Mandarin, Step by Step, Character by Character

A composition-driven introduction to standard Mandarin

Adhithya Rajasekaran

Starter edition — seven short lessons in one cumulative chapter.

Copyright © Adhithya Rajasekaran. Licensed under Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International (CC BY-SA 4.0). Chinese is set in a subset of Noto Sans SC (SIL Open Font License).

How to use this starter edition

Begin with no assumed Chinese. Each section takes one small expression, teaches only the characters and sounds needed for it, shows what those characters are built from, and ends with a short retrieval prompt. There is no character list to memorise first.

Two things about Mandarin will be new to a reader coming from a European language, and this book meets both in its first chapter rather than deferring them. The first is that Chinese is written in characters, not letters: each one is an evenly sized block built from smaller recurring components, and words are one or more of those blocks. The second is that pitch is part of the word. Said on a high flat note, a falling note, or a low dipping one, the same syllable is three different words. That is not emphasis; it is as much a part of the word as a consonant.

This book is also honest about one thing it cannot do. A related language would let a new word be attached to English words the reader already owns through a shared ancestor — Spanish gracias to grace and gratitude. Chinese and English share no ancestor, so there are no cousins to show, and inventing some would be worse than having none. What replaces them here is the composition of the characters themselves: 好 is 女, woman, beside 子, child. That is a real and visible structure, and it does help — but it anchors a new word to knowledge you are acquiring in the same breath rather than to knowledge you already had, so it is a weaker hook than a shared ancestor would give. Where a component gloss is a traditional memory picture rather than settled history, this book says so.

Romanization (pinyin) stays beside the characters in this starter edition and will fade gradually. The variety taught is standard Mandarin in simplified characters; traditional characters are a labelled future edition, not a silent substitute.

Contents

How to use this starter edition iii

1 Nǐ Hǎo — Hello, Character by Character 1
1.1 mā má mǎ mà . . . 1
1.2 你 (nǐ) . . . 2
1.3 好 (hǎo) . . . 4
1.4 你好 (nǐ hǎo) . . . 5
1.5 nǐ hǎo to ní hǎo (ní hǎo) . . . 7
1.6 好 (hào) . . . 8
1.7 Practice . . . 9

2 Reading the Greeting — One Piece at a Time 11
2.1 人 (rén) . . . 11
2.2 亻 (rén (as a component)) . . . 13
2.3 尔 (ěr) . . . 15
2.4 你 (nǐ) . . . 16
2.5 女 (nǚ) . . . 18
2.6 子 (zǐ) . . . 20
2.7 好 (hǎo) . . . 21

3 One to Five — Where the Character Is the Count 25
3.1 一 (yī) . . . 25
3.2 一 (yī) . . . 27
3.3 二 (èr) . . . 28
3.4 二 (èr) . . . 29
3.5 三 (sān) . . . 30
3.6 三 (sān) . . . 32
3.7 四 (sì) . . . 33
3.8 四 (sì) . . . 34
3.9 五 (wǔ) . . . 35

3.10 五 (wǔ) 37
3.11 Practice 38

4 One Box, Two Characters, and the First Thing You Can Refuse 41
4.1 口 (kǒu) 41
4.2 口 (kǒu) 43
4.3 日 (rì) 44
4.4 日 (rì) 45
4.5 不 (bù) 46
4.6 不 (bù) 48
4.7 Practice 49

5 Yes, No, and a Tone That Moves 51
5.1 是 (shì) 51
5.2 是 (shì) 53
5.3 不是 (bú shì) 54
5.4 Practice 56

6 See You Again 59
6.1 再 (zài) 59
6.2 见 (jiàn) 61
6.3 再见 (zàijiàn) 63
6.4 Practice 64

7 Good Morning, and a Rule That Declines to Fire 67
7.1 早 (zǎo) 67
7.2 上 (shàng) 69
7.3 早上 (zǎoshang) 71
7.4 早上好 (zǎoshang hǎo) 72
7.5 Practice 73

8 Saying Who You Are 75
8.1 我 (wǒ) 75
8.2 我 (wǒ) 77
8.3 名 (míng) 78
8.4 字 (zì) 80
8.5 名字 (míngzi) 81
8.6 Practice 82

9 What? 85
9.1 什 (shén) . . . 85
9.2 么 (me) . . . 87
9.3 什么 (shénme) . . . 88
9.4 Practice . . . 90

10 One Character, Two Courtesies 93
10.1 讠 (yán) . . . 93
10.2 谢 (xiè) . . . 95
10.3 谢谢 (xièxie) . . . 97
10.4 不谢 (bú xiè) . . . 98
10.5 Practice . . . 99

11 After You 103
11.1 请 (qǐng) . . . 103
11.2 请 (qǐng) . . . 105
11.3 Practice . . . 106
11.4 (practice) . . . 108
11.5 好 (hǎo, hào) . . . 109

12 People under one roof 111
12.1 人 (rén) . . . 111
12.2 女 (nǚ) . . . 112
12.3 érzi . . . 113
12.4 儿 (ér) . . . 113
12.5 儿子 (érzi) . . . 114
12.6 nǚ'ér . . . 115
12.7 女儿 (nǚ'ér) . . . 115
12.8 jiā . . . 116
12.9 家 (jiā) . . . 116
12.10 家 (jiā) . . . 117
12.11 jiārén . . . 118
12.12 家人 (jiārén) . . . 118
12.13 Practice . . . 119
12.14 Practice . . . 119

13 From study to university student 121
13.1 dà . . . 121
13.2 大 (dà) . . . 122
13.3 大 (dà) . . . 122

13.4 dàjiā 123
13.5 大家 (dàjiā) 123
13.6 xué 124
13.7 学 (xué) 124
13.8 学 (xué) 125
13.9 xuésheng 126
13.10 生 (sheng) 126
13.11 学生 (xuésheng) 127
13.12 dàxué 128
13.13 大学 (dàxué) 128
13.14 dàxuésheng 129
13.15 大学生 (dàxuésheng) 129
13.16 Practice 130
13.17 Practice 130

14 One small step into school 131
14.1 xiǎo 131
14.2 小 (xiǎo) 132
14.3 小 (xiǎo) 132
14.4 xiǎoxué 133
14.5 小学 (xiǎoxué) 133
14.6 xiǎoxuésheng 134
14.7 小学生 (xiǎoxuésheng) 134
14.8 Practice 135
14.9 Practice 135

15 A wider school map 137
15.1 zhōng 137
15.2 中 (zhōng) 138
15.3 Practice 138
15.4 zhōngxué 139
15.5 中学 (zhōngxué) 139
15.6 Practice 140
15.7 zhōngxuésheng 140
15.8 中学生 (zhōngxuésheng) 141
15.9 tóngxué 141
15.10 同 (tóng) 142
15.11 同学 (tóngxué) 142
15.12 Practice 143
15.13 shàngxué 143

15.14 上学 (shàngxué) 144
15.15 Practice 144
15.16 Practice 145
15.17 Practice 145

16 Character or language? 147
16.1 zì 147
16.2 字 (zì) 148
16.3 hànzì 148
16.4 汉 (hàn) 149
16.5 汉 (hàn) 149
16.6 汉 (hàn) 150
16.7 汉字 (hànzì) 151
16.8 hànyǔ 151
16.9 Practice 152
16.10 语 (yǔ) 152
16.11 语 (yǔ) 153
16.12 语 (yǔ) 154
16.13 汉语 (hànyǔ) 155
16.14 Practice 156
16.15 Practice 156

17 Language or country? 159
17.1 zhōngwén 159
17.2 文 (wén) 160
17.3 文 (wén) 161
17.4 文 (wén) 161
17.5 中文 (zhōngwén) 162
17.6 Practice 163
17.7 zhōngguó 163
17.8 国 (guó) 164
17.9 国 (guó) 165
17.10 国 (guó) 166
17.11 中国 (zhōngguó) 167
17.12 Practice 167
17.13 Practice 168
17.14 Practice 168
17.15 Practice 168
17.16 字 — 汉字 — 汉语 … (zì — hànzì …) 169
17.17 Practice 169

18 Looking and reading 171
18.1 kàn . . . 171
18.2 看 (kàn) . . . 172
18.3 看 (kàn) . . . 172
18.4 看 (kàn) . . . 173
18.5 看 (kàn) . . . 174
18.6 kànjiàn . . . 175
18.7 看见 (kànjiàn) . . . 175
18.8 hǎokàn . . . 176
18.9 好看 (hǎokàn) . . . 176
18.10 Practice . . . 177
18.11 shū . . . 177
18.12 书 (shū) . . . 178
18.13 书 (shū) . . . 179
18.14 书 (shū) . . . 179
18.15 书 (shū) . . . 180
18.16 kànshū . . . 181
18.17 看书 (kànshū) . . . 181
18.18 Practice . . . 182
18.19 Practice . . . 182
18.20 Practice . . . 182
18.21 Practice . . . 183
18.22 Practice . . . 183
18.23 Practice . . . 184

19 Asking 185
19.1 ma . . . 185
19.2 吗 (ma) . . . 186
19.3 吗 (ma) . . . 187
19.4 吗 (ma) . . . 188
19.5 吗 (ma) . . . 189
19.6 nǐ hǎo ma . . . 190
19.7 你好吗 (nǐ hǎo ma) . . . 191
19.8 Practice . . . 192
19.9 shì ma . . . 192
19.10 是吗 (shì ma) . . . 193
19.11 hǎo bu hǎo . . . 193
19.12 好不好 (hǎo bu hǎo) . . . 194
19.13 Practice . . . 195
19.14 Practice . . . 196

19.15 Practice 196
19.16 Practice 197
19.17 (practice) 197

20 Six to Ten, and the Character That Was Already Here 199
20.1 六 (liù) 199
20.2 六 (liù) 201
20.3 七 (qī) 202
20.4 七 (qī) 203
20.5 八 (bā) 204
20.6 八 (bā) 205
20.7 九 (jiǔ) 206
20.8 九 (jiǔ) 208
20.9 十 (shí) 209
20.10 十 (shí) 210
20.11 Practice 211

21 Ten Words, Ninety-Nine Numbers 213
21.1 十一 (shíyī) 213
21.2 二十 (èrshí) 214
21.3 百 (bǎi) 215
21.4 一百 (yìbǎi) 217
21.5 5 — 五 (wǔ) 218
21.6 Practice 219
21.7 Practice 219

22 The Grammar That Is Not There 221
22.1 看 — 看 — 看 (kàn) 221
22.2 我是 — 你是 — 人是 (wǒ shì) 222
22.3 书 (shū) 224
22.4 中国人 (Zhōngguó rén) 225
22.5 Practice 227

23 De — The Hinge 229
23.1 的 (de) 229
23.2 的 (de) 231
23.3 看书的人 (kàn shū de rén) 233
23.4 汉语 — 我看书 (Hànyǔ, wǒ kàn shū) 234
23.5 Practice 236

24 Have, and Count 239
24.1 有 (yǒu) . . . 239
24.2 有 (yǒu) . . . 241
24.3 个 (gè) . . . 243
24.4 个 (gè) . . . 244
24.5 Practice . . . 246

25 Le — Finished, and Changed 249
25.1 了 (le) . . . 249
25.2 了 (le) . . . 251
25.3 我是大学生了 (wǒ shì dàxuéshēng le) . . . 253
25.4 了 (le) . . . 254
25.5 Practice . . . 256

26 Ne and Dui 259
26.1 呢 (ne) . . . 259
26.2 呢 (ne) . . . 261
26.3 对 (duì) . . . 263
26.4 对 (duì) . . . 264
26.5 Practice . . . 266

27 Age, and And 269
27.1 岁 (suì) . . . 269
27.2 岁 (suì) . . . 271
27.3 和 (hé) . . . 273
27.4 和 (hé) . . . 275
27.5 Practice . . . 276

28 Xihuan — What You Like 279
28.1 喜 (xǐ) . . . 279
28.2 欢 (huān) . . . 281
28.3 喜欢 (xǐhuan) . . . 283
28.4 你喜欢什么 (nǐ xǐhuan shénme) . . . 284
28.5 Practice . . . 286

29 Reading — Characters, Words, and a First Passage 289
29.1 (reading) . . . 289
29.2 (reading) . . . 290
29.3 (reading) . . . 291

30 How Are You? 293
30.1 zěnmeyàng . . . 293
30.2 很 (hěn) . . . 295
30.3 很 (hěn) . . . 296
30.4 很好 (hěn hǎo) . . . 297
30.5 máng . . . 299
30.6 lèi . . . 300
30.7 hái xíng . . . 301
30.8 Practice . . . 303

31 He, She and We 305
31.1 tā . . . 305
31.2 他 (tā) . . . 306
31.3 他 (tā) . . . 307
31.4 他们 (tāmen) . . . 308
31.5 们 (men) . . . 309
31.6 我们 (wǒmen) . . . 310
31.7 你们 (nǐmen) . . . 311

32 Mum and Dad 313
32.1 妈妈 (māma) . . . 313
32.2 妈 (mā) . . . 314
32.3 bàba . . . 315
32.4 gēge . . . 316
32.5 jiějie . . . 317
32.6 dìdi . . . 318

33 The Rest of the Family 321
33.1 男 (nán) . . . 321
33.2 男 (nán) . . . 322
33.3 男人 (nánrén) . . . 324
33.4 女人 (nǚrén) . . . 325
33.5 mèimei . . . 325
33.6 háizi . . . 326

34 What You Are Called 329
34.1 叫 (jiào) . . . 329
34.2 叫 (jiào) . . . 330
34.3 nín . . . 331
34.4 xìng . . . 332

34.5 rènshi 333
34.6 péngyou 334

35 Who Does What 337
35.1 gōngzuò 337
35.2 lǎo 338
35.3 lǎoshī 339
35.4 xiānsheng 340
35.5 zhù 341

36 Where People Come From 343
36.1 来 (lái) 343
36.2 来 (lái) 344
36.3 Měiguó 346
36.4 Yīngguó 347
36.5 Běijīng 347
36.6 nǎ 348
36.7 (dialogue) 349

37 This One and That One 351
37.1 这 (zhè) 351
37.2 这 (zhè) 352
37.3 这个 (zhège) 354
37.4 那 (nà) 354
37.5 那 (nà) 355
37.6 nǎge 356
37.7 那个 (nàge) 357

38 Eating 359
38.1 吃 (chī) 359
38.2 吃 (chī) 360
38.3 饭 (fàn) 361
38.4 饭 (fàn) 362
38.5 mǐfàn 364
38.6 è 364
38.7 cài 365

39 Drinking 367
39.1 喝 (hē) 367
39.2 喝 (hē) 368

39.3 水 (shuǐ) 370
39.4 水 (shuǐ) 371
39.5 kě 372
39.6 niúnǎi 373
39.7 chá 374

40 Fruit, Bread and Eggs 375
40.1 买 (mǎi) 375
40.2 买 (mǎi) 376
40.3 píngguǒ 377
40.4 shuǐguǒ 378
40.5 miànbāo 379
40.6 jīdàn 380

41 Paying 383
41.1 多少 (duōshao) 383
41.2 多 (duō) 384
41.3 少 (shǎo) 385
41.4 qián 387
41.5 kuài 387
41.6 tài 388
41.7 yào 389

42 In the Shop 391
42.1 dōngxi 391
42.2 mài 392
42.3 shāngdiàn 393
42.4 piányi 394
42.5 guì 395
42.6 (dialogue) 396

43 Coming and Going 397
43.1 去 (qù) 397
43.2 去 (qù) 398
43.3 huí 399
43.4 zǒu 400
43.5 chūmén 401
43.6 xuéxiào 402

44 Places in Town 405
44.1 车 (chē) . . . 405
44.2 车 (chē) . . . 406
44.3 fàndiàn . . . 408
44.4 yīyuàn . . . 408
44.5 zuò . . . 409
44.6 chūzūchē . . . 410

45 Today and Tomorrow 413
45.1 天 (tiān) . . . 413
45.2 天 (tiān) . . . 414
45.3 今天 (jīntiān) . . . 415
45.4 今 (jīn) . . . 416
45.5 zuótiān . . . 418
45.6 xiànzài . . . 418
45.7 míngtiān . . . 419

46 The Week 421
46.1 星期 (xīngqī) . . . 421
46.2 星 (xīng) . . . 422
46.3 期 (qī) . . . 424
46.4 星期一 (xīngqīyī) . . . 425
46.5 shíhou . . . 426
46.6 zhōumò . . . 427
46.7 星期天 (xīngqītiān) . . . 428

47 Months and Years 429
47.1 年 (nián) . . . 429
47.2 年 (nián) . . . 430
47.3 yuè . . . 431
47.4 明年 (míngnián) . . . 432
47.5 明 (míng) . . . 433
47.6 今年 (jīnnián) . . . 435
47.7 日期 (rìqī) . . . 435
47.8 (dialogue) . . . 436

48 Telling the Time 439
48.1 点 (diǎn) . . . 439
48.2 点 (diǎn) . . . 440
48.3 fēn . . . 442

48.4 bàn 442
48.5 jǐ 443
48.6 děng 444

49 A Day from Morning to Night 447
49.1 上午 (shàngwǔ) 447
49.2 午 (wǔ) 448
49.3 中午 (zhōngwǔ) 449
49.4 晚上 (wǎnshang) 450
49.5 晚 (wǎn) 451
49.6 xiàwǔ 453
49.7 晚上好 (wǎnshang hǎo) 454

50 Sleeping and Waking 455
50.1 shuìjiào 455
50.2 qǐchuáng 456
50.3 xiūxi 457
50.4 shēntǐ 458
50.5 bìng 459

51 How You Feel 461
51.1 gāoxìng 461
51.2 pà 462
51.3 lěng 463
51.4 rè 464
51.5 kū 465

52 Head, Hands and Feet 467
52.1 手 (shǒu) 467
52.2 手 (shǒu) 468
52.3 tóu 470
52.4 jiǎo 470
52.5 yǎnjing 471
52.6 ěrduo 472
52.7 (dialogue) 473

53 Speaking and Hearing 475
53.1 说 (shuō) 475
53.2 说 (shuō) 476
53.3 话 (huà) 478

53.4 话 (huà) 479
53.5 tīng 480
53.6 dǒng 481
53.7 màn 482

54 Learning 483
54.1 xuéxí 483
54.2 xiě 484
54.3 dú 485
54.4 wèn 486
54.5 kè 487

55 What You Love 489
55.1 想 (xiǎng) 489
55.2 想 (xiǎng) 490
55.3 ài 492
55.4 diànyǐng 493
55.5 chànggē 494
55.6 kāfēi 494

56 Free Time 497
56.1 wán 497
56.2 dǎqiú 498
56.3 yùndòng 499
56.4 pǎobù 500
56.5 xiào 501

57 At Home 503
57.1 fángzi 503
57.2 fángjiān 504
57.3 zhuōzi 505
57.4 yǐzi 506
57.5 这儿 (zhèr) 507
57.6 (dialogue) 508
57.7 (dialogue) 508

58 Things You Carry 511
58.1 手机 (shǒujī) 511
58.2 机 (jī) 512
58.3 bāo 513

58.4 diànnǎo 514
58.5 bēizi 515
58.6 yīfu 516

59 Clothes 519
59.1 chuān 519
59.2 xié 520
59.3 màozi 521
59.4 kùzi 522
59.5 piàoliang 523

60 Colours 525
60.1 白 (bái) 525
60.2 白 (bái) 526
60.3 yánsè 527
60.4 hóng 528
60.5 hēi 529
60.6 lán 530

61 Long and Short 533
61.1 长 (cháng) 533
61.2 长 (cháng) 534
61.3 duǎn 535
61.4 gāo 536
61.5 ǎi 537
61.6 xīn 538

62 Fast, Far and Near 541
62.1 快 (kuài) 541
62.2 快 (kuài) 542
62.3 jiù 544
62.4 yuǎn 544
62.5 jìn 545
62.6 zhīdào 546

63 On the Phone 549
63.1 电话 (diànhuà) 549
63.2 电 (diàn) 550
63.3 打电话 (dǎ diànhuà) 551
63.4 打 (dǎ) 552

63.5 wéi . . . 553
63.6 hàomǎ . . . 554
63.7 zhǎo . . . 555
63.8 (dialogue) . . . 556

64 Asking for Help 559
64.1 对不起 (duìbuqǐ) . . . 559
64.2 起 (qǐ) . . . 560
64.3 bāng . . . 562
64.4 bāngmáng . . . 563
64.5 jiè . . . 564
64.6 huán . . . 564

65 Excuse Me 567
65.1 门 (mén) . . . 567
65.2 门 (mén) . . . 568
65.3 请问 (qǐngwèn) . . . 570
65.4 问 (wèn) . . . 571
65.5 bù hǎoyìsi . . . 572
65.6 kāi . . . 573
65.7 guān . . . 574

66 The Weather 577
66.1 天气 (tiānqì) . . . 577
66.2 气 (qì) . . . 578
66.3 雨 (yǔ) . . . 579
66.4 雨 (yǔ) . . . 580
66.5 xiàyǔ . . . 582
66.6 xuě . . . 582
66.7 fēng . . . 583

67 Animals 585
67.1 马 (mǎ) . . . 585
67.2 马 (mǎ) . . . 586
67.3 gǒu . . . 588
67.4 māo . . . 589
67.5 niǎo . . . 589
67.6 yú . . . 590

68 Out of Town 593
68.1 山 (shān) . . . 593
68.2 山 (shān) . . . 594
68.3 星星 (xīngxing) . . . 596
68.4 cǎo . . . 596
68.5 huā . . . 597
68.6 tàiyang . . . 598

69 Meals 601
69.1 做饭 (zuòfàn) . . . 601
69.2 做 (zuò) . . . 602
69.3 早饭 (zǎofàn) . . . 604
69.4 午饭 (wǔfàn) . . . 604
69.5 晚饭 (wǎnfàn) . . . 605
69.6 好吃 (hǎochī) . . . 606
69.7 (dialogue) . . . 607

70 More to Eat 609
70.1 ròu . . . 609
70.2 bāozi . . . 610
70.3 miàntiáo . . . 611
70.4 jiǎozi . . . 612
70.5 tāng . . . 613

71 Tastes 615
71.1 好喝 (hǎohē) . . . 615
71.2 tián . . . 616
71.3 là . . . 617
71.4 xián . . . 618
71.5 diǎncài . . . 619

72 Getting About 621
72.1 火车 (huǒchē) . . . 621
72.2 火 (huǒ) . . . 622
72.3 开车 (kāichē) . . . 623
72.4 开 (kāi) . . . 624
72.5 fēijī . . . 626
72.6 lù . . . 626
72.7 dào . . . 627

73 At the Station 629
73.1 下车 (xiàchē) 629
73.2 下 (xià) 630
73.3 上车 (shàngchē) 632
73.4 huǒchēzhàn 632
73.5 jīchǎng 633
73.6 piào 634

74 Visiting 637
74.1 进 (jìn) 637
74.2 进 (jìn) 638
74.3 客人 (kèrén) 640
74.4 客 (kè) 641
74.5 门口 (ménkǒu) 642
74.6 huānyíng 643
74.7 jièshào 644
74.8 (dialogue) 645

75 Celebrating 647
75.1 快乐 (kuàilè) 647
75.2 乐 (lè) 648
75.3 生日 (shēngrì) 649
75.4 dàngāo 650
75.5 lǐwù 651
75.6 sòng 652

76 Parting 655
76.1 一会儿 (yíhuìr) 655
76.2 会 (huì) 656
76.3 明天见 (míngtiān jiàn) 657
76.4 再说 (zàishuō) 658
76.5 wǎn'ān 659
76.6 bàibai 660

77 Thanks and Replies 663
77.1 不客气 (bú kèqi) 663
77.2 máfan 664
77.3 gǎnxiè 665
77.4 fēicháng 666
77.5 zhēn 667

78 Age and Growing Up 669
78.1 多大 (duō dà) 669
78.2 长大 (zhǎngdà) 670
78.3 前 (qián) 671
78.4 前 (qián) 672
78.5 niánjì 674
78.6 xiǎoshíhou 675

79 At School 677
79.1 上课 (shàngkè) 677
79.2 课 (kè) 678
79.3 下课 (xiàkè) 680
79.4 jiàoshì 680
79.5 zuòyè 681
79.6 kǎoshì 682
79.7 (dialogue) 683

80 Jobs 685
80.1 shàngbān 685
80.2 gōngrén 686
80.3 sījī 687
80.4 yīshēng 688
80.5 gōngsī 689

81 The City 691
81.1 里 (lǐ) 691
81.2 里 (lǐ) 692
81.3 chéngshì 694
81.4 dìfang 694
81.5 wàiguó 695
81.6 pángbiān 696

82 Behind, Left and Right 699
82.1 hòu 699
82.2 zuǒbian 700
82.3 yòubian 701
82.4 zhōngjiān 702
82.5 duìmiàn 703

83 Running Late 705
83.1 shíjiān . . . 705
83.2 早 (zǎo) . . . 706
83.3 马上 (mǎshàng) . . . 707
83.4 láibují . . . 708
83.5 chídào . . . 709

84 Doing Things Together 711
84.1 一起 (yìqǐ) . . . 711
84.2 jiànmiàn . . . 712
84.3 liáotiān . . . 713
84.4 cānjiā . . . 714
84.5 zhǔnbèi . . . 715
84.6 (dialogue) . . . 716
84.7 (dialogue) . . . 716

85 Where Things Are 719
85.1 在 (zài) . . . 719
85.2 在 (zài) . . . 720
85.3 那儿 (nàr) . . . 721
85.4 lǐbian . . . 723
85.5 wàibian . . . 724
85.6 Practice . . . 725

86 Where Is It? 727
86.1 哪儿 (nǎr) . . . 727
86.2 哪 (nǎ) . . . 728
86.3 shàngbian . . . 730
86.4 xiàbian . . . 731
86.5 xǐshǒujiān . . . 732
86.6 Practice . . . 733

87 Is There Any? 737
87.1 没有 (méiyǒu) . . . 737
87.2 没 (méi) . . . 738
87.3 不 — 没 (bù — méi) . . . 740
87.4 chuáng . . . 741
87.5 dēng . . . 742
87.6 yàoshi . . . 743
87.7 bīngxiāng . . . 744

87.8 Practice 745

88 Two Cups of Tea 749
88.1 两 (liǎng) 749
88.2 两 (liǎng) 750
88.3 yī to yí ge, yì tiān (yí ge, yì tiān) 752
88.4 bēi 753
88.5 běn 754
88.6 zhāng 755
88.7 zhī 756
88.8 Practice 757

89 Give Me That 761
89.1 给 (gěi) 761
89.2 给 (gěi) 762
89.3 做 (zuò) 764
89.4 fàng 765
89.5 dài 766
89.6 zhàn 767
89.7 Practice 768

90 What I Can Do 771
90.1 会 (huì) 771
90.2 能 (néng) 772
90.3 能 (néng) 773
90.4 kěyǐ 775
90.5 yóuyǒng 776
90.6 Practice 777

91 What I'd Like 779
91.1 想要 (xiǎngyào) 779
91.2 要 (yào) 780
91.3 不要 (bú yào) 782
91.4 xūyào 783
91.5 一点儿 (yìdiǎnr) 784
91.6 Practice 785

92 Me Too 787
92.1 也 (yě) 787
92.2 也 (yě) 788

92.3 càidān 790
92.4 fúwùyuán 791
92.5 biéde 792
92.6 Practice 793

93 Too Much 797
93.1 太好了 (tài hǎo le) 797
93.2 太 (tài) 798
93.3 有点儿 (yǒudiǎnr) 799
93.4 gānjìng 801
93.5 zāng 802
93.6 Practice 803

94 All the Same 807
94.1 都 (dōu) 807
94.2 都 (dōu) 808
94.3 yíyàng 810
94.4 niánqīng 811
94.5 pàng 812
94.6 shòu 813
94.7 Practice 814

95 Why? 817
95.1 为什么 (wèishénme) 817
95.2 为 (wèi) 818
95.3 yǒushì 820
95.4 dǔchē 821
95.5 wàng 822
95.6 Practice 823

96 Because 827
96.1 因为 (yīnwèi) 827
96.2 因 (yīn) 828
96.3 suǒyǐ 829
96.4 shūfu 831
96.5 Practice 832

97 My Day in Characters 835
97.1 小时 (xiǎoshí) 835
97.2 时 (shí) 836

97.3 měitiān 838
97.4 yǐhòu 839
97.5 (reading) 840
97.6 (my own line) 841

98 With a Clock 843
98.1 Practice 843
98.2 (dialogue) 844

99 Getting Washed 847
99.1 洗 (xǐ) 847
99.2 洗 (xǐ) 848
99.3 shuāyá 850
99.4 xǐliǎn 851
99.5 xǐzǎo 852
99.6 shūtóu 853

100 Around Town 855
100.1 yínháng 855
100.2 chāoshì 856
100.3 gōngyuán 857
100.4 túshūguǎn 858
100.5 yóujú 859

101 In the Kitchen 861
101.1 chúfáng 861
101.2 白菜 (báicài) 862
101.3 菜 (cài) 863
101.4 kuàizi 865
101.5 pánzi 865
101.6 dāo 866

102 Something to Drink 869
102.1 yǐnliào 869
102.2 guǒzhī 870
102.3 kělè 871
102.4 píjiǔ 872
102.5 bīnggān 873

103 Using Things 875
103.1 用 (yòng) 875
103.2 用 (yòng) 876
103.3 ná 877
103.4 rēng 878
103.5 xiū 879
103.6 huài 880

104 On the Desk 883
104.1 本子 (běnzi) 883
104.2 本 (běn) 884
104.3 bǐ 885
104.4 qiānbǐ 886
104.5 zhǐ 887
104.6 cídiǎn 888
104.7 (dialogue) 889

105 In the Bathroom 891
105.1 máojīn 891
105.2 yáshuā 892
105.3 yágāo 893
105.4 féizào 894
105.5 jìngzi 895

106 Stops and Stations 897
106.1 车站 (chēzhàn) 897
106.2 站 (zhàn) 898
106.3 dìtiě 900
106.4 gōngjiāochē 901
106.5 zìxíngchē 901
106.6 qí 902

107 On the Move 905
107.1 tiào 905
107.2 pá 906
107.3 bān 907
107.4 tíng 908
107.5 líkāi 909

108 Trying It On 911
108.1 试 (shì) . . . 911
108.2 试 (shì) . . . 912
108.3 huàn . . . 914
108.4 shuāng . . . 915
108.5 大小 (dàxiǎo) . . . 915
108.6 héshì . . . 916

109 Screens 919
109.1 上网 (shàngwǎng) . . . 919
109.2 网 (wǎng) . . . 920
109.3 diànshì . . . 921
109.4 zhàopiàn . . . 922
109.5 chōngdiàn . . . 923
109.6 xiàzài . . . 924

110 Things I Can Do 927
110.1 外语 (wàiyǔ) . . . 927
110.2 外 (wài) . . . 928
110.3 gāngqín . . . 929
110.4 tán . . . 930
110.5 huàhuà . . . 931
110.6 tiàowǔ . . . 932
110.7 (dialogue) . . . 933

111 In Front and Behind 935
111.1 前边 (qiánbian) . . . 935
111.2 边 (biān) . . . 936
111.3 hòubian . . . 937
111.4 fùjìn . . . 938
111.5 lùkǒu . . . 939
111.6 guǎi . . . 940

112 Way In, Way Out 943
112.1 出口 (chūkǒu) . . . 943
112.2 出 (chū) . . . 944
112.3 rùkǒu . . . 945
112.4 tuī . . . 946
112.5 lā . . . 947
112.6 lóutī . . . 948

113 Cooking 951
113.1 qiē . . . 951
113.2 zhǔ . . . 952
113.3 chǎo . . . 953
113.4 kǎo . . . 954
113.5 jiān . . . 955

114 Paying 957
114.1 mǎidān . . . 957
114.2 fù . . . 958
114.3 xiànjīn . . . 959
114.4 shuākǎ . . . 960
114.5 zhǎoqián . . . 961

115 Careful! 963
115.1 小心 (xiǎoxīn) . . . 963
115.2 心 (xīn) . . . 964
115.3 xīyān . . . 965
115.4 jìnzhǐ . . . 966
115.5 zhùyì . . . 967
115.6 wēixiǎn . . . 968

116 Things I Carry 971
116.1 qiánbāo . . . 971
116.2 hùzhào . . . 972
116.3 shǒubiǎo . . . 973
116.4 yǔsǎn . . . 974
116.5 diū . . . 975
116.6 (dialogue) . . . 976

117 Which Way? 977
117.1 dōngbian . . . 977
117.2 nánbian . . . 978
117.3 xībian . . . 979
117.4 běibian . . . 980
117.5 fāngxiàng . . . 981

118 Sending Things 983
118.1 bāoguǒ . . . 983
118.2 jì . . . 984

118.3 xìn 985
118.4 duǎnxìn 986
118.5 shōu 987

119 Bags and Boxes 989
119.1 书包 (shūbāo) 989
119.2 包 (bāo) 990
119.3 xiāngzi 991
119.4 hézi 992
119.5 dàizi 993
119.6 xíngli 994

120 Takeaway 997
120.1 wàimài 997
120.2 dìng 998
120.3 dìzhǐ 999
120.4 打包 (dǎbāo) 1000
120.5 点心 (diǎnxin) 1001

121 Teaching and Practising 1003
121.1 jiāo 1003
121.2 liànxí 1004
121.3 huídá 1005
121.4 fùxí 1006
121.5 cuò 1007

122 Opening Hours 1009
122.1 yíngyè 1009
122.2 kāishǐ 1010
122.3 jiéshù 1011
122.4 shíkèbiǎo 1012
122.5 dǎzhé 1013
122.6 (dialogue) 1014
122.7 (dialogue) 1015

123 What People Are Like 1017
123.1 cōngming 1017
123.2 rènzhēn 1018
123.3 kě'ài 1019
123.4 rèqíng 1020

123.5 guānxīn 1021

124 Tall and Handsome 1023
124.1 个子 (gèzi) 1023
124.2 tóufa 1024
124.3 shuài 1025
124.4 nánkàn 1026
124.5 xiàng 1027

125 Angry and Worried 1029
125.1 生气 (shēngqì) 1029
125.2 dānxīn 1030
125.3 fàngxīn 1031
125.4 zháojí 1032
125.5 nánguò 1033

126 Often and Sometimes 1035
126.1 chángcháng 1035
126.2 yǒushíhou 1036
126.3 以前 (yǐqián) 1037
126.4 以 (yǐ) 1038
126.5 gāngcái 1039
126.6 yǐjīng 1040

127 These and Those 1043
127.1 这些 (zhèxiē) 1043
127.2 些 (xiē) 1044
127.3 那些 (nàxiē) 1046
127.4 哪些 (nǎxiē) 1046
127.5 一些 (yìxiē) 1047
127.6 zhèyàng 1048

128 Music 1051
128.1 音乐 (yīnyuè) 1051
128.2 音 (yīn) 1052
128.3 gē 1054
128.4 hǎotīng 1055
128.5 音乐会 (yīnyuèhuì) 1055
128.6 jítā 1056
128.7 (dialogue) 1057

129 Quiet and Noisy 1059
129.1 ānjìng . . . 1059
129.2 吵 (chǎo) . . . 1060
129.3 吵 (chǎo) . . . 1061
129.4 rènao . . . 1063
129.5 fāngbiàn . . . 1063
129.6 yǒuyìsi . . . 1064

130 Feeling Ill 1067
130.1 病人 (bìngrén) . . . 1067
130.2 病 (bìng) . . . 1068
130.3 gǎnmào . . . 1070
130.4 fāshāo . . . 1071
130.5 téng . . . 1071
130.6 看病 (kànbìng) . . . 1072

131 Four Seasons 1075
131.1 春天 (chūntiān) . . . 1075
131.2 春 (chūn) . . . 1076
131.3 xiàtiān . . . 1078
131.4 qiūtiān . . . 1078
131.5 dōngtiān . . . 1079
131.6 jìjié . . . 1080

132 Thousands 1083
132.1 千 (qiān) . . . 1083
132.2 千 (qiān) . . . 1084
132.3 wàn . . . 1086
132.4 líng . . . 1087
132.5 yígòng . . . 1087
132.6 shǔ . . . 1088

133 Housework 1091
133.1 打扫 (dǎsǎo) . . . 1091
133.2 扫 (sǎo) . . . 1092
133.3 jiāwù . . . 1093
133.4 shōushi . . . 1094
133.5 cā . . . 1095
133.6 dié . . . 1096

134 Heavy and Soft 1099
134.1 重 (zhòng) 1099
134.2 重 (zhòng) 1100
134.3 ruǎn 1102
134.4 yìng 1102
134.5 kōng 1103
134.6 mǎn 1104
134.7 (dialogue) 1105

135 Sport 1107
135.1 zúqiú 1107
135.2 lánqiú 1108
135.3 tī 1109
135.4 bǐsài 1110
135.5 duànliàn 1111

136 Because of the Weather 1113
136.1 qíngtiān 1113
136.2 yīntiān 1114
136.3 guāfēng 1115
136.4 dǎléi 1116
136.5 liángkuai 1117

137 Holidays 1119
137.1 节日 (jiérì) 1119
137.2 节 (jié) 1120
137.3 春节 (Chūnjié) 1122
137.4 guònián 1123
137.5 fàngjià 1124
137.6 jiàqī 1124

138 Every and Other 1127
138.1 每 (měi) 1127
138.2 每 (měi) 1128
138.3 zìjǐ 1130
138.4 biérén 1131
138.5 suǒyǒu 1131
138.6 qítā 1132

139 Colours and Shapes 1135
139.1 lǜ . . . 1135
139.2 huáng . . . 1136
139.3 huī . . . 1137
139.4 yuán . . . 1138
139.5 fěnhóng . . . 1139

140 First and Half 1141
140.1 dìyī . . . 1141
140.2 一半 (yíbàn) . . . 1142
140.3 半 (bàn) . . . 1143
140.4 cì . . . 1144
140.5 zuì . . . 1145
140.6 suàn . . . 1146
140.7 (dialogue) . . . 1147

141 Travel and Fun 1149
141.1 lǚyóu . . . 1149
141.2 yóuxì . . . 1150
141.3 guàngjiē . . . 1151
141.4 sànbù . . . 1152
141.5 diàoyú . . . 1153

142 More Housework 1155
142.1 tuōdì . . . 1155
142.2 lājī . . . 1156
142.3 shài . . . 1157
142.4 zhěnglǐ . . . 1158
142.5 jiāohuā . . . 1159

143 Clock Words 1161
143.1 miǎo . . . 1161
143.2 fēnzhōng . . . 1162
143.3 chà . . . 1163
143.4 zhǔnshí . . . 1164
143.5 半天 (bàntiān) . . . 1165

144 Easy and Important 1167
144.1 重要 (zhòngyào) . . . 1167
144.2 róngyì . . . 1168

144.3 jiǎndān 1169
144.4 tèbié 1170
144.5 juéde 1171

145 Late Again 1173
145.1 yuányīn 1173
145.2 晚点 (wǎndiǎn) 1174
145.3 nàozhōng 1175
145.4 shuì lǎnjiào 1176
145.5 gǎnkuài 1177

146 Day and Night 1179
146.1 白天 (báitiān) 1179
146.2 yèli 1180
146.3 bànyè 1181
146.4 xǐng 1182
146.5 píngshí 1183
146.6 (dialogue) 1184
146.7 (dialogue) 1184

147 It Might Rain 1187
147.1 后天 (hòutiān) 1187
147.2 后 (hòu) 1188
147.3 明天会下雨 (míngtiān huì xiàyǔ) 1190
147.4 kěnéng 1191
147.5 yídìng 1192
147.6 tiānqì yùbào 1193
147.7 Practice 1194

148 Next Month 1197
148.1 下个月 (xià ge yuè) 1197
148.2 月 (yuè) 1198
148.3 火车要开了 (huǒchē yào kāi le) 1200
148.4 下星期 (xià xīngqī) 1201
148.5 上个月 (shàng ge yuè) 1202
148.6 dǎsuàn 1203
148.7 jiānglái 1204
148.8 Practice 1206

149 Right Now 1209
149.1 正在 (zhèngzài) 1209
149.2 正 (zhèng) 1210
149.3 你在做什么 (nǐ zài zuò shénme) 1212
149.4 正好 (zhènghǎo) 1213
149.5 一边 (yìbiān) 1214
149.6 Practice 1215

150 Have You Ever Been? 1219
150.1 过去 (guòqù) 1219
150.2 过 (guò) 1220
150.3 你去过中国吗 (nǐ qù guo Zhōngguó ma) 1222
150.4 后来 (hòulái) 1223
150.5 ránhòu 1224
150.6 cónglái 1225
150.7 Practice 1226

151 Seen and Understood 1229
151.1 看到 (kàndào) 1229
151.2 到 (dào) 1230
151.3 看到 — 没看到 (kàndào — méi kàndào) 1232
151.4 学会 (xuéhuì) 1233
151.5 tīngdǒng 1234
151.6 kàndǒng 1235
151.7 zuòwán 1236
151.8 Practice 1238

152 Well Said 1241
152.1 得 (de) 1241
152.2 得 (de) 1242
152.3 你说得很好 (nǐ shuō de hěn hǎo) 1244
152.4 liúlì 1245
152.5 búcuò 1246
152.6 qīngchu 1247
152.7 Practice 1248

153 Older Than Me 1251
153.1 比 (bǐ) 1251
153.2 比 (bǐ) 1252
153.3 他比我大两岁 (tā bǐ wǒ dà liǎng suì) 1254

153.4 gèng 1255
153.5 gēn 1256
153.6 那么 (nàme) 1257
153.7 Practice 1258

154 This One or That One 1261
154.1 还 (hái) 1261
154.2 还 (hái) 1262
154.3 还是 (háishi) 1264
154.4 huòzhě 1265
154.5 bié 1266
154.6 Practice 1267

155 Trains and Opening Hours 1271
155.1 从 (cóng) 1271
155.2 从 (cóng) 1272
155.3 从八点到十点 (cóng bā diǎn dào shí diǎn) 1274
155.4 chūfā 1275
155.5 开门 (kāimén) 1276
155.6 guānmén 1277
155.7 (reading) 1278
155.8 Practice 1279

156 Price List 1283
156.1 元 (yuán) 1283
156.2 元 (yuán) 1284
156.3 jiàqián 1285
156.4 miǎnfèi 1287
156.5 guǎnggào 1288
156.6 (reading) 1289
156.7 Practice 1290

157 A Note About Tomorrow 1293
157.1 开会 (kāihuì) 1293
157.2 tōngzhī 1294
157.3 xiāoxi 1296
157.4 huífù 1297
157.5 (reading) 1298
157.6 (a reply) 1299
157.7 (dialogue) 1300

158 Waking Up 1305
158.1 jiàoxǐng . . . 1305
158.2 shuìzháo . . . 1306
158.3 zuòmèng . . . 1307
158.4 起来 (qǐlai) . . . 1308
158.5 xíguàn . . . 1309

159 Rooms at Home 1311
159.1 wòshì . . . 1311
159.2 kètīng . . . 1312
159.3 书房 (shūfáng) . . . 1313
159.4 房 (fáng) . . . 1314
159.5 yángtái . . . 1316
159.6 chuānghu . . . 1317

160 Doing the Chores 1319
160.1 sǎodì . . . 1319
160.2 xǐwǎn . . . 1320
160.3 pūchuáng . . . 1321
160.4 gànhuó . . . 1322
160.5 zhàogù . . . 1323

161 Rice and Meat 1325
161.1 大米 (dàmǐ) . . . 1325
161.2 米 (mǐ) . . . 1326
161.3 fèn . . . 1327
161.4 chǎofàn . . . 1328
161.5 niúròu . . . 1329
161.6 jīròu . . . 1330

162 How Often 1333
162.1 yìbān . . . 1333
162.2 zǒngshì . . . 1334
162.3 jīngcháng . . . 1335
162.4 ǒu'ěr . . . 1336
162.5 tōngcháng . . . 1337

163 Free This Weekend 1339
163.1 yǒukòng . . . 1339
163.2 péi . . . 1340

163.3 yěcān 1341
163.4 xià cì 1342
163.5 yíkuàir 1343
163.6 (dialogue) 1344

164 Getting Ready 1347
164.1 dǎban 1347
164.2 xǐtóu 1348
164.3 chuīfēngjī 1349
164.4 huàzhuāng 1350
164.5 guāliǎn 1351

165 Coats and Scarves 1353
165.1 大衣 (dàyī) 1353
165.2 衣 (yī) 1354
165.3 máoyī 1355
165.4 tiáo 1356
165.5 qúnzi 1357
165.6 wéijīn 1358

166 Tea Time 1361
166.1 开水 (kāishuǐ) 1361
166.2 下午茶 (xiàwǔchá) 1362
166.3 茶 (chá) 1363
166.4 hóngchá 1365
166.5 cháyè 1365
166.6 pàochá 1366

167 The Day Before Yesterday 1369
167.1 前天 (qiántiān) 1369
167.2 fāshēng 1370
167.3 没事 (méishì) 1371
167.4 事 (shì) 1372
167.5 tíngdiàn 1374
167.6 shēngyīn 1375

168 Steamed or Fried 1377
168.1 zhēng 1377
168.2 zhá 1378
168.3 dùn 1379

168.4 shāoshuǐ 1380
168.5 táng 1381

169 Early and Late 1383
169.1 一大早 (yídàzǎo) 1383
169.2 午觉 (wǔjiào) 1384
169.3 觉 (jiào) 1385
169.4 bàngwǎn 1387
169.5 áoyè 1388
169.6 shēnyè 1389
169.7 (dialogue) 1389

170 Pots and Pans 1391
170.1 guō 1391
170.2 茶杯 (chábēi) 1392
170.3 杯 (bēi) 1393
170.4 sháozi 1394
170.5 chāzi 1395
170.6 wēibōlú 1396

171 Switching Things On 1399
171.1 打开 (dǎkāi) 1399
171.2 kōngtiáo 1400
171.3 yáokòngqì 1401
171.4 àn 1402
171.5 pèng 1403

172 Sweet and Sour 1405
172.1 wèidao 1405
172.2 suān 1406
172.3 kǔ 1407
172.4 xiāng 1408
172.5 dàn 1409

173 An Invitation 1411
173.1 yāoqǐng 1411
173.2 问候 (wènhòu) 1412
173.3 候 (hòu) 1413
173.4 晚会 (wǎnhuì) 1415
173.5 jùhuì 1416

173.6 请客 (qǐngkè) 1417

174 Jobs Around the House 1419
174.1 guà 1419
174.2 nòng 1420
174.3 tái 1421
174.4 tīzi 1422
174.5 dēngpào 1423

175 Sofa and Shelves 1425
175.1 jiājù 1425
175.2 shāfā 1426
175.3 面前 (miànqián) 1427
175.4 面 (miàn) 1428
175.5 guìzi 1430
175.6 shūjià 1431
175.7 (dialogue) 1431

176 A Knock at the Door 1433
176.1 qiāomén 1433
176.2 línjū 1434
176.3 chǎojià 1435
176.4 dǎo 1436
176.5 zháohuǒ 1437

177 Full Already 1439
177.1 tuījiàn 1439
177.2 dòufu 1440
177.3 bǎo 1441
177.4 xīnxiān 1442
177.5 nánchī 1443

178 An Ordinary Day 1445
178.1 正常 (zhèngcháng) 1445
178.2 常 (cháng) 1446
178.3 日子 (rìzi) 1448
178.4 从前 (cóngqián) 1449
178.5 zuìjìn 1450
178.6 língchén 1451

179 Laundry Day 1453
179.1 洗衣机 (xǐyījī) 1453
179.2 xǐyīfěn 1454
179.3 liàng 1455
179.4 yùn 1456
179.5 yīguì 1457

180 Coming Over 1459
180.1 做客 (zuòkè) 1459
180.2 zhǔrén 1460
180.3 kànwàng 1461
180.4 过来 (guòlai) 1462
180.5 yuē 1463

181 Bed and Bath 1465
181.1 bèizi 1465
181.2 zhěntou 1466
181.3 间 (jiān) 1467
181.4 间 (jiān) 1468
181.5 yùshì 1469
181.6 chuānglián 1470
181.7 (dialogue) 1471

182 Eating Out 1473
182.1 fànguǎn 1473
182.2 冷菜 (lěngcài) 1474
182.3 冷 (lěng) 1475
182.4 小吃 (xiǎochī) 1477
182.5 家常菜 (jiāchángcài) 1478
182.6 héfàn 1479

183 In and Out 1481
183.1 出去 (chūqù) 1481
183.2 进来 (jìnlái) 1482
183.3 xiàbān 1483
183.4 suǒmén 1484
183.5 tǎng 1485

184 Holiday Plans 1487
184.1 dùjià . . . 1487
184.2 juédìng . . . 1488
184.3 cānguān . . . 1489
184.4 lǎojiā . . . 1490
184.5 fàngsōng . . . 1491

185 Long Ago and Soon 1493
185.1 hǎojiǔ . . . 1493
185.2 zhīqián . . . 1494
185.3 zhīhòu . . . 1495
185.4 早晚 (zǎowǎn) . . . 1496
185.5 wǎngwǎng . . . 1497

186 Odds and Ends 1499
186.1 jiǎndāo . . . 1499
186.2 lājītǒng . . . 1500
186.3 sùliàodài . . . 1501
186.4 píngzi . . . 1502
186.5 chōuti . . . 1503

187 What a Day 1505
187.1 dǎpò . . . 1505
187.2 shuāi . . . 1506
187.3 hòuhuǐ . . . 1507
187.4 dāngshí . . . 1508
187.5 jiéguǒ . . . 1509
187.6 (dialogue) . . . 1510
187.7 (dialogue) . . . 1511

188 Money to Spend 1513
188.1 有钱 (yǒuqián) . . . 1513
188.2 钱 (qián) . . . 1514
188.3 huāqián . . . 1516
188.4 língqián . . . 1517
188.5 shěngqián . . . 1518
188.6 gòu . . . 1519

189 Forms and Dates 1521
189.1 号 (hào) 1521
189.2 号 (hào) 1522
189.3 biǎogé 1523
189.4 tiánxiě 1524
189.5 qiānmíng 1525
189.6 shēnfènzhèng 1526

190 Shops in Town 1529
190.1 书店 (shūdiàn) 1529
190.2 店 (diàn) 1530
190.3 yàodiàn 1532
190.4 shāngchǎng 1533
190.5 diànyǐngyuàn 1534
190.6 bówùguǎn 1535

191 Back Next Month 1537
191.1 回来 (huílái) 1537
191.2 回 (huí) 1538
191.3 回去 (huíqù) 1539
191.4 回国 (huíguó) 1540
191.5 出国 (chūguó) 1541
191.6 chūchāi 1542

192 Signs in a Building 1545
192.1 cèsuǒ 1545
192.2 diàntī 1546
192.3 tíngchēchǎng 1547
192.4 páiduì 1548
192.5 kāifàng 1549

193 Prices Up and Down 1551
193.1 tèjià 1551
193.2 jiàngjià 1552
193.3 zhǎngjià 1553
193.4 jiǎngjià 1554
193.5 zhìliàng 1555
193.6 (dialogue) 1556

194 Roads and Crossings 1559
194.1 马路 (mǎlù) 1559
194.2 路 (lù) 1560
194.3 zǒulù 1562
194.4 bānmǎxiàn 1563
194.5 guǎngchǎng 1564
194.6 hónglǜdēng 1565

195 At the Bank 1567
195.1 cúnqián 1567
195.2 qǔqián 1568
195.3 xìnyòngkǎ 1569
195.4 mìmǎ 1570
195.5 zhànghù 1571

196 Tickets and Flights 1573
196.1 车票 (chēpiào) 1573
196.2 票 (piào) 1574
196.3 机票 (jīpiào) 1576
196.4 hángbān 1576
196.5 qǐfēi 1577
196.6 dàodá 1578

197 Finding the Way 1581
197.1 问路 (wènlù) 1581
197.2 找到 (zhǎodào) 1582
197.3 找 (zhǎo) 1583
197.4 mílù 1584
197.5 yìzhí 1585
197.6 lùxiàn 1586

198 Phones and Messages 1589
198.1 关机 (guānjī) 1589
198.2 关 (guān) 1590
198.3 开机 (kāijī) 1591
198.4 liúyán 1592
198.5 zhànxiàn 1593
198.6 xìnhào 1594

199 Sizes 1597
199.1 chǐmǎ . . . 1597
199.2 báo . . . 1598
199.3 féi . . . 1599
199.4 jǐn . . . 1600
199.5 tiāo . . . 1601
199.6 (dialogue) . . . 1602

200 Booking a Room 1605
200.1 bīnguǎn . . . 1605
200.2 yùdìng . . . 1606
200.3 dānrénjiān . . . 1607
200.4 rùzhù . . . 1608
200.5 tuìfáng . . . 1609

201 Post and Parcels 1611
201.1 yóupiào . . . 1611
201.2 kuàidì . . . 1612
201.3 yóujiàn . . . 1613
201.4 fāsòng . . . 1614
201.5 shōudào . . . 1615

202 At the Till 1617
202.1 sǎomǎ . . . 1617
202.2 shōujù . . . 1618
202.3 tuìhuò . . . 1619
202.4 gùkè . . . 1620
202.5 shōuyíntái . . . 1621

203 Renting a Flat 1623
203.1 zū . . . 1623
203.2 房东 (fángdōng) . . . 1624
203.3 东 (dōng) . . . 1625
203.4 fángzū . . . 1627
203.5 yājīn . . . 1627
203.6 hétong . . . 1628

204 Online 1631
204.1 网站 (wǎngzhàn) . . . 1631
204.2 dēnglù . . . 1632

204.3 diǎnjī . . . 1633
204.4 shìpín . . . 1634
204.5 打字 (dǎzì) . . . 1635

205 How Far Is It? 1637
205.1 离 (lí) . . . 1637
205.2 离 (lí) . . . 1638
205.3 公里 (gōnglǐ) . . . 1640
205.4 公 (gōng) . . . 1641
205.5 zuǒyòu . . . 1642
205.6 chàbuduō . . . 1643
205.7 jùlí . . . 1644
205.8 (dialogue) . . . 1645

206 Upstairs 1647
206.1 lóu . . . 1647
206.2 céng . . . 1648
206.3 shànglóu . . . 1649
206.4 bàngōngshì . . . 1650
206.5 qiántái . . . 1651

207 Where and When 1653
207.1 地点 (dìdiǎn) . . . 1653
207.2 地 (dì) . . . 1654
207.3 jìhuà . . . 1655
207.4 ānpái . . . 1656
207.5 zhàoxiàng . . . 1657
207.6 jǐngdiǎn . . . 1658

208 Getting Things Fixed 1661
208.1 shīfu . . . 1661
208.2 jiǎnchá . . . 1662
208.3 ānzhuāng . . . 1663
208.4 gōngjù . . . 1664
208.5 diànchí . . . 1665

209 Rules and Notices 1667
209.1 guīdìng . . . 1667
209.2 ānquán . . . 1668
209.3 bǎochí . . . 1669

209.4 dǎrǎo 1670
209.5 yǔnxǔ 1671

210 Colours and Styles 1673
210.1 zǐsè 1673
210.2 zōngsè 1674
210.3 kuǎnshì 1675
210.4 试衣间 (shìyījiān) 1676
210.5 xuǎn 1677

211 Local or From Out of Town 1679
211.1 本地 (běndì) 1679
211.2 外地 (wàidì) 1680
211.3 shìzhōngxīn 1681
211.4 dìtú 1682
211.5 dàochù 1683
211.6 (dialogue) 1684

212 Services in Town 1687
212.1 dǎyìn 1687
212.2 fùyìn 1688
212.3 chōngzhí 1689
212.4 yùyuē 1690
212.5 lǐfà 1691

213 A Trip Abroad 1693
213.1 qiānzhèng 1693
213.2 dǎoyóu 1694
213.3 yóukè 1695
213.4 门票 (ménpiào) 1696
213.5 yílù píng'ān 1697

214 Asking for Help 1699
214.1 wèntí 1699
214.2 gàosu 1700
214.3 明白 (míngbai) 1701
214.4 bànfǎ 1702
214.5 zěnme bàn 1703

215 Deliveries and the Laundry 1705
215.1 sònghuò . . . 1705
215.2 qiānshōu . . . 1706
215.3 jìcún . . . 1707
215.4 洗衣店 (xǐyīdiàn) . . . 1708
215.5 gānxǐ . . . 1709

216 Something Has Gone Wrong 1711
216.1 zāogāo . . . 1711
216.2 qíguài . . . 1712
216.3 tōu . . . 1713
216.4 jǐngchá . . . 1714
216.5 bàojǐng . . . 1715

217 Never Mind 1717
217.1 méi guānxi . . . 1717
217.2 dāngrán . . . 1718
217.3 jìde . . . 1719
217.4 dǎting . . . 1720
217.5 jiějué . . . 1721
217.6 (dialogue) . . . 1722
217.7 (dialogue) . . . 1723

218 Wind and Warm Days 1725
218.1 风衣 (fēngyī) . . . 1725
218.2 风 (fēng) . . . 1726
218.3 nuǎnhuo . . . 1728
218.4 mēnrè . . . 1729
218.5 gānzào . . . 1730
218.6 cháoshī . . . 1730

219 Cloudy Tomorrow 1733
219.1 云 (yún) . . . 1733
219.2 云 (yún) . . . 1734
219.3 多云 (duōyún) . . . 1736
219.4 jiàngwēn . . . 1736
219.5 qìwēn . . . 1737
219.6 fàngqíng . . . 1738

220 Keeping Fit 1741
220.1 jiànshēn 1741
220.2 jiǎnféi 1742
220.3 chūhàn 1743
220.4 tiàoshéng 1744
220.5 zuòcāo 1745

221 Snow and Ice 1747
221.1 雪人 (xuěrén) 1747
221.2 雪 (xuě) 1748
221.3 huáxuě 1750
221.4 bīng 1751
221.5 língxià 1751
221.6 shǒutào 1752

222 Under the Weather 1755
222.1 zháoliáng 1755
222.2 késou 1756
222.3 sǎngzi 1757
222.4 dǎ pēntì 1758
222.5 nánshòu 1759

223 Animals 1761
223.1 dòngwù 1761
223.2 xióngmāo 1762
223.3 lǎohǔ 1763
223.4 hóuzi 1764
223.5 tùzi 1765
223.6 (dialogue) 1766

224 Spring Flowers 1767
224.1 开花 (kāihuā) 1767
224.2 花 (huā) 1768
224.3 花店 (huādiàn) 1770
224.4 huāyuán 1771
224.5 húdié 1772
224.6 mìfēng 1773

225 In the Country 1775
225.1 nóngcūn 1775
225.2 nóngmín 1776
225.3 zhòngdì 1777
225.4 zhāi 1778
225.5 lùyíng 1779

226 Grass and Lakes 1781
226.1 草地 (cǎodì) 1781
226.2 草 (cǎo) 1782
226.3 hú 1784
226.4 sēnlín 1784
226.5 cǎoyuán 1785
226.6 fēngjǐng 1786

227 A Day at the Sea 1789
227.1 hǎibiān 1789
227.2 chuán 1790
227.3 yùnchuán 1791
227.4 shātān 1792
227.5 yùdào 1793

228 A Headache 1795
228.1 头疼 (tóuténg) 1795
228.2 头 (tóu) 1796
228.3 疼 (téng) 1797
228.4 chīyào 1799
228.5 dǎzhēn 1800
228.6 yánzhòng 1801
228.7 点头 (diǎntóu) 1802

229 Keeping a Pet 1803
229.1 chǒngwù 1803
229.2 yǎng 1804
229.3 liùgǒu 1805
229.4 zhuā 1806
229.5 mō 1807
229.6 (dialogue) 1808

230 Head to Toe 1811
230.1 身上 (shēnshang) 1811
230.2 身 (shēn) 1812
230.3 体重 (tǐzhòng) 1814
230.4 体 (tǐ) 1815
230.5 dùzi 1816
230.6 bízi 1817
230.7 tuǐ 1818

231 Seeing a Doctor 1821
231.1 中医 (zhōngyī) 1821
231.2 医 (yī) 1822
231.3 西医 (xīyī) 1824
231.4 西 (xī) 1825
231.5 guàhào 1826
231.6 hùshi 1827
231.7 kāiyào 1828

232 An Accident 1831
232.1 出事 (chūshì) 1831
232.2 shòushāng 1832
232.3 liúxuè 1833
232.4 zhuàng 1834
232.5 jiùhùchē 1835

233 How People Look 1837
233.1 yàngzi 1837
233.2 yǎnjìng 1838
233.3 húzi 1839
233.4 miáotiao 1840
233.5 pífū 1841

234 Rain or Shine 1843
234.1 tuīchí 1843
234.2 qǔxiāo 1844
234.3 gǎitiān 1845
234.4 雨衣 (yǔyī) 1846
234.5 duǒyǔ 1847

235 For a Reason 1849
235.1 为了 (wèile) 1849
235.2 yóuyú 1850
235.3 lǐyóu 1851
235.4 zhǐhǎo 1852
235.5 guàibude 1853
235.6 (dialogue) 1854

236 Something Odd 1857
236.1 出现 (chūxiàn) 1857
236.2 现 (xiàn) 1858
236.3 fāxiàn 1860
236.4 hàipà 1861
236.5 xìnghǎo 1861
236.6 chàdiǎnr 1862

237 Plants 1865
237.1 zhíwù 1865
237.2 花生 (huāshēng) 1866
237.3 yèzi 1867
237.4 fāyá 1868
237.5 xīguā 1869

238 Sea and Sky 1871
238.1 tiānkōng 1871
238.2 yuèliang 1872
238.3 wūyún 1873
238.4 dàhǎi 1874
238.5 cǎihóng 1875

239 Healthy Habits 1877
239.1 jiànkāng 1877
239.2 jièyān 1878
239.3 hējiǔ 1879
239.4 hūxī 1880
239.5 tǐjiǎn 1881

240 Feeling Ill 1883
240.1 生病 (shēngbìng) 1883
240.2 fāyán 1884

240.3 zhǒng 1885
240.4 tù 1886
240.5 lā dùzi 1887

241 In Hospital 1889
241.1 zhùyuàn 1889
241.2 病房 (bìngfáng) 1890
241.3 shǒushù 1891
241.4 chūyuàn 1892
241.5 huīfù 1893
241.6 (dialogue) 1894

242 Farm Animals and Bugs 1897
242.1 zhū 1897
242.2 shānyáng 1898
242.3 shé 1899
242.4 chóngzi 1900
242.5 wénzi 1901

243 Changing Seasons 1903
243.1 气候 (qìhòu) 1903
243.2 雪花 (xuěhuā) 1904
243.3 biànhuà 1905
243.4 jiébīng 1906
243.5 wēndù 1907

244 A Storm Coming 1909
244.1 táifēng 1909
244.2 zhènyǔ 1910
244.3 shuōbudìng 1911
244.4 wànyī 1912
244.5 jìxù 1913

245 Take Care 1915
245.1 tǐwēn 1915
245.2 chuánrǎn 1916
245.3 kǒuzhào 1917
245.4 xīnqíng 1918
245.5 bǎozhòng 1919

246 Out in the Hills 1921
246.1 cūnzi . . . 1921
246.2 qiáo . . . 1922
246.3 shítou . . . 1923
246.4 chítáng . . . 1924
246.5 huáchuán . . . 1925

247 Back From a Trip 1927
247.1 jīnglì . . . 1927
247.2 yúkuài . . . 1928
247.3 tèchǎn . . . 1929
247.4 jìniànpǐn . . . 1930
247.5 huíyì . . . 1931
247.6 (dialogue) . . . 1932
247.7 (dialogue) . . . 1933

248 A New Term 1935
248.1 学期 (xuéqī) . . . 1935
248.2 niánjí . . . 1936
248.3 校长 (xiàozhǎng) . . . 1937
248.4 校 (xiào) . . . 1938
248.5 高中 (gāozhōng) . . . 1940
248.6 高 (gāo) . . . 1941
248.7 家长 (jiāzhǎng) . . . 1942

249 Hitting the Books 1945
249.1 yùxí . . . 1945
249.2 fàngxué . . . 1946
249.3 读音 (dúyīn) . . . 1947
249.4 读 (dú) . . . 1948
249.5 chéngjì . . . 1950
249.6 nǔlì . . . 1950

250 Hobbies 1953
250.1 àihào . . . 1953
250.2 xìngqù . . . 1954
250.3 小说 (xiǎoshuō) . . . 1955
250.4 gùshi . . . 1956
250.5 xiàqí . . . 1957

251 Essays and New Characters 1959
251.1 piān . . . 1959
251.2 作文 (zuòwén) . . . 1960
251.3 作 (zuò) . . . 1961
251.4 写作 (xiězuò) . . . 1963
251.5 写 (xiě) . . . 1964
251.6 生字 (shēngzì) . . . 1965
251.7 xiūgǎi . . . 1966

252 Happy and Sad 1969
252.1 开心 (kāixīn) . . . 1969
252.2 gǎndào . . . 1970
252.3 shāngxīn . . . 1971
252.4 shīwàng . . . 1972
252.5 mǎnyì . . . 1973

253 Grandparents and Relatives 1975
253.1 yéye . . . 1975
253.2 nǎinai . . . 1976
253.3 小孩 (xiǎohái) . . . 1977
253.4 孩 (hái) . . . 1978
253.5 子女 (zǐnǚ) . . . 1979
253.6 qīnqi . . . 1980
253.7 (dialogue) . . . 1981

254 Born and Married 1983
254.1 出生 (chūshēng) . . . 1983
254.2 jiéhūn . . . 1984
254.3 bìyè . . . 1985
254.4 hūnlǐ . . . 1986
254.5 shēnghuó . . . 1987

255 A Part-Time Job 1989
255.1 打工 (dǎgōng) . . . 1989
255.2 工 (gōng) . . . 1990
255.3 gōngzī . . . 1992
255.4 同事 (tóngshì) . . . 1992
255.5 jiābān . . . 1993
255.6 lǎobǎn . . . 1994

256 What Do You Think? 1997
256.1 rènwéi . . . 1997
256.2 kànfǎ . . . 1998
256.3 看来 (kànlai) . . . 1999
256.4 yěxǔ . . . 2000
256.5 不同 (bùtóng) . . . 2001

257 Music and Shows 2003
257.1 yuèqì . . . 2003
257.2 dǎgǔ . . . 2004
257.3 yǎnchū . . . 2005
257.4 gēshǒu . . . 2006
257.5 gǔzhǎng . . . 2007

258 Warm-Hearted 2009
258.1 yǒuhǎo . . . 2009
258.2 热心 (rèxīn) . . . 2010
258.3 热 (rè) . . . 2011
258.4 nàixīn . . . 2013
258.5 yōumò . . . 2014
258.6 xìnggé . . . 2015

259 What Do You Do? 2017
259.1 zhíyè . . . 2017
259.2 作家 (zuòjiā) . . . 2018
259.3 lǜshī . . . 2019
259.4 jìzhě . . . 2020
259.5 电工 (diàngōng) . . . 2021
259.6 (dialogue) . . . 2022

260 What I Can Do 2025
260.1 nénglì . . . 2025
260.2 本事 (běnshi) . . . 2026
260.3 高手 (gāoshǒu) . . . 2027
260.4 jìshù . . . 2028
260.5 jìnbù . . . 2029

261 Have You Ever? 2031
261.1 jīngyàn . . . 2031
261.2 céngjīng . . . 2032

261.3 liúxué 2033
261.4 国外 (guówài) 2034
261.5 tǐyàn 2035

262 Win or Lose 2037
262.1 wǎngqiú 2037
262.2 pīngpāngqiú 2038
262.3 对手 (duìshǒu) 2039
262.4 dǎbài 2040
262.5 jiāyóu 2041

263 Time Off Work 2043
263.1 jīnglǐ 2043
263.2 fùzé 2044
263.3 请假 (qǐngjià) 2045
263.4 假 (jià) 2046
263.5 病假 (bìngjià) 2048
263.6 年假 (niánjià) 2049

264 Sorry, I Can't 2051
264.1 jùjué 2051
264.2 kěxī 2052
264.3 bàoqiàn 2053
264.4 kǒngpà 2054
264.5 qíshí 2055

265 Shy or Brave 2057
265.1 hàixiū 2057
265.2 yǒnggǎn 2058
265.3 dàfang 2059
265.4 小气 (xiǎoqì) 2060
265.5 jǐnzhāng 2061
265.6 (dialogue) 2062

266 Grown-Ups and Children 2065
266.1 大人 (dàren) 2065
266.2 bǎobao 2066
266.3 男孩 (nánhái) 2067
266.4 女孩 (nǚhái) 2068
266.5 中年 (zhōngnián) 2069

267 Actors and Jokes 2071
267.1 yǎnyuán . . . 2071
267.2 jiémù . . . 2072
267.3 明星 (míngxīng) . . . 2073
267.4 笑话 (xiàohua) . . . 2074
267.5 笑 (xiào) . . . 2075
267.6 好笑 (hǎoxiào) . . . 2076

268 Exams 2079
268.1 bàomíng . . . 2079
268.2 口试 (kǒushì) . . . 2080
268.3 jígé . . . 2081
268.4 dá'àn . . . 2082
268.5 jiěshì . . . 2083

269 When I Was Little 2085
269.1 从小 (cóngxiǎo) . . . 2085
269.2 先 (xiān) . . . 2086
269.3 先 (xiān) . . . 2087
269.4 tóngnián . . . 2088
269.5 本来 (běnlái) . . . 2089
269.6 wánjù . . . 2090

270 Do You Agree? 2093
270.1 tóngyì . . . 2093
270.2 fǎnduì . . . 2094
270.3 zànchéng . . . 2095
270.4 zhīchí . . . 2096
270.5 xiāngxìn . . . 2097

271 Moods 2099
271.1 jīdòng . . . 2099
271.2 gǎndòng . . . 2100
271.3 chījīng . . . 2101
271.4 wúliáo . . . 2102
271.5 心事 (xīnshì) . . . 2103
271.6 (dialogue) . . . 2104

272 Husband and Wife 2107
272.1 qīzi 2107
272.2 老公 (lǎogōng) 2108
272.3 老 (lǎo) 2109
272.4 外公 (wàigōng) 2111
272.5 shūshu 2111
272.6 āyí 2112

273 Honest and Careful 2115
273.1 chéngshí 2115
273.2 好客 (hàokè) 2116
273.3 用心 (yòngxīn) 2117
273.4 cūxīn 2118
273.5 xìxīn 2119

274 Free Time 2121
274.1 huábīng 2121
274.2 shōují 2122
274.3 热门 (rèmén) 2123
274.4 手工 (shǒugōng) 2124
274.5 qiúmí 2125

275 Saying Sorry 2127
275.1 dàoqiàn 2127
275.2 yuánliàng 2128
275.3 dāying 2129
275.4 jiēshòu 2130
275.5 suíbiàn 2131

276 A New Job 2133
276.1 面试 (miànshì) 2133
276.2 cízhí 2134
276.3 机会 (jīhuì) 2135
276.4 tuìxiū 2136
276.5 大事 (dàshì) 2137

277 Likes and Dislikes 2139
277.1 yǒuqù 2139
277.2 tǎoyàn 2140
277.3 xīnshǎng 2141

277.4 xiǎngshòu 2142
277.5 rè'ài 2143
277.6 (dialogue) 2144
277.7 (dialogue) 2145

278 First, Then, Last 2147
278.1 最后 (zuìhòu) 2147
278.2 最 (zuì) 2148
278.3 先…然后…最后 (xiān … ránhòu … zuìhòu) 2150
278.4 然 (rán) 2151
278.5 shǒuxiān 2152
278.6 jiēzhe 2154
278.7 吃了饭以后 (chī le fàn yǐhòu) 2155
278.8 Practice 2156

279 The Next Day 2159
279.1 第二天 (dì'èr tiān) 2159
279.2 第 (dì) 2161
279.3 …的时候 (… de shíhou) 2162
279.4 突然 (tūrán) 2163
279.5 突 (tū) 2164
279.6 一下子 (yíxiàzi) 2166
279.7 (reading) 2167
279.8 Practice 2169

280 What I Think 2173
280.1 意见 (yìjiàn) 2173
280.2 意 (yì) 2174
280.3 我觉得… (wǒ juéde …) 2176
280.4 hǎoxiàng 2177
280.5 这么 (zhème) 2178
280.6 Practice 2179

281 For Example 2183
281.1 比如 (bǐrú) 2183
281.2 如 (rú) 2184
281.3 因为…所以… (yīnwèi … suǒyǐ …) 2186
281.4 所 (suǒ) 2187
281.5 yīncǐ 2188
281.6 lìzi 2189

281.7 (one reason) 2190
281.8 Practice 2191

282 You Should Rest 2195
282.1 该 (gāi) 2195
282.2 该 (gāi) 2196
282.3 应该 (yīnggāi) 2198
282.4 应 (yīng) 2199
282.5 你应该… (nǐ yīnggāi …) 2200
282.6 最好 (zuìhǎo) 2201
282.7 děi 2202
282.8 Practice 2204

283 Which Way? 2207
283.1 怎么 (zěnme) 2207
283.2 怎 (zěn) 2208
283.3 去…怎么走 (qù … zěnme zǒu) 2210
283.4 走 (zǒu) 2211
283.5 wǎng 2212
283.6 再 (zài) 2213
283.7 路过 (lùguò) 2215
283.8 Practice 2216

284 Two Tickets 2219
284.1 zhàntái 2219
284.2 坐火车去 (zuò huǒchē qù) 2220
284.3 坐 (zuò) 2221
284.4 dānchéng 2223
284.5 zuòwèi 2224
284.6 tuìpiào 2225
284.7 坐在这儿 (zuò zài zhèr) 2226
284.8 一家书店 (yì jiā shūdiàn) 2227
284.9 Practice 2228

285 Lost on the Way 2231
285.1 找回 (zhǎohuí) 2231
285.2 我的手机不见了 (wǒ de shǒujī bú jiàn le) 2232
285.3 zhèngjiàn 2233
285.4 guàshī 2234
285.5 liánxì 2236

285.6 找不到 (zhǎo bu dào) . . . 2237
285.7 (a note) . . . 2238
285.8 Practice . . . 2239

286 How It Felt 2243
286.1 感觉 (gǎnjué) . . . 2243
286.2 感 (gǎn) . . . 2244
286.3 我感觉… (wǒ gǎnjué …) . . . 2246
286.4 学了两年 (xué le liǎng nián) . . . 2247
286.5 duōjiǔ . . . 2248
286.6 yíhàn . . . 2249
286.7 Practice . . . 2250

287 What I Want to Be 2253
287.1 当 (dāng) . . . 2253
287.2 当 (dāng) . . . 2254
287.3 以后我想… (yǐhòu wǒ xiǎng …) . . . 2255
287.4 mèngxiǎng . . . 2256
287.5 mùbiāo . . . 2258
287.6 我最喜欢… (wǒ zuì xǐhuan …) . . . 2259
287.7 Practice . . . 2260

288 If It Rains 2263
288.1 就 (jiù) . . . 2263
288.2 就 (jiù) . . . 2264
288.3 要是 (yàoshi) . . . 2266
288.4 要是…就… (yàoshi … jiù …) . . . 2267
288.5 的话 (dehuà) . . . 2268
288.6 看天气 (kàn tiānqì) . . . 2269
288.7 Practice . . . 2270

289 If I Had the Time 2273
289.1 如果 (rúguǒ) . . . 2273
289.2 果 (guǒ) . . . 2274
289.3 如果…就… (rúguǒ … jiù …) . . . 2276
289.4 如果…就会… (rúguǒ … jiù huì …) . . . 2277
289.5 不然 (bùrán) . . . 2278
289.6 (six lines) . . . 2279
289.7 (dialogue) . . . 2281

290 In the News 2285
290.1 xīnwén . . . 2285
290.2 bàodào . . . 2286
290.3 diàntái . . . 2287
290.4 zhǔchírén . . . 2288
290.5 热点 (rèdiǎn) . . . 2289

291 Something New 2291
291.1 cǎifǎng . . . 2291
291.2 发明 (fāmíng) . . . 2292
291.3 发 (fā) . . . 2293
291.4 shìjiàn . . . 2295
291.5 突发 (tūfā) . . . 2296
291.6 xuānbù . . . 2297

292 On the Radio 2299
292.1 guǎngbō . . . 2299
292.2 guānzhòng . . . 2300
292.3 zhíbō . . . 2301
292.4 tīngzhòng . . . 2302
292.5 fābiǎo . . . 2303

293 Headlines 2305
293.1 zázhì . . . 2305
293.2 报 (bào) . . . 2306
293.3 报 (bào) . . . 2307
293.4 见报 (jiànbào) . . . 2309
293.5 tóutiáo . . . 2310
293.6 guānzhù . . . 2311

294 How It Turned Out 2313
294.1 qíngkuàng . . . 2313
294.2 yǐnqǐ . . . 2314
294.3 yǐngxiǎng . . . 2315
294.4 zhōngyú . . . 2316
294.5 yúshì . . . 2317

295 Starting Over 2319
295.1 zuìchū . . . 2319
295.2 重新 (chóngxīn) . . . 2320

295.3 新 (xīn) 2321
295.4 当天 (dàngtiān) 2323
295.5 事后 (shìhòu) 2324
295.6 dāngchǎng 2325
295.7 (dialogue) 2326

296 A Crash 2329
296.1 意外 (yìwài) 2329
296.2 chēhuò 2330
296.3 shāchē 2331
296.4 新手 (xīnshǒu) 2332
296.5 péiqián 2333

297 Whose Fault 2335
297.1 bǎoxiǎn 2335
297.2 事故 (shìgù) 2336
297.3 故 (gù) 2337
297.4 zérèn 2339
297.5 后果 (hòuguǒ) 2340
297.6 chǔlǐ 2341

298 A Fire 2343
298.1 huǒzāi 2343
298.2 救火 (jiùhuǒ) 2344
298.3 救 (jiù) 2345
298.4 xiāofángyuán 2347
298.5 hǎn 2348
298.6 jiùmìng 2349

299 Help Arrives 2351
299.1 得救 (déjiù) 2351
299.2 jíshí 2352
299.3 jíjiù 2353
299.4 yūndǎo 2354
299.5 qiǎngjiù 2355

300 Life and Death 2357
300.1 dìzhèn 2357
300.2 死 (sǐ) 2358
300.3 死 (sǐ) 2359

300.4 shēngmìng 2360
300.5 死因 (sǐyīn) 2361
300.6 bàozhà 2362

301 Getting Out 2365
301.1 táo 2365
301.2 huāng 2366
301.3 fú 2367
301.4 gǔzhé 2368
301.5 果然 (guǒrán) 2369
301.6 (dialogue) 2370

302 A Baby on the Way 2373
302.1 huáiyùn 2373
302.2 活 (huó) 2374
302.3 活 (huó) 2375
302.4 yīng'ér 2377
302.5 救活 (jiùhuó) 2378
302.6 shuāngbāotāi 2378

303 A Name and a School 2381
303.1 起名 (qǐmíng) 2381
303.2 小名 (xiǎomíng) 2382
303.3 yòu'éryuán 2383
303.4 开学 (kāixué) 2384
303.5 新生 (xīnshēng) 2385

304 Starting School 2387
304.1 rùxué 2387
304.2 日记 (rìjì) 2388
304.3 记 (jì) 2389
304.4 报到 (bàodào) 2390
304.5 xuéfèi 2391
304.6 jìzhù 2392

305 Getting Engaged 2395
305.1 tán liàn'ài 2395
305.2 qiúhūn 2396
305.3 dìnghūn 2397
305.4 喜事 (xǐshì) 2398

305.5 xīnláng 2399

306 The Wedding 2401
306.1 xīnniáng 2401
306.2 经过 (jīngguò) 2402
306.3 经 (jīng) 2403
306.4 新人 (xīnrén) 2405
306.5 jǔxíng 2406
306.6 xǐtáng 2407

307 Marrying and Parting 2409
307.1 fēnshǒu 2409
307.2 líhūn 2410
307.3 zàihūn 2411
307.4 mìyuè 2412
307.5 hūnshā 2413
307.6 (dialogue) 2414

308 Ever Since 2417
308.1 shīzōng 2417
308.2 自从 (zìcóng) 2418
308.3 自 (zì) 2419
308.4 来自 (láizì) 2420
308.5 fànzuì 2421
308.6 pàichūsuǒ 2422

309 A Thief 2425
309.1 qiǎngjié 2425
309.2 小偷 (xiǎotōu) 2426
309.3 偷 (tōu) 2427
309.4 piàn 2429
309.5 piànzi 2430
309.6 故意 (gùyì) 2430

310 Who Did It 2433
310.1 huáiyí 2433
310.2 zhèngrén 2434
310.3 zhèngjù 2435
310.4 shuōhuǎng 2436
310.5 chéngrèn 2437

311 The Police Car 2439
311.1 diàochá 2439
311.2 警车 (jǐngchē) 2440
311.3 警 (jǐng) 2441
311.4 zhuī 2443
311.5 警报 (jǐngbào) 2444
311.6 jiāojǐng 2445

312 Locked Up 2447
312.1 jiānyù 2447
312.2 fákuǎn 2448
312.3 dǎjià 2449
312.4 活该 (huógāi) 2450
312.5 死活 (sǐhuó) 2451
312.6 (dialogue) 2452

313 Moving House 2455
313.1 zhuāngxiū 2455
313.2 才 (cái) 2456
313.3 才 (cái) 2457
313.4 dìngjū 2459
313.5 shěbude 2460
313.6 shìyìng 2461

314 Saying Goodbye 2463
314.1 zànglǐ 2463
314.2 生前 (shēngqián) 2464
314.3 ānwèi 2465
314.4 mùdì 2466
314.5 liúlèi 2467

315 Once Again 2469
315.1 jiànjiàn 2469
315.2 又 (yòu) 2470
315.3 又 (yòu) 2471
315.4 自在 (zìzai) 2473
315.5 jìngrán 2474
315.6 réngrán 2475

316 A New Place 2477
316.1 dēngjì 2477
316.2 shúxī 2478
316.3 当地 (dāngdì) 2479
316.4 人生 (rénshēng) 2480
316.5 自然 (zìrán) 2481

317 Looking Back 2483
317.1 qīngnián 2483
317.2 chéngnián 2484
317.3 hūnyīn 2485
317.4 jiātíng 2486
317.5 事先 (shìxiān) 2487
317.6 (dialogue) 2488
317.7 (dialogue) 2489

318 Letters from Far Away 2491
318.1 bǐyǒu 2491
318.2 xìnfēng 2492
318.3 míngxìnpiàn 2493
318.4 回音 (huíyīn) 2494
318.5 zhuǎngào 2495

319 Calls and Confidence 2497
319.1 回电 (huídiàn) 2497
319.2 信心 (xìnxīn) 2498
319.3 信 (xìn) 2499
319.4 来电 (láidiàn) 2501
319.5 tōngxìn 2502
319.6 huàfèi 2503

320 On the Phone 2505
320.1 guàduàn 2505
320.2 bōdǎ 2506
320.3 dǎtōng 2507
320.4 说起 (shuōqǐ) 2508
320.5 语音 (yǔyīn) 2509

321 People of Long Ago 2511
321.1 lìshǐ 2511
321.2 古人 (gǔrén) 2512
321.3 古 (gǔ) 2513
321.4 古书 (gǔshū) 2514
321.5 古老 (gǔlǎo) 2515
321.6 文字 (wénzì) 2516

322 Back Then 2519
322.1 当年 (dāngnián) 2519
322.2 早年 (zǎonián) 2520
322.3 晚年 (wǎnnián) 2521
322.4 一生 (yìshēng) 2522
322.5 huáiniàn 2523

323 Decades and Eras 2525
323.1 少年 (shàonián) 2525
323.2 时期 (shíqī) 2526
323.3 年代 (niándài) 2527
323.4 代 (dài) 2528
323.5 古代 (gǔdài) 2529
323.6 现代 (xiàndài) 2530
323.7 (dialogue) 2531

324 Remembering 2533
324.1 想起 (xiǎngqǐ) 2533
324.2 jìniàn 2534
324.3 liúxià 2535
324.4 时代 (shídài) 2536
324.5 yìnxiàng 2537

325 Gone but Remembered 2539
325.1 jiǎngshù 2539
325.2 去世 (qùshì) 2540
325.3 世 (shì) 2541
325.4 后代 (hòudài) 2543
325.5 世代 (shìdài) 2544
325.6 xiǎngniàn 2544

326 Around the World 2547
326.1 国家 (guójiā) 2547
326.2 世界 (shìjiè) 2548
326.3 界 (jiè) 2549
326.4 外界 (wàijiè) 2551
326.5 jiànlì 2551
326.6 文明 (wénmíng) 2552

327 Heroes and Emperors 2555
327.1 名人 (míngrén) 2555
327.2 yīngxióng 2556
327.3 huángdì 2557
327.4 dǎzhàng 2558
327.5 zhànzhēng 2559

328 A Legend 2561
328.1 shénhuà 2561
328.2 传说 (chuánshuō) 2562
328.3 传 (chuán) 2563
328.4 liúchuán 2564
328.5 lóng 2565
328.6 传话 (chuánhuà) 2566

329 Once upon a Time 2569
329.1 tónghuà 2569
329.2 gōngzhǔ 2570
329.3 xiānnǚ 2571
329.4 xiāoshī 2572
329.5 jiéjú 2573
329.6 (dialogue) 2574

330 The King's Son 2577
330.1 jìchéng 2577
330.2 王子 (wángzǐ) 2578
330.3 王 (wáng) 2579
330.4 国王 (guówáng) 2580
330.5 王后 (wánghòu) 2581
330.6 王国 (wángguó) 2582

331 Monsters and Treasure 2585
331.1 yāoguài 2585
331.2 shénxiān 2586
331.3 mófǎ 2587
331.4 bǎowù 2588
331.5 cáng 2589

332 Ghost Stories 2591
332.1 dǎnzi 2591
332.2 鬼 (guǐ) 2592
332.3 鬼 (guǐ) 2593
332.4 nàoguǐ 2595
332.5 见鬼 (jiànguǐ) 2596
332.6 人间 (rénjiān) 2597

333 New Year's Eve 2599
333.1 春晚 (Chūnwǎn) 2599
333.2 Chúxī 2600
333.3 niányèfàn 2601
333.4 shǒusuì 2602
333.5 bàinián 2603

334 Red Envelopes 2605
334.1 正月 (zhēngyuè) 2605
334.2 红包 (hóngbāo) 2606
334.3 红 (hóng) 2607
334.4 tiē 2608
334.5 chūnlián 2609
334.6 红火 (hónghuǒ) 2610

335 Lanterns and Riddles 2613
335.1 Yuánxiāo 2613
335.2 dēnglóng 2614
335.3 cāi 2615
335.4 míyǔ 2616
335.5 biānpào 2617
335.6 (dialogue) 2618

336 Seeing Friends Off 2621
336.1 gàobié 2621
336.2 欢送 (huānsòng) 2622
336.3 送 (sòng) 2623
336.4 送客 (sòngkè) 2625
336.5 sònglǐ 2625
336.6 wòshǒu 2626

337 Best Wishes 2629
337.1 gōngxǐ 2629
337.2 祝 (zhù) 2630
337.3 祝 (zhù) 2631
337.4 心意 (xīnyì) 2633
337.5 hǎoyùn 2634
337.6 xǔyuàn 2635

338 Festival Visits 2637
338.1 过节 (guòjié) 2637
338.2 bàifǎng 2638
338.3 tuányuán 2639
338.4 假日 (jiàrì) 2640
338.5 fēngsú 2641

339 National Day 2643
339.1 长假 (chángjià) 2643
339.2 国庆 (Guóqìng) 2644
339.3 庆 (qìng) 2645
339.4 庆祝 (qìngzhù) 2646
339.5 喜庆 (xǐqìng) 2647
339.6 yānhuā 2648

340 Old Ways 2651
340.1 chuántǒng 2651
340.2 jiǎngjiu 2652
340.3 guījù 2653
340.4 节气 (jiéqì) 2654
340.5 sǎomù 2655
340.6 (dialogue) 2656

341 Mooncakes 2659
341.1 dòushā 2659
341.2 月饼 (yuèbǐng) 2660
341.3 饼 (bǐng) 2661
341.4 xiànr 2663
341.5 pǐncháng 2664
341.6 生意 (shēngyi) 2665

342 Mid-Autumn 2667
342.1 shǎngyuè 2667
342.2 中秋 (Zhōngqiū) 2668
342.3 秋 (qiū) 2669
342.4 期间 (qījiān) 2671
342.5 guìhuā 2672
342.6 jiāxiāng 2673

343 Far from Home 2675
343.1 yuèguāng 2675
343.2 多年 (duōnián) 2676
343.3 心中 (xīnzhōng) 2677
343.4 zhùfú 2678
343.5 fēnxiǎng 2679

344 Keeping Memories 2681
344.1 bǎocún 2681
344.2 jìyì 2682
344.3 wǎngshì 2683
344.4 xiàngcè 2684
344.5 yǒngyuǎn 2685

345 Looking Back 2687
345.1 jùshuō 2687
345.2 cóngcǐ 2688
345.3 qǐyuán 2689
345.4 wǎngyǒu 2690
345.5 yóubiān 2691
345.6 (dialogue) 2692
345.7 (dialogue) 2693

346 Thinking It Over 2695
346.1 kǎolǜ . . . 2695
346.2 guāndiǎn . . . 2696
346.3 感想 (gǎnxiǎng) . . . 2697
346.4 以为 (yǐwéi) . . . 2698
346.5 gūjì . . . 2699

347 What Do You Mean? 2701
347.1 zhǔyi . . . 2701
347.2 意思 (yìsi) . . . 2702
347.3 思 (sī) . . . 2703
347.4 sīkǎo . . . 2705
347.5 yìyì . . . 2706
347.6 体会 (tǐhuì) . . . 2707

348 Talking It Over 2709
348.1 tǎolùn . . . 2709
348.2 shāngliang . . . 2710
348.3 zhēnglùn . . . 2711
348.4 duìfāng . . . 2712
348.5 yízhì . . . 2713

349 Ways of Seeing 2715
349.1 kàndài . . . 2715
349.2 想法 (xiǎngfǎ) . . . 2716
349.3 法 (fǎ) . . . 2717
349.4 说法 (shuōfa) . . . 2719
349.5 做法 (zuòfǎ) . . . 2720
349.6 zhǔzhāng . . . 2721

350 Facts and Grounds 2723
350.1 shìshí . . . 2723
350.2 zhèngmíng . . . 2724
350.3 gēnjù . . . 2725
350.4 pànduàn . . . 2726
350.5 quèshí . . . 2727

351 That Makes Sense 2729
351.1 fēnxī . . . 2729
351.2 有理 (yǒulǐ) . . . 2730

351.3 理 (lǐ) 2731
351.4 jiǎnglǐ 2733
351.5 理想 (lǐxiǎng) 2734
351.6 心理 (xīnlǐ) 2735
351.7 (dialogue) 2736

352 Same Here 2739
352.1 同感 (tónggǎn) 2739
352.2 kěndìng 2740
352.3 rènkě 2741
352.4 本意 (běnyì) 2742
352.5 biǎoshì 2743

353 You've Got a Point 2745
353.1 shuōfú 2745
353.2 道理 (dàoli) 2746
353.3 道 (dào) 2747
353.4 不见得 (bújiànde) 2749
353.5 fǎnbó 2750
353.6 rèntóng 2751

354 Changing the Subject 2753
354.1 tíwèn 2753
354.2 话题 (huàtí) 2754
354.3 题 (tí) 2755
354.4 tímù 2757
354.5 nèiróng 2758
354.6 tánhuà 2759

355 Thanks, but No 2761
355.1 xièjué 2761
355.2 好意 (hǎoyì) 2762
355.3 kěn 2763
355.4 fǒurèn 2764
355.5 当面 (dāngmiàn) 2765

356 A Missed Chance 2767
356.1 jiàoxun 2767
356.2 错过 (cuòguò) 2768
356.3 错 (cuò) 2769

356.4 出错 (chūcuò) 2771
356.5 cuòwù 2772
356.6 gǎizhèng 2773

357 Owning Up 2775
357.1 rèncuò 2775
357.2 气话 (qìhuà) 2776
357.3 口气 (kǒuqì) 2777
357.4 pīpíng 2778
357.5 biǎoyáng 2779
357.6 (dialogue) 2780

358 Real Manners 2783
358.1 lǐmào 2783
358.2 真正 (zhēnzhèng) 2784
358.3 真 (zhēn) 2785
358.4 真心 (zhēnxīn) 2787
358.5 qiānxū 2788
358.6 面子 (miànzi) 2789

359 Rules 2791
359.1 guīzé 2791
359.2 zūnshǒu 2792
359.3 wéifǎn 2793
359.4 xiànzhì 2794
359.5 dàodé 2795

360 No Need 2797
360.1 gōnggòng 2797
360.2 必要 (bìyào) 2798
360.3 必 (bì) 2799
360.4 不必 (búbì) 2801
360.5 chǎnghé 2802
360.6 chāduì 2803

361 A Good Guest, a Good Host 2805
361.1 dǎ zhāohu 2805
361.2 zhāodài 2806
361.3 jūgōng 2807
361.4 jìngjiǔ 2808

361.5 看不起 (kànbuqǐ) 2809

362 What You Have to Do 2811
362.1 dàshēng 2811
362.2 必须 (bìxū) 2812
362.3 须 (xū) 2813
362.4 luàn 2815
362.5 公正 (gōngzhèng) 2815
362.6 yìwù 2816

363 Out in Public 2819
363.1 zūnzhòng 2819
363.2 xiǎoshēng 2820
363.3 fǎlǜ 2821
363.4 fànfǎ 2822
363.5 sùzhì 2823
363.6 (dialogue) 2824

364 Not Allowed 2827
364.1 quàn 2827
364.2 不准 (bùzhǔn) 2828
364.3 准 (zhǔn) 2829
364.4 biāozhǔn 2831
364.5 pīzhǔn 2832
364.6 tíxǐng 2833

365 Yes, but 2835
365.1 jiànyì 2835
365.2 可是 (kěshì) 2836
365.3 可 (kě) 2837
365.4 可见 (kějiàn) 2838
365.5 不如 (bùrú) 2839
365.6 zhōnggào 2840

366 Take My Advice 2843
366.1 bìmiǎn 2843
366.2 当心 (dāngxīn) 2844
366.3 jiānchí 2845
366.4 fàngqì 2846
366.5 zhíde 2847

367 I See What You Mean 2849
367.1 wùhuì . . . 2849
367.2 了解 (liǎojiě) . . . 2850
367.3 解 (jiě) . . . 2851
367.4 理解 (lǐjiě) . . . 2853
367.5 见解 (jiànjiě) . . . 2854
367.6 可笑 (kěxiào) . . . 2855

368 Keep Going 2857
368.1 zhìshǎo . . . 2857
368.2 máobìng . . . 2858
368.3 了不起 (liǎobuqǐ) . . . 2859
368.4 gǔlì . . . 2860
368.5 xuǎnzé . . . 2861
368.6 (dialogue) . . . 2862

369 Making It Clear 2865
369.1 说明 (shuōmíng) . . . 2865
369.2 但是 (dànshì) . . . 2866
369.3 但 (dàn) . . . 2867
369.4 jǔlì . . . 2869
369.5 qícì . . . 2869
369.6 lìngwài . . . 2870

370 The Key Point 2873
370.1 yīnsù . . . 2873
370.2 bìjìng . . . 2874
370.3 guānjiàn . . . 2875
370.4 作用 (zuòyòng) . . . 2876
370.5 zǒngzhī . . . 2877

371 Although 2879
371.1 shènzhì . . . 2879
371.2 虽然 (suīrán) . . . 2880
371.3 虽 (suī) . . . 2881
371.4 jiélùn . . . 2883
371.5 zǒngjié . . . 2883
371.6 yuánzé . . . 2884

372 Anyway 2887
372.1 fǎnzhèng . . . 2887
372.2 dàodǐ . . . 2888
372.3 同时 (tóngshí) . . . 2889
372.4 用意 (yòngyì) . . . 2890
372.5 yōudiǎn . . . 2891

373 Pros and Cons 2893
373.1 quēdiǎn . . . 2893
373.2 hǎochu . . . 2894
373.3 huàichu . . . 2895
373.4 天真 (tiānzhēn) . . . 2896
373.5 当真 (dàngzhēn) . . . 2897
373.6 (dialogue) . . . 2898
373.7 (dialogue) . . . 2899

374 People and Government 2901
374.1 人口 (rénkǒu) . . . 2901
374.2 zhèngfǔ . . . 2902
374.3 wénhuà . . . 2903
374.4 mínzú . . . 2904
374.5 fāzhǎn . . . 2905

375 Helping Others 2907
375.1 qióng . . . 2907
375.2 社会 (shèhuì) . . . 2908
375.3 社 (shè) . . . 2909
375.4 juān . . . 2911
375.5 zhìyuànzhě . . . 2911
375.6 hùxiāng . . . 2912

376 Out in Public 2915
376.1 huódòng . . . 2915
376.2 社工 (shègōng) . . . 2916
376.3 àihù . . . 2917
376.4 ràngzuò . . . 2918
376.5 guǎngchǎngwǔ . . . 2919

377 Our Neighbourhood 2921
377.1 jūmín . . . 2921
377.2 社区 (shèqū) . . . 2922
377.3 区 (qū) . . . 2923
377.4 小区 (xiǎoqū) . . . 2925
377.5 zhōuwéi . . . 2926
377.6 学区房 (xuéqūfáng) . . . 2927

378 Noise Next Door 2929
378.1 zàoyīn . . . 2929
378.2 bàoyuàn . . . 2930
378.3 géyīn . . . 2931
378.4 生人 (shēngrén) . . . 2932
378.5 wùyè . . . 2933

379 Feeling Safe 2935
379.1 lóudào . . . 2935
379.2 安心 (ānxīn) . . . 2936
379.3 安 (ān) . . . 2937
379.4 不安 (bù'ān) . . . 2938
379.5 ménjìn . . . 2939
379.6 zhì'ān . . . 2940
379.7 (dialogue) . . . 2941

380 Clean Air 2943
380.1 huánjìng . . . 2943
380.2 kōngqì . . . 2944
380.3 wūrǎn . . . 2945
380.4 dìqiú . . . 2946
380.5 huánbǎo . . . 2947

381 The Whole Family 2949
381.1 fēnlèi . . . 2949
381.2 全家 (quánjiā) . . . 2950
381.3 全 (quán) . . . 2951
381.4 huíshōu . . . 2952
381.5 全国 (quánguó) . . . 2953
381.6 安全感 (ānquángǎn) . . . 2954

382 The Security Guard 2957
382.1 zhíbān 2957
382.2 保安 (bǎo'ān) 2958
382.3 保 (bǎo) 2959
382.4 jiānkòng 2961
382.5 bǎozhèng 2962
382.6 xúnluó 2963

383 Saving Energy 2965
383.1 diànfèi 2965
383.2 làngfèi 2966
383.3 néngyuán 2967
383.4 jiǎnshǎo 2968
383.5 yícìxìng 2969

384 Becoming Green 2971
384.1 zhòngshù 2971
384.2 成为 (chéngwéi) 2972
384.3 成 (chéng) 2973
384.4 成本 (chéngběn) 2975
384.5 zīyuán 2975
384.6 zēngjiā 2976

385 Good Reasons 2979
385.1 tígāo 2979
385.2 八成 (bāchéng) 2980
385.3 节能 (jiénéng) 2981
385.4 zhòngshì 2982
385.5 fāngshì 2983
385.6 (dialogue) 2984

386 Second-Hand 2987
386.1 二手 (èrshǒu) 2987
386.2 变成 (biànchéng) 2988
386.3 变 (biàn) 2989
386.4 xiánzhì 2991
386.5 huásuàn 2991
386.6 变天 (biàntiān) 2992

387 Money In, Money Out 2995
387.1 shōurù . . . 2995
387.2 cúnkuǎn . . . 2996
387.3 zhàngdān . . . 2997
387.4 wǎnggòu . . . 2998
387.5 yùsuàn . . . 2999

388 Making a Date 3001
388.1 chōukòng . . . 3001
388.2 约会 (yuēhuì) . . . 3002
388.3 约 (yuē) . . . 3003
388.4 shīyuē . . . 3004
388.5 tíqián . . . 3005
388.6 时区 (shíqū) . . . 3006

389 In Case 3009
389.1 bèiyòng . . . 3009
389.2 节约 (jiéyuē) . . . 3010
389.3 fēngxiǎn . . . 3011
389.4 yǐfáng . . . 3012
389.5 到期 (dàoqī) . . . 3013

390 As We Agreed 3015
390.1 quèdìng . . . 3015
390.2 约定 (yuēdìng) . . . 3016
390.3 定 (dìng) . . . 3017
390.4 定期 (dìngqī) . . . 3019
390.5 如期 (rúqī) . . . 3020
390.6 大约 (dàyuē) . . . 3021

391 When Plans Change 3023
391.1 rìchéng . . . 3023
391.2 línshí . . . 3024
391.3 láidejí . . . 3025
391.4 gǎnshàng . . . 3026
391.5 到时候 (dào shíhou) . . . 3027
391.6 (dialogue) . . . 3028

392 A Change of Plan 3031
392.1 改 (gǎi) . . . 3031
392.2 改 (gǎi) . . . 3032
392.3 改期 (gǎiqī) . . . 3034
392.4 改变 (gǎibiàn) . . . 3035
392.5 改名 (gǎimíng) . . . 3036
392.6 改口 (gǎikǒu) . . . 3037

393 Be Sure To 3039
393.1 zhǔfu . . . 3039
393.2 千万 (qiānwàn) . . . 3040
393.3 万 (wàn) . . . 3041
393.4 万能 (wànnéng) . . . 3043
393.5 suíshí . . . 3044
393.6 shùnlì . . . 3045

394 Success or Failure 3047
394.1 chénggōng . . . 3047
394.2 shībài . . . 3048
394.3 màoxiǎn . . . 3049
394.4 báifèi . . . 3050
394.5 不变 (búbiàn) . . . 3051

395 Getting Results 3053
395.1 shíxiàn . . . 3053
395.2 取得 (qǔdé) . . . 3054
395.3 取 (qǔ) . . . 3055
395.4 成果 (chéngguǒ) . . . 3057
395.5 wánchéng . . . 3058
395.6 tiáojiàn . . . 3059

396 Whatever Happens 3061
396.1 bùguǎn . . . 3061
396.2 jìrán . . . 3062
396.3 chúfēi . . . 3063
396.4 全天 (quántiān) . . . 3064
396.5 jíshǐ . . . 3065
396.6 (dialogue) . . . 3066

397 Surely Not 3069
397.1 fàng gēzi . . . 3069
397.2 难道 (nándào) . . . 3070
397.3 难 (nán) . . . 3071
397.4 难得 (nándé) . . . 3073
397.5 为难 (wéinán) . . . 3073
397.6 jièkǒu . . . 3074

398 It Depends 3077
398.1 tàidu . . . 3077
398.2 qūbié . . . 3078
398.3 地区 (dìqū) . . . 3079
398.4 现成 (xiànchéng) . . . 3080
398.5 qǔjuéyú . . . 3081

399 Only If 3083
399.1 yāoqiú . . . 3083
399.2 只有 (zhǐyǒu) . . . 3084
399.3 只 (zhǐ) . . . 3085
399.4 只要 (zhǐyào) . . . 3086
399.5 mǎnzú . . . 3087
399.6 成家 (chéngjiā) . . . 3088

400 Moving the Dates 3091
400.1 tiáozhěng . . . 3091
400.2 yáncháng . . . 3092
400.3 suōduǎn . . . 3093
400.4 yuándìng . . . 3094
400.5 安定 (āndìng) . . . 3095

401 Plans for the Future 3097
401.1 qiántú . . . 3097
401.2 gǎiháng . . . 3098
401.3 成长 (chéngzhǎng) . . . 3099
401.4 变老 (biànlǎo) . . . 3100
401.5 yíqiè . . . 3101
401.6 (dialogue) . . . 3102
401.7 (dialogue) . . . 3103

402 At the Station 3105
402.1 chéngkè . . . 3105
402.2 候车 (hòuchē) . . . 3106
402.3 gāotiě . . . 3107
402.4 huànchéng . . . 3108
402.5 chēxiāng . . . 3109

403 Travellers 3111
403.1 hòuchēshì . . . 3111
403.2 旅客 (lǚkè) . . . 3112
403.3 旅 (lǚ) . . . 3113
403.4 正点 (zhèngdiǎn) . . . 3115
403.5 lièchēyuán . . . 3116
403.6 站长 (zhànzhǎng) . . . 3117

404 Tickets, Please 3119
404.1 shòupiàochù . . . 3119
404.2 检票 (jiǎnpiào) . . . 3120
404.3 检 (jiǎn) . . . 3121
404.4 bǔpiào . . . 3123
404.5 wòpù . . . 3124
404.6 yìngzuò . . . 3124

405 Through the Gates 3127
405.1 zhídá . . . 3127
405.2 进入 (jìnrù) . . . 3128
405.3 入 (rù) . . . 3129
405.4 出入 (chūrù) . . . 3131
405.5 mòbānchē . . . 3132
405.6 tíngkào . . . 3133

406 A Busy Platform 3135
406.1 yōngjǐ . . . 3135
406.2 来回 (láihuí) . . . 3136
406.3 gǎiqiān . . . 3137
406.4 qìchē . . . 3138
406.5 xínglijià . . . 3139

407 Pulling In 3141
407.1 进站 (jìnzhàn) . . . 3141
407.2 ruǎnwò . . . 3142
407.3 kòngwèi . . . 3143
407.4 zhōngdiǎnzhàn . . . 3144
407.5 dòngchē . . . 3145
407.6 (dialogue) . . . 3146

408 By Bus 3149
408.1 zhànpái . . . 3149
408.2 公交 (gōngjiāo) . . . 3150
408.3 交 (jiāo) . . . 3151
408.4 tóubì . . . 3152
408.5 客车 (kèchē) . . . 3153
408.6 起点 (qǐdiǎn) . . . 3154

409 Heavy Traffic 3157
409.1 gāofēng . . . 3157
409.2 交通 (jiāotōng) . . . 3158
409.3 通 (tōng) . . . 3159
409.4 通车 (tōngchē) . . . 3161
409.5 shòupiàoyuán . . . 3162
409.6 打车 (dǎchē) . . . 3163

410 Long Trips 3165
410.1 chángtú . . . 3165
410.2 chēfèi . . . 3166
410.3 通过 (tōngguò) . . . 3167
410.4 开通 (kāitōng) . . . 3168
410.5 上路 (shànglù) . . . 3169

411 On the Water 3171
411.1 mǎtou . . . 3171
411.2 船长 (chuánzhǎng) . . . 3172
411.3 船 (chuán) . . . 3173
411.4 开船 (kāichuán) . . . 3175
411.5 dùchuán . . . 3176
411.6 救生衣 (jiùshēngyī) . . . 3176

412 Harbour and Deck 3179
412.1 gǎngkǒu 3179
412.2 jiǎbǎn 3180
412.3 chuáncāng 3181
412.4 kào'àn 3182
412.5 客船 (kèchuán) 3183

413 Up in the Air 3185
413.1 dēngjī 3185
413.2 飞 (fēi) 3186
413.3 飞 (fēi) 3187
413.4 机长 (jīzhǎng) 3189
413.5 jiàngluò 3190
413.6 飞快 (fēikuài) 3191
413.7 (dialogue) 3191

414 In the Cabin 3193
414.1 chéngwùyuán 3193
414.2 kàochuāng 3194
414.3 jīngjìcāng 3195
414.4 yùnjī 3196
414.5 ānquándài 3197

415 The Terminal 3199
415.1 hángzhànlóu 3199
415.2 tuōyùn 3200
415.3 dēngjīpái 3201
415.4 安检 (ānjiǎn) 3202
415.5 dēngjīkǒu 3203

416 A Storm 3205
416.1 yánwù 3205
416.2 场 (chǎng) 3206
416.3 场 (chǎng) 3207
416.4 wùjī 3208
416.5 zhuǎnjī 3209
416.6 fēixíng 3210

417 Customs 3213
417.1 hǎiguān 3213
417.2 rùjìng 3214
417.3 chūjìng 3215
417.4 shēnbào 3216
417.5 miǎnshuì 3217

418 Checking In 3219
418.1 zhíjī 3219
418.2 shǒuxù 3220
418.3 停飞 (tíngfēi) 3221
418.4 停 (tíng) 3222
418.5 bànlǐ 3224
418.6 chāozhòng 3225

419 Arrivals 3227
419.1 jiējī 3227
419.2 duìhuàn 3228
419.3 wàibì 3229
419.4 guójì 3230
419.5 guónèi 3231
419.6 (dialogue) 3232

420 Parking 3235
420.1 jiàzhào 3235
420.2 车道 (chēdào) 3236
420.3 chēwèi 3237
420.4 dàochē 3238
420.5 wéizhāng 3239

421 On the Expressway 3241
421.1 公路 (gōnglù) 3241
421.2 高速 (gāosù) 3242
421.3 速 (sù) 3243
421.4 车速 (chēsù) 3244
421.5 shōufèizhàn 3245
421.6 chāosù 3246

422 Going North 3249
422.1 dǎoháng 3249
422.2 东北 (dōngběi) 3250
422.3 北 (běi) 3251
422.4 西北 (xīběi) 3252
422.5 北上 (běishàng) 3253
422.6 快速 (kuàisù) 3254

423 Going South 3257
423.1 lùkuàng 3257
423.2 东南 (dōngnán) 3258
423.3 南 (nán) 3259
423.4 西南 (xīnán) 3261
423.5 南下 (nánxià) 3262
423.6 南北 (nánběi) 3263

424 On the Road 3265
424.1 suìdào 3265
424.2 diàotóu 3266
424.3 lùbiāo 3267
424.4 时速 (shísù) 3268
424.5 半路 (bànlù) 3269
424.6 (dialogue) 3270

425 The Hotel 3273
425.1 zhùsù 3273
425.2 酒店 (jiǔdiàn) 3274
425.3 酒 (jiǔ) 3275
425.4 客房 (kèfáng) 3277
425.5 fángkǎ 3277
425.6 dàtáng 3278

426 Booking a Room 3281
426.1 dàchuángfáng 3281
426.2 kèmǎn 3282
426.3 旅店 (lǚdiàn) 3283
426.4 xīngjí 3284
426.5 chāzuò 3285

427 Comings and Goings 3287
427.1 gébì . . . 3287
427.2 来往 (láiwǎng) . . . 3288
427.3 往 (wǎng) . . . 3289
427.4 zìzhùcān . . . 3291
427.5 chuángdān . . . 3291
427.6 开往 (kāiwǎng) . . . 3292

428 Moving On 3295
428.1 通往 (tōngwǎng) . . . 3295
428.2 前往 (qiánwǎng) . . . 3296
428.3 huíchéng . . . 3297
428.4 xíngchéng . . . 3298
428.5 发票 (fāpiào) . . . 3299

429 Home Again 3301
429.1 lǚtú . . . 3301
429.2 shùnlù . . . 3302
429.3 dāchē . . . 3303
429.4 chūxíng . . . 3304
429.5 lùfèi . . . 3305
429.6 (dialogue) . . . 3306
429.7 (dialogue) . . . 3307

430 Seeing the Sights 3309
430.1 guānguāng . . . 3309
430.2 gǔjì . . . 3310
430.3 jǐngqū . . . 3311
430.4 zìpāi . . . 3312
430.5 wàngjì . . . 3313

431 A Spring Outing 3315
431.1 解说 (jiěshuō) . . . 3315
431.2 春游 (chūnyóu) . . . 3316
431.3 游 (yóu) . . . 3317
431.4 游船 (yóuchuán) . . . 3319
431.5 多 (duō) . . . 3320
431.6 héyǐng . . . 3321

432 Busy and Quiet 3323
432.1 少 (shǎo) 3323
432.2 dànjì 3324
432.3 节假日 (jiéjiàrì) 3325
432.4 全票 (quánpiào) 3326
432.5 guānbì 3327

433 From Overseas 3329
433.1 jiēdài 3329
433.2 海外 (hǎiwài) 3330
433.3 海 (hǎi) 3331
433.4 人山人海 (rénshānrénhǎi) 3333
433.5 huáqiáo 3334
433.6 出海 (chūhǎi) 3335

434 With a Tour Group 3337
434.1 lǚyóutuán 3337
434.2 jíhé 3338
434.3 gòuwù 3339
434.4 liúniàn 3340
434.5 游记 (yóujì) 3341

435 At the Top 3343
435.1 dēngshān 3343
435.2 shāndǐng 3344
435.3 日出 (rìchū) 3345
435.4 zhuàngguān 3346
435.5 下山 (xiàshān) 3347
435.6 (dialogue) 3348

436 North and South 3351
436.1 dìxíng 3351
436.2 南方 (nánfāng) 3352
436.3 方 (fāng) 3353
436.4 北方 (běifāng) 3355
436.5 fāngyán 3356
436.6 口音 (kǒuyīn) 3357

437 Mountains and Plains 3359
437.1 山区 (shānqū) 3359
437.2 píngyuán 3360
437.3 shāmò 3361
437.4 gāoyuán 3362
437.5 yímín 3363

438 The North 3365
438.1 开发 (kāifā) 3365
438.2 北部 (běibù) 3366
438.3 部 (bù) 3367
438.4 西部 (xībù) 3369
438.5 bùfen 3369
438.6 全部 (quánbù) 3370

439 Country Life 3373
439.1 dàotián 3373
439.2 guǒyuán 3374
439.3 nóngjiālè 3375
439.4 yāzi 3376
439.5 sànxīn 3377

440 A Mountain Village 3379
440.1 gǎnjí 3379
440.2 山村 (shāncūn) 3380
440.3 村 (cūn) 3381
440.4 村长 (cūnzhǎng) 3383
440.5 cūnmín 3383
440.6 jièsù 3384

441 Out in the Open 3387
441.1 jiāoqū 3387
441.2 yěwài 3388
441.3 zhàngpeng 3389
441.4 生火 (shēnghuǒ) 3390
441.5 天然 (tiānrán) 3391
441.6 (dialogue) 3392

442 The River 3395
442.1 duì'àn . . . 3395
442.2 河 (hé) . . . 3396
442.3 河 (hé) . . . 3397
442.4 上游 (shàngyóu) . . . 3399
442.5 zhǎngshuǐ . . . 3400
442.6 jiāng . . . 3401

443 Keeping It Clean 3403
443.1 qīngchè . . . 3403
443.2 保护 (bǎohù) . . . 3404
443.3 护 (hù) . . . 3405
443.4 保护区 (bǎohùqū) . . . 3407
443.5 护送 (hùsòng) . . . 3408
443.6 bǔyú . . . 3408

444 An Island 3411
444.1 qiánshuǐ . . . 3411
444.2 岛 (dǎo) . . . 3412
444.3 岛 (dǎo) . . . 3413
444.4 半岛 (bàndǎo) . . . 3415
444.5 dēngtǎ . . . 3416
444.6 fángshàishuāng . . . 3417

445 By the Sea 3419
445.1 hǎilàng . . . 3419
445.2 yúchuán . . . 3420
445.3 shàng'àn . . . 3421
445.4 bèiké . . . 3422
445.5 tuìcháo . . . 3423

446 The Old Town 3425
446.1 hútòng . . . 3425
446.2 城 (chéng) . . . 3426
446.3 城 (chéng) . . . 3427
446.4 古城 (gǔchéng) . . . 3429
446.5 chéngqiáng . . . 3430
446.6 进城 (jìnchéng) . . . 3431

447 On Foot 3433
447.1 bùxíng . . . 3433
447.2 长城 (Chángchéng) . . . 3434
447.3 bùxíngjiē . . . 3435
447.4 ràolù . . . 3436
447.5 rénxíngdào . . . 3437
447.6 (dialogue) . . . 3438

448 At the Market 3441
448.1 tānwèi . . . 3441
448.2 市场 (shìchǎng) . . . 3442
448.3 市 (shì) . . . 3443
448.4 市区 (shìqū) . . . 3444
448.5 早市 (zǎoshì) . . . 3445
448.6 bǎitān . . . 3446

449 Tastes 3449
449.1 yèshì . . . 3449
449.2 口味 (kǒuwèi) . . . 3450
449.3 味 (wèi) . . . 3451
449.4 风味 (fēngwèi) . . . 3453
449.5 qīngdàn . . . 3454
449.6 yóunì . . . 3455

450 Local Food 3457
450.1 hǎixiān . . . 3457
450.2 特点 (tèdiǎn) . . . 3458
450.3 特 (tè) . . . 3459
450.4 特意 (tèyì) . . . 3461
450.5 zhèngzōng . . . 3462
450.6 zhāopáicài . . . 3463

451 Specialities 3465
451.1 chīsù . . . 3465
451.2 特色 (tèsè) . . . 3466
451.3 色 (sè) . . . 3467
451.4 出色 (chūsè) . . . 3468
451.5 sùcài . . . 3469
451.6 shèng . . . 3470

452 After the Meal 3473
452.1 xiāohuà 3473
452.2 hǎopíng 3474
452.3 xiǎofèi 3475
452.4 天色 (tiānsè) 3476
452.5 cānjīnzhǐ 3477
452.6 (dialogue) 3478

453 Bags and Cases 3481
453.1 bēibāo 3481
453.2 xínglixiāng 3482
453.3 sāi 3483
453.4 līn 3484
453.5 biāoqiān 3485

454 The Information Desk 3487
454.1 fúwùtái 3487
454.2 zīxún 3488
454.3 图书 (túshū) 3489
454.4 图 (tú) 3490
454.5 zhǐlù 3492
454.6 xuānchuáncè 3493

455 Forms 3495
455.1 xìngmíng 3495
455.2 guójí 3496
455.3 过期 (guòqī) 3497
455.4 yǒuxiào 3498
455.5 shēnqǐng 3499

456 Lost and Found 3501
456.1 zǒusàn 3501
456.2 qiúzhù 3502
456.3 路人 (lùrén) 3503
456.4 shīzhǔ 3504
456.5 rènlǐng 3505

457 Thanks for the Help 3507
457.1 láojià 3507
457.2 bàituō 3508

457.3 多谢 (duōxiè) 3509
457.4 gǎnjī 3510
457.5 方法 (fāngfǎ) 3511
457.6 (dialogue) 3512
457.7 (dialogue) 3513

458 How I Feel 3515
458.1 qíngxù 3515
458.2 心疼 (xīnténg) 3516
458.3 xīngfèn 3517
458.4 qīngsōng 3518
458.5 fán 3519

459 On My Mind 3521
459.1 gūdān 3521
459.2 事情 (shìqing) 3522
459.3 情 (qíng) 3523
459.4 感情 (gǎnqíng) 3525
459.5 心里话 (xīnlihuà) 3526
459.6 wěiqu 3527

460 Feeling Low 3529
460.1 yùmèn 3529
460.2 tànqì 3530
460.3 难为情 (nánwéiqíng) 3531
460.4 同情 (tóngqíng) 3532
460.5 xiànmù 3533

461 Love and Kindness 3535
461.1 pèifú 3535
461.2 爱心 (àixīn) 3536
461.3 爱 (ài) 3537
461.4 爱情 (àiqíng) 3539
461.5 心爱 (xīn'ài) 3540
461.6 pànwàng 3541

462 Surprises 3543
462.1 jīngxǐ 3543
462.2 意想不到 (yìxiǎngbúdào) 3544
462.3 hèn 3545

462.4 死心 (sǐxīn) 3546
462.5 变心 (biànxīn) 3547

463 Scared 3549
463.1 dǎnxiǎo 3549
463.2 可怕 (kěpà) 3550
463.3 怕 (pà) 3551
463.4 xiàrén 3553
463.5 fādǒu 3554
463.6 èmèng 3555
463.7 (dialogue) 3556

464 Losing My Temper 3559
464.1 发火 (fāhuǒ) 3559
464.2 火气 (huǒqì) 3560
464.3 气人 (qìrén) 3561
464.4 出气 (chūqì) 3562
464.5 fènnù 3563

465 Spoiling the Fun 3565
465.1 tòngkuài 3565
465.2 扫兴 (sǎoxìng) 3566
465.3 兴 (xìng) 3567
465.4 lèguān 3568
465.5 bēiguān 3569
465.6 自信 (zìxìn) 3570

466 Keeping Calm 3573
466.1 fādāi 3573
466.2 冷静 (lěngjìng) 3574
466.3 静 (jìng) 3575
466.4 xīntiào 3577
466.5 wēixiào 3578
466.6 píngjìng 3579

467 What Kind of Person 3581
467.1 píqi 3581
467.2 个性 (gèxìng) 3582
467.3 性 (xìng) 3583
467.4 天性 (tiānxìng) 3585

467.5 kāilǎng 3586
467.6 huópō 3587

468 Good Points 3589
468.1 shànliáng 3589
468.2 和气 (héqi) 3590
468.3 jiānqiáng 3591
468.4 qínkuài 3592
468.5 tǐtiē 3593

469 Gentle and Steady 3595
469.1 chōngdòng 3595
469.2 温和 (wēnhé) 3596
469.3 温 (wēn) 3597
469.4 正经 (zhèngjīng) 3599
469.5 wěnzhòng 3600
469.6 jíxìngzi 3601
469.7 (dialogue) 3602

470 Faults 3605
470.1 zìsī 3605
470.2 gùzhí 3606
470.3 jiāo'ào 3607
470.4 mǎhu 3608
470.5 bèn 3609

471 Eyes 3611
471.1 yǎnlèi 3611
471.2 眼前 (yǎnqián) 3612
471.3 眼 (yǎn) 3613
471.4 小心眼 (xiǎoxīnyǎn) 3615
471.5 jìnshì 3615
471.6 zhǎyǎn 3616

472 Faces 3619
472.1 méimao 3619
472.2 脸色 (liǎnsè) 3620
472.3 脸 (liǎn) 3621
472.4 变脸 (biànliǎn) 3623
472.5 biǎoqíng 3624

472.6 étóu 3625

473 At the Dentist 3627
473.1 zuǐ 3627
473.2 牙医 (yáyī) 3628
473.3 牙 (yá) 3629
473.4 yáchǐ 3630
473.5 báyá 3631
473.6 bǔyá 3632

474 Strength 3635
474.1 gēbo 3635
474.2 力气 (lìqi) 3636
474.3 力 (lì) 3637
474.4 体力 (tǐlì) 3639
474.5 用力 (yònglì) 3640
474.6 shǒuzhǐ 3641

475 Head to Knees 3643
475.1 手心 (shǒuxīn) 3643
475.2 xīgài 3644
475.3 hòubèi 3645
475.4 身高 (shēngāo) 3646
475.5 wān 3647
475.6 (dialogue) 3648

476 Neck and Shoulders 3651
476.1 bózi 3651
476.2 shétou 3652
476.3 jiānbǎng 3653
476.4 yáotóu 3654
476.5 téngtòng 3655

477 Inside the Body 3657
477.1 xīnzàng 3657
477.2 gǔtou 3658
477.3 dànǎo 3659
477.4 chángwèi 3660
477.5 wèikǒu 3661

478 Injuries 3663
478.1 tàngshāng 3663
478.2 伤口 (shāngkǒu) 3664
478.3 伤 (shāng) 3665
478.4 重伤 (zhòngshāng) 3667
478.5 niǔshāng 3668
478.6 bāozā 3668

479 Blood 3671
479.1 shāngbā 3671
479.2 血 (xiě) 3672
479.3 血 (xiě) 3673
479.4 zhǐxuè 3674
479.5 xiànxuè 3675
479.6 xuèyā 3676

480 Symptoms 3679
480.1 tóuyūn 3679
480.2 fāyǎng 3680
480.3 liú bítì 3681
480.4 guòmǐn 3682
480.5 shīmián 3683
480.6 (dialogue) 3684

481 Is It Serious? 3687
481.1 要紧 (yàojǐn) 3687
481.2 紧 (jǐn) 3688
481.3 病情 (bìngqíng) 3690
481.4 病因 (bìngyīn) 3691
481.5 gǎnrǎn 3692
481.6 bìngdú 3693

482 Treatment 3695
482.1 jízhěn 3695
482.2 zhìliáo 3696
482.3 yàopiàn 3697
482.4 xiāodú 3698
482.5 护理 (hùlǐ) 3699

483 Getting Better 3701
483.1 hǎozhuǎn 3701
483.2 kāngfù 3702
483.3 yíngyǎng 3703
483.4 bǎojiàn 3704
483.5 mànxìng 3705

484 Staying Well 3707
484.1 yùfáng 3707
484.2 jièjiǔ 3708
484.3 yǎngchéng 3709
484.4 píláo 3710
484.5 dǐkànglì 3711

485 Body and Mind 3713
485.1 yālì 3713
485.2 jīngshen 3714
485.3 身心 (shēnxīn) 3715
485.4 xīntài 3716
485.5 jiǎnyā 3717
485.6 (dialogue) 3718
485.7 (dialogue) 3719

486 Looking for Work 3721
486.1 zhāopìn 3721
486.2 jiǎnlì 3722
486.3 yìngpìn 3723
486.4 shíxí 3724
486.5 dàiyù 3725

487 A Career 3727
487.1 hángyè 3727
487.2 事业 (shìyè) 3728
487.3 业 (yè) 3729
487.4 就业 (jiùyè) 3730
487.5 shīyè 3731
487.6 gōngchǎng 3732

488 What Do You Want to Be 3735
488.1 gōngchéngshī 3735
488.2 chúshī 3736
488.3 kēxuéjiā 3737
488.4 fānyì 3738
488.5 zhuàn 3739

489 On the Staff 3741
489.1 tiàocáo 3741
489.2 职工 (zhígōng) 3742
489.3 职 (zhí) 3743
489.4 全职 (quánzhí) 3745
489.5 zhíwèi 3745
489.6 shēngzhí 3746

490 Pressure at Work 3749
490.1 guǎnlǐ 3749
490.2 hézuò 3750
490.3 yèbān 3751
490.4 xīnkǔ 3752
490.5 kāichú 3753

491 The Boss 3755
491.1 jiāxīn 3755
491.2 上司 (shàngsi) 3756
491.3 司 (sī) 3757
491.4 mìshū 3758
491.5 职场 (zhíchǎng) 3759
491.6 xiàshǔ 3760
491.7 (dialogue) 3761

492 School Subjects 3763
492.1 语文 (yǔwén) 3763
492.2 shùxué 3764
492.3 地理 (dìlǐ) 3765
492.4 Yīngyǔ 3766
492.5 zhuānyè 3767

493 Extra Lessons 3769
493.1 bǔxí . . . 3769
493.2 家教 (jiājiào) . . . 3770
493.3 教 (jiào) . . . 3771
493.4 jiàoyù . . . 3773
493.5 fǔdǎo . . . 3774
493.6 请教 (qǐngjiào) . . . 3775

494 The Entrance Exam 3777
494.1 高考 (gāokǎo) . . . 3777
494.2 考 (kǎo) . . . 3778
494.3 考生 (kǎoshēng) . . . 3779
494.4 报考 (bàokǎo) . . . 3780
494.5 考上 (kǎoshàng) . . . 3781
494.6 luòbǎng . . . 3782

495 Marks 3785
495.1 期中 (qīzhōng) . . . 3785
495.2 考场 (kǎochǎng) . . . 3786
495.3 mǎnfēn . . . 3787
495.4 zuòbì . . . 3788
495.5 难题 (nántí) . . . 3789

496 Levels 3791
496.1 bèishū . . . 3791
496.2 高级 (gāojí) . . . 3792
496.3 级 (jí) . . . 3793
496.4 中级 (zhōngjí) . . . 3794
496.5 chūjí . . . 3795
496.6 liújí . . . 3796

497 Learning on Your Own 3799
497.1 自学 (zìxué) . . . 3799
497.2 课外 (kèwài) . . . 3800
497.3 bǐjì . . . 3801
497.4 zhīshi . . . 3802
497.5 shēngxué . . . 3803
497.6 (dialogue) . . . 3804

498 On the Pitch 3807
498.1 tǐyù . . . 3807
498.2 球场 (qiúchǎng) . . . 3808
498.3 球 (qiú) . . . 3809
498.4 球门 (qiúmén) . . . 3811
498.5 shèmén . . . 3812
498.6 进球 (jìnqiú) . . . 3812

499 The Team 3815
499.1 qiúduì . . . 3815
499.2 qiúyuán . . . 3816
499.3 duìzhǎng . . . 3817
499.4 xùnliàn . . . 3818
499.5 传球 (chuánqiú) . . . 3819

500 Match Day 3821
500.1 huòshèng . . . 3821
500.2 球赛 (qiúsài) . . . 3822
500.3 赛 (sài) . . . 3823
500.4 juésài . . . 3825
500.5 bǐfēn . . . 3826
500.6 上场 (shàngchǎng) . . . 3827

501 Winners 3829
501.1 yùndòngyuán . . . 3829
501.2 guànjūn . . . 3830
501.3 jīnpái . . . 3831
501.4 huòdé . . . 3832
501.5 球星 (qiúxīng) . . . 3833

502 Painting 3835
502.1 yóuhuà . . . 3835
502.2 国画 (guóhuà) . . . 3836
502.3 画 (huà) . . . 3837
502.4 画家 (huàjiā) . . . 3839
502.5 名画 (mínghuà) . . . 3839
502.6 huàzhǎn . . . 3840

503 Art 3843
503.1 书法 (shūfǎ) 3843
503.2 yìshù 3844
503.3 zuòpǐn 3845
503.4 chuàngzuò 3846
503.5 年画 (niánhuà) 3847
503.6 (dialogue) 3848

504 Songs 3851
504.1 gēcí 3851
504.2 儿歌 (érgē) 3852
504.3 歌 (gē) 3853
504.4 国歌 (guógē) 3855
504.5 míngē 3856
504.6 yǎnchàng 3857

505 Dancing 3859
505.1 wǔdǎo 3859
505.2 舞会 (wǔhuì) 3860
505.3 舞 (wǔ) 3861
505.4 wǔbàn 3863
505.5 wǔtái 3864
505.6 páiliàn 3865

506 Music on Stage 3867
506.1 yuèduì 3867
506.2 yǎnzòu 3868
506.3 xiǎotíqín 3869
506.4 Jīngjù 3870
506.5 gēmí 3871

507 Fathers and Sons 3873
507.1 xiōngdì 3873
507.2 父子 (fùzǐ) 3874
507.3 父 (fù) 3875
507.4 父女 (fùnǚ) 3876
507.5 fūqī 3877
507.6 zhǎngbèi 3878

508 Brothers and Sisters 3881
508.1 jiěmèi . . . 3881
508.2 xiōngmèi . . . 3882
508.3 dúshēngzǐnǚ . . . 3883
508.4 qīfu . . . 3884
508.5 dǒngshì . . . 3885
508.6 (dialogue) . . . 3886

509 Parents 3889
509.1 当家 (dāngjiā) . . . 3889
509.2 父母 (fùmǔ) . . . 3890
509.3 母 (mǔ) . . . 3891
509.4 母女 (mǔnǚ) . . . 3892
509.5 母语 (mǔyǔ) . . . 3893
509.6 后妈 (hòumā) . . . 3894

510 Grandparents 3897
510.1 wàipó . . . 3897
510.2 sūnzi . . . 3898
510.3 sūnnǚ . . . 3899
510.4 疼爱 (téng'ài) . . . 3900
510.5 hǒng . . . 3901

511 Close Family 3903
511.1 亲人 (qīnrén) . . . 3903
511.2 亲 (qīn) . . . 3904
511.3 父亲 (fùqīn) . . . 3906
511.4 母亲 (mǔqīn) . . . 3907
511.5 亲生 (qīnshēng) . . . 3908
511.6 亲自 (qīnzì) . . . 3908

512 Dreams 3911
512.1 zhìxiàng . . . 3911
512.2 zhuīqiú . . . 3912
512.3 成才 (chéngcái) . . . 3913
512.4 成名 (chéngmíng) . . . 3914
512.5 名校 (míngxiào) . . . 3915

513 Ambitions 3917
513.1 chuàngyè 3917
513.2 dádào 3918
513.3 zhēngqǔ 3919
513.4 fèndòu 3920
513.5 亲手 (qīnshǒu) 3921
513.6 (dialogue) 3922
513.7 (dialogue) 3923

514 When the Weather Turns 3925
514.1 shǎndiàn 3925
514.2 línyǔ 3926
514.3 léiyǔ 3927
514.4 dòngjiāng 3928
514.5 rónghuà 3929

515 Four Seasons 3931
515.1 hánlěng 3931
515.2 四季 (sìjì) 3932
515.3 季 (jì) 3933
515.4 雨季 (yǔjì) 3935
515.5 bìshǔ 3936
515.6 shōuhuò 3937

516 Trees and Leaves 3939
516.1 luòyè 3939
516.2 树 (shù) 3940
516.3 树 (shù) 3941
516.4 果树 (guǒshù) 3943
516.5 shùlín 3944
516.6 chéngshú 3945

517 Light in the Dark 3947
517.1 tiānliàng 3947
517.2 光 (guāng) 3948
517.3 光 (guāng) 3949
517.4 发光 (fāguāng) 3950
517.5 星光 (xīngguāng) 3951
517.6 huánghūn 3952

518 Sunshine 3955
518.1 qínglǎng 3955
518.2 阳光 (yángguāng) 3956
518.3 阳 (yáng) 3957
518.4 太阳能 (tàiyángnéng) 3958
518.5 dǎsǎn 3959
518.6 dàwù 3960

519 Out in Nature 3963
519.1 春光 (chūnguāng) 3963
519.2 qīngchén 3964
519.3 四季如春 (sìjì rú chūn) 3965
519.4 xuějǐng 3966
519.5 chéngliáng 3967
519.6 (dialogue) 3968

520 Around the House 3971
520.1 家电 (jiādiàn) 3971
520.2 开关 (kāiguān) 3972
520.3 rèshuǐqì 3973
520.4 nuǎnqì 3974
520.5 shěngdiàn 3975

521 Keeping House 3977
521.1 shuā 3977
521.2 féng 3978
521.3 bùzhì 3979
521.4 zhěngqí 3980
521.5 wèishēng 3981

522 Something Needs Fixing 3983
522.1 lòushuǐ 3983
522.2 上门 (shàngmén) 3984
522.3 shuǐfèi 3985
522.4 ménlíng 3986
522.5 dìbǎn 3987

523 Buying and Selling 3989
523.1 pīfā 3989
523.2 买卖 (mǎimai) 3990

523.3 卖 (mài) . . . 3991
523.4 卖家 (màijiā) . . . 3993
523.5 买家 (mǎijiā) . . . 3993
523.6 língshòu . . . 3994

524 Half Price 3997
524.1 jiézhàng . . . 3997
524.2 半价 (bànjià) . . . 3998
524.3 价 (jià) . . . 3999
524.4 要价 (yàojià) . . . 4001
524.5 还价 (huánjià) . . . 4002
524.6 wùjià . . . 4003

525 At Your Service 4005
525.1 zhōudào . . . 4005
525.2 格外 (géwài) . . . 4006
525.3 格 (gé) . . . 4007
525.4 shòuhuòyuán . . . 4009
525.5 tóusù . . . 4010
525.6 tuìkuǎn . . . 4011
525.7 (dialogue) . . . 4012

526 How Heavy? 4015
526.1 chēng . . . 4015
526.2 gōngjīn . . . 4016
526.3 重量 (zhòngliàng) . . . 4017
526.4 量 (liàng) . . . 4018
526.5 大量 (dàliàng) . . . 4020
526.6 少量 (shǎoliàng) . . . 4021

527 Ordering Online 4023
527.1 xiàdān . . . 4023
527.2 bāozhuāng . . . 4024
527.3 huìyuán . . . 4025
527.4 yōuhuì . . . 4026
527.5 格子 (gézi) . . . 4027

528 By Chance 4029
528.1 pèngqiǎo . . . 4029
528.2 不得不 (bùdébù) . . . 4030

528.3 chōuqiān 4031
528.4 dǎdǔ 4032
528.5 ǒurán 4033

529 Good Luck, Bad Luck 4035
529.1 dǎoméi 4035
529.2 运气 (yùnqi) 4036
529.3 运 (yùn) 4037
529.4 走运 (zǒuyùn) 4039
529.5 xìngyùn 4039
529.6 mìngyùn 4040

530 Winning a Prize 4043
530.1 cǎipiào 4043
530.2 chōujiǎng 4044
530.3 zhòngjiǎng 4045
530.4 jiǎngpǐn 4046
530.5 tóujiǎng 4047

531 A Lucky Escape 4049
531.1 tuōxiǎn 4049
531.2 jīhū 4050
531.3 jiǎoxìng 4051
531.4 búxìng 4052
531.5 shīshǒu 4053
531.6 (dialogue) 4054

532 Hoping for More 4057
532.1 有望 (yǒuwàng) 4057
532.2 望 (wàng) 4058
532.3 bābude 4060
532.4 期望 (qīwàng) 4061
532.5 如意 (rúyì) 4062
532.6 zhǐwàng 4063

533 I Hope So 4065
533.1 xiàngwǎng 4065
533.2 希望 (xīwàng) 4066
533.3 希 (xī) 4067
533.4 kěwàng 4069

533.5 juéwàng 4070
533.6 心想事成 (xīnxiǎng shìchéng) 4071

534 I'd Rather 4073
534.1 nìngkě 4073
534.2 jǐnliàng 4074
534.3 假如 (jiǎrú) 4075
534.4 xǔnuò 4076
534.5 万事如意 (wànshì rúyì) 4077

535 If You're Willing 4079
535.1 愿意 (yuànyì) 4079
535.2 愿 (yuàn) 4080
535.3 愿望 (yuànwàng) 4082
535.4 如愿 (rúyuàn) 4083
535.5 自愿 (zìyuàn) 4084
535.6 但愿 (dànyuàn) 4085

536 When Wishes Come True 4087
536.1 成真 (chéngzhēn) 4087
536.2 yuánmèng 4088
536.3 měihǎo 4089
536.4 mèngjiàn 4090
536.5 pàntou 4091
536.6 (dialogue) 4092

537 As It Turns Out 4095
537.1 起因 (qǐyīn) 4095
537.2 原来 (yuánlái) 4096
537.3 原 (yuán) 4097
537.4 dǎozhì 4099
537.5 zàochéng 4100
537.6 xiàoguǒ 4101

538 One Thing Leads to Another 4103
538.1 miǎnde 4103
538.2 cóng'ér 4104
538.3 本身 (běnshēn) 4105
538.4 chǎnshēng 4106
538.5 gēnběn 4107

539 Whose Fault? 4109
539.1 rě . . . 4109
539.2 怪 (guài) . . . 4110
539.3 怪 (guài) . . . 4111
539.4 怪事 (guàishì) . . . 4113
539.5 chīkuī . . . 4114
539.6 chuǎnghuò . . . 4115

540 So That's Why 4117
540.1 古怪 (gǔguài) . . . 4117
540.2 liánlei . . . 4118
540.3 nánmiǎn . . . 4119
540.4 前因后果 (qiányīn hòuguǒ) . . . 4120
540.5 怎么回事 (zěnme huí shì) . . . 4121

541 If It Weren't for You 4123
541.1 要不是 (yàobúshì) . . . 4123
541.2 duōkuī . . . 4124
541.3 gǎishàn . . . 4125
541.4 zhǔyào . . . 4126
541.5 要么 (yàome) . . . 4127
541.6 (dialogue) . . . 4128
541.7 (dialogue) . . . 4129

Pronunciation & Character Guide 4131

Glossary 4135

Review Questions 4321

Answer Key 4345

Sources for this starter edition 4373

Index 4375

Chapter 1

Nǐ Hǎo — Hello, Character by Character

Modes: voice (4) eyes (2) pen (1) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can greet someone in Mandarin and answer when greeted, reading both characters unaided and saying the greeting with the tone a speaker actually uses rather than the one the dictionary prints.
>
> A two-line meeting in which both voices say the same word — read from the characters alone, with the first third tone raised by sandhi.

1.1 mā má mǎ mà — one syllable, four words

Nothing to recall yet. Before the first Chinese word arrives, one thing your voice is about to be asked to do that English never asks of it.

The sounds and tones in this word

In English, pitch carries mood. Really. and Really? are the same word, said two ways.
In Mandarin, pitch is part of the word, exactly the way a consonant is. Take the syllable ma and give it four different pitches and you get four unrelated words:

- mā — held high and flat, one steady note. Mother.
- má — rising, like the pitch on a surprised English "huh?". Hemp.

- mǎ — dipping low, a little creaky. Horse.
- mà — falling sharply, like a clipped "No!". To scold.

There is a fifth, the neutral tone: short, light, no mark written at all. The accent over the vowel is how the romanization writes the tone: a flat bar in ā, a rising stroke in á, a hook in ǎ, a falling stroke in à. The Chinese characters themselves record no tone anywhere, so the accent is a teaching aid, not part of the writing.
Say all four in order now, slowly: mā, má, mǎ, mà. Twice through.

Writing — trace four visible paths

Keep the model visible. With a finger first, then a pencil, trace only the mark above each a: ā, á, ǎ, à. Move flat, up, down-then-up, and down. Say the matching pitch while your pencil moves.

Stop after one slow pass. This is not a memory test, and these pinyin marks are not Chinese characters. The next lesson will give your hand its first two-stroke character; this tiny step only lets pitch become a line you can see and follow.

Your turn

- Say it: mā high and flat, then mà falling — hear how far apart they are
- Answer: if you change the pitch of a Mandarin syllable, what changes?

Before you move on

Which accent tells you to dip low? (The hook, as in ǎ.) Does changing a Mandarin tone change how you feel about a word, or which word it is? (Which word it is.)
Source: the tone inventory this track keeps

1.2 你 — "you", and the first character

Say the four tones on ma once, in order. Hold the third one — low and dipping. The first Chinese word carries exactly that pitch.

The sounds and tones in this word

nǐ. The n is the English n; the i is the ee of "see". The hook over it is the third tone: start low, stay low, let it creak. Twice through.

Script — 你, and the person hiding on its left

Chinese is not written with letters. It is written with characters, each an evenly sized square block, and each block built from smaller recurring pieces called components.

你 has two of them: a narrow piece on the left, a wider one on the right.

The narrow left piece is the "person" component, rén. On its own, the character for a person is two legs walking. Pushed to the left edge of a block, it is squashed upright: one short slant over one vertical.

The right piece, ěr, is there for its sound, not its meaning. Chinese builds most of its characters this way — one component pointing at the meaning, another at the pronunciation.

Stroke order is a real, taught system here: top before bottom, left before right. So the person piece first, then the sound piece. The writing lessons hand you each piece, stroke by stroke.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 你 nǐ — you, addressing one person.

Here this book has to be honest with you. A related language lets a new word be anchored to English words you already own through a shared ancestor — Spanish gracias to grace and gratitude, all from Latin gratia. Chinese shares no ancestor with English. There is no cousin web for nǐ, and inventing one would be worse than having none.
What replaces it is what you just read: the character is itself decomposable, and its pieces mean things. 你 carries a person on its left because it is about a person. That is the hook — not history you share with English, but structure you can see.

Your turn

- Say it: nǐ — low and dipping, not flat
- Read it: 你 — point to the person piece, then the sound piece

Before you move on

Which half of 你 is the person? (The narrow left one.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

1.3 好 — "good", and what replaces etymology here

Say the word for "you" without looking. Which of its two components is the person? Now hold that low, dipping pitch — the next word wants the same one.

The sounds and tones in this word

hǎo. The h is a little rougher than English h, scraped at the back of the mouth. The ao is one gliding vowel, the ow of "how". The hook accent is the same third tone you already met: low, dipping, creaky. Twice through.

Script — 好, a woman beside a child

Two components again, side by side. The left one is the character for "woman", said nǚ: a crossing stroke, a curved leg, a horizontal through the middle. The right one is "child", said zǐ: a hooked top, a hooked vertical, a horizontal arm. Left before right, as always.

Notice what just happened. Woman and child are not letters spelling out the sound hǎo — neither is pronounced anything like it. They are whole characters with their own meanings, reused as building blocks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 好 hǎo — good, and also well.

A woman beside a child, and the character means "good". That picture is the hook — and it stands in for the cousin web that a related language would supply, because Chinese and English share no ancestor and there is no honest chain from hǎo to any English word. Two cautions, because a memory aid that pretends to be history rots:

- "Woman + child = good" is the traditional gloss. It is genuinely useful for remembering the shape, but palaeographers do not all accept it as the historical origin; some read the child component as a phonetic element instead. A picture that helps, not a proven derivation.

- Component glosses are hooks, not translations. 好 does not "mean" woman-child. It means good.

The word itself is inherited from Middle Chinese xawX, "good" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The picture belongs to the writing, not to the word.

Your turn

- Say it: hǎo — low and dipping, the ow of "how"
- Read it: 好 — point to the woman on the left, then the child on the right
- Answer: why does this track use component pictures instead of English cousins?

Before you move on

What does 好 mean? (Good, or well.) Is its woman-and-child picture a proven etymology? (No — a traditional and useful gloss, disputed as history.)
Source: Unicode Han database, character 好

1.4 你好 — the greeting, assembled from two things you already have

Two characters, both already yours. Say the one that means "you". Say the one that means "good". Now put them in that order and you have said hello — but say it slowly for one more moment, because the tones are about to do something.

The exchange

你好 nǐ hǎo! Hello.

你好 nǐ hǎo! Hello.

The greeting and its answer are the same word. Say it to one person you have just met, at any hour of the day.

Grammar Lens — a word can be more than one character

English counts a word in letters. Chinese does not have letters, so the tempting guess is that it counts a word in characters — one character, one word. That guess is wrong, and correcting it early saves a great deal of confusion.
A character writes one syllable and usually one meaningful piece. A word is one or more of those pieces:

- 你 — one character, one word: you
- 好 — one character, one word: good
- 你好 — two characters, still one word: hello

Nobody hearing 你好 parses it as "you good", any more than an English speaker hears "good" and "bye" inside goodbye. The pieces are visible, which makes the word easy to remember; the whole is what it means.

Why it's said this way

你好 is safe, neutral, and understood everywhere — which is exactly why a course teaches it first. But it is worth knowing that it is used less freely than English "hello". Between people who already know each other, a Mandarin speaker is more likely to open with a small situational remark than with 你好 at all. Reserve it for meeting someone, and you will sound right.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 你好 is a Chinese compound of two inherited words: hǎo, "good", from Middle Chinese xawX, and nǐ, "you", usually traced to the older second-person word nyeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

- Say it: nǐ hǎo — greeting someone you have just met

- Say it: nǐ hǎo — answering that same greeting
- Answer: how many characters is this word, and how many words is it?

Before you move on

Which character comes first, and what does it mean on its own? (你, "you".) Is 你好 one word or two? (One.)
Source: Unicode Han database, characters 你 and 好

1.5 ní hǎo — why the greeting is not said the way it is written

Say the greeting once, slowly, giving both syllables the low dipping third tone you were taught. It should feel awkward in the mouth. That awkwardness is the whole lesson.

Grammar Lens — one rule, and it is not optional

When two third tones come one after the other, the first is spoken as a second (rising) tone.
So the greeting, written nǐ hǎo, is actually said ní hǎo — the first syllable climbs instead of dipping. Twice through.
Nothing about this shows in the writing. Dictionaries print nǐ hǎo, because that is the citation tone each word carries on its own, and the two characters never change at all. A learner who trusts only what is written will say the commonest greeting in the language wrong every time.
Why does it happen? Two dipping tones in a row would need the voice to sink, climb, sink and climb again inside a fifth of a second. Speakers do not do that; the first one gives way. This is a real rule of the sound system, not a sloppy shortcut, and every native speaker applies it without thinking.
Compare it to what English does with "the": written one way, said thuh before a consonant and thee before a vowel, and no English speaker thinks of that as two words. The difference is that here the change lands on pitch — the same property that distinguishes one word from another.

Your turn

- Say it: ní hǎo — first syllable rising, second dipping
- Say it: it again, at speaking speed, without the pause between them
- Answer: which spelling changes when the rule applies — pinyin, characters, or neither?

Before you move on

Two third tones meet. What happens to the first? (It rises.) What happens to the characters? (Nothing.)
Source: Chinese Text Project, on tone in Mandarin

1.6 好 again — proof, on a character you own, that tone is the word

Name the character built from a woman and a child, and say what it means. Hold its tone: low and dipping.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

The very same character, 好, has a second reading — and the only thing that separates the two is the tone:

- 好 hǎo, dipping third tone — good
- 好 hào, sharply falling fourth tone — to be fond of, to like

Same strokes. Same components. Same shape on the page. Two words. This is the cleanest proof available of what the first lesson claimed. Tone is not decoration on a word; it is inside the word, doing the job a consonant does in English. Change hǎo to hào and you have not said "good" with feeling — you have said a different word, the way bat and pat are different words.
The two readings are related in meaning, and the relation is a good hook: what is good is what one is fond of. That is a link inside Chinese, between two readings of one character. It is not a link to English. There is none.
You are not asked to produce hào yet. Recognising it is the point: when a familiar character turns up wearing an unfamiliar tone, the tone is telling you this is a different word.

Both readings are inherited from Middle Chinese: the Guangyun lists xawX, "good", and xawH, "to be fond of" (in Baxter's transcription). Making a related word by moving it into the departing tone, the H of these spellings, is a well-known pattern of Middle Chinese.

Your turn

- Answer: hǎo or hào — which one means "good"?
- Answer: what changed between them, and what stayed the same?
- Answer: which two components is this character built from?

Before you move on

One character carried two words today. What told them apart? (Only the tone.)
Source: Unicode Han database, character 好

1.7 Practice — greet someone, and be greeted back

Retrieve the two words separately first: the one meaning "you", then the one meaning "good". Do not run them together yet.

The exchange

A: 你好 ní hǎo! B: 你好 ní hǎo!

Two lines, one word, both voices. Every piece is already yours: the characters from their own lessons, the meaning from the greeting lesson, the rising first syllable from the sandhi rule. Nothing new is hiding here.

Say A's line, pause, then answer as B. Twice through.

What you've built this chapter

Four things, and only one of them is vocabulary:

- 你 is a person component plus a sound component; 好 is woman beside child. Characters are built from parts.

- Those parts are the memory hook this track uses, because Chinese and English share no ancestor and therefore no cousin web.
- 你好 is two characters and one word. Characters are not letters.
- Pitch is part of the word, and a neighbouring word can change it without changing a stroke.

Your turn

- Say it: greet someone you have just met
- Say it: answer that greeting
- Read it: 你好 aloud from the characters alone, with no pinyin

Before you move on

Run both lines once more. If the first syllable dips instead of rising, go back to the sandhi lesson only — not to the whole chapter.
Source: Unicode Han database, characters 你 and 好

Chapter 2

Reading the Greeting — One Piece at a Time

Modes: ✓ pen (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write each component the greeting's two characters are built from, and then assemble both characters from those pieces rather than recalling them as whole shapes.
>
> The second assembly, built from two components the reader wrote individually a moment earlier — and a caution that the memorable story about why it means what it means is a story, not a source.

2.1 人 — two strokes, and a person walking

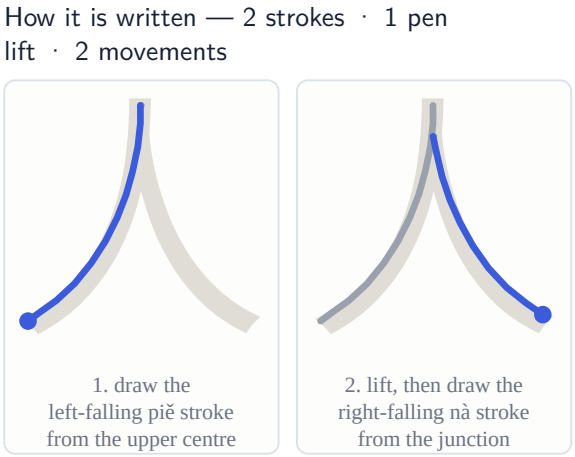
You have heard Mandarin pitch. Now you meet the writing, and this book will hand it to you one piece at a time — never a character you have not been shown the parts of first.

This is the whole first piece:

人

Two strokes. That is the entire character.

Script — the shape



How 人 is written, stroke by stroke

人 rén means person.

Look at it before you read another word about it. A stroke leaning down-left, a stroke leaning down-right, meeting at the top. It is a figure standing on two legs, seen from the side. You are not being asked to take that on faith — the oldest surviving forms of this character, scratched into ox bone three thousand years ago, are recognisably a standing person, and the two legs are the part that lasted.

Write it in this order, and the order is not a suggestion:

1. the left stroke, from the top down to the lower left — a falling sweep
2. the right stroke, starting near the top of the first and pressing down to the lower right

Left before right. Almost every character you meet will obey it, and it is worth meeting here — on a character with two strokes — rather than later on one with fifteen.

The pitch is second tone: rén rises, like the end of an English question.

Your turn — copy with the model visible

Keep 人 visible. Point to the left stroke, then the right. Copy the character once immediately below the model: left stroke first, then right. Say rén as you finish it, and compare the meeting point at the top before moving on.

This is guided copy, not a memory test. One careful copy is enough.

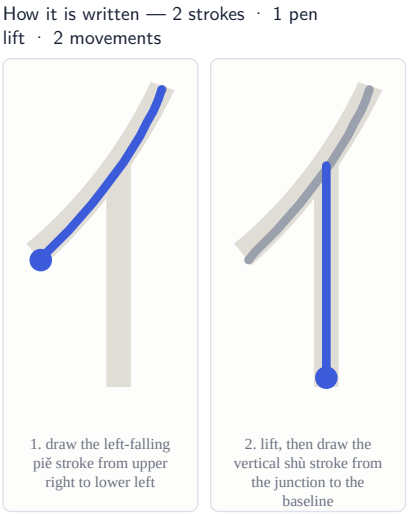
Before you move on

Which stroke goes first — the one leaning left, or the one leaning right? (The left.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

2.2 亻 — the same person, standing sideways

Write the two-stroke character for person once, from memory. Left stroke, then right.

Script — one character, two postures



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–2 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 亻 is written, stroke by stroke

Every Chinese character is written inside an evenly sized square block — whether it has two strokes or twenty, it occupies the same footprint. That one fact drives everything you are about to see.

Because when two pieces have to share a block, one of them must get out of the way. Here is what person looks like when it moves to the left edge to make room:

亻

Still two strokes. Still the same piece. But the wide-legged stance has been pulled upright into one short slant on top of one long vertical, narrow enough that something else can sit beside it.

This is not a different character. It is the same one, squashed. Chinese does this constantly, and the squashed forms are called components. When you see 亻 at the left edge of a block, the character is telling you: this word is about a person.

Write it:

1. the short slant, down-left, at the top
2. the long vertical, dropping from the middle of that slant

Top before bottom — the second of the two rules.

Your turn

- Write it: 人, then 亻 beside it. Notice you did not learn a new piece — you learned a new posture.
- Notice: 亻 is tall and thin because it is only using the left half of its square.

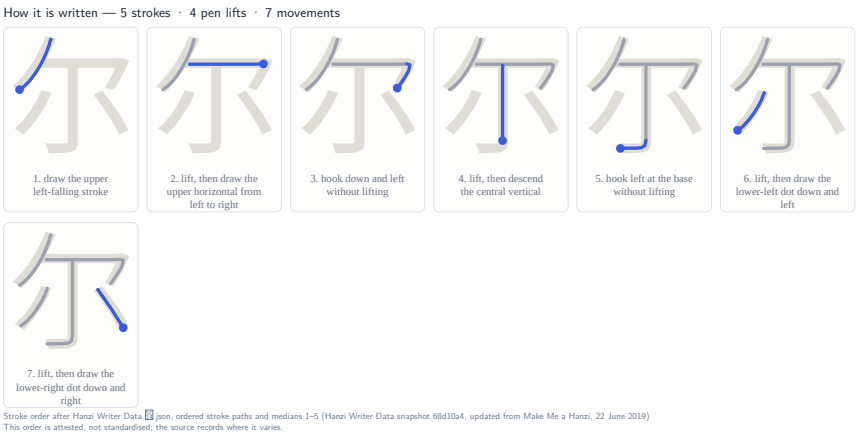
Before you move on

Why does person change shape at all? (To leave room in the square for whatever stands beside it.)
Source: Unicode CJK Radicals Supplement chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

2.3 尔 — a piece that is there for its sound

The narrow upright person — draw it once. Short slant, long vertical.

Script — the other kind of component



How 尔 is written, stroke by stroke

So far a component has meant something: the person piece says this is about a person. Here is a component that works the other way.

尔

尔 ěr. Five strokes: a short slant across the top, a broad cover beneath it, a central vertical that finishes with a hook, then a small stroke each side of it, left first.

Now the part that matters, and it is the single most useful fact about Chinese writing:

Most characters are built from one component pointing at the MEANING and another pointing at the SOUND. When 尔 turns up inside a character, it is usually there because the word sounds something like ěr — not because the word has anything to do with what 尔 means on its own.

That is a strange idea when your reading habits come from an alphabet, where every piece is sound and none is meaning. It is also a relief: it means characters are not arbitrary pictures to be memorised whole. They are built, from a small stock of pieces, and once you know the pieces you can often guess both halves of a character you have never seen.

The pitch is third tone: ěr dips low.

Your turn

- Write it: 尔 — top slant, cover, the middle and its hook, then the two dots
- Say it: ěr, low and dipping

Before you move on

Two kinds of component, then. One tells you what a word is about; the other tells you roughly how it sounds. Which kind is 尔?
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

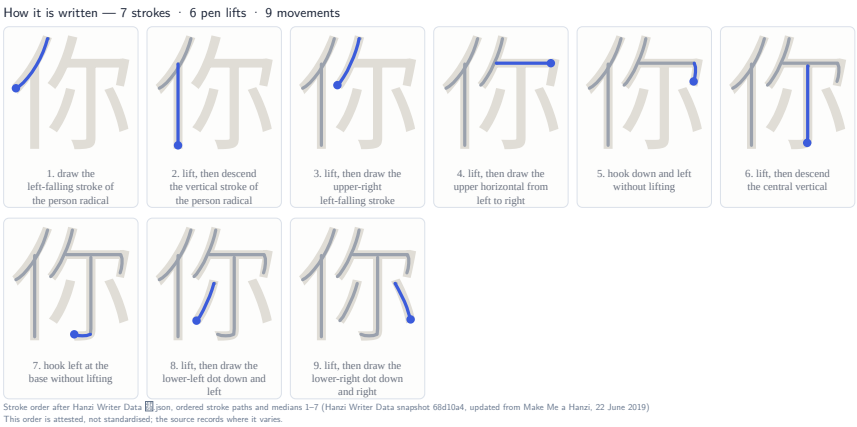
2.4 Putting two pieces together — and reading the result

Two pieces, both already yours. Draw them side by side:

亻 尔

The narrow person on the left. The five-stroke sound piece on the right.

Script — the assembly



How 你 is written, stroke by stroke

Push them into one square block and you have written a character:

亻 + 尔 → 你

Read it the way you now know how to read it, half at a time:

- the left half is the person component. So this word is about a person.
- the right half is the sound piece ěr. So this word sounds something like ěr.

The word is nǐ. And that is the honest state of the sound half — nǐ and ěr are close, not identical. A sound component gets you into the neighbourhood, not to the door. Sound components were chosen over two thousand years of pronunciation change, and the pronunciations moved out from under them. Expect a hint, and you will be right most of the time; expect a rule, and Chinese will embarrass you weekly.

Write it left before right, exactly as you learned each half:

1. 亻 — short slant, long vertical
2. 尔 — top slant, cover, then the middle and its hook

Seven strokes in total, and you did not memorise a single new one.

What you've built

Stop and take the measure of what just happened, because it is the reason this book teaches script this way.
You have not been shown a picture and asked to remember it. You were given two pieces, one at a time, and then shown that a character is what you get when they share a square. The next character works the same way, and so does the one after that. There are only a few hundred components in common use, and they recombine — which is what makes several thousand characters a climb rather than a cliff.

Your turn — look, cover, rebuild

Copy 你 once while the model is visible: complete 亻, then complete 尔. Point to the meaning half and the sound half. Now cover every model, wait ten seconds, and rebuild the character from memory. Uncover and compare the two halves separately; correct only the half that stalled.

Before you move on

Two pieces, one block, and a character you can take apart again whenever you need to. Which half would you look at to guess the pronunciation?
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

2.5 女 — three strokes, seated

One character so far assembles from two known halves. Draw it, and name each half as you write it.

Script — the shape

How 女 is written, stroke by stroke

A new piece, and like the first one it is old enough to still look like what it meant:

女

女 nǚ — woman. Three strokes.

The oracle-bone form is a kneeling or seated figure with the arms crossed in front. The modern character keeps the crossing: that long horizontal running right across the middle is the arms, and the two curving strokes beneath and around it are the folded body. It has straightened out over three thousand years, but nothing has been added or taken away.

Write it in this order:

1. the stroke that starts upper-right and curves down and left
2. the stroke that crosses it, going down-left then flicking right
3. the long horizontal, last, sweeping across both

That third stroke going last is worth noticing — a long horizontal that crosses everything else usually waits until the end.

The pitch is third tone, and the vowel is the rounded ü: say ee and then push your lips into a whistle without changing the tongue.

Your turn

- Write it: 女 — and let the crossing bar go last
- Say it: nǚ, low and dipping, lips rounded

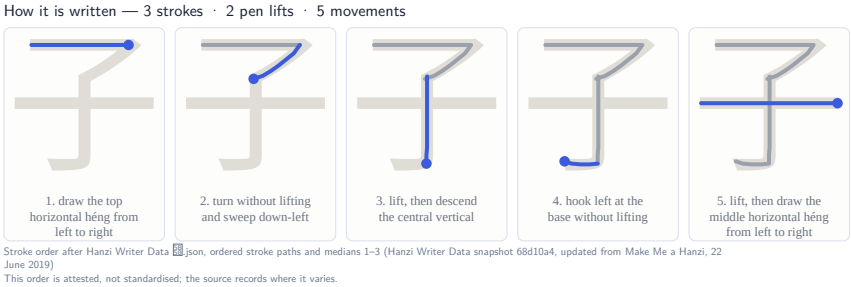
Before you move on

Which stroke comes last, and why? (The long horizontal — a bar that crosses the whole character usually waits.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

2.6 子 — three strokes, a child

Three strokes, crossing bar last. Draw the seated figure you met a moment ago.

Script — the shape



How 子 is written, stroke by stroke

子

子 zǐ — child. Three strokes again, and again a figure you can still see once you are told where to look.

This one is an infant drawn from the front: a large head on top, two arms out to the sides, and the legs bound together so they read as one stroke rather than two. Babies were carried swaddled, and the character kept the bundle.

Write it:

1. the short stroke across the top, turning down — the head
2. the vertical with a hook, dropping through the middle — the wrapped body
3. the horizontal across the middle — the arms

The pitch is third tone. The z is not the English z of zoo: it is the ds at the end of English beds, made with the tongue tip against the teeth.

Your turn

- Write it: 子 — head, hooked body, then arms
- Notice: two characters now, both three strokes, both once pictures of people. Draw them side by side and compare which parts are curved.

Before you move on

The stroke that runs down the middle carries a hook. What part of the picture is it? (The wrapped body and legs.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

2.7 Two pieces again — and a warning about the story

Both pieces are yours. Draw them side by side:

女 子

Script — the assembly

How 好 is written, stroke by stroke

Squeeze them into one block, woman on the left, child on the right:

女 + 子 → 好

好 hǎo. Six strokes, three from each half, and again nothing new.

Note what is different about this assembly. The first one you built had a meaning half and a sound half. This one has two meaning halves and no sound half at all — neither piece sounds like hǎo. Both kinds of character are common, and you cannot tell which kind you are holding until you look.

When 女 is squeezed into the left of a block its long crossing bar stops short rather than sweeping past the middle, so as not to collide with what stands beside it. Same piece, narrower posture — the same accommodation you already saw the person component make.

What you've built — and a caution

You will find it said that 好 means good because a woman with a child is a good thing.

Treat that as a story, not as evidence. It is memorable, it is repeated everywhere, and there is no agreement among specialists that it is what happened — competing accounts read the woman as the sound half in an older pronunciation, or read the pair as a woman caring for a child. This book will hand you an etymology when there is a source behind it and tell you plainly when there is not, and this is one of the second kind.

Use the pairing as a memory hook, which it genuinely is. Do not file it as a fact about why the word means what it means.

Your turn — from the spoken word to the page

Copy 好 once while looking: finish 女, then 子. Notice that the crossing bar on the left stops before the right half.

Now close the page. Have a person or screen reader say hǎo with no character visible. Wait ten seconds, write 好 from the spoken cue, then uncover it. Compare the left half and right half separately. If one half stalled, revisit only its three-stroke lesson before trying the dictation again.

Before you move on

Six strokes, two pieces, and you built both pieces yourself. What is the one claim in this lesson you should NOT repeat as fact?
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

Chapter 3

One to Five — Where the Character Is the Count

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 👁 eyes (1) ✒ pen (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 11 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from one to five in Mandarin and read all five characters cold and out of order, and I know which of them I could have worked out and which I simply had to learn.
>
> The five numerals read out of sequence, then off a lift panel with the fourth floor missing — and the reader knows why it is missing.

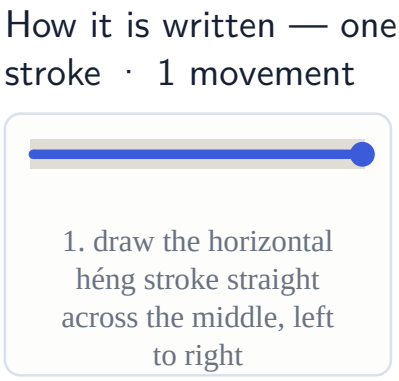
3.1 一 — one stroke, and that is the character

Two chapters ago a character was a block to take apart. You learned pieces first, then the characters they build. This chapter asks nothing of the sort. Put the pieces down.

Script — the whole character



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 一.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–1 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 一 is written, stroke by stroke

Here it is:

一

That is not a fragment. That is the character. One horizontal stroke, drawn left to right across the middle of the square, and nothing else.

Write it: one héng stroke, left to right. No pen lifts, because there is nothing to lift between. It is the shortest character you will ever write.

Your turn

- Write it: 一 — one stroke, left to right, straight and level

Before you move on

A character you did not have to decompose. How many times did you lift the pen? (Not once.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

3.2 一 — one, and the number is the strokes

Write it: the shape you just learned — one stroke, left to right

The sounds and tones in this word

一 yī means one.
Take those two facts together, because their meeting is the point: One stroke. And it means one.
Chinese will do this exactly three times, and you are about to meet all three in a row. It is the gentlest corner of a writing system with a reputation for being anything but.
Now the sound, and here is something new. Every word this book has given you so far has dipped (nǐ, hǎo, ěr) or risen (rén). This one does neither.
First tone: high and flat. Start high and stay there — not a question, not a statement, just a held note. Hum a single steady pitch and put yi on it. Twice through:
One honest note, so it does not surprise you later. 一 does not always keep this tone. In front of certain syllables it shifts to yí or yì — the same kind of change that turned 你好 into ní hǎo. Counting is exactly where it stays yī, so counting is where this book leaves it.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 一 yī is inherited from Middle Chinese 'jit, "one" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The single stroke is the history of the character; the word is the inherited one.

Your turn

- Say it: yī — high and flat, held
- Read it: 一 — say it, then say how many strokes it has

Before you move on

Which tone is yī — the dipping one, or the flat one? (Flat, held high.)
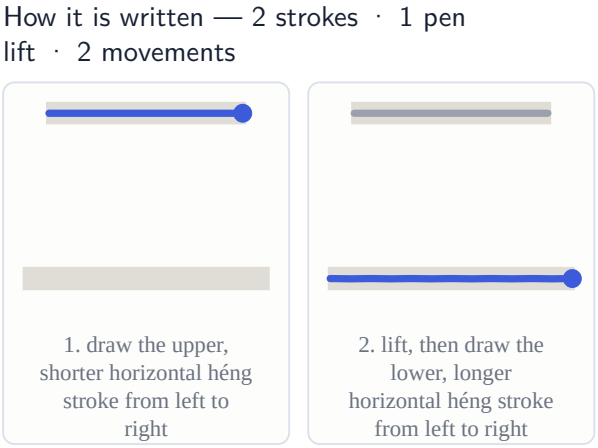
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

3.3 二 — two bars, and neither is decoration

Draw the character for one. Now guess what two looks like before you read on.

Script — you were right



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 二.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–2 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 二 is written, stroke by stroke

二

Two strokes, both horizontal, and the order is the one this book has repeated since the person radical: top before bottom.

But look properly, because they are not the same length:

- the upper bar is the shorter one
- the lower bar is the longer one

That is not decoration. A character occupies a square, and two identical bars floating in one look like an accident. The widening bottom gives the block a base to sit on. You will meet the same instinct everywhere: the last horizontal tends to be the widest, because it is the one holding everything up.

Write it: short bar. Lift. Long bar beneath.

Your turn

- Write it: 二 — short bar on top, then the long one below

Before you move on

Two strokes for two. Which goes first? (The top.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

3.4 二 — two, and a syllable you have met before

Write it: the shape — two bars, short over long

Count the strokes and say what number you expect it to be.

The sounds and tones in this word

二 èr means two. Two strokes, and it means two — the pattern holds. èr is fourth tone, the last of the four you had not used in a real word. Fourth tone falls, sharply and from a height, the way an English speaker says a short firm "No." Drop it, do not trail it. Twice through. Now hold èr next to a piece you already know:

尔 ěr — the sound-component inside 你

二 èr — the number two

Same syllable. Different tone. Completely unrelated characters. One dips; one falls. Nothing else separates them. You met this idea once already, when 好 hǎo "good" turned into 好 hào "fond of" on a change of pitch alone. That was one character with two readings; this is two characters colliding in sound. Both are the same lesson: in Mandarin the pitch is not decoration on the word. It is part of the word.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 二 èr is inherited from Middle Chinese nyijH, "two" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- èr — falling, dropped firmly
- ěr, then èr — dip, then fall. Feel the difference in your throat.
- yī, èr — flat, then down

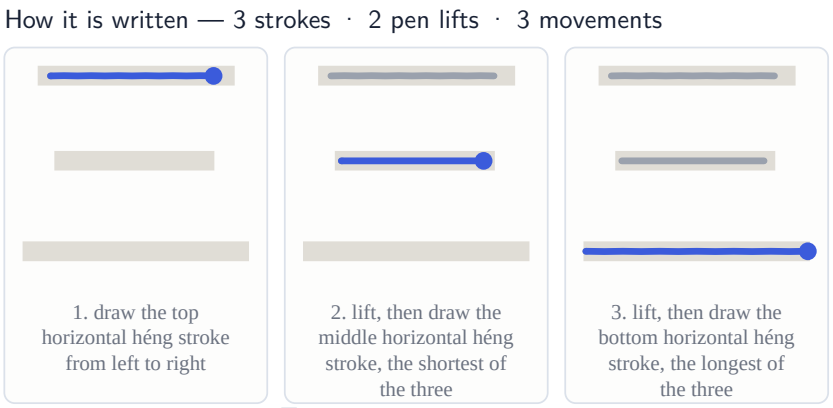
Before you move on

What separates ěr from èr? (Only the tone — and they are different characters entirely.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

3.5 三 — three bars, and the pattern's last stand

One bar. Two bars. Say what comes next out loud before you look.

Script — the pattern holds one last time



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 三.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–3 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 三 is written, stroke by stroke

三

Three strokes. Top, then middle, then bottom — the same rule, a third time.

The lengths are not a simple ladder:

- the top bar is medium
- the middle bar is the shortest of the three
- the bottom bar is by far the longest

Pinching the middle and widening the base keeps 三 from reading as three identical lines you would have to stop and count. Your eye takes it in whole. That is the difference between a character and a tally — and the reason the next one cannot be four bars.

Write it: top, lift, middle, lift, bottom. Two pen lifts.

Your turn

- Write it: 三 — top, middle short, bottom long
- Read it: 一 二 三 — point at each and count its strokes

Before you move on

Imagine four bars stacked in a square. Could you read it, or would you have to count it? (Count it — which is why the next character is not four bars.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

3.6 三 — three, and the end of the easy road

Write it: the three bars — middle short, bottom long

The sounds and tones in this word

三 sān means three. Three strokes, three — for the third and last time.
sān is first tone, the flat high one you met on yī. Hold it level. The a is open, the n light at the end. Twice through.
So of your first three numbers, two sit flat and one falls:

yī flat, èr falling, sān flat

Say the run. It goes level, down, level, and that shape is the first thing a listener recognises — before any of the individual words.

Why it's said this way

Three characters in, one stroke per unit, a system so regular it barely needs teaching. It stops here, and you should know why before it happens.
Every counting system humans have built hits the same wall in the same place. Roman numerals go I, II, III and then break to IV, because stacked marks stop being readable at about three. This one breaks for exactly the same reason.
You are being told now so that the next character feels like a solved problem rather than a broken promise.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 三 sān is inherited from Middle Chinese sam, "three" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The final m has since become n.

Your turn

- Say it: yī, èr, sān — level, down, level
- Read it: 一 二 三 — say each as you point at it

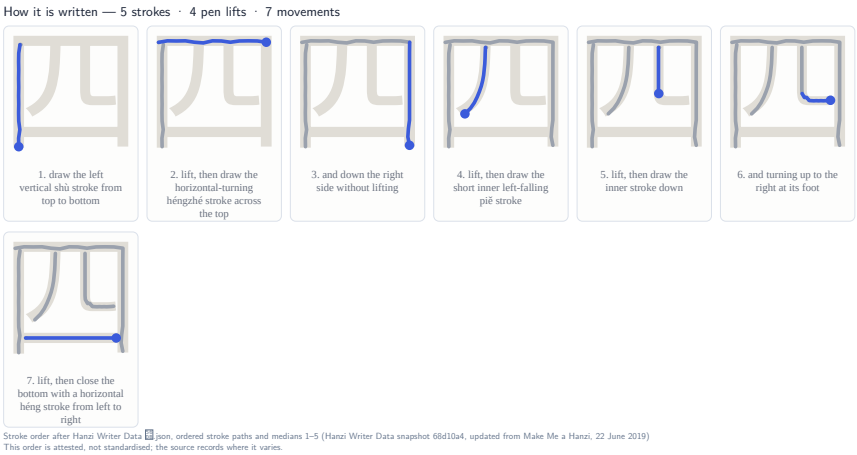
Before you move on

Three characters, three stroke counts, nothing memorised. That ends now.
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

3.7 四 — a box, and the rule that governs every box

Draw one, two and three. You were told this is where it stops.

Script — five strokes, for four



How 四 is written, stroke by stroke

四

Five strokes, for the number four. The trick is gone, exactly as promised.

四 is a box with two things inside it, and every box obeys one rule: close the bottom LAST. Walls, then contents, then shut the door.

In order:

1. the left vertical, top to bottom
2. the top and right side in one turning stroke — across, then down without lifting the pen at the corner
3. the short inner left-falling stroke
4. the inner stroke that turns up at its foot
5. the bottom bar, closing the box — last

Two strokes of wall, two of filling, one to shut the door. Four pen lifts.

Notice that the corner in step 2 is one stroke, not two. A horizontal that turns and runs downward without the pen leaving the paper is a single unit — héngzhé, "horizontal-turn". Miscounting it is the commonest way a beginner's stroke count goes wrong.

Your turn

- Write it: 四 — walls, then the two inner strokes, then the bottom last

Before you move on

Is the turning corner one stroke or two? (One — héngzhé.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

3.8 四 — four, borrowed for its sound

Write it: the box — walls, contents, bottom last

Count the strokes: five, for the number four.

The sounds and tones in this word

四 sì means four, and the shape has nothing to do with fourness. 四 is not a picture of four things. It is a shape that already meant something else, borrowed for its sound — the same move you met in 尔, a piece carried for how it sounds rather than what it means. The borrowing won outright: nobody reads 四 as anything but four now. sì is fourth tone, falling, like èr. The vowel is not the ee of "see": after s, pinyin i is a tight buzz in the same position as the s itself. Say sss, then voice it without moving your tongue. Twice through.

Why it's said this way

A reason to get that tone right, and it is a real one:

sì (falling) — four

sǐ (dipping) — die

Separated by pitch alone — the third time this chapter has shown you that tone is part of a Mandarin word's identity, not an accent on it. Not a curiosity, either: it is why many buildings in China number floors 1, 2, 3, 5, skipping four the way some Western buildings skip thirteen.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 四 sì is inherited from Middle Chinese sijH, "four" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The sound-borrowing above is the history of the character: the word came first, and a shape was borrowed to write it.

Your turn

- Say it: sì — falling, firm
- Read it: 一 二 三 四 — in order, then out of order

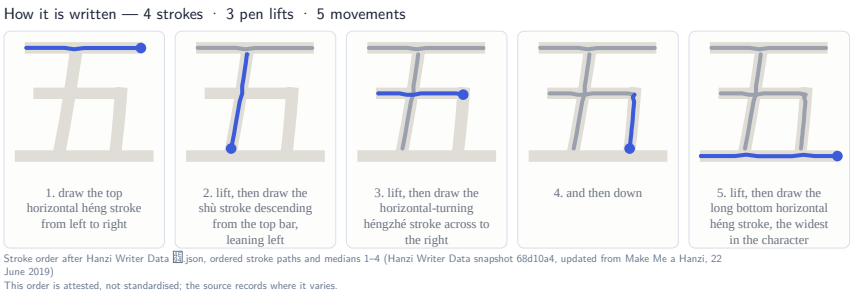
Before you move on

Four is the first number here you could not work out. What replaced the trick? (A shape borrowed for its sound, built to a rule.) Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

3.9 五 — count the strokes and be wrong

Guess, out loud, how many strokes the character for five will have.

Script — four, for five



How 五 is written, stroke by stroke

五

Four strokes. For five.

If you guessed five, good — that guess is the point. The trick that carried you through the first three is not merely retired, it now actively misleads.

The four strokes, in order:

1. the top horizontal, left to right
2. the descending stroke, from the top bar down, leaning slightly left
3. the turning stroke — across to the right, then down
4. the bottom horizontal, the widest in the character, closing it

You already know why the last is widest: it is the base, the same instinct as the long bottom bar of 二 and 三. Three pen lifts.

Your turn

- Write it: 五 — top bar, descender, turn, then the wide base
- Read it: 一 二 三 四 五 — name each shape without saying the numbers yet

Before you move on

Which stroke is widest, and why? (The bottom — it is the base.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

3.10 五 — five, and the run is complete

Write it: the shape — four strokes, for five

The sounds and tones in this word

五 wǔ means five.
wǔ is third tone, the low dipping one you have had since nǐ. Keep it low and let it creak; do not push it back up. Twice through.
You already own two words on this tone:

你 nǐ, 好 hǎo, 五 wǔ

All three dip. Say them in a row: the pitch should not change shape once, only the mouth around it.
One spelling note while you are here. In wǔ there is no consonant hiding under that w: the w is the u, written that way because pinyin does not begin a syllable with a bare u. Round your lips and voice it.

What you've built — one to five

You can now count:

一 二 三 四 五

yī, èr, sān, sì, wǔ

Say it as one run, not five separate words. The tone shape is level, down, level, down, dip, and that rhythm is what a listener hears first.
Five characters, and three ways one can come to you: two you derived, one was borrowed for its sound, and two you simply learned. That mix is Chinese writing in miniature, and you have now met all of it.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 五 wǔ is inherited from Middle Chinese nguX, "five", whose ng Mandarin has lost (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). It is usually compared with Tibetan lnga, a likely Sino-Tibetan cognate.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nǐ, hǎo, wǔ — three dips, one shape
- yī èr sān sì wǔ — one run, at speed

Before you move on

Which tone do nǐ, hǎo and wǔ share? (The third — low and dipping.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

3.11 Practice — read the numbers off a wall

Count to five aloud, in order, without looking. Then do it again with your eyes on the characters:

一 二 三 四 五

Script — the same five, shuffled

Counting in order is slightly dishonest: the sequence carries you, and you can recite yī èr sān without reading anything.

So here they are shuffled. Name each before moving on, without letting your eye run back to the row above:

四 一 五 二 三

三 五 一 四 二

If one of them made you pause, it will be 四 or 五 — the two you could not derive. That is expected, and it tells you exactly which two to drill.

Why it's said this way

Not a party trick. A lift panel, a floor directory, a bus number, a market price — all use these characters on their own, with no sentence around them. That is why five are already useful; you are not waiting on grammar:

> You see: 三
>
> You say: sān — third floor.

And when the panel reads

> 一 二 三 五

with no 四 between three and five, you know why, and you are not confused by it.

The exchange

Two voices, using only what this book has given you:

> A: 你好 — ní hǎo (the sandhi tone, as always)
>
> B: 你好 — ní hǎo
>
> A: [pointing at a panel] 五 — wǔ
>
> B: 五 — wǔ

Small, and entirely real: repeating a floor number back is what people do in a lift, in any language.

Your turn

- Read it: 四 一 五 二 三 — cover the row above first
- Say it: yī èr sān sì wǔ — one run, level, down, level, down, dip
- Write it: 五 — top bar, descender, turn, wide base

What you've built this chapter

Five characters, and three different ways a character can come to you:

- 一 二 三 — transparent. The strokes are the number.
- 四 — borrowed for its sound, and built on a box whose rule you can reuse.
- 五 — plain. Four strokes for five, learned as a shape.

That spread is not an accident of this chapter. It is the whole writing system in small: a little of it can be reasoned out, more of it is borrowed sound, and the rest is simply known. You have now met all three, on characters short enough that none of them hurt.

Before you move on

You can read the five characters cold, in any order, with no sentence around them. A panel reads 一 二 三 五 — which number is missing, and why? (四, because sì sits one tone from sǐ.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

Chapter 4

One Box, Two Characters, and the First Thing You Can Refuse

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) pen (3) Hands-free start: none of the 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write 口 and 日 – the second being the first with one bar added – and I can disagree in Mandarin by putting 不 in front of a word I already know, because Mandarin has no standalone word for no.
>
> The first exchange in the book that contains a disagreement – a greeting, a question, and a refusal built by negating a word the reader has had since the opening lesson.

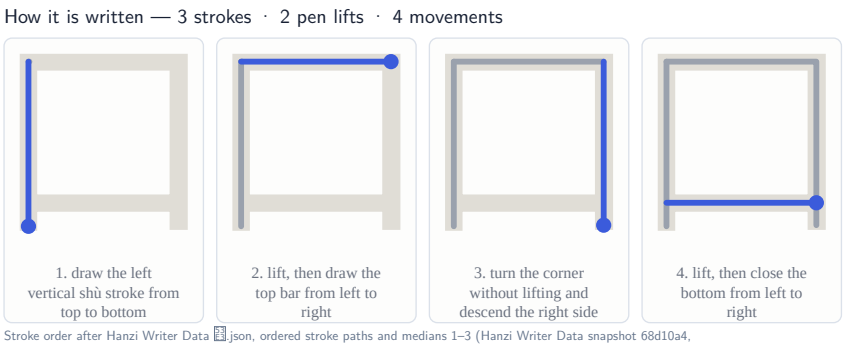
4.1 口 — the box, on its own

Write 四. Walls, then the two inner strokes, then the bottom last.

Script — the shape



How 口 is written, stroke by stroke

口

Your hand can already write this. Three strokes, in exactly the order you learned inside 四, and the rule from there is the whole instruction:

1. the left vertical, top to bottom
2. the top and right side in one turning stroke — the héngzhé, across then down without lifting
3. the bottom bar, closing it — last

Three strokes, two pen lifts. Walls, then the door.

One honest note, because it will save you trouble later. The enclosing frame around 四 and this character are not the same piece, even though they are written identically. Chinese has a separate enclosure component that does the surrounding, and 口 is a character in its own right. What transfers here is the hand movement, not the identity — and the hand movement is most of the work.

Your turn

Write these out:

- 口 — left wall, turning stroke, bottom last
- 四, then 口 — the same movement, two different pieces

Before you move on

How many strokes? (Three — the turning corner counts as one.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

4.2 口 — mouth, and a piece you will meet everywhere

Draw the box. Three strokes, bottom last.

The sounds and tones in this word

口 kǒu means mouth.
Look at it again now that it means something. It is an open mouth, seen from the front — squared off, the way every Chinese character is squared off to fit its block, but a picture all the same. The oldest forms are rounder and even more obviously a mouth.
kǒu is third tone, the low dipping one you have had since nǐ. Keep it low. Twice through.

Why it's said this way

You have already met pieces that live inside other characters — 女 and 子 sit inside 好. 口 is the commonest of them all. When you see it as a small element in a corner of a bigger character, it very often says the word has something to do with the mouth: speaking, eating, calling, tasting.
The size matters. A full-height frame around a whole character is a different piece doing a different job; the mouth hint is for the small one tucked into a corner.
That is worth more than the word itself. You are not going to memorise five thousand characters as pictures; you are going to learn a few hundred pieces and read the rest as combinations. 口 is one of the commonest pieces there is.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 口 kǒu is inherited from Middle Chinese khuwX, "mouth" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The open-mouth picture is the history of the character; the word is the inherited one.

Your turn

- Say it: kǒu — low and dipping
- Write it: 口 — and say what it is a picture of

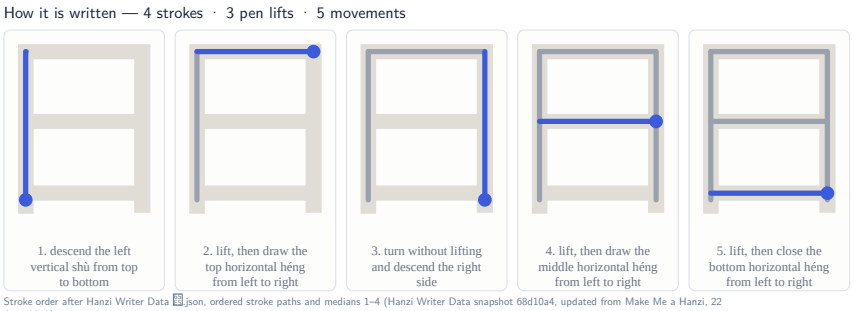
Before you move on

If you meet this box inside a bigger character, what does it usually hint at? (Something to do with the mouth.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

4.3 日 — one bar inside the box

Draw the box. Now hold it in your head; you are about to fill it.

Script — the shape



How 日 is written, stroke by stroke

日

The same box, with one horizontal bar across the middle. That is the entire difference, and it buys you a second character.

Four strokes, and the order has one thing worth getting right:

1. the left vertical

2. the top and right side, one turning stroke
3. the middle bar
4. the bottom bar, closing it — still last

The middle bar goes in before the bottom. Fill the box, then shut it. That is the same instinct as the box rule itself, applied one level in: you never close a space you still have to write inside.

Three pen lifts. If your box was comfortable, this cost you one line.

Your turn

Write these out:

- 口, then 日 — the same four movements plus one
- 日 — and check that the middle bar went in before the bottom

Before you move on

How many strokes separate this character from the box? (One.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

4.4 日 — the sun, and the day it measures

Write it: the box, then the box with a bar

Two characters, one shape.

The sounds and tones in this word

日 rì means sun — and also day.
The picture is the sun: a disc with a mark in the middle. Squared off, like everything else, but that is what the bar is doing there. The oldest forms are a circle with a dot.
rì is fourth tone, falling. The r is not an English r and not a Spanish one either: start where your tongue sits for the s in English measure, then curl the tip back a little. Let the vowel be short and tight.
Twice through:

Why it's said this way

Sun and day in the same word is not a Chinese quirk. It is what happens in language after language, because the sun is how a day was counted before anybody had a clock. English does the same thing from the other end: we say the sun rose and three days later, and nobody finds it strange that a day is both the light and the span.
So this is one of the rare characters where you get two meanings and have to learn neither: they are the same idea, and the context tells you which.
Like 口, this one turns up inside other characters, and when it does it is almost always about the sun, light, or time.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 日 rì is inherited from Middle Chinese nyit, "sun, day" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). It is usually compared with Tibetan nyi ma, "sun", a likely Sino-Tibetan cognate.

Your turn

- Say it: rì — falling, and the r of measure
- Write it: 日 — and say both of its meanings

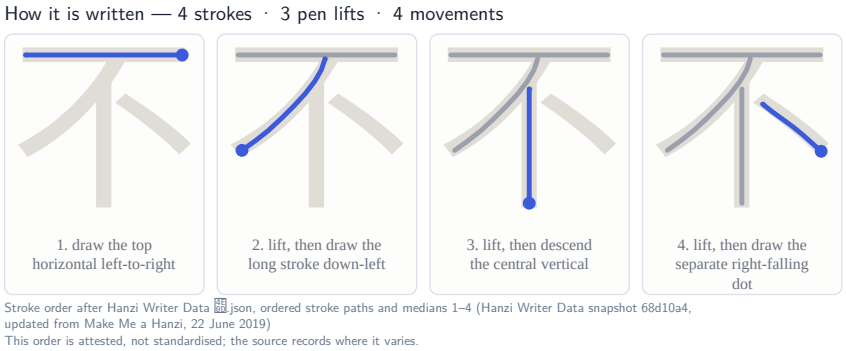
Before you move on

If you meet this shape inside a bigger character, what is it hinting at? (Sun, light or time.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

4.5 不 — four strokes, all of them separate

Write 日. Middle bar before the bottom.

Script — the shape



How 不 is written, stroke by stroke

不

Four strokes, in this order:

1. a top horizontal, left to right
2. lift, then a long stroke from the upper centre down to the left
3. lift, then the central vertical, straight down
4. lift, then a short right-falling dot

Three pen lifts, and every stroke stands alone. Nothing joins here. That is unusual enough to be worth saying plainly: the boxes you have just written were one continuous movement in places, and this is the opposite — four deliberate, separate marks under a single roof.

The commonest beginner's version runs the second and third strokes together into a corner. They are not a corner. Lift.

Your turn

Write these out:

- 不 — top bar, the long left-falling stroke, the vertical, the dot
- it again, counting the lifts aloud. There should be three.

Before you move on

Do the second and third strokes meet in a corner? (No — lift between them.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

4.6 不 — how Mandarin says no

Write it: 不, counting three lifts

Then say hǎo — good.

The sounds and tones in this word

不 bù means not.
bù is fourth tone, falling — the same firm drop you learned on èr and sì. Twice through.

Grammar Lens: there is no word for "no"

Here is something that surprises nearly every learner, and it is better met now than discovered later.
Mandarin has no single word meaning "no."
English has one. So does French, Spanish, Russian. Mandarin does not. What it has instead is 不, which goes in front of a word and turns it around:

好 hǎo — good

不好 bù hǎo — not good

So when someone asks you a yes-or-no question in Mandarin, you do not answer with a word for "no". You answer by negating the thing they asked about. Ask whether something is 好, and "no" comes back as 不好.
This sounds like extra work and is actually less: you already know 好, so you already know how to refuse it, and the same holds for every word you have so far.
One word will break the pattern later — Mandarin has a second negator for having, and you will meet it with the word it belongs to. Everything in this book up to now takes 不.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 不 bù is inherited from Middle Chinese, and it is already a negator in the oldest Chinese writing. The Guangyun lists it as pjuw and as pjut, both "not" (in Baxter's transcription); Mandarin bù continues pjut.

Your turn

- Say it: bù — falling, firm
- Say it: hǎo, then bù hǎo — good, then not good
- Write it: 不好

Before you move on

You have known 好 since the first lesson. How much did its opposite cost you? (One character.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

4.7 Practice — one box, two characters, and a refusal

Write it: 口, then 日 — one line apart

The exchange

Two voices, using only what you have:

A: 你好

ní hǎo

B: 你好

ní hǎo

A: 好

hǎo — good?

B: 不好

bù hǎo — not good.

Small, and it is the first time in this book you have been able to disagree. Up to now every exchange has been agreement: a greeting answered by the same greeting, a number read back. This one has a no in it.

What you've built this chapter

Three characters, and not one of them cost what it looks like it cost:

- 口 kǒu, mouth — you already knew the shape; it is the box from the number four, standing on its own
- 日 rì, sun and day — the same box with one bar added
- 不 bù, not — four separate strokes, and it turns every word you own into its opposite

That last one is the largest thing in the chapter. 不 does not add one word to your vocabulary; it doubles what you already have. Everything you have learned to say so far, you have now learned to refuse.
And the two boxes are a down payment of a different kind. 口 and 日 both turn up inside other characters — mouth for speaking and eating, sun for light and time — so the next character that contains one will already be half read.

Your turn

- Read it: 口 日 不 — name each one, then say what it means
- Write it: 日 — and check the middle bar went in before the bottom
- Say it: hǎo, then bù hǎo

Before you move on

Which two of this chapter's characters share a shape? (口 and 日.)
Back in the lift: a voice calls sì, then èr. Say each floor back, and say which of the two some panels leave out. (Sì, èr — and 四, four, is the one a panel may skip.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

Chapter 5

Yes, No, and a Tone That Moves

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write 是 by finishing 日 before the body underneath, answer a yes-or-no question either way by keeping or negating the word I was asked about, and apply the rule that 不 rises before a falling tone even though the writing never shows it.
>
> The first exchange in which the reader can answer either way – 是 for yes, 不是 for no – and hear the negator's pitch rise on a page that records no such thing.

5.1 是 — finish the sun, then build under it

Write 日. Four strokes, middle bar before the bottom.

Script — the shape

How 是 is written, stroke by stroke

是

Nine strokes. That is more than double anything you have written, and it is the point at which counting strokes stops being useful and structure takes over.

Here is the structure, and it makes the character easy: 是 is 日 sitting on top of a body. You have written the top already.

1-4. 日, complete. Left vertical; top and right in one turning stroke; the middle bar; the bottom bar closing it. Exactly as you learned it.

Then, underneath:

1. a wide horizontal, wider than the 日 above it
2. a central vertical coming down
3. a short horizontal at the lower right
4. a falling stroke to the lower left
5. a long finishing stroke down to the right

Finish 日 before you begin the body. This is the same instinct as the box rule and the middle bar: complete an enclosed unit before moving on. Chinese stroke order is a small number of habits applied over and over, and you now have three of them.

Eight pen lifts. Take it slowly; nobody writes this quickly at first.

Your turn

Write these out:

- 日 on its own, then 是 — and notice the first four strokes are identical
- 是 again, saying "sun first" before you start

Before you move on

How many of the nine strokes did you already know? (Four.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

5.2 是 — "is", and the nearest thing to "yes"

Write it: 是 — sun first, then the body

The sounds and tones in this word

是 shì means is — am, is, are, all one word with no changes for person or number.
shì is fourth tone, falling. The initial is the same retroflex position you met on rì: tongue tip curled back, and this time unvoiced — closer to the sh of English shirt than to s. Twice through.

Grammar Lens: yes by echo

You already know that Mandarin has no single word for no — you negate the word you were asked about. The other half of that rule is now available to you:
Mandarin has no single word for "yes" either. You echo the word back.
Asked whether something 是, you answer 是. That is the yes. It is not a separate word meaning agreement; it is the word you were asked about, returned.
It is not the only way Mandarin says yes — spoken Mandarin has other affirmatives you will meet in time. It is the one that follows from what you already know, and the one that works whenever the question hands you a word to give back.
Neither half of the pair is the word an English speaker goes looking for.

