Preface

This book teaches Bengali one word at a time, and it teaches each word by taking it apart. It is written for someone starting from zero — who may not read a single Bengali letter — so the script is taught inside the word lessons themselves: each word introduces exactly the letters it needs, so you learn to read নমস্কার and learn what it means in the same few minutes. (A reader who already reads Bengali simply skims the "letters in this word" notes.)

Bengali (Bānglā) is an Indo-Aryan language — descended, like Hindi, Marathi, and Punjabi, from Sanskrit — and the mother tongue of Bengal: West Bengal in India and all of Bangladesh, some 250 million speakers, the seventh-largest language on earth. It is the language of Tagore, and the only one to have furnished the national anthem of two nations. One habit runs through the whole book and is worth stating up front: Bengali's inherent vowel is ô (not "a"), its s tilts to sh, and its v collapses to b — so Sanskrit namaskāra is spoken nômoshkar. Learn to hear that shift and every Sanskrit-derived word becomes legible. Roots are traced to Sanskrit and, where they reach, to the wider family that also gave English its words — every form supplied in full.

How to use this book

Every numbered section is one word, or one small phrase, and takes a few minutes — the length of a queue, an errand, or the walk to the bus. Read them in order the first time through: each section stands on the ones before it, and nothing is used before it has been taught. After that the book becomes reference, and you can open it anywhere.

Say the Bengali out loud wherever you can. The prompts under Your turn are written to be spoken, and saying a word is most of what makes it stay. The questions under Before you move on carry their own answers in brackets: cover them, answer from memory, then look.

Nothing here is gated behind the alphabet. Each lesson introduces exactly the letters and sounds its own word needs, so you are reading real words from the first page rather than drilling a chart. The whole script is gathered in a reference at the back of the book — somewhere to look things up when you are curious, never a chapter to sit through first.

Greetings

Modes: voice (1) eyes (5) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can greet someone in Bengali, recognize the reply, and choose an appropriate response.
> Complete BN-C01-practice, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: greet someone in Bengali, recognize the reply, and choose an appropriate response.

1.1 Nômoshkar — "hello"

> The first Bengali word — and it hides the single sound-shift that makes Bengali Bengali.

The letters in this word

(If you already read Bengali, skim this.) Bengali runs left to right under a top line; every consonant carries a built-in vowel — but in Bengali that vowel is ô (an open "o"), not "a." Meet two of this word's letters: ন nô and ম mô. Trace ন once with your finger as you say nômoshkar. The whole written word waits for the next chapter, where its other letters arrive one at a time.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Nômoshkar is the same word as the Sanskrit namaskāra behind Hindi's and Marathi's greeting — namas ("a bow") + kāra ("the making of"). But hear what Bengali does: the inherent "a" becomes ô, and s shifts to sh, so written namaskāra is spoken nô · mosh · kar. That habit — a→ô, s→sh — is Bengali's fingerprint; once you hear it, you can un-shift almost any word back to its Sanskrit cousin.

Why it's said this way

Nômoshkar, palms together, is the everyday respectful greeting — hello and often goodbye — the broad, secular-to-Hindu default in Bengal. Bengali is the language of Tagore, the only tongue to have written the national anthem of two countries: India and Bangladesh.

Your turn

- Say it: its beats — nô · mosh · kar
- Say it: the first two sounds — nô, mô
- Read it: ন and ম
- Say it: the two shifts that made namaskāra into nômoshkar (a→ô, s→sh)

Before you move on

What Sanskrit word is nômoshkar, and what two Bengali sound-shifts disguise it? (Namaskāra, "the making of a bow"; the inherent a→ô and s→sh.)

1.2 Dhônyobad — "thank you"

The same "thank you" Hindi, Marathi, and Punjabi use — now watch Bengali reshape it twice.

The letters in this word

New: ধ dhô (a breathy d), and the conjunct ন্য: the ন you know, then the hasanta ্ that strips its vowel, then য y. The rest of the word — a b, a d and a long-ā sign — waits for later chapters, and so does its whole spelling.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Dhônyobad = Sanskrit dhanya ("fortunate, blessed") + vāda ("a saying") — the very "thank you" behind Hindi dhanyavād. Two Bengali quirks fire at once: the inherent a→ô again (dhônyobad), and — because Bengali has no separate "v," only b — Sanskrit vāda is spoken bad. V becoming b is a Bengali signature (think Bishnu for Vishnu).

Why it's said this way

This is the standard, slightly formal thanks. In warm everyday speech Bengalis often lean on the whole gesture and tone rather than the word — but dhônyobad is what you say and write when you mean it plainly. Note how much you already knew: only the sound changed, not the roots.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- its beats — dhô · nyo · bad
- the two shifts hiding dhanyavāda here (a→ô, v→b)

Before you move on

Dhônyobad comes from which two Sanskrit parts, and why is the "v" gone? (Dhanya "fortunate" + vāda "saying"; Bengali has no "v," only b.)

1.3 হ্যাঁ / না (hyã / nā) — "yes" and "no"

Two words no conversation survives without — and one is an old cousin of English.

The letters in this word

New: হ hô, the y-phola ◌্য that glides the sound, and the nasal mark chandrabindu ◌ঁ — a little moon-with-dot that sends the vowel through the nose. না is ন + ◌া, nā, and nothing else.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হ্যাঁ (hyã, "yes") and না (nā, "no"). That "no" rides the ancient negative na- — the same Proto-Indo-European ne behind English no, not, none, Latin nōn, and Hindi nahīṇ. Bengali kept it at its shortest, bare nā: the family resemblance to English no sits right on the surface. CDIAL lists the Bengali word for "yes" under Sanskrit ām, "yes", with an h- added either for emphasis or from the verb "to be" (CDIAL 1235); nā is Sanskrit na, "not" (CDIAL 6906).

Why it's said this way

The chandrabindu (that nasal moon-dot) is everywhere in Bengali and gives the language part of its soft, nasal music. Hear the breath leave through the nose at the end of hyã — that mark is doing the work.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- read them — hyã / nā
- the shared ancestor of Bengali nā and English no (PIE ne)

Before you move on

What does the chandrabindu do, and what links Bengali nā to English no? (It nasalises the vowel; both descend from Proto-Indo-European ne, "not.")

1.4 আচ্ছা (āchchhā) — "okay / I see"

The little word that keeps every Bengali conversation moving.

The letters in this word

New: আ — the independent vowel ā, the shape a word uses when it starts with a vowel. (A built-in vowel rides a consonant; a standalone one gets its own letter.) Then the doubled চ্ছ (চ ch + ছ chh). Read আ · চ্ছা, ā-chchhā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আচ্ছা (āchchhā) is the all-purpose "okay, alright, I see, go on" — a true workhorse of spoken Bengali, from Sanskrit accha, "clear, transparent", which CDIAL suggests may first have meant "shadowless" (CDIAL 142). It is the word a Bengali speaker peppers through speech the way an English speaker says "right… right," a nod made audible.

Why it's said this way

Note it opens with আ, a standalone vowel-letter — your first. This is the other half of how the script handles vowels: attached to a consonant they are little signs (◌া), but on their own they stand as full letters (আ). Same sound, two shapes, chosen by position.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- read it — ā · chchhā
- why আ is written in full here (the word starts with a vowel)

Before you move on

What does āchchhā do in conversation, and why is its first vowel a full letter, not a sign? (It means "okay / I see / go on"; a word-initial vowel takes its standalone form আ.)

1.5 আসি (āshi) — "I'll be going" (goodbye)

Bengalis do not say "I'm leaving." They say "I'll come again." Here is why.

The letters in this word

New: স — here truly "sh," the s→sh shift you heard in nômoshkar — and the ি sign (i), which in Bengali is written before the consonant it follows but read after it. আসি = আ + সি, ā-shi.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আসি (āshi) literally means "I come," from the verb āsā ("to come"), which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit āsadati, "approaches" (CDIAL 1483), while noting that Chatterji derived it from āviśati, "enters". Yet it is how Bengalis say goodbye — never "I'm leaving" (unlucky, too final) but "I'll come [again]": আসি, or the fuller āschhi ("I am coming"). It is the very same "promise of return" farewell Tamil and Marathi reach for — a whole culture's optimism folded into one verb.

Why it's said this way

And notice: āshi is "I come" whether a man or a woman says it — Bengali marks no gender on the verb. That sets it apart from Marathi (yeto m. / yete f.) and, in this one respect, makes Bengali's verbs simpler than its neighbours'.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- read it — ā · shi (remember স = "sh")
- what āshi literally means and why it means goodbye ("I come" → "I'll come again")

Before you move on

Why does "I come" mean goodbye in Bengali, and what does Bengali not mark on this verb? (Saying "I'll come again" avoids the finality of "leaving"; no gender.)

1.6 Chapter 1 — Practice and Recall

No new words. The five you have, mixed and recombined — and the one shift that ties them together.

How to answer — rapid recall

Say these aloud:

- hello / goodbye, the palms-together greeting — nômoshkar
- thank you — dhônyobad
- yes and no — hyã / nā
- "okay, I see, go on" — āchchhā
- goodbye, "I'll come again" — āshi

Grammar lens — the one habit

Bengali's fingerprint. Un-shift these back to the Sanskrit you know: Say these aloud:

- what is nômoshkar in "un-shifted" Sanskrit? (namaskāra)
- what became of the "v" in dhônyobad? (Bengali has no "v"; vāda → bad)
- the inherent vowel of every Bengali consonant — "a" or "ô"? (ô)

What you've built — roots you now carry

- inherent vowel ô + s→sh + v→b = the Bengali sound-fingerprint
- nā ("no") ↔ English no / not / none (PIE ne)
- āshi ("I come") = the "promise of return" goodbye, shared with Tamil & Marathi

Before you move on

A friend parts by saying āshi, and you want to answer warmly. What does āshi really mean, and what could you say back? ("I'll come again" — you can answer āchchhā, āshi — "okay, I'll come [too]," returning the same optimism.)

Chapter 2

Hanging From the Head-Line, One Piece at a Time

Modes: ✓ pen (14) Hands-free start: none of the 14 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write nine Bengali pieces from memory — six consonants, a vowel sign, its independent twin and the hasanta — and read the greeting I have been saying since the first chapter by assembling it from those pieces, including its conjunct.
> The greeting assembled from seven pieces the reader can each write from memory, including the conjunct and the letter written s but said sh, and introducing nothing new.

2.1 ন — the consonant na

Nothing is assumed but the words you can already say. This chapter turns them into words you can read.

Script

How ন is written, stroke by stroke

Bengali is an abugida: a consonant already carries a vowel, and you write a vowel mark only when you want a different one.

ন

Now the part that catches every reader who comes to Bengali from Hindi or Sanskrit. The inherent vowel here is not a. It is ô — the vowel of English awe, rounded and open. So this letter alone is nô, not na.

Devanagari's bare consonant says ka; Bengali's says kô. Same family, same system, different default. It is one of the first things that makes Bengali sound like Bengali rather than like Hindi read aloud.

Look at the top of the shape: a horizontal bar, and in running text it joins up across a whole word so the writing hangs from a line — the same head-line Devanagari has, and the one Gujarati erases.

Your turn

- Write it: ন
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What vowel does a bare Bengali consonant carry? (ô, the vowel of awe — not a.) And what does Devanagari's carry instead? (a.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

2.2 ন — trace it, with the bar last

Keep ন in front of you. It does not get covered in this lesson.

Writing — observe and trace

How ন is written, stroke by stroke

Finger-trace ন three times on the page, slowly, then trace it once in the air. Say nô after your finger stops each time — nô, with the rounded open vowel of English awe, not na.

Leave the bar across the top for last, every time. The body of the letter first, the horizontal line after it.

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your finger makes it.

> The strip shows where the body starts and which way it travels, in one attested order, and names its source beneath it. Bengali handwriting is taught with real variation from school to school, so treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

The bar coming last is not a stylistic claim: the মাত্রা joins up across a whole word in running text, so it cannot be the first thing drawn on a letter that is about to have neighbours.

Before you move on

Which part did you leave until last? (The bar.) And what does this letter say on its own — na or nô? (nô.)

2.3 ন — copy it twice, and join the bar

The model stays visible for all of this lesson. Nothing is hidden today.

Writing — guided copy

How ন is written, stroke by stroke

Copy ন once, body first and bar last, as you traced it.

Then copy it twice side by side — and this time draw the bodies first, both of them, and finish with one single bar running across the top of both.

That one continuous line is the whole lesson. In Bengali the bar is not a mark belonging to a letter; it is a line belonging to the word, which is why it is drawn last and why it runs on. A reader's eye follows it to find where one word stops and the next starts, so a hand that gives each letter its own short bar has written two words where it meant one.

Before you move on

Look at your pair. Is there one line across the top, or two? One line is a word. Two is a gap you did not mean to leave.

2.4 ন — write it with the model covered

Look at ন once and say nô. Then cover it.

Writing — delayed copy

How ন is written, stroke by stroke

With the model covered, wait ten seconds, then write ন once from memory — body first, bar last.

Ten seconds is long enough that your hand cannot be tracing a shape it can still see, and short enough that a letter you met a minute ago is still there.

Only after the letter is finished, uncover the model and compare. Repair one thing, the first that differs, and leave the rest.

Before you move on

Check the bar's width before you check the body at all.
A hand writing from memory remembers to put the bar there and draws it only as wide as the body underneath. In running text it has to reach the full width of the letter, because the next letter's bar will meet it — so a short bar is the one mistake that looks completely right on a single letter and falls apart the moment there are two.

2.5 ন — the letter from the sound

Cover every ন on the page. Nothing to copy and nothing to uncover.

Writing — dictation

Say nô aloud, or play it, and write the letter that carries it. Once.

A delayed copy asks your hand to remember a shape. Dictation asks it to turn a sound into a shape, which is what writing is actually for, and the two do not always arrive together.

Before you move on

Uncover the model and compare — then notice which sound you were given.
nô, not na. The vowel inside a bare Bengali consonant is the rounded open one, and this is the place that matters: a reader coming from Hindi or Sanskrit hears na, writes the same shape, and has learned the letter with the wrong sound attached to it. The shape is shared across the family. The default vowel is not, and dictation is the only stage that can catch the difference, because it is the only one where the sound comes first.

2.6 ◌া — the vowel sign that replaces the inherent vowel

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

To get a different vowel you replace the inherent one with a mark called a mātrā.

A single upright stroke standing to the right of its consonant, dropping from the head-line. Attached, it swaps the inherent ô for a long open a.

ন + ◌া → না

na — and that is the word for no, which you have been saying since your first lesson.

One consonant and one mark, and a word you could already say became a word you can read.

Your turn

- Write it: ◌া
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does a mātrā do to the inherent vowel? (Replaces it.) What word did those two pieces make? (না — na, "no".)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

2.7 আ — the same vowel standing alone

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

The mark you learned a moment ago only works attached to a consonant. So what do you write when a word begins with that vowel?

A different character:

আ

That is the same a sound, but as an independent vowel — a full letter that stands on its own at the start of a word.

These are two different characters, not two styles of one. A font, a keyboard and this book all treat them as entirely separate, and confusing them is the commonest spelling error in every Indic script.

What decides which one you write is position, not sound:

- আ begins a word.
- ◌া rides on a consonant.

Two words you already say begin with this letter — the one for I see you later and the one for all right.

Your turn

- Write it: আ
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Which of the two starts a word? (আ.) Which rides on a consonant? (◌া.) Are they the same character? (No — two separate characters, one sound.)

2.8 হ — the consonant ha

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How হ is written, stroke by stroke

হ

hô — the h of English hat, plus the inherent vowel you now know is ô rather than a.

No new machinery: every rule you hold applies unchanged. New shapes are coming; new rules are not.

You have been saying this letter since your first lesson — it opens the word for yes.

Your turn

- Write it: হ
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What is the inherent vowel in হ? (ô.) How many new rules did this lesson add? (None.)

2.9 ম — the consonant ma

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How ম is written, stroke by stroke

ম

mô — the m of English met, plus the inherent vowel.

Three consonants now. Say them in the order you met them, each with the vowel nobody wrote:

ন হ ম

nô, hô, mô. Notice you are saying aw three times, not ah.

Your turn

- Write it: ম
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Say the three consonants you hold, each with its inherent vowel. (nô, hô, mô.)

2.10 স — the consonant that is written s and said sh

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

স

Here the letter and the sound part company, and it is worth knowing early.

This letter descends from the Sanskrit s, and every transliteration writes it s. In Bengali it is normally pronounced *sh — the sh of English shoe.

So the word you say as nomosh-kar is written with what looks like an s. The spelling records the word's Sanskrit ancestry; the pronunciation records what Bengali did with it afterwards. Both are true, and the script keeps the older one.

English does exactly this with knight and through. Every literary language accumulates spellings that outlive their sounds.

Your turn

- Write it: স
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How is স written in transliteration, and how is it said? (Written s, said sh.) Why the difference? (The spelling keeps the Sanskrit ancestry; the sound moved on.)

2.11 ক — the consonant ka

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

ক

kô — the k of English skip, with no puff of breath after it.

Hold a palm in front of your mouth and say English kit: you feel air. Say skip: you do not. This is the second one. Bengali has a separate letter for the breathy version, and swapping them changes the word — so a difference English treats as an accident, this script writes down.

Five consonants, one mātrā, one independent vowel. One piece of machinery left.

Your turn

- Write it: ক
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

Is ক the k of kit or of skip? (Of skip — no puff of air.) Does the script care? (Yes — the breathy one is a different letter.)

2.12 ◌় — the mark that DELETES the inherent vowel and fuses two consonants

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

The inherent vowel is a nuisance when you do not want it. If a word presses two consonants together with no vowel between them, writing them plainly would insert an ô that is not there.

So there is a mark that removes it:

Bengali calls it the hasanta — Devanagari calls the same thing a virama. It sits under a consonant and means: no vowel here.

Then something happens that no European alphabet does. A consonant stripped of its vowel fuses with the one after it into a single joined shape, a conjunct:

স + ্ + ক → স্ক

One cluster. Conjuncts are not new characters to memorise — they are two you already know, joined. Bengali's are more thoroughly fused than Devanagari's, so some take a moment to take apart, but the principle does not change.

Your turn

- Write it: ্
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

What does the hasanta do? (Removes the inherent vowel.)
What is Devanagari's name for the same mark? (The virama.)
And are conjuncts new letters? (No — two known letters, fused.)

2.13 র — the last consonant of the greeting

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

How র is written, stroke by stroke

র

rô — a light tap of the tongue, closer to the r of Spanish pero than to any English r.

That is the last piece. Everything the greeting needs is now something you can write from memory.

Your turn

- Write it: র
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How is র made? (A light tap, not an English r.)

2.14 নমস্কার — seven pieces, all of them already yours

Write the piece from the previous lesson before adding another.

Script

Nothing new is introduced here. Every piece below is one you can write.

ন + ম + স + ্ + ক + া + র → নমস্কার

Read it the way you built it:

- ন — nô, inherent vowel
- ম — mô, inherent vowel
- স্ক — the conjunct: the s-letter with its vowel removed, fused to kô
- া — the mātrā, making that piece ka
- র — rô

nô-mosh-kar — and notice the sh, from a letter written s.

Count what it took: six consonants, one mātrā, one independent vowel and one hasanta. With them you can read no and the greeting, and every consonant you meet from here obeys rules you already hold.

Bengali has around forty more letters. It does not have any more systems.

Your turn

- Write it: নমস্কার
- Read it: every piece this chapter has given you so far, in order

Before you move on

How many new pieces were in this lesson? (None.) What is স্ক made of? (The স-letter with its vowel removed, joined to ক.) And what still remains to learn — rules, or shapes? (Shapes.)

Chapter 3

Introducing Yourself

Modes: voice (3) eyes (5) Hands-free start: all 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can introduce myself in Bengali, give my name, and understand the other person's name.
> Complete BN-C02-practice, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: introduce myself in Bengali, give my name, and understand the other person's name.

3.1 নাম (nām) — "name," a word older than Europe

> The first word of the introduction — and one of the clearest bridges between India and Europe.

The letters in this word

ন (nô) + ◌া (the long-ā sign) + ম (mô) → নাম (nām). Here the long-ā sign overrides the inherent ô, so it is nām, not "nôm."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নাম (nām, "name") ← Sanskrit nāman, from Proto-Indo-European h₃nómn (its final n syllabic) — the same ancient root as English name, Latin nōmen (English noun, nominate), and Greek onoma. Bengali nām and English name are cousins from before either language existed — one of the clearest threads tying the Indian and European branches of one family.

Your turn

- Say it: "nām"
- Say it: the family — nām / English name / Latin nōmen / Greek onoma
- Recall: say dhônyobad, then say hyã / nā, then say āchchhā

Before you move on

What roots is nām from, and its English cousins? (Sanskrit nāman / PIE h₃nómn*; name, noun, nominate.)

3.2 আমার (āmār) — "my"

The little word that makes the name yours.

The letters in this word

আ (the independent long ā, used because the word starts with a vowel) + মা (mā) + র (r) → আমার (āmār).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আমার (āmār, "my") is the possessive of āmi ("I"), on the first-person stem ām- ← Sanskrit asmad (the "we/I" stem). Buried in it is the same ancient first-person m- that runs through English me, my, mine and Latin mē — so Bengali's "my" and English's "my" share, at the root, one first-person sound.

Grammar Lens: no gender here

Note something Bengali does not do: আমার never changes for gender. Hindi and Punjabi have merā (m.) / merī (f.); Bengali has one form, āmār, for a man or a woman, a masculine or feminine thing. Bengali threw grammatical gender away entirely — you will see this again and again, and it makes Bengali, in this one respect, simpler than its western cousins.

Your turn

- Say it: "āmār"
- Say it: its owner (āmi, "I")
- Say it: does it change for a man vs. a woman? (No — Bengali has no gender)
- Recall: say āshi

Before you move on

What is āmār the possessive of, and how does it differ from Hindi's merā? (Āmi, "I"; āmār never changes for gender, where merā/merī does.)

3.3 আমার নাম ... (āmār nām ...) — "my name is...," with no "is"

Assemble the two atoms — and notice a whole word English needs that Bengali drops.

The two words — assembled

আমার (my) + নাম (name) + your name → আমার নাম ... = "my name …" → "my name is..." Āmār nām Arun. → "My name is Arun."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Both words are inherited. আমার (āmār) is the possessive of āmi, "I", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit asmad, the stem of "we" (CDIAL 986); নাম (nām) is Sanskrit nāman, "name" (CDIAL 7067).

Grammar Lens: Bengali drops "is" in the present

Look at what is missing: there is no verb. Bengali sets "my name" beside "Arun" — āmār nām Arun — and the "is" is understood without being said. This is the zero copula: for present-tense equational sentences (X is Y), Bengali needs no "to be" at all. (It is the same habit Tamil has — and unlike Hindi's merā nām … hai, which keeps the hai.) Bengali only brings back a verb when it talks about a state or place — you'll see that in Chapter 5.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "āmār nām …" with your name
- notice — no word for "is"

Before you move on

Give your name in Bengali, and say what it leaves out that English requires. (Āmār nām ….; the verb "is" — the zero copula.)

3.4 Ālāp kore bhālo lāglo — "pleased to meet you"

The warm close of an introduction.

The letters in this word

The key word is আলাপ (ālāp): আ + লা (lā) + প (p). The other three words of the phrase stay spoken for now; their letters come later.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Ālāp kore bhālo lāglo = আলাপ (ālāp, "acquaintance, conversation") + kore ("having done") + bhālo lāglo ("[it] felt good") — literally "having made your acquaintance, [it] felt good." The key word আলাপ (ālāp) is Sanskrit — ālāpa ("conversing, addressing," from ā- "toward" + lap "to speak"), the same ālāp that names the slow opening section of a rāga in Indian classical music, where the musician "converses" with the notes. So even a hello leans on Sanskrit's word for the meeting of two voices.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ālāp kore bhālo lāglo"

- what ālāp means, and where else you've heard it (acquaintance/ conversation; the ālāp of a rāga)

Before you move on

What does the phrase literally say, and what is ālāp? ("Having made [your] acquaintance, it felt good"; Sanskrit ālāpa, "conversing" — as in a rāga's opening.)

3.5 কি (ki) — "what"

The question-word — and it starts with the k- that heads nearly every Bengali question.

The letters in this word

ক (kô) + ি (the i-sign, written before the consonant but read after) → কি (ki).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কি (ki, "what") ← Sanskrit kim / the interrogative stem ka-, from PIE k^{w}o- — the same question-root behind English wh- words (what, who, which) and Latin qu-. Bengali's questions nearly all begin with this k-: ki (what), ke (who), kôbe (when), kōthāy (where), kēmon (how). Learn the k- and you can hear a question coming.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ki"
- the k- question family — ki, ke, kôbe, kōthāy, kēmon

Before you move on

What root do Bengali's question-words share, and its English family? (The interrogative k-, PIE k^{w}o-*; the wh- words.)

3.6 তুমি / আপনি (tumi / āpni) — "you," three ways

To ask a name you need "you" — and Bengali grades it three ways.

The letters in this word

তুমি (tumi): তু (tu) + মি (mi). আপনি (āpni): আ + প + নি.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তুমি (tumi, familiar "you") goes back to the Sanskrit plural yuṣmad-, "you", with its t- taken from singular tvam, "thou" (CDIAL 10511); tvam is from PIE tū — the same root as English archaic thou, Latin tū, French tu. Bengali grades respect in three levels:

- tui — intimate: close friends, children, family.
- তুমি (tumi) — familiar: friends, juniors, warmth.
- আপনি (āpni) — respectful: elders, strangers, formality.

(This is like Hindi's tū / tum / āp, and finer than the two-way split of the Romance tracks.) For a first meeting, use আপনি.
আপনি (āpni) is Sanskrit ātman, "self": CDIAL lists the respectful Bengali pronoun under it (CDIAL 1135), so the polite "you" is, at the root, "your self".

Your turn

- Say it: the three — tui (intimate) / tumi (familiar) / āpni (respectful)
- Say it: the English cousin of tumi (thou)
- Say it: which you use on first meeting (āpni)
- Read it: নাম

Before you move on

Name Bengali's three "you"s, and which English pronoun tumi is cousin to. (Tui / tumi / āpni; archaic thou.)

3.7 তোমার নাম কি? (tomār nām ki?) — "what's your name?"

Turn the introduction around — ask, instead of tell.

The two words — assembled

তোমার (tomār, "your," from tumi) + নাম (name) + কি (what) → literally "your name what?" And note — still no "is." The zero copula holds here too: Bengali lays "your name" beside "what," and the question is complete.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তোমার is the possessive of tumi, from Sanskrit yuṣmad-, "you" (CDIAL 10511); নাম is Sanskrit nāman, "name" (CDIAL 7067); কি is Sanskrit kim, "what" (CDIAL 3164).

Grammar Lens: answering, and the respectful form

Answer with the sentence you built: Āmār nām Arun. The respectful version swaps tomār (from tumi) for āpnār ("your," from āpni): āpnār nām ki? — the one to use with a stranger.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the familiar question — tomār nām ki?
- the respectful version — āpnār nām ki?
- answer it — āmār nām …

Before you move on

Ask "what's your name?" respectfully, and note what's still missing. (Āpnār nām ki?; there is no word for "is" — the zero copula.)

3.8 Chapter 3 — The introduction exchange

No new words. The whole introduction, assembled from atoms you now own.

The exchange

Say these aloud:

- "My name is Mira." — āmār nām Mira.
- "What's your name?" (respectful) — āpnār nām ki?
- "My name is Arun." — āmār nām Arun.
- "Pleased to meet you." — ālāp kore bhālo lāglo.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Say these aloud:

- "name," "my" (nām, āmār)
- the three "you" levels (tui / tumi / āpni)
- "what," and the word Bengali leaves out (ki; there is no "is")

What you've built — roots you now carry

- nām ← Sanskrit nāman → English name
- āmār ← the first-person ām-; no gender (unlike Hindi merā/ merī)
- ki ← ka- → English what; tumi ← tū* → thou
- ālāp ← Sanskrit ālāpa, "conversing"

Before you move on

Introduce yourself and ask a stranger's name in Bengali — and note the one word you never say. (Āmār nām …. Āpnār nām ki? — no word for "is.")

Chapter 4

In Front, Underneath, and On Its Own

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) ✓ pen (9) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 10 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read নাম, তুমি and হ্যাঁ off the page, write the two i-bodies and the u-sign, and say what a য hung under another letter does to the vowel beside it.
> Yes — the third word this book ever taught — is read whole from five pieces, four of which the chapter already owned; না is read beside it, and নাম and তুমি are read back to close the chapter.

4.1 নাম — a whole word, read, with nothing new in it

> Write the greeting again before starting. Every piece in it is one you made from memory.

Script

The word for name has been said aloud since the introductions chapter. Here it is on the page, and there is nothing in it you have not already written:

> ন + ◌া + ম → নাম

- ন — nô, carrying its own vowel
- ◌া — the mātrā, which throws that vowel out and puts ā in its place, so the piece now says nā

- ম — mô

nām. Say it with the mouth open on the first syllable and closed on the second, and you have the word you have been using since আমার নাম — "my name."

Look at the top of the three shapes. The head-line is one unbroken bar across the whole word. That bar is why a Bengali word looks like a single object rather than three, and it is also the reason a reader coming from English keeps trying to break it in the wrong places: the bar is decoration on the letters, not a boundary between them.

One more falls out of the same nine pieces. ন + ◌া + ক is nāk — the word for nose from the chapter on the face.

Your turn

- Read it: নাম
- Read it: নাক
- Write it: নাম

Before you move on

How many new pieces were in this lesson? (None.) What does the mātrā do to the vowel a consonant already carries? (Replaces it.) And what is the bar along the top — a letter boundary, or part of the letters? (Part of the letters.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

4.2 ি — the i-sign, written before the consonant it is heard after

Read নাম aloud before adding another piece.

Script

The mātrā ◌া replaced a consonant's vowel with ā and sat to the right of it. Here is the sign that puts i there instead:

The sound is the i of English bit — short, and never the ee of feet.

Now the part worth slowing down for. This sign is written to the left of the consonant it belongs to, and spoken to the right of it. Take ম mô and add it:

ম + ি → মি — said mi, not im

The hook sits in front on the page; the vowel lands behind in the mouth. Nothing about the shape tells you that, and nothing about the sound tells you either. It is a habit of the writing system, held on to from the Brahmi script every Indian abugida descends from, and Devanagari does exactly the same thing.

A reader who tries to sound out the marks in the order the eye meets them will get this word backwards every time. Read the consonant first, then the sign in front of it.

Your turn

- Write it: ি
- Write it: মি
- Read it: নাম

Before you move on

Which side of its consonant is ি written on? (The left.) Which side is it heard on? (The right.) And is the sound the i of bit or of feet? (Of bit.)

4.3 ইট (iṭ) — a brick

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: ইট

ইট — iṭ — "a brick".

Say it: iṭ. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, ই, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ইট (iṭ) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from iṣṭakā, "brick" (CDIAL 1600).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- iṭ
- iṭ, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a brick"? (ইট, iṭ.)

4.4 ই — the independent i

Read নাম, then write ি and say which side of its consonant it stands on.

Script

How ই is written, stroke by stroke

ই

This is i again — the same sound as ি — written as a letter in its own right instead of as a mark on somebody else.

You have held a pair like this since the first script chapter without it being named as one. আ is the independent form; া is its sign. Now the same arrangement for i: ই is the letter, ি is the sign.

The rule that picks between them is worth stating once for every vowel in the script: a vowel that has a consonant in front of it is written as a sign on that consonant; a vowel that does not is written as its own full letter. Beginning of a word, or straight after another vowel — those are the places with nothing to lean on.

So ই turns up where a word starts on i, and at the end of a word after another vowel — which is where a later chapter will find it, in the word for brother.

The shape is unrelated to ি, and that is normal here: a vowel's letter and its sign look nothing alike in Bengali, the way a capital and a lowercase A need not look alike in the Latin alphabet.

Your turn

- Write it: ই
- Write it: আ া ই ি
- Read it: নাম

Before you move on

When does a vowel get its own full letter? (When there is no consonant to lean on.) Which pair did you already hold without being told? (আ and া.)

4.5 ত — the consonant ta, the dental one

Read নাম aloud, then write ই and ি and say which is which.

Script

How ত is written, stroke by stroke

ত

tô — and the tongue goes somewhere an English speaker does not put it. Press the tip flat against the back of the top front teeth, so the contact is on enamel, and release. That is this letter.

The English t of top is made a centimetre further back, on the ridge behind the teeth. Bengali has a separate letter for that further-back sound, and it arrives later in this chapter's family. The two are not accents of one letter: they spell different words. So an English t dropped into a Bengali word is not a slight accent — it is the other letter, and the listener hears it as one.

The test is physical, not auditory. Say English top and feel where the tongue lands. Slide it forward onto the teeth and say it again. The second one is ত.

With the mātrā:

ত + া → তা

Your turn

- Write it: ত
- Write it: তা
- Read it: নাম

Before you move on

Where does the tongue touch for ত — the teeth or the ridge behind them? (The teeth.) Does Bengali have a second, further-back t? (Yes, a separate letter.) And is using the English one a small accent, or a different letter? (A different letter.)

4.6 ু — the u-sign, hanging below the line

Write ত from memory, and say where the tongue touches for it.

Script

Two vowel signs so far: া to the right, ি to the left. Here is the third direction.

The sound is the u of English put, short and rounded — never the oo of food.

It is written underneath its consonant, tucked into the bottom of the shape:

ত + ু → তু — said tu

That is the whole of the news, and it matters more than it sounds. A script whose marks go above, below, left and right of a letter cannot be read as a line of beads. The consonant is the anchor; everything else is furniture arranged around it. Find the anchor first, then look around it, and the reading order stops being a guess.

The hand has to learn it too: the stroke starts at the foot of the consonant and curls, and it must not drift so far left that it looks like it belongs to the letter before.

Your turn

- Write it: ু
- Write it: তু
- Read it: নাম

Before you move on

Which side of its consonant does ু sit on? (Underneath.) Is the sound the u of put or the oo of food? (Of put.) And which piece of a written syllable is the anchor? (The consonant.)

4.7 তুমি — the familiar you, read

Write ু and ি, and say which way each of them faces.

Script

ত + ু + ম + ি → তুমি

Four pieces, and the two vowel signs go to two different places:

- ত with ু slung underneath it — tu
- ম with ি standing in front of it — mi

tumi — the middle rung of Bengali's three-way you: tui for a child or a brother, tumi for a friend, āpni for a stranger or an elder. This is the one a learner uses most and the one that will be used back at them.

Notice what the word looks like as an object. Above the letters runs the head-line; below the first letter hangs the u-sign; between the letters stands the i-hook. Three levels on one word. The eye that only scans along the head-line will miss half of it — Bengali reading is a scan of a band, not of a line.

Say তুমি aloud and hear two light syllables with no stress worth speaking of. Bengali does not lean on one syllable the way English does — and the next lesson puts the other pronoun of the pair on the page beside it.

Your turn

- Read it: তুমি
- Write it: তুমি

Before you move on

In তুমি, where is the u-sign? (Under the first letter.) Where is the i-sign? (In front of the second.) And which of the three yous is তুমি? (The familiar one — for a friend.)

4.8 য — the letter that is written y and said j

Read তুমি. Then write ◌ and say what it does to the letter in front of it.

Script

How য is written, stroke by stroke

য

Sanskrit gave this letter to Bengali as a y. Bengali still writes it and no longer says it: on its own, য is jô — the same sound as the j of English jam.

That is the first thing to hold. A letter can outlive its sound. The shape was worth keeping because the spellings were worth keeping, exactly as English keeps the k in knee.

The second thing is stranger, and it is the reason this letter arrives now rather than later. Put য under another consonant with the vowel-killer ◌ between them, and it stops being a consonant at all:

হ + ্ + য → হ্য

Written, that is three pieces. Said, it is one syllable — and the vowel in it has changed. The inherent ô that হ carries becomes a flat æ, the vowel of English cat. Nothing here is pronounced y. The letter's whole job in this position is to bend the vowel beside it.

Scribes have a name for the sub-form: jô-phôla, "the য hung below." You have been saying it since the first lesson of this book without seeing it.

Your turn

- Write it: য
- Write it: হ ্ য
- Write it: হ্য
- Say it: the flat vowel in হ্য — hyæ, not hyô

Before you move on

What does য say standing alone? (j.) What does it say hung under another letter? (Nothing — it bends the vowel to æ.) And which word from the very first lesson of this book do you now have all but one piece of? (হ্যাঁ, hyã, "yes.")

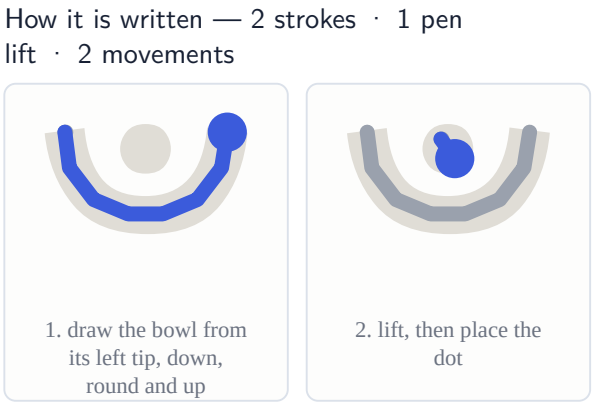
4.9 ঁ — the moon-and-dot

Read নাম. Then write য and say what it does when it is hung under another letter.

Script



Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Bangla recognizer, class 48 (89 chandrabindu; user manual Table 4): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native Bengali writers (MIT licence, 2012)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ঁ is written, stroke by stroke

A crescent with a dot over it. Its name says only what it looks like — chôndro, moon, and bindu, dot — and nothing about what it does.

What it does is send the vowel through the nose. Say ah, then say ah again while letting some of the air out through the nose instead of all of it through the mouth. That second one is what this mark writes. French speakers know it as the vowel in sans; Portuguese speakers know it as the tilde on não.

It rides above the head-line:

না + ঁ → নাঁ

That position is worth pausing on. Every mark so far has hung below the line (ু), sat beside a letter (া, ি), or wrapped around it (ো). This is the first one that lives on the roof, and the roof is otherwise the one part of a Bengali word the eye can read as an unbroken rail. A reader who skims the line will miss it — and missing it changes the word.

Two things it is not. It is not a consonant: nothing new is being said, only re-routed. And it is not optional decoration: হাঁস ("goose") and হাস ("laugh") are held apart by this crescent alone.

Your turn

- Write it: ঁ
- Write it: নাঁ
- Say it: না then নাঁ — mouth only, then nose as well
- Write it: হ্য

Before you move on

Where does ঁ sit? (Above the head-line — the only mark that does.) What does it change? (The vowel, which now goes through the nose.) And is it a consonant? (No — nothing extra is said.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

4.10 হ্যাঁ — yes, read whole

Write ঁ and say where on the line it sits. Then write হ.

Script

হ + ্ + য + া + ঁ → হ্যাঁ

Five pieces, one syllable, and every piece already yours:

- হ — the breath
- ্ — kill its inherent vowel
- য — hung underneath, saying nothing, bending what follows to æ
- া — the vowel sign
- ঁ — and send it through the nose

hyã̄ — yes. It was the third thing this book taught you to say, in the very first chapter, and you have said it every chapter since. Today it stops being a sound you repeat and becomes a word you can decode.

That is the whole bargain the book has been making. A word is met by ear first and taken apart by eye later, so that the eye is never asked to guess at a sound the mouth has not already made. You are not learning what hyã̄ means here. You are learning that you can see it.

Notice what the spelling insists on, too. Bengali could have written this word with a plain হ and a nasal mark. It does not, because the vowel really is the flat অ্যা and only the hung য writes that. The spelling is carrying a pronunciation rule, not a memory.

And its partner needs nothing new at all:

nā — no. One is the most decorated word in the book so far; the other is two pieces. Both were learned in the same breath.

And that closes the chapter, so take the other two words it made readable with it. নাম was three pieces and no signs below the line; তুমি was three pieces and two signs, one under the letter and one in front of it. Read all three in a row and the chapter's whole argument is visible in nine shapes: a Bengali word is assembled, not spelled.

Your turn

- Read it: হ্যাঁ
- Read it: না
- Read it: নাম
- Read it: তুমি
- Read it: নমস্কার
- Write it: হ্যাঁ
- Say it: yes, then no — hyã̄, nā

Before you move on

How many pieces are in হ্যাঁ? (Five.) Which of them is not a sound? (য — it bends the vowel.) Which one is above the line? (ঁ.) And how many pieces does না need? (Two.)

Chapter 5

How Are You?

Modes: voice (1) eyes (5) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how someone is in Bengali, answer naturally, and return the question.
> Complete BN-C03-practice, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: ask how someone is in Bengali, answer naturally, and return the question.

5.1 আমি (āmi) — "I," from an old word for "we"

To answer "how are you?" you first need "I" — and it began as a word for "we".

The letters in this word

আ (independent long ā) + মি (mi) → আমি (āmi).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আমি (āmi, "I") is not from Sanskrit asmi, "I am", though the two look alike. CDIAL lists Old Bengali āmi under asmad, the stem of the Sanskrit plural pronoun "we, us" (CDIAL 986): Bengali took an old word for "we" and made it its everyday "I", as it did with tumi, "you". Its possessive is the আমার (āmār, "my") from Chapter 3.

Grammar Lens: "I" can often be dropped

Bengali verbs carry the person in their ending — āchhi already means "I am" — so āmi is often left out once it's clear. You still learn it first, because the answer to kēmon āchho? begins with it.

Your turn

- Say it: "āmi"
- Say it: the pair — āmi (I), āmār (my)
- Say it: the Sanskrit stem it comes from (asmad, "we")
- Recall: say ki, then say tumi / āpni

Before you move on

What Sanskrit stem is āmi from, and what did that stem mean? (Asmad, "we, us": Bengali made the old "we" its "I".)

5.2 কেমন (kēmon) — "how," another of the k-questions

You met কি (ki, "what") in Chapter 3. Here is its sibling.

The letters in this word

কে (kē, kô + the e-sign) + মন (mon) → কেমন (kēmon).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কেমন (kēmon, "how, of what kind") is from the interrogative stem ka-, from PIE k^{w}o- — the same question-root behind English wh- and Latin qu-. Bengali's questions nearly all begin with this k-: ki (what), ke (who), kôbe (when), kōthāy (where), kēmon (how). It is the Indian branch of the same family of question-words that gave English what/ who/how.
CDIAL lists Bengali ke, "who", under that stem (CDIAL 2574) but has no entry for kēmon itself, so how its ending formed is not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kēmon"
- the k- question family — ki, ke, kôbe, kōthāy, kēmon

Before you move on

What root do Bengali's question-words share, and its English family? (The interrogative k-, PIE k^{w}o*-; the wh- words.)

5.3 তুমি কেমন আছো? (tumi kēmon āchho?) — "how are you?"

The everyday "how are you?" — and the first time Bengali brings back a verb "to be."

The letters in this word

The new word is আছো (āchho, "are you"), from the verb আছা (āchhā, "to be, to exist, to have") + the familiar-you ending -o. Note the ছ (chh) — a breathy ch.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তুমি কেমন আছো? = তুমি (tumi, familiar "you") + কেমন (kēmon, "how") + আছো (āchho, "are") — "you how are?", the verb last. All three are inherited: tumi from yuṣmad-, "you" (CDIAL 10511), kēmon on the stem ka-, āchho from ākṣēti, "abides" (CDIAL 1031).

Grammar Lens: now the copula returns

In Chapter 3, Bengali dropped "is": āmār nām Arun ("my name Arun"). That zero copula works for equations (X is Y). But "how are you?" asks about a state — how you exist — and for that Bengali uses a real verb, আছা (āchhā). So: no verb for "my name is Arun," a real verb for "how are you." Respectful form: āpni kēmon āchhen? (āchhen for āpni). Match the "you" to the verb-ending.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the familiar question — tumi kēmon āchho?
- the respectful version — āpni kēmon āchhen?
- why here Bengali needs a verb but "my name is Arun" didn't (state vs. equation)

Before you move on

What verb does "how are you?" use, and why does this need one when "my name is Arun" didn't? (Āchhā, "to be/exist"; it describes a state, not an equation — the zero copula only covers X is Y.)

5.4 ভালো (bhālo) — "well," and how to answer

The word that answers "how are you?" — and one Bengalis say all the time.

The letters in this word

ভা (bhā, an aspirated b + long ā) + লো (lo) → ভালো (bhālo).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভালো (bhālo, "good, well, fine") is the everyday Bengali "good" — likely from Sanskrit bhadra ("good, auspicious, gentle"), worn down over centuries into bhālo. It is one of the most-used words in the language: bhālo lāge ("[I] like it"), bhālobāsā ("love," literally "good-dwelling").
CDIAL lists it under Sanskrit bhalla, "auspicious", which it derives from a form bhadla-* beside bhadra (CDIAL 9408).

The exchange — the reply

With the āchhā verb: āmi bhālo āchhi — "I am well" (āchhi = "I am/exist"). The whole exchange:

— tumi kēmon āchho? ("How are you?") — āmi bhālo āchhi, dhônnobad. ("I'm well, thank you.")

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bhālo"
- the full reply — āmi bhālo āchhi
- the tender word built on it (bhālobāsā, "love")

Before you move on

Give the full reply to tumi kēmon āchho?, and name bhālo's likely Sanskrit source. (Āmi bhālo āchhi; Sanskrit bhadra, "good.")

5.5 কোনো ব্যাপার না (kono bæpār nā) — "no matter"

When someone thanks you — or apologises — this is the easy, gracious reply, and it reuses a word from Chapter 1.

The letters in this word

কোনো (kono, "any") + ব্যাপার (bæpār, "matter, affair" — with the ya-phola on ব্য) + না (nā, "no/not," from Chapter 1) → kono bæpār nā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কোনো ব্যাপার না literally means "[it's] no matter" — kono ("any") + bæpār ("matter, affair") + nā ("not"). It serves as "it's nothing / no worries / never mind / you're welcome." The word ব্যাপার (bæpār, "matter, affair, business") is Sanskrit — vyāpāra ("occupation, dealing"). And না (nā) you met in Chapter 1: the ancient negative, PIE ne, behind English no, not, none. So the reply pairs a Sanskrit noun with the oldest negative in the family.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kono bæpār nā"

- what it literally means ("[it's] no matter")
- the exchange — dhônnobad / kono bæpār nā

Before you move on

What does kono bæpār nā literally say, and which Chapter-1 word does it reuse? ("It's no matter"; nā, "not" — PIE ne*, English no.)

5.6 Chapter 5 — The how-are-you exchange

No new words. The whole responding cycle, from atoms you now own.

The exchange

Say these aloud:

- "How are you?" (familiar) — tumi kēmon āchho?
- "I'm well, thank you." — āmi bhālo āchhi, dhônnobad.
- "No matter / you're welcome." — kono bæpār nā.
- the respectful question — āpni kēmon āchhen?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Say these aloud:

- the k- question-word for "how" (kēmon)
- "I" and the verb "to be/exist" (āmi, āchhā)
- when Bengali needs the verb and when it drops it (state vs. equation)

What you've built — roots you now carry

- kēmon ← the interrogative k- (PIE k^{w}o-*), cousin of English how/what
- āmi ← Sanskrit asmi, cousin of English am

- bhālo ← Sanskrit bhadra “good”; āmi bhālo āchhi “I’m well”
- nā ← PIE ne*, English no (in kono bæpār nā)

Before you move on

A stranger asks āpni kēmon āchhen? — give a full, polite reply, and answer their thanks. (Āmi bhālo āchhi, dhônnobad — and to thanks, kono bæpār nā.)

Chapter 6

A Sign Made of Two Signs

Modes: voice (1) pen (6) Hands-free start: none of the 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read আমি and কেমন, write ল, the e-sign and its independent twin এ, and build the o-sign out of two signs I already hold rather than memorising a new shape.
> How read back with nothing new, and the count that shows why four pieces bought two more words — three of the four being vowel pieces, which multiply across every consonant already held.

6.1 আমি — the word for I, and two more that come free with it

> Write ি once, and say which side of its consonant it goes on. Then read হ্যাঁ, and name the piece in it that makes no sound.

Script

আ + ম + ি → আমি

- আ — the independent vowel, standing on its own because nothing comes before it to hang a sign on
- ম — mô
- ি — written in front of that ম, heard after it

āmi — I. The word from the chapter before this one, the one that came down from Sanskrit asmi and is cousin to English am.

Watch what the sign does to the eye. On the page the order runs আ, then the hook, then ম. In the mouth it runs ā, then m, then i. The middle two swap. This is the single most common stumble for a new reader of any Indian script, and the cure is mechanical: find the consonant, say it, then say the sign leaning on its left.

Two more words are now readable with nothing added.

ক + ি → কি — ki, the question word: what

আ + স + ি → আসি — āsi, the goodbye from the first chapter that means "I'll come again"

Three words out of one sign. That is what a working set does.

Your turn

- Read it: আমি
- Read it: কি
- Read it: আসি
- Write it: আমি

Before you move on

In আমি, which two sounds swap between the page and the mouth? (The m and the i.) Why does আ stand in its own full shape here? (Because nothing comes before it to carry a sign.) And what does আসি mean? ("I'll come again" — the goodbye.)

6.2 ল — the consonant la

Read আমি and কি aloud before adding a new shape.

Script

How ল is written, stroke by stroke

ল

lô — the l of English let, made with the tongue-tip on the back of the top teeth rather than on the ridge behind them. English puts it a little further back and lets the tongue-body sag, which is what makes an English l at the end of a word sound thick. Bengali keeps it forward and light in every position.

The shape hangs from the head-line like the rest, with a loop at the bottom left and a stroke that turns back on itself.

Bengali has one letter for this sound. That is worth naming, because the south of the subcontinent does not: Tamil and Malayalam each carry three distinct l-letters for three distinct tongue positions, and a Bengali reader meeting a Tamil place-name is looking at distinctions their own script never had to record. Going the other way is easier — a southern reader has one Bengali shape to learn where they had three.

Add the mātrā and the piece says lā:

ল + ◌া → লা

Your turn

- Write it: ল
- Write it: লা
- Read it: আমি

Before you move on

Where does the tongue go for Bengali ল — on the teeth or on the ridge behind them? (On the teeth.) How many l-letters does Bengali have? (One.) And how many do Tamil and Malayalam have? (Three.)

6.3 ে — the e-sign, standing in front

Read তুমি, and name where each of its two vowel signs sits.

Script

The vowel of English pet, said with the mouth a little more closed than an English speaker expects.

It is written in front of its consonant, exactly like ি:

ক + ে → কে — said ke

Two signs now stand on the left, and it is worth having a rule for them rather than two facts. A vowel sign written before the consonant is still spoken after it. That single sentence covers ি and ে and everything the script will do with a leading mark from here on. It is not a quirk of two letters; it is how the system writes a leading mark at all.

The shape is a single upright stroke with a small hook, and it is easy to write too tall — it should reach the head-line and stop.

Keep an eye on this one. It is going to come back joined to something else, and when it does, both halves will already be yours.

Your turn

- Write it: ে
- Write it: কে
- Read it: তুমি

Before you move on

Which two signs are written in front of their consonant? (ি and ে.) And what is true of any sign written in front? (It is spoken after.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

6.4 একা (ekā) — alone

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: একা

একা — ekā — "alone".

Say it: ekā. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, এ, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

একা (ekā), "alone", is built on ek, "one", which goes back to Sanskrit ēka, "one" (CDIAL 2462). CDIAL lists Oriya ekā, "alone", under the same entry but gives no Bengali form with that sense.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ekā
- ekā, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "alone"? (একা, ekā.)

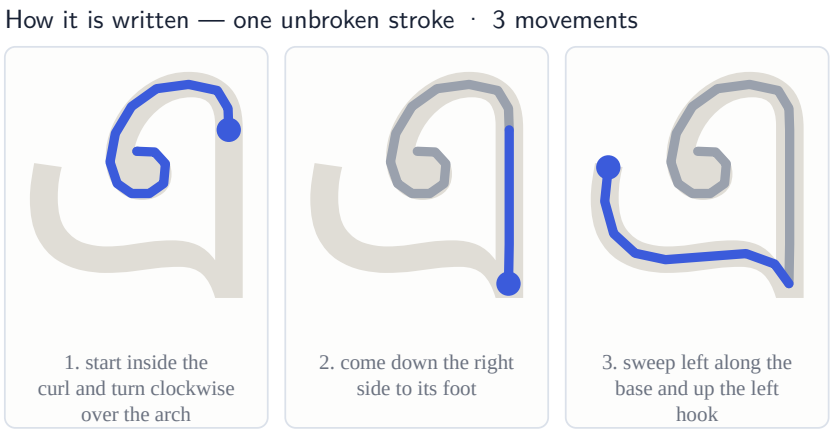
6.5 এ — the independent e

Write ই and ি, and say which one a vowel uses when it has nothing to lean on.

Script



How এ is written, stroke by stroke

এ

The vowel of pet, written as its own letter. ে is its sign; this is its body. Three pairs are now in hand:

- আ and া
- ই and ি
- এ and ে

The third one is what turns a list of facts into something you can predict. Meeting a new vowel from here on, the question is no longer what does this do but which of its two forms am I looking at — and the answer is always decided by whether there is a consonant in front of it.

That is the last piece of machinery this book will introduce. Consonants carrying a vowel; signs that replace it; a mark that deletes it; full letters where there is nothing to hang a sign on. Everything else Bengali will ask of a reader is more shapes, and the script chapters have said from the beginning that shapes are the cheap part.

Your turn

- Write it: এ
- Write it: আ ই এ
- Read it: আমি তুমি

Before you move on

What is the sign that goes with এ? (ে.) And what decides which of a vowel's two forms you write? (Whether there is a consonant in front of it.)

6.6 োা — the o-sign, wrapped around its letter

Read আমি, then write ে and এ and say which is the sign.

Script

Two lessons ago ে stood in front of its consonant on its own. Here it is again, joined to something:

Look at it before reading on. On the left is ে. On the right is া. The sign for o is the e-sign and the a-sign, written around one consonant at the same time:

ক + োা → কো — said ko

Nothing was memorised for this. Two shapes already in the hand, put on either side of a letter, make a third sound. That is the economy the whole script runs on, and it is why a system with around fifty letters does not need fifty separate strokes to write.

The sound is the o of English tone without the glide English puts on the end of it. Hold it flat; do not let it slide toward oo.

One warning for the eye. Because the sign has a piece on each side, a consonant wearing োা is wider than any letter met so far, and a reader can mistake the right-hand half for a mātrā belonging to the next letter along. It belongs to the one inside.

Your turn

- Write it: ো
- Write it: কো
- Read it: আমি

Before you move on

What two signs is ো made of? (ে and া.) Which letter does the right-hand half belong to — the one before it or the one inside it? (The one inside.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

6.7 কেমন — how, and the five words the eye now holds

Write the three vowel signs of this chapter and say which way each one faces.

Script

ক + ে + ম + ন → কেমন

- ক with ে in front of it — ke
- ম — mô
- ন — its inherent vowel worn almost to nothing at the end

kemon — how, the word that opens the sentence you have been saying since the chapter before this one to ask someone how they are.

Nothing new was needed for it. That is the shape of this whole chapter: four pieces added, and two more words that were already in the mouth handed over to the eye.

Count what you hold now. Nine pieces came from the first script chapter, four from the second — ি, ই, ত, ু — and four here: ল, ে, এ, ো. Seventeen pieces, and with them:

- নমস্কার — the greeting

- নাম — name
- তুমি — you
- আমি — I
- কেমন — how

and, without being counted as words of their own, কি, আসি, আমার and কাল.

Six of the eight additions since the first script chapter were vowel pieces — signs or their independent twins — and that ratio is not an accident. The consonants are many and each one buys a little; the vowel signs are few and each one buys a great deal, because every consonant already held can take every sign. Adding a sign multiplies. Adding a letter adds.

Your turn

- Read it: নাম তুমি আমি কেমন
- Read it: নমস্কার
- Read it: হ্যাঁ না
- Write it: ঁ
- Write it: কেমন
- Write it: তুমি কেমন

Before you move on

How many new pieces did this chapter add? (Four.) How many of them were vowel pieces? (Three — ে, এ, ো.) And why is a vowel sign worth more than a consonant? (Because every consonant you hold can take it — it multiplies.)

Chapter 7

Farewells

> By the end of this chapter: I can end a Bengali conversation politely and choose a farewell that fits the situation.
> Complete BN-C04-practice, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: end a Bengali conversation politely and choose a farewell that fits the situation.

7.1 আবার (ābār) — "again," the seed of "see you again"

One small word turns a goodbye from "farewell" into "till next time."

The letters in this word

আ (independent ā) + বা (bā) + র (r) → আবার (ābār).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আবার (ābār, "again, once more") is a native Indo-Aryan adverb with no tidy English cognate, but a familiar job: it turns a parting into a promise. Chapter 1 gave you আসি (āshi, "I'll come [again]") as goodbye; add ābār and you can say outright "we'll meet again."
Its origin is not settled: CDIAL has no entry for ābār. Its second half looks like bār, "turn, time", from Sanskrit vāra (CDIAL 11547), but CDIAL does not take the word apart.

Your turn

- Say it: "ābār"
- Say it: what it adds to a goodbye ("again")
- Recall: say āmi
- Read it: কেমন

Before you move on

What does ābār mean, and what does it do to a farewell? ("Again"; it makes the parting a promise of return.)

7.2 দেখা হবে (dækhā hôbe) — "(we) will meet"

A future-tense phrase — the other half of "see you again," built in a way English never would.

The letters in this word

দেখা (dækhā, "seeing") = দে (dæ) + খা (khā). হবে (hôbe, "will be/happen") = হ (hô) + বে (be).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দেখা হবে literally means "[a] seeing will happen" — dækhā (the noun "seeing," from দেখা dækhā "to see") + hôbe ("will be/happen," the future of hôwā, "to be, to become"). Bengali says "a meeting will occur" rather than "we will meet" — an impersonal, gentle way to promise reunion. The verb hôwā ("to be/become") is the same one behind āchhā's cousin, and its root bhū / হ ties (distantly) to English be.

Grammar Lens: the impersonal future

Many Bengali "we'll…" expressions use this noun + hôbe ("…will happen") shape: dækhā hôbe ("[a] seeing will happen"), kôthā hôbe ("[a] talk will happen"). No "we," no active verb — the event itself is the subject.

Your turn

- Say it: "dækhā hôbe"
- Say it: its literal meaning ("[a] seeing will happen")
- Say it: the verb "to see" inside it (dækhā)
- Recall: say bhālo

Before you move on

What does dækhā hôbe literally say, and what is odd (to English ears) about it? ("A seeing will happen"; it is impersonal — the event is the subject, not "we.")

7.3 আবার দেখা হবে (ābār dækhā hôbe) — "we'll meet again"

The warm, everyday goodbye — the fuller cousin of Chapter 1's āshi.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আবার দেখা হবে = আবার (ābār, "again") + দেখা হবে (dækhā hôbe, "[a] seeing will happen") — "we'll meet again" (literally "again a seeing will happen"). Chapter 1 gave you the tender আসি (āshi, "I'll come [again]"), the "promise of return" goodbye; ābār dækhā hôbe is its warm, explicit form. It is the sibling of the whole subcontinent's parting habit (Hindi phir milenge, Tamil pōy varugiṟēṉ): never a blunt "goodbye," always a return promised.
Dækhā goes back to dṛkṣati*, "sees", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 6507), and hôbe to Sanskrit bhavati, "becomes, is" (CDIAL 9416); where ābār comes from is not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the warm goodbye — ābār dækhā hôbe
- the two pieces (ābār + dækhā hôbe)

- the Chapter-1 goodbye it deepens (āshi)

Before you move on

What does ābār dækhā hôbe literally say, and how does it relate to āshi? ("Again a seeing will happen"; it is the fuller, explicit form of Ch.1's "promise of return" goodbye.)

7.4 কাল দেখা হবে (kāl dækhā hôbe) — "see you tomorrow"

A goodbye for tomorrow — built on a word that means both tomorrow and yesterday.

The letters in this word

কা (kā) + ল (l) → কাল (kāl). Two simple letters, one tricky word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কাল (kāl) means both "tomorrow" and "yesterday" — the day on either side of today — from Sanskrit kalya, "dawn; at dawn, tomorrow" (CDIAL 3104), the word behind Hindi's kal too. The look-alike কাল, "time", is a different Sanskrit word, kāla (CDIAL 3084). Bengali trusts the verb's tense to tell which: kāl dækhā hôbe (future → "tomorrow"), kāl dækhā hôyechhilo (past → "yesterday"). So কাল দেখা হবে = "tomorrow, a seeing will happen" = "see you tomorrow."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kāl dækhā hôbe"
- the puzzle — kāl means both tomorrow and yesterday
- the root and its cousin (kalya, "dawn"; Hindi kal)

Before you move on

What two opposite days does kāl mean, and what tells them apart? (Both tomorrow and yesterday; the verb's tense.)

7.5 Chapter 7 — The farewells

No new words. Three ways to part — none of them a blunt "goodbye."

Why it's said this way

Say these aloud:

- the tender Chapter-1 goodbye — āshi ("I'll come [again]")
- the fuller "we'll meet again" — ābār dækhā hôbe
- "see you tomorrow" — kāl dækhā hôbe

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Say these aloud:

- "again" and "[a] seeing will happen" (ābār, dækhā hôbe)
- the word that means BOTH tomorrow and yesterday (kāl)
- what's odd about dækhā hôbe (impersonal — the event is the subject)

What you've built — roots you now carry

- dækhā hôbe — "[a] seeing will happen"; the impersonal future
- kāl ← kāla "time" (Hindi kal, Punjabi akāl)
- āshi (Ch.1) — "I'll come [again]," the Bengali promise-of-return goodbye

Before you move on

You're leaving a friend and expect to see them next week. Which goodbye fits, and how does Bengali phrase "we'll meet"? (Ābār dækhā hôbe; impersonally — "a seeing will happen.")

7.6 Four exchanges, and two ways to leave

Four chapters, four exchanges, each practised once in the chapter that taught it. From memory: the first thing you say on meeting someone, and the last thing you say on leaving.

You'll want to know: the two goodbyes differ by one word

ābār dækhā hôbe	we'll meet again
kāl dækhā hôbe	see you tomorrow

dækhā hôbe — "a meeting will happen" — does the work in both. What changes is the one word in front: again, or tomorrow. Neither goodbye says goodbye; both name the next meeting, and the front word is how far off it is.

কাল is the one to keep an eye on. It is the same word for yesterday and tomorrow, and only the verb around it tells you which way time is running.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the greeting exchange, both voices
- ask how someone is, and answer
- give your name, and ask for theirs
- leave someone you will see tomorrow, then someone you may not

Before you move on

What do both goodbyes share? (dækhā hôbe — a meeting will happen.) What changes between them? (The word in front — again, or tomorrow.) What is odd about kāl? (It is also yesterday.) And what tells you which one is meant? (The verb around it.)

Chapter 8

The Breath Is a Letter

Modes: ✓ pen (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write five Bengali consonants as cells of one grid — lips and throat, each with the voice and the breath switched on or off — read আবার and ভালো with them, and close the throat row with গ so that লাগলো becomes readable.
> The throat row is closed — ক, খ, গ in one place with two switches — and লাগলো, waiting since the introductions chapter, becomes readable in the same breath.

8.1 ব — the consonant ba

Read কেমন aloud before adding a new shape, and say which way its vowel sign faces.

Script

How ব is written, stroke by stroke

ব

bô — the b of English bin, with the lips shut and no puff of air after.

This shape carries the load of the track's whole sound-fingerprint. Sanskrit had a separate v, and Bengali does not: the sound collapsed into b, and the letter that used to write v is now read as this one. That is why Sanskrit dhanyavāda is spoken dhônyobad in the first chapter, and why a Sanskrit word with a v in it will keep turning up in Bengali with a b.

So when a word looks like a Sanskrit word you know but has a b where you expect a v, you have not found a different word. You have found the same one, wearing this letter.

With the mātrā:

ব + ◌া → বা

Your turn

- Write it: ব
- Write it: বা
- Read it: কেমন

Before you move on

What Sanskrit sound does ব now do the work of, besides b? (v.) So if a Sanskrit word you know has a v where Bengali has a b, is it a different word? (No — the same one.)

8.2 আবার — again, read

Write ব, and say which Sanskrit sound it took over.

Script

আ + ব + ◌া + র → আবার

- আ — standing alone at the front of the word, as it always must
- ব with ◌া — bā
- র — rô, worn down to almost nothing at the end

ābār — again, the word that opens the goodbye from the farewells chapter.

Two things are worth noticing about the shape of the word rather than its meaning.

First, the আ at the front. A vowel at the start of a word has no consonant to hang a sign on, so it uses its own full independent letter. A vowel anywhere else is a sign. Same sound, two forms, and which one you write is decided entirely by whether there is a consonant to lean on.

Second, look at the two ◌া shapes here — no, look again: there is only one. The first আ contains a vertical stroke that resembles the mātrā, and it is not one. That resemblance is not an accident of the font. The independent letter and the sign are historically the same mark, which is exactly why they look related and exactly why they are easy to confuse.

Your turn

- Read it: আবার
- Read it: আবার আমার
- Write it: আবার

Before you move on

Why does আবার open with the full letter আ and not the sign ◌া? (There is no consonant to lean on at the start of a word.) And what does the word mean? (Again.)

8.3 ভ — the consonant bha, the breathy twin

Read আবার, and write ব once from memory.

Script

How ভ is written, stroke by stroke

ভ

bhô — ব with a puff of breath released through it. Not b then h as two sounds, but one closure opened onto a gust.

The letter for the unaspirated ক made this point about k in the last script chapter, and here it is again on the other side of the mouth: the puff is a letter, not a manner of speaking. Hold a palm in front of your mouth. Say English bin: no air. Now push a breath out through the release. That is this shape.

English has both sounds and treats neither as meaningful — the b of bin and an emphatic, breathy b are the same word said twice. Bengali has two letters, two spellings, and two words.

Look at the shape beside the one it is built from. ব and ভ share their left-hand body; ভ adds a stroke on the right. The script is drawing the relationship the mouth makes, which is a habit worth expecting: aspirated letters often look like their plain partners with something extra.

With the mātrā:

ভ + া → ভা

Your turn

- Write it: ভ
- Write it: ব ভ
- Read it: আবার

Before you move on

Is the puff of breath in ভ a separate sound or part of the letter? (Part of the letter.) Does English treat the difference as meaningful? (No.) Does Bengali? (Yes — two letters, two words.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

8.4 ভালো — good, read

Write ব and ভ one after the other, and say what separates them.

Script

ভ + া + ল + ো → ভালো

- ভ with া — bhā, breath and all
- ল with ো around it — lo

bhālo — good, well. It is the answer to how are you; it is the first half of the phrase for liking something; it is the first half of the verb for loving someone. No word in this track turns up in more sentences.

Now put it next to the word from two lessons ago, and beside the possessive from the introductions chapter:

আবার — ābār, again আমার — āmār, my

Identical except for the middle letter. A learner who can build one has built the other, and a learner who cannot yet tell ব from ম at a glance has now been handed the exercise that fixes it. ভালো sets the same trap with its own first letter, and a later chapter will spring it on a colour word built to the same pattern.

That near-miss is worth taking seriously rather than enjoying. Bengali is full of pairs like this, and the reader who slows down for the first letter is the reader who stops guessing words from their silhouette.

Your turn

- Read it: ভালো
- Read it: আবার আমার
- Write it: ভালো

Before you move on

What is the only difference on the page between আবার and আমার? (The middle letter.) And which piece of ভালো would you have to change to get a different word? (The first letter — every one of these near-pairs turns on a single shape.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

8.5 খ — the consonant kha, the breathy k

Read ভালো, then write ক from memory.

Script

How খ is written, stroke by stroke

খ

khô — ক with the breath let out through it. The k of English kit, in fact, which is the breathy one; ক was the k of skip.

That makes three pairs met so far, and the third is where a pattern earns the name:

- ক plain, খ breathy
- ব plain, ভ breathy

Bengali sorts its consonants into families this way all the way down, and it does it in a fixed order that every Indian script shares — which is why a Bengali dictionary, a Devanagari dictionary and a Tamil dictionary all run their letters in the same sequence, though the shapes have nothing in common.

Knowing that a plain letter has a breathy partner turns a list of forty shapes into twenty pairs, and pairs are what a hand can hold.

With the u-sign underneath:

খ + ু → খু

Your turn

- Write it: খ
- Write it: ক খ
- Read it: ভালো

Before you move on

Which of ক and খ is the k of kit? (খ — the breathy one.) And what does knowing about pairs do to a list of forty shapes? (Turns it into twenty pairs.)

8.6 গ — the throat row, closed

Write ক, then খ, and say what the second one has that the first does not.

Script

গ

gô — the g of English go. Made in exactly the place ক and খ are made, at the back of the tongue against the soft roof, with the voice switched on and the breath switched off.

That closes a row this book opened in its first script chapter, and the row is the point:

- ক — voice off, breath off
- খ — voice off, breath on
- গ — voice on, breath off

Three letters, one place, two switches. The fourth cell — voice on and breath on — exists in the script and this book has not needed it yet. That is a gap in the vocabulary, not a gap in the alphabet, and knowing which kind of gap you are looking at is most of what reading a syllabary well requires.

With the mātrā:

গ + া → গা

And now a whole word from the introductions chapter, which has been waiting for this letter since the day you learned to say it:

ল + া + গ + ল + ো → লাগলো lāglo — the lāglo of আলাপ করে ভালো লাগলো, "pleased to meet you." Five pieces; four of them you have had for two chapters, and the fifth arrived a paragraph ago.

Your turn

- Write it: গ
- Write it: ক খ গ
- Read it: লাগলো
- Read it: ভালো
- Say it: ভালো লাগলো — and mean it

Before you move on

Where in the mouth are ক, খ and গ made? (All three in the same place — the back of the tongue on the soft roof.) What separates গ from ক? (The voice.) And read আবার once more. Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

Chapter 9

The Roof, the Teeth, and the Grid Closed

Modes: voice (1) pen (7) Hands-free start: none of the 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write the five consonants that finish Bengali's stop grid, hear the breath that separates চ from ছ, read আছি off the page, and say every consonant I own by where in the mouth it is made rather than by what it looks like.
> The chapter closes by reciting ten consonants back from their places of articulation rather than from their shapes, which is the difference between holding a grid and holding a list.

9.1 প — the consonant pa

Write খ from memory, and say what separates it from ক.

Script

প

pô — the p of English spin, lips shut, no puff of air after the release.

The place is the lips, which is where ব was made too. So the two of them fill two cells of one square:

- প — lips, voice off
- ব — lips, voice on

The English p of pin is the breathy one and belongs to a different letter, the same trap ক and খ laid a lesson ago. Palm in front of the mouth: spin gives no air, and that is this letter.

With the lips named, the map is complete. Every consonant this book has taught is made at one of four places — lips, teeth, roof, throat — and every one of them is one of four cells at that place. A reader who has that grid is not memorising forty unrelated shapes. They are filling in a table.

With the mātrā:

প + ◌া → পা

Your turn

- Write it: প
- Write it: প ব
- Read it: ভালো

Before you move on

Where is প made? (At the lips.) Which other letter is made there? (ব.) And what separates them? (The voice.)

9.2 দ — the consonant da

Write খ and প, then write ত and say where the tongue goes for it.

Script

How দ is written, stroke by stroke

দ

dô — the same tongue position as ত, on the back of the top front teeth, with the voice switched on.

So the warning that came with ত applies here without a word changed. English makes its d on the ridge behind the teeth; Bengali has a separate letter for that position, and it is a different letter spelling different words. Slide the tongue forward onto enamel.

The pair to hold is not t and d as English thinks of them. It is:

- ত dental, voice off
- দ dental, voice on

Two settings on one place of articulation. Bengali's consonant grid is built out of exactly these two switches — where the tongue is, and whether the voice is on — plus the breath from the last lesson. Three switches, and most of the inventory falls out of them.

With the mātrā:

দ + ◌া → দা

Your turn

- Write it: দ
- Write it: ত দ
- Read it: ভালো আবার

Before you move on

What is the same about ত and দ? (Where the tongue goes — the teeth.) What is different? (The voice.) And is an English d the same letter? (No — it is made further back.)

9.3 ধ — the consonant dha

Write দ from memory, and say where the tongue touches for it.

Script

ধ

dhô — দ with the breath let out through it. Voice on, tongue on the teeth, and air after the release.

Set the four dental letters side by side and the grid the last two lessons have been building is visible in one line:

- ত — voice off, no breath
- দ — voice on, no breath
- ধ — voice on, with breath

The fourth cell, voice off and with breath, is a letter this book has not needed yet. It exists, it sits between the first two in every dictionary, and it will arrive when a word calls for it.

That square is the unit. Every place of articulation in the script — teeth, ridge, palate, throat — gets the same four cells in the same order, and the order is over two thousand years old: the Sanskrit grammarians sorted the sounds by where they were made and wrote the list down, and every script descended from that tradition still lists them that way.

With the u-sign:

ধ + ু → ধু

Your turn

Write these out:

- ধ
- ত দ ধ
- দা ধা

Before you move on

What two things separate ধ from ত? (Voice and breath.) How many cells does one place of articulation get? (Four.) And who fixed that order? (The Sanskrit grammarians.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

9.4 চ — the consonant cha

Write দ and ধ, and say which of the two lets the breath out.

Script

How চ is written, stroke by stroke

চ

chô — the ch of English cheap, with no puff of air after it.

The tongue is somewhere new. Not on the teeth, where ত and দ are made, and not at the back, where ক is: the body of the tongue comes up flat against the hard roof of the mouth, a little behind the ridge. English spells that place with two letters, ch, because its alphabet has no single sign for it. Bengali has one letter, and — following the square this chapter has been filling — a breathy partner and two voiced cells to go with it.

That is the fourth place of articulation this book has named: teeth, roof, throat, and lips. The list is not long. Everything the script writes is one of those places with the voice and breath switches set.

With the mātrā:

চ + া → চা

That is already a word, and it gets its own lesson next.

Your turn

- Write it: চ
- Write it: চা
- Read it: কেমন ভালো

Before you move on

Where in the mouth is চ made? (Against the roof, behind the ridge.) How many letters does English need for that sound? (Two.) And Bengali? (One.)

9.5 ছ — the breathy one on the roof

Write চ and say where in the mouth it is made. Then write গ.

Script

How ছ is written, stroke by stroke

ছ

chhô — চ with the breath let out behind it, the way খ is ক with the breath let out behind it. Same place on the roof of the mouth, same tongue, one switch flipped.

The pair is worth hearing rather than reading about. Hold a hand in front of your mouth. Say chô: the hand feels almost nothing. Say chhô: the hand is pushed. English has no contrast here at all — the ch of church sits somewhere between the two — so the ear has to be told what to listen for before it can hear it.

With the mātrā:

ছ + ◌া → ছা

This letter has been under your nose since the first chapter. আচ্ছা (āchchhā, "okay, I see") is spelled with চ and ছ stacked, one on the other: the plain one, then the breathy one, said as a single long push. That is why the romanization has always carried that awkward chchh — it was reporting two letters honestly.

Your turn

- Write it: ছ
- Write it: চ ছ
- Write it: ক খ / চ ছ
- Say it: chô then chhô, hand in front of the mouth

Before you move on

What separates ছ from চ? (The breath.) Which pair from the throat works the same way? (ক and খ.) And which word from the first chapter stacks these two letters? (আচ্ছা.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

9.6 আছি — "I am," read

Write ছ. Then read আমি.

Script

আ + ছি → আছি

- আ — the vowel standing on its own, because the word opens on it
- ছ with ি in front of it — chhi

āchhi — "[I] am [here]." It is the second half of the exchange you have been having since the responding chapter: তুমি কেমন আছো? and the answer আমি ভালো আছি.

Look at what the last sign is doing. ি is not decoration and it is not part of the stem: it is the I of the sentence. Bengali packs the person into the verb's ending, so āchhi means "I am" with no pronoun needed at all, and āchho means "you are" by swapping that one sign for another. The আমি in front is emphasis, not grammar.

That is a genuinely large idea arriving in a three-piece word, and it arrives by eye rather than by rule. You have been saying both endings for chapters. Seeing them written next to each other is what makes them a pattern rather than two memorised noises.

Now the reply, whole:

আমি ভালো আছি

Ten pieces, three words, and not one new shape in any of them.

Your turn

- Read it: আছি
- Read it: আমি ভালো আছি
- Write it: আছি
- Say it: the whole reply, out loud

Before you move on

Which piece of আছি carries the "I"? (The ি at the end.) So does the sentence need আমি? (No — it is emphasis.) And how many new shapes were in আমি ভালো আছি? (None.)

9.7 জাল (jāl) — a net

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: জাল

জাল — jāl — "a net".

Say it: jāl. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, জ, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

জাল (jāl) is inherited from Sanskrit jāla, "net, snare", and has come down with almost no change (CDIAL 5213).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- jāl
- jāl, and what it means

Before you move on

What is “a net”? (জাল, jāl.)

9.8 জ — the consonant ja, and the grid closed

Write চ and ছ, and say what separates them.

Script

How জ is written, stroke by stroke

জ

jô — the j of English jam. Same place as চ, the flat of the tongue on the roof of the mouth, with the voice on.

The third cell of the roof, and by now the move should be predictable: meet a consonant, ask where it is made and whether the voice and the breath are running, and the letter has a family rather than being a shape on its own.

This letter carries a root worth knowing. Sanskrit jñā, “to know,” is spelled with it, and the verbs chapter followed that root out to English know and to the k that English still writes and no longer says. The Bengali verb for knowing facts opens on this shape.

With the mātrā:

জ + ◌া → জা

That is the last consonant of the two script chapters that built this grid, and it closes a table rather than lengthening a list. Every letter in it was met as a cell — a place in the mouth, with the voice and the breath switched on or off. Say them back by place rather than by shape:

- at the lips: প voice off · ব voice on · ভ voice on with breath
- on the teeth: ত voice off · দ voice on · ধ voice on with breath
- on the roof: চ voice off · ছ voice off with breath · জ voice on
- at the throat: ক voice off · খ voice off with breath · গ voice on

Twelve cells, four rows, and not one of them learned as a picture. The cells nobody has filled are letters this book has not needed yet, not gaps in the script. A reader who can recite that table by place is filling in a grid; a reader holding twelve shapes is memorising twelve shapes. That difference is the whole reason these chapters kept asking where and with what breath instead of what does this look like.

Your turn

- Write it: জ
- Write it: চ ছ জ
- Write it: প ব ভ / ত দ ধ / চ ছ জ / ক খ গ
- Read it: আছি
- Read it: আবার ভালো

Before you move on

What separates জ from চ? (The voice.) How many cells does the grid now hold? (Twelve — four rows of three.) And what question does the grid ask of a new letter — what it looks like, or where it is made? (Where it is made, and with what breath.)

Two Marks Inside a Verb

Modes: voice (2) pen (3) Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write the independent ও, explain why a vowel following a vowel cannot be a sign, add the dot that turns য into a glide, and read হওয়া — the verb of being — straight off the page.

10.1 ওজন (ojôn) — weight

> Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: ওজন

ওজন — ojôn — "weight".

Say it: ojôn. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, ও, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ওজন (ojôn) is a loan from Arabic wazn, "weight, a weighing", which reached Bengali through Persian. Its Arabic root is w-z-n (Lane).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ojôn
- ojôn, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "weight"? (ওজন, ojôn.)

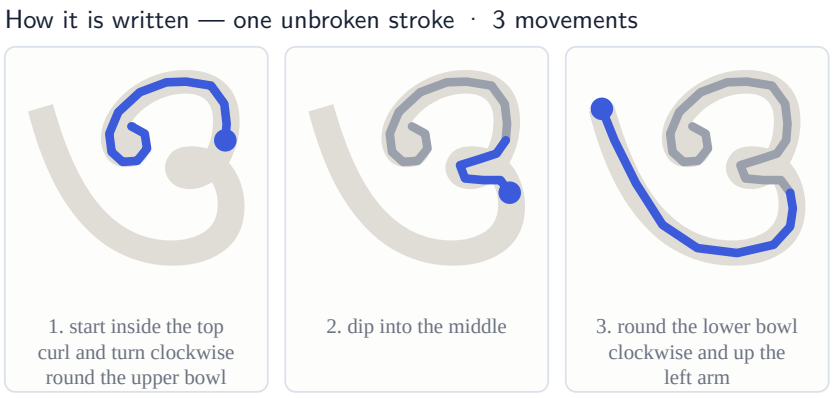
10.2 ও — the independent o

Write এ, then write ে া and say which letter it wraps around.

Script



Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Bangla recognizer, class 9 (ও, o; user manual Table 4): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native Bengali writers (MIT licence, 2012)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ও is written, stroke by stroke

ও

The fourth vowel this book has shown you in both of its bodies, and by now the arrangement should feel less like a rule and more like a habit:

- আ stands alone · া rides a consonant
- ই stands alone · ি rides a consonant
- এ stands alone · ে rides a consonant
- ও stands alone · ো rides a consonant

The choice is never about the sound. It is about whether the vowel has a consonant to sit on. Opening a word, or following another vowel, it has none, so it needs a body of its own. That is the entire distinction, and it is the same distinction Devanagari, Gujarati and Telugu all make — one of the genuinely portable facts about the scripts of South Asia.

ও is also a word in its own right, the everyday and and also, which is a convenience the other three vowels do not offer.

Say it long. The sign ো and the letter ও are the same o as in English go — but without the slide toward w that English adds. One steady vowel, not two.

হ + ও → হও

The হ keeps its own inherent ô, and then ও is a second syllable standing on its own feet. Two letters, two syllables — which is exactly why the vowel could not have been written as a sign here.

Your turn

- Write it: ও
- Write it: আ ই এ ও
- Write it: হও
- Read it: কেমন

Before you move on

When does a vowel need its standing-alone letter? (When it has no consonant to ride — opening a word, or after another vowel.) Do ও and ো sound different? (No.) And how many syllables are in হও? (Two.)

10.3 পাড়া (pāṛā) — a neighbourhood

Before the new word: say the last thing you learned, once, out loud.

You'll want to know: পাড়া

পাড়া — pāṛā — "a neighbourhood".

Say it: pāṛā. Look: at its shape as you say it. The next lesson takes one piece of it, ়, and writes it on its own.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL lists পাড়া (pāṛā) under Sanskrit pāṭaka, "quarter of a town or village", a word it notes may come from Dravidian (CDIAL 8031). It also gives pāṛā under padra, "village", itself probably Dravidian (CDIAL 7780), so the two sources are not cleanly separated.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- pāṛā
- pāṛā, and what it means

Before you move on

What is "a neighbourhood"? (পাড়া, pāṛā.)

10.4 ় — the dot below

Write য and say what it sounds like standing alone. Then read হ্যাঁ.

Script

One dot, tucked under a letter. It adds no sound of its own. What it does is change the letter it sits under into a different letter, and Bengali uses it in exactly three places.

The one you need today:

য + ় → য়

য on its own says j. With the dot it stops being a stop altogether and becomes a glide — the y of yes between vowels, and the w of away when the vowel beside it is round. It is the sound the letter used to have before Bengali hardened it, given back by a dot.

The other two are the same trick on another letter, and they are coming later in this book. What matters now is the shape of the idea: Bengali did not invent new letters for these sounds. It marked old ones. The dot is borrowed machinery — Persian scribes used it to bend Arabic letters into Persian sounds, and Indian scribes took the device rather than the letters.

Where the dot goes on the page is worth watching, too. It hangs below the body of the letter, the same country as ু, and it is small. Two words can differ by this dot alone, so a reader who is skimming the head-line will read the wrong word rather than no word — the most expensive kind of mistake a script can offer.

হ + ও + য় → হওয়

Your turn

- Write it: ়
- Write it: য then য়
- Say it: jô then yô — stop, then glide
- Write it: হওয়

Before you move on

Does ় add a sound? (No — it changes the letter above it.) What does য become with it? (A glide, y or w.) And which mark sits above the head-line rather than below? (ঁ.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

10.5 হওয়া — to be, read whole

Write য়. Then write ও and say why it is not a sign.

Script

হ + ও + য় + া → হওয়া

- হ — with its own inherent ô
- ও — standing alone, because a vowel cannot ride a vowel
- য় — the dotted glide, here doing the w job
- া — the vowel sign, on the glide

hôwā — to be, to become. You met it romanized in the farewells chapter, as the verb hiding inside dækhā hôbe, "seeing will happen." Here it is on the page, and every one of its four pieces was bought in the last two chapters.

Read it slowly and notice what is not there. No stacked letters. No killed vowels. Four pieces in a row, left to right, each one saying its own thing. This is what Bengali looks like when a word is made mostly of vowels: the spelling stops being a puzzle and becomes a transcript.

Compare it with the word you read two chapters ago:

হ্যাঁ — five pieces, one syllable হওয়া — four pieces, three syllables

Same first letter, opposite arrangements. A Bengali reader's real skill is telling those two shapes apart at a glance, and it is a skill of the eye rather than the memory: stacked pieces are one syllable, pieces in a row are several.

Your turn

- Read it: হওয়া
- Write it: হওয়া
- Say it: hôwā — three syllables, no cluster
- Read it: হবে

Before you move on

How many syllables in হওয়া? (Three.) Why is the ও written standing alone? (A vowel cannot ride a vowel.) And what does the dot under the য do? (Turns it into a glide.)

Chapter 11

The First Verbs

Modes: voice (1) eyes (4) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can build short present-tense Bengali sentences with the chapter's first verbs.
> Complete BN-C05-practice, the canonical closing checkpoint, and demonstrate the chapter promise: build short present-tense Bengali sentences with the chapter's first verbs.

11.1 বলা (bôlā) — "to speak," your first full verb

So far, "to be." Here is a verb that does something — and it reveals how gloriously simple Bengali verbs are.

The letters in this word

ব (bô) + লা (lā) → বলা (bôlā). The dictionary form of the verb.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বলা (bôlā, "to speak, to say") is a native Indo-Aryan verb (the same bol- as Hindi bolnā, Punjabi bolṇā). Its ending -আ (-ā) is Bengali's infinitive marker. To say "I speak," add the present ending -ই (-i) to the stem: bôl- + -i → বলি (bôli), "I speak."

Grammar Lens: the verb changes for person — but never for gender

Bengali verbs change ending for who speaks: āmi bôli (I say), tumi bôlo (you say), se bôle (he/she says). But — and here is Bengali's great simplification — the verb never changes for gender. There is no "he-form" and "she-form," no masculine/feminine at all: se bôle is "he says" and "she says." Where Hindi and Punjabi make even "I speak" agree with the speaker's gender (boltā/boltī), Bengali dropped grammatical gender entirely. One less thing to track, forever.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bôlā" (to speak)
- "I speak" — āmi bôli
- does "he says" differ from "she says"? (No — se bôle for both; Bengali has no gender)

Before you move on

What does the Bengali verb change for, and what does it never change for? (For person — bôli/bôlo/bôle — but never for gender.)

11.2 আমি বাংলা বলি (āmi bānglā bôli) — "I speak Bengali"

Your first complete, moving sentence — and the language's own name for itself.

The letters in this word

বাংলা (bānglā): বা (bā) + ◌ং (the anusvāra nasal) + লা (lā).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আমি বাংলা বলি = আমি (āmi, "I") + বাংলা (bānglā, the object) + বলি (bôli, "speak") — "I Bengali speak," the verb last as always. The name

বাংলা (bānglā) is the language's own word for itself (English "Bengali" comes from it, via Bangla → Bengal). It descends from bôngo, the ancient name of the region — so the language is named after its land, the great delta of the Ganges.

Grammar Lens: no gender, so the sentence is the same for anyone

Because Bengali verbs carry no gender, আমি বাংলা বলি is exactly the same whether a man or a woman says it — unlike Hindi (maiṁ … boltā/boltī hūṁ). And because the -i ending already means "I," you could even drop āmi: bānglā bôli is a complete "I speak Bengali."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "āmi bānglā bôli"
- what bānglā is named after (bôngo, the ancient region — the Ganges delta)
- does the sentence change for a man vs. a woman? (No — Bengali has no gender)

Before you move on

Say "I speak Bengali," and give the origin of the name bānglā. (Āmi bānglā bôli; from bôngo, the ancient name of the Bengal region.)

11.3 কাজ করা (kāj kôrā) — "to work"

The last verb of the chapter — and, like Hindi's karnā, it is a "do" verb that builds a hundred others.

