī, a root reaching Greek; سردی, a Persian dead end
- Say it: all four weather words in one breath — bārish، dhūp، ہوا، garmī، سردی
- Recall: دل's two roads from one PIE root, and how garmī's own root follows the same shape

Before you move on

What does سردی mean? (Cold.) Does its root reach as far as garmī's? (No — a Persian dead end.) Which letter in bhāī marks the glide between two vowels? (hamza-ye, ye with hamza.) Which two face words share the same three letters reversed? (کان and ناک.) What job does plain ن do in ārikh and منه? (Marks the vowel before it as nasal.) What PIE root ties دل to Sanskrit hṛdaya? (ḱērd-, split at the Indo-Iranian fork.) Sources: Wiktionary: سردی.

Chapter 16

Eight Words, Read Rather Than Recognised

Modes: eyes (1) Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can read salam, kya, kan, nak, lal, kala, nila and lena letter by letter from the right rather than from the romanization, and explain why Urdu leaves its short vowels unwritten.
> Eight words the book had only ever given by ear, read letter by letter from the right – including kan and nak, the same three letters in different orders, which is the proof that the reader is decoding rather than recognising. Every letter the reading needs was taught back in chapters one to five.

16.1 Practice — eight words you already knew, now read

> Write the seven letters this reading needs — ک، م، س، ل، ا، ن، ی — in a row, right to left, naming each as you go, and let the line fall as it travels.

Script — the words come back

Nothing new is taught here. Every word below was already given to you to say, and every letter in it is one you can now write.

Read each from the right, naming its letters before you say it:

سلام

کیا

کان

ناک

لال

کالا

نیلا

لینا

salām — kyā — kān — nāk — lāl — kālā — nīlā — lenā.

Eight words from seven letters. Two of them are worth a second look: کان kān "ear" and ناک nāk "nose" use the same three letters in different orders, which is the clearest possible proof that you are reading rather than recognising a picture.

Why it's said this way

Count the letters in کیا and count the sounds in kyā.
Urdu writes its long vowels and leaves the short ones off the page. The reader supplies them. That is why salām has a vowel between the s and the l that nothing on the page records.
This has a consequence worth accepting now rather than discovering later: you cannot reliably sound out an Urdu word you have never heard. Reading and listening have to grow together here, more tightly than in a language that spells every vowel — which is exactly why this book put every one of these words in your ear, chapters before it asked you to read one.

What you've built this chapter

Seven letters you have been carrying since chapter five, and three ideas that outlast them:

- the page runs right to left, and in Nastaliq the word also falls as it goes, each letter hanging below the last
- letters join, changing shape by position — but the change is a trimming, and alif refuses to join leftward, which is what puts gaps inside a word
- what is added matters: nūn's dot, kāf's slash, and ye's bare curve are the identification, not the decoration

Seven of Urdu's letters. The rest are mostly more of what you did here.

Your turn

- Read it: کان and ناک — same three letters, and say which is which
- Write it: سلام — and let it break after alif
- Read it: لال نیلا کالا — name the letters of each before saying it

Before you move on

Which of your seven letters refuses to join to the left? (ا.)

Chapter 17

The Sentence Learns to End

Modes: voice (4) eyes (3) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read yih, kaam, kahan, maan and the copula hai off the page rather than from the romanization, write mera naam ... hai from dictation, and put gol he, bari ye and nun ghunna back to work in words I had only heard.
> The copula hai comes off the page, and with it every sentence the reader already knew how to end, including mera naam ... hai, the first sentence the book ever gave them – built from three letters learned eleven chapters earlier and returned to here.

17.1 یہ — "this," and the letter you are owed

> Read it: the two words off the page, naming the letters from the right before you say each word
> کان
>
> ناک
> kān — ear. nāk — nose. Seven letters bought you those.

You'll want to know first — one word

> یہ — yih — this

Picture something within reach and name it:

یہ کان — yih kān — "this ear"

یہ ناک — yih nāk — "this nose"

Two letters, and you can read the first of them: ی, the S-curve with no dots. The second is new to your eye, and it will stay new for two more lessons. Say the word now; you will write it shortly.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

یہ points at what is near you. Urdu keeps a second word for what is far, and the two arrived together: both descend from Old Indo-Aryan demonstratives. CDIAL lists Hindi yah, "this", under Sanskrit eṣa, "this" (CDIAL 2530), and vah, "that", under asau, "that" (CDIAL 972). English lost most of that system and kept a thinner this/that; Urdu kept the pair intact.

There is a gap in what you can do with یہ so far, and it is worth naming. yih kān is "this ear" — a label, not yet a sentence. To say "this is an ear" you need the small word hai at the end, which you have been saying since you gave your name. You cannot write hai yet, because both of its letters are still missing from your hand.

That is what this chapter buys back.

Your turn

- Say it: yih — this
- Say it: yih kān, then yih nāk, picturing each one as you say it
- Read it: کان and ناک, naming their letters from the right
- Say it: the near word yih, and name what it still needs to become a sentence — hai
- Recall: say roṭī
- Read it: لال
- Recall: say safed

Before you move on

Say "this ear." (yih kān.) Which of یہ's two letters can you already write? (The first one, ی.) What small word would turn yih kān into a full sentence? (hai.)
Sources: Wiktionary: یہ.

17.2 کام — "work," and a word you can read the moment you meet it

Say the near-pointing word, then use it to name your own ear. (yih; yih kān.)

You'll want to know first — one word

کام — kām — work

Now do something you could not do with any word before this one. Read it: the word off the page

From the right: ک, ا, م. Every letter in it is already yours, so this word arrives readable on the day you meet it. That is what the seven letters were for.

کام is masculine.

yih kām — "this work" — the near-pointing word is still an ear-word; its second letter reaches your hand next lesson

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کام is inherited, not borrowed: Sanskrit karman "act, deed, work" (CDIAL 2892) became Prakrit kamma and then Urdu kām, losing a syllable to a few thousand years of being said out loud.
Then look at what English did with the same word. English did not inherit it — English borrowed it, late, out of books, and borrowed it whole: karma.
So one Sanskrit word reached two languages by two roads. The road through ordinary Indian speech wore it down to a plain word for the work you have to get done today. The road through scholarship carried it into English untouched and left it meaning cosmic consequence. Same word. The difference in weight is the difference between being inherited and being borrowed, and you have watched that same fork before, when pūchhnā met pursish.

A caution worth keeping: Urdu has a second kām, from Sanskrit kāma "desire," and it is a different word wearing the same clothes. This chapter means the working one.

Your turn

- Read it: کام — name the three letters from the right, then say it
- Say it: kām — work; then yih kām
- Write it: کام — three letters, right to left, letting the line fall
- Trace it: kām ← Prakrit kamma ← Sanskrit karman → borrowed into English as karma
- Read it: کالا
- Recall: say nīlā, then say qamīz

Before you move on

Name کام's three letters from the right. (م، ا، ک.) Say "this work." (yih kām.) Which road shortened the word, the inherited one or the borrowed one? (The inherited one.)
Sources: Wiktionary: کام.

17.3 کہاں — "where," and the family it belongs to Write it: یہ — and say it

Which face is gol he wearing there — the opening one, the middle one, or the closing one? (Closing.)

You'll want to know first — one word

کہاں — kahāṅ — where

Four letters. Three of them are yours: ک, then ہ wearing its middle face, then ا. The fourth is new, and it carries the nasal hum you can hear at the end of kahāṅ — the same hum that ends maiṅ, hūṅ and nahīṅ. You wrote it back in chapter six: it is nūn with the dot taken off.

یہ کہاں؟ — yih kahāṅ? — "this, where?" — pointing and asking at once

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Put the question words you have met beside the new one. Read it: down the right edge

- کیا — kyā — what
- کہاں — kahāṅ — where
- kaun — who
- kab — when
- kaise — how

Every one of them opens with ک. That shared consonant is not a coincidence and not a tidy invention: it is inherited. All five come from the Old Indo-Aryan interrogative stem ka-. کہاں joins that stem to the place ending -hāṅ of yahāṅ, "here"; CDIAL has no entry for it, so the rest of its history is open.

Now say the English list out loud — who, what, when, where, how — and listen for its own shared opening. English marks its questions with wh, Latin marks them with qu in quis and quid, and Urdu marks them with ک. Three marks, one inherited consonant: Proto-Indo-European k^{w}is, split three ways by three sound histories.

So a learner meeting کہاں is not memorising an arbitrary shape. They are meeting a relative of the word they already use for the same job.

Your turn

- Say it: kahāṅ — where; then yih kahāṅ?
- Say it: the five k- question words — kyā, kahāṅ, kaun, kab, kaise
- Read it: کیا and کہاں, naming their letters from the right
- Trace it: the question stem k- of kahāṅ ← PIE $*k^{w}is$ → English where, Latin quis
- Recall: say jūtā

Before you move on

Say "where." (kahāṅ.) How many of its four letters can you already write? (Three.) Name two other members of its k- family. (kyā, kaun, kab, kaise — any two.)

Sources: Wiktionary: کہاں.

17.4 Eight letters — read them, hear them, write them back

Say the eight letters you can now write, and say what the newest one does in the middle of a word. (h; it splits into two small loops.)

The letters in this word

Nothing new here. Ten words, every letter already yours. Read each from the right, naming its letters before you say it.

سلام

کان

ناک

لال

کالا

نیلا

لینا

کام

یہ

ہم

Two of them are new to your eye this chapter: کام kām "work" and یہ yih "this." Two more are old friends whose letters you could not have named a chapter ago.

Your turn

Now hide the page. For each word below: look at it, cover it, write it from memory, then uncover and repair whatever came out wrong. Repairing is the part that teaches — do not skip to the next word until you have compared.

- Write it: یہ — look, cover, write, uncover, repair
- Write it: کام — look, cover, write, uncover, repair
- Write it: ہم — look, cover, write, uncover, repair
- Say it: kahāṅ, and name the one letter in it you still cannot form

Your turn — by ear

Now the ear, with the page shut.

- Say it: yih kān, yih nāk, yih kām — pointing each time
- Say it: kahāṅ — and the four other k- question words
- Say it: kām and English karma, and which one was inherited
- Listen: for the nasal hum at the end of kahāṅ, and hum it back

Before you move on

How many letters can you write? (Eight.) Which word in this lesson still has a letter you cannot form? (kahāṅ.) What sound is that letter carrying? (The nasal hum at the end.)

17.5 ماں — "mother," and a sentence you can read whole

Write it: ہے — and say it

Write it: میرا نام ... ہے — and say it with your own name in the gap

You'll want to know first — one word

ماں — māṅ — mother

ماں is feminine, so the possessive takes its feminine form — merī, not merā, the same choice you already make for bahan.

یہ میری ماں ہے۔ — yih merī māṅ hai. — "This is my mother."

Read it: that sentence off the page

Every letter in it is one you can form except the last of ماں, which arrives shortly — and you can hear exactly where it goes, because it is the nasal hum you have been putting on the end of maiṅ and hūṅ all along.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ماں is inherited. It comes down through Prakrit from Sanskrit mātā, stem mātṛ, under which CDIAL lists Hindi mā and māī, "mother" (CDIAL 10016), and behind that stands Proto-Indo-European méh₂tēr. The same root gives English mother, Latin mater (behind maternal, matrix), Greek mētēr, and Persian mādar.

Then notice what Urdu did with the Persian one. It took it. mādar lives in Urdu too, alongside māṅ — the borrowed word kept for formal, poetic and respectful use, the inherited word used at home. This is the pairing you already saw when inherited bhāī sat beside borrowed khāndān: Urdu rarely replaces a native word with a Persian one. It keeps both and gives them different rooms to stand in.

méh₂tēr also earns a caution. Words for mother across the world's languages tend to start with m, because ma is close to the first sound a baby makes, and that resemblance can arise anywhere without any shared ancestor. The Urdu-to-English link here is not that kind of accident — it is traceable step by step through Sanskrit and Proto-Indo-European. But a resemblance to a mama in an unrelated family would be.

Your turn

- Say it: māṅ — mother; then merī māṅ
- Read it: یہ میری ماں ہے۔ — name the letters of each word, then say it
- Say it: the family words so far — māṅ, bahan, bhāī, dost, khāndān
- Trace it: māṅ ← Sanskrit mātā ← PIE méh₂tēr* → English mother, Persian mādar
- Say it: which of māṅ and mādar you would use at home

Before you move on

Say "this is my mother." (yih merī māṅ hai.) Why merī and not merā? (ماں is feminine.) Name the English cousin of ماں. (Mother.)
Sources: Wiktionary: ماں.

17.6 ہے — the smallest word, in every sentence you own

Write ہے. Two letters: the small loop, then the wide flat sweep. Say it: hai.

The letters in this word

Four sentences. Read each from the right, word by word, and say it before you move on.

میرا نام ... ہے۔

یہ میری ماں ہے۔

یہ کام ہے۔

یہ کالا ہے۔

merā nām … hai. — yih merī māṅ hai. — yih kām hai. — yih kālā hai.

Look at what sits at the end of every one of them. ہے is where an Urdu sentence lands, in the place English puts is in the middle. You have been producing that landing by ear since the very first sentence you learned; from today you can also see it.

Your turn — by ear

Page shut. Point at things around you and land each sentence on hai.

- Say it: yih kām hai — this is work
- Say it: yih merī māṅ hai — this is my mother
- Say it: yih lāl hai, then yih kālā hai
- Say it: kahāṅ? — and hum the nasal at its end
- Listen: to hai, haiṅ, hūṅ one after another, and say which is yours when you speak about yourself

Your turn

- Write it: یہ کام ہے۔ — three words, right to left
- Write it: ہے on its own, ten times, until the flat tail stops curling up
- Say it: which of māṅ and mādar is inherited, and which is borrowed
- Say it: which of kām and English karma was worn short, and why

Before you move on

Write "this is work." (یہ کام ہے۔) Which two letters make ہے? (ہ and ے.) Which of them can end a word and nothing else? (ے.)

17.7 Practice — ten letters, and a sentence that comes off the page

Write the three letters this chapter has been cashing in, and name each one: ں، ہ، ے. You learned all three in chapters five and six.

The letters in this word

Nothing new is taught here. Read each word from the right, naming its letters before you say it:

یہ

کام

ماں

کہاں

میں

ہیں

نہیں

ہے

Then the sentences:

نام میرا ... ہے۔

ماں میری یہ ہے۔

ہے۔ کام یہ

ہے۔ نہیں کام میرا یہ نہیں،

merā nām … hai. — yih merī māṅ hai. — yih kām hai. — nahīṅ, yih merā kām nahīṅ hai.

That last one is the first thing in this book you can read that argues back.

What you've built this chapter

Three letters, and three ideas that will keep paying:

- a letter can change face by position — gol he standing as one loop and sitting in the middle of a word as two, which is the shape most likely to make a reader think a stranger has arrived
- a letter can belong to one position only — big ye and nūn ghunna both close a word and turn up nowhere else, so neither costs you a middle form
- a letter can be defined by subtraction — nūn ghunna is nūn with its dot removed, and the removal is what the letter means

And one arithmetic worth doing out loud. Seven letters gave you eight words. Three more gave you ہے, and with it every sentence you already knew how to end.

Your turn

Page covered. Someone says the word, or you say it to yourself from the romanization alone — then write it in Urdu without looking at a model, and only then compare.

Write these out:

- hear hai, write ہے, compare
- hear maiṅ, write میں, compare
- hear nahīṅ, write نہیں, compare
- hear yih merī māṅ hai, write it whole, compare and repair

Before you move on

How many letters can you now write? (Ten.) Which English word is کام's borrowed twin? (Karma.) Which English question words share کہاں's inherited consonant? (The wh- family — who, what, when, where.) Which of ماں and mādar would you say at home? (ماں.)

Chapter 18

The Meeting Comes Off the Page

Modes: voice (4) eyes (3) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read aam, aasmaan, purana, aap, voh and hun off the page, name a non-joining letter on sight, and write the opening meeting exchange from dictation.
> The exchange the book opens with – salam, aap ka naam kya hai, mera naam … hai, aap kaise hain, main … hun – is readable and writable end to end for the first time, on letters taught across chapters one to eight.

18.1 آم — "mango," and the name that did not travel

Write it: یہ ہے۔ کام — and say it

Ten letters are yours.

You'll want to know first — one word

آم — ām — mango

Two letters. The second is م, which you have written many times. The first looks like the tall stroke you know with a small wave lying across its head, and that wave is doing a real job — it is the next lesson's whole subject.

آم is masculine.

yih ām hai. — "This is a mango."

Say that now; you can already write every word in it except the first letter of آم, and that letter arrives shortly.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

آم is inherited: Sanskrit āmra (CDIAL 1268) became Prakrit amba and then Urdu ām, the ordinary north Indian name for the fruit for as long as there has been a north Indian name for it.
Now the part worth slowing down for. English calls the fruit mango, and a reader who has newly learned ām would reasonably guess the two words are relatives. They are not.
mango came by sea. Portuguese traders on the Malabar coast met the fruit under its Dravidian name — Tamil and Malayalam māṅkāy, "mango fruit" — carried it home as manga, and English took it from Portuguese. So the fruit travelled to Europe wearing a southern Indian name while the northern name stayed where it was.
Two unrelated words for one fruit inside one country, and the one that left is not the one you are learning. That is worth holding: a resemblance is evidence of nothing on its own, and here there is not even a resemblance — the relationship people assume is the one that does not exist.

Your turn

- Say it: ām — mango; then yih ām hai
- Say it: the food and drink words so far — ām, pānī, chāy, dūdh, roṭī
- Trace it: ām ← Prakrit amba ← Sanskrit āmra
- Trace it: English mango ← Portuguese manga ← Tamil and Malayalam māṅkāy — a different road, from a different family
- Recall: say ṭopī

Before you move on

Say "this is a mango." (yih ām hai.) Which Indian language family gave English its word for the fruit? (Dravidian — Tamil and Malayalam.) Which one gave Urdu آم? (Indo-Aryan, through Sanskrit.)
Sources: Wiktionary: آم.

18.2 آسمان — "sky," which used to mean stone

Say "this is a mango." (yih ām hai.) Which family gave English its word for that fruit? (Dravidian.)

You'll want to know first — one word

آسمان — āsmān — sky

Six letters, and five of them are already yours: س, م, ا, ن — and the tall stroke that opens it, wearing the same small wave you met on آم. One shape stands between you and reading this word off the page.
آسمان is masculine.

āsmān nīlā hai. — "The sky is blue."

That sentence reuses a colour you already own and the copula you learned to write back in chapter six.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

آسمان is borrowed, from Persian āsmān — the same road that brought khudā. Inside Iranian it is inherited, running back through Avestan asman- to Proto-Indo-Iranian aćman-* and to Proto-Indo-European h₂éḱmōn.
And h₂éḱmōn did not mean sky. It meant stone.
Follow it sideways and the family is unmistakable: Sanskrit aśman "stone," Greek ákmōn "anvil," Lithuanian akmuo "stone." Through Germanic the standard reconstruction carries the same root into English as hammer — a word that named a stone tool long before anyone made one out of metal. That last step is the mainstream account rather than a settled one; specialists note formal difficulties with it, so hold it as probable rather than proven.

So how does stone become sky? Because the sky was pictured as a vault of stone arching overhead, and the word for the material became the word for the thing built of it. When you say āsmān, you are calling the sky a stone in a language that stopped noticing centuries ago.
Set that beside آم from the lesson before. There, a resemblance people expect turns out to be nothing. Here, a resemblance nobody would expect — āsmān and hammer — is probably real, on evidence rather than on sound. Neither one can be settled by how the words sound. Only the trail settles it, and sometimes the trail answers "probably" rather than "yes".

Your turn

- Say it: āsmān — sky; then āsmān nīlā hai
- Say it: the weather words so far — āsmān, bārish, dhūp, hawā, garmī, sardī
- Trace it: āsmān ← Persian ← Avestan asman- ← PIE h₂ékmōn* "stone" → English hammer
- Say it: which of آم and آسمان has a real English cousin, and which has one people wrongly assume

Before you move on

Say "the sky is blue." (āsmān nīlā hai.) Was آسمان inherited or borrowed into Urdu? (Borrowed, from Persian.) Name its English cousin. (Hammer.)
Sources: Wiktionary: آسمان.

18.3 پرانا — "old," and the word behind the Purāṇas

Write it: آسمان — two alifs, one wearing the wave and one not; say which is which as you draw them

You'll want to know first — one word

پرانا — purānā — old

Five letters, and four are yours already: ر, ا, ن, ا. The one that opens it is new to your hand, and it is the next lesson.

پرانا changes its ending to agree with the noun it describes, the way کالا kālā and نیلا nīlā do:

- پرانا purānā with a masculine noun
- پرانی purānī with a feminine one yih kām purānā hai. — "This work is old."

merī qamīz purānī hai. — "My shirt is old."

Say each, and notice you are choosing the ending by the noun's gender without being told which to use — you have made that choice for two chapters of colours already.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پرانا is inherited: Sanskrit purāṇa, "ancient, belonging to former times" (CDIAL 8283), built on purā, "formerly." Behind that stands Proto-Indo-European per-, in the sense "forward, before."
That root went everywhere. Greek pró, Latin pro and prior, and in English a whole quiet family: fore, former, first, before. Each of them is a way of saying "in front" that turned into a way of saying "earlier" — and پرانا made the same turn, in the same direction, in a different branch.
One more thing this word names. The Sanskrit texts called the Purāṇas are this very word, plural: literally "the old ones," a body of writing whose title is an adjective. When you say purānā you are using the everyday form of a word that also names a library.

Beside آم, this is the other kind of result. There, a link people expect turns out not to exist. Here, a link nobody expects — purānā and English first — turns out to hold, all the way down.

Your turn

- Say it: purānā, then purānī, and say what decides the ending
- Say it: yih kām purānā hai, then merī qamīz purānī hai
- Say it: the agreeing words you now have — kālā, nīlā, purānā
- Trace it: purānā ← Sanskrit purāṇa ← purā ← PIE per-* → English fore, former, first, before

Before you move on

Say "this work is old." (yih kām purānā hai.) What does the name of the Purāṇas mean? (The old ones.) Name two English cousins of پرانا. (Fore, former, first, before — any two.)
Sources: Wiktionary: پرانا.

18.4 Eleven letters, and two kinds of answer

Write ا, then آ. Say what the wave does and where in a word it belongs. (Long ā; at the start.)

The letters in this word

Read from the right, naming letters before saying each word:

آم

آسمان

آنا

ماں

نہیں

And two sentences, whole:

نیلا آسمان ہے۔

یہ آم ہے۔

āsmān nīlā hai. — yih ām hai.

Count what that took. Ten letters carried you to hai; one more carried you to the sky.

Your turn

Cover the page. Look, hide, write, uncover, repair.

- Write it: آم — look, cover, write, uncover, repair
- Write it: آسمان — look, cover, write, uncover, repair
- Write it: نیلا آسمان ہے۔ — the whole sentence, then compare
- Say it: purānā, and name the one letter in it your hand cannot yet make

Your turn — by ear

Page shut. Three words, three etymologies, and two different verdicts — say which is which out loud.

- Say it: ām and English mango — related, or only assumed to be?
- Say it: āsmān and English hammer — related, or only assumed to be?
- Say it: purānā and English first — related, or only assumed to be?
- Say it: yih ām purānā hai, then merī qamīz purānī hai
- Listen: for the long ā opening ām, āsmān and ānā, and hold it

The point of putting those three together is that the sound tells you nothing. ām and mango look like a match and are not one. āsmān and hammer look like nothing at all and are probably cousins. Only the trail decides, and it is allowed to answer "probably".

Before you move on

How many letters can you write? (Eleven.) Write "the sky is blue." (آسمان نیلا ہے۔) Which word in this lesson is still waiting on a letter? (purānā.)

18.5 وہ — "that," and everyone who is not here

Write it: آپ

Say where pe's three dots sit, and who you would address as āp.

You'll want to know first — one word

وہ — voh — that; and he, she, they

Two letters. The second is ہ, closing the word with its round curl. The first is و, which you learned to write in chapter eight.

وہ is the far partner of یہ. One points at what is beside you; the other points at what is over there:

yih ām hai. — "This is a mango." (in your hand)

voh ām hai. — "That is a mango." (on the tree)

And then it does a second job that English splits across four words. The thing over there does not have to be a thing:

voh merī māṅ haiṅ. — "She is my mother."

Urdu names the person you are talking about with the same word it uses for the thing you are pointing at. Notice the copula in that sentence: haiṅ, not hai, because a mother is spoken of with respect, exactly as you already do when you address someone as āp.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

یہ and وہ did not arrive separately. They come down together from Old Indo-Aryan demonstratives: CDIAL lists Hindi yah under Sanskrit eṣa, "this" — the near one (CDIAL 2530) — and vah under asau, "that" — the far one (CDIAL 972). Urdu inherited a pair, and it still runs the pair the way it inherited it: everything Urdu points at gets sorted into near or far first, and only then into what it actually is.

English does the same sorting with this and that, and once did it with a third, yon, now almost gone. But English uses separate words for the people it talks about — he, she, they. Urdu keeps the far pointer doing both jobs, which is fewer words to learn and one more reason context does the work.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- voh — that; and picture something across the room
- yih ām hai, then voh ām hai, picturing one mango near and one far
- voh merī māṅ haiṅ — and say why the copula is haiṅ
- the three pointing and person words you now own — maiṅ, yih, voh

Before you move on

Which is nearer, یہ or وہ? (یہ.) Say "that is a mango." (voh ām hai.) Why haiṅ when you speak about your mother? (Respect — the same reason you say āp.)

18.6 The opening exchange, read off the page

Write آپ. The wave on the alif, then the boat with three dots under it.

The letters in this word

Here is the exchange you learned in your first hour of Urdu. Every letter in it is now one your own hand can make. Read each line from the right, naming its words, then say it:

سلام

ہے؟ کیا نام کا آپ

ہے۔ ... نام میرا

ہیں؟ کیسے آپ

salām — āp kā nām kyā hai? — merā nām … hai. — āp kaise haiṅ?

Look at the second line. آپ ends with pe wearing its full boat, and ہے and ہیں are the same gol he under two different endings.

Only the reply maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ is still out of reach, and by three shapes — one of which arrives next lesson.

Cover the page. Look, hide, write, uncover, repair.

Write these out:

- ہے؟ کیا نام کا آپ — look, cover, write the whole question, uncover, repair
- ہے۔ ... نام میرا — with your own name in the gap
- ہیں؟ کیسے آپ — and check both endings against the model

Your turn — by ear

Page shut. Run the whole meeting aloud with an imagined stranger, then a friend.

Say these aloud:

- salām — āp kā nām kyā hai? — and answer as yourself
- āp kaise haiṅ? to a man, then āp kaisī haiṅ? to a woman
- yih ām hai, then voh ām hai, and point differently

Before you move on

Read the question aloud from the page. (آپ کا نام کیا ہے؟) Which reply can you still not write? (maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ.) How many letters do you now have? (Twelve.)

18.7 Practice — thirteen letters, and the meeting comes off the page

Write the three letters this chapter has been cashing in, and name each: آ، پ، و. You learned all three in chapters seven and eight.

The letters in this word

Nothing new is taught here. Read each word from the right, naming its letters first:

آم

آسمان

پرانا

پانی

آپ

وہ

ہوں

کون

Then the whole meeting, whole:

سلام

آپ کا نام کیا ہے؟

میرا نام ... ہے۔

آپ کیسے ہیں؟

میں ... ہوں۔

میں کام کر رہا نہیں، ہوں۔

The last line is beyond what you can say yet, and it is there on purpose: every shape in it is one you can name, even where the grammar is still ahead of you. Reading has overtaken speaking for the first time.

What you've built this chapter

Three letters, and three ideas worth more than the letters:

- a mark can be shorthand for a repetition — alif madda is two alifs collapsed into one, so it opens a word and appears nowhere else
- dots outlive shapes — pe's boat shrinks to a tooth when it joins, its three dots stay, and on a crowded page you count dots rather than hunt curves
- non-joiners come in a family — with vāʾo beside alif, the gaps inside Urdu words stop being surprises

And the chapter's real argument: پ exists because Arabic has no p and Persian built the letter Urdu now uses. The alphabet was borrowed and then altered, and the alterations are visible if you count dots.

Your turn

Page covered. Hear the word — or say it to yourself from the romanization — then write it in Urdu with no model in front of you, and only then compare.

Write these out:

- hear āp, write آپ, compare
- hear hūṅ, write ہوں, compare
- hear voh ām hai, write it whole, compare and repair
- hear āp kā nām kyā hai?, write it whole, compare and repair

Before you move on

How many letters can you now write? (Thirteen.) Which of آم/mango and آسمان/hammer is a real cousin pair? (آسمان and hammer.) Why does پ carry three dots? (Persian invented it for a sound Arabic lacks.)

Chapter 19

The Word That Was Deferred

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I do not understand, put نہیں in front of any verb this book has taught, turn any statement into a yes-or-no question with کیا at the front, and refuse two things at once with نہ … نہ.
> The sentence chapter one explicitly deferred – سمجھتا نہیں میں – is said at last, and the question ہاں جی and نہیں were taught to answer eighteen chapters ago can finally be asked.

19.1 سمجھتا نہیں میں — the sentence chapter one promised

Chapter one taught نہیں and said, in as many words, that its second job — not, inside a sentence — would matter once the book had verbs. Fourteen verbs later, here it is.

- Recall: the wellbeing reply — maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ

You'll want to know: نہیں in front of the verb

سمجھتا نہیں میں — maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā — I do not understand (man speaking)

میں نہیں سمجھتی — maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtī — the same, a woman speaking

Take the affirmative frame chapter seven built, maiṅ samajhtā hūṅ, and put نہیں in front of the verb. Nothing else moves, and one thing is allowed to disappear: with نہیں in the sentence, the closing ہوں is usually dropped in speech. Both maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā and maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā hūṅ are correct; the shorter one is what people say.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

میں نہیں سمجھتا (maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā) is three inherited words. maiṅ, "I", is listed by CDIAL under the Sanskrit first-person base ma-, whose form mayā meant "by me" (CDIAL 9691); nahīṅ, "not", comes from nahi, "surely not" (CDIAL 7035); and samajhtā is the present of samajhnā, "to understand", from saṃbudhyate, "wakes up, understands" (CDIAL 12959).

Grammar Lens: where the negator stands

said	means
maiṅ samajhtā hūṅ	I understand
maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā	I do not understand
maiṅ nahīṅ jāntā	I do not know

نہیں goes before the verb, not after it. That is the opposite of Bengali and the same as English, which puts not before understand as well. The agreement stays on the verb and the negator never changes shape.

The three letters of نہیں are all yours: ن, ہ, ی, and the dotless ں that hums at the end. The verb beside it is not — three of its letters are still ahead of you in the script ladder — so it is printed here in the word this lesson owns and left in romanization everywhere else.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the affirmative first — maiṅ samajhtā hūṅ

- maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā
- maiṅ nahīṅ jāntā — I do not know
- maiṅ nahīṅ bōltā — I do not speak

Before you move on

Where does نہیں stand in relation to the verb? (Before it.) What happens to ہوں when the negator arrives? (It is usually dropped, and keeping it is not wrong.) And what still marks who is speaking? (The verb ending — -tā or -tī.)

19.2 ٹھیک آپ کیا ہیں؟ — the question that could not be asked jī hāṅ and نہیں were the first two words this book taught, and they answer a question. Eighteen chapters have gone by without the book being able to ask it.

- Recall: the item before this one — maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā

You'll want to know: کیا at the front

ٹھیک آپ کیا ہیں؟ — kyā āp ṭhīk haiṅ? — are you well?

پانی یہ کیا ہے؟ — kyā yih pānī hai? — is this water?

Chapter three taught کیا as what. Put it at the front of a statement and it stops meaning what altogether: it marks the whole sentence as a yes-or-no question, and nothing else in the sentence moves.

Grammar Lens: one word, two jobs, told apart by position where کیا stands	what it means in the middle	what

at the front	(yes-or-no)

Position is the whole difference. English cannot do this: it has to move the verb in front of the subject, you are becoming are you. Urdu adds one word at the edge and leaves the sentence alone. In speech the fronted کیا is often left out and the rise of the voice carries it by itself.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kyā āp ṭhīk haiṅ? — then answer it jī hāṅ or nahīṅ
- kyā yih pānī hai?
- the same question without the word, on the voice alone

Before you move on

What tells you whether کیا means what or marks a yes-or-no question? (Where it stands — front, or inside.) And which two words answer it? (jī hāṅ and نہیں, from chapter one.)

19.3 نہ ... نہ ... — neither, nor

نہیں stands in front of a verb. Urdu has a shorter form of the same word that stands in front of a noun, and it is almost always doubled.

- Recall: the two items before this one — maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā, kyā āp ṭhīk haiṅ?

You'll want to know: نہ ... نہ ...

نہ پانی، نہ ہوا — na pānī, na hawā — neither water nor air.

One نہ in front of each thing refused. Strip the -یں off نہیں and what is left is نہ, the older and shorter negator: the two are the same word at different stages of wear, which is why the doubled refusal sounds like the plain one cut short.

Grammar Lens: three negators, told apart by what follows them form	stands before	example

نہیں	a verb	maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā
نہیں	alone	the complete answer no
نہ ... نہ	each refused noun	na pānī, na hawā

Urdu has a third, mat, which belongs in front of a command — and this book has no command yet, so it waits. Its second letter has no lesson in the script ladder either, which is a second reason to leave it where it is.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- na pānī, na hawā
- na chāy, na dūdh — neither tea nor milk
- na garmī, na sardī — neither heat nor cold
- the refusal as a question — kyā pānī hai? … nahīṅ

Before you move on

Which negator stands in front of a verb, and which in front of a noun? (نہیں before a verb; نہ before each refused noun.) How many نہ does neither … nor need? (Two, one for each thing.) And what is نہ to نہیں? (The same word, shorter and older.)

19.4 Asking, and being able to say no

Three items landed in this chapter, and between them they let the book ask a question and let you refuse it. Name all three, and say what each one stands in front of.

Your turn

- Say it: the sentence chapter one deferred — maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā
- Say it: a question the book can now ask — kyā āp ṭhīk haiṅ?
- Say it: both answers — jī hāṅ … nahīṅ
- Say it: a double refusal — na pānī, na hawā
- Say it: a negative asked back, which is how you check something you suspect — kyā āp nahīṅ samajhte?
- Recall: the reply from chapter four, then deny it — maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ … maiṅ ṭhīk nahīṅ hūṅ

Before you move on

Which word turns a statement into a yes-or-no question, and where does it go? (کیا, at the front.) Which word denies a verb, and where does it go? (نہیں, before the verb.) And what is the shorter form of that word for? (Refusing a noun, doubled — na … na.)

Chapter 20

Two Things at Once

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can put two nouns in one sentence with اور, offer a choice with یا, turn a clause against the one before it with لیکن, and agree with somebody using ٹھیک ہے.
> The chapter-15 practice line bārish, dhūp, aur hawā – which asked the learner to say a word the book had never taught – is said with every word owned, then re-joined as a choice and refused twice over.

20.1 اور (aur) — and

The last chapter gave you a way to refuse two things at once. There has never been a way to accept two things at once.

- Recall: the double refusal — na pānī, na hawā

You'll want to know: اور

ہوا اور پانی — pānī aur hawā — water and air.

bārish aur hawā, rain and wind, is the same shape: the first noun's letters are still ahead of you in the script ladder, so it is printed in romanization.

Chapter fifteen already asked you to say this. Its practice line reads bārish, dhūp, aur hawā — and the book had never taught اور, so the learner was told to say a word they had never met and could not read. This lesson pays that back.

Three letters, all of them yours: ا, و, ر. The middle one is the vāʾo of chapter eight, doing its vowel job.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

اور is inherited, not borrowed — Sanskrit aparam, "again, moreover", the adverb of apara, "other" (CDIAL 434), worn through Prakrit into one syllable. The counting sense is still there when the word stands alone in front of a noun: پانی اور means more water, not and water. Bengali's ār is the same word by the same road, which is the sort of relative Urdu's Persian layer usually hides.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bārish aur hawā
- the chapter-fifteen line, this time knowing every word — bārish, dhūp, aur hawā
- pānī aur dūdh — water and milk
- aur pānī — and hear it mean more water

Before you move on

What did اور mean before it meant and? (More, the other one — Sanskrit aparam.) What does it mean standing alone before a noun? (More.) And which word refuses the two things اور joins? (نہ, doubled.)

20.2 یا (yā) — or

اور gives somebody both things. Nothing in this book has ever made anybody choose.

- Recall: the joiner from the lesson before — aur

You'll want to know: یا

پانی یا ہوا — pānī yā hawā — water or air.

And with a noun whose letters are still ahead of you, in romanization: pānī yā dūdh, water or milk.

Two letters — ی and ا — and it sits exactly where اور sits, between the two things. Nothing else in the sentence changes.

The word hides inside one you already read every day: کیا, what, ends in these same two letters, and every raw search for یا in the first eighteen chapters of this book turned up that tail and nothing else. The word was everywhere on the page and nowhere in the book.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

یا is Persian, taken whole. Urdu's two ordinary coordinators come from opposite directions — اور inherited from Sanskrit through Prakrit, یا borrowed from Persian — and a learner uses them in the same breath without noticing the seam. That seam is the language.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pānī yā dūdh
- the same pair joined instead of split — pānī aur dūdh
- chāy yā dūdh — tea or milk
- it as an offer — kyā āp chāy yā dūdh leṅge?

Before you move on

Which joiner adds and which one chooses? (اور adds; یا chooses.) Which of the two is inherited and which borrowed? (اور inherited from Sanskrit; یا borrowed from Persian.) And which word already on every page ends in the same two letters? (کیا.)