This is worth holding onto, because it is the shape of a great many Mandarin answers: the reply is the question's own word, kept or turned. You have the keeping half now; the turning half is the next lesson, and you already own the character it needs.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 是 shì is inherited from Middle Chinese dzyeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). In the oldest texts it meant "this"; its use as "to be" came later, and Unihan still lists both senses.

Your turn

- Say it: shì — falling, tongue curled back
- Say it: shì as an answer meaning "yes"
- Write it: 是

Before you move on

What is the yes, asked about 是? (是 — the same word, returned.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

5.3 不是 — "is not", and the second tone that moves

Say shì. Then say bù. Both fall.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 不是

Nothing new on the page: 不 in front of 是, exactly the rule you already have. It means is not.
But say the two words you just warmed up with, one after the other, and something is wrong. bù falls. shì falls. Two sharp drops in a row, back to back, and your mouth does not want to make them.
Both words are inherited from Middle Chinese: pjut, "not", and dzyeX, "this, to be" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Why it's said this way

Mandarin does not make you do it. 不 changes its own tone rather than collide.

written: 不是 — bù + shì spoken: bú shì — bú rises

不 becomes second tone, rising, whenever a fourth tone follows it. Before anything else it stays bù, falling — which is why 不好 was bù hǎo, unchanged, with 好 in the third tone.
You have met this exact machinery once before. When two third tones met in 你好, the first one moved and became rising, so nǐ hǎo came out as ní hǎo. Same problem, same kind of solution: when two tones would clash, the first one gives way, and the spelling never records it.
That is the second rule of this kind you have been taught in full, and both share one warning: the page will not tell you. You were also warned about a third, on 一, which shifts its own tone in front of certain syllables — that one is still waiting, and it will arrive with the words that need it. 不是 is written with the falling-tone 不 every time. The change lives in the mouth, and you have to carry it yourself.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bù, then shì, deliberately clashing. Hear why it is awkward.
- bú shì — the first one rising now
- bù hǎo, then bú shì — falling, then rising, and say why

Before you move on

Does the writing change when the tone does? (No — 不是 is written the same way every time.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

5.4 Practice — answering either way

Write it: 是 — sun first, then the body underneath

The exchange

Two voices, and for the first time the second one has a real choice:

A: 你好

ní hǎo

B: 你好

ní hǎo

A: 是

shì — is it?

B: 是

shì — yes.

And the same exchange, refused:

A: 是

shì

B: 不是

bú shì — no.

Say the last line twice and listen to the first syllable. It rises. Written down, it falls. That gap between the page and the mouth is the whole lesson.

What you've built this chapter

One character, and with it both answers.
是 is nine strokes, the longest thing you have written — but four of them were 日, finished before the body began, and that is why it was manageable. The habit of completing an enclosed piece before moving on has now carried you through a box, a box with a bar, and a nine-stroke character built on top of one.

And the pair is closed. Mandarin gives you neither a word for yes nor a word for no; it gives you one word and two things to do with it. 是 keeps it. 不是 turns it. Every yes-or-no answer you learn from here will work the same way.
The tone rule is the part to carry away, because nothing on the page will remind you: 不 rises before a falling tone. That is the second such rule taught in full, after the one on 你好, and a third — on 一 — has been flagged and not yet taught. Every one of them is invisible in the writing.

Your turn

- Say it: shì, then bú shì — yes, then no
- Say it: bù hǎo, then bú shì — and say which one moved, and why
- Write it: 是, then 不是

Before you move on

Do either of the rules you have been taught show up in the writing? (Neither.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

Chapter 6

See You Again

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ↙ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write 再 and 见, say goodbye with 再见, read the word literally as "see again" because its two pieces genuinely add up, and name which expressions I know are spoken differently from how they are written.
>
> The first exchange in the track that opens, turns and closes – greeting, an answer either way, and a parting – with every line built from characters the reader has written rather than a phrase memorised whole.

6.1 再 — a bar, a frame, and a line that closes it

Write 是. Nine strokes, and the sun on top finished first.

Script — the shape

How 再 is written, stroke by stroke

再

Six strokes. Fewer than the last one, and the structure is easier to see: a horizontal bar across the top, a frame hanging underneath it, and a long horizontal closing the whole thing at the bottom.

1. the top horizontal, left to right
2. the left side, coming straight down
3. the frame: start again at the upper left, cross to the right, turn down the right side, and hook left at the base — all without lifting
4. the central vertical, down through the middle
5. the inner horizontal, left to right
6. the long bottom horizontal, left to right, wider than everything above it

Five pen lifts.

Stroke 3 is the one to watch. It is a single stroke that changes direction twice — across, down, then a hook to the left. You have met most of it before: the outer wall of a box is always one turning stroke, never two or three. Compare it with the frame you drew in 日 — the same across-and-down turn, with a hook added at the end.

And the closing bar is last. The box is not sealed until the end — the same rule that made you draw the middle bar of 日 before its bottom bar. Chinese stroke order keeps re-using a small set of habits, and this is one you now know well enough to expect.

Your turn

- Write it: 再 — bar, left side, then the turning frame in one movement
- Write it: 再 again, and count the lifts. There are five.
- Say it: zài — falling, from high to low

Before you move on

Which stroke of 再 is drawn last? (The long bottom bar.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

6.2 见 — an eye on two legs

Write 人. Two strokes, left before right, a figure on two legs.

Script — the shape

How 见 is written, stroke by stroke

见

Four strokes, and after the last two characters that will feel like a rest. It is built in two parts, top and bottom:

- on top, a frame — a narrow box, which the traditional reading takes to be an eye
- underneath, two legs, written 儿 — which is what 人 becomes when it has to stand underneath something

The legs have changed a little in this position. The left one still falls away to the lower left exactly as it did. The right one no longer just presses down: it descends, bends right along the base, and finishes with a hook upward. That is what a leg does when it has to carry a frame above it.

The order:

1. the frame's left side, coming down
2. the frame's top, turning down the right side — one stroke, no lift, and this one is exactly the turn you drew in 日, hook and all absent
3. the left leg, falling to the lower left
4. the right leg: down, bend right, hook up — one stroke, no lift

Three pen lifts. Two of the four strokes turn, and neither of them is allowed to be broken into pieces.

A frame over a person, and the word means "to see." That is a memory hook, not a proof — but it is the kind of hook this book has been giving you in place of a shared ancestor with English, and this one is unusually easy to hold.

Your turn

- Write it: 人, then 见 — and find the legs in the second one
- Write it: 见, stopping after stroke 2 to check the frame is closed on three sides
- Say it: jiàn — falling

Before you move on

How does the last stroke finish? (With a hook, upward.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

6.3 再见 — the word that says what it means

Write it: 再, then 见 — six strokes, then four

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 再见

再见 zàijiàn — goodbye. Two characters, one word, and you can already write both of them.
Now the meanings, which have been held back until you had the shapes:

- 再 zài means again
- 见 jiàn means see

So the word is "see again." That is no mnemonic: it is what the two characters say, and what the word means.
Every earlier component gave you a hook — 亻 at the left of 你, 女 beside 子 in 好 — labelled a memory aid rather than history. Here the parts add up. Chinese does this often. Start expecting it.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: tsojH, "a second time", and kenH, "see" (Guangyun).

The sounds and tones in this word

Both syllables are fourth tone. Both fall.
Say it slowly: zài falls, then jiàn falls. Two separate drops. The common mistake is to run them into one long slide. Reset your pitch upward between them. Twice through.
And no rule moves. Neither of the two tone rules you have been taught applies to two fourth tones, so 再见 is said with the tones it is written with. A native speaker does clip that first fall a little short — but that is a shading of the same tone, not a different one, and neither the characters nor the pinyin change. Which is the point: the shadings live in the mouth.

Why it's said this way

If you know any German: auf Wiedersehen is "on seeing again" — the same two pieces, in the same order. A coincidence of thinking, not of ancestry; Chinese and German share no common ancestor. But parting by promising to meet again is an idea many languages reach for on their own, and that makes 再见 far easier to hold than a shape memorised cold.

Your turn

- Say it: zàijiàn — two falls, resetting the pitch between them
- Read it: 再见 — give its literal reading before its translation

Before you move on

Does either tone move in 再见? (No — both fall, and nothing changes.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

6.4 Practice — a conversation that ends

Say zàijiàn. Two falls, with the pitch reset between them.

The exchange

Everything below is a character you have written yourself. Read it: the exchange straight through

A: 你好

ní hǎo — hello.

B: 你好

ní hǎo — hello.

A: 是

shì — is it?

B: 不是

bú shì — no.

A: 再见

zàijiàn — goodbye.

B: 再见

zàijiàn — goodbye.

That is a conversation with a beginning, a middle and an end. It is short, and it is real: two people meet, one asks something, the other declines it, and both leave properly. Nothing in it is a phrase you memorised whole. You built every line from characters and rules.

What you've built — and what stays invisible

Read it: the exchange out loud once more, and count the places where your mouth does something the page does not record

- 你好 is written with two low dipping tones and spoken ní hǎo — the first one rises.
- 不是 is written with a falling 不 and spoken bú shì — the 不 rises.
- 再见 is written with two falls and spoken with two falls. No rule moves.

Two out of three. That ratio is not a fluke, and it is the single most useful thing to know about reading Mandarin aloud: the writing records the words, not the way the words meet each other. From here on, whenever two pieces sit side by side, ask what happens between them.

Your turn

- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts, without stopping

- Say it: it again, taking B's side, and answer 是 instead of 不是
- Write it: 再见 — six strokes, then four

Before you move on

In this exchange, how many of the three expressions are spoken exactly as written? (One — 再见.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

Chapter 7

Good Morning, and a Rule That Declines to Fire

Modes: voice (3) pen (2) Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write 早 and 上, greet someone with 早上好, hear a neutral-tone syllable as the absence of a tone mark rather than a mistake, and say why the third-tone rule changes 你好 but leaves 早上好 alone.
>
> The first exchange where the reader chooses between two correct greetings rather than reciting the only one available – and the first place all three tone behaviours in the track line up side by side, one moving and two declining to.

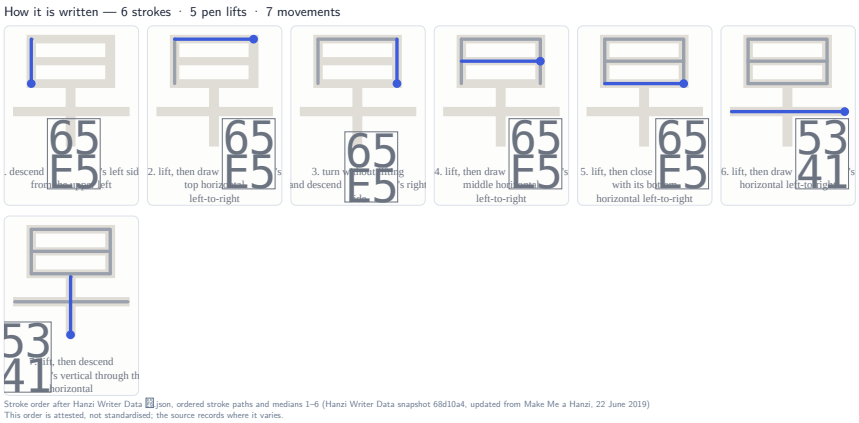
7.1 早 — sun on top, one more time

Write 日. Four strokes. Middle bar before the bottom bar.

Script — the shape



How 早 is written, stroke by stroke

早

Six strokes, and you can already guess how it starts.

早 is 日 on top of 十. You have written the sun before. The piece underneath is 十, which on its own is the character for ten — you have not been taught it and you do not need it today. Treat it as two strokes: one across, one down through it.

1-4. 日, complete. Left side; top and right in one turning stroke; the middle bar; the bottom bar closing it.

1. 十's horizontal, left to right
2. 十's vertical, coming down through that horizontal

Five pen lifts.

Predict the rule before you read it: does 日 get finished first? It does — the same habit that made 是 manageable, and by now it should be doing the work for you rather than the instruction.

A word about what 早 means, offered as a memory hook and labelled as one: the sun sitting above a short line is easy to read as the sun just up over the horizon, and 早 means early. That is a picture worth keeping. It is not a proof, and the honest position is that the lower piece's history is disputed.

Your turn

- Write it: 日, then 早 — and stop after four strokes to check the sun is closed
- Say it: zǎo — low and dipping

Before you move on

Which way does the last stroke go? (Down, through the horizontal.)
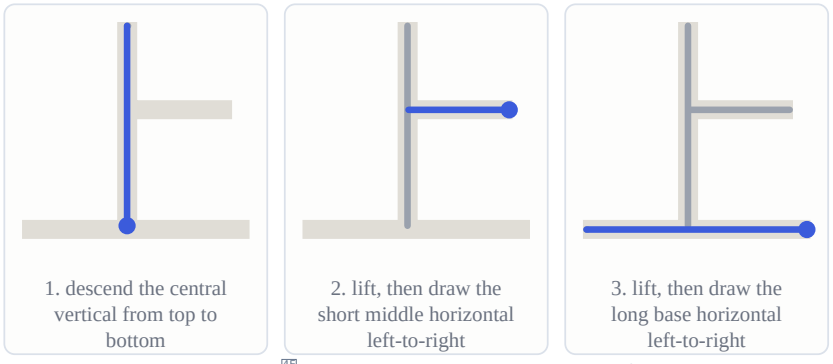
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

7.2 上 — the same rule, read the other way

Write 早. Sun first, then the two strokes below.

Script — the shape

How it is written — 3 strokes · 2 pen lifts · 3 movements



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 上.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–3 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 上 is written, stroke by stroke

上

Three strokes. A vertical, a short horizontal to its right, and a long horizontal underneath.

Now guess the order, and expect to be wrong:

1. the central vertical, from the top down
2. the short horizontal, left to right, starting at the vertical
3. the long base horizontal, left to right

Two pen lifts.

The vertical comes first, and you wrote the opposite one lesson ago. Inside 早, the two strokes of 十 went horizontal first, then the vertical down through it. Here the order is reversed.

The difference is what the two strokes do to each other. In 十 they cross, and the horizontal leads. In 上 the short bar starts at the vertical instead of crossing it — so there is nothing to cross, and the vertical goes first.

That is worth meeting on a three-stroke character, because it tells you something true about the system: these are strong tendencies with conditions, not laws. Learn the condition and you can predict the order instead of memorising it.

The other thing to notice: short horizontal before long horizontal. The base bar is the widest stroke and it goes last, exactly as the closing bar did in 再. When two horizontals differ in length, the long one is usually the finisher.

Your turn

- Write it: 上 — vertical first, even though your hand will want the short bar
- Write it: 上 again, and say "short, then long" as you draw the two bars
- Say it: shàng — falling

Before you move on

Which of the two horizontals is drawn last? (The long one.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

7.3 早上 — morning, and a syllable that goes light

Say zǎo. Low and dipping, and hold the bottom of it.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 早上

早上 zǎoshang — morning.
The parts add up again, though less tidily than 再见 did. 早 is early; 上 on its own means up or on top. Early-up, the early part of the day. Take that as a hook rather than a definition: what you need is that the two characters you just wrote make the word for morning.
Both halves are inherited from Middle Chinese: tsawX, "early, dawn", and dzyangH, "above" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

The sounds and tones in this word

The pinyin for this word is zǎoshang — and 上 has lost its tone mark.
On its own 上 is shàng, fourth tone, falling — you practised it that way. Inside this word it goes neutral: short, light, and pitched by whatever came before it. Neutral syllables are written with no mark at all, and that absence is the information.
This is a fifth thing a syllable can do, alongside the four tones. It is not a tone that moves — you have met two of those — it is a syllable giving up its tone because it is unstressed. Twice through.
Careful or slow speech sometimes restores the full falling tone, zǎoshàng, and you will hear it. The standard reading, and the one to imitate, is the light one.
Say it: zǎo low and dipping, then shang light and quick, riding on the end. The commonest mistake is to give the second syllable a full falling tone out of habit, which makes the word sound like two words.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- shàng alone, falling — then zǎoshang, with the second syllable light
- zǎoshang twice more, and say aloud which syllable carries no tone

Before you move on

Does 上 keep its falling tone when it stands alone? (Yes — the light reading belongs to the word, not to the character.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

7.4 早上好 — the greeting was a pattern all along

Say zǎoshang. Second syllable light.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 早上好

早上好 zǎoshang hǎo — good morning.
It ends in 好 — the same character, the same word, that you met in the first greeting in this book.
That is the payoff, and it is worth being explicit about. 你好 was never a phrase to swallow whole. It is 你 you followed by 好 good, and the second half is reusable:

你 + 好 → 你好, and 早上 + 好 → 早上好

Put a person or a time in front of 好 and you have a greeting. You have not learned two greetings; you have learned a frame and filled it twice. Every one of the other times of day works the same way, and you will be able to build those greetings the moment you have the words for those times.
Every piece is inherited from Middle Chinese, tsawX "early", dzyangH "above" and xawX "good" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), and Chinese put the greeting together from them.

The sounds and tones in this word

You know a rule about two third tones meeting: the first one rises, which is why 你好 is said ní hǎo.
早 is third tone. 好 is third tone. So does 早上好 become záoshang hǎo?
No — and the reason is the whole point of a rule having conditions. The rule needs the two third tones to be next to each other. Here they are not: 上 sits between them. A light, toneless syllable is still a syllable, and it keeps the two dipping tones apart. So zǎoshang hǎo: 早 low, 上 light, 好 low and dipping. Nothing rises.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nǐ hǎo, then zǎoshang hǎo — and say which one moved
- zǎoshang, then zǎoshang hǎo — the greeting is the word plus 好

Before you move on

Why does the third-tone rule not fire in this greeting? (The two third tones are not next to each other.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

7.5 Practice — greeting the time of day

Say zǎoshang hǎo. Low, light, low.

The exchange

A: 早上好

zǎoshang hǎo — good morning.

B: 早上好

zǎoshang hǎo — good morning.

A: 再见

zàijiàn — goodbye.

B: 再见

zàijiàn — goodbye.

Short, and for the first time you had a choice to make. 你好 would also have been correct. 早上好 is the one that fits the hour, and choosing between them is a thing a speaker does, not a thing a phrasebook does for you.

What you've built — three tones, three behaviours

Line the greetings up and every tone behaviour you have been taught is visible at once:

- 你好 — two third tones, side by side. The first rises: ní hǎo.
- 早上好 — two third tones, held apart by a light syllable. Neither moves.
- 再见 — two falling tones. Neither moves.

That middle line is the one that repays study. It is the same rule as the first line, and it does not fire, because the condition it needs is not met. A rule you can only apply is half a rule; a rule you can also decline to apply is a whole one.
And none of it shows on the page. Every character in all three is written exactly as it would be alone.

Your turn

- Say it: nǐ hǎo, then zǎoshang hǎo — and say which one moved
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 早上好, then 再见

Before you move on

Which of the three expressions above has a tone that moves? (Only 你好.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

Chapter 8

Saying Who You Are

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) ↙ pen (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write 我, 名 and 字, introduce myself with 我是 and my own name, recognise 名字 as the word for a name, and I know that Mandarin never changes a word to show what job it is doing in a sentence.
>
> The first exchange the reader cannot finish without supplying something of their own – their name – and the first place the book names a gap it is choosing not to fill, rather than teaching a sentence no speaker would say.

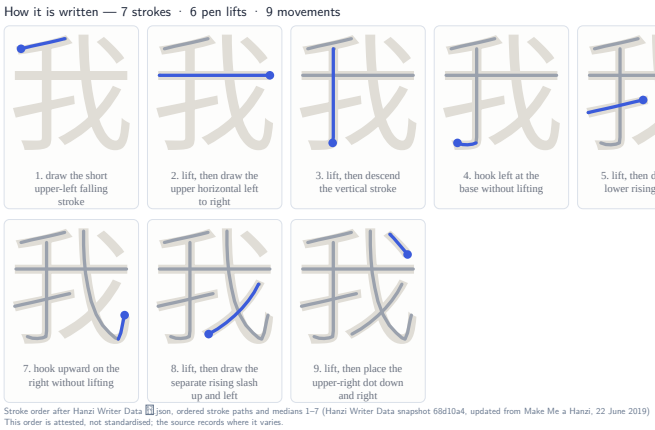
8.1 我 — seven strokes, and an honest admission

Write 是. Nine strokes, sun finished on top.

Script — the shape



How 我 is written, stroke by stroke

我

Seven strokes, and here this book owes you a straight answer.

Every character so far has had at least one piece you already owned: 你 is 亻 beside 尔, 是 sits on 日, 早 sits on 日. 我 has none. Its right side is a shape called 戈 — there it is, but naming it is all this lesson will do with it, because you have not been taught to write it. Its left side is a squeezed hand. Neither is a piece you own.

So learn it as a route, not as a sum. Follow the order and it holds together:

1. a short falling stroke at the upper left
2. the upper horizontal, left to right
3. the vertical, coming down and hooking left without lifting
4. the lower rising stroke
5. the long curved slash down to the right, hooking upward at its end
6. a separate rising slash up to the left
7. a dot at the upper right, pressed down-right

Six pen lifts.

Two of these are joined strokes that must not be broken: stroke 3 (down, then hook) and stroke 5 (the long slash, then hook up). Everything you have learned about turning strokes applies here — the pen changes direction, the stroke does not end.

The dot goes last. Small marks at the upper right are finishers, and you will see that again.

Your turn

- Write it: 我 slowly, twice — and keep strokes 3 and 5 unbroken
- Write it: 我 once more, saving the dot for last
- Say it: wǒ — low and dipping

Before you move on

Is this character built from pieces you already know? (No — and this book would rather say so than invent a story.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

8.2 我 — I, me, and saying who you are

Say wǒ. Low and dipping, and hold the bottom of it.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 我 wǒ — I. And also me.

English uses two words there and swaps between them depending on the job: I saw her, she saw me. Mandarin uses 我 for both, and this is your first sight of something that will save you a great deal of work: Mandarin never changes a word to show what job it is doing in a sentence. No I/me swap, no case endings, no agreeing with a subject. 我 is 我 in either seat.
Mandarin does bolt small extra pieces onto words for other jobs, and you will meet them — but never to mark who is doing what to whom.
Now put it to work with a word you already have:

我是 wǒ shì — I am

是 is the word you learned for answering yes. Its actual job is to link two things: 我是 and then who you are. Say your own name after it and you have introduced yourself.
There is a second way to say this, built on a word you do not have yet. 我是 is not a stand-in for it — both are real, and this is the one you can write today.
Two third tones meet in wǒ shì? No — 是 is fourth tone. Nothing moves.

Your turn

- Say it: wǒ, then wǒ shì — low and dipping, then falling
- Say it: wǒ shì followed by your own name, out loud, twice
- Write it: 我是

Before you move on

What does 是 do in 我是? (It links you to whatever comes next.)
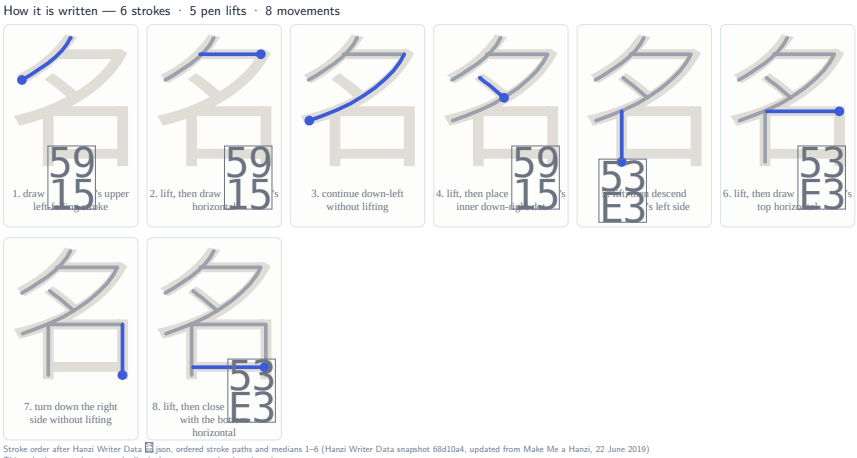
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

8.3 名 — a mouth with something above it

Write 口. Three strokes, and the box is not closed until the last one.

Script — the shape



How 名 is written, stroke by stroke

名

Six strokes, and three of them are 口, which you already own.

名 is 夕 sitting on top of 口. The lower half is the mouth. The upper half is 夕, a shape this book has not taught you as a character of its own — here it is a piece, and naming it is enough:

1. 夕's upper falling stroke, down to the left
2. 夕's horizontal, continuing down-left without lifting — one stroke
3. 夕's inner dot, pressed down-right

4-6. 口, complete. Left side; top and right in one turning stroke; the bottom bar closing it.

Five pen lifts.

Finish 夕 before you begin 口 — the same instinct as finishing 日 before the body of 是, and finishing the sun before 十 in 早. You have now met that rule often enough that it should feel like the obvious thing to do.

A hook worth having, offered as a hook: 夕 is the shape used for evening, and a mouth beneath it reads easily as speaking your name in the dark, when you cannot be seen. That is a traditional story, not proven history — but 名 does mean name, and the picture makes the character stick.

Your turn

- Write it: 口 alone, then 名 — and notice the last three strokes are identical
- Write it: 名 again, keeping stroke 2 unbroken
- Say it: míng — rising

Before you move on

Which half goes first? (The top — as always.)
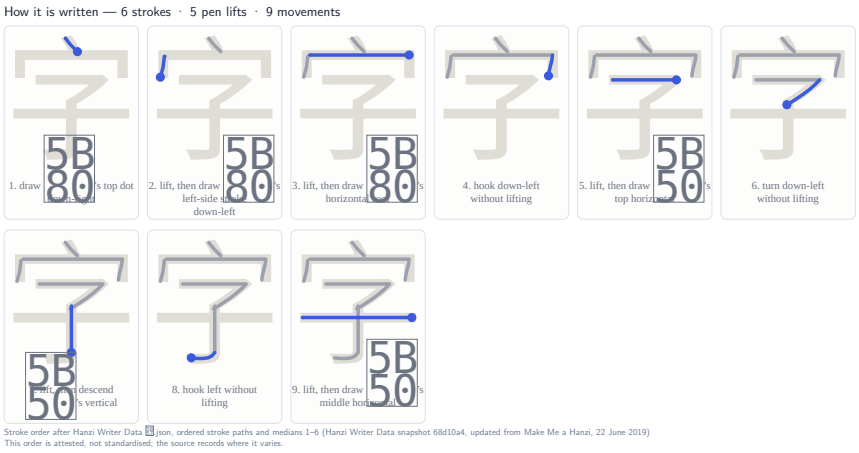
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

8.4 字 — a child under a roof

Write 子, the child — the piece that stands beside 女 in 好.

Script — the shape



How 字 is written, stroke by stroke

字

Six strokes, and the bottom three are 子, which you have written since the first chapter.

字 is 子 under a roof. The roof is 宀, a piece rather than a character — three strokes that make a lid:

1. 宀's top dot, pressed down-right
2. 宀's left side, a short stroke down-left
3. 宀's horizontal roof, running right and hooking down-left at its end — one stroke

4-6. 子, complete. Its top horizontal turning down-left; its vertical with a left hook; its middle horizontal last.

Five pen lifts.

Roof before child. A covering piece is finished before whatever sits under it, which is the same habit as 日 before the body of 是 and 夕 before 口 in 名.

And now the meaning, which is the reason this character is worth the effort. 字 zì means character — a written Chinese character. It is the word for the thing you have been learning to make since the first page of this book. The roof-and-child picture is the traditional hook: something raised and kept under shelter.

Your turn

- Write it: 子 alone, then 字 — the difference is a roof
- Write it: 字, saying "roof first" before you start
- Say it: zì — falling

Before you move on

Which goes first, the roof or the child? (The roof.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

8.5 名字 — the word for a name

Say zǎoshang. Second syllable light and short.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 名字 míngzi — name.

Both halves are characters you have just written, and both mean something:

- 名 míng — name
- 字 zì — character, a written unit

So the word is "name-character", and that is not a stretched hook. A Chinese personal name is a small number of characters, usually two or three, each chosen deliberately for what it means. The word for "name" says what a name is made of.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: mjieng, "name", and dziH, "written character" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

The sounds and tones in this word

míngzi, not míngzì.
字 is fourth tone standing alone, and you practised it that way — but in this word it goes neutral, short and light, exactly as 上 did inside 早上. Second syllables do this often, and you now know the signal: no tone mark means no tone.
míng rises; zi rides on the end of it. Twice through.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- zì alone, falling — then míngzi, with the second syllable light
- míngzi twice, and say what each of its two halves means

Before you move on

Which syllable of míngzi carries no tone? (The second.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

8.6 Practice — saying who you are

Say wǒ shì — low and dipping, then falling.

The exchange

Two people meet in the morning. The gap in the third line is yours to fill.

A: 早上好

zǎoshang hǎo — good morning.

B: 早上好

zǎoshang hǎo — good morning.

A: 我是 …

wǒ shì … — I am … (your name).

B: 我是 …

wǒ shì … — I am … (their name).

A: 再见

zàijiàn — goodbye.

Say it with your own name in it, out loud. That is the first time this book has asked you for something it could not supply.

What you've built — and one thing deliberately withheld

You can now greet by time of day, say who you are, and leave. Every line is built from characters you have written.

One honest gap, and it is worth naming rather than hiding. You have the word for name — 名字 — but not yet the way to ask for someone's. The natural Mandarin question needs a word this book has not given you, and asking it with only the pieces you have would mean teaching you a sentence a speaker would not say. It is coming, and it is worth waiting for.

What 名字 buys you now is real: you can recognise the word when someone else uses it, and you know that a name is characters — which is why a Chinese speaker asked about their name will often tell you which characters it uses.

Your turn

- Say it: wǒ shì, then your own name, three times
- Say it: the whole exchange, taking both parts
- Write it: 我是, then 名字

Before you move on

Can you yet ask someone else for their name? (Not yet — and the book would rather say so than hand you a sentence nobody says.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

Chapter 9

What?

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) ↙ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write 什 and 么, ask 什么 to mean what, use it on its own to get something repeated, judge that it is blunt with a stranger, and I know its two characters carry the word's sound rather than its meaning.
>
> The first exchange in the track that goes wrong – one speaker mishears – and the first the reader can repair, which matters more than another memorised line because it is what keeps a conversation alive when the Mandarin runs out.

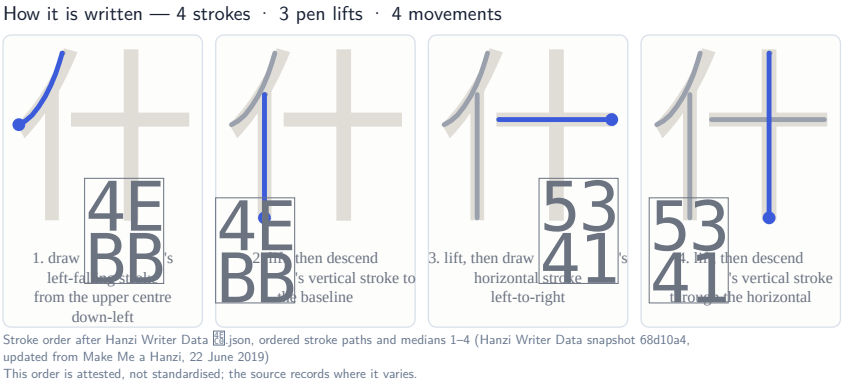
9.1 什 — both halves are old news

Write 亻 , the standing person — two strokes, at the left edge of a block.

Script — the shape



How 什 is written, stroke by stroke

什

Four strokes, and after 我 that will feel like a rest.
什 is 亻 beside 十, and you have met both:

- 亻 you wrote in the very first word of this book, standing at the left of 你
- 十 you drew inside 早, underneath the sun

1. 亻's falling stroke, from the upper centre down to the left
2. 亻's vertical, straight down to the baseline
3. 十's horizontal, left to right
4. 十's vertical, down through that horizontal

Three pen lifts.

Finish 亻 before starting 十 — left before right, the oldest habit you have. And inside 十, horizontal before vertical, because the two cross.

A note on 十, since this is the second time it has turned up without being taught. It is the character for ten, and you still do not need to write it on its own. When it eventually arrives as a character in its own right, you will already have drawn it twice.

Your turn

- Write it: 亻 alone, then 什 — the second half is two strokes
- Write it: 什 again, saying "person, then ten"
- Say it: shén — rising

Before you move on

Which stroke of 十 comes first? (The horizontal — the two cross.) Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

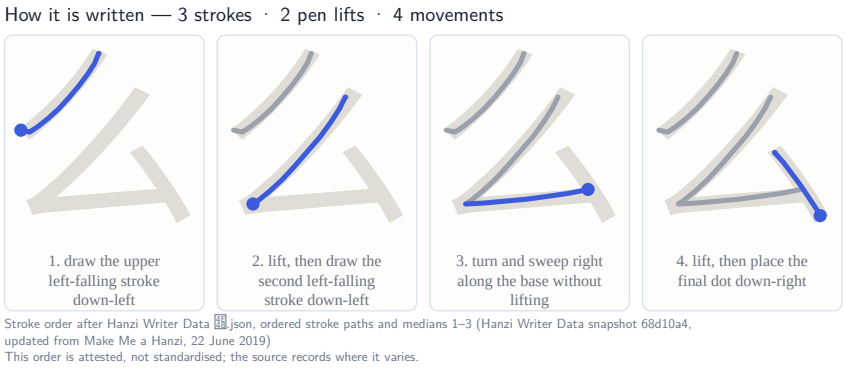
9.2 么 — three strokes, and one of them turns

Write 什. Person on the left, ten on the right.

Script — the shape



How 么 is written, stroke by stroke

么

Three strokes, and the middle one does the work:

1. a short falling stroke at the top, down to the left

2. a second falling stroke down-left that turns without lifting and sweeps right along the base

3. a dot, pressed down-right

Two pen lifts.

Stroke 2 is one movement, not two: down-left, then a turn, then out to the right. Lift in the middle of it and you have written something else. You have handled this before — the frame of 再, the leg of 见 — and the instinct is the same: the pen turns, the stroke does not end.

The dot goes last, as it did in 我.

The sounds and tones in this word

么 is me — and that is the whole pronunciation. No tone mark, because it has no tone.
You met neutral syllables inside words, where 上 and 字 gave their tones up. 么 is different: it is neutral in the dictionary, standing alone. Some characters simply never carry a tone, and this is your first.

Your turn

- Write it: 么 — and keep stroke 2 unbroken through its turn
- Say it: me — short, light, flat, no shape to it at all

Before you move on

Why does this character have no tone mark? (Because it has no tone.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

9.3 什么 — what

Say me. Short and flat, no tone at all.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 什么 shénme — what.

shén rises; me is light and toneless behind it. Both characters are ones you have already written.

This one is different in kind from everything before it. 你好, 是, 不是, 再见, 早上好, 我是 — every one of those gives something. 什么 asks. It is the first word in this book whose job is to get something back from the other person.
Here the honest note this book owes you: the two halves of 什么 do not add up the way 再见's did. 再 and 见 each brought their meaning into the word. 什 and 么 bring only their sound — 什 is standing in for how this word is pronounced, not for anything it means.
And keep the levels apart. The pieces you drew inside 什 — the person and the ten — belong to that character, not to this word. "Person plus ten" explains nothing about what. Some words are built; others are not.
Where the word comes from is not settled. It appears in writing from about the Tang dynasty, spelled several ways, and its two characters were chosen for their sound.

Why it's said this way

什么? by itself means "What?" — the thing you say when you did not catch what someone said. That is real, everyday Mandarin and it is the most useful thing you can do with this word today.
One caution, because register matters and this book would rather tell you than let you find out. A bare 什么? is blunt — closer to English "What?" than to "Sorry?". Between friends it is unremarkable. To a stranger, or to anyone you would be careful with, it lands harder than you intend, and Mandarin has gentler ways to ask for a repeat that need words you do not have yet.
So: use it, and know what it weighs.

Your turn

- Say it: shénme — rising, then light
- Say it: shénme? as a question, as though you missed something
- Write it: 什么

Before you move on

Do the two halves of 什么 add up to its meaning? (No — they are there for sound.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

9.4 Practice — when you did not catch it

Say shénme — rising, then light.

The exchange

Two people meet. One of them mishears. Fill both gaps with real names.

A: 早上好

zǎoshang hǎo — good morning.

B: 早上好

zǎoshang hǎo — good morning.

A: 我是 …

wǒ shì … — I am …

B: 什么?

shénme? — what?

A: 我是 …

wǒ shì … — I am … (said again, slower)

B: 再见

zàijiàn — goodbye.

That fourth line is the point of the chapter. Until now every exchange in this book has gone perfectly, which is not what conversations do. B did not catch it, said so, and got it repeated. That is a repair, and being able to make one is worth more than another memorised phrase — it is what keeps a conversation alive when your Mandarin runs out.

What you've built — and the question you still cannot ask

You can greet by the hour, say who you are, ask for a repeat when you miss something, and leave.
The gap named last chapter is still open, and it is worth being precise about what changed. You now have 什么, the what of "what is your name?" — but not yet the rest of that sentence. Both halves of the question exist in Mandarin; this book has handed you one of them. The other needs a character the font in this book cannot yet print, which is a dull reason, and a true one.
So the honest position: 什么 is a question word you can use today in the ways above, and a piece of a question you will finish later.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the whole exchange, both parts, including the mishearing
- shénme? twice — once flat and clipped, once softened and drawn out on the rise. Same word; the second is the one you would risk on a stranger

Before you move on

Is a bare 什么? gentle or blunt? (Blunt — fine with friends, heavy with strangers.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

Chapter 10

One Character, Two Courtesies

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) ↙ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write the speech radical 讠 and the twelve-stroke 谢, thank someone with 谢谢, answer thanks with 不谢, and predict from the rule alone that 不 rises before 谢 because 谢 is a falling tone.
>
> A whole courtesy exchange bought with one new character – doubled for the thanks, negated for the reply – and the first place the reader predicts a tone change from a rule rather than being told how a word sounds.

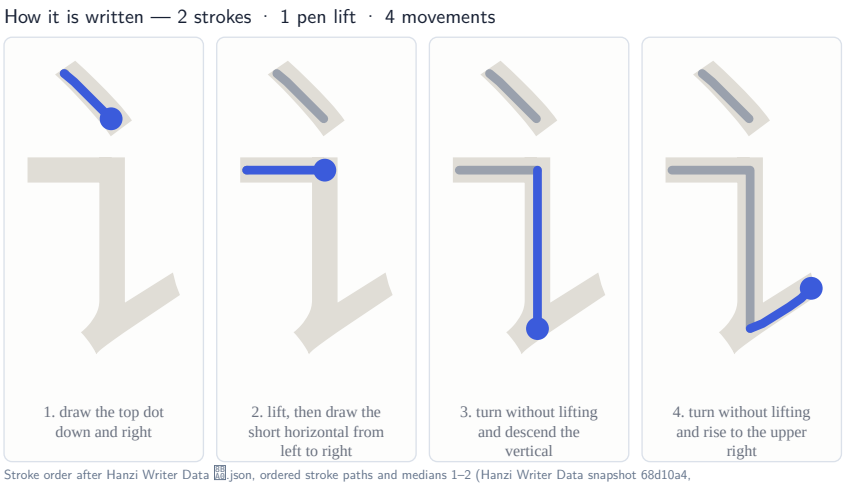
10.1 讠 — the speech radical

Write 讠 . Two strokes, squeezed to the left edge of a block.

Script — the shape



How 讠 is written, stroke by stroke

讠

Two strokes, one pen lift, and it is not a character. Like 亻, it is a component — a piece that lives at the left edge of other characters.

1. a dot at the top, pressed down and to the right
2. a short horizontal, which turns down and then finishes rising to the upper right — all one stroke, no lift

That second stroke does three things without stopping. You have handled worse: the frame of 再, the leg of 见, the turn in 么.

讠 means speech. It is the squeezed form of 言, the character for words and speaking, and it does the same job 亻 does: it tells you what the character is about before you know how to say it.

讠 joins 亻 as a component that carries meaning rather than sound, and the pair is worth holding together:

- 亻 at the left edge → the character is about a person
- 讠 at the left edge → the character is about speech

You will meet 讠 often. Every time you do, you can guess something true about the word before anyone tells you.

Your turn

Write these out:

- 讠 — dot, then one unbroken turning stroke
- 亻 , then 讠 , side by side — two meaning-carrying components

Before you move on

How many pen lifts does 讠 take? (One.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

10.2 谢 — twelve strokes, and three pieces

Write 讠 . Dot, then one turning stroke.

Script — the shape

How 谢 is written, stroke by stroke

谢

Twelve strokes. That is the longest thing in this book, and the number is about to stop mattering.

You were told once that stroke-counting gives out and structure takes over. This is where that pays off. 谢 is three pieces, left to right, and you have just written the first:

讠 + 身 + 寸

- 讠 — speech, two strokes, done
- 身 — a shape meaning body, seven strokes
- 寸 — a shape meaning inch, three strokes on the right

身 and 寸 are pieces, not characters you are being asked to own. Read them, place them, move on.

讠 (strokes 1-2). As you just practised.

身 (strokes 3-9). An upper falling stroke; the left side down; the top and right side in one turning stroke that hooks left at the base; two short inner horizontals; a wide horizontal beneath them; then a falling stroke down-left.

寸 (strokes 10-12). A horizontal; a vertical that hooks left at the base; and a dot, last.

Eleven pen lifts. Left piece finished before the middle, middle before the right — the oldest habit you have, applied to three pieces instead of two.

Compare it honestly with 我. 我 was seven strokes and had no pieces you could hold on to. 谢 is twelve and has three. The long one is the easier one. That is the whole argument for learning structure rather than counting.

Your turn

- Write it: 讠, then the middle piece, then the right piece — stopping between each
- Write it: 谢 straight through, and say "speech, body, inch" as you go
- Say it: xiè — falling

Before you move on

Which was harder to learn, this one or 我? (我 — and it is five strokes shorter.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

10.3 谢谢 — said twice

Say xiè — falling, from high to low.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 谢谢 xièxie — thank you.

It is 谢 written twice. Nothing else. You learned one character and you have the word.
This is new, and it is not a quirk. Mandarin builds a great many words by saying a piece twice, and doubling usually softens something — it makes an action smaller, lighter, more everyday. That pattern is worth knowing; you will meet it again.
Two cautions about this particular word, so you do not over-apply it. 谢谢 is a fixed expression, not something you assemble fresh each time — it does not mean "to thank briefly". And 谢 is not said on its own: it lives inside words, so do not reach for a bare 谢 and expect it to work.
谢 is inherited from Middle Chinese zjaeH, glossed "to decline, take leave" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); "to thank" is a later sense, and the doubled form is a Chinese formation.

The sounds and tones in this word

xièxie, not xièxiè.
The first 谢 falls. The second goes neutral — short, light, no tone mark. You have seen this twice already, on 上 inside 早上 and on 字 inside 名字, and now on a syllable that is the same character as the one before it.
That is the useful lesson: the light syllable is not a property of the character, it is a property of the word. 谢 falls in this word's first half and goes light in its second — and you will meet 谢 falling again, in its second position, before this chapter is out. Twice through.

Say it: xiè dropping, then xie small and quick behind it.

Your turn

- Say it: xiè alone, falling — then xièxie, with the second syllable light
- Say it: xièxie twice, and say which of the two 谢 carries a tone
- Write it: 谢谢 — the same twelve strokes, twice

Before you move on

How many new characters did this word cost you? (One.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

10.4 不谢 — answering thanks

Say xièxie — falling, then light.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of Someone thanks you. What do you say back?

不谢

不谢 — and it is made of two things you already have. 不, the negator you have carried since 好 and 不好, in front of 谢, which you learned an hour ago. Nothing new. You could have built this yourself.
It works the way 不是 works: put 不 in front of the word and you turn it. Here turning it is a polite refusal of the thanks — no need to thank me — which is how a great many languages answer being thanked.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: pjut, "not", and zjaeH, "to decline, to thank" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

The sounds and tones in this word

Before you say it, work it out. 谢 is fourth tone. What does 不 do in front of a fourth tone?
It rises. bú xiè, not bù xiè — exactly as 不是 became bú shì.

This is the second time that rule has fired, and this time you were told the condition before the word. That is the difference between a rule you have been given and a rule you can use: you can now predict the pronunciation of a word nobody has said to you yet. Twice through.

Why it's said this way

不谢 is real and correct, and it is not the commonest reply. The one you will hear most often needs two characters this book cannot yet print, so it is waiting. 不谢 will be understood everywhere, and it has the advantage of costing you nothing you did not already have.

Your turn

- Say it: bú xiè — the first syllable rising, and know why
- Say it: bú shì, then bú xiè — the same rule, twice
- Write it: 不谢

Before you move on

How many new characters did this reply cost you? (None.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

10.5 Practice — thanks, and the answer

Say bú xiè. Rising, then falling — and you know why the first one rises.

The exchange

A: 早上好

zǎoshang hǎo — good morning.

B: 早上好

zǎoshang hǎo — good morning.

A: 谢谢

xièxie — thank you.

B: 不谢

bú xiè — you're welcome.

A: 再见

zàijiàn — goodbye.

Six lines, and one new character paid for two of them.

What you've built — one character, a whole exchange

This chapter cost you 谢 and nothing else. Out of it came the thanks (谢谢, the same character twice) and the reply (不谢, a negator you already had). That is what a system does for you that a phrasebook cannot: pieces recombine.
Three things you did here without being led:

- you doubled a character to make a word, and knew the second half would go light;
- you negated a word to make its answer, the same move that turned 是 into 不是;
- and you predicted a tone change from a rule, before hearing the word said.

That last one is the real marker. Early on you were told what 你好 sounds like. Now you are told a rule and you work out what a word sounds like. Those are different kinds of knowing, and only the second one travels to words nobody has taught you.

Your turn

- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Say it: xièxie, then bú xiè — light on the second, rising on the first
- Write it: 谢谢, then 不谢

Before you move on

Which two of these did you work out rather than being told? (The light second syllable, and the rising 不.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

Chapter 11

After You

Modes: voice (2) eyes (2) pen (1) Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can write 请, say it on its own to mean after you, explain that it invites rather than softens and so is used far less than English please, and I know a character half can point at the sound instead of the meaning.
>
> A complete courtesy in four words, and the point at which the reader learns a character can carry two kinds of hint at once – one half for what it means, the other for how it sounds – which is what makes the writing system learnable rather than thousands of unrelated pictures.

11.1 请 — a half that tells you the sound

Write 讠 . Dot, then one turning stroke. What does it tell you about the word? (Speech.)

Script — the shape

How 请 is written, stroke by stroke

请

Ten strokes, two pieces, and 讠 is on the left again as you would expect.

讠 + 青

讠 (strokes 1-2). Speech. You know it.

青 (strokes 3-10). A top horizontal; a second horizontal; a vertical down through them; a wide middle horizontal; then the lower box — its left side, then its top-and-right in one turning stroke that hooks at the base, then two short inner horizontals.

Nine pen lifts. 讠 finished before 青.

Now the part worth stopping for. In 谢, both halves pointed at meaning — speech, body, inch. Here the right half does something else entirely.

青 is said qīng. The whole character is said qǐng.

Say those two aloud, one after the other. Same consonant, same rest of the syllable; only the pitch differs. The right half is not telling you what the word means. It is telling you how to say it. That is a phonetic component — the job 尔 was doing inside 你, which you could only take on trust there. This time you can hear it. Once you can spot one you have a genuine reading strategy: meet an unknown character, find the half you recognise, and you often have a guess at the sound.

It is a guess and not a guarantee — the sound has drifted in plenty of characters over a few thousand years, and the tone in particular is often different, as it is here. But a guess beats nothing, and you will be right often.

Your turn

- Write it: 讠 , then 青 — stopping between the two pieces
- Say it: qīng, then qǐng — the sound half, then the whole character
- Write it: 请 straight through

Before you move on

Is the sound half exactly right? (Not quite — the tone differs.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart; stroke order per the PRC standard Xiandai Hanyu Tongyongzi Bishun Guifan (1997).

11.2 请 — please, and after you

Say qǐng — low and dipping, like hǎo and wǒ.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 请 qǐng — the word a dictionary will give you as please.

That translation is close enough to use and loose enough to mislead, so here is the more accurate version: 请 is closer to "I ask you to", "I invite you to". Where English please softens a demand, 请 hands the action over.
Which is why it works on its own. Hold a door and say 请 — that is after you, go ahead, be my guest. Offer someone a seat and say 请. No other words needed, and none of them would be an apology for asking.
The word is inherited from Middle Chinese tshjengX, glossed "to beg, to request, to ask" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the asking sense is the old one.

Why it's said this way

English please is a softener. You bolt it onto a request to take the edge off, and you can put it almost anywhere: please sit, sit, please, could you please sit.
请 does not work like that. It comes before the action it invites, never bolted on after it — there is no Mandarin habit of tacking 请 onto the end of a request the way English tacks on please.
The consequence is practical, and it surprises learners: Mandarin uses 请 far less often than English uses please — and with people you are close to it can sound distant rather than polite. Leaving it out is not rude the way dropping please can be in English. Warmth in Mandarin is carried more by what you say and how you say it than by a single courtesy word.
So: use 请 to hand something over or to invite. Do not reach for it every time you would say please in English — you would sound stilted rather than polite.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- qǐng on its own, as though holding a door open
- qǐng, then xièxie — the invitation, then the thanks

Before you move on

Does Mandarin use 请 as often as English uses please? (No — far less.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

11.3 Practice — after you

Say qǐng — low and dipping.

The exchange

Two people reach a door at the same time.

A: 请

qǐng — after you.

B: 谢谢

xièxie — thank you.

A: 不谢

bú xiè — you're welcome.

B: 再见

zàijiàn — goodbye.

Four lines, four words, and a complete small courtesy. Nobody in it asks for anything or explains anything, and it still works — which is most of what courtesy is.

What you've built — a component that predicts

Consider what the two halves of this chapter's character bought you. 讠 on the left told you the word was about speech before you knew what it meant — and it did the same in 谢. Two characters, one component, one reliable guess.

青 on the right told you roughly how to say it. You were told once before that a half could do this — 尔, on the right of 你 — but you had to take it on trust, because 尔 is ěr and nothing in it sounds like nǐ. Here you can hear it for yourself: qīng, qǐng.

So the claim made in passing back then is now one you can check: a Chinese character can carry two kinds of hint at once, one for what it means and one for how it is said. That is the single most useful thing to know about reading Chinese, and it is why the writing system is learnable at all rather than being thousands of unrelated pictures.

You will not always get both hints, and neither is a promise. But from here on, when you meet a character you do not know, you have something to do other than look it up: find the half you recognise, and ask which job it is doing.

Your turn

- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts

- Say it: qǐng, xièxie, bú xiè — three courtesies in a row
- Write it: 请, then 谢 — and say what their left halves have in common

Before you move on

Which half of 请 would help you guess its pronunciation? (The right.)
Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

11.4 Eight exchanges, one meeting

Every chapter so far has ended on a two-voice exchange, and you have practised each one on its own. From memory: the one that opens a meeting, and the one that closes it.

You'll want to know: they were always one conversation

Eight exchanges arrived one per chapter. Put them in the order a meeting uses them and this book's whole first act is there:

the move	what it added
greet	你好, both voices
introduce, ask	a name given, a name asked for identify, negate	saying it is so, and saying it is not thank, be polite	谢谢, and the reply that follows it
part	再见

Nothing in that column is new. What is new is that no chapter ever asked you to run them one after another, and a meeting is exactly that: eight small moves with no pause between them for looking anything up.

Your turn: the whole meeting, no stops

Say these aloud:

- both voices of the greeting
- give your name, then ask for theirs
- answer a yes-or-no question, once affirming and once denying

- thank them, then give the reply you would receive
- take your leave

Before you move on

Which exchange opens a meeting, and which closes it? (你好 and 再见.) Which pair is a yes against a no? (Identify and negate.) What did the thanks exchange add beyond the word itself? (The reply that comes back.) And what is new here, when every piece is old? (Running them together, with no stop.)

11.5 好 — one character, and three things it is not

Say 好 twice, once in each tone you have met, and say what each one means. One character, two words.

You'll want to know: four cautions, and 好 carries three of them

These chapters have warned you four separate times about reading too much into what you see. 好 is where three of the four meet:

- A character is not a word. 你好 is two characters and one word. A character writes a syllable and usually a meaningful piece — not a word.
- A component is not always a meaning. 好 is 女 beside 子, woman beside child, and the lesson that built it warned you against reading a story into that. The pieces are how the character is assembled, not what it argues.
- A tone is not a decoration. hǎo is good; hào is to be fond of. Same character, same strokes, different word.

Script: the component that carries a sound

尔

The fourth caution is the other way round. 尔 is in 你 to say how it sounds, not what it means — a component doing phonetic work. Once you expect that, a great many characters stop looking arbitrary.

Against it, 口 kǒu (mouth) and 日 rì (sun, and also day) are components that do mean what they draw. Both kinds exist, and the character does not announce which you are looking at. That is the caution worth carrying forward.

Your turn

- Say it: 你好 — then say how many characters and how many words
- Say it: 好 in both tones, with both meanings
- Look: at 你 and name the component that is there for its sound
- Say it: 口 and 日, and what each one draws

Before you move on

How many words is 你好, and how many characters? (One word, two characters.) What are the two halves of 好, and what do they tell you about its meaning? (女 and 子 — and nothing you should rely on.) What does 尔 contribute to 你? (Its sound, not its meaning.) And which of 口 and 日 means what it draws? (Both — which is why the two kinds have to be told apart.)

Chapter 12

People under one roof

Modes: voice (10) eyes (2) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 14 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can understand, say, read and write six HSK Level 1 people-and-family words, building 儿子, 女儿 and 家人 only after their spoken meanings and component characters are secure.
>
> Six family words pass separate listening, speaking, reading and no-model writing checks; pinyin cannot compensate for an unread character, and a strong skill cannot compensate for a weak one.

12.1 人 — a person

Write it: the two-stroke figure

Then say wǒ — I.

What to know first

人 — rén — person

Hear the rising tone first. Say rén. Read it: the character you already know

The meaning is singular here: one person. Number comes from context or another word; the character itself does not grow a plural ending.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 人 rén is inherited from Middle Chinese nyin, "person" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). Its ny became the Mandarin r, as in rì.

Your turn

Say person in Mandarin. Read it: 人
Cover: 人, then wait five seconds
Write it: the character

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary entry 170.

12.2 女 — female, woman

Say person. Write it: the three-stroke left half of 好

What to know first

女 — nǚ — female; woman

Say it low: nǚ. The rounded vowel is the same written ü you met in the character lesson. On its own, 女 labels female gender; it is not a polite way to call out to a woman. Here you are learning the word for reading and building.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 女 nǚ is inherited from Middle Chinese nrjoX, "woman" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Read it: 女, then cover it
Write it: the character, from the meaning cue female

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary entry 152.

12.3 Hear érzi — son

Say person, then female.

What to know first

érzi — son

Hear two beats: rising ér, then a short, light zi. Say the whole word once from the meaning. Keep the characters covered; the new first shape comes next.

Érzi is built from Middle Chinese nye, "infant", and tsiX, "offspring".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary entry 48.

12.4 丿乚 — fall, then bend and hook

Say son, then write 人.

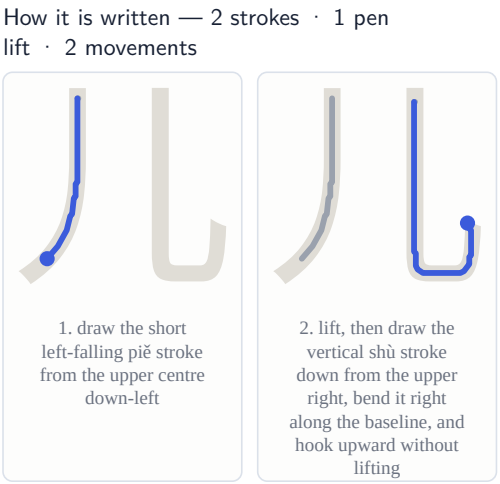
Script — the shape



How 儿 is written, stroke by stroke

儿

Two strokes. First a short fall down-left. Then start high on the right, descend, bend right along the floor, and hook upward without lifting. Unlike 人, the two strokes do not meet at the top.

Your turn

Trace 儿 once. Copy it once. Point to the bend that keeps it apart from 人.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 儿, pinned stroke paths and medians.

12.5 儿子 — son on the page

Say son. Write it: 儿 and 子 separately

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 儿子 — érzi — son

The first syllable rises. The second is light. Both characters carry child meanings, but the whole word—not either character alone—is the ordinary kinship word son.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: nye, "infant", and tsiX, "offspring" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 儿子, while saying ér-zi
Read it: 儿子 once without pinyin

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary entry 48.

12.6 Hear nǚ'ér — daughter

Say female, then son.

What to know first

nǚ'ér — daughter

Say two clear syllables: low nǚ, rising ér. The apostrophe only keeps the vowel boundary visible in pinyin. It is not a pause and not part of the Chinese writing.

Nǚ'ér is built from Middle Chinese nrjoX, "woman", and nye, "infant".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary entry 153.

12.7 女儿 — daughter on the page

Say daughter, then write 女 and 儿 separately.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 女儿 — nǚ'ér — daughter

Nothing is hidden: 女 gives female and 儿 gives child. Read the two characters without the pinyin, then say the whole word without a pause.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: nrjoX, "woman", and nye, "infant" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Look at 女儿, cover it, wait five seconds, and write it from daughter.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary entry 153.

12.8 Hear jiā — home, family

Say daughter, then son.

What to know first

jiā — home; family

Hold the pitch high and level: jiā. The word can name the household place or the family belonging to it. Keep the character covered; it has ten strokes, and the next lesson gives them to you in two familiar-sized pieces.

Jiā is inherited from Middle Chinese kae, "dwelling".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary entry 86.

12.9 家 — roof first, body second

Say home, then write the roof from 字 and the whole character 字.

Script — the shape

How 家 is written, stroke by stroke

宀 + 豕 → 家

Finish the three-stroke roof first. Under it, write the lower body from its top horizontal through the centre curve, three left-falling strokes, and the long right-falling finish. Ten strokes; nine lifts.

The old lower component is 豕, livestock. That decomposition is real history and a useful shape boundary. It is not a claim that a present-day home or family is defined by an animal.

Your turn

Trace 家 once. Copy it once, saying roof, then body.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 家, pinned stroke paths and medians.

12.10 家 — home on the page

Say home or family. Write it: 宀

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 家 — jiā — home; family

Read it: 家 once without pinyin
The high line over ā records first tone; the character records no tone mark at all.
家 is inherited from Middle Chinese kae, "dwelling" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); Mandarin softened its k to j.

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 家, from the model — name the roof before you write the lower body

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary entry 86.

12.11 Hear jiārén — family members

Say home or family, then person.

What to know first

jiārén — family members; family

You already own both sounds: jiā + rén. The compound names the people of the home. Say it once from the meaning before looking at either character.

Jiārén is built from Middle Chinese kae, "dwelling", and nyin, "person".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary entry 87.

12.12 家人 — the people of the home

Say family members, then write 家 and 人 separately.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 家人 — jiārén — family members; family

Read from the characters: home + person. The word is plural by meaning here, but Mandarin adds no plural ending to 人.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, kae and nyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), and the pair is old: it names a hexagram in the Book of Changes.

Your turn

Look at 家人, cover it, wait five seconds, and write it from family.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary entry 87.

12.13 Retrieve six people and family words

Say name. Write it: 儿 and 家

Your turn

Hear the six words in a shuffled order and say each meaning. Then, from six English meanings, say each word. Read it: the six character cards
Write it: only the two you missed
Repair one item at a time.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary entries 48, 87, and 153.

12.14 Payoff — six family words in four skills

Say name. Write it: 儿 and 家 without a model

Your turn

1. Listening: hear six words in mixed order and choose each meaning.
2. Speaking: produce all six from their English meanings, with tones audible.
3. Read it: the six character cards without pinyin
4. Writing: hear all six. Write it: all six without a model

Pass each skill separately. If one misses, repair that skill and retry only that part. This is a family vocabulary map, not yet a full family-description task.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 task outline pp. 2–3 and vocabulary entries 48, 86–87, 152–153, and 170.

Chapter 13

From study to university student

Modes: voice (11) eyes (3) pen (3) Hands-free start: the first of 17 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can understand, say, read and write six HSK Level 1 size-and-school words, gaining 大, 学 and 生 one gently staged character at a time before recombining them as 大家, 学生, 大学 and 大学生.
>
> Three newly secured characters produce six useful words, each checked separately in listening, speaking, unassisted reading and no-model writing.

13.1 Hear dà — big

Say home and family members.

What to know first

dà — big; large

Let the voice fall firmly on the single syllable: dà. Keep the character covered for now. The next lesson gives its three strokes one at a time.

Dà is inherited from Middle Chinese daH, "big"; the Guangyun also lists a second reading, dajH.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.2 大 — one bar, two falls

Say big in Mandarin.

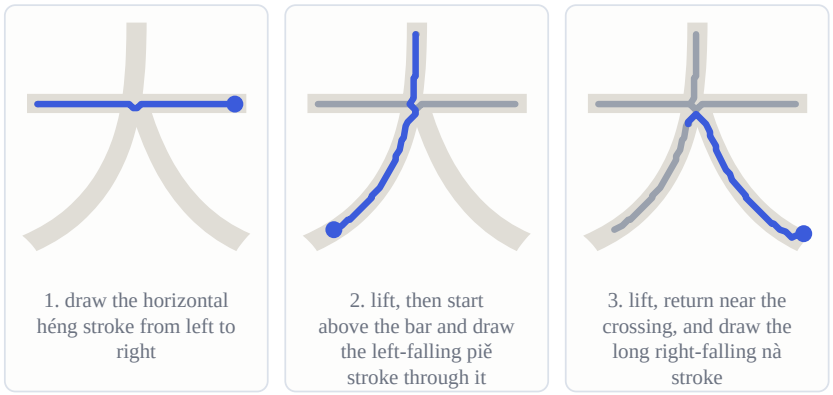
Script — the shape

How it is written — 3 strokes · 2 pen lifts · 3 movements



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 59/27.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–3 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 大 is written, stroke by stroke

一 + 丿 + 乀 → 大

Write the horizontal first. Start the left-falling stroke above it and cross through it. Lift once more, return to the crossing, and fall long to the right.

Your turn

Trace 大 once. Copy it once while saying bar, left, right.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 大, pinned stroke paths and medians.

13.3 大 — big on the page

Say big. Point to: the first stroke of 大

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 大 — dà — big; large

Read it: the character without pinyin
Then say it once with a clear fourth-tone fall.
大 is inherited from Middle Chinese daH, "big"; the Guangyun also lists a second reading, dajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 大, from the model — keep the crossing near the centre

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.4 Hear dàjiā — everyone

Say dà, then jiā.

What to know first

dàjiā — everyone; everybody

Hear two beats: falling dà, then level jiā. The whole word means everyone. Its written form will contain only characters you already know.

Dàjiā is built from Middle Chinese daH, "big", and kae, "household".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.5 大家 — everyone on the page

Write 大, then 家 with a small gap.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 大家 — dàjiā — everyone

Close the gap. Read the two characters as one word and keep both tone shapes.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, daH and kae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). Older texts use the pair for a great household; "everyone" is the later sense.

Your turn

Look at 大家, cover it, then write it once from memory.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.6 Hear xué — study, learn

Say everyone.

What to know first

xué — study; learn

Begin low enough to rise clearly through xué. Stay with sound and meaning; the eight-stroke character comes next in small groups.

Xué is inherited from Middle Chinese haewk, "to learn".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.7 学 — top, cover, child

Say study, then write 子.

Script — the shape

How 学 is written, stroke by stroke

⺍ + 冖 + 子 → 学

Place the three short marks across the top. Add the covering dot and hooked line. Finish with the familiar three strokes of 子 below. Eight strokes total; do not let the top marks crowd the child.

Your turn

Trace 学 once. Copy it once while saying top, cover, child.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 学, pinned stroke paths and medians.

13.8 学 — study on the page

Say study. Point to: 子 inside 学

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 学 — xué — study; learn

Read it: 学 without pinyin, then give the syllable a clear rise 学 is inherited from Middle Chinese haewk, "to learn" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); Mandarin lost the final k.

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 学 — pause mentally after the top, after the cover, and after 子

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.9 Hear xuésheng — student

Say study.

What to know first

xuésheng — student

Rise on xué. Keep sheng short and light. Hold the second character back; the next lesson gives its five strokes.

Xuésheng is built from Middle Chinese haewk, "to learn", and srjaeng, "life, birth".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.10 生 — five measured strokes

Say student.

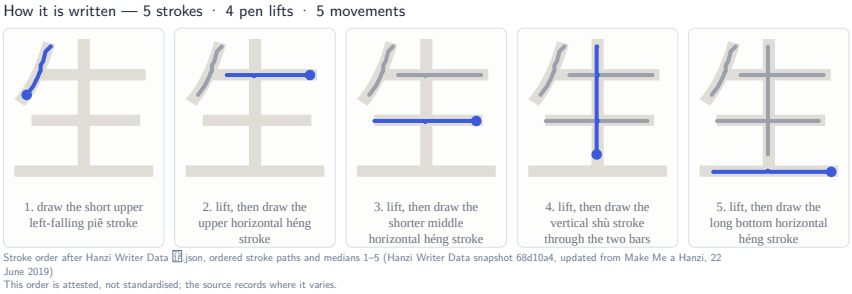
Script — the shape



How 生 is written, stroke by stroke

Begin with the short left-fall. Add the upper horizontal and the shorter middle horizontal. Draw the vertical through their centres, then anchor everything with the long bottom horizontal. Five strokes; four lifts.

Your turn

Trace 生 once. Copy it once while saying fall, two bars, through, base.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 生, pinned stroke paths and medians.

13.11 学生 — student on the page

Point to: 学, then 生

Say study, then student.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 学生 — xuésheng — student

Read it: the two-character word without pinyin
Keep the second syllable light.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: haewk, “to learn”, and srjaeng, “life, birth” (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription). The pair is an old Chinese compound.

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 学生 — finish all of 学 before beginning 生

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.12 Hear dàxué — university

Say big, then study.

What to know first

dàxué — university; college

Let dà fall, then let xué rise. Together they name a university or college. Dàxué is built from Middle Chinese daH, "big", and haewk, "learning".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.13 大学 — university on the page

Read 大 and 学 separately.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 大学 — dàxué — university; college

Now read the pair as one word: fall, then rise.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, daH and haewk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The pair is old, the title of a Confucian classic, the Great Learning; the sense "university" is modern.

Your turn

Look at 大学, cover it, and write it once from memory.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.14 Hear dàxuésheng — university student

Say university, then student.

What to know first

dàxuésheng — university student

Say three beats: falling dà, rising xué, light sheng. Do not repeat xué; the two familiar words overlap there.

Dàxuésheng is built from Middle Chinese daH, haewk and srjaeng: big, learning, life.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.15 大学生 — university student on the page

Read 大学, then 学生.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 大学生 — dàxuésheng — university student

Track three characters and three beats. The middle 学 belongs to the whole word only once.
All three pieces are inherited from Middle Chinese, daH, haewk and srjaeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), and Chinese joined them as university plus student.

Your turn

Look at 大学生, cover it, and write it once. Check one character at a time.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.16 Retrieve six size and school words

Write it: 大, 学, and 生 once each from memory

Your turn

Hear the six words in shuffled order and say each meaning. Then say each word from its English meaning. Read it: each character card

Write it: only the missed items

Repair one word at a time.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

13.17 Payoff — six school words in four skills

Write it: 大, 学, and 生 without a model

Your turn

1. Listening: hear six words in mixed order and choose every meaning.
2. Speaking: produce all six from their English meanings, with tones audible.
3. Read it: all six character cards without pinyin
4. Writing: hear all six. Write it: all six without a model

Pass each skill separately. Repair and retry only the failed skill. This is a school vocabulary checkpoint, not yet a full conversation about education.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 task outline and vocabulary.

Chapter 14

One small step into school

Modes: voice (6) eyes (2) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can understand, say, read and write 小, 小学 and 小学生, gaining only the three-stroke 小 before recombining it with the already secure 学 and 生.
>
> One new glyph expands into three official Level 1 words, each checked independently in listening, speaking, unassisted reading and no-model writing.

14.1 Hear xiǎo — small

Say big and university.

What to know first

xiǎo — small; little

Keep the voice low through the third tone: xiǎo. Work only with sound and meaning. Its three-stroke character comes next.

Xiǎo is inherited from Middle Chinese sjewX, "small".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

14.2 小 — centre, left, right

Say small in Mandarin.

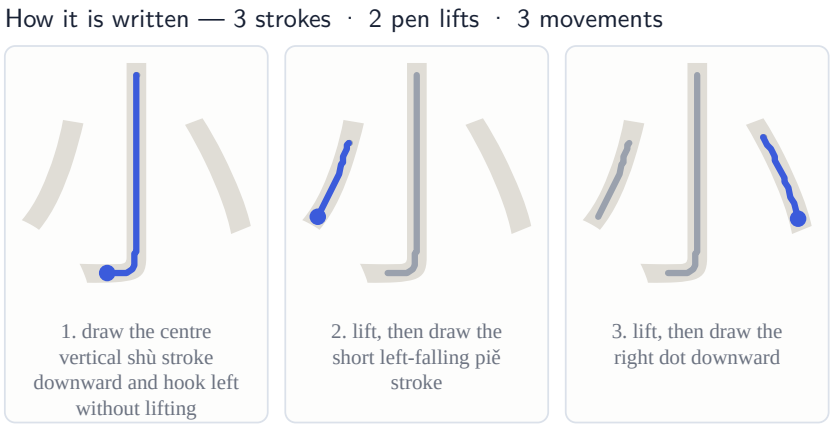
Script — the shape



How 小 is written, stroke by stroke

Draw the centre vertical first and finish its hook without lifting. Add the short left-falling mark. Finish with the right dot, leaving air around the centre. Three strokes; two lifts.

Your turn

Trace 小 once. Copy it once while saying centre, left, right.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 小, pinned stroke paths and medians.

14.3 小 — small on the page

Say small. Point to: the first stroke of 小

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 小 — xiǎo — small; little

Read it: the character without pinyin, then say it with a low third tone 小 is inherited from Middle Chinese sjewX, "small" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 小 — keep the side marks shorter than the centre stroke

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

14.4 Hear xiǎoxué — primary school

Say small, then study.

What to know first

xiǎoxué — primary school; elementary school

Keep xiǎo low, then let xué rise. No new character is hiding in this word.

Xiǎoxué is built from Middle Chinese sjewX, "small", and haewk, "learning".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

14.5 小学 — primary school on the page

Read 小, then 学.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 小学 — xiǎoxué — primary school

Read the pair as one word without pinyin: low, then rising.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, sjewX and haewk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). Older texts use the pair for a child's first schooling; "primary school" is the modern sense.

Your turn

Look at 小学, cover it, and write it once from memory.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

14.6 Hear xiǎoxuésheng — primary-school student

Say primary school, then student.

What to know first

xiǎoxuésheng — primary-school student

Say three beats: low xiǎo, rising xué, light sheng. 学 appears only once where the two familiar words overlap.

Xiǎoxuésheng is built from Middle Chinese sjewX, haewk and srjaeng: small, learning, life.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

14.7 小学生 — primary-school student on the page

Read 小学, then point to 生.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 小学生 — xiǎoxuésheng — primary-school student

Track three characters and three beats. Read it once without pinyin. All three pieces are inherited from Middle Chinese, sjewX, haewk and srjaeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), and Chinese joined them as primary school plus student.

Your turn

Look at 小学生, cover it, and write it once. Check one character at a time.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

14.8 Retrieve three primary-school words

Write it: 小, 学, and 生 once each from memory

Your turn

Hear small, primary school, and primary-school student in mixed order. Say each. Read it: each Mandarin form

Write it: each one

Then contrast 大学 with 小学 and 大学生 with 小学生. Repair only the missed item.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

14.9 Payoff — three primary-school words in four skills

Write it: 小, 学, and 生 without a model

Your turn

1. Listening: hear the three forms in mixed order and choose each meaning.
2. Speaking: produce all three from their English meanings, with tones audible.
3. Read it: all three character cards without pinyin
4. Writing: hear all three. Write it: all three without a model

Pass each skill separately. Repair and retry only the failed skill.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 task outline and vocabulary.

Chapter 15

A wider school map

Modes: voice (13) eyes (2) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 17 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can understand, say, read and write 中学, 中学生, 同学 and 上学 after gaining only 中 and 同 through source-verified, gently staged handwriting practice.
>
> Four official Level 1 school words are retrieved across four spaced reviews, then checked independently in listening, speaking, unassisted reading and no-model writing.

15.1 Hear zhōng — middle

Say small in Mandarin.

What to know first

zhōng — middle; centre

Hold one high, level tone: zhōng. Stay with sound and meaning. The written shape comes next.

Zhōng is inherited from Middle Chinese trjuwng, “middle”.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.2 中 — close, then pass through

Say middle in Mandarin.

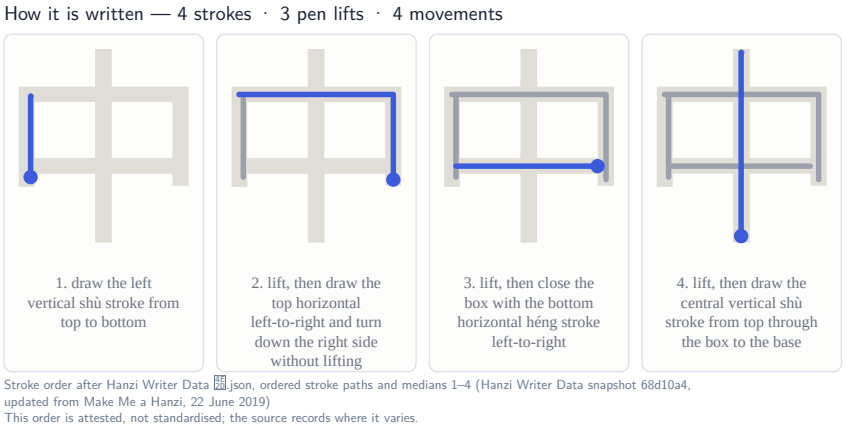
Script — the shape



How 中 is written, stroke by stroke

Reuse 口's three-stroke box: left side; joined top and right; closing bottom. Only then draw the long centre vertical through the box. Four strokes; three lifts.

Your turn

Trace 中 once. Copy it once while saying box, close, through.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 中, pinned stroke paths and medians.

15.3 中 — middle on the page

Say middle. Point to: 中's last stroke

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

中 — zhōng — middle; centre

Read it: the character without pinyin, then hold its first tone level

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 中 — check that the box closes before the centre line

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.4 Hear zhōngxué — middle school

Say middle, then study.

What to know first

zhōngxué — middle school

Hold zhōng level, then let xué rise. Hear the whole school word before seeing its two characters.

Zhōngxué is built from Middle Chinese trjuwng, "middle", and haewk, "learning".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.5 中学 — middle school on the page

Read 中, then 学.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 中学 — zhōngxué — middle school

Read the pair without pinyin: level, then rising.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, trjuwng and haewk

(Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); Chinese built the school name from them.

Your turn

Look at 中学, cover it, and write it once from memory.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.6 Retrieval 1 — middle and middle school

Say middle without looking.

Your turn

Hear middle and middle school in mixed order. Say each. Read it: each Mandarin form

Write it: each one, once

Repair only the missed item.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.7 Hear zhōngxuésheng — middle-school student

Say middle school, then student.

What to know first

zhōngxuésheng — middle-school student

Say three beats: level zhōng, rising xué, light sheng. The shared xué is spoken only once.

Zhōngxuésheng is built from Middle Chinese trjuwng, haewk and srjaeng: middle, learning, life.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.8 中学生 — middle-school student on the page

Read it: 中学, then point to 生

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 中学生 — zhōngxuésheng — middle-school student

Read it: all three characters once without pinyin
All three pieces are inherited from Middle Chinese, trjuwng, haewk and srjaeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), and Chinese joined them as middle school plus student.

Your turn

Hear zhōngxuésheng. Write it: 中学生 without looking — check one character at a time

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.9 Hear tóngxué — classmate

Say study in Mandarin.

What to know first

tóngxué — classmate; schoolmate

Let both syllables rise: tóng-xué. Keep working only with sound and meaning. The first character comes next.

Tóngxué is built from Middle Chinese duwng, "same, together", and haewk, "to learn".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.10 同 — frame, line, box

Say classmate, then air-write 口.

Script — the shape

How 同 is written, stroke by stroke

Draw the outer left side. Lift for the joined outer top and right side, ending with its small hook. Add the inner horizontal. Finish the familiar 口 inside: left, joined top-right, closing bottom. Six strokes; five lifts.

Your turn

Trace 同 once. Copy it once while saying frame, line, box.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 同, pinned stroke paths and medians.

15.11 同学 — classmate on the page

Read it: 同, then 学

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

同学 — tóngxué — classmate; schoolmate

Read it: the pair without pinyin
Both syllables rise.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: duwng, "same, together", and haewk, "to learn" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). A classmate is someone who learns with you.

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 同学 — keep the inner 口 inside 同's open-bottom outer frame

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.12 Retrieval 2 — school and people

Write it: 中 and 同 from memory

Your turn

Hear middle school, middle-school student, and classmate in mixed order. Say each. Read it: each Mandarin form
Write it: each one
Repair one word at a time.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.13 Hear shàngxué — go to school

Say up / on, then study.

What to know first

shàngxué — go to school; attend school

Drop firmly on shàng, then rise on xué. No new character is hiding in the word.

Shàngxué is built from Middle Chinese dzyangX, "to go up", and haewk, "learning".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.14 上学 — go to school on the page

Read 上, then 学.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 上学 — shàngxué — go to school; attend school

Read the pair without pinyin: falling, then rising.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: dzyangX, "to go up", and haewk, "learning" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Look at 上学, cover it, and write it once from memory.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.15 Retrieval 3 — place, person, classmate, action

Write it: 中 and 同

Read it: 学

Your turn

Hear four meanings in mixed order: middle school, middle-school student, classmate, go to school. Say each. Read it: each Mandarin form

Write it: each one
Sort them as place, person, relationship, or action.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.16 Retrieval 4 — the full school ladder

Write it: 小, 中, and 大 from memory

Your turn

Write it: two three-item rows without a model — primary / middle / university; then primary-school / middle-school / university students
Read it: both rows aloud
Write it: 同学 and 上学 onto the rows, from their English meanings

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

15.17 Payoff — four school compounds in four skills

Write it: 中, 同, 上, 学, and 生 without a model

Your turn

1. Listening: hear the four words in mixed order and choose each meaning.
2. Speaking: produce all four from their English meanings, with tones audible.
3. Read it: all four character cards without pinyin
4. Writing: hear all four. Write it: all four without a model

Pass each skill separately. Repair and retry only the failed skill.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 task outline and vocabulary.

Chapter 16

Character or language?

Modes: voice (8) eyes (1) pen (6) Hands-free start: the first of 15 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can understand, say, read and write 字, 汉字 and 汉语 after gaining 汉 and 语 through source-verified observation, tracing, guided copying and delayed recall.
>
> Three identity words are retrieved across two expanding reviews, then checked independently in listening, speaking, unassisted reading and no-model writing.

16.1 Hear zì — a written character

Say middle school in Mandarin.

What to know first

zì — a written Chinese character

You heard a light zi at the end of míngzi. Standing alone, this word has a sharp falling tone: zì. Stay with sound and meaning for this tiny step.

Zì is inherited from Middle Chinese dziH; an older sense of the word was "to bear and nurse children".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

16.2 字 — the familiar shape stands alone

Say written character in Mandarin.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 字 — zì — a written Chinese character

Hide the pinyin. Read 字 from its familiar roof-over-child shape, then say its falling tone. You are attaching a standalone word to writing you already know.
字 is inherited from Middle Chinese dziH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The Guangyun quotes the Shuowen dictionary for an older sense, "to bear and nurse children"; "written character" came later.

Your turn

Look at 字 for three seconds. Cover it, wait five seconds, then write it once. Check only two things: roof before child, and six strokes.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

16.3 Hear hànzì — Chinese character

Say zì and its meaning.

What to know first

hànzì — Chinese character; Han character

The second half is your known zì, written character. The first half, hàn, labels it as Han Chinese. Hear two clean falling tones: hàn-zì. The new first character stays hidden until the next lesson.

Hànzì is built from Middle Chinese xanH, first a river's name and then the Han dynasty's, and dziH, "written character".

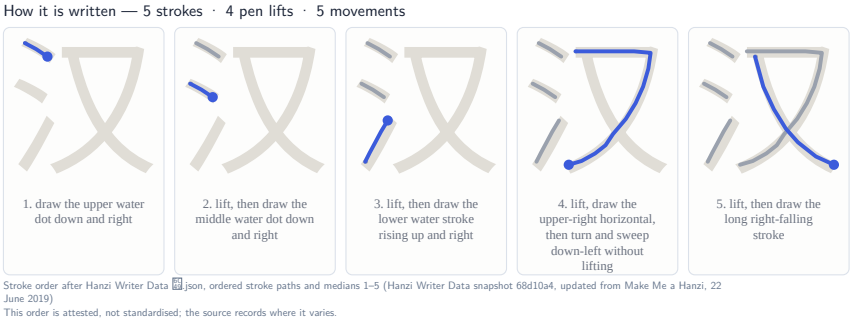
Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

16.4 汉 — watch five strokes

Say Chinese character, then point to the new first half of 汉字.

Script — the shape



How 汉 is written, stroke by stroke

In 汉, write 氵 first. On the right, stroke four crosses right and turns down-left without lifting. Stroke five falls down-right. Five strokes; four lifts. Watch the crossing open into two different falling directions.

Your turn

Trace 汉 once, slowly. Say dot, dot, rise; turn left; fall right.

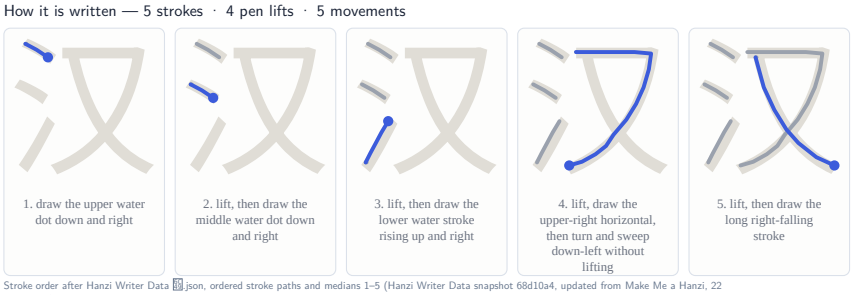
Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 汉, pinned stroke paths and medians.

16.5 汉 — copy with a five-part cue

Air-write 氵: dot, dot, rise.

Your turn



How 汉 is written, stroke by stroke

Copy 汉 twice while the model remains visible. First say the five-part cue. On the second copy, pause after 氵 and check that the right side still has only two strokes.

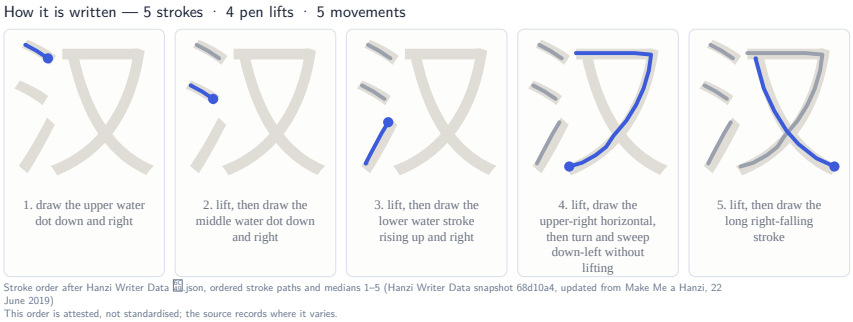
Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 汉, pinned stroke paths and medians.

16.6 汉 — hold the route briefly

Look at 汉 for five seconds. Cover it.

Your turn



How 汉 is written, stroke by stroke

Study 汉 for five seconds. Cover it. Say the five-part cue, wait five more seconds, then write once. Reveal the model and repair only the first wrong stroke; do not copy the whole character again unless needed.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 汉, pinned stroke paths and medians.

16.7 汉字 — two known routes, one word

Say Chinese character in Mandarin.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 汉字 — hànzì — Chinese character

Read it: the two characters first without pinyin — Han Chinese + written character
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese. xanH was the name of a river (Guangyun); the Han dynasty took its name from that region, and Han came to mean Chinese. dziH is "written character".

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 汉字 — leave a small, even gap; do not merge the two squares

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

16.8 Hear hànyǔ — the Chinese language

Say Chinese character in Mandarin.

What to know first

hànyǔ — the Chinese language; Mandarin

Keep the known falling hàn. Then let yǔ dip in third tone. The new written half waits; today the contrast is heard: hànzì is a character, hànyǔ is the language.

Hànyǔ is built from Middle Chinese xanH, the Han river and dynasty, and ngjoX, "words, speech".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

16.9 Retrieval 1 — 字 and 汉字

Say written character. Write it: the same word, without a model

Your turn

Hear written character and Chinese character in mixed order. Say each answer. Read it: each Mandarin form without pinyin

Write it: each one without a model

Repair only the missed item.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

16.10 语 — speech, five, box

Air-write , then say hànyǔ.

Script — the shape

How 语 is written, stroke by stroke

Write 讠 first. On the right, build 五 from top to bottom, then close 口 at the base. Nine strokes; eight lifts. Keep the speech side narrow so the right side has room.

Your turn

Trace 语 once. Say speech, five, box as your hand crosses the three parts.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 语, pinned stroke paths and medians.

16.11 语 — copy, then fade

> Say the Chinese language, then point across 语 and say speech, five, box.

Your turn

How 语 is written, stroke by stroke

Copy 语 once beside the model. Cover it halfway. Copy again from the visible half, keeping 讠 narrow and the final 口 closed.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 语, pinned stroke paths and medians.

16.12 语 — wait, then write

Say the Chinese language.

Your turn

How 语 is written, stroke by stroke

Look at 语 for five seconds, then cover it.

Tap once for every lift while saying speech, five, box. Now write 语 without uncovering the model. Compare only after you finish.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 语, pinned stroke paths and medians.

16.13 汉语 — the language in writing

Say the Chinese language in Mandarin.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

Read it: 汉语 first, before the explanation

汉语

It joins Han Chinese + language: hànyǔ, the Chinese language. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: xanH, the river that gave the Han dynasty its name, and ngjoX, “words, speech” (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription).

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 汉语 — keep two separate squares
Read it: the whole word aloud

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

16.14 Retrieval 2 — character or language?

Say the Chinese language. Write it: the Chinese language, without a model

Your turn

Hear written character, Chinese character, and Chinese language in a mixed order. Say each answer. Read it: each answer
Write it: each answer — for the two 汉 compounds, listen for the ending before choosing 字 or 语

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

16.15 Checkpoint — 字, 汉字, 汉语

Write it: 汉 and 语 without a model

Your turn

1. Listening: hear the three words in mixed order and choose each meaning.
2. Speaking: produce all three from their English meanings, with tones audible.
3. Read it: 字, 汉语, 汉字 cold, then give each meaning
4. Writing: hear Chinese character and Chinese language. Write it: both without a model

Pass each skill separately. Check: the 字 or 语 ending only after both written words are complete

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

Chapter 17

Language or country?

Modes: voice (9) eyes (1) pen (7) Hands-free start: the first of 17 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can understand, say, read and write 中文 and 中国, keep all five identity words distinct, and score listening, speaking, reading and writing separately.
>
> Two new identity words and the three earlier forms return at expanding intervals before separate listening, speaking, cold reading and no-model writing scores.

17.1 Hear zhōngwén — Chinese

> From the last chapter, say 汉语, 汉字, 字 for Chinese language, Chinese character, written character. Then say the sound of 中: zhōng.

What to know first

> zhōngwén — Chinese; the Chinese language

Keep the level first tone in zhōng. Let wén rise in second tone. The new second character stays hidden for now; this step is only sound and meaning.

Zhōngwén is built from Middle Chinese trjuwng, "middle", and mjun, "writing".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

17.2 文 — watch four open strokes

Say go to school as shàngxué and write 谢 once from memory. Then say Chinese language as zhōngwén.

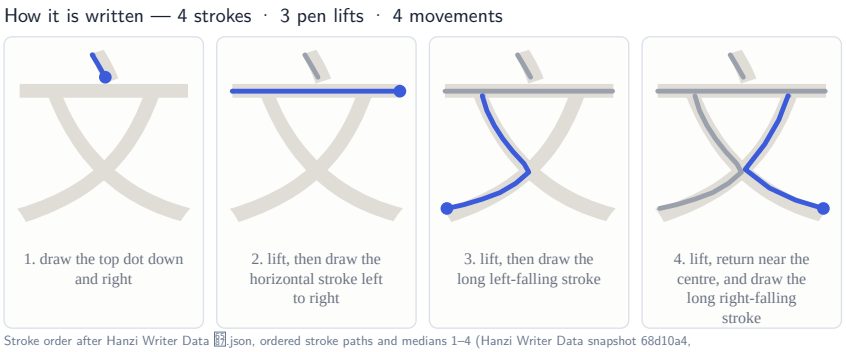
Script — the shape



How 文 is written, stroke by stroke

Write 文 in four separate strokes: top dot, horizontal bar, long fall left, long fall right. The last two strokes begin near the centre and open in opposite directions. Four strokes; three lifts.

Your turn

Trace 文 once. Say dot, bar, left, right as your hand moves.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 文, pinned stroke paths and medians.

17.3 文 — copy with the route visible

Read 上学, say thank you in Mandarin, then air-write dot, bar, left, right.

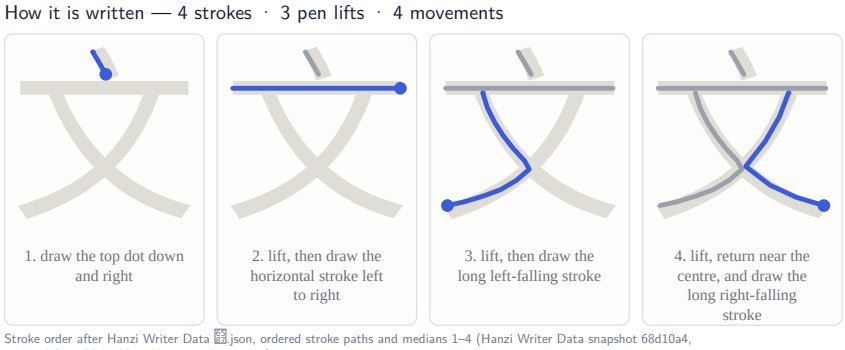
Your turn



How 文 is written, stroke by stroke

Copy 文 twice beside the model. On the second copy, pause after the bar and check that the two long falling strokes still open from the centre.

Your turn — Spaced Return

From the cues thank you and go to school, say 谢谢 and write 上学 once.

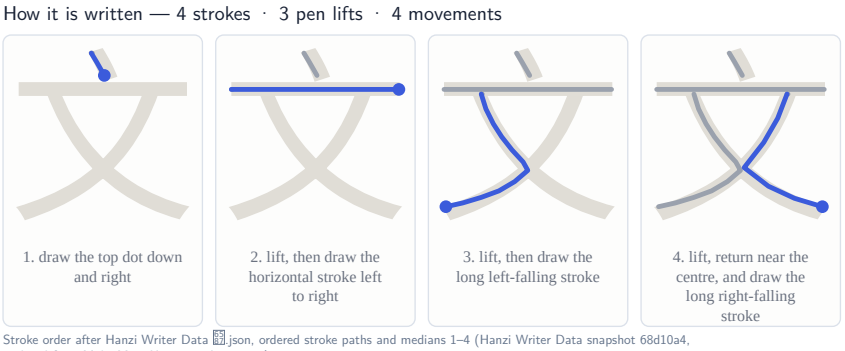
Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 文, pinned stroke paths and medians.

17.4 文 — wait, then open the two falls

Answer 谢谢 with 不谢.

Your turn



How 文 is written, stroke by stroke

Look at 文 for five seconds and cover it.

Say dot, bar, left, right, then write 文 once without the model. Reveal it only after the fourth stroke. Repair only the first mismatch.

Your turn — Spaced Return

Hear you are welcome and write 不谢 without a model.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 文, pinned stroke paths and medians.

17.5 中文 — two known squares

Run the two-line 谢谢 / 不谢 exchange. Then take one Chapter 15 school word by its English meaning and hear its Mandarin word. Write it: that word

Read it: that word aloud, then give its meaning

Finally say Chinese language as zhōngwén.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

Read it: 中文 first, before the explanation

中文

It joins China or middle + writing or language: zhōngwén, Chinese. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: trjuwng, "middle", and mjun, "writing" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 中文 — keep the two squares separate and let 文 open at the base

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

17.6 Longer return — character or language?

Read it: 中文

Write it: 请, pointing to its 青 sound component, then written character without a model

Your turn

Hear Chinese character and Chinese language in mixed order. Say each. Read it: each Mandarin form without pinyin

Write it: each one

Listen for the ending before choosing 字 or 语.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

17.7 Hear zhōngguó — China

Say please, then say Chinese language as zhōngwén.

What to know first

zhōngguó — China

The first syllable stays zhōng. Change the rising ending: wén names writing or language; guó names a country. The new written ending waits one lesson.

Zhōngguó is built from Middle Chinese trjuwng, “middle”, and kwok, “state”.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

17.8 国 — frame, inside, close

Say China. Put 请 before a familiar request, then air-write the opening two strokes of a box without closing it.

Script — the shape

How 国 is written, stroke by stroke

Write 国 in eight strokes. Open the outer frame with its left side, then top-and-right. Finish every stroke of 玉 inside. Only then add the bottom bar that closes the frame. Eight strokes; seven lifts.

Your turn

Trace 国 once. Say frame, three bars, upright, dot, close. Keep the bottom open until the inner dot is finished.

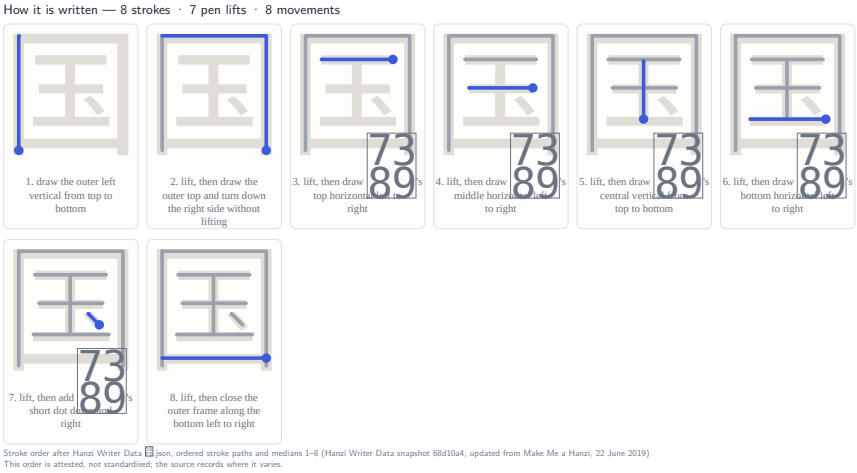
Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 国, pinned stroke paths and medians.

17.9 国 — copy with the frame open

Say the meaning of 人 and write 汉 once from memory. Then say frame, inside, close.

Your turn



How 国 is written, stroke by stroke

Copy 国 twice beside the model. On the second copy, pause after the inner dot. Check that the outer bottom is still open; then close it with stroke eight.

Your turn — Spaced Return

From the cues person and Han, say 人 and write 汉 once without a model.

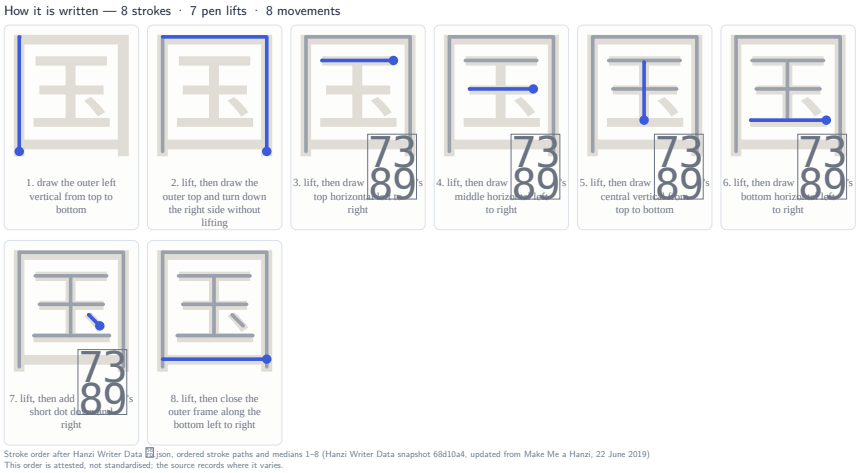
Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 国, pinned stroke paths and medians.

17.10 国 — wait before closing

Say what 女 means.

Your turn



How 国 is written, stroke by stroke

Look at 国 for five seconds and cover it.

Say frame, inside, close, then write 国 once without the model. Do not uncover it until the bottom bar is complete.

Your turn — Spaced Return

Hear woman and write 女 without a model.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 国, pinned stroke paths and medians.

17.11 中国 — China in two squares

Say son as érzi, then say China as zhōngguó.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

Read it: 中国 first, before the explanation

中国

The shared 中 is followed by 国, country: zhōngguó, China. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, trjuwng and kwok (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The pair is very old and first meant the central states, the realm at the middle; it became the country's name much later.

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 中国 — in 国, finish the inner 玉 before closing the bottom

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

17.12 Retrieval 1 — language or country?

Write it: 儿 once from memory

Then say Chinese language. Write it: the same word, without a model

Your turn

Hear Chinese language and China in mixed order. Say each answer. Read it: each Mandarin form without pinyin

Write it: each one — keep 中 and retrieve the correct ending

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

17.13 Longer return — the older three

Say the Chinese language with the 汉 beginning.

Your turn

Write it: without looking back, written character, Chinese character, and Chinese language

Read it: each answer aloud only after all three are complete

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

17.14 Listening score — five meanings

Say daughter, then say Chinese language with 中 and China.

Your turn

Keep the page covered. Hear the five Mandarin words in mixed order and give the English meaning of each. Then reverse the direction and say all five Mandarin forms. Score listening and speaking separately out of five.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

17.15 Reading score — no pinyin

Read it: 中国 and 中文 without saying their pinyin first

Your turn

Read it: five unpointed cards in a shuffled order — 汉语, 字, 中国, 汉字, 中文 — each cold, then give its meaning

Score one point per form; pronunciation help comes only after the reading score is recorded.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

17.16 Writing score — from sound, no model

Say what 家 means. Write 家, 汉, 语, 文, 国 without a model. Check only after all five are complete.

Your turn

First say what 家 means, then recover 汉, 语, 文, 国 once from their spoken syllables. Next hear Chinese character, Chinese language with 汉, Chinese language with 中, and China in mixed order. Write all four without a model. Score the four whole words first; then repair only a missed character.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

17.17 Payoff — five identity words

Write 家, 文, and 国 without a model, then name each aloud.

Your turn

1. Listening, /5: hear all five words in mixed order and choose each meaning.
2. Speaking, /5: produce all five from meaning cards, with tones audible.
3. Reading, /5: read 中国, 汉语, 字, 中文, 汉字 cold, without pinyin.
4. Writing, /5: hear all five meanings and write each form without a model.

Pass each skill separately. A miss in one column does not cancel the other three. For repair, revisit only the missed form and retry that skill.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

Chapter 18

Looking and reading

Modes: voice (12) eyes (5) pen (6) Hands-free start: the first of 23 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can understand, say, read and write 看, 看见, 好看, 书 and 看书, and score listening, speaking, reading and writing separately.
>
> Two carefully staged characters support five nearby meanings, expanding retrieval and separate listening, speaking, cold-reading and no-model writing scores.

18.1 Hear kàn — look or watch

> Say Chinese language and China in Mandarin. Keep those answers separate. Cover: the cards, and put them away.

What to know first

> kàn — “look at”; “watch”

Start high and let the tone fall cleanly. The written form stays hidden in this first step so sound and meaning can settle before handwriting begins.

Kàn is inherited from Middle Chinese khanH, “to look”, also read khan.

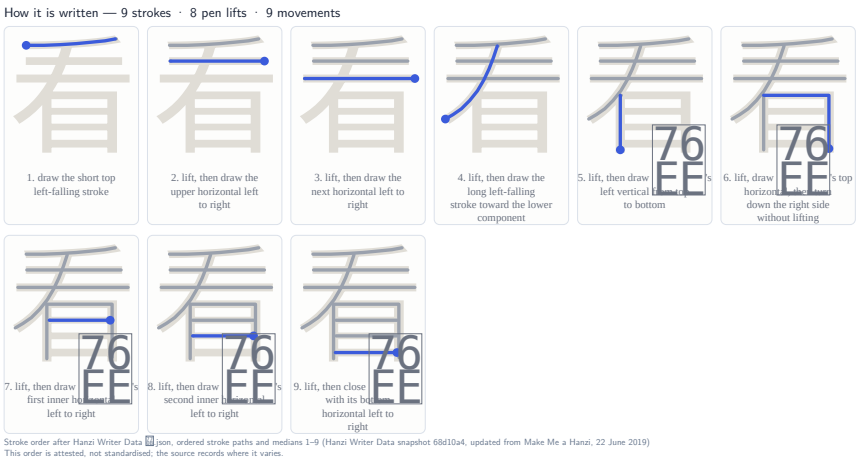
Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.2 看 — a hand above an eye

Say look or watch as kàn. Then write the familiar 中 once and put it away before meeting the new shape.

Script — the shape



How 看 is written, stroke by stroke

Write 看 in nine strokes. Make the short top stroke first, then the two crossing strokes and the long left fall above. Finish with 目 below: left, top-and-right, two inner bars, bottom. Nine strokes; eight lifts.

Your turn

Trace 看 once. Say hand above, eye below while keeping the lower box wide enough for its two inner bars.

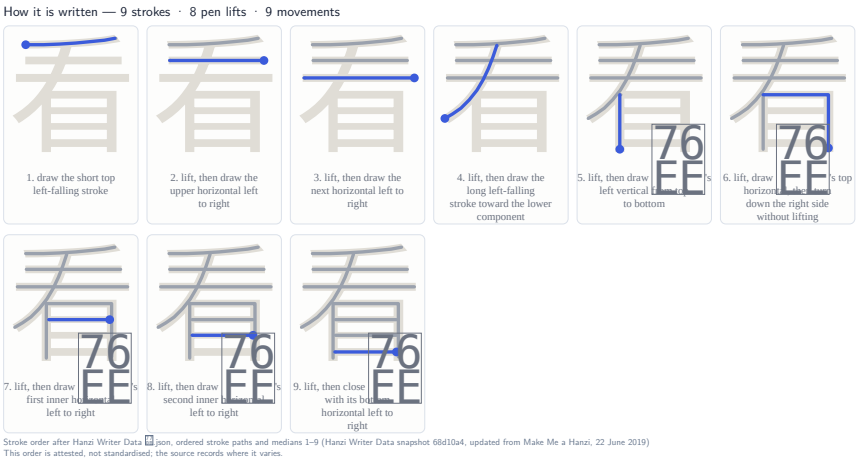
Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 看, pinned stroke paths and medians.

18.3 看 — copy hand above, eye below

Read 中文 and give its meaning. Then air-write hand above, eye below.

Your turn



How 看 is written, stroke by stroke

Copy 看 twice beside the model. On the second copy, pause before 目 and check that the long falling stroke points toward the eye rather than through it.

Your turn — Spaced Return

Hear Chinese language with 中 and write 中文 once without pinyin.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 看, pinned stroke paths and medians.

18.4 看 — wait, then recover the eye

Write 中国 from the meaning China.

Your turn

How 看 is written, stroke by stroke

Look at 看 for five seconds and cover it.

Say hand above, eye below, then write 看 once without the model. Reveal it only after all nine strokes. Repair only the first mismatch.

Your turn — Spaced Return

Hear China once more and write 中国 without a model.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 看, pinned stroke paths and medians.

18.5 看 — the familiar sound meets the shape

Say look at or watch in Mandarin.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 看 — kàn — look at; watch

Hide the pinyin. Read 看 from the hand-over-eye shape, say the falling tone, then give the meaning. One form now connects listening, speaking, reading, and writing.

看 is inherited from Middle Chinese, where the Guangyun lists it as khan and khanH, "to look" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); Mandarin kàn continues the second. The hand over the eye is the history of the character.

Your turn

Hear kàn. Wait three seconds, then write 看 once without a model.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.6 Hear kànjiàn — see

Say look or watch as kàn, then say goodbye as zàijiàn.

What to know first

kànjiàn — see; catch sight of Both syllables fall. The familiar jiàn now follows kàn: you look and successfully perceive. Keep the characters hidden for this sound-first step.

Kànjiàn is built from Middle Chinese khanH, "to look", and kenH, "to see".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.7 看见 — looking reaches seeing

Say see as kànjiàn. Write it: 看

Point to: 见 in 再见

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

看见 — kànjiàn — see; catch sight of

Read it: the two known shapes from left to right

看 supplies looking; 见 marks the perceived result.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: khanH, "look", and kenH, "see" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 看见 — leave a clear boundary between the nine-stroke 看 and the four-stroke 见

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.8 Hear hǎokàn — good-looking

Say good, look, and see as three separate Mandarin answers.

What to know first

hǎokàn — good-looking; nice to look at

Let hǎo dip, then let kàn fall. This is a description, not an instruction to look. The characters wait until the next tiny step.

Hǎokàn is built from Middle Chinese xawX, "good", and khanH, "to look".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.9 好看 — good to look at

Say good-looking as hǎokàn. Write 好 and 看 separately.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 好看 — hǎokàn — good-looking; nice to look at

No new character is hiding here. Read 好, then 看, and let the literal pieces carry you to the whole meaning.

Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: xawX, "good", and khanH, "look" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Copy 好看 once. Keep both characters full-sized instead of squeezing 看.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.10 Retrieval 1 — look, see, or good-looking?

Say look, see, and good-looking in that order.

Your turn

Hear the three meanings in mixed order. Listen for what comes beside kàn before deciding the whole meaning, then say each Mandarin answer. Read it: each Mandarin form without pinyin

Write it: each one

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.11 Hear shū — book

Say look, see, and good-looking in Mandarin.

What to know first

shū — book

Hold one level first tone. Do not add kàn yet; this step is only the object, book. Its four-stroke written form waits until the next lesson.

Shū is inherited from Middle Chinese syo, "writing".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.12 书 — two folds, upright, dot

Say book as shū, then write 看 once from memory.

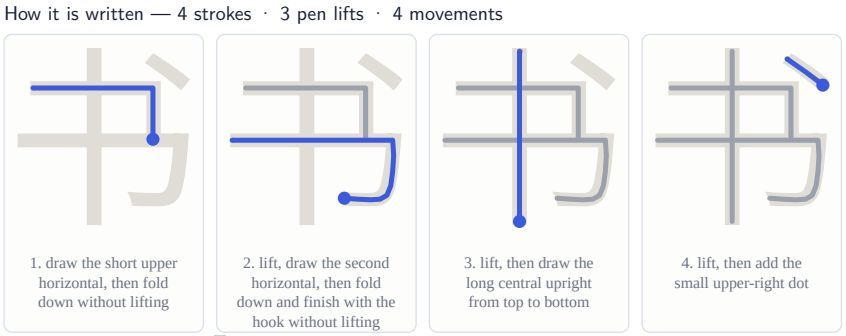
Script — the shape



How 书 is written, stroke by stroke

Write 书 in four strokes: a short horizontal that folds down, a second horizontal that folds and hooks, the long central upright, then the small dot at the upper right. Four strokes; three lifts.

Your turn

Trace 书 once. Say fold, hooked fold, upright, dot. Let the upright pass through the middle instead of leaning toward the dot.

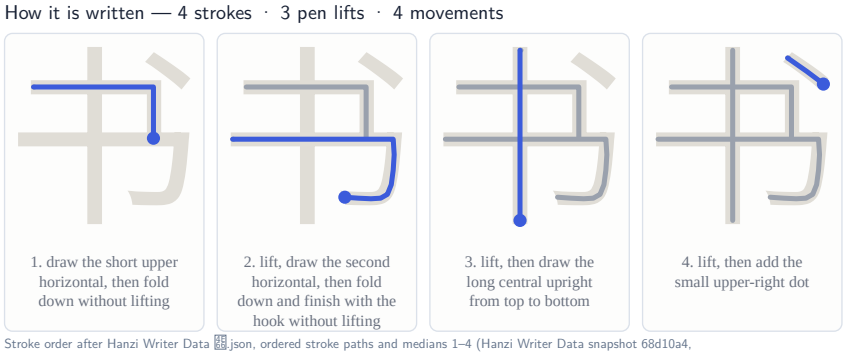
Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 书, pinned stroke paths and medians.

18.13 书 — copy the compact route

Read 看见 and give its meaning. Then air-write fold, hooked fold, upright, dot.

Your turn



How 书 is written, stroke by stroke

Copy 书 twice beside the model. On the second copy, pause before the upright and check that both folds leave a clear central route.

Your turn — Spaced Return

Hear see and write 看见 once without a model.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 书, pinned stroke paths and medians.

18.14 书 — wait, then place the dot

Write 好看 from the meaning good-looking.

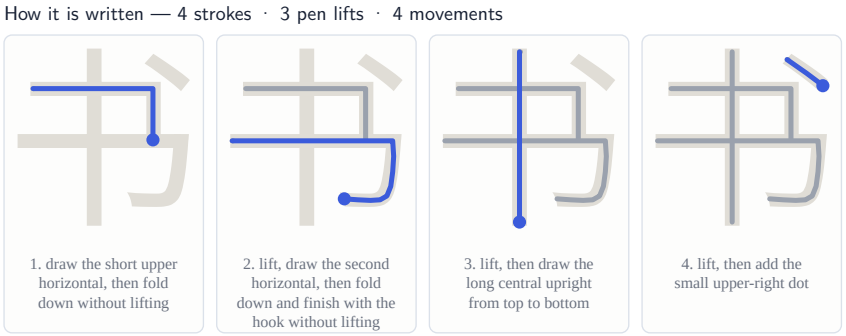
Your turn



How 书 is written, stroke by stroke

Look at 书 for five seconds and cover it.

Say fold, hooked fold, upright, dot, then write 书 once without the model. Check only after the dot is in place.

Your turn — Spaced Return

Hear good-looking and write 好看 without a model.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 书, pinned stroke paths and medians.

18.15 书 — the sound meets the shape

Say book in Mandarin.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 书 — shū — book

Cover: the pinyin
Read it: 书, hold the level first tone, then give its meaning 书 is inherited from Middle Chinese syo, "writing" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); "book" grew from it.

Your turn

Hear shū. Wait three seconds. Write it: 书 once, without a model

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.16 Hear kànshū — read a book

Say look or watch, then say book.

What to know first

kànshū — read a book; read books

Let kàn fall and keep shū level. Mandarin says look-at + book for the activity read. Keep the characters hidden for one more tiny step.

Kànshū is built from Middle Chinese khanH, "to look", and syo, "writing".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.17 看书 — look at a book, read

Say read a book as kànshū. Write 看 and 书 separately.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 看书 — kànshū — read a book; read books

Read the action first and its object second. No new character is hiding here: 看 + 书 gives the whole reading activity.
Both are inherited from Middle Chinese: khanH, "look", and syo, "writing, book" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Copy 看书 once. Keep the long upright in 书 centred after the denser 看.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.18 Retrieval 2 — the earlier three return

Say read a book in Mandarin, then set that word aside.

Your turn

Write it: without looking back, look, see, and good-looking from mixed meaning cards

Read it: each answer aloud only after all three are complete

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.19 Retrieval 1 — book or read a book?

Say book, then say read a book.

Your turn

Hear the two meanings in mixed order. Listen for kàn before deciding noun or activity, then say each answer. Read it: each Mandarin form without pinyin

Write it: each one

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.20 Listening score — five nearby meanings

Say look and book in Mandarin.

Your turn

Keep the page covered. Hear all five Mandarin forms in mixed order and give each meaning. Then reverse the direction and say all five Mandarin forms. Score listening and speaking separately out of five.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.21 Reading score — no pinyin

Read it: 看 and 书 without saying their pinyin first

Your turn

Read it: five unpointed cards in a shuffled order — 好看, 书, 看见, 看书, 看 — each cold, then give its meaning

Score one point per form before any pinyin help.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.22 Writing score — sound to Hanzi, no model

Write it: 看 and 书 from their spoken syllables — check only after both are complete

Your turn

Hear the five meanings in mixed order. Write it: all five forms without a model

Score each whole form first. Then repair only the first missed character or ordering choice.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

18.23 Payoff — looking and reading

Write 看 and 书 without a model, then name each aloud.

Your turn

1. Listening, /5: hear all five forms in mixed order and choose each meaning.
2. Speaking, /5: produce all five from meaning cards, with tones audible.
3. Reading, /5: read 看书, 好看, 书, 看见, 看 cold, without pinyin.
4. Writing, /5: hear all five meanings and write each form without a model.

Pass each skill separately. Repair only a missed form in the missed skill, then retry that column without cancelling the other three scores.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

Chapter 19

Asking

Modes: voice (12) eyes (2) pen (3) Hands-free start: the first of 17 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can understand, say, read and write 吗, 你好吗, 是吗 and 好不好, turn any statement I already own into a yes-or-no question by either of Mandarin's two patterns, and score listening, speaking, reading and writing separately.
>
> Before this chapter the track could greet, name, count to five and say what it read, and could not ask a yes-or-no question about any of it. One character closes that and does more than its own weight: 吗 goes on the end of a finished sentence and changes nothing else, so every statement already taught becomes a question. The second pattern costs no character at all – it is 不*, held since the negation lesson, placed between two copies of a word.*

19.1 Hear ma — the syllable that asks

> Say look, book, and read a book in Mandarin. Name your four scores from the looking-and-reading payoff, and which of the four was lowest.

What to know first

> ma — the question particle

Say it light, short and flat. It carries no tone, which makes it the first syllable in this book with none — every earlier one has been first, second, third or fourth. Give it none at all, and no stress either.

It also carries no meaning on its own. There is nothing to translate. What it does is turn the sentence in front of it into a question, and it does that without moving a single other word.

Hear kàn shū and then kàn shū ma. The words are identical and in the same order; only the light syllable at the end is new, and only the second one is asking.

Ma is usually explained as coming from Middle Chinese mju, "not have", said at the end of a question; the account is not settled.

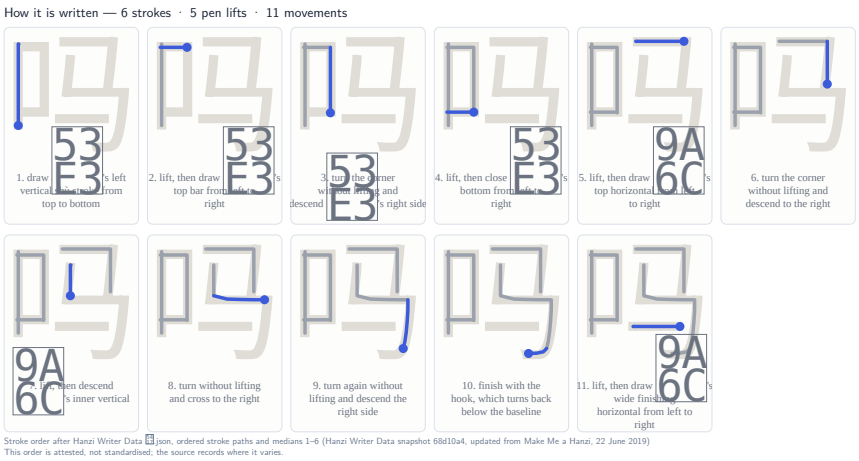
Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.2 吗 — the mouth, then the horse

Say the neutral question syllable. Then write 口 in three strokes, and write 书 once from memory.

Script — the shape



How 吗 is written, stroke by stroke

Write 吗 in six strokes, left part first and complete:

- 口 on the left, small and lifted toward the top: the left vertical, then the horizontal that turns down the right side without lifting, then the closing bottom bar. Three strokes, as you already write it.

- 马 on the right, which supplies only the sound: a horizontal that turns down, then a long stroke that turns twice and hooks, then one wide horizontal across the whole right side. Three strokes.

Six strokes, five lifts. The 口 shrinks to about a third of the square and sits high; the wide final horizontal is the widest thing in the character and runs almost to the right edge.

The left half is doing real work even though it is not saying anything: 口 means mouth, and it marks 吗 as one of a family of characters that exist only to be spoken.

Your turn

Trace 吗 once. Say mouth, mouth, mouth — turn, turn-and-hook, long bar. Finish the whole 口 before starting the right half, and keep it small.

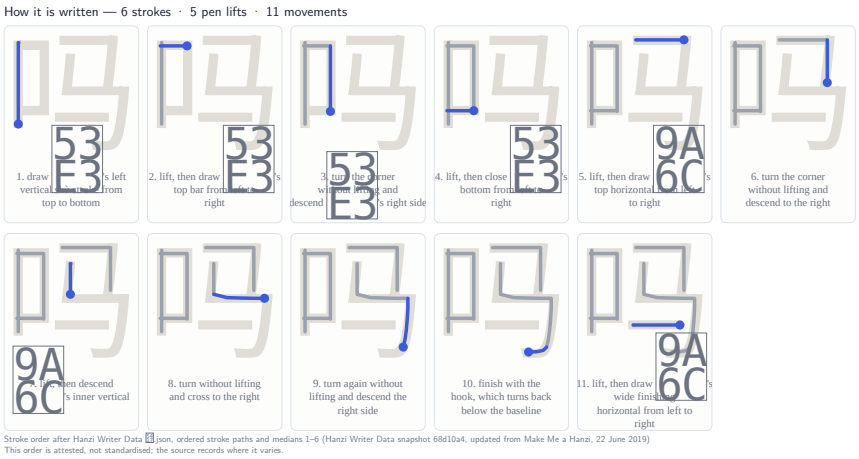
Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 吗, pinned stroke paths and medians.

19.3 吗 — copy it, and keep the mouth small

Read 看书 and give its meaning. Then air-write mouth, mouth, mouth — turn, turn-and-hook, long bar. Say see and primary school, and write 看见.

Your turn



How 吗 is written, stroke by stroke

Copy 吗 twice beside the model. On the second copy, stop after the third stroke and check two things before going on: the 口 fills about a third of the width, and its bottom sits above the middle of the square.

Your turn — Spaced Return

Hear read a book and write 看书 once without a model.

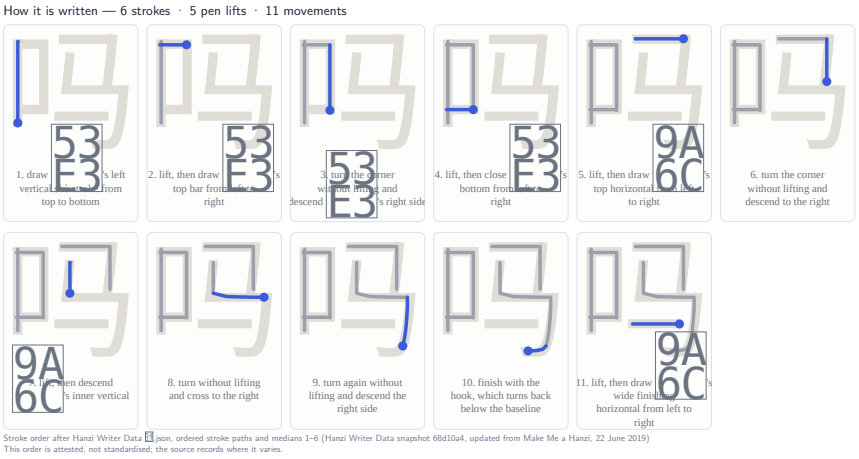
Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 吗, pinned stroke paths and medians.

19.4 吗 — wait, then write the bar

Say the neutral question syllable, then write 书 once from memory.

Your turn



How 吗 is written, stroke by stroke

Look at 吗 for five seconds. Cover it, wait five more, then write it once. Uncover and check the order: all three strokes of 口 before anything on the right.

Most characters give you a meaning to hang the shape on. This one does not — it means nothing by itself — so the route is all you have, and that is why it gets its own delay.

Before you move on

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 吗, pinned stroke paths and medians.

19.5 吗 — the sound meets the shape

Say the neutral question syllable. Then say look and read a book. Say good-looking and primary-school pupil. Write it: 小

Recall your four looking-and-reading scores.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 吗 — ma — the question particle

Cover: the pinyin

Read it: 吗, give it no tone at all, then say what it does rather than what it means 吗 is usually explained as coming from Middle Chinese mju, "not have" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), tagged onto the end of a question, and later written with this character for its sound. The account is common but not settled.

Grammar lens — one character, every statement

Put 吗 at the end of a statement and the statement becomes a yes-or-no question. Nothing else changes:

- 你看书 — nǐ kàn shū — you read books.
- 你看书吗 — nǐ kàn shū ma — do you read books?

Same words. Same order. One character added at the end.
That is worth stopping on, because it is not how English works: English moves words about and borrows a helper verb — you read becomes do you read — and Mandarin does neither. Every statement you can already make is now also a question you can ask, and there are no new words to learn to ask any of them.
Chinese closes both of those lines with a mark of its own — a small hollow circle for the statement and a question mark for the question. Neither mark is taught yet, so neither is printed here.

Your turn

Hear ma. Wait three seconds. Write it: 吗 once, without a model
Then take any sentence you own and put 吗 on the end of it.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.6 Hear nǐ hǎo ma — how are you

Say hello. Then say the neutral syllable that turns a statement into a question.

What to know first

nǐ hǎo ma — how are you?

The very first thing this book taught you, with the very newest thing on the end of it. No new word arrives here at all.

Two third tones in a row still slide the first one up, exactly as they do in nǐ hǎo on its own — the light ma on the end changes nothing about that.

Nǐ hǎo ma is the greeting with the question particle added; hǎo is inherited from Middle Chinese xawX, "good".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.7 你好吗 — the greeting, asked

Say how are you. Write it: 你 and 好, then 好看 too

Say what the 好 is doing in 好看.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 你好吗 — nǐ hǎo ma — how are you?

Read it: the three known shapes from left to right
They are 你, 好, and the new 吗 on the end. Every one of them is a character you have already written.
That is the whole of what 吗 buys you. The book has been able to write 你好 since its first page and has never once been able to ask anything. One character, six strokes, and the greeting turns into a question.
Chinese built it from 你好 and 吗: hǎo is inherited from Middle Chinese xawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), and 吗 is usually traced, with some doubt, to mju, "not have".

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 你好吗 — keep the three characters the same size 吗 is not written smaller for meaning nothing.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.8 Retrieval 1 — greeting, or question?

Say hello, then how are you, and name the difference between them. Then say book, and recall your four scores from the primary-school payoff.

Your turn

Hear the two meanings in mixed order. Say each Mandarin answer, read its unpointed card, then write it. Look at the last character before deciding whether you were greeted or asked.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.9 Hear shì ma — is that so?

Say to be, then say how are you.

What to know first

shì ma — is that so? really?

Two syllables: the verb to be, falling hard, then the light question syllable. Nothing else.

This is the move you make when somebody tells you something and you want to show you heard it and to invite them to go on. English spends a whole phrase on it — is that so, really, oh yes? — and Mandarin spends two syllables, one of which you learned yesterday.

Say it with the voice going down on shì and staying light on ma. Said flat it checks a fact; said with the fall exaggerated it registers surprise.

Shì ma is built from shì, from Middle Chinese dzyeX, and the question particle ma.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.10 是吗 — checking what you were told

Say is that so. Write it: 是, finishing 日 before the lower body, then 书 and 中 as well

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 是吗 — shì ma — is that so? really?

Two known shapes, in the order you hear them: the nine-stroke 是, then the six-stroke 吗.
It is the shortest sentence in the book and it is a complete turn in a conversation. Somebody says something; you say 是吗; they keep going. Nothing about it is a fixed phrase to memorise — it is the yes-or-no rule applied to a one-word sentence.
Chinese built it from 是, inherited from Middle Chinese dzyeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), and the question particle 吗, whose origin is not settled.

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 是吗 — leave a clear boundary between the two characters, and keep 是 the wider of the pair

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.11 Hear hǎo bu hǎo — the question with the answer inside it

Say good, say not, and say is that so.

What to know first

hǎo bu hǎo — is it good? all right?

Three syllables and no new word in any of them: good, not, good.

This is Mandarin's second way of asking a yes-or-no question, and it is completely unlike the first. Where ma adds a syllable that means nothing, this one says the word, then denies it, then says it again — and hands the listener both possible answers so they can pick one.

The bu in the middle goes light and toneless when it is caught between two copies of the same word. Say hǎo-bu-hǎo with the stress on the first and last and the middle syllable almost swallowed.

Both questions ask the same thing. ma is the neutral one; this one presses a little harder for a decision, which is why it is the one you hear at the end of a suggestion.

Hǎo bu hǎo is built from two words inherited from Middle Chinese: xawX, "good", and pjut, "not".

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.12 好不好 — the question that needed no new character

Say is it good. Write it: 好 and 不, keeping all four strokes of 不 separate

Say secondary school.

Grammar lens — say it, deny it, say it again

好不好 — hǎo bu hǎo — is it good? all right?

Three known shapes, and the pattern behind them works on anything:

- 是不是 — shì bu shì — is it, or isn't it?
- 看不看 — kàn bu kàn — will you look, or won't you?

Take any word that can be denied, put 不 in the middle, and repeat it. That is the whole rule, and it needs no new character because you have had 不 since the negation lesson.

Mandarin now gives you two ways to ask a yes-or-no question, and this book hands you both in this one chapter:

- 看书吗 — the light syllable on the end
- 看不看书 — the word, denied, and said again

They mean the same thing. Neither moves a word, and neither borrows a helper verb the way English does.
Both would be written with a question mark of Chinese's own at the end. That mark is not taught yet, so it is left off here.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 好不好 is a Chinese pattern, not a borrowing: both words are inherited from Middle Chinese, xawX, "good", and pjut, "not" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Write it: one copy of 好不好, then one more of your own — take a word you can write, put 不 in the middle, and write it again

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.13 Retrieval 2 — which question was that?

Say how are you, is that so, and is it good, in that order.
Then say read a book. Write it: 中学

Your turn

Hear the three meanings in mixed order. Say each Mandarin answer. Read it: each Mandarin form without pinyin Decide which of the two question patterns each one uses — the light syllable on the end, or the word denied in the middle.

Write it: each one

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.14 Listening score — catch the question

Say the light syllable that turns a statement into a question, and say where it goes. Read it: 看书 and 看见 aloud

Your turn

No cards and no writing. Hear each of the three, six times over in mixed order, and say the English meaning aloud before the next one starts.

Score listening on its own. A miss here is not a reading miss and not a writing miss, and it is repaired by hearing the item again rather than by looking at it.

The light ma is the thing most often missed, because it is short, toneless and last. If you lose one, that is almost certainly the one.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.15 Reading score — no pinyin on the card

Write it: 吗 once from memory, then 是

Then say secondary-school pupil.

Your turn

Read it: the three cards cold — no pinyin is printed on any of them — and for each one, say it aloud, then give the English

Score reading on its own. Reading and hearing fail differently here: by ear the light ma is easy to lose, and on the page it is the most visible thing in the sentence because it is a whole character. The one you miss reading is more likely to be 好不好, where nothing is added and the clue is a repetition.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.16 Payoff — the book can ask

> Say hello, to be, good, not, and the light question syllable.
> Write it: 中学生

Your turn

Four passes over the same four items, scored separately:

- Listening. Hear each of the four and give its English.
- Speaking. Be given the English and say the Mandarin, tones and all.
- Read it: four unpointed cards cold, then give their meanings
- Writing. Hear each one. Write it: each one with no model Record four numbers, not one. A reader who hears all four and writes none has a writing problem, and averaging the two hides it.

What you've built

Before this chapter the book had no way to ask a yes-or-no question at all. It could greet, name, count to five, say what it saw and say what it read, and it could not ask about any of it.
One character closed that, and it did more than its own weight: every statement this book has taught you is now also a question, because 吗 goes on the end of a finished sentence and changes nothing else. The second pattern, 好不好, needed no new character whatsoever — it is 不, which you have had for chapters, put between two copies of a word.

Before you move on

Source: Official HSK 3.0 syllabus, Level 1 vocabulary.

19.17 From cold, eight chapters on

> Close everything. The opening exchange of this book, both voices, from memory. If it came back without effort, that is the point of this page; if it did not, that is the point of this page.

You'll want to know: what a second pass is for

The first four exchanges were practised once, in the chapter that taught them, and not since. That is long enough ago to be a real test rather than a rehearsal:

greet	both voices, 你好
negate	answering that it is not so identify	answering that it is
part	再见

Retrieval after a gap is what makes something stay. Running them again the week you learned them proves only that you had not yet forgotten.

Script and tone, the two that were taught once

女 + 子 → 好

Build 好 from its two halves without looking, then say it in both tones — hǎo, good, and hào, to be fond of. Two words, one set of six strokes, and the only thing separating them is the tone.

Your turn — four skills, on old material

- Listen: to a greeting and an answer, and say which of the two answers came back
- Say it: the greeting exchange, both voices
- Read it: 你好 and 再见, aloud, with nothing beside them
- Write it: 好, from its two halves, with the page covered

Before you move on

Which two halves build 好? (女 and 子.) What separates hǎo from hào? (The tone alone.) Which exchange closes a meeting? (再见.) And why is this page eight chapters after the material rather than beside it? (Because retrieval after a gap is what makes it stay.)

Chapter 20

Six to Ten, and the Character That Was Already Here

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) ✓ pen (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 11 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say, hear, read and write the Mandarin numbers one to ten with their tones, and write the five characters this chapter adds.
>
> Five characters and twelve strokes finish a run the book abandoned at five seventeen chapters earlier – with 八 set against 人, and 十 finally taught on its own after thirteen chapters inside 早.

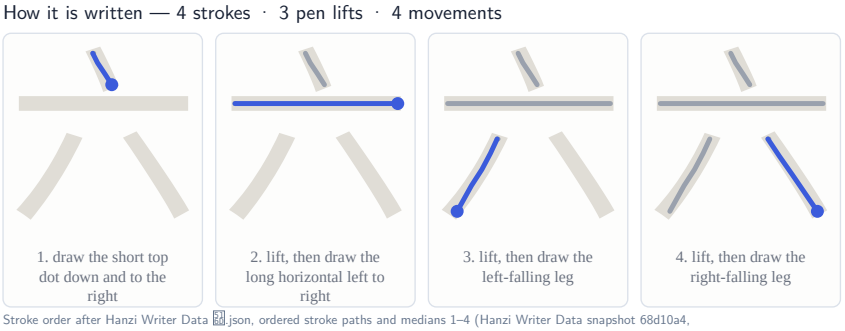
20.1 六 — four strokes again, for six this time

Write 五. How many strokes, and how many does it mean?

Script — a dot, a bar, two legs



How 六 is written, stroke by stroke

六

Four strokes. For six. 五 had four for five; 六 has four for six. Whatever was left of the counting trick after chapter 3 is now gone for good.

The four strokes, in order:

1. the short diǎn dot at the top centre, down and to the right
2. the long héng horizontal beneath it, left to right
3. the left leg, a piě falling to the lower left
4. the right leg, a nà falling to the lower right

Top before bottom, then left before right — the two rules that have ordered every character in this book.

Hold on to strokes 3 and 4. On their own, without the dot and the bar, they are the character for eight, and you will write them again in two lessons.

Your turn

- Write it: 六 — dot, bar, left leg, right leg
- Cover: write it again from memory

Before you move on

Sources: Hanzi Writer Data 六; Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

20.2 六 — six, and the run starts again

Write it: 六

Then count aloud to five.

The sounds and tones in this word

六 liù means six.
liù is fourth tone — the sharp fall, the same shape as sì, four. Say them together and only the mouth changes: sì, liù.
The vowel is worth a moment. Pinyin writes iu, and what you say is closer to ioū: there is a faint o in the middle that the spelling does not print.

What you've built — the run starts again

This book taught 一 二 三 四 五 in chapter 3 and then stopped. For seventeen chapters it could name a family, a school and a greeting and could not count to six — could not give an age, a price, a floor or a date. 六 is where that starts being paid back.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 六 liù is inherited from Middle Chinese ljuwk, "six", which lost its final k in Mandarin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). It is usually compared with Tibetan drug, a likely Sino-Tibetan cognate.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sì, liù — one fall, twice
- yī èr sān sì wǔ liù — the run, at speed

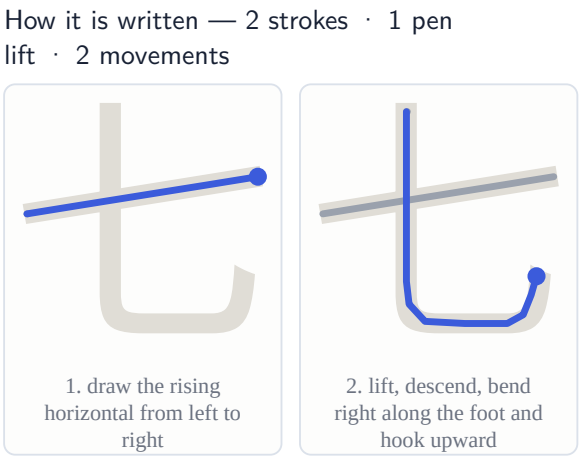
Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

20.3 七 — two strokes, for seven

Write 六 and say how many strokes it has.

Script — the second stroke does the work



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 45 65.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–2 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 七 is written, stroke by stroke

七

Two strokes. For seven. Six had four, seven has two — the stroke count is not merely useless now, it is running backwards.

The two strokes:

1. the héng horizontal, left to right, rising a little as it goes
2. the shùwāngōu: start high on the right, descend, bend along the foot to the right, and hook upward at the end

That second stroke is one continuous movement with two turns in it. Do not lift in the middle of it — a lift is what makes it two strokes instead of one, and seven would then be three.

Your turn

- Write it: 七 — the bar, then the turning stroke, unbroken
- Count: two strokes, not three

Before you move on

Sources: Hanzi Writer Data 七; Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

20.4 七 — seven

Write it: 七

Then say six.

The sounds and tones in this word

七 qī means seven.
qī is first tone, the high level one — the same shape as yī, one. Say them in a row and hold the pitch flat across both: yī, qī.
The q is the piece to work on, because English has no letter for it. Put the tongue where it goes for y in yes, then release the air the way you do for ch. It is not the k of queen and it is not an English ch; it is the tongue of one and the release of the other.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 七 qī is inherited from Middle Chinese tshit, "seven" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). Mandarin turned its tsh into the q you are practising and dropped the final t.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- yī, qī — two high level tones

- wǔ liù qī — dip, fall, level

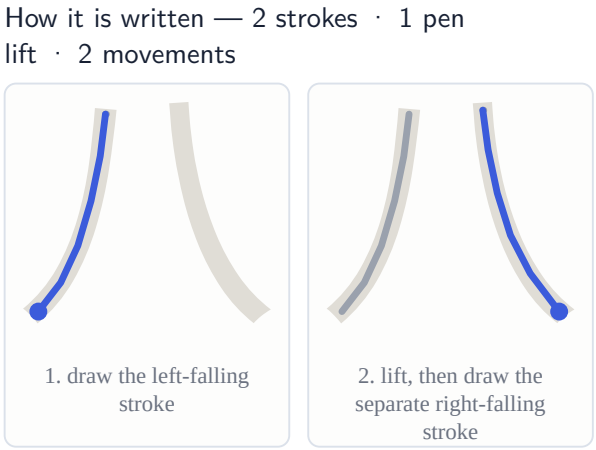
Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

20.5 八 — a character you have already written twice

Write 七, then write 六 and put a finger on its two legs.

Script — the gap is the character



How 八 is written, stroke by stroke

八

Two strokes. For eight.

1. the left leg, a piě falling to the lower left

2. lift, then the right leg, a nà falling to the lower right

You wrote both of them in 六 two lessons ago, under the dot and the bar. Take the dot and the bar away and what is left is eight.

And one more comparison, because it is the sharpest in the whole book: 人, rén, "person", is these same two strokes joined at the top. 八 is the same two strokes parted. The gap is the entire difference between a person and the number eight — which is why the first stroke of 八 begins below where 人's does, and why the two must never be allowed to touch.

Your turn

- Write it: 八 — left leg, lift, right leg, apart at the top
- Contrast: write 人 beside it and mark where they meet

Before you move on

Sources: Hanzi Writer Data 八; Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

20.6 八 — eight, and why it costs more

Write it: 八

Then say seven.

The sounds and tones in this word

八 bā means eight.
bā is first tone, high and level, like qī. The b is unaspirated: no puff of air, closer to an English p in spin than the b of bin.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bā sounds close to fā, the first syllable of a word meaning to prosper or come into wealth. That resemblance is why eight is the number people pay extra for: on a car number plate, in a phone number, in the price of a flat on the eighth floor. The Beijing Olympics opened at eight seconds past eight on the eighth day of the eighth month.

A number can carry that much only in a language where numbers sound like other words, and this is the clearest case of it a beginner will meet.

The word itself is inherited from Middle Chinese peat, "eight" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the luck rests on a likeness of sound, not on where the word comes from.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- qī, bā — two level tones
- liù qī bā — fall, level, level

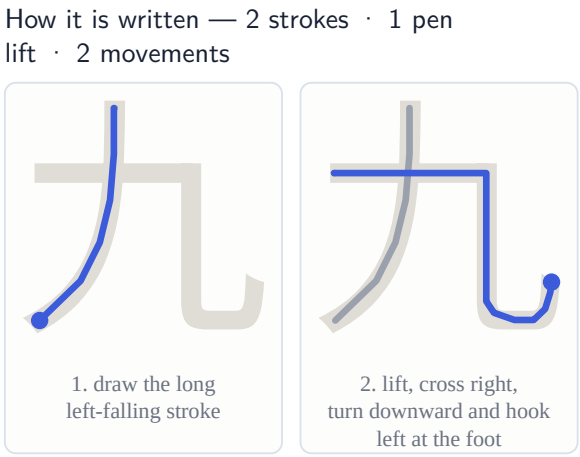
Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

20.7 九 — two strokes again

Write 八 and 七. How many strokes between them? Say why eight is the number people pay extra for.

Script — a fall and a turn



How 九 is written, stroke by stroke

九

Two strokes. For nine.

1. a long piě, falling from the upper right all the way to the lower left
2. lift, then the héngzhéwāngōu: cross the first stroke to the right, turn downward, and hook back to the left at the foot

Seven, eight and nine are two strokes each. The last three single digits are the three quickest characters in this book to write, and the three largest numbers you have. Whatever intuition said that bigger numbers need more ink is finished.

Your turn

Write these out:

- 九 — the long fall, then the crossing turn with its hook
- 七 八 九 in a row — six strokes for three numbers

Before you move on

Sources: Hanzi Writer Data 九; Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

20.8 九 — nine

Write it: 九

Then say eight.

The sounds and tones in this word

九 jiǔ means nine.
jiǔ is third tone, the low dip — so it joins nǐ, hǎo and wǔ. Say all four in a row and let the pitch stay low and creaky across every one.
The j is the unaspirated partner of the q in qī: same tongue position, no puff of air. Say qī jiǔ and the only difference is the breath.
Keep the dip in mind. Two third tones in a row do not both dip — the first one lifts — and nine is about to give this book its first pair of them.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 九 jiǔ is inherited from Middle Chinese kjuwX, "nine" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); Mandarin softened the k to j. It is usually compared with Tibetan dgu, a likely Sino-Tibetan cognate.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nǐ hǎo wǔ jiǔ — four dips
- qī jiǔ — the same tongue, one with breath and one without
- qī bā jiǔ

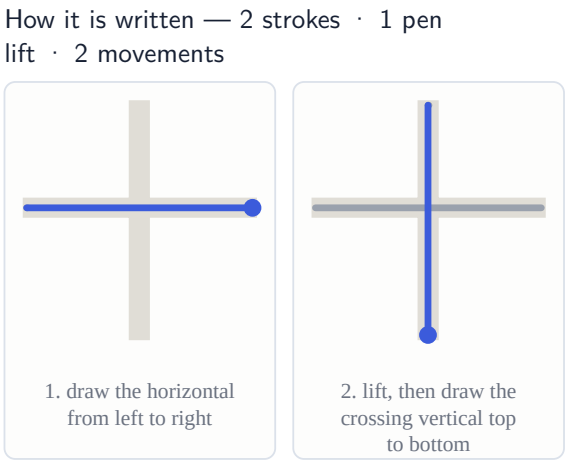
Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

20.9 十 — the character that was already here

Write 早, zǎo, morning. Say what sits under the sun in it.

Script — a bar and a post



How 十 is written, stroke by stroke

十

Two strokes. For ten.

1. the héng horizontal, left to right
2. lift, then the shù vertical, top to bottom, crossing it at the centre

You have written this before. It is the lower half of 早 — and the morning lesson said, in as many words, that on its own this piece is the character for ten, and then went on to something else. It has been sitting on the page for thirteen chapters waiting for a number to hang on.

Set it against 一, one: the same horizontal, with a post through it.

Your turn

Write these out:

- 十 — bar first, then post
- 早 and point at the 十 inside it

Before you move on

Sources: Hanzi Writer Data 十; Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

20.10 十 — ten

Write it: 十

Then say nine.

The sounds and tones in this word

十 shí means ten.
shí is second tone, the rise — the pitch starts in the middle and goes up, as if asking. It is the first number in the whole run of ten to use it. The sh curls the tongue back, further than an English sh. Keep the tip high and behind the ridge.
Say the whole run once: yī èr sān sì wǔ liù qī bā jiǔ shí. Level, fall, level, fall, dip, fall, level, level, dip, rise.

What you've built — the last of the ten

Ten is not simply the tenth word. It is the last one this book needs before every number up to ninety-nine falls out of the ten it already has — and the next chapter spends it.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 十 shí is inherited from Middle Chinese dzyip, "ten", whose final p Mandarin lost (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- bā jiǔ shí — level, dip, rise
- the whole run, one to ten, at speed

Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

20.11 Payoff — one to ten

Say ten, then say why eight costs more.

Your turn

1. Count aloud one to ten, then ten to one.
2. Hear all ten named singly and out of order, and say each.
3. Read it: the ten characters printed shuffled — 九 三 十 六 一 八 四 七 二 五 — then say each with its tone
4. Write it: the five new ones from dictation — 六 七 八 九 十
5. Say the tone of each of the ten in order. Only one of them rises.
6. Say what 八 and 人 differ by, and what sits inside 早.

Five new characters cost twelve strokes between them — four, two, two, two and two. The single hardest thing in this chapter was not the writing; it was that the numbers had been left at five for seventeen chapters.

Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

Chapter 21

Ten Words, Ninety-Nine Numbers

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can build any number from eleven to ninety-nine out of the ten words I already have, say a hundred, and read a price written in Arabic numerals.
>
> One rule of order turns ten words into ninety-nine numbers, 一百 is where 一*'s tone finally moves, and the digits chapter says which of 5 and* 五 a price tag actually prints.

21.1 十一 — eleven, and the teens in one line

Count one to ten, then say ten on its own.

You'll want to know first — ten, then one

十一 — shíyī — eleven

Ten, then one. That is all of it.

And it does not stop at eleven. 十五 is shíwǔ, ten-five, fifteen. 十九 is shíjiǔ, ten-nine, nineteen. English has eleven, twelve, thirteen — three separate shapes before the pattern starts — and German, Russian and Urdu each have their own nine irregular words to memorise here.

Mandarin has none. The teens are the numbers you already have, in the order you already say them. Nine numbers, no new vocabulary, no new characters, and nothing to learn but the order.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 十一 is a Chinese formation, ten and one, and both pieces are inherited from Middle Chinese: dzyip, "ten", and 'jit, "one" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

- Say it: shíyī — eleven
- Build: shí + sān → shísān, thirteen
- Build: shí + bā → shíbā, eighteen
- Run through: eleven to nineteen, straight through

Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

21.2 二十 — twenty, and ninety-nine numbers from ten words

Say shíyī, and build seventeen.

You'll want to know first — turn the pair round

二十 — èrshí — twenty

十一 is ten-one, eleven. 二十 is two-ten, twenty. The same two words in the other order, and the order is the entire difference.

That gives every ten: 三十 thirty, 四十 forty, 九十 ninety. Put a unit on the end of one and you have everything between: 二十一, èrshíyī, twenty-one; 九十九, ninety-nine.

Ten words reach ninety-nine. English needs eleven, twelve and thirteen before its own pattern begins, and twenty, thirty and fifty are three more shapes again. Mandarin needs none of them.

The sounds and tones in this word

九十九, ninety-nine, looks like a drill for the rule you met with nǐ hǎo, and it is a drill for when that rule does not fire. jiǔ is third tone and so is the jiǔ at the end, but 十 shí stands between them, and it is second tone. A third tone lifts into a rise only before another third tone. Say it: jiǔ-shí-jiǔ. Both nines dip.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 二十 is a Chinese formation, two tens, made of words inherited from Middle Chinese: nyijH, "two", and dzyip, "ten" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

- Say it: èrshí — twenty
- Build: sān + shí → sānshí, thirty
- Build: wǔ + shí + liù → wǔshíliù, fifty-six
- Say it: jiǔshíjiǔ — ninety-nine, both nines dipping

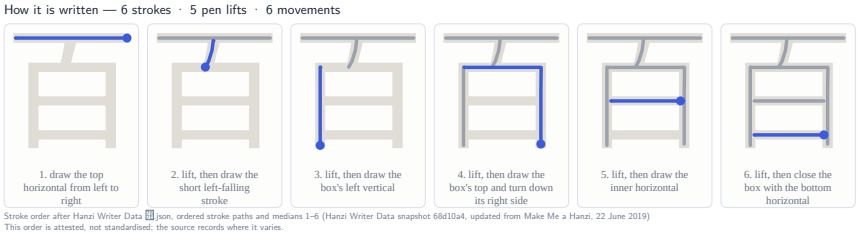
Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

21.3 百 — a hundred, on a box you have built before

Write 四 and 一.

Script — six strokes, five of them familiar



How 百 is written, stroke by stroke

百

Six strokes. For a hundred.

1. the top héng horizontal, left to right
2. lift, then the short piě below it, falling to the left
3. lift, then the shù vertical down the left side of the box
4. lift, then the héngzhé: across the top of the box and down its right side
5. lift, then the inner héng horizontal
6. lift, then the bottom héng, closing the box

Strokes 3 to 6 are the box of 四, built in the same order: the left side, then the top-and-right turn, then the inside, then the floor. Outside before inside, and the box closes last — the rule you used for 四 and 口.

Only strokes 1 and 2 are new, and stroke 1 is 一.

Your turn

Write these out:

- 百 — bar, short fall, then the box in 四's order
- 四 beside it and mark the four strokes they share

Before you move on

Sources: Hanzi Writer Data 百; Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

21.4 一百 — a hundred, and 一 moves

Write it: 百

Then say twenty.

The sounds and tones in this word

百 bǎi means a hundred, and it is almost always said with 一 in front of it: 一百, one hundred.
bǎi is third tone, the low dip, like jiǔ and wǔ.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of Counting on its own, 一 is yī, high and level. In 一百 it is not: you say yìbǎi, with a fall.

一 shifts its tone depending on what follows, exactly as 不 does — the behaviour this book named in its first chapter for a different word. Before a first, second or third tone, 一 falls: yìbǎi. Before a fourth tone it rises instead.
So the number that sounds simplest in the run is the one that changes most, and a hundred is where a learner meets it first.
Both words are inherited from Middle Chinese: ʾjit, "one", and paek, "hundred" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

- Say it: yī alone — level
- Say it: yìbǎi — falling, then dipping
- Run through: shí, èrshí, yìbǎi — ten, twenty, a hundred

Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

21.5 5 and 五 — the same number, two registers

Say five, then say a hundred.

You'll want to know first — where each one is written

5 and 五 are both wǔ.

A reader who has spent this chapter learning 六 七 八 九 十 could still walk past a Chinese shop and read nothing on the price tag, because a price is written in Arabic numerals. So are dates, telephone numbers, bus numbers, floor numbers, addresses and the year.

The characters are not archaic. They are a different register, and both are current:

written with	where you meet it
5, 20, 100	prices, dates, phone numbers, addresses, anything counted
五, 二十, 一百	formal and legal text, cheque amounts, shop signs, set phrases, running prose

Both are read aloud the same way — you see 5 and you say wǔ. That is the useful part: the digits cost you nothing to learn and everything to ignore.

One convention worth carrying: on a bill or a cheque an amount is often written twice, once in digits and once in characters, because the characters are much harder to alter.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

The digits are the Hindu-Arabic numerals, devised in India and carried west through Arabic; they came into everyday Chinese use only in modern times. 五 is the inherited word, from Middle Chinese nguX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

- Read it: 5, 10, 20, 99 aloud as wǔ, shí, èrshí, jiǔshíjiǔ
- Write it: each of those four in characters as well
- Say it: which of the two a price tag uses, and which a cheque uses

Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

21.6 Payoff — ninety-nine numbers, and the price tag

Count one to ten, then say which of 5 and 五 a price tag uses.

Your turn

1. Build, do not recall. Say twelve, seventeen, thirty, forty-five, sixty-eight and eighty-one, from the ten words alone.
2. Say jiǔshíjiǔ, ninety-nine. 十 between the two 九 is second tone, so the first 九 keeps its low dip: the dip lifts only before another third tone.
3. Say yìbǎi, and say what happens to 一 in front of it.
4. Read it: 8, 15, 30, 99 and 100 off a page, then say each aloud
5. Write it: 十一, 二十 and 一百 in characters
6. Give a floor number, an age and a price, each as a bare number.

Count what this cost: five characters and one rule of order — ten before a unit multiplies nothing, ten after a unit multiplies it. That order is worth more than every word in this chapter put together.

What is still out of reach: yìqiān, a thousand, and everything above it — and the measure word a Chinese number needs before an actual noun, which is a chapter of its own.

Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

21.7 Close the numeral slice

Count one to ten, then say why eight costs more.

Your turn

The six new characters, alone, from spoken cues and with no number around them: 六 七 八 九 十 百.

Then put each back to work once.

1. Write it: the five single digits, and say the stroke count of each — four, two, two, two, two; twelve strokes for five numbers
2. Write it: 百, and mark the four strokes it shares with 四
3. Write it: 早, and mark the 十 inside it
4. Write it: 人 and 八 side by side, and say what separates them
5. Build six numbers between eleven and ninety-nine from the ten words.
6. Read it: a price in digits, then say it aloud in words

Say what the whole slice cost the hand: six characters, fourteen strokes, and one rule about the order of two of them.

Before you move on

Source: Unicode CJK Unified Ideographs chart

Chapter 22

The Grammar That Is Not There

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can state the four things Mandarin does not do — no verb endings, no agreement, no article, no separate nationality word — and name where somebody is from.

Four facts about Mandarin's shape and one join, and the whole chapter adds not a single character: three of the four are things a reader must stop doing, and the fourth puts 中国 and 人 together for the first time.

22.1 看 — the verb that never changes

A new chapter, and it teaches no new character at all. Five retrievals first.

- Recall: say liù qī bā jiǔ shí bǎi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say bǎi — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say zì — hànzì — hànyǔ — zhōngwén — zhōngguó — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say kàn — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say yǔ — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say hànyǔ — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

You'll want to know: there is nothing to conjugate

> A Mandarin verb has exactly one form. It never changes — not for who is doing it, not for how many of them there are, and not for when.

You have been given 看 kàn, "to look", and you have used it in exactly one shape. That was not the lesson being brief. That is the whole verb.

我看书	wǒ kàn shū — I read
你看书	nǐ kàn shū — you read
人看书	rén kàn shū — people read

The verb is 看 three times. Nothing has been added, dropped or swapped.

This is worth stating out loud because of what a reader coming from English or Spanish does otherwise: they wait for the ending, decide the book has not reached it yet, and go on quietly expecting one. Spanish has hablo, hablas, habla, hablamos, habláis, hablan. English has three forms and an irregular verb for every occasion. Mandarin has one shape and no exceptions.

Every verb in this book behaves this way — 看, 是, 上学 — and so will every verb in every chapter after it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- wǒ kàn shū, nǐ kàn shū, rén kàn shū — one verb, three sentences
- 我是学生 / 你是学生 — 是 does not move either

Before you move on

How many forms does a Mandarin verb have? (One.) What changes when the person changes? (Nothing.) And what should you stop waiting for? (The ending — there is not one.)

22.2 我是 — nothing agrees with anything

One lesson back, and the same fact from the other end.

- Recall: say kàn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say yìbǎi — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say kàn — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say kànjiàn — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say yǔ — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say hànzì — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

You'll want to know: the subject changes nothing

> The subject of a Mandarin sentence has no effect on the verb whatsoever.

The last lesson said a verb has one form. This says the other half: nothing about the subject reaches it.

> 我是学生 wǒ shì xuésheng — I am a student. 你是学生 nǐ shì xuésheng — you are a student. 人是学生 rén shì xuésheng — people are students.

是 shì is the same 是 in all three. An English speaker has to pick am, are or is; a Spanish speaker has to pick soy, eres, es, somos, sois or son. You pick 是.

Grammar Lens: and nothing after the verb agrees either

The thing that comes AFTER 是 does not change either.

> 我是大学生 — I am a university student. 人是大学生 — people are university students.

大学生 is one word with one shape whether it names one person or a hundred. Spanish would need estudiante against estudiantes, and would then need the adjective to follow suit. Mandarin marks none of it.

So the whole of agreement, in Mandarin, is a thing you must not do. That is an unusual kind of lesson: what a Spanish learner spends months getting right, a Mandarin learner has to be told to stop attempting. If you find yourself wondering which form to use, the answer is that there is only one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 我是学生 — 你是学生 — 人是学生
- 我是大学生 — 人是大学生 — one shape, one and many

Before you move on

What does the subject do to the verb? (Nothing.) What does a plural subject do to the noun after 是? (Nothing — 大学生 has one shape.) So how much agreement is there in Mandarin? (None at all.)

22.3 书 — a book, the book, books

Two lessons in, and this one is about a word you have had since the reading chapter.

- Recall: say wǒ shì — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say wǔ — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say kànjiàn — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say hǎokàn — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say yǔ — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say hàn — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

You'll want to know: Mandarin has no article

> 书 shū means a book, the book, and books. Mandarin has no word for a and no word for the, and a bare noun says nothing about how many there are.

Which of the three it means is settled by what is going on around it, and by nothing in the word itself.

> 我看书 — I read a book. / I read the book. / I read books.

All three are the same sentence. If you need to say one book you can count it — that takes a measure word, which arrives in two chapters. If you need to say this book you can point at it, which needs a word this book has not taught yet. What you never need is an article, because there is not one to leave out.

This is the trap for an English or Spanish speaker, and it runs both ways. Arriving, they hunt for the missing the and try to supply it from their own language. Leaving, they drop English articles: I read book. Neither is a vocabulary problem. Mandarin does not mark the distinction here at all, and 书 on its own is complete.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 我看书 — and mean it three ways
- 书 — a book, the book, books

Before you move on

What does 书 mean? (A book, the book, and books — all three.) How does Mandarin mark which one? (It does not.) What should an English speaker stop looking for? (The article — there is none.)

22.4 中国人 — where somebody is from

> The fourth lesson of a chapter that has added no character at all.

- Recall: say shū — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say shíyī èrshí jiǔshíjiǔ yìbǎi — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say hǎokàn — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say shū — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say hànyǔ — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say hànzì — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

You'll want to know: country plus 人

中国人 Zhōngguó rén — a Chinese person.

Read it: 中国人 again and count what is new 中国 Zhōngguó, China, was taught in the country chapter. 人 rén, person, was the first character this book ever asked you to write. Nothing here is new. The lesson is the join.

我是中国人 wǒ shì Zhōngguó rén — I am Chinese. 你是中国人吗 nǐ shì Zhōngguó rén ma — are you Chinese?

That second sentence uses 吗 from the asking chapter, and it is one of the two or three questions a beginner is asked most often.

Grammar Lens: the rule, and how far it reaches country + 人 = a person from that country.

That is the whole pattern, and it works on every country name without exception. Mandarin has no separate set of nationality words the way English has China → Chinese, Spain → Spanish, France → French, each with its own shape to learn. It has one noun and one suffix.

The same trick makes the language name, with 语 or 文 instead of 人 — and you already hold both: 汉语 and 中文 were taught in the language chapters. So one country word gives you the place, the people and the language.

Notice what Mandarin does not do here. It does not capitalise 中国人, because it has no capitals at all. It does not agree the word with anything. And it does not distinguish a Chinese person from Chinese people: 中国人 is both.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 中国人 — Zhōngguó rén
- 我是中国人
- 你是中国人吗

Before you move on

How do you say "a Chinese person"? (中国人.) How many new characters did that take? (None — 中国 and 人 were both already yours.) What is the rule? (Country plus 人.)

22.5 中国人 — 书 — 看: the chapter with no new character

The chapter closes. Five retrievals, then the four skills.

- Recall: say Zhōngguó rén — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say liù qī bā jiǔ shí bǎi — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say shū — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say kànshū — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zì — hànzì — hànyǔ — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say zì — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

What you've built — four facts, no new strokes

A character costs this book a great deal: a stroke record checked against a source, a writing lesson, a reading lesson, and a regeneration of the font the book prints with. This chapter cost none of that, and it is worth saying what it bought.

1. A verb has one form. 我看书, 你看书, 人看书.
2. Nothing agrees. Not the verb with its subject, not what follows 是 with how many there are.
3. There is no article. 书 is a book, the book, and books.
4. Country + 人 names a people. 我是中国人

Three of those four are things you must stop doing rather than start, which is why no lesson had ever said them: an absence leaves no word to teach. The fourth is a join between two things the book had already given you and never let meet.
Listen. Wǒ shì Zhōngguó rén. Nǐ ne — nǐ shì Zhōngguó rén ma?
Speak. Say what you are, and ask the same question back with 吗.
Read it: 我是中国人 — 你是中国人吗
Write it: 中国人 — every stroke of it is one you have written before

Your turn

- Say it: 我是中国人
- Say it: 你是中国人吗
- Write it: 中国人

Before you move on

Name the four facts this chapter taught. (One verb form; no agreement; no article; country plus 人.) How many characters did it add? (None.) And which of the four is a thing to start doing rather than stop? (Country plus 人.)

Chapter 23

De — The Hinge

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say whose something is, put a whole description in front of the noun it describes, and open a sentence with its topic.
>
> One character, eight strokes and no tone, doing three jobs — and the third of them, the topic slot, costs no character at all because it is an order rather than a word.

23.1 的 — eight strokes for the commonest character there is

A new chapter. Six retrievals, then the pen.

- Recall: say Zhōngguó rén — shū — kàn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say kàn — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say kànshū — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
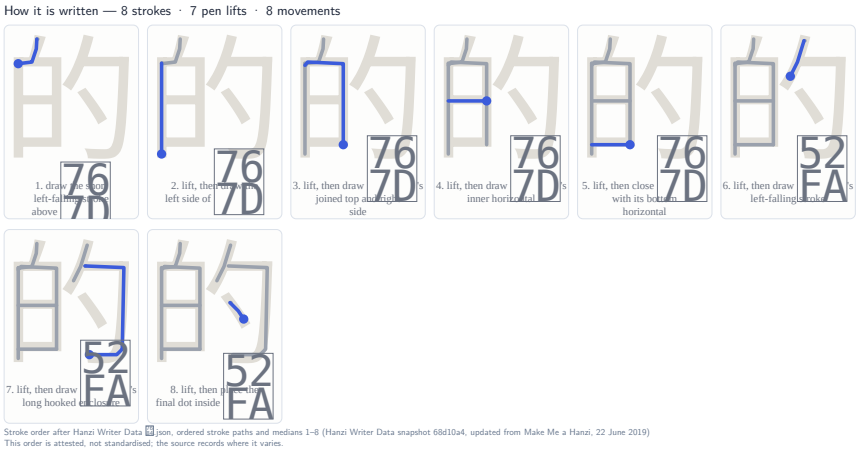
- Recall: say kàn — kànjiàn — hǎokàn — shū — kànshū — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zì — hànzì — hànyǔ — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

- Recall: say zhōngxué — zhōngxuésheng — tóngxué — shàngxué — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Script — a box on the left, a hook on the right



How 的 is written, stroke by stroke

的

Eight strokes, in two halves. The left half is 白 bái, "white"; the right half is 勺 sháo, a ladle. Finish the whole left half before the right one starts — the rule every two-part character in this book has followed.

The left half, 白, five strokes:

1. a short piě falling to the left, at the top
2. the shù down the left side of the box
3. the héngzhé across the top and down the right side, without lifting
4. the héng inside the box
5. the héng that closes its floor

That box is built exactly as 百's was, and for the same reason: outside before inside, and the floor last.

The right half, 勺, three strokes:

1. a piě falling to the left from the top
2. a long héngzhégōu down the right side, hooking left at the base
3. a single diǎn dot, placed last, inside the enclosure

The dot goes in last. Enclose, then fill. That is why it is stroke eight and not stroke six.

Your turn

- Write it: 的 — 白 first, all five, then 勺's three
- Cover: write it again from memory, and check the dot came last

Before you move on

How many strokes does 的 have, and how do they split? (Eight — five for 白, three for 勺.) Which stroke is the dot? (The last one — enclose, then fill.) Which character built its box the same way? (百.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 的, pinned stroke paths and medians.

23.2 的 — whose it is

One lesson back, and the character is already under your pen.

- Recall: say de — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say wǒ shì — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say ma — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say ma — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zhōngwén — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say shàngxué — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The sounds and tones in this word

的 is said de — and that is the whole of it. No tone at all.
It is the third toneless word in this book, after 吗 and the 上 of 早上, and like them it is said light, short and low, leaning on the word in front of it. Do not give it a falling tone because it looks like a full character. It is a hinge, not a word.

Grammar Lens: owner + 的 + owned owner + 的 + the thing owned.

我的书 wǒ de shū — my book 我的名字 wǒ de míngzi — my name 你的书 nǐ de shū — your book

That is the entire Mandarin possessive. Look at what is NOT there:

- No agreement. 的 never changes for the owner, the thing, or how many.
- No separate word for "mine". English needs my and mine; Spanish needs mi, mío, mía, míos, mías. Mandarin has 的.
- No difference between one owner and several. The same 的 does both.

You have had 我 since the chapter that taught you to say who you are, and it has had nothing to own until now.
One habit worth learning early: with family and with very close things, Mandarin drops 的 — a speaker says 我家, not 我的家. The closer the tie, the likelier the 的 falls away.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 的 is a borrowed spelling. The character's own Middle Chinese reading is tek, "bright; a target"; the particle is usually traced to a Tang-period particle written with another character, read tejX. The details are not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- wǒ de shū — 我的书
- wǒ de míngzi — 我的名字
- nǐ de shū — 你的书

Before you move on

What tone does 的 carry? (None.) What is the order? (Owner, 的, thing owned.) And what does 的 do when the owner is plural? (Nothing — it never changes.)

23.3 看书的人 — the one who reads

One lesson back, and the same character doing a bigger job.

- Recall: say de — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say shū — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say ma — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say nǐ hǎo ma — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say wén — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say shàngxué — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Grammar Lens: put the description in front

的 does not only join an owner to a thing. Put a whole clause in front of it and that clause describes the noun that follows.

> 看书的人 kàn shū de rén — the person who reads books
> 看书的学生 — the student who reads books 我看的书 wǒ kàn de shū — the book I read

Set the Mandarin order against the English. English says the person who reads books: noun first, description trailing after it. Mandarin says reads-books 的 person: description first, noun last, always.

That is the single most important thing in this lesson, and it is not a word to learn — it is a direction to turn round. Everything that describes a noun in Mandarin goes in front of it, however long it gets, and 的 is the hinge that holds it there. English has one construction like this and it is short — a well-read person — and Mandarin uses that shape for all of them.
Notice that the 的 is the same 的 as the last lesson's, unchanged and toneless. Mandarin does not have one word for the possessive and another for the relative. It has this one hinge, and what goes in front of it decides which job it is doing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- kàn shū de rén — 看书的人
- wǒ kàn de shū — 我看的书
- 看书的学生

Before you move on

Where does a Mandarin description go? (In front of the noun, always.) Which word holds it there? (的.) Is it a different 的 from 我的书? (No — one hinge, two jobs.)

23.4 汉语 — 我看书: topic first, comment after

Four in, and this one names the shape the whole language prefers.

- Recall: say kàn shū de rén — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say Zhōngguó rén — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say nǐ hǎo ma — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say shì ma — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance

- Recall: say wén — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say tóngxué — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Grammar Lens: the topic comes first

Mandarin puts the thing being talked about first, and then says something about it. The first slot is the TOPIC, not necessarily the subject.

汉语 — 我看书 Hànyǔ, wǒ kàn shū — Chinese? I read it. 书 — 我看 shū, wǒ kàn — Books, I read. 我 — 中国人 wǒ, Zhōngguó rén — Me, I'm Chinese.

(Chinese writes a comma at that seam. This book has not taught a single punctuation mark — its own inventory reports the column empty — so the seam is printed here as a dash rather than smuggled in.)
In each of those the first word is not doing the verb. It is the subject under discussion, and the rest of the sentence is the remark about it. English can do this and treats it as informal — me, I'd rather walk; that book, I've read. Mandarin does it constantly and treats it as ordinary. It is why so much beginner Mandarin built on an English template sounds stiff: the learner keeps the doer in front when a Mandarin speaker would have put the topic there.
A useful consequence. Once the topic is set, everything afterwards can leave it out. A Mandarin speaker will not repeat 书 in the second half of shū, wǒ kàn — and will not supply a pronoun for it either. Where English needs it, Mandarin needs nothing, because the topic is still standing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 汉语 — 我看书
- 书 — 我看
- 我 — 中国人

Before you move on

What goes in the first slot of a Mandarin sentence? (The topic — what is being talked about.) Must it be the one doing the verb? (No.) What does the second half do about repeating it? (Nothing — it leaves it out.)

23.5 我的书 — 看书的人

The chapter closes on one character and the four skills.

- Recall: say Hànyǔ, wǒ kàn shū — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say Zhōngguó rén — shū — kàn — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say shì ma — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say hǎo bu hǎo — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say wén — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say tóng — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

What you've built — the hinge

One character, eight strokes, no tone — and with it:

1. 我的书 — whose something is, with no agreement anywhere.
2. 看书的人 — a description standing in FRONT of what it describes.
3. 汉语 — 我看书 — a topic first, and a comment after it.

The third of those needed no character at all: it is an order, not a word. It is in this chapter because 的 is what makes the first slot worth filling.
Listen. Wǒ de shū. Kàn shū de rén. Hànyǔ, wǒ kàn shū.
Speak. Say whose the book is, then say who the reader is.

Read it: 我的名字 — 看书的学生 — 书 — 我看
Write it: 的 — 白 first, then 勺, and the dot last

Your turn

- Say it: 我的书 — 我的名字 — 你的书
- Say it: 看书的人 — 看书的学生
- Write it: 的

Before you move on

Name the three jobs this chapter gave 的 and its slot. (Possession; a description in front of its noun; and the topic that opens a sentence.) Which one cost no character? (The topic — it is an order, not a word.)

Chapter 24

Have, and Count

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) ↙ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I have, say that there is something, and put a number against a noun with a measure word between them.
>
> Nine strokes across two characters give the numerals something to count at last, and 个 is three strokes of which two are 人.

24.1 有 — six strokes, and a moon underneath

A new chapter, and its first character is a verb the book has gone twenty-three chapters without.

- Recall: say wǒ de shū — kàn shū de rén — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say de — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say hǎo bu hǎo — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say ma — nǐ hǎo ma — shì ma — hǎo bu hǎo — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zhōngwén — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say tóngxué — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Script — two strokes on top, 月 beneath

How 有 is written, stroke by stroke

有

Six strokes. Two cross at the top; the remaining four build 月, the moon, underneath.

1. the héng across the top, left to right
2. the long piě from the top centre, falling to the lower left and running past everything below it

Horizontal before left-falling. You have written that order twice already, in 大 and in 六, and it decides these two.

Then 月:

1. the shù down the left side
2. the héngzhégōu across the top and down the right side, hooking left at the base — one stroke, two turns, no lift
3. the upper héng inside it
4. the lower héng inside it

Enclose, then fill: the two inner bars come after the walls, exactly as in 白 and 百 and 四.

One thing to watch. Stroke 2 is the longest in the character and it must reach the bottom-left corner, well past 月. A short one turns 有 into something that is not 有.

Your turn

- Write it: 有 — bar, long fall, then 月's four
- Cover: write it again, and check the long stroke reaches the corner

Before you move on

How many strokes does 有 have? (Six.) Which comes first, the horizontal or the falling stroke? (The horizontal — as in 大 and 六.) What sits underneath? (月, built walls-first.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 有, pinned stroke paths and medians.

24.2 有 — to have, and there is

One lesson back, and the character is already yours.

- Recall: say yǒu — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say de — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say liù — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say liù — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zì — hànzì — hànyǔ — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say xiǎo — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The sounds and tones in this word

有 yǒu is third tone — the dip, low and creaky, the same shape as the 好 you have said since your first day and the 五 you count with. Say them in a row and only the mouth changes: hǎo, wǔ, yǒu.

我有书 wǒ yǒu shū — I have a book. 我有名字 — I have a name.

Grammar Lens: the same verb says there is 有 is also how Mandarin says there is and there are. It is one verb doing both jobs, and no extra word is needed for the second:

> 有人 yǒu rén — there is somebody. / somebody's here. 有中国人 — there are Chinese people here.

English needs have for the first job and there is for the second; Spanish needs tener and hay. Mandarin needs 有.
And now the exception that every Mandarin course states early, because it is the only one of its kind:

> 有 is the one verb 不 cannot negate.

不 has negated everything in this book so far — 不好, 不是, 不谢 — and it cannot negate this. The negative of 有 is méi yǒu, said with a different negator altogether, whose character this book has not yet taught. Hold the rule now and the writing later: 不有 is never Mandarin.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 有 yǒu is inherited from Middle Chinese hjuwX, "to have; to exist" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); both of its jobs are old ones.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hǎo, wǔ, yǒu — three dips
- 我有书 我有名字
- 有人

Before you move on

What tone is 有? (Third, the dip.) What are its two jobs? (To have, and there is.) Which negator does it refuse? (不 — 有 takes méi instead.)

24.3 个 — three strokes, and you already write two of them

Two lessons in, and this character is nearly free.

- Recall: say yǒu — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say kàn shū de rén — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say qī — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say qī — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zhōngguó — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say dà — dàjiā — xué — xuésheng — dàxué — dàxuésheng — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Script — 人, and a line under it

Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 个.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–3 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 个 is written, stroke by stroke

个

Three strokes, and the first two are a character you have written since the opening chapter.

1. the piě, falling from the peak to the lower left
2. the nà, falling from the same peak to the lower right
3. the shù, straight down from under the junction

Strokes 1 and 2 are 人 — the same pair, from the same peak, in the same order. All that is new is a vertical hung beneath it.

Keep the roof wide and the vertical dead centre. If the roof narrows, 个 starts to look like 人 with an accident underneath.

This is the cheapest character in the chapter and it does the most work in the one after it.

Your turn

- Write it: 人 — then 个, which is 人 with a line under it
- Cover: write 个 from memory

Before you move on

How many strokes does 个 have? (Three.) Which character are the first two? (人.) And the third? (A vertical, straight down from the junction.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 个, pinned stroke paths and medians.

24.4 个 — the word that goes between a number and a thing

One lesson back, and this is what the numerals were for.

- Recall: say gè — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say Hànyǔ, wǒ kàn shū — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say bā — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say bā — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance

- Recall: say guó — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say dàxuésheng — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Grammar Lens: number + 个 + noun

In Mandarin a number cannot touch a noun. Something has to stand between them, and 个 is the one that fits almost everything.

Wrong: 三人 Right: 三个人 sān ge rén — three people Right: 一个学生 yí ge xuésheng — one student Right: 五个名字 — five names

You have been able to count to ninety-nine since the last chapter and there has been nothing to count. This is the missing piece, and it is one character.
English does this in a few places and does not notice: three head of cattle, two slices of bread, a pair of trousers. Mandarin does it every time, for every noun, without exception.

The sounds and tones in this word

个 is gè, fourth tone — the sharp fall, the same shape as 四 and 六. But in the middle of a count it usually goes light and toneless: sān ge rén, not sān gè rén. It behaves the way 吗 and 的 do — a small word leaning on its neighbours.
And one sandhi you already own comes back here. 一 is first tone alone, and before a fourth-tone syllable it rises: 一个 is yí ge, not yī ge. That is the same tone change the hundred lesson taught on 一百.
Mandarin has dozens of measure words, each tied to a shape or a kind of thing, and 个 is the general-purpose one. Use 个 when you do not know which is right, and you will be understood every time.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 个 is inherited from Middle Chinese kaH, "a single piece".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- sān ge rén — 三个人
- yí ge xuésheng — 一个学生
- 五个名字

Before you move on

What has to stand between a number and a noun? (A measure word — 个 fits almost everything.) What is wrong with 三人? (Nothing stands between the number and the noun.) How is 一个 said? (Yí ge — 一 rises before a fourth tone.)

24.5 我有一个名字

The chapter closes with the sentence its two characters were for.

- Recall: say gè — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say wǒ de shū — kàn shū de rén — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say jiǔ — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say jiǔ — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say guó — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say dàxué — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

What you've built — have, and count

Two characters this chapter, nine strokes between them, and here is the sentence they buy:

我有一个名字 wǒ yǒu yí ge míngzi — I have a name.

Everything in it except 有 and 个 was already yours: 我 from the chapter where you said who you were, 一 from the counting chapter, 名字 from the naming one. The chapter did not add a sentence; it added the two words that let the sentence exist.

And the same nine strokes give:

> 有人 — there is somebody. 三个学生 — three students. 我有一个中国名字 — I have a Chinese name.

Listen. Wǒ yǒu yí ge míngzi. Yǒu rén. Sān ge xuésheng.
Speak. Say what you have; then count three of something.
Read it: 我有一个名字 — 有人 — 三个学生
Write it: 有 — bar, long fall, 月; 个 — 人, then a line

Your turn

- Say it: 我有一个名字
- Say it: 有人 三个学生
- Write it: 有 个

Before you move on

Say "I have a name." (我有一个名字.) What does 有 do besides have? (It says there is.) And why can 三 not sit straight against 人? (A number needs a measure word — 三个人.)

Chapter 25

Le — Finished, and Changed

Modes: voice (4) pen (1) Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that an action is finished, that a situation has changed, and explain why neither of those is a tense.
>
> Two strokes — fewer than any character in the book but 一 and 二 — and with them the first sentences in this track that are not happening now.

25.1 了 — two strokes

A new chapter, and the smallest character in it does the most.

- Recall: say wǒ yǒu yí ge míngzi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say yǒu — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say shí — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
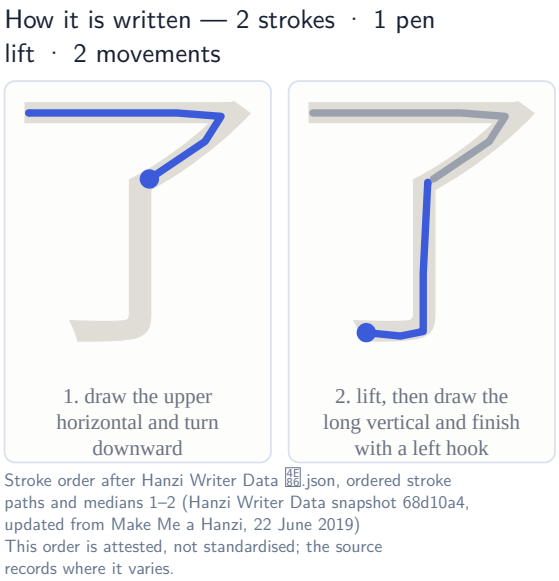
- Recall: say shí — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say guó — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say sheng — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Script — a turn, and a hook



How 了 is written, stroke by stroke

了

Two strokes. Only 一 and 二 have used fewer.

1. the héngpiě: start with a short flat run at the upper left, then let it fall away to the right — one stroke, one turn, no lift

2. the shùgōu: lift, come down from under that turn almost to the floor of the square, and flick left at the very end

The hook at the foot is not decoration; it is what tells 了 apart from a bare vertical. Finish it.

You have written a héngzhé — a horizontal that turns down — in every 口 since the fourth chapter. This is its cousin: the turn does not go straight down, it falls away.

Two strokes, and no tone. For a character that carries more grammar than any other in this book, it asks remarkably little of the hand.

Your turn

- Write it: 了 — the turn, then the hooked vertical
- Cover: write it again, and check the hook is there

Before you move on

How many strokes does 了 have? (Two.) Which characters use fewer? (一 and 二.) What must the second stroke end with? (A hook to the left.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 了, pinned stroke paths and medians.

25.2 我看了书 — the thing is done

One lesson back, and the character is already under your pen.

- Recall: say le — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say yǒu — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say yī èr sān sì wǔ liù qī bā jiǔ shí — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say shíyī — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zhōngguó — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say xuésheng — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Grammar Lens: verb + 了 = finished

了 le — toneless, and placed straight after the verb. It says the action is complete.

我看书 — I read. / I'm reading. 我看了书 wǒ kàn le shū — I read it. I've read it. Done.

The verb did not move and did not change — the last chapter's rule holds. One small word went in behind it, and the event closed.

我有了名字 — I've got a name now. 你看了吗 nǐ kàn le ma

— have you read it?

That last one puts 了 and 吗 in the same sentence, each doing its own job at its own end: 了 sits behind the verb, 吗 at the very finish.

What you've built — the past this book could not reach

Until this line, everything in this book happened in an eternal present. Every sentence you could build was now, and there was no way to say a thing had already happened.
Spanish spends an imperfect, a preterite with two irregular sets, a present perfect and two participles on the same job. English has read, have read, had read, was reading. Mandarin has 了 and, when it needs one, a word for yesterday.
The verb still does not change. It never will. What changed is that a finished event can now be told apart from an unfinished one — and that is done by adding a particle, not by reshaping a word.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 了 is inherited from Middle Chinese lewX, "to finish" (Guangyun). As a verb it is still read liǎo, and the toneless particle is usually said to have grown out of it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 我看书 — 我看了书
- wǒ yǒu le míngzi — 我有了名字
- 你看了吗

Before you move on

Where does 了 go? (Straight after the verb.) What does it say? (The action is finished.) What happened to the verb when you added it? (Nothing — verbs never change.)

25.3 我是大学生了 — something has changed

One lesson back, and the same character in a different slot.

- Recall: say le — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say gè — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say èrshí — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say bǎi — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zhōngwén — zhōngguó — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say xué — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Grammar Lens: 了 at the end says the situation is new

Put 了 at the very end of a sentence, after everything else, and it stops talking about the verb and starts talking about the situation:

> 我是大学生了 wǒ shì dàxuéshēng le — I'm a university student now. 有人了 — somebody's here now. 我看书了 — I'm reading now. (I wasn't before)

This 了 hangs off a whole finished sentence, not off any one word in it. That is why it goes last and why nothing may follow it.
The English word that keeps appearing in those translations is now, and it is not a translation of 了. It is what English has to reach for to carry what 了 does: this was not so before, and it is so now. Nothing in the Mandarin says now.

> 我是大学生 — I am a university student. (a fact) 我是大学生了 — I've become one. (a change)

Two slots, two jobs, one character. Behind the verb, 了 closes an action. At the end of the sentence, it opens a new state. This is what a language does when it refuses to inflect: it moves a small word around instead of reshaping a big one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 我是大学生 — 我是大学生了
- 有人了
- 我看了书 — 我看书了

Before you move on

Where does this 了 go? (At the very end of the sentence.) What does it say? (Something has changed.) Is it the same character as the last lesson's? (Yes — same two strokes, different slot, different job.)

25.4 了 — aspect, and why it is not a tense

The chapter's fourth lesson, and it names what the other three were doing.

- Recall: say wǒ shì dàxuéshēng le — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say gè — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say yìbǎi — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say wǔ — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zì — hànzì — hànyǔ — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say xué — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Grammar Lens: Mandarin marks completion, not time

了 is not a past tense. It marks aspect — whether an event is complete — and says nothing at all about when it happened.

Here is the proof, and it is the reason this lesson exists:

> 我看了书 — I read the book. (finished — could be an hour ago) 我看了书你看吗 — I've finished the book; are you going to read it?

The second sentence is not in the past. 了 says the reading is over, and whether that was this morning or will be by tonight is settled by a time word, not by the verb and not by 了.
So Mandarin splits the job English and Spanish fuse.

when it happened	a time word — yesterday, now, tomorrow
whether it is finished	a particle — 了

An English verb carries both at once: read against reads against have read. A Spanish verb carries both and the person as well. Mandarin carries neither in the verb, because the verb does not change — the last chapter's rule, arriving where it matters most.
This is the single largest shape difference between Mandarin and the languages this book's reader is likeliest to arrive from, and 了 is where a beginner first meets it. 了 is one of several aspect particles; the others come later.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 我看了书
- 我看了书你看吗
- aspect is whether it is finished; tense is when

Before you move on

Is 了 a past tense? (No — it is aspect.) What does it actually mark? (Whether the event is finished.) What settles when something happened? (A time word, not the verb.)

25.5 我看了书

The chapter closes on two strokes.

- Recall: say le — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say wǒ yǒu yí ge míngzi — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say shíyī èrshí jiǔshíjiǔ yìbǎi — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say hǎo bu hǎo — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zì — hànzì — hànyǔ — zhōngwén — zhōngguó — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say dàjiā — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

What you've built — two strokes, and time itself

Before this chapter every sentence in this book happened now. After it:

1. 我看了书 — a finished action. 了 behind the verb.
2. 我是大学生了 — a changed state. 了 at the end.
3. Neither is a tense. Mandarin marks whether, not when.

Two strokes did that. Compare the price: the verb chapter needed a character each for 看 and 书, and neither of them changed what could be said about time.
Listen. Wǒ kàn le shū. Wǒ shì dàxuéshēng le. Nǐ kàn le ma?
Speak. Say you have read the book; then say you have become a student.
Read it: 我看了书 — 有人了 — 你看了吗
Write it: 了 — the turn, then the hook

Your turn

- Say it: 我看了书
- Say it: 我是大学生了

- Say it: 你看了吗
- Write it: 了

Before you move on

Name the two slots 了 uses and what each does. (After the verb, the action is finished; at the end, the situation has changed.) Is either one a tense? (No — both are aspect.) How many strokes? (Two.)

Chapter 26

Ne and Dui

Modes: voice (2) eyes (1) pen (2) Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can hand a question back with 呢, agree with what somebody has said, and ask whether something is right.
>
> Thirteen strokes make the first two-sided exchange in this book: 吗 could ask, and until now nothing could hand the question back or agree with the answer.

26.1 呢 — 吗's shape, a different sound

A new chapter, and its first character is one you half know.

- Recall: say wǒ kàn le shū — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say le — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say kàn — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
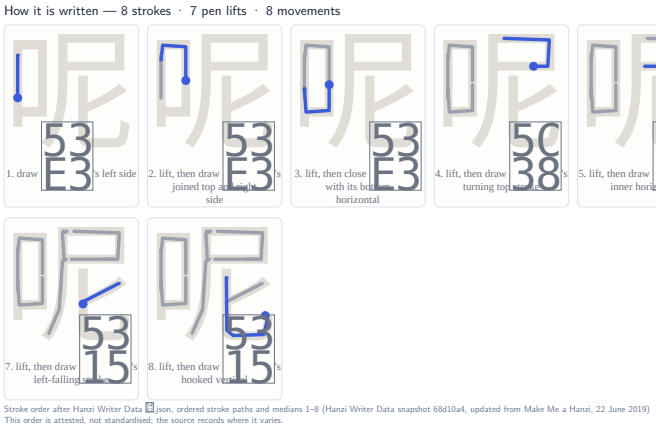
- Recall: say hǎo bu hǎo — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zì — hànzì — hànyǔ — zhōngwén — zhōngguó — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say dà — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Script — the same mouth, a different right half



How 呢 is written, stroke by stroke

呢

Eight strokes, and the first three are ones you have written since the fourth chapter.

1. 口's shù down the left side
2. 口's héngzhé across the top and down the right
3. 口's héng closing the floor

That is the same 口, in the same order, set small and high in the upper-left third of the square — exactly where 吗 puts it. Finish it before the right half starts.

Then 尼 ní, which supplies only the sound:

1. the héngzhé across the top of the right half and down at its right
2. the héng beneath it
3. the long piě, falling from the top all the way down to the lower left, past the bottom of 口
4. a short piě inside, falling left
5. the shùwāngōu, turning along the base and finishing to the right

Stroke 6 is the one that carries the character. It starts high and reaches the lower-left corner, and everything after it tucks inside.

Your turn

- Write it: 口 — then 呢, mouth first
- Cover: write 吗 and 呢 side by side and compare the left halves

Before you move on

Which three strokes open 呢? (口's — vertical, turn, floor.) Which other character starts the same way? (吗.) Which stroke is the long one? (The sixth, falling to the lower left.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 呢, pinned stroke paths and medians.

26.2 呢 — and you?

One lesson back, and the character is under your pen.

- Recall: say ne — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say le — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say wǒ shì — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say shì ma — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zì — hànzì — hànyǔ — zhōngwén — zhōngguó — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say dà — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Grammar Lens: put 呢 after a noun and it asks the last question again 呢 ne — toneless, placed after a noun or a pronoun. It repeats whatever question was on the table, about this one instead.

— 你是学生吗 — Are you a student? — 我是学生你呢 nǐ ne — I'm a student. And you?

你呢 is two syllables and a complete turn. Nothing has to be repeated:

呢 carries the whole of the previous question with it.

我是中国人你呢 我有一个名字你呢 我看了书你呢

Every one of those means something different, and 呢 is the same in all of them, because the question it asks is whichever one was already on the table.

What you've built — the second particle, and the pair

Keep 吗 and 呢 apart by what comes before them:

吗	after a whole statement	你是学生吗 — a yes-or-no question
呢	after a noun	你呢 — the last question, asked again

They cannot be swapped. 你吗 is not a question and 你是学生呢 is not the question you meant.

呢 is the second of Mandarin's particles this book has taught, and the third toneless word after 吗 and 的. A Mandarin sentence's grammar lives in words like these — small, unstressed, unchanging, and placed rather than inflected. That is what the reader is learning each time one arrives.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 呢 borrowed its character for the sound; where the particle itself comes from is not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 我是学生你呢
- 我是中国人你呢
- 你是学生吗 — 你呢 — hear the difference

Before you move on

What does 呢 do? (Asks the last question again, about somebody else.) What comes before it? (A noun — 你呢.) And what comes before 吗? (A whole statement.)

26.3 对 — five strokes, and a hand on the left

Two lessons in, and this one is short.

- Recall: say ne — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say wǒ shì dàxuéshēng le — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say shū — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say shì ma — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say zì — hànzì — hànyǔ — zhōngwén — zhōngguó — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say rén — nǚ — érzi — nǚ'ér — jiā — jiārén — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Script — a hand, and a thumb's width

How 对 is written, stroke by stroke

对

Five strokes. Two on the left, three on the right.
The left half is 又, an old picture of a hand:

1. the héngpiě — a short flat start that turns and falls to the lower left, one stroke, no lift
2. the nà, crossing it and falling to the lower right

The right half is 寸:

1. the héng across the right half
2. the long shùgōu down through it, hooking left at the foot
3. the diǎn dot, placed last, to the left of the hook

The dot is the final stroke — the same rule 的 followed. And the left half is finished before the right begins, as always.

Hold on to strokes 1 and 2. That 又 opens 欢 two chapters from now, and you will not have to learn it twice.

Your turn

- Write it: 对 — 又's two, then 寸's three, dot last
- Cover: write it again from memory

Before you move on

How many strokes does 对 have? (Five.) Which stroke is the dot? (The last.) And which later character shares its left half? (欢.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 对, pinned stroke paths and medians.

26.4 对 — right, and the sound of agreeing

One lesson back, and this word does two jobs.

- Recall: say duì — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say le — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say Zhōngguó rén — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back

- Recall: say nǐ hǎo ma — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say kàn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say jiārén — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The sounds and tones in this word

对 duì is fourth tone — the sharp fall, the same shape as 四, 六 and 个.

> 对 — Right. Correct. 不对 bú duì — Wrong. Not right. 对不对 duì bu duì — Right or not?

That last one is a shape you already own. The asking chapter taught 好不好, the verb-not-verb question, and 对不对 is the same pattern on a new word — no new grammar at all, one new syllable.
And the 不 in front of 对 rises: bú duì, not bù duì. That is the 不 sandhi the 是 chapter taught on 不是, working exactly as it did there, because 对 is fourth tone too.

Why it's said this way

On its own, 对 is what a Mandarin speaker says while somebody else is talking to show they are following and they agree. English uses right, yeah, mm; Mandarin uses 对, often doubled — 对对
Until this line, this book had no backchannel at all. You could greet, ask, count and name, and while somebody spoke to you there was nothing to say. That is not a small gap: a listener who makes no sound at all reads, in Mandarin as in English, as a listener who has not understood.

> — 你是中国人吗 — 对

Two syllables, and a whole exchange finished.
Careful with one thing. 对 agrees with a statement. It is not a general yes: asked a question with a verb in it, a Mandarin speaker answers by repeating the verb — 是 for a 是 question, 有 for a 有 question. 对 is for agreeing that what was said is so.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 对 is inherited from Middle Chinese twojH, glossed "to answer; to match" (Guangyun); "correct" is the later sense.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 对 不对 对不对
- 你是中国人吗 — 对
- 对对

Before you move on

What does 对 mean? (Right, correct.) What does it do on its own in a conversation? (Shows you are following and agree.) And how is 不对 said? (Bú duì — 不 rises before a fourth tone.)

26.5 你呢 — 对不对

The chapter closes with an exchange rather than a word.

- Recall: say duì — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say wǒ kàn le shū — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say Zhōngguó rén — shū — kàn — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say nǐ hǎo ma — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say kàn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say yán — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

What you've built — a turn each way

Two characters, thirteen strokes, and here is what they buy — a conversation that goes both ways:

— 你是学生吗 — 对你呢 — 我是大学生了 — 对对

Every line of that is short, and none of it was sayable before this chapter. 吗 could ask; nothing could hand the question back, and nothing could agree.
呢 after a noun asks the last question again. 对 agrees with a statement. 吗 after a whole statement asks a yes-or-no question. Three particles, three slots, and not one of them changes shape.
Listen. Nǐ shì xuésheng ma? — Duì. Nǐ ne?
Speak. Answer, then hand it back with 你呢.
Read it: 你是学生吗 — 对 — 你呢
Write it: 呢 — 口 first; 对 — 又 first, dot last

Your turn

- Say it: 你是学生吗 — 对你呢
- Say it: 对不对 — 对
- Write it: 呢 对

Before you move on

Which particle hands the question back? (呢, after a noun.) Which word agrees with a statement? (对.) And which one turns a statement into a question? (吗, at the end.)

Chapter 27

Age, and And

Modes: voice (1) eyes (2) pen (2) Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how old I am in a sentence with no verb in it, and join two nouns with 和 while knowing it may not join two sentences.
>
> 岁 gives the numerals their first thing to measure, and 和 is the first joining word this track has ever had — one that teaches where it may not go.

27.1 岁 — six strokes, and a rule that is not left-to-right

A new chapter, and its first character breaks a habit.

- Recall: say nǐ ne — duì bu duì — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say ne — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say de — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
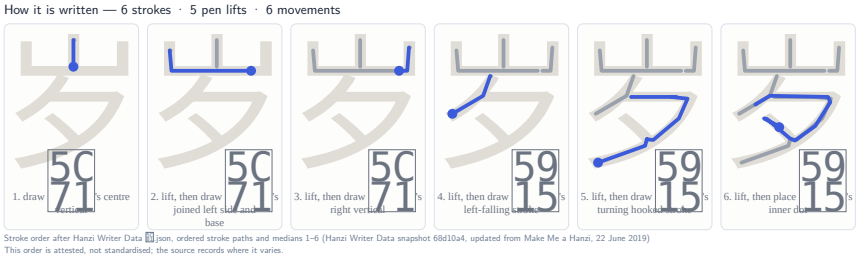
- Recall: say ma — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say kàn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say shénme — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Script — a mountain, then an evening



How 岁 is written, stroke by stroke

岁

Six strokes, three on top and three beneath.

The top is 山 shān, a mountain — and it is written in an order the rules you have been given do not predict:

1. the shù down the middle
2. the shùzhé — down the left side, then turn and run along the base
3. the shù down the right side

Centre before the sides. Every character so far has gone top before bottom and left before right, and those two rules decide almost everything in Chinese writing. 山 is where they run out, and the answer is a third rule: when a shape has a clear middle and two wings, the middle goes first.

The bottom is 夕 xī, an evening:

1. a short piě falling to the lower left
2. the héngzhégōu, turning down and falling to the lower left with a hook
3. the diǎn dot laid across it

Top before bottom holds between the halves, as always.

Your turn

- Write it: 山 — middle first, then left, then right
- Write it: 岁 — 山 on top, 夕 beneath
- Cover: write 岁 from memory

Before you move on

How many strokes does 岁 have? (Six.) Which stroke of 山 comes first? (The middle one.) What sits underneath? (夕, an evening.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 岁, pinned stroke paths and medians.

27.2 岁 — how old you are

One lesson back, and the numerals finally do something.

- Recall: say suì — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say ne — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say de — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say ma — R3, durable again, a second word from that distance
- Recall: say kàn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say shénme — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The sounds and tones in this word

岁 suì is fourth tone — the sharp fall, like 四 and 对.
It counts years of age, and only that. It is not the word for a year on a calendar.

十八岁 shíbā suì — eighteen years old 二十岁 — twenty 九十九岁 — ninety-nine

Every one of those numbers came from the decimal chapter, and until this word there was nothing for them to measure.

Grammar Lens: the sentence with no verb in it

我十八岁 wǒ shíbā suì — I am eighteen.

Say that again and listen for the verb. There is none. No 是, no anything. Subject, number, 岁, stop.
English needs am. Spanish needs tengo. Mandarin puts an age straight after the person and is finished — and putting 是 in is a mistake a beginner makes for months: 我是十八岁 is wrong.
The question is built the same way, with 吗 doing what it always does:

你十八岁吗 — are you eighteen?