The letters in this word

কাজ (kāj, "work"): কা (kā) + জ (j). করা (kôrā, "do"): ক (kô) + রা (rā).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

করা (kôrā, "to do, to make") is from Sanskrit √kṛ ("to do"), from PIE k^{w}er- — the same root you met in Chapter 1's নমস্কার (nômoshkar = namas + kāra, "the making of a bow") and in karma. And কাজ (kāj, "work") is itself from Sanskrit kārya ("work, task," also from √kṛ) — so "work- do" is, at root, "kṛ-thing kṛ-do." Like Hindi, Bengali builds compound verbs as noun + করা:

- কাজ করা (kāj kôrā) = "work-do" = "to work"
- kôthā bôlā = "to converse" (using bôlā from earlier)

So āmi kāj kôri = "I work" — the -i "I" ending, no gender.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "kāj kôrā" (to work)
- "I work" — āmi kāj kôri
- the Chapter-1 word that shares the √kṛ root (nômoshkar)

Before you move on

What Sanskrit root do both kôrā ("do") and kāj ("work") come from, and name a Chapter-1 word built on it. (√kṛ, "to do"; nômoshkar — "the making of a bow.")

11.4 থাকা (thākā) — "to live, to stay"

A second verb, so you can say where you live.

The letters in this word

থা (thā, an aspirated t + long ā) + কা (kā) → থাকা (thākā).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

থাকা (thākā, "to live, to stay, to remain") goes back to sthakk*, "stop, halt", a form CDIAL reconstructs and connects, probably but not certainly, with Sanskrit sthā ("to stand, to stay") (CDIAL 13737) — the same PIE root steh₂- ("to stand") that gives English stand, stay, state, and Latin stāre. So Bengali's "to live/stay" and English's "to stand/stay" probably share one root. "I live in Kolkata" is আমি কলকাতায় থাকি (āmi Kolkātāy thāki) — stem thāk- + the -i "I" ending, no gender.

Grammar Lens: "in" comes after the noun

কলকাতায় (Kolkātāy) = Kolkata + -য় / -তে (-y/-te, "in, at"), glued to the end of the noun. Bengali uses postpositions (case-endings) where English uses prepositions: "Kolkata-in I live," the verb last.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "thākā"
- "I live in Kolkata" — āmi Kolkātāy thāki
- the English cousins of its root sthā (stand, stay, state)

Before you move on

What Sanskrit/PIE root is thākā from, and its English cousins? (Sanskrit sthā / PIE steh₂-* "to stand"; English stand, stay, state.)

11.5 Chapter 11 — The first verbs

No new words. Three verbs, one gender-free engine — build real sentences about yourself.

How to answer — build the sentences

Say these aloud:

- "I speak Bengali" — āmi bānglā bôli
- "I live in Kolkata" — āmi Kolkātāy thāki
- "I work" — āmi kāj kôri
- "he speaks" and "she speaks" — se bôle (the same for both!)

Grammar lens — the engine

Say these aloud:

- the "I" ending on every present verb (-i)
- the one thing Bengali verbs never mark (gender)
- where the verb sits, and where "in" sits (verb last; -y/-te after the noun)

What you've built — roots you now carry

- bôlā "to speak" (native; bol-, like Hindi/Punjabi)
- thākā "to live" ← Sanskrit sthā → English stand/stay/state
- kôrā "to do" ← √kṛ — root of nômoshkar; kāj "work" ← kārya (also √kṛ)
- bānglā ← bôngo, the ancient region — the Ganges delta

Before you move on

In one breath, say your language, your city, and your work in Bengali — and note what stays the same for anyone. (Āmi bānglā bôli. Āmi … thāki. Āmi kāj kôri — no gender, so it's the same for a man or a woman.)

Chapter 12

Numbers One to Five

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from one to five in Bengali script and say what দুই kept that Hindi and Marathi flattened away.
> Count ek, dui, tin, chār, pā̃ch aloud, name the chandrabindu riding পাঁচ, and set* দুই beside Hindi do and Marathi don to show the -i it preserved.

12.1 এক, দুই, তিন, চার, পাঁচ — one to five

Bengali writes in its own script, but the words underneath are the same family you'd hear in Delhi or Mumbai — with one number that preserves something both of them lost.

You'll want to know: the five

	Bengali	said
1	এক	ek
2	দুই	dui
3	তিন	tin
4	চার	chār
5	পাঁচ	pā̃ch

The ঁ on pā̃ch is the chandrabindu, the same moon-dot Hindi uses, nasalising the vowel.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

All five are inherited from Sanskrit. Ek goes back to ēka, "one", through a doubled ekka (CDIAL 2462); dui to dva, "two" (CDIAL 6648); tin to trīṇi, "three" (CDIAL 5994); chār to catvāraḥ, "four" (CDIAL 4655); and the word for five to pañca, "five" (CDIAL 7655).

The letters in this word

Bengali's inherent vowel leans toward o, not a — which is why the greeting from Chapter 1 is nomoshkar where Hindi says namaskār. You won't hear that in these five numbers, as it happens: এক opens with the independent vowel এ, and none of the others has a bare inherent-vowel syllable either. Mentioned so you don't go looking for it here — but keep it in mind the moment a word does have one. Don't let a neighbouring language's spelling tell you how Bengali sounds.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ek, dui, tin, chār, pā̃ch"
- the Ch. 1 echo — "nomoshkar, not namaskār"

Before you move on

Count to five in Bengali. (Ek, dui, tin, chār, pā̃ch.) What is the ঁ? (The chandrabindu, nasalising the vowel.) Where do you hear Bengali's inherent ô in these five? (Nowhere — keep listening for it in the next word that has one.) Next: why দুই has two syllables.

12.2 (এক দুই তিন চার পাঁচ, continued) — The word, taken apart — দুই and the conservative two

Before going on: say এক দুই তিন চার পাঁচ again, and what it means.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

language	2
Sanskrit	stem dvá- (masc. dváu, fem./neut. dvé)
Prakrit	do / duve
Hindi	do
Marathi	don
Bengali	dui

Hindi and Marathi flattened the old form into a single o. Bengali kept a trace of the following -i, which is why it has two syllables where its neighbours have one.

The dv- cluster itself is gone from the numeral in all of them. (Not from the languages — dv- is alive in words borrowed straight back out of Sanskrit, like Bengali দ্বার dvār "door." It's the everyday inherited word that simplified.)

And Bengali isn't unique in keeping that vowel: Assamese, Odia and Nepali have dui too. Among the four languages in this chapter it stands alone; across the eastern Indo-Aryan languages it has plenty of company.

Your turn

- Say it: the twos — "dvá- … do … don … dui"

Before you move on

What does দুই keep that Hindi and Marathi flattened away? (The following *-i, which is why it has two syllables.) Is Bengali alone in that? (No — Assamese, Odia and Nepali have dui too; it's alone only among the four here.) Did the dv- cluster survive anywhere in the everyday numeral? (No — though dv- is alive in words re-borrowed from Sanskrit, like dvār "door".) Next: six to ten.

Chapter 13

The Core Verbs

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I do with six everyday Bengali verbs, pick the ending that matches তুই, তুমি or আপনি, and say why a Bengali verb never changes for gender and why আছে has to hand the future to হবে.
> Say āmi jāni and āmi tāke chini, separate জানা from চেনা the way French separates savoir from connaître, hear the vowel harmony that closes chini where chæne stays open, and run the chapter's six verbs back — hôwā, jāwā, āsā, khāwā, dækhā, jānā.

13.1 হওয়া (hôwā) — "to be," and the be-verb it stands beside

> Chapter 3 said "my name Arun" with no verb at all. Chapter 5 put one back for "how are you." Both were right, and this verb is why.

You'll want to know: হওয়া

> হওয়া — hôwā — to be, to become

আমি হই (āmi hôi), "I am, I become." সে হয় (se hôy), "he is." Its future is already in your mouth: হবে (hôbe) is the "will happen" inside Chapter 7's dækhā hôbe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হওয়া is Sanskrit √bhū ("to become") with the bh- worn down to a plain h-: bhavati → Prakrit hoï → Bengali hô-. The root is PIE bʰuH-*, "to grow, to become," and English owns two of its children outright — be and been. Latin built fuī ("I was") and futūrus on it, which is English future; Greek built phúsis, "growth, nature," which is physics.

The letters in this word

হ is a soft, breathed h carrying Bengali's inherent vowel — hô, not ha. ওয়া (-wā) is the tail every dictionary-form verb wears; you will meet it again on the next verbs of this chapter.

Grammar Lens: two be-verbs, and one of them is unfinished

what you mean	what Bengali uses
my name is Arun	no verb at all
I have a book; it is here	আছে (āchhe)
he will be a teacher	হবে (hôbe)

আছ-, the verb behind Chapter 5's kemon āchho, means being present. But it is unfinished: it has a present and a past, and nothing else at all. Push it into the future and it stops dead — so Bengali picks up হ- (hôbe), or Chapter 11's thākā (āmi thākbo, "I'll be there"). One job, two verbs, split down the middle.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "hôwā" — be, become — then "āmi hôi"
- the future you already knew — "hôbe … dækhā hôbe"
- which verb for "I have a book," and which for "he will be a teacher"

Before you move on

Which Sanskrit root is hôwā, and which two English words are its brothers? (√bhū, "to become" — be and been.) What can আছ- not do? (Anything past a present and a past — it has no future of its own.) So what does Bengali reach for instead? (হবে, or thākā.) Next: one verb, three levels of respect.

13.2 যাওয়া (jāwā) — "to go," and the respect that rides on the ending

Chapter 3 gave you three different words for "you." It did not tell you the rest of the bill: each one bends the verb a different way too.

You'll want to know: যাওয়া

যাওয়া — jāwā — to go

আমি যাই (āmi jāi), "I go." Same -i "I" ending as Chapter 11's bôli, on the same -wā dictionary form you met a moment ago.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

যাওয়া is Sanskrit √yā ("to go, to travel"), and the whole northern family walks on it: Hindi jānā, Marathi jāṇe, Gujarati javũ, Punjabi jāṇā. Sanskrit's y- hardened to a j- sound right across eastern Indo-Aryan, which is why Bengali still writes the y-letter য but says j. Deeper than Sanskrit it goes to PIE yeh₂-*, "to travel" — and here is an honest limit: English kept no everyday word from that root. The nearest living cousin is Lithuanian jóti, "to ride." A fake English cousin here would be worse than none.

The letters in this word

য is the letter Sanskrit reads as y; Bengali reads it as j, like জ. So a written yā- is a spoken jā- — an un-shift worth keeping, since it disguises dozens of familiar Sanskrit words.

Grammar Lens: the respect is not in the pronoun, it is in the ending

who you are speaking to	"you go"
তুই (tui, intimate)	যাস (jāsh)
তুমি (tumi, familiar)	যাও (jāo)
আপনি (āpni, respectful)	যান (jān)

Three endings, one verb. And the same grading runs on into the third person: "he goes" said of someone you respect takes the very ending আপনি takes. Chapter 11 showed that the ending already means "I," so the pronoun can be dropped. The register cannot. Choose jāsh or jān and you have placed yourself socially, pronoun or no pronoun.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "jāwā" — go — then "āmi jāi"
- the ladder — "jāsh … jāo … jān"
- the respectful one again — "āpni jān"

Before you move on

Give the three "you go" forms and who each is for. (Jāsh intimate, jāo familiar, jān respectful.) If you drop the pronoun, is the respect dropped too? (No — it is in the ending, and cannot be dodged.) Does English have a living cousin of this root? (No — Lithuanian jóti is as close as it gets.) Next: the verb that asks nothing about who you are.

13.3 আসা (āsā) — "to come," the verb that never asks who you are

Chapter 1's goodbye, āshi, was one form of this verb. Here is the whole of it — and the one question it refuses to ask you.

You'll want to know: আসা

আসা — āsā — to come

আমি আসি (āmi āsi), "I come" — the farewell you already own. সে আসে (se āse), "he comes." আপনি আসেন (āpni āsen), with last lesson's respectful ending.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The আ- in front is Sanskrit's ā-, "hither, toward" — the very prefix that turns going into coming. Bengali puts it on a stem whose history is not settled: CDIAL lists আসা under Sanskrit āsadati, "approaches" (CDIAL 1483), while Chatterji derived it from āviśati, "enters" (CDIAL 1437).

The letters in this word

স is written for s and spoken, in this word, as sh — Bengali's standing s → sh tilt, the same one that makes namaskāra into nômoshkar. So আসি is āshi, not āsi, though the dictionary form is romanized āsā.

Grammar Lens: no gender, not here, not anywhere

language	"I come," man / woman
Hindi	maiṁ ātā hūṁ / maiṁ ātī hūṁ
Marathi	mī yeto / mī yete
Bengali	āmi āsi — one form

Its sisters make you declare your gender to say the plainest thing in the world. Bengali does not. And this is not a shortcut for beginners that the grammar takes back later: Bengali has no grammatical gender at all. Not on verbs, not on nouns, not on adjectives. The past behaves the same way — আমি এলাম (āmi elām), "I came," is one form for everyone, where Gujarati, which hides gender in its present, brings it straight back in huṁ āvyo / huṁ āvī.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "āsā" — come — then "āmi āshi"

- the neighbours splitting in two — "ātā … ātī" and "yeto … yete"
- Bengali not splitting — "āmi āsi" — and its past, "āmi elām"

Before you move on

What does the আ- on this verb mean? (Hither, toward — the prefix that turns going into coming.) How many forms of "I come" does a Bengali speaker need? (One — āmi āsi, whoever is talking.) Is that true of the nouns too? (Yes — Bengali has no grammatical gender anywhere.) Next: a verb that swallows more than food.

13.4 খাওয়া (khāwā) — "to eat," and the drinking it also does

Every verb so far has meant roughly what its English gloss means. This one is wider than its gloss, and the extra width is the lesson.

You'll want to know: খাওয়া

খাওয়া — khāwā — to eat

আমি খাই (āmi khāi), "I eat." আপনি খান (āpni khān), with the respectful ending from two lessons back.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

খাওয়া is Sanskrit √khād ("to chew, to bite"), smoothed through Prakrit khā-. Every neighbour eats with it: Hindi khānā, Marathi khāṇe, Gujarati khāvũ, Punjabi khāṇā.
Past Sanskrit the trail goes cold. Khād- has no secure Indo-European pedigree outside Indo-Aryan, so there is no English cousin here — and one will not be manufactured. Some roots are local and nothing more, and saying so is part of the method.

The letters in this word

খ is kh: a k with a puff of breath behind it. Its plain partner ক (k) is the letter in Chapter 11's kāj. The puff is not decoration — it is the whole difference between two words, and Bengali gives each its own letter.

Grammar Lens: Bengali eats its drinks

what goes in	the Bengali verb
food	khāwā — "eat"
water, tea	khāwā — still "eat"
medicine	khāwā — "eat" again

Hindi keeps a second verb, pīnā, for drinking. Bengali's everyday speech does not bother: whatever goes in the mouth is khāwā. There is a drink-verb — পান করা (pān kôrā), noun-plus-kôrā in exactly Chapter 11's kāj kôrā shape, built on Sanskrit √pā ("to drink"), whose Latin cousin pōtāre gives English potion and potable. But it belongs to writing and ceremony. Ask for tea in a Kolkata kitchen and you eat it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "khāwā" — eat — then "āmi khāi"
- "khāwā" once more — the verb Bengali uses for a drink too
- the formal drink-verb and its English cousins — "pān kôrā … potion, potable"

Before you move on

Which verb does everyday Bengali use for drinking? (খাওয়া — it "eats" its drinks.) Which Sanskrit root is khāwā, and does English share it? (√khād, "to chew" — and no, the root goes no further than Indo-Aryan.) Which verb would a formal text use for drinking, and what English words does its root reach? (পান করা, from √pā — English potion, potable.) Next: one spelling, two vowels.

13.5 দেখা (dækhā) — "to see," and a vowel that moves under a fixed spelling

Chapter 7 buried this verb inside dækhā hôbe, "a seeing will happen." Prised out on its own, it carries a sound rule that runs through every verb in this chapter.

You'll want to know: দেখা

দেখা — dækhā — to see, to look

আমি দেখি (āmi dekhi), "I see." সে দেখে (se dækhe), "he sees." Say those two again — they are not the same vowel.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দেখা is traced to Sanskrit √dṛś ("to see") through the Prakrit stem dekkha-; Hindi's dekhnā is the same word. Sanskrit built darśana, "a viewing," on that root, and further back it is PIE derḱ-*, "to see clearly." Greek took it for dérkomai, "I look," and for drákōn, the sharp-gazing serpent — which English borrowed as dragon. Bengali's "see" and England's dragons are one word, wearing very different clothes.

The letters in this word

দ is a soft dental d, tongue on the teeth. The vowel sign ে on it is written identically every time — but Bengali says it either as a close e (as in English bay) or an open æ (as in English bat), and the page will never tell you which.

Grammar Lens: the ending decides the vowel

Bengali	said
আমি দেখি	dekhi — close e
সে দেখে	dækhe — open æ
তুমি দেখো	dækho — open æ

The rule: when the ending carries the high vowel -i, the stem vowel closes to e. Any other ending leaves it open at æ. That is vowel harmony, and the verb of the first lesson does it too — আমি হই (hôi, closed) against সে হয় (hôy, open). It is a rule your ear must carry alone, because the spelling never budges.

Your turn

- Say it: "dækhā" — then the pair, "dekhi … dækhe"

- Say it: the same shift on the be-verb — “hôi … hôy”
- Say it: the root and its odd English relative — “dṛś … dragon”
- Recall: say bôlā

Before you move on

Which ending closes the stem vowel to e? (The -i of “I” — dekhi, against dækhe and dækho.) Does the spelling record that? (No — দে is written the same either way; only the ear knows.) Which English animal shares this verb’s root? (The dragon — Greek drákōn, from PIE derḱ-*.) Next: the last verb, and the knowing English lost.

13.6 জানা (jānā) — “to know,” and the knowing English gave up

Six thousand years ago this verb and the English word you are reading it with were the same word. They still are. But Bengali kept a distinction English threw away.

You’ll want to know: জানা

জানা — jānā — to know

আমি জানি (āmi jāni), “I know.” আপনি জানেন (āpni jānen), respectfully.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

জানা is Sanskrit √jñā (“to know”), the root under jñāna, “knowledge.” Behind it stands PIE ǵneh₃-*, and English is full of its children: know and knowledge by the direct Germanic road; notice, recognize and cognition through Latin nōscere; gnosis and diagnosis through Greek gignṓskein. Bengali jāni and English know are one verb, separated only by time.

The letters in this word

Sanskrit writes the root with jñ, a knot of j and ñ. Bengali does not say jñ at all — it says gg, so jñāna comes out ggān. The plain verb spares you the knot: জানা is জা + না, jā-nā, and nothing more.

Grammar Lens: two knowings, and English has one word for both

Bengali	what it knows
জানা (jānā)	a fact, or how to do something
চেনা (chenā)	a person or a place, by acquaintance

আমি জানি — "I know" (that it is so). আমি তাকে চিনি (āmi tāke chini) — "I know him," meaning I am acquainted with him. Say jāni of a person and you have said you know facts about them, which is a colder thing.

English once had this line and lost it; French still walks it as savoir against connaître, German as wissen against kennen, Spanish as saber against conocer. And listen to chini beside সে চেনে (se chæne): the same vowel harmony as the last lesson, on a brand-new verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "jānā" — know — then "āmi jāni"
- the other knowing — "āmi tāke chini"
- the harmony again — "chini … chæne"
- the six verbs of this chapter — "hôwā, jāwā, āsā, khāwā, dækhā, jānā"

Before you move on

Which verb knows a person, and which knows a fact? (চেনা for people, জানা for facts — the connaître / savoir line.) Name three English children of this root. (Know, notice, diagnosis — Germanic, Latin, Greek.) Why does chini close its vowel where chæne keeps it open? (Vowel harmony — the -i ending closes the stem vowel, as in dekhi.) That closes the chapter: six verbs, no gender on any of them, and the respect always sitting in the ending.

Chapter 14

The Mind and the Page

Modes: 👁 eyes (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I think, understand, read and write in Bengali, hear the stem vowel rise whenever the -i ending arrives, and read the flapped ড় that Sanskrit never needed.
> Say āmi likhi against se lekhe, run the chapter's four verbs back — bhābā, bojhā, pôṛā, lekhā — say lekhāpôṛā with the flap in it, and explain that দেখা হবে was never 'we will see' but 'a seeing will happen', because every -ā form is a noun too.

14.1 ভাবা (bhābā) — "to think," and the verb it was built out of

> You already have the verb "to be." Sanskrit built "to think" out of it, by a trick Bengali still uses every day.

You'll want to know: ভাবা

> ভাবা — bhābā — to think

আমি ভাবি (āmi bhābi), "I think." আপনি ভাবেন (āpni bhāben), respectfully.

The letters in this word

ভাবা is ভা (bhā) + বা (bā). ভ is bh, a b with breath behind it; ব is the plain b underneath. Two letters, one puff of air between them.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভাবা is Sanskrit bhāvayati, and bhāvayati is not its own verb: it is হওয়া's verb with a gear changed. Bhavati is "it becomes"; bhāvayati is "he makes it become" — and from making-something-be to imagining it is one short step. So Bengali bhābi and Bengali hôi are one root, √bhū, which is also English be and been, Latin futūrus (English future), and Greek phúsis (English physics). The noun bhāva, "a state of mind," sits between them: thinking is holding a state.

Grammar Lens: the gear that makes someone else do it

Sanskrit changed that gear with a lengthened vowel. Bengali changes it with the ending -আনো (-āno), and it is completely alive:

plain verb	the made-to-happen verb
দেখা (dækhā), to see	দেখানো (dækhāno), to show — make see
খাওয়া (khāwā), to eat	খাওয়ানো (khāwāno), to feed — make eat
করা (kôrā), to do	করানো (kôrāno), to have it done

One suffix, and a verb you already own becomes a verb about making someone else do it. There is no separate word for "show" or "feed" to learn; there is a gear. That is the same machinery that built ভাবা itself, two thousand years earlier and one language back.

Your turn

- Say it: "bhābā" — think — then "āmi bhābi"
- Say it: the be-verb it was built from — "hôwā … āmi hôi"
- Say it: see, then make-see — "dækhā … dækhāno" — and eat, then feed — "khāwā … khāwāno"
- Recall: say kāj kôrā, then say thākā

Before you move on

Which verb from last chapter shares ভাবা's root? (হওয়া — both are √bhū; thinking is making something be.) What does -আনো do to a verb? (Hands the doing to someone else — দেখা "see" becomes দেখানো "show.") Give the Bengali for "show." (দেখানো, dækhāno.)

14.2 বোঝা (bojhā) — "to understand," the third knowing

Last chapter split "know" in two. This verb makes it three — and it plays the vowel game you already met, but this time the page tells you.

You'll want to know: বোঝা

বোঝা — bojhā — to understand

আমি বুঝি (āmi bujhi), "I understand." Look again at that vowel: not bojhi.

The letters in this word

বোঝা is বো (bo) + ঝা (jhā). ঝ is jh, the breathy partner of জ — the j you met in জানা. And বো is the plain ব of ভাবা wearing the o-sign **ো.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বোঝা is Sanskrit √budh, "to wake up, to notice" — the root that gave a prince his title: the Buddha is "the awakened one," and bodhi is the awakening. Understanding, in this family, is waking up to something. Behind it is PIE b^{h}ewd^h-*, and English holds two of its children: bid and forbid, from Old English bēodan, "to announce, to command" — a bidding is something made known to you. Greek took peúthomai, "I learn by asking."

Grammar Lens: the harmony again, and this time you can see it

দেখা's rule was that the -i of "I" closes the stem vowel while the spelling stands still. Here is the same rule on a different vowel — and the spelling moves with it:

Bengali	said
আমি বুঝি	bujhi — the -i raises ো to ু
সে বোঝে	bojhe — stays o
তুমি বোঝো	bojho — stays o

Same law as dekhi against dækhe: the high -i pulls the stem vowel up after it. Bengali chose to write this one down.
And now three knowings where English has one: জানা for a fact, চেনা for a person, বোঝা for the thing that finally lands. ভাবা is the turning-over; বোঝা is when it arrives.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bojhā" — understand — then "āmi bujhi"
- the pair, then the older pair — "bujhi … bojhe" and "dekhi … dækhe"
- think, then understand — "āmi bhābi … āmi bujhi"
- the three knowings — "jānā … chenā … bojhā"

Before you move on

Why is it bujhi and not bojhi? (The -i ending raises the stem vowel — the same harmony as dekhi against dækhe, only written down this time.) Which of the three knowings would you use of a person? (চেনা — জানা is for facts, বোঝা for grasping.) Which awakened prince is named from this root? (The Buddha — √budh, "to wake.")

14.3 পড়া (pôṛā) — "to read," and a letter Sanskrit never needed

This word carries a consonant Sanskrit did not have. It is the sound of a whole family of words wearing down, and once you hear it you will meet it everywhere.

You'll want to know: পড়া

পড়া — pôṛā — to read, to study

আমি পড়ি (āmi poṛi), "I read." সে পড়ে (se pôṛe), "he reads."

The letters in this word

পড়া is প (pô) + ড়া (ṛā). প is a plain p. ড় is ড (ḍ) with a dot underneath, and the dot changes everything: it is not a d at all but a flap — curl the tongue back and flick it forward once, as in the middle of an American ladder.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পড়া is Sanskrit √paṭh, "to recite aloud" — reading was reading out, which is why পড়া still covers studying as well as reading. And paṭhati became pôṛe by a rule that runs through the whole language: a single retroflex stop between two vowels softens into the flap ড়. That is why the letter exists; Sanskrit, which never softened them, had no use for it.

Watch it swallow a second verb whole. Sanskrit √pat, "to fall," went the same road — patati → pôṛe — so Bengali's "he reads" and "he falls" are now spelled and said alike, and only the sentence tells them apart. Past Sanskrit, paṭh goes cold: no secure Indo-European pedigree, and none will be invented for it. The falling twin is the rich one — PIE peth₂-* gave Greek ptérón, "wing" (pterodactyl, helicopter), Latin petere, "to make for" (petition, appetite), and English feather.

Grammar Lens: the harmony, on a third vowel

Bengali	said
আমি পড়ি	poṛi — the -i lifts the vowel
সে পড়ে	pôṛe — the open inherent vowel stands

Third verb, third pair, one law: the high -i of "I" pulls the stem vowel up after it. দেখি against দেখে, bujhi against bojhe, পড়ি against পড়ে.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "pôṛā" — read — then "āmi poṛi," flapping the ড়
- the three pairs — "dekhi … dækhe," "bujhi … bojhe," "poṛi … pôṛe"
- read it, think about it, understand it — "poṛi … bhābi … bujhi"

Before you move on

What is the dot under ড় telling you to do? (Flap it — curl the tongue back and flick, not a d.) Which two Sanskrit verbs both arrived at পড়া? (√paṭh "recite" and √pat "fall" — the same softening ate both.) Does the reading twin have an English cousin? (No — the falling twin does: feather, petition, pterodactyl.)

14.4 লেখা (lekhā) — "to write," and the noun hiding in every verb

Four chapters ago you said dækhā hôbe and were told it meant "a seeing will happen." This word explains why that was not a flourish.

You'll want to know: লেখা

লেখা — lekhā — to write

আমি লিখি (āmi likhi), "I write." সে লেখে (se lekhe), "he writes." The harmony, written down as in bujhi: -i lifts ে to ি.

The letters in this word

লেখা is লে (le) + খা (khā). ল is a clear l; খ the puffed kh you own from খাওয়া.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

লেখা is Sanskrit √likh — and likh does not mean "write." It means to scratch, to engrave. Which is what writing was.
Ask English the same. Latin scrībere, behind scribe, also began as "to scratch"; Germanic wrītan, behind write itself, meant "to score, to carve" — what you do to a rune-stick. Three unrelated roots, one picture. That is convergence, not kinship: লেখা and write are not cousins, and past Sanskrit likh has no secure pedigree. The finding here is a shared idea, not a family tree.

Grammar Lens: the dictionary form is also a noun

the same word	as a verb	as a noun
লেখা	to write	a piece of writing
pôṛā	to read	study, homework
দেখা	to see	a seeing, a meeting

Every -া form you have met does this. That is what Chapter 7's দেখা হবে was: not "we will see" but "a seeing will happen." It also builds nouns straight out of verbs — lekhāpôṛā, "writing-reading," is the ordinary word for education. And the causative from three lessons back still runs on top: লেখানো (lekhāno), "to get something written."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "lekhā" — write — then "āmi likhi … se lekhe"
- the chapter's four — "bhābā, bojhā, pôṛā, lekhā"
- education, flapping the ṛ — "lekhāpôṛā" — then "lekhāno," get it written
- the five you could already write — "ek, dui, tin, chār, pā̃ch" — and which one wears the chandrabindu

Before you move on

What was দেখা হবে saying? ("A seeing will happen" — দেখা is a noun as much as a verb, and so is লেখা.) Is write a cousin of লেখা? (No — both roots meant "scratch," which is coincidence.) What did দুই keep that Hindi's do flattened, who else in the east kept it, and did dv- survive in anyone's everyday numeral? (The -i after it; Assamese, Odia and Nepali; and no — only re-borrowings like দ্বার keep dv-.)

Chapter 15

Taking, Asking, Helping, Liking

Modes: eyes (4) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can take, ask, help and say what I like and whom I love in Bengali, build a fresh verb out of any noun by putting করা behind it, and say why liking happens to me while loving is something I do.
> Say āmār bhālo lāge and hear that you are not its subject, set it against āmi bhālobāsi where you are, place both beside the আমার … আছে shape that says 'I have', and run the chapter's four verbs back — neowā, jijñāsā kôrā, sāhājjo kôrā, bhālo lāgā. Six of the chapter's nine atoms. Two of the other three — the নেওয়া *compound and the noun-plus-করা pattern — are retrieved by the very next lesson after the one that taught them; the third, the doubled য্য of সাহায্য, is taught in the penultimate lesson and genuinely is not revisited, which is recorded here rather than papered over with a claim the payoff does not make.*

15.1 নেওয়া (neowā) — "to take," and the verb that finishes other verbs

Bengali rarely leaves a verb standing alone. This is the verb it props most of them up with — and the tail it wears will look familiar.

You'll want to know: নেওয়া

নেওয়া — neowā — to take

আমি নিই (āmi nii), "I take." আপনি নেন (āpni nen), respectfully.

The letters in this word

নেওয়া is নে (ne) + ওয়া (-owā). ন is a dental n, tongue on the teeth. The ওয়া tail is the one every dictionary-form verb of this kind wears — you have it already on হওয়া, যাওয়া and খাওয়া.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নেওয়া is Sanskrit √nī, "to lead, to carry away." It is a well-attested Indo-Iranian root — Avestan nayeiti, "he leads"; Sanskrit netṛ, "a leader," which is why a politician in Kolkata or Delhi is a netā. Beyond that branch the trail thins, and English kept nothing from it. No cousin will be manufactured for you here; some roots stayed home. The lesson worth more than a cousin is what Bengali does with the verb.

Grammar Lens: the verb that ends a compound

Put a verb into its -এ form (likhe, "having written"; niye, "having taken") and hang a second verb behind it. The second verb stops meaning what it means and starts colouring the first:

compound	what it does
লিখে নেওয়া (likhe neowā)	write it down — take the writing for yourself
নিয়ে আসা (niye āsā)	bring — come, having taken
নিয়ে যাওয়া (niye jāwā)	take away — go, having taken

Bengali has no separate word for "bring." It has "come having taken." And নেওয়া is a noun as readily as লেখা was: দেওয়া-নেওয়া (deowā-neowā), "giving-and-taking," is the everyday word for dealings between people.

Your turn

- Say it: "neowā" — take — then "āmi nii"
- Say it: the same tail four times — "hôwā, jāwā, khāwā, neowā"
- Say it: write it down — "likhe neowā"
- Say it: bring, then take away — "niye āsā … niye jāwā"
- Recall: say ek dui tin chār pā̃ch

- Read it: হওয়া

Before you move on

How does Bengali say "bring," having no word for it? (নিয়ে আসা — "come having taken"; and "take away" is নিয়ে যাওয়া.) Does English share নেওয়া's root? (No — √nī stayed in Indo-Iranian, and that is the honest answer.) Name two more Bengali verbs that are also nouns. (লেখা "a piece of writing" and দেখা "a seeing" — every -া form does it.)

15.2 জিজ্ঞাসা করা (jijñāsā kôrā) — "to ask," which is wanting to know

Chapter 13 warned you about a knot of letters, then spared you it. Here it is, inside a word you will use daily — and the word is Chapter 13's verb with an appetite.

You'll want to know: জিজ্ঞাসা করা

জিজ্ঞাসা করা — jijñāsā kôrā — to ask

আমি জিজ্ঞাসা করি (āmi jiggāshā kôri), "I ask" — two words, one verb.

The letters in this word

জিজ্ঞাসা is জি + জ্ঞা + সা. The middle piece জ্ঞ is the knot of জ and ঞ Chapter 13 named on √jñā — and Bengali never says jñ. It says gg, so the spelled jijñāsā is spoken jiggāshā, with the s → sh tilt at the end.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

জিজ্ঞাসা is Sanskrit's desiderative of √jñā ("to know") — the form meaning wanting to do a thing. Jijñāsati is "he desires to know"; jijñāsā is the desire itself. Bengali took the noun.
So asking is not a separate idea here. It is জানা with an appetite — and the root behind both is the one Chapter 13 traced: PIE ǵneh₃-*, English know, Latin nōscere (notice), Greek gnôsis (diagnosis). The doubled ji- is the desiderative's signature: a quiet echo of the root, meaning reaching for it.

Grammar Lens: any noun plus করা is a verb

noun	noun + করা
কাজ (kāj), work	কাজ করা — to work
জিজ্ঞাসা (jijñāsā), a wanting-to-know	জিজ্ঞাসা করা — to ask

Chapter 11 built kāj kôrā this way. It is more than a compound: it is the way Bengali makes verbs. The stock of true verbs is small and closed, while nouns pour in from Sanskrit, Persian, Arabic and English — each becoming a verb the moment করা stands behind it. Learn a noun, learn a verb.

Last lesson's compound stacks on top: জিজ্ঞাসা করে নেওয়া (jijñāsā kôre neowā) — "go ahead and ask."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- spelling, then sound — "jijñāsā … jiggāshā" — then "āmi jiggāshā kôri," I ask, and the root it grew from, "jānā"
- a fact, then a person — "āmi jāni" … "āmi tāke chini"
- go ahead and ask — "jijñāsā kôre neowā"

Before you move on

How does Bengali say জ্ঞ, and what is জিজ্ঞাসা literally? (gg, never jñ; and a wanting-to-know, the desiderative of জানা's root.) Someone asks whether you know their brother — which knowing verb answers? (চেনা — a person is known by acquaintance; জানা is for facts.) How do you make a verb from a noun you met this morning? (Put করা behind it.)

15.3 সাহায্য করা (sāhājjo kôrā) — "to help," which is going along with someone

Chapter 12 said Bengali's inherent vowel leans to o, then admitted it could not show you. This word can — and it is the word you will most want when stuck.

You'll want to know: সাহায্য করা

সাহায্য করা — sāhājjo kôrā — to help

সাহায্য করুন (sāhājjo kôrun), "please help" — the polite request form of kôrā.

The letters in this word

সাহায্য is সা + হা + য্য. The last piece is য stacked on itself — a conjunct, how Bengali writes a doubled consonant.

The letters in this word

Two rules land at the end, neither a quirk. Bengali reads a doubled য as jj, not yy. And nothing is written after it, so it takes the inherent vowel, which leans to o: *sāhājjo, never sāhājja.
Chapter 12 could not show that inherent o in ek, dui, tin, chār, p̃ach, since none of the five ends in a bare consonant. This one does. সা takes the s → sh tilt, so the whole is shāhājjo.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সাহায্য is Sanskrit sāhāyya, "companionship," on sahāya, "a companion" — which is saha-, "together," plus √i, "to go." A helper goes along with you.
Both halves have secure English cousins. Saha- is PIE sem-*, "together": English same, Greek homós (homogeneous), Latin similis (similar). √i is PIE h₁ey-*, "to go": Latin īre gives exit and transit; Greek ión gives ion. So "help" is same-going, and English holds the pieces without ever building the word.

Grammar Lens: asking for help is where the respect ladder bites

Another noun + করা, like jijñāsā kôrā. The respect sits where Chapter 13 put it — in করা's ending:

who you are asking	"help"
তুই (tui, intimate)	সাহায্য কর (kôr)
তুমি (tumi, familiar)	সাহায্য করো (kôro)
আপনি (āpni, respectful)	সাহায্য করুন (kôrun)

Say kôr to a stranger and you were not rude by accident, but in grammar.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- spelling, then sound — "sāhāyya … shāhājjo"
- the ladder — "sāhājjo kôr … kôro … kôrun"
- please help — "sāhājjo kôrun"
- the two noun-verbs of this chapter — "jijñāsā kôrā … sāhājjo kôrā"

Before you move on

Why does সাহায্য end in -o with nothing written there? (The inherent vowel — the thing the five numbers could not show.) Which form to a stranger? (করুন — kôr is for তুই.) What is a sahāya? (One who goes with you.)

15.4 ভালো লাগা (bhālo lāgā) — "to like," which happens to you

Every verb so far has let you be the one doing it. Here is one that does not.

You'll want to know: ভালো লাগা

ভালো লাগা — bhālo lāgā — to like

আমার ভালো লাগে (āmār bhālo lāge), "I like it." Not āmi — āmār, "to me."

The letters in this word

ভালো is yours from Chapter 5. The new half is লাগা: লা + গা, গ being a hard g as in go.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

লাগা is Sanskrit √lag, "to attach, to stick": āmār bhālo lāge says, literally, "good sticks to me."
ভালোবাসা (bhālobāsā), "to love," is ভালো plus বাসা, a verb no longer used alone. Its origin is genuinely disputed; the commonest proposal is Sanskrit √vas, "to dwell" — love as housed in goodness. If so it carries a startling cousin, since √vas is PIE h₂wes-*, "to stay," which became Old English wesan and so English was. That "if" is real, and stays open.

Grammar Lens: liking lands on you; loving you do

Bengali	word for word
আমার ভালো লাগে	to-me good sticks — I like it
আমার চা ভালো লাগে	to-me tea good sticks — I like tea
আমি ভালোবাসি	I love

That āmār … shape is how Bengali says I have — আমার … আছে, with আছে carrying the weight and no future of its own to give.
ভালোবাসা breaks the pattern on purpose: āmi bhālobāsi puts you in the subject's chair. It is a noun too — "love" itself — as লেখা was "a piece of writing." One form serves everybody. The harmony has nothing to bite on: bāsi and bāse keep their ā.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "āmār bhālo lāge" — hearing "to me," not "I"
- I like tea — "āmār chā bhālo lāge" — the tea Bengali eats, "chā khāwā"
- the one you do — "āmi bhālobāsi" — one form, whoever is speaking
- the eight verbs of these two chapters — "bhābā, bojhā, pôṛā, lekhā, neowā, jijñāsā kôrā, sāhājjo kôrā, bhālo lāgā"

Before you move on

Who is the subject of āmār bhālo lāge, and what else is built that way? (Not you — the good is; আমার … আছে, "I have," and আছে has no future of its own to give.) Does āmi bhālobāsi behave the same, and would a woman say it differently? (No, and no — loving takes you as subject; Bengali has no grammatical gender.) Name two verbs that are also nouns. (ভালোবাসা "love," লেখা "writing.") Why bāsi, not bosi? (Nothing to raise — this stem has ā.)

Chapter 16

Tea, Water, Milk, and Rice

Modes: eyes (4) Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can offer or ask for tea, water, milk and rice politely in Bengali, reusing the respectful verb ending Chapter 7 already taught, and say which of the four words is a Chinese loan and which shares a root with a word two lessons later.
> The chapter closes on ভাত*, whose Sanskrit root — √bhaj, 'to divide, to share' — will resurface two lessons later in a very different word. The reader offers all four drinks and rice politely in one breath (chā khān, jôl khān, dudh khān, bhāt khān), all built on the same respectful form of* খাওয়া *Chapter 7 already taught rather than a new 'please' word, which is how this chapter realizes SPINE-POLITE-REQUEST-REPAIR without one. It reaches back to rescue three thin Chapter 7 grammar atoms (হওয়া's future,* আসা's genderlessness, যাওয়া's respect ladder) and সাহায্য*'s doubled-letter sound rule, none revisited since Chapter 7-9.*

16.1 চা (chā) — "tea," and the first word you can politely offer

Last lesson you said āmār chā bhālo lāge, "I like tea," without চা ever being taught on its own. Here it is, by itself — and a new job for a form you already own.

You'll want to know: চা

চা — chā — tea

The letters in this word

চা is চ (chô) with the vowel sign া (ā). চ is a plain, unaspirated ch, the sound at the start of English church with no puff of breath behind it — Bengali also has a breathy partner, ছ, for later.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চা is not Sanskrit at all. It came into Bengali from Persian čā, which took it from Chinese chá. That is the overland route: China to Persia to Bengal, the same road Hindi and Punjabi travelled. The words that reached Europe — English tea, French thé — went the opposite way, by sea, from Hokkien Chinese tê, carried on Dutch trading ships. One drink, two ends of the same word, arriving by two different roads.

Grammar Lens: an offer, built on a form you already have

Chapter 13 taught you আপনি খান (āpni khān), the respectful form of খাওয়া. Put a noun in front of it and the very same words become a polite offer or request:

Bengali	what it does
আপনি খান	you eat / you drink (respectful)
চা খান	(please) have some tea

No new ending to learn — চা খান reuses exactly what Chapter 13 already gave you.

Your turn

- Say it: "chā" — tea
- Say it: the offer — "chā khān"
- Say it: the route it travelled — "chá … čā … chā"
- Say it: last lesson's line again — "āmār chā bhālo lāge"
- Recall: say jāwā
- Read it: আসা

Before you move on

Offer someone tea, politely. (চা খান.) Is চা inherited from Sanskrit? (No — it is a Chinese word that reached Bengali by way of Persian.) What form does চা খান reuse? (আপনি খান, Chapter 13's respectful "you eat/drink," with no new ending.)

16.2 জল (jôl) — "water," prised out of a phrase you already know

Chapter 13 showed you that Bengali "eats" its drinks with খাওয়া. Here is the drink you need most: জল, and with it জল খাওয়া, "to drink water" — literally "water-eat."

You'll want to know: জল

জল — jôl — water

জল খান — (please) drink some water, the same offer pattern as last lesson.

The letters in this word

জল is জ (jô) + ল (l), two bare consonants with no vowel sign between them. জ keeps its inherent vowel; ল, at the end of the word with nothing written after it, is silent — so jôl, one syllable, not jô-lô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

জল is Sanskrit জল (jala), inherited straight through Prakrit. Past Sanskrit its root is genuinely unsettled: one proposal traces it to PIE g^{w}elHo-, "to gush forth, to spring" — but the same sources call a local, non-Indo-European origin "unlikely though possible." No confident cousin is claimed here; the honest answer is that nobody is sure.

Bengali has a second word for water, most common in Bangladesh: পানি (pani). That one is on secure ground — Sanskrit pānīya, "drinkable," built directly on √pā, "to drink," the very root behind Chapter 13's পান করা and English potion, potable. Two words for the same thing, one of disputed origin and one you can trace all the way home.

Your turn

- Say it: "jôl" — water, one syllable
- Say it: the offer — "jôl khān"
- Say it: the Bangladesh word, and its root — "pani … pā, potion, potable"
- Say it: tea, then water — "chā khān … jôl khān"
- Read it: খাওয়া
- Recall: say dækhā

Before you move on

How do you say "drink water"? (জল খাওয়া, literally "water-eat.") Is জল's root secure? (No — genuinely disputed.) Which everyday synonym for water traces cleanly to "drinkable," from the root behind potion? (পানি.)

16.3 দুধ (dudh) — "milk," and the vowel this word refuses to keep

Chapter 15 met a word that had to end in a vowel nobody wrote — সাহায্য, sāhājjo. This word looks like it could do the same thing. It doesn't.

You'll want to know: দুধ

দুধ — dudh — milk

দুধ খান — (please) have some milk.

The letters in this word

দুধ is দ (dô) with the vowel sign ু (u), plus ধ (dh), a breathy dental d. Nothing is written after ধ — the same bare-consonant ending সাহায্য had.

The letters in this word

সাহায্য had to surface its inherent vowel — sāhājjo, not sāhājj — because its final letter is a doubled consonant, য্য, and a bare cluster like that cannot be said at all without a vowel to carry it. দুধ ends in one plain consonant, ধ, which needs no such help. So Bengali leaves it silent: দুধ, not dudho. The spelling looks the same kind of "bare ending" in both words; whether the vowel survives depends on what it would take to pronounce the letter beneath it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দুধ is Sanskrit dugdha, the past participle of √duh ("to milk"), from PIE d^{h}ewg^{h}-, "to produce, to yield." That root has exactly one secure English descendant, and it is not the word you would guess: doughty, "valiant," through Old English dohtig, "capable, of use." The word that looks like a cousin, dough, is not one — it comes from a completely different PIE root, d^{h}eyǵ^{h}-, "to knead, to mould." A close sound, two unrelated histories.

Your turn

- Say it: "dudh" — no trailing vowel
- Say it: the offer — "dudh khān"
- Say it: the two endings compared — "sāhājjo … dudh"
- Say it: three drinks so far — "chā khān … jôl khān … dudh khān"
- Recall: say jānā

Before you move on

Why does সাহায্য keep its final vowel while দুধ doesn't? (সাহায্য ends in a doubled consonant that cannot be said bare; দুধ's single ধ can.) Is দুধ's root related to English dough? (No — that is a different PIE root; the real cousin is doughty.)

16.4 ভাত (bhāt) — "rice," and a root that will name a person too

Three drinks so far. This chapter closes on the word for the meal itself — and a root worth remembering, because it comes back.

You'll want to know: ভাত

ভাত — bhāt — cooked rice

ভাত খান — (please) eat some rice; in everyday Bengali, "have a meal."

The letters in this word

ভাত is ভ (bhô, a b with a puff of breath) with the vowel sign ◌া (ā), plus ত (t), silent at the end for the same reason দুধ's ধ was: a single bare consonant needs no vowel to carry it, so bhāt, not bhāto.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভাত is Sanskrit bhakta, "portioned out, shared" — the past participle of √bhaj, "to divide, to distribute, to allot." PIE b^{h}eh$_{2}$g- sits behind it. Rice, in this word's own history, is not "the grain" but the share that was given out — the meal as a portion handed to you.
Hold onto that root. Two lessons from now, the very same Sanskrit verb will turn up again, naming someone rather than something.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bhāt" — cooked rice, no trailing vowel
- the offer — "bhāt khān"
- all four, in order — "chā khān … jôl khān … dudh khān … bhāt khān"
- the two silent endings, back to back — "dudh … bhāt"
- the root that shares — "bhaj — to divide, to distribute"

Before you move on

What does ভাত literally mean, at the root? ("Portioned out, shared" — √bhaj, "to divide.") Offer all four of this chapter's words, politely, in one breath. (Chā khān, jôl khān, dudh khān, bhāt khān.) Why do দুধ and ভাত both drop their final vowel? (Each ends in one plain consonant, easily said bare.) A quick run back through Chapter 13 while you're at it: which verb does Bengali reach for when আছে runs out of future? (হবে.) How many forms of "I come" does a Bengali speaker need, whoever is talking? (One — āmi āsi.) And "you go" to a stranger, versus to a friend? (যান jān, versus যাও jāo.) সাহায্য's doubled letter — said how? (jj, not yy.)

Chapter 17

Three Words Free, and One Dot

Modes: ✓ pen (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read চা, জল and দুধ off the page without learning a single new shape, then write the retroflex ড and the dot that turns it into the flap inside পড়া — the verb for what I am doing.
> The verb for what the reader is doing is read off the page, once the dot beneath ড has turned a retroflex stop into the flap Bengali actually says.

17.1 চা — tea, read

Write চ, and say where in the mouth it is made.

Script

চ + ◌া → চা

One consonant and one sign. chā — tea, and the shortest word this book will ask anyone to read.

It is also a loanword, and the shape of the loan is visible in the sound. Chinese chá travelled overland through Persian čā and arrived in Bengali as চা. The same leaf travelled by sea, through Hokkien and Dutch traders, and arrived in English as tea. One plant, two roads, two words — and which word a language uses tells you which road the leaf took to get there.

Two pieces, and both of them arrived long before this page: চ from the consonant chapter, ◌া from the very first script chapter. Nothing here is new except the permission to put them together — which is what a reading lesson is for.

Your turn

- Read it: চা
- Write it: চা

Before you move on

How many pieces are in চা? (Two.) And why does English say tea where Bengali says chā? (The word came by sea, not overland.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

17.2 জল — water, read

Write জ, and say what separates it from চ.

Script

জ + ল → জল

Two letters. No signs at all.

jôl — water. And the vowel in the middle of it, the ô you can plainly hear, is written nowhere. It is on the page because জ carries it, the way every bare Bengali consonant does.

This is the shortest possible demonstration of the word abugida, which the very first script lesson used and this word finally earns. An alphabet writes every vowel. An abugida writes a consonant that already has one, and marks only the vowels that are different. জল is what that looks like when nothing is different.

Set it beside the drink from earlier in this chapter:

চা — one consonant, one sign জল — two consonants, no signs

Both are two syllables in the mouth and neither spells them the way an English reader would expect. The chapter before this one noted that Bengali eats its drinks — jôl khāwā, "to eat water" — so these two words keep company in more than one way.

Your turn

- Read it: জল
- Read it: চা জল
- Write it: জল

Before you move on

How many vowel signs are in জল? (None.) So where does the ô come from? (The consonant carries it.) And what does the word mean? (Water.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

17.3 দুধ — milk, and the three words this chapter gave back

Write দ and ধ, and say what separates them.

Script

দ + ু + ধ → দুধ

- দ with ু under it — du, voice on, no breath
- ধ — voice on, with breath, and its own vowel gone at the end of the word

dudh — milk. Two letters that a reader half-attending will read as the same shape twice, and the word says them differently: the first closes clean, the second opens onto air. Say it slowly enough to hear the second one leak.

This is the whole point of a script that spells the breath. English writes d for both and lets speakers sort it out; Bengali writes the difference down, which is more to learn and less to guess.

Count what this chapter added. No new pieces at all — and three more words handed to the eye:

- চা — tea
- জল — water

- দুধ — milk

Twenty-five pieces, ten words. That is the point of a reading chapter: the eight consonants of the last script chapter were bought once and are still paying, and the three words on this page cost nothing new to read. Two of the three turn on the breathy pairs that chapter drilled, which is the distinction an English-speaking reader has no habit for at all.

Your turn

- Read it: চা জল দুধ
- Write it: দুধ
- Write it: চা জল দুধ

Before you move on

Which letter of দুধ lets the breath out? (The second.) How many pieces did this chapter add? (None.) And how many words can you read now? (Ten.)

17.4 ড — the tongue curled back

Read দুধ. Then write ◌় and say what it does.

Script

How ড is written, stroke by stroke

ড

দ, which you have had since the chapter of breathy letters, is made with the tongue flat against the back of the teeth. ড is the same voiced stop made with the tongue curled back to the ridge behind them.

English has neither one exactly. An English d lands between the two, which is why an English ear hears দ and ড as the same letter and a Bengali ear hears two, and why this is the pair that gives a learner's accent away first. Say dô with the tongue-tip on the teeth, then again with it curled back an inch. The second sound is duller and further away.

Now put the dot you learned two chapters ago underneath it:

ড + ় → ড়

That is not a d at all any more. It is a flap: the curled tongue strikes the roof once, on its way past, the way the tt in American butter does. In running Bengali the flap is far more common than the plain ড, which is why this letter is nearly always met wearing its dot.

Between them, the plain letter and the dotted one are one shape and two very different jobs — the same bargain য and য় struck.

Your turn

- Write it: ড
- Write it: ড়
- Say it: দ then ড — teeth, then curled back
- Say it: the flap in ড়, once, quickly
- Write it: য় ড়

Before you move on

Where is ড made? (Tongue curled back, behind the teeth-ridge.) What does the dot change it into? (A flap.) And which other letter you know takes the same dot? (য.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

17.5 পড়া — to read, read

Write ড় and say what the dot did. Then write প.

Script

প + ড় + ◌া → পড়া

- প — with its inherent ô
- ড় — the flap: curled tongue, one strike
- ◌া — the vowel sign

pôṛā — to read. Three pieces, and the middle one is the whole reason this word waited: without the dot it would be pôḍā, and Bengali does not say that.

The word is worth having on the page rather than only in the ear, because it is the one word in this book that names what the book is asking you to do. The verbs chapter gave it to you as a sound. The flap it hangs on arrived one lesson ago.

One thing to hear rather than see. The flap is fast. A learner who has been told "curl the tongue back" tends to hold the position and produce a long, deliberate ḍ; the Bengali sound is a single strike in passing, gone before it is noticed. If it feels careful, it is wrong.

And two words from the food chapter, back for a moment:

চা · জল

Your turn

- Read it: পড়া
- Write it: পড়া
- Read it: চা
- Read it: জল
- Say it: pôṛā — flap it, do not hold it

Before you move on

How many pieces in পড়া? (Three.) What would it say without the dot? (pôḍā — a sound Bengali does not use here.) And should the flap feel long or short? (Short — one strike.)

Chapter 18

Friend, Family, Brother, and Sister

Modes: 👁 eyes (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a friend, my family, my brother and my sister in Bengali, none of them marked for gender, and say which are borrowed whole from Sanskrit and which evolved by sound change, including one that turns out to share a root with the previous chapter's rice.
> The chapter closes on বোন, which is not related to English 'sister' at all: it traces through Sanskrit bhaginī and bhaga, 'a share,' back to the same √bhaj that named Chapter 10's ভাত. *The reader names all four people (bôndhu, pôribār, bhāi, bon), states which two are tatsamas kept whole from Sanskrit (বন্ধু, পরিবার) *and which two are tadbhavas worn down by sound change (ভাই, বোন), and counts a sibling or two using Chapter 6's numbers. It reaches back to rescue all five of Chapter 6's numbers atoms, unrevisited since the chapter that introduced them.

18.1 বন্ধু (bôndhu) — "friend," someone you are bound to

Chapter 3 taught you to exchange names. This chapter names the people themselves — starting with the one whose acquaintance you were glad to make.

You'll want to know: বন্ধু

বন্ধু — bôndhu — friend

আমার বন্ধু (āmār bôndhu) — my friend. One word, whether that friend is a man or a woman: Chapter 13 already told you Bengali carries no grammatical gender on its verbs, its adjectives, or its nouns, and বন্ধু is the plainest place to feel it — no ending changes, no second word to learn.

The letters in this word

বন্ধু is ব (bô) + ন্ধ (ndhô, a conjunct: ন joined to the breathy dental ধ) + ু (u). The conjunct is two consonants pressed together with no vowel between them, said as one cluster: n-dhu.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বন্ধু is Sanskrit বন্ধু (bandhu), kept essentially whole rather than worn down the way চা or ভাত were — Bengali took this one straight from Sanskrit rather than inheriting it through centuries of sound change. It is built on √bandh ("to bind, to tie"), from PIE b^{h}end^{h}- — and here, unusually, the English cousin is not buried: bind, bond and band all come from the very same root. Bengali did not need to explain what a friend is; the word does it for you. A বন্ধু is, at the root, someone you are bound to.

Your turn

- Say it: "bôndhu" — friend
- Say it: "āmār bôndhu" — my friend, no gender marked either way
- Say it: the root, and its English family — "bandh … bind, bond, band"
- Recall: say pôṛā
- Read it: লেখা
- Recall: say neowā

Before you move on

Give "my friend" in Bengali. (আমার বন্ধু.) What root is বন্ধু built on, and which English words share it? (√bandh, "to bind" — bind, bond, band.) Is বন্ধু a word Bengali inherited through sound change, or one it kept whole from Sanskrit? (Kept whole — a tatsama.) Does বন্ধু change for a friend who is a woman? (No — Chapter 13 already told you why: no grammatical gender, anywhere in the language.)

18.2 পরিবার (pôribār) — "family," what surrounds you

Last lesson named one person you are bound to. This one names the whole group.

You'll want to know: পরিবার

পরিবার — pôribār — family

আমার পরিবার (āmār pôribār) — my family.

The letters in this word

পরিবার is প (pô) + রি (ri) + বা (bā) + র (r, silent at the end, a bare consonant with nothing written after it). Four syllables in the spelling, three said aloud: pô-ri-bār.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পরিবার is Sanskrit পরিবার (parivāra), a second word Bengali kept whole from Sanskrit rather than letting it wear down — like বন্ধু, another tatsama. It is built from pari-, "around, about" (PIE peri-, the same prefix English itself borrowed for peri-meter and peri-phery), plus √vṛ ("to cover, to surround," PIE h₂wer-). That root's secure cousins are Latin operiō, "to cover," and Lithuanian suverti, "to shut" — no English word is claimed here, since none is secure. Put the pieces together and a পরিবার is, at the root, what stands around you and covers you.

Your turn

- Say it: "pôribār" — family
- Say it: "āmār pôribār" — my family

- Say it: the two pieces — "pari-, around … vṛ, to cover"
- Say it: a friend, then a family — "bôndhu … pôribār"
- Recall: say jijñāsā kôrā
- Read it: সাহায্য করা
- Recall: say bhālo lāgā

Before you move on

Give "my family" in Bengali. (আমার পরিবার.) What does পরিবার mean at the root, piece by piece? ("Around" plus "to cover" — what surrounds and covers you.) Does its root vṛ have a secure English cousin? (No — the secure cousins are Latin and Lithuanian.)

18.3 ভাই (bhāi) — "brother," which never stopped being the word "brother"

Two tatsamas so far, both kept whole from Sanskrit. This one took the other road — worn down by sound change until it barely looks related to where it started. Except it does.

You'll want to know: ভাই

ভাই — bhāi — brother

আমার ভাই (āmār bhāi) — my brother.

The letters in this word

ভাই is ভা (bhā, the breathy b from ভাত and ভালো) plus ই (i), a full vowel letter rather than a sign — the two vowels run together into one syllable, bhāi.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভাই is Sanskrit bhrātṛ, worn down through Magadhi Prakrit bhāi — a tadbhava this time, not a tatsama like বন্ধু and পরিবার: Bengali inherited this one through centuries of sound change rather than lifting it whole. And PIE bʰréh₂tēr sits behind bhrāṭṛ, the same root that gives English brother, Latin frāter and Greek phrátēr. Nothing here is a cousin standing in for the real thing: ভাই and "brother" are, six thousand years apart, the same word.

Bengali also uses family words to address people outside the family: an older man might be called দাদা (dādā, "elder brother") as a mark of respect, whether or not he is any relation at all. That is a light touch on a habit this chapter will not turn into a system — but it is worth naming, since it means বন্ধু and ভাই are not always as far apart as they look.

Your turn

- Say it: "bhāi" — brother
- Say it: "āmār bhāi" — my brother
- Say it: the same word, two languages — "bhrāṭṛ … brother"
- Say it: friend, family, brother — "bôndhu … pôribār … bhāi"
- Recall: say chā
- Read it: জল

Before you move on

Give "my brother" in Bengali. (আমার ভাই.) Is ভাই a cousin of English "brother," or the same word by descent? (The same word — PIE bʰréh₂tēr, no invention needed.) Is ভাই a tatsama like বন্ধু and পরিবার, or a tadbhava? (A tadbhava — worn down through Prakrit, not kept whole.)

18.4 বোন (bon) — "sister," and the root it shares with rice

ভাই (bhāi) turned out to be the very word "brother." This one does not — and where it comes from instead is the surprise this chapter has been saving.

You'll want to know: বোন

বোন — bon — sister

আমার বোন (āmār bon) — my sister.

The letters in this word

বোন is ব with the vowel sign ো (bo) plus ন (n), silent at the end — one plain consonant, no cluster, so the inherent vowel drops exactly as it did on দুধ and ভাত: bon, not bono.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

English "sister" descends from PIE swésōr. বোন does not. It is a tadbhava through Magadhi Prakrit bahiṇī, from Old Indo-Aryan* *baghinī — a doublet of Sanskrit's own bhaginī, "one with a share," built on bhaga, "a share, a portion, good fortune." And bhaga is a noun from the very same verb that named this chapter's rice two lessons ago: √bhaj ("to divide, to share out"), PIE bʰeh₂g-. ভাত is "the portion given"; বোন is "the one with a portion." Bengali's word for sister and Bengali's word for rice are, underneath, cousins. Its word for sister and English's are not.

The same light touch as last lesson's দাদা applies here: an older woman may be addressed as দিদি (didi, "elder sister") as a mark of respect, family or not.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bon" — sister, no trailing vowel
- "āmār bon" — my sister
- the shared root — "bhaj … bhāt, bon"
- all four of this chapter's people — "bôndhu, pôribār, bhāi, bon"
- a count of them, using Chapter 12's numbers — "āmār ek bhāi. āmār dui bon." — one brother. two sisters.

Before you move on

Is বোন related to English "sister"? (No — different root entirely.) What is it related to instead? (ভাত — both trace to √bhaj, "to share.") Say "one brother" and "two sisters." (Ek bhāi. Dui bon.) Which of those two numbers keeps a vowel Hindi and Marathi lost? (দুই — the -i after the old dv-.) And which number wears the chandrabindu? (পাঁচ, five — not needed here, but still the only one that has it.)

Chapter 19

Family, on the Page

Modes: ↙ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: neither of the 2 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read পরিবার and ভাই, and say why the i at the end of ভাই takes its full letter even though it is nowhere near the start of the word.
> Brother read as three pieces, with the independent-vowel rule doing work in an unexpected place — nothing to lean on turns out to mean what it says, not start of word.

19.1 পরিবার — family, read

> Write প, then write ি and say which side of a consonant it goes on.

Script

> প + র + ি + ব + া + র → পরিবার

Six pieces — the longest word this book has asked anyone to assemble.

- প — bare, so it carries its own inherent vowel: pô
- র with ি in front of it — ri
- ব with া — bā
- র — rô, worn away at the end

pôribār — family, the tatsama from the chapter before this one: pari- "around" plus a root meaning "to cover." What surrounds you.

The first letter is the lesson here. প wears no sign at all, and a reader who has spent two chapters looking for marks will skate over it and say pri. It is pô. A consonant with nothing on it is not silent — it is carrying the vowel this whole script is named for.

That inherent ô was the very first thing the script chapters taught, back on ন, and this is the first word long enough to make it matter in the middle of a reading rather than at the start of a letter.

Your turn

- Read it: পরিবার
- Read it: চা
- Write it: পরিবার

Before you move on

What vowel does the bare প carry? (ô.) How many pieces are in পরিবার? (Six.) And what does the word mean? (Family.)

19.2 ভাই — brother, read

Write ই, and say when a vowel gets its own letter instead of a sign.

Script

ভ + ◌া + ই → ভাই

- ভ with ◌া — bhā, breath and all
- ই — the full letter, standing on its own bhāi — brother. And the last piece is the rule from the independent-i lesson, many chapters back, doing work in an unexpected place: the i here is not at the start of the word, yet it still takes its full letter. Why? Because the thing in front of it is ◌া, a vowel. There is no consonant for a sign to sit on.

"Nothing to lean on" does not mean "start of word." It means what it says.

The word itself is worth a line. The chapter before this one set it out: this is not a cousin of English brother, it is that word, worn down through Prakrit from the same ancestor — a tadbhava rather than a tatsama. Its sister বোন, from the same chapter, is not related to English sister at all.

Put it beside the family word from two lessons ago and the good from the consonant chapter, and the shared shapes are obvious:

পরিবার · ভালো · ভাই

Your turn

- Read it: ভাই
- Read it: পরিবার ভালো ভাই
- Write it: ভাই

Before you move on

Why does ভাই end in the full letter ই rather than the sign? (The piece before it is a vowel — nothing to lean on.) And is ভাই a cousin of English brother, or the same word? (The same word.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

Chapter 20

Eye, Mouth, Nose, and Heart

Modes: 👁 eyes (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my eye, my mouth, my nose and my heart in Bengali, and say which of those four words is settled Indo-European, which is a genuinely disputed origin, and which is borrowed whole from Sanskrit with the widest confirmed cousin family in this book.
> The chapter closes on হৃদয়, whose root hṛd traces to PIE kérd- alongside English heart, Greek kardía and Latin cor — the widest, most secure cousin family taught anywhere in this track. The reader names all four body words (chokh, mukh, nāk, hridoy) and states each one's status: চোখ an ardhatatsama half worn down by sound change, মুখ a tatsama with a genuinely disputed Dravidian-versus-Indo-European origin, নাক a tadbhava with a settled root, হৃদয় a tatsama with a poetic tadbhava twin, হিয়া. *It reaches back to rescue Chapter 8's flapped-ড় *sound rule and its causative -আনো grammar, neither revisited since Chapter 8.

20.1 চোখ (chokh) — "eye," built on the root of "to see"

A new chapter, and a new use for Chapter 5's check-in — the parts of you that check-in is actually asking about.

You'll want to know: চোখ

চোখ — chokh — eye

আমার চোখ (āmār chokh) — my eye.

The letters in this word

চোখ is চ with the vowel sign ো (cho) plus খ (kh, the puffed sound you already own from খাওয়া), silent at the end — one bare consonant, so no trailing vowel: chokh, not chokho.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চোখ traces to Sanskrit cakṣus, "eye" — a noun built directly on √cakṣ ("to see"), from PIE k^{w}eḱ-, "to appear, to see." The nearest named cousin outside Indo-Aryan is Persian čašm, "eye"; no secure English descendant is claimed for this one. And the word itself has travelled: Old Bengali softened cakṣus down through cakhu and coukh to today's চোখ — half kept from Sanskrit, half worn smooth by three centuries of sound change, which is why this kind of word gets its own name, ardhatatsama, "half a tatsama."

Your turn

- Say it: "chokh" — eye, no trailing vowel
- Say it: "āmār chokh" — my eye
- Say it: the verb it grew from — "cakṣ … cakṣus … chokh"
- Say it: the other "see" verb you already own — "dækhā"
- Recall: say dudh
- Read it: ভাত

Before you move on

Give "my eye" in Bengali. (আমার চোখ.) What Sanskrit verb is চোখ built on? (√cakṣ, "to see.") Is চোখ a tatsama, kept whole like বন্ধু, or fully worn down like ভাই? (Neither — an ardhatatsama, half of each.)

20.2 মুখ (mukh) — "mouth, face," a word two families both claim

চোখ (chokh) was half old sound, half new. This word is a full tatsama again — and its own history is a real, unresolved argument among linguists.

You'll want to know: মুখ

মুখ — mukh — mouth, face

আমার মুখ (āmār mukh) — my mouth, my face.

The letters in this word

মুখ is ম with the vowel sign ু (mu) plus খ (kh), silent at the end — one bare consonant again: mukh, not mukho.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মুখ is a tatsama, taken whole from Sanskrit মুখ (mukha) — a tadbhava twin, মু (mu), also exists, but only buried inside compound words, never standing alone. What makes মুখ worth pausing on is where mukha itself came from, and nobody fully agrees. One well-known account, Pokorny's, derives it from Dravidian, a language family with no Sanskrit or PIE connection at all. Another, Mayrhofer's, argues for an Indo-European source instead, pointing to the word's presence in the Rigveda and in Iranian languages as evidence it is old enough to be inherited rather than borrowed. Both scholars are serious; neither has won. The honest report is that মুখ's deepest root is still an open question.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mukh" — mouth, face
- "āmār mukh" — my face
- the two rival accounts — "Dravidian … or Indo-European"
- an eye, then a mouth — "chokh … mukh"

Before you move on

Give "my face" in Bengali. (আমার মুখ.) Is মুখ's ultimate origin settled? (No — genuinely disputed between a Dravidian and an Indo-European account.) What is মুখ's tadbhava twin, and where does it survive? (মু, only inside compound words, never alone.)

20.3 নাক (nāk) — "nose," the same word as English's, worn down differently

মুখ's origin was an open argument. This one is settled, and it lands somewhere you have seen before.

You'll want to know: নাক

নাক — nāk — nose

আমার নাক (āmār nāk) — my nose.

The letters in this word

নাক is ন with the vowel sign ◌া (nā) plus ক (k), silent at the end: nāk, not nāko.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নাক is Sanskrit nas, inherited through Prakrit ṇakka — a tadbhava, like ভাই and বোন before it. Its PIE root is néh₂s-, and this one is as secure as roots get: it is the direct ancestor of English nose itself, and of Latin nāsus, which gives English nasal. Three languages, one inherited word, three different roads of sound change — Bengali's road ran the vowel through Prakrit's a, dropped Sanskrit's final -s, and doubled the k along the way.

Your turn

- Say it: "nāk" — nose
- Say it: "āmār nāk" — my nose

- Say it: the three cousins — "nāk … nose … nāsus"
- Say it: three of this chapter's words — "chokh … mukh … nāk"
- Recall: say bôndhu
- Read it: পরিবার

Before you move on

Give "my nose" in Bengali. (আমার নাক.) Which two English words share নাক's root directly? (Nose, and nasal by way of Latin nāsus.) Is that link as secure as মুখ's, or more so? (More — নাক's root is settled; মুখ's is still argued over.)

20.4 হৃদয় (hridoy) — "heart," the oldest cousin this book has shown you

Three body words, three different histories — half-worn, disputed, and settled. This last one closes the chapter on the most secure cousin of them all.

You'll want to know: হৃদয়

হৃদয় — hridoy — heart

আমার হৃদয় (āmār hridoy) — my heart.

The letters in this word

হৃদয় is হ with the vowel sign ৃ (hri, the "vocalic r" sign, a vowel Bengali keeps only in words borrowed from Sanskrit) plus দ (dô) plus য় (yô, a glide, not a plain stop — this is why the word ends audibly, -doy, rather than falling silent the way দুধ and নাক did).

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হৃদয় is a tatsama, Sanskrit হৃদয় (hṛdaya) taken whole. A tadbhava twin also exists, হিয়া (hiya), but it lives in poetry and song rather than everyday speech — the reverse of মুখ's pair, where the tatsama is the everyday word. Inside হৃদয় sits hṛd, and its PIE root is ḱérd-, "heart" — the direct ancestor of English heart itself, Greek kardía

(English cardiac), and Latin cor (English core, courage). Four languages, one root, and nowhere in this book has the family been so wide or so certain.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "hridoy" — heart
- "āmār hridoy" — my heart
- the wide family — "hṛd … heart, kardía, cor"
- all four of this chapter's words — "chokh, mukh, nāk, hridoy"
- one more word from Chapter 18, sharing this lesson's warmth of feeling — "bhāi," brother

Before you move on

Give "my heart" in Bengali. (আমার হৃদয়.) Name three English words that share হৃদয়'s root. (Heart, cardiac, core — or courage.) Two quick reaches further back: what does the dot under ড় tell you to do, the letter পড়া taught? (Flap it, curling the tongue back.) And what does the ending -আনো do to a verb, the way ভাবা showed on দেখা? (Hands the doing to someone else — দেখা "see" becomes দেখানো "show.")

Chapter 21

The Face on the Page

Modes: 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read চোখ, নাক, মুখ and হৃদয় off the page, hear which of them ends in breath and which in silence, and write the one sign the fourth of them needed.
> Heart is read last because it is the only one of the four words that needed a new sign, and the chapter ends with all four read back — thirteen pieces, one of them bought today.

21.1 চোখ — eye, read

Read ভাই. Then write চ.

Script

চ + ো + খ → চোখ

- চ wrapped in ো — cho
- খ — the breathy k, and at the end of a word the breath is what a listener actually hears chokh — eye. Three pieces, no new shapes, and it is the first word of the chapter on the face.

Look at the ো again. It is the one vowel sign that arrives in two halves, one on each side of its consonant, and the eye has to take the whole cluster in at once rather than reading left to right through it. That is a small demonstration of something true of the whole script: a Bengali syllable is a unit on the page, not a sequence. The letters inside it may be written before, after, above or below each other, and the reader assembles the syllable, not the strokes.

It is worth noticing what this word is asking of you at the moment you read it. The organ named is the one doing the reading.

Your turn

- Read it: চোখ
- Write it: চোখ
- Write it: চ ছ
- Say it: chokh, letting the breath out at the end

Before you move on

How many pieces in চোখ? (Three.) Which sign sits on both sides of its consonant? (ো.) And how many of the three shapes were new today? (None.)

21.2 নাক — nose, read

Read চোখ. Then write ক.

Script

ন + া + ক → নাক

nāk — nose. Every piece of this word came out of the chapter that taught you to read the greeting, several thousand words ago. Nothing has been added since, and nothing needed to be.

Two things about the last letter. ক ends the word, so its inherent ô is gone — the mouth closes and stops, with no vowel after it. And the closure is clean: no breath escapes, which is the whole difference between this letter and the খ that ended চোখ a moment ago. Read the two words one after the other and the contrast is unmissable:

চোখ — ends in air নাক — ends in silence

That pair is the best short demonstration of aspiration this book can offer, because both words are things you can point at on your own face.

Say it and mean it. নাক is a plain, unglamorous, everyday word, and being able to read one of those off the page without help is a better measure of progress than being able to read a beautiful one.

Your turn

- Read it: নাক
- Read it: চোখ নাক
- Write it: নাক
- Write it: ক খ গ
- Say it: chokh, then nāk — air, then silence

Before you move on

What happens to ক's inherent vowel at the end of নাক? (It is gone.) Which of চোখ and নাক ends in breath? (চোখ.) And which chapter's letters is নাক built from? (The first script chapter's.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

21.3 মুখ — mouth, read

Write খ, then write ু underneath it.

Script

ম + ু + খ → মুখ

- ম with ু hanging under it — mu
- খ — the breathy k, and at the end of a word its inherent vowel is gone, so what is left is the closure and the puff mukh — mouth, from the chapter on the face. A tatsama: kept whole out of Sanskrit rather than worn down on the way.

The end of this word is where a new reader loses the breath. English speakers finishing a word on k stop the air dead; Bengali lets it out. Say mu, close on the back of the tongue, and then open. If the last thing a listener hears is air, it was right.

There is a smaller thing worth seeing on the page. Three letters, one sign, and the sign is the only mark below the head-line in the whole word. A Bengali word's information is not spread evenly — most of it rides on the band, and the occasional piece that drops below is doing work the eye must not skip.

Your turn

- Read it: মুখ
- Read it: ভালো
- Write it: মুখ

Before you move on

What happens to the breath at the end of মুখ? (It comes out — the letter is the breathy one.) And where is the only mark below the head-line? (Under the first letter.)

21.4 ◌ৃ — the vowel that used to be an r

Read মুখ. Then write ◌ু and say which side of the head-line it hangs on.

Script

A hook hanging under its consonant, in the same country as ◌ু. It is a vowel sign, and it says ri.

The reason it is filed with the vowels and not with র is a piece of history worth two minutes. Sanskrit had a sound that behaved like a vowel and was made like an r: a syllable you could build a word around with no other vowel in it at all. English does this without noticing — the second syllable of butter has no vowel letter doing any work, only the r. Sanskrit wrote that syllable, and counted it among its vowels.

Bengali kept the sign and gave up the sound. What a Bengali reader says today is plain ri. So the mark is a vowel that no longer sounds like the thing it is named after, and its position in the alphabet is a fossil.

হ + ৃ → হৃ

Look at where it goes and what it does to the letter above it. On হ the hook is tucked into the letter's own tail, which is why this combination looks like a single new shape rather than a letter plus a mark. That is normal for this sign and it is the main difficulty it presents: ৃ is a mark that hides.

Your turn

- Write it: ৃ
- Write it: হৃ
- Write it: ু then ৃ — both below the line
- Read it: নাক

Before you move on

Is ৃ a consonant or a vowel sign? (A vowel sign.) What does it say in Bengali today? (ri.) And is it the letter র? (No — a different mark, in a different place.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

21.5 হৃদয় — heart, and the face read whole

Write হৃ. Then write দ.

Script

হ + ৃ + দ + য় → হৃদয়

- হৃ — the breath with the hidden hook under it, hri
- দ — the dental d, carrying its inherent ô
- য় — the dotted glide, closing the word

hridoy — heart. Four pieces, and three of the four are things this book bought for other words entirely: the দ came from milk, the য় came from the verb of being, and only the hook was bought for this word alone.

That is the ordinary economy of a syllabary, and it is why a reader's progress accelerates. The first word cost nine lessons. This one cost one.

The spelling is also a small piece of evidence. হৃদয় is a tatsama — a word Bengali took out of Sanskrit whole rather than wearing it down over centuries — and you can see that in the letters. A worn-down word would have lost this hook long ago, the way ভাই lost the one its Sanskrit ancestor had. Spelling is where a language keeps its receipts.

Now the whole chapter, off the page:

চোখ · নাক · মুখ · হৃদয়

Four words, thirteen pieces, one new sign between them.

Your turn

- Read it: হৃদয়
- Read it: চোখ নাক মুখ হৃদয়
- Write it: হৃদয়
- Say it: all four, pointing at each

Before you move on

How many pieces in হৃদয়? (Four.) How many of them were bought for this word? (One — the hook.) Which letter is wearing a dot? (য়.) And name the four words of this chapter in Bengali. (চোখ, নাক, মুখ, হৃদয়.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

21.6 Six words, read cold

The verb for what you are doing this second, in Bengali script. Say it before you look.

Read this

পড়া · দুধ · ভাই · পরিবার · হওয়া · হৃদয়

Read down the line and say each one aloud before checking:

word
পড়া · দুধ	to read · milk
ভাই · পরিবার	brother · family
হওয়া · হৃদয়	to be · heart

Each was taught with its own point attached. পরিবার is where the inherent vowel is finally heard rather than explained. ভাই is an independent vowel sitting in the middle of a word, where nothing prepares you for it. দুধ is the plain-against-breathy pair inside one short word.

Script: the sign that came last

হৃদয় needed a sign nothing before it had needed: ৃ, for a vowel that was once an r and is no longer one. It is the last piece of the reading ladder, and it exists for a sound that has moved away from the letter that records it — the same drift you meet in every script old enough to have one.

Before you move on

Which of the six is the longest, and what does it let you hear? (পরিবার — the inherent vowel.) Where does ভাই put an independent vowel? (In the middle of the word.) Which word needed ৃ? (হৃদয়.) And what was that sign once? (An *r — it is not one now.)

Chapter 22

Please, Sorry, and Welcome

Modes: 👁 eyes (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say please and sorry in Bengali, excuse myself politely, and welcome someone with a word that carries the same 'hither' prefix already met on the verb for coming.
> The chapter closes on স্বাগতম, 'welcome', literally 'a good coming': su-, 'good' (PIE h1su-, cousin of Greek eu-), fused by ordinary sandhi onto āgata, 'arrived', which opens with the same ā- 'hither' prefix already met on āsā, this time riding √gam, PIE g^{w}em-, the secure direct ancestor of English come. The reader gives all four new words of the chapter — doya kore, dukkhito, maf korben, shbagotom — closing the two courtesy concepts, please and sorry, this book had never taught, and a third greeting concept, welcome.

22.1 দয়া করে (doya kore) — "please," a kindness done

The heart word closed the last chapter. A new one opens on a feeling that starts in the same place — and a word this book has never taught you before now.

You'll want to know: দয়া করে

দয়া করে — doya kore — please

দয়া করে বসুন (doya kore bôshun) — please, sit.

The letters in this word

দয়া is দ (dô) plus য় (the glide already met inside হৃদয়) with the vowel sign া (ā): doyā. করে is ক (kô) plus র (r) with the vowel sign ে (e): kôre.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দয়া is Sanskrit দয়া (dayā), "compassion, pity." Most Indo-Europeanists trace its root back to PIE deh₂-, "to divide, to apportion" — the same root proposed for Greek daíomai, "to divide," and dêmos, "a portion of land, the people," which English holds without inheriting it directly: democracy, epidemic, demographic. If the comparison is right, compassion and sharing are the same idea at the root — you feel দয়া for someone by dividing your own good fortune with them, the warmth this book already located in হৃদয়, the heart.

Grammar Lens: করা wears a new outfit

Noun plus করা already builds a verb — কাজ করা, "to work"; jijñāsā kôrā, "to ask." Here করা takes a different shape, করে, "having done": not a full sentence on its own, but a piece that leans on the next word.

shape of করা	job	example
a finite ending (করি, করে, করেন…)	states an action	আমি কাজ করি — I work
করে, unchanged	"having done," leaning forward	দয়া করে বসুন — please, sit

দয়া করে literally says "having done a kindness, [now do this]" — the kindness is named, then the actual request follows.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "doya" — compassion, then "kore" — having done
- "doya kore bôshun" — please, sit
- the family this word joins — "kāj kôrā … jijñāsā kôrā … doya kore"

Before you move on

What does দয়া করে mean literally, piece by piece? ("Having done a kindness" — দয়া "compassion" + করে "having done.") Is করে here a full sentence by itself? (No — it leans forward onto the request that follows it.) One quick reach back: what root does দয়া share with a very old disputed argument about democracy? (PIE deh₂-, "to divide" — the same proposed root behind Greek dêmos, and behind the warmth হৃদয়, the heart, already carries — two lessons after নাক, the nose, which shares none of it.)

22.2 দুঃখিত (dukkhito) — "sorry," and a prefix that reaches Greek

Last lesson's kindness gets a request said politely. This lesson is what you say when the kindness came too late.

You'll want to know: দুঃখিত

দুঃখিত — dukkhito — sorry

আমি দুঃখিত (āmi dukkhito) — I'm sorry.

The letters in this word

দুঃখিত is দ (dô) with the vowel sign ু (u), then ঃ — a new mark, the visarga, two small stacked dots that add a light breath after the vowel — then খ (kh) with the vowel sign ি (i), then ত (t, silent at the end). Spelled duḥkhita, said dukkhito: the breath mark softens toward the consonant that follows it rather than staying a separate sound.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দুঃখিত is built on Sanskrit দুঃখ (duḥkha), "sorrow, suffering" — the word Buddhism made famous as dukkha. Take it apart and one half is certain: দুঃ/দুস্ (dus-) means "bad, difficult," from PIE dus-, the very prefix inside Greek dys-: dystopia, dysfunctional. The other half, খ (kha), is where the certainty ends. Sanskrit's own grammatical tradition explains it as "an axle-hole" — a duḥkha journey is a bad axle-hole, a rough ride, set against সুখ (sukha), "a good axle-hole," comfort. It is a vivid story, and it is repeated everywhere. It is also, by the account of modern Sanskritists including Mayrhofer, not a story to trust: the axle-hole reading may be a later folk explanation grafted onto a word whose real root is lost. দুঃ's cousin is real; খ's is a story, reported and not settled.

Your turn

- Say it: "dukkhito" — sorry
- Say it: "āmi dukkhito" — I'm sorry
- Say it: the secure half and its Greek cousin — "dus- … dystopia"
- Say it: last lesson's request again — "doya kore bôshun"
- Read it: ভাই

Before you move on

Say "I'm sorry" in Bengali. (আমি দুঃখিত.) Which half of দুঃখ is a secure PIE prefix, and which English word shares it? (দুঃ/dus-, "bad" — dystopia, by way of Greek dys-.) Is the "bad axle-hole" story of খ settled fact? (No — a repeated tradition, treated with real skepticism by modern Sanskritists.) Sorrow, like compassion, can weigh somewhere specific — where? (হৃদয়, the heart.)

22.3 মাফ করবেন (maf korben) — "excuse me," borrowed and softened

Last lesson's word for "sorry" was a native Sanskrit word. This one is a loanword — the very same loanword Hindi uses in its own "sorry" phrase — and it softens a request in a way you have not met yet.

You'll want to know: মাফ করবেন

মাফ করবেন — maf korben — excuse me

maf korben, êktu jāygā debên? — excuse me, could you make a little room?

The letters in this word

মাফ is ম (mô) with ◌া (ā) plus ফ (ph, the puffed p). Notice what is missing: Hindi marks this same borrowed sound with a small dot under its own letter for pha, a nuqtā, to write a dedicated letter for f. Bengali's script has no such mark at all — ফ alone serves for both the native puffed p and this borrowed f, and only habit tells a reader which one a given word means.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মাফ is not Bengali, and not Sanskrit: it is borrowed, by way of Persian, from Arabic 'afw, "to pardon, to wipe a wrong away." Hindi borrowed the identical word for the identical job. Bengali also keeps a formal, Sanskritic cousin for the same idea, kṣamā korben, from kṣamā, "patience, forbearance" — the everyday loan and the bookish native word side by side, the same split Hindi keeps.

Grammar Lens: the future, asked to be gentle

The tea-offering pattern you already own reuses a present verb — আপনি খান — to make a request. করবেন does the same job with a different tense: it is the plain future, "you will do," not a command at all by its grammar, and yet its job here is exactly a request — a third shape for করা, beside last lesson's participle করে.

tense used	what it does	example
present habitual	states, and doubles as a request	আপনি খান — you eat / please eat future	states, and doubles as a softer request	মাফ করবেন — you will excuse / please excuse

The future's distance is what buys the softness: asking rather than telling, even grammatically.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "maf korben" — excuse me
- the two soft requests compared — "chā khān … maf korben"

Before you move on

Where does মাফ come from? (Arabic 'afw, "to pardon," by way of Persian — the same loan Hindi's own "sorry" phrase uses.) What tense is করবেন, and why does that make it gentler than a command? (Future — "you will do," asking rather than telling.)

22.4 স্বাগতম (shbagotom) — "welcome," a good arrival

This chapter has taught what to say after a mistake. It closes on what to say before anything goes wrong at all — a word built on the same "hither" you have carried since the verb for coming.

You'll want to know: স্বাগতম

স্বাগতম — shbagotom — welcome

নমস্কার, স্বাগতম (nômoshkar, shbagotom) — hello, welcome.

The letters in this word

স্বাগতম is স্ব (a conjunct, স joined straight to ব with no vowel between — sbô, tilted by the same s→sh habit every Sanskrit word in this book has shown) plus ◌া (ā), then গ (gô), ত (tô), and ম (mô, keeping its own inherent vowel at the very end): shbā-go-to-m.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

স্বাগতম is Sanskrit स्वागतम (svāgatam), built from two pieces fused together. The second piece, āgata, "arrived, come," opens with the very same আ-, "hither," that আসা's own lesson already named — except here it rides a different verb, √gam ("to go, to come"), not আসা's own unsettled stem. √gam is PIE g^{w}em-, and this root is about as secure as roots get: it is the direct ancestor of English come, and, by way of Latin venīre, of advent and convene too. The first piece, su- ("good"), loses its vowel to the glide ব when the next syllable also opens with a vowel — ordinary Sanskrit sandhi, the same trade su- plus āgata makes every time: svāgata. su- is PIE h$_1$su-, cousin of Greek eu-, the "good" inside eulogy and euphoria. Put the pieces back together: স্বাগতম is, literally, "a good coming."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "shbagotom" — welcome
- "nômoshkar, shbagotom" — hello, welcome
- the shared prefix — "ā-, hither" — on āsā, then on āgata
- the two secure cousins — "gam … come" and "su- … eu-"

Before you move on

Give "welcome" in Bengali. (স্বাগতম.) What does স্বাগতম mean, piece by piece? ("Good" plus "come" — a good arrival.) Which prefix does it share with আসা, and on a different verb this time? (আ-, "hither" — on √gam here, not আসা's own uncertain stem.) Run this chapter's three other new words back: a kindness done, a word for sorrow, and a borrowed pardon. (doya kore, dukkhito, maf korben.) One more reach: what tense softened that pardon into a request? (Future — করবেন, "you will do.")

Chapter 23

Five Colors

Modes: eyes (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name five colors in Bengali and say which came from Persian, which from Sanskrit, and which is the one color where Bengali and Hindi genuinely parted ways.
> The chapter closes on সবুজ, 'green', a second Persian loan (sabz, the same root behind Hindi and Urdu's sabzī, 'vegetable') that sets beside* লাল's own Persian gem-name. The reader names all five colors — lāl, nīl, kālo, shādā, shôbuj — and sorts them by origin: two Persian loans, two Sanskrit words, and one worn down by sound change, a more even split between inherited and borrowed than food or family showed.*

23.1 লাল (lal) — "red," a gemstone's name first

> A new small set of words: not people, not verbs, not places, but the colors of the things around you — starting with the one Bengali did not invent for itself.