20.3 لیکن (lekin) — but

Two joiners so far. One adds, one chooses, and neither of them can disagree with anything.

- Recall: the two items before this one — aur, yā

You'll want to know: لیکن

پانی ہے، لیکن ہوا نہیں — pānī hai, lekin hawā nahīṅ — there is water, but no air.

And with the two clauses chapters four and nineteen taught, whose verbs carry letters still ahead of you in the script ladder: maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ, lekin maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā — I am well, but I do not understand.

اور puts two clauses on the same side. لیکن turns the second one against the first. It stands at the head of the clause it turns, after a comma in writing and after a small drop of the voice in speech.

Four letters, and every one of them is already yours: ل، ی، ک، ن.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

لیکن is Arabic lākin, "but", which reached Urdu through Persian; Lane lists it under the letters l-k-n. Some grammarians take it apart as lā, "not", plus an old particle, a reading that is not settled. If it is right, English did the same by a different road: but is Old English be-ūtan, "be out, except", and two unrelated languages built their adversative out of a word for leaving something aside.
Urdu has a second word for but, magar, which is Persian and slightly more literary. Its middle letter has no lesson in the script ladder yet, so it is named here and left in romanization; لیکن is the one to reach for anyway.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ, lekin maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā
- the same two clauses with the other joiner — maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ aur maiṅ samajhtā hūṅ
- and hear what changed — the second clause no longer argues
- pānī hai, lekin chāy nahīṅ — there is water, but no tea

Before you move on

What is buried inside لیکن? (Arabic lā, "not".) Which English word was built the same way? (But, from be-ūtan, "be out.") And what does لیکن do that اور cannot? (Turn the second clause against the first.)

20.4 ٹھیک ہے — all right

ٹھیک has meant fine since chapter four, and only ever about your health. It has a second life, and it needs one more word.

- Recall: the joiner from the lesson before — lekin

You'll want to know: ٹھیک ہے

ٹھیک ہے — ṭhīk hai — all right; that's right; agreed.

ٹھیک ہے، لیکن ... — ṭhīk hai, lekin … — all right, but ...

The copula of chapter two, ہے, does all the work. ṭhīk hai is what a speaker says to accept a plan, to agree with a claim, and to end a phone call — one phrase covering everything English spreads across okay, fine, right and deal.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ٹھیک ہے (ṭhīk hai) is "it is right". ṭhīk comes from a reconstructed ṭhīkka*, "firm, right", which CDIAL derives, probably, from Sanskrit sthita, "standing" (CDIAL 5503); hai, "is", is usually traced to Sanskrit asti, "is".

Grammar Lens: agreeing, and taking it back

said	means
ṭhīk hai	agreed
ṭhīk nahīṅ hai	that is not right
ṭhīk hai, lekin …	agreed as far as it goes

The middle row is the negator of the last chapter dropped in front of the copula, which is exactly where chapter nineteen said it goes. The third row is the shape almost every real disagreement takes: accept first, then turn.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ṭhīk hai
- ṭhīk nahīṅ hai
- the half-agreement — ṭhīk hai, lekin …
- the one-word answers it replaces — jī hāṅ … nahīṅ

Before you move on

What word does ٹھیک need to become an agreement? (ہے, the copula from chapter two.) How do you disagree with it? (Put نہیں in front of the copula — ṭhīk nahīṅ hai.) And what does ṭhīk hai, lekin … do that a flat nahīṅ does not? (Accepts first, and then turns.)

20.5 Two things at once

Three joiners landed in this chapter. Name them, and say for each one whether it adds, chooses, or turns.

Your turn

- Say it: the chapter-fifteen line, whole — bārish, dhūp, aur hawā
- Say it: the same three as a choice — bārish yā dhūp
- Say it: all three refused — na bārish, na dhūp, na hawā
- Say it: the half-agreement — ṭhīk hai, lekin …
- Recall: five lessons back, the question this book learned to ask — kyā āp ṭhīk haiṅ?

Your turn: the distant band — every noun in the book, two at a time

This is what the chapter actually bought. Chapters eight to eighteen taught thirty-odd nouns that could only ever be named one at a time, and every one of them is now combinable. Go back and take them two at a time, cold, from memory — most of these were taught between twenty and sixty lessons ago and have not been asked for since.

Say these aloud:

- two foods joined, then the same two as a choice — pānī aur chāy … dūdh yā roṭī
- two colours, and mind the agreement — kālā aur nīlā, lāl aur safed
- two garments, then two refused — qamīz aur jūtā … na ṭopī, na koṭ
- two people, then the word that holds them all — bhāī aur bahan … dost aur khāndān
- the face, four parts at once — kān, nāk, āṅkh aur muṅh
- the one that is not on the face — dil
- heat against cold, joined and then chosen — garmī aur sardī … garmī yā sardī
- three from chapter eighteen — ām, āsmān aur purānā

Before you move on

Which of this chapter's joiners is inherited and which two are borrowed? (اور inherited; یا from Persian, لیکن from Arabic.) Which one can disagree? (لیکن.) And what turns any of these sentences into a question? (کیا at the front, and nothing else moved.)

Chapter 21

Why, and What For

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can ask why and who, answer why with a cause using کیونکہ or with a purpose using کے لیے, and report what I think with کہ.

Urdu's k- question family is completed – کون, کیوں, کہاں, کیا – and the reader answers کیوں two different ways, with a cause and with a purpose, then reports an opinion over سوچنا from chapter seven.

21.1 کیوں (kyūṅ) — why

Chapter seventeen gathered Urdu's k- question words and named them a family. One member was left out, and it is the one that asks for a reason.

- Recall: the joiner two lessons back, the one that turns — lekin

You'll want to know: کیوں

کیوں؟ — kyūṅ? — why?

آپ کیوں نہیں آئے؟ — āp kyūṅ nahīṅ āye? — why did you not come?

Every letter is one you own: ک، ی، و، and the humming ں of chapter six. It stands where کہاں stands — in front of the verb, not at the front of the sentence, which is where English puts why.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

word	asks
کیا	what
کہاں	where
کیوں	why

One stem, three questions. It is Sanskrit ka-, the interrogative stem behind Latin quis and quid, and behind English who, what, where and why — the wh- of English and the k- of Urdu are the same ancient consonant, moved apart by one sound change.

کیوں on its own, said flatly, is a complete question, and it is what a child says twenty times a day in either language.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kyūṅ? — on its own
- the three k- words in a row — kyā, kahāṅ, kyūṅ
- āp kyūṅ nahīṅ āye? — why did you not come?

Before you move on

Which stem do کیا، کہاں and کیوں share? (Sanskrit ka-, the interrogative stem.) Which English consonant answers Urdu's k-? (The *wh- of who, what, where, why.) And where does کیوں stand in the sentence? (In front of the verb, not at the front.)

21.2 کون (kaun) — who

The chapter-eight writing lesson used a three-letter word to practise the letter و and glossed it in passing. It never became a word you own.

- Recall: the question word from the lesson before — kyūṅ

You'll want to know: کون

یہ کون ہے؟ — yih kaun hai? — who is this?

کون؟ — kaun? — who?

Three letters, all long since taught: ک ،و ،ن. The و is the same letter chapter eight taught as a vowel, and this word is where you first met it without being told what the word meant.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کون is the fourth of the k- family, from Sanskrit kaḥ punar, "who then" (CDIAL 2575), worn to a syllable. It is the direct cousin of English who — the ancient word began with a k-sound, and English wrote it hw- and then wh- while keeping the sound, which is why who still starts with the breath the letter w does not say.

Now the family is whole: کیا what, کہاں where, کیوں why, کون who. Four questions and one stem, and a reader who hears the k- knows a question is coming before the sentence ends.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kaun? — on its own
- yih kaun hai?
- and answer it — yih merī māṅ hai
- the whole family — kyā, kahāṅ, kyūṅ, kaun

Before you move on

How many members does the k- family now have in this book, and what are they? (Four — kyā, kahāṅ, kyūṅ, kaun.) Which English word is کون's direct cousin? (Who.) And which letter in the middle of it did chapter eight teach? (و.)

21.3 کیونکہ (kyūṅki) — because

The question is now askable. The answer is not: nothing in this book can put a reason after a claim.

- Recall: the two items before this one — kyūṅ, kaun

You'll want to know: کیونکہ

پانی نہیں کیونکہ ہے ... — pānī nahīṅ hai kyūṅki … — there is no water, because ...

And over the wellbeing frame of chapter four, whose adjective carries two letters still ahead of you in the script ladder: maiṅ ṭhīk nahīṅ hūṅ kyūṅki …, I am not well, because ...

Look at the word and the last lesson is inside it: کیوں plus کہ. Urdu builds because by welding why to that — the language answers its own question in a single word.

Spanish does exactly this: por qué asks, porque answers, and the only difference is a space and an accent. English did it too, in forasmuch as, before the phrase went out of use.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کیونکہ (kyūṅki) joins kyūṅ, "why", built on the inherited question stem ka- that also gives kyā, "what" (CDIAL 3164), and ki, "that", usually traced to Persian ki.

Grammar Lens: claim first, reason after head word	what follows it

لیکن	an objection
کیونکہ	a reason

Both stand at the head of the clause they govern, and both come after the claim they attach to. Put them in one sentence and you have the whole shape of an argument: ṭhīk hai, lekin … kyūṅki …

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the question, then the answer word — kyūṅ? … kyūṅki
- maiṅ ṭhīk nahīṅ hūṅ kyūṅki maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā
- an objection and a reason in one breath — ṭhīk hai, lekin … kyūṅki …

Before you move on

What two words is کیونکہ built from? (کیوں, why, and کہ, that.)
Which Spanish pair is built the same way? (Por qué and porque.)
And which comes first, the claim or the reason? (The claim — the reason follows it.)

21.4 کہ (ki) — that sochnā, "to think," has been in this book since chapter seven, and in all that time nobody has been able to say what they think.

- Recall: the reason word from the lesson before, and the two words inside it — kyūṅki

You'll want to know: کہ

... ہے پانی یہ کہ — maiṅ sochtā hūṅ ki yih pānī hai — I think that this is water.

The verb in front of کہ is sochtā, whose che and te are still ahead of you in the script ladder, so the frame is printed in romanization and the clause کہ introduces is printed whole.

کہ does one job: it takes a whole sentence and makes it the object of a verb of thinking, knowing or saying. Everything before it is the frame; everything after it is the thought, in exactly the order it would have had standing alone.

Two letters, both yours — ک and ہ — and you have been reading them together since the last lesson, welded onto کیوں.

Grammar Lens: what English drops and Urdu keeps

English can leave that out — I think this is right is ordinary English.

Urdu cannot: کہ is obligatory, and a sentence built without it is not merely informal, it is wrong.

The word is Persian ki, borrowed rather than inherited — which is why it sits unstressed and one-shaped wherever it lands. Compare کہاں, where, which begins with the same two letters and is a completely different word from a different source: one of the places Urdu's two ancestries look identical on the page.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- maiṅ sochtā hūṅ ki yih ṭhīk hai

- maiṅ samajhtā hūṅ ki …
- an opinion, then an objection to it — maiṅ sochtā hūṅ ki ṭhīk hai, lekin …

Before you move on

What does ک attach to the verb in front of it? (A whole sentence, as its object.) Can it be left out, the way English leaves out that? (No — Urdu requires it.) And where have you already read these two letters? (Inside کیونکہ.)

21.5 کے لیے (ke liye) — for, in order to Chapter six taught the -نا ending every Urdu verb wears in the dictionary. Fourteen verbs have that ending and not one of them has ever been the reason for anything.

- Recall: the complementiser from the lesson before — ki

You'll want to know: کے لیے

کے لیے پانی — pānī ke liye — for water.

paṛhne ke liye — in order to read.

Two words, five letters, and every one of them long since yours: ک، ے، ل، ی، ے. Put it after a noun and it means for. Put it after a verb and it means in order to — and the verb's -نا becomes -نے first, which is the one change the construction asks for.

Grammar Lens: two ways to say why shape	says

کیونکہ + a whole clause	because something is so verb + کے لیے	in order to do something

The first gives a cause, the second gives a purpose, and a learner who owns both can answer kyūṅ? two different ways.

لیے is the perfective participle of لینا, "to take," which chapter eight taught. Urdu builds for out of having taken: a purpose is what the action was taken for. English went the other way and built for out of a word for before.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pānī ke liye
- the infinitive, then the purpose — paṛhnā … paṛhne ke liye
- samajhne ke liye — in order to understand
- both answers to kyūṅ? — kyūṅki … and … ke liye

Before you move on

What does the infinitive's -نا become before کے لیے? (-نے.) Which verb is لیے built on? (لینا, to take — chapter eight.) And what does کے لیے give that کیونکہ does not? (A purpose, rather than a cause.) Source: Unicode Arabic chart.

21.6 Asking why, and answering it two ways

Five items landed in this chapter. Two ask, two answer, and one hangs a sentence off a verb. Name all five.

Your turn

- Say it: the whole k- family — kyā, kahāṅ, kyūṅ, kaun
- Say it: an opinion — maiṅ sochtā hūṅ ki yih ṭhīk hai
- Say it: a cause, then a purpose — kyūṅki … … samajhne ke liye
- Recall: six lessons back, the joiner that turns — lekin
- Recall: nine lessons back, the joiner that chooses — yā

Before you move on

Which of this chapter's words answers kyūṅ? with a cause, and which with a purpose? (کیونکہ with a cause; لیے کے with a purpose.)

Which one is obligatory where English drops its equivalent? (کہ.)

And what is inside کیونکہ? (کیوں and کہ, the chapter's own two other items.)

Chapter 22

When You Are Lost

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 4 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I have not understood, ask what somebody said, and ask them to say it again gently – three sentences that need no letter this book has not taught.
> A learner who has stopped following says so, asks for the words back, and asks for them slower: maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā, kyā kahā, ārām se kaheṅ – a repair kit this track did not have at all four chapters ago.

22.1 کہنا (kahnā) — to say

> Chapter six taught bolnā, "to speak" — a word whose opening letter is still ahead of you in the script ladder, so it stays in romanization here. Urdu has a second verb here, and the line between them is the line between the act and the words.

- Recall: the complementiser two lessons back — ki

You'll want to know: کہنا

کہنا — kahnā — to say, to tell

Four letters, all of them yours: ک، ہ، ن، ا. Strip the -نا of chapter six and the stem is کہ-.

bolnā is about producing speech — maiṅ urdū boltā hūṅ, I speak Urdu. کہنا is about the content — what somebody actually said. English merges the two under speak and say without a clean rule; Urdu keeps them apart, and after کہنا the clause introduced by کہ follows naturally.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کہنا is Sanskrit kathayati, "converses with, describes" (CDIAL 2703), on the noun kathā, "a story." Its family is still in Urdu as کہانی, kahānī, "a tale", from kathānaka, "a little tale" (CDIAL 2705) — the word a chapter-seventeen writing lesson already put in front of you. To say and a story are one root, two syllables apart.

Its stem کہ- looks exactly like the borrowed complementiser کہ of the last chapter and has nothing to do with it: one is inherited from Sanskrit, the other borrowed from Persian, and they collided on the page. Urdu is full of these seams.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kahnā, then the stem — kah-
- the pair, and hear the line between them — bolnā … kahnā
- maiṅ kahtā hūṅ ki … — I say that …
- the word and the story — kahnā … kahānī

Before you move on

What separates کہنا from bolnā? (bolnā is producing speech; کہنا is what was said.) Which noun shares its root? (کہانی, a story.) And is its stem the same word as the کہ of the last chapter? (No — one inherited, one borrowed, and they only look alike.)

22.2 کیا؟ کہا — what did you say?

Chapter nineteen gave you the first thing a lost learner says. This is the second, and it is made of the verb from the lesson before and one word from chapter three.

- Recall: the sentence chapter one deferred — maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā

You'll want to know: کیا؟ کہا

کیا؟ کہا — kyā kahā? — what did you say?

Two words. کیا is the what of chapter three, back in the middle of the sentence where it means what rather than marking a yes-or-no question — the distinction the nineteenth chapter drew. کہا is کہنا in the past, the form you use for something that has already been said.

Say it with the voice rising and it is a request to repeat. Said flatly, with a frown, it is a challenge — so the tune matters more here than in any sentence this book has taught.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کیا کہا (kyā kahā): kyā, "what", comes from Sanskrit kim (CDIAL 3164); kahā, "said", from kathayati, "describes" (CDIAL 2703).

Grammar Lens: the repair kit, in three sentences

when	say
you did not follow at all	maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā
you did not catch the words	kyā kahā?
you want it slower	the next lesson

Not one of these needed a new word before this chapter. کیا has been in the book since chapter three, نہیں since chapter one, and کہنا arrived one lesson ago. What was missing was somebody putting them next to each other.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kyā kahā? — rising, as a request
- the two together — maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā … kyā kahā?
- and close it politely — shukriyā

Before you move on

Which chapter taught each half of کیا؟ کہا (کیا in chapter three; کہنا, whose past this is, one lesson ago.) Is the کیا here the question-marker of chapter nineteen? (No — it is in the middle, so it means what.) And what changes it from a request into a challenge? (The tune.)

22.3 سے آرام — slowly, gently

Asking somebody to say it again only helps if they say it again at a speed you can follow.

- Recall: the request from the lesson before — kyā kahā?

You'll want to know: سے آرام

سے آرام — ārām se — slowly; gently; take your time.

کہیں سے آرام — ārām se kaheṅ — please say it slowly.

The wave over the first letter is the alif madda of chapter seven. سے is the postposition with, so the phrase is literally with ease — and the second word is the same سے the book has been showing since chapter three in āp se mil kar.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

آرام is usually traced to Persian ārām, "rest, ease, repose", and سے, "with", is inherited: CDIAL lists it under Sanskrit sahita, "together with" (CDIAL 13310), and sama, "equal", has also been suggested (CDIAL 13173). So Urdu's way of asking somebody to slow down does not ask them to be slow; it asks them to be at ease. That is a gentler thing to say to a stranger than the English request, and it is why ārām se also means take it easy, carefully, and no rush depending on where it lands.

کہیں is کہنا in the polite request form. You are not asked to learn that ending here — only to hear that the verb from the last lesson is inside it.

Grammar Lens: the repair kit is now whole

when	say
you did not follow	maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā
you did not catch it	kyā kahā?
you want it slower	ārām se kaheṅ

Three sentences, four chapters, and not one new letter. Before chapter nineteen this track had no repair language at all: a learner who lost the thread had شکریہ and نہیں and nothing else.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ārām se
- ārām se kaheṅ
- the whole kit in order — maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā … kyā kahā? … ārām se kaheṅ … shukriyā

Before you move on

What does آرام mean on its own? (Rest, ease — Persian.) So what are you literally asking for? (Ease, not slowness.) And which verb is inside کہیں? (کہنا, from two lessons ago.)

22.4 When you are lost

Three items landed in this chapter, and between them they rescue a conversation. Name all three, and say which chapter each of their pieces came from.

Your turn

- Say it: the repair kit in order — maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā … kyā kahā? … ārām se kaheṅ
- Say it: a report — maiṅ kahtā hūṅ ki yih ṭhīk hai
- Say it: an argument — ṭhīk hai, lekin … kyūṅki …
- Recall: seven lessons back, the reason word and the two words inside it — kyūṅki
- Recall: twelve lessons back, the joiner that adds — aur

Your turn: the distant band — the first conversation, rescued

The exchange this book opened with was taught between eighty and a hundred lessons ago and has not been asked for since. It is also the exact place a beginner gets lost — so run it now, cold, and put the repair kit inside it.

- Say it: the opening, from memory — salām … āp kā nām kyā hai?
- Say it: your answer, and the courtesy after it — merā nām … hai. āp se mil kar khushī huī
- Say it: the wellbeing question respectfully, choosing for a man or a woman — āp kaise haiṅ? / āp kaisī haiṅ?
- Say it: the reply — maiṅ ṭhīk hūṅ, shukriyā

- Say it: now lose the thread, and rescue it — maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā. kyā kahā? ārām se kaheṅ
- Say it: and close — khudā hāfiz
- Recall: which of āp, tum and tū you used, and why

Before you move on

Four chapters ago this book could not deny a sentence, ask a yes-or-no question, join two nouns, give a reason, or say that it had not understood. Say the sentence chapter one promised and never delivered. (maiṅ nahīṅ samajhtā.) Say the question that asks for a repeat. (کیا؟ کہا) And say the four members of the k- family. (kyā, kahāṅ, kyūṅ, kaun.)

22.5 One mark apart

Cover the page. Which two letters share a scoop and differ only in what sits above it, and which of the two curls the tongue back?

Script: three pairs the eye has to separate

ق · ک · ت · ٹ · گ · ک

Urdu spends very little ink on these differences, and each one changes the word:

the pair	what separates them
ق qāf · ک kāf	the throat — qāf is drawn further back
ت te · ٹ ṭe	two dots above, against a small raised loop
گ gāf · ک kāf	one extra stroke laid across the top

ق and ک are the pair to be honest about: relaxed speech often merges them, and careful or formal speech keeps them apart, so the letters stay distinct on the page whatever the mouth does. ت and ٹ never merge — the dots mean the plain dental t, the loop means the retroflex the tongue curls back for, and the two make different words.

Your turn

- Look: at ق, the letter qamīz opens with, and name the letter it is easiest to confuse with
- Look: at تا, the last two letters of jūtā, and say whether that t is the plain dental or the retroflex
- Look: at گرمی and name the letter that opens it
- Read it: the first-meeting page again, aloud, without the romanization

Before you move on

What separates ق from ک? (How far back in the throat it is said.) What separates ت from ٹ? (Two dots against a raised loop.) What does the loop mean? (The retroflex — the tongue curls back.) And what does گ add to ک? (One stroke across the top.)

Chapter 23

Before a Postposition, Everything Changes

Modes: voice (6) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can put something in a room, on a thing, or to a person – and I know why the noun changes shape before I do it.
> The book's whole vocabulary becomes placeable for the first time: a pantry, a wardrobe and five kinds of weather that could only ever be named can now be put somewhere, and the postpositions the reader has been reading since chapter three finally have their rule stated.

23.1 کمرہ (kamrā) — room

Say this. Then say black, and say what its last vowel is doing.

- Recall: the two items before this one — kyā kahā?, ārām se

You'll want to know: کمرہ

کمرہ یہ — yih kamrā — this room.

کمرہ پرانا — purānā kamrā — an old room.

Twenty-two chapters, and this book has named a mother, a brother, a friend, four foods, four garments and five kinds of weather — and not one place. A learner could say who they were and could not say where anything was.

کمرہ is said kamrā and ends in the vowel -ā, even though the last letter on the page is ہ. That is worth pausing on: at the end of a word like this the gol he is not an h at all — it is how Urdu writes a final -ā. You met the same letter in this job inside shukriyā.

So کمرہ is one of the masculine nouns whose adjectives agree with it: کالا کمرہ, کمرہ پرانا. The ـا on the adjective is answering the -ā on the noun, exactly as chapter thirteen showed.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کمرہ is Portuguese. Câmara came ashore with the sixteenth-century sea trade, and it is the same Latin camera — a vaulted room — that English borrowed twice: once as chamber, and once as camera, because a camera obscura is a dark room.
So this word arrived by ship, where نیلا arrived by land — the Sanskrit indigo that also gives English aniline. Urdu takes words from every direction it has ever been reached from.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kamrā
- yih kamrā, then voh kamrā
- with an adjective that agrees — kālā kamrā, nīlā kamrā, purānā kamrā
- the English cousins — chamber, camera

Before you move on

Which language did کمرہ come from, and by what route? (Portuguese, by sea.) Which two English words share its Latin root? (Chamber and camera.) And what does its final -ا tell an adjective to do? (End in -ا too.)

23.2 کمرے (kamre) — the shape a noun takes before a postposition

Say this room. Then say your name, and notice the little word standing between آپ and نام.

You'll want to know: the noun changes first کمرہ — kamrā — a room, standing on its own.

کمرے کے لیے — kamre ke liye — for the room.

Look at what happened to the noun. It was کمرہ and it is now کمرے, and nothing about the meaning changed. The final -ā became -ے because a postposition was coming.

This is the single most important rule in Urdu grammar that a learner can be taught, and this book has used it since chapter three without stating it. آپ کا نام and کے لیے are both postpositions, and both have been quietly demanding this change all along.

Grammar Lens: two shapes, and only two

Sanskrit inflected a noun eight ways. Urdu kept one distinction:

shape	when	example
direct	the noun is a subject, or alone	کمرہ
oblique	a postposition follows it	کمرے

And the adjective goes with it. کمرہ کالا becomes کمرے کالے: the adjective is agreeing with the noun's new shape, not merely with its gender.

Nouns not ending in -ā do not visibly change — ماں is ماں either way. A reader can go a long way without noticing the shape-change, and then be unable to build a phrase.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair — kamrā, then kamre ke liye
- with the adjective following it over — kālā kamrā, then kāle kamre ke liye
- purāne kamre ke liye
- the one that does not move — māṅ, and māṅ ke liye

Before you move on

What makes a noun change shape? (A postposition coming after it.) What does کمرہ become? (کمرے.) Does the adjective follow it over? (Yes — کمرے کالے.) And which nouns do not visibly change? (Those not ending in -ā.)
Source: Unicode Arabic chart.

23.3 کو (ko) — to, and the one it happens to

What happens to کمرہ when a postposition follows it? Then say the sentence from chapter eight that means I like mangoes.

You'll want to know: کو

ماں کو — māṅ ko — to the mother, or the mother, as the one it happens to.

Chapter eight taught mujhe ām pasand haiṅ — mangoes are pleasing to me — and then left you unable to say it about anybody else, because mujhe looked like one word.

It is not. Mujhe is mujh plus کو, fused so long ago that the seam has closed. Now that you have the postposition on its own, the frame opens to everybody:

> ماں کو ām pasand haiṅ — māṅ ko ām pasand haiṅ — mother likes mangoes.

Mujhe and pasand stay in romanization here. Between them they need three letters the script ladder has not reached — jīm, do chashmī he and dāl — and this book does not print a letter before it has taught it.

Grammar Lens: two jobs, one word

کو marks the person a thing is given to, and the person a thing is done to. English needs to for the first and word order alone for the second; Urdu uses one postposition for both.
And it takes the oblique in front of it, like every postposition:

- کمرہ → کمرے کو

A postposition never touches a direct-shape noun. That rule has no exceptions and it is worth over-learning now, because six more postpositions are coming.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- māṅ ko
- the frame, opened — māṅ ko ām pasand haiṅ
- the fused one beside the free one — mujhe, then māṅ ko
- taking the oblique — kamre ko

Before you move on

What two pieces is mujhe made of? (Mujh and کو.) What does کو mark? (The one a thing is given or done to.) And what shape must the noun in front of it be in? (Oblique.)

23.4 میں (meṅ) — in

Say to the mother. Then say I am well, and look at the first word of it.

You'll want to know: میں after a noun

کمرے میں — kamre meṅ — in the room.

پانی میں — pānī meṅ — in the water.

Twenty-three chapters, and this is the first time anything in this book has been inside anything else.

Notice the noun. کمرہ became کمرے again, because a postposition is following it. That is the rule from two lessons ago, and it will be the rule every time.

Grammar Lens: the same spelling, two different words

This word is spelled exactly like the pronoun میں you have used since chapter four, and they are unrelated. They are told apart by position:

where it stands	what it is	said at the head of a clause	I	maiṅ
after a noun	in	meṅ

The pronoun comes from Sanskrit maya; the postposition from madhye, "in the middle of". They fell together on the page because the Urdu script writes no short vowels — which is exactly the difficulty that makes reading Urdu hard and that this book will keep returning to.
Both in one sentence:

میں کمرے میں ہوں — maiṅ kamre meṅ hūṅ — I am in the room.

First word, pronoun. Fourth word, postposition. Same three letters.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kamre meṅ
- pānī meṅ, then āsmān meṅ
- both words at once — maiṅ kamre meṅ hūṅ
- the oblique doing its work — kamrā, then kamre meṅ

Before you move on

How do you tell the pronoun from the postposition? (By where it stands — head of the clause, or after a noun.) Why do they look identical? (The script writes no short vowels.) And what shape is the noun in front of it? (Oblique.)

23.5 پر (par) — on

Say in the room. Then say the joiner from chapter twenty that turns a sentence against the one before it.

You'll want to know: پر

پر کام — kām par — at work.

پر آسمان — āsmān par — in the sky (literally on the sky).

میں puts a thing inside; پر puts it on top of, or at. Between them they cover most of what an A1 learner needs to say about where something is — and Urdu draws the line in a slightly different place from English, which is why the sky is something you are on.

Grammar Lens: and a second پر, which is not this one

Urdu does this to the reader twice in one chapter. پر is also a joiner meaning but — the everyday rival of the لیکن you learned in chapter twenty — and again the two are told apart by where they stand:

where it stands	what it is after a noun	on, at
at the head of a clause	but

One is Sanskrit upari, the ancestor of English over. The other is Persian. They are not related and they are spelled identically, which is the same trap میں set one lesson ago — and the same lesson: in Urdu, position is meaning.

And, like every postposition, it takes the oblique: پر کمرے.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kām par
- the pair — kamre meṅ, then kamre par
- āsmān par
- the other پر, at the head — par …, and its rival lekin …

Before you move on

Which postposition puts a thing inside, and which on top? (میں and پر.) What else does پر mean, and how do you tell? (But — by standing at the head of a clause.) And which English word is its Sanskrit cousin? (Over.)

23.6 Into, onto, and to

One rule ran under every lesson in this chapter. State it, then name the three postpositions that made it visible.

Your turn

- Say it: the shape-change, bare — kamrā, then kamre
- Say it: all three — kamre ko, kamre meṅ, kamre par
- Say it: the sentence with both spellings of one word — maiṅ kamre meṅ hūṅ
- Recall: two chapters back, the joiner that heads a reason — kyūṅki

Your turn: the distant band — everything this book owns, put somewhere

Until this chapter nothing in this book could be anywhere. Every postposition the book has ever shown you — کا since chapter three, لیے کے since chapter twenty-one — was quietly demanding the same shape-change and never said so. Run all of it, cold.

Say these aloud:

- the foods, placed — pānī meṅ, roṭī kamre meṅ, ām kamre meṅ
- the weather, placed — hawā kamre meṅ, āsmān par
- with an adjective that follows the noun over — kāle kamre meṅ, purāne kamre meṅ, nīle kamre meṅ
- people, marked — māṅ ko, and the older fused one, mujhe
- the postpositions you already had — āp kā nām, kamre ke liye
- near and inside at once — yih kamrā, then is kamre meṅ … which is the next chapter
- the two words spelled میں — maiṅ, then meṅ

Before you move on

What must a noun do before a postposition? (Take the oblique shape.) Does the adjective follow? (Yes.) Which nouns show no visible change? (Those not ending in -ا.) And which two words in this chapter are each spelled like something else entirely? (میں and پر.)

23.7 Where a word came from, and what to say when you lose it

Someone is speaking faster than you can follow. Two words, from memory, that ask them to slow down.

You'll want to know: an Urdu word arrives by one of several roads word	the road it took

کوٹ koṭ	straight from English, one generation old
ہوا hawā	Arabic to Persian, Persian to Urdu — a loan of a loan
garmī	Persian, on a root it shares with Greek thermós

Three different histories, and the spelling announces none of them. کوٹ is the sharpest case: an identical کوٹ meaning "fort" came in from Sanskrit koṭṭa centuries earlier, so the two are homographs rather than cousins and the page gives you no warning at all.

ہوا is the shape worth naming, because it is not the usual one. A word that splits from a shared root into two roads has two descendants; ہوا was handed along a single chain, Arabic to Persian to Urdu, arriving once.

You'll want to know: the phrase for when the road runs out آرام سے — ārām se — slowly, gently, take your time. آرام سے کہیں — ārām se kaheṅ — please say it slowly.

سے is the postposition with, so the phrase is literally with ease. Every letter in it is already yours, and it is worth more in a first conversation than any of the three words above.

Your turn

- Say it: ask someone to say it slowly
- Say it: which of the three words above came from English, and how recently
- Say it: which one was borrowed twice before it reached Urdu
- Read it: the first-meeting page once more, aloud

Before you move on

Which word came straight from English? (کوٹ.) What else does that spelling mean, and is it related? (A fort, from Sanskrit — unrelated.) What makes ہوا a loan of a loan? (Arabic to Persian, then Persian to Urdu.) And what does سے آرام say literally? (With ease.)

Chapter 24

Here, There, and Where

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can put a demonstrative in front of a postposition, and I can say where something is and where it is not.
>
> کہاں has been askable since chapter seventeen and unanswerable ever since. یہاں and وہاں answer it, and اس and ان let the demonstratives the book already owned stand in front of a postposition for the first time.

24.1 اس (is) — this, before a postposition

Say this and that. Then say what happens to کمرہ when a postposition follows it.

- Recall: two chapters back, the word that heads a reason — kyūṅki

You'll want to know: اس

یہ کمرہ — yih kamrā — this room.

اس کمرے میں — is kamre meṅ — in this room.

The demonstrative does what the noun does. یہ is the direct shape; اس is the oblique one, and it appears for the same reason کمرہ became کمرے — a postposition is coming.

So the whole phrase shifts together. Pointer, adjective and noun all move into the oblique, and only then does the postposition arrive:

> اس کالے کمرے میں — is kāle kamre meṅ — in this black room.

Three words changed shape for one little word standing after them. That is what Urdu does instead of case endings.

Grammar Lens: the far one too

وہ has the same pair, and its oblique is اس as well in the singular — Urdu's near and far demonstratives collapse into one oblique form and are told apart by context:

meaning	direct	oblique
this	یہ	اس
that	وہ	اس

Which means اس کو and اس پر are available for both, and a learner who has been unable to say to him since chapter one can now say it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair — yih kamrā, then is kamre meṅ
- the whole phrase moving together — is kāle kamre meṅ
- on its own — is ko, is par
- is kām ke liye — for this work

Before you move on

What is the oblique of یہ? (اس.) And of وہ? (اس as well.) What else in the phrase changes shape with it? (The adjective and the noun — everything before the postposition.)

24.2 ان (un) — those, and him respectfully

Say in this room. Then name the three words for you and say which one is the respectful one.

You'll want to know: ان

ان کو — un ko — to them.

ان کمروں میں — un kamroṅ meṅ — in those rooms.

اس is the oblique for one thing. ان is the oblique for more than one, and it serves both یہ and وہ exactly as اس does.

Grammar Lens: a plural that is not about number

Here is the part a learner has to be told, because guessing it wrong is rude.
Chapter three taught that Urdu says آپ to somebody it respects — a plural form used for one person. It does the same thing about somebody:

ان کو — un ko — to him or to her, respectfully.

So ان کو is to them, and it is also to him, and which one it is depends entirely on who you are talking about. Said of a mother, a teacher, an elder, ان is the only correct choice, and اس would be heard the way calling a stranger by their first name is heard.
The safe habit while you are learning: ان for anybody older than you, اس for children and for things.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- un ko
- the two obliques side by side — is ko, un ko
- of a mother, respectfully — māṅ … un ko
- un kamroṅ meṅ

Before you move on

What is the plural oblique? (ان۔) Does it always mean more than one person? (No — it is also the respectful him or her.) And which word for you works the same way? (آپ۔)

24.3 یہاں (yahāṅ) — here

Ask where? Then say this, and look at how the two words begin.

You'll want to know: یہاں

میں یہاں ہوں — maiṅ yahāṅ hūṅ — I am here.

Chapter seventeen taught کہاں — where? — and this book has had no way to answer it ever since. A learner could ask the question and could not receive the reply.

Look at the two words together. کہاں and یہاں share their ending, and differ only in the head: ک- asks, یہ- points near. That is not a coincidence to be memorised — it is a frame.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

یہاں (yahāṅ) is inherited. CDIAL sets it beside Sanskrit iha, "here", as a form ultimately connected with it rather than its direct descendant (CDIAL 1605).

Grammar Lens: the frame, two thirds filled head	frame	word

ک- asking	thing	کیا
ک- asking	place	کہاں
یہ- near	thing	یہ
یہ- near	place	یہاں
وہ- far	thing	وہ
وہ- far	place	next lesson

Chapter seventeen already showed you that کیا, کون and کہاں are one family. This is the other half of that observation: the answers are a family too, built on the pointing heads, and the ending is shared across both.
One cell is still empty, and you can already guess what goes in it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- maiṅ yahāṅ hūṅ
- the question and its answer — kahāṅ? … yahāṅ
- with a room in it — kamrā yahāṅ hai
- the two endings, side by side — kahāṅ, yahāṅ

Before you move on

What do کہاں and یہاں share? (Their ending.) What is different? (The head — asking against near.) And which cell of the frame is still empty? (The far one.)

24.4 وہاں (vahāṅ) — there

Say here. Then say that. Now guess this lesson's word before you read on.

You'll want to know: وہاں

وہ وہاں ہے — voh vahāṅ hai — he is there.

If you guessed it, that is the lesson. The frame is closed:

head	thing	place
ک- asking	کیا	کہاں
یہ- near	یہ	یہاں
وہ- far	وہ	وہاں

Six words, three heads, two frames — and every one of them was predictable from the shape of the others.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

وہاں (vahāṅ) joins the stem of voh, "that", to the ending -hāṅ of yahāṅ, "here". Its history is not settled; CDIAL has no entry for it.