And now three things this book taught separately can be said in one breath:

我是中国人 — 我有一个名字 — 我十八岁

Name, nationality, age — the three pieces of personal information any beginner's paper asks for, and the last of them was waiting on this one character.
One habit worth knowing. Mandarin asks a small child's age with one question and an adult's with another, and both need words this book has not taught yet. What this lesson gives you is the answer, which is the half you are asked for.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 岁 is inherited from Middle Chinese sjwejH, "year" (Guangyun); Unihan also gives "age".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- shíbā suì — 十八岁
- 我十八岁 — and hear that there is no verb
- 你十八岁吗

Before you move on

What does 岁 count? (Years of age.) What verb does 我十八岁 use? (None — there is no verb in it.) What is the commonest beginner's mistake here? (Putting 是 in.)

27.3 和 — eight strokes, and the right half is a mouth

Two lessons in, and three of these eight strokes are already yours.

- Recall: say suì — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say duì — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say kàn shū de rén — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
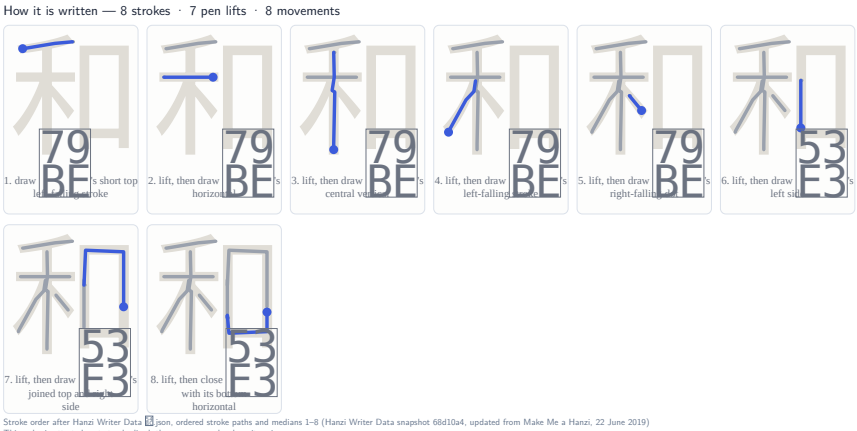
- Recall: say kàn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say me — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Script — 禾 first, then 口



How 和 is written, stroke by stroke

和

Eight strokes, five on the left and three on the right — and the three on the right are 口, which you have written since the fourth chapter.

The left half is 禾 hé, standing grain:

1. a short piě at the very top, falling left
2. the héng beneath it
3. the long shù straight down the middle
4. a piě falling to the lower left
5. a diǎn closing to the lower right

Then 口, in its usual order:

1. the shù down its left side
2. the héngzhé across the top and down the right
3. the héng closing the floor

Left half complete before the right one starts, as always.

This is a phono-semantic compound, the kind the 请 lesson named: one part carries meaning and the other carries sound. Here the sounding half is unusually generous — 禾 is itself said hé, so the character tells you its own pronunciation outright.

Your turn

- Write it: 禾 — then 和, with 口 on the right
- Cover: write 和 from memory

Before you move on

How many strokes does 和 have? (Eight — five plus 口's three.) Which half supplies the sound? (禾, which is itself hé.) Which earlier character worked the same way? (请.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 和, pinned stroke paths and medians.

27.4 和 — and, between things only

One lesson back, and this word opens a column this book has never had.

- Recall: say hé — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say duì — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say Hànyǔ, wǒ kàn shū — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say kànjiàn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say shén — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The sounds and tones in this word

和 hé is second tone — the rise, the same shape as 十 and 人.

> 你和我 nǐ hé wǒ — you and I 书和名字 — books and names 中国人和学生

It stands between the two things and joins them. Nothing agrees, nothing changes, and it is the same word however many things there are.

Grammar Lens: it joins nouns, and only nouns

> 和 joins two nouns. It does NOT join two sentences.

This is the part an English or Spanish speaker gets wrong on the first day, because in their language one word does both:

> Right: 我和你 — you and I (two nouns) Wrong: 我看书和你看书 — not Mandarin at all

English says I read and you read. Spanish says yo leo y tú lees. Mandarin will not use 和 there at all. To join two statements it puts them next to each other, with a comma and no joining word:

> 我看书 — 你看书 — I read, and you read.

Mandarin writes a comma at that seam; this book prints a dash, because it has taught no punctuation. What matters is that there is no joining word in it at all. That is not a shortcut or a casual register — it is how Mandarin does it, and the words that DO join clauses are different words for different relations, because, but, or, none of which is 和 and none of which this book has yet taught.
So 和 is the first joining word in this track, and the first thing it teaches is where it may not go.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 和 is inherited from Middle Chinese hwa, "in harmony" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); its use as "and" is a later development, usually traced through "together with".

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nǐ hé wǒ — 你和我
- 书和名字
- 我看书 — 你看书 — two sentences, no 和

Before you move on

What does 和 join? (Two nouns.) What does it never join? (Two sentences.) How does Mandarin join two statements instead? (It puts them side by side, with a comma.)

27.5 我十八岁 — 你和我

The chapter closes on two unrelated characters that each open a column.

- Recall: say hé — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say nǐ ne — duì bu duì — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say wǒ de shū — kàn shū de rén — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say kànjiàn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say wǒ shì — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

What you've built — an age, and a join

Two characters, fourteen strokes, and each one opens something the track has never had.
岁 gives the numerals something to measure. The decimal chapter reached ninety-nine and had nothing to count; 我十八岁 is the first sentence in this book that uses a number to say something true about a person — and it does it with no verb at all.
和 is the first joining word in the whole track. It joins two nouns and it refuses two sentences, and knowing the refusal is most of the lesson. Put them together with what you already have:

我是中国人 — 我有一个名字 — 我十八岁 你和我是学生

Listen. Wǒ shíbā suì. Nǐ hé wǒ shì xuésheng.
Speak. Give your age with no verb; then join two people with 和.
Read. 我十八岁 — 你和我是学生
Write. 岁 — 山 middle-first, then 夕. 和 — 禾, then 口.

Your turn

- Say it: 我十八岁
- Say it: 你和我是学生
- Write it: 岁 和

Before you move on

What verb does an age sentence use? (None.) What does 和 join, and what does it refuse? (Nouns; sentences.) Which stroke of 山 comes first? (The middle one.)

Chapter 28

Xihuan — What You Like

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) ↙ pen (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: none of the 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I like and do not like, and ask somebody else what they like.
>
> Eighteen strokes and one verb, and the liking frame every other language in this series makes a beginner turn round: in Mandarin the liker is simply the subject.

28.1 喜 — twelve strokes, stacked in four bands

A new chapter, and its first character is the tallest in the book.

- Recall: say wǒ shíbā suì — nǐ hé wǒ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say suì — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say yǒu — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say hǎokàn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say míngzi — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Script — read it downwards, in four bands

How 喜 is written, stroke by stroke

喜

Twelve strokes — more than any character you have written. Do not count them. Read the character downwards in four bands, and every band is a shape you already know.

Band one — 士, three strokes. A long héng across the top, a shù down through it, a shorter héng beneath. That is 十 with a longer bar on top.

Band two — 口, three strokes. Left side, joined top-and-right, closing floor. The same mouth as always.

Band three — two short strokes, a small pair leaning apart under the 口.

Band four — one long héng, then 口 again. Stroke 9 is the widest stroke in the character, running edge to edge, and it carries everything above it. Then the lower 口, in its usual three.

3 + 3 + 2 + 1 + 3 = twelve.

Top before bottom, all the way down. Two 口, and both of them are written the way you have written 口 since 吗.

Your turn

- Write it: 士 — 口 — the small pair — the long bar — 口

- Write it: 喜, all twelve, downwards
- Cover: write it again and count the bands, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes does 喜 have? (Twelve.) How many bands? (Four.) How many of them are 口? (Two — the middle band and the last.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 喜, pinned stroke paths and medians.

28.2 欢 — six strokes, and two of them are already yours

One lesson back, and this one is short by comparison.

- Recall: say xǐ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say suì — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say yǒu — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say hǎokàn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say zì — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

Script — 又 again, then 欠

How 欢 is written, stroke by stroke

欢

Six strokes, and the first two are ones you wrote one chapter ago. The left half is 又, the hand:

1. the héngpiě — a short flat start that turns and falls to the lower left
2. the nà, crossing it and falling to the lower right

That is exactly how 对 begins. Same pair, same order, same place in the square.

The right half is 欠 qiàn, a person with an open mouth:

1. a short piě at the top, falling left
2. the hénggōu — a horizontal that hooks down at its end
3. the long piě, falling from under the hook to the lower left
4. the nà, falling to the lower right and reaching furthest of all

Strokes 5 and 6 are the character's legs, and they must both reach out. Cramped, 欢 looks like something else; spread, it is unmistakable.

After 喜's twelve, six will feel like nothing.

Your turn

- Write it: 又 — the two strokes that also open 对
- Write it: 欢, all six
- Cover: write 对 and 欢 side by side and check the left halves match

Before you move on

How many strokes does 欢 have? (Six.) Which character shares its left half? (对.) Which two strokes are the legs? (The fifth and sixth — both must reach out.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 欢, pinned stroke paths and medians.

28.3 喜欢 — what you like

Two characters in, and now they say something.

- Recall: say huān — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say hé — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say gè — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say kàn — kànjiàn — hǎokàn — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say míng — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

The sounds and tones in this word

喜欢 is xǐhuan — third tone, then nothing.
喜 is third tone, the dip. 欢 is first tone on its own — but inside this word it loses its tone altogether and goes light: xǐ-huan, not xǐ-huān. That is the same thing 早上 does to 上, and 名字 to 字.
Say it once slowly and once at speed: xǐ huan.

Grammar Lens: the liker is the subject, and that is all person + 喜欢 + the thing liked.

我喜欢看书 wǒ xǐhuan kàn shū — I like reading. 我喜欢中国 — I like China. 你喜欢汉语吗 — do you like Chinese?

That is an ordinary sentence with an ordinary verb and an ordinary object, and saying so is the point. Spanish and Italian make a beginner turn the sentence round: Spanish says me gusta el libro — "the book pleases me" — and Italian says mi piace, with the liker in an object slot and the thing liked as the subject. Learners spend weeks on it. Mandarin asks nothing of you here. The person who likes goes in front, the verb does not change, and the thing liked follows. It is the same shape as 我看书.
And 不 works on it normally, which 有 did not:

我不喜欢看书 — I don't like reading.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 喜欢 is a Chinese compound of two words for joy, both inherited from Middle Chinese: xiX, "glad", and xwan, "joy" (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- xǐhuan — 喜欢, and let 欢 go light
- 我喜欢看书
- 我不喜欢看书

Before you move on

What tones does 喜欢 carry? (Third, then none — 欢 goes light.)
Who goes in front of it? (The person who likes — no inversion.)
Does 不 negate it normally? (Yes — 我不喜欢.)

28.4 你喜欢什么 — what do you like?

Four in, and this lesson joins two chapters that never met.

- Recall: say xǐhuan — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say hé — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say gè — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say shū — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say wǒ — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

You'll want to know: the question, and where 什么 sits 你喜欢什么 nǐ xǐhuan shénme — what do you like?

Four words, and all of them were already in the book except 喜欢.

Now notice where 什么 is. It is at the END, in exactly the slot the answer would occupy:

— 你喜欢什么 — what do you like? — 我喜欢书 — I like books.

Mandarin does not move a question word. English hauls what to the front and reshuffles everything behind it — you like what becomes what do you like, with a do invented on the way. Mandarin leaves 什么 exactly where the answer goes and changes nothing else. Question and answer have the same shape, word for word.

That is why no 吗 is needed here. 吗 makes a yes-or-no question; a sentence that already contains 什么 is a question, and adding 吗 would be wrong.

你喜欢汉语吗 — do you like Chinese? (yes or no) 你喜欢什么 — what do you like? (name it)

And the whole exchange, with the particle from the last chapter:

— 你喜欢什么 — 我喜欢看书你呢

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of Chinese built the question from words it already had: nǐ, xǐhuan, from Middle Chinese xiX and xwan, and shénme, whose origin is not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 你喜欢什么
- 我喜欢看书你呢
- 你喜欢汉语吗 — and hear why this one needs 吗

Before you move on

Where does 什么 stand? (Where the answer goes — at the end.) Does Mandarin move it to the front? (No — nothing moves.) Why is there no 吗? (A sentence with 什么 in it is already a question.)

28.5 我喜欢看书

The last chapter of the tranche closes here.

- Recall: say nǐ xǐhuan shénme — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say wǒ shíbā suì — nǐ hé wǒ — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say wǒ yǒu yí ge míngzi — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say shū — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more
- Recall: say wǒ — R4, recognition at distance, a second word from that far back

What you've built — liking, said plainly

Two characters, eighteen strokes, one verb — and with it a whole area of talk this book could not enter:

> 我喜欢看书 — I like reading. 我不喜欢看书 — I don't. 你喜欢什么 — what do you like? 你喜欢汉语吗 — do you like Chinese?

Nothing there is inverted, nothing agrees, nothing moves. The liker is the subject; the thing liked is the object; 什么 stands where the answer stands. Spanish and Italian both make you turn that round; Mandarin does not.
And now the whole tranche can be said in one breath, because every piece of it is yours:

> 我是中国人 — 我十八岁 — 我有一个名字 — 我喜欢看书 — 你呢

Listen. Wǒ xǐhuan kàn shū. Nǐ xǐhuan shénme?
Speak. Say what you like; ask what the other person likes; hand it back with 你呢.

Read it: 我喜欢看书 — 你喜欢什么
Write it: 喜 — four bands, twelve strokes; 欢 — 又, then 欠

Your turn

- Say it: 我喜欢看书 我不喜欢看书
- Say it: 你喜欢什么 — 我喜欢书你呢
- Write it: 喜 欢

Before you move on

Say "I like reading." (我喜欢看书.) Where does 什么 go in the question? (At the end, where the answer goes.) And what does Mandarin ask you to turn round here? (Nothing at all.)

Chapter 29

Reading — Characters, Words, and a First Passage

Modes: eyes (3) Hands-free start: none of the 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read a Chinese character cold, find where a word ends when nothing marks it, and hold a whole passage without translating it character by character.
>
> Thirty-four characters in a row with no new character in them, including the first line in the book whose meaning depends on the lines before it.

29.1 (reading) — six characters, nothing said first

You have written every one of these. Not one is new.

What is new is that nobody is going to say them first.

Read this

人 书 看 有 和 十

Read down the list once. Do not count strokes — look at the whole character and let it arrive.
Again, and notice which came at once and which you had to take apart. Both are fine. The difference is what practice removes.

What to know first

In an alphabet a single letter is almost never a word. Here every one of these six is.

That changes what reading is. There is no sounding out: a character either lands whole or it does not land, and the only thing that moves it from the second to the first is having met it before.

Six is enough for one sitting, because six is already six words.

Your turn

- Say it: the six characters down the list, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
How many of them are whole words? (All six.)

29.2 (reading) — six words, not six characters

The last lesson gave you six characters that were each a word. These are six words that are not each a character.

Every character in them is still one you have written.

Read this

中国人 我的书 看书的人 一个 十八岁 喜欢

Read it: the six words down once, without stopping
Read it: the six words again, and this time notice there is nothing between the characters
No space tells you where one word ends.

What to know first

看书的人 is four characters and one idea: the person who reads. You know all four, and knowing them is not the same as seeing where the join falls.

That is the work this lesson does. Mandarin writes no spaces, so a reader has to decide where a word ends, and the only tool for it is having met the word before.

喜欢 is the clearest case: two characters that mean nothing apart, and to like together.

Your turn

- Say it: the six words down the list, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many characters are in 看书的人? (Four.) How many words? (One.)
What tells you where a word ends? (Nothing on the page — only having met it.)

29.3 (reading) — the first passage

Six characters, then six words. Now ten lines.

Thirty-four characters, and not one of them is new.

Read this

我是中国人 我有一个名字 我看书 我喜欢看书 我十八岁 你呢 对不对 你好 谢谢 再见

Read it: the passage through once without stopping; do not translate as you go
Read it: the passage again, and this time notice that the passage turns at line six
The first five are about the writer. The last five are addressed to you.

What to know first

你呢 is two characters and does the work of a whole English sentence: and what about you? It only means that because of the five lines before it, which is the first time this book has asked a line to depend on what came earlier.

我十八岁 has no verb in it at all. Mandarin states an age by putting the number and 岁 straight after the person, and a reader who waits for a verb waits forever.

This is the first whole passage the book has asked you to hold at once, and it works because every character was paid for.

Your turn

- Say it: the passage aloud, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

Which line depends on the five before it? (你呢)
Which line has no verb? (我十八岁 — and it needs none.)

Chapter 30

How Are You?

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 2 of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how somebody is and answer that I am fine, busy, tired or so-so.
>
> The everyday way to ask how somebody is, and four answers to it, built on one new written character: 很, the plain link Mandarin puts in front of an adjective.

30.1 zěnmeyàng — how are you doing?

A new chapter, and it opens with a question you can ask anybody you know.

- Recall: say nǐ ne — R1, the line that turned the passage one lesson back
- Recall: say nǐ xǐhuan shénme — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say wǒ yǒu yí ge míngzi — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say zǎoshang hǎo — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The sounds and tones in this word

zěnmeyàng — a dip, a light syllable, then a fall.
zěn is third tone. me is the same toneless syllable that ends 什么. yàng is fourth tone, and it carries the weight of the word.

nǐ zěnmeyàng — How are you doing?

Say it once slowly and once at speed: zěn me yàng.

Why it's said this way

You already have 你好吗 nǐ hǎo ma, and it is correct. It is the question textbooks open with.
Between people who know each other, the one you will hear far more often is nǐ zěnmeyàng: "how are things with you?" On its own, zěnmeyàng asks how something is, and putting 你 in front makes the something you.
So keep both. 你好吗 is the careful one; nǐ zěnmeyàng is the one a friend asks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of Mandarin builds zěnmeyàng from three syllables. me is the light 么 from 什么, a character you know. The characters for zěn and yàng come later; this chapter keeps them to the ear.

No dictionary we use records an older form of zěn or yàng, so the history of the word is not settled, and where 么 comes from is not settled either.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- zěnmeyàng — dip, light, fall
- nǐ zěnmeyàng
- 你好吗, then the everyday one, nǐ zěnmeyàng

Before you move on

What tones does zěnmeyàng carry? (Third, none, fourth.) Which question would a friend ask you? (nǐ zěnmeyàng — 你好吗 is the one textbooks open with.)

30.2 很 — the word in front of an adjective

The question is in place. This lesson gives you the word every answer needs.

- Recall: say nǐ zěnmeyàng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say xǐhuan — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say wǒ de shū — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say hǎo — R4, recognition at distance, the first word in this book

The sounds and tones in this word

很 is hěn — third tone, the dip, the same as 好.
Its pieces, in words: on the left, the person piece from 你 with one more left-falling stroke above it; on the right, a piece read gěn. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

Grammar Lens: no 是, and a plain 很 instead

我很好 wǒ hěn hǎo — I'm fine.

In Mandarin an adjective is the whole predicate: there is no 是 in "I am fine", and a plain 很 stands in front of 好 instead. Here 很 has lost most of its very, so 我很好 is "I'm fine", while a bare 我好 sounds like the start of a contrast — I am fine, but somebody else is not.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 很 is an old character: the Guangyun records it as honX (in Baxter's transcription), glossed "defiant". How that word came to mean "very" is not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hěn — dip it

- 我很好
- nǐ zěnmeyàng — 我很好

Before you move on

Does 是 go in front of an adjective? (No — a plain 很 does.)
What does 我很好 mean? (I'm fine — 很 has lost most of its very.)

30.3 很 — nine strokes, two pieces

Three characters first, read cold, before the new piece arrives.

- Recall: say hěn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say shíbā suì — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say yǒu — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back

人 亻 你

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rén, the person piece, nǐ

Script — two pieces, left before right

How 很 is written, stroke by stroke

很

Nine strokes, but two pieces. Do not count to nine. Read the character across, left piece first, the way you write 你.

The left piece, 彳, three strokes. Its lower two are the person piece 亻 you have written since 你: a left-falling stroke, then a vertical down to the foot. 彳 adds one more short left-falling stroke above them. So: a short fall, a longer fall, then the vertical.

The right piece, 艮, six strokes. A horizontal that turns down the right side of a box without lifting. A short horizontal inside it. A horizontal that closes the box. Then the left side, down to the foot, flicking up to the right. A short left-falling stroke on the right, and last the long right-falling stroke.

3 + 6 = nine, and the first three are a shape your hand already knows.

Your turn

- Write it: 亻, then 彳 — the same two strokes with one more fall above them
- Write it: 很, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes does 很 have? (Nine.) How many pieces? (Two — 彳, then 艮.) Which piece is the person piece with one stroke added? (彳, on the left.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 很, pinned stroke paths and medians.

30.4 很好 — I'm fine

Nine strokes in your hand. Now they become an answer.

- Recall: say hěn — R1, the character one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say duì — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back

- Recall: say nǐ hǎo — R4, recognition at distance, the first word in this book

The sounds and tones in this word

很好 is hěn hǎo — two third tones side by side.
You met this in the first chapter with 你好, and the same rule fires again: the first of the two rises. Spoken, it is hén hǎo. Written, it stays hěn hǎo, and the characters do not change at all.
Say it slowly once, then at speed, and let 很 rise into 好.

Why it's said this way

我很好 wǒ hěn hǎo — I'm fine.

That is the answer to nǐ zěnmeyàng and to 你好吗. It means "I'm fine", not "I'm very well": 很 is there because 好 is an adjective and wants it in front. Put weight on 很, and the very comes back.

Read this

我很好你呢

Five characters, and nothing on the page marks where one word stops. Find the words before reading on.
我 — 很好 — 你 — 呢. Four words; 很好 is the only one with two characters.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 很好 is built from 很 and 好. 好 is inherited from Middle Chinese xawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); 很 is the character the Guangyun records as honX, "defiant", and how it came to mean "very" is not settled.

Your turn

- Say it: hén hǎo — let the first one rise
- Say it: nǐ zěnmeyàng — 我很好
- Write it: 很好

Before you move on

Which of the two syllables in 很好 rises when you say it? (The first, 很.)

30.5 máng — busy

One answer so far. This lesson adds a second, and it is not "fine".

- Recall: say wǒ hěn hǎo — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say nǐ zěnmeyàng — R2, the question that opened this chapter
- Recall: say yǒu — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say zǎoshang — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The sounds and tones in this word

máng — second tone, rising, like a surprised "huh?". Its character comes later; this chapter keeps it to the ear.

Grammar Lens: the same shape as 我很好 máng is an adjective, so it works exactly like 好: no 是, a plain 很 in front.

> wǒ hěn máng — I'm busy. zǎoshang wǒ hěn máng — I'm busy in the mornings.

zǎoshang goes first, before the person: the time is what the sentence is about, then comes what happens in it.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of máng is probably inherited from Middle Chinese mang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), where it is glossed "afraid". Flustered becoming busy is a likely path for the sense, but it is not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- máng — let it rise
- wǒ hěn máng
- zǎoshang wǒ hěn máng

Before you move on

What tone is máng? (Second, rising.) What goes in front of it? (A plain 很, as in front of 好.) Where does zǎoshang go? (First, before the person.)

30.6 lèi — tired

Busy all morning, and now you are tired. You step into a lift, and the panel reads:

九

Say it: jiǔ — the ninth floor, read off the wall, the way you first read floor numbers

- Recall: say máng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say xǐhuan — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say yí ge — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back

The sounds and tones in this word

lèi — fourth tone, a short clean fall. Its character comes later; this chapter keeps it to the ear.

Grammar Lens: a statement, then 吗 lèi is an adjective too. Ask with 吗 on the end, and answer with 很:

nǐ lèi ma — Are you tired? wǒ hěn lèi — I'm tired.

The question is the statement with 吗 added; nothing moves.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

The character for lèi is in the Guangyun, read ljweX and ljweH (Baxter's transcription), but glossed "accumulate" and "implicate". "Tired" is not among its senses there, so how the word came to mean it is not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- lèi — fall
- nǐ lèi ma
- wǒ hěn lèi

Before you move on

What tone is lèi? (Fourth, falling.) How do you ask "are you tired?" (nǐ lèi ma — the statement, then 吗.) And the lift panel? (九, jiǔ.)

30.7 hái xíng — not bad

Fine, busy, tired. Most days are none of those, and this lesson is for them.

- Recall: say lèi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say duì — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say nǐ hé wǒ — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say bù — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

Read this

早上好 你好吗 我很好 你呢

Read it: the three lines aloud as one exchange, without stopping between them
The last line hands the question back. This lesson gives you a third way to answer it.

The sounds and tones in this word

hái xíng — two rising tones.
hái is "still"; xíng is "OK, it works". Together: "still OK" — not bad. Its characters come later; this chapter keeps the word to the ear.

hái xíng, nǐ ne — Not bad. And you?

Why it's said this way

很好 says things are good. hái xíng says they are all right, and it is the answer people give when they are not going to complain. Said with a shrug, it can mean "could be better".

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hái xíng is built from hái "still" and xíng "all right". Both characters are in the Guangyun (Baxter's transcription): the one for hái as hwaen, "return", and the one for xíng as haeng, "walk, go". How they came to mean "still" and "all right" is not settled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- hái xíng — rise, rise
- hái xíng, nǐ ne

Before you move on

What tones does hái xíng carry? (Two rising tones.) Which answer is between hěn hǎo and hěn lèi? (hái xíng — not bad.)

30.8 nǐ zěnmeyàng — wǒ hěn hǎo

The chapter closes here, with a whole exchange.

- Recall: say hái xíng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays
- Recall: say wǒ xǐhuan kàn shū — R2, the first real retrieval, five to fifteen lessons back
- Recall: say wǒ shì zhōngguórén — R3, durable, twenty to sixty lessons back
- Recall: say zǎoshang hǎo — R4, recognition at distance, eighty lessons back or more

The exchange

A: 早上好

zǎoshang hǎo — good morning.

B: 早上好 — nǐ zěnmeyàng

zǎoshang hǎo, nǐ zěnmeyàng — good morning. How are you doing?

A: 我很好 你呢

wǒ hěn hǎo, nǐ ne — I'm fine. And you?

B: hái xíng, wǒ hěn máng — not bad. I'm busy.

A: nǐ lèi ma — are you tired?

B: hěn lèi, zàijiàn — I am. Goodbye.

A: 再见

zàijiàn — goodbye.

The words whose characters this book has not written yet stay in pinyin; you know them by ear, and here the ear carries them. The morning greeting is one of the first things this book gave you, and this is the first exchange to carry on past it.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — four answers to one question

One question, nǐ zěnmeyàng, and four answers, every one of them with a plain 很 or none at all:

- wǒ hěn hǎo — I'm fine.
- hái xíng — not bad.
- wǒ hěn máng — I'm busy.
- wǒ hěn lèi — I'm tired.

Listen. Nǐ zěnmeyàng?
Speak. Answer it four ways, then hand it back with 你呢.
Write it: 很 — 彳 first, then 艮

Your turn

- Say it: nǐ zěnmeyàng — then answer with hái xíng
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 我很好

Before you move on

Ask a friend how they are doing. (nǐ zěnmeyàng.) Say you are fine. (我很好 — and 很 rises into 好.) What goes in front of an adjective? (A plain 很, and no 是.)

Chapter 31

He, She and We

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say he, she, we, you all and they.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 31: I can say he, she, we, you all and they.

31.1 tā — she; her

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tired, then the Mandarin for not bad.

You'll want to know: tā

tā — "she; her".

> tā shì wǒ de tóngxué — She's a classmate of mine.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tā sounds exactly like the word for he. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: tā
- Say it: tā, once more
- Say it: tā shì wǒ de tóngxué — She's a classmate of mine.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tired, then the Mandarin for not bad, then say tā again

Before you move on

What does tā mean? ("She; her".) Say it once more.

31.2 他 (tā) — he; him

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for not bad, then the Mandarin for she.

You'll want to know: 他

他 — tā — "he; him".

他是我的儿子 tā shì wǒ de érzi — He's my son.

The new character, in pieces: 他 — the person piece from 你 on the left, and on the right a three-stroke shape read yě. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 他 (tā) is inherited from Middle Chinese tha (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses it 'not I', the other person, and calls this the everyday form of the character. From somebody other than me to he is the usual explanation, but the step itself is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: tā
- Say it: tā, once more
- Say it: tā shì wǒ de érzi — He's my son.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for not bad, then the Mandarin for she, then say tā again

Before you move on

What does 他 mean? ("He; him".) Say it once more.

31.3 他 — the person piece, then yě

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say tā — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

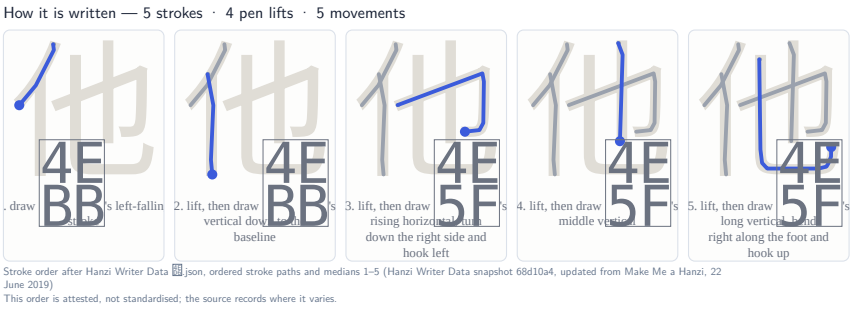
  亻 你

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — the person piece, nǐ

Script — the person piece, then yě



How 他 is written, stroke by stroke

他

Two pieces, left before right. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The left piece, 亻, two strokes. The same two as in 你: a left-falling stroke, then a vertical down to the foot.

The right piece, three strokes, read yě. A horizontal that runs right, turns down and hooks. A short vertical through the middle of it. Then a long vertical that bends right along the bottom and hooks up at the end.

2 + 3 = five, and the first two your hand already knows.

Your turn

- Write it: 他, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes does 他 have? (Five.) Which piece comes first? (亻, the person piece, on the left.) How does the last stroke end? (It runs along the bottom and hooks up.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 他, pinned stroke paths and medians.

31.4 他们 (tāmen) — they; them

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for she, then the Mandarin for he.

You'll want to know: 他们

他们 — tāmen — "they; them".

他们是中国人 tāmen shì Zhōngguó rén — They're Chinese.

The new character, in pieces: 们 — the person piece on the left again, and on the right a three-stroke piece read mén, the word for door, which gives the sound. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 他们 (tāmen) is built from 他 'he' and the plural ending men, which goes on words for people. No dictionary we use records an older form of the ending, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: tāmen
- Say it: tāmen, once more
- Say it: tāmen shì Zhōngguó rén — They're Chinese.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for she, then the Mandarin for he, then say tāmen again

Before you move on

What does 他们 mean? ("They; them".) Say it once more.

31.5 们 — the person piece, then a doorway

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say tāmen — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

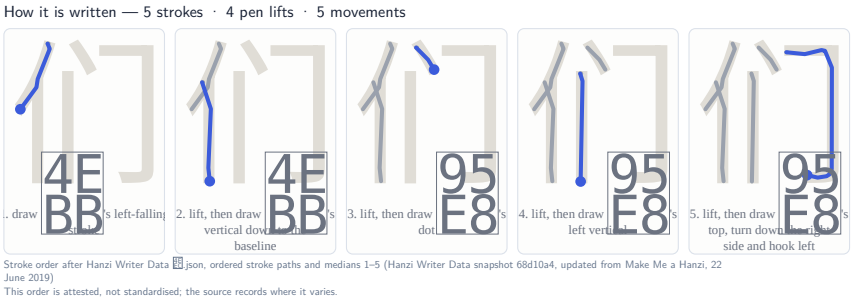
  他 你

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — tā, nǐ

Script — the person piece, then a doorway



How 们 is written, stroke by stroke

们

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, 亻, two strokes, exactly as in 他 and 你.

The right piece, a doorway, three strokes. A dot at the top left. A vertical down the left side. Then a horizontal across the top that turns down the right side and hooks in at the foot.

2 + 3 = five. The doorway is read mén, and alone it is the word for door; here it gives 们 its sound and loses its tone.

Your turn

- Write it: 们, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 们? (Two — 亻, then the doorway.) Which stroke of the doorway comes first? (The dot.) Which other character opens with the same two strokes? (他, and 你.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 们, pinned stroke paths and medians.

31.6 我们 (wǒmen) — we; us

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for he, then the Mandarin for they.

You'll want to know: 我们

我们 — wǒmen — "we; us".

wǒmen hái xíng — We're doing all right.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 我们 (wǒmen) is built from 我 'I' and the plural ending men. 我 is inherited from Middle Chinese ngaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary glosses as what you call yourself; no dictionary we use records an older form of the ending, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: wǒmen
- Say it: wǒmen, once more
- Say it: wǒmen hái xíng — We're doing all right.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for he, then the Mandarin for they, then say wǒmen again

Before you move on

What does 我们 mean? ("We; us".) Say it once more.

31.7 你们 (nǐmen) — you all; you (more than one)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for they, then the Mandarin for we.

You'll want to know: 你们

你们 — nǐmen — "you all; you (more than one)".

nǐmen zěnmeyàng — How are you all doing?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 你们 (nǐmen) is built from 你 'you' and the plural ending men. No dictionary we use records an older form of either, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: nǐmen
- Say it: nǐmen, once more
- Say it: nǐmen zěnmeyàng — How are you all doing?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for they, then the Mandarin for we, then say nǐmen again

Before you move on

What does 你们 mean? ("You all; you (more than one)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 32

Mum and Dad

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my parents, brothers and sisters.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 32: I can name my parents, brothers and sisters.

32.1 妈妈 (māma) — mum; mother

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for we, then the Mandarin for you all.

You'll want to know: 妈妈

妈妈 — māma — "mum; mother".

> 我妈妈很好 wǒ māma hěn hǎo — My mum is well.

The new character, in pieces: 妈 — 女, the woman piece, on the left, and on the right a three-stroke piece read mǎ, the word for horse, which gives the sound as it does in 吗. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 妈妈 (māma) is written with a character the Guangyun records as muX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'mother'. The modern sound is not what muX would regularly become, so whether mā is inherited from it, or is a nursery word written with this character, is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: māma
- Say it: māma, once more
- Say it: wǒ māma hěn hǎo — My mum is well.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for we, then the Mandarin for you all, then say māma again

Before you move on

What does 妈妈 mean? ("Mum; mother".) Say it once more.

32.2 妈 — the woman piece, then a horse

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say māma — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

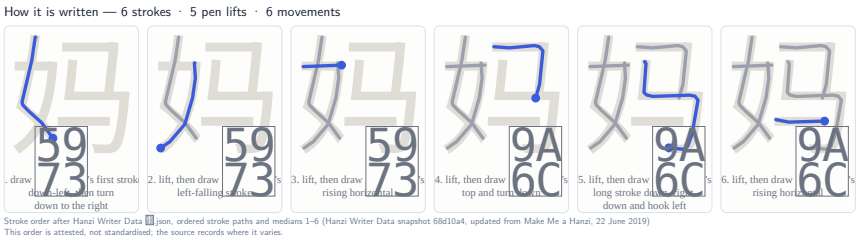
女 吗

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — nǚ, ma

Script — the woman piece, then a horse



How 妈 is written, stroke by stroke

妈

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, 女, three strokes, as you wrote it alone, but narrow: the fold that drops and turns, the long left-falling stroke, and last the horizontal, which here rises to the right so it does not cross into the next piece.

The right piece, the horse, three strokes. A horizontal that turns down. A vertical that folds right, folds down again and hooks at the foot. Then a rising stroke across the bottom.

3 + 3 = six. The same horse stands on the right of 吗, which is why the two sound alike.

Your turn

- Write it: 妈, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 妈? (Two — 女, then the horse.) What does the last stroke of 女 do here? (It rises to the right.) Which character you know has the same right piece? (吗.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 妈, pinned stroke paths and medians.

32.3 bàba — dad; father

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for you all, then the Mandarin for mum.

You'll want to know: bàba

bàba — "dad; father".

wǒ bàba xǐhuan kàn shū — My dad likes reading.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bàba is inherited from Middle Chinese baX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), where the character is glossed 'father'. Spoken, it is doubled, like the word for mum.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: bàba
- Say it: bàba, once more
- Say it: wǒ bàba xǐhuan kàn shū — My dad likes reading.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for you all, then the Mandarin for mum, then say bàba again

Before you move on

What does bàba mean? ("Dad; father".) Say it once more.

32.4 gēge — elder brother

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for mum, then the Mandarin for dad.

You'll want to know: gēge

gēge — "elder brother".

wǒ yǒu yí ge gēge — I've got an older brother.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gēge is inherited from Middle Chinese ka (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary notes that the character was once written for 'song', and that in its own day people used it to call an elder brother.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: gēge
- Say it: gēge, once more
- Say it: wǒ yǒu yí ge gēge — I've got an older brother.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for mum, then the Mandarin for dad, then say gēge again

Before you move on

What does gēge mean? ("Elder brother".) Say it once more.

32.5 jiějie — elder sister

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for dad, then the Mandarin for elder brother.

You'll want to know: jiějie

jiějie — "elder sister".

wǒ jiějie shì dàxuésheng — My older sister is at university.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiějie is inherited from Middle Chinese tsjaeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), where it is glossed as the word one people used for mother. How it came to mean elder sister is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: jiějie
- Say it: jiějie, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiějie shì dàxuésheng — My older sister is at university.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for dad, then the Mandarin for elder brother, then say jiějie again

Before you move on

What does jiějie mean? ("Elder sister".) Say it once more.

32.6 dìdi — younger brother

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for elder brother, then the Mandarin for elder sister.

You'll want to know: dìdi

dìdi — "younger brother".

wǒ dìdi bā suì — My little brother is eight.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dìdi is inherited from Middle Chinese dejX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains as the brother born later.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: dìdi
- Say it: dìdi, once more

- Say it: wǒ dìdi bā suì — My little brother is eight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for elder brother, then the Mandarin for elder sister, then say dìdi again

Before you move on

What does dìdi mean? ("Younger brother".) Say it once more.

Chapter 33

The Rest of the Family

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about men, women, sisters and children.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 33: I can talk about men, women, sisters and children.

33.1 男 (nán) — male

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for elder sister, then the Mandarin for younger brother.

You'll want to know: 男

男 — nán — "male".

> 我有一个男同学 wǒ yǒu yí ge nán tóngxué — One of my classmates is a boy.

The new character, in pieces: 男 — a field on top, built like 日 with a cross inside, and below it a two-stroke piece meaning strength. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 男 (nán) is inherited from Middle Chinese nom (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a man'.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: nán
- Say it: nán, once more
- Say it: wǒ yǒu yí ge nán tóngxué — One of my classmates is a boy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for elder sister, then the Mandarin for younger brother, then say nán again

Before you move on

What does 男 mean? ("Male".) Say it once more.

33.2 男 — a field above, strength below

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say nán — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  日 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rì, kǒu

Script — a field above, strength below

How 男 is written, stroke by stroke

男

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The top piece, a field, five strokes. A vertical down the left. A horizontal across the top that turns down the right side. The short horizontal across the middle. The short vertical down the middle. Then the horizontal that closes the bottom. It is 日 with a cross inside instead of a single bar.

The bottom piece, strength, two strokes. A horizontal that turns down and hooks to the left, then a long left-falling stroke through it.

5 + 2 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 男, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 男? (Two — the field, then strength.) Which character you know does the field look like? (日, with a cross inside.) Which stroke closes the field? (The bottom horizontal,

the fifth.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 男, pinned stroke paths and medians.

33.3 男人 (nánrén) — man

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for younger brother, then the Mandarin for male.

You'll want to know: 男人

男人 — nánrén — "man".

我家有三个男人 wǒ jiā yǒu sān ge nánrén — There are three men in my family.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 男人 (nánrén) is built from 男 'male' and 人 'person', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nom and nyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: nánrén
- Say it: nánrén, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā yǒu sān ge nánrén — There are three men in my family.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for younger brother, then the Mandarin for male, then say nánrén again

Before you move on

What does 男人 mean? ("Man".) Say it once more.

33.4 女人 (nǚrén) — woman

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for male, then the Mandarin for man.

You'll want to know: 女人

女人 — nǚrén — "woman".

我家有四个女人 wǒ jiā yǒu sì ge nǚrén — There are four women in my family.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 女人 (nǚrén) is built from 女 'female' and 人 'person', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nrjoX and nyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: nǚrén
- Say it: nǚrén, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā yǒu sì ge nǚrén — There are four women in my family.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for male, then the Mandarin for man, then say nǚrén again

Before you move on

What does 女人 mean? ("Woman".) Say it once more.

33.5 mèimei — younger sister

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for man, then the Mandarin for woman.

You'll want to know: mèimei

mèimei — "younger sister".

> wǒ mèimei shì xiǎoxuésheng — My little sister is at primary school.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of mèimei is inherited from Middle Chinese mwojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), where it is glossed with the word for sisters.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: mèimei
- Say it: mèimei, once more
- Say it: wǒ mèimei shì xiǎoxuésheng — My little sister is at primary school.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for man, then the Mandarin for woman, then say mèimei again

Before you move on

What does mèimei mean? ("Younger sister".) Say it once more.

33.6 háizi — child

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for woman, then the Mandarin for younger sister.

You'll want to know: háizi

háizi — "child".

> tāmen yǒu sān ge háizi — They have three children.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of háizi is built from hái 'child' and the noun ending zi. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese hoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a newborn child'; the ending is tsiX, 'child', the same piece as the one in 儿子.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: háizi
- Say it: háizi, once more
- Say it: tāmen yǒu sān ge háizi — They have three children.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for woman, then the Mandarin for younger sister, then say háizi again

Before you move on

What does háizi mean? ("Child".) Say it once more.

Chapter 34

What You Are Called

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask somebody's name and family name, politely too.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 34: I can ask somebody's name and family name, politely too.

34.1 叫 (jiào) — to be called; to call

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for younger sister, then the Mandarin for child.

You'll want to know: 叫

叫 — jiào — "to be called; to call".

> 你叫什么名字 nǐ jiào shénme míngzi — What's your name?

The new character, in pieces: 叫 — 口, the mouth piece, small on the left, and on the right two strokes: one that flicks up, and a long vertical. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 叫 (jiào) is inherited from Middle Chinese kewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to call out'. The sense 'to be named' is not given there; from calling a person to what a person is called is a likely step, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: jiào
- Say it: jiào, once more
- Say it: nǐ jiào shénme míngzi — What's your name?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for younger sister, then the Mandarin for child, then say jiào again

Before you move on

What does 叫 mean? ("To be called; to call".) Say it once more.

34.2 叫 — a small mouth, then two strokes

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say jiào — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

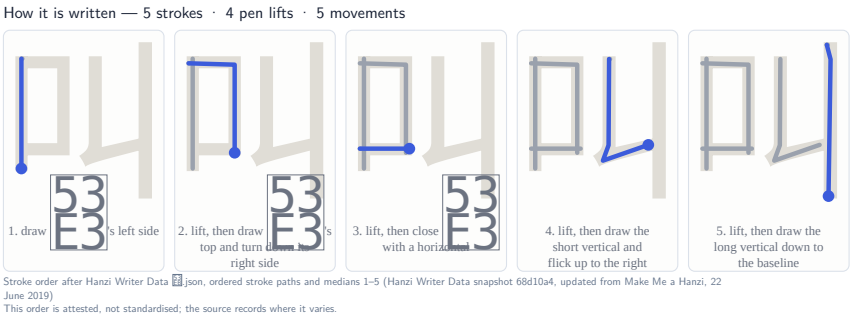
  口 吗

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kǒu, ma

Script — a small mouth, then two strokes



How 叫 is written, stroke by stroke

叫

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, 口, three strokes, as in 吗, small and set a little high: the left side, the top that turns down the right, the bottom that closes it.

The right piece, two strokes. A vertical that flicks up to the right at the foot. Then a long vertical, the tallest stroke in the character.

3 + 2 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 叫, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 叫? (Two — 口, then two strokes.) Which character you know has the same small 口 on the left? (吗.) Which stroke is last? (The long vertical.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 叫, pinned stroke paths and medians.

34.3 nín — you (polite)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for child, then the Mandarin for to be called.

You'll want to know: nín

nín — "you (polite)".

nín jiào shénme míngzi — May I ask your name?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nín is the polite form of 你, for older people and strangers. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: nín
- Say it: nín, once more
- Say it: nín jiào shénme míngzi — May I ask your name?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for child, then the Mandarin for to be called, then say nín again

Before you move on

What does nín mean? ("You (polite)".) Say it once more.

34.4 xìng — to have the family name; family name

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be called, then the Mandarin for you (polite).

You'll want to know: xìng

xìng — "to have the family name; family name".

nǐ xìng shénme — What's your family name?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xìng is inherited from Middle Chinese sjengH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'clan name'.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: xìng
- Say it: xìng, once more
- Say it: nǐ xìng shénme — What's your family name?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be called, then the Mandarin for you (polite), then say xìng again

Before you move on

What does xìng mean? ("To have the family name; family name".) Say it once more.

34.5 rènshi — to know someone; to recognise

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for you (polite), then the Mandarin for to have the family name.

You'll want to know: rènshi

rènshi — "to know someone; to recognise".

wǒ rènshi tā — I know him.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of rènshi is built from two old words for knowing, both inherited from Middle Chinese: nyinH, which the Guangyun glosses with the second, and syik, 'to know' (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: rènshi
- Say it: rènshi, once more
- Say it: wǒ rènshi tā — I know him.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for you (polite), then the Mandarin for to have the family name, then say rènshi again

Before you move on

What does rènshi mean? ("To know someone; to recognise".) Say it once more.

34.6 péngyou — friend

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have the family name, then the Mandarin for to know someone.

You'll want to know: péngyou

péngyou — "friend".

tā shì wǒ de péngyou — He's a friend of mine.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of péngyou is built from two words for companions, both inherited from Middle Chinese: bong 'a band of companions' and hjuwX 'friend'

(Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains as people of one mind.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: péngyou
- Say it: péngyou, once more
- Say it: tā shì wǒ de péngyou — He's a friend of mine.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have the family name, then the Mandarin for to know someone, then say péngyou again

Before you move on

What does péngyou mean? ("Friend".) Say it once more.

Chapter 35

Who Does What

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what people do and where somebody lives.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 35: I can say what people do and where somebody lives.

35.1 gōngzuò — to work; job

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to know someone, then the Mandarin for friend.

You'll want to know: gōngzuò

gōngzuò — "to work; job".

> wǒ jiějie gōngzuò, wǒ shàngxué — My sister works; I go to school.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gōngzuò is built from gōng 'craft' and zuò 'to do', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kuwng and tsak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'office' and 'skill', the second 'to do'.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: gōngzuò
- Say it: gōngzuò, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiějie gōngzuò, wǒ shàngxué — My sister works; I go to school.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to know someone, then the Mandarin for friend, then say gōngzuò again

Before you move on

What does gōngzuò mean? ("To work; job".) Say it once more.

35.2 lǎo — old

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for friend, then the Mandarin for to work.

You'll want to know: lǎo

lǎo — "old".

tā shì wǒ de lǎo tóngxué — He's an old classmate of mine.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǎo is inherited from Middle Chinese lawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'aged'.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: lǎo
- Say it: lǎo, once more
- Say it: tā shì wǒ de lǎo tóngxué — He's an old classmate of mine.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for friend, then the Mandarin for to work, then say lǎo again

Before you move on

What does lǎo mean? ("Old".) Say it once more.

35.3 lǎoshī — teacher

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to work, then the Mandarin for old.

You'll want to know: lǎoshī

lǎoshī — "teacher".

wǒ māma shì lǎoshī — My mum is a teacher.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǎoshī is built from lǎo 'old, respected' and shī 'teacher', both inherited from Middle Chinese: lawX, glossed 'aged', and srij, glossed 'a model to follow' (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: lǎoshī
- Say it: lǎoshī, once more

- Say it: wǒ māma shì lǎoshī — My mum is a teacher.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to work, then the Mandarin for old, then say lǎoshī again

Before you move on

What does lǎoshī mean? ("Teacher".) Say it once more.

35.4 xiānsheng — Mr; sir; husband

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for old, then the Mandarin for teacher.

You'll want to know: xiānsheng

xiānsheng — "Mr; sir; husband".

tā xiānsheng shì lǎoshī — Her husband is a teacher.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiānsheng is built from xiān 'before' and 生 'to be born, to grow', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sen and srjaeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). 'The one born first' is the usual explanation of how it came to mean an older man to respect, and then Mr or husband; the path is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: xiānsheng
- Say it: xiānsheng, once more
- Say it: tā xiānsheng shì lǎoshī — Her husband is a teacher.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for old, then the Mandarin for teacher, then say xiānsheng again

Before you move on

What does xiānsheng mean? ("Mr; sir; husband".) Say it once more.

35.5 zhù — to live somewhere; to stay

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for teacher, then the Mandarin for sir.

You'll want to know: zhù

zhù — "to live somewhere; to stay".

tā zhù wǒ jiā — He's staying at our place.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhù is inherited from Middle Chinese drjuH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to stop, to stay'. Staying somewhere becoming living there is a likely step, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: zhù
- Say it: zhù, once more
- Say it: tā zhù wǒ jiā — He's staying at our place.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for teacher, then the Mandarin for sir, then say zhù again

Before you move on

What does zhù mean? ("To live somewhere; to stay".) Say it once more.

Chapter 36

Where People Come From

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say where somebody comes from and ask which country.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 36: I can say where somebody comes from and ask which country.

36.1 来 (lái) — to come

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for sir, then the Mandarin for to live somewhere.

You'll want to know: 来

来 — lái — "to come".

> 妈妈来了 māma lái le — Mum's here.

The new character, in pieces: 来 — one piece built from the top down: a short bar, a dot and a short stroke under it, a long bar, a vertical through it, and two strokes spreading at the foot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 来 (lái) is inherited from Middle Chinese loj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to arrive'.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: lái
- Say it: lái, once more
- Say it: māma lái le — Mum's here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for sir, then the Mandarin for to live somewhere, then say lái again

Before you move on

What does 来 mean? ("To come".) Say it once more.

36.2 来 — one piece, top to bottom

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say lái — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

大 十

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — dà, shí

Script — one piece, top to bottom

How 来 is written, stroke by stroke

来

One piece, three layers, top to bottom.

The top layer, three strokes. A short horizontal. Under it, a dot on the left and a short left-falling stroke on the right, leaning in toward each other.

The middle, two strokes. A long horizontal, then the vertical through the middle of everything, from the very top, through both bars, to the foot.

The foot, two strokes. A left-falling stroke and a right-falling stroke, spreading out from the vertical like the legs of 大.

3 + 2 + 2 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 来, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many layers in 来? (Three.) Which comes first, the dot or the short left-falling stroke? (The dot.) Which character you know ends with the same two spreading strokes? (大.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 来, pinned stroke paths and medians.

36.3 Měiguó — America; the United States

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to live somewhere, then the Mandarin for to come.

You'll want to know: Měiguó

Měiguó — "America; the United States".

Měiguó hěn dà — America is huge.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of Měiguó is built from měi 'beautiful' and 国 'country', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mijX and kwok (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). Měi is usually explained as standing for a syllable of the name America.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: Měiguó
- Say it: Měiguó, once more
- Say it: Měiguó hěn dà — America is huge.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to live somewhere, then the Mandarin for to come, then say Měiguó again

Before you move on

What does Měiguó mean? ("America; the United States".) Say it once more.

36.4 Yīngguó — Britain; the United Kingdom

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to come, then the Mandarin for the United States.

You'll want to know: Yīngguó

Yīngguó — "Britain; the United Kingdom".

Yīngguó hěn xiǎo — Britain is quite small.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of Yīngguó is built from yīng 'flower, fine' and 国 'country', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jaeng and kwok (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). Yīng is usually explained as standing for the first syllable of England.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: Yīngguó
- Say it: Yīngguó, once more
- Say it: Yīngguó hěn xiǎo — Britain is quite small.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to come, then the Mandarin for the United States, then say Yīngguó again

Before you move on

What does Yīngguó mean? ("Britain; the United Kingdom".) Say it once more.

36.5 Běijīng — Beijing

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the United States, then the Mandarin for the United Kingdom.

You'll want to know: Běijīng

Běijīng — "Beijing".

wǒmen lái Běijīng le — We've come to Beijing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of Běijīng is built from běi 'north' and jīng 'capital', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pok and kjaeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the northern capital.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: Běijīng
- Say it: Běijīng, once more
- Say it: wǒmen lái Běijīng le — We've come to Beijing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the United States, then the Mandarin for the United Kingdom, then say Běijīng again

Before you move on

What does Běijīng mean? ("Beijing".) Say it once more.

36.6 nǎ — which

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the United Kingdom, then the Mandarin for Beijing.

You'll want to know: nǎ

nǎ — "which".

nǐ shì nǎ guó rén — Which country are you from?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

nǎ has no older form in any dictionary we use, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: nǎ
- Say it: nǎ, once more
- Say it: nǐ shì nǎ guó rén — Which country are you from?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the United Kingdom, then the Mandarin for Beijing, then say nǎ again

Before you move on

What does nǎ mean? ("Which".) Say it once more.

36.7 Looking back: from He, She and We to Where People Come From Say the Mandarin for she and he.

Your turn

- Say it: she, he, they, we, you all
- Say it: mum, dad, elder brother, elder sister, younger brother
- Say it: male, man, woman, younger sister, child
- Say it: to be called, you (polite), to have the family name, to know someone, friend
- Say it: to work, old, teacher, sir, to live somewhere
- Say it: to come, the United States, the United Kingdom, Beijing, which

- Read it: 他 们 妈 男 叫 来 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

She? (tā.) He? (他, tā.) They? (他们, tāmen.) We? (我们, wǒmen.) You all? (你们, nǐmen.) Mum? (妈妈, māma.) Dad? (bàba.) Elder brother? (gēge.) Elder sister? (jiějie.) Younger brother? (dìdi.) Male? (男, nán.) Man? (男人, nánrén.) Woman? (女人, nǚrén.) Younger sister? (mèimei.) Child? (háizi.) To be called? (叫, jiào.) You (polite)? (nín.) To have the family name? (xìng.) To know someone? (rènshi.) Friend? (péngyou.) To work? (gōngzuò.) Old? (lǎo.) Teacher? (lǎoshī.) Sir? (xiānsheng.) To live somewhere? (zhù.) To come? (来, lái.) The United States? (Měiguó.) The United Kingdom? (Yīngguó.) Beijing? (Běijīng.) Which? (nǎ.)

Chapter 37

This One and That One

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can point things out as this one, that one and which one.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 37: I can point things out as this one, that one and which one.

37.1 这 (zhè) — this

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for Beijing, then the Mandarin for which.

You'll want to know: 这

这 — zhè — "this".

> 这是我的书 zhè shì wǒ de shū — This is my book.

The new character, in pieces: 这 — 文, from 中文, and a walking piece that runs under it from the left. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 这 (zhè) is written with an old character that the Guangyun records as ngjenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to meet'. That is a different word: ngjenH would not become zhè. How the character came to write the word for this is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: zhè
- Say it: zhè, once more
- Say it: zhè shì wǒ de shū — This is my book.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for Beijing, then the Mandarin for which, then say zhè again

Before you move on

What does 这 mean? ("This".) Say it once more.

37.2 这 — 文, then the walking piece

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say zhè — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  文 书

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — wén, shū

Script — 文, then the walking piece

How 这 is written, stroke by stroke

这

Two pieces, and the one underneath goes last. The walking piece wraps the bottom-left, but it is written after what it carries.

The top-right piece, 文, four strokes, as in 中文: a dot, a horizontal, a left-falling stroke and a right-falling stroke crossing it.

The walking piece, three strokes. A dot. A stroke that runs across, folds down and folds again, ending in a short fall. Then a long flat sweep along the bottom, under 文, out to the right.

4 + 3 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 这, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 这? (Two — 文, then the walking piece.)
Which goes first? (文, even though the walking piece is on the left.)
Which stroke is last? (The long sweep along the bottom.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 这, pinned stroke paths and medians.

37.3 这个 (zhège) — this one

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for which, then the Mandarin for this.

You'll want to know: 这个

这个 — zhège — "this one".

这个人叫什么名字 zhège rén jiào shénme míngzi — What's this person's name?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 这个 (zhège) is built from 这 'this' and the measure word 个.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: zhège
- Say it: zhège, once more
- Say it: zhège rén jiào shénme míngzi — What's this person's name?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for which, then the Mandarin for this, then say zhège again

Before you move on

What does 这个 mean? ("This one".) Say it once more.

37.4 那 (nà) — that

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for this, then the Mandarin for this one.

You'll want to know: 那

那 — nà — "that".

那是我的家 nà shì wǒ de jiā — That's my home.

The new character, in pieces: 那 — a four-stroke piece on the left, and on the right a two-stroke piece shaped like an ear. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 那 (nà) is an old character: the Guangyun records it as na (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'how, what'. The sense 'that' is not given there, so how it came to mean that is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: nà
- Say it: nà, once more
- Say it: nà shì wǒ de jiā — That's my home.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for this, then the Mandarin for this one, then say nà again

Before you move on

What does 那 mean? ("That".) Say it once more.

37.5 那 — four strokes, then an ear

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say nà — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

这 二

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — zhè, èr

Script — four strokes, then an ear

How 那 is written, stroke by stroke

那

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, four strokes. A horizontal that turns down and hooks. Two short horizontals inside it. Then a left-falling stroke from the top, down through them all.

The ear, two strokes. One stroke that runs right, loops down twice like a folded ear and hooks. Then a long vertical down its left edge.

4 + 2 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 那, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 那? (Two — four strokes, then the ear.) Which stroke of the left piece is last? (The left-falling stroke through it all.) Which is the last stroke of the character? (The long vertical.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 那, pinned stroke paths and medians.

37.6 nǎge — which one

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for this one, then the Mandarin for that.

You'll want to know: nǎge

nǎge — "which one".

nǐ xǐhuan nǎge — Which one do you like?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

nǎge is built from nǎ 'which' and the measure word 个.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: nǎge
- Say it: nǎge, once more
- Say it: nǐ xǐhuan nǎge — Which one do you like?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for this one, then the Mandarin for that, then say nǎge again

Before you move on

What does nǎge mean? ("Which one".) Say it once more.

37.7 那个 (nàge) — that one

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for that, then the Mandarin for which one.

You'll want to know: 那个

那个 — nàge — "that one".

我喜欢那个 wǒ xǐhuan nàge — I like that one.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 那个 (nàge) is built from 那 'that' and the measure word 个.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: nàge
- Say it: nàge, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan nàge — I like that one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for that, then the Mandarin for which one, then say nàge again

Before you move on

What does 那个 mean? ("That one".) Say it once more.

Chapter 38

Eating

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I eat and ask what somebody likes to eat.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 38: I can say what I eat and ask what somebody likes to eat.

38.1 吃 (chī) — to eat

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for which one, then the Mandarin for that one.

You'll want to know: 吃

吃 — chī — "to eat".

> 你吃什么 nǐ chī shénme — What are you having?

The new character, in pieces: 吃 — 口, the mouth piece, on the left, and on the right three strokes: a short fall, a short bar, and one long stroke that runs across, drops and hooks up. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 吃 (chī) is probably inherited from Middle Chinese khek, which the Guangyun glosses 'to eat' and writes with a different character; there 吃 itself is kj+t, 'to stammer' (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

How the word and this character came together is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: chī
- Say it: chī, once more
- Say it: nǐ chī shénme — What are you having?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for which one, then the Mandarin for that one, then say chī again

Before you move on

What does 吃 mean? ("To eat".) Say it once more.

38.2 吃 — a mouth, then three strokes

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say chī — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

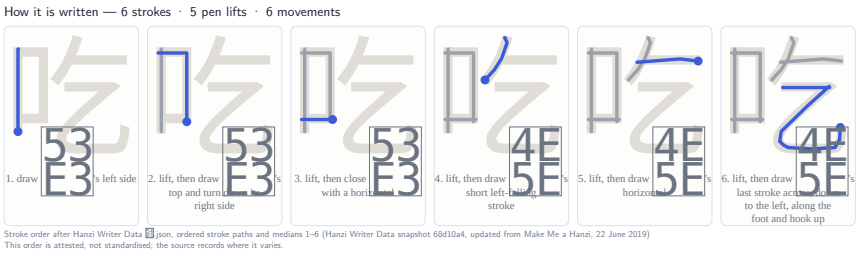
口 叫

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kǒu, jiào

Script — a mouth, then three strokes



How 吃 is written, stroke by stroke

吃

Two pieces, left before right.
The left piece, 口, three strokes, small, as in 叫.
The right piece, three strokes. A short left-falling stroke. A short horizontal under it. Then one long stroke: across, down, bending right along the bottom and hooking up.
3 + 3 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 吃, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 吃? (Two — 口, then three strokes.) Which character from the last chapters also has a small 口 on the left? (叫.) How does the last stroke end? (It hooks up.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 吃, pinned stroke paths and medians.

38.3 饭 (fàn) — cooked rice; meal

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for that one, then the Mandarin for to eat.

You'll want to know: 饭

饭 — fàn — "cooked rice; meal".

你吃饭了吗 nǐ chī fàn le ma — Have you eaten?

The new character, in pieces: 饭 — a three-stroke food piece on the left, and a four-stroke piece on the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 饭 (fàn) is inherited from Middle Chinese bjonH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'cooked grain'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: fàn
- Say it: fàn, once more
- Say it: nǐ chī fàn le ma — Have you eaten?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for that one, then the Mandarin for to eat, then say fàn again

Before you move on

What does 饭 mean? ("Cooked rice; meal".) Say it once more.

38.4 饭 — the food piece, then four strokes

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say fàn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  吃 了

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — chī, le

Script — the food piece, then four strokes

How 饭 is written, stroke by stroke

饭

Two pieces, left before right.

The food piece, three strokes. A left-falling stroke. A short horizontal that hooks down at its end. A vertical that flicks up to the right at the foot.

The right piece, four strokes. A short left-falling stroke along the top. A long left-falling stroke down the left. A horizontal that turns and falls to the left. Then a right-falling stroke across it.

3 + 4 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 饭, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 饭? (Two — the food piece, then four strokes.)
How does the food piece end? (With a vertical that flicks up.)
Which stroke is last? (The right-falling stroke.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 饭, pinned stroke paths and medians.

38.5 mǐfàn — cooked rice

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to eat, then the Mandarin for meal.

You'll want to know: mǐfàn

mǐfàn — "cooked rice".

wǒ xǐhuan chī mǐfàn — I like rice.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of mǐfàn is built from mǐ 'husked grain' and 饭 'cooked grain', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mejX and bjonH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: mǐfàn
- Say it: mǐfàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan chī mǐfàn — I like rice.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to eat, then the Mandarin for meal, then say mǐfàn again

Before you move on

What does mǐfàn mean? ("Cooked rice".) Say it once more.

38.6 è — hungry

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for meal, then the Mandarin for cooked rice.

You'll want to know: è

è — "hungry".

wǒ hěn è — I'm starving.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

è is inherited from Middle Chinese ngaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'not full'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: è
- Say it: è, once more
- Say it: wǒ hěn è — I'm starving.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for meal, then the Mandarin for cooked rice, then say è again

Before you move on

What does è mean? ("Hungry".) Say it once more.

38.7 cài — dish of food; vegetable

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for cooked rice, then the Mandarin for hungry.

You'll want to know: cài

cài — "dish of food; vegetable".

nǐ xǐhuan chī shénme cài — What sort of food do you like?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cài is inherited from Middle Chinese tshojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains as any plant that can be eaten.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: cài
- Say it: cài, once more
- Say it: nǐ xǐhuan chī shénme cài — What sort of food do you like?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for cooked rice, then the Mandarin for hungry, then say cài again

Before you move on

What does cài mean? ("Dish of food; vegetable".) Say it once more.

Chapter 39

Drinking

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I drink and ask somebody what they would like.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 39: I can say what I drink and ask somebody what they would like.

39.1 喝 (hē) — to drink

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hungry, then the Mandarin for dish of food.

You'll want to know: 喝

喝 — hē — "to drink".

> 你喝什么 nǐ hē shénme — What would you like to drink?

The new character, in pieces: 喝 — 口 on the left; on the right 日 on top of a wrap with a small shape inside it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 喝 (hē) is an old character: the Guangyun records it as xat (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to shout at'. The sense 'to drink' is not given there, so how it came to mean drink is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: hē
- Say it: hē, once more
- Say it: nǐ hē shénme — What would you like to drink?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hungry, then the Mandarin for dish of food, then say hē again

Before you move on

What does 喝 mean? ("To drink".) Say it once more.

39.2 喝 — a mouth, a sun and a wrap

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say hē — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

口 日 吃

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kǒu, rì, chī

Script — a mouth, a sun and a wrap

How 喝 is written, stroke by stroke

喝

Three pieces: 口 on the left, then 日, then the wrap under it. Do not count to twelve; count three.

口, three strokes, small, as in 吃.

日, four strokes, short and wide, at the top right.

The wrap, five strokes. A short left-falling stroke. A horizontal that turns down and hooks, making a roof. Inside it, a small left-falling stroke and a dot. Then a corner stroke, down and along, closing them in.

3 + 4 + 5 = twelve, and the first seven are two shapes you know.

Your turn

- Write it: 喝, all twelve, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 喝? (Three — 口, 日, and the wrap.) How many strokes before the wrap starts? (Seven.) What goes inside the wrap? (A small left-falling stroke and a dot.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 喝, pinned stroke paths and medians.

39.3 水 (shuǐ) — water

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for dish of food, then the Mandarin for to drink.

You'll want to know: 水

水 — shuǐ — "water".

我喜欢喝水 wǒ xǐhuan hē shuǐ — I like drinking water.

The new character, in pieces: 水 — a hooked vertical down the middle, one stroke on its left that runs across and falls away, and two strokes on its right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 水 (shuǐ) is inherited from Middle Chinese sywijX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains as one of the five elements, the one of the north, and as 'level'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: shuǐ
- Say it: shuǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan hē shuǐ — I like drinking water.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for dish of food, then the Mandarin for to drink, then say shuǐ again

Before you move on

What does 水 mean? ("Water".) Say it once more.

39.4 水 — the middle first, then the sides

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shuǐ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

小 喝

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — xiǎo, hē

Script — the middle first, then the sides

How 水 is written, stroke by stroke

水

One piece: the middle, then left, then right.

The middle, one stroke. A long vertical that hooks to the left at the foot, as in 小.

The left side, one stroke. A short horizontal that turns and falls away to the lower left.

The right side, two strokes. A short left-falling stroke toward the middle, then a long right-falling stroke out to the lower right.

1 + 1 + 2 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 水, all four, with the model in front of you

- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

Which stroke of 水 comes first? (The hooked vertical down the middle.) Which character you know also starts in the middle? (小.) How many strokes on the right? (Two.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 水, pinned stroke paths and medians.

39.5 kě — thirsty

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to drink, then the Mandarin for water.

You'll want to know: kě

kě — "thirsty".

nǐ kě ma — Are you thirsty?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

kě is inherited from Middle Chinese khat (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'hunger and thirst'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: kě
- Say it: kě, once more
- Say it: nǐ kě ma — Are you thirsty?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to drink, then the Mandarin for water, then say kě again

Before you move on

What does kě mean? (“Thirsty”.) Say it once more.

39.6 niúnǎi — milk

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for water, then the Mandarin for thirsty.

You’ll want to know: niúnǎi

niúnǎi — “milk”.

háizi xǐhuan hē niúnǎi — Children like milk.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of niúnǎi is built from niú ’cattle’ and nǎi ’milk’. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese ngjuw (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), glossed ’a large beast’. The second is probably the word the Guangyun records as nreaX, glossed ’milk’, under another way of writing the character.

What you’ve built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: niúnǎi
- Say it: niúnǎi, once more
- Say it: háizi xǐhuan hē niúnǎi — Children like milk.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for water, then the Mandarin for thirsty, then say niúnǎi again

Before you move on

What does niúnǎi mean? ("Milk".) Say it once more.

39.7 chá — tea

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for thirsty, then the Mandarin for milk.

You'll want to know: chá

chá — "tea".

nǐ hē chá ma — Would you like some tea?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

chá is inherited from Middle Chinese drae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains as leaves gathered in spring and made into a drink.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: chá
- Say it: chá, once more
- Say it: nǐ hē chá ma — Would you like some tea?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for thirsty, then the Mandarin for milk, then say chá again

Before you move on

What does chá mean? ("Tea".) Say it once more.

Chapter 40

Fruit, Bread and Eggs

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I buy and name fruit, bread and eggs.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 40: I can say what I buy and name fruit, bread and eggs.

40.1 买 (mǎi) — to buy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for milk, then the Mandarin for tea.

You'll want to know: 买

买 — mǎi — "to buy".

你们买水吗 nǐmen mǎi shuǐ ma — Are you buying water?

The new character, in pieces: 买 — a lid with two dots under it, and below them a shape like 大 with its last stroke cut down to a dot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 买 (mǎi) is inherited from Middle Chinese meaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to trade at market'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: mǎi
- Say it: mǎi, once more
- Say it: nǐmen mǎi shuǐ ma — Are you buying water?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for milk, then the Mandarin for tea, then say mǎi again

Before you move on

What does 买 mean? ("To buy".) Say it once more.

40.2 买 — a lid, two dots, and a cut-down 大

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say mǎi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

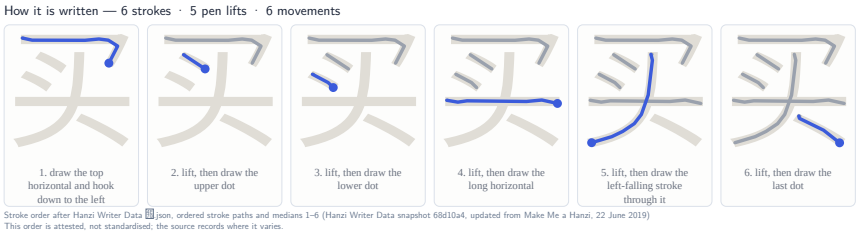
大 水

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — dà, shuǐ

Script — a lid, two dots, and a cut-down 大



How 买 is written, stroke by stroke

买

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The top piece, three strokes. A horizontal that hooks down at its right end, like a lid. Then two dots under it, one above the other.

The bottom piece, three strokes. A long horizontal, a left-falling stroke through it, and a dot on the right. It is 大 with its last stroke cut down to a dot.

3 + 3 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 买, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 买? (Two — the lid with its dots, then the cut-down 大.) What is under the lid? (Two dots.) What is the last stroke? (A dot, where 大 has a long fall.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 买, pinned stroke paths and medians.

40.3 píngguǒ — apple

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tea, then the Mandarin for to buy.

You'll want to know: píngguǒ

píngguǒ — "apple".

wǒ mǎi le sān ge píngguǒ — I bought three apples.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of píngguǒ is built from píng and guǒ 'fruit'. Guǒ is inherited from Middle Chinese kwaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'fruit of a tree'; the first character is listed there as bjaeng, a name for several plants, duckweed among them, and how it came to name the apple is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: píngguǒ
- Say it: píngguǒ, once more
- Say it: wǒ mǎi le sān ge píngguǒ — I bought three apples.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tea, then the Mandarin for to buy, then say píngguǒ again

Before you move on

What does píngguǒ mean? ("Apple".) Say it once more.

40.4 shuǐguǒ — fruit

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to buy, then the Mandarin for apple.

You'll want to know: shuǐguǒ

shuǐguǒ — "fruit".

wǒ xǐhuan chī shuǐguǒ — I like fruit.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Tone: shuǐguǒ is two third tones in a row, so shuǐ rises and only guǒ keeps the dip. The spelling does not show the change; your voice makes it.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shuǐguǒ is built from 水 'water' and guǒ 'fruit', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sywijX and kwaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: shuǐguǒ
- Say it: shuǐguǒ, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan chī shuǐguǒ — I like fruit.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to buy, then the Mandarin for apple, then say shuǐguǒ again

Before you move on

What does shuǐguǒ mean? ("Fruit".) Say it once more.

40.5 miànbāo — bread

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for apple, then the Mandarin for fruit.

You'll want to know: miànbāo

miànbāo — "bread".

wǒ chī le yí ge miànbāo — I had a bread roll.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of miànbāo is built from miàn 'flour' and bāo 'to wrap', both inherited from Middle Chinese, menH and paew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: miànbāo
- Say it: miànbāo, once more
- Say it: wǒ chī le yí ge miànbāo — I had a bread roll.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for apple, then the Mandarin for fruit, then say miànbāo again

Before you move on

What does miànbāo mean? ("Bread".) Say it once more.

40.6 jīdàn — egg

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for fruit, then the Mandarin for bread.

You'll want to know: jīdàn

jīdàn — "egg".

tā xǐhuan chī jīdàn — He likes eggs.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jīdàn is built from jī 'chicken' and dàn 'egg'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese kej (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary calls the animal that knows the hour; no dictionary we use records an older form of the second, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: jīdàn
- Say it: jīdàn, once more
- Say it: tā xǐhuan chī jīdàn — He likes eggs.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for fruit, then the Mandarin for bread, then say jīdàn again

Before you move on

What does jīdàn mean? (“Egg”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 41

Paying

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how much something costs and say how much I want.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 41: I can ask how much something costs and say how much I want.

41.1 多少 (duōshao) — how much; how many

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bread, then the Mandarin for egg.

You'll want to know: 多少

多少 — duōshao — "how much; how many".

> 你买了多少 nǐ mǎi le duōshao — How many did you buy?

The new character, in pieces: 多 — one three-stroke piece twice, one above the other; 少 — 小, the small piece, without its hook, and one long sweep below it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 多少 (duōshao) is built from 多 'many' and 少 'few', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ta and syewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): many-few, asked as a question.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: duōshao
- Say it: duōshao, once more
- Say it: nǐ mǎi le duōshao — How many did you buy?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bread, then the Mandarin for egg, then say duōshao again

Before you move on

What does 多少 mean? ("How much; how many".) Say it once more.

41.2 多 — the same three strokes, twice

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say duōshao — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

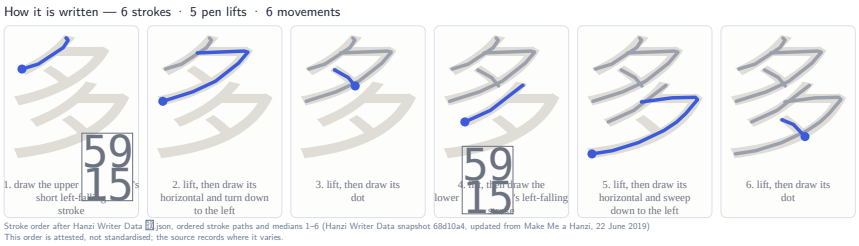
  了 买

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — le, mǎi

Script — the same three strokes, twice



How 多 is written, stroke by stroke

多

One shape, twice: top, then bottom.

The shape, three strokes. A short left-falling stroke. A horizontal that turns and falls to the lower left. A dot inside the turn.

Make it again below, a little larger and a little to the right, so the two lean together.

3 + 3 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 多, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in one half of 多? (Three.) Which half is larger? (The lower one.) Where does the dot go? (Inside the turn.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 多, pinned stroke paths and medians.

41.3 少 — 小 without its hook, and a sweep

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say duōshao — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

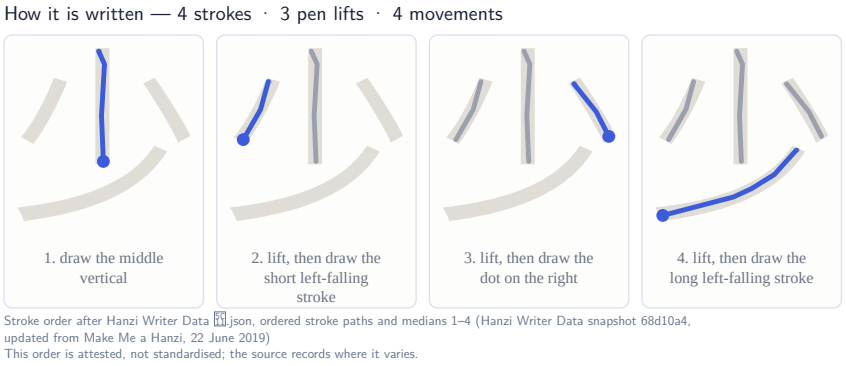
小 买

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — xiǎo, mǎi

Script — 小 without its hook, and a sweep



How 少 is written, stroke by stroke

少

One piece, built on 小.

Three strokes like 小. A vertical down the middle, but this time with no hook at the foot. A short stroke falling to the left. A dot on the right.

One more stroke. A long left-falling sweep from the right, under the vertical.

3 + 1 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 少, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

Which character you know is inside 少? (小.) What does the middle vertical lose? (Its hook.) Which stroke is last? (The long sweep to the left.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 少, pinned stroke paths and medians.

41.4 qián — money

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for egg, then the Mandarin for how much.

You'll want to know: qián

qián — "money".

zhège duōshao qián — How much is this one?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qián is inherited from Middle Chinese dzjen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'coin'.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: qián
- Say it: qián, once more
- Say it: zhège duōshao qián — How much is this one?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for egg, then the Mandarin for how much, then say qián again

Before you move on

What does qián mean? ("Money".) Say it once more.

41.5 kuài — yuan; lump

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for how much, then the Mandarin for money.

You'll want to know: kuài

kuài — "yuan; lump".

> nàge shí kuài qián — That one is ten yuan.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

kuài is the spoken word for the yuan: a price is a number, then kuài, then qián, which can be left off.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kuài is inherited from Middle Chinese khwojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a clod of earth'. Its use for counting money is not given there, so how it took that job is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: kuài
- Say it: kuài, once more
- Say it: nàge shí kuài qián — That one is ten yuan.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for how much, then the Mandarin for money, then say kuài again

Before you move on

What does kuài mean? ("Yuan; lump".) Say it once more.

41.6 tài — too; too much

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for money, then the Mandarin for yuan.

You'll want to know: tài

tài — "too; too much".

tài xiǎo le — That's too small.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
tài usually brings a le at the end of the sentence with it: tài xiǎo le.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tài is inherited from Middle Chinese thajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'extreme' and 'great'.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: tài
- Say it: tài, once more
- Say it: tài xiǎo le — That's too small.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for money, then the Mandarin for yuan, then say tài again

Before you move on

What does tài mean? ("Too; too much".) Say it once more.

41.7 yào — to want; to ask for

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for yuan, then the Mandarin for too.

You'll want to know: yào

yào — "to want; to ask for".

nǐ yào duōshao — How many would you like?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yào is inherited from Middle Chinese 'jiewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to bind by agreement'. The sense 'to want' is not given there, so how it got it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: yào
- Say it: yào, once more
- Say it: nǐ yào duōshao — How many would you like?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for yuan, then the Mandarin for too, then say yào again

Before you move on

What does yào mean? ("To want; to ask for".) Say it once more.

Chapter 42

In the Shop

Modes: voice (6) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what a shop sells and whether it is cheap or dear.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 42: I can say what a shop sells and whether it is cheap or dear.

42.1 dōngxi — thing; things

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for too, then the Mandarin for to want.

You'll want to know: dōngxi

dōngxi — "thing; things".

> nǐ mǎi shénme dōngxi — What are you buying?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dōngxi is built from dōng 'east' and xī 'west', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tuwng and sej (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). How east-and-west came to mean a thing is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: dōngxi
- Say it: dōngxi, once more
- Say it: nǐ mǎi shénme dōngxi — What are you buying?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for too, then the Mandarin for to want, then say dōngxi again

Before you move on

What does dōngxi mean? ("Thing; things".) Say it once more.

42.2 mài — to sell

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to want, then the Mandarin for thing.

You'll want to know: mài

mài — "to sell".

tāmen mài shénme — What do they sell?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of mài is inherited from Middle Chinese meaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to put goods out'. It differs from the word for buy only in its tone.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: mài
- Say it: mài, once more
- Say it: tāmen mài shénme — What do they sell?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to want, then the Mandarin for thing, then say mài again

Before you move on

What does mài mean? ("To sell".) Say it once more.

42.3 shāngdiàn — shop

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for thing, then the Mandarin for to sell.

You'll want to know: shāngdiàn

shāngdiàn — "shop".

zhège shāngdiàn hěn xiǎo — This shop is tiny.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shāngdiàn is built from shāng, usually explained as 'trade', and diàn 'shop', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syang and temH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary explains the second as a place where goods are kept and sold.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: shāngdiàn
- Say it: shāngdiàn, once more
- Say it: zhège shāngdiàn hěn xiǎo — This shop is tiny.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for thing, then the Mandarin for to sell, then say shāngdiàn again

Before you move on

What does shāngdiàn mean? ("Shop".) Say it once more.

42.4 piányi — cheap

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sell, then the Mandarin for shop.

You'll want to know: piányi

piányi — "cheap".

zhège hěn piányi — This one's cheap.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of piányi is built from two old words, both inherited from Middle Chinese: bjien 'at ease' and ngje 'fitting' (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The sense 'cheap' is not given there, so how the pair came to mean it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: piányi
- Say it: piányi, once more
- Say it: zhège hěn piányi — This one's cheap.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sell, then the Mandarin for shop, then say piányi again

Before you move on

What does piányi mean? ("Cheap".) Say it once more.

42.5 guì — expensive

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for shop, then the Mandarin for cheap.

You'll want to know: guì

guì — "expensive".

nàge tài guì le — That one's too expensive.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guì is inherited from Middle Chinese kjw+jH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'honoured, high'. The price sense is not given there; from valued to costly is a likely step, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: guì
- Say it: guì, once more

- Say it: nàge tài guì le — That one's too expensive.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for shop, then the Mandarin for cheap, then say guì again

Before you move on

What does guì mean? ("Expensive".) Say it once more.

42.6 Looking back: from This One and That One to In the Shop

Say the Mandarin for this and this one.

Your turn

- Say it: this, this one, that, which one, that one
- Say it: to eat, meal, cooked rice, hungry, dish of food
- Say it: to drink, water, thirsty, milk, tea
- Say it: to buy, apple, fruit, bread, egg
- Say it: how much, money, yuan, too, to want
- Say it: thing, to sell, shop, cheap, expensive
- Read it: 这 那 吃 饭 喝 水 买 多 少 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

This? (这, zhè.) This one? (这个, zhège.) That? (那, nà.) Which one? (nǎge.) That one? (那个, nàge.) To eat? (吃, chī.) Meal? (饭, fàn.) Cooked rice? (mǐfàn.) Hungry? (è.) Dish of food? (cài.) To drink? (喝, hē.) Water? (水, shuǐ.) Thirsty? (kě.) Milk? (niúnǎi.) Tea? (chá.) To buy? (买, mǎi.) Apple? (píngguǒ.) Fruit? (shuǐguǒ.) Bread? (miànbāo.) Egg? (jīdàn.) How much? (多少, duōshao.) Money? (qián.) Yuan? (kuài.) Too? (tài.) To want? (yào.) Thing? (dōngxi.) To sell? (mài.) Shop? (shāngdiàn.) Cheap? (piányi.) Expensive? (guì.)

Chapter 43

Coming and Going

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say where I am going and that I am going home.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 43: I can say where I am going and that I am going home.

43.1 去 (qù) — to go

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for cheap, then the Mandarin for expensive.

You'll want to know: 去

去 — qù — "to go".

我去大学 wǒ qù dàxué — I'm going to the university.

The new character, in pieces: 去 — a shape like 十 standing on a long bar, and under it a two-stroke piece. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 去 (qù) is inherited from Middle Chinese khjoH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to leave'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: qù
- Say it: qù, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù dàxué — I'm going to the university.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for cheap, then the Mandarin for expensive, then say qù again

Before you move on

What does 去 mean? ("To go".) Say it once more.

43.2 去 — a cross on a bar, and a corner below

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say qù — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

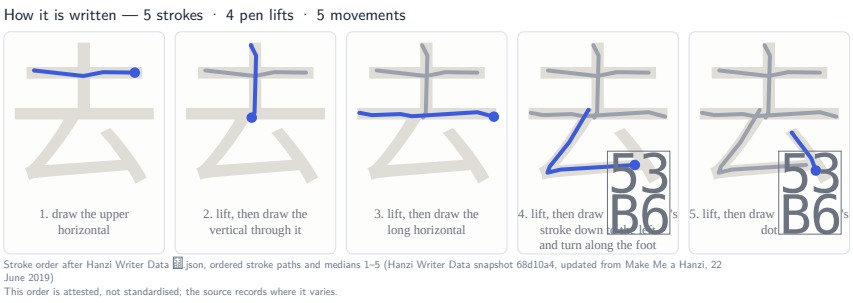
十 大

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shí, dà

Script — a cross on a bar, and a corner below



How 去 is written, stroke by stroke

去

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The top piece, three strokes. A short horizontal, a vertical through it, then a long horizontal under them: 十 standing on a wide base.

The bottom piece, two strokes. A stroke that falls to the left and turns out to the right, then a dot inside the turn.

3 + 2 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 去, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 去? (Two.) Which character you know is in the top piece? (十, on a long bar.) What is the last stroke? (A dot.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 去, pinned stroke paths and medians.

43.3 huí — to go back; to return

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for expensive, then the Mandarin for to go.

You'll want to know: huí

huí — "to go back; to return".

wǒ huí jiā — I'm going home.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huí is inherited from Middle Chinese hwoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to turn'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: huí
- Say it: huí, once more
- Say it: wǒ huí jiā — I'm going home.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for expensive, then the Mandarin for to go, then say huí again

Before you move on

What does huí mean? ("To go back; to return".) Say it once more.

43.4 zǒu — to walk; to leave

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go, then the Mandarin for to go back.

You'll want to know: zǒu

zǒu — "to walk; to leave".

wǒ zǒu le — I'm off.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zǒu is inherited from Middle Chinese tsuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to hurry'. The sense 'to walk' is not given there, so when it arrived is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: zǒu
- Say it: zǒu, once more
- Say it: wǒ zǒu le — I'm off.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go, then the Mandarin for to go back, then say zǒu again

Before you move on

What does zǒu mean? ("To walk; to leave".) Say it once more.

43.5 chūmén — to go out

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go back, then the Mandarin for to walk.

You'll want to know: chūmén

chūmén — "to go out".

māma chūmén le — Mum's gone out.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chūmén is built from chū 'to come forth' and mén 'door', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwit and mwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: chūmén
- Say it: chūmén, once more

- Say it: māma chūmén le — Mum's gone out.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go back, then the Mandarin for to walk, then say chūmén again

Before you move on

What does chūmén mean? ("To go out".) Say it once more.

43.6 xuéxiào — school

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to walk, then the Mandarin for to go out.

You'll want to know: xuéxiào

xuéxiào — "school".

wǒmen qù xuéxiào — We're off to school.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xuéxiào is built from 学 'learning', inherited from Middle Chinese haewk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), and a second character the dictionary records as haewH, the title of an officer. The school sense is not given there, so how it came to mean school is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: xuéxiào
- Say it: xuéxiào, once more
- Say it: wǒmen qù xuéxiào — We're off to school.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to walk, then the Mandarin for to go out, then say xuéxiào again

Before you move on

What does xuéxiào mean? (“School”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 44

Places in Town

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name places in town and say how I get there.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 44: I can name places in town and say how I get there.

44.1 车 (chē) — car; vehicle

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go out, then the Mandarin for school.

You'll want to know: 车

车 — chē — "car; vehicle".

> 你有车吗 nǐ yǒu chē ma — Have you got a car?

The new character, in pieces: 车 — four strokes: a bar, a stroke that falls and turns, a long bar, and a vertical through them. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 车 (chē) is inherited from Middle Chinese tsyhae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains as a cart, first made, it says, by the Yellow Emperor.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: chē
- Say it: chē, once more
- Say it: nǐ yǒu chē ma — Have you got a car?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go out, then the Mandarin for school, then say chē again

Before you move on

What does 车 mean? ("Car; vehicle".) Say it once more.

44.2 车 — four strokes, the vertical last

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say chē — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

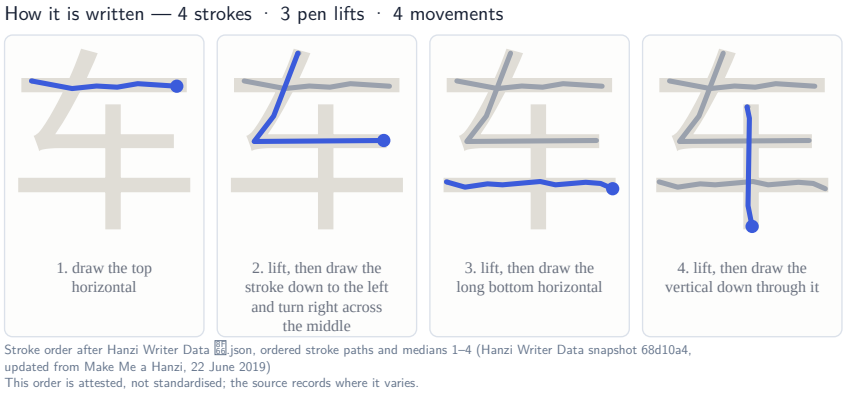
十 去

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shí, qù

Script — four strokes, the vertical last



How 车 is written, stroke by stroke

车

One piece, four strokes.

A short horizontal at the top.

A stroke that falls to the left and turns right, along under the first bar.

A long horizontal across the bottom.

Last, the vertical, from the top bar down through everything to the foot.

Your turn

- Write it: 车, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 车? (Four.) Which stroke is last? (The vertical.) Which is the longest bar? (The third stroke, along the bottom.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 车, pinned stroke paths and medians.

44.3 fàndiàn — restaurant

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for school, then the Mandarin for car.

You'll want to know: fàndiàn

fàndiàn — "restaurant".

wǒmen qù fàndiàn chī fàn — We're going out to a restaurant.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fàndiàn is built from 饭 'meal' and diàn 'shop', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjonH and temH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: fàndiàn
- Say it: fàndiàn, once more
- Say it: wǒmen qù fàndiàn chī fàn — We're going out to a restaurant.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for school, then the Mandarin for car, then say fàndiàn again

Before you move on

What does fàndiàn mean? ("Restaurant".) Say it once more.

44.4 yīyuàn — hospital

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for car, then the Mandarin for restaurant.

You'll want to know: yīyuàn

yīyuàn — "hospital".

wǒ māma qù yīyuàn le — My mum has gone to the hospital.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yīyuàn is built from yī 'healing' and yuàn 'courtyard', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'i and hjwenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: yīyuàn
- Say it: yīyuàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ māma qù yīyuàn le — My mum has gone to the hospital.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for car, then the Mandarin for restaurant, then say yīyuàn again

Before you move on

What does yīyuàn mean? ("Hospital".) Say it once more.

44.5 zuò — to sit; to travel by

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for restaurant, then the Mandarin for hospital.

You'll want to know: zuò

zuò — "to sit; to travel by".

wǒmen zuò chē qù — We're going by car.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zuò is inherited from Middle Chinese dzwaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains as bending the joints. Its use for travelling by car or bus is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: zuò
- Say it: zuò, once more
- Say it: wǒmen zuò chē qù — We're going by car.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for restaurant, then the Mandarin for hospital, then say zuò again

Before you move on

What does zuò mean? ("To sit; to travel by".) Say it once more.

44.6 chūzūchē — taxi

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hospital, then the Mandarin for to sit.

You'll want to know: chūzūchē

chūzūchē — "taxi".

chūzūchē hěn guì — Taxis are expensive.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chūzūchē is built from chūzū 'to rent out' and 车 'car'; its parts are inherited from Middle Chinese tsyhwit, tsu 'tax' and tsyhae

(Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: chūzūchē
- Say it: chūzūchē, once more
- Say it: chūzūchē hěn guì — Taxis are expensive.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hospital, then the Mandarin for to sit, then say chūzūchē again

Before you move on

What does chūzūchē mean? ("Taxi".) Say it once more.

Chapter 45

Today and Tomorrow

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say today, yesterday, tomorrow and now.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 45: I can say today, yesterday, tomorrow and now.

45.1 天 (tiān) — day; sky

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sit, then the Mandarin for taxi.

You'll want to know: 天

天 — tiān — "day; sky".

> 那天我们去大学了 nà tiān wǒmen qù dàxué le — That day we went to the university.

The new character, in pieces: 天 — 一 above 大: one more bar over the big piece. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 天 (tiān) is inherited from Middle Chinese then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the highest, with nothing above it', the sky. Its use for a day is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: tiān
- Say it: tiān, once more
- Say it: nà tiān wǒmen qù dàxué le — That day we went to the university.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sit, then the Mandarin for taxi, then say tiān again

Before you move on

What does 天 mean? ("Day; sky".) Say it once more.

45.2 天 — one more bar over 大

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say tiān — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

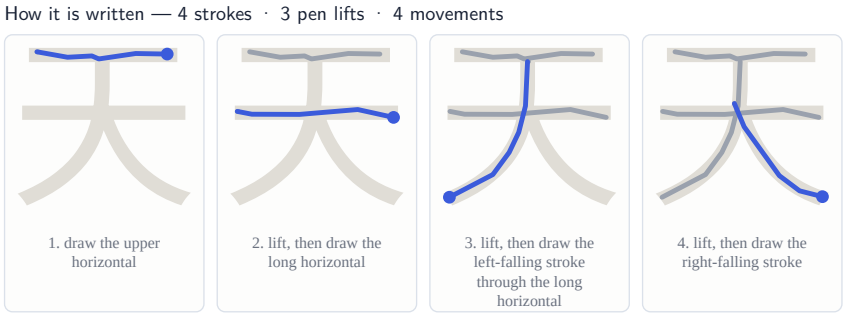
一 大

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — yī, dà

Script — one more bar over 大



How 天 is written, stroke by stroke

天

Two pieces your hand knows, top to bottom: 一, then 大.
一, one stroke, a short horizontal at the top.
大, three strokes: a longer horizontal, a left-falling stroke from above it, and a right-falling stroke.
1 + 3 = four. Keep the top bar shorter than the one under it.

Your turn

- Write it: 天, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

Which two characters you know make 天? (一 and 大.) Which bar is longer? (The lower one.) How many strokes? (Four.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 天, pinned stroke paths and medians.

45.3 今天 (jīntiān) — today

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for taxi, then the Mandarin for day.

You'll want to know: 今天

今天 — jīntiān — "today".

你们今天去吗 nǐmen jīntiān qù ma — Are you going today?

The new character, in pieces: 今 — 人 as a roof, a dot under it, and a stroke that runs across and turns down. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 今天 (jīntiān) is built from 今 'now' and 天 'day', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kim and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses kim as the opposite of olden times.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: jīntiān
- Say it: jīntiān, once more
- Say it: nǐmen jīntiān qù ma — Are you going today?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for taxi, then the Mandarin for day, then say jīntiān again

Before you move on

What does 今天 mean? ("Today".) Say it once more.

45.4 今 — a roof, a dot and a turn

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say jīntiān — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

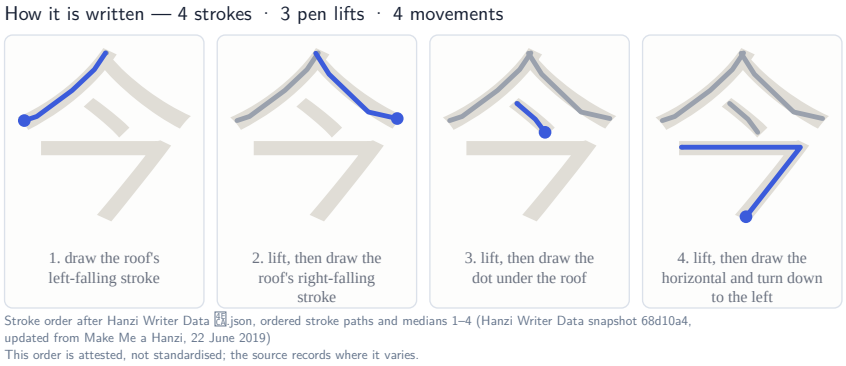
人 个

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rén, gè

Script — a roof, a dot and a turn



How 今 is written, stroke by stroke

今

Top to bottom.

The roof, 人, two strokes, spread wide: a left-falling stroke, then a right-falling stroke, as in 个.

A dot in the middle, under the roof.

A stroke that runs across and turns down to the left, under the dot.

2 + 1 + 1 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 今, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

Which character you know is the roof of 今? (人.) Which other character has the same roof? (个.) What comes right after the roof? (A dot.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 今, pinned stroke paths and medians.

45.5 zuótiān — yesterday

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for day, then the Mandarin for today.

You'll want to know: zuótiān

zuótiān — "yesterday".

zuótiān wǒ hěn lèi — I was really tired yesterday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zuótiān is built from zuó 'the day before' and 天 'day', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzak and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses dzak as the day one night back.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: zuótiān
- Say it: zuótiān, once more
- Say it: zuótiān wǒ hěn lèi — I was really tired yesterday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for day, then the Mandarin for today, then say zuótiān again

Before you move on

What does zuótiān mean? ("Yesterday".) Say it once more.

45.6 xiànzài — now

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for today, then the Mandarin for yesterday.

You'll want to know: xiànzài

xiànzài — "now".

> nǐ xiànzài máng ma — Are you busy right now?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiànzài is built from xiàn 'to appear' and zài 'to be present', both inherited from Middle Chinese, henH and dzojX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: xiànzài
- Say it: xiànzài, once more
- Say it: nǐ xiànzài máng ma — Are you busy right now?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for today, then the Mandarin for yesterday, then say xiànzài again

Before you move on

What does xiànzài mean? ("Now".) Say it once more.

45.7 míngtiān — tomorrow

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for yesterday, then the Mandarin for now.

You'll want to know: míngtiān

míngtiān — "tomorrow".

wǒ jīntiān hěn máng, míngtiān bù máng — I'm busy today, but not tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of míngtiān is built from míng 'bright' and 天 'day', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjaeng and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: míngtiān
- Say it: míngtiān, once more
- Say it: wǒ jīntiān hěn máng, míngtiān bù máng — I'm busy today, but not tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for yesterday, then the Mandarin for now, then say míngtiān again

Before you move on

What does míngtiān mean? ("Tomorrow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 46

The Week

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the week, Monday, Sunday and the weekend.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 46: I can name the week, Monday, Sunday and the weekend.

46.1 星期 (xīngqī) — week

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for now, then the Mandarin for tomorrow.

You'll want to know: 星期

星期 — xīngqī — "week".

> 一个星期有七天 yí ge xīngqī yǒu qī tiān — There are seven days in a week.

The new character, in pieces: 星 — 日 above 生; 期 — an eight-stroke piece on the left and a moon piece on the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 星期 (xīngqī) is built from 星 'star' and 期 'appointed time', both inherited from Middle Chinese, seng and gi (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). How the pair came to mean a week is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: xīngqī
- Say it: xīngqī, once more
- Say it: yí ge xīngqī yǒu qī tiān — There are seven days in a week.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for now, then the Mandarin for tomorrow, then say xīngqī again

Before you move on

What does 星期 mean? ("Week".) Say it once more.

46.2 星 — 日 above 生

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xīngqī — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

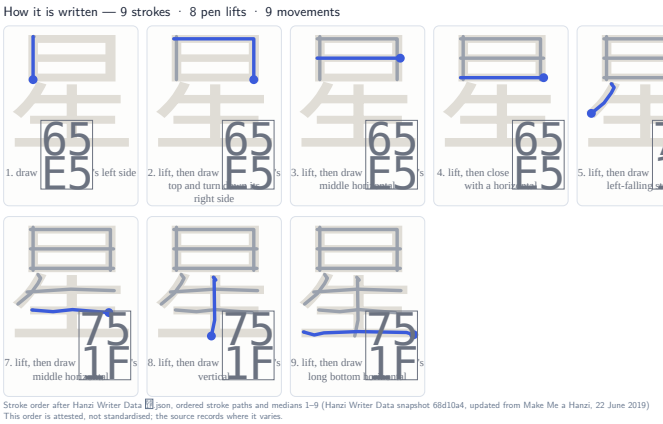
日 生

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rì, shēng

Script — 日 above 生



How 星 is written, stroke by stroke

星

Two pieces you know, top to bottom: 日, then 生.

日, four strokes, short and wide on top.

生, five strokes, as in 学生: a left-falling stroke, a horizontal, a shorter horizontal, the vertical through them, and the long bar at the foot.

4 + 5 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 星, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

Which two characters you know make 星? (日 and 生.) Which is on top? (日.) Which stroke of 生 is last? (The long bar at the foot.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 星, pinned stroke paths and medians.

46.3 期 — eight strokes, then the moon

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xīngqī — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  有 日

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — yǒu, rì

Script — eight strokes, then the moon

How 期 is written, stroke by stroke

期

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, eight strokes. A horizontal at the top. Two verticals down through it. Two short horizontals between them. A long horizontal across the foot. Then a left-falling stroke and a dot under it.

The moon, four strokes. A left-falling stroke down the left. A horizontal that turns down the right and hooks. Two short horizontals inside. It is the lower part of 有.

8 + 4 = twelve.

Your turn

- Write it: 期, all twelve, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 期? (Two — eight strokes, then the moon.) What is under the long bar of the left piece? (A left-falling stroke and a dot.) How does the moon begin? (With a left-falling stroke.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 期, pinned stroke paths and medians.

46.4 星期一 (xīngqīyī) — Monday

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tomorrow, then the Mandarin for week.

You'll want to know: 星期一

星期一 — xīngqīyī — "Monday".

今天星期一 jīntiān xīngqīyī — Today's Monday.

Tone: 一 keeps its first tone here, yī. It counts a day in order, and the change you know from yìbǎi does not apply.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 星期一 (xīngqīyī) is built from 星期 'week' and 一 'one': day one of the week.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: xīngqīyī
- Say it: xīngqīyī, once more

- Say it: jīntiān xīngqīyī — Today's Monday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tomorrow, then the Mandarin for week, then say xīngqīyī again

Before you move on

What does 星期一 mean? ("Monday".) Say it once more.

46.5 shíhou — time; moment

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for week, then the Mandarin for Monday.

You'll want to know: shíhou

shíhou — "time; moment".

nǐ shénme shíhou qù — When are you going?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shíhou is built from shí 'time' and hou 'to wait for', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyi and huwH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: shíhou
- Say it: shíhou, once more
- Say it: nǐ shénme shíhou qù — When are you going?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for week, then the Mandarin for Monday, then say shíhou again

Before you move on

What does shíhou mean? ("Time; moment".) Say it once more.

46.6 zhōumò — weekend

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for Monday, then the Mandarin for moment.

You'll want to know: zhōumò

zhōumò — "weekend".

zhōumò wǒ xǐhuan kàn shū — At the weekend I like to read.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhōumò is built from zhōu 'week' and mò 'end'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese mat (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the tip of a tree' and 'end'. The first character is recorded there as tsyuw, 'a full circuit'; the sense week is not given, so how it came to name the week is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: zhōumò
- Say it: zhōumò, once more
- Say it: zhōumò wǒ xǐhuan kàn shū — At the weekend I like to read.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for Monday, then the Mandarin for moment, then say zhōumò again

Before you move on

What does zhōumò mean? ("Weekend".) Say it once more.

46.7 星期天 (xīngqītiān) — Sunday

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for moment, then the Mandarin for weekend.

You'll want to know: 星期天

星期天 — xīngqītiān — "Sunday".

我喜欢星期天 wǒ xǐhuan xīngqītiān — Sunday is the day I like best.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 星期天 (xīngqītiān) is built from 星期 'week' and 天 'day'.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: xīngqītiān
- Say it: xīngqītiān, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan xīngqītiān — Sunday is the day I like best.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for moment, then the Mandarin for weekend, then say xīngqītiān again

Before you move on

What does 星期天 mean? ("Sunday".) Say it once more.

Chapter 47

Months and Years

Modes: voice (6) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say this year, next year, the month and the date.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 47: I can say this year, next year, the month and the date.

47.1 年 (nián) — year

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for weekend, then the Mandarin for Sunday.

You'll want to know: 年

年 — nián — "year".

> 一年有多少个星期 yì nián yǒu duōshao ge xīngqī — How many weeks are there in a year?

The new character, in pieces: 年 — six strokes: a short fall, two bars, a short vertical on the left, a long bar, and one long vertical through them. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 年 (nián) is inherited from Middle Chinese nen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the grain is ripe'. One harvest a year is the usual explanation of the sense, though the step is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: nián
- Say it: nián, once more
- Say it: yì nián yǒu duōshao ge xīngqī — How many weeks are there in a year?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for weekend, then the Mandarin for Sunday, then say nián again

Before you move on

What does 年 mean? ("Year".) Say it once more.

47.2 年 — three bars and a long vertical

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say nián — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

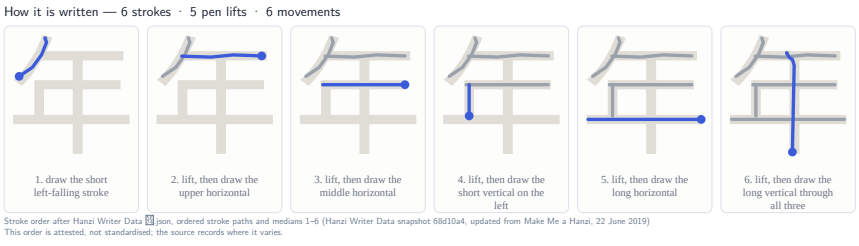
  生 十

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shēng, shí

Script — three bars and a long vertical



How 年 is written, stroke by stroke

年

One piece, six strokes.
A short left-falling stroke at the top left.
Two horizontals, the upper one short, the one below it longer.
A short vertical down from the left end of the second bar.
A long horizontal across the bottom.
Last, the long vertical down through the middle, past the bottom bar.

Your turn

- Write it: 年, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 年? (Six.) What comes first? (A short left-falling stroke.) Which stroke is last? (The long vertical through the middle.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 年, pinned stroke paths and medians.

47.3 yuè — month; moon

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for Sunday, then the Mandarin for year.

You'll want to know: yuè

yuè — "month; moon".

zhège yuè wǒ hěn máng — I'm busy this month.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

yuè is inherited from Middle Chinese ngjwot (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), where the dictionary quotes an old saying that the moon is the essence of water.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: yuè
- Say it: yuè, once more
- Say it: zhège yuè wǒ hěn máng — I'm busy this month.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for Sunday, then the Mandarin for year, then say yuè again

Before you move on

What does yuè mean? ("Month; moon".) Say it once more.

47.4 明年 (míngnián) — next year

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for year, then the Mandarin for month.

You'll want to know: 明年

明年 — míngnián — "next year".

明年我买车 míngnián wǒ mǎi chē — I'm buying a car next year.

The new character, in pieces: 明 — 日 on the left and, on the right, the moon piece, the word yuè from the lesson before. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 明年 (míngnián) is built from 明 'bright' and 年 'year', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjaeng and nen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses mjaeng 'light'.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: míngnián
- Say it: míngnián, once more
- Say it: míngnián wǒ mǎi chē — I'm buying a car next year.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for year, then the Mandarin for month, then say míngnián again

Before you move on

What does 明年 mean? ("Next year".) Say it once more.

47.5 明 — the sun beside the moon

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say míngnián — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  日 期

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rì, qī

Script — the sun beside the moon

How 明 is written, stroke by stroke

明

Two pieces, left before right: the sun, then the moon.
日, four strokes, narrow and set a little high on the left.
The moon, four strokes, as on the right of 期: a left-falling stroke, a horizontal that turns down and hooks, and two short horizontals inside.
4 + 4 = eight.

Your turn

- Write it: 明, all eight, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

Which two pieces make 明? (日 and the moon.) Which character from the last chapters has the same moon on the right? (期.) How many strokes? (Eight.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 明, pinned stroke paths and medians.

47.6 今年 (jīnnián) — this year

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for month, then the Mandarin for next year.

You'll want to know: 今年

今年 — jīnnián — "this year".

我今年十八岁 wǒ jīnnián shíbā suì — I'm eighteen this year.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 今年 (jīnnián) is built from 今 'now' and 年 'year', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kim and nen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: jīnnián
- Say it: jīnnián, once more
- Say it: wǒ jīnnián shíbā suì — I'm eighteen this year.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for month, then the Mandarin for next year, then say jīnnián again

Before you move on

What does 今年 mean? ("This year".) Say it once more.

47.7 日期 (rìqī) — date

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for next year, then the Mandarin for this year.

You'll want to know: 日期

日期 — rìqī — "date".

请看日期 qǐng kàn rìqī — Please check the date.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 日期 (rìqī) is built from 日 'day' and 期 'appointed time', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyit and gi (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: rìqī
- Say it: rìqī, once more
- Say it: qǐng kàn rìqī — Please check the date.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for next year, then the Mandarin for this year, then say rìqī again

Before you move on

What does 日期 mean? ("Date".) Say it once more.

47.8 Looking back: from Coming and Going to Months and Years

Say the Mandarin for to go and to go back.

Your turn

- Say it: to go, to go back, to walk, to go out, school
- Say it: car, restaurant, hospital, to sit, taxi
- Say it: day, today, yesterday, now, tomorrow

- Say it: week, Monday, moment, weekend, Sunday
- Say it: year, month, next year, this year, date
- Read it: 去 车 天 今 星 期 年 明 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

To go? (去, qù.) To go back? (huí.) To walk? (zǒu.) To go out? (chūmén.) School? (xuéxiào.) Car? (车, chē.) Restaurant? (fàndiàn.) Hospital? (yīyuàn.) To sit? (zuò.) Taxi? (chūzūchē.) Day? (天, tiān.) Today? (今天, jīntiān.) Yesterday? (zuótiān.) Now? (xiànzài.) Tomorrow? (míngtiān.) Week? (星期, xīngqī.) Monday? (星期一, xīngqīyī.) Moment? (shíhou.) Weekend? (zhōumò.) Sunday? (星期天, xīngqītiān.) Year? (年, nián.) Month? (yuè.) Next year? (明年, míngnián.) This year? (今年, jīnnián.) Date? (日期, rìqī.)

Chapter 48

Telling the Time

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask the time and say it to the half hour and the minute.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 48: I can ask the time and say it to the half hour and the minute.

48.1 点 (diǎn) — o'clock; dot

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for this year, then the Mandarin for date.

You'll want to know: 点

点 — diǎn — "o'clock; dot".

> 我们明天八点去 wǒmen míngtiān bā diǎn qù — We're going at eight tomorrow.

The new character, in pieces: 点 — a small vertical and bar on top of 口, standing over four dots. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 点 (diǎn) is inherited from Middle Chinese temX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a dot made with the brush'. Its use for the hours is not given there, so how it took that job is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: diǎn
- Say it: diǎn, once more
- Say it: wǒmen míngtiān bā diǎn qù — We're going at eight tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for this year, then the Mandarin for date, then say diǎn again

Before you move on

What does 点 mean? ("O'clock; dot".) Say it once more.

48.2 点 — a mark on 口, over four dots

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say diǎn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

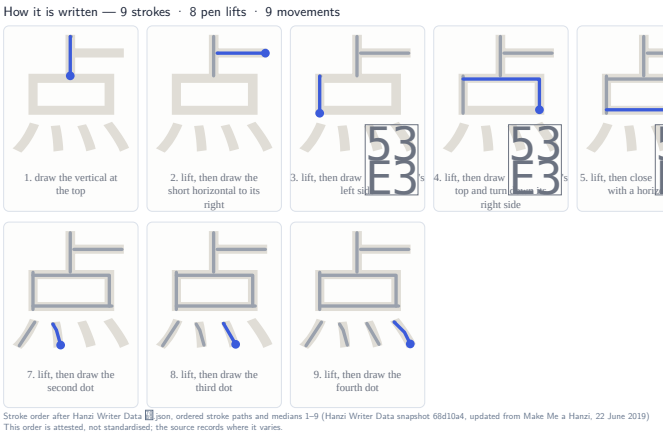
  口 明

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kǒu, míng

Script — a mark on 口, over four dots



How 点 is written, stroke by stroke

点

Three pieces, top to bottom.

Two strokes on top. A short vertical, then a short horizontal from its middle out to the right.

口, three strokes, wide, under them.

Four dots along the bottom, left to right; the first leans left, the other three lean right.

2 + 3 + 4 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 点, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 点? (Three.) Which character you know is in the middle? (口.) How many dots at the bottom? (Four.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 点, pinned stroke paths and medians.

48.3 fēn — minute; to divide

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for date, then the Mandarin for o'clock.

You'll want to know: fēn

fēn — "minute; to divide".

bā diǎn shí fēn — Ten past eight.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fēn is inherited from Middle Chinese pjun (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to divide'. Its use for minutes is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: fēn
- Say it: fēn, once more
- Say it: bā diǎn shí fēn — Ten past eight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for date, then the Mandarin for o'clock, then say fēn again

Before you move on

What does fēn mean? ("Minute; to divide".) Say it once more.

48.4 bàn — half

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for o'clock, then the Mandarin for minute.

You'll want to know: bàn

bàn — "half".

bā diǎn bàn — Half past eight.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bàn is inherited from Middle Chinese panH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a thing divided in the middle'.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: bàn
- Say it: bàn, once more
- Say it: bā diǎn bàn — Half past eight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for o'clock, then the Mandarin for minute, then say bàn again

Before you move on

What does bàn mean? ("Half".) Say it once more.

48.5 jǐ — how many; a few

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for minute, then the Mandarin for half.

You'll want to know: jǐ

jǐ — "how many; a few".

xiànzài jǐ diǎn — What time is it?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
jǐ asks for a small number, as in jǐ diǎn; duōshao asks for any amount.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jǐ is inherited from Middle Chinese kj+jX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'how many'.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: jǐ
- Say it: jǐ, once more
- Say it: xiànzài jǐ diǎn — What time is it?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for minute, then the Mandarin for half, then say jǐ again

Before you move on

What does jǐ mean? ("How many; a few".) Say it once more.

48.6 děng — to wait; to wait for

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for half, then the Mandarin for how many.

You'll want to know: děng

děng — "to wait; to wait for".

wǒ děng nǐ — I'll wait for you.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of děng is inherited from Middle Chinese tongX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'equal, of a kind'. The sense 'to wait' is not given there, so how it got it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: děng
- Say it: děng, once more
- Say it: wǒ děng nǐ — I'll wait for you.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for half, then the Mandarin for how many, then say děng again

Before you move on

What does děng mean? ("To wait; to wait for".) Say it once more.

Chapter 49

A Day from Morning to Night

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the parts of the day and greet somebody in the evening.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 49: I can name the parts of the day and greet somebody in the evening.

49.1 上午 (shàngwǔ) — morning (before noon)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for how many, then the Mandarin for to wait.

You'll want to know: 上午

上午 — shàngwǔ — "morning (before noon)".

> 上午十点我去大学 shàngwǔ shí diǎn wǒ qù dàxué — At ten in the morning I go to the university.

The new character, in pieces: 午 — the top of 年: a short fall, two bars and a vertical. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 上午 (shàngwǔ) is built from 上 'upper, earlier' and 午 'noon', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyangH and nguX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary gives nguX as the name of one of the branches of the old calendar.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: shàngwǔ
- Say it: shàngwǔ, once more
- Say it: shàngwǔ shí diǎn wǒ qù dàxué — At ten in the morning I go to the university.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for how many, then the Mandarin for to wait, then say shàngwǔ again

Before you move on

What does 上午 mean? ("Morning (before noon)".) Say it once more.

49.2 午 — the top of 年

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shàngwǔ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

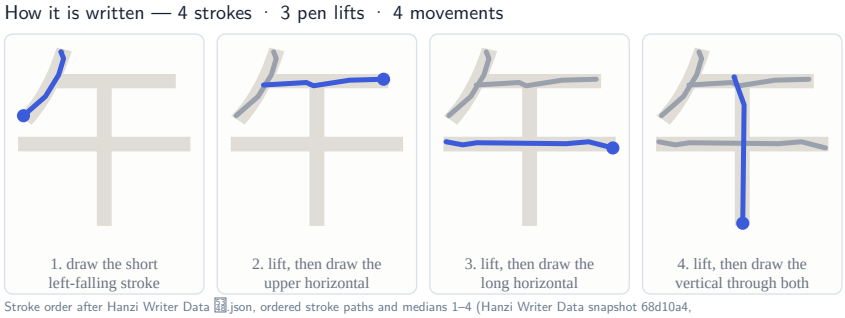
  年 十

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — nián, shí

Script — the top of 午



How 午 is written, stroke by stroke

午

One piece, four strokes.
A short left-falling stroke at the top left.
A shorter horizontal, then a long horizontal under it.
Last, the vertical down through the middle of both bars.
It is 年 with its short vertical and bottom bar left out.

Your turn

- Write it: 午, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

Which character you know begins like 午? (年.) How many strokes? (Four.) Which bar is longer? (The lower one.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 午, pinned stroke paths and medians.

49.3 中午 (zhōngwǔ) — noon

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to wait, then the Mandarin for before noon.

You'll want to know: 中午

中午 — zhōngwǔ — "noon".

中午我们吃饭 zhōngwǔ wǒmen chī fàn — We have lunch at noon.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 中午 (zhōngwǔ) is built from 中 'middle' and 午 'noon', both inherited from Middle Chinese, trjuwng and nguX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: zhōngwǔ
- Say it: zhōngwǔ, once more
- Say it: zhōngwǔ wǒmen chī fàn — We have lunch at noon.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to wait, then the Mandarin for before noon, then say zhōngwǔ again

Before you move on

What does 中午 mean? ("Noon".) Say it once more.

49.4 晚上 (wǎnshang) — evening

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for before noon, then the Mandarin for noon.

You'll want to know: 晚上

晚上 — wǎnshang — "evening".

晚上我看书 wǎnshang wǒ kàn shū — I read in the evenings.

The new character, in pieces: 晚 — 日 on the left and a seven-stroke piece on the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 晚上 (wǎnshang) is built from 晚 'dusk' and the light ending shang, as in 早上. 晚 is inherited from Middle Chinese mjonX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'dusk'.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: wǎnshang
- Say it: wǎnshang, once more
- Say it: wǎnshang wǒ kàn shū — I read in the evenings.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for before noon, then the Mandarin for noon, then say wǎnshang again

Before you move on

What does 晚上 mean? ("Evening".) Say it once more.

49.5 晚 — 日, then seven strokes

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say wǎnshang — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  日 多

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rì, duō

Script — 日, then seven strokes

How 晚 is written, stroke by stroke

晚

Two pieces, left before right.
日, four strokes, narrow on the left.

The right piece, seven strokes. A short left-falling stroke and a short stroke that runs across and falls, like the top of 多. A vertical, a horizontal that turns down, and a horizontal under it to close a small box. Then a left-falling stroke, and a vertical that bends right along the bottom and hooks up.

4 + 7 = eleven.

Your turn

- Write it: 晚, all eleven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 晚? (Two — 日, then seven strokes.) Which character you know starts the right piece the same way? (多.) How does the last stroke end? (It hooks up.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 晚, pinned stroke paths and medians.

49.6 xiàwǔ — afternoon

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for noon, then the Mandarin for evening.

You'll want to know: xiàwǔ

xiàwǔ — "afternoon".

xiàwǔ wǒ hěn máng — I'm busy in the afternoon.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiàwǔ is built from xià 'lower, after' and 午 'noon', both inherited from Middle Chinese, haeX and nguX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàwǔ
- Say it: xiàwǔ, once more
- Say it: xiàwǔ wǒ hěn máng — I'm busy in the afternoon.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for noon, then the Mandarin for evening, then say xiàwǔ again

Before you move on

What does xiàwǔ mean? ("Afternoon".) Say it once more.

49.7 晚上好 (wǎnshang hǎo) — good evening

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for evening, then the Mandarin for afternoon.

You'll want to know: 晚上好

晚上好 — wǎnshang hǎo — "good evening".

大家晚上好 dàjiā wǎnshang hǎo — Good evening, everyone.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 晚上好 (wǎnshang hǎo) is built from 晚上 'evening' and 好 'good', the same shape as 早上好.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: wǎnshang hǎo
- Say it: wǎnshang hǎo, once more
- Say it: dàjiā wǎnshang hǎo — Good evening, everyone.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for evening, then the Mandarin for afternoon, then say wǎnshang hǎo again

Before you move on

What does 晚上好 mean? ("Good evening".) Say it once more.

Chapter 50

Sleeping and Waking

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say when I sleep, get up and rest, and ask about health.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 50: I can say when I sleep, get up and rest, and ask about health.

50.1 shuìjiào — to sleep; to go to bed

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for afternoon, then the Mandarin for good evening.

You'll want to know: shuìjiào

shuìjiào — "to sleep; to go to bed".

> wǒ qù shuìjiào — I'm off to bed.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shuìjiào is built from shuì 'to sleep' and jiào 'sleep', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyweH and kaewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second with this very pair.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: shuìjiào
- Say it: shuìjiào, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù shuìjiào — I'm off to bed.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for afternoon, then the Mandarin for good evening, then say shuìjiào again

Before you move on

What does shuìjiào mean? ("To sleep; to go to bed".) Say it once more.

50.2 qǐchuáng — to get up

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for good evening, then the Mandarin for to sleep.

You'll want to know: qǐchuáng

qǐchuáng — "to get up".

wǒ qī diǎn qǐchuáng — I get up at seven.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qǐchuáng is built from qǐ 'to rise' and chuáng 'bed', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khiX and dzrjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: qǐchuáng
- Say it: qǐchuáng, once more
- Say it: wǒ qī diǎn qǐchuáng — I get up at seven.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for good evening, then the Mandarin for to sleep, then say qǐchuáng again

Before you move on

What does qǐchuáng mean? ("To get up".) Say it once more.

50.3 xiūxi — to rest

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sleep, then the Mandarin for to get up.

You'll want to know: xiūxi

xiūxi — "to rest".

xīngqītiān wǒ xiūxi — On Sunday I take it easy.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiūxi is built from xiū 'to rest' and xi 'to stop, to breathe', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xjuw and sik (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: xiūxi
- Say it: xiūxi, once more

- Say it: xīngqītiān wǒ xiūxi — On Sunday I take it easy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sleep, then the Mandarin for to get up, then say xiūxi again

Before you move on

What does xiūxi mean? ("To rest".) Say it once more.

50.4 shēntǐ — body; health

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get up, then the Mandarin for to rest.

You'll want to know: shēntǐ

shēntǐ — "body; health".

nǐ shēntǐ hǎo ma — How's your health?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shēntǐ is built from shēn 'body, self' and tǐ 'body', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syin and thejX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: shēntǐ
- Say it: shēntǐ, once more
- Say it: nǐ shēntǐ hǎo ma — How's your health?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get up, then the Mandarin for to rest, then say shēntǐ again

Before you move on

What does shēntǐ mean? (“Body; health”.) Say it once more.

50.5 bìng — to fall ill; illness

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to rest, then the Mandarin for health.

You’ll want to know: bìng

bìng — “to fall ill; illness”.

wǒ māma bìng le — My mum is ill.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bìng is inherited from Middle Chinese bjaengH (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), glossed ’worry, pain’ and ’an illness grown worse’.

What you’ve built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: bìng
- Say it: bìng, once more
- Say it: wǒ māma bìng le — My mum is ill.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to rest, then the Mandarin for health, then say bìng again

Before you move on

What does bìng mean? (“To fall ill; illness”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 51

How You Feel

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I am happy, afraid, cold or hot.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 51: I can say I am happy, afraid, cold or hot.

51.1 gāoxìng — happy; glad

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for health, then the Mandarin for to fall ill.

You'll want to know: gāoxìng

gāoxìng — "happy; glad".

> wǒ hěn gāoxìng — I'm so pleased.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gāoxìng is built from gāo 'high' and xìng 'mood', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kaw and xingH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'high'; it gives the second reading no gloss of its own, so 'mood' is the usual explanation, not a settled one.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: gāoxìng
- Say it: gāoxìng, once more
- Say it: wǒ hěn gāoxìng — I'm so pleased.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for health, then the Mandarin for to fall ill, then say gāoxìng again

Before you move on

What does gāoxìng mean? ("Happy; glad".) Say it once more.

51.2 pà — to be afraid of; to fear

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to fall ill, then the Mandarin for happy.

You'll want to know: pà

pà — "to be afraid of; to fear".

nǐ pà shénme — What are you afraid of?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

pà is inherited from Middle Chinese phaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to fear'.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: pà
- Say it: pà, once more
- Say it: nǐ pà shénme — What are you afraid of?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to fall ill, then the Mandarin for happy, then say pà again

Before you move on

What does pà mean? ("To be afraid of; to fear".) Say it once more.

51.3 lěng — cold

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for happy, then the Mandarin for to be afraid.

You'll want to know: lěng

lěng — "cold".

jīntiān hěn lěng — It's cold today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lěng is inherited from Middle Chinese lengX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'cold'.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: lěng
- Say it: lěng, once more

- Say it: jīntiān hěn lěng — It's cold today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for happy, then the Mandarin for to be afraid, then say lěng again

Before you move on

What does lěng mean? ("Cold".) Say it once more.

51.4 rè — hot

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be afraid, then the Mandarin for cold.

You'll want to know: rè

rè — "hot".

zhōngwǔ hěn rè — It's hot at midday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

rè is inherited from Middle Chinese nyet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains as burning, as if by fire.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: rè
- Say it: rè, once more
- Say it: zhōngwǔ hěn rè — It's hot at midday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be afraid, then the Mandarin for cold, then say rè again

Before you move on

What does rè mean? (“Hot”.) Say it once more.

51.5 kū — to cry; to weep

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for cold, then the Mandarin for hot.

You’ll want to know: kū

kū — “to cry; to weep”.

háizi kū le — The child started crying.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

kū is inherited from Middle Chinese khuwk (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), glossed ’a sound of grief’.

What you’ve built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: kū
- Say it: kū, once more
- Say it: háizi kū le — The child started crying.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for cold, then the Mandarin for hot, then say kū again

Before you move on

What does kū mean? (“To cry; to weep”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 52

Head, Hands and Feet

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my head, hands, feet, eyes and ears.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 52: I can name my head, hands, feet, eyes and ears.

52.1 手 (shǒu) — hand

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hot, then the Mandarin for to cry.

You'll want to know: 手

手 — shǒu — "hand".

> 我的手很小 wǒ de shǒu hěn xiǎo — My hands are small.

The new character, in pieces: 手 — a short fall, two bars, and a vertical that hooks at the foot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 手 (shǒu) is inherited from Middle Chinese syuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed with the pair 'hand and foot'.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: shǒu
- Say it: shǒu, once more
- Say it: wǒ de shǒu hěn xiǎo — My hands are small.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hot, then the Mandarin for to cry, then say shǒu again

Before you move on

What does 手 mean? ("Hand".) Say it once more.

52.2 手 — a fall, two bars, a hook

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shǒu — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

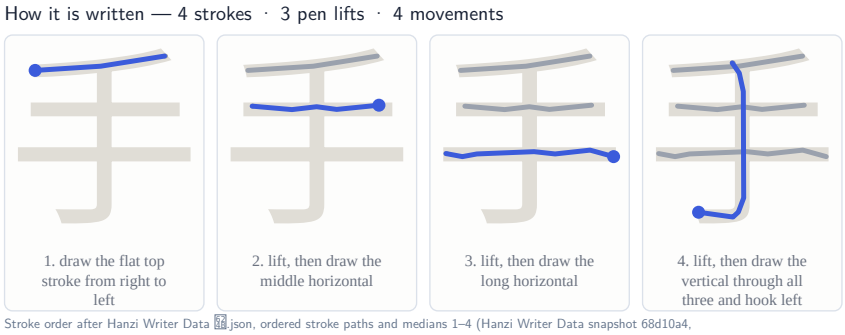
  看 小

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kàn, xiǎo

Script — a fall, two bars, a hook



How 手 is written, stroke by stroke

手

One piece, four strokes, top to bottom.
A short left-falling stroke across the top, from right to left.
Two horizontals, the lower one longer.
Last, a vertical down through both bars, hooking to the left at the foot.

The top of 看 is this hand, squeezed flat over the eye.

Your turn

- Write it: 手, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 手? (Four.) Which way does the first stroke fall? (To the left.) Which character you know has a hand on top? (看.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 手, pinned stroke paths and medians.

52.3 tóu — head

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to cry, then the Mandarin for hand.

You'll want to know: tóu

tóu — "head".

tā de tóu hěn dà — He's got a big head.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tóu is inherited from Middle Chinese duw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'head'.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: tóu
- Say it: tóu, once more
- Say it: tā de tóu hěn dà — He's got a big head.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to cry, then the Mandarin for hand, then say tóu again

Before you move on

What does tóu mean? ("Head".) Say it once more.

52.4 jiǎo — foot

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hand, then the Mandarin for head.

You'll want to know: jiǎo

jiǎo — "foot".

wǒ de jiǎo hěn lěng — My feet are cold.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiǎo is inherited from Middle Chinese kjak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains as the part that tucks back when you sit; whether that meant the leg or the foot is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: jiǎo
- Say it: jiǎo, once more
- Say it: wǒ de jiǎo hěn lěng — My feet are cold.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hand, then the Mandarin for head, then say jiǎo again

Before you move on

What does jiǎo mean? ("Foot".) Say it once more.

52.5 yǎnjing — eye

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for head, then the Mandarin for foot.

You'll want to know: yǎnjing

yǎnjing — "eye".

tā de yǎnjing hěn hǎokàn — She has lovely eyes.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǎnjing is built from yǎn 'eye' and jing 'eyeball', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngeanX and tsjeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: yǎnjing
- Say it: yǎnjing, once more
- Say it: tā de yǎnjing hěn hǎokàn — She has lovely eyes.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for head, then the Mandarin for foot, then say yǎnjing again

Before you move on

What does yǎnjing mean? ("Eye".) Say it once more.

52.6 ěrduo — ear

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for foot, then the Mandarin for eye.

You'll want to know: ěrduo

ěrduo — "ear".

háizi de ěrduo hěn xiǎo — The child's ears are tiny.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of ěrduo is built from ěr 'ear' and duo, both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyiX and twaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as what hears and the second as something hanging from a tree; the second probably names the soft lobe that hangs, though that is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: ěrduo
- Say it: ěrduo, once more
- Say it: háizi de ěrduo hěn xiǎo — The child's ears are tiny.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for foot, then the Mandarin for eye, then say ěrduo again

Before you move on

What does ěrduo mean? ("Ear".) Say it once more.

52.7 Looking back: from Telling the Time to Head, Hands and Feet

Say the Mandarin for o'clock and minute.

Your turn

- Say it: o'clock, minute, half, how many, to wait
- Say it: before noon, noon, evening, afternoon, good evening
- Say it: to sleep, to get up, to rest, health, to fall ill
- Say it: happy, to be afraid, cold, hot, to cry
- Say it: hand, head, foot, eye, ear

- Read it: 点 午 晚 手 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

O'clock? (点, diǎn.) Minute? (fēn.) Half? (bàn.) How many? (jǐ.) To wait? (děng.) Before noon? (上午, shàngwǔ.) Noon? (中午, zhōngwǔ.) Evening? (晚上, wǎnshang.) Afternoon? (xiàwǔ.) Good evening? (晚上好, wǎnshang hǎo.) To sleep? (shuìjiào.) To get up? (qǐchuáng.) To rest? (xiūxi.) Health? (shēntǐ.) To fall ill? (bìng.) Happy? (gāoxìng.) To be afraid? (pà.) Cold? (lěng.) Hot? (rè.) To cry? (kū.) Hand? (手, shǒu.) Head? (tóu.) Foot? (jiǎo.) Eye? (yǎnjing.) Ear? (ěrduo.)

Chapter 53

Speaking and Hearing

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I understand or not, and ask somebody to speak slowly.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 53: I can say that I understand or not, and ask somebody to speak slowly.

53.1 说 (shuō) — to say; to speak

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for eye, then the Mandarin for ear.

You'll want to know: 说

说 — shuō — "to say; to speak".

> 他说你的手很好看 tā shuō nǐ de shǒu hěn hǎokàn — He says you have lovely hands.

The new character, in pieces: 说 — 讠 , the speech piece, on the left; on the right a dot and a short fall, then 口, then two legs. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 说 (shuō) is inherited from Middle Chinese sywet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to tell'.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: shuō
- Say it: shuō, once more
- Say it: tā shuō nǐ de shǒu hěn hǎokàn — He says you have lovely hands.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for eye, then the Mandarin for ear, then say shuō again

Before you move on

What does 说 mean? ("To say; to speak".) Say it once more.

53.2 说 — the speech piece, then a mouth with legs

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shuō — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

讠 请

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — the speech piece, qǐng

Script — the speech piece, then a mouth with legs

How 说 is written, stroke by stroke

说

Two pieces, left before right.

The speech piece, 讠, two strokes, as in 请: a dot, then a short horizontal that turns down and finishes rising to the upper right, all one stroke.

The right piece, seven strokes, top to bottom. A dot and a short left-falling stroke, leaning in toward each other. 口 under them. Then two legs: a left-falling stroke, and a vertical that bends right along the bottom and hooks up.

2 + 7 = nine, and five of them are 讠 and 口.

Your turn

- Write it: 说, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 说? (Two — 讠, then the right side.) Which character you know is in the middle of the right side? (口.) How does the last stroke end? (It hooks up.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 说, pinned stroke paths and medians.

53.3 话 (huà) — words; speech

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for ear, then the Mandarin for to say.

You'll want to know: 话

话 — huà — "words; speech".

他说中国话 tā shuō Zhōngguó huà — He speaks Chinese.

The new character, in pieces: 话 — 讠 on the left; on the right a short fall, a bar and a vertical, standing on 口. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 话 (huà) is inherited from Middle Chinese hwaejH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'talk'.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: huà
- Say it: huà, once more
- Say it: tā shuō Zhōngguó huà — He speaks Chinese.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for ear, then the Mandarin for to say, then say huà again

Before you move on

What does 话 mean? ("Words; speech".) Say it once more.

53.4 话 — the speech piece, then a mouth

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say huà — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  说 语

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shuō, yǔ

Script — the speech piece, then a mouth

How 话 is written, stroke by stroke

话

Two pieces, left before right.
The speech piece, 讠, two strokes, as in 说.
The right piece, six strokes, top to bottom. A short left-falling stroke along the top. A long horizontal. A vertical down from the top through the bar. Then 口 at the foot.
2 + 3 + 3 = eight.

Your turn

- Write it: 话, all eight, with the model in front of you

- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 话? (Two — 讠 , then the right side.) What does the right side stand on? (口.) Which character did your hand write a moment ago, with the same left piece? (说.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 话, pinned stroke paths and medians.

53.5 tīng — to listen; to hear

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to say, then the Mandarin for spoken words.

You'll want to know: tīng

tīng — "to listen; to hear".

nǐ tīng wǒ shuō — Listen to me.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tīng is inherited from Middle Chinese theng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to listen'.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: tīng
- Say it: tīng, once more
- Say it: nǐ tīng wǒ shuō — Listen to me.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to say, then the Mandarin for spoken words, then say tīng again

Before you move on

What does tīng mean? (“To listen; to hear”.) Say it once more.

53.6 dǒng — to understand

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for spoken words, then the Mandarin for to listen.

You’ll want to know: dǒng

dǒng — “to understand”.

wǒ bù dǒng — I don’t understand.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǒng has no older form in any dictionary we use, so its history is not settled.

What you’ve built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: dǒng
- Say it: dǒng, once more
- Say it: wǒ bù dǒng — I don’t understand.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for spoken words, then the Mandarin for to listen, then say dǒng again

Before you move on

What does dǒng mean? (“To understand”.) Say it once more.

53.7 màn — slow

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to listen, then the Mandarin for to understand.

You'll want to know: màn

màn — "slow".

tā shuō huà hěn màn — He speaks slowly.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of màn is inherited from Middle Chinese maenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'lazy, haughty'. The sense 'slow' is not given there; from lazy to slow is a likely step, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: màn
- Say it: màn, once more
- Say it: tā shuō huà hěn màn — He speaks slowly.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to listen, then the Mandarin for to understand, then say màn again

Before you move on

What does màn mean? ("Slow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 54

Learning

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I study, read and ask about in class.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 54: I can say what I study, read and ask about in class.

54.1 xuéxí — to study; to learn

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to understand, then the Mandarin for slow.

You'll want to know: xuéxí

xuéxí — "to study; to learn".

> wǒ xuéxí hànyǔ — I'm learning Chinese.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xuéxí is built from 学 'to learn' and xí 'to practise', both inherited from Middle Chinese, haewk and zip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses zip with the first.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: xuéxí
- Say it: xuéxí, once more
- Say it: wǒ xuéxí hànyǔ — I'm learning Chinese.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to understand, then the Mandarin for slow, then say xuéxí again

Before you move on

What does xuéxí mean? ("To study; to learn".) Say it once more.

54.2 xiě — to write

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for slow, then the Mandarin for to learn.

You'll want to know: xiě

xiě — "to write".

wǒ xiě hànzì — I'm practising characters.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiě is inherited from Middle Chinese sjaeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to remove' and 'to copy out a book'.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: xiě
- Say it: xiě, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiě hànzì — I'm practising characters.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for slow, then the Mandarin for to learn, then say xiě again

Before you move on

What does xiě mean? ("To write".) Say it once more.

54.3 dú — to read aloud; to study

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to learn, then the Mandarin for to write.

You'll want to know: dú

dú — "to read aloud; to study".

wǒ xǐhuan dú shū — I love reading.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dú is inherited from Middle Chinese duwk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to recite'.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: dú
- Say it: dú, once more

- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan dú shū — I love reading.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to learn, then the Mandarin for to write, then say dú again

Before you move on

What does dú mean? ("To read aloud; to study".) Say it once more.

54.4 wèn — to ask

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to write, then the Mandarin for to read aloud.

You'll want to know: wèn

wèn — "to ask".

wǒ wèn lǎoshī — I'll ask the teacher.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wèn is inherited from Middle Chinese mjunH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to inquire'.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: wèn
- Say it: wèn, once more
- Say it: wǒ wèn lǎoshī — I'll ask the teacher.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to write, then the Mandarin for to read aloud, then say wèn again

Before you move on

What does wèn mean? (“To ask”.) Say it once more.

54.5 kè — lesson; class

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to read aloud, then the Mandarin for to ask.

You’ll want to know: kè

kè — “lesson; class”.

jīntiān yǒu hànyǔ kè — There’s a Chinese class today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kè is inherited from Middle Chinese khwaH (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), glossed ’a tax’ and ’a test’. The sense ’lesson’ is not given there, so how it got it is not settled.

What you’ve built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: kè
- Say it: kè, once more
- Say it: jīntiān yǒu hànyǔ kè — There’s a Chinese class today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to read aloud, then the Mandarin for to ask, then say kè again

Before you move on

What does kè mean? (“Lesson; class”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 55

What You Love

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I would like to do and what I love.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 55: I can say what I would like to do and what I love.

55.1 想 (xiǎng) — to want to; to think; to miss

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to ask, then the Mandarin for lesson.

You'll want to know: 想

想 — xiǎng — "to want to; to think; to miss".

> 我想说中国话 wǒ xiǎng shuō Zhōngguó huà — I'd like to speak Chinese.

The new character, in pieces: 想 — a tree piece and an eye piece side by side, over a heart piece. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

xiǎng before another verb says what you would like to do: wǒ xiǎng shuō.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 想 (xiǎng) is inherited from Middle Chinese sjangX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to think'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: xiǎng
- Say it: xiǎng, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng shuō Zhōngguó huà — I'd like to speak Chinese.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to ask, then the Mandarin for lesson, then say xiǎng again

Before you move on

What does 想 mean? ("To want to; to think; to miss".) Say it once more.

55.2 想 — a tree and an eye, over a heart

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xiǎng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  看 说

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kàn, shuō

Script — a tree and an eye, over a heart

How 想 is written, stroke by stroke

想

Three pieces: the tree, then the eye, then the heart below. Count three, not thirteen.

The tree, four strokes, narrow on the top left: a horizontal, a vertical through it, a left-falling stroke, and a dot.

The eye, five strokes, on the top right: a vertical, a horizontal that turns down, and three short horizontals inside, the last one closing it. It is the box at the bottom of 看.

The heart, four strokes, wide underneath: a dot, a long curve that sweeps right and hooks up, then two more dots.

4 + 5 + 4 = thirteen.

Your turn

- Write it: 想, all thirteen, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 想? (Three — the tree, the eye, the heart.) Which character you know has the same eye in it? (看.) What does the heart begin with? (A dot.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 想, pinned stroke paths and medians.

55.3 ài — to love

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for lesson, then the Mandarin for to want to.

You'll want to know: ài

ài — "to love".

wǒ ài nǐ — I love you.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

ài is inherited from Middle Chinese 'ojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to cherish'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: ài
- Say it: ài, once more
- Say it: wǒ ài nǐ — I love you.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for lesson, then the Mandarin for to want to, then say ài again

Before you move on

What does ài mean? ("To love".) Say it once more.

55.4 diànyǐng — film; movie

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to want to, then the Mandarin for to love.

You'll want to know: diànyǐng

diànyǐng — "film; movie".

wǒ xǐhuan kàn diànyǐng — I like going to the cinema.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of diànyǐng is built from diàn 'lightning', now 'electricity', and yǐng 'shadow', both inherited from Middle Chinese, denH and 'jaengX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): electric shadows.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: diànyǐng
- Say it: diànyǐng, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan kàn diànyǐng — I like going to the cinema.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to want to, then the Mandarin for to love, then say diànyǐng again

Before you move on

What does diànyǐng mean? ("Film; movie".) Say it once more.

55.5 chànggē — to sing

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to love, then the Mandarin for film.

You'll want to know: chànggē

chànggē — "to sing".

tā xǐhuan chànggē — She loves singing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chànggē is built from chàng 'to strike up a song' and gē 'song', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhangH and ka (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: chànggē
- Say it: chànggē, once more
- Say it: tā xǐhuan chànggē — She loves singing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to love, then the Mandarin for film, then say chànggē again

Before you move on

What does chànggē mean? ("To sing".) Say it once more.

55.6 kāfēi — coffee

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for film, then the Mandarin for to sing.

You'll want to know: kāfēi

kāfēi — "coffee".

nǐ hē kāfēi ma — Do you drink coffee?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kāfēi is borrowed from a European word for coffee; it is usually traced to English coffee, though the path is not documented in what we can open.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: kāfēi
- Say it: kāfēi, once more
- Say it: nǐ hē kāfēi ma — Do you drink coffee?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for film, then the Mandarin for to sing, then say kāfēi again

Before you move on

What does kāfēi mean? ("Coffee".) Say it once more.

Chapter 56

Free Time

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I do for fun: play, sport, running and laughing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 56: I can say what I do for fun: play, sport, running and laughing.

56.1 wán — to play; to have fun

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sing, then the Mandarin for coffee.

You'll want to know: wán

wán — "to play; to have fun".

> háizi xǐhuan wán — Children love to play.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wán is inherited from Middle Chinese ngwanH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to toy with'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: wán
- Say it: wán, once more
- Say it: háizi xǐhuan wán — Children love to play.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sing, then the Mandarin for coffee, then say wán again

Before you move on

What does wán mean? ("To play; to have fun".) Say it once more.

56.2 dǎqiú — to play ball

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for coffee, then the Mandarin for to play.

You'll want to know: dǎqiú

dǎqiú — "to play ball".

xīngqītiān wǒmen dǎqiú — We play ball on Sunday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎqiú is built from dǎ 'to strike' and qiú 'ball', both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and gjuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), though dǎ is not the sound taengX would regularly give. The dictionary glosses gjuw as 'fine jade', and under another way of writing it as a ball of fur that is struck.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎqiú
- Say it: dǎqiú, once more
- Say it: xīngqītiān wǒmen dǎqiú — We play ball on Sunday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for coffee, then the Mandarin for to play, then say dǎqiú again

Before you move on

What does dǎqiú mean? ("To play ball".) Say it once more.

56.3 yùndòng — sport; exercise

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to play, then the Mandarin for to play ball.

You'll want to know: yùndòng

yùndòng — "sport; exercise".

wǒ xǐhuan yùndòng — I like sport.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yùndòng is built from yùn 'to move round, to carry' and dòng 'to move', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjunH and duwngX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The sense 'sport' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: yùndòng
- Say it: yùndòng, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan yùndòng — I like sport.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to play, then the Mandarin for to play ball, then say yùndòng again

Before you move on

What does yùndòng mean? ("Sport; exercise".) Say it once more.

56.4 pǎobù — to run; to jog

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to play ball, then the Mandarin for sport.

You'll want to know: pǎobù

pǎobù — "to run; to jog".

wǒ zǎoshang pǎobù — I go for a run in the mornings.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of pǎobù is built from pǎo 'to run' and bù 'step', both inherited from Middle Chinese, baew and buH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses baew as a foot pawing the ground.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: pǎobù
- Say it: pǎobù, once more

- Say it: wǒ zǎoshang pǎobù — I go for a run in the mornings.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to play ball, then the Mandarin for sport, then say pǎobù again

Before you move on

What does pǎobù mean? ("To run; to jog".) Say it once more.

56.5 xiào — to laugh; to smile

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for sport, then the Mandarin for to run.

You'll want to know: xiào

xiào — "to laugh; to smile".

tā xiào le — She laughed.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiào is inherited from Middle Chinese sjewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'glad, joyful'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: xiào
- Say it: xiào, once more
- Say it: tā xiào le — She laughed.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for sport, then the Mandarin for to run, then say xiào again

Before you move on

What does xiào mean? (“To laugh; to smile”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 57

At Home

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my house, my room and the things in it, and say here.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 57: I can name my house, my room and the things in it, and say here.

57.1 fángzi — house

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to run, then the Mandarin for to laugh.

You'll want to know: fángzi

fángzi — "house".

> zhè shì wǒ de fángzi — This is my house.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fángzi is built from fáng 'room' and the noun ending zi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjang and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: fángzi
- Say it: fángzi, once more
- Say it: zhè shì wǒ de fángzi — This is my house.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to run, then the Mandarin for to laugh, then say fángzi again

Before you move on

What does fángzi mean? ("House".) Say it once more.

57.2 fángjiān — room

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to laugh, then the Mandarin for house.

You'll want to know: fángjiān

fángjiān — "room".

wǒ de fángjiān hěn xiǎo — My room is small.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fángjiān is built from fáng 'room' and jiān 'space between', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjang and kean (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary lists the second under an older form of the character, glossed 'a gap'.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: fángjiān
- Say it: fángjiān, once more
- Say it: wǒ de fángjiān hěn xiǎo — My room is small.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to laugh, then the Mandarin for house, then say fángjiān again

Before you move on

What does fángjiān mean? ("Room".) Say it once more.

57.3 zhuōzi — table

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for house, then the Mandarin for room.

You'll want to know: zhuōzi

zhuōzi — "table".

wǒ de zhuōzi hěn dà — My desk is big.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhuōzi is built from zhuō and the noun ending zi. The Guangyun lists the first character as traewk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), an old way of writing a word for 'high'; the table sense is not given there, so how it got it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: zhuōzi
- Say it: zhuōzi, once more
- Say it: wǒ de zhuōzi hěn dà — My desk is big.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for house, then the Mandarin for room, then say zhuōzi again

Before you move on

What does zhuōzi mean? ("Table".) Say it once more.

57.4 yǐzi — chair

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for room, then the Mandarin for table.

You'll want to know: yǐzi

yǐzi — "chair".

zhè shì háizi de yǐzi — This is the child's chair.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǐzi is built from yǐ and the noun ending zi. The Guangyun records the first character as 'jeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), and in a second reading as the name of a tree; the chair sense is not given there, so how it got it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: yǐzi
- Say it: yǐzi, once more
- Say it: zhè shì háizi de yǐzi — This is the child's chair.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for room, then the Mandarin for table, then say yǐzi again

Before you move on

What does yǐzi mean? ("Chair".) Say it once more.

57.5 这儿 (zhèr) — here

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for table, then the Mandarin for chair.

You'll want to know: 这儿

这儿 — zhèr — "here".

你想来这儿吗 nǐ xiǎng lái zhèr ma — Would you like to come here?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 这儿 (zhèr) is built from 这 'this' and 儿, the ending that runs into the syllable before it as an r.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: zhèr
- Say it: zhèr, once more
- Say it: nǐ xiǎng lái zhèr ma — Would you like to come here?

- Recall: say the Mandarin for table, then the Mandarin for chair, then say zhèr again

Before you move on

What does 这儿 mean? ("Here".) Say it once more.

57.6 Looking back: from Speaking and Hearing to At Home

Say the Mandarin for to say and spoken words.

Your turn

- Say it: to say, spoken words, to listen, to understand, slow
- Say it: to learn, to write, to read aloud, to ask, lesson
- Say it: to want to, to love, film, to sing, coffee
- Say it: to play, to play ball, sport, to run, to laugh
- Say it: house, room, table, chair, here
- Read it: 说 话 想 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

To say? (说, shuō.) Spoken words? (话, huà.) To listen? (tīng.) To understand? (dǒng.) Slow? (màn.) To learn? (xuéxí.) To write? (xiě.) To read aloud? (dú.) To ask? (wèn.) Lesson? (kè.) To want to? (想, xiǎng.) To love? (ài.) Film? (diànyǐng.) To sing? (chànggē.) Coffee? (kāfēi.) To play? (wán.) To play ball? (dǎqiú.) Sport? (yùndòng.) To run? (pǎobù.) To laugh? (xiào.) House? (fángzi.) Room? (fángjiān.) Table? (zhuōzi.) Chair? (yǐzi.) Here? (这儿, zhèr.)

57.7 At Home — once more

Say the Mandarin for house and room.

Your turn

- Say it: house, room, table, chair, here

Before you move on

House? (fángzi.) Room? (fángjiān.) Table? (zhuōzi.) Chair? (yǐzi.) Here? (这儿, zhèr.)

Chapter 58

Things You Carry

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name my phone, my bag, my computer, a cup and my clothes.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 58: I can name my phone, my bag, my computer, a cup and my clothes.

58.1 手机 (shǒujī) — mobile phone

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for chair, then the Mandarin for here.

You'll want to know: 手机

手机 — shǒujī — "mobile phone".

> 这是我的手机 zhè shì wǒ de shǒujī — This is my phone.

The new character, in pieces: 机 — the tree piece on the left, the one at the top left of 想, and on the right a two-stroke piece read jǐ, as in the word for how many. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 手机 (shǒujī) is built from 手 'hand' and 机 'machine'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese kj+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains as the catch that sets off a crossbow. From that catch to any machine is the usual explanation, but the step is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: shǒujī
- Say it: shǒujī, once more
- Say it: zhè shì wǒ de shǒujī — This is my phone.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for chair, then the Mandarin for here, then say shǒujī again

Before you move on

What does 手机 mean? ("Mobile phone".) Say it once more.

58.2 机 — the tree piece, then jǐ

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shǒujī — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

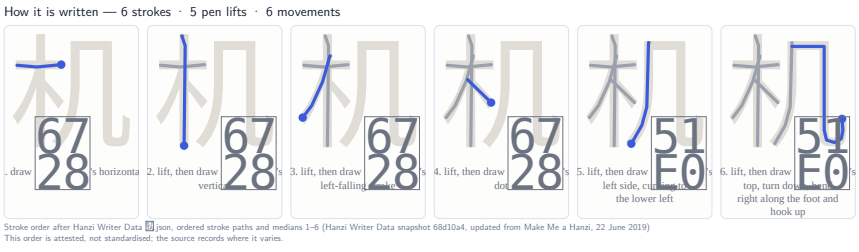
  手 想

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shǒu, xiǎng

Script — the tree piece, then jǐ



How 机 is written, stroke by stroke

机

Two pieces, left before right. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The tree piece, four strokes, narrow on the left, as at the top left of 想: a horizontal, a vertical down through it, a left-falling stroke, and a dot.

The right piece, two strokes, read jǐ, as in the word for how many: a left-falling stroke down the left side, then one stroke that runs across the top, turns down, bends right along the bottom and hooks up.

4 + 2 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 机, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 机? (Two — the tree piece, then jǐ.) Which character you know has the same tree piece? (想.) How does the last stroke end? (It runs along the bottom and hooks up.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 机, pinned stroke paths and medians.

58.3 bāo — bag

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for here, then the Mandarin for mobile phone.

You'll want to know: bāo

bāo — "bag".

wǒ xiǎng mǎi yí ge bāo — I'd like to buy a bag.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bāo is inherited from Middle Chinese paew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to wrap'. The sense 'bag' is not given there; a thing that wraps is the likely step, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: bāo
- Say it: bāo, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng mǎi yí ge bāo — I'd like to buy a bag.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for here, then the Mandarin for mobile phone, then say bāo again

Before you move on

What does bāo mean? ("Bag".) Say it once more.

58.4 diànnǎo — computer

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for mobile phone, then the Mandarin for bag.

You'll want to know: diànnǎo

diànnǎo — "computer".

wǒ xǐhuan wán diànnǎo — I like playing on the computer.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of diànnǎo is built from diàn 'lightning', now 'electricity', and nǎo 'brain', both inherited from Middle Chinese, denH and nawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): an electric brain.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: diànnǎo
- Say it: diànnǎo, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan wán diànnǎo — I like playing on the computer.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for mobile phone, then the Mandarin for bag, then say diànnǎo again

Before you move on

What does diànnǎo mean? ("Computer".) Say it once more.

58.5 bēizi — cup; glass

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bag, then the Mandarin for computer.

You'll want to know: bēizi

bēizi — "cup; glass".

zhè shì nǐ de bēizi ma — Is this your cup?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bēizi is built from bēi and the noun ending zi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, pwoj and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary explains the first, through an older book, as a kind of vessel.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: bēizi
- Say it: bēizi, once more
- Say it: zhè shì nǐ de bēizi ma — Is this your cup?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bag, then the Mandarin for computer, then say bēizi again

Before you move on

What does bēizi mean? ("Cup; glass".) Say it once more.

58.6 yīfu — clothes

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for computer, then the Mandarin for cup.

You'll want to know: yīfu

yīfu — "clothes".

wǒ xǐhuan mǎi yīfu — I love buying clothes.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yīfu is built from yī and fu, both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'j+j and bjuwk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as the garment worn on the upper body, and lists 'clothes' among the senses of the second.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: yīfu
- Say it: yīfu, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan mǎi yīfu — I love buying clothes.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for computer, then the Mandarin for cup, then say yīfu again

Before you move on

What does yīfu mean? (“Clothes”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 59

Clothes

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I wear: shoes, a hat and trousers, and that they look nice.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 59: I can say what I wear: shoes, a hat and trousers, and that they look nice.

59.1 chuān — to wear; to put on

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for cup, then the Mandarin for clothes.

You'll want to know: chuān

chuān — "to wear; to put on".

> míngtiān nǐ chuān shénme — What are you wearing tomorrow?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chuān is inherited from Middle Chinese tsyhwen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to go through' and 'a hole'. Wearing is not given there; putting arms and legs through clothes is the usual explanation, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: chuān
- Say it: chuān, once more
- Say it: míngtiān nǐ chuān shénme — What are you wearing tomorrow?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for cup, then the Mandarin for clothes, then say chuān again

Before you move on

What does chuān mean? ("To wear; to put on".) Say it once more.

59.2 xié — shoe

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for clothes, then the Mandarin for to wear.

You'll want to know: xié

xié — "shoe".

wǒ de jiǎo hěn dà xié hěn xiǎo — My feet are big and the shoes are small.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

xié is inherited from Middle Chinese heaj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'shoe'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: xié
- Say it: xié, once more
- Say it: wǒ de jiǎo hěn dà xié hěn xiǎo — My feet are big and the shoes are small.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for clothes, then the Mandarin for to wear, then say xié again

Before you move on

What does xié mean? ("Shoe".) Say it once more.

59.3 màozi — hat; cap

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to wear, then the Mandarin for shoe.

You'll want to know: màozi

màozi — "hat; cap".

wǒ de tóu hěn dà màozi tài xiǎo le — My head's big; the hat is too small.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of màozi is built from mào and the noun ending zi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, mawH and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as a covering for the head.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: màozi
- Say it: màozi, once more
- Say it: wǒ de tóu hěn dà màozi tài xiǎo le — My head's big; the hat is too small.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to wear, then the Mandarin for shoe, then say màozi again

Before you move on

What does màozi mean? ("Hat; cap".) Say it once more.

59.4 kùzi — trousers

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for shoe, then the Mandarin for hat.

You'll want to know: kùzi

kùzi — "trousers".

zhè shì wǒ gēge de kùzi — These are my brother's trousers.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kùzi is built from kù and the noun ending zi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, khuH and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary lists the first under a variant form of the character and explains it, through an older book, as a garment for the shins.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: kùzi
- Say it: kùzi, once more
- Say it: zhè shì wǒ gēge de kùzi — These are my brother's trousers.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for shoe, then the Mandarin for hat, then say kùzi again

Before you move on

What does kùzi mean? ("Trousers".) Say it once more.

59.5 piàoliang — pretty; good-looking

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hat, then the Mandarin for trousers.

You'll want to know: piàoliang

piàoliang — "pretty; good-looking".

tā de yǎnjing hěn piàoliang — She has beautiful eyes.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of piàoliang is built from piào and liang, both inherited from Middle Chinese, phjiewH and ljangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as beating silk floss in water and the second as 'bright'; how the pair came to mean pretty is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: piàoliang
- Say it: piàoliang, once more
- Say it: tā de yǎnjing hěn piàoliang — She has beautiful eyes.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hat, then the Mandarin for trousers, then say piàoliang again

Before you move on

What does piàoliang mean? ("Pretty; good-looking".) Say it once more.

Chapter 60

Colours

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name white, red, black and blue, and ask about colours.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 60: I can name white, red, black and blue, and ask about colours.

60.1 白 (bái) — white; pale

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for trousers, then the Mandarin for pretty.

You'll want to know: 白

白 — bái — "white; pale".

> 他的手很白 tā de shǒu hěn bái — His hands are very pale.

The new character, in pieces: 白 — a short fall on top of 日. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 白 (bái) is inherited from Middle Chinese baek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the colour of the west', the direction that the old scheme of five colours paired with white.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: bái
- Say it: bái, once more
- Say it: tā de shǒu hěn bái — His hands are very pale.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for trousers, then the Mandarin for pretty, then say bái again

Before you move on

What does 白 mean? ("White; pale".) Say it once more.

60.2 白 — a short fall over 日

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say bái — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

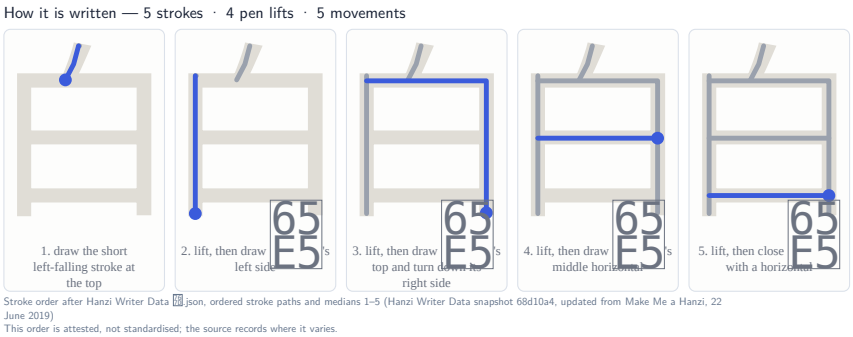
日 百

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rì, bǎi

Script — a short fall over 日



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–5 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 白 is written, stroke by stroke

白

Two pieces, top to bottom.
A short left-falling stroke at the top, from the right down to the left.
日, four strokes, the same four your hand makes in 日: the left side, the top that turns down the right side, the middle bar, and the bar that closes the bottom.
1 + 4 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 白, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 白? (Five.) What comes before 日? (A short fall at the top.) Which number you know has 白 under its top bar? (百.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 白, pinned stroke paths and medians.

60.3 yánsè — colour

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for pretty, then the Mandarin for white.

You'll want to know: yánsè

yánsè — "colour".

wǒ ài zhège yánsè — I love this colour.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yánsè is built from yán 'face' and sè, both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngaen and srik (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second with the whole word, 'colour'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: yánsè
- Say it: yánsè, once more
- Say it: wǒ ài zhège yánsè — I love this colour.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for pretty, then the Mandarin for white, then say yánsè again

Before you move on

What does yánsè mean? ("Colour".) Say it once more.

60.4 hóng — red

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for white, then the Mandarin for colour.

You'll want to know: hóng

hóng — "red".

zhège píngguǒ hěn hóng — This apple is really red.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hóng is inherited from Middle Chinese huwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a colour'; which colour is not said there.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: hóng
- Say it: hóng, once more
- Say it: zhège píngguǒ hěn hóng — This apple is really red.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for white, then the Mandarin for colour, then say hóng again

Before you move on

What does hóng mean? ("Red".) Say it once more.

60.5 hēi — black; dark

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for colour, then the Mandarin for red.

You'll want to know: hēi

hēi — "black; dark".

nàge fángjiān hěn hēi — That room is dark.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

hēi is inherited from Middle Chinese xok (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the colour of the north', which the old scheme of five colours paired with black.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: hēi
- Say it: hēi, once more
- Say it: nàge fángjiān hěn hēi — That room is dark.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for colour, then the Mandarin for red, then say hēi again

Before you move on

What does hēi mean? ("Black; dark".) Say it once more.

60.6 lán — blue

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for red, then the Mandarin for black.

You'll want to know: lán

lán — "blue".

tā de yǎnjing hěn lán — Her eyes are very blue.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lán is inherited from Middle Chinese lam (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a plant for dye'. The colour is not given there; blue as the colour of that dye is the likely step, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: lán
- Say it: lán, once more

- Say it: tā de yǎnjing hěn lán — Her eyes are very blue.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for red, then the Mandarin for black, then say lán again

Before you move on

What does lán mean? (“Blue”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 61

Long and Short

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say long, short, tall, short of height, and new.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 61: I can say long, short, tall, short of height, and new.

61.1 长 (cháng) — long

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for black, then the Mandarin for blue.

You'll want to know: 长

长 — cháng — "long".

> jīntiān de diànyǐng hěn cháng — Today's film is a long one.

The new character, in pieces: 长 — four strokes: a short fall, a long bar, a vertical that flicks up at the foot, and a sweep down to the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 长 (cháng) is inherited from Middle Chinese drjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'lasting', 'far' and 'for ever'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: cháng
- Say it: cháng, once more
- Say it: jīntiān de diànyǐng hěn cháng — Today's film is a long one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for black, then the Mandarin for blue, then say cháng again

Before you move on

What does 长 mean? ("Long".) Say it once more.

61.2 长 — four strokes in one piece

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say cháng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

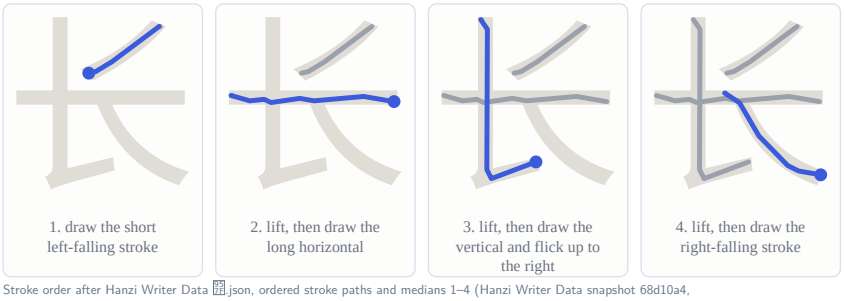
大 八

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — dà, bā

Script — four strokes in one piece

How it is written — 4 strokes · 3 pen lifts · 4 movements



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 🈸.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–4 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 长 is written, stroke by stroke

长

One piece, four strokes.
A short left-falling stroke at the top right, falling toward the left.
A long horizontal across the middle.
A vertical from the top left, down through the bar, that turns and flicks up to the right at the foot.
A long stroke falling to the right, from the bar down to the bottom right.

Your turn

- Write it: 长, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 长? (Four.) Which stroke flicks up at the foot? (The vertical, the third.) Which way does the last one fall? (Down to the right.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 长, pinned stroke paths and medians.

61.3 duǎn — short in length; brief

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for blue, then the Mandarin for long.

You'll want to know: duǎn

duǎn — "short in length; brief".

wǒ de kùzi hěn duǎn — My trousers are short.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of duǎn is inherited from Middle Chinese twanX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'hurried' and 'not long'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: duǎn
- Say it: duǎn, once more
- Say it: wǒ de kùzi hěn duǎn — My trousers are short.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for blue, then the Mandarin for long, then say duǎn again

Before you move on

What does duǎn mean? ("Short in length; brief".) Say it once more.

61.4 gāo — tall; high

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for long, then the Mandarin for short in length.

You'll want to know: gāo

gāo — "tall; high".

wǒ gēge hěn gāo tā xǐhuan yùndòng — My brother is tall, and he loves sport.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gāo is inherited from Middle Chinese kaw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'up', 'lofty' and 'far'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: gāo
- Say it: gāo, once more
- Say it: wǒ gēge hěn gāo tā xǐhuan yùndòng — My brother is tall, and he loves sport.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for long, then the Mandarin for short in length, then say gāo again

Before you move on

What does gāo mean? ("Tall; high".) Say it once more.

61.5 ǎi — short in height; low

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for short in length, then the Mandarin for tall.

You'll want to know: ǎi

ǎi — "short in height; low".

wǒ mèimei hěn ǎi — My little sister is short.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of ǎi is inherited from Middle Chinese 'eaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'short to look at'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: ǎi
- Say it: ǎi, once more
- Say it: wǒ mèimei hěn ǎi — My little sister is short.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for short in length, then the Mandarin for tall, then say ǎi again

Before you move on

What does ǎi mean? ("Short in height; low".) Say it once more.

61.6 xīn — new

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tall, then the Mandarin for short in height.

You'll want to know: xīn

xīn — "new".

zhè shì wǒ de xīn shǒujī — This is my new phone.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xīn is inherited from Middle Chinese sin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'new, as against old'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: xīn
- Say it: xīn, once more

- Say it: zhè shì wǒ de xīn shǒujī — This is my new phone.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tall, then the Mandarin for short in height, then say xīn again

Before you move on

What does xīn mean? (“New”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 62

Fast, Far and Near

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say fast, old, far and near, and say that I know something.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 62: I can say fast, old, far and near, and say that I know something.

62.1 快 (kuài) — fast; quick

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for short in height, then the Mandarin for new.

You'll want to know: 快

快 — kuài — "fast; quick".

> 我的手机很快 wǒ de shǒujī hěn kuài — My phone is fast.

The new character, in pieces: 快 — on the left the heart piece from the foot of 想, standing upright, and on the right a four-stroke piece read guài. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 快 (kuài) is inherited from Middle Chinese khwaejH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to one's liking' and 'glad'. The sense 'fast' is not given there, so how it got it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: kuài
- Say it: kuài, once more
- Say it: wǒ de shǒujī hěn kuài — My phone is fast.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for short in height, then the Mandarin for new, then say kuài again

Before you move on

What does 快 mean? ("Fast; quick".) Say it once more.

62.2 快 — the upright heart, then guài

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say kuài — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  想 大

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — xiǎng, dà

Script — the upright heart, then guài

How 快 is written, stroke by stroke

快

Two pieces, left before right.

The upright heart piece, three strokes: a short dot on the left, a short dot on the right, then a long vertical down between them: the heart piece from the foot of 想, standing upright.

The right piece, four strokes, read guài: a horizontal that turns down at its right end, a long horizontal across, a long left-falling stroke from the top down through the bars, and a stroke falling to the right.

3 + 4 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 快, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 快? (Two.) Which dot comes first? (The left one.) How many strokes on the right side? (Four.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 快, pinned stroke paths and medians.

62.3 jiù — old (of things); no longer new

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for new, then the Mandarin for fast.

You'll want to know: jiù

jiù — "old (of things); no longer new".

wǒ de chē hěn jiù — My car is old.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiù is inherited from Middle Chinese gjuwH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'former, of old'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: jiù
- Say it: jiù, once more
- Say it: wǒ de chē hěn jiù — My car is old.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for new, then the Mandarin for fast, then say jiù again

Before you move on

What does jiù mean? ("Old (of things); no longer new".) Say it once more.

62.4 yuǎn — far

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for fast, then the Mandarin for no longer new.

You'll want to know: yuǎn

yuǎn — "far".

Běijīng hěn yuǎn — Beijing is a long way away.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yuǎn is inherited from Middle Chinese hjwonX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'distant'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: yuǎn
- Say it: yuǎn, once more
- Say it: Běijīng hěn yuǎn — Beijing is a long way away.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for fast, then the Mandarin for no longer new, then say yuǎn again

Before you move on

What does yuǎn mean? ("Far".) Say it once more.

62.5 jìn — near; close

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for no longer new, then the Mandarin for far.

You'll want to know: jìn

jìn — "near; close".

wǒ jiā hěn jìn — My home is close by.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìn is inherited from Middle Chinese gj+nX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'pressing close' and 'almost'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: jìn
- Say it: jìn, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā hěn jìn — My home is close by.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for no longer new, then the Mandarin for far, then say jìn again

Before you move on

What does jìn mean? ("Near; close".) Say it once more.

62.6 zhīdào — to know a fact; to be aware

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for far, then the Mandarin for near.

You'll want to know: zhīdào

zhīdào — "to know a fact; to be aware".

wǒ zhīdào nǐ xiǎng shuō shénme — I know what you want to say.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhīdào is built from zhī 'to perceive' and dào 'the way', both inherited from Middle Chinese, trje and dawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). How the pair came to mean knowing a fact is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: zhīdào
- Say it: zhīdào, once more
- Say it: wǒ zhīdào nǐ xiǎng shuō shénme — I know what you want to say.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for far, then the Mandarin for near, then say zhīdào again

Before you move on

What does zhīdào mean? ("To know a fact; to be aware".) Say it once more.

Chapter 63

On the Phone

Modes: voice (6) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can answer the phone, ask for a number and say what I am looking for.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 63: I can answer the phone, ask for a number and say what I am looking for.

63.1 电话 (diànhuà) — telephone; phone call

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for near, then the Mandarin for to know a fact.

You'll want to know: 电话

电话 — diànhuà — "telephone; phone call".

> 你有电话吗 nǐ yǒu diànhuà ma — Have you got a phone?

The new character, in pieces: 电 — 日 with one long stroke running down through its middle, bending right along the bottom and hooking up. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 电话 (diànhuà) is built from 电 'lightning', now 'electricity', and 话 'talk', both inherited from Middle Chinese, denH and hwaejH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): electric talk.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: diànhuà
- Say it: diànhuà, once more
- Say it: nǐ yǒu diànhuà ma — Have you got a phone?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for near, then the Mandarin for to know a fact, then say diànhuà again

Before you move on

What does 电话 mean? ("Telephone; phone call".) Say it once more.

63.2 电 — 日 with a long tail

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say diànhuà — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

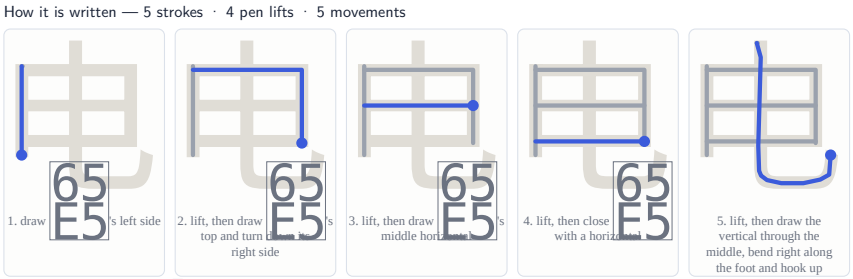
  日 话

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rì, huà

Script — 日 with a long tail



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–5 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 电 is written, stroke by stroke

电

Two parts: the box first, then the tail.

日, four strokes: the left side, the top that turns down the right side, the middle bar, and the bottom bar.

The tail, one stroke: from above the top of the box, a vertical straight down through the middle, bending right along the bottom and hooking up at the end.

4 + 1 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 电, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 电? (Five.) Which character you know is inside it? (日.) Where does the last stroke start? (Above the box, and it runs down through the middle.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 电, pinned stroke paths and medians.

63.3 打电话 (dǎ diànhuà) — to phone; to make a phone call

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to know a fact, then the Mandarin for telephone.

You'll want to know: 打电话

打电话 — dǎ diànhuà — "to phone; to make a phone call".

我想打电话 wǒ xiǎng dǎ diànhuà — I'd like to make a phone call.

The new character, in pieces: 打 — the hand piece, a narrow 手, on the left, and on the right a two-stroke piece read dīng. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 打电话 (dǎ diànhuà) is built from dǎ 'to strike' and 电话 'telephone'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese taengX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to strike', though dǎ is not the sound taengX would regularly give. Making a call is not among its senses there, so how the verb came to do it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎ diànhuà
- Say it: dǎ diànhuà, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng dǎ diànhuà — I'd like to make a phone call.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to know a fact, then the Mandarin for telephone, then say dǎ diànhuà again

Before you move on

What does 打电话 mean? ("To phone; to make a phone call".) Say it once more.

63.4 打 — the hand piece, then dīng

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say dǎ diànhuà — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

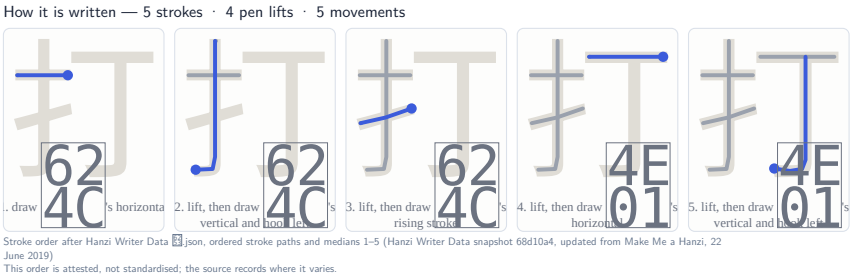
  手 电

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shǒu, diàn

Script — the hand piece, then dīng



How 打 is written, stroke by stroke

打

Two pieces, left before right.

The hand piece, three strokes, a narrow form of 手: a short horizontal, a vertical through it that hooks to the left at the foot, then a stroke that rises from the lower left up across the vertical.

The right piece, two strokes, read dīng: a horizontal across the top, then a vertical down from its middle that hooks to the left.

3 + 2 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 打, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 打? (Two.) Which character you know is the hand piece a narrow form of? (手.) Which way does the rising stroke run? (From the lower left up to the right.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 打, pinned stroke paths and medians.

63.5 wéi — hello on the phone

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for telephone, then the Mandarin for to phone.

You'll want to know: wéi

wéi — "hello on the phone".

wéi nǐ tīng wǒ shuō — Hello? Listen to me.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
On the phone it is said with a rising tone, as a question: wéi?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wéi is the call you answer the phone with. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: wéi
- Say it: wéi, once more
- Say it: wéi nǐ tīng wǒ shuō — Hello? Listen to me.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for telephone, then the Mandarin for to phone, then say wéi again

Before you move on

What does wéi mean? ("Hello on the phone".) Say it once more.

63.6 hàomǎ — number (of a phone, a room); identifying number

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to phone, then the Mandarin for hello on the phone.

You'll want to know: hàomǎ

hàomǎ — "number (of a phone, a room); identifying number".

> nǐ de diànhuà hàomǎ shì duōshao — What's your phone number?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hàomǎ is built from hào and mǎ, both inherited from Middle Chinese, hawH and maeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as a call or a command and the second as agate, a stone like jade; how the pair came to mean a number is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: hàomǎ
- Say it: hàomǎ, once more
- Say it: nǐ de diànhuà hàomǎ shì duōshao — What's your phone number?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to phone, then the Mandarin for hello on the phone, then say hàomǎ again

Before you move on

What does hàomǎ mean? ("Number (of a phone, a room); identifying number".) Say it once more.

63.7 zhǎo — to look for

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hello on the phone, then the Mandarin for identifying number.

You'll want to know: zhǎo

zhǎo — "to look for".

nǐ zhǎo shénme — What are you looking for?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhǎo is the everyday verb for looking for something. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǎo
- Say it: zhǎo, once more
- Say it: nǐ zhǎo shénme — What are you looking for?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hello on the phone, then the Mandarin for identifying number, then say zhǎo again

Before you move on

What does zhǎo mean? ("To look for".) Say it once more.

63.8 Looking back: from Things You Carry to On the Phone

Say the Mandarin for mobile phone and bag.

Your turn

- Say it: mobile phone, bag, computer, cup, clothes
- Say it: to wear, shoe, hat, trousers, pretty

- Say it: white, colour, red, black, blue
- Say it: long, short in length, tall, short in height, new
- Say it: fast, no longer new, far, near, to know a fact
- Say it: telephone, to phone, hello on the phone, identifying number, to look for
- Read it: 机 白 长 快 电 打 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

Mobile phone? (手机, shǒujī.) Bag? (bāo.) Computer? (diànnǎo.) Cup? (bēizi.) Clothes? (yīfu.) To wear? (chuān.) Shoe? (xié.) Hat? (màozi.) Trousers? (kùzi.) Pretty? (piàoliang.) White? (白, bái.) Colour? (yánsè.) Red? (hóng.) Black? (hēi.) Blue? (lán.) Long? (长, cháng.) Short in length? (duǎn.) Tall? (gāo.) Short in height? (ǎi.) New? (xīn.) Fast? (快, kuài.) No longer new? (jiù.) Far? (yuǎn.) Near? (jìn.) To know a fact? (zhīdào.) Telephone? (电话, diànhuà.) To phone? (打电话, dǎ diànhuà.) Hello on the phone? (wéi.) Identifying number? (hàomǎ.) To look for? (zhǎo.)

Chapter 64

Asking for Help

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say sorry, ask for help, borrow something and give it back.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 64: I can say sorry, ask for help, borrow something and give it back.

64.1 对不起 (duìbuqǐ) — sorry

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for identifying number, then the Mandarin for to look for.

You'll want to know: 对不起

对不起 — duìbuqǐ — "sorry".

> duìbuqǐ wǒ bù dǒng nǐ de huà — Sorry, I don't understand what you're saying.

The new character, in pieces: 起 — the walking piece read zǒu along the left and the bottom, carrying a three-stroke piece read jǐ, 'self', on its back: not the jǐ of 机. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

Its middle syllable loses its tone: duìbuqǐ, with bu light between two full syllables.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 对不起 (duìbuqǐ) is built from 对 'to answer, to match', 不 'not' and 起 'to rise', all inherited from Middle Chinese, twojH, pjut and khiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). 'Not able to face you' is the usual explanation, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: duìbuqǐ
- Say it: duìbuqǐ, once more
- Say it: duìbuqǐ wǒ bù dǒng nǐ de huà — Sorry, I don't understand what you're saying.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for identifying number, then the Mandarin for to look for, then say duìbuqǐ again

Before you move on

What does 对不起 mean? ("Sorry".) Say it once more.

64.2 起 — the walking piece, carrying jǐ

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say duìbuqǐ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  对 不

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — duì, bù

Script — the walking piece, carrying jǐ

How 起 is written, stroke by stroke

起

Two pieces: the walking piece first, then the piece on its back.

The walking piece, seven strokes, read zǒu, as in the word for to walk: a short horizontal, a vertical down through it, a longer horizontal; then below, a short vertical with a short bar to its right, a left-falling stroke, and last a long stroke that sweeps right along the whole bottom.

The right piece, three strokes, read jǐ, 'self', not the jǐ of 机, sitting on the sweep: a horizontal that turns down, a short horizontal, then a vertical that bends right along the bottom and hooks up.

7 + 3 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 起, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 起? (Two — the walking piece and jǐ.) Which stroke runs under the whole character? (The long sweep, the seventh.) Which character comes before it in 对不起? (不.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 起, pinned stroke paths and medians.

64.3 bāng — to help

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to look for, then the Mandarin for sorry.

You'll want to know: bāng

bāng — "to help".

nǐ bāng wǒ xiě hǎo bu hǎo — Will you help me write it?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bāng is inherited from Middle Chinese pang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to mend shoes'. The sense 'to help' is not given there, so how it got it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: bāng
- Say it: bāng, once more
- Say it: nǐ bāng wǒ xiě hǎo bu hǎo — Will you help me write it?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to look for, then the Mandarin for sorry, then say bāng again

Before you move on

What does bāng mean? ("To help".) Say it once more.

64.4 bāngmáng — to help out; to do a favour

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for sorry, then the Mandarin for to help.

You'll want to know: bāngmáng

bāngmáng — "to help out; to do a favour".

wǒ xiǎng bāngmáng — I'd like to help.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bāngmáng is built from bāng 'to help' and máng 'busy', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pang and mang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses mang as 'afraid', so the sense busy is not given there; helping with what keeps somebody busy is the likely picture, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: bāngmáng
- Say it: bāngmáng, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng bāngmáng — I'd like to help.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for sorry, then the Mandarin for to help, then say bāngmáng again

Before you move on

What does bāngmáng mean? ("To help out; to do a favour".) Say it once more.

64.5 jiè — to borrow; to lend

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to help, then the Mandarin for to do a favour.

You'll want to know: jiè

jiè — "to borrow; to lend".

wǒ jiè le tā de shū — I borrowed his book.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiè is inherited from Middle Chinese tsjaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to borrow'; today the same word also lends.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: jiè
- Say it: jiè, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiè le tā de shū — I borrowed his book.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to help, then the Mandarin for to do a favour, then say jiè again

Before you move on

What does jiè mean? ("To borrow; to lend".) Say it once more.

64.6 huán — to give back

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to do a favour, then the Mandarin for to borrow.

You'll want to know: huán

huán — "to give back".

wǒ míngtiān huán nǐ — I'll give it back tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The same character is read hái in hái xíng; here, giving something back, it is huán.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huán is inherited from Middle Chinese hwaen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to return' and 'to go back'.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: huán
- Say it: huán, once more
- Say it: wǒ míngtiān huán nǐ — I'll give it back tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to do a favour, then the Mandarin for to borrow, then say huán again

Before you move on

What does huán mean? ("To give back".) Say it once more.

Chapter 65

Excuse Me

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say excuse me, ask politely, and ask somebody to open or shut something.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 65: I can say excuse me, ask politely, and ask somebody to open or shut something.

65.1 门 (mén) — door; gate

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to borrow, then the Mandarin for to give back.

You'll want to know: 门

门 — mén — "door; gate".

> 这是我家的门 zhè shì wǒ jiā de mén — This is the door to my home.

The new character, in pieces: 门 — a dot, a post down the left, and a frame that turns down the right and hooks: the right-hand piece of 们. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 门 (mén) is inherited from Middle Chinese mwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary says its old character is made of two door leaves.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: mén
- Say it: mén, once more
- Say it: zhè shì wǒ jiā de mén — This is the door to my home.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to borrow, then the Mandarin for to give back, then say mén again

Before you move on

What does 门 mean? ("Door; gate".) Say it once more.

65.2 门 — a dot, a post, a frame

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say mén — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

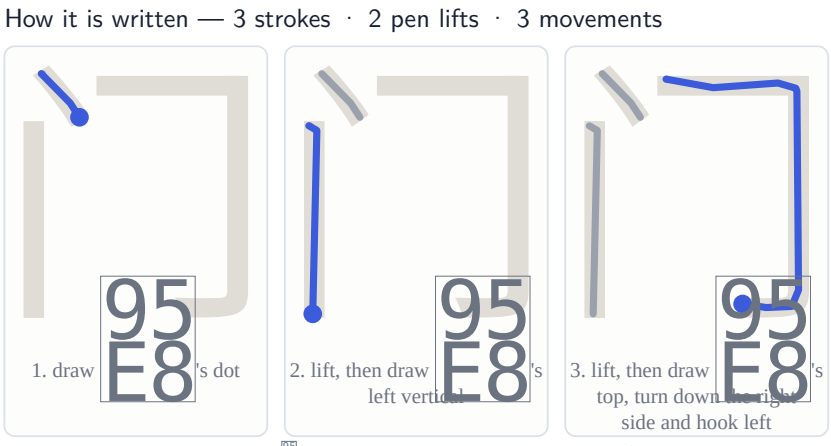
  们 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — men, kǒu

Script — a dot, a post, a frame



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 95.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–3 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 丶冂 is written, stroke by stroke

丶冂

One piece, three strokes, the same three as on the right of 闩.
A dot at the top left.
A vertical down the left side, the door post.
A horizontal that turns down the right side and hooks to the left at the foot.

Your turn

- Write it: 丶冂, all three, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 丶冂? (Three.) Which character you know has it on the right? (闩.) How does the last stroke end? (It hooks to the left.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 门, pinned stroke paths and medians.

65.3 请问 (qǐngwèn) — excuse me, may I ask

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to give back, then the Mandarin for door.

You'll want to know: 请问

请问 — qǐngwèn — "excuse me, may I ask".

请问这是你的手机吗 qǐngwèn zhè shì nǐ de shǒujī ma — Excuse me, is this your phone?

The new character, in pieces: 问 — 门 with 口 inside it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 请问 (qǐngwèn) is built from 请 'please' and 问 'to ask', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshjengX and mjunH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary already glosses the first as 'to beg, to ask'.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: qǐngwèn
- Say it: qǐngwèn, once more
- Say it: qǐngwèn zhè shì nǐ de shǒujī ma — Excuse me, is this your phone?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to give back, then the Mandarin for door, then say qǐngwèn again

Before you move on

What does 请问 mean? ("Excuse me, may I ask".) Say it once more.

65.4 问 — 门 with 口 inside

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say qǐngwèn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

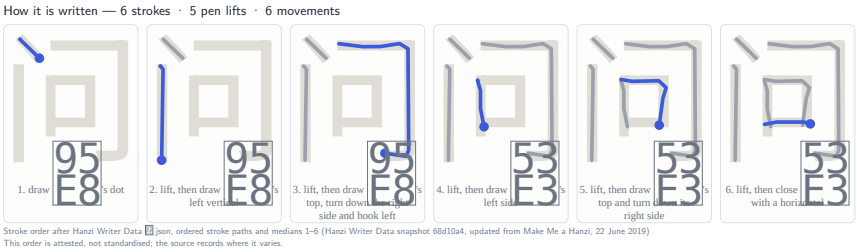
  门 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — mén, kǒu

Script — 门 with 口 inside



How 问 is written, stroke by stroke

问

Two pieces: the door first, then the mouth inside it.

门, three strokes: the dot, the left post, the frame that turns down and hooks.

口, three strokes, small and inside: the left side, the top that turns down, the bottom that closes it.

3 + 3 = six, and both pieces are already yours.

Your turn

- Write it: 问, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 问? (Two — 门, then 口.) Which goes first? (门, the frame.) Where does 口 sit? (Inside the door.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 问, pinned stroke paths and medians.

65.5 bù hǎoyìsi — excuse me; sorry to trouble you

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for door, then the Mandarin for may I ask.

You'll want to know: bù hǎoyìsi

bù hǎoyìsi — "excuse me; sorry to trouble you".

bù hǎoyìsi wǒ xiǎng wèn nǐ — Excuse me, could I ask you something?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

bù keeps its own falling tone here, because hǎo after it is a third tone, not a fourth.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

bù hǎoyìsi is built from bù 'not', hǎo 'good' and yìsi 'meaning', all inherited from Middle Chinese, pjut, xawX, 'iH and si (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the last two as 'intention' and 'to think of'. 'Not a good feeling' is the literal sense; how it became an apology is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: bù hǎoyìsi
- Say it: bù hǎoyìsi, once more
- Say it: bù hǎoyìsi wǒ xiǎng wèn nǐ — Excuse me, could I ask you something?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for door, then the Mandarin for may I ask, then say bù hǎoyìsi again

Before you move on

What does bù hǎoyìsi mean? ("Excuse me; sorry to trouble you".) Say it once more.

65.6 kāi — to open; to switch on

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for may I ask, then the Mandarin for excuse me.

You'll want to know: kāi

kāi — "to open; to switch on".

shāngdiàn jiǔ diǎn kāi — The shop opens at nine.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kāi is inherited from Middle Chinese khoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to open, to undo'.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: kāi
- Say it: kāi, once more
- Say it: shāngdiàn jiǔ diǎn kāi — The shop opens at nine.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for may I ask, then the Mandarin for excuse me, then say kāi again

Before you move on

What does kāi mean? ("To open; to switch on".) Say it once more.

65.7 guān — to shut; to close; to switch off

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for excuse me, then the Mandarin for to open.

You'll want to know: guān

guān — "to shut; to close; to switch off".

qǐng guān mén — Please shut the door.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guān is inherited from Middle Chinese kwaen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains, through an older book, as a wooden bar held across a door. Shutting is probably what the bar does, but the step is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for asking politely.

Your turn

- Say it: guān
- Say it: guān, once more
- Say it: qǐng guān mén — Please shut the door.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for excuse me, then the Mandarin for to open, then say guān again

Before you move on

What does guān mean? ("To shut; to close; to switch off".) Say it once more.

Chapter 66

The Weather

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what the weather is like: rain, snow and wind.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 66: I can say what the weather is like: rain, snow and wind.

66.1 天气 (tiānqì) — weather

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to open, then the Mandarin for to shut.

You'll want to know: 天气

天气 — tiānqì — "weather".

> 今天天气很好 jīntiān tiānqì hěn hǎo — The weather is lovely today.

The new character, in pieces: 气 — a short fall, two short bars, and a long stroke that turns, slants out and hooks. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 天气 (tiānqì) is built from 天 'sky' and 气 'breath', both inherited from Middle Chinese, then and khj+jH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the breath of the sky.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: tiānqì
- Say it: tiānqì, once more
- Say it: jīntiān tiānqì hěn hǎo — The weather is lovely today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to open, then the Mandarin for to shut, then say tiānqì again

Before you move on

What does 天气 mean? ("Weather".) Say it once more.

66.2 气 — a fall, two bars, a hook

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say tiānqì — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

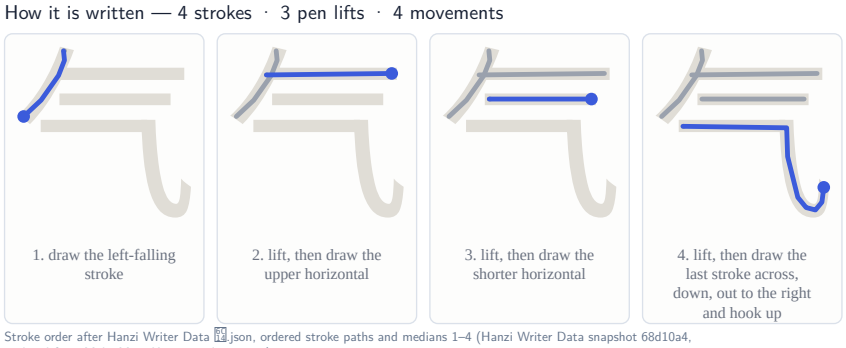
  天 手

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — tiān, shǒu

Script — a fall, two bars, a hook



How 气 is written, stroke by stroke

气

One piece, four strokes.
A short left-falling stroke at the top left.
Two short horizontals under it, the second a little lower and shorter.
A long horizontal that turns down, slants out to the right and hooks up at the end.

Your turn

- Write it: 气, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 气? (Four.) How many short bars? (Two.) How does the last stroke end? (It slants out and hooks up.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 气, pinned stroke paths and medians.

66.3 雨 (yǔ) — rain

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to shut, then the Mandarin for weather.

You'll want to know: 雨

雨 — yǔ — "rain".

> 请问明天有雨吗 qǐngwèn míngtiān yǒu yǔ ma — Excuse me, will it rain tomorrow?

The new character, in pieces: 雨 — a lid, a frame with a line down its middle, and four drops inside. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 雨 (yǔ) is inherited from Middle Chinese hjuX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains, through an older book, as water coming down from the clouds.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: yǔ
- Say it: yǔ, once more
- Say it: qǐngwèn míngtiān yǒu yǔ ma — Excuse me, will it rain tomorrow?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to shut, then the Mandarin for weather, then say yǔ again

Before you move on

What does 雨 mean? ("Rain".) Say it once more.

66.4 雨 — a lid, a frame and four drops

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say yǔ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  天 气

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — tiān, qì

Script — a lid, a frame and four drops

How 雨 is written, stroke by stroke

雨

One piece, built from the top down.
A horizontal across the top, the lid.
A frame, two strokes: a short vertical down the left, then a horizontal that turns down the right side and hooks to the left.
A vertical down the middle from the lid.
Four dots, two on the left of the middle line, then two on the right.
1 + 2 + 1 + 4 = eight.

Your turn

- Write it: 雨, all eight, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 雨? (Eight.) What comes last? (The four dots, the left pair first.) Which stroke hooks? (The right side of the frame.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 雨, pinned stroke paths and medians.

66.5 xiàyǔ — to rain

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for weather, then the Mandarin for rain.

You'll want to know: xiàyǔ

xiàyǔ — "to rain".

xiàyǔ wǒmen bù dǎqiú — It's raining, so we're not playing ball.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiàyǔ is built from xià 'to come down' and 雨 'rain', both inherited from Middle Chinese, haeX and hjuX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): rain comes down.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàyǔ
- Say it: xiàyǔ, once more
- Say it: xiàyǔ wǒmen bù dǎqiú — It's raining, so we're not playing ball.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for weather, then the Mandarin for rain, then say xiàyǔ again

Before you move on

What does xiàyǔ mean? ("To rain".) Say it once more.

66.6 xuě — snow

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for rain, then the Mandarin for to rain.

You'll want to know: xuě

xuě — "snow".

> xuě hěn dà wǒ de ěrduo hěn lěng — It's snowing hard and my ears are freezing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

xuě is inherited from Middle Chinese sjwet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'frozen rain'.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: xuě
- Say it: xuě, once more
- Say it: xuě hěn dà wǒ de ěrduo hěn lěng — It's snowing hard and my ears are freezing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for rain, then the Mandarin for to rain, then say xuě again

Before you move on

What does xuě mean? ("Snow".) Say it once more.

66.7 fēng — wind

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to rain, then the Mandarin for snow.

You'll want to know: fēng

fēng — "wind".

> tiānqì bù hǎo fēng hěn dà — The weather's bad: the wind is strong.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fēng is inherited from Middle Chinese pjuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary quotes an old book calling the wind the messenger of sky and earth.

What you've built

One more word for saying how you are.

Your turn

- Say it: fēng
- Say it: fēng, once more
- Say it: tiānqì bù hǎo fēng hěn dà — The weather's bad: the wind is strong.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to rain, then the Mandarin for snow, then say fēng again

Before you move on

What does fēng mean? ("Wind".) Say it once more.

Chapter 67

Animals

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name horses, dogs, cats, birds and fish.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 67: I can name horses, dogs, cats, birds and fish.

67.1 马 (mǎ) — horse

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for snow, then the Mandarin for wind.

You'll want to know: 马

马 — mǎ — "horse".

> 我喜欢白马 wǒ xǐhuan bái mǎ — I love white horses.

The new character, in pieces: 马 — a turn, a zigzag that hooks, and a bar along the bottom: the right-hand piece of 吗 and 妈. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 马 (mǎ) is inherited from Middle Chinese maeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary explains its old character as the shape of a head, a mane, a tail and four legs.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: mǎ
- Say it: mǎ, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan bái mǎ — I love white horses.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for snow, then the Mandarin for wind, then say mǎ again

Before you move on

What does 马 mean? ("Horse".) Say it once more.