You'll want to know: লাল

লাল — lāl — red

লাল চা (lāl chā) — "red tea," the everyday way to ask for tea without milk.

The letters in this word

লাল is ল (lô) with the vowel sign া (ā), plus a second ল (l, silent at the end): lāl, one long vowel between two of the same consonant.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

লাল is a Persian loan, from Persian la'l, which named one specific thing first: a deep-red gemstone, a ruby or a spinel. Only later did the gem's name widen into the ordinary word for the color itself. Bengali did not build this word out of its own materials, and it did not borrow it alone — Hindi's own word for red is this identical Persian loan, carried into both languages by the same jewelers' trade routes rather than independently invented twice.

Your turn

- Say it: "lāl" — red
- Say it: "lāl chā" — tea without milk
- Say it: what it named first — "a ruby, not a color"
- Recall: say chokh
- Read it: মুখ
- Recall: say nāk

Before you move on

What did লাল originally name, before it meant "red"? (A deep red gemstone.) Did Bengali and Hindi each invent this word separately? (No — both borrowed the identical Persian loan.) One more reach: give the polite excuse-me again, and its softening tense. (maf korben — the future, "you will do.")

23.2 নীল (nil) — "blue," and a word that only looks like "indigo"

The last color was foreign, borrowed whole. This one is Sanskrit's own — and it comes with a famous false friend worth clearing up honestly.

You'll want to know: নীল

নীল — nīl — blue

নীল জল (nīl jôl) — blue water.

The letters in this word

নীল is ন (nô) with the vowel sign ী (a long ī, the same sound as the short ি but held longer), plus ল (l, silent at the end): nīl.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নীল is Sanskrit নীল (nīla), "dark blue" — also the name of the indigo plant and the dye made from it, the same root Hindi's own nīlā carries. One difference is worth stating plainly: Hindi's nīlā changes shape, nīlā/nīlī, for the noun it describes; নীল never does, one form whether the water, the sky, or the dress is blue.
Here is the honest, careful version of a famous connection. English "indigo" does not come from nīla by sound change. It comes from Greek indikón, "the Indian [thing]" and no more — because Greek and Roman traders imported the dye from India and named it for its source. Nīla and "indigo" are not the same word wearing two disguises; they are two separate words for the same dye, linked by the history of trade, not by descent from a shared root.

Your turn

- Say it: "nīl" — blue
- Say it: "nīl jôl" — blue water
- Say it: one form, always — "nīl," never nīlā or nīlī
- Read it: হৃদয়

Before you move on

Does নীল change shape for the noun it describes, the way Hindi's nīlā does? (No — one form, always.) Does English "indigo" come directly from নীল/nīla? (No — it is Greek indikón, "the Indian thing"; the two words are linked by trade, not by sound change.)

Give “welcome” once more. (স্বাগতম.)

23.3 কালো (kalo) — “black,” and a look-alike for “time”

Blue carried a false friend. This color has a look-alike too: the Sanskrit word for time, and for death, sounds the same.

You’ll want to know: কালো

কালো — kālo — black

কালো চা (kālo chā) — black tea.

The letters in this word

কালো is ক (kô) with the vowel sign া (ā), plus ল (l) with the vowel sign ো (o): kā-lo.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কালো comes from Sanskrit কাল (kāla), “black, dark” (CDIAL 3083), which CDIAL takes from a Dravidian word. Hindi’s kālā comes from the same word, and so does the name of the goddess Kālī, “the dark one.”
Sanskrit has a second কাল (kāla), “time,” and so “fate, death” (CDIAL 3084); as Time the destroyer it is linked with Yama, the god of death. CDIAL gives the two separate entries, and Monier-Williams lists them as two words. MW wonders whether “black” shares the root kal-, “to count,” of “time,” and marks the guess as uncertain. The dictionaries keep the two words apart.

Your turn

- Say it: “kālo” — black
- Say it: “kālo chā” — black tea
- Say it: the other কাল — “time,” a separate word
- Recall: say dukkhito

Before you move on

Say what the other Sanskrit কাল means. (Time — and so fate and death.) Then say whether it is the কাল in কালো. (No — CDIAL and MW list them as two words.)

23.4 সাদা (shada) — "white," the color where the cousins part ways

Every color so far has matched Hindi's, word for word. This one does not — and it is the more interesting choice for it.

You'll want to know: সাদা

সাদা — shādā — white

সাদা দুধ (shādā dudh) — white milk.

The letters in this word

সাদা is স (sô, carrying its familiar tilt to sh) with the vowel sign ◌া (ā), plus দ (dô) with the vowel sign ◌া (ā) again: shā-dā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সাদা is usually traced to Sanskrit śveta, "white," worn down through Middle Bengali into today's everyday word — a tadbhava, the same road মুখ's own twin travelled, only in reverse: here the tadbhava is the common word and the tatsama, śveto, survives kept whole inside compounds, like śvetāngo, "pale-skinned."
This is the one color where Bengali and Hindi genuinely part ways. Every other color word met so far — the borrowed gem-name, the indigo plant, the time-word — Bengali and Hindi share outright. For white, Hindi replaced its own Sanskrit-derived word with a Persian loan, safed. Bengali did not: it kept the native word as its everyday one, and the Persian loan never took hold here the way it did next door.

Your turn

- Say it: "shādā" — white

- Say it: "shādā dudh" — white milk
- Say it: the compound cousin — "śveto … śvetāngo"
- Read it: দয়া করে

Before you move on

Is সাদা a tatsama, kept whole, or a tadbhava, worn down by sound change? (A tadbhava — its tatsama twin, śveto, survives only in compounds, the same split মুখ's own twin showed.) Of the colors met so far, which one did Hindi replace with a Persian loan while Bengali kept the native word? (White — Hindi's safed against Bengali's সাদা.)

23.5 সবুজ (shobuj) — "green," and five colors, counted up

One color left, and it is a second loan from the same language that gave লাল its gem — but this time the loan travelled somewhere you already have a word for.

You'll want to know: সবুজ

সবুজ — shôbuj — green

সবুজ চা (shôbuj chā) — green tea.

The letters in this word

সবুজ is স (sô, tilted to sh, keeping its own inherent vowel since nothing joins it) plus ব (bô) with the vowel sign ু (u), plus জ (j, silent at the end): shô-bu-j.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সবুজ is borrowed from Persian sabz, "green" — the very same Persian word that gave Hindi and Urdu their word for "vegetable," sabzī, literally "the green things." লাল's own Persian gem-name arrived by the same route, from the same trading world, into a different corner of the vocabulary.

Step back and count the five colors this small set has taught: two Persian loans (লাল, সবুজ), two Sanskrit words kept recognizably close to their root (nil, কালো), and one worn down by sound change (সাদা). A more even split between inherited and borrowed than the food words or the family words showed — color, it turns out, came into Bengali from everywhere at once.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "shôbuj" — green
- "shôbuj chā" — green tea
- all five colors — "lāl, nīl, kālo, shādā, shôbuj"
- the two Persian loans, then the two Sanskrit words, then the one worn down — "lāl, shôbuj … nīl, kālo … shādā"

Before you move on

What Persian word gives both সবুজ and Hindi's word for "vegetable"? (sabz, "green" — Hindi's sabzī is literally "the green things.") Of the five colors, how many are Persian loans, how many are Sanskrit words, and how many are worn down by sound change? (Two, two, and one — লাল and সবুজ; nil and কালো; সাদা.) Name all five colors, in order. (লাল, nil, কালো, সাদা, সবুজ.)

Chapter 24

The Last Sign, and Six Words Back

Modes: ✓ pen (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read the colours and two of the numerals off the page, write the long-i sign that completes the script this book teaches, and say why every one of these words reached my ear before it reached my eye.
> One read as a vowel opening a word with no consonant to carry it, which finally makes visible the claim the numbers chapter could only assert; then twenty-six pieces and nineteen words counted back, all of them heard before they were seen.

24.1 লাল — red, and the day-word that runs both ways

Write ল once, then say where the tongue sits for it.

Script

ল + ◌া + ল → লাল

The same letter twice, with the mātrā between them. The first ল takes the sign and becomes lā; the second keeps its own inherent vowel, which at the end of a word is barely voiced at all. So the word comes out lāl — one syllable to an English ear, the colour red, the Persian gem-word from the chapter on colours.

Swap the first shape for ক and you get another word already in your mouth:

ক + া + ল → কাল

kāl — the word that means tomorrow and yesterday both, and which the farewell chapter used in kāl dækhā hôbe. Bengali does not think the two days need separate names; the distance from today is what the word records, and the direction comes from the verb.

Two words, three pieces each, one shape different between them. Reading is starting to be recombination rather than recognition.

Your turn

- Read it: লাল
- Read it: কাল
- Read it: আমি
- Write it: লাল

Before you move on

Why is the second ল in লাল not said lô? (Its inherent vowel is barely voiced at the end of a word.) And which two days does কাল cover? (Yesterday and tomorrow — both.)

24.2 কালো — black, read

Write ো, and name the two signs it is made of.

Script

ক + া + ল + ো → কালো

- ক with া after it — kā
- ল with ো around it — lo

kālo — black, the colour that is the same word as Sanskrit kāla, "time," and stands behind both Kālī and Yama.

This is the first word in the book with two different vowel signs on two consecutive letters, and it is the moment the eye has to stop scanning and start parsing. There are three marks after the first ক and only two of them belong together. Work it as the last lesson said: find the consonant, then look around it.

Set it beside the red from the last chapter and the two are nearly twins on the page:

লাল and কালো

Both open with a consonant plus ◌া; both close on ল. What separates them is which letter the ল is and what is hanging on it.

Your turn

- Read it: কালো
- Read it: লাল
- Read it: কেমন
- Write it: কালো

Before you move on

Which letter in কালো is wearing the o-sign? (The ল — the second one.) And what else does the same Sanskrit word behind it mean? (Time.)

24.3 সাদা — white, read

Write দ, and say what separates it from ত.

Script

স + ◌া + দ + ◌া → সাদা

Two consonants, each wearing the same mātrā. As plain a spelling as this book has shown.

shādā — white. And notice the first sound: the letter is the s-letter, and it is said sh. That was the news of the greeting back in the first script chapter, and it has not changed. In Bengali this letter is sh far more often than it is s, which is the second leg of the track's sound-fingerprint.

Three colours are now readable:

লাল lāl — red কালো kālo — black সাদা shādā — white

White is the one of the three where Bengali and Hindi went different ways: Hindi took a Persian loan for it and Bengali kept its own word, where for red both took the same Persian gem-name. A page of Bengali colour words is a small map of who borrowed what.

Your turn

- Read it: সাদা
- Read it: লাল কালো সাদা
- Write it: সাদা

Before you move on

The first letter of সাদা is written s. How is it said? (sh.) And which of the three colours is the one Bengali kept where Hindi borrowed? (সাদা — white.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

24.4 ী — the second i-sign

Read জল, then write ি and say which side it goes on.

Script

A second sign for i — and in modern Bengali speech it sounds exactly like the first one.

Sanskrit distinguished a short i from a long ī, and held words apart by that length alone. Bengali gave the distinction up. The two signs survive because the spellings survive: a word inherited from Sanskrit keeps whichever sign it always had, and the reader learns it word by word rather than by ear.

That is worth stating plainly rather than apologising for. A script records the history of a language as well as its present, and the cost of that is a handful of spellings a listener could never have guessed. English readers know the arrangement well — the k in know, the gh in night.

The two signs sit on opposite sides:

ি goes before its consonant ী goes after it, like া

So they are hard to confuse on the page even while being impossible to tell apart in the ear.

ন + ী → নী

Your turn

- Write it: ী
- Write it: নী
- Read it: জল

Before you move on

Do ি and ী sound different in Bengali today? (No.) Did they in Sanskrit? (Yes — short and long.) And which side does ী go on? (After its consonant.)

24.5 নীল — blue, read

Write ী, and say which side of its consonant it goes on.

Script

ন + ী + ল → নীল

nīl — blue, the colour from Sanskrit nīla, the dye that gave English indigo its trade and gave the Bengal countryside its indigo plantations.

The sign in the middle is the long one, and that is not a choice a speaker could make. Sanskrit nīla had a long ī, so Bengali writes ী — even though a Bengali speaker says it no differently from the short sign. The spelling is inherited, and the previous lesson's point is now something you have to act on rather than agree with.

Four colours are now readable:

লাল — red কালো — black সাদা — white নীল — blue

Of these, blue is the one whose spelling carries a fact about Sanskrit rather than about Bengali. Red is a Persian gem-name; black is the word for time; white is the homegrown one Hindi replaced. Four words, four different histories, and the page shows one of them.

Your turn

- Read it: নীল
- Read it: লাল কালো সাদা নীল
- Write it: নীল

Before you move on

Why does নীল take the long i-sign? (Because Sanskrit nīla had a long i.) Can a speaker hear the difference? (No.) And how many colours can you read now? (Four.)

24.6 তিন — three, read

Write ত, then write ি, and say which side of a consonant the second one goes on.

Script

ত + ি + ন → তিন

Read it the way the mouth needs it, not the way the eye meets it:

- ত — the dental t, tongue on the teeth
- ি — leaning on that ত from the left, heard after it
- ন — nô, its inherent vowel almost silent at the end

tin — three, counted since the numbers chapter.
The hook in front of ত is the same trap as আমি, and it will keep being the same trap until the hand has written it twenty times. On the page: hook, t, n. In the mouth: t, i, n.

This word is also about as old as words get. Sanskrit tri, Latin trēs, Greek treîs, English three — the numbers chapter set that out, and the point here is only that you can now meet it on a page in Kolkata instead of in a table.

Your turn

- Read it: তিন
- Read it: লাল
- Write it: তিন

Before you move on

In তিন, is the hook read before or after the ত? (After — it is only written before.) And what does the word mean? (Three.)

24.7 এক — one, and the words this reader can now take off a page

Write এ and ই, and say what decides when a vowel gets its own letter.

Script

এ + ক → এক

ek — one. Two pieces, and the first of them is a vowel standing on its own because a word cannot open on a sign.

The numbers chapter made a remark that could not be checked at the time: it said those five numerals were no good for showing off the inherent ô, because এক opens on an independent vowel. Here is what that meant. There is no consonant at the front of this word to carry a vowel, so there is no inherent vowel to hear. The claim is now something you can see rather than take on trust.

And তিন, read two lessons ago, is on the page too, so two of the five numerals are now shapes rather than sounds.

Count the whole holding. Twenty-six pieces, gathered nine, four, four, eight and one across five script chapters. And with them, nineteen words:

- নমস্কার the greeting · নাম name · তুমি you · আমি I · কেমন how
- আবার again · ভালো good · চা tea · জল water · দুধ milk
- পরিবার family · ভাই brother · মুখ mouth · লাল red · কালো black
- সাদা white · নীল blue · তিন three · এক one with নাক, কি, আসি, আমার and কাল riding along free.

Every one of them was in the mouth before it was on the page. That order was the whole design: hear a word, use it, and only then be shown what it looks like. A reader who had been handed the alphabet first would have spent twenty-six lessons decoding shapes that meant nothing yet. Every script chapter in this book sits between two chapters of speech for that reason.

Your turn

- Read it: মুখ লাল কালো সাদা নীল
- Read it: এক তিন
- Write it: এক
- Write it: এ ই আ ী ি া ে ো

Before you move on

Why is there no inherent vowel to hear at the start of এক? (It opens on an independent vowel, not a consonant.) How many pieces do you hold now? (Twenty-six.) How many words? (Nineteen.) And which came first for every one of them — the sound or the shape? (The sound.)

Chapter 25

Cloth, Shirt, Sari, and Glasses

Modes: 👁 eyes (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name cloth, a shirt, a sari and glasses in Bengali, and say which word English borrowed directly and which is built on the same Persian word already met for 'eye'.
> The chapter closes on চশমা, 'glasses', built on Persian chashm, 'eye' — the very word* চোখ's own lesson once named as its only cousin outside the family, here turned into 'eye-thing'. The reader names all four garments — kāpoṛ, jāmā, shāṛi, chôshmā — states that* শাড়ি reached English as a direct modern loanword rather than through a shared ancient root, and reaches back to rescue the dative construction and ভালোবাসা, unrevisited since they were taught.*

25.1 কাপড় (kapor) — "cloth," a word five languages share

Five colors named. Now the things they color, starting with the plainest word for cloth itself — and a sound you have not needed since the verb for reading.

You'll want to know: কাপড়

কাপড় — kāpoṛ — cloth, clothing

সাদা কাপড় (shādā kāpoṛ) — white cloth.

The letters in this word

কাপড় is ক (kô) with the vowel sign ◌া (ā), plus প (pô), plus ড় — the flapped letter, the same curled-tongue sound the reading verb needed, silent-final here: kā-po-ṛ.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কাপড় traces to Sanskrit karpaṭa, "rag, old cloth." Here the honesty runs deeper than usual: even Sanskrit's own dictionaries label karpaṭa a deśī word — homegrown vernacular vocabulary that was already sitting inside classical Sanskrit rather than inherited from any older reconstructed root. No further ancestor is claimed for it at all. What makes it worth teaching anyway is how far it travelled sideways: the identical word, worn down by the same kind of sound change, gives Hindi kapṛā, Marathi kapaḍā, Gujarati kapaḍũ, and Punjabi kapṛā — five Indo-Aryan languages sharing one root together, none of them borrowing from the others.

Your turn

- Say it: "kāpoṛ" — cloth
- Say it: "shādā kāpoṛ" — white cloth
- Say it: the flap, again — "poṛā … kāpoṛ"
- Say it: the family sharing this root — "kāpoṛ … kapṛā … kapaḍā"
- Recall: say maf korben
- Read it: স্বাগতম

Before you move on

Does কাপড়'s root, karpaṭa, trace back to a reconstructed PIE ancestor? (No — Sanskrit's own dictionaries call it a homegrown, deśī word.) Name two other Indo-Aryan languages that share this exact root. (Hindi's kapṛā, Marathi's *kapaḍā — or Gujarati's kapaḍũ, or Punjabi's kapṛā.)

25.2 জামা (jama) — "shirt," a third word from Persian

Cloth in general, now a specific garment — and Persian, again, supplies the word.

You'll want to know: জামা

জামা — jāmā — shirt

আমার জামা (āmār jāmā) — my shirt.

The letters in this word

জামা is জ (jô) with the vowel sign া (ā), plus ম (mô) with the vowel sign া (ā) again: jā-mā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

জামা is a Persian loan, jāma, "robe, garment" — carried into Hindi and Urdu as the identical word, jāmā. Count it up: of the clothing and color words in this small set, three now trace to Persian rather than Sanskrit — লাল, সবুজ, and জামা. Bengali's everyday wardrobe vocabulary leans on the same trading world its colors did.

Your turn

- Say it: "jāmā" — shirt
- Say it: "āmār jāmā" — my shirt
- Say it: the three Persian loans so far — "lāl … shôbuj … jāmā"
- Read it: লাল
- Recall: say nil
- Read it: কালো

Before you move on

Where does জামা come from? (Persian jāma, "robe, garment," the identical word Hindi and Urdu also use.) How many of this set's clothing and color words now trace to Persian? (Three — লাল, সবুজ, জামা.)

25.3 শাড়ি (shari) — "sari," a word English borrowed whole

Every English cousin this book has traced so far has been buried deep — a shared PIE root, worn down over thousands of years past recognizing. This word's road into English was much shorter.

You'll want to know: শাড়ি

শাড়ি — shāṛi — sari

লাল শাড়ি (lāl shāṛi) — a red sari.

The letters in this word

শাড়ি opens with শ — a second letter for an s-family sound, a different one from স. Sanskrit distinguished three of these (স, শ, and a third, ṣ); modern Bengali speech has merged them into one sound, but the spelling keeps them apart. Then া (ā), ড় (the flap you now know from কাপড়), and ি (i): shā-ṛi.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

শাড়ি traces to Sanskrit śāṭī, "a strip of cloth, a garment," worn down through Middle Indic সাড়ী (sāḍī) into Bengali and Hindi's shared śāṛī/sāṛī. Here is the unusual part: every English cousin this book has traced so far — heart, nose, bind, come — went underground for thousands of years, worn down by sound change on both ends until only a shared ancient root connects them. This word took a different road. It entered English directly, in the modern era, as an ordinary borrowed word: "sari." No PIE root, no centuries of drift — a garment's name, carried whole into another language's dictionary.

Your turn

- Say it: "shāṛi" — sari

- Say it: "lāl shāṛi" — a red sari
- Say it: the second s-letter — "শ, beside স"
- Say it: three garments so far — "kāpoṛ … jāmā … shāṛi"
- Recall: say shada
- Read it: সবুজ

Before you move on

How did শাড়ি reach English — through a shared ancient root, worn down over millennia, or as a direct modern loanword? (A direct loanword — "sari," borrowed whole, no PIE root involved.) How many distinct s-family letters did Sanskrit distinguish, now merged in Bengali speech? (Three — স, শ and ṣ.)

25.4 চশমা (choshma) — "glasses," built on an old cousin's name

Three garments named. This one closes the chapter by returning to the very body part the eye lesson once traced to a single named Persian cousin — and building something new out of it.

You'll want to know: চশমা

চশমা — chôshmā — glasses

আমার চশমা (āmār chôshmā) — my glasses.

The letters in this word

চশমা is spelled চ (chô) + শ (shô, the second s-letter শাড়ি introduced a moment ago) + ম (mô) + ◌া (ā) — four sounds by the spelling. Ordinary speech thins it to three: chôsh-mā, not chô-sho-mā — an everyday shortening this particular loanword has settled into.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চশমা is built on Persian chashm, "eye" — the exact word the eye lesson once named as চোখ's only named cousin outside the Indo-Aryan family, with no secure English descendant claimed for চোখ itself. চশমা takes that word and adds a suffix that turns "eye" into "eye-thing": spectacles, the thing that sits in front of your eyes. Bengali did not build this the way it built jijñāsā kôrā or সাহায্য করা, by hanging করা on a noun; it took a ready-made South Asian coinage on a Persian root, the same formation Hindi and Urdu also use.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "chôshmā" — glasses
- "āmār chôshmā" — my glasses
- the eye it is built on — "chashm … chôshmā"
- all four garments of this chapter — "kāpoṛ, jāmā, shāṛi, chôshmā"

Before you move on

What Persian word is চশমা built on, and where did this book meet it before? (Chashm, "eye" — named as চোখ's only cousin outside the family.) Say all five colors and all four garments this small set has now taught. (লাল, নীল, কালো, সাদা, সবুজ; কাপড়, জামা, শাড়ি, চশমা.) Two reaches further back, to close out: who is the subject of āmār bhālo lāge, "I like it"? (Not you — the good is, the same shape as āmār chôshmā, "to me, glasses.") And is āmi bhālobāsi, "I love," built the same inverted way? (No — loving takes you as subject; liking happens to you.)

Chapter 26

The Distant Band

Modes: ✓ pen (9) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can retrieve, with nothing uncovered, the words and letters this book taught between ninety-eight and a hundred and four lessons ago — and I can tell the difference between a word I have lost and a word I now know to go back for.
> Four chapter-closing practice lessons, untouched for the length of a whole book, are answered in one sitting; nothing in the chapter is new, and that is the measurement.

26.1 তুমি, at the far end

> Before anything is uncovered: say you to a friend, you to a stranger, and what.

Your turn — the distant band

This chapter has one job, and it is not to teach you anything.

Everything asked for here was first taught between a hundred and a hundred and four lessons ago. That distance is deliberate. A thing recalled after a day is being remembered; a thing recalled after a hundred lessons is being owned, and the only way to find out which you have is to reach that far and see what comes back.

Nothing new arrives in this chapter. If a word does not come, do not treat that as a failure — treat it as the measurement working.

Say these aloud:

- you, to a friend — tumi
- you, to someone you have only now met — āpni
- what — ki
- the whole question, "what's your name?" — tomār nām ki?
- the same question, respectfully — āpnār nām ki?

Three of those five you have not been asked for in eighty lessons.

Writing — from sound

Cover every Bengali model in this book. Write tumi from the sound alone, then write the vowel ই standing on its own.

Write these out:

- তুমি
- ই

Before you move on

Which sign in তুমি hangs below the line? (ু.) And which "you" would you use with a shopkeeper you do not know? (আপনি.)

26.2 নাম, and two pieces from the signs chapter

Say name, then my, then put them together.

Your turn — the distant band

Say these aloud:

- name — nām
- my — āmār
- "my name is —" with your own name in it
- what Bengali does not put in that sentence (no "is")

The missing verb is the part that decays first, because English keeps insisting it belongs there. Say the sentence once more without it.

Writing — from sound

Cover every model. Write the dental consonant, then the sign that hangs beneath a letter, then the word for name.

Write these out:

- ত
- ু
- নাম

Before you move on

Is Bengali's ত made at the teeth or behind them? (At the teeth.) And how many pieces are in নাম? (Three.)

26.3 য, and the thanks it hides in

> Say thank you, and then the thing a Bengali speaker is more likely to say instead of it.

Your turn — the distant band

Say these aloud:

- thank you — dhônyobad
- "it's no matter / you're welcome" — kono bæpār nā
- what য sounds like standing alone (j)
- what it sounds like hung under another letter (nothing — it bends the vowel to æ)

Both of the words above carry that hung য, and it is the same job in each: the ny in dhônyobad and the byæ in bæpār. Two words from two different chapters, one piece of machinery.

Writing — from sound

Cover every model. Write the letter that is written y and said j, then the mark that kills an inherent vowel, then hang the first under a হ.

Write these out:

- য
- ্
- হ্য

Before you move on

What is the scribes' name for a য hung below? (jô-phôla.) And what does ্ do? (Deletes the inherent vowel.)

26.4 ঁ, from above the line

Say yes and no.

Your turn — the distant band

Say these aloud:

- yes — hyã, through the nose
- no — nā, not through the nose
- the number five — pā̃ch, and notice the same nasal
- where on the line the mark that writes it sits (above)

Three words in this whole book carry that crescent, and they are spread across three chapters. That is exactly the shape of thing a reader loses: rare enough to go, common enough to matter.

Say hyã and nā one after another until the difference is in the nose and not in the effort.

Writing — from sound

Cover every model. Write the crescent-with-a-dot, then put it on না.

Write these out:

- ঁ
- নাঁ

Before you move on

Is ঁ a consonant? (No.) What does it change? (The vowel — it goes through the nose.) And is it the only mark above the head-line? (Yes.)

26.5 হ্যাঁ and নমস্কার, side by side

Say the greeting, with the hands.

Your turn — the distant band

Say these aloud:

- hello, and goodbye, with one word — nômoshkar
- yes — hyã
- how many pieces are in each (seven, and five)

These two words are the bookends of the reading strand. The greeting was the first thing you could decode and it took nine lessons of letters to earn. Yes came three chapters later and cost three.

The difference is not that the second word is simpler. It is that by the time it arrived you already owned four of its five pieces — which is the argument for buying letters early and spending them often, made in two words.

Writing — from sound

Cover every model. Write yes, then the breath-letter alone, then the last consonant of the greeting.

Write these out:

- হ্যাঁ
- হ
- র

Before you move on

Which piece of হ্যাঁ makes no sound? (য.) And which word took nine lessons to become readable? (নমস্কার.)

26.6 আমি, and the sentence that can drop it

Say I.

Your turn — the distant band

Say these aloud:

- I — āmi
- "my name is —"
- "pleased to meet you" — ālāp kore bhālo lāglo
- "I am well" without the pronoun (bhālo āchhi)

That last one is the test. The pronoun is carried by the ি on the end of the verb, so a speaker who drops আমি loses nothing at all — and a learner who cannot drop it is still translating rather than speaking.

Say the polite formula once more, whole, at speed. It is the longest thing this book asks anyone to say from memory.

Writing — from sound

Cover every model. Write I from the sound alone.

- Write it: আমি

Before you move on

Which piece of the verb carries "I"? (The ি ending.) So is আমি required? (No — it is emphasis.)

26.7 কেমন, and the whole exchange

Say how.

Your turn — the distant band

Say these aloud:

- how — kēmon
- "how are you?" to a friend — tumi kēmon āchho?
- the same to a stranger — āpni kēmon āchhen?
- "okay / I see / go on" — āchchhā

Two of those four change one ending and nothing else. If the respectful form did not come, it is because the familiar one is the one you have practised, and a question you can only ask a friend is half a question.

Run the exchange with yourself, both sides, twice.

Writing — from sound

Cover every model. Write how from the sound alone.

- Write it: কেমন

Before you move on

What changes between āchho and āchhen? (Only the ending — who you are speaking to.) And which sign in কেমন goes in front of its consonant? (ে.)

26.8 ভালো, and the reply it lives in Say good.

Your turn — the distant band

Say these aloud:

- good, well — bhālo
- "I am well" — āmi bhālo āchhi
- the goodbye that literally means "I'll come again" — āshi
- why a Bengali speaker prefers that goodbye (it promises a return)

ভালো has appeared in more lessons than any other word in this book, which makes it the fair test in the other direction: not "did a rare thing survive?" but "did constant exposure actually put a thing where you can get at it?"

If it came back instantly, that is a result worth having. Frequency is supposed to do that, and it is worth knowing when it worked.

Writing — from sound

Cover every model. Write good, then am, then the two together with I in front.

Write these out:

- ভালো
- আছি
- আমি ভালো আছি

Before you move on

Which sign wraps around the ল in ভালো? (ো, on both sides.) And what does āshi literally promise? (That you will come again.)

26.9 The band closed

Greet someone, introduce yourself, and say goodbye — all before anything is uncovered.

Your turn — the near edge of the band

Four chapters of this book ended in a practice lesson, and each of those lessons has been sitting untouched for the length of a whole book. Answer all four now, in order, out loud:

Say these aloud:

- the five greeting words — nômoshkar, dhônyobad, hyã / nā, āchchhā, āshi
- the introduction exchange, both halves
- the how-are-you exchange, both halves
- the two farewells — ābār dækhā hôbe, kāl dækhā hôbe

That is the whole speaking spine of the book in four breaths.

Now the thing worth saying plainly about this chapter. Nothing in it was new. Every item was first taught between ninety-eight and a hundred and four lessons ago, and the reason to gather them here rather than to press on is that a curriculum that only ever adds is not teaching, it is delivering. What you could still reach for today is what you actually have.

Anything that did not come back is not lost. It is located.

Writing — from sound

Cover every model in the book. Write I, then the consonant that was read beside it.

Write these out:

- আমি
- ল

Before you move on

How many new things did this chapter teach? (None.) How far back did it reach? (About a hundred lessons.) And is a word you could not retrieve today a word you have lost? (No — it is a word you now know to go back for.)

Chapter 27

Three Ways to Say No

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can deny any sentence this book has taught me — one negator for a sentence with a verb, one for a sentence without, one for a thing that is not there — and I can turn every one of them into a yes-or-no question without moving a word.
> Three negators and one question shape, run against frames the book has been teaching since chapter three: the name frame denied with নয়, the verb denied with না, the missing thing denied with নেই*, and each of the three asked back with a rising voice.*

27.1 না (nā) — the word that goes after

> The first chapter of this book taught না as an answer, and twenty-six chapters have gone by without it doing anything else. It is about to do the largest job in the language.

- Recall: two chapters back, the cloth word — kāpoṛ

You'll want to know: না after the verb

> আমি জানি না — āmi jāni nā — I do not know.
> আমি ভাত খাই না — āmi bhāt khāi nā — I do not eat rice.

Take any sentence in this book, keep every word exactly where it stands, and put না at the end. That is the whole operation. English drops not in front of the verb and rebuilds the sentence around it — I know becomes I do not know, with a do that came from nowhere. Bengali adds one syllable and moves nothing.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

না is one of the oldest words a reader of English owns. Sanskrit na, Latin ne-, Greek nē-, Old English ne: it is the syllable behind no, not, never, none and nay. Chapter five already handed it over inside কোনো ব্যাপার না (kono bæpār nā), "no matter" — a whole phrase ending in the negator, exactly where this lesson puts it.
One sentence this book cannot yet print is āmi bujhi nā, "I do not understand" — the most useful sentence a beginner can carry. The verb is taught, in chapter fourteen; the letter in the middle of it is not, so the words stay in romanization until a script lesson pays for that letter.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āmi jāni — then again with the negator — āmi jāni nā
- āmi bānglā bôli nā
- āmi khāi nā — I do not eat
- the sentence in romanization — āmi bujhi nā

Before you move on

Where in the sentence does না stand? (After the verb, at the end — nothing else moves.) What did chapter one teach it as? (The answer "no" — one word doing two jobs.) And what does English have to borrow to negate I know? (A verb do that means nothing — Bengali borrows nothing.)

27.2 নয় (nôy) — denying a sentence with no verb in it

The lesson before this one put না after a verb. Now try it on আমার নাম রাম — and notice there is no verb there to put anything after.

- Recall: two chapters back, the shirt word — jāmā

You'll want to know: নয়

আমার নাম রাম নয় — āmār nām rām nôy — my name is not Ram.

আমি ভালো নই — āmi bhālo nôi — I am not well.

Chapter three taught the frame আমার নাম ... and said plainly that it carries no word for is. Bengali leaves the present-tense is out. To deny that sentence you cannot negate a verb that was never said, so the language supplies one, and it supplies it only here: নয়.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নয় begins with the negator na, "not" (CDIAL 6906); CDIAL has no entry for the whole word, so how its ending formed is not settled.

Grammar Lens: the form follows the person about	say

me	নই (nôi)
you, or anybody else	নয় (nôy)

That is the whole paradigm a beginner needs. আমি ভালো নই denies your own state; রাম ভালো নয় denies somebody else's. Notice what the affirmative looks like beside it: আমি ভালো is a complete Bengali sentence with no verb at all. The copula in this language is a ghost — it is audible only when you refuse it.

The letters in this word

নয় ends in য়, which is য wearing the dot chapter ten taught. Without the dot the letter says j; with it, a glide, so the word is nôy and not

nôj. The dot is doing exactly the job that lesson gave it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āmār nām rām nôy
- āmi bhālo nôi — then the affirmative it denies, āmi bhālo
- the verb kind beside the verbless kind — āmi jāni nā … āmi bhālo nôi

Before you move on

Which negator does a sentence with a verb take, and which does a sentence without one? (না after the verb; নয় when there is none.) Which form goes with আমি? (নই.) And where is the is in আমি ভালো? (Nowhere — it exists only to be denied.)

27.3 নেই (nei) — the third negator, for things that are not there

Two negators so far: one after a verb, one for a sentence with no verb. A third is coming, and it exists because Bengali refuses to build this one out of the first two.

- Recall: two chapters back, the woven strip of cloth — shāṛi

You'll want to know: নেই

আমার চা নেই — āmār chā nei — I have no tea.

আমার ভাই নেই — āmār bhāi nei — I have no brother.

Chapter five taught আমি ভালো আছি, "I am well," on the stem আছ-, which means to be present. নেই is that stem's denial, and it comes as a single word rather than as আছি না, which no Bengali says.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নেই is a worn form of nāi: the negator na, "not" (CDIAL 6906), fused with the verb of being; CDIAL has no entry for the whole, so the details are not settled.

Grammar Lens: having, in a language with no verb for it

Bengali has no verb to have. It says of-me tea is-present, using the same আমার chapter three taught for my. So আমার চা নেই is literally of me, tea is not present — and the same shape covers I have no tea and there is no tea of mine, because in Bengali those were never different sentences.
নেই does not change for the person. আমার নেই, তোমার নেই: one form for everybody, which makes it the easiest of the three negators and the one a traveller reaches for first.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āmār chā nei
- āmār jôl nei — I have no water
- all three in a row — jāni nā … bhālo nôi … chā nei

Before you move on

Which stem is নেই the denial of? (আছ-, the being present stem behind আছি.) Why is there no আছি না? (Because the negator and the stem fused into one word long ago.) And how does Bengali say I have? (With আমার — of me, and no verb to have at all.)

27.4 তুমি ভালো? — a question with nothing added

Three chapters have taught you how to say হ্যাঁ and না to a question nobody in this book has been able to ask.

- Recall: two chapters back, the eye-thing — chôshmā

You'll want to know: the rising voice

তুমি ভালো — tumi bhālo. — you are well.

তুমি ভালো? — tumi bhālo? — are you well?

Those are the same four syllables in the same order. The only difference is that the second one ends higher than it began. English rebuilds the sentence — you are becomes are you — and Bengali does not touch it.

Grammar Lens: what the rise turns into a question

Every frame in this book can now be asked as well as said, at no cost:

said	asked
আমার চা নেই	তোমার চা নেই?
তুমি ভাত খাও	তুমি ভাত খাও?

A negative asked this way is the ordinary way to check something you suspect: তোমার চা নেই? — you have no tea? And the answer is one of the two words chapter one taught.

Bengali also has a written question particle, কি, which chapter three taught as the word for what. In a yes-or-no question it does the job the rising voice does in speech. The voice is what a speaker needs first.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tumi bhālo. flat — then tumi bhālo? rising
- tomār chā nei? — and answer it hyã or nā
- āpni bhālo? — the respectful one

Before you move on

What moves when a Bengali statement becomes a yes-or-no question? (Nothing — only the pitch at the end.) What does English have to move? (The verb, in front of the subject.) And which two words answer it? (হ্যাঁ and না, from the first chapter.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

27.5 Three ways to say no, and one way to ask

Three negators arrived in this chapter and each one owns a different kind of sentence. Name them in the order you met them, and name what each one denies.

Your turn

- Say it: the sentence with a verb — āmi jāni nā
- Say it: the sentence with none — āmār nām rām nôy
- Say it: the thing that is missing — āmār chā nei
- Say it: each of those three again with a rising end, and hear a question
- Recall: the sentence chapter eleven taught, then deny it — āmi bānglā bôli nā

Before you move on

Which negator would you use to deny আমার নাম রাম, which for আমি জানি, and which for আমার চা আছে? (নয়, then না, then নেই.) What has to change to turn any of the three into a question? (The pitch at the end, and nothing else.)

Chapter 28

Two Things at Once

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can put two nouns in one sentence with আর, mark either of them with -ও, offer a choice between them with বা, and refuse both with না … না.
> The colours, foods and family words of eleven earlier chapters, joined two at a time for the first time: added with আর*, marked with* -ও*, offered with* বা, and refused with না … না.

28.1 আর (ār) — and

The chapter before this one gave you three ways to deny a sentence. This chapter gives you the first way to make a sentence longer than one idea.

- Recall: the missing-thing negator — nei
- Recall: five chapters back, the first two colours — lāl, nīl

You'll want to know: আর

চা আর দুধ — chā ār dudh — tea and milk.

আমার চা আর জল নেই — āmār chā ār jôl nei. — I have no tea and no water.

This book has taught four foods, four garments, five colours, four family words and four parts of the body — a hundred and thirty-nine lessons of nouns that could only ever be named one at a time. আর is the word that ends that.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আর comes from Sanskrit apara, "the other one, the further one" — so the joining sense grew out of a counting sense, one more. It still carries that older meaning when it stands in front of a noun on its own: আর চা, more tea. Chapter seven's আবার (ābār, "again") is built on the same idea of one more time, which is why the two words sound like relatives. They are.
Bengali also writes ebông for and in formal prose. It joins clauses more than nouns, and it needs a letter this book has not taught yet, so it is named here in romanization — ebông — and left for the script chapters.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chā ār dudh
- jôl ār bhāt — water and rice
- lāl ār nīl — red and blue
- āmār chā ār jôl nei

Before you move on

What did আর mean before it meant and? (More, the other one — Sanskrit apara.) Which word taught in chapter seven is its relative? (আবার, again — one more time.) And what happens to a negator when two nouns are joined? (Nothing — it still sits at the end.)

28.2 -ও (-o) — the joiner that is one vowel long

The lesson before this taught আর, which stands between two things. This one goes on the end of one thing, and means much the same.

- Recall: the letter chapter ten taught standing alone — ও

You'll want to know: -ও

আমিও — āmi-o — me too.

আমিও ভালো — āmi-o bhālo. — I am well too.

-ও never stands by itself. It is written onto the back of the word it attaches to, and it means that one as well. Where আর joins two nouns from between them, -ও marks each of them from behind: ভাই আর বোন is brother and sister; ভাইও বোনও is the brother as well, and the sister as well.

Grammar Lens: the smallest word does the most work

Attaching -ও to a different word moves the emphasis without moving a syllable of the sentence:

said	means
আমিও ভালো	I too am well — somebody else is as well
আমি ভালোও	I am well as well as whatever else I am

English has to say too at the end and hope, or move the stress with the voice. Bengali puts the mark exactly on the word it belongs to. This is Sanskrit api, "also" — the particle Hindi still says whole as bhī.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āmi-o — me too
- āmi-o bhālo
- the pair joined both ways — bhāi ār bon, then bhāi-o bon-o

Before you move on

Where does -ও stand, and where does আর stand? (-ও on the back of a word; আর between two of them.) Can -ও be said on its own? (No — it has no life apart from the word it rides.) Which Hindi word is its cousin? (bhī, from the same Sanskrit api.)

28.3 বা (bā) — or

> Two joiners so far, and both of them add. Name them, and say which one stands between and which one hangs off the back.

You'll want to know: বা

চা বা দুধ — chā bā dudh — tea or milk.

চা বা দুধ? — chā bā dudh? — tea or milk?

Until this lesson nothing in this book could offer anybody a choice. আর gives them both; বা makes them pick. It sits exactly where আর sits, between the two things, and nothing else in the sentence changes.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বা is Sanskrit vā, and it is one of the oldest unchanged words in this book: the same particle survives at the end of Latin sīve ("or if") and neve ("nor"). Four thousand years and one syllable.
Put it inside the rising question this chapter's neighbour taught and you have the whole shape of an offer: two nouns, বা between them, and a voice that goes up at the end. That is how tea gets poured.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chā bā dudh
- the same pair joined instead of split — chā ār dudh
- bhāt bā jôl — rice or water
- it as an offer, with the voice rising — chā bā dudh?

Before you move on

Which joiner adds and which one chooses? (আর adds; বা chooses.) Where does বা stand? (Between the two things, exactly where আর does.) And what turns an offer into a question? (The rising voice — nothing is added.)

28.4 না ... না ... — neither, nor

Chapter twenty-seven was firm about this: না goes after. There is exactly one construction in which it goes first, and it is the one that denies both halves of a choice.

- Recall: the word that offers the choice — bā

You'll want to know: না ... না ...

না চা, না দুধ — nā chā, nā dudh — neither tea nor milk.

আমার না চা আছে, না দুধ — āmār nā chā āchhe, nā dudh — I have neither tea nor milk.

One না in front of each thing refused. The pattern is the mirror image of আর: where and stood once, between two nouns, neither stands twice, before each of them.

Grammar Lens: three ways to refuse two things

shape	how it refuses
আমার চা আর দুধ নেই	one negator at the end covers both
চা-ও নেই, দুধ-ও নেই	each thing marked with -ও, each denied
না চা, না দুধ	the flat refusal, and the emphatic one

All three are correct Bengali. The first is what you say without thinking about it; the third is what you say when you want the refusal heard.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nā chā, nā dudh
- the same refusal the ordinary way — āmār chā ār dudh nei
- the marked way — chā-o nei, dudh-o nei

Before you move on

Where does না stand in an ordinary negative sentence, and where in this one? (After the verb ordinarily; in front of each refused thing here.) Which joiner does the pattern mirror? (আর, one and between two becoming one no before each.)

28.5 Two things at once

Three joiners landed in this chapter. Name them, and say for each one whether it adds, marks, or chooses.

Your turn

- Say it: two colours joined — kālo ār shādā
- Say it: the same two as a choice — kālo bā shādā
- Say it: yourself added to somebody — āmi-o
- Say it: both refused — nā kālo, nā shādā
- Recall: five lessons back, the negator for a verbless sentence — nôy

Before you move on

Which joiner turns a statement into an offer once the voice rises? (বা — two things and a choice between them.) How many না does a double refusal need, and where do they go? (Two, one in front of each thing.) And which of this chapter's joiners cannot stand on its own? (-ও.)

Chapter 29

Agreeing, Differing, and Saying Why

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can agree with somebody and disagree with them, turn a second clause against the first with কিন্তু, and give a reason for either with কেননা.
> The first three-clause sentence in the track: a position, an objection to it, and a reason for the objection, built from কিন্তু, একমত and কেননা over the negators and joiners of the two chapters before.

29.1 কিন্তু (kintu) — but

The chapter before this joined things and offered a choice between them. Neither joiner can disagree with anything.

- Recall: the two joiners of the last chapter — ār, bā

You'll want to know: কিন্তু

> আমি ভালো, কিন্তু আমার চা নেই — āmi bhālo, kintu āmār chā nei — I am well, but I have no tea.

আর puts two things on the same side. কিন্তু puts the second one against the first. It stands at the head of the clause it turns, after a comma in writing and after a small drop of the voice in speech.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কিন্তু is Sanskrit kim-tu, and both halves are recoverable. Kim is "what" — the same ancient word standing behind কি, which chapter three taught. Tu is an old particle meaning "however". So but in Bengali is literally what-however, a shrug frozen into a conjunction. Look: at the middle of the written word. ন্ত is ন and ত fused by the mark chapter two taught for deleting the inherent vowel. Two letters, one shape, and no new letter to learn.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āmi bhālo, kintu āmār chā nei
- the same two clauses with the other joiner — āmi bhālo ār āmār chā nei
- and hear what changed — the second one no longer argues

Before you move on

What are the two Sanskrit pieces inside কিন্তু ? (Kim, "what", and tu, "however".) Which word taught in chapter three is built on the first of them? (কি.) And what does কিন্তু do that আর cannot? (Turn the second clause against the first.)

29.2 একমত (ekmôt) — of one mind

আচ্ছা has been in this book since chapter one and it says I see. It does not say I agree, and nothing else here does either.

- Recall: the word that turns a clause against the one before it — kintu

You'll want to know: একমত

আমি একমত — āmi ekmôt — I agree.

আমি একমত নই — āmi ekmôt nôi — I do not agree.

The word is two words: এক, "one", which chapter twelve counted, and মত, "opinion". Of one mind. English builds the same picture out of Latin when it says unanimous — ūnus animus, one spirit.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Ek goes back to Sanskrit ēka, "one" (CDIAL 2462), and môt is Sanskrit mata, "opinion", taken over whole as a tatsama.

Grammar Lens: agreeing needs no verb, and disagreeing needs no new word

আমি একমত has no verb in it, like আমি ভালো before it — so it is denied the same way, with নই. The whole of agreement and disagreement in Bengali is now two words the reader already owns arranged in two orders.
Put কিন্তু in front and you have the shape every conversation turns on: আমি একমত, কিন্তু ... — I agree, but …

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āmi ekmôt
- āmi ekmôt nôi
- the polite half-agreement — āmi ekmôt, kintu …
- the one-word answers it can replace — hyã … nā

Before you move on

What are the two pieces of একমত? (Ek, one, and môt, opinion.) Which negator denies it, and why that one? (নই — the sentence has no verb to put না after.) And which English word is built the same way out of Latin? (Unanimous.)

29.3 কেননা (kenonā) — because

Two lessons ago you could contradict somebody, and one lesson ago you could agree with them. Neither lets you say why.

- Recall: the two items before this one — kintu, ekmôt

You'll want to know: কেননা

আমি একমত নই, কেননা আমার চা নেই — āmi ekmôt nôi, kenonā āmār chā nei — I do not agree, because I have no tea.

কেননা stands at the head of the reason, the way কিন্তু stands at the head of the objection. The order is fixed: the claim first, the reason after it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Pull কেননা apart and the negator of chapter twenty-seven falls out of it: কেন ("why") plus না ("not"). Bengali's word for because is a rhetorical question worn smooth — why not? — which is the same move English made in forasmuch as and inasmuch as before those went out of use.
Bengali writes another word here in everyday speech, kāraṇ, from Sanskrit kāraṇa, "cause". It is the commoner of the two and it needs a letter this book has not taught, so it is named in romanization and left for a script lesson. কেননা costs no new letters at all — every piece of it is already yours.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āmi ekmôt nôi, kenonā āmār chā nei
- the two halves the word is made of — kænô … nā
- an objection and then a reason — kintu … kenonā …
- āmi jāni nā, kenonā āmi bhābi nā

Before you move on

What two words is কেননা built from? (কেন, why, and না, not.) Which comes first, the claim or the reason? (The claim — the reason follows it.) And which word does the same job at the head of an objection? (কিন্তু.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

29.4 Agreeing, differing, and saying why

Three items landed in this chapter, and between them they cover objecting, agreeing and explaining. Name all three.

Your turn

- Say it: āmi ekmôt — then deny it, āmi ekmôt nôi
- Say it: the three-clause sentence — āmi ekmôt, kintu āmār chā nei, kenonā āmār dudh-o nei
- Recall: eight lessons back, the joiner that offers a choice — bā
- Recall: eleven lessons back, the negator of a verbless sentence — nôy

Before you move on

Which of this chapter's three words heads an objection, and which heads a reason? (কিন্তু the objection; কেননা the reason.) What is inside কেননা that chapter twenty-seven taught? (না.) And what would make the whole three-clause sentence a question? (A rising voice at the end, and nothing else.)

Chapter 30

When You Are Lost

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can report what I think with যে, put one event beside another in time with যখন … তখন, and ask somebody to say it again, slowly, when I have not followed.
> A learner who has stopped following says so and gets the sentence back: I do not understand, say it again, slowly — assembled out of না from chapter twenty-seven and two words the book taught in chapters seven and eleven — and then reports an opinion with যে and places it in time with যখন … তখন*.*

30.1 যে (je) — that

ভাবা, "to think", has been in this book since chapter fourteen, and in all that time nobody has been able to say what they think.

- Recall: two items back, the word that heads a reason — kenonā

You'll want to know: যে

আমি ভাবি যে চা ভালো — āmi bhābi je chā bhālo — I think that tea is good.

আমি জানি যে তুমি ভালো — āmi jāni je tumi bhālo — I know that you are well.

যে does one job: it takes a whole sentence and turns it into the object of a verb of thinking, knowing or saying. Everything before it is the frame; everything after it is the thought, unchanged, in the order it would have had standing alone.

Grammar Lens: what English drops and Bengali keeps

English can leave that out — I think tea is good is ordinary English. Bengali speech drops যে too, and Bengali writing keeps it. A learner should say it: the sentence is easier to hear coming when the joint is marked.
The word is the Sanskrit relative stem ya-, an inheritance shared with Latin qui and English who. That is why the same syllable will later introduce a relative clause as well — one word, two jobs, and this lesson teaches the simpler one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āmi bhābi je chā bhālo
- āmi jāni je tumi bhālo
- an opinion, then an objection to it — āmi bhābi je chā bhālo, kintu dudh nôy

Before you move on

What does যে attach to the verb in front of it? (A whole sentence, as its object.) Does the sentence after it change shape? (No — it stands exactly as it would alone.) And which verb, taught in chapter fourteen, has been waiting for this word? (ভাবা, to think.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

30.2 যখন (jôkhon) — when

The lesson before this took the relative stem য and hung a sentence off a verb with it. The same stem, with an ending, hangs a sentence off a moment.

- Recall: the complementiser from the lesson before — je

You'll want to know: যখন

> যখন আমি আসি, তখন চা খাই — jôkhon āmi āshi, tôkhon chā khāi — when I come, then I drink tea.

Bengali does not leave the pair half-finished the way English does. যখন opens the clause and তখন answers it, and a fluent speaker says both. English would say when I come, I drink tea and let the then be understood; Bengali puts it in.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

যখন is the relative stem ja- on -khôn, "moment": CDIAL lists তখন under Sanskrit tatkṣaṇa, "that very moment", with jakhan, "when", built the same way (CDIAL 5640).

Grammar Lens: one frame, three prefixes

word	prefix	job
যখন	য-, the relative	when … (opens a clause)
তখন	ত-, the demonstrative	then (answers it)
কখন	ক-, the interrogative	when? (asks)

One ending, three heads. The same three letters begin যে (relative), তুমি (demonstrative in origin) and কি and কেমন (interrogative) — which is to say the reader has been meeting this pattern since chapter three without being shown it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- jôkhon āmi āshi, tôkhon chā khāi
- the pair on its own — jôkhon … tôkhon
- a reason and a time in one breath — kenonā jôkhon āmi jāi …

Before you move on

Which word answers যখন, and does a Bengali speaker leave it out? (তখন, and no — both halves get said.) What do যখন, তখন and কখন share? (One ending, with the relative, demonstrative and interrogative heads in front of it.) And which word from the previous lesson shares the first of those heads? (যে.)

30.3 আবার বলবেন — say it again

আবার was taught in chapter seven and বলা in chapter eleven. Nineteen chapters later they have never stood next to each other, and the sentence they make is the one a beginner needs more than any other.

- Recall: two items back, the complementiser — je

You'll want to know: আবার বলবেন

আবার বলবেন — ābār bôlben — please say it again.

দয়া করে আবার বলবেন — doyā kore ābār bôlben — the same request, with please in front of it.

The ending is not new. Chapter twenty-two taught māf kôrben, "excuse me", and named -বেন as the polite ending that sounds like a future and works as a request. Put it on বলা and you have asked somebody to repeat themselves without learning a single new word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Bôlben is the polite form of bôlā, from bōll*, "speak", a form CDIAL reconstructs (CDIAL 9321); ābār has no CDIAL entry, so its origin is not settled.

Grammar Lens: the whole repair kit, in two sentences

A learner who is lost needs to say two things and no more: I do not understand and say it again. Chapter twenty-seven built the first out of না. This lesson builds the second out of two words from chapters seven and eleven. Neither needed new vocabulary; both needed somebody to put the pieces together.

দয়া করে goes in front when the request should be softer, exactly as chapter twenty-two taught it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ābār bôlben
- doyā kore ābār bôlben
- the pair a lost learner needs — āmi bujhi nā … ābār bôlben

Before you move on

Which ending makes this a polite request, and where was it taught? (-বেন, in chapter twenty-two, on māf kôrben.) How many new words does this sentence need? (None — both were already in the book.) And what goes in front to soften it? (দয়া করে.)

30.4 ধীরে (dhīre) — slowly

Asking somebody to repeat themselves only helps if they repeat themselves at a speed you can follow.

- Recall: the request from the lesson before — ābār bôlben

You'll want to know: ধীরে

ধীরে বলবেন — dhīre bôlben — please speak slowly.

ধীরে ধীরে বলবেন — dhīre dhīre bôlben — the same thing, said the way Bengali actually says it.

The doubling is not emphasis for a foreigner's benefit. Bengali turns an adverb up by repeating it, and ধীরে ধীরে is the ordinary form of this word in speech; the single ধীরে is what a dictionary lists.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ধীরে is Sanskrit dhīra, which meant steady, composed, deliberate long before it meant slow. The word is about the manner of a person, and only then about the speed of a thing — which is why asking somebody to speak dhīre is a gentler request than asking them to speak slowly in English.
Its second letter carries the long i-sign chapter twenty-four taught on নীল. Four pieces, all of them already read.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dhīre bôlben
- the doubled form — dhīre dhīre bôlben
- the whole repair kit — āmi bujhi nā … ābār bôlben … dhīre dhīre

Before you move on

What did ধীরে mean in Sanskrit before it meant slowly? (Steady, composed — a word about a person.) Why do Bengali speakers say it twice? (Doubling is how the language intensifies an adverb.) And which sign sits on its second letter? (The long *ি, from নীল.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

30.5 ধীরে — the word you will need most

> Someone is speaking faster than you can follow. One word, and it is usually said twice.

You'll want to know: said twice, and that is the idiom

ধীরে — slowly. On its own it is an ordinary adverb. Doubled, ধীরে ধীরে, it is the everyday way to ask for it: Bengali repeats a word to soften and to spread it out, and a single ধীরে can sound like an instruction where the doubled one sounds like a request.

It is half of the repair kit. The other half asks someone to say it again; this half asks them to say it at a speed you can follow, and of the two it is the one a beginner reaches for more often.

Read this

পড়া · হৃদয়

Both were taught once and read once. Say each aloud, then say what makes the second one harder than the first: হৃদয় carries ৃ, a sign for a vowel that used to be an r, and nothing else in the word warns you it is coming.

Before you move on

How do you ask someone to slow down? (ধীরে ধীরে — doubled.) What does the doubling do? (Softens it into a request.) Which of the two words above needs ৃ? (হৃদয়.) And what did that sign once write? (An *r.)

30.6 When you are lost

Four items landed in this chapter. Two of them join clauses and two of them rescue a conversation. Name all four.

Your turn

- Say it: an opinion — āmi bhābi je chā bhālo
- Say it: a time — jôkhon āmi āshi, tôkhon chā khāi
- Say it: the repair kit in order — āmi bujhi nā … ābār bôlben … dhīre dhīre
- Recall: eight lessons back, the word that heads an objection — kintu
- Recall: fourteen lessons back, the joiner that adds — ār

Before you move on

Four chapters ago this book could not deny a sentence, join two nouns, give a reason or ask for a repeat. Say the sentence that agrees and then objects. (আমি একমত, কিন্তু ...) Say the one that reports a thought. (আমি ভাবি যে ...) And say the two sentences a lost learner needs. (āmi bujhi nā and আবার বলবেন.)

Chapter 31

The Letter in the Way

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say the shirt, a shirt and another shirt — because the letter ট finally exists and the classifier that does the work of the exists with it.
> Sixty nouns taught across chapters ten to fifteen — a pantry, a family, a face and a wardrobe — become pickable-out for the first time: the shirt, a shirt, another shirt, and the polite form for people.

31.1 ট — the fourth corner

Write ত, then দ, then ড. Say for each one where the tongue goes and whether the voice is on.

- Recall: two chapters back, the joiner that puts one event beside another — jôkhon

Script

ট

You have been carrying three corners of a square without being shown the square.

	voice off	voice on tongue on the teeth	ত tô	দ dô
tongue curled back	ট ṭô	ড ḍô

Two switches, four letters. ট is the one the book never filled in: the tongue curled back to the ridge, exactly where you put it for ড, and the voice switched off, exactly as you do for ত. If you can make the other three you can already make this one — you have never been asked to.

An English t lands between the two rows, which is the same trap দ and ড set. To an English ear ত and ট are one letter. They are not, and they spell different words.

With the mātrā:

ট + া → টা

Hold on to that syllable. It is the shape of the next four lessons, and it is the reason this letter could not wait any longer.

Your turn

- Write it: ট
- Write it: টা
- Say it: ত then ট — teeth, then curled back, voice off for both
- Say it: ট then ড — curled back for both, voice off then on
- Write it: ত ট দ ড

Before you move on

Which two switches make the square? (Where the tongue is, and whether the voice is on.) Which letter is ট with the voice switched on? (ড.) And which is it with the tongue brought forward onto the teeth? (ত.)

31.2 টা (-ṭā) — the ending that means “the”

Write it: the letter from the lesson before, then the same letter with the mātrā

Then say জামা.

You'll want to know: টা

জামা — jāmā — shirt.

জামাটা — jāmāṭā — the shirt.

চা — chā — tea.

চাটা — chāṭā — the tea.

Bengali has no word for the. Thirty chapters of this book have taught nouns that float free — shirt, tea, brother — with no way to say you mean that one, the one we are both thinking of. The way you say it is not a word in front. It is টা, stuck on the end.

Nothing goes between the noun and it, and nothing comes before the noun. The noun and its ending are written as one word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Where টা comes from is not settled. CDIAL, a dictionary of words rather than endings, has no entry for it; under Sanskrit ēka, "one", it asks whether the -ṭā of Assamese eṭā, "one", is Sanskrit vṛtta, "round", and leaves the question open (CDIAL 2462).

Grammar Lens: why this is called a classifier and not an article

An article does one job: it says definite. টা does that and one more. Bengali will not put a number directly on a noun, so টা is also the piece a count has to pass through — you will meet that in the next lesson. There is a polite twin, টি, used for people and in careful writing:

- ভাইটা — bhāiṭā — the brother, plainly
- ভাইটি — bhāiṭi — the brother, respectfully

Same slot, same job, different warmth. Learn টা and recognise টি.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- jāmāṭā — the shirt

- chāṭā — the tea
- bhāiṭā, then the polite bhāiṭi
- the red one — lāl jāmāṭā

Before you move on

Where does টা go — in front of the noun or on the end of it? (On the end, written as one word.) Does Bengali have a word for the? (No — this ending is what it has instead.) And which form would you use of a person you were being careful about? (টি.)

31.3 একটা (ekṭā) — a, one

Say the shirt. Read it: এক

You'll want to know: একটা

একটা জামা — ekṭā jāmā — a shirt.

একটা বন্ধু — ekṭā bôndhu — a friend.

Chapter twenty-four taught you to count এক দুই তিন চার পাঁচ, and then gave you nothing to count. This is why. এক cannot sit next to a noun. Bengali makes a number reach its noun through the classifier, and এক plus টা is একটা — which then means both one and a, because in Bengali those are the same thought.

So the ending you learned one lesson ago turns out to have been two doors:

- জামাটা — the shirt, the one we mean
- একটা জামা — a shirt, any one

Same টা. Nothing in front of it, or a number in front of it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

এক goes back to Sanskrit ēka, "one" (CDIAL 2462); where the classifier টা comes from is not settled.

Grammar Lens: where the ending goes, and it moves

Watch which word carries the suffix:

	Bengali	the ending is on the shirt	জামাটা	the noun
a shirt	একটা জামা	the number

When a number turns up, the classifier leaves the noun and attaches to the number instead. That is one rule, and it is the rule that will carry every count you ever make in this language.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ekṭā jāmā — a shirt
- ekṭā bôndhu — a friend
- the pair, back to back — jāmāṭā, then ekṭā jāmā
- a tea — ekṭā chā

Before you move on

Can এক stand next to a noun on its own? (No — it goes through the classifier.) When a number appears, which word carries টা? (The number, not the noun.) And what two English words does একটা cover? (A, and one.)

31.4 আরেকটা (ārekṭā) — another one

Say a shirt. Then say the joiner from chapter twenty-eight that means and.

You'll want to know: আরেকটা

আরেকটা চা — ārekṭā chā — another tea.

Take the word apart and it is already three things you own:
আর (and) + এক (one) + টা (the classifier) → আরেকটা

Which is why it does not merely mean a different one. It means one more, with the and still inside it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আর goes back to Sanskrit apara, "other", and aparam, "again, moreover" (CDIAL 434); এক to ēka, "one" (CDIAL 2462). The classifier's own origin is not settled.

Grammar Lens: the pair that hands things out one at a time

Bengali uses একটা ... আরেকটা as a fixed pair to run down a list of things one by one, the way English uses one … another:

> একটা লাল, আরেকটা কালো — ekṭā lāl, ārekṭā kālo — one red, another black.

This is the first time in this book that two things can be picked out and set side by side as separate items. Before the classifier existed there was no way to say one of anything, so there was no way to say another either.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ārekṭā chā — another tea
- the pair — ekṭā lāl, ārekṭā kālo
- two shirts, one at a time — ekṭā jāmā, ārekṭā jāmā
- the three pieces inside the word — ār, ek, ṭā

Before you move on

What three pieces is আরেকটা built from? (আর, এক and টা.) What does the first piece add to the meaning? (And — so it is one more, rather than only a different one.) And what is the word it pairs with? (একটা.)

31.5 One, the one, and another

One ending arrived in this chapter and did three different jobs. Name the three, and say for each one where the ending sits.

Your turn

- Write it: ট, then টা
- Say it: jāmāṭā, ekṭā jāmā, ārekṭā jāmā
- Recall: two chapters back, the joiner that opens a clause about a moment — jôkhon

Your turn: the distant band — every noun in the book, picked out one at a time

This is what the chapter bought. Chapters ten to fifteen taught a pantry, a family, a face and a wardrobe, and not one of those nouns could be pointed at as the one or counted as a one. Every one of them can now. Take them cold, from memory.

Say these aloud:

- the four things you drink and eat, each as the one — chāṭā, jôlṭā, dudhṭā, bhāṭṭā
- the same four as a one — ekṭā chā, ekṭā jôl, ekṭā dudh, ekṭā bhāt
- the family, respectfully — bhāiṭi, bônṭi, bôndhuṭi
- the wardrobe and its colours — lāl jāmāṭā, kālo kāpôṛṭā, nīl jāmāṭā, shādā jāmāṭā
- the face, one part at a time — ekṭā chokh, ārekṭā chokh, then nākṭā, mukhṭā
- the whole family in one word — pôribārṭā

Before you move on

Does Bengali have a word for the? (No — it has this ending.) When a number stands in front, which word carries the ending? (The number.) Which form is the careful one, for people? (ি.)

And which letter had to be taught before any of this chapter could be written down? (উ.)

Chapter 32

Pointing at Things

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can point at something near me and something across the room, put a pointer and a classifier on the same phrase, and ask what is this?
> The near and far heads arrive together, stack with the classifier at the opposite end of the phrase, and stand alone as এটা — which with the কী of chapter three makes the commonest beginner question in any language sayable for the first time.

32.1 এই (ei) — this

Say the shirt, then a shirt, then another shirt.

- Recall: two chapters back, the word that opens a clause about a moment — jôkhon

You'll want to know: এই

এই জামা — ei jāmā — this shirt.

এই চা — ei chā — this tea.

Thirty-one chapters, and nothing in the room could be pointed at. টা says the one we both mean; it does not say this one, here, the one I am looking at. That is a different job and it needs a different word.

এই goes in front of the noun — the opposite end from the classifier, and worth noticing, because those two are about to appear in the same phrase.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL lists Bengali e, "in this way", and Assamese ei under Sanskrit ēṣa, "this" (CDIAL 2530), which is where the near head এ- points; it has no entry for এই itself.

Grammar Lens: the near head

Bengali builds a family of pointing words on one frame with three heads, and you met the frame in chapter thirty:

head	means	you have seen it in
এ-	near — this	এই
ও-	far — that	the next lesson
ক-	asking — which, where	কেমন, কখন

So এই is not a word to be memorised on its own. It is one square of a grid, and the rest of the grid arrives over the next six lessons.

Your turn

- Say it: ei jāmā — this shirt
- Say it: ei chā — this tea
- Say it: the contrast — ekṭā jāmā, then ei jāmā
- Write it: এই

Before you move on

Which end of the noun does এই go on? (The front — unlike the classifier.) What does it say that টা does not? (Here, near me — it points.) And which head of the pointing frame is it? (এ-, the near one.)

32.2 ওই (oi) — that

Say this shirt. Write it: ও

You'll want to know: ওই

ওই জামা — oi jāmā — that shirt.

এই লাল, ওই কালো — ei lāl, oi kālo — this one red, that one black.

Swap the head and you have crossed the room. এ- is here; ও- is there. That is the whole system: Bengali has two distances, not three. Spanish insists on este, ese and aquel; Bengali stops at two and lets context do the rest.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL lists Middle Bengali oū and ohā, "that", under Sanskrit asau, "that" (CDIAL 972): the far head ও- has a long history, though CDIAL has no entry for ওই itself.

Grammar Lens: one letter, two jobs

You have met ও before, in chapter twenty-eight, as the joiner meaning also. It is the same letter and it is not an accident: a word that means that one over there and a word that means and that too are the same gesture, pointing away from the speaker.
Told apart by where it sits:

- ও alone, between two things — also, and
- ওই in front of a noun — that

You will meet a third job for it two chapters from now, when it turns into a person — and it is still the same gesture.

Your turn

- Say it: oi jāmā — that shirt
- Say it: the pair, near then far — ei jāmā, oi jāmā
- Say it: ei lāl, oi kālo
- Write it: এই ওই

Before you move on

How many distances does Bengali point to? (Two — here and there.) What is the only difference between এই and ওই? (The head — near against far.) And what else does ও do, on its own? (Also, and.)

32.3 এই জামাটা (ei jāmāṭā) — this shirt, the one here

Say this shirt, then that shirt, then the shirt.

You'll want to know: both ends at once

এই জামাটা — ei jāmāṭā — this shirt (the one here, and we both know which).

ওই কাপড়টা — oi kāpôṛṭā — that cloth.

English cannot do this. The this shirt is not English, because the and this are fighting over one slot in front of the noun and only one of them can win. In Bengali they are nowhere near each other:

এই + জামা + টা · pointer · noun · classifier

Front and back. No competition, so no choice to make — and a Bengali speaker uses both far more often than an English speaker would expect, because leaving the classifier off sounds unfinished.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

এই points back to Sanskrit ēṣa, "this" (CDIAL 2530); জামা is usually traced to Persian jāma, "garment"; and the origin of টা is not settled.

Grammar Lens: the fixed order

Once a number and an adjective join in, the order still does not move:

slot	what goes there	example
first	pointer	এই
second	number	একটা
third	adjective	লাল
last	noun + classifier	জামাটা

Everything before the noun is in a fixed queue, and the only thing that ever attaches to the noun itself is the classifier at the back. Bengali will keep adding suffixes at that back end for the rest of this book, always one at a time, always in order.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ei jāmāṭā
- oi kāpôṛṭā
- both ends, then the front alone — ei jāmāṭā, then ei jāmā
- the long queue — ei lāl jāmāṭā

Before you move on

Can a pointer and a classifier appear in the same phrase? (Yes — they sit at opposite ends.) Why can English not do the same? (Its the and its this want the same slot.) And which of the two attaches to the noun itself? (The classifier, at the back.)

32.4 এটা (eṭā) — this one

Say this shirt, with both ends. Then say the question from chapter two that asks somebody their name.

You'll want to know: এটা

এটা কী? — eṭā ki? — what is this?

এটা জল — eṭā jôl — this is water.

Take the noun out of এই জামাটা and keep the two ends. What is left — এ and টা — is এটা, and it means this thing, standing on its own as the subject of a sentence.

Chapter two taught কী as the question word inside what is your name, and then gave you nothing else to ask it about. এটা is the missing half. Between them they make the first question a learner of any language actually uses, and it has been out of reach for thirty-one chapters.

The far one works the same way: ওটা — oṭā — that one.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

এ- goes back to Sanskrit ēṣa, "this" (CDIAL 2530); the origin of টা is not settled.

Grammar Lens: no verb in the middle

Notice what is not in এটা জল. There is no is. Bengali joins a subject to what it is by putting the two side by side and stopping, exactly as chapter twenty-seven showed when it taught you to deny such a sentence with নয়:

- এটা জল — this is water
- এটা জল নয় — this is not water

So the sentence and its denial both arrive at once, because the denier was already taught and had nothing to deny.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- eṭā ki?
- eṭā jôl, then eṭā chā
- the denial — eṭā jôl nôy
- the far one — oṭā ki?
- with a noun and without — ei jāmāṭā, then eṭā

Before you move on

What two pieces is এটা made of? (এ-, the near head, and the classifier.) Is there a word for is in এটা জল? (No — the two halves sit side by side.) And which word denies it? (নয়.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

32.5 Pointing at things

How many distances does Bengali point to, and what is the only piece that changes between them? Then say this one and that one with no noun at all.

Your turn

- Say it: ei jāmāṭā, then oi jāmāṭā
- Say it: eṭā ki? — and answer it
- Say it: the denial — eṭā chā nôy
- Recall: from the chapter before, the ending that means the — -ṭā

Your turn: the distant band — the room, pointed at

Two chapters ago none of this could be said. Take the whole book's nouns and say each one near and far, cold.

Say these aloud:

- the drinks, near then far — ei chāṭā, oi chāṭā; ei jôlṭā, oi dudhṭā
- the wardrobe with a colour in the queue — ei lāl jāmāṭā, oi kālo kāpôṛṭā, ei nīl jāmāṭā
- the family, respectfully and at a distance — ei bhāiṭi, oi bônṭi
- one and then another — ekṭā chā, ārekṭā chā
- asking about each, then denying the answer — eṭā ki? … eṭā jôl nôy
- the face — ei mukhṭā
- the other job of the far head, from chapter twenty-eight — ও meaning also

Before you move on

Which end of the phrase does the pointer sit on, and which end does the classifier sit on? (Front and back.) Can both appear at once? (Yes — and a Bengali speaker usually uses both.) What is এটা made of? (The near head and the classifier, with no noun.) And which letter, taught one chapter ago, is inside every one of these? (ট.)

Chapter 33

More Than One

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can sort a noun into living or not, put the plural its group demands on it, and stand an adjective in front of it.
> One question about a noun — is it alive? — chooses between two plural endings, and every noun the book owns goes through the one its group demands. The adjective rule that thirty-two chapters used without stating is stated.

33.1 জীব আর জিনিস (jīb ār jinish) — alive, and not

Ask what is this? Then say this shirt, with both ends.

- Recall: two chapters back, the ending that turns a noun into the one — -ṭā

You'll want to know: the split

Every noun you have learned belongs to one of two groups, and Bengali has been waiting to be told which:

group	what is in it	examples from this book
জীব — living	people and animals	ভাই, বোন, বন্ধু
জিনিস — thing	everything else	জামা, চা, জল, নাক

This is not decoration. It decides two things that are about to matter:

- which ending makes it plural — the next two lessons
- which classifier counts it — you have met one of them already

Spanish makes the same kind of demand and answers it with gender, which has to be learned word by word because a table has no visible femininity. Bengali's question — is it alive? — can be answered by looking.

Grammar Lens: the borderline, and what to do about it

Two warnings, and they are the whole difficulty:
Body parts are things. নাক and মুখ belong to a living person and are themselves জিনিস. The test is whether the noun names something alive, not whether it belongs to something alive.
Respect can move a noun up. A person spoken of warmly takes the living endings even when a plain speaker might not bother. That is the same warmth টি carries, and it runs right through Bengali grammar.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- which group — bhāi, bôn, bôndhu
- which group — jāmā, chā, jôl, nāk
- the two group names — jīb, jinish
- the tricky one, and why — nāk is জিনিস

Before you move on

What question does Bengali ask about a noun that Spanish answers with gender? (Is it alive?) Which group does নাক belong to, and why? (জিনিস — the test is what the noun names, not what it is attached to.) And what two things does the answer decide? (The plural ending, and the classifier.)

33.2 রা (-rā) — more than one, and alive

Which group is ভাই in, and which is জামা in?

You'll want to know: রা

ভাই — bhāi — brother.

ভাইরা — bhāirā — brothers.

বন্ধু — bôndhu — friend.

বন্ধুরা — bôndhurā — friends.

Twenty chapters of family and friends, and every one of them has been strictly one person. রা on the end makes them many — and it is allowed only on the living group. Put it on a shirt and a Bengali speaker will stop you.

When the noun ends in a consonant, an এ appears to carry the ending:

বোন — bôn — sister.

বোনেরা — bônerā — sisters.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Where রা comes from is not settled: CDIAL, a dictionary of words rather than endings, has no entry for it.

Grammar Lens: Bengali does not insist

English forces the choice on every noun in every sentence: it is brother or brothers, never neutral. Bengali does not. A bare ভাই is happy to mean one brother or several, and the ending goes on only when the plurality is the point.
That is why the ending has felt absent from this book: it has not been hiding. Bengali has not needed it yet.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bhāi, then bhāirā
- bôndhu, then bôndhurā
- the one that needs the extra vowel — bôn, then bônerā
- these brothers here — ei bhāirā

Before you move on

Which group of nouns may take রা? (The living one.) What appears before it after a consonant? (এ.) And must a Bengali noun be marked plural whenever it is plural? (No — only when it matters.)

33.3 গুলো (-gulo) — more than one, and not alive

Make ভাই plural. Then try the same ending on জামা and say why it is wrong.

You'll want to know: গুলো

জামাগুলো — jāmāgulo — the shirts.

চোখগুলো — chokhgulo — the eyes.

The জিনিস half of the split gets its own ending, and it is a longer one. Where রা only pluralises, গুলো pluralises and definitises: it means the shirts, the particular ones, not shirts in general.

So this ending is doing the classifier's job as well as the plural's — which is exactly what you should expect from a language whose singular the is also a stuck-on piece.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Where গুলো comes from is not settled. CDIAL has no entry for the ending; the nearest form it gives is Bengali gulī, "ball", under Sanskrit gōla, "ball" (CDIAL 4321), and it does not link the two.

Grammar Lens: the full table, finally group and noun	one, definite	more than one

জীব — ভাই	ভাইটি	ভাইরা
জিনিস — জামা	জামাটা	জামাগুলো

Read the last column and the split earns itself. Two endings, chosen by one question you can answer by looking, and the whole of Bengali's number system for an A1 learner is in that table.

There is a careful twin here too — গুলি, standing to গুলো as টি stands to টা. Recognise it; say গুলো.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- jāmāgulo — the shirts
- the two halves back to back — bhāirā, jāmāgulo
- pointing — ei jāmāgulo, oi jāmāgulo
- with a colour in front — lāl jāmāgulo
- the pair of eyes — chokhgulo

Before you move on

Which group takes গুলো? (জিনিস — the not-living one.) What does it add beyond plurality? (Definiteness — the shirts.) And what is the careful form? (গুলি.)

33.4 লাল জামা (lāl jāmā) — a red shirt

Say the shirts. Then say red.

You'll want to know: where the adjective goes

লাল জামা — lāl jāmā — a red shirt.

Chapter twenty-six gave you five colours and used every one of them as a sentence on its own — the shirt is red. Not once did a colour stand in front of a noun, which is where an adjective actually lives most of the time.

It goes in front, and — this is the part worth keeping — it never changes. Not for the group the noun is in, not for how many there are, not for anything:

- লাল জামা — a red shirt

- লাল জামাগুলো — the red shirts
- লাল জামাটা — the red shirt

One form of লাল, three phrases. Spanish would have made you write rojo, rojos and roja.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Both words are loans, usually traced to Persian: লাল to lāl, "a ruby; red", and জামা to jāma, "a garment".

Grammar Lens: the queue, filled in Chapter thirty-two laid out a queue and left a slot empty. This is the word that fills it:

slot	what goes there	example
first	pointer	এই
second	number	একটা
third	adjective	লাল
last	noun + ending	জামা

And ভালো, which you have had since chapter three as well and as good, is an adjective like any other and takes the same slot: ভালো বন্ধু — a good friend.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- lāl jāmā — a red shirt
- all five colours in front of the same noun — lāl, kālo, nīl, shādā, shôbuj jāmā
- unchanged across number — lāl jāmā, lāl jāmāgulo
- the whole queue — ei ekṭā lāl jāmā
- bhālo bôndhu

Before you move on

Which side of the noun does a Bengali adjective sit on? (In front.) Does it change for number or for the noun's group? (No — never.) And which slot of the queue is it? (The third, between the number and the noun.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

33.5 More than one

One question decides which of two endings a noun takes. What is the question, and what are the two endings?

Your turn

- Say it: bhāirā, bônerā, bôndhurā
- Say it: jāmāgulo, chokhgulo
- Say it: unchanged in front — lāl jāmā, lāl jāmāgulo
- Recall: two chapters back, the ending that makes a noun the one — -ṭā

Your turn: the distant band — the whole book, in the plural

Sort every noun this book owns into its group, then pluralise it the way its group demands. Cold, from memory.

Say these aloud:

- the living ones — bhāirā, bônerā, bôndhurā
- the things — jāmāgulo, kāpôṛgulo, chokhgulo, nākgulo
- the two that catch people out, and why — nāk and hridôy are জিনিস
- the food, definite and plural — bhātgulo, chāgulo
- with a colour and a pointer — ei lāl jāmāgulo, oi kālo kāpôṛgulo
- one, another, then all of them — ekṭā jāmā, ārekṭā jāmā, jāmāgulo
- the family, singular and plural — pôribārṭā, then bhāirā

- asking about a pile of them — eṭā ki?

Before you move on

Which ending does a living noun take, and which does a thing take? (রা and গুলো.) Which of the two also means the? (গুলো.) Where does an adjective stand, and does it change? (In front, and no.) And which letter, three lessons before this chapter, made all of it writable? (ট.)

Chapter 34

Somebody Else

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a third person, choose the respectful form when I should, sort them by how far away they are, and say what is theirs.
> The third person arrives — graded for respect on the same ladder as তুমি and আপনি, and sorted by distance on the same heads as এই and ওই — and with it the possessive column reaches its third of six cells.

34.1 সে (she) — he, she

Say I. Say the two words for you, and say which one is for somebody you are careful with.

- Recall: two chapters back, the word that points at something near — ei

You'll want to know: সে

সে ভালো — she bhālo — he is well, or she is well.

Thirty-three chapters, and every sentence this book can build has been about আমি or তুমি. Somebody is either speaking or being spoken to. Nobody has ever been talked about.

সে is the word that changes that, and it does two things at once that English needs two words for. It is he and it is she, and Bengali will not tell you which. Sex is not marked on a Bengali pronoun at all — not here, not anywhere.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সে is Sanskrit sa, "he, that": CDIAL lists the Bengali word under it (CDIAL 12815).

Grammar Lens: the third row of a table you already half know

person	plain	careful
I	আমি	—
you	তুমি	আপনি
he, she	সে	next lesson

Chapter two taught you that Bengali grades you for respect. It grades the third person the same way, on the same ladder, and the careful form arrives in the next lesson. What those three rows show is that সে is the plain one: it is what you use of a child, a friend, a younger sibling — and what you must not use of somebody's grandmother.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- she bhālo
- the three persons in a row — āmi, tumi, she
- first the brother beside you, then something about him — ei bhāiṭi … she bhālo
- it covers both — she for a brother, she for a sister

Before you move on

Does সে mean he or she? (Both — Bengali does not mark it.) Which rung of the respect ladder is it on? (The plain one, like তুমি.) And what could this book not do before this word? (Talk about anybody who was not speaking or being spoken to.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

34.2 তিনি (tini) — he, she, respectfully

Say he is well with the plain pronoun. Then say the careful word for you.

You'll want to know: তিনি

তিনি ভালো — tini bhālo — he is well, said of somebody you respect.

The table from the last lesson is now complete:

person	plain	careful
I	আমি	—
you	তুমি	আপনি
he, she	সে	তিনি

Two rungs in the second person, two rungs in the third, and the choice is made the same way both times: age, standing, and how well you know them.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL lists Bengali tā and tāhā, "him, her", under Sanskrit ta-, "that" (CDIAL 5612). তিনি is built on the same t-; CDIAL does not take its ending apart, so that part is not settled.

Grammar Lens: the cost of getting it wrong

This is not a nicety a learner can put off. Bengali offers no neutral pronoun to hide behind: every time you mention a third person you have to pick a rung, and picking the low one about somebody's elder is a real discourtesy — the kind you would then be apologising for with dukkhito.

The safe habit while you are learning: তিনি for anybody older than you or unknown to you, সে for children and for friends your own age. Over-politeness is heard as slightly formal. Under-politeness is heard as rude.

Notice too that তিনি and আপনি share their ending. The careful rung is built the same way on both rows, which is one shape to learn rather than two.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tini bhālo
- the two rungs, back to back — she bhālo, tini bhālo
- all four pronouns — tumi, āpni, she, tini
- of an elder brother, carefully — ei bhāiṭi … tini bhālo

Before you move on

Which second-person word does তিনি match? (আপনি — same rung, same ending.) Can a Bengali speaker avoid the choice? (No — there is no neutral third-person pronoun.) And which one do you use of somebody older than you? (তিনি.)

34.3 ও (o) — him, her, the one standing there

Say that shirt. Then say what ও does when it stands between two things.

You'll want to know: ও as a person

ও ভালো — o bhālo — he is well — said of somebody standing right there.

Chapter thirty-two promised this letter a third job, and here it is. ও on its own, in front of a verb, is a person: the one nearby, the one you could gesture at.

Three jobs, one syllable, and they are told apart by position:

where it sits	what it is between two things	also, and in front of a noun, as ওই	that standing alone as a subject	him, her

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL lists Middle Bengali oū and ohā, "that", under Sanskrit asau, "that" (CDIAL 972), the old far pointer behind ও.

Grammar Lens: near, there, and away

Bengali's third person is not one word but a small set sorted by how far away the person is, exactly the way its pointing words are:

- এ — this one, right here
- ও — that one, over there
- সে — him, her, away from us both, or not present at all

They are all the plain rung. তিনি is the careful rung for all three distances at once, which is why it has no near-and-far partners. So the pointing system you built two chapters ago was never only about shirts. It sorts people too, and that is why এই and ওই were worth a whole chapter.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- o bhālo
- the three distances — e, o, she
- the three jobs of one syllable — bhāi o bôn; oi jāmā; o bhālo
- the careful rung, which covers all three — tini bhālo

Before you move on

What are the three jobs of ও, and what tells them apart? (Also, that, him or her — told apart by where it sits.) Which of the plain third-person words is for somebody not present? (সে.) And how many careful forms are there? (One — তিনি covers every distance.)

34.4 তার (tār) — his, her

Say my. Then say he is well.

You'll want to know: তার

তার ভাই — tār bhāi — his brother, or her brother.

তার জামাটা — tār jāmāṭā — his shirt (that one).

Chapter two taught আমার and তোমার and left it there, so possession has been available for exactly two people out of everybody in the world. তার is the third, and it is built the way the other two are:

person	pronoun	possessive
I	আমি	আমার
you	তুমি	তোমার
he, she	সে	তার

An -র on the end, every time. That is not a coincidence to be memorised: it is a case ending, the same kind of stuck-on piece as the classifier, and it is the second of several you will meet.

The careful form follows the same rule from তিনি: তাঁর — tā̃r — with the moon-dot you learned in chapter five sitting over the vowel.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL lists Bengali tā and tāhā under Sanskrit ta-, "that" (CDIAL 5612); তার is that stem with the possessive -র.

Grammar Lens: order does not change

A possessive takes the front slot, in front of everything, and the noun keeps its own ending at the back exactly as before:

তার লাল জামাটা — tār lāl jāmāṭā — his red shirt.

Front to back: whose, then what kind, then the thing with its ending. Nothing you learned about the queue has changed; one more slot has been filled at its head.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tār bhāi
- the three possessives in a row — āmār, tomār, tār
- the careful one — tā̃r bhāi
- the full queue — tār lāl jāmāṭā

Before you move on

What ending turns a Bengali pronoun into a possessive? (-র.)
Which pronoun is তার built on? (সে.) And where in the phrase does a possessive stand? (At the front, before everything.)

34.5 Somebody else

Three plain third-person words arrived in this chapter, sorted by distance, and one careful word that covers all three. Name them.

Your turn

- Say it: she bhālo, tini bhālo, o bhālo
- Say it: tār bhāi, then the careful tā̃r bhāi
- Say it: and the denial — she bhālo nôy
- Recall: two chapters back, the ending that pluralises a living noun — -rā

Your turn: the distant band — the whole family, talked about

Until this chapter every sentence in this book was about the speaker or the listener. The family of chapter twenty-one has been sitting in the book for a hundred lessons and could never once be the subject of a sentence. Take them cold.

Say these aloud:

- the six persons in order — āmi, tumi, āpni, she, tini, o

- the three possessives — āmār, tomār, tār
- a brother, pointed at and then talked about — ei bhāiṭi … tini bhālo
- a friend, plainly — oi bôndhuṭā … she bhālo
- whose face — tār mukhṭā
- his family, and his brothers — tār pôribārṭā, tār bhāirā
- whose shirt, with everything in the queue — tār lāl jāmāṭā
- the three jobs of one syllable, once more — bhāi o bôn; oi jāmā; o bhālo

Before you move on

Does Bengali mark he against she? (No.) How many rungs of respect does the third person have? (Two — সে and তিনি.) What sorts এ, ও and সে from each other? (How far away the person is.) And what ending makes a possessive? (-র.)

Chapter 35

All of Us

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 👁 eyes (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about more than one of us, more than one of you and more than one of them, and say what belongs to any of those groups.
> The plural ending taught two chapters earlier on nouns turns out to build every plural pronoun in the language without one exception, and a different ending replaces it when the pronoun has to own something — the first sight of the rule that the back slot holds one suffix at a time.

35.1 আমরা (āmrā) — we Say I. Then make ভাই plural, and say which group of nouns is allowed that ending.

- Recall: two chapters back, the word that asks what is this? — eṭā ki

You'll want to know: আমরা

আমরা ভালো — āmrā bhālo — we are well.

Look at what has happened. আমি plus the living plural -রা is আমরা, and there is nothing else to learn: a pronoun is a living noun, so it takes the living noun's ending.

English cannot show you this. I becomes we, two words with no letter in common, and a learner has to memorise the pair. Bengali charges you nothing, because you paid two chapters ago.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আমি goes back to Sanskrit asmad, the stem of "we" (CDIAL 986); where the plural -রা comes from is not settled.

Grammar Lens: exclusive or inclusive? Bengali does not say

Some languages have two words for we — one that includes the person you are talking to and one that shuts them out. Bengali has one, exactly as English does, and leaves it to context:

> আমরা ভালো can mean we (you and I) are well or we (my family, not you) are well.