Grammar Lens: what a place word can now do

These two words and the postpositions of the last chapter answer the same question at different resolutions:

- وہاں — there, gesturing
- اس کمرے میں — in that room, naming

And the denial you already own works on both, because نہیں goes in front of the verb wherever the verb is:

وہ وہاں نہیں ہے — voh vahāṅ nahīṅ hai — he is not there.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- voh vahāṅ hai
- the pair — maiṅ yahāṅ hūṅ, voh vahāṅ hai

- the denial — voh vahāṅ nahīṅ hai
- picturing the far place and naming it — vahāṅ, then is kamre meṅ
- the whole frame — kyā, kahāṅ; yih, yahāṅ; voh, vahāṅ

Writing: the first question you assemble yourself

Cover the models above. From meaning alone, write Where is the room? There is no word bank, romanization, or copyable sentence. Choose three familiar pieces, put them in Urdu order, and add the Urdu question mark. This first composition is untimed: finish before opening the answer key.

Then check the thing, place word, final verb, and punctuation separately. Repair the first difference and write the whole question once more from meaning. One controlled line proves this rung, not the later timed A1 writing task.

Before you move on

What are the three heads? (-ک asking, -یہ near, -وہ far.) What ending do the place words share? (-اں.) And where does نہیں go in he is not there? (In front of the verb.)
Source: Unicode Arabic chart.

24.5 Here, there, and where

Two demonstratives learned a second shape in this chapter and two place words closed a frame. Name all four, and say which of the four is also a mark of respect.

Your turn

- Say it: the obliques — is ko, un ko
- Say it: kahāṅ? … yahāṅ … vahāṅ
- Say it: the bare there, then the named place — vahāṅ, then us kamre meṅ
- Recall: two chapters back, the word that asks why — kyūṅ

Your turn: the distant band — everything the book owns, pointed at and placed

Two chapters ago nothing in this book could be anywhere and no demonstrative could stand in front of a postposition. Run the distance, cold.

Say these aloud:

- the question family — kyā, kaun, kahāṅ
- the answer family — yih, yahāṅ; voh, vahāṅ
- the drinks, placed — chāy yahāṅ hai, pānī vahāṅ hai
- the whole phrase bending together — is kāle kamre meṅ
- people, respectfully and not — is ko, then of a mother, un ko
- the family, placed — māṅ yahāṅ haiṅ, bahan vahāṅ hai
- the weather — sardī hai, and yahāṅ sardī hai
- a denial — voh yahāṅ nahīṅ hai

Before you move on

What is the oblique of یہ and of وہ? (اس for both.) What is the plural oblique? (ان.) When must you use ان about one person? (When you respect them.) And what do کہاں, یہاں and وہاں share? (Their ending.)

Chapter 25

More Than One

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can make a noun plural, and I can make it plural before a postposition, which is the one ending in Urdu that is never ambiguous.
>
> No noun in this book had ever been more than one. The four-cell table closes, two of its cells collide on purpose, and gives the track its first plural pronoun and its first plural possessive.

25.1 کمرے (kamre) — more than one

Say in the room, and say what the noun had to do first.

- Recall: two chapters back, the postposition that marks the one a thing is done to — ko

You'll want to know: the plural

کمرہ — kamrā — a room.

کمرے — kamre — rooms.

Twenty-four chapters, and no noun in this book has ever been more than one.

Look hard at the plural, because you have seen it before. کمرے is exactly the oblique singular from chapter twenty-three — same three letters, same sound. Urdu spells rooms and of the room identically and lets the rest of the sentence tell them apart.

Grammar Lens: the table, and what the postposition settles

	one	more than one
direct	کمرہ	کمرے
oblique	کمرے	next lesson

Three of the four cells are filled and two of them look the same. A postposition settles it: میں کمرے can only be in the room, because a plural before a postposition takes a different shape again — which is the next lesson.

Nouns not ending in -ā do not change at all. ماں is one mother or several and is spelled ماں either way, so number, like the oblique, is often invisible in Urdu and has to be read off the sentence.

And the adjective agrees: کمرہ کالا → کمرے کالے.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kamrā, then kamre
- the two readings of one spelling — kamre (rooms), kamre meṅ (in the room)
- with the adjective agreeing — kāle kamre
- the one that does not move — māṅ, one or many

Before you move on

What is the plural of کمرہ? (کمرے.) What else is spelled that way? (The oblique singular.) What tells them apart? (Whether a postposition follows.) And which nouns show no plural at all? (Those not ending in -ا.)

25.2 کمروں (kamroṅ) — more than one, before a postposition

Say rooms. Then say in the room, and say why those two are spelled the same.

You'll want to know: کمروں

میں کمروں — kamroṅ meṅ — in the rooms.

Here is the fourth cell, and it is the one that removes the ambiguity:

	one	more than one
direct	کمرہ	کمرے
oblique	کمرے	کمروں

-وں is unmistakable. Nothing else in Urdu ends that way, so a reader who meets it knows immediately that the noun is plural and that a postposition is coming.

Grammar Lens: the ending that catches every noun

This is the one place where every Urdu noun changes visibly, including the ones that have refused to move so far. کان is one ear or two and is spelled the same either way, and it does not mark an oblique — but put it in the plural and in front of a postposition and it becomes کانوں.
So the rule to hold is: -وں on the end means plural, and something is coming after me.
That final ں is the nūn-e-ghunna of chapter one — the nasal with no dots that colours the vowel rather than sounding as an n. The same letter ends ہاں and کہاں and یہاں.
And the demonstrative in front of it is already yours: the plural oblique ان from the last chapter.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kamroṅ meṅ
- all four cells — kamrā, kamre, kamre meṅ, kamroṅ meṅ
- with the demonstrative — un kamroṅ meṅ
- the noun that finally moves — kān, then kānoṅ ko

Before you move on

What does -وں tell you, in two parts? (Plural, and a postposition is coming.) Is it ever ambiguous? (No — nothing else ends that way.) And which letter is at the end of it? (The nūn-e-ghunna, the dotless nasal.)

25.3 ہم (ham) — we Say I. Then name the three words for you.

You'll want to know: ہم

ہم یہاں ہیں — ham yahāṅ haiṅ — we are here.

Twenty-four chapters of this book have been about one person at a time. میں or آپ, and nobody else. ہم is the first pronoun that covers a group.

Notice the verb. میں ... ہوں but ہم ... ہیں: the plural subject takes the plural form of to be, and it is the same ہیں you have been saying to آپ since chapter four.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ہم (ham) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from asmad, "we, us (the base of the plural forms)" (CDIAL 986). CDIAL lists it under this base rather than under Sanskrit vayam, "we".

Grammar Lens: a "we" that is sometimes one person

Urdu does the same thing with ہم that it does with آپ and ان: a plural form used of one person, for distance and formality.

word	grammatically	often used for
آپ	you, plural	one person, respectfully
ان	those	one person, respectfully
ہم	we	one speaker, formally

A speaker who says ہم of themselves is being formal or a little grand, and in much of Pakistan it is the ordinary way to say I in some registers. A learner should say میں and should recognise ہم.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ham yahāṅ haiṅ
- the singular and the plural — maiṅ yahāṅ hūṅ, ham yahāṅ haiṅ
- ham kamre meṅ haiṅ
- the three plural-for-one forms — āp, un, ham

Before you move on

Which form of to be follows ہم? (ہیں) What else can ہم mean besides we? (A formal *I.) And which two other words in this book use a plural for one person? (آپ and ان.)

25.4 ہمارا (hamārā) — our

Say we. Then say my name and your name, and notice that one of them has a separate little word in it and the other does not.

You'll want to know: ہمارا

کمرہ ہمارا — hamārā kamrā — our room.

ماں ہماری — hamārī māṅ — our mother.

And now the thing worth seeing. میرا has looked like a word since chapter two and it is not one:

- آپ کا — āp kā — pronoun, then کا, written apart
- میرا — merā — pronoun and کا, fused
- ہمارا — hamārā — pronoun and کا, fused

All three are the same construction. The first person fuses and the respectful second person does not, which is an accident of wear, not a difference of grammar.

Grammar Lens: the possessive agrees, like any adjective

کا ends in -ا, so it behaves like کالا and پرانا and changes with the noun after it:

the noun is	the possessive	example masculine, direct	-ا	کمرہ ہمارا
feminine	-ی	ماں ہماری
oblique or plural	-ے	میں کمرے ہمارے

That is the same three-way agreement chapter thirteen taught for colours, applied to a postposition. Nothing new to learn — one rule paying twice.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hamārā kamrā
- the three faces of one construction — āp kā, merā, hamārā
- agreeing with a feminine noun — hamārī māṅ
- agreeing with an oblique — hamāre kamre meṅ

Before you move on

What two pieces is ہمارا made of? (ہم and کا, fused.) Which possessive is written as two words? (آپ کا.) And what does the ending agree with? (The noun after it — gender, and oblique or not.)

25.5 More than one

Say all four shapes of کمرہ. Two of them are spelled the same — which two, and what tells them apart?

Your turn

- Say it: the four cells — kamrā, kamre, kamre meṅ, kamroṅ meṅ
- Say it: ham yahāṅ haiṅ, then hamārā kamrā
- Say it: the possessive agreeing three ways — hamārā kamrā, hamārī māṅ, hamāre kamre meṅ
- Recall: two chapters back, the postposition that puts a thing inside another — meṅ

Your turn: the distant band — three chapters of endings, run cold

Three chapters ago no Urdu noun in this book had ever changed shape, been more than one, or been anywhere. Run all of it, cold.

Say these aloud:

- the shape ladder — kamrā, kamre, kamroṅ
- the wardrobe, placed — ṭopī kamre meṅ, ṭopī un kamroṅ meṅ
- the pantry — dūdh yahāṅ hai, dūdh vahāṅ nahīṅ hai
- the weather — bārish hai, and yahāṅ bārish hai
- the ear that finally moves — kān, then kānoṅ ko

- colours following the noun over — kāle kamre meṅ, nīle kamroṅ meṅ
- all the possessives — merā, hamārā, āp kā
- the demonstratives bending — is kamre meṅ, un kamroṅ meṅ
- I, and we — maiṅ yahāṅ hūṅ, ham yahāṅ haiṅ

Before you move on

Which ending means plural, and a postposition is coming? (-وں.) Which two of the four cells collide, and what settles them? (Plural direct and oblique singular; whether a postposition follows.) What is ہمارا made of? (ہم and کا.) And which three words in this book use a plural form for one person? (آپ, ان, ہم.)

Chapter 26

Whose, and Who To

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 4 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say whose something is for any person, mark when the owner is also the subject, invite agreement, and call somebody.
>
> The possessive column fills from two of six to five of six, and اپنا adds a distinction English has not got at all – his own room against somebody else's – which Urdu requires and a learner cannot skip.

26.1 اس کا (is kā) — his, her

What is the oblique of یہ? Then say our room.

- Recall: two chapters back, the shape a noun takes before a postposition — kamre

You'll want to know: اس کا

اس کمرہ کا — is kā kamrā — his room, or her room.

ان کمرہ کا — un kā kamrā — their room, or his room, respectfully.

Urdu has no word for his and none for her. It takes the demonstrative in the oblique shape you learned two chapters ago and puts کا after it — which is why this could not be taught earlier. The third-person possessive is built on the oblique, and until the oblique existed there was nothing to build it on.

Grammar Lens: the column, finally full person	possessive	written

I	میرا	fused
we	ہمارا	fused
you, respectfully	کا آپ	apart
he, she, it	کا اس	apart
they, or he respectfully	کا ان	apart

Five of the six an A1 candidate needs, and the shape of the sixth — your, to somebody close — follows the same rule.

Every one of them ends in -ا and agrees like an adjective, so ماں کی اس is his mother and میں کمرے کے اس is in his room.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- is kā kamrā
- the respectful one — un kā kamrā
- the whole set — merā, hamārā, āp kā, is kā, un kā
- agreeing — is kī māṅ, is ke kamre meṅ

Before you move on

Does Urdu have a word for his? (No — it uses اس plus کا.) Why could this not be taught before chapter twenty-four? (It needs the oblique demonstrative.) And what does the کا agree with? (The noun after it.)

26.2 اپنا (apnā) — one's own

Say his room, then our room. Then say my name.

You'll want to know: اپنا

میں کمرے اپنے میں ہوں — maiṅ apne kamre meṅ hūṅ — I am in my (own) room.

Here is a rule English does not have and Urdu will not let you skip. When the owner is the same person as the subject of the sentence, Urdu replaces the ordinary possessive with اپنا.

So it is میرا کمرہ when somebody else is speaking about my room, and اپنا کمرہ the moment I am the one doing something in it.

Grammar Lens: getting it wrong changes the meaning

This is not a politeness or a nicety. The two sentences mean different things:

Urdu	what it means
وہ اپنے کمرے میں ہے	he is in his own room
وہ اس کے کمرے میں ہے	he is in somebody else's room

An English speaker hears he is in his room for both and has no way to tell them apart. Urdu marks the difference and requires you to.

اپنا agrees like every other possessive: اپنا کمرہ, اپنی ماں, اپنے کمرے میں.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- maiṅ apne kamre meṅ hūṅ
- the pair that differ — voh apne kamre meṅ hai, voh is ke kamre meṅ hai
- agreeing — apnā kamrā, apnī māṅ
- with we — ham apne kamre meṅ haiṅ

Before you move on

When must you use اپنا? (When the owner is the subject of the sentence.) What does وہ اس کے کمرے میں ہے mean? (He is in somebody else's room.) And does اپنا agree? (Yes — like every possessive.)

26.3 ہے نا؟ (hai nā?) — isn't it?

Ask a yes-or-no question with کیا. Then say the negator that stands in front of a refused noun.

You'll want to know: ہے نا؟

آپ یہاں ہیں، ہے نا؟ — āp yahāṅ haiṅ, hai nā? — you are here, aren't you?

یہ آپ کا کمرہ ہے، ہے نا؟ — this is your room, isn't it?

Both halves have been in this book for twenty-five chapters. ہے arrived in chapter two and نہ in chapter nineteen, and nobody has ever put them together. It is not a new word; it is an assembly.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ہے نا (hai nā): hai, "is", is usually traced to Sanskrit asti, and nā, "no", to Sanskrit na, "not" (CDIAL 6906).

Grammar Lens: two ways to ask, and they mean different things

how you ask	what it says
کیا … āp ṭhīk haiṅ?	I do not know. Tell me.
āp ṭhīk haiṅ, ہے نا؟	I think so. Agree with me.

Chapter nineteen's کیا opens a genuine question. The tag makes a statement and asks the listener to confirm it, and a conversation runs on the second far more than on the first.

The reply is the jī hāṅ of chapter one. (Ṭhīk and jī stay in romanization: between them they need three letters the script ladder has not reached.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āp yahāṅ haiṅ, hai nā?
- the two ways, back to back — kyā āp ṭhīk haiṅ?, then āp ṭhīk haiṅ, hai nā?
- and the reply — jī hāṅ

Before you move on

What is the difference between asking with کیا and asking with the tag? (کیا asks; the tag invites agreement.) Which two pieces make the tag, and how old are they? (ہے from chapter two and نہ from chapter nineteen.) And what do you reply? (Jī hāṅ.)

26.4 ماں! (māṅ!) — calling somebody

Say mother. Then say the greeting from chapter one, and ask yourself who you said it to.

You'll want to know: the kin term as an address

ماں! سلام — māṅ! salām — Mother! Hello.

This book has taught ماں since chapter seventeen as a noun — a person you can talk about. Not once has anybody been called.

That matters more in Urdu than in English. An Urdu speaker addresses almost nobody by name. A mother is ماں, an older brother is bhāī, a shopkeeper is bhāī, a stranger of your parents' age is uncle or auntie. Using a first name where a kin term is expected is the mistake, not the other way round.

Grammar Lens: what the vocative does to the noun

Urdu kept a fragment of the old vocative case, and it is one letter's worth:

the noun	talking about	calling ends in -ā	کمرہ	کمرے
plural	کمروں (before a postposition)	کمرو

The call form of a plural is -و, not the -وں you learned in chapter twenty-five. The nasal drops. That is the whole difference between shouting to a group and saying something about them.
ماں does not end in -ا, so it does not change — which is why calling your mother is the easiest vocative in the language.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- māṅ! salām
- the two plural endings — kamroṅ meṅ (about), kamro (calling)
- greeting and then checking — māṅ! āp yahāṅ haiṅ, hai nā?
- the habit — a name is the exception, a kin term is the rule

Before you move on

How does an Urdu speaker usually address somebody? (By a kin term, not a name.) What is the plural call form? (-و, with the nasal dropped.) And why does ماں not change? (It does not end in -*ā.) Source: Unicode Arabic chart.

26.5 Whose, and who to Say the whole possessive column. Then say which of its members you must swap out when the owner is also the subject, and what you swap it for.

Your turn

- Say it: merā, hamārā, āp kā, is kā, un kā
- Say it: the pair that differ — voh apne kamre meṅ hai, voh is ke kamre meṅ hai
- Say it: the tag — āp yahāṅ haiṅ, hai nā?
- Recall: two chapters back, the oblique of yih — is

Your turn: the distant band — four chapters of shapes, run cold

Four chapters ago no Urdu noun in this book changed shape, nothing was anywhere, nobody was more than one, and nobody but you and the person in front of you could own anything. Run the whole distance, cold.

Say these aloud:

- the four shapes — kamrā, kamre, kamre meṅ, kamroṅ meṅ
- and the fifth, for calling — kamro
- the demonstratives bending — is kamre meṅ, un kamroṅ meṅ
- the possessives agreeing — is kā kamrā, is kī māṅ, is ke kamre meṅ
- one's own — maiṅ apne kamre meṅ hūṅ, ham apne kamre meṅ haiṅ
- placed, with a colour — nīle kamre meṅ
- the pantry and the weather — chāy yahāṅ hai, garmī hai, hai nā?
- calling, then greeting, then checking — māṅ! salām. āp yahāṅ haiṅ, hai nā?
- to whom — is ko, un ko, māṅ ko

Before you move on

Does Urdu have a word for his? (No — the oblique plus کا.) When is اپنا compulsory? (When the owner is the subject.) What does the tag do that کیا does not? (Invite agreement.) And how do you call somebody? (By a kin term, with the plural ending -و.)

Chapter 27

Where You Are From

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a city, a country and a place, and I can say which place I am from.
>
> The book writes its first place name. With شہر, ملک, لاہور and the nisba -ی, a learner can finally answer the two questions every A1 speaking test asks after a name – and the three words come from Persian, Arabic and Sanskrit respectively, which is the layering of Urdu shown on a map.

27.1 شہر (shahr) — city

Say in the room. Then say here.

- Recall: two chapters back, the ending that means plural-and-a-postposition-is-coming — -oṅ

You'll want to know: شہر

اس شہر میں — is shahr meṅ — in this city.

پرانا شہر — purānā shahr — the old city.

Twenty-six chapters, and the largest place this book has named is a room. شہر is the first word in it for somewhere you could be from.

شہر does not end in -ا, so it does not change shape before the postposition — but اس does, exactly as it did with کمرے.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

شہر is Persian, and behind it stands Old Persian xsathra, meaning realm. It is the same word that ends the royal name Ardashir, and the same root as Sanskrit kshatra, "dominion" — which is where Kshatriya, the warrior caste, comes from.

So a city in Urdu is etymologically the place somebody rules, where کمرہ came in by sea from Portugal. Two words for two kinds of space, from two directions, a thousand years apart.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- shahr
- is shahr meṅ, then us shahr meṅ
- purānā shahr
- the two scales — is kamre meṅ, is shahr meṅ

Before you move on

What did شہر originally mean? (A realm — the place somebody rules.) Does it change shape before a postposition? (No — it does not end in -ا.) And what does change? (The demonstrative in front of it.)
Source: Unicode Arabic chart.

27.2 ملک (mulk) — country

Say in this city. Then say what happened to اس to let you say it.

You'll want to know: ملک

ہمارا ملک — hamārā mulk — our country.

اس ملک میں — is mulk meṅ — in this country.

With شہر and ملک together, a learner can finally answer the two questions every A1 speaking test opens with after a name: what city, and what country.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ملک is Arabic, from the three-consonant root m-l-k, to own, to rule. The same root gives malik, a king, and the surname Malik carried by millions of people from Morocco to Malaysia.
Now put it beside the last lesson. شہر is Persian for the seat of a realm; ملک is Arabic for the thing a king owns; and کمرہ is Portuguese for a vaulted room. Three words for three sizes of place, from three languages, and the reader has met all three in two chapters. That is what Urdu is: a Sanskrit-descended grammar with a Persian, Arabic and European vocabulary poured into it — the same layering that put khudā beside Allāh in chapter twelve.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hamārā mulk
- the two scales — is shahr meṅ, is mulk meṅ
- the three languages — kamrā Portuguese, shahr Persian, mulk Arabic
- voh us mulk meṅ hai

Before you move on

What does the root of ملک mean? (To own, to rule.) Which king shares it? (Malik.) And which three languages gave this book its three words for a place? (Portuguese, Persian and Arabic.)

27.3 لاہور (Lāhaur) — Lahore

Say city and country. Then say in this country.

You'll want to know: لاہور

میں لاہور میں ہوں — maiṅ Lāhaur meṅ hūṅ — I am in Lahore.

یہ لاہور ہے — yih Lāhaur hai — this is Lahore.

This book has written no place name at all — not a city, not a country, not even the name of the language it teaches. لاہور is the first.

Watch the sentence: لاہور میں, with the postposition after the name and no change to the name itself, because it does not end in -ا.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Lahore is traditionally Lavapuri, "the city of Lava" — Lava being a son of Rama in the Ramayana. So the great city of Urdu letters, where Iqbal wrote and where the language's printing houses stood, carries a Sanskrit name out of a Hindu epic.
That is the same layering the last two lessons showed in the vocabulary, showing up in the map. A Persian word for city, an Arabic word for country, and a Sanskrit name for the place itself.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- yih Lāhaur hai
- maiṅ Lāhaur meṅ hūṅ
- the three sizes — is kamre meṅ, Lāhaur meṅ, is mulk meṅ
- the name behind the name — Lavapuri

Before you move on

What language is the name لاہور from? (Sanskrit — Lavapuri.)
Does the name change before میں? (No — it does not end in -ا.)
And what is the first place name in this book? (This one.)

27.4 لاہوری (Lāhaurī) — from Lahore

Say this is Lahore. Then say heat and cold, and listen to how both of them end.

You'll want to know: the ending that makes an origin

میں لاہوری ہوں — maiṅ Lāhaurī hūṅ — I am from Lahore.

Add -ی to a place name and you have an adjective meaning belonging to that place. That is the whole rule, and this book has already taught you the ending twice without saying so: garmī and sardī are garm and sard — hot and cold — wearing the same -ی. (Those four stay in romanization: garm needs gāf and sard needs dāl, and the script ladder has reached neither.)

Grammar Lens: the ending that became a surname

This is the Arabic nisba, borrowed into Persian and then into Urdu, and once you can see it you will see it everywhere:

name	means
Bukhārī	the man from Bukhara
Ghazālī	the man from Ghazala
Lāhaurī	the one from Lahore

For most of Islamic history a person's last name was their place. The nisba is a naming system, not merely a suffix, and Urdu inherited it whole.
One warning: unlike کالا and ہمارا, a nisba adjective ends in -ی already and does not change for gender. A man and a woman are both لاہوری.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- maiṅ Lāhaurī hūṅ
- the ending you already had — garm, garmī; sard, sardī
- the surnames — Bukhārī, Ghazālī, Lāhaurī
- it does not change for gender — voh Lāhaurī hai, either way

Before you move on

What does adding -ی to a place name do? (Makes an adjective meaning *from there.) Which two words in this book already carried it? (Garmī and sardī.) And does it change for gender? (No.)

27.5 Where you are from

Three words for three sizes of place arrived in this chapter, from three different languages. Name them, and name the language each came from.

Your turn

- Say it: shahr, mulk, Lāhaur
- Say it: maiṅ Lāhaur meṅ hūṅ, then maiṅ Lāhaurī hūṅ
- Say it: the question this answers — āp kahāṅ …?
- Recall: two chapters back, the ending that means plural, and something is coming — -oṅ

Your turn: the distant band — five chapters, and the whole introduction

Five chapters ago this book could introduce a learner and could not say where they were, where they lived, what belonged to whom, or how many of anything there were. Put the whole introduction together, cold.

Say these aloud:

- greeting and calling — māṅ! salām

- the name — merā nām … hai
- where you are — maiṅ Lāhaur meṅ hūṅ
- where you are from — maiṅ Lāhaurī hūṅ
- the country — hamārā mulk
- the room, all five shapes — kamrā, kamre, kamre meṅ, kamroṅ meṅ, kamro
- near and far — is shahr meṅ, us mulk meṅ, yahāṅ, vahāṅ
- whose — is kā, un kā, hamārā, and apnā when it is your own
- to whom — is ko, un ko, māṅ ko
- and check it — āp Lāhaurī haiṅ, hai nā?
- offer something, placed — chāy yahāṅ hai

Before you move on

What turns a place name into from there? (The -ی.) Which three languages gave this chapter its three words? (Persian, Arabic, Sanskrit.) What must every noun do before a postposition? (Take the oblique.) And what is the one rule that all five of these chapters have been about? (A word changes shape when something follows it.)

Chapter 28

One to Five, By the Road Urdu Did Not Borrow

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say, hear, read and write the Urdu numbers one to five, name the English cousin of each, and say why none of them came in from Persian.
>
> Five numbers, five Indo-European roots, no new letter and no Persian borrowing – retrieved shuffled rather than recited.

28.1 ایک — one, and the road this book keeps calling the other one

> Name the two roads a word can take into Urdu: inherited from Sanskrit through Prakrit, or borrowed from Persian.

You'll want to know first — one word

> ایک — ek — one

Twenty-two chapters, and not one number. That has a price the book has been paying in silence: no age, no cost, no telephone number, no quantity, no time. It stops here.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ایک continues Sanskrit eka through Prakrit, by way of a doubled ekka* (CDIAL 2462), from Indo-European oywos*, "one" — the root behind English one, Latin ūnus and Greek oîos.
This book has spent chapters on words that came the OTHER way: garmī and sardī are Persian borrowings, sitting in Urdu beside inherited words that mean much the same. Numbers are where that stopped. Persian's yek was as available as Persian's sard was, and Urdu declined it — every one of the first ten numbers is the inherited form.
That is worth holding on to, because it makes the whole count predictable in one direction: if you know a Sanskrit or Hindi number you already know the Urdu one, and if you know only the Persian one you do not.

Your turn

- Say it: ek — one
- Connect: ek ← Sanskrit eka ← oywos* → English one
- Contrast: Persian yek is the same root by a different road, and Urdu did not borrow it

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: ایک; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

28.2 دو — two, and a spelling that has been hiding in plain sight

Say ek and which road it came by. Then say friend.

You'll want to know first — one word

دو — do — two

Two letters, and both of them have been on the page since the friend lesson — they open dost, "friend". A search of this whole book for دو finds it twice and both times inside dost, which is exactly why a machine could report the word as present when the number had never been taught.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دو continues Sanskrit dva (CDIAL 6648) through Prakrit do, from Indo-European dwóh₁*, "two." English two, Latin duo and Greek dýo are the same word.
Say do and two one after the other. Nothing there has to be learned; it has to be recognised.

Your turn

- Say it: do — two
- Connect: do ← Sanskrit dvi ← dwóh₁* → English two
- Run through: ek, do

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: دو; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

28.3 تین — three, and how much of a word a language can keep Say do and its English cousin.

You'll want to know first — one word

تین — tīn — three

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

تین continues Sanskrit trīṇi, a form of tri-, "three" (CDIAL 5994), from Indo-European treyes*, "three." English three, Latin trēs and Greek treîs are the same word.
Now set it beside the Persian for three, se. Both descend from treyes*. Urdu's form still has the t; Persian's has lost the t AND the r, leaving one syllable. Same root, two roads, and one of them wore the word down much further.

An English speaker hears tīn and gets three for nothing. Hearing se as three takes a moment.

Your turn

- Say it: tīn — three
- Connect: tīn ← Sanskrit tri ← treyes* → English three
- Run through: ek, do, tīn

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: تین; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

28.4 چار — four, and one consonant's three fates

Say tīn, say which sound it keeps that Persian lost, then say do.

You'll want to know first — one word

چار — chār — four

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چار continues Sanskrit catvāraḥ (CDIAL 4655), from Indo-European kʷetwóres*, "four."
The opening kʷ* is where this gets interesting, because three branches did three different things with it. Latin kept it whole: quattuor. English lost the lip-rounding and softened the k to f: four. Indo-Aryan pushed it forward to a ch, which is what you are saying. One sound, three descendants, and the numbers still line up.

Your turn

- Say it: chār — four
- Connect: chār ← Sanskrit catvāraḥ ← kwetwores* → Latin quattuor, English four

- Run through: ek, do, tīn, chār

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: چار; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

28.5 پانچ — five, and a word you have met on a map

Say chār, and what three languages did with the sound it starts from.

You'll want to know first — one word

پانچ — pānch — five

The ن in the middle is nasalising the vowel before it rather than standing as a full n of its own — the behaviour this book named several chapters ago.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پانچ continues Sanskrit pañca (CDIAL 7655), from Indo-European pénk*^{w}e, "five." Greek pénte, Latin quīnque and English five are the same word.
An English speaker has almost certainly met it already without being told. Punjab is panj + āb, "five waters" — the land of the five rivers — and the fruit drink punch is named for its five ingredients. The number was in the reader's language before this lesson was.

Your turn

- Say it: pānch — five
- Connect: pānch ← Sanskrit pañca ← penkwe* → Greek pénte, English five
- Run through: ek, do, tīn, chār, pānch — the whole first five

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: پانچ; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

28.6 Payoff — one to five, out of order

Say pānch, then ek, then which of the two roads both came by.

Your turn

A run learned forwards is a rhyme. Break it four ways.

1. Hear each of the five named singly and out of order, and say what it is.
2. Count backwards from pānch to ek.
3. Read it: the five printed shuffled — دو تین، چار، ایک، پانچ، — then say each
4. Write it: all five from dictation — every letter in all five has been on the page for chapters; the tranche adds no new sign at all

Then say each number's English cousin: one, two, three, four, five. All five have one, and that is not a coincidence — it is the same set of words, five thousand years apart, arriving by the inherited road rather than the Persian one.

Chapter 29

Six to Ten, and the Change That Happened Next Door

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count aloud from one to ten in Urdu, and explain why Persian says haft where Urdu says sat.
>
> Five more numbers with no new letter, the Iranian s-to-h change seen from the side that did not undergo it, and the whole run of ten shuffled.

29.1 چھ — six, and a puff of air

Count one to five, then five to one.

You'll want to know first — one word

چھ — chhe — six

Two signs and the shortest number in the whole count. The first is the چ of چار; the second is the two-eyed ھ that puts a puff of air on the consonant in front of it.

Listen for the breath: chār moves nothing, chhe pushes air out. The tongue does the same thing in both; the lungs do not.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چھ continues Sanskrit ṣaṣ, through a variant kṣaṭ* that CDIAL reconstructs for the ch- forms (CDIAL 12803), from Indo-European sweks*, "six." English six, Latin sex and Greek héx are the same word.

Your turn

- Say it: chhe — six
- Test: hand at the mouth — chār still, chhe breathed
- Connect: chhe ← Sanskrit ṣaṣ ← sweks* → English six

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: چھ; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

29.2 سات — seven, and a change that happened next door

Say chhe and its English cousin.

You'll want to know first — one word

سات — sāt — seven

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

سات continues Sanskrit sapta (CDIAL 13139), from Indo-European septm*, "seven." Latin septem, English seven and Greek heptá are the same word.

Now the neighbour. Persian's seven is haft, and it is the same word — but Iranian turned every Indo-European s at the front of a word into an h, so sapta became hapta became haft. Indo-Aryan did not, so sapta stayed sāt.

This is the sharpest illustration in the book of the two roads. A word that came into Urdu FROM Persian carries that change; a word Urdu inherited does not. The numbers are inherited, and the s is the proof.

Your turn

- Say it: sāt — seven
- Connect: sāt ← Sanskrit sapta ← septm* → Latin septem
- Contrast: Persian haft — same word, with the s turned to h

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: سات; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

29.3 آٹھ — eight, and a sound Europe never had

Say sāt, and what Persian did to its first sound.

You'll want to know first — one word

آٹھ — āṭh — eight

Three signs: آ, the alif with its wave; ٹ, the retroflex; ھ, the breath. The middle one is made with the tongue curled back against the roof of the mouth, not against the teeth.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

آٹھ continues Sanskrit aṣṭā (CDIAL 941), from Indo-European oktow*, "eight." Latin octō, Greek oktṓ and English eight are the same word. The retroflex is where the family resemblance stops. Latin and English both have a plain t or ct here; the curled-back consonant is South Asian, and it is one of the sounds that makes an Indo-Aryan language sound like itself rather than like a European one. Eight is a good place to practise it, because the word is short and the sound is stressed.

Your turn

- Say it: āṭh — eight, with the tongue curled back
- Connect: āṭh ← Sanskrit aṣṭa ← oktow* → Latin octō
- Run through: chhe, sāt, āṭh

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: آٹھ; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

29.4 نو — nine, and a spelling that carries two words

Say āṭh, with the tongue in the right place, and its Latin cousin.

You'll want to know first — one word

نو — nau — nine

Two letters, like the word for two. The second is the same و that closes it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

نو continues Sanskrit nava, "nine" (CDIAL 6984), from Indo-European h1newn*, "nine." Latin novem, English nine and Greek ennéa are the same word.
There is a trap here worth meeting once. The same two letters, نو, also spell the Persian borrowing nau, "new" — as in nau roz, the new year. That is a DIFFERENT root that happens to arrive at the same spelling by the other road. Only the sentence tells you which is meant. That is the two roads colliding on one page, and it is the reason this book keeps naming them.

Your turn

- Say it: nau — nine
- Connect: nau ← Sanskrit nava ← h1newn* → Latin novem
- Run through: sāt, āṭh, nau

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: نو; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

29.5 دس — ten

Say nau, and the other word its two letters can spell.

You'll want to know first — one word

دس — das — ten

Two letters again, and the first is two's د.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دس continues Sanskrit daśa (CDIAL 6227), from Indo-European dekm*, "ten." Latin decem — and through it decimal and December — English ten and Greek déka are the same word. das is the first number in this book that a shop is likely to say out loud. Very little is priced below ten, which is why a course stopping at five could name amounts nobody charges.

Your turn

- Say it: das — ten
- Connect: das ← Sanskrit daśa ← dekm* → Latin decem
- Run through: āṭh, nau, das

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: دس; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

29.6 Payoff — counting aloud to ten

Count one to five, then say which of the two roads all five came by.

Your turn

1. Count aloud, one to ten, without a model — the whole of it, in one breath if you can.
2. Count backwards from das to ek.

3. Hear all ten named singly and out of order, and say each.
4. Read it: the ten printed shuffled, then say each
5. Write it: all ten from dictation — the tranche has added no new letter; every sign in all ten words was already on the page

Then say the English cousin of each. All ten have one.

Before you move on

Chapter 30

Twenty, a Hundred, and the Nine Words That Are Not Here

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count aloud, say twenty and a hundred, and say why Urdu's eleven to nineteen are nine separate words rather than a rule.
>
> The two round amounts a price actually names, the pair a noisy counter confuses, and an explicit account of what the teens cost and why they wait.

30.1 بیس — twenty, and the nine words that are not in this chapter

Count one to ten, then say ten on its own.

You'll want to know first — one word

بیس — bīs — twenty

بیس goes back through Sanskrit viṃśati, "twenty" (CDIAL 11616), to the Indo-European word for twenty, the same word behind Latin vīgintī and, through it, English vigesimal.

Grammar Lens: what is NOT here, and why

Eleven to nineteen are missing from this book on purpose, and the reason is a fact about Urdu rather than a shortage of pages.
Some languages build their teens. Persian, next door, puts a unit in front of its word for ten and stops: yâz-dah, si-dah, chahâr-dah — nine numbers from one rule.
Urdu does not. gyārah, bārah, terah, chaudah, pandrah, solah, satrah, aṭhārah, unnīs — the ten is worn down differently in almost every one, and the unit with it. They are nine words, not one pattern, and the same is true of every number up to ninety-nine.
So they belong to a tranche of their own rather than to this one, and saying so is more useful than pretending a rule exists. What this book gives you instead is the frame the teens will hang on: ek to das below, bīs above.

Your turn

- Say it: bīs — twenty
- Connect: bīs ← Sanskrit vimshati ← wikmtih* → Latin vīgintī
- Say why: Urdu's teens are nine words, not one rule

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: بیس; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

30.2 سو — a hundred

Say bīs, then nau, then the other word نو can spell.

You'll want to know first — one word

سو — sau — a hundred

Two letters: the س that opens seven and the و that closes nine. The largest number in this book is the shortest word in it.

Say نو and سو one after the other. One consonant apart, and a hundred apart in value — which is exactly where a price is misheard at a busy counter, so drill them as a pair.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

سو continues Sanskrit śata (CDIAL 12278), from Indo-European kmtom*, "hundred." Latin centum, Greek hekatón and English hundred are the same word. Anybody who has read a per cent has met its cousin.

Your turn

- Say it: sau — a hundred
- Pair: nau and sau — one consonant, a hundredfold
- Run through: das, bīs, sau — the three round amounts

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: سو; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

30.3 Payoff — counting aloud, and the three round amounts

Count one to ten, then say why eleven to nineteen are not in this book yet.

Your turn

Four skills, scored separately.

1. Count aloud one to ten without a model, then say bīs and sau.
2. Listening. Hear twelve amounts named singly and out of order. Write it: each amount in figures of your own language
3. Read it: the twelve amounts, printed and shuffled, then say each
4. Writing. Write it: all twelve from dictation, shuffled

Then say the three amounts a shop is likeliest to name — das, bīs, sau — and the pair a noisy counter confuses: nau and sau.

An A1 examiner asks a candidate their age, the price of something and a telephone number. Before this slice none of the three was reachable in this book. Two of them are now, and the third waits on the digits.