67.2 马 — a turn, a zigzag, a base

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say mǎ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

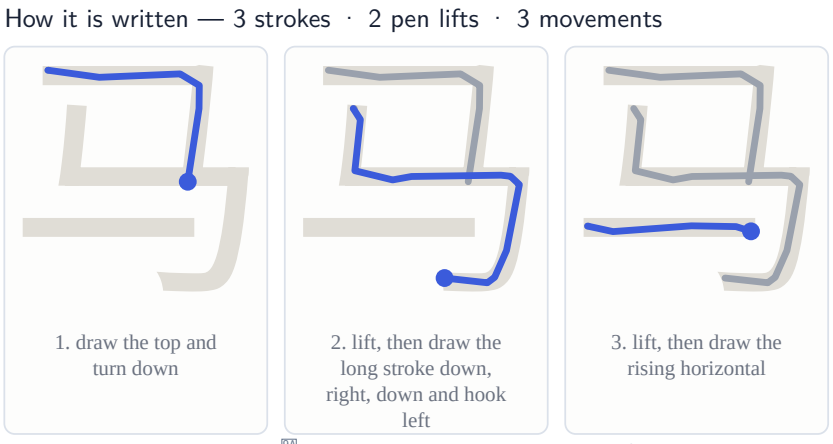
  吗 妈

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — ma, mā

Script — a turn, a zigzag, a base



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 马.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–3 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 马 is written, stroke by stroke

马

One piece, three strokes.

A horizontal that turns down at its right end.

A vertical that turns right, then turns down again and hooks to the left at the foot, all in one stroke.

A horizontal along the bottom, rising a little to the right.

Your turn

- Write it: 马, all three, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 马? (Three.) Which stroke turns without lifting? (The second.) Which characters you know have it on the right? (吗 and 妈.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 马, pinned stroke paths and medians.

67.3 gǒu — dog

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for wind, then the Mandarin for horse.

You'll want to know: gǒu

gǒu — "dog".

nǐ xǐhuan gǒu ma — Do you like dogs?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

gǒu is inherited from Middle Chinese kuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'dog'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: gǒu
- Say it: gǒu, once more
- Say it: nǐ xǐhuan gǒu ma — Do you like dogs?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for wind, then the Mandarin for horse, then say gǒu again

Before you move on

What does gǒu mean? ("Dog".) Say it once more.

67.4 māo — cat

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for horse, then the Mandarin for dog.

You'll want to know: māo

māo — "cat".

wǒ jiā yǒu māo — We've got a cat at home.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of māo is inherited from Middle Chinese mjew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the animal that catches mice', though māo is not the sound mjew would regularly give.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: māo
- Say it: māo, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā yǒu māo — We've got a cat at home.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for horse, then the Mandarin for dog, then say māo again

Before you move on

What does māo mean? ("Cat".) Say it once more.

67.5 niǎo — bird

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for dog, then the Mandarin for cat.

You'll want to know: niǎo

niǎo — "bird".

wǒ xǐhuan kàn niǎo — I love watching birds.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of niǎo is inherited from Middle Chinese tewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed, through an older book, as the name for all long-tailed birds. Why the modern word begins with n is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: niǎo
- Say it: niǎo, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan kàn niǎo — I love watching birds.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for dog, then the Mandarin for cat, then say niǎo again

Before you move on

What does niǎo mean? ("Bird".) Say it once more.

67.6 yú — fish

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for cat, then the Mandarin for bird.

You'll want to know: yú

yú — "fish".

wǒ xǐhuan chī yú — I love eating fish.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

yú is inherited from Middle Chinese ngjo (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed, through an older book, as a water creature.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: yú
- Say it: yú, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan chī yú — I love eating fish.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for cat, then the Mandarin for bird, then say yú again

Before you move on

What does yú mean? ("Fish".) Say it once more.

Chapter 68

Out of Town

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name mountains, stars, grass, flowers and the sun.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 68: I can name mountains, stars, grass, flowers and the sun.

68.1 山 (shān) — mountain; hill

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bird, then the Mandarin for fish.

You'll want to know: 山

山 — shān — "mountain; hill".

> 我喜欢山 wǒ xǐhuan shān — I love the mountains.

The new character, in pieces: 山 — three peaks standing on one base. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 山 (shān) is inherited from Middle Chinese srean (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary quotes an old book saying the mountain brings forth all things.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: shān
- Say it: shān, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan shān — I love the mountains.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bird, then the Mandarin for fish, then say shān again

Before you move on

What does 山 mean? ("Mountain; hill".) Say it once more.

68.2 山 — three peaks on a base

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shān — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

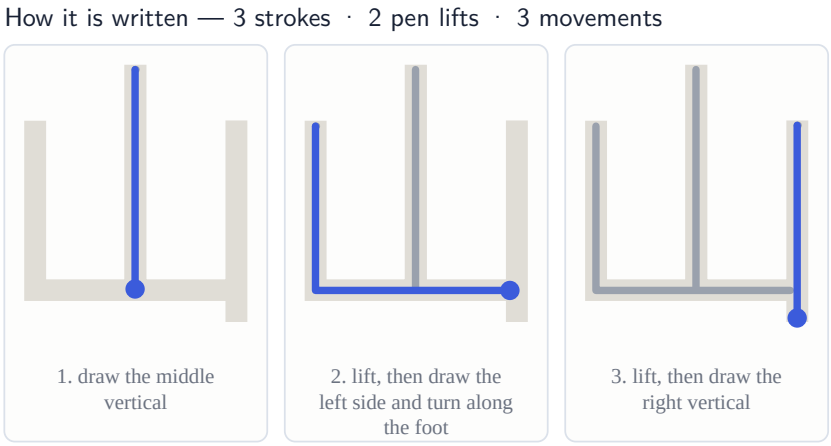
岁 中

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — suì, zhōng

Script — three peaks on a base



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 山.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–3 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 山 is written, stroke by stroke

山

One piece, three strokes, the middle first.
The tall vertical in the middle.
A vertical down the left that turns and runs right along the bottom.
A vertical down the right, standing on the base.

Your turn

- Write it: 山, all three, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 山? (Three.) Which stroke comes first? (The middle one.) Which character you know has it on top? (岁.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 山, pinned stroke paths and medians.

68.3 星星 (xīngxing) — star

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for fish, then the Mandarin for mountain.

You'll want to know: 星星

星星 — xīngxing — "star".

天气很好晚上有星星 tiānqì hěn hǎo wǎnshang yǒu xīngxing — Fine weather: there'll be stars tonight.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 星星 (xīngxing) is built from 星 'star' said twice, the second time light. 星 is inherited from Middle Chinese seng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: xīngxing
- Say it: xīngxing, once more
- Say it: tiānqì hěn hǎo wǎnshang yǒu xīngxing — Fine weather: there'll be stars tonight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for fish, then the Mandarin for mountain, then say xīngxing again

Before you move on

What does 星星 mean? ("Star".) Say it once more.

68.4 cǎo — grass

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for mountain, then the Mandarin for star.

You'll want to know: cǎo

cǎo — "grass".

zhèr de cǎo hěn gāo — The grass here is tall.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cǎo is inherited from Middle Chinese tshawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed, through an older book, as all the plants that grow.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: cǎo
- Say it: cǎo, once more
- Say it: zhèr de cǎo hěn gāo — The grass here is tall.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for mountain, then the Mandarin for star, then say cǎo again

Before you move on

What does cǎo mean? ("Grass".) Say it once more.

68.5 huā — flower

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for star, then the Mandarin for grass.

You'll want to know: huā

huā — "flower".

māma xǐhuan huā — Mum loves flowers.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huā is inherited from Middle Chinese xwae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary notes as the everyday form, in common use, of an older word for blossom.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: huā
- Say it: huā, once more
- Say it: māma xǐhuan huā — Mum loves flowers.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for star, then the Mandarin for grass, then say huā again

Before you move on

What does huā mean? ("Flower".) Say it once more.

68.6 tàiyang — sun

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for grass, then the Mandarin for flower.

You'll want to know: tàiyang

tàiyang — "sun".

jīntiān de tàiyang hěn dà — The sun is strong today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tàiyang is built from tài 'great' and yang, both inherited from Middle Chinese, thajH and yang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second as the yang of yin and yang, 'high and bright': the great bright one.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: tàiyang
- Say it: tàiyang, once more
- Say it: jīntiān de tàiyang hěn dà — The sun is strong today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for grass, then the Mandarin for flower, then say tàiyang again

Before you move on

What does tàiyang mean? ("Sun".) Say it once more.

Chapter 69

Meals

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the meals of the day, say who cooks and say it tastes good.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 69: I can name the meals of the day, say who cooks and say it tastes good.

69.1 做饭 (zuòfàn) — to cook

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for flower, then the Mandarin for the sun.

You'll want to know: 做饭

做饭 — zuòfàn — "to cook".

> 我妈妈喜欢做饭 wǒ māma xǐhuan zuòfàn — My mum loves cooking.

The new character, in pieces: 做 — 亻 on the left, 十 over 口 in the middle, and on the right a four-stroke piece like a hand striking. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 做饭 (zuòfàn) is built from 做 'to do, to make' and 饭 'meal'. 饭 is inherited from Middle Chinese bjonH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); 做 has no reading in any dictionary we use, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: zuòfàn
- Say it: zuòfàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ māma xǐhuan zuòfàn — My mum loves cooking.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for flower, then the Mandarin for the sun, then say zuòfàn again

Before you move on

What does 做饭 mean? ("To cook".) Say it once more.

69.2 做 — the person, gǔ, and a striking hand

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say zuòfàn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  他 十 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — tā, shí, kǒu

Script — the person, gǔ, and a striking hand

How 做 is written, stroke by stroke

做

Three pieces, left to right. Count three, not eleven.

亻, two strokes, as in 你 and 他.

The middle piece, five strokes, read gǔ: 十, a horizontal and a vertical, standing on a small 口.

The right piece, four strokes: a short left-falling stroke, a short horizontal, a long left-falling stroke, and a long stroke falling to the right.

2 + 5 + 4 = eleven.

Your turn

- Write it: 做, all eleven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 做? (Three.) What sits in the middle? (十 on 口.) How does it end? (With a stroke falling to the right.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 做, pinned stroke paths and medians.

69.3 早饭 (zǎofàn) — breakfast

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the sun, then the Mandarin for to cook.

You'll want to know: 早饭

早饭 — zǎofàn — "breakfast".

我七点吃早饭 wǒ qī diǎn chī zǎofàn — I have breakfast at seven.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 早饭 (zǎofàn) is built from zǎo 'morning' and 饭 'meal', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsawX and bjonH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: zǎofàn
- Say it: zǎofàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ qī diǎn chī zǎofàn — I have breakfast at seven.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the sun, then the Mandarin for to cook, then say zǎofàn again

Before you move on

What does 早饭 mean? ("Breakfast".) Say it once more.

69.4 午饭 (wǔfàn) — lunch

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to cook, then the Mandarin for breakfast.

You'll want to know: 午饭

午饭 — wǔfàn — "lunch".

你吃午饭了吗 nǐ chī wǔfàn le ma — Have you had lunch?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 午饭 (wǔfàn) is built from 午 'noon' and 饭 'meal', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nguX and bjonH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: wǔfàn
- Say it: wǔfàn, once more
- Say it: nǐ chī wǔfàn le ma — Have you had lunch?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to cook, then the Mandarin for breakfast, then say wǔfàn again

Before you move on

What does 午饭 mean? ("Lunch".) Say it once more.

69.5 晚饭 (wǎnfàn) — dinner; supper

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for breakfast, then the Mandarin for lunch.

You'll want to know: 晚饭

晚饭 — wǎnfàn — "dinner; supper".

今天晚饭吃什么 jīntiān wǎnfàn chī shénme — What's for dinner tonight?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 晚饭 (wǎnfàn) is built from wǎn 'evening' and 饭 'meal', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjonX and bjonH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: wǎnfàn
- Say it: wǎnfàn, once more
- Say it: jīntiān wǎnfàn chī shénme — What's for dinner tonight?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for breakfast, then the Mandarin for lunch, then say wǎnfàn again

Before you move on

What does 晚饭 mean? ("Dinner; supper".) Say it once more.

69.6 好吃 (hǎochī) — tasty; good to eat

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for lunch, then the Mandarin for dinner.

You'll want to know: 好吃

好吃 — hǎochī — "tasty; good to eat".

我妈妈做饭很好吃 wǒ māma zuòfàn hěn hǎochī — My mum's cooking is delicious.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 好吃 (hǎochī) is built from 好 'good' and 吃 'to eat': good to eat. 好 is inherited from Middle Chinese xawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); 吃 is probably the khek the dictionary writes with another character and glosses 'to eat', though chī is not the sound khek would regularly give.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: hǎochī
- Say it: hǎochī, once more
- Say it: wǒ māma zuòfàn hěn hǎochī — My mum's cooking is delicious.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for lunch, then the Mandarin for dinner, then say hǎochī again

Before you move on

What does 好吃 mean? ("Tasty; good to eat".) Say it once more.

69.7 Looking back: from Asking for Help to Meals

Say the Mandarin for sorry and to help.

Your turn

- Say it: sorry, to help, to do a favour, to borrow, to give back
- Say it: door, may I ask, excuse me, to open, to shut
- Say it: weather, rain, to rain, snow, wind
- Say it: horse, dog, cat, bird, fish
- Say it: mountain, star, grass, flower, the sun
- Say it: to cook, breakfast, lunch, dinner, tasty
- Read it: 起 门 问 气 雨 马 山 做 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

Sorry? (对不起, duìbuqǐ.) To help? (bāng.) To do a favour? (bāngmáng.) To borrow? (jiè.) To give back? (huán.) Door? (门, mén.) May I ask? (请问, qǐngwèn.) Excuse me? (bù hǎoyìsi.) To open? (kāi.) To shut? (guān.) Weather? (天气, tiānqì.) Rain? (雨, yǔ.) To rain? (xiàyǔ.) Snow? (xuě.) Wind? (fēng.) Horse? (马, mǎ.) Dog? (gǒu.) Cat? (māo.) Bird? (niǎo.) Fish? (yú.) Mountain? (山, shān.) Star? (星星, xīngxing.) Grass? (cǎo.) Flower? (huā.) The sun? (tàiyang.) To cook? (做饭, zuòfàn.) Breakfast? (早饭, zǎofàn.) Lunch? (午饭, wǔfàn.) Dinner? (晚饭, wǎnfàn.) Tasty? (好吃, hǎochī.)

Chapter 70

More to Eat

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name meat, buns, noodles, dumplings and soup.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 70: I can name meat, buns, noodles, dumplings and soup.

70.1 ròu — meat

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for dinner, then the Mandarin for tasty.

You'll want to know: ròu

ròu — "meat".

> wǒ bù chī ròu — I don't eat meat.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

ròu is inherited from Middle Chinese nyuwk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed with the pair 'bone and flesh'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: ròu
- Say it: ròu, once more
- Say it: wǒ bù chī ròu — I don't eat meat.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for dinner, then the Mandarin for tasty, then say ròu again

Before you move on

What does ròu mean? ("Meat".) Say it once more.

70.2 bāozi — steamed bun

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tasty, then the Mandarin for meat.

You'll want to know: bāozi

bāozi — "steamed bun".

wǒ chī le sān ge bāozi — I ate three buns.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bāozi is built from bāo 'to wrap', the same bāo as the word for bag, and the noun ending zi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, paew and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): a filling wrapped in dough.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: bāozi
- Say it: bāozi, once more

- Say it: wǒ chī le sān ge bāozi — I ate three buns.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tasty, then the Mandarin for meat, then say bāozi again

Before you move on

What does bāozi mean? ("Steamed bun".) Say it once more.

70.3 miàntiáo — noodles

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for meat, then the Mandarin for steamed bun.

You'll want to know: miàntiáo miàntiáo — "noodles".

wǒ xǐhuan chī miàntiáo — I love noodles.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of miàntiáo is built from miàn 'flour' and tiáo 'a twig, a strip', both inherited from Middle Chinese, menH and dew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): strips of flour.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: miàntiáo
- Say it: miàntiáo, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan chī miàntiáo — I love noodles.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for meat, then the Mandarin for steamed bun, then say miàntiáo again

Before you move on

What does miàntiáo mean? (“Noodles”.) Say it once more.

70.4 jiǎozi — dumpling

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for steamed bun, then the Mandarin for noodles.

You’ll want to know: jiǎozi

jiǎozi — “dumpling”.

xīngqītiān wǒmen chī jiǎozi — We have dumplings on Sunday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiǎozi is built from jiǎo and the noun ending zi, which is inherited from Middle Chinese tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription). The first has no reading in any dictionary we use, so its history is not settled.

What you’ve built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: jiǎozi
- Say it: jiǎozi, once more
- Say it: xīngqītiān wǒmen chī jiǎozi — We have dumplings on Sunday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for steamed bun, then the Mandarin for noodles, then say jiǎozi again

Before you move on

What does jiǎozi mean? (“Dumpling”.) Say it once more.

70.5 tāng — soup

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for noodles, then the Mandarin for dumpling.

You'll want to know: tāng

tāng — "soup".

nǐ hē tāng ma — Would you like some soup?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tāng is inherited from Middle Chinese thang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'hot water'. Soup is not given there; from hot water to soup is the likely step, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: tāng
- Say it: tāng, once more
- Say it: nǐ hē tāng ma — Would you like some soup?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for noodles, then the Mandarin for dumpling, then say tāng again

Before you move on

What does tāng mean? ("Soup".) Say it once more.

Chapter 71

Tastes

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a drink is nice, food is sweet, hot or salty, and order a meal.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 71: I can say a drink is nice, food is sweet, hot or salty, and order a meal.

71.1 好喝 (hǎohē) — nice to drink

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for dumpling, then the Mandarin for soup.

You'll want to know: 好喝

好喝 — hǎohē — "nice to drink".

> zhèr de chá hěn hǎohē — The tea here is lovely.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 好喝 (hǎohē) is built from 好 'good' and 喝 'to drink', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xawX and xat (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as 'to shout at', and the drinking sense is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: hǎohē
- Say it: hǎohē, once more
- Say it: zhèr de chá hěn hǎohē — The tea here is lovely.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for dumpling, then the Mandarin for soup, then say hǎohē again

Before you move on

What does 好喝 mean? ("Nice to drink".) Say it once more.

71.2 tián — sweet

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for soup, then the Mandarin for nice to drink.

You'll want to know: tián

tián — "sweet".

nǐ de kāfēi hěn tián — Your coffee is very sweet.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tián is inherited from Middle Chinese dem (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'sweet'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: tián
- Say it: tián, once more

- Say it: nǐ de kāfēi hěn tián — Your coffee is very sweet.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for soup, then the Mandarin for nice to drink, then say tián again

Before you move on

What does tián mean? ("Sweet".) Say it once more.

71.3 là — spicy; hot

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for nice to drink, then the Mandarin for sweet.

You'll want to know: là

là — "spicy; hot".

zhèr de cài hěn là — The food here is really spicy.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

là is inherited from Middle Chinese lat (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'pungent'; the dictionary writes it with a variant form of the character.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: là
- Say it: là, once more
- Say it: zhèr de cài hěn là — The food here is really spicy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for nice to drink, then the Mandarin for sweet, then say là again

Before you move on

What does là mean? (“Spicy; hot”.) Say it once more.

71.4 xián — salty

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for sweet, then the Mandarin for spicy.

You’ll want to know: xián

xián — “salty”.

jīntiān de tāng hěn xián — Today’s soup is salty.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xián is inherited from Middle Chinese heam (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), glossed ’not bland’; the dictionary writes it with the traditional form of the character.

What you’ve built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: xián
- Say it: xián, once more
- Say it: jīntiān de tāng hěn xián — Today’s soup is salty.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for sweet, then the Mandarin for spicy, then say xián again

Before you move on

What does xián mean? (“Salty”.) Say it once more.

71.5 diǎncài — to order food

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for spicy, then the Mandarin for salty.

You'll want to know: diǎncài

diǎncài — "to order food".

wǒ xiǎng diǎncài — I'd like to order.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of diǎncài is built from 点 'a dot, to mark' and cài 'dish', both inherited from Middle Chinese, temX and tshojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as any plant fit to eat. Marking the dishes you want is the likely picture, but the step is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: diǎncài
- Say it: diǎncài, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng diǎncài — I'd like to order.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for spicy, then the Mandarin for salty, then say diǎncài again

Before you move on

What does diǎncài mean? ("To order food".) Say it once more.

Chapter 72

Getting About

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about trains, driving, planes, roads and arriving.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 72: I can talk about trains, driving, planes, roads and arriving.

72.1 火车 (huǒchē) — train

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for salty, then the Mandarin for to order food.

You'll want to know: 火车

火车 — huǒchē — "train".

> 这儿的火车很长 zhèr de huǒchē hěn cháng — The trains here are long.

The new character, in pieces: 火 — a dot on each side, and 人 between them. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 火车 (huǒchē) is built from 火 'fire' and 车 'vehicle', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xwaX and tsyhae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): a fire carriage, from the days of steam.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: huǒchē
- Say it: huǒchē, once more
- Say it: zhèr de huǒchē hěn cháng — The trains here are long.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for salty, then the Mandarin for to order food, then say huǒchē again

Before you move on

What does 火车 mean? ("Train".) Say it once more.

72.2 火 — two sparks around 人

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say huǒchē — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

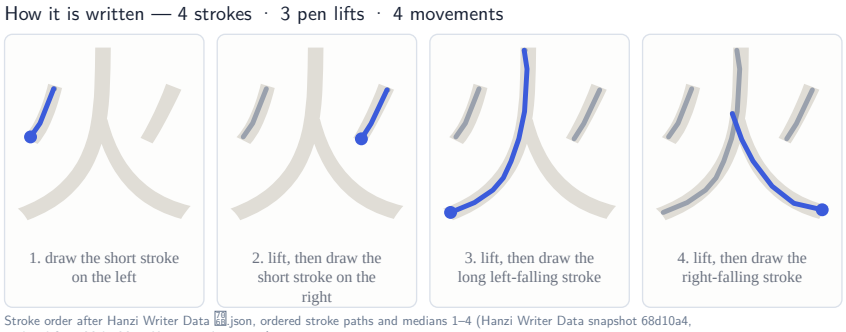
人 大

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rén, dà

Script — two sparks around 人



How 火 is written, stroke by stroke

火

One piece, four strokes.

A short dot on the left, slanting down to the right.

A short left-falling stroke on the right, falling toward the middle.

人, two strokes: a long left-falling stroke from the top down to the lower left, then a long stroke falling to the right from its middle.

2 + 2 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 火, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 火? (Four.) Which character you know is its last two strokes? (人.) What comes first? (The dot on the left.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 火, pinned stroke paths and medians.

72.3 开车 (kāichē) — to drive

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to order food, then the Mandarin for train.

You'll want to know: 开车

开车 — kāichē — "to drive".

> 明天我们开车去看山 míngtiān wǒmen kāichē qù kàn shān — Tomorrow we're driving out to see the mountains.

The new character, in pieces: 开 — two bars, with two legs down through them. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 开车 (kāichē) is built from 开 'to open' and 车 'vehicle', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khoj and tsyhae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). Driving is not among the senses of the first there; opening up, setting going, is the likely step, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: kāichē
- Say it: kāichē, once more
- Say it: míngtiān wǒmen kāichē qù kàn shān — Tomorrow we're driving out to see the mountains.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to order food, then the Mandarin for train, then say kāichē again

Before you move on

What does 开车 mean? ("To drive".) Say it once more.

72.4 开 — two bars, two legs

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say kāichē — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

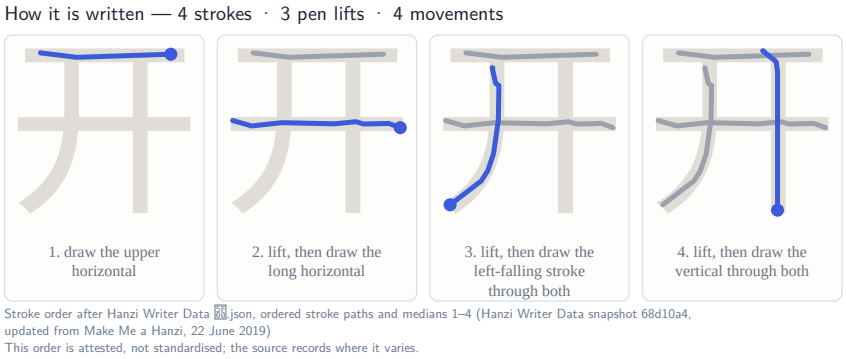
二 车

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — èr, chē

Script — two bars, two legs



How 开 is written, stroke by stroke

开

One piece, four strokes, the bars first.
A short horizontal on top, then a long horizontal below it.
A left-falling stroke from the upper bar, down through the lower one to the bottom left.
A vertical on the right, straight down through both bars.

Your turn

- Write it: 开, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 开? (Four.) Which come first, the bars or the legs? (The bars.) Which leg is straight? (The right one.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 开, pinned stroke paths and medians.

72.5 fēijī — aeroplane

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for train, then the Mandarin for to drive.

You'll want to know: fēijī

fēijī — "aeroplane".

wǒmen zuò fēijī qù Běijīng — We're flying to Beijing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fēijī is built from fēi 'to fly' and 机 'machine', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pj+j and kj+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): a flying machine.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: fēijī
- Say it: fēijī, once more
- Say it: wǒmen zuò fēijī qù Běijīng — We're flying to Beijing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for train, then the Mandarin for to drive, then say fēijī again

Before you move on

What does fēijī mean? ("Aeroplane".) Say it once more.

72.6 lù — road; way

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to drive, then the Mandarin for aeroplane.

You'll want to know: lù

lù — "road; way".

lù hěn yuǎn — It's a long way.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lù is inherited from Middle Chinese luH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'road'.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: lù
- Say it: lù, once more
- Say it: lù hěn yuǎn — It's a long way.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to drive, then the Mandarin for aeroplane, then say lù again

Before you move on

What does lù mean? ("Road; way".) Say it once more.

72.7 dào — to arrive; to reach

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for aeroplane, then the Mandarin for road.

You'll want to know: dào

dào — "to arrive; to reach".

huǒchē hěn màn shí diǎn dào — The train is slow; it gets in at ten.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dào is inherited from Middle Chinese tawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to reach'.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: dào
- Say it: dào, once more
- Say it: huǒchē hěn màn shí diǎn dào — The train is slow; it gets in at ten.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for aeroplane, then the Mandarin for road, then say dào again

Before you move on

What does dào mean? ("To arrive; to reach".) Say it once more.

Chapter 73

At the Station

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say get on and get off, and name the station, the airport and tickets.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 73: I can say get on and get off, and name the station, the airport and tickets.

73.1 下车 (xiàchē) — to get off (a bus or train)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for road, then the Mandarin for to arrive.

You'll want to know: 下车

下车 — xiàchē — "to get off (a bus or train)".

> 我们下车吃饭 wǒmen xiàchē chī fàn — Let's get off and eat.

The new character, in pieces: 下 — a bar, a vertical hanging from it, and a dot to the right: 上 turned over. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 下车 (xiàchē) is built from 下 'to go down' and 车 'vehicle', both inherited from Middle Chinese, haeX and tsyhae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàchē
- Say it: xiàchē, once more
- Say it: wǒmen xiàchē chī fàn — Let's get off and eat.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for road, then the Mandarin for to arrive, then say xiàchē again

Before you move on

What does 下车 mean? ("To get off (a bus or train)".) Say it once more.

73.2 下 — a bar, a vertical, a dot

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xiàchē — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

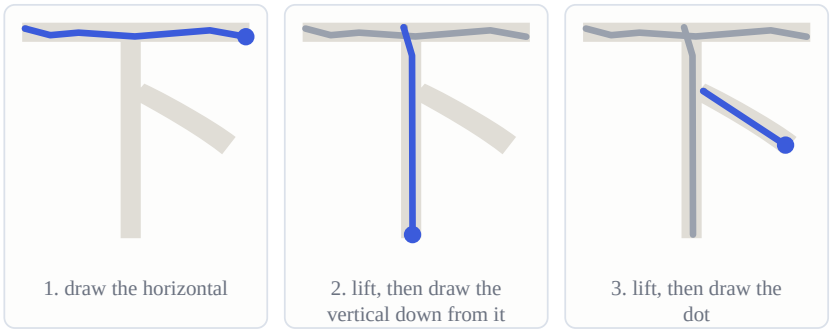
上 车

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shàng, chē

Script — a bar, a vertical, a dot

How it is written — 3 strokes · 2 pen lifts · 3 movements



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 汉字.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–3 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 下 is written, stroke by stroke

下

One piece, three strokes.
A long horizontal across the top.
A vertical hanging down from its middle.
A dot to the right of the vertical, slanting down to the right.

Your turn

- Write it: 下, all three, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 下? (Three.) Which character you know is it turned over? (上.) Where does the dot go? (To the right of the vertical.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 下, pinned stroke paths and medians.

73.3 上车 (shàngchē) — to get on (a bus or train)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to arrive, then the Mandarin for to get off.

You'll want to know: 上车

上车 — shàngchē — "to get on (a bus or train)".

下雨快上车 xiàyǔ kuài shàngchē — It's raining: quick, get in!

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 上车 (shàngchē) is built from 上 'to go up' and 车 'vehicle', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyangX and tsyhae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: shàngchē
- Say it: shàngchē, once more
- Say it: xiàyǔ kuài shàngchē — It's raining: quick, get in!
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to arrive, then the Mandarin for to get off, then say shàngchē again

Before you move on

What does 上车 mean? ("To get on (a bus or train)".) Say it once more.

73.4 huǒchēzhàn — railway station

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get off, then the Mandarin for to get on.

You'll want to know: huǒchēzhàn

huǒchēzhàn — "railway station".

> huǒchēzhàn hěn yuǎn — The station is a long way off.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huǒchēzhàn is built from 火车 'train' and zhàn 'a stop', inherited from Middle Chinese treamH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary glosses as the everyday word for standing alone. The sense 'station' is not given there, so how it got it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: huǒchēzhàn
- Say it: huǒchēzhàn, once more
- Say it: huǒchēzhàn hěn yuǎn — The station is a long way off.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get off, then the Mandarin for to get on, then say huǒchēzhàn again

Before you move on

What does huǒchēzhàn mean? ("Railway station".) Say it once more.

73.5 jīchǎng — airport

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get on, then the Mandarin for railway station.

You'll want to know: jīchǎng

jīchǎng — "airport".

> wǒ qù jīchǎng — I'm going to the airport.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jīchǎng is built from 机 'machine' and chǎng 'open ground', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kj+j and drjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as a threshing floor. The machine here is the plane.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: jīchǎng
- Say it: jīchǎng, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù jīchǎng — I'm going to the airport.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get on, then the Mandarin for railway station, then say jīchǎng again

Before you move on

What does jīchǎng mean? ("Airport".) Say it once more.

73.6 piào — ticket

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for railway station, then the Mandarin for airport.

You'll want to know: piào

piào — "ticket".

wǒ mǎi le piào — I've bought the tickets.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of piào is written with a character the Guangyun records, under an older form, as phjiew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'flying fire'. That is probably a different word: the ticket sense is not given there, and phjiew would regularly give piāo, not piào. How the character came to write the word for ticket is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: piào
- Say it: piào, once more
- Say it: wǒ mǎi le piào — I've bought the tickets.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for railway station, then the Mandarin for airport, then say piào again

Before you move on

What does piào mean? ("Ticket".) Say it once more.

Chapter 74

Visiting

Modes: voice (6) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask a guest in, welcome them and introduce people.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 74: I can ask a guest in, welcome them and introduce people.

74.1 进 (jìn) — to come in; to enter

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for airport, then the Mandarin for ticket.

You'll want to know: 进

进 — jìn — "to come in; to enter".

> 他进门了 tā jìn mén le — He's come in at the door.

The new character, in pieces: 进 — a four-stroke piece read jǐng, a well, on the road piece of 这. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 进 (jìn) is inherited from Middle Chinese tsinH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'forward' and 'to advance'.

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: jìn
- Say it: jìn, once more
- Say it: tā jìn mén le — He's come in at the door.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for airport, then the Mandarin for ticket, then say jìn again

Before you move on

What does 进 mean? ("To come in; to enter".) Say it once more.

74.2 进 — jǐng on the road piece

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say jìn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  开 这

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kāi, zhè

Script — jǐng on the road piece

How 进 is written, stroke by stroke

进

Two pieces: jǐng first, the road last, though the road runs up the left and under.

Jǐng, four strokes: two horizontals, then a left-falling stroke and a vertical down through them, the same four as 开.

The road piece, three strokes, as in 这: a dot, then a stroke that turns and turns again, then a long sweep along the bottom to the right.

4 + 3 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 进, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 进? (Two.) Which character you know has the same first four strokes? (开.) Which character has the same road piece? (这.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 进, pinned stroke paths and medians.

74.3 客人 (kèrén) — guest

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for ticket, then the Mandarin for to come in.

You'll want to know: 客人

客人 — kèrén — "guest".

客人来了快开门 kèrén lái le kuài kāi mén — The guests are here: quick, open the door!

The new character, in pieces: 客 — the roof of 家, a walking foot under it, and 口 at the bottom. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 客人 (kèrén) is built from 客 'guest' and 人 'person', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khaek and nyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: kèrén
- Say it: kèrén, once more
- Say it: kèrén lái le kuài kāi mén — The guests are here: quick, open the door!
- Recall: say the Mandarin for ticket, then the Mandarin for to come in, then say kèrén again

Before you move on

What does 客人 mean? ("Guest".) Say it once more.

74.4 客 — under the roof, a foot and 口

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say kèrén — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

家 字 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — jiā, zì, kǒu

Script — under the roof, a foot and 口

How 客 is written, stroke by stroke

客

Three pieces, top to bottom.

The roof, three strokes, as on 家 and 字: a dot, a short stroke down the left, and a horizontal that turns down and hooks.

The walking foot, three strokes: a short left-falling stroke, a horizontal that turns into a long left-falling stroke, and a long stroke falling to the right.

口, three strokes, at the bottom.

3 + 3 + 3 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 客, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 客? (Three.) Which characters you know have the same roof? (家 and 字.) What sits at the bottom? (口.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 客, pinned stroke paths and medians.

74.5 门口 (ménkǒu) — doorway; entrance

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to come in, then the Mandarin for guest.

You'll want to know: 门口

门口 — ménkǒu — "doorway; entrance".

门口有一个客人 ménkǒu yǒu yí ge kèrén — There's a guest at the door.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 门口 (ménkǒu) is built from 门 'door' and 口 'mouth', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mwon and khuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the mouth of the door, where you go in.

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: ménkǒu
- Say it: ménkǒu, once more
- Say it: ménkǒu yǒu yí ge kèrén — There's a guest at the door.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for to come in, then the Mandarin for guest, then say ménkǒu again

Before you move on

What does 门口 mean? ("Doorway; entrance".) Say it once more.

74.6 huānyíng — welcome

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for guest, then the Mandarin for doorway.

You'll want to know: huānyíng

huānyíng — "welcome".

huānyíng nǐ lái wǒ jiā — Welcome to my home!

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huānyíng is built from huān 'glad' and yíng 'to go to meet', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xwan and ngjaeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): glad to meet you.

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: huānyíng
- Say it: huānyíng, once more
- Say it: huānyíng nǐ lái wǒ jiā — Welcome to my home!
- Recall: say the Mandarin for guest, then the Mandarin for doorway, then say huānyíng again

Before you move on

What does huānyíng mean? (“Welcome”.) Say it once more.

74.7 jièshào — to introduce

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for doorway, then the Mandarin for welcome.

You’ll want to know: jièshào

jièshào — “to introduce”.

qǐng nǐ jièshào nǐ de jiārén — Tell us about your family, please.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jièshào is built from jiè and shào, both inherited from Middle Chinese, keajH and dzyewX (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as ’to help’ and the second as ’to carry on’; how the pair came to mean introducing somebody is not settled.

What you’ve built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: jièshào
- Say it: jièshào, once more
- Say it: qǐng nǐ jièshào nǐ de jiārén — Tell us about your family, please.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for doorway, then the Mandarin for welcome, then say jièshào again

Before you move on

What does jièshào mean? (“To introduce”.) Say it once more.

74.8 Looking back: from More to Eat to Visiting

Say the Mandarin for meat and steamed bun.

Your turn

- Say it: meat, steamed bun, noodles, dumpling, soup
- Say it: nice to drink, sweet, spicy, salty, to order food
- Say it: train, to drive, aeroplane, road, to arrive
- Say it: to get off, to get on, railway station, airport, ticket
- Say it: to come in, guest, doorway, welcome, to introduce
- Read it: 火 开 下 进 客 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

Meat? (ròu.) Steamed bun? (bāozi.) Noodles? (miàntiáo.) Dumpling? (jiǎozi.) Soup? (tāng.) Nice to drink? (好喝, hǎohē.) Sweet? (tián.) Spicy? (là.) Salty? (xián.) To order food? (diǎncài.) Train? (火车, huǒchē.) To drive? (开车, kāichē.) Aeroplane? (fēijī.) Road? (lù.) To arrive? (dào.) To get off? (下车, xiàchē.) To get on? (上车, shàngchē.) Railway station? (huǒchēzhàn.) Airport? (jīchǎng.) Ticket? (piào.) To come in? (进, jìn.) Guest? (客人, kèrén.) Doorway? (门口, ménkǒu.) Welcome? (huānyíng.) To introduce? (jièshào.)

Chapter 75

Celebrating

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can wish somebody a happy birthday and give a present.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 75: I can wish somebody a happy birthday and give a present.

75.1 快乐 (kuàilè) — joyful; happy

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for welcome, then the Mandarin for to introduce.

You'll want to know: 快乐

快乐 — kuàilè — "joyful; happy".

> 我们很快乐 wǒmen hěn kuàilè — We're very happy.

The new character, in pieces: 乐 — a nearly flat fall, a turn, and then 小 with its middle hooked. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 快乐 (kuàilè) is built from 快 and 乐, both inherited from Middle Chinese, khwaejH and lak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as 'glad' and the second as 'joy': gladness twice over.

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: kuàilè
- Say it: kuàilè, once more
- Say it: wǒmen hěn kuàilè — We're very happy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for welcome, then the Mandarin for to introduce, then say kuàilè again

Before you move on

What does 快乐 mean? ("Joyful; happy".) Say it once more.

75.2 乐 — a fall, a turn, and 小

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say kuàilè — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

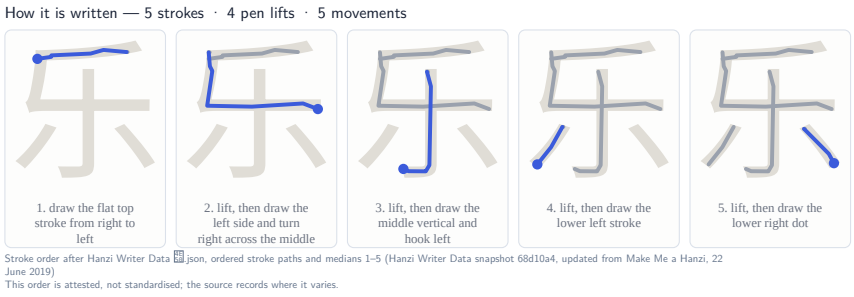
小 快

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — xiǎo, kuài

Script — a fall, a turn, and 小



How 乐 is written, stroke by stroke

乐

One piece, five strokes.
A left-falling stroke across the top, from right to left, nearly flat.
A vertical that turns right, under the left end of the first stroke.
Then the three strokes of 小: the vertical down the middle that hooks to the left, a dot falling left, a dot falling right.
2 + 3 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 乐, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 乐? (Five.) Which character you know are its last three? (小.) Which way does the first stroke run? (From right to left, nearly flat.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 乐, pinned stroke paths and medians.

75.3 生日 (shēngrì) — birthday

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to introduce, then the Mandarin for joyful.

You'll want to know: 生日

生日 — shēngrì — "birthday".

明天是我的生日 míngtiān shì wǒ de shēngrì — Tomorrow is my birthday.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 生日 (shēngrì) is built from 生 'to be born' and 日 'day', both inherited from Middle Chinese, srjaeng and nyit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: shēngrì
- Say it: shēngrì, once more
- Say it: míngtiān shì wǒ de shēngrì — Tomorrow is my birthday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to introduce, then the Mandarin for joyful, then say shēngrì again

Before you move on

What does 生日 mean? ("Birthday".) Say it once more.

75.4 dàngāo — cake

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for joyful, then the Mandarin for birthday.

You'll want to know: dàngāo

dàngāo — "cake".

māma de dàngāo hěn hǎochī — Mum's cake is delicious.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dàngāo is built from dàn 'egg', the dàn of jīdàn, and gāo 'cake'. No dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled; the second is probably the kaw that the Guangyun writes with another form of the character (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed with a word for gruel.

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: dàngāo
- Say it: dàngāo, once more
- Say it: māma de dàngāo hěn hǎochī — Mum's cake is delicious.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for joyful, then the Mandarin for birthday, then say dàngāo again

Before you move on

What does dàngāo mean? ("Cake".) Say it once more.

75.5 lǐwù — present; gift

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for birthday, then the Mandarin for cake.

You'll want to know: lǐwù lǐwù — "present; gift".

wǒ mǎi le yí ge lǐwù — I've bought a present.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǐwù is built from lǐ 'rite, courtesy' and wù 'thing', both inherited from Middle Chinese, lejX and mjut (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): a thing given out of courtesy.

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: lǐwù
- Say it: lǐwù, once more

- Say it: wǒ mǎi le yí ge lǐwù — I've bought a present.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for birthday, then the Mandarin for cake, then say lǐwù again

Before you move on

What does lǐwù mean? ("Present; gift".) Say it once more.

75.6 sòng — to give as a present; to see off

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for cake, then the Mandarin for present.

You'll want to know: sòng

sòng — "to give as a present; to see off".

wǒmen sòng shénme lǐwù — What present shall we give?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of sòng is inherited from Middle Chinese suwngH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to send off'; giving a present is sending something off with somebody.

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: sòng
- Say it: sòng, once more
- Say it: wǒmen sòng shénme lǐwù — What present shall we give?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for cake, then the Mandarin for present, then say sòng again

Before you move on

What does sòng mean? (“To give as a present; to see off”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 76

Parting

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say see you soon, see you tomorrow, good night and bye-bye.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 76: I can say see you soon, see you tomorrow, good night and bye-bye.

76.1 一会儿 (yíhuìr) — a little while; in a moment

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for present, then the Mandarin for to give as a present.

You'll want to know: 一会儿

一会儿 — yíhuìr — "a little while; in a moment".

> 我一会儿打电话 wǒ yíhuìr dǎ diànhuà — I'll ring in a little while.

The new character, in pieces: 会 — 人 spread as a roof, two bars, and a bend with a dot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

yī changes its tone here, rising to yí before the falling huì: yíhuìr.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 一会儿 (yíhuìr) is built from 一 'one', huì and the ending r, inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jit, hwajH and nye (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses huì as 'to come together'; how the phrase came to mean a short while is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: yíhuìr
- Say it: yíhuìr, once more
- Say it: wǒ yíhuìr dǎ diànhuà — I'll ring in a little while.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for present, then the Mandarin for to give as a present, then say yíhuìr again

Before you move on

What does 一会儿 mean? ("A little while; in a moment".) Say it once more.

76.2 会 — 人 over two bars and a bend

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say yíhuìr — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

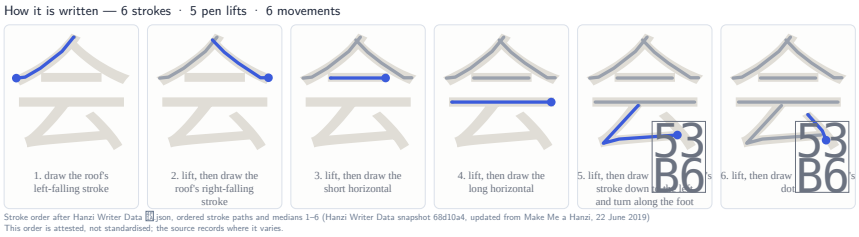
人 今 去

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rén, jīn, qù

Script — 人 over two bars and a bend



How 会 is written, stroke by stroke

会

Three parts, top to bottom.
人, two strokes, spread wide as a roof, as on 今.
Two horizontals under it, the lower one longer.
A stroke that falls left and turns right along the bottom, then a dot: the same two strokes that end 去.
2 + 2 + 2 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 会, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 会? (Six.) Which character you know is on top? (人.) What comes last? (A dot.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 会, pinned stroke paths and medians.

76.3 明天见 (míngtiān jiàn) — see you tomorrow

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to give as a present, then the Mandarin for a little while.

You'll want to know: 明天见

明天见 — míngtiān jiàn — "see you tomorrow".

下雨我们明天见 xiàyǔ wǒmen míngtiān jiàn — It's raining: let's meet tomorrow.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 明天见 (míngtiān jiàn) is built from 明天 'tomorrow' and 见 'to see', the 见 of 再见.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: míngtiān jiàn
- Say it: míngtiān jiàn, once more
- Say it: xiàyǔ wǒmen míngtiān jiàn — It's raining: let's meet tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to give as a present, then the Mandarin for a little while, then say míngtiān jiàn again

Before you move on

What does 明天见 mean? ("See you tomorrow".) Say it once more.

76.4 再说 (zàishuō) — to leave it till later

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a little while, then the Mandarin for see you tomorrow.

You'll want to know: 再说

再说 — zàishuō — "to leave it till later".

对不起一会儿再说 duìbuqǐ yíhuìr zàishuō — Sorry: let's talk about it in a bit.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 再说 (zàishuō) is built from 再 'again' and 说 'to say', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsojH and sywet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): say it again, another time.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: zàishuō
- Say it: zàishuō, once more
- Say it: duìbuqǐ yíhuìr zàishuō — Sorry: let's talk about it in a bit.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a little while, then the Mandarin for see you tomorrow, then say zàishuō again

Before you move on

What does 再说 mean? ("To leave it till later".) Say it once more.

76.5 wǎn'ān — good night

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for see you tomorrow, then the Mandarin for to leave it till later.

You'll want to know: wǎn'ān

wǎn'ān — "good night".

māma wǎn'ān — Mum, good night.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wǎn'ān is built from wǎn 'evening' and ān 'peace', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjonX and 'an (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as 'calm, at rest'.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: wǎn'ān
- Say it: wǎn'ān, once more

- Say it: māma wǎn'ān — Mum, good night.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for see you tomorrow, then the Mandarin for to leave it till later, then say wǎn'ān again

Before you move on

What does wǎn'ān mean? ("Good night".) Say it once more.

76.6 bàibai — bye-bye

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to leave it till later, then the Mandarin for good night.

You'll want to know: bàibai

bàibai — "bye-bye".

bàibai míngtiān jiàn — Bye, see you tomorrow!

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bàibai is borrowed from English bye-bye, written with a character read bài, 'to bow', for the sound.

What you've built

One more word for times and partings.

Your turn

- Say it: bàibai
- Say it: bàibai, once more
- Say it: bàibai míngtiān jiàn — Bye, see you tomorrow!
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to leave it till later, then the Mandarin for good night, then say bàibai again

Before you move on

What does bàibai mean? (“Bye-bye”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 77

Thanks and Replies

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can answer thanks, thank people warmly and say really and very.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 77: I can answer thanks, thank people warmly and say really and very.

77.1 不客气 (bú kèqi) — you're welcome; don't mention it

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for good night, then the Mandarin for bye-bye.

You'll want to know: 不客气

不客气 — bú kèqi — "you're welcome; don't mention it".

> 不客气请进 bú kèqi qǐng jìn — Don't mention it. Do come in!

bù changes its tone here, rising to bú before the falling kè: bú kèqi.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 不客气 (bú kèqi) is built from 不 'not' and kèqi 'polite, formal', from Middle Chinese khaek 'guest' and khj+jH 'breath' (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): no need to be formal.

What you've built

One more word for thanking and answering thanks.

Your turn

- Say it: bú kèqi
- Say it: bú kèqi, once more
- Say it: bú kèqi qǐng jìn — Don't mention it. Do come in!
- Recall: say the Mandarin for good night, then the Mandarin for bye-bye, then say bú kèqi again

Before you move on

What does 不客气 mean? ("You're welcome; don't mention it".) Say it once more.

77.2 máfan — to trouble; to bother

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bye-bye, then the Mandarin for don't mention it.

You'll want to know: máfan

máfan — "to trouble; to bother".

bù hǎoyìsi máfan nǐ — Sorry to trouble you.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of máfan is built from má and fán, both inherited from Middle Chinese, mae and bjon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as hemp and the second as 'toil'; how the pair came to mean putting somebody to trouble is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for thanking and answering thanks.

Your turn

- Say it: máfan
- Say it: máfan, once more
- Say it: bù hǎoyìsi máfan nǐ — Sorry to trouble you.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bye-bye, then the Mandarin for don't mention it, then say máfan again

Before you move on

What does máfan mean? ("To trouble; to bother".) Say it once more.

77.3 gǎnxiè — to thank (warmly)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for don't mention it, then the Mandarin for to trouble somebody.

You'll want to know: gǎnxiè

gǎnxiè — "to thank (warmly)".

gǎnxiè dàjiā — Thank you, everyone.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gǎnxiè is built from gǎn 'to be moved' and 谢 'to thank', both inherited from Middle Chinese, komX and zjaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for thanking and answering thanks.

Your turn

- Say it: gǎnxiè
- Say it: gǎnxiè, once more
- Say it: gǎnxiè dàjiā — Thank you, everyone.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for don't mention it, then the Mandarin for to trouble somebody, then say gǎnxiè again

Before you move on

What does gǎnxiè mean? ("To thank (warmly)".) Say it once more.

77.4 fēicháng — extremely; very

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to trouble somebody, then the Mandarin for to thank.

You'll want to know: fēicháng

fēicháng — "extremely; very".

fēicháng gǎnxiè — Thank you so much.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fēicháng is built from fēi 'not' and cháng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, pj+j and dzyang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as 'it is not so'; the second as 'usual' is not given there, so 'out of the ordinary' is likely but not settled.

What you've built

One more word for thanking and answering thanks.

Your turn

- Say it: fēicháng
- Say it: fēicháng, once more
- Say it: fēicháng gǎnxiè — Thank you so much.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to trouble somebody, then the Mandarin for to thank, then say fēicháng again

Before you move on

What does fēicháng mean? ("Extremely; very".) Say it once more.

77.5 zhēn — really; truly

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to thank, then the Mandarin for extremely.

You'll want to know: zhēn

zhēn — "really; truly".

nǐ zhēn hǎo — You're so kind.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhēn is inherited from Middle Chinese tsyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'true, as against false'.

What you've built

One more word for thanking and answering thanks.

Your turn

- Say it: zhēn
- Say it: zhēn, once more

- Say it: nǐ zhēn hǎo — You're so kind.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to thank, then the Mandarin for extremely, then say zhēn again

Before you move on

What does zhēn mean? ("Really; truly".) Say it once more.

Chapter 78

Age and Growing Up

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how old somebody is and talk about growing up and years ago.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 78: I can ask how old somebody is and talk about growing up and years ago.

78.1 多大 (duō dà) — how old (asking a person's age)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for extremely, then the Mandarin for really.

You'll want to know: 多大

多大 — duō dà — "how old (asking a person's age)".

> 生日快乐你今年多大 shēngrì kuàilè nǐ jīnnián duō dà — Happy birthday! How old are you now?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 多大 (duō dà) is built from 多 'much' and 大 'big': how big, said of a person's years.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: duō dà
- Say it: duō dà, once more
- Say it: shēngrì kuàilè nǐ jīnnián duō dà — Happy birthday! How old are you now?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for extremely, then the Mandarin for really, then say duō dà again

Before you move on

What does 多大 mean? ("How old (asking a person's age)".) Say it once more.

78.2 长大 (zhǎngdà) — to grow up

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for really, then the Mandarin for how old.

You'll want to know: 长大

长大 — zhǎngdà — "to grow up".

他们长大了 tāmen zhǎngdà le — They've grown up.

The character you wrote for cháng, long, is read zhǎng here, to grow.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 长大 (zhǎngdà) is built from zhǎng 'to grow' and 大 'big', both inherited from Middle Chinese, trjangX and dajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as 'big' and 'elder'; growing is not given there, so how it got that sense is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǎngdà
- Say it: zhǎngdà, once more
- Say it: tāmen zhǎngdà le — They've grown up.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for really, then the Mandarin for how old, then say zhǎngdà again

Before you move on

What does 长大 mean? ("To grow up".) Say it once more.

78.3 前 (qián) — before; ago; front

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for how old, then the Mandarin for to grow up.

You'll want to know: 前

前 — qián — "before; ago; front".

三年前我八岁 sān nián qián wǒ bā suì — Three years ago I was eight.

The new character, in pieces: 前 — two horns over a bar, the moon piece read yuè on the left, and a blade of two verticals on the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 前 (qián) is inherited from Middle Chinese dzen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'before, first'.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: qián
- Say it: qián, once more
- Say it: sān nián qián wǒ bā suì — Three years ago I was eight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for how old, then the Mandarin for to grow up, then say qián again

Before you move on

What does 前 mean? ("Before; ago; front".) Say it once more.

78.4 前 — horns, a bar, the moon and a blade

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say qián — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  三 年

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — sān, nián

Script — horns, a bar, the moon and a blade

How 前 is written, stroke by stroke

前

Two horns, two strokes: a dot on the left, a short left-falling stroke on the right.

A long horizontal under them.

The moon piece, four strokes, read yuè as in the word for month: a left side that falls down, a top that turns down the right side and hooks, and two short bars inside.

The blade, two strokes: a short vertical, then a long vertical that hooks to the left.

2 + 1 + 4 + 2 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 前, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 前? (Nine.) What comes after the horns? (The long bar.) Which stroke hooks last? (The long vertical on the right.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 前, pinned stroke paths and medians.

78.5 niánjì — age (of a person)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to grow up, then the Mandarin for ago.

You'll want to know: niánjì

niánjì — "age (of a person)".

nǐ bàba duō dà niánjì — How old is your father?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of niánjì is built from 年 'year' and jì, both inherited from Middle Chinese, nen and kiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as a span of twelve years.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: niánjì
- Say it: niánjì, once more
- Say it: nǐ bàba duō dà niánjì — How old is your father?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to grow up, then the Mandarin for ago, then say niánjì again

Before you move on

What does niánjì mean? ("Age (of a person)".) Say it once more.

78.6 xiǎoshíhou — in childhood; when one was little

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for ago, then the Mandarin for age.

You'll want to know: xiǎoshíhou xiǎoshíhou — "in childhood; when one was little".

wǒ xiǎoshíhou hěn xǐhuan xiào — As a child I laughed a lot.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiǎoshíhou is built from 小 'small' and shíhou 'time', all inherited from Middle Chinese, sjewX, dzyi and huwH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the time when you were small.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: xiǎoshíhou
- Say it: xiǎoshíhou, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎoshíhou hěn xǐhuan xiào — As a child I laughed a lot.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for ago, then the Mandarin for age, then say xiǎoshíhou again

Before you move on

What does xiǎoshíhou mean? (“In childhood; when one was little”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 79

At School

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about classes, the classroom, homework and exams.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 79: I can talk about classes, the classroom, homework and exams.

79.1 上课 (shàngkè) — to have class; to start class

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for age, then the Mandarin for in childhood.

You'll want to know: 上课

上课 — shàngkè — "to have class; to start class".

> 今天有汉语课我们一会儿上课 jīntiān yǒu hànyǔ kè wǒmen yíhuìr shàngkè — There's a Chinese class today; it starts in a moment.

The new character, in pieces: 课 — 讠 on the left, and on the right guǒ, the fruit of shuǐguǒ: a box over the tree piece. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 上课 (shàngkè) is built from 上 'to go up to' and 课 'lesson', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyangX and khwaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second as 'a tax' and 'a test'; the sense lesson is not given there.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: shàngkè
- Say it: shàngkè, once more
- Say it: jīntiān yǒu hànyǔ kè wǒmen yíhuìr shàngkè — There's a Chinese class today; it starts in a moment.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for age, then the Mandarin for in childhood, then say shàngkè again

Before you move on

What does 上课 mean? ("To have class; to start class".) Say it once more.

79.2 课 — the speech piece, then guǒ

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shàngkè — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  讠 说

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — the speech piece, shuō

Script — the speech piece, then guǒ

How 课 is written, stroke by stroke

课

Two pieces, left before right.
讠 , two strokes, as in 说 and 话.
Guǒ, eight strokes: a box like 日, its left side, the top that turns down, the middle bar and the bar that closes it; then a long horizontal, a vertical down through the box and the bar, a left-falling stroke and a stroke falling to the right.
2 + 8 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 课, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 课? (Two.) Which characters you know start the same way? (说 and 话.) What runs down through the box? (The vertical, the eighth stroke.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 课, pinned stroke paths and medians.

79.3 下课 (xiàkè) — to finish class

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for in childhood, then the Mandarin for to start class.

You'll want to know: 下课

下课 — xiàkè — "to finish class".

十二点前我们下课 shí'èr diǎn qián wǒmen xiàkè — We finish class before twelve.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 下课 (xiàkè) is built from 下 'to go down from' and 课 'lesson', both inherited from Middle Chinese, haeX and khwaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); lesson is not among the senses the dictionary gives the second.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàkè
- Say it: xiàkè, once more
- Say it: shí'èr diǎn qián wǒmen xiàkè — We finish class before twelve.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for in childhood, then the Mandarin for to start class, then say xiàkè again

Before you move on

What does 下课 mean? ("To finish class".) Say it once more.

79.4 jiàoshì — classroom

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to start class, then the Mandarin for to finish class.

You'll want to know: jiàoshì

jiàoshì — "classroom".

> wǒmen de jiàoshì hěn dà — Our classroom is big.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiàoshì is built from jiào 'to teach' and shì 'room', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kaewH and syit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: jiàoshì
- Say it: jiàoshì, once more
- Say it: wǒmen de jiàoshì hěn dà — Our classroom is big.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to start class, then the Mandarin for to finish class, then say jiàoshì again

Before you move on

What does jiàoshì mean? ("Classroom".) Say it once more.

79.5 zuòyè — homework

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to finish class, then the Mandarin for classroom.

You'll want to know: zuòyè

zuòyè — "homework".

> jīntiān de zuòyè shì dú hànzì — Today's homework is reading characters aloud.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zuòyè is built from zuò 'to do' and yè 'task', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsak and ngjaep (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: zuòyè
- Say it: zuòyè, once more
- Say it: jīntiān de zuòyè shì dú hànzì — Today's homework is reading characters aloud.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to finish class, then the Mandarin for classroom, then say zuòyè again

Before you move on

What does zuòyè mean? ("Homework".) Say it once more.

79.6 kǎoshì — to take an exam

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for classroom, then the Mandarin for homework.

You'll want to know: kǎoshì

kǎoshì — "to take an exam".

míngtiān kǎoshì jīntiān wǒ xuéxí — The exam is tomorrow, so today I'm studying.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kǎoshì is built from kǎo and shì, both inherited from Middle Chinese, khawX and syiH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as 'to check' and the second as 'to use'; the sense 'exam' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: kǎoshì
- Say it: kǎoshì, once more
- Say it: míngtiān kǎoshì jīntiān wǒ xuéxí — The exam is tomorrow, so today I'm studying.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for classroom, then the Mandarin for homework, then say kǎoshì again

Before you move on

What does kǎoshì mean? ("To take an exam".) Say it once more.

79.7 Looking back: from Celebrating to At School

Say the Mandarin for joyful and birthday.

Your turn

- Say it: joyful, birthday, cake, present, to give as a present
- Say it: a little while, see you tomorrow, to leave it till later, good night, bye-bye
- Say it: don't mention it, to trouble somebody, to thank, extremely, really

- Say it: how old, to grow up, ago, age, in childhood
- Say it: to start class, to finish class, classroom, homework, to take an exam
- Read it: 乐 会 前 课 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

Joyful? (快乐, kuàilè.) Birthday? (生日, shēngrì.) Cake? (dàngāo.) Present? (lǐwù.) To give as a present? (sòng.) A little while? (一会儿, yíhuìr.) See you tomorrow? (明天见, míngtiān jiàn.) To leave it till later? (再说, zàishuō.) Good night? (wǎn'ān.) Bye-bye? (bàibai.) Don't mention it? (不客气, bú kèqi.) To trouble somebody? (máfan.) To thank? (gǎnxiè.) Extremely? (fēicháng.) Really? (zhēn.) How old? (多大, duō dà.) To grow up? (长大, zhǎngdà.) Ago? (前, qián.) Age? (niánjì.) In childhood? (xiǎoshíhou.) To start class? (上课, shàngkè.) To finish class? (下课, xiàkè.) Classroom? (jiàoshì.) Homework? (zuòyè.) To take an exam? (kǎoshì.)

Chapter 80

Jobs

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say who goes to work where: workers, drivers, doctors and companies.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 80: I can say who goes to work where: workers, drivers, doctors and companies.

80.1 shàngbān — to go to work

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for homework, then the Mandarin for to take an exam.

You'll want to know: shàngbān

shàngbān — "to go to work".

> wǒ jiǔ diǎn shàngbān — I start work at nine.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shàngbān is built from 上 'to go up to' and bān, both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyangX and paen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary explains the second, through an older book, as dividing up jade tallies; a shift of work is a likely step, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: shàngbān
- Say it: shàngbān, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiǔ diǎn shàngbān — I start work at nine.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for homework, then the Mandarin for to take an exam, then say shàngbān again

Before you move on

What does shàngbān mean? ("To go to work".) Say it once more.

80.2 gōngrén — worker

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to take an exam, then the Mandarin for to go to work.

You'll want to know: gōngrén

gōngrén — "worker".

wǒ bàba shì gōngrén — My dad is a worker.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gōngrén is built from gōng 'craft, work' and 人 'person', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kuwng and nyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: gōngrén
- Say it: gōngrén, once more
- Say it: wǒ bàba shì gōngrén — My dad is a worker.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to take an exam, then the Mandarin for to go to work, then say gōngrén again

Before you move on

What does gōngrén mean? ("Worker".) Say it once more.

80.3 sījī — driver

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go to work, then the Mandarin for worker.

You'll want to know: sījī

sījī — "driver".

tā shì chūzūchē sījī — He's a taxi driver.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of sījī is built from sī 'to be in charge' and 机 'machine', both inherited from Middle Chinese, si and kj+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the one in charge of the machine.

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: sījī
- Say it: sījī, once more

- Say it: tā shì chūzūchē sījī — He's a taxi driver.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go to work, then the Mandarin for worker, then say sījī again

Before you move on

What does sījī mean? ("Driver".) Say it once more.

80.4 yīshēng — doctor

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for worker, then the Mandarin for driver.

You'll want to know: yīshēng

yīshēng — "doctor".

wǒ māma shì yīshēng — My mum is a doctor.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yīshēng is built from yī 'healing' and 生, as in 学生 and in xiānsheng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'i and srjaeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: yīshēng
- Say it: yīshēng, once more
- Say it: wǒ māma shì yīshēng — My mum is a doctor.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for worker, then the Mandarin for driver, then say yīshēng again

Before you move on

What does yīshēng mean? (“Doctor”.) Say it once more.

80.5 gōngsī — company; firm

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for driver, then the Mandarin for doctor.

You’ll want to know: gōngsī

gōngsī — “company; firm”.

wǒ de gōngsī hěn dà — My company is big.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gōngsī is built from gōng ’public, shared’ and sī ’to manage’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kuwng and si (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription).

What you’ve built

One more word about people.

Your turn

- Say it: gōngsī
- Say it: gōngsī, once more
- Say it: wǒ de gōngsī hěn dà — My company is big.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for driver, then the Mandarin for doctor, then say gōngsī again

Before you move on

What does gōngsī mean? (“Company; firm”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 81

The City

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about cities and places, say inside and beside, and talk about abroad.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 81: I can talk about cities and places, say inside and beside, and talk about abroad.

81.1 里 (lǐ) — inside; in

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for doctor, then the Mandarin for company.

You'll want to know: 里

里 — lǐ — "inside; in".

山里有马 shān lǐ yǒu mǎ — There are horses up in the hills.

The new character, in pieces: 里 — 日 with a vertical running down through it, standing on two bars. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 里 (lǐ) is inherited from Middle Chinese liX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'inside' and, through an older book, 'the inside of a garment'.

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: lǐ
- Say it: lǐ, once more
- Say it: shān lǐ yǒu mǎ — There are horses up in the hills.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for doctor, then the Mandarin for company, then say lǐ again

Before you move on

What does 里 mean? ("Inside; in".) Say it once more.

81.2 里 — 日, a line through it, two bars

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say lǐ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  日 家

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rì, jiā

Script — 日, a line through it, two bars

How 里 is written, stroke by stroke

里

One piece, built from the top down.

日, four strokes: the left side, the top that turns down, the middle bar, the bottom bar.

A vertical down the middle, through 日 and on below it.

Two horizontals, a short one across the vertical, then a long one along the bottom.

4 + 1 + 2 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 里, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 里? (Seven.) Which character you know is at the top? (日.) Which bar is longest? (The last, along the bottom.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 里, pinned stroke paths and medians.

81.3 chéngshì — city

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for company, then the Mandarin for inside.

You'll want to know: chéngshì

chéngshì — "city".

Běijīng shì yí ge dà chéngshì — Beijing is a big city.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chéngshì is built from chéng 'city walls' and shì 'market', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyeng and dzyiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: chéngshì
- Say it: chéngshì, once more
- Say it: Běijīng shì yí ge dà chéngshì — Beijing is a big city.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for company, then the Mandarin for inside, then say chéngshì again

Before you move on

What does chéngshì mean? ("City".) Say it once more.

81.4 dìfang — place

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for inside, then the Mandarin for city.

You'll want to know: dìfang

dìfang — "place".

zhège dìfang hěn hǎo — This is a nice place.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dìfang is built from dì 'land' and fāng 'quarter, region', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dijH and pjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: dìfang
- Say it: dìfang, once more
- Say it: zhège dìfang hěn hǎo — This is a nice place.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for inside, then the Mandarin for city, then say dìfang again

Before you move on

What does dìfang mean? ("Place".) Say it once more.

81.5 wàiguó — foreign country; abroad

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for city, then the Mandarin for place.

You'll want to know: wàiguó

wàiguó — "foreign country; abroad".

tā shì wàiguó rén — He's a foreigner.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wàiguó is built from wài 'outside' and 国 'country', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngwajH and kwok (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: wàiguó
- Say it: wàiguó, once more
- Say it: tā shì wàiguó rén — He's a foreigner.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for city, then the Mandarin for place, then say wàiguó again

Before you move on

What does wàiguó mean? ("Foreign country; abroad".) Say it once more.

81.6 pángbiān — side; beside

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for place, then the Mandarin for abroad.

You'll want to know: pángbiān

pángbiān — "side; beside".

wǒ jiā pángbiān yǒu yí ge shāngdiàn — There's a shop next to my home.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of pángbiān is built from páng 'side' and biān 'edge', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bang and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: pángbiān
- Say it: pángbiān, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā pángbiān yǒu yí ge shāngdiàn — There's a shop next to my home.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for place, then the Mandarin for abroad, then say pángbiān again

Before you move on

What does pángbiān mean? ("Side; beside".) Say it once more.

Chapter 82

Behind, Left and Right

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say after, left, right, in the middle and opposite.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 82: I can say after, left, right, in the middle and opposite.

82.1 hòu — after; behind; later

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for abroad, then the Mandarin for beside.

You'll want to know: hòu

hòu — "after; behind; later".

> sān tiān hòu wǒmen qù Běijīng — In three days we're going to Beijing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

hòu is inherited from Middle Chinese huwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed with the pair 'before and after'; the dictionary writes it with the traditional form of the character.

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: hòu
- Say it: hòu, once more
- Say it: sān tiān hòu wǒmen qù Běijīng — In three days we're going to Beijing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for abroad, then the Mandarin for beside, then say hòu again

Before you move on

What does hòu mean? ("After; behind; later".) Say it once more.

82.2 zuǒbian — the left; on the left

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for beside, then the Mandarin for after.

You'll want to know: zuǒbian

zuǒbian — "the left; on the left".

zuǒbian shì wǒ de fángjiān — My room is on the left.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zuǒbian is built from zuǒ 'left' and bian 'side', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsaX and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: zuǒbian
- Say it: zuǒbian, once more
- Say it: zuǒbian shì wǒ de fángjiān — My room is on the left.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for beside, then the Mandarin for after, then say zuǒbian again

Before you move on

What does zuǒbian mean? ("The left; on the left".) Say it once more.

82.3 yòubian — the right; on the right

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for after, then the Mandarin for the left side.

You'll want to know: yòubian

yòubian — "the right; on the right".

yòubian shì shāngdiàn — The shop is on the right.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yòubian is built from yòu 'right' and bian 'side', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuwX and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: yòubian
- Say it: yòubian, once more

- Say it: yòubian shì shāngdiàn — The shop is on the right.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for after, then the Mandarin for the left side, then say yòubian again

Before you move on

What does yòubian mean? ("The right; on the right".) Say it once more.

82.4 zhōngjiān — the middle; between

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the left side, then the Mandarin for the right side.

You'll want to know: zhōngjiān

zhōngjiān — "the middle; between".

zhōngjiān nàge shì wǒ — The one in the middle is me.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhōngjiān is built from 中 'middle' and jiān 'a gap', both inherited from Middle Chinese, trjuwng and kean (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary lists the second under an older form of the character.

What you've built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: zhōngjiān
- Say it: zhōngjiān, once more
- Say it: zhōngjiān nàge shì wǒ — The one in the middle is me.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the left side, then the Mandarin for the right side, then say zhōngjiān again

Before you move on

What does zhōngjiān mean? (“The middle; between”.) Say it once more.

82.5 duìmiàn — opposite; across from

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the right side, then the Mandarin for the middle.

You’ll want to know: duìmiàn

duìmiàn — “opposite; across from”.

wǒ jiā duìmiàn yǒu yí ge fàndiàn — There’s a restaurant across from my home.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of duìmiàn is built from 对 ’to face’ and miàn ’face’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, twojH and mjienH (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription): face to face.

What you’ve built

One more word for meeting people.

Your turn

- Say it: duìmiàn
- Say it: duìmiàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā duìmiàn yǒu yí ge fàndiàn — There’s a restaurant across from my home.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the right side, then the Mandarin for the middle, then say duìmiàn again

Before you move on

What does duìmiàn mean? (“Opposite; across from”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 83

Running Late

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask if somebody is free, and say early, right away, too late and late.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 83: I can ask if somebody is free, and say early, right away, too late and late.

83.1 shíjiān — time; free time

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the middle, then the Mandarin for opposite.

You'll want to know: shíjiān

shíjiān — "time; free time".

> nǐ míngtiān yǒu shíjiān ma — Are you free tomorrow?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shíjiān is built from shí 'time' and jiān 'a gap', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyi and kean (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first with another word for a time, and lists the second under an older form of the character.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: shíjiān
- Say it: shíjiān, once more
- Say it: nǐ míngtiān yǒu shíjiān ma — Are you free tomorrow?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the middle, then the Mandarin for opposite, then say shíjiān again

Before you move on

What does shíjiān mean? ("Time; free time".) Say it once more.

83.2 早 (zǎo) — early

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for opposite, then the Mandarin for time to spare.

You'll want to know: 早

早 — zǎo — "early".

明天的火车很早 míngtiān de huǒchē hěn zǎo — Tomorrow's train leaves early.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 早 (zǎo) is inherited from Middle Chinese tsawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'morning'. Early is not given there; from morning to early is the likely step, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: zǎo
- Say it: zǎo, once more
- Say it: míngtiān de huǒchē hěn zǎo — Tomorrow's train leaves early.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for opposite, then the Mandarin for time to spare, then say zǎo again

Before you move on

What does 早 mean? ("Early".) Say it once more.

83.3 马上 (mǎshàng) — at once; right away

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for time to spare, then the Mandarin for early.

You'll want to know: 马上

马上 — mǎshàng — "at once; right away".

家里人马上来 jiā lǐ rén mǎshàng lái — The family will be here any minute.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 马上 (mǎshàng) is built from 马 'horse' and 上 'on', both inherited from Middle Chinese, maeX and dzyangX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). 'On horseback', so already on the way, is the usual explanation, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: mǎshàng
- Say it: mǎshàng, once more

- Say it: jiā lǐ rén mǎshàng lái — The family will be here any minute.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for time to spare, then the Mandarin for early, then say mǎshàng again

Before you move on

What does 马上 mean? ("At once; right away".) Say it once more.

83.4 láibují — to run out of time

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for early, then the Mandarin for right away.

You'll want to know: láibují

láibují — "to run out of time".

xiànzài qù láibují le — It's too late to go now.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Its middle syllable loses its tone: láibují, with bu light between two full syllables.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of láibují is built from 来 'to come', 不 'not' and jí 'to reach', all inherited from Middle Chinese, loj, pjut and gip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): coming, but not reaching in time.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: láibují
- Say it: láibují, once more
- Say it: xiànzài qù láibují le — It's too late to go now.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for early, then the Mandarin for right away, then say láibují again

Before you move on

What does láibují mean? ("To run out of time".) Say it once more.

83.5 chídào — to be late; to arrive late

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for right away, then the Mandarin for to run out of time.

You'll want to know: chídào

chídào — "to be late; to arrive late".

duìbuqǐ wǒ chídào le — Sorry I'm late.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chídào is built from chí 'slow' and dào 'to arrive', both inherited from Middle Chinese, drij and tawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: chídào
- Say it: chídào, once more
- Say it: duìbuqǐ wǒ chídào le — Sorry I'm late.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for right away, then the Mandarin for to run out of time, then say chídào again

Before you move on

What does chídào mean? (“To be late; to arrive late”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 84

Doing Things Together

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can arrange to meet, chat, take part and get ready together.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 84: I can arrange to meet, chat, take part and get ready together.

84.1 一起 (yìqǐ) — together

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to run out of time, then the Mandarin for to be late.

You'll want to know: 一起

一起 — yìqǐ — "together".

> 三年前我们一起上学 sān nián qián wǒmen yìqǐ shàngxué — Three years ago we were at school together.

yī changes its tone here, falling to yì before the dipping qǐ: yìqǐ.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 一起 (yìqǐ) is built from 一 'one' and 起 'to rise', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jit and khiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). Rising as one is a likely picture, but how the pair came to mean together is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: yìqǐ
- Say it: yìqǐ, once more
- Say it: sān nián qián wǒmen yìqǐ shàngxué — Three years ago we were at school together.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to run out of time, then the Mandarin for to be late, then say yìqǐ again

Before you move on

What does 一起 mean? ("Together".) Say it once more.

84.2 jiànmiàn — to meet up; to see each other

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be late, then the Mandarin for together.

You'll want to know: jiànmiàn

jiànmiàn — "to meet up; to see each other".

wǒmen xīngqītiān jiànmiàn — We're meeting on Sunday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiànmiàn is built from 见 'to see' and miàn 'face', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kenH and mjienH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): to see each other's face.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: jiànmiàn
- Say it: jiànmiàn, once more
- Say it: wǒmen xīngqītiān jiànmiàn — We're meeting on Sunday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be late, then the Mandarin for together, then say jiànmiàn again

Before you move on

What does jiànmiàn mean? ("To meet up; to see each other".) Say it once more.

84.3 liáotiān — to chat

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for together, then the Mandarin for to meet up.

You'll want to know: liáotiān

liáotiān — "to chat".

wǒmen hē chá liáotiān — We drink tea and chat.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of liáotiān is built from liáo and 天 'sky', both inherited from Middle Chinese, lew and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as a helping word; how the pair came to mean chatting is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: liáotiān
- Say it: liáotiān, once more
- Say it: wǒmen hē chá liáotiān — We drink tea and chat.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for together, then the Mandarin for to meet up, then say liáotiān again

Before you move on

What does liáotiān mean? ("To chat".) Say it once more.

84.4 cānjiā — to take part in; to join

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to meet up, then the Mandarin for to chat.

You'll want to know: cānjiā

cānjiā — "to take part in; to join".

nǐ xiǎng cānjiā ma — Would you like to join in?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cānjiā is built from cān 'to attend' and jiā 'to add', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshom and kae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: cānjiā
- Say it: cānjiā, once more

- Say it: nǐ xiǎng cānjiā ma — Would you like to join in?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to meet up, then the Mandarin for to chat, then say cānjiā again

Before you move on

What does cānjiā mean? ("To take part in; to join".) Say it once more.

84.5 zhǔnbèi — to get ready; to prepare

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to chat, then the Mandarin for to take part.

You'll want to know: zhǔnbèi

zhǔnbèi — "to get ready; to prepare".

wǒ zhǔnbèi chànggē — I'm getting ready to sing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhǔnbèi is built from zhǔn 'level, a standard' and bèi 'to have ready', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsywinX and bijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday answers.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǔnbèi
- Say it: zhǔnbèi, once more
- Say it: wǒ zhǔnbèi chànggē — I'm getting ready to sing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to chat, then the Mandarin for to take part, then say zhǔnbèi again

Before you move on

What does zhǔnbèi mean? ("To get ready; to prepare".) Say it once more.

84.6 Looking back: from Jobs to Doing Things Together

Say the Mandarin for to go to work and worker.

Your turn

- Say it: to go to work, worker, driver, doctor, company
- Say it: inside, city, place, abroad, beside
- Say it: after, the left side, the right side, the middle, opposite
- Say it: time to spare, early, right away, to run out of time, to be late
- Say it: together, to meet up, to chat, to take part, to get ready
- Read it: 里 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

To go to work? (shàngbān.) Worker? (gōngrén.) Driver? (sījī.) Doctor? (yīshēng.) Company? (gōngsī.) Inside? (里, lǐ.) City? (chéngshì.) Place? (dìfang.) Abroad? (wàiguó.) Beside? (pángbiān.) After? (hòu.) The left side? (zuǒbian.) The right side? (yòubian.) The middle? (zhōngjiān.) Opposite? (duìmiàn.) Time to spare? (shíjiān.) Early? (早, zǎo.) Right away? (马上, mǎshàng.) To run out of time? (láibují.) To be late? (chídào.) Together? (一起, yìqǐ.) To meet up? (jiànmiàn.) To chat? (liáotiān.) To take part? (cānjiā.) To get ready? (zhǔnbèi.)

84.7 Doing Things Together — once more

Say the Mandarin for together and to meet up.

Your turn

- Say it: together, to meet up, to chat, to take part, to get ready

Before you move on

Together? (一起, yìqǐ.) To meet up? (jiànmiàn.) To chat? (liáotiān.) To take part? (cānjiā.) To get ready? (zhǔnbèi.)

Chapter 85

Where Things Are

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say where people and things are, and write 在.
>
> Saying where people and things are with 在*, here and there, inside and outside, built on one new written character:* 在*.*

85.1 在 (zài) — at, in; to be somewhere

A new chapter, and it opens with the word that puts people and things in places.

- Recall: say zhǔnbèi, to get ready — R1, the last word you met
- Recall: say 这儿 — zhèr, here — R3, durable, from the chapter on home
- Recall: say pángbiān, beside — R2, a few chapters back

You'll want to know: 在

在 — zài — "to be at; in, at".

妈妈在家吗 māma zài jiā ma — Is Mum at home?

我在这儿 wǒ zài zhèr — I'm here.

The next lesson puts the character in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 在 (zài) is inherited from Middle Chinese dzojX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to dwell' and 'to exist'.

What you've built

The place comes straight after 在: 妈妈, 在, 家. English needs is and at; Mandarin needs 在 alone.
That is the whole sentence pattern of the chapter: a person or a thing, then 在, then the place.

Your turn

- Say it: zài
- Say it: 妈妈在家吗 — māma zài jiā ma — Is Mum at home?
- Say it: 我在这儿 — wǒ zài zhèr — I'm here.
- Recall: say zhǔnbèi and pángbiān, then zài again

Before you move on

What does 在 mean? ("To be at; in, at".) Where does the place go? (Straight after 在.)

85.2 在 — the top of 有, a vertical, then 土

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say zài — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

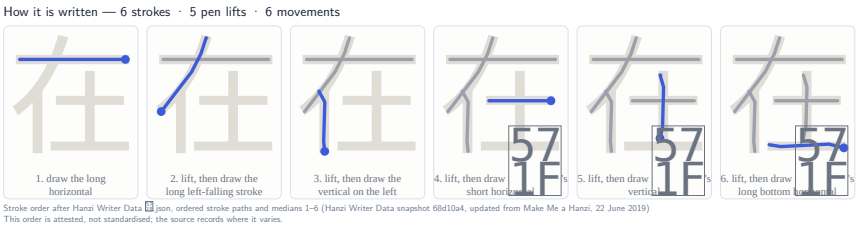
  有 里 十

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — yǒu, lǐ, shí

Script — the top of 有, a vertical, then 土



How 在 is written, stroke by stroke

在

Three pieces, and two of them you already write.

The top of 有, two strokes: a long horizontal, then a long left-falling stroke from above it, down to the lower left.

A short vertical under them, on the left, down from the falling stroke.

土, three strokes: a short horizontal, a vertical down through it, and a long bar along the foot. It is 十 standing on a bar.

2 + 1 + 3 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 在, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 在? (Six.) Which character you know opens the same way? (有.) Which bar is longest? (The last, along the foot.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 在, pinned stroke paths and medians.

85.3 那儿 (nàr) — there

Before the new one: the character from the last lesson, then a word it pairs with.

- Read it: 在家, aloud — zài jiā, at home
- Recall: say 这儿 — zhèr, here

You'll want to know: 那儿

那儿 — nàr — "there".

他在那儿 tā zài nàr — He's over there.

我在这儿 wǒ zài zhèr — I'm here.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 那儿 (nàr) is built from 那 'that' and 儿, the ending that runs into the syllable before it as an r: the same two pieces as 这儿. The Guangyun records 那 as na (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'how, what'; how it came to mean 'that' is not settled.

What you've built

这儿 and 那儿, here and there, answer most of the place questions this chapter asks. Both take the r ending, and both follow 在.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nàr
- nàr, once more
- 他在那儿 — tā zài nàr — He's over there.
- 我在这儿 你在那儿 — wǒ zài zhèr, nǐ zài nàr — I'm here, you're there.

Before you move on

What does 那儿 mean? ("There".) And here? (这儿.) Say both once more.

85.4 lǐbian — inside

Before the new one: last lesson's word, and a character you write.

- Recall: say 那儿 — nàr, there
- Read it: 里, aloud — lǐ, inside
- Recall: say chéngshì, a city

You'll want to know: lǐbian lǐbian — "inside; in".

shū zài bāo lǐbian — The book is in the bag.

Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǐbian is built from lǐ 'inside', the 里 you write, and bian 'side', the syllable that ends zuǒbian and pángbiān. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, liX and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the inside of a garment' and 'an edge; a side'.

What you've built

lǐbian comes after the thing whose inside it names: bāo lǐbian, inside the bag. Put 在 in front and it is a place: zài bāo lǐbian.
里 on its own does the same job in a quicker sentence, as in shān lǐ.
lǐbian can also stand alone: zài lǐbian, inside.

Your turn

- Say it: lǐbian
- Say it: lǐbian, once more
- Say it: shū zài bāo lǐbian — The book is in the bag.
- Say it: tā zài lǐbian — He's inside.
- Recall: say nàr and chéngshì, then lǐbian again

Before you move on

What does lǐbian mean? (“Inside; in”.) Which written character does it open with? (里.)

85.5 wàibian — outside

Before the new one: say the word for inside, then two words you have had for a while.

- Recall: say lǐbian, inside — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say wàiguó, abroad — R2, a few chapters back
- Recall: say zuǒbian and yòubian, left and right — R2

You’ll want to know: wàibian

wàibian — “outside”.

tā zài wàibian — She’s outside.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wàibian is built from wài ’outside’, the wài of wàiguó, and bian ’side’. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, ngwajH and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), ngwajH glossed ’the outside’ and ’far’.

What you’ve built

lǐbian and wàibian, inside and outside, beside the pair you already own, zuǒbian and yòubian: one ending, bian, makes all four, and all four follow 在.

Your turn

- Say it: wàibian
- Say it: wàibian, once more
- Say it: tā zài wàibian — She’s outside.

- Say it: māo zài wàibian — The cat's outside.
- Recall: say lǐbian and wàiguó, then wàibian again

Before you move on

What does wàibian mean? ("Outside".) And inside? (lǐbian.)

85.6 我在这儿 — 你在那儿

The chapter closes here, with two people placing themselves and their things.

- Recall: say wàibian, outside — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say yìqǐ, together — R2, the first real retrieval
- Recall: say jiànmiàn, to meet up — R2

The exchange

A: 我在家 你呢

wǒ zài jiā, nǐ ne — I'm at home. And you?

B: wǒ zài xuéxiào — I'm at school.

A: 你的书呢

nǐ de shū ne — Where's your book?

B: zài bāo lǐbian — In my bag.

A: māo ne — And the cat?

B: māo zài wàibian — The cat's outside.

A: 他呢

tā ne — And him?

B: 他在那儿

tā zài nàr — He's over there.

nǐ de shū ne asks where the book is: 呢 after a thing, with nothing else, means and where is it? The answer drops the book and starts at 在.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — one pattern, four places

One pattern, a person or a thing, then 在, then the place:

- 我在这儿 wǒ zài zhèr — I'm here.
- 他在那儿 tā zài nàr — he's there.
- shū zài bāo lǐbian — the book is in the bag.
- māo zài wàibian — the cat is outside.

Listen. Nǐ de shǒujī ne?
Speak. Place yourself, then somebody you know, then your phone.
Write it: 在 — the top of 有, a short vertical, then 十 on a long bar

Your turn

- Say it: 我在家 你呢 — wǒ zài jiā, nǐ ne — I'm at home. And you?
- Say it: 你的书呢 — nǐ de shū ne — Where's your book?
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 我在这儿

Before you move on

Say you are at home. (我在家.) Say the book is in the bag. (shū zài bāo lǐbian.) Ask where somebody's book is, with three characters. (你的书呢.)

Chapter 86

Where Is It?

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask where something is and understand the answer.
>
> Asking where with 哪儿 and placing the answer in the same slot, on top of, under, and the question every traveller needs, built on one new written character: 哪*.*

86.1 哪儿 (nǎr) — where?

A new chapter, and it opens with the question the last one kept answering.

- Recall: say 我在这儿 — wǒ zài zhèr, then 他在那儿 — tā zài nàr — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say wàibian, outside — R1
- Recall: say nǐ shì nǎ guó rén, which country are you from — R4, from the chapter on where people come from
- Recall: say liáotiān, to chat — R2

You'll want to know: 哪儿

哪儿 — nǎr — "where?".

> 你在哪儿 nǐ zài nǎr — Where are you?
>
> 我在那儿 wǒ zài nàr — I'm over there.

The next lesson puts the new character in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 哪儿 (nǎr) is built from 哪 'which', the nǎ of nǐ shì nǎ guó rén, and the r ending 儿. 哪 has no reading in the Guangyun: no dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

The answer goes where the question word was, and nothing else moves: 你在哪儿 — 我在那儿. Only the tone tells the two words apart: nǎr, with the dip, asks; nàr, with the fall, answers.

Your turn

- Say it: nǎr — the dip
- Say it: nàr — the fall
- Say it: 你在哪儿 — nǐ zài nǎr — Where are you?
- Say it: 我在那儿 — wǒ zài nàr — I'm over there.
- Recall: say liáotiān, then ask where somebody is

Before you move on

What does 哪儿 ask? ("Where?".) What tells nǎr from nàr? (The tone: the dip asks, the fall answers.)

86.2 哪 — 口 beside the whole of 那

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say nǎr — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  口 那

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kǒu, nà

Script — 口 beside the whole of 那

How 哪 is written, stroke by stroke

哪

Two characters you own, side by side. Nothing in it is new.

口, three strokes, small, on the left: the left side, the top that turns down the right side, the bottom bar.

那, six strokes, whole, as you write it alone: the hooked turn across the top and down the right, the upper bar, the lower bar, the left-falling stroke through them, then the ear on the right, across, back, round and hooking, and its long vertical.

3 + 6 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 哪, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 哪? (Nine.) Which two characters sit side by side? (口 and 那.) What tells 哪 from 那 when you say them? (The tone: nǎ dips, nà falls.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 哪, pinned stroke paths and medians.

86.3 shàngbian — on top; above

Before the new one: read the question from the last lesson, then two words for things at home.

- Read it: 你在哪儿, aloud — nǐ zài nǎr
- Recall: say zhuōzi, a table
- Recall: say zhōngjiān, the middle

You'll want to know: shàngbian

shàngbian — "on top; above".

shū zài zhuōzi shàngbian — The book is on the table.

Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shàngbian is built from shàng 'above', the 上 you write, and bian 'side'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyangH and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The Guangyun glosses dzyangH as 'ruler', not 'above', so the plain sense 'on top' is assumed here rather than quoted.

What you've built

A thing, then the place word after it: zhuōzi shàngbian, on top of the table. With 在 in front it answers 哪儿.

Your turn

- Say it: shàngbian
- Say it: shàngbian, once more
- Say it: shū zài zhuōzi shàngbian — The book is on the table.

- Say it: 我的手机在哪儿 — wǒ de shǒujī zài nǎr — Where's my phone?
- Recall: say zhōngjiān, then shàngbian again

Before you move on

What does shàngbian mean? ("On top; above".) Which written character does it open with? (上.)

86.4 xiàbian — under; below

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two words you have had for a while.

- Recall: say shàngbian, on top — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say yǐzi, a chair — R3, durable
- Recall: say duìmiàn, opposite — R2

You'll want to know: xiàbian xiàbian — "under; below".

māo zài yǐzi xiàbian — The cat is under the chair.

Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiàbian is built from xià 'below', the 下 you write, and bian 'side'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, haeX and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), haeX glossed 'to go down' and 'the bottom'.

What you've built

shàngbian and xiàbian, on top and under: the pair you write as 上 and 下, with the same ending as lǐbian and wàibian.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàbian
- Say it: xiàbian, once more
- Say it: māo zài yǐzi xiàbian — The cat is under the chair.
- Say it: shū zài zhuōzi shàngbian — The book is on the table.
- Recall: say duìmiàn, then xiàbian again

Before you move on

What does xiàbian mean? ("Under; below".) And on top? (shàngbian.)

86.5 xǐshǒujiān — toilet; washroom

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the polite opener you will need with it.

- Recall: say xiàbian, under — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 请问 — qǐngwèn, excuse me, may I ask
- Recall: say fángjiān, a room

You'll want to know: xǐshǒujiān

xǐshǒujiān — "toilet; washroom".

qǐngwèn, xǐshǒujiān zài nǎr — Excuse me, where is the toilet?

Its first and last characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xǐshǒujiān is built from xǐ 'to wash', shǒu 'hand', the 手 you write, and jiān 'room', the jiān of fángjiān. All three are inherited from Middle Chinese, sejX, syuwX and kean (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The Guangyun glosses sejX 'to wash' and kean 'a gap; between'; 'a room' is a later sense of jiān.

What you've built

qǐngwèn, xǐshǒujiān zài nǎr may be the most useful sentence in the chapter: a polite opener, the thing, 在, and the question word in the place slot.

Your turn

- Say it: xǐshǒujiān
- Say it: xǐshǒujiān, once more
- Say it: qǐngwèn, xǐshǒujiān zài nǎr — Excuse me, where is the toilet?
- Recall: say xiàbian and fángjiān, then xǐshǒujiān again

Before you move on

What does xǐshǒujiān mean? ("Toilet; washroom".) Ask where it is, politely. (qǐngwèn, xǐshǒujiān zài nǎr.)

86.6 你在哪儿 — 我在那儿

The chapter closes here, with a phone that is not where it should be.

- Recall: say xǐshǒujiān, the toilet — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say cānjiā, to take part — R2
- Recall: say lǐbian, inside — R2, from the chapter before

The exchange

A: 我的手机呢

wǒ de shǒujī ne — Where's my phone?

B: zài zhuōzi shàngbian — On the table.

A: bú zài zhuōzi shàngbian — It isn't on the table.

B: zài yǐzi xiàbian — Under the chair, then.

A: 对 谢谢

duì, xièxie — Yes. Thanks.

A: qǐngwèn, xǐshǒujiān zài nǎr — Excuse me, where's the toilet?

B: 在那儿

zài nàr — Over there.

A: 你在哪儿

nǐ zài nǎr — And where will you be?

B: wǒ zài wàibian — Outside.

Every answer starts at 在, or drops even that. The thing being looked for was named once, and the rest of the exchange leaves it out.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — one question, any answer

One question, 你在哪儿 nǐ zài nǎr, and the answer slots into the same place:

- 我在那儿 wǒ zài nàr — over there.
- zài zhuōzi shàngbian — on the table.
- zài yǐzi xiàbian — under the chair.

Listen. Nǐ de shǒujī zài nǎr?
Speak. Answer it three ways, then ask it back.
Write it: 哪 — 口 first, then 那

Your turn

- Say it: qǐngwèn, xǐshǒujiān zài nǎr — Excuse me, where's the toilet?
- Say it: 我的手机呢 — wǒ de shǒujī ne — Where's my phone?

- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 你在哪儿

Before you move on

Ask somebody where they are. (你在哪儿.) Ask politely where the toilet is. (qǐngwèn, xǐshǒujiān zài nǎr.) Which tone asks, nǎr or nàr? (The dip, *nǎr.)

Chapter 87

Is There Any?

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what there is and is not, and that something did not happen.
>
> Saying what there is and is not with 没有*, telling* 不 from 没*, and naming a bed, a light, a key and a fridge, built on one new written character:* 没.

87.1 没有 (méiyǒu) — not have; there is no

A new chapter, and it opens with the other half of a word you have used since the first chapters.

- Recall: say 你在哪儿 — nǐ zài nǎr, and answer it — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say xǐshǒujiān, the toilet — R1
- Recall: say wǒ yǒu shíjiān, I have time

You'll want to know: 没有

没有 — méiyǒu — "not have; there is no".

我没有手机 wǒ méiyǒu shǒujī — I don't have a phone.

这儿没有人 zhèr méiyǒu rén — There's nobody here.

The next lesson puts the new character in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 没有 (méiyǒu) is built from 没 'not' and 有 'to have'. 有 is inherited from Middle Chinese hjuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). 没 is there as mwot, glossed 'to sink'; the Guangyun does not give 'not', and the regular sound change from mwot gives mò, not méi, so how 没 came to mean 'not' and to be said méi is not settled.

What you've built

有 has its own negative, and it is 没, not 不: 没有. Both jobs of 有 go with it, 'to have' and 'there is': 我没有手机, 这儿没有人.

Your turn

- Say it: méiyǒu
- Say it: méiyǒu, once more
- Say it: 我没有手机 — wǒ méiyǒu shǒujī — I don't have a phone.
- Say it: 这儿没有人 — zhèr méiyǒu rén — There's nobody here.
- Recall: say wǒ yǒu shíjiān, then turn it round: wǒ méiyǒu shíjiān

Before you move on

What does 没有 mean? ("Not have; there is no".) Which negative goes with 有? (没.)

87.2 没 — water, a small roof, and 又

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say méiyǒu — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

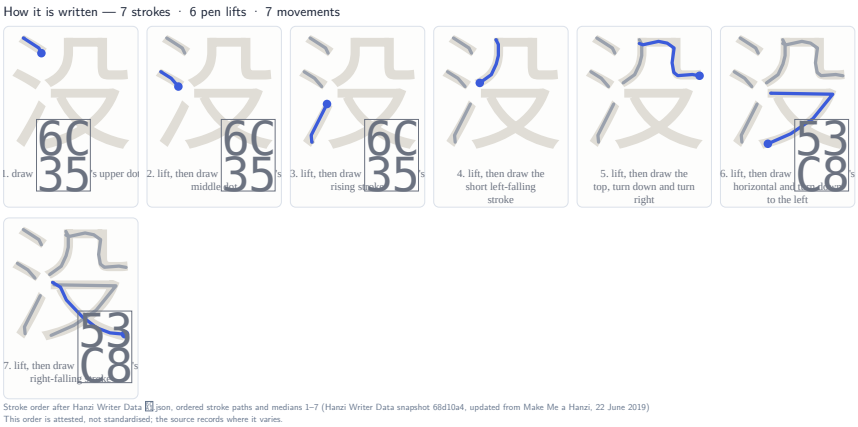
  汉 对

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — hàn, duì

Script — water, a small roof, and 又



How 没 is written, stroke by stroke

没

Three pieces, left before right, top before bottom.

The water piece 氵, three strokes, as 汉 opens: two dots, then a stroke rising to the right.

A small roof, two strokes: a short left-falling stroke, then a horizontal that turns down and runs out to the right.

又, two strokes, under the roof, as 对 opens: across and falling to the left, then the long stroke falling to the right.

3 + 2 + 2 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 没, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 没? (Seven.) Which character opens with the same water piece? (汉.) Which shape sits under the roof? (又, as in 对.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 没, pinned stroke paths and medians.

87.3 不 — 没: two words for not

Two words for 'not', and this lesson sorts them.

- Read it: 没有, aloud — méiyǒu
- Recall: say 不 — bù, not
- Recall: say 好不好 — hǎo bu hǎo, is that all right?

Grammar Lens: 不 for now and for habit, 没 for what did not happen 不 says no about now, about habit, and about what you will or won't do. 没 says something did not happen.

我不去 wǒ bú qù — I'm not going; I don't go. 我没去 wǒ méi qù — I didn't go.

Same verb, same person; the negative alone moves the sentence from a decision to a report. 不 before the fall of 去 is bú, as in bú shì. And 有 takes 没 every time, which is how the question works:

你有没有手机 nǐ yǒu méiyǒu shǒujī — Do you have a phone?

It is the same yes-or-no shape as 好不好: the verb, its negative, the verb again. The answer is 有 or 没有.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 我不去 — wǒ bú qù — I'm not going.
- 我没去 — wǒ méi qù — I didn't go.
- 你有没有手机 — nǐ yǒu méiyǒu shǒujī — Do you have a phone?
- 没有 — méiyǒu — No, I don't.

Before you move on

Which negative says something did not happen? (没.) Which one says you won't? (不.) How do you ask whether somebody has a phone? (你有没有手机.)

87.4 chuáng — bed

Before the new one: the two negatives, then two words for home.

- Recall: say 我没去 — wǒ méi qù, I didn't go
- Recall: say fángjiān, a room — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say qǐchuáng, to get up — R3, durable

You'll want to know: chuáng

chuáng — "bed".

fángjiān lǐ yǒu chuáng ma — Is there a bed in the room?

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chuáng is inherited from Middle Chinese dzrjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a bed of slats'. It is the chuáng of qǐchuáng: to rise from the bed.

What you've built

fángjiān lǐ yǒu chuáng ma is 有 in its 'there is' job: the place first, then 有, then the thing. The answer is 有 or 没有.

Your turn

- Say it: chuáng
- Say it: chuáng, once more
- Say it: fángjiān lǐ yǒu chuáng ma — Is there a bed in the room?
- Say it: 没有 — méiyǒu — No, there isn't.

- Recall: say qǐchuáng, then chuáng again

Before you move on

What does chuáng mean? ("Bed".) Which word you know ends with it? (qǐchuáng, to get up.)

87.5 dēng — lamp; light

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the two verbs that go with this one.

- Recall: say chuáng, bed — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say kāi, to switch on — R3, durable
- Recall: say guān, to switch off — R3

You'll want to know: dēng

dēng — "lamp; light".

kāi dēng — Switch on the light.

guān dēng — Switch off the light.

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dēng is inherited from Middle Chinese tong (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a lamp'.

What you've built

kāi and guān open and shut doors, and the same two verbs switch a light on and off.

Your turn

- Say it: dēng
- Say it: dēng, once more

- Say it: kāi dēng — Switch on the light.
- Say it: guān dēng — Switch off the light.
- Recall: say chuáng, then dēng again

Before you move on

What does dēng mean? (“Lamp; light”.) Switch it on. (kāi dēng.)

87.6 yàoshi — key

Before the new one: last lesson’s word, then two words for coming in.

- Recall: say dēng, a light — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 门 — mén, a door
- Recall: say 进 — jìn, to come in You’ll want to know: yàoshi

yàoshi — “key”.

wǒ méiyǒu yàoshi — I don’t have a key.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yàoshi is built from two words inherited from Middle Chinese, yak and dzye (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), glossed ’a bolt’ and ’a spoon’. The Guangyun does not give the pair as ’key’, so how the two came together is not settled.

What you’ve built

wǒ méiyǒu yàoshi: 没有 in its ’not have’ job, with nothing between it and the thing.

Your turn

- Say it: yàoshi
- Say it: yàoshi, once more
- Say it: wǒ méiyǒu yàoshi — I don't have a key.
- Say it: mén, then yàoshi
- Recall: say dēng, then yàoshi again

Before you move on

What does yàoshi mean? ("Key".) Say you don't have one. (wǒ méiyǒu yàoshi.)

87.7 bīngxiāng — fridge

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then a drink, then a word for hurrying.

- Recall: say yàoshi, a key — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say niúnǎi, milk — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say 马上 — mǎshàng, right away — R2

You'll want to know: bīngxiāng bīngxiāng — "fridge; refrigerator".

bīngxiāng lǐ yǒu niúnǎi — There's milk in the fridge.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bīngxiāng is built from bīng 'ice' and xiāng 'a box', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ping and sjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'frozen water' and 'a box; a chest'. The pair names a machine the Guangyun never saw: the compound is modern.

What you've built

The place first, then 有, then the thing: bīngxiāng lǐ yǒu niúnǎi. The 里 after bīngxiāng is the one you write, and it means inside.

Your turn

- Say it: bīngxiāng
- Say it: bīngxiāng, once more
- Say it: bīngxiāng lǐ yǒu niúnǎi — There's milk in the fridge.
- Say it: bīngxiāng lǐ méiyǒu shuǐ — There's no water in the fridge.
- Recall: say yàoshi and mǎshàng, then bīngxiāng again

Before you move on

What does bīngxiāng mean? ("Fridge".) Say there is milk in it. (bīngxiāng lǐ yǒu niúnǎi.)

87.8 你有没有 — 没有

The chapter closes here, with a guest shown to a room.

- Recall: say bīngxiāng, a fridge — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say chídào, to be late — R2
- Recall: say láibují, to run out of time — R2

The exchange

A: zhè shì nǐ de fángjiān — This is your room.

B: 谢谢

xièxie — Thanks.

B: fángjiān lǐ yǒu dēng ma — Is there a light in the room?

A: yǒu, zài mén pángbiān — Yes, by the door.

B: nǐ yǒu méiyǒu yàoshi — Have you got a key?

A: 没有

méiyǒu — No, I haven't.

A: bīngxiāng lǐ yǒu niúnǎi — There's milk in the fridge.

B: 我不喝

wǒ bù hē — I don't drink it.

Two kinds of no in one room: 没有, there isn't any, and 我不喝, I don't drink it. The first reports, the second refuses.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — four things, and what is missing

A bed, a light, a key and a fridge, and two ways to say a thing is not there:

- nǐ yǒu méiyǒu yàoshi — 没有 méiyǒu
- fángjiān lǐ yǒu chuáng ma — 没有 méiyǒu

Listen. Nǐ yǒu méiyǒu shǒujī?
Speak. Answer it with 有, then with 没有, then say what your room has.
Write it: 没 — 氵 first, then the small roof, then the crossing pair that opens 对

Your turn

- Say it: nǐ yǒu méiyǒu yàoshi — Have you got a key?
- Say it: 没有 — méiyǒu — No.
- Say it: kāi dēng — Switch on the light.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 我没有手机

Before you move on

Say you don't have a phone. (我没有手机.) Say you didn't go. (我没去.) Say there is milk in the fridge. (bīngxiāng lǐ yǒu niúnǎi.)

Chapter 88

Two Cups of Tea

Modes: voice (7) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count things with 两 and the right measure word.
>
> Counting things with 两 and four measure words beyond 个*, and the tone* 一 takes before each, built on one new written character: 两*.*

88.1 两 (liǎng) — two of something

A new chapter, and it opens with a second word for two.

- Recall: say nǐ yǒu méiyǒu yàoshi, and answer méiyǒu — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say 一个人 — yí ge rén, one person
- Recall: say 二 — èr, two, as you count

You'll want to know: 两

两 — liǎng — "two (of something)".

> 两个人 liǎng ge rén — two people

The next lesson puts the new character in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 两 (liǎng) is inherited from Middle Chinese ljangX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), where it names a weight and, quoting an older dictionary, 'twice'. 'Two of a thing' grew from those senses by a step the Guangyun does not show.

What you've built

Counting aloud, two is 二: yī, èr, sān. In front of a measure word it is 两: 两个人, two people. èr ge rén is not said.

Your turn

- Say it: liǎng
- Say it: liǎng, once more
- Say it: 两个人 — liǎng ge rén — two people
- Say it: 一 二 三 — yī èr sān — counting: one, two, three
- Recall: say yí ge rén, then liǎng ge rén

Before you move on

When is two 两? (In front of a measure word: 两个人.) And when is it 二? (Counting: *yī, èr, sān.)

88.2 两 — a bar, a frame, two small 人

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say liǎng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

一 人

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — yī, rén

Script — a bar, a frame, two small 人

How 两 is written, stroke by stroke

两

A bar on top, then a frame, then what the frame holds.

The top bar, one stroke, across.

The frame, two strokes: a short vertical on the left, then a horizontal that turns down the right side and hooks to the left.

Two small 人, four strokes, the left one first: each a left-falling stroke and a short stroke falling to the right, rising through the top of the frame.

1 + 2 + 4 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 两, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 两? (Seven.) What does the frame hold? (Two small 人.) Which comes first, the frame or the two 人? (The frame.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 两, pinned stroke paths and medians.

88.3 yī → yí ge, yì tiān: the tone 一 takes

Before the measure words, the sound that changes in front of them.

- Read it: 两个人, aloud — liǎng ge rén
- Recall: say 一百 — yìbǎi, a hundred
- Recall: say 一起 — yìqǐ, together

The sounds and tones in this word

一 has three spoken tones, and the next syllable picks one.
Counting, and inside numbers and dates, it stays level: yī, èr, sān; 星期一 xīngqīyī.
Before a fourth tone it rises: 一个 yí ge. 个 is fourth tone, even when it is said light.
Before the other three tones it falls: 一天 yì tiān, 一年 yì nián, 一百 yìbǎi.
This book writes the tone you say, as it writes bú shì for 不是.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- yī, èr, sān — level
- 一个 — yí ge — rising, before a fourth tone
- 一天 — yì tiān — falling, before a first tone
- 一年 — yì nián — falling, before a second tone
- 一百 — yìbǎi — falling, before a third tone

Before you move on

What does 一 do before a fourth tone? (It rises: *yí ge.) Before the other tones? (It falls: *yì tiān.) And counting? (It stays level: *yī.)

88.4 bēi — a cup of, a glass of

Before the new one: the tone of 一, then two words that go with this one.

- Recall: say 一个 — yí ge, then 一天 — yì tiān
- Recall: say chá, tea — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say bēizi, a cup — R3, durable

You'll want to know: bēi

bēi — "a cup of; a glass of", a measure word.

liǎng bēi chá — two cups of tea

yì bēi shuǐ — a glass of water

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bēi is inherited from Middle Chinese pwoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed through an older book as a cup. It is the bēi of bēizi; as a measure word it counts what a cup holds.

What you've built

A measure word counts by the container: liǎng bēi chá, two cups' worth. 一 before its level tone falls: yì bēi.

Your turn

- Say it: bēi
- Say it: bēi, once more
- Say it: liǎng bēi chá — two cups of tea
- Say it: yì bēi shuǐ — a glass of water
- Recall: say bēizi, then bēi again

Before you move on

What does bēi count? (Cups and glasses of something.) Ask for two cups of tea. (liǎng bēi chá.)

88.5 běn — counting books

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the thing this one counts.

- Recall: say liǎng bēi chá, two cups of tea — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 书 — shū, a book

You'll want to know: běn

běn — a measure word for books.

yì běn shū — a book

wǒ yǒu liǎng běn shū — I have two books.

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of běn is inherited from Middle Chinese pwonX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the root; the beginning'. Counting books with it is a later use the Guangyun does not record.

What you've built

个 counts almost anything; běn is the word a speaker reaches for with books. 一 before its dip falls: yì běn.

Your turn

- Say it: běn
- Say it: běn, once more
- Say it: yì běn shū — a book

- Say it: wǒ yǒu liǎng běn shū — I have two books.
- Recall: say liǎng bēi chá, then liǎng běn shū

Before you move on

What does běn count? (Books.) Say you have two. (wǒ yǒu liǎng běn shū.)

88.6 zhāng — counting flat things

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two flat things.

- Recall: say yì běn shū, a book — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say piào, a ticket — R3, durable
- Recall: say chuáng, a bed — R1, from the chapter before

You'll want to know: zhāng zhāng — a measure word for flat things: tables, beds, tickets.

yì zhāng zhuōzi — a table

liǎng zhāng piào — two tickets

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhāng is inherited from Middle Chinese trjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to stretch out; to spread'. Counting things that lie spread flat is a later use, not given there.

What you've built

A table, a bed, a ticket: things with a flat top or a flat face take zhāng.

Your turn

- Say it: zhāng
- Say it: zhāng, once more
- Say it: liǎng zhāng piào — two tickets
- Say it: yì zhāng chuáng — a bed
- Recall: say yì běn shū, then yì zhāng zhuōzi

Before you move on

What does zhāng count? (Flat things: tables, beds, tickets.)
Ask for two tickets. (liǎng zhāng piào.)

88.7 zhī — counting animals

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two animals.

- Recall: say liǎng zhāng piào, two tickets — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say māo, a cat — R2
- Recall: say gǒu, a dog — R3

You'll want to know: zhī

zhī — a measure word for animals, and for one of a pair.

liǎng zhī māo — two cats

yì zhī shǒu — one hand

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhī is inherited from Middle Chinese tsyek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'one'; the Guangyun, quoting an older dictionary, describes the old character as a hand holding a single bird.

What you've built

Cats, dogs, birds: animals take zhī. So does one of a pair, such as a hand: yì zhī shǒu.

Your turn

- Say it: zhī
- Say it: zhī, once more
- Say it: liǎng zhī māo — two cats
- Say it: wǒ jiā yǒu yì zhī gǒu — We have a dog at home.
- Recall: say liǎng zhāng piào, then liǎng zhī māo

Before you move on

What does zhī count? (Animals, and one of a pair.) Say two cats. (liǎng zhī māo.)

88.8 两个人

The chapter closes here, with two people looking for a table.

- Recall: say liǎng zhī māo, two cats — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say shàngbian, on top — R2
- Recall: say jǐ, how many — R4, recognition at distance

The exchange

A: nǐmen jǐ ge rén — How many of you are there?

B: 两个人

liǎng ge rén — Two.

A: 你们喝什么

nǐmen hē shénme — What will you drink?

B: liǎng bēi chá — Two cups of tea.

A: hǎo, nà zhāng zhuōzi — Fine. That table, then.

B: nàr yǒu liǎng zhī māo — There are two cats there.

A: zhuōzi shàngbian yǒu yì běn shū — And there's a book on the table.

Every count has its measure word: 个 for people, bēi for tea, zhāng for the table, zhī for the cats, běn for the book. And every two is 两.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — a number, a measure word, a thing

Every count has three parts, in this order: the number, the measure word, the thing.

- 两个人 liǎng ge rén — two people
- yì bēi shuǐ — a glass of water
- yì běn shū — a book
- liǎng zhāng piào — two tickets
- liǎng zhī māo — two cats

Listen. Nǐ yǒu jǐ běn shū?
Speak. Count what is on your table, with the right measure word for each.
Write it: 两 — the bar, the frame, then the two small 人

Your turn

- Say it: 两个人 — liǎng ge rén — two people
- Say it: liǎng bēi chá — two cups of tea
- Say it: yí ge, yì běn, yì zhāng, yì zhī — and listen to 一 move

- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 两个人

Before you move on

Two people? (两个人.) Two cups of tea? (liǎng bēi chá.) A book? (yì běn shū.) Two cats? (liǎng zhī māo.)

Chapter 89

Give Me That

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name everyday actions: give, do, put, bring, stand.
>
> Five everyday actions, give, do, put, bring and stand, and 给我 as a request, built on one new written character: 给.

89.1 给 (gěi) — to give; to, for

A new chapter, and it opens with the verb that hands things over.

- Recall: say 两个人 — liǎng ge rén, two people
- Recall: say liǎng zhī māo, two cats — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say sòng, to give as a present — R3, durable

You'll want to know: 给

给 — gěi — "to give; to, for".

> 妈妈给我一个手机 māma gěi wǒ yí ge shǒujī — Mum gives me a phone.
>
> 给我 gěi wǒ — Give it to me.

The next lesson puts the new character in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 给 (gěi) is in the Guangyun as kip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to supply'. That reading regularly gives jǐ, still heard in a few written words; how the everyday gěi came about is not settled.

What you've built

The person comes first, then the thing: 给, 我, 一个手机. On its own, 给我 is a request: give me. sòng gives a present; 给 gives anything at all.

Your turn

- Say it: gěi
- Say it: gěi, once more
- Say it: 妈妈给我一个手机 — māma gěi wǒ yí ge shǒujī — Mum gives me a phone.
- Say it: 给我 — gěi wǒ — Give it to me.
- Recall: say sòng, then gěi again

Before you move on

What does 给 mean? ("To give; to, for".) Which comes first after 给, the person or the thing? (The person.)

89.2 给 — the silk piece, then 合

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say gěi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

人 一 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rén, yī, kǒu

Script — the silk piece, then 合

How 给 is written, stroke by stroke

给

Two pieces, left before right. The left piece is the one new shape.

The silk piece 纟, three strokes: a stroke that falls to the left and turns right, a second, longer one the same way, then a stroke rising to the right.

合, six strokes: a roof like 人, a left-falling stroke and a right-falling one; a short horizontal under it; then 口.

3 + 6 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 给, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 给? (Nine.) Which piece is new? (The silk piece, on the left.) What sits at the foot of the right piece? (口.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 给, pinned stroke paths and medians.

89.3 做 (zuò) — to do; to make

Before the new one: read the last lesson's character, then a word you already write.

- Read it: 给你, aloud — gěi nǐ, here you are
- Recall: say 做饭 — zuòfàn, to cook
- Recall: say wǒmen zuò chē qù, we're going by car

You'll want to know: 做

做 — zuò — "to do; to make".

你做什么 nǐ zuò shénme — What are you doing?

妈妈做饭 māma zuò fàn — Mum cooks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 做 (zuò) has no reading in the Guangyun: no dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

You have written 做 since 做饭. zuò 'to sit', as in zuò chē, sounds the same and is a different word with a different character.

Your turn

- Say it: zuò
- Say it: zuò, once more
- Say it: 你做什么 — nǐ zuò shénme — What are you doing?
- Say it: 妈妈做饭 — māma zuò fàn — Mum cooks.
- Recall: say zuò chē, then 做饭, and hear the same sound twice

Before you move on

What does 做 mean? ("To do; to make".) Is it the zuò of zuò chē? (No: same sound, another word.)

89.4 fàng — to put; to place

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then a bag and a table.

- Recall: say 你做什么 — nǐ zuò shénme
- Recall: say bāo, a bag — R3, durable
- Recall: say zhuōzi shàngbian, on the table — R2

You'll want to know: fàng

fàng — "to put; to place".

fàng zài zhèr — Put it here.

fàng zài zhuōzi shàngbian — Put it on the table.

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fàng is inherited from Middle Chinese pjangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to drive out; to send away'. 'To put down' is a later sense the Guangyun does not give.

What you've built

fàng, then 在, then the place: the place words of the last two chapters all fit after it.

Your turn

- Say it: fàng
- Say it: fàng, once more
- Say it: fàng zài zhèr — Put it here.

- Say it: fàng zài bāo lǐbian — Put it in the bag.
- Recall: say zuò, then fàng again

Before you move on

What does fàng mean? ("To put; to place".) Put it here. (fàng zài zhèr.)

89.5 dài — to bring; to take along

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two things you take out with you.

- Recall: say fàng zài zhèr, put it here — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 手机 — shǒujī, a phone
- Recall: say yàoshi, a key

You'll want to know: dài

dài — "to bring; to take along".

nǐ dài shǒujī le ma — Have you brought your phone?

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dài is inherited from Middle Chinese tajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a belt; a sash'. How a belt became 'to carry along' is not given there, so the step is not settled.

What you've built

nǐ dài shǒujī le ma: 了 after the verb says it is done, and 吗 makes the question. The answer is dài le, or méi dài.

Your turn

- Say it: dài
- Say it: dài, once more
- Say it: nǐ dài shǒujī le ma — Have you brought your phone?
- Say it: méi dài — No, I haven't.
- Recall: say yàoshi, then dài again

Before you move on

What does dài mean? ("To bring; to take along".) Say you didn't bring it. (méi dài.)

89.6 zhàn — to stand

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two places.

- Recall: say dài, to bring — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say huǒchēzhàn, a railway station — R3, durable
- Recall: say 门口 — ménkǒu, the doorway

You'll want to know: zhàn zhàn — "to stand".

qǐng zhàn zài zhèr — Please stand here.

tā zhàn zài ménkǒu — He's standing in the doorway.

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhàn is inherited from Middle Chinese treamH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'in common speech, to stand alone'. The same word and character end huǒchēzhàn, a railway station.

What you've built zhàn takes 在 and a place, as fàng does: zhàn zài ménkǒu, standing in the doorway.

Your turn

- Say it: zhàn
- Say it: zhàn, once more
- Say it: qǐng zhàn zài zhèr — Please stand here.
- Say it: tā zhàn zài ménkǒu — He's standing in the doorway.
- Recall: say huǒchēzhàn, then zhàn again

Before you move on

What does zhàn mean? ("To stand".) Where else have you heard it? (At the end of *huǒchēzhàn.)

89.7 给我

The chapter closes here, with somebody getting out of the door.

- Recall: say zhàn, to stand — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say zhǔnbèi, to get ready — R3, durable
- Recall: say chūmén, to go out — R4, recognition at distance

The exchange

A: 你做什么

nǐ zuò shénme — What are you doing?

B: wǒ zhǔnbèi chūmén — I'm getting ready to go out.

A: nǐ dài yàoshi le ma — Have you got your key?

B: dài le. shǒujī ne — Yes. Where's my phone?

A: zài zhuōzi shàngbian. gěi nǐ — On the table. Here you are.

B: xièxie. fàng zài bāo lǐbian — Thanks. In the bag it goes.

A: qǐng zhàn zài ménkǒu, wǒ kànkan — Stand in the doorway, let me look at you.

Five actions in one doorway: do, bring, give, put and stand. 给你, here you are, is 给 handing something over as it is said.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — five actions

Five verbs, and the three that take a place take it with 在:

- 给我 gěi wǒ — give it to me
- 你做什么 nǐ zuò shénme — what are you doing?
- fàng zài zhèr — put it here
- nǐ dài shǒujī le ma — have you brought your phone?
- qǐng zhàn zài zhèr — please stand here

Listen. Gěi wǒ nǐ de shǒujī.
Speak. Hand it over with 给你, then say where you put it.
Write it: 给 — the silk piece first, then the roof, the bar and 口

Your turn

- Say it: 给我 — gěi wǒ — Give it to me.
- Say it: 给你 — gěi nǐ — Here you are.
- Say it: nǐ dài yàoshi le ma — Have you got your key?
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 给你

Before you move on

Hand something over. (给你.) Ask what somebody is doing. (你做什么.) Tell somebody to put it here. (fàng zài zhèr.) Ask whether they brought their key. (nǐ dài yàoshi le ma.)

Chapter 90

What I Can Do

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I can do and ask whether I may.
>
> Three ways to say can: 会 for what you have learned, 能 for what you are able or allowed to do, kěyǐ for asking permission, built on one new written character: 能.

90.1 会 (huì) — can, having learned how

A new chapter, and it opens with what you have learned to do.

- Recall: say 给你 — gěi nǐ, here you are
- Recall: say qǐng zhàn zài zhèr, please stand here — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say sījī, a driver — R2

You'll want to know: 会

会 — huì — "can (having learned how)".

> 我会开车 wǒ huì kāichē — I can drive.
>
> 我会说汉语 wǒ huì shuō Hànyǔ — I can speak Chinese.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 会 (huì) is inherited from Middle Chinese hwajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to come together'. The sense 'can' is not given there, so how it got it is not settled.

What you've built

会 + a verb says you have learned to do it: driving, a language, a skill. A sījī huì kāichē: a driver can drive. You have written 会 since 一会儿; this is another word in the same character.

Your turn

- Say it: huì
- Say it: huì, once more
- Say it: 我会开车 — wǒ huì kāichē — I can drive.
- Say it: 我会说汉语 — wǒ huì shuō Hànyǔ — I can speak Chinese.
- Recall: say sījī, then say a driver can drive: sījī huì kāichē

Before you move on

What does 会 say? (That you have learned how.) Say you can drive. (我会开车.)

90.2 能 (néng) — can; able, allowed

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two words about being ill.

- Recall: say 我会开车 — wǒ huì kāichē
- Recall: say bìng, to fall ill — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say yīshēng, a doctor — R2

You'll want to know: 能

能 — néng — "can; to be able to; to be allowed to".

我能去吗 wǒ néng qù ma — Can I go?

wǒ bìng le, bù néng qù — I'm ill, I can't go.

The next lesson puts the new character in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 能 (néng) is inherited from Middle Chinese nong (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'skilled; good at work'.

What you've built

会 is a skill you have learned. 能 is being able right now, or being allowed: you 会 drive, but ill you 不能.

Your turn

- Say it: néng
- Say it: néng, once more
- Say it: 我能去吗 — wǒ néng qù ma — Can I go?
- Say it: wǒ bìng le, bù néng qù — I'm ill, I can't go.
- Recall: say yīshēng, then néng again

Before you move on

What does 能 say? (Able now, or allowed.) And 会? (Learned how.)

90.3 能 — 厶 over the moon piece, then two 匕

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say néng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

明 前

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — míng, qián

Script — 厶 over the moon piece, then two 匕

How 能 is written, stroke by stroke

能

The whole left side first, top to bottom, then the right.

厶, two strokes: a stroke that falls to the left and turns right, then a dot.

The moon piece 月, four strokes, as it stands in 明 and 前: the left side, the top that turns down and hooks, two short bars inside.

Two 匕, two strokes each, the upper one first: a short left-falling stroke, then a vertical that bends right along its foot and hooks up.

2 + 4 + 4 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 能, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 能? (Ten.) Which piece do you know from 明? (The moon piece, 月.) Which side is written first? (The left, all of it.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 能, pinned stroke paths and medians.

90.4 kěyǐ — may; can, with permission

Before the new one: read the last lesson's character, then two words you will need with this one.

- Read it: 我能去吗, aloud — wǒ néng qù ma
- Recall: say zuò, to sit — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say gōngrén, a worker — R2

You'll want to know: kěyǐ

kěyǐ — "may; can (with permission)".

wǒ kěyǐ zuò zhèr ma — May I sit here?

Two dips in a row: spoken, the first one rises, kéyǐ. It is written kěyǐ. Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kěyǐ is built from kě 'may' and yǐ 'to use', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khaX and yiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to permit' and 'to use'.

What you've built

会 learned, 能 able or allowed, kěyǐ permitted. Asking whether you may, kěyǐ is the polite one; the answer is kěyǐ, or bù kěyǐ.

Your turn

- Say it: kěyǐ — and hear it as kéyǐ
- Say it: kěyǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒ kěyǐ zuò zhèr ma — May I sit here?
- Say it: kěyǐ — yes, you may
- Recall: say gōngrén, then kěyǐ again

Before you move on

What does kěyǐ ask? (Whether you may.) How is it said? (kéyǐ, the first dip rising.)

90.5 yóuyǒng — to swim

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two kinds of exercise.

- Recall: say kěyǐ, may — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say yùndòng, sport — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say pǎobù, to run — R4

You'll want to know: yóuyǒng

yóuyǒng — "to swim".

nǐ huì yóuyǒng ma — Can you swim?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yóuyǒng is built from yóu 'to float' and yǒng 'to swim under water', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yuw and hjwaengH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). hjwaengH would regularly give yòng, with a fall; why the modern word dips is not settled.

What you've built

Swimming is learned, so it takes 会: nǐ huì yóuyǒng ma. 能 asks whether you are able today: jīntiān nǐ néng yóuyǒng ma.

Your turn

- Say it: yóuyǒng
- Say it: yóuyǒng, once more
- Say it: nǐ huì yóuyǒng ma — Can you swim?
- Say it: wǒ bú huì yóuyǒng — I can't swim.

- Recall: say pǎobù, then yóuyǒng again

Before you move on

What does yóuyǒng mean? ("To swim".) Which can goes with it, 会 or 能? (会, a skill you learn.)

90.6 我会开车

The chapter closes here, with three ways to say can in one conversation.

- Recall: say yóuyǒng, to swim — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say shàngbān, to go to work — R2
- Recall: say gōngsī, a company — R2

The exchange

A: 你会开车吗

nǐ huì kāichē ma — Can you drive?

B: 会

huì — I can.

A: 你明天能开车吗

nǐ míngtiān néng kāichē ma — Can you drive tomorrow?

B: bù néng, wǒ míngtiān shàngbān — No, I'm at work tomorrow.

A: nǐ huì yóuyǒng ma — Can you swim?

B: 不会

bú huì — I can't.

A: wǒ kěyǐ zuò zhèr ma — May I sit here?

B: kěyǐ — Yes, please.

The answer to each is the verb alone: 会, 不能, 不会, kěyǐ. Mandarin answers yes or no by saying the verb again.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — three cans

- 我会开车 wǒ huì kāichē — I have learned to drive.
- 我明天不能开车 wǒ míngtiān bù néng kāichē — tomorrow I'm not able to.
- wǒ kěyǐ zuò zhèr ma — may I sit here?

Listen. Nǐ huì shuō Hànyǔ ma?
Speak. Answer it, then say one thing you cannot do today, and ask permission for something.
Write it: 能 — the whole left side first, then the two hooked pieces on the right

Your turn

- Say it: 你会开车吗 — nǐ huì kāichē ma — Can you drive?
- Say it: 你明天能开车吗 — nǐ míngtiān néng kāichē ma — Can you drive tomorrow?
- Say it: wǒ kěyǐ zuò zhèr ma — May I sit here?
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 我能去吗

Before you move on

Say you can drive. (我会开车.) Ask whether you can go. (我能去吗.) Ask whether you may sit here. (wǒ kěyǐ zuò zhèr ma.) Which can is a skill? (会.)

Chapter 91

What I'd Like

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I want and what I do not want.
>
> Saying what you would like, what you need and what you do not want, and asking for a little, built on one new written character: 要.

91.1 想要 (xiǎngyào) — to want; would like

A new chapter, and it opens with a word for wanting, softer than the one you know.

- Recall: say 我会开车 — wǒ huì kāichē
- Recall: say nǐ huì yóuyǒng ma, can you swim — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say wǒ yào zhège, I want this one — R4, from the chapter on money
- Recall: say 我想去 — wǒ xiǎng qù, I'd like to go

You'll want to know: 想要

想要 — xiǎngyào — "to want; would like".

> 我想要一个手机 wǒ xiǎngyào yí ge shǒujī — I'd like a phone.

The next lesson puts the second character in your hand: it is the yào you have said since the chapter on money.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 想要 (xiǎngyào) is built from 想 'to think of; to want to' and yào 'to want', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjangX and 'jiewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to think' and 'to bind by agreement'. 'To want' is not given there for yào, so how it got that sense is not settled.

What you've built

想 + a verb: you would like to do it, 我想去. yào + a thing: you want it. 想要 + a thing says the same as yào, more gently.

Your turn

- Say it: xiǎngyào
- Say it: xiǎngyào, once more
- Say it: 我想要一个手机 — wǒ xiǎngyào yí ge shǒujī — I'd like a phone.
- Say it: 我想去 — wǒ xiǎng qù — I'd like to go.
- Recall: say wǒ yào zhège, then say it more gently with 想要

Before you move on

What does 想要 take, a thing or a verb? (A thing: 想要一个手机.) And 想 alone? (A verb: 我想去.)

91.2 要 — the top of 西, then 女

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xiǎngyào — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

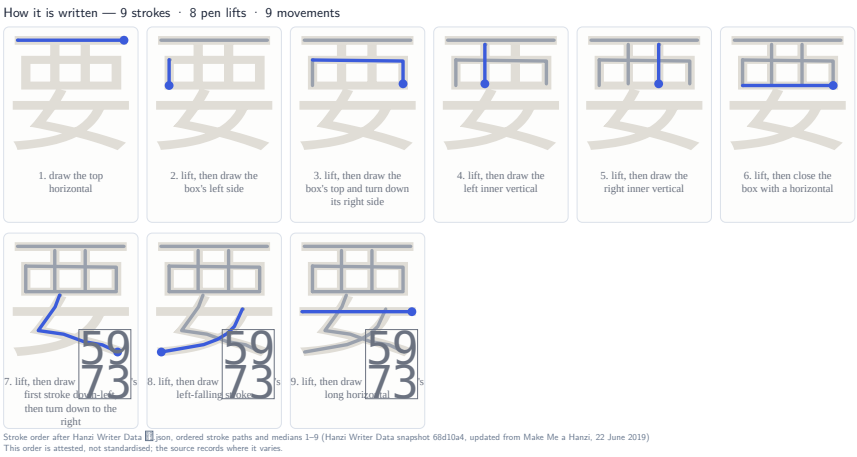
女 妈

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — nǚ, mā

Script — the top of 西, then 女



How 要 is written, stroke by stroke

要

Two pieces, top before bottom, and the bottom one you have written since 好.

覀, six strokes: the top bar; then a box, its left side and its top turning down the right side; two short verticals inside it; then the bar that closes the box.

女, three strokes, wide under it: the stroke that falls left and turns down to the right, the left-falling stroke, then the long bar.

6 + 3 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 要, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 要? (Nine.) Which character you know sits at the foot? (女.) When is the box closed? (Before 女 begins.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 要, pinned stroke paths and medians.

91.3 不要 (bú yào) — don't; do not want

Before the new one: read the last lesson's character, then two words with the same rising 不.

- Read it: 我想要, aloud — wǒ xiǎngyào
- Recall: say 不是 — bú shì
- Recall: say 不客气 — bú kèqi, you're welcome

You'll want to know: 不要

不要 — bú yào — "don't; do not want".

我不要 wǒ bú yào — I don't want it.

不要说 bú yào shuō — Don't say it.

不 before the fall of 要 rises: bú yào, as in bú shì.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 不要 (bú yào) is built from 不 'not' and 要 'to want', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjut and 'jiewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

Two jobs. 我不要: I don't want it. 不要 + a verb: don't do it. The second is how Mandarin tells somebody not to.

Your turn

- Say it: bú yào
- Say it: bú yào, once more
- Say it: 我不要 — wǒ bú yào — I don't want it.
- Say it: 不要说 — bú yào shuō — Don't say it.
- Recall: say bú kèqi, then bú yào, and hear the same rise

Before you move on

What are the two jobs of 不要? (I don't want it, and don't do it.) Which tone does 不 take here? (It rises: *bú.)

91.4 xūyào — to need

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two things a tired person needs.

- Recall: say 不要说 — bú yào shuō, don't say it
- Recall: say xiūxi, to rest — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say bāngmáng, to help out — R3, durable

You'll want to know: xūyào

xūyào — "to need".

wǒ xūyào xiūxi — I need a rest.

nǐ xūyào bāngmáng ma — Do you need a hand?

Its first character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xūyào is built from xū and yào 'to want', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sju and 'jiewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The Guangyun glosses sju only as the name of a hexagram, so 'to need' is not given there.

What you've built

想要 is what you would like; xūyào is what you cannot do without.

Your turn

- Say it: xūyào
- Say it: xūyào, once more
- Say it: wǒ xūyào xiūxi — I need a rest.

- Say it: nǐ xūyào bāngmáng ma — Do you need a hand?
- Recall: say xiūxi, then xūyào again

Before you move on

What does xūyào mean? ("To need".) Which is softer, xūyào or 想要? (想要, what you would like.)

91.5 一点儿 (yìdiǎnr) — a little

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then water, then the tone of 一.

- Recall: say xūyào, to need — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 水 — shuǐ, water
- Recall: say 一天 — yì tiān, a day, with 一 falling

You'll want to know: 一点儿

一点儿 — yìdiǎnr — "a little; a bit".

我要一点儿水 wǒ yào yìdiǎnr shuǐ — I'd like a little water.

一 before the dip of 点 falls: yì.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 一点儿 (yìdiǎnr) is built from 一 'one', 点 'a dot' and the r ending 儿: a dot's worth. 一 and 点 are inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jit and temX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), temX glossed 'a dot; a stroke of the brush'.

What you've built

一点儿 goes after the verb and before the thing: 要, 一点儿, 水.

Your turn

- Say it: yìdiǎnr
- Say it: yìdiǎnr, once more
- Say it: 我要一点儿水 — wǒ yào yìdiǎnr shuǐ — I'd like a little water.
- Say it: 我想要一点儿 — wǒ xiǎngyào yìdiǎnr — I'd like a little.
- Recall: say xūyào, then yìdiǎnr again

Before you move on

What does 一点儿 mean? ("A little".) Where does it go? (After the verb, before the thing.)

91.6 我想要一点儿水

The chapter closes here, with a host and a guest.

- Recall: say yìdiǎnr, a little — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say chá, tea — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say lèi, tired — R4

The exchange

A: 你想喝什么

nǐ xiǎng hē shénme — What would you like to drink?

B: 我想要一点儿水

wǒ xiǎngyào yìdiǎnr shuǐ — I'd like a little water.

A: nǐ yào chá ma — Would you like tea?

B: 不要 谢谢

bú yào, xièxie — No, thank you.

A: nǐ xūyào xiūxi ma — Do you need a rest?

B: bù, wǒ bú lèi — No, I'm not tired.

Four ways of wanting: 想 + a verb, 想要 + a thing, yào + a thing, xūyào for a need. And one way of refusing that is still polite: 不要, 谢谢.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — wanting, needing, refusing

- 我想要一点儿水 wǒ xiǎngyào yìdiǎnr shuǐ — I'd like a little water.
- 我要这个 wǒ yào zhège — I want this one.
- wǒ xūyào xiūxi — I need a rest.
- 不要 谢谢 bú yào, xièxie — no, thank you.

Listen. Nǐ yào shénme?
Speak. Ask for a little of something, then turn something down politely.
Write it: 要 — the box under its bar first, then 女

Your turn

- Say it: 我想要一点儿水 — wǒ xiǎngyào yìdiǎnr shuǐ — I'd like a little water.
- Say it: 不要 谢谢 — bú yào, xièxie — No, thank you.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 我要一点儿水

Before you move on

Ask for a little water. (我要一点儿水.) Turn down tea politely. (不要 谢谢.) Say you need a rest. (wǒ xūyào xiūxi.)

Chapter 92

Me Too

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can order at a table and say 'me too'.
>
> Ordering at a table, the menu, the waiter and anything else, and 'me too' with 也, built on one new written character: 也.

92.1 也 (yě) — also; too

A new chapter, and it opens with the word you need when somebody else has ordered first.

- Recall: say 我想要一点儿水 — wǒ xiǎngyào yìdiǎnr shuǐ
- Recall: say 一点儿 — yìdiǎnr, a little
- Recall: say 他是学生 — tā shì xuésheng, he's a student

You'll want to know: 也

也 — yě — "also; too".

> 我也要 wǒ yě yào — Me too; I'd like one too.
>
> 他也是学生 tā yě shì xuésheng — He's a student too.

The next lesson puts the character in your hand. You have written it before, as the right half of 他.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 也 (yě) is inherited from Middle Chinese yaeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a particle that closes a sentence'. 'Also' is not given there, so how it came to mean 'also' is not settled.

What you've built

也 goes in front of the verb: 我也要, 他也是学生. English puts too at the end; Mandarin does not.

Your turn

- Say it: yě
- Say it: yě, once more
- Say it: 我也要 — wǒ yě yào — Me too.
- Say it: 他也是学生 — tā yě shì xuésheng — He's a student too.
- Recall: say wǒ xiǎngyào yìdiǎnr shuǐ, then answer it for yourself with 我也要

Before you move on

What does 也 mean? ("Also; too".) Where does it go? (In front of the verb: 我也要.)

92.2 也 — the right half of 他

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say yě — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

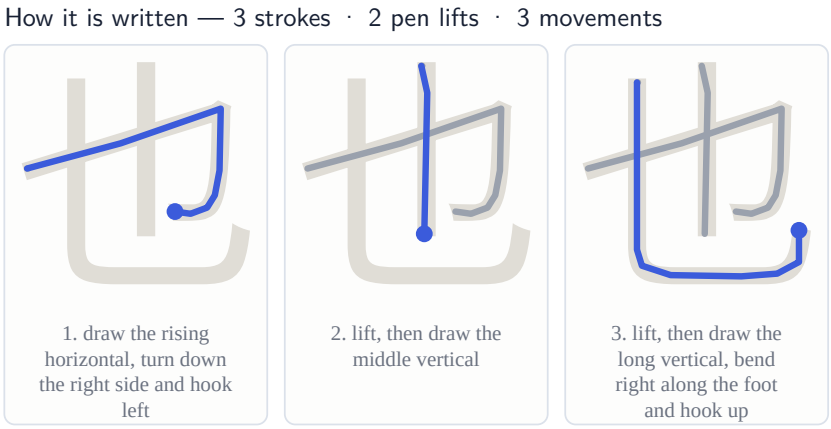
  他 他们

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — tā, tāmen

Script — the right half of 他



How 也 is written, stroke by stroke

也

One piece, and your hand already knows it: the right half of 他, stroke for stroke.

A hooked turn: a horizontal that rises a little, turns down the right side and hooks to the left.

A short vertical from above it, down through it.

The long bend: down the left from above the horizontal, along the foot to the right, and a hook up at the end.

Three strokes.

Your turn

- Write it: 也, all three, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 也? (Three.) Where have you written them before? (On the right of 他.) Which stroke ends with a hook up? (The last, the long bend.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 也, pinned stroke paths and medians.

92.3 càidān — menu

Before the new one: read the last lesson's character, then two words for food.

- Read it: 我也要, aloud — wǒ yě yào
- Recall: say cài, a dish — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say diǎncài, to order food — R3, durable

You'll want to know: càidān

càidān — "menu".

qǐng gěi wǒ càidān — The menu, please.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of càidān is built from cài 'a dish', the cài you know, and dān, both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshojH and tan (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'greens fit to eat' and 'single'. A sheet that lists the dishes is the modern sense of the pair.

What you've built

qǐng gěi wǒ càidān: 请, then 给 + the person + the thing, the pattern of the chapter on giving.

Your turn

- Say it: càidān
- Say it: càidān, once more

- Say it: qǐng gěi wǒ càidān — The menu, please.
- Recall: say diǎncài, then càidān again

Before you move on

What does càidān mean? (“Menu”.) Ask for it. (qǐng gěi wǒ càidān.)

92.4 fúwùyuán — waiter; attendant

Before the new one: last lesson’s word, then a place to eat, then a guest.

- Recall: say càidān, the menu — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say fàndiàn, a restaurant — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say 客人 — kèrén, a guest

You’ll want to know: fúwùyuán

fúwùyuán — “waiter; attendant”.

fúwùyuán, wǒ yào càidān — Excuse me, the menu, please.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fúwùyuán is built from fú ’to serve’, wù ’a task’ and yuán, all inherited from Middle Chinese, bjuwk, mjuH and hjwen (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), glossed ’to serve’, ’affairs’ and ’a number of things’. ’A member of staff’ is a later sense of yuán.

What you’ve built

In a restaurant or a shop, fúwùyuán is also how you call the person serving: say it, then what you want.

Your turn

- Say it: fúwùyuán
- Say it: fúwùyuán, once more
- Say it: fúwùyuán, wǒ yào càidān — Excuse me, the menu, please.
- Recall: say fàndiàn, then fúwùyuán again

Before you move on

What does fúwùyuán mean? ("Waiter; attendant".) Call one and ask for the menu. (fúwùyuán, wǒ yào càidān.)

92.5 biéde — something else; other

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the particle at the end of this one.

- Recall: say fúwùyuán, a waiter — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say dōngxi, things — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say 我的书 — wǒ de shū, my book

You'll want to know: biéde

biéde — "something else; other".

nǐ yào biéde ma — Would you like anything else?

wǒ xiǎngyào biéde dōngxi — I'd like something else.

Its first character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of biéde is built from bié 'other; apart' and de, the 的 you write. bié is inherited from Middle Chinese bjet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'different; to part'; where de comes from is not settled.

What you've built

nǐ yào biéde ma is the waiter's question; bú yào, xièxie is the answer when you have all you need.

Your turn

- Say it: biéde
- Say it: biéde, once more
- Say it: nǐ yào biéde ma — Would you like anything else?
- Say it: 不要 谢谢 — bú yào, xièxie — No, thank you.
- Recall: say dōngxi, then biéde again

Before you move on

What does biéde mean? ("Something else; other".) Answer the waiter's question politely. (不要 谢谢.)

92.6 我也要

The chapter closes here, at a table for two.

- Recall: say biéde, something else — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say jiǎozi, dumplings — R3, durable
- Recall: say xūyào, to need — R2

The exchange

A: fúwùyuán, qǐng gěi wǒmen càidān — Excuse me, could we have the menu?

B: 好 你们喝什么

hǎo, nǐmen hē shénme — Of course. What will you drink?

A: 我要水

wǒ yào shuǐ — Water for me.

C: 我也要

wǒ yě yào — Me too.

B: nǐmen yào biéde ma — Anything else?

A: wǒ yào jiǎozi — Dumplings for me.

C: wǒ yě yào jiǎozi — Dumplings for me too.

B: 好

hǎo — Right you are.

Ordering is yào and the thing; agreeing is 也 in front of it. Nobody says I would like: 我要 does the job.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — ordering at a table

- qǐng gěi wǒmen càidān — the menu, please.
- 我要水 wǒ yào shuǐ — water for me.
- 我也要 wǒ yě yào — me too.
- nǐmen yào biéde ma — anything else?

Listen. Nǐmen hē shénme?
Speak. Order a drink, then agree with somebody else's order using 也.
Write it: 也 — the hooked turn, the short vertical, the long bend

Your turn

- Say it: 我也要 — wǒ yě yào — Me too.
- Say it: 请给我们水 — qǐng gěi wǒmen shuǐ — Water for us, please.
- Say it: the whole exchange, every part
- Write it: 我也要

Before you move on

Say me too. (我也要.) Ask for the menu. (qǐng gěi wǒ càidān.) Call the waiter. (fúwùyuán.) Where does 也 go? (In front of the verb.)

Chapter 93

Too Much

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say something is too much, or a bit too much.
>
> Too much with 太 … 了*, a bit too much with* 有点儿*, great with* 太好了*, and clean and dirty, built on one new written character:* 太*.*

93.1 太好了 (tài hǎo le) — great!

A new chapter, and it opens with a sound you have made since the chapter on money.

- Recall: say 我也要 — wǒ yě yào, me too
- Recall: say nǐ yào biéde ma, anything else — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say tài guì le, too expensive — R4, from the chapter on money

You'll want to know: 太好了

太好了 — tài hǎo le — "great!; that's wonderful".

> 我们明天去 太好了 wǒmen míngtiān qù, tài hǎo le — We're going tomorrow? Great!

The next lesson puts the first character in your hand. It is the tài you have said since tài guì le.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 太好了 (tài hǎo le) is built from 太 'too; extremely', 好 'good' and 了. 太 and 好 are inherited from Middle Chinese, thajH and xawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), thajH glossed 'extreme; great'.

What you've built tài … le around an adjective says too much: tài guì le, too expensive. Around 好 it is not 'too good'. It is the everyday 'great!'

Your turn

- Say it: tài hǎo le
- Say it: tài hǎo le, once more, as if you meant it
- Say it: 我们明天去 太好了 — wǒmen míngtiān qù, tài hǎo le — We're going tomorrow? Great!
- Recall: say tài guì le, then tài hǎo le, and hear one complaint and one delight

Before you move on

What does 太好了 mean? ("Great!".) Is it 'too good'? (No: tài … le around 好 is plain delight.)

93.2 太 — 大, then a dot

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say tài hǎo le — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

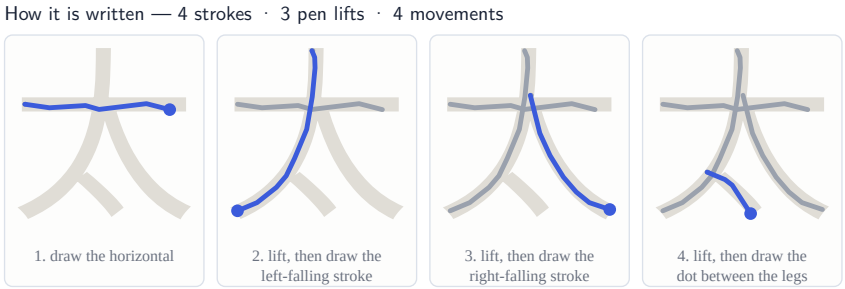
  大 天

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — dà, tiān

Script — 大, then a dot



How 太 is written, stroke by stroke

太

大 with one stroke added, and the added stroke comes last.

大, three strokes: the bar, the left-falling stroke through it, the right-falling stroke from the crossing.

One dot, between the two legs.

3 + 1 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 太, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 太? (Four.) Which character is inside it? (大.) Where does the dot go? (Between the legs, last.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 太, pinned stroke paths and medians.

93.3 有点儿 (yǒudiǎnr) — a bit, and not in a good way

Before the new one: read the last lesson's character, then two words this one is made from.

- Read it: 太好了, aloud — tài hǎo le
- Recall: say 一点儿 — yìdiǎnr, a little
- Recall: say lěng, cold — R4, recognition at distance

You'll want to know: 有点儿

有点儿 — yǒudiǎnr — "a bit (of something unwanted); rather".

有点儿大 yǒudiǎnr dà — It's a bit big.

太大了 tài dà le — It's too big.

Two dips in a row: spoken, the first rises, yóudiǎnr. It is written yǒudiǎnr.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 有点儿 (yǒudiǎnr) is built from 有 'to have', 点 'a dot' and the r ending: having a dot of it. 有 and 点 are inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuwX and temX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

有点儿 + an adjective is a mild complaint: yǒudiǎnr lěng, it's a bit cold. 很 is neutral; 太 … 了 is strong. And 一点儿 is a different job: it goes after a verb, 要一点儿水.

Your turn

- Say it: yǒudiǎnr — and hear it as yóudiǎnr
- Say it: 有点儿大 — yǒudiǎnr dà — It's a bit big.
- Say it: 太大了 — tài dà le — It's too big.
- Say it: yǒudiǎnr lěng — It's a bit cold.
- Recall: say yào yìdiǎnr shuǐ, then yǒudiǎnr dà, and hear the two jobs

Before you move on

What does 有点儿 say about an adjective? (A bit, and not welcome.) Which is stronger, 有点儿大 or 太大了? (太大了.)

93.4 gānjìng — clean

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then a room, then 很.

- Recall: say 有点儿大 — yǒudiǎnr dà
- Recall: say fángjiān, a room — R2
- Recall: say 很好 — hěn hǎo, fine

You'll want to know: gānjìng

gānjìng — "clean".

fángjiān hěn gānjìng — The room is clean.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gānjìng is built from gān 'dry' and jìng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kan and dzjengH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'dry' and 'without dirt'.

What you've built

An adjective takes a plain 很 where English has is: fángjiān hěn gānjìng. No 是.

Your turn

- Say it: gānjìng
- Say it: gānjìng, once more
- Say it: fángjiān hěn gānjìng — The room is clean.
- Say it: fángjiān bù gānjìng — The room isn't clean.
- Recall: say yǒudiǎnr dà, then gānjìng again

Before you move on

What does gānjìng mean? (“Clean”.) What goes in front of it, 是 or 很? (很.)

93.5 zāng — dirty

Before the new one: last lesson’s word, then two things that get dirty.

- Recall: say gānjìng, clean — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say xié, shoes — R3, durable
- Recall: say yīfu, clothes — R3

You’ll want to know: zāng

zāng — “dirty”.

xié tài zāng le — The shoes are too dirty.

yīfu yǒudiǎnr zāng — The clothes are a bit dirty.

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

The older character for zāng is in the Guangyun as tsangX (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), but only inside a two-character word for a sturdy body, and that reading would give zǎng, not zāng. No dictionary we use records the word ’dirty’ in an older form, so the history of zāng is not settled.

What you’ve built

gānjìng and zāng, clean and dirty, and three strengths for each: 很, 有点儿, 太 … 了.

Your turn

- Say it: zāng

- Say it: zāng, once more
- Say it: xié tài zāng le — The shoes are too dirty.
- Say it: yīfu yǒudiǎnr zāng — The clothes are a bit dirty.
- Recall: say gānjìng, then zāng again

Before you move on

What does zāng mean? ("Dirty".) Say the shoes are too dirty. (xié tài zāng le.)

93.6 太大了

The chapter closes here, with two people shopping and not finding it.

- Recall: say zāng, dirty — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say zěnmeyàng, how is it — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say piányi, cheap — R4

The exchange

A: zhège zěnmeyàng — How's this one?

B: 太大了

tài dà le — Too big.

A: 那个呢

nàge ne — And that one?

B: 有点儿小

yǒudiǎnr xiǎo — A bit small.

A: 这个很好看

zhège hěn hǎokàn — This one's nice.

B: yǒudiǎnr zāng — It's a bit dirty.

A: 我们去吃饭

wǒmen qù chī fàn — Let's go and eat, then.

B: 太好了

tài hǎo le — Great!

Three strengths of complaint, 有点儿, 很 and 太 … 了, and one delight to finish: 太好了.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — three strengths

- 很大 hěn dà — big; a plain statement.
- 有点儿大 yǒudiǎnr dà — a bit big, and I'd rather it wasn't.
- 太大了 tài dà le — too big.
- 太好了 tài hǎo le — great!

Listen. Fángjiān zěnmeyàng?
Speak. Answer it three ways: gānjìng, a bit dirty, too dirty.
Write it: 太 — 大, then the dot

Your turn

- Say it: 太大了 — tài dà le — Too big.
- Say it: 有点儿小 — yǒudiǎnr xiǎo — A bit small.
- Say it: fángjiān hěn gānjìng — The room is clean.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 太好了

Before you move on

Say it is too big. (太大了.) Say it is a bit small. (有点儿小.) Say great. (太好了.) Say the room is clean. (fángjiān hěn gānjìng.)

Chapter 94

All the Same

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe people and things, and say 'all of them'.
>
> Describing people, young, fat, thin, the same or not, and saying all of them with 都, built on one new written character: 都.

94.1 都 (dōu) — all; both

A new chapter, and it opens with the word that gathers people together.

- Recall: say 太大了 — tài dà le, too big
- Recall: say xié tài zāng le, the shoes are too dirty — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say 大家 — dàjiā, everyone

You'll want to know: 都

都 — dōu — "all; both".

我们都是学生 wǒmen dōu shì xuésheng — We're all students.

他们都很好 tāmen dōu hěn hǎo — They're all fine.

The next lesson puts the new character in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 都 (dōu) is inherited from Middle Chinese tu (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'all together', and also 'a capital city', the sense said dū today. The regular change from tu gives dū; why the word for 'all' is said dōu is not settled.

What you've built

都 goes in front of the verb or the adjective and looks back at the people before it: 我们都, all of us. With two people it means both.

Your turn

- Say it: dōu
- Say it: dōu, once more
- Say it: 我们都是学生 — wǒmen dōu shì xuésheng — We're all students.
- Say it: 他们都很好 — tāmen dōu hěn hǎo — They're all fine.
- Recall: say dàjiā, then dōu again

Before you move on

What does 都 mean? ("All; both".) Where does it go? (In front of the verb, after the people.)

94.2 都 — 者, then the ear on the right

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say dōu — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  日 那 在

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rì, nà, zài

Script — 者, then the ear on the right

How 都 is written, stroke by stroke

都

Two pieces, left before right, and every stroke in them is one you have made.

者, eight strokes: first the foot of 在, a short bar, a vertical through it, then the long bar; then a long left-falling stroke from the upper right; then 日 under them.

The ear piece, two strokes, on the right, as 那 ends: across, back, round and hooking; then the long vertical.

8 + 2 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 都, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 都? (Ten.) Which character ends the left piece? (日.) Where have you written the ear piece? (On the right of 那.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 都, pinned stroke paths and medians.

94.3 yíyàng — the same

Before the new one: read a line with two characters you have written in the last two chapters, then the tone of 一.

- Read it: 他们也都很好, aloud — tāmen yě dōu hěn hǎo, they're all fine too
- Recall: say 一个 — yí ge, with 一 rising

You'll want to know: yíyàng yíyàng — "the same; alike".

wǒmen bù yíyàng — We're not the same.

wǒmen yíyàng dà — We're the same age.

一 before the fall of yàng rises: yí. Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yíyàng is built from yī 'one' and yàng 'a pattern; a kind': one pattern. yī is inherited from Middle Chinese 'jit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); yàng has no reading in the Guangyun, so no dictionary we use records an older form of it, and its history is not settled.

What you've built

In tāmen yě dōu hěn hǎo, 也 comes before 都: too, and all of them. yíyàng + an adjective says how two things match: yíyàng dà, the same size or the same age.

Your turn

- Say it: yíyàng
- Say it: yíyàng, once more
- Say it: wǒmen bù yíyàng — We're not the same.
- Say it: wǒmen yíyàng dà — We're the same age.
- Recall: say yí ge, then yíyàng, and hear the same rise

Before you move on

What does yíyàng mean? (“The same”.) Which comes first, 也 or 都? (也: 也都.)

94.4 niánqīng — young

Before the new one: last lesson’s word, then two words about age and people.

- Recall: say yíyàng, the same — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say niánjì, age — R2
- Recall: say lǎoshī, a teacher — R4, recognition at distance

You’ll want to know: niánqīng

niánqīng — “young”.

wǒ de lǎoshī hěn niánqīng — My teacher is very young.

Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of niánqīng is built from nián ’year’, the 年 you write, and qīng ’light’, not heavy: light in years. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, nen and khjieng (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), khjieng glossed ’light in weight’.

What you’ve built

niánqīng is said of grown people; a child is xiǎo. lǎo, old, is its opposite.

Your turn

- Say it: niánqīng
- Say it: niánqīng, once more
- Say it: wǒ de lǎoshī hěn niánqīng — My teacher is very young.
- Recall: say niánjì, then niánqīng again

Before you move on

What does niánqīng mean? (“Young”.) Which written character does it open with? (年.)

94.5 pàng — fat; plump

Before the new one: last lesson’s word, then an animal and something to eat.

- Recall: say niánqīng, young — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say māo, a cat — R2
- Recall: say dàngāo, a cake — R2

You’ll want to know: pàng

pàng — “fat; plump”.

māo tài pàng le — The cat’s too fat.

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

The character for pàng is in the Guangyun as phanH (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), glossed ’half of a sacrificial animal’. That reading would give pàn, not pàng, and the sense is not ’fat’, so the history of pàng is not settled.

What you’ve built

pàng is a word for people and animals, and said of a person it is blunt: a cat can hear tài pàng le without offence.

Your turn

- Say it: pàng
- Say it: pàng, once more
- Say it: māo tài pàng le — The cat’s too fat.

- Say it: māo yǒudiǎnr pàng — The cat's a bit plump.
- Recall: say dàngāo, then pàng again

Before you move on

What does pàng mean? ("Fat; plump".) Say the cat is too fat. (māo tài pàng le.)

94.6 shòu — thin; slim

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then tall and short.

- Recall: say pàng, fat — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say gāo, tall — R3, durable
- Recall: say ǎi, short — R3

You'll want to know: shòu

shòu — "thin; slim".

tā hěn gāo, hěn shòu — He's tall and thin.

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shòu is inherited from Middle Chinese srjuwH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed, through an older dictionary, 'lean'.

What you've built

pàng and shòu, gāo and ǎi: two pairs that describe a body, each with a plain 很.

Your turn

- Say it: shòu
- Say it: shòu, once more
- Say it: tā hěn gāo, hěn shòu — He's tall and thin.
- Recall: say pàng, then shòu, the pair

Before you move on

What does shòu mean? ("Thin; slim".) And its opposite? (pàng.)

94.7 我们都是学生

The chapter closes here, with a photograph of a class.

- Recall: say shòu, thin — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 同学 — tóngxué, a classmate — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say gānjìng, clean — R2

The exchange

A: 他们都是你的同学吗

tāmen dōu shì nǐ de tóngxué ma — Are they all your classmates?

B: 对 我们都是学生

duì, wǒmen dōu shì xuésheng — Yes, we're all students.

A: nǐmen dōu hěn niánqīng — You're all so young.

B: wǒmen yíyàng dà — We're the same age.

A: 那个男人呢

nàge nánrén ne — And that man?

B: tā shì wǒmen de lǎoshī, tā hěn gāo, hěn shòu — He's our teacher. He's tall and thin.

A: nǐ de māo hěn pàng — Your cat's fat.

B: 也很大

yě hěn dà — And big.

都 gathers everybody before it into one: 他们都, 我们都, 你们都. yíyàng matches them up; gāo, shòu and pàng tell them apart.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — describing people

- 我们都是学生 wǒmen dōu shì xuésheng — we're all students.
- wǒmen yíyàng dà — we're the same age.
- tā hěn gāo, hěn shòu — he's tall and thin.
- 他们也都很好 tāmen yě dōu hěn hǎo — they're all fine too.

Listen. Nǐmen dōu shì xuésheng ma?
Speak. Describe two people you know, then say what they have in common with 都.
Write it: 都 — the left piece first, closed by its 日, then the ear on the right

Your turn

- Say it: 我们都是学生 — wǒmen dōu shì xuésheng — We're all students.
- Say it: 他们也都很好 — tāmen yě dōu hěn hǎo — They're all fine too.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 我们都是学生

Before you move on

Say you are all students. (我们都是学生.) Say you are the same age. (wǒmen yíyàng dà.) Say somebody is young. (tā hěn niánqīng.) Which comes first, 也 or 都? (也.)

Chapter 95

Why?

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask why.
>
> Asking why with 为什么*, and three everyday answers to it, being busy, the traffic and forgetting, built on one new written character:* 为*.*

95.1 为什么 (wèishénme) — why?

A new chapter, and it opens with the question that wants a reason.

- Recall: say 我们都是学生 — wǒmen dōu shì xuésheng
- Recall: say tā hěn shòu, he's thin — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say chídào, to be late — R2

You'll want to know: 为什么

为什么 — wèishénme — "why?".

> 你为什么不去 nǐ wèishénme bú qù — Why aren't you going?

The next lesson puts the new character in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 为什么 (wèishénme) is built from 为 'for' and 什么 'what': for what? 为 is inherited from Middle Chinese hjweH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to help'; 'for' is the sense of acting on somebody's behalf, which the gloss does not spell out. Where 什么 comes from is not settled.

What you've built

为什么 sits after the person and before the verb: 你, 为什么, 不去. 不 before the fall of 去 rises: bú qù.

Your turn

- Say it: wèishénme
- Say it: wèishénme, once more
- Say it: 你为什么不去 — nǐ wèishénme bú qù — Why aren't you going?
- Say it: nǐ wèishénme chídào — Why are you late?
- Recall: say chídào, then ask why

Before you move on

What does 为什么 ask? ("Why?".) Where does it go? (After the person, before the verb.)

95.2 为 — a dot, a long fall, the hook of 男, a dot

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say wèishénme — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

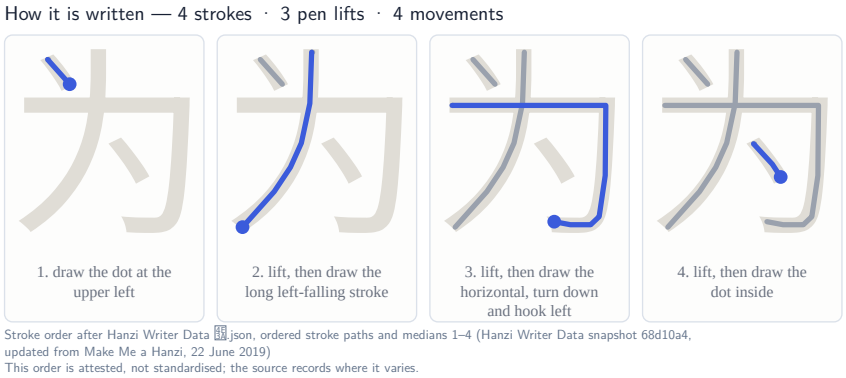
男 点

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — nán, diǎn

Script — a dot, a long fall, the hook of 男, a dot



How 为 is written, stroke by stroke

为

Four strokes, and the long one in the middle is a stroke your hand knows from the foot of 男.

A dot at the upper left.

A long left-falling stroke from the top, down to the lower left.

The hooked turn: across, down the right side, hooking to the left, as at the foot of 男.

A dot inside, last.

Four strokes.

Your turn

- Write it: 为, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 为? (Four.) Where have you made the hooked turn before? (At the foot of 男.) Which stroke is last? (The dot inside.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 为, pinned stroke paths and medians.

95.3 yǒushì — to have something on

Before the new one: read the last lesson's character, then two words for a full day.

- Read it: 为什么, aloud — wèishénme
- Recall: say máng, busy — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say 今天 — jīntiān, today

You'll want to know: yǒushì yǒushì — "to have something on; to be busy".

wǒ jīntiān yǒushì — I've got something on today.

Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǒushì is built from yǒu 'to have', the 有 you write, and shì 'a matter'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuwX and dzriH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The Guangyun glosses dzriH 'to employ; to set up', and 'a matter' is the everyday sense, not the gloss.

What you've built

yǒushì is the polite reason that gives nothing away: something has come up. máng says you are busy; yǒushì says there is a particular thing.

Your turn

- Say it: yǒushì
- Say it: yǒushì, once more
- Say it: wǒ jīntiān yǒushì — I've got something on today.
- Recall: say máng, then yǒushì again

Before you move on

What does yǒushì mean? ("To have something on".) Which written character does it open with? (有.)

95.4 dǔchē — a traffic jam

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two words for the road.

- Recall: say yǒushì, to have something on — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 车 — chē, a car
- Recall: say lù, a road — R3, durable

You'll want to know: dǔchē dǔchē — "traffic jam; to be stuck in traffic".

zǎoshang dǔchē — There's a jam in the mornings.

Its first character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǔchē is built from dǔ 'to block' and chē 'a vehicle', the 车 you write. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, tuX and tsyhae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the Guangyun glosses tuX as 'a wall', and 'to block' is assumed from that, not quoted.

What you've built

dǔchē is a verb as well as a noun: zǎoshang dǔchē, the traffic jams in the morning. No 有 needed.

Your turn

- Say it: dǔchē
- Say it: dǔchē, once more

- Say it: zǎoshang dǔchē — There's a jam in the mornings.
- Recall: say lù, then dǔchē again

Before you move on

What does dǔchē mean? ("A traffic jam".) Which written character does it end with? (车.)

95.5 wàng — to forget

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two words you might forget.

- Recall: say dǔchē, a traffic jam — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say zuòyè, homework — R2
- Recall: say 马上 — mǎshàng, right away

You'll want to know: wàng

wàng — "to forget".

wǒ wàng le — I forgot.

wǒ wàng le wǒ de yàoshi — I forgot my key.

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wàng is inherited from Middle Chinese mjangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to leave behind; to forget'.

What you've built

wàng le: with 了 after it, the forgetting has already happened, which is how it is almost always said.

Your turn

- Say it: wàng
- Say it: wàng le
- Say it: wǒ wàng le — I forgot.
- Say it: wǒ wàng le wǒ de yàoshi — I forgot my key.
- Recall: say zuòyè, then say you forgot it

Before you move on

What does wàng mean? ("To forget".) Say you forgot. (wǒ wàng le.)

95.6 你为什么不去

The chapter closes here, with one person asking why three times.

- Recall: say wàng, to forget — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say láibují, to run out of time — R2
- Recall: say zuòyè, homework — R1

The exchange

A: nǐ wèishénme chídào — Why are you late?

B: zǎoshang dǔchē — The traffic this morning.

A: 你明天去吗

nǐ míngtiān qù ma — Are you going tomorrow?

B: 我不去

wǒ bú qù — I'm not going.

A: 为什么

wèishénme — Why?

B: wǒ yǒushì — I've got something on.

A: nǐ de zuòyè ne — And your homework?

B: wǒ wàng le — I forgot.

为什么 can stand alone as a whole question, as A's fifth line does. Each answer here is a reason with nothing in front of it; the next chapter gives the word that introduces one.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — asking why

- 你为什么不去 nǐ wèishénme bú qù — why aren't you going?
- 为什么 wèishénme — why?
- wǒ yǒushì — something has come up.
- zǎoshang dǔchē — the traffic this morning.

Listen. Nǐ wèishénme bù chī fàn?
Speak. Answer it with any reason you have, then ask somebody why.
Write it: 为 — the dot, the long fall, the hooked turn, the dot inside

Your turn

- Say it: 你为什么不去 — nǐ wèishénme bú qù — Why aren't you going?
- Say it: wǒ wàng le — I forgot.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 为什么

Before you move on

Ask why somebody is not going. (你为什么不去.) Say something has come up. (wǒ yǒushì.) Blame the traffic. (zǎoshang dǔchē.) Say you forgot. (wǒ wàng le.)

Chapter 96

Because

Modes: voice (4) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give one reason with 因为.
> Giving one reason with 因为*, and what follows from it with suǒyǐ, built on one new written character:* 因.

96.1 因为 (yīnwèi) — because

A new chapter, and it opens with the answer to the last one's question.

- Recall: say 你为什么不去 — nǐ wèishénme bú qù
- Recall: say wǒ wàng le, I forgot — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say dǔchē, a traffic jam — R1

You'll want to know: 因为

因为 — yīnwèi — "because".

> 我不去 因为我没有车 wǒ bú qù, yīnwèi wǒ méiyǒu chē — I'm not going, because I don't have a car.

The next lesson puts the first character in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 因为 (yīnwèi) is built from 因 'to follow from' and 为 'for'. 因 is inherited from Middle Chinese 'jin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to rely on; to follow from'.

What you've built

One reason, in one clause, after what it explains: 我不去, 因为我没有车. It can also come first: 因为我没有车, 我不去.

Your turn

- Say it: yīnwèi
- Say it: yīnwèi, once more
- Say it: 我不去 因为我没有车 — wǒ bú qù, yīnwèi wǒ méiyǒu chē — I'm not going, because I don't have a car.
- Say it: 因为我没有车 我不去 — yīnwèi wǒ méiyǒu chē, wǒ bú qù — Because I don't have a car, I'm not going.
- Recall: say nǐ wèishénme bú qù, then answer it with 因为

Before you move on

What does 因为 mean? ("Because".) Which question does it answer? (为什么.)

96.2 因 — 大 inside the frame of 国

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say yīnwèi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

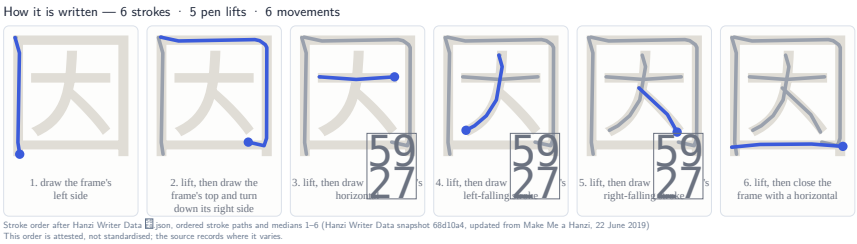
国 大

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — guó, dà

Script — 大 inside the frame of 国



How 因 is written, stroke by stroke

因

A frame and what it holds, and the frame is closed last, after its contents, as in 国.

The frame, two strokes first: its left side, then its top turning down the right side.

大, three strokes, inside: the bar, the left-falling stroke, the short right-falling stroke.

The bottom bar, last, closing the frame.

2 + 3 + 1 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 因, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 因? (Six.) What is inside the frame? (大.) When is the frame closed? (Last, as in 国.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 因, pinned stroke paths and medians.

96.3 suǒyǐ — so; therefore

Before the new one: read the last lesson's character, then two words, one of which ends like this one.

- Read it: 因为, aloud — yīnwèi
- Recall: say lèi, tired — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say kěyǐ, may — R2

You'll want to know: suǒyǐ

suǒyǐ — "so; therefore".

yīnwèi wǒ hěn lèi, suǒyǐ wǒ bú qù — I'm tired, so I'm not going.

Two dips in a row: spoken, the first rises, suóyǐ. It is written suǒyǐ. Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of suǒyǐ is built from suǒ 'a place; that which' and yǐ 'to use', the yǐ of kěyǐ. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, srjoX and yiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), srjoX glossed 'a place'. The regular change from srjoX would give shǔ, not suǒ, so why it is said suǒ is not settled.

What you've built

因为 gives the reason, suǒyǐ what follows from it. Mandarin often says both: yīnwèi …, suǒyǐ …. Either half can also stand alone.

Your turn

- Say it: suǒyǐ — and hear it as suóyǐ
- Say it: yīnwèi wǒ hěn lèi, suǒyǐ wǒ bú qù — I'm tired, so I'm not going.
- Recall: say kěyǐ, then suǒyǐ, and hear the same yǐ

Before you move on

What does suǒyǐ mean? ("So; therefore".) Which half gives the reason, 因为 or suǒyǐ? (因为.)

96.4 shūfu — comfortable; well

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two words about health.

- Recall: say suǒyǐ, so — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say shēntǐ, health — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say bìng, to fall ill — R2

You'll want to know: shūfu

shūfu — "comfortable; well".

wǒ bù shūfu — I'm not feeling well.

zhège yǐzi hěn shūfu — This chair is comfortable.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shūfu is built from shū 'to stretch; to ease' and fu, the fu of yīfu. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, syo and bjuwk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), syo glossed 'slow; to stretch out'.

What you've built

wǒ bù shūfu is the gentle way to say you are unwell, and a reason nobody argues with: yīnwèi wǒ bù shūfu.

Your turn

- Say it: shūfu
- Say it: shūfu, once more
- Say it: wǒ bù shūfu — I'm not feeling well.
- Say it: zhège yǐzi hěn shūfu — This chair is comfortable.
- Recall: say bìng, then shūfu again

Before you move on

What does shūfu mean? ("Comfortable; well".) Say you are not feeling well. (wǒ bù shūfu.)

96.5 为什么 — 因为

The chapter closes here, with every why answered.

- Recall: say shūfu, comfortable — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say è, hungry — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say 上课 — shàngkè, to go to class — R2

The exchange

A: 你为什么不吃饭

nǐ wèishénme bù chī fàn — Why aren't you eating?

B: yīnwèi wǒ bú è — Because I'm not hungry.

A: 你为什么不去上课

nǐ wèishénme bú qù shàngkè — Why aren't you going to class?

B: yīnwèi wǒ bù shūfu, suǒyǐ wǒ bú qù — I'm not feeling well, so I'm not going.

A: 你明天能来吗

nǐ míngtiān néng lái ma — Can you come tomorrow?

B: 能 néng — I can.

为什么 asks; 因为 answers, with one reason in one clause; suǒyǐ carries the reason on to what happens.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — a question and its reason

- 你为什么不去 nǐ wèishénme bú qù — why aren't you going?
- 因为我没有车 yīnwèi wǒ méiyǒu chē — because I don't have a car.
- yīnwèi wǒ hěn lèi, suǒyǐ wǒ bú qù — I'm tired, so I'm not going.

Listen. Nǐ wèishénme xuéxí Hànyǔ?
Speak. Answer it with 因为 and one reason of your own.
Write it: 因 — the frame's two sides, 大 inside, then the bar that closes it

Your turn

- Say it: 你为什么不去 — nǐ wèishénme bú qù — Why aren't you going?
- Say it: 因为我没有车 — yīnwèi wǒ méiyǒu chē — Because I don't have a car.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 因为

Before you move on

Give a reason with no car in it. (因为我没有车.) Say you are not well, so you are not going. (yīnwèi wǒ bù shūfu, suǒyǐ wǒ bú qù.) Which question does 因为 answer? (为什么.)

Chapter 97

My Day in Characters

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read a short day in characters and write one line of my own.
>
> Complete ZH-W97-my-own-line: one line of your own Chinese about where you are, what you want and for how long, chosen rather than copied, with every word you have not written in pinyin.

97.1 小时 (xiǎoshí) — hour

A new chapter, and it opens with a word for measuring a day.

- Recall: say 为什么, then answer it with 因为 — wèishénme, yīnwèi
- Recall: say wǒ bù shūfu, I'm not feeling well — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say shíhou, a time; a moment — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say xiǎoshíhou, in childhood — R3, durable

You'll want to know: 小时

小时 — xiǎoshí — "hour".

一个小时 yí ge xiǎoshí — an hour

The next lesson puts the second character in your hand. It is the shí of shíhou and xiǎoshíhou.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 小时 (xiǎoshí) is built from 小 'small' and 时 'time'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, sjewX and dzyi (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), dzyi glossed 'a season; a time'.

What you've built

一 before 个 rises: yí ge xiǎoshí, an hour. Before the other tones it falls: yì tiān, a day; yì nián, a year. Time words count with 一 as often as anything does.

Your turn

- Say it: xiǎoshí
- Say it: xiǎoshí, once more
- Say it: 一个小时 — yí ge xiǎoshí — an hour
- Say it: 一天 — yì tiān — a day
- Say it: 一年 — yì nián — a year
- Recall: say shíhou, then xiǎoshí, and hear the same shí

Before you move on

What does 小时 mean? ("Hour".) Say an hour, and listen to 一. (yí ge xiǎoshí: 一 rises before 个.)

97.2 时 — 日, then the right half of 对

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xiǎoshí — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  日 对

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rì, duì

Script — 日, then the right half of 对

How 时 is written, stroke by stroke

时

Two pieces you own, side by side.

日, four strokes, narrow, on the left: the left side, the top that turns down the right side, the middle bar, the bottom bar.

The right half of 对, three strokes: the bar, the vertical that hooks to the left at its foot, then the dot.

4 + 3 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 时, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 时? (Seven.) Which character is on the left? (日.) Where have you written the right half? (At the end of 对.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 时, pinned stroke paths and medians.

97.3 měitiān — every day

Before the new one: read the last lesson's character, then a day with 一 in front of it.

- Read it: 两个小时, aloud — liǎng ge xiǎoshí, two hours
- Recall: say 一天 — yì tiān, a day, with 一 falling

You'll want to know: měitiān

měitiān — "every day".

wǒ měitiān hē chá — I drink tea every day.

Its first character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of měitiān is built from měi 'each' and tiān 'day', the 天 you write. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, mwojX and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the Guangyun glosses mwojX 'frequently', and 'each' is assumed from that, not quoted.

What you've built

A time word goes early, after the person and before the verb: 我, měitiān, hē chá. yì tiān is one day; měitiān is every day.

Your turn

- Say it: měitiān
- Say it: měitiān, once more
- Say it: wǒ měitiān hē chá — I drink tea every day.
- Recall: say yì tiān, then měitiān

Before you move on

What does měitiān mean? ("Every day".) Where does it go? (After the person, before the verb.)

97.4 yǐhòu — after; afterwards

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two words for school and after.

- Recall: say měitiān, every day — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 下课 — xiàkè, to finish class
- Recall: say hòu, after; behind — R2

You'll want to know: yǐhòu

yǐhòu — "after; afterwards".

xiàkè yǐhòu, wǒ qù chī fàn — After class I go and eat.

yí ge xiǎoshí yǐhòu — an hour later

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǐhòu is built from yǐ, the yǐ of kěyǐ, and hòu 'after', the hòu you know. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, yiX and huwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), huwX glossed 'after, in order'.

What you've built

yǐhòu comes after the thing it follows: xiàkè yǐhòu, after class; yí ge xiǎoshí yǐhòu, an hour later.

Your turn

- Say it: yǐhòu
- Say it: yǐhòu, once more
- Say it: xiàkè yǐhòu, wǒ qù chī fàn — After class I go and eat.
- Say it: yí ge xiǎoshí yǐhòu — an hour later
- Recall: say hòu, then yǐhòu

Before you move on

What does yǐhòu mean? ("After; afterwards".) Where does it go? (After the thing it follows: xiàkè yǐhòu.)

97.5 (reading) — a Sunday at home

Fifty-seven characters in a row, and every one is a character you write.

- Recall: say xiàkè yǐhòu, after class — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say jiàoshì, a classroom — R3, durable

  上课 下课

Read it: both aloud, with nothing said first — shàngkè, xiàkè

Read this

今天是星期天 我和妈妈都在家 妈妈做饭 我看书 我想喝水
也想吃饭 妈妈说 饭太多了 我说 太好了 下午两点 我们去买
书 因为我很喜欢看书

Read it: the passage through once without stopping; do not translate as you go
Read it: the passage again, and this time notice where the day turns: the line with the time in it

Read this

jīntiān shì xīngqītiān wǒ hé māma dōu zài jiā māma zuò fàn wǒ kàn shū wǒ xiǎng hē shuǐ yě xiǎng chī fàn māma shuō fàn tài duō le wǒ shuō tài hǎo le xiàwǔ liǎng diǎn wǒmen qù mǎi shū yīnwèi wǒ hěn xǐhuan kàn shū

One line per clause, and no punctuation, as this book prints Chinese: the line breaks carry the pauses. 饭太多了 is 太 … 了 as a complaint, too much rice; 太好了 a line later is the same frame as delight.

Your turn

- Say it: the passage aloud, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

Who is at home? (我和妈妈: the writer and Mum.) Why do they go to buy books? (因为我很喜欢看书.) Which line is a complaint, and which a delight? (饭太多了, then 太好了.)

97.6 My own line — the first Chinese with no model

Everything you have written so far had something to reach for: a model to trace, a word somebody said, a sentence printed above the space.

This does not. You choose the words, from a supply that is closed: what this book has given you.

- Recall: say 两个小时 — liǎng ge xiǎoshí, two hours

Writing — controlled composition

Write one line of your own about your day. Three parts, in your own words: where you are, with 在; what you want, with 想要 or 要; and for how long, with 一个小时 or 两个小时. If you want a second thing, 也 brings it in, in front of its verb.

Some words you will want have characters you have not written yet: měitiān, every day; yǐhòu, after. Write those in pinyin, inside the line, with their tone marks. This task allows that, and it allows nothing else: a character you can read but have not learned to write is not one you produce, so it goes in pinyin too.

Three checks belong to the hand. Write each character in the stroke order you learned: 时 is 日 first, narrow, then the hooked vertical and the dot. Give every character the same size of square, two-stroke 了 as much as ten-stroke 都. And leave a space between clauses: no Chinese comma or full stop, as this book prints them.

Write the line. Then read it back, and check that every pinyin word has its tone marks before you check anything else.

Before you move on

Which words did you write in pinyin? (Any whose characters you have not written: měitiān, yǐhòu.)
Which piece of 时 comes first? (日, narrow, on the left.)
And what did you choose here that the earlier lessons chose for you? (The words.)

Chapter 98

With a Clock

Modes: voice (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can fill a short form and write a short message against a clock.
>
> Complete ZH-R98-review-final-98: one dialogue across the A1 core, where, what there is, how many, giving, can, want, too, all, why and because, after a five-field form and a short message under this book's own three-minute clock.

98.1 The same writing, with a clock

You wrote your own line with as long as you liked.

A task you can only do untimed is not yet a task you can do.

A friend has sent you a message:

> 你在哪儿 你想要什么

Read it: the message aloud — nǐ zài nǎr, nǐ xiǎngyào shénme

Writing — timed production

What is official, and what is not. This book's A1 target is project-defined: aligned to HSK 3.0 Level 1, a match this book makes, not one the HSK publishes. Because the current trial pairs no speaking paper with Level 1, the complete A1 target adds independently scored speaking and productive writing, and at A1 the candidate writes a small form and a short message. No HSK timing is given here; the clock below is this book's own, not a published one.

Set a three-minute timer. Fill five fields first. Every label is written in characters you write:

- 名字
- 多大
- 家在哪儿
- 喜欢什么
- 想要什么

Then, before the timer rings, write back to your friend: 20 to 30 characters, saying where you are, what you want, and one reason with 因为. This task allows pinyin for a word whose characters you have not written; it goes inside the message, and only characters count toward the 20 to 30. Do not look a character up.

Speed is where stroke order shows. A character written in the order you learned keeps its shape when you hurry. When the timer rings, stop, even mid-character.

Before you move on

Spend at most one minute checking, and do not rewrite the timed answer. Did your reason start with 因为? Did every field get an answer?
Now the rule worth carrying out of this lesson. In this book, writing is its own paper, scored out of 100, with 60 to pass, and it is not averaged against reading, listening or speaking. A high reading score cannot make up for writing that is not there.

98.2 The A1 core — once more

The last lesson of the A1 core: one conversation that uses every chapter of it.

- Recall: say 你在哪儿, and answer it — R2
- Recall: say yí ge xiǎoshí yǐhòu, an hour later — R1

Your turn

A: 你在哪儿

nǐ zài nǎr — Where are you?

B: 我在家

wǒ zài jiā — At home.

A: nǐ jiā yǒu méiyǒu bīngxiāng — Have you got a fridge at home?

B: 有

yǒu — Yes.

A: 给我一点儿水

gěi wǒ yìdiǎnr shuǐ — Give me a little water, then.

B: gěi nǐ, liǎng bēi — Here you are: two glasses.

A: 太好了

tài hǎo le — Great!

B: nǐ huì yóuyǒng ma — Can you swim?

A: 会 我也想去

huì, wǒ yě xiǎng qù — I can, and I'd like to come too.

B: 我们都去吗

wǒmen dōu qù ma — Are we all going?

A: 我妈妈不去

wǒ māma bú qù — My mum isn't going.

B: 为什么

wèishénme — Why?

A: yīnwèi tā bù shūfu — Because she isn't feeling well.

B: wǒ měitiān yóuyǒng liǎng ge xiǎoshí — I swim for two hours every day.

A: yí ge xiǎoshí yǐhòu qù — Let's go in an hour, then.

- Read it: the lines printed in characters aloud, then the rest
- Say it: the whole dialogue, both parts
- Say it: B's lines again, with your own answers

Before you move on

Where? (哪儿.) Not have? (没有.) Two of something? (两.) Give? (给.) Can? (会, 能, kěyǐ.) Want? (想要.) Too? (也.) Great? (太好了.) All? (都.) Why? (为什么.) Because? (因为.) An hour? (一个小时.)

Chapter 99

Getting Washed

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say wash, brush my teeth, wash my face, have a shower and comb my hair.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 99: I can say wash, brush my teeth, wash my face, have a shower and comb my hair.

99.1 洗 (xǐ) — to wash

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for every day, then the Mandarin for after.

You'll want to know: 洗

洗 — xǐ — "to wash".

> 我去洗手 wǒ qù xǐ shǒu — I'm going to wash my hands.

The new character, in pieces: 洗 — the water piece of 汉 on the left; on the right a six-stroke piece read xiān, the first syllable of xiānsheng. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 洗 (xǐ) is inherited from Middle Chinese sejX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to wash and bathe'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: xǐ
- Say it: xǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù xǐ shǒu — I'm going to wash my hands.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for every day, then the Mandarin for after, then say xǐ again

Before you move on

What does 洗 mean? ("To wash".) Say it once more.

99.2 洗 — the water piece, then xiān

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xǐ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  汉 没 儿

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — hàn, méi, ér

Script — the water piece, then xiān

How 洗 is written, stroke by stroke

洗

Two pieces, left before right. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The water piece, three strokes, as in 汉 and 没: a dot, a second dot under it, then a stroke that rises from the bottom left.

The right piece, xiān, six strokes: a short left-falling stroke, a horizontal, a vertical down through it, a long horizontal; then a left-falling stroke, and a vertical that bends right along the bottom and hooks up, as at the foot of 儿.

3 + 6 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 洗, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 洗? (Two — the water piece, then xiān.)
Which characters you know have the same water piece? (汉 and 没.)
What does the last stroke look like? (The right stroke of 儿.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 洗, pinned stroke paths and medians.

99.3 shuāyá — to brush one's teeth

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for after, then the Mandarin for to wash.

You'll want to know: shuāyá

shuāyá — "to brush one's teeth".

wǒ měitiān zǎoshang shuāyá — I brush my teeth every morning.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shuāyá is built from shuā 'to brush' and yá 'tooth', both inherited from Middle Chinese, srwaet and ngae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to brush and wipe' and 'teeth'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: shuāyá
- Say it: shuāyá, once more
- Say it: wǒ měitiān zǎoshang shuāyá — I brush my teeth every morning.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for after, then the Mandarin for to wash, then say shuāyá again

Before you move on

What does shuāyá mean? ("To brush one's teeth".) Say it once more.

99.4 xǐliǎn — to wash one's face

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to wash, then the Mandarin for to brush one's teeth.

You'll want to know: xǐliǎn

xǐliǎn — "to wash one's face".

nǐ xǐliǎn le ma — Have you washed your face?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones in a row: xǐ is said with a rising tone before liǎn, though both are written with the third tone.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xǐliǎn is built from 洗 'to wash' and liǎn 'face'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese sejX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second, leamX, as the name of a kind of stew, so how it came to mean face is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: xǐliǎn
- Say it: xǐliǎn, once more
- Say it: nǐ xǐliǎn le ma — Have you washed your face?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to wash, then the Mandarin for to brush one's teeth, then say xǐliǎn again

Before you move on

What does xǐliǎn mean? ("To wash one's face".) Say it once more.

99.5 xǐzǎo — to have a shower; to have a bath

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to brush one's teeth, then the Mandarin for to wash one's face.

You'll want to know: xǐzǎo

xǐzǎo — "to have a shower; to have a bath".

wǒ wǎnshang xǐzǎo — I have a shower in the evening.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Two third tones again: xǐ rises before zǎo, and is still written xǐ.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xǐzǎo is built from 洗 and zǎo, both inherited from Middle Chinese, sejX and tsawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'to wash and bathe' and the second with the first: to wash.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: xǐzǎo
- Say it: xǐzǎo, once more
- Say it: wǒ wǎnshang xǐzǎo — I have a shower in the evening.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to brush one's teeth, then the Mandarin for to wash one's face, then say xǐzǎo again

Before you move on

What does xǐzǎo mean? ("To have a shower; to have a bath".) Say it once more.

99.6 shūtóu — to comb one's hair

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to wash one's face, then the Mandarin for to have a shower.

You'll want to know: shūtóu

shūtóu — "to comb one's hair".

wǒ zǎoshang shūtóu — I comb my hair in the morning.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shūtóu is built from shū 'to comb' and tóu 'head', both inherited from Middle Chinese, srjo and duw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as a comb, for putting the hair in order.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: shūtóu
- Say it: shūtóu, once more
- Say it: wǒ zǎoshang shūtóu — I comb my hair in the morning.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to wash one's face, then the Mandarin for to have a shower, then say shūtóu again

Before you move on

What does shūtóu mean? ("To comb one's hair".) Say it once more.

Chapter 100

Around Town

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the bank, the supermarket, the park, the library and the post office.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 100: I can name the bank, the supermarket, the park, the library and the post office.

100.1 yínháng — bank

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have a shower, then the Mandarin for to comb one's hair.

You'll want to know: yínháng

yínháng — "bank".

> yínháng zài nǎr — Where's the bank?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yínháng is built from yín 'silver' and háng 'a row', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngin and hang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). Háng is usually explained as a row of shops and then a trade; the step is not given there, so how the pair came to mean a bank is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: yínháng
- Say it: yínháng, once more
- Say it: yínháng zài nǎr — Where's the bank?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have a shower, then the Mandarin for to comb one's hair, then say yínháng again

Before you move on

What does yínháng mean? ("Bank".) Say it once more.

100.2 chāoshì — supermarket

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to comb one's hair, then the Mandarin for bank.

You'll want to know: chāoshì

chāoshì — "supermarket".

wǒ qù chāoshì mǎi shuǐguǒ — I'm off to the supermarket for some fruit.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chāoshì is built from chāo and shì 'market', both inherited from Middle Chinese, trhjew and dzyiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to leap'; 'super' is its sense in this modern word.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: chāoshì
- Say it: chāoshì, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù chāoshì mǎi shuǐguǒ — I'm off to the supermarket for some fruit.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to comb one's hair, then the Mandarin for bank, then say chāoshì again

Before you move on

What does chāoshì mean? ("Supermarket".) Say it once more.

100.3 gōngyuán — park

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bank, then the Mandarin for supermarket.

You'll want to know: gōngyuán

gōngyuán — "park".

wǒmen qù gōngyuán wán — We're going to the park to play.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gōngyuán is built from gōng 'public' and yuán 'garden', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kuwng and hjwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): a garden for everyone.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: gōngyuán
- Say it: gōngyuán, once more
- Say it: wǒmen qù gōngyuán wán — We're going to the park to play.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bank, then the Mandarin for supermarket, then say gōngyuán again

Before you move on

What does gōngyuán mean? ("Park".) Say it once more.

100.4 túshūguǎn — library

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for supermarket, then the Mandarin for park.

You'll want to know: túshūguǎn

túshūguǎn — "library".

wǒ qù túshūguǎn kàn shū — I'm going to the library to read.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of túshūguǎn is built from tú 'picture', 书 'book' and guǎn 'hall', all inherited from Middle Chinese, du, syo and kwanH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'to plan' and the last as a lodging house for guests.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: túshūguǎn
- Say it: túshūguǎn, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù túshūguǎn kàn shū — I'm going to the library to read.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for supermarket, then the Mandarin for park, then say túshūguǎn again

Before you move on

What does túshūguǎn mean? ("Library".) Say it once more.

100.5 yóujú — post office

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for park, then the Mandarin for library.

You'll want to know: yóujú

yóujú — "post office".

yóujú zài yínháng pángbiān — The post office is next to the bank.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yóujú is built from yóu 'post' and jú 'office', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuw and gjowk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as a lodge on the border and the second as a government office.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: yóujú
- Say it: yóujú, once more
- Say it: yóujú zài yínháng pángbiān — The post office is next to the bank.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for park, then the Mandarin for library, then say yóujú again

Before you move on

What does yóujú mean? ("Post office".) Say it once more.

Chapter 101

In the Kitchen

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the kitchen, cabbage, chopsticks, plates and a knife.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 101: I can name the kitchen, cabbage, chopsticks, plates and a knife.

101.1 chúfáng — kitchen

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for library, then the Mandarin for post office.

You'll want to know: chúfáng

chúfáng — "kitchen".

> māma zài chúfáng — Mum's in the kitchen.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chúfáng is built from chú and fáng 'room', both inherited from Middle Chinese, drju and bjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as the house where food is cooked.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: chúfáng
- Say it: chúfáng, once more
- Say it: māma zài chúfáng — Mum's in the kitchen.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for library, then the Mandarin for post office, then say chúfáng again

Before you move on

What does chúfáng mean? ("Kitchen".) Say it once more.

101.2 白菜 (báicài) — Chinese cabbage

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for post office, then the Mandarin for kitchen.

You'll want to know: 白菜

白菜 — báicài — "Chinese cabbage".

我去洗白菜 wǒ qù xǐ báicài — I'll go and wash the cabbage.

The new character, in pieces: 菜 — the grass piece on top, three strokes; under it a hand reaching down, four strokes; and at the foot the tree piece of 机, standing alone. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 白菜 (báicài) is built from 白 'white' and 菜 'vegetable', both inherited from Middle Chinese, baek and tshojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary says every plant that can be eaten is called tshojH; the white one is probably named for its pale stalks.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: báicài
- Say it: báicài, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù xǐ báicài — I'll go and wash the cabbage.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for post office, then the Mandarin for kitchen, then say báicài again

Before you move on

What does 白菜 mean? ("Chinese cabbage".) Say it once more.

101.3 菜 — the grass piece, a hand, the tree piece

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say báicài — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

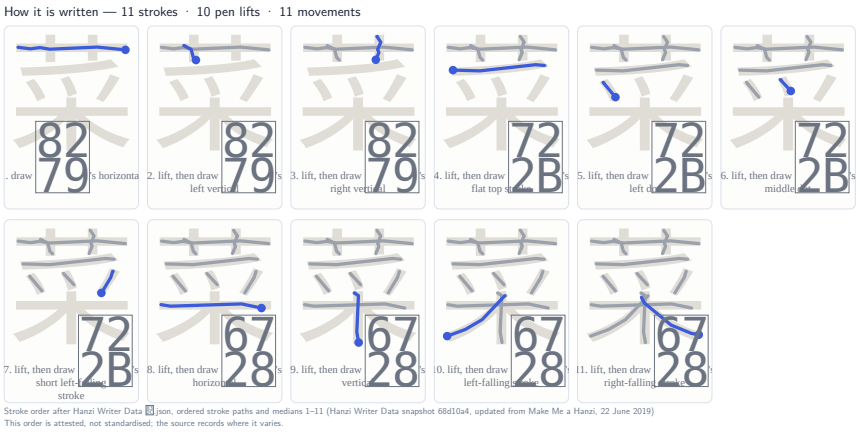
  机 白

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — jī, bái

Script — the grass piece, a hand, the tree piece



How 菜 is written, stroke by stroke

菜

Three pieces, top to bottom. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The grass piece, three strokes: a horizontal across the top, then two short verticals through it, left before right.

The hand, four strokes: a left-falling stroke across, two dots under it, left then middle, and a short left-falling stroke on the right.

The tree piece, four strokes, full width at the foot: a horizontal, a vertical down through it, a left-falling stroke and a long right-falling one.

3 + 4 + 4 = eleven.

Your turn

- Write it: 菜, all eleven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 菜? (Three — the grass piece, a hand, the tree piece.) Which character you know has the tree piece? (机, on its left.) How does 菜 end? (With a long right-falling stroke.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 菜, pinned stroke paths and medians.

101.4 kuàizi — chopsticks

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for kitchen, then the Mandarin for cabbage.

You'll want to know: kuàizi

kuàizi — "chopsticks".

wǒ de kuàizi ne — Where are my chopsticks?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kuàizi is built from kuài and the noun ending zi. The ending is inherited from Middle Chinese tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: kuàizi
- Say it: kuàizi, once more
- Say it: wǒ de kuàizi ne — Where are my chopsticks?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for kitchen, then the Mandarin for cabbage, then say kuàizi again

Before you move on

What does kuàizi mean? ("Chopsticks".) Say it once more.

101.5 pánzi — plate; dish

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for cabbage, then the Mandarin for chopsticks.

You'll want to know: pánzi

pánzi — "plate; dish".

zhège pánzi hěn gānjìng — This plate is nice and clean.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of pánzi is built from pán and the noun ending zi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, ban and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as the name of a vessel.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: pánzi
- Say it: pánzi, once more
- Say it: zhège pánzi hěn gānjìng — This plate is nice and clean.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for cabbage, then the Mandarin for chopsticks, then say pánzi again

Before you move on

What does pánzi mean? ("Plate; dish".) Say it once more.