Nothing marks the difference. When it matters, a Bengali speaker names the group: আমরা, and then who.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āmrā bhālo
- the singular and the plural — āmi bhālo, āmrā bhālo
- the same ending on a noun — bhāirā
- naming the group — āmrā, āmār pôribār

Before you move on

What two pieces is আমরা made of? (আমি and the living plural -রা.) Why that ending and not the other one? (A person is জীব.) And does Bengali have two words for we? (No — one, like English.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

35.2 তোমরা (tomrā) — you, more than one

Say we. Then say the plain word for you and the careful one.

You'll want to know: তোমরা

তোমরা ভালো — tomrā bhālo — you are all well.

Same ending again. তুমি plus -রা, with the vowel settling to তোম-, and Bengali has a word English lacks: you, plural, unambiguously.

The careful rung pluralises too:

- তুমি → তোমরা — you, plainly
- আপনি → আপনারা — you, respectfully

Four words where English has one, and every one of them is that same -রা.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তুমি goes back to Sanskrit yuṣmad-, "you" (CDIAL 10511); where the plural -রা comes from is not settled.

Grammar Lens: the grid, complete for two of three persons

	one	more than one
I	আমি	আমরা
you, plainly	তুমি	তোমরা
you, carefully	আপনি	আপনারা

One ending, applied without exception. Nothing here is irregular, which is worth saying out loud because the equivalent English table is nothing but exceptions.
The third row is the next lesson.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tomrā bhālo
- singular then plural — tumi bhālo, tomrā bhālo
- the careful pair — āpni, āpnārā
- to a room of friends — tomrā, āmār bôndhurā

Before you move on

What is the plural of আপনি? (আপনারা.) How many words does Bengali need where English says you? (Four — two rungs, two numbers.) And which ending builds every one of them? (-রা.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

35.3 তারা (tārā) — they Say you, all of you. Then say he is well, plainly.

You'll want to know: তারা

তারা ভালো — tārā bhālo — they are well.

The stem of সে is তা- — you saw it last chapter inside তার — and with the living plural on the end it is তারা. The careful form does what you would now expect: তাঁরা, with the moon-dot.

That completes the grid. Six persons, in a language that spent thirty-three chapters able to talk about two:

	one	more than one
I	আমি	আমরা
you, plainly	তুমি	তোমরা
you, carefully	আপনি	আপনারা
he, she, plainly	সে	তারা
he, she, carefully	তিনি	তাঁরা

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The stem তা- goes back to Sanskrit ta-, "that" (CDIAL 5612); where the plural -রা comes from is not settled.

Grammar Lens: one ending did all of it

Read the right-hand column downwards and every entry ends the same way. There is no irregular plural anywhere in the Bengali pronoun system — no I/we, no he/they, nothing to memorise as a pair.
And it is the same -রা that pluralises ভাই and বোন. One rule, learned once, for people and for pronouns alike, because Bengali does not think those are different kinds of word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tārā bhālo
- the careful one — t̃ārā bhālo
- the three plurals in a row — āmrā, tomrā, tārā
- the same ending on a noun — bônerā
- singular against plural, all three persons — āmi/āmrā, tumi/tomrā, she/tārā

Before you move on

What stem is তারা built on? (তা-, the stem of সে.) Is there an irregular plural pronoun in Bengali? (No — every one takes -রা.) And what is the careful form? (তাঁরা.)

35.4 আমাদের (āmāder) — our

Say my, your and his. Then say we.

You'll want to know: আমাদের

আমাদের পরিবার — āmāder pôribār — our family.

Here is the piece that finishes the possessive column. Watch what happens to the plural ending:

আমরা → আমাদের, not āmrār.

The -রা does not survive. In its place comes -দের, which is the plural possessive ending and is used across the board:

	mine	ours
I / we	আমার	আমাদের
you, plainly	তোমার	তোমাদের
he, she / they	তার	তাদের

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The stem āmā- goes back to Sanskrit asmad, the stem of "we" (CDIAL 986); where -দের comes from is not settled, as CDIAL has no entry for it.

Grammar Lens: one suffix at a time

This is the first sight of a rule that governs the whole back end of a Bengali word: the slot holds one ending, and only one. Plural and possessive cannot both be there, so a single ending is used that carries both meanings at once.
You have already seen the same economy without being told: গুলো does plural and definite, so it occupies the place টা would otherwise have taken. Bengali merges endings where English would stack them.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- āmāder pôribār
- the whole column — āmār, tomār, tār, āmāder, tomāder, tāder
- the ending that vanishes — āmrā, but āmāder
- their brothers — tāder bhāirā

Before you move on

What happens to -রা when a possessive is needed? (It is replaced by -দের.) How many endings may the back slot hold at once? (One.) And which ending you already knew does two jobs for the same reason? (গুলো — plural and definite.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

35.5 All of us

One ending made every plural pronoun in this chapter, and a different one made every plural possessive. Name both, and say why they cannot appear together.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the six persons — āmi, āmrā, tumi, tomrā, she, tārā
- the careful rungs — āpni, āpnārā, tini, tā̃rā
- the whole possessive column — āmār, tomār, tār, āmāder, tomāder, tāder

Your turn: the distant band — four chapters back, and everything since

Four chapters ago the letter ট did not exist in this book and nothing could be pointed at, counted, pluralised or owned by anybody but you and the person in front of you. Run the whole distance, cold.

- Write it: ট, then টা
- Say it: the classifier and the indefinite — jāmāṭā, ekṭā jāmā, ārekṭā jāmā
- Say it: pointing near and far — ei jāmāṭā, oi jāmāṭā
- Say it: the two plurals, sorted by group — bhāirā, jāmāgulo, chokhgulo
- Say it: an adjective that never changes — lāl jāmā, lāl jāmāgulo
- Say it: the third person, both rungs — she bhālo, tini bhālo, o bhālo
- Say it: whose, singular and plural — tār pôribār, āmāder pôribār, tāder bhāirā
- Say it: the whole queue, with an owner on the front — āmāder ei lāl jāmāṭā
- Say it: asking about it — eṭā ki?

Before you move on

Which ending makes every plural pronoun? (-রা.) What replaces it when the pronoun has to own something? (-দের.) Is any Bengali plural pronoun irregular? (No.) And which ending you met four chapters ago does two jobs for exactly the same reason? (গুলো.) Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

Chapter 36

The One It Happens To

Modes: voice (3) eyes (2) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can mark the person a thing is done to, say me, you and him as objects, and ask who?
> The object ending goes on living nouns only — the animacy question paying for the third time — and fills the slot in chapter nine's dative frame, which had been taught with nothing to put in it for twenty-seven chapters.

36.1 কে (-ke) — the one it happens to

> Which group is ভাই in and which is জামা in? Then say our family.
> - Recall: two chapters back, the word for he on the careful rung — tini

You'll want to know: কে

> ভাইকে — bhāike — to the brother, or the brother, as the one it is done to.
> বন্ধুকে — bôndhuke — the friend, as the one it is done to.

Another ending on the back of the noun, and it marks something new: that this person is not doing the action but receiving it. English marks that with word order alone; Bengali marks it on the word.

And it is choosy in a way you can now predict. কে goes on জীব nouns — people — and not on things:

- ভাইকে — yes
- জামাকে — no; a shirt stays জামা

The animacy split you learned three chapters ago is doing this too. That one question keeps paying.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of কে is not settled. Under kakṣa, "side", CDIAL lists Old Bengali kakhu, "to, for", and says some postpositions probably grew from that sense (CDIAL 2588), but not কে.

Grammar Lens: the same slot, still one at a time

Line the endings up and the system is visible:

ending	what it says	goes on
-র	whose	anything
-কে	the one it happens to	living nouns
-দের	whose, plural	living nouns
-টা	the one we mean	things, mostly

All four sit in the same slot at the back of the noun, and the rule from the last chapter still holds: one at a time. That is why -দের exists at all, and why you will never see two of these stacked.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bhāike, bônke, bôndhuke
- the one that takes no ending, and why — jāmā, because it is জিনিস
- whose, then to whom — tār bhāi, then tār bhāike
- the four endings in the slot — -r, -ke, -der, -ṭā

Before you move on

What does -কে say about a noun? (That it is the one the action happens to.) Which nouns take it? (Living ones.) And how many of these endings can sit on one noun at once? (One.)

36.2 আমাকে (āmāke) — me

Put the object ending on ভাই. Then say I and my.

You'll want to know: আমাকে

আমাকে — āmāke — me, to me.

A pronoun is a living noun, so it takes the living noun's ending — the third time this book has said that and the third time it has been true without an exception:

job	the word	ending
I	আমি	—
my	আমার	-র
me	আমাকে	-কে

Same stem আমা-, three endings, no memorisation.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The stem আমা- goes back to Sanskrit asmad, the stem of "we" (CDIAL 986); where the ending -কে comes from is not settled.

Grammar Lens: the frame that had no filler

Chapter nine taught something odd and important: Bengali does not say I like tea. It says, near enough, tea is good to me — the liking is not something you do, it is something that happens to you.
That frame needs a to me, and the book had none. It has one now:

> আমাকে চা ভালো লাগে — āmāke chā bhālo lāge — I like tea (literally, tea feels good to me).

A whole family of Bengali sentences works this way — liking, needing, feeling cold, being hungry — and every one of them was out of reach for want of this word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three forms — āmi, āmār, āmāke
- āmāke chā bhālo lāge
- the plural of the same — āmāder
- on a noun, for comparison — bhāike

Before you move on

What stem do আমি, আমার and আমাকে share? (আমা-.) What does Bengali say instead of I like tea? (Tea feels good to me.) And which ending makes the to me? (-কে.)

36.3 তোমাকে (tomāke) — you, as the one it happens to Say me. Then say the plain and the careful words for you.

You'll want to know: তোমাকে

তোমাকে — tomāke — you, as the one it is done to.

And with the third person, built from the stem you already met in তার:

তাকে — tāke — him, her.

Now the whole table, and it is worth looking at as a table rather than as a list:

person	possessive	object
আমি	আমার	আমাকে
তুমি	তোমার	তোমাকে
সে	তার	তাকে

Three stems, three endings, nine words, nothing irregular.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The stem tomā- goes back, with তুমি, to Sanskrit yuṣmad-, "you" (CDIAL 10511); where -কে comes from is not settled.

Grammar Lens: what English makes you memorise and Bengali does not

The English column is I, my, me — he, his, him, and there is no rule in it: a learner memorises each cell. The Bengali column is one stem with -র or -কে stuck on. Nothing about তাকে has to be learned once তার is known.
The careful rungs behave, too: আপনাকে and তাঁকে.
And you can now be polite to a specific person, which chapter twenty-two could not do — it taught দয়া করে with nobody to address it to.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the object row — āmāke, tomāke, tāke
- one stem, two endings — tār, then tāke
- the careful ones — āpnāke, tā̃ke
- politely, to you — doyā kore … tomāke

Before you move on

What is the object form of সে? (তাকে.) What do তার and তাকে share? (The stem তা-.) And how many of these nine forms are irregular? (None.)

36.4 কে (ke) — who?

Put the object ending on ভাই. Then say you, as the one it is done to.

You'll want to know: কে standing alone

কে? — ke? — who?

সে কে? — she ke? — who is he?

This is Sanskrit ka-, "who" (CDIAL 2574), not the ending of two lessons ago. They are spelled identically and they are not related, and Bengali tells them apart the way it tells ও apart from ও: by where they sit.

where	what it is stuck to the back of a noun	-কে, the object ending
standing on its own	কে, who?

You now have both of the questions a stranger opens with. এটা কী? asks about a thing; কে? asks about a person — and the two are told apart only by their vowel, so say them carefully.

Grammar Lens: the asking head, for the third time

Chapter thirty laid out three heads on one frame — the relative য-, the demonstrative ত-, and the asking ক-. Every question word in this book starts with the last of them:

- কী — what
- কেমন — how
- কখন — when
- কে — who

Four words, one letter at the front of each. And the answers come from the ত- column: তিনি, তার, তখন. Ask with ক-, answer with ত-.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ke?
- she ke? — and answer it — she āmār bhāi
- the two that sound alike — bhāike (the ending), then ke? (the question)

- the thing and the person — eṭā ki?, then ke?
- the four asking words — ki, kemon, kôkhon, ke

Before you move on

How do you tell the question কে from the ending -কে? (By where it sits — alone, or stuck to a noun.) Which letter opens every question word in this book? (ক-.) And which column do the answers come from? (ত-.)

36.5 The one it happens to

Two things in this chapter are written the same and are not the same word. Name both, and say what tells them apart.

Your turn

- Say it: the object row — āmāke, tomāke, tāke
- Say it: on nouns — bhāike, bônke, bôndhuke
- Say it: the frame that waited twenty-seven chapters — āmāke chā bhālo lāge
- Recall: two chapters back, the ending that pluralises a living noun — -rā

Your turn: the distant band — five chapters of grammar, run cold

Four endings now compete for one slot on the back of a Bengali noun, and one question decides which of them a noun may take. Run all of it.

Say these aloud:

- the four endings, and what each says — -ṭā, -r, -ke, -der
- the question that chooses between them — is it জীব or জিনিস?
- a living noun through all of them — bhāiṭi, bhāir, bhāike, bhāirā
- a thing, which takes fewer — jāmāṭā, jāmāgulo

- near, counted and coloured — ei ekṭā lāl jāmā
- the six persons and their objects — āmi/āmāke, tumi/tomāke, she/tāke
- whose, plural — āmāder, tāder
- the two questions a stranger opens with — eṭā ki? and ke?
- liking, for two people — āmāke chā bhālo lāge, tomāke jôl bhālo lāge

Before you move on

Which nouns take -কে? (Living ones.) How many endings may share the slot at once? (One.) What does Bengali say instead of I like tea? (Tea feels good to me.) And what is the difference between the two words spelled কে? (Where they sit — one is stuck on, one stands alone.)

Chapter 37

Here, There, and Where

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) pen (2) Hands-free start: none of the 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say something is here or there, ask where it is, and deny that it is anywhere at all.
> The nine-cell grid closes: three heads — near, far, asking — across three frames — thing, person, place. The last cell is কোথায়, the question an A1 candidate is asked in the first minute of a speaking test, and answering it needs the letter থ*.*

37.1 থ — the breathy dental

Write ত, খ and ধ. Say what খ has that ক has not.

- Recall: two chapters back, the ending that marks the person a thing is done to — -ke

Script

How থ is written, stroke by stroke

থ

Six chapters ago you filled in the fourth corner of a square. This is a different square, and it has been three-quarters full for even longer.

	plain	with breath
voice off	ত tô	থ thô
voice on	দ dô	ধ dhô

All four are made in the same place: the tongue flat on the back of the top front teeth. What separates them is the two switches — the voice, and the puff of breath you learned to hear when খ arrived beside ক.

থ is the puff on the voiceless one. Hold a hand in front of your mouth: for ত the air barely moves, for থ it pushes.

And it is not the th of English this or thin. That sound does not exist in Bengali. থ is a t with breath after it, nothing more.

Your turn

- Write it: থ
- Say it: ত then থ — same place, breath added
- Say it: the whole square — ত থ দ ধ
- Write it: থা

- Write it: ট থ — the two letters this book waited longest for

Before you move on

Where is থ made? (On the teeth, like ত.) What is added? (Breath.) Is it the English th? (No — that sound is not in Bengali.) And which letter is its voiced partner? (ধ.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

37.2 এখানে (ekhāne) — here

Write it: থ

Then say this shirt.

You'll want to know: এখানে

চা এখানে — chā ekhāne — the tea is here.

সে এখানে — she ekhāne — he is here.

Thirty-six chapters, and nothing in this book has had a place. Things could be named, pointed at, counted, owned and acted upon, and not one of them could be said to be anywhere.

এখানে takes the near head এ- you have owned since chapter thirty-two and puts it on a frame that means place. And as with এটা জল, there is no verb in the middle: the thing, then where it is, and stop.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The head এ- points back to Sanskrit ēṣa, "this" (CDIAL 2530). CDIAL has no entry for the place frame -khāne, so its origin is not settled.

Grammar Lens: the grid, now in three dimensions

head	frame	word
এ- near	thing	এটা
এ- near	person	এ
এ- near	place	এখানে
ও- far	thing	ওটা
ও- far	person	ও
ও- far	place	next lesson
ক- asking	thing	কী
ক- asking	person	কে
ক- asking	place	the lesson after

Nine cells, three heads, three frames. You have met seven of the nine, and the last two arrive in the next two lessons — which is the whole reason the pointing chapter was worth its five lessons.
And the denial is already yours: চা এখানে নেই — the tea is not here — using the নেই of chapter twenty-seven, which denies existence rather than identity.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chā ekhāne
- she ekhāne, then āmi ekhāne
- the denial — chā ekhāne nei
- with the classifier — chāṭā ekhāne
- the near head on all three frames — eṭā, e, ekhāne

Before you move on

Which head is inside এখানে? (এ-, the near one.) Is there a word for is in চা এখানে? (No.) And which word denies it? (নেই — the one that denies existence.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

37.3 ওখানে (okhāne) — there

Say the tea is here. Then say that shirt. Now guess this lesson's word before you read it.

You'll want to know: ওখানে

সে ওখানে — she okhāne — he is there.

If you guessed it, that is the lesson. Swap the head and cross the room, exactly as এই became ওই five chapters ago. The frame does not change; only the first letter does.

- এখানে — here, where I am
- ওখানে — there, where I am not

Two places, as there were two distances. Bengali does not add a third.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The far head ও- has Middle Bengali oū, "that", behind it, from Sanskrit asau (CDIAL 972); CDIAL has no entry for the frame -khāne, so its origin is not settled.

Grammar Lens: eight of nine

head	frame	word
এ- near	place	এখানে
ও- far	place	ওখানে
এ- near	thing	এটা
ও- far	thing	ওটা
ক- asking	thing	কী
ক- asking	person	কে
ক- asking	place	one cell left

Eight cells filled. The ninth is the next lesson, and it is the question an A1 examiner asks in the first minute of a speaking test.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- she okhāne
- the pair — āmi ekhāne, she okhāne
- the denial — she okhāne nei
- a whole group over there — bôndhurā okhāne
- the far head on all three frames — oṭā, o, okhāne

Before you move on

What is the only difference between এখানে and ওখানে? (The head — near against far.) How many places does Bengali distinguish? (Two.) And which cell of the grid is still empty? (The asking one, for place.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

37.4 কোথায় (kothāy) — where?

Say here and there. Then ask who?

You'll want to know: কোথায়

তুমি কোথায়? — tumi kothāy? — where are you?

জামাটা কোথায়? — jāmāṭā kothāy? — where is the shirt?

The ninth cell, and the grid is closed:

head	frame	word
এ- near	thing	এটা
এ- near	person	এ
এ- near	place	এখানে
ও- far	thing	ওটা
ও- far	person	ও
ও- far	place	ওখানে
ক- asking	thing	কী
ক- asking	person	কে
ক- asking	place	কোথায়

Three heads, three frames, nine words — and you were shown the first head six chapters ago and have been filling the table in ever since.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Its head is the question stem ka- (CDIAL 2574); CDIAL has no entry for kothā, so the rest is not settled.

Grammar Lens: the question and its answer are the same shape

Ask down the bottom row and answer up the two rows above it:

তুমি কোথায়? — আমি এখানে

এটা কী? — এটা চা

The same ক- opens কখন, which chapter thirty showed you inside a table of three heads without ever making it a word you could use. The grid was there before the words were.
Note the spelling: কোথায় ends in য়, the dotted য, and it is a glide, not a j.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tumi kothāy? — and answer — āmi ekhāne
- jāmāṭā kothāy? — and answer — jāmāṭā okhāne
- the three questions of the bottom row — eṭā ki?, ke?, kothāy?

Before you move on

Which head opens কোথায়? (ক-, the asking one.) Which two words answer it? (এখানে and ওখানে.) And what letter does it end in? (য়, the dotted one — a glide.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

37.5 Your first question from meaning

Close the earlier lessons. Recall tea and the place question where? without writing either word yet.

Writing: assemble one familiar question

From meaning alone, write Where is the tea? There is no word bank, romanization, or copyable sentence. Choose the two familiar pieces, put them in Bengali order, and add the Bengali question mark. This first composition is untimed: finish before opening the answer key.

Your turn: repair one difference

Check the thing, place question, word boundary, and punctuation separately. Repair the first difference and write the whole question once more from meaning.

Before you move on

What made this composition rather than copying? (You selected and ordered two known pieces from meaning, with no visible Bengali answer.)
One controlled line proves this rung, not the later timed A1 writing task.

37.6 Here, there, and where

Three heads and three frames make nine words. Say the whole grid out loud, one row at a time.

Your turn

- Write it: থ, then উ
- Say it: tumi kothāy? — āmi ekhāne — she okhāne
- Say it: the denial — chā ekhāne nei
- Recall: two chapters back, the ending that marks the one a thing is done to — -ke

Your turn: the distant band — the whole tranche, cold

Seven chapters ago this book could not write the letter উ, could not say the or a, could not make a plural, could not name a third person, could not mark who a thing was done to, and could not put anything anywhere. Run all of it, cold, from memory.

Say these aloud:

- the classifier and its two doors — jāmāṭā, ekṭā jāmā, ārekṭā jāmā
- the pointing pair, and both ends at once — ei jāmāṭā, oi jāmāṭā
- the question that decides the plural — is it জীব or জিনিস?
- the two plurals — bhāirā, bônerā; jāmāgulo, nākgulo
- an adjective that never changes — shôbuj jāmā, shôbuj jāmāgulo
- the six persons — āmi, āmrā, tumi, tomrā, she, tārā — and the careful ones, āpni, tini
- whose — āmār, tār, āmāder, tāder
- to whom — āmāke, tomāke, tāke, bhāike
- the three questions — eṭā ki?, ke?, kothāy?
- and where things are — bhāṭṭā ekhāne, chāṭā okhāne, āmāder pôribār ekhāne
- the longest phrase this book can now build — āmāder ei shôbuj jāmāṭā okhāne

Before you move on

What are the three heads? (এ- near, ও- far, ক- asking.) What are the three frames? (Thing, person, place.) One question chose the plural, the classifier and the object ending — what was it? (Is the noun alive?) And which two letters had to be taught before any of these seven chapters could be written? (ট and থ.)

Chapter 38

Which One in the Line

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 4 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say first to fifth in Bengali, put an ordinal in front of a noun without changing it, and say which layer of the language every one of them comes from.
> Complete BN-R27-first-to-fifth, run prothom to ponchom, and say which one of the five you could have built from a number you already had.

38.1 দ্বিতীয় (ditiyô) — second, and the second layer it comes from

A second kind of number word starts here, so the recalls come first, at the three growing distances this book can measure.

- Write it: থ from memory — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say he, she — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say welcome — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: দ্বিতীয়

দ্বিতীয় — ditiyô — second

দ্বিতীয় জামাটা — ditiyô jāmāṭā — the second shirt

দুই answers how many. দ্বিতীয় answers which one in the line, and it stands in front of its noun and never changes, the way লাল does. No agreement to learn.

Read it: the spelling and the romanization again

They disagree: written দ্ব -, said di-. The cluster is on the page and gone from the mouth.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Chapter twelve told you two things about the old Sanskrit dv-: that it is gone from the everyday numeral in Bengali, Hindi and Marathi alike, and that it is alive in words borrowed straight back out of Sanskrit. It gave you দ্বার dvār, "door", as its example and left it there. দ্বিতীয় is another of those words, and this time it is a number.

layer	two	second
everyday, inherited	দুই dui	—
borrowed back from Sanskrit	—	দ্বিতীয় ditiyô

Bengali keeps two layers of number word. You count in the inherited one; every ordinal in this chapter comes out of the other. That is why none of the five will look much like the numbers you already say.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dui, then ditiyô
- ditiyô jāmāṭā
- what is written and what is said — dva on the page, di in the mouth

Before you move on

How many layers of number word does Bengali keep? (Two.)
Which one do you count in? (The inherited one — ek, dui, tin, chār, pā̃ch.) Does দ্বিতীয় change its ending for the noun? (No — like লাল, it never changes.)
Sources: Wiktionary: দ্বিতীয়.

38.2 তৃতীয় (tritiyô) — third, and an ending that now has two members

Four recalls, then the second half of a pair.

- Recall: say second — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say here — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say the respectful he, she — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say red — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: তৃতীয়

তৃতীয় — tritiyô — third

তৃতীয় লাল জামাটা — tritiyô lāl jāmāṭā — the third red shirt

Two adjectives now stand in front of one noun, and neither of them changes. Say তিন, then তৃতীয়: the ত carries over and almost nothing else does.

Same disagreement between page and mouth as last lesson, in a smaller way: the ৃ under the ত is written and the r it stands for is not said.

What you've built: -তীয় is a shape, not a coincidence

Set the two side by side and the tails match:

ordinal	Sanskrit word it was borrowed from
দ্বিতীয় — ditiyô	dvitīya
তৃতীয় — tritiyô	tṛtīya

Wiktionary calls তৃতীয় a learned borrowing from Sanskrit tṛtīya in those words. Two Sanskrit words ended alike, in -tīya, and the two Bengali words borrowed from them end alike too, in -তীয়.
One word ending a certain way is a fact about that word. Two is a shape, and this is the second — which is why the ending is being named now and was not named last lesson.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- tin, then tritiyô
- ditiyô, tritiyô — the pair, back to back
- tritiyô lāl jāmāṭā

Before you move on

What is left of তিন inside তৃতীয়? (The ত.) How many words share the -তীয় ending so far? (Two.) Why was the ending not named one lesson earlier? (One word is not a shape.)
Sources: Wiktionary: তৃতীয়.

38.3 চতুর্থ (choturthô) — fourth, on an ending of its own

Four recalls, then an ordinal that will not join the pair.

- Recall: say third, and the ending it shares — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say there — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say him, her, of the one standing there — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say blue — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: চতুর্থ

চতুর্থ — choturthô — fourth

চতুর্থ নীল জামাটা — choturthô nīl jāmāṭā — the fourth blue shirt

Say চার, then চতুর্থ. Two pieces cross over this time, the চ and the র, which is more of its number than any ordinal you have met keeps. The tail is থ — the letter this book waited longest for, and its second job in five lessons.

What you've built: three endings, and only one of them repeats

Samsad's Bengali-English Dictionary gives চতুর্থ its own headword and romanizes it caturtha: Sanskrit caturtha, "fourth", unaltered, a tatsama; the inherited form is cauth, "a quarter" (CDIAL 4600). Same layer as the last two, different ending:

ending	words
-তীয়	দ্বিতীয়, তৃতীয়
-র্থ	চতুর্থ

One member, so this book will not call it a pattern. It is named so you can see that the borrowed layer arrived with more than one shape in it — Sanskrit did not build all its ordinals the same way, and Bengali took them as they were.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- chār, then choturthô
- ditiyô, tritiyô, choturthô — two tails, then a third
- choturthô nīl jāmāṭā

Before you move on

How many endings have the four ordinals shown so far? (Two — -তীয় twice and -র্থ once.) Which layer are they all from? (The borrowed Sanskrit one.)
Sources: Samsad Bengali-English Dictionary, চতুর্থ, p. 346 (DSAL).

38.4 প্রথম (prothom) — first, and an irregularity Bengali inherited whole

Four recalls, then the word with nothing of its number in it.

- Recall: say fourth — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: ask where? — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say his, her — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say black — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: প্রথম

প্রথম — prothom — first

প্রথম কালো জামাটা — prothom kālo jāmāṭā — the first black shirt

Say এক, then প্রথম. Not one sound crosses over. তৃতীয় kept its ত, চতুর্থ kept a চ and a র, and this word keeps nothing.

It carries an everyday second use too: earliest, chief, best — first in the class as much as first in the line.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Wiktionary calls প্রথম a learned borrowing from Sanskrit prathama, in the same words it uses for তৃতীয়. So all four ordinals so far come out of the same shelf, and three of them are built on their own Sanskrit number: dvitīya on dvi, tṛtīya on tri, caturtha on catur.

prathama is not built on anything of the kind. Sanskrit's word for one was eka — the word এক still is — and prathama has never shared a sound with it. The gap you are looking at is older than Bengali: Bengali borrowed the word entire, hole and all, and had no hand in making it.

Had this word come first you would have had to take it as a Bengali oddity. Coming fourth, after a shape has held twice and a second ending has appeared once, it can be read for what it is.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ek, then prothom — and notice nothing carries over
- prothom, ditiyô, tritiyô, choturthô
- prothom kālo jāmāṭā

Before you move on

How much of এক is inside প্রথম? (None.) Whose gap is it? (Sanskrit's — Bengali borrowed the word as it stood.) What else can প্রথম mean? (Earliest, chief, best.)

Sources: Wiktionary: প্রথম; Samsad Bengali-English Dictionary, প্রথম, p. 682 (DSAL).

38.5 ঞ — the nasal of the চ row

Write চ, জ and ন. Say where each one is made.

- Recall: say first — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say white — R4, eighty lessons back

Script

How ঞ is written, stroke by stroke

ঞ

Chapter thirty-seven drew a square: ত থ দ ধ, four letters made in one place, sorted by voice and breath. A row of the Bengali grid has a fifth member — a nasal made in that same place. For the teeth row it is ন, and you have been writing it since the first word in this book.

ঞ is the fifth member of a different row, the one whose letters are made with the tongue flat against the roof of the mouth:

the row	letters you have
voiceless	চ chô, ছ chhô
voiced	জ jô
nasal	ঞ nyô

Say চ and then hum through your nose without moving your tongue. That is ঞ.

You will almost never meet it standing on its own. In modern Bengali it does its work joined to the letter beside it, and the joining you need is ঞ

— ঞ with চ, the nasal in front of the stop it is made with. That is the next lesson's word.

Your turn

- Write it: ঞ
- Say it: চ, then ঞ — same place, the nose opened
- Write it: ঞ্চ
- Say it: the three nasals this book now has — ন, ঞ, and the chandrabindu ঁ, which is a nasal with no letter of its own

Before you move on

Where is ঞ made? (Where চ is — the tongue on the roof of the mouth.) What makes it different from চ? (The nose is open.) Which joined form will you need? (ঞ্চ.)
Source: Unicode Bengali chart.

38.6 পঞ্চম (ponchom) — fifth, and the two layers touching

Three recalls, then the word the last lesson bought a letter for.

- Write it: ঞ from memory, and say where it is made — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say we — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say green — R4, eighty lessons back

You'll want to know: পঞ্চম

পঞ্চম — ponchom — fifth

পঞ্চম সবুজ জামাটা — ponchom sobuj jāmāṭā — the fifth green shirt

There is the ঞ্চ you wrote last lesson, between a প and a ম. Its outline is one you already know: প … nasal … চ.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Samsad's dictionary has the entry this chapter has been building towards. Its headword is পঞ্চ ponchô, glossed five, with পঞ্চম listed under it as fifth. The borrowed layer has its own five, and its fifth is built on it. Put the two fives one above the other:

layer	five
borrowed from Sanskrit	পঞ্চ — ponchô
everyday, inherited	পাঁচ — pā̃ch

Same প. Same চ. Between them, in the borrowed word a whole letter, ঞ; in the everyday word the ঁ you were told in chapter twelve was "the chandrabindu, nasalising the vowel".

পাঁচ is পঞ্চ with the nasal letter worn down into a moon-dot, and that is not a guess. Wiktionary's entry for পাঁচ writes its Sanskrit source as পঞ্চ and walks the road between them: pañca, then paṃca, then a Middle Bengali form already spelled with the mark, then পাঁচ. The letter thins to a nasal sign and then to a nasal vowel.

The two layers this chapter opened with are not two vocabularies that happen to sit side by side. In this word you can watch one of them turning into the other, and the whole of the evidence is four letters wide.

Your turn

- Say it: pā̃ch, then ponchô, then ponchom
- Write it: পঞ্চম
- Say it: ponchom sobuj jāmāṭā

Before you move on

What is পঞ্চম built on? (পঞ্চ, the borrowed five.) And what is পাঁচ? (The same word, worn down.) Which ordinal in this chapter is built on no number at all? (প্রথম.)

Sources: Samsad Bengali-English Dictionary, পঞ্চ, p. 604 (DSAL); Wiktionary: পাঁচ.

38.7 First to fifth, in order at last

Four recalls before the run.

- Recall: say fifth — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say second, and which layer it comes from — R2, six lessons back
- Recall: say you, more than one — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: read লাল — R4, eighty lessons back

Nothing new arrives here. This is the first time the five stand in numerical order, and that has been deliberate.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- prothom ditiyô tritiyô choturthô ponchom — the run, without stopping
- the two endings — -তীয় twice, -র্থ once

What you've built this chapter, in one table

the layer you count in	the layer the ordinals come from
এক ek	প্রথম prothom
দুই dui	দ্বিতীয় ditiyô
তিন tin	তৃতীয় tritiyô
চার chār	চতুর্থ choturthô
পাঁচ p̃ach	পঞ্চম ponchom

Read the last row again. Those two are the same word at two ends of a long road, and the difference between them is a letter you learned two lessons ago turning into a mark you learned in chapter twelve. The chapter cost exactly one new letter, ঞ, and spent it on the row that proves the point.

Before you move on

Which layer are all five ordinals from? (The borrowed Sanskrit one.) Which of them has no number inside it at all? (প্রথম — and the gap is Sanskrit's, not Bengali's.) Which two rows of the table are the same word? (পাঁচ and পঞ্চ.)

Chapter 39

Ten Shapes, and Two That Lie

Modes: 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (11) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 12 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read any number written in Bengali digits off a page – a price, a year, a house number – and I know exactly which two of the ten shapes my own reading will get wrong.
> Complete BN-R28-read-a-number: read a price off a shirt tag, read a year, and read a page number made of all four difficult shapes without hesitating.

39.1 ০ — the Bengali zero

- Recall: say fourth — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say they — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: read কালো off the page — R4, eighty lessons back

Sixty script lessons have taught you letters. Reading কালো is reading letters. Every one of the twelve lessons ahead of you puts something on the page that is not a letter at all, and this book has never done that before.

Script

That is the Bengali digit zero.

Put it beside the zero you already read: 0. A ring, closed, standing on the line, meaning none. Bengali writes it the same way, and means the same thing.

That is not a coincidence and it is worth knowing before the other nine arrive. Wikipedia describes the Bengali numerals as a variety of the Hindu–Arabic numeral system — the same system as the digits on your keyboard, not a rival one. They are positional, they are read left to right, and ০ does the same job at the end of a number as 0 does at the end of 10.

There is no Bengali WORD for zero in this book yet. Today it is a shape you can read.

Your turn

- Write it: ০
- Say it: the five numbers you can already count — ek, dui, tin, chār, pā̃ch

Before you move on

What is ০? (Zero.) Is it a letter? (No — the first thing in this book that is not.) Which system do the Bengali digits belong to? (The same one as 0–9.)
Sources: Unicode Bengali chart; Wikipedia: Bengali–Assamese numerals.

39.2 ২ — the Bengali two

- Recall: read ০ — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say first — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: say our — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: read সাদা off the page — R4, eighty lessons back

Script

That is the Bengali digit two, and you can say it: দুই.

Set it beside 2. The top curls the other way and the foot is a diagonal rather than a bar, but the gross shape is the same — a turn at the top, a stroke running down to the right. Nobody would call ২ a two from nothing; anybody who already reads 2 can be told once and keep it.

So the count of shapes that cost you almost nothing now stands at two, and both of them mean exactly what the shape you already know means. Remember that. It stops being true in this chapter, and the place where it stops is the whole point of the chapter.

Your turn

- Write it: ২
- Say it: দুই, then read ২ and ২০

Before you move on

What is ২? (Two — দুই.) What is ২০? (Twenty.) How many shapes so far have meant the same as the shape you already knew? (Both of them.)
Sources: Unicode Bengali chart.

39.3 ৩ — the Bengali three

- Recall: read ২ — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: write ঞ and say where it is made — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: write the long ী sign — R4, eighty lessons back

ী hangs on a letter and cannot stand alone. A digit is the opposite: it stands alone and hangs on nothing. Keep that difference in front of you, because this one looks like a letter.

Script

৩

That is the Bengali digit three, and you can say it: তিন.
Now put it beside a letter you have had since the opening chapters:

	shape
the digit three	৩
the letter o	ও

They are the same rounded body. ও carries a stroke down its right-hand side; ৩ does not, and that is the entire difference between a number and a letter here.

This is the only digit in the chapter that collides with a Bengali letter you have been taught, and the fix is one stroke wide: if it has the tail on the right, it is a letter.

Your turn

- Write it: ৩
- Say it: তিন, then read ৩, then read ও
- Write it: ৩০ and ২৩

Before you move on

What tells ও from ৩? (The stroke on the right.) What is ২৩? (Twenty-three.)
Sources: Unicode Bengali chart.

39.4 ১ — the Bengali one

- Recall: read ৩, and say what tells it from ও — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say fifth, and the cardinal hiding inside it — R2, five lessons back
- Recall: put -কে on a pronoun — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: read নীল off the page — R4, eighty lessons back

Script

১

That is the Bengali digit one, and you can say it: এক.

Nothing helps you here. 1 is a bare stroke; ১ is a curl that starts high, comes down and hooks back to the right at the foot. There is no shape you already own to hang it on, and no letter it can be confused with.

That is worth naming rather than hiding: ০, ২ and ৩ each arrived carrying something. This one is simply learned, and so are the two after it.

Read ১০ — one, then zero. Ten.

Your turn

- Write it: ১
- Say it: এক, then read ১, ১০, ১৩

Before you move on

What is ১? (One — এক.) What did it bring with it that the first three digits did? (Nothing.) What is ১০? (Ten.)
Sources: Unicode Bengali chart.

39.5 ৫ — the Bengali five

- Recall: read ১ — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say me, the object form — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: read তিন off the page — R4, eighty lessons back

That last recall is the one this chapter exists for. তিন is the word three, spelled with three letters, and you have been able to read it for eighty lessons. ৩ is the digit 3, and until two lessons ago you could not read it at all. A book can print either one, and they are not the same object.

Script

That is the Bengali digit five, and you can say it: পাঁচ.

Another one that brings nothing: a hooked stroke over an open bowl, like a C with a lid. 5 will not help you and no Bengali letter you know is close to it.

You can now read every number written out of ০ ১ ২ ৩ ৫, which is most of a page number and all of a small count.

Your turn

- Write it: ৫
- Say it: পাঁচ, then read ৫, ৫০, ১৫
- Say it: which of these is a word and which is a digit — তিন, ৩

Before you move on

What is ৫? (Five — পাঁচ.) What is the difference between তিন and ৩? (One is the word, the other is the digit.)
Sources: Unicode Bengali chart.

39.6 ৬ — the Bengali six

- Recall: read ৫ — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say you, as the one it happens to — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: read এক off the page — R4, eighty lessons back

That is the Bengali digit six: a bowl at the foot with a tail rising away to the right. 6 does not help — its loop is at the bottom left and its stem comes down from above, which is nearly the reverse.

And here your count runs out. This book has taught you এক to পাঁচ and no further, so you can now read a number you have no Bengali word for. That is a real gap and it is worth stating plainly rather than covering: from here to the end of the chapter you are learning to READ four numbers you cannot yet SAY. The words are a separate piece of work.

Reading is still worth having on its own. A page number, a price and a date are all read far more often than they are said aloud.

Your turn

- Write it: ৬

- Say it: the five numbers you CAN say, then stop where the book stops

Before you move on

What is ৬? (Six.) Can you say it in Bengali yet? (No — the count in this book stops at পাঁচ.) Does that stop you reading it? (No.) Sources: Unicode Bengali chart.

39.7 ৮ — the Bengali eight

- Recall: read ৬ — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: ask who? — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say and read কাপড় — R4, eighty lessons back

কাপড় is the first thing this book taught you that has a price on it. Hold on to it; you will read a price before this chapter ends.

Script

That is the Bengali digit eight: an upright stroke with a single small bowl at the bottom right — much closer to a lower-case b than to anything numeric.

Look hard at it and notice what it is not. It has one bowl. 8 has two, stacked. Whatever the two-loop shape means in Bengali, it does not mean eight — and something has to mean it, because the shape exists.

That is the next lesson, and it is the one place in this chapter where the digits you already read will tell you a lie.

Your turn

- Write it: ৮
- Say it: how many bowls ৮ has, and how many 8 has

Before you move on

What is ৮? (Eight.) How many bowls does it have? (One.) What does the two-bowl shape mean in Bengali? (Not eight — and you are about to find out what.)
Sources: Unicode Bengali chart.

39.8 ৪ — the Bengali four

- Recall: read ৮, and say how many bowls it has — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say and read জামা — R4, eighty lessons back

Script

৪

That is the Bengali digit four, and you can say it: চার.
It is two loops, stacked. It is the shape of an 8.

shape	in the digits you already read	in Bengali
two stacked loops	eight	four
upright with one bowl	nothing	eight

Read the top row again. Every reflex you have says eight, and it is wrong by four every single time — on a price, on a bus number, on a year.

The first three digits of this chapter arrived meaning exactly what their shape already meant to you. This one arrives meaning something else, and it is not a near miss: ৪ and 8 are the same drawing.

The defence is the lesson before this one. If you are unsure, ask how many bowls: two bowls is four; one bowl is eight.

Your turn

- Write it: ৪
- Say it: চার, then read ৪, ৪৮, ৮৪

Before you move on

What is ৪? (Four — চার.) What does your eye want it to be? (Eight.) Which question settles it? (How many bowls?)
Sources: Unicode Bengali chart; Wiktionary: ৪.

39.9 ৯ — the Bengali nine

- Recall: read ৪, and say what your eye wants it to be — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: write খ — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say sari, shāṛi — R4, eighty lessons back

৯

That is the Bengali digit nine: a small closed body with a tail sweeping up and away to the right.

Once again, look at what it is not. 9 is a ring with a straight stem dropping below it. ৯ has no dropped stem at all; its tail goes the other way, upward.

You have seen this pattern one lesson ago. The Bengali digit for eight did not take the 8 shape, and the 8 shape turned out to belong to four. The Bengali digit for nine does not take the 9 shape either — so ask the same question. Something takes it.

Your turn

- Write it: ৯
- Say it: which way the tail of ৯ goes, and which way the stem of 9 goes

Before you move on

What is ৯? (Nine.) Does it look like 9? (No — the tail goes up, not down.) Which two Bengali digits have now refused the shape you expected? (Eight and nine.)
Sources: Unicode Bengali chart.

39.10 ৭ — the Bengali seven

- Recall: read ৯, and say which way its tail goes — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say here — R3, twenty lessons back
- Recall: say glasses, choshma — R4, eighty lessons back

Script

৭

That is the Bengali digit seven, and it is the shape of a 9: a closed body at the top with a straight stem dropping from its right side.

The chapter's second false friend, and the last shape in the set:

shape	in the digits you already read	in Bengali
two stacked loops	eight	four
body with a dropped stem	nine	seven

Both lies run the same way. In each case the Bengali digit for that value — ৮ for eight, ৯ for nine — took a different shape, leaving the familiar one standing empty; and in each case a smaller number moved into it.

Two out of ten shapes will actively mislead you. The other eight will not. That ratio is worth carrying, because it is the reason to slow down on exactly two shapes rather than to distrust the whole page.

Your turn

- Write it: ৭
- Say it: the two shapes that lie, and what each one really means

Before you move on

What is ৭? (Seven.) What does the shape say? (Nine.) How many of the ten shapes mislead? (Two.)
Sources: Unicode Bengali chart.

39.11 The two that lie, and the eight that do not

- Recall: read ৭, and say what the shape claims — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say there — R3, twenty lessons back

Script

Ten shapes are in your hand. Here they are in order:

০ ১ ২ ৩ ৪ ৫ ৬ ৭ ৮ ৯

A rule with an edge at each end, and both edges matter:

the band	what it means for you where the shapes AGREE	০ is a 0 and means zero. ২ is close to a 2 and means two. Trust these.
where they are simply NEW	১ ৩ ৫ ৬ ৮ ৯ carry no Western digit's shape at all, so there is nothing to be misled by. ৩ is the one to watch against a letter, not against a digit: ৩ is the same body with a stroke down its right side.
where they LIE	৪ is drawn as an 8 and means four. ৭ is drawn as a 9 and means seven. Nowhere else.

Two of ten. Say them as a pair and they stay a pair: the eight is a four, the nine is a seven — and in both cases the Bengali digit that really means eight or nine is a shape you would never mistake for anything.

That is the whole rule. Eight shapes ask you to learn them; two ask you to un-learn something first.

Your turn

- Say it: the two that lie, then the eight that do not

Before you move on

Which two shapes mislead? (The 8-shape, which is four; the 9-shape, which is seven.) Which digit is confusable with a letter rather than with a digit? (৩, against ৩.) How many of the ten are safe? (Eight.)

Sources: Unicode Bengali chart.

39.12 Reading a number off a page

Two recalls, then the reading.

- Recall: name the two shapes that lie — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: ask where? — R3, twenty lessons back

Nothing new arrives here.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- কাপড়, then read a price beside it — ৮০
- কোথায়?, then read a house number — ৩৪

What you've built this chapter

Sixty script lessons taught you letters, and one of them, long ago, taught you to read তিন. That was the word. Until this chapter you could not read ৩, and so you could not read a price, a date, a clock face or a page number — the things a reader meets far more often than they meet a sentence.
Ten shapes closed that. Eight of them were simply learned; ০ and ২ cost almost nothing because the Bengali digits and the digits on your keyboard are one system rather than two; and two of them — ৪ and ৭ — had to be taken away from a reflex before they could be given to you.
What this chapter did not do is teach you to SAY six, seven, eight, nine or zero. Those words are not in this book yet. You can read every number on the page and speak the first five of them, and the gap between those two abilities is now the most useful thing left undone in this column.

Before you move on

Read 𝟾𝟿. (Forty-seven — not ninety-eight.) Which numbers can you now read? (All of them.) Which can you say? (One to five.)

Chapter 40

Reading — Words, Lines, a First Passage, and Timed Writing

Modes: eyes (3) pen (1) Hands-free start: none of the 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read a Bengali word, line, and short passage, then complete the A1 writing paper within 20 minutes.
> Complete the chapter's final lesson: fill a six-field form and write a 30–40 word named-reader message within the A1 paper's 20-minute limit.

40.1 (reading) — six words under one line

Every word below you have written. Not one is new.

What is new is that nobody says them first.

Read this

ভাত চা জল দুধ ভাই বোন

Read down the list once, without stopping.
Again, and look at the top of each word rather than at the letters.

What to know first

Bengali hangs its letters from a line instead of standing them on one. That line runs unbroken across a whole word and stops at its edge.

So the line is a word boundary you can see before you have read anything. A Bengali word looks like one object first and a row of signs second, which is the opposite of how you learned to write it.

ভাই and বোন are the shortest pair here and the easiest to tell apart at a glance, for exactly that reason.

Your turn

- Say it: the six words down the list, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
What shows you where a Bengali word ends? (The line stops.)

40.2 (reading) — six lines, and a bow nobody makes

The last lesson gave you words. These are things you would say.

You have said every one of them.

Read this

নমস্কার। ধন্যবাদ। হ্যাঁ। না। দয়া করে। স্বাগতম।

Read it: the six lines down once, without stopping
Read it: the six lines again, and notice the mark at the end of each line
It is not a full stop but a দাঁড়ি, a single upright stroke.

What to know first

নমস্কার is a bow written down: namas plus kara, the making of a bow. The commonest word in the language is a gesture that stopped being made.

দয়া করে is two words and means having done kindness. Bengali asks for things by describing what the other person has already generously done, which is a habit worth noticing on the page where it sits complete.

Six lines, and four of them are a single word.

Your turn

- Say it: the six lines, once, in order, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

What ends a Bengali sentence? (A দাঁড়ি — one upright stroke.)
What is নমস্কার, literally? (The making of a bow.)

40.3 (reading) — the first passage

Six words, then six lines. Now thirteen of them together.

Thirty-six words, and not one of them is new.

Read this

নমস্কার। আমার নাম রাম। আমি ভালো। এটা আমার ভাই। আমার পরিবার ভালো। আমি ভাত আর দুধ খাই। চা বা জল। আমি পড়ি। আমার বন্ধু এখানে। জামা লাল, কিন্তু কাপড় নীল। প্রথম আর দ্বিতীয়। হ্যাঁ, ভালো। ধন্যবাদ।

Read it: the passage once without stopping; do not translate as you go — let the sentences arrive
Read it: the passage again and find the three joining words

What to know first

আর adds. বা offers a choice. কিন্তু turns the sentence.

Two of those are inherited and the third is not: কিন্তু came through Persian, which is why it does not sound like its neighbours. You can hear the borrowing without being told about it.

Notice also that the verb is last in every line that has one. আমি ভাত আর দুধ খাই — the eating comes after everything eaten, which is where Bengali always puts it.

This is the first whole passage the book has asked you to hold at once, and it works because everything in it was paid for.

Your turn

- Say it: the passage aloud, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

Where does a Bengali verb go? (Last.)
Which of the three joiners is borrowed? (কিন্তু, through Persian.)

40.4 A short A1 writing checkpoint

This is a short independent attempt, not a model. You will write the answers, and this page will not show you any copyable Bengali answer.

Put away romanization, dictionaries, translators, and spell-checkers. Keep a blank page ready and set a three-minute timer. Write in Bengali script. Ordinary legible handwriting is enough; decorative calligraphy is not scored.

Writing — timed assessment production

One practical form — three minutes

Complete all six fields in Bengali script for a new neighbourhood activity group. Short answers are enough. Start the timer when you begin the first field; leave any unfinished field as evidence when it rings.

1. Your name
2. Where you live or stay
3. A language you speak
4. One everyday action or kind of work you do
5. One drink or food you like
6. One person in your family

When the three-minute timer rings, stop. Record the number of completed fields. An honest short attempt is more useful than a perfect untimed one.

Before you move on

Spend at most one minute looking at this first attempt. Note one field you completed clearly and one field to practise next; do not rewrite the timed answer. Keep the page as evidence.
This checkpoint is not the complete A1 writing paper. On another day, close this lesson and open the separate A1 mock 1 learner paper for the authentic form and named-reader message under one 20-minute assessment clock. That paper and its later rubric review are a separate assessment session, not work inside this four-minute lesson. The second mock is a separate repeat, not a model to copy.

Chapter 41

Letters You Have Read All Along

Modes: 👁 eyes (2) ✓ pen (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write anusvar, bisarga, jha, pha and sha, and find each one in a word I already say.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 41: I can write anusvar, bisarga, jha, pha and sha, and find each one in a word I already say.

41.1 ◌ং (anusvar) — the ng in বাংলা

> Before the new one: write থ and ঞ once each, and name them.
> Now say বাংলা (bānglā), "Bengali". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ◌ং

◌ং — anusvar, the sound ng.

It is inside বাংলা (bānglā), the name of the language itself. The small mark right after বা closes that syllable with ng.

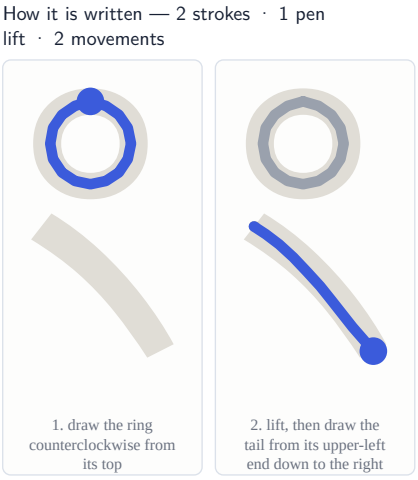
Writing: ◌ং



How ◌ং is written, stroke by stroke

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your pen makes it. Then write ◌ং yourself — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> The strip shows where to start this letter and which way to travel, in one attested order, and names its source beneath it. Teachers vary, so treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

Your turn

- Look: at বাংলা and point at ◌ং inside it
- Trace it: ◌ং three times, saying ng as you finish each one
- Write it: ঞ, then ◌ং, from memory
- Read it: বাংলা aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ঃ? (anusvar, ng.) Which word did it come from? (বাংলা, bānglā, "Bengali".)

41.2 ঃ (bisarga) — the two dots in দুঃখিত

Before the new one: write ঞ and ং once each, and name them.

Now say দুঃখিত (dukkhito), "sorry". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ঃ

ঃ — bisarga, two small circles one above the other.

It is inside দুঃখিত (dukkhito), "sorry". Bengali does not say the bisarga as a sound of its own here: it doubles the consonant after it, so দুঃখিত is said dukkhito.

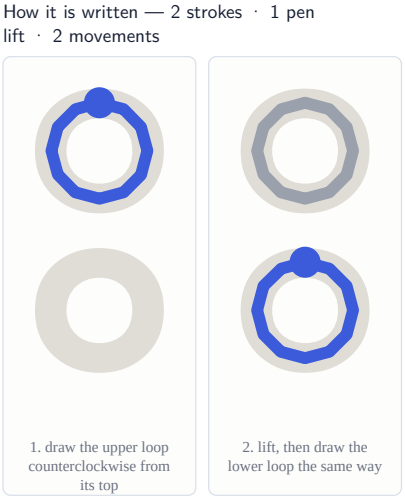
Writing: ঃ



Stroke order after HP Labs India, Lipi Toolkit, Lipi Indic Character Recognizers 4.0, Bangla recognizer, class 47 (ঃ bisarga; user manual Table 4): stored online-handwriting prototypes from native Bengali writers (MIT licence, 2012). This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How ঃ is written, stroke by stroke

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your pen makes it. Then write ঃ yourself — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> The strip shows where to start this letter and which way to travel, in one attested order, and names its source beneath it. Teachers vary, so treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

Your turn

- Look: at দুঃখিত and point at ঃ inside it
- Trace it: ঃ three times, saying kk as you finish each one
- Write it: ং, then ঃ, from memory
- Read it: দুঃখিত aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ঃ? (bisarga, kk.) Which word did it come from? (দুঃখিত, dukkhito, "sorry".)

41.3 ঝ (jha) — the letter inside বোঝা

> Before the new one: write ং and ঃ once each, and name them.
> Now say বোঝা (bojhā), "to understand". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ঝ

ঝ — jha, a j with a puff of breath.

It is inside বোঝা (bojhā), "to understand". Say boja, then bojhā: the second has the breath.

Writing: ঝ

Put your pen on ঝ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at বোঝা and point at ঝ inside it
- Trace it: ঝ three times, saying jh as you finish each one
- Write it: ঃ, then ঝ, from memory
- Read it: বোঝা aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ঝ? (jha, jh.) Which word did it come from? (বোঝা, bojhā, "to understand".)

41.4 ফ (pha) — the letter that ends মাফ

> Before the new one: write ঃ and ঝ once each, and name them.
> Now say মাফ (maf), "pardon". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: ফ

ফ — pha, a p with a puff of breath, and the letter Bengali uses for f in borrowed words.

It ends মাফ (maf), "pardon", in মাফ করবেন, "excuse me". The word came from Persian, and there ফ is read as f.

Writing: ফ

How ফ is written, stroke by stroke

Follow the numbered strip: start where movement 1 begins, and let each panel show you the next movement before your pen makes it. Then write ফ yourself — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> The strip shows where to start this letter and which way to travel, in one attested order, and names its source beneath it. Teachers vary, so treat it as a sound way in, not the only one.

Your turn

- Look: at মাফ and point at ফ inside it
- Trace it: ফ three times, saying ph as you finish each one
- Write it: ঝ, then ফ, from memory
- Read it: মাফ aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ফ? (pha, ph.) Which word did it come from? (মাফ, maf, "pardon".)

41.5 শ (sha) — the letter that opens শাড়ি

Before the new one: write ঝ and ফ once each, and name them.

Now say শাড়ি (shari), "sari". You have read it for a long time. This lesson takes one letter out of it and puts it in your hand.

Script you'll notice: শ

শ — sha, the sound sh.

It opens শাড়ি (shari), "sari", a word that went into English almost unchanged.

Writing: শ

Put your pen on শ and follow its line. Copy the shape you can see — slowly, and larger than it is printed.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start this letter or which way to travel. It is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying what is in front of you needs no such source, and it is how the shape gets into your hand in the meantime.

Your turn

- Look: at শাড়ি and point at শ inside it
- Trace it: শ three times, saying sh as you finish each one
- Write it: ফ, then শ, from memory
- Read it: শাড়ি aloud once more

Before you move on

Which letter is this — শ? (sha, sh.) Which word did it come from? (শাড়ি, shari, "sari".)

41.6 (five letters) — From the letter to the word — a first pass

Say বাংলা (bānglā), then write the letter it gave you.

Your turn

letter	name	the word it came from
◌ং	anusvar	বাংলা bānglā
◌ঃ	bisarga	দুঃখিত dukkhito
ঝ	jha	বোঝা bojhā
ফ	pha	মাফ maf
শ	sha	শাড়ি shari

- Write it: each letter in the table from memory, then check it
- Say it: the word each one came from
- Read it: each word in the table aloud, and point at its letter

Before you move on

Which word did each letter come from? (◌ং from বাংলা; ◌ঃ from দুঃখিত; ঝ from বোঝা; ফ from মাফ; শ from শাড়ি.)

41.7 (five letters) — From the word back to the letter — a second pass

Write শ without looking, then say the word it came from.

Your turn

letter	name	the word it came from
◌ং	anusvar	বাংলা bānglā
◌ঃ	bisarga	দুঃখিত dukkhito
ঝ	jha	বোঝা bojhā
ফ	pha	মাফ maf
শ	sha	শাড়ি shari

- Say it: each word in the table, then write the letter it gave you without looking
- Write it: each letter once more, slowly, larger than it is printed

Before you move on

Say each word in the table once more, and name the letter you took from it.

Chapter 42

Hand, Hair, Tooth, Throat, Stomach

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a hand, hair, a tooth, the throat and the stomach.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 42: I can say a hand, hair, a tooth, the throat and the stomach.

42.1 হাত (hāt) — a hand

Before the new one: say the Bengali for first, then the Bengali for fifth.

You'll want to know: হাত

হাত — hāt — "a hand".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হাত (hāt) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from hasta, "hand" (CDIAL 14024).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hāt
- Say it: hāt, once more
- Say it: say hāt
- Recall: say the Bengali for first, then the Bengali for fifth, then say hāt again

Before you move on

What does হাত mean? ("A hand".) Say it once more.

42.2 চুল (chul) — hair

Before the new one: say the Bengali for fifth, then the Bengali for a hand.

You'll want to know: চুল

চুল — chul — "hair".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চুল (chul) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from cūḍa, "topknot on the head" (CDIAL 4883). CDIAL takes cūḍa from Dravidian, while noting that it may instead belong with a group of words for "hair" traced to Munda.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: chul
- Say it: chul, once more
- Say it: say chul

- Recall: say the Bengali for fifth, then the Bengali for a hand, then say chul again

Before you move on

What does চুল mean? ("Hair".) Say it once more.

42.3 দাঁত (dā̃t) — a tooth

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a hand, then the Bengali for hair.

You'll want to know: দাঁত

দাঁত — dā̃t — "a tooth".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দাঁত (dāmit) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from danta, "tooth" (CDIAL 6152).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dā̃t
- Say it: dā̃t, once more
- Say it: say dā̃t
- Recall: say the Bengali for a hand, then the Bengali for hair, then say dā̃t again

Before you move on

What does দাঁত mean? ("A tooth".) Say it once more.

42.4 গলা (gôlā) — the throat

Before the new one: say the Bengali for hair, then the Bengali for a tooth.

You'll want to know: গলা

গলা — gôlā — "the throat".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

গলা (gôlā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from gala, "throat, neck" (CDIAL 4070).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gôlā
- Say it: gôlā, once more
- Say it: say gôlā
- Recall: say the Bengali for hair, then the Bengali for a tooth, then say gôlā again

Before you move on

What does গলা mean? ("The throat".) Say it once more.

42.5 পেট (peṭ) — the stomach

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a tooth, then the Bengali for the throat.

You'll want to know: পেট

পেট — peṭ — "the stomach".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পেট (peṭ) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from peṭṭa*, "belly", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 8376). CDIAL notes that it may be one word with a similar pēṭṭa*, "basket".

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a bear, then the Bengali for a donkey.

You'll want to know: প্রজাপতি

প্রজাপতি — prôjāpôti — "a butterfly".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

প্রজাপতি (prôjāpôti) is Sanskrit prajāpati, "lord of creatures", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama. Bengali uses the creator god's name for the butterfly.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prôjāpôti
- Say it: prôjāpôti, once more
- Say it: say prôjāpôti
- Recall: say the Bengali for a bear, then the Bengali for a donkey, then say prôjāpôti again

Before you move on

What does প্রজাপতি mean? ("A butterfly".) Say it once more.

71.4 পিঁপড়ে (pĩpṛe) — an ant

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a donkey, then the Bengali for a butterfly.

You'll want to know: পিঁপড়ে

পিঁপড়ে — pĩpṛe — "an ant".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পিঁপড়ে (pĩpṛe) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from pipīla, "ant" (CDIAL 8201). CDIAL writes the Bengali form pĩpiṛā.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pĩpṛe
- Say it: pĩpṛe, once more
- Say it: say pĩpṛe
- Recall: say the Bengali for a donkey, then the Bengali for a butterfly, then say pĩpṛe again

Before you move on

What does পিঁপড়ে mean? ("An ant".) Say it once more.

71.5 মুরগি (murgi) — a hen

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a butterfly, then the Bengali for an ant.

You'll want to know: মুরগি

মুরগি — murgi — "a hen".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মুরগি (murgi) is a loan, usually traced to Persian murgh, "bird, fowl".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: murgi
- Say it: murgi, once more
- Say it: say murgi
- Recall: say the Bengali for a butterfly, then the Bengali for an ant, then say murgi again

Before you move on

What does মুরগি mean? ("A hen".) Say it once more.

Chapter 72

Big, Small, New, Old, Bad

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say big, small, new, old and bad.

72.1 বড় (bôṛo) — big

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an ant, then the Bengali for a hen.

You'll want to know: বড়

বড় — bôṛo — "big".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বড় (bôṛo) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from vaḍra, "big" (CDIAL 11225). CDIAL rejects, as unlikely, a derivation from vṛddha, "grown".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bôṛo
- Say it: bôṛo, once more
- Say it: say bôṛo
- Recall: say the Bengali for an ant, then the Bengali for a hen, then say bôṛo again

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a hen, then the Bengali for big.

You'll want to know: ছোট

ছোট — chhoṭo — "small".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ছোট (chhoṭo) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from choṭṭa*, "small", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 5071).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: chhoṭo
- Say it: chhoṭo, once more
- Say it: say chhoṭo
- Recall: say the Bengali for a hen, then the Bengali for big, then say chhoṭo again

Before you move on

What does ছোট mean? ("Small".) Say it once more.

72.3 নতুন (nôtun) — new

Before the new one: say the Bengali for big, then the Bengali for small.

You'll want to know: নতুন

নতুন — nôtun — "new".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নতুন (nôtun) is usually traced to Sanskrit nūtana, "new, fresh", with its vowels rearranged. CDIAL has that entry but lists no Bengali form under it (CDIAL 7575).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nôtun
- Say it: nôtun, once more
- Say it: say nôtun
- Recall: say the Bengali for big, then the Bengali for small, then say nôtun again

Before you move on

What does নতুন mean? ("New".) Say it once more.

72.4 পুরনো (purôno) — old

Before the new one: say the Bengali for small, then the Bengali for new.

You'll want to know: পুরনো

পুরনো — purôno — "old".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পুরনো (purôno) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from purāṇa, "ancient" (CDIAL 8283).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: purôno
- Say it: purôno, once more
- Say it: say purôno
- Recall: say the Bengali for small, then the Bengali for new, then say purôno again

Before you move on

What does পুরনো mean? ("Old".) Say it once more.

72.5 খারাপ (khārāp) — bad

Before the new one: say the Bengali for new, then the Bengali for old.

You'll want to know: খারাপ

খারাপ — khārāp — "bad".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

খারাপ (khārāp) is a loan from Arabic kharāb, "ruin, desolation", which reached Bengali through Persian. Its Arabic root is kh-r-b (Lane). In Bengali it means "bad".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: khārāp
- Say it: khārāp, once more
- Say it: say khārāp
- Recall: say the Bengali for new, then the Bengali for old, then say khārāp again

Before you move on

What does খারাপ mean? ("Bad".) Say it once more.

Chapter 73

Long, Hot, Slowly, Quickly, Easy

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say long, tall, hot, slowly, quickly and easy.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 73: I can say long, tall, hot, slowly, quickly and easy.

73.1 লম্বা (lômbā) — long, tall

Before the new one: say the Bengali for old, then the Bengali for bad.

You'll want to know: লম্বা

লম্বা — lômbā — "long, tall".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

লম্বা (lômbā) goes back to Sanskrit lamba, "pendent; long". CDIAL gives no Bengali form under that entry, but it lists Assamese lambā, "long", and Oriya lambā, "long, tall", the forms nearest to Bengali (CDIAL 10951).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lômbā
- Say it: lômbā, once more
- Say it: say lômbā
- Recall: say the Bengali for old, then the Bengali for bad, then say lômbā again

You’ll want to know: আস্তে

আস্তে — āste — “slowly”.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আস্তে (āste) is a loan, usually traced to Persian āhista, “slow, gentle”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: āste
- Say it: āste, once more
- Say it: say āste
- Recall: say the Bengali for long, then the Bengali for hot, then say āste again

Before you move on

What does আস্তে mean? (“Slowly”.) Say it once more.

73.4 তাড়াতাড়ি (tāṛātāṛi) — quickly

Before the new one: say the Bengali for hot, then the Bengali for slowly.

You'll want to know: তাড়াতাড়ি

তাড়াতাড়ি — tāṛātāṛi — "quickly".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তাড়াতাড়ি (tāṛātāṛi) doubles tāṛā, "haste". Its origin is not settled: CDIAL has no entry for that word; the nearest form it gives is Bengali tāṛāna, "to drive away, drive on", under Sanskrit tāḍayati, "beats" (CDIAL 5752), and it does not link the two.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tāṛātāṛi
- Say it: tāṛātāṛi, once more
- Say it: say tāṛātāṛi
- Recall: say the Bengali for hot, then the Bengali for slowly, then say tāṛātāṛi again

74.1 দামি (dāmi) — expensive

Before the new one: say the Bengali for quickly, then the Bengali for easy.

You'll want to know: দামি

দামি — dāmi — "expensive".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দামি (dāmi) is dām, "price", with the ending -i. CDIAL lists Bengali dām under Sanskrit dramma, "a coin", which it traces to Greek drakhmē through Middle Persian (CDIAL 6622).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dāmi
- Say it: dāmi, once more
- Say it: say dāmi
- Recall: say the Bengali for quickly, then the Bengali for easy, then say dāmi again

Before you move on

74.2 সস্তা (sôstā) — cheap

Before the new one: say the Bengali for easy, then the Bengali for expensive.

You'll want to know: সস্তা

সস্তা — sôstā — "cheap".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of সস্তা (sôstā) is not settled. CDIAL has no entry for it, and a search of its word lists by form and by the gloss "cheap" turns up nothing of this shape; the same word in Hindi, sastā, is untraced there too.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sôstā
- Say it: sôstā, once more
- Say it: say sôstā

- Recall: say the Bengali for easy, then the Bengali for expensive, then say sôstā again

Before you move on

What does নিচু mean? ("Low".) Say it once more.

74.4 ভর্তি (bhôrti) — full

Before the new one: say the Bengali for cheap, then the Bengali for low.

You'll want to know: ভর্তি

ভর্তি — bhôrti — "full".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভর্তি (bhôrti) is built on the stem bhar-, "fill": CDIAL lists Bengali bharā, "to load", under Sanskrit bharati, "bears, fills" (CDIAL 9397), but has no entry for ভর্তি (bhôrti) itself.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bhôrti
- Say it: bhôrti, once more
- Say it: say bhôrti
- Recall: say the Bengali for cheap, then the Bengali for low, then say bhôrti again

Before you move on

You'll want to know: তেতো

তেতো — teto — "bitter".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তেতো (teto) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from tikta, "pungent, bitter" (CDIAL 5806). CDIAL writes the Bengali form tita.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: teto
- Say it: teto, once more
- Say it: say teto
- Recall: say the Bengali for poor, then the Bengali for dirty, then say teto again

Before you move on

What does তেতো mean? ("Bitter".) Say it once more.

75.5 টক (ṭôk) — sour

Before the new one: say the Bengali for dirty, then the Bengali for bitter.

You'll want to know: টক

টক — ṭôk — "sour".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

টক (ṭôk) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from takra, "buttermilk" (CDIAL 5617). CDIAL lists the Bengali word under a second sense it reconstructs, "bitter".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭôk

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to mix, then the Bengali for to throw.

You'll want to know: টেপা

টেপা — ṭepā — "to press".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of টেপা (ṭepā) is not settled. CDIAL has no entry for it; the nearest form it gives is Bengali ṭipā, "to pinch", under ṭipp* (CDIAL 5464), and it does not join the two.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭepā
- Say it: ṭepā, once more
- Say it: say ṭepā
- Recall: say the Bengali for to mix, then the Bengali for to throw, then say ṭepā again

Before you move on

What does টেপা mean? ("To press".) Say it once more.

106.3 আঁকা (ãkā) — to draw

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to throw, then the Bengali for to press.

You'll want to know: আঁকা

আঁকা — ãkā — "to draw".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আঁকা (āṁkā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from aṅkayati, "marks, brands" (CDIAL 104).

107.1 বাটি (bāṭi) — a bowl

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to return, then the Bengali for to drive.

You'll want to know: বাটি

বাটি — bāṭi — "a bowl".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বাটি (bāṭi) goes back to varta*, "a circular object", or more probably "something made of metal", a form CDIAL reconstructs. It lists Assamese bāṭi, "cup", Oriya bāṭi, "cup, saucer", and Bengali bāṭā, "box for betel", under it (CDIAL 11347).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bāṭi
- Say it: bāṭi, once more
- Say it: say bāṭi
- Recall: say the Bengali for to return, then the Bengali for to drive, then say bāṭi again

Before you move on

What does বাটি mean? (“A bowl”.) Say it once more.

107.2 হাঁড়ি (hā̃ṛi) — a cooking pot

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to drive, then the Bengali for a bowl.

You’ll want to know: হাঁড়ি

হাঁড়ি — hā̃ṛi — “a cooking pot”.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হাঁড়ি (hāṁṛi) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from hāṇḍa*, “pot”, a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 14050). Late Sanskrit has haṇḍikā, “earthen pot”; CDIAL calls any link with bhāṇḍa, “pot”, unclear.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hā̃ṛi
- Say it: hā̃ṛi, once more
- Say it: say hā̃ṛi

108.4 লেপ (lep) — a quilt

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a pillow, then the Bengali for a sheet.

You'll want to know: লেপ

লেপ — lep — "a quilt".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

লেপ (lep) has the same shape as Bengali lep, "a smearing, a plaster", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit lēpya, "to be smeared" (CDIAL 11114). CDIAL does not list the sense "quilt", so the link is not confirmed.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lep
- Say it: lep, once more
- Say it: say lep
- Recall: say the Bengali for a pillow, then the Bengali for a sheet, then say lep again

Before you move on

What does লেপ mean? ("A quilt".) Say it once more.

108.5 মাদুর (mādur) — a mat

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a sheet, then the Bengali for a quilt.

You'll want to know: মাদুর

মাদুর — mādur — "a mat".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মাদুর (mādur) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from mandurā, "mattress, bed"

(CDIAL 9854).

109.1 চিরুনি (chiruni) — a comb

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a quilt, then the Bengali for a mat.

You'll want to know: চিরুনি

চিরুনি — chiruni — "a comb".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চিরুনি (chiruni) looks like a noun made from cirā, "to split", which CDIAL lists under cīrayati*, "splits" (CDIAL 4844); CDIAL does not list চিরুনি (chiruni) itself, so the link is not confirmed. The inherited word for a comb, kāṁkui, comes from Sanskrit kaṅkata (CDIAL 2598).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: chiruni
- Say it: chiruni, once more
- Say it: say chiruni

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a comb, then the Bengali for soap.

You'll want to know: গামছা

গামছা — gāmchhā — "a thin towel".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of গামছা (gāmchhā) is not certain, but it appears to belong with Sanskrit aṅgoñcha, "towel". CDIAL gives no Bengali form there, but it lists Bihari gamchā, "towel", beside Hindi āṁgochā, and suggests the word may be aṅga, "limb, body", + a word for wiping (CDIAL 139).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gāmchhā
- Say it: gāmchhā, once more
- Say it: say gāmchhā

You'll want to know: মোমবাতি

মোমবাতি — mombāti — "a candle".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মোমবাতি (mombāti) is mom, "wax", usually traced to Persian mūm, + bāti, "wick, lamp", from Sanskrit varti, "wick" (CDIAL 11359).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mombāti
- Say it: mombāti, once more
- Say it: say mombāti
- Recall: say the Bengali for scissors, then the Bengali for a hurricane lamp, then say mombāti again

Before you move on

What does মোমবাতি mean? ("A candle".) Say it once more.

110.4 দেশলাই (deshlāi) — matches

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a hurricane lamp, then the Bengali for a candle.

You'll want to know: দেশলাই

দেশলাই — deshlāi — "matches".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of দেশলাই (deshlāi) is not settled: CDIAL has no entry for it. Its end looks like salāi, which CDIAL lists as Nepali for "matchstick" under Sanskrit śalākā, "small stake or stick", beside Bengali salā, "thin stick" (CDIAL 12349); its first half is not explained there.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: deshlāi
- Say it: deshlāi, once more
- Say it: say deshlāi
- Recall: say the Bengali for a hurricane lamp, then the Bengali for a candle, then say deshlāi again

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an axe, then the Bengali for an umbrella.

You'll want to know: বাক্স

বাক্স — bāksô — "a box".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বাক্স (bāksô) is a loan from English box. Bengali adds a vowel at the end.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bāksô

- Say it: bāksô, once more
- Say it: say bāksô
- Recall: say the Bengali for an axe, then the Bengali for an umbrella, then say bāksô again

Before you move on

What does বাক্স mean? ("A box".) Say it once more.

112.2 তাক (tāk) — a shelf

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an umbrella, then the Bengali for a box.

You'll want to know: তাক

তাক — tāk — "a shelf".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তাক (tāk) is a loan, usually traced to Persian tāq, "arch, niche".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

You'll want to know: কাদা

কাদা — kādā — "mud".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কাদা (kādā) is a tadbhava, a word inherited from Sanskrit and reshaped by sound change. It comes from karda, "mud, swamp" (CDIAL 2867). CDIAL thinks this family of words probably of non-Aryan origin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: kādā
- Say it: kādā, once more
- Say it: say kādā
- Recall: say the Bengali for a garden, then the Bengali for a well, then say kādā again

Chapter 145

Recently, Already, Last, Once, To Spend (Time)

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say what happened, and when: recently, already, last week.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 145: I can say what happened, and when: recently, already, last week.

145.1 সম্প্রতি (sômprôti) — recently

Before the new one: say the Bengali for smooth, then the Bengali for rough.

You'll want to know: সম্প্রতি

সম্প্রতি — sômprôti — "recently". Bengali's simple past adds -লাম for "I": আমি সম্প্রতি একটা বই পড়লাম — āmi sômprôti ekṭā bôi pôṛlām — "I recently read a book."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সম্প্রতি (sômprôti) is Sanskrit samprati, "now, at present", taken over whole as a learned loan, a tatsama.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sômprôti
- Say it: sômprôti, once more
- Say it: say sômprôti
- Recall: say the Bengali for smooth, then the Bengali for rough, then say sômprôti again

Before you move on

What does সম্প্রতি mean? ("Recently".) Say it once more.

145.2 আগেই (āgei) — already

Before the new one: say the Bengali for rough, then the Bengali for recently.

You'll want to know: আগেই

আগেই — āgei — "already". It is আগে, "before", with the emphatic -ই: আমি আগেই খেয়েছি — āmi āgei kheyechhi — "I have already eaten."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আগেই (āgei) is āge, "before", from Sanskrit agre, "in front" (CDIAL 68), + the stressing ending -i: "already".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: āgei

145.4 একসময় (æksômôy) — once, at one time

Before the new one: say the Bengali for already, then the Bengali for last.

You'll want to know: একসময়

একসময় — æksômôy — "once, at one time". It points far back: একসময় এখানে একটা পুকুর ছিল — æksômôy ekhāne ekṭā pukur chhilô — "There was once a pond here." ছিল is the past of আছে.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

একসময় (æksômôy) is ek, "one", from Sanskrit ēka (CDIAL 2462), + sômôy, "time", Sanskrit samaya taken over whole.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: æksômôy
- Say it: æksômôy, once more
- Say it: say æksômôy
- Recall: say the Bengali for already, then the Bengali for last, then say æksômôy again

231.4 ময়দা (môydā) — fine flour

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a solution, then the Bengali for wholemeal flour.

You'll want to know: ময়দা

ময়দা — môydā — "fine flour".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ময়দা (môydā) is a loan, usually traced to Persian maida, "fine flour".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: môydā
- Say it: môydā, once more

Before the new one: say the Bengali for wholemeal flour, then the Bengali for fine flour.

You'll want to know: সুজি

সুজি — suji — "semolina".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সুজি (suji) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from sūjjī*, "coarse wheat meal", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 13552). CDIAL lists Bengali suji, "coarse flour".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: suji
- Say it: suji, once more

Before the new one: say the Bengali for fine flour, then the Bengali for semolina.

You'll want to know: শসা

শসা — shôsā — "a cucumber".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of শসা (shôsā) is not settled: CDIAL has no entry for it in this sense, and a search by the gloss "cucumber" finds only words of other shapes, such as Bengali khirā (CDIAL 3697).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: shôsā
- Say it: shôsā, once more
- Say it: say shôsā
- Recall: say the Bengali for fine flour, then the Bengali for semolina, then say shôsā again

Chapter 242

To go out, To scatter, To roll up, To wrap, To dig

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to go out, to scatter, to roll up, to wrap and to dig.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 242: I can say to go out, to scatter, to roll up, to wrap and to dig.

242.1 বেরোনো (berono) — to go out

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to inform, then the Bengali for to chat.

You'll want to know: বেরোনো

বেরোনো — berono — "to go out".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of বেরোনো (berono) is not settled: CDIAL has no entry for it, and a search by form and by the glosses "go out" and "come out" finds only words of other shapes, such as Bengali nikalā, "to come out" (CDIAL 7478).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: berono
- Say it: berono, once more
- Say it: say berono
- Recall: say the Bengali for to inform, then the Bengali for to chat, then say berono again

Before you move on

242.2 ছড়ানো (chhôṛāno) — to scatter, to spread

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to chat, then the Bengali for to go out.

You'll want to know: ছড়ানো

ছড়ানো — chhôṛāno — "to scatter, to spread".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ছড়ানো (chhôṛāno) is a tadbhava, a word inherited and reshaped by sound change. It comes from chaṭ*, "scatter, sift", a form CDIAL reconstructs from its descendants (CDIAL 4965). CDIAL lists Bengali chaṛāna, "to scatter".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: chhôṛāno
- Say it: chhôṛāno, once more
- Say it: say chhôṛāno

- Recall: say the Bengali for to chat, then the Bengali for to go out, then say chhôṛāno again

242.3 গোটানো (goṭāno) — to roll up

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to go out, then the Bengali for to scatter.

You’ll want to know: গোটানো

গোটানো — goṭāno — “to roll up”.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

গোটানো (goṭāno) appears to be built on Bengali goṭā, “whole, a seed”, which CDIAL lists under gōṭṭa*, “something round” (CDIAL 4271): “to make round”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: goṭāno
- Say it: goṭāno, once more
- Say it: say goṭāno
- Recall: say the Bengali for to go out, then the Bengali for to scatter, then say goṭāno again

242.4 মোড়া (moṛā) — to wrap

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to scatter, then the Bengali for to roll up.

You'll want to know: মোড়া

মোড়া — moṛā — "to wrap".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মোড়া (moṛā), "to wrap", appears to be the verb CDIAL lists as Bengali moṛā, "to twist", under Sanskrit mōṭati, a form of muṭati, "twists" (CDIAL 10186).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: moṛā
- Say it: moṛā, once more
- Say it: say moṛā
- Recall: say the Bengali for to scatter, then the Bengali for to roll up, then say moṛā again

243.2 চুলকানি (chulkāni) — an itch

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to dig, then the Bengali for vomiting.

You'll want to know: চুলকানি

চুলকানি — chulkāni — "an itch".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চুলকানি (chulkāni) is the noun of chulkāno, "to scratch, to itch". CDIAL has no row for that verb, but it appears to belong with cul*, "fidget, itch", a form CDIAL reconstructs; under it CDIAL lists Hindi cul, "itching", and culculānā, "to itch", and Bengali culculiyā, "restless" (CDIAL 4874).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

What does পরের mean? ("Next, following".) Say it once more.

247.2 ফ্যাকাশে (phækāshe) — pale

Before the new one: say the Bengali for sky blue, then the Bengali for next.

You'll want to know: ফ্যাকাশে

ফ্যাকাশে — phækāshe — "pale".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

CDIAL has no Bengali row for ফ্যাকাশে (phækāshe), "pale", but it appears to belong with Oriya phakā, "light-coloured", which CDIAL lists under Sanskrit phakka, "cripple", beside phikka*, "defective" (CDIAL 9037). The same entry gives Bengali phikā, "weak (of tea), pale".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: phækāshe
- Say it: phækāshe, once more
- Say it: say phækāshe
- Recall: say the Bengali for sky blue, then the Bengali for next, then say phækāshe again

Before the new one: say the Bengali for steep, then the Bengali for flattened.

You'll want to know: চকচকে

চকচকে — chôkchôke — "shiny".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of চকচকে (chôkchôke) is not settled: CDIAL has no entry for it, and a search by the glosses "shine" and "glitter" finds only words of other shapes, such as Bengali camkāna, "to glitter" (CDIAL 4676).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: chôkchôke
- Say it: chôkchôke, once more

ব্যাটারি (bæṭāri) is a loan from English battery.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bæṭāri
- Say it: bæṭāri, once more
- Say it: say bæṭāri
- Recall: say the Bengali for a message, then the Bengali for a password, then say bæṭāri again

Before you move on

What does ব্যাটারি mean? ("A battery".) Say it once more.

258.5 সুইচ (suich) — a switch

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a password, then the Bengali for a battery.

You'll want to know: সুইচ

সুইচ — suich — "a switch".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

Chapter 259

Rate, Discount, Form, Application, Identity card

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a rate, a discount, a form, an application and an identity card.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 259: I can say a rate, a discount, a form, an application and an identity card.

259.1 দর (dôr) — a rate, a price

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a battery, then the Bengali for a switch.

You'll want to know: দর

দর — dôr — "a rate, a price".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

The origin of দর (dôr) is not settled: CDIAL has no entry for it in this sense, and a search by the glosses "rate" and "price" finds only words of other shapes, such as Bengali dām (CDIAL 6622).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dôr
- Say it: dôr, once more
- Say it: say dôr
- Recall: say the Bengali for a battery, then the Bengali for a switch, then say dôr again

Chapter 263

A connected A2 message

Modes: ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

By the end of this chapter: I can plan and write a connected 70–90 word Bengali message in Bengali script for a named reader and practical purpose.

Complete chapter 263 by writing a model-free 70–90 word connected Bengali message for a named reader and practical purpose.

263.1 A connected message about your familiar day

A connected message is not a pile of vocabulary and not one long sentence. It is a short route for one reader. Before writing, draw eight empty boxes and give them these jobs:

1. reader and greeting;
2. reason for writing;
3. where or when your day begins;
4. two familiar actions;
5. what happens next and a second time anchor;
6. one preference and one reason;
7. one direct question about tomorrow;
8. a close.

Write only one or two English cue words in each box. Do not draft Bengali yet.

Writing — connected composition

There is no model, Bengali sentence bank, or copyable answer on this page.

Reader: your friend Rina. Purpose: help Rina understand your familiar day and choose a good time to meet tomorrow.

Write 70–90 words in Bengali script. Use every planning box. Include at least four familiar actions, two time anchors, one sequence link, one preference, one reason, and one direct question for Rina. Make every detail help with tomorrow's meeting. The instructions give content, not sentences: choose only words and forms this book has taught, and connect them yourself.

This first connected attempt is untimed. Put away romanization, dictionaries, grammar references, translators, generative assistants, and spellcheckers. Do not copy from an earlier lesson. Ordinary legible Bengali handwriting is enough.

When the whole message exists, count its words once. If it is short, add one useful taught detail to a planning box. If it is long, remove a detail that does not help Rina. Do not replace the message with a memorised model.

Before you move on

Review the same attempt in four separate passes:

1. Task fulfilment and relevant content — Rina, the familiar day, tomorrow's meeting, and every requested content point are present.
2. Comprehensibility and organisation — the eight jobs form a route rather than a list of unrelated words or lines.
3. Bengali vocabulary and grammar — every form and connector comes from the taught standard-colloquial Bengali track; a simpler familiar sentence is better than an invented structure.
4. Bengali-script control — letter shapes, vowel signs, conjuncts, word boundaries, and punctuation remain readable.

Mark one strength and one next step. Repair only the next step; keep the original attempt so the next 70–90-word message can show real growth.

This is one untimed curriculum practice attempt, not the complete 30-minute A2 writing paper and not evidence that either timed mock has been passed. Closing the machine-measured connected-composition stage does not prove A2 attainment or readiness, learner performance, independent review, standard setting, mock passage, or human validation.

Chapter 264

What Happened, and Where I Was

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what happened with the past by person (gelām, gelô, gelen), say where I was (chhilām), and read and write ঘ in ঘটা.
> Complete BN-R264-what-happened: say what happened and where you were, in the past.

264.1 আমি গেলাম (āmi gelām) — the past, person by person

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a female singer and a female dancer. (gāyikā, nôrtôkī.) Then the line from your first meeting: আলাপ করে ভালো লাগলো, "pleased to meet you".

Its last word is a past, "it felt good". This book now writes that ending -ল: লাগল (lāglô). You will meet -লো in print too; they sound the same.

You'll want to know: the past, person by person

কাল আমি বাজারে গেলাম।

kāl āmi bājāre gelām. — "Yesterday I went to the market."

With a past, কাল is yesterday. গেলাম is যাওয়া in the past: the stem গে-, then -ল-, then the person.

- আমি / আমরা গেলাম (gelām) — I went, we went
- তুমি / তোমরা গেলে (gele) — you went, to a friend or to several
- সে / তারা গেল (gelô) — he or she went; they went
- আপনি / তিনি গেলেন (gelen) — you went, he or she went, with respect

They are the present's four slots: যাই, যাও, যান, and one not written before, সে যায় (she jāy), "he or she goes": -য় after a vowel, -এ after a consonant, সে বসে.

You'll want to know: the past stems

Most verbs put -ল- on the stem: বসা → বসলাম (bôslām), দেখা → দেখলাম (dekhlām), with a plain e for the æ of দেখা. An এ said e rises to ি, an ও to ু: কেনা → কিনলাম (kinlām), ফেরা → ফিরলাম (phirlām), শোনা → শুনলাম (shunlām).

Eight verbs change the stem:

- যাওয়া → গেলাম (gelām) — went
- আসা → এলাম (elām), সে এল (she elô) — came
- খাওয়া → খেলাম (khelām) — ate, drank
- নেওয়া → নিলাম (nilām) — took
- দেওয়া (of জল দেওয়া) → দিলাম (dilām) — gave
- হওয়া → হলাম (hôlām); কী হল? (kī hôlô?) — what happened?
- চাওয়া → চাইলাম (chāilām), সে চাইল (she chāilô) — wanted, asked for
- পাওয়া → পেলাম (pelām) — got, found

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Yesterday I went to the market" — kāl āmi bājāre gelām
- "In the evening she came back home" — sôndhyāy she bāṛi phirlô

Before you move on

"I went"? (গেলাম.) "He came"? (এল.) "You went", with respect? (গেলেন.) "What happened?" (কী হল?)

264.2 আমি ছিলাম (āmi chhilām) — was, and was not Say "I went" and "she came". (gelām, she elô.) Then আছি, "I am, I am there": this lesson puts it in the past.

You'll want to know: ছিলাম

কাল আমি বাড়িতে ছিলাম।

kāl āmi bāṛite chhilām. — "Yesterday I was at home."