Chapter 31

The Ten Urdu Digits

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ↙ pen (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read and write the ten Urdu digits, read a price, a bus number and a telephone number off the page, and say which way a number runs inside a right-to-left line.
>
> Ten signs across four lessons, grouped by what makes each set hard: the reversed direction, the one-tooth pair, the three shapes Arabic draws differently, and the mirror pair.

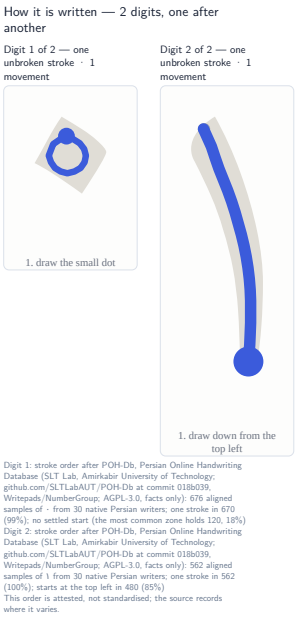
31.1 • ۱ — two digits, and a direction that reverses

Which way does an Urdu line run? Count aloud to ten.

Script — the shapes, and the direction



How these digits are written, one after another, stroke by stroke: ۰, ۱

۰ — sifr, zero ۱ — ek, one

Urdu has its own ten digit signs, and a price ticket, a bus number, a page number and a telephone number in Pakistan are written in them. A reader who can say ek and cannot read ۱ still cannot read a price.

۰ is a dot, not a ring. Fix that first: a European eye reads a dot as a decimal point, and Urdu's nine is the ring.

Now the part no earlier chapter of this book has had to say. Numbers run left to right, inside a line that runs right to left. Ten is ۱۰ — one, then zero, in the order English uses — while the words on either side of it move the other way. The page changes direction at the number and changes back after it.

Your turn

- Write it: ۰ — a dot; ۱ — a stroke
- Read it: ۱۰ — das, ten, left to right

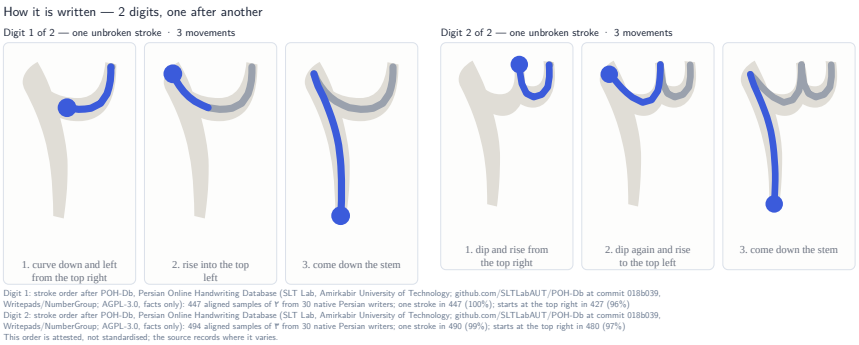
Before you move on

Sources: Unicode Arabic chart; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

31.2 ۲ ۳ — one tooth apart

Write • and ۱, then read ۱•.

Script — the shapes



How these digits are written, one after another, stroke by stroke: ۲, ۳

۲ — do, two ۳ — tīn, three

۳ is ۲ with one more tooth, and that is the whole difference. It is small enough that the two have to be written as a pair rather than one at a time: say do and tīn aloud as the hand makes them, and the shapes stop competing.

Your turn

- Write it: ۲, then ۳ beside it
- Read it: ۱۲, ۱۳, ۲۳, left to right

Before you move on

Sources: Unicode Arabic chart; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

31.3 ۴ ۵ ۶ — the three Urdu keeps for itself

Write ۴ and ۳, and say which has the extra tooth.

Script — the shapes

۴ — chār, four ۵ — pānch, five ۶ — chhe, six

These three are why this chapter exists as more than a list.

Urdu and Arabic share an alphabet, letter for letter, and a reader of this book has spent twenty-five chapters on that shared inheritance. The digits are where the sharing stops. Seven of the ten are drawn the same way in both; ۴, ۵ and ۶ are not, and Arabic writes those three with quite different shapes.

So a reader who picked the digits up from an Arabic book will misread a Pakistani price ticket at exactly these three places and nowhere else. If you drill three of the ten harder than the rest, drill these.

Your turn

- Write it: ۴, ۵, ۶, saying chār, pānch, chhe
- Read it: ۱۴, ۱۵, ۱۶, left to right

Before you move on

Sources: Unicode Arabic chart; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

31.4 ۷ ۸ ۹ — a mirror pair, and the ring

Write ۴, ۵, ۶ — the three Arabic draws differently.

Script — the shapes

۷ — sāt, seven ۸ — āṭh, eight ۹ — nau, nine

۷ and ۸ are mirror images of each other, one opening upward and one downward. Write them as a pair, every time, and the mirror stops being a problem — the same trick that worked on ۴ and ۳.

۹ is a ring with a tail, and this is where a dot-shaped zero earns its keep. Had • been a ring too, the page would carry two rings and no way to separate them.

Ten signs, four lessons, and the set is closed.

Your turn

- Write it: ۷ and ۸ as a pair, then ۹
- Run through: ۰ ۱ ۲ ۳ ۴ ۵ ۶ ۷ ۸ ۹ once, slowly

Before you move on

Sources: Unicode Arabic chart; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

31.5 Payoff — reading the figures

Count aloud to ten, then say which way digits run inside an Urdu line.

Your turn

1. Read it: all ten signs shuffled, then say each as an Urdu word
2. Read it: ۱۰, ۲۰ and ۱۰۰, then say each — das, bīs, sau
3. Hear ten amounts named. Write it: each in Urdu figures
4. Write it: the ten signs from dictation, out of order, checking ۴, ۵ and ۶ against the models rather than against memory
5. Read it: a seven-figure telephone number aloud, one digit at a time

An A1 examiner asks for an age, a price and a telephone number. All three are now reachable. What is not: ۱۱ to ۱۹, whose words are nine irregular forms rather than a rule, so the figure can be read and its name cannot yet be said.

Chapter 32

Which One: the Ordinals

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say first, second, third and fourth, and build the ordinal of any number I can count to.
>
> Three irregular forms at the bottom of the series and one ending above them, with the break at first set against the same break in English.

32.1 پہلا — first

Read it: ۱, ۵ and ۱۰, then say ek

You'll want to know first — one word

پہلا — pehlā — first

Counting says how many. Ordering says which one — and a floor number, a date on a notice, a queue, a chapter heading and "the first bus" all need the second. Twelve numbers do not give you one of them.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پہلا does NOT come from ایک. It descends from prathilla*, a form CDIAL reconstructs beside prathila*, "first", built on Sanskrit prathama, "first, foremost" (CDIAL 8652): a separate word.
English does the same thing: first is not built from one, and second is not built from two, while third, fourth and fifth fall into line behind their numbers. Urdu breaks in the same place, for the same reason — the words people say most often wear away from their families first.

Your turn

- Say it: pehlā — first
- Contrast: ek counts, pehlā orders
- Compare: English one/first breaks in the same place

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: پہلا; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

32.2 دوسرا and تیسرا — second, third, and the ending

Say pehlā and why it is not built from ek. Then say do and tīn.

You'll want to know first — two words and an ending

دوسرا — dūsrā — second

تیسرا — tīsrā — third

Look at what came back. دو is inside dūsrā; تین is inside tīsrā. The number returns, and an ending -rā is added to it.

So the series breaks at first and mends at second — one word out of line, then a pattern. English breaks one word later and mends at third; the shape is the same and only the seam moved.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دوسرا تیسرا (dūsrā tīsrā) are inherited. CDIAL lists dūsrā, "second", under a reconstructed dviḥsara*, "twofold", and tīsrā, "third", under triḥsara*, "triple", forms built on Sanskrit dvis, "twice", and tris, "thrice" (CDIAL 6676, 6018).

Your turn

- Say it: dūsrā — second; tīsrā — third
- Split: do + -srā, tīn + -srā
- Run through: pehlā, dūsrā, tīsrā

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: دوسرا; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

32.3 چوتھا — fourth, and the ending that runs all the way up

Say dūsrā and tīsrā, and the number inside each.

You'll want to know first — one word, then the rule above it

چوتھا — chauthā — fourth

چار is still audible in it, bent at the vowel.

Above four the language settles. From five upward Urdu adds -vāṅ to the plain number and stops bending: pānchvāṅ, "fifth"; dasvāṅ, "tenth"; bīsvāṅ, "twentieth".

So the whole series is three irregular forms at the bottom — pehlā, dūsrā, tīsrā, with chauthā half a step out — and one ending for everything above them. Twelve numbers and one ending is twelve ordinals.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چوتھا (chauthā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from Sanskrit caturtha, "fourth", built on catur-, "four" (CDIAL 4600).

Your turn

- Say it: chauthā — fourth
- Build: pānch + -vāṅ → pānchvāṅ, fifth
- Build: das + -vāṅ → dasvāṅ, tenth

Before you move on

Sources: Wiktionary: چوتھا; Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

32.4 Payoff — which one

Count aloud to ten. Read it: ۷, ۳۰ and ۱۰۰, then say which way the digits ran

Your turn

1. Say the first four in order, then out of order.
2. Build, do not recall: fifth, seventh, tenth, twentieth, hundredth.
3. Say which of the series is not built from its number at all, and say what English does in the same place.
4. Use one: name the floor a room is on, and the day of a month a notice gives.
5. Say what the ordinals still cannot reach, and why — the same nine irregular teens that the cardinals could not reach either.

Before you move on

Source: Omniglot, Numbers in Urdu.

32.5 Close the numeral slice

Say the first four ordinals, then count one to five.

Your turn

Everything this slice added, with nothing in front of you.

1. Count aloud one to ten, then say bīs and sau.
2. Write it: the ten figures shuffled, checking ۴, ۵ and ۶ against the models rather than against memory

3. Say the first four ordinals, then build fifth, tenth and twentieth.

4. Say the two things this slice deliberately did NOT give you, and why: the nine irregular teens, and the ordinals built on them.

Then say what the whole slice cost the hand: no new letter at all. Every sign in every one of the twelve number words was already on the page; only the ten figures were new. And say which road all twelve came by.

Chapter 33

Reading — Six Words, Six Lines, and a First Paragraph

Modes: eyes (3) Hands-free start: none of the 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read Urdu words cold, read a meeting in the order it happens, and hold a whole paragraph without translating it word by word.
> Fifty-one words of Urdu in a row with no new word in them, carried by the one sentence shape the book has taught most: something is something, with ہے last.

33.1 (reading) — six words, nothing said first

You have written every letter in every one of these. Not one word is new, and not one shape inside them is new either.

What is new is that nobody says them before you read them.

Read this

لاہور ماں کمرہ شہر کام پانی

Read down the list once. Do not take each word apart — look at the whole shape and let it arrive.
Again, and notice which came at once and which you had to unpick. Both are fine. The difference is what practice removes.

What to know first

Urdu joins its letters, so a word is not five shapes standing in a row. It is one shape.

That is why reading a word cold is a different skill from writing it. Writing, you make the joins one at a time and know what is coming. Reading, the joins are already made and the whole word has to land at once.

Six is enough for one sitting.

Your turn

- Say it: the six words down the list, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
What was new? (Nobody said them first. You read them.)

33.2 (reading) — six lines, in the order they happen

The last lesson gave you single words. These are whole turns.

You have said every one of them. None is new.

Read this

نہیں شکریہ ہوں۔ یہاں میں ہیں؟ کیسے آپ ہے؟ کیا نام کا آپ سلام

Read it: the six lines down once, without stopping
Read it: the six lines again, and this time hear that these are not six separate lines
They are the opening of a meeting, in the order it happens.

What to know first

Two of these are questions and you can see it before you read a word of them, because the question mark sits at the end where Urdu puts it.

Spoken, a voice told you which turn was whose. On the page nothing does. You worked it out from where each line sits, which is most of what reading a conversation is.

Six lines, and the order is the whole lesson.

Your turn

- Say it: the six lines, once, in order, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six lines were new? (None.)
What told you which were questions? (The mark at the end.)

33.3 (reading) — the first paragraph

Six words, then six lines. Now a whole paragraph.

Thirty-seven words, and every letter inside them is one you can already write.

Read this

نیلا آسمان ہے۔ پانی میں کمرے ہے۔ کمرہ ہمارا یہ ہے۔ ماں میری یہ
کام یہاں ہے۔ شہر ایک لاہور ہیں۔ میں لاہور ہم ہے۔ کالا وہ ہے۔
شکریہ۔ اور سلام نہیں۔ ہے؟ پرانا یہ کیا ہے۔

Read it: the passage once without stopping; do not translate as you go — let the sentences arrive
Read it: the passage again, and notice how little work it took

What to know first

Almost every line here is the same sentence: something is something. ہے ends nearly all of them.

That is what makes a first paragraph possible. You know the shape of each line before you reach it, so your attention goes to the two or three words in the middle that change.

Then one line breaks the pattern, and you can see it break before you read it: the ninth ends in a question mark, and the tenth answers it in one word.

This is the first whole paragraph the book has asked you to hold at once, and it works because every piece was paid for.

Your turn

- Say it: the paragraph aloud, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many words in that paragraph were new? (None.)
Which word ends nearly every line? (ہے۔)

34.1 ب (be) — the letter that opens بولنا

Before the new one: write پ and و once each, and name them.

Now say بولنا (bolnā), "to speak". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ب

ب — be, the sound b.

It opens بولنا (bolnā), "to speak". You already write پ, the shallow boat with three dots beneath it. ب is the same boat with one dot below.

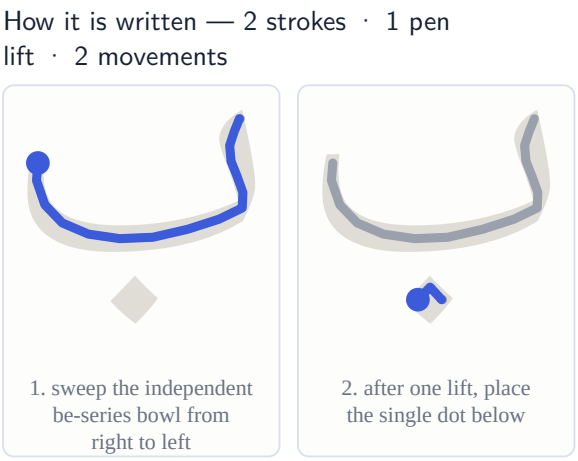
Writing: ب



Stroke order after Zer o Zabar, Be, kāf, and short vowels, independent ب handwriting animation and Be instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026) This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ب is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: sweep the independent be-series bowl from right to left
- 2. after one lift, place the single dot below — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 1.

Stroke order is one attested teaching order; hands and teachers vary. Source: Zer o Zabar, Be, kāf, and short vowels, independent ب handwriting animation and Be instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026).

Your turn

- Look: at بولنا and point at ب inside it
- Trace it: ب three times, saying b as you finish each one
- Write it: و, then ب, from memory
- Read it: بولنا aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ب? (be, b.) Which word did it come from? (بولنا, bolnā, “to speak”.)

34.2 ت (te) — the letter that opens تم

Before the new one: write و and ب once each, and name them.

Now say تم (tum), “you (familiar)”. You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you’ll notice: ت

ت — te, the sound t, with the tongue against the teeth.

It opens تم (tum), the familiar “you”. The same boat again, now with two dots above.

Writing: ت

How it is written — 3 strokes · 2 pen lifts · 3 movements

- Read it: تم aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ت? (te, t.) Which word did it come from? (تم, tum, "you (familiar)".)

34.3 ٹ (ṭe) — the letter that opens ٹھیک

Before the new one: write ب and ت once each, and name them.

Now say ٹھیک (ṭhīk), "fine, well". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ٹ

ٹ — ṭe, a t made with the tongue curled back.

It opens ٹھیک (ṭhīk), "fine". Say tum, then ṭhīk: the first t touches the teeth, the second is struck further back. Urdu marks that curled-back sound with a small mark above the boat, where ت has its two dots. The dot under the romanization (ṭ) marks the same thing.

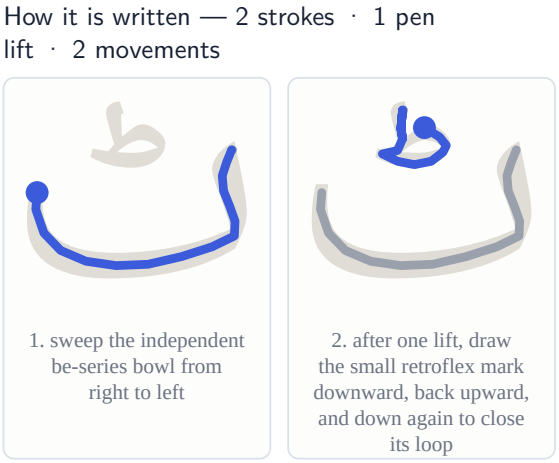
Writing: ٹ



How ٹ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: sweep the independent be-series bowl from right to left
- 2. after one lift, draw the small retroflex mark downward, back upward, and down again to close its loop — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 1.

35.1 ج (jīm) — the letter that opens جی

> Before the new one: write ت and ٹ once each, and name them.
>
> Now say ہاں جی (jī hã̃), "yes". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ج

ج — jīm, the sound j.

It opens جی (jī) in ہاں جی, "yes", from the first chapter. A hooked head, a deep bowl, and one dot below.

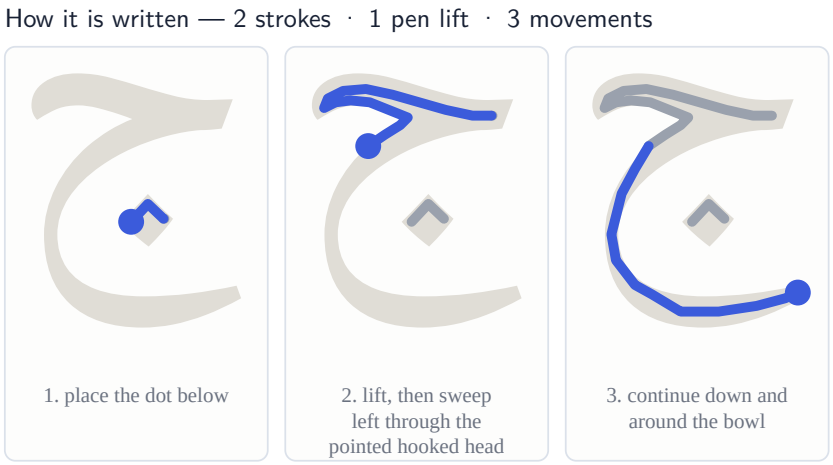
Writing: ج



Stroke order after Zer o Zabar, Te, mim, jim, che, and more diacritics, independent ج handwriting animation and flat-head insight (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

35.2 ح (baṛī he) — the letter that opens حافظ

Before the new one: write ٹ and ج once each, and name them.

Now say حافظ (hāfiz), "guardian". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ح

ح — baṛī he, "big he", the sound h.

It opens حافظ (hāfiz), the second half of حافظ خدا. Urdu already has an h, ہ, which you write; this one came in with Arabic words and sounds the same. It is the hook-and-bowl skeleton of ج, with no dots.

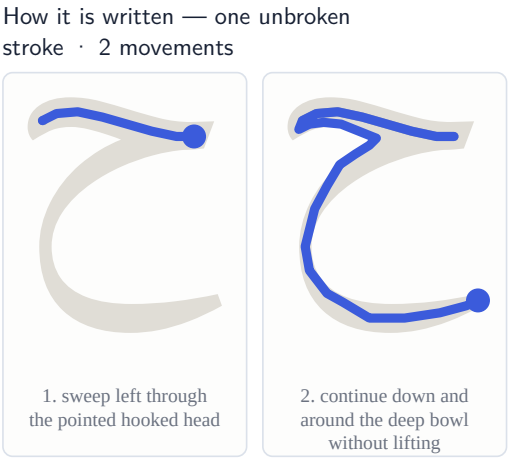
Writing: ح



How ح is written, stroke by stroke

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ح? (baṛī he, h.) Which word did it come from? (حافظ, hāfiz, "guardian".)

35.3 خ (khe) — the letter that opens خدا

Before the new one: write ج and ح once each, and name them.

Now say خدا (khudā), "God". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: خ

خ — khe, a kh scraped at the back of the throat.

It opens خدا (khudā), the first half of حافظ خدا. The same skeleton as ح, with one dot above.

Writing: خ

Which letter is this — خ? (khe, kh.) Which word did it come from? (خدا, khudā, "God".)

35.4 چ (che) — the letter inside سوچنا

Before the new one: write ح and خ once each, and name them.

Now say سوچنا (sochnā), "to think". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: چ

چ — che, the sound ch.

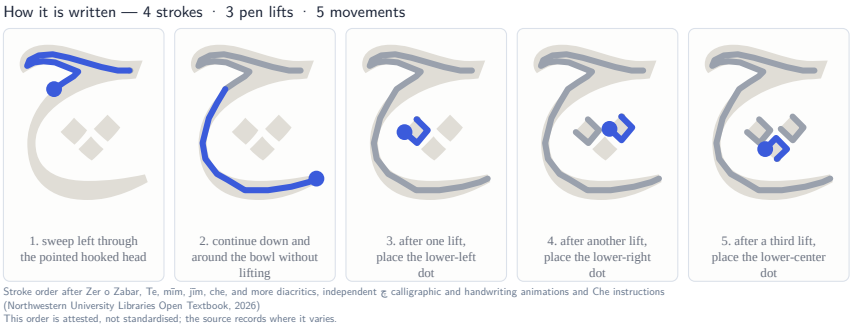
It is inside سوچنا (sochnā), "to think". The same skeleton once more, with three dots below: one letter, four sounds, and the dots decide which.

Writing: چ



How چ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: sweep left through the pointed hooked head

- 2. continue down and around the bowl without lifting
- 3. after one lift, place the lower-left dot

36.1 د (dāl) — the letter inside خدا

> Before the new one: write خ and چ once each, and name them.
>
> Now say خدا (khudā), "God". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: د

د — dāl, the sound d.

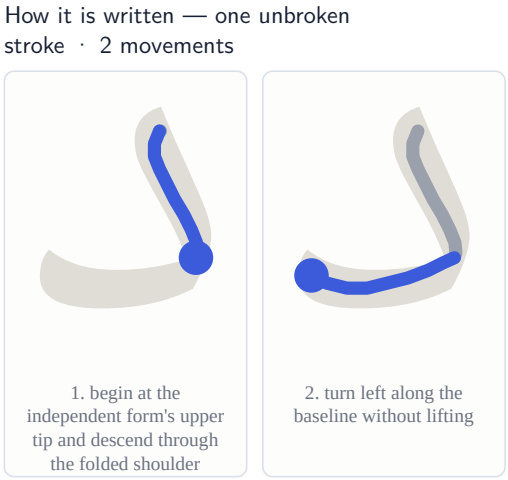
It is inside خدا (khudā). Like ا and و, which you already write, د refuses to join leftward: it joins the letter before it, never the one after.

Writing: د



How د is written, stroke by stroke

36.2 ڑ (ṛe) — the letter inside پڑھنا

Before the new one: write چ and د once each, and name them.

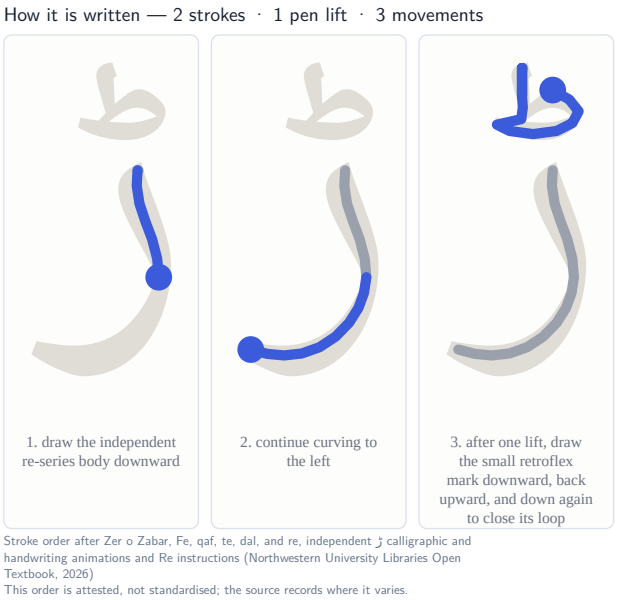
Now say پڑھنا (paṛhnā), "to read". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ڑ

ڑ — ṛe, an r made by curling the tongue back and flicking it forward.

It is inside پڑھنا (paṛhnā), "to read". It is ر with the same small curled-back mark you put on ٹ. Urdu uses one mark for one idea: tongue curled back.

Writing: ڑ



How ڑ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: draw the independent re-series body downward
- 2. without lifting, continue curving to the left
- 3. after one lift, draw the small retroflex mark downward, back upward, and down again to close its loop — and only now lift

36.3 ھ (do-chashmī he) — the two-eyed he inside ٹھیک

Before the new one: write ہ and ڑ once each, and name them.

Now say ٹھیک (ṭhīk), "fine, well". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ھ

ھ — do-chashmī he, "two-eyed he".

It is inside ٹھیک (ṭhīk) and پڑھنا (paṛhnā). It almost never makes a sound of its own. It rides on the letter before it and adds a puff of breath: ٹ + ھ is ṭh, ڑ + ھ is ṛh. Two round loops, the "two eyes".

Writing: ھ

36.4 گ (gāf) — the letter that opens گرمی

Before the new one: write ڑ and ھ once each, and name them.

Now say گرمی (garmī), "heat". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: گ

گ — gāf, the sound g.

It opens گرمی (garmī), "heat". It is ک, which you already write, with a second slash above the first.

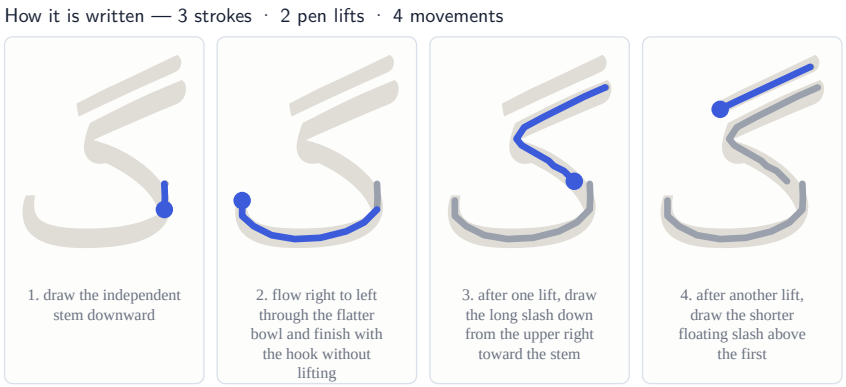
Writing: گ



How گ is written, stroke by stroke

Stroke order is one attested teaching order; hands and teachers vary. Source: Zer o Zabar, Fe, qāf, ṭe, ḍāl, and ṛe, independent ف calligraphic and handwriting animations and Fe instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026).

Your turn

- Look: at حافظ and point at ف inside it
- Trace it: ف three times, saying f as you finish each one
- Write it: گ, then ف, from memory
- Read it: حافظ aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ف? (fe, f.) Which word did it come from? (حافظ, hāfiz, "guardian".)

37.2 ق (qāf) — the letter that opens قميض

Before the new one: write گ and ف once each, and name them.

Now say قميض (qamīz), "shirt". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ق

ق — qāf, a k made far back in the throat.

It opens قميض (qamīz), "shirt". Its head is the head of ف, from the last lesson, but it carries two dots, and its bowl dips below the line.

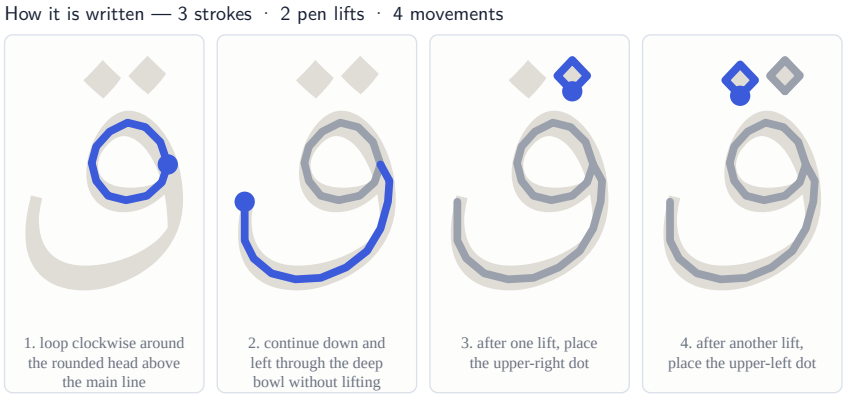
Writing: ق



How ق is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: loop clockwise around the rounded head above the main line
- 2. continue down and left through the deep bowl without lifting
- 3. after one lift, place the upper-right dot
- 4. after another lift, place the upper-left dot — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 2.

Your turn

- Look: at قميض and point at ق inside it
- Trace it: ق three times, saying q as you finish each one
- Write it: ف, then ق, from memory
- Read it: قميض aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ق? (qāf, q.) Which word did it come from? (قميض, qamīz, "shirt".)

37.3 ض (zuād) — the letter that ends قميض

Before the new one: write ف and ق once each, and name them.

Now say قميض (qamīz), "shirt". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ض

ض — zuād, the sound z.

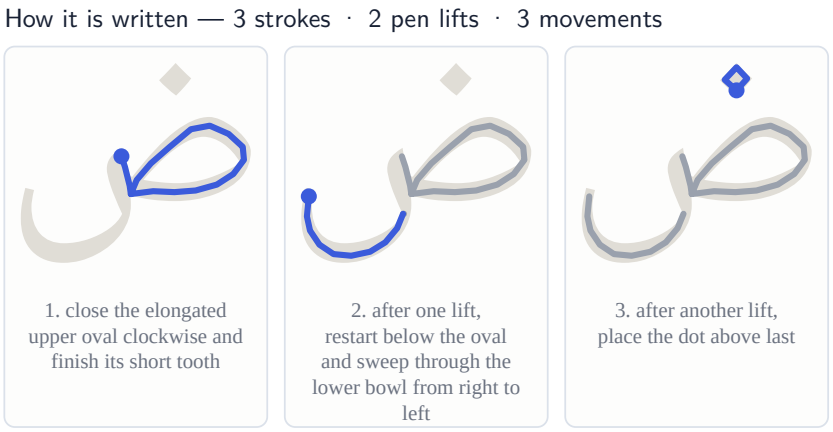
It ends قمیض (qamīz). An oval with a short tooth, a bowl, and one dot above. Urdu writes z with more than one letter; ض is the one that came with Arabic words like this.

Writing: ض



Stroke order after Zer o Zabar, Khe, ze, zal, swad, and zwad, independent ض calligraphic and handwriting animations and Zwad instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ض is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: close the elongated upper oval clockwise and finish its short tooth
- 2. after one lift, restart below the oval and sweep through the lower bowl from right to left
- 3. after another lift, place the dot above last — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 2.

- Look: at قميض and point at ض inside it
- Trace it: ض three times, saying z as you finish each one
- Write it: ق, then ض, from memory
- Read it: قميض aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ض? (zuād, z.) Which word did it come from? (قميض, qamīz, "shirt".)

37.4 ظ (zoe) — the letter that ends حافظ

Before the new one: write ق and ض once each, and name them.

Now say حافظ (hāfiz), "guardian". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ظ

ظ — zoe, the sound z again.

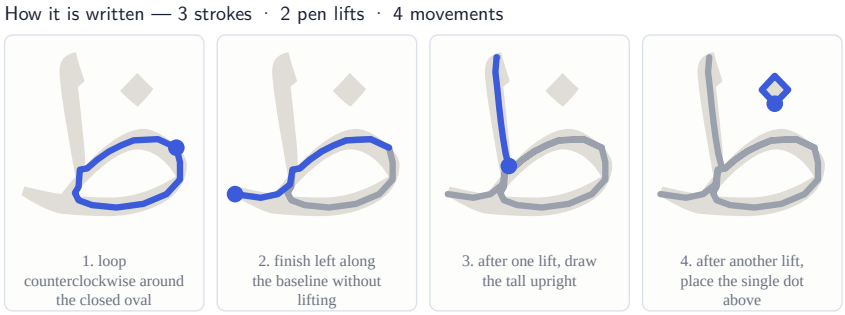
It ends حافظ (hāfiz). A closed oval on the line, a tall upright, and one dot. It sounds exactly like ض from the last lesson: two spellings, one sound, both kept from the Arabic words they came with.

Writing: ظ



How ظ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: loop counterclockwise around the closed oval
- 2. finish left along the baseline without lifting
- 3. after one lift, draw the tall upright
- 4. after another lift, place the single dot above — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 2.

Stroke order is one attested teaching order; hands and teachers vary. Source: Zer o Zabar, To'e, zo'e, se, zhe, and ġhain, independent ظ handwriting animation and Zo'e instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026).

Your turn

- Look: at حافظ and point at ظ inside it
- Trace it: ظ three times, saying z as you finish each one
- Write it: ض, then ظ, from memory
- Read it: حافظ aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ظ? (zoe, z.) Which word did it come from? (حافظ, hāfiz, "guardian".)

37.5 ئ (hamza) — the hamza on its seat in ہوئی

Before the new one: write ض and ظ once each, and name them.

Now say ہوئی (huī), "happened (in pleased to meet you)". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ئ

ئ — hamza on its seat.

It is inside ہوئی (huī), the last word of ہوئی خوشی کر مل سے آپ. Say hu-ī: two vowels side by side. The small hamza sits on a short tooth, its seat, and marks the place where one vowel ends and the next begins.

Writing: ئ

Put your pen on ئ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at ہوئی and point at ئ inside it
- Trace it: ئ three times, saying hu-ī as you finish each one
- Write it: ظ, then ئ, from memory
- Read it: ہوئی aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ئ? (hamza, hu-ī.) Which word did it come from? (ہوئی, huī, "happened (in pleased to meet you)".)

37.6 (sixteen letters) — Sixteen letters, sixteen words — a first pass

Write the letter that opens بولنا, then the one that opens تم.

Your turn

letter	name	the word it came from
ب	be	بولنا bolnā
ت	te	تم tum
ٹ	ṭe	ٹھیک ṭhīk
ج	jīm	ہاں جی jī hã̃
ح	baṛī he	حافظ hāfiz

ق	qāf	قمیض qamīz
ض	zuād	قمیض qamīz
ظ	zoe	حافظ hāfiz
ئ	hamza	ہوئی huī

- Write it: each letter in the table from memory, then check it

- Say it: the word each one came from
- Write it: the boat letters side by side, ٹ ت ب پ, and say what sets each apart

Before you move on

Which mark makes a letter's sound curl back? (The small mark above, on ٹ and ڑ.)

37.7 (sixteen letters) — From the word back to the letter — a second pass

Say ṭhīk, then write the two new letters it holds.

Your turn

letter	name	the word it came from
ب	be	بولنا bolnā
ت	te	تم tum
ٹ	ṭe	ٹھیک ṭhīk
ج	jīm	ہاں جی jī hã̃

ق	qāf	قمیض qamīz
ض	zuād	قمیض qamīz
ظ	zoe	حافظ hāfiz
ئ	hamza	ہوئی huī

- Say it: each word in the table, then write the letter it gave you without looking
- Write it: the hook family side by side, چ خ ح ج, and name each by its dots
- Write it: ف beside ق, and ض beside ظ, and say which pair shares one sound

Before you move on

Which letter adds a puff of breath to the letter before it? (ھ, do-chashmī he.)

Chapter 38

Hand, Head, Hair, Tooth, Throat

Before the new one: say the Urdu for fourth, then the Urdu for a hand.

You'll want to know: سر

سر — sar — "the head".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

سر (sar) is a loan, usually traced to Persian sar, "head". Persian sar and Sanskrit śiras, the source of Hindi sir (CDIAL 12452), are usually taken to be the same ancient word, kept separately by the two branches.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sar
- Say it: sar, once more
- Say it: say sar

- Recall: say the Urdu for fourth, then the Urdu for a hand, then say sar again

Before you move on

What does سر mean? ("The head".) Say it once more.

38.3 بال (bāl) — hair

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a hand, then the Urdu for the head.

You'll want to know: بال

بال — bāl — "hair".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

بال (bāl) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from vāla, "hair of the tail, hair" (CDIAL 11572).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bāl
- Say it: bāl, once more
- Say it: say bāl
- Recall: say the Urdu for a hand, then the Urdu for the head, then say bāl again

Before you move on

What does بال mean? ("Hair".) Say it once more.

38.4 دانت (dānt) — a tooth

Before the new one: say the Urdu for the head, then the Urdu for hair.

You'll want to know: دانت

دانت — dānt — "a tooth".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دانت (dānt) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from danta, "tooth" (CDIAL 6152). It is the same ancient word as Latin dēns and English tooth.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dānt
- Say it: dānt, once more
- Say it: say dānt
- Recall: say the Urdu for the head, then the Urdu for hair, then say dānt again

Before you move on

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say the stomach, a shoulder, a finger, a lip and the neck.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 39: I can say the stomach, a shoulder, a finger, a lip and the neck.

39.1 پیٹ (peṭ) — the stomach

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a tooth, then the Urdu for the throat.

You'll want to know: پیٹ

پیٹ — peṭ — "the stomach".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پیٹ (peṭ) is inherited. CDIAL lists it under a reconstructed peṭṭa*, "belly", and notes that it may be the same word as similar forms meaning "basket" (CDIAL 8376). DEDR compares its variant poṭṭa with Dravidian words for "belly", such as Telugu poṭṭa (DEDR 4494).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: peṭ
- Say it: peṭ, once more

You'll want to know: اگلا

اگلا — aglā — "next".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

اگلا (aglā) is built on Sanskrit agra, "top, front", with an -l- ending. CDIAL lists Hindi āgil, "foremost", made the same way (CDIAL 68), but not aglā itself.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aglā
- Say it: aglā, once more
- Say it: say aglā
- Recall: say the Urdu for these days, then the Urdu for last, then say aglā again

Before you move on

What does اگلا mean? ("Next".) Say it once more.