101.6 dāo — knife

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for chopsticks, then the Mandarin for plate.

You'll want to know: dāo

dāo — "knife".

dāo zài zhuōzi shàngbian — The knife is on the table.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dāo is inherited from Middle Chinese taw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary glosses as a weapon, a blade for cutting things down. In the kitchen it is the knife.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: dāo
- Say it: dāo, once more
- Say it: dāo zài zhuōzi shàngbian — The knife is on the table.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for chopsticks, then the Mandarin for plate, then say dāo again

Before you move on

What does dāo mean? ("Knife".) Say it once more.

Chapter 102

Something to Drink

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for a drink: juice, cola or beer, and a biscuit.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 102: I can ask for a drink: juice, cola or beer, and a biscuit.

102.1 yǐnliào — drink; soft drink

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for plate, then the Mandarin for knife.

You'll want to know: yǐnliào

yǐnliào — "drink; soft drink".

> nǐ xiǎng hē shénme yǐnliào — What would you like to drink?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǐnliào is built from yǐn 'to drink' and liào, both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'imX and lew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second 'to measure' and lists it with a departing tone too, lewH, the one liào continues; how the pair came to mean a drink is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: yǐnliào
- Say it: yǐnliào, once more
- Say it: nǐ xiǎng hē shénme yǐnliào — What would you like to drink?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for plate, then the Mandarin for knife, then say yǐnliào again

Before you move on

What does yǐnliào mean? ("Drink; soft drink".) Say it once more.

102.2 guǒzhī — fruit juice

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for knife, then the Mandarin for soft drink.

You'll want to know: guǒzhī

guǒzhī — "fruit juice".

wǒ yào yì bēi guǒzhī — A glass of juice for me, please.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guǒzhī is built from guǒ 'fruit' and zhī 'juice', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kwaX and tsyip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the fruit of a tree' and 'liquid'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: guǒzhī
- Say it: guǒzhī, once more
- Say it: wǒ yào yì bēi guǒzhī — A glass of juice for me, please.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for knife, then the Mandarin for soft drink, then say guǒzhī again

Before you move on

What does guǒzhī mean? (“Fruit juice”.) Say it once more.

102.3 kělè — cola

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for soft drink, then the Mandarin for juice.

You’ll want to know: kělè

kělè — “cola”.

tāmen dōu hē kělè — They all drink cola.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kělè is borrowed from the name of a cola drink, usually traced to English cola; its two syllables are written with the characters for kě ’may’ and lè ’joy’, chosen for their sound.

What you’ve built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: kělè
- Say it: kělè, once more

- Say it: tāmen dōu hē kělè — They all drink cola.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for soft drink, then the Mandarin for juice, then say kělè again

Before you move on

What does kělè mean? ("Cola".) Say it once more.

102.4 píjiǔ — beer

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for juice, then the Mandarin for cola.

You'll want to know: píjiǔ

píjiǔ — "beer".

wǒ bù hē píjiǔ — I don't drink beer.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of píjiǔ is built from pí and jiǔ 'alcoholic drink'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese tsjuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the first is borrowed for its sound from a European word for beer, usually traced to English beer.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: píjiǔ
- Say it: píjiǔ, once more
- Say it: wǒ bù hē píjiǔ — I don't drink beer.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for juice, then the Mandarin for cola, then say píjiǔ again

Before you move on

What does píjiǔ mean? (“Beer”.) Say it once more.

102.5 bǐnggān — biscuit; cracker

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for cola, then the Mandarin for beer.

You’ll want to know: bǐnggān

bǐnggān — “biscuit; cracker”.

wǒ xiǎngyào yí kuài bǐnggān — I’d like a biscuit.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bǐnggān is built from bǐng, a flat cake, and gān ’dry’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjiengX and kan (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription); gān is the gān of gānjìng ’clean’.

What you’ve built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: bǐnggān
- Say it: bǐnggān, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎngyào yí kuài bǐnggān — I’d like a biscuit.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for cola, then the Mandarin for beer, then say bǐnggān again

Before you move on

What does bǐnggān mean? (“Biscuit; cracker”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 103

Using Things

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say use, take, throw away and repair, and say something is broken.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 103: I can say use, take, throw away and repair, and say something is broken.

103.1 用 (yòng) — to use

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for beer, then the Mandarin for biscuit.

You'll want to know: 用

用 — yòng — "to use".

我用水洗菜 wǒ yòng shuǐ xǐ cài — I wash the vegetables in water.

The new character, in pieces: 用 — the frame of the moon piece in 明, open at the foot, with two bars inside and a vertical down the middle. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 用 (yòng) is inherited from Middle Chinese yowngH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to employ' and 'by means of'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: yòng
- Say it: yòng, once more
- Say it: wǒ yòng shuǐ xǐ cài — I wash the vegetables in water.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for beer, then the Mandarin for biscuit, then say yòng again

Before you move on

What does 用 mean? ("To use".) Say it once more.

103.2 用 — the moon frame, two bars, a vertical

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say yòng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

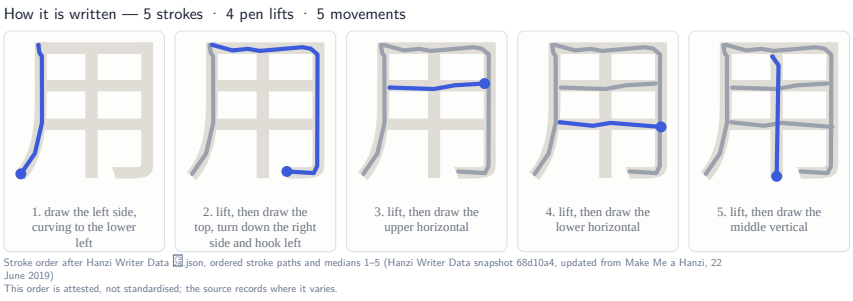
明 能

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — míng, néng

Script — the moon frame, two bars, a vertical



How 用 is written, stroke by stroke

用

The frame, two strokes, as on the right of 明: a left-falling stroke down the left side, then a stroke across the top that turns down the right side and hooks.

Two horizontals inside, one above the other.

A vertical down the middle, from the top through both bars to the foot.

2 + 2 + 1 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 用, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 用? (Five.) Which character you know has the same frame? (明, on its right.) Which stroke comes last? (The vertical down the middle.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 用, pinned stroke paths and medians.

103.3 ná — to take; to hold

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for biscuit, then the Mandarin for to use.

You'll want to know: ná

ná — "to take; to hold".

nǐ ná wǒ de yàoshi le ma — Did you take my keys?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of ná is probably inherited from Middle Chinese nrae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary lists under an older form of the character, glossed 'to pull'. That the two are one word is likely;

how 'to pull' became 'to take' is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: ná
- Say it: ná, once more
- Say it: nǐ ná wǒ de yàoshi le ma — Did you take my keys?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for biscuit, then the Mandarin for to use, then say ná again

Before you move on

What does ná mean? ("To take; to hold".) Say it once more.

103.4 rēng — to throw; to throw away

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to use, then the Mandarin for to take hold of.

You'll want to know: rēng

rēng — "to throw; to throw away".

bú yào rēng wǒ de shū — Don't throw my books away.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of rēng is inherited from Middle Chinese nying (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to pull'. The regular change from nying gives réng, with a rising tone, not the level rēng of today, and throwing is not given there; how the word came to its sound and sense is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: rēng
- Say it: rēng, once more
- Say it: bú yào rēng wǒ de shū — Don't throw my books away.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to use, then the Mandarin for to take hold of, then say rēng again

Before you move on

What does rēng mean? ("To throw; to throw away".) Say it once more.

103.5 xiū — to repair; to fix

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to take hold of, then the Mandarin for to throw away.

You'll want to know: xiū

xiū — "to repair; to fix".

tā huì xiū diànnǎo — He knows how to fix computers.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

xiū is inherited from Middle Chinese sjuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to put in order' and 'to adorn'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: xiū
- Say it: xiū, once more
- Say it: tā huì xiū diànnǎo — He knows how to fix computers.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to take hold of, then the Mandarin for to throw away, then say xiū again

Before you move on

What does xiū mean? ("To repair; to fix".) Say it once more.

103.6 huài — broken; bad

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to throw away, then the Mandarin for to repair.

You'll want to know: huài

huài — "broken; bad".

wǒ de shǒujī huài le — My phone's broken.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huài is inherited from Middle Chinese hweajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to break of itself'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: huài
- Say it: huài, once more

- Say it: wǒ de shǒujī huài le — My phone's broken.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to throw away, then the Mandarin for to repair, then say huài again

Before you move on

What does huài mean? ("Broken; bad".) Say it once more.

Chapter 104

On the Desk

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a notebook, a pen, a pencil, paper and a dictionary.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 104: I can name a notebook, a pen, a pencil, paper and a dictionary.

104.1 本子 (běnzi) — notebook

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to repair, then the Mandarin for broken.

You'll want to know: 本子

本子 — běnzi — "notebook".

> 我能用你的本子吗 wǒ néng yòng nǐ de běnzi ma — Could I use your notebook?

The new character, in pieces: 本 — the tree piece of 机, standing alone, with a short bar across its foot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 本子 (běnzi) is built from 本 and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, pwonX and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'root' and explains its shape as a tree with a mark at its foot; how it came to mean a book is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: běnzi
- Say it: běnzi, once more
- Say it: wǒ néng yòng nǐ de běnzi ma — Could I use your notebook?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to repair, then the Mandarin for broken, then say běnzi again

Before you move on

What does 本子 mean? ("Notebook".) Say it once more.

104.2 本 — the tree piece, and a bar at its foot

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say běnzi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  机 子

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — jī, zǐ

Script — the tree piece, and a bar at its foot

How 本 is written, stroke by stroke

本

The tree piece, four strokes, as on the left of 机 but full width: a horizontal, a vertical down through it, a left-falling stroke and a long right-falling one.

A short horizontal across the vertical, low down: the mark at the root.

4 + 1 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 本, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 本? (Five.) Where is the short bar? (Low down, across the vertical.) Which character you know has the same tree piece? (机.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 本, pinned stroke paths and medians.

104.3 bǐ — pen

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for broken, then the Mandarin for notebook.

You'll want to know: bǐ

bǐ — "pen".

nǐ yǒu bǐ ma — Have you got a pen?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

bǐ is inherited from Middle Chinese pit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), the writing brush; the dictionary repeats a story that a general of the Qin dynasty made the first one.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: bǐ
- Say it: bǐ, once more
- Say it: nǐ yǒu bǐ ma — Have you got a pen?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for broken, then the Mandarin for notebook, then say bǐ again

Before you move on

What does bǐ mean? ("Pen".) Say it once more.

104.4 qiānbǐ — pencil

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for notebook, then the Mandarin for pen.

You'll want to know: qiānbǐ

qiānbǐ — "pencil".

wǒ yòng qiānbǐ xiě zì — I write with a pencil.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qiānbǐ is built from qiān 'lead' and bǐ 'pen', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ywen and pit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as a grey-blue metal. The regular change from ywen gives yuán, not qiān; how the word came to its sound is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: qiānbǐ
- Say it: qiānbǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒ yòng qiānbǐ xiě zì — I write with a pencil.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for notebook, then the Mandarin for pen, then say qiānbǐ again

Before you move on

What does qiānbǐ mean? ("Pencil".) Say it once more.

104.5 zhǐ — paper

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for pen, then the Mandarin for pencil.

You'll want to know: zhǐ

zhǐ — "paper".

qǐng gěi wǒ yì zhāng zhǐ — Could I have a sheet of paper, please?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

zhǐ is inherited from Middle Chinese tsyeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), where the dictionary says paper is as smooth as a whetstone, and that in the Later Han it was made from old fishing nets and tree bark.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǐ
- Say it: zhǐ, once more
- Say it: qǐng gěi wǒ yì zhāng zhǐ — Could I have a sheet of paper, please?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for pen, then the Mandarin for pencil, then say zhǐ again

Before you move on

What does zhǐ mean? ("Paper".) Say it once more.

104.6 cídiǎn — dictionary

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for pencil, then the Mandarin for paper.

You'll want to know: cídiǎn

cídiǎn — "dictionary".

wǒ yǒu yì běn hànyǔ cídiǎn — I've got a Chinese dictionary.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cídiǎn is built from cí 'words' and diǎn 'a standard work', both inherited from Middle Chinese, zi and tenX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as a law and a classic.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: cídiǎn
- Say it: cídiǎn, once more
- Say it: wǒ yǒu yì běn hànyǔ cídiǎn — I've got a Chinese dictionary.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for pencil, then the Mandarin for paper, then say cídiǎn again

Before you move on

What does cídiǎn mean? ("Dictionary".) Say it once more.

104.7 Looking back: from Getting Washed to On the Desk

Say the Mandarin for to wash and to brush one's teeth.

Your turn

- Say it: to wash, to brush one's teeth, to wash one's face, to have a shower, to comb one's hair
- Say it: bank, supermarket, park, library, post office
- Say it: kitchen, cabbage, chopsticks, plate, knife
- Say it: soft drink, juice, cola, beer, biscuit
- Say it: to use, to take hold of, to throw away, to repair, broken

- Say it: notebook, pen, pencil, paper, dictionary
- Read it: 洗 菜 用 本 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

To wash? (洗, xǐ.) To brush one's teeth? (shuāyá.) To wash one's face? (xǐliǎn.) To have a shower? (xǐzǎo.) To comb one's hair? (shūtóu.) Bank? (yínháng.) Supermarket? (chāoshì.) Park? (gōngyuán.) Library? (túshūguǎn.) Post office? (yóujú.) Kitchen? (chúfáng.) Cabbage? (白菜, báicài.) Chopsticks? (kuàizi.) Plate? (pánzi.) Knife? (dāo.) Soft drink? (yǐnliào.) Juice? (guǒzhī.) Cola? (kělè.) Beer? (píjiǔ.) Biscuit? (bǐnggān.) To use? (用, yòng.) To take hold of? (ná.) To throw away? (rēng.) To repair? (xiū.) Broken? (huài.) Notebook? (本子, běnzi.) Pen? (bǐ.) Pencil? (qiānbǐ.) Paper? (zhǐ.) Dictionary? (cídiǎn.)

Chapter 105

In the Bathroom

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a towel, a toothbrush, toothpaste, soap and a mirror.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 105: I can name a towel, a toothbrush, toothpaste, soap and a mirror.

105.1 máojīn — towel

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for paper, then the Mandarin for dictionary.

You'll want to know: máojīn

máojīn — "towel".

> wǒ de máojīn hěn gānjìng — My towel is clean.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of máojīn is built from máo and jīn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, maw and kin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as hair and fur and explains the second as a cloth worn on the head. How the pair came to mean a towel is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: máojīn
- Say it: máojīn, once more
- Say it: wǒ de máojīn hěn gānjìng — My towel is clean.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for paper, then the Mandarin for dictionary, then say máojīn again

Before you move on

What does máojīn mean? ("Towel".) Say it once more.

105.2 yáshuā — toothbrush

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for dictionary, then the Mandarin for towel.

You'll want to know: yáshuā

yáshuā — "toothbrush".

wǒ de yáshuā zài nǎr — Where's my toothbrush?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yáshuā is built from yá 'tooth' and shuā 'brush', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngae and srwaet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the two parts of shuāyá, the other way round, make the thing.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: yáshuā
- Say it: yáshuā, once more
- Say it: wǒ de yáshuā zài nǎr — Where's my toothbrush?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for dictionary, then the Mandarin for towel, then say yáshuā again

Before you move on

What does yáshuā mean? ("Toothbrush".) Say it once more.

105.3 yágāo — toothpaste

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for towel, then the Mandarin for toothbrush.

You'll want to know: yágāo

yágāo — "toothpaste".

méiyǒu yágāo le — We're out of toothpaste.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yágāo is built from yá 'tooth' and gāo 'paste', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngae and kaw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as fat or grease.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: yágāo
- Say it: yágāo, once more

- Say it: méiyǒu yágāo le — We're out of toothpaste.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for towel, then the Mandarin for toothbrush, then say yágāo again

Before you move on

What does yágāo mean? ("Toothpaste".) Say it once more.

105.4 féizào — soap

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for toothbrush, then the Mandarin for toothpaste.

You'll want to know: féizào

féizào — "soap".

yòng féizào xǐ shǒu — Wash your hands with soap.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of féizào is built from féi 'fat' and zào, both inherited from Middle Chinese, bj+j and dzawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'fleshy', and the second as black silk, among other senses; how the pair came to mean soap is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: féizào
- Say it: féizào, once more
- Say it: yòng féizào xǐ shǒu — Wash your hands with soap.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for toothbrush, then the Mandarin for toothpaste, then say féizào again

Before you move on

What does féizào mean? (“Soap”.) Say it once more.

105.5 jìngzi — mirror

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for toothpaste, then the Mandarin for soap.

You’ll want to know: jìngzi

jìngzi — “mirror”.

xǐshǒujiān lǐ yǒu jìngzi ma — Is there a mirror in the toilets?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìngzi is built from jìng ’mirror’ and the noun ending zi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kjaengH and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription); the dictionary’s entry tells of a mirror sent as a gift to a king of old.

What you’ve built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: jìngzi
- Say it: jìngzi, once more
- Say it: xǐshǒujiān lǐ yǒu jìngzi ma — Is there a mirror in the toilets?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for toothpaste, then the Mandarin for soap, then say jìngzi again

Before you move on

What does jìngzi mean? (“Mirror”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 106

Stops and Stations

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for the station, and talk about the metro, buses and bikes.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 106: I can ask for the station, and talk about the metro, buses and bikes.

106.1 车站 (chēzhàn) — station; stop

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for soap, then the Mandarin for mirror.

You'll want to know: 车站

车站 — chēzhàn — "station; stop".

> 车站在哪儿 chēzhàn zài nǎr — Where's the station?

The new character, in pieces: 站 — on the left a five-stroke piece read lì, 'to stand'; on the right a vertical with a short bar to its right, over 口. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 车站 (chēzhàn) is built from 车 'vehicle' and 站 'to stand', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhae and treamH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as an everyday word for standing alone. A place where vehicles stand is the usual explanation, but the step is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: chēzhàn
- Say it: chēzhàn, once more
- Say it: chēzhàn zài nǎr — Where's the station?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for soap, then the Mandarin for mirror, then say chēzhàn again

Before you move on

What does 车站 mean? ("Station; stop".) Say it once more.

106.2 站 — the standing piece, then a mark over 口

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say chēzhàn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  车 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — chē, kǒu

Script — the standing piece, then a mark over 口

How 站 is written, stroke by stroke

站

Two pieces, left before right. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The standing piece, lì, five strokes: a dot at the top, a horizontal, a dot on the left and a short left-falling stroke on the right, and a stroke along the bottom that rises to the right.

The right piece, five strokes: a vertical with a short horizontal to its right; then 口 below, as you write it alone: the left side, the top that turns down, the bottom.

5 + 5 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 站, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 站? (Two — the standing piece, then the mark over 口.) What is the standing piece read? (lì.) Which piece you know ends 站? (口.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 站, pinned stroke paths and medians.

106.3 dìtiě — underground; metro

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for mirror, then the Mandarin for station.

You'll want to know: dìtiě

dìtiě — "underground; metro".

wǒmen zuò dìtiě qù — We'll take the metro.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dìtiě is built from dì 'ground' and tiě 'iron', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dijH and thet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as black metal. The railway under the ground is a modern sense.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: dìtiě
- Say it: dìtiě, once more
- Say it: wǒmen zuò dìtiě qù — We'll take the metro.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for mirror, then the Mandarin for station, then say dìtiě again

Before you move on

What does dìtiě mean? ("Underground; metro".) Say it once more.

106.4 gōngjiāochē — city bus

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for station, then the Mandarin for metro.

You'll want to know: gōngjiāochē

gōngjiāochē — "city bus".

gōngjiāochē lái le — Here comes the bus.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gōngjiāochē is built from gōng 'public', jiāo 'to cross' and 车 'vehicle', all inherited from Middle Chinese, kuwng, kaew and tsyhae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The bus is a modern sense of the whole.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: gōngjiāochē
- Say it: gōngjiāochē, once more
- Say it: gōngjiāochē lái le — Here comes the bus.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for station, then the Mandarin for metro, then say gōngjiāochē again

Before you move on

What does gōngjiāochē mean? ("City bus".) Say it once more.

106.5 zìxíngchē — bicycle

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for metro, then the Mandarin for bus.

You'll want to know: zìxíngchē

zìxíngchē — "bicycle".

> zhè shì wǒ de zìxíngchē — This is my bike.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zìxíngchē is built from zì 'self', xíng 'to go' and 车 'vehicle', all inherited from Middle Chinese, dzijH, haeng and tsyhae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses haeng 'to walk' and dzijH 'from'; the bicycle is a modern sense of the whole.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: zìxíngchē
- Say it: zìxíngchē, once more
- Say it: zhè shì wǒ de zìxíngchē — This is my bike.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for metro, then the Mandarin for bus, then say zìxíngchē again

Before you move on

What does zìxíngchē mean? ("Bicycle".) Say it once more.

106.6 qí — to ride (a bike or a horse)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bus, then the Mandarin for bicycle.

You'll want to know: qí

qí — "to ride (a bike or a horse)".

> wǒ qí zìxíngchē qù xuéxiào — I ride my bike to school.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

qí is inherited from Middle Chinese gje (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to sit astride a horse'.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: qí
- Say it: qí, once more
- Say it: wǒ qí zìxíngchē qù xuéxiào — I ride my bike to school.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bus, then the Mandarin for bicycle, then say qí again

Before you move on

What does qí mean? ("To ride (a bike or a horse)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 107

On the Move

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say jump, climb, carry, stop and leave.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 107: I can say jump, climb, carry, stop and leave.

107.1 tiào — to jump

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bicycle, then the Mandarin for to ride.

You'll want to know: tiào

tiào — "to jump".

> wǒ de gǒu hěn xǐhuan tiào — My dog loves jumping.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tiào is inherited from Middle Chinese dew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to leap'. The regular change from dew gives tiáo, with a rising tone, not the falling tiào of today; how it came to its tone is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: tiào
- Say it: tiào, once more
- Say it: wǒ de gǒu hěn xǐhuan tiào — My dog loves jumping.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bicycle, then the Mandarin for to ride, then say tiào again

Before you move on

What does tiào mean? ("To jump".) Say it once more.

107.2 pá — to climb; to crawl

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to ride, then the Mandarin for to jump.

You'll want to know: pá

pá — "to climb; to crawl".

wǒmen míngtiān qù pá shān — We're going up into the hills tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of pá is inherited from Middle Chinese bae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to scratch'; how it came to mean to climb is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: pá
- Say it: pá, once more
- Say it: wǒmen míngtiān qù pá shān — We're going up into the hills tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to ride, then the Mandarin for to jump, then say pá again

Before you move on

What does pá mean? ("To climb; to crawl".) Say it once more.

107.3 bān — to move house; to move (something heavy)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to jump, then the Mandarin for to climb.

You'll want to know: bān

bān — "to move house; to move (something heavy)".

nǐ néng bāng wǒ bān zhuōzi ma — Can you help me move the table?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bān has no older form on record under this character. The dictionary lists the same sound, pan (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), under an older character glossed 'to transport', which is probably the same word, though that is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: bān
- Say it: bān, once more
- Say it: nǐ néng bāng wǒ bān zhuōzi ma — Can you help me move the table?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to jump, then the Mandarin for to climb, then say bān again

Before you move on

What does bān mean? ("To move house; to move (something heavy)".) Say it once more.

107.4 tíng — to stop; to park

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to climb, then the Mandarin for to move house.

You'll want to know: tíng

tíng — "to stop; to park".

chē tíng le — The car has stopped.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tíng is inherited from Middle Chinese deng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to rest', 'to settle' and 'to stop'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: tíng
- Say it: tíng, once more
- Say it: chē tíng le — The car has stopped.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to climb, then the Mandarin for to move house, then say tíng again

Before you move on

What does tíng mean? ("To stop; to park".) Say it once more.

107.5 líkāi — to leave a place

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to move house, then the Mandarin for to stop.

You'll want to know: líkāi

líkāi — "to leave a place".

wǒmen jǐ diǎn líkāi — What time are we leaving?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of líkāi is built from lí 'to part' and 开 'to open', both inherited from Middle Chinese, lje and khoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary says parting at a short distance is lje, at a long one is another word.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: líkāi
- Say it: líkāi, once more
- Say it: wǒmen jǐ diǎn líkāi — What time are we leaving?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to move house, then the Mandarin for to stop, then say líkāi again

Before you move on

What does líkāi mean? ("To leave a place".) Say it once more.

Chapter 108

Trying It On

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask to try something on, change it, and talk about pairs, sizes and fit.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 108: I can ask to try something on, change it, and talk about pairs, sizes and fit.

108.1 试 (shì) — to try; to try on

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to stop, then the Mandarin for to leave a place.

You'll want to know: 试

试 — shì — "to try; to try on".

> 这个能试吗 zhège néng shì ma — Can I try this one on?

The new character, in pieces: 试 — the speech piece of 说 on the left; on the right six strokes: a horizontal across the top, a small three-stroke piece low under it, and a long stroke that slants down and hooks, with a dot at its top right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 试 (shì) is inherited from Middle Chinese syiH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to use'. Trying a thing by putting it to use is the usual explanation, but the step is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: shì
- Say it: shì, once more
- Say it: zhège néng shì ma — Can I try this one on?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to stop, then the Mandarin for to leave a place, then say shì again

Before you move on

What does 试 mean? ("To try; to try on".) Say it once more.

108.2 试 — the speech piece, then a slanting hook

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shì — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  说 请

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shuō, qǐng

Script — the speech piece, then a slanting hook

How 试 is written, stroke by stroke

试

Two pieces, left before right. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The speech piece, two strokes, as in 说: a dot, then a stroke across that turns down and rises.

The right piece, six strokes: a horizontal across the top; then, low on the left, a short horizontal, a vertical and a stroke that rises to the right; then one long stroke that slants down to the right and hooks up; and last a dot at the top right.

2 + 6 = eight.

Your turn

- Write it: 试, all eight, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 试? (Two — the speech piece, then the right piece.) Which characters you know start with the same piece? (说, 请, 课.) Which stroke comes last? (The dot at the top right.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 试, pinned stroke paths and medians.

108.3 huàn — to change; to exchange

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to leave a place, then the Mandarin for to try on.

You'll want to know: huàn

huàn — "to change; to exchange".

wǒ xiǎng huàn yí ge — I'd like to change it for another one.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huàn is inherited from Middle Chinese hwanH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to exchange'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: huàn
- Say it: huàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng huàn yí ge — I'd like to change it for another one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to leave a place, then the Mandarin for to try on, then say huàn again

Before you move on

What does huàn mean? ("To change; to exchange".) Say it once more.

108.4 shuāng — a pair of (a measure word)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to try on, then the Mandarin for to exchange.

You'll want to know: shuāng

shuāng — "a pair of (a measure word)".

wǒ xiǎng mǎi yì shuāng xié — I'd like to buy a pair of shoes.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shuāng is inherited from Middle Chinese sraewng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a pair, two of a kind'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: shuāng
- Say it: shuāng, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng mǎi yì shuāng xié — I'd like to buy a pair of shoes.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to try on, then the Mandarin for to exchange, then say shuāng again

Before you move on

What does shuāng mean? ("A pair of (a measure word)".) Say it once more.

108.5 大小 (dàxiǎo) — size

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to exchange, then the Mandarin for a pair of.

You'll want to know: 大小

大小 — dàxiǎo — "size".

> 我试了大小很好 wǒ shì le dàxiǎo hěn hǎo — I've tried it on, and the size is fine.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 大小 (dàxiǎo) is built from 大 'big' and 小 'small', both inherited from Middle Chinese, daH and sjewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): how big or small a thing is.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: dàxiǎo
- Say it: dàxiǎo, once more
- Say it: wǒ shì le dàxiǎo hěn hǎo — I've tried it on, and the size is fine.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to exchange, then the Mandarin for a pair of, then say dàxiǎo again

Before you move on

What does 大小 mean? ("Size".) Say it once more.

108.6 héshì — right; suitable; a good fit

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a pair of, then the Mandarin for size.

You'll want to know: héshì

héshì — "right; suitable; a good fit".

> zhè shuāng xié hěn héshì — These shoes fit well.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of héshì is built from hé and shì, both inherited from Middle Chinese, hop and syek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'to agree, to match' and the second 'good', among other senses.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: héshì
- Say it: héshì, once more
- Say it: zhè shuāng xié hěn héshì — These shoes fit well.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a pair of, then the Mandarin for size, then say héshì again

Before you move on

What does héshì mean? ("Right; suitable; a good fit".) Say it once more.

Chapter 109

Screens

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about going online, the television, photos, charging and downloading.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 109: I can talk about going online, the television, photos, charging and downloading.

109.1 上网 (shàngwǎng) — to go online

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for size, then the Mandarin for a good fit.

You'll want to know: 上网

上网 — shàngwǎng — "to go online".

> nǐ měitiān shàngwǎng ma — Do you go online every day?

The new character, in pieces: 网 — a frame open at the foot, like the outside of 两, with two small crosses inside. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 上网 (shàngwǎng) is built from 上 'to go up, to get on' and wǎng 'net', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyangX and mjangX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary describes the net as knotted cord for hunting and fishing. Getting on to the net is a modern sense.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: shàngwǎng
- Say it: shàngwǎng, once more
- Say it: nǐ měitiān shàngwǎng ma — Do you go online every day?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for size, then the Mandarin for a good fit, then say shàngwǎng again

Before you move on

What does 上网 mean? ("To go online".) Say it once more.

109.2 网 — the frame of 两, and two crosses

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shàngwǎng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

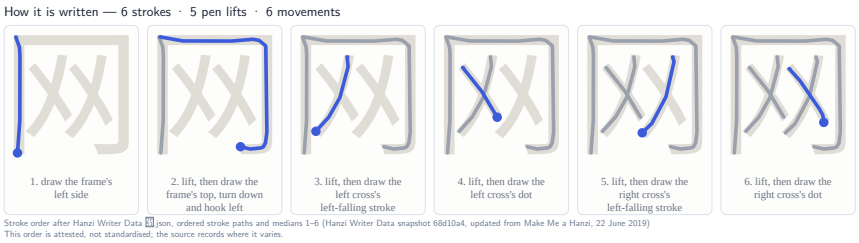
  两 上

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — liǎng, shàng

Script — the frame of 两, and two crosses



How 网 is written, stroke by stroke

网

The frame, two strokes, as in 两: a vertical down the left, then a stroke across the top that turns down the right side and hooks.

Two small crosses inside, two strokes each, left before right: a left-falling stroke, then a dot across it.

2 + 2 + 2 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 网, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 网? (Six.) Where have you written its frame? (In 两.) What is inside? (Two small crosses, left one first.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 网, pinned stroke paths and medians.

109.3 diànshì — television

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a good fit, then the Mandarin for to go online.

You'll want to know: diànshì

diànshì — "television".

wǒ wǎnshang kàn diànshì — I watch TV in the evening.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of diànshì is built from 电 'electricity' and shì 'to look', both inherited from Middle Chinese, denH and dzyijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as lightning. A modern word.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: diànshì
- Say it: diànshì, once more
- Say it: wǒ wǎnshang kàn diànshì — I watch TV in the evening.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a good fit, then the Mandarin for to go online, then say diànshì again

Before you move on

What does diànshì mean? ("Television".) Say it once more.

109.4 zhàopiàn — photo; photograph

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go online, then the Mandarin for television.

You'll want to know: zhàopiàn

zhàopiàn — "photo; photograph".

zhè shì wǒ jiārén de zhàopiàn — This is a photo of my family.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhàopiàn is built from zhào and piàn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyewH and phenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'bright' and the second as a piece of split wood. The photo is a modern sense of the pair.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: zhàopiàn
- Say it: zhàopiàn, once more
- Say it: zhè shì wǒ jiārén de zhàopiàn — This is a photo of my family.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go online, then the Mandarin for television, then say zhàopiàn again

Before you move on

What does zhàopiàn mean? ("Photo; photograph".) Say it once more.

109.5 chōngdiàn — to charge a battery

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for television, then the Mandarin for photo.

You'll want to know: chōngdiàn

chōngdiàn — "to charge a battery".

wǒ de shǒujī xūyào chōngdiàn — My phone needs charging.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chōngdiàn is built from chōng 'to fill' and 电 'electricity', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhuwng and denH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): to fill with electricity. A modern word.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: chōngdiàn
- Say it: chōngdiàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ de shǒujī xūyào chōngdiàn — My phone needs charging.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for television, then the Mandarin for photo, then say chōngdiàn again

Before you move on

What does chōngdiàn mean? ("To charge a battery".) Say it once more.

109.6 xiàzài — to download

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for photo, then the Mandarin for to charge a battery.

You'll want to know: xiàzài

xiàzài — "to download".

nǐ xiàzài le ma — Have you downloaded it?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiàzài is built from 下 'down' and zài 'to carry', both inherited from Middle Chinese, haeX and dzojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to go down' and 'to transport'. A modern word.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàzài
- Say it: xiàzài, once more
- Say it: nǐ xiàzài le ma — Have you downloaded it?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for photo, then the Mandarin for to charge a battery, then say xiàzài again

Before you move on

What does xiàzài mean? ("To download".) Say it once more.

Chapter 110

Things I Can Do

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I speak a foreign language, play the piano, paint and dance.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 110: I can say I speak a foreign language, play the piano, paint and dance.

110.1 外语 (wàiyǔ) — foreign language

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to charge a battery, then the Mandarin for to download.

You'll want to know: 外语

外语 — wàiyǔ — "foreign language".

> 我上网学外语 wǒ shàngwǎng xué wàiyǔ — I learn foreign languages online.

The new character, in pieces: 外 — on the left the three-stroke top half of 多; on the right a vertical with a dot beside it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 外语 (wàiyǔ) is built from 外 'outside' and 语 'speech', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngwajH and ngjoX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the speech from outside.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: wàiyǔ
- Say it: wàiyǔ, once more
- Say it: wǒ shàngwǎng xué wàiyǔ — I learn foreign languages online.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to charge a battery, then the Mandarin for to download, then say wàiyǔ again

Before you move on

What does 外语 mean? ("Foreign language".) Say it once more.

110.2 外 — the top of 多, then a vertical and a dot

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say wàiyǔ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

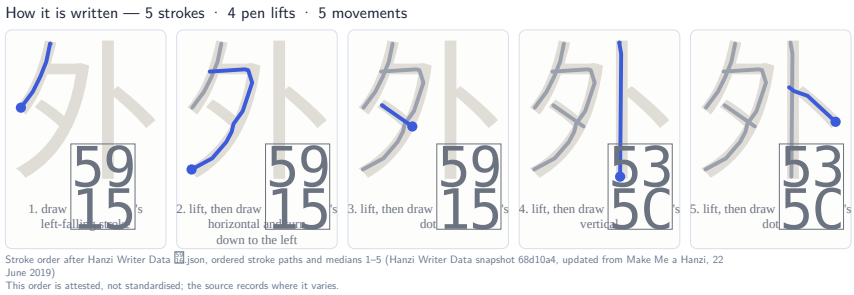
  多 语

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — duō, yǔ

Script — the top of 多, then a vertical and a dot



How 外 is written, stroke by stroke

外

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, three strokes, the top half of 多: a short left-falling stroke, a stroke across that turns and sweeps down to the left, and a dot inside.

The right piece, two strokes: a long vertical, and a dot to its right.

3 + 2 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 外, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 外? (Five.) Where have you written its left piece? (At the top of 多.) What is on the right? (A vertical and a dot.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 外, pinned stroke paths and medians.

110.3 gāngqín — piano

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to download, then the Mandarin for foreign language.

You'll want to know: gāngqín

gāngqín — "piano".

tā jiā yǒu gāngqín — Her family has a piano.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gāngqín is built from gāng 'steel' and qín, a stringed instrument, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kang and gim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary describes the second as an instrument of five strings, later seven. The piano is a modern sense of the pair.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: gāngqín
- Say it: gāngqín, once more
- Say it: tā jiā yǒu gāngqín — Her family has a piano.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to download, then the Mandarin for foreign language, then say gāngqín again

Before you move on

What does gāngqín mean? ("Piano".) Say it once more.

110.4 tán — to play an instrument; to pluck

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for foreign language, then the Mandarin for piano.

You'll want to know: tán

tán — "to play an instrument; to pluck".

wǒ huì tán gāngqín — I can play the piano.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tán is inherited from Middle Chinese dan (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to shoot' and named in a game of flicking pieces. Playing an instrument is not given there, so how the word came to that sense is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: tán
- Say it: tán, once more
- Say it: wǒ huì tán gāngqín — I can play the piano.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for foreign language, then the Mandarin for piano, then say tán again

Before you move on

What does tán mean? ("To play an instrument; to pluck".) Say it once more.

110.5 huàhuà — to paint pictures; to draw

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for piano, then the Mandarin for to play an instrument.

You'll want to know: huàhuà

huàhuà — "to paint pictures; to draw".

> háizi xǐhuan huàhuà — Children love painting.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huàhuà is built from huà 'to paint' and its object huà 'a picture', one word used twice, inherited from Middle Chinese hweaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary explains painting as laying the five colours on the likeness of things.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: huàhuà
- Say it: huàhuà, once more
- Say it: háizi xǐhuan huàhuà — Children love painting.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for piano, then the Mandarin for to play an instrument, then say huàhuà again

Before you move on

What does huàhuà mean? ("To paint pictures; to draw".) Say it once more.

110.6 tiàowǔ — to dance

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to play an instrument, then the Mandarin for to paint pictures.

You'll want to know: tiàowǔ

tiàowǔ — "to dance".

nǐ xǐhuan tiàowǔ ma — Do you like dancing?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tiàowǔ is built from tiào 'to leap' and wǔ 'dance', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dew and mjuX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as song and dance.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: tiàowǔ
- Say it: tiàowǔ, once more
- Say it: nǐ xǐhuan tiàowǔ ma — Do you like dancing?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to play an instrument, then the Mandarin for to paint pictures, then say tiàowǔ again

Before you move on

What does tiàowǔ mean? ("To dance".) Say it once more.

110.7 Looking back: from In the Bathroom to Things I Can Do

Say the Mandarin for towel and toothbrush.

Your turn

- Say it: towel, toothbrush, toothpaste, soap, mirror
- Say it: station, metro, bus, bicycle, to ride

- Say it: to jump, to climb, to move house, to stop, to leave a place
- Say it: to try on, to exchange, a pair of, size, a good fit
- Say it: to go online, television, photo, to charge a battery, to download
- Say it: foreign language, piano, to play an instrument, to paint pictures, to dance
- Read it: 站 试 网 外 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

Towel? (máojīn.) Toothbrush? (yáshuā.) Toothpaste? (yágāo.) Soap? (féizào.) Mirror? (jìngzi.) Station? (车站, chēzhàn.) Metro? (dìtiě.) Bus? (gōngjiāochē.) Bicycle? (zìxíngchē.) To ride? (qí.) To jump? (tiào.) To climb? (pá.) To move house? (bān.) To stop? (tíng.) To leave a place? (líkāi.) To try on? (试, shì.) To exchange? (huàn.) A pair of? (shuāng.) Size? (大小, dàxiǎo.) A good fit? (héshì.) To go online? (上网, shàngwǎng.) Television? (diànshì.) Photo? (zhàopiàn.) To charge a battery? (chōngdiàn.) To download? (xiàzài.) Foreign language? (外语, wàiyǔ.) Piano? (gāngqín.) To play an instrument? (tán.) To paint pictures? (huàhuà.) To dance? (tiàowǔ.)

Chapter 111

In Front and Behind

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say in front, behind, nearby and at the crossing, and say where to turn.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 111: I can say in front, behind, nearby and at the crossing, and say where to turn.

111.1 前边 (qiánbian) — in front; ahead

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to paint pictures, then the Mandarin for to dance.

You'll want to know: 前边

前边 — qiánbian — "in front; ahead".

> 前边是火车站 qiánbian shì huǒchēzhàn — The railway station is up ahead.

The new character, in pieces: 边 — lì, the foot of 男, inside the walking piece that runs down the left and along the foot of 这 and 进. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 前边 (qiánbian) is built from 前 'front' and 边 'side', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzen and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'first, before' and the second 'an edge'.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: qiánbian
- Say it: qiánbian, once more
- Say it: qiánbian shì huǒchēzhàn — The railway station is up ahead.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to paint pictures, then the Mandarin for to dance, then say qiánbian again

Before you move on

What does 前边 mean? ("In front; ahead".) Say it once more.

111.2 边 — the foot of 男, inside the walking piece

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say qiánbian — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  男 这 进

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — nán, zhè, jìn

Script — the foot of 男, inside the walking piece

How 边 is written, stroke by stroke

边

The inside first, two strokes, the foot of 男: a stroke across that turns down and hooks, then a left-falling stroke through it.

The walking piece, three strokes, written last, as in 这 and 进: a dot, a small zigzag down the left, and a long flat sweep along the foot.

2 + 3 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 边, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

Which comes first in 边, the inside or the walking piece? (The inside.) Where have you written that inside piece? (At the foot of 男.) Which characters you know end with the walking piece? (这 and 进.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 边, pinned stroke paths and medians.

111.3 hòubian — behind; at the back

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to dance, then the Mandarin for in front.

You'll want to know: hòubian

hòubian — "behind; at the back".

> xuéxiào hòubian yǒu yí ge gōngyuán — There's a park behind the school.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hòubian is built from hòu 'behind' and 边 'side', both inherited from Middle Chinese, huwX and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: hòubian
- Say it: hòubian, once more
- Say it: xuéxiào hòubian yǒu yí ge gōngyuán — There's a park behind the school.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to dance, then the Mandarin for in front, then say hòubian again

Before you move on

What does hòubian mean? ("Behind; at the back".) Say it once more.

111.4 fùjìn — nearby; in the area

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for in front, then the Mandarin for at the back.

You'll want to know: fùjìn

fùjìn — "nearby; in the area".

fùjìn yǒu yínháng ma — Is there a bank near here?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fùjìn is built from fù 'to attach' and jìn 'near', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjuH and gj+nX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: fùjìn
- Say it: fùjìn, once more
- Say it: fùjìn yǒu yínháng ma — Is there a bank near here?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for in front, then the Mandarin for at the back, then say fùjìn again

Before you move on

What does fùjìn mean? ("Nearby; in the area".) Say it once more.

111.5 lùkǒu — crossroads; junction

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for at the back, then the Mandarin for nearby.

You'll want to know: lùkǒu

lùkǒu — "crossroads; junction".

yínháng zài lùkǒu — The bank is at the crossroads.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lùkǒu is built from lù 'road' and 口 'mouth', both inherited from Middle Chinese, luH and khuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the mouth of a road.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: lùkǒu
- Say it: lùkǒu, once more
- Say it: yínháng zài lùkǒu — The bank is at the crossroads.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for at the back, then the Mandarin for nearby, then say lùkǒu again

Before you move on

What does lùkǒu mean? ("Crossroads; junction".) Say it once more.

111.6 guǎi — to turn a corner

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for nearby, then the Mandarin for crossroads.

You'll want to know: guǎi

guǎi — "to turn a corner".

zhèr néng guǎi ma — Can we turn here?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guǎi is inherited from Middle Chinese kweaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed as a stick, a thing for the hands and feet, probably a crutch; how it came to mean turning a corner is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: guǎi
- Say it: guǎi, once more
- Say it: zhèr néng guǎi ma — Can we turn here?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for nearby, then the Mandarin for crossroads, then say guǎi again

Before you move on

What does guǎi mean? ("To turn a corner".) Say it once more.

Chapter 112

Way In, Way Out

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say the words on signs for the way out, the way in, push, pull and the stairs.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 112: I can say the words on signs for the way out, the way in, push, pull and the stairs.

112.1 出口 (chūkǒu) — exit; way out

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for crossroads, then the Mandarin for to turn a corner.

You'll want to know: 出口

出口 — chūkǒu — "exit; way out".

> 出口在前边 chūkǒu zài qiánbian — The way out is up ahead.

The new character, in pieces: 出 — two halves like 山, one on top of the other, with one long vertical down through both. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 出口 (chūkǒu) is built from 出 'to go out' and 口 'mouth, opening', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwit and khuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the opening you go out by.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: chūkǒu
- Say it: chūkǒu, once more
- Say it: chūkǒu zài qiánbian — The way out is up ahead.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for crossroads, then the Mandarin for to turn a corner, then say chūkǒu again

Before you move on

What does 出口 mean? ("Exit; way out".) Say it once more.

112.2 出 — two halves like 山, one long vertical

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say chūkǒu — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

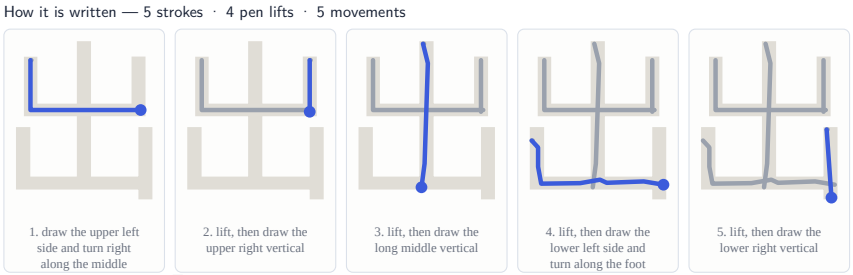
  山 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shān, kǒu

Script — two halves like 山, one long vertical



How 出 is written, stroke by stroke

出

The top half, two strokes: a short vertical that turns right along its foot, then the short vertical on the right.

The long vertical, down the middle, through the top half and on into the bottom one.

The bottom half, two strokes, wider: a vertical that turns right along the foot, then the vertical on the right.

2 + 1 + 2 = five. Unlike 山, the middle vertical comes third.

Your turn

- Write it: 出, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 出? (Five.) Which stroke comes third? (The long vertical down the middle.) Which character you know does it look like, twice? (山.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 出, pinned stroke paths and medians.

112.3 rùkǒu — entrance; way in

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to turn a corner, then the Mandarin for exit.

You'll want to know: rùkǒu

rùkǒu — "entrance; way in".

rùkǒu zài nàr — The way in is over there.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of rùkǒu is built from rù 'to go in' and 口 'opening', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyip and khuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'inside, to take in' and 'mouth'.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: rùkǒu
- Say it: rùkǒu, once more
- Say it: rùkǒu zài nàr — The way in is over there.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to turn a corner, then the Mandarin for exit, then say rùkǒu again

Before you move on

What does rùkǒu mean? ("Entrance; way in".) Say it once more.

112.4 tuī — to push

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for exit, then the Mandarin for entrance.

You'll want to know: tuī

tuī — "to push".

qǐng tuī mén — Push the door, please.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tuī is inherited from Middle Chinese thwoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the character 'to push' under a second reading, tsyhwij, and lists thwoj beside it; tuī continues thwoj.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: tuī
- Say it: tuī, once more
- Say it: qǐng tuī mén — Push the door, please.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for exit, then the Mandarin for entrance, then say tuī again

Before you move on

What does tuī mean? ("To push".) Say it once more.

112.5 lā — to pull

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for entrance, then the Mandarin for to push.

You'll want to know: lā

lā — "to pull".

bú yào tuī qǐng lā — Don't push, pull.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lā is inherited from Middle Chinese lop (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to break' and 'to crush'. The regular change from lop would give là, not lā, and pulling is not given there; how the word came to its sound and sense is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: lā
- Say it: lā, once more
- Say it: bú yào tuī qǐng lā — Don't push, pull.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for entrance, then the Mandarin for to push, then say lā again

Before you move on

What does lā mean? ("To pull".) Say it once more.

112.6 lóutī — stairs; staircase

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to push, then the Mandarin for to pull.

You'll want to know: lóutī

lóutī — "stairs; staircase".

lóutī zài ménkǒu pángbiān — The stairs are next to the doorway.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lóutī is built from lóu and tī, both inherited from Middle Chinese, luw and thej (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a house built on a house' and 'wooden steps'.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: lóutī
- Say it: lóutī, once more

- Say it: lóutī zài ménkǒu pángbiān — The stairs are next to the doorway.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to push, then the Mandarin for to pull, then say lóutī again

Before you move on

What does lóutī mean? (“Stairs; staircase”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 113

Cooking

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say cut, boil, stir-fry, roast and fry.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 113: I can say cut, boil, stir-fry, roast and fry.

113.1 qiē — to cut; to slice

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to pull, then the Mandarin for stairs.

You'll want to know: qiē

qiē — "to cut; to slice".

wǒ qiē cài — I'll chop the vegetables.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qiē is inherited from Middle Chinese tshet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to cut' and 'to carve'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: qiē
- Say it: qiē, once more
- Say it: wǒ qiē cài — I'll chop the vegetables.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to pull, then the Mandarin for stairs, then say qiē again

Before you move on

What does qiē mean? ("To cut; to slice".) Say it once more.

113.2 zhǔ — to boil; to cook in water

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for stairs, then the Mandarin for to slice.

You'll want to know: zhǔ

zhǔ — "to boil; to cook in water".

wǒmen zhǔ jiǎozi — We're boiling dumplings.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhǔ is inherited from Middle Chinese tsyoX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), listed under a variant form of the character and glossed 'to cook'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǔ
- Say it: zhǔ, once more

- Say it: wǒmen zhǔ jiǎozi — We're boiling dumplings.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for stairs, then the Mandarin for to slice, then say zhǔ again

Before you move on

What does zhǔ mean? ("To boil; to cook in water".) Say it once more.

113.3 chǎo — to stir-fry

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to slice, then the Mandarin for to boil.

You'll want to know: chǎo

chǎo — "to stir-fry".

nǐ huì chǎo cài ma — Can you stir-fry vegetables?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chǎo is inherited from Middle Chinese tsrhaewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to roast dry'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: chǎo
- Say it: chǎo, once more
- Say it: nǐ huì chǎo cài ma — Can you stir-fry vegetables?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to slice, then the Mandarin for to boil, then say chǎo again

Before you move on

What does chǎo mean? ("To stir-fry".) Say it once more.

113.4 kǎo — to roast; to bake

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to boil, then the Mandarin for to stir-fry.

You'll want to know: kǎo

kǎo — "to roast; to bake".

wǒmen kǎo miànbāo — We're making toast.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kǎo is the everyday word for roasting and baking. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: kǎo
- Say it: kǎo, once more
- Say it: wǒmen kǎo miànbāo — We're making toast.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to boil, then the Mandarin for to stir-fry, then say kǎo again

Before you move on

What does kǎo mean? ("To roast; to bake".) Say it once more.

113.5 jiān — to fry (in a little oil)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to stir-fry, then the Mandarin for to roast.

You'll want to know: jiān

jiān — "to fry (in a little oil)".

wǒ huì jiān jīdàn — I can fry an egg.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiān is inherited from Middle Chinese tsjen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to cook until done'. Frying in a little oil is the sense today; the step is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: jiān
- Say it: jiān, once more
- Say it: wǒ huì jiān jīdàn — I can fry an egg.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to stir-fry, then the Mandarin for to roast, then say jiān again

Before you move on

What does jiān mean? ("To fry (in a little oil)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 114

Paying

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for the bill, pay in cash or by card, and get my change.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 114: I can ask for the bill, pay in cash or by card, and get my change.

114.1 mǎidān — to pay the bill

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to roast, then the Mandarin for to fry.

You'll want to know: mǎidān

mǎidān — "to pay the bill".

> fúwùyuán mǎidān — Excuse me, the bill, please!

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of mǎidān is built from 买 'to buy' and dān, both inherited from Middle Chinese, meaX and tan (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second 'single'. Paying the bill is a modern sense, and how the pair came to it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: mǎidān
- Say it: mǎidān, once more
- Say it: fúwùyuán mǎidān — Excuse me, the bill, please!
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to roast, then the Mandarin for to fry, then say mǎidān again

Before you move on

What does mǎidān mean? ("To pay the bill".) Say it once more.

114.2 fù — to pay

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to fry, then the Mandarin for to pay the bill.

You'll want to know: fù fù — "to pay".

wǒ fù qián — I'll pay.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fù is inherited from Middle Chinese pjuH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to give'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: fù
- Say it: fù, once more
- Say it: wǒ fù qián — I'll pay.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to fry, then the Mandarin for to pay the bill, then say fù again

Before you move on

What does fù mean? ("To pay".) Say it once more.

114.3 xiànjīn — cash

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to pay the bill, then the Mandarin for to pay.

You'll want to know: xiànjīn

xiànjīn — "cash".

nǐ yǒu xiànjīn ma — Have you got any cash?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiànjīn is built from xiàn and jīn 'gold, money', both inherited from Middle Chinese, henH and kim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to show'; it is the xiàn of xiànzài 'now', and money there and then is the likely sense of the pair, though it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: xiànjīn
- Say it: xiànjīn, once more
- Say it: nǐ yǒu xiànjīn ma — Have you got any cash?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to pay the bill, then the Mandarin for to pay, then say xiànjīn again

Before you move on

What does xiànjīn mean? ("Cash".) Say it once more.

114.4 shuākǎ — to pay by card

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to pay, then the Mandarin for cash.

You'll want to know: shuākǎ

shuākǎ — "to pay by card".

wǒ kěyǐ shuākǎ ma — Can I pay by card?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
kěyǐ is said kéyǐ: two third tones, and the first rises.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shuākǎ is built from shuā 'to brush, to swipe' and kǎ 'card'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese srwaet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the second is borrowed, usually traced to English card.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: shuākǎ
- Say it: shuākǎ, once more
- Say it: wǒ kěyǐ shuākǎ ma — Can I pay by card?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to pay, then the Mandarin for cash, then say shuākǎ again

Before you move on

What does shuākǎ mean? ("To pay by card".) Say it once more.

114.5 zhǎoqián — to give change

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for cash, then the Mandarin for to pay by card.

You'll want to know: zhǎoqián

zhǎoqián — "to give change".

tā méiyǒu zhǎoqián — He didn't give me my change.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhǎoqián is built from zhǎo 'to look for' and qián 'money'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese dzjen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǎoqián
- Say it: zhǎoqián, once more
- Say it: tā méiyǒu zhǎoqián — He didn't give me my change.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for cash, then the Mandarin for to pay by card, then say zhǎoqián again

Before you move on

What does zhǎoqián mean? ("To give change".) Say it once more.

Chapter 115

Careful!

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say be careful, no smoking, pay attention and dangerous.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 115: I can say be careful, no smoking, pay attention and dangerous.

115.1 小心 (xiǎoxīn) — to be careful; to mind (something)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to pay by card, then the Mandarin for to give change.

You'll want to know: 小心

小心 — xiǎoxīn — "to be careful; to mind (something)".

> 出门小心车 chūmén xiǎoxīn chē — Mind the traffic when you go out.

The new character, in pieces: 心 — four strokes: a dot, a long hook lying along the bottom, and two dots, the foot of 想. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 小心 (xiǎoxīn) is built from 小 'small' and 心 'heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjewX and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). How a small heart came to mean care is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: xiǎoxīn
- Say it: xiǎoxīn, once more
- Say it: chūmén xiǎoxīn chē — Mind the traffic when you go out.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to pay by card, then the Mandarin for to give change, then say xiǎoxīn again

Before you move on

What does 小心 mean? ("To be careful; to mind (something)".) Say it once more.

115.2 心 — a dot, a lying hook, two dots

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xiǎoxīn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

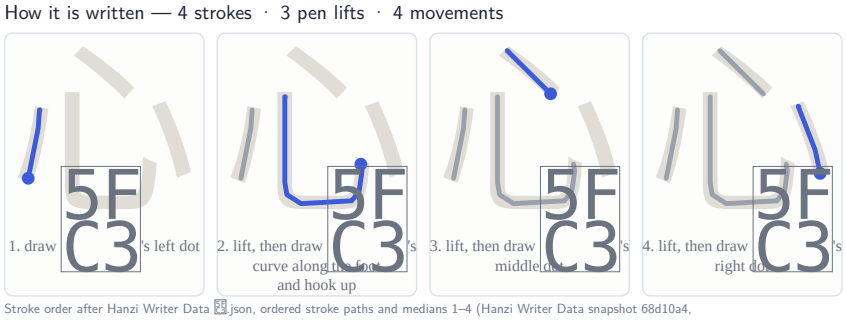
  想 小

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — xiǎng, xiǎo

Script — a dot, a lying hook, two dots



How 忄 is written, stroke by stroke

忄

A dot on the left, slanting down.

A long hook lying along the bottom, curving up at the right and hooking in.

Two dots above it, the middle one, then the right one.

1 + 1 + 2 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 忄, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 忄? (Four.) Which stroke is the long one? (The hook lying along the bottom, second.) Where have you written it before? (At the foot of 想.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 忄, pinned stroke paths and medians.

115.3 xīyān — to smoke

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to give change, then the Mandarin for to be careful.

You'll want to know: xīyān

xīyān — "to smoke".

nǐ xīyān ma — Do you smoke?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xīyān is built from xī 'to breathe in' and yān 'smoke', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xip and 'en (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: xīyān
- Say it: xīyān, once more
- Say it: nǐ xīyān ma — Do you smoke?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to give change, then the Mandarin for to be careful, then say xīyān again

Before you move on

What does xīyān mean? ("To smoke".) Say it once more.

115.4 jìnzhǐ — to forbid; no (on signs)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be careful, then the Mandarin for to smoke.

You'll want to know: jìnzhǐ

jìnzhǐ — "to forbid; no (on signs)".

zhèr jìnzhǐ xīyān — No smoking here.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìnzhǐ is built from jìn and zhǐ, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kimH and tsyiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), and the dictionary glosses both 'to stop'.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: jìnzhǐ
- Say it: jìnzhǐ, once more
- Say it: zhèr jìnzhǐ xīyān — No smoking here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be careful, then the Mandarin for to smoke, then say jìnzhǐ again

Before you move on

What does jìnzhǐ mean? ("To forbid; no (on signs)".) Say it once more.

115.5 zhùyì — to pay attention; to take care

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to smoke, then the Mandarin for to forbid.

You'll want to know: zhùyì

zhùyì — "to pay attention; to take care".

qǐng zhùyì nǐ de bāo — Please keep an eye on your bag.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhùyì is built from zhù 'to pour into' and yì 'mind', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyuH and 'iH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): to pour the mind into something.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: zhùyì
- Say it: zhùyì, once more
- Say it: qǐng zhùyì nǐ de bāo — Please keep an eye on your bag.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to smoke, then the Mandarin for to forbid, then say zhùyì again

Before you move on

What does zhùyì mean? ("To pay attention; to take care".) Say it once more.

115.6 wēixiǎn — dangerous

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to forbid, then the Mandarin for to pay attention.

You'll want to know: wēixiǎn

wēixiǎn — "dangerous".

zhèr hěn wēixiǎn — It's dangerous here.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wēixiǎn is built from wēi and xiǎn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngjwe and xjemX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'unsafe' and 'perilous, hard to pass'. The regular change from ngjwe gives wéi, with a rising tone; the level wēi of today is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: wēixiǎn
- Say it: wēixiǎn, once more
- Say it: zhèr hěn wēixiǎn — It's dangerous here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to forbid, then the Mandarin for to pay attention, then say wēixiǎn again

Before you move on

What does wēixiǎn mean? ("Dangerous".) Say it once more.

Chapter 116

Things I Carry

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I have my wallet, passport, watch and umbrella, and say I have lost something.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 116: I can say I have my wallet, passport, watch and umbrella, and say I have lost something.

116.1 qiánbāo — wallet; purse

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to pay attention, then the Mandarin for dangerous.

You'll want to know: qiánbāo

qiánbāo — "wallet; purse".

> wǒ de qiánbāo zài bāo lǐ — My wallet's in my bag.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qiánbāo is built from qián 'money' and bāo 'to wrap', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzjen and paew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: qiánbāo
- Say it: qiánbāo, once more
- Say it: wǒ de qiánbāo zài bāo lǐ — My wallet's in my bag.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to pay attention, then the Mandarin for dangerous, then say qiánbāo again

Before you move on

What does qiánbāo mean? ("Wallet; purse".) Say it once more.

116.2 hùzhào — passport

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for dangerous, then the Mandarin for wallet.

You'll want to know: hùzhào

hùzhào — "passport".

nǐ dài hùzhào le ma — Have you brought your passport?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hùzhào is built from hù 'to protect' and zhào 'bright', both inherited from Middle Chinese, huH and tsyewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The passport is a modern sense of the pair, and how it came to it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: hùzhào
- Say it: hùzhào, once more
- Say it: nǐ dài hùzhào le ma — Have you brought your passport?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for dangerous, then the Mandarin for wallet, then say hùzhào again

Before you move on

What does hùzhào mean? ("Passport".) Say it once more.

116.3 shǒubiǎo — wristwatch

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for wallet, then the Mandarin for passport.

You'll want to know: shǒubiǎo

shǒubiǎo — "wristwatch".

nǐ de shǒubiǎo hěn hǎokàn — Your watch is lovely.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Two third tones: shǒu rises before biǎo, and is still written shǒu.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shǒubiǎo is built from 手 'hand' and biǎo, both inherited from Middle Chinese, syuwX and pjewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second 'to make clear' and 'an outer garment'. The watch is a modern sense, and how biǎo came to it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: shǒubiǎo
- Say it: shǒubiǎo, once more
- Say it: nǐ de shǒubiǎo hěn hǎokàn — Your watch is lovely.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for wallet, then the Mandarin for passport, then say shǒubiǎo again

Before you move on

What does shǒubiǎo mean? ("Wristwatch".) Say it once more.

116.4 yǔsǎn — umbrella

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for passport, then the Mandarin for wristwatch.

You'll want to know: yǔsǎn

yǔsǎn — "umbrella".

xiàyǔ le nǐ dài yǔsǎn le ma — It's raining; have you got an umbrella?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Two third tones: yǔ rises before sǎn, and is still written yǔ.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǔsǎn is built from 雨 'rain' and sǎn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuX and sanX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as a canopy.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: yǔsǎn
- Say it: yǔsǎn, once more
- Say it: xiàyǔ le nǐ dài yǔsǎn le ma — It's raining; have you got an umbrella?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for passport, then the Mandarin for wristwatch, then say yǔsǎn again

Before you move on

What does yǔsǎn mean? ("Umbrella".) Say it once more.

116.5 diū — to lose (a thing)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for wristwatch, then the Mandarin for umbrella.

You'll want to know: diū

diū — "to lose (a thing)".

wǒ de yàoshi diū le — I've lost my keys.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of diū is the everyday verb for losing a thing. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: diū
- Say it: diū, once more

- Say it: wǒ de yàoshi diū le — I've lost my keys.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for wristwatch, then the Mandarin for umbrella, then say diū again

Before you move on

What does diū mean? ("To lose (a thing)".) Say it once more.

116.6 Looking back: from In Front and Behind to Things I Carry

Say the Mandarin for in front and at the back.

Your turn

- Say it: in front, at the back, nearby, crossroads, to turn a corner
- Say it: exit, entrance, to push, to pull, stairs
- Say it: to slice, to boil, to stir-fry, to roast, to fry
- Say it: to pay the bill, to pay, cash, to pay by card, to give change
- Say it: to be careful, to smoke, to forbid, to pay attention, dangerous
- Say it: wallet, passport, wristwatch, umbrella, to lose
- Read it: 边 出 心 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

In front? (前边, qiánbian.) At the back? (hòubian.) Nearby? (fùjìn.) Crossroads? (lùkǒu.) To turn a corner? (guǎi.) Exit? (出口, chūkǒu.) Entrance? (rùkǒu.) To push? (tuī.) To pull? (lā.) Stairs? (lóutī.) To slice? (qiē.) To boil? (zhǔ.) To stir-fry? (chǎo.) To roast? (kǎo.) To fry? (jiān.) To pay the bill? (mǎidān.) To pay? (fù.) Cash? (xiànjīn.) To pay by card? (shuākǎ.) To give change? (zhǎoqián.) To be careful? (小心, xiǎoxīn.) To smoke? (xīyān.) To forbid? (jìnzhǐ.) To pay attention? (zhùyì.) Dangerous? (wēixiǎn.) Wallet? (qiánbāo.) Passport? (hùzhào.) Wristwatch? (shǒubiǎo.) Umbrella? (yǔsǎn.) To lose? (diū.)

Chapter 117

Which Way?

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say east, south, west and north, and ask which way to go.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 117: I can say east, south, west and north, and ask which way to go.

117.1 dōngbian — the east; on the east side

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for umbrella, then the Mandarin for to lose.

You'll want to know: dōngbian

dōngbian — "the east; on the east side".

> chēzhàn zài dōngbian — The station is on the east side.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dōngbian is built from dōng 'east' and 边 'side', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tuwng and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary calls the east the direction of spring, and repeats an old reading of the character as the sun inside a tree.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: dōngbian
- Say it: dōngbian, once more
- Say it: chēzhàn zài dōngbian — The station is on the east side.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for umbrella, then the Mandarin for to lose, then say dōngbian again

Before you move on

What does dōngbian mean? ("The east; on the east side".) Say it once more.

117.2 nánbian — the south; on the south side

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to lose, then the Mandarin for the east.

You'll want to know: nánbian

nánbian — "the south; on the south side".

gōngyuán zài nánbian — The park is to the south.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nánbian is built from nán 'south' and 边 'side', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nom and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary calls the south the direction of fire.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: nánbian
- Say it: nánbian, once more
- Say it: gōngyuán zài nánbian — The park is to the south.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to lose, then the Mandarin for the east, then say nánbian again

Before you move on

What does nánbian mean? ("The south; on the south side".) Say it once more.

117.3 xībian — the west; on the west side

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the east, then the Mandarin for the south.

You'll want to know: xībian

xībian — "the west; on the west side".

xībian yǒu shān — There are hills to the west.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xībian is built from xī 'west' and 边 'side', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sej and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary calls the west the direction of autumn, and explains the character as a bird settling on its nest when the sun is in the west.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: xībian
- Say it: xībian, once more
- Say it: xībian yǒu shān — There are hills to the west.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the east, then the Mandarin for the south, then say xībian again

Before you move on

What does xībian mean? ("The west; on the west side".) Say it once more.

117.4 běibian — the north; on the north side

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the south, then the Mandarin for the west.

You'll want to know: běibian

běibian — "the north; on the north side".

Běijīng zài Zhōngguó de běibian — Beijing is in the north of China.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of běibian is built from běi 'north' and 边 'side', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pok and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: běibian
- Say it: běibian, once more
- Say it: Běijīng zài Zhōngguó de běibian — Beijing is in the north of China.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the south, then the Mandarin for the west, then say běibian again

Before you move on

What does běibian mean? ("The north; on the north side".) Say it once more.

117.5 fāngxiàng — direction; way

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the west, then the Mandarin for the north.

You'll want to know: fāngxiàng

fāngxiàng — "direction; way".

chēzhàn zài nǎge fāngxiàng — Which way is the station?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fāngxiàng is built from fāng 'side, region' and xiàng 'to face', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjang and xjangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the side you face.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: fāngxiàng
- Say it: fāngxiàng, once more
- Say it: chēzhàn zài nǎge fāngxiàng — Which way is the station?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the west, then the Mandarin for the north, then say fāngxiàng again

Before you move on

What does fāngxiàng mean? ("Direction; way".) Say it once more.

Chapter 118

Sending Things

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can post a parcel, talk about letters and text messages, and say receive.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 118: I can post a parcel, talk about letters and text messages, and say receive.

118.1 bāoguǒ — parcel; package

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the north, then the Mandarin for direction.

You'll want to know: bāoguǒ

bāoguǒ — "parcel; package".

> zhège bāoguǒ shì nǐ de ma — Is this parcel yours?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bāoguǒ is built from bāo and guǒ, both inherited from Middle Chinese, paew and kwaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second 'to wrap, to bind', and gives the pair itself as the gloss of the first.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: bāoguǒ
- Say it: bāoguǒ, once more
- Say it: zhège bāoguǒ shì nǐ de ma — Is this parcel yours?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the north, then the Mandarin for direction, then say bāoguǒ again

Before you move on

What does bāoguǒ mean? ("Parcel; package".) Say it once more.

118.2 jì — to post; to send by post

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for direction, then the Mandarin for parcel.

You'll want to know: jì

jì — "to post; to send by post".

wǒ qù yóujú jì bāoguǒ — I'm going to the post office to send a parcel.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jì is inherited from Middle Chinese kjeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to entrust to someone'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: jì
- Say it: jì, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù yóujú jì bāoguǒ — I'm going to the post office to send a parcel.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for direction, then the Mandarin for parcel, then say jì again

Before you move on

What does jì mean? ("To post; to send by post".) Say it once more.

118.3 xìn — letter (in the post)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for parcel, then the Mandarin for to post.

You'll want to know: xìn

xìn — "letter (in the post)".

wǒ xiǎng gěi péngyou xiě xìn — I'd like to write to a friend.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

xìn is inherited from Middle Chinese sinH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'trust' and 'proof'; how it came to mean a letter is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: xìn
- Say it: xìn, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng gěi péngyou xiě xìn — I'd like to write to a friend.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for parcel, then the Mandarin for to post, then say xìn again

Before you move on

What does xìn mean? ("Letter (in the post)".) Say it once more.

118.4 duǎnxìn — text message

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to post, then the Mandarin for letter.

You'll want to know: duǎnxìn

duǎnxìn — "text message".

wǒ gěi māma xiě duǎnxìn — I'm writing a text to my mum.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of duǎnxìn is built from duǎn 'short' and xìn 'letter', both inherited from Middle Chinese, twanX and sinH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): a short letter.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: duǎnxìn
- Say it: duǎnxìn, once more

- Say it: wǒ gěi māma xiě duǎnxìn — I'm writing a text to my mum.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to post, then the Mandarin for letter, then say duǎnxìn again

Before you move on

What does duǎnxìn mean? ("Text message".) Say it once more.

118.5 shōu — to receive; to accept

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for letter, then the Mandarin for text message.

You'll want to know: shōu

shōu — "to receive; to accept".

tā bù shōu qián — He won't take any money.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shōu is inherited from Middle Chinese syuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to gather in' and 'to seize'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: shōu
- Say it: shōu, once more
- Say it: tā bù shōu qián — He won't take any money.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for letter, then the Mandarin for text message, then say shōu again

Before you move on

What does shōu mean? (“To receive; to accept”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 119

Bags and Boxes

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a schoolbag, a suitcase, a box, a carrier bag and luggage.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 119: I can name a schoolbag, a suitcase, a box, a carrier bag and luggage.

119.1 书包 (shūbāo) — schoolbag

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for text message, then the Mandarin for to receive.

You'll want to know: 书包

书包 — shūbāo — "schoolbag".

> 我的书包里有两本书 wǒ de shūbāo lǐ yǒu liǎng běn shū — There are two books in my schoolbag.

The new character, in pieces: 包 — a wrapping stroke that bends round from the top, and inside it three strokes: a turn, a short bar, and a vertical that bends right along the bottom and hooks up. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 书包 (shūbāo) is built from 书 'book' and 包 'to wrap', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syo and paew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): a wrapper for books.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: shūbāo
- Say it: shūbāo, once more
- Say it: wǒ de shūbāo lǐ yǒu liǎng běn shū — There are two books in my schoolbag.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for text message, then the Mandarin for to receive, then say shūbāo again

Before you move on

What does 书包 mean? ("Schoolbag".) Say it once more.

119.2 包 — a wrapping stroke, and three strokes inside

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shūbāo — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  书 也

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shū, yě

Script — a wrapping stroke, and three strokes inside

How 包 is written, stroke by stroke

包

The wrapping piece, two strokes: a short left-falling stroke, then a stroke across that turns down the right side and hooks.

The inside, three strokes: a stroke across that turns down, a short horizontal under it, and a vertical that bends right along the bottom and hooks up, out past the wrapping, as the last stroke of 也 does.

2 + 3 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 包, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 包? (Five.) Which piece comes first, the wrapping or the inside? (The wrapping.) Which character you know ends with the same stroke? (也.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 包, pinned stroke paths and medians.

119.3 xiāngzi — box; suitcase; trunk

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to receive, then the Mandarin for schoolbag.

You'll want to know: xiāngzi

xiāngzi — "box; suitcase; trunk".

> zhège xiāngzi tài dà le — This suitcase is too big.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiāngzi is built from xiāng and the noun ending zi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjang and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as a box or a hamper.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: xiāngzi
- Say it: xiāngzi, once more
- Say it: zhège xiāngzi tài dà le — This suitcase is too big.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to receive, then the Mandarin for schoolbag, then say xiāngzi again

Before you move on

What does xiāngzi mean? ("Box; suitcase; trunk".) Say it once more.

119.4 hézi — box; small case

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for schoolbag, then the Mandarin for suitcase.

You'll want to know: hézi

hézi — "box; small case".

hézi lǐ yǒu shénme — What's in the box?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hézi is built from hé and the noun ending zi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, hop and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as a dish with a lid.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: hézi
- Say it: hézi, once more
- Say it: hézi lǐ yǒu shénme — What's in the box?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for schoolbag, then the Mandarin for suitcase, then say hézi again

Before you move on

What does hézi mean? ("Box; small case".) Say it once more.

119.5 dàizi — bag; sack

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for suitcase, then the Mandarin for small box.

You'll want to know: dàizi

dàizi — "bag; sack".

nǐ xūyào dàizi ma — Do you need a bag?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dàizi is built from dài and the noun ending zi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, dojH and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as a kind of sack.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: dàizi
- Say it: dàizi, once more
- Say it: nǐ xūyào dàizi ma — Do you need a bag?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for suitcase, then the Mandarin for small box, then say dàizi again

Before you move on

What does dàizi mean? ("Bag; sack".) Say it once more.

119.6 xíngli — luggage

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for small box, then the Mandarin for carrier bag.

You'll want to know: xíngli

xíngli — "luggage".

nǐ de xíngli zài nǎr — Where's your luggage?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xíngli is built from xíng 'to go' and lǐ 'plum', both inherited from Middle Chinese, haeng and liX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary lists the pair itself under the second, but how 'plum' came into a word for luggage is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: xíngli
- Say it: xíngli, once more
- Say it: nǐ de xíngli zài nǎr — Where's your luggage?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for small box, then the Mandarin for carrier bag, then say xíngli again

Before you move on

What does xíngli mean? ("Luggage".) Say it once more.

Chapter 120

Takeaway

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can order a takeaway, give my address, ask to take food home, and ask for dim sum.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 120: I can order a takeaway, give my address, ask to take food home, and ask for dim sum.

120.1 wàimài — takeaway; food delivered

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for carrier bag, then the Mandarin for luggage.

You'll want to know: wàimài

wàimài — "takeaway; food delivered".

> wǒmen jīntiān wǎnshang chī wàimài — We're having a takeaway tonight.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wàimài is built from 外 'outside' and mài 'to sell', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngwajH and meaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): food sold to be eaten somewhere else.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: wàimài
- Say it: wàimài, once more
- Say it: wǒmen jīntiān wǎnshang chī wàimài — We're having a takeaway tonight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for carrier bag, then the Mandarin for luggage, then say wàimài again

Before you move on

What does wàimài mean? ("Takeaway; food delivered".) Say it once more.

120.2 dìng — to make a booking; to order

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for luggage, then the Mandarin for takeaway.

You'll want to know: dìng

dìng — "to make a booking; to order".

wǒ xiǎng dìng yí ge fángjiān — I'd like to book a room.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dìng is inherited from Middle Chinese dengX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to discuss and settle', which regularly gives dìng. Booking is the sense today, probably by way of settling an arrangement, but the step is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: dìng
- Say it: dìng, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng dìng yí ge fángjiān — I'd like to book a room.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for luggage, then the Mandarin for takeaway, then say dìng again

Before you move on

What does dìng mean? ("To make a booking; to order".) Say it once more.

120.3 dìzhǐ — address

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for takeaway, then the Mandarin for to make a booking.

You'll want to know: dìzhǐ

dìzhǐ — "address".

nǐ jiā de dìzhǐ shì shénme — What's your home address?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dìzhǐ is built from dì 'ground' and zhǐ 'site', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dijH and tsyiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as the foundation of a building.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: dìzhǐ
- Say it: dìzhǐ, once more
- Say it: nǐ jiā de dìzhǐ shì shénme — What's your home address?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for takeaway, then the Mandarin for to make a booking, then say dìzhǐ again

Before you move on

What does dìzhǐ mean? ("Address".) Say it once more.

120.4 打包 (dǎbāo) — to pack food to take away

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to make a booking, then the Mandarin for address.

You'll want to know: 打包

打包 — dǎbāo — "to pack food to take away".

我想打包 wǒ xiǎng dǎbāo — Could I take this away?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 打包 (dǎbāo) is built from 打 'to strike, to do' and 包 'to wrap', both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and paew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to strike'; dǎ is not the sound taengX would regularly give, and its everyday sense of doing is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎbāo
- Say it: dǎbāo, once more

- Say it: wǒ xiǎng dǎbāo — Could I take this away?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to make a booking, then the Mandarin for address, then say dǎbāo again

Before you move on

What does 打包 mean? ("To pack food to take away".) Say it once more.

120.5 点心 (diǎnxin) — dim sum; light snacks and pastries

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for address, then the Mandarin for to pack food to take away.

You'll want to know: 点心

点心 — diǎnxin — "dim sum; light snacks and pastries".

我们去外边吃点心 wǒmen qù wàibian chī diǎnxin — We're going out for dim sum.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 点心 (diǎnxin) is built from 点 'a dot, a little' and 心 'heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, temX and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as a dot made with the brush. How the pair came to mean a light snack is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: diǎnxin
- Say it: diǎnxin, once more
- Say it: wǒmen qù wàibian chī diǎnxin — We're going out for dim sum.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for address, then the Mandarin for to pack food to take away, then say diǎnxin again

Before you move on

What does 点心 mean? ("Dim sum; light snacks and pastries".) Say it once more.

Chapter 121

Teaching and Practising

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say teach, practise, answer and revise, and say something is wrong.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 121: I can say teach, practise, answer and revise, and say something is wrong.

121.1 jiāo — to teach

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to pack food to take away, then the Mandarin for dim sum.

You'll want to know: jiāo

jiāo — "to teach".

> tā jiāo wǒ hànyǔ — She teaches me Chinese.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiāo is inherited from Middle Chinese kaewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to teach'; the dictionary also lists the character with a level tone, kaew, glossed 'to imitate', and the level jiāo of the verb matches that one.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: jiāo
- Say it: jiāo, once more
- Say it: tā jiāo wǒ hànyǔ — She teaches me Chinese.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to pack food to take away, then the Mandarin for dim sum, then say jiāo again

Before you move on

What does jiāo mean? ("To teach".) Say it once more.

121.2 liànxí — to practise

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for dim sum, then the Mandarin for to teach.

You'll want to know: liànxí

liànxí — "to practise".

wǒ měitiān liànxí shuō hànyǔ — I practise speaking Chinese every day.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of liànxí is built from liàn and xí, both inherited from Middle Chinese, lenH and zip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as white boiled silk and the second 'to learn', explaining it as flying again and again.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: liànxí
- Say it: liànxí, once more
- Say it: wǒ měitiān liànxí shuō hànyǔ — I practise speaking Chinese every day.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for dim sum, then the Mandarin for to teach, then say liànxí again

Before you move on

What does liànxí mean? ("To practise".) Say it once more.

121.3 huídá — to answer

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to teach, then the Mandarin for to practise.

You'll want to know: huídá

huídá — "to answer".

qǐng nǐ huídá — Please answer.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huídá is built from huí 'to turn back' and dá 'to respond', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hwoj and top (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second 'to match'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: huídá
- Say it: huídá, once more
- Say it: qǐng nǐ huídá — Please answer.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to teach, then the Mandarin for to practise, then say huídá again

Before you move on

What does huídá mean? ("To answer".) Say it once more.

121.4 fùxí — to revise; to go over again

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to practise, then the Mandarin for to answer.

You'll want to know: fùxí

fùxí — "to revise; to go over again".

wǒ wǎnshang fùxí hànyǔ — I go over my Chinese in the evening.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fùxí is built from fù 'again' and xí 'to learn', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjuwk and zip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): to learn again. The dictionary glosses the first 'to return, to repeat' and lists it with a departing tone too, bjuwH, glossed 'again': fù continues that one, since the regular change from bjuwk gives fú.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: fùxí
- Say it: fùxí, once more
- Say it: wǒ wǎnshang fùxí hànyǔ — I go over my Chinese in the evening.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to practise, then the Mandarin for to answer, then say fùxí again

Before you move on

What does fùxí mean? ("To revise; to go over again".) Say it once more.

121.5 cuò — wrong; mistaken

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to answer, then the Mandarin for to revise.

You'll want to know: cuò

cuò — "wrong; mistaken".

zhège hànzì cuò le — This character is wrong.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

cuò is inherited from Middle Chinese tshak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'mixed' and 'crossing slantwise'; how it came to mean wrong is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: cuò
- Say it: cuò, once more
- Say it: zhège hànzì cuò le — This character is wrong.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to answer, then the Mandarin for to revise, then say cuò again

Before you move on

What does cuò mean? ("Wrong; mistaken".) Say it once more.

Chapter 122

Opening Hours

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say open for business, start, finish, discount and timetable.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 122: I can say open for business, start, finish, discount and timetable.

122.1 yíngyè — to be open for business

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to revise, then the Mandarin for wrong.

You'll want to know: yíngyè

yíngyè — "to be open for business".

> shāngdiàn jǐ diǎn yíngyè — What time does the shop open?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yíngyè is built from yíng and yè, both inherited from Middle Chinese, yweng and ngjaep (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to build, to plan' and 'affairs'.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: yíngyè
- Say it: yíngyè, once more
- Say it: shāngdiàn jǐ diǎn yíngyè — What time does the shop open?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to revise, then the Mandarin for wrong, then say yíngyè again

Before you move on

What does yíngyè mean? ("To be open for business".) Say it once more.

122.2 kāishǐ — to begin; to start

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for wrong, then the Mandarin for to be open for business.

You'll want to know: kāishǐ

kāishǐ — "to begin; to start".

wǒmen jǐ diǎn kāishǐ — What time do we start?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kāishǐ is built from 开 'to open' and shǐ 'beginning', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khoj and syiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: kāishǐ
- Say it: kāishǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒmen jǐ diǎn kāishǐ — What time do we start?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for wrong, then the Mandarin for to be open for business, then say kāishǐ again

Before you move on

What does kāishǐ mean? ("To begin; to start".) Say it once more.

122.3 jiéshù — to come to an end; to finish

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be open for business, then the Mandarin for to begin.

You'll want to know: jiéshù

jiéshù — "to come to an end; to finish".

kè jǐ diǎn jiéshù — What time does the lesson finish?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiéshù is built from jié 'to tie' and shù 'to bind', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ket and syowk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: jiéshù
- Say it: jiéshù, once more

- Say it: kè jǐ diǎn jiéshù — What time does the lesson finish?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be open for business, then the Mandarin for to begin, then say jiéshù again

Before you move on

What does jiéshù mean? ("To come to an end; to finish".) Say it once more.

122.4 shíkèbiǎo — timetable

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to begin, then the Mandarin for to come to an end.

You'll want to know: shíkèbiǎo

shíkèbiǎo — "timetable".

wǒ yǒu yì zhāng huǒchē shíkèbiǎo — I've got a train timetable.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shíkèbiǎo is built from 时 'time', kè 'a notch, a quarter of an hour' and biǎo 'table', all inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyi, khok and pjewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second 'to carve' and the third 'to make clear'.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: shíkèbiǎo
- Say it: shíkèbiǎo, once more
- Say it: wǒ yǒu yì zhāng huǒchē shíkèbiǎo — I've got a train timetable.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for to begin, then the Mandarin for to come to an end, then say shíkèbiǎo again

Before you move on

What does shíkèbiǎo mean? ("Timetable".) Say it once more.

122.5 dǎzhé — to give a discount; to be on sale

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to come to an end, then the Mandarin for timetable.

You'll want to know: dǎzhé

dǎzhé — "to give a discount; to be on sale".

zhège xīngqī dǎzhé — Things are on sale this week.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎzhé is built from 打 'to strike, to do' and zhé, both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and tsyet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second 'to bend and break'. How the pair came to mean a discount is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for signs and notices.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎzhé
- Say it: dǎzhé, once more
- Say it: zhège xīngqī dǎzhé — Things are on sale this week.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to come to an end, then the Mandarin for timetable, then say dǎzhé again

Before you move on

What does dǎzhé mean? ("To give a discount; to be on sale".) Say it once more.

122.6 Looking back: from Which Way? to Opening Hours

Say the Mandarin for the east and the south.

Your turn

- Say it: the east, the south, the west, the north, direction
- Say it: parcel, to post, letter, text message, to receive
- Say it: schoolbag, suitcase, small box, carrier bag, luggage
- Say it: takeaway, to make a booking, address, to pack food to take away, dim sum
- Say it: to teach, to practise, to answer, to revise, wrong
- Say it: to be open for business, to begin, to come to an end, timetable, to give a discount
- Read it: 包 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

The east? (dōngbian.) The south? (nánbian.) The west? (xībian.) The north? (běibian.) Direction? (fāngxiàng.) Parcel? (bāoguǒ.) To post? (jì.) Letter? (xìn.) Text message? (duǎnxìn.) To receive? (shōu.) Schoolbag? (书包, shūbāo.) Suitcase? (xiāngzi.) Small box? (hézi.) Carrier bag? (dàizi.) Luggage? (xíngli.) Takeaway? (wàimài.) To make a booking? (dìng.) Address? (dìzhǐ.) To pack food to take away? (打包, dǎbāo.) Dim sum? (点心, diǎnxin.) To teach? (jiāo.) To practise? (liànxí.) To answer? (huídá.) To revise? (fùxí.) Wrong? (cuò.) To be open for business? (yíngyè.) To begin? (kāishǐ.) To come to an end? (jiéshù.) Timetable? (shíkèbiǎo.) To give a discount? (dǎzhé.)

122.7 Opening Hours — once more

Say the Mandarin for to be open for business and to begin.

Your turn

- Say it: to be open for business, to begin, to come to an end, timetable, to give a discount

Before you move on

To be open for business? (yíngyè.) To begin? (kāishǐ.) To come to an end? (jiéshù.) Timetable? (shíkèbiǎo.) To give a discount? (dǎzhé.)

Chapter 123

What People Are Like

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone is clever, serious, lovable, warm or caring.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 123: I can say that someone is clever, serious, lovable, warm or caring.

123.1 cōngming — clever; bright

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for timetable, then the Mandarin for to give a discount.

You'll want to know: cōngming

cōngming — "clever; bright".

> wǒ mèimei hěn cōngming — My little sister is very bright.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cōngming is built from cōng and míng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshuwng and mjaeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to hear' and 'to discern', and the second 'bright'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: cōngming
- Say it: cōngming, once more
- Say it: wǒ mèimei hěn cōngming — My little sister is very bright.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for timetable, then the Mandarin for to give a discount, then say cōngming again

Before you move on

What does cōngming mean? ("Clever; bright".) Say it once more.

123.2 rènzhēn — conscientious; serious

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to give a discount, then the Mandarin for clever.

You'll want to know: rènzhēn

rènzhēn — "conscientious; serious".

tā gōngzuò hěn rènzhēn — He takes his work seriously.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of rènzhēn is built from rèn 'to recognise' and zhēn 'true', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyinH and tsyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). How the pair came to mean conscientious is not given there, so it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: rènzhēn
- Say it: rènzhēn, once more
- Say it: tā gōngzuò hěn rènzhēn — He takes his work seriously.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to give a discount, then the Mandarin for clever, then say rènzhēn again

Before you move on

What does rènzhēn mean? ("Conscientious; serious".) Say it once more.

123.3 kě'ài — cute; lovable

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for clever, then the Mandarin for conscientious.

You'll want to know: kě'ài

kě'ài — "cute; lovable".

zhè zhī māo hěn kě'ài — This cat is so cute.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kě'ài is built from kě, glossed 'to permit', and ài 'to love', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khaX and 'ojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): worth loving.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: kě'ài
- Say it: kě'ài, once more
- Say it: zhè zhī māo hěn kě'ài — This cat is so cute.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for clever, then the Mandarin for conscientious, then say kě'ài again

Before you move on

What does kě'ài mean? ("Cute; lovable".) Say it once more.

123.4 rèqíng — warm; welcoming

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for conscientious, then the Mandarin for lovable.

You'll want to know: rèqíng

rèqíng — "warm; welcoming".

wǒ de lǎoshī hěn rèqíng — My teacher is very warm.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of rèqíng is built from rè 'hot' and qíng 'feeling', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyet and dzjeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary explains the second, after an older book, as the breath in a person that has desires.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: rèqíng
- Say it: rèqíng, once more
- Say it: wǒ de lǎoshī hěn rèqíng — My teacher is very warm.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for conscientious, then the Mandarin for lovable, then say rèqíng again

Before you move on

What does rèqíng mean? ("Warm; welcoming".) Say it once more.

123.5 guānxīn — to care about

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for lovable, then the Mandarin for warm-hearted.

You'll want to know: guānxīn

guānxīn — "to care about".

māma hěn guānxīn wǒ — Mum really cares about me.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guānxīn is built from guān, the word for shutting, and xīn 'heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kwaen and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as the bar that shuts a door; how the pair came to mean caring is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: guānxīn
- Say it: guānxīn, once more
- Say it: māma hěn guānxīn wǒ — Mum really cares about me.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for lovable, then the Mandarin for warm-hearted, then say guānxīn again

Before you move on

What does guānxīn mean? ("To care about".) Say it once more.

Chapter 124

Tall and Handsome

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can talk about height, hair, good and bad looks, and family likeness.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 124: I can talk about height, hair, good and bad looks, and family likeness.

124.1 个子 (gèzi) — height; build (of a person)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for warm-hearted, then the Mandarin for to care about.

You'll want to know: 个子

个子 — gèzi — "height; build (of a person)".

wǒ gēge gèzi hěn gāo — My brother is tall.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 个子 (gèzi) is built from 个, the measure word, and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kaH and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). How the pair came to mean a person's height is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: gèzi
- Say it: gèzi, once more
- Say it: wǒ gēge gèzi hěn gāo — My brother is tall.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for warm-hearted, then the Mandarin for to care about, then say gèzi again

Before you move on

What does 个子 mean? ("Height; build (of a person)".) Say it once more.

124.2 tóufa — hair (on the head)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to care about, then the Mandarin for a person's height.

You'll want to know: tóufa

tóufa — "hair (on the head)".

tā de tóufa hěn cháng — Her hair is long.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tóufa is built from tóu 'head' and fa, both inherited from Middle Chinese, duw and pjot (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'the hair of the head'. In the word it loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: tóufa
- Say it: tóufa, once more
- Say it: tā de tóufa hěn cháng — Her hair is long.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to care about, then the Mandarin for a person's height, then say tóufa again

Before you move on

What does tóufa mean? ("Hair (on the head)".) Say it once more.

124.3 shuài — handsome

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a person's height, then the Mandarin for hair.

You'll want to know: shuài

shuài — "handsome".

nǐ gēge hěn shuài — Your brother is handsome.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shuài is inherited from Middle Chinese srwijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a commander of troops'. The sense handsome is not given there, and how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: shuài
- Say it: shuài, once more

- Say it: nǐ gēge hěn shuài — Your brother is handsome.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a person's height, then the Mandarin for hair, then say shuài again

Before you move on

What does shuài mean? ("Handsome".) Say it once more.

124.4 nánkàn — ugly

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hair, then the Mandarin for handsome.

You'll want to know: nánkàn

nánkàn — "ugly".

wǒ de xié hěn nánkàn — My shoes are ugly.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nánkàn is built from nán 'hard' and 看 'to look at', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nan and khanH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): hard to look at.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: nánkàn
- Say it: nánkàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ de xié hěn nánkàn — My shoes are ugly.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hair, then the Mandarin for handsome, then say nánkàn again

Before you move on

What does nánkàn mean? ("Ugly".) Say it once more.

124.5 xiàng — to resemble; to take after

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for handsome, then the Mandarin for ugly.

You'll want to know: xiàng

xiàng — "to resemble; to take after".

wǒ xiàng wǒ bàba — I take after my dad.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiàng is inherited from Middle Chinese zjangX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to be like'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàng
- Say it: xiàng, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiàng wǒ bàba — I take after my dad.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for handsome, then the Mandarin for ugly, then say xiàng again

Before you move on

What does xiàng mean? ("To resemble; to take after".) Say it once more.

Chapter 125

Angry and Worried

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give a feeling as a reason: angry, worried, at ease, anxious or upset.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 125: I can give a feeling as a reason: angry, worried, at ease, anxious or upset.

125.1 生气 (shēngqì) — to get angry

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for ugly, then the Mandarin for to resemble.

You'll want to know: 生气

生气 — shēngqì — "to get angry".

> 因为我没有来他生气了 yīnwèi wǒ méiyǒu lái tā shēngqì le — He got angry because I didn't come.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 生气 (shēngqì) is built from 生 'to grow' and 气 'breath', both inherited from Middle Chinese, srjaeng and khj+jH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The sense angry is not given there, so how the pair came to it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: shēngqì
- Say it: shēngqì, once more
- Say it: yīnwèi wǒ méiyǒu lái tā shēngqì le — He got angry because I didn't come.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for ugly, then the Mandarin for to resemble, then say shēngqì again

Before you move on

What does 生气 mean? ("To get angry".) Say it once more.

125.2 dānxīn — to worry

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to resemble, then the Mandarin for to get angry.

You'll want to know: dānxīn

dānxīn — "to worry".

nǐ bú yào dānxīn — Don't you worry.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dānxīn is built from dān 'to carry on the shoulder' and xīn 'heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tam and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The pair is not given there; a load carried in the heart is the plain picture, but the step is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: dānxīn
- Say it: dānxīn, once more
- Say it: nǐ bú yào dānxīn — Don't you worry.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to resemble, then the Mandarin for to get angry, then say dānxīn again

Before you move on

What does dānxīn mean? ("To worry".) Say it once more.

125.3 fàngxīn — to stop worrying; to be at ease

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get angry, then the Mandarin for to worry.

You'll want to know: fàngxīn

fàngxīn — "to stop worrying; to be at ease".

nǐ fàngxīn wǒ hěn hǎo — Don't worry, I'm fine.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fàngxīn is built from fàng, the word for putting things down, and xīn 'heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjangH and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'to drive out' and 'to send away'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: fàngxīn
- Say it: fàngxīn, once more
- Say it: nǐ fàngxīn wǒ hěn hǎo — Don't worry, I'm fine.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get angry, then the Mandarin for to worry, then say fàngxīn again

Before you move on

What does fàngxīn mean? ("To stop worrying; to be at ease".) Say it once more.

125.4 zháojí — anxious; in a hurry

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to worry, then the Mandarin for to be at ease.

You'll want to know: zháojí

zháojí — "anxious; in a hurry".

wǒ hěn zháojí yīnwèi wǒ yǒushì — I'm in a rush, because I've got something on.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zháojí is built from zháo and jí, both inherited from Middle Chinese, drjak and kip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to attach to' and the second 'urgent' and 'narrow'; how the pair came to mean anxious is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: zháojí
- Say it: zháojí, once more
- Say it: wǒ hěn zháojí yīnwèi wǒ yǒushì — I'm in a rush, because I've got something on.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to worry, then the Mandarin for to be at ease, then say zháojí again

Before you move on

What does zháojí mean? ("Anxious; in a hurry".) Say it once more.

125.5 nánguò — sad; upset

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be at ease, then the Mandarin for anxious.

You'll want to know: nánguò

nánguò — "sad; upset".

tā de gǒu bìng le tā hěn nánguò — His dog is ill, and he's very upset.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nánguò is built from nán 'hard' and guò 'to pass', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nan and kwaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): hard to get through. The pair is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: nánguò
- Say it: nánguò, once more
- Say it: tā de gǒu bìng le tā hěn nánguò — His dog is ill, and he's very upset.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be at ease, then the Mandarin for anxious, then say nánguò again

Before you move on

What does nánguò mean? ("Sad; upset".) Say it once more.

Chapter 126

Often and Sometimes

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how often I do things, what I did before and what I did a moment ago.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 126: I can say how often I do things, what I did before and what I did a moment ago.

126.1 chángcháng — often

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for anxious, then the Mandarin for upset.

You'll want to know: chángcháng

chángcháng — "often".

> wǒ chángcháng hē chá — I often drink tea.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chángcháng says cháng twice. It is inherited from Middle Chinese dzyang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses it as a length of two fathoms and as an official title. The sense 'usual' is not given there, so how it came to mean often is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: chángcháng
- Say it: chángcháng, once more
- Say it: wǒ chángcháng hē chá — I often drink tea.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for anxious, then the Mandarin for upset, then say chángcháng again

Before you move on

What does chángcháng mean? ("Often".) Say it once more.

126.2 yǒushíhou — sometimes

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for upset, then the Mandarin for often.

You'll want to know: yǒushíhou

yǒushíhou — "sometimes".

wǒ yǒushíhou qù Běijīng — Sometimes I go to Beijing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǒushíhou is built from 有 'there is' and shíhou 'time', all three parts inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuwX, dzyi and huwH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): there are times.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: yǒushíhou
- Say it: yǒushíhou, once more
- Say it: wǒ yǒushíhou qù Běijīng — Sometimes I go to Beijing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for upset, then the Mandarin for often, then say yǒushíhou again

Before you move on

What does yǒushíhou mean? (“Sometimes”.) Say it once more.

126.3 以前 (yǐqián) — before; in the past

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for often, then the Mandarin for sometimes.

You’ll want to know: 以前

以前 — yǐqián — “before; in the past”.

以前我不会说汉语 yǐqián wǒ bú huì shuō hànyǔ — I couldn’t speak Chinese before.

The new character, in pieces: 以 — four strokes: a vertical that flicks up at its foot, a dot beside it, then a long stroke falling to the left and a dot at the lower right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 以前 (yǐqián) is built from 以, glossed ’to use’ and ’with’, and 前 ’before’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, yiX and dzen (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription).

What you’ve built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: yǐqián
- Say it: yǐqián, once more
- Say it: yǐqián wǒ bú huì shuō hànyǔ — I couldn't speak Chinese before.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for often, then the Mandarin for sometimes, then say yǐqián again

Before you move on

What does 以前 mean? ("Before; in the past".) Say it once more.

126.4 以 — four strokes in two pairs

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say yǐqián — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

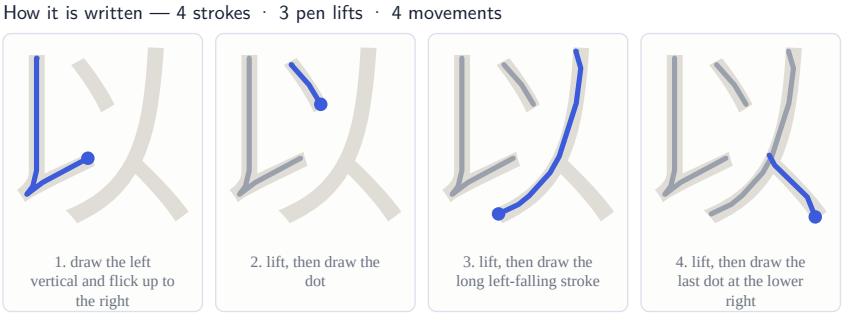
  前 会

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — qián, huì

Script — four strokes in two pairs



How 以 is written, stroke by stroke

以

Two pieces, left before right. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The left piece, two strokes. A vertical that runs down and flicks up to the right at its foot, then a short dot to the right of it, falling to the lower right.

The right piece, two strokes. A long left-falling stroke from the top right, sweeping down toward the foot of the first stroke, then a dot at the lower right, falling to the lower right.

2 + 2 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 以, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 以? (Four.) Which stroke flicks up? (The first, at its foot.) Which way does the long one fall? (Down to the left.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 以, pinned stroke paths and medians.

126.5 gāngcái — a moment ago

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for sometimes, then the Mandarin for in the past.

You'll want to know: gāngcái

gāngcái — "a moment ago".

gāngcái wǒ zài xǐshǒujiān — A moment ago I was in the toilet.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gāngcái is built from gāng and cái, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kang and dzoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'strong', and lists the second, under an older way of writing it, as 'barely', a different word from the cái of talent; how the pair came to mean a moment ago is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: gāngcái
- Say it: gāngcái, once more
- Say it: gāngcái wǒ zài xǐshǒujiān — A moment ago I was in the toilet.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for sometimes, then the Mandarin for in the past, then say gāngcái again

Before you move on

What does gāngcái mean? ("A moment ago".) Say it once more.

126.6 yǐjīng — already

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for in the past, then the Mandarin for a moment ago.

You'll want to know: yǐjīng

yǐjīng — "already".

wǒ yǐjīng chī fàn le — I've already eaten.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǐjīng is built from yǐ and jīng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, yiX and keng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to stop' and 'finished', a different word from the 以 of 以前, and the second 'constant' and 'the warp of cloth'; how the pair came to mean already is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: yǐjīng
- Say it: yǐjīng, once more
- Say it: wǒ yǐjīng chī fàn le — I've already eaten.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for in the past, then the Mandarin for a moment ago, then say yǐjīng again

Before you move on

What does yǐjīng mean? ("Already".) Say it once more.

Chapter 127

These and Those

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say these, those, which ones, some, and like this.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 127: I can say these, those, which ones, some, and like this.

127.1 这些 (zhèxiē) — these

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a moment ago, then the Mandarin for already.

You'll want to know: 这些

这些 — zhèxiē — "these".

> 这些是我以前的书 zhèxiē shì wǒ yǐqián de shū — These are my old books.

The new character, in pieces: 些 — on top a four-stroke piece and a two-stroke piece side by side, and under them the two bars of 二. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 这些 (zhèxiē) is built from 这 'this' and 些 'a few'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese sjae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a little'.

What you've built

One more word for pointing things out.

Your turn

- Say it: zhèxiē
- Say it: zhèxiē, once more
- Say it: zhèxiē shì wǒ yǐqián de shū — These are my old books.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a moment ago, then the Mandarin for already, then say zhèxiē again

Before you move on

What does 这些 mean? ("These".) Say it once more.

127.2 些 — two small pieces over 二

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say zhèxiē — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

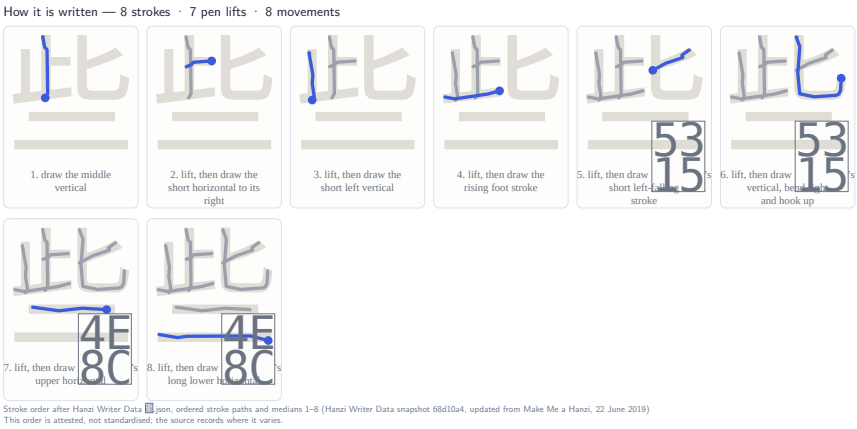
  这 二

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — zhè, èr

Script — two small pieces over 二



How 些 is written, stroke by stroke

些

Three pieces: two side by side on top, then 二 underneath.

The top left piece, four strokes. A short vertical, a short horizontal from its middle to the right, a shorter vertical to the left of the first, then a stroke along the foot that rises to the right.

The top right piece, two strokes. A short left-falling stroke, then a vertical that bends to the right along the bottom and hooks up.

二, two strokes: the short bar, then the long one beneath it.

4 + 2 + 2 = eight.

Your turn

- Write it: 些, all eight, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 些? (Three.) Which character you know sits at the bottom? (二.) How does the sixth stroke end? (It bends right along the bottom and hooks up.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 些, pinned stroke paths and medians.

127.3 那些 (nàxiē) — those

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for already, then the Mandarin for these.

You'll want to know: 那些

那些 — nàxiē — "those".

那些人是我以前的同学 nàxiē rén shì wǒ yǐqián de tóngxué — Those people are my old classmates.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 那些 (nàxiē) is built from 那 'that' and 些 'a few', both inherited from Middle Chinese, na and sjae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'how, what', not 'that', and the second 'a little'.

What you've built

One more word for pointing things out.

Your turn

- Say it: nàxiē
- Say it: nàxiē, once more
- Say it: nàxiē rén shì wǒ yǐqián de tóngxué — Those people are my old classmates.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for already, then the Mandarin for these, then say nàxiē again

Before you move on

What does 那些 mean? ("Those".) Say it once more.

127.4 哪些 (nǎxiē) — which ones

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for these, then the Mandarin for those.

You'll want to know: 哪些

哪些 — nǎxiē — "which ones".

你喜欢哪些书 nǐ xǐhuan nǎxiē shū — Which books do you like?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 哪些 (nǎxiē) is built from 哪 'which' and 些 'a few'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese sjae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for pointing things out.

Your turn

- Say it: nǎxiē
- Say it: nǎxiē, once more
- Say it: nǐ xǐhuan nǎxiē shū — Which books do you like?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for these, then the Mandarin for those, then say nǎxiē again

Before you move on

What does 哪些 mean? ("Which ones".) Say it once more.

127.5 一些 (yìxiē) — some; a few

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for those, then the Mandarin for which ones.

You'll want to know: 一些

一些 — yìxiē — "some; a few".

我想喝一些水 wǒ xiǎng hē yìxiē shuǐ — I'd like to drink some water.

The tone of 一 changes here: yī is said yì before the first tone of xiē.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 一些 (yìxiē) is built from 一 'one' and 些 'a few', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jit and sjae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for pointing things out.

Your turn

- Say it: yìxiē
- Say it: yìxiē, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng hē yìxiē shuǐ — I'd like to drink some water.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for those, then the Mandarin for which ones, then say yìxiē again

Before you move on

What does 一些 mean? ("Some; a few".) Say it once more.

127.6 zhèyàng — like this; this way

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for which ones, then the Mandarin for a few.

You'll want to know: zhèyàng

zhèyàng — "like this; this way".

nǐ kěyǐ zhèyàng zuò — You can do it this way.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhèyàng is built from 这 'this' and yàng 'a pattern', the yàng of yíyàng. No dictionary we use records an older form of either part in these senses, so the history of the pair is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for pointing things out.

Your turn

- Say it: zhèyàng
- Say it: zhèyàng, once more
- Say it: nǐ kěyǐ zhèyàng zuò — You can do it this way.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for which ones, then the Mandarin for a few, then say zhèyàng again

Before you move on

What does zhèyàng mean? ("Like this; this way".) Say it once more.

Chapter 128

Music

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about music: songs, the piano and the guitar, and what sounds good.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 128: I can talk about music: songs, the piano and the guitar, and what sounds good.

128.1 音乐 (yīnyuè) — music

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a few, then the Mandarin for like this.

You'll want to know: 音乐

音乐 — yīnyuè — "music".

> 我喜欢音乐 wǒ xǐhuan yīnyuè — I love music.

The new character, in pieces: 音 — on top a five-stroke piece — a dot, a short bar, two short strokes leaning toward each other, and a long bar — and under it 日. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 音乐 (yīnyuè) is built from 音 'sound' and 乐, here said yuè, both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'im and ngaewk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second with the whole word, 'music'.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: yīnyuè
- Say it: yīnyuè, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan yīnyuè — I love music.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a few, then the Mandarin for like this, then say yīnyuè again

Before you move on

What does 音乐 mean? ("Music".) Say it once more.

128.2 音 — five strokes over 日

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say yīnyuè — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  日 乐

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rì, lè

Script — five strokes over 日

How 音 is written, stroke by stroke

音

Two pieces, top to bottom.

The top piece, five strokes. A dot at the top, a short horizontal under it, a short stroke on the left falling to the lower right, a short stroke on the right falling to the lower left, then a long horizontal across the whole width.

日, four strokes, the four your hand makes in 日: the left side, the top that turns down the right side, the middle bar, and the bar that closes the bottom.

5 + 4 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 音, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 音? (Two.) Which stroke ends the top piece? (The long horizontal.) What sits underneath? (日.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 音, pinned stroke paths and medians.

128.3 gē — song

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for like this, then the Mandarin for music.

You'll want to know: gē

gē — "song".

wǒ xǐhuan Zhōngguó gē — I love Chinese songs.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

gē is inherited from Middle Chinese ka (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary quotes an older book: the voice of a person is called song.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: gē
- Say it: gē, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan Zhōngguó gē — I love Chinese songs.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for like this, then the Mandarin for music, then say gē again

Before you move on

What does gē mean? ("Song".) Say it once more.

128.4 hǎotīng — pleasant to hear

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for music, then the Mandarin for song.

You'll want to know: hǎotīng

hǎotīng — "pleasant to hear".

Zhōngguó yīnyuè hěn hǎotīng — Chinese music is lovely to listen to.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hǎotīng is built from 好 'good' and tīng 'to listen', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xawX and theng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), the same shape as 好看 and 好吃.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: hǎotīng
- Say it: hǎotīng, once more
- Say it: Zhōngguó yīnyuè hěn hǎotīng — Chinese music is lovely to listen to.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for music, then the Mandarin for song, then say hǎotīng again

Before you move on

What does hǎotīng mean? ("Pleasant to hear".) Say it once more.

128.5 音乐会 (yīnyuèhuì) — concert

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for song, then the Mandarin for pleasant to hear.

You'll want to know: 音乐会

音乐会 — yīnyuèhuì — "concert".

> 明天晚上我们去音乐会 míngtiān wǎnshang wǒmen qù yīnyuèhuì — Tomorrow evening we're going to a concert.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 音乐会 (yīnyuèhuì) is built from 音乐 'music' and 会 'a gathering', all three parts inherited from Middle Chinese, 'im, ngaewk and hwajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the last 'to come together'.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: yīnyuèhuì
- Say it: yīnyuèhuì, once more
- Say it: míngtiān wǎnshang wǒmen qù yīnyuèhuì — Tomorrow evening we're going to a concert.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for song, then the Mandarin for pleasant to hear, then say yīnyuèhuì again

Before you move on

What does 音乐会 mean? ("Concert".) Say it once more.

128.6 jítā — guitar

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for pleasant to hear, then the Mandarin for concert.

You'll want to know: jítā

jítā — "guitar".

wǒ xiǎng xué jítā — I'd like to learn the guitar.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jítā is usually traced to English guitar; its two characters were chosen for their sound, the first a word for lucky and the second the 他 of 'he'.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: jítā
- Say it: jítā, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng xué jítā — I'd like to learn the guitar.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for pleasant to hear, then the Mandarin for concert, then say jítā again

Before you move on

What does jítā mean? ("Guitar".) Say it once more.

128.7 Looking back: from What People Are Like to Music

Say the Mandarin for clever and conscientious.

Your turn

- Say it: clever, conscientious, lovable, warm-hearted, to care about
- Say it: a person's height, hair, handsome, ugly, to resemble

- Say it: to get angry, to worry, to be at ease, anxious, upset
- Say it: often, sometimes, in the past, a moment ago, already
- Say it: these, those, which ones, a few, like this
- Say it: music, song, pleasant to hear, concert, guitar
- Read it: 以 些 音 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

Clever? (cōngming.) Conscientious? (rènzhēn.) Lovable? (kě'ài.) Warm-hearted? (rèqíng.) To care about? (guānxīn.) A person's height? (个子, gèzi.) Hair? (tóufa.) Handsome? (shuài.) Ugly? (nánkàn.) To resemble? (xiàng.) To get angry? (生气, shēngqì.) To worry? (dānxīn.) To be at ease? (fàngxīn.) Anxious? (zháojí.) Upset? (nánguò.) Often? (chángcháng.) Sometimes? (yǒushíhou.) In the past? (以前, yǐqián.) A moment ago? (gāngcái.) Already? (yǐjīng.) These? (这些, zhèxiē.) Those? (那些, nàxiē.) Which ones? (哪些, nǎxiē.) A few? (一些, yìxiē.) Like this? (zhèyàng.) Music? (音乐, yīnyuè.) Song? (gē.) Pleasant to hear? (hǎotīng.) Concert? (音乐会, yīnyuèhuì.) Guitar? (jítā.)

Chapter 129

Quiet and Noisy

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a place is quiet, noisy, lively or handy, and that something is interesting.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 129: I can say a place is quiet, noisy, lively or handy, and that something is interesting.

129.1 ānjìng — quiet

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for concert, then the Mandarin for guitar.

You'll want to know: ānjìng

ānjìng — "quiet".

> wǒ de fángjiān hěn ānjìng — My room is quiet.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of ānjìng is built from ān 'peaceful' and jìng 'calm', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'an and dzjengX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second with the first.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: ānjìng
- Say it: ānjìng, once more
- Say it: wǒ de fángjiān hěn ānjìng — My room is quiet.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for concert, then the Mandarin for guitar, then say ānjìng again

Before you move on

What does ānjìng mean? ("Quiet".) Say it once more.

129.2 吵 (chǎo) — noisy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for guitar, then the Mandarin for quiet.

You'll want to know: 吵

吵 — chǎo — "noisy".

他的音乐太吵了 tā de yīnyuè tài chǎo le — His music is far too loud.

The new character, in pieces: 吵 — 口 on the left and 少 on the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 吵 (chǎo) is inherited from Middle Chinese tsrhaewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'sound', a different word from the chǎo of stir-frying, which has the same old form. The dictionary notes that the character first had another reading, mjiewX, glossed 'the call of a pheasant'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: chǎo
- Say it: chǎo, once more
- Say it: tā de yīnyuè tài chǎo le — His music is far too loud.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for guitar, then the Mandarin for quiet, then say chǎo again

Before you move on

What does 吵 mean? ("Noisy".) Say it once more.

129.3 吵 — 口, then 少

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say chǎo — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

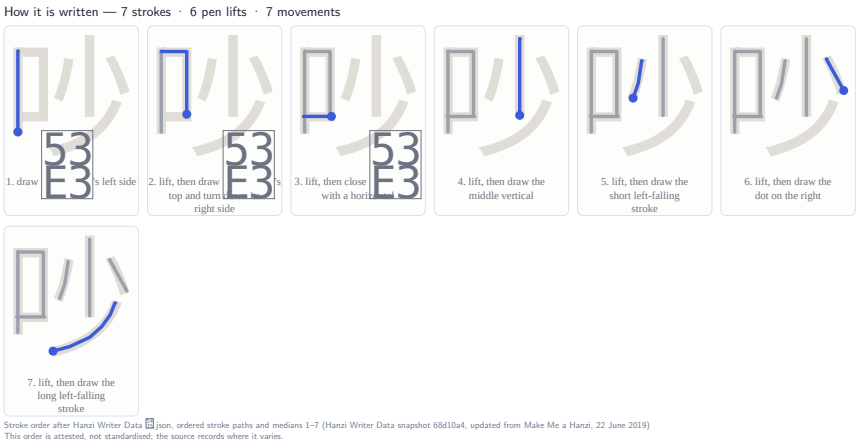
口 少

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kǒu, shǎo

Script — 口, then 少



How 吵 is written, stroke by stroke

吵

Two pieces, left before right, and both are old friends.

口, three strokes, small and narrow on the left: the left side, the top that turns down the right side, and the bar that closes the bottom.

少, four strokes, on the right: the vertical down the middle, the short stroke on its left, the dot on its right, then the long left-falling stroke that sweeps under them.

3 + 4 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 吵, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

What are the two pieces of 吵? (口 and 少.) Which side is narrow? (The left, 口.) What does the last stroke do? (It sweeps down to the left under 少.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 吵, pinned stroke paths and medians.

129.4 rènao — lively; bustling

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for quiet, then the Mandarin for noisy.

You'll want to know: rènao

rènao — "lively; bustling".

Běijīng hěn rènao — Beijing is a lively place.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of rènao is built from rè 'hot' and nao, both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyet and nraewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second 'not quiet' and 'to stir up'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: rènao
- Say it: rènao, once more
- Say it: Běijīng hěn rènao — Beijing is a lively place.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for quiet, then the Mandarin for noisy, then say rènao again

Before you move on

What does rènao mean? ("Lively; bustling".) Say it once more.

129.5 fāngbiàn — convenient; handy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for noisy, then the Mandarin for bustling.

You'll want to know: fāngbiàn

fāngbiàn — "convenient; handy".

> zhèr mǎi dōngxi hěn fāngbiàn — Shopping here is easy.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fāngbiàn is built from fāng and biàn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjang and bjienH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'the four quarters' and 'a method', and the second 'advantageous'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: fāngbiàn
- Say it: fāngbiàn, once more
- Say it: zhèr mǎi dōngxi hěn fāngbiàn — Shopping here is easy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for noisy, then the Mandarin for bustling, then say fāngbiàn again

Before you move on

What does fāngbiàn mean? ("Convenient; handy".) Say it once more.

129.6 yǒuyìsi — interesting

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bustling, then the Mandarin for convenient.

You'll want to know: yǒuyìsi

yǒuyìsi — "interesting".

> xué hànyǔ hěn yǒuyìsi — Learning Chinese is interesting.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǒuyìsi is built from 有 'to have' and yìsi 'meaning', the yìsi of bù hǎoyìsi: to have meaning. The parts are inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuwX, 'iH and si (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: yǒuyìsi
- Say it: yǒuyìsi, once more
- Say it: xué hànyǔ hěn yǒuyìsi — Learning Chinese is interesting.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bustling, then the Mandarin for convenient, then say yǒuyìsi again

Before you move on

What does yǒuyìsi mean? ("Interesting".) Say it once more.

Chapter 130

Feeling Ill

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I am ill, have a cold or a fever, or that something hurts, and go to the doctor.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 130: I can say I am ill, have a cold or a fever, or that something hurts, and go to the doctor.

130.1 病人 (bìngrén) — patient; sick person

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for convenient, then the Mandarin for interesting.

You'll want to know: 病人

病人 — bìngrén — "patient; sick person".

> 病人想喝水 bìngrén xiǎng hē shuǐ — The patient would like some water.

The new character, in pieces: 病 — outside, the sickbed piece of five strokes: a dot, a bar, a long fall down the left, then a dot and a rising stroke on the left side; inside it, five strokes: a bar, a box with a hooked right side, and a small 人 in the box. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 病人 (bìngrén) is built from 病 'illness' and 人 'person', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjaengH and nyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'grief' and 'suffering', and quotes an older book: an illness grown worse.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: bìngrén
- Say it: bìngrén, once more
- Say it: bìngrén xiǎng hē shuǐ — The patient would like some water.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for convenient, then the Mandarin for interesting, then say bìngrén again

Before you move on

What does 病人 mean? ("Patient; sick person".) Say it once more.

130.2 病 — the sickbed piece around a box

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say bìngrén — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

人 男

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rén, nán

Script — the sickbed piece around a box

How 病 is written, stroke by stroke

病

Two pieces: the sickbed piece outside, a boxed piece inside.

The sickbed piece, five strokes. A dot at the top, a horizontal under it, a long left-falling stroke down the left side, then on the left a short dot and a short stroke rising to the right.

The inside piece, five strokes. A horizontal across the top; a short vertical, the left side of the box; a horizontal that turns down the right side and hooks; then a small 人 from the top bar into the box: its left-falling stroke, then its dot.

5 + 5 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 病, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 病? (Two — the sickbed piece and the boxed piece.) What sits on the left of the sickbed piece? (A dot and a rising stroke.) What is inside the box? (A small 人.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 病, pinned stroke paths and medians.

130.3 gǎnmào — to catch a cold; a cold

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for interesting, then the Mandarin for a sick person.

You'll want to know: gǎnmào

gǎnmào — "to catch a cold; a cold".

wǒ gǎnmào le — I've caught a cold.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gǎnmào is built from gǎn and mào, both inherited from Middle Chinese, komX and mawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to move' and the second 'to cover' and 'to wade'; how the pair came to mean a cold is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: gǎnmào
- Say it: gǎnmào, once more
- Say it: wǒ gǎnmào le — I've caught a cold.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for interesting, then the Mandarin for a sick person, then say gǎnmào again

Before you move on

What does gǎnmào mean? ("To catch a cold; a cold".) Say it once more.

130.4 fāshāo — to have a fever

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a sick person, then the Mandarin for to catch a cold.

You'll want to know: fāshāo

fāshāo — "to have a fever".

wǒ fāshāo le wǒ xiǎng shuìjiào — I've got a temperature and I want to sleep.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fāshāo is built from fā 'to start' and shāo 'to burn', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjot and syew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: fāshāo
- Say it: fāshāo, once more
- Say it: wǒ fāshāo le wǒ xiǎng shuìjiào — I've got a temperature and I want to sleep.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a sick person, then the Mandarin for to catch a cold, then say fāshāo again

Before you move on

What does fāshāo mean? ("To have a fever".) Say it once more.

130.5 téng — sore; painful

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to catch a cold, then the Mandarin for to have a fever.

You'll want to know: téng

téng — "sore; painful".

wǒ de tóu hěn téng — My head really hurts.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of téng is inherited from Middle Chinese downg (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'pain'. The regular sound change would give tóng, not téng; why the vowel differs is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: téng
- Say it: téng, once more
- Say it: wǒ de tóu hěn téng — My head really hurts.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to catch a cold, then the Mandarin for to have a fever, then say téng again

Before you move on

What does téng mean? ("Sore; painful".) Say it once more.

130.6 看病 (kànbìng) — to see a doctor

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have a fever, then the Mandarin for sore.

You'll want to know: 看病

看病 — kànbìng — "to see a doctor".

我病了我去看病 wǒ bìng le wǒ qù kànbìng — I'm ill, so I'm off to the doctor.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 看病 (kànbìng) is built from 看 'to look at' and 病 'illness', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khanH and bjaengH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): to have an illness looked at.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: kànbìng
- Say it: kànbìng, once more
- Say it: wǒ bìng le wǒ qù kànbìng — I'm ill, so I'm off to the doctor.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have a fever, then the Mandarin for sore, then say kànbìng again

Before you move on

What does 看病 mean? ("To see a doctor".) Say it once more.

Chapter 131

Four Seasons

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the four seasons and ask which one someone likes.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 131: I can name the four seasons and ask which one someone likes.

131.1 春天 (chūntiān) — spring

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for sore, then the Mandarin for to see a doctor.

You'll want to know: 春天

春天 — chūntiān — "spring".

> 我喜欢春天 wǒ xǐhuan chūntiān — I love spring.

The new character, in pieces: 春 — the three bars of 三, a 人 whose two strokes spread across them, and 日 underneath. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 春天 (chūntiān) is built from 春 'spring' and 天 'sky, day', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwin and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'the head of the four seasons'.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: chūntiān
- Say it: chūntiān, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan chūntiān — I love spring.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for sore, then the Mandarin for to see a doctor, then say chūntiān again

Before you move on

What does 春天 mean? ("Spring".) Say it once more.

131.2 春 — 三 and 人 over 日

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say chūntiān — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

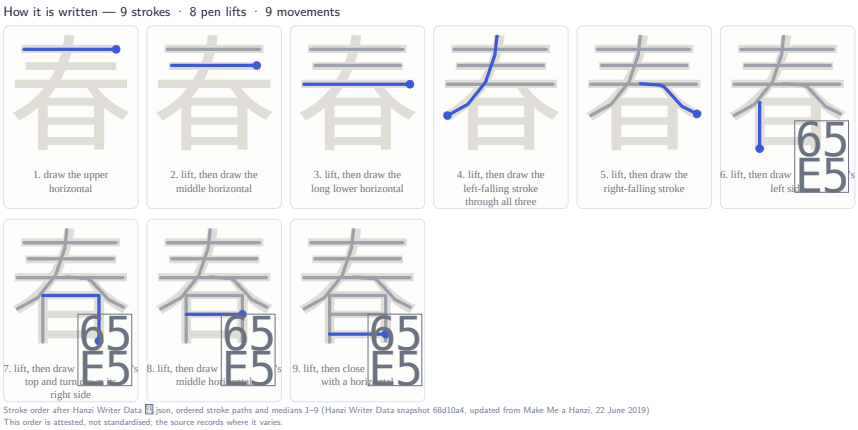
三 人 日

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — sān, rén, rì

Script — 三 and 人 over 日



How 春 is written, stroke by stroke

春

Three pieces you know, top to bottom, the first two woven together.

The three bars of 三: two shorter bars, then a long third one.

人, two strokes, spread wide across the bars: the left-falling stroke from above the top bar down to the lower left, then the right-falling stroke from the middle out to the lower right.

日, four strokes, small, under the spread of 人.

3 + 2 + 4 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 春, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 春? (Nine.) Which bar is the longest? (The third.) What sits at the bottom? (日.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 春, pinned stroke paths and medians.

131.3 xiàtiān — summer

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to see a doctor, then the Mandarin for spring.

You'll want to know: xiàtiān

xiàtiān — "summer".

Běijīng de xiàtiān hěn rè — Summers in Beijing are hot.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiàtiān is built from xià 'summer' and 天 'sky', both inherited from Middle Chinese, haeH and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary lists the first under the words 'spring and summer'.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàtiān
- Say it: xiàtiān, once more
- Say it: Běijīng de xiàtiān hěn rè — Summers in Beijing are hot.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to see a doctor, then the Mandarin for spring, then say xiàtiān again

Before you move on

What does xiàtiān mean? ("Summer".) Say it once more.

131.4 qiūtiān — autumn

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for spring, then the Mandarin for summer.

You'll want to know: qiūtiān

qiūtiān — "autumn".

> qiūtiān bù lěng yě bú rè — Autumn is neither cold nor hot.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qiūtiān is built from qiū 'autumn' and 天 'sky', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshjuw and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary quotes an older book for the first: the time when grain is ripe.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: qiūtiān
- Say it: qiūtiān, once more
- Say it: qiūtiān bù lěng yě bú rè — Autumn is neither cold nor hot.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for spring, then the Mandarin for summer, then say qiūtiān again

Before you move on

What does qiūtiān mean? ("Autumn".) Say it once more.

131.5 dōngtiān — winter

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for summer, then the Mandarin for autumn.

You'll want to know: dōngtiān

dōngtiān — "winter".

> dōngtiān wǒ bù xiǎng chūmén — In winter I don't feel like going out.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dōngtiān is built from dōng 'winter' and 天 'sky', both inherited from Middle Chinese, towng and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'the last of the four seasons'.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: dōngtiān
- Say it: dōngtiān, once more
- Say it: dōngtiān wǒ bù xiǎng chūmén — In winter I don't feel like going out.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for summer, then the Mandarin for autumn, then say dōngtiān again

Before you move on

What does dōngtiān mean? ("Winter".) Say it once more.

131.6 jìjié — season

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for autumn, then the Mandarin for winter.

You'll want to know: jìjié

jìjié — "season".

nǐ xǐhuan nǎge jìjié — Which season do you like?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìjié is built from jì and jié, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kjwijH and tset (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'the youngest of brothers' and the second, after an older book, 'the joint of a bamboo'; how the pair came to mean a season is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: jìjié
- Say it: jìjié, once more
- Say it: nǐ xǐhuan nǎge jìjié — Which season do you like?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for autumn, then the Mandarin for winter, then say jìjié again

Before you move on

What does jìjié mean? ("Season".) Say it once more.

Chapter 132

Thousands

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count in thousands and ten thousands, say zero, and say how many in all.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 132: I can count in thousands and ten thousands, say zero, and say how many in all.

132.1 千 (qiān) — thousand

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for winter, then the Mandarin for season.

You'll want to know: 千

千 — qiān — "thousand".

> 我们大学有三千个学生 wǒmen dàxué yǒu sānqiān ge xuésheng — Our university has three thousand students.

The new character, in pieces: 千 — a short fall over 十. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 千 (qiān) is inherited from Middle Chinese tshen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'ten hundreds'.

What you've built

One more word for counting.

Your turn

- Say it: qiān
- Say it: qiān, once more
- Say it: wǒmen dàxué yǒu sānqiān ge xuésheng — Our university has three thousand students.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for winter, then the Mandarin for season, then say qiān again

Before you move on

What does 千 mean? ("Thousand".) Say it once more.

132.2 千 — a short fall over 十

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say qiān — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

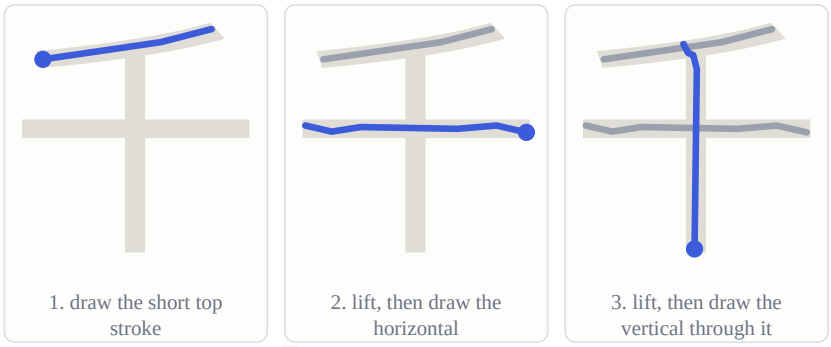
十 百

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shí, bǎi

Script — a short fall over 十

How it is written — 3 strokes · 2 pen lifts · 3 movements



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 33.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–3 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 千 is written, stroke by stroke

千

Two pieces, top to bottom.
A short left-falling stroke at the top, from the right down to the left.
十, two strokes: the horizontal across, then the vertical down through it.
1 + 2 = three.

Your turn

- Write it: 千, all three, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 千? (Three.) Which number you know sits under the fall? (十.) Which comes first, the bar or the vertical? (The bar.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 千, pinned stroke paths and medians.

132.3 wàn — ten thousand

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for season, then the Mandarin for thousand.

You'll want to know: wàn

wàn — "ten thousand".

wǒ xiǎng yǒu yíwàn kuài qián — I wish I had ten thousand yuan.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
The tone of 一 changes: yī is said yí before the fourth tone of wàn.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wàn is inherited from Middle Chinese mjonH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses this short way of writing the character 'ten thousands'; under its longer way of writing it gives the name of a dance and of an insect.

What you've built

One more word for counting.

Your turn

- Say it: wàn
- Say it: wàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng yǒu yíwàn kuài qián — I wish I had ten thousand yuan.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for season, then the Mandarin for thousand, then say wàn again

Before you move on

What does wàn mean? ("Ten thousand".) Say it once more.

132.4 líng — zero

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for thousand, then the Mandarin for ten thousand.

You'll want to know: líng

líng — "zero".

tā yìbǎi líng yī suì le — He is a hundred and one.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of líng is inherited from Middle Chinese leng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to fall' and, after an older book, 'a gentle rain'. The sense zero is not given there; how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for counting.

Your turn

- Say it: líng
- Say it: líng, once more
- Say it: tā yìbǎi líng yī suì le — He is a hundred and one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for thousand, then the Mandarin for ten thousand, then say líng again

Before you move on

What does líng mean? ("Zero".) Say it once more.

132.5 yígòng — altogether; in all

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for ten thousand, then the Mandarin for zero.

You'll want to know: yígòng

yígòng — "altogether; in all".

> wǒmen yígòng yǒu wǔ ge rén — There are five of us in all.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
The tone of 一 changes: yī is said yí before the fourth tone of gòng.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yígòng is built from 一 'one' and gòng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jit and gjowngH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'together' and 'all'.

What you've built

One more word for counting.

Your turn

- Say it: yígòng
- Say it: yígòng, once more
- Say it: wǒmen yígòng yǒu wǔ ge rén — There are five of us in all.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for ten thousand, then the Mandarin for zero, then say yígòng again

Before you move on

What does yígòng mean? ("Altogether; in all".) Say it once more.

132.6 shǔ — to count

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for zero, then the Mandarin for in all.

You'll want to know: shǔ

shǔ — "to count".

> wǒ shǔ le yígòng yǒu bā ge — I counted: there are eight in all.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shǔ is inherited from Middle Chinese srjuX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which quotes an older book: 'to reckon'.

What you've built

One more word for counting.

Your turn

- Say it: shǔ
- Say it: shǔ, once more
- Say it: wǒ shǔ le yígòng yǒu bā ge — I counted: there are eight in all.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for zero, then the Mandarin for in all, then say shǔ again

Before you move on

What does shǔ mean? ("To count".) Say it once more.

Chapter 133

Housework

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I clean, tidy up, wipe and throw things away.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 133: I can say I clean, tidy up, wipe and throw things away.

133.1 打扫 (dǎsǎo) — to clean (a room); to sweep

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for in all, then the Mandarin for to count.

You'll want to know: 打扫

打扫 — dǎsǎo — "to clean (a room); to sweep".

> 今天我们一起打扫 jīntiān wǒmen yìqǐ dǎsǎo — Today we're cleaning up together.

The new character, in pieces: 扫 — the hand piece on the left, as in 打, and on the right three strokes: a bar that turns down, and two bars inside it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

Two third tones: dǎsǎo is said dásǎo, the first rising.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 打扫 (dǎsǎo) is built from 打 'to strike', here 'to do', and sǎo 'to sweep', both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and sawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The regular sound change from taengX would not give the everyday dǎ; why is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎsǎo
- Say it: dǎsǎo, once more
- Say it: jīntiān wǒmen yìqǐ dǎsǎo — Today we're cleaning up together.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for in all, then the Mandarin for to count, then say dǎsǎo again

Before you move on

What does 打扫 mean? ("To clean (a room); to sweep".) Say it once more.

133.2 扫 — the hand piece, then three bars

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say dǎsǎo — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

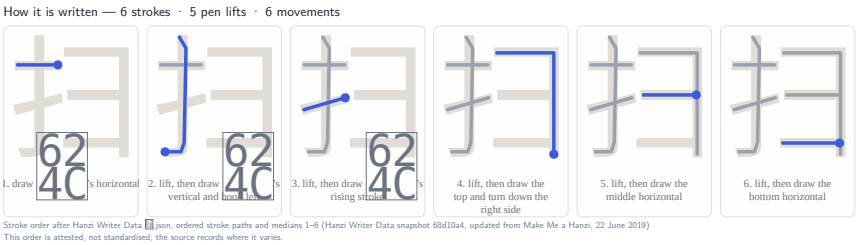
  打 手

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — dǎ, shǒu

Script — the hand piece, then three bars



How 扫 is written, stroke by stroke

扫

Two pieces, left before right.

The hand piece, three strokes, as in 打: a horizontal, a vertical that hooks to the left at its foot, then a stroke that rises to the right across it.

The right piece, three strokes. A horizontal that turns down at its right end, a horizontal across the middle, then a horizontal along the foot, which runs out past the right side.

3 + 3 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 扫, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

Which piece of 扫 comes from 打? (The hand piece, on the left.) How many strokes on the right? (Three.) Which bar runs out past the side? (The bottom one.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 扫, pinned stroke paths and medians.

133.3 jiāwù — housework

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to count, then the Mandarin for to clean (a room).

You'll want to know: jiāwù

jiāwù — "housework".

wǒ bù xǐhuan zuò jiāwù — I don't like doing housework.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiāwù is built from 家 'home' and wù 'affairs', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kae and mjuH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: jiāwù
- Say it: jiāwù, once more
- Say it: wǒ bù xǐhuan zuò jiāwù — I don't like doing housework.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to count, then the Mandarin for to clean (a room), then say jiāwù again

Before you move on

What does jiāwù mean? ("Housework".) Say it once more.

133.4 shōushi — to tidy up

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to clean (a room), then the Mandarin for housework.

You'll want to know: shōushi

shōushi — "to tidy up".

jīntiān wǒ shōushi fángjiān — Today I'm tidying my room.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shōushi is built from shōu 'to gather' and shi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, syuw and dzyip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second with this very word, and with 'to pick up'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: shōushi
- Say it: shōushi, once more
- Say it: jīntiān wǒ shōushi fángjiān — Today I'm tidying my room.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to clean (a room), then the Mandarin for housework, then say shōushi again

Before you move on

What does shōushi mean? ("To tidy up".) Say it once more.

133.5 cā — to wipe

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for housework, then the Mandarin for to tidy up.

You'll want to know: cā

cā — "to wipe".

wǒ cā zhuōzi nǐ cā yǐzi — I'll wipe the table; you wipe the chairs.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

cā No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: cā
- Say it: cā, once more
- Say it: wǒ cā zhuōzi nǐ cā yǐzi — I'll wipe the table; you wipe the chairs.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for housework, then the Mandarin for to tidy up, then say cā again

Before you move on

What does cā mean? ("To wipe".) Say it once more.

133.6 dié — to fold

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to tidy up, then the Mandarin for to wipe.

You'll want to know: dié

dié — "to fold".

wǒ dié yīfu nǐ shōushi fángjiān — I'll fold the clothes; you tidy the room.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dié is inherited from Middle Chinese dep (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'layered' and 'to pile up'; folding, a cloth laid in layers, is the likely step, though it is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: dié
- Say it: dié, once more
- Say it: wǒ dié yīfu nǐ shōushi fángjiān — I'll fold the clothes; you tidy the room.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to tidy up, then the Mandarin for to wipe, then say dié again

Before you move on

What does dié mean? ("To fold".) Say it once more.

Chapter 134

Heavy and Soft

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a thing is heavy, soft, hard, empty or full.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 134: I can say a thing is heavy, soft, hard, empty or full.

134.1 重 (zhòng) — heavy

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to wipe, then the Mandarin for to fold.

You'll want to know: 重

重 — zhòng — "heavy".

> 这个太重了 zhège tài zhòng le — This one is too heavy.

The new character, in pieces: 重 — a short fall and a long bar on top, and under them 里, its vertical running up through the bar. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 重 (zhòng) is inherited from Middle Chinese drjowngX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'much', 'thick' and 'careful'. 'Heavy' is not among the glosses, so the step to it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: zhòng
- Say it: zhòng, once more
- Say it: zhège tài zhòng le — This one is too heavy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to wipe, then the Mandarin for to fold, then say zhòng again

Before you move on

What does 重 mean? ("Heavy".) Say it once more.

134.2 重 — a fall and a bar over 里

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say zhòng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  里 千

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — lǐ, qiān

Script — a fall and a bar over 里

How 重 is written, stroke by stroke

重

Two pieces, top to bottom.

A short left-falling stroke, from the right down to the left, then a long horizontal across the whole width, as 千 begins.

里, seven strokes, in the order your hand knows: the box (its left side, the top that turns down the right side, the middle bar, the bar that closes it), then the vertical, which here starts above the long bar and runs down through it and the box, then the two bars of the foot, the lower one longer.

2 + 7 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 重, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

What sits under the long bar of 重? (里.) Where does the vertical start? (Above the long bar.) Which is the last stroke? (The long bar at the foot.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 重, pinned stroke paths and medians.

134.3 ruǎn — soft

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to fold, then the Mandarin for heavy.

You'll want to know: ruǎn

ruǎn — "soft".

zhè zhāng chuáng hěn ruǎn — This bed is soft.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of ruǎn is inherited from Middle Chinese nywenX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'soft', under an older way of writing the character.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: ruǎn
- Say it: ruǎn, once more
- Say it: zhè zhāng chuáng hěn ruǎn — This bed is soft.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to fold, then the Mandarin for heavy, then say ruǎn again

Before you move on

What does ruǎn mean? ("Soft".) Say it once more.

134.4 yìng — hard; stiff

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for heavy, then the Mandarin for soft.

You'll want to know: yìng

yìng — "hard; stiff".

zhège miànbāo tài yìng le — This bread is too hard.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yìng is inherited from Middle Chinese ngeangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'firm and sturdy'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: yìng
- Say it: yìng, once more
- Say it: zhège miànbāo tài yìng le — This bread is too hard.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for heavy, then the Mandarin for soft, then say yìng again

Before you move on

What does yìng mean? ("Hard; stiff".) Say it once more.

134.5 kōng — empty

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for soft, then the Mandarin for hard to the touch.

You'll want to know: kōng

kōng — "empty".

bīngxiāng shì kōng de — The fridge is empty.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kōng is inherited from Middle Chinese khuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'empty, hollow'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: kōng
- Say it: kōng, once more
- Say it: bīngxiāng shì kōng de — The fridge is empty.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for soft, then the Mandarin for hard to the touch, then say kōng again

Before you move on

What does kōng mean? ("Empty".) Say it once more.

134.6 mǎn — full

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hard to the touch, then the Mandarin for empty.

You'll want to know: mǎn

mǎn — "full".

wǒ de bēizi mǎn le — My cup is full.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of mǎn is inherited from Middle Chinese manX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'full' and 'to fill'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: mǎn
- Say it: mǎn, once more
- Say it: wǒ de bēizi mǎn le — My cup is full.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hard to the touch, then the Mandarin for empty, then say mǎn again

Before you move on

What does mǎn mean? ("Full".) Say it once more.

134.7 Looking back: from Quiet and Noisy to Heavy and Soft

Say the Mandarin for quiet and noisy.

Your turn

- Say it: quiet, noisy, bustling, convenient, interesting
- Say it: a sick person, to catch a cold, to have a fever, sore, to see a doctor
- Say it: spring, summer, autumn, winter, season
- Say it: thousand, ten thousand, zero, in all, to count
- Say it: to clean (a room), housework, to tidy up, to wipe, to fold
- Say it: heavy, soft, hard to the touch, empty, full
- Read it: 吵 病 春 千 扫 重 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

Quiet? (ānjìng.) Noisy? (吵, chǎo.) Bustling? (rènao.) Convenient? (fāngbiàn.) Interesting? (yǒuyìsi.) A sick person? (病人, bìngrén.) To catch a cold? (gǎnmào.) To have a fever? (fāshāo.) Sore? (téng.) To see a doctor? (看病, kànbìng.) Spring? (春天, chūntiān.) Summer? (xiàtiān.) Autumn? (qiūtiān.) Winter? (dōngtiān.) Season? (jìjié.) Thousand? (千, qiān.) Ten thousand? (wàn.) Zero? (líng.) In all? (yígòng.) To count? (shǔ.) To clean (a room)? (打扫, dǎsǎo.) Housework? (jiāwù.) To tidy up? (shōushi.) To wipe? (cā.) To fold? (dié.) Heavy? (重, zhòng.) Soft? (ruǎn.) Hard to the touch? (yìng.) Empty? (kōng.) Full? (mǎn.)

Chapter 135

Sport

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about football, basketball, matches and working out.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 135: I can talk about football, basketball, matches and working out.

135.1 zúqiú — football; soccer

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for empty, then the Mandarin for full.

You'll want to know: zúqiú

zúqiú — "football; soccer".

> wǒ xǐhuan zúqiú — I love football.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zúqiú is built from zú 'foot' and qiú 'ball', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsjowk and gjuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses gjuw as 'fine jade', and under another way of writing it as a ball of fur that is struck.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: zúqiú
- Say it: zúqiú, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan zúqiú — I love football.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for empty, then the Mandarin for full, then say zúqiú again

Before you move on

What does zúqiú mean? ("Football; soccer".) Say it once more.

135.2 lánqiú — basketball

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for full, then the Mandarin for football.

You'll want to know: lánqiú

lánqiú — "basketball".

wǒ gēge hěn gāo tā xǐhuan lánqiú — My brother is tall, and he loves basketball.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lánqiú is built from lán 'basket' and qiú 'ball'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese lam (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a basket', a different word from the lán of blue; the second is the qiú of football.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: lánqiú
- Say it: lánqiú, once more
- Say it: wǒ gēge hěn gāo tā xǐhuan lánqiú — My brother is tall, and he loves basketball.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for full, then the Mandarin for football, then say lánqiú again

Before you move on

What does lánqiú mean? ("Basketball".) Say it once more.

135.3 tī — to kick

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for football, then the Mandarin for basketball.

You'll want to know: tī

tī — "to kick".

wǒmen qù tī zúqiú — We're off to play football.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tī The character is in the Guangyun as thek (in Baxter's transcription), but only in the name of a beast; the verb is not given there. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: tī
- Say it: tī, once more
- Say it: wǒmen qù tī zúqiú — We're off to play football.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for football, then the Mandarin for basketball, then say tī again

Before you move on

What does tī mean? ("To kick".) Say it once more.

135.4 bǐsài — match; competition

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for basketball, then the Mandarin for to kick.

You'll want to know: bǐsài

bǐsài — "match; competition".

jīntiān yǒu zúqiú bǐsài — There's a football match today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bǐsài is built from bǐ 'to compare' and sài, both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjijX and sojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second 'to repay'; how the pair came to mean a match is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: bǐsài
- Say it: bǐsài, once more
- Say it: jīntiān yǒu zúqiú bǐsài — There's a football match today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for basketball, then the Mandarin for to kick, then say bǐsài again

Before you move on

What does bǐsài mean? ("Match; competition".) Say it once more.

135.5 duànliàn — to exercise; to work out

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to kick, then the Mandarin for a match.

You'll want to know: duànliàn

duànliàn — "to exercise; to work out".

wǒ xǐhuan zǎoshang duànliàn — I like working out in the morning.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of duànliàn is built from duàn 'to forge iron' and liàn 'to refine metal', both inherited from Middle Chinese, twanH and lenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The pair said of the body is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: duànliàn
- Say it: duànliàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan zǎoshang duànliàn — I like working out in the morning.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to kick, then the Mandarin for a match, then say duànliàn again

Before you move on

What does duànliàn mean? ("To exercise; to work out".) Say it once more.

Chapter 136

Because of the Weather

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give the weather as a reason: sunny, overcast, windy, thundery or cool.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 136: I can give the weather as a reason: sunny, overcast, windy, thundery or cool.

136.1 qíngtiān — sunny day; fine weather

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a match, then the Mandarin for to work out.

You'll want to know: qíngtiān

qíngtiān — "sunny day; fine weather".

> jīntiān shì qíngtiān wǒ xiǎng chūmén — It's a sunny day, so I feel like going out.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qíngtiān is built from qíng 'clear' and 天 'sky', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzjeng and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'the sky clearing'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: qíngtiān
- Say it: qíngtiān, once more
- Say it: jīntiān shì qíngtiān wǒ xiǎng chūmén — It's a sunny day, so I feel like going out.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a match, then the Mandarin for to work out, then say qíngtiān again

Before you move on

What does qíngtiān mean? ("Sunny day; fine weather".) Say it once more.

136.2 yīntiān — overcast day

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to work out, then the Mandarin for a sunny day.

You'll want to know: yīntiān

yīntiān — "overcast day".

jīntiān shì yīntiān yǒudiǎnr lěng — It's overcast today, and a bit cold.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yīntiān is built from yīn 'shade, dark' and 天 'sky', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'im and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The first has the same old form as the 音 of 音乐 but is a different word.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: yīntiān
- Say it: yīntiān, once more
- Say it: jīntiān shì yīntiān yǒudiǎnr lěng — It's overcast today, and a bit cold.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to work out, then the Mandarin for a sunny day, then say yīntiān again

Before you move on

What does yīntiān mean? ("Overcast day".) Say it once more.

136.3 guāfēng — to be windy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a sunny day, then the Mandarin for an overcast day.

You'll want to know: guāfēng

guāfēng — "to be windy".

wàibian guāfēng le — It's got windy outside.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guāfēng is built from guā 'to scrape' and fēng 'wind', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kwaet and pjuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). For the wind the first was once written with another character, which has no Guangyun reading, so how scraping came into the word is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: guāfēng
- Say it: guāfēng, once more
- Say it: wàibian guāfēng le — It's got windy outside.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a sunny day, then the Mandarin for an overcast day, then say guāfēng again

Before you move on

What does guāfēng mean? ("To be windy".) Say it once more.

136.4 dǎléi — to thunder

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an overcast day, then the Mandarin for to be windy.

You'll want to know: dǎléi

dǎléi — "to thunder".

dǎléi le wǒmen bù chūmén le — It's thundering, so we're staying in.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎléi is built from 扌丁 'to strike' and léi 'thunder', both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and lwoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), though dǎ is not the sound taengX would regularly give. The dictionary explains the second, after an older book, as yin and yang pressing on each other.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎléi
- Say it: dǎléi, once more
- Say it: dǎléi le wǒmen bù chūmén le — It's thundering, so we're staying in.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an overcast day, then the Mandarin for to be windy, then say dǎléi again

Before you move on

What does dǎléi mean? ("To thunder".) Say it once more.

136.5 liángkuai — pleasantly cool

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be windy, then the Mandarin for to thunder.

You'll want to know: liángkuai

liángkuai — "pleasantly cool".

qiūtiān hěn liángkuai — Autumn is nice and cool.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of liángkuai is built from liáng 'cool' and 快, glossed 'to one's liking', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ljang and khwaejH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): cool and pleasant.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: liángkuai
- Say it: liángkuai, once more
- Say it: qiūtiān hěn liángkuai — Autumn is nice and cool.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be windy, then the Mandarin for to thunder, then say liángkuai again

Before you move on

What does liángkuai mean? ("Pleasantly cool".) Say it once more.

Chapter 137

Holidays

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about festivals, the Spring Festival, the New Year and time off.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 137: I can talk about festivals, the Spring Festival, the New Year and time off.

137.1 节日 (jiérì) — festival

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to thunder, then the Mandarin for pleasantly cool.

You'll want to know: 节日

节日 — jiérì — "festival".

> 今天是什么节日 jīntiān shì shénme jiérì — What festival is it today?

The new character, in pieces: 节 — the grass piece on top, a bar crossed by two short verticals, and under it a bar that turns down into a hook, with a long vertical through it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 节日 (jiérì) is built from 节 'a joint' and 日 'day', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tset and nyit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription);

the dictionary quotes an older book for the first: the joint of a bamboo. A festival as a joint in the year is the likely image, though it is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: jiérì
- Say it: jiérì, once more
- Say it: jīntiān shì shénme jiérì — What festival is it today?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to thunder, then the Mandarin for pleasantly cool, then say jiérì again

Before you move on

What does 节日 mean? ("Festival".) Say it once more.

137.2 节 — the grass piece over a hook

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say jiérì — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  菜 日

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — cài, rì

Script — the grass piece over a hook

How 节 is written, stroke by stroke

节

Two pieces, top to bottom.

The grass piece, three strokes, as on top of 菜: a horizontal across, then a short vertical on the left and a short vertical on the right, both crossing it.

The lower piece, two strokes. A horizontal that turns down and ends in a hook to the left, then a long vertical down through it to the foot.

3 + 2 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 节, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many pieces in 节? (Two.) How many strokes in the grass piece? (Three.) Which stroke is the last? (The long vertical.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 节, pinned stroke paths and medians.

137.3 春节 (Chūnjié) — the Spring Festival; Chinese New Year

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for pleasantly cool, then the Mandarin for festival.

You'll want to know: 春节

春节 — Chūnjié — "the Spring Festival; Chinese New Year".

春节前大家都打扫 Chūnjié qián dàjiā dōu dǎsǎo — Before the festival, everybody cleans the house.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 春节 (Chūnjié) is built from 春 'spring' and 节 'festival', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwin and tset (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the festival at the head of spring.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: Chūnjié
- Say it: Chūnjié, once more
- Say it: Chūnjié qián dàjiā dōu dǎsǎo — Before the festival, everybody cleans the house.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for pleasantly cool, then the Mandarin for festival, then say Chūnjié again

Before you move on

What does 春节 mean? ("The Spring Festival; Chinese New Year".) Say it once more.

137.4 guònián — to celebrate the New Year

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for festival, then the Mandarin for Chinese New Year.

You'll want to know: guònián

guònián — "to celebrate the New Year".

> guònián wǒmen chī jiǎozi — We eat dumplings to see in the new year.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guònián is built from guò 'to pass' and 年 'year', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kwaH and nen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The pair is not given there; seeing the year through is the plain picture, but how it came to mean celebrating is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: guònián
- Say it: guònián, once more
- Say it: guònián wǒmen chī jiǎozi — We eat dumplings to see in the new year.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for festival, then the Mandarin for Chinese New Year, then say guònián again

Before you move on

What does guònián mean? ("To celebrate the New Year".) Say it once more.

137.5 fàngjià — to have time off; to go on holiday

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for Chinese New Year, then the Mandarin for to celebrate the New Year.

You'll want to know: fàngjià

fàngjià — "to have time off; to go on holiday".

míngtiān wǒmen fàngjià — We're off tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fàngjià is built from fàng 'to let go' and jià 'leave', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjangH and kaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to borrow' and 'leave from duty'.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: fàngjià
- Say it: fàngjià, once more
- Say it: míngtiān wǒmen fàngjià — We're off tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for Chinese New Year, then the Mandarin for to celebrate the New Year, then say fàngjià again

Before you move on

What does fàngjià mean? ("To have time off; to go on holiday".) Say it once more.

137.6 jiàqī — holidays; time off

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to celebrate the New Year, then the Mandarin for to have time off.

You'll want to know: jiàqī

jiàqī — "holidays; time off".

> fàngjià le jiàqī nǐ xiǎng qù nǎr — We're on holiday now; where would you like to go?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiàqī is built from jià 'leave' and 期 'a set time', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kaeH and gi (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: jiàqī
- Say it: jiàqī, once more
- Say it: fàngjià le jiàqī nǐ xiǎng qù nǎr — We're on holiday now; where would you like to go?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to celebrate the New Year, then the Mandarin for to have time off, then say jiàqī again

Before you move on

What does jiàqī mean? ("Holidays; time off".) Say it once more.

Chapter 138

Every and Other

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say every, myself, other people, all and the others.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 138: I can say every, myself, other people, all and the others.

138.1 每 (měi) — every; each

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have time off, then the Mandarin for the holidays.

You'll want to know: 每

每 — měi — "every; each".

> 我们每个星期六都打扫 wǒmen měi ge xīngqīliù dōu dǎsǎo — We clean the house every Saturday.

The new character, in pieces: 每 — a short fall and a short bar on top, then a box: a vertical that turns right along the bottom, a bar that turns down the right side and hooks, a dot, a long bar across, and a dot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 每 (měi) is inherited from Middle Chinese mwojX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'frequently' and as a particle. 'Every' is not among the glosses, so how it got that sense is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for pointing things out.

Your turn

- Say it: měi
- Say it: měi, once more
- Say it: wǒmen měi ge xīngqīliù dōu dǎsǎo — We clean the house every Saturday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have time off, then the Mandarin for the holidays, then say měi again

Before you move on

What does 每 mean? ("Every; each".) Say it once more.

138.2 每 — a fall and a bar over a dotted box

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say měi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

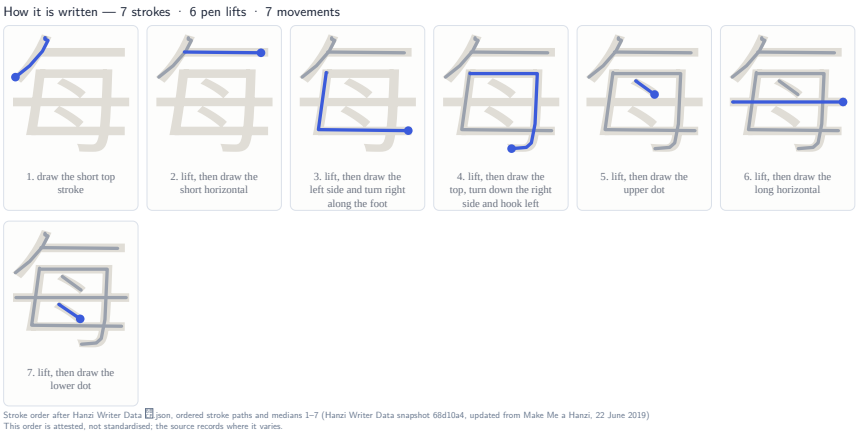
  天 个

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — tiān, gè

Script — a fall and a bar over a dotted box



How 每 is written, stroke by stroke

每

Two pieces, top to bottom.

The top, two strokes. A short left-falling stroke, then a short horizontal running right from it.

The box, five strokes. A vertical that runs down the left and turns right along the bottom; a horizontal across the top that turns down the right side, past the bottom, and hooks to the left; a dot inside the upper half; a long horizontal across the middle, out past both sides; then a dot inside the lower half.

2 + 5 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 每, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 每? (Seven.) Which stroke runs out past both sides? (The long horizontal across the middle.) Where are the two dots? (Inside the box, one above that bar and one below it.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 每, pinned stroke paths and medians.

138.3 zìjǐ — oneself

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the holidays, then the Mandarin for each.

You'll want to know: zìjǐ

zìjǐ — "oneself".

wǒ zìjǐ zuòfàn — I cook for myself.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zìjǐ is built from zì 'from' and jǐ 'self', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzijH and kiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'one's own body'.

What you've built

One more word for pointing things out.

Your turn

- Say it: zìjǐ
- Say it: zìjǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒ zìjǐ zuòfàn — I cook for myself.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the holidays, then the Mandarin for each, then say zìjǐ again

Before you move on

What does zìjǐ mean? ("Oneself".) Say it once more.

138.4 biérén — other people

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for each, then the Mandarin for oneself.

You'll want to know: biérén

biérén — "other people".

wǒ de shū wǒ bù xiǎng gěi biérén — I don't want to give my books to anyone else.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of biérén is built from bié 'different', as in biéde, and 人 'person', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjet and nyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for pointing things out.

Your turn

- Say it: biérén
- Say it: biérén, once more
- Say it: wǒ de shū wǒ bù xiǎng gěi biérén — I don't want to give my books to anyone else.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for each, then the Mandarin for oneself, then say biérén again

Before you move on

What does biérén mean? ("Other people".) Say it once more.

138.5 suǒyǒu — all; every

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for oneself, then the Mandarin for other people.

You'll want to know: suǒyǒu

suǒyǒu — "all; every".

> suǒyǒu de rén dōu lái le — Everyone has come.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Two third tones: suǒyǒu is said suóyǒu, the first rising.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of suǒyǒu is built from suǒ 'a place', the suǒ of suǒyǐ, and 有 'to have', both inherited from Middle Chinese, srjoX and hjuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). How the pair came to mean all is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for pointing things out.

Your turn

- Say it: suǒyǒu
- Say it: suǒyǒu, once more
- Say it: suǒyǒu de rén dōu lái le — Everyone has come.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for oneself, then the Mandarin for other people, then say suǒyǒu again

Before you move on

What does suǒyǒu mean? ("All; every".) Say it once more.

138.6 qítā — other; the others

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for other people, then the Mandarin for every single.

You'll want to know: qítā

qítā — "other; the others".

> wǒ xǐhuan zhège qítā de wǒ bú yào — I like this one; I don't want the others.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qítā is built from qí, which the dictionary lists as a particle, and 他, glossed 'not I', both inherited from Middle Chinese, gi and tha (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for pointing things out.

Your turn

- Say it: qítā
- Say it: qítā, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan zhège qítā de wǒ bú yào — I like this one; I don't want the others.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for other people, then the Mandarin for every single, then say qítā again

Before you move on

What does qítā mean? ("Other; the others".) Say it once more.

Chapter 139

Colours and Shapes

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name green, yellow, grey and pink, and say that something is round.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 139: I can name green, yellow, grey and pink, and say that something is round.

139.1 lǜ — green

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for every single, then the Mandarin for the others.

You'll want to know: lǜ

lǜ — "green".

> chūntiān de cǎo hěn lǜ — In spring the grass is very green.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǜ is inherited from Middle Chinese ljowk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the colour of blue and yellow'. The regular sound change would give lù; why the everyday word is lǜ is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: lǜ
- Say it: lǜ, once more
- Say it: chūntiān de cǎo hěn lǜ — In spring the grass is very green.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for every single, then the Mandarin for the others, then say lǜ again

Before you move on

What does lǜ mean? ("Green".) Say it once more.

139.2 huáng — yellow

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the others, then the Mandarin for green.

You'll want to know: huáng

huáng — "yellow".

zhège píngguǒ shì huáng de — This apple is a yellow one.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huáng is inherited from Middle Chinese hwang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the colour of the centre'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: huáng
- Say it: huáng, once more
- Say it: zhège píngguǒ shì huáng de — This apple is a yellow one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the others, then the Mandarin for green, then say huáng again

Before you move on

What does huáng mean? ("Yellow".) Say it once more.

139.3 huī — grey

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for green, then the Mandarin for yellow.

You'll want to know: huī

huī — "grey".

wǒ de māo shì huī de — My cat is a grey one.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huī is inherited from Middle Chinese xwoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which quotes an older book: 'dead fire', that is, ash. The colour of ash is the likely step to grey, though it is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: huī
- Say it: huī, once more

- Say it: wǒ de māo shì huī de — My cat is a grey one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for green, then the Mandarin for yellow, then say huī again

Before you move on

What does huī mean? ("Grey".) Say it once more.

139.4 yuán — round

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for yellow, then the Mandarin for grey.

You'll want to know: yuán

yuán — "round".

zhè zhāng zhuōzi shì yuán de — This table is a round one.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yuán is inherited from Middle Chinese hjwen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the form of heaven'. The plain sense round is not among the glosses, so the step is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: yuán
- Say it: yuán, once more
- Say it: zhè zhāng zhuōzi shì yuán de — This table is a round one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for yellow, then the Mandarin for grey, then say yuán again

Before you move on

What does yuán mean? (“Round”.) Say it once more.

139.5 fěnhóng — pink

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for grey, then the Mandarin for round.

You’ll want to know: fěnhóng

fěnhóng — “pink”.

tā de màozi shì fěnhóng de — Her hat is a pink one.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fěnhóng is built from fěn ’powder’ and hóng ’red’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjunX and huwng (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription): red as pale as face powder. The dictionary glosses the first with a powder made by burning lead.

What you’ve built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: fěnhóng
- Say it: fěnhóng, once more
- Say it: tā de màozi shì fěnhóng de — Her hat is a pink one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for grey, then the Mandarin for round, then say fěnhóng again

Before you move on

What does fěnhóng mean? (“Pink”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 140

First and Half

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say first, half, how many times, the most, and work a sum out.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 140: I can say first, half, how many times, the most, and work a sum out.

140.1 dìyī — first

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for round, then the Mandarin for pink.

You'll want to know: dìyī

dìyī — "first".

zhè shì wǒ de dìyī ge shǒujī — This is my first phone.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

一 keeps its first tone here: in a number that gives an order, yī does not change its tone.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dìyī is built from dì 'order, rank' and 一 'one', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dejH and 'jit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for counting.

Your turn

- Say it: dìyī
- Say it: dìyī, once more
- Say it: zhè shì wǒ de dìyī ge shǒujī — This is my first phone.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for round, then the Mandarin for pink, then say dìyī again

Before you move on

What does dìyī mean? ("First".) Say it once more.

140.2 一半 (yíbàn) — one half; half (of something)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for pink, then the Mandarin for first.

You'll want to know: 一半

一半 — yíbàn — "one half; half (of something)".

两千的一半是一千 liǎngqiān de yíbàn shì yìqiān — Half of two thousand is one thousand.

The new character, in pieces: 半 — two short dots on top, two bars, and a long vertical down through them. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The tone of 一 changes: yī is said yí before the fourth tone of bàn.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 一半 (yíbàn) is built from 一 'one' and 半, inherited from Middle Chinese 'jit and panH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second 'a thing divided in the middle', the bàn of half past.

What you've built

One more word for counting.

Your turn

- Say it: yíbàn
- Say it: yíbàn, once more
- Say it: liǎngqiān de yíbàn shì yìqiān — Half of two thousand is one thousand.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for pink, then the Mandarin for first, then say yíbàn again

Before you move on

What does 一半 mean? ("One half; half (of something)".) Say it once more.

140.3 半 — two dots, two bars, one vertical

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say yíbàn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

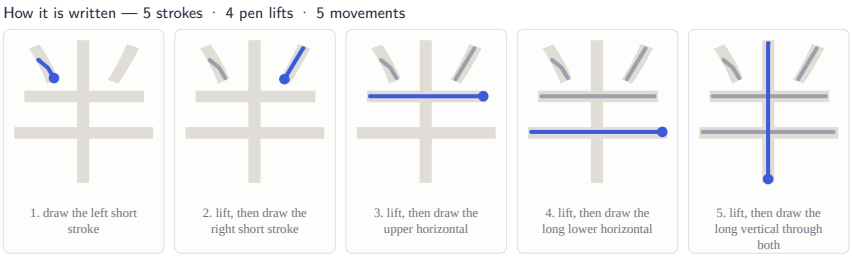
二 千

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — èr, qiān

Script — two dots, two bars, one vertical



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data .json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–5 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 半 is written, stroke by stroke

半

One piece, five strokes.

Two short dots at the top, leaning toward each other: the left one falls to the lower right, the right one to the lower left.

Two horizontals, short over long, the two bars of 二.

A long vertical from above the shorter bar, straight down through both to the foot.

2 + 2 + 1 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 半, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 半? (Five.) Which way do the two dots lean? (Toward each other.) What comes last? (The long vertical.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 半, pinned stroke paths and medians.

140.4 cì — time (one occurrence)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for first, then the Mandarin for one half.

You'll want to know: cì

cì — "time (one occurrence)".

zhè shì wǒ dìyī cì lái Běijīng — This is my first time in Beijing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cì is inherited from Middle Chinese tshijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'order, sequence' and 'a halt on a journey'.

What you've built

One more word for counting.

Your turn

- Say it: cì
- Say it: cì, once more
- Say it: zhè shì wǒ dìyī cì lái Běijīng — This is my first time in Beijing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for first, then the Mandarin for one half, then say cì again

Before you move on

What does cì mean? ("Time (one occurrence)".) Say it once more.

140.5 zuì — most

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for one half, then the Mandarin for one occurrence.

You'll want to know: zuì

zuì — "most".

wǒ zuì xǐhuan chūntiān — Spring is my favourite.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

zuì is inherited from Middle Chinese tswajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'utmost'.

What you've built

One more word for counting.

Your turn

- Say it: zuì
- Say it: zuì, once more
- Say it: wǒ zuì xǐhuan chūntiān — Spring is my favourite.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for one half, then the Mandarin for one occurrence, then say zuì again

Before you move on

What does zuì mean? ("Most".) Say it once more.

140.6 suàn — to calculate; to work out

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for one occurrence, then the Mandarin for most.

You'll want to know: suàn

suàn — "to calculate; to work out".

wǒ suàn le yígòng shì sānshí kuài — I've worked it out: thirty yuan in all.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of suàn is inherited from Middle Chinese swanX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the number of things'. The regular sound change would give a third tone, suǎn, not suàn; why is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for counting.

Your turn

- Say it: suàn
- Say it: suàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ suàn le yígòng shì sānshí kuài — I've worked it out: thirty yuan in all.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for one occurrence, then the Mandarin for most, then say suàn again

Before you move on

What does suàn mean? ("To calculate; to work out".) Say it once more.

140.7 Looking back: from Sport to First and Half

Say the Mandarin for football and basketball.

Your turn

- Say it: football, basketball, to kick, a match, to work out
- Say it: a sunny day, an overcast day, to be windy, to thunder, pleasantly cool
- Say it: festival, Chinese New Year, to celebrate the New Year, to have time off, the holidays
- Say it: each, oneself, other people, every single, the others
- Say it: green, yellow, grey, round, pink
- Say it: first, one half, one occurrence, most, to calculate
- Read it: 节 每 半 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

Football? (zúqiú.) Basketball? (lánqiú.) To kick? (tī.) A match? (bǐsài.) To work out? (duànliàn.) A sunny day? (qíngtiān.) An overcast day? (yīntiān.) To be windy? (guāfēng.) To thunder? (dǎléi.) Pleasantly cool? (liángkuai.) Festival? (节日, jiérì.) Chinese New Year? (春节, Chūnjié.) To celebrate the New Year? (guònián.) To have time off? (fàngjià.) The holidays? (jiàqī.) Each? (每, měi.) Oneself? (zìjǐ.) Other people? (biérén.) Every single? (suǒyǒu.) The others? (qítā.) Green? (lǜ.) Yellow? (huáng.) Grey? (huī.) Round? (yuán.) Pink? (fěnhóng.) First? (dìyī.) One half? (一半, yíbàn.) One occurrence? (cì.) Most? (zuì.) To calculate? (suàn.)

Chapter 141

Travel and Fun

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about travelling, games, going round the shops, walks and fishing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 141: I can talk about travelling, games, going round the shops, walks and fishing.

141.1 lǚyóu — to travel; to tour

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for most, then the Mandarin for to calculate.

You'll want to know: lǚyóu

lǚyóu — "to travel; to tour".

> wǒ xǐhuan lǚyóu — I love travelling.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǚyóu is built from lǚ and yóu, both inherited from Middle Chinese, ljoX and yuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'a body of troops' and the second 'to float, to roam', the yóu of yóuyǒng. 'Journey' for the first is not given there; how it got that sense is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: lǚyóu
- Say it: lǚyóu, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan lǚyóu — I love travelling.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for most, then the Mandarin for to calculate, then say lǚyóu again

Before you move on

What does lǚyóu mean? ("To travel; to tour".) Say it once more.

141.2 yóuxì — game

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to calculate, then the Mandarin for to travel.

You'll want to know: yóuxì

yóuxì — "game".

wǒ érzi hěn xǐhuan wán yóuxì — My son loves playing games.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yóuxì is built from yóu 'to roam' and xì 'to play, to tease', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yuw and xjeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: yóuxì
- Say it: yóuxì, once more
- Say it: wǒ érzi hěn xǐhuan wán yóuxì — My son loves playing games.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to calculate, then the Mandarin for to travel, then say yóuxì again

Before you move on

What does yóuxì mean? ("Game".) Say it once more.

141.3 guàngjiē — to stroll the shops; to go window-shopping

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to travel, then the Mandarin for a game.

You'll want to know: guàngjiē

guàngjiē — "to stroll the shops; to go window-shopping".

zhōumò wǒmen qù guàngjiē — At the weekend we're going round the shops.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guàngjiē is built from guàng and jiē 'street', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kjwangX and kea (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'the look of walking'; the regular sound change would give it a third tone, so the fourth tone of guàng is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: guàngjiē
- Say it: guàngjiē, once more
- Say it: zhōumò wǒmen qù guàngjiē — At the weekend we're going round the shops.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to travel, then the Mandarin for a game, then say guàngjiē again

Before you move on

What does guàngjiē mean? ("To stroll the shops; to go window-shopping".) Say it once more.

141.4 sànbù — to take a walk

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a game, then the Mandarin for to stroll the shops.

You'll want to know: sànbù

sànbù — "to take a walk".

wǎnfàn yǐhòu wǒmen qù sànbù — After dinner we go for a walk.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of sànbù is built from sàn 'to scatter, to spread out' and bù 'step', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sanH and buH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): steps let loose.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: sànbù
- Say it: sànbù, once more
- Say it: wǎnfàn yǐhòu wǒmen qù sànbù — After dinner we go for a walk.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a game, then the Mandarin for to stroll the shops, then say sànbù again

Before you move on

What does sànbù mean? ("To take a walk".) Say it once more.

141.5 diàoyú — to go fishing

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to stroll the shops, then the Mandarin for to take a walk.

You'll want to know: diàoyú

diàoyú — "to go fishing".

wǒ bàba xǐhuan diàoyú — My dad loves fishing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of diàoyú is built from diào 'to angle' and yú 'fish', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tewH and ngjo (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first with this very word, 'to fish'.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: diàoyú
- Say it: diàoyú, once more
- Say it: wǒ bàba xǐhuan diàoyú — My dad loves fishing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to stroll the shops, then the Mandarin for to take a walk, then say diàoyú again

Before you move on

What does diàoyú mean? ("To go fishing".) Say it once more.

Chapter 142

More Housework

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about mopping, rubbish, drying things in the sun, sorting things out and watering the plants.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 142: I can talk about mopping, rubbish, drying things in the sun, sorting things out and watering the plants.

142.1 tuōdì — to mop the floor

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to take a walk, then the Mandarin for to go fishing.

You'll want to know: tuōdì

tuōdì — "to mop the floor".

> wǒ měitiān tuōdì — I mop the floor every day.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tuōdì is built from tuō 'to drag' and dì 'ground', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tha and dijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to drag' under an older way of writing it, and notes that it is popularly written the modern way; tha is also the old form of the word for he, a different word.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: tuōdì
- Say it: tuōdì, once more
- Say it: wǒ měitiān tuōdì — I mop the floor every day.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to take a walk, then the Mandarin for to go fishing, then say tuōdì again

Before you move on

What does tuōdì mean? ("To mop the floor".) Say it once more.

142.2 lājī — rubbish

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go fishing, then the Mandarin for to mop the floor.

You'll want to know: lājī

lājī — "rubbish".

ménkǒu yǒu lājī — There's rubbish by the door.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lājī No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: lājī
- Say it: lājī, once more
- Say it: ménkǒu yǒu lājī — There's rubbish by the door.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go fishing, then the Mandarin for to mop the floor, then say lājī again

Before you move on

What does lājī mean? ("Rubbish".) Say it once more.

142.3 shài — to dry in the sun

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to mop the floor, then the Mandarin for rubbish.

You'll want to know: shài

shài — "to dry in the sun".

jīntiān shì qíngtiān wǒmen shài yīfu — It's a sunny day, so we're putting the washing out to dry.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shài is inherited from Middle Chinese sreaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to sun, to expose to the sun'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: shài
- Say it: shài, once more

- Say it: jīntiān shì qíngtiān wǒmen shài yīfu — It's a sunny day, so we're putting the washing out to dry.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to mop the floor, then the Mandarin for rubbish, then say shài again

Before you move on

What does shài mean? ("To dry in the sun".) Say it once more.

142.4 zhěnglǐ — to sort out; to put in order

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for rubbish, then the Mandarin for to dry in the sun.

You'll want to know: zhěnglǐ

zhěnglǐ — "to sort out; to put in order".

wǒ zhěnglǐ le wǒ de shū — I've sorted out my books.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Two third tones: zhěnglǐ is said zhénglǐ, the first rising.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhěnglǐ is built from zhěng 'straight, even' and lǐ 'to put in order', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyengX and liX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary quotes an older book for the second: to work jade.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: zhěnglǐ
- Say it: zhěnglǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒ zhěnglǐ le wǒ de shū — I've sorted out my books.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for rubbish, then the Mandarin for to dry in the sun, then say zhěnglǐ again

Before you move on

What does zhěnglǐ mean? ("To sort out; to put in order".) Say it once more.

142.5 jiāohuā — to water the plants

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to dry in the sun, then the Mandarin for to sort out.

You'll want to know: jiāohuā

jiāohuā — "to water the plants".

jīntiān nǐ jiāohuā wǒ tuōdì — Today you water the plants and I'll mop the floor.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiāohuā is built from jiāo 'to pour water on' and huā 'flower', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kew and xwae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: jiāohuā
- Say it: jiāohuā, once more
- Say it: jīntiān nǐ jiāohuā wǒ tuōdì — Today you water the plants and I'll mop the floor.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to dry in the sun, then the Mandarin for to sort out, then say jiāohuā again

Before you move on

What does jiāohuā mean? ("To water the plants".) Say it once more.

Chapter 143

Clock Words

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say seconds and minutes, the minutes before the hour, and when things begin and end.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 143: I can say seconds and minutes, the minutes before the hour, and when things begin and end.

143.1 miǎo — second (of time)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sort out, then the Mandarin for to water the plants.

You'll want to know: miǎo

miǎo — "second (of time)".

> qǐng děng wǔ miǎo — Please wait five seconds.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of miǎo is inherited from Middle Chinese mjiewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the beard of grain'. The tiny unit of time is not given there; the step from something very fine is the likely one, but it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: miǎo
- Say it: miǎo, once more
- Say it: qǐng děng wǔ miǎo — Please wait five seconds.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sort out, then the Mandarin for to water the plants, then say miǎo again

Before you move on

What does miǎo mean? ("Second (of time)".) Say it once more.

143.2 fēnzhōng — minute (a length of time)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to water the plants, then the Mandarin for second (of time).

You'll want to know: fēnzhōng

fēnzhōng — "minute (a length of time)".

shí fēnzhōng yǐhòu wǒmen zǒu — We're leaving in ten minutes.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fēnzhōng is built from fēn, the minute of the clock, and zhōng 'bell', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjun and tsyowng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second as a musical instrument.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: fēnzhōng
- Say it: fēnzhōng, once more
- Say it: shí fēnzhōng yǐhòu wǒmen zǒu — We're leaving in ten minutes.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to water the plants, then the Mandarin for second (of time), then say fēnzhōng again

Before you move on

What does fēnzhōng mean? ("Minute (a length of time)".) Say it once more.

143.3 chà — to be short of; to (before the hour)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for second (of time), then the Mandarin for minute (a length of time).

You'll want to know: chà

chà — "to be short of; to (before the hour)".

xiànzài chà wǔ fēn bā diǎn — It's five to eight now.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chà is inherited from Middle Chinese, where the Guangyun lists several readings; tsrhae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription) is glossed 'to choose' and 'amiss'. None of them gives the fourth tone of chà by the regular sound change, so how this reading came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: chà
- Say it: chà, once more
- Say it: xiànzài chà wǔ fēn bā diǎn — It's five to eight now.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for second (of time), then the Mandarin for minute (a length of time), then say chà again

Before you move on

What does chà mean? ("To be short of; to (before the hour)".) Say it once more.

143.4 zhǔnshí — on time; punctual

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for minute (a length of time), then the Mandarin for to be short of.

You'll want to know: zhǔnshí

zhǔnshí — "on time; punctual".

huǒchē hěn zhǔnshí — The trains run on time.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhǔnshí is built from zhǔn 'level, a standard', the zhǔn of zhǔnbèi, and 时 'time', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsywinX and dzyi (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): true to the time.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǔnshí
- Say it: zhǔnshí, once more
- Say it: huǒchē hěn zhǔnshí — The trains run on time.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for minute (a length of time), then the Mandarin for to be short of, then say zhǔnshí again

Before you move on

What does zhǔnshí mean? ("On time; punctual".) Say it once more.

143.5 半天 (bàntiān) — a long while; half a day

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be short of, then the Mandarin for punctual.

You'll want to know: 半天

半天 — bàntiān — "a long while; half a day".

wǒ děng le bàntiān — I waited for ages.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 半天 (bàntiān) is built from 半 'half' and 天 'day', both inherited from Middle Chinese, panH and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): half a day, and in everyday talk, often with a sigh, a long while.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: bàntiān
- Say it: bàntiān, once more
- Say it: wǒ děng le bàntiān — I waited for ages.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be short of, then the Mandarin for punctual, then say bàntiān again

Before you move on

What does 半天 mean? ("A long while; half a day".) Say it once more.

Chapter 144

Easy and Important

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a thing is important, easy, simple or special, and what I think of it.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 144: I can say a thing is important, easy, simple or special, and what I think of it.

144.1 重要 (zhòngyào) — important

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for punctual, then the Mandarin for a long while.

You'll want to know: 重要

重要 — zhòngyào — "important".

> 每天喝水很重要 měitiān hē shuǐ hěn zhòngyào — Drinking water every day is important.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 重要 (zhòngyào) is built from 重 'heavy' and 要, glossed 'to bind, to agree', both inherited from Middle Chinese, drjowngX and 'jiewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). How the pair came to mean important is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: zhòngyào
- Say it: zhòngyào, once more
- Say it: měitiān hē shuǐ hěn zhòngyào — Drinking water every day is important.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for punctual, then the Mandarin for a long while, then say zhòngyào again

Before you move on

What does 重要 mean? ("Important".) Say it once more.

144.2 róngyì — easy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a long while, then the Mandarin for important.

You'll want to know: róngyì

róngyì — "easy".

hànzì bù róngyì — Chinese characters aren't easy.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of róngyì is built from róng 'to hold' and yì 'easy', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yowng and yeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second 'hard and easy' and 'simple'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: róngyì
- Say it: róngyì, once more
- Say it: hànzì bù róngyì — Chinese characters aren't easy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a long while, then the Mandarin for important, then say róngyì again

Before you move on

What does róngyì mean? ("Easy".) Say it once more.

144.3 jiǎndān — simple

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for important, then the Mandarin for easy.

You'll want to know: jiǎndān

jiǎndān — "simple".

zhège hěn jiǎndān — This one's simple.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiǎndān is built from jiǎn 'brief' and dān 'single', both inherited from Middle Chinese, keanX and tan (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as a slip of bamboo for writing on, and 'brief'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: jiǎndān
- Say it: jiǎndān, once more
- Say it: zhège hěn jiǎndān — This one's simple.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for important, then the Mandarin for easy, then say jiǎndān again

Before you move on

What does jiǎndān mean? ("Simple".) Say it once more.

144.4 tèbié — special; especially

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for easy, then the Mandarin for simple.

You'll want to know: tèbié

tèbié — "special; especially".

zhège dìfang hěn tèbié — This place is special.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tèbié is built from tè 'alone' and bié 'different', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dok and bjet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: tèbié
- Say it: tèbié, once more

- Say it: zhège dìfang hěn tèbié — This place is special.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for easy, then the Mandarin for simple, then say tèbié again

Before you move on

What does tèbié mean? ("Special; especially".) Say it once more.

144.5 juéde — to find (that); to feel; to think (that)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for simple, then the Mandarin for special.

You'll want to know: juéde

juéde — "to find (that); to feel; to think (that)".

wǒ juéde hànyǔ hěn yǒuyìsi — I find Chinese interesting.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of juéde is built from jué, glossed 'to understand' and 'to wake', and de, from a word glossed 'to get', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kaewk and tok (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: juéde
- Say it: juéde, once more
- Say it: wǒ juéde hànyǔ hěn yǒuyìsi — I find Chinese interesting.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for simple, then the Mandarin for special, then say juéde again

Before you move on

What does juéde mean? ("To find (that); to feel; to think (that)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 145

Late Again

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give reasons for being late: the train, the alarm clock, a lie-in.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 145: I can give reasons for being late: the train, the alarm clock, a lie-in.

145.1 yuányīn — reason; cause

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for special, then the Mandarin for to find (that).

You'll want to know: yuányīn

yuányīn — "reason; cause".

> wǒ bù zhīdào shì shénme yuányīn — I don't know what the reason is.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yuányīn is built from yuán and 因 'because', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngjwon and 'jin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'a broad plain' and the second 'to follow from'; how the first came to mean origin is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: yuányīn
- Say it: yuányīn, once more
- Say it: wǒ bù zhīdào shì shénme yuányīn — I don't know what the reason is.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for special, then the Mandarin for to find (that), then say yuányīn again

Before you move on

What does yuányīn mean? ("Reason; cause".) Say it once more.

145.2 晚点 (wǎndiǎn) — to run behind schedule; to be late (of a train or plane)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to find (that), then the Mandarin for a reason.

You'll want to know: 晚点

晚点 — wǎndiǎn — "to run behind schedule; to be late (of a train or plane)".

> 火车晚点了半个小时 huǒchē wǎndiǎn le bàn ge xiǎoshí — The train was half an hour late.

Two third tones: wǎndiǎn is said wándiǎn, the first rising.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 晚点 (wǎndiǎn) is built from 晚 and 点, both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjonX and temX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'dusk' and 'a dot'. Late against the hour is the sense of the pair, which the dictionary does not give.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: wǎndiǎn
- Say it: wǎndiǎn, once more
- Say it: huǒchē wǎndiǎn le bàn ge xiǎoshí — The train was half an hour late.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to find (that), then the Mandarin for a reason, then say wǎndiǎn again

Before you move on

What does 晚点 mean? ("To run behind schedule; to be late (of a train or plane)".) Say it once more.

145.3 nàozhōng — alarm clock

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a reason, then the Mandarin for to run behind schedule.

You'll want to know: nàozhōng

nàozhōng — "alarm clock".

wǒ méiyǒu nàozhōng suǒyǐ wǒ chídào le — I haven't got an alarm clock, so I was late.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nàozhōng is built from nào 'to stir up', the nao of rènao, and zhōng 'bell', the zhōng of fēnzhōng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, nraewH and tsyowng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): a bell that stirs you up.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: nàozhōng
- Say it: nàozhōng, once more
- Say it: wǒ méiyǒu nàozhōng suǒyǐ wǒ chídào le — I haven't got an alarm clock, so I was late.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a reason, then the Mandarin for to run behind schedule, then say nàozhōng again

Before you move on

What does nàozhōng mean? ("Alarm clock".) Say it once more.

145.4 shuì lǎnjiào — to sleep in; to lie in

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to run behind schedule, then the Mandarin for alarm clock.

You'll want to know: shuì lǎnjiào

shuì lǎnjiào — "to sleep in; to lie in".

jīntiān shì xīngqītiān wǒ xiǎng shuì lǎnjiào — It's Sunday, so I want a lie-in.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shuì lǎnjiào is built from shuì 'to sleep', lǎn 'lazy' and jiào 'a sleep', all inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyweH, lanX and kaewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the last with the word shuìjiào itself.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: shuì lǎnjiào
- Say it: shuì lǎnjiào, once more
- Say it: jīntiān shì xīngqītiān wǒ xiǎng shuì lǎnjiào — It's Sunday, so I want a lie-in.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to run behind schedule, then the Mandarin for alarm clock, then say shuì lǎnjiào again

Before you move on

What does shuì lǎnjiào mean? ("To sleep in; to lie in".) Say it once more.

145.5 gǎnkuài — quickly; hurry

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for alarm clock, then the Mandarin for to lie in.

You'll want to know: gǎnkuài

gǎnkuài — "quickly; hurry".

bā diǎn shàngkè wǒmen gǎnkuài zǒu — Class is at eight, so let's hurry.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gǎnkuài is built from gǎn 'to hurry' and 快 'fast'. 快 is inherited from Middle Chinese khwaejH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: gǎnkuài
- Say it: gǎnkuài, once more
- Say it: bā diǎn shàngkè wǒmen gǎnkuài zǒu — Class is at eight, so let's hurry.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for alarm clock, then the Mandarin for to lie in, then say gǎnkuài again

Before you move on

What does gǎnkuài mean? ("Quickly; hurry".) Say it once more.

Chapter 146

Day and Night

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the daytime, the night, the middle of the night, waking up and what I usually do.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 146: I can talk about the daytime, the night, the middle of the night, waking up and what I usually do.

146.1 白天 (báitiān) — daytime

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to lie in, then the Mandarin for hurry.

You'll want to know: 白天

白天 — báitiān — "daytime".

> 白天这儿很吵 báitiān zhèr hěn chǎo — It's noisy here in the daytime.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 白天 (báitiān) is built from 白 'white' and 天 'day, sky', both inherited from Middle Chinese, baek and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the white, light part of the day.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: báitiān
- Say it: báitiān, once more
- Say it: báitiān zhèr hěn chǎo — It's noisy here in the daytime.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to lie in, then the Mandarin for hurry, then say báitiān again

Before you move on

What does 白天 mean? ("Daytime".) Say it once more.

146.2 yèli — at night

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hurry, then the Mandarin for daytime.

You'll want to know: yèli yèli — "at night".

yèli hěn lěng — It's cold at night.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yèli is built from yè 'night' and 里 'inside', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yaeH and liX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'dusk' and 'a time to rest'.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: yèli
- Say it: yèli, once more

- Say it: yèli hěn lěng — It's cold at night.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hurry, then the Mandarin for daytime, then say yèli again

Before you move on

What does yèli mean? ("At night".) Say it once more.

146.3 bànyè — the middle of the night

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for daytime, then the Mandarin for at night.

You'll want to know: bànyè

bànyè — "the middle of the night".

wǒ bànyè è le — I got hungry in the middle of the night.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bànyè is built from 半 'half' and yè 'night', both inherited from Middle Chinese, panH and yaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: bànyè
- Say it: bànyè, once more
- Say it: wǒ bànyè è le — I got hungry in the middle of the night.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for daytime, then the Mandarin for at night, then say bànyè again

Before you move on

What does bànyè mean? ("The middle of the night".) Say it once more.

146.4 xǐng — to wake up

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for at night, then the Mandarin for the middle of the night.

You'll want to know: xǐng

xǐng — "to wake up".

wǒ bànyè xǐng le yīnwèi wàibian hěn chǎo — I woke up in the middle of the night because it was noisy outside.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xǐng is inherited from Middle Chinese sengX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'drunkenness passing off', that is, sobering up. Waking from sleep is not given there, so how the word came to it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: xǐng
- Say it: xǐng, once more
- Say it: wǒ bànyè xǐng le yīnwèi wàibian hěn chǎo — I woke up in the middle of the night because it was noisy outside.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for at night, then the Mandarin for the middle of the night, then say xǐng again

Before you move on

What does xǐng mean? ("To wake up".) Say it once more.

146.5 píngshí — usually; ordinarily

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the middle of the night, then the Mandarin for to wake up.

You'll want to know: píngshí

píngshí — "usually; ordinarily".

wǒ píngshí qī diǎn qǐchuáng — I usually get up at seven.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of píngshí is built from píng 'level, even' and 时 'time', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjaeng and dzyi (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the level, ordinary times.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: píngshí
- Say it: píngshí, once more
- Say it: wǒ píngshí qī diǎn qǐchuáng — I usually get up at seven.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the middle of the night, then the Mandarin for to wake up, then say píngshí again

Before you move on

What does píngshí mean? ("Usually; ordinarily".) Say it once more.

146.6 Looking back: from Travel and Fun to Day and Night

Say the Mandarin for to travel and a game.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to travel, a game, to stroll the shops, to take a walk, to go fishing
- to mop the floor, rubbish, to dry in the sun, to sort out, to water the plants
- second (of time), minute (a length of time), to be short of, punctual, a long while
- important, easy, simple, special, to find (that)
- a reason, to run behind schedule, alarm clock, to lie in, hurry
- daytime, at night, the middle of the night, to wake up, ordinarily

Before you move on

To travel? (lǚyóu.) A game? (yóuxì.) To stroll the shops? (guàngjiē.) To take a walk? (sànbù.) To go fishing? (diàoyú.) To mop the floor? (tuōdì.) Rubbish? (lājī.) To dry in the sun? (shài.) To sort out? (zhěnglǐ.) To water the plants? (jiāohuā.) Second (of time)? (miǎo.) Minute (a length of time)? (fēnzhōng.) To be short of? (chà.) Punctual? (zhǔnshí.) A long while? (半天, bàntiān.) Important? (重要, zhòngyào.) Easy? (róngyì.) Simple? (jiǎndān.) Special? (tèbié.) To find (that)? (juéde.) A reason? (yuányīn.) To run behind schedule? (晚点, wǎndiǎn.) Alarm clock? (nàozhōng.) To lie in? (shuì lǎnjiào.) Hurry? (gǎnkuài.) Daytime? (白天, báitiān.) At night? (yèli.) The middle of the night? (bànyè.) To wake up? (xǐng.) Ordinarily? (píngshí.)

146.7 Day and Night — once more

Say the Mandarin for daytime and at night.

Your turn

- Say it: daytime, at night, the middle of the night, to wake up, ordinarily

Before you move on

Daytime? (白天, báitiān.) At night? (yèli.) The middle of the night? (bànyè.) To wake up? (xǐng.) Ordinarily? (píngshí.)

Chapter 147

It Might Rain

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what will probably happen, and what the weather will do.
>
> Saying what will happen with 会*, maybe and certainly, the day after tomorrow and the weather forecast, built on one new written character:* 后.

147.1 后天 (hòutiān) — the day after tomorrow

A new chapter, and it opens with a day that has not come yet.

- Recall: say píngshí, usually — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say 明天 — míngtiān, tomorrow — R3, durable
- Recall: say hòu, after; behind — R3

You'll want to know: 后天

后天 — hòutiān — "the day after tomorrow".

> 后天我们去 hòutiān wǒmen qù — We're going the day after tomorrow.
>
> 今天 明天 后天 jīntiān, míngtiān, hòutiān — today, tomorrow, the day after

The next lesson puts the first character in your hand. It is the hòu you already say for behind and after.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 后天 (hòutiān) is built from 后 'after' and 天 'day'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, huwX and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The Guangyun lists huwX under the traditional form of the character and glosses it 'before and after'; it glosses then 'the heavens above', so 'day' is assumed here, not quoted.

What you've built

后天 takes its place in the row of days you already say: zuótiān, 今天, 明天, 后天.
Like the others it goes early in the sentence, before the verb: 后天我们去 hòutiān wǒmen qù.

Your turn

- Say it: hòutiān
- Say it: hòutiān, once more
- Say it: 后天我们去 — hòutiān wǒmen qù — We're going the day after tomorrow.
- Say it: 今天 明天 后天 — jīntiān, míngtiān, hòutiān — today, tomorrow, the day after
- Recall: say píngshí, then hòutiān again

Before you move on

What does 后天 mean? ("The day after tomorrow".) And the day before it? (明天.)

147.2 后 — a three-stroke frame, then 口

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say hòutiān — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

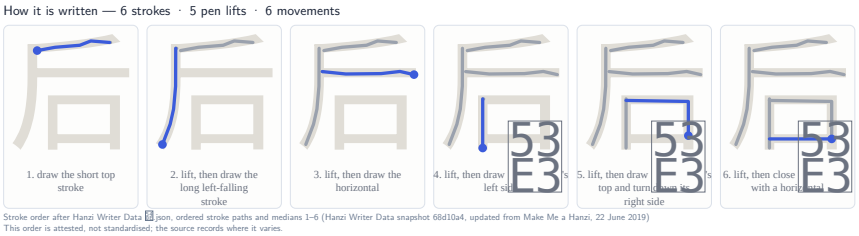
  口 天

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kǒu, tiān

Script — a three-stroke frame, then 口



How 后 is written, stroke by stroke

后

Two pieces, and the second you already write.

The frame, three strokes: a short left-falling stroke along the top, from right to left; a long left-falling stroke down the left side, curving out to the lower left; then a horizontal across the middle, from the long stroke to the right.

口, three strokes, under that horizontal, on the right: the left side, the top that turns down the right side, the bottom bar.

3 + 3 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 后, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 后? (Six.) Which stroke comes first? (The short one along the top.) Which character you write sits inside the frame? (口.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 后, pinned stroke paths and medians.

147.3 明天会下雨 — 会 for what will happen

A word you already know does a second job in this lesson.

- Read it: 后天, aloud — hòutiān
- Recall: say 我会开车 — wǒ huì kāichē, I can drive
- Recall: say 下雨 — xiàyǔ, to rain

Grammar Lens: 会 before a verb, for what is going to happen 会 before a verb can say what will probably happen, or what someone will do.

明天会下雨 míngtiān huì xiàyǔ — It'll rain tomorrow. 后天不会下雨 hòutiān bú huì xiàyǔ — It won't rain the day after tomorrow.

不 before the fall of 会 is bú, as in bú qù.
You met 会 as can, for something learned: 我会开车. It is the same character in a different use. The rain has learned nothing, so 明天会下雨 is a forecast, not a skill; a time word in front usually tells you which one you hear.
You have said the future without 会 for a long time: 明天我们去 míngtiān wǒmen qù needs no extra word. 会 adds a forecast, what you expect to happen:

明天我会去 míngtiān wǒ huì qù — I'll go tomorrow.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 明天会下雨 — míngtiān huì xiàyǔ — It'll rain tomorrow.
- 后天不会下雨 — hòutiān bú huì xiàyǔ — It won't rain the day after tomorrow.