আছি has a past of its own, ছিলাম, with the endings of the last lesson:

- আমি / আমরা ছিলাম (chhilām) — I was, we were
- তুমি ছিলে (chhile) — you were
- সে / তারা ছিল (chhilô) — he or she was; they were
- আপনি / তিনি ছিলেন (chhilen) — with respect

In the present, Bengali says "is" with no verb at all: সে ভালো. In the past it needs one: সে ক্লান্ত ছিল (she klāntô chhilô), "she was tired". ছিল also says "there was": গ্রামে একটা বড় পুকুর ছিল (grāme ekṭā bôṛo pukur chhilô), "there was a big pond in the village".

You'll want to know: ছিল না

নেই, "there is not", which you know, has no past of its own. Its past is ছিল না, with না after the verb, as in the present:

আজ বাজারে মাছ নেই। কালও ছিল না। āj bājāre māchh nei. kālo chhilô nā. — "There is no fish at the market today. There was none yesterday either."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Yesterday I was at home" — kāl āmi bāṛite chhilām
- "She was tired" — she klāntô chhilô
- "There was a pond in the village, but no river" — grāme ekṭā pukur chhilô, kintu nôdī chhilô nā

Before you move on

"I was"? (ছিলাম.) "They were"? (ছিল.) "There was not"? (ছিল না.) What does the past need that the present leaves out? (The verb: সে ভালো, but সে ক্লান্ত ছিল.)

264.3 ঘটা (ghôṭā) — to happen

Before the new one: ask "What happened?" the everyday way. (কী হল?, kī hôlô?)

You'll want to know: ঘটা

ঘটা — ghôṭā — "to happen".

কাল রাতে পাড়ায় কী ঘটল?

kāl rāte pāṛāy kī ghôṭlô? — "What happened in the neighbourhood last night?"

কী হল? is the everyday question. ঘটা is for something that takes place, an event, and it suits a story. Its past is regular: ঘটল (ghôṭlô), "it happened".

এটা কখন ঘটল?

eṭā kôkhôn ghôṭlô? — "When did this happen?"

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঘটা (ghôṭā) is usually traced to the Sanskrit verb ghaṭate, which CDIAL (4407) glosses "is busy with" and, in a later text, "happens".

CDIAL lists no Bengali form under that entry, so the line from one to the other is the usual tracing, not a recorded row.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ghôṭā, then its past, ghôṭlô
- "What happened in the neighbourhood last night?" — kāl rāte pāṛāy kī ghôṭlô?
- "When did this happen?" — eṭā kôkhôn ghôṭlô?

Before you move on

What does ঘটা mean? ("To happen".) Its past? (ঘটল, ghôṭlô.) Which question is the everyday one? (কী হল?)

264.4 ঘ (ghô) — the letter at the start of ঘটা

Before the new one: say ঘটা, "to happen", and its past, ঘটল. Then read ব aloud (bô); you will want its shape in a moment.

Script you'll notice: ঘ

ঘ — ghô: a g with a breath after it, as খ (khô) is a k with a breath. It opens ঘটা.

In the print of this book, ঘ has the frame of ব: a headline along the top, an upright stem on the right, the full height of the letter, a pointed tip at the lower left, and a curve that joins that tip to the foot of the stem. Where ব has one straight diagonal, ঘ has two pieces. Under the left end of the headline hangs a rounded curl, open toward the stem, its end a short point aimed up and to the right. Below the curl, a short straight piece joins it to the pointed tip.

Writing: ঘ — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside ঘ and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large. Check the copy against the print: the headline, the stem, the curl with its point, the tip at the lower left, and the curve to the foot.

This book does not yet tell you where to start ঘ or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ঘ at the front of ঘটা
- Write it: ব, then ঘ, from the print, naming each
- Write it: ঘটা, then ঘটল
- Read it: ঘটল aloud: ghôṭlô

Before you move on

Which letter is this — ঘ? (ghô.) Which word did it come from? (ঘটা.) How is it unlike ব? (A curl hangs under its headline.)

264.5 Review — what happened

Say "Yesterday I went to the market". (kāl āmi bājāre gelām.) Then "she came" and "we ate". (she elô, āmrā khelām.)

Your turn

- Say it: In the evening I came back home. I was tired.
- Say it: What happened in the village yesterday?
- Say it: Mira was at the station. Arun was not there.
- Say it: There was a big tree in the neighbourhood.
- Say it: We wanted tea, and we got tea.
- Write it: ঘ, then ঘটল

Before you move on

Which ending is I and we? (-লাম: গেলাম.) Which verbs gave এল and পেল? (আসা, পাওয়া.) “There was not”? (ছিল না.) Which letter opens ঘটা? (ঘ.)

Chapter 265

What Will Happen, and the End

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what will happen and what I will do (jābô, jābe, jāben, hôbe), say what I won't do, and read and write ষ in শেষ.
> Complete BN-R265-what-will-happen: say what will happen, what you will do and what you won't.

265.1 আমি যাব (āmi jābô) — the future, person by person

Say "Yesterday I was at home". (kāl āmi bāṛite chhilām.) Then the goodbye you know: কাল দেখা হবে, "see you tomorrow". Its last word, হবে, is a future: "it will happen".

You'll want to know: the future, person by person

কাল আমি স্টেশনে যাব।

kāl āmi sṭeshône jābô. — "Tomorrow I will go to the station."

With a future, কাল is tomorrow. The future puts -ব- on the stem, then the person:

- আমি / আমরা যাব (jābô) — I will go, we will go
- তুমি / সে যাবে (jābe) — you will go; he or she will go

- আপনি / তিনি যাবেন (jāben) — with respect
- তোমরা / তারা যাবে — you, to several; they

তুমি and সে share -বে here; the past kept them apart (গেলে, গেল). The stem is the plain one, not the past's: করব (kôrbô), দেখব (dekhbô), খাব (khābô), আসব (āsbô), থাকব (thākbô); দেওয়া → দেব (debô), নেওয়া → নেব (nebô); হওয়া → হবে (hôbe), "will be, will happen". You have said one -বেন for a long time: মাফ করবেন, "excuse me".

You'll want to know: will not

"Will not" puts না after the verb: আমি যাব না (āmi jābô nā), "I won't go".

> কাল আমি বাজারে যাব না, বাড়িতে থাকব।
> kāl āmi bājāre jābô nā, bāṛite thākbô. — "Tomorrow I won't go to the market; I'll stay at home."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Tomorrow I will go to the station" — kāl āmi sṭeshône jābô
- "Will you come?", to a friend — tumi āsbe?
- "What will happen?" — kī hôbe?

Before you move on

"I will go"? (যাব.) "She will come"? (আসবে.) "You will give", with respect? (দেবেন.) "I won't go"? (যাব না.)

265.2 শেষ (shesh) — the end; last

Before the new one: say "I will go" and "I won't go". (jābô, jābô nā.)

You'll want to know: শেষ

শেষ — shesh — "the end; last".

> কাল আমার কাজ শেষ হবে।
> kāl āmār kāj shesh hôbe. — "My work will be finished tomorrow."

শেষ হওয়া is "to come to an end", and শেষ করা "to finish": আমি বইটা শেষ করলাম (āmi bôiṭā shesh kôrlām), "I finished the book". Before a noun, শেষ is "last":

> শেষ ট্রেন রাতে ছাড়বে।
> shesh ṭren rāte chhāṛbe. — "The last train will leave at night."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

শেষ (shesh) is a tatsama: Sanskrit śeṣa, "what remains", which CDIAL (12611) and Monier-Williams both give. Monier-Williams also lists "end, conclusion" and "last" among its senses, so the Bengali uses were already Sanskrit's.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- shesh
- "My work will be finished tomorrow" — kāl āmār kāj shesh hôbe
- "The last train will leave at night" — shesh ṭren rāte chhāṛbe

Before you move on

What does শেষ mean? ("The end", and before a noun, "last".) "To finish"? (শেষ করা.)

265.3 ষ (shô) — the letter at the end of শেষ

Before the new one: say শেষ, "the end". Its first letter is শ, which you write; its last is new.

Script you'll notice: ষ

ষ — shô. Bengali says শ, ষ and স alike, as sh in most words, so the letter is a matter of spelling: শেষ begins with শ and ends with ষ. Most of the words that carry ষ come from Sanskrit.

In the print of this book, ষ has a headline and an upright stem on the right, the full height of the letter, as ব and ঘ do. A long straight line lies on a slant between the left end of the headline, close under it, and the middle of the stem. A shorter slanting line joins the middle of that line to a pointed tip at the lower left, and a curve joins that tip to the foot of the stem.

Writing: ষ — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside ষ and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large. Check the copy against the print: the headline, the stem, the long slanting line, the short one to the tip, and the curve to the foot.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start ষ or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ষ at the end of শেষ
- Write it: শ, then ষ, from the print, naming each
- Write it: শেষ
- Write it: ঘ, from memory

Before you move on

Which letter ends শেষ? (ষ.) How is it said? (shô, as শ is.) What lies across its middle? (A long slanting line, meeting the stem.)

265.4 Review — what will happen

> Say "Yesterday I went to the market", then "Tomorrow I will go to the station". (kāl āmi bājāre gelām; kāl āmi ṣṭeshône jābô.)

Your turn

- Say it: Tomorrow we will eat fish. Mira will come too.
- Say it: I won't go to the market; I'll stay at home.
- Say it: When will the last train leave?
- Say it: Yesterday I was tired. Tomorrow I'll rest.
- Say it: My work will end in the evening.
- Write it: শেষ, then ঘ

Before you move on

Which two people share -বে? (তুমি and সে.) "It will happen"? (হবে.) "Will not"? (না after the verb.) Which letter ends শেষ? (ষ.)

Chapter 266

What Was Going On

Modes: voice (3) eyes (2) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what is going on and what was going on (pôṛchhi, pôṛchhilām), set a scene with jôkhon … tôkhon, say oṭhā, to get up, and read and write ঠ in ঠিক.
> Complete BN-R266-the-scene: say what was going on, and what broke into it.

266.1 আমি পড়ছিলাম (āmi pôṛchhilām) — going on now, going on then

> Say "I was at home" and "I will go". (chhilām, jābô.) Both are whole facts. This lesson is about things in the middle of happening.

You'll want to know: going on now

> আমি এখন একটা বই পড়ছি।
> āmi ekhôn ekṭā bôi pôṛchhi. — "I'm reading a book now."

What is going on at this moment takes -ছ- after the stem: আমি পড়ছি (āmi pôṛchhi), তুমি পড়ছ (tumi pôṛchhô), সে পড়ছে (she pôṛchhe), আপনি পড়ছেন (āpni pôṛchhen). After a stem that ends in a vowel it is -চ্ছ-: যাচ্ছি (jāchchhi), "I'm going"; সে খাচ্ছে (she khāchchhe); কী হচ্ছে? (kī hôchchhe?), "what's happening?". An এ said e rises, as it does in the past: শেখা → শিখছি (shikhchhi).

You'll want to know: going on then

Put -ছিল- where -ছ- was, and the same scene is in the past:

> কাল সন্ধ্যায় আমি বই পড়ছিলাম।
> kāl sôndhyāy āmi bôi pôṛchhilām. — "Yesterday evening I was reading."

- আমি পড়ছিলাম (āmi pôṛchhilām) — I was reading
- তুমি পড়ছিলে (tumi pôṛchhile) — you were reading
- সে পড়ছিল (she pôṛchhilô) — he or she was reading
- আপনি / তিনি পড়ছিলেন (pôṛchhilen) — with respect and যাচ্ছিলাম (jāchchhilām), "I was going". The plain past, পড়লাম, is an event; পড়ছিলাম is the scene around one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "She is eating" — she khāchchhe
- "We were going to the market" — āmrā bājāre jāchchhilām
- "What is happening?" — kī hôchchhe?

Before you move on

"I'm going"? (যাচ্ছি.) "He was eating"? (খাচ্ছিল.) Which is the scene and which the event: পড়লাম or পড়ছিলাম? (পড়ছিলাম is the scene.)

266.2 যখন ... তখন ... (jôkhon ... tôkhon ...) — the scene and the event

Say "I was reading". (āmi pôṛchhilām.) You know যখন, "when", and its partner তখন, "then": যখন আমি আসি, তখন চা খাই. Read it aloud.

You'll want to know: the scene and the event

> যখন আমি বই পড়ছিলাম, তখন মীরা এল।
> jôkhon āmi bôi pôṛchhilām, tôkhon mīrā elô. — "I was reading when Mira came."

The যখন half is the scene, in the going-on past. The তখন half is the event that broke into it, in the plain past. English puts "when" on the event; Bengali puts যখন on the scene, and তখন opens the event.

You'll want to know: তখন on its own

তখন also stands alone in a story: "then, at that time".

> তখন রাত ছিল। বাইরে ঝড় হচ্ছিল। > tôkhon rāt chhilô. bāire jhôṛ hôchchhilô. — "It was night then. A storm was going on outside."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I was reading when Mira came" — jôkhon āmi bôi pôṛchhilām, tôkhon mīrā elô
- "It was night then" — tôkhon rāt chhilô
- "We were going to the market when the storm came" — jôkhon āmrā bājāre jāchchhilām, tôkhon jhôṛ elô

Before you move on

Which half takes -ছিল-? (The যখন half, the scene.) What does তখন mean on its own? ("Then, at that time".)

266.3 ঠিক (ṭhik) — correct; exactly

Before the new one: say "It was night then". (tôkhon rāt chhilô.)

You'll want to know: ঠিক

ঠিক — ṭhik — "correct; exactly".

তুমি ঠিক (tumi ṭhik) is "you're right", and ঠিক আছে (ṭhik āchhe), "it's all right", is the everyday "fine, agreed". Before a time or a place, ঠিক is "exactly":

> ঠিক তখন ট্রেন এল।
> ṭhik tôkhon ṭren elô. — "Right then the train came."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঠিক (ṭhik) goes back to a form ṭhīkka*, "firm, right" (CDIAL 5503), which no text records (hence the star), and which CDIAL derives, probably, from Sanskrit sthita, "standing". CDIAL lists the Bengali ঠিক, "correct", under it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ṭhik
- "You're right" — tumi ṭhik
- "Right then the train came" — ṭhik tôkhon ṭren elô

Before you move on

What does ঠিক mean? ("Correct", and before a time, "exactly".) "Fine, agreed"? (ঠিক আছে.)

266.4 ঠ (ṭhô) — the letter at the start of ঠিক

Before the new one: say ঠিক, "correct". Then read ট aloud (ṭô), the letter of টাকা.

Script you'll notice: ঠ

ঠ — ṭhô: the ট sound with a breath after it, as খ is ক with a breath. It opens ঠিক.

In the print of this book, ঠ has a headline crossed by one curved line. Above the headline, the line rises in a curve that bows out to the left, its tip at the top. Below the headline it makes a large closed loop, shaped like a drop hanging from the headline, that fills the lower part of the letter; at its left side the loop has a sharp corner. ঠ has no stem.

Set it beside ট: ট has a raised hook above its headline too, but below it a stem, and a bowl that ends in a solid knob. ঠ has no knob.

Writing: ঠ — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside ঠ and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large. Check the copy against the print: the curve above the headline, the line crossing it, the closed loop and its corner.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start ঠ or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ঠ at the front of ঠিক
- Write it: ট, then ঠ, from the print, naming each
- Write it: ঠিক, then ঠিক আছে
- Write it: ষ, from memory

Before you move on

Which letter opens ঠিক? (ঠ.) What does ট have that ঠ does not? (A stem and a solid knob.)

266.5 ওঠা (oṭhā) — to rise; to get up

> Before the new one: write ঠ, the letter of the last lesson, and say ঠিক. The next word carries ঠ too.

You'll want to know: ওঠা

ওঠা — oṭhā — "to rise; to get up".

> সে রোজ সকালে তাড়াতাড়ি ওঠে।
> she roj sôkāle tāṛātāṛi oṭhe. — "She gets up early every morning."

ওঠে is the present for he or she, and the moon and the sun "rise" with it too: রাতে চাঁদ ওঠে (rāte chā̃d oṭhe), "the moon rises at night". In most other forms the o rises to u, as in খোলা → খুললাম: the past uṭhlô, "got up", and the -e form uṭhe. At the start of a word that u needs a letter of its own, which comes three chapters on; until then, say those forms, and write ওঠে.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ওঠা (oṭhā) goes back to a reconstructed ut-sthāti*, "stands up" (CDIAL 1900): ut-, "up", on the root sthā, "to stand". CDIAL lists the Bengali verb under it, as oṭhā and uṭhā, "to get up, stand".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- oṭhā, then she oṭhe
- "She gets up early every morning" — she roj sôkāle tāṛātāṛi oṭhe
- "The moon rises at night" — rāte chā̃d oṭhe

Before you move on

What does ওঠা mean? ("To rise; to get up".) "She gets up"? (সে ওঠে.) What does its o become in the past? (u: uṭhlô.)

266.6 Review — the scene and the event

Say "I'm reading" and "I was reading". (pôṛchhi, pôṛchhilām.)

Your turn

- Say it: What are you doing now? I'm eating.
- Say it: We were sitting at the station when the train came.
- Say it: It was evening then. A storm was going on.
- Say it: You're right. Fine, I'll come tomorrow.
- Say it: Mira gets up early every day.
- Say it: Right then, Mira phoned.
- Write it: ঠিক, then ঘ and ষ

Before you move on

Which form says "going on now"? (-ছ-: পড়ছি.) Which half of যখন ... তখন is the scene? (The যখন half.) "Fine, agreed"? (ঠিক আছে.) "She gets up"? (সে ওঠে.)

Chapter 267

First, Then, Suddenly

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 👁 eyes (1) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell what happened in order with prôthôme, tārpôr and sheshe, join actions with the -e form (giye, kore), read a short story, and read and write ৎ in হঠাৎ.
> Complete BN-R267-a-story-in-order: tell a short story in order, after reading Mira's Saturday.

267.1 বাড়ি গিয়ে খেলাম (bāṛi giye khelām) — one action, then the next

Say "I was reading when Mira came". (jôkhon āmi bôi pôṛchhilām, tôkhon mīrā elô.) Then the word for "please", দয়া করে: "having done a kindness". Its করে is the form of this lesson.

You'll want to know: the -e form

আমি স্টেশনে গিয়ে টিকিট কিনলাম।

āmi ṣṭeshône giye ṭikiṭ kinlām. — "I went to the station and bought a ticket."

গিয়ে is যাওয়া in the -e form: "having gone". It finishes one action so the next can start, and the last verb carries the tense for both. Most verbs add -এ to the stem: করা → করে (kore), দেখা → দেখে (dekhe), বসা → বসে (bose).

An আ in the stem becomes এ: আসা → এসে (ese), নামা → নেমে (neme), হাঁটা → হেঁটে (hẽṭe). An এ said e, or an ও, rises: কেনা → কিনে (kine). The verbs whose stem ends in a vowel take -য়ে: খাওয়া → খেয়ে (kheye), নেওয়া → নিয়ে (niye), দেওয়া → দিয়ে (diye).

The -e form can also say how: হেঁটে গেলাম (hẽṭe gelām), "I went on foot". And it pairs with a second verb that adds a shade rather than a new action: বসে পড়লাম (bose pôṛlām), "I sat down", with পড়া in its other sense, "to fall"; হারিয়ে গেল, "it got lost", which you know.

You'll want to know: one doer

Both actions belong to the same person: আমি বাড়ি গিয়ে খেলাম (āmi bāṛi giye khelām), "I went home and ate". When someone else does the second thing, Bengali says two sentences: আমি বাড়ি গেলাম। মীরা খেল।

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I got off the bus and walked home" — āmi bās theke neme hẽṭe bāṛi gelām
- "She ate and went out" — she kheye bāire gelô
- "We sat and drank tea" — āmrā bose chā khelām

Before you move on

যাওয়া in the -e form? (গিয়ে.) খাওয়া? (খেয়ে.) Which verb carries the tense? (The last one.) Can the two actions have two doers? (No: then it is two sentences.)

267.2 প্রথমে ... তারপর ... শেষে (prôthôme ... tārpôr ... sheshe) — the order of a story

Say "I went home and ate". (āmi bāṛi giye khelām.) Then say প্রথমে, "at first", and শেষ, "the end".

You'll want to know: first, then

> প্রথমে আমরা চা খেলাম। তারপর বাজারে গেলাম।
> prôthôme āmrā chā khelām. tārpôr bājāre gelām. — "First we had tea. After that we went to the market."

প্রথমে, which you know, opens a story. তারপর (tārpôr), "after that, then", is new: তার, "of that", and পর, "after", the word inside পরে. তারপর starts each new step; পরে, "later", says the step came some time after.

You'll want to know: in the end

শেষে (sheshe) is শেষ with -এ: "at the end, finally". It closes the story.

> শেষে আমরা বাড়ি ফিরলাম।
> sheshe āmrā bāṛi phirlām. — "In the end we came back home."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "First I went to the station by bus" — prôthôme āmi bāse sṭeshône gelām
- "After that I bought a ticket" — tārpôr ṭikiṭ kinlām
- "In the end we came back home" — sheshe āmrā bāṛi phirlām

Before you move on

What opens a story? (প্রথমে.) What starts each next step? (তারপর.) What closes it? (শেষে.)

267.3 হঠাৎ (hôṭhāt) — suddenly

> Before the new one: say "first", "after that" and "in the end". (prôthôme, tārpôr, sheshe.)

You'll want to know: হঠাৎ

হঠাৎ — hôṭhāt — "suddenly".

> আমি হাঁটছিলাম, হঠাৎ ঝড় এল।
> āmi hā̃ṭchhilām, hôṭhāt jhôṛ elô. — "I was walking, and suddenly a storm came."

A story goes প্রথমে, তারপর; হঠাৎ is where it turns. It comes before the event that breaks into the scene.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হঠাৎ (hôṭhāt) is Sanskrit haṭhāt, "by force, forcibly", the ablative of haṭha, "force" (Monier-Williams). Monier-Williams also gives haṭhāt as "necessarily, inevitably". The Bengali sense, "suddenly", is not among the senses it lists, and the source does not say how the word came to it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hôṭhāt
- "I was walking, and suddenly a storm came" — āmi hā̃ṭchhilām, hôṭhāt jhôṛ elô
- "We were eating; suddenly Mira came" — āmrā khāchchhilām, hôṭhāt mīrā elô

Before you move on

What does হঠাৎ mean? ("Suddenly".) What comes after it, a scene or an event? (An event, in the plain past.)

267.4 ৎ (t) — the letter at the end of হঠাৎ

> Before the new one: say হঠাৎ, "suddenly". Then read ত (tô) and the hasanta ্, the mark that takes a letter's vowel away.

Script you'll notice: ৎ

ৎ — t, the khanda ta, "a piece of ta". It is a ত with no vowel after it. Where a word ends in that bare t, as হঠাৎ does, Bengali often writes ৎ instead of ত with a hasanta.

In the print of this book, ৎ has no headline. It is a round closed loop at the top, with a long slanting tail joined to the left side of the loop; the tail's lower end, at the bottom right, is a short upright foot.

Writing: ৎ — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside ৎ and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large. Check the copy against the print: the round loop, the long tail, the short foot.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start ৎ or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ৎ at the end of হঠাৎ
- Write it: ত, then ৎ, from the print, naming each
- Write it: হঠাৎ, with ঠ in its middle
- Read it: হঠাৎ aloud: hôṭhāt

Before you move on

Which letter ends হঠাৎ? (ৎ.) What does it say? (A t with no vowel after it.) Does it have a headline? (No.)

267.5 (reading) — a Saturday at Grandmother's village

> Ninety-eight words, every one met before or explained after the story. The writer is Mira, telling of a Saturday at her grandmother's village.

Read this

গত শনিবার আমি দিদিমার গ্রামে গেলাম। প্রথমে বাসে স্টেশনে গেলাম। তারপর ট্রেনে চড়লাম। ট্রেনে আমি একটা বই পড়ছিলাম। হঠাৎ ঝড় এল। ঠিক তখন ট্রেন একটা নদী পার হচ্ছিল। জানালার বাইরে আকাশ কালো ছিল, আর গাছগুলো কাঁপছিল। বিকেলে ট্রেন গ্রামের স্টেশনে থামল। তখন ঝড় ছিল না। আমি ট্রেন থেকে নেমে হেঁটে বাড়ি গেলাম। বাড়ি গিয়ে দেখলাম, দিদিমা রান্না করছিলেন। দাদু বারান্দায় বসে চা খাচ্ছিলেন। সন্ধ্যায় আমরা ভাত আর মাছ খেলাম। তারপর দিদিমা আমাকে একটা পুরনো গল্প বললেন। রাতে আবার ঝড় এল, কিন্তু আমরা ভিতরে ছিলাম। শেষে আমি তাড়াতাড়ি শুলাম। কাল সকালে আমি আবার শহরে ফিরব। দিনটা আমার ভালো লাগল।

Read it: the passage once without stopping; do not translate
Read it: the passage again, and sort every verb: event, scene or plan

Why it's said this way

New forms: দিদিমার, "Grandmother's", with the -র of আমার; শুলাম (shulām), শোয়া in the past, "I lay down to sleep"; দিনটা আমার ভালো লাগল, "the day felt good to me".
The scenes take -ছিল-; the events take the plain past, joined with -e forms and kept in order by প্রথমে, তারপর and শেষে. হঠাৎ turns the story; ফিরব is the plan.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- what Mira was doing on the train when the storm came
- what Grandfather was doing on the veranda

Before you move on

Why is কাঁপছিল in the scene form? (The shaking went on through the storm.) Which word turns the story? (হঠাৎ.)

267.6 Review — a story in order

Say “I went to the station and bought a ticket”. (āmi ṣṭeshône giye ṭikiṭ kinlām.) Then “after that”. (tārpôr.)

Your turn

- Say it: First I went to the village by bus.
- Say it: After that I got off the bus and walked to the river.
- Say it: I was sitting by the river. Suddenly Mira came.
- Say it: We ate and talked. In the end I came back home.
- Say it: Mira’s grandmother told a story. What happened in it?
- Write it: হঠাৎ, then শেষে

Before you move on

আসা in the -e form? (এসে.) What opens, steps and closes a story? (প্রথমে, তারপর, শেষে.) Which letter ends হঠাৎ? (ৎ.)

Chapter 268

What I Think, and Why

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I think with āmār mône hôy, give a reason with kārôn, kenonā and -er jônyô, and read and write ণ in কারণ.
> Complete BN-R268-opinion-and-reason: say what you think and give your reason.

268.1 আমার মনে হয় ... (āmār mône hôy ...) — I think

> Say "first", "after that", "in the end". (prôthôme, tārpôr, sheshe.) Then মনে রাখা, "to remember": "to keep in the mind". Its মনে, "in the mind", is in this lesson too.

You'll want to know: I think

> আমার মনে হয়, কাল ঝড় হবে।
> āmār mône hôy, kāl jhôṛ hôbe. — "I think there will be a storm tomorrow."

Bengali does not say "I think" with আমি. It says "to my mind it comes": আমার মনে হয়, with the thinker in the -র form, as in আমার নাম. যে, "that", which you know, may follow it: আমার মনে হয় যে .... To ask, put the other person in the same form: তোমার কী মনে হয়? (tomār kī mône hôy?), "what do you think?".

You'll want to know: I don't think so

না after হয় turns it: আমার মনে হয় না (āmār mône hôy nā), "I don't think so", and আমার মনে হয় না সে আসবে, "I don't think he'll come". In the past, হয় becomes হল: আমার মনে হল (āmār mône hôlô), "I thought (then), it seemed to me".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I think there will be a storm tomorrow" — āmār mône hôy, kāl jhôṛ hôbe
- "What do you think?" — tomār kī mône hôy?
- "I don't think the train will come" — āmār mône hôy nā ṭren āsbe

Before you move on

"I think"? (আমার মনে হয়.) Why আমার and not আমি? (The thought comes to me.) "I thought, then"? (আমার মনে হল.)

268.2 কারণ (kārôn) — a reason; because

Before the new one: say "I think". (āmār mône hôy.) Then কেননা, "because", which you know.

You'll want to know: কারণ

কারণ — kārôn — "a reason; because".

তোমার রাগের কারণ কী?

tomār rāger kārôn kī? — "What's the reason you're angry?"

As a noun it is "a reason": রাগের কারণ, "the reason for the anger". It is also the everyday "because", opening the reason after the result:

আজ আমি বাড়িতে থাকব, কারণ বাইরে ঝড় হচ্ছে।

āj āmi bāṛite thākbô, kārôn bāire jhôṛ hôchchhe. — "I'll stay at home today, because there's a storm outside."

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কারণ (kārôn) is a tatsama: Sanskrit kāraṇa, "cause", which CDIAL (3057) lists with the Bengali word under it. CDIAL files kāraṇa under the root kṛ, "to do, to make": a cause is what makes a thing happen.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kārôn
- "What's the reason you're angry?" — tomār rāger kārôn kī?
- "I'll stay at home, because there's a storm outside" — āmi bāṛite thākbô, kārôn bāire jhôṛ hôchchhe

Before you move on

What does কারণ mean? ("A reason", and "because".) Which comes first, the result or the reason? (The result; কারণ opens the reason.)

268.3 ণ (nô) — the letter at the end of কারণ

Before the new one: say কারণ, "because". Then read ন (nô), the first letter you ever wrote.

Script you'll notice: ণ

ণ — nô. Bengali says ণ and ন alike, so, like ষ beside শ, it is a matter of spelling: most words that carry ণ come from Sanskrit.

Set the print of ণ beside ন. Both have an upright stem on the right and an arch on the left that ends in a solid knob. In ন, the headline is long and covers the whole letter, and the arch meets the stem low down, near its middle. In ণ, the headline is short and sits only at the stem and to its right; the arch meets the stem near the top, where the headline would be, and the stem's top end stands a little above the short headline, cut on a slant.

Writing: ণ — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside ণ and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large. Check the copy against the print: the short headline right of the stem, the arch joined near the top, the knob, the stem to its foot.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start ণ or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ণ at the end of কারণ
- Write it: ন, then ণ, from the print, naming each
- Write it: কারণ
- Write it: হঠাৎ, from memory

Before you move on

Which letter ends কারণ? (ণ.) Where does its headline sit? (Only at the stem and to its right.) Where does its arch meet the stem? (Near the top; in ন, low down.)

268.4 ... কারণ ... / -এর জন্য (kārôn / -er jônyô) — giving the reason

Say "I'll stay at home, because there's a storm outside". (āmi bāṛite thākbô, kārôn bāire jhôṛ hôchchhe.)

You'll want to know: because, with a sentence

আজ আমি যাব না, কারণ আমি ক্লান্ত।

āj āmi jābô nā, kārôn āmi klāntô. — "I won't go today, because I'm tired."

A whole reason, with its own verb or a describing word such as ক্লান্ত, follows কারণ. কেননা, which you know, does the same job in the same place: আজ আমি যাব না, কেননা আমি ক্লান্ত. To ask for one, কেন? (kenô?), "why?", the word inside কেননা.

You'll want to know: because of, for

For a reason that is only a noun, Bengali puts the noun in its -র form and adds জন্য (jônyô): -এর জন্য, "because of".

> ঝড়ের জন্য ট্রেন দেরিতে এল।
> jhôṛer jônyô ṭren derite elô. — "The train came late because of the storm."

The same জন্য is "for": এটা তোমার জন্য (eṭā tomār jônyô), "this is for you". After a vowel the ending is -র: মীরার জন্য.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Why? Because I'm tired." — kenô? kārôn āmi klāntô.
- "The train came late because of the storm" — jhôṛer jônyô ṭren derite elô
- "This is for you" — eṭā tomār jônyô

Before you move on

What follows কারণ? (A whole reason.) What follows a noun? (-এর জন্য.) "Why?" (কেন?)

268.5 Review — what I think, and why

> Say "I think there will be a storm tomorrow", then "I won't go, because I'm tired". (āmār mône hôy, kāl jhôṛ hôbe; āmi jābô nā, kārôn āmi klāntô.)

Your turn

- Say it: What do you think? I think Mira is right.
- Say it: I don't think the bus will come today.
- Say it: I stayed at home yesterday, because I had a fever.
- Say it: We came late because of the storm.
- Say it: What was the reason? I don't know.
- Write it: কারণ, then ঠিক

Before you move on

"I don't think so"? (আমার মনে হয় না.) Which word gives a reason with a verb? (কারণ, or কেননা.) Which gives one with a noun? (-এর জন্য.) Which letter ends কারণ? (ণ.)

Chapter 269

Ought To, Have To, and So

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what someone ought to do with uchit and has to do with -te hôbe, draw a result with tāi and sejônyô, and read and write উ in উচিত.
> Complete BN-R269-advice-and-result: give advice, a duty and a result.

269.1 উচিত (uchit) — ought to; proper

> Before the new one: say "because I'm tired" and "because of the storm". (kārôn āmi klāntô, jhôṛer jônyô.)

You'll want to know: উচিত

উচিত — uchit — "ought to; proper".

> তোমার ডাক্তারের কাছে যাওয়া উচিত।
> tomār ḍāktārer kāchhe jāoyā uchit. — "You ought to go to the doctor."

The one who ought to is in the -র form, তোমার, as in তোমার মনে হয়; the action is the dictionary form, যাওয়া; উচিত comes last. Word for word: "your going to the doctor is proper".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উচিত (uchit) is a tatsama: Sanskrit ucita, which Monier-Williams gives as "customary" and "proper, suitable". CDIAL has no entry for it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- uchit
- "You ought to go to the doctor" — tomār ḍāktārer kāchhe jāoyā uchit
- "You ought to rest" — tomār bishrām neoyā uchit

Before you move on

What does উচিত mean? ("Ought to; proper".) Who goes in the -র form? (The one who ought to: তোমার.)

269.2 উ (u) — the letter at the start of উচিত

Before the new one: say উচিত. Then read তু (tu): the sign ু under ত is the vowel of this lesson.

Script you'll notice: উ

উ — u. After a consonant you write it as the sign ু: তুমি. At the start of a word, with nothing to ride on, it is the letter উ: উচিত. আ and া are the same pair.

In the print of this book, উ is ড with the raised hook of ট on top. Below the headline it has ড's body: a slanting left arm that is the left side of a round bowl, a short stem hanging from the headline in the middle, and a curve joining that stem to the bowl's right side, which ends in a point. Above the headline it has ট's hook: a curve standing on the headline, its free end a tip at the upper left.

Writing: উ — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside উ and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large. Check the copy against the print: the hook above the headline, the left arm and bowl, the short middle stem and its curve, the point on the right.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start উ or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: উ at the front of উচিত
- Write it: ড, then ট, then উ, from the print
- Write it: উচিত
- Write it: কারণ, from memory
- Write it: উঠল (uṭhlô), the past of ওঠা, now that you write উ

Before you move on

Which letter opens উচিত? (উ.) Which two letters does it put together? (ড below the headline, ট's hook above.) Where does the sign ু go? (Under its consonant.)

269.3 ... উচিত / -তে হবে (uchit / -te hôbe) — ought to, have to > Say "You ought to go to the doctor". (tomār ḍāktārer kāchhe jāoyā uchit.)

You'll want to know: ought to, ought not

উচিত gives advice. না after it gives a warning:

> রাতে তোমার একা যাওয়া উচিত না।

rāte tomār ekā jāoyā uchit nā. — "You shouldn't go alone at night."

For yourself, আমার: আমার বিশ্রাম নেওয়া উচিত (āmār bishrām neoyā uchit), "I ought to rest".

You'll want to know: have to

What you must do, not only ought to, is -তে হবে: the one who must in the -কে form, the verb in its -তে form, then হবে.

কাল আমাকে স্টেশনে যেতে হবে।

kāl āmāke sṭeshône jete hôbe. — "Tomorrow I have to go to the station."

The -তে form: যাওয়া → যেতে (jete), খাওয়া → খেতে (khete), করা → করতে (kôrte), আসা → আসতে (āste). In the past, হবে becomes হল: আমাকে হেঁটে যেতে হল (āmāke hẽṭe jete hôlô), "I had to walk".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "You shouldn't go alone at night" — rāte tomār ekā jāoyā uchit nā
- "Tomorrow I have to go to the station" — kāl āmāke sṭeshône jete hôbe
- "I had to walk" — āmāke hẽṭe jete hôlô

Before you move on

"Ought not"? (উচিত না.) Which form of "I" goes with -তে হবে? (আমাকে.) যাওয়া in the -তে form? (যেতে.)

269.4 তাই / সেজন্য (tāi / sejônyô) — so, that is why

Say "I had to walk". (āmāke hẽṭe jete hôlô.) Then তাই, "so", which you know.

You'll want to know: so

কারণ puts the result first and the reason after it. তাই turns that round: the reason first, then "so", then the result.

> বাইরে ঝড় হচ্ছিল, তাই আমরা বাড়িতে থাকলাম।
> bāire jhôṛ hôchchhilô, tāi āmrā bāṛite thāklām. — "There was a storm outside, so we stayed at home."

You'll want to know: that is why

সেজন্য (sejônyô), "for that, that is why", is সে, "that", and the জন্য of the last chapter. It usually opens a new sentence:

> আমার জ্বর ছিল। সেজন্য আমাকে বাড়িতে থাকতে হল।
> āmār jbôr chhilô. sejônyô āmāke bāṛite thākte hôlô. — "I had a fever. That's why I had to stay at home."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "There was a storm, so we stayed at home" — jhôṛ hôchchhilô, tāi āmrā bāṛite thāklām
- "I had a fever. That's why I had to stay at home." — āmār jbôr chhilô. sejônyô āmāke bāṛite thākte hôlô.
- "The train was late, so I took a bus" — ṭren derite elô, tāi āmi bāse gelām

Before you move on

Which comes first with তাই, the reason or the result? (The reason.) And with কারণ? (The result.) What is সেজন্য made of? (সে and জন্য: "for that".)

269.5 Review — ought to, have to, and so

> Say "You ought to rest" and "so we stayed at home". (tomār bishrām neoyā uchit; tāi āmrā bāṛite thāklām.)

Your turn

- Say it: I think you ought to go to the doctor.
- Say it: You shouldn't go alone at night.
- Say it: Tomorrow I have to go to school early.
- Say it: There was no bus, so we walked.
- Say it: Mira was tired. That's why she stayed at home.
- Write it: উচিত, then কারণ

Before you move on

Advice or a must: উচিত or -তে হবে? (Advice is উচিত.) Which opens the result: কারণ or তাই? (তাই.) Which letter opens উচিত? (উ.)

Chapter 270

Which Way, and How Far

Modes: voice (3) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask the way (kībhābe jābô? kôtô dūr?), give it (sojā, bā̃dike, ḍāndike), and read and write the sign ু in দূর.
> Complete BN-R270-asking-the-way: ask the way and give it.

270.1 দূর (dūr) — far; a distance

> Before the new one: say "so we stayed at home". (tāi āmrā bāṛite thāklām.) Then কাছে, "near".

You'll want to know: দূর

দূর — dūr — "far; a distance".

> বাজার আমাদের বাড়ি থেকে দূরে।
> bājār āmāder bāṛi theke dūre. — "The market is far from our house."

দূরে, with -এ, is "far away, at a distance", the opposite of কাছে. থেকে gives the point it is measured from. দূর থেকে is "from far away": নদীটা দূর থেকে দেখলাম (nôdīṭā dūr theke dekhlām), "I saw the river from far away".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দূর (dūr) is a tatsama: Sanskrit dūra, "distant", and as a noun "distance" (CDIAL 6495). CDIAL lists the Bengali word under it as dur: Bengali does not lengthen the vowel, and the long ূ is the Sanskrit spelling kept.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- dūr
- "The market is far from our house" — bājār āmāder bāṛi theke dūre
- "The station is near" — sṭeshôn kāchhe

Before you move on

What does দূর mean? ("Far; a distance".) "Far away"? (দূরে.) Its opposite? (কাছে.)

270.2 ূ (-ū) — the sign under the দ of দূর

Before the new one: say দূর, "far". Then write তু and উ: the u sign and the u letter you know.

Script you'll notice: ূ

ূ — -ū, the long u, written under its consonant: দূর. Bengali says it the same as ু; the long sign is a spelling, mostly in words from Sanskrit, as ী is beside ি.

Set the print of দূ beside দু. Under দু hangs a small closed loop with a short slanting tail at its lower right. Under দূ hangs a rounded hook that is open on the right, like a C, with a short slanting tail at its lower end.

Writing: ূ — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside দূ and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large: the দ, then the open hook under it, then its tail. Check the copy against the print: open, not closed like ু.

This book does not yet tell you where to start ূ or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ূ under the দ of দূর
- Write it: দু, then দূ, from the print
- Write it: দূর, then দূরে
- Write it: উচিত, from memory

Before you move on

Which sign is under the দ of দূর? (ূ.) How is it unlike ু? (Its hook is open on the right.) Is it said longer? (No: the same u.)

270.3 ... কীভাবে যাব? কত দূর? (kībhābe jābô? kôtô dūr?) — asking the way

Say "The market is far from our house". (bājār āmāder bāṛi theke dūre.) Then "I will go". (jābô.)

You'll want to know: asking

স্টেশনে কীভাবে যাব?

sṭeshône kībhābe jābô? — "How do I get to the station?"

কীভাবে (kībhābe), "how", is কী, "what", with ভাবে, "in the manner": "how shall I go?". কত (kôtô), "how much", with দূর asks the distance:

স্টেশন কত দূর?

sṭeshôn kôtô dūr? — "How far is the station?"

To ask a stranger, start with মাফ করবেন, "excuse me".

You'll want to know: giving the way

The answer often uses the polite future, "you will go", with সোজা, "straight on", বাঁদিকে (bā̃dike), "to the left", and ডানদিকে (ḍāndike), "to the right": বাঁ, "left", ডান, "right", with দিক, "a side", and -এ.

> সোজা গিয়ে মোড় থেকে ডানদিকে যাবেন। স্টেশন বাজারের পাশে।
> sojā giye moṛ theke ḍāndike jāben. sṭeshôn bājārer pāshe. — "Go straight, then turn right at the corner. The station is next to the market."

And the distance: দশ মিনিট হাঁটতে হবে (dôsh miniṭ hā̃ṭte hôbe), "it's a ten-minute walk".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Excuse me, how do I get to the market?" — māph kôrben, bājāre kībhābe jābô?
- "Go straight, then turn left" — sojā giye bā̃dike jāben
- "It's a ten-minute walk" — dôsh miniṭ hā̃ṭte hôbe

Before you move on

"How far?" (কত দূর?) "To the left"? (বাঁদিকে.) "To the right"? (ডানদিকে.)

270.4 Review — which way, and how far

Ask "How far is the station?" (sṭeshôn kôtô dūr?)

Your turn

- Say it: Excuse me, how do I get to the hospital?
- Say it: Go straight, then turn right at the corner.
- Say it: The hotel is next to the station. It isn't far.

- Say it: How far is the river? It's a ten-minute walk.
- Say it: I don't think the market is far, but you ought to take a bus.
- Write it: দূর, then উচিত

Before you move on

"How do I get to the station?" (স্টেশনে কীভাবে যাব?) "Far away"? (দূরে.) Which sign is under the দ of দূর? (ূ.)

Chapter 271

Tickets, and When Things Go Wrong

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can buy a ticket (ekṭā ṭikiṭ deben?), ask the fare and the time, report a lost bag or a missed train (hāriye gechhe, chheṛe gechhe), and read and write ৌ in নৌকা.
> Complete BN-R271-at-the-station: buy a ticket and report a problem.

271.1 নৌকা (noukā) — a boat

> Before the new one: ask "How do I get to the station?" (ṣṭeshône kībhābe jābô?)

You'll want to know: নৌকা

নৌকা — noukā — "a boat".

> আমরা নৌকায় নদী পার হলাম।
> āmrā noukāy nôdī pār hôlām. — "We crossed the river by boat."

নৌকায়, with -য়, is "in a boat, by boat", as বাসে is "by bus". A নৌকা is small, rowed or sailed on a river; the big ship is জাহাজ, which you know.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নৌকা (noukā) is a tatsama: Sanskrit naukā, which Monier-Williams gives as "a small boat or ship". Beside it Monier-Williams lists nau, "a ship, boat".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- noukā
- "We crossed the river by boat" — āmrā noukāy nôdī pār hôlām
- "A boat is small; a ship is big" — noukā chhoṭo; jāhāj bôṛo

Before you move on

What does নৌকা mean? ("A boat".) "By boat"? (নৌকায়.) The big ship? (জাহাজ.)

271.2 ৌ (-ou) — the sign around the ন of নৌকা

> Before the new one: say নৌকা, "a boat". Then write নো (no): ে in front of the ন, া after it.

Script you'll notice: ৌ

ৌ — -ou, the vowel of নৌকা. Like ো, it is written on both sides of its consonant: one part in front, one after.

Set the print of নৌ beside নো. In front of the ন, both have ে. After it, নো has an upright stroke like া. নৌ has an upright stroke too, but its top stands above the headline in a hook, bent over to the left, its tip at the upper left.

Writing: ৌ — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside নৌ and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large: the ে in front, the ন, then the stroke after it with its hook above the headline. Check the copy against নো: only the hook differs.

This book does not yet tell you where to start ৌ or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ৌ around the ন of নৌকা
- Write it: নো, then নৌ, from the print
- Write it: নৌকা, then নৌকায়
- Write it: দূর, from memory

Before you move on

Which sign is around the ন of নৌকা? (ৌ.) How is it unlike ো? (The stroke after the consonant has a hook above the headline.)

271.3 একটা টিকিট দেবেন? (ekṭā ṭikiṭ deben?) — at the ticket window

Say "We crossed the river by boat". (āmrā noukāy nôdī pār hôlām.) Then টিকিট, "a ticket".

You'll want to know: asking for a ticket

একটা টিকিট দেবেন?

ekṭā ṭikiṭ deben? — "Could I have a ticket, please?"

Bengali often asks politely with the respectful future, "will you give?", where English says "could I have". দেবেন is দেওয়া in that form. To say where to, put the place in the -র form: গ্রামের একটা টিকিট, "a ticket to the village". To ask for a seat: জানালার পাশে একটা আসন পাব? (jānālār pāshe ekṭā āsôn pābô?), "can I get a seat by the window?".

You'll want to know: the fare and the time

ভাড়া কত? ট্রেন কখন ছাড়বে?

bhāṛā kôtô? ṭren kôkhôn chhāṛbe? — "What's the fare? When does the train leave?"

কত, "how much", asks the fare. কখন, "when?", asks the time. ছাড়বে, "will leave", is ছাড়া, "to leave, to let go", in the future.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Could I have a ticket to the village, please?" — grāmer ekṭā ṭikiṭ deben?
- "What's the fare?" — bhāṛā kôtô?
- "When does the train leave?" — ṭren kôkhôn chhāṛbe?

Before you move on

The polite "could I have"? (দেবেন?) "How much is the fare?" (ভাড়া কত?) "When will it leave?" (কখন ছাড়বে?)

271.4 আমার ব্যাগ হারিয়ে গেছে (āmār byāg hāriye gechhe) — when something goes wrong

Ask "When does the train leave?" (ṭren kôkhôn chhāṛbe?) Then say হারিয়ে যাওয়া, "to get lost", which you know.

You'll want to know: something is lost

আমার মানিব্যাগ হারিয়ে গেছে।

āmār mānibyāg hāriye gechhe. — "My wallet has gone missing."

গেছে is a form of যাওয়া that says something happened and still matters now: the wallet went, and it is still gone. This book teaches it only in these set phrases. Whose it is goes in the -র form: আমার ব্যাগ, মীরার পাসপোর্ট. Then what you will do: পুলিশকে জানাব (pulishke jānābô), "I'll tell the police".

You'll want to know: the train has left

ছাড়া, "to leave", which you know, makes the same phrase: ছেড়ে গেছে, "has left".

> আমার ট্রেন ছেড়ে গেছে। পরের ট্রেন কখন?
> āmār ṭren chheṛe gechhe. pôrer ṭren kôkhôn? — "My train has left. When is the next train?"

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "My passport has gone missing" — āmār pāsporṭ hāriye gechhe
- "I'll tell the police" — pulishke jānābô
- "My train has left. When is the next train?" — āmār ṭren chheṛe gechhe. pôrer ṭren kôkhôn?

Before you move on

"My bag has gone missing"? (আমার ব্যাগ হারিয়ে গেছে.) "The train has left"? (ট্রেন ছেড়ে গেছে.) What does গেছে add? (It happened, and it still matters now.)

271.5 Review — at the station

> Ask for a ticket. (ekṭā ṭikiṭ deben?) Then say "My wallet has gone missing". (āmār mānibyāg hāriye gechhe.)

Your turn

- Say it: Could I have a ticket to the village, please? What's the fare?
- Say it: When will the boat leave?
- Say it: Excuse me, my bag has gone missing. I was sitting on the platform.
- Say it: Our train has left. That's why we have to take the bus.

- Say it: How do I get to the airport? How far is it?
- Write it: নৌকা, then দূর

Before you move on

The polite ask? (দেবেন?) "Has gone missing"? (হারিয়ে গেছে.) "Has left"? (ছেড়ে গেছে.) Which sign is around the ন of নৌকা? (ৌ.)

Chapter 272

Feelings and Hopes

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how I feel with āmār (āmār bhālo lāgchhe, āmār bhôy kôrchhe), say what I want to become (ḍāktār hôte chāi) and what I wish, and read and write অ in অভিজ্ঞতা.
> Complete BN-R272-feelings-and-hopes: say how you feel, what you want to become and what you wish.

272.1 অভিজ্ঞতা (ôbhigyôtā) — experience

> Before the new one: say "My train has left". (āmār ṭren chheṛe gechhe.) Then জ্ঞান, "knowledge": its জ্ঞ is in this word too.

You'll want to know: অভিজ্ঞতা

অভিজ্ঞতা — ôbhigyôtā — "experience; an experience".

> গ্রামে আমার একটা নতুন অভিজ্ঞতা হল।
> grāme āmār ekṭā nôtun ôbhigyôtā hôlô. — "I had a new experience in the village."

An experience "happens to" you, as a thought comes to you: আমার ... অভিজ্ঞতা হল. Experience you have gathered "is there": এই কাজে তার অভিজ্ঞতা আছে (ei kāje tār ôbhigyôtā āchhe), "he has experience in this work".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অভিজ্ঞতা (ôbhigyôtā) is a tatsama: Sanskrit abhijñatā, which Monier-Williams gives as "the knowledge of". It is abhi-, "towards", with jña, "knowing" (the জ্ঞ of জ্ঞান, said gy), and -tā, which makes an abstract noun. Bengali uses it for knowledge got by living through something; that sense, "experience", is Bengali use, not one Monier-Williams gives.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ôbhigyôtā
- "I had a new experience in the village" — grāme āmār ekṭā nôtun ôbhigyôtā hôlô
- "He has experience in this work" — ei kāje tār ôbhigyôtā āchhe

Before you move on

What does অভিজ্ঞতা mean? ("Experience".) "I had an experience"? (আমার একটা অভিজ্ঞতা হল.)

272.2 অ (ô) — the letter at the start of অভিজ্ঞতা

Before the new one: say অভিজ্ঞতা. Then read ক (kô): its vowel, the ô every consonant carries, is the vowel of this letter.

Script you'll notice: অ

অ — ô, the vowel inside every bare consonant: ক is kô. It has no sign, because a consonant carries it already; at the start of a word, with nothing to ride on, it is the letter অ: অভিজ্ঞতা. Now the name Arun can be written: অরুণ (ôrun).

In the print of this book, অ has a headline and an upright stem on the right, the full height of the letter. Left of the stem is a large rounded bowl; its left arm ends in a slanted tip at the upper left. The bowl's right side is curled over inside the top of the bowl and ends there in a solid round knob, and a short curve joins the knob to the headline above it. A slanting leg joins the bottom right of the bowl to the foot of the stem.

আ, which you write, is অ with one more upright stroke after it, standing from the headline: look at the two side by side.

Writing: অ — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside অ and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large. Check the copy against the print: the bowl and its tip, the knob and the short curve to the headline, the leg to the stem.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start অ or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: অ at the front of অভিজ্ঞতা
- Write it: অ, then আ, from the print
- Write it: অভিজ্ঞতা
- Write it: অরুণ, with ণ at the end

Before you move on

Which letter opens অভিজ্ঞতা? (অ.) Which vowel does it write? (ô, the one every consonant carries.) What does আ add to it? (One upright stroke.)

272.3 আমার ভালো লাগছে (āmār bhālo lāgchhe) — how I feel

> Say "I had a new experience in the village". (grāme āmār ekṭā nôtun ôbhigyôtā hôlô.) Then ভালো লাগা, "to like": "good sticks to me".

You'll want to know: feelings now

আমার এখানে ভালো লাগছে।

āmār ekhāne bhālo lāgchhe. — "I'm enjoying it here."

Many feelings come to a person, as a thought does: the one who feels is in the -র form. Going on now, they take -ছে: আমার ভালো লাগছে, "I'm enjoying it"; আমার ভয় করছে (āmār bhôy kôrchhe) or আমার ভয় লাগছে (āmār bhôy lāgchhe), "I'm scared", with the same লাগা as ভালো লাগা; আমার রাগ হচ্ছে (āmār rāg hôchchhe), "I'm getting angry". Words that describe a person take আমি, as before: আমি খুশি, "I'm happy"; আমি ক্লান্ত.

You'll want to know: feelings then

In the past, a whole feeling takes the plain past, and a feeling that lasted takes -ছিল:

গ্রামটা আমার ভালো লাগল, কিন্তু ঝড়ে আমার ভয় করছিল।

grāmṭā āmār bhālo lāglô, kintu jhôṛe āmār bhôy kôrchhilô. — "I liked the village, but I was scared in the storm."

With হওয়া, a describing word becomes a change: সে খুশি হল (she khushi hôlô), "she was pleased".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I'm enjoying it here" — āmār ekhāne bhālo lāgchhe
- "I'm scared" — āmār bhôy kôrchhe
- "She was pleased" — she khushi hôlô

Before you move on

"I'm scared"? (আমার ভয় করছে.) "I'm happy"? (আমি খুশি.) Which feelings take আমার? (Those that come to you: ভালো লাগা, ভয়, রাগ.)

272.4 ... হতে চাই (hôte chāi) — what I want to become

Say "I'm enjoying it here". (āmār ekhāne bhālo lāgchhe.) Then "I have to go". (āmāke jete hôbe.) Its যেতে is the -তে form you need now.

You'll want to know: want to আমি ডাক্তার হতে চাই।

āmi ḍāktār hôte chāi. — "I want to be a doctor."

চাই is চাওয়া, "to want", in the present: "I want". With the -তে form of another verb it is "want to": হতে চাই, "want to be"; দেখতে চাই (dekhte chāi), "want to see"; যেতে চাই (jete chāi), "want to go". Here the one who wants is আমি, not আমার: wanting is something you do.

You'll want to know: my wish

For a wish, use ইচ্ছা, "a wish", or স্বপ্ন, "a dream", which you know, with the -র form of the verb:

আমার পাহাড়ে যাওয়ার ইচ্ছা আছে।

āmār pāhāṛe jāoyār ichchhā āchhe. — "I'd like to go to the mountains."

যাওয়ার ইচ্ছা, "a wish of going". Said aloud, ইচ্ছা is often ichchhe, and you will see it written ইচ্ছে too.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I want to see the sea" — āmi sômudrô dekhte chāi
- "She wants to be a doctor" — she ḍāktār hôte chāy
- "I'd like to go to the mountains" — āmār pāhāṛe jāoyār ichchhā āchhe

Before you move on

"I want to be"? (হতে চাই.) আমি or আমার with চাই? (আমি.) And with ইচ্ছা আছে? (আমার.)

272.5 Review — feelings and hopes

Say "I'm scared", then "I want to be a doctor". (āmār bhôy kôrchhe; āmi ḍāktār hôte chāi.)

Your turn

- Say it: I'm enjoying it here, because the people are kind.
- Say it: Yesterday I was scared in the storm.
- Say it: I had a new experience in the city.
- Say it: Mira wants to be a doctor. Arun wants to see the sea.
- Say it: I'd like to go to the mountains one more time.
- Write it: অভিজ্ঞতা, then অরুণ

Before you move on

"I'm enjoying it"? (আমার ভালো লাগছে.) "I want to see"? (দেখতে চাই.) Which letter opens অভিজ্ঞতা? (অ.)

Chapter 273

Than, Most, and How Long

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can compare (-er cheye, sôbcheye), say how long something has gone on (dui bôchhôr dhôre, sôkāl theke rāt pôrjôntô), and read and write the sign ৈ in দৈনিক.
> Complete BN-R273-comparing-and-time: compare things and say how long.

273.1 দৈনিক (doinik) — of each day; a daily paper

> Before the new one: say "I want to be a doctor". (āmi ḍāktār hôte chāi.) Then রোজ, "daily, every day".

You'll want to know: দৈনিক

দৈনিক — doinik — "of each day; a daily paper".

> আমার দৈনিক খরচ একশো টাকা।
> āmār doinik khôrôch eksho ṭākā. — "My daily spending is a hundred taka."

রোজ tells you when: "every day". দৈনিক describes a thing: দৈনিক খরচ, "daily spending", দৈনিক কাজ, "daily work". On its own it is a newspaper that comes out every day: বাবা রোজ একটা দৈনিক পড়েন (bābā roj ekṭā doinik pôṛen), "Father reads a daily every day".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দৈনিক (doinik) is a tatsama: Sanskrit dainika, "daily" (Monier-Williams). It belongs with dina, "day", Bengali দিন: CDIAL (6566) gives the related daina, "relating to a day", and refers it to dina; dainika has the same strengthened first vowel, ai, with -ika, "of, belonging to", added.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- doinik
- "My daily spending is a hundred taka" — āmār doinik khôrôch eksho ṭākā
- "Father reads a daily every day" — bābā roj ekṭā doinik pôṛen

Before you move on

What does দৈনিক describe? (A thing of each day.) Which word says "every day", when? (রোজ.)

273.2 ৈ (-oi) — the sign in front of the দ of দৈনিক

Before the new one: say দৈনিক. Then write দে (de) and নৌ (nou).

Script you'll notice: ৈ

ৈ — -oi, the vowel of দৈনিক. Like ে, it is written in front of its consonant, though it is said after it.

Set the print of দৈ beside দে. দে has ে in front: an upright curve with a small knob at its foot. দৈ has the same, and above it a hook stands on the headline, bent over to the left, its tip at the upper left: the same hook as the one on the stroke of ৌ.

Writing: ৈ — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside দৈ and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large: the ে with its hook above the headline, then the দ. Check the copy against দে: only the hook differs.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start ৈ or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ৈ in front of the দ of দৈনিক
- Write it: দে, then দৈ, from the print
- Write it: দৈনিক
- Write it: অভিজ্ঞতা, from memory

Before you move on

Which sign is in front of the দ of দৈনিক? (ৈ.) How is it unlike ে? (A hook stands above the headline.) Which other sign has that hook? (ৌ, on its stroke after the consonant.)

273.3 -এর চেয়ে / সবচেয়ে (-er cheye / sôbcheye) — than, and most

Say "my daily spending". (āmār doinik khôrôch.) Then বড় and ছোট, "big" and "small".

You'll want to know: than নদী পুকুরের চেয়ে বড়।

nôdī pukurer cheye bôṛo. — "A river is bigger than a pond."

The thing you measure against takes the -র form and চেয়ে (cheye), "than". The describing word does not change: বড় is "big" and "bigger". ট্রেন বাসের চেয়ে তাড়াতাড়ি যায় (ṭren bāser cheye tāṛātāṛi jāy), "a train goes faster than a bus".

You'll want to know: most সব (sôb) is "all", so সবচেয়ে (sôbcheye) is "than all": "most, the -est".

> আমার সবচেয়ে প্রিয় খাবার মাছ।
> āmār sôbcheye priyô khābār māchh. — "My favourite food of all is fish."

এটা সবচেয়ে দামি বই (eṭā sôbcheye dāmi bôi), "this is the most expensive book".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "The city is bigger than the village" — shôhôr grāmer cheye bôṛo
- "A train goes faster than a bus" — ṭren bāser cheye tāṛātāṛi jāy
- "This is the most expensive book" — eṭā sôbcheye dāmi bôi

Before you move on

"Than"? (-এর চেয়ে.) Does বড় change for "bigger"? (No.) "Most"? (সবচেয়ে: "than all".)

273.4 ... ধরে / থেকে ... পর্যন্ত (dhôre / theke ... pôrjôntô) — how long

Say "A river is bigger than a pond". (nôdī pukurer cheye bôṛo.) Then ধরা, "to hold".

You'll want to know: for a stretch of time

আমি দুই বছর ধরে বাংলা শিখছি।

āmi dui bôchhôr dhôre bānglā shikhchhi. — "I have been learning Bengali for two years."

ধরে is ধরা in the -e form: "holding" a stretch of time. With the going-on present, it says what started then and is still going on: English says "have been", Bengali says "am". In the past it is a stretch that is over: আমরা তিন দিন ধরে হাঁটলাম (āmrā tin din dhôre hā̃ṭlām), "we walked for three days".

You'll want to know: from ... until থেকে, "from", which you have met, is থাকা in the -e form; পর্যন্ত (pôrjôntô) is "until, as far as". They frame a stretch with two ends:

দোকান সকাল থেকে রাত পর্যন্ত খোলা থাকে।

dokān sôkāl theke rāt pôrjôntô kholā thāke. — "The shop is open from morning until night."

পর্যন্ত measures places too: বাড়ি থেকে স্টেশন পর্যন্ত (bāṛi theke sṭeshôn pôrjôntô), "from the house as far as the station".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "I have been learning Bengali for two years" — āmi dui bôchhôr dhôre bānglā shikhchhi
- "We walked for three days" — āmrā tin din dhôre hā̃ṭlām
- "I work from morning until evening" — āmi sôkāl theke sôndhyā pôrjôntô kāj kôri

Before you move on

"For two years"? (দুই বছর ধরে.) "Have been learning"? (The going-on present: শিখছি.) "From … until"? (থেকে ... পর্যন্ত.)

273.5 Review — than, most, and how long

Say “The city is bigger than the village”, then “for two years”. (shôhôr grāmer cheye bôṛo; dui bôchhôr dhôre.)

Your turn

- Say it: The mountains are more beautiful than the city. I’d like to go there.
- Say it: This is my favourite book of all.
- Say it: Mira has been working at the hospital for three years.
- Say it: The market is open from morning until evening.
- Say it: Father reads a daily every morning.
- Write it: দৈনিক, then নৌকা

Before you move on

“Than”? (-এর চেয়ে.) “Most”? (সবচেয়ে.) “For three years”? (তিন বছর ধরে.) Which sign is in front of the দ of দৈনিক? (ৈ.)

Chapter 274

If, and Otherwise

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what will happen if (jôdi … tāhôle), say it with the -le form (brishṭi hôle), add otherwise (nāhôle), and read and write ঢ in ঢোকা.
> Complete BN-R274-if-and-otherwise: say what will happen if, and otherwise.

274.1 যদি ... তাহলে ... (jôdi ... tāhôle ...) — if, then

> Say "for two years". (dui bôchhôr dhôre.) Then যদি, "if", and তাহলে, "then, in that case": both of which you know.

You'll want to know: if, then

> যদি কাল ঝড় হয়, তাহলে আমরা যাব না।
> jôdi kāl jhôṛ hôy, tāhôle āmrā jābô nā. — "If there's a storm tomorrow, we won't go."

The যদি half takes the present, even about tomorrow: হয়, not হবে. The তাহলে half takes the future. তাহলে may be left out: যদি তুমি আসো, আমি রান্না করব (jôdi tumi āso, āmi rānnā kôrbô), "if you come, I'll cook".

You'll want to know: if not

Inside a যদি half, না comes before the verb, not after it:

> যদি ট্রেন সময়মতো না আসে, তাহলে আমি বাসে যাব।
> jôdi ṭren sômôymôto nā āse, tāhôle āmi bāse jābô. — "If the train doesn't come on time, I'll take the bus."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "If there's a storm tomorrow, we won't go" — jôdi kāl jhôṛ hôy, tāhôle āmrā jābô nā
- "If you come, I'll cook" — jôdi tumi āso, āmi rānnā kôrbô
- "If the train doesn't come on time, I'll take the bus" — jôdi ṭren sômôymôto nā āse, tāhôle āmi bāse jābô

Before you move on

Which tense after যদি? (The present.) After তাহলে? (The future.) Where does না go in the যদি half? (Before the verb.)

274.2 বৃষ্টি হলে ... (brishṭi hôle ...) — the -le form, and otherwise

Say "If there's a storm tomorrow, we won't go". (jôdi kāl jhôṛ hôy, tāhôle āmrā jābô nā.) Then নাহলে, "otherwise".

You'll want to know: the -le form

Bengali can say "if" with no যদি: the verb takes -লে, on the stem of the past, and stays the same for every person.

> বৃষ্টি হলে আমরা বাড়িতে থাকব।
> brishṭi hôle āmrā bāṛite thākbô. — "If it rains, we'll stay at home."

বৃষ্টি (brishṭi) is "rain", and বৃষ্টি হওয়া is "to rain": "rain happens".

হওয়া → হলে, আসা → এলে, যাওয়া → গেলে, খাওয়া → খেলে, করা → করলে, কেনা → কিনলে: তুমি এলে আমি খুশি হব (tumi ele āmi khushi hôbô), "if you come, I'll be happy". The person is in the noun before it, never in the ending.

You'll want to know: otherwise

নাহলে, "otherwise", which you know, is না with this same হলে: "if it is not so".

> তাড়াতাড়ি যেতে হবে, নাহলে ট্রেন ছেড়ে যাবে। > tāṛātāṛi jete hôbe, nāhôle ṭren chheṛe jābe. — "We have to go quickly, otherwise the train will leave."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "If it rains, we'll stay at home" — brishṭi hôle āmrā bāṛite thākbô
- "If you come, I'll be happy" — tumi ele āmi khushi hôbô
- "We have to go quickly, otherwise the train will leave" — tāṛātāṛi jete hôbe, nāhôle ṭren chheṛe jābe

Before you move on

আসা in the -লে form? (এলে.) Does -লে change for the person? (No.) "Otherwise"? (নাহলে: "if not so".)

274.3 ঢোকা (ḍhokā) — to enter

Before the new one: say "If you come, I'll be happy". (tumi ele āmi khushi hôbô.)

You'll want to know: ঢোকা

ঢোকা — ḍhokā — "to enter, to go in".

> বাড়িতে ঢুকে আমি জুতো খুললাম।

bāṛite ḍhuke āmi juto khullām. — "I came into the house and took my shoes off."

The place you enter takes -এ or -তে: বাড়িতে, দোকানে. The ও of ঢোকা rises to উ in the past, the -e form and the -লে form, as খোলা does: সে দোকানে ঢুকল (she dokāne ḍhuklô), "she went into the shop"; ঢুকে; ঢুকলে.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঢোকা (ḍhokā) is listed in CDIAL, as ḍhukā, "to enter", under a reconstructed ḍhukyati*, "approaches" (CDIAL 5592): a form no text records, hence the star.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- ḍhokā, then she ḍhuklô
- "I came into the house and took my shoes off" — bāṛite ḍhuke āmi juto khullām
- "She went into the shop" — she dokāne ḍhuklô

Before you move on

What does ঢোকা mean? ("To enter".) Its past? (ঢুকল, with উ.) Its -e form? (ঢুকে.)

274.4 ঢ (ḍhô) — the letter at the start of ঢোকা

Before the new one: say ঢোকা, "to enter". Then read ট (ṭô) and ড (ḍô).

Script you'll notice: ঢ

ঢ — ḍhô: the ড sound with a breath after it, as ঠ is ট with a breath. It opens ঢোকা.

In the print of this book, ঢ is ট without its raised hook. It has a headline; a straight stem stands under the left part of it; the stem's foot rounds into a bowl, and the bowl's right side ends in a solid knob, tucked inside the curve under the right half of the headline. The right side does not reach the headline. Look at ট beside it: below the headline the two are alike, and ট has the hook above.

Writing: ড — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside ড and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large. Check the copy against the print: the headline, the stem on the left, the round bottom, the solid knob, and the gap between the knob and the headline.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start ড or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: ড at the front of ঢোকা
- Write it: ট, then ড, from the print
- Write it: ঢোকা, then ঢুকল
- Write it: দৈনিক, from memory

Before you move on

Which letter opens ঢোকা? (ড.) What does its right side end in? (A solid knob.) What does ট have that ড does not? (The hook above the headline.)

274.5 Review — if, and otherwise

> Say "If there's a storm tomorrow, we won't go", then "if it rains tomorrow, we won't go", with হলে. (jôdi kāl jhôṛ hôy, tāhôle āmrā jābô nā; kāl brishṭi hôle āmrā jābô nā.)

Your turn

- Say it: If you have a fever, you ought to go to the doctor.
- Say it: If the bus doesn't come, we'll walk.
- Say it: If Mira comes, we'll go to the market.
- Say it: We have to leave now, otherwise we'll be late.
- Say it: The shop is open from morning until night. She went in and bought a book.
- Write it: ঢোকা, then দৈনিক

Before you move on

Which tense after যদি? (The present.) যাওয়া in the -লে form? (গেলে.) "Otherwise"? (নাহলে.) Which letter opens ঢোকা? (ঢ.)

Chapter 275

It Depends, and What Would Be

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) ✓ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what something depends on (… -er opôr nirbhôr kôre), say what would happen and what used to happen (jetām), write six connected lines about a trip, and read and write ঙ in সঙ্গে.
> Complete BN-R275-depends-and-would: say what something depends on and what would be, after writing six connected lines about a trip.

275.1 … -এর ওপর নির্ভর করে (-er opôr nirbhôr kôre) — it depends on

> Say "If it rains, we'll stay at home". (brishṭi hôle āmrā bāṛite thākbô.) Then ওপরে, "above, upstairs".

You'll want to know: it depends on > এটা আবহাওয়ার ওপর নির্ভর করে।

> eṭā ābôhāoyār opôr nirbhôr kôre. — "It depends on the weather."

ওপর (opôr), "on, upon", is the word inside ওপরে. নির্ভর করা (nirbhôr kôrā) is "to depend". What it depends on takes the -র form, then ওপর: word for word, "it does reliance upon the weather". সব, "all", from the lesson on সবচেয়ে, makes it "everything": সব আবহাওয়ার ওপর নির্ভর করে.

You'll want to know: it's up to you

With a person, it is "up to" them: এটা তোমার ওপর নির্ভর করে (eṭā tomār opôr nirbhôr kôre), "it's up to you". About a plan:

> কাল বাজারে যাব, যদি মীরা আসে। সব মীরার ওপর নির্ভর করে।
> kāl bājāre jābô, jôdi mīrā āse. sôb mīrār opôr nirbhôr kôre. — "We'll go to the market tomorrow if Mira comes. Everything depends on Mira."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "It depends on the weather" — eṭā ābôhāoyār opôr nirbhôr kôre
- "It's up to you" — eṭā tomār opôr nirbhôr kôre
- "Everything depends on the train" — sôb ṭrener opôr nirbhôr kôre

Before you move on

"It depends on the weather"? (এটা আবহাওয়ার ওপর নির্ভর করে.)
"It's up to you"? (তোমার ওপর নির্ভর করে.)

275.2 যদি ... থাকত, তাহলে ... যেতাম (jôdi ... thāktô, tāhôle ... jetām) — what would be

Say "It depends on the weather". (eṭā ābôhāoyār opôr nirbhôr kôre.) Then "If you come, I'll cook". (jôdi tumi āso, āmi rānnā kôrbô.) That if can come true.

You'll want to know: what would be

> যদি সময় থাকত, তাহলে আমি যেতাম।
> jôdi sômôy thāktô, tāhôle āmi jetām. — "If I had time, I would go."

For an if that is not true, both halves take the -ত- form: the stem, then -ত-, then the person: আমি যেতাম (āmi jetām), তুমি যেতে (tumi jete), সে যেত (she jetô), আপনি যেতেন (āpni jeten). যাওয়া → যে-, খাওয়া → খে-, হওয়া → হ-; করা → করতাম, থাকা → থাকতাম. The if half may take the -লে form instead: টাকা থাকলে আমি একটা নৌকা কিনতাম (ṭākā thākle āmi ekṭā noukā kintām), "if I had money, I'd buy a boat".

You'll want to know: what used to be

The same form tells what happened again and again in the past:

> আগে আমি রোজ নদীতে যেতাম।
> āge āmi roj nôdīte jetām. — "I used to go to the river every day."

আগে, "before", here is "in the old days". A word like রোজ or প্রতিদিন makes the habit clear.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "If I had time, I would go" — jôdi sômôy thāktô, tāhôle āmi jetām
- "If I had money, I'd buy a boat" — ṭākā thākle āmi ekṭā noukā kintām
- "I used to go to the river every day" — āge āmi roj nôdīte jetām

Before you move on

"I would go"? (যেতাম.) "He would go"? (যেত.) What makes যেতাম a habit? (A word like রোজ or প্রতিদিন, and a time in the past.)

275.3 সঙ্গে (sôngge) — with

> Before the new one: say "If I had time, I would go". (jôdi sômôy thāktô, tāhôle āmi jetām.) Then the line from your first meeting: আলাপ করে ভালো লাগলো.

You'll want to know: সঙ্গে

সঙ্গে — sôngge — "with".

> আমি বন্ধুর সঙ্গে সিনেমায় গেলাম।
> āmi bôndhur sôngge sinemāy gelām. — "I went to the cinema with a friend."

The one you are with takes the -র form: বন্ধুর সঙ্গে, আমার সঙ্গে, তোমার সঙ্গে. Now the line from your first meeting can say who: তোমার সঙ্গে আলাপ করে ভালো লাগল, "it was good to meet you".

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সঙ্গে (sôngge) is usually read as সঙ্গ, "company", with the locative -এ: "in the company of". সঙ্গ is a tatsama, Sanskrit saṅga, which Monier-Williams gives as "contact with" and "association with".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sôngge
- "I used to go to the river with Grandfather" — āge āmi dādur sôngge nôdīte jetām
- "I went to the cinema with a friend" — āmi bôndhur sôngge sinemāy gelām
- "It was good to meet you" — tomār sôngge ālāp kore bhālo lāglô

Before you move on

What does সঙ্গে mean? ("With".) Which form does the person take? (The -র form: তোমার সঙ্গে.)

275.4 ঙ (ngô) — the letter inside সঙ্গে

Before the new one: say সঙ্গে, "with". Then read বাংলা: its ং says ng too.

Script you'll notice: ঙ

ঙ — ngô: the ng of "sing". It almost never starts a word. In সঙ্গে it is joined to গ in one conjunct, ঙ্গ, ngg, which does not look like the two letters set side by side: learn that shape as a whole.

In the print of this book, ঙ has no headline. Its lower part is a large round bowl: its left arm ends high, at the upper left, in a slanted tip, and its right side ends in a short flat end at the right. At the top, in the middle, sits a small closed loop, with a short straight arm slanting up to the left from it. Below the loop, a short stem and a curve join it to the end of the bowl's right side.

Writing: ঙ — copy the printed shape

Put your pen beside ঙ and copy the shape you can see, slowly and large. Check the copy against the print: the bowl and its tall left arm, the small loop and its arm, the short stem and curve.

> This book does not yet tell you where to start ঙ or which way the pen goes. That is not written down here until it can be written down with a source. Copying the printed shape needs no such source, and it is how the shape becomes yours in the meantime.

Your turn

- Find: the conjunct ঙ্গ in সঙ্গে
- Write it: ঙ, from the print, then ঙ্গ
- Write it: সঙ্গে
- Write it: ঢোকা, from memory

Before you move on

Which letter is inside the ঙ্গ of সঙ্গে? (ঙ.) Does ঙ have a headline? (No.) Which other sign says ng? (ং, in বাংলা.)

275.5 Six lines about a trip

> The A2 message asked for a practical note to a named reader. This task asks for six lines, and they tell a story: a trip, by train, bus or boat, real or invented.

Pick one reader: Arun, অরুণ, or Mira, মীরা. Say সঙ্গে and নৌকা aloud; both may go in.

What to know first

A told story is not a list of events. It has a scene, in -ছিল-, or with যখন ... তখন. It has events in the plain past, kept in order with প্রথমে, তারপর and শেষে, and joined with the -e form. It has a reason, with কারণ, তাই or -এর জন্য, and a feeling, with আমার ... লাগল or ভয় করছিল.

A good one ends by looking at what might have been: যদি ..., তাহলে ... যেতাম.

Writing — connected composition

On paper, in Bengali script, write six lines to your reader about the trip, one line for each of these:

1. the scene: when it was, and what you were doing as it began, with -ছিলাম or যখন ... তখন;
2. the first thing that happened, with প্রথমে, and who you went with, with সঙ্গে;
3. what happened next, with তারপর or an -e form, and one thing that went wrong: হারিয়ে গেছে or ছেড়ে গেছে, or হঠাৎ;
4. why, with কারণ, তাই or -এর জন্য;
5. how it ended and how you felt, with শেষে and আমার ... লাগল or ভয় করছিল;
6. what might have been, with যদি ..., তাহলে ... -তাম, and how far you went, with দূর or থেকে ... পর্যন্ত.

There is no model in this lesson. Use only words you already write. The work is choosing the right past for each line, and joining them.

Before you move on

Now read your lines as you read Mira's Saturday. Mark every verb s for scene, e for event. Line one should be mostly s; lines two and three mostly e.
Then three checks. A past ending is -ল, said -lô: গেল, এল. নৌকা has ৌ around its ন, and সঙ্গে has ঙ joined to গ. হঠাৎ ends in ৎ. Last, read line six alone. Does the if half take -ত- or -লে (থাকত, থাকলে), and the other half -ত- (যেতাম)?

275.6 Review — it depends, and what would be

Say "It depends on the weather", then "If I had time, I would go". (eṭā ābôhāoyār opôr nirbhôr kôre; jôdi sômôy thāktô, tāhôle āmi jetām.)

Your turn

- Say it: Will we go tomorrow? It depends on the weather. If Mira doesn't come, we won't go.
- Say it: It's up to you. If you come, I'll come with you.
- Say it: If I had money, I would buy a boat.
- Say it: In the old days I used to go to the river with Grandfather every day.
- Say it: We went into the shop with Mira.
- Write it: সঙ্গে, then ঢোকা

Before you move on

"It depends on"? (-এর ওপর নির্ভর করে.) "I would go"? (যেতাম.) "I used to go"? (রোজ যেতাম.) Which letter is inside সঙ্গে? (ঙ.)

Chapter 276

Something Happened

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that something happened and how many people were there.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 276: I can say that something happened and how many people were there.

276.1 ঘটনা (ghôṭônā) — an event; an incident

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for a female singer, then the Bengali for a female dancer.

You'll want to know: ঘটনা

ঘটনা — ghôṭônā — "an event; an incident".

> আমরা কী করব, সেটা ঘটনার ওপর নির্ভর করে।
> āmrā kī kôrbô, seṭā ghôṭônār opôr nirbhôr kôre.
> What we do will depend on the incident.

ঘটনা ঘটে, an event takes place: একটা ঘটনা ঘটল, something happened.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঘটনা (ghôṭônā) is Sanskrit ghaṭanā, taken over whole as a tatsama; Monier-Williams gives it senses from effort and motion to a taking effect. It sits beside the verb ঘটা, to happen.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ghôṭônā
- Say it: ghôṭônā, once more
- Say it: āmrā kī kôrbô, seṭā ghôṭônār opôr nirbhôr kôre. — What we do will depend on the incident.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a female singer, then the Bengali for a female dancer, then say ghôṭônā again

Before you move on

What does ঘটনা mean? ("An event; an incident".) Say it once more.

276.2 কিছু (kichhu) — something; some

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a female dancer, then the Bengali for an event.

You'll want to know: কিছু

কিছু — kichhu — "something; some".

গতকাল রাতে পাড়ায় কিছু একটা ঘটল।

gôtôkāl rāte pāṛāy kichhu ekṭā ghôṭlô.

Something happened in the neighbourhood last night.

Before a noun it means some: কিছু টাকা, some money.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কিছু (kichhu) comes down from Sanskrit kiṁcid, 'anything' (CDIAL 3144, which lists Bengali kichu). কিছু একটা is 'some one thing', something you cannot yet name.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: kichhu
- Say it: kichhu, once more
- Say it: gôtôkāl rāte pāṛāy kichhu ekṭā ghôṭlô. — Something happened in the neighbourhood last night.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a female dancer, then the Bengali for an event, then say kichhu again

Before you move on

What does কিছু mean? ("Something; some".) Say it once more.

276.3 অনেক (ônek) — many; a lot

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an event, then the Bengali for something.

You'll want to know: অনেক

অনেক — ônek — "many; a lot".

ঘটনাটা দেখতে অনেক লোক রাস্তায় এল। ghôṭônāṭā dekhte ônek lok rāstāy elô.

A lot of people came out onto the road to see what had happened.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অনেক (ônek) is Sanskrit aneka, an- 'not' and eka 'one' (Monier-Williams): 'not one' came to mean 'many'. এক, one, is the same eka.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ônek
- Say it: ônek, once more
- Say it: ghôṭônāṭā dekhte ônek lok rāstāy elô. — A lot of people came out onto the road to see what had happened.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an event, then the Bengali for something, then say ônek again

Before you move on

What does অনেক mean? ("Many; a lot".) Say it once more.

276.4 মানুষ (mānush) — a human being; people

Before the new one: say the Bengali for something, then the Bengali for many.

You'll want to know: মানুষ

মানুষ — mānush — "a human being; people".

ঘটনার সময় ওখানে কিছু মানুষ ছিল। ghôṭônār sômôy okhāne kichhu mānush chhilô.

There were a few people there when it happened.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মানুষ (mānush) comes down from Sanskrit mānuṣa, 'human; a man' (CDIAL 10049, which lists Bengali mānus). It names one person or people in general; লোক is the plainer everyday word.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: mānush
- Say it: mānush, once more
- Say it: ghôṭônār sômôy okhāne kichhu mānush chhilô. — There were a few people there when it happened.
- Recall: say the Bengali for something, then the Bengali for many, then say mānush again

Before you move on

What does মানুষ mean? ("A human being; people".) Say it once more.

276.5 দুর্ঘটনা (durghôṭônā) — an accident

Before the new one: say the Bengali for many, then the Bengali for a human being.

You'll want to know: দুর্ঘটনা

দুর্ঘটনা — durghôṭônā — "an accident".

গতকাল সকালে স্টেশনের কাছে একটা বড় দুর্ঘটনা ঘটল। gôtôkāl sôkāle sṭeshôner kāchhe ekṭā bôṛo durghôṭônā ghôṭlô.

There was a bad accident near the station yesterday morning.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দুর্ঘটনা (durghôṭônā) joins Sanskrit dur-, 'bad, ill', to ঘটনা, an event; Monier-Williams has both parts. A bad happening is an accident.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: durghôṭônā
- Say it: durghôṭônā, once more
- Say it: gôtôkāl sôkāle sṭeshôner kāchhe ekṭā bôṛo durghôṭônā ghôṭlô. — There was a bad accident near the station yesterday morning.
- Recall: say the Bengali for many, then the Bengali for a human being, then say durghôṭônā again

Before you move on

What does দুর্ঘটনা mean? ("An accident".) Say it once more.

Chapter 277

Who Saw It

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say who saw something and who was there.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 277: I can say who saw something and who was there.

277.1 সাক্ষী (sākkhī) — a witness

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a human being, then the Bengali for an accident.

You'll want to know: সাক্ষী

সাক্ষী — sākkhī — "a witness".

> আগে পাড়ার বুড়ো দারোয়ান সব ঘটনার সাক্ষী থাকতেন।
> āge pāṛār buṛo dāroyān sôb ghôṭôṇār sākkhī thākten.
> In the old days the old gatekeeper of the neighbourhood used to witness everything that happened.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সাক্ষী (sākkhī) is Sanskrit sākṣin, one who sees with his own eyes, and so a witness at law (Monier-Williams). The ক্ষ is read kkh.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: sākkhī
- Say it: sākkhī, once more
- Say it: āge pāṛār buṛo dāroyān sôb ghôṭônār sākkhī thākten. — In the old days the old gatekeeper of the neighbourhood used to witness everything that happened.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a human being, then the Bengali for an accident, then say sākkhī again

Before you move on

What does সাক্ষী mean? ("A witness".) Say it once more.

277.2 কেউ (keu) — someone; anyone

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an accident, then the Bengali for a witness.

You'll want to know: কেউ

কেউ — keu — "someone; anyone".

> দরজায় কেউ ছিল, কিন্তু আমি তার মুখ দেখলাম না।
> dôrjāy keu chhilô, kintu āmi tār mukh dekhlām nā.
> Someone was at the door, but I didn't see their face.

With না it means no one: কেউ এল না, nobody came.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কেউ (keu) comes down from Sanskrit ko 'pi, 'someone' (CDIAL 3518, which lists Bengali keu): kaḥ 'who' with api 'even', whoever it may be.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: keu
- Say it: keu, once more
- Say it: dôrjāy keu chhilô, kintu āmi tār mukh dekhlām nā. — Someone was at the door, but I didn't see their face.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an accident, then the Bengali for a witness, then say keu again

Before you move on

What does কেউ mean? ("Someone; anyone".) Say it once more.

277.3 সবাই (sôbāi) — everyone; everybody

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a witness, then the Bengali for someone.

You'll want to know: সবাই

সবাই — sôbāi — "everyone; everybody".

আওয়াজ শুনে সবাই বাইরে এল।

āoyāj shune sôbāi bāire elô.

When they heard the noise, everyone came outside.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সবাই (sôbāi) is সব, 'all' — Sanskrit sarva (CDIAL 13276, which lists Bengali sab) — with the emphatic ending that makes it 'every single one'. সবাই এল, everyone came.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: sôbāi
- Say it: sôbāi, once more
- Say it: āoyāj shune sôbāi bāire elô. — When they heard the noise, everyone came outside.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a witness, then the Bengali for someone, then say sôbāi again

Before you move on

What does সবাই mean? ("Everyone; everybody".) Say it once more.

277.4 ভিড় (bhiṛ) — a crowd

Before the new one: say the Bengali for someone, then the Bengali for everyone.

You'll want to know: ভিড়

ভিড় — bhiṛ — "a crowd".

দুর্ঘটনার পরে রাস্তায় বড় ভিড় হল। durghôṭônār pôre rāstāy bôṛo bhiṛ hôlô.

A big crowd gathered on the road after the accident.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভিড় (bhiṛ) is filed in CDIAL 9490 under a Middle Indo-Aryan bhiṭ-, 'meet, throng', which lists Bengali bhiṛ, 'a crowd'. ভিড় হওয়া, a crowd gathers.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

277.5 হাজির হওয়া (hājir hôoyā) — to turn up; to be present

Before the new one: say the Bengali for everyone, then the Bengali for a crowd.

You'll want to know: হাজির হওয়া

হাজির হওয়া — hājir hôoyā — "to turn up; to be present".

পরের দিন সাক্ষী থানায় হাজির হল।

pôrer din sākkhī thānāy hājir hôlô.

The next day the witness turned up at the police station.

Past (he/she …): সেই সাক্ষী থানায় হাজির হল, sei sākkhī thānāy hājir hôlô. With থাকা it means to be there: সবাই হাজির ছিল, everyone was there.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হাজির হওয়া (hājir hôoyā) puts হাজির, usually traced to Arabic ḥāḍir, 'present, in attendance', which reached Bengali through Persian, before হওয়া, to become: to become present, to turn up.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: hājir hôoyā
- Say it: hājir hôoyā, once more

280.4 সাইরেন (sāiren) — a siren

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to rescue, then the Bengali for a ladder.

You'll want to know: সাইরেন

সাইরেন — sāiren — "a siren".

সাইরেন শুনে সবাই রাস্তার পাশে দাঁড়াল। sāiren shune sôbāi rāstār pāshe dā̃ṛālô.

When they heard the siren, everyone stood at the side of the road.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সাইরেন (sāiren) is borrowed from English siren, the warning wail of a fire engine or an ambulance; English took the name from the Sirens of Greek legend.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: sāiren
- Say it: sāiren, once more

Before you move on

What does রক্ষা পাওয়া mean? ("To be spared; to escape harm".) Say it once more.

281.4 ছোটা (chhoṭā) — to run; to rush

Before the new one: say the Bengali for missing, then the Bengali for to be spared.

You'll want to know: ছোটা

ছোটা — chhoṭā — "to run; to rush".

আগুন দেখে লোকজন জল নিয়ে ছুটল।

āgun dekhe lokjôn jôl niye chhuṭlô.