Chapter 96

Moment, When, Where, To the right, To the left

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a moment, when, where, to the right and to the left.

96.3 کدھر (kidhar) — where, which way?

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a moment, then the Urdu for when.

You'll want to know: کدھر

کدھر — kidhar — "where, which way?".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کدھر (kidhar) is inherited, but its history is not settled. It puts the question stem k- of kyā and kaun in front of the ending of idhar, "here", and CDIAL has no entry for it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: kidhar
- Say it: kidhar, once more
- Say it: say kidhar
- Recall: say the Urdu for a moment, then the Urdu for when, then say kidhar again

Chapter 99

The Letters Ze and Toe

Modes: eyes (2) pen (2) Hands-free start: none of the 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write ze and toe, and find them in words I already say.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 99: I can write ze and toe, and find them in words I already say.

99.1 ز (ze) — the letter that ends روز

> Before the new one: write ظ and ئ once each, and name them.
>
> Now say روز (roz), "every day". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ز

ز — ze, the sound z.

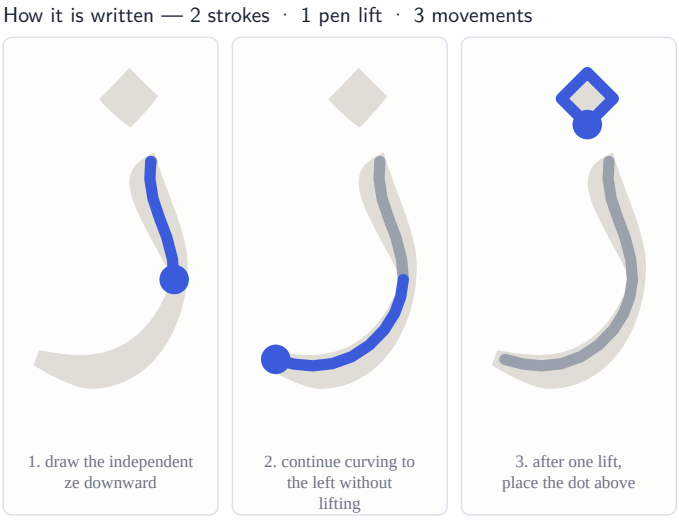
It ends روز (roz), "every day". You already write ر, the short curve that drops below the line. ز is the same curve with one dot above it. Like ر, it never joins the letter after it.

Writing: ژ



How ژ is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: draw the independent ze downward
- 2. continue curving to the left without lifting
- 3. after one lift, place the dot above — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 1.

Stroke order is one attested teaching order; hands and teachers vary. Source: Zer o Zabar, Khe, ze, zāl, swād, and zwād, independent ژ calligraphic and handwriting animations and Ze instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026).

Your turn

- Look: at روژ and point at ژ inside it
- Trace it: ژ three times, saying z as you finish each one

- Write it: ئ, then ز, from memory
- Read it: روز aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ز? (ze, z.) Which word did it come from? (روز, roz, "every day".)

99.2 ط (toe) — the letter that opens طرف

Before the new one: write ئ and ز once each, and name them.

Now say طرف (taraf), "a side, a direction". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ط

ط — toe, a plain t sound, the same as ت.

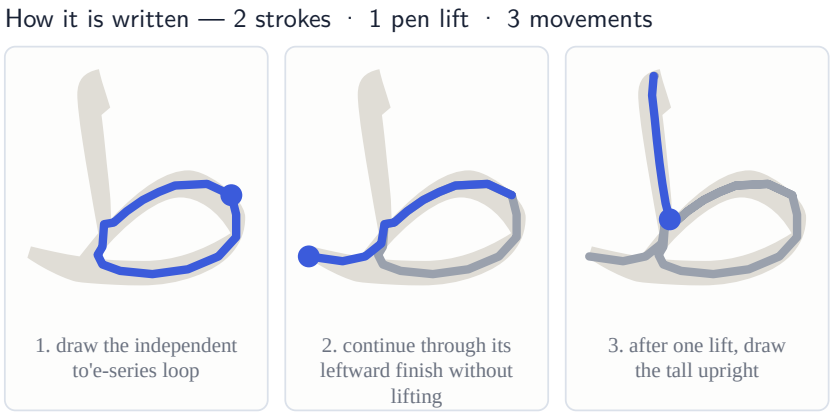
It opens طرف (taraf), "a side, a direction". You already write ظ: a flat loop on the line with a tall upright stroke. ط is that shape with no dot. Urdu keeps it for words that came from Arabic.

Writing: ط



Stroke order after Zer o Zabar, To'e, zo'e, se, zhe, and ġhain, independent ط handwriting animation and To'e instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ط is written, stroke by stroke

- 1. start here: draw the independent to'e-series loop
- 2. continue through its leftward finish without lifting
- 3. after one lift, draw the tall upright — and only now lift

Pen lifts: 1.

Stroke order is one attested teaching order; hands and teachers vary. Source: Zer o Zabar, To'e, zo'e, se, zhe, and ġhain, independent ط handwriting animation and To'e instructions (Northwestern University Libraries Open Textbook, 2026).

Your turn

- Look: at طرف and point at ط inside it
- Trace it: ط three times, saying t as you finish each one
- Write it: ز, then ط, from memory
- Read it: طرف aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ط? (toe, t.) Which word did it come from? (طرف, taraf, "a side, a direction".)

99.3 (two letters) — From the letter to the word — a first pass

Say روز (roz), then write the letter it gave you.

Your turn

letter	name	the word it came from
ز	ze	روز roz
ط	toe	طرف taraf

- Write it: each letter in the table from memory, then check it
- Say it: the word each one came from
- Read it: each word in the table aloud, and point at its letter

Before you move on

Which word did each letter come from? (ز from روز; ط from طرف.)

99.4 (two letters) — From the word back to the letter — a second pass

Write ط without looking, then say the word it came from.

Your turn

letter	name	the word it came from
ز	ze	روز roz
ط	toe	طرف taraf

- Say it: each word in the table, then write the letter it gave you without looking
- Write it: each letter once more, slowly, larger than it is printed

Before you move on

Say each word in the table once more, and name the letter you took from it.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say halwa, rice pudding, a chutney, a kebab and biryani.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 120: I can say halwa, rice pudding, a chutney, a kebab and biryani.

120.1 حلوہ (halvā) — halwa, a sweet

> Before the new one: say the Urdu for a paratha, then the Urdu for a samosa.

You'll want to know: حلوہ

حلوہ — halvā — "halwa, a sweet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

حلوہ (halvā) is a loan from Arabic ḥalwā, "a sweetmeat", which reached Urdu through Persian. Its Arabic root is ḥ-l-w (Lane).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: halvā
- Say it: halvā, once more
- Say it: say halvā
- Recall: say the Urdu for a paratha, then the Urdu for a samosa, then say halvā again

Before you move on

What does حلوہ mean? ("Halwa, a sweet".) Say it once more.

120.2 کھیر (khīr) — rice pudding

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a samosa, then the Urdu for halwa.

You'll want to know: کھیر

کھیر — khīr — "rice pudding".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کھیر (khīr) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from kṣīrī, "a dish prepared with milk" (CDIAL 3705). It is built on kṣīra, "milk".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: khīr
- Say it: khīr, once more

- Say it: say khīr
- Recall: say the Urdu for a samosa, then the Urdu for halwa, then say khīr again

Before you move on

120.3 چٹنی (chaṭnī) — a chutney

Before the new one: say the Urdu for halwa, then the Urdu for rice pudding.

You'll want to know: چٹنی

چٹنی — chaṭnī — "a chutney".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چٹنی (chaṭnī) is usually tied to chāṭnā, "to lick". CDIAL lists that verb, and chaṭnā, "to be tasted", made from it, under a reconstructed caṭṭ*, "lick, taste" (CDIAL 4573), but it does not list chaṭnī itself. English took the word as chutney.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: chaṭnī
- Say it: chaṭnī, once more
- Say it: say chaṭnī
- Recall: say the Urdu for halwa, then the Urdu for rice pudding, then say chaṭnī again

Before you move on

What does چٹنی mean? ("A chutney".) Say it once more.

120.4 کباب (kabāb) — a kebab

Before the new one: say the Urdu for rice pudding, then the Urdu for a chutney.

You'll want to know: کباب

کباب — kabāb — "a kebab".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کباب (kabāb) is a loan from Arabic kabāb, "meat cut up and roasted", which reached Urdu through Persian. Lane lists it under the root k-b-b, and records that some Arab scholars took the word to be Persian.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: kabāb
- Say it: kabāb, once more
- Say it: say kabāb
- Recall: say the Urdu for rice pudding, then the Urdu for a chutney, then say kabāb again

Before you move on

What does کباب mean? ("A kebab".) Say it once more.

120.5 بریانی (biryānī) — biryani

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a chutney, then the Urdu for a kebab.

You'll want to know: بریانی

بریانی — biryānī — "biryani".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

بریانی (biryānī) is a loan, usually traced to Persian biryān, "fried, roasted".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: biryānī
- Say it: biryānī, once more
- Say it: say biryānī
- Recall: say the Urdu for a chutney, then the Urdu for a kebab, then say biryānī again

Before you move on

What does بریانی mean? ("Biryani".) Say it once more.

121.1 شلوار (shalvār) — loose trousers

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a kebab, then the Urdu for biryani.

You'll want to know: شلوار

شلوار — shalvār — "loose trousers".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

شلوار (shalvār) is a loan, usually traced to Persian shalvār, "trousers".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: shalvār
- Say it: shalvār, once more
- Say it: say shalvār
- Recall: say the Urdu for a kebab, then the Urdu for biryani, then say shalvār again

Before you move on

What does شلوار mean? ("Loose trousers".) Say it once more.

121.2 دوپٹہ (dupaṭṭā) — a scarf, a dupatta

Before the new one: say the Urdu for biryani, then the Urdu for loose trousers.

You'll want to know: دوپٹہ

دوپٹہ — dupaṭṭā — "a scarf, a dupatta".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دوپٹہ (dupaṭṭā) is built from du-, "two", and paṭṭā, "a strip of cloth": a cloth of two breadths. CDIAL lists Hindi paṭṭī, "strip of cloth", under Sanskrit paṭṭa, "cloth", probably of non-Aryan source (CDIAL 7700). It also reconstructs dupaṭṭikā*, "two cloths" (CDIAL 6413), but lists no Hindi or Urdu form under it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dupaṭṭā
- Say it: dupaṭṭā, once more

- Say it: say dupaṭṭā
- Recall: say the Urdu for biryani, then the Urdu for loose trousers, then say dupaṭṭā again

Before you move on

What does دوپٹہ mean? ("A scarf, a dupatta".) Say it once more.

121.3 سویٹر (sveṭar) — a jumper

Before the new one: say the Urdu for loose trousers, then the Urdu for a scarf.

You'll want to know: سویٹر

سویٹر — sveṭar — "a jumper".

121.4 جیکٹ (jaiketh) — a jacket

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a scarf, then the Urdu for a jumper.

You'll want to know: جیکٹ

جیکٹ — jaiketh — "a jacket".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

جیکٹ (jaiketh) is a loan from English jacket.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: jaiketh
- Say it: jaiketh, once more
- Say it: say jaiketh
- Recall: say the Urdu for a scarf, then the Urdu for a jumper, then say jaiketh again

Before you move on

What does جیکٹ mean? ("A jacket".) Say it once more.

121.5 پاجامہ (pājāmā) — pyjamas

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a jumper, then the Urdu for a jacket.

You'll want to know: پاجامہ

پاجامہ — pājāmā — "pyjamas".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پاجامہ (pājāmā) is a loan, usually traced to Persian pāy-jāma, "leg garment". It is built from pāy, "leg", and jāma, "garment". English took the word back as pyjamas.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pājāmā
- Say it: pājāmā, once more
- Say it: say pājāmā

122.1 چپل (chappal) — a sandal, a slipper

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a jacket, then the Urdu for pyjamas.

You'll want to know: چپل

چپل — chappal — "a sandal, a slipper".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The origin of چپل (chappal) is uncertain, and CDIAL has no entry for it. DEDR, under Dravidian words for "sandal" such as Telugu ceppu, adds "Cf. H. cappal" (DEDR 1963): a comparison, not a settled source.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: chappal
- Say it: chappal, once more
- Say it: say chappal

142.8 A short Urdu A1 writing checkpoint

This is a short independent attempt, not a model. You will write the answers, and this page will not show you any copyable Urdu answer.

Put away Roman Urdu, Devanagari, dictionaries, translators, and spell-checkers. Set a three-minute timer. Write in Urdu script; either approved Nastaliq or accessibility Naskh is fine. Ordinary legible handwriting is enough: imitation Nastaliq calligraphy is not scored.

Writing — timed assessment production

One practical form — three minutes

Complete all six fields in Urdu script for a new neighbourhood activity group. Write one short answer in every field. Start the timer when you begin the first field; leave any unfinished field as evidence when it rings.

1. Your name

2. Your city or village
3. A language you speak
4. One place you like
5. One drink or food you like
6. One everyday action or kind of work you do

When the three-minute timer rings, stop. Record the number of completed fields. An honest short attempt is more useful than a perfect untimed one.

Before you move on

Spend at most one minute looking at this first attempt. Note one field you completed clearly and one field to practise next; do not rewrite the timed answer. Keep the page as evidence.
This checkpoint is not the complete A1 writing paper. On another day, close this lesson and open the separate A1 writing-only learner paper for the authentic form and named-reader message under one 20-minute assessment clock. That paper and its later rubric review are a separate assessment session, not work inside this under-five-minute lesson. It is writing practice only; it does not establish full A1 exam readiness.

Chapter 143

A connected A2 message

Modes: ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

By the end of this chapter: I can plan and write a connected 70–90 word Urdu message about a familiar day for a named reader and purpose.

Complete chapter 143 by writing a model-free 70–90 word connected Urdu message for a named reader and practical purpose.

143.1 A connected message about your day

A connected message is not one long sentence. It is a short route for one reader. Before writing, draw eight empty boxes and give them these jobs:

1. reader and greeting;
2. reason for writing;
3. where your day begins;
4. two things you usually do;
5. what happens next;
6. one contrast or reason;
7. one question for the reader;
8. a polite close.

Write only one or two English cue words in each box. Do not draft Urdu yet.

Writing — connected composition

There is no model, sentence bank, or copyable answer on this page.

Reader: Sana. Purpose: help Sana understand your usual weekday and choose a good time to visit you tomorrow.

Write 70–90 words in Urdu script. Use every planning box. Include at least four familiar actions, two time anchors, one preference, one contrast or reason, one sequence link, and one direct question for Sana. Keep the reader visible by making every detail help with the visit. The instructions give content, not sentences: choose and connect the Urdu yourself.

This first connected attempt is untimed. Put away Roman Urdu, Devanagari, dictionaries, translators, and spell-checkers. Either approved Nastaliq or accessibility Naskh is fine. Ordinary legible Urdu handwriting is enough; imitating Nastaliq calligraphic slope or ligatures is not part of the task.

When the whole message exists, count its words once. If it is short, add one useful detail to a planning box. If it is long, remove a detail that does not help Sana. Do not replace the message with a memorised model.

Before you move on

Review the same attempt in four separate passes:

1. Task fulfilment and relevant content — Sana, the weekday, tomorrow's visit, and every requested content point are present.
2. Comprehensibility and organisation — the eight jobs form a route rather than a list of disconnected sentences.
3. Urdu vocabulary, grammar, and register — connectors make addition, sequence, contrast, and reason clear in a polite everyday tone.
4. Urdu orthographic control — letters, dots, joins, non-joins, word boundaries, and punctuation remain readable. Unwritten short vowels and optional diacritics receive neither bonus nor penalty unless they change the intended word.

Mark one strength and one next step. Repair only the next step; keep the original attempt so the next 70–90 word message can show real growth.

Chapter 144

Recently, Already, the Past, Last, To Happen

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what happened, and when: recently, already, last year.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 144: I can say what happened, and when: recently, already, last year.

144.1 میں ہی حال (hāl hī meṅ) — recently

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to be saved, to avoid, then the Urdu for to grow, to increase.

You'll want to know: میں ہی حال

میں ہی حال — hāl hī meṅ — "recently". With a verb like پڑھنا, Urdu's past puts نے after the doer: میں نے حال ہی میں ایک کتاب پڑھی۔ — maiṅ ne hāl hī meṅ ek kitāb paṛhī — "I read a book recently." پڑھی agrees with کتاب.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

میں ہی حال (hāl hī meṅ) is "in the very present state". hāl is a loan from Arabic ḥāl, "state, condition", through Persian (Lane, root ḥ-w-l);

hī is the emphatic "very"; and meṅ, "in", comes from Sanskrit madhye, "in the middle" (CDIAL 9804).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hāl hī meṅ
- Say it: hāl hī meṅ, once more
- Say it: say hāl hī meṅ
- Recall: say the Urdu for to be saved, to avoid, then the Urdu for to grow, to increase, then say hāl hī meṅ again

Before you move on

What does حال ہی میں mean? ("Recently".) Say it once more.

144.2 پہلے سے (pehle se) — already, beforehand

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to grow, to increase, then the Urdu for recently.

You'll want to know: پہلے سے

پہلے سے — pehle se — "already, beforehand". It is پہلے, "before", with سے: میں پہلے سے جانتا ہوں۔ — maiṅ pehle se jāntā hūṅ — "I already know." A woman says جانتی.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پہلے سے (pehle se) joins pehle, "first, before", and se, "from". pehle is the adverb of pahlā, which CDIAL lists under prathilla*, a variant of a reconstructed prathila*, "first" (CDIAL 8652). CDIAL lists se under Sanskrit sahita, "together with" (CDIAL 13310), and sama, "equal", has also been suggested (CDIAL 13173).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pehle se
- Say it: pehle se, once more
- Say it: say pehle se
- Recall: say the Urdu for to grow, to increase, then the Urdu for recently, then say pehle se again

Before you move on

What does پہلے سے mean? ("Already, beforehand".) Say it once more.

144.3 ماضی (māzī) — the past

Before the new one: say the Urdu for recently, then the Urdu for already.

You'll want to know: ماضی

ماضی — māzī — "the past". Grammar books use it for the past tense too. It came into Urdu from Arabic.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ماضی (māzī) is a loan from Arabic māḍī, "past, gone by", which reached Urdu through Persian. Its Arabic root is m-ḍ-y (Lane). Grammar books use it for the past tense.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: māzī
- Say it: māzī, once more
- Say it: say māzī
- Recall: say the Urdu for recently, then the Urdu for already, then say māzī again

Before you move on

What does ماضی mean? ("The past".) Say it once more.

144.4 گزشتہ (guzashtā) — last, previous

Before the new one: say the Urdu for already, then the Urdu for the past.

You'll want to know: گزشتہ

گزشتہ — guzashtā — "last, previous". سال گزشتہ — guzashtā sāl — "last year". It is the formal word; everyday speech also says پچھلا.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

گزشتہ (guzashtā) is a loan, usually traced to Persian guzashta, "passed, gone by". It is the past participle of guzashtan, "to pass".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: guzashtā

- Say it: guzashtā, once more
- Say it: say guzashtā
- Recall: say the Urdu for already, then the Urdu for the past, then say guzashtā again

Before you move on

What does گزشتہ mean? ("Last, previous".) Say it once more.

144.5 آنا پیش (pesh ānā) — to happen, to occur

Before the new one: say the Urdu for the past, then the Urdu for last.

You'll want to know: آنا پیش

آنا پیش — pesh ānā — "to happen, to occur". Said of events: مسئلہ ایک کل آیا ـے پیش — kal ek mas'alā pesh āyā — "A problem came up yesterday." Its past is آیا پیش, or آئی پیش with a feminine subject.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

آنا پیش (pesh ānā) is "to come to the front". pesh, "front, before", is usually traced to Persian pesh; ānā, "to come", comes from Sanskrit āpayati, "causes to reach" (CDIAL 1200).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pesh ānā
- Say it: pesh ānā, once more
- Say it: say pesh ānā

- Recall: say the Urdu for the past, then the Urdu for last, then say pesh ānā again

Before you move on

What does آنا پیش mean? ("To happen, to occur".) Say it once more.

Chapter 145

The Future, Next, Soon, a Plan, To Decide

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what will happen, and when: next week, soon, and what I plan.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 145: I can say what will happen, and when: next week, soon, and what I plan.

145.1 مستقبل (mustaqbil) — the future

> Before the new one: say the Urdu for last, then the Urdu for to happen.

You'll want to know: مستقبل

مستقبل — mustaqbil — "the future". Urdu's future adds گا, گی or گے to the verb's -ūṅ form: میں پڑھوں گا — maiṅ paṛhūṅgā — "I will read." A woman says پڑھوں گی, paṛhūṅgī.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

مستقبل (mustaqbil) is a loan from Arabic mustaqbil, "coming to meet; the future", which reached Urdu through Persian. Its Arabic root is q-b-l (Lane). It is built on the same root as qabūl, "acceptance".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mustaqbil
- Say it: mustaqbil, once more
- Say it: say mustaqbil
- Recall: say the Urdu for last, then the Urdu for to happen, then say mustaqbil again

Before you move on

What does مستقبل mean? ("The future".) Say it once more.

145.2 آئندہ (āindā) — next, in future

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to happen, then the Urdu for the future.

You'll want to know: آئندہ

آئندہ — āindā — "next, in future". ہفتے آئندہ — āindā hafte — "next week".

On its own it means "from now on": کرنا نہ ایسا آئندہ — āindā aisā na karnā — "Don't do that again."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

آئندہ (āindā) is a loan, usually traced to Persian āyanda, "coming". It is the present participle of āmadan, "to come".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: āindā
- Say it: āindā, once more
- Say it: say āindā
- Recall: say the Urdu for to happen, then the Urdu for the future, then say āindā again

Before you move on

What does آئندہ mean? ("Next, in future".) Say it once more.

145.3 جلد ہی (jald hī) — soon

Before the new one: say the Urdu for the future, then the Urdu for next.

You'll want to know: جلد ہی

جلد ہی — jald hī — "soon". جلد has two readings: jild, "skin" or "a volume", and jald, "quickly". Here it is jald, with the emphatic ہی: وہ جلد ہی آئے گا — voh jald hī āegā — "He will come soon."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

جلد ہی (jald hī) is jald, "quick", usually traced to Persian jald, a word of Arabic origin, with the emphatic hī, "very".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: jald hī
- Say it: jald hī, once more
- Say it: say jald hī

- Recall: say the Urdu for the future, then the Urdu for next, then say jald hī again

Before you move on

What does جلد ہی mean? ("Soon".) Say it once more.

145.4 پروگرام (prográm) — a plan, a programme

Before the new one: say the Urdu for next, then the Urdu for soon.

You'll want to know: پروگرام

پروگرام — prográm — "a plan, a programme". From English programme, and the everyday word for a plan: کل کا پروگرام بناتے ہیں۔ — kal kā prográm banāte haiṅ — "Let's make a plan for tomorrow."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پروگرام (prográm) is a loan from English programme.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prográm
- Say it: prográm, once more
- Say it: say prográm
- Recall: say the Urdu for next, then the Urdu for soon, then say prográm again

Before you move on

What does پروگرام mean? ("A plan, a programme".) Say it once more.

145.5 طے کرنا (tai karnā) — to decide, to settle

Before the new one: say the Urdu for soon, then the Urdu for a plan.

You'll want to know: طے کرنا

طے کرنا — tai karnā — "to decide, to settle". ہم نے طے کیا کہ ... — ham ne tai kiyā ki — "We decided that ..." The past of کرنا is کیا.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

طے کرنا (tai karnā) joins tai, "settled", and karnā, "to do". tai is Arabic ṭayy, "a folding up; a covering of distance", which reached Urdu through Persian (Lane, root ṭ-w-y); a matter that is folded up is settled. karnā comes from Sanskrit karoti, "does" (CDIAL 2814).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tai karnā
- Say it: tai karnā, once more
- Say it: say tai karnā
- Recall: say the Urdu for soon, then the Urdu for a plan, then say tai karnā again

Before you move on

What does طے کرنا mean? ("To decide, to settle".) Say it once more.

Chapter 147

To tutor, To memorise, To scream, To smile, To panic

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to tutor, to memorise, to scream, to smile and to panic.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 147: I can say to tutor, to memorise, to scream, to smile and to panic.

147.1 پڑھانا (paṛhānā) — to tutor, to teach (lessons)

Before the new one: say the Urdu for an advert, then the Urdu for a receipt.

You'll want to know: پڑھانا

پڑھانا — paṛhānā — "to tutor, to teach (lessons)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پڑھانا (paṛhānā) is the causing form of paṛhnā, "to read": to teach is to make someone read. CDIAL lists both under Sanskrit paṭhati, "repeats aloud, reads" (CDIAL 7712).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: paṛhānā
- Say it: paṛhānā, once more

By the end of this chapter: I can say a baker, a sweet-maker, a grocer, a fruit seller and a greengrocer.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 263: I can say a baker, a sweet-maker, a grocer, a fruit seller and a greengrocer.

263.1 نانبائی (nānbāī) — a baker

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a scientist, then the Urdu for an actor.

You'll want to know: نانبائی

نانبائی — nānbāī — "a baker".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

نانبائی (nānbāī) is usually traced to Persian nānbā, "baker", built on nān, "bread".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nānbāī
- Say it: nānbāī, once more
- Say it: say nānbāī
- Recall: say the Urdu for a scientist, then the Urdu for an actor, then say nānbāī again

Before you move on

What does نانبائی mean? ("A baker".) Say it once more.

263.2 حلوائی (halvāī) — a sweet-maker

Before the new one: say the Urdu for an actor, then the Urdu for a baker.

You'll want to know: حلوائی

حلوائی — halvāī — "a sweet-maker".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

حلوائی (halvāī) is "one who makes halvā". halvā is Arabic ḥalwā, "a sweetmeat", which reached Urdu through Persian (Lane, root ḥ-l-w).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: halvāī
- Say it: halvāī, once more
- Say it: say halvāī

- Recall: say the Urdu for an actor, then the Urdu for a baker, then say halvāī again

Before you move on

What does حلوائی mean? ("A sweet-maker".) Say it once more.

263.3 پنساری (pansārī) — a grocer

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a baker, then the Urdu for a sweet-maker.

You'll want to know: پنساری

پنساری — pansārī — "a grocer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پنساری (pansārī) comes from Sanskrit prasārin, "spreading out", a trader who spreads out his goods. CDIAL explains the n as a blend with paṇyaśālā, "a shop" (CDIAL 8839).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pansārī
- Say it: pansārī, once more
- Say it: say pansārī
- Recall: say the Urdu for a baker, then the Urdu for a sweet-maker, then say pansārī again

Before you move on

What does پنساری mean? ("A grocer".) Say it once more.

263.4 پھل والا (phalvālā) — a fruit seller

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a sweet-maker, then the Urdu for a grocer.

You'll want to know: پھل والا

پھل والا — phalvālā — "a fruit seller".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پھل والا (phalvālā) is "fruit-man". phal, "fruit", comes from Sanskrit phala (CDIAL 9051); -vālā, "one who deals in", is usually traced to Sanskrit pālaka, "keeper" (see CDIAL 4435).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: phalvālā
- Say it: phalvālā, once more
- Say it: say phalvālā
- Recall: say the Urdu for a sweet-maker, then the Urdu for a grocer, then say phalvālā again

Before you move on

What does پھل والا mean? ("A fruit seller".) Say it once more.

263.5 سبزی والا (sabzīvālā) — a greengrocer

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a grocer, then the Urdu for a fruit seller.

You'll want to know: والا سبزی

والا سبزی — sabzīvālā — "a greengrocer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

والا سبزی (sabzīvālā) is "vegetable-man". sabzī, "vegetables, greens", is Persian sabz, "green", with the ending -ī; -vālā, "one who deals in", is usually traced to Sanskrit pālaka, "keeper" (see CDIAL 4435).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sabzīvālā
- Say it: sabzīvālā, once more
- Say it: say sabzīvālā
- Recall: say the Urdu for a grocer, then the Urdu for a fruit seller, then say sabzīvālā again

Before you move on

What does والا سبزی mean? ("A greengrocer".) Say it once more.

263.6 Words from chapters 257-259 — a first pass

Say the words for a fruit seller and a greengrocer.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tears, a smile, affection, friendship, shame
- a screwdriver, a tool, a pipe, a tap, a shower
- a dish, a menu, tangy, fine white flour, semolina

Before you move on

Tears? (آنسو, ãsū.) A smile? (مسکراہٹ, muskurāhaṭ.) Affection? (محبت, mohabbat.) Friendship? (دوستی, dostī.) Shame? (شرم, sharm.) A screwdriver? (کس پیچ, pechkas.) A tool? (اوزار, auzār.) A pipe? (پائپ, pāip.) A tap? (نل, nal.) A shower? (شاور, shāvar.) A dish? (پکوان, pakvān.) A menu? (مینیو, menyū.) Tangy? (چٹپٹا, chaṭpaṭā.) Fine white flour? (میدہ, maidā.) Semolina? (سوجی, sūjī.)

263.7 Words from chapters 260-263 — a second pass

Say the words for a meatball and a tikka.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a meatball, a tikka, kadhi, a jalebi, a gulab jamun
- a company, a factory, a meeting, an officer, an owner
- a judge, a pupil, an engineer, a scientist, an actor
- a baker, a sweet-maker, a grocer, a fruit seller, a greengrocer

Before you move on

A meatball? (کوفتہ, koftā.) A tikka? (تکہ, tikkā.) Kadhi? (کڑھی, kaṛhī.) A jalebi? (جلیبی, jalebī.) A gulab jamun? (جامن گلاب, gulāb jāmun.) A company? (کمپنی, kampanī.) A factory? (کارخانہ, kārkhānā.) A meeting? (میٹنگ, mīṭing.) An officer? (افسر, afsar.) An owner? (مالک, mālik.) A judge? (جج, jaj.) A pupil? (شاگرد, shāgird.) An engineer? (انجینئر, injīniyar.) A scientist? (سائنسدان, sāinsdān.) An actor? (اداکار, adākār.) A baker? (نانبائی, nānbāī.) A sweet-maker? (حلوائی, halvāī.) A grocer? (پنساری, pansārī.) A fruit seller? (پھل والا, phalvālā.) A greengrocer? (والا سبزی, sabzīvālā.)

Chapter 264

Where I Went, and Where I Was

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say where someone went and where someone was (voh gayā, voh gaī, maiṅ ghar par thā), and what I used to do (jātā thā).
>
> Complete UR-R264-where-i-went: say where someone went, where someone was, and what you used to do.

264.1 وہ گیا (voh gayā) — the past, by the one who went

Before the new one: say "pleased to meet you". (āp se mil kar khushī huī.) Its last word, ہوئی (huī), "happened", is a past. This chapter writes the past in Urdu script.

You'll want to know: the past follows the one who went وہ گیا۔

voh gayā. — "He went."

وہ گئی۔

voh gaī. — "She went."

گیا (gayā) is جانا (jānā) in the past, with no ہے (hai) after it. Its ending follows the one who went, as اچھا (achchhā) follows its noun:

وہ گھر گیا۔

voh ghar gayā. — "He went home."

سارا گھر گئی۔

Sārā ghar gaī. — "Sara went home."

ہم بازار گئے۔

ham bāzār gae. — "We went to the market."

who went	the past
a man	گیا (gayā)
a woman	گئی (gaī)
men; ہم; آپ	گئے (gae)
women	گئیں (gaīṅ)

You'll want to know: how a verb takes the ending

Most verbs put the ending on the stem: بیٹھنا (baiṭhnā) gives بیٹھا (baiṭhā) and بیٹھی (baiṭhī).

وہ بیٹھی۔

voh baiṭhī. — "She sat down."

A stem that ends in a vowel adds -یا for a man and -ئی for a woman:

آیا۔ کل وہ

voh kal āyā. — "He came yesterday."

آئی۔ کل سارا

Sārā kal āī. — "Sara came yesterday."

سونا (sonā) gives سویا (soyā), and اٹھنا (uṭhnā) gives اٹھا (uṭhā). ہونا (honā) gives ہوا (huā) and ہوئی (huī): کیا ہوا؟ (kyā huā?), "what happened?" A bare stem with گیا says a change is complete: وہ سو گیا (voh so gayā), "he fell asleep". "Did not" puts نہیں (nahīṅ) before the verb:

میں نہیں گیا۔

maiṅ nahīṅ gayā. — "I didn't go."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "He came home" — voh ghar āyā
- "She came home" — voh ghar āī
- "We came home" — ham ghar āe

Before you move on

"She went"? (وہ گئی.) "He sat down"? (وہ بیٹھا.) "What happened?" (کیا ہوا؟) Who decides the ending? (The one who went.)

264.2 وہ یہاں تھا (voh yahāṅ thā) — was, were, used to Say "he went" and "she came". (voh gayā, voh āī.) Then "he is here". (voh yahāṅ hai.) Now put ہے (hai) into the past.

You'll want to know: تھا, تھی, تھے

وہ یہاں تھا۔

voh yahāṅ thā. — "He was here."

وہ یہاں تھی۔

voh yahāṅ thī. — "She was here."

تھا (thā) is ہے in the past. Like گیا, it follows the person:

میں گھر پر تھا۔

maiṅ ghar par thā. — "I was at home."

سارا بیمار تھی۔

Sārā bīmār thī. — "Sara was ill."

ہم اسکول میں تھے۔

ham iskūl meṅ the. — "We were at school."

who	was a man	تھا (thā)
a woman	تھی (thī)
men; ہم; آپ	تھے (the)
women	تھیں (thīṅ)

کل آپ کہاں تھے؟

kal āp kahāṅ the? — "Where were you yesterday?"

You'll want to know: what I used to do

Keep the present جاتا (jātā) and put تھا where ہے stood. That is a habit in the past, "used to":

میں اسکول جاتا تھا۔

maiṅ iskūl jātā thā. — "I used to go to school."

وہ ہر روز آتی تھی۔

voh har roz ātī thī. — "She used to come every day."

Both halves follow the person: جاتی تھی (jātī thī) for a woman, جاتے تھے (jāte the) for men.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I was at the office" — maiṅ daftar meṅ thā
- "She was at the office" — voh daftar meṅ thī
- "We were at the office" — ham daftar meṅ the

Before you move on

"She was ill"? (وہ بیمار تھی.) "We were at home"? (ہم گھر پر تھے.) "I used to go"? (میں جاتا تھا, or جاتی تھی.) Which word decides تھا or تھی? (The person.)

264.3 Review — where I went, and where I was

Say "he went" and "she was here". (voh gayā, voh yahāṅ thī.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Yesterday I went to the market. Sara went home.
- He came, and then he sat down.
- I didn't go. I was ill.
- Where were you yesterday? We were at home.
- I used to go to school every day.

Before you move on

وہ گئی or وہ گیا, for Sara? (گئی.) Now the other way round: what does تھے tell you about the people? (Men, or ہم, or آپ.) "I used to come"? (تھا آتا میں.) In every one, who decides the ending? (The one who went, or who was.)

Chapter 265

Who Did It, and What Will Happen

Modes: voice (3) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say who did something, with ne and a verb that follows the thing (us ne roṭī khāī), and what will happen, for every person (karūṅ gā, kare gā, kareṅ ge).
>
> Complete UR-R265-who-did-it: say who did something, and what will happen.

265.1 اس نے کھایا (us ne khāyā) — who did it

Say "he went home". (voh ghar gayā.) Going has no object. Eating has one: "he ate bread". That past is built another way.

You'll want to know: نے after the doer

میں نے کھایا۔

maiṅ ne khāyā. — "I ate."

With a verb that has an object, the doer takes نے (ne), and the verb follows the THING, not the doer:

اس نے روٹی کھائی۔

us ne roṭī khāī. — "He ate bread."

روٹی (roṭī) is feminine, so کھائی (khāī), even for a man. وہ (voh) becomes اس (us) before نے:

لکھا۔ خط نے سارا

Sārā ne khat likhā. — "Sara wrote a letter."

پڑھی۔ کتاب نے سارا

Sārā ne kitāb paṛhī. — "Sara read a book."

خط (khat) is masculine: لکھا. کتاب (kitāb) is feminine: پڑھی.

the doer	with نے
میں	نے میں (maiṅ ne)
تم, آپ, ہم	نے تم, نے آپ, نے ہم
وہ, one	نے اس (us ne)
وہ, several	نے انہوں (unhoṅ ne)

You'll want to know: کیا, دیا, لیا, کہا, and مجھے

Four common pasts: کیا (kiyā), "did", from کرنا; دیا (diyā), "gave"; لیا (liyā), "took"; کہا (kahā), "said". کیا kiyā is spelled like کیا kyā, "what": the romanization tells them apart.

کیا۔ کام نے میں

maiṅ ne kām kiyā. — "I did the work."

When the thing is a person with کو (ko), the verb stays masculine singular:

دیکھا۔ کو سارا نے اس

us ne Sārā ko dekhā. — "He saw Sara."

مجھے (mujhe) is میں with کو inside it, "me, to me"; so too اسے (use), ہمیں (hameṅ), تمہیں (tumheṅ), انہیں (unheṅ):

دیکھا۔ مجھے نے سارا

Sārā ne mujhe dekhā. — "Sara saw me."

دیا۔ پانی مجھے نے اس us ne mujhe pānī diyā. — "He gave me water."