- 明天我会去 — míngtiān wǒ huì qù — I'll go tomorrow.
- 我会开车 — wǒ huì kāichē — I can drive: the other 会.

Before you move on

What does 会 add to 明天会下雨? (A forecast: it will rain.) How do you say it won't? (不会, said bú huì.) What else can 会 mean? (Can, for a skill: 我会开车.)

147.4 kěnéng — maybe; possibly

Before the new one: read the last lesson's sentence, then a word that shares a sound with this one.

- Read it: 明天会下雨, aloud — míngtiān huì xiàyǔ
- Recall: say kěyǐ, may — R3, durable

You'll want to know: kěnéng

kěnéng — "maybe; possibly".

tā kěnéng bù lái — He may not come.

míngtiān kěnéng huì xiàyǔ — It might rain tomorrow.

Its first character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kěnéng is built from kě 'may', the kě of kěyǐ, and 能 'can', the 能 you write. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, khaX and nong (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to permit' and 'skilled'. 'Maybe' is the pair's own sense, which neither gloss gives.

What you've built

kěnéng goes before the verb, or before 会: kěnéng huì xiàyǔ, it might rain.
With 会 alone the forecast sounds sure; with kěnéng in front it is only a chance.

Your turn

- Say it: kěnéng
- Say it: kěnéng, once more
- Say it: tā kěnéng bù lái — He may not come.
- Say it: míngtiān kěnéng huì xiàyǔ — It might rain tomorrow.
- Recall: say kěyǐ, then kěnéng, and hear the same kě

Before you move on

What does kěnéng mean? ("Maybe; possibly".) Where does it go? (Before the verb, or before 会.)

147.5 yídìng — certainly; definitely

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then 一 with its rising tone.

- Recall: say kěnéng, maybe — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 一个 — yí ge, one of them, with 一 rising — R3, durable

You'll want to know: yídìng

yídìng — "certainly; definitely".

tā yídìng huì lái — He'll definitely come.

一 rises before the fall of dìng: yídìng, as in yí ge.
Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yídìng is built from 一 'one' and dìng 'settled'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jit and dengH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), dengH glossed 'calm; settled'. 'Certainly' is the pair's own sense, not the gloss's.

What you've built

kěnéng and yídìng take the same place, before 会 or the verb: a chance, then a certainty.

- tā kěnéng huì lái — he may come.
- tā yídìng huì lái — he will, for sure.

Your turn

- Say it: yídìng
- Say it: yídìng, once more
- Say it: tā yídìng huì lái — He'll definitely come.
- Say it: wǒ yídìng qù — I'll be there, for sure.
- Recall: say kěnéng, then yídìng: a chance, then a certainty

Before you move on

What does yídìng mean? ("Certainly; definitely".) What does 一 do before the fall of dìng? (It rises: *yí.)

147.6 tiānqì yùbào — weather forecast

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the weather itself.

- Recall: say yídìng, certainly — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 天气 — tiānqì, the weather — R3, durable

You'll want to know: tiānqì yùbào

tiānqì yùbào — "weather forecast".

tiānqì yùbào shuō míngtiān huì xiàyǔ — The forecast says it'll rain tomorrow.

Its last two characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tiānqì yùbào is built from 天气 'weather' and yùbào. yùbào is built from yù and bào, inherited from Middle Chinese yoH and pawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'beforehand' and 'to report'. A report given beforehand is the plain reading of the two; 'forecast' for the whole is the modern compound's own sense.

What you've built

tiānqì yùbào shuō …, the forecast says, and then the forecast itself, with 会:

> tiānqì yùbào shuō hòutiān bú huì xiàyǔ — The forecast says it won't rain the day after tomorrow.

Your turn

- Say it: tiānqì yùbào
- Say it: tiānqì yùbào, once more
- Say it: tiānqì yùbào shuō míngtiān huì xiàyǔ — The forecast says it'll rain tomorrow.
- Recall: say 天气, then tiānqì yùbào

Before you move on

What does tiānqì yùbào mean? ("Weather forecast".) What does the forecast say, with 会? (tiānqì yùbào shuō míngtiān huì xiàyǔ.)

147.7 明天会下雨吗 — 后天不会

The chapter closes here, with two people planning around the rain.

- Recall: say tiānqì yùbào, the weather forecast — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say yídìng, certainly — R1
- Recall: say kěnéng, maybe — R2

The exchange

A: 明天会下雨吗

míngtiān huì xiàyǔ ma — Will it rain tomorrow?

B: huì, tiānqì yùbào shuō huì xiàyǔ — It will. The forecast says so.

A: 后天呢

hòutiān ne — And the day after?

B: 后天不会

hòutiān bú huì — Not the day after.

A: 我们后天去

wǒmen hòutiān qù — Then we'll go the day after tomorrow.

B: 他会来吗

tā huì lái ma — Will he come?

A: tā kěnéng bù lái — He may not.

B: wǒ yídìng lái — I'll come, for sure.

会 answers a question about 会 on its own: míngtiān huì xiàyǔ ma? — huì. The answer drops everything else, as 是 and 有 do.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — a forecast, a chance, a certainty

Three ways to talk about what is coming, all before the verb:

- 明天会下雨 míngtiān huì xiàyǔ — it will rain tomorrow.
- míngtiān kěnéng huì xiàyǔ — it might.

- tā yídìng huì lái — he certainly will come.

Listen. Hòutiān huì xiàyǔ ma?
Speak. Say what the weather will do tomorrow, then what you will do the day after.
Write it: 后天 — the frame first, then 口, then 天

Your turn

- Say it: 明天会下雨吗 — míngtiān huì xiàyǔ ma — Will it rain tomorrow?
- Say it: 后天不会 — hòutiān bú huì — Not the day after.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 明天会下雨

Before you move on

Say it will rain tomorrow. (明天会下雨.) Say it won't rain the day after. (后天不会下雨.) Say he may not come. (tā kěnéng bù lái.)

Chapter 148

Next Month

Modes: voice (7) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I am going to do next week and next month.
>
> Saying what you are going to do with 要 and dǎsuàn, next week, next month and last month, and what is about to happen with 要…了*, built on one new written character:* 月*.*

148.1 下个月 (xià ge yuè) — next month

A new chapter, and it opens a little further ahead than tomorrow.

- Recall: say 明天会下雨吗 — míngtiān huì xiàyǔ ma, and answer it — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say tiānqì yùbào, the weather forecast — R1
- Recall: say yuè, a month — R3, durable
- Recall: say 明年 — míngnián, next year — R3

You'll want to know: 下个月

下个月 — xià ge yuè — "next month".

> 下个月我们去 xià ge yuè wǒmen qù — We're going next month.

The next lesson puts the last character in your hand. It is the yuè you already say for a month.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 下个月 (xià ge yuè) is built from 下 'below; after', 个, the measure word, and 月 'month'. All three are inherited from Middle Chinese, haeX, kaH and ngjwot (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The Guangyun glosses haeX with, among other things, 'after' and 'the bottom', and quotes an old saying about the moon under ngjwot; 'next' in a row of months is assumed from 'after', not quoted.

What you've built

下 here is the month after this one. Like 明天 and 后天, 下个月 goes early in the sentence: before the verb, or before the person.
明年 says next year with 明; the month and the week take 下.

Your turn

- Say it: xià ge yuè
- Say it: xià ge yuè, once more
- Say it: 下个月我们去 — xià ge yuè wǒmen qù — We're going next month.
- Say it: 明年 — míngnián — next year
- Recall: say yuè, then xià ge yuè

Before you move on

What does 下个月 mean? ("Next month".) And next year? (明年.)

148.2 月 — the moon piece, standing on its own

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xià ge yuè — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

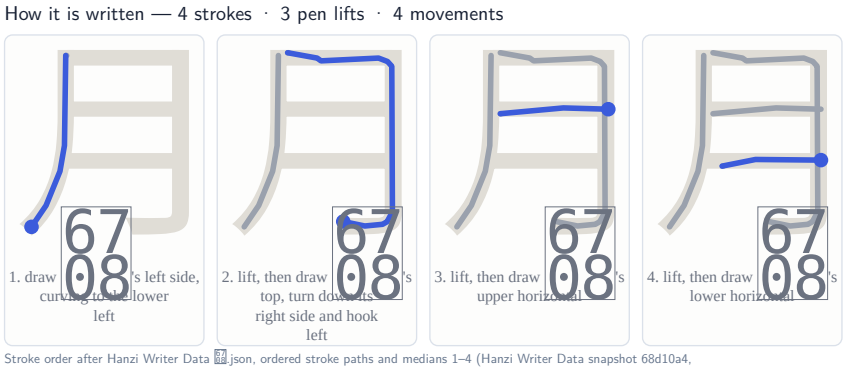
  明 期 前 能

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — míng, qī, qián, néng

Script — the moon piece, standing on its own



How 月 is written, stroke by stroke

月

Nothing in it is new. You have written it four times already: on the right of 明 and of 期, under the top of 前, and on the left of 能. Now it stands alone, a little taller.

A left-falling stroke down the left side, curving out to the lower left.

The hooked frame: a horizontal across the top that turns down the right side and hooks to the left at its foot.

Two inner bars, the upper one first, each from the left side across to the right.

1 + 1 + 2 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 月, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 月? (Four.) Where have you written it before? (In 明, 期, 前 and 能.) Which stroke goes in last? (The lower inner bar.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 月, pinned stroke paths and medians.

148.3 火车要开了 — 要 for what is coming

A word you know, before a verb this time.

- Read it: 下个月, aloud — xià ge yuè
- Recall: say 我要水 — wǒ yào shuǐ, I want some water
- Recall: say 火车 — huǒchē, a train

Grammar Lens: 要 before a verb, for what is coming

要 before a thing says what you want. 要 before a verb says what you are going to do, and with 了 at the end, what is about to happen.

我要水 wǒ yào shuǐ — I want some water. 下个月我要去中国 xià ge yuè wǒ yào qù Zhōngguó — Next month I'm going to China.

The test is the word after 要: a thing, and you want it; a verb, and you are going to do it.

火车要开了 huǒchē yào kāi le — The train is about to leave.

The 了 at the end is the 了 of a change, as in 我是大学生了: the moment is nearly here. For any second now, put kuài in front: huǒchē kuàiyào kāi le.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 火车要开了 — huǒchē yào kāi le — The train is about to leave.
- 下个月我要去中国 — xià ge yuè wǒ yào qù Zhōngguó — Next month I'm going to China.
- 我要水 — wǒ yào shuǐ — I want some water.
- huǒchē kuàiyào kāi le — the train is leaving any second

Before you move on

What does 要 mean before a thing? (Want.) Before a verb? (Going to.) What does 了 add to 火车要开了? (It is about to happen.)

148.4 下星期 (xià xīngqī) — next week

Before the new one: read the last lesson's sentence, then two words for the week.

- Read it: 火车要开了, aloud — huǒchē yào kāi le
- Recall: say 星期天 — xīngqītiān, Sunday — R3, durable
- Recall: say zhōumò, the weekend — R3

You'll want to know: 下星期

下星期 — xià xīngqī — "next week".

下星期我们去看书 xià xīngqī wǒmen qù kàn shū — Next week we're going to go and read.

下星期我要开车去 xià xīngqī wǒ yào kāichē qù — Next week I'm going to drive there.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 下星期 (xià xīngqī) is built from 下 'after' and 星期 'week'. 星 and 期 are inherited from Middle Chinese, seng and gi (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the stars' and 'a meeting; a limit'. The regular sound change from gi would give a second tone, qí; why the week says qī is not settled.

What you've built

下星期 takes no 个; 下个月 does. Both go early in the sentence, and both pair with 要 before a verb:

下个月我要去中国 xià ge yuè wǒ yào qù Zhōngguó — Next month I'm going to China.

Your turn

- Say it: xià xīngqī
- Say it: xià xīngqī, once more
- Say it: 下星期我要开车去 — xià xīngqī wǒ yào kāichē qù — Next week I'm going to drive there.
- Recall: say zhōumò, then xià xīngqī

Before you move on

What does 下星期 mean? ("Next week".) Which takes 个, the week or the month? (The month: 下个月.)

148.5 上个月 (shàng ge yuè) — last month

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then 了 after a verb.

- Recall: say 下星期 — xià xīngqī, next week — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 我看了书 — wǒ kàn le shū, I read the book — R4, recognition at distance

You'll want to know: 上个月

上个月 — shàng ge yuè — "last month".

上个月我去了中国 shàng ge yuè wǒ qù le Zhōngguó — Last month I went to China.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 上个月 (shàng ge yuè) is built from 上 'above; before', 个 and 月. 上 is inherited from Middle Chinese dzyangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the Guangyun glosses this reading 'ruler', so 'above', and 'last' in a row of months, are assumed here, not quoted.

What you've built

上 and 下 point through time as through a list read from the top: the month above is the one before, the month below the one after. 上个月 looks back, so it takes 了 when you say what happened: 上个月, 我, 去了, 中国.

Your turn

- Say it: shàng ge yuè
- Say it: shàng ge yuè, once more
- Say it: 上个月我去了中国 — shàng ge yuè wǒ qù le Zhōngguó — Last month I went to China.
- Say it: 下个月我要去中国 — xià ge yuè wǒ yào qù Zhōngguó — Next month I'm going to China.
- Recall: say xià xīngqī, then shàng ge yuè

Before you move on

What does 上个月 mean? ("Last month".) And next month? (下个月.)

148.6 dǎsuàn — to plan to; to intend

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then a verb this one is built on.

- Recall: say 上个月 — shàng ge yuè, last month — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say suàn, to work out — R2, a few chapters back

You'll want to know: dǎsuàn

dǎsuàn — "to plan to; to intend".

wǒ dǎsuàn xià ge yuè qù Běijīng — I'm planning to go to Beijing next month.

nǐ dǎsuàn zuò shénme — What are you planning to do?

Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎsuàn is built from 打, the 打 of 打电话, and suàn 'to work out', the word you know. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and swanX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to strike' and 'the number of things'. Neither dǎ nor suàn is the sound those readings would regularly give, and how striking and counting came to mean planning is not settled.

What you've built

dǎsuàn comes before a verb, as 要 does: wǒ dǎsuàn qù, I plan to go. 要 says it is going to happen; dǎsuàn says it is your plan, and a plan can change.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎsuàn
- Say it: dǎsuàn, once more
- Say it: nǐ dǎsuàn zuò shénme — What are you planning to do?
- Say it: wǒ dǎsuàn xià ge yuè qù Běijīng — I'm planning to go to Beijing next month.
- Recall: say suàn, then dǎsuàn

Before you move on

What does dǎsuàn mean? ("To plan to; to intend".) What comes after it? (A verb: dǎsuàn qù.)

148.7 jiānglái — in the future; some day

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then a word about growing up.

- Recall: say dǎsuàn, to plan to — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 长大 — zhǎngdà, to grow up — R3, durable

You'll want to know: jiānglái

jiānglái — "in the future; some day".

jiānglái wǒ xiǎng zuò lǎoshī — Some day I'd like to be a teacher.

Its first character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiānglái is built from jiāng and 来 'to come'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, tsjang and loj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to send off; to go' and 'to arrive'. 'The time to come' is the pair's own sense, assumed here, not quoted.

What you've built

jiānglái reaches further than 下个月 or 明年: not a date, but the years ahead.
It goes early, before the person, as the other time words do.

Your turn

- Say it: jiānglái
- Say it: jiānglái, once more
- Say it: jiānglái wǒ xiǎng zuò lǎoshī — Some day I'd like to be a teacher.
- Recall: say zhǎngdà, then jiānglái

Before you move on

What does jiānglái mean? ("In the future; some day".) Is it a date? (No: the years ahead.)

148.8 下个月我要去中国

The chapter closes here, with two people on a platform, trading plans.

- Recall: say jiānglái, in the future — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say dǎsuàn, to plan to — R1
- Recall: say 上个月 — shàng ge yuè, last month — R2

The exchange

A: 下星期你要做什么

xià xīngqī nǐ yào zuò shénme — What are you going to do next week?

B: 下星期我要开车去大学

xià xīngqī wǒ yào kāichē qù dàxué — Next week I'm going to drive to the university.

A: 下个月呢

xià ge yuè ne — And next month?

B: 下个月我要去中国

xià ge yuè wǒ yào qù Zhōngguó — Next month I'm going to China.

A: 上个月你也去了中国吗

shàng ge yuè nǐ yě qù le Zhōngguó ma — Did you go to China last month too?

B: 没有 上个月我在家

méiyǒu, shàng ge yuè wǒ zài jiā — No, last month I was at home.

A: jiānglái nǐ dǎsuàn zuò shénme — What do you plan to do in the future?

B: wǒ xiǎng zuò lǎoshī — I'd like to be a teacher.

要 before each verb says what is coming; 上个月 takes 了 because it is over. méiyǒu answers the question about the past, as 没 reports what did not happen.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — next week, next month, some day

Time words go first; 要 or dǎsuàn goes before the verb:

- 下星期我要开车去 xià xīngqī wǒ yào kāichē qù — next week I'm going to drive.
- 下个月我要去中国 xià ge yuè wǒ yào qù Zhōngguó — next month I'm going to China.
- jiānglái wǒ xiǎng zuò lǎoshī — some day I'd like to teach.

Listen. Xià ge yuè nǐ yào qù nǎr?
Speak. Say what you are going to do next week, then next month.
Write it: 下个月 — 月 is the moon piece of 明, standing alone

Your turn

- Say it: 下星期你要做什么 — xià xīngqī nǐ yào zuò shénme — What are you going to do next week?
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 下个月我要去中国

Before you move on

Say next month. (下个月.) Say you are going to China. (我要去中国.) Say the train is about to leave. (火车要开了.) Say what you plan to do. (wǒ dǎsuàn ….)

Chapter 149

Right Now

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what someone is doing right now.
>
> Saying what is going on right now with 在 and 正在 before a verb, two things at once with 一边 … 一边*, and a happy coincidence with* 正好*, built on one new written character:* 正*.*

149.1 正在 (zhèngzài) — in the middle of (doing)

A new chapter, and it opens on what is going on at this moment.

- Recall: say 下个月我要去中国 — xià ge yuè wǒ yào qù Zhōngguó — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say jiānglái, in the future — R1
- Recall: say 我在家 — wǒ zài jiā, I'm at home — R3, durable

You'll want to know: 正在

正在 — zhèngzài — "in the middle of (doing)".

> 我正在吃饭 wǒ zhèngzài chī fàn — I'm eating right now.
>
> 他正在看书 tā zhèngzài kàn shū — He's reading at the moment.

The next lesson puts the first character in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 正在 (zhèngzài) is built from 正 'exactly' and 在 'at', the 在 you write. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyengH and dzojX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'exactly fitting; proper' and 'to dwell; to exist'. The use before a verb, in the middle of doing it, is the modern one and is assumed here, not quoted.

What you've built

正在 goes before the verb: 我, 正在, 吃饭.
在 without 正 can do the same job before a verb; that comes two lessons on.

Your turn

- Say it: zhèngzài
- Say it: zhèngzài, once more
- Say it: 我正在吃饭 — wǒ zhèngzài chī fàn — I'm eating right now.
- Say it: 他正在看书 — tā zhèngzài kàn shū — He's reading at the moment.
- Recall: say 我在家, then 我正在吃饭

Before you move on

What does 正在 mean? ("In the middle of (doing)".) Where does it go? (Before the verb.)

149.2 正 — 一 on top, then the middle of 上 on a long bar

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say zhèngzài — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

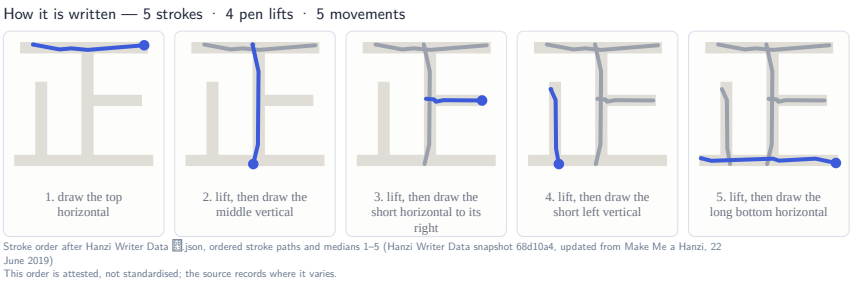
  一 上

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — yī, shàng

Script — 一 on top, then the middle of 上 on a long bar



How 正 is written, stroke by stroke

正

一 on top, then four strokes, two of them shaped as in 上.

一, a bar across the top.

A vertical down the middle, from under the bar to the foot.

A short bar to its right, halfway down: with the vertical, the upper part of 上.

A short vertical on the left, from the height of that bar down to the foot.

The long bar along the foot, last, under everything.

1 + 4 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 正, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 正? (Five.) Which stroke is last? (The long bar along the foot.) Which character you write shares its middle? (上.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 正, pinned stroke paths and medians.

149.3 你在做什么 — 在 before a verb

在 again, and this time it comes before a verb.

- Read it: 正在, aloud — zhèngzài
- Recall: say 你呢 — nǐ ne, and you?

Grammar Lens: 在 before a place, 在 before a verb

在 before a place says where. 在 before a verb says what is going on right now.

他在家 tā zài jiā — He's at home. 他在看书 tā zài kàn shū — He's reading.

正在 says it more firmly, in the very middle of it: 我正在吃饭. 呢 at the end can round off either one:

他在看书呢 tā zài kàn shū ne — He's busy reading.

The negative is 没在, since 没 reports what is not going on:

我没在看书 wǒ méi zài kàn shū — I'm not reading.

你在做什么 nǐ zài zuò shénme — What are you doing?

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 你在做什么 — nǐ zài zuò shénme — What are you doing?
- 我在看书 — wǒ zài kàn shū — I'm reading.
- 他在看书呢 — tā zài kàn shū ne — He's busy reading.
- 我没在看书 — wǒ méi zài kàn shū — I'm not reading.

Before you move on

What does 在 say before a place? (Where.) Before a verb? (What is going on now.) How do you say you are not reading? (我没在看 书.)

149.4 正好 (zhènghǎo) — exactly right; as it happens

Before the new one: read the last lesson's question, then the word for good.

- Read it: 你在做什么, aloud — nǐ zài zuò shénme
- Recall: say 好 — hǎo, good — R4, recognition at distance

You'll want to know: 正好

正好 — zhènghǎo — "exactly right; as it happens".

正好 我也要去 zhènghǎo, wǒ yě yào qù — As it happens, I'm going too.

这个正好 zhège zhènghǎo — This one is exactly right.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 正好 (zhènghǎo) is built from 正 'exactly' and 好 'good': exactly right. 好 is inherited from Middle Chinese xawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'good; fine'.

What you've built

正好 can open a sentence, a happy coincidence: 正好, 我也要去.
Or it can follow a thing, which then fits: 这个正好.

Your turn

- Say it: zhènghǎo
- Say it: zhènghǎo, once more
- Say it: 正好 我也要去 — zhènghǎo, wǒ yě yào qù — As it happens, I'm going too.
- Say it: 这个正好 — zhège zhènghǎo — This one is exactly right.

- Recall: say 你在做什么, then 正好

Before you move on

What does 正好 mean? ("Exactly right; as it happens".) Say that, as it happens, you are going too. (正好 我也要去.)

149.5 一边 (yìbiān) — at the same time

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then a word with the same ending.

- Recall: say 正好 — zhènghǎo, as it happens — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say pángbiān, beside — R3, durable

You'll want to know: 一边

一边 — yìbiān — "at the same time", said twice, before two verbs; also "one side".

他一边吃饭一边看书 tā yìbiān chī fàn yìbiān kàn shū — He reads while he eats.

一 falls before the level tone of biān: yìbiān, as in yì tiān.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 一边 (yìbiān) is built from 一 'one' and 边 'side', the 边 you write. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jit and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), pen glossed 'an edge; a border'.

What you've built

Said twice, each straight before its own verb, 一边 … 一边 … puts two actions side by side: 一边吃饭, 一边看书.
The person is said once, at the front: 他一边吃饭一边看书.

Your turn

- Say it: yìbiān
- Say it: yìbiān, once more
- Say it: 他一边吃饭一边看书 — tā yìbiān chī fàn yìbiān kàn shū — He reads while he eats.
- Say it: wǒ yìbiān hē chá yìbiān shuō huà — I talk while I drink my tea.
- Recall: say pángbiān, then yìbiān

Before you move on

What does 一边 … 一边 do? (Puts two actions at the same time.) Where does each 一边 go? (Straight before its verb.)

149.6 我正在吃饭

The chapter closes here, with a phone call about what everyone is doing.

- Recall: say 一边吃饭一边看书 — yìbiān chī fàn yìbiān kàn shū — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 正好 — zhènghǎo — R1
- Recall: say bànyè, the middle of the night — R2, the chapter on night

The exchange

A: 你在做什么

nǐ zài zuò shénme — What are you doing?

B: 我正在吃饭 你呢

wǒ zhèngzài chī fàn, nǐ ne — I'm eating. And you?

A: 我在看书

wǒ zài kàn shū — I'm reading.

B: 你妈妈呢

nǐ māma ne — And your mum?

A: 妈妈在做饭

māma zài zuò fàn — She's cooking.

B: nǐ bàba ne — And your dad?

A: 他没在家 他在开车

tā méi zài jiā, tā zài kāichē — He isn't home. He's driving.

B: 我一边吃饭一边打电话

wǒ yìbiān chī fàn yìbiān dǎ diànhuà — I'm eating and on the phone at once.

A: 正好 我也在吃饭

zhènghǎo, wǒ yě zài chī fàn — As it happens, I'm eating too.

Every answer keeps 在 before its verb. 他没在家 is 在 before a place, at home; 他在开车 is 在 before a verb, driving.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — now, and two things at once

在 or 正在 before the verb says what is going on now:

- 我正在吃饭 wǒ zhèngzài chī fàn — I'm eating right now.
- 他在开车 tā zài kāichē — he's driving.
- 白天我在看书 báitiān wǒ zài kàn shū — in the daytime I'm reading.

- bànyè tā zhèngzài shuìjiào — in the middle of the night he's asleep.

Listen. Nǐ zài zuò shénme ne?
Speak. Say what you are doing now, then what somebody at home is doing.
Write it: 正在 — 一, then the middle of 上, then the long bar

Your turn

- Say it: 你在做什么 — nǐ zài zuò shénme — What are you doing?
- Say it: 我正在吃饭 你呢 — wǒ zhèngzài chī fàn, nǐ ne — I'm eating. And you?
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 我正在吃饭

Before you move on

Ask what someone is doing. (你在做什么.) Say you are eating right now. (我正在吃饭.) Say he reads while he eats. (他一边吃饭一边看书.)

Chapter 150

Have You Ever Been?

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask whether someone has ever done something, and answer.
>
> Asking whether someone has ever done something with 过 after the verb, and telling what came next with 后来 and ránhòu, built on one new written character: 过.

150.1 过去 (guòqù) — in the past; to go over

A new chapter, and it opens on time that has already gone by.

- Recall: say 我正在吃饭 — wǒ zhèngzài chī fàn — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say 一边 — yìbiān, at the same time — R1
- Recall: say 以前 — yǐqián, before — R2, a few chapters back

You'll want to know: 过去

过去 — guòqù — "in the past; to go over (there)".

> 过去 我家在大学里边 guòqù, wǒ jiā zài dàxué lǐbian — In the past, our home was on the university grounds.

> 我过去 wǒ guòqù — I'll go over there.

The next lesson puts the first character in your hand. It is the guò of guònián and nánguò.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 过去 (guòqù) is built from 过 'to pass' and 去 'to go'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, kwaH and khjoH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to go beyond; to exceed' and 'to leave'. 'The past', time that has gone by, is the pair's own sense.

What you've built

过去 and 以前 both look back. 以前 is before some point; 过去 is the past at large, set against now, xiànzài.
As a verb, 过去 is going over there, away from the speaker.

Your turn

- Say it: guòqù
- Say it: guòqù, once more
- Say it: 过去 我家在大学里边 — guòqù, wǒ jiā zài dàxué lǐbian — In the past, our home was on the university grounds.
- Say it: 我过去 — wǒ guòqù — I'll go over there.
- Recall: say 以前, then 过去

Before you move on

What does 过去 mean? ("In the past; to go over".) And now? (xiànzài.)

150.2 过 — 寸, then the walking piece last

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say guòqù — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  对 时 这 进

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — duì, shí, zhè, jìn

Script — 寸, then the walking piece last

How 过 is written, stroke by stroke

过

Two pieces you own, in the order you know from 这.

寸, three strokes, on the upper right: the bar, the vertical that hooks to the left at its foot, then the dot. It is the right half of 对 and of 时.

辶, three strokes, last: the dot at the upper left; the short stroke that turns down, turns again and falls to the left in one movement; then the long base, sweeping out to the right under 寸.

3 + 3 = six. The walking piece goes in last, as in 这 and 进, though it sits under everything.

Your turn

- Write it: 过, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 过? (Six.) Which piece first? (寸.) Which character you write puts the walking piece last in the same way? (这, and 进.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 过, pinned stroke paths and medians.

150.3 你去过中国吗 — 过 for what you have done

The character you have written turns up again, light, straight after a verb.

- Read it: 过去, aloud — guòqù
- Recall: say 我去了中国 — wǒ qù le Zhōngguó, I went to China
- Recall: say 我没去 — wǒ méi qù, I didn't go

Grammar Lens: 了 says it happened; 过 says it has happened at least once 过 straight after a verb says this has happened at least once, at some time. Here it is said light: guo.

你去过中国吗 nǐ qù guo Zhōngguó ma — Have you ever been to China? 我去过 wǒ qù guo — I have.

The negative keeps 过 and puts 没 in front; 不 has no place here, because the question is about what has happened:

我没去过 wǒ méi qù guo — I've not been.

Set it beside 了. 我去了中国 reports one trip; 我去过中国 says China is somewhere you have been, at some point in your life:

我去了中国 wǒ qù le Zhōngguó — I went to China. 我去过中国 wǒ qù guo Zhōngguó — I've been to China.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 你去过中国吗 — nǐ qù guo Zhōngguó ma — Have you ever been to China?
- 我去过 — wǒ qù guo — I have.
- 我没去过 — wǒ méi qù guo — I've not been.
- 你看过这本书吗 — nǐ kàn guo zhè běn shū ma — Have you read this book?

Before you move on

What does 过 after a verb say? (It has happened at least once.) Which negative goes with it? (没: 我没去过.) Which says one trip that happened, 了 or 过? (了.)

150.4 后来 (hòulái) — afterwards; later

Before the new one: read the last lesson's question, then the day you wrote 后 for.

- Read it: 你去过中国吗, aloud — nǐ qù guo Zhōngguó ma
- Recall: say 后天 — hòutiān, the day after tomorrow — R2, a few chapters back

You'll want to know: 后来

后来 — hòulái — "afterwards; later (in the past)".

后来我们去了大学 hòulái wǒmen qù le dàxué — Afterwards we went to the university.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 后来 (hòulái) is built from 后 'after' and 来 'to come', both inherited from Middle Chinese, huwX and loj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): what came after.

What you've built

后来 looks back: it follows something that already happened and says what came next. For what will come later, Mandarin says yǐhòu: yí ge xiǎoshí yǐhòu.
One more way to set a time in the past: de shíhou after a clause turns it into a when, the shíhou of xiǎoshíhou:

wǒ xiǎo de shíhou, wǒ jiā zài Zhōngguó, hòulái wǒmen lái zhèr le — When I was small my family lived in China; later we came here.

Your turn

- Say it: hòuláì
- Say it: hòuláì, once more
- Say it: 后来我们去了大学 — hòuláì wǒmen qù le dàxué — Afterwards we went to the university.
- Say it: wǒ xiǎo de shíhou, wǒ jiā zài Zhōngguó — When I was small my family lived in China.
- Recall: say 后天, then 后来, and hear the same hòu

Before you move on

What does 后来 mean? ("Afterwards; later, in the past".) And for later still to come? (yǐhòu.)

150.5 ránhòu — then; after that

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then a word that ends the same way.

- Recall: say 后来 — hòuláì, afterwards — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say yǐhòu, after — R3, durable

You'll want to know: ránhòu

ránhòu — "then; after that".

wǒ xiān chī fàn, ránhòu kàn shū — First I eat, then I read.

Its first character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of ránhòu is built from rán 'so; thus' and 后 'after'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, nyen and huwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the Guangyun glosses nyen as a particle, 'thus', and 'then' for the pair is assumed here, not quoted.

What you've built

ránhòu joins two steps in order, the second after the first, now or in the past: wǒ xiān chī fàn, ránhòu kàn shū.
后来 only looks back at what happened next; ránhòu can plan tomorrow too: míngtiān wǒ qù dàxué, ránhòu qù kàn shū.

Your turn

- Say it: ránhòu
- Say it: ránhòu, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiān chī fàn, ránhòu kàn shū — First I eat, then I read.
- Recall: say 后来, then ránhòu

Before you move on

What does ránhòu mean? ("Then; after that".) Which of the two can plan tomorrow, 后来 or ránhòu? (ránhòu.)

150.6 cónglái — ever; never once

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the answer to have you ever.

- Recall: say ránhòu, then — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 我没去过 — wǒ méi qù guo, I've not been — R1, this chapter

You'll want to know: cónglái cónglái — "ever"; before 没, "never once".

wǒ cónglái méi qù guo — I've never once been there.

Its first character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cónglái is built from cóng 'from' and 来 'to come': from then until now. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, dzjowng and loj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), dzjowng glossed 'to go to; to follow'. 'Ever' is the pair's own sense, not the gloss's.

What you've built

cónglái stands in front of 没 … 过 and makes it stronger: 我没去过, I've not been; wǒ cónglái méi qù guo, not once.
It needs 没 after it to say never; on its own it is rare.

Your turn

- Say it: cónglái
- Say it: cónglái, once more
- Say it: wǒ cónglái méi qù guo — I've never once been there.
- Say it: 我没去过 — wǒ méi qù guo — I've not been.
- Recall: say ránhòu, then cónglái

Before you move on

What does cónglái méi … 过 say? (Never once.) What does it strengthen? (我没去过.)

150.7 你去过吗 — 我没去过

The chapter closes here, with two people comparing where they have been.

- Recall: say cónglái, ever — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say ránhòu, then — R1
- Recall: say 后来 — hòulái, afterwards — R2

The exchange

A: 你去过中国吗

nǐ qù guo Zhōngguó ma — Have you ever been to China?

B: 去过

qù guo — I have.

B: 过去我家在中国

guòqù wǒ jiā zài Zhōngguó — My family used to live there.

A: 后来呢

hòulái ne — And afterwards?

B: 后来我们来这儿了

hòulái wǒmen lái zhèr le — Afterwards we came here.

B: 你呢 你去过吗

nǐ ne, nǐ qù guo ma — And you? Have you been?

A: 我没去过

wǒ méi qù guo — I've not been.

B: 你开过车吗

nǐ kāi guo chē ma — Have you ever driven a car?

A: wǒ cónglái méi kāi guo — Never once.

B: wǒ xiān qù Zhōngguó, ránhòu qù Běijīng — I'll go to China first, then to Beijing.

去过 answers 你去过中国吗 on its own: the verb and 过, nothing else. The no is 没去过, with 过 kept.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — ever, and what came next

过 after a verb asks about a whole life; 后来 and ránhòu put events in order:

- 你去过中国吗 nǐ qù guo Zhōngguó ma — have you ever been to China?
- 我没去过 wǒ méi qù guo — I've not been.
- 后来我们来这儿了 hòulái wǒmen lái zhèr le — afterwards we came here.
- wǒ xiān chī fàn, ránhòu kàn shū — first I eat, then I read.

Listen. Nǐ qù guo Běijīng ma?
Speak. Say one place you have been, and one you have not.
Write it: 过 — the right half of 对 first, the walking piece last

Your turn

- Say it: 你去过中国吗 — nǐ qù guo Zhōngguó ma — Have you ever been to China?
- Say it: 我没去过 — wǒ méi qù guo — I've not been.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 你去过中国吗

Before you move on

Ask if someone has ever been to China. (你去过中国吗.) Say you have not. (我没去过.) Say what happened afterwards, with 后来. (后来我们来这儿了.)

Chapter 151

Seen and Understood

Modes: voice (7) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I saw, heard, understood or finished something.
>
> A verb and its result: seeing, learning how, understanding by ear and by eye, and finishing, each negated with 没*, built on one new written character:* 到.

151.1 看到 (kàndào) — to see; to catch sight of

A new chapter, and it opens on a verb that reaches what it aims at.

- Recall: say 你去过吗 — nǐ qù guo ma, and answer it — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say cónglái, ever — R1
- Recall: say 看见 — kànjiàn, to catch sight of — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say dào, to arrive — R3, durable

You'll want to know: 看到

看到 — kàndào — "to see; to catch sight of".

> 我看到他了 wǒ kàndào tā le — I saw him.
>
> 我没看到 wǒ méi kàndào — I didn't spot it.

The next lesson puts the second character in your hand. It is the dào you already say for arriving.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 看到 (kàndào) is built from 看 'to look' and 到 'to arrive; to reach'. 看 is inherited from Middle Chinese khanH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the Guangyun lists beside a level-tone reading glossed 'to look'; 到 is inherited from tawH, glossed 'to arrive'.

What you've built

看 is the looking; 到 says the looking reached something.
看见, which you learned long ago as one word, is made the same way: 看, then 见.

Your turn

- Say it: kàndào
- Say it: kàndào, once more
- Say it: 我看到他了 — wǒ kàndào tā le — I saw him.
- Say it: 我没看到 — wǒ méi kàndào — I didn't spot it.
- Recall: say 看见, then 看到

Before you move on

What does 看到 mean? ("To see; to catch sight of".) Which word you know is made the same way? (看见.)

151.2 到 — 至 on the left, then the blade of 前

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say kàndào — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  在 前

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — zài, qián

Script — 至 on the left, then the blade of 前

How 到 is written, stroke by stroke

到

Two pieces, and both have parts you write.

至, six strokes, on the left: a bar across the top; a stroke that falls to the left and turns right; a dot at its end; then 土, as at the foot of 在: a short bar, a vertical through it, and the bottom bar, rising a little to the right.

刂, two strokes, on the right, as on the right of 前: a short vertical, then a long vertical that hooks to the left at its foot.

6 + 2 = eight.

Your turn

- Write it: 到, all eight, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 到? (Eight.) Which character you write ends on the same 土? (在.) And on the same two right-hand strokes? (前.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 到, pinned stroke paths and medians.

151.3 看到 — 没看到: a verb and its result

Two verbs in a row, and the second one says how it turned out.

- Read it: 看到, aloud — kàndào
- Recall: say 看见 — kànjiàn
- Recall: say 我没去 — wǒ méi qù, I didn't go

Grammar Lens: a verb, then what came of it

A second word straight after a verb can say how it turned out. 看 is looking; 看到 is looking that reached something.

我看了 没看到 wǒ kàn le, méi kàndào — I looked, but I didn't spot it.

The negative is 没, because the result did not come about:

我没看到他 wǒ méi kàndào tā — I didn't see him. 你看到了吗 nǐ kàndào le ma — Did you see it?

看见 is made the same way, 看 and its result 见. The next four lessons add four more pairs like these, each a verb and how it ended.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 我看了 没看到 — wǒ kàn le, méi kàndào — I looked, but I didn't spot it.
- 你看到了吗 — nǐ kàndào le ma — Did you see it?
- 看到了 — kàndào le — Yes, I saw it.
- 我没看到他 — wǒ méi kàndào tā — I didn't see him.

Before you move on

What does the second word of 看到 say? (How the looking turned out.) Which negative goes in front? (没: 没看到.) Which old word is made the same way? (看见.)

151.4 学会 (xuéhuì) — to learn, and now be able to

Before the new one: read the last lesson's pair, then 会 as a skill.

- Read it: 看到 — 没看到, aloud — kàndào, méi kàndào
- Recall: say 我会开车 — wǒ huì kāichē, I can drive — R3, durable
- Recall: say xué, to study — R4, recognition at distance

You'll want to know: 学会

学会 — xuéhuì — "to learn (and now be able to)".

我学会开车了 wǒ xuéhuì kāichē le — I've learned to drive.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 学会 (xuéhuì) is built from 学 'to study' and 会 'can'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, haewk and hwajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to awaken to; to learn' and 'to come together'. 会 as 'can' is a later sense than that gloss, assumed here, not quoted.

What you've built

学 is the studying; 会 is the result: now you can. With 了 at the end it is news: 我学会开车了.
Without the result, 我学开车 wǒ xué kāichē says only that you are studying it.

Your turn

- Say it: xuéhuì
- Say it: xuéhuì, once more
- Say it: 我学会开车了 — wǒ xuéhuì kāichē le — I've learned to drive.
- Say it: 我没学会 — wǒ méi xuéhuì — I haven't learned how.
- Recall: say 我会开车, then 我学会开车了

Before you move on

What does 学会 mean? ("To learn, and now be able to".) Which part is the result? (会.)

151.5 tīngdǒng — to understand what you hear

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the two verbs this one is made of.

- Recall: say 学会 — xuéhuì — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say tīng, to listen — R3, durable
- Recall: say dǒng, to understand — R3

You'll want to know: tīngdǒng tīngdǒng — "to understand (on hearing)".

wǒ tīngdǒng le — I understood what was said.

nǐ tīngdǒng le ma — Did you catch that?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tīngdǒng is built from tīng 'to listen' and dǒng 'to understand', the two verbs you know. The character for tīng is inherited from Middle Chinese theng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to hear'. The character for dǒng has no reading in the Guangyun: no dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

tīng is the listening; dǒng is the result. 没 says it did not come: wǒ méi tīngdǒng, I didn't catch it.
tīng alone is only listening; tīngdǒng is listening that worked.

Your turn

- Say it: tīngdǒng
- Say it: tīngdǒng, once more
- Say it: nǐ tīngdǒng le ma — Did you catch that?
- Say it: wǒ méi tīngdǒng — I didn't catch it.
- Recall: say tīng, then dǒng, then tīngdǒng

Before you move on

What does tīngdǒng mean? ("To understand what you hear".) Say you didn't catch it. (wǒ méi tīngdǒng.)

151.6 kàndǒng — to understand what you read

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then reading a book.

- Recall: say tīngdǒng, to understand what you hear — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 看书 — kàn shū, to read — R4, recognition at distance

You'll want to know: kàndǒng kàndǒng — "to understand (on reading or watching)".

zhè běn shū wǒ kàndǒng le — I understood this book.

Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kàndǒng is built from 看 'to look; to read' and dǒng 'to understand'. 看 is inherited from Middle Chinese khanH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the character for dǒng has no reading in the Guangyun, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

The thing can go first, as the topic: zhè běn shū, then who, then the verb and its result.
tīngdǒng for the ear, kàndǒng for the eye: one result, two ways in.

Your turn

- Say it: kàndǒng
- Say it: kàndǒng, once more
- Say it: zhè běn shū wǒ kàndǒng le — I understood this book.
- Say it: nǐ kàndǒng le ma — Did you follow it?
- Recall: say tīngdǒng, then kàndǒng

Before you move on

What does kàndǒng mean? ("To understand what you read or watch".) And by ear? (tīngdǒng.)

151.7 zuòwán — to finish (doing)

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the verb this one starts with.

- Recall: say kàndǒng, to understand what you read — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 做饭 — zuò fàn, to cook — R3, durable

You'll want to know: zuòwán

zuòwán — "to finish (doing)".

wǒ zuòwán le — I've finished.

nǐ zuòwán le ma — Have you finished?

Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zuòwán is built from 做 'to do', the 做 you write, and wán 'to finish'. 做 has no reading in the Guangyun, so its history is not settled. wán is inherited from Middle Chinese hwan (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'whole; complete'; the regular sound change from hwan would give huán, so why it is said wán is not settled.

What you've built

做 is the doing; wán is the result: it is done. 了 at the end makes it news: wǒ zuòwán le.
Not finished yet takes 没: wǒ méi zuòwán.

Your turn

- Say it: zuòwán
- Say it: zuòwán, once more
- Say it: nǐ zuòwán le ma — Have you finished?
- Say it: wǒ zuòwán le — I've finished.
- Recall: say 做饭, then zuòwán

Before you move on

What does zuòwán mean? ("To finish doing".) Say you haven't finished. (wǒ méi zuòwán.)

151.8 我看到他了

The chapter closes here, with two people checking on each other.

- Recall: say zuòwán, to finish — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say kàndǒng, to understand what you read — R1
- Recall: say 学会 — xuéhuì — R2

The exchange

A: 你看到他了吗

nǐ kàndào tā le ma — Did you see him?

B: 看到了 他在那儿

kàndào le, tā zài nàr — I did. He's over there.

A: 他说什么

tā shuō shénme — What's he saying?

A: nǐ tīngdǒng le ma — Did you catch it?

B: méi tīngdǒng, tā shuō de tài kuài le — No. He talks too fast.

A: nǐ zuòwán le ma — Have you finished?

B: 没有 我在看书

méiyǒu, wǒ zài kàn shū — No, I'm reading.

A: zhè běn shū nǐ kàndǒng le ma — Do you follow this book?

B: kàndǒng le — Yes.

A: 你学会开车了吗

nǐ xuéhuì kāichē le ma — Have you learned to drive?

B: 学会了

xuéhuì le — I have.

Each yes repeats the verb and its result, with 了: 看到了, kàndǒng le, 学会了. Each no puts 没 in front: méi tīngdǒng.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — five verbs that finish

A verb, then its result; 没 when the result did not come:

- 我看到他了 wǒ kàndào tā le — I saw him.
- 我学会开车了 wǒ xuéhuì kāichē le — I've learned to drive.
- wǒ méi tīngdǒng — I didn't catch it.
- wǒ zuòwán le — I've finished.

Listen. Nǐ kàndào wǒ de shǒujī le ma?
Speak. Say one thing you have learned how to do, and one thing you have not finished.
Write it: 看到 — 到 ends on the foot of 在, then the right of 前

Your turn

- Say it: 你看到他了吗 — nǐ kàndào tā le ma — Did you see him?
- Say it: 看到了 — kàndào le — I did.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 我看到他了

Before you move on

Say you saw him. (我看到他了.) Say you didn't catch it. (wǒ méi tīngdǒng.) Ask if someone has finished. (nǐ zuòwán le ma.)

Chapter 152

Well Said

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how well someone does something.
>
> Saying how well something is done with a verb, 得 and an adjective, fluent, not bad and clear, built on one new written character: 得.

152.1 得 (de) — how well it is done

A new chapter, and it opens on a small word that says how well.

- Recall: say 我看到他了 — wǒ kàndào tā le — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say zuòwán, to finish — R1
- Recall: say juéde, to feel; to think — R2, a few chapters back
- Recall: say 我的书 — wǒ de shū, my book — R4, recognition at distance

You'll want to know: 得

得 — de — the particle between a verb and how well it is done.

> 你说得很好 nǐ shuō de hěn hǎo — You speak well.

The next lesson puts the character in your hand. It is the de you already say at the end of juéde.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 得 (de) is written with the character of dé 'to get', inherited from Middle Chinese tok (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'gain and loss'. Its use as a light particle after a verb is a later development, assumed here, not quoted.

What you've built

得 and 的 are two different words, and both are said de, with no tone. 的 joins an owner or a description to a noun: 我的书. 得 joins a verb to how well it went: 说得很好.

Your turn

- Say it: de, light, with no tone
- Say it: 你说得很好 — nǐ shuō de hěn hǎo — You speak well.
- Say it: 我的书 — wǒ de shū — my book: the other de
- Recall: say juéde, then 说得很好, and hear the same light de

Before you move on

What does 得 join? (A verb to how well it went.) And 的? (An owner or a description to a noun.)

152.2 得 — the left of 很, then 日, a bar and 寸

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say de — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

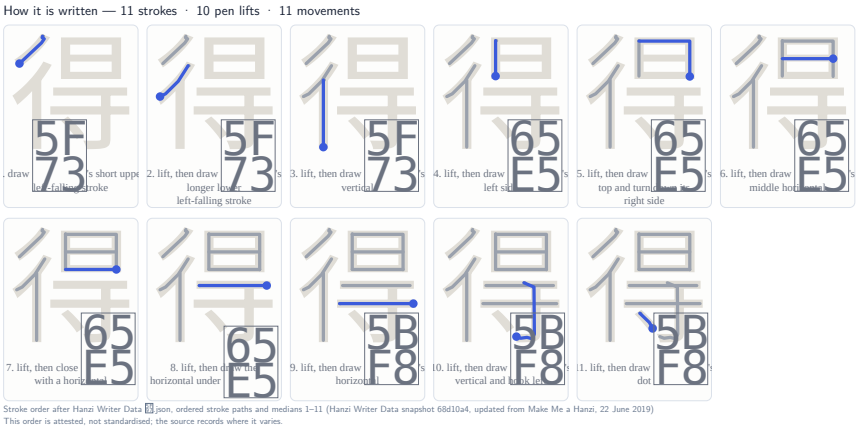
  很 时

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — hěn, shí

Script — the left of 很, then 日, a bar and 寸



How 得 is written, stroke by stroke

得

Four pieces, and you write every one of them already.

彳, three strokes, the left of 很: a short left-falling stroke, a longer one under it, then the vertical down to the foot.

日, four strokes, small, at the upper right: the left side, the top that turns down the right side, the middle bar, the bottom bar.

A long bar under 日, across the whole right side.

寸, three strokes, under the bar, as on the right of 对 and 时: the bar, the vertical that hooks to the left at its foot, then the dot.

3 + 4 + 1 + 3 = eleven.

Your turn

- Write it: 得, all eleven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 得? (Eleven.) Which character you write has the same left side? (很.) What sits at the foot on the right? (寸, as in 对 and 时.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 得, pinned stroke paths and medians.

152.3 你说得很好 — how well, with 得

Three words in a fixed order, and the middle one is the character you have written.

- Read it: 说得很好, aloud — shuō de hěn hǎo
- Recall: say 快 — kuài, fast
- Recall: say 汉语 — Hànyǔ, Chinese

Grammar Lens: the verb, 得, then how well

After a verb, 得 brings in how well or how fast it is done. The adjective after 得 usually takes 很.

你说得很好 nǐ shuō de hěn hǎo — You speak well. 他说得很快 tā shuō de hěn kuài — He talks fast.

With an object, say the verb twice: once with the object, once with 得:

他说汉语说得很快 tā shuō Hànyǔ shuō de hěn kuài — He speaks Chinese fast.

很 here is light, as it is in 你很好: it carries the sentence more than it means very.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 你说得很好 — nǐ shuō de hěn hǎo — You speak well.
- 他说得很快 — tā shuō de hěn kuài — He talks fast.
- 他说汉语说得很快 — tā shuō Hànyǔ shuō de hěn kuài — He speaks Chinese fast.
- 你做饭做得很好 — nǐ zuò fàn zuò de hěn hǎo — You cook well.

Before you move on

What comes after 得? (How well: an adjective, usually with 很.) With an object, what do you say twice? (The verb: 说汉语说得很快.)

152.4 liúlì — fluent

Before the new one: read the last lesson's sentence, then a word for slow.

- Read it: 你说得很好, aloud — nǐ shuō de hěn hǎo
- Recall: say màn, slow — R3, durable

You'll want to know: liúlì

liúlì — "fluent".

tā Hànyǔ shuō de hěn liúlì — He speaks Chinese fluently.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of liúlì is built from liú 'to flow' and lì. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, ljuw and lijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the Guangyun explains ljuw, after an older dictionary, as water moving, and glosses lijH 'favourable' and, after the same dictionary, 'sharp'. 'Fluent' is the pair's own sense.

What you've built

liúlì sits after 得 with 很, as the other adjectives do: shuō de hěn liúlì. Here the topic, Hànyǔ, goes first, so the verb is said only once.

Your turn

- Say it: liúlì
- Say it: liúlì, once more
- Say it: tā Hànyǔ shuō de hěn liúlì — He speaks Chinese fluently.

- Recall: say màn, then liúlì: slow, then smooth

Before you move on

What does liúlì mean? ("Fluent".) Where does it go? (After 得, with 很.)

152.5 búcuò — not bad; pretty good

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the word this one says no to.

- Recall: say liúlì, fluent — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say cuò, wrong — R2, a few chapters back
- Recall: say róngyì, easy — R2

You'll want to know: búcuò

búcuò — "not bad; pretty good".

nǐ zuò de búcuò — You did pretty well.

不 rises before the fall of cuò: búcuò, as in bú qù.
Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of búcuò is built from 不 'not' and cuò 'wrong', the word you know: not wrong, so pretty good. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, pjut and tshak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the Guangyun glosses tshak 'mixed' and 'crossing slantwise', and how it came to mean wrong is not settled.

What you've built

búcuò is praise that sounds modest. After 得 it needs no 很: zuò de búcuò.
On its own it answers how something was: hěn búcuò, really quite good.

Your turn

- Say it: búcuò
- Say it: búcuò, once more
- Say it: nǐ zuò de búcuò — You did pretty well.
- Recall: say cuò, then búcuò

Before you move on

What does búcuò mean? ("Not bad; pretty good".) What does 不 do before cuò? (It rises: *bú.)

152.6 qīngchu — clear; clearly

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two words for how a thing is.

- Recall: say búcuò, pretty good — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 重要 — zhòngyào, important — R2, a few chapters back
- Recall: say jiǎndān, simple — R2

You'll want to know: qīngchu

qīngchu — "clear; clearly".

tā shuō de hěn qīngchu — He speaks clearly.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qīngchu is built from qīng 'clear' and chu. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, tshjeng and tsrhjoX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the first is glossed 'clear, far from mud'. The Guangyun gives tsrhjoX as a plant and a place name, so how it came into 'clear' is not settled.

What you've built

qīngchu answers how well something came across: shuō de hěn qīngchu, said clearly.
It is light at the end, chu with no tone.

Your turn

- Say it: qīngchu
- Say it: qīngchu, once more
- Say it: tā shuō de hěn qīngchu — He speaks clearly.
- Recall: say jiǎndān, then qīngchu

Before you move on

What does qīngchu mean? ("Clear; clearly".) Say he speaks clearly. (tā shuō de hěn qīngchu.)

152.7 他说汉语说得很快

The chapter closes here, with two people trading compliments.

- Recall: say qīngchu, clear — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say búcuò, pretty good — R1
- Recall: say liúlì, fluent — R2

The exchange

A: 他说汉语说得很快

tā shuō Hànyǔ shuō de hěn kuài — He speaks Chinese fast.

B: 对 他说得很好

duì, tā shuō de hěn hǎo — Yes, and he speaks well.

A: tā Hànyǔ shuō de hěn liúlì — His Chinese is fluent.

B: 你呢

nǐ ne — And you?

A: wǒ shuō de hěn màn — I speak slowly.

B: nǐ shuō de hěn qīngchu — You speak clearly.

A: 你做饭做得很好

nǐ zuò fàn zuò de hěn hǎo — You cook well.

B: búcuò, wǒ juéde hěn jiǎndān — Not bad. I find it simple.

Every compliment has the same order: the verb, 得, then how well. When the object comes along, the verb is said twice; when the language goes first as the topic, once.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — how well

The verb, 得, then how well; say the verb twice when it has an object:

- 你说得很好 nǐ shuō de hěn hǎo — you speak well.
- 他说汉语说得很快 tā shuō Hànyǔ shuō de hěn kuài — he speaks Chinese fast.
- tā shuō de hěn qīngchu — he speaks clearly.
- nǐ zuò de búcuò — you did pretty well.

Listen. Tā Hànyǔ shuō de zěnmeyàng?
Speak. Say how well somebody you know cooks, then how fast you speak.
Write it: 得 — the left of 很, then 日, a long bar, and the right of 对

Your turn

- Say it: 他说汉语说得很快 — tā shuō Hànyǔ shuō de hěn kuài — He speaks Chinese fast.

- Say it: nǐ shuō de hěn qīngchu — You speak clearly.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 你说得很好

Before you move on

Say he speaks Chinese fast. (他说汉语说得很快.) Say someone speaks fluently. (tā shuō de hěn liúlì.) Say not bad. (búcuò.)

Chapter 153

Older Than Me

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can compare two people or things.
>
> Comparing two people or things with 比*, saying by how much, even more, the same as, and not as much as, built on one new written character:* 比.

153.1 比 (bǐ) — than; compared with

A new chapter, and it opens on the word that sets two things side by side.

- Recall: say 他说汉语说得很快 — tā shuō Hànyǔ shuō de hěn kuài — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say qīngchu, clear — R1
- Recall: say yíyàng, the same — R3, durable
- Recall: say bǐ, a pen — R2, a few chapters back

You'll want to know: 比

比 — bǐ — "than; compared with".

> 我比他大 wǒ bǐ tā dà — I'm older than him.

The next lesson puts the character in your hand. It sounds like bǐ, a pen, and it is a different word.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 比 (bǐ) is inherited from Middle Chinese pjijX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to compare; side by side'. It is the bǐ of bǐsài, a match. The bǐ of qiānbǐ, a pencil, is another word with the same sound.

What you've built

比 sits between the two things compared, and the adjective comes last: 我, 比, 他, 大.
大 for people is old: 我比他大 is I'm older than him. 比 itself is the bǐ of bǐsài, a match: two sides set against each other.

Your turn

- Say it: bǐ
- Say it: bǐ, once more
- Say it: 我比他大 — wǒ bǐ tā dà — I'm older than him.
- Say it: 他比我大 — tā bǐ wǒ dà — He's older than me.
- Recall: say bǐ, a pen, then 比, than: one sound, two words

Before you move on

What does 比 mean? ("Than; compared with".) Where does the adjective go? (Last: 我比他大.)

153.2 比 — two halves side by side, the left one first

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say bǐ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  能 七

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — néng, qī

Script — two halves side by side, the left one first

How 比 is written, stroke by stroke

比

Two halves, side by side, the left one first. The right half you write already, twice over, on the right of 能.

The left half, two strokes: a short bar, then a vertical that runs down and turns up to the right at its foot.

The right half, two strokes, as on the right of 能: a short left-falling stroke, then a vertical that bends right along the foot and hooks up, the same movement that ends 七.

2 + 2 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 比, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 比? (Four.) Which half comes first? (The left.) Where have you written the right half? (On the right of 能.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 比, pinned stroke paths and medians.

153.3 他比我大两岁 — comparing with 比

Two people, one comparison, and then by how much.

- Read it: 我比他大, aloud — wǒ bǐ tā dà
- Recall: say 二十岁 — èrshí suì, twenty years old
- Recall: say zuì, most

Grammar Lens: 比, then the adjective, then by how much

A, 比, B, then the adjective: A is more so than B. How much more goes after the adjective, at the very end.

我比他大 wǒ bǐ tā dà — I'm older than him. 他比我大两岁 tā bǐ wǒ dà liǎng suì — He's two years older than me. 这个比那个大一点儿 zhège bǐ nàge dà yìdiǎnr — This one is a bit bigger than that one.

There is no 很 in these. 很 describes one thing on its own; a comparison sets two against each other. 他很大 describes him; 他比我大 measures him against me.
The other way round, not as much as, comes with 没有:

我没有他那么大 wǒ méiyǒu tā nàme dà — I'm not as old as he is.

And zuì, most, needs no second thing at all: tā zuì dà.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 他比我大两岁 — tā bǐ wǒ dà liǎng suì — He's two years older than me.
- 这个比那个大一点儿 — zhège bǐ nàge dà yìdiǎnr — This one is a bit bigger than that one.
- 我没有他那么大 — wǒ méiyǒu tā nàme dà — I'm not as old as he is.
- jīntiān bǐ míngtiān rè — Today is hotter than tomorrow.

Before you move on

Where does 比 go? (Between the two things.) Where does by how much go? (At the very end: 大两岁.) Does 很 go in? (No.)

153.4 gèng — even more

Before the new one: read the last lesson's sentence, then a word for tall.

- Read it: 他比我大两岁, aloud — tā bǐ wǒ dà liǎng suì
- Recall: say gāo, tall — R3, durable

You'll want to know: gèng gèng — "even more; still more".

tā gèng gāo — He's even taller.

tā bǐ wǒ gèng gāo — He's even taller than me.

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gèng is inherited from Middle Chinese kaengH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to change; to alter'. 'Even more' is a later sense, assumed here, not quoted.

What you've built

gèng goes straight before the adjective: tā gèng gāo.
With 比 it sharpens the comparison: both are tall, and he is taller still.

Your turn

- Say it: gèng
- Say it: gèng, once more
- Say it: tā gèng gāo — He's even taller.

- Say it: tā bǐ wǒ gèng gāo — He's even taller than me.
- Recall: say gāo, then gèng gāo

Before you move on

What does gèng mean? ("Even more".) Where does it go? (Straight before the adjective.)

153.5 gēn — with; the same as

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the word for the same.

- Recall: say gèng, even more — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say yíyàng, the same — R3, durable

You'll want to know: gēn gēn — "with; and"; with yíyàng after it, "the same as".

wǒ gēn tā yíyàng gāo — I'm as tall as he is.

wǒ gēn māma qù — I'm going with Mum.

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gēn is inherited from Middle Chinese kon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the heel'. How the heel became 'with', following at someone's heels, is a guess the gloss does not make, so the history is not settled.

What you've built

gēn … yíyàng, then an adjective, says two things are the same: wǒ gēn tā yíyàng gāo.
比 says one is more; gēn … yíyàng says neither is.

Your turn

- Say it: gēn
- Say it: gēn, once more
- Say it: wǒ gēn tā yíyàng gāo — I'm as tall as he is.
- Say it: wǒ gēn māma qù — I'm going with Mum.
- Recall: say yíyàng, then gēn tā yíyàng

Before you move on

What does gēn mean? ("With; and".) And gēn … yíyàng? (The same as.)

153.6 那么 (nàme) — so; that much

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the two words this one is made of.

- Recall: say gēn, with — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 那 — nà, that — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say 什么 — shénme, what — R4

You'll want to know: 那么

那么 — nàme — "so; that (much)".

我没有他那么大 wǒ méiyǒu tā nàme dà — I'm not as old as he is.

那么大 nàme dà — that big

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 那么 (nàme) is built from 那 'that' and 么, the 么 of 什么. The Guangyun records 那 as na (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'how; what'; how it came to mean 'that', and where the ending 么 comes from, are not settled.

What you've built

没有 … 那么, with an adjective after it, says not as much as: 我没有他那么大.
It is the other side of 比: 他比我大, so 我没有他那么大.

Your turn

- Say it: nàme
- Say it: nàme, once more
- Say it: 我没有他那么大 — wǒ méiyǒu tā nàme dà — I'm not as old as he is.
- Say it: 他比我大 — tā bǐ wǒ dà — He's older than me.
- Recall: say 那 and 什么, then 那么

Before you move on

What does 那么 mean? ("So; that much".) Say you are not as old as him. (我没有他那么大.)

153.7 我比他大 — 我没有他那么大

The chapter closes here, with two people comparing a family.

- Recall: say 那么 — nàme, so — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say gēn … yíyàng, the same as — R1
- Recall: say gèng, even more — R2

The exchange

A: 你多大

nǐ duō dà — How old are you?

B: 我二十岁

wǒ èrshí suì — I'm twenty.

A: 他呢

tā ne — And him?

B: 他比我大两岁

tā bǐ wǒ dà liǎng suì — He's two years older than me.

A: nǐ bǐ tā gāo ma — Are you taller than him?

B: wǒ méiyǒu tā nàme gāo — I'm not as tall as he is.

A: 你妈妈呢

nǐ māma ne — And your mum?

B: tā gēn wǒ yíyàng gāo — She's as tall as me.

A: wǒ bǐ tā dà, tā gèng gāo — I'm older than him, and he's taller still.

比 puts the difference last: 大两岁. 没有 … 那么 turns it round. gēn … yíyàng says neither is more.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — more, less and the same

Three ways to set two things side by side:

- 他比我大两岁 tā bǐ wǒ dà liǎng suì — he's two years older than me.
- 我没有他那么大 wǒ méiyǒu tā nàme dà — I'm not as old as he is.
- wǒ gēn tā yíyàng gāo — I'm as tall as he is.

Listen. Nǐ bǐ nǐ māma gāo ma?
Speak. Compare yourself with somebody you know: older or younger, taller or not as tall.
Write it: 比 — the left half first, then the right half of 能

Your turn

- Say it: 他比我大两岁 — tā bǐ wǒ dà liǎng suì — He's two years older than me.
- Say it: 我没有他那么大 — wǒ méiyǒu tā nàme dà — I'm not as old as he is.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 我比他大

Before you move on

Say you are older than him. (我比他大.) Say you are not as old as him. (我没有他那么大.) Say you are as tall as he is. (wǒ gēn tā yíyàng gāo.)

Chapter 154

This One or That One

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask 'this or that?', say 'not yet' and 'don't'.
>
> Still and not yet with 还*, asking which of two with* 还是*, offering either with huòzhě, and don't with bié, built on one new written character:* 还.

154.1 还 (hái) — still; yet

A new chapter, and it opens on a word for what has not changed yet.

- Recall: say 我比他大 — wǒ bǐ tā dà — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say 那么 — nàme — R1
- Recall: say hái xíng, not bad — R4, recognition at distance
- Recall: say yǐjīng, already — R2, a few chapters back

You'll want to know: 还

还 — hái — "still; yet".

他还在家 tā hái zài jiā — He's still at home.

我还没吃饭 wǒ hái méi chī fàn — I haven't eaten yet.

The next lesson puts the character in your hand. It is the hái of hái xíng.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 还 (hái) is the hái of hái xíng, inherited from Middle Chinese hwaen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to return'. The regular sound change gives huán, the huán 'to give back' you know, not hái; how hái split off from it, and how it came to mean 'still', are not settled.

What you've built

还 goes before the verb: still. 还没 before a verb is not yet: 我还没吃饭.
Set it against yǐjīng, already: wǒ yǐjīng chī le, I've eaten already; 我还没吃饭, not yet.

Your turn

- Say it: hái
- Say it: hái, once more
- Say it: 他还在家 — tā hái zài jiā — He's still at home.
- Say it: 我还没吃饭 — wǒ hái méi chī fàn — I haven't eaten yet.
- Recall: say yǐjīng, then 还没

Before you move on

What does 还 mean? ("Still; yet".) How do you say not yet? (还没, before the verb.)

154.2 还 — 不, then the walking piece last

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say hái — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  不 这 过

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — bù, zhè, guò

Script — 不, then the walking piece last

How 还 is written, stroke by stroke

还

Two pieces you own, in the order of 这 and 过.

不, four strokes, on the upper right: the bar, the left-falling stroke, the vertical, the dot.

辶, three strokes, last: the dot, the stroke that turns down, turns again and falls to the left, then the long base under 不.

4 + 3 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 还, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 还? (Seven.) Which piece goes in first? (不.) Which other characters put the walking piece last? (这, 进 and 过.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 还, pinned stroke paths and medians.

154.3 还是 (háishi) — or, in a question

Before the new one: read the character you have written, then a sentence with 要.

- Read it: 还没, aloud — hái méi, not yet
- Recall: say 我要水 — wǒ yào shuǐ, I want some water — R3, durable

You'll want to know: 还是

还是 — háishi — "or", in a question.

你要水还是要饭 nǐ yào shuǐ háishi yào fàn — Do you want water or food?

你去还是他去 nǐ qù háishi tā qù — Are you going, or is he?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 还是 (háishi) is built from 还 'still', the character you have written, and 是 'to be'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, hwaen and dzyeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); 'or' is the pair's own sense, which neither gloss gives.

What you've built

还是 goes between the two choices, and the answer picks one: 我要水. Each choice can keep its own verb: 要水还是要饭. The question needs no 吗: 还是 already makes it one.

Your turn

- Say it: háishi
- Say it: háishi, once more
- Say it: 你要水还是要饭 — nǐ yào shuǐ háishi yào fàn — Do you want water or food?
- Say it: 我要水 — wǒ yào shuǐ — Water, please.
- Recall: say 还没, then 还是, and hear the same hái

Before you move on

What does 还是 do? (Asks which of two.) Does the question need 吗? (No.)

154.4 huòzhě — or, in a statement

Before the new one: last lesson's sentence, then the or that asks.

- Recall: say 你要水还是要饭 — nǐ yào shuǐ háishi yào fàn — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 我还没吃饭 — wǒ hái méi chī fàn — R1, this chapter

You'll want to know: huòzhě

huòzhě — "or", in a statement.

míngtiān huòzhě hòutiān dōu kěyǐ — Tomorrow or the day after: either is fine.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huòzhě is built from huò and zhě. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, hwok and tsyaeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'not fixed; in doubt' and 'a particle'. 'Or' for the pair is assumed here, not quoted.

What you've built

还是 asks; huòzhě states. 你去还是他去 nǐ qù háishi tā qù wants an answer; nǐ qù huòzhě tā qù dōu kěyǐ says either will do.
都 after the two choices says both are fine.

Your turn

- Say it: huòzhě
- Say it: huòzhě, once more

- Say it: míngtiān huòzhě hòutiān dōu kěyǐ — Tomorrow or the day after: either is fine.
- Say it: 你去还是他去 — nǐ qù háishi tā qù — Are you going, or is he?
- Recall: say 还是, then huòzhě: one asks, one states

Before you move on

Which or asks, 还是 or huòzhě? (还是.) Which one states? (huòzhě.)

154.5 bié — don't

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the don't you already know.

- Recall: say huòzhě, or — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 不要说 — bú yào shuō, don't say it — R3, durable
- Recall: say biérén, other people — R2

You'll want to know: bié

bié — "don't".

bié qù — Don't go.

bié shuō le — Don't say any more.

Its character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bié is inherited from Middle Chinese bjet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'different; to part'. It is the bié of biérén and biéde. How it came to mean 'don't' is not settled.

What you've built bié and 不要 both stop someone: bié qù and 不要去 say the same thing, and bié is shorter.

With 了 at the end it means stop now, enough: bié shuō le.

Your turn

- Say it: bié
- Say it: bié, once more
- Say it: bié qù — Don't go.
- Say it: 不要去 — bú yào qù — Don't go.
- Say it: bié shuō le — Don't say any more.
- Recall: say 不要说, then bié shuō

Before you move on

What does bié mean? ("Don't".) Which longer words say the same? (不要.)

154.6 你要水还是要饭

The chapter closes here, with two people choosing between things.

- Recall: say bié, don't — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say huòzhě, or — R1
- Recall: say 还没 — hái méi, not yet — R2

The exchange

A: 你要水还是要饭

nǐ yào shuǐ háishi yào fàn — Do you want water or food?

B: 我要水

wǒ yào shuǐ — Water, please.

A: 你吃饭了吗

nǐ chī fàn le ma — Have you eaten?

B: 还没

hái méi — Not yet.

A: 我们去吃饭还是在家吃

wǒmen qù chī fàn háishi zài jiā chī — Shall we go out to eat, or eat at home?

B: 在家吃 妈妈还在做饭

zài jiā chī, māma hái zài zuò fàn — At home. Mum's still cooking.

A: 我们明天去还是后天去

wǒmen míngtiān qù háishi hòutiān qù — Are we going tomorrow or the day after?

B: míngtiān huòzhě hòutiān dōu kěyǐ — Tomorrow or the day after: either is fine.

A: hǎo, bié wàng le — Fine. Don't forget.

还是 asks, and the answer picks one; huòzhě refuses to pick. 还没 is a whole answer: not yet. bié wàng le: don't forget.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — or, still, not yet, don't

Four small words that steer a conversation:

- 你要水还是要饭 nǐ yào shuǐ háishi yào fàn — water or food?

- míngtiān huòzhě hòutiān dōu kěyǐ — tomorrow or the day after, either is fine.
- 我还没吃饭 wǒ hái méi chī fàn — I haven't eaten yet.
- bié qù — don't go.

Listen. Nǐ hē chá háishi hē shuǐ?
Speak. Offer a friend two choices, then tell them not to forget.
Write it: 还 — 不 first, the walking piece last

Your turn

- Say it: 你要水还是要饭 — nǐ yào shuǐ háishi yào fàn — Do you want water or food?
- Say it: 还没 — hái méi — Not yet.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 你要水还是要饭

Before you move on

Ask water or food. (你要水还是要饭.) Say not yet. (还没.) Say either is fine. (míngtiān huòzhě hòutiān dōu kěyǐ.) Say don't go. (bié qù.)

Chapter 155

Trains and Opening Hours

Modes: voice (6) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can find times in a timetable and opening hours.
>
> Reading a station timetable and a bookshop's opening hours, with 从 … 到 …, setting off, opening and closing, built on one new written character: 从.

155.1 从 (cóng) — from

A new chapter, and it opens on the word for where things start.

- Recall: say 你要水还是要饭 — nǐ yào shuǐ háishi yào fàn — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say bié, don't — R1
- Recall: say cónglái, ever — R2, a few chapters back

You'll want to know: 从

从 — cóng — "from".

从这儿到大学 cóng zhèr dào dàxué — from here to the university

我从中国来 wǒ cóng Zhōngguó lái — I come from China.

The next lesson puts the character in your hand. It is the cóng of cónglái.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 从 (cóng) is inherited from Middle Chinese dzjowng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to go to; to follow'. 'From' is a later sense, assumed here, not quoted. It is the cóng of cónglái.

What you've built

从 comes before the starting point, and the whole phrase goes before the verb: 我, 从中国, 来.
到 after it marks where things end: 从这儿到大学.

Your turn

- Say it: cóng
- Say it: cóng, once more
- Say it: 从这儿到大学 — cóng zhèr dào dàxué — from here to the university
- Say it: 我从中国来 — wǒ cóng Zhōngguó lái — I come from China.
- Recall: say cónglái, then 从, and hear the same cóng

Before you move on

What does 从 mean? ("From".) Where does 从 and its place go? (Before the verb: 我从中国来.)

155.2 从 — 人 twice, the left one narrower

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say cóng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

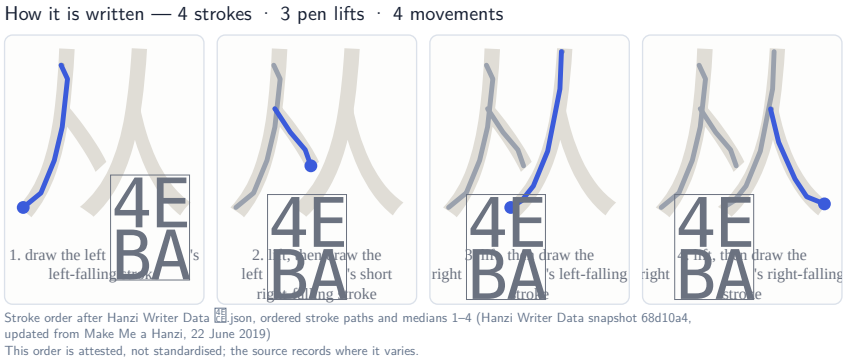
人 个

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rén, gè

Script — 人 twice, the left one narrower



How 从 is written, stroke by stroke

从

One piece you own, written twice.

The left 人, two strokes, narrow: the left-falling stroke, then a short stroke falling to the right that stops early, almost a dot, so the second 人 has room.

The right 人, two strokes, full size: the left-falling stroke, then the long stroke falling to the right.

2 + 2 = four. One person following another.

Your turn

- Write it: 从, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 从? (Four.) Which 人 is narrower? (The left.) What happens to its second stroke? (It stops early, almost a dot.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 从, pinned stroke paths and medians.

155.3 从八点到十点 — from and to

Two characters you write, a start and an end.

- Read it: 从这儿, aloud — cóng zhèr
- Recall: say jǐ diǎn, what time
- Recall: say zhǔnshí, on time

Grammar Lens: 从 ... 到 ..., a start and an end

从 marks where something starts, 到 where it ends. A time or a place goes after each.

从八点到十点 cóng bā diǎn dào shí diǎn — from eight to ten o'clock 从这儿到大学 cóng zhèr dào dàxué — from here to the university

On a sign, 到 often stands alone between two days or two times, with 从 left out:

星期一到星期五 xīngqīyī dào xīngqīwǔ — Monday to Friday

In a sentence the whole phrase goes before the verb:

我从八点到十点上课 wǒ cóng bā diǎn dào shí diǎn shàngkè — I have class from eight to ten.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 从八点到十点 — cóng bā diǎn dào shí diǎn — from eight to ten o'clock
- 从这儿到大学 — cóng zhèr dào dàxué — from here to the university
- 星期一到星期五 — xīngqīyī dào xīngqīwǔ — Monday to Friday
- 我从八点到十点上课 — wǒ cóng bā diǎn dào shí diǎn shàngkè — I have class from eight to ten.

Before you move on

What does 从 mark? (Where it starts.) And 到? (Where it ends.) What can a sign leave out? (从: 星期一到星期五.)

155.4 chūfā — to set off; to depart

Before the new one: read the last lesson's phrase, then going out of the door.

- Read it: 从八点到十点, aloud — cóng bā diǎn dào shí diǎn
- Recall: say chūmén, to go out — R3, durable

You'll want to know: chūfā

chūfā — "to set off; to depart".

huǒchē bā diǎn chūfā — The train leaves at eight.

wǒmen jǐ diǎn chūfā — What time do we set off?

Its second character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chūfā is built from 出 'to go out', the 出 you write, and fā 'to send off; to start', the fā of fāshāo. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwit and pjot (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to go forward; to appear' and 'to start up'.

What you've built

chūfā says when a journey starts; 到 says when it arrives: bā diǎn chūfā, shí diǎn dào.
On a timetable the start is often written 开, as a train or a bus 开 when it leaves.

Your turn

- Say it: chūfā

- Say it: chūfā, once more
- Say it: huǒchē bā diǎn chūfā — The train leaves at eight.
- Say it: wǒmen jǐ diǎn chūfā — What time do we set off?
- Recall: say chūmén, then chūfā

Before you move on

What does chūfā mean? ("To set off".) And to arrive? (到.)

155.5 开门 (kāimén) — to open; to be open

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the two words this one is made of.

- Recall: say chūfā, to set off — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say kāi, to open — R3, durable
- Recall: say 门 — mén, a door — R3

You'll want to know: 开门

开门 — kāimén — "to open (for business); to open the door".

星期天不开门 xīngqītiān bù kāimén — It's closed on Sundays.

早上九点开门 zǎoshang jiǔ diǎn kāimén — It opens at nine in the morning.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 开门 (kāimén) is built from 开 'to open' and 门 'a door'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, khoj and mwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), khoj glossed 'to open; to undo'.

What you've built

A shop that 开门 is open for business, not only its door. On a sign the hours come first: 早上九点到晚上八点开门.
不 stays bù before the level tone of kāi: 不开门.

Your turn

- Say it: kāimén
- Say it: kāimén, once more
- Say it: 星期天不开门 — xīngqītiān bù kāimén — It's closed on Sundays.
- Say it: 早上九点开门 — zǎoshang jiǔ diǎn kāimén — It opens at nine in the morning.
- Recall: say kāi and 门, then 开门

Before you move on

What does 开门 mean on a shop? (It is open for business.) Say it is closed on Sundays. (星期天不开门.)

155.6 guānmén — to close; to shut the door

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the verb for shutting.

- Recall: say 开门 — kāimén — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say guān, to close — R3, durable

You'll want to know: guānmén guānmén — "to close (for the day); to shut the door".

wǎnshang bā diǎn guānmén — It closes at eight in the evening.

Its first character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guānmén is built from guān 'to close', the word you know, and 门 'a door'. guān is inherited from Middle Chinese kwaen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which the dictionary explains, through an older book, as a wooden bar held across a door.

What you've built

开门 and guānmén bracket a shop's day: zǎoshang jiǔ diǎn kāimén, wǎnshang bā diǎn guānmén.
A sign often gives only the span, with 到 between: 九点到八点.

Your turn

- Say it: guānmén
- Say it: guānmén, once more
- Say it: wǎnshang bā diǎn guānmén — It closes at eight in the evening.
- Recall: say 开门, then guānmén

Before you move on

What does guānmén mean? ("To close for the day".) And to open? (开门.)

155.7 (reading) — a timetable and opening hours

Two notices, the kind you read standing up: a station timetable, then a bookshop's door.

- Recall: say guānmén, to close — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say fēnzhōng, a minute — R2, the chapter on the clock

十点半

Read it: it aloud, with nothing said first — shí diǎn bàn

Read this

从这儿到大学的火车 早上八点开 十点半到 下午两点开 四点半到 晚上七点开 九点到

书 星期一到星期五 早上九点到晚上八点开门 星期六 上午十点到下午五点开门 星期天不开门

Read it: both notices through once without stopping; do not translate as you go
Read it: the timetable again, and find the train that arrives before eleven

Read this

cóng zhèr dào dàxué de huǒchē zǎoshang bā diǎn kāi, shí diǎn bàn dào xiàwǔ liǎng diǎn kāi, sì diǎn bàn dào wǎnshang qī diǎn kāi, jiǔ diǎn dào

shū xīngqīyī dào xīngqīwǔ zǎoshang jiǔ diǎn dào wǎnshang bā diǎn kāimén xīngqīliù shàngwǔ shí diǎn dào xiàwǔ wǔ diǎn kāimén xīngqītiān bù kāimén

A timetable leaves out every word it can. 开 is the train leaving and 到 is it arriving; the shop's name is one character, 书, and its hours are two times with 到 between them and 开门 after.

Your turn

- You must be at the university by eleven: which train? (The eight o'clock: 早上八点开 十点半到.)
- Can you buy a book on Sunday? (No: 星期天不开门.)
- What time does the bookshop open on Saturday? (Ten in the morning: 上午十点.)
- Say it: the timetable aloud, once, without stopping

Before you move on

When does the last train arrive? (九点, nine in the evening.) Which day is the shop shut? (星期天.) How late is it open on a weekday? (晚上八点.)

155.8 火车十点半到

The chapter closes here: the same timetable and the same door, asked about aloud.

- Recall: say 星期天不开门 — xīngqītiān bù kāimén — R1, the reading
- Recall: say chūfā, to set off — R2
- Recall: say guānmén, to close — R2

The exchange

A: qǐngwèn, huǒchē jǐ diǎn chūfā — Excuse me, what time does the train leave?

B: 早上八点开

zǎoshang bā diǎn kāi — At eight in the morning.

A: jǐ diǎn dào dàxué — What time does it get to the university?

B: 十点半到

shí diǎn bàn dào — At half past ten.

A: 书 星期天开门吗

shū, xīngqītiān kāimén ma — The bookshop: is it open on Sunday?

B: 星期天不开门

xīngqītiān bù kāimén — It's closed on Sundays.

A: 星期六呢

xīngqīliù ne — And Saturday?

B: 上午十点到下午五点开门

shàngwǔ shí diǎn dào xiàwǔ wǔ diǎn kāimén — Open from ten to five.

A: xiàwǔ wǔ diǎn guānmén — So it closes at five.

The questions come in pinyin, because jǐ is not a character you write yet; the answers come off the notices, in characters.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — reading the times off a notice

A start, an end, and a verb for what happens:

- 早上八点开 十点半到 zǎoshang bā diǎn kāi, shí diǎn bàn dào — leaves at eight, arrives at half past ten.
- 从八点到十点 cóng bā diǎn dào shí diǎn — from eight to ten.
- 星期一到星期五 xīngqīyī dào xīngqīwǔ — Monday to Friday.
- wǎnshang bā diǎn guānmén — closes at eight in the evening.

Listen. Huǒchē jǐ diǎn dào?
Speak. Give the hours of a shop you know, from opening to closing.
Write it: 十点半到 — then 从, one 人 following another

Your turn

- Say it: huǒchē jǐ diǎn dào — What time does the train arrive?
- Say it: 十点半到 — shí diǎn bàn dào — At half past ten.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 从八点到十点

Before you move on

Say the train arrives at half past ten. (十点半到.) Say it's closed on Sundays. (星期天不开门.) Say from eight to ten. (从八点到十点.)

Chapter 156

Price List

Modes: voice (4) eyes (2) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can find prices in a price list and an advert.
>
> Reading a shop's price list and an advert, prices written in 元 and said in kuài, the price, free of charge and an advert, built on one new written character: 元.

156.1 元 (yuán) — yuan, as written

A new chapter, and it opens on how much things cost.

- Recall: say 火车十点半到 — huǒchē shí diǎn bàn dào — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say guānmén, to close — R2
- Recall: say kuài, yuan, as said — R3, durable
- Recall: say 多少 — duōshao, how much — R3

You'll want to know: 元

元 — yuán — "yuan", the unit of money, as it is written.

一本书十元 yì běn shū shí yuán — A book costs ten yuan.

On a price list it is written 元; aloud, most people say kuài: shí kuài. The next lesson puts the character in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 元 (yuán) is inherited from Middle Chinese ngjwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'great; the beginning; the head'. The unit of money is a modern sense, assumed here, not quoted.

What you've built

The number, then 元: 十元. A thing's price follows the thing: 一本书, 十元.
When you say it, swap in kuài: yì běn shū shí kuài. 一 falls before the dip of běn: yì běn.

Your turn

- Say it: yuán
- Say it: yuán, once more
- Say it: 一本书十元 — yì běn shū shí yuán — A book costs ten yuan.
- Say it: yì běn shū shí kuài — the same price, as people say it
- Recall: say kuài, then 元

Before you move on

What does 元 mean? (Yuan, as written.) How do people say it aloud? (kuài.)

156.2 元 — 二, then 儿 under it

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say yuán — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

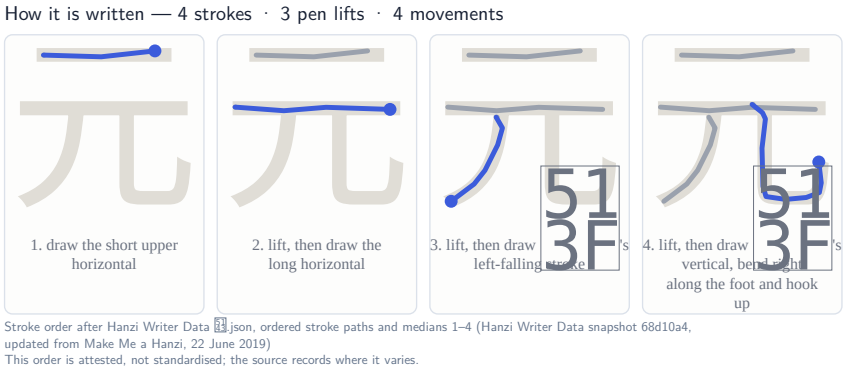
  二 儿

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — èr, ér

Script — 二, then 儿 under it



How 元 is written, stroke by stroke

元

Two characters you own, one above the other.
二, two strokes: the short upper bar, then the longer lower bar.
儿, two strokes, under them: the left-falling stroke, then the vertical that bends right along the foot and hooks up.
2 + 2 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 元, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 元? (Four.) Which character is on top? (二.) And under it? (儿.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 元, pinned stroke paths and medians.

156.3 jiàqián — price

Before the new one: read the last lesson's character in a price, then two words for money.

- Read it: 十元, aloud — shí yuán
- Recall: say qián, money — R3, durable
- Recall: say guì, expensive — R3

You'll want to know: jiàqián

jiàqián — "price".

jiàqián tài guì le — The price is too high.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiàqián is built from jià 'price' and qián 'money', the word you know. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, kaeH and dzjen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'price; value' and 'coin'. The jià of fàngjià, a holiday, sounds the same and is a different word.

What you've built

jiàqián names the price as a fact, the figure on the list; duōshao qián asks it aloud.
太 … 了 is still the complaint: jiàqián tài guì le.

Your turn

- Say it: jiàqián
- Say it: jiàqián, once more
- Say it: jiàqián tài guì le — The price is too high.
- Recall: say qián, then jiàqián

Before you move on

What does jiàqián mean? ("Price".) How do you ask a price aloud? (duōshao qián.)

156.4 miǎnfèi — free of charge

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then the word for buying.

- Recall: say jiàqián, price — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 买 — mǎi, to buy — R3, durable

You'll want to know: miǎnfèi

miǎnfèi — "free (of charge)".

shuǐ miǎnfèi — The water's free.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of miǎnfèi is built from miǎn 'to be spared' and fèi 'cost'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, mjenX and phj+jH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to escape; to remove' and 'to use up; to spend'. Spared the spending: free.

What you've built

miǎnfèi follows the thing, as a price does: shuǐ miǎnfèi, where a price list would say 水 一元.
Its first syllable dips: miǎn.

Your turn

- Say it: miǎnfèi
- Say it: miǎnfèi, once more
- Say it: shuǐ miǎnfèi — The water's free.
- Recall: say 买, then miǎnfèi

Before you move on

What does miǎnfèi mean? ("Free of charge".) Where does it go? (After the thing, as a price does.)

156.5 guǎnggào — advert

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then a thing worth advertising.

- Recall: say miǎnfèi, free — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 手机 — shǒujī, a phone — R3, durable

You'll want to know: guǎnggào guǎnggào — "advert; advertisement".

zhè shì shǒujī de guǎnggào — This is an advert for a phone.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guǎnggào is built from guǎng 'wide' and gào 'to tell'. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, kwangX and kawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'broad' and 'to report': telling widely. 'An advert' is the pair's modern sense.

What you've built

的 joins the thing to the advert: shǒujī de guǎnggào, an advert for a phone.
An advert often has a price and a day on it, and little else.

Your turn

- Say it: guǎnggào
- Say it: guǎnggào, once more
- Say it: zhè shì shǒujī de guǎnggào — This is an advert for a phone.
- Recall: say miǎnfèi, then guǎnggào

Before you move on

What does guǎnggào mean? ("An advert".) How do you say an advert for a phone? (shǒujī de guǎnggào.)

156.6 (reading) — a price list and an advert

A shop's price list, then an advert under it.

- Recall: say guǎnggào, an advert — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say 白菜 — báicài, cabbage — R3, durable

本子

Read it: it aloud, with nothing said first — běnzi

Read this

书 十元一本 本子 两元一本 大白菜 三元 水 一元 手机 九百九十九元

星期六和星期天 两本书十五元

Read it: the list through once without stopping; do not translate as you go
Read it: the advert again, and work out what two books cost at the weekend

Read this

shū, shí yuán yì běn běnzi, liǎng yuán yì běn dà báicài, sān yuán shuǐ, yì yuán shǒujī, jiǔbǎi jiǔshíjiǔ yuán

xīngqīliù hé xīngqītiān liǎng běn shū shíwǔ yuán

A price list puts the thing first and its price after, with 一本 for each one where the thing is counted by the book. 一 falls before the rise of yuán: yì yuán, as before běn. The advert changes only one thing: the price at the weekend.

Your turn

- What do two books cost on Saturday? (Fifteen yuan: 两本书十五元, said shíwǔ kuài.)
- What do a book and a notebook cost together? (Twelve yuan, said shí'èr kuài.)

- Which costs one yuan? (The water: 水 一元.)
- Say it: the price list aloud, once, saying kuài for each 元

Before you move on

What is the dearest thing on the list? (手机, 999 yuan.) What does a notebook cost? (两元, said liǎng kuài.) Which days does the advert cover? (星期六和星期天.)

156.7 一本书十元

The chapter closes here, at the counter, asking about the list you have read.

- Recall: say 水 一元 — shuǐ, yì yuán — R1, the reading
- Recall: say miǎnfèi, free — R2
- Recall: say jiàqián, price — R2

The exchange

A: zhè běn shū duōshao qián — How much is this book?

B: 一本书十元

yì běn shū shí yuán — Ten yuan a book.

A: jiàqián tài guì le — That's too dear.

B: 星期六和星期天 两本书十五元

xīngqīliù hé xīngqītiān, liǎng běn shū shíwǔ yuán — At the weekend, two books for fifteen.

A: nǐ kàndào guǎnggào le ma — Did you see the advert?

B: kàndào le, shuǐ miǎnfèi — Yes, and the water's free.

A: 本子呢

běnzi ne — And notebooks?

B: 两元一本

liǎng yuán yì běn — Two yuan each.

The list says 元 and the speakers read it as written; at a counter, most people would say kuài. Both are right.

Read this

Read it: the exchange through once without stopping, then answer the question below

What you've built — reading prices, saying prices

Written in 元, said in kuài:

- 一本书十元 yì běn shū shí yuán — said yì běn shū shí kuài.
- 两本书十五元 liǎng běn shū shíwǔ yuán — two books, fifteen yuan.
- jiàqián tài guì le — the price is too high.

Listen. Yí ge shǒujī duōshao qián?
Speak. Read three prices from a list you know, saying kuài each time.
Write it: 十元 — 元 is 二 over 儿

Your turn

- Say it: zhè běn shū duōshao qián — How much is this book?
- Say it: 一本书十元 — yì běn shū shí yuán — Ten yuan a book.
- Say it: the whole exchange, both parts
- Write it: 一本书十元

Before you move on

Read ten yuan as written. (十元.) Say it as people do. (shí kuài.) Say the water is free. (shuǐ miǎnfèi.)

Chapter 157

A Note About Tomorrow

Modes: voice (4) eyes (2) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 4 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can understand a notice and a message, and write a connected reply.
>
> Complete ZH-R157-review-final-157: one dialogue across the A2 core, after reading a notice at work and a friend's message and writing a connected reply of four to six lines.

157.1 开会 (kāihuì) — to have a meeting

A new chapter, and it opens on a word you will hear at work.

- Recall: say 一本书十元 — yì běn shū shí yuán — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say guǎnggào, an advert — R1
- Recall: say 开门 — kāimén, to open — R2

You'll want to know: 开会

开会 — kāihuì — "to have a meeting".

> 明天下午开会 míngtiān xiàwǔ kāihuì — There's a meeting tomorrow afternoon.
>
> 我们在开会 wǒmen zài kāihuì — We're in a meeting.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 开会 (kāihuì) is built from 开 'to open' and 会 'a gathering'. 会 is the character of 会 'can' and 会 'will', inherited from Middle Chinese hwajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to come together': here it keeps that sense.

What you've built

开 starts many things you know: 开门, 开车, and now 开会.
在 before it says the meeting is going on: 我们在开会.

Your turn

- Say it: kāihuì
- Say it: kāihuì, once more
- Say it: 明天下午开会 — míngtiān xiàwǔ kāihuì — There's a meeting tomorrow afternoon.
- Say it: 我们在开会 — wǒmen zài kāihuì — We're in a meeting.
- Recall: say 开门 and 开车, then 开会

Before you move on

What does 开会 mean? ("To have a meeting".) Say there's a meeting tomorrow afternoon. (明天下午开会.)

157.2 tōngzhī — to notify; a notice

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then a word that ends the same way.

- Recall: say 开会 — kāihuì — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say zhīdào, to know — R3, durable

You'll want to know: tōngzhī tōngzhī — "to notify; a notice".

> lǎoshī tōngzhī wǒmen míngtiān kāihuì — The teacher let us know there's a meeting tomorrow.
>
> zhè shì yí ge tōngzhī — This is a notice.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tōngzhī is built from tōng 'to get through' and zhī 'to know', the zhī of zhīdào. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, thuwng and trje (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to reach' and 'to perceive': making something known.

What you've built

As a verb, tōngzhī takes the people told, then the news: tōngzhī wǒmen míngtiān kāihuì.
As a noun it is the notice itself, pinned up or sent round.

Your turn

- Say it: tōngzhī
- Say it: tōngzhī, once more
- Say it: lǎoshī tōngzhī wǒmen míngtiān kāihuì — The teacher let us know there's a meeting tomorrow.
- Recall: say zhīdào, then tōngzhī

Before you move on

What does tōngzhī mean? ("To notify; a notice".) What comes after it as a verb? (Who is told, then the news.)

157.3 xiāoxi — news; a message

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then a word that ends on the same light xi.

- Recall: say tōngzhī, a notice — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say xiūxi, to rest — R3, durable

You'll want to know: xiāoxi

xiāoxi — "news; a message".

wǒ yǒu yí ge hǎo xiāoxi — I've got some good news.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiāoxi is built from xiāo and xi, the xi of xiūxi. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, sjew and sik (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to melt away; to wane' and 'to stop; to breed'. Neither gloss gives 'news', so how the pair came to mean it is not settled.

What you've built

xiāoxi is any news, and the message that brings it: a text from a friend is a xiāoxi.
The xi at the end is light, as in xiūxi.

Your turn

- Say it: xiāoxi
- Say it: xiāoxi, once more
- Say it: wǒ yǒu yí ge hǎo xiāoxi — I've got some good news.
- Recall: say xiūxi, then xiāoxi

Before you move on

What does xiāoxi mean? ("News; a message".) Say you have some good news. (wǒ yǒu yí ge hǎo xiāoxi.)

157.4 huífù — to reply

Before the new one: last lesson's word, then two words this one leans on.

- Recall: say xiāoxi, a message — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say huídá, to answer — R2, a few chapters back
- Recall: say fùxí, to revise — R2

You'll want to know: huífù huífù — "to reply (to a message)".

qǐng huífù — Please reply.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huífù is built from huí 'to go back' and fù 'to return', the fù of fùxí. Both are inherited from Middle Chinese, hwoj and bjuwk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to turn round' and 'to return'. The regular change from bjuwk gives fú; fù continues the Guangyun's other reading, bjuwH, glossed 'again'.

What you've built

huídá answers a question; huífù answers a message.
请 in front makes it the polite request at the foot of a notice: qǐng huífù.

Your turn

- Say it: huífù
- Say it: huífù, once more
- Say it: qǐng huífù — Please reply.
- Recall: say huídá, then huífù: a question, then a message

Before you move on

What does huífù mean? ("To reply to a message".) And huídá? (To answer a question.)

157.5 (reading) — a notice and a message

A notice pinned up at work, then a message from a friend.

- Recall: say huífù, to reply — R1, one lesson back
- Recall: say tōngzhī, a notice — R2

大家

Read it: it aloud, with nothing said first — dàjiā

Read this

明天下午三点开会 大家都要来 请不要来晚了

我明天不能去了 因为我妈妈病了 后天下午你在家吗 我想两点来看你 给我打电话

Read it: the notice and the message through once without stopping; do not translate as you go
Read it: the message again, and find the question your friend asks you

Read this

míngtiān xiàwǔ sān diǎn kāihuì dàjiā dōu yào lái qǐng bú yào lái wǎn le wǒ míngtiān bù néng qù le yīnwèi wǒ māma bìng le hòutiān xiàwǔ nǐ zài jiā ma wǒ xiǎng liǎng diǎn lái kàn nǐ gěi wǒ dǎ diànhuà

The notice speaks to everyone, 大家, and asks with 请. The message runs in order: what has changed, why, a question, an offer, a request. 因为 ties the reason to the line before it.

Your turn

- When is the meeting? (明天下午三点: three tomorrow afternoon.)
- Why isn't your friend coming tomorrow? (因为我妈妈病了: the mother is ill.)
- What does your friend ask you? (后天下午你在家吗: whether you are home the afternoon after tomorrow.)
- What does your friend want you to do? (给我打电话: phone back.)
- Say it: the message aloud, once, as your friend would say it

Before you move on

Who is the notice for? (大家: everyone.) What must nobody be? (来晚了: late.) What time does your friend want to come? (两点.)

157.6 A reply, and the lines that lean on each other

The last lesson ended on a message from a friend: they cannot come tomorrow, and they ask whether you are at home the afternoon after.

This lesson answers it.

- Recall: say huífù, to reply

What to know first

Connected writing is not longer writing. Four short lines can hang together; six long ones can fall apart. What makes lines connected is that each one leans on the one before it.

Three things do the leaning, and you own all three. A time word at the front of a line tells your reader where in the day they are: 后天下午, 两点以后. The subject said once: say 我 in the first line, and the lines after it can start on the time or the verb. 因为 ties a reason to the line before it, so your reader knows why.

Your reader is the friend who sent the message. Your purpose is to settle the appointment: answer the question, then agree a time.

Writing — connected composition

Write four to six lines back to your friend. No name at the top: write to them as you would in a message.

- Line 1 answers the question: 后天下午我在家, or 后天下午我不在家.
- Line 2 says what you will be doing then, with 会, 要 or 正在.
- Line 3 gives one reason, with 因为.
- Line 4 offers a time, with 从 … 到 …, or 两点以后.
- The last line asks after their mother. 你妈妈 … needs only characters you write.

A word whose characters you have not written goes in pinyin, inside the line, with its tone marks: kěyǐ, shūfu, huífù. Every character comes from the 163 you have learned, each in the order you learned it, each in the same size of square.

No Chinese commas or full stops: leave a space between clauses, as this book prints them.

Write the reply. Then read it once as your friend would, top to bottom.

Before you move on

Read your third line on its own. Does it stand up without the line above it? (It should not quite: 因为 leans on the line before.) Count the lines that start with 我. If every one does, you wrote a list, not a reply.

157.7 The A2 core — once more

The last lesson of the A2 core: one conversation that uses every chapter of it.

- Recall: say xiāoxi, a message — R2
- Recall: say 开门 and guānmén, to open and to close — R2
- Recall: say jiàqián and miǎnfèi, the price and free — R2

Your turn

A: 明天会下雨吗

míngtiān huì xiàyǔ ma — Will it rain tomorrow?

B: tiānqì yùbào shuō kěnéng huì — The forecast says it might.

B: 后天不会

hòutiān bú huì — Not the day after.

A: 后天下午开会 你来吗

hòutiān xiàwǔ kāihuì, nǐ lái ma — There's a meeting the afternoon after tomorrow. Are you coming?

B: wǒ yídìng lái — I'll be there, for sure.

A: 从两点到四点

cóng liǎng diǎn dào sì diǎn — From two till four.

B: nǐ kàndào tōngzhī le ma — Did you see the notice?

A: kàndào le, wǒ yě huífù le — I saw it, and I've replied.

B: 下个月你要去中国吗

xià ge yuè nǐ yào qù Zhōngguó ma — Are you going to China next month?

A: 要

yào — I am.

A: 你去过中国吗

nǐ qù guo Zhōngguó ma — Have you ever been?

B: 没去过

méi qù guo — No, never.

B: 你汉语说得很好

nǐ Hànyǔ shuō de hěn hǎo — Your Chinese is good.

A: 我没有他那么好

wǒ méiyǒu tā nàme hǎo — Not as good as his.

B: 你要水还是要饭

nǐ yào shuǐ háishi yào fàn — Water or food?

A: 饭 我还没吃

fàn, wǒ hái méi chī — Food. I haven't eaten yet.

B: 我正在做饭

wǒ zhèngzài zuò fàn — I'm cooking right now.

B: bié zǒu — Don't go.

A: wǒ de huǒchē bā diǎn chūfā — My train leaves at eight.

A: wǒ kàndào yí ge guǎnggào — I saw an advert:

A: 书十元一本

shū shí yuán yì běn — books at ten yuan each.

B: 星期天不开门

xīngqītiān bù kāimén — That shop is closed on Sundays.

- Read it: the lines printed in characters aloud, then the rest
- Say it: the whole dialogue, both parts
- Say it: B's lines again, with your own answers

Before you move on

Will? (会.) Going to? (要.) Right now? (正在.) Ever? (过.) Saw it? (看到.) How well? (得.) Than? (比.) Or? (还是.) Not yet? (还没.) From … to? (从 ... 到.) Yuan, as written? (元.) A meeting? (开会.) Reply? (huífù.)

Chapter 158

Waking Up

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say who wakes me, when I fall asleep, what I dream and what I am used to.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 158: I can say who wakes me, when I fall asleep, what I dream and what I am used to.

158.1 jiàoxǐng — to wake someone up

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for news, then the Mandarin for to reply.

You'll want to know: jiàoxǐng

jiàoxǐng — "to wake someone up".

> māma měitiān qī diǎn jiàoxǐng wǒ — Mum wakes me at seven every day.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiàoxǐng is built from 叫 'to call' and xǐng 'to wake', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kewH and sengX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second as sobering up after wine: to call someone awake.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jiàoxǐng
- Say it: jiàoxǐng, once more
- Say it: māma měitiān qī diǎn jiàoxǐng wǒ — Mum wakes me at seven every day.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for news, then the Mandarin for to reply, then say jiàoxǐng again

Before you move on

What does jiàoxǐng mean? ("To wake someone up".) Say it once more.

158.2 shuìzháo — to fall asleep

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to reply, then the Mandarin for to wake someone up.

You'll want to know: shuìzháo

shuìzháo — "to fall asleep".

wǒ zuótiān wǎnshang shí'èr diǎn shuìzháo le — Last night I fell asleep at twelve.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shuìzháo is built from shuì 'to sleep' and zháo, both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyweH and drjak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second 'to attach to': sleep takes hold.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: shuìzháo
- Say it: shuìzháo, once more
- Say it: wǒ zuótiān wǎnshang shí'èr diǎn shuìzháo le — Last night I fell asleep at twelve.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to reply, then the Mandarin for to wake someone up, then say shuìzháo again

Before you move on

What does shuìzháo mean? ("To fall asleep".) Say it once more.

158.3 zuòmèng — to dream; to have a dream

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to wake someone up, then the Mandarin for to fall asleep.

You'll want to know: zuòmèng

zuòmèng — "to dream; to have a dream".

wǒ chángcháng zuòmèng — I dream a lot.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zuòmèng is built from 做 'to do' and mèng 'a dream'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese mjuwngH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed as the spirit wandering in sleep; 做 has no form in that dictionary, so the history of the first part is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: zuòmèng
- Say it: zuòmèng, once more
- Say it: wǒ chángcháng zuòmèng — I dream a lot.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to wake someone up, then the Mandarin for to fall asleep, then say zuòmèng again

Before you move on

What does zuòmèng mean? ("To dream; to have a dream".) Say it once more.

158.4 起来 (qǐlai) — to get up; to stand up

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to fall asleep, then the Mandarin for to have a dream.

You'll want to know: 起来

起来 — qǐlai — "to get up; to stand up".

七点了你快起来 qī diǎn le nǐ kuài qǐlai — It's seven o'clock: up you get, quick.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 起来 (qǐlai) is built from 起 'to rise' and 来 'to come', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khiX and loj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to rise' and 'to stand'. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: qǐlai
- Say it: qǐlai, once more
- Say it: qī diǎn le nǐ kuài qǐlai — It's seven o'clock: up you get, quick.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to fall asleep, then the Mandarin for to have a dream, then say qǐlai again

Before you move on

What does 起来 mean? ("To get up; to stand up".) Say it once more.

158.5 xíguàn — to be used to; a habit

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have a dream, then the Mandarin for to stand up.

You'll want to know: xíguàn

xíguàn — "to be used to; a habit".

wǒ hái méi xíguàn liù diǎn qǐchuáng — I'm still not used to getting up at six.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xíguàn is built from xí and guàn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, zip and kwaenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to learn' and explains the second with the first: practised.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: xíguàn
- Say it: xíguàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ hái méi xíguàn liù diǎn qǐchuáng — I'm still not used to getting up at six.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have a dream, then the Mandarin for to stand up, then say xíguàn again

Before you move on

What does xíguàn mean? ("To be used to; a habit".) Say it once more.

Chapter 159

Rooms at Home

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the bedroom, the living room, the study, the balcony and the window.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 159: I can name the bedroom, the living room, the study, the balcony and the window.

159.1 wòshì — bedroom

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to stand up, then the Mandarin for to be used to.

You'll want to know: wòshì

wòshì — "bedroom".

> wǒ de wòshì hěn xiǎo — My bedroom is small.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wòshì is built from wò 'to lie down' and shì 'room', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngwaH and syit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): a room to lie down in.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: wòshì
- Say it: wòshì, once more
- Say it: wǒ de wòshì hěn xiǎo — My bedroom is small.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to stand up, then the Mandarin for to be used to, then say wòshì again

Before you move on

What does wòshì mean? ("Bedroom".) Say it once more.

159.2 kètīng — living room; sitting room

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be used to, then the Mandarin for a bedroom.

You'll want to know: kètīng

kètīng — "living room; sitting room".

kèrén zài kètīng — The guests are in the living room.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kètīng is built from 客 'guest' and tīng 'hall'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese khaek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the second is listed there as theng, glossed 'a hall', a different word from the tīng of listening: the hall for guests.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: kètīng
- Say it: kètīng, once more
- Say it: kèrén zài kètīng — The guests are in the living room.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be used to, then the Mandarin for a bedroom, then say kètīng again

Before you move on

What does kètīng mean? ("Living room; sitting room".) Say it once more.

159.3 书房 (shūfáng) — study; a room for books and work

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a bedroom, then the Mandarin for a living room.

You'll want to know: 书房

书房 — shūfáng — "study; a room for books and work".

我的书都在书房里 wǒ de shū dōu zài shūfáng lǐ — All my books are in the study.

The new character, in pieces: 房 — eight strokes in two pieces: on top a door of four strokes (a dot, a horizontal that turns down, a horizontal closing it, a long stroke falling to the left), and under it the four strokes of the piece read fāng. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 书房 (shūfáng) is built from 书 'book' and 房 'room', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syo and bjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a room': the room for books.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: shūfáng
- Say it: shūfáng, once more
- Say it: wǒ de shū dōu zài shūfáng lǐ — All my books are in the study.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a bedroom, then the Mandarin for a living room, then say shūfáng again

Before you move on

What does 书房 mean? ("Study; a room for books and work".) Say it once more.

159.4 房 — a door over fáng

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shūfáng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

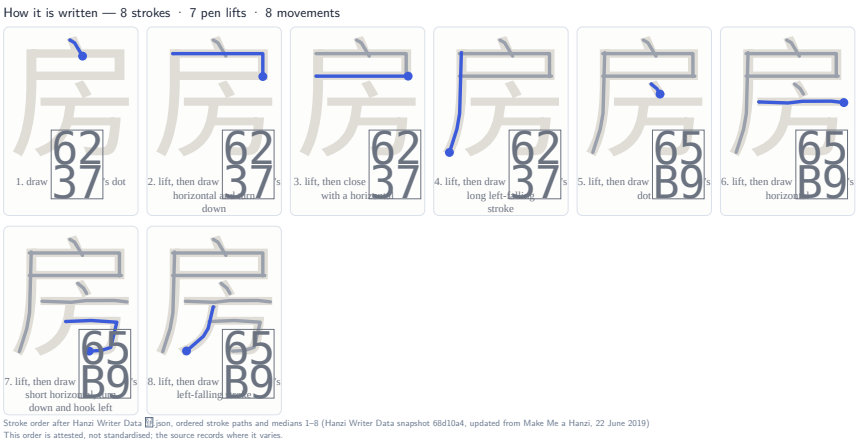
  书 门

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shū, mén

Script — a door over fāng



How 房 is written, stroke by stroke

房

Two pieces, top over bottom. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The door, four strokes. A dot on top. A horizontal that turns down at its right end. A horizontal under it, closing the box. Then a long stroke from the top left falling down to the lower left: the side of the door.

The piece read fāng, four strokes, under the door. A dot. A long horizontal. A horizontal that turns down and hooks back to the left. Last, a stroke falling to the left through the middle.

4 + 4 = eight.

Your turn

- Write it: 房, all eight, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 房? (Eight.) Which piece is on top? (The door, four strokes.) Which stroke of the lower piece hooks? (The third, the one that turns down.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 房, pinned stroke paths and medians.

159.5 yángtái — balcony

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a living room, then the Mandarin for a study at home.

You'll want to know: yángtái

yángtái — "balcony".

wǒmen jiā de yángtái hěn dà — Our balcony is big.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yángtái is built from yáng 'the sunny side' and a word for a platform, both inherited from Middle Chinese, yang and doj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary writes the second another way and glosses it as raised square ground: a platform in the sun.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: yángtái
- Say it: yángtái, once more
- Say it: wǒmen jiā de yángtái hěn dà — Our balcony is big.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a living room, then the Mandarin for a study at home, then say yángtái again

Before you move on

What does yángtái mean? ("Balcony".) Say it once more.

159.6 chuānghu — window

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a study at home, then the Mandarin for a balcony.

You'll want to know: chuānghu

chuānghu — "window".

wòshì de chuānghu hěn dà — The bedroom window is big.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chuānghu is built from chuāng 'window' and hu 'door', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsrhaewng and huX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary writes the first another way and glosses it 'an opening right through'; it calls the second half of a door. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: chuānghu
- Say it: chuānghu, once more
- Say it: wòshì de chuānghu hěn dà — The bedroom window is big.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a study at home, then the Mandarin for a balcony, then say chuānghu again

Before you move on

What does chuānghu mean? ("Window".) Say it once more.

Chapter 160

Doing the Chores

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about sweeping, washing up, making the bed, doing jobs and looking after someone.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 160: I can talk about sweeping, washing up, making the bed, doing jobs and looking after someone.

160.1 sǎodì — to sweep the floor

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a balcony, then the Mandarin for a window.

You'll want to know: sǎodì

sǎodì — "to sweep the floor".

> wǒ sǎodì nǐ xǐ cài — I'll sweep the floor; you wash the vegetables.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of sǎodì is built from 扫 'to sweep' and dì 'ground', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sawX and dijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: sǎodì
- Say it: sǎodì, once more
- Say it: wǒ sǎodì nǐ xǐ cài — I'll sweep the floor; you wash the vegetables.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a balcony, then the Mandarin for a window, then say sǎodì again

Before you move on

What does sǎodì mean? ("To sweep the floor".) Say it once more.

160.2 xǐwǎn — to do the washing-up; to wash the dishes

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a window, then the Mandarin for to sweep the floor.

You'll want to know: xǐwǎn

xǐwǎn — "to do the washing-up; to wash the dishes".

chī fàn yǐhòu wǒ xǐwǎn — After we eat, I'll do the dishes.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Two third tones: xǐwǎn is said xíwǎn, the first rising.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xǐwǎn is built from 洗 'to wash' and wǎn 'bowl', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sejX and 'wanX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which writes the second another way and glosses it 'a vessel'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: xǐwǎn
- Say it: xǐwǎn, once more
- Say it: chī fàn yǐhòu wǒ xǐwǎn — After we eat, I'll do the dishes.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a window, then the Mandarin for to sweep the floor, then say xǐwǎn again

Before you move on

What does xǐwǎn mean? ("To do the washing-up; to wash the dishes".) Say it once more.

160.3 pūchuáng — to make the bed

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sweep the floor, then the Mandarin for to do the washing-up.

You'll want to know: pūchuáng

pūchuáng — "to make the bed".

qǐchuáng yǐhòu bié wàng le pūchuáng — Don't forget to make your bed when you get up.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of pūchuáng is built from pū 'to spread out' and chuáng 'bed', both inherited from Middle Chinese, phu and dzrjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): to spread the bedding out.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: pūchuáng
- Say it: pūchuáng, once more
- Say it: qǐchuáng yǐhòu bié wàng le pūchuáng — Don't forget to make your bed when you get up.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sweep the floor, then the Mandarin for to do the washing-up, then say pūchuáng again

Before you move on

What does pūchuáng mean? ("To make the bed".) Say it once more.

160.4 gànhuó — to get the jobs done; to work

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to do the washing-up, then the Mandarin for to make the bed.

You'll want to know: gànhuó

gànhuó — "to get the jobs done; to work".

nǐmen dōu zài gànhuó ma — Are you all busy working?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gànhuó is built from gàn and huó, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kanH and hwat (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'a stem' and 'strong' and the second 'alive'; how the pair came to mean doing the work is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: gànhuó
- Say it: gànhuó, once more
- Say it: nǐmen dōu zài gànhuó ma — Are you all busy working?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to do the washing-up, then the Mandarin for to make the bed, then say gànhuó again

Before you move on

What does gànhuó mean? ("To get the jobs done; to work".) Say it once more.

160.5 zhàogù — to look after; to take care of

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to make the bed, then the Mandarin for to get the jobs done.

You'll want to know: zhàogù

zhàogù — "to look after; to take care of".

māma bìng le wǒ yào zhàogù tā — Mum is ill, so I'm going to look after her.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhàogù is built from zhào 'bright, to shine' and gù 'to turn and look'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese tsyewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the second is listed there as kuH, glossed 'to look back' and 'to care for'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: zhàogù
- Say it: zhàogù, once more
- Say it: māma bìng le wǒ yào zhàogù tā — Mum is ill, so I'm going to look after her.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to make the bed, then the Mandarin for to get the jobs done, then say zhàogù again

Before you move on

What does zhàogù mean? ("To look after; to take care of".) Say it once more.

Chapter 161

Rice and Meat

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for rice, a portion, fried rice, beef and chicken.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 161: I can ask for rice, a portion, fried rice, beef and chicken.

161.1 大米 (dàmǐ) — uncooked rice; rice grain

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get the jobs done, then the Mandarin for to look after.

You'll want to know: 大米

大米 — dàmǐ — "uncooked rice; rice grain".

> 我去买大米 wǒ qù mǎi dàmǐ — I'm going to buy rice.

The new character, in pieces: 米 — six strokes: two short strokes slanting in toward the middle, a horizontal, a vertical through it, then from the crossing a stroke falling to the left and one falling to the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 大米 (dàmǐ) is built from 大 'big' and 米 'grain', both inherited from Middle Chinese, daH and mejX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second as the seed of a cereal.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: dàmǐ
- Say it: dàmǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù mǎi dàmǐ — I'm going to buy rice.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get the jobs done, then the Mandarin for to look after, then say dàmǐ again

Before you move on

What does 大米 mean? ("Uncooked rice; rice grain".) Say it once more.

161.2 米 — a cross with two strokes above and two below

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say dàmǐ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

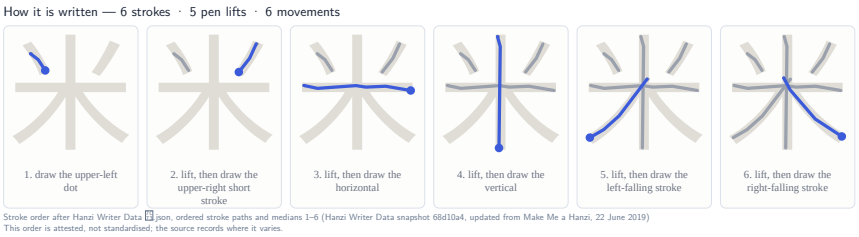
  来 大

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — lái, dà

Script — a cross with two strokes above and two below



How 米 is written, stroke by stroke

米

One piece, six strokes, built round a cross.

Two short strokes first, slanting in toward the middle: a dot from the upper left, then a short stroke from the upper right falling to the left.

The cross. A long horizontal, then a vertical down through its middle.

The legs, from the crossing. A stroke falling to the lower left, then one falling to the lower right.

2 + 2 + 2 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 米, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 米? (Six.) Which two come first? (The two short strokes above the cross.) Which come last? (The two legs, left, then right.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 米, pinned stroke paths and medians.

161.3 fèn — measure word for a serving; portion

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to look after, then the Mandarin for uncooked rice.

You'll want to know: fèn

fèn — "measure word for a serving; portion".

> wǒ yào liǎng fèn mǐfàn — Two portions of rice, please.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fèn has no older form of this word in any dictionary we use: the Guangyun lists the character only as pin, glossed 'refined', which is neither this sound nor this sense. Its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: fèn
- Say it: fèn, once more
- Say it: wǒ yào liǎng fèn mǐfàn — Two portions of rice, please.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to look after, then the Mandarin for uncooked rice, then say fèn again

Before you move on

What does fèn mean? ("Measure word for a serving; portion".) Say it once more.

161.4 chǎofàn — fried rice

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for uncooked rice, then the Mandarin for measure word for a serving.

You'll want to know: chǎofàn

chǎofàn — "fried rice".

> tā yào le yí fèn chǎofàn — He ordered a portion of fried rice.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chǎofàn is built from chǎo 'to stir-fry' and 饭 'cooked rice', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsrhaewX and bjonH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to roast dry'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: chǎofàn
- Say it: chǎofàn, once more
- Say it: tā yào le yí fèn chǎofàn — He ordered a portion of fried rice.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for uncooked rice, then the Mandarin for measure word for a serving, then say chǎofàn again

Before you move on

What does chǎofàn mean? ("Fried rice".) Say it once more.

161.5 niúròu — beef

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for measure word for a serving, then the Mandarin for fried rice.

You'll want to know: niúròu

niúròu — "beef".

> zhège niúròu hěn hǎochī — This beef is delicious.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of niúròu is built from niú 'ox' and ròu 'meat', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngjuw and nyuwk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: niúròu
- Say it: niúròu, once more
- Say it: zhège niúròu hěn hǎochī — This beef is delicious.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for measure word for a serving, then the Mandarin for fried rice, then say niúròu again

Before you move on

What does niúròu mean? ("Beef".) Say it once more.

161.6 jīròu — chicken meat; chicken (as food)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for fried rice, then the Mandarin for beef.

You'll want to know: jīròu

jīròu — "chicken meat; chicken (as food)".

nǐ yào niúròu háishi jīròu — Would you like beef or chicken?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jīròu is built from jī 'chicken' and ròu 'meat', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kej and nyuwk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription);

the dictionary quotes an older book calling the first the creature that knows the hour.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: jīròu
- Say it: jīròu, once more
- Say it: nǐ yào niúròu háishi jīròu — Would you like beef or chicken?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for fried rice, then the Mandarin for beef, then say jīròu again

Before you move on

What does jīròu mean? ("Chicken meat; chicken (as food)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 162

How Often

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I do as a rule, every time, regularly, now and then and normally.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 162: I can say what I do as a rule, every time, regularly, now and then and normally.

162.1 yìbān — generally; as a rule; ordinary

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for beef, then the Mandarin for chicken meat.

You'll want to know: yìbān

yìbān — "generally; as a rule; ordinary".

> wǒ yìbān qī diǎn qǐchuáng — As a rule I get up at seven.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
The tone of 一 changes: yī is said yì before the first tone of bān.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yìbān is built from 一 'one' and bān 'kind'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese 'jit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the second is listed there as pan, glossed 'to carry', and as ban, glossed 'joy'. The sense 'kind' is not given, so how the pair came to mean 'as a rule' is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: yìbān
- Say it: yìbān, once more
- Say it: wǒ yìbān qī diǎn qǐchuáng — As a rule I get up at seven.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for beef, then the Mandarin for chicken meat, then say yìbān again

Before you move on

What does yìbān mean? ("Generally; as a rule; ordinary".) Say it once more.

162.2 zǒngshì — every single time; always

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for chicken meat, then the Mandarin for as a rule.

You'll want to know: zǒngshì

zǒngshì — "every single time; always".

tā zǒngshì hěn máng — He's busy all the time.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zǒngshì is built from zǒng 'all, gathered together' and 是 'to be', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsuwngX and dzyeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); how the pair came to mean every time is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: zǒngshì
- Say it: zǒngshì, once more
- Say it: tā zǒngshì hěn máng — He's busy all the time.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for chicken meat, then the Mandarin for as a rule, then say zǒngshì again

Before you move on

What does zǒngshì mean? ("Every single time; always".) Say it once more.

162.3 jīngcháng — regularly; often

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for as a rule, then the Mandarin for every single time.

You'll want to know: jīngcháng

jīngcháng — "regularly; often".

wǒ jīngcháng qù Běijīng — I go to Beijing regularly.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jīngcháng is built from jīng and cháng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, keng and dzyang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'constant', using the second as its gloss; the sense 'often' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: jīngcháng
- Say it: jīngcháng, once more
- Say it: wǒ jīngcháng qù Běijīng — I go to Beijing regularly.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for as a rule, then the Mandarin for every single time, then say jīngcháng again

Before you move on

What does jīngcháng mean? ("Regularly; often".) Say it once more.

162.4 ǒu'ěr — now and then; occasionally

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for every single time, then the Mandarin for regularly.

You'll want to know: ǒu'ěr

ǒu'ěr — "now and then; occasionally".

wǒ ǒu'ěr hē kāfēi — I drink coffee now and then.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Two third tones: ǒu'ěr is said óu'ěr, the first rising.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of ǒu'ěr is built from ǒu 'by chance' and the old ending 尔, both inherited from Middle Chinese (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the first as nguwH, glossed 'unexpected', though today's third tone goes with its other reading, nguwX 'a pair'; the second as nyeX, glossed 'you', here an ending.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: ǒu'ěr
- Say it: ǒu'ěr, once more
- Say it: wǒ ǒu'ěr hē kāfēi — I drink coffee now and then.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for every single time, then the Mandarin for regularly, then say ǒu'ěr again

Before you move on

What does ǒu'ěr mean? ("Now and then; occasionally".) Say it once more.

162.5 tōngcháng — normally; usually

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for regularly, then the Mandarin for now and then.

You'll want to know: tōngcháng

tōngcháng — "normally; usually".

zhōumò wǒ tōngcháng zài jiā — At weekends I'm normally at home.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tōngcháng is built from tōng 'to go through' and cháng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, thuwng and dzyang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): what holds right through. The sense 'normal' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: tōngcháng
- Say it: tōngcháng, once more
- Say it: zhōumò wǒ tōngcháng zài jiā — At weekends I'm normally at home.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for regularly, then the Mandarin for now and then, then say tōngcháng again

Before you move on

What does tōngcháng mean? ("Normally; usually".) Say it once more.

Chapter 163

Free This Weekend

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask if someone is free, go with them, plan a picnic and put it off until next time.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 163: I can ask if someone is free, go with them, plan a picnic and put it off until next time.

163.1 yǒukòng — to have free time; to be free

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for now and then, then the Mandarin for normally.

You'll want to know: yǒukòng

yǒukòng — "to have free time; to be free".

> nǐ zhōumò yǒukòng ma — Are you free at the weekend?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǒukòng is built from 有 'to have' and kòng 'a gap', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuwX and khuwngH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a gap'. It is the falling-tone partner of kōng 'empty': to have a gap in the day.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: yǒukòng
- Say it: yǒukòng, once more
- Say it: nǐ zhōumò yǒukòng ma — Are you free at the weekend?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for now and then, then the Mandarin for normally, then say yǒukòng again

Before you move on

What does yǒukòng mean? ("To have free time; to be free".) Say it once more.

163.2 péi — to keep someone company; to go along with

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for normally, then the Mandarin for to have free time.

You'll want to know: péi

péi — "to keep someone company; to go along with".

zhōumò wǒ péi māma qù mǎi dōngxi — At the weekend I'm going shopping with my mum.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of péi is inherited from Middle Chinese bwoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to attend at someone's side'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: péi
- Say it: péi, once more
- Say it: zhōumò wǒ péi māma qù mǎi dōngxi — At the weekend I'm going shopping with my mum.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for normally, then the Mandarin for to have free time, then say péi again

Before you move on

What does péi mean? ("To keep someone company; to go along with".) Say it once more.

163.3 yěcān — to have a picnic; a picnic

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have free time, then the Mandarin for to keep someone company.

You'll want to know: yěcān

yěcān — "to have a picnic; a picnic".

zhōumò wǒmen qù gōngyuán yěcān — This weekend we're going to the park for a picnic.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yěcān is built from yě 'open country' and cān 'meal', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yaeX and tshan (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second 'to swallow'. A meal out in the fields.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: yěcān
- Say it: yěcān, once more
- Say it: zhōumò wǒmen qù gōngyuán yěcān — This weekend we're going to the park for a picnic.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have free time, then the Mandarin for to keep someone company, then say yěcān again

Before you move on

What does yěcān mean? ("To have a picnic; a picnic".) Say it once more.

163.4 xià cì — next time

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to keep someone company, then the Mandarin for to have a picnic.

You'll want to know: xià cì

xià cì — "next time".

jīntiān wǒ méiyǒu kòng xià cì wǒmen yìqǐ qù — I'm busy today; let's go together next time.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xià cì is built from 下 'below, next' and cì 'a turn', both inherited from Middle Chinese, haeX and tshijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'order, sequence': the next turn.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: xià cì
- Say it: xià cì, once more
- Say it: jīntiān wǒ méiyǒu kòng xià cì wǒmen yìqǐ qù — I'm busy today; let's go together next time.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to keep someone company, then the Mandarin for to have a picnic, then say xià cì again

Before you move on

What does xià cì mean? ("Next time".) Say it once more.

163.5 yíkuàir — all together; together (in everyday speech)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have a picnic, then the Mandarin for next time.

You'll want to know: yíkuàir

yíkuàir — "all together; together (in everyday speech)".

wǒmen yíkuàir qù yěcān — Let's all go for the picnic together.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
The tone of 一 changes: yī is said yí before the fourth tone of kuài.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yíkuàir is built from 一 'one', kuài 'a lump' and the ending 儿, all three inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jit, khwojH and nye (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second 'a clod of earth': in one lump.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: yíkuàir
- Say it: yíkuàir, once more
- Say it: wǒmen yíkuàir qù yěcān — Let's all go for the picnic together.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have a picnic, then the Mandarin for next time, then say yíkuàir again

Before you move on

What does yíkuàir mean? ("All together; together (in everyday speech)".) Say it once more.

163.6 Looking back: from Waking Up to Free This Weekend

Say the Mandarin for to wake someone up and to fall asleep.

Your turn

- Say it: to wake someone up, to fall asleep, to have a dream, to stand up, to be used to
- Say it: a bedroom, a living room, a study at home, a balcony, a window
- Say it: to sweep the floor, to do the washing-up, to make the bed, to get the jobs done, to look after
- Say it: uncooked rice, measure word for a serving, fried rice, beef, chicken meat
- Say it: as a rule, every single time, regularly, now and then, normally
- Say it: to have free time, to keep someone company, to have a picnic, next time, all together

- Read it: 房 米 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

To wake someone up? (jiàoxǐng.) To fall asleep? (shuìzháo.) To have a dream? (zuòmèng.) To stand up? (起来, qǐlai.) To be used to? (xíguàn.) A bedroom? (wòshì.) A living room? (kètīng.) A study at home? (书房, shūfáng.) A balcony? (yángtái.) A window? (chuānghu.) To sweep the floor? (sǎodì.) To do the washing-up? (xǐwǎn.) To make the bed? (pūchuáng.) To get the jobs done? (gànhuó.) To look after? (zhàogù.) Uncooked rice? (大米, dàmǐ.) Measure word for a serving? (fèn.) Fried rice? (chǎofàn.) Beef? (niúròu.) Chicken meat? (jīròu.) As a rule? (yìbān.) Every single time? (zǒngshì.) Regularly? (jīngcháng.) Now and then? (ǒu'ěr.) Normally? (tōngcháng.) To have free time? (yǒukòng.) To keep someone company? (péi.) To have a picnic? (yěcān.) Next time? (xià cì.) All together? (yíkuàir.)

Chapter 164

Getting Ready

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about dressing up, washing and drying my hair, make-up and shaving.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 164: I can talk about dressing up, washing and drying my hair, make-up and shaving.

164.1 dǎban — to dress up; to get dressed up

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for next time, then the Mandarin for all together.

You'll want to know: dǎban

dǎban — "to dress up; to get dressed up".

> tā zài dǎban wǒmen děng yíhuìr — She's getting ready; let's wait a moment.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎban is built from 打 'to strike' and ban, both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and peanH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second with this very word, 'to dress up'. Dǎ is not the sound taengX would regularly give, and in the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎban
- Say it: dǎban, once more
- Say it: tā zài dǎban wǒmen děng yíhuìr — She's getting ready; let's wait a moment.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for next time, then the Mandarin for all together, then say dǎban again

Before you move on

What does dǎban mean? ("To dress up; to get dressed up".) Say it once more.

164.2 xǐtóu — to wash one's hair

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for all together, then the Mandarin for to dress up.

You'll want to know: xǐtóu

xǐtóu — "to wash one's hair".

wǒ měitiān zǎoshang xǐtóu — I wash my hair every morning.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xǐtóu is built from 洗 'to wash' and tóu 'head', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sejX and duw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: xǐtóu
- Say it: xǐtóu, once more
- Say it: wǒ měitiān zǎoshang xǐtóu — I wash my hair every morning.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for all together, then the Mandarin for to dress up, then say xǐtóu again

Before you move on

What does xǐtóu mean? ("To wash one's hair".) Say it once more.

164.3 chuīfēngjī — hair dryer

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to dress up, then the Mandarin for to wash one's hair.

You'll want to know: chuīfēngjī

chuīfēngjī — "hair dryer".

xǐtóu yǐhòu wǒ yòng chuīfēngjī — After washing my hair I use the hair dryer.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chuīfēngjī is built from chuī 'to blow', fēng 'wind' and 机 'machine'. The last two are inherited from Middle Chinese, pjuwng and kj+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the first is listed there as tsyhwe, glossed 'to breathe out': the machine that blows wind.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: chuīfēngjī
- Say it: chuīfēngjī, once more
- Say it: xǐtóu yǐhòu wǒ yòng chuīfēngjī — After washing my hair I use the hair dryer.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to dress up, then the Mandarin for to wash one's hair, then say chuīfēngjī again

Before you move on

What does chuīfēngjī mean? ("Hair dryer".) Say it once more.

164.4 huàzhuāng — to put on make-up

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to wash one's hair, then the Mandarin for a hair dryer.

You'll want to know: huàzhuāng

huàzhuāng — "to put on make-up".

wǒ māma měi cì chūmén yǐqián dōu huàzhuāng — My mum puts on make-up every time before she goes out.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huàzhuāng is built from huà 'to change' and zhuāng 'to adorn', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xwaeH and tsrjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: huàzhuāng
- Say it: huàzhuāng, once more
- Say it: wǒ māma měi cì chūmén yǐqián dōu huàzhuāng — My mum puts on make-up every time before she goes out.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to wash one's hair, then the Mandarin for a hair dryer, then say huàzhuāng again

Before you move on

What does huàzhuāng mean? ("To put on make-up".) Say it once more.

164.5 guāliǎn — to have a shave; to shave one's face

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a hair dryer, then the Mandarin for to put on make-up.

You'll want to know: guāliǎn

guāliǎn — "to have a shave; to shave one's face".

bàba měitiān zǎoshang guāliǎn — Dad shaves every morning.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guāliǎn is built from guā 'to scrape' and liǎn 'face'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese kwaet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to scrape and pare'; the dictionary glosses the second, leamX, as the name of a kind of stew, so how it came to mean face is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: guāliǎn
- Say it: guāliǎn, once more
- Say it: bàba měitiān zǎoshang guāliǎn — Dad shaves every morning.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a hair dryer, then the Mandarin for to put on make-up, then say guāliǎn again

Before you move on

What does guāliǎn mean? ("To have a shave; to shave one's face".) Say it once more.

Chapter 165

Coats and Scarves

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a coat, a sweater, a skirt and a scarf, and count them.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 165: I can name a coat, a sweater, a skirt and a scarf, and count them.

165.1 大衣 (dàyī) — overcoat; coat

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to put on make-up, then the Mandarin for to have a shave.

You'll want to know: 大衣

大衣 — dàyī — "overcoat; coat".

> 我的大衣在哪儿 wǒ de dàyī zài nǎr — Where's my coat?

The new character, in pieces: 衣 — six strokes: a dot and a horizontal on top, then a long stroke falling to the left, a short vertical that flicks up to the right, a short stroke falling to the left, and a long stroke falling to the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 大衣 (dàyī) is built from 大 'big' and 衣 'garment', both inherited from Middle Chinese, daH and 'j+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second as the garment of the upper body: the big garment over the rest.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: dàyī
- Say it: dàyī, once more
- Say it: wǒ de dàyī zài nǎr — Where's my coat?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to put on make-up, then the Mandarin for to have a shave, then say dàyī again

Before you move on

What does 大衣 mean? ("Overcoat; coat".) Say it once more.

165.2 衣 — a dot and a bar, then the body

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say dàyī — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

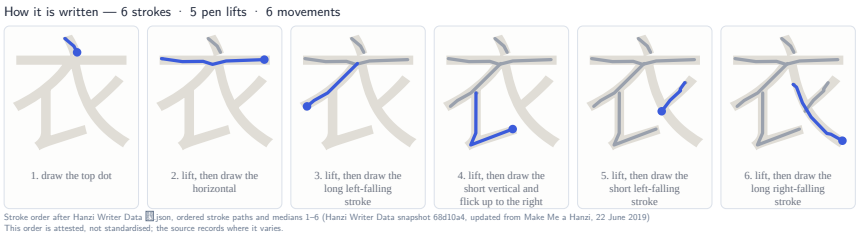
大 上

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — dà, shàng

Script — a dot and a bar, then the body



How 衣 is written, stroke by stroke

衣

One piece, six strokes.

The top, two strokes. A dot. A long horizontal under it.

The body, four strokes. A long stroke falling to the lower left. A short vertical inside it that flicks up to the right at its foot. A short stroke on the right falling to the left. Last, a long stroke falling to the lower right.

2 + 4 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 衣, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 衣? (Six.) What comes first? (A dot, then a horizontal.) Which stroke flicks up? (The short vertical inside the body.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 衣, pinned stroke paths and medians.

165.3 máoyī — sweater; jumper

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have a shave, then the Mandarin for an overcoat.

You'll want to know: máoyī

máoyī — "sweater; jumper".

wǒ de máoyī hěn hǎokàn — My sweater looks nice.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of máoyī is built from máo 'hair, wool' and 衣 'garment', both inherited from Middle Chinese, maw and 'j+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as the hair of brows and of beasts.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: máoyī
- Say it: máoyī, once more
- Say it: wǒ de máoyī hěn hǎokàn — My sweater looks nice.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have a shave, then the Mandarin for an overcoat, then say máoyī again

Before you move on

What does máoyī mean? ("Sweater; jumper".) Say it once more.

165.4 tiáo — measure word for long things (skirts, scarves, trousers, fish, roads)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an overcoat, then the Mandarin for a sweater.

You'll want to know: tiáo

tiáo — "measure word for long things (skirts, scarves, trousers, fish, roads)".

wǒ mǎi le liǎng tiáo kùzi — I bought two pairs of trousers.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tiáo is inherited from Middle Chinese dew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a small branch': a long, thin thing. Its use for counting is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: tiáo
- Say it: tiáo, once more
- Say it: wǒ mǎi le liǎng tiáo kùzi — I bought two pairs of trousers.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an overcoat, then the Mandarin for a sweater, then say tiáo again

Before you move on

What does tiáo mean? ("Measure word for long things (skirts, scarves, trousers, fish, roads)".) Say it once more.

165.5 qúnzi — skirt

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a sweater, then the Mandarin for measure word for long things.

You'll want to know: qúnzi

qúnzi — "skirt".

zhè tiáo qúnzi hěn hǎokàn — This skirt looks nice.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qúnzi is built from qún 'skirt' and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, gjun and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which writes the first another way and glosses it as the garment of the lower body. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: qúnzi
- Say it: qúnzi, once more
- Say it: zhè tiáo qúnzi hěn hǎokàn — This skirt looks nice.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a sweater, then the Mandarin for measure word for long things, then say qúnzi again

Before you move on

What does qúnzi mean? ("Skirt".) Say it once more.

165.6 wéijīn — scarf

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for measure word for long things, then the Mandarin for a skirt.

You'll want to know: wéijīn

wéijīn — "scarf".

wàibian hěn lěng nǐ yào dài yì tiáo wéijīn — It's cold outside, so take a scarf.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wéijīn is built from wéi 'to go round' and jīn 'a cloth'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese kin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the first is listed there as hjw+j, glossed 'to surround': a cloth that goes round the neck.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: wéijīn
- Say it: wéijīn, once more
- Say it: wàibian hěn lěng nǐ yào dài yì tiáo wéijīn — It's cold outside, so take a scarf.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for measure word for long things, then the Mandarin for a skirt, then say wéijīn again

Before you move on

What does wéijīn mean? ("Scarf".) Say it once more.

Chapter 166

Tea Time

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for boiled water, afternoon tea, black tea and tea leaves, and make the tea.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 166: I can ask for boiled water, afternoon tea, black tea and tea leaves, and make the tea.

166.1 开水 (kāishuǐ) — boiled water; boiling water

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a skirt, then the Mandarin for a scarf.

You'll want to know: 开水

开水 — kāishuǐ — "boiled water; boiling water".

> 中午我们吃米饭喝开水 zhōngwǔ wǒmen chī mǐfàn hē kāishuǐ — At midday we have rice and drink boiled water.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 开水 (kāishuǐ) is built from 开 'to open', here 'to come to the boil', and 水 'water', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khoj and sywijX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the boiling sense is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: kāishuǐ
- Say it: kāishuǐ, once more
- Say it: zhōngwǔ wǒmen chī mǐfàn hē kāishuǐ — At midday we have rice and drink boiled water.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a skirt, then the Mandarin for a scarf, then say kāishuǐ again

Before you move on

What does 开水 mean? ("Boiled water; boiling water".) Say it once more.

166.2 下午茶 (xiàwǔchá) — afternoon tea (a light meal)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a scarf, then the Mandarin for boiled water.

You'll want to know: 下午茶

下午茶 — xiàwǔchá — "afternoon tea (a light meal)".

我们三点吃下午茶 wǒmen sān diǎn chī xiàwǔchá — We have afternoon tea at three.

The new character, in pieces: 茶 — nine strokes in three pieces: the grass piece of 菜 on top, the two strokes of 人 under it, and at the foot a horizontal, a vertical with a hook, and two short strokes on either side of it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 下午茶 (xiàwǔchá) is built from 下午 'afternoon' and 茶 'tea'. All three parts are inherited from Middle Chinese, haeX, nguX and drae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary marks the tea character as a popular form. Tea with something to eat, as a light meal of its own.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàwǔchá
- Say it: xiàwǔchá, once more
- Say it: wǒmen sān diǎn chī xiàwǔchá — We have afternoon tea at three.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a scarf, then the Mandarin for boiled water, then say xiàwǔchá again

Before you move on

What does 下午茶 mean? ("Afternoon tea (a light meal)".) Say it once more.

166.3 茶 — grass, a roof, a small tree

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xiàwǔchá — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

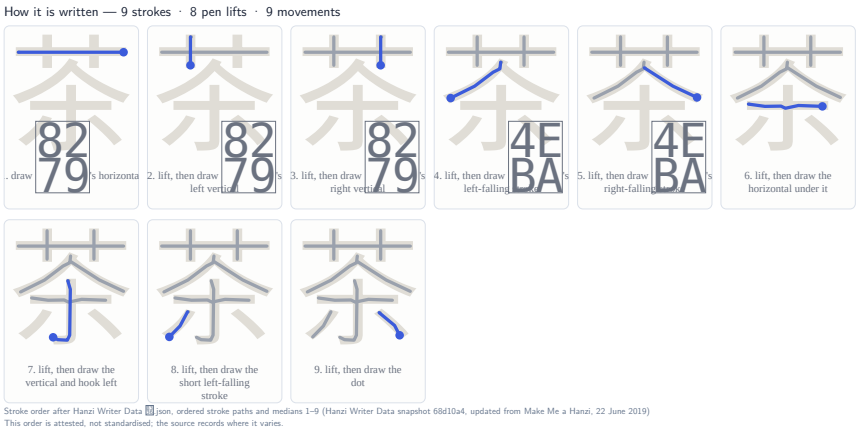
  菜 人

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — cài, rén

Script — grass, a roof, a small tree



How 茶 is written, stroke by stroke

茶

Three pieces, top to bottom. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The grass piece, three strokes, as in 菜: a horizontal, then two short verticals through it.

Then 人, two strokes, spread wide like a roof.

At the foot, four strokes: a horizontal, a vertical with a hook, then a short stroke falling to the left and a dot falling to the right, one on each side.

3 + 2 + 4 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 茶, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 茶? (Nine.) What sits on top? (The grass piece of 菜.) What comes under it? (人, spread like a roof.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 茶, pinned stroke paths and medians.

166.4 hóngchá — black tea

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for boiled water, then the Mandarin for afternoon tea.

You'll want to know: hóngchá

hóngchá — "black tea".

nǐ yào hóngchá háishi lǜchá — Black tea or green tea?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
English calls this tea black; Mandarin calls it red.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hóngchá is built from hóng 'red' and 茶 'tea', both inherited from Middle Chinese, huwng and drae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: hóngchá
- Say it: hóngchá, once more
- Say it: nǐ yào hóngchá háishi lǜchá — Black tea or green tea?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for boiled water, then the Mandarin for afternoon tea, then say hóngchá again

Before you move on

What does hóngchá mean? ("Black tea".) Say it once more.

166.5 cháyè — tea leaves

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for afternoon tea, then the Mandarin for black tea.

You'll want to know: cháyè

cháyè — "tea leaves".

> cháyè zài nǎr — Where are the tea leaves?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cháyè is built from 茶 'tea' and yè 'leaf', both inherited from Middle Chinese, drae and yep (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'the leaves of a branch'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: cháyè
- Say it: cháyè, once more
- Say it: cháyè zài nǎr — Where are the tea leaves?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for afternoon tea, then the Mandarin for black tea, then say cháyè again

Before you move on

What does cháyè mean? ("Tea leaves".) Say it once more.

166.6 pàochá — to make tea (to steep the leaves)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for black tea, then the Mandarin for tea leaves.

You'll want to know: pàochá

pàochá — "to make tea (to steep the leaves)".

> wǒ yòng kāishuǐ pàochá — I make the tea with boiling water.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of pàochá is built from pào 'to soak' and 茶 'tea', both inherited from Middle Chinese, phaew and drae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'bubbles on water'; soaking is not given there, and phaew would regularly give a first tone, so how pào came about is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: pàochá
- Say it: pàochá, once more
- Say it: wǒ yòng kāishuǐ pàochá — I make the tea with boiling water.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for black tea, then the Mandarin for tea leaves, then say pàochá again

Before you move on

What does pàochá mean? ("To make tea (to steep the leaves)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 167

The Day Before Yesterday

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what happened the day before yesterday: a power cut, a noise, and that it was nothing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 167: I can say what happened the day before yesterday: a power cut, a noise, and that it was nothing.

167.1 前天 (qiántiān) — the day before yesterday

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tea leaves, then the Mandarin for to make tea.

You'll want to know: 前天

前天 — qiántiān — "the day before yesterday".

> 前天是星期一 qiántiān shì xīngqīyī — The day before yesterday was Monday.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 前天 (qiántiān) is built from 前 'before' and 天 'day', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzen and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: qiántiān
- Say it: qiántiān, once more
- Say it: qiántiān shì xīngqīyī — The day before yesterday was Monday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tea leaves, then the Mandarin for to make tea, then say qiántiān again

Before you move on

What does 前天 mean? ("The day before yesterday".) Say it once more.

167.2 fāshēng — to happen; to take place

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to make tea, then the Mandarin for the day before yesterday.

You'll want to know: fāshēng

fāshēng — "to happen; to take place".

qiántiān wǎnshang fāshēng le shénme — What happened the night before last?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fāshēng is built from two parts inherited from Middle Chinese (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): pjot, glossed 'to rise' and 'to start', the word in chūfā, and srjaeng, 生 'to be born': to start up and come into being.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: fāshēng
- Say it: fāshēng, once more
- Say it: qiántiān wǎnshang fāshēng le shénme — What happened the night before last?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to make tea, then the Mandarin for the day before yesterday, then say fāshēng again

Before you move on

What does fāshēng mean? ("To happen; to take place".) Say it once more.

167.3 没事 (méishì) — it's nothing; to be all right

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the day before yesterday, then the Mandarin for to happen.

You'll want to know: 没事

没事 — méishì — "it's nothing; to be all right".

没事我很好 méishì wǒ hěn hǎo — It's nothing. I'm fine.

The new character, in pieces: 事 — eight strokes: a horizontal, a small 口, a horizontal that turns down, a long horizontal, a shorter one, and last a vertical with a hook down through them all. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 没事 (méishì) is built from 没 'not to have' and 事 'matter', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mwot and dzriH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to sink' and the second 'to employ' and 'to set up'; 'a matter' is the everyday sense, not the gloss. Mwot would regularly give mò, not méi.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: méishì
- Say it: méishì, once more
- Say it: méishì wǒ hěn hǎo — It's nothing. I'm fine.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the day before yesterday, then the Mandarin for to happen, then say méishì again

Before you move on

What does 没事 mean? ("It's nothing; to be all right".) Say it once more.

167.4 事 — a bar, 口, three bars and a long hook

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say méishì — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

口 有

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kǒu, yǒu

Script — a bar, 口, three bars and a long hook

How 事 is written, stroke by stroke

事

One shape, eight strokes, threaded on a long hook.
A horizontal across the top.
Then a small 口, three strokes, as you write it.
Then three bars: a horizontal that turns down at its right end, a long horizontal across, and a shorter one under it.
Last, a vertical with a hook, from the top bar down through everything: the longest stroke.
$1 + 3 + 3 + 1 =$ eight.

Your turn

- Write it: 事, all eight, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 事? (Eight.) Which piece is second? (A small 口.) Which stroke comes last? (The long vertical with the hook.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 事, pinned stroke paths and medians.

167.5 tíngdiàn — to have a power cut

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to happen, then the Mandarin for it's nothing.

You'll want to know: tíngdiàn

tíngdiàn — "to have a power cut".

qiántiān wǎnshang tíngdiàn le — There was a power cut the night before last.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tíngdiàn is built from tíng 'to stop' and 电 'lightning, electricity', both inherited from Middle Chinese, deng and denH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: tíngdiàn
- Say it: tíngdiàn, once more
- Say it: qiántiān wǎnshang tíngdiàn le — There was a power cut the night before last.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to happen, then the Mandarin for it's nothing, then say tíngdiàn again

Before you move on

What does tíngdiàn mean? ("To have a power cut".) Say it once more.

167.6 shēngyīn — sound; voice; noise

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for it's nothing, then the Mandarin for to have a power cut.

You'll want to know: shēngyīn

shēngyīn — "sound; voice; noise".

wàibian yǒu shénme shēngyīn — What's that noise outside?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shēngyīn is built from shēng and 音, both inherited from Middle Chinese, syeng and 'im (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first with this very word and the second as sound made with measure.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: shēngyīn
- Say it: shēngyīn, once more
- Say it: wàibian yǒu shénme shēngyīn — What's that noise outside?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for it's nothing, then the Mandarin for to have a power cut, then say shēngyīn again

Before you move on

What does shēngyīn mean? ("Sound; voice; noise".) Say it once more.

Chapter 168

Steamed or Fried

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about steaming, deep-frying, stewing and boiling water, and ask for sugar.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 168: I can talk about steaming, deep-frying, stewing and boiling water, and ask for sugar.

168.1 zhēng — to steam (food)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have a power cut, then the Mandarin for a sound.

You'll want to know: zhēng

zhēng — "to steam (food)".

> māma zài zhēng bāozi — Mum is steaming buns.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhēng is inherited from Middle Chinese tsying (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). Under this character the dictionary gives 'fine firewood'; written another way, the same syllable is glossed 'the breath of a fire rising', which is the steaming.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: zhēng
- Say it: zhēng, once more
- Say it: māma zài zhēng bāozi — Mum is steaming buns.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have a power cut, then the Mandarin for a sound, then say zhēng again

Before you move on

What does zhēng mean? ("To steam (food)".) Say it once more.

168.2 zhá — to deep-fry

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a sound, then the Mandarin for to steam.

You'll want to know: zhá

zhá — "to deep-fry".

jīntiān wǎnshang wǒmen zhá yú — We're deep-frying fish tonight.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

zhá is probably the word the Guangyun writes another way as dzreap, glossed 'to scald in hot water' (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which would regularly give zhá; but no dictionary we use joins that word to this character, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: zhá
- Say it: zhá, once more
- Say it: jīntiān wǎnshang wǒmen zhá yú — We're deep-frying fish tonight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a sound, then the Mandarin for to steam, then say zhá again

Before you move on

What does zhá mean? ("To deep-fry".) Say it once more.

168.3 dùn — to stew

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to steam, then the Mandarin for to deep-fry.

You'll want to know: dùn

dùn — "to stew".

tā zài dùn ròu — He's stewing some meat.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dùn has no older form of this word in any dictionary we use. The Guangyun lists the character as dwon, glossed 'a blazing fire' (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), but neither that sense nor that sound gives today's word, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: dùn
- Say it: dùn, once more
- Say it: tā zài dùn ròu — He's stewing some meat.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to steam, then the Mandarin for to deep-fry, then say dùn again

Before you move on

What does dùn mean? ("To stew".) Say it once more.

168.4 shāoshuǐ — to boil water

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to deep-fry, then the Mandarin for to stew.

You'll want to know: shāoshuǐ

shāoshuǐ — "to boil water".

wǒ qù shāoshuǐ nǐmen yào hē chá ma — I'll put the kettle on: who wants tea?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shāoshuǐ is built from shāo 'to burn' and 水 'water', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syew and sywijX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'fire' and 'to set alight'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: shāoshuǐ
- Say it: shāoshuǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù shāoshuǐ nǐmen yào hē chá ma — I'll put the kettle on: who wants tea?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to deep-fry, then the Mandarin for to stew, then say shāoshuǐ again

Before you move on

What does shāoshuǐ mean? ("To boil water".) Say it once more.

168.5 táng — sugar; sweets

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to stew, then the Mandarin for to boil water.

You'll want to know: táng

táng — "sugar; sweets".

zhège tāng yào fàng yìdiǎnr táng — This soup needs a little sugar in it.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of táng is inherited from Middle Chinese dang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'malt syrup'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: táng
- Say it: táng, once more
- Say it: zhège tāng yào fàng yìdiǎnr táng — This soup needs a little sugar in it.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to stew, then the Mandarin for to boil water, then say táng again

Before you move on

What does táng mean? ("Sugar; sweets".) Say it once more.

Chapter 169

Early and Late

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about first thing in the morning, an afternoon nap, dusk, staying up and the dead of night.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 169: I can talk about first thing in the morning, an afternoon nap, dusk, staying up and the dead of night.

169.1 一大早 (yídàzǎo) — first thing in the morning; at the crack of dawn

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to boil water, then the Mandarin for sugar.

You'll want to know: 一大早

一大早 — yídàzǎo — "first thing in the morning; at the crack of dawn".

> 一大早妈妈去买大米了 yídàzǎo māma qù mǎi dàmǐ le — First thing this morning my mum went out to buy rice.

The tone of 一 changes: yī is said yí before the fourth tone of dà.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 一大早 (yídàzǎo) is built from 一 'one', 大 'big' and 早 'early', all three inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jit, daH and tsawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the last 'morning'.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: yídàzǎo
- Say it: yídàzǎo, once more
- Say it: yídàzǎo māma qù mǎi dàmǐ le — First thing this morning my mum went out to buy rice.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to boil water, then the Mandarin for sugar, then say yídàzǎo again

Before you move on

What does 一大早 mean? ("First thing in the morning; at the crack of dawn".) Say it once more.

169.2 午觉 (wǔjiào) — afternoon nap

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for sugar, then the Mandarin for first thing in the morning.

You'll want to know: 午觉

午觉 — wǔjiào — "afternoon nap".

午觉以后我们喝茶 wǔjiào yǐhòu wǒmen hē chá — After the nap we'll have tea.

The new character, in pieces: 觉 — nine strokes: three short strokes on top, the cover piece of 学 under them, and 见 at the foot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 午觉 (wǔjiào) is built from 午 'noon' and 觉 'sleep', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nguX and kaewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second with the word for sleeping. The same character read jué, as in 觉得, is its other reading, glossed 'to wake' and 'to know'.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: wǔjiào
- Say it: wǔjiào, once more
- Say it: wǔjiào yǐhòu wǒmen hē chá — After the nap we'll have tea.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for sugar, then the Mandarin for first thing in the morning, then say wǔjiào again

Before you move on

What does 午觉 mean? ("Afternoon nap".) Say it once more.

169.3 觉 — three strokes, a cover, then 见

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say wǔjiào — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

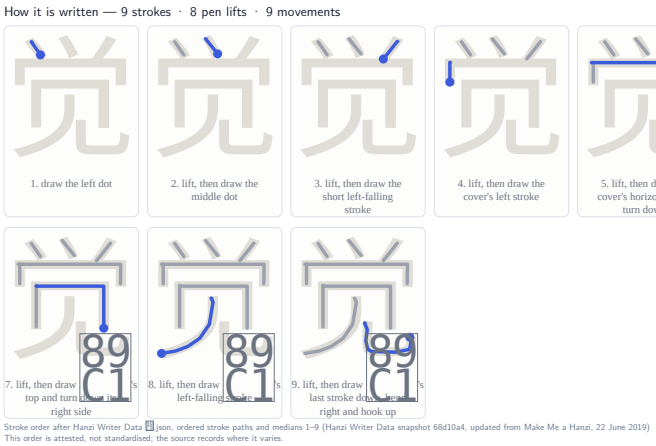
  见 学

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — jiàn, xué

Script — three strokes, a cover, then 见



How 觉 is written, stroke by stroke

觉

Three pieces, top to bottom. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

Three short strokes on top: a dot on the left, a dot in the middle, and a short stroke on the right falling to the left.

Then the cover piece of 学, two strokes: a short stroke falling down on the left, then a horizontal that turns down and hooks.

Then 见, four strokes, as you write it, under the cover.

3 + 2 + 4 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 觉, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 觉? (Nine.) What sits under the cover? (见.) Which word holds the cover too? (学.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 觉, pinned stroke paths and medians.

169.4 bàngwǎn — dusk; towards evening

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for first thing in the morning, then the Mandarin for an afternoon nap.

You'll want to know: bàngwǎn

bàngwǎn — "dusk; towards evening".

wǒmen bàngwǎn qù sànbù — We go for a walk around dusk.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bàngwǎn is built from bàng 'near' and 晚 'evening', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bangH and mjonX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary gives the sense 'near' under the level-tone reading of the first; today's falling tone goes with bangH, which it leaves without a gloss.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: bàngwǎn
- Say it: bàngwǎn, once more
- Say it: wǒmen bàngwǎn qù sànbù — We go for a walk around dusk.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for first thing in the morning, then the Mandarin for an afternoon nap, then say bàngwǎn again

Before you move on

What does bàngwǎn mean? ("Dusk; towards evening".) Say it once more.

169.5 áoyè — to stay up late; to stay up all night

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an afternoon nap, then the Mandarin for towards evening.

You'll want to know: áoyè

áoyè — "to stay up late; to stay up all night".

wǒ zuótiān áoyè le jīntiān hěn lèi — I stayed up late last night, and I'm tired today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of áoyè is built from áo 'to simmer' and yè 'night', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngaw and yaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'to simmer'. How the pair came to mean staying up is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: áoyè
- Say it: áoyè, once more
- Say it: wǒ zuótiān áoyè le jīntiān hěn lèi — I stayed up late last night, and I'm tired today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an afternoon nap, then the Mandarin for towards evening, then say áoyè again

Before you move on

What does áoyè mean? ("To stay up late; to stay up all night".) Say it once more.

169.6 shēnyè — late at night; the dead of night

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for towards evening, then the Mandarin for to stay up late.

You'll want to know: shēnyè

shēnyè — "late at night; the dead of night".

shēnyè wàibian hěn ānjìng — Late at night it's quiet outside.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shēnyè is built from shēn 'deep' and yè 'night', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syim and yaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): deep in the night. The dictionary gives 'deep' under the falling-tone reading syimH; today's level tone goes with syim.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: shēnyè
- Say it: shēnyè, once more
- Say it: shēnyè wàibian hěn ānjìng — Late at night it's quiet outside.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for towards evening, then the Mandarin for to stay up late, then say shēnyè again

Before you move on

What does shēnyè mean? ("Late at night; the dead of night".) Say it once more.

169.7 Looking back: from Getting Ready to Early and Late

Say the Mandarin for to dress up and to wash one's hair.

Your turn

- Say it: to dress up, to wash one's hair, a hair dryer, to put on make-up, to have a shave
- Say it: an overcoat, a sweater, measure word for long things, a skirt, a scarf
- Say it: boiled water, afternoon tea, black tea, tea leaves, to make tea
- Say it: the day before yesterday, to happen, it's nothing, to have a power cut, a sound
- Say it: to steam, to deep-fry, to stew, to boil water, sugar
- Say it: first thing in the morning, an afternoon nap, towards evening, to stay up late, late at night
- Read it: 衣 茶 事 觉 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

To dress up? (dǎban.) To wash one's hair? (xǐtóu.) A hair dryer? (chuīfēngjī.) To put on make-up? (huàzhuāng.) To have a shave? (guāliǎn.) An overcoat? (大衣, dàyī.) A sweater? (máoyī.) Measure word for long things? (tiáo.) A skirt? (qúnzi.) A scarf? (wéijīn.) Boiled water? (开水, kāishuǐ.) Afternoon tea? (下午茶, xiàwǔchá.) Black tea? (hóngchá.) Tea leaves? (cháyè.) To make tea? (pàochá.) The day before yesterday? (前天, qiántiān.) To happen? (fāshēng.) It's nothing? (没事, méishì.) To have a power cut? (tíngdiàn.) A sound? (shēngyīn.) To steam? (zhēng.) To deep-fry? (zhá.) To stew? (dùn.) To boil water? (shāoshuǐ.) Sugar? (táng.) First thing in the morning? (一大早, yídàzǎo.) An afternoon nap? (午觉, wǔjiào.) Towards evening? (bàngwǎn.) To stay up late? (áoyè.) Late at night? (shēnyè.)

Chapter 170

Pots and Pans

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a wok, a teacup, a spoon, a fork and a microwave.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 170: I can name a wok, a teacup, a spoon, a fork and a microwave.

170.1 guō — pot; pan; wok

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to stay up late, then the Mandarin for late at night.

You'll want to know: guō

guō — "pot; pan; wok".

> zhège guō hěn zhòng — This wok is heavy.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guō is inherited from Middle Chinese kwa (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a vessel for warming'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: guō
- Say it: guō, once more
- Say it: zhège guō hěn zhòng — This wok is heavy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to stay up late, then the Mandarin for late at night, then say guō again

Before you move on

What does guō mean? ("Pot; pan; wok".) Say it once more.

170.2 茶杯 (chábēi) — teacup

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for late at night, then the Mandarin for a cooking pot.

You'll want to know: 茶杯

茶杯 — chábēi — "teacup".

我觉得这个茶杯很好看 wǒ juéde zhège chábēi hěn hǎokàn — I think this teacup is lovely.

The new character, in pieces: 杯 — eight strokes in two pieces: the tree piece on the left of 机, four strokes, and 不 on the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 茶杯 (chábēi) is built from 茶 'tea' and 杯 'cup', both inherited from Middle Chinese, drae and pwoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: chábēi
- Say it: chábēi, once more
- Say it: wǒ juéde zhège chábēi hěn hǎokàn — I think this teacup is lovely.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for late at night, then the Mandarin for a cooking pot, then say chábēi again

Before you move on

What does 茶杯 mean? (“Teacup”.) Say it once more.

170.3 杯 — a tree piece, then 不

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say chábēi — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

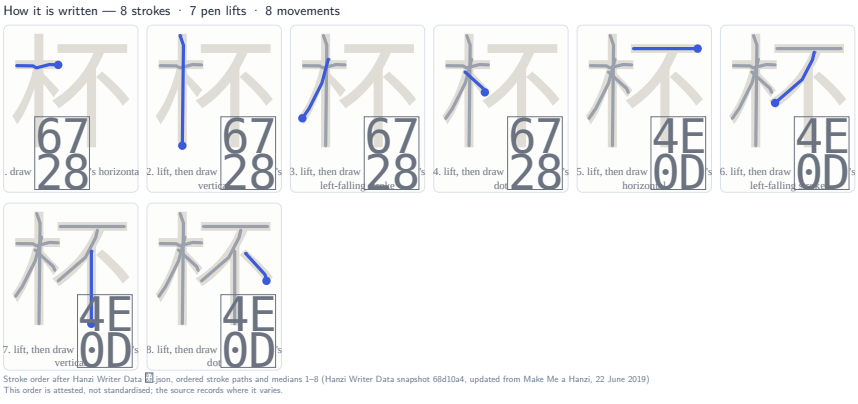
  不 机

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — bù, jī

Script — a tree piece, then 不



How 杯 is written, stroke by stroke

杯

Two pieces, left before right. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The left piece, four strokes: the tree piece, as on the left of 机. A horizontal. A vertical down through it. A stroke falling to the lower left from the crossing. Then a dot to the lower right, where 本 has a long stroke.

The right piece, 不, four strokes, as you write it: a horizontal, a stroke falling to the left, a vertical, and a dot.

4 + 4 = eight.

Your turn

- Write it: 杯, all eight, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 杯? (Eight.) What is the right-hand piece? (不.) How does the tree piece end? (With a dot, not a long stroke.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 杯, pinned stroke paths and medians.

170.4 sháozi — spoon; ladle

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a cooking pot, then the Mandarin for a teacup.

You'll want to know: sháozi sháozi — "spoon; ladle".

wǒ yào yí ge sháozi — Could I have a spoon?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of sháozi is built from sháo 'ladle' and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyak and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as a drinking vessel. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: sháozi
- Say it: sháozi, once more
- Say it: wǒ yào yí ge sháozi — Could I have a spoon?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a cooking pot, then the Mandarin for a teacup, then say sháozi again

Before you move on

What does sháozi mean? ("Spoon; ladle".) Say it once more.

170.5 chāzi — fork

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a teacup, then the Mandarin for a spoon.

You'll want to know: chāzi

chāzi — "fork".

nǐ yòng kuàizi háishi yòng chāzi — Chopsticks or a fork?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chāzi is built from chā and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsrhae and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'hands crossed', and under a second reading 'two branches': a forked thing. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: chāzi
- Say it: chāzi, once more
- Say it: nǐ yòng kuàizi háishi yòng chāzi — Chopsticks or a fork?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a teacup, then the Mandarin for a spoon, then say chāzi again

Before you move on

What does chāzi mean? ("Fork".) Say it once more.

170.6 wēibōlú — microwave oven

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a spoon, then the Mandarin for a fork.

You'll want to know: wēibōlú

wēibōlú — "microwave oven".

fàn zài wēibōlú lǐ — The food is in the microwave.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wēibōlú is built from wēi 'tiny', bō 'wave' and lú 'stove', all three inherited from Middle Chinese, mj+j, pa and lu (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): old words put together to name a new machine.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: wēibōlú
- Say it: wēibōlú, once more
- Say it: fàn zài wēibōlú lǐ — The food is in the microwave.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a spoon, then the Mandarin for a fork, then say wēibōlú again

Before you move on

What does wēibōlú mean? (“Microwave oven”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 171

Switching Things On

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can open things, put the air conditioning on, use the remote, press buttons and say what not to touch.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 171: I can open things, put the air conditioning on, use the remote, press buttons and say what not to touch.

171.1 打开 (dǎkāi) — to open; to switch on

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a fork, then the Mandarin for a microwave oven.

You'll want to know: 打开

打开 — dǎkāi — "to open; to switch on".

> 你去打开书房的门 nǐ qù dǎkāi shūfáng de mén — Go and open the study door.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 打开 (dǎkāi) is built from 打 'to strike' and 开 'to open', both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and khoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), though dǎ is not the sound taengX would regularly give.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎkāi
- Say it: dǎkāi, once more
- Say it: nǐ qù dǎkāi shūfáng de mén — Go and open the study door.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a fork, then the Mandarin for a microwave oven, then say dǎkāi again

Before you move on

What does 打开 mean? ("To open; to switch on".) Say it once more.

171.2 kōngtiáo — air conditioner; air conditioning

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a microwave oven, then the Mandarin for to switch on.

You'll want to know: kōngtiáo

kōngtiáo — "air conditioner; air conditioning".

jīntiān tài rè le wǒmen kāi kōngtiáo — It's far too hot today: let's put the air conditioner on.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kōngtiáo is built from kōng 'empty', here the air, and tiáo 'to adjust': a short name for the machine that adjusts the air. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese khuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'empty'; the second is listed there as dew, glossed 'to harmonize'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: kōngtiáo
- Say it: kōngtiáo, once more
- Say it: jīntiān tài rè le wǒmen kāi kōngtiáo — It's far too hot today: let's put the air conditioner on.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a microwave oven, then the Mandarin for to switch on, then say kōngtiáo again

Before you move on

What does kōngtiáo mean? ("Air conditioner; air conditioning".) Say it once more.

171.3 yáokòngqì — remote control

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to switch on, then the Mandarin for an air conditioner.

You'll want to know: yáokòngqì

yáokòngqì — "remote control".

yáokòngqì zài nǎr — Where's the remote?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yáokòngqì is built from yáo 'far', kòng 'to control' and qì 'device'. The last is inherited from Middle Chinese khijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a vessel'; the first two are listed there as yew, glossed 'far', and khuwngH, glossed 'to pull': a device that pulls from far away.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: yáokòngqì
- Say it: yáokòngqì, once more
- Say it: yáokòngqì zài nǎr — Where's the remote?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to switch on, then the Mandarin for an air conditioner, then say yáokòngqì again

Before you move on

What does yáokòngqì mean? ("Remote control".) Say it once more.

171.4 àn — to press; to push down

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an air conditioner, then the Mandarin for a remote control.

You'll want to know: àn

àn — "to press; to push down".

qǐng àn zhège — Please press this one.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of àn is inherited from Middle Chinese 'anH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to press down' and 'to stop'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: àn
- Say it: àn, once more
- Say it: qǐng àn zhège — Please press this one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an air conditioner, then the Mandarin for a remote control, then say àn again

Before you move on

What does àn mean? ("To press; to push down".) Say it once more.

171.5 pèng — to touch; to bump into

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a remote control, then the Mandarin for to press a button.

You'll want to know: pèng

pèng — "to touch; to bump into".

bié pèng zhège hěn rè — Don't touch that: it's hot.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of pèng No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: pèng
- Say it: pèng, once more
- Say it: bié pèng zhège hěn rè — Don't touch that: it's hot.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for a remote control, then the Mandarin for to press a button, then say pèng again

Before you move on

What does pèng mean? (“To touch; to bump into”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 172

Sweet and Sour

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how food tastes: good, sour, bitter, fragrant or bland.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 172: I can say how food tastes: good, sour, bitter, fragrant or bland.

172.1 wèidao — taste; flavour

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to press a button, then the Mandarin for to touch.

You'll want to know: wèidao

wèidao — "taste; flavour".

> zhège cài de wèidao hěn hǎo — This dish tastes good.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wèidao is built from wèi 'taste' and dao, both inherited from Middle Chinese, mj+jH and dawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as the five tastes, sour, salty, sweet, bitter and hot, and the second 'a road'. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: wèidao
- Say it: wèidao, once more
- Say it: zhège cài de wèidao hěn hǎo — This dish tastes good.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to press a button, then the Mandarin for to touch, then say wèidao again

Before you move on

What does wèidao mean? ("Taste; flavour".) Say it once more.

172.2 suān — sour

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to touch, then the Mandarin for a flavour.

You'll want to know: suān

suān — "sour".

zhège píngguǒ hěn suān — This apple is sour.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of suān is inherited from Middle Chinese swan (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'vinegar': the taste of vinegar.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: suān
- Say it: suān, once more
- Say it: zhège píngguǒ hěn suān — This apple is sour.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to touch, then the Mandarin for a flavour, then say suān again

Before you move on

What does suān mean? (“Sour”.) Say it once more.

172.3 kǔ — bitter

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a flavour, then the Mandarin for sour.

You’ll want to know: kǔ

kǔ — “bitter”.

zhège kāfēi tài kǔ le — This coffee is too bitter.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

kǔ is inherited from Middle Chinese khuX (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), glossed ’coarse’, ’toil’ and ’suffering’; the taste itself is not given there in so many words.

What you’ve built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: kǔ
- Say it: kǔ, once more

- Say it: zhège kāfēi tài kǔ le — This coffee is too bitter.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a flavour, then the Mandarin for sour, then say kǔ again

Before you move on

What does kǔ mean? (“Bitter”.) Say it once more.

172.4 xiāng — smelling good; fragrant; tasty

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for sour, then the Mandarin for bitter.

You’ll want to know: xiāng

xiāng — “smelling good; fragrant; tasty”.

nǐ zuò de fàn zhēn xiāng — The food you cook smells wonderful.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiāng is inherited from Middle Chinese xjang (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), glossed ’fragrant’.

What you’ve built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: xiāng
- Say it: xiāng, once more
- Say it: nǐ zuò de fàn zhēn xiāng — The food you cook smells wonderful.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for sour, then the Mandarin for bitter, then say xiāng again

Before you move on

What does xiāng mean? ("Smelling good; fragrant; tasty".) Say it once more.

172.5 dàn — bland; weak (in taste)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bitter, then the Mandarin for smelling good.

You'll want to know: dàn

dàn — "bland; weak (in taste)".

tāng tài dàn le — The soup is too bland.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dàn is inherited from Middle Chinese damX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a thin taste'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: dàn
- Say it: dàn, once more
- Say it: tāng tài dàn le — The soup is too bland.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bitter, then the Mandarin for smelling good, then say dàn again

Before you move on

What does dàn mean? ("Bland; weak (in taste)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 173

An Invitation

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can invite people, send my regards, and talk about an evening party, a get-together and who pays.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 173: I can invite people, send my regards, and talk about an evening party, a get-together and who pays.

173.1 yāoqǐng — to invite; an invitation

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for smelling good, then the Mandarin for bland.

You'll want to know: yāoqǐng

yāoqǐng — "to invite; an invitation".

> tā yāoqǐng wǒmen qù tā jiā — He's invited us to his place.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yāoqǐng is built from yāo and 请 'to ask', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jiew and tshjengX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'to stop someone on the way'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: yāoqǐng
- Say it: yāoqǐng, once more
- Say it: tā yāoqǐng wǒmen qù tā jiā — He's invited us to his place.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for smelling good, then the Mandarin for bland, then say yāoqǐng again

Before you move on

What does yāoqǐng mean? ("To invite; an invitation".) Say it once more.

173.2 问候 (wènhòu) — to send regards to; to greet

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bland, then the Mandarin for to invite.

You'll want to know: 问候

问候 — wènhòu — "to send regards to; to greet".

nǐ bāng wǒ wènhòu nǐ bàba māma — Give my regards to your mum and dad.

The new character, in pieces: 候 — ten strokes: the person piece, a thin vertical beside it, then on the right a small hooked top, a horizontal, and a base of five strokes: a short stroke falling to the left, two horizontals, and two long strokes falling to either side. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 问候 (wènhòu) is built from 问 'to ask' and 候 'to wait upon', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjunH and huwH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): to ask after someone. The second is a different word from 后 'after', huwX.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: wènhòu
- Say it: wènhòu, once more
- Say it: nǐ bāng wǒ wènhòu nǐ bàba māma — Give my regards to your mum and dad.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bland, then the Mandarin for to invite, then say wènhòu again

Before you move on

What does 问候 mean? ("To send regards to; to greet".) Say it once more.

173.3 候 — the person piece, a thin stroke, then the right side

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say wènhòu — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  亻 问

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — the person piece, wèn

Script — the person piece, a thin stroke, then the right side

How 候 is written, stroke by stroke

候

Three pieces, left to right. Count the pieces, not the strokes.
The person piece, 亻 , two strokes, as in 你.
A thin vertical, one short stroke standing beside it.
The right side, seven strokes. On top a short horizontal that turns and falls to the left, like a small hook. A horizontal under it. Then the base, five strokes: a short stroke falling to the left, a short horizontal, a longer horizontal, a long stroke falling to the left through them, and a long stroke falling to the right.
2 + 1 + 7 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 候, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 候? (Ten.) What comes after the person piece? (One thin vertical.) How many strokes in the base? (Five.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 候, pinned stroke paths and medians.

173.4 晚会 (wǎnhuì) — evening party; evening show

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to invite, then the Mandarin for to send regards to.

You'll want to know: 晚会

晚会 — wǎnhuì — "evening party; evening show".

晚上我有事不能去晚会 wǎnshang wǒ yǒushì bù néng qù wǎnhuì — I've got something on tonight, so I can't come to the party.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 晚会 (wǎnhuì) is built from 晚 'evening' and 会 'to meet', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjonX and hwajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to come together'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: wǎnhuì
- Say it: wǎnhuì, once more
- Say it: wǎnshang wǒ yǒushì bù néng qù wǎnhuì — I've got something on tonight, so I can't come to the party.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to invite, then the Mandarin for to send regards to, then say wǎnhuì again

Before you move on

What does 晚会 mean? ("Evening party; evening show".) Say it once more.

173.5 jùhuì — get-together; party

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to send regards to, then the Mandarin for an evening party.

You'll want to know: jùhuì

jùhuì — "get-together; party".

zhōumò wǒmen yǒu yí ge jùhuì nǐ lái ma — We're having a get-together at the weekend: are you coming?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jùhuì is built from jù 'to gather' and 会 'to meet', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzjuX and hwajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'many' and 'to gather', and quotes an older book that glosses it with the second.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: jùhuì
- Say it: jùhuì, once more
- Say it: zhōumò wǒmen yǒu yí ge jùhuì nǐ lái ma — We're having a get-together at the weekend: are you coming?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to send regards to, then the Mandarin for an evening party, then say jùhuì again

Before you move on

What does jùhuì mean? ("Get-together; party".) Say it once more.

173.6 请客 (qǐngkè) — to pay for everyone; to treat (the others)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an evening party, then the Mandarin for a get-together.

You'll want to know: 请客

请客 — qǐngkè — "to pay for everyone; to treat (the others)".

> 今天我请客每个人一杯茶 jīntiān wǒ qǐngkè měi ge rén yì bēi chá — It's on me today: a cup of tea each.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 请客 (qǐngkè) is built from 请 'to ask, to invite' and 客 'guest', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshjengX and khaek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): to have the others as your guests, and so to pay.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: qǐngkè
- Say it: qǐngkè, once more
- Say it: jīntiān wǒ qǐngkè měi ge rén yì bēi chá — It's on me today: a cup of tea each.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an evening party, then the Mandarin for a get-together, then say qǐngkè again

Before you move on

What does 请客 mean? ("To pay for everyone; to treat (the others)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 174

Jobs Around the House

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can hang things up, sort things out, lift them together, and talk about a ladder and a light bulb.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 174: I can hang things up, sort things out, lift them together, and talk about a ladder and a light bulb.

174.1 guà — to hang; to hang up

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a get-together, then the Mandarin for to pay for everyone.

You'll want to know: guà

guà — "to hang; to hang up".

> mén hòubian kěyǐ guà dàyī — You can hang your coat behind the door.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guà is inherited from Middle Chinese kweaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to hang', under a popular way of writing it.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: guà
- Say it: guà, once more
- Say it: mén hòubian kěyǐ guà dàyī — You can hang your coat behind the door.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a get-together, then the Mandarin for to pay for everyone, then say guà again

Before you move on

What does guà mean? ("To hang; to hang up".) Say it once more.

174.2 nòng — to sort something out; to do; to handle

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to pay for everyone, then the Mandarin for to hang something up.

You'll want to know: nòng

nòng — "to sort something out; to do; to handle".

diànnǎo huài le nǐ huì nòng ma — The computer's broken: do you know how to sort it out?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nòng is inherited from Middle Chinese luwngH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to play with'. Its first sound would regularly give lòng; how it came to be said with n is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: nòng
- Say it: nòng, once more
- Say it: diànnǎo huài le nǐ huì nòng ma — The computer's broken: do you know how to sort it out?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to pay for everyone, then the Mandarin for to hang something up, then say nòng again

Before you move on

What does nòng mean? ("To sort something out; to do; to handle".) Say it once more.

174.3 tái — to lift; to carry (between two people)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to hang something up, then the Mandarin for to sort something out.

You'll want to know: tái

tái — "to lift; to carry (between two people)".

zhège zhuōzi hěn zhòng wǒmen yìqǐ tái — This table is heavy: let's lift it together.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

tái is inherited from Middle Chinese doj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), written there another way and glossed 'to lift up'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: tái
- Say it: tái, once more
- Say it: zhège zhuōzi hěn zhòng wǒmen yìqǐ tái — This table is heavy: let's lift it together.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to hang something up, then the Mandarin for to sort something out, then say tái again

Before you move on

What does tái mean? ("To lift; to carry (between two people)".) Say it once more.

174.4 tīzi — ladder

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sort something out, then the Mandarin for to lift together.

You'll want to know: tīzi

tīzi — "ladder".

wǒmen yìqǐ tái tīzi — Let's carry the ladder together.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tīzi is built from tī and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, thej and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'wooden steps'. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: tīzi
- Say it: tīzi, once more
- Say it: wǒmen yìqǐ tái tīzi — Let's carry the ladder together.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sort something out, then the Mandarin for to lift together, then say tīzi again

Before you move on

What does tīzi mean? ("Ladder".) Say it once more.

174.5 dēngpào — light bulb

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to lift together, then the Mandarin for a ladder.

You'll want to know: dēngpào

dēngpào — "light bulb".

dēngpào huài le wǒmen yào huàn yí ge — The bulb's gone, so we need to change it.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dēngpào is built from dēng 'lamp' and pào 'bubble', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tong and phaew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'bubbles on water': the lamp's glass bubble. Phaew would regularly give a first tone, so how pào came about is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: dēngpào
- Say it: dēngpào, once more
- Say it: dēngpào huài le wǒmen yào huàn yí ge — The bulb's gone, so we need to change it.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to lift together, then the Mandarin for a ladder, then say dēngpào again

Before you move on

What does dēngpào mean? ("Light bulb".) Say it once more.

Chapter 175

Sofa and Shelves

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name furniture, a sofa, a cupboard and a bookshelf, and say what is in front of me.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 175: I can name furniture, a sofa, a cupboard and a bookshelf, and say what is in front of me.

175.1 jiājù — furniture

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a ladder, then the Mandarin for a light bulb.

You'll want to know: jiājù

jiājù — "furniture".

> wǒmen yào mǎi xīn jiājù — We're going to buy new furniture.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiājù is built from 家 'home' and jù, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kae and gjuH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'complete' and 'to provide': what a home is provided with.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: jiājù
- Say it: jiājù, once more
- Say it: wǒmen yào mǎi xīn jiājù — We're going to buy new furniture.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a ladder, then the Mandarin for a light bulb, then say jiājù again

Before you move on

What does jiājù mean? ("Furniture".) Say it once more.

175.2 shāfā — sofa

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a light bulb, then the Mandarin for furniture.

You'll want to know: shāfā

shāfā — "sofa".

wǒmen de shāfā hěn shūfu — Our sofa is really comfortable.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shāfā is usually traced to English sofa: the two characters were chosen for their sound, not for what they mean.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: shāfā
- Say it: shāfā, once more
- Say it: wǒmen de shāfā hěn shūfu — Our sofa is really comfortable.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a light bulb, then the Mandarin for furniture, then say shāfā again

Before you move on

What does shāfā mean? ("Sofa".) Say it once more.

175.3 面前 (miànqián) — in front of someone; in someone's presence

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for furniture, then the Mandarin for a sofa.

You'll want to know: 面前

面前 — miànqián — "in front of someone; in someone's presence".

我面前有一杯茶 wǒ miànqián yǒu yì bēi chá — There's a cup of tea in front of me.

The new character, in pieces: 面 — nine strokes: a horizontal on top, a short stroke falling to the left, then a frame (a vertical, a horizontal that turns down), two verticals inside it, two short bars between them, and the bottom bar last. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 面前 (miànqián) is built from 面 'face' and 前 'before', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjienH and dzen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to face' and 'the front': before one's face.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: miànqián
- Say it: miànqián, once more
- Say it: wǒ miànqián yǒu yì bēi chá — There's a cup of tea in front of me.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for furniture, then the Mandarin for a sofa, then say miànqián again

Before you move on

What does 面前 mean? ("In front of someone; in someone's presence".) Say it once more.

175.4 面 — a bar, a short stroke, then a frame

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say miànqián — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  前 日

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — qián, rì

Script — a bar, a short stroke, then a frame

How 面 is written, stroke by stroke

面

One piece, nine strokes, built from the outside in.

On top, two strokes. A horizontal across the top. A short stroke falling to the left under its middle.

The frame, two strokes. A vertical on the left. A horizontal along the top that turns down the right side.

The inside, four strokes. Two verticals. Then two short bars between them, one above the other.

Last, the bottom bar that closes the frame.

$2 + 2 + 4 + 1 =$ nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 面, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 面? (Nine.) What closes the frame? (The bottom bar, last of all.) What stands inside it? (Two verticals, with two short bars between them.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 面, pinned stroke paths and medians.

175.5 guìzi — cupboard; cabinet

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a sofa, then the Mandarin for in front of someone.

You'll want to know: guìzi

guìzi — "cupboard; cabinet".

bēizi zài guìzi lǐ — The cups are in the cupboard.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guìzi is built from guì 'a chest' and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, gwijH and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: guìzi
- Say it: guìzi, once more
- Say it: bēizi zài guìzi lǐ — The cups are in the cupboard.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a sofa, then the Mandarin for in front of someone, then say guìzi again

Before you move on

What does guìzi mean? ("Cupboard; cabinet".) Say it once more.

175.6 shūjià — bookshelf

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for in front of someone, then the Mandarin for a cupboard.

You'll want to know: shūjià

shūjià — "bookshelf".

zhège shūjià hěn hǎokàn — This bookshelf looks nice.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shūjià is built from 书 'book' and jià 'frame'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese syo (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the second is listed there as kaeH, glossed as the frame of a house: a frame for books.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: shūjià
- Say it: shūjià, once more
- Say it: zhège shūjià hěn hǎokàn — This bookshelf looks nice.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for in front of someone, then the Mandarin for a cupboard, then say shūjià again

Before you move on

What does shūjià mean? ("Bookshelf".) Say it once more.

175.7 Looking back: from Pots and Pans to Sofa and Shelves

Say the Mandarin for a cooking pot and a teacup.

Your turn

- Say it: a cooking pot, a teacup, a spoon, a fork, a microwave oven
- Say it: to switch on, an air conditioner, a remote control, to press a button, to touch
- Say it: a flavour, sour, bitter, smelling good, bland
- Say it: to invite, to send regards to, an evening party, a get-together, to pay for everyone
- Say it: to hang something up, to sort something out, to lift together, a ladder, a light bulb
- Say it: furniture, a sofa, in front of someone, a cupboard, a bookshelf
- Read it: 杯 候 面 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

A cooking pot? (guō.) A teacup? (茶杯, chábēi.) A spoon? (sháozi.) A fork? (chāzi.) A microwave oven? (wēibōlú.) To switch on? (打开, dǎkāi.) An air conditioner? (kōngtiáo.) A remote control? (yáokòngqì.) To press a button? (àn.) To touch? (pèng.) A flavour? (wèidao.) Sour? (suān.) Bitter? (kǔ.) Smelling good? (xiāng.) Bland? (dàn.) To invite? (yāoqǐng.) To send regards to? (问候, wènhòu.) An evening party? (晚会, wǎnhuì.) A get-together? (jùhuì.) To pay for everyone? (请客, qǐngkè.) To hang something up? (guà.) To sort something out? (nòng.) To lift together? (tái.) A ladder? (tīzi.) A light bulb? (dēngpào.) Furniture? (jiājù.) A sofa? (shāfā.) In front of someone? (面前, miànqián.) A cupboard? (guìzi.) A bookshelf? (shūjià.)

Chapter 176

A Knock at the Door

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell what happened at home: a knock at the door, the neighbours quarrelling, something toppling over, a fire.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 176: I can tell what happened at home: a knock at the door, the neighbours quarrelling, something toppling over, a fire.

176.1 qiāomén — to knock at the door

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a cupboard, then the Mandarin for a bookshelf.

You'll want to know: qiāomén

qiāomén — "to knock at the door".

> zuótiān wǎnshang yǒu rén qiāomén — Somebody knocked at the door last night.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qiāomén is built from qiāo 'to strike' and 門 'door', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khaew and mwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: qiāomén
- Say it: qiāomén, once more
- Say it: zuótiān wǎnshang yǒu rén qiāomén — Somebody knocked at the door last night.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a cupboard, then the Mandarin for a bookshelf, then say qiāomén again

Before you move on

What does qiāomén mean? ("To knock at the door".) Say it once more.

176.2 línjū — neighbour

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a bookshelf, then the Mandarin for to knock at the door.

You'll want to know: línjū

línjū — "neighbour".

qiāomén de rén shì wǒ de línjū — The one knocking was my neighbour.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of línjū is built from lín 'near' and jū 'to dwell', both inherited from Middle Chinese, lin and kjo (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the one who dwells near. After an older book, the dictionary also counts five households together as one lín.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: línjū
- Say it: línjū, once more
- Say it: qiāomén de rén shì wǒ de línjū — The one knocking was my neighbour.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a bookshelf, then the Mandarin for to knock at the door, then say línjū again

Before you move on

What does línjū mean? ("Neighbour".) Say it once more.

176.3 chǎojià — to quarrel; to have a row

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to knock at the door, then the Mandarin for a neighbour.

You'll want to know: chǎojià

chǎojià — "to quarrel; to have a row".

tā chángcháng gēn línjū chǎojià — He's forever quarrelling with the neighbours.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chǎojià is built from 吵 'noisy' and jià. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese tsrhaewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a sound'; the second is the word for a frame, and how it came to mean a fight is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: chǎojià
- Say it: chǎojià, once more
- Say it: tā chángcháng gēn línjū chǎojià — He's forever quarrelling with the neighbours.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to knock at the door, then the Mandarin for a neighbour, then say chǎojià again

Before you move on

What does chǎojià mean? ("To quarrel; to have a row".) Say it once more.

176.4 dǎo — to topple over; to fall down (of a thing)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a neighbour, then the Mandarin for to quarrel.

You'll want to know: dǎo

dǎo — "to topple over; to fall down (of a thing)".

tā de zìxíngchē dǎo le — His bike fell over.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎo is inherited from Middle Chinese tawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to fall forward'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎo
- Say it: dǎo, once more
- Say it: tā de zìxíngchē dǎo le — His bike fell over.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a neighbour, then the Mandarin for to quarrel, then say dǎo again

Before you move on

What does dǎo mean? ("To topple over; to fall down (of a thing)".) Say it once more.

176.5 zháohuǒ — to catch fire

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to quarrel, then the Mandarin for to topple over.

You'll want to know: zháohuǒ

zháohuǒ — "to catch fire".

qiántiān línjū jiā zháohuǒ le — The neighbours' house caught fire the day before yesterday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zháohuǒ is built from zháo 'to attach to' and 火 'fire', both inherited from Middle Chinese, drjak and xwaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): fire takes hold.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: zháohuǒ
- Say it: zháohuǒ, once more
- Say it: qiántiān línjū jiā zháohuǒ le — The neighbours' house caught fire the day before yesterday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to quarrel, then the Mandarin for to topple over, then say zháohuǒ again

Before you move on

What does zháohuǒ mean? ("To catch fire".) Say it once more.

Chapter 177

Full Already

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask what to order, ask for tofu, say I am full, and say whether food is fresh or tastes bad.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 177: I can ask what to order, ask for tofu, say I am full, and say whether food is fresh or tastes bad.

177.1 tuījiàn — to recommend

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to topple over, then the Mandarin for to catch fire.

You'll want to know: tuījiàn

tuījiàn — "to recommend".

> fúwùyuán nǐ tuījiàn shénme cài — Waiter, which dish do you recommend?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tuījiàn is built from tuī 'to push' and jiàn 'to put forward', both inherited from Middle Chinese, thwoj and tsenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to present' and 'to put forward'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: tuījiàn
- Say it: tuījiàn, once more
- Say it: fúwùyuán nǐ tuījiàn shénme cài — Waiter, which dish do you recommend?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to topple over, then the Mandarin for to catch fire, then say tuījiàn again

Before you move on

What does tuījiàn mean? ("To recommend".) Say it once more.

177.2 dòufu — tofu; bean curd

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to catch fire, then the Mandarin for to recommend.

You'll want to know: dòufu

dòufu — "tofu; bean curd".

wǒmen yào yí fèn dòufu — One portion of tofu for us, please.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dòufu is built from dòu 'beans' and fu, both inherited from Middle Chinese, duwH and bjuX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'rotten' and 'broken down': beans broken down into curd. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: dòufu
- Say it: dòufu, once more
- Say it: wǒmen yào yí fèn dòufu — One portion of tofu for us, please.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to catch fire, then the Mandarin for to recommend, then say dòufu again

Before you move on

What does dòufu mean? ("Tofu; bean curd".) Say it once more.

177.3 bǎo — full after eating; full up

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to recommend, then the Mandarin for tofu.

You'll want to know: bǎo

bǎo — "full after eating; full up".

wǒ hěn bǎo bù chī le — I'm full: no more for me.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bǎo is inherited from Middle Chinese paewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to have eaten much'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: bǎo
- Say it: bǎo, once more

- Say it: wǒ hěn bǎo bù chī le — I'm full: no more for me.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to recommend, then the Mandarin for tofu, then say bǎo again

Before you move on

What does bǎo mean? ("Full after eating; full up".) Say it once more.

177.4 xīnxiān — fresh

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tofu, then the Mandarin for full after eating.

You'll want to know: xīnxiān

xīnxiān — "fresh".

zhèr de yú gèng xīnxiān — The fish here is fresher.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xīnxiān is built from xīn 'new' and xiān 'bright and clean', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sin and sjen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: xīnxiān
- Say it: xīnxiān, once more
- Say it: zhèr de yú gèng xīnxiān — The fish here is fresher.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tofu, then the Mandarin for full after eating, then say xīnxiān again

Before you move on

What does xīnxiān mean? ("Fresh".) Say it once more.

177.5 nánchī — tasting bad; horrible to eat

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for full after eating, then the Mandarin for fresh.

You'll want to know: nánchī

nánchī — "tasting bad; horrible to eat".

zhège cài bù xīnxiān hěn nánchī — This dish isn't fresh, and it tastes horrible.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nánchī is built from nán 'hard' and 吃 'to eat': hard to eat. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese nan (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); for the second the dictionary has khek, glossed 'to eat', under another way of writing it, though khek would regularly give qì.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: nánchī
- Say it: nánchī, once more
- Say it: zhège cài bù xīnxiān hěn nánchī — This dish isn't fresh, and it tastes horrible.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for full after eating, then the Mandarin for fresh, then say nánchī again

Before you move on

What does nánchī mean? (“Tasting bad; horrible to eat”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 178

An Ordinary Day

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what is normal, talk about my days, then and lately, and the small hours.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 178: I can say what is normal, talk about my days, then and lately, and the small hours.

178.1 正常 (zhèngcháng) — normal; as usual

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for fresh, then the Mandarin for horrible to eat.

You'll want to know: 正常

正常 — zhèngcháng — "normal; as usual".

> 没事我觉得很正常 méishì wǒ juéde hěn zhèngcháng — It's nothing: I think that's perfectly normal.

The new character, in pieces: 常 — eleven strokes: three short strokes on top, the cover piece of 学, 口 under it, and at the foot a frame with a long vertical down through it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 正常 (zhèngcháng) is built from 正 'right, proper' and 常, both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyengH and dzyang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second as a length of two fathoms and as an official's title; the sense 'usual' is not given there, so how the pair came to mean normal is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: zhèngcháng
- Say it: zhèngcháng, once more
- Say it: méishì wǒ juéde hěn zhèngcháng — It's nothing: I think that's perfectly normal.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for fresh, then the Mandarin for horrible to eat, then say zhèngcháng again

Before you move on

What does 正常 mean? ("Normal; as usual".) Say it once more.