When they saw the fire, people ran with water.

Past (he/she …): সেই কুকুর ছুটল, sei kukur chhuṭlô.
The stem vowel rises in the past: ছুটল, ran.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ছোটা (chhoṭā) is filed in CDIAL 3707 under a Middle Indo-Aryan kṣuṭyatē, 'is released', which lists Bengali chuṭā, 'to get loose, run away, run'. ছুটি, a holiday, a time let loose, is listed beside it.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: chhoṭā
- Say it: chhoṭā, once more
- Say it: āgun dekhe lokjôn jôl niye chhuṭlô. — When they saw the fire, people ran with water.

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to be spared, then the Bengali for to rush.

You'll want to know: অবশেষে

অবশেষে — ôbôsheshe — "at last; finally".

অনেক খোঁজার পরে অবশেষে পুলিশ শিশুটিকে খুঁজে পেল। ônek khõjār pôre ôbôsheshe pulish shishuṭike khũje pelô.

After a long search the police finally found the child.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অবশেষে (ôbôsheshe) is Sanskrit avaśeṣa, 'what is left over' (Monier-Williams), in the -e form: 'at what remains', at the very end.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ôbôsheshe
- Say it: ôbôsheshe, once more

পুলিশ ঘটনার তদন্ত শুরু করল।

pulish ghôṭônār tôdôntô shuru kôrlô.

The police began an investigation into the incident.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তদন্ত (tôdôntô) is usually explained as Sanskrit tad, 'that', and anta, 'end': going to the end of a matter. Monier-Williams lists tadanta, 'coming to an end by that'; the sense 'an inquiry' is the modern one.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: tôdôntô
- Say it: tôdôntô, once more
- Say it: pulish ghôṭônār tôdôntô shuru kôrlô. — The police began an investigation into the incident.

- Say it: ḍākātrā dokāndārke shāsālô, kintu tini bhôy pelen nā. — The robbers threatened the shopkeeper, but he wasn't afraid.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a prisoner, then the Bengali for bail, then say shāsāno again

Before you move on

What does শাসানো mean? ("To threaten; to warn sternly".) Say it once more.

285.2 ঘুষ (ghush) — a bribe

Before the new one: say the Bengali for bail, then the Bengali for to threaten.

You'll want to know: ঘুষ

ঘুষ — ghush — "a bribe".

চোর দারোগাকে টাকা দিতে চাইল, কিন্তু তিনি ঘুষ নিলেন না। chor dārogāke ṭākā dite chāilô, kintu tini ghush nilen nā.

The thief tried to give the inspector money, but he would not take a bribe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঘুষ (ghush) is filed in CDIAL 4499 under a Middle Indo-Aryan ghūssā, 'a present', which lists Bengali ghus, 'a bribe': a present with a purpose.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ghush
- Say it: ghush, once more
- Say it: chor dārogāke ṭākā dite chāilô, kintu tini ghush nilen nā. — The thief tried to give the inspector money, but he would not take a bribe.
- Recall: say the Bengali for bail, then the Bengali for to threaten, then say ghush again

Before you move on

What does ঘুষ mean? ("A bribe".) Say it once more.

285.3 ফাঁসানো (phā̃sāno) — to frame; to trap (someone)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to threaten, then the Bengali for a bribe.

You'll want to know: ফাঁসানো

ফাঁসানো — phā̃sāno — "to frame; to trap (someone)".

আসল চোর আমার ভাইকে ফাঁসাতে চাইল।

āsôl chor āmār bhāike phā̃sāte chāilô.

The real thief tried to frame my brother.

Past (he/she …): সেই চোর তাকে ফাঁসাল, sei chor tāke phā̃sālô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ফাঁসানো (phā̃sāno) comes down from Sanskrit spāśayati, 'causes to be bound' (CDIAL 13814, which lists Bengali phā̃sā, 'to be ensnared'). A ফাঁস is a noose: to frame someone is to slip a noose on them.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: phā̃sāno
- Say it: phā̃sāno, once more
- Say it: āsôl chor āmār bhāike phā̃sāte chāilô. — The real thief tried to frame my brother.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to threaten, then the Bengali for a bribe, then say phā̃sāno again

Before you move on

What does ফাঁসানো mean? ("To frame; to trap (someone)".) Say it once more.

285.4 লুট করা (luṭ kôrā) — to loot; to plunder

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a bribe, then the Bengali for to frame.

You'll want to know: লুট করা

লুট করা — luṭ kôrā — "to loot; to plunder".

ডাকাতরা রাতে বাজার লুট করল।

ḍākātrā rāte bājār luṭ kôrlô.

The robbers looted the market at night.

Past (he/she …): সেই ডাকাত দোকান লুট করল, sei ḍākāt dokān luṭ kôrlô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

লুট করা (luṭ kôrā) puts লুট, 'plunder' — CDIAL 11078, a Middle Indo-Aryan luṭṭati, which lists Bengali luṭā, 'plunders' — before করা. English loot was borrowed from this Indian word.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: luṭ kôrā
- Say it: luṭ kôrā, once more
- Say it: ḍākātrā rāte bājār luṭ kôrlô. — The robbers looted the market at night.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a bribe, then the Bengali for to frame, then say luṭ kôrā again

Before you move on

What does লুট করা mean? ("To loot; to plunder".) Say it once more.

285.5 প্রতারণা (prôtārônā) — fraud; deception

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to frame, then the Bengali for to loot.

You'll want to know: প্রতারণা

প্রতারণা — prôtārônā — "fraud; deception".

একটা লোক প্রতারণা করে গ্রামের মানুষের টাকা নিল। ekṭā lok prôtārônā kôre grāmer mānusher ṭākā nilô.

A man tricked the villagers out of their money.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

প্রতারণা (prôtārônā) is Sanskrit pratāraṇa, from the causative of pra-√tṝ, which Monier-Williams gives both as 'ferrying across' and as 'deceiving': taking someone across, and taking them in.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: prôtārônā
- Say it: prôtārônā, once more
- Say it: ekṭā lok prôtārônā kôre grāmer mānusher ṭākā nilô. — A man tricked the villagers out of their money.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to frame, then the Bengali for to loot, then say prôtārônā again

Before you move on

What does প্রতারণা mean? ("Fraud; deception".) Say it once more.

Before the new one: say the Bengali for fraud, then the Bengali for to peep.

You'll want to know: প্রদর্শন করা

প্রদর্শন করা — prôdôrshôn kôrā — "to display; to exhibit".

শিল্পী তাঁর নতুন ছবিগুলো প্রদর্শন করলেন। shilpī tā̃r nôtun chhôbigulo prôdôrshôn kôrlen.

The artist put his new paintings on show.

Past (he/she …): তিনি ছবিগুলো প্রদর্শন করলেন, tini chhôbigulo prôdôrshôn kôrlen.

প্রদর্শনী, an exhibition, is built on the same noun.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

প্রদর্শন করা (prôdôrshôn kôrā) puts প্রদর্শন — Sanskrit pradarśana, pra 'forth' with darśana 'a seeing', so a showing (Monier-Williams), taken over whole — before করা, to do: to put something on show.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: prôdôrshôn kôrā
- Say it: prôdôrshôn kôrā, once more
- Say it: shilpī tā̃r nôtun chhôbigulo prôdôrshôn kôrlen. — The artist put his new paintings on show.
- Recall: say the Bengali for fraud, then the Bengali for to peep, then say prôdôrshôn kôrā again

Before you move on

What does প্রদর্শন করা mean? ("To display; to exhibit".) Say it once more.

286.3 অদ্ভুত (ôdbhut) — strange; odd

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to peep, then the Bengali for to exhibit.

You'll want to know: অদ্ভুত

অদ্ভুত — ôdbhut — "strange; odd".

সেই রাতে আমরা পুকুরের পাশে একটা অদ্ভুত আলো দেখলাম। sei rāte āmrā pukurer pāshe ekṭā ôdbhut ālo dekhlām.

That night we saw a strange light beside the pond.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অদ্ভুত (ôdbhut) is Sanskrit adbhuta, 'extraordinary, wonderful' (Monier-Williams); in Bengali it leans towards odd and uncanny.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ôdbhut
- Say it: ôdbhut, once more
- Say it: sei rāte āmrā pukurer pāshe ekṭā ôdbhut ālo dekhlām. — That night we saw a strange light beside the pond.

Before you move on

What does অদ্ভুত mean? ("Strange; odd".) Say it once more.

286.4 ছায়া (chhāyā) — a shadow; shade

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to exhibit, then the Bengali for strange.

You'll want to know: ছায়া

ছায়া — chhāyā — "a shadow; shade".

রাতে বারান্দায় একটা লম্বা ছায়া দেখে আমি ভয় পেলাম। rāte bārāndāy ekṭā lômbā chhāyā dekhe āmi bhôy pelām.

I got scared when I saw a long shadow on the veranda at night.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ছায়া (chhāyā) is Sanskrit chāyā, 'shade, shadow' (Monier-Williams), unchanged. It is also the cool shade of a tree: গাছের ছায়ায়, in the shade of a tree.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: chhāyā
- Say it: chhāyā, once more

In a Split Second

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can tell what happened in one sudden moment.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 287: I can tell what happened in one sudden moment.

287.1 মুহূর্ত (muhūrtô) — a moment; an instant

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a shadow, then the Bengali for to observe.

You'll want to know: মুহূর্ত

মুহূর্ত — muhūrtô — "a moment; an instant".

এক মুহূর্তের জন্য আমি কিছু বুঝলাম না।

ek muhūrter jônyô āmi kichhu bujhlām nā.

For a moment I didn't understand anything.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মুহূর্ত (muhūrtô) is Sanskrit muhūrta, 'a moment, an instant' (Monier-Williams), and also a fixed thirtieth of the day; that is why the word also names the auspicious hour for a wedding.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: muhūrtô
- Say it: muhūrtô, once more
- Say it: ek muhūrter jônyô āmi kichhu bujhlām nā. — For a moment I didn't understand anything.

Before you move on

What does মুহূর্ত mean? ("A moment; an instant".) Say it once more.

287.2 চকিতে (chôkite) — in a flash; in an instant

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to observe, then the Bengali for a moment.

You'll want to know: চকিতে

চকিতে — chôkite — "in a flash; in an instant".

চকিতে চোরটা জানালা দিয়ে লাফিয়ে পালাল। chôkite chorṭā jānālā diye lāphiye pālālô.

In a flash the thief jumped out of the window and ran.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চকিতে (chôkite) is Sanskrit cakita, 'trembling, startled' (Monier-Williams), in the -e form: 'in a start'. The sense 'in a flash' is the Bengali one.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: chôkite
- Say it: chôkite, once more

287.3 আঁকড়ে ধরা (ãkṛe dhôrā) — to clutch; to cling to

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a moment, then the Bengali for in an instant.

You'll want to know: আঁকড়ে ধরা

আঁকড়ে ধরা — ãkṛe dhôrā — "to clutch; to cling to".

ভয়ে শিশুটি বাবার হাত আঁকড়ে ধরল।

bhôye shishuṭi bābār hāt ãkṛe dhôrlô.

The frightened child clung to his father's hand.

Past (he/she …): সেই শিশু দড়িটা আঁকড়ে ধরল, sei shishu dôṛiṭā ãkṛe dhôrlô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আঁকড়ে ধরা (ãkṛe dhôrā) is the -e form of আঁকড়া — CDIAL 100 lists Bengali ākṛā, 'a hook, a tendril', under Sanskrit aṅka, 'a hook' — before ধরা, to hold: to hold on the way a hook holds.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ãkṛe dhôrā
- Say it: ãkṛe dhôrā, once more
- Say it: bhôye shishuṭi bābār hāt ãkṛe dhôrlô. — The frightened child clung to his father's hand.

Before you move on

What does তৎক্ষণাৎ mean? ("At once; immediately".) Say it once more.

287.5 আছড়ে পড়া (āchhṛe pôṛā) — to crash down; to be dashed down

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to clutch, then the Bengali for at once.

You'll want to know: আছড়ে পড়া

আছড়ে পড়া — āchhṛe pôṛā — "to crash down; to be dashed down".

ঝড়ে একটা বড় গাছ বাড়ির ছাদে আছড়ে পড়ল।

jhôṛe ekṭā bôṛo gāchh bāṛir chhāde āchhṛe pôṛlô.

In the storm a big tree came crashing down on the roof of the house.

Past (he/she …): সেই গাছ রাস্তায় আছড়ে পড়ল, sei gāchh rāstāy āchhṛe pôṛlô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আছড়ে পড়া (āchhṛe pôṛā) is the -e form of আছড়ানো, to dash down — CDIAL 1081 lists Bengali āchṛāna, 'to throw down hard', and āchāṛ, 'a dashing down', under ācchardati, 'pours on'; how the sense moved is not set out there — before পড়া in its sense 'to fall'.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: āchhṛe pôṛā
- Say it: āchhṛe pôṛā, once more
- Say it: jhôṛe ekṭā bôṛo gāchh bāṛir chhāde āchhṛe pôṛlô. — In the storm a big tree came crashing down on the roof of the house.

288.3 এগোনো (egono) — to move forward; to advance

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a cyclone, then the Bengali for a coast.

You'll want to know: এগোনো

এগোনো — egono — "to move forward; to advance".

ঝড়টা ধীরে ধীরে উপকূলের দিকে এগোচ্ছিল। jhôṛṭā dhīre dhīre upôkūler dike egochchhilô.

The storm was slowly moving towards the coast.

Past (he/she …): সেই ঝড় এগোল, sei jhôṛ egolô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

এগোনো (egono) is usually explained as built on আগে, in front — Sanskrit agra, 'top, front' (CDIAL 68) — with the verb ending: to go to the front, to move forward.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: egono
- Say it: egono, once more
- Say it: jhôṛṭā dhīre dhīre upôkūler dike egochchhilô. — The storm was slowly moving towards the coast.

288.4 উপড়ানো (upṛāno) — to uproot

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a coast, then the Bengali for to move forward.

You'll want to know: উপড়ানো

উপড়ানো — upṛāno — "to uproot".

ঝড়ে রাস্তার অনেক গাছ উপড়ে গেল। jhôṛe rāstār ônek gāchh upṛe gelô.

The storm uprooted many trees along the road.

Past (he/she …): সেই ঝড় গাছটা উপড়াল, sei jhôṛ gāchhṭā upṛālô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উপড়ানো (upṛāno) comes down from Sanskrit utpāṭayati, 'roots up', and its partner utpaṭati, 'bursts open' (CDIAL 1809, which lists Bengali upaṛā, 'to come up by the roots').

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: upṛāno
- Say it: upṛāno, once more
- Say it: jhôṛe rāstār ônek gāchh upṛe gelô. — The storm uprooted many trees along the road.

> A great tidal surge came with the cyclone.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

জলোচ্ছ্বাস (jôlochchhvās) joins জল, water, to Sanskrit ucchvāsa, 'a breathing out, a deep breath' (Monier-Williams): the sea heaving up over the land.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: jôlochchhvās
- Say it: jôlochchhvās, once more
- Say it: ghūrnijhôṛer sôngge ekṭā bôṛo jôlochchhvās elô. — A great tidal surge came with the cyclone.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to uproot, then the Bengali for electricity, then say jôlochchhvās again

Before you move on

What does জলোচ্ছ্বাস mean? ("A tidal surge".) Say it once more.

289.2 তলিয়ে যাওয়া (tôliye jāoyā) — to go under; to be submerged

Before the new one: say the Bengali for electricity, then the Bengali for a tidal surge.

You'll want to know: তলিয়ে যাওয়া

তলিয়ে যাওয়া — tôliye jāoyā — "to go under; to be submerged".

জলোচ্ছ্বাসে নিচু গ্রামগুলো তলিয়ে গেল। jôlochchhvāse nichu grāmgulo tôliye gelô.

The low-lying villages went under in the surge.

Past (he/she …): সেই নৌকা তলিয়ে গেল, sei noukā tôliye gelô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তলিয়ে যাওয়া (tôliye jāoyā) is the -e form of তলানো, to sink to the bottom, built on তল — Sanskrit tala (CDIAL 5731, which lists Bengali tal, 'bottom, floor') — before যাওয়া. তলা, a storey, is from the same word.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: tôliye jāoyā
- Say it: tôliye jāoyā, once more
- Say it: jôlochchhvāse nichu grāmgulo tôliye gelô. — The low-lying villages went under in the surge.
- Recall: say the Bengali for electricity, then the Bengali for a tidal surge, then say tôliye jāoyā again

Before you move on

What does তলিয়ে যাওয়া mean? ("To go under; to be submerged".) Say it once more.

289.3 উঁচু (ũchu) — high; raised

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a tidal surge, then the Bengali for to go under.

You'll want to know: উঁচু

উঁচু — ũchu — "high; raised".

সবাই উঁচু জায়গায় আশ্রয় নিল। sôbāi ũchu jāygāy āshrôy nilô.

Everyone took shelter on higher ground.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উঁচু (ũchu) comes down from Sanskrit ucca, 'tall, lofty' (CDIAL 1634, which lists Bengali uc and ũc); its opposite is নিচু, low.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ũchu
- Say it: ũchu, once more
- Say it: sôbāi ũchu jāygāy āshrôy nilô. — Everyone took shelter on higher ground.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a tidal surge, then the Bengali for to go under, then say ũchu again

Before you move on

What does উঁচু mean? ("High; raised".) Say it once more.

289.4 ভেলা (bhelā) — a raft

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to go under, then the Bengali for high.

You'll want to know: ভেলা

ভেলা — bhelā — "a raft".

জেলেরা কলার গাছ দিয়ে একটা ভেলা বানাল। jelerā kôlār gāchh diye ekṭā bhelā bānālô.

The fishermen made a raft out of banana trees.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভেলা (bhelā) comes down from Sanskrit bēḍā, 'a boat', and its variant bhēla (CDIAL 9308, which lists Bengali bhelā, 'a raft').

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: bhelā
- Say it: bhelā, once more
- Say it: jelerā kôlār gāchh diye ekṭā bhelā bānālô. — The fishermen made a raft out of banana trees.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to go under, then the Bengali for high, then say bhelā again

Before you move on

What does ভেলা mean? ("A raft".) Say it once more.

289.5 প্লাবিত হওয়া (plābitô hôoyā) — to be flooded; to be inundated

Before the new one: say the Bengali for high, then the Bengali for a raft.

You'll want to know: প্লাবিত হওয়া

প্লাবিত হওয়া — plābitô hôoyā — "to be flooded; to be inundated".

বন্যায় উপকূলের অনেক গ্রাম প্লাবিত হল। bônyāy upôkūler ônek grām plābitô hôlô.

Many villages on the coast were flooded.

Past (he/she …): সেই শহর প্লাবিত হল, sei shôhôr plābitô hôlô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

প্লাবিত হওয়া (plābitô hôoyā) puts Sanskrit plāvita, 'made to overflow, deluged' (Monier-Williams), before হওয়া: to be under the flood. It is a word of the news; talk says জলে ডুবে গেল.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: plābitô hôoyā
- Say it: plābitô hôoyā, once more
- Say it: bônyāy upôkūler ônek grām plābitô hôlô. — Many villages on the coast were flooded.
- Recall: say the Bengali for high, then the Bengali for a raft, then say plābitô hôoyā again

Before you move on

What does প্লাবিত হওয়া mean? ("To be flooded; to be inundated".) Say it once more.

Chapter 290

Waves and Wreckage

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe waves, broken riverbanks and families left homeless.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 290: I can describe waves, broken riverbanks and families left homeless.

290.1 ঢেউ (ḍheu) — a wave

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a raft, then the Bengali for to be flooded.

You'll want to know: ঢেউ

ঢেউ — ḍheu — "a wave".

> বড় একটা ঢেউ এসে নৌকাটা উল্টে দিল।
> bôṛo ekṭā ḍheu ese noukāṭā ulṭe dilô.
> A big wave came and overturned the boat.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঢেউ (ḍheu) is filed in CDIAL 5580 under a Middle Indo-Aryan ḍhappa-, 'lump', where a Bengali ḍheu, 'a swelling', appears; how it became a wave is not set out there. It opens with ঢ, the breathy ḍh.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ḍheu
- Say it: ḍheu, once more
- Say it: bôṛo ekṭā ḍheu ese noukāṭā ulṭe dilô. — A big wave came and overturned the boat.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a raft, then the Bengali for to be flooded, then say ḍheu again

Before you move on

What does ঢেউ mean? ("A wave".) Say it once more.

290.2 তীর (tīr) — a riverbank; a shore

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to be flooded, then the Bengali for a wave.

You'll want to know: তীর

তীর — tīr — "a riverbank; a shore".

ঢেউ নৌকাটাকে তীরে নিয়ে এল।

ḍheu noukāṭāke tīre niye elô.

The waves carried the boat to the shore.

A second তীর, an arrow, is a different word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তীর (tīr) is Sanskrit tīra, 'a shore, a bank' (Monier-Williams), unchanged. নদীর তীরে, on the riverbank.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: tīr
- Say it: tīr, once more
- Say it: ḍheu noukāṭāke tīre niye elô. — The waves carried the boat to the shore.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to be flooded, then the Bengali for a wave, then say tīr again

Before you move on

What does তীর mean? ("A riverbank; a shore".) Say it once more.

290.3 ভাঙন (bhāngôn) — the eating away of a riverbank; erosion

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a wave, then the Bengali for a riverbank.

You'll want to know: ভাঙন

ভাঙন — bhāngôn — "the eating away of a riverbank; erosion".

> নদীর ভাঙনে গ্রামের স্কুলটা নদীতে চলে গেল।
> nôdīr bhāngône grāmer skulṭā nôdīte chôle gelô.
> The river ate away its bank and the village school went into the water.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভাঙন (bhāngôn) is ভাঙা, to break — CDIAL 9353, Sanskrit bhaṅga — with the -ন ending that names the act: the breaking away of a riverbank, a word the river delta needs.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: bhāngôn
- Say it: bhāngôn, once more
- Say it: nôdīr bhāngône grāmer skulṭā nôdīte chôle gelô. — The river ate away its bank and the village school went into the water.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a wave, then the Bengali for a riverbank, then say bhāngôn again

Before you move on

What does ভাঙন mean? ("The eating away of a riverbank; erosion".) Say it once more.

290.4 গৃহহীন (grihôhīn) — homeless

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a riverbank, then the Bengali for erosion.

You'll want to know: গৃহহীন

গৃহহীন — grihôhīn — "homeless".

বন্যার পরে অনেক পরিবার গৃহহীন হল।

bônyār pôre ônek pôribār grihôhīn hôlô.

After the flood many families were left homeless.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

গৃহহীন (grihôhīn) joins Sanskrit gṛha, 'a house, a home', to hīna, 'left, deprived of' (Monier-Williams): without a house. It is a word of the news more than of talk.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: grihôhīn
- Say it: grihôhīn, once more
- Say it: bônyār pôre ônek pôribār grihôhīn hôlô. — After the flood many families were left homeless.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a riverbank, then the Bengali for erosion, then say grihôhīn again

Before you move on

What does গৃহহীন mean? ("Homeless".) Say it once more.

290.5 হেলিকপ্টার (helikôpṭār) — a helicopter

Before the new one: say the Bengali for erosion, then the Bengali for homeless.

You'll want to know: হেলিকপ্টার

হেলিকপ্টার — helikôpṭār — "a helicopter".

সেনাবাহিনীর হেলিকপ্টার ছাদ থেকে মানুষ তুলল। senābāhinīr helikôpṭār chhād theke mānush tullô.

Army helicopters lifted people off the rooftops.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হেলিকপ্টার (helikôpṭār) is English helicopter, built in the nineteenth century from Greek words for 'spiral' and 'wing'.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: helikôpṭār
- Say it: helikôpṭār, once more
- Say it: senābāhinīr helikôpṭār chhād theke mānush tullô. — Army helicopters lifted people off the rooftops.
- Recall: say the Bengali for erosion, then the Bengali for homeless, then say helikôpṭār again

Before you move on

What does হেলিকপ্টার mean? ("A helicopter".) Say it once more.

Chapter 291

Help Arrives

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about relief, volunteers and camps.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 291: I can talk about relief, volunteers and camps.

291.1 ত্রাণ (trān) — relief; aid

Before the new one: say the Bengali for homeless, then the Bengali for a helicopter.

You'll want to know: ত্রাণ

ত্রাণ — trān — "relief; aid".

> নৌকায় করে গ্রামে ত্রাণ এল।
> noukāy kôre grāme trān elô.
> Relief arrived in the village by boat.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ত্রাণ (trān) is Sanskrit trāṇa, 'protecting, shelter, help' (Monier-Williams); in the news it is the food and goods sent to the victims of a disaster.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: trān
- Say it: trān, once more
- Say it: noukāy kôre grāme trān elô. — Relief arrived in the village by boat.
- Recall: say the Bengali for homeless, then the Bengali for a helicopter, then say trān again

Before you move on

What does ত্রাণ mean? ("Relief; aid".) Say it once more.

291.2 স্বেচ্ছাসেবক (svechchhāsebôk) — a volunteer

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a helicopter, then the Bengali for disaster relief.

You'll want to know: স্বেচ্ছাসেবক

স্বেচ্ছাসেবক — svechchhāsebôk — "a volunteer".

> কলেজের ছাত্ররা স্বেচ্ছাসেবক হয়ে ত্রাণের কাজ করল।
> kôlejer chhātrôrā svechchhāsebôk hôye trāner kāj kôrlô.
> College students worked on the relief effort as volunteers.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

স্বেচ্ছাসেবক (svechchhāsebôk) joins Sanskrit svecchā, 'one's own free will' (Monier-Williams), to sevaka, 'a servant': one who serves by choice.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: svechchhāsebôk
- Say it: svechchhāsebôk, once more
- Say it: kôlejer chhātrôrā svechchhāsebôk hôye trāner kāj kôrlô. — College students worked on the relief effort as volunteers.

291.3 শিবির (shibir) — a camp

Before the new one: say the Bengali for disaster relief, then the Bengali for a volunteer.

You'll want to know: শিবির

শিবির — shibir — "a camp".

> শিবিরে প্রতিদিন দুই হাজার মানুষ খাবার পেত।
> shibire prôtidin dui hājār mānush khābār petô.
> Two thousand people got food at the camp every day.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

শিবির (shibir) is Sanskrit śibira, a royal camp or an army's tents (Monier-Williams); today it is any camp, from relief camps to medical camps.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: shibir
- Say it: shibir, once more
- Say it: shibire prôtidin dui hājār mānush khābār petô. — Two thousand people got food at the camp every day.
- Recall: say the Bengali for disaster relief, then the Bengali for a volunteer, then say shibir again

Before you move on

What does শিবির mean? ("A camp".) Say it once more.

291.4 বিতরণ করা (bitôrôn kôrā) — to hand out; to distribute

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a volunteer, then the Bengali for a camp.

You'll want to know: বিতরণ করা

বিতরণ করা — bitôrôn kôrā — "to hand out; to distribute".

স্বেচ্ছাসেবকরা শিবিরে চাল আর ডাল বিতরণ করল। svechchhāsebôkrā shibire chāl ār ḍāl bitôrôn kôrlô.

The volunteers handed out rice and lentils at the camp.

Past (he/she …): তিনি খাবার বিতরণ করলেন, tini khābār bitôrôn kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বিতরণ করা (bitôrôn kôrā) puts Sanskrit vitaraṇa, first 'a crossing over' and then 'a granting, a bestowal' (Monier-Williams), before করা: to give out to many people.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: bitôrôn kôrā
- Say it: bitôrôn kôrā, once more
- Say it: svechchhāsebôkrā shibire chāl ār ḍāl bitôrôn kôrlô. — The volunteers handed out rice and lentils at the camp.

Chapter 292

Drought and Hunger

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a drought, a famine and dry land.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 292: I can talk about a drought, a famine and dry land.

292.1 খরা (khôrā) — a drought

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to hand out, then the Bengali for to donate.

You'll want to know: খরা

খরা — khôrā — "a drought".

এই বছর খরার জন্য ধান হল না। ei bôchhôr khôrār jônyô dhān hôlô nā.

This year the rice failed because of the drought.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

খরা (khôrā) is filed in CDIAL 3819 under Sanskrit khara, 'hard, sharp', also 'hot' of a wind, which lists Bengali kharā, 'hot and dry', and as a verb 'to parch'. The noun 'a drought', the parching season, is the Bengali use.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: khôrā

- Recall: say the Bengali for to hand out, then the Bengali for to donate, then say khôrā again

Before you move on

What does খরা mean? ("A drought".) Say it once more.

292.2 দুর্ভিক্ষ (durbhikkhô) — a famine

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to donate, then the Bengali for a drought.

You'll want to know: দুর্ভিক্ষ

দুর্ভিক্ষ — durbhikkhô — "a famine".

দাদু একটা দুর্ভিক্ষের গল্প বললেন।

dādu ekṭā durbhikkher gôlpo bôllen.

Grandfather told a story about a famine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দুর্ভিক্ষ (durbhikkhô) is Sanskrit durbhikṣa, 'dearth, famine' (Monier-Williams): dur-, 'bad', and bhikṣā, 'alms', literally a bad time for alms.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: durbhikkhô
- Say it: durbhikkhô, once more
- Say it: dādu ekṭā durbhikkher gôlpo bôllen. — Grandfather told a story about a famine.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to donate, then the Bengali for a drought, then say durbhikkhô again

Before you move on

What does দুর্ভিক্ষ mean? ("A famine".) Say it once more.

292.3 অনাহার (ônāhār) — starvation; going without food

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a drought, then the Bengali for a famine.

You'll want to know: অনাহার

অনাহার — ônāhār — "starvation; going without food".

দুর্ভিক্ষে অনেক মানুষ অনাহারে মরল। durbhikkhe ônek mānush ônāhāre môrlô.

Many people died of starvation in the famine.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অনাহার (ônāhār) is Sanskrit anāhāra, 'not taking food' (Monier-Williams): an-, 'not', and āhāra, 'food, eating'.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ônāhār
- Say it: ônāhār, once more
- Say it: durbhikkhe ônek mānush ônāhāre môrlô. — Many people died of starvation in the famine.

Before you move on

What does ফাটা mean? ("To crack; to burst".) Say it once more.

292.5 ঝলসে যাওয়া (jhôlse jāoyā) — to be scorched; to wither in the heat

Before the new one: say the Bengali for starvation, then the Bengali for to crack.

You'll want to know: ঝলসে যাওয়া

ঝলসে যাওয়া — jhôlse jāoyā — "to be scorched; to wither in the heat".

কড়া রোদে গাছের পাতা ঝলসে গেল। kôṛā rode gāchher pātā jhôlse gelô.

The leaves of the trees were scorched in the fierce sun.

Past (he/she …): সেই গাছ ঝলসে গেল, sei gāchh jhôlse gelô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঝলসে যাওয়া (jhôlse jāoyā) is the -e form of ঝলসানো, to scorch — CDIAL 5352 lists Bengali jhalsā, 'scorched', under a Middle Indo-Aryan jhal-, 'flash' — before যাওয়া.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: jhôlse jāoyā
- Say it: jhôlse jāoyā, once more
- Say it: kôṛā rode gāchher pātā jhôlse gelô. — The leaves of the trees were scorched in the fierce sun.
- Recall: say the Bengali for starvation, then the Bengali for to crack, then say jhôlse jāoyā again

Before you move on

What does ঝলসে যাওয়া mean? ("To be scorched; to wither in the heat".) Say it once more.

Before you move on

What does কম্পন mean? ("A tremor; a shaking".) Say it once more.

293.3 ধসে পড়া (dhôse pôṛā) — to cave in; to collapse

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an earthquake, then the Bengali for a tremor.

You'll want to know: ধসে পড়া

ধসে পড়া — dhôse pôṛā — "to cave in; to collapse".

ভূমিকম্পে পাহাড়ের রাস্তা ধসে পড়ল। bhūmikômpe pāhāṛer rāstā dhôse pôṛlô.

The mountain road caved in during the earthquake.

Past (he/she …): সেই দেয়াল ধসে পড়ল, sei deyāl dhôse pôṛlô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ধসে পড়া (dhôse pôṛā) is the -e form of ধসা, to fall in — Sanskrit dhvaṁsati, 'falls to pieces' (CDIAL 6896, which lists Bengali dhasā) — before পড়া, to fall.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: dhôse pôṛā
- Say it: dhôse pôṛā, once more
- Say it: bhūmikômpe pāhāṛer rāstā dhôse pôṛlô. — The mountain road caved in during the earthquake.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an earthquake, then the Bengali for a tremor, then say dhôse pôṛā again

Before you move on

293.4 ধ্বংস (dhvôngsô) — destruction; ruin

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a tremor, then the Bengali for to collapse.

You'll want to know: ধ্বংস

ধ্বংস — dhvôngsô — "destruction; ruin".

ভূমিকম্পে পুরো শহরটা ধ্বংস হল। bhūmikômpe puro shôhôṛṭā dhvôngsô hôlô.

The whole city was destroyed in the earthquake.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ধ্বংস (dhvôngsô) is Sanskrit dhvaṃsa, 'a falling down, ruin' (Monier-Williams), the learned noun beside ধসে পড়া, which wore the same root down to ধস. ধ্বংস হওয়া, to be destroyed.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: dhvôngsô
- Say it: dhvôngsô, once more
- Say it: bhūmikômpe puro shôhôṛtā dhvôngsô hôlô. — The whole city was destroyed in the earthquake.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a tremor, then the Bengali for to collapse, then say dhvôngsô again

Before you move on

What does ধ্বংস mean? ("Destruction; ruin".) Say it once more.

293.5 চাপা পড়া (chāpā pôṛā) — to be trapped underneath; to be buried under

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to collapse, then the Bengali for destruction.

You'll want to know: চাপা পড়া

চাপা পড়া — chāpā pôṛā — "to be trapped underneath; to be buried under".

ভাঙা বাড়ির নিচে কিছু মানুষ চাপা পড়ল। bhāngā bāṛir niche kichhu mānush chāpā pôṛlô.

Some people were trapped under the collapsed house.

Past (he/she …): সেই লোক দেয়ালের নিচে চাপা পড়ল, sei lok deyāler niche chāpā pôṛlô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চাপা পড়া (chāpā pôṛā) puts চাপা, 'pressed down' — CDIAL 4674, a Middle Indo-Aryan capp-, which lists Bengali cāpā, 'to press' — before পড়া: to fall under a weight.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: chāpā pôṛā
- Say it: chāpā pôṛā, once more
- Say it: bhāngā bāṛir niche kichhu mānush chāpā pôṛlô. — Some people were trapped under the collapsed house.

294.5 এড়ানো (eṛāno) — to avoid

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a warning sign, then the Bengali for an apprehension.

You'll want to know: এড়ানো

এড়ানো — eṛāno — "to avoid".

আমরা বড় রাস্তা এড়িয়ে গলি দিয়ে গেলাম। āmrā bôṛo rāstā eṛiye gôli diye gelām.

We avoided the main road and went through the lanes.

Past (he/she …): তিনি বিপদ এড়ালেন, tini bipôd eṛālen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

এড়ানো (eṛāno) is filed in CDIAL 2511 under Sanskrit ēṭatē, 'goes', which lists Bengali eṛāna, 'to avoid', beside eṛā, 'to let go, reject'; how the sense moved is not set out there. The -এ form is এড়িয়ে: এড়িয়ে গেলাম, I steered clear.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: eṛāno
- Say it: eṛāno, once more
- Say it: āmrā bôṛo rāstā eṛiye gôli diye gelām. — We avoided the main road and went through the lanes.

You'll want to know: মেরামত করা

মেরামত করা — merāmôt kôrā — "to mend; to patch up".

স্বেচ্ছাসেবকরা ভাঙা সেতুটা মেরামত করল। svechchhāsebôkrā bhāngā setuṭā merāmôt kôrlô.

The volunteers patched up the broken bridge.

Past (he/she …): তিনি ছাদটা মেরামত করলেন, tini chhādṭā merāmôt kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মেরামত করা (merāmôt kôrā) puts মেরামত — usually traced through Persian to Arabic marammat, 'repair' — before করা. It is the word for fixing what a storm broke; সারানো is the everyday word for repairing.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: merāmôt kôrā
- Say it: merāmôt kôrā, once more
- Say it: svechchhāsebôkrā bhāngā setuṭā merāmôt kôrlô. — The volunteers patched up the broken bridge.

সম্পাদক — sômpādôk — "an editor".

সম্পাদক প্রতিবেদনটা পড়ে শিরোনাম বদলালেন। sômpādôk prôtibedônṭā pôṛe shironām bôdlālen.

The editor read the report and changed the headline.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সম্পাদক (sômpādôk) is Sanskrit sampādaka, 'procuring, bringing about' (Monier-Williams); the sense 'an editor', the one who gets a paper made, is the modern one.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: sômpādôk
- Say it: sômpādôk, once more
- Say it: sômpādôk prôtibedônṭā pôṛe shironām bôdlālen. — The editor read the report and changed the headline.

297.1 কথা (kôthā) — words; talk; what someone said

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to publish, then the Bengali for an editor.

You'll want to know: কথা

কথা — kôthā — "words; talk; what someone said".

> সাক্ষীর কথা শুনে দারোগা কিছু বললেন না।
> sākkhīr kôthā shune dārogā kichhu bôllen nā.
> The inspector listened to the witness and said nothing.

কথা বলা, to talk; কথা দেওয়া, to give your word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কথা (kôthā) is Sanskrit kathā, 'talk, conversation; a story' (Monier-Williams), and it keeps both senses in Bengali.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: kôthā
- Say it: kôthā, once more
- Say it: sākkhīr kôthā shune dārogā kichhu bôllen nā. — The inspector listened to the witness and said nothing.

Before you move on

What does সাক্ষাৎকার mean? ("An interview".) Say it once more.

297.3 ঘোষণা করা (ghoshônā kôrā) — to announce; to declare

Before the new one: say the Bengali for talk, then the Bengali for an interview.

You'll want to know: ঘোষণা করা

ঘোষণা করা — ghoshônā kôrā — "to announce; to declare".

সরকার দুই দিনের ছুটি ঘোষণা করল।

sôrkār dui diner chhuṭi ghoshônā kôrlô.

The government announced a two-day holiday.

Past (he/she …): তিনি ফলাফল ঘোষণা করলেন, tini phôlāphôl ghoshônā kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঘোষণা করা (ghoshônā kôrā) puts Sanskrit ghoṣaṇā, 'a proclaiming aloud' (Monier-Williams), before করা: to make a thing known to everyone at once.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ghoshônā kôrā
- Say it: ghoshônā kôrā, once more
- Say it: sôrkār dui diner chhuṭi ghoshônā kôrlô. — The government announced a two-day holiday.
- Recall: say the Bengali for talk, then the Bengali for an interview, then say ghoshônā kôrā again

Before you move on

What does ঘোষণা করা mean? ("To announce; to declare".) Say it once more.

297.4 বিবৃতি (bibriti) — a public statement; a statement

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an interview, then the Bengali for to announce.

You'll want to know: বিবৃতি

বিবৃতি — bibriti — "a public statement; a statement".

মন্ত্রী দুর্ঘটনার পরে একটা বিবৃতি দিলেন। môntrī durghôṭônār pôre ekṭā bibriti dilen.

The minister made a statement after the accident.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বিবৃতি (bibriti) is Sanskrit vivṛti, 'a making manifest, an exposition' (Monier-Williams): a statement opens a matter up. বিবৃতি দেওয়া, to issue a statement.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: bibriti
- Say it: bibriti, once more
- Say it: môntrī durghôṭônār pôre ekṭā bibriti dilen. — The minister made a statement after the accident.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an interview, then the Bengali for to announce, then say bibriti again

Before you move on

What does বিবৃতি mean? ("A public statement; a statement".) Say it once more.

297.5 উল্লেখ করা (ullekh kôrā) — to mention

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to announce, then the Bengali for a public statement.

You'll want to know: উল্লেখ করা

উল্লেখ করা — ullekh kôrā — "to mention".

প্রতিবেদনে সাংবাদিক সাক্ষীর নাম উল্লেখ করলেন না। prôtibedône sāngbādik sākkhīr nām ullekh kôrlen nā.

In the report the journalist did not mention the witness's name.

Past (he/she …): তিনি ঘটনাটা উল্লেখ করলেন, tini ghôṭônāṭā ullekh kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উল্লেখ করা (ullekh kôrā) puts Sanskrit ullekha, 'causing to come forth clearly' (Monier-Williams), before করা: to bring a name or a fact out into what you say.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ullekh kôrā
- Say it: ullekh kôrā, once more

298.1 উত্তেজনা (uttejônā) — excitement; tension

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a public statement, then the Bengali for to mention.

You'll want to know: উত্তেজনা

উত্তেজনা — uttejônā — "excitement; tension".

> খবরটা শুনে পাড়ায় উত্তেজনা ছড়াল।
> khôbôrṭā shune pāṛāy uttejônā chhôṛālô.
> When the news came, tension spread through the neighbourhood.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উত্তেজনা (uttejônā) is Sanskrit uttejana (feminine uttejanā), 'incitement, stimulation' (Monier-Williams), from ut- 'up' and tejas

'sharpness, heat': a stirring up.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: uttejônā
- Say it: uttejônā, once more
- Say it: khôbôṛṭā shune pāṛāy uttejônā chhôṛālô. — When the news came, tension spread through the neighbourhood.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a public statement, then the Bengali for to mention, then say uttejônā again

Before you move on

What does উত্তেজনা mean? ("Excitement; tension".) Say it once more.

298.2 রটানো (rôṭāno) — to spread a rumour; to put about

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to mention, then the Bengali for tension.

You'll want to know: রটানো

রটানো — rôṭāno — "to spread a rumour; to put about".

> কেউ রটাল যে চোর আবার আসবে।
> keu rôṭālô je chor ābār āsbe.
> Someone put it about that the thief would come back.

Past (he/she …): সেই লোক খবরটা রটাল, sei lok khôbôṛṭā rôṭālô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

রটানো (rôṭāno) is usually linked with Sanskrit raṭati, 'cries, yells' (CDIAL 10590): what is shouted about gets about.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: rôṭāno
- Say it: rôṭāno, once more
- Say it: keu rôṭālô je chor ābār āsbe. — Someone put it about that the thief would come back.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to mention, then the Bengali for tension, then say rôṭāno again

298.3 হইচই (hôichôi) — an uproar; a commotion

Before the new one: say the Bengali for tension, then the Bengali for to spread a rumour.

You'll want to know: হইচই

হইচই — hôichôi — "an uproar; a commotion".

খবরটা শুনে পাড়ায় হইচই পড়ে গেল। khôbôrṭā shune pāṛāy hôichôi pôṛe gelô.

When the news came, the neighbourhood was in an uproar.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হইচই (hôichôi) is an expressive word, like English hubbub: its sound is the noise. হইচই পড়ে যাওয়া, an uproar breaks out. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: hôichôi
- Say it: hôichôi, once more
- Say it: khôbôṛṭā shune pāṛāy hôichôi pôṛe gelô. — When the news came, the neighbourhood was in an uproar.

298.4 ফিসফিস করা (phisphis kôrā) — to whisper

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to spread a rumour, then the Bengali for an uproar.

You'll want to know: ফিসফিস করা

ফিসফিস করা — phisphis kôrā — "to whisper".

ক্লাসে ছাত্ররা ফিসফিস করে গল্প করছিল। klāse chhātrôrā phisphis kôre gôlpo kôrchhilô.

In class the students were whispering to each other.

Past (he/she …): সেই মেয়ে ফিসফিস করল, sei meye phisphis kôrlô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ফিসফিস করা (phisphis kôrā) puts ফিসফিস, an imitative word for the hiss of a whisper, before করা. ফিসফিস করে বলা, to say something in a whisper. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: phisphis kôrā
- Say it: phisphis kôrā, once more
- Say it: klāse chhātrôrā phisphis kôre gôlpo kôrchhilô. — In class the students were whispering to each other.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to spread a rumour, then the Bengali for an uproar, then say phisphis kôrā again

Before you move on

What does ফিসফিস করা mean? ("To whisper".) Say it once more.

298.5 চাঞ্চল্য (chānchôlyô) — a sensation; a stir

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an uproar, then the Bengali for to whisper.

You'll want to know: চাঞ্চল্য

চাঞ্চল্য — chānchôlyô — "a sensation; a stir".

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a broadcast, then the Bengali for a channel.

You'll want to know: উপস্থাপক

উপস্থাপক — upôsthāpôk — "a presenter; a host".

উপস্থাপক ঝড়ের খবর পড়লেন। upôsthāpôk jhôṛer khôbôr pôṛlen.

The presenter read the news about the storm.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উপস্থাপক (upôsthāpôk) is Sanskrit upasthāpaka, 'causing to turn one's attention, reminding' (Monier-Williams); the sense 'a presenter', the one who puts the news before you, is the modern one.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: upôsthāpôk
- Say it: upôsthāpôk, once more
- Say it: upôsthāpôk jhôṛer khôbôr pôṛlen. — The presenter read the news about the storm.

- Recall: say the Bengali for a puja, then the Bengali for an idol, then say pænḍel again

Before you move on

What does প্যান্ডেল mean? ("A pandal; a festival marquee".) Say it once more.

304.5 উদযাপন করা (udjāpôn kôrā) — to celebrate

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an idol, then the Bengali for a pandal.

You'll want to know: উদযাপন করা

উদযাপন করা — udjāpôn kôrā — "to celebrate".

গ্রামের মানুষ নাচ আর গান দিয়ে উৎসব উদযাপন করল।

grāmer mānush nāch ār gān diye utsôb udjāpôn kôrlô.

The villagers celebrated the festival with dancing and songs.

Past (he/she …): তিনি জন্মদিন উদযাপন করলেন, tini jônmôdin udjāpôn kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উদযাপন করা (udjāpôn kôrā) puts Sanskrit udyāpana, 'bringing to a conclusion' (Monier-Williams), the closing rite of a vow, before করা; Bengali uses it for celebrating.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: udjāpôn kôrā

You'll want to know: আলপনা

আলপনা — ālpônā — "a floor painting (alpona)".

পুজোর আগে মেয়েরা দরজার সামনে আলপনা আঁকল।

pujor āge meyerā dôrjār sāmne ālpônā ãklô.

Before the puja the girls painted an alpona in front of the door.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আলপনা (ālpônā) comes down from Sanskrit ālimpana, 'whitening, painting' (CDIAL 1385, which lists Bengali ālpanā): the white patterns drawn on a floor for a festival.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ālpônā
- Say it: ālpônā, once more
- Say it: pujor āge meyerā dôrjār sāmne ālpônā ãklô. — Before the puja the girls painted an alpona in front of the door.

305.4 ঝলমল করা (jhôlmôl kôrā) — to glitter; to sparkle

Before the new one: say the Bengali for fireworks, then the Bengali for a floor painting.

You'll want to know: ঝলমল করা

ঝলমল করা — jhôlmôl kôrā — "to glitter; to sparkle".

আলোয় পুরো শহরটা ঝলমল করছিল।

āloy puro shôhôrṭā jhôlmôl kôrchhilô.

The whole town was glittering with lights.

Past (he/she …): সেই শহর আলোয় ঝলমল করল, sei shôhôr āloy jhôlmôl kôrlô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঝলমল করা (jhôlmôl kôrā) puts ঝলমল, an expressive word whose doubled sound is the flicker of light, before করা. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: jhôlmôl kôrā
- Say it: jhôlmôl kôrā, once more
- Say it: āloy puro shôhôrṭā jhôlmôl kôrchhilô. — The whole town was glittering with lights.

> পুজোর দিন বাড়িতে অনেক অতিথি এলেন।
> pujor din bāṛite ônek ôtithi elen.
> Many guests came to the house on the day of the puja.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অতিথি (ôtithi) is Sanskrit atithi, 'a guest, one owed hospitality' (Monier-Williams), which records an old explanation: a-tithi, one with no fixed day for coming.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ôtithi
- Say it: ôtithi, once more
- Say it: pujor din bāṛite ônek ôtithi elen. — Many guests came to the house on the day of the puja.

306.4 উপহার (upôhār) — a gift; a present

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to invite, then the Bengali for a feast.

You'll want to know: উপহার

উপহার — upôhār — "a gift; a present".

জন্মদিনে বন্ধুরা আমাকে একটা বই উপহার দিল।

jônmôdine bôndhurā āmāke ekṭā bôi upôhār dilô.

My friends gave me a book as a birthday present.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উপহার (upôhār) is Sanskrit upahāra, an offering to a god or a present to a superior (Monier-Williams); it has nothing to do with হার, a necklace. উপহার দেওয়া, to give a present.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: upôhār
- Say it: upôhār, once more

Before you move on

What does ধুনুচি mean? ("An incense burner".) Say it once more.

307.4 আরতি (ārôti) — an evening worship with lamps

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a bell-metal gong, then the Bengali for an incense burner.

You'll want to know: আরতি

আরতি — ārôti — "an evening worship with lamps".

সন্ধ্যায় মন্দিরে আরতি হয়।

sôndhyāy mondire ārôti hôy.

There is an evening worship with lamps at the temple.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আরতি (ārôti) comes down from Sanskrit ārātrika, the light waved at night before an image, and the rite itself (Monier-Williams; CDIAL 1315, which lists Bengali ārati, the ceremony).

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ārôti

Before you move on

What does ভাসানো mean? ("To set afloat; to immerse".) Say it once more.

308.3 বিদায় (bidāy) — a farewell; a parting

Before the new one: say the Bengali for the immersion of an idol, then the Bengali for to set afloat.

You'll want to know: বিদায়

বিদায় — bidāy — "a farewell; a parting".

বিদায়ের সময় দিদিমা কাঁদলেন। bidāyer sômôy didimā kā̃dlen.

Grandmother cried when it was time to say goodbye.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বিদায় (bidāy) is Sanskrit vidāya; Monier-Williams gives 'dismissal with good wishes' and suspects that this sense is not Sanskrit at all but Arabic wadāᶜ, 'farewell'. বিদায় নেওয়া, to take your leave.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: bidāy
- Say it: bidāy, once more
- Say it: bidāyer sômôy didimā kā̃dlen. — Grandmother cried when it was time to say goodbye.
- Recall: say the Bengali for the immersion of an idol, then the Bengali for to set afloat, then say bidāy again

Before you move on

What does বিদায় mean? ("A farewell; a parting".) Say it once more.

308.4 শোভাযাত্রা (shobhājātrā) — a festive procession

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to set afloat, then the Bengali for a farewell.

You'll want to know: শোভাযাত্রা

শোভাযাত্রা — shobhājātrā — "a festive procession".

বিসর্জনের শোভাযাত্রা ঢাক বাজিয়ে নদীর দিকে গেল। bisôrjôner shobhājātrā ḍhāk bājiye nôdīr dike gelô.

The immersion procession went down to the river with the drums beating.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

শোভাযাত্রা (shobhājātrā) joins Sanskrit śobhā, 'splendour, beauty' (Monier-Williams), to যাত্রা, a journey: a march in finery. A protest march is a মিছিল.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: shobhājātrā
- Say it: shobhājātrā, once more
- Say it: bisôrjôner shobhājātrā ḍhāk bājiye nôdīr dike gelô. — The immersion procession went down to the river with the drums beating.

Before you move on

What does শোভাযাত্রা mean? ("A festive procession".) Say it once more.

308.5 কোলাকুলি করা (kolākuli kôrā) — to embrace (in festive greeting)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a farewell, then the Bengali for a festive procession.

You'll want to know: কোলাকুলি করা

কোলাকুলি করা — kolākuli kôrā — "to embrace (in festive greeting)".

বিসর্জনের পরে বন্ধুরা কোলাকুলি করল। bisôrjôner pôre bôndhurā kolākuli kôrlô.

After the immersion the friends embraced one another.

Past (he/she …): তিনি বন্ধুর সঙ্গে কোলাকুলি করলেন, tini bôndhur sôngge kolākuli kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কোলাকুলি করা (kolākuli kôrā) doubles কোল, the lap or the bosom — CDIAL 3607, Sanskrit krōḍa, 'breast', beside kōla, 'breast, lap' — into the word for the embrace of the festival's last evening, with করা.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: kolākuli kôrā
- Say it: kolākuli kôrā, once more
- Say it: bisôrjôner pôre bôndhurā kolākuli kôrlô. — After the immersion the friends embraced one another.

309.2 ওড়ানো (oṛāno) — to fly a kite; to make fly

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to embrace, then the Bengali for a paper kite.

You'll want to know: ওড়ানো

ওড়ানো — oṛāno — "to fly a kite; to make fly".

বিকেলে বাবা আর আমি ছাদে ঘুড়ি ওড়ালাম। bikele bābā ār āmi chhāde ghuṛi oṛālām.

In the late afternoon my father and I flew kites on the roof.

Past (he/she …): সেই ছেলে ঘুড়ি ওড়াল, sei chhele ghuṛi oṛālô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ওড়ানো (oṛāno) is ওড়া, to fly — CDIAL 1697, Sanskrit uḍḍīyatē, 'flies up' — with the -ānō ending: to make something fly.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: oṛāno
- Say it: oṛāno, once more
- Say it: bikele bābā ār āmi chhāde ghuṛi oṛālām. — In the late afternoon my father and I flew kites on the roof.

309.3 নববর্ষ (nôbôbôrshô) — the new year

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a paper kite, then the Bengali for to fly a kite.

You'll want to know: নববর্ষ

নববর্ষ — nôbôbôrshô — "the new year".

নববর্ষের দিন সবাই নতুন জামা পরে বেড়াতে যায়। nôbôbôrsher din sôbāi nôtun jāmā pôre beṛāte jāy.

On the first day of the new year everyone puts on new clothes and goes out visiting.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নববর্ষ (nôbôbôrshô) joins Sanskrit nava, 'new', to varṣa, 'rain; a year' (Monier-Williams), the year counted in rainy seasons.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: nôbôbôrshô
- Say it: nôbôbôrshô, once more
- Say it: nôbôbôrsher din sôbāi nôtun jāmā pôre beṛāte jāy. — On the first day of the new year everyone puts on new clothes and goes out visiting.

309.4 হালখাতা (hālkhātā) — a new account book opened at the New Year

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to fly a kite, then the Bengali for the new year.

You'll want to know: হালখাতা

হালখাতা — hālkhātā — "a new account book opened at the New Year".

> নববর্ষের দিন দোকানদাররা হালখাতা খোলেন। > nôbôbôrsher din dokāndārrā hālkhātā kholen.
> On the first day of the new year shopkeepers open a new account book.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হালখাতা (hālkhātā) joins হাল, 'the current state' — usually traced to Arabic ḥāl — to খাতা, an account book: the fresh ledger a shop opens on the first day of the year, with sweets for its customers.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: hālkhātā
- Say it: hālkhātā, once more

Before you move on

What does সমাপ্তি mean? ("A close; a conclusion".) Say it once more.

329.3 চিরকাল (chirôkāl) — forever; for all time

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a start, then the Bengali for a close.

You'll want to know: চিরকাল

চিরকাল — chirôkāl — "forever; for all time".

এই গল্পটা আমি চিরকাল মনে রাখব।

ei gôlpoṭā āmi chirôkāl mône rākhbô.

I will remember this story forever.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চিরকাল (chirôkāl) joins Sanskrit cira, 'long, lasting a long time' (Monier-Williams), to kāla, time: for a long, lasting time.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: chirôkāl
- Say it: chirôkāl, once more
- Say it: ei gôlpoṭā āmi chirôkāl mône rākhbô. — I will remember this story forever.

Before you move on

What does চিরকাল mean? ("Forever; for all time".) Say it once more.

329.4 অবিস্মরণীয় (ôbismôrônīyô) — unforgettable

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a close, then the Bengali for forever.

You'll want to know: অবিস্মরণীয়

অবিস্মরণীয় — ôbismôrônīyô — "unforgettable".

সেই রাতের গল্পগুলো ছিল অবিস্মরণীয়।

sei rāter gôlpogulo chhilô ôbismôrônīyô.

The stories of that night were unforgettable.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অবিস্মরণীয় (ôbismôrônīyô) puts Sanskrit a-, 'not', before vismaraṇīya, 'to be forgotten' (Monier-Williams): not to be forgotten.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: ôbismôrônīyô
- Say it: ôbismôrônīyô, once more
- Say it: sei rāter gôlpogulo chhilô ôbismôrônīyô. — The stories of that night were unforgettable.

Before the new one: say the Bengali for forever, then the Bengali for unforgettable.

You'll want to know: উৎসর্গ করা

উৎসর্গ করা — utsôrgô kôrā — "to dedicate".

> লেখক বইটা তাঁর দাদুকে উৎসর্গ করলেন।
> lekhôk bôiṭā tā̃r dāduke utsôrgô kôrlen.
> The writer dedicated the book to his grandfather.

Past (he/she …): তিনি বইটা বাবাকে উৎসর্গ করলেন, tini bôiṭā bābāke utsôrgô kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উৎসর্গ করা (utsôrgô kôrā) puts Sanskrit utsarga, 'a pouring forth, a letting go' (Monier-Williams), before করা; to dedicate a book is to give it away to someone.

What you've built

One more word for telling what happened.

Your turn

- Say it: utsôrgô kôrā
- Say it: utsôrgô kôrā, once more
- Say it: lekhôk bôiṭā tā̃r dāduke utsôrgô kôrlen. — The writer dedicated the book to his grandfather.
- Recall: say the Bengali for forever, then the Bengali for unforgettable, then say utsôrgô kôrā again

Before you move on

What does উৎসর্গ করা mean? ("To dedicate".) Say it once more.

329.6 Looking back: from Heroes and Villains to The Last Page

Say the Bengali for the hero of a story and a villain.

Your turn

Chapter 330

Where It Came From

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say where something started and what it led to.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 330: I can say where something started and what it led to.

330.1 উৎস (utsô) — a source; an origin

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a female singer, then the Bengali for a female dancer.

You'll want to know: উৎস

উৎস — utsô — "a source; an origin".

> এই খবরের উৎস কী?
> ei khôbôrer utsô kī?
> Where did this news come from?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উৎস (utsô) is Sanskrit utsa, a spring where water rises (Monier-Williams). Bengali uses it for the place anything first flows from, news or money or a river; that wider use is a later extension of the picture.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: utsô
- Say it: utsô, once more
- Say it: ei khôbôrer utsô kī? — Where did this news come from?
- Recall: say the Bengali for a female singer, then the Bengali for a female dancer, then say utsô again

Before you move on

What does উৎস mean? ("A source; an origin".) Say it once more.

330.2 সৃষ্টি করা (srishṭi kôrā) — to create; to give rise to

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a female dancer, then the Bengali for a source.

You'll want to know: সৃষ্টি করা

সৃষ্টি করা — srishṭi kôrā — "to create; to give rise to".

নতুন নিয়মটা অনেক ঝামেলা সৃষ্টি করল।

nôtun niyômṭā ônek jhāmelā srishṭi kôrlô.

The new rule caused a lot of trouble.

Past (he/she …): তিনি একটা নতুন দল সৃষ্টি করলেন, tini ekṭā nôtun dôl srishṭi kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সৃষ্টি করা (srishṭi kôrā) is Sanskrit sṛṣṭi, creation or bringing forth (Monier-Williams), with করা 'to do'. It can make something good (a new team) or something unwelcome (trouble).

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: srishṭi kôrā
- Say it: srishṭi kôrā, once more
- Say it: nôtun niyômṭā ônek jhāmelā srishṭi kôrlô. — The new rule caused a lot of trouble.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a female dancer, then the Bengali for a source, then say srishṭi kôrā again

Before you move on

What does সৃষ্টি করা mean? ("To create; to give rise to".) Say it once more.

330.3 প্রভাব (prôbhāb) — an influence; an effect

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a source, then the Bengali for to create.

You'll want to know: প্রভাব

প্রভাব — prôbhāb — "an influence; an effect".

আমার ওপর এই বইটার অনেক প্রভাব আছে।

āmār opôr ei bôiṭār ônek prôbhāb āchhe.

This book has had a big influence on me.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

প্রভাব (prôbhāb) is Sanskrit prabhāva, might or power (Monier-Williams). The Bengali sense, the pull one thing has on another, is a softening of that power; the influence falls on something, so it goes with -এর ওপর.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: prôbhāb
- Say it: prôbhāb, once more
- Say it: āmār opôr ei bôiṭār ônek prôbhāb āchhe. — This book has had a big influence on me.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a source, then the Bengali for to create, then say prôbhāb again

Before you move on

What does প্রভাব mean? ("An influence; an effect".) Say it once more.

330.4 প্রতিক্রিয়া (prôtikriyā) — a reaction; a response

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to create, then the Bengali for an influence.

You'll want to know: প্রতিক্রিয়া

প্রতিক্রিয়া — prôtikriyā — "a reaction; a response".

খবরটা শুনে তার প্রতিক্রিয়া কী ছিল?

khôbôrṭā shune tār prôtikriyā kī chhilô?

How did he react when he heard the news?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

প্রতিক্রিয়া (prôtikriyā) is Sanskrit pratikriyā, from prati 'against, back' and kriyā 'an action': an action given back (Monier-Williams gives requital). The everyday sense 'a reaction' is a modern use of the same picture.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: prôtikriyā
- Say it: prôtikriyā, once more
- Say it: khôbôrṭā shune tār prôtikriyā kī chhilô? — How did he react when he heard the news?
- Recall: say the Bengali for to create, then the Bengali for an influence, then say prôtikriyā again

Before you move on

What does প্রতিক্রিয়া mean? ("A reaction; a response".) Say it once more.

330.5 প্রেরণা (preronā) — an inspiration; a motivation

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an influence, then the Bengali for a reaction.

You'll want to know: প্রেরণা

প্রেরণা — preronā — "an inspiration; a motivation".

আমার বাবাই আমার প্রেরণা।

āmār bābāi āmār preronā.

My father is my inspiration.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

প্রেরণা (preronā) is Sanskrit preraṇa, setting in motion or urging on (Monier-Williams), in the feminine form. In Bengali it is the person or idea that pushes you forward.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: preronā
- Say it: preronā, once more
- Say it: āmār bābāi āmār preronā. — My father is my inspiration.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an influence, then the Bengali for a reaction, then say preronā again

Before you move on

What does প্রেরণা mean? ("An inspiration; a motivation".) Say it once more.

331.1 উদ্দেশ্য (uddeshyô) — a purpose; an aim

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a reaction, then the Bengali for an inspiration.

You'll want to know: উদ্দেশ্য

উদ্দেশ্য — uddeshyô — "a purpose; an aim".

> এই মিটিংয়ের উদ্দেশ্য কী?
> ei miṭingyer uddeshyô kī?
> What is this meeting for?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উদ্দেশ্য (uddeshyô) is Sanskrit uddeśya, the thing one points at or has in view (Monier-Williams). Bengali uses it for the purpose behind a plan or a meeting.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: uddeshyô
- Say it: uddeshyô, once more
- Say it: ei miṭingyer uddeshyô kī? — What is this meeting for?
- Recall: say the Bengali for a reaction, then the Bengali for an inspiration, then say uddeshyô again

Before you move on

What does উদ্দেশ্য mean? ("A purpose; an aim".) Say it once more.

331.2 উপকার (upôkār) — a benefit; a good turn

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an inspiration, then the Bengali for a purpose.

You'll want to know: উপকার

উপকার — upôkār — "a benefit; a good turn".

তোমার পরামর্শে আমার অনেক উপকার হল।

tomār pôrāmôrshe āmār ônek upôkār hôlô.

Your advice did me a lot of good.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উপকার (upôkār) is Sanskrit upakāra, help or a favour done (Monier-Williams). With হওয়া the benefit happens to someone: আমার উপকার হল, it did me good.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: upôkār
- Say it: upôkār, once more
- Say it: tomār pôrāmôrshe āmār ônek upôkār hôlô. — Your advice did me a lot of good.

Before you move on

What does উপকার mean? ("A benefit; a good turn".) Say it once more.

331.3 লাভ (lābh) — a gain; a profit

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a purpose, then the Bengali for a good turn.

You'll want to know: লাভ

লাভ — lābh — "a gain; a profit".

এই ব্যবসায় কি কোনো লাভ আছে?

ei bæbsāy ki kono lābh āchhe?

Is there any profit in this business?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

লাভ (lābh) is Sanskrit lābha, getting or gaining (Monier-Williams). It covers money made in trade and any advantage gained.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: lābh
- Say it: lābh, once more
- Say it: ei bæbsāy ki kono lābh āchhe? — Is there any profit in this business?
- Recall: say the Bengali for a purpose, then the Bengali for a good turn, then say lābh again

Before you move on

What does লাভ mean? ("A gain; a profit".) Say it once more.

331.4 লোকসান (loksān) — a financial loss

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a good turn, then the Bengali for a profit.

You'll want to know: লোকসান

লোকসান — loksān — "a financial loss".

গত বছর দোকানটার লোকসান হল।

gôtô bôchhôr dokānṭār loksān hôlô.

The shop made a loss last year.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

লোকসান (loksān) is usually traced to Arabic nuqṣān, a shortfall, which would have come into Bengali through Persian, with the first n heard as l. It is the opposite of লাভ in trade.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: loksān
- Say it: loksān, once more
- Say it: gôtô bôchhôr dokānṭār loksān hôlô. — The shop made a loss last year.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a good turn, then the Bengali for a profit, then say loksān again

Before you move on

What does লোকসান mean? ("A financial loss".) Say it once more.

331.5 উপযোগী (upôjogī) — useful; serviceable

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a profit, then the Bengali for a financial loss.

You'll want to know: উপযোগী

উপযোগী — upôjogī — "useful; serviceable".

এই বইটা ছাত্রদের জন্য উপযোগী। ei bôiṭā chhātrôder jônyô upôjogī.

This book is useful for students.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উপযোগী (upôjogī) is Sanskrit upayogin, serving a use (Monier-Williams), from upayoga, use. What it is useful for takes -এর জন্য: ছাত্রদের জন্য উপযোগী.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: upôjogī
- Say it: upôjogī, once more
- Say it: ei bôiṭā chhātrôder jônyô upôjogī. — This book is useful for students.

Before you move on

What does উপযোগী mean? ("Useful; serviceable".) Say it once more.

Chapter 332

One Thing Leads to Another

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can link one reason to the next and say what follows.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 332: I can link one reason to the next and say what follows.

332.1 সুতরাং (sutôrāng) — therefore; and so

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a financial loss, then the Bengali for useful.

You'll want to know: সুতরাং

সুতরাং — sutôrāng — "therefore; and so".

> বাস নেই, সুতরাং আমরা হেঁটে যাব।
> bās nei, sutôrāng āmrā hẽṭe jābô.
> There is no bus, so we will walk.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সুতরাং (sutôrāng) is Sanskrit sutarām, 'all the more' (Monier-Williams), with its final m heard as ng. The sense 'therefore' is not one the dictionary gives; in Bengali the word draws the conclusion from what was said before.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: sutôrāng
- Say it: sutôrāng, once more
- Say it: bās nei, sutôrāng āmrā hẽṭe jābô. — There is no bus, so we will walk.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a financial loss, then the Bengali for useful, then say sutôrāng again

Before you move on

What does সুতরাং mean? ("Therefore; and so".) Say it once more.

332.2 তাছাড়া (tāchhāṛā) — besides; apart from that

Before the new one: say the Bengali for useful, then the Bengali for therefore.

You'll want to know: তাছাড়া

তাছাড়া — tāchhāṛā — "besides; apart from that".

আজ আমি ক্লান্ত, তাছাড়া আমার অনেক কাজ আছে।

āj āmi klāntô, tāchhāṛā āmār ônek kāj āchhe.

I'm tired today, and besides, I have a lot of work.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তাছাড়া (tāchhāṛā) is তা 'that' with ছাড়া 'apart from' (CDIAL 5612 and 4998 list Bengali tā and chāṛā): 'apart from that'. It adds a second reason to the first.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: tāchhāṛā
- Say it: tāchhāṛā, once more
- Say it: āj āmi klāntô, tāchhāṛā āmār ônek kāj āchhe. — I'm tired today, and besides, I have a lot of work.
- Recall: say the Bengali for useful, then the Bengali for therefore, then say tāchhāṛā again

Before you move on

What does তাছাড়া mean? ("Besides; apart from that".) Say it once more.

332.3 অথচ (ôthôch) — and yet; even so

Before the new one: say the Bengali for therefore, then the Bengali for besides.

You'll want to know: অথচ

অথচ — ôthôch — "and yet; even so".

মীরা অনেক পড়ল, অথচ পাস করল না।

mīrā ônek pôṛlô, ôthôch pās kôrlô nā.

Mira studied a lot, and yet she did not pass.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অথচ (ôthôch) is Sanskrit atha ca, 'and moreover' (Monier-Williams). The Bengali sense, 'and yet', which links a result you would not expect, is not one the dictionary gives.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: ôthôch
- Say it: ôthôch, once more
- Say it: mīrā ônek pôṛlô, ôthôch pās kôrlô nā. — Mira studied a lot, and yet she did not pass.
- Recall: say the Bengali for therefore, then the Bengali for besides, then say ôthôch again

Before you move on

What does অথচ mean? ("And yet; even so".) Say it once more.

332.4 অবশ্য (ôbôshyô) — of course; mind you

Before the new one: say the Bengali for besides, then the Bengali for and yet.

You'll want to know: অবশ্য

অবশ্য — ôbôshyô — "of course; mind you".

হোটেলটা দামি, অবশ্য খাবার দুর্দান্ত। hoṭelṭā dāmi, ôbôshyô khābār durdāntô.

The hotel is expensive, though mind you, the food is excellent.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অবশ্য (ôbôshyô) is Sanskrit avaśyam, 'necessarily' (Monier-Williams). Bengali uses it to grant a point while keeping your own: 'of course', 'mind you'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: ôbôshyô
- Say it: ôbôshyô, once more
- Say it: hoṭelṭā dāmi, ôbôshyô khābār durdāntô. — The hotel is expensive, though mind you, the food is excellent.
- Recall: say the Bengali for besides, then the Bengali for and yet, then say ôbôshyô again

Before you move on

What does অবশ্য mean? ("Of course; mind you".) Say it once more.

332.5 খাটা (khāṭā) — to hold good; to apply (of a rule); to toil

Before the new one: say the Bengali for and yet, then the Bengali for mind you.

You'll want to know: খাটা

খাটা — khāṭā — "to hold good; to apply (of a rule); to toil".

এই নিয়মটা এখানে খাটে না।

ei niyômṭā ekhāne khāṭe nā.

This rule doesn't apply here.

Past (he/she …): সেই নিয়মটা খাটল না, sei niyômṭā khāṭlô nā.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

খাটা (khāṭā) is listed by CDIAL 3779 (khaṭṭáyati) with the senses 'to work' and 'to apply'. A person খাটে when working hard; a rule or a reason খাটে when it holds in a case.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: khāṭā
- Say it: khāṭā, once more
- Say it: ei niyômṭā ekhāne khāṭe nā. — This rule doesn't apply here.
- Recall: say the Bengali for and yet, then the Bengali for mind you, then say khāṭā again

333.1 যুক্তি (jukti) — an argument; reasoning

Before the new one: say the Bengali for mind you, then the Bengali for to hold good.

You'll want to know: যুক্তি

যুক্তি — jukti — "an argument; reasoning".

> তোমার যুক্তিটা ভালো, কিন্তু এটা সব জায়গায় খাটে না।
> tomār juktiṭā bhālo, kintu eṭā sôb jāygāy khāṭe nā.
> Your argument is good, but it doesn't hold everywhere.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

যুক্তি (jukti) is Sanskrit yukti, a joining and so a reasoning that holds together (Monier-Williams). It is a reasoned case, not a quarrel: তর্ক করা is to argue, যুক্তি is what you argue with.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: jukti
- Say it: jukti, once more
- Say it: tomār juktiṭā bhālo, kintu eṭā sôb jāygāy khāṭe nā. — Your argument is good, but it doesn't hold everywhere.

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to hold good, then the Bengali for an argument.

You'll want to know: বক্তব্য

বক্তব্য — bôktôbyô — "what one has to say; a statement".

তোমার বক্তব্য আমরা সবাই শুনলাম।

tomār bôktôbyô āmrā sôbāi shunlām.

We all heard what you had to say.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বক্তব্য (bôktôbyô) is Sanskrit vaktavya, 'what is to be said' (Monier-Williams). In Bengali it is the point a person puts forward in a meeting or a debate.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: bôktôbyô
- Say it: bôktôbyô, once more
- Say it: tomār bôktôbyô āmrā sôbāi shunlām. — We all heard what you had to say.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to hold good, then the Bengali for an argument, then say bôktôbyô again

Before you move on

What does বক্তব্য mean? ("What one has to say; a statement".) Say it once more.

333.3 পক্ষ (pôkkhô) — a side in a dispute; a party

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an argument, then the Bengali for a statement.

You'll want to know: পক্ষ

পক্ষ — pôkkhô — "a side in a dispute; a party".

আমি তোমার পক্ষে আছি।

āmi tomār pôkkhe āchhi.

I'm on your side.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পক্ষ (pôkkhô) is Sanskrit pakṣa, a wing, and so a side or party (Monier-Williams). To be on someone's side is -এর পক্ষে থাকা.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: pôkkhô
- Say it: pôkkhô, once more
- Say it: āmi tomār pôkkhe āchhi. — I'm on your side.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an argument, then the Bengali for a statement, then say pôkkhô again

Before you move on

What does পক্ষ mean? ("A side in a dispute; a party".) Say it once more.

333.4 বিরুদ্ধে (biruddhe) — against

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a statement, then the Bengali for a side in a dispute.

You'll want to know: বিরুদ্ধে

বিরুদ্ধে — biruddhe — "against".

গ্রামের সবাই নতুন আইনের বিরুদ্ধে।

grāmer sôbāi nôtun āiner biruddhe.

Everyone in the village is against the new law.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বিরুদ্ধে (biruddhe) is Sanskrit viruddha, opposed or hindered (Monier-Williams), with the Bengali ending -এ. It follows a word with -এর: আইনের বিরুদ্ধে, against the law.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: biruddhe
- Say it: biruddhe, once more
- Say it: grāmer sôbāi nôtun āiner biruddhe. — Everyone in the village is against the new law.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a statement, then the Bengali for a side in a dispute, then say biruddhe again

Before you move on

What does বিরুদ্ধে mean? ("Against".) Say it once more.

333.5 সমর্থন করা (sômôrthôn kôrā) — to support (a view or a person); to back

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a side in a dispute, then the Bengali for against.

You'll want to know: সমর্থন করা

সমর্থন করা — sômôrthôn kôrā — "to support (a view or a person); to back".

> আমরা সবাই মীরাকে সমর্থন করলাম।
> āmrā sôbāi mīrāke sômôrthôn kôrlām.
> We all backed Mira.

Past (he/she …): তিনি আমাদের যুক্তি সমর্থন করলেন, tini āmāder jukti sômôrthôn kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সমর্থন করা (sômôrthôn kôrā) is Sanskrit samarthana, which Monier-Williams gives both as deliberation and as establishing or vindicating a claim, with করা 'to do'. Bengali uses it for standing behind a view or a person.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: sômôrthôn kôrā
- Say it: sômôrthôn kôrā, once more
- Say it: āmrā sôbāi mīrāke sômôrthôn kôrlām. — We all backed Mira.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a side in a dispute, then the Bengali for against, then say sômôrthôn kôrā again

Before you move on

What does সমর্থন করা mean? ("To support (a view or a person); to back".) Say it once more.

Chapter 334

Disagreeing Politely

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can object politely and say why I disagree.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 334: I can object politely and say why I disagree.

334.1 আপত্তি (āpôtti) — an objection

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for against, then the Bengali for to back.

You'll want to know: আপত্তি

আপত্তি — āpôtti — "an objection".

> তোমার কোনো আপত্তি আছে?
> tomār kono āpôtti āchhe?
> Do you have any objection?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আপত্তি (āpôtti) is Sanskrit āpatti, something that befalls one, a mishap (Monier-Williams). The Bengali sense, an objection someone raises, is not one the dictionary gives.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: āpôtti
- Say it: āpôtti, once more
- Say it: tomār kono āpôtti āchhe? — Do you have any objection?
- Recall: say the Bengali for against, then the Bengali for to back, then say āpôtti again

Before you move on

What does আপত্তি mean? ("An objection".) Say it once more.

334.2 বিতর্ক (bitôrkô) — a debate

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to back, then the Bengali for an objection.

You'll want to know: বিতর্ক

বিতর্ক — bitôrkô — "a debate".

কাল স্কুলে একটা বিতর্ক হবে।

kāl skule ekṭā bitôrkô hôbe.

There will be a debate at school tomorrow.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বিতর্ক (bitôrkô) is Sanskrit vitarka, a weighing of guesses and doubts (Monier-Williams). Bengali uses it for a formal debate between two sides; that use is modern.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: bitôrkô
- Say it: bitôrkô, once more
- Say it: kāl skule ekṭā bitôrkô hôbe. — There will be a debate at school tomorrow.

334.3 মতামত (môtāmôt) — opinions; views

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an objection, then the Bengali for a debate.

You'll want to know: মতামত

মতামত — môtāmôt — "opinions; views".

> সবার মতামত শুনে আমরা সিদ্ধান্ত নেব।
> sôbār môtāmôt shune āmrā siddhāntô nebô.
> We will decide after hearing everyone's views.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মতামত (môtāmôt) is usually explained as a Bengali pairing of Sanskrit mata, an opinion, with a-mata, not approved of (both in Monier-Williams), so 'views for and against'; the pair itself is not in the dictionary. It asks for everyone's opinions at once.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: môtāmôt
- Say it: môtāmôt, once more
- Say it: sôbār môtāmôt shune āmrā siddhāntô nebô. — We will decide after hearing everyone's views.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an objection, then the Bengali for a debate, then say môtāmôt again

Before you move on

What does মতামত mean? ("Opinions; views".) Say it once more.

334.4 বিরোধিতা করা (birodhitā kôrā) — to oppose

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a debate, then the Bengali for views.

You'll want to know: বিরোধিতা করা

বিরোধিতা করা — birodhitā kôrā — "to oppose".

অনেক মানুষ নতুন রাস্তার বিরোধিতা করল।

ônek mānush nôtun rāstār birodhitā kôrlô.

Many people opposed the new road.

Past (he/she …): তিনি পরিকল্পনার বিরোধিতা করলেন, tini pôrikôlpônār birodhitā kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বিরোধিতা করা (birodhitā kôrā) is Sanskrit virodhitā, enmity or strife (Monier-Williams), with করা. Bengali softened it to open opposition; what is opposed takes -এর: রাস্তার বিরোধিতা.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: birodhitā kôrā
- Say it: birodhitā kôrā, once more
- Say it: ônek mānush nôtun rāstār birodhitā kôrlô. — Many people opposed the new road.

334.5 উপেক্ষা করা (upekkhā kôrā) — to ignore; to disregard

Before the new one: say the Bengali for views, then the Bengali for to oppose.

You'll want to know: উপেক্ষা করা

উপেক্ষা করা — upekkhā kôrā — "to ignore; to disregard".

> তুমি আমার আপত্তি উপেক্ষা করলে কেন?
> tumi āmār āpôtti upekkhā kôrle ken?
> Why did you ignore my objection?

Past (he/she …): তিনি আমাদের প্রশ্ন উপেক্ষা করলেন, tini āmāder prôshno upekkhā kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উপেক্ষা করা (upekkhā kôrā) is Sanskrit upekṣā, overlooking or disregard (Monier-Williams), with করা. It is a choice not to heed, stronger than not noticing.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: upekkhā kôrā
- Say it: upekkhā kôrā, once more
- Say it: tumi āmār āpôtti upekkhā kôrle ken? — Why did you ignore my objection?

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for to oppose, then the Bengali for to disregard.

You'll want to know: অস্বীকার করা

অস্বীকার করা — ôsvīkār kôrā — "to deny".

> চোর সব অভিযোগ অস্বীকার করল।
> chor sôb ôbhijog ôsvīkār kôrlô.
> The thief denied every charge.

Past (he/she …): তিনি কথাটা অস্বীকার করলেন, tini kôthāṭā ôsvīkār kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অস্বীকার করা (ôsvīkār kôrā) is Sanskrit a- 'not' with svīkāra, assent or acceptance (Monier-Williams), and করা: to refuse to accept that something is true.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: ôsvīkār kôrā
- Say it: ôsvīkār kôrā, once more
- Say it: chor sôb ôbhijog ôsvīkār kôrlô. — The thief denied every charge.

সমালোচনা করা — sômālochônā kôrā — "to criticise".

সাংবাদিকরা সরকারের সমালোচনা করলেন। sāngbādikrā sôrkārer sômālochônā kôrlen.

The journalists criticised the government.

Past (he/she …): তিনি বইটার সমালোচনা করলেন, tini bôiṭār sômālochônā kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সমালোচনা করা (sômālochônā kôrā) is built on Sanskrit ālocana, considering or reflecting (Monier-Williams), with sam- 'thoroughly'. The sense 'criticism', a close look that finds faults, is a later Indic use. What is criticised takes -এর.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: sômālochônā kôrā
- Say it: sômālochônā kôrā, once more
- Say it: sāngbādikrā sôrkārer sômālochônā kôrlen. — The journalists criticised the government.

তোমার বক্তব্যের মূল কথাটা কী?

tomār bôktôbyer mūl kôthāṭā kī?

What is the main point of what you are saying?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মূল (mūl) is Sanskrit mūla, a root, and so the basis or origin of a thing (Monier-Williams). Before a noun it means the main one, the one the rest grows from: মূল কথা, the main point.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: mūl
- Say it: mūl, once more

337.1 প্রমাণ (prômān) — proof; evidence

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for to interpret, then the Bengali for briefly.

You'll want to know: প্রমাণ

প্রমাণ — prômān — "proof; evidence".

> তোমার কাছে কোনো প্রমাণ আছে?
> tomār kāchhe kono prômān āchhe?
> Do you have any proof?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

প্রমাণ (prômān) is Sanskrit pramāṇa, a measure or standard and, in logic, a proof (Monier-Williams). To have proof is -এর কাছে প্রমাণ থাকা.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: prômān
- Say it: prômān, once more
- Say it: tomār kāchhe kono prômān āchhe? — Do you have any proof?
- Recall: say the Bengali for to interpret, then the Bengali for briefly, then say prômān again

Before you move on

ভিত্তি — bhitti — "a basis; a foundation".

এই অভিযোগের কোনো ভিত্তি নেই। ei ôbhijoger kono bhitti nei.

This charge has no basis.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভিত্তি (bhitti) is Sanskrit bhitti, a wall (Monier-Williams). The Bengali sense, the foundation or basis of a building or a claim, is not one the dictionary gives.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: bhitti
- Say it: bhitti, once more
- Say it: ei ôbhijoger kono bhitti nei. — This charge has no basis.
- Recall: say the Bengali for proof, then the Bengali for sure, then say bhitti again

> তোমার কোনো সমস্যা হলে আমাকে বলো।
> tomār kono sômôsyā hôle āmāke bôlo.
> If you have any problem, tell me.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সমস্যা (sômôsyā) is Sanskrit samasyā, a part of a verse given to someone else to complete, a kind of puzzle (Monier-Williams). Bengali widened the puzzle to any problem; that widening is not in the dictionary.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: sômôsyā
- Say it: sômôsyā, once more
- Say it: tomār kono sômôsyā hôle āmāke bôlo. — If you have any problem, tell me.

363.5 উতরে যাওয়া (utre jāoyā) — to come through; to get through (a test)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an alternative, then the Bengali for an answer.

You'll want to know: উতরে যাওয়া

উতরে যাওয়া — utre jāoyā — "to come through; to get through (a test)".

> অনেক ঝামেলার পরে আমরা উতরে গেলাম।
> ônek jhāmelār pôre āmrā utre gelām.
> After a lot of trouble, we came through.

Past (he/she …): সেই পরিকল্পনাটা উতরে গেল, sei pôrikôlpônāṭā utre gelô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উতরে যাওয়া (utre jāoyā) is the -এ form of উতরা 'to cross, to get over' (CDIAL 1770 lists Bengali utarā) with যাওয়া: to get across a difficulty to the other side. The sense 'to pass a test' is a Bengali use.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: utre jāoyā
- Say it: utre jāoyā, once more
- Say it: ônek jhāmelār pôre āmrā utre gelām. — After a lot of trouble, we came through.

364.4 বিপর্যস্ত হওয়া (bipôrjôstô hôoyā) — to be devastated; to be thrown into turmoil

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a crisis, then the Bengali for poverty.

You'll want to know: বিপর্যস্ত হওয়া

বিপর্যস্ত হওয়া — bipôrjôstô hôoyā — "to be devastated; to be thrown into turmoil".

বন্যায় পুরো গ্রাম বিপর্যস্ত হল। bônyāy puro grām bipôrjôstô hôlô.

The whole village was devastated by the flood.

Past (he/she …): সেই শহরটা ঝড়ে বিপর্যস্ত হল, sei shôhôrṭā jhôṛe bipôrjôstô hôlô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বিপর্যস্ত হওয়া (bipôrjôstô hôoyā) is Sanskrit viparyasta, turned over or upset (Monier-Williams), with হওয়া: a town or a life turned upside down by a disaster. The sense 'devastated' is a Bengali use of that picture; the cause takes -এ: বন্যায়.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

বন্যার পরে গ্রামের মানুষ চরম বিপদে পড়ল।

bônyār pôre grāmer mānush chôrôm bipôde pôṛlô.

After the flood the villagers were in dire trouble.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চরম (chôrôm) is Sanskrit carama, last or ultimate (Monier-Williams): at the far end of the scale. Bengali uses it for the worst a hardship can get, চরম বিপদ, or the height of anything, চরম আনন্দ; that use is not one the dictionary gives.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মানানো (mānāno) is the causative of মানা 'to accept' (CDIAL 9857 lists Bengali mānā): to make someone accept, to bring them round. A colour or a dress মানায় when it suits the one wearing it.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: mānāno
- Say it: mānāno, once more
- Say it: sheshe āmi bābāke mānālām. — In the end I talked my father round.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an agreement reached, then the Bengali for a settlement, then say mānāno again

Before you move on

What does মানানো mean? ("To talk round; to win over; to suit".) Say it once more.

365.5 সর্বসম্মত (sôrbôsômmôtô) — unanimous

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a settlement, then the Bengali for to talk round.

You'll want to know: সর্বসম্মত

সর্বসম্মত — sôrbôsômmôtô — "unanimous".

সিদ্ধান্তটা সর্বসম্মত ছিল। siddhāntôṭā sôrbôsômmôtô chhilô.

The decision was unanimous.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সর্বসম্মত (sôrbôsômmôtô) is Sanskrit sarva, all, with sammata, agreed or approved (Monier-Williams): agreed by everyone.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons and opinions.

Your turn

- Say it: sôrbôsômmôtô
- Say it: sôrbôsômmôtô, once more
- Say it: siddhāntôṭā sôrbôsômmôtô chhilô. — The decision was unanimous.

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 366: I can say how likely something is and what follows if it happens.

366.1 সম্ভাবনা (sômbhābônā) — a likelihood; a chance

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to talk round, then the Bengali for unanimous.

You'll want to know: সম্ভাবনা

সম্ভাবনা — sômbhābônā — "a likelihood; a chance".

> আজ ঝড়ের সম্ভাবনা আছে, তাই বাইরে না গেলে ভালো।
> āj jhôṛer sômbhābônā āchhe, tāi bāire nā gele bhālo.
> There's a chance of a storm today, so it's better not to go out.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সম্ভাবনা (sômbhābônā) is Sanskrit sambhāvanā, supposing or assuming (Monier-Williams), from the same root as সম্ভব, possible. Bengali uses it for how likely a thing is.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: sômbhābônā
- Say it: sômbhābônā, once more
- Say it: āj jhôṛer sômbhābônā āchhe, tāi bāire nā gele bhālo. — There's a chance of a storm today, so it's better not to go out.

Before you move on

What does সম্ভাবনা mean? ("A likelihood; a chance".) Say it once more.

366.2 সম্ভবত (sômbhôbôtô) — probably

Before the new one: say the Bengali for unanimous, then the Bengali for a likelihood.

You'll want to know: সম্ভবত

সম্ভবত — sômbhôbôtô — "probably".

অরুণ যদি বাস না পায়, তাহলে সম্ভবত দেরি করবে।

ôrun jôdi bās nā pāy, tāhôle sômbhôbôtô deri kôrbe.