One verb with an object goes the other way: لانا (lānā), "to bring", takes no نے, like آنا (ānā):

لایا۔ پانی وہ

voh pānī lāyā. — "He brought water."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I drank tea" — maiṅ ne chāy pī
- "Sara drank tea" — Sārā ne chāy pī
- "Sara drank water" — Sārā ne pānī piyā

Before you move on

"He ate bread"? (کھائی روٹی نے اس.) Why کھائی? (روٹی is feminine.)

"She saw me"? (دیکھا مجھے نے اس.) And گیا وہ: does it take نے? (No: going has no object.)

265.2 میں جاؤں گا (maiṅ jāūṅ gā) — what will happen

You met one future long ago: میں پڑھوں گا (maiṅ paṛhūṅ gā), "I will read". Say it, then a woman's پڑھوں گی (paṛhūṅ gī). This lesson gives every person.

You'll want to know: the future, person by person

میں جاؤں گا۔

maiṅ jāūṅ gā. — "I will go."

وہ جائے گی۔

voh jāe gī. — "She will go."

A short ending follows the person, and گا (gā), گی (gī) or گے (ge) follows the man, the woman or the group. The book writes it apart, as it wrote پڑھوں گا:

ہم کل جائیں گے۔

ham kal jāeṅ ge. — "We will go tomorrow."

میں کام کروں گی۔

maiṅ kām karūṅ gī. — "I will do the work."

تم کب آؤ گے؟

tum kab āo ge? — "When will you come?"

who	کرنا	جانا
میں	گا کروں (karūṅ gā)	گا جاؤں (jāūṅ gā)
تم	گے کرو (karo ge)	گے جاؤ (jāo ge)
وہ, one	گا کرے (kare gā)	گا جائے (jāe gā)
وہ, آپ, ہم	گے کریں (kareṅ ge)	گے جائیں (jāeṅ ge)

"Won't" puts نہیں before it: گا جاؤں نہیں میں (maiṅ nahīṅ jāūṅ gā).

You'll want to know: ہو گا, "will be"

کل بارش ہو گی۔

kal bārish ho gī. — "It will rain tomorrow."

بارش (bārish) is feminine: ہو گی. For a man, ہو گا; for a group, ہوں گے (hoṅ ge):

شاید وہ گھر پر ہو گا۔

voh shāyad ghar par ho gā. — "He will probably be at home."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I will come tomorrow" — maiṅ kal āūṅ gā
- "She will come tomorrow" — voh kal āe gī
- "They will come tomorrow" — voh kal āeṅ ge

Before you move on

"I will do it"? (میں کروں گا, or کروں گی.) "You will go", to a friend?

(تم جاؤ گے.) "He will be at home"? (وہ گھر پر ہو گا.)

265.3 وٗ (vāʾo hamza) — vāʾo wearing the hamza, inside جاؤں

Before the new one: write و and یٔ once each, and name them. (vāʾo, hamza.)

Now say میں جاؤں گا (maiṅ jāūṅ gā), "I will go". You have read جاؤں (jāūṅ) in every person's future. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: وٗ

وٗ — vāʾo hamza.

It is inside جاؤں (jāūṅ) and آوٗ (āo). Say jā-ūṅ: two vowels side by side. وٗ is و wearing the same small hamza you wrote on یٔ: there it sat on a tooth, here it sits on و. It marks the place where one vowel ends and the next begins. Like و, it does not join the letter after it.

Writing: وٗ

Put your pen on وٗ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at جاؤں and point at وٗ inside it
- Trace it: وٗ three times, saying jā-ūṅ as you finish each one
- Write it: جاؤں once, joined, with وٗ in its place

- Read it: جاؤں aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ؤ? (vāʾo hamza, jā-ūṅ.) Which word did it come from? (جاؤں, jāūṅ, in گا جاؤں میں.)

265.4 Review — who did it, and what will happen

Say "she went home" and "I used to go to school". (voh ghar gaī, maiṅ iskūl jātā thā.)

Your turn

- Say it: He ate bread. Sara wrote a letter.
- Say it: I did the work, and she gave me tea.
- Say it: Sara saw me at the market.
- Say it: Tomorrow I will go home. We will go too.
- Say it: It will rain. He will probably be at home.
- Write it: جاؤں and آؤ, then read them aloud

Before you move on

In سارا نے خط لکھا, which word sets لکھا? (خط.) Put کتاب in place of خط: does the verb change? (Yes: سارا نے کتاب لکھی.) Now the other way round, the future: "she will go"? (وہ جائے گی.) "We will go"? (ہم جائیں گے.)

Chapter 266

What Was Going On

Modes: voice (3) Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what was going on in the past (voh paṛh rahī thī), set a scene with jab … to, and say during with daurān.
>
> Complete UR-R266-what-was-going-on: say what was going on, and what happened in the middle of it.

266.1 پڑھ رہا تھا (paṛh rahā thā) — what was going on

Say "I used to read". (maiṅ paṛhtā thā.) That is a habit. This lesson is one moment in the past, with something still going on.

Grammar Lens: was doing

سو رہی تھی۔

so rahī thī. — "She was sleeping."

Ask what Sara was doing last night, and the answer is three words: the stem سو (so), then رہی (rahī), then تھی (thī). Both follow Sara:

سارا سو رہی تھی۔

Sārā so rahī thī. — "Sara was sleeping."

میں خط لکھ رہا تھا۔

maiṅ khat likh rahā thā. — "I was writing a letter."

A verb with an object takes no نے (ne) here: the writing was still going on.

ہم کھانا کھا رہے تھے۔ ham khānā khā rahe the. — "We were eating."

who	was doing
a man	رہا تھا (rahā thā)
a woman	رہی تھی (rahī thī) men; ہم; آپ	رہے تھے (rahe the) women	رہیں تھیں (rahī thīṅ)

You'll want to know: the scene and the event

باہر بارش ہو رہی تھی۔

bāhar bārish ho rahī thī. — "It was raining outside."

That is a scene: going on, with no edge. Drop an event into it with جب (jab), "when", and تو (to), "then":

میں گھر آیا، جب

jab maiṅ ghar āyā,

سو سارا تو رہی تھی۔

to Sārā so rahī thī. — "When I came home, Sara was sleeping."

This تو is to, "then", not تو tū, "you": the romanization tells them apart. آیا (āyā) is the event, over in a moment. سو رہی تھی is the scene it cut into.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I was reading" — maiṅ paṛh rahā thā
- "She was reading" — voh paṛh rahī thī
- "We were reading" — ham paṛh rahe the

Before you move on

"She was writing a letter"? (وہ خط لکھ رہی تھی.) Does it take نے? (No: it was still going on.) In the sentence about coming home, which verb is the event? (آیا.) And which is the scene? (سو رہی تھی.)

266.2 دوران (daurān) — during

Before the new one: say "it was raining". (bārish ho rahī thī.) Then "a journey". (safar.)

You'll want to know: دوران

دوران — daurān — "during".

بارش دوران کے سفر ہوئی۔

safar ke daurān bārish huī. — "It rained during the journey."

It stands after its noun, with کے (ke) in front of it, as in لیے کے (ke liye).

وہ دوران کے کھانے آیا۔

khāne ke daurān voh āyā. — "He came during the meal."

کھانا (khānā) becomes کھانے (khāne) before کے, as most masculine nouns in -ا do.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دوران (daurān) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic dawarān, "a turning round".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- daurān, then safar ke daurān
- "During the meal she came" — khāne ke daurān voh āī
- "During the journey I was reading" — safar ke daurān maiṅ paṛh rahā thā

Before you move on

What does دوران mean? ("During".) "During the journey"? (سفر کے دوران.) What comes in front of it? (کے.)

266.3 Review — what was going on

Say "Sara wrote a letter" and "I will go". (Sārā ne khat likhā, maiṅ jāūṅ gā.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- I was writing a letter. Sara was reading.
- It was raining outside.
- When I came home, Sara was sleeping.
- During the journey it was raining.
- He came during the meal.

Before you move on

"We were eating"? (ہم کھا رہے تھے.) Now the other way round: what does تھیں رہی tell you? (Women, and something going on.) In جب ... تو ..., which half is the event? (The جب half, in the plain past.) "During the journey"? (سفر کے دوران.)

Chapter 267

A Story in Order

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell what happened in order (pehle, phir, us ke bād, ākhir meṅ), join two actions with kar (khā kar soyā), and read a short story.
>
> Complete UR-R267-a-story-in-order: tell what happened in order, joining the steps.

267.1 بعد (bād) — after

Before the new one: say "during the journey". (safar ke daurān.) Then "before". (pehle.)

You'll want to know: بعد

بعد — bād — "after".

سویا۔ میں بعد کے کھانے

khāne ke bād maiṅ soyā. — "After the meal I slept."

Like دوران (daurān), it stands after کے (ke). With میں (meṅ) and no noun, it is "later":

گا۔ آؤں میں بعد میں

maiṅ bād meṅ āūṅ gā. — "I'll come later."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

بعد (bād) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic baᶜd, "after". The letter in its middle is new to your hand; the next lesson takes it out.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bād, then khāne ke bād
- "After the meal she went to the market" — khāne ke bād voh bāzār gaī
- "I'll go later" — maiṅ bād meṅ jāūṅ gā

Before you move on

What does بعد mean? ("After".) "After the meal"? (بعد کے کھانے.) "Later"? (میں بعد.)

267.2 ع (ain) — the letter inside بعد

Before the new one: write وٗ once, and name it. (vāʾo hamza.)

Now say بعد (bād), "after". This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ع

ع — ain.

It sits in the middle of بعد (bād). In Urdu it has no sound of its own: it colours the vowel beside it, so the a of بعد is said long, bād. In the middle of a word it is a small closed loop on the line, joined on both sides. Standing alone it opens out: a small open head, then a deep bowl that sweeps below the line.

Writing: ع

Put your pen on ع and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at بعد and point at ع inside it
- Trace it: ع three times, saying bād as you finish each one
- Write it: بعد once, joined, with the small loop in its middle
- Read it: بعد aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ع? (ain: it colours the vowel.) Which word did it come from? (بعد, bād, "after".)

267.3 کر کھا (khā kar) — one thing, then the next

> Say "I ate" and "I slept". (maiṅ ne khāyā, maiṅ soyā.) Two events. This lesson joins them into one sentence.

Grammar Lens: the stem and کر

> سویا۔ کر کھا
>
> khā kar soyā. — "Having eaten, he slept."

The first action keeps only its stem, کھا (khā), and takes کر (kar), written apart. The last verb carries the person and the time:

میں کھانا کھا کر سویا۔

maiṅ khānā khā kar soyā. — “I ate, then slept.”

سارا گھر آ کر بیٹھی۔

Sārā ghar ā kar baiṭhī. — “Sara came home and sat down.”

ہم کھا کر جائیں گے۔

ham khā kar jāeṅ ge. — “We’ll eat, then go.”

You have said one for a long time: مل کر (mil kar), “having met”, in the greeting that ends with خوشی ہوئی.

You’ll want to know: کے کر, and the last verb

کرنا (karnā) makes کے کر (kar ke), not a doubled کر:

میں گھر آیا۔ کے کر کام

kām kar ke maiṅ ghar āyā. — “I finished the work and came home.”

The last verb decides نے (ne). With پی (pī), “drank”, the doer takes it:

اس نے کھا کر چائے پی۔ us ne khā kar chāy pī. — “He ate, then drank tea.”

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I ate, then slept" — maiṅ khā kar soyā
- "She ate, then slept" — voh khā kar soī
- "We ate, then slept" — ham khā kar soe

Before you move on

"Having eaten"? (کر کھا.) "Having done the work"? (کے کر کام.)
Which verb decides نے? (The last one.)

267.4 پہلے، پھر (pehle, phir) — first, then, after that, in the end

Say "having eaten". (khā kar.) Then "before" and "then". (pehle, phir.) A story puts its steps in a row; these words mark the row.

Grammar Lens: first and then

نہایا۔ میں پہلے

pehle maiṅ nahāyā. — "First I had a bath."

کھایا۔ کھانا نے میں پھر phir maiṅ ne khānā khāyā. — "Then I ate."

پہلے (pehle) opens the first step and پھر (phir) the next. Each goes at the front of its line, so the order is clear before the verb arrives.

You'll want to know: after that, in the end

گیا۔ دفتر میں بعد کے اس us ke bād maiṅ daftar gayā. — "After that I went to the office."

آئی۔ گھر سارا میں آخر

ākhir meṅ Sārā ghar āī. — "In the end Sara came home."

اس کے بعد (us ke bād) is "after that": بعد with اس (us). آخر میں (ākhir meṅ) closes the story.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "First I went to the market" — pehle maiṅ bāzār gayā
- "Then I went to the market" — phir maiṅ bāzār gayā
- "In the end I went to the market" — ākhir meṅ maiṅ bāzār gayā

Before you move on

"First"? (پہلے.) "After that"? (اس کے بعد.) "In the end"? (آخر میں.)

267.5 (reading) — Sara's trip to Lahore

Ninety words of Urdu in a row, every one met before: Sara's trip, in order.

Read this

Line by line, with the romanization under each:

پچھلے ہفتے سارا لاہور گئی۔

pichhle hafte Sārā Lāhaur gaī.

اس کی دوست رہتی میں لاہور ہے۔

us kī dost Lāhaur meṅ rahtī hai.

پہلے اس نے اسٹیشن پر ٹکٹ لیا۔

pehle us ne isṭeshan par ṭikaṭ liyā.

بیٹھی۔ میں گاڑی ریل وہ پھر phir voh rel gāṛī meṅ baiṭhī.

تھی۔ رہی پڑھ کتاب وہ دوران کے سفر

safar ke daurān voh kitāb paṛh rahī thī.

تھی۔ رہی ہو بارش باہر

bāhar bārish ho rahī thī.

تھی۔ وہاں دوست تو پہنچی لاہور گاڑی جب jab gāṛī Lāhaur pahuṅchī to dost vahāṅ thī.

پی۔ چائے پر اسٹیشن نے دونوں

donoṅ ne isṭeshan par chāy pī.

گئیں۔ گھر وہ کر پی چائے

chāy pī kar voh ghar gaīṅ.

کھایا۔ کھانا نے انہوں کو شام shām ko unhoṅ ne khānā khāyā.

گئیں۔ بازار وہ بعد کے کھانے

khāne ke bād voh bāzār gaīṅ.

خریدا۔ تحفہ لیے کے امی نے سارا وہاں

vahāṅ Sārā ne ammī ke liye tohfā kharīdā.

گئی۔ سو کر تھک وہ میں آخر

ākhir meṅ voh thak kar so gaī.

تھا۔ دن اچھا ایک وہ

voh ek achchhā din thā.

Now with nothing under it. Read it once without stopping:

پہلے ہے۔ رہتی میں لاہور دوست کی اس گئی۔ لاہور سارا ہفتے پچھلے
کے سفر بیٹھی۔ میں گاڑی ریل وہ پھر لیا۔ ٹکٹ پر اسٹیشن نے اس
گاڑی جب تھی۔ رہی ہو بارش باہر تھی۔ رہی پڑھ کتاب وہ دوران
پی۔ چائے پر اسٹیشن نے دونوں تھی۔ وہاں دوست تو پہنچی لاہور
بعد کے کھانے کھایا۔ کھانا نے انہوں کو شام گئیں۔ گھر وہ کر پی چائے
تھک وہ میں آخر خریدا۔ تحفہ لیے کے امی نے سارا وہاں گئیں۔ بازار وہ
تھا۔ دن اچھا ایک وہ گئی۔ سو کر

Why it's said this way

گئی and بیٹھی follow Sara: no object. لیا ٹکٹ and خریدا تحفہ follow the thing, both masculine; پی چائے follows چائے, feminine. تھی رہی پڑھ and تھی رہی ہو are the scene.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- what Sara did first, at the station
- how the day ended, with ākhir meṅ

Before you move on

Why is تھی رہی پڑھ in the scene form? (The reading was going on during the journey.) Which words keep the steps in order? (پہلے, پھر, بعد کے, میں آخر.)

267.6 Review — a story in order

Say "I was reading" and "during the meal". (maiṅ paṛh rahā thā, khāne ke daurān.)

Your turn

- Say it: First I had a bath. Then I ate.
- Say it: After that I went to the office.
- Say it: I finished the work and came home.
- Say it: In the end I drank tea and slept.
- Say it: Sara's trip, in four lines: Lahore, the train, her friend, the market.
- Write it: بعد once, and point at ع inside it

Before you move on

"After the meal"? (کھانے کے بعد.) "Having eaten"? (کھا کر.) Now the other way round: in اس نے کھا کر چائے پی, which verb decides نے? (پی, the last.) And the four words that put a story in order? (پہلے, پھر, اس کے بعد, آخر میں.)

Chapter 268

What I Think, and Why

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I think (mujhe lagtā hai ki …, mere khayāl meṅ …) and give a reason (kyūṅki …, … kī vajah se).
>
> Complete UR-R268-opinion-and-reason: say what you think, and why.

268.1 لگنا (lagnā) — to seem, to be felt

> Before the new one: say "hunger" and "thirst". (bhūk, pyās.) Urdu usually says "I am hungry" another way: hunger has struck you.

You'll want to know: لگنا

لگنا — lagnā — "to seem; to be felt".

> مجھے بھوک لگی ہے۔
>
> mujhe bhūk lagī hai. — "I'm hungry."

The one who feels it takes مجھے (mujhe), and the verb follows the thing felt: بھوک (bhūk) is feminine, so لگی (lagī).

مجھے یہ فلم اچھی لگی۔

mujhe yih film achchhī lagī. — "I liked this film."

Word for word, "this film seemed good to me". فلم is feminine: اچھی لگی.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

لگنا (lagnā) is inherited. CDIAL traces it to Sanskrit lagyati, "adheres to" (CDIAL 10895): a hunger or a liking attaches itself to the one who feels it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- lagnā, then mujhe bhūk lagī hai
- "I'm thirsty" — mujhe pyās lagī hai
- "I liked this film" — mujhe yih film achchhī lagī

Before you move on

What does لگنا mean? ("To seem, to be felt".) "I'm hungry"? (مجھے بھوک لگی ہے.) Why لگی? (بھوک is feminine.)

268.2 خیال (khayāl) — a thought, an idea

Before the new one: say "I liked it", of a film. (mujhe achchhī lagī.) Then "to think". (sochnā.)

You'll want to know: خیال

خیال — khayāl — "a thought; an idea". It is masculine.

یہ اچھا خیال ہے۔

yih achchhā khayāl hai. — "That's a good idea."

مجھے ایک خیال آیا۔

mujhe ek khayāl āyā. — "An idea came to me."

An idea comes to you, as hunger strikes you: مجھے, and آیا (āyā) for a masculine thought.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

خیال (khayāl) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic khayāl, "a fancy, an image in the mind".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- khayāl, then yih achchhā khayāl hai
- "That's a bad idea" — yih burā khayāl hai
- "An idea came to me" — mujhe ek khayāl āyā

Before you move on

What does خیال mean? ("A thought, an idea".) Masculine or feminine? (Masculine: اچھا خیال.)

268.3 غلط (ghalat) — wrong

Before the new one: say "a good idea". (achchhā khayāl.) Then "fine, correct". (ṭhīk.) This lesson gives its opposite.

You'll want to know: غلط

غلط — ghalat — "wrong".

یہ جواب غلط ہے۔

yih javāb ghalat hai. — "This answer is wrong."

میں غلط تھا۔

maiṅ ghalat thā. — "I was wrong."

It does not change for a man or a woman: میں غلط تھی (maiṅ ghalat thī).

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

غلط (ghalat) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic ghalaṭ, "an error". Its first letter is new to your hand; the next lesson takes it out.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ghalat, then yih javāb ghalat hai
- "This answer is right" — yih javāb ṭhīk hai
- "I was wrong", as a woman — maiṅ ghalat thī

Before you move on

What does غلط mean? ("Wrong".) Its opposite? (ٹھیک.)

268.4 غ (ghain) — the letter that opens غلط

Before the new one: write ع once, and name it. (ain.)

Now say غلط (ghalat), "wrong". This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: غ

غ — ghain, the sound gh, made far back in the throat.

It opens غلط (ghalat). You already write ع: غ is that shape with one dot above it. At the start of a word, as here, it is the small open head alone, joined on to the letter after it; standing alone it keeps the deep bowl below the line.

Writing: غ

Put your pen on غ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at غلط and point at غ inside it
- Trace it: غ three times, saying gh as you finish each one
- Write it: غلط once, joined, with the dot above its first letter
- Read it: غلط aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — غ? (ghain, gh.) What tells it from ع? (The dot.) Which word did it come from? (غلط, ghalat, "wrong".)

268.5 مجھے لگتا ہے (mujhe lagtā hai) — what I think

Say "I'm hungry". (mujhe bhūk lagī hai.) Then "it will rain". (bārish ho gī.) Join the two verbs, and you have an opinion.

You'll want to know: کہ ہے لگتا مجھے

ہے۔ لگتا مجھے

mujhe lagtā hai. — "I think so."

Word for word, "it seems to me". کہ (ki), "that", hangs the thought on it:

گی۔ ہو بارش کہ ہے لگتا مجھے mujhe lagtā hai ki bārish ho gī. — "I think it will rain."

گا۔ آئے نہیں وہ کہ ہے لگتا مجھے mujhe lagtā hai ki voh nahīṅ āe gā. — "I don't think he'll come."

You'll want to know: in my view

ہے۔ ٹھیک یہ میں خیال میرے mere khayāl meṅ yih ṭhīk hai. — "In my view, this is right."

ہے۔ غلط یہ میں رائے میری

merī rāe meṅ yih ghalat hai. — "In my opinion, this is wrong."

خیال is masculine, so میرے (mere); رائے (rāe) is feminine, so میری (merī). To ask:

ہے؟ خیال کیا کا آپ

āp kā kyā khayāl hai? — "What do you think?"

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I think it will rain" — mujhe lagtā hai ki bārish ho gī
- "I think she will come" — mujhe lagtā hai ki voh āe gī
- "I think they will come" — mujhe lagtā hai ki voh āeṅ ge

Before you move on

"I think so"? (مجھے لگتا ہے.) "In my view"? (میرے خیال میں.) Why رائے میری? (رائے is feminine.)

268.6 کی وجہ سے (kī vajah se) — the reason

Say "because" and "a reason". (kyūṅki, vajah.) Then "I think so". (mujhe lagtā hai.) An opinion wants a reason.

You'll want to know: کیونکہ and چونکہ

میں نہیں آیا۔

maiṅ nahīṅ āyā. — "I didn't come."

میں نہیں آیا کیونکہ میں بیمار تھا۔

maiṅ nahīṅ āyā kyūṅki maiṅ bīmār thā. — "I didn't come because I was ill."

کیونکہ (kyūṅki) puts the reason second. چونکہ (chūṅki) puts it first, and the other half opens with اس لیے (is liye):

چونکہ میں بیمار تھا،

chūṅki maiṅ bīmār thā,

آیا۔ نہیں میں لیے اس

is liye maiṅ nahīṅ āyā. — "Since I was ill, I didn't come."

You'll want to know: a noun as the reason

رہے۔ پر گھر ہم سے وجہ کی بارش

bārish kī vajah se ham ghar par rahe. — "Because of the rain we stayed at home."

وجہ (vajah) is feminine, so کی (kī). The noun goes in front:

تھی۔ ناراض وہ سے وجہ کی دیر der kī vajah se voh nārāz thī. — "She was cross because of the delay."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Because of the rain I stayed at home" — bārish kī vajah se maiṅ ghar par rahā
- "Because of the delay I stayed at home" — der kī vajah se maiṅ ghar par rahā
- "Because of the heat I stayed at home" — garmī kī vajah se maiṅ ghar par rahā

Before you move on

"Because I was ill"? (تھا بیمار میں کیونکہ.) "Because of the rain"? (سے وجہ کی بارش.) Why کی? (وجہ is feminine.)

268.7 Review — what I think, and why

Say "having eaten" and "after the meal". (khā kar, khāne ke bād.)

Your turn

- Say it: I'm hungry. I liked this film.
- Say it: I think it will rain. What do you think?
- Say it: In my view this is right. In my opinion that is wrong.
- Say it: I didn't come because I was ill.
- Say it: Because of the rain we stayed at home.
- Write it: غلط once, and point at غ inside it

Before you move on

"I think he won't come"? (مجھے لگتا ہے کہ وہ نہیں آئے گا.) Now the other way round: چونکہ or کیونکہ to put the reason first? (چونکہ.) "Because of the delay"? (دیر کی وجہ سے.)

Chapter 269

Should, Must, and So

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what someone should do (āp ko jānā chāhiye), what I have to do (mujhe jānā paṛe gā), and what follows from a reason (is liye, to, chunāṅche).
>
> Complete UR-R269-advice-and-reasons: give advice, say what you have to do, and say what follows.

269.1 چاہیے جانا (jānā chāhiye) — should, and have to Say "I need water". (mujhe pānī chāhiye.) چاہیے (chāhiye) after a noun is "is needed". After a verb it is advice.

You'll want to know: should جانا۔ چاہیے

jānā chāhiye. — "One should go."

آپ کو جانا۔ چاہیے

āp ko jānā chāhiye. — "You should go."

The one who should takes کو (ko), and the verb stays in its -نا form:

چاہیے۔ کرنا آرام کو آپ

āp ko ārām karnā chāhiye. — "You should rest."

چاہیے۔ پینا پانی مجھے

mujhe pānī pīnā chāhiye. — "I should drink water."

چاہیے۔ جانا نہیں کو آپ

āp ko nahīṅ jānā chāhiye. — "You shouldn't go."

You'll want to know: have to

You know پڑنا (paṛnā) from بیمار پڑنا (bīmār paṛnā), "to fall ill". After a verb's -نا form it is "to have to", and it carries the time:

گا۔ پڑے جانا مجھے

mujhe jānā paṛe gā. — "I'll have to go."

ہے۔ پڑتا کرنا کام روز مجھے mujhe roz kām karnā paṛtā hai. — "I have to work every day."

پڑا۔ جانا مجھے کل

kal mujhe jānā paṛā. — "Yesterday I had to go."

چاہیے is advice; پڑنا is no choice.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I'll have to go" — mujhe jānā paṛe gā
- "I'll have to work" — mujhe kām karnā paṛe gā
- "I'll have to rest" — mujhe ārām karnā paṛe gā

Before you move on

"You should go"? (آپ کو جانا چاہیے.) "Yesterday I had to go"? (کل مجھے جانا پڑا.) Which one leaves no choice? (پڑنا.)

269.2 چنانچہ (chunāṅche) — therefore

Before the new one: say "so, that is why". (is liye.) Then "I'll have to go". (mujhe jānā paṛe gā.)

You'll want to know: چنانچہ

چنانچہ — chunāṅche — "therefore".

تھی، رہی ہو بارش

bārish ho rahī thī,

رہے۔ پر گھر ہم چنانچہ

chunāṅche ham ghar par rahe. — "It was raining; therefore we stayed at home."

It is formal: you will meet it in writing, in the news and in speeches. In talk, اس لیے (is liye) says the same.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چنانچہ (chunāṅche) is usually traced to Persian chunānche, "as, accordingly", built on chunān, "so, thus".

Your turn

- Say it: chunāṅche, then its everyday partner is liye
- Read it: رہے پر گھر ہم چنانچہ aloud, as if from a newspaper

Before you move on

What does چنانچہ mean? ("Therefore".) Where do you meet it? (In writing and speeches.) Its everyday partner? (لیے اس.)

269.3 لیے اس (is liye) — so

Say "because I was ill". (kyūṅki maiṅ bīmār thā.) That gives the reason. This lesson gives what follows from it.

You'll want to know: لیے اس

آیا۔ نہیں میں لیے اس

is liye maiṅ nahīṅ āyā. — "So I didn't come."

لیے اس (is liye), "for this", opens the result. The reason comes first, then the result:

تھی، رہی ہو دیر

der ho rahī thī,

لی۔ ٹیکسی نے ہم لیے اس is liye ham ne ṭaiksī lī. — "It was getting late, so we took a taxi."

ٹیکسی (ṭaiksī) is feminine: لی (lī).

You'll want to know: تو, "then"

ہے۔ بارش باہر

bāhar bārish hai. — "It's raining outside."

تو گھر میں پر رہوں گا۔

to maiṅ ghar par rahūṅ gā. — "Then I'll stay at home."

تو (to) opens an answer that follows from what someone said: "so, then". In writing, چنانچہ does the work of اس لیے.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I was ill, so I stayed at home" — maiṅ bīmār thā, is liye maiṅ ghar par rahā
- "It was raining, so I stayed at home" — bārish ho rahī thī, is liye maiṅ ghar par rahā
- "It was getting late, so I stayed at home" — der ho rahī thī, is liye maiṅ ghar par rahā

Before you move on

Which comes first, the reason or اس لیے? (The reason.) "Then I'll stay at home"? (تو گھر میں پر رہوں گا۔) And the formal word? (چنانچہ.)

269.4 Review — should, must, and so

Say "I think it will rain". (mujhe lagtā hai ki bārish ho gī.)
Then "because of the rain". (bārish kī vajah se.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- You should rest. You shouldn't go.
- I have to work every day.
- Yesterday I had to go to the office.

- I was ill, so I didn't come.
- It's raining? Then I'll stay at home.

Before you move on

"You should drink water"? (آپ کو پانی پینا چاہیے.) Now the other way round: which word says there is no choice, چاہیے or پڑنا? (پڑنا.) The formal word for اس لیے? (چنانچہ.)

Chapter 270

Asking the Way

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask the way and how far it is (isṭeshan kaise jāte haiṅ? kitnī dūr hai?), and ask or tell someone politely (bāeṅ muṛiye, zarā batāiye).
>
> Complete UR-R270-asking-the-way: ask the way, and ask or tell politely.

270.1 کتنا (kitnā) — how much, how many

> Before the new one: say "a fare" and "far". (kirāyā, dūr.) A traveller asks about both.

You'll want to know: کتنا

کتنا — kitnā — "how much; how many".

کتنا کرایہ ہے؟

kirāyā kitnā hai? — "How much is the fare?"

It follows its noun like اچھا (achchhā): کتنا for کرایہ, کتنے (kitne) for a plural.

تھے؟ مسافر کتنے

kitne musāfir the? — “How many passengers were there?”

دور کتنی (kitnī dūr), “how far”, goes as one pair:

ہے؟ دور کتنی اسٹیشن

isṭeshan kitnī dūr hai? — “How far is the station?”

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کتنا (kitnā) is inherited. CDIAL lists its Hindi twin, with the sense “how great?”, under a reconstructed kiyatta (CDIAL 3167).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kitnā, then kirāyā kitnā hai?
- “How far is the market?” — bāzār kitnī dūr hai?

Before you move on

What does کتنا mean? (“How much, how many”.) “How far is the station?” (ہے؟ دور کتنی اسٹیشن)

270.2 ذرا (zarā) — a little

Before the new one: say “how much is the fare?” (kirāyā kitnā hai?) Then “expensive”. (mahãgā.)

You'll want to know: ذرا

ذرا — zarā — "a little".

یہ مہنگا ذرا ہے۔

yih zarā mahãgā hai. — "This is a little expensive."

ذرا آرام سے۔

zarā ārām se. — "A little more slowly, please."

Before a request it softens it, as "please" does. The next lessons put it to work.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ذرا (zarā) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic dharra, "a speck, an atom". Its first letter is new to your hand; the next lesson takes it out.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- zarā, then zarā ārām se
- "This is a little difficult" — yih zarā mushkil hai

Before you move on

What does ذرا mean? ("A little".) What does it do before a request? (It softens it.)

270.3 ذ (zāl) — the letter that opens ذرا

Before the new one: write غ once, and name it. (ghain.)

Now say ذرا (zarā), "a little". This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ذ

ذ — zāl, the sound z.

It opens ذرا (zarā). You already write و: ذ is that shape with one dot above it. Like و, it does not join the letter after it. It is one more way Urdu writes z, beside ز, ض and ظ, and it comes in words from Arabic.

Writing: ذ

Put your pen on ذ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at ذرا and point at ذ inside it
- Trace it: ذ three times, saying z as you finish each one
- Write it: ذرا once, with the dot above its first letter
- Read it: ذرا aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ذ? (zāl, z.) What tells it from و? (The dot.) Which word did it come from? (ذرا, zarā, "a little".)

270.4 کیسے جاتے ہیں (kaise jāte haiṅ) — asking the way

Say "where?" (kahāṅ?) Then "how far is the station?" (iṣteshan kitnī dūr hai?) Now ask the way there.

You'll want to know: how do you get there?

ہے؟ کہاں اسٹیشن

isṭeshan kahāṅ hai? — "Where is the station?"

ہیں؟ جاتے کیسے اسٹیشن

isṭeshan kaise jāte haiṅ? — "How do you get to the station?"

Word for word, "how do people go to the station?": the plural ہیں جاتے (jāte haiṅ) asks about anyone.

ہے؟ لمبا راستہ کیا

kyā rāstā lambā hai? — "Is it a long way?"

You'll want to know: the polite request

جائیے۔ سیدھے

sīdhe jāiye. — "Go straight on."

جائیے (jāiye) is جانا asked of someone you call آپ. The stem takes -یے (-iye); after a vowel, -ئیے:

مڑیے۔ بائیں

مڑیے۔ دائیں بعد کے پل

pul ke bād dāeṅ muṛiye. — "After the bridge, turn right."

ہے؟ کہاں بازار بتائیے، ذرا

zarā batāiye, bāzār kahāṅ hai? — "Could you tell me where the market is?"

سنیے (suniye), "listen", opens a question to a stranger: "excuse me". A few verbs bend the stem, among them دیجیے (dījiye) from دینا, لیجیے (lījiye) from لینا, کیجیے (kījiye) from کرنا.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Turn left" — bāeṅ muṛiye
- "Turn right" — dāeṅ muṛiye
- "Go straight on" — sīdhe jāiye

Before you move on

"How do you get to the market?" (بازار کیسے جاتے ہیں؟) "Turn right"? (مڑیے دائیں.) "Please tell me"? (بتائیے ذرا.)

270.5 Review — asking the way

> Say "you should go" and "so I didn't come". (āp ko jānā chāhiye, is liye maiṅ nahīṅ āyā.)

Your turn

- Say it: Excuse me, how do you get to the station?
- Say it: How far is it? How much is the fare?
- Say it: Go straight on, then turn left after the bridge.
- Say it: Could you tell me where the market is?
- Write it: ذرا once, and point at ذ inside it

Before you move on

"How many passengers?" (مسافر؟ کتنے) Now the other way round: from مڑیے, what is the verb? (مڑنا.) The polite form of دینا? (دیجیے.)

Chapter 271

At the Station, and When Things Go Wrong

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can buy a ticket and ask when the next train leaves (ek ṭikaṭ dījiye, aglī gāṛī kab hai?), and say what went wrong (merā thailā kho gayā, merī gāṛī chhūṭ gaī).

Complete UR-R271-at-the-station: buy a ticket, ask when, and say what went wrong.

271.1 ایک ٹکٹ دیجیے (ek ṭikaṭ dījiye) — at the ticket window

Say "turn left", politely. (bāeṅ muṛiye.) Then "a ticket". (ṭikaṭ.) At the window you ask for one.

You'll want to know: a ticket, please

ایک ٹکٹ دیجیے۔

ek ṭikaṭ dījiye. — "A ticket, please."

دیجیے (dījiye) is دینا asked politely. The place goes in front with کا (kā):

ایک ٹکٹ لاہور کا دیجیے۔

Lāhaur kā ek ṭikaṭ dījiye. — "A ticket to Lahore, please."

ٹکٹ کتنے کا ہے؟

ṭikaṭ kitne kā hai? — "How much is the ticket?"

کتنے کا (kitne kā), "of how much", asks a price.

You'll want to know: when does it leave?

گاڑی اگلی کب ہے؟

aglī gāṛī kab hai? — "When is the next train?"

گاڑی (gāṛī) is feminine, so اگلی (aglī), and so the future too:

گاڑی کتنے بجے جائے گی؟

gāṛī kitne baje jāe gī? — "What time will the train leave?"

وہ چار بجے جائے گی۔

voh chār baje jāe gī. — "It will leave at four."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "When is the next train?" — aglī gāṛī kab hai?
- "When is the next bus?" — aglī bas kab hai?
- "When is the next taxi?" — aglī ṭaiksī kab hai?

Before you move on

"A ticket, please"? (ایک ٹکٹ دیجیے۔) "How much is it?" (کتنے کا ہے؟)

Why اگلی? (گاڑی is feminine.)

271.2 چھوٹنا (chhūṭnā) — to be missed, to be left behind

Before the new one: say "when is the next train?" (aglī gāṛī kab hai?) Then "small". (chhoṭā.) Keep that word in mind.

You'll want to know: چھوٹنا

چھوٹنا — chhūṭnā — "to be missed; to be left behind".

گئی۔ چھوٹ گاڑی میری

merī gāṛī chhūṭ gaī. — "I missed my train."

Word for word, "my train got left behind". The train is the subject, so گئی (gaī), feminine; you say nothing about yourself but میری.

گئی۔ چھوٹ بس میری

merī bas chhūṭ gaī. — "I missed my bus."

چھوٹ (chhūṭ) is spelled like چھوٹا (chhoṭā), "small", without its ending. Urdu leaves the vowel unwritten; the romanization tells them apart.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چھوٹنا (chhūṭnā) is inherited. CDIAL traces it to a reconstructed kṣuṭyate, "is released" (CDIAL 3707), and lists its Hindi twin with the sense "escapes".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chhūṭnā, then merī gāṛī chhūṭ gaī
- "I missed my bus" — merī bas chhūṭ gaī

Before you move on

What does چھوٹنا mean? ("To be missed, to be left behind".) "I missed my train"? (میری گاڑی چھوٹ گئی.) And چھوٹا? (chhoṭā, "small".)