178.2 常 — three strokes, a cover, 口 and a cloth

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say zhèngcháng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

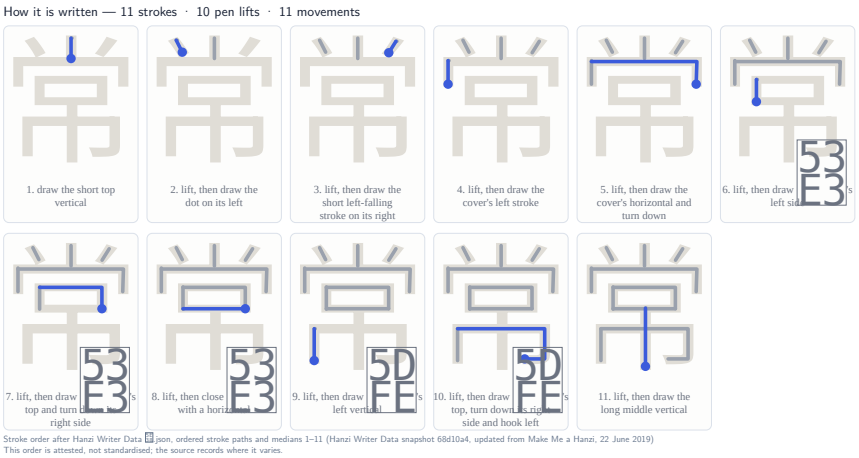
  学 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — xué, kǒu

Script — three strokes, a cover, 口 and a cloth



How 常 is written, stroke by stroke

常

Four pieces, top to bottom. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

Three short strokes on top: a vertical in the middle, a dot to its left, and a short stroke on its right falling to the left.

Then the cover piece of 学, two strokes: a short stroke falling down on the left, then a horizontal that turns down and hooks.

Then 口, three strokes, as you write it.

At the foot, the cloth piece, three strokes: a short vertical on the left, a horizontal that turns down and hooks, and last a long vertical down through the middle.

3 + 2 + 3 + 3 = eleven.

Your turn

- Write it: 常, all eleven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 常? (Eleven.) What sits under the cover? (口.) Which stroke comes last? (The long vertical through the cloth piece.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 常, pinned stroke paths and medians.

178.3 日子 (rìzi) — day; days (of one's life)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for horrible to eat, then the Mandarin for normal.

You'll want to know: 日子

日子 — rìzi — "day; days (of one's life)".

小时候的日子很快乐 xiǎoshíhou de rìzi hěn kuàilè — My childhood days were happy.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 日子 (rìzi) is built from 日 'sun, day' and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyit and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: rìzi
- Say it: rìzi, once more
- Say it: xiǎoshíhou de rìzi hěn kuàilè — My childhood days were happy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for horrible to eat, then the Mandarin for normal, then say rìzi again

Before you move on

What does 日子 mean? ("Day; days (of one's life)".) Say it once more.

178.4 从前 (cóngqián) — once upon a time; in the past

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for normal, then the Mandarin for one's days.

You'll want to know: 从前

从前 — cóngqián — "once upon a time; in the past".

我从前常常喝茶 wǒ cóngqián chángcháng hē chá — I used to drink a lot of tea.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 从前 (cóngqián) is built from 从 'from' and 前 'before', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzjowng and dzen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): from before.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: cóngqián
- Say it: cóngqián, once more
- Say it: wǒ cóngqián chángcháng hē chá — I used to drink a lot of tea.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for normal, then the Mandarin for one's days, then say cóngqián again

Before you move on

What does 从前 mean? ("Once upon a time; in the past".) Say it once more.

178.5 zuìjìn — lately; recently

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for one's days, then the Mandarin for once upon a time.

You'll want to know: zuìjìn

zuìjìn — "lately; recently".

nǐ zuìjìn máng ma — Have you been busy lately?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zuìjìn is built from zuì 'most' and jìn 'near', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tswajH and gj+nX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the nearest time.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: zuìjìn
- Say it: zuìjìn, once more
- Say it: nǐ zuìjìn máng ma — Have you been busy lately?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for one's days, then the Mandarin for once upon a time, then say zuìjìn again

Before you move on

What does zuìjìn mean? ("Lately; recently".) Say it once more.

178.6 língchén — the small hours; before dawn

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for once upon a time, then the Mandarin for lately.

You'll want to know: língchén

língchén — "the small hours; before dawn".

> wǒ língchén sì diǎn qǐchuáng le — I got up at four in the morning.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of língchén is built from líng and chén, both inherited from Middle Chinese, ling and dzyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'ice' and the second 'early' and 'dawn'; how the first came into the word is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: língchén
- Say it: língchén, once more
- Say it: wǒ língchén sì diǎn qǐchuáng le — I got up at four in the morning.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for once upon a time, then the Mandarin for lately, then say língchén again

Before you move on

What does língchén mean? ("The small hours; before dawn".) Say it once more.

Chapter 179

Laundry Day

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the washing machine and powder, hanging things out, ironing and the wardrobe.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 179: I can talk about the washing machine and powder, hanging things out, ironing and the wardrobe.

179.1 洗衣机 (xǐyījī) — washing machine

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for lately, then the Mandarin for in the small hours.

You'll want to know: 洗衣机

洗衣机 — xǐyījī — "washing machine".

> 我家有洗衣机 wǒ jiā yǒu xǐyījī — We've got a washing machine at home.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 洗衣机 (xǐyījī) is built from 洗 'to wash', 衣 'clothes' and 机 'machine', all three inherited from Middle Chinese, sejX, 'j+j and kj+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the last as the trigger of a crossbow, and 'machine' is a later sense.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: xǐyījī
- Say it: xǐyījī, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā yǒu xǐyījī — We've got a washing machine at home.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for lately, then the Mandarin for in the small hours, then say xǐyījī again

Before you move on

What does 洗衣机 mean? ("Washing machine".) Say it once more.

179.2 xǐyīfěn — washing powder

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for in the small hours, then the Mandarin for a washing machine.

You'll want to know: xǐyīfěn

xǐyīfěn — "washing powder".

xǐyīfěn méiyǒu le — We're out of washing powder.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xǐyīfěn is built from 洗 'to wash', 衣 'clothes' and fěn 'powder', all three inherited from Middle Chinese, sejX, 'j+j and pjunX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), whose example for the last is a white powder made from lead.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: xǐyīfěn
- Say it: xǐyīfěn, once more
- Say it: xǐyīfěn méiyǒu le — We're out of washing powder.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for in the small hours, then the Mandarin for a washing machine, then say xǐyīfěn again

Before you move on

What does xǐyīfěn mean? ("Washing powder".) Say it once more.

179.3 liàng — to hang out to dry

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a washing machine, then the Mandarin for washing powder.

You'll want to know: liàng

liàng — "to hang out to dry".

jīntiān tiānqì hěn hǎo nǐ qù liàng yīfu — The weather's nice today: go and hang the washing out.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of liàng No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: liàng
- Say it: liàng, once more

- Say it: jīntiān tiānqì hěn hǎo nǐ qù liàng yīfu — The weather's nice today: go and hang the washing out.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a washing machine, then the Mandarin for washing powder, then say liàng again

Before you move on

What does liàng mean? ("To hang out to dry".) Say it once more.

179.4 yùn — to iron

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for washing powder, then the Mandarin for to hang out to dry.

You'll want to know: yùn

yùn — "to iron".

wǒ yào yùn yīfu — I'm going to do the ironing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yùn is inherited from Middle Chinese 'jut (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to smooth silk with fire'. That reading would regularly give yù, so how today's yùn came about is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: yùn
- Say it: yùn, once more
- Say it: wǒ yào yùn yīfu — I'm going to do the ironing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for washing powder, then the Mandarin for to hang out to dry, then say yùn again

Before you move on

What does yùn mean? (“To iron”.) Say it once more.

179.5 yīguì — wardrobe

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to hang out to dry, then the Mandarin for to iron.

You’ll want to know: yīguì

yīguì — “wardrobe”.

nǐ de dàyī zài yīguì lǐ — Your coat is in the wardrobe.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yīguì is built from 衣 ’clothes’ and guì ’a chest’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, ’j+j and gwijH (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription).

What you’ve built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: yīguì
- Say it: yīguì, once more
- Say it: nǐ de dàyī zài yīguì lǐ — Your coat is in the wardrobe.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to hang out to dry, then the Mandarin for to iron, then say yīguì again

Before you move on

What does yīguì mean? (“Wardrobe”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 180

Coming Over

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about visiting as a guest, the host, calling on someone, coming over and making a date.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 180: I can talk about visiting as a guest, the host, calling on someone, coming over and making a date.

180.1 做客 (zuòkè) — to visit as a guest; to be a guest

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to iron, then the Mandarin for a wardrobe.

You'll want to know: 做客

做客 — zuòkè — "to visit as a guest; to be a guest".

> 我去他家做客喝了两杯茶 wǒ qù tā jiā zuòkè hē le liǎng bēi chá — I went round to his place and had two cups of tea.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 做客 (zuòkè) is built from 做 'to do, to be' and 客 'guest'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese khaek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'guest'; 做 has no form in that dictionary, so the history of the first part is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: zuòkè
- Say it: zuòkè, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù tā jiā zuòkè hē le liǎng bēi chá — I went round to his place and had two cups of tea.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to iron, then the Mandarin for a wardrobe, then say zuòkè again

Before you move on

What does 做客 mean? ("To visit as a guest; to be a guest".) Say it once more.

180.2 zhǔrén — host; owner

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a wardrobe, then the Mandarin for to visit as a guest.

You'll want to know: zhǔrén

zhǔrén — "host; owner".

zhǔrén hěn rèqíng — The host was very welcoming.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhǔrén is built from zhǔ 'to be in charge' and 人 'person', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyuX and nyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the person in charge of the house.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǔrén
- Say it: zhǔrén, once more
- Say it: zhǔrén hěn rèqíng — The host was very welcoming.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a wardrobe, then the Mandarin for to visit as a guest, then say zhǔrén again

Before you move on

What does zhǔrén mean? ("Host; owner".) Say it once more.

180.3 kànwàng — to call on; to visit (a person)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to visit as a guest, then the Mandarin for the host.

You'll want to know: kànwàng

kànwàng — "to call on; to visit (a person)".

zhōumò wǒ qù kànwàng wǒ de lǎoshī — At the weekend I'm going to call on my teacher.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kànwàng is built from 看 'to look' and wàng 'to gaze', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khanH and mjangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second with this very word.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: kànwàng
- Say it: kànwàng, once more
- Say it: zhōumò wǒ qù kànwàng wǒ de lǎoshī — At the weekend I'm going to call on my teacher.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to visit as a guest, then the Mandarin for the host, then say kànwàng again

Before you move on

What does kànwàng mean? ("To call on; to visit (a person)".) Say it once more.

180.4 过来 (guòlai) — to come over

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the host, then the Mandarin for to call on someone.

You'll want to know: 过来

过来 — guòlai — "to come over".

你什么时候过来 nǐ shénme shíhou guòlai — When are you coming over?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 过来 (guòlai) is built from 过 'to pass' and 来 'to come', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kwaH and loj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): to pass over to here. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: guòlai
- Say it: guòlai, once more
- Say it: nǐ shénme shíhou guòlai — When are you coming over?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the host, then the Mandarin for to call on someone, then say guòlai again

Before you move on

What does 过来 mean? ("To come over".) Say it once more.

180.5 yuē — to arrange to meet; to make a date with

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to call on someone, then the Mandarin for to come over.

You'll want to know: yuē

yuē — "to arrange to meet; to make a date with".

wǒ yuē le péngyou xiàwǔ jiànmiàn — I've arranged to meet a friend this afternoon.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

yuē is inherited from Middle Chinese 'jak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to bind' and 'sparing': to bind someone to a time.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: yuē
- Say it: yuē, once more
- Say it: wǒ yuē le péngyou xiàwǔ jiànmiàn — I've arranged to meet a friend this afternoon.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to call on someone, then the Mandarin for to come over, then say yuē again

Before you move on

What does yuē mean? ("To arrange to meet; to make a date with".) Say it once more.

Chapter 181

Bed and Bath

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first 3 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a quilt, a pillow, a bathroom and curtains, and count the rooms.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 181: I can name a quilt, a pillow, a bathroom and curtains, and count the rooms.

181.1 bèizi — quilt; duvet

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to come over, then the Mandarin for to make a date with.

You'll want to know: bèizi

bèizi — "quilt; duvet".

> tiānqì lěng le wǒmen yào huàn bèizi — It's turned cold: we need to change the quilt.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bèizi is built from bèi 'bedclothes' and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjeX and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: bèizi
- Say it: bèizi, once more
- Say it: tiānqì lěng le wǒmen yào huàn bèizi — It's turned cold: we need to change the quilt.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to come over, then the Mandarin for to make a date with, then say bèizi again

Before you move on

What does bèizi mean? ("Quilt; duvet".) Say it once more.

181.2 zhěntou — pillow

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to make a date with, then the Mandarin for a quilt.

You'll want to know: zhěntou

zhěntou — "pillow".

zhège zhěntou tài gāo le — This pillow is too high.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhěntou is built from zhěn 'pillow' and tóu 'head', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyimX and duw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); under its falling-tone reading the dictionary glosses the first with this very word. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: zhěntou
- Say it: zhěntou, once more
- Say it: zhège zhěntou tài gāo le — This pillow is too high.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to make a date with, then the Mandarin for a quilt, then say zhěntou again

Before you move on

What does zhěntou mean? ("Pillow".) Say it once more.

181.3 间 (jiān) — measure word for rooms

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a quilt, then the Mandarin for a pillow.

You'll want to know: 间

间 — jiān — "measure word for rooms".

后边有两间书房 hòubian yǒu liǎng jiān shūfáng — There are two studies at the back.

The new character, in pieces: 间 — seven strokes: the door piece 门, three strokes, and 日 inside it, four strokes. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 间 (jiān) is inherited from Middle Chinese kean (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which writes it another way and glosses it 'a gap' and 'in between': the space between walls, and so a room.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: jiān
- Say it: jiān, once more
- Say it: hòubian yǒu liǎng jiān shūfáng — There are two studies at the back.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a quilt, then the Mandarin for a pillow, then say jiān again

Before you move on

What does 间 mean? (“Measure word for rooms”.) Say it once more.

181.4 间 — 门 with 日 inside

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say jiān — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

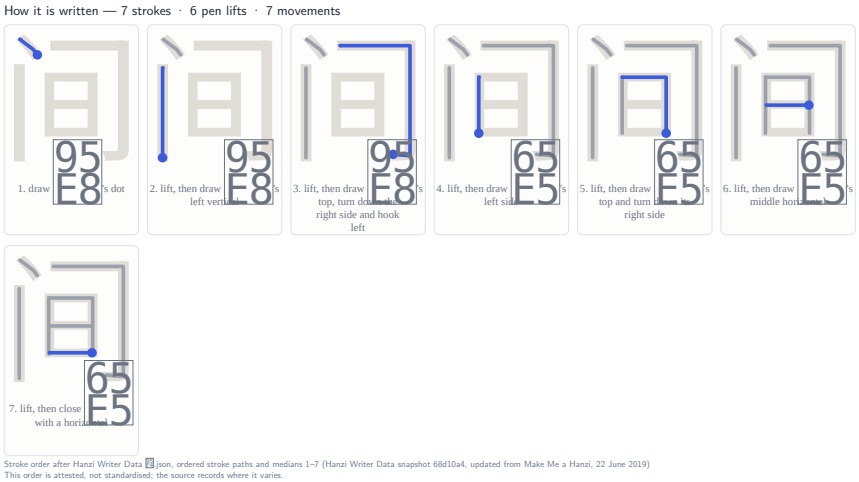
  门 时

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — mén, shí

Script — 门 with 日 inside



How 闻 is written, stroke by stroke

闻

Two pieces, the frame first. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

门, three strokes, as you write it: a dot, a vertical down the left, and a horizontal that turns down the right side and hooks.

Then 日 inside it, four strokes, as you write it, but smaller: a vertical, a horizontal that turns down, a bar across the middle, and the bottom bar.

3 + 4 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 闻, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 闻? (Seven.) Which piece comes first? (门, the frame.) What sits inside? (日.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 闻, pinned stroke paths and medians.

181.5 yùshì — bathroom

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a pillow, then the Mandarin for measure word for rooms.

You'll want to know: yùshì

yùshì — "bathroom".

wǒmen jiā yǒu liǎng jiān yùshì — We have two bathrooms.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yùshì is built from yù 'to bathe' and shì 'room', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yowk and syit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: yùshì
- Say it: yùshì, once more
- Say it: wǒmen jiā yǒu liǎng jiān yùshì — We have two bathrooms.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a pillow, then the Mandarin for measure word for rooms, then say yùshì again

Before you move on

What does yùshì mean? ("Bathroom".) Say it once more.

181.6 chuānglián — curtain

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for measure word for rooms, then the Mandarin for a bathroom.

You'll want to know: chuānglián

chuānglián — "curtain".

wòshì de chuānglián hěn hǎokàn — The bedroom curtains are lovely.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chuānglián is built from chuāng 'window' and lián 'a hanging screen', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsrhaewng and ljem (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second as a screen of thin strips.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: chuānglián
- Say it: chuānglián, once more
- Say it: wòshì de chuānglián hěn hǎokàn — The bedroom curtains are lovely.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for measure word for rooms, then the Mandarin for a bathroom, then say chuānglián again

Before you move on

What does chuānglián mean? ("Curtain".) Say it once more.

181.7 Looking back: from A Knock at the Door to Bed and Bath

Say the Mandarin for to knock at the door and a neighbour.

Your turn

- Say it: to knock at the door, a neighbour, to quarrel, to topple over, to catch fire
- Say it: to recommend, tofu, full after eating, fresh, horrible to eat
- Say it: normal, one's days, once upon a time, lately, in the small hours
- Say it: a washing machine, washing powder, to hang out to dry, to iron, a wardrobe
- Say it: to visit as a guest, the host, to call on someone, to come over, to make a date with
- Say it: a quilt, a pillow, measure word for rooms, a bathroom, a curtain
- Read it: 常 间 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

To knock at the door? (qiāomén.) A neighbour? (línjū.) To quarrel? (chǎojià.) To topple over? (dǎo.) To catch fire? (zháohuǒ.) To recommend? (tuījiàn.) Tofu? (dòufu.) Full after eating? (bǎo.) Fresh? (xīnxiān.) Horrible to eat? (nánchī.) Normal? (正常, zhèngcháng.) One's days? (日子, rìzi.) Once upon a time? (从前, cóngqián.) Lately? (zuìjìn.) In the small hours? (língchén.) A washing machine? (洗衣机, xǐyījī.) Washing powder? (xǐyīfěn.) To hang out to dry? (liàng.) To iron? (yùn.) A wardrobe? (yīguì.) To visit as a guest? (做客, zuòkè.) The host? (zhǔrén.) To call on someone? (kànwàng.) To come over? (过来, guòlai.) To make a date with? (yuē.) A quilt? (bèizi.) A pillow? (zhěntou.) Measure word for rooms? (间, jiān.) A bathroom? (yùshì.) A curtain? (chuānglián.)

Chapter 182

Eating Out

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about restaurants, cold starters, snacks, home cooking and boxed meals.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 182: I can talk about restaurants, cold starters, snacks, home cooking and boxed meals.

182.1 fànguǎn — restaurant

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a bathroom, then the Mandarin for a curtain.

You'll want to know: fànguǎn

fànguǎn — "restaurant".

> wǒ jiā hòubian yǒu yí ge fànguǎn — There's a restaurant behind our place.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fànguǎn is built from 饭 'meal' and guǎn 'lodging house', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjonH and kwanH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), though the falling tone of kwanH would regularly give guàn.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: fànguǎn
- Say it: fànguǎn, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā hòubian yǒu yí ge fànguǎn — There's a restaurant behind our place.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a bathroom, then the Mandarin for a curtain, then say fànguǎn again

Before you move on

What does fànguǎn mean? ("Restaurant".) Say it once more.

182.2 冷菜 (lěngcài) — cold starter; cold dishes (on a menu)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a curtain, then the Mandarin for a restaurant.

You'll want to know: 冷菜

冷菜 — lěngcài — "cold starter; cold dishes (on a menu)".

我们要两个冷菜 wǒmen yào liǎng ge lěngcài — We'd like two cold starters.

The new character, in pieces: 冷 — seven strokes: the ice piece on the left (a dot, then a stroke rising to the right), and on the right 今 as you write it, with one more dot under it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 冷菜 (lěngcài) is built from 冷 'cold' and 菜 'dish', both inherited from Middle Chinese, lengX and tshojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'cold' and calls the second any plant fit to eat; 'a dish' is the later sense. The dishes a meal starts with, served cold.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: lěngcài
- Say it: lěngcài, once more
- Say it: wǒmen yào liǎng ge lěngcài — We'd like two cold starters.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a curtain, then the Mandarin for a restaurant, then say lěngcài again

Before you move on

What does 冷菜 mean? ("Cold starter; cold dishes (on a menu)".) Say it once more.

182.3 冷 — the ice piece, then 今 and a dot

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say lěngcài — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

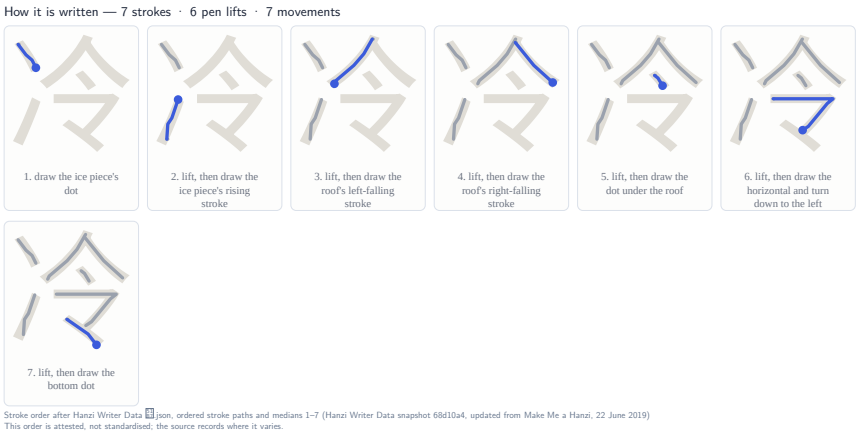
今 菜

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — jīn, cài

Script — the ice piece, then 今 and a dot



How 冷 is written, stroke by stroke

冷

Two pieces, left before right. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The ice piece, two strokes. A dot. Then, under it, a short stroke rising to the upper right.

The right piece, five strokes: 今, then a dot. 今 as you write it: a stroke falling to the left, one falling to the right, a dot under the roof, and a horizontal that turns and falls to the left. Last, one more dot under it.

2 + 4 + 1 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 冷, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 冷? (Seven.) How many in the ice piece? (Two: a dot, then a rising stroke.) Which character makes most of the right-hand piece? (今, with one more dot.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 冷, pinned stroke paths and medians.

182.4 小吃 (xiǎochī) — snack; street food

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a restaurant, then the Mandarin for a cold starter.

You'll want to know: 小吃

小吃 — xiǎochī — "snack; street food".

中午没有时间我们吃小吃 zhōngwǔ méiyǒu shíjiān wǒmen chī xiǎochī — There's no time at lunch, so we'll grab a snack.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 小吃 (xiǎochī) is built from 小 'small' and 吃 'to eat': a small eat. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese sjewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); for the second the dictionary has khek, glossed 'to eat', under another way of writing it, though khek would regularly give qì.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: xiǎochī
- Say it: xiǎochī, once more
- Say it: zhōngwǔ méiyǒu shíjiān wǒmen chī xiǎochī — There's no time at lunch, so we'll grab a snack.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a restaurant, then the Mandarin for a cold starter, then say xiǎochī again

Before you move on

What does 小吃 mean? ("Snack; street food".) Say it once more.

182.5 家常菜 (jiāchángcài) — home cooking; everyday dishes

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a cold starter, then the Mandarin for a snack.

You'll want to know: 家常菜

家常菜 — jiāchángcài — "home cooking; everyday dishes".

我们去对面吃家常菜 wǒmen qù duìmiàn chī jiāchángcài — Let's go across the road for some home cooking.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 家常菜 (jiāchángcài) is built from 家 'home', 常 'everyday' and 菜 'dish', all three inherited from Middle Chinese, kae, dzyang and tshojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the dishes a home makes every day. The everyday sense of the second is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: jiāchángcài
- Say it: jiāchángcài, once more
- Say it: wǒmen qù duìmiàn chī jiāchángcài — Let's go across the road for some home cooking.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a cold starter, then the Mandarin for a snack, then say jiāchángcài again

Before you move on

What does 家常菜 mean? ("Home cooking; everyday dishes".) Say it once more.

182.6 héfàn — boxed meal; packed lunch

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a snack, then the Mandarin for home cooking.

You'll want to know: héfàn

héfàn — "boxed meal; packed lunch".

wǒmen zhōngwǔ chī héfàn — We have boxed lunches at midday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of héfàn is built from hé 'box' and 饭 'meal', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hop and bjonH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as a dish with a lid.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: héfàn
- Say it: héfàn, once more
- Say it: wǒmen zhōngwǔ chī héfàn — We have boxed lunches at midday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a snack, then the Mandarin for home cooking, then say héfàn again

Before you move on

What does héfàn mean? ("Boxed meal; packed lunch".) Say it once more.

Chapter 183

In and Out

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about going out, coming in, finishing work, locking up and lying down.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 183: I can talk about going out, coming in, finishing work, locking up and lying down.

183.1 出去 (chūqù) — to go outside; to go out of here

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for home cooking, then the Mandarin for a boxed meal.

You'll want to know: 出去

出去 — chūqù — "to go outside; to go out of here".

> 外边很冷你还要出去吗 wàibian hěn lěng nǐ hái yào chūqù ma — It's cold out: are you still going out?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 出去 (chūqù) is built from 出 'to come out' and 去 'to go', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwit and khjoH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): out and away from here.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: chūqù
- Say it: chūqù, once more
- Say it: wàibian hěn lěng nǐ hái yào chūqù ma — It's cold out: are you still going out?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for home cooking, then the Mandarin for a boxed meal, then say chūqù again

Before you move on

What does 出去 mean? ("To go outside; to go out of here".) Say it once more.

183.2 进来 (jìnlái) — to come inside; to come in

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a boxed meal, then the Mandarin for to go out of here.

You'll want to know: 进来

进来 — jìnlái — "to come inside; to come in".

请进来你的房间在这儿 qǐng jìnlái nǐ de fángjiān zài zhèr — Come on in: your room is here.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 进来 (jìnlái) is built from 进 'to go in' and 来 'to come', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsinH and loj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): in and towards here.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jìnlái
- Say it: jìnlái, once more
- Say it: qǐng jìnlái nǐ de fángjiān zài zhèr — Come on in: your room is here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a boxed meal, then the Mandarin for to go out of here, then say jìnlái again

Before you move on

What does 进来 mean? ("To come inside; to come in".) Say it once more.

183.3 xiàbān — to finish work; to come off a shift

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go out of here, then the Mandarin for to come inside.

You'll want to know: xiàbān

xiàbān — "to finish work; to come off a shift".

nǐ jǐ diǎn xiàbān — What time do you finish work?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiàbān is built from 下 'to go down' and bān, both inherited from Middle Chinese, haeX and paen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second as dividing tokens of jade; the sense 'a shift at work' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàbān
- Say it: xiàbān, once more
- Say it: nǐ jǐ diǎn xiàbān — What time do you finish work?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go out of here, then the Mandarin for to come inside, then say xiàbān again

Before you move on

What does xiàbān mean? ("To finish work; to come off a shift".) Say it once more.

183.4 suǒmén — to lock the door; to lock up

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to come inside, then the Mandarin for to finish work.

You'll want to know: suǒmén

suǒmén — "to lock the door; to lock up".

chūqù yǐqián bié wàng le suǒmén — Don't forget to lock the door before you go out.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of suǒmén is built from suǒ 'a lock' and 門 'door', both inherited from Middle Chinese, swaX and mwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'an iron lock'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: suǒmén
- Say it: suǒmén, once more
- Say it: chūqù yǐqián bié wàng le suǒmén — Don't forget to lock the door before you go out.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to come inside, then the Mandarin for to finish work, then say suǒmén again

Before you move on

What does suǒmén mean? ("To lock the door; to lock up".) Say it once more.

183.5 tǎng — to lie down

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to finish work, then the Mandarin for to lock up.

You'll want to know: tǎng

tǎng — "to lie down".

wǒ hěn lèi xiǎng tǎng yíhuìr — I'm tired; I want to lie down for a bit.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tǎng No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: tǎng
- Say it: tǎng, once more
- Say it: wǒ hěn lèi xiǎng tǎng yíhuìr — I'm tired; I want to lie down for a bit.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to finish work, then the Mandarin for to lock up, then say tǎng again

Before you move on

What does tǎng mean? ("To lie down".) Say it once more.

Chapter 184

Holiday Plans

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about going on holiday, deciding where, looking round places, my home town and relaxing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 184: I can talk about going on holiday, deciding where, looking round places, my home town and relaxing.

184.1 dùjià — to go on holiday; to spend a holiday

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to lock up, then the Mandarin for to lie down.

You'll want to know: dùjià

dùjià — "to go on holiday; to spend a holiday".

> xià ge yuè wǒmen qù Běijīng dùjià — Next month we're going on holiday to Beijing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dùjià is built from dù and jià 'leave', both inherited from Middle Chinese, duH and kaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second 'leave from duty' and the first 'a rule'; 'to spend time' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: dùjià
- Say it: dùjià, once more
- Say it: xià ge yuè wǒmen qù Běijīng dùjià — Next month we're going on holiday to Beijing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to lock up, then the Mandarin for to lie down, then say dùjià again

Before you move on

What does dùjià mean? ("To go on holiday; to spend a holiday".) Say it once more.

184.2 juédìng — to decide; a decision

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to lie down, then the Mandarin for to go on holiday.

You'll want to know: juédìng

juédìng — "to decide; a decision".

wǒmen hái méi juédìng qù nǎr — We haven't decided where to go yet.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of juédìng is built from jué and dìng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kwet and dengH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to cut off' and 'to break', and the second 'settled': to cut off and settle.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: juédìng
- Say it: juédìng, once more
- Say it: wǒmen hái méi juédìng qù nǎr — We haven't decided where to go yet.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to lie down, then the Mandarin for to go on holiday, then say juédìng again

Before you move on

What does juédìng mean? ("To decide; a decision".) Say it once more.

184.3 cānguān — to look round a place; to visit (a sight)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go on holiday, then the Mandarin for to decide.

You'll want to know: cānguān

cānguān — "to look round a place; to visit (a sight)".

míngtiān wǒmen qù cānguān dàxué — Tomorrow we're going to look round the university.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cānguān is built from cān 'to present oneself' and guān 'to look', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshom and kwan (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: cānguān
- Say it: cānguān, once more
- Say it: míngtiān wǒmen qù cānguān dàxué — Tomorrow we're going to look round the university.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go on holiday, then the Mandarin for to decide, then say cānguān again

Before you move on

What does cānguān mean? ("To look round a place; to visit (a sight)".) Say it once more.

184.4 lǎojiā — home town; family home

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to decide, then the Mandarin for to look round a place.

You'll want to know: lǎojiā

lǎojiā — "home town; family home".

Chūnjié wǒ yào huí lǎojiā — I'm going back to my home town for the new year holiday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǎojiā is built from lǎo 'old' and 家 'home', both inherited from Middle Chinese, lawX and kae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the old home.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: lǎojiā
- Say it: lǎojiā, once more
- Say it: Chūnjié wǒ yào huí lǎojiā — I'm going back to my home town for the new year holiday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to decide, then the Mandarin for to look round a place, then say lǎojiā again

Before you move on

What does lǎojiā mean? ("Home town; family home".) Say it once more.

184.5 fàngsōng — to relax; to loosen

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to look round a place, then the Mandarin for one's home town.

You'll want to know: fàngsōng

fàngsōng — "to relax; to loosen".

wǒ xiǎng fàngsōng bù xiǎng chūqù — I want to relax; I don't feel like going out.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fàngsōng is built from fàng 'to let go' and sōng 'loose', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjangH and sowng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second as hair hanging loose.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: fàngsōng
- Say it: fàngsōng, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng fàngsōng bù xiǎng chūqù — I want to relax; I don't feel like going out.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to look round a place, then the Mandarin for one's home town, then say fàngsōng again

Before you move on

What does fàngsōng mean? ("To relax; to loosen".) Say it once more.

Chapter 185

Long Ago and Soon

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say it has been ages, talk about before and after, mornings and evenings, and what tends to happen.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 185: I can say it has been ages, talk about before and after, mornings and evenings, and what tends to happen.

185.1 hǎojiǔ — a long time; ages

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for one's home town, then the Mandarin for to relax.

You'll want to know: hǎojiǔ

hǎojiǔ — "a long time; ages".

> wǒmen hǎojiǔ méi jiànmiàn le — We haven't seen each other for ages.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Two third tones: hǎojiǔ is said háojiǔ, the first rising.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hǎojiǔ is built from 好 'good', here 'very', and jiǔ 'long-lasting', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xawX and kjuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'lasting long'.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: hǎojiǔ
- Say it: hǎojiǔ, once more
- Say it: wǒmen hǎojiǔ méi jiànmiàn le — We haven't seen each other for ages.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for one's home town, then the Mandarin for to relax, then say hǎojiǔ again

Before you move on

What does hǎojiǔ mean? ("A long time; ages".) Say it once more.

185.2 zhīqián — before (a time); before (an event)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to relax, then the Mandarin for for ages.

You'll want to know: zhīqián

zhīqián — "before (a time); before (an event)".

chī fàn zhīqián yào xǐ shǒu — Wash your hands before you eat.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhīqián is built from zhī, the old word that links a thing to what it belongs to, and 前 'before', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyi and dzen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to go to'; the linking sense is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: zhīqián
- Say it: zhīqián, once more
- Say it: chī fàn zhīqián yào xǐ shǒu — Wash your hands before you eat.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to relax, then the Mandarin for for ages, then say zhīqián again

Before you move on

What does zhīqián mean? ("Before (a time); before (an event)".) Say it once more.

185.3 zhīhòu — after (a time); after (an event)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for for ages, then the Mandarin for before (a time).

You'll want to know: zhīhòu

zhīhòu — "after (a time); after (an event)".

xiàbān zhīhòu wǒ qù mǎi dōngxi — After work I'm going shopping.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhīhòu is built from zhī, the old linking word, and 后 'after', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyi and huwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: zhīhòu
- Say it: zhīhòu, once more
- Say it: xiàbān zhīhòu wǒ qù mǎi dōngxi — After work I'm going shopping.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for for ages, then the Mandarin for before (a time), then say zhīhòu again

Before you move on

What does zhīhòu mean? ("After (a time); after (an event)".) Say it once more.

185.4 早晚 (zǎowǎn) — morning and evening; sooner or later

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for before (a time), then the Mandarin for after (a time).

You'll want to know: 早晚

早晚 — zǎowǎn — "morning and evening; sooner or later".

这儿早晚都很冷 zhèr zǎowǎn dōu hěn lěng — Here it's cold morning and evening.

Two third tones: zǎowǎn is said záowǎn, the first rising.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 早晚 (zǎowǎn) is built from 早 'early' and 晚 'late', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsawX and mjonX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): early and late, and so sooner or later.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: zǎowǎn
- Say it: zǎowǎn, once more
- Say it: zhèr zǎowǎn dōu hěn lěng — Here it's cold morning and evening.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for before (a time), then the Mandarin for after (a time), then say zǎowǎn again

Before you move on

What does 早晚 mean? ("Morning and evening; sooner or later".) Say it once more.

185.5 wǎngwǎng — more often than not; tends to

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for after (a time), then the Mandarin for morning and evening.

You'll want to know: wǎngwǎng

wǎngwǎng — "more often than not; tends to".

zhōumò wǒ wǎngwǎng shí diǎn qǐchuáng — At weekends I tend to get up at ten.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Two third tones: wǎngwǎng is said wángwǎng, the first rising.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wǎngwǎng says one syllable twice. It is inherited from Middle Chinese hjwangX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to go'; how the doubled word came to mean 'more often than not' is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for times of day.

Your turn

- Say it: wǎngwǎng
- Say it: wǎngwǎng, once more
- Say it: zhōumò wǒ wǎngwǎng shí diǎn qǐchuáng — At weekends I tend to get up at ten.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for after (a time), then the Mandarin for morning and evening, then say wǎngwǎng again

Before you move on

What does wǎngwǎng mean? ("More often than not; tends to".) Say it once more.

Chapter 186

Odds and Ends

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name scissors, a rubbish bin, a plastic bag, a bottle and a drawer.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 186: I can name scissors, a rubbish bin, a plastic bag, a bottle and a drawer.

186.1 jiǎndāo — scissors

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for morning and evening, then the Mandarin for more often than not.

You'll want to know: jiǎndāo

jiǎndāo — "scissors".

> jiǎndāo zài nǎr — Where are the scissors?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiǎndāo is built from two parts inherited from Middle Chinese (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): tsjenX, glossed 'to cut off' and 'to make even', and taw, the word for a knife: a cutting knife.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: jiǎndāo
- Say it: jiǎndāo, once more
- Say it: jiǎndāo zài nǎr — Where are the scissors?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for morning and evening, then the Mandarin for more often than not, then say jiǎndāo again

Before you move on

What does jiǎndāo mean? ("Scissors".) Say it once more.

186.2 lājītǒng — rubbish bin

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for more often than not, then the Mandarin for scissors.

You'll want to know: lājītǒng

lājītǒng — "rubbish bin".

lājītǒng mǎn le — The bin is full.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lājītǒng is built from lājī 'rubbish' and tǒng 'tub'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese thuwngX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a wooden tub'; for lājī no dictionary we use records an older form, so the history of that part is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: lājītǒng
- Say it: lājītǒng, once more
- Say it: lājītǒng mǎn le — The bin is full.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for more often than not, then the Mandarin for scissors, then say lājītǒng again

Before you move on

What does lājītǒng mean? ("Rubbish bin".) Say it once more.

186.3 sùliàodài — plastic bag

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for scissors, then the Mandarin for a rubbish bin.

You'll want to know: sùliàodài

sùliàodài — "plastic bag".

wǒ bú yào sùliàodài — I don't need a plastic bag.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of sùliàodài is built from sùliào 'plastic' and dài 'bag'. Of its parts, liào 'material' and dài are inherited from Middle Chinese, lew and dojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the first is listed there as suH, glossed 'a modelled figure': a material that can be modelled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: sùliàodài
- Say it: sùliàodài, once more
- Say it: wǒ bú yào sùliàodài — I don't need a plastic bag.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for scissors, then the Mandarin for a rubbish bin, then say sùliàodài again

Before you move on

What does sùliàodài mean? ("Plastic bag".) Say it once more.

186.4 píngzi — bottle

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a rubbish bin, then the Mandarin for a plastic bag.

You'll want to know: píngzi

píngzi — "bottle".

zhège píngzi lǐ yǒu shuǐ — There's water in this bottle.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of píngzi is built from píng and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, beng and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as a vessel for drawing water. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: píngzi
- Say it: píngzi, once more
- Say it: zhège píngzi lǐ yǒu shuǐ — There's water in this bottle.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a rubbish bin, then the Mandarin for a plastic bag, then say píngzi again

Before you move on

What does píngzi mean? ("Bottle".) Say it once more.

186.5 chōuti — drawer

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a plastic bag, then the Mandarin for a bottle.

You'll want to know: chōuti

chōuti — "drawer".

jiǎndāo zài chōuti lǐ — The scissors are in the drawer.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chōuti is built from chōu 'to pull out' and ti 'a tray'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese trhjuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to pull out'; for the second no dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled. In the word it loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: chōuti
- Say it: chōuti, once more
- Say it: jiǎndāo zài chōuti lǐ — The scissors are in the drawer.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a plastic bag, then the Mandarin for a bottle, then say chōuti again

Before you move on

What does chōuti mean? ("Drawer".) Say it once more.

Chapter 187

What a Day

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell what went wrong: something smashed, a fall, a regret, how things were then and how it ended.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 187: I can tell what went wrong: something smashed, a fall, a regret, how things were then and how it ended.

187.1 dǎpò — to break; to smash

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a bottle, then the Mandarin for a drawer.

You'll want to know: dǎpò

dǎpò — "to break; to smash".

> zuótiān wǒ dǎpò le yí ge bēizi — Yesterday I broke a glass.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎpò is built from 扌丁 'to strike' and pò 'to break', both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and phaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), though dǎ is not the sound taengX would regularly give.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎpò
- Say it: dǎpò, once more
- Say it: zuótiān wǒ dǎpò le yí ge bēizi — Yesterday I broke a glass.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a bottle, then the Mandarin for a drawer, then say dǎpò again

Before you move on

What does dǎpò mean? ("To break; to smash".) Say it once more.

187.2 shuāi — to have a fall; to drop (and break)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a drawer, then the Mandarin for to smash.

You'll want to know: shuāi

shuāi — "to have a fall; to drop (and break)".

tā shuāi le shǒu hěn téng — He had a fall, and his hand really hurts.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shuāi No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: shuāi
- Say it: shuāi, once more
- Say it: tā shuāi le shǒu hěn téng — He had a fall, and his hand really hurts.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a drawer, then the Mandarin for to smash, then say shuāi again

Before you move on

What does shuāi mean? ("To have a fall; to drop (and break)".) Say it once more.

187.3 hòuhuǐ — to regret

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to smash, then the Mandarin for to have a fall.

You'll want to know: hòuhuǐ

hòuhuǐ — "to regret".

> wǒ hěn hòuhuǐ zuótiān méi qù wǎnhuì — I really regret not going to the party yesterday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hòuhuǐ is built from 后 'after' and huǐ 'to repent', both inherited from Middle Chinese, huwX and xwojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to repent and change'; today's third tone goes with its other reading, xwojX. To repent afterwards.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: hòuhuǐ
- Say it: hòuhuǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒ hěn hòuhuǐ zuótiān méi qù wǎnhuì — I really regret not going to the party yesterday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to smash, then the Mandarin for to have a fall, then say hòuhuǐ again

Before you move on

What does hòuhuǐ mean? ("To regret".) Say it once more.

187.4 dāngshí — at that time; then

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have a fall, then the Mandarin for to regret.

You'll want to know: dāngshí

dāngshí — "at that time; then".

dāngshí wǒ bú zài jiā — I wasn't at home at the time.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dāngshí is built from dāng and 时 'time', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tang and dzyi (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to match' and 'to meet with': the time it met with.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: dāngshí
- Say it: dāngshí, once more
- Say it: dāngshí wǒ bú zài jiā — I wasn't at home at the time.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have a fall, then the Mandarin for to regret, then say dāngshí again

Before you move on

What does dāngshí mean? ("At that time; then".) Say it once more.

187.5 jiéguǒ — in the end; as a result; a result

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to regret, then the Mandarin for at that time.

You'll want to know: jiéguǒ jiéguǒ — "in the end; as a result; a result".

wǒmen děng le yí ge xiǎoshí jiéguǒ tā méi lái — We waited an hour, and in the end he didn't come.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiéguǒ is built from jié 'to tie' and guǒ 'fruit', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ket and kwaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): to set fruit, and so an outcome. The step to 'in the end' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: jiéguǒ
- Say it: jiéguǒ, once more
- Say it: wǒmen děng le yí ge xiǎoshí jiéguǒ tā méi lái — We waited an hour, and in the end he didn't come.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to regret, then the Mandarin for at that time, then say jiéguǒ again

Before you move on

What does jiéguǒ mean? ("In the end; as a result; a result".) Say it once more.

187.6 Looking back: from Eating Out to What a Day

Say the Mandarin for a restaurant and a cold starter.

Your turn

- Say it: a restaurant, a cold starter, a snack, home cooking, a boxed meal
- Say it: to go out of here, to come inside, to finish work, to lock up, to lie down
- Say it: to go on holiday, to decide, to look round a place, one's home town, to relax
- Say it: for ages, before (a time), after (a time), morning and evening, more often than not
- Say it: scissors, a rubbish bin, a plastic bag, a bottle, a drawer
- Say it: to smash, to have a fall, to regret, at that time, in the end
- Read it: 冷 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

A restaurant? (fànguǎn.) A cold starter? (冷菜, lěngcài.) A snack? (小吃, xiǎochī.) Home cooking? (家常菜, jiāchángcài.) A boxed meal? (héfàn.) To go out of here? (出去, chūqù.) To come inside? (进来, jìnlái.) To finish work? (xiàbān.) To lock up? (suǒmén.) To lie down? (tǎng.) To go on holiday? (dùjià.) To decide? (juédìng.) To look round a place? (cānguān.) One's home town? (lǎojiā.) To relax? (fàngsōng.) For ages? (hǎojiǔ.) Before (a time)? (zhīqián.) After (a time)? (zhīhòu.) Morning and evening? (早晚, zǎowǎn.) More often than not? (wǎngwǎng.) Scissors? (jiǎndāo.) A rubbish bin? (lājītǒng.) A plastic bag? (sùliàodài.) A bottle? (píngzi.) A drawer? (chōuti.) To smash? (dǎpò.) To have a fall? (shuāi.) To regret? (hòuhuǐ.) At that time? (dāngshí.) In the end? (jiéguǒ.)

187.7 What a Day — once more

Say the Mandarin for to smash and to have a fall.

Your turn

- Say it: to smash, to have a fall, to regret, at that time, in the end

Before you move on

To smash? (dǎpò.) To have a fall? (shuāi.) To regret? (hòuhuǐ.) At that time? (dāngshí.) In the end? (jiéguǒ.)

Chapter 188

Money to Spend

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say someone is well off, spend money or spend less, ask for change and say it is enough.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 188: I can say someone is well off, spend money or spend less, ask for change and say it is enough.

188.1 有钱 (yǒuqián) — rich; well-off

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for at that time, then the Mandarin for in the end.

You'll want to know: 有钱

有钱 — yǒuqián — "rich; well-off".

> 他很有钱 tā hěn yǒuqián — He's very well off.

The new character, in pieces: 钱 — ten strokes in two pieces: on the left the metal piece, five strokes; on the right two short bars, a long slanting hook, a stroke falling to the left across it, and a dot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 有钱 (yǒuqián) is built from 有 'to have' and 钱 'money', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuwX and dzjen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary explains the second, after an older commentary, as money named after a spring, because it flows everywhere.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: yǒuqián
- Say it: yǒuqián, once more
- Say it: tā hěn yǒuqián — He's very well off.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for at that time, then the Mandarin for in the end, then say yǒuqián again

Before you move on

What does 有钱 mean? ("Rich; well-off".) Say it once more.

188.2 钱 — the metal piece, then two bars and a hook

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say yǒuqián — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  有 多

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — yǒu, duō

Script — the metal piece, then two bars and a hook

How 钱 is written, stroke by stroke

钱

Two pieces, left before right. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The left piece, the metal piece, five strokes. A long stroke falling to the left, two short bars, a short bar rising to the right, then a vertical that turns up to the right at its foot.

The right piece, five strokes. Two short bars, one over the other. A long slanting hook from the top down to the lower right, flicking up at its foot. A stroke falling to the left across it. Then a dot at the top right.

5 + 5 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 钱, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 钱? (Ten.) What is the left piece? (The metal piece, five strokes.) What comes last? (The dot at the top right.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 钱, pinned stroke paths and medians.

188.3 huāqián — to spend money

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for in the end, then the Mandarin for well-off.

You'll want to know: huāqián

huāqián — "to spend money".

wǒ mèimei hěn huì huāqián — My little sister really knows how to spend money.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huāqián is built from huā, the word for a flower, here 'to spend', and 钱 'money'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese dzjen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary lists the first only as a flower, so how it came to mean spending is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: huāqián
- Say it: huāqián, once more
- Say it: wǒ mèimei hěn huì huāqián — My little sister really knows how to spend money.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for in the end, then the Mandarin for well-off, then say huāqián again

Before you move on

What does huāqián mean? ("To spend money".) Say it once more.

188.4 língqián — small change; loose coins

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for well-off, then the Mandarin for to spend money.

You'll want to know: língqián

língqián — "small change; loose coins".

nǐ yǒu língqián ma — Have you got any change?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of língqián is built from líng 'zero' and 钱 'money', both inherited from Middle Chinese, leng and dzjen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to fall' and 'a light rain'; the sense of small odd amounts is not given there, so how the pair came to mean change is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: língqián
- Say it: língqián, once more
- Say it: nǐ yǒu língqián ma — Have you got any change?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for well-off, then the Mandarin for to spend money, then say língqián again

Before you move on

What does língqián mean? ("Small change; loose coins".) Say it once more.

188.5 shěngqián — to spend less; to save money

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to spend money, then the Mandarin for small change.

You'll want to know: shěngqián

shěngqián — "to spend less; to save money".

wǒ xiǎng shěngqián suǒyǐ bú qù fàndiàn — I want to save money, so I'm not going to restaurants.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shěngqián is built from shěng and 钱 'money', both inherited from Middle Chinese, srjaengX and dzjen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as a government office; the sense 'to use less' is not given there, so how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: shěngqián
- Say it: shěngqián, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng shěngqián suǒyǐ bú qù fàndiàn — I want to save money, so I'm not going to restaurants.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to spend money, then the Mandarin for small change, then say shěngqián again

Before you move on

What does shěngqián mean? ("To spend less; to save money".) Say it once more.

188.6 gòu — enough

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for small change, then the Mandarin for to spend less.

You'll want to know: gòu

gòu — "enough".

wǒ de qián bú gòu — I haven't got enough money.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gòu is inherited from Middle Chinese kuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'many'. The dictionary lists it with a level tone only, so the falling tone of gòu is not the regular outcome, and how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: gòu
- Say it: gòu, once more
- Say it: wǒ de qián bú gòu — I haven't got enough money.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for small change, then the Mandarin for to spend less, then say gòu again

Before you move on

What does gòu mean? ("Enough".) Say it once more.

Chapter 189

Forms and Dates

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say the date, ask for a form, fill it in, sign it and show my identity card.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 189: I can say the date, ask for a form, fill it in, sign it and show my identity card.

189.1 号 (hào) — day of the month; number (in a series)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to spend less, then the Mandarin for enough.

You'll want to know: 号

号 — hào — "day of the month; number (in a series)".

> 今天是十月五号 jīntiān shì shíyuè wǔ hào — Today is the fifth of October.

The new character, in pieces: 号 — five strokes: 口 on top, then a long bar, and under it a stroke that goes down, turns right, turns down again and hooks to the left. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 号 (hào) is inherited from Middle Chinese hawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to call', 'a command' and 'a title'. Numbering days and things is not given there, so how it came to that sense is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: hào
- Say it: hào, once more
- Say it: jīntiān shì shíyuè wǔ hào — Today is the fifth of October.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to spend less, then the Mandarin for enough, then say hào again

Before you move on

What does 号 mean? ("Day of the month; number (in a series)".) Say it once more.

189.2 号 — 口 on top, then a bar and a hook

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say hào — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

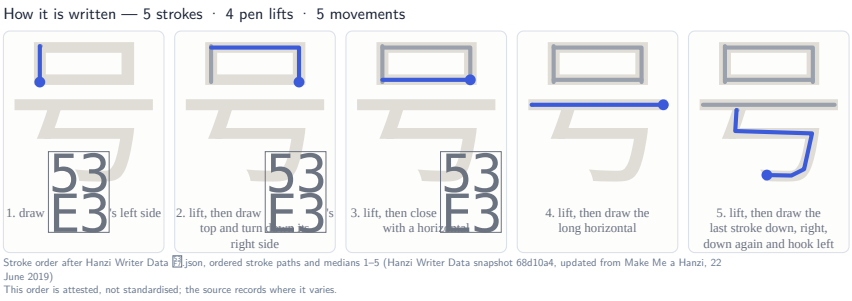
月 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — yuè, kǒu

Script — 口 on top, then a bar and a hook



How 号 is written, stroke by stroke

号

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The top piece, 口, three strokes, the same three as in 叫 and 吃: a short vertical, a stroke that runs right and turns down, then the bar that closes the foot.

The bottom piece, two strokes. A long bar across the middle, wider than 口. Then, from under the bar, a short stroke down that turns right, turns down again and hooks to the left at its foot.

3 + 2 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 号, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 号? (Five.) Which piece comes first? (口, on top.) Where does the last stroke hook? (To the left, at its foot.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 号, pinned stroke paths and medians.

189.3 biǎogé — a form to fill in

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for enough, then the Mandarin for day of the month.

You'll want to know: biǎogé

biǎogé — "a form to fill in".

> qǐng gěi wǒ yì zhāng biǎogé — Could I have a form, please?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of biǎogé is built from biǎo and gé, both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjewX and kaek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to make clear' and the second 'a pattern' and 'a measure'; how the pair came to mean a form to fill in is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: biǎogé
- Say it: biǎogé, once more
- Say it: qǐng gěi wǒ yì zhāng biǎogé — Could I have a form, please?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for enough, then the Mandarin for day of the month, then say biǎogé again

Before you move on

What does biǎogé mean? ("A form to fill in".) Say it once more.

189.4 tiánxiě — to fill in (a form)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for day of the month, then the Mandarin for a form to fill in.

You'll want to know: tiánxiě

tiánxiě — "to fill in (a form)".

> qǐng tiánxiě zhè zhāng biǎogé — Please fill in this form.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tiánxiě is built from tián 'to fill up' and xiě 'to write', both inherited from Middle Chinese, den and sjaeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to stop up' and 'full', and the second, among other senses, 'to copy out a book'.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: tiánxiě
- Say it: tiánxiě, once more
- Say it: qǐng tiánxiě zhè zhāng biǎogé — Please fill in this form.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for day of the month, then the Mandarin for a form to fill in, then say tiánxiě again

Before you move on

What does tiánxiě mean? ("To fill in (a form)".) Say it once more.

189.5 qiānmíng — to sign your name

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a form to fill in, then the Mandarin for to fill in.

You'll want to know: qiānmíng

qiānmíng — "to sign your name".

nǐ qiānmíng le ma — Have you signed it?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qiānmíng is built from qiān 'to sign' and míng 'a name'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese mjieng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: qiānmíng
- Say it: qiānmíng, once more
- Say it: nǐ qiānmíng le ma — Have you signed it?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a form to fill in, then the Mandarin for to fill in, then say qiānmíng again

Before you move on

What does qiānmíng mean? ("To sign your name".) Say it once more.

189.6 shēnfènzhèng — identity card

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to fill in, then the Mandarin for to sign your name.

You'll want to know: shēnfènzhèng

shēnfènzhèng — "identity card".

> nǐ dài shēnfènzhèng le ma — Have you brought your ID card?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shēnfènzhèng is built from shēn 'oneself', fèn 'a share, a standing' and zhèng 'proof'. The first and the last are inherited from Middle Chinese, syin and tsyingH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'oneself' and 'to verify'; the dictionary gives the middle character another sound and sense, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: shēnfènzhèng
- Say it: shēnfènzhèng, once more
- Say it: nǐ dài shēnfènzhèng le ma — Have you brought your ID card?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to fill in, then the Mandarin for to sign your name, then say shēnfènzhèng again

Before you move on

What does shēnfènzhèng mean? ("Identity card".) Say it once more.

Chapter 190

Shops in Town

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the bookshop, the chemist's, the shopping centre, the cinema and the museum.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 190: I can name the bookshop, the chemist's, the shopping centre, the cinema and the museum.

190.1 书店 (shūdiàn) — bookshop

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sign your name, then the Mandarin for identity card.

You'll want to know: 书店

书店 — shūdiàn — "bookshop".

> 这儿的书店很大 zhèr de shūdiàn hěn dà — The bookshops here are big.

The new character, in pieces: 店 — eight strokes: a roof of a dot, a bar and a long stroke falling to the left, and under it a vertical with a short stroke to its right, over 口. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 书店 (shūdiàn) is built from 书 'book' and 店 'shop', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syo and temH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary explains the second, after an older book, as a place where goods are set out for sale.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: shūdiàn
- Say it: shūdiàn, once more
- Say it: zhèr de shūdiàn hěn dà — The bookshops here are big.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sign your name, then the Mandarin for identity card, then say shūdiàn again

Before you move on

What does 书店 mean? ("Bookshop".) Say it once more.

190.2 店 — a roof over a small piece and 口

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shūdiàn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  书 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shū, kǒu

Script — a roof over a small piece and 口

How 店 is written, stroke by stroke

店

Three pieces: a roof, and under it a small piece over 口.

The roof, three strokes. A dot at the top, a bar across, then a long stroke from the left end of the bar, falling down to the left all the way to the foot.

The small piece, two strokes. A vertical under the roof, then a short stroke from its middle out to the right.

口, three strokes: a short vertical, a stroke that runs right and turns down, then the bar that closes the foot.

3 + 2 + 3 = eight.

Your turn

- Write it: 店, all eight, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 店? (Eight.) Which stroke falls all the way to the foot? (The third, the long one on the left.) What closes

the character? (The foot bar of 口.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 店, pinned stroke paths and medians.

190.3 yàodiàn — chemist's; pharmacy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for identity card, then the Mandarin for bookshop.

You'll want to know: yàodiàn

yàodiàn — "chemist's; pharmacy".

yàodiàn jǐ diǎn kāimén — What time does the chemist's open?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yàodiàn is built from yào 'medicine' and 店 'shop', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yak and temH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first as a herb that cures illness.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: yàodiàn
- Say it: yàodiàn, once more
- Say it: yàodiàn jǐ diǎn kāimén — What time does the chemist's open?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for identity card, then the Mandarin for bookshop, then say yàodiàn again

Before you move on

What does yàodiàn mean? ("Chemist's; pharmacy".) Say it once more.

190.4 shāngchǎng — shopping centre

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bookshop, then the Mandarin for chemist's.

You'll want to know: shāngchǎng

shāngchǎng — "shopping centre".

zhōumò de shāngchǎng hěn rènao — The shopping centre is busy at the weekend.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shāngchǎng is built from shāng 'trade' and chǎng 'an open ground', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syang and drjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second as a cleared ground for threshing grain, with a level tone, so the rising tone of chǎng is not the regular outcome; the sense 'trade' for the first is not given there either, so how both came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: shāngchǎng
- Say it: shāngchǎng, once more
- Say it: zhōumò de shāngchǎng hěn rènao — The shopping centre is busy at the weekend.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bookshop, then the Mandarin for chemist's, then say shāngchǎng again

Before you move on

What does shāngchǎng mean? ("Shopping centre".) Say it once more.

190.5 diànyǐngyuàn — cinema

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for chemist's, then the Mandarin for shopping centre.

You'll want to know: diànyǐngyuàn

diànyǐngyuàn — "cinema".

diànyǐngyuàn zài shāngchǎng lǐ — The cinema is inside the shopping centre.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of diànyǐngyuàn is built from diànyǐng 'film' and yuàn 'a walled courtyard', the yuàn of yīyuàn; all three parts are inherited from Middle Chinese, denH, 'jaengX and hjwenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: diànyǐngyuàn
- Say it: diànyǐngyuàn, once more
- Say it: diànyǐngyuàn zài shāngchǎng lǐ — The cinema is inside the shopping centre.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for chemist's, then the Mandarin for shopping centre, then say diànyǐngyuàn again

Before you move on

What does diànyǐngyuàn mean? (“Cinema”.) Say it once more.

190.6 bówùguǎn — museum

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for shopping centre, then the Mandarin for cinema.

You’ll want to know: bówùguǎn

bówùguǎn — “museum”.

bówùguǎn jīntiān bù kāimén — The museum is closed today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bówùguǎn is built from bó ’broad’, wù ’a thing’ and guǎn ’a lodging, a hall’, all inherited from Middle Chinese, pak, mjut and kwanH (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription): a hall of all kinds of things.

What you’ve built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: bówùguǎn
- Say it: bówùguǎn, once more
- Say it: bówùguǎn jīntiān bù kāimén — The museum is closed today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for shopping centre, then the Mandarin for cinema, then say bówùguǎn again

Before you move on

What does bówùguǎn mean? (“Museum”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 191

Back Next Month

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say when I will come back or go back, go home from abroad, go abroad or go away for work.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 191: I can say when I will come back or go back, go home from abroad, go abroad or go away for work.

191.1 回来 (huílái) — to come back

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for cinema, then the Mandarin for museum.

You'll want to know: 回来

回来 — huílái — "to come back".

> 我下个月五号回来 wǒ xià ge yuè wǔ hào huílái — I'll be back on the fifth of next month.

The new character, in pieces: 回 — six strokes: a large frame, a small 口 inside it, and the bar that closes the large frame last. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 回来 (huílái) is built from 回 'to turn back' and 来 'to come', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hwoj and loj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to turn round'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: huílái
- Say it: huílái, once more
- Say it: wǒ xià ge yuè wǔ hào huílái — I'll be back on the fifth of next month.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for cinema, then the Mandarin for museum, then say huílái again

Before you move on

What does 回来 mean? ("To come back".) Say it once more.

191.2 回 — 口 inside a larger frame

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say huílái — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

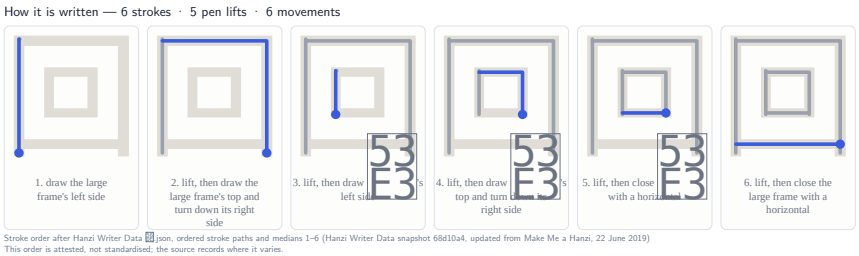
  国 来

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — guó, lái

Script — 口 inside a larger frame



How 回 is written, stroke by stroke

回

Two pieces: a large frame, and 口 inside it. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The frame, first two strokes. A vertical down the left side, then a stroke along the top that turns down the right side.

口 inside, three strokes: a short vertical, a stroke that runs right and turns down, and the bar that closes it.

Last, the frame's foot. One bar along the bottom closes the large frame, the way the last stroke of 国 does.

2 + 3 + 1 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 回, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 回? (Six.) What goes inside the frame? (口.) Which stroke comes last? (The bar that closes the large frame.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 回, pinned stroke paths and medians.

191.3 回去 (huíqù) — to go back there

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for museum, then the Mandarin for to come back.

You'll want to know: 回去

回去 — huíqù — "to go back there".

我不想回去 wǒ bù xiǎng huíqù — I don't want to go back.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 回去 (huíqù) is built from 回 'to turn back' and 去 'to go', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hwoj and khjoH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to leave'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: huíqù
- Say it: huíqù, once more
- Say it: wǒ bù xiǎng huíqù — I don't want to go back.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for museum, then the Mandarin for to come back, then say huíqù again

Before you move on

What does 回去 mean? ("To go back there".) Say it once more.

191.4 回国 (huíguó) — to go home from abroad; to return to one's own country

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to come back, then the Mandarin for to go back there.

You'll want to know: 回国

回国 — huíguó — "to go home from abroad; to return to one's own country".

他下星期回国 tā xià xīngqī huíguó — He's going back to his own country next week.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 回国 (huíguó) is built from 回 'to turn back' and 国 'country', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hwoj and kwok (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: huíguó
- Say it: huíguó, once more
- Say it: tā xià xīngqī huíguó — He's going back to his own country next week.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to come back, then the Mandarin for to go back there, then say huíguó again

Before you move on

What does 回国 mean? ("To go home from abroad; to return to one's own country".) Say it once more.

191.5 出国 (chūguó) — to go abroad

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go back there, then the Mandarin for to go home from abroad.

You'll want to know: 出国

出国 — chūguó — "to go abroad".

我明年要出国 wǒ míngnián yào chūguó — I'm going abroad next year.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 出国 (chūguó) is built from 出 'to go out' and 国 'country', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwit and kwok (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: chūguó
- Say it: chūguó, once more
- Say it: wǒ míngnián yào chūguó — I'm going abroad next year.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go back there, then the Mandarin for to go home from abroad, then say chūguó again

Before you move on

What does 出国 mean? ("To go abroad".) Say it once more.

191.6 chūchāi — to travel for work; to go on a business trip

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go home from abroad, then the Mandarin for to go abroad.

You'll want to know: chūchāi chūchāi — "to travel for work; to go on a business trip".

bàba hòutiān yào chūchāi — Dad is going away on business the day after tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chūchāi is built from 出 'to go out' and chāi 'an errand'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese tsyhwit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary lists the second under several readings, glossed 'uneven' and 'to choose', and gives no errand, so how the word came to mean a work trip is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: chūchāi
- Say it: chūchāi, once more
- Say it: bàba hòutiān yào chūchāi — Dad is going away on business the day after tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go home from abroad, then the Mandarin for to go abroad, then say chūchāi again

Before you move on

What does chūchāi mean? ("To travel for work; to go on a business trip".) Say it once more.

Chapter 192

Signs in a Building

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for the toilets, the lift and the car park, queue, and say when a place is open.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 192: I can ask for the toilets, the lift and the car park, queue, and say when a place is open.

192.1 cèsuǒ — toilet; lavatory

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go abroad, then the Mandarin for to travel for work.

You'll want to know: cèsuǒ

cèsuǒ — "toilet; lavatory".

> qǐngwèn cèsuǒ zài nǎr — Excuse me, where's the toilet?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cèsuǒ is built from cè 'a privy' and suǒ 'a place', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsrhiH and srjoX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The modern cè is not the regular outcome of that form, and how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: cèsuǒ
- Say it: cèsuǒ, once more
- Say it: qǐngwèn cèsuǒ zài nǎr — Excuse me, where's the toilet?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go abroad, then the Mandarin for to travel for work, then say cèsuǒ again

Before you move on

What does cèsuǒ mean? ("Toilet; lavatory".) Say it once more.

192.2 diàntī — lift; elevator

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to travel for work, then the Mandarin for lavatory.

You'll want to know: diàntī

diàntī — "lift; elevator".

diàntī huài le — The lift is out of order.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of diàntī is built from 电 'electricity' and tī 'a ladder', the tī of lóutī, both inherited from Middle Chinese, denH and thej (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second as wooden steps.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: diàntī
- Say it: diàntī, once more
- Say it: diàntī huài le — The lift is out of order.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to travel for work, then the Mandarin for lavatory, then say diàntī again

Before you move on

What does diàntī mean? ("Lift; elevator".) Say it once more.

192.3 tíngchēchǎng — car park

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for lavatory, then the Mandarin for lift (in a building).

You'll want to know: tíngchēchǎng

tíngchēchǎng — "car park".

shāngchǎng xiàbian yǒu yí ge tíngchēchǎng — There's a car park under the shopping centre.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tíngchēchǎng is built from tíng 'to stop', 车 'vehicle' and chǎng 'an open ground', all inherited from Middle Chinese, deng, tsyhae and drjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: tíngchēchǎng
- Say it: tíngchēchǎng, once more
- Say it: shāngchǎng xiàbian yǒu yí ge tíngchēchǎng — There's a car park under the shopping centre.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for lavatory, then the Mandarin for lift (in a building), then say tíngchēchǎng again

Before you move on

What does tíngchēchǎng mean? ("Car park".) Say it once more.

192.4 páiduì — to queue; to line up

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for lift (in a building), then the Mandarin for car park.

You'll want to know: páiduì

páiduì — "to queue; to line up".

dàjiā dōu zài páiduì — Everyone is queuing.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of páiduì is built from pái 'to set in a row' and duì 'a file of people'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese dwojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a troop'; the dictionary glosses the first 'to push aside', so how it came to mean lining up is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: páiduì
- Say it: páiduì, once more
- Say it: dàjiā dōu zài páiduì — Everyone is queuing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for lift (in a building), then the Mandarin for car park, then say páiduì again

Before you move on

What does páiduì mean? ("To queue; to line up".) Say it once more.

192.5 kāifàng — to be open to the public

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for car park, then the Mandarin for to queue.

You'll want to know: kāifàng

kāifàng — "to be open to the public".

gōngyuán wǎnshang bù kāifàng — The park isn't open at night.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kāifàng is built from 开 'to open' and fàng 'to let go', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khoj and pjangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: kāifàng
- Say it: kāifàng, once more

- Say it: gōngyuán wǎnshang bù kāifàng — The park isn't open at night.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for car park, then the Mandarin for to queue, then say kāifàng again

Before you move on

What does kāifàng mean? ("To be open to the public".) Say it once more.

Chapter 193

Prices Up and Down

Modes: voice (6) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about special offers, prices going up and down, haggling and quality.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 193: I can talk about special offers, prices going up and down, haggling and quality.

193.1 tèjià — special offer; reduced price

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to queue, then the Mandarin for to be open to the public.

You'll want to know: tèjià

tèjià — "special offer; reduced price".

> jīntiān shuǐguǒ tèjià — Fruit is on special offer today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tèjià is built from tè 'special' and jià 'price', the jià of jiàqián, both inherited from Middle Chinese, dok and kaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'a bull' and 'alone'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: tèjià
- Say it: tèjià, once more
- Say it: jīntiān shuǐguǒ tèjià — Fruit is on special offer today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to queue, then the Mandarin for to be open to the public, then say tèjià again

Before you move on

What does tèjià mean? ("Special offer; reduced price".) Say it once more.

193.2 jiàngjià — to get cheaper; to come down in price

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be open to the public, then the Mandarin for special offer.

You'll want to know: jiàngjià

jiàngjià — "to get cheaper; to come down in price".

diànnǎo jiàngjià le — Computers have got cheaper.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiàngjià is built from jiàng 'to come down' and jià 'price', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kaewngH and kaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to go down' and 'to fall'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: jiàngjià
- Say it: jiàngjià, once more
- Say it: diànnǎo jiàngjià le — Computers have got cheaper.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be open to the public, then the Mandarin for special offer, then say jiàngjià again

Before you move on

What does jiàngjià mean? ("To get cheaper; to come down in price".) Say it once more.

193.3 zhǎngjià — to get dearer; to go up in price

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for special offer, then the Mandarin for to get cheaper.

You'll want to know: zhǎngjià

zhǎngjià — "to get dearer; to go up in price".

niúnǎi zhǎngjià le — Milk has gone up.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhǎngjià is built from zhǎng 'to rise' and jià 'price'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese kaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as water in flood, with a level and a departing tone only, so the rising tone of zhǎng is not the regular outcome, and its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǎngjià
- Say it: zhǎngjià, once more
- Say it: niúnǎi zhǎngjià le — Milk has gone up.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for special offer, then the Mandarin for to get cheaper, then say zhǎngjià again

Before you move on

What does zhǎngjià mean? ("To get dearer; to go up in price".) Say it once more.

193.4 jiǎngjià — to haggle

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get cheaper, then the Mandarin for to get dearer.

You'll want to know: jiǎngjià

jiǎngjià — "to haggle".

zhèr néng jiǎngjià ma — Can you haggle here?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiǎngjià is built from jiǎng 'to talk over' and jià 'price', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kaewngX and kaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to tell' and 'to discuss': to talk the price over.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: jiǎngjià
- Say it: jiǎngjià, once more
- Say it: zhèr néng jiǎngjià ma — Can you haggle here?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get cheaper, then the Mandarin for to get dearer, then say jiǎngjià again

Before you move on

What does jiǎngjià mean? ("To haggle".) Say it once more.

193.5 zhìliàng — quality

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get dearer, then the Mandarin for to haggle.

You'll want to know: zhìliàng

zhìliàng — "quality".

zhège hěn piányi zhìliàng yě hěn hǎo — It's cheap, and the quality is good too.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhìliàng is built from zhì 'substance' and liàng 'a measure', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyit and ljangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'plain' and 'true', and the second as measuring grain.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: zhìliàng
- Say it: zhìliàng, once more
- Say it: zhège hěn piányi zhìliàng yě hěn hǎo — It's cheap, and the quality is good too.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get dearer, then the Mandarin for to haggle, then say zhìliàng again

Before you move on

What does zhìliàng mean? ("Quality".) Say it once more.

193.6 Looking back: from Money to Spend to Prices Up and Down

Say the Mandarin for well-off and to spend money.

Your turn

- Say it: well-off, to spend money, small change, to spend less, enough
- Say it: day of the month, a form to fill in, to fill in, to sign your name, identity card
- Say it: bookshop, chemist's, shopping centre, cinema, museum
- Say it: to come back, to go back there, to go home from abroad, to go abroad, to travel for work
- Say it: lavatory, lift (in a building), car park, to queue, to be open to the public
- Say it: special offer, to get cheaper, to get dearer, to haggle, quality
- Read it: 钱 号 店 回 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

Well-off? (有钱, yǒuqián.) To spend money? (huāqián.) Small change? (língqián.) To spend less? (shěngqián.) Enough? (gòu.) Day of the month? (号, hào.) A form to fill in? (biǎogé.) To fill in? (tiánxiě.) To sign your name? (qiānmíng.) Identity card? (shēnfènzhèng.) Bookshop? (书店, shūdiàn.) Chemist's? (yàodiàn.) Shopping centre? (shāngchǎng.) Cinema? (diànyǐngyuàn.) Museum? (bówùguǎn.) To come back? (回来, huílái.) To go back there? (回去, huíqù.) To go home from abroad? (回国, huíguó.) To go abroad? (出国, chūguó.) To travel for work? (chūchāi.) Lavatory? (cèsuǒ.) Lift (in a building)? (diàntī.) Car park? (tíngchēchǎng.) To queue? (páiduì.) To be open to the public? (kāifàng.) Special offer? (tèjià.) To get cheaper? (jiàngjià.) To get dearer? (zhǎngjià.) To haggle? (jiǎngjià.) Quality? (zhìliàng.)

Chapter 194

Roads and Crossings

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about roads, going on foot, zebra crossings, squares and traffic lights.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 194: I can talk about roads, going on foot, zebra crossings, squares and traffic lights.

194.1 马路 (mǎlù) — road; a street for traffic

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to haggle, then the Mandarin for quality.

You'll want to know: 马路

马路 — mǎlù — "road; a street for traffic".

> 我家在马路对面 wǒ jiā zài mǎlù duìmiàn — My home is across the road.

The new character, in pieces: 路 — thirteen strokes in two halves: on the left the foot piece, 口 over four short strokes; on the right a short fall, a bar that turns and falls to the left, a long stroke falling to the right, and 口 under them. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 马路 (mǎlù) is built from 马 'horse' and 路 'road', both inherited from Middle Chinese, maeX and luH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). Why a road for traffic is named after horses is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: mǎlù
- Say it: mǎlù, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā zài mǎlù duìmiàn — My home is across the road.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to haggle, then the Mandarin for quality, then say mǎlù again

Before you move on

What does 马路 mean? ("Road; a street for traffic".) Say it once more.

194.2 路 — the foot piece, then three strokes over 口

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say mǎlù — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  马 口

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — mǎ, kǒu

Script — the foot piece, then three strokes over 口

How 路 is written, stroke by stroke

路

Two halves, left before right, and each has 口 in it.

The left half, the foot piece, seven strokes. 口 at the top, narrow. Under it a short vertical, a short bar from its middle to the right, a short vertical on the left, and a stroke along the foot that rises to the right.

The right half, six strokes. A short stroke falling to the left. A bar that turns and falls down to the left. A long stroke falling down to the right. Then 口 underneath.

7 + 6 = thirteen.

Your turn

- Write it: 路, all thirteen, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 路? (Thirteen.) Where is 口 in the left half? (At the top.) And in the right half? (At the bottom.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 路, pinned stroke paths and medians.

194.3 zǒulù — to walk; to go on foot

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for quality, then the Mandarin for a street for traffic.

You'll want to know: zǒulù

zǒulù — "to walk; to go on foot".

wǒ měitiān zǒulù qù shàngbān — I walk to work every day.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zǒulù is built from zǒu and 路 'road', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsuwX and luH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to hurry'; in Mandarin it has come to mean walking.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: zǒulù
- Say it: zǒulù, once more
- Say it: wǒ měitiān zǒulù qù shàngbān — I walk to work every day.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for quality, then the Mandarin for a street for traffic, then say zǒulù again

Before you move on

What does zǒulù mean? ("To walk; to go on foot".) Say it once more.

194.4 bānmǎxiàn — zebra crossing; pedestrian crossing

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a street for traffic, then the Mandarin for to go on foot.

You'll want to know: bānmǎxiàn

bānmǎxiàn — "zebra crossing; pedestrian crossing".

zhèr méiyǒu bānmǎxiàn — There's no zebra crossing here.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bānmǎxiàn is built from bānmǎ 'zebra', literally a mottled horse, and xiàn 'a line'. 马 and xiàn are inherited from Middle Chinese, maeX and sjenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary lists bān as paen, glossed 'mottled' and 'patterned': a crossing striped like a zebra.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: bānmǎxiàn
- Say it: bānmǎxiàn, once more
- Say it: zhèr méiyǒu bānmǎxiàn — There's no zebra crossing here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a street for traffic, then the Mandarin for to go on foot, then say bānmǎxiàn again

Before you move on

What does bānmǎxiàn mean? (“Zebra crossing; pedestrian crossing”.) Say it once more.

194.5 guǎngchǎng — public square

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go on foot, then the Mandarin for zebra crossing.

You’ll want to know: guǎngchǎng

guǎngchǎng — “public square”.

huǒchēzhàn qiánbian yǒu yí ge guǎngchǎng — There’s a square in front of the station.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: guǎng is said with a rising tone before chǎng, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guǎngchǎng is built from guǎng ’wide’ and chǎng ’an open ground’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kwangX and drjang (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), which glosses the first ’big’ and ’broad’.

What you’ve built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: guǎngchǎng
- Say it: guǎngchǎng, once more
- Say it: huǒchēzhàn qiánbian yǒu yí ge guǎngchǎng — There’s a square in front of the station.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go on foot, then the Mandarin for zebra crossing, then say guǎngchǎng again

Before you move on

What does guǎngchǎng mean? (“Public square”.) Say it once more.

194.6 hónglǜdēng — traffic lights

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for zebra crossing, then the Mandarin for public square.

You’ll want to know: hónglǜdēng

hónglǜdēng — “traffic lights”.

lùkǒu yǒu hónglǜdēng hé bānmǎxiàn — There are traffic lights and a zebra crossing at the junction.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hónglǜdēng is built from hóng ’red’, lǜ ’green’ and dēng ’a lamp’, all inherited from Middle Chinese, huwng, ljowk and tong (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription).

What you’ve built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: hónglǜdēng
- Say it: hónglǜdēng, once more
- Say it: lùkǒu yǒu hónglǜdēng hé bānmǎxiàn — There are traffic lights and a zebra crossing at the junction.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for zebra crossing, then the Mandarin for public square, then say hónglǜdēng again

Before you move on

What does hónglǜdēng mean? (“Traffic lights”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 195

At the Bank

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can put money in and take it out, and talk about cards, PINs and bank accounts.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 195: I can put money in and take it out, and talk about cards, PINs and bank accounts.

195.1 cúnqián — to put money by; to put money in the bank

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for public square, then the Mandarin for traffic lights.

You'll want to know: cúnqián

cúnqián — "to put money by; to put money in the bank".

> wǒ měi ge yuè dōu cúnqián — I put money aside every month.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cúnqián is built from cún 'to keep' and 钱 'money', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzwon and dzjen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to be present' and 'to care for'; putting money away is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: cúnqián
- Say it: cúnqián, once more
- Say it: wǒ měi ge yuè dōu cúnqián — I put money aside every month.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for public square, then the Mandarin for traffic lights, then say cúnqián again

Before you move on

What does cúnqián mean? ("To put money by; to put money in the bank".) Say it once more.

195.2 qǔqián — to take out money

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for traffic lights, then the Mandarin for to put money by.

You'll want to know: qǔqián

qǔqián — "to take out money".

wǒ yào qù yínháng qǔqián — I'm going to the bank to get some money out.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qǔqián is built from qǔ 'to take' and 钱 'money', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshjuX and dzjen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to gather in' and 'to receive'.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: qǔqián
- Say it: qǔqián, once more
- Say it: wǒ yào qù yínháng qǔqián — I'm going to the bank to get some money out.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for traffic lights, then the Mandarin for to put money by, then say qǔqián again

Before you move on

What does qǔqián mean? ("To take out money".) Say it once more.

195.3 xìnyòngkǎ — credit card

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to put money by, then the Mandarin for to take out money.

You'll want to know: xìnyòngkǎ

xìnyòngkǎ — "credit card".

zhèr kěyǐ yòng xìnyòngkǎ ma — Can I pay by credit card here?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xìnyòngkǎ is built from xìnyòng 'trust, credit' and kǎ 'a card'. The first two parts are inherited from Middle Chinese, sinH and youngH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'true' and 'to use'; kǎ is usually traced to English card.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: xìnyòngkǎ
- Say it: xìnyòngkǎ, once more
- Say it: zhèr kěyǐ yòng xìnyòngkǎ ma — Can I pay by credit card here?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to put money by, then the Mandarin for to take out money, then say xìnyòngkǎ again

Before you move on

What does xìnyòngkǎ mean? ("Credit card".) Say it once more.

195.4 mìmǎ — password; PIN

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to take out money, then the Mandarin for credit card.

You'll want to know: mìmǎ

mìmǎ — "password; PIN".

wǒ wàngle mìmǎ — I've forgotten my PIN.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of mìmǎ is built from mì 'secret' and mǎ 'a numeral', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mit and maeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'a ridge' and 'quiet', and the second as a stone like jade; how they came to mean secret and a number sign is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: mìmǎ
- Say it: mìmǎ, once more
- Say it: wǒ wàngle mìmǎ — I've forgotten my PIN.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to take out money, then the Mandarin for credit card, then say mìmǎ again

Before you move on

What does mìmǎ mean? ("Password; PIN".) Say it once more.

195.5 zhànghù — bank account

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for credit card, then the Mandarin for password.

You'll want to know: zhànghù

zhànghù — "bank account".

nǐ yǒu yínháng zhànghù ma — Do you have a bank account?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhànghù is built from zhàng 'accounts' and hù 'a household'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese huX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed as a door, half of a gate; no dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: zhànghù
- Say it: zhànghù, once more
- Say it: nǐ yǒu yínháng zhànghù ma — Do you have a bank account?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for credit card, then the Mandarin for password, then say zhànghù again

Before you move on

What does zhànghù mean? ("Bank account".) Say it once more.

Chapter 196

Tickets and Flights

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can buy a train ticket and a plane ticket, and say when a flight takes off and when a train arrives.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 196: I can buy a train ticket and a plane ticket, and say when a flight takes off and when a train arrives.

196.1 车票 (chēpiào) — train or bus ticket

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for password, then the Mandarin for bank account.

You'll want to know: 车票

车票 — chēpiào — "train or bus ticket".

> 车票多少钱 chēpiào duōshao qián — How much is the ticket?

The new character, in pieces: 票 — eleven strokes: on top a bar over a frame with two short verticals; under it 二, a hooked vertical and two dots. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 车票 (chēpiào) is built from 车 'vehicle' and 票 'a ticket'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese tsyhae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of the second, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: chēpiào
- Say it: chēpiào, once more
- Say it: chēpiào duōshao qián — How much is the ticket?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for password, then the Mandarin for bank account, then say chēpiào again

Before you move on

What does 车票 mean? ("Train or bus ticket".) Say it once more.

196.2 票 — a framed top over 二 and three strokes

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say chēpiào — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  车 二

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — chē, èr

Script — a framed top over 二 and three strokes

How 票 is written, stroke by stroke

票

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The top piece, six strokes. A bar across the top. Then a frame under it: a short vertical on the left, a stroke along the top that turns down the right side, two short verticals down through the top of the frame, and a bar that closes it.

The bottom piece, five strokes. 二: a short bar, then a longer one. A vertical down the middle that hooks to the left at its foot. A dot falling to the left, then a dot falling to the right.

6 + 5 = eleven.

Your turn

- Write it: 票, all eleven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 票? (Eleven.) What starts the bottom piece? (二.) What sits either side of the hooked vertical? (Two dots.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 票, pinned stroke paths and medians.

196.3 机票 (jīpiào) — plane ticket

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bank account, then the Mandarin for train or bus ticket.

You'll want to know: 机票

机票 — jīpiào — "plane ticket".

我买了十号的机票 wǒ mǎile shí hào de jīpiào — I've bought a plane ticket for the tenth.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 机票 (jīpiào) is built from 机, short for fēijī 'aeroplane', and 票 'a ticket'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese kj+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of 票, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: jīpiào
- Say it: jīpiào, once more
- Say it: wǒ mǎile shí hào de jīpiào — I've bought a plane ticket for the tenth.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bank account, then the Mandarin for train or bus ticket, then say jīpiào again

Before you move on

What does 机票 mean? ("Plane ticket".) Say it once more.

196.4 hángbān — scheduled flight

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for train or bus ticket, then the Mandarin for plane ticket.

You'll want to know: hángbān

hángbān — "scheduled flight".

> zhège hángbān wǎndiǎn le — This flight is delayed.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hángbān is built from háng 'to sail' and bān 'a shift, a set run', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hang and paen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'a boat' and the second as dividing jade tokens; how the pair came to mean a flight is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: hángbān
- Say it: hángbān, once more
- Say it: zhège hángbān wǎndiǎn le — This flight is delayed.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for train or bus ticket, then the Mandarin for plane ticket, then say hángbān again

Before you move on

What does hángbān mean? ("Scheduled flight".) Say it once more.

196.5 qǐfēi — to take off (of a plane)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for plane ticket, then the Mandarin for scheduled flight.

You'll want to know: qǐfēi

qǐfēi — "to take off (of a plane)".

fēijī shí diǎn qǐfēi — The plane takes off at ten.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qǐfēi is built from 起 'to rise' and fēi 'to fly', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khiX and pj+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: qǐfēi
- Say it: qǐfēi, once more
- Say it: fēijī shí diǎn qǐfēi — The plane takes off at ten.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for plane ticket, then the Mandarin for scheduled flight, then say qǐfēi again

Before you move on

What does qǐfēi mean? ("To take off (of a plane)".) Say it once more.

196.6 dàodá — to reach a destination; to arrive

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for scheduled flight, then the Mandarin for to take off.

You'll want to know: dàodá

dàodá — "to reach a destination; to arrive".

huǒchē xiàwǔ sān diǎn dàodá — The train arrives at three in the afternoon.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dàodá is built from 到 'to arrive' and dá 'to get through', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tawH and dat (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: dàodá
- Say it: dàodá, once more
- Say it: huǒchē xiàwǔ sān diǎn dàodá — The train arrives at three in the afternoon.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for scheduled flight, then the Mandarin for to take off, then say dàodá again

Before you move on

What does dàodá mean? ("To reach a destination; to arrive".) Say it once more.

Chapter 197

Finding the Way

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask the way, say I have found a place or got lost, and go straight on.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 197: I can ask the way, say I have found a place or got lost, and go straight on.

197.1 问路 (wènlù) — to ask the way

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to take off, then the Mandarin for to reach a destination.

You'll want to know: 问路

问路 — wènlù — "to ask the way".

他在问路 tā zài wènlù — He's asking the way.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 问路 (wènlù) is built from 问 'to ask' and 路 'road', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjunH and luH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: wènlù
- Say it: wènlù, once more
- Say it: tā zài wènlù — He's asking the way.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to take off, then the Mandarin for to reach a destination, then say wènlù again

Before you move on

What does 问路 mean? ("To ask the way".) Say it once more.

197.2 找到 (zhǎodào) — to find

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to reach a destination, then the Mandarin for to ask the way.

You'll want to know: 找到

找到 — zhǎodào — "to find".

我找到书店了 wǒ zhǎodào shūdiàn le — I've found the bookshop.

The new character, in pieces: 找 — seven strokes: on the left the hand piece of 打; on the right a bar, a long slanting hook, a stroke falling to the left across it, and a dot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 找到 (zhǎodào) is built from 找 'to look for' and 到 'to arrive': looking that gets there. 到 is inherited from Middle Chinese tawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of 找, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǎodào
- Say it: zhǎodào, once more
- Say it: wǒ zhǎodào shūdiàn le — I've found the bookshop.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to reach a destination, then the Mandarin for to ask the way, then say zhǎodào again

Before you move on

What does 找到 mean? ("To find".) Say it once more.

197.3 找 — the hand piece, then a hook and a fall

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say zhǎodào — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  打 钱

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — dǎ, qián

Script — the hand piece, then a hook and a fall

How 找 is written, stroke by stroke

找

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, the hand piece, three strokes, the same three as in 打: a short bar, a vertical that hooks to the left at its foot, then a stroke rising to the right across it.

The right piece, four strokes. A bar. A long slanting hook from the top down to the lower right, flicking up at its foot. A stroke falling to the left across it. Then a dot at the top right.

3 + 4 = seven. The right piece is the right piece of 钱 with one bar fewer.

Your turn

- Write it: 找, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 找? (Seven.) Where has your hand made the left piece before? (In 打.) What comes last? (The dot at the top right.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 找, pinned stroke paths and medians.

197.4 mílù — to lose your way; to get lost

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to ask the way, then the Mandarin for to find.

You'll want to know: mílù

mílù — "to lose your way; to get lost".

wǒ mílù le — I'm lost.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of mílù is built from mí 'confused' and 路 'road', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mej and luH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to be bewildered'.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: mílù
- Say it: mílù, once more
- Say it: wǒ mílù le — I'm lost.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to ask the way, then the Mandarin for to find, then say mílù again

Before you move on

What does mílù mean? ("To lose your way; to get lost".) Say it once more.

197.5 yìzhí — straight on; all the way

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to find, then the Mandarin for to lose your way.

You'll want to know: yìzhí

yìzhí — "straight on; all the way".

cóng zhèr yìzhí zǒu — Go straight on from here.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
— changes its tone here: yì, before the rising tone of zhí.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yìzhí is built from 一 'one' and zhí 'straight', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jit and drik (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'upright'.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: yìzhí
- Say it: yìzhí, once more
- Say it: cóng zhèr yìzhí zǒu — Go straight on from here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to find, then the Mandarin for to lose your way, then say yìzhí again

Before you move on

What does yìzhí mean? ("Straight on; all the way".) Say it once more.

197.6 lùxiàn — route

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to lose your way, then the Mandarin for straight on.

You'll want to know: lùxiàn

lùxiàn — "route".

qù jīchǎng de lùxiàn hěn jiǎndān — The route to the airport is simple.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lùxiàn is built from 路 'road' and xiàn 'a line', both inherited from Middle Chinese, luH and sjenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'thread'.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: lùxiàn
- Say it: lùxiàn, once more
- Say it: qù jīchǎng de lùxiàn hěn jiǎndān — The route to the airport is simple.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to lose your way, then the Mandarin for straight on, then say lùxiàn again

Before you move on

What does lùxiàn mean? ("Route".) Say it once more.

Chapter 198

Phones and Messages

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can switch a phone off and on, leave a message, and say the line is engaged or there is no signal.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 198: I can switch a phone off and on, leave a message, and say the line is engaged or there is no signal.

198.1 关机 (guānjī) — to switch off (a phone or a computer)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for straight on, then the Mandarin for route.

You'll want to know: 关机

关机 — guānjī — "to switch off (a phone or a computer)".

> 我的手机关机了 wǒ de shǒujī guānjī le — My phone is switched off.

The new character, in pieces: 关 — six strokes: two short strokes leaning toward each other, then 天 underneath. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 关机 (guānjī) is built from 关 'to shut' and 机 'machine', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kwaen and kj+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as the bar that shuts a door, and explains the second as the catch that sets off a crossbow.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: guānjī
- Say it: guānjī, once more
- Say it: wǒ de shǒujī guānjī le — My phone is switched off.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for straight on, then the Mandarin for route, then say guānjī again

Before you move on

What does 关机 mean? ("To switch off (a phone or a computer)".) Say it once more.

198.2 关 — two short strokes over 天

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say guānjī — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

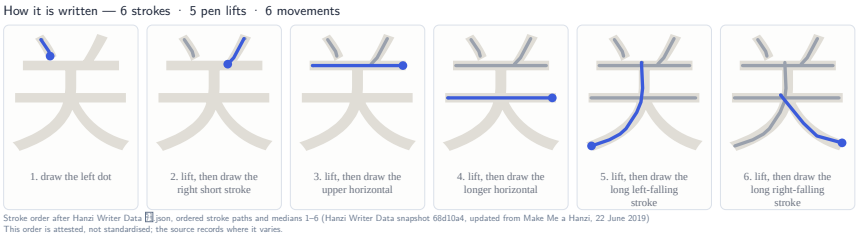
  开 天

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kāi, tiān

Script — two short strokes over 天



How 关 is written, stroke by stroke

关

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The top piece, two strokes. A dot on the left, falling to the lower right, then a short stroke on the right, falling to the lower left: the two lean toward each other.

The bottom piece, 天, four strokes: a bar, a longer bar, a long stroke falling to the left, and a long stroke falling to the right.

2 + 4 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 关, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 关? (Six.) Which character is the bottom piece? (天.) Which way do the two top strokes lean? (Toward each other.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 关, pinned stroke paths and medians.

198.3 开机 (kāijī) — to turn a phone on; to switch on a phone or a computer

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for route, then the Mandarin for to switch off.

You'll want to know: 开机

开机 — kāijī — "to turn a phone on; to switch on a phone or a computer".

> 你开机了吗 nǐ kāijī le ma — Have you switched your phone on?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 开机 (kāijī) is built from 开 'to open' and 机 'machine', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khoj and kj+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: kāijī
- Say it: kāijī, once more
- Say it: nǐ kāijī le ma — Have you switched your phone on?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for route, then the Mandarin for to switch off, then say kāijī again

Before you move on

What does 开机 mean? ("To turn a phone on; to switch on a phone or a computer".) Say it once more.

198.4 liúyán — to leave a message

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to switch off, then the Mandarin for to turn a phone on.

You'll want to know: liúyán

liúyán — "to leave a message".

> tā bú zài nǐ kěyǐ liúyán — He isn't in, but you can leave a message.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of liúyán is built from liú 'to leave behind' and yán 'words', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ljuw and ngjon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to stay' and 'to stop', and the second 'speech'.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: liúyán
- Say it: liúyán, once more
- Say it: tā bú zài nǐ kěyǐ liúyán — He isn't in, but you can leave a message.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to switch off, then the Mandarin for to turn a phone on, then say liúyán again

Before you move on

What does liúyán mean? ("To leave a message".) Say it once more.

198.5 zhànxiàn — engaged; busy (of a phone line)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to turn a phone on, then the Mandarin for to leave a message.

You'll want to know: zhànxiàn

zhànxiàn — "engaged; busy (of a phone line)".

tā de diànhuà yìzhí zhànxiàn — His line has been engaged the whole time.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhànxiàn is built from zhàn 'to take up' and xiàn 'a line'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese sjenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'thread'; the dictionary lists the first only with another sense, so how it came to mean taking up is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: zhànxiàn
- Say it: zhànxiàn, once more
- Say it: tā de diànhuà yìzhí zhànxiàn — His line has been engaged the whole time.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to turn a phone on, then the Mandarin for to leave a message, then say zhànxiàn again

Before you move on

What does zhànxiàn mean? ("Engaged; busy (of a phone line)".) Say it once more.

198.6 xìnhào — phone signal

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to leave a message, then the Mandarin for engaged (of a phone line).

You'll want to know: xìnhào

xìnhào — "phone signal".

zhèr méiyǒu xìnhào — There's no signal here.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xìnhào is built from xìn 'a sign, a message' and 号 'a call, a mark', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sinH and hawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'true' and 'proof', and the second 'to call'.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: xìnhào
- Say it: xìnhào, once more
- Say it: zhèr méiyǒu xìnhào — There's no signal here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to leave a message, then the Mandarin for engaged (of a phone line), then say xìnhào again

Before you move on

What does xìnhào mean? ("Phone signal".) Say it once more.

Chapter 199

Sizes

Modes: voice (6) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask what size someone wears, say clothes are thin, baggy or tight, and pick one out.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 199: I can ask what size someone wears, say clothes are thin, baggy or tight, and pick one out.

199.1 chǐmǎ — clothing size; shoe size

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for engaged (of a phone line), then the Mandarin for phone signal.

You'll want to know: chǐmǎ

chǐmǎ — "clothing size; shoe size".

> nǐ chuān duōdà de chǐmǎ — What size do you wear?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: chǐ is said with a rising tone before mǎ, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chǐmǎ is built from chǐ, a measure of length, and mǎ 'a number sign', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhek and maeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary explains the first as a measure of length and glosses the second as a stone like jade; how the pair came to mean the size of clothes is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: chǐmǎ
- Say it: chǐmǎ, once more
- Say it: nǐ chuān duōdà de chǐmǎ — What size do you wear?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for engaged (of a phone line), then the Mandarin for phone signal, then say chǐmǎ again

Before you move on

What does chǐmǎ mean? ("Clothing size; shoe size".) Say it once more.

199.2 báo — thin (of cloth or paper)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for phone signal, then the Mandarin for clothing size.

You'll want to know: báo

báo — "thin (of cloth or paper)".

nǐ de yīfu tài báo le — Your clothes are too thin.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of báo is inherited from Middle Chinese bak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed by the pair 'thick and thin'. Mandarin has two outcomes of that form: báo in everyday speech, and bó in bookish words.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: báo
- Say it: báo, once more
- Say it: nǐ de yīfu tài báo le — Your clothes are too thin.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for phone signal, then the Mandarin for clothing size, then say báo again

Before you move on

What does báo mean? ("Thin (of cloth or paper)".) Say it once more.

199.3 féi — loose; baggy (of clothes)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for clothing size, then the Mandarin for thin (of cloth or paper).

You'll want to know: féi

féi — "loose; baggy (of clothes)".

zhè tiáo kùzi yǒudiǎnr féi — These trousers are a bit baggy.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of féi is inherited from Middle Chinese bj+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'fat' and 'fleshy'. Its use for loose clothes is not given there, so how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: féi
- Say it: féi, once more
- Say it: zhè tiáo kùzi yǒudiǎnr féi — These trousers are a bit baggy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for clothing size, then the Mandarin for thin (of cloth or paper), then say féi again

Before you move on

What does féi mean? ("Loose; baggy (of clothes)".) Say it once more.

199.4 jǐn — tight

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for thin (of cloth or paper), then the Mandarin for baggy.

You'll want to know: jǐn

jǐn — "tight".

zhè shuāng xié tài jǐn le — These shoes are too tight.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jǐn is inherited from Middle Chinese kjinX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'tightly bound'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: jǐn
- Say it: jǐn, once more

- Say it: zhè shuāng xié tài jǐn le — These shoes are too tight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for thin (of cloth or paper), then the Mandarin for baggy, then say jǐn again

Before you move on

What does jǐn mean? ("Tight".) Say it once more.

199.5 tiāo — to pick out; to choose

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for baggy, then the Mandarin for tight.

You'll want to know: tiāo

tiāo — "to pick out; to choose".

qǐng bāng wǒ tiāo yí ge chǐmǎ — Could you help me pick out a size, please?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tiāo is inherited from Middle Chinese thew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to stir up'. The sense 'to pick out' is not given there, so how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: tiāo
- Say it: tiāo, once more
- Say it: qǐng bāng wǒ tiāo yí ge chǐmǎ — Could you help me pick out a size, please?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for baggy, then the Mandarin for tight, then say tiāo again

Before you move on

What does tiāo mean? ("To pick out; to choose".) Say it once more.

199.6 Looking back: from Roads and Crossings to Sizes

Say the Mandarin for a street for traffic and to go on foot.

Your turn

- Say it: a street for traffic, to go on foot, zebra crossing, public square, traffic lights
- Say it: to put money by, to take out money, credit card, password, bank account
- Say it: train or bus ticket, plane ticket, scheduled flight, to take off, to reach a destination
- Say it: to ask the way, to find, to lose your way, straight on, route
- Say it: to switch off, to turn a phone on, to leave a message, engaged (of a phone line), phone signal
- Say it: clothing size, thin (of cloth or paper), baggy, tight, to pick out
- Read it: 路 票 找 关 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

A street for traffic? (马路, mǎlù.) To go on foot? (zǒulù.) Zebra crossing? (bānmǎxiàn.) Public square? (guǎngchǎng.) Traffic lights? (hónglǜdēng.) To put money by? (cúnqián.) To take out money? (qǔqián.) Credit card? (xìnyòngkǎ.) Password? (mìmǎ.) Bank account? (zhànghù.) Train or bus ticket? (车票, chēpiào.) Plane ticket? (机票, jīpiào.) Scheduled flight? (hángbān.) To take off? (qǐfēi.) To reach a destination? (dàodá.) To ask the way? (问路, wènlù.) To find? (找到, zhǎodào.) To lose your way? (mílù.) Straight on? (yìzhí.) Route? (lùxiàn.) To switch off? (关机, guānjī.) To turn a phone on? (开机, kāijī.) To leave a message? (liúyán.)

Engaged (of a phone line)? (zhànxiàn.) Phone signal? (xìnhào.) Clothing size? (chǐmǎ.) Thin (of cloth or paper)? (báo.) Baggy? (féi.) Tight? (jǐn.) To pick out? (tiāo.)

Chapter 200

Booking a Room

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can book a hotel room, ask for a single room, and say when I will check in and check out.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 200: I can book a hotel room, ask for a single room, and say when I will check in and check out.

200.1 bīnguǎn — hotel

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tight, then the Mandarin for to pick out.

You'll want to know: bīnguǎn

bīnguǎn — "hotel".

> wǒmen de bīnguǎn hěn gānjìng — Our hotel is very clean.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bīnguǎn is built from bīn 'a guest' and guǎn 'a lodging', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjin and kwanH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to welcome' and the second as a lodging house.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: bīnguǎn
- Say it: bīnguǎn, once more
- Say it: wǒmen de bīnguǎn hěn gānjìng — Our hotel is very clean.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tight, then the Mandarin for to pick out, then say bīnguǎn again

Before you move on

What does bīnguǎn mean? ("Hotel".) Say it once more.

200.2 yùdìng — to book ahead

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to pick out, then the Mandarin for hotel.

You'll want to know: yùdìng

yùdìng — "to book ahead".

wǒ xiǎng yùdìng yí ge fángjiān — I'd like to book a room.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yùdìng is built from yù 'beforehand' and dìng 'to order', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yoH and dengX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'before'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: yùdìng
- Say it: yùdìng, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng yùdìng yí ge fángjiān — I'd like to book a room.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to pick out, then the Mandarin for hotel, then say yùdìng again

Before you move on

What does yùdìng mean? ("To book ahead".) Say it once more.

200.3 dānrénjiān — single room

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hotel, then the Mandarin for to book ahead.

You'll want to know: dānrénjiān

dānrénjiān — "single room".

wǒ yào yí ge dānrénjiān — I'd like a single room.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dānrénjiān is built from dān 'single', 人 'person' and 间 'a room'. The first two are inherited from Middle Chinese, tan and nyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: dānrénjiān
- Say it: dānrénjiān, once more

- Say it: wǒ yào yí ge dānrénjiān — I'd like a single room.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hotel, then the Mandarin for to book ahead, then say dānrénjiān again

Before you move on

What does dānrénjiān mean? ("Single room".) Say it once more.

200.4 rùzhù — to check in (at a hotel)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to book ahead, then the Mandarin for single room.

You'll want to know: rùzhù

rùzhù — "to check in (at a hotel)".

wǒmen xiàwǔ liǎng diǎn kěyǐ rùzhù — We can check in at two in the afternoon.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of rùzhù is built from rù 'to enter' and zhù 'to stay', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyip and drjuH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'within' and the second 'to stop'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: rùzhù
- Say it: rùzhù, once more
- Say it: wǒmen xiàwǔ liǎng diǎn kěyǐ rùzhù — We can check in at two in the afternoon.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to book ahead, then the Mandarin for single room, then say rùzhù again

Before you move on

What does rùzhù mean? ("To check in (at a hotel)".) Say it once more.

200.5 tuìfáng — to check out (of a hotel)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for single room, then the Mandarin for to check in.

You'll want to know: tuìfáng

tuìfáng — "to check out (of a hotel)".

míngtiān jǐ diǎn tuìfáng — What time is check-out tomorrow?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tuìfáng is built from tuì 'to give back' and 房 'room', both inherited from Middle Chinese, thwojH and bjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to draw back'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: tuìfáng
- Say it: tuìfáng, once more
- Say it: míngtiān jǐ diǎn tuìfáng — What time is check-out tomorrow?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for single room, then the Mandarin for to check in, then say tuìfáng again

Before you move on

What does tuìfáng mean? (“To check out (of a hotel)”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 201

Post and Parcels

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can buy stamps, send things by courier, send an email and say I have got it.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 201: I can buy stamps, send things by courier, send an email and say I have got it.

201.1 yóupiào — postage stamp

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to check in, then the Mandarin for to check out.

You'll want to know: yóupiào

yóupiào — "postage stamp".

> wǒ yào mǎi liǎng zhāng yóupiào — I'd like two stamps, please.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yóupiào is built from yóu 'post' and 票 'a slip'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese hjuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed as a lodge at a border; no dictionary we use records an older form of 票, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: yóupiào
- Say it: yóupiào, once more
- Say it: wǒ yào mǎi liǎng zhāng yóupiào — I'd like two stamps, please.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to check in, then the Mandarin for to check out, then say yóupiào again

Before you move on

What does yóupiào mean? ("Postage stamp".) Say it once more.

201.2 kuàidì — express delivery; courier

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to check out, then the Mandarin for postage stamp.

You'll want to know: kuàidì

kuàidì — "express delivery; courier".

wǒ yòng kuàidì jì shū — I'm sending the books by courier.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kuàidì is built from 快 'fast' and dì 'to pass along', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khwaejH and dejX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'pleased' and the second 'to take turns'; how the pair came to mean a courier is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: kuàidì
- Say it: kuàidì, once more
- Say it: wǒ yòng kuàidì jì shū — I'm sending the books by courier.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to check out, then the Mandarin for postage stamp, then say kuàidì again

Before you move on

What does kuàidì mean? ("Express delivery; courier".) Say it once more.

201.3 yóujiàn — email; mail

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for postage stamp, then the Mandarin for courier service.

You'll want to know: yóujiàn

yóujiàn — "email; mail".

lǎoshī de yóujiàn hěn zhòngyào — The teacher's email is important.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yóujiàn is built from yóu 'post' and jiàn 'an item', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuw and gjenX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a portion'.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: yóujiàn
- Say it: yóujiàn, once more
- Say it: lǎoshī de yóujiàn hěn zhòngyào — The teacher's email is important.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for postage stamp, then the Mandarin for courier service, then say yóujiàn again

Before you move on

What does yóujiàn mean? ("Email; mail".) Say it once more.

201.4 fāsòng — to send electronically; to send a message or an email

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for courier service, then the Mandarin for email.

You'll want to know: fāsòng

fāsòng — "to send electronically; to send a message or an email".

wǒ yǐjīng fāsòngle yóujiàn — I've already sent the email.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fāsòng is built from fā 'to send out' and sòng 'to send off', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjot and suwngH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to start' and 'to open out', and the second 'to send away'.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: fāsòng
- Say it: fāsòng, once more
- Say it: wǒ yǐjīng fāsòngle yóujiàn — I've already sent the email.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for courier service, then the Mandarin for email, then say fāsòng again

Before you move on

What does fāsòng mean? ("To send electronically; to send a message or an email".) Say it once more.

201.5 shōudào — to get something sent; to receive

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for email, then the Mandarin for to send electronically.

You'll want to know: shōudào

shōudào — "to get something sent; to receive".

nǐ shōudào wǒ de yóujiàn le ma — Did you get my email?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shōudào is built from shōu 'to gather in' and 到 'to arrive', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syuw and tawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): taking in what has arrived.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: shōudào
- Say it: shōudào, once more
- Say it: nǐ shōudào wǒ de yóujiàn le ma — Did you get my email?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for email, then the Mandarin for to send electronically, then say shōudào again

Before you move on

What does shōudào mean? ("To get something sent; to receive".) Say it once more.

Chapter 202

At the Till

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can pay by scanning a code, ask for a receipt, take something back and find the checkout.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 202: I can pay by scanning a code, ask for a receipt, take something back and find the checkout.

202.1 sǎomǎ — to scan a code (to pay)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to send electronically, then the Mandarin for to get something sent.

You'll want to know: sǎomǎ

sǎomǎ — "to scan a code (to pay)".

> kěyǐ sǎomǎ ma — Can I pay by scanning the code?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: sǎo is said with a rising tone before mǎ, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of sǎomǎ is built from 扫 'to sweep' and mǎ 'a code', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sawX and maeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The pair is recent, and how sweeping came to mean scanning is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: sǎomǎ
- Say it: sǎomǎ, once more
- Say it: kěyǐ sǎomǎ ma — Can I pay by scanning the code?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to send electronically, then the Mandarin for to get something sent, then say sǎomǎ again

Before you move on

What does sǎomǎ mean? ("To scan a code (to pay)".) Say it once more.

202.2 shōujù — receipt

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get something sent, then the Mandarin for to scan a code.

You'll want to know: shōujù

shōujù — "receipt".

wǒ yào yì zhāng shōujù — I need a receipt.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shōujù is built from shōu 'to receive' and jù 'evidence', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syuw and kjoH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to rely on'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: shōujù
- Say it: shōujù, once more
- Say it: wǒ yào yì zhāng shōujù — I need a receipt.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get something sent, then the Mandarin for to scan a code, then say shōujù again

Before you move on

What does shōujù mean? ("Receipt".) Say it once more.

202.3 tuìhuò — to take goods back; to return goods to a shop

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to scan a code, then the Mandarin for receipt.

You'll want to know: tuìhuò

tuìhuò — "to take goods back; to return goods to a shop".

zhège kěyǐ tuìhuò ma — Can I bring this back?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tuìhuò is built from tuì 'to give back' and huò 'goods', both inherited from Middle Chinese, thwojH and xwaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to draw back' and 'wealth'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: tuìhuò
- Say it: tuìhuò, once more
- Say it: zhège kěyǐ tuìhuò ma — Can I bring this back?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to scan a code, then the Mandarin for receipt, then say tuìhuò again

Before you move on

What does tuìhuò mean? ("To take goods back; to return goods to a shop".) Say it once more.

202.4 gùkè — customer

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for receipt, then the Mandarin for to take goods back.

You'll want to know: gùkè

gùkè — "customer".

zhèr de gùkè dōu hěn niánqīng — The customers here are all young.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gùkè is built from gù 'to look round' and kè 'a guest', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kuH and khaek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to look back'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: gùkè
- Say it: gùkè, once more
- Say it: zhèr de gùkè dōu hěn niánqīng — The customers here are all young.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for receipt, then the Mandarin for to take goods back, then say gùkè again

Before you move on

What does gùkè mean? ("Customer".) Say it once more.

202.5 shōuyíntái — checkout; till

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to take goods back, then the Mandarin for customer.

You'll want to know: shōuyíntái shōuyíntái — "checkout; till".

shōuyíntái zài ménkǒu — The checkout is by the door.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shōuyíntái is built from shōu 'to take in', yín 'silver, money' and tái 'a counter', all inherited from Middle Chinese, syuw, ngin and doj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the last as a raised square platform of earth.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: shōuyíntái
- Say it: shōuyíntái, once more
- Say it: shōuyíntái zài ménkǒu — The checkout is by the door.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to take goods back, then the Mandarin for customer, then say shōuyíntái again

Before you move on

What does shōuyíntái mean? ("Checkout; till".) Say it once more.

Chapter 203

Renting a Flat

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about renting a flat: the landlord, the rent, the deposit and the contract.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 203: I can talk about renting a flat: the landlord, the rent, the deposit and the contract.

203.1 zū — to rent

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for customer, then the Mandarin for checkout.

You'll want to know: zū

zū — "to rent".

> wǒ xiǎng zū yí ge fángzi — I want to rent a flat.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zū is inherited from Middle Chinese tsu (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to store up' and 'a tax'. Renting is not given there, so how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: zū
- Say it: zū, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng zū yí ge fángzi — I want to rent a flat.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for customer, then the Mandarin for checkout, then say zū again

Before you move on

What does zū mean? ("To rent".) Say it once more.

203.2 房东 (fángdōng) — landlord; landlady

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for checkout, then the Mandarin for to rent.

You'll want to know: 房东

房东 — fángdōng — "landlord; landlady".

我的房东人很好 wǒ de fángdōng rén hěn hǎo — My landlord is a nice person.

The new character, in pieces: 东 — five strokes: a bar, a stroke that falls to the left and turns right, a vertical that hooks to the left, then a short stroke falling to the left and a dot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 房东 (fángdōng) is built from 房 'house, room' and 东 'east', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjang and tuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). How the pair came to mean the owner who lets a room is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: fángdōng
- Say it: fángdōng, once more
- Say it: wǒ de fángdōng rén hěn hǎo — My landlord is a nice person.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for checkout, then the Mandarin for to rent, then say fángdōng again

Before you move on

What does 房东 mean? ("Landlord; landlady".) Say it once more.

203.3 东 — a bar, a turn, a hook and two short strokes

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say fángdōng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  房 车

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — fáng, chē

Script — a bar, a turn, a hook and two short strokes

How 东 is written, stroke by stroke

东

One piece, five strokes, top to bottom. Count the strokes in their turns.

First, a bar across the upper middle.

Second, a stroke from above the bar, falling down to the left and turning to run right.

Third, a vertical down the middle, from above the turned stroke and down through it, hooking to the left at its foot.

Last, two short strokes at the foot: one falling to the left, then a dot on the right.

$1 + 1 + 1 + 2 =$ five.

Your turn

- Write it: 东, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 东? (Five.) Which stroke hooks? (The vertical down the middle.) What comes last? (The dot on the right.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 东, pinned stroke paths and medians.

203.4 fángzū — rent for a home

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to rent, then the Mandarin for landlord.

You'll want to know: fángzū

fángzū — "rent for a home".

zhèr de fángzū tài guì le — The rent here is too high.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fángzū is built from 房 'house' and zū 'rent', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjang and tsu (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a tax'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: fángzū
- Say it: fángzū, once more
- Say it: zhèr de fángzū tài guì le — The rent here is too high.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to rent, then the Mandarin for landlord, then say fángzū again

Before you move on

What does fángzū mean? ("Rent for a home".) Say it once more.

203.5 yājīn — a deposit paid in advance

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for landlord, then the Mandarin for rent for a home.

You'll want to know: yājīn

yājīn — "a deposit paid in advance".

> yājīn shì liǎng ge yuè de fángzū — The deposit is two months' rent.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yājīn is built from yā 'a pledge' and jīn 'gold, money', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'aep and kim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as putting one's mark on a document, so how it came to mean a pledge is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: yājīn
- Say it: yājīn, once more
- Say it: yājīn shì liǎng ge yuè de fángzū — The deposit is two months' rent.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for landlord, then the Mandarin for rent for a home, then say yājīn again

Before you move on

What does yājīn mean? ("A deposit paid in advance".) Say it once more.

203.6 hétong — contract; written agreement

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for rent for a home, then the Mandarin for a deposit paid in advance.

You'll want to know: hétong

hétong — "contract; written agreement".

> fángdōng de hétong nǐ kànle ma — Have you read the landlord's contract?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hétong is built from hé 'to join' and 同 'together', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hop and duwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'alike' and 'together'. The dictionary already pairs the two to gloss the first, in the sense of joining; a written agreement is not given there, so how the word came to it is not settled. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: hétong
- Say it: hétong, once more
- Say it: fángdōng de hétong nǐ kànle ma — Have you read the landlord's contract?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for rent for a home, then the Mandarin for a deposit paid in advance, then say hétong again

Before you move on

What does hétong mean? ("Contract; written agreement".) Say it once more.

Chapter 204

Online

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about websites, logging in, clicking, videos and typing.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 204: I can talk about websites, logging in, clicking, videos and typing.

204.1 网站 (wǎngzhàn) — website

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a deposit paid in advance, then the Mandarin for contract.

You'll want to know: 网站

网站 — wǎngzhàn — "website".

> 这个网站关了 zhège wǎngzhàn guān le — This website has closed down.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 网站 (wǎngzhàn) is built from 网 'net' and 站 'a station', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjangX and treamH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: wǎngzhàn
- Say it: wǎngzhàn, once more
- Say it: zhège wǎngzhàn guān le — This website has closed down.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a deposit paid in advance, then the Mandarin for contract, then say wǎngzhàn again

Before you move on

What does 网站 mean? ("Website".) Say it once more.

204.2 dēnglù — to log in

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for contract, then the Mandarin for website.

You'll want to know: dēnglù

dēnglù — "to log in".

nǐ dēnglù le ma — Have you logged in?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dēnglù is built from dēng 'to go up' and lù 'to record', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tong and ljowk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to climb' and the second 'to take down'. Logging in is a modern sense, and how the pair came to it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: dēnglù
- Say it: dēnglù, once more
- Say it: nǐ dēnglù le ma — Have you logged in?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for contract, then the Mandarin for website, then say dēnglù again

Before you move on

What does dēnglù mean? ("To log in".) Say it once more.

204.3 diǎnjī — to click (on a screen)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for website, then the Mandarin for to log in.

You'll want to know: diǎnjī

diǎnjī — "to click (on a screen)".

qǐng diǎnjī zhèr — Please click here.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of diǎnjī is built from 点 'a dot, to touch' and jī 'to strike', both inherited from Middle Chinese, temX and kek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to hit'.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: diǎnjī
- Say it: diǎnjī, once more

- Say it: qǐng diǎnjī zhèr — Please click here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for website, then the Mandarin for to log in, then say diǎnjī again

Before you move on

What does diǎnjī mean? ("To click (on a screen)".) Say it once more.

204.4 shìpín — video

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to log in, then the Mandarin for to click.

You'll want to know: shìpín

shìpín — "video".

wǒ xǐhuan kàn shìpín — I like watching videos.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shìpín is built from shì 'to look at' and pín 'frequent', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyijH and bjin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The word is modern, and how the pair came to mean a video is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: shìpín
- Say it: shìpín, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan kàn shìpín — I like watching videos.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to log in, then the Mandarin for to click, then say shìpín again

Before you move on

What does shìpín mean? (“Video”.) Say it once more.

204.5 打字 (dǎzì) — to type

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to click, then the Mandarin for video.

You’ll want to know: 打字

打字 — dǎzì — “to type”.

他打字很快 tā dǎzì hěn kuài — He types fast.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 打字 (dǎzì) is built from 打 ’to strike’ and 字 ’a character’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and dziH (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription): striking out characters. The modern dǎ is not the regular outcome of taengX, and how it came is not settled.

What you’ve built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎzì
- Say it: dǎzì, once more
- Say it: tā dǎzì hěn kuài — He types fast.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to click, then the Mandarin for video, then say dǎzì again

Before you move on

What does 打字 mean? (“To type”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 205

How Far Is It?

Modes: voice (6) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say how far away a place is in kilometres, talk about distance and give a rough figure.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 205: I can say how far away a place is in kilometres, talk about distance and give a rough figure.

205.1 离 (lí) — from; away from (in distance)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for video, then the Mandarin for to type on a keyboard.

You'll want to know: 离

离 — lí — "from; away from (in distance)".

> wǒ jiā lí xuéxiào hěn jìn — My home is close to the school.

The new character, in pieces: 离 — ten strokes in three pieces: the dot and the bar that cap 文; two short strokes crossing inside a box open at the top; then a frame that hooks, holding a turning stroke and a dot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 离 (lí) is inherited from Middle Chinese lje (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which says that being apart while near is lí, and being apart while far is another word; in another tone it is glossed 'to leave'. Its use for distance from a place is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: lí
- Say it: lí, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā lí xuéxiào hěn jìn — My home is close to the school.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for video, then the Mandarin for to type on a keyboard, then say lí again

Before you move on

What does 离 mean? ("From; away from (in distance)".) Say it once more.

205.2 离 — a cap, a box and a hooked frame

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say lí — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  文 开

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — wén, kāi

Script — a cap, a box and a hooked frame

How 离 is written, stroke by stroke

离

Three pieces, top to bottom.

The top, two strokes: the dot and the bar that cap 文.

The middle, four strokes. A short stroke falling to the left and a dot falling to the right, crossing like a small x. Then a box open at the top round them: a vertical down the left that turns along the foot, and a short vertical on the right.

The bottom, four strokes. A vertical down the left. A bar that turns down the right side and hooks to the left at its foot. Inside, a stroke that falls to the left and turns right, then a dot.

2 + 4 + 4 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 离, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 离? (Ten.) What caps it? (The dot and the bar of 文.) Which stroke hooks? (The bar that turns down the right side.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 离, pinned stroke paths and medians.

205.3 公里 (gōnglǐ) — kilometre

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to type on a keyboard, then the Mandarin for away from.

You'll want to know: 公里

公里 — gōnglǐ — "kilometre".

书店在东边离这儿两公里 shūdiàn zài dōngbian lí zhèr liǎng gōnglǐ — The bookshop is to the east, two kilometres from here.

The new character, in pieces: 公 — four strokes: 八 on top, then a stroke that falls to the left and turns right, and a dot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 公里 (gōnglǐ) is built from 公 'common, public' and 里 lǐ. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese kuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'common' and 'without bias'; the dictionary glosses 里 as a neighbourhood of twenty-five households. Its use as a measure of distance, and the pair's use for the kilometre, are not given there, so they are not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: gōnglǐ
- Say it: gōnglǐ, once more

- Say it: shūdiàn zài dōngbian lí zhèr liǎng gōnglǐ — The bookshop is to the east, two kilometres from here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to type on a keyboard, then the Mandarin for away from, then say gōnglǐ again

Before you move on

What does 公里 mean? (“Kilometre”.) Say it once more.

205.4 公 — 八 over a turn and a dot

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say gōnglǐ — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

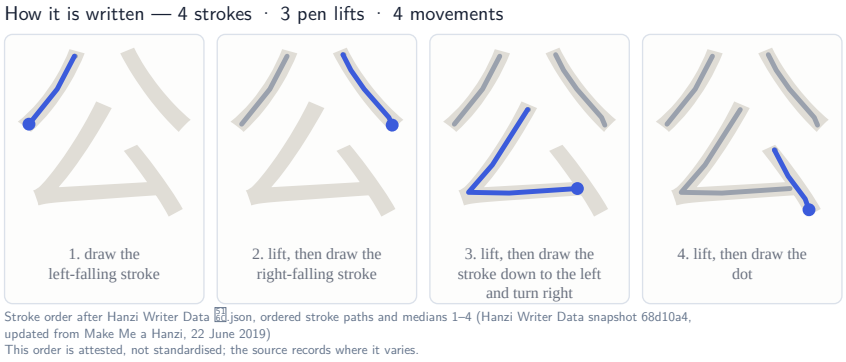
八 里

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — bā, lǐ

Script — 八 over a turn and a dot



How 公 is written, stroke by stroke

公

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The top piece, 八, two strokes: a stroke falling to the left, then a longer one falling to the right, spread wide apart.

The bottom piece, two strokes. A stroke that falls to the left and turns to run right along the foot, then a dot at its right end. The same pair sits in the top left corner of 能.

2 + 2 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 公, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 公? (Four.) What is the top piece? (八.) Where has your hand made the bottom piece before? (In the top left of 能.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 公, pinned stroke paths and medians.

205.5 zuǒyòu — about; or so (after a number)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for away from, then the Mandarin for kilometre.

You'll want to know: zuǒyòu

zuǒyòu — "about; or so (after a number)".

zǒulù èrshí fēnzhōng zuǒyòu — It's about twenty minutes on foot.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zuǒyòu is built from zuǒ 'left' and yòu 'right', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsaX and hjuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): a little to either side of the number.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: zuǒyòu
- Say it: zuǒyòu, once more
- Say it: zǒulù èrshí fēnzhōng zuǒyòu — It's about twenty minutes on foot.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for away from, then the Mandarin for kilometre, then say zuǒyòu again

Before you move on

What does zuǒyòu mean? ("About; or so (after a number)".) Say it once more.

205.6 chàbuduō — about; almost

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for kilometre, then the Mandarin for or so.

You'll want to know: chàbuduō chàbuduō — "about; almost".

cóng zhèr dào chēzhàn chàbuduō liǎng gōnglǐ — From here to the station is almost two kilometres.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
不 loses its tone in the middle of this word: chàbuduō.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chàbuduō is built from chà 'short of', 不 'not' and duō 'much', all inherited from Middle Chinese, tsrhae, pjut and ta (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): not much short.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: chàbuduō
- Say it: chàbuduō, once more
- Say it: cóng zhèr dào chēzhàn chàbuduō liǎng gōnglǐ — From here to the station is almost two kilometres.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for kilometre, then the Mandarin for or so, then say chàbuduō again

Before you move on

What does chàbuduō mean? ("About; almost".) Say it once more.

205.7 jùlí — distance

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for or so, then the Mandarin for almost.

You'll want to know: jùlí

jùlí — "distance".

liǎng ge chēzhàn de jùlí shì yì gōnglǐ — The two stations are a kilometre apart.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jùlí is built from jù and 离 'away from', both inherited from Middle Chinese, gjoX and lje (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as the spur on a cock's leg; how it came to mean being apart is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: jùlí
- Say it: jùlí, once more
- Say it: liǎng ge chēzhàn de jùlí shì yì gōnglǐ — The two stations are a kilometre apart.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for or so, then the Mandarin for almost, then say jùlí again

Before you move on

What does jùlí mean? ("Distance".) Say it once more.

205.8 Looking back: from Booking a Room to How Far Is It?

Say the Mandarin for hotel and to book ahead.

Your turn

- Say it: hotel, to book ahead, single room, to check in, to check out
- Say it: postage stamp, courier service, email, to send electronically, to get something sent
- Say it: to scan a code, receipt, to take goods back, customer, checkout
- Say it: to rent, landlord, rent for a home, a deposit paid in advance, contract
- Say it: website, to log in, to click, video, to type on a keyboard
- Say it: away from, kilometre, or so, almost, distance
- Read it: 东 离 公 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

Hotel? (bīnguǎn.) To book ahead? (yùdìng.) Single room? (dānrénjiān.) To check in? (rùzhù.) To check out? (tuìfáng.) Postage stamp? (yóupiào.) Courier service? (kuàidì.) Email? (yóujiàn.) To send electronically? (fāsòng.) To get something sent? (shōudào.) To scan a code? (sǎomǎ.) Receipt? (shōujù.) To take goods back? (tuìhuò.) Customer? (gùkè.) Checkout? (shōuyíntái.) To rent? (zū.) Landlord? (房东, fángdōng.) Rent for a home? (fángzū.) A deposit paid in advance? (yājīn.) Contract? (hétong.) Website? (网站, wǎngzhàn.) To log in? (dēnglù.) To click? (diǎnjī.) Video? (shìpín.) To type on a keyboard? (打字, dǎzì.) Away from? (离, lí.) Kilometre? (公里, gōnglǐ.) Or so? (zuǒyòu.) Almost? (chàbuduō.) Distance? (jùlí.)

Chapter 206

Upstairs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about buildings and floors, go upstairs, and find the office and the front desk.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 206: I can talk about buildings and floors, go upstairs, and find the office and the front desk.

206.1 lóu — a building of several floors; a floor

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for almost, then the Mandarin for distance.

You'll want to know: lóu

lóu — "a building of several floors; a floor".

> wǒ zhù de lóu hěn xīn — The building I live in is new.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lóu is inherited from Middle Chinese luw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a house of more than one storey'.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: lóu
- Say it: lóu, once more
- Say it: wǒ zhù de lóu hěn xīn — The building I live in is new.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for almost, then the Mandarin for distance, then say lóu again

Before you move on

What does lóu mean? ("A building of several floors; a floor".) Say it once more.

206.2 céng — floor; storey

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for distance, then the Mandarin for a building of several floors.

You'll want to know: céng

céng — "floor; storey".

wǒmen de lóu yǒu èrshí céng — Our building has twenty floors.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of céng is inherited from Middle Chinese dzong (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed, like the form of lóu, 'a house of more than one storey'.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: céng
- Say it: céng, once more
- Say it: wǒmen de lóu yǒu èrshí céng — Our building has twenty floors.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for distance, then the Mandarin for a building of several floors, then say céng again

Before you move on

What does céng mean? ("Floor; storey".) Say it once more.

206.3 shànglóu — to go upstairs

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a building of several floors, then the Mandarin for storey.

You'll want to know: shànglóu

shànglóu — "to go upstairs".

wǒmen zuò diàntī shànglóu — We're taking the lift upstairs.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shànglóu is built from 上 'to go up' and lóu 'a building of several floors', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyangX and luw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to climb'.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: shànglóu
- Say it: shànglóu, once more
- Say it: wǒmen zuò diàntī shànglóu — We're taking the lift upstairs.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a building of several floors, then the Mandarin for storey, then say shànglóu again

Before you move on

What does shànglóu mean? ("To go upstairs".) Say it once more.

206.4 bàngōngshì — office

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for storey, then the Mandarin for to go upstairs.

You'll want to know: bàngōngshì

bàngōngshì — "office".

lǎoshī zài bàngōngshì — The teacher is in the office.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bàngōngshì is built from bàn 'to handle', 公 'public' and shì 'a room', all inherited from Middle Chinese, beanH, kuwng and syit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to provide': a room for public business.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: bàngōngshì
- Say it: bàngōngshì, once more
- Say it: lǎoshī zài bàngōngshì — The teacher is in the office.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for storey, then the Mandarin for to go upstairs, then say bàngōngshì again

Before you move on

What does bàngōngshì mean? ("Office".) Say it once more.

206.5 qiántái — front desk; reception

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to go upstairs, then the Mandarin for office.

You'll want to know: qiántái

qiántái — "front desk; reception".

yàoshi zài qiántái — The key is at reception.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qiántái is built from 前 'front' and tái 'a counter', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzen and doj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second as a raised platform.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: qiántái
- Say it: qiántái, once more

- Say it: yàoshi zài qiántái — The key is at reception.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to go upstairs, then the Mandarin for office, then say qiántái again

Before you move on

What does qiántái mean? (“Front desk; reception”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 207

Where and When

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can agree on a place to meet, talk about plans, arrange things, take photos and visit the sights.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 207: I can agree on a place to meet, talk about plans, arrange things, take photos and visit the sights.

207.1 地点 (dìdiǎn) — place; venue

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for office, then the Mandarin for reception desk.

You'll want to know: 地点

地点 — dìdiǎn — "place; venue".

> 我们见面的地点离这儿两公里 wǒmen jiànmiàn de dìdiǎn lí zhèr liǎng gōnglǐ — The place where we're meeting is two kilometres from here.

The new character, in pieces: 地 — six strokes: on the left the earth piece, a short bar, a vertical and a stroke rising to the right, as at the lower right of 在; on the right 也. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 地点 (dìdiǎn) is built from 地 'ground, place' and 点 'a point', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dijH and temX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'the earth'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: dìdiǎn
- Say it: dìdiǎn, once more
- Say it: wǒmen jiànmiàn de dìdiǎn lí zhèr liǎng gōnglǐ — The place where we're meeting is two kilometres from here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for office, then the Mandarin for reception desk, then say dìdiǎn again

Before you move on

What does 地点 mean? ("Place; venue".) Say it once more.

207.2 地 — the earth piece, then 也

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say dìdiǎn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  也 在

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — yě, zài

Script — the earth piece, then 也

How 地 is written, stroke by stroke

地

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, the earth piece, three strokes. A short bar, a vertical down through it, then a stroke along the foot that rises to the right. It is the piece at the lower right of 在, squeezed to the left.

The right piece, 也, three strokes, the same three as in 也 itself: a bar that turns down and hooks, a short vertical, and a long vertical that bends right along the bottom and hooks up.

3 + 3 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 地, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 地? (Six.) Which stroke of the left piece rises? (The last, along the foot.) What is the right piece? (也.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 地, pinned stroke paths and medians.

207.3 jìhuà — plan

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for reception desk, then the Mandarin for venue.

You'll want to know: jìhuà

jìhuà — "plan".

> nǐ zhōumò yǒu shénme jìhuà — What are your plans for the weekend?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìhuà is built from jì 'to reckon' and huà 'to mark out', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kejH and hweak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to count up' and the second 'to cut with an awl'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: jìhuà
- Say it: jìhuà, once more
- Say it: nǐ zhōumò yǒu shénme jìhuà — What are your plans for the weekend?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for reception desk, then the Mandarin for venue, then say jìhuà again

Before you move on

What does jìhuà mean? ("Plan".) Say it once more.

207.4 ānpái — to arrange

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for venue, then the Mandarin for a plan.

You'll want to know: ānpái

ānpái — "to arrange".

> māma ānpáile míngtiān de shíjiān — Mum has planned out tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of ānpái is built from ān 'to settle' and pái 'to set in a row'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese 'an (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'calm'; the dictionary glosses the second 'to push aside', so how the pair came to mean arranging is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: ānpái
- Say it: ānpái, once more
- Say it: māma ānpáile míngtiān de shíjiān — Mum has planned out tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for venue, then the Mandarin for a plan, then say ānpái again

Before you move on

What does ānpái mean? ("To arrange".) Say it once more.

207.5 zhàoxiàng — to take a photo

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a plan, then the Mandarin for to arrange.

You'll want to know: zhàoxiàng

zhàoxiàng — "to take a photo".

> zhèr kěyǐ zhàoxiàng ma — Can I take photos here?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhàoxiàng is built from zhào 'to shine on' and xiàng 'a likeness', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyewH and sjangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'bright' and the second 'to look at'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: zhàoxiàng
- Say it: zhàoxiàng, once more
- Say it: zhèr kěyǐ zhàoxiàng ma — Can I take photos here?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a plan, then the Mandarin for to arrange, then say zhàoxiàng again

Before you move on

What does zhàoxiàng mean? ("To take a photo".) Say it once more.

207.6 jǐngdiǎn — sight; place of interest

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to arrange, then the Mandarin for to take a photo.

You'll want to know: jǐngdiǎn

jǐngdiǎn — "sight; place of interest".

nǐ qùguò zhège jǐngdiǎn ma — Have you been to this sight?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: jǐng is said with a rising tone before diǎn, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jǐngdiǎn is built from jǐng 'a view' and 点 'a point', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kjaengX and temX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'bright' and 'great'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: jǐngdiǎn
- Say it: jǐngdiǎn, once more
- Say it: nǐ qùguò zhège jǐngdiǎn ma — Have you been to this sight?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to arrange, then the Mandarin for to take a photo, then say jǐngdiǎn again

Before you move on

What does jǐngdiǎn mean? ("Sight; place of interest".) Say it once more.

Chapter 208

Getting Things Fixed

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can call a repairer, have something checked or put in, and talk about tools and batteries.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 208: I can call a repairer, have something checked or put in, and talk about tools and batteries.

208.1 shīfu — skilled tradesman; master (and how you address one)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to take a photo, then the Mandarin for tourist sight.

You'll want to know: shīfu

shīfu — "skilled tradesman; master (and how you address one)".

> shīfu wǒ de diànnǎo huài le — Excuse me, my computer is broken.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shīfu is built from shī 'a teacher', the shī of lǎoshī, and fu 'a tutor', both inherited from Middle Chinese, srij and pjuH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to assist'. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: shīfu
- Say it: shīfu, once more
- Say it: shīfu wǒ de diànnǎo huài le — Excuse me, my computer is broken.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to take a photo, then the Mandarin for tourist sight, then say shīfu again

Before you move on

What does shīfu mean? ("Skilled tradesman; master (and how you address one)".) Say it once more.

208.2 jiǎnchá — to check; to examine

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tourist sight, then the Mandarin for skilled tradesman.

You'll want to know: jiǎnchá

jiǎnchá — "to check; to examine".

yīshēng jiǎnchále wǒ de yǎnjing — The doctor examined my eyes.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiǎnchá is built from two words for looking into things, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kjemX and dzrae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first as the seal on a document and 'to check'; it glosses the second as a raft, so how it came to mean examining is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: jiǎnchá
- Say it: jiǎnchá, once more
- Say it: yīshēng jiǎnchále wǒ de yǎnjing — The doctor examined my eyes.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tourist sight, then the Mandarin for skilled tradesman, then say jiǎnchá again

Before you move on

What does jiǎnchá mean? ("To check; to examine".) Say it once more.

208.3 ānzhuāng — to install; to put in

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for skilled tradesman, then the Mandarin for to examine.

You'll want to know: ānzhuāng

ānzhuāng — "to install; to put in".

tāmen zài ānzhuāng diànshì — They're installing the television.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of ānzhuāng is built from ān 'to settle' and zhuāng 'to fit out', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'an and tsrjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'calm' and the second

'to pack up' and 'to dress'. Putting a machine in place is not given there, so how the pair came to it is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: ānzhuāng
- Say it: ānzhuāng, once more
- Say it: tāmen zài ānzhuāng diànshì — They're installing the television.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for skilled tradesman, then the Mandarin for to examine, then say ānzhuāng again

Before you move on

What does ānzhuāng mean? ("To install; to put in".) Say it once more.

208.4 gōngjù — tool

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to examine, then the Mandarin for to install.

You'll want to know: gōngjù

gōngjù — "tool".

shīfu dàile gōngjù — The repairman brought his tools.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gōngjù is built from gōng 'work' and jù 'an implement', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kuwng and gjuH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to prepare'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: gōngjù
- Say it: gōngjù, once more
- Say it: shīfu dàile gōngjù — The repairman brought his tools.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to examine, then the Mandarin for to install, then say gōngjù again

Before you move on

What does gōngjù mean? ("Tool".) Say it once more.

208.5 diànchí — battery

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to install, then the Mandarin for tool.

You'll want to know: diànchí

diànchí — "battery".

shǒujī de diànchí huài le — The phone's battery has gone.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of diànchí is built from 电 'electricity' and chí 'a pool', both inherited from Middle Chinese, denH and drje (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second as standing water: a pool of electricity.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: diànchí
- Say it: diànchí, once more
- Say it: shǒujī de diànchí huài le — The phone's battery has gone.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to install, then the Mandarin for tool, then say diànchí again

Before you move on

What does diànchí mean? ("Battery".) Say it once more.

Chapter 209

Rules and Notices

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read the rules on a notice: what is safe, keeping quiet, not disturbing, and what is not allowed.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 209: I can read the rules on a notice: what is safe, keeping quiet, not disturbing, and what is not allowed.

209.1 guīdìng — rule; regulation

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tool, then the Mandarin for battery.

You'll want to know: guīdìng

guīdìng — "rule; regulation".

> zhè shì xuéxiào de guīdìng — That's the school's rule.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guīdìng is built from guī 'a pair of compasses, a rule' and dìng 'to settle', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kjwie and dengH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'round' and the second 'calm'.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: guīdìng
- Say it: guīdìng, once more
- Say it: zhè shì xuéxiào de guīdìng — That's the school's rule.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tool, then the Mandarin for battery, then say guīdìng again

Before you move on

What does guīdìng mean? ("Rule; regulation".) Say it once more.

209.2 ānquán — safe; safety

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for battery, then the Mandarin for regulation.

You'll want to know: ānquán ānquán — "safe; safety".

wǎnshang yí ge rén zǒulù bù ānquán — It isn't safe to walk on your own at night.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of ānquán is built from ān 'calm' and quán 'whole', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'an and dzjwen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: ānquán
- Say it: ānquán, once more
- Say it: wǎnshang yí ge rén zǒulù bù ānquán — It isn't safe to walk on your own at night.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for battery, then the Mandarin for regulation, then say ānquán again

Before you move on

What does ānquán mean? ("Safe; safety".) Say it once more.

209.3 bǎochí — to keep up; to keep as it is

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for regulation, then the Mandarin for safe.

You'll want to know: bǎochí

bǎochí — "to keep up; to keep as it is".

qǐng bǎochí ānjìng — Please keep quiet.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bǎochí is built from bǎo 'to guard' and chí 'to hold', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pawX and dri (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to keep safe' and the second 'to grasp'.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: bǎochí
- Say it: bǎochí, once more
- Say it: qǐng bǎochí ānjìng — Please keep quiet.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for regulation, then the Mandarin for safe, then say bǎochí again

Before you move on

What does bǎochí mean? (“To keep up; to keep as it is”.) Say it once more.

209.4 dǎrǎo — to disturb

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for safe, then the Mandarin for to keep up.

You’ll want to know: dǎrǎo

dǎrǎo — “to disturb”.

qǐng bú yào dǎrǎo wǒ — Please don’t disturb me.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: dǎ is said with a rising tone before rǎo, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎrǎo is built from 扌丁 ’to strike’ and rǎo ’to trouble’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and nyewX (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), which glosses the second ’to throw into disorder’ and ’to vex’.

What you’ve built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎrǎo
- Say it: dǎrǎo, once more
- Say it: qǐng bú yào dǎrǎo wǒ — Please don't disturb me.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for safe, then the Mandarin for to keep up, then say dǎrǎo again

Before you move on

What does dǎrǎo mean? ("To disturb".) Say it once more.

209.5 yǔnxǔ — to allow; to permit

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to keep up, then the Mandarin for to disturb.

You'll want to know: yǔnxǔ

yǔnxǔ — "to allow; to permit".

zhèr bù yǔnxǔ xīyān — Smoking isn't allowed here.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: yǔn is said with a rising tone before xǔ, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǔnxǔ is built from yǔn and xǔ, both inherited from Middle Chinese, ywinX and xjoX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'true' and the second 'to permit'.

What you've built

One more word for reading notices and messages.

Your turn

- Say it: yǔnxǔ
- Say it: yǔnxǔ, once more
- Say it: zhèr bù yǔnxǔ xīyān — Smoking isn't allowed here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to keep up, then the Mandarin for to disturb, then say yǔnxǔ again

Before you move on

What does yǔnxǔ mean? ("To allow; to permit".) Say it once more.

Chapter 210

Colours and Styles

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name purple and brown, talk about styles, choose one and find the fitting room.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 210: I can name purple and brown, talk about styles, choose one and find the fitting room.

210.1 zǐsè — purple

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to disturb, then the Mandarin for to permit.

You'll want to know: zǐsè

zǐsè — "purple".

> wǒ xǐhuan zǐsè — I like purple.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zǐsè is built from zǐ 'purple' and sè 'colour', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsjeX and srik (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as a colour between the pure ones.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: zǐsè
- Say it: zǐsè, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan zǐsè — I like purple.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to disturb, then the Mandarin for to permit, then say zǐsè again

Before you move on

What does zǐsè mean? ("Purple".) Say it once more.

210.2 zōngsè — brown

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to permit, then the Mandarin for purple.

You'll want to know: zōngsè

zōngsè — "brown".

wǒ yào zōngsè de — I'll have the brown one.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zōngsè is built from zōng and sè 'colour'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese srik (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: zōngsè
- Say it: zōngsè, once more
- Say it: wǒ yào zōngsè de — I'll have the brown one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to permit, then the Mandarin for purple, then say zōngsè again

Before you move on

What does zōngsè mean? ("Brown".) Say it once more.

210.3 kuǎnshì — style; design

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for purple, then the Mandarin for brown.

You'll want to know: kuǎnshì

kuǎnshì — "style; design".

zhège kuǎnshì hěn hǎokàn — This style looks nice.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kuǎnshì is built from kuǎn and shì 'a model', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khwanX and syik (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'sincere' and the second 'a rule'; how the pair came to mean a style is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: kuǎnshì
- Say it: kuǎnshì, once more
- Say it: zhège kuǎnshì hěn hǎokàn — This style looks nice.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for purple, then the Mandarin for brown, then say kuǎnshì again

Before you move on

What does kuǎnshì mean? ("Style; design".) Say it once more.

210.4 试衣间 (shìyījiān) — fitting room

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for brown, then the Mandarin for style of clothes.

You'll want to know: 试衣间

试衣间 — shìyījiān — "fitting room".

我在找试衣间 wǒ zài zhǎo shìyījiān — I'm looking for the fitting room.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 试衣间 (shìyījiān) is built from 试 'to try', 衣 'clothes' and 间 'a room'. The first two are inherited from Middle Chinese, syiH and 'j+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: shìyījiān
- Say it: shìyījiān, once more

- Say it: wǒ zài zhǎo shìyīfjiān — I'm looking for the fitting room.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for brown, then the Mandarin for style of clothes, then say shìyīfjiān again

Before you move on

What does 试衣间 mean? ("Fitting room".) Say it once more.

210.5 xuǎn — to choose

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for style of clothes, then the Mandarin for fitting room.

You'll want to know: xuǎn

xuǎn — "to choose".

nǐ xuǎn nǎge yánsè — Which colour are you choosing?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xuǎn is inherited from Middle Chinese sjwenX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to choose'.

What you've built

One more word for asking for what I want.

Your turn

- Say it: xuǎn
- Say it: xuǎn, once more
- Say it: nǐ xuǎn nǎge yánsè — Which colour are you choosing?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for style of clothes, then the Mandarin for fitting room, then say xuǎn again

Before you move on

What does xuǎn mean? (“To choose”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 211

Local or From Out of Town

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say who is local and who comes from elsewhere, and talk about the city centre and a map.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 211: I can say who is local and who comes from elsewhere, and talk about the city centre and a map.

211.1 本地 (běndì) — local

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for fitting room, then the Mandarin for to choose.

You'll want to know: 本地

本地 — běndì — "local".

> 我们找一个本地人问路 wǒmen zhǎo yí ge běndì rén wènlù — Let's find someone local and ask the way.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 本地 (běndì) is built from 本 'root, one's own' and 地 'place', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pwonX and dijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as the root of a tree and 'the beginning'.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: běndì
- Say it: běndì, once more
- Say it: wǒmen zhǎo yí ge běndì rén wènlù — Let's find someone local and ask the way.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for fitting room, then the Mandarin for to choose, then say běndì again

Before you move on

What does 本地 mean? ("Local".) Say it once more.

211.2 外地 (wàidì) — from out of town; another part of the country

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to choose, then the Mandarin for local.

You'll want to know: 外地

外地 — wàidì — "from out of town; another part of the country".

他是外地人每天开车一百公里 tā shì wàidì rén měitiān kāichē yìbǎi gōnglǐ — He's from out of town and drives a hundred kilometres every day.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 外地 (wàidì) is built from 外 'outside' and 地 'place', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngwajH and dijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: wàidì
- Say it: wàidì, once more
- Say it: tā shì wàidì rén měitiān kāichē yìbǎi gōnglǐ — He's from out of town and drives a hundred kilometres every day.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to choose, then the Mandarin for local, then say wàidì again

Before you move on

What does 外地 mean? ("From out of town; another part of the country".) Say it once more.

211.3 shìzhōngxīn — city centre

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for local, then the Mandarin for from out of town.

You'll want to know: shìzhōngxīn

shìzhōngxīn — "city centre".

wǒ jiā zài shìzhōngxīn — My home is in the city centre.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shìzhōngxīn is built from shì 'a market, a city', 中 'middle' and 心 'heart', all inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyiX, trjuwng and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as the place where buying and selling is done.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: shìzhōngxīn
- Say it: shìzhōngxīn, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā zài shìzhōngxīn — My home is in the city centre.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for local, then the Mandarin for from out of town, then say shìzhōngxīn again

Before you move on

What does shìzhōngxīn mean? ("City centre".) Say it once more.

211.4 dìtú — map

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for from out of town, then the Mandarin for city centre.

You'll want to know: dìtú

dìtú — "map".

nǐ yǒu Běijīng de dìtú ma — Have you got a map of Beijing?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dìtú is built from 地 'ground' and tú 'a plan, a chart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dijH and du (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to plan'.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: dìtú
- Say it: dìtú, once more
- Say it: nǐ yǒu Běijīng de dìtú ma — Have you got a map of Beijing?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for from out of town, then the Mandarin for city centre, then say dìtú again

Before you move on

What does dìtú mean? ("Map".) Say it once more.

211.5 dàochù — everywhere

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for city centre, then the Mandarin for map.

You'll want to know: dàochù

dàochù — "everywhere".

shìzhōngxīn dàochù dōu shì rén — There are people everywhere in the city centre.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dàochù is built from 到 'to reach' and chù 'a place', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tawH and tsyhoH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a place'.

What you've built

One more word for asking where things are.

Your turn

- Say it: dàochù
- Say it: dàochù, once more
- Say it: shìzhōngxīn dàochù dōu shì rén — There are people everywhere in the city centre.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for city centre, then the Mandarin for map, then say dàochù again

Before you move on

What does dàochù mean? ("Everywhere".) Say it once more.

211.6 Looking back: from Upstairs to Local or From Out of Town

Say the Mandarin for a building of several floors and storey.

Your turn

- Say it: a building of several floors, storey, to go upstairs, office, reception desk
- Say it: venue, a plan, to arrange, to take a photo, tourist sight
- Say it: skilled tradesman, to examine, to install, tool, battery
- Say it: regulation, safe, to keep up, to disturb, to permit
- Say it: purple, brown, style of clothes, fitting room, to choose
- Say it: local, from out of town, city centre, map, everywhere
- Read it: 地 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

A building of several floors? (lóu.) Storey? (céng.) To go upstairs? (shànglóu.) Office? (bàngōngshì.) Reception desk? (qiántái.) Venue? (地点, dìdiǎn.) A plan? (jìhuà.) To arrange? (ānpái.) To take a photo? (zhàoxiàng.) Tourist sight? (jǐngdiǎn.) Skilled tradesman? (shīfu.) To examine? (jiǎnchá.) To install? (ānzhuāng.) Tool? (gōngjù.) Battery? (diànchí.) Regulation? (guīdìng.) Safe? (ānquán.) To keep up? (bǎochí.) To disturb? (dǎrǎo.) To permit? (yǔnxǔ.) Purple? (zǐsè.) Brown? (zōngsè.) Style of clothes? (kuǎnshì.) Fitting room? (试衣间, shìyījiān.) To choose? (xuǎn.) Local? (本地, běndì.) From out of town? (外地, wàidì.) City centre? (shìzhōngxīn.) Map? (dìtú.) Everywhere? (dàochù.)

Chapter 212

Services in Town

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can print and photocopy things, top up my phone, make an appointment and get a haircut.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 212: I can print and photocopy things, top up my phone, make an appointment and get a haircut.

212.1 dǎyìn — to print out

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for map, then the Mandarin for everywhere.

You'll want to know: dǎyìn

dǎyìn — "to print out".

> wǒ xiǎng dǎyìn liǎng zhāng zhàopiàn — I'd like to print two photos.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎyìn is built from 扌丁 'to strike' and yìn 'a seal', both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and 'jinH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second as a seal of office.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎyìn
- Say it: dǎyìn, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng dǎyìn liǎng zhāng zhàopiàn — I'd like to print two photos.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for map, then the Mandarin for everywhere, then say dǎyìn again

Before you move on

What does dǎyìn mean? ("To print out".) Say it once more.

212.2 fùyìn — to photocopy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for everywhere, then the Mandarin for to print out.

You'll want to know: fùyìn

fùyìn — "to photocopy".

qǐng bāng wǒ fùyìn shēnfènzhèng — Could you copy my identity card for me, please?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fùyìn is built from fù 'double' and yìn 'a seal, a print', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjuwk and 'jinH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as a lined garment.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: fùyìn
- Say it: fùyìn, once more
- Say it: qǐng bāng wǒ fùyìn shēnfènzhèng — Could you copy my identity card for me, please?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for everywhere, then the Mandarin for to print out, then say fùyìn again

Before you move on

What does fùyìn mean? ("To photocopy".) Say it once more.

212.3 chōngzhí — to top up (a card or a phone)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to print out, then the Mandarin for to photocopy.

You'll want to know: chōngzhí

chōngzhí — "to top up (a card or a phone)".

nǐ de shǒujī chōngzhí le ma — Have you topped up your phone?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chōngzhí is built from chōng 'to fill' and zhí 'a value', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhuwng and driH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'full' and the second 'to hold' and 'to match'. The dictionary gives the second a departing tone, so the rising tone of zhí is not the regular outcome, and how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: chōngzhí
- Say it: chōngzhí, once more
- Say it: nǐ de shǒujī chōngzhí le ma — Have you topped up your phone?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to print out, then the Mandarin for to photocopy, then say chōngzhí again

Before you move on

What does chōngzhí mean? ("To top up (a card or a phone)".) Say it once more.

212.4 yùyuē — to make an appointment; to book

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to photocopy, then the Mandarin for to top up.

You'll want to know: yùyuē

yùyuē — "to make an appointment; to book".

kěyǐ yùyuē ma — Can I make an appointment?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yùyuē is built from yù 'beforehand' and yuē 'to bind, to agree', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yoH and 'jak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'before' and the second 'to tie up'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: yùyuē
- Say it: yùyuē, once more
- Say it: kěyǐ yùyuē ma — Can I make an appointment?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to photocopy, then the Mandarin for to top up, then say yùyuē again

Before you move on

What does yùyuē mean? ("To make an appointment; to book".) Say it once more.

212.5 lǐfà — to get a haircut

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to top up, then the Mandarin for to make an appointment.

You'll want to know: lǐfà

lǐfà — "to get a haircut".

wǒ yùyuēle míngtiān qù lǐfà — I've booked to get my hair cut tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǐfà is built from lǐ 'to put in order' and fà 'the hair of the head', both inherited from Middle Chinese, liX and pjot (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to work jade'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: lǐfà
- Say it: lǐfà, once more
- Say it: wǒ yùyuēle míngtiān qù lǐfà — I've booked to get my hair cut tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to top up, then the Mandarin for to make an appointment, then say lǐfà again

Before you move on

What does lǐfà mean? ("To get a haircut".) Say it once more.

Chapter 213

A Trip Abroad

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about visas, tour guides, tourists and tickets, and wish someone a safe journey.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 213: I can talk about visas, tour guides, tourists and tickets, and wish someone a safe journey.

213.1 qiānzhèng — visa

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to make an appointment, then the Mandarin for to get a haircut.

You'll want to know: qiānzhèng

qiānzhèng — "visa".

> wǒ hái méiyǒu qiānzhèng — I haven't got a visa yet.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qiānzhèng is built from qiān 'to sign' and zhèng 'proof'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese tsyingH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to verify'; no dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: qiānzhèng
- Say it: qiānzhèng, once more
- Say it: wǒ hái méiyǒu qiānzhèng — I haven't got a visa yet.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to make an appointment, then the Mandarin for to get a haircut, then say qiānzhèng again

Before you move on

What does qiānzhèng mean? ("Visa".) Say it once more.

213.2 dǎoyóu — tour guide

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get a haircut, then the Mandarin for visa.

You'll want to know: dǎoyóu

dǎoyóu — "tour guide".

wǒmen de dǎoyóu shì běndì rén — Our tour guide is a local.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎoyóu is built from dǎo 'to lead' and yóu 'to travel about', the yóu of lǚyóu, both inherited from Middle Chinese, dawH and yuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to lead'. The dictionary gives it a departing tone, so the rising tone of dǎo is not the regular outcome, and how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎoyóu
- Say it: dǎoyóu, once more
- Say it: wǒmen de dǎoyóu shì běndì rén — Our tour guide is a local.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get a haircut, then the Mandarin for visa, then say dǎoyóu again

Before you move on

What does dǎoyóu mean? ("Tour guide".) Say it once more.

213.3 yóukè — tourist

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for visa, then the Mandarin for tour guide.

You'll want to know: yóukè

yóukè — "tourist".

zhèr de yóukè dōu shì wàiguó rén — The tourists here are all from abroad.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yóukè is built from yóu 'to travel about' and kè 'a guest', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yuw and khaek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: yóukè
- Say it: yóukè, once more
- Say it: zhèr de yóukè dōu shì wàiguó rén — The tourists here are all from abroad.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for visa, then the Mandarin for tour guide, then say yóukè again

Before you move on

What does yóukè mean? ("Tourist".) Say it once more.

213.4 门票 (ménpiào) — admission ticket

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tour guide, then the Mandarin for tourist.

You'll want to know: 门票

门票 — ménpiào — "admission ticket".

门票多少钱 ménpiào duōshao qián — How much is it to get in?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 门票 (ménpiào) is built from 门 'gate' and 票 'a ticket'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese mwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of 票, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: ménpiào
- Say it: ménpiào, once more

- Say it: ménpiào duōshao qián — How much is it to get in?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tour guide, then the Mandarin for tourist, then say ménpiào again

Before you move on

What does 门票 mean? ("Admission ticket".) Say it once more.

213.5 yílù píng'ān — have a safe journey

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tourist, then the Mandarin for admission ticket.

You'll want to know: yílù píng'ān

yílù píng'ān — "have a safe journey".

nǐ míngtiān huíguó yílù píng'ān — You're going home tomorrow: have a safe journey!

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
一 changes its tone here: yí, before the falling tone of lù.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yílù píng'ān is built from 一路 'the whole way' and píng'ān 'safe and sound', all four parts inherited from Middle Chinese, 'jit, luH, bjaeng and 'an (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: yílù píng'ān
- Say it: yílù píng'ān, once more
- Say it: nǐ míngtiān huíguó yílù píng'ān — You're going home tomorrow: have a safe journey!

- Recall: say the Mandarin for tourist, then the Mandarin for admission ticket, then say yílù píng'ān again

Before you move on

What does yílù píng'ān mean? ("Have a safe journey".) Say it once more.

Chapter 214

Asking for Help

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I have a question, ask someone to tell me, say I understand, and ask what to do.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 214: I can say I have a question, ask someone to tell me, say I understand, and ask what to do.

214.1 wèntí — question; problem

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for admission ticket, then the Mandarin for have a safe journey.

You'll want to know: wèntí

wèntí — "question; problem".

> wǒ yǒu yí ge wèntí — I've got a question.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wèntí is built from 问 'to ask' and tí 'a heading', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjunH and dej (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'the forehead' and 'the title of a book'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: wèntí
- Say it: wèntí, once more
- Say it: wǒ yǒu yí ge wèntí — I've got a question.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for admission ticket, then the Mandarin for have a safe journey, then say wèntí again

Before you move on

What does wèntí mean? ("Question; problem".) Say it once more.

214.2 gàosu — to tell

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for have a safe journey, then the Mandarin for problem.

You'll want to know: gàosu

gàosu — "to tell".

qǐng gàosu wǒ nǐ de hàomǎ — Please tell me your number.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gàosu is built from gào 'to report' and su 'to tell', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kawH and suH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); in the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: gàosu
- Say it: gàosu, once more
- Say it: qǐng gàosu wǒ nǐ de hàomǎ — Please tell me your number.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for have a safe journey, then the Mandarin for problem, then say gàosu again

Before you move on

What does gàosu mean? ("To tell".) Say it once more.

214.3 明白 (míngbai) — to grasp a meaning; to understand; clear

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for problem, then the Mandarin for to tell someone.

You'll want to know: 明白

明白 — míngbai — "to grasp a meaning; to understand; clear".

我明白你很关心我 wǒ míngbai nǐ hěn guānxīn wǒ — I know how much you care about me.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 明白 (míngbai) is built from 明 'bright' and 白 'white', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjaeng and baek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): bright and clear. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: míngbai

- Say it: míngbai, once more
- Say it: wǒ míngbai nǐ hěn guānxīn wǒ — I know how much you care about me.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for problem, then the Mandarin for to tell someone, then say míngbai again

Before you move on

What does 明白 mean? ("To grasp a meaning; to understand; clear".) Say it once more.

214.4 bànfǎ — a way to deal with it

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to tell someone, then the Mandarin for to grasp a meaning.

You'll want to know: bànfǎ

bànfǎ — "a way to deal with it".

wǒ méiyǒu bànfǎ — There's nothing I can do.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bànfǎ is built from bàn 'to handle' and fǎ 'a method', both inherited from Middle Chinese, beanH and pjop (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to provide' and the second 'a rule'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: bànfǎ
- Say it: bànfǎ, once more

- Say it: wǒ méiyǒu bànfǎ — There's nothing I can do.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to tell someone, then the Mandarin for to grasp a meaning, then say bànfǎ again

Before you move on

What does bànfǎ mean? ("A way to deal with it".) Say it once more.

214.5 zěnme bàn — what should I do?

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to grasp a meaning, then the Mandarin for a way to deal with it.

You'll want to know: zěnme bàn

zěnme bàn — "what should I do?".

wǒ de hùzhào diū le zěnme bàn — I've lost my passport. What should I do?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zěnme bàn is built from zěnme 'how' and bàn 'to handle'. The last is inherited from Middle Chinese beanH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of zěn, so the history of zěnme is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: zěnme bàn
- Say it: zěnme bàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ de hùzhào diū le zěnme bàn — I've lost my passport. What should I do?

- Recall: say the Mandarin for to grasp a meaning, then the Mandarin for a way to deal with it, then say zěnme bàn again

Before you move on

What does zěnme bàn mean? (“What should I do?”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 215

Deliveries and the Laundry

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can have goods delivered, sign for a parcel, leave luggage in safekeeping and use the laundry.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 215: I can have goods delivered, sign for a parcel, leave luggage in safekeeping and use the laundry.

215.1 sònghuò — to deliver goods

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a way to deal with it, then the Mandarin for what should I do.

You'll want to know: sònghuò

sònghuò — "to deliver goods".

> tāmen míngtiān sònghuò — They're delivering tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of sònghuò is built from sòng 'to send' and huò 'goods', both inherited from Middle Chinese, suwngH and xwaH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to send off'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: sònghuò
- Say it: sònghuò, once more
- Say it: tāmen míngtiān sònghuò — They're delivering tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a way to deal with it, then the Mandarin for what should I do, then say sònghuò again

Before you move on

What does sònghuò mean? ("To deliver goods".) Say it once more.

215.2 qiānshōu — to sign for (a delivery)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for what should I do, then the Mandarin for to deliver goods.

You'll want to know: qiānshōu

qiānshōu — "to sign for (a delivery)".

kuàidì dào le qǐng qiānshōu — Your delivery is here; please sign for it.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qiānshōu is built from qiān 'to sign' and shōu 'to receive'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese syuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: qiānshōu
- Say it: qiānshōu, once more
- Say it: kuàidì dào le qǐng qiānshōu — Your delivery is here; please sign for it.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for what should I do, then the Mandarin for to deliver goods, then say qiānshōu again

Before you move on

What does qiānshōu mean? ("To sign for (a delivery)".) Say it once more.

215.3 jìcún — to leave in safekeeping

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to deliver goods, then the Mandarin for to sign for.

You'll want to know: jìcún

jìcún — "to leave in safekeeping".

xíngli kěyǐ jìcún ma — Can I leave my luggage here?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìcún is built from jì 'to entrust' and cún 'to keep', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kjeH and dzwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to entrust'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: jìcún
- Say it: jìcún, once more
- Say it: xíngli kěyǐ jìcún ma — Can I leave my luggage here?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to deliver goods, then the Mandarin for to sign for, then say jìcún again

Before you move on

What does jìcún mean? ("To leave in safekeeping".) Say it once more.

215.4 洗衣店 (xǐyīdiàn) — laundry shop

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sign for, then the Mandarin for to leave in safekeeping.

You'll want to know: 洗衣店

洗衣店 — xǐyīdiàn — "laundry shop".

洗衣店在书店东边 xǐyīdiàn zài shūdiàn dōngbian — The laundry is to the east of the bookshop.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 洗衣店 (xǐyīdiàn) is built from 洗 'to wash', 衣 'clothes' and 店 'a shop', all inherited from Middle Chinese, sejX, 'j+j and temH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: xǐyīdiàn
- Say it: xǐyīdiàn, once more

- Say it: xǐyīdiàn zài shūdiàn dōngbian — The laundry is to the east of the bookshop.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sign for, then the Mandarin for to leave in safekeeping, then say xǐyīdiàn again

Before you move on

What does 洗衣店 mean? ("Laundry shop".) Say it once more.

215.5 gānxǐ — to dry-clean

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to leave in safekeeping, then the Mandarin for laundry shop.

You'll want to know: gānxǐ

gānxǐ — "to dry-clean".

zhège kěyǐ gānxǐ ma — Can this be dry-cleaned?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gānxǐ is built from gān 'dry' and 洗 'to wash', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kan and sejX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for everyday actions.

Your turn

- Say it: gānxǐ
- Say it: gānxǐ, once more
- Say it: zhège kěyǐ gānxǐ ma — Can this be dry-cleaned?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to leave in safekeeping, then the Mandarin for laundry shop, then say gānxǐ again

Before you move on

What does gānxǐ mean? (“To dry-clean”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 216

Something Has Gone Wrong

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say something has gone wrong or is strange, that someone has stolen something, and call the police.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 216: I can say something has gone wrong or is strange, that someone has stolen something, and call the police.

216.1 zāogāo — oh no; what a mess

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for laundry shop, then the Mandarin for to dry-clean.

You'll want to know: zāogāo

zāogāo — "oh no; what a mess".

> zāogāo wǒ de qiánbāo diū le — Oh no, I've lost my wallet!

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zāogāo is built from zāo 'dregs' and gāo 'cake', both inherited from Middle Chinese (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): tsaw, glossed 'dregs', and probably the kaw that the dictionary writes with another form of the character, glossed with a word for gruel. How the pair came to mean a mess is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: zāogāo
- Say it: zāogāo, once more
- Say it: zāogāo wǒ de qiánbāo diū le — Oh no, I've lost my wallet!
- Recall: say the Mandarin for laundry shop, then the Mandarin for to dry-clean, then say zāogāo again

Before you move on

What does zāogāo mean? ("Oh no; what a mess".) Say it once more.

216.2 qíguài — strange; odd

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to dry-clean, then the Mandarin for oh no.

You'll want to know: qíguài

qíguài — "strange; odd".

zhège rén hěn qíguài — That person is strange.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qíguài is built from qí and guài, both inherited from Middle Chinese, gje and kweajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'different' and the second 'strange'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: qíguài
- Say it: qíguài, once more
- Say it: zhège rén hěn qíguài — That person is strange.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to dry-clean, then the Mandarin for oh no, then say qíguài again

Before you move on

What does qíguài mean? ("Strange; odd".) Say it once more.

216.3 tōu — to steal

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for oh no, then the Mandarin for odd.

You'll want to know: tōu

tōu — "to steal".

yǒu rén tōule wǒ de zìxíngchē — Somebody has stolen my bike.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

tōu is inherited from Middle Chinese thuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to rob'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: tōu
- Say it: tōu, once more

- Say it: yǒu rén tōule wǒ de zìxíngchē — Somebody has stolen my bike.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for oh no, then the Mandarin for odd, then say tōu again

Before you move on

What does tōu mean? ("To steal".) Say it once more.

216.4 jǐngchá — police officer; the police

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for odd, then the Mandarin for to steal.

You'll want to know: jǐngchá

jǐngchá — "police officer; the police".

jǐngchá lái le — The police are here.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jǐngchá is built from jǐng 'to warn' and chá 'to watch over', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kjaengX and tsrheat (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to be on guard' and the second 'to supervise'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: jǐngchá
- Say it: jǐngchá, once more
- Say it: jǐngchá lái le — The police are here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for odd, then the Mandarin for to steal, then say jǐngchá again

Before you move on

What does jǐngchá mean? (“Police officer; the police”.) Say it once more.

216.5 bàojǐng — to call the police

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to steal, then the Mandarin for police officer.

You’ll want to know: bàojǐng

bàojǐng — “to call the police”.

wǒmen yào bàojǐng — We’re going to call the police.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bàojǐng is built from bào ’to report’ and jǐng ’to warn’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, pawH and kjaengX (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription).

What you’ve built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: bàojǐng
- Say it: bàojǐng, once more
- Say it: wǒmen yào bàojǐng — We’re going to call the police.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to steal, then the Mandarin for police officer, then say bàojǐng again

Before you move on

What does bàojǐng mean? (“To call the police”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 217

Never Mind

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say it doesn't matter, say of course, say I remember, ask around and solve a problem.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 217: I can say it doesn't matter, say of course, say I remember, ask around and solve a problem.

217.1 méi guānxi — it doesn't matter; never mind

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for police officer, then the Mandarin for to call the police.

You'll want to know: méi guānxi

méi guānxi — "it doesn't matter; never mind".

> méi guānxi wǒmen míngtiān qù — Never mind, we'll go tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of méi guānxi is built from 没 'not have' and guānxi 'a connection', all three parts inherited from Middle Chinese, mwot, kwaen and kejH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): no connection to worry about.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: méi guānxi
- Say it: méi guānxi, once more
- Say it: méi guānxi wǒmen míngtiān qù — Never mind, we'll go tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for police officer, then the Mandarin for to call the police, then say méi guānxi again

Before you move on

What does méi guānxi mean? ("It doesn't matter; never mind".) Say it once more.

217.2 dāngrán — of course

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to call the police, then the Mandarin for never mind.

You'll want to know: dāngrán

dāngrán — "of course".

dāngrán kěyǐ — Of course you can.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dāngrán is built from dāng 'to match' and rán 'so', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tang and nyen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'like this' and 'it is so'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: dāngrán
- Say it: dāngrán, once more
- Say it: dāngrán kěyǐ — Of course you can.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to call the police, then the Mandarin for never mind, then say dāngrán again

Before you move on

What does dāngrán mean? ("Of course".) Say it once more.

217.3 jìde — to remember

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for never mind, then the Mandarin for of course.

You'll want to know: jìde

jìde — "to remember".

nǐ hái jìde wǒ ma — Do you still remember me?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìde is built from jì 'to note down' and 得 'to get', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kiH and tok (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); in the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: jìde
- Say it: jìde, once more

- Say it: nǐ hái jìde wǒ ma — Do you still remember me?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for never mind, then the Mandarin for of course, then say jìde again

Before you move on

What does jìde mean? ("To remember".) Say it once more.

217.4 dǎting — to ask around; to inquire

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for of course, then the Mandarin for to remember.

You'll want to know: dǎting

dǎting — "to ask around; to inquire".

wǒ dǎtingle shūdiàn jīntiān bù kāimén — I asked around, and the bookshop is closed today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎting is built from 打 'to strike' and tīng 'to listen', both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and theng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); in the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎting
- Say it: dǎting, once more
- Say it: wǒ dǎtingle shūdiàn jīntiān bù kāimén — I asked around, and the bookshop is closed today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for of course, then the Mandarin for to remember, then say dǎting again

Before you move on

What does dǎting mean? (“To ask around; to inquire”.) Say it once more.

217.5 jiějué — to solve; to settle

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to remember, then the Mandarin for to ask around.

You’ll want to know: jiějué

jiějué — “to solve; to settle”.

zhège wèntí wǒmen néng jiějué — We can sort this problem out.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiějué is built from jiě ’to untie’ and jué ’to break through’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, keaX and kwet (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), which glosses the first ’to explain’ and ’to loosen’, and the second ’to break’.

What you’ve built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: jiějué
- Say it: jiějué, once more
- Say it: zhège wèntí wǒmen néng jiějué — We can sort this problem out.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to remember, then the Mandarin for to ask around, then say jiějué again

Before you move on

What does jiějué mean? ("To solve; to settle".) Say it once more.

217.6 Looking back: from Services in Town to Never Mind

Say the Mandarin for to print out and to photocopy.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to print out, to photocopy, to top up, to make an appointment, to get a haircut
- visa, tour guide, tourist, admission ticket, have a safe journey
- problem, to tell someone, to grasp a meaning, a way to deal with it, what should I do
- to deliver goods, to sign for, to leave in safekeeping, laundry shop, to dry-clean
- oh no, odd, to steal, police officer, to call the police
- never mind, of course, to remember, to ask around, to solve

Before you move on

To print out? (dǎyìn.) To photocopy? (fùyìn.) To top up? (chōngzhí.) To make an appointment? (yùyuē.) To get a haircut? (lǐfà.) Visa? (qiānzhèng.) Tour guide? (dǎoyóu.) Tourist? (yóukè.) Admission ticket? (门票, ménpiào.) Have a safe journey? (yílù píng'ān.) Problem? (wèntí.) To tell someone? (gàosu.) To grasp a meaning? (明白, míngbai.) A way to deal with it? (bànfǎ.) What should I do? (zěnme bàn.) To deliver goods? (sònghuò.) To sign for? (qiānshōu.) To leave in safekeeping? (jìcún.) Laundry shop? (洗衣店, xǐyīdiàn.) To dry-clean? (gānxǐ.) Oh no? (zāogāo.) Odd? (qíguài.) To steal? (tōu.) Police officer? (jǐngchá.) To call the police? (bàojǐng.) Never mind? (méi guānxi.) Of course? (dāngrán.)

To remember? (jìde.) To ask around? (dǎting.) To solve? (jiějué.)

217.7 Never Mind — once more

Say the Mandarin for never mind and of course.

Your turn

- Say it: never mind, of course, to remember, to ask around, to solve

Before you move on

Never mind? (méi guānxi.) Of course? (dāngrán.) To remember? (jìde.) To ask around? (dǎting.) To solve? (jiějué.)

Chapter 218

Wind and Warm Days

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a windbreaker, a mild day, muggy heat, dry air and damp.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 218: I can talk about a windbreaker, a mild day, muggy heat, dry air and damp.

218.1 风衣 (fēngyī) — a windbreaker; a light coat against the wind

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to ask around, then the Mandarin for to solve.

You'll want to know: 风衣

风衣 — fēngyī — "a windbreaker; a light coat against the wind".

> chūntiān fēng hěn dà wǒ chángcháng chuān fēngyī — It's windy in spring, so I often wear a windbreaker.

The new character, in pieces: 风 — four strokes: a long stroke falling to the left, a bar that turns and hooks down to the right, and inside them a short stroke to the left and a dot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 风衣 (fēngyī) is built from 风 'wind' and 衣 'garment', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjuwng and 'j+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary explains the first, after an older book, as the messenger of heaven and earth.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: fēngyī
- Say it: fēngyī, once more
- Say it: chūntiān fēng hěn dà wǒ chángcháng chuān fēngyī — It's windy in spring, so I often wear a windbreaker.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to ask around, then the Mandarin for to solve, then say fēngyī again

Before you move on

What does 风衣 mean? ("A windbreaker; a light coat against the wind".) Say it once more.

218.2 风 — a frame, and two short strokes inside

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say fēngyī — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

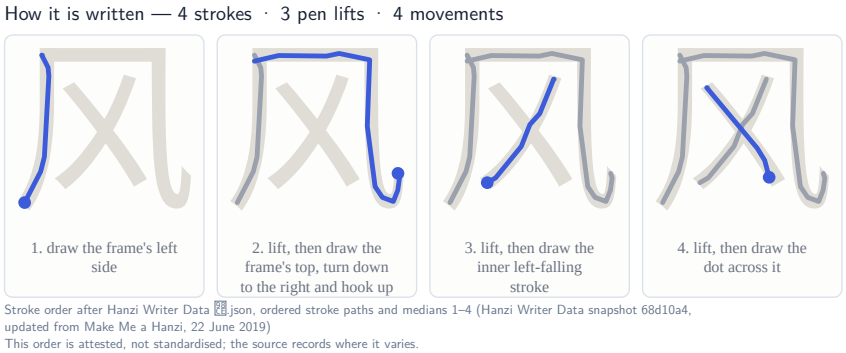
  衣 气

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — yī, qì

Script — a frame, and two short strokes inside



How 风 is written, stroke by stroke

风

Two pieces: a frame, then what sits inside it. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The frame, two strokes. A long stroke falling to the left, from the top down to the foot. Then a bar from its top that runs right, turns and falls to the lower right, flicking up at its end.

Inside, two strokes. A short stroke falling to the left, then a dot falling to the right across it, like a small cross.

2 + 2 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 风, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 风? (Four.) What comes first? (The long stroke falling to the left.) What sits inside? (A short fall to the left and a dot.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 风, pinned stroke paths and medians.

218.3 nuǎnhuo — pleasantly warm; mild

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to solve, then the Mandarin for a windbreaker.

You'll want to know: nuǎnhuo

nuǎnhuo — "pleasantly warm; mild".

jīntiān hěn nuǎnhuo — It's lovely and warm today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nuǎnhuo is built from nuǎn 'warm' and huo 'mild', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nwanX and hwa (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary lists the first beside another character glossed 'warm', and glosses the second 'in harmony' and 'neither hard nor soft'; in the word the second loses its tone and its vowel changes.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: nuǎnhuo
- Say it: nuǎnhuo, once more
- Say it: jīntiān hěn nuǎnhuo — It's lovely and warm today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to solve, then the Mandarin for a windbreaker, then say nuǎnhuo again

Before you move on

What does nuǎnhuo mean? ("Pleasantly warm; mild".) Say it once more.

218.4 mēnrè — hot and stuffy; muggy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a windbreaker, then the Mandarin for pleasantly warm.

You'll want to know: mēnrè

mēnrè — "hot and stuffy; muggy".

jīntiān tài mēnrè le — It's so muggy today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of mēnrè is built from mēn 'stifled' and rè 'hot', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mwonH and nyet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'vexed' and explains the second as burning, as if by fire. The first is listed with a departing tone, so the level tone of mēn is not the regular outcome.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: mēnrè
- Say it: mēnrè, once more
- Say it: jīntiān tài mēnrè le — It's so muggy today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a windbreaker, then the Mandarin for pleasantly warm, then say mēnrè again

Before you move on

What does mēnrè mean? ("Hot and stuffy; muggy".) Say it once more.

218.5 gānzào — dry air; dry (of weather or skin)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for pleasantly warm, then the Mandarin for hot and stuffy.

You'll want to know: gānzào

gānzào — "dry air; dry (of weather or skin)".

dōngtiān zhèr hěn gānzào — Winters here are very dry.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gānzào is built from gān 'dry' and zào 'parched'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese kan (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second, sawX there, with this very word, 'dry'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: gānzào
- Say it: gānzào, once more
- Say it: dōngtiān zhèr hěn gānzào — Winters here are very dry.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for pleasantly warm, then the Mandarin for hot and stuffy, then say gānzào again

Before you move on

What does gānzào mean? ("Dry air; dry (of weather or skin)".) Say it once more.

218.6 cháoshī — damp; humid

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hot and stuffy, then the Mandarin for dry air.

You'll want to know: cháoshī

cháoshī — "damp; humid".

> xiàtiān zhèr hěn cháoshī — Summers here are very humid.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cháoshī is built from cháo 'tide' and shī 'wet', both inherited from Middle Chinese, drjew and syip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'tide water' and the second 'soaked with water'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: cháoshī
- Say it: cháoshī, once more
- Say it: xiàtiān zhèr hěn cháoshī — Summers here are very humid.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hot and stuffy, then the Mandarin for dry air, then say cháoshī again

Before you move on

What does cháoshī mean? ("Damp; humid".) Say it once more.

Chapter 219

Cloudy Tomorrow

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say there will be cloud, a cloudy day, a cold snap, what the temperature is and when it will clear.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 219: I can say there will be cloud, a cloudy day, a cold snap, what the temperature is and when it will clear.

219.1 云 (yún) — cloud

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for dry air, then the Mandarin for damp.

You'll want to know: 云

云 — yún — "cloud".

> 明天下午会有云 míngtiān xiàwǔ huì yǒu yún — There'll be some cloud tomorrow afternoon.

The new character, in pieces: 云 — four strokes: two bars, then a stroke that falls to the left and turns right along the foot, and a dot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 云 (yún) is inherited from Middle Chinese hjun (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which explains it, after an older book, as the vapour of mountains and rivers. The dictionary writes the word for cloud with 雨 on top, and lists 云 as the older way of writing it.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: yún
- Say it: yún, once more
- Say it: míngtiān xiàwǔ huì yǒu yún — There'll be some cloud tomorrow afternoon.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for dry air, then the Mandarin for damp, then say yún again

Before you move on

What does 云 mean? ("Cloud".) Say it once more.

219.2 云 — two bars, then a turn and a dot

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say yún — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

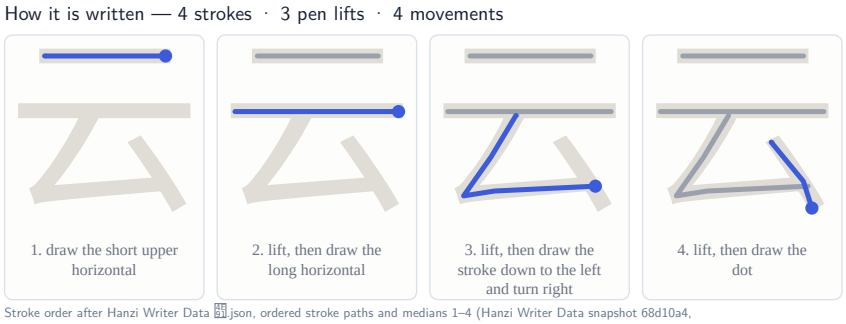
二 雨

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — èr, yǔ

Script — two bars, then a turn and a dot



How 云 is written, stroke by stroke

云

Two pieces, top before bottom.

On top, 二, two strokes: a short bar, then a longer one under it.

Under it, two strokes. A stroke falling to the left that turns and runs right along the foot. Then a dot at the right, above the end of that stroke, falling to the right.

2 + 2 = four.

Your turn

- Write it: 云, all four, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 云? (Four.) What is on top? (二, two bars.) What does the third stroke do? (It falls to the left and turns right.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 云, pinned stroke paths and medians.

219.3 多云 (duōyún) — cloudy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for damp, then the Mandarin for a cloud.

You'll want to know: 多云

多云 — duōyún — "cloudy".

明天多云风不大 míngtiān duōyún fēng bú dà — Tomorrow will be cloudy, without much wind.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 多云 (duōyún) is built from 多 'many' and 云 'cloud', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ta and hjun (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: duōyún
- Say it: duōyún, once more
- Say it: míngtiān duōyún fēng bú dà — Tomorrow will be cloudy, without much wind.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for damp, then the Mandarin for a cloud, then say duōyún again

Before you move on

What does 多云 mean? ("Cloudy".) Say it once more.

219.4 jiàngwēn — to turn colder; to cool down

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a cloud, then the Mandarin for cloudy.

You'll want to know: jiàngwēn

jiàngwēn — "to turn colder; to cool down".

> hòutiān huì jiàngwēn — It's going to turn colder the day after tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiàngwēn is built from jiàng 'to come down' and wēn 'warm', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kaewngH and 'won (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'down' and 'to fall', and the second, among other senses, 'mild' and 'warm'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: jiàngwēn
- Say it: jiàngwēn, once more
- Say it: hòutiān huì jiàngwēn — It's going to turn colder the day after tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a cloud, then the Mandarin for cloudy, then say jiàngwēn again

Before you move on

What does jiàngwēn mean? ("To turn colder; to cool down".) Say it once more.

219.5 qìwēn — air temperature

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for cloudy, then the Mandarin for to turn colder.

You'll want to know: qìwēn

qìwēn — "air temperature".

> jīntiān de qìwēn bǐ zuótiān gāo — It's warmer today than yesterday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qìwēn is built from 气 'air' and wēn 'warm', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khj+jH and 'won (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'breath'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: qìwēn
- Say it: qìwēn, once more
- Say it: jīntiān de qìwēn bǐ zuótiān gāo — It's warmer today than yesterday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for cloudy, then the Mandarin for to turn colder, then say qìwēn again

Before you move on

What does qìwēn mean? ("Air temperature".) Say it once more.

219.6 fàngqíng — to clear up (of the sky)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to turn colder, then the Mandarin for air temperature.

You'll want to know: fàngqíng

fàngqíng — "to clear up (of the sky)".

> xiàwǔ huì fàngqíng — It'll clear up in the afternoon.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fàngqíng is built from fàng 'to let go' and qíng 'clear'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese pjangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to drive out'; the dictionary glosses the second, dzjeng there, 'a clear sky'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: fàngqíng
- Say it: fàngqíng, once more
- Say it: xiàwǔ huì fàngqíng — It'll clear up in the afternoon.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to turn colder, then the Mandarin for air temperature, then say fàngqíng again

Before you move on

What does fàngqíng mean? ("To clear up (of the sky)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 220

Keeping Fit

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about working out, losing weight, sweating, skipping and doing exercises.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 220: I can talk about working out, losing weight, sweating, skipping and doing exercises.

220.1 jiànshēn — to work out; to keep fit

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for air temperature, then the Mandarin for to clear up.

You'll want to know: jiànshēn

jiànshēn — "to work out; to keep fit".

> wǒ měitiān xiàwǔ qù jiànshēn — I go and work out every afternoon.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiànshēn is built from jiàn 'strong' and shēn 'body', both inherited from Middle Chinese, gjonH and syin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'sturdy' and the second 'oneself' and 'the body'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jiànshēn
- Say it: jiànshēn, once more
- Say it: wǒ měitiān xiàwǔ qù jiànshēn — I go and work out every afternoon.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for air temperature, then the Mandarin for to clear up, then say jiànshēn again

Before you move on

What does jiànshēn mean? ("To work out; to keep fit".) Say it once more.

220.2 jiǎnféi — to lose weight; to diet

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to clear up, then the Mandarin for to work out.

You'll want to know: jiǎnféi

jiǎnféi — "to lose weight; to diet".

wǒ jiějie zhèngzài jiǎnféi — My big sister is trying to lose weight.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiǎnféi is built from jiǎn 'to reduce' and féi 'fat'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese bj+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), explained after an older book as having much flesh; the dictionary glosses the first, keamX there, 'to lessen'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jiǎnféi
- Say it: jiǎnféi, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiějie zhèngzài jiǎnféi — My big sister is trying to lose weight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to clear up, then the Mandarin for to work out, then say jiǎnféi again

Before you move on

What does jiǎnféi mean? ("To lose weight; to diet".) Say it once more.

220.3 chūhàn — to sweat

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to work out, then the Mandarin for to lose weight.

You'll want to know: chūhàn

chūhàn — "to sweat".

tiān tài rè le wǒ chūhàn le — It's so hot that I'm sweating.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chūhàn is built from 出 'to come out' and hàn 'sweat', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwit and hanH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'hot sweat'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: chūhàn
- Say it: chūhàn, once more
- Say it: tiān tài rè le wǒ chūhàn le — It's so hot that I'm sweating.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to work out, then the Mandarin for to lose weight, then say chūhàn again

Before you move on

What does chūhàn mean? ("To sweat".) Say it once more.

220.4 tiàoshéng — to skip with a rope

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to lose weight, then the Mandarin for to sweat.

You'll want to know: tiàoshéng

tiàoshéng — "to skip with a rope".

wǒ nǚ'ér měitiān tiàoshéng — My daughter skips every day.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tiàoshéng is built from tiào 'to jump' and shéng 'rope'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese dew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to leap', whose regular outcome is tiáo, not the falling tiào; the dictionary glosses the second, zying there, 'straight' and 'a cord'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: tiàoshéng
- Say it: tiàoshéng, once more
- Say it: wǒ nǚ'ér měitiān tiàoshéng — My daughter skips every day.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to lose weight, then the Mandarin for to sweat, then say tiàoshéng again

Before you move on

What does tiàoshéng mean? ("To skip with a rope".) Say it once more.

220.5 zuòcāo — to do a fitness routine; to do physical exercises

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sweat, then the Mandarin for to skip with a rope.

You'll want to know: zuòcāo

zuòcāo — "to do a fitness routine; to do physical exercises".

wǒ bàba měitiān zǎoshang zuòcāo — My dad does his exercises every morning.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zuòcāo is built from 做 'to do' and cāo 'a drill'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese tshaw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to hold'; how it came to mean a drill is not settled. No dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: zuòcāo
- Say it: zuòcāo, once more
- Say it: wǒ bàba měitiān zǎoshang zuòcāo — My dad does his exercises every morning.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sweat, then the Mandarin for to skip with a rope, then say zuòcāo again

Before you move on

What does zuòcāo mean? ("To do a fitness routine; to do physical exercises".) Say it once more.

Chapter 221

Snow and Ice

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a snowman, skiing, ice, being below zero and gloves.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 221: I can talk about a snowman, skiing, ice, being below zero and gloves.

221.1 雪人 (xuěrén) — snowman

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to skip with a rope, then the Mandarin for to do a fitness routine.

You'll want to know: 雪人

雪人 — xuěrén — "snowman".

> 门口有一个雪人 ménkǒu yǒu yí ge xuěrén — There's a snowman by the door.

The new character, in pieces: 雪 — eleven strokes in two pieces: 雨 pressed flat on top, eight strokes, and under it three bars joined on the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 雪人 (xuěrén) is built from 雪 'snow' and 人 'person', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjwet and nyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'frozen rain'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: xuěrén
- Say it: xuěrén, once more
- Say it: ménkǒu yǒu yí ge xuěrén — There's a snowman by the door.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to skip with a rope, then the Mandarin for to do a fitness routine, then say xuěrén again

Before you move on

What does 雪人 mean? ("Snowman".) Say it once more.

221.2 雪 — 雨 on top, three bars below

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xuěrén — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

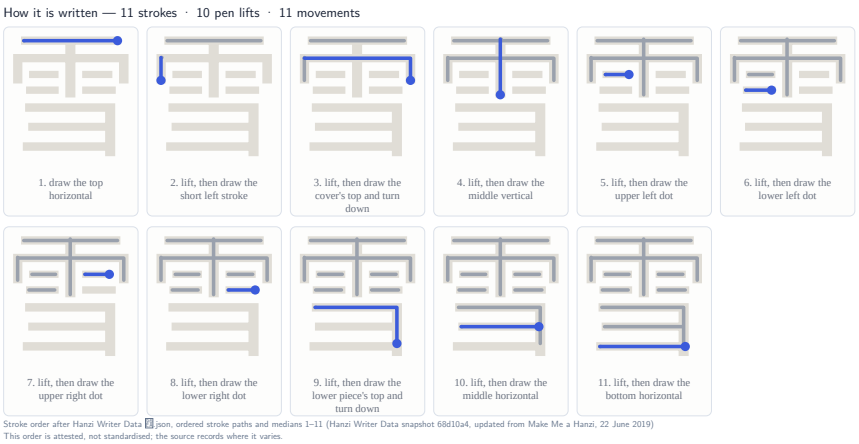
雨 白

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — yǔ, bái

Script — 雨 on top, three bars below



How 雪 is written, stroke by stroke

雪

Two pieces, top before bottom. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

On top, 雨, eight strokes, pressed flat: a short bar; a short stroke down on the left; a bar that runs right and turns down with a hook; a vertical through the middle; then four dots, two on the left and two on the right.

Under it, three strokes. A bar that runs right and turns down, a bar across the middle, and a bar along the foot, all three meeting the stroke on the right.

8 + 3 = eleven.

Your turn

- Write it: 雪, all eleven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 雪? (Eleven.) What is on top? (雨, pressed flat.) How many bars at the foot? (Three.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 雪, pinned stroke paths and medians.

221.3 huáxuě — to ski

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to do a fitness routine, then the Mandarin for a snowman.

You'll want to know: huáxuě

huáxuě — "to ski".

nǐ huì huáxuě ma — Can you ski?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huáxuě is built from huá 'slippery' and 雪 'snow', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hweat and sjwet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary's gloss for the first is 'keen' or 'smooth', not 'slippery', so how it came to that sense is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: huáxuě
- Say it: huáxuě, once more
- Say it: nǐ huì huáxuě ma — Can you ski?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to do a fitness routine, then the Mandarin for a snowman, then say huáxuě again

Before you move on

What does huáxuě mean? ("To ski".) Say it once more.

221.4 bīng — ice

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a snowman, then the Mandarin for to ski.

You'll want to know: bīng

bīng — "ice".

bīngxiāng lǐ yǒu bīng — There's ice in the fridge.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bīng is inherited from Middle Chinese ping (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'water frozen'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: bīng
- Say it: bīng, once more
- Say it: bīngxiāng lǐ yǒu bīng — There's ice in the fridge.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a snowman, then the Mandarin for to ski, then say bīng again

Before you move on

What does bīng mean? ("Ice".) Say it once more.

221.5 língxià — below zero

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to ski, then the Mandarin for ice.

You'll want to know: língxià

língxià — "below zero".

> jīntiān língxià wàibian hěn lěng — It's below zero today; it's freezing outside.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of língxià is built from líng 'zero' and 下 'below', both inherited from Middle Chinese, leng and haeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'to fall' and 'a gentle rain', so the sense zero came later, and how is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: língxià
- Say it: língxià, once more
- Say it: jīntiān língxià wàibian hěn lěng — It's below zero today; it's freezing outside.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to ski, then the Mandarin for ice, then say língxià again

Before you move on

What does língxià mean? ("Below zero".) Say it once more.

221.6 shǒutào — gloves

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for ice, then the Mandarin for below zero.

You'll want to know: shǒutào

shǒutào — "gloves".

> wàibian hěn lěng nǐ dài shǒutào le ma — It's cold out. Have you got your gloves?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shǒutào is built from 手 'hand' and tào 'a cover', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syuwX and thawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second 'long', so how it came to mean a cover is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: shǒutào
- Say it: shǒutào, once more
- Say it: wàibian hěn lěng nǐ dài shǒutào le ma — It's cold out. Have you got your gloves?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for ice, then the Mandarin for below zero, then say shǒutào again

Before you move on

What does shǒutào mean? ("Gloves".) Say it once more.

Chapter 222

Under the Weather

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I caught a chill, I have a cough and a sore throat, I keep sneezing, and why I feel awful.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 222: I can say I caught a chill, I have a cough and a sore throat, I keep sneezing, and why I feel awful.

222.1 zháoliáng — to catch a chill

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for below zero, then the Mandarin for gloves.

You'll want to know: zháoliáng

zháoliáng — "to catch a chill".

> zuótiān wǒ zháoliáng le — I caught a chill yesterday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zháoliáng is built from zháo 'to be touched by' and liáng 'cool', both inherited from Middle Chinese, drjak and ljang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to attach to' and the second 'thin' and 'cold'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: zháoliáng
- Say it: zháoliáng, once more
- Say it: zuótiān wǒ zháoliáng le — I caught a chill yesterday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for below zero, then the Mandarin for gloves, then say zháoliáng again

Before you move on

What does zháoliáng mean? ("To catch a chill".) Say it once more.

222.2 késou — to cough

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for gloves, then the Mandarin for to catch a chill.

You'll want to know: késou

késou — "to cough".

wǒ yǒudiǎnr késou — I've got a bit of a cough.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of késou is built from ké and sou. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese suwH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), listed with a character for coughing; the dictionary reads the first only as a small child's laugh, so how it came to mean coughing is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: késou
- Say it: késou, once more
- Say it: wǒ yǒudiǎnr késou — I've got a bit of a cough.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for gloves, then the Mandarin for to catch a chill, then say késou again

Before you move on

What does késou mean? ("To cough".) Say it once more.

222.3 sǎngzi — throat; voice

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to catch a chill, then the Mandarin for to cough.

You'll want to know: sǎngzi

sǎngzi — "throat; voice".

wǒ sǎngzi téng — My throat hurts.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of sǎngzi is built from sǎng 'throat' and the noun ending 子, inherited from Middle Chinese tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). No dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: sǎngzi
- Say it: sǎngzi, once more
- Say it: wǒ sǎngzi téng — My throat hurts.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to catch a chill, then the Mandarin for to cough, then say sǎngzi again

Before you move on

What does sǎngzi mean? ("Throat; voice".) Say it once more.

222.4 dǎ pēntì — to sneeze

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to cough, then the Mandarin for throat.