If Arun doesn't get a bus, he will probably be late.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সম্ভবত (sômbhôbôtô) is Sanskrit sambhava, arising or possible (Monier-Williams), with the adverb ending -tas, in its Bengali form:

'in all likelihood'. It sits beside the taught সম্ভব.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: sômbhôbôtô
- Say it: sômbhôbôtô, once more

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a likelihood, then the Bengali for probably.

You'll want to know: অনিবার্য

অনিবার্য — ônibārjô — "inevitable; unavoidable".

নিয়ম না মানলে দুর্ঘটনা অনিবার্য। niyôm nā mānle durghôṭônā ônibārjô.

If people don't follow the rules, an accident is inevitable.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অনিবার্য (ônibārjô) is Sanskrit anivārya, not to be warded off, unavoidable (Monier-Williams), with the negative a- at its head: what cannot be held back. It marks the likeliest outcome of all, the one that will surely follow.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ônibārjô
- Say it: ônibārjô, once more
- Say it: niyôm nā mānle durghôṭônā ônibārjô. — If people don't follow the rules, an accident is inevitable.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a likelihood, then the Bengali for probably, then say ônibārjô again

Before you move on

What does অনিবার্য mean? ("Inevitable; unavoidable".) Say it once more.

366.4 বিরল (birôl) — rare

Before you move on

What does বিরল mean? ("Rare".) Say it once more.

366.5 ধরে নেওয়া (dhôre neoyā) — to assume; to take for granted

Before the new one: say the Bengali for inevitable, then the Bengali for rare.

You'll want to know: ধরে নেওয়া

ধরে নেওয়া — dhôre neoyā — "to assume; to take for granted".

যদি ধরে নিই যে কাল ছুটি, তাহলে আমরা কোথায় যাব?

jôdi dhôre nii je kāl chhuṭi, tāhôle āmrā kothāy jābô?

If we assume tomorrow is a holiday, where shall we go?

Past (he/she …): তিনি ধরে নিলেন যে সবাই আসবে, tini dhôre nilen je sôbāi āsbe.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ধরে নেওয়া (dhôre neoyā) is ধরে, the -এ form of ধরা 'to hold' (CDIAL 6747), with নেওয়া 'to take' (CDIAL 6966): to take a thing as held, to assume it. What is assumed follows যে.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: dhôre neoyā
- Say it: dhôre neoyā, once more
- Say it: jôdi dhôre nii je kāl chhuṭi, tāhôle āmrā kothāy jābô? — If we assume tomorrow is a holiday, where shall we go?
- Recall: say the Bengali for inevitable, then the Bengali for rare, then say dhôre neoyā again

Before you move on

What does ধরে নেওয়া mean? ("To assume; to take for granted".) Say it once more.

367.1 অনুমান করা (ônumān kôrā) — to suppose; to infer

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for rare, then the Bengali for to assume.

You'll want to know: অনুমান করা

অনুমান করা — ônumān kôrā — "to suppose; to infer".

> আমি অনুমান করলাম যে বাস দেরি করলে অরুণ ট্যাক্সি নেবে।
> āmi ônumān kôrlām je bās deri kôrle ôrun ṭæksi nebe.
> I guessed that if the bus was late, Arun would take a taxi.

Past (he/she …): তিনি ঠিক অনুমান করলেন, tini ṭhik ônumān kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অনুমান করা (ônumān kôrā) is Sanskrit anumāna, inference (Monier-Williams), with করা: to reason from what you see to what you cannot.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ônumān kôrā
- Say it: ônumān kôrā, once more
- Say it: āmi ônumān kôrlām je bās deri kôrle ôrun ṭæksi nebe. — I guessed that if the bus was late, Arun would take a taxi.
- Recall: say the Bengali for rare, then the Bengali for to assume, then say ônumān kôrā again

Before you move on

What does অনুমান করা mean? ("To suppose; to infer".) Say it once more.

367.2 আন্দাজ করা (āndāj kôrā) — to estimate; to make a rough guess

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to assume, then the Bengali for to suppose.

You'll want to know: আন্দাজ করা

আন্দাজ করা — āndāj kôrā — "to estimate; to make a rough guess".

আন্দাজ করো, ট্যাক্সিতে গেলে কত খরচ হবে?

āndāj kôro, ṭæksite gele kôtô khôrôch hôbe?

Have a guess: how much will it cost if we go by taxi?

Past (he/she …): তিনি দামটা আন্দাজ করলেন, tini dāmṭā āndāj kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আন্দাজ করা (āndāj kôrā) is usually traced to Persian andāz, a measure or estimate, with করা: to judge an amount by eye.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: āndāj kôrā
- Say it: āndāj kôrā, once more
- Say it: āndāj kôro, ṭæksite gele kôtô khôrôch hôbe? — Have a guess: how much will it cost if we go by taxi?
- Recall: say the Bengali for to assume, then the Bengali for to suppose, then say āndāj kôrā again

Before you move on

What does আন্দাজ করা mean? ("To estimate; to make a rough guess".) Say it once more.

367.3 আভাস (ābhās) — a hint; an indication

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to suppose, then the Bengali for to estimate.

You'll want to know: আভাস

আভাস — ābhās — "a hint; an indication".

আকাশ কালো হলে আমরা ঝড়ের আভাস পাই। ākāsh kālo hôle āmrā jhôṛer ābhās pāi.

When the sky turns dark, we get a hint of a storm.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আভাস (ābhās) is Sanskrit ābhāsa, appearance (Monier-Williams). Bengali uses it for the faint appearance of something still to come, a hint.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ābhās
- Say it: ābhās, once more
- Say it: ākāsh kālo hôle āmrā jhôṛer ābhās pāi. — When the sky turns dark, we get a hint of a storm.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to suppose, then the Bengali for to estimate, then say ābhās again

Before you move on

What does আভাস mean? ("A hint; an indication".) Say it once more.

367.4 প্রত্যাশা (prôtyāshā) — an expectation

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to estimate, then the Bengali for a hint.

You'll want to know: প্রত্যাশা

প্রত্যাশা — prôtyāshā — "an expectation".

ফলাফল যদি প্রত্যাশার চেয়ে ভালো হয়, তাহলে আমরা পার্টি দেব। phôlāphôl jôdi prôtyāshār cheye bhālo hôy, tāhôle āmrā pārṭi debô.

If the results are better than expected, we'll throw a party.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

প্রত্যাশা (prôtyāshā) is Sanskrit pratyāśā, hope or expectation (Monier-Williams), with āśā, hope, at its heart.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: prôtyāshā
- Say it: prôtyāshā, once more
- Say it: phôlāphôl jôdi prôtyāshār cheye bhālo hôy, tāhôle āmrā pārṭi debô. — If the results are better than expected, we'll throw a party.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to estimate, then the Bengali for a hint, then say prôtyāshā again

Before you move on

What does প্রত্যাশা mean? ("An expectation".) Say it once more.

367.5 ভবিষ্যৎ (bhôbishyôt) — the future

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a hint, then the Bengali for an expectation.

You'll want to know: ভবিষ্যৎ

ভবিষ্যৎ — bhôbishyôt — "the future".

এখন টাকা জমালে ভবিষ্যৎ নিরাপদ হবে।

ekhôn ṭākā jômāle bhôbishyôt nirāpôd hôbe.

If you save money now, your future will be secure.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভবিষ্যৎ (bhôbishyôt) is Sanskrit bhaviṣyat, 'what is going to be' (Monier-Williams). The last letter is ৎ, a t with no vowel after it.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: bhôbishyôt
- Say it: bhôbishyôt, once more
- Say it: ekhôn ṭākā jômāle bhôbishyôt nirāpôd hôbe. — If you save money now, your future will be secure.

368.1 শর্ত (shôrtô) — a condition; a term (of an agreement)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an expectation, then the Bengali for the future.

You'll want to know: শর্ত

শর্ত — shôrtô — "a condition; a term (of an agreement)".

> আমার একটা শর্ত আছে: তুমি যদি আসো, তাহলে আমিও যাব।
> āmār ekṭā shôrtô āchhe: tumi jôdi āso, tāhôle āmio jābô.
> I have one condition: if you come, I'll go too.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

শর্ত (shôrtô) is usually traced to Arabic sharṭ, a condition, through Persian: the 'if' a deal depends on.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: shôrtô
- Say it: shôrtô, once more
- Say it: āmār ekṭā shôrtô āchhe: tumi jôdi āso, tāhôle āmio jābô. — I have one condition: if you come, I'll go too.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an expectation, then the Bengali for the future, then say shôrtô again

Before you move on

What does শর্ত mean? ("A condition; a term (of an agreement)".) Say it once more.

368.2 অবস্থা (ôbôsthā) — a state; a condition (of something)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for the future, then the Bengali for a condition.

You'll want to know: অবস্থা

অবস্থা — ôbôsthā — "a state; a condition (of something)".

রাস্তার অবস্থা খারাপ হলে আমরা বাসে যাব না। rāstār ôbôsthā khārāp hôle āmrā bāse jābô nā.

If the roads are in a bad state, we won't go by bus.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অবস্থা (ôbôsthā) is Sanskrit avasthā, a state or condition (Monier-Williams): how a thing or a person is at present.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ôbôsthā
- Say it: ôbôsthā, once more
- Say it: rāstār ôbôsthā khārāp hôle āmrā bāse jābô nā. — If the roads are in a bad state, we won't go by bus.
- Recall: say the Bengali for the future, then the Bengali for a condition, then say ôbôsthā again

Before you move on

What does অবস্থা mean? ("A state; a condition (of something)".) Say it once more.

368.3 পরিস্থিতি (pôristhiti) — a situation; circumstances

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a condition, then the Bengali for a state of things.

You'll want to know: পরিস্থিতি

পরিস্থিতি — pôristhiti — "a situation; circumstances".

> পরিস্থিতি বদলালে আমাকে ফোন করো।
> pôristhiti bôdlāle āmāke phon kôro.
> Call me if the situation changes.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পরিস্থিতি (pôristhiti) is a modern learned compound of Sanskrit pari-, around, and sthiti, a standing or state (Monier-Williams): how things stand all around. The compound itself is not in the dictionary.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: pôristhiti
- Say it: pôristhiti, once more
- Say it: pôristhiti bôdlāle āmāke phon kôro. — Call me if the situation changes.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a condition, then the Bengali for a state of things, then say pôristhiti again

Before you move on

What does পরিস্থিতি mean? ("A situation; circumstances".) Say it once more.

368.4 যতক্ষণ (jôtôkkhôn) — as long as

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a state of things, then the Bengali for a situation.

You'll want to know: যতক্ষণ

যতক্ষণ — jôtôkkhôn — "as long as".

ঝড় না থামলে আমরা যতক্ষণ দরকার এখানে থাকব। jhôṛ nā thāmle āmrā jôtôkkhôn dôrkār ekhāne thākbô.

If the storm doesn't stop, we'll stay here as long as we need to.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

যতক্ষণ (jôtôkkhôn) is যত, 'as much as', with Sanskrit kṣaṇa, a moment (Monier-Williams): for as many moments as. It is often answered by ততক্ষণ, 'for that long'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: jôtôkkhôn
- Say it: jôtôkkhôn, once more
- Say it: jhôṛ nā thāmle āmrā jôtôkkhôn dôrkār ekhāne thākbô. — If the storm doesn't stop, we'll stay here as long as we need to.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a state of things, then the Bengali for a situation, then say jôtôkkhôn again

Before you move on

What does যতক্ষণ mean? ("As long as".) Say it once more.

368.5 অথবা (ôthôbā) — or else; or otherwise

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a situation, then the Bengali for as long as.

You'll want to know: অথবা

অথবা — ôthôbā — "or else; or otherwise".

কাল ছুটি হলে আমরা সিনেমায় যাব, অথবা বাড়িতে থাকব।

kāl chhuṭi hôle āmrā sinemāy jābô, ôthôbā bāṛite thākbô.

If tomorrow is a holiday, we'll go to the cinema or else stay at home.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অথবা (ôthôbā) is Sanskrit athavā, 'or' (Monier-Williams). It is more weighty than বা and often offers a second plan.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ôthôbā
- Say it: ôthôbā, once more
- Say it: kāl chhuṭi hôle āmrā sinemāy jābô, ôthôbā bāṛite thākbô. — If tomorrow is a holiday, we'll go to the cinema or else stay at home.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a situation, then the Bengali for as long as, then say ôthôbā again

Before you move on

What does অথবা mean? ("Or else; or otherwise".) Say it once more.

Chapter 369

Whether or Not

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what happens whether or not something is true.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 369: I can say what happens whether or not something is true.

369.1 কিনা (kinā) — whether (or not)

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for as long as, then the Bengali for or else.

You'll want to know: কিনা

কিনা — kinā — "whether (or not)".

> অরুণ আসবে কিনা জানি না; এলে আমরা একসঙ্গে খাব।
> ôrun āsbe kinā jāni nā; ele āmrā eksôngge khābô.
> I don't know whether Arun will come; if he does, we'll eat together.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কিনা (kinā) is কি, 'what, whether' (CDIAL 3164 lists Bengali ki), with না, 'not': 'whether or not'. It comes after the verb it questions: আসবে

কিনা.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: kinā
- Say it: kinā, once more
- Say it: ôrun āsbe kinā jāni nā; ele āmrā eksôngge khābô. — I don't know whether Arun will come; if he does, we'll eat together.
- Recall: say the Bengali for as long as, then the Bengali for or else, then say kinā again

Before you move on

What does কিনা mean? ("Whether (or not)".) Say it once more.

369.2 এমনকি (emônki) — even

Before the new one: say the Bengali for or else, then the Bengali for whether.

You'll want to know: এমনকি

এমনকি — emônki — "even".

ঝড় হলে এমনকি বাসও বন্ধ থাকে।

jhôṛ hôle emônki bāso bôndhô thāke.

When there is a storm, even the buses stop running.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

এমনকি (emônki) is এমন, 'such, so', with কি, 'what' (CDIAL 3164 lists Bengali ki): 'is it even so?' The source of এমন is not settled. The word marks the most surprising member of a list.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: emônki
- Say it: emônki, once more
- Say it: jhôṛ hôle emônki bāso bôndhô thāke. — When there is a storm, even the buses stop running.
- Recall: say the Bengali for or else, then the Bengali for whether, then say emônki again

Before you move on

What does এমনকি mean? ("Even".) Say it once more.

369.3 অন্যথায় (ônyôthāy) — failing that; otherwise (formal)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for whether, then the Bengali for even.

You'll want to know: অন্যথায়

অন্যথায় — ônyôthāy — "failing that; otherwise (formal)".

যদি সময় থাকে, তাহলে আজ এসো, অন্যথায় কাল এসো।

jôdi sômôy thāke, tāhôle āj eso, ônyôthāy kāl eso.

If you have time, come today; failing that, come tomorrow.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অন্যথায় (ônyôthāy) is Sanskrit anyathā, otherwise (Monier-Williams), with the Bengali ending -য়. It is the formal partner of নাহলে, common on notices and in letters.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ônyôthāy
- Say it: ônyôthāy, once more
- Say it: jôdi sômôy thāke, tāhôle āj eso, ônyôthāy kāl eso. — If you have time, come today; failing that, come tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Bengali for whether, then the Bengali for even, then say ônyôthāy again

Before you move on

What does অন্যথায় mean? ("Failing that; otherwise (formal)".) Say it once more.

369.4 সত্ত্বেও (sôttveo) — in spite of; despite

Before the new one: say the Bengali for even, then the Bengali for failing that.

You'll want to know: সত্ত্বেও

সত্ত্বেও — sôttveo — "in spite of; despite".

শীত সত্ত্বেও খেলা হবে, কিন্তু ঝড় হলে বন্ধ হবে।

shīt sôttveo khælā hôbe, kintu jhôṛ hôle bôndhô hôbe.

The match will go ahead despite the cold, but if there is a storm it will be called off.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সত্ত্বেও (sôttveo) is Sanskrit sattva, being or existence (Monier-Williams), with the Bengali endings -এ and -ও: 'even with its being so'. The sense 'in spite of' is not one the dictionary gives; the word follows its noun: শীত সত্ত্বেও.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: sôttveo
- Say it: sôttveo, once more
- Say it: shīt sôttveo khælā hôbe, kintu jhôṛ hôle bôndhô hôbe. — The match will go ahead despite the cold, but if there is a storm it will be called off.
- Recall: say the Bengali for even, then the Bengali for failing that, then say sôttveo again

Before you move on

What does সত্ত্বেও mean? ("In spite of; despite".) Say it once more.

369.5 নির্ধারণ করা (nirdhārôn kôrā) — to determine; to fix (a date, a price)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for failing that, then the Bengali for in spite of.

You'll want to know: নির্ধারণ করা

নির্ধারণ করা — nirdhārôn kôrā — "to determine; to fix (a date, a price)".

আবহাওয়া ভালো থাকলে আমরা কাল খেলার তারিখ নির্ধারণ করব। ābôhāoyā bhālo thākle āmrā kāl khelār tārikh nirdhārôn kôrbô.

If the weather stays fine, we'll fix the date of the match tomorrow.

Past (he/she …): তিনি দামটা নির্ধারণ করলেন, tini dāmṭā nirdhārôn kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নির্ধারণ করা (nirdhārôn kôrā) is Sanskrit nirdhāraṇa, settling or ascertaining (Monier-Williams), with করা: to fix a date, a price or a rule.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: nirdhārôn kôrā
- Say it: nirdhārôn kôrā, once more
- Say it: ābôhāoyā bhālo thākle āmrā kāl khelār tārikh nirdhārôn kôrbô. — If the weather stays fine, we'll fix the date of the match tomorrow.

Before you move on

What does নির্ধারণ করা mean? ("To determine; to fix (a date, a price)".) Say it once more.

369.6 Looking back: from Making Sense of It to Whether or Not Say the Bengali for concentration and misled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- concentration, misled, to realise, to sense, clear

- a problem, a means, an alternative, an answer, to come through
- difficult, a crisis, poverty, to be devastated, extreme
- a difference of opinion, an agreement reached, a settlement, to talk round, unanimous
- a likelihood, probably, inevitable, rare, to assume
- to suppose, to estimate, a hint, an expectation, the future
- a condition, a state of things, a situation, as long as, or else
- whether, even, failing that, in spite of, to determine

Before you move on

Concentration? (মনোযোগ, mônojog.) Misled? (বিভ্রান্ত, bibhrāntô.) To realise? (উপলব্ধি করা, upôlôbdhi kôrā.) To sense? (বোধ করা, bodh kôrā.) Clear? Chapter 370

How Much

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how much, how little and how very.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 370: I can say how much, how little and how very.

370.1 খুব (khub) — very

Before the new one: say the Bengali for in spite of, then the Bengali for to determine.

You'll want to know: খুব

খুব — khub — "very".

> তুমি এলে আমি খুব খুশি হব।
> tumi ele āmi khub khushi hôbô.
> I'll be very happy if you come.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

খুব (khub) is usually traced to Persian khūb, good or fine. In Bengali it became the plain word for 'very'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: khub
- Say it: khub, once more
- Say it: tumi ele āmi khub khushi hôbô. — I'll be very happy if you come.
- Recall: say the Bengali for in spite of, then the Bengali for to determine, then say khub again

Before you move on

What does খুব mean? ("Very".) Say it once more.

370.2 ভীষণ (bhīshôn) — terribly; extremely

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to determine, then the Bengali for very.

You'll want to know: ভীষণ

ভীষণ — bhīshôn — "terribly; extremely".

রাস্তায় ভীষণ ভিড় থাকলে আমরা হেঁটে যাব। rāstāy bhīshôn bhiṛ thākle āmrā hẽṭe jābô.

If the streets are terribly crowded, we'll walk.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভীষণ (bhīshôn) is Sanskrit bhīṣaṇa, terrifying (Monier-Williams). Bengali speech uses it as English uses 'terribly', for anything extreme, good or bad.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: bhīshôn
- Say it: bhīshôn, once more
- Say it: rāstāy bhīshôn bhiṛ thākle āmrā hẽṭe jābô. — If the streets are terribly crowded, we'll walk.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to determine, then the Bengali for very, then say bhīshôn again

Before you move on

What does ভীষণ mean? ("Terribly; extremely".) Say it once more.

370.3 বেশি (beshi) — more; too much

Before the new one: say the Bengali for very, then the Bengali for extremely.

You'll want to know: বেশি

বেশি — beshi — "more; too much".

বেশি খেলে পেট ব্যথা করবে।

beshi khele peṭ bæthā kôrbe.

If you eat too much, you'll get a stomach ache.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বেশি (beshi) is usually traced to Persian bēsh, more. It means 'more' after -এর চেয়ে and 'too much' on its own.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: beshi
- Say it: beshi, once more
- Say it: beshi khele peṭ bæthā kôrbe. — If you eat too much, you'll get a stomach ache.
- Recall: say the Bengali for very, then the Bengali for extremely, then say beshi again

Before you move on

What does বেশি mean? ("More; too much".) Say it once more.

370.4 কম (kôm) — less; little

Before the new one: say the Bengali for extremely, then the Bengali for too much.

You'll want to know: কম

কম — kôm — "less; little".

দাম কম হলে আমি এটা কিনব।

dām kôm hôle āmi eṭā kinbô.

If the price is lower, I'll buy this.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কম (kôm) is usually traced to Persian kam, little: the opposite of বেশি.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: kôm
- Say it: kôm, once more
- Say it: dām kôm hôle āmi eṭā kinbô. — If the price is lower, I'll buy this.
- Recall: say the Bengali for extremely, then the Bengali for too much, then say kôm again

Before you move on

What does কম mean? ("Less; little".) Say it once more.

370.5 একটু (ekṭu) — a little; a bit

Before the new one: say the Bengali for too much, then the Bengali for less.

You'll want to know: একটু

একটু — ekṭu — "a little; a bit".

একটু আস্তে বললে আমি বুঝব।

ekṭu āste bôlle āmi bujhbô.

If you speak a bit more slowly, I'll understand.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

একটু (ekṭu) is এক, one (CDIAL 2462 lists Bengali ek), probably with a small-making ending: 'one little bit'. It softens a request: একটু বসো, do sit down.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ekṭu
- Say it: ekṭu, once more
- Say it: ekṭu āste bôlle āmi bujhbô. — If you speak a bit more slowly, I'll understand.
- Recall: say the Bengali for too much, then the Bengali for less, then say ekṭu again

Before you move on

What does একটু mean? ("A little; a bit".) Say it once more.

Chapter 371

Enough or Too Much

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say whether there is enough and where the limit is.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 371: I can say whether there is enough and where the limit is.

371.1 যথেষ্ট (jôtheshṭô) — enough; plenty

Before the new one: say the Bengali for less, then the Bengali for a bit.

You'll want to know: যথেষ্ট

যথেষ্ট — jôtheshṭô — "enough; plenty".

> যথেষ্ট টাকা থাকলে আমরা নতুন বাড়ি কিনব।
> jôtheshṭô ṭākā thākle āmrā nôtun bāṛi kinbô.
> If we have enough money, we'll buy a new house.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

যথেষ্ট (jôtheshṭô) is Sanskrit yatheṣṭa, 'as much as one wishes' (Monier-Williams). Bengali turned it into plain 'enough'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: jôtheshṭô
- Say it: jôtheshṭô, once more
- Say it: jôtheshṭô ṭākā thākle āmrā nôtun bāṛi kinbô. — If we have enough money, we'll buy a new house.

Before you move on

What does অতিরিক্ত mean? ("Extra; excessive".) Say it once more.

371.3 অল্প (ôlpô) — a little; a small amount

Before the new one: say the Bengali for enough, then the Bengali for excessive.

You'll want to know: অল্প

অল্প — ôlpô — "a little; a small amount".

অল্প নুন দিলে তরকারি ভালো হবে।

ôlpô nun dile tôrkāri bhālo hôbe.

If you add a little salt, the curry will be good.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অল্প (ôlpô) is Sanskrit alpa, small or little (Monier-Williams). It is a little more formal than একটু and can stand before a noun.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ôlpô
- Say it: ôlpô, once more
- Say it: ôlpô nun dile tôrkāri bhālo hôbe. — If you add a little salt, the curry will be good.

Before you move on

What does অল্প mean? ("A little; a small amount".) Say it once more.

371.4 জোগানো (jogāno) — to supply; to provide (for)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for excessive, then the Bengali for a small amount.

You'll want to know: জোগানো

জোগানো — jogāno — "to supply; to provide (for)".

সরকার টাকা জোগালে নতুন স্কুল হবে। sôrkār ṭākā jogāle nôtun skul hôbe.

If the government provides the money, there will be a new school.

Past (he/she …): তিনি সবার খাবার জোগালেন, tini sôbār khābār jogālen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

জোগানো (jogāno) is listed by CDIAL 10529 (yōgyá́) as Bengali jogāna, 'to supply': to fit out what is needed.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: jogāno

Before you move on

What does জোগানো mean? ("To supply; to provide (for)".) Say it once more.

371.5 সীমা (sīmā) — a limit; a boundary

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a small amount, then the Bengali for to supply.

You'll want to know: সীমা

সীমা — sīmā — "a limit; a boundary".

খরচ সীমার বেশি হলে আমরা কাজটা বন্ধ করব।

khôrôch sīmār beshi hôle āmrā kājṭā bôndhô kôrbô.

If the cost goes over the limit, we'll stop the work.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সীমা (sīmā) is Sanskrit sīmā, a boundary (Monier-Williams). It is the border of a field and any limit not to be passed.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: sīmā
- Say it: sīmā, once more
- Say it: khôrôch sīmār beshi hôle āmrā kājṭā bôndhô kôrbô. — If the cost goes over the limit, we'll stop the work.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a small amount, then the Bengali for to supply, then say sīmā again

Before you move on

What does সীমা mean? ("A limit; a boundary".) Say it once more.

Chapter 372

372.1 বাড়া (bāṛā) — to grow; to go up (in amount)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to supply, then the Bengali for a limit.

You'll want to know: বাড়া

বাড়া — bāṛā — "to grow; to go up (in amount)".

> দাম বাড়লে লোকে কম কেনে।
> dām bāṛle loke kôm kene.
> When prices go up, people buy less.

Past (he/she …): সেই নদীর জল বাড়ল, sei nôdīr jôl bāṛlô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বাড়া (bāṛā) is a tadbhava of Sanskrit várdhatē, grows (CDIAL 11376 lists Bengali bāṛā). It is the partner of the taught বাড়ানো: prices বাড়ে by themselves; someone বাড়ায় them.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: bāṛā
- Say it: bāṛā, once more
- Say it: dām bāṛle loke kôm kene. — When prices go up, people buy less.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to supply, then the Bengali for a limit, then say bāṛā again

You'll want to know: দ্বিগুণ

দ্বিগুণ — dvigun — "double; twice as much".

রাতে গেলে ভাড়া দ্বিগুণ হবে।

rāte gele bhāṛā dvigun hôbe.

If you go at night, the fare will be double.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দ্বিগুণ (dvigun) is Sanskrit dviguṇa, dvi 'two' with guṇa 'a fold': twofold (Monier-Williams).

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: dvigun
- Say it: dvigun, once more
- Say it: rāte gele bhāṛā dvigun hôbe. — If you go at night, the fare will be double.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to grow, then the Bengali for to decrease, then say dvigun again

Before you move on

What does দ্বিগুণ mean? ("Double; twice as much".) Say it once more.

372.4 স্তর (stôr) — a level; a layer

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to decrease, then the Bengali for twice as much.

You'll want to know: স্তর

স্তর — stôr — "a level; a layer".

বৃষ্টির পরে নদীর জলের স্তর অনেক বাড়ল। brishṭir pôre nôdīr jôler stôr ônek bāṛlô.

After the rain the water level in the river rose a lot.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

স্তর (stôr) is a tatsama, Sanskrit stara, 'a layer' (CDIAL 13685). In modern use a layer of something has also become its level: জলের স্তর, the water level.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: stôr
- Say it: stôr, once more
- Say it: brishṭir pôre nôdīr jôler stôr ônek bāṛlô. — After the rain the water level in the river rose a lot.

373.1 একেবারে (ekebāre) — completely; absolutely

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a level, then the Bengali for an amount.

You'll want to know: একেবারে

একেবারে — ekebāre — "completely; absolutely".

> এই রাস্তায় গেলে আমরা একেবারে ঠিক সময়ে পৌঁছাব।
> ei rāstāy gele āmrā ekebāre ṭhik sômôye poũchhābô.
> If we take this road, we'll arrive exactly on time.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

একেবারে (ekebāre) is এক, one (CDIAL 2462), with বার, a time or turn, and the Bengali -এ: 'all at one go', so completely. With না it means 'not at all'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ekebāre
- Say it: ekebāre, once more
- Say it: ei rāstāy gele āmrā ekebāre ṭhik sômôye poũchhābô. — If we take this road, we'll arrive exactly on time.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a level, then the Bengali for an amount, then say ekebāre again

Before you move on

What does একেবারে mean? ("Completely; absolutely".) Say it once more.

373.2 সম্পূর্ণ (sômpūrnô) — complete; entire

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an amount, then the Bengali for absolutely.

378.1 আয়োজন (āyojôn) — preparations (for an event); the organising

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to surpass, then the Bengali for to accomplish.

You'll want to know: আয়োজন

আয়োজন — āyojôn — "preparations (for an event); the organising".

> বিয়ের আয়োজন সময়মতো শেষ না হলে খুব ঝামেলা হবে।
> biyer āyojôn sômôymôto shesh nā hôle khub jhāmelā hôbe.
> If the wedding preparations aren't finished in time, there will be a lot of trouble.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আয়োজন (āyojôn) is Sanskrit āyojana, a joining or collecting (Monier-Williams). The Bengali sense, all the preparations and arrangements for an event, is not one the dictionary gives; it goes with করা: বিয়ের আয়োজন করা.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: āyojôn
- Say it: āyojôn, once more

- Say it: ghôṇṭā
- Say it: ghôṇṭā, once more
- Say it: ṭrenṭā ek ghôṇṭā derite elô. — The train came an hour late.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a local train, then the Bengali for to blow a whistle, then say ghôṇṭā again

Before you move on

What does ঘণ্টা mean? ("An hour; a bell".) Say it once more.

385.2 ঘড়ি (ghôṛi) — a clock; a watch

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to blow a whistle, then the Bengali for an hour.

You'll want to know: ঘড়ি

ঘড়ি — ghôṛi — "a clock; a watch".

আমার ঘড়িটা হারিয়ে গেছে।

āmār ghôṛiṭā hāriye gechhe.

My watch has gone missing.

One word for the clock on the wall and the watch on your wrist.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঘড়ি (ghôṛi) goes back to Sanskrit ghaṭikā, "a small water-jar" (Monier-Williams): a pierced bowl that sank in a set time was an old Indian clock, and the word probably passed from the bowl to the time it kept and then to any clock.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ghôṛi
- Say it: ghôṛi, once more
- Say it: āmār ghôṛiṭā hāriye gechhe. — My watch has gone missing.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to blow a whistle, then the Bengali for an hour, then say ghôṛi again

Before you move on

What does ঘড়ি mean? ("A clock; a watch".) Say it once more.

385.3 টিকটিক করা (ṭikṭik kôrā) — to tick (of a clock)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an hour, then the Bengali for a clock.

You'll want to know: টিকটিক করা

টিকটিক করা — ṭikṭik kôrā — "to tick (of a clock)".

স্টেশনের বড় ঘড়িটা টিকটিক করছিল। sṭeshôner bôṛo ghôṛiṭā ṭikṭik kôrchhilô.

The big station clock was ticking.

Past (he/she …): সেই ঘড়ি টিকটিক করল, sei ghôṛi ṭikṭik kôrlô. টিকটিকি, a gecko, is named the same way, for its clicking call.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

টিকটিক করা (ṭikṭik kôrā) joins টিকটিক, an imitative word for the tick of a clock, to করা, to do. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭikṭik kôrā
- Say it: ṭikṭik kôrā, once more
- Say it: ṣṭeshôner bôṛo ghôṛiṭā ṭikṭik kôrchhilô. — The big station clock was ticking.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an hour, then the Bengali for a clock, then say ṭikṭik kôrā again

Before you move on

What does টিকটিক করা mean? ("To tick (of a clock)".) Say it once more.

385.4 অপেক্ষা করা (ôpekkhā kôrā) — to wait

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a clock, then the Bengali for to tick (of a clock).

You'll want to know: অপেক্ষা করা

অপেক্ষা করা — ôpekkhā kôrā — "to wait".

আমরা প্ল্যাটফর্মে এক ঘণ্টা অপেক্ষা করলাম।

āmrā plæṭphôrme ek ghôṇṭā ôpekkhā kôrlām.

We waited on the platform for an hour.

Past (he/she …): তিনি অপেক্ষা করলেন, tini ôpekkhā kôrlen.

The one you wait for takes -এর জন্য: ট্রেনের জন্য অপেক্ষা করা, to wait for the train.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অপেক্ষা করা (ôpekkhā kôrā) joins Sanskrit apekṣā, "looking round, regard, expectation" (Monier-Williams), to করা, to do; Bengali narrowed the looking-out to waiting.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ôpekkhā kôrā
- Say it: ôpekkhā kôrā, once more
- Say it: āmrā plæṭphôrme ek ghôṇṭā ôpekkhā kôrlām. — We waited on the platform for an hour.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a clock, then the Bengali for to tick (of a clock), then say ôpekkhā kôrā again

Before you move on

What does অপেক্ষা করা mean? ("To wait".) Say it once more.

385.5 বেঞ্চ (bench) — a bench

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to tick (of a clock), then the Bengali for to wait.

You'll want to know: বেঞ্চ

বেঞ্চ — bench — "a bench".

প্ল্যাটফর্মের বেঞ্চে বসে আমরা দুই ঘণ্টা অপেক্ষা করলাম। plæṭphôrmer benche bôse āmrā dui ghôṇṭā ôpekkhā kôrlām.

We sat on a bench on the platform and waited for two hours.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বেঞ্চ (bench) is borrowed from English bench; ঞ্চ is the n-ch joined letter.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bench
- Say it: bench, once more
- Say it: plæṭphôrmer benche bôse āmrā dui ghôṇṭā ôpekkhā kôrlām. — We sat on a bench on the platform and waited for two hours.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to tick (of a clock), then the Bengali for to wait, then say bench again

Before you move on

What does বেঞ্চ mean? ("A bench".) Say it once more.

Porters and Luggage

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can get help to carry and unload my bags.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 386: I can get help to carry and unload my bags.

386.1 কুলি (kuli) — a porter

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to wait, then the Bengali for a bench.

You'll want to know: কুলি

কুলি — kuli — "a porter".

> কুলি আমার ভারী মালপত্র তুলল।
> kuli āmār bhārī mālpôtrô tullô.
> The porter lifted my heavy luggage.

At a big station the porters wear red shirts and carry loads on the head.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কুলি (kuli) has an origin that is not settled: it is often traced to the South Indian word for wages, Tamil kūli (DEDR 1905), so that a porter is someone paid by the job.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kuli
- Say it: kuli, once more
- Say it: kuli āmār bhārī mālpôtrô tullô. — The porter lifted my heavy luggage.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to wait, then the Bengali for a bench, then say kuli again

Before you move on

What does কুলি mean? ("A porter".) Say it once more.

386.2 সুটকেস (suṭkes) — a suitcase

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a bench, then the Bengali for a porter.

You'll want to know: সুটকেস

সুটকেস — suṭkes — "a suitcase".

আমি সুটকেসটা খাটের নিচে রাখলাম।

āmi suṭkesṭā khāṭer niche rākhlām.

I put the suitcase under the bed.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সুটকেস (suṭkes) is borrowed from English suitcase, a case for a suit of clothes, with the English t said as the hard Bengali ট.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: suṭkes
- Say it: suṭkes, once more
- Say it: āmi suṭkesṭā khāṭer niche rākhlām. — I put the suitcase under the bed.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a bench, then the Bengali for a porter, then say suṭkes again

Before you move on

What does সুটকেস mean? ("A suitcase".) Say it once more.

386.3 ট্রলি (ṭrôli) — a trolley

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a porter, then the Bengali for a suitcase.

You'll want to know: ট্রলি

ট্রলি — ṭrôli — "a trolley".

বিমানবন্দরে আমরা একটা ট্রলি নিলাম। bimānbôndôre āmrā ekṭā ṭrôli nilām.

We took a trolley at the airport.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ট্রলি (ṭrôli) is borrowed from English trolley, the wheeled cart of airports and stations.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭrôli
- Say it: ṭrôli, once more
- Say it: bimānbôndôre āmrā ekṭā ṭrôli nilām. — We took a trolley at the airport.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a porter, then the Bengali for a suitcase, then say ṭrôli again

Before you move on

What does ট্রলি mean? ("A trolley".) Say it once more.

386.4 নামানো (nāmāno) — to take down; to unload

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a suitcase, then the Bengali for a trolley.

You'll want to know: নামানো

নামানো — nāmāno — "to take down; to unload".

অরুণ তাক থেকে বাক্সটা নামাল। ôrun tāk theke bāksôṭā nāmālô.

Arun took the box down from the shelf.

Past (he/she …): তিনি বাক্সটা নামালেন, tini bāksôṭā nāmālen.

The causing partner of নামা, to get down: you নামো from a bus, and you নামাও a box from a shelf.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নামানো (nāmāno) is the causing form of নামা, "to get down", which CDIAL lists as Bengali nāmā, "to descend", under Sanskrit namrá, "bent, bowed" (CDIAL 6964).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: nāmāno
- Say it: nāmāno, once more
- Say it: ôrun tāk theke bāksôṭā nāmālô. — Arun took the box down from the shelf.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a suitcase, then the Bengali for a trolley, then say nāmāno again

Before you move on

What does নামানো mean? ("To take down; to unload".) Say it once more.

386.5 বহন করা (bôhôn kôrā) — to carry (a load); to bear

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a trolley, then the Bengali for to unload.

You'll want to know: বহন করা

বহন করা — bôhôn kôrā — "to carry (a load); to bear".

ট্রলিটা আমাদের সব মালপত্র বহন করল।

ṭrôliṭā āmāder sôb mālpôtrô bôhôn kôrlô.

The trolley carried all our luggage.

Past (he/she …): সেই ট্রাক মালপত্র বহন করল, sei ṭrāk mālpôtrô bôhôn kôrlô.

A careful word, common in writing and on signs; in talk people say নিয়ে যাওয়া, to take along.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বহন করা (bôhôn kôrā) joins Sanskrit vahana, "bearing, carrying, conveying" (Monier-Williams), to করা, to do.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bôhôn kôrā
- Say it: bôhôn kôrā, once more
- Say it: ṭrôliṭā āmāder sôb mālpôtrô bôhôn kôrlô. — The trolley carried all our luggage.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a trolley, then the Bengali for to unload, then say bôhôn kôrā again

Before you move on

What does বহন করা mean? ("To carry (a load); to bear".) Say it once more.

Chapter 387

Ways and Destinations

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the way, where a trip ends and the journey back.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 387: I can talk about the way, where a trip ends and the journey back.

387.1 পথ (pôth) — a way; a path

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for to unload, then the Bengali for to carry (a load).

You'll want to know: পথ

পথ — pôth — "a way; a path".

> গ্রামের পথে আমরা একটা পুকুর দেখলাম।
> grāmer pôthe āmrā ekṭā pukur dekhlām.
> On the village path we saw a pond.

পথে, on the way: পথে দেখা হল, we met on the way. রাস্তা is the road itself; পথ is also the way you take.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পথ (pôth) is Sanskrit patha, "a way, a path, a road" (Monier-Williams), the stem Sanskrit uses at the end of compounds, taken over whole.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pôth
- Say it: pôth, once more
- Say it: grāmer pôthe āmrā ekṭā pukur dekhlām. — On the village path we saw a pond.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to unload, then the Bengali for to carry (a load), then say pôth again

Before you move on

What does পথ mean? ("A way; a path".) Say it once more.

387.2 গন্তব্য (gôntôbyô) — a destination

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to carry (a load), then the Bengali for a path.

You'll want to know: গন্তব্য

গন্তব্য — gôntôbyô — "a destination".

আমাদের গন্তব্য একটা ছোট গ্রাম। āmāder gôntôbyô ekṭā chhoṭo grām.

Our destination is a small village.

A word of signs and tickets as much as of talk: গন্তব্য স্টেশন, the destination station.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

গন্তব্য (gôntôbyô) is Sanskrit gantavya, "to be gone to, to be reached" (Monier-Williams), a form of gam, to go: the place you must go to.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: gôntôbyô
- Say it: gôntôbyô, once more
- Say it: āmāder gôntôbyô ekṭā chhoṭo grām. — Our destination is a small village.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to carry (a load), then the Bengali for a path, then say gôntôbyô again

Before you move on

What does গন্তব্য mean? ("A destination".) Say it once more.

387.3 সফর (sôphôr) — a trip; a tour

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a path, then the Bengali for a destination.

You'll want to know: সফর

সফর — sôphôr — "a trip; a tour".

আমাদের সফর সাত দিনের ছিল।

āmāder sôphôr sāt diner chhilô.

Our trip lasted seven days.

Often a trip with a purpose: an official tour, a team's tour abroad.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সফর (sôphôr) is usually traced to Arabic safar, "a journey", which reached Bengali through Persian.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: sôphôr
- Say it: sôphôr, once more
- Say it: āmāder sôphôr sāt diner chhilô. — Our trip lasted seven days.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a path, then the Bengali for a destination, then say sôphôr again

Before you move on

What does সফর mean? ("A trip; a tour".) Say it once more.

387.4 যাতায়াত করা (jātāyāt kôrā) — to commute; to go back and forth

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a destination, then the Bengali for a trip.

You'll want to know: যাতায়াত করা

যাতায়াত করা — jātāyāt kôrā — "to commute; to go back and forth".

মীরা রোজ বাসে যাতায়াত করে।

mīrā roj bāse jātāyāt kôre.

Mira commutes by bus every day.

Past (he/she …): তিনি ট্রেনে যাতায়াত করতেন, tini ṭrene jātāyāt kôrten.
The noun alone is যাতায়াত, the coming and going: এই রাস্তায় যাতায়াত, the traffic on this road.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

যাতায়াত করা (jātāyāt kôrā) joins Sanskrit yātāyāta, "going and coming" (Monier-Williams), a pairing of yāta, gone, and āyāta, come, to করা, to do.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: jātāyāt kôrā
- Say it: jātāyāt kôrā, once more
- Say it: mīrā roj bāse jātāyāt kôre. — Mira commutes by bus every day.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a destination, then the Bengali for a trip, then say jātāyāt kôrā again

Before you move on

What does যাতায়াত করা mean? ("To commute; to go back and forth".) Say it once more.

387.5 ফিরতি (phirti) — return (of a journey); on the way back

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a trip, then the Bengali for to commute.

You'll want to know: ফিরতি

ফিরতি — phirti — "return (of a journey); on the way back".

ফিরতি পথে আমরা মামার বাড়িতে থামলাম। phirti pôthe āmrā māmār bāṛite thāmlām.

On the way back we stopped at my uncle's house.

It stands before its noun: ফিরতি টিকিট, a return ticket; ফিরতি ট্রেন, the train back.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ফিরতি (phirti) is built on the stem ফির- of ফেরা, "to return", which CDIAL lists as Bengali phirā, "to turn", under the reconstructed phirati, "moves, wanders, turns" (CDIAL 9078).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: phirti
- Say it: phirti, once more
- Say it: phirti pôthe āmrā māmār bāṛite thāmlām. — On the way back we stopped at my uncle's house.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a trip, then the Bengali for to commute, then say phirti again

Before you move on

What does ফিরতি mean? ("Return (of a journey); on the way back".) Say it once more.

Chapter 388

Trams, the Metro and Autos

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 388: I can choose between a tram, the metro and an auto, and run for the bus.

388.1 ট্রাম (ṭrām) — a tram

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for to commute, then the Bengali for return (of a journey).

You'll want to know: ট্রাম

ট্রাম — ṭrām — "a tram".

> ট্রামটা ধীরে চলে, কিন্তু ভাড়া সস্তা।
> ṭrāmṭā dhīre chôle, kintu bhāṛā sôstā.
> The tram is slow, but the fare is cheap.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ট্রাম (ṭrām) is borrowed from English tram, short for tramway.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭrām
- Say it: ṭrām, once more
- Say it: ṭrāmṭā dhīre chôle, kintu bhāṛā sôstā. — The tram is slow, but the fare is cheap.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to commute, then the Bengali for return (of a journey), then say ṭrām again

Before you move on

What does ট্রাম mean? ("A tram".) Say it once more.

388.2 মেট্রো (meṭro) — the metro; an underground railway

Before the new one: say the Bengali for return (of a journey), then the Bengali for a tram.

You'll want to know: মেট্রো

মেট্রো — meṭro — "the metro; an underground railway".

মেট্রো ট্রামের চেয়ে দ্রুত।

meṭro ṭrāmer cheye drutô.

The metro is faster than the tram.

মেট্রোতে, by metro, on the metro.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মেট্রো (meṭro) is borrowed from English metro, short for metropolitan railway.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: meṭro
- Say it: meṭro, once more
- Say it: meṭro ṭrāmer cheye drutô. — The metro is faster than the tram.
- Recall: say the Bengali for return (of a journey), then the Bengali for a tram, then say meṭro again

Before you move on

What does মেট্রো mean? ("The metro; an underground railway".) Say it once more.

388.3 অটো (ôṭo) — an autorickshaw

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a tram, then the Bengali for the metro.

You'll want to know: অটো

অটো — ôṭo — "an autorickshaw".

স্টেশন থেকে আমরা অটোতে বাড়ি ফিরলাম। sṭeshôn theke āmrā ôṭote bāṛi phirlām.

We came home from the station by auto.

The three-wheeler with a motor; a রিকশা is pulled or pedalled.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অটো (ôṭo) is borrowed from English auto, clipped from autorickshaw; the first letter is অ, said as an open ô.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ôṭo
- Say it: ôṭo, once more
- Say it: ṣteshôn theke āmrā ôṭote bāṛi phirlām. — We came home from the station by auto.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a tram, then the Bengali for the metro, then say ôṭo again

Before you move on

What does অটো mean? ("An autorickshaw".) Say it once more.

388.4 ভ্যান (bhæn) — a van; a cycle van

Before the new one: say the Bengali for the metro, then the Bengali for an autorickshaw.

You'll want to know: ভ্যান

ভ্যান — bhæn — "a van; a cycle van".

একটা ভ্যান আমাদের মালপত্র স্টেশনে নিয়ে গেল।

ekṭā bhæn āmāder mālpôtrô ṣteshône niye gelô.

A van took our luggage to the station.

In a small town a ভ্যান is often a pedalled tricycle with a flat wooden bed.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভ্যান (bhæn) is borrowed from English van; Bengali has no v, so the word begins with ভ, and the y-phala gives the English vowel æ.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bhæn
- Say it: bhæn, once more
- Say it: ekṭā bhæn āmāder mālpôtrô ṣṭeshône niye gelô. — A van took our luggage to the station.
- Recall: say the Bengali for the metro, then the Bengali for an autorickshaw, then say bhæn again

Before you move on

What does ভ্যান mean? ("A van; a cycle van".) Say it once more.

388.5 দৌড়ানো (douṛāno) — to race; to run fast

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an autorickshaw, then the Bengali for a van.

You'll want to know: দৌড়ানো

দৌড়ানো — douṛāno — "to race; to run fast".

অরুণ দৌড়ে বাসে উঠল।

ôrun douṛe bāse uṭhlô.

Arun ran and got on the bus.

Past (he/she …): তিনি দৌড়ালেন, tini douṛālen.
The -এ form দৌড়ে is the one you hear most: দৌড়ে এল, came running.
The first vowel sign is ৌ, the vowel ou.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দৌড়ানো (douṛāno) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali dauṛā and dauṛāna, "to run", under Sanskrit drávati, "runs" (CDIAL 6624), and notes that the word probably came east from the languages to the west.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: douṛāno
- Say it: douṛāno, once more
- Say it: ôrun douṛe bāse uṭhlô. — Arun ran and got on the bus.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an autorickshaw, then the Bengali for a van, then say douṛāno again

Before you move on

What does দৌড়ানো mean? ("To race; to run fast".) Say it once more.

Chapter 389

Drivers and Conductors

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

389.1 চালক (chālôk) — a driver

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for a van, then the Bengali for to race.

You'll want to know: চালক

চালক — chālôk — "a driver".

> বাসের চালক হঠাৎ বাস থামালেন।
> bāser chālôk hôṭhāt bās thāmālen.
> The bus driver suddenly stopped the bus.

Beside চালানো, to drive: the চালক is the one who চালায়.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চালক (chālôk) is a Sanskrit-style formation built from cāl-, the causing stem of cal, "to move, to stir" (Monier-Williams), with the ending -ক for the one who does a thing: one who makes something go. Monier-Williams records cālaka only in an unrelated old sense, so the driver is a modern formation, the noun beside চালানো.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: chālôk
- Say it: chālôk, once more
- Say it: bāser chālôk hôṭhāt bās thāmālen. — The bus driver suddenly stopped the bus.

Before you move on

What does চালক mean? ("A driver".) Say it once more.

389.2 কন্ডাক্টর (kônḍākṭôr) — a bus conductor

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to race, then the Bengali for a driver.

You'll want to know: কন্ডাক্টর

কন্ডাক্টর — kônḍākṭôr — "a bus conductor".

কন্ডাক্টর আমার কাছে ভাড়া চাইলেন। kônḍākṭôr āmār kāchhe bhāṛā chāilen.

The conductor asked me for the fare.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কন্ডাক্টর (kônḍākṭôr) is borrowed from English conductor, with the English d and t said as the hard Bengali ড and ট.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kônḍākṭôr
- Say it: kônḍākṭôr, once more
- Say it: kônḍākṭôr āmār kāchhe bhāṛā chāilen. — The conductor asked me for the fare.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to race, then the Bengali for a driver, then say kônḍākṭôr again

Before you move on

What does কন্ডাক্টর mean? ("A bus conductor".) Say it once more.

389.3 হেলমেট (helmeṭ) — a helmet

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a driver, then the Bengali for a bus conductor.

You'll want to know: হেলমেট

হেলমেট — helmeṭ — "a helmet".

মোটরসাইকেলে হেলমেট পরতে হবে। moṭôrsāikele helmeṭ pôrte hôbe.

On a motorbike you have to wear a helmet.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হেলমেট (helmeṭ) is borrowed from English helmet, with the final t said as ট.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: helmeṭ
- Say it: helmeṭ, once more
- Say it: moṭôrsāikele helmeṭ pôrte hôbe. — On a motorbike you have to wear a helmet.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a driver, then the Bengali for a bus conductor, then say helmeṭ again

Before you move on

What does হেলমেট mean? ("A helmet".) Say it once more.

389.4 ইশারা করা (ishārā kôrā) — to signal; to make a sign

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a bus conductor, then the Bengali for a helmet.

You'll want to know: ইশারা করা

ইশারা করা — ishārā kôrā — "to signal; to make a sign".

কন্ডাক্টর হাত তুলে চালককে থামার ইশারা করলেন। kôndṛākṭôr hāt tule chālôkke thāmār ishārā kôrlen.

The conductor raised his hand and signalled the driver to stop.

Past (he/she …): তিনি চালককে ইশারা করলেন, tini chālôkke ishārā kôrlen.

The noun alone is ইশারা, a sign or a hint: চোখের ইশারা, a sign with the eyes.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ইশারা করা (ishārā kôrā) joins ইশারা, "a sign, a gesture", usually traced to Arabic ishāra, "a pointing, a signal", through Persian, to করা, to do.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ishārā kôrā
- Say it: ishārā kôrā, once more
- Say it: kôṇḍākṭôr hāt tule chālôkke thāmār ishārā kôrlen. — The conductor raised his hand and signalled the driver to stop.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a bus conductor, then the Bengali for a helmet, then say ishārā kôrā again

Before you move on

What does ইশারা করা mean? ("To signal; to make a sign".) Say it once more.

389.5 হাঁকা (hā̃kā) — to call out; to cry (stops or wares)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a helmet, then the Bengali for to signal.

You'll want to know: হাঁকা

হাঁকা — hā̃kā — "to call out; to cry (stops or wares)".

কন্ডাক্টর পাড়ার নাম হাঁকলেন। kônḍākṭôr pāṛār nām hā̃klen.

The conductor called out the name of the neighbourhood.

Past (he/she …): তিনি নাম হাঁকলেন, tini nām hā̃klen.

Conductors হাঁকে the stops from the door; hawkers হাঁকে their goods in the lane.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হাঁকা (hā̃kā) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali hā̃kā, "to call, to drive off", under Sanskrit hakkayati, "calls to" (CDIAL 13939).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: hā̃kā
- Say it: hā̃kā, once more
- Say it: kônḍākṭôr pāṛār nām hā̃klen. — The conductor called out the name of the neighbourhood.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a helmet, then the Bengali for to signal, then say hā̃kā again

What does হাঁকা mean? ("To call out; to cry (stops or wares)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 390

Highways and Bends

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a highway, its bends, its tar and its potholes.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 390: I can describe a highway, its bends, its tar and its potholes.

390.1 সড়ক (sôṛôk) — a highway; a main road

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for to signal, then the Bengali for to call out.

You'll want to know: সড়ক

সড়ক — sôṛôk — "a highway; a main road".

> নতুন সড়কে বাস দ্রুত চলে।
> nôtun sôṛôke bās drutô chôle.
> Buses go fast on the new highway.

রাস্তা is any road; সড়ক is a main road between towns, the word on maps: জাতীয় সড়ক, a national highway.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সড়ক (sôṛôk) probably belongs with Sanskrit sṛtí, "a road, a path", the entry where CDIAL sets Bengali saṛak, "a road" (CDIAL 13577); the Hindi word is filed under a second entry as well (CDIAL 12269), so the link is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: sôṛôk
- Say it: sôṛôk, once more
- Say it: nôtun sôṛôke bās drutô chôle. — Buses go fast on the new highway.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to signal, then the Bengali for to call out, then say sôṛôk again

Before you move on

What does সড়ক mean? ("A highway; a main road".) Say it once more.

390.2 বাঁক (bā̃k) — a bend; a turn (in a road or river)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to call out, then the Bengali for a highway.

You'll want to know: বাঁক

বাঁক — bā̃k — "a bend; a turn (in a road or river)".

সামনের বাঁকে বাসটা ধীরে চলল।

sāmner bā̃ke bāsṭā dhīre chôllô.

At the bend ahead the bus slowed down.

বাঁকা, crooked, is the same root as an adjective.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বাঁক (bā̃k) is inherited: CDIAL gives vaṅka, "bent, crooked", with the sense "a bend of a river", and lists Bengali bā̃kā, "crooked", under it (CDIAL 11191); the nasal of vaṅ survives as the ঁ.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bā̃k
- Say it: bā̃k, once more
- Say it: sāmner bā̃ke bāsṭā dhīre chôllô. — At the bend ahead the bus slowed down.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to call out, then the Bengali for a highway, then say bā̃k again

Before you move on

What does বাঁক mean? ("A bend; a turn (in a road or river)".) Say it once more.

390.3 গর্ত (gôrtô) — a hole; a pothole

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a highway, then the Bengali for a bend.

You'll want to know: গর্ত

গর্ত — gôrtô — "a hole; a pothole".

গাড়িটা একটা গর্তে পড়ল।

gāṛiṭā ekṭā gôrte pôṛlô.

The car went into a pothole.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

গর্ত (gôrtô) is Sanskrit garta, "a hollow, a hole, a pit" (Monier-Williams), taken over whole as a tatsama.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: gôrtô
- Say it: gôrtô, once more
- Say it: gāṛiṭā ekṭā gôrte pôṛlô. — The car went into a pothole.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a highway, then the Bengali for a bend, then say gôrtô again

Before you move on

What does গর্ত mean? ("A hole; a pothole".) Say it once more.

390.4 পিচ (pich) — tar (on a road)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a bend, then the Bengali for a pothole.

You'll want to know: পিচ

পিচ — pich — "tar (on a road)".

গরমে রাস্তার পিচ নরম হয়ে গেল। gôrôme rāstār pich nôrôm hôye gelô.

In the heat the tar on the road went soft.

পিচের রাস্তা, a tarred road; a কাঁচা রাস্তা is a dirt road.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পিচ (pich) is borrowed from English pitch, the black tar that roads are sealed with.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pich
- Say it: pich, once more
- Say it: gôrôme rāstār pich nôrôm hôye gelô. — In the heat the tar on the road went soft.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a bend, then the Bengali for a pothole, then say pich again

Before you move on

What does পিচ mean? ("Tar (on a road)".) Say it once more.

390.5 গড়ানো (gôṛāno) — to roll; to roll down

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a pothole, then the Bengali for tar.

You'll want to know: গড়ানো

গড়ানো — gôṛāno — "to roll; to roll down".

পাথরটা পাহাড় থেকে গড়িয়ে পড়ল। pāthôṛṭā pāhāṛ theke gôṛiye pôṛlô.

The stone rolled down the hill.

Past (he/she …): সেই পাথর গড়াল, sei pāthôr gôṛālô.
Not গড়া, to build: a different verb that sounds close.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

গড়ানো (gôṛāno) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali gaṛāna, "to make slide or roll", under Sanskrit gáḍati, "drops, runs as a liquid" (CDIAL 3973).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: gôṛāno
- Say it: gôṛāno, once more
- Say it: pāthôrṭā pāhāṛ theke gôṛiye pôṛlô. — The stone rolled down the hill.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a pothole, then the Bengali for tar, then say gôṛāno again

Before you move on

What does গড়ানো mean? ("To roll; to roll down".) Say it once more.

Chapter 391

Collisions and Close Calls

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a collision, a stalled bus, an overtaking and a sudden stop.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 391: I can describe a collision, a stalled bus, an overtaking and a sudden stop.

391.1 সংঘর্ষ (sôngghôrshô) — a collision; a clash

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for tar, then the Bengali for to roll.

You'll want to know: সংঘর্ষ

সংঘর্ষ — sôngghôrshô — "a collision; a clash".

> মোড়ে একটা বাস আর একটা ট্রাকের সংঘর্ষ হল।
> moṛe ekṭā bās ār ekṭā ṭrāker sôngghôrshô hôlô.
> A bus and a lorry collided at the crossroads.

A word of the news: the paper reports a সংঘর্ষ where a witness says the two vehicles hit each other.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সংঘর্ষ (sôngghôrshô) is Sanskrit saṃgharṣa, "rubbing together, friction, rivalry" (Monier-Williams); the sense of two vehicles meeting is the modern use.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: sôngghôrshô
- Say it: sôngghôrshô, once more
- Say it: moṛe ekṭā bās ār ekṭā ṭrāker sôngghôrshô hôlô. — A bus and a lorry collided at the crossroads.
- Recall: say the Bengali for tar, then the Bengali for to roll, then say sôngghôrshô again

Before you move on

What does সংঘর্ষ mean? ("A collision; a clash".) Say it once more.

391.2 টলা (ṭôlā) — to totter; to sway

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to roll, then the Bengali for a collision.

You'll want to know: টলা

টলা — ṭôlā — "to totter; to sway".

ভিড়ের ধাক্কায় বুড়ো লোকটা টলে উঠল। bhiṛer dhākkāy buṛo lokṭā ṭôle uṭhlô.

Jostled by the crowd, the old man tottered.

Past (he/she …): তিনি টললেন, tini ṭôllen.
Not তোলা, to lift: ট and ত are different letters.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

টলা (ṭôlā) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali ṭalan, "staggering, slipping", under Sanskrit ṭálati, "moves aside, is disturbed" (CDIAL 5450).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭôlā
- Say it: ṭôlā, once more
- Say it: bhiṛer dhākkāy buṛo lokṭā ṭôle uṭhlô. — Jostled by the crowd, the old man tottered.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to roll, then the Bengali for a collision, then say ṭôlā again

Before you move on

What does টলা mean? ("To totter; to sway".) Say it once more.

391.3 নড়া (nôṛā) — to budge; to stir

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a collision, then the Bengali for to totter.

You'll want to know: নড়া

নড়া — nôṛā — "to budge; to stir".

যানজটে বাসটা এক ঘণ্টা নড়ল না। jānjôṭe bāsṭā ek ghônṭā nôṛlô nā.

In the traffic jam the bus did not budge for an hour.

Past (he/she …): সেই গাড়ি নড়ল, sei gāṛi nôṛlô.
নাড়ানো, to stir or to wave, is the causing partner.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নড়া (nôṛā) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali naṛā, "to shake, to flinch, to move", under the reconstructed naṭati (CDIAL 6934).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: nôṛā
- Say it: nôṛā, once more
- Say it: jānjôṭe bāsṭā ek ghônṭā nôṛlô nā. — In the traffic jam the bus did not budge for an hour.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a collision, then the Bengali for to totter, then say nôṛā again

Before you move on

What does নড়া mean? ("To budge; to stir".) Say it once more.

391.4 ছাড়ানো (chhāṛāno) — to overtake; to get past; to peel

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to totter, then the Bengali for to budge.

You'll want to know: ছাড়ানো

ছাড়ানো — chhāṛāno — "to overtake; to get past; to peel".

বাসটা একটা ট্রাককে ছাড়িয়ে গেল।

bāsṭā ekṭā ṭrākke chhāṛiye gelô.

The bus overtook a lorry.

Past (he/she …): সেই বাস ট্রাকটাকে ছাড়াল, sei bās ṭrākṭāke chhāṛālô.

Mostly in the -এ form with যাওয়া: ছাড়িয়ে যাওয়া, to go past. Also to peel: কমলা ছাড়ানো, to peel an orange.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ছাড়ানো (chhāṛāno) is the causing form of ছাড়া, "to leave, to let go", from Sanskrit chardayati (CDIAL 4998): to leave a vehicle behind, or a peel.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: chhāṛāno
- Say it: chhāṛāno, once more
- Say it: bāsṭā ekṭā ṭrākke chhāṛiye gelô. — The bus overtook a lorry.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to totter, then the Bengali for to budge, then say chhāṛāno again

Before you move on

What does ছাড়ানো mean? ("To overtake; to get past; to peel".) Say it once more.

391.5 কষা (kôshā) — to apply (the brakes); to tighten; to work out (a sum)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to budge, then the Bengali for to overtake.

You'll want to know: কষা

কষা — kôshā — "to apply (the brakes); to tighten; to work out (a sum)".

রাস্তায় গরু দেখে চালক হঠাৎ ব্রেক কষলেন। rāstāy gôru dekhe chālôk hôṭhāt brek kôshlen.

Seeing a cow on the road, the driver suddenly slammed on the brakes.

Past (he/she …): তিনি ব্রেক কষলেন, tini brek kôshlen.

Also to pull a knot tight or to work out a sum on paper: a verb of pressing and rubbing hard.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কষা (kôshā) probably goes back to Sanskrit kaṣ, "to rub, to scratch, to scrape" (Monier-Williams): brakes, knots and sums are all worked by rubbing hard.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kôshā
- Say it: kôshā, once more
- Say it: rāstāy gôru dekhe chālôk hôṭhāt brek kôshlen. — Seeing a cow on the road, the driver suddenly slammed on the brakes.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to budge, then the Bengali for to overtake, then say kôshā again

Before you move on

What does কষা mean? ("To apply (the brakes); to tighten; to work out (a sum)".) Say it once more.

391.6 Looking back: from Rails and Carriages to Collisions and Close Calls

Say the Bengali for a railway and a compartment.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a railway, a compartment, a berth, a local train, to blow a whistle

Chapter 392

Traffic and Crossings

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can find my way through traffic, past signboards and over a flyover.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 392: I can find my way through traffic, past signboards and over a flyover.

392.1 ট্রাফিক (ṭrāphik) — traffic (on the roads)

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for to overtake, then the Bengali for to apply (the brakes).

You'll want to know: ট্রাফিক

ট্রাফিক — ṭrāphik — "traffic (on the roads)".

> ট্রাফিক পুলিশ হাত তুলে গাড়ি থামালেন।
> ṭrāphik pulish hāt tule gāṛi thāmālen.
> The traffic policeman raised his hand and stopped the cars.

যানজট is a jam; ট্রাফিক is the traffic itself, and ট্রাফিক পুলিশ the officer at the crossing.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ট্রাফিক (ṭrāphik) is borrowed from English traffic; Bengali has no f, so the English f is said with ফ.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭrāphik
- Say it: ṭrāphik, once more
- Say it: ṭrāphik pulish hāt tule gāṛi thāmālen. — The traffic policeman raised his hand and stopped the cars.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to overtake, then the Bengali for to apply (the brakes), then say ṭrāphik again

Before you move on

What does ট্রাফিক mean? ("Traffic (on the roads)".) Say it once more.

392.2 পথচারী (pôthchārī) — a pedestrian

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to apply (the brakes), then the Bengali for traffic.

You'll want to know: পথচারী

পথচারী — pôthchārī — "a pedestrian".

পথচারীরা মোড়ে রাস্তা পার হল। pôthchārīrā moṛe rāstā pār hôlô.

The pedestrians crossed the road at the corner.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পথচারী (pôthchārī) is built from পথ, "a way", and -cārin, "moving, going about" (Monier-Williams for both): one who goes on foot along the way.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pôthchārī
- Say it: pôthchārī, once more
- Say it: pôthchārīrā moṛe rāstā pār hôlô. — The pedestrians crossed the road at the corner.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to apply (the brakes), then the Bengali for traffic, then say pôthchārī again

Before you move on

What does পথচারী mean? ("A pedestrian".) Say it once more.

392.3 ফ্লাইওভার (phlāiobhār) — a flyover

Before the new one: say the Bengali for traffic, then the Bengali for a pedestrian.

You'll want to know: ফ্লাইওভার

ফ্লাইওভার — phlāiobhār — "a flyover".

নতুন ফ্লাইওভারে যানজট নেই। nôtun phlāiobhāre jānjôṭ nei.

There is no traffic jam on the new flyover.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ফ্লাইওভার (phlāiobhār) is borrowed from English flyover, with ফ for f and ভ for v.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: phlāiobhār
- Say it: phlāiobhār, once more
- Say it: nôtun phlāiobhāre jānjôṭ nei. — There is no traffic jam on the new flyover.
- Recall: say the Bengali for traffic, then the Bengali for a pedestrian, then say phlāiobhār again

Before you move on

What does ফ্লাইওভার mean? ("A flyover".) Say it once more.

392.4 সাইনবোর্ড (sāinborḍ) — a signboard

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a pedestrian, then the Bengali for a flyover.

You'll want to know: সাইনবোর্ড

সাইনবোর্ড — sāinborḍ — "a signboard".

সাইনবোর্ডটা দেখে আমরা ডানদিকে গেলাম। sāinborḍṭā dekhe āmrā ḍāndike gelām.

We saw the signboard and turned right.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সাইনবোর্ড (sāinborḍ) is borrowed from English signboard, the painted board over a shop or at a turning.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: sāinborḍ
- Say it: sāinborḍ, once more
- Say it: sāinborḍṭā dekhe āmrā ḍāndike gelām. — We saw the signboard and turned right.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a pedestrian, then the Bengali for a flyover, then say sāinborḍ again

Before you move on

What does সাইনবোর্ড mean? ("A signboard".) Say it once more.

392.5 ঘেঁষা (ghẽshā) — to keep close to; to brush against

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a flyover, then the Bengali for a signboard.

You'll want to know: ঘেঁষা

ঘেঁষা — ghẽshā — "to keep close to; to brush against".

সাইকেলটা ফুটপাত ঘেঁষে চলল।

sāikelṭā phuṭpāt ghẽshe chôllô.

The bicycle kept close to the pavement.

Past (he/she …): সেই গাড়ি দেয়াল ঘেঁষল, sei gāṛi deyāl ghẽshlô.

Most often in the -এ form before a verb of motion: দেয়াল ঘেঁষে দাঁড়ানো, to stand close against the wall.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঘেঁষা (ghẽshā) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali ghẽs, "a touch, a rub", under Sanskrit gharṣa, "friction" (CDIAL 4448); to brush past is to touch in passing.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ghẽshā
- Say it: ghẽshā, once more
- Say it: sāikelṭā phuṭpāt ghẽshe chôllô. — The bicycle kept close to the pavement.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a flyover, then the Bengali for a signboard, then say ghẽshā again

Before you move on

What does ঘেঁষা mean? ("To keep close to; to brush against".) Say it once more.

Chapter 393

Fuel and Flat Tyres

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 393: I can say we ran out of fuel, a tyre was flat and the engine would start.

393.1 ডিজেল (ḍijel) — diesel

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a signboard, then the Bengali for to keep close to.

You'll want to know: ডিজেল

ডিজেল — ḍijel — "diesel".

> ট্রাকগুলো ডিজেলে চলে।
> ṭrākgulo ḍijele chôle.
> Lorries run on diesel.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ডিজেল (ḍijel) is borrowed from English diesel, named after the engineer Rudolf Diesel; the English z sound is said with জ.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ḍijel
- Say it: ḍijel, once more
- Say it: ṭrākgulo ḍijele chôle. — Lorries run on diesel.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a signboard, then the Bengali for to keep close to, then say ḍijel again

Before you move on

What does ডিজেল mean? ("Diesel".) Say it once more.

393.2 হাওয়া (hāoyā) — air; a breeze

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to keep close to, then the Bengali for diesel.

You'll want to know: হাওয়া

হাওয়া — hāoyā — "air; a breeze".

পেট্রোল পাম্পে আমরা চাকায় হাওয়া ভরলাম। peṭrol pāmpe āmrā chākāy hāoyā bhôrlām.

At the petrol station we put air in the tyres.

Also the breeze you feel: বাতাস is the wind; হাওয়া is the air moving, or the air in a tyre.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হাওয়া (hāoyā) is usually traced to Arabic hawāʾ, "air", which came into Bengali through Persian.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: hāoyā
- Say it: hāoyā, once more
- Say it: peṭrol pāmpe āmrā chākāy hāoyā bhôrlām. — At the petrol station we put air in the tyres.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to keep close to, then the Bengali for diesel, then say hāoyā again

Before you move on

What does হাওয়া mean? ("Air; a breeze".) Say it once more.

393.3 পাংচার (pāngchār) — a puncture

Before the new one: say the Bengali for diesel, then the Bengali for air.

You'll want to know: পাংচার

পাংচার — pāngchār — "a puncture".

পথে সাইকেলের চাকা পাংচার হল।

pôthe sāikeler chākā pāngchār hôlô.

On the way the bicycle got a puncture.

পাংচার হওয়া, to get a puncture; the repair stall by the road is a পাংচারের দোকান.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পাংচার (pāngchār) is borrowed from English puncture, with ঁং for the English n before ch.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pāngchār
- Say it: pāngchār, once more

What does পাংচার mean? ("A puncture".) Say it once more.

393.4 ফুরানো (phurāno) — to run out; to be used up

Before the new one: say the Bengali for air, then the Bengali for a puncture.

You'll want to know: ফুরানো

ফুরানো — phurāno — "to run out; to be used up".

পথে গাড়ির পেট্রোল ফুরিয়ে গেল। pôthe gāṛir peṭrol phuriye gelô.

The car ran out of petrol on the way.

Past (he/she …): সেই পেট্রোল ফুরিয়ে গেল, sei peṭrol phuriye gelô.

The thing that runs out is the subject: টাকা ফুরিয়ে গেল, the money ran out.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ফুরানো (phurāno) is an everyday Bengali verb whose origin is not settled; CDIAL gives no Bengali form that matches it.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: phurāno
- Say it: phurāno, once more
- Say it: pôthe gāṛir peṭrol phuriye gelô. — The car ran out of petrol on the way.

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a puncture, then the Bengali for to run out.

You'll want to know: চালু করা

চালু করা — chālu kôrā — "to start (an engine); to switch on".

চালক ইঞ্জিন চালু করলেন।

chālôk injin chālu kôrlen.

The driver started the engine.

Past (he/she …): তিনি পাখা চালু করলেন, tini pākhā chālu kôrlen.

চালু on its own is running, in use: দোকানটা চালু, the shop is open for business.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চালু করা (chālu kôrā) joins চালু, "going, in working order", probably a Bengali formation on চাল, "gait, motion", which CDIAL lists under the reconstructed calyā (CDIAL 4722), to করা, to do.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: chālu kôrā
- Say it: chālu kôrā, once more
- Say it: chālôk injin chālu kôrlen. — The driver started the engine.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a puncture, then the Bengali for to run out, then say chālu kôrā again

Before you move on

What does চালু করা mean? ("To start (an engine); to switch on".) Say it once more.

394.1 বিগড়ানো (bigṛāno) — to break down; to go wrong

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to run out, then the Bengali for to start (an engine).

You'll want to know: বিগড়ানো

বিগড়ানো — bigṛāno — "to break down; to go wrong".

> পথে আমাদের গাড়িটা বিগড়ে গেল।
> pôthe āmāder gāṛiṭā bigṛe gelô.
> Our car broke down on the way.

Past (he/she …): সেই গাড়ি বিগড়ে গেল, sei gāṛi bigṛe gelô.

Mostly in the -এ form with যাওয়া: বিগড়ে যাওয়া, of a machine, and of a mood.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বিগড়ানো (bigṛāno) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali bigṛā, "to go bad", under Sanskrit vighaṭatē, "flies apart, is marred" (CDIAL 11673); the machine sense is the modern use.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bigṛāno
- Say it: bigṛāno, once more
- Say it: pôthe āmāder gāṛiṭā bigṛe gelô. — Our car broke down on the way.

Your turn

- Say it: ghāṭ
- Say it: ghāṭ, once more
- Say it: sôkāle ghāṭe ônek lok snān kôre. — In the morning many people bathe at the ghat.
- Recall: say the Bengali for the hood of a country boat, then the Bengali for to row, then say ghāṭ again

Before you move on

What does ঘাট mean? ("A landing place; riverside steps; a ghat".) Say it once more.

397.2 লঞ্চ (lônch) — a launch; a motor ferry

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to row, then the Bengali for a landing place.

You'll want to know: লঞ্চ

লঞ্চ — lônch — "a launch; a motor ferry".

লঞ্চটা ভোরে ঘাট ছাড়ল।

lônchṭā bhore ghāṭ chhāṛlô.

The launch left the ghat at dawn.

The motor boat that carries passengers on the big rivers.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

লঞ্চ (lônch) is borrowed from English launch, a motor boat; ঞ্চ is the n-ch joined letter.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: lônch
- Say it: lônch, once more
- Say it: lônchṭā bhore ghāṭ chhāṛlô. — The launch left the ghat at dawn.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to row, then the Bengali for a landing place, then say lônch again

Before you move on

What does লঞ্চ mean? ("A launch; a motor ferry".) Say it once more.

397.3 খেয়া (kheyā) — a ferry (across a river)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a landing place, then the Bengali for a launch.

You'll want to know: খেয়া

খেয়া — kheyā — "a ferry (across a river)".

আমরা খেয়ায় নদী পার হলাম।

āmrā kheyāy nôdī pār hôlām.

We crossed the river by ferry.

A খেয়া is a short crossing back and forth; a লঞ্চ makes longer runs.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

খেয়া (kheyā) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali kheyā, "a ferry", under Sanskrit kṣēpa, "a sending, a throw" (CDIAL 3738); the step from sending to the boat that sends you across is the Bengali side's own.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kheyā
- Say it: kheyā, once more
- Say it: āmrā kheyāy nôdī pār hôlām. — We crossed the river by ferry.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a landing place, then the Bengali for a launch, then say kheyā again

Before you move on

What does খেয়া mean? ("A ferry (across a river)".) Say it once more.

397.4 পাড় (pāṛ) — a bank (of a pond or river); a border (of a sari)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a launch, then the Bengali for a ferry.

You'll want to know: পাড়

পাড় — pāṛ — "a bank (of a pond or river); a border (of a sari)".

পুকুরের পাড়ে একটা আমগাছ আছে।

pukurer pāṛe ekṭā āmgāchh āchhe.

There is a mango tree on the bank of the pond.

Also the coloured border of a sari: লাল পাড়ের শাড়ি, a sari with a red border.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পাড় (pāṛ) probably belongs with the reconstructed pāḍi, under which CDIAL lists Bengali pāṛi, "an edge, a border" (CDIAL 8041): a bank is the edge of the water, a sari's পাড় the edge of the cloth.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pāṛ
- Say it: pāṛ, once more
- Say it: pukurer pāṛe ekṭā āmgāchh āchhe. — There is a mango tree on the bank of the pond.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a launch, then the Bengali for a ferry, then say pāṛ again

Before you move on

What does পাড় mean? ("A bank (of a pond or river); a border (of a sari)".) Say it once more.

397.5 ভেড়ানো (bheṛāno) — to bring (a boat) alongside; to moor

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a ferry, then the Bengali for a bank (of a pond or river).

You'll want to know: ভেড়ানো

ভেড়ানো — bheṛāno — "to bring (a boat) alongside; to moor".

মাঝি নৌকাটা ঘাটে ভেড়াল।

mājhi noukāṭā ghāṭe bheṛālô.

The boatman brought the boat in to the ghat.

Past (he/she …): তিনি নৌকা ঘাটে ভেড়ালেন, tini noukā ghāṭe bheṛālen. Not ভেড়া, a sheep: the same first letters, a different word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভেড়ানো (bheṛāno) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali bhiṛāna, "to bring alongside", under the reconstructed bhiṭ, "meet, throng" (CDIAL 9490), the same root as ভিড়, a crowd.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bheṛāno
- Say it: bheṛāno, once more
- Say it: mājhi noukāṭā ghāṭe bheṛālô. — The boatman brought the boat in to the ghat.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a ferry, then the Bengali for a bank (of a pond or river), then say bheṛāno again

Before you move on

What does ভেড়ানো mean? ("To bring (a boat) alongside; to moor".) Say it once more.

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 398: I can talk about currents, beaches and jetties, and a dip in the water.

398.1 স্রোত (srot) — a current; a stream

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for a bank (of a pond or river), then the Bengali for to moor.

You'll want to know: স্রোত

স্রোত — srot — "a current; a stream".

> নদীর স্রোতে নৌকাটা দ্রুত চলল।
> nôdīr srote noukāṭā drutô chôllô.
> The boat moved fast on the river's current.

Also a flow of people or things: মানুষের স্রোত, a stream of people.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

স্রোত (srot) is Sanskrit srotas, "the current or bed of a river, a stream" (Monier-Williams), from sru, to flow.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: srot
- Say it: srot, once more
- Say it: nôdīr srote noukāṭā drutô chôllô. — The boat moved fast on the river's current.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a bank (of a pond or river), then the Bengali for to moor, then say srot again

Before you move on

What does স্রোত mean? ("A current; a stream".) Say it once more.

398.2 সৈকত (soikôt) — a beach

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to moor, then the Bengali for a current.

You'll want to know: সৈকত

সৈকত — soikôt — "a beach".

সন্ধ্যায় আমরা সৈকতে হাঁটলাম। sôndhyāy āmrā soikôte hā̃ṭlām.

In the evening we walked on the beach.

The first vowel sign is ৈ, the vowel oi; in talk people also say সমুদ্রের ধার.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সৈকত (soikôt) is Sanskrit saikata, "sandy, made of sand" (Monier-Williams), from sikatā, sand: a beach is the sandy place.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: soikôt
- Say it: soikôt, once more
- Say it: sôndhyāy āmrā soikôte hãṭlām. — In the evening we walked on the beach.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to moor, then the Bengali for a current, then say soikôt again

Before you move on

What does সৈকত mean? ("A beach".) Say it once more.

398.3 জেটি (jeṭi) — a jetty

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a current, then the Bengali for a beach.

You'll want to know: জেটি

জেটি — jeṭi — "a jetty".

জেটিতে দাঁড়িয়ে আমরা জাহাজ দেখলাম। jeṭite dãṛiye āmrā jāhāj dekhlām.

We stood on the jetty and watched the ships.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

জেটি (jeṭi) is borrowed from English jetty, a landing stage built out into the water.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: jeṭi
- Say it: jeṭi, once more
- Say it: jeṭite dā̃ṛiye āmrā jāhāj dekhlām. — We stood on the jetty and watched the ships.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a current, then the Bengali for a beach, then say jeṭi again

Before you move on

What does জেটি mean? ("A jetty".) Say it once more.

398.4 ডুব দেওয়া (ḍub deoyā) — to take a dip; to dive under

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a beach, then the Bengali for a jetty.

You'll want to know: ডুব দেওয়া

ডুব দেওয়া — ḍub deoyā — "to take a dip; to dive under".

> গরমে অরুণ পুকুরে ডুব দিল।
> gôrôme ôrun pukure ḍub dilô.
> In the heat Arun took a dip in the pond.

Past (he/she …): তিনি পুকুরে ডুব দিলেন, tini pukure ḍub dilen.
ডুব is a plunge under water; ডোবা, to sink, is the same root.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ডুব দেওয়া (ḍub deoyā) joins ডুব, "a plunge under water", from the reconstructed ḍubb, "sink", under which CDIAL lists Bengali ḍubā, "to sink" (CDIAL 5561), to দেওয়া, to give.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ḍub deoyā
- Say it: ḍub deoyā, once more
- Say it: gôrôme ôrun pukure ḍub dilô. — In the heat Arun took a dip in the pond.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a beach, then the Bengali for a jetty, then say ḍub deoyā again

Before you move on

What does ডুব দেওয়া mean? ("To take a dip; to dive under".) Say it once more.

398.5 ছিটানো (chhiṭāno) — to splash; to sprinkle

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a jetty, then the Bengali for to take a dip.

You'll want to know: ছিটানো

ছিটানো — chhiṭāno — "to splash; to sprinkle".

শিশুরা সৈকতে জল ছিটাল।

shishurā soikôte jôl chhiṭālô.

The children splashed water on the beach.

Past (he/she …): তিনি জল ছিটালেন, tini jôl chhiṭālen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ছিটানো (chhiṭāno) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali chiṭā, "to scatter, to sprinkle", under the reconstructed chiṭ, "a sudden movement, a splash" (CDIAL 5035).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: chhiṭāno
- Say it: chhiṭāno, once more
- Say it: shishurā soikôte jôl chhiṭālô. — The children splashed water on the beach.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a jetty, then the Bengali for to take a dip, then say chhiṭāno again

Before you move on

What does ছিটানো mean? ("To splash; to sprinkle".) Say it once more.

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 399: I can talk about travelling, a picnic and a night in a tent by the fire.

399.1 ভ্রমণ করা (bhrômôn kôrā) — to travel; to tour

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for to take a dip, then the Bengali for to splash.

You'll want to know: ভ্রমণ করা

ভ্রমণ করা — bhrômôn kôrā — "to travel; to tour".

> গত বছর আমরা পাহাড়ে ভ্রমণ করলাম।
> gôtô bôchhôr āmrā pāhāṛe bhrômôn kôrlām.
> Last year we travelled in the hills.

Past (he/she …): তিনি অনেক দেশ ভ্রমণ করলেন, tini ônek desh bhrômôn kôrlen.

A careful word, for travel writing and the news; বেড়ানো is the everyday one.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভ্রমণ করা (bhrômôn kôrā) joins Sanskrit bhramaṇa, "wandering, roaming about" (Monier-Williams), to করা, to do.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bhrômôn kôrā
- Say it: bhrômôn kôrā, once more
- Say it: gôtô bôchhôr āmrā pāhāṛe bhrômôn kôrlām. — Last year we travelled in the hills.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to take a dip, then the Bengali for to splash, then say bhrômôn kôrā again

Before you move on

What does ভ্রমণ করা mean? ("To travel; to tour".) Say it once more.

399.2 বনভোজন (bônbhojôn) — a picnic

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to splash, then the Bengali for to travel.

You'll want to know: বনভোজন

বনভোজন — bônbhojôn — "a picnic".

শীতে আমরা নদীর পাড়ে বনভোজন করলাম।

shīte āmrā nôdīr pāṛe bônbhojôn kôrlām.

In winter we had a picnic on the riverbank.

Winter is the season for it in Bengal, with a cook-pot carried out to a field or a riverbank.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বনভোজন (bônbhojôn) joins বন, "a forest", Sanskrit vana, to Sanskrit bhojana, "eating, a meal" (Monier-Williams for both): a meal out in the woods.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bônbhojôn
- Say it: bônbhojôn, once more
- Say it: shīte āmrā nôdīr pāṛe bônbhojôn kôrlām. — In winter we had a picnic on the riverbank.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to splash, then the Bengali for to travel, then say bônbhojôn again

Before you move on

What does বনভোজন mean? ("A picnic".) Say it once more.

399.3 তাঁবু (tā̃bu) — a tent

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to travel, then the Bengali for a picnic.

You'll want to know: তাঁবু

তাঁবু — tā̃bu — "a tent".

পাহাড়ে আমরা তাঁবুতে রাত কাটালাম। pāhāṛe āmrā tā̃bute rāt kāṭālām.

In the hills we spent the night in a tent.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তাঁবু (tā̃bu) is usually traced to Persian tanbū, "a tent", with the n become the nasal ঁ.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: tā̃bu
- Say it: tā̃bu, once more
- Say it: pāhāṛe āmrā tā̃bute rāt kāṭālām. — In the hills we spent the night in a tent.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to travel, then the Bengali for a picnic, then say tā̃bu again

Before you move on

What does তাঁবু mean? ("A tent".) Say it once more.

399.4 পোহানো (pohāno) — to warm oneself (at a fire or in the sun)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a picnic, then the Bengali for a tent.

You'll want to know: পোহানো

পোহানো — pohāno — "to warm oneself (at a fire or in the sun)".

রাতে তাঁবুর বাইরে আমরা আগুন পোহালাম। rāte tā̃bur bāire āmrā āgun pohālām.

At night we warmed ourselves at a fire outside the tent.

Past (he/she …): তিনি আগুন পোহালেন, tini āgun pohālen.

আগুন পোহানো, to warm oneself at a fire; রোদ পোহানো, to sit in the winter sun.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পোহানো (pohāno) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali pohāna, "to warm oneself by the fire", under Sanskrit pratāpayati, "warms, heats" (CDIAL 8539).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pohāno
- Say it: pohāno, once more
- Say it: rāte tā̃bur bāire āmrā āgun pohālām. — At night we warmed ourselves at a fire outside the tent.

Before you move on

What does পোহানো mean? ("To warm oneself (at a fire or in the sun)".) Say it once more.

399.5 গাইড (gāiḍ) — a guide (for visitors)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a tent, then the Bengali for to warm oneself.

You'll want to know: গাইড

গাইড — gāiḍ — "a guide (for visitors)".

গাইড আমাদের পুরনো দুর্গটা দেখালেন।

gāiḍ āmāder purôno durgôṭā dekhālen.

The guide showed us the old fort.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

গাইড (gāiḍ) is borrowed from English guide, with the final d said as the hard ড.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: gāiḍ
- Say it: gāiḍ, once more
- Say it: gāiḍ āmāder purôno durgôṭā dekhālen. — The guide showed us the old fort.

Addresses and Signs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can follow an address, a sign and an instruction, and point the way.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 400: I can follow an address, a sign and an instruction, and point the way.

400.1 ঠিকানা (ṭhikānā) — an address

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to warm oneself, then the Bengali for a guide (for visitors).

You'll want to know: ঠিকানা

ঠিকানা — ṭhikānā — "an address".

> আমি বন্ধুর নতুন ঠিকানা খুঁজে পেলাম।
> āmi bôndhur nôtun ṭhikānā khũje pelām.
> I found my friend's new address.

It shares its first syllable with ঠিক, right: an address is the place a thing is fixed.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঠিকানা (ṭhikānā) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali ṭhikānā, "a station, a fixed place", beside ṭhik, "correct", under the reconstructed ṭhīkka, "firm, right" (CDIAL 5503); the sense "a postal address" is the modern use.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭhikānā
- Say it: ṭhikānā, once more
- Say it: āmi bôndhur nôtun ṭhikānā khũje pelām. — I found my friend's new address.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to warm oneself, then the Bengali for a guide (for visitors), then say ṭhikānā again

Before you move on

What does ঠিকানা mean? ("An address".) Say it once more.

400.2 চিহ্ন (chihnô) — a sign; a mark

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a guide (for visitors), then the Bengali for an address.

You'll want to know: চিহ্ন

চিহ্ন — chihnô — "a sign; a mark".

রাস্তার চিহ্ন দেখে চালক ধীরে চালালেন। rāstār chihnô dekhe chālôk dhīre chālālen.

Seeing the road sign, the driver drove slowly.