271.3 حادثہ (hādsā) — an accident

Before the new one: say "I missed my train". (merī gāṛī chhūṭ gaī.) Then "a road". (saṛak.)

You'll want to know: حادثہ

حادثہ — hādsā — "an accident". It is masculine.

ایک حادثہ ہوا۔

ek hādsā huā. — "There was an accident."

Word for word, "an accident happened": ہوا (huā), masculine.

سڑک پر حادثہ ہوا۔

saṛak par hādsā huā. — "There was an accident on the road."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

حادثہ (hādsā) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic ḥāditha, "an event": something that happens. Its fourth letter is new to your hand; the next lesson takes it out.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hādsā, then ek hādsā huā
- "There was an accident on the bridge" — pul par hādsā huā

Before you move on

What does حادثہ mean? ("An accident".) Why ہوا and not ہوئی? (حادثہ is masculine.)

271.4 ث (se) — the letter inside حادثہ

Before the new one: write ذ once, and name it. (zāl.)

Now say حادثہ (hādsā), "an accident". This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ث

ث — se, the sound s, the same as س.

It is the fourth letter of حادثہ (hādsā). You already write ت: ث is that shape with three dots above it instead of two. Inside a word it is a single short tooth wearing the three dots. Urdu keeps it for words from Arabic.

Writing: ث

Put your pen on ث and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at حادثہ and point at ث inside it
- Trace it: ث three times, saying s as you finish each one
- Write it: حادثہ once, joined, with three dots on the tooth
- Read it: حادثہ aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ث? (se, s.) What tells it from ت? (Three dots, not two.) Which word did it come from? (حادثہ, hādsā, "an accident".)

271.5 گیا کھو (kho gayā) — when things go wrong

Say "I missed my train" and "there was an accident". (merī gāṛī chhūṭ gaī, ek hādsā huā.) Then "to lose". (khonā.)

You'll want to know: it got lost

گیا۔ کھو تھیلا

thailā kho gayā. — "The bag got lost."

گیا۔ کھو تھیلا میرا

merā thailā kho gayā. — "My bag got lost."

گئی۔ کھو کتاب میری

merī kitāb kho gaī. — "My book got lost."

The lost thing is the subject, as in چھوٹ گاڑی: گیا / گئی for the masculine تھیلا (thailā), گئی for کتاب. The stem with گیا says it is gone, and no نے comes in.

You'll want to know: telling someone

میں نے پولیس کو بتایا۔

maiṅ ne polīs ko batāyā. — "I told the police."

میں تھانے گیا۔

maiṅ thāne gayā. — "I went to the police station."

جب حادثہ ہوا،

jab hādsā huā,

ہم تو سڑک پر تھے۔

to ham saṛak par the. — "When the accident happened, we were on the road."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "My bag got lost" — merā thailā kho gayā
- "My ticket got lost" — merā ṭikaṭ kho gayā
- "My book got lost" — merī kitāb kho gaī

Before you move on

"My bag got lost"? (میرا تھیلا کھو گیا.) Does it take نے? (No.) "I told the police"? (میں نے پولیس کو بتایا.)

271.6 Review — at the station

Say "how do you get to the station?" (isṭeshan kaise jāte haiṅ?) Then "turn left". (bāeṅ muṛiye.)

Your turn

- Say it: A ticket to Lahore, please. How much is it?
- Say it: When is the next train? It will leave at four.
- Say it: I missed my train.
- Say it: My bag got lost, and I told the police.
- Say it: There was an accident on the road.
- Write it: حادثہ once, and point at ث inside it

Before you move on

"A ticket, please"? (ٹکٹ ایک دیجیے.) Now the other way round: in میری گاڑی چھوٹ گئی, which word sets گئی? (گاڑی.) "My book got lost"? (میری کتاب کھو گئی.) Which of these takes نے: گیا کھو or بتایا? (بتایا.)

Chapter 272

Feelings and Hopes

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how I feel or felt (maiṅ khush hūṅ, mujhe ḍar lagā), what I want to become (maiṅ ustād bannā chāhtī hūṅ) and what I hope (mujhe ummīd hai ki …).
>
> Complete UR-R272-feelings-and-hopes: say how you feel, what you want to become, and what you hope.

272.1 ڈر (ḍar) — fear

Before the new one: say "I'm hungry". (mujhe bhūk lagī hai.) Fear is said the same way.

You'll want to know: ڈر

ڈر — ḍar — "fear". It is masculine.

مجھے ڈر لگتا ہے۔

mujhe ḍar lagtā hai. — "I'm afraid."

Fear strikes you, as hunger does: مجھے, and لگتا (lagtā) for a masculine ڈر. What you fear takes سے (se):

مجھے کتوں سے ڈر لگتا ہے۔

mujhe kuttoṅ se ḍar lagtā hai. — "I'm afraid of dogs."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ڈر (ḍar) is inherited. CDIAL traces it to Sanskrit dara, "fear" (CDIAL 6186), and lists the Hindi form ḍar, with the curled-back ḍ. Its first letter is new to your hand; the next lesson takes it out.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ḍar, then mujhe ḍar lagtā hai
- "She got scared" — use ḍar lagā

Before you move on

What does ڈر mean? ("Fear".) "I'm afraid of dogs"? (مجھے کتوں سے ڈر لگتا ہے.)

272.2 ڈ (ḍāl) — the letter that opens ڈر

Before the new one: write ش once, and name it. (se.)

Now say ڈر (ḍar), "fear". This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ڈ

ڈ — ḍāl, the sound ḍ, made with the tongue curled back, as for ٹ (ṭe) and ڑ (ṛe).

It opens ڈر (ḍar). You already write و: ڈ is that shape wearing the small mark that ٹ and ڑ wear above them. Like و, it does not join the letter after it.

Writing: ڈ

Put your pen on ڈ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at ڈر and point at ڈ inside it
- Trace it: ڈ three times, saying ḍ as you finish each one
- Write it: ڈر once, with the small mark above its first letter
- Read it: ڈر aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ڈ? (ḍāl, ḍ.) What tells it from د? (The small mark that ٹ wears.) Which word did it come from? (ڈر, ḍar, "fear".)

272.3 ہوں خوش میں (maiṅ khush hūṅ) — how I feel

Say "I'm afraid". (mujhe ḍar lagtā hai.) Then "happy" and "sad". (khush, udās.) Urdu says a feeling two ways.

You'll want to know: I am happy, she was sad

ہوں۔ خوش میں

maiṅ khush hūṅ. — "I'm happy."

تھی۔ اداس وہ کل

kal voh udās thī. — "Yesterday she was sad."

تھا۔ پریشان میں

maiṅ pareshān thā. — "I was worried."

The feeling word stays as it is; ہوں, تھی, تھا follow the person. With ہوا (huā) the feeling arrives:

یہ سن کر وہ خوش ہوئی۔

yih sun kar voh khush huī. — "Hearing this, she was pleased."

You'll want to know: what strikes you

مجھے ڈر لگا۔

mujhe ḍar lagā. — "I got scared."

مجھے یہ شہر اچھا لگا۔

mujhe yih shahr achchhā lagā. — "I liked this city."

A feeling that strikes you, or a thing that seems good, takes مجھے and لگنا, and the verb follows the thing: شہر is masculine, اچھا لگا. To ask:

آپ کو فلم کیسی لگی؟

āp ko film kaisī lagī? — "How did you like the film?"

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I was happy" — maiṅ khush thā
- "I was sad" — maiṅ udās thā
- "I was worried" — maiṅ pareshān thā

Before you move on

"She was sad"? (وہ اداس تھی۔) "I got scared"? (مجھے ڈر لگا۔) "I liked the film"? (مجھے فلم اچھی لگی۔)

272.4 بننا (bannā) — to become, to be made

Before the new one: say "I'm happy". (maiṅ khush hūṅ.) Then "to make". (banānā.) This lesson gives its partner.

You'll want to know: بننا

بننا — bannā — "to become; to be made".

وہ استاد بنی۔

voh ustād banī. — "She became a teacher."

یہ گھر پچھلے سال بنا۔

yih ghar pichhle sāl banā. — "This house was built last year."

It has no object, so no نے: بنی follows her. Its partner بنانا (banānā), "to make", takes an object and نے: اس نے گھر بنایا (us ne ghar banāyā).

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

بننا (bannā) is inherited. CDIAL traces it to Sanskrit vanati, "desires, gains, makes ready" (CDIAL 11260), and gives "to be made" as a Hindi sense.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bannā, then voh ustād banī
- "He became a teacher" — voh ustād banā

Before you move on

What does بننا mean? ("To become, to be made".) Does it take نے? (No: بنانا does.)

272.5 امید (ummīd) — hope

Before the new one: say "I think she will come". (mujhe lagtā hai ki voh āe gī.) Now say it as a hope.

You'll want to know: امید

امید — ummīd — "hope". It is feminine.

مجھے امید ہے۔

mujhe ummīd hai. — "I hope so."

مجھے امید ہے کہ وہ آئے گی۔

mujhe ummīd hai ki voh āe gī. — "I hope she'll come."

Word for word, "to me there is hope": مجھے, then کہ (ki) and what you hope, in the future.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

امید (ummīd) is usually traced to Persian ummēd, "hope".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ummīd, then mujhe ummīd hai
- "I hope it won't rain" — mujhe ummīd hai ki bārish nahīṅ ho gī

Before you move on

What does امید mean? (“Hope”.) “I hope she’ll come”? (امید مجھے گی آئے وہ کہ ہے.)

272.6 ہوں چاہتی بننا (bannā chāhtī hūṅ) — what I want to become

Say “she became a teacher”. (voh ustād banī.) Then “I want to go”. (maiṅ jānā chāhtā hūṅ.) Put the two together.

You’ll want to know: I want to become ہوں۔ استاد میں

maiṅ ustād hūṅ. — “I’m a teacher.”

ہوں۔ چاہتی بننا استاد میں

maiṅ ustād bannā chāhtī hūṅ. — “I want to become a teacher.”

چاہنا (chāhnā) takes بننا whole, as it takes جانا: ہوں چاہتی بننا, a woman speaking.

ہے۔ چاہتا بننا نرس وہ

voh nars bannā chāhtā hai. — “He wants to become a nurse.”

You’ll want to know: my dream, my hope

ہے۔ بننا استاد خواب میرا

merā khvāb ustād bannā hai. — “My dream is to become a teacher.”

خواب (khvāb) is masculine: میرا. A hope looks ahead, so it takes the future:

گی۔ بنوں استاد میں کہ ہے امید مجھے mujhe ummīd hai ki maiṅ ustād banūṅ gī. — “I hope I’ll become a teacher.”

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I want to become a nurse" — maiṅ nars bannā chāhtī hūṅ
- "I want to become a player" — maiṅ khilāṛī bannā chāhtī hūṅ
- "I want to become an engineer" — maiṅ injīniyar bannā chāhtī hūṅ

Before you move on

"I want to become a teacher", a man speaking? (چاہتا بننا استاد میں ہوں.) "My dream"? (خواب میرا.) "I hope she'll come"? (امید مجھے ہے کہ وہ آئے گی.)

272.7 Review — feelings and hopes

Say "a ticket, please" and "my bag got lost". (ek ṭikaṭ dījiye, merā thailā kho gayā.)

Your turn

- Say it: I'm happy today. Yesterday I was sad.
- Say it: I'm afraid of dogs.
- Say it: I liked this city. How did you like the film?
- Say it: She became a teacher. I want to become a nurse.
- Say it: My dream is to become a player. I hope I will become one.
- Write it: ڈر once, and point at ڈ inside it

Before you move on

"I got scared"? (مجھے ڈر لگا.) Now the other way round: in مجھے یہ شہر لگا اچھا, which word sets لگا اچھا? (شہر.) "I hope"? (مجھے امید ہے.)

Chapter 273

Comparing, and How Long

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can compare two things (bas ṭaiksī se sastī hai, sab se achchhā), and say how long or since when (do sāl se, subah se shām tak, din bhar).
>
> Complete UR-R273-comparing-and-time: compare two things, and say how long.

273.1 بڑا سے (se baṛā) — bigger than, the biggest

Say "big" and "small". (baṛā, chhoṭā.) Then "I liked this city". (mujhe yih shahr achchhā lagā.) Now compare two cities.

You'll want to know: bigger than ہے۔ بڑا لاہور

Lāhaur baṛā hai. — "Lahore is big."

ہے۔ بڑا سے گھر اس گھر یہ

yih ghar us ghar se baṛā hai. — "This house is bigger than that one."

Urdu adds no "-er" here. سے (se), "from, than", goes after the thing compared, and the word stays as it is:

بس ٹیکسی سے سستی ہے۔

bas ṭaiksī se sastī hai. — "The bus is cheaper than a taxi."

بس is feminine: سستی. زیادہ (zyādā) and کم (kam) say more and less:

مجھے چائے زیادہ پسند ہے۔ mujhe chāy zyādā pasand hai. — "I like tea more."

You'll want to know: the most

یہ سب سے اچھا ہے۔

yih sab se achchhā hai. — "This is the best."

وہ سب سے لمبی لڑکی ہے۔

voh sab se lambī laṛkī hai. — "She is the tallest girl."

سب سے (sab se), "than all", makes the most: سب سے بڑا, سب سے سستا.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "This is the biggest" — yih sab se baṛā hai
- "This is the smallest" — yih sab se chhoṭā hai
- "This is the cheapest" — yih sab se sastā hai

Before you move on

"Cheaper than a taxi"? (ٹیکسی سے سستی.) "The best"? (سب سے اچھا.) Where does سے go? (After the thing compared.)

273.2 بہتر (behtar) — better

Before the new one: say "the bus is cheaper than a taxi". (bas ṭaiksī se sastī hai.) "Good" has a word of its own for "better".

You'll want to know: بہتر

بہتر — behtar — "better".

یہ بہتر ہے۔

yih behtar hai. — "This is better."

بس ٹیکسی سے بہتر ہے۔

bas ṭaiksī se behtar hai. — "The bus is better than a taxi."

میں آج بہتر ہوں۔

āj maiṅ behtar hūṅ. — "I'm better today."

It does not change for a man or a woman, and it takes سے like any comparison.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

بہتر (behtar) is usually traced to Persian behtar, "better", built from beh, "good", and the Persian ending -tar, "more". Urdu took it whole.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- behtar, then yih behtar hai
- "Tea is better than coffee" — chāy kāfī se behtar hai

Before you move on

What does بہتر mean? ("Better".) "I'm better today"? (بہتر میں آج ہوں۔)

273.3 صبح (subah) — the morning

Before the new one: say "this is better". (yih behtar hai.) Then "evening". (shām.) This lesson gives the other end of the day.

You'll want to know: صبح

صبح — subah — "the morning". It is feminine.

صبح بارش ہوئی۔

subah bārish huī. — "It rained in the morning."

صبح میں جلدی اٹھتا ہوں۔

maiṅ subah jaldī uṭhtā hūṅ. — "I get up early in the morning."

Like شام (shām), it can stand alone as a time: "in the morning".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

صبح (subah) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic ṣubḥ, "morning, dawn". Its first letter is new to your hand; the next lesson takes it out.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- subah, then subah bārish huī
- "I get up early in the morning" — maiṅ subah jaldī uṭhtā hūṅ

Before you move on

What does صبح mean? ("The morning".) Its partner at the end of the day? (شام.)

273.4 ص (suād) — the letter that opens صبح

Before the new one: write ڈ and ض once each, and name them. (ḍāl, zuād.)

Now say صبح (subah), "the morning". This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ص

ص — suād, the sound s, the same as س.

It opens صبح (subah). You already write ض (zuād): ص is the same body without its dot, an oval loop with a short tooth. At the start of a word, as here, the loop joins the next letter; standing alone, it ends in a bowl below the line. Urdu keeps it for words from Arabic.

Writing: ص

Put your pen on ص and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at صبح and point at ص inside it
- Trace it: ص three times, saying s as you finish each one

- Write it: صبح once, joined, with no dot on its first letter
- Read it: صبح aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ص? (suād, s.) What tells it from ض? (No dot.) Which word did it come from? (صبح, subah, "the morning".)

273.5 سے سال دو (do sāl se) — how long, and since when

Say "the morning" and "a year". (subah, sāl.) Then "two". (do.)

You'll want to know: since, and for سے۔ سال دو

do sāl se. — "For two years."

ہوں۔ رہتا یہاں سے سال دو میں

maiṅ do sāl se yahāṅ rahtā hūṅ. — "I've lived here for two years."

سے (se), "from", after a time says since when, or for how long. Urdu keeps the present: the living began two years ago and goes on.

ہے۔ بیمار سے کل وہ

voh kal se bīmār hai. — "She's been ill since yesterday."

You'll want to know: from ... to, all day

ہوں۔ کرتا کام تک شام سے صبح میں

maiṅ subah se shām tak kām kartā hūṅ. — "I work from morning to evening."

سے opens the span and تک (tak), "up to", closes it. بھر (bhar), "full", after a time word fills it:

کل دن بھر بارش ہوئی۔

kal din bhar bārish huī. — "Yesterday it rained all day."

رات بھر (rāt bhar) is "all night".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I've lived here for two years" — maiṅ do sāl se yahāṅ rahtā hūṅ
- "I've lived here for three years" — maiṅ tīn sāl se yahāṅ rahtā hūṅ
- "I've lived here for a year" — maiṅ ek sāl se yahāṅ rahtā hūṅ

Before you move on

"Since yesterday"? (کل سے.) "From morning to evening"? (صبح سے شام تک.) "All day"? (دن بھر.)

273.6 Review — comparing, and how long

Say "I want to become a teacher" and "I'm happy". (maiṅ ustād bannā chāhtā hūṅ, maiṅ khush hūṅ.)

Your turn

- Say it: The bus is cheaper than a taxi. In my view, it is better.
- Say it: This is the best tea.
- Say it: I've lived in Lahore for two years.
- Say it: I work from morning to evening.
- Say it: Yesterday it rained all day.
- Write it: صبح once, and point at ص inside it

Before you move on

"Bigger than this"? (بڑا سے اس.) Now the other way round: what does سے سب add? (The most.) "Since yesterday"? (سے کل.)

Chapter 274

If, Then, or Else

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what will happen if something happens (agar bārish huī, to …; agar voh āe gī, to …), give a warning with varnā, and set a condition (ek shart par).
>
> Complete UR-R274-if-and-otherwise: say what will happen if something happens, or else.

274.1 اگر … تو (agar … to) — if, then

Say "if". (agar.) Then "then I'll stay at home". (to maiṅ ghar par rahūṅ gā.) اگر opens a condition; تو opens what follows.

You'll want to know: اگر … تو

وقت اگر، ہے

agar vaqt hai,

آئیے۔ تو

to āiye. — "If you have time, come."

اگر (agar), "if", opens the condition; تو (to), "then", opens the result. In talk, تو often drops out.

ہیں، چاہتے آپ اگر

agar āp chāhte haiṅ,

گے۔ چلیں ہم تو

to ham chaleṅ ge. — "If you like, we'll go."

You'll want to know: ورنہ, or else

چلیے، جلدی

jaldī chaliye,

گی۔ جائے چھوٹ گاڑی ورنہ

varnā gāṛī chhūṭ jāe gī. — "Hurry, or we'll miss the train."

ورنہ (varnā), "otherwise", turns the condition round: do this, or that will happen.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "If you have time, come" — agar vaqt hai, to āiye
- "If you have time, sit down" — agar vaqt hai, to baiṭhiye
- "If you have time, stay" — agar vaqt hai, to rukiye

Before you move on

Which word opens the condition? (اگر.) Which opens the result? (تو.) "Or else"? (ورنہ.)

274.2 اگر بارش ہوئی (agar bārish huī) — if it rains

Say "it will rain". (bārish ho gī.) Then "if you have time, come". (agar vaqt hai, to āiye.) Now a condition about tomorrow.

You'll want to know: the plain past after اگر

اگر بارش، ہوئی

agar bārish huī,

تو ہم گھر پر رہیں گے۔

to ham ghar par raheṅ ge. — "If it rains, we'll stay at home."

ہوئی (huī) is the plain past, but the rain has not come: Urdu pictures it as already there, and the result is in the future.

اگر گاڑی چھوٹ، گئی

agar gāṛī chhūṭ gaī,

تو ہم بس سے جائیں گے۔

to ham bas se jāeṅ ge. — "If we miss the train, we'll go by bus."

You'll want to know: the future after اگر

اگر وہ کل آئے، گی

agar voh kal āe gī,

تو ہم بازار جائیں گے۔

to ham bāzār jāeṅ ge. — "If she comes tomorrow, we'll go to the market."

The future can stand in both halves. Either way, the result is what will happen.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "If it rains, we'll stay at home" — agar bārish huī, to ham ghar par raheṅ ge
- "If it rains, we'll go by bus" — agar bārish huī, to ham bas se jāeṅ ge
- "If it rains, we'll take a taxi" — agar bārish huī, to ham ṭaiksī leṅ ge

Before you move on

"If it rains"? (اگر بارش ہوئی.) Has it rained? (No: Urdu pictures it.)

"If she comes tomorrow"? (اگر وہ کل آئے گی.)

274.3 شرط (shart) — a condition

Before the new one: say "if she comes tomorrow, we'll go". (agar voh kal āe gī, to ham jāeṅ ge.) Her coming is the condition.

You'll want to know: شرط

شرط — shart — "a condition". It is feminine.

ایک شرط ہے۔

ek shart hai. — "There's one condition."

میں ایک شرط پر آؤں گا۔

maiṅ ek shart par āūṅ gā. — "I'll come on one condition."

یہ شرط ہے کہ آپ بھی آئیں گے۔

shart yih hai ki āp bhī āeṅ ge. — "The condition is that you'll come too."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

شرط (shart) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic sharṭ, "a condition".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- shart, then ek shart par
- "I'll go on one condition" — maiṅ ek shart par jāūṅ gā

Before you move on

What does شرط mean? ("A condition".) "On one condition"? (ایک پر شرط.)

274.4 Review — if, then, or else

Say "the bus is cheaper than a taxi" and "this is the best". (bas ṭaiksī se sastī hai, yih sab se achchhā hai.) Then "I've lived here for two years". (maiṅ do sāl se yahāṅ rahtā hūṅ.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- I hope she'll come. If she comes tomorrow, we'll go to the market.
- If you have time, come.
- Hurry, or we'll miss the train.
- If it rains, we'll stay at home.
- If we miss the train, we'll go by bus.
- I'll come on one condition.

Before you move on

"If it rains"? (ہوئی بارش اگر.) Now the other way round: what does ورنہ warn about? (What will happen if you don't.) In آئے کل وہ اگر گی, which time is the verb in? (The future.)

Chapter 275

It Depends, and What Would Have Been

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what something depends on (yih mausam par munhasir hai), say what would be or would have been (agar vaqt hotā, to maiṅ ātā), and tell a short story in six written lines.
>
> Complete UR-R275-depends-and-would: say what something depends on, and what would have been.

275.1 منحصر (munhasir) — dependent

Before the new one: say "on one condition". (ek shart par.) Then "the weather". (mausam.)

You'll want to know: منحصر

منحصر — munhasir — "dependent".

یہ موسم پر منحصر ہے۔

yih mausam par munhasir hai. — "It depends on the weather."

What it depends on takes پر (par), "on", and ہے closes it.

سب کچھ آپ پر منحصر ہے۔

sab kuchh āp par munhasir hai. — "Everything depends on you."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

منحصر (munhasir) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic munḥaṣir, "confined, limited". Urdu uses it with پر for "dependent on".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- munhasir, then yih mausam par munhasir hai
- "It depends on you" — yih āp par munhasir hai

Before you move on

What does منحصر mean? ("Dependent".) "It depends on the weather"? (یہ موسم پر منحصر ہے۔)

275.2 پر منحصر ہے (par munhasir hai) — it depends

Say "it depends on the weather". (yih mausam par munhasir hai.) Then "if it rains". (agar bārish huī.) A question often gets this answer.

You'll want to know: it depends on ...

یہ منحصر ہے۔

yih munhasir hai. — "It depends."

آئیں کل آپ کیا گے؟

kyā āp kal āeṅ ge? — "Will you come tomorrow?"

ہے۔ منحصر پر کام یہ

yih kām par munhasir hai. — "It depends on work."

یہ (yih), "this", is the plan in question; what decides it takes پر:

ہے۔ منحصر پر پیسوں یہ

yih paisoṅ par munhasir hai. — "It depends on the money."

You'll want to know: it depends on whether …

When a whole question decides it, پر اس (is par) stands for it, and کہ (ki) brings the question:

ہے، منحصر پر اس یہ

yih is par munhasir hai,

نہیں۔ یا گی ہو بارش کہ ki bārish ho gī yā nahīṅ. — "It depends on whether it will rain or not."

ہے، منحصر پر اس یہ

yih is par munhasir hai,

گی۔ جائے کب گاڑی کہ ki gāṛī kab jāe gī. — "It depends on when the train leaves."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "It depends on the weather" — yih mausam par munhasir hai
- "It depends on the money" — yih paisoṅ par munhasir hai
- "It depends on Sara" — yih Sārā par munhasir hai

Before you move on

"It depends on work"? (یہ کام پر منحصر ہے۔) And before a whole question? (یہ اس پر منحصر ہے کہ …)

275.3 اگر وقت ہوتا (agar vaqt hotā) — what would have been

Say "it depends on the weather", then "it depends on whether it will rain". (yih mausam par munhasir hai, yih is par munhasir hai ki bārish ho gī yā nahīṅ.) Then "if it rains, we'll stay at home". (agar bārish huī, to ham ghar par raheṅ ge.) That may still happen. This lesson is for what did not.

You'll want to know: تا- in both halves

میں آتا۔

maiṅ ātā. — "I would come."

Here, with no ہوں (hūṅ) after it and no نہیں before it, آتا (ātā) is not "I come": it is "I would come", or "I would have come".

اگر وقت، ہوتا

agar vaqt hotā,

میں تو آتا۔

to maiṅ ātā. — "If I had time, I would come."

Both halves take تا- with nothing after it, and each follows its own subject: ہوتا for وقت, آتا for me. The story around it says whether this is now or then.

You'll want to know: with نہ

اگر بارش نہ ہوتی،

agar bārish na hotī,

ہم تو جاتے۔

to ham jāte. — "If it hadn't rained, we would have gone."

نہ (na), not نہیں, says "not" here, as in نہ ... نہ ... (na … na …).

اگر جلدی میں اٹھتا،

agar maiṅ jaldī uṭhtā,

تو گاڑی نہ چھوٹتی۔

to gāṛī na chhūṭtī. — "If I had got up early, I wouldn't have missed the train."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "If I had time, I would come" — agar vaqt hotā, to maiṅ ātā
- "If I had time, I would go" — agar vaqt hotā, to maiṅ jātā
- "If I had time, I would read" — agar vaqt hotā, to maiṅ paṛhtā

Before you move on

"If I had time"? (اگر وقت ہوتا.) "I would come"? (میں آتا, or آتی.) Which "not" goes with ہوتی? (نہ.)

275.4 Six lines about a trip

You read Sara's trip to Lahore. Now you write one: a trip of your own, real or invented, for a friend to read.

Say دوران (daurān) and بعد (bād) aloud; one of them will go in.

What to know first

A told story is not a list. It has a scene, with تھا رہا or جب ... تو ...; events in the plain past, kept in order with پہلے, پھر, بعد کے اس, میں آخر, and joined with کر; a reason, with کیونکہ, لیے اس or سے وجہ کی; and a feeling, with ہوا خوش میں or لگا ... مجھے. It can end on what might have been: اگر ... ہوتا، ... تو ....

Writing — connected composition

On paper, in Urdu script, write six lines, one for each frame. Each line is one short sentence of your own; the frame gives its job, not its words.

1. where you went, and when: گیا ... میں کل (or گئی), or ہفتے پچھلے ...;
2. the scene as you set off: ... تھا رہا, or جب ...، تو ...;
3. what happened first and next: پہلے ...، پھر ...، or a کر form; one thing done with نے;
4. one thing that went wrong, why, and whom you told: گیا کھو, چھوٹ or حادثہ, with کیونکہ or سے وجہ کی, and ... بتایا کو;
5. how it ended and how you felt: میں آخر ...، لگا ... مجھے or ہوا خوش میں, or what you hope now: کہ ہے امید مجھے ...;

6. what might have been: اگر ... تو ہوتا، ..., with one word that holds a letter you wrote in these chapters: ع, غ, ذ, ث, ڈ, ص or ؤ.

There is no model in this lesson. Use only words you already write.

Before you move on

Read your six lines aloud. Mark each past verb s for scene and e for event: line two mostly s, lines three and four mostly e.
Then three checks. A plain past with an object has نے on its doer and follows the object: پی چائے نے میں, لیا ٹکٹ نے میں. A تھا رہا verb takes no نے. In line six, do both halves end in -تا?

275.5 Review — it depends, and what would have been

Say "if it rains, we'll stay at home" and "or else". (agar bārish huī, to ham ghar par raheṅ ge, varnā.) Then "since yesterday" and "in my view". (kal se, mere khayāl meṅ.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- Will you come tomorrow? It depends on the weather.
- It depends on whether it will rain or not.
- If I had time, I would come.
- If it hadn't rained, we would have gone.
- If I had got up early, I wouldn't have missed the train.

Before you move on

"It depends on you"? (یہ آپ پر منحصر ہے.) Now the other way round: in اگر وقت، میں تو ہوتا آتا, did I come? (No.) Which form do both halves take? (-تا, with nothing after it.)

Chapter 276

A Theft in the Lane

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what was stolen and who saw it.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 276: I can say what was stolen and who saw it.

276.1 چور (chor) — a thief

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a fruit seller, then the Urdu for a greengrocer.

You'll want to know: چور

چور — chor — "a thief".

آیا۔ سے کھڑکی چور

chor khiṛkī se āyā.

The thief came in through the window.

Masculine or feminine, by the person meant.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چور (chor) is inherited from Sanskrit cōrá, "thief" (CDIAL 4931). It names a man or a woman: the verb shows which, آیا چور or آئی چور.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: chor
- Say it: chor, once more
- Say it: chor khiṛkī se āyā. — The thief came in through the window.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a fruit seller, then the Urdu for a greengrocer, then say chor again

Before you move on

What does چور mean? ("A thief".) Say it once more.

276.2 چوری (chorī) — a theft

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a greengrocer, then the Urdu for a thief.

You'll want to know: چوری

چوری — chorī — "a theft".

کل رات گلی میں چوری ہوئی۔

kal rāt galī meṅ chorī huī.

There was a theft in the lane last night.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins is inherited from Sanskrit caurikā, "theft" (CDIAL 4937). It sits beside چور: the چور is the person, the چوری is the deed, and ہوئی چوری says that one took place.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: chorī
- Say it: chorī, once more
- Say it: kal rāt galī meṅ chorī huī. — There was a theft in the lane last night.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a greengrocer, then the Urdu for a thief, then say chorī again

Before you move on

What does چوری mean? ("A theft".) Say it once more.

276.3 چرانا (churānā) — to steal

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a thief, then the Urdu for a theft.

You'll want to know: چرانا

چرانا — churānā — "to steal".

چرایا۔ بٹوا میرا نے چور

chor ne merā baṭuā churāyā.

The thief stole my wallet.

Past, with نے (he or she …): اس نے کتاب چرائی, us ne kitāb churāī.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چرانا (churānā) is inherited: CDIAL lists the Hindi cousin cornā under Sanskrit cōráyati, "steals" (CDIAL 4933). With نے the verb follows the thing stolen: چرایا بٹوا, چرائی کتاب.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: churānā
- Say it: churānā, once more
- Say it: chor ne merā baṭuā churāyā. — The thief stole my wallet.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a thief, then the Urdu for a theft, then say churānā again

Before you move on

What does چرانا mean? ("To steal".) Say it once more.

276.4 گواہ (gavāh) — a witness

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a theft, then the Urdu for to steal.

You'll want to know: گواہ

گواہ — gavāh — "a witness".

سب کچھ گواہ پر منحصر ہے۔

sab kuchh gavāh par munhasir hai.

Everything depends on the witness.

Masculine or feminine, by the person meant.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins is usually traced to Persian gavāh, "one who bears witness". A گواہ saw what happened and says so.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: gavāh
- Say it: gavāh, once more
- Say it: sab kuchh gavāh par munhasir hai. — Everything depends on the witness.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a theft, then the Urdu for to steal, then say gavāh again

Before you move on

What does گواہ mean? ("A witness".) Say it once more.

276.5 واردات (vārdāt) — a crime (as an incident); a raid

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to steal, then the Urdu for a witness.

You'll want to know: واردات

واردات — vārdāt — "a crime (as an incident); a raid".

یہ اس گلی میں دوسری واردات ہے۔

yih is galī meṅ dūsrī vārdāt hai.

This is the second crime in this lane.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

واردات (vārdāt) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic wāridāt, "things that arrive, happenings"; in Urdu the word has narrowed, it seems, to an incident of crime: واردات کی چوری, a theft as the police report it.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: vārdāt
- Say it: vārdāt, once more
- Say it: yih is galī meṅ dūsrī vārdāt hai. — This is the second crime in this lane.
- Recall: say the Urdu for to steal, then the Urdu for a witness, then say vārdāt again

Before you move on

What does واردات mean? ("A crime (as an incident); a raid".) Say it once more.

Chapter 277

The Thief Got Away

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how a thief got away and what would have stopped him.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 277: I can say how a thief got away and what would have stopped him.

277.1 جیب کترا (jeb katrā) — a pickpocket

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a witness, then the Urdu for a crime.

You'll want to know: جیب کترا

جیب کترا — jeb katrā — "a pickpocket".

بس میں ایک جیب کترا تھا۔ bas meṅ ek jeb katrā thā.

There was a pickpocket on the bus.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

جیب کترا (jeb katrā) is built from جیب, a pocket, usually traced to Persian jēb, and katrā, one who snips, from katarnā, "to clip", which CDIAL lists for Hindi under Sanskrit kartarī, "scissors" (CDIAL 2858): the one who cuts into pockets.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: jeb katrā
- Say it: jeb katrā, once more
- Say it: bas meṅ ek jeb katrā thā. — There was a pickpocket on the bus.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a witness, then the Urdu for a crime, then say jeb katrā again

Before you move on

What does جیب کترا mean? ("A pickpocket".) Say it once more.

277.2 چھیننا (chhīnnā) — to snatch

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a crime, then the Urdu for a pickpocket.

You'll want to know: چھیننا

چھیننا — chhīnnā — "to snatch".

اس نے میرا موبائل چھینا۔ us ne merā mobāil chhīnā.

He snatched my mobile.

Past, with نے (he or she …): اس نے تھیلا چھینا, us ne thailā chhīnā.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

چھیننا (chhīnnā) is inherited: CDIAL lists the Hindi cousin chīnnā, "to snatch, to pluck", under Sanskrit chinná, "cut off" (CDIAL 5047). It is taking by force, in one quick pull.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: chhīnnā
- Say it: chhīnnā, once more
- Say it: us ne merā mobāil chhīnā. — He snatched my mobile.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a crime, then the Urdu for a pickpocket, then say chhīnnā again

Before you move on

What does چھیننا mean? ("To snatch".) Say it once more.

277.3 جھپٹنا (jhapaṭnā) — to swoop; to pounce

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a pickpocket, then the Urdu for to snatch.

You'll want to know: جھپٹنا

جھپٹنا — jhapaṭnā — "to swoop; to pounce".

جھپٹا مار پر تھیلے چور

chor thaile par jhapaṭā.

The thief swooped on the bag.

Past (he …): وہ تھیلے پر جھپٹا, voh thaile par jhapaṭā.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

جھپٹنا (jhapaṭnā) is inherited: CDIAL lists the Hindi cousin jhapaṭnā, "to run quickly", under jhapp*, a jerk, a form it reconstructs (CDIAL 5336); in Urdu it is the sudden rush of a hawk or a thief: تھیلے پر جھپٹا.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: jhapaṭnā
- Say it: jhapaṭnā, once more
- Say it: chor thaile par jhapaṭā. — The thief swooped on the bag.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a pickpocket, then the Urdu for to snatch, then say jhapaṭnā again

Before you move on

What does جھپٹنا mean? ("To swoop; to pounce".) Say it once more.

277.4 فرار (farār) — on the run; escaped

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to snatch, then the Urdu for to swoop.

You'll want to know: فرار

فرار — farār — "on the run; escaped".

چور ابھی تک فرار ہے۔

chor abhī tak farār hai.

The thief is still on the run.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

فرار (farār) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic firār, "flight, running away". فرار ہے is still at large; فرار ہو گیا has got away.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: farār
- Say it: farār, once more
- Say it: chor abhī tak farār hai. — The thief is still on the run.
- Recall: say the Urdu for to snatch, then the Urdu for to swoop, then say farār again

Before you move on

What does فرار mean? ("On the run; escaped".) Say it once more.

277.5 مجرم (mujrim) — a criminal

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to swoop, then the Urdu for on the run.

You'll want to know: مجرم

مجرم — mujrim — "a criminal".

اگر پولیس ہوتی تو مجرم نہ بھاگتا۔

agar polīs hotī to mujrim na bhāgtā.

If the police had been there, the criminal would not have run off.

Masculine or feminine, by the person meant.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

مجرم (mujrim) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic mujrim, "one who has done wrong". It is the word of the courts and the papers for anyone who broke the law.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: mujrim
- Say it: mujrim, once more
- Say it: agar polīs hotī to mujrim na bhāgtā. — If the police had been there, the criminal would not have run off.
- Recall: say the Urdu for to swoop, then the Urdu for on the run, then say mujrim again

Before you move on

What does مجرم mean? ("A criminal".) Say it once more.

Chapter 278

At the Police Station

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can report a crime at the police station.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 278: I can report a crime at the police station.

278.1 داروغہ (dāroghā) — a police inspector

Before the new one: say the Urdu for on the run, then the Urdu for a criminal.