Said chinho: the h is heard before the n.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চিহ্ন (chihnô) is Sanskrit cihna, "a mark, a stamp, a sign" (Monier-Williams), taken over whole.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: chihnô
- Say it: chihnô, once more
- Say it: rāstār chihnô dekhe chālôk dhīre chālālen. — Seeing the road sign, the driver drove slowly.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a guide (for visitors), then the Bengali for an address, then say chihnô again

Before you move on

What does চিহ্ন mean? ("A sign; a mark".) Say it once more.

400.3 উল্টো (ulṭo) — opposite; the other way; reversed

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an address, then the Bengali for a sign.

You'll want to know: উল্টো

উল্টো — ulṭo — "opposite; the other way; reversed".

আমরা ভুল করে উল্টো দিকের বাসে উঠলাম।

āmrā bhul kore ulṭo diker bāse uṭhlām.

By mistake we got on the bus going the other way.

উল্টো দিকে, in the opposite direction; উল্টো দিকের দোকান, the shop across the road.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উল্টো (ulṭo) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali ulṭo, "reversed", under the reconstructed ullaṭati, "turns over" (CDIAL 2368), the same root as উল্টানো, to overturn.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ulṭo
- Say it: ulṭo, once more
- Say it: āmrā bhul kore ulṭo diker bāse uṭhlām. — By mistake we got on the bus going the other way.

Before you move on

What does নির্দেশ mean? ("An instruction; directions".) Say it once more.

400.5 ইঙ্গিত করা (inggit kôrā) — to point (to); to hint at

Before the new one: say the Bengali for opposite, then the Bengali for an instruction.

You'll want to know: ইঙ্গিত করা

ইঙ্গিত করা — inggit kôrā — "to point (to); to hint at".

দোকানদার ডানদিকের গলির দিকে ইঙ্গিত করলেন। dokāndār ḍāndiker gôlir dike inggit kôrlen.

The shopkeeper pointed towards the lane on the right.

Past (he/she …): তিনি নদীর দিকে ইঙ্গিত করলেন, tini nôdīr dike inggit kôrlen.

ইঙ্গিত alone is a sign or a hint: চোখের ইঙ্গিত, a sign with the eyes.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ইঙ্গিত করা (inggit kôrā) joins Sanskrit iṅgita, "a motion of the body that shows what one means, a hint" (Monier-Williams), to করা, to do; ঙ্গ is said ngg.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: inggit kôrā
- Say it: inggit kôrā, once more
- Say it: dokāndār ḍāndiker gôlir dike inggit kôrlen. — The shopkeeper pointed towards the lane on the right.
- Recall: say the Bengali for opposite, then the Bengali for an instruction, then say inggit kôrā again

Before you move on

What does ইঙ্গিত করা mean? ("To point (to); to hint at".) Say it once more.

Chapter 401

Points of the Compass

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 401: I can say which way is south, east and west, read a compass and look to the horizon.

401.1 দক্ষিণ (dôkkhin) — south

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for an instruction, then the Bengali for to point (to).

You'll want to know: দক্ষিণ

দক্ষিণ — dôkkhin — "south".

> সমুদ্র এই গ্রামের দক্ষিণে।
> sômudrô ei grāmer dôkkhine.
> The sea lies to the south of this village.

ক্ষ is said kkh in the middle of a word. উত্তর, north, is also the word for an answer.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দক্ষিণ (dôkkhin) is Sanskrit dakṣiṇa, "on the right hand" and so "southern" (Monier-Williams): facing the sunrise, the south is on your right.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: dôkkhin
- Say it: dôkkhin, once more
- Say it: sômudrô ei grāmer dôkkhine. — The sea lies to the south of this village.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an instruction, then the Bengali for to point (to), then say dôkkhin again

Before you move on

What does দক্ষিণ mean? ("South".) Say it once more.

401.2 পূর্ব (pūrbô) — east

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to point (to), then the Bengali for south.

You'll want to know: পূর্ব

পূর্ব — pūrbô — "east".

ভোরে পূর্ব আকাশ লাল হল।

bhore pūrbô ākāsh lāl hôlô.

At dawn the eastern sky turned red.

Also former, earlier, in careful speech: পূর্বে, before.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পূর্ব (pūrbô) is Sanskrit pūrva, "being before, in front", and so "eastern" and "earlier" (Monier-Williams): the east was the side you faced.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pūrbô
- Say it: pūrbô, once more
- Say it: bhore pūrbô ākāsh lāl hôlô. — At dawn the eastern sky turned red.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to point (to), then the Bengali for south, then say pūrbô again

Before you move on

What does পূর্ব mean? ("East".) Say it once more.

401.3 পশ্চিম (pôshchim) — west

Before the new one: say the Bengali for south, then the Bengali for east.

You'll want to know: পশ্চিম

পশ্চিম — pôshchim — "west".

সন্ধ্যায় আমরা পশ্চিম দিকে হাঁটলাম। sôndhyāy āmrā pôshchim dike hā̃ṭlām.

In the evening we walked westward.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পশ্চিম (pôshchim) is Sanskrit paścima, "being behind, later", and so "western" (Monier-Williams): with the sunrise in front, the west lies behind you.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pôshchim
- Say it: pôshchim, once more
- Say it: sôndhyāy āmrā pôshchim dike hā̃ṭlām. — In the evening we walked westward.
- Recall: say the Bengali for south, then the Bengali for east, then say pôshchim again

Before you move on

What does পশ্চিম mean? ("West".) Say it once more.

401.4 কম্পাস (kômpās) — a compass

Before the new one: say the Bengali for east, then the Bengali for west.

You'll want to know: কম্পাস

কম্পাস — kômpās — "a compass".

বনে আমরা কম্পাস দেখে পথ খুঁজলাম। bône āmrā kômpās dekhe pôth khũjlām.

In the forest we looked for the path by the compass.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কম্পাস (kômpās) is borrowed from English compass.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kômpās
- Say it: kômpās, once more
- Say it: bône āmrā kômpās dekhe pôth khũjlām. — In the forest we looked for the path by the compass.
- Recall: say the Bengali for east, then the Bengali for west, then say kômpās again

Before you move on

What does কম্পাস mean? ("A compass".) Say it once more.

401.5 দিগন্ত (digôntô) — the horizon

Before the new one: say the Bengali for west, then the Bengali for a compass.

You'll want to know: দিগন্ত

দিগন্ত — digôntô — "the horizon".

সৈকত থেকে আমরা দিগন্তে একটা জাহাজ দেখলাম। soikôt theke āmrā digônte ekṭā jāhāj dekhlām.

From the beach we saw a ship on the horizon.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দিগন্ত (digôntô) is Sanskrit dig-anta, "the end of the horizon, a far distance" (Monier-Williams), from diś, a quarter of the sky, and anta, an end.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: digôntô
- Say it: digôntô, once more
- Say it: soikôt theke āmrā digônte ekṭā jāhāj dekhlām. — From the beach we saw a ship on the horizon.
- Recall: say the Bengali for west, then the Bengali for a compass, then say digôntô again

Before you move on

What does দিগন্ত mean? ("The horizon".) Say it once more.

Chapter 402

Middles and Edges

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say where something stands in the middle or at the edge, and that we went the long way round.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 402: I can say where something stands in the middle or at the edge, and that we went the long way round.

402.1 মাঝখান (mājhkhān) — the middle

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for a compass, then the Bengali for the horizon.

You'll want to know: মাঝখান

মাঝখান — mājhkhān — "the middle".

> রাস্তার মাঝখানে একটা গরু দাঁড়িয়ে ছিল।
> rāstār mājhkhāne ekṭā gôru dā̃ṛiye chhilô.
> A cow was standing in the middle of the road.

মাঝখানে, in the middle; the মাঝ of মাঝে মাঝে, sometimes, is the same word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মাঝখান (mājhkhān) joins মাঝ, "the middle", which CDIAL lists as Bengali mājh under Sanskrit mádhya, "middle" (CDIAL 9804), to খান, "a place", the ending of কারখানা.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: mājhkhān
- Say it: mājhkhān, once more
- Say it: rāstār mājhkhāne ekṭā gôru dā̃ṛiye chhilô. — A cow was standing in the middle of the road.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a compass, then the Bengali for the horizon, then say mājhkhān again

Before you move on

What does মাঝখান mean? ("The middle".) Say it once more.

402.2 ঘুরপথ (ghurpôth) — a roundabout way; a detour

Before the new one: say the Bengali for the horizon, then the Bengali for the middle.

You'll want to know: ঘুরপথ

ঘুরপথ — ghurpôth — "a roundabout way; a detour".

সেতু বন্ধ ছিল, তাই আমরা ঘুরপথে গেলাম। setu bôndhô chhilô, tāi āmrā ghurpôthe gelām.

The bridge was closed, so we went the long way round.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঘুরপথ (ghurpôth) joins the stem ঘুর- of ঘোরা, "to go round" (CDIAL 4488), to পথ, "a way": the way that goes round.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ghurpôth
- Say it: ghurpôth, once more
- Say it: setu bôndhô chhilô, tāi āmrā ghurpôthe gelām. — The bridge was closed, so we went the long way round.
- Recall: say the Bengali for the horizon, then the Bengali for the middle, then say ghurpôth again

Before you move on

What does ঘুরপথ mean? ("A roundabout way; a detour".) Say it once more.

402.3 কিনারা (kinārā) — an edge; a brink; a shore

Before the new one: say the Bengali for the middle, then the Bengali for a detour.

You'll want to know: কিনারা

কিনারা — kinārā — "an edge; a brink; a shore".

> অরুণ খাদের কিনারা থেকে নিচে তাকাল।
> ôrun khāder kinārā theke niche tākālô.
> Arun looked down from the edge of the ravine.

Also a way out of a problem: কিনারা করা, to find a solution.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কিনারা (kinārā) is usually traced to Persian kinār, "an edge, a bank, a shore".

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kinārā
- Say it: kinārā, once more
- Say it: ôrun khāder kinārā theke niche tākālô. — Arun looked down from the edge of the ravine.
- Recall: say the Bengali for the middle, then the Bengali for a detour, then say kinārā again

Before you move on

What does কিনারা mean? ("An edge; a brink; a shore".) Say it once more.

402.4 দিশেহারা (dishehārā) — at a loss; not knowing which way to go

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a detour, then the Bengali for an edge.

You'll want to know: দিশেহারা

দিশেহারা — dishehārā — "at a loss; not knowing which way to go".

নতুন শহরে এসে আমি দিশেহারা হয়ে গেলাম।

nôtun shôhôre ese āmi dishehārā hôye gelām.

When I came to the new city I was at a loss.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দিশেহারা (dishehārā) joins দিশে, a spoken form of দিশা, "direction", Sanskrit diśā, "a direction, a quarter" (Monier-Williams), to হারা, "having lost", the stem of হারানো: one who has lost the direction.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: dishehārā
- Say it: dishehārā, once more
- Say it: nôtun shôhôre ese āmi dishehārā hôye gelām. — When I came to the new city I was at a loss.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a detour, then the Bengali for an edge, then say dishehārā again

Before you move on

What does দিশেহারা mean? ("At a loss; not knowing which way to go".) Say it once more.

402.5 ঘুরপাক খাওয়া (ghurpāk khāoyā) — to go round in circles; to whirl

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an edge, then the Bengali for at a loss.

You'll want to know: ঘুরপাক খাওয়া

ঘুরপাক খাওয়া — ghurpāk khāoyā — "to go round in circles; to whirl".

পথ না জেনে আমরা এক ঘণ্টা ঘুরপাক খেলাম।

pôth nā jene āmrā ek ghôṇṭā ghurpāk khelām.

Not knowing the way, we went round in circles for an hour.

Past (he/she …): তিনি ঘুরপাক খেলেন, tini ghurpāk khelen.

খাওয়া, to eat, also means to undergo: ধাক্কা খাওয়া, to take a knock; ঘুরপাক খাওয়া, to take turn after turn.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঘুরপাক খাওয়া (ghurpāk khāoyā) joins ঘুর-, "going round" (CDIAL 4488), and পাক, which CDIAL lists as Bengali pāk, "a bend, a twist, an eddy" (CDIAL 7618), to খাওয়া, to eat, here to undergo.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ghurpāk khāoyā
- Say it: ghurpāk khāoyā, once more
- Say it: pôth nā jene āmrā ek ghônṭā ghurpāk khelām. — Not knowing the way, we went round in circles for an hour.
- Recall: say the Bengali for an edge, then the Bengali for at a loss, then say ghurpāk khāoyā again

Before you move on

What does ঘুরপাক খাওয়া mean? ("To go round in circles; to whirl".) Say it once more.

Chapter 403

Checking In

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can check in, collect a key and ask for something to be arranged.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 403: I can check in, collect a key and ask for something to be arranged.

403.1 ঘর (ghôr) — a room (in a house); a home

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for at a loss, then the Bengali for to go round in circles.

You'll want to know: ঘর

ঘর — ghôr — "a room (in a house); a home".

> হোটেলে আমাদের ঘরটা ছোট, কিন্তু পরিচ্ছন্ন।
> hoṭele āmāder ghôrṭā chhoṭo, kintu pôrichchhônnô.
> Our room at the hotel is small but clean.

ঘর is any room, and home as well: ঘরে ফেরা, to come home. রুম is the hotel word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঘর (ghôr) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali ghar, "a house", under ghara, "a house" (CDIAL 4428), and notes that the usual link with Sanskrit gṛha is hard to make work by sound.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ghôr
- Say it: ghôr, once more
- Say it: hoṭele āmāder ghôrṭā chhoṭo, kintu pôrichchhônnô. — Our room at the hotel is small but clean.
- Recall: say the Bengali for at a loss, then the Bengali for to go round in circles, then say ghôr again

Before you move on

What does ঘর mean? ("A room (in a house); a home".) Say it once more.

403.2 বুকিং (buking) — a booking; a reservation

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to go round in circles, then the Bengali for a room (in a house).

You'll want to know: বুকিং

বুকিং — buking — "a booking; a reservation".

আমরা এক সপ্তাহ আগে হোটেলের বুকিং করলাম।

āmrā ek sôptāhô āge hoṭeler buking kôrlām.

We made the hotel booking a week ahead.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বুকিং (buking) is borrowed from English booking; বুক করা, to book, is heard too, but বুক alone is the chest.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: buking
- Say it: buking, once more
- Say it: āmrā ek sôptāhô āge hoṭeler buking kôrlām. — We made the hotel booking a week ahead.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to go round in circles, then the Bengali for a room (in a house), then say buking again

Before you move on

What does বুকিং mean? ("A booking; a reservation".) Say it once more.

403.3 লিফট (liphṭ) — a lift

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a room (in a house), then the Bengali for a booking.

You'll want to know: লিফট

লিফট — liphṭ — "a lift".

লিফটটা বন্ধ ছিল, তাই আমরা হেঁটে উঠলাম। liphṭṭā bôndhô chhilô, tāi āmrā hẽṭe uṭhlām.

The lift was out of order, so we walked up.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

লিফট (liphṭ) is borrowed from English lift, with ফ for f and ট for t.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: liphṭ
- Say it: liphṭ, once more
- Say it: liphṭṭā bôndhô chhilô, tāi āmrā hẽṭe uṭhlām. — The lift was out of order, so we walked up.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a room (in a house), then the Bengali for a booking, then say liphṭ again

Before you move on

What does লিফট mean? ("A lift".) Say it once more.

403.4 রিসেপশন (risepshôn) — a reception desk

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a booking, then the Bengali for a lift.

You'll want to know: রিসেপশন

রিসেপশন — risepshôn — "a reception desk".

> রিসেপশনে আমরা ঘরের চাবি নিলাম।
> risepshône āmrā ghôrer chābi nilām.
> We collected the room key at reception.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

রিসেপশন (risepshôn) is borrowed from English reception, the desk where guests arrive.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: risepshôn
- Say it: risepshôn, once more
- Say it: risepshône āmrā ghôrer chābi nilām. — We collected the room key at reception.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a booking, then the Bengali for a lift, then say risepshôn again

Before you move on

What does রিসেপশন mean? ("A reception desk".) Say it once more.

403.5 বন্দোবস্ত করা (bôndobôstô kôrā) — to arrange; to make arrangements

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a lift, then the Bengali for a reception desk.

You'll want to know: বন্দোবস্ত করা

বন্দোবস্ত করা — bôndobôstô kôrā — "to arrange; to make arrangements".

মামা আমাদের থাকার বন্দোবস্ত করলেন। māmā āmāder thākār bôndobôstô kôrlen.

My uncle arranged somewhere for us to stay.

Past (he/she …): তিনি গাড়ির বন্দোবস্ত করলেন, tini gāṛir bôndobôstô kôrlen.

The noun alone, বন্দোবস্ত, is an arrangement; ব্যবস্থা says much the same in a more careful way.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বন্দোবস্ত করা (bôndobôstô kôrā) joins বন্দোবস্ত, usually traced to Persian band-o-bast, "tying and binding", a settlement of affairs, to করা, to do.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bôndobôstô kôrā
- Say it: bôndobôstô kôrā, once more
- Say it: māmā āmāder thākār bôndobôstô kôrlen. — My uncle arranged somewhere for us to stay.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a lift, then the Bengali for a reception desk, then say bôndobôstô kôrā again

Before you move on

What does বন্দোবস্ত করা mean? ("To arrange; to make arrangements".) Say it once more.

Chapter 404

Rest and Comfort

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a room is comfortable, take breakfast and rest a while.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 404: I can say a room is comfortable, take breakfast and rest a while.

404.1 আরাম (ārām) — comfort; ease; rest

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a reception desk, then the Bengali for to arrange.

You'll want to know: আরাম

আরাম — ārām — "comfort; ease; rest".

> লম্বা সফরের পরে বাড়িতে আরাম লাগল।
> lômbā sôphôrer pôre bāṛite ārām lāglô.
> After the long trip it felt good to be home.

আরাম লাগা, to feel comfortable; আরামদায়ক, comfortable, is built on it.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আরাম (ārām) is usually traced to Persian ārām, "rest, quiet, ease".

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ārām
- Say it: ārām, once more
- Say it: lômbā sôphôrer pôre bāṛite ārām lāglô. — After the long trip it felt good to be home.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a reception desk, then the Bengali for to arrange, then say ārām again

Before you move on

What does আরাম mean? ("Comfort; ease; rest".) Say it once more.

404.2 আয়েশ (āyesh) — leisure; ease

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to arrange, then the Bengali for comfort.

You'll want to know: আয়েশ

আয়েশ — āyesh — "leisure; ease".

ছুটির দিনে অরুণ আয়েশ করে চা খায়। chhuṭir dine ôrun āyesh kore chā khāy.

On holidays Arun drinks his tea at leisure.

আয়েশ করে, at leisure, taking one's time.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

আয়েশ (āyesh) is usually traced to Arabic ʿaysh, "living, a life of ease", which reached Bengali through Persian.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: āyesh
- Say it: āyesh, once more
- Say it: chhuṭir dine ôrun āyesh kore chā khāy. — On holidays Arun drinks his tea at leisure.

Before you move on

What does আয়েশ mean? ("Leisure; ease".) Say it once more.

404.3 জলখাবার (jôlkhābār) — breakfast; a light meal

Before the new one: say the Bengali for comfort, then the Bengali for leisure.

You'll want to know: জলখাবার

জলখাবার — jôlkhābār — "breakfast; a light meal".

> হোটেলে জলখাবারে লুচি আর আলুর তরকারি ছিল।
> hoṭele jôlkhābāre luchi ār ālur tôrkāri chhilô.
> At the hotel there were luchis and potato curry for breakfast.

Literally water-food: the small meal taken with a glass of water, morning or afternoon.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

জলখাবার (jôlkhābār) joins জল, "water", Sanskrit jala (Monier-Williams), to খাবার, "food", from খাওয়া, to eat (CDIAL 3865); the whole means a light meal, not food and water.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: jôlkhābār
- Say it: jôlkhābār, once more
- Say it: hoṭele jôlkhābāre luchi ār ālur tôrkāri chhilô. — At the hotel there were luchis and potato curry for breakfast.
- Recall: say the Bengali for comfort, then the Bengali for leisure, then say jôlkhābār again

Before you move on

What does জলখাবার mean? ("Breakfast; a light meal".) Say it once more.

404.4 জিরোনো (jirono) — to rest a while; to catch one's breath

Before the new one: say the Bengali for leisure, then the Bengali for breakfast.

You'll want to know: জিরোনো

জিরোনো — jirono — "to rest a while; to catch one's breath".

পাহাড়ে ওঠার পথে আমরা একটা গাছের নিচে জিরোলাম। pāhāṛe oṭhār pôthe āmrā ekṭā gāchher niche jirolām.

On the way up the hill we rested under a tree.

Past (he/she …): তিনি গাছের নিচে জিরোলেন, tini gāchher niche jirolen. A short stop on the way; বিশ্রাম নেওয়া is a longer rest.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

জিরোনো (jirono) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali jirāna, "to rest, to repose", under the reconstructed jīrayati (CDIAL 5236).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: jirono
- Say it: jirono, once more
- Say it: pāhāṛe oṭhār pôthe āmrā ekṭā gāchher niche jirolām. — On the way up the hill we rested under a tree.
- Recall: say the Bengali for leisure, then the Bengali for breakfast, then say jirono again

Before you move on

What does জিরোনো mean? ("To rest a while; to catch one's breath".) Say it once more.

404.5 হেলান দেওয়া (helān deoyā) — to lean back; to recline

Before the new one: say the Bengali for breakfast, then the Bengali for to rest a while.

You'll want to know: হেলান দেওয়া

হেলান দেওয়া — helān deoyā — "to lean back; to recline".

ট্রেনে আমি জানালায় হেলান দিয়ে ঘুমালাম। ṭrene āmi jānālāy helān diye ghumālām.

On the train I leaned against the window and slept.

Past (he/she …): তিনি চেয়ারে হেলান দিলেন, tini cheyāre helān dilen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হেলান দেওয়া (helān deoyā) joins হেলান, "a leaning", from the verb হেলা, which CDIAL lists as Bengali helā, "to lean", under Sanskrit abhilīyatē, "clings to" (CDIAL 529), to দেওয়া, to give.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a water heater, then the Bengali for an air conditioner.

You'll want to know: পরিষ্কার করা

পরিষ্কার করা — pôrishkār kôrā — "to clean".

সকালে হোটেলের কর্মী আমাদের ঘর পরিষ্কার করলেন। sôkāle hoṭeler kôrmī āmāder ghôr pôrishkār kôrlen.

In the morning the hotel worker cleaned our room.

Past (he/she …): তিনি ঘর পরিষ্কার করলেন, tini ghôr pôrishkār kôrlen.

পরিষ্কার alone is the adjective clean, clear: পরিষ্কার জল, clean water; পরিষ্কার আকাশ, a clear sky.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পরিষ্কার করা (pôrishkār kôrā) joins Sanskrit pariṣkāra, "preparing, adorning, making fit" (Monier-Williams), to করা, to do; Bengali settled on making clean.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pôrishkār kôrā
- Say it: pôrishkār kôrā, once more
- Say it: sôkāle hoṭeler kôrmī āmāder ghôr pôrishkār kôrlen. — In the morning the hotel worker cleaned our room.

406.3 ধর্মশালা (dhôrmôshālā) — a rest house for pilgrims

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a guesthouse, then the Bengali for a hostel.

You'll want to know: ধর্মশালা

ধর্মশালা — dhôrmôshālā — "a rest house for pilgrims".

> মন্দিরের পাশের ধর্মশালায় আমরা রাত কাটালাম।
> mondirer pāsher dhôrmôshālāy āmrā rāt kāṭālām.
> We spent the night in the rest house beside the temple.

Often free or nearly so, kept by a temple or a charitable trust.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ধর্মশালা (dhôrmôshālā) is Sanskrit dharmaśālā, "a charitable asylum" (Monier-Williams), from dharma, duty and merit, and śālā, a hall: a house kept as an act of merit.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: dhôrmôshālā
- Say it: dhôrmôshālā, once more
- Say it: mondirer pāsher dhôrmôshālāy āmrā rāt kāṭālām. — We spent the night in the rest house beside the temple.

406.4 ঠাঁই (ṭhā̃i) — a place to stay; shelter; room

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a hostel, then the Bengali for a rest house for pilgrims.

You'll want to know: ঠাঁই

ঠাঁই — ṭhā̃i — "a place to stay; shelter; room".

রাতে গ্রামের একটা বাড়িতে আমরা ঠাঁই পেলাম।

rāte grāmer ekṭā bāṛite āmrā ṭhā̃i pelām.

At night we found shelter in a house in the village.

ঠাঁই নেই, there is no room: the bus was so full there was no ঠাঁই.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঠাঁই (ṭhā̃i) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali ṭhā̃i, "a place", under Sanskrit sthā́man, "a station, a standing place" (CDIAL 13760), from sthā, to stand.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭhā̃i
- Say it: ṭhā̃i, once more
- Say it: rāte grāmer ekṭā bāṛite āmrā ṭhā̃i pelām. — At night we found shelter in a house in the village.

টোকা দেওয়া — ṭokā deoyā — "to tap; to knock lightly".

রাতে কেউ আমাদের দরজায় টোকা দিল।

rāte keu āmāder dôrjāy ṭokā dilô.

In the night someone tapped on our door.

Past (he/she …): তিনি দরজায় টোকা দিলেন, tini dôrjāy ṭokā dilen.
A light tap with the knuckle; a loud knock is দরজায় ধাক্কা.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

টোকা দেওয়া (ṭokā deoyā) joins টোকা, "a light tap", to দেওয়া, to give. টোকা perhaps belongs with the reconstructed ṭōkk, "strike", under which CDIAL lists Bengali ṭokar, "a rap" (CDIAL 5476); the link is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭokā deoyā
- Say it: ṭokā deoyā, once more

> sṭeshône ghônṭā bājlô, ār ṭren chhāṛlô.
> The bell rang at the station, and the train left.

Past (he/she …): সেই ঘণ্টা বাজল, sei ghônṭā bājlô.

Also of the hour: দশটা বাজল, it struck ten. বাজানো, to play an instrument, is the causing partner.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বাজা (bājā) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali bājā, "to sound", of a musical instrument, under Sanskrit vādyatē, "is sounded, is played" (CDIAL 11513).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bājā

407.4 বকশিশ (bôkshish) — a tip

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a bearer, then the Bengali for a menu.

You'll want to know: বকশিশ

বকশিশ — bôkshish — "a tip".

আমরা ওয়েটারকে কুড়ি টাকা বকশিশ দিলাম। āmrā oyeṭārke kuṛi ṭākā bôkshish dilām.

We gave the waiter a twenty-taka tip.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বকশিশ (bôkshish) is usually traced to Persian bakhshish, "a gift, a present", from bakhshīdan, to give; English baksheesh is the same word.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bôkshish

417.1 নোট (noṭ) — a banknote

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to pay off, then the Bengali for to settle (a bill).

You'll want to know: নোট

নোট — noṭ — "a banknote".

> আমার কাছে একটা একশো টাকার নোট আছে।
> āmār kāchhe ekṭā eksho ṭākār noṭ āchhe.
> I have a hundred-taka note.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নোট (noṭ) is borrowed from English note, short for banknote.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: noṭ
- Say it: noṭ, once more
- Say it: āmār kāchhe ekṭā eksho ṭākār noṭ āchhe. — I have a hundred-taka note.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to pay off, then the Bengali for to settle (a bill), then say noṭ again

Before you move on

What does নোট mean? ("A banknote".) Say it once more.

417.2 এটিএম (eṭiem) — a cash machine; an ATM

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to settle (a bill), then the Bengali for a banknote.

You'll want to know: এটিএম

এটিএম — eṭiem — "a cash machine; an ATM".

> স্টেশনের পাশের এটিএম থেকে টাকা তুললাম।
> sṭeshôner pāsher eṭiem theke ṭākā tullām.
> I took money out of the cash machine beside the station.

টাকা তোলা, to take money out; টাকা জমা দেওয়া, to put it in.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

এটিএম (eṭiem) is borrowed from English ATM, the letters of automated teller machine, said as a word.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: eṭiem
- Say it: eṭiem, once more
- Say it: ṣṭeshôner pāsher eṭiem theke ṭākā tullām. — I took money out of the cash machine beside the station.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to settle (a bill), then the Bengali for a banknote, then say eṭiem again

Before you move on

417.4 ট্রান্সফার করা (ṭrānsphār kôrā) — to transfer (money)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a cash machine, then the Bengali for a (bank) balance.

You'll want to know: ট্রান্সফার করা

ট্রান্সফার করা — ṭrānsphār kôrā — "to transfer (money)".

অরুণ ফোনে মামাকে এক হাজার টাকা ট্রান্সফার করল।

ôrun phone māmāke ek hājār ṭākā ṭrānsphār kôrlô.

Arun transferred a thousand taka to his uncle by phone.

Past (he/she …): তিনি টাকা ট্রান্সফার করলেন, tini ṭākā ṭrānsphār kôrlen. The one who gets the money takes -কে: মামাকে, to my uncle.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ট্রান্সফার করা (ṭrānsphār kôrā) joins transfer, borrowed from English, to করা, to do, the usual way Bengali makes a verb of an English word.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭrānsphār kôrā
- Say it: ṭrānsphār kôrā, once more

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a duty (tax), then the Bengali for land tax.

You'll want to know: মহাজন

মহাজন — môhājôn — "a moneylender".

গরিব লোকটা মহাজনের কাছে ধার নিল।

gôrib lokṭā môhājôner kāchhe dhār nilô.

The poor man borrowed from the moneylender.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মহাজন (môhājôn) is Sanskrit mahā-jana, "a great or eminent man", also "the head of a trade" and, with a query, "a merchant" (Monier-Williams); Bengali narrowed it to the one who lends money.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: môhājôn
- Say it: môhājôn, once more
- Say it: gôrib lokṭā môhājôner kāchhe dhār nilô. — The poor man borrowed from the moneylender.

419.1 অভাব (ôbhāb) — want; lack; need

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for a moneylender, then the Bengali for the rest (remaining).

You'll want to know: অভাব

অভাব — ôbhāb — "want; lack; need".

> গরমে গ্রামে জলের অভাব হয়।
> gôrôme grāme jôler ôbhāb hôy.
> In summer the village runs short of water.

Also hardship itself: অভাবের দিন, hard times; টাকার অভাব, a shortage of money.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অভাব (ôbhāb) is Sanskrit abhāva, "non-existence, absence" (Monier-Williams), from a-, not, and bhāva, being; Bengali uses it for the want of what one needs.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ôbhāb
- Say it: ôbhāb, once more
- Say it: gôrôme grāme jôler ôbhāb hôy. — In summer the village runs short of water.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a moneylender, then the Bengali for the rest (remaining), then say ôbhāb again

Before you move on

What does অভাব mean? ("Want; lack; need".) Say it once more.

419.2 অপচয় (ôpôchôy) — waste; wastefulness

Before the new one: say the Bengali for the rest (remaining), then the Bengali for want (lack).

You'll want to know: অপচয়

অপচয় — ôpôchôy — "waste; wastefulness".

আলো জ্বালিয়ে রাখা বিদ্যুতের অপচয়।

ālo jvāliye rākhā bidyuter ôpôchôy.

Leaving the lights on is a waste of electricity.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অপচয় (ôpôchôy) is Sanskrit apacaya, "diminution, decrease" (Monier-Williams); the sense of wasting is the Bengali use.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: ôpôchôy
- Say it: ôpôchôy, once more
- Say it: ālo jvāliye rākhā bidyuter ôpôchôy. — Leaving the lights on is a waste of electricity.

419.4 বন্ধক (bôndhôk) — a pledge; a mortgage

Before the new one: say the Bengali for waste (of something useful), then the Bengali for stingy.

You'll want to know: বন্ধক

বন্ধক — bôndhôk — "a pledge; a mortgage".

দরকারে বাবা জমিটা বন্ধক রাখলেন। dôrkāre bābā jômiṭā bôndhôk rākhlen.

In his need my father mortgaged the land.

বন্ধক রাখা, to pawn or to mortgage; বন্ধক ছাড়ানো, to redeem a pledge.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বন্ধক (bôndhôk) is Sanskrit bandhaka, "pledging, a pledge" (Monier-Williams), from bandh, to bind: a thing bound as a surety.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bôndhôk
- Say it: bôndhôk, once more

419.5 সম্বল (sômbôl) — one's means; what one has to live on

Before the new one: say the Bengali for stingy, then the Bengali for a pledge (for a loan).

You'll want to know: সম্বল

সম্বল — sômbôl — "one's means; what one has to live on".

ওই টাকাটাই ছিল আমাদের পথের সম্বল।

oi ṭākāṭāi chhilô āmāder pôther sômbôl.

That money was all we had for the journey.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সম্বল (sômbôl) is Sanskrit śambala, also written sambala, "provisions for a journey" (Monier-Williams): পথের সম্বল keeps the old sense, and the word has grown to mean all one has to live on.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: sômbôl
- Say it: sômbôl, once more
- Say it: oi ṭākāṭāi chhilô āmāder pôther sômbôl. — That money was all we had for the journey.

মোড়ক — moṛôk — "a wrapper; packaging".

আমি উপহারের মোড়ক খুললাম।

āmi uphārer moṛôk khullām.

I opened the wrapping of the present.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মোড়ক (moṛôk) is built on মোড়া, "to wrap", which CDIAL sets beside mōṭati, "twists" (CDIAL 10186), with the noun ending -ক: the thing that wraps.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: moṛôk
- Say it: moṛôk, once more
- Say it: āmi uphārer moṛôk khullām. — I opened the wrapping of the present.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to test (by trying), then the Bengali for a paper bag, then say moṛôk again

Before you move on

What does মোড়ক mean? ("A wrapper; packaging".) Say it once more.

423.3 ক্যারিব্যাগ (kæribyāg) — a carrier bag; a plastic bag

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a paper bag, then the Bengali for a wrapper.

You'll want to know: ক্যারিব্যাগ

ক্যারিব্যাগ — kæribyāg — "a carrier bag; a plastic bag".

দোকানদার একটা ক্যারিব্যাগে জিনিসগুলো দিলেন। dokāndār ekṭā kæribyāge jinisgulo dilen.

The shopkeeper gave me the things in a carrier bag.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ক্যারিব্যাগ (kæribyāg) is borrowed from English carry bag, the Indian English name for a shop's plastic bag, written as one word; ব্যাগ inside it is already taught.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kæribyāg
- Say it: kæribyāg, once more
- Say it: dokāndār ekṭā kæribyāge jinisgulo dilen. — The shopkeeper gave me the things in a carrier bag.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a paper bag, then the Bengali for a wrapper, then say kæribyāg again

Before you move on

Before you move on

What does সাইজ mean? ("A size (of clothes or shoes)".) Say it once more.

423.5 গছানো (gôchhāno) — to palm off; to foist (something on someone)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a carrier bag, then the Bengali for a size (of clothes or shoes).

You'll want to know: গছানো

গছানো — gôchhāno — "to palm off; to foist (something on someone)".

দোকানদার আমাকে একটা পচা আম গছাল। dokāndār āmāke ekṭā pôchā ām gôchhālô.

The shopkeeper palmed off a rotten mango on me.

Past (he/she …): তিনি পুরনো মাল গছালেন, tini purôno māl gôchhālen.

The person who is landed with it takes -কে: আমাকে গছাল, foisted it on me.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

গছানো (gôchhāno) probably belongs with Sanskrit gácchati, "goes, falls to the share of" (CDIAL 3955), under which CDIAL lists Bengali gachāna, "to take a deposit"; to palm off is to make a thing fall to someone else's share.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: gôchhāno
- Say it: gôchhāno, once more
- Say it: dokāndār āmāke ekṭā pôchā ām gôchhālô. — The shopkeeper palmed off a rotten mango on me.

- Recall: say the Bengali for to palm off, then the Bengali for a sale (at reduced prices), then say ôphār again

Before you move on

What does অফার mean? ("An offer; a special deal".) Say it once more.

424.3 মন্দা (môndā) — a slump; slack trade

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a sale (at reduced prices), then the Bengali for an offer.

You'll want to know: মন্দা

মন্দা — môndā — "a slump; slack trade".

গত বছর ব্যবসায় মন্দা ছিল। gôtô bôchhôr bæbsāy môndā chhilô.

Last year business was slack.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মন্দা (môndā) goes back to Sanskrit manda, "slow, weak, slack" (Monier-Williams): trade that has gone slow.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: môndā
- Say it: môndā, once more
- Say it: gôtô bôchhôr bæbsāy môndā chhilô. — Last year business was slack.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a sale (at reduced prices), then the Bengali for an offer, then say môndā again

424.4 চাহিদা (chāhidā) — demand (for goods)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for an offer, then the Bengali for a slump.

You'll want to know: চাহিদা

চাহিদা — chāhidā — "demand (for goods)".

শীতে কম্বলের চাহিদা বেশি।

shīte kômbôler chāhidā beshi.

In winter there is more demand for blankets.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চাহিদা (chāhidā) is built on চাহ-, the old stem of চাওয়া, "to want", from the reconstructed cāh, "see, desire" (CDIAL 4775): what people want to buy.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: chāhidā
- Say it: chāhidā, once more

Fish prices in the market go up and down every day.

Past (he/she …): সেই দাম ওঠানামা করল, sei dām oṭhānāmā kôrlô.

ওঠানামা alone is the rise and fall: দামের ওঠানামা, the ups and downs of prices; সিঁড়িতে ওঠানামা, going up and down stairs.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ওঠানামা করা (oṭhānāmā kôrā) pairs ওঠা, "to rise" (CDIAL 1900), with নামা, "to come down" (CDIAL 6964), and makes a verb of the pair with করা.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: oṭhānāmā kôrā
- Say it: oṭhānāmā kôrā, once more

425.1 মেঘ (megh) — a cloud

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for demand (for goods), then the Bengali for to fluctuate.

You'll want to know: মেঘ

মেঘ — megh — "a cloud".

> আকাশে কালো মেঘ দেখে আমরা ছাতা নিলাম।
> ākāshe kālo megh dekhe āmrā chhātā nilām.
> Seeing dark clouds in the sky, we took umbrellas.

Thunder is said to be the clouds calling: মেঘ ডাকে.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মেঘ (megh) is Sanskrit megha, "a cloud" (Monier-Williams), a word Monier-Williams links with mih, to sprinkle: the cloud is the sprinkler.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: megh
- Say it: megh, once more
- Say it: ākāshe kālo megh dekhe āmrā chhātā nilām. — Seeing dark clouds in the sky, we took umbrellas.
- Recall: say the Bengali for demand (for goods), then the Bengali for to fluctuate, then say megh again

Before you move on

What does মেঘ mean? ("A cloud".) Say it once more.

425.2 বর্ষা (bôrshā) — the monsoon; the rainy season

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to fluctuate, then the Bengali for a cloud.

You'll want to know: বর্ষা

বর্ষা — bôrshā — "the monsoon; the rainy season".

বর্ষায় গ্রামের রাস্তা কাদায় ভরে যায়। bôrshāy grāmer rāstā kādāy bhôre jāy.

In the monsoon the village roads fill up with mud.

বর্ষায়, in the rains; বর্ষাকাল, the rainy season.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বর্ষা (bôrshā) is Sanskrit varṣā, "the rains, the rainy season" (Monier-Williams), from vṛṣ, to rain, the same root as বৃষ্টি, rain.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bôrshā
- Say it: bôrshā, once more
- Say it: bôrshāy grāmer rāstā kādāy bhôre jāy. — In the monsoon the village roads fill up with mud.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to fluctuate, then the Bengali for a cloud, then say bôrshā again

Before you move on

What does বর্ষা mean? ("The monsoon; the rainy season".) Say it once more.

425.3 মুষলধারে (mushôldhāre) — in torrents (of rain)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a cloud, then the Bengali for the monsoon.

You'll want to know: মুষলধারে

মুষলধারে — mushôldhāre — "in torrents (of rain)".

> সারারাত মুষলধারে বৃষ্টি হল।
> sārārāt mushôldhāre brishṭi hôlô.
> It poured all night.

Always with rain: মুষলধারে বৃষ্টি, rain in torrents.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মুষলধারে (mushôldhāre) joins Sanskrit musala, "a pestle", and dhārā, "a stream, a jet" (Monier-Williams for both), with the locative ending: rain falling in streams as thick as pestles.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: mushôldhāre
- Say it: mushôldhāre, once more
- Say it: sārārāt mushôldhāre brishṭi hôlô. — It poured all night.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a cloud, then the Bengali for the monsoon, then say mushôldhāre again

Before you move on

What does মুষলধারে mean? ("In torrents (of rain)".) Say it once more.

425.4 বজ্রপাত (bôjrôpāt) — a lightning strike; a thunderbolt

Before the new one: say the Bengali for the monsoon, then the Bengali for in torrents.

You'll want to know: বজ্রপাত

বজ্রপাত — bôjrôpāt — "a lightning strike; a thunderbolt".

ঝড়ের রাতে গ্রামের একটা উঁচু গাছে বজ্রপাত হল। jhôṛer rāte grāmer ekṭā ũchu gāchhe bôjrôpāt hôlô.

On the stormy night lightning struck a tall tree in the village.

বজ্র is thunder itself; বজ্রপাত is the bolt that falls.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বজ্রপাত (bôjrôpāt) is Sanskrit vajra-pāta, "the fall of a thunderbolt, a stroke of lightning" (Monier-Williams), from বজ্র, thunder, and pāta, a fall.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bôjrôpāt
- Say it: bôjrôpāt, once more
- Say it: jhôṛer rāte grāmer ekṭā ũchu gāchhe bôjrôpāt hôlô. — On the stormy night lightning struck a tall tree in the village.
- Recall: say the Bengali for the monsoon, then the Bengali for in torrents, then say bôjrôpāt again

Before you move on

What does বজ্রপাত mean? ("A lightning strike; a thunderbolt".) Say it once more.

425.5 ছাওয়া (chhāoyā) — to spread over; to cover over (of clouds); to thatch

Before the new one: say the Bengali for in torrents, then the Bengali for a lightning strike.

You'll want to know: ছাওয়া

ছাওয়া — chhāoyā — "to spread over; to cover over (of clouds); to thatch".

দুপুরে আকাশ মেঘে ছেয়ে গেল। dupure ākāsh meghe chheye gelô.

At midday clouds spread across the sky.

Past (he/she …): সেই আকাশ মেঘে ছেয়ে গেল, sei ākāsh meghe chheye gelô.

Mostly in the -এ form with যাওয়া: ছেয়ে যাওয়া, to be covered all over. Also to thatch a roof.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ছাওয়া (chhāoyā) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali chāuyā, "to cover, to thatch", under Sanskrit chādáyati, "covers, veils" (CDIAL 5018), the root of ছই, a boat's hood, as well.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: chhāoyā
- Say it: chhāoyā, once more
- Say it: dupure ākāsh meghe chheye gelô. — At midday clouds spread across the sky.
- Recall: say the Bengali for in torrents, then the Bengali for a lightning strike, then say chhāoyā again

Before you move on

What does ছাওয়া mean? ("To spread over; to cover over (of clouds); to thatch".) Say it once more.

The sudden violent storms of April and May, in the month of Baishakh.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কালবৈশাখী (kālboishākhī) joins কাল, "black, deadly", to বৈশাখী, "of the month of Baishakh", from Sanskrit vaiśākha, the spring month (Monier-Williams): the black storm of Baishakh.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kālboishākhī
- Say it: kālboishākhī, once more
- Say it: bikele kālboishākhī ese ônek gāchh bhenge dilô. — In the afternoon a nor'wester came and broke many trees.
- Recall: say the Bengali for damp (and dank), then the Bengali for to be covered over, then say kālboishākhī again

Before you move on

What does কালবৈশাখী mean? ("A nor'wester; a spring thunderstorm".) Say it once more.

429.2 শিলাবৃষ্টি (shilābrishṭi) — hail; a hailstorm

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to be covered over, then the Bengali for a nor'wester.

You'll want to know: শিলাবৃষ্টি

শিলাবৃষ্টি — shilābrishṭi — "hail; a hailstorm".

ঝড়ের সঙ্গে শিলাবৃষ্টি হল। jhôṛer sôngge shilābrishṭi hôlô.

Hail came with the storm.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

শিলাবৃষ্টি (shilābrishṭi) joins Sanskrit śilā, "a stone", to vṛṣṭi, "rain" (Monier-Williams for both): a rain of stones.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: shilābrishṭi
- Say it: shilābrishṭi, once more
- Say it: jhôṛer sôngge shilābrishṭi hôlô. — Hail came with the storm.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to be covered over, then the Bengali for a nor'wester, then say shilābrishṭi again

Before you move on

What does শিলাবৃষ্টি mean? ("Hail; a hailstorm".) Say it once more.

429.3 গর্জানো (gôrjāno) — to roar; to rumble (of thunder or the sea)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a nor'wester, then the Bengali for hail.

You'll want to know: গর্জানো

গর্জানো — gôrjāno — "to roar; to rumble (of thunder or the sea)".

সারারাত মেঘ গর্জাল।

sārārāt megh gôrjālô.

The clouds rumbled all night.

Past (he/she …): সেই সমুদ্র গর্জাল, sei sômudrô gôrjālô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

গর্জানো (gôrjāno) probably goes back to Sanskrit gárjati, "thunders, roars" (CDIAL 4046), with the Bengali verb ending -আনো; CDIAL lists no Bengali form there, so the link is hedged.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: gôrjāno
- Say it: gôrjāno, once more
- Say it: sārārāt megh gôrjālô. — The clouds rumbled all night.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a nor'wester, then the Bengali for hail, then say gôrjāno again

Before you move on

What does গর্জানো mean? ("To roar; to rumble (of thunder or the sea)".) Say it once more.

429.4 কাঁপানো (kā̃pāno) — to shake (something); to make tremble

Before the new one: say the Bengali for hail, then the Bengali for to roar.

You'll want to know: কাঁপানো

কাঁপানো — kā̃pāno — "to shake (something); to make tremble".

ঝড় জানালাগুলো কাঁপাল।

jhôṛ jānālāgulo kā̃pālô.

The storm rattled the windows.

Past (he/she …): সেই ঝড় জানালা কাঁপাল, sei jhôṛ jānālā kā̃pālô.

The causing partner of কাঁপা, to shiver: you কাঁপো with cold, and the wind কাঁপায় the door.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কাঁপানো (kā̃pāno) is the causing form of কাঁপা, "to shiver, to tremble", from Sanskrit kampate, "trembles" (CDIAL 2767).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: kā̃pāno
- Say it: kā̃pāno, once more
- Say it: jhôṛ jānālāgulo kā̃pālô. — The storm rattled the windows.
- Recall: say the Bengali for hail, then the Bengali for to roar, then say kā̃pāno again

Before you move on

What does কাঁপানো mean? ("To shake (something); to make tremble".) Say it once more.

429.5 নুয়ে পড়া (nuye pôṛā) — to bend low; to droop

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to roar, then the Bengali for to shake (something).

You'll want to know: নুয়ে পড়া

নুয়ে পড়া — nuye pôṛā — "to bend low; to droop".

ঝড়ে গাছগুলো নুয়ে পড়ল।

jhôṛe gāchhgulo nuye pôṛlô.

The trees bent low in the storm.

Past (he/she …): সেই গাছ নুয়ে পড়ল, sei gāchh nuye pôṛlô.
Also of a person bowed with age or a load: বুড়ো লোকটা নুয়ে হাঁটেন.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

নুয়ে পড়া (nuye pôṛā) joins নুয়ে, the -এ form of নোয়া, "to bow", which CDIAL lists as Bengali nuyā, "bows, stoops", under Sanskrit námati, "bends, bows" (CDIAL 6956), to পড়া, to fall.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: nuye pôṛā
- Say it: nuye pôṛā, once more
- Say it: jhôṛe gāchhgulo nuye pôṛlô. — The trees bent low in the storm.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to roar, then the Bengali for to shake (something), then say nuye pôṛā again

Before you move on

What does নুয়ে পড়া mean? ("To bend low; to droop".) Say it once more.

> Complete the last lesson of chapter 430: I can talk about a farmer, his plough and his fields, and watering the crop.

430.1 খেত (khet) — a field (of crops)

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for to shake (something), then the Bengali for to bend low.

You'll want to know: খেত

খেত — khet — "a field (of crops)".

> গ্রামের চারপাশে ধানের খেত।
> grāmer chārpāshe dhāner khet.
> All round the village are rice fields.

মাঠ is open ground; খেত is ground that grows something: ধানের খেত, a rice field.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

খেত (khet) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali khet, "a field", under Sanskrit kṣĕtra, "land" (CDIAL 3735).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: khet
- Say it: khet, once more
- Say it: grāmer chārpāshe dhāner khet. — All round the village are rice fields.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to shake (something), then the Bengali for to bend low, then say khet again

Before you move on

What does খেত mean? ("A field (of crops)".) Say it once more.

430.2 লাঙল (lāngôl) — a plough

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to bend low, then the Bengali for a field (of crops).

You'll want to know: লাঙল

লাঙল — lāngôl — "a plough".

গরু লাঙল টানে।

gôru lāngôl ṭāne.

The cattle pull the plough.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

লাঙল (lāngôl) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali lāṅal, "a plough", under Sanskrit lā́ṅgala, "a plough" (CDIAL 11006).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: lāngôl
- Say it: lāngôl, once more
- Say it: gôru lāngôl ṭāne. — The cattle pull the plough.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to bend low, then the Bengali for a field (of crops), then say lāngôl again

Before you move on

What does লাঙল mean? ("A plough".) Say it once more.

430.3 কৃষক (krishôk) — a farmer

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a field (of crops), then the Bengali for a plough.

You'll want to know: কৃষক

কৃষক — krishôk — "a farmer".

কৃষক ভোরে খেতে যান।

krishôk bhore khete jān.

The farmer goes to the field at dawn.

A careful word, common in the news and in schoolbooks.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কৃষক (krishôk) is Sanskrit kṛṣaka, "a ploughman, a husbandman" (Monier-Williams), from kṛṣ, to plough.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: krishôk
- Say it: krishôk, once more
- Say it: krishôk bhore khete jān. — The farmer goes to the field at dawn.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a field (of crops), then the Bengali for a plough, then say krishôk again

Before you move on

What does কৃষক mean? ("A farmer".) Say it once more.

430.4 সেচ দেওয়া (sech deoyā) — to irrigate; to water (fields)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a plough, then the Bengali for a farmer.

You'll want to know: সেচ দেওয়া

সেচ দেওয়া — sech deoyā — "to irrigate; to water (fields)".

শুকনো দিনে কৃষক খেতে সেচ দেন। shukno dine krishôk khete sech den.

On dry days the farmer irrigates the field.

Past (he/she …): তিনি খেতে সেচ দিলেন, tini khete sech dilen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সেচ দেওয়া (sech deoyā) joins সেচ, "irrigation", of the family CDIAL sets under Sanskrit siñcáti, "pours out, sprinkles", with Bengali sẽcā, "to irrigate, to bale out" (CDIAL 13394), to দেওয়া, to give.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: sech deoyā
- Say it: sech deoyā, once more
- Say it: shukno dine krishôk khete sech den. — On dry days the farmer irrigates the field.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a plough, then the Bengali for a farmer, then say sech deoyā again

Before you move on

What does সেচ দেওয়া mean? ("To irrigate; to water (fields)".) Say it once more.

430.5 চাষ করা (chāsh kôrā) — to farm; to grow (a crop)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a farmer, then the Bengali for to irrigate.

You'll want to know: চাষ করা

চাষ করা — chāsh kôrā — "to farm; to grow (a crop)".

এই গ্রামের লোকেরা ধান চাষ করে। ei grāmer lokerā dhān chāsh kôre.

The people of this village grow rice.

Past (he/she …): তিনি জমিতে সবজি চাষ করলেন, tini jômite sôbji chāsh kôrlen.

চাষ alone is farming, the work of the fields.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চাষ করা (chāsh kôrā) joins চাষ, which CDIAL lists as Bengali cās, "ploughing", under the reconstructed carṣati, "ploughs" (CDIAL 4712), to করা, to do.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: chāsh kôrā
- Say it: chāsh kôrā, once more
- Say it: ei grāmer lokerā dhān chāsh kôre. — The people of this village grow rice.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a farmer, then the Bengali for to irrigate, then say chāsh kôrā again

Before you move on

What does চাষ করা mean? ("To farm; to grow (a crop)".) Say it once more.

430.6 Looking back: from Prices Up and Down to Fields and Farming

Say the Bengali for a sale (at reduced prices) and an offer.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a sale (at reduced prices), an offer, a slump, demand (for goods), to fluctuate

- a cloud, the monsoon, in torrents, a lightning strike, to spread over
- cold (to the touch), snow, to freeze, bitterly cold, to melt
- summer, autumn, a season (for a crop or an activity), temperature, heat (warmth)
- humid, muggy, hazy, damp (and dank), to be covered over
- a nor'wester, hail, to roar, to shake (something), to bend low
- a field (of crops), a plough, a farmer, to irrigate, to farm

Before you move on

A sale (at reduced prices)? (সেল, sel.) An offer? (অফার, ôphār.) A slump? (মন্দা, môndā.) Demand (for goods)? (চাহিদা, chāhidā.) To fluctuate? (ওঠানামা করা, oṭhānāmā kôrā.) A cloud? (মেঘ, megh.) The monsoon? (বর্ষা, bôrshā.) In torrents? (মুষলধারে, mushôldhāre.) A lightning strike? >
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 431: I can talk about where rivers meet the sea: bays, creeks, deltas and silt.

431.1 উপসাগর (upôsāgôr) — a bay; a gulf

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for to irrigate, then the Bengali for to farm.

You'll want to know: উপসাগর

উপসাগর — upôsāgôr — "a bay; a gulf".

> নদীটা দক্ষিণে গিয়ে উপসাগরে পড়ে।
> nôdīṭā dôkkhine giye upôsāgôre pôṛe.
> The river flows south and falls into the bay.

The Bay of Bengal has its own name, built on this word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

উপসাগর (upôsāgôr) joins Sanskrit upa, "near, lesser", to sāgara, "the sea" (Monier-Williams): a lesser sea, a modern coinage for a bay.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: upôsāgôr
- Say it: upôsāgôr, once more
- Say it: nôdīṭā dôkkhine giye upôsāgôre pôṛe. — The river flows south and falls into the bay.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to irrigate, then the Bengali for to farm, then say upôsāgôr again

Before you move on

What does উপসাগর mean? ("A bay; a gulf".) Say it once more.

431.2 খাঁড়ি (khā̃ṛi) — a creek; an inlet

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to farm, then the Bengali for a bay.

You'll want to know: খাঁড়ি

খাঁড়ি — khā̃ṛi — "a creek; an inlet".

জোয়ারের সময় খাঁড়িতে জল ঢোকে। joyārer sômôy khā̃ṛite jôl ḍhoke.

At high tide the water comes into the creek.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

খাঁড়ি (khā̃ṛi) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali khāṛī, "a creek, an inlet", under the reconstructed khāḍa (CDIAL 3860), and again under khaḍḍa (CDIAL 3790).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: khā̃ṛi
- Say it: khā̃ṛi, once more
- Say it: joyārer sômôy khā̃ṛite jôl ḍhoke. — At high tide the water comes into the creek.

Before you move on

What does খাঁড়ি mean? ("A creek; an inlet".) Say it once more.

431.3 বদ্বীপ (bôdvīp) — a delta

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a bay, then the Bengali for a creek.

You'll want to know: বদ্বীপ

বদ্বীপ — bôdvīp — "a delta".

> বদ্বীপে অনেক নদী আর খাল আছে।
> bôdvīpe ônek nôdī ār khāl āchhe.
> There are many rivers and canals in the delta.

The ব in front is the letter: an island shaped like ব, as the Greek delta is shaped like its letter.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বদ্বীপ (bôdvīp) is usually explained as ব, the letter, and দ্বীপ, "an island", Sanskrit dvīpa (Monier-Williams): a coinage that renders the Greek delta, named for a triangular letter, with a Bengali one.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bôdvīp
- Say it: bôdvīp, once more
- Say it: bôdvīpe ônek nôdī ār khāl āchhe. — There are many rivers and canals in the delta.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a bay, then the Bengali for a creek, then say bôdvīp again

Before you move on

What does বদ্বীপ mean? ("A delta".) Say it once more.

431.4 পলি (pôli) — silt

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a creek, then the Bengali for a delta.

You'll want to know: পলি

পলি — pôli — "silt".

বন্যার পরে খেতে নতুন পলি পড়ল।

bônyār pôre khete nôtun pôli pôṛlô.

After the flood fresh silt settled on the fields.

The river mud that makes Bengal's fields rich: পলিমাটি, silt soil.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

পলি (pôli) is the fine river mud left by floods; its origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: pôli
- Say it: pôli, once more
- Say it: bônyār pôre khete nôtun pôli pôṛlô. — After the flood fresh silt settled on the fields.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a creek, then the Bengali for a delta, then say pôli again

Before you move on

What does পলি mean? ("Silt".) Say it once more.

431.5 ভরাট করা (bhôrāṭ kôrā) — to fill in (a pond or low land)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a delta, then the Bengali for silt.

You'll want to know: ভরাট করা

ভরাট করা — bhôrāṭ kôrā — "to fill in (a pond or low land)".

লোকেরা পুরনো পুকুরটা ভরাট করল। lokerā purôno pukurṭā bhôrāṭ kôrlô.

People filled in the old pond.

Past (he/she …): তিনি জমিটা ভরাট করলেন, tini jômiṭā bhôrāṭ kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভরাট করা (bhôrāṭ kôrā) joins ভরাট, "filled up, solid", built on ভরা, "full" (CDIAL 9397), to করা, to do.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bhôrāṭ kôrā
- Say it: bhôrāṭ kôrā, once more
- Say it: lokerā purôno pukurṭā bhôrāṭ kôrlô. — People filled in the old pond.

432.1 চূড়া (chūṛā) — a peak; a summit; a top

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for silt, then the Bengali for to fill in (a pond or low land).

You'll want to know: চূড়া

চূড়া — chūṛā — "a peak; a summit; a top".

> আমরা ভোরে পাহাড়ের চূড়ায় উঠলাম।
> āmrā bhore pāhāṛer chūṛāy uṭhlām.
> We climbed to the summit at dawn.

Also the top of anything tall: মন্দিরের চূড়া, the spire of a temple.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চূড়া (chūṛā) is Sanskrit cūḍā, "the hair on the top of the head, a crest" (Monier-Williams); the sense of a mountain top is a natural step, though Monier-Williams gives the head first.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: chūṛā
- Say it: chūṛā, once more
- Say it: āmrā bhore pāhāṛer chūṛāy uṭhlām. — We climbed to the summit at dawn.

437.1 বাঘ (bāgh) — a tiger

> Before the new one: say the Bengali for to sprout, then the Bengali for to plant (in the ground).

You'll want to know: বাঘ

বাঘ — bāgh — "a tiger".

> জঙ্গলে আমরা একটা বাঘ দেখলাম।
> jônggôle āmrā ekṭā bāgh dekhlām.
> We saw a tiger in the forest.

The tiger of the Sundarbans mangroves is the pride of Bengal.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বাঘ (bāgh) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali bāgh, "a tiger", under Sanskrit vyāghrá, "a tiger" (CDIAL 12193).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: bāgh
- Say it: bāgh, once more
- Say it: jônggôle āmrā ekṭā bāgh dekhlām. — We saw a tiger in the forest.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to sprout, then the Bengali for to plant (in the ground), then say bāgh again

Before you move on

What does বাঘ mean? ("A tiger".) Say it once more.

437.2 হরিণ (hôrin) — a deer

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to plant (in the ground), then the Bengali for a tiger.

You'll want to know: হরিণ

হরিণ — hôrin — "a deer".

বাঘ দেখে হরিণগুলো দৌড়ে পালাল।

bāgh dekhe hôringulo douṛe pālālô.

Seeing the tiger, the deer ran away.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হরিণ (hôrin) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali harin, "a deer", under Sanskrit hariṇá, "yellowish; a deer" (CDIAL 13982).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: hôrin
- Say it: hôrin, once more
- Say it: bāgh dekhe hôringulo douṛe pālālô. — Seeing the tiger, the deer ran away.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to plant (in the ground), then the Bengali for a tiger, then say hôrin again

Before you move on

What does হরিণ mean? ("A deer".) Say it once more.

437.3 শিকার করা (shikār kôrā) — to hunt

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a tiger, then the Bengali for a deer.

You'll want to know: শিকার করা

শিকার করা — shikār kôrā — "to hunt".

বাঘ রাতে শিকার করে।

bāgh rāte shikār kôre.

Tigers hunt at night.

Past (he/she …): সেই বাঘ একটা হরিণ শিকার করল, sei bāgh ekṭā hôrin shikār kôrlô.

শিকার alone is the hunt, and also the prey.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

শিকার করা (shikār kôrā) joins শিকার, usually traced to Persian shikār, "hunting, the game hunted", to করা, to do.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: shikār kôrā
- Say it: shikār kôrā, once more
- Say it: bāgh rāte shikār kôre. — Tigers hunt at night.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a tiger, then the Bengali for a deer, then say shikār kôrā again

Before you move on

What does শিকার করা mean? ("To hunt".) Say it once more.

437.4 চরা (chôrā) — to graze

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a deer, then the Bengali for to hunt.

You'll want to know: চরা

চরা — chôrā — "to graze".

মাঠে গরু চরছিল।

māṭhe gôru chôrchhilô.

Cows were grazing in the field.

Past (he/she …): সেই গরু মাঠে চরল, sei gôru māṭhe chôrlô.
চরানো, to take cattle out to graze, is the causing partner.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

চরা (chôrā) is inherited: CDIAL lists Bengali carā, "to move about, to graze", under Sanskrit cárati, "moves, grazes" (CDIAL 4686).

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: chôrā
- Say it: chôrā, once more
- Say it: māṭhe gôru chôrchhilô. — Cows were grazing in the field.

437.5 গুনগুন করা (gungun kôrā) — to hum; to buzz

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to hunt, then the Bengali for to graze.

You'll want to know: গুনগুন করা

গুনগুন করা — gungun kôrā — "to hum; to buzz".

রাতে কানের কাছে মশা গুনগুন করছিল।

rāte kāner kāchhe môshā gungun kôrchhilô.

At night a mosquito was buzzing by my ear.

Past (he/she …): তিনি গান গুনগুন করলেন, tini gān gungun kôrlen.

Of insects, and of a person humming a tune under the breath: গান গুনগুন করা.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

গুনগুন করা (gungun kôrā) joins গুনগুন, an imitative word for a low hum or buzz, to করা, to do. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for getting around.

Your turn

- Say it: gungun kôrā
- Say it: gungun kôrā, once more
- Say it: rāte kāner kāchhe môshā gungun kôrchhilô. — At night a mosquito was buzzing by my ear.

449.1 স্নেহ (sneh) — affection; tender love for someone younger

Before the new one: say the Bengali for anxious with longing, then the Bengali for to cry out in despair.

You'll want to know: স্নেহ

স্নেহ — sneh — "affection; tender love for someone younger".

> দাদু নাতিকে স্নেহ করেন।
> dādu nātike sneh kôren.
> Grandfather is very fond of his grandson.

স্নেহ runs downward, from an elder to someone younger; what runs back up is সম্মান (taught), respect.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

স্নেহ (sneh) is a tatsama, Sanskrit sneha, which Monier-Williams gives first as "oiliness, smoothness" and then as "tenderness, fondness"; Bengali keeps only the tenderness.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: sneh
- Say it: sneh, once more
- Say it: dādu nātike sneh kôren. — Grandfather is very fond of his grandson.

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to cry out in despair, then the Bengali for affection.

You'll want to know: মায়া

মায়া — māyā — "tender attachment; fond pity".

পুরনো বাড়িটা ছাড়তে আমার মায়া লাগল। purôno bāṛiṭā chhāṛte āmār māyā lāglô.

Leaving the old house, I felt a pang of attachment.

মায়া is the soft pull you feel toward a person, a pet or a place; the older sense, illusion, belongs to philosophy.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মায়া (māyā) is a tatsama, Sanskrit māyā, "supernatural power, illusion" (CDIAL 10060), where CDIAL, like Monier-Williams, also records a sense of compassion, from the lexicographers; the everyday Bengali sense of tender attachment probably grew from that one.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: māyā
- Say it: māyā, once more
- Say it: purôno bāṛiṭā chhāṛte āmār māyā lāglô. — Leaving the old house, I felt a pang of attachment.

Before the new one: say the Bengali for cuddling and petting, then the Bengali for romantic love.

You'll want to know: ভক্তি করা

ভক্তি করা — bhôkti kôrā — "to be devoted to; to revere (an elder)".

আমার ভাই বাবাকে খুব ভক্তি করে।

āmār bhāi bābāke khub bhôkti kôre.

My brother is deeply devoted to our father.

Past (he/she …): তিনি তাঁর বাবাকে ভক্তি করতেন, tini tā̃r bābāke bhôkti kôrten.

স্নেহ goes down, to someone younger; ভক্তি goes up, to a parent, an elder or a god.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ভক্তি করা (bhôkti kôrā) puts ভক্তি, the tatsama Sanskrit bhakti, devotion and fond attachment (Monier-Williams), before করা, to do. ভক্ত, a devotee, is the related Sanskrit bhakta.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: bhôkti kôrā
- Say it: bhôkti kôrā, once more

- Say it: ṭākā hôoyār pôre lokṭār ôhôngkār bāṛlô. — Once he had money, the man's arrogance grew.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to hate, then the Bengali for to turn up one's nose, then say ôhôngkār again

Before you move on

What does অহংকার mean? ("Arrogance; vanity".) Say it once more.

452.2 দেমাক (demāk) — conceit; airs

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to turn up one's nose, then the Bengali for arrogance.

You'll want to know: দেমাক

দেমাক — demāk — "conceit; airs".

নতুন গাড়ি কিনে প্রতিবেশীর দেমাক বাড়ল। nôtun gāṛi kine prôtibeshīr demāk bāṛlô.

Having bought a new car, the neighbour began to put on airs.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দেমাক (demāk) is usually traced to Arabic dimāgh, "brain", which took on the sense of pride and conceit in Persian.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: demāk
- Say it: demāk, once more

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to sweat, then the Bengali for a pimple.

You'll want to know: তিল

তিল — til — "a mole (on the skin)".

মীরার গালে একটা ছোট তিল আছে।

mīrār gāle ekṭā chhoṭo til āchhe.

Mira has a small mole on her cheek.

তিল is also the sesame seed; CDIAL thinks the two may be one word.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

তিল (til) is Sanskrit tila, "a mole on the skin" (CDIAL 5828), which CDIAL thinks may be the same word as tila, the sesame seed: a seed-sized dark spot.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: til
- Say it: til, once more mīrā chule ekṭā khõpā bā̃dhlô.

Mira put her hair up in a bun.

খোঁপা বাঁধা, to put one's hair up in a bun.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

খোঁপা (khõpā) is listed by CDIAL for Bengali, as a knot of hair, under a reconstructed khōppa, "a bunch of hair" (CDIAL 3939), which CDIAL takes to be a borrowing from Dravidian.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: khõpā
- Say it: khõpā, once more
- Say it: mīrā chule ekṭā khõpā bā̃dhlô. — Mira put her hair up in a bun.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name some skilled trades and say what they make and mend.
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 492: I can name some skilled trades and say what they make and mend.

492.1 কারিগর (kārigôr) — a craftsman; a skilled worker

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a female singer, then the Bengali for a female dancer.

You'll want to know: কারিগর

কারিগর — kārigôr — "a craftsman; a skilled worker".

> আমাদের গ্রামের কারিগর এই চেয়ারটা বানাল।
> Āmāder grāmer kārigôr ei cheyārṭā bānālô.
> A craftsman from our village made this chair.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কারিগর (kārigôr) is usually traced to Persian kārīgar, "a craftsman", built on kār, "work".

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: kārigôr
- Say it: kārigôr, once more
- Say it: Āmāder grāmer kārigôr ei cheyārṭā bānālô. — A craftsman from our village made this chair.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a female singer, then the Bengali for a female dancer, then say kārigôr again

Before you move on

What does কারিগর mean? ("A craftsman; a skilled worker".) Say it once more.

492.2 স্যাকরা (sækrā) — a goldsmith

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a female dancer, then the Bengali for a craftsman.

You'll want to know: স্যাকরা

স্যাকরা — sækrā — "a goldsmith".

স্যাকরা দিদিমার হারটা সারাল।

Sækrā didimār hārṭā sārālô.

The goldsmith mended my grandmother's necklace.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

স্যাকরা (sækrā) is usually traced to Sanskrit svarṇakāra, "a gold-worker" (Monier-Williams), worn down in everyday speech.

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: sækrā
- Say it: sækrā, once more
- Say it: Sækrā didimār hārṭā sārālô. — The goldsmith mended my grandmother's necklace.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a female dancer, then the Bengali for a craftsman, then say sækrā again

Before you move on

What does স্যাকরা mean? ("A goldsmith".) Say it once more.

492.3 ঝালাই করা (jhālāi kôrā) — to solder; to weld

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a craftsman, then the Bengali for a goldsmith.

You'll want to know: ঝালাই করা

ঝালাই করা — jhālāi kôrā — "to solder; to weld".

মিস্ত্রি ভাঙা পাইপটা ঝালাই করল।

Mistri bhāngā pāipṭā jhālāi kôrlô.

The mechanic soldered the broken pipe.

Past (he/she …): তিনি সাইকেলটা ঝালাই করলেন, tini sāikelṭā jhālāi kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঝালাই করা (jhālāi kôrā) joins ঝালাই, "soldering", built on a verb CDIAL lists as Bengali jhālā, "to solder", from a reconstructed jhālayati (CDIAL 5382), to করা, "to do".

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: jhālāi kôrā
- Say it: jhālāi kôrā, once more
- Say it: Mistri bhāngā pāipṭā jhālāi kôrlô. — The mechanic soldered the broken pipe.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a craftsman, then the Bengali for a goldsmith, then say jhālāi kôrā again

Before you move on

What does ঝালাই করা mean? ("To solder; to weld".) Say it once more.

492.4 কাঁসারি (kā̃sāri) — a bell-metal smith; a brazier

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a goldsmith, then the Bengali for to solder.

You'll want to know: কাঁসারি

কাঁসারি — kā̃sāri — "a bell-metal smith; a brazier".

কাঁসারি একটা নতুন থালা বানাল।

Kā̃sāri ekṭā nôtun thālā bānālô.

The bell-metal smith made a new plate.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

কাঁসারি (kā̃sāri) is a tadbhava: CDIAL lists Bengali kā̃sāri, "a brazier, a coppersmith", under Sanskrit kāṁsyakāra, "a worker in bell-metal"

(CDIAL 2989).

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: kā̃sāri
- Say it: kā̃sāri, once more
- Say it: Kā̃sāri ekṭā nôtun thālā bānālô. — The bell-metal smith made a new plate.
- Recall: say the Bengali for a goldsmith, then the Bengali for to solder, then say kā̃sāri again

Before you move on

What does কাঁসারি mean? ("A bell-metal smith; a brazier".) Say it once more.

492.5 গাঁথা (gā̃thā) — to string together; to lay (bricks)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for to solder, then the Bengali for a bell-metal smith.

You'll want to know: গাঁথা

গাঁথা — gā̃thā — "to string together; to lay (bricks)".

মজুর ইট গেঁথে দেওয়াল বানাল।

Mojur iṭ gẽthe deoyāl bānālô.

The labourer laid the bricks and built a wall.

Past (he/she …): তিনি ফুল গাঁথলেন, tini phul gā̃thlen.
The -এ form raises the vowel: গেঁথে, having laid.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

গাঁথা (gā̃thā) is a tadbhava from Sanskrit granthayati, "ties, strings together"; CDIAL gives Bengali gā̃thā for threading and for laying bricks (CDIAL 4353).

What you've built

One more word for describing what you lived and felt.

Your turn

- Say it: gā̃thā
- Say it: gā̃thā, once more
- Say it: Mojur iṭ gẽthe deoyāl bānālô. — The labourer laid the bricks and built a wall.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to solder, then the Bengali for a bell-metal smith, then say gā̃thā again

Before you move on

What does গাঁথা mean? ("To string together; to lay (bricks)".) Say it once more.

You'll want to know: দোটানা

দোটানা — doṭānā — "a dilemma; being torn two ways".

আমি দোটানায় আছি: শহরে থাকব, না গ্রামে ফিরব?

Āmi doṭānāy āchhi: shôhôre thākbô, nā grāme phirbô?

I'm torn: shall I stay in the city or go back to the village?

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দোটানা (doṭānā) joins দো, "two", usually traced to Persian do, to টানা, "a pull": being pulled two ways at once.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: doṭānā
- Say it: doṭānā, once more
- Say it: Āmi doṭānāy āchhi: shôhôre thākbô, nā grāme phirbô? — I'm torn: shall I stay in the city or go back to the village?
- Recall: say the Bengali for to scrape together, then the Bengali for pleasing to oneself, then say doṭānā again

Before you move on

What does দোটানা mean? ("A dilemma; being torn two ways".) Say it once more.

529.3 রুচি (ruchi) — personal taste

Before the new one: say the Bengali for pleasing to oneself, then the Bengali for a dilemma.

You'll want to know: রুচি

রুচি — ruchi — "personal taste".

আমার আর আমার বোনের রুচি আলাদা।

Āmār ār āmār boner ruchi ālādā.

My sister and I have different tastes.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

রুচি (ruchi) is a tatsama, Sanskrit ruci, whose senses in Monier-Williams run from "light, lustre" to "liking, taste".

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ruchi
- Say it: ruchi, once more
- Say it: Āmār ār āmār boner ruchi ālādā. — My sister and I have different tastes.
- Recall: say the Bengali for pleasing to oneself, then the Bengali for a dilemma, then say ruchi again

Before you move on

What does রুচি mean? ("Personal taste".) Say it once more.

529.4 ঝোঁকা (jhõkā) — to lean; to stoop

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a dilemma, then the Bengali for personal taste.

You'll want to know: ঝোঁকা

ঝোঁকা — jhõkā — "to lean; to stoop".

সামনে বেশি ঝুঁকলে তুমি পড়ে যাবে।

Sāmne beshi jhũkle tumi pôṛe jābe.

If you lean too far forward, you'll fall.

Past (he/she …): তিনি সামনে ঝুঁকলেন, tini sāmne jhũklen.
The stem vowel rises in the past: ঝুঁকলেন, he leaned.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঝোঁকা (jhõkā) comes from a reconstructed jhukkati, "stoops"; CDIAL lists Bengali jhũkā, "to stoop" (CDIAL 5399). ঝুঁকি, a risk, is probably from the same root.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: jhõkā
- Say it: jhõkā, once more
- Say it: Sāmne beshi jhũkle tumi pôṛe jābe. — If you lean too far forward, you'll fall.

Before the new one: say the Bengali for fixed in advance, then the Bengali for in advance.

You'll want to know: টালবাহানা করা

টালবাহানা করা — ṭālbāhānā kôrā — "to stall; to keep making excuses".

দোকানদার টাকা ফিরিয়ে দিতে টালবাহানা করল।

Dokāndār ṭākā phiriye dite ṭālbāhānā kôrlô.

The shopkeeper kept stalling about giving the money back.

Past (he/she …): তিনি সই করতে টালবাহানা করলেন, tini sôi kôrte ṭālbāhānā kôrlen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

টালবাহানা করা (ṭālbāhānā kôrā) joins টাল, "evasion", from the family of ṭalati, "moves aside" (CDIAL 5450, which lists Bengali ṭālā, "to evade"), and বাহানা, "a pretext", usually traced to Persian bahāna, to করা, "to do".

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭālbāhānā kôrā
- Say it: ṭālbāhānā kôrā, once more
- Say it: Dokāndār ṭākā phiriye dite ṭālbāhānā kôrlô. — The shopkeeper kept stalling about giving the money back.

531.4 রূপরেখা (rūprekhā) — an outline

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a list, then the Bengali for a sequence.

You'll want to know: রূপরেখা

রূপরেখা — rūprekhā — "an outline".

> ম্যানেজার নতুন কাজের একটা রূপরেখা দিলেন।
> Mænejār nôtun kājer ekṭā rūprekhā dilen.
> The manager gave an outline of the new work.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

রূপরেখা (rūprekhā) joins Sanskrit rūpa, "form, shape", and rekhā, "a line, a stroke" (Monier-Williams): the lines of a shape before it is filled in.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: rūprekhā
- Say it: rūprekhā, once more
- Say it: Mænejār nôtun kājer ekṭā rūprekhā dilen. — The manager gave an outline of the new work.

Before you move on

What does রূপরেখা mean? ("An outline".) Say it once more.

531.5 বাদ দেওয়া (bād deoyā) — to leave out; to drop (from a list)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a sequence, then the Bengali for an outline.

You'll want to know: বাদ দেওয়া

বাদ দেওয়া — bād deoyā — "to leave out; to drop (from a list)".

এই নামটা বাদ দিলে তালিকাটা ছোট হবে।

Ei nāmṭā bād dile tālikāṭā chhoṭo hôbe.

If you drop this name, the list will be shorter.

Past (he/she …): তিনি পুরনো খরচটা বাদ দিলেন, tini purôno khôrôchṭā bād dilen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

বাদ দেওয়া (bād deoyā) joins বাদ, "omission, leaving aside", usually traced to Arabic baʿd, "after", through Persian, to দেওয়া, "to give"; the sense "leaving out" is not the Arabic one.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: bād deoyā
- Say it: bād deoyā, once more
- Say it: Ei nāmṭā bād dile tālikāṭā chhoṭo hôbe. — If you drop this name, the list will be shorter.

533.1 দৈবাৎ (doibāt) — by chance

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a forecast, then the Bengali for an astrologer.

You'll want to know: দৈবাৎ

দৈবাৎ — doibāt — "by chance".

> বাজারে দৈবাৎ আমার পুরনো বন্ধুর সঙ্গে দেখা হল।
> Bājāre doibāt āmār purôno bôndhur sôngge dækhā hôlô.
> By chance I met my old friend at the market.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

দৈবাৎ (doibāt) is the Sanskrit form daivāt, "from fate", of daiva, "coming from the gods, fate" (Monier-Williams): by the gods' doing.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: doibāt
- Say it: doibāt, once more
- Say it: Bājāre doibāt āmār purôno bôndhur sôngge dækhā hôlô. — By chance I met my old friend at the market.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: tôtpôr
- Say it: tôtpôr, once more
- Say it: Jôdi dômkôl tôtpôr nā hôtô, tāhôle āgun chhôṛātô. — If the fire brigade hadn't been quick, the fire would have spread.
- Recall: say the Bengali for to secure, then the Bengali for a desired goal, then say tôtpôr again

Before you move on

What does তৎপর mean? ("Prompt; quick to act".) Say it once more.

544.2 অবকাশ (ôbôkāsh) — a respite; a break

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a desired goal, then the Bengali for prompt.

You'll want to know: অবকাশ

অবকাশ — ôbôkāsh — "a respite; a break".

দুপুরে অবকাশ পেলে আমি একটু ঘুমাই।

Dupure ôbôkāsh pele āmi ekṭu ghumāi.

If I get a break at midday, I take a short nap.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

অবকাশ (ôbôkāsh) is a tatsama, Sanskrit avakāśa, "room, space", which Monier-Williams also gives for a stretch of time in between: a gap in the day.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ôbôkāsh
- Say it: ôbôkāsh, once more
- Say it: Dupure ôbôkāsh pele āmi ekṭu ghumāi. — If I get a break at midday, I take a short nap.

544.3 ঘনিয়ে আসা (ghôniye āsā) — to draw near (of a date or danger)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for prompt, then the Bengali for a respite.

You'll want to know: ঘনিয়ে আসা

ঘনিয়ে আসা — ghôniye āsā — "to draw near (of a date or danger)".

বিয়ের দিন ঘনিয়ে এল।

Biyer din ghôniye elô.

The wedding day drew near.

Past (he/she …): সেই দিন ঘনিয়ে এল, sei din ghôniye elô.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঘনিয়ে আসা (ghôniye āsā) joins ঘনিয়ে, the -এ form of a verb built on ঘন, "dense, close", to আসা, "to come": coming closer and closer.

CDIAL lists Bengali ghana, "thick, dense", under Sanskrit ghana, and notes a Bengali verb from it meaning to come close (CDIAL 4424).

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ghôniye āsā
- Say it: ghôniye āsā, once more
- Say it: Biyer din ghôniye elô. — The wedding day drew near.

Before the new one: say the Bengali for a respite, then the Bengali for to draw near.

You'll want to know: হুড়োহুড়ি

হুড়োহুড়ি — huṛohuṛi — "a scramble; a rush".

স্টেশনে লোকজনের হুড়োহুড়ি ছিল।

Ṣṭeshône lokjôner huṛohuṛi chhilô.

There was a scramble of people at the station.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

হুড়োহুড়ি (huṛohuṛi) is an expressive doubled word for people pushing and rushing. It perhaps belongs with হুড়, "a crowd", which CDIAL lists as Bengali huṛ under huḍati, "collects" (CDIAL 14136); the link is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: huṛohuṛi
- Say it: huṛohuṛi, once more
- Say it: Ṣṭeshône lokjôner huṛohuṛi chhilô. — There was a scramble of people at the station.

Before the new one: say the Bengali for one of several, then the Bengali for priority.

You'll want to know: সাধ্য

সাধ্য — sādhyô — "one's power; what one can manage".

আমার সাধ্যমতো আমি তোমাকে সাহায্য করব।

Āmār sādhyômôto āmi tomāke sāhājyô kôrbô.

I'll help you as much as I can.

With -মতো: সাধ্যমতো, as far as one can.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

সাধ্য (sādhyô) is a tatsama, Sanskrit sādhya, "to be accomplished, attainable" (Monier-Williams).

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: sādhyô
- Say it: sādhyô, once more
- Say it: Āmār sādhyômôto āmi tomāke sāhājyô kôrbô. — I'll help you as much as I can.
- Recall: say the Bengali for one of several, then the Bengali for priority, then say sādhyô again

Before you move on

What does সাধ্য mean? ("One's power; what one can manage".) Say it once more.

545.4 মিতব্যয়ী (mitôbyôyī) — thrifty

Before the new one: say the Bengali for priority, then the Bengali for what one can manage.

You'll want to know: মিতব্যয়ী

মিতব্যয়ী — mitôbyôyī — "thrifty".

> মিতব্যয়ী হলে তুমি টাকা জমাতে পারবে।
> Mitôbyôyī hôle tumi ṭākā jômāte pārbe.
> If you're thrifty, you'll be able to save money.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

মিতব্যয়ী (mitôbyôyī) is a tatsama, Sanskrit mitavyayin, "spending little, frugal" (Monier-Williams): mita, "measured", and vyaya, "spending".

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: mitôbyôyī
- Say it: mitôbyôyī, once more
- Say it: Mitôbyôyī hôle tumi ṭākā jômāte pārbe. — If you're thrifty, you'll be able to save money.
- Recall: say the Bengali for priority, then the Bengali for what one can manage, then say mitôbyôyī again

Before you move on

What does মিতব্যয়ী mean? ("Thrifty".) Say it once more.

545.5 ঠাওরানো (ṭhāorāno) — to make out; to work out (what is right)

Before the new one: say the Bengali for what one can manage, then the Bengali for thrifty.

You'll want to know: ঠাওরানো

ঠাওরানো — ṭhāorāno — "to make out; to work out (what is right)".

অন্ধকারে আমি রাস্তাটা ঠাওরাতে পারলাম না।

Ôndhôkāre āmi rāstāṭā ṭhāorāte pārlām nā.

In the dark I couldn't make out the road.

Past (he/she …): তিনি রাস্তাটা ঠাওরালেন, tini rāstāṭā ṭhāorālen.

The word, taken apart — its roots and family

ঠাওরানো (ṭhāorāno) is a tadbhava: CDIAL lists Bengali ṭhāurāna, "to stop, to consider, to ascertain", under Sanskrit sthāvara, "fixed, firm"

(CDIAL 13767).

What you've built

One more word for saying what happens if.

Your turn

- Say it: ṭhāorāno
- Say it: ṭhāorāno, once more
- Say it: Ôndhôkāre āmi rāstāṭā ṭhāorāte pārlām nā. — In the dark I couldn't make out the road.
- Recall: say the Bengali for what one can manage, then the Bengali for thrifty, then say ṭhāorāno again

Before you move on

What does ঠাওরানো mean? ("To make out; to work out (what is right)".) Say it once more.

545.6 Looking back: from Facing Obstacles to Choices

Say the Bengali for a hindrance and persistent.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a hindrance, persistent, desperate, to give up hope, to get tangled up
- a fee, the price of a mistake, reassurance, armour, to finish off
- expectation, long-lasting, reserved, a queue token, a phase
- to fall through, fruitless, in chaos, to come loose, a muddle
- accomplished, attainment, flawless, to secure, a desired goal

- prompt, a respite, to draw near, a scramble, in a jiffy
- one of several, priority, what one can manage, thrifty, to make out

Before you move on

A hindrance? (বিঘ্ন, bighnô.) Persistent? (নাছোড়বান্দা, nāchhoṛbāndā.) Desperate? (মরিয়া, môriyā.) To give up hope? (হাল ছাড়া, hāl chhāṛā.) To get tangled up? (পর্যায়, pôrjāy.) To fall through? (ভেস্তে যাওয়া, bheste jāoyā.) Fruitless? (নিষ্ফল, nishphôl.) In chaos? (বিশৃঙ্খল, bishringkhôl.) To come loose? (খসা, khôsā.) A muddle? (গোলমাল, golmāl.) Accomplished? (কৃতী, kritī.) Attainment? (সিদ্ধি, siddhi.) Flawless? (নিখুঁত, nikhũt.) To secure? (হাসিল করা, hāsil kôrā.) A desired goal? (অভীষ্ট, ôbhīshṭô.) Prompt? (তৎপর, tôtpôr.) A respite? (অবকাশ, ôbôkāsh.) To draw near? (ঘনিয়ে আসা, ghôniye āsā.) A scramble? (হুড়োহুড়ি, huṛohuṛi.) In a jiffy? (ঝটপট, jhôṭpôṭ.) One of several? (অন্যতম, ônyôtôm.) Priority? (অগ্রাধিকার, ôgrādhikār.) What one can manage? (সাধ্য, sādhyô.) Thrifty? (মিতব্যয়ী, mitôbyôyī.) To make out? (ঠাওরানো, ṭhāorāno.)

545.7 Choices — once more

Say the Bengali for one of several and priority.

Your turn

- Say it: one of several, priority, what one can manage, thrifty, to make out

Before you move on

One of several? (অন্যতম, ônyôtôm.) Priority? (অগ্রাধিকার, ôgrādhikār.) What one can manage? (সাধ্য, sādhyô.) Thrifty? (মিতব্যয়ী, mitôbyôyī.) To make out? (ঠাওরানো, ṭhāorāno.)

The Bengali script — a reference

A reference, not a chapter — the lessons teach reading through real words. This page gathers the system and flags what is special about the Bengali script and Bengali sounds.

How the Bengali script works (the three facts)

1. Consonants carry a built-in vowel — and it is ô, not "a". ক = kô, ন = nô, ম = mô — written left to right under a connecting top line, like Devanagari but with rounder shapes. This single fact ($a \to \hat{o}$) is why Sanskrit words sound "Bengali."
2. A vowel sign changes it: কা kā · কি ki · কী kī · কু ku · কে ke · কো ko. The i-signs ি / ী are written before the consonant but read after it. A chandrabindu ঁ nasalises the vowel.
3. Standalone vowels have their own letters: আ ā · অ ô · ই i · উ u · এ e · ও o — used when a word starts with a vowel.

What is special about Bengali sounds

- s* → "sh". স (and শ, ষ) is usually pronounced "sh": আসি is āshi, not āsi.
- No separate v or w. Bengali has only ব b, so Sanskrit vāda → bād, Vishnu → Bishnu. This $v \to b$ shift is a Bengali signature.
- Conjuncts. A hasanta (্) strips a consonant's vowel so it fuses with the next: স্ + ক → স্ক, চ্ + ছ → চ্ছ. Many conjuncts take special shapes learned as you meet them.

Bengali in the family

Bengali (Bāṅlā) is Indo-Aryan — from Sanskrit, like Hindi, Marathi, and Punjabi — and its script descends, with Devanagari, from the old Brahmi writing of India, which is why they share the hanging top line. Spoken across West Bengal (India) and Bangladesh by some 250 million people, it carries an immense literary tradition — Tagore's poetry, and the national anthems of two countries, the only tongue that can say so. The lessons trace its Sanskrit roots and, where they reach, the wider Indo-European family that also shaped English.