You'll want to know: داروغہ

داروغہ — dāroghā — "a police inspector".

تھا۔ نہیں میں تھانے داروغہ dāroghā thāne meṅ nahīṅ thā.

The inspector was not at the police station.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins is usually traced to Persian dārogha, "an overseer", a word Persian is thought to have taken from Mongolian. In a town the داروغہ runs the تھانہ.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: dāroghā
- Say it: dāroghā, once more
- Say it: dāroghā thāne meṅ nahīṅ thā. — The inspector was not at the police station.
- Recall: say the Urdu for on the run, then the Urdu for a criminal, then say dāroghā again

Before you move on

What does داروغہ mean? ("A police inspector".) Say it once more.

278.2 رپورٹ (riporṭ) — a report (to the police)

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a criminal, then the Urdu for a police inspector.

You'll want to know: رپورٹ

رپورٹ — riporṭ — "a report (to the police)".

پولیس نے رپورٹ لکھی۔

polīs ne riporṭ likhī.

The police wrote up a report.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

رپورٹ (riporṭ) is borrowed from English report. At the police station it is the written account of a crime, and it is feminine: لکھی رپورٹ.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: riporṭ
- Say it: riporṭ, once more

279.2 حلیہ (huliyā) — a person's description; someone's looks

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a statement, then the Urdu for to recognize.

You'll want to know: حلیہ

حلیہ — huliyā — "a person's description; someone's looks".

گواہ نے چور کا حلیہ بتایا۔

gavāh ne chor kā huliyā batāyā.

The witness described what the thief looked like.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic ḥilya, "an adornment, the look of a person". The police ask for the حلیہ: height, face, clothes.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: huliyā
- Say it: huliyā, once more
- Say it: gavāh ne chor kā huliyā batāyā. — The witness described what the thief looked like.

کل بینک میں ڈاکہ پڑا۔

kal baink meṅ ḍākā paṛā.

Yesterday the bank was robbed.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ڈاکہ (ḍākā) is inherited: CDIAL lists the Hindi cousin ḍākā, "robbery, a band of robbers", under ḍākka* (CDIAL 5543), the entry that also holds ڈاکو. A robbery is said to fall: پڑا ڈاکہ.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ḍākā
- Say it: ḍākā, once more

371.1 بحران (buhrān) — a crisis

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to smash, then the Urdu for to squash.

You'll want to know: بحران

بحران — buhrān — "a crisis".

اگر بارش نہیں ہوئی تو پانی کا بحران ہو گا۔

agar bārish nahīṅ huī to pānī kā buhrān ho gā.

If it does not rain, there will be a water crisis.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

بحران (buhrān) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic buḥrān, "the crisis of a fever", the turning point of an illness.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: buhrān
- Say it: buhrān, once more
- Say it: agar bārish nahīṅ huī to pānī kā buhrān ho gā. — If it does not rain, there will be a water crisis.

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a traffic jam: horns, conductors and buses that barely move.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 393: I can talk about a traffic jam: horns, conductors and buses that barely move.

393.1 جام (jām) — a traffic jam

> Before the new one: say the Urdu for to stroll, then the Urdu for to pant.

You'll want to know: جام

جام — jām — "a traffic jam".

> تھا۔ جام بڑا پر پل
>
> pul par baṛā jām thā.
>
> There was a huge traffic jam on the bridge.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

جام (jām) is borrowed from English jam, as in a traffic jam.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: jām
- Say it: jām, once more
- Say it: pul par baṛā jām thā. — There was a huge traffic jam on the bridge.
- Recall: say the Urdu for to stroll, then the Urdu for to pant, then say jām again

Before you move on

What does جام mean? ("A traffic jam".) Say it once more.

393.2 ہارن (hārn) — a horn (of a vehicle)

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to pant, then the Urdu for a traffic jam.

You'll want to know: ہارن

ہارن — hārn — "a horn (of a vehicle)".

جام میں سب لوگ ہارن بجاتے ہیں۔

jām meṅ sab log hārn bajāte haiṅ.

In a jam everyone sounds the horn.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ہارن (hārn) is borrowed from English horn; you sound it with بجانا.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: hārn
- Say it: hārn, once more
- Say it: jām meṅ sab log hārn bajāte haiṅ. — In a jam everyone sounds the horn.
- Recall: say the Urdu for to pant, then the Urdu for a traffic jam, then say hārn again

Before you move on

What does ہارن mean? ("A horn (of a vehicle)".) Say it once more.

393.3 کنڈکٹر (kanḍakṭar) — a conductor (on a bus)

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a traffic jam, then the Urdu for a horn (of a vehicle).

You'll want to know: کنڈکٹر

کنڈکٹر — kanḍakṭar — "a conductor (on a bus)".

کنڈکٹر نے کرایہ مانگا۔ kanḍakṭar ne kirāyā māṅgā.

The conductor asked for the fare.

Masculine or feminine, by the person meant.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کنڈکٹر (kanḍakṭar) is borrowed from English conductor.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kanḍakṭar
- Say it: kanḍakṭar, once more
- Say it: kanḍakṭar ne kirāyā māṅgā. — The conductor asked for the fare.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a traffic jam, then the Urdu for a horn (of a vehicle), then say kanḍakṭar again

Before you move on

What does کنڈکٹر mean? ("A conductor (on a bus)".) Say it once more.

393.4 سرکنا (saraknā) — to edge forward; to slide

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a horn (of a vehicle), then the Urdu for a conductor (on a bus).

You'll want to know: سرکنا

سرکنا — saraknā — "to edge forward; to slide".

جام میں گاڑیاں آہستہ آہستہ سرکتی ہیں۔

jām meṅ gāṛiyāṅ āhistā āhistā saraktī haiṅ.

In a jam the cars inch forward.

Past (it …): وہ بس آگے سرکی, voh bas āge sarkī.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

سرکنا (saraknā) is inherited: CDIAL lists the Hindi cousin saraknā under Sanskrit sarati, "runs, glides" (CDIAL 13250); سرکانا is the form for moving something else.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: saraknā
- Say it: saraknā, once more
- Say it: jām meṅ gāṛiyāṅ āhistā āhistā saraktī haiṅ. — In a jam the cars inch forward.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a horn (of a vehicle), then the Urdu for a conductor (on a bus), then say saraknā again

Before you move on

What does سرکنا mean? ("To edge forward; to slide".) Say it once more.

393.5 رکوانا (rukvānā) — to have (something) stopped

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a conductor (on a bus), then the Urdu for to edge forward.

You'll want to know: رکوانا

رکوانا — rukvānā — "to have (something) stopped".

رکوائی۔ بس پر اسٹاپ نے کنڈکٹر kanḍakṭar ne isṭāp par bas rukvāī.

The conductor got the bus to stop at the stop.

Past, with نے (he or she …): اس نے گاڑی رکوائی, us ne gāṛī rukvāī.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

رکوانا (rukvānā) is built on رکنا, "to stop", with the ending -vā- that means getting someone else to do it; CDIAL lists the partner verb, Hindi roknā, under rōkk, a form it reconstructs (CDIAL 10827).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: rukvānā
- Say it: rukvānā, once more
- Say it: kanḍakṭar ne isṭāp par bas rukvāī. — The conductor got the bus to stop at the stop.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a conductor (on a bus), then the Urdu for to edge forward, then say rukvānā again

Before you move on

What does رکوانا mean? ("To have (something) stopped".) Say it once more.

393.6 Looking back: from Engines and Carriages to Traffic Jams

Say the Urdu for an engine and a compartment (of a train).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an engine, a compartment (of a train), a railway line, a whistle, to sound
- a porter, a trunk, to load, to haul, to seat (someone)
- a signal (for trains or traffic), a railway junction, a gate, a berth (on a train), to gaze (at)
- on board, a bundle (tied in cloth), to slide (something) along, a yawn, to doze
- an arrival, setting off, lateness, cancelled, to take down
- a booking, a queue, a counter, a rush (people), to push in
- a stand (for taxis or rickshaws), a bus stop, a path, to stroll, to pant
- a traffic jam, a horn (of a vehicle), a conductor (on a bus), to edge forward, to have (something) stopped

Before you move on

Chapter 394

Potholes and Jolts

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can describe a bumpy road: potholes, jolts and an empty stretch at night.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 394: I can describe a bumpy road: potholes, jolts and an empty stretch at night.

394.1 گڑھا (gaṛhā) — a pothole; a pit

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to edge forward, then the Urdu for to have (something) stopped.

You'll want to know: گڑھا

گڑھا — gaṛhā — "a pothole; a pit".

اس سڑک میں بڑا گڑھا ہے۔

is saṛak meṅ baṛā gaṛhā hai.

There is a big pothole in this road.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

گڑھا (gaṛhā) probably belongs with the family CDIAL files under gaḍḍa, "a hole, a pit", a form it reconstructs: CDIAL lists the Hindi cousin gāṛā, "a hole", there (CDIAL 3981), but not this form with ṛh.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: gaṛhā
- Say it: gaṛhā, once more
- Say it: is saṛak meṅ baṛā gaṛhā hai. — There is a big pothole in this road.
- Recall: say the Urdu for to edge forward, then the Urdu for to have (something) stopped, then say gaṛhā again

394.3 دھکا (dhakkā) — a shove; a jolt

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a pothole, then the Urdu for a driver.

You'll want to know: دھکا

دھکا — dhakkā — "a shove; a jolt".

لگا۔ دھکا کو بس سے وجہ کی گڑھے gaṛhe kī vajah se bas ko dhakkā lagā.

The bus gave a jolt because of the pothole.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

دھکا (dhakkā) is inherited from dhakk, "push, strike", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 6701); دھکیلنا, "to push", comes from the same source.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: dhakkā
- Say it: dhakkā, once more
- Say it: gaṛhe kī vajah se bas ko dhakkā lagā. — The bus gave a jolt because of the pothole.

You'll want to know: اچھلنا

اچھلنا — uchhalnā — "to bounce; to jump up".

اچھلے۔ پر سیٹوں مسافر سب سے دھکے dhakke se sab musāfir sīṭoṅ par uchhle.

With the jolt, all the passengers bounced in their seats.

Past (he …): وہ سیٹ پر اچھلا, voh sīṭ par uchhlā.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

اچھلنا (uchhalnā) is inherited: CDIAL lists the Hindi cousin uchalnā, "to leap", under ut-śalati, "springs up", a form it reconstructs (CDIAL 1843).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: uchhalnā
- Say it: uchhalnā, once more
- Say it: dhakke se sab musāfir sīṭoṅ par uchhle. — With the jolt, all the passengers bounced in their seats.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a driver, then the Urdu for a shove, then say uchhalnā again ویران — vīrān — "deserted; desolate".

رات کو یہ سڑک ویران ہوتی ہے۔

rāt ko yih saṛak vīrān hotī hai.

At night this road is deserted.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins is usually traced to Persian vīrān, "ruined, laid waste"; in Urdu an empty road or an abandoned house is ویران.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: vīrān
- Say it: vīrān, once more
- Say it: rāt ko yih saṛak vīrān hotī hai. — At night this road is deserted.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a shove, then the Urdu for to bounce, then say vīrān again

Before you move on

What does ویران mean? ("Deserted; desolate".) Say it once more.

Chapter 395

Before the new one: say the Urdu for deserted, then the Urdu for a tyre.

You'll want to know: پنکچر

پنکچر — pankchar — "a puncture".

گیا۔ ہو پنکچر ٹائر کا گاڑی ہماری میں راستے rāste meṅ hamārī gāṛī kā ṭāyar pankchar ho gayā.

On the way our car got a flat tyre.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پنکچر (pankchar) is borrowed from English puncture; with ہونا it means a tyre goes flat.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pankchar
- Say it: pankchar, once more
- Say it: rāste meṅ hamārī gāṛī kā ṭāyar pankchar ho gayā. — On the way our car got a flat tyre.

>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 402: I can talk about a long journey: the distance, the guide and a tired child.

402.1 مسافت (masāfat) — a distance travelled; a long way

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a bouquet, then the Urdu for to wave.

You'll want to know: مسافت

مسافت — masāfat — "a distance travelled; a long way".

پہاڑوں تک کی مسافت لمبی ہے۔

pahāṛoṅ tak kī masāfat lambī hai.

It is a long way to the mountains.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

مسافت (masāfat) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic masāfa, "a distance"; it is a cousin of مسافر and سفر.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: masāfat
- Say it: masāfat, once more
- Say it: pahāṛoṅ tak kī masāfat lambī hai. — It is a long way to the mountains.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a bouquet, then the Urdu for to wave, then say masāfat again

Before you move on

What does مسافت mean? ("A distance travelled; a long way".) Say it once more.

402.2 رہنما (rahnumā) — a guide; a leader

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to wave, then the Urdu for a distance travelled.

You'll want to know: رہنما

سارا نے لکڑی سے آگ سلگائی۔

sārā ne lakṛī se āg sulgāī.

Sara got a fire going with the wood.

Past, with نے (he or she …): اس نے چولہا سلگایا, us ne chūlhā sulgāyā.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

سلگانا (sulgānā) is built on sulagnā, "to smoulder, to catch fire", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit saṃlagna, "attached, stuck together" (CDIAL 12999): this is the form for setting a fire going.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: sulgānā
- Say it: sulgānā, once more
- Say it: sārā ne lakṛī se āg sulgāī. — Sara got a fire going with the wood.

- Say it: chaklā bāvarchī khāne meṅ mez par hai. — The rolling board is on the table in the kitchen.
- Recall: say the Urdu for to be washed, then the Urdu for to rinse out, then say chaklā again

Before you move on

What does چکلا mean? ("A board for rolling dough".) Say it once more.

507.2 گوندھنا (gūṅdhnā) — to knead

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to rinse out, then the Urdu for a board for rolling dough.

You'll want to know: گوندھنا

گوندھنا — gūṅdhnā — "to knead".

امی صبح آٹا گوندھتی ہیں۔

ammī subah āṭā gūṅdhtī haiṅ.

Mum kneads the dough in the morning.

Past, with نے (he or she …): اس نے آٹا گوندھا, us ne āṭā gūṅdhā.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

گوندھنا (gūṅdhnā) is inherited: CDIAL lists the Hindi cousin gũ̃dhnā, "to plait, to mix, to knead", under Sanskrit guphati, "strings together" (CDIAL 4205).

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: gūṅdhnā
- Say it: gūṅdhnā, once more

507.4 تھاپنا (thāpnā) — to pat (into shape)

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to knead, then the Urdu for to roll out (dough).

You'll want to know: تھاپنا

تھاپنا — thāpnā — "to pat (into shape)".

دادی ہاتھوں سے مکئی کی روٹی تھاپتی ہیں۔

dādī hāthoṅ se makaī kī roṭī thāptī haiṅ.

Grandmother pats maize rotis into shape by hand.

Past, with نے (he or she …): اس نے روٹی تھاپی, us ne roṭī thāpī.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

تھاپنا (thāpnā) is inherited: CDIAL lists the Hindi cousin thāpnā, "to pat", under thapp*, a form it reconstructs (CDIAL 6091).

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: thāpnā
- Say it: thāpnā, once more
- Say it: dādī hāthoṅ se makaī kī roṭī thāptī haiṅ. — Grandmother pats maize rotis into shape by hand.
- Recall: say the Urdu for to knead, then the Urdu for to roll out (dough), then say thāpnā again

Before you move on

What does تھاپنا mean? ("To pat (into shape)".) Say it once more.

507.5 آنچ (āṅch) — the heat of a flame

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to roll out (dough), then the Urdu for to pat (into shape).

You'll want to know: آنچ

آنچ — āṅch — "the heat of a flame".

پکائیے۔ پر آنچ دھیمی کو دال

dāl ko dhīmī āṅch par pakāiye.

Cook the lentils on a low flame, please.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

آنچ (āṅch) is inherited from Sanskrit arcis, "a flame, a ray" (CDIAL 635).

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: āṅch
- Say it: āṅch, once more
- Say it: dāl ko dhīmī āṅch par pakāiye. — Cook the lentils on a low flame, please.

508.5 کفگیر (kafgīr) — a skimmer (a flat spoon)

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a lid, then the Urdu for to cover.

You'll want to know: کفگیر

کفگیر — kafgīr — "a skimmer (a flat spoon)".

کفگیر چولہے کے پاس ہے۔

kafgīr chūlhe ke pās hai.

The skimmer is next to the stove.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

کفگیر (kafgīr) is usually traced to Persian kafgīr, "a skimmer", built from kaf, "foam", and gīr-, "to take".

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: kafgīr
- Say it: kafgīr, once more

- Say it: agar koī tadbīr nahīṅ milī to ham ruk jāeṅ ge. — If we find no way out, we will stop.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a draft, then the Urdu for to have (something) printed, then say tadbīr again

Before you move on

What does تدبیر mean? ("A way out (of a difficulty)".) Say it once more.

524.5 بنوانا (banvānā) — to have (something) made or built

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to have (something) printed, then the Urdu for a way out.

You'll want to know: بنوانا

بنوانا — banvānā — "to have (something) made or built".

اگر نقشہ ٹھیک ہے تو ہم گھر بنوائیں گے۔

agar naqshā ṭhīk hai to ham ghar banvāeṅ ge.

If the plan is right, we'll have the house built.

Past, with نے (he or she …): اس نے نیا گھر بنوایا, us ne nayā ghar banvāyā.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

بنوانا (banvānā) is the second causative of bannā, "to be made", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit vanati, "desires, makes ready" (CDIAL 11260): to have someone make a thing.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: banvānā

التوا — iltivā — "a postponement".

اگر التوا نہیں ہوا تو امتحان کل ہو گا۔

agar iltivā nahīṅ huā to imtihān kal ho gā.

If it is not postponed, the exam will be tomorrow.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

التوا (iltivā) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic iltiwāʾ, "a bending, a turning aside"; the sense "putting off" came later, and the sources we use do not show how it arose.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: iltivā
- Say it: iltivā, once more
- Say it: agar iltivā nahīṅ huā to imtihān kal ho gā. — If it is not postponed, the exam will be tomorrow.

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a postponement, then the Urdu for suspended.

You'll want to know: برقرار

برقرار — barqarār — "still standing; unchanged".

اگر موسم ٹھیک رہا تو پروگرام برقرار رہے گا۔

agar mausam ṭhīk rahā to prograām barqarār rahe gā.

If the weather stays fine, the plan will stand.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

برقرار (barqarār) is usually traced to Persian barqarār, "firm, established", built from bar, "on", and Arabic qarār, "rest, firmness".

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: barqarār

525.5 اٹکانا (aṭkānā) — to keep (something) pending; to hold up

Before the new one: say the Urdu for suspended, then the Urdu for still standing.

You'll want to know: اٹکانا

اٹکانا — aṭkānā — "to keep (something) pending; to hold up".

اگر افسر نے فائل اٹکائی تو کام رک جائے گا۔

agar afsar ne fāil aṭkāī to kām ruk jāe gā.

If the officer holds up the file, the work will stop.

Past, with نے (he or she …): اس نے میری فائل اٹکائی, us ne merī fāil aṭkāī.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

اٹکانا (aṭkānā) is the causative of aṭaknā, "to get stuck", which CDIAL lists under aṭṭakk*, a form it reconstructs (CDIAL 182).

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: aṭkānā
- Say it: aṭkānā, once more
- Say it: agar afsar ne fāil aṭkāī to kām ruk jāe gā. — If the officer holds up the file, the work will stop.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

آسانی (āsānī) is usually traced to Persian āsānī, "ease", built on āsān, "easy".

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: āsānī
- Say it: āsānī, once more
- Say it: agar naqshā hotā to ham āsānī se pahuṅch jāte. — If we had a map, we would get there easily.
- Recall: say the Urdu for toil, then the Urdu for to lend a hand, then say āsānī again

Before you move on

What does آسانی mean? ("Ease".) Say it once more.

546.4 جوجھنا (jūjhnā) — to grapple with (a hard task)

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to lend a hand, then the Urdu for ease.

You'll want to know: جوجھنا

جوجھنا — jūjhnā — "to grapple with (a hard task)".

اگر ہم ساتھ جوجھے تو یہ مشکل ختم ہو گی۔

agar ham sāth jūjhe to yih mushkil khatm ho gī.

If we grapple with it together, this trouble will end.

Past (he …): وہ بیماری سے جوجھا, voh bīmārī se jūjhā.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

جوجھنا (jūjhnā) is inherited: CDIAL lists the Hindi cousin jūjhnā, "to fight", under Sanskrit yudhyatē, "fights" (CDIAL 10502).

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: jūjhnā
- Say it: jūjhnā, once more
- Say it: agar ham sāth jūjhe to yih mushkil khatm ho gī. — If we grapple with it together, this trouble will end.
- Recall: say the Urdu for to lend a hand, then the Urdu for ease, then say jūjhnā again

Before you move on

What does جوجھنا mean? ("To grapple with (a hard task)".) Say it once more.

546.5 پیمانہ (paimānā) — a yardstick; a measure

Before the new one: say the Urdu for ease, then the Urdu for to grapple with (a hard task).

You'll want to know: پیمانہ

پیمانہ — paimānā — "a yardstick; a measure".

اگر پیسہ ہی پیمانہ ہوتا تو استاد امیر ہوتے۔

agar paisā hī paimānā hotā to ustād amīr hote.

If money were the only yardstick, teachers would be rich.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پیمانہ (paimānā) is usually traced to Persian paymāna, "a measure; a measuring cup".

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: paimānā
- Say it: paimānā, once more
- Say it: agar paisā hī paimānā hotā to ustād amīr hote. — If money were the only yardstick, teachers would be rich.
- Recall: say the Urdu for ease, then the Urdu for to grapple with (a hard task), then say paimānā again

Before you move on

What does پیمانہ mean? ("A yardstick; a measure".) Say it once more.

547.1 تصور (tasavvur) — imagination; a picture in the mind

Before the new one: say the Urdu for to grapple with (a hard task), then the Urdu for a yardstick.

You'll want to know: تصور

تصور — tasavvur — "imagination; a picture in the mind".

> اگر تصور نہ ہوتا تو کوئی نئی چیز نہ بنتی۔
>
> agar tasavvur na hotā to koī naī chīz na bantī.
>
> Without imagination nothing new would ever be made.

Masculine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

تصور (tasavvur) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic taṣawwur, "forming an image in the mind".

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: tasavvur
- Say it: tasavvur, once more
- Say it: agar tasavvur na hotā to koī naī chīz na bantī. — Without imagination nothing new would ever be made.
- Recall: say the Urdu for to grapple with (a hard task), then the Urdu for a yardstick, then say tasavvur again

Before you move on

What does تصور mean? ("Imagination; a picture in the mind".) Say it once more.

547.2 نیت (niyyat) — an intention (in one's heart)

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a yardstick, then the Urdu for imagination.

You'll want to know: نیت

نیت — niyyat — "an intention (in one's heart)".

اگر نیت اچھی ہے تو راستہ مل جائے گا۔

agar niyyat achchhī hai to rāstā mil jāe gā.

If your heart is in the right place, you'll find a way.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

نیت (niyyat) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic niyya, "an intention".

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: niyyat
- Say it: niyyat, once more
- Say it: agar niyyat achchhī hai to rāstā mil jāe gā. — If your heart is in the right place, you'll find a way.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a yardstick, then the Urdu for imagination, then say niyyat again

Before you move on

What does نیت mean? ("An intention (in one's heart)".) Say it once more.

547.3 مہم (muhim) — a campaign; a venture

Before the new one: say the Urdu for imagination, then the Urdu for an intention (in one's heart).

You'll want to know: مہم

مہم — muhim — "a campaign; a venture".

اگر مہم ختم ہوئی تو سب گھر لوٹیں گے۔

agar muhim khatm huī to sab ghar lauṭeṅ ge.

If the campaign ends, everyone will go home.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

مہم (muhim) is usually traced, through Persian, to Arabic muhimm, "an important matter"; the sense "a campaign" came later, and the sources we use do not show how it arose.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: muhim
- Say it: muhim, once more
- Say it: agar muhim khatm huī to sab ghar lauṭeṅ ge. — If the campaign ends, everyone will go home.
- Recall: say the Urdu for imagination, then the Urdu for an intention (in one's heart), then say muhim again

Before you move on

What does مہم mean? ("A campaign; a venture".) Say it once more.

547.4 پیشکش (peshkash) — an offer

Before the new one: say the Urdu for an intention (in one's heart), then the Urdu for a campaign.

You'll want to know: پیشکش

پیشکش — peshkash — "an offer".

اگر یہ پیشکش اچھی ہوئی تو میں قبول کروں گا۔

agar yih peshkash achchhī huī to maiṅ qabūl karūṅ gā.

If the offer is good, I will accept it.

Feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

پیشکش (peshkash) is usually traced to Persian pēshkash, "something offered", built from pēsh, "before", and kash-, "to draw".

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: peshkash
- Say it: peshkash, once more
- Say it: agar yih peshkash achchhī huī to maiṅ qabūl karūṅ gā. — If the offer is good, I will accept it.
- Recall: say the Urdu for an intention (in one's heart), then the Urdu for a campaign, then say peshkash again

Before you move on

What does پیشکش mean? ("An offer".) Say it once more.

547.5 سنورنا (sanvarnā) — to take shape nicely; to be put right

Before the new one: say the Urdu for a campaign, then the Urdu for an offer.

You'll want to know: سنورنا

سنورنا — sanvarnā — "to take shape nicely; to be put right".

اگر بچوں نے اچھا سیکھا تو کل سنور جائے گا۔

agar bachchoṅ ne achchhā sīkhā to kal sanvar jāe gā.

If the children learn well, tomorrow will turn out well.

Past (it …): وہ کمرہ سنور گیا, voh kamrā sanvar gayā.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

سنورنا (sanvarnā) is inherited: CDIAL lists the Hindi cousins sãwārṇā, "to arrange, to deck", and its intransitive sãwarnā, "to be arranged", under Sanskrit saṃvārayati, "puts in order" (CDIAL 13021).

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: sanvarnā
- Say it: sanvarnā, once more
- Say it: agar bachchoṅ ne achchhā sīkhā to kal sanvar jāe gā. — If the children learn well, tomorrow will turn out well.
- Recall: say the Urdu for a campaign, then the Urdu for an offer, then say sanvarnā again

Before you move on

What does سنورنا mean? ("To take shape nicely; to be put right".) Say it once more.

547.6 Looking back: from In That Case to Looking Ahead

Say the Urdu for an angle and circumstances.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an angle, circumstances, conditional, a point (that things come to), supposing (for argument's sake)
- in any case, well (moving on), in particular, a point (in an argument), a summary
- what one expects, a prediction, to see through, to put a value on, correct
- a beginning, the start, the close (of an event), a series, order (a set sequence)
- temporary, permanent, final, a stage, durable
- toil, to lend a hand, ease, to grapple with (a hard task), a yardstick
- imagination, an intention (in one's heart), a campaign, an offer, to take shape nicely

Before you move on

An angle? (زاویہ, zāviyā.) Circumstances? (حالات, hālāt.) Conditional? (مشروط, mashrūt.) A point (that things come to)? (نوبت, naubat.) Supposing (for argument's sake)? (بالفرض, bilfarz.) In any case? (بہرحال, baharhāl.) Well (moving on)? (خیر, khair.) In particular? (بالخصوص, bilkhusūs.) A point (in an argument)? (نکتہ, nuktā.) A summary? (خلاصہ, khulāsā.) What one expects? (توقع, tavaqqo.) A prediction? (پیش گوئی, pesh goī.) To see through? (تاڑنا, tāṛnā.) To put a value on? (آنکنا, āṅknā.) Correct? (درست, durust.) A beginning? (آغاز, āghāz.) The start? (شروع, shurū.) The close (of an event)? (اختتام, ikhtitām.) A series? (سلسلہ, silsilā.) Order (a set sequence)? (ترتیب, tartīb.) Temporary? (عارضی, ārzī.) Permanent? (مستقل, mustaqil.) Final? (حتمی, hatmī.) A stage? (مرحلہ, marhalā.)

Durable? (پائیدار, pāedār.) Toil? (مشقت, mashaqqat.) To lend a hand? (ہاتھ بٹانا, hāth baṭānā.) Ease? (آسانی, āsānī.) To grapple with (a hard task)? (جوجھنا, jūjhnā.) A yardstick? (پیمانہ, paimānā.) Imagination? (تصور, tasavvur.) An intention (in one's heart)? (نیت, niyyat.) A campaign? (مہم, muhim.) An offer? (پیشکش, peshkash.) To take shape nicely? (سنورنا, sanvarnā.)

547.7 Looking Ahead — once more

Say the Urdu for imagination and an intention (in one's heart).

Your turn

- Say it: imagination, an intention (in one's heart), a campaign, an offer, to take shape nicely

Before you move on

Imagination? (تصور, tasavvur.) An intention (in one's heart)? (نیت, niyyat.) A campaign? (مہم, muhim.) An offer? (پیشکش, peshkash.) To take shape nicely? (سنورنا, sanvarnā.)

Pronunciation & Script Reference

A reference, not a chapter. Use it when a lesson names a sound; do not clear it as an alphabet gate. Urdu script is introduced through useful expressions, with only the shapes and sound contrasts needed on that page.

The track shows a learner romanization beside new Urdu. A line above a vowel marks length (ā, ī), and a tilde marks nasalization (ã̃, ĩ̃). Cover the romanization once the Urdu form is familiar.

Script, spelling, and type style

- Read right to left (`rtl`). Start each word at its right edge.
- Letters usually join and change shape by position. Some letters, including ا and ر in current words, break the connection to the following shape on their left.
- Urdu is an abjad: some vowels are unwritten and inferred from the learned word (`short-vowels-unwritten`). Long vowels use letter shapes such as ا, و, and ی; ے can carry e/ai.
- Urdu is traditionally printed in Nastaliq, whose connected words descend in a flowing slope. The book and app use the vendored static Noto Nastaliq Urdu family, including its Urdu OpenType localization and contextual joins. Naskh remains an accessibility fallback when a learner's browser cannot load the course font; it is no longer the normal presentation.

Sound ids used by the starter lessons

- Sound id: `rtl`
  What to do: follow the word from its right edge leftward
  First anchor: سلام salām

- Sound id: `long-a`
  What to do: hold ā steady; ا carries it in سلام
  First anchor: سلام salām

- Sound id: `alif-madd`
  What to do: read آ as word-initial long ā
  First anchor: آپ āp

- Sound id: `short-vowels-unwritten`
  What to do: supply the learned short vowels even when vowel marks are absent
  First anchor: شکریہ shukriyā

- Sound id: `long-i`
  What to do: hold ی as ī in this word
  First anchor: جی jī

- Sound id: `long-u`
  What to do: hold و as long ū in the learned word
  First anchor: ہوں hūṅ

- Sound id: `nasal-vowel`
  What to do: let air pass through the nose; final ں does not add a full English n
  First anchor: ہاں hã̄, نہیں nahĩ̄

- Sound id: `long-vowels`
  What to do: read the word's written long-vowel cues rather than stretching every vowel
  First anchor: میرا نام merā nām

- Sound id: `hai-diphthong`
  What to do: say ہے as one hai syllable, ending in an ai glide
  First anchor: ہے hai

- Sound id: `sh`
  What to do: read three-dotted ش as sh
  First anchor: شکریہ shukriyā
- Sound id: `kh`
  What to do: make خ farther back than English h
  First anchor: خوشی khushī
- Sound id: `consonantal-ye`
  What to do: let ی supply consonantal y before a vowel
  First anchor: کیا kyā
- Sound id: `ai-diphthong`
  What to do: say ai as one glide in the learned question word
  First anchor: کیسے kaise
- Sound id: `final-ye`
  What to do: distinguish broad final ے e from final ی long ī
  First anchor: کیسے / کیسی kaise / kaisī
- Sound id: `retroflex-aspirated-th`
  What to do: curl the tongue slightly back for ٹ, then release the aspiration marked by ھ
  First anchor: ٹھیک ṭhīk
- Sound id: `urdu-question-mark`
  What to do: recognize ؟ at the left end of a right-to-left question
  First anchor: آپ کا نام کیا ہے؟
- Sound id: `be-vs-pe-dots`
  What to do: count the dots under the shared low scoop: one below is ب b, three below are پ p
  First anchor: بولنا bolnā against آپ āp
- Sound id: `geminate-nun`
  What to do: hold the n long when two ن letters are written in a row
  First anchor: جاننا jānnā

- Sound id: `che-vs-jim-dots`
  What to do: count the dots below the jīm body: one is ج j, three are چ ch
  First anchor: سوچنا sochnā against جانا jānā
- Sound id: `do-chashmi-he`
  What to do: give ھ no sound of its own; let it aspirate the letter to its right
  First anchor: سمجھنا samajhnā, لکھنا likhnā
- Sound id: `retroflex-flap-rre`
  What to do: flick a curled-back tongue once for ڑ; do not roll it
  First anchor: پڑھنا paṛhnā
- Sound id: `majhul-e`
  What to do: read medial ی as long e where the learned word calls for it
  First anchor: لینا lenā
- Sound id: `qaf-uvular`
  What to do: draw the back of the tongue further back in the throat for ق than for ک; many speakers merge the two in casual speech
  First anchor: قمیض qamīz
- Sound id: `te-dots-vs-tte-loop`
  What to do: two dots above make plain dental ت; a small raised loop instead makes retroflex ٹ
  First anchor: جوتا jūtā against ٹھیک ṭhīk
- Sound id: `gaf-stroke`
  What to do: گ is ک with one extra stroke laid across the top
  First anchor: گرمی garmī

Shape families already in use

- س s and ش sh share a skeleton; three dots distinguish ش.
- ن is consonantal n. Final dotless ں is nūn-e ghunna and marks nasalization in ہاں and نہیں.

- ی supplies the long ī in جی and نہیں. Final ے participates in hai in ہے. Learn each role in its word before generalizing.

- کیا gives ی its consonantal y job; کیسی / کیسے then contrast broad final ے with long-ī final ی.

- ٹھیک introduces the Indic retroflex-plus-aspiration sequence ٹھ only when the wellbeing reply needs it.

- حافظ خدا reuses خ and long ا, adds a clear initial h in حافظ, and reads final ظ as z. Urdu conventionally keeps the two words visibly spaced, even though Persian normally joins its local spelling.

- بولنا adds the only new consonant the verb chapter needs: ب b, one low scoop with a single dot below. It shares that skeleton with پ p, already read in آپ, which carries three dots below instead. Dot count is the whole difference, and it is load-bearing throughout the alphabet.

- جاننا writes two ن letters in a row and pronounces both, which is the only thing separating it from جانا jānā. Nothing about the doubling is decorative: جانا is "to go" and جاننا is "to know."

- چ ch is the ج j body with three dots below instead of one — the same dot-count contrast as ب against پ, on a second skeleton.

- ھ is do-chashmī he, "two-eyed he." It is never a consonant on its own; it aspirates whatever letter stands to its right. ٹھیک used it first, and سمجھنا, پڑھنا, پوچھنا and لکھنا use it again in جھ, ڑھ, چھ and کھ. Keep it apart from round ہ gol he, which is a real h and is the letter in ہوں and ہونا.

- ڑ is ر r wearing the small retroflex mark that also rides on ٹ. One diacritic, one instruction — curl the tongue back — now on two letters.

- ی takes a third value in لینا lenā: a long e. With consonantal y in کیا and long ī in جی, and broad final ے beside it, the ye family covers y, ī and e; the learned word decides.

- ق qāf, first read in قمیض, shares its throat position with already-known خ but is a stop rather than a fricative — a plosive version of the same back-of-the-mouth place. ض zād, in the same word, joins ظ (from حافظ) as a second letter carrying the plain z sound in Urdu, even though Arabic once told the two apart.
- ت te, first read in جوتا, shares its base scoop with already-known ٹ: two dots above make it plain dental t, where a small raised loop instead makes ٹ retroflex.
- گ gāf, first read in گرمی, is already-known ک with one extra stroke laid across the top — the same dot-count logic that told ب apart from پ, this time with a stroke instead of a dot.

Letters the B1 core adds (chapters 264–275)

Each is taken out of a word the learner already says, in a copy-only lesson: no stroke order is claimed until an Urdu-scoped source is verified. ص ذ ڈ ث غ ع are recognition-only rows in the inventory; ۄ is و with the hamza mark, both of which already have rows.

- Letter: ۄ vāʾo hamza
  Sound: marks the break between two vowels
  Anchor word: جاؤں jāūṅ Shape: و wearing the small hamza that sits on ئ
- Letter: ع ain
  Sound: no sound of its own; it colours or lengthens the vowel beside it
  Anchor word: بعد bād
  Shape: a small closed loop inside a word; alone, an open head over a deep bowl
- Letter: غ ghain
  Sound: gh, made far back in the throat
  Anchor word: غلط ghalat
  Shape: ع with one dot above

- Letter: ذ zāl
  Sound: z, as ظ ض ز
  Anchor word: ذرا zarā
  Shape: و with one dot above; it does not join forward
- Letter: ث se
  Sound: s, as س and ص
  Anchor word: حادثہ hādsā
  Shape: ت with three dots above in place of two
- Letter: ڈ ḍāl
  Sound: retroflex ḍ, the tongue curled back as for ٹ and ڑ
  Anchor word: ڈر ḍar
  Shape: و wearing the small mark of ٹ and ڑ
- Letter: ص suād
  Sound: s, as س and ث
  Anchor word: صبح subah
  Shape: the ض body without its dot

ژ and the standalone ء are not yet taught.

The Persian-Arabic and Indo-Aryan layers

Script does not determine a word's history. سلام and شکریہ expose the Persian-Arabic literary layer; نہیں, میرا, نام, and ہے expose the inherited Indo-Aryan core that Urdu shares with Hindi. Mixed-language practice may use that relationship as a bridge, but the Urdu script remains the assessed form for this track.