You'll want to know: dǎ pēntì

dǎ pēntì — "to sneeze".

gǎnmào de shíhou wǒ chángcháng dǎ pēntì — When I've got a cold I sneeze a lot.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎ pēntì is built from 打 'to strike, to do' and pēntì 'a sneeze', all inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX, phwonH and tejH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to breathe out' and the third 'breath from the nose'. Neither dǎ nor the level tone of pēn is the regular outcome of the form listed.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎ pēntì
- Say it: dǎ pēntì, once more
- Say it: gǎnmào de shíhou wǒ chángcháng dǎ pēntì — When I've got a cold I sneeze a lot.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to cough, then the Mandarin for throat, then say dǎ pēntì again

Before you move on

What does dǎ pēntì mean? ("To sneeze".) Say it once more.

222.5 nánshòu — miserable; unwell

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for throat, then the Mandarin for to sneeze.

You'll want to know: nánshòu

nánshòu — "miserable; unwell".

yīnwèi gǎnmào le wǒ hěn nánshòu — I feel awful because I've got a cold.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nánshòu is built from nán 'hard' and shòu 'to bear', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nan and dzyuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'difficult' and the second 'to hold' and 'to receive'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: nánshòu
- Say it: nánshòu, once more
- Say it: yīnwèi gǎnmào le wǒ hěn nánshòu — I feel awful because I've got a cold.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for throat, then the Mandarin for to sneeze, then say nánshòu again

Before you move on

What does nánshòu mean? ("Miserable; unwell".) Say it once more.

Chapter 223

Animals

Modes: voice (6) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name animals: a panda, a tiger, a monkey and a rabbit, and say which ones I like.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 223: I can name animals: a panda, a tiger, a monkey and a rabbit, and say which ones I like.

223.1 dòngwù — animal

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sneeze, then the Mandarin for miserable.

You'll want to know: dòngwù

dòngwù — "animal".

> nǐ xǐhuan shénme dòngwù — What animals do you like?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dòngwù is built from dòng 'to move' and wù 'thing', both inherited from Middle Chinese, duwngX and mjut (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to shake' and the second 'the ten thousand things'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: dòngwù
- Say it: dòngwù, once more
- Say it: nǐ xǐhuan shénme dòngwù — What animals do you like?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sneeze, then the Mandarin for miserable, then say dòngwù again

Before you move on

What does dòngwù mean? ("Animal".) Say it once more.

223.2 xióngmāo — a panda; giant panda

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for miserable, then the Mandarin for an animal.

You'll want to know: xióngmāo

xióngmāo — "a panda; giant panda".

xióngmāo hěn kě'ài — Pandas are so cute.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xióngmāo is built from xióng 'bear' and māo 'cat', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuwng and mjew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which lists the first as a beast like a pig and the second as the animal that catches mice; the level tone of māo is not the regular outcome of that form.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: xióngmāo
- Say it: xióngmāo, once more
- Say it: xióngmāo hěn kě'ài — Pandas are so cute.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for miserable, then the Mandarin for an animal, then say xióngmāo again

Before you move on

What does xióngmāo mean? ("A panda; giant panda".) Say it once more.

223.3 lǎohǔ — tiger

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an animal, then the Mandarin for a panda.

You'll want to know: lǎohǔ

lǎohǔ — "tiger".

wǒ mèimei pà lǎohǔ — My little sister is scared of tigers.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Tone: lǎo and hǔ are both third tones, so the first rises and it sounds like láohǔ.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǎohǔ is built from lǎo 'old' and hǔ 'tiger', both inherited from Middle Chinese, lawX and xuX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which calls the second, after an older book, the lord of the mountain beasts. Here the first is a prefix with no sense of age; how it came to sit there is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: lǎohǔ
- Say it: lǎohǔ, once more
- Say it: wǒ mèimei pà lǎohǔ — My little sister is scared of tigers.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an animal, then the Mandarin for a panda, then say lǎohǔ again

Before you move on

What does lǎohǔ mean? ("Tiger".) Say it once more.

223.4 hóuzi — monkey

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a panda, then the Mandarin for a tiger.

You'll want to know: hóuzi

hóuzi — "monkey".

nà zhī hóuzi hěn cōngming — That monkey's very clever.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hóuzi is built from hóu 'monkey' and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, huw and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first with a word for the macaque.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: hóuzi
- Say it: hóuzi, once more

- Say it: nà zhī hóuzi hěn cōngming — That monkey's very clever.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a panda, then the Mandarin for a tiger, then say hóuzi again

Before you move on

What does hóuzi mean? ("Monkey".) Say it once more.

223.5 tùzi — rabbit; hare

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a tiger, then the Mandarin for a monkey.

You'll want to know: tùzi

tùzi — "rabbit; hare".

wǒ jiā yǒu liǎng zhī tùzi — We've got two rabbits at home.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tùzi is built from a word for the hare and the noun ending 子. The noun ending is inherited from Middle Chinese tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), and the dictionary lists the first as the name of a beast.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: tùzi
- Say it: tùzi, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā yǒu liǎng zhī tùzi — We've got two rabbits at home.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a tiger, then the Mandarin for a monkey, then say tùzi again

Before you move on

What does tùzi mean? ("Rabbit; hare".) Say it once more.

223.6 Looking back: from Wind and Warm Days to Animals

Say the Mandarin for a windbreaker and pleasantly warm.

Your turn

- Say it: a windbreaker, pleasantly warm, hot and stuffy, dry air, damp
- Say it: a cloud, cloudy, to turn colder, air temperature, to clear up
- Say it: to work out, to lose weight, to sweat, to skip with a rope, to do a fitness routine
- Say it: a snowman, to ski, ice, below zero, gloves
- Say it: to catch a chill, to cough, throat, to sneeze, miserable
- Say it: an animal, a panda, a tiger, a monkey, a rabbit
- Read it: 风 云 雪 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

A windbreaker? (风衣, fēngyī.) Pleasantly warm? (nuǎnhuo.) Hot and stuffy? (mēnrè.) Dry air? (gānzào.) Damp? (cháoshī.) A cloud? (云, yún.) Cloudy? (多云, duōyún.) To turn colder? (jiàngwēn.) Air temperature? (qìwēn.) To clear up? (fàngqíng.) To work out? (jiànshēn.) To lose weight? (jiǎnféi.) To sweat? (chūhàn.) To skip with a rope? (tiàoshéng.) To do a fitness routine? (zuòcāo.) A snowman? (雪人, xuěrén.) To ski? (huáxuě.) Ice? (bīng.) Below zero? (língxià.) Gloves? (shǒutào.) To catch a chill? (zháoliáng.) To cough? (késou.) Throat? (sǎngzi.) To sneeze? (dǎ pēntì.) Miserable? (nánshòu.) An animal? (dòngwù.) A panda? (xióngmāo.) A tiger? (lǎohǔ.) A monkey? (hóuzi.) A rabbit? (tùzi.)

Chapter 224

Spring Flowers

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say flowers are coming out, and talk about a florist's, a garden, butterflies and bees.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 224: I can say flowers are coming out, and talk about a florist's, a garden, butterflies and bees.

224.1 开花 (kāihuā) — to bloom; to flower

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a monkey, then the Mandarin for a rabbit.

You'll want to know: 开花

开花 — kāihuā — "to bloom; to flower".

> 这些花三月开花 zhèxiē huā sānyuè kāihuā — These flowers come out in March.

The new character, in pieces: 花 — seven strokes: the grass piece of 菜 on top, then the person piece, then two strokes like the right half of 比. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 开花 (kāihuā) is built from 开 'to open' and 花 'flower', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khoj and xwae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which notes the second as the everyday form of the word for blossom.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: kāihuā
- Say it: kāihuā, once more
- Say it: zhèxiē huā sānyuè kāihuā — These flowers come out in March.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a monkey, then the Mandarin for a rabbit, then say kāihuā again

Before you move on

What does 开花 mean? ("To bloom; to flower".) Say it once more.

224.2 花 — the grass piece over the person piece and two more strokes

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say kāihuā — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

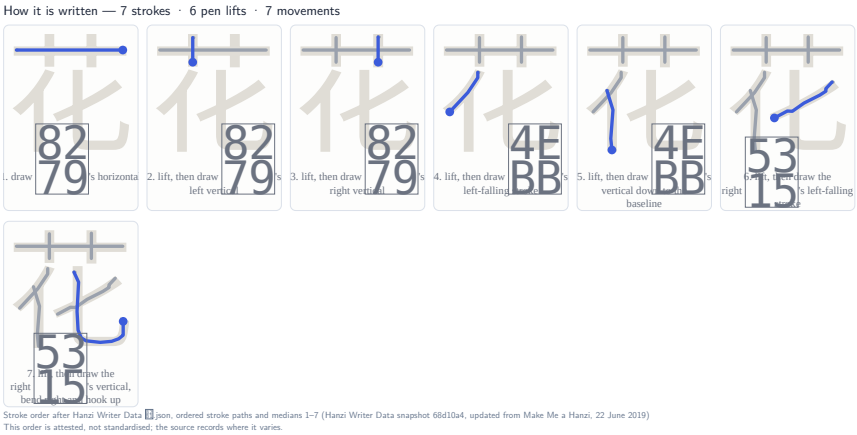
  菜 比

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — cài, bǐ

Script — the grass piece over the person piece and two more strokes



How 花 is written, stroke by stroke

花

Three pieces: one on top, two side by side under it. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The grass piece, three strokes, as in 菜 and 茶: a bar across, then two short verticals through it.

The person piece, 亻, two strokes, as in 你: a stroke falling to the left, then a vertical.

The right piece, two strokes, like the right half of 比: a short stroke falling to the left, then a vertical that bends right along the foot and flicks up.

3 + 2 + 2 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 花, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 花? (Seven.) What is on top? (The grass piece of 菜.) Which piece comes next? (亻, the person piece.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 花, pinned stroke paths and medians.

224.3 花店 (huādiàn) — florist's; flower shop

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a rabbit, then the Mandarin for to bloom.

You'll want to know: 花店

花店 — huādiàn — "florist's; flower shop".

我去花店买花 wǒ qù huādiàn mǎi huā — I'm going to the florist's to buy flowers.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 花店 (huādiàn) is built from 花 'flower' and 店 'shop', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xwae and temH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: huādiàn
- Say it: huādiàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ qù huādiàn mǎi huā — I'm going to the florist's to buy flowers.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a rabbit, then the Mandarin for to bloom, then say huādiàn again

Before you move on

What does 花店 mean? ("Florist's; flower shop".) Say it once more.

224.4 huāyuán — garden

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to bloom, then the Mandarin for a florist's.

You'll want to know: huāyuán

huāyuán — "garden".

wǒ jiā hòubian yǒu yí ge huāyuán — There's a garden behind our house.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huāyuán is built from 花 'flower' and yuán 'a plot', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xwae and hjwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a garden plot'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: huāyuán
- Say it: huāyuán, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiā hòubian yǒu yí ge huāyuán — There's a garden behind our house.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to bloom, then the Mandarin for a florist's, then say huāyuán again

Before you move on

What does huāyuán mean? ("Garden".) Say it once more.

224.5 húdié — butterfly

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a florist's, then the Mandarin for a garden.

You'll want to know: húdié

húdié — "butterfly".

huāyuán lǐ yǒu liǎng zhī húdié — There are two butterflies in the garden.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of húdié is built from two characters, and the dictionary glosses the second, dep there (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), as a butterfly. No dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: húdié
- Say it: húdié, once more
- Say it: huāyuán lǐ yǒu liǎng zhī húdié — There are two butterflies in the garden.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a florist's, then the Mandarin for a garden, then say húdié again

Before you move on

What does húdié mean? ("Butterfly".) Say it once more.

224.6 mìfēng — bee; honeybee

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a garden, then the Mandarin for a butterfly.

You'll want to know: mìfēng

mìfēng — "bee; honeybee".

huāyuán lǐ de huā kāi le mìfēng yě lái le — The flowers in the garden are out, and the bees have come too.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of mìfēng is built from mì 'honey' and fēng 'bee', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjit and phjowng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as the food bees make and explains the second, after an older book, as a flying insect that stings.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: mìfēng
- Say it: mìfēng, once more
- Say it: huāyuán lǐ de huā kāi le mìfēng yě lái le — The flowers in the garden are out, and the bees have come too.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a garden, then the Mandarin for a butterfly, then say mìfēng again

Before you move on

What does mìfēng mean? (“Bee; honeybee”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 225

In the Country

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the countryside, farmers, working the land, picking fruit and camping.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 225: I can talk about the countryside, farmers, working the land, picking fruit and camping.

225.1 nóngcūn — the countryside; a farming village

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a butterfly, then the Mandarin for a bee.

You'll want to know: nóngcūn

nóngcūn — "the countryside; a farming village".

> wǒ lǎojiā zài nóngcūn — My home town is out in the countryside.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nóngcūn is built from nóng 'farming' and cūn 'village', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nowng and tshwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'farming the fields' and the second 'a farmstead'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: nóngcūn
- Say it: nóngcūn, once more
- Say it: wǒ lǎojiā zài nóngcūn — My home town is out in the countryside.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a butterfly, then the Mandarin for a bee, then say nóngcūn again

Before you move on

What does nóngcūn mean? ("The countryside; a farming village".) Say it once more.

225.2 nóngmín — farmer

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a bee, then the Mandarin for the countryside.

You'll want to know: nóngmín

nóngmín — "farmer".

tā bàba shì nóngmín — His dad is a farmer.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nóngmín is built from nóng 'farming' and mín 'the people', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nowng and mjin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which explains the second, after an older book, as the multitude.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: nóngmín
- Say it: nóngmín, once more
- Say it: tā bàba shì nóngmín — His dad is a farmer.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a bee, then the Mandarin for the countryside, then say nóngmín again

Before you move on

What does nóngmín mean? ("Farmer".) Say it once more.

225.3 zhòngdì — to farm; to work the land

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the countryside, then the Mandarin for a farmer.

You'll want to know: zhòngdì

zhòngdì — "to farm; to work the land".

nóngmín měitiān zhòngdì — Farmers work the land every day.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhòngdì is built from zhòng 'to plant' and 地 'land', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyowngH and dijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to plant in the soil'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: zhòngdì
- Say it: zhòngdì, once more
- Say it: nóngmín měitiān zhòngdì — Farmers work the land every day.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the countryside, then the Mandarin for a farmer, then say zhòngdì again

Before you move on

What does zhòngdì mean? ("To farm; to work the land".) Say it once more.

225.4 zhāi — to pick fruit; to pick flowers

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a farmer, then the Mandarin for to work the land.

You'll want to know: zhāi

zhāi — "to pick fruit; to pick flowers".

wǒmen qù nóngcūn zhāi píngguǒ — We're going to the countryside to pick apples.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhāi is inherited from Middle Chinese treak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to take with the hand'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: zhāi
- Say it: zhāi, once more
- Say it: wǒmen qù nóngcūn zhāi píngguǒ — We're going to the countryside to pick apples.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a farmer, then the Mandarin for to work the land, then say zhāi again

Before you move on

What does zhāi mean? ("To pick fruit; to pick flowers".) Say it once more.

225.5 lùyíng — to camp out

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to work the land, then the Mandarin for to pick fruit.

You'll want to know: lùyíng

lùyíng — "to camp out".

zhōumò wǒmen qù lùyíng — We're going camping at the weekend.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lùyíng is built from lù 'dew, the open air' and yíng 'a camp'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese yweng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to build'; the dictionary explains the first, luH there, as dew. How the pair came to mean camping is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: lùyíng
- Say it: lùyíng, once more
- Say it: zhōumò wǒmen qù lùyíng — We're going camping at the weekend.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to work the land, then the Mandarin for to pick fruit, then say lùyíng again

Before you move on

What does lùyíng mean? ("To camp out".) Say it once more.

Chapter 226

Grass and Lakes

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe a lawn, a lake, a forest, grassland and the scenery.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 226: I can describe a lawn, a lake, a forest, grassland and the scenery.

226.1 草地 (cǎodì) — lawn; grassy ground

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to pick fruit, then the Mandarin for to camp out.

You'll want to know: 草地

草地 — cǎodì — "lawn; grassy ground".

> gōngyuán lǐ yǒu yí kuài dà cǎodì — There's a big lawn in the park.

The new character, in pieces: 草 — nine strokes: the grass piece of 菜 on top, then 早 under it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 草地 (cǎodì) is built from 草 'grass' and 地 'ground', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshawX and dijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'all the plants'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: cǎodì
- Say it: cǎodì, once more
- Say it: gōngyuán lǐ yǒu yí kuài dà cǎodì — There's a big lawn in the park.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to pick fruit, then the Mandarin for to camp out, then say cǎodì again

Before you move on

What does 草地 mean? ("Lawn; grassy ground".) Say it once more.

226.2 草 — the grass piece over 早

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say cǎodì — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

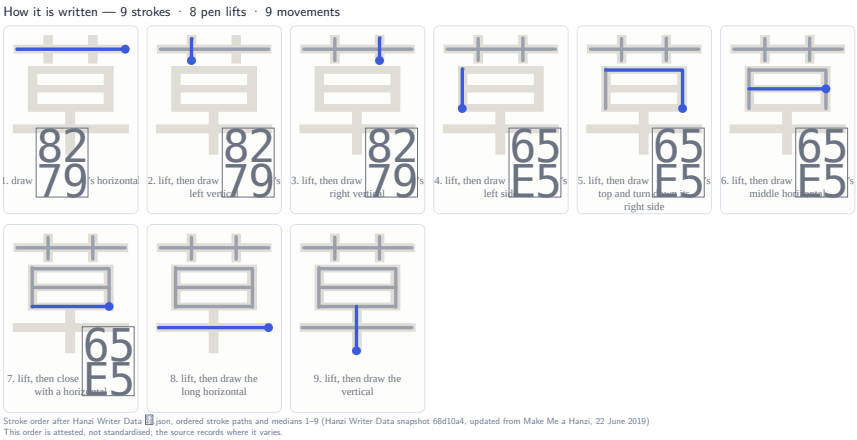
  早 花

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — zǎo, huā

Script — the grass piece over 早



How 草 is written, stroke by stroke

草

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The grass piece, three strokes, as in 菜 and 花: a bar across, then two short verticals.

Under it, 早, six strokes, as in 早上: 日, four strokes, then a long bar across and a vertical down through its middle.

3 + 6 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 草, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 草? (Nine.) What sits under the grass piece? (早.) What comes last? (The long vertical through the middle.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 草, pinned stroke paths and medians.

226.3 hú — lake

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to camp out, then the Mandarin for a lawn.

You'll want to know: hú

hú — "lake".

gōngyuán lǐ yǒu yí ge hú — There's a lake in the park.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

hú is inherited from Middle Chinese hu (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which explains it as a broad body of water.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: hú
- Say it: hú, once more
- Say it: gōngyuán lǐ yǒu yí ge hú — There's a lake in the park.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to camp out, then the Mandarin for a lawn, then say hú again

Before you move on

What does hú mean? ("Lake".) Say it once more.

226.4 sēnlín — forest

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a lawn, then the Mandarin for a lake.

You'll want to know: sēnlín

sēnlín — "forest".

> sēnlín lǐ hěn ānjìng — It's very quiet in the forest.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of sēnlín is built from sēn 'dense with trees' and lín 'woods'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese lim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'trees'; the dictionary describes the first, srim there, as how tall trees look.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: sēnlín
- Say it: sēnlín, once more
- Say it: sēnlín lǐ hěn ānjìng — It's very quiet in the forest.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a lawn, then the Mandarin for a lake, then say sēnlín again

Before you move on

What does sēnlín mean? ("Forest".) Say it once more.

226.5 cǎoyuán — grassland; prairie

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a lake, then the Mandarin for a forest.

You'll want to know: cǎoyuán

cǎoyuán — "grassland; prairie".

> wǒ xiǎng qù cǎoyuán qí mǎ — I'd love to go riding on the grasslands.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cǎoyuán is built from 草 'grass' and yuán 'a plain', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshawX and ngjwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'broad and flat'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: cǎoyuán
- Say it: cǎoyuán, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng qù cǎoyuán qí mǎ — I'd love to go riding on the grasslands.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a lake, then the Mandarin for a forest, then say cǎoyuán again

Before you move on

What does cǎoyuán mean? ("Grassland; prairie".) Say it once more.

226.6 fēngjǐng — scenery; landscape

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a forest, then the Mandarin for grassland.

You'll want to know: fēngjǐng

fēngjǐng — "scenery; landscape".

> zhèr de fēngjǐng hěn piàoliang — The scenery here is beautiful.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fēngjǐng is built from 风 'wind' and jǐng 'a view', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjuwng and kjaengX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second 'bright' and 'light'; the sense 'a view' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: fēngjǐng
- Say it: fēngjǐng, once more
- Say it: zhèr de fēngjǐng hěn piàoliang — The scenery here is beautiful.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a forest, then the Mandarin for grassland, then say fēngjǐng again

Before you move on

What does fēngjǐng mean? ("Scenery; landscape".) Say it once more.

Chapter 227

A Day at the Sea

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell about a day at the seaside: the boat, being seasick, the beach and who I ran into.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 227: I can tell about a day at the seaside: the boat, being seasick, the beach and who I ran into.

227.1 hǎibiān — the seaside; the seashore

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for grassland, then the Mandarin for scenery.

You'll want to know: hǎibiān

hǎibiān — "the seaside; the seashore".

> shàng ge yuè wǒmen qùle hǎibiān — Last month we went to the seaside.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hǎibiān is built from hǎi 'sea' and 边 'edge', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xojX and pen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which explains the first, after an older book, as the pool of heaven that takes in a hundred rivers.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: hǎibiān
- Say it: hǎibiān, once more
- Say it: shàng ge yuè wǒmen qùle hǎibiān — Last month we went to the seaside.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for grassland, then the Mandarin for scenery, then say hǎibiān again

Before you move on

What does hǎibiān mean? ("The seaside; the seashore".) Say it once more.

227.2 chuán — boat; ship

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for scenery, then the Mandarin for the seaside.

You'll want to know: chuán

chuán — "boat; ship".

zuótiān wǒmen zuò chuán le — We went out on a boat yesterday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chuán is inherited from Middle Chinese zywen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which notes, after an older book, that people west of the passes said this word and people east of them another.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: chuán
- Say it: chuán, once more
- Say it: zuótiān wǒmen zuò chuán le — We went out on a boat yesterday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for scenery, then the Mandarin for the seaside, then say chuán again

Before you move on

What does chuán mean? ("Boat; ship".) Say it once more.

227.3 yùnchuán — to get seasick

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the seaside, then the Mandarin for a boat.

You'll want to know: yùnchuán

yùnchuán — "to get seasick".

wǒ yùnchuán le hěn nánshòu — I got seasick and felt awful.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yùnchuán is built from yùn 'dizzy' and chuán 'boat'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese zywen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first, hjunH there, as a halo round the sun or moon, so how it came to mean dizziness is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: yùnchuán
- Say it: yùnchuán, once more
- Say it: wǒ yùnchuán le hěn nánshòu — I got seasick and felt awful.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the seaside, then the Mandarin for a boat, then say yùnchuán again

Before you move on

What does yùnchuán mean? ("To get seasick".) Say it once more.

227.4 shātān — sandy beach

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a boat, then the Mandarin for to get seasick.

You'll want to know: shātān

shātān — "sandy beach".

nàr de shātān hěn gānjìng — The beach there was really clean.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shātān is built from shā 'sand' and tān 'a shore', both inherited from Middle Chinese, srae and than (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which explains the first, after an older book, as stones scattered by water, and glosses the second as shallows in a river, so how it came to mean a beach is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: shātān
- Say it: shātān, once more
- Say it: nàr de shātān hěn gānjìng — The beach there was really clean.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a boat, then the Mandarin for to get seasick, then say shātān again

Before you move on

What does shātān mean? ("Sandy beach".) Say it once more.

227.5 yùdào — to run into; to come across

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get seasick, then the Mandarin for a sandy beach.

You'll want to know: yùdào

yùdào — "to run into; to come across".

> zuótiān wǒ yùdàole yí ge lǎo tóngxué — Yesterday I ran into an old classmate.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yùdào is built from yù 'to meet by chance' and 到 'to arrive', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngjuH and tawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to meet without arranging it'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: yùdào
- Say it: yùdào, once more
- Say it: zuótiān wǒ yùdàole yí ge lǎo tóngxué — Yesterday I ran into an old classmate.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get seasick, then the Mandarin for a sandy beach, then say yùdào again

Before you move on

What does yùdào mean? ("To run into; to come across".) Say it once more.

Chapter 228

A Headache

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say my head aches, take medicine, have an injection, say whether it is serious, and nod.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 228: I can say my head aches, take medicine, have an injection, say whether it is serious, and nod.

228.1 头疼 (tóuténg) — having a headache; aching in the head

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a sandy beach, then the Mandarin for to run into someone.

You'll want to know: 头疼

头疼 — tóuténg — "having a headache; aching in the head".

> 我头疼不想吃饭 wǒ tóuténg bù xiǎng chīfàn — I've got a headache, so I don't feel like eating.

The new character, in pieces: 头 — five strokes: two dots, a long bar, a long stroke falling to the left, and a dot at the lower right; 疼 — ten strokes: the illness frame of 病, five strokes, then inside it five more: a short fall to the left, a bar that turns and falls to the left, a long stroke to the right, and two dots. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 头疼 (tóuténg) is built from 头 'head' and 疼 'sore', both inherited from Middle Chinese, duw and downg (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'the head' and the second 'pain'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: tóuténg
- Say it: tóuténg, once more
- Say it: wǒ tóuténg bù xiǎng chīfàn — I've got a headache, so I don't feel like eating.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a sandy beach, then the Mandarin for to run into someone, then say tóuténg again

Before you move on

What does 头疼 mean? ("Having a headache; aching in the head".) Say it once more.

228.2 头 — two dots over a shape like 大

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say tóuténg — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

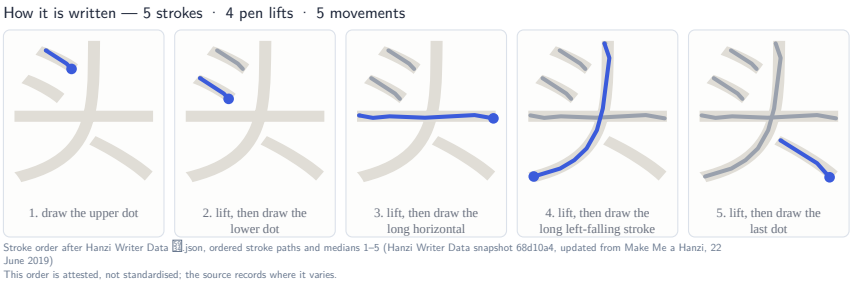
  大 天

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — dà, tiān

Script — two dots over a shape like 大



How 头 is written, stroke by stroke

头

Two pieces: two dots, then a shape like 大.

Two dots, one under the other, each falling to the right, a little left of the middle.

Then three strokes, almost 大: a long bar across, then a long stroke from the top falling down to the left. The last stroke is not the long stroke of 大 but a short dot at the lower right.

2 + 3 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 头, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 头? (Five.) What comes first? (Two dots.)
How is the last stroke different from 大? (It is a short dot.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 头, pinned stroke paths and medians.

228.3 疼 — the frame of 病, and a shape of five inside

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say tóuténg — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

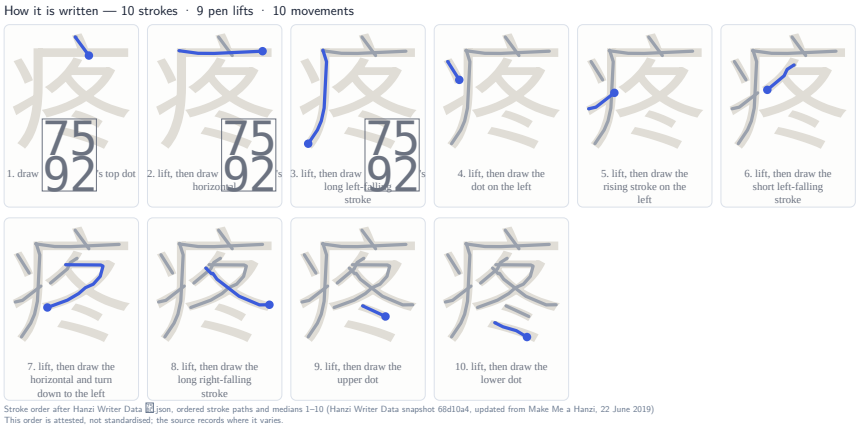
  病

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — bìng

Script — the frame of 病, and a shape of five inside



How 疼 is written, stroke by stroke

疼

Two pieces: a frame, and what sits inside it. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The frame, five strokes, as in 病: a dot at the top, a bar across, a long stroke falling to the left, then a small dot and a short stroke rising to the right on the far left.

Inside, five strokes. A short stroke falling to the left. A bar that turns and falls to the left. A long stroke falling to the right. Then two dots, one under the other.

5 + 5 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 疼, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 疼? (Ten.) Where has your hand made the frame before? (In 病.) What comes at the foot? (Two dots.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 疼, pinned stroke paths and medians.

228.4 chīyào — to take medicine

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to run into someone, then the Mandarin for a headache.

You'll want to know: chīyào

chīyào — "to take medicine".

nǐ chīyào le ma — Have you taken your medicine?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chīyào is built from 吃 'to eat' and yào 'medicine'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese yak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), explained, after an older book, as a plant that cures illness. The dictionary gives the first, kj+t there, only for stammering, so how it came to mean eating is not settled, and chī is not the regular outcome of that form.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: chīyào
- Say it: chīyào, once more
- Say it: nǐ chīyào le ma — Have you taken your medicine?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to run into someone, then the Mandarin for a headache, then say chīyào again

Before you move on

What does chīyào mean? ("To take medicine".) Say it once more.

228.5 dǎzhēn — to have an injection; to give one

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a headache, then the Mandarin for to take medicine.

You'll want to know: dǎzhēn

dǎzhēn — "to have an injection; to give one".

wǒ pà dǎzhēn — I'm scared of injections.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎzhēn is built from 打 'to strike, to do' and zhēn 'needle', both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and tsyim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'needle and thread'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎzhēn
- Say it: dǎzhēn, once more
- Say it: wǒ pà dǎzhēn — I'm scared of injections.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a headache, then the Mandarin for to take medicine, then say dǎzhēn again

Before you move on

What does dǎzhēn mean? ("To have an injection; to give one".) Say it once more.

228.6 yánzhòng — serious (of illness); serious (of a problem)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to take medicine, then the Mandarin for to have an injection.

You'll want to know: yánzhòng

yánzhòng — "serious (of illness); serious (of a problem)".

yīshēng shuō bù yánzhòng — The doctor says it isn't serious.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yánzhòng is built from yán 'stern' and 重 'heavy', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngjaem and drjowngX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'stern' and 'awe-inspiring'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: yánzhòng
- Say it: yánzhòng, once more
- Say it: yīshēng shuō bù yánzhòng — The doctor says it isn't serious.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to take medicine, then the Mandarin for to have an injection, then say yánzhòng again

Before you move on

What does yánzhòng mean? ("Serious (of illness); serious (of a problem)".) Say it once more.

228.7 点头 (diǎntóu) — to nod

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have an injection, then the Mandarin for serious (of illness).

You'll want to know: 点头

点头 — diǎntóu — "to nod".

我问他头疼不疼他点头了 wǒ wèn tā tóu téng bu téng tā diǎntóu le — I asked if his head hurt, and he nodded.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 点头 (diǎntóu) is built from 点 'to dot' and 头 'head', both inherited from Middle Chinese, temX and duw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'dots and strokes'; 'to dip' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: diǎntóu
- Say it: diǎntóu, once more
- Say it: wǒ wèn tā tóu téng bu téng tā diǎntóu le — I asked if his head hurt, and he nodded.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have an injection, then the Mandarin for serious (of illness), then say diǎntóu again

Before you move on

What does 点头 mean? ("To nod".) Say it once more.

Chapter 229

Keeping a Pet

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about pets: keeping one, walking the dog, being scratched and stroking them.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 229: I can talk about pets: keeping one, walking the dog, being scratched and stroking them.

229.1 chǒngwù — pet

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for serious (of illness), then the Mandarin for to nod.

You'll want to know: chǒngwù

chǒngwù — "pet".

> nǐ jiā yǒu chǒngwù ma — Have you got a pet at home?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chǒngwù is built from chǒng 'to dote on' and wù 'thing', both inherited from Middle Chinese, trhjowngX and mjut (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to love and favour'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: chǒngwù
- Say it: chǒngwù, once more
- Say it: nǐ jiā yǒu chǒngwù ma — Have you got a pet at home?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for serious (of illness), then the Mandarin for to nod, then say chǒngwù again

Before you move on

What does chǒngwù mean? ("Pet".) Say it once more.

229.2 yǎng — to keep an animal; to raise

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to nod, then the Mandarin for a pet.

You'll want to know: yǎng

yǎng — "to keep an animal; to raise".

wǒ xiǎng yǎng yì zhī māo — I'd like to have a cat.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǎng is inherited from Middle Chinese yangX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to rear' and 'to delight'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: yǎng
- Say it: yǎng, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng yǎng yì zhī māo — I'd like to have a cat.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to nod, then the Mandarin for a pet, then say yǎng again

Before you move on

What does yǎng mean? ("To keep an animal; to raise".) Say it once more.

229.3 liùgǒu — to walk the dog

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a pet, then the Mandarin for to keep an animal.

You'll want to know: liùgǒu

liùgǒu — "to walk the dog".

wǒ měitiān wǎnshang liùgǒu — I walk the dog every evening.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of liùgǒu is built from liù 'to stroll' and gǒu 'dog'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese kuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'dog'; the dictionary glosses the first, ljuw there, 'to linger', and the falling tone of liù is not the regular outcome of that form.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: liùgǒu
- Say it: liùgǒu, once more
- Say it: wǒ měitiān wǎnshang liùgǒu — I walk the dog every evening.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a pet, then the Mandarin for to keep an animal, then say liùgǒu again

Before you move on

What does liùgǒu mean? ("To walk the dog".) Say it once more.

229.4 zhuā — to scratch; to grab

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to keep an animal, then the Mandarin for to walk the dog.

You'll want to know: zhuā

zhuā — "to scratch; to grab".

bié pà wǒ de māo bù zhuā rén — Don't worry, my cat doesn't scratch.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhuā is inherited from Middle Chinese tsraew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to scratch and pinch'; the vowel of zhuā is not the regular outcome of that form.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: zhuā
- Say it: zhuā, once more
- Say it: bié pà wǒ de māo bù zhuā rén — Don't worry, my cat doesn't scratch.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to keep an animal, then the Mandarin for to walk the dog, then say zhuā again

Before you move on

What does zhuā mean? ("To scratch; to grab".) Say it once more.

229.5 mō — to stroke; to touch

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to walk the dog, then the Mandarin for to scratch.

You'll want to know: mō

mō — "to stroke; to touch".

wǒ kěyǐ mō nǐ de gǒu ma — Can I stroke your dog?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of mō is inherited from Middle Chinese mu (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to feel with the hand'. The vowel and the level tone of mō are not the regular outcome of that form.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: mō
- Say it: mō, once more
- Say it: wǒ kěyǐ mō nǐ de gǒu ma — Can I stroke your dog?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to walk the dog, then the Mandarin for to scratch, then say mō again

Before you move on

What does mō mean? ("To stroke; to touch".) Say it once more.

229.6 Looking back: from Spring Flowers to Keeping a Pet

Say the Mandarin for to bloom and a florist's.

Your turn

- Say it: to bloom, a florist's, a garden, a butterfly, a bee
- Say it: the countryside, a farmer, to work the land, to pick fruit, to camp out
- Say it: a lawn, a lake, a forest, grassland, scenery
- Say it: the seaside, a boat, to get seasick, a sandy beach, to run into someone
- Say it: a headache, to take medicine, to have an injection, serious (of illness), to nod
- Say it: a pet, to keep an animal, to walk the dog, to scratch, to stroke
- Read it: 花 草 头 疼 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

To bloom? (开花, kāihuā.) A florist's? (花店, huādiàn.) A garden? (huāyuán.) A butterfly? (húdié.) A bee? (mìfēng.) The countryside? (nóngcūn.) A farmer? (nóngmín.) To work the land? (zhòngdì.) To pick fruit? (zhāi.) To camp out? (lùyíng.) A lawn? (草地, cǎodì.) A lake? (hú.) A forest? (sēnlín.) Grassland? (cǎoyuán.) Scenery? (fēngjǐng.) The seaside? (hǎibiān.) A boat? (chuán.) To get seasick? (yùnchuán.) A sandy beach? (shātān.) To run into someone? (yùdào.) A headache? (头疼, tóuténg.) To take medicine? (chīyào.) To have an injection? (dǎzhēn.) Serious (of illness)? (yánzhòng.) To nod? (点头, diǎntóu.) A pet? (chǒngwù.) To keep an animal? (yǎng.) To walk the dog? (liùgǒu.) To scratch? (zhuā.) To stroke? (mō.)

Chapter 230

Head to Toe

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I have on me and what I weigh, and talk about my tummy, my nose and my legs.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 230: I can say what I have on me and what I weigh, and talk about my tummy, my nose and my legs.

230.1 身上 (shēnshang) — on your person; on one's body

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to scratch, then the Mandarin for to stroke.

You'll want to know: 身上

身上 — shēnshang — "on your person; on one's body".

> 我身上没有钱 wǒ shēnshang méiyǒu qián — I haven't got any money on me.

The new character, in pieces: 身 — seven strokes: a short fall to the left, a short vertical, a bar that turns down into a long hook, two short bars inside, a long stroke rising to the right, and a long stroke falling to the left. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 身上 (shēnshang) is built from 身 'body' and 上 'on', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syin and dzyangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'oneself' and 'the body'; in the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: shēnshang
- Say it: shēnshang, once more
- Say it: wǒ shēnshang méiyǒu qián — I haven't got any money on me.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to scratch, then the Mandarin for to stroke, then say shēnshang again

Before you move on

What does 身上 mean? ("On your person; on one's body".) Say it once more.

230.2 身 — a frame with two bars, crossed by two long strokes

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say shēnshang — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

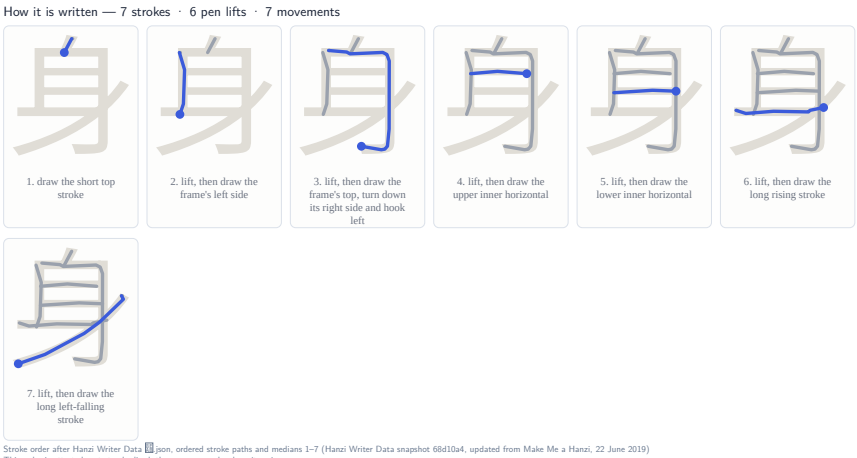
  上 月

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shàng, yuè

Script — a frame with two bars, crossed by two long strokes



How 身 is written, stroke by stroke

身

One piece, seven strokes. Count them in three groups.

The frame, three strokes. A short stroke falling to the left at the top. A short vertical on the left. Then a bar from its top that runs right and turns down into a long stroke to the foot, hooking left.

Inside, two short bars, one under the other.

Across it all, two long strokes. A stroke rising from the far left to the right, through the frame. Then a long stroke from the upper right falling down to the lower left.

3 + 2 + 2 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 身, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 身? (Seven.) How many short bars sit inside the frame? (Two.) What comes last? (The long stroke falling to the left.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 身, pinned stroke paths and medians.

230.3 体重 (tǐzhòng) — body weight

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to stroke, then the Mandarin for on your person.

You'll want to know: 体重

体重 — tǐzhòng — "body weight".

你的体重是多少 nǐ de tǐzhòng shì duōshao — How much do you weigh?

The new character, in pieces: 体 — seven strokes: the person piece 亻, then 本. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 体重 (tǐzhòng) is built from 体 'body' and 重 'heavy', both inherited from Middle Chinese, thejX and drjowngX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'the body' and the second 'much' and 'thick'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: tǐzhòng
- Say it: tǐzhòng, once more
- Say it: nǐ de tǐzhòng shì duōshao — How much do you weigh?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to stroke, then the Mandarin for on your person, then say tǐzhòng again

Before you move on

What does 体重 mean? (“Body weight”.) Say it once more.

230.4 体 — the person piece, then 本

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say tǐzhòng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  本 你

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — běn, nǐ

Script — the person piece, then 本

How 体 is written, stroke by stroke

体

Two pieces, left before right.
The person piece, 亻, two strokes, as in 你 and 他.
Then 本, five strokes, as in 本子: a bar across, a long vertical, a stroke falling to the left and one falling to the right, then a short bar low on the vertical.
2 + 5 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 体, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 体? (Seven.) What are its two pieces? (亻 and 本.) What comes last? (The short bar near the foot.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 体, pinned stroke paths and medians.

230.5 dùzi — belly; tummy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for on your person, then the Mandarin for body weight.

You'll want to know: dùzi

dùzi — "belly; tummy".

wǒ dùzi téng — My tummy hurts.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dùzi is built from dù 'belly' and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, duX and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'the belly'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: dùzi
- Say it: dùzi, once more
- Say it: wǒ dùzi téng — My tummy hurts.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for on your person, then the Mandarin for body weight, then say dùzi again

Before you move on

What does dùzi mean? ("Belly; tummy".) Say it once more.

230.6 bízi — nose

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for body weight, then the Mandarin for a tummy.

You'll want to know: bízi

bízi — "nose".

tā de bízi hěn gāo — He has a high-bridged nose.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bízi is built from bí 'nose' and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjijH and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which explains the first, after an older book, as drawing in breath. It is listed with a departing tone, so the rising tone of bí is not the regular outcome.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: bízi
- Say it: bízi, once more
- Say it: tā de bízi hěn gāo — He has a high-bridged nose.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for body weight, then the Mandarin for a tummy, then say bízi again

Before you move on

What does bízi mean? (“Nose”.) Say it once more.

230.7 tuǐ — leg

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a tummy, then the Mandarin for a nose.

You’ll want to know: tuǐ

tuǐ — “leg”.

wǒ shēnshang téng tuǐ yě téng — I ache all over, and my legs too.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

tuǐ is inherited from Middle Chinese thwojX (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), glossed ’the thigh’; the dictionary lists the character as the everyday form of another.

What you’ve built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: tuǐ
- Say it: tuǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒ shēnshang téng tuǐ yě téng — I ache all over, and my legs too.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a tummy, then the Mandarin for a nose, then say tuǐ again

Before you move on

What does tuǐ mean? (“Leg”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 231

Seeing a Doctor

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can choose Chinese or Western medicine, register at the clinic, talk about the nurse and say what the doctor gave me.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 231: I can choose Chinese or Western medicine, register at the clinic, talk about the nurse and say what the doctor gave me.

231.1 中医 (zhōngyī) — traditional Chinese medicine; a doctor of it

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a nose, then the Mandarin for a leg.

You'll want to know: 中医

中医 — zhōngyī — "traditional Chinese medicine; a doctor of it".

> 我想看中医 wǒ xiǎng kàn zhōngyī — I'd like to see a Chinese-medicine doctor.

The new character, in pieces: 医 — seven strokes: a bar on top, five strokes inside it (a short fall, a short bar, a long bar, a long fall and a dot), then a stroke down the left that turns right along the foot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 中医 (zhōngyī) is built from 中, as in 中国, and 医 'medicine', both inherited from Middle Chinese, trjuwng and 'i (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to heal'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: zhōngyī
- Say it: zhōngyī, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng kàn zhōngyī — I'd like to see a Chinese-medicine doctor.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a nose, then the Mandarin for a leg, then say zhōngyī again

Before you move on

What does 中医 mean? ("Traditional Chinese medicine; a doctor of it".) Say it once more.

231.2 医 — a box open on the right, with five strokes inside

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say zhōngyī — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  头 中

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — tóu, zhōng

Script — a box open on the right, with five strokes inside

How 医 is written, stroke by stroke

医

Two pieces: a box open on the right, and what sits inside. The box takes two strokes, one first and one last.

First, the top bar of the box.

Inside, five strokes. A short stroke falling to the left, then a short bar. Then three as at the foot of 头: a long bar, a long stroke falling to the left through it, and a dot falling to the right.

Last, the box closes: a vertical down the left that turns and runs right along the foot.

1 + 5 + 1 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 医, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 医? (Seven.) Which stroke comes last? (The one down the left and along the foot.) How many strokes sit inside? (Five.)

Source: Hanzi Writer Data 医, pinned stroke paths and medians.

231.3 西医 (xīyī) — western medicine; a doctor of it

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a leg, then the Mandarin for Chinese medicine.

You'll want to know: 西医

西医 — xīyī — "western medicine; a doctor of it".

我身体不好头也疼想看西医 wǒ shēntǐ bù hǎo tóu yě téng xiǎng kàn xīyī — I'm not well and my head hurts too; I'd like to see a doctor of western medicine.

The new character, in pieces: 西 — six strokes: a bar on top, a box of two strokes, two strokes inside it that start above it, and a bar along the foot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 西医 (xīyī) is built from 西 'west' and 医 'medicine', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sej and ʔi (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which explains the first, after an older book, as a bird settling on its nest when the sun is in the west.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: xīyī
- Say it: xīyī, once more
- Say it: wǒ shēntǐ bù hǎo tóu yě téng xiǎng kàn xīyī — I'm not well and my head hurts too; I'd like to see a doctor of western medicine.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for a leg, then the Mandarin for Chinese medicine, then say xīyī again

Before you move on

What does 西医 mean? ("Western medicine; a doctor of it".) Say it once more.

231.4 西 — a bar, a box and two strokes inside

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xīyī — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  要 票

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — yào, piào

Script — a bar, a box and two strokes inside

How 西 is written, stroke by stroke

西

One piece, six strokes.
A bar across the top.
The box, two strokes: a vertical down the whole left side, then a bar that runs right and turns down.
Inside, two strokes, each starting above the box: a stroke down that falls a little to the left, then a stroke down that turns right along the inside.
Last, a bar closes the foot.
1 + 2 + 2 + 1 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 西, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 西? (Six.) Where do the two inner strokes start? (Above the box.) What comes last? (The bar along the foot.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 西, pinned stroke paths and medians.

231.5 guàhào — to register at a clinic; to register at a hospital

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for Chinese medicine, then the Mandarin for western medicine.

You'll want to know: guàhào

guàhào — "to register at a clinic; to register at a hospital".

kànbìng yǐqián yào guàhào — Before you see the doctor, you have to register.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guàhào is built from guà 'to hang up' and 号 'a number', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kweaH and hawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: guàhào
- Say it: guàhào, once more
- Say it: kànbìng yǐqián yào guàhào — Before you see the doctor, you have to register.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for Chinese medicine, then the Mandarin for western medicine, then say guàhào again

Before you move on

What does guàhào mean? ("To register at a clinic; to register at a hospital".) Say it once more.

231.6 hùshi — nurse

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for western medicine, then the Mandarin for to register at a clinic.

You'll want to know: hùshi

hùshi — "nurse".

tā shì zhèr de hùshi — She's a nurse here.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hùshi is built from hù 'to protect' and shi 'a scholar', both inherited from Middle Chinese, huH and dzriX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to save' and 'to help'; in the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: hùshi
- Say it: hùshi, once more
- Say it: tā shì zhèr de hùshi — She's a nurse here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for western medicine, then the Mandarin for to register at a clinic, then say hùshi again

Before you move on

What does hùshi mean? ("Nurse".) Say it once more.

231.7 kāiyào — to prescribe medicine

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to register at a clinic, then the Mandarin for a nurse.

You'll want to know: kāiyào

kāiyào — "to prescribe medicine".

zhōngyī yě huì kāiyào — Chinese-medicine doctors prescribe medicine too.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kāiyào is built from 开 'to open' and yào 'medicine', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khoj and yak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the sense 'to write out a prescription' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: kāiyào
- Say it: kāiyào, once more
- Say it: zhōngyī yě huì kāiyào — Chinese-medicine doctors prescribe medicine too.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to register at a clinic, then the Mandarin for a nurse, then say kāiyào again

Before you move on

What does kāiyào mean? ("To prescribe medicine".) Say it once more.

Chapter 232

An Accident

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell what happened in an accident: who got hurt, who was bleeding, what crashed and the ambulance.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 232: I can tell what happened in an accident: who got hurt, who was bleeding, what crashed and the ambulance.

232.1 出事 (chūshì) — to have an accident; for something to go wrong

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a nurse, then the Mandarin for to prescribe.

You'll want to know: 出事

出事 — chūshì — "to have an accident; for something to go wrong".

> 前天雪很大这儿出事了 qiántiān xuě hěn dà zhèr chūshì le — The day before yesterday the snow was heavy, and there was an accident here.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 出事 (chūshì) is built from 出 'to come out' and 事 'a matter', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwit and dzriH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to employ' and 'to set up'; 'a matter' is the everyday sense, not the gloss.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: chūshì
- Say it: chūshì, once more
- Say it: qiántiān xuě hěn dà zhèr chūshì le — The day before yesterday the snow was heavy, and there was an accident here.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a nurse, then the Mandarin for to prescribe, then say chūshì again

Before you move on

What does 出事 mean? ("To have an accident; for something to go wrong".) Say it once more.

232.2 shòushāng — to get hurt; to be injured

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to prescribe, then the Mandarin for to have an accident.

You'll want to know: shòushāng

shòushāng — "to get hurt; to be injured".

tā de tuǐ shòushāng le — He hurt his leg.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shòushāng is built from shòu 'to receive' and shāng 'a wound', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyuwX and syang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to receive' and the second 'harm'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: shòushāng
- Say it: shòushāng, once more
- Say it: tā de tuǐ shòushāng le — He hurt his leg.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to prescribe, then the Mandarin for to have an accident, then say shòushāng again

Before you move on

What does shòushāng mean? ("To get hurt; to be injured".) Say it once more.

232.3 liúxuè — to bleed

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have an accident, then the Mandarin for to get hurt.

You'll want to know: liúxuè

liúxuè — "to bleed".

nǐ de shǒu liúxuè le — Your hand's bleeding.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of liúxuè is built from liú 'to flow' and xuè 'blood', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ljuw and xwet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which explains the first, after an older book, as water moving.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: liúxuè
- Say it: liúxuè, once more
- Say it: nǐ de shǒu liúxuè le — Your hand's bleeding.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have an accident, then the Mandarin for to get hurt, then say liúxuè again

Before you move on

What does liúxuè mean? ("To bleed".) Say it once more.

232.4 zhuàng — to crash into; to bump into

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get hurt, then the Mandarin for to bleed.

You'll want to know: zhuàng

zhuàng — "to crash into; to bump into".

tā qí chē zhuàngdàole yí ge rén — He rode his bike into someone.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhuàng is inherited from Middle Chinese draewngH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to strike a bell'; the dictionary glosses its other reading 'to knock against'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: zhuàng
- Say it: zhuàng, once more
- Say it: tā qí chē zhuàngdàole yí ge rén — He rode his bike into someone.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get hurt, then the Mandarin for to bleed, then say zhuàng again

Before you move on

What does zhuàng mean? ("To crash into; to bump into".) Say it once more.

232.5 jiùhùchē — ambulance

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to bleed, then the Mandarin for to crash into.

You'll want to know: jiùhùchē

jiùhùchē — "ambulance".

gǎnkuài jiào jiùhùchē — Call an ambulance, quick!

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiùhùchē is built from jiù 'to rescue', hù 'to protect' and 车 'vehicle', all inherited from Middle Chinese, kjuwH, huH and tsyhae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to protect' and 'to stop'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: jiùhùchē
- Say it: jiùhùchē, once more
- Say it: gǎnkuài jiào jiùhùchē — Call an ambulance, quick!
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to bleed, then the Mandarin for to crash into, then say jiùhùchē again

Before you move on

What does jiùhùchē mean? ("Ambulance".) Say it once more.

Chapter 233

How People Look

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe someone's appearance: their glasses, a beard, a slim figure and their skin.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 233: I can describe someone's appearance: their glasses, a beard, a slim figure and their skin.

233.1 yàngzi — appearance; manner

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to crash into, then the Mandarin for an ambulance.

You'll want to know: yàngzi

yàngzi — "appearance; manner".

> tā de yàngzi hěn xiàng tā bàba — He takes after his dad.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yàngzi is built from yàng 'shape' and the noun ending 子, inherited from Middle Chinese tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). No dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: yàngzi
- Say it: yàngzi, once more
- Say it: tā de yàngzi hěn xiàng tā bàba — He takes after his dad.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to crash into, then the Mandarin for an ambulance, then say yàngzi again

Before you move on

What does yàngzi mean? ("Appearance; manner".) Say it once more.

233.2 yǎnjìng — glasses; spectacles

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an ambulance, then the Mandarin for appearance.

You'll want to know: yǎnjìng

yǎnjìng — "glasses; spectacles".

wǒ de yǎnjìng ne — Where are my glasses?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǎnjìng is built from yǎn 'eye' and jìng 'mirror', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngeanX and kjaengH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'the eye'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: yǎnjìng
- Say it: yǎnjìng, once more
- Say it: wǒ de yǎnjìng ne — Where are my glasses?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an ambulance, then the Mandarin for appearance, then say yǎnjìng again

Before you move on

What does yǎnjìng mean? ("Glasses; spectacles".) Say it once more.

233.3 húzi — beard; moustache

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for appearance, then the Mandarin for glasses for the eyes.

You'll want to know: húzi

húzi — "beard; moustache".

wǒ bàba yǒu húzi — My dad has a beard.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of húzi is built from hú 'beard' and the noun ending 子, inherited from Middle Chinese tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). No dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: húzi
- Say it: húzi, once more
- Say it: wǒ bàba yǒu húzi — My dad has a beard.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for appearance, then the Mandarin for glasses for the eyes, then say húzi again

Before you move on

What does húzi mean? ("Beard; moustache".) Say it once more.

233.4 miáotiao — slim; slender

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for glasses for the eyes, then the Mandarin for a beard.

You'll want to know: miáotiao

miáotiao — "slim; slender".

tā hěn miáotiao — She's very slender.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of miáotiao is built from miáo 'a sprout' and tiáo 'a twig'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese dew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a small branch'; the dictionary glosses the first, mjew there, 'young crops in the field'. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: miáotiao
- Say it: miáotiao, once more
- Say it: tā hěn miáotiao — She's very slender.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for glasses for the eyes, then the Mandarin for a beard, then say miáotiao again

Before you move on

What does miáotiao mean? ("Slim; slender".) Say it once more.

233.5 pífū — skin

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a beard, then the Mandarin for slender.

You'll want to know: pífū

pífū — "skin".

tā de pífū hěn bái — She has very fair skin.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of pífū is built from pí 'hide' and fū 'skin'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese bje (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed with this very word, 'skin'; the dictionary glosses the second, pju there, the same way.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: pífū
- Say it: pífū, once more
- Say it: tā de pífū hěn bái — She has very fair skin.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a beard, then the Mandarin for slender, then say pífū again

Before you move on

What does pífū mean? ("Skin".) Say it once more.

Chapter 234

Rain or Shine

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can put plans off, call them off, move them to another day, take a raincoat and shelter from the rain.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 234: I can put plans off, call them off, move them to another day, take a raincoat and shelter from the rain.

234.1 tuīchí — to put off; to postpone

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for slender, then the Mandarin for skin.

You'll want to know: tuīchí

tuīchí — "to put off; to postpone".

> míngtiān xiàyǔ wǒmen de yěcān yào tuīchí — It's going to rain tomorrow, so our picnic will have to wait.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tuīchí is built from tuī 'to push' and chí 'slow', both inherited from Middle Chinese, thwoj and drij (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'slow' and 'leisurely'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: tuīchí
- Say it: tuīchí, once more
- Say it: míngtiān xiàyǔ wǒmen de yěcān yào tuīchí — It's going to rain tomorrow, so our picnic will have to wait.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for slender, then the Mandarin for skin, then say tuīchí again

Before you move on

What does tuīchí mean? ("To put off; to postpone".) Say it once more.

234.2 qǔxiāo — to cancel; to call off

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for skin, then the Mandarin for to put off.

You'll want to know: qǔxiāo

qǔxiāo — "to cancel; to call off".

xiàyǔ le bǐsài qǔxiāo le — It's raining, so the match is off.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qǔxiāo is built from qǔ 'to take' and xiāo 'to melt away', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshjuX and sjew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to take in' and the second 'to wipe out' and 'to use up'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: qǔxiāo
- Say it: qǔxiāo, once more
- Say it: xiàyǔ le bǐsài qǔxiāo le — It's raining, so the match is off.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for skin, then the Mandarin for to put off, then say qǔxiāo again

Before you move on

What does qǔxiāo mean? ("To cancel; to call off".) Say it once more.

234.3 gǎitiān — some other day; another time

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to put off, then the Mandarin for to call off.

You'll want to know: gǎitiān

gǎitiān — "some other day; another time".

jīntiān xiàyǔ wǒmen gǎitiān qù — It's raining today; let's go another day.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gǎitiān is built from gǎi 'to change' and 天 'day', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kojX and then (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to alter'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: gǎitiān
- Say it: gǎitiān, once more
- Say it: jīntiān xiàyǔ wǒmen gǎitiān qù — It's raining today; let's go another day.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to put off, then the Mandarin for to call off, then say gǎitiān again

Before you move on

What does gǎitiān mean? ("Some other day; another time".) Say it once more.

234.4 雨衣 (yǔyī) — raincoat

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to call off, then the Mandarin for some other day.

You'll want to know: 雨衣

雨衣 — yǔyī — "raincoat".

下雨了风也很大我有雨衣 xiàyǔ le fēng yě hěn dà wǒ yǒu yǔyī — It's raining and it's windy too; good thing I've got a raincoat.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 雨衣 (yǔyī) is built from 雨 'rain' and 衣 'garment', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuX and 'j+j (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: yǔyī
- Say it: yǔyī, once more
- Say it: xiàyǔ le fēng yě hěn dà wǒ yǒu yǔyī — It's raining and it's windy too; good thing I've got a raincoat.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to call off, then the Mandarin for some other day, then say yǔyī again

Before you move on

What does 雨衣 mean? ("Raincoat".) Say it once more.

234.5 duǒyǔ — to shelter from the rain

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for some other day, then the Mandarin for a raincoat.

You'll want to know: duǒyǔ

duǒyǔ — "to shelter from the rain".

xiàyǔ le wǒmen qù fàndiàn duǒyǔ — It started raining, so we sheltered in a restaurant.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Tone: duǒ and yǔ are both third tones, so the first rises and it sounds like duóyǔ.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of duǒyǔ is built from duǒ 'to hide' and 雨 'rain'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese hjuX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of the first, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: duǒyǔ
- Say it: duǒyǔ, once more
- Say it: xiàyǔ le wǒmen qù fàndiàn duǒyǔ — It started raining, so we sheltered in a restaurant.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for some other day, then the Mandarin for a raincoat, then say duǒyǔ again

Before you move on

What does duǒyǔ mean? ("To shelter from the rain".) Say it once more.

Chapter 235

For a Reason

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give reasons and purposes: what I do it for, what caused it, my grounds, what I had to do, and no wonder.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 235: I can give reasons and purposes: what I do it for, what caused it, my grounds, what I had to do, and no wonder.

235.1 为了 (wèile) — for; in order to

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a raincoat, then the Mandarin for to shelter from the rain.

You'll want to know: 为了

为了 — wèile — "for; in order to".

> 为了身体我们都不吃点心了 wèile shēntǐ wǒmen dōu bù chī diǎnxin le — For our health, we've all given up snacks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 为了 (wèile) is built from 为 'for' and 了, both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjweH and lewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to help'; in the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: wèile
- Say it: wèile, once more
- Say it: wèile shēntǐ wǒmen dōu bù chī diǎnxin le — For our health, we've all given up snacks.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a raincoat, then the Mandarin for to shelter from the rain, then say wèile again

Before you move on

What does 为了 mean? ("For; in order to".) Say it once more.

235.2 yóuyú — owing to; because of

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to shelter from the rain, then the Mandarin for in order to.

You'll want to know: yóuyú

yóuyú — "owing to; because of".

yóuyú tiānqì bù hǎo wǒmen méi qù hǎibiān — Because of the bad weather, we didn't go to the seaside.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yóuyú is built from yóu 'from' and yú 'at', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yuw and 'jo (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to follow' and 'by way of', and the second 'to dwell' and lists it as a particle.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: yóuyú
- Say it: yóuyú, once more
- Say it: yóuyú tiānqì bù hǎo wǒmen méi qù hǎibiān — Because of the bad weather, we didn't go to the seaside.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to shelter from the rain, then the Mandarin for in order to, then say yóuyú again

Before you move on

What does yóuyú mean? ("Owing to; because of".) Say it once more.

235.3 lǐyóu — reason; grounds

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for in order to, then the Mandarin for owing to.

You'll want to know: lǐyóu

lǐyóu — "reason; grounds".

nǐ yǒu shénme lǐyóu — What are your grounds?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǐyóu is built from lǐ 'reason' and yóu 'cause', both inherited from Middle Chinese, liX and yuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to put in order' and explains it, after an older book, as working jade.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: lǐyóu
- Say it: lǐyóu, once more
- Say it: nǐ yǒu shénme lǐyóu — What are your grounds?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for in order to, then the Mandarin for owing to, then say lǐyóu again

Before you move on

What does lǐyóu mean? ("Reason; grounds".) Say it once more.

235.4 zhǐhǎo — to have no choice but to

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for owing to, then the Mandarin for grounds for doing something.

You'll want to know: zhǐhǎo

zhǐhǎo — "to have no choice but to".

méiyǒu chē le wǒmen zhǐhǎo zǒulù — There was no transport left, so we had to walk.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Tone: zhǐ and hǎo are both third tones, so the first rises and it sounds like zhíhǎo.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhǐhǎo is built from zhǐ 'only' and 好 'good'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese xawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary lists the first, tsyeX there, as a particle.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǐhǎo
- Say it: zhǐhǎo, once more
- Say it: méiyǒu chē le wǒmen zhǐhǎo zǒulù — There was no transport left, so we had to walk.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for owing to, then the Mandarin for grounds for doing something, then say zhǐhǎo again

Before you move on

What does zhǐhǎo mean? ("To have no choice but to".) Say it once more.

235.5 guàibude — no wonder

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for grounds for doing something, then the Mandarin for to have no choice but.

You'll want to know: guàibude

guàibude — "no wonder".

tā gǎnmào le guàibude tā méi lái — He's got a cold; no wonder he didn't come.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Tone: 不 is light here, bu, with no tone of its own.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of guàibude is built from guài 'to find strange', 不 'not' and 得 'can', all inherited from Middle Chinese, kweajH, pjut and tok (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'strange'; in the word the last two lose their tones.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: guàibude
- Say it: guàibude, once more
- Say it: tā gǎnmào le guàibude tā méi lái — He's got a cold; no wonder he didn't come.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for grounds for doing something, then the Mandarin for to have no choice but, then say guàibude again

Before you move on

What does guàibude mean? ("No wonder".) Say it once more.

235.6 Looking back: from Head to Toe to For a Reason

Say the Mandarin for on your person and body weight.

Your turn

- Say it: on your person, body weight, a tummy, a nose, a leg
- Say it: Chinese medicine, western medicine, to register at a clinic, a nurse, to prescribe
- Say it: to have an accident, to get hurt, to bleed, to crash into, an ambulance
- Say it: appearance, glasses for the eyes, a beard, slender, skin
- Say it: to put off, to call off, some other day, a raincoat, to shelter from the rain
- Say it: in order to, owing to, grounds for doing something, to have no choice but, no wonder
- Read it: 身 体 医 西 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

On your person? (身上, shēnshang.) Body weight? (体重, tǐzhòng.) A tummy? (dùzi.) A nose? (bízi.) A leg? (tuǐ.) Chinese medicine? (中医, zhōngyī.) Western medicine? (西医, xīyī.) To register at a clinic? (guàhào.) A nurse? (hùshi.) To prescribe? (kāiyào.) To have an accident? (出事, chūshì.) To get hurt? (shòushāng.) To bleed? (liúxuè.) To crash into? (zhuàng.) An ambulance? (jiùhùchē.) Appearance? (yàngzi.) Glasses for the eyes? (yǎnjìng.) A beard? (húzi.) Slender? (miáotiao.) Skin? (pífū.) To put off? (tuīchí.) To call off? (qǔxiāo.) Some other day? (gǎitiān.) A raincoat? (雨衣, yǔyī.) To shelter from the rain? (duǒyǔ.) In order to? (为了, wèile.) Owing to? (yóuyú.) Grounds for doing something? (lǐyóu.) To have no choice but? (zhǐhǎo.) No wonder? (guàibude.)

Chapter 236

Something Odd

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say something turned up, someone found out, how scared I was, what luckily happened and what nearly did.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 236: I can say something turned up, someone found out, how scared I was, what luckily happened and what nearly did.

236.1 出现 (chūxiàn) — to appear; to turn up

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have no choice but, then the Mandarin for no wonder.

You'll want to know: 出现

出现 — chūxiàn — "to appear; to turn up".

> 草地里出现了一个人 cǎodì lǐ chūxiànle yí ge rén — Someone appeared on the lawn.

The new character, in pieces: 现 — eight strokes in two pieces: on the left two bars, a vertical and a stroke rising to the right, then 见 on the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 出现 (chūxiàn) is built from 出 'to come out' and 现 'to show', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwit and henH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to reveal', noting the character as an everyday form.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: chūxiàn
- Say it: chūxiàn, once more
- Say it: cǎodì lǐ chūxiànle yí ge rén — Someone appeared on the lawn.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have no choice but, then the Mandarin for no wonder, then say chūxiàn again

Before you move on

What does 出现 mean? ("To appear; to turn up".) Say it once more.

236.2 现 — a narrow left piece, then 见

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say chūxiàn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  见 在

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — jiàn, zài

Script — a narrow left piece, then 见

How 现 is written, stroke by stroke

现

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, four strokes, narrow: a bar, a second bar, a vertical down through both, then a short stroke rising to the right at the foot.

The right piece, 见, four strokes, as in 再见 and 看见: a vertical, a bar that runs right and turns down, a long stroke falling to the left, then a stroke that bends right along the foot and flicks up.

4 + 4 = eight.

Your turn

- Write it: 现, all eight, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 现? (Eight.) What is the right piece? (见.) Which way does the last stroke of the left piece go? (It rises to the right.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 现, pinned stroke paths and medians.

236.3 fāxiàn — to discover; to find out

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for no wonder, then the Mandarin for to turn up.

You'll want to know: fāxiàn

fāxiàn — "to discover; to find out".

huí jiā yǐhòu wǒ fāxiàn qiánbāo diū le — When I got home, I found my wallet was gone.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fāxiàn is built from fā 'to send out' and 现 'to show', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjot and henH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to rise' and 'to make clear'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: fāxiàn
- Say it: fāxiàn, once more
- Say it: huí jiā yǐhòu wǒ fāxiàn qiánbāo diū le — When I got home, I found my wallet was gone.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for no wonder, then the Mandarin for to turn up, then say fāxiàn again

Before you move on

What does fāxiàn mean? ("To discover; to find out".) Say it once more.

236.4 hàipà — to be scared

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to turn up, then the Mandarin for to find out.

You'll want to know: hàipà

hàipà — "to be scared".

wǎnshang yí ge rén zài jiā wǒ hěn hàipà — Home alone at night, I was really scared.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hàipà is built from hài 'harm' and pà 'to fear', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hajH and phaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to injure'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: hàipà
- Say it: hàipà, once more
- Say it: wǎnshang yí ge rén zài jiā wǒ hěn hàipà — Home alone at night, I was really scared.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to turn up, then the Mandarin for to find out, then say hàipà again

Before you move on

What does hàipà mean? ("To be scared".) Say it once more.

236.5 xìnghǎo — luckily; fortunately

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to find out, then the Mandarin for to be scared.

You'll want to know: xìnghǎo

xìnghǎo — "luckily; fortunately".

> xìnghǎo nǐ lái le — Thank goodness you came.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xìnghǎo is built from xìng 'fortunate' and 好 'good', both inherited from Middle Chinese, heangX and xawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which explains the first, after an older book, as getting the good and escaping the bad.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: xìnghǎo
- Say it: xìnghǎo, once more
- Say it: xìnghǎo nǐ lái le — Thank goodness you came.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to find out, then the Mandarin for to be scared, then say xìnghǎo again

Before you move on

What does xìnghǎo mean? ("Luckily; fortunately".) Say it once more.

236.6 chàdiǎnr — nearly; almost

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be scared, then the Mandarin for luckily.

You'll want to know: chàdiǎnr

chàdiǎnr — "nearly; almost".

> wǒ chàdiǎnr chídào le — I was nearly late.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chàdiǎnr is built from chà 'short of' and 点儿 'a little', inherited from Middle Chinese tsrhae, temX and nye (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to choose' and 'to go wrong'; the falling tone of chà is not the regular outcome of that form.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: chàdiǎnr
- Say it: chàdiǎnr, once more
- Say it: wǒ chàdiǎnr chídào le — I was nearly late.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be scared, then the Mandarin for luckily, then say chàdiǎnr again

Before you move on

What does chàdiǎnr mean? ("Nearly; almost".) Say it once more.

Chapter 237

Plants

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about plants, peanuts, leaves, things sprouting and watermelons.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 237: I can talk about plants, peanuts, leaves, things sprouting and watermelons.

237.1 zhíwù — plant

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for luckily, then the Mandarin for nearly.

You'll want to know: zhíwù

zhíwù — "plant".

> wǒ xǐhuan zhíwù — I love plants.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhíwù is built from zhí 'to plant' and wù 'thing', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyik and mjut (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to plant' and 'to set up'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: zhíwù
- Say it: zhíwù, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan zhíwù — I love plants.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for luckily, then the Mandarin for nearly, then say zhíwù again

Before you move on

What does zhíwù mean? ("Plant".) Say it once more.

237.2 花生 (huāshēng) — peanut

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for nearly, then the Mandarin for a plant.

You'll want to know: 花生

花生 — huāshēng — "peanut".

我现在不吃花生了 wǒ xiànzài bù chī huāshēng le — I don't eat peanuts any more.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 花生 (huāshēng) is built from 花 'flower' and 生 'to grow', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xwae and srjaeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); how the pair came to name the peanut is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: huāshēng
- Say it: huāshēng, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiànzài bù chī huāshēng le — I don't eat peanuts any more.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for nearly, then the Mandarin for a plant, then say huāshēng again

Before you move on

What does 花生 mean? ("Peanut".) Say it once more.

237.3 yèzi — leaf

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a plant, then the Mandarin for a peanut.

You'll want to know: yèzi

yèzi — "leaf".

zhèxiē yèzi hěn piàoliang — These leaves are lovely.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yèzi is built from yè 'leaf' and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, yep and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'branches and leaves'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: yèzi
- Say it: yèzi, once more
- Say it: zhèxiē yèzi hěn piàoliang — These leaves are lovely.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a plant, then the Mandarin for a peanut, then say yèzi again

Before you move on

What does yèzi mean? ("Leaf".) Say it once more.

237.4 fāyá — to sprout; to bud

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a peanut, then the Mandarin for a leaf.

You'll want to know: fāyá

fāyá — "to sprout; to bud".

chūntiān lái le xiǎo cǎo fāyá le — Spring is here, and the grass is coming up.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fāyá is built from fā 'to send out' and yá 'a shoot'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese pjot (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to rise' and 'to open out'; the dictionary glosses the second, ngae there, 'a sprout'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: fāyá
- Say it: fāyá, once more
- Say it: chūntiān lái le xiǎo cǎo fāyá le — Spring is here, and the grass is coming up.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a peanut, then the Mandarin for a leaf, then say fāyá again

Before you move on

What does fāyá mean? ("To sprout; to bud".) Say it once more.

237.5 xīguā — watermelon

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a leaf, then the Mandarin for to sprout.

You'll want to know: xīguā xīguā — "watermelon".

xiàtiān wǒmen chángcháng chī xīguā — We eat a lot of watermelon in summer.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xīguā is built from 西 'west' and guā 'melon', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sej and kwae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second as a gourd and lists many kinds.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: xīguā
- Say it: xīguā, once more
- Say it: xiàtiān wǒmen chángcháng chī xīguā — We eat a lot of watermelon in summer.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a leaf, then the Mandarin for to sprout, then say xīguā again

Before you move on

What does xīguā mean? ("Watermelon".) Say it once more.

Chapter 238

Sea and Sky

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe the sky, the moon, dark clouds, the open sea and a rainbow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 238: I can describe the sky, the moon, dark clouds, the open sea and a rainbow.

238.1 tiānkōng — the sky

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sprout, then the Mandarin for a watermelon.

You'll want to know: tiānkōng

tiānkōng — "the sky".

> jīntiān de tiānkōng hěn lán — The sky is so blue today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tiānkōng is built from 天 'heaven' and kōng 'empty', both inherited from Middle Chinese, then and khuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'hollow'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: tiānkōng
- Say it: tiānkōng, once more
- Say it: jīntiān de tiānkōng hěn lán — The sky is so blue today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sprout, then the Mandarin for a watermelon, then say tiānkōng again

Before you move on

What does tiānkōng mean? ("The sky".) Say it once more.

238.2 yuèliang — the moon

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a watermelon, then the Mandarin for the sky.

You'll want to know: yuèliang

yuèliang — "the moon".

jīntiān wǎnshang yuèliang hěn dà — The moon is huge tonight.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yuèliang is built from 月 'moon' and liang 'bright', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngjwot and ljangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'bright'; in the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: yuèliang
- Say it: yuèliang, once more
- Say it: jīntiān wǎnshang yuèliang hěn dà — The moon is huge tonight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a watermelon, then the Mandarin for the sky, then say yuèliang again

Before you move on

What does yuèliang mean? ("The moon".) Say it once more.

238.3 wūyún — dark clouds

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the sky, then the Mandarin for the moon.

You'll want to know: wūyún

wūyún — "dark clouds".

wūyún lái le yào xiàyǔ le — Dark clouds are coming in; it's about to rain.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wūyún is built from wū 'black as a crow' and 云 'cloud'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese hjun (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary explains the first, 'u there, after an older book, as the crow that is all black.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: wūyún
- Say it: wūyún, once more
- Say it: wūyún lái le yào xiàyǔ le — Dark clouds are coming in; it's about to rain.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the sky, then the Mandarin for the moon, then say wūyún again

Before you move on

What does wūyún mean? ("Dark clouds".) Say it once more.

238.4 dàhǎi — the open sea

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the moon, then the Mandarin for dark clouds.

You'll want to know: dàhǎi

dàhǎi — "the open sea".

wǒ hěn xǐhuan dàhǎi — I really love the sea.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dàhǎi is built from 大 'big' and hǎi 'sea', both inherited from Middle Chinese, daH and xojX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: dàhǎi
- Say it: dàhǎi, once more

- Say it: wǒ hěn xǐhuan dàhǎi — I really love the sea.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the moon, then the Mandarin for dark clouds, then say dàhǎi again

Before you move on

What does dàhǎi mean? ("The open sea".) Say it once more.

238.5 cǎihóng — rainbow

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for dark clouds, then the Mandarin for the open sea.

You'll want to know: cǎihóng

cǎihóng — "rainbow".

yǔ tíng le yǒu cǎihóng — The rain's stopped, and there's a rainbow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cǎihóng is built from cǎi 'colour' and hóng 'rainbow'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese tshojX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'brilliance'; the dictionary glosses the second, huwng there, with an old two-character word for the rainbow.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: cǎihóng
- Say it: cǎihóng, once more
- Say it: yǔ tíng le yǒu cǎihóng — The rain's stopped, and there's a rainbow.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for dark clouds, then the Mandarin for the open sea, then say cǎihóng again

Before you move on

What does cǎihóng mean? (“Rainbow”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 239

Healthy Habits

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about staying healthy, giving up smoking and drinking, breathing and having a check-up.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 239: I can talk about staying healthy, giving up smoking and drinking, breathing and having a check-up.

239.1 jiànkāng — healthy; health

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the open sea, then the Mandarin for a rainbow.

You'll want to know: jiànkāng

jiànkāng — "healthy; health".

> tā měitiān pǎobù hěn jiànkāng — He runs every day and he's very fit.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiànkāng is built from jiàn 'strong' and kāng 'at ease', both inherited from Middle Chinese, gjonH and khang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'in harmony' and 'happy'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jiànkāng
- Say it: jiànkāng, once more
- Say it: tā měitiān pǎobù hěn jiànkāng — He runs every day and he's very fit.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the open sea, then the Mandarin for a rainbow, then say jiànkāng again

Before you move on

What does jiànkāng mean? ("Healthy; health".) Say it once more.

239.2 jièyān — to give up smoking

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a rainbow, then the Mandarin for healthy.

You'll want to know: jièyān

jièyān — "to give up smoking".

wèile shēntǐ wǒ bàba jièyān le — My dad gave up smoking for his health.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jièyān is built from jiè 'to guard against' and yān 'smoke'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese 'en (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'the breath of fire'; the dictionary glosses the first, keajH there, 'to be careful' and 'to warn'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jièyān
- Say it: jièyān, once more
- Say it: wèile shēntǐ wǒ bàba jièyān le — My dad gave up smoking for his health.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a rainbow, then the Mandarin for healthy, then say jièyān again

Before you move on

What does jièyān mean? ("To give up smoking".) Say it once more.

239.3 hējiǔ — to drink alcohol

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for healthy, then the Mandarin for to give up smoking.

You'll want to know: hējiǔ

hējiǔ — "to drink alcohol".

tā bù xīyān yě bù hējiǔ — He doesn't smoke or drink.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hējiǔ is built from 喝 'to drink' and jiǔ 'alcohol', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xat and tsjuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the first 'to shout', so how it came to mean drinking is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: hējiǔ
- Say it: hējiǔ, once more
- Say it: tā bù xīyān yě bù hējiǔ — He doesn't smoke or drink.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for healthy, then the Mandarin for to give up smoking, then say hējiǔ again

Before you move on

What does hējiǔ mean? ("To drink alcohol".) Say it once more.

239.4 hūxī — to breathe

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to give up smoking, then the Mandarin for to drink alcohol.

You'll want to know: hūxī

hūxī — "to breathe".

tā gǎnmào le bù néng yòng bízi hūxī — He's got a cold and can't breathe through his nose.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hūxī is built from hū 'to breathe out' and xī 'to breathe in', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xu and xip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to call' and, after an older book, 'the outward breath', and the second 'the inward breath'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: hūxī
- Say it: hūxī, once more
- Say it: tā gǎnmào le bù néng yòng bízi hūxī — He's got a cold and can't breathe through his nose.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to give up smoking, then the Mandarin for to drink alcohol, then say hūxī again

Before you move on

What does hūxī mean? ("To breathe".) Say it once more.

239.5 tǐjiǎn — medical check-up

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to drink alcohol, then the Mandarin for to breathe.

You'll want to know: tǐjiǎn

tǐjiǎn — "medical check-up".

wǒ měi nián zuò yí cì tǐjiǎn — I have a check-up once a year.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Tone: tǐ and jiǎn are both third tones, so the first rises and it sounds like tíjiǎn.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tǐjiǎn is built from 体 'body' and jiǎn 'to check', both inherited from Middle Chinese, thejX and kjemX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: tǐjiǎn
- Say it: tǐjiǎn, once more
- Say it: wǒ měi nián zuò yí cì tǐjiǎn — I have a check-up once a year.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to drink alcohol, then the Mandarin for to breathe, then say tǐjiǎn again

Before you move on

What does tǐjiǎn mean? ("Medical check-up".) Say it once more.

Chapter 240

Feeling Ill

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I'm ill and why: an infection, a swelling, being sick and an upset stomach.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 240: I can say I'm ill and why: an infection, a swelling, being sick and an upset stomach.

240.1 生病 (shēngbìng) — to get sick; to fall ill

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to breathe, then the Mandarin for a medical check-up.

You'll want to know: 生病

生病 — shēngbìng — "to get sick; to fall ill".

> 我生病了头很疼不想吃东西 wǒ shēngbìng le tóu hěn téng bù xiǎng chī dōngxi — I'm ill: my head really hurts and I don't want to eat.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 生病 (shēngbìng) is built from 生 'to grow' and 病 'illness', both inherited from Middle Chinese, srjaeng and bjaengH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'worry' and 'suffering' and explains it, after an older book, as an illness grown worse.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: shēngbìng
- Say it: shēngbìng, once more
- Say it: wǒ shēngbìng le tóu hěn téng bù xiǎng chī dōngxi — I'm ill: my head really hurts and I don't want to eat.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to breathe, then the Mandarin for a medical check-up, then say shēngbìng again

Before you move on

What does 生病 mean? ("To get sick; to fall ill".) Say it once more.

240.2 fāyán — to become inflamed

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a medical check-up, then the Mandarin for to get sick.

You'll want to know: fāyán

fāyán — "to become inflamed".

wǒ de sǎngzi fāyán le — My throat is inflamed.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fāyán is built from fā 'to start' and yán 'flame', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjot and hjem (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'heat' and explains it, after an older book, as fire rising.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: fāyán
- Say it: fāyán, once more
- Say it: wǒ de sǎngzi fāyán le — My throat is inflamed.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a medical check-up, then the Mandarin for to get sick, then say fāyán again

Before you move on

What does fāyán mean? ("To become inflamed".) Say it once more.

240.3 zhǒng — swollen

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get sick, then the Mandarin for to become inflamed.

You'll want to know: zhǒng

zhǒng — "swollen".

tā de jiǎo zhǒng le — His foot has swollen up.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhǒng is inherited from Middle Chinese tsyowngX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'an illness' and, after an older book, 'a boil'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: zhǒng
- Say it: zhǒng, once more

- Say it: tā de jiǎo zhǒng le — His foot has swollen up.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get sick, then the Mandarin for to become inflamed, then say zhǒng again

Before you move on

What does zhǒng mean? ("Swollen".) Say it once more.

240.4 tù — to throw up; to vomit

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to become inflamed, then the Mandarin for swollen.

You'll want to know: tù

tù — "to throw up; to vomit".

wǒ yùnchuán yǒudiǎnr xiǎng tù — I'm seasick and feel a bit like throwing up.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

tù is inherited from Middle Chinese thuH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to vomit'; the dictionary also lists the character with a rising tone for spitting out.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: tù
- Say it: tù, once more
- Say it: wǒ yùnchuán yǒudiǎnr xiǎng tù — I'm seasick and feel a bit like throwing up.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to become inflamed, then the Mandarin for swollen, then say tù again

Before you move on

What does tù mean? ("To throw up; to vomit".) Say it once more.

240.5 lā dùzi — to have diarrhoea; to have an upset stomach

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for swollen, then the Mandarin for to throw up.

You'll want to know: lā dùzi

lā dùzi — "to have diarrhoea; to have an upset stomach".

tā zuótiān lā dùzi le — He had an upset stomach yesterday.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

lā dùzi is built from lā 'to pull' and dùzi 'belly', all three syllables inherited from Middle Chinese, lop, duX and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to break'; how the phrase came to mean an upset stomach is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: lā dùzi
- Say it: lā dùzi, once more
- Say it: tā zuótiān lā dùzi le — He had an upset stomach yesterday.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for swollen, then the Mandarin for to throw up, then say lā dùzi again

Before you move on

What does lā dùzi mean? ("To have diarrhoea; to have an upset stomach".) Say it once more.

Chapter 241

In Hospital

Modes: voice (6) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell how someone went into hospital, the ward, the operation, coming home and getting better.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 241: I can tell how someone went into hospital, the ward, the operation, coming home and getting better.

241.1 zhùyuàn — to be in hospital

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to throw up, then the Mandarin for to have an upset stomach.

You'll want to know: zhùyuàn

zhùyuàn — "to be in hospital".

> shàng ge yuè wǒ bàba zhùyuàn le — Last month my dad went into hospital.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhùyuàn is built from zhù 'to stay' and yuàn 'a walled courtyard', both inherited from Middle Chinese, drjuH and hjwenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to stop' and the second 'a wall round a courtyard'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: zhùyuàn
- Say it: zhùyuàn, once more
- Say it: shàng ge yuè wǒ bàba zhùyuàn le — Last month my dad went into hospital.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to throw up, then the Mandarin for to have an upset stomach, then say zhùyuàn again

Before you move on

What does zhùyuàn mean? ("To be in hospital".) Say it once more.

241.2 病房 (bìngfáng) — hospital ward

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have an upset stomach, then the Mandarin for to be in hospital.

You'll want to know: 病房

病房 — bìngfáng — "hospital ward".

医生现在在病房里 yīshēng xiànzài zài bìngfáng lǐ — The doctor's in the ward now.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 病房 (bìngfáng) is built from 病 'illness' and 房 'room', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjaengH and bjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a chamber'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: bìngfáng
- Say it: bìngfáng, once more
- Say it: yīshēng xiànzài zài bìngfáng lǐ — The doctor's in the ward now.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have an upset stomach, then the Mandarin for to be in hospital, then say bìngfáng again

Before you move on

What does 病房 mean? ("Hospital ward".) Say it once more.

241.3 shǒushù — surgical operation

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be in hospital, then the Mandarin for a hospital ward.

You'll want to know: shǒushù

shǒushù — "surgical operation".

tā zuòle yí cì shǒushù — He had an operation.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shǒushù is built from 手 'hand' and shù 'skill', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syuwX and zywit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'skill'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: shǒushù
- Say it: shǒushù, once more
- Say it: tā zuòle yí cì shǒushù — He had an operation.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be in hospital, then the Mandarin for a hospital ward, then say shǒushù again

Before you move on

What does shǒushù mean? ("Surgical operation".) Say it once more.

241.4 chūyuàn — to leave hospital

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a hospital ward, then the Mandarin for a surgical operation.

You'll want to know: chūyuàn

chūyuàn — "to leave hospital".

tā xià xīngqī kěyǐ chūyuàn — He can leave hospital next week.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chūyuàn is built from 出 'to go out' and yuàn 'a walled courtyard', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwit and hjwenH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: chūyuàn
- Say it: chūyuàn, once more

- Say it: tā xià xīngqī kěyǐ chūyuàn — He can leave hospital next week.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a hospital ward, then the Mandarin for a surgical operation, then say chūyuàn again

Before you move on

What does chūyuàn mean? ("To leave hospital".) Say it once more.

241.5 huīfù — to recover; to get back to normal

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a surgical operation, then the Mandarin for to leave hospital.

You'll want to know: huīfù

huīfù — "to recover; to get back to normal".

tā de shēntǐ huīfù de hěn kuài — He's recovering very quickly.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huīfù is built from huī 'vast' and fù 'to return', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khwoj and bjuwk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'great' and the second 'to return'. The h of huī is not the regular outcome of that form.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: huīfù
- Say it: huīfù, once more
- Say it: tā de shēntǐ huīfù de hěn kuài — He's recovering very quickly.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a surgical operation, then the Mandarin for to leave hospital, then say huīfù again

Before you move on

What does huīfù mean? ("To recover; to get back to normal".) Say it once more.

241.6 Looking back: from Something Odd to In Hospital

Say the Mandarin for to turn up and to find out.

Your turn

- Say it: to turn up, to find out, to be scared, luckily, nearly
- Say it: a plant, a peanut, a leaf, to sprout, a watermelon
- Say it: the sky, the moon, dark clouds, the open sea, a rainbow
- Say it: healthy, to give up smoking, to drink alcohol, to breathe, a medical check-up
- Say it: to get sick, to become inflamed, swollen, to throw up, to have an upset stomach
- Say it: to be in hospital, a hospital ward, a surgical operation, to leave hospital, to recover
- Read it: 现 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

To turn up? (出现, chūxiàn.) To find out? (fāxiàn.) To be scared? (hàipà.) Luckily? (xìnghǎo.) Nearly? (chàdiǎnr.) A plant? (zhíwù.) A peanut? (花生, huāshēng.) A leaf? (yèzi.) To sprout? (fāyá.) A watermelon? (xīguā.) The sky? (tiānkōng.) The moon? (yuèliang.) Dark clouds? (wūyún.) The open sea? (dàhǎi.) A rainbow? (cǎihóng.) Healthy? (jiànkāng.) To give up smoking? (jièyān.) To drink alcohol? (hējiǔ.) To breathe? (hūxī.) A medical check-up? (tǐjiǎn.) To get sick? (生病, shēngbìng.) To become inflamed? (fāyán.) Swollen? (zhǒng.) To throw up? (tù.) To have an upset stomach? (lā dùzi.) To be in hospital? (zhùyuàn.) A hospital ward?

(病房, bìngfáng.) A surgical operation? (shǒushù.) To leave hospital? (chūyuàn.) To recover? (huīfù.)

Chapter 242

Farm Animals and Bugs

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a pig, a goat, a snake, insects and mosquitoes.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 242: I can name a pig, a goat, a snake, insects and mosquitoes.

242.1 zhū — pig

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to leave hospital, then the Mandarin for to recover.

You'll want to know: zhū

zhū — "pig".

> tā jiā yǒu sān zhī zhū — His family keeps three pigs.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

zhū is inherited from Middle Chinese trjo (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses it, after an older dictionary, as the young of the pig.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: zhū
- Say it: zhū, once more
- Say it: tā jiā yǒu sān zhī zhū — His family keeps three pigs.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to leave hospital, then the Mandarin for to recover, then say zhū again

Before you move on

What does zhū mean? ("Pig".) Say it once more.

242.2 shānyáng — goat

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to recover, then the Mandarin for a pig.

You'll want to know: shānyáng

shānyáng — "goat".

zhè zhī shānyáng hěn xǐhuan chī cǎo — This goat loves eating grass.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shānyáng is built from 山 'hill' and yáng 'sheep'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese srean (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second, yang there, with the pair 'oxen and sheep'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: shānyáng
- Say it: shānyáng, once more
- Say it: zhè zhī shānyáng hěn xǐhuan chī cǎo — This goat loves eating grass.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to recover, then the Mandarin for a pig, then say shānyáng again

Before you move on

What does shānyáng mean? ("Goat".) Say it once more.

242.3 shé — snake

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a pig, then the Mandarin for a goat.

You'll want to know: shé

shé — "snake".

wǒ hěn pà shé — I'm terrified of snakes.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shé is inherited from Middle Chinese zyae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a venomous creature'.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: shé
- Say it: shé, once more

- Say it: wǒ hěn pà shé — I'm terrified of snakes.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a pig, then the Mandarin for a goat, then say shé again

Before you move on

What does shé mean? ("Snake".) Say it once more.

242.4 chóngzi — insect; bug

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a goat, then the Mandarin for a snake.

You'll want to know: chóngzi

chóngzi — "insect; bug".

wǒ nǚ'ér bú pà chóngzi — My daughter isn't afraid of bugs.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chóngzi is built from chóng 'insect' and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, drjuwng and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which says, after an older dictionary, that creatures with feet are called by the first.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: chóngzi
- Say it: chóngzi, once more
- Say it: wǒ nǚ'ér bú pà chóngzi — My daughter isn't afraid of bugs.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a goat, then the Mandarin for a snake, then say chóngzi again

Before you move on

What does chóngzi mean? ("Insect; bug".) Say it once more.

242.5 wénzi — mosquito

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a snake, then the Mandarin for a bug.

You'll want to know: wénzi

wénzi — "mosquito".

xiàtiān zhèr yǒu wénzi — There are mosquitoes here in summer.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wénzi is built from wén 'mosquito' and the noun ending 子. The noun ending is inherited from Middle Chinese tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary lists the first, mjun there, beside another form of the character.

What you've built

One more word for everyday things.

Your turn

- Say it: wénzi
- Say it: wénzi, once more
- Say it: xiàtiān zhèr yǒu wénzi — There are mosquitoes here in summer.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a snake, then the Mandarin for a bug, then say wénzi again

Before you move on

What does wénzi mean? (“Mosquito”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 243

Changing Seasons

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can describe the climate, snowflakes, the weather changing, ice on the lake and the temperature.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 243: I can describe the climate, snowflakes, the weather changing, ice on the lake and the temperature.

243.1 气候 (qìhòu) — climate

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a bug, then the Mandarin for a mosquito.

You'll want to know: 气候

气候 — qìhòu — "climate".

> 西边的气候不好风很大 xībiān de qìhòu bù hǎo fēng hěn dà — The climate in the west isn't good: it's very windy.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 气候 (qìhòu) is built from 气 'air' and 候 'a season', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khj+jH and huwH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to wait on'; the sense of a season is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: qìhòu
- Say it: qìhòu, once more
- Say it: xībiān de qìhòu bù hǎo fēng hěn dà — The climate in the west isn't good: it's very windy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a bug, then the Mandarin for a mosquito, then say qìhòu again

Before you move on

What does 气候 mean? ("Climate".) Say it once more.

243.2 雪花 (xuěhuā) — snowflake

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a mosquito, then the Mandarin for climate.

You'll want to know: 雪花

雪花 — xuěhuā — "snowflake".

今天多云外边有雪花 jīntiān duōyún wàibian yǒu xuěhuā — It's cloudy today, and there are snowflakes outside.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 雪花 (xuěhuā) is built from 雪 'snow' and 花 'flower', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjwet and xwae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: xuěhuā
- Say it: xuěhuā, once more
- Say it: jīntiān duōyún wàibian yǒu xuěhuā — It's cloudy today, and there are snowflakes outside.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a mosquito, then the Mandarin for climate, then say xuěhuā again

Before you move on

What does 雪花 mean? ("Snowflake".) Say it once more.

243.3 biànhuà — to change over time; a change

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for climate, then the Mandarin for a snowflake.

You'll want to know: biànhuà

biànhuà — "to change over time; a change".

zhèr de tiānqì biànhuà hěn dà — The weather here changes a lot.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of biànhuà is built from biàn 'to alter' and huà 'to transform', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjenH and xwaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses each with the other.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: biànhuà
- Say it: biànhuà, once more
- Say it: zhèr de tiānqì biànhuà hěn dà — The weather here changes a lot.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for climate, then the Mandarin for a snowflake, then say biànhuà again

Before you move on

What does biànhuà mean? ("To change over time; a change".) Say it once more.

243.4 jiébīng — to freeze over

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a snowflake, then the Mandarin for to change over time.

You'll want to know: jiébīng

jiébīng — "to freeze over".

dōngtiān hú lǐ de shuǐ jiébīng le — In winter the water in the lake freezes over.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiébīng is built from jié 'to knot' and bīng 'ice', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ket and ping (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to tie' and the second 'water frozen'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: jiébīng
- Say it: jiébīng, once more
- Say it: dōngtiān hú lǐ de shuǐ jiébīng le — In winter the water in the lake freezes over.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a snowflake, then the Mandarin for to change over time, then say jiébīng again

Before you move on

What does jiébīng mean? ("To freeze over".) Say it once more.

243.5 wēndù — temperature

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to change over time, then the Mandarin for to freeze over.

You'll want to know: wēndù

wēndù — "temperature".

jīntiān wēndù bù gāo — It's not very warm today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wēndù is built from wēn 'warm' and dù 'a measure', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'won and duH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a rule'; the sense of a degree on a scale is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: wēndù
- Say it: wēndù, once more
- Say it: jīntiān wēndù bù gāo — It's not very warm today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to change over time, then the Mandarin for to freeze over, then say wēndù again

Before you move on

What does wēndù mean? ("Temperature".) Say it once more.

Chapter 244

A Storm Coming

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about plans when a typhoon or showers may come: who knows, in case, and carrying on.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 244: I can talk about plans when a typhoon or showers may come: who knows, in case, and carrying on.

244.1 táifēng — typhoon

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to freeze over, then the Mandarin for temperature.

You'll want to know: táifēng

táifēng — "typhoon".

> hòutiān huì yǒu táifēng — There'll be a typhoon the day after tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of táifēng is built from tái and 风 'wind'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese pjuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); no dictionary we use records an older form of the first in this sense, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: táifēng
- Say it: táifēng, once more
- Say it: hòutiān huì yǒu táifēng — There'll be a typhoon the day after tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to freeze over, then the Mandarin for temperature, then say táifēng again

Before you move on

What does táifēng mean? ("Typhoon".) Say it once more.

244.2 zhènyǔ — a rain shower

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for temperature, then the Mandarin for a typhoon.

You'll want to know: zhènyǔ

zhènyǔ — "a rain shower".

míngtiān xiàwǔ yǒu zhènyǔ — There'll be showers tomorrow afternoon.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhènyǔ is built from zhèn 'a spell' and 雨 'rain', both inherited from Middle Chinese, drinH and hjuX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary lists the first only as the everyday form of another character, and the sense 'a spell' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: zhènyǔ
- Say it: zhènyǔ, once more
- Say it: míngtiān xiàwǔ yǒu zhènyǔ — There'll be showers tomorrow afternoon.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for temperature, then the Mandarin for a typhoon, then say zhènyǔ again

Before you move on

What does zhènyǔ mean? ("A rain shower".) Say it once more.

244.3 shuōbudìng — perhaps; who knows

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a typhoon, then the Mandarin for a rain shower.

You'll want to know: shuōbudìng

shuōbudìng — "perhaps; who knows".

shuōbudìng míngtiān huì xiàyǔ — Who knows, it might rain tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Tone: 不 is light here, bu, with no tone of its own.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shuōbudìng is built from 说 'to say', 不 'not' and dìng 'fixed', all inherited from Middle Chinese, sywet, pjut and dengH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the last 'settled'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: shuōbudìng
- Say it: shuōbudìng, once more
- Say it: shuōbudìng míngtiān huì xiàyǔ — Who knows, it might rain tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a typhoon, then the Mandarin for a rain shower, then say shuōbudìng again

Before you move on

What does shuōbudìng mean? ("Perhaps; who knows".) Say it once more.

244.4 wànyī — in case; if by any chance

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a rain shower, then the Mandarin for who knows.

You'll want to know: wànyī

wànyī — "in case; if by any chance".

wànyī xiàyǔ zěnme bàn — What if it rains?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.
Tone: — keeps its first tone here, yī, because it ends the word.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wànyī is built from wàn 'ten thousand' and — 'one', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjonH and 'jit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); it is usually explained as one chance in ten thousand.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: wànyī
- Say it: wànyī, once more
- Say it: wànyī xiàyǔ zěnme bàn — What if it rains?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a rain shower, then the Mandarin for who knows, then say wànyī again

Before you move on

What does wànyī mean? ("In case; if by any chance".) Say it once more.

244.5 jìxù — to carry on; to continue

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for who knows, then the Mandarin for in case.

You'll want to know: jìxù

jìxù — "to carry on; to continue".

yǔ tíng le wǒmen jìxù zǒu — The rain's stopped; let's carry on.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìxù is built from jì 'to continue' and xù 'to join on'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese zjowk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to continue' and 'to join'; the dictionary glosses the first, kejH there, 'to carry on'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about plans.

Your turn

- Say it: jìxù
- Say it: jìxù, once more
- Say it: yǔ tíng le wǒmen jìxù zǒu — The rain's stopped; let's carry on.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for who knows, then the Mandarin for in case, then say jìxù again

Before you move on

What does jìxù mean? ("To carry on; to continue".) Say it once more.

Chapter 245

Take Care

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can explain why I take my temperature, keep a mask and stay home, and tell someone to look after themselves.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 245: I can explain why I take my temperature, keep a mask and stay home, and tell someone to look after themselves.

245.1 tǐwēn — body temperature

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for in case, then the Mandarin for to carry on.

You'll want to know: tǐwēn

tǐwēn — "body temperature".

> nǐ de tǐwēn yǒudiǎnr gāo — Your temperature's a bit high.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tǐwēn is built from 体 'body' and wēn 'warm', both inherited from Middle Chinese, thejX and 'won (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: tǐwēn
- Say it: tǐwēn, once more
- Say it: nǐ de tǐwēn yǒudiǎnr gāo — Your temperature's a bit high.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for in case, then the Mandarin for to carry on, then say tǐwēn again

Before you move on

What does tǐwēn mean? ("Body temperature".) Say it once more.

245.2 chuánrǎn — to pass on (an illness); to be catching

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to carry on, then the Mandarin for body temperature.

You'll want to know: chuánrǎn

chuánrǎn — "to pass on (an illness); to be catching".

yīnwèi gǎnmào huì chuánrǎn suǒyǐ wǒ bú qù shàngbān — Colds are catching, so I'm not going in to work.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chuánrǎn is built from chuán 'to pass on' and rǎn 'to dye', both inherited from Middle Chinese, drjwen and nyemX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to turn' and the second 'to dye'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: chuánrǎn
- Say it: chuánrǎn, once more
- Say it: yīnwèi gǎnmào huì chuánrǎn suǒyǐ wǒ bú qù shàngbān — Colds are catching, so I'm not going in to work.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to carry on, then the Mandarin for body temperature, then say chuánrǎn again

Before you move on

What does chuánrǎn mean? ("To pass on (an illness); to be catching".) Say it once more.

245.3 kǒuzhào — face mask

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for body temperature, then the Mandarin for to be catching.

You'll want to know: kǒuzhào

kǒuzhào — "face mask".

nǐ yǒu kǒuzhào ma — Have you got a face mask?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kǒuzhào is built from 口 'mouth' and zhào 'a cover', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khuwX and traewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second as a bamboo basket for catching fish, so how it came to mean a cover is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: kǒuzhào
- Say it: kǒuzhào, once more
- Say it: nǐ yǒu kǒuzhào ma — Have you got a face mask?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for body temperature, then the Mandarin for to be catching, then say kǒuzhào again

Before you move on

What does kǒuzhào mean? ("Face mask".) Say it once more.

245.4 xīnqíng — mood; frame of mind

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be catching, then the Mandarin for a face mask.

You'll want to know: xīnqíng

xīnqíng — "mood; frame of mind".

shēngbìng le xīnqíng bù hǎo — Being ill puts me in a bad mood.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xīnqíng is built from 忄 'heart' and qíng 'feeling', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sim and dzjeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which explains the second, after an older book, as what a person desires.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: xīnqíng
- Say it: xīnqíng, once more
- Say it: shēngbìng le xīnqíng bù hǎo — Being ill puts me in a bad mood.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be catching, then the Mandarin for a face mask, then say xīnqíng again

Before you move on

What does xīnqíng mean? ("Mood; frame of mind".) Say it once more.

245.5 bǎozhòng — to look after yourself; to take care of oneself

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a face mask, then the Mandarin for mood.

You'll want to know: bǎozhòng

bǎozhòng — "to look after yourself; to take care of oneself".

nǐ shēngbìng le yào bǎozhòng — You're ill, so look after yourself.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bǎozhòng is built from bǎo 'to keep' and 重 'heavy', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pawX and drjowngX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to be responsible for' and 'to keep safe'.

What you've built

One more word for giving reasons.

Your turn

- Say it: bǎozhòng
- Say it: bǎozhòng, once more
- Say it: nǐ shēngbìng le yào bǎozhòng — You're ill, so look after yourself.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a face mask, then the Mandarin for mood, then say bǎozhòng again

Before you move on

What does bǎozhòng mean? ("To look after yourself; to take care of oneself".) Say it once more.

Chapter 246

Out in the Hills

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a village, a bridge, stones, a pond and rowing a boat.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 246: I can talk about a village, a bridge, stones, a pond and rowing a boat.

246.1 cūnzi — village

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for mood, then the Mandarin for to look after yourself.

You'll want to know: cūnzi

cūnzi — "village".

> zhège cūnzi hěn xiǎo — This village is tiny.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cūnzi is built from cūn 'village' and the noun ending 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshwon and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: cūnzi
- Say it: cūnzi, once more
- Say it: zhège cūnzi hěn xiǎo — This village is tiny.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for mood, then the Mandarin for to look after yourself, then say cūnzi again

Before you move on

What does cūnzi mean? ("Village".) Say it once more.

246.2 qiáo — bridge

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to look after yourself, then the Mandarin for a village.

You'll want to know: qiáo

qiáo — "bridge".

cūnzi lǐ de qiáo hěn lǎo — The bridge in the village is very old.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qiáo is inherited from Middle Chinese gjew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a beam over water'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: qiáo
- Say it: qiáo, once more
- Say it: cūnzi lǐ de qiáo hěn lǎo — The bridge in the village is very old.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to look after yourself, then the Mandarin for a village, then say qiáo again

Before you move on

What does qiáo mean? ("Bridge".) Say it once more.

246.3 shítou — stone; rock

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a village, then the Mandarin for a bridge.

You'll want to know: shítou

shítou — "stone; rock".

nà kuài shítou hěn dà — That rock is huge.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shítou is built from shí 'stone' and 头, here a light noun ending, both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyek and duw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which explains the first, after an older book, as the body of a mountain.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: shítou
- Say it: shítou, once more
- Say it: nà kuài shítou hěn dà — That rock is huge.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a village, then the Mandarin for a bridge, then say shítou again

Before you move on

What does shítou mean? ("Stone; rock".) Say it once more.

246.4 chítáng — pond

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a bridge, then the Mandarin for a stone.

You'll want to know: chítáng

chítáng — "pond".

cūnzi lǐ yǒu yí ge chítáng — There's a pond in the village.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chítáng is built from chí 'a pool' and táng 'a bank'. The dictionary (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription) explains the first, drje there, as standing water, and glosses the second, dang there, with a word for a dyked pond.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: chítáng
- Say it: chítáng, once more
- Say it: cūnzi lǐ yǒu yí ge chítáng — There's a pond in the village.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a bridge, then the Mandarin for a stone, then say chítáng again

Before you move on

What does chítáng mean? ("Pond".) Say it once more.

246.5 huáchuán — to row a boat

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a stone, then the Mandarin for a pond.

You'll want to know: huáchuán

huáchuán — "to row a boat".

zhōumò wǒmen qù gōngyuán huáchuán — At weekends we go rowing in the park.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huáchuán is built from huá 'to pole along' and chuán 'boat', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hwae and zywen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to push a boat forward'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: huáchuán
- Say it: huáchuán, once more
- Say it: zhōumò wǒmen qù gōngyuán huáchuán — At weekends we go rowing in the park.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a stone, then the Mandarin for a pond, then say huáchuán again

Before you move on

What does huáchuán mean? ("To row a boat".) Say it once more.

Chapter 247

Back From a Trip

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a trip: what I went through, how pleasant it was, local specialities, souvenirs and memories.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 247: I can talk about a trip: what I went through, how pleasant it was, local specialities, souvenirs and memories.

247.1 jīnglì — an experience (something lived through)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a pond, then the Mandarin for to row a boat.

You'll want to know: jīnglì

jīnglì — "an experience (something lived through)".

> zhè cì lǚyóu shì yí cì hěn hǎo de jīnglì — This trip was a great experience.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jīnglì is built from jīng 'to pass through' and lì 'to go through', both inherited from Middle Chinese, keng and lek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to pass' and 'to go'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: jīnglì
- Say it: jīnglì, once more
- Say it: zhè cì lǚyóu shì yí cì hěn hǎo de jīnglì — This trip was a great experience.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a pond, then the Mandarin for to row a boat, then say jīnglì again

Before you move on

What does jīnglì mean? ("An experience (something lived through)".) Say it once more.

247.2 yúkuài — pleasant; cheerful

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to row a boat, then the Mandarin for something lived through.

You'll want to know: yúkuài

yúkuài — "pleasant; cheerful".

zhōumò wǒmen wán de hěn yúkuài — We had a lovely time at the weekend.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yúkuài is built from yú 'glad' and 快 'pleased', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yu and khwaejH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'pleased' and 'happy' and the second 'to one's liking' and 'glad'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: yúkuài
- Say it: yúkuài, once more
- Say it: zhōumò wǒmen wán de hěn yúkuài — We had a lovely time at the weekend.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to row a boat, then the Mandarin for something lived through, then say yúkuài again

Before you move on

What does yúkuài mean? ("Pleasant; cheerful".) Say it once more.

247.3 tèchǎn — a local speciality; a regional product

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for something lived through, then the Mandarin for pleasant and cheerful.

You'll want to know: tèchǎn

tèchǎn — "a local speciality; a regional product".

zhèr de tèchǎn hěn hǎochī — The local specialities here are delicious.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tèchǎn is built from tè 'special' and chǎn 'to produce', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dok and sreanX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'a bull' and 'alone' and the second 'to give birth'; the ch of chǎn is not the regular outcome of that form.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: tèchǎn
- Say it: tèchǎn, once more
- Say it: zhèr de tèchǎn hěn hǎochī — The local specialities here are delicious.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for something lived through, then the Mandarin for pleasant and cheerful, then say tèchǎn again

Before you move on

What does tèchǎn mean? ("A local speciality; a regional product".) Say it once more.

247.4 jìniànpǐn — souvenir

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for pleasant and cheerful, then the Mandarin for a local speciality.

You'll want to know: jìniànpǐn

jìniànpǐn — "souvenir".

wǒ mǎile liǎng ge jìniànpǐn — I bought two souvenirs.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìniànpǐn is built from jì 'to record', niàn 'to think of' and pǐn 'an article', all inherited from Middle Chinese, kiX, nemH and phimX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to think' and the third 'a kind' and 'a rank'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: jìniànpǐn
- Say it: jìniànpǐn, once more
- Say it: wǒ mǎile liǎng ge jìniànpǐn — I bought two souvenirs.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for pleasant and cheerful, then the Mandarin for a local speciality, then say jìniànpǐn again

Before you move on

What does jìniànpǐn mean? ("Souvenir".) Say it once more.

247.5 huíyì — to recall; to think back on

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a local speciality, then the Mandarin for a souvenir.

You'll want to know: huíyì

huíyì — "to recall; to think back on".

wǒ chángcháng huíyì nà cì lǚyóu — I often think back to that trip.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huíyì is built from 回 'to return' and yì 'to remember'. The first is inherited from Middle Chinese hwoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription); the dictionary glosses the second, 'ik there, 'to think of'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: huíyì
- Say it: huíyì, once more
- Say it: wǒ chángcháng huíyì nà cì lǚyóu — I often think back to that trip.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a local speciality, then the Mandarin for a souvenir, then say huíyì again

Before you move on

What does huíyì mean? ("To recall; to think back on".) Say it once more.

247.6 Looking back: from Farm Animals and Bugs to Back From a Trip

Say the Mandarin for a pig and a goat.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a pig, a goat, a snake, a bug, a mosquito
- climate, a snowflake, to change over time, to freeze over, temperature
- a typhoon, a rain shower, who knows, in case, to carry on

- body temperature, to be catching, a face mask, mood, to look after yourself
- a village, a bridge, a stone, a pond, to row a boat
- something lived through, pleasant and cheerful, a local speciality, a souvenir, to think back on

Before you move on

A pig? (zhū.) A goat? (shānyáng.) A snake? (shé.) A bug? (chóngzi.) A mosquito? (wénzi.) Climate? (气候, qìhòu.) A snowflake? (雪花, xuěhuā.) To change over time? (biànhuà.) To freeze over? (jiébīng.) Temperature? (wēndù.) A typhoon? (táifēng.) A rain shower? (zhènyǔ.) Who knows? (shuōbudìng.) In case? (wànyī.) To carry on? (jìxù.) Body temperature? (tǐwēn.) To be catching? (chuánrǎn.) A face mask? (kǒuzhào.) Mood? (xīnqíng.) To look after yourself? (bǎozhòng.) A village? (cūnzi.) A bridge? (qiáo.) A stone? (shítou.) A pond? (chítáng.) To row a boat? (huáchuán.) Something lived through? (jīnglì.) Pleasant and cheerful? (yúkuài.) A local speciality? (tèchǎn.) A souvenir? (jìniànpǐn.) To think back on? (huíyì.)

247.7 Back From a Trip — once more

Say the Mandarin for something lived through and pleasant and cheerful.

Your turn

- Say it: something lived through, pleasant and cheerful, a local speciality, a souvenir, to think back on

Before you move on

Something lived through? (jīnglì.) Pleasant and cheerful? (yúkuài.) A local speciality? (tèchǎn.) A souvenir? (jìniànpǐn.) To think back on? (huíyì.)

Chapter 248

A New Term

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the school term, my year group, the head teacher, senior high school and parents.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 248: I can talk about the school term, my year group, the head teacher, senior high school and parents.

248.1 学期 (xuéqī) — school term; semester

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for souvenir, then the Mandarin for to recall.

You'll want to know: 学期

学期 — xuéqī — "school term; semester".

这个学期很长 zhège xuéqī hěn cháng — This term is a long one.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 学期 (xuéqī) is built from 学 'to study' and 期 'a set time', both inherited from Middle Chinese, haewk and gi (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to meet' and 'a limit'. Middle Chinese gi would regularly give a rising tone, qí; the level tone of qī is irregular.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: xuéqī
- Say it: xuéqī, once more
- Say it: zhège xuéqī hěn cháng — This term is a long one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for souvenir, then the Mandarin for to recall, then say xuéqī again

Before you move on

What does 学期 mean? ("School term; semester".) Say it once more.

248.2 niánjí — year; grade (at school)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to recall, then the Mandarin for a school term.

You'll want to know: niánjí

niánjí — "year; grade (at school)".

wǒmen niánjí yǒu yìbǎi ge xuésheng — There are a hundred students in our year.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of niánjí is built from 年 'a year' and jí 'a rank', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nen and kip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'rank' and quotes an older dictionary for it, 'the order of silk threads'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: niánjí
- Say it: niánjí, once more
- Say it: wǒmen niánjí yǒu yìbǎi ge xuésheng — There are a hundred students in our year.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to recall, then the Mandarin for a school term, then say niánjí again

Before you move on

What does niánjí mean? ("Year; grade (at school)".) Say it once more.

248.3 校长 (xiàozhǎng) — head teacher; principal

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a school term, then the Mandarin for a year group at school.

You'll want to know: 校长

校长 — xiàozhǎng — "head teacher; principal".

他是我们学校的校长 tā shì wǒmen xuéxiào de xiàozhǎng — He's the head of our school.

The new character, in pieces: 校 — ten strokes in two pieces: on the left the tree piece, four strokes, as on the left of 机; on the right a dot and a bar, two short strokes under them, then a long stroke falling to the left crossed by a long stroke falling to the right. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 校长 (xiàozhǎng) is built from 校 'a school' and 长 'the head', both inherited from Middle Chinese, haewH and trjangX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second 'big'; it lists the first in the title of an army officer, and the sense 'school' is not given there, so how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàozhǎng
- Say it: xiàozhǎng, once more
- Say it: tā shì wǒmen xuéxiào de xiàozhǎng — He's the head of our school.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a school term, then the Mandarin for a year group at school, then say xiàozhǎng again

Before you move on

What does 校长 mean? ("Head teacher; principal".) Say it once more.

248.4 校 — the tree piece, then a lid and a cross

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xiàozhǎng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  机 学

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — jī, xué

Script — the tree piece, then a lid and a cross

How 校 is written, stroke by stroke

校

Two pieces, left before right. Count the pieces, not the strokes.

The left piece, the tree piece, four strokes. A short bar. A vertical down through it. A stroke falling to the left from the crossing. Then a short dot to the right: on the left of a character the last stroke is a dot, not a long sweep.

The right piece, six strokes. A dot on top and a bar under it. Two short strokes under the bar, the left one falling to the left, the right one a dot. Then a long stroke falling to the left and, across it, a long stroke falling to the right to the foot.

4 + 6 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 校, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 校? (Ten.) What is the left piece? (The tree piece, four strokes, as in 机.) What are the last two strokes? (A long fall to the left, crossed by a long fall to the right.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 校, pinned stroke paths and medians.

248.5 高中 (gāozhōng) — senior high school

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a year group at school, then the Mandarin for a head teacher.

You'll want to know: 高中

高中 — gāozhōng — "senior high school".

我们学校有高中 wǒmen xuéxiào yǒu gāozhōng — Our school has a senior high section.

The new character, in pieces: 高 — ten strokes: a dot and a long bar, then 口; under them a frame open at the foot, with a small 口 inside it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 高中 (gāozhōng) is built from 高 'high' and 中 'middle', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kaw and trjuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'up' and 'lofty': the higher middle school, a short form of a longer name.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: gāozhōng
- Say it: gāozhōng, once more
- Say it: wǒmen xuéxiào yǒu gāozhōng — Our school has a senior high section.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for a year group at school, then the Mandarin for a head teacher, then say gāozhōng again

Before you move on

What does 高中 mean? ("Senior high school".) Say it once more.

248.6 高 — a lid, 口, then a frame around a small 口

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say gāozhōng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

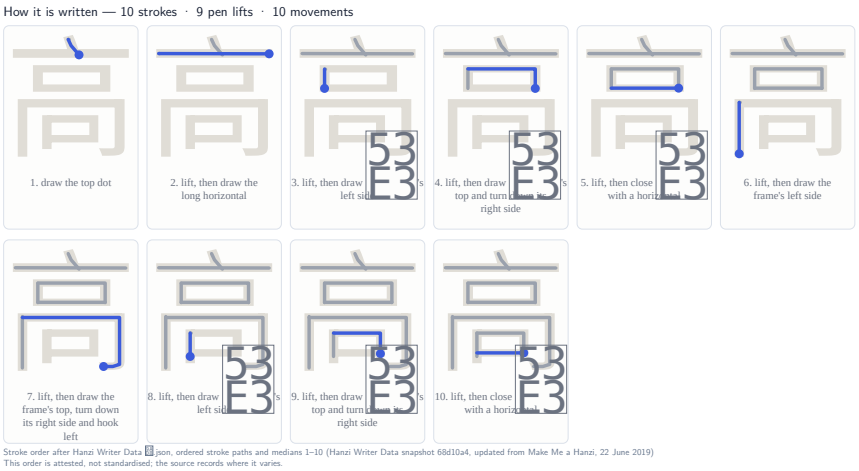
口 中

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — kǒu, zhōng

Script — a lid, 口, then a frame around a small 口



How 高 is written, stroke by stroke

高

Three pieces, top to bottom.

The lid, two strokes. A dot, then a long bar across.

The middle piece, 口, three strokes. A short vertical, a stroke that runs right and turns down, then the bar that closes the foot.

The bottom piece, five strokes. A vertical down the left. A bar across the top that turns down the right side and hooks to the left at the foot. Then a small 口 inside the frame, three strokes as before.

2 + 3 + 5 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 高, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 高? (Ten.) How many 口 does it hold? (Two: one in the middle, a small one inside the frame.) Is the frame closed at the foot? (No, it is open.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 高, pinned stroke paths and medians.

248.7 家长 (jiāzhǎng) — pupil's parent; parent of a schoolchild

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a head teacher, then the Mandarin for senior high school.

You'll want to know: 家长

家长 — jiāzhǎng — "pupil's parent; parent of a schoolchild".

今天家长来学校 jīntiān jiāzhǎng lái xuéxiào — The parents are coming to school today.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 家长 (jiāzhǎng) is built from 家 'a home' and 长 'the head', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kae and trjangX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): the head of a household, and at school a pupil's parent.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jiāzhǎng
- Say it: jiāzhǎng, once more
- Say it: jīntiān jiāzhǎng lái xuéxiào — The parents are coming to school today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a head teacher, then the Mandarin for senior high school, then say jiāzhǎng again

Before you move on

What does 家长 mean? ("Pupil's parent; parent of a schoolchild".) Say it once more.

Chapter 249

Hitting the Books

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about preparing a lesson, when school finishes, how a character is said, marks and working hard.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 249: I can talk about preparing a lesson, when school finishes, how a character is said, marks and working hard.

249.1 yùxí — to prepare a lesson (before class)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for senior high school, then the Mandarin for a pupil's parent.

You'll want to know: yùxí

yùxí — "to prepare a lesson (before class)".

> míngtiān de kè nǐ yùxí le ma — Have you prepared tomorrow's lesson?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yùxí is built from yù 'beforehand' and xí 'to practise', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yoH and zip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first, among other senses, 'before', and the second 'to learn'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: yùxí
- Say it: yùxí, once more
- Say it: míngtiān de kè nǐ yùxí le ma — Have you prepared tomorrow's lesson?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for senior high school, then the Mandarin for a pupil's parent, then say yùxí again

Before you move on

What does yùxí mean? ("To prepare a lesson (before class)".) Say it once more.

249.2 fàngxué — to finish school for the day; (of a school) to let out

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a pupil's parent, then the Mandarin for to prepare a lesson.

You'll want to know: fàngxué

fàngxué — "to finish school for the day; (of a school) to let out".

wǒmen xiàwǔ sì diǎn fàngxué — We finish school at four in the afternoon.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fàngxué is built from fàng 'to let go' and 学 'to study', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjangH and haewk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to drive out' and 'to send away'. Letting pupils go home from school is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: fàngxué
- Say it: fàngxué, once more
- Say it: wǒmen xiàwǔ sì diǎn fàngxué — We finish school at four in the afternoon.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a pupil's parent, then the Mandarin for to prepare a lesson, then say fàngxué again

Before you move on

What does fàngxué mean? ("To finish school for the day; (of a school) to let out".) Say it once more.

249.3 读音 (dúyīn) — pronunciation; how a character is read

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to prepare a lesson, then the Mandarin for to finish school for the day.

You'll want to know: 读音

读音 — dúyīn — "pronunciation; how a character is read".

这个字的读音是什么 zhège zì de dúyīn shì shénme — How do you say this character?

The new character, in pieces: 读 — ten strokes: the speech piece 讠 on the left; on the right a short 十 over 买. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 读音 (dúyīn) is built from 读 'to read aloud' and 音 'a sound', both inherited from Middle Chinese, duwk and 'im (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to recite' and quotes an older dictionary for the second: 'sound'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: dúyīn
- Say it: dúyīn, once more
- Say it: zhège zì de dúyīn shì shénme — How do you say this character?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to prepare a lesson, then the Mandarin for to finish school for the day, then say dúyīn again

Before you move on

What does 读音 mean? ("Pronunciation; how a character is read".) Say it once more.

249.4 读 — the speech piece, then 十 over 买

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say dúyīn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  说 音

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — shuō, yīn

Script — the speech piece, then 十 over 买

How 读 is written, stroke by stroke

读

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, 讠, two strokes, as in 说 and 请: a dot, then a short bar to the right that turns down and flicks up to the right, all one stroke.

The right piece, eight strokes, top to bottom. First a short 十: a bar and a vertical through it. Then 买, six strokes, as you wrote it: a bar that turns down at its right end and hooks, two short dots, then a long bar, a stroke falling to the left, and a short dot at the foot.

2 + 8 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 读, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 读? (Ten.) Which piece is on the left? (讠, the speech piece.) What sits under 十? (买.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 读, pinned stroke paths and medians.

249.5 chéngjì — results; marks

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to finish school for the day, then the Mandarin for how a character is read.

You'll want to know: chéngjì

chéngjì — "results; marks".

tā de chéngjì hěn hǎo — His marks are very good.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chéngjì is built from chéng 'to complete' and jì 'a deed', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyeng and tsek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to finish' and the second 'merit' and 'a deed'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: chéngjì
- Say it: chéngjì, once more
- Say it: tā de chéngjì hěn hǎo — His marks are very good.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to finish school for the day, then the Mandarin for how a character is read, then say chéngjì again

Before you move on

What does chéngjì mean? ("Results; marks".) Say it once more.

249.6 nǔlì — hard-working; trying hard

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for how a character is read, then the Mandarin for marks at school.

You'll want to know: nǔlì

nǔlì — "hard-working; trying hard".

> tā xuéxí hěn nǔlì — She works hard at her studies.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nǔlì is built from nǔ and lì 'strength', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nuX and lik (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first with this very word and the second 'sinew'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: nǔlì
- Say it: nǔlì, once more
- Say it: tā xuéxí hěn nǔlì — She works hard at her studies.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for how a character is read, then the Mandarin for marks at school, then say nǔlì again

Before you move on

What does nǔlì mean? ("Hard-working; trying hard".) Say it once more.

Chapter 250

Hobbies

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask about hobbies and interests, and talk about novels, stories and playing chess.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 250: I can ask about hobbies and interests, and talk about novels, stories and playing chess.

250.1 àihào — hobby

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for marks at school, then the Mandarin for hard-working.

You'll want to know: àihào

àihào — "hobby".

> nǐ yǒu shénme àihào — What hobbies do you have?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of àihào is built from ài 'to love' and hào 'to be fond of', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'ojH and xawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to cherish' and the second with this very word. The second is 好 said with a falling tone.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: àihào
- Say it: àihào, once more
- Say it: nǐ yǒu shénme àihào — What hobbies do you have?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for marks at school, then the Mandarin for hard-working, then say àihào again

Before you move on

What does àihào mean? ("Hobby".) Say it once more.

250.2 xìngqù — interest; interest in something

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hard-working, then the Mandarin for a hobby.

You'll want to know: xìngqù

xìngqù — "interest; interest in something".

wǒ méiyǒu xìngqù — I'm not interested.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xìngqù is built from xìng and qù, both inherited from Middle Chinese, xingH and tshjuH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the second 'to tend towards'; it gives no sense for the first in this tone, and its level-tone reading means 'to rise'. How the pair came to mean an interest is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: xìngqù
- Say it: xìngqù, once more
- Say it: wǒ méiyǒu xìngqù — I'm not interested.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hard-working, then the Mandarin for a hobby, then say xìngqù again

Before you move on

What does xìngqù mean? ("Interest; interest in something".) Say it once more.

250.3 小说 (xiǎoshuō) — novel; story (in a book)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a hobby, then the Mandarin for an interest.

You'll want to know: 小说

小说 — xiǎoshuō — "novel; story (in a book)".

我喜欢读小说 wǒ xǐhuan dú xiǎoshuō — I like reading novels.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 小说 (xiǎoshuō) is built from 小 'small' and 说 'to tell', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjewX and sywet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to tell'. How 'small tellings' came to mean a novel is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: xiǎoshuō
- Say it: xiǎoshuō, once more

- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan dú xiǎoshuō — I like reading novels.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a hobby, then the Mandarin for an interest, then say xiǎoshuō again

Before you move on

What does 小说 mean? ("Novel; story (in a book)".) Say it once more.

250.4 gùshi — story

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an interest, then the Mandarin for a novel.

You'll want to know: gùshi

gùshi — "story".

zhège gùshi hěn yǒu yìsi — This story is really interesting.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gùshi is built from gù 'old' and 事 'an affair', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kuH and dzriH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'old'. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: gùshi
- Say it: gùshi, once more
- Say it: zhège gùshi hěn yǒu yìsi — This story is really interesting.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an interest, then the Mandarin for a novel, then say gùshi again

Before you move on

What does gùshi mean? (“Story”.) Say it once more.

250.5 xiàqí — to play chess

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a novel, then the Mandarin for a story.

You’ll want to know: xiàqí

xiàqí — “to play chess”.

wǒmen xiàwǔ yìqǐ xiàqí — We’re playing chess together this afternoon.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

xiàqí is built from 下 ’to go down’ and qí ’a board game’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, haeX and gi (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), which glosses the first ’to descend’ and lists the second under another spelling of the character, quoting an older book on who first made the board game weiqi.

What you’ve built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàqí
- Say it: xiàqí, once more
- Say it: wǒmen xiàwǔ yìqǐ xiàqí — We’re playing chess together this afternoon.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a novel, then the Mandarin for a story, then say xiàqí again

Before you move on

What does xiàqí mean? (“To play chess”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 251

Essays and New Characters

Modes: voice (5) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count essays and stories, talk about a school essay, writing and new characters, and put mistakes right.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 251: I can count essays and stories, talk about a school essay, writing and new characters, and put mistakes right.

251.1 piān — measure word for essays and stories

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a story, then the Mandarin for to play chess.

You'll want to know: piān

piān — "measure word for essays and stories".

> zhè piān xiǎoshuō hěn cháng — This story is a long one.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of piān is inherited from Middle Chinese phjien (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed as a section of a book.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: piān
- Say it: piān, once more
- Say it: zhè piān xiǎoshuō hěn cháng — This story is a long one.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a story, then the Mandarin for to play chess, then say piān again

Before you move on

What does piān mean? ("Measure word for essays and stories".) Say it once more.

251.2 作文 (zuòwén) — essay; composition (at school)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to play chess, then the Mandarin for measure word for essays.

You'll want to know: 作文

作文 — zuòwén — "essay; composition (at school)".

wǒ zài xiě zuòwén — I'm writing an essay.

The new character, in pieces: 作 — seven strokes: the person piece 亻; then a short stroke falling to the left, a bar, a long vertical, and two short bars to the right of it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 作文 (zuòwén) is built from 作 'to make' and 文 'writing', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsak and mjun (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to do' and 'to rise', and the second 'a piece of writing'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: zuòwén
- Say it: zuòwén, once more
- Say it: wǒ zài xiě zuòwén — I'm writing an essay.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to play chess, then the Mandarin for measure word for essays, then say zuòwén again

Before you move on

What does 作文 mean? ("Essay; composition (at school)".) Say it once more.

251.3 作 — the person piece, then a post with two short bars

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say zuòwén — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

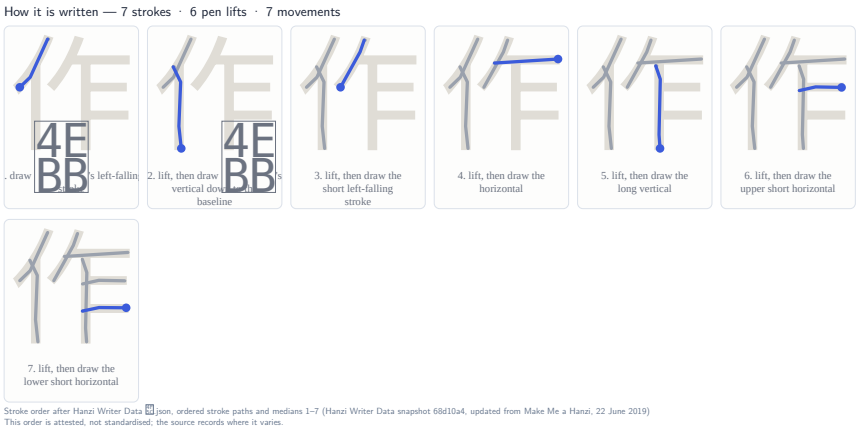
  做 你

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — zuò, nǐ

Script — the person piece, then a post with two short bars



How 作 is written, stroke by stroke

作

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, 亻, two strokes, as in 你 and 做: a stroke falling to the left, then a vertical down to the foot.

The right piece, five strokes. A short stroke falling to the left at the top. A bar to the right from its middle. A long vertical down from the bar to the foot. Then two short bars against the right side of the vertical, the upper one first.

2 + 5 = seven.

Your turn

- Write it: 作, all seven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 作? (Seven.) Which other character starts with the same piece and is said zuò? (做.) What are the last two strokes? (Two short bars on the right of the vertical.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 作, pinned stroke paths and medians.

251.4 写作 (xiězuò) — to write essays and stories; writing

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for measure word for essays, then the Mandarin for a school essay.

You'll want to know: 写作

写作 — xiězuò — "to write essays and stories; writing".

我很喜欢写作 wǒ hěn xǐhuan xiězuò — I really enjoy writing.

The new character, in pieces: 写 — five strokes: a cover of a dot and a bar that turns down; under it a short bar, a stroke that comes down, turns right, turns down again and hooks, and a long bar at the foot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 写作 (xiězuò) is built from 写 'to write' and 作 'to make', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjaeX and tsak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first, among other senses, 'to copy out a book'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: xiězuò
- Say it: xiězuò, once more
- Say it: wǒ hěn xǐhuan xiězuò — I really enjoy writing.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for measure word for essays, then the Mandarin for a school essay, then say xiězuò again

Before you move on

What does 写作 mean? ("To write essays and stories; writing".) Say it once more.

251.5 写 — a cover, then a turning hook

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xiězuò — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

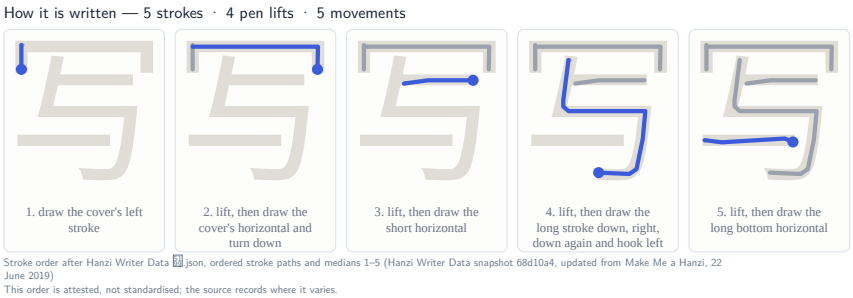
  学 字

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — xué, zì

Script — a cover, then a turning hook



How 写 is written, stroke by stroke

写

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The cover, two strokes. A short dot on the left, then a bar that runs right and turns down, ending in a small hook: the cover of 学.

Under the cover, three strokes. A short bar in the middle. Then a stroke that starts right under the cover, comes down, turns right, turns down again and hooks to the left. Then the long bar across the foot.

2 + 3 = five.

Your turn

- Write it: 写, all five, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 写? (Five.) Where have you made the cover before? (On 学, under its dots.) What comes last? (The long bar at the foot.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 写, pinned stroke paths and medians.

251.6 生字 (shēngzì) — new character; a character not yet learned

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a school essay, then the Mandarin for to write essays and stories.

You'll want to know: 生字

生字 — shēngzì — "new character; a character not yet learned".

这些生字我都会写 zhèxiē shēngzì wǒ dōu huì xiě — I can write all these new characters.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 生字 (shēngzì) is built from 生 and 字 'a character', both inherited from Middle Chinese, srjaeng and dziH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to grow'. Its sense 'raw, not yet known' is not given there, so how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: shēngzì
- Say it: shēngzì, once more
- Say it: zhèxiē shēngzì wǒ dōu huì xiě — I can write all these new characters.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a school essay, then the Mandarin for to write essays and stories, then say shēngzì again

Before you move on

What does 生字 mean? ("New character; a character not yet learned".) Say it once more.

251.7 xiūgǎi — to revise; to correct (a piece of work)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to write essays and stories, then the Mandarin for a new character.

You'll want to know: xiūgǎi

xiūgǎi — "to revise; to correct (a piece of work)".

zhè piān zuòwén nǐ yào xiūgǎi — You'll need to revise this essay.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiūgǎi is built from xiū and gǎi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjuw and kojX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to put in order' and 'to adorn', and the second 'to change'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: xiūgǎi
- Say it: xiūgǎi, once more
- Say it: zhè piān zuòwén nǐ yào xiūgǎi — You'll need to revise this essay.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to write essays and stories, then the Mandarin for a new character, then say xiūgǎi again

Before you move on

What does xiūgǎi mean? ("To revise; to correct (a piece of work)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 252

Happy and Sad

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I am in high spirits, how I feel, and that I am heartbroken, disappointed or satisfied.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 252: I can say I am in high spirits, how I feel, and that I am heartbroken, disappointed or satisfied.

252.1 开心 (kāixīn) — happy; in high spirits

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a new character, then the Mandarin for to revise a piece of work.

You'll want to know: 开心

开心 — kāixīn — "happy; in high spirits".

> 今天我很开心 jīntiān wǒ hěn kāixīn — I'm in a really good mood today.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 开心 (kāixīn) is built from 开 'to open' and 心 'the heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khoj and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): an open heart.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: kāixīn
- Say it: kāixīn, once more
- Say it: jīntiān wǒ hěn kāixīn — I'm in a really good mood today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a new character, then the Mandarin for to revise a piece of work, then say kāixīn again

Before you move on

What does 开心 mean? ("Happy; in high spirits".) Say it once more.

252.2 gǎndào — to feel

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to revise a piece of work, then the Mandarin for in high spirits.

You'll want to know: gǎndào

gǎndào — "to feel".

wǒ gǎndào hěn kāixīn — I feel really happy.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gǎndào is built from gǎn and 到 'to reach', both inherited from Middle Chinese, komX and tawH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to move'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: gǎndào
- Say it: gǎndào, once more
- Say it: wǒ gǎndào hěn kāixīn — I feel really happy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to revise a piece of work, then the Mandarin for in high spirits, then say gǎndào again

Before you move on

What does gǎndào mean? ("To feel".) Say it once more.

252.3 shāngxīn — sad; heartbroken

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for in high spirits, then the Mandarin for to feel.

You'll want to know: shāngxīn

shāngxīn — "sad; heartbroken".

tā hěn shāngxīn — He's heartbroken.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shāngxīn is built from shāng 'to hurt' and 忄 'the heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syang and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to harm'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: shāngxīn
- Say it: shāngxīn, once more

- Say it: tā hěn shāngxīn — He's heartbroken.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for in high spirits, then the Mandarin for to feel, then say shāngxīn again

Before you move on

What does shāngxīn mean? ("Sad; heartbroken".) Say it once more.

252.4 shīwàng — disappointed

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to feel, then the Mandarin for heartbroken.

You'll want to know: shīwàng

shīwàng — "disappointed".

tā méi lái wǒ hěn shīwàng — He didn't come, and I'm disappointed.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shīwàng is built from shī 'to lose' and wàng 'to watch for', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syit and mjangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to let slip' and the second 'to watch for someone's return'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: shīwàng
- Say it: shīwàng, once more
- Say it: tā méi lái wǒ hěn shīwàng — He didn't come, and I'm disappointed.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for to feel, then the Mandarin for heartbroken, then say shīwàng again

Before you move on

What does shīwàng mean? ("Disappointed".) Say it once more.

252.5 mǎnyì — satisfied; pleased

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for heartbroken, then the Mandarin for disappointed.

You'll want to know: mǎnyì

mǎnyì — "satisfied; pleased".

nǐ mǎnyì ma — Are you happy with it?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of mǎnyì is built from mǎn 'full' and yì 'intent', both inherited from Middle Chinese, manX and 'iH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'full' and the second 'will'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: mǎnyì
- Say it: mǎnyì, once more
- Say it: nǐ mǎnyì ma — Are you happy with it?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for heartbroken, then the Mandarin for disappointed, then say mǎnyì again

Before you move on

What does mǎnyì mean? (“Satisfied; pleased”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 253

Grandparents and Relatives

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about my grandparents, a child, sons and daughters, and relatives.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 253: I can talk about my grandparents, a child, sons and daughters, and relatives.

253.1 yéye — grandpa on the father's side

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for disappointed, then the Mandarin for satisfied.

You'll want to know: yéye

yéye — "grandpa on the father's side".

> wǒ yéye jīnnián bāshí suì — My grandpa is eighty this year.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yéye is one syllable, yé, said twice, the second time with no tone. No dictionary we use records an older form, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: yéye
- Say it: yéye, once more
- Say it: wǒ yéye jīnnián bāshí suì — My grandpa is eighty this year.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for disappointed, then the Mandarin for satisfied, then say yéye again

Before you move on

What does yéye mean? ("Grandpa on the father's side".) Say it once more.

253.2 nǎinai — grandma on the father's side

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for satisfied, then the Mandarin for grandpa on the father's side.

You'll want to know: nǎinai

nǎinai — "grandma on the father's side".

nǎinai hé yéye dōu hěn hǎo — My grandma and grandpa are both well.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nǎinai is built from nǎi, said twice, the second time with no tone. It is inherited from Middle Chinese nreaX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which spells the character another way and glosses it 'milk', the nǎi of niúnǎi; read nejX, the same character is glossed as what the people of Chu called their mother. How it came to mean a father's mother is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: nǎinai
- Say it: nǎinai, once more
- Say it: nǎinai hé yéye dōu hěn hǎo — My grandma and grandpa are both well.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for satisfied, then the Mandarin for grandpa on the father's side, then say nǎinai again

Before you move on

What does nǎinai mean? ("Grandma on the father's side".) Say it once more.

253.3 小孩 (xiǎohái) — child; kid

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for grandpa on the father's side, then the Mandarin for grandma on the father's side.

You'll want to know: 小孩

小孩 — xiǎohái — "child; kid".

那个小孩八岁 nàge xiǎohái bā suì — That kid is eight.

The new character, in pieces: 孩 — nine strokes: 子 on the left, its last stroke rising; on the right a dot, a bar, a stroke that falls to the left and turns up, two strokes falling to the left, and a dot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 小孩 (xiǎohái) is built from 小 'small' and 孩 'a child', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjewX and hoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a newborn child'.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: xiǎohái
- Say it: xiǎohái, once more
- Say it: nàge xiǎohái bā suì — That kid is eight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for grandpa on the father's side, then the Mandarin for grandma on the father's side, then say xiǎohái again

Before you move on

What does 小孩 mean? ("Child; kid".) Say it once more.

253.4 孩 — 子, then a dot, a bar and four strokes

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xiǎohái — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  子 小

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — zǐ, xiǎo

Script — 子, then a dot, a bar and four strokes

How 孩 is written, stroke by stroke

孩

Two pieces, left before right.

The left piece, 子, three strokes. A bar that turns down to the left, a vertical with a hook, then the last stroke: on the left of a character it rises to the right instead of lying flat.

The right piece, six strokes. A dot on top. A bar under it. A stroke that falls to the left and turns up to the right. A long stroke falling to the left. A shorter stroke falling to the left under it. Then a dot at the lower right.

3 + 6 = nine.

Your turn

- Write it: 孩, all nine, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 孩? (Nine.) Which piece is on the left? (子.) What changes in 子 here? (Its last stroke rises to the right.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 孩, pinned stroke paths and medians.

253.5 子女 (zǐnǚ) — sons and daughters; children

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for grandma on the father's side, then the Mandarin for a kid.

You'll want to know: 子女

子女 — zǐnǚ — "sons and daughters; children".

他们有三个子女 tāmen yǒu sān ge zǐnǚ — They have three children.

Two third tones meet in this word: zǐ is said with a rising tone before nǚ, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 子女 (zǐnǚ) is built from 子 'a son' and 女 'a daughter', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsiX and nrjoX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: zǐnǚ
- Say it: zǐnǚ, once more
- Say it: tāmen yǒu sān ge zǐnǚ — They have three children.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for grandma on the father's side, then the Mandarin for a kid, then say zǐnǚ again

Before you move on

What does 子女 mean? ("Sons and daughters; children".) Say it once more.

253.6 qīnqi — relative; family member

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a kid, then the Mandarin for sons and daughters.

You'll want to know: qīnqi

qīnqi — "relative; family member".

tā shì wǒ de qīnqi — He's a relative of mine.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qīnqi is built from qīn 'close' and qi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshin and tshek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to love' and 'near', and the second with this very word. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: qīnqi
- Say it: qīnqi, once more
- Say it: tā shì wǒ de qīnqi — He's a relative of mine.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a kid, then the Mandarin for sons and daughters, then say qīnqi again

Before you move on

What does qīnqi mean? ("Relative; family member".) Say it once more.

253.7 Looking back: from A New Term to Grandparents and Relatives

Say the Mandarin for a school term and a year group at school.

Your turn

- Say it: a school term, a year group at school, a head teacher, senior high school, a pupil's parent
- Say it: to prepare a lesson, to finish school for the day, how a character is read, marks at school, hard-working
- Say it: a hobby, an interest, a novel, a story, to play chess

- Say it: measure word for essays, a school essay, to write essays and stories, a new character, to revise a piece of work
- Say it: in high spirits, to feel, heartbroken, disappointed, satisfied
- Say it: grandpa on the father's side, grandma on the father's side, a kid, sons and daughters, a relative
- Read it: 校 高 读 作 写 孩 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

A school term? (学期, xuéqī.) A year group at school? (niánjí.) A head teacher? (校长, xiàozhǎng.) Senior high school? (高中, gāozhōng.) A pupil's parent? (家长, jiāzhǎng.) To prepare a lesson? (yùxí.) To finish school for the day? (fàngxué.) How a character is read? (读音, dúyīn.) Marks at school? (chéngjì.) Hard-working? (nǔlì.) A hobby? (àihào.) An interest? (xìngqù.) A novel? (小说, xiǎoshuō.) A story? (gùshi.) To play chess? (xiàqí.) Measure word for essays? (piān.) A school essay? (作文, zuòwén.) To write essays and stories? (写作, xiězuò.) A new character? (生字, shēngzì.) To revise a piece of work? (xiūgǎi.) In high spirits? (开心, kāixīn.) To feel? (gǎndào.) Heartbroken? (shāngxīn.) Disappointed? (shīwàng.) Satisfied? (mǎnyì.) Grandpa on the father's side? (yéye.) Grandma on the father's side? (nǎinai.) A kid? (小孩, xiǎohái.) Sons and daughters? (子女, zǐnǚ.) A relative? (qīnqi.)

Chapter 254

Born and Married

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a baby has been born, someone has married or finished school, and talk about a wedding and daily life.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 254: I can say a baby has been born, someone has married or finished school, and talk about a wedding and daily life.

254.1 出生 (chūshēng) — to be born

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for sons and daughters, then the Mandarin for a relative.

You'll want to know: 出生

出生 — chūshēng — "to be born".

> 他的孩子出生了 tā de háizi chūshēng le — His baby has been born.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 出生 (chūshēng) is built from 出 'to come out' and 生 'to grow', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyhwit and srjaeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to grow'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: chūshēng
- Say it: chūshēng, once more
- Say it: tā de háizi chūshēng le — His baby has been born.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for sons and daughters, then the Mandarin for a relative, then say chūshēng again

Before you move on

What does 出生 mean? ("To be born".) Say it once more.

254.2 jiéhūn — to get married

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a relative, then the Mandarin for to be born.

You'll want to know: jiéhūn

jiéhūn — "to get married".

wǒ gēge jiéhūn le — My brother has got married.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiéhūn is built from jié 'to tie' and hūn 'marriage', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ket and xwon (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to tie' and the second 'marriage'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: jiéhūn
- Say it: jiéhūn, once more
- Say it: wǒ gēge jiéhūn le — My brother has got married.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a relative, then the Mandarin for to be born, then say jiéhūn again

Before you move on

What does jiéhūn mean? ("To get married".) Say it once more.

254.3 bìyè — to graduate; to finish school

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be born, then the Mandarin for to get married.

You'll want to know: bìyè

bìyè — "to graduate; to finish school".

tā míngnián dàxué bìyè — She finishes university next year.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bìyè is built from bì 'to finish' and yè 'a task', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjit and ngjaep (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to end' and the second 'an affair'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: bìyè
- Say it: bìyè, once more

- Say it: tā míngnián dàxué bìyè — She finishes university next year.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be born, then the Mandarin for to get married, then say bìyè again

Before you move on

What does bìyè mean? ("To graduate; to finish school".) Say it once more.

254.4 hūnlǐ — wedding

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to get married, then the Mandarin for to graduate.

You'll want to know: hūnlǐ

hūnlǐ — "wedding".

wǒmen qù cānjiā tāmen de hūnlǐ — We're going to their wedding.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hūnlǐ is built from hūn 'marriage' and lǐ 'a rite', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xwon and lejX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which quotes an older dictionary for the second: what is done to serve the spirits.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: hūnlǐ
- Say it: hūnlǐ, once more
- Say it: wǒmen qù cānjiā tāmen de hūnlǐ — We're going to their wedding.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for to get married, then the Mandarin for to graduate, then say hūnlǐ again

Before you move on

What does hūnlǐ mean? ("Wedding".) Say it once more.

254.5 shēnghuó — life; daily life

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to graduate, then the Mandarin for a wedding.

You'll want to know: shēnghuó

shēnghuó — "life; daily life".

zhèr de shēnghuó hěn hǎo — Life here is good.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shēnghuó is built from 生 'to grow' and huó 'alive', both inherited from Middle Chinese, srjaeng and hwat (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'not dead'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: shēnghuó
- Say it: shēnghuó, once more
- Say it: zhèr de shēnghuó hěn hǎo — Life here is good.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to graduate, then the Mandarin for a wedding, then say shēnghuó again

Before you move on

What does shēnghuó mean? ("Life; daily life".) Say it once more.

Chapter 255

A Part-Time Job

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a part-time job, pay, colleagues, working late and the boss.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 255: I can talk about a part-time job, pay, colleagues, working late and the boss.

255.1 打工 (dǎgōng) — to work part-time; to have a part-time job

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a wedding, then the Mandarin for daily life.

You'll want to know: 打工

打工 — dǎgōng — "to work part-time; to have a part-time job".

> 他晚上打工 tā wǎnshang dǎgōng — He works a part-time job in the evenings.

The new character, in pieces: 工 — three strokes: a short bar, a vertical down from its middle, and a long bar across the foot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 打工 (dǎgōng) is built from 打 'to strike' and 工 'work', both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and kuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to strike' and the second 'skill'. Middle Chinese taengX would regularly give dǎng; dǎ is irregular. How the pair came to mean casual work is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎgōng
- Say it: dǎgōng, once more
- Say it: tā wǎnshang dǎgōng — He works a part-time job in the evenings.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a wedding, then the Mandarin for daily life, then say dǎgōng again

Before you move on

What does 打工 mean? ("To work part-time; to have a part-time job".) Say it once more.

255.2 工 — two bars and a post

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say dǎgōng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

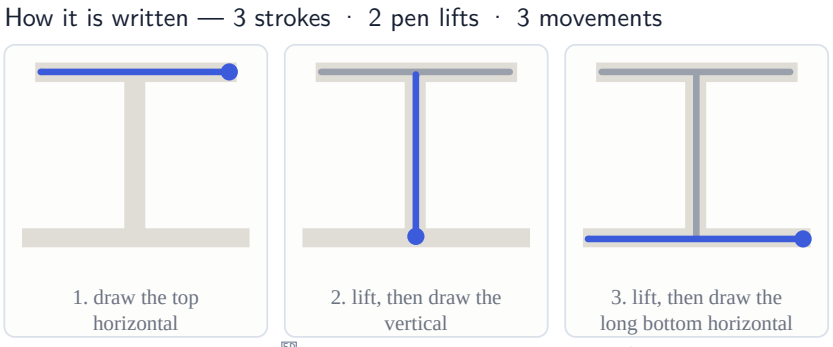
  在 打

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — zài, dǎ

Script — two bars and a post



Stroke order after Hanzi Writer Data 50 25.json, ordered stroke paths and medians 1–3 (Hanzi Writer Data snapshot 68d10a4, updated from Make Me a Hanzi, 22 June 2019)
This order is attested, not standardised; the source records where it varies.

How 工 is written, stroke by stroke

工

One piece, three strokes, top to bottom.

A short bar across the top.

A vertical down from the middle of the bar. It starts at the bar and does not cross it.

A long bar across the foot, longer than the top one, closing the vertical.

Your turn

- Write it: 工, all three, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 工? (Three.) Which bar is longer? (The one at the foot.) Does the vertical cross the top bar? (No, it starts there.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 工, pinned stroke paths and medians.

255.3 gōngzī — pay; wages

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for daily life, then the Mandarin for to work part-time.

You'll want to know: gōngzī

gōngzī — "pay; wages".

zhège gōngzuò de gōngzī hěn gāo — This job pays well.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gōngzī is built from 工 'work' and zī 'goods', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kuwng and tsij (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'goods' and 'to help'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: gōngzī
- Say it: gōngzī, once more
- Say it: zhège gōngzuò de gōngzī hěn gāo — This job pays well.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for daily life, then the Mandarin for to work part-time, then say gōngzī again

Before you move on

What does gōngzī mean? ("Pay; wages".) Say it once more.

255.4 同事 (tóngshì) — colleague

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to work part-time, then the Mandarin for wages.

You'll want to know: 同事

同事 — tóngshì — "colleague".

> 他是我的同事我们一起工作 tā shì wǒ de tóngshì wǒmen yìqǐ gōngzuò — He's a colleague of mine; we work together.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 同事 (tóngshì) is built from 同 'the same' and 事 'affairs', both inherited from Middle Chinese, duwng and dzriH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'together': people who share the work.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: tóngshì
- Say it: tóngshì, once more
- Say it: tā shì wǒ de tóngshì wǒmen yìqǐ gōngzuò — He's a colleague of mine; we work together.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to work part-time, then the Mandarin for wages, then say tóngshì again

Before you move on

What does 同事 mean? ("Colleague".) Say it once more.

255.5 jiābān — to work overtime

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for wages, then the Mandarin for a colleague.

You'll want to know: jiābān

jiābān — "to work overtime".

jīntiān wǒ yào jiābān — I have to work late today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiābān is built from jiā 'to add' and bān, both inherited from Middle Chinese, kae and paen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to increase' and quotes an older dictionary for the second, 'to divide jade'. The sense 'a shift at work' is not given there, so how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jiābān
- Say it: jiābān, once more
- Say it: jīntiān wǒ yào jiābān — I have to work late today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for wages, then the Mandarin for a colleague, then say jiābān again

Before you move on

What does jiābān mean? ("To work overtime".) Say it once more.

255.6 lǎobǎn — boss; owner (of a business)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a colleague, then the Mandarin for to work overtime.

You'll want to know: lǎobǎn

lǎobǎn — "boss; owner (of a business)".

> wǒ de lǎobǎn rén hěn hǎo — My boss is a nice person.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: lǎo is said with a rising tone before bǎn, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǎobǎn is built from lǎo 'old' and bǎn 'a board', both inherited from Middle Chinese, lawX and paenX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). How the pair came to mean the boss is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: lǎobǎn
- Say it: lǎobǎn, once more
- Say it: wǒ de lǎobǎn rén hěn hǎo — My boss is a nice person.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a colleague, then the Mandarin for to work overtime, then say lǎobǎn again

Before you move on

What does lǎobǎn mean? ("Boss; owner (of a business)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 256

What Do You Think?

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask what someone thinks, give my view, say how things look, say perhaps, and say we are different.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 256: I can ask what someone thinks, give my view, say how things look, say perhaps, and say we are different.

256.1 rènwéi — to think; to hold a view

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to work overtime, then the Mandarin for the boss.

You'll want to know: rènwéi

rènwéi — "to think; to hold a view".

> nǐ rènwéi zěnmeyàng — What do you think?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of rènwéi is built from rèn 'to know' and wéi, both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyinH and hjwe (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to know' and the second 'to make'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: rènwéi
- Say it: rènwéi, once more
- Say it: nǐ rènwéi zěnmeyàng — What do you think?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to work overtime, then the Mandarin for the boss, then say rènwéi again

Before you move on

What does rènwéi mean? ("To think; to hold a view".) Say it once more.

256.2 kànfǎ — view; opinion

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the boss, then the Mandarin for to hold a view.

You'll want to know: kànfǎ

kànfǎ — "view; opinion".

wǒmen de kànfǎ yíyàng — We see it the same way.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kànfǎ is built from 看 'to look' and fǎ 'a rule, a way', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khanH and pjop (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a rule': a way of looking.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: kànfǎ
- Say it: kànfǎ, once more
- Say it: wǒmen de kànfǎ yíyàng — We see it the same way.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the boss, then the Mandarin for to hold a view, then say kànfǎ again

Before you move on

What does kànfǎ mean? ("View; opinion".) Say it once more.

256.3 看来 (kànlai) — it seems; it looks as if

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to hold a view, then the Mandarin for a point of view.

You'll want to know: 看来

看来 — kànlai — "it seems; it looks as if".

看来他今天不来了 kànlai tā jīntiān bù lái le — It looks as if he isn't coming today.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 看来 (kànlai) is built from 看 'to look' and 来 'to come', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khanH and loj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: kànlai
- Say it: kànlai, once more

- Say it: kànlai tā jīntiān bù lái le — It looks as if he isn't coming today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to hold a view, then the Mandarin for a point of view, then say kànlai again

Before you move on

What does 看来 mean? ("It seems; it looks as if".) Say it once more.

256.4 yěxǔ — it may be that; perhaps

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a point of view, then the Mandarin for it looks as if.

You'll want to know: yěxǔ

yěxǔ — "it may be that; perhaps".

yěxǔ tā wàng le — Maybe he forgot.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: yě is said with a rising tone before xǔ, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yěxǔ is built from 也 'also' and xǔ 'to allow', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yaeX and xjoX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as a particle that closes a sentence and the second 'to permit'. How the pair came to mean perhaps is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: yěxǔ
- Say it: yěxǔ, once more

- Say it: yěxǔ tā wàng le — Maybe he forgot.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a point of view, then the Mandarin for it looks as if, then say yěxǔ again

Before you move on

What does yěxǔ mean? ("It may be that; perhaps".) Say it once more.

256.5 不同 (bùtóng) — different

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for it looks as if, then the Mandarin for it may be that.

You'll want to know: 不同

不同 — bùtóng — "different".

我们两个人很不同 wǒmen liǎng ge rén hěn bùtóng — The two of us are very different.

Tone: 不 keeps its own falling tone here, bù, because tóng after it is a rising tone, not a falling one.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 不同 (bùtóng) is built from 不 'not' and 同 'the same', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjut and duwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: bùtóng
- Say it: bùtóng, once more
- Say it: wǒmen liǎng ge rén hěn bùtóng — The two of us are very different.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for it looks as if, then the Mandarin for it may be that, then say bùtóng again

Before you move on

What does 不同 mean? ("Different".) Say it once more.

Chapter 257

Music and Shows

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about musical instruments, drumming, performing and singers, and say people clapped.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 257: I can talk about musical instruments, drumming, performing and singers, and say people clapped.

257.1 yuèqì — musical instrument

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for it may be that, then the Mandarin for different.

You'll want to know: yuèqì

yuèqì — "musical instrument".

> nǐ huì tán shénme yuèqì — What instrument can you play?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yuèqì is built from 乐 'music' and qì 'a vessel', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngaewk and khijH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'music' and the second 'a dish, a vessel'.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: yuèqì
- Say it: yuèqì, once more
- Say it: nǐ huì tán shénme yuèqì — What instrument can you play?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for it may be that, then the Mandarin for different, then say yuèqì again

Before you move on

What does yuèqì mean? ("Musical instrument".) Say it once more.

257.2 dǎgǔ — to play the drums

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for different, then the Mandarin for a musical instrument.

You'll want to know: dǎgǔ

dǎgǔ — "to play the drums".

wǒ dìdi huì dǎgǔ — My little brother can play the drums.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: dǎ is said with a rising tone before gǔ, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎgǔ is built from 打 'to strike' and gǔ 'a drum', both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and kuX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which quotes an older dictionary for the second, 'to beat a drum'. Middle Chinese taengX would regularly give dǎng; dǎ is irregular.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎgǔ
- Say it: dǎgǔ, once more
- Say it: wǒ dìdi huì dǎgǔ — My little brother can play the drums.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for different, then the Mandarin for a musical instrument, then say dǎgǔ again

Before you move on

What does dǎgǔ mean? ("To play the drums".) Say it once more.

257.3 yǎnchū — to perform on stage

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a musical instrument, then the Mandarin for to play the drums.

You'll want to know: yǎnchū

yǎnchū — "to perform on stage".

jīntiān wǎnshang tāmen yǎnchū — They're performing tonight.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǎnchū is built from yǎn and 出 'to come out', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yenX and tsyhwit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'wide' and 'water flowing far'. The sense 'to perform' is not given there, so how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: yǎnchū
- Say it: yǎnchū, once more
- Say it: jīntiān wǎnshang tāmen yǎnchū — They're performing tonight.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a musical instrument, then the Mandarin for to play the drums, then say yǎnchū again

Before you move on

What does yǎnchū mean? ("To perform on stage".) Say it once more.

257.4 gēshǒu — singer

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to play the drums, then the Mandarin for to perform on stage.

You'll want to know: gēshǒu

gēshǒu — "singer".

tā shì wǒ zuì xǐhuan de gēshǒu — He's my favourite singer.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gēshǒu is built from gē 'a song' and 手 'a hand', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ka and syuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which quotes an older book for the first: the voice of people is called song. A hand here is someone skilled at a thing; that sense is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: gēshǒu
- Say it: gēshǒu, once more
- Say it: tā shì wǒ zuì xǐhuan de gēshǒu — He's my favourite singer.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to play the drums, then the Mandarin for to perform on stage, then say gēshǒu again

Before you move on

What does gēshǒu mean? ("Singer".) Say it once more.

257.5 gǔzhǎng — to clap; to applaud

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to perform on stage, then the Mandarin for a singer.

You'll want to know: gǔzhǎng gǔzhǎng — "to clap; to applaud".

dàjiā dōu gǔzhǎng le — Everyone clapped.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: gǔ is said with a rising tone before zhǎng, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gǔzhǎng is built from gǔ 'a drum' and zhǎng 'the palm of the hand', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kuX and tsyangX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which quotes an older dictionary for the first, 'to beat a drum', and glosses the second 'the palm'.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: gǔzhǎng
- Say it: gǔzhǎng, once more
- Say it: dàjiā dōu gǔzhǎng le — Everyone clapped.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to perform on stage, then the Mandarin for a singer, then say gǔzhǎng again

Before you move on

What does gǔzhǎng mean? ("To clap; to applaud".) Say it once more.

Chapter 258

Warm-Hearted

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone is friendly, warm-hearted, patient or witty, and talk about their personality.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 258: I can say that someone is friendly, warm-hearted, patient or witty, and talk about their personality.

258.1 yǒuhǎo — friendly

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a singer, then the Mandarin for to applaud.

You'll want to know: yǒuhǎo

yǒuhǎo — "friendly".

> zhèr de rén hěn yǒuhǎo — People here are very friendly.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: yǒu is said with a rising tone before hǎo, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǒuhǎo is built from yǒu 'a friend' and 好 'good', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuwX and xawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'a friend'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: yǒuhǎo
- Say it: yǒuhǎo, once more
- Say it: zhèr de rén hěn yǒuhǎo — People here are very friendly.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a singer, then the Mandarin for to applaud, then say yǒuhǎo again

Before you move on

What does yǒuhǎo mean? ("Friendly".) Say it once more.

258.2 热心 (rèxīn) — warm-hearted; eager to help

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to applaud, then the Mandarin for friendly.

You'll want to know: 热心

热心 — rèxīn — "warm-hearted; eager to help".

我们的校长很热心 wǒmen de xiàozhǎng hěn rèxīn — Our head teacher is very warm-hearted.

The new character, in pieces: 热 — ten strokes: the hand piece of 打, three strokes; beside it a stroke falling to the left, a bar that turns down and hooks up, and a dot; then four dots along the foot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 热心 (rèxīn) is built from 热 'hot' and 心 'the heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyet and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as burning, as with fire.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: rèxīn
- Say it: rèxīn, once more
- Say it: wǒmen de xiàozhǎng hěn rèxīn — Our head teacher is very warm-hearted.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to applaud, then the Mandarin for friendly, then say rèxīn again

Before you move on

What does 热心 mean? ("Warm-hearted; eager to help".) Say it once more.

258.3 热 — the hand piece and a hooked bend, over four dots

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say rèxīn — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

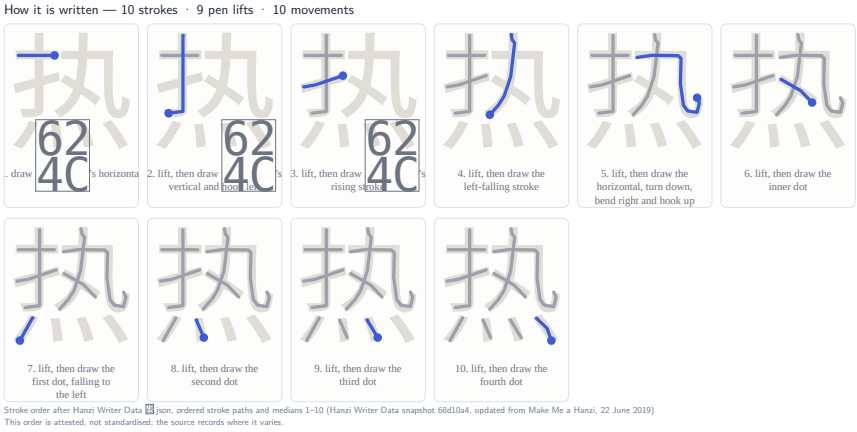
  打 心

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — dǎ, xīn

Script — the hand piece and a hooked bend, over four dots



How 热 is written, stroke by stroke

热

Three pieces: two side by side on top, and a row of dots under them.

The top left piece, three strokes, the hand piece of 打: a short bar, a vertical with a hook, then a stroke rising to the right across it.

The top right piece, three strokes. A stroke falling to the left. A bar that runs right, turns down, bends out to the right and hooks up. Then a dot inside.

The foot, four dots, left to right: the first leans to the left, the other three to the right.

3 + 3 + 4 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 热, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 热? (Ten.) Which piece comes first? (The hand piece of 打.) What runs along the foot? (Four dots.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 热, pinned stroke paths and medians.

258.4 nàixīn — patient with people

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for friendly, then the Mandarin for eager to help.

You'll want to know: nàixīn

nàixīn — "patient with people".

lǎoshī hěn nàixīn — The teacher is very patient.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nàixīn is built from nài 'to endure' and 心 'the heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nojH and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to bear'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: nàixīn
- Say it: nàixīn, once more
- Say it: lǎoshī hěn nàixīn — The teacher is very patient.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for friendly, then the Mandarin for eager to help, then say nàixīn again

Before you move on

What does nàixīn mean? ("Patient with people".) Say it once more.

258.5 yōumò — humorous; witty (of a person)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for eager to help, then the Mandarin for patient with people.

You'll want to know: yōumò

yōumò — "humorous; witty (of a person)".

wǒ bàba hěn yōumò — My dad has a great sense of humour.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yōumò is usually traced to English humour, written with two characters whose sounds come close to it, yōu 'deep' and mò 'silent'; who first wrote it this way is not documented in what we can open.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: yōumò
- Say it: yōumò, once more
- Say it: wǒ bàba hěn yōumò — My dad has a great sense of humour.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for eager to help, then the Mandarin for patient with people, then say yōumò again

Before you move on

What does yōumò mean? ("Humorous; witty (of a person)".) Say it once more.

258.6 xìnggé — personality; character

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for patient with people, then the Mandarin for witty.

You'll want to know: xìnggé

xìnggé — "personality; character".

wǒ xǐhuan tā de xìnggé — I like his personality.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xìnggé is built from xìng 'nature' and gé 'a pattern', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjengH and kaek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'nature and conduct' and the second 'a model' and 'a measure'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: xìnggé
- Say it: xìnggé, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan tā de xìnggé — I like his personality.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for patient with people, then the Mandarin for witty, then say xìnggé again

Before you move on

What does xìnggé mean? ("Personality; character".) Say it once more.

Chapter 259

What Do You Do?

Modes: voice (6) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask what someone does for a living and name an author, a lawyer, a journalist and an electrician.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 259: I can ask what someone does for a living and name an author, a lawyer, a journalist and an electrician.

259.1 zhíyè — occupation; profession

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for witty, then the Mandarin for personality.

You'll want to know: zhíyè

zhíyè — "occupation; profession".

> nǐ de zhíyè shì shénme — What do you do for a living?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhíyè is built from zhí 'a duty' and yè 'a task', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsyik and ngjaep (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which quotes two older dictionaries for the first: 'to be in charge' and 'work'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: zhíyè
- Say it: zhíyè, once more
- Say it: nǐ de zhíyè shì shénme — What do you do for a living?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for witty, then the Mandarin for personality, then say zhíyè again

Before you move on

What does zhíyè mean? ("Occupation; profession".) Say it once more.

259.2 作家 (zuòjiā) — writer; author

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for personality, then the Mandarin for an occupation.

You'll want to know: 作家

作家 — zuòjiā — "writer; author".

他是作家写了十本书 tā shì zuòjiā xiěle shí běn shū — He's an author and has written ten books.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 作家 (zuòjiā) is built from 作 'to make' and 家, both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsak and kae (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a dwelling'. 家 also names a master of a craft, a sense the dictionary does not give, so how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: zuòjiā
- Say it: zuòjiā, once more
- Say it: tā shì zuòjiā xiěle shí běn shū — He's an author and has written ten books.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for personality, then the Mandarin for an occupation, then say zuòjiā again

Before you move on

What does 作家 mean? ("Writer; author".) Say it once more.

259.3 lǜshī — lawyer

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an occupation, then the Mandarin for an author.

You'll want to know: lǜshī

lǜshī — "lawyer".

wǒ jiějie shì lǜshī — My sister is a lawyer.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of lǜshī is built from lǜ 'the law' and shī 'a master', both inherited from Middle Chinese, lwit and srij (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'the law' and the second 'a model'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: lǜshī
- Say it: lǜshī, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiějie shì lǜshī — My sister is a lawyer.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an occupation, then the Mandarin for an author, then say lǜshī again

Before you move on

What does lǜshī mean? ("Lawyer".) Say it once more.

259.4 jìzhě — journalist; reporter

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an author, then the Mandarin for a lawyer.

You'll want to know: jìzhě

jìzhě — "journalist; reporter".

tā shì yí ge jìzhě — He's a journalist.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìzhě is built from jì 'to record' and zhě 'one who', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kiH and tsyaeX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to note down' and calls the second a particle.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jìzhě
- Say it: jìzhě, once more
- Say it: tā shì yí ge jìzhě — He's a journalist.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an author, then the Mandarin for a lawyer, then say jìzhě again

Before you move on

What does jìzhě mean? ("Journalist; reporter".) Say it once more.

259.5 电工 (diàngōng) — electrician

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a lawyer, then the Mandarin for a journalist.

You'll want to know: 电工

电工 — diàngōng — "electrician".

他是电工 tā shì diàngōng — He's an electrician.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 电工 (diàngōng) is built from 电 'electricity' and 工 'a worker', both inherited from Middle Chinese, denH and kuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'lightning'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: diàngōng
- Say it: diàngōng, once more
- Say it: tā shì diàngōng — He's an electrician.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for a lawyer, then the Mandarin for a journalist, then say diàngōng again

Before you move on

What does 电工 mean? ("Electrician".) Say it once more.

259.6 Looking back: from Born and Married to What Do You Do?

Say the Mandarin for to be born and to get married.

Your turn

- Say it: to be born, to get married, to graduate, a wedding, daily life
- Say it: to work part-time, wages, a colleague, to work overtime, the boss
- Say it: to hold a view, a point of view, it looks as if, it may be that, different
- Say it: a musical instrument, to play the drums, to perform on stage, a singer, to applaud
- Say it: friendly, eager to help, patient with people, witty, personality
- Say it: an occupation, an author, a lawyer, a journalist, an electrician
- Read it: 工 热 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

To be born? (出生, chūshēng.) To get married? (jiéhūn.) To graduate? (bìyè.) A wedding? (hūnlǐ.) Daily life? (shēnghuó.) To work part-time? (打工, dǎgōng.) Wages? (gōngzī.) A colleague? (同事, tóngshì.) To work overtime? (jiābān.) The boss? (lǎobǎn.) To hold a view? (rènwéi.) A point of view? (kànfǎ.) It looks as if? (看来, kànlai.) It may be that? (yěxǔ.) Different? (不同, bùtóng.) A musical instrument? (yuèqì.) To play the drums? (dǎgǔ.) To perform on stage? (yǎnchū.) A singer? (gēshǒu.) To applaud?

(gǔzhǎng.) Friendly? (yǒuhǎo.) Eager to help? (热心, rèxīn.) Patient with people? (nàixīn.) Witty? (yōumò.) Personality? (xìnggé.) An occupation? (zhíyè.) An author? (作家, zuòjiā.) A lawyer? (lǜshī.) A journalist? (jìzhě.) An electrician? (电工, diàngōng.)

Chapter 260

What I Can Do

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about ability, what someone can do, an expert, technique and making progress.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 260: I can talk about ability, what someone can do, an expert, technique and making progress.

260.1 nénglì — ability

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a journalist, then the Mandarin for an electrician.

You'll want to know: nénglì

nénglì — "ability".

> tā hěn yǒu nénglì — He's very capable.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of nénglì is built from 能 'able' and lì 'strength', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nong and lik (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'skilled' and the second 'sinew'.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: nénglì
- Say it: nénglì, once more
- Say it: tā hěn yǒu nénglì — He's very capable.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a journalist, then the Mandarin for an electrician, then say nénglì again

Before you move on

What does nénglì mean? ("Ability".) Say it once more.

260.2 本事 (běnshi) — skill; what someone is capable of

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an electrician, then the Mandarin for ability.

You'll want to know: 本事

本事 — běnshi — "skill; what someone is capable of".

这个人很有本事 zhège rén hěn yǒu běnshi — This man can turn his hand to anything.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 本事 (běnshi) is built from 本 'the root' and 事 'affairs', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pwonX and dzriH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'the root' and 'the beginning'. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: běnshi
- Say it: běnshi, once more
- Say it: zhège rén hěn yǒu běnshi — This man can turn his hand to anything.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an electrician, then the Mandarin for ability, then say běnshi again

Before you move on

What does 本事 mean? ("Skill; what someone is capable of".) Say it once more.

260.3 高手 (gāoshǒu) — expert; master (at something)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for ability, then the Mandarin for what someone is capable of.

You'll want to know: 高手

高手 — gāoshǒu — "expert; master (at something)".

做饭他是高手 zuòfàn tā shì gāoshǒu — When it comes to cooking, he's an expert.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 高手 (gāoshǒu) is built from 高 'high' and 手 'a hand', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kaw and syuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): a hand of a high level.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: gāoshǒu
- Say it: gāoshǒu, once more
- Say it: zuòfàn tā shì gāoshǒu — When it comes to cooking, he's an expert.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for ability, then the Mandarin for what someone is capable of, then say gāoshǒu again

Before you move on

What does 高手 mean? ("Expert; master (at something)".) Say it once more.

260.4 jìshù — skill; technique

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for what someone is capable of, then the Mandarin for an expert.

You'll want to know: jìshù

jìshù — "skill; technique".

tā de jìshù hěn hǎo — He's very skilled.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìshù is built from jì 'a craft' and shù, both inherited from Middle Chinese, gjeX and zywit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'skill' and the second with this very word. Middle Chinese zywit would regularly give a rising tone, shú; the falling tone of shù is irregular.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: jìshù
- Say it: jìshù, once more
- Say it: tā de jìshù hěn hǎo — He's very skilled.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for what someone is capable of, then the Mandarin for an expert, then say jìshù again

Before you move on

What does jìshù mean? ("Skill; technique".) Say it once more.

260.5 jìnbù — to improve; to make progress

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an expert, then the Mandarin for technique.

You'll want to know: jìnbù

jìnbù — "to improve; to make progress".

nǐ de Hànyǔ jìnbù de hěn kuài — Your Chinese is improving fast.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jìnbù is built from 进 'to go forward' and bù 'a step', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsinH and buH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'forward' and the second 'a pace'.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: jìnbù
- Say it: jìnbù, once more
- Say it: nǐ de Hànyǔ jìnbù de hěn kuài — Your Chinese is improving fast.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an expert, then the Mandarin for technique, then say jìnbù again

Before you move on

What does jìnbù mean? ("To improve; to make progress".) Say it once more.

Chapter 261

Have You Ever?

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about experience, say I once did something, study abroad, go overseas and say whom I saw.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 261: I can talk about experience, say I once did something, study abroad, go overseas and say whom I saw.

261.1 jīngyàn — experience; know-how

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for technique, then the Mandarin for to make progress.

You'll want to know: jīngyàn

jīngyàn — "experience; know-how".

> tā hěn yǒu jīngyàn — He's very experienced.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jīngyàn is built from jīng and yàn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, keng and ngjemH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'constant' and 'the warp of cloth', and the second 'to verify'. How the pair came to mean experience is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: jīngyàn
- Say it: jīngyàn, once more
- Say it: tā hěn yǒu jīngyàn — He's very experienced.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for technique, then the Mandarin for to make progress, then say jīngyàn again

Before you move on

What does jīngyàn mean? ("Experience; know-how".) Say it once more.

261.2 céngjīng — once (in the past); at one time

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to make progress, then the Mandarin for know-how.

You'll want to know: céngjīng

céngjīng — "once (in the past); at one time".

wǒ céngjīng qù guo Běijīng — I've been to Beijing once.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of céngjīng is built from céng and jīng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzong and keng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first with the second, 'to pass through'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: céngjīng
- Say it: céngjīng, once more
- Say it: wǒ céngjīng qù guo Běijīng — I've been to Beijing once.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to make progress, then the Mandarin for know-how, then say céngjīng again

Before you move on

What does céngjīng mean? ("Once (in the past); at one time".) Say it once more.

261.3 liúxué — to study abroad

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for know-how, then the Mandarin for at one time.

You'll want to know: liúxué

liúxué — "to study abroad".

wǒ xiǎng qù Zhōngguó liúxué — I'd like to go to China to study.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of liúxué is built from liú 'to stay' and 学 'to study', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ljuw and haewk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to stay' and 'to stop'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: liúxué
- Say it: liúxué, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiǎng qù Zhōngguó liúxué — I'd like to go to China to study.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for know-how, then the Mandarin for at one time, then say liúxué again

Before you move on

What does liúxué mean? ("To study abroad".) Say it once more.

261.4 国外 (guówài) — abroad; overseas

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for at one time, then the Mandarin for to study abroad.

You'll want to know: 国外

国外 — guówài — "abroad; overseas".

你去过国外吗 nǐ qù guo guówài ma — Have you ever been abroad?

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 国外 (guówài) is built from 国 'a country' and 外 'outside', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kwok and ngwajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'outside' and 'far'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: guówài
- Say it: guówài, once more

- Say it: nǐ qù guo guówài ma — Have you ever been abroad?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for at one time, then the Mandarin for to study abroad, then say guówài again

Before you move on

What does 国外 mean? ("Abroad; overseas".) Say it once more.

261.5 tǐyàn — to experience for yourself

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to study abroad, then the Mandarin for overseas.

You'll want to know: tǐyàn

tǐyàn — "to experience for yourself".

tāmen qù nóngcūn tǐyàn shēnghuó — They're going to the countryside to experience life there.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tǐyàn is built from 体 'the body' and yàn 'to verify', both inherited from Middle Chinese, thejX and ngjemH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'the body' and the second 'to verify'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: tǐyàn
- Say it: tǐyàn, once more
- Say it: tāmen qù nóngcūn tǐyàn shēnghuó — They're going to the countryside to experience life there.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for to study abroad, then the Mandarin for overseas, then say tǐyàn again

Before you move on

What does tǐyàn mean? ("To experience for yourself".) Say it once more.

Chapter 262

Win or Lose

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about tennis and table tennis, an opponent and beating them, and cheer someone on.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 262: I can talk about tennis and table tennis, an opponent and beating them, and cheer someone on.

262.1 wǎngqiú — tennis

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for overseas, then the Mandarin for to experience for yourself.

You'll want to know: wǎngqiú

wǎngqiú — "tennis".

> wǒ xǐhuan wǎngqiú — I like tennis.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wǎngqiú is built from 网 'a net' and qiú 'a ball', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjangX and gjuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'a net' and the second 'a fine jade'; under another spelling of the second it glosses a ball of fur that is struck.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: wǎngqiú
- Say it: wǎngqiú, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan wǎngqiú — I like tennis.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for overseas, then the Mandarin for to experience for yourself, then say wǎngqiú again

Before you move on

What does wǎngqiú mean? ("Tennis".) Say it once more.

262.2 pīngpāngqiú — table tennis; ping-pong

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to experience for yourself, then the Mandarin for tennis.

You'll want to know: pīngpāngqiú

pīngpāngqiú — "table tennis; ping-pong".

tā shì pīngpāngqiú gāoshǒu — He's a table tennis ace.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of pīngpāngqiú is built from pīngpāng, which imitates the sound of the ball, and qiú 'a ball', inherited from Middle Chinese gjuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). No dictionary we use records an older form of the first part, so its history is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: pīngpāngqiú
- Say it: pīngpāngqiú, once more
- Say it: tā shì pīngpāngqiú gāoshǒu — He's a table tennis ace.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to experience for yourself, then the Mandarin for tennis, then say pīngpāngqiú again

Before you move on

What does pīngpāngqiú mean? ("Table tennis; ping-pong".) Say it once more.

262.3 对手 (duìshǒu) — opponent; rival

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for tennis, then the Mandarin for table tennis.

You'll want to know: 对手

对手 — duìshǒu — "opponent; rival".

他是我的对手 tā shì wǒ de duìshǒu — He's my opponent.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 对手 (duìshǒu) is built from 对 and 手 'a hand', both inherited from Middle Chinese, twojH and syuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to answer' and 'to match': the hand that matches yours.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: duìshǒu
- Say it: duìshǒu, once more

- Say it: tā shì wǒ de duìshǒu — He's my opponent.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for tennis, then the Mandarin for table tennis, then say duìshǒu again

Before you move on

What does 对手 mean? ("Opponent; rival".) Say it once more.

262.4 dǎbài — to defeat; to beat (an opponent)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for table tennis, then the Mandarin for an opponent.

You'll want to know: dǎbài

dǎbài — "to defeat; to beat (an opponent)".

wǒmen dǎbàile tāmen — We beat them.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dǎbài is built from 打 'to strike' and bài, both inherited from Middle Chinese, taengX and baejH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to strike' and the second 'to fall to ruin by itself'. Middle Chinese taengX would regularly give dǎng; dǎ is irregular.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: dǎbài
- Say it: dǎbài, once more
- Say it: wǒmen dǎbàile tāmen — We beat them.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for table tennis, then the Mandarin for an opponent, then say dǎbài again

Before you move on

What does dǎbài mean? ("To defeat; to beat (an opponent)".) Say it once more.

262.5 jiāyóu — to cheer someone on; come on!

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an opponent, then the Mandarin for to defeat.

You'll want to know: jiāyóu

jiāyóu — "to cheer someone on; come on!".

jiāyóu wǒmen néng dǎbài tāmen — Come on, we can beat them!

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiāyóu is built from jiā 'to add' and yóu 'oil', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kae and yuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to increase' and the second 'oil'. How adding oil came to mean cheering someone on is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: jiāyóu
- Say it: jiāyóu, once more
- Say it: jiāyóu wǒmen néng dǎbài tāmen — Come on, we can beat them!
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an opponent, then the Mandarin for to defeat, then say jiāyóu again

Before you move on

What does jiāyóu mean? (“To cheer someone on; come on!”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 263

Time Off Work

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the manager, say who is in charge, and ask for time off, sick leave or annual leave.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 263: I can talk about the manager, say who is in charge, and ask for time off, sick leave or annual leave.

263.1 jīnglǐ — manager

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to defeat, then the Mandarin for to cheer someone on.

You'll want to know: jīnglǐ

jīnglǐ — "manager".

> jīnglǐ jīntiān bú zài — The manager isn't in today.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jīnglǐ is built from jīng and lǐ, both inherited from Middle Chinese, keng and liX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'constant' and the second 'to put in order', and quotes an older dictionary for the second, 'to work jade'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jīnglǐ
- Say it: jīnglǐ, once more
- Say it: jīnglǐ jīntiān bú zài — The manager isn't in today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to defeat, then the Mandarin for to cheer someone on, then say jīnglǐ again

Before you move on

What does jīnglǐ mean? ("Manager".) Say it once more.

263.2 fùzé — to be in charge (of)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to cheer someone on, then the Mandarin for a manager.

You'll want to know: fùzé

fùzé — "to be in charge (of)".

zhège gōngzuò wǒ fùzé — I'm in charge of this job.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fùzé is built from fù 'to carry' and zé 'to demand', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjuwX and tsreak (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to bear on the back' and the second 'to seek'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: fùzé
- Say it: fùzé, once more
- Say it: zhège gōngzuò wǒ fùzé — I'm in charge of this job.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to cheer someone on, then the Mandarin for a manager, then say fùzé again

Before you move on

What does fùzé mean? ("To be in charge (of)".) Say it once more.

263.3 请假 (qǐngjià) — to ask for time off

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a manager, then the Mandarin for to be in charge.

You'll want to know: 请假

请假 — qǐngjià — "to ask for time off".

我明天要请假 wǒ míngtiān yào qǐngjià — I need to take tomorrow off.

The new character, in pieces: 假 — eleven strokes: the person piece 亻; then a narrow piece of five strokes, a short bar that turns down, a short bar, a long vertical and two short bars against it; then four strokes, a short bar that turns down, a short bar, a stroke that runs right and sweeps down to the left, and a long stroke to the right across it. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 请假 (qǐngjià) is built from 请 'to ask' and 假 'leave', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshjengX and kaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to beg' and the second 'leave from work'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: qǐngjià
- Say it: qǐngjià, once more
- Say it: wǒ míngtiān yào qǐngjià — I need to take tomorrow off.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a manager, then the Mandarin for to be in charge, then say qǐngjià again

Before you move on

What does 请假 mean? ("To ask for time off".) Say it once more.

263.4 假 — the person piece, then two narrow pieces

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say qǐngjià — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

  请 你

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — qǐng, nǐ

Script — the person piece, then two narrow pieces

How 假 is written, stroke by stroke

假

Three pieces, left to right.

The left piece, 亻 , two strokes: a stroke falling to the left, then a vertical.

The middle piece, five strokes. A short bar that turns down at its right end. A short bar under it. A long vertical down the left side to the foot. Then two short bars against the vertical, the upper one first.

The right piece, four strokes. A short bar that turns down. A short bar under it. A stroke that runs right and sweeps down to the left. Then a long stroke falling to the right across it to the foot.

2 + 5 + 4 = eleven.

Your turn

- Write it: 假, all eleven, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 假? (Eleven.) Which piece comes first? (The person piece, 亻.) What is the last stroke? (A long stroke falling to the right.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 假, pinned stroke paths and medians.

263.5 病假 (bìngjià) — sick leave

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be in charge, then the Mandarin for to ask for time off.

You'll want to know: 病假

病假 — bìngjià — "sick leave".

他今天请了病假 tā jīntiān qǐngle bìngjià — He's off sick today.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 病假 (bìngjià) is built from 病 'illness' and 假 'leave', both inherited from Middle Chinese, bjaengH and kaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'grief' and quotes an older dictionary for 'an illness getting worse'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: bìngjià
- Say it: bìngjià, once more
- Say it: tā jīntiān qǐngle bìngjià — He's off sick today.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be in charge, then the Mandarin for to ask for time off, then say bìngjià again

Before you move on

What does 病假 mean? ("Sick leave".) Say it once more.

263.6 年假 (niánjià) — annual leave

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to ask for time off, then the Mandarin for sick leave.

You'll want to know: 年假

年假 — niánjià — "annual leave".

我今年的年假有十天 wǒ jīnnián de niánjià yǒu shí tiān — I get ten days' leave this year.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 年假 (niánjià) is built from 年 'a year' and 假 'leave', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nen and kaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: niánjià
- Say it: niánjià, once more
- Say it: wǒ jīnnián de niánjià yǒu shí tiān — I get ten days' leave this year.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to ask for time off, then the Mandarin for sick leave, then say niánjià again

Before you move on

What does 年假 mean? ("Annual leave".) Say it once more.

Chapter 264

Sorry, I Can't

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can turn something down politely, say it is a shame, say sorry, say I am afraid not, and say what is actually so.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 264: I can turn something down politely, say it is a shame, say sorry, say I am afraid not, and say what is actually so.

264.1 jùjué — to refuse; to turn down

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for sick leave, then the Mandarin for annual leave.

You'll want to know: jùjué

jùjué — "to refuse; to turn down".

> tā jùjuéle wǒ — He turned me down.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jùjué is built from jù 'to resist' and jué 'to cut off', both inherited from Middle Chinese, gjoX and dzjwet (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to resist' and the second 'to break off'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: jùjué
- Say it: jùjué, once more
- Say it: tā jùjuéle wǒ — He turned me down.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for sick leave, then the Mandarin for annual leave, then say jùjué again

Before you move on

What does jùjué mean? ("To refuse; to turn down".) Say it once more.

264.2 kěxī — a pity; it's a shame

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for annual leave, then the Mandarin for to turn down.

You'll want to know: kěxī

kěxī — "a pity; it's a shame".

nǐ bù néng lái tài kěxī le — It's a real shame you can't come.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kěxī is built from kě and xī, both inherited from Middle Chinese, khaX and sjek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to permit' and the second 'to grudge' and, after an older dictionary, 'to grieve'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: kěxī
- Say it: kěxī, once more
- Say it: nǐ bù néng lái tài kěxī le — It's a real shame you can't come.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for annual leave, then the Mandarin for to turn down, then say kěxī again

Before you move on

What does kěxī mean? ("A pity; it's a shame".) Say it once more.

264.3 bàoqiàn — sorry; regretful

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to turn down, then the Mandarin for a shame.

You'll want to know: bàoqiàn

bàoqiàn — "sorry; regretful".

hěn bàoqiàn wǒ míngtiān méiyǒu shíjiān — I'm very sorry, I don't have time tomorrow.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bàoqiàn is built from bào 'to hold' and qiàn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, bawX and kheamH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to hold'. For the second it gives a sunken mouth, and in other readings 'not eating your fill'; the sense of being sorry is not given there, so how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: bàoqiàn
- Say it: bàoqiàn, once more
- Say it: hěn bàoqiàn wǒ míngtiān méiyǒu shíjiān — I'm very sorry, I don't have time tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to turn down, then the Mandarin for a shame, then say bàoqiàn again

Before you move on

What does bàoqiàn mean? ("Sorry; regretful".) Say it once more.

264.4 kǒngpà — I'm afraid that; probably

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a shame, then the Mandarin for sorry to say.

You'll want to know: kǒngpà

kǒngpà — "I'm afraid that; probably".

kǒngpà tā bú huì lái le — I'm afraid he won't come.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of kǒngpà is built from kǒng and pà, both inherited from Middle Chinese, khjowngX and phaeH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses both 'to fear'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: kǒngpà
- Say it: kǒngpà, once more
- Say it: kǒngpà tā bú huì lái le — I'm afraid he won't come.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a shame, then the Mandarin for sorry to say, then say kǒngpà again

Before you move on

What does kǒngpà mean? ("I'm afraid that; probably".) Say it once more.

264.5 qíshí — actually; as a matter of fact

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for sorry to say, then the Mandarin for afraid that.

You'll want to know: qíshí

qíshí — "actually; as a matter of fact".

qíshí wǒ hěn máng — Actually, I'm really busy.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qíshí is built from qí 'its' and shí 'real', both inherited from Middle Chinese, gi and zyit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which calls the first a particle and glosses the second 'full' and 'true'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: qíshí
- Say it: qíshí, once more
- Say it: qíshí wǒ hěn máng — Actually, I'm really busy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for sorry to say, then the Mandarin for afraid that, then say qíshí again

Before you move on

What does qíshí mean? ("Actually; as a matter of fact".) Say it once more.

Chapter 265

Shy or Brave

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone is shy, brave, generous, stingy or nervous.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 265: I can say that someone is shy, brave, generous, stingy or nervous.

265.1 hàixiū — shy; bashful

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for afraid that, then the Mandarin for as a matter of fact.

You'll want to know: hàixiū

hàixiū — "shy; bashful".

> nàge háizi hěn hàixiū — That child is shy.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of hàixiū is built from hài 'to harm' and xiū 'shame', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hajH and sjuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to harm' and the second 'shame'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: hàixiū
- Say it: hàixiū, once more
- Say it: nàge háizi hěn hàixiū — That child is shy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for afraid that, then the Mandarin for as a matter of fact, then say hàixiū again

Before you move on

What does hàixiū mean? ("Shy; bashful".) Say it once more.

265.2 yǒnggǎn — brave

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for as a matter of fact, then the Mandarin for shy.

You'll want to know: yǒnggǎn

yǒnggǎn — "brave".

tā hěn yǒnggǎn — He's very brave.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

Two third tones meet in this word: yǒng is said with a rising tone before gǎn, and the spelling keeps both marks.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǒnggǎn is built from yǒng and gǎn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, youngX and kamX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'fierce' and the second 'brave' and 'to dare'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: yǒnggǎn
- Say it: yǒnggǎn, once more
- Say it: tā hěn yǒnggǎn — He's very brave.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for as a matter of fact, then the Mandarin for shy, then say yǒnggǎn again

Before you move on

What does yǒnggǎn mean? ("Brave".) Say it once more.

265.3 dàfang — generous; open-handed

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for shy, then the Mandarin for brave.

You'll want to know: dàfang

dàfang — "generous; open-handed".

wǒ gēge hěn dàfang — My brother is very generous.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dàfang is built from 大 'big' and fāng 'square', both inherited from Middle Chinese, daH and pjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'the four quarters' and 'upright'. In the word the second loses its tone; how the pair came to mean generous is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: dàfang
- Say it: dàfang, once more
- Say it: wǒ gēge hěn dàfang — My brother is very generous.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for shy, then the Mandarin for brave, then say dàfang again

Before you move on

What does dàfang mean? ("Generous; open-handed".) Say it once more.

265.4 小气 (xiǎoqì) — stingy; mean (with money)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for brave, then the Mandarin for generous.

You'll want to know: 小气

小气 — xiǎoqì — "stingy; mean (with money)".

他很小气 tā hěn xiǎoqì — He's stingy.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 小气 (xiǎoqì) is built from 小 'small' and 气 'breath', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjewX and khj+jH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'breath'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: xiǎoqì
- Say it: xiǎoqì, once more

- Say it: tā hěn xiǎoqì — He's stingy.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for brave, then the Mandarin for generous, then say xiǎoqì again

Before you move on

What does 小气 mean? ("Stingy; mean (with money)".) Say it once more.

265.5 jǐnzhāng — nervous; tense

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for generous, then the Mandarin for stingy.

You'll want to know: jǐnzhāng

jǐnzhāng — "nervous; tense".

míngtiān kǎoshì wǒ hěn jǐnzhāng — I have an exam tomorrow, and I'm nervous.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jǐnzhāng is built from jǐn 'tight' and zhāng 'to stretch', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kjinX and trjang (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'tightly bound' and the second 'to stretch out'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: jǐnzhāng
- Say it: jǐnzhāng, once more
- Say it: míngtiān kǎoshì wǒ hěn jǐnzhāng — I have an exam tomorrow, and I'm nervous.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for generous, then the Mandarin for stingy, then say jǐnzhāng again

Before you move on

What does jǐnzhāng mean? ("Nervous; tense".) Say it once more.

265.6 Looking back: from What I Can Do to Shy or Brave

Say the Mandarin for ability and what someone is capable of.

Your turn

- Say it: ability, what someone is capable of, an expert, technique, to make progress
- Say it: know-how, at one time, to study abroad, overseas, to experience for yourself
- Say it: tennis, table tennis, an opponent, to defeat, to cheer someone on
- Say it: a manager, to be in charge, to ask for time off, sick leave, annual leave
- Say it: to turn down, a shame, sorry to say, afraid that, as a matter of fact
- Say it: shy, brave, generous, stingy, nervous
- Read it: 假 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

Ability? (nénglì.) What someone is capable of? (本事, běnshi.) An expert? (高手, gāoshǒu.) Technique? (jìshù.) To make progress? (jìnbù.) Know-how? (jīngyàn.) At one time? (céngjīng.) To study abroad? (liúxué.) Overseas? (国外, guówài.) To experience for yourself? (tǐyàn.) Tennis? (wǎngqiú.) Table tennis? (pīngpāngqiú.) An opponent? (对手, duìshǒu.) To defeat? (dǎbài.) To cheer someone on? (jiāyóu.) A manager? (jīnglǐ.) To be in charge? (fùzé.) To ask for time off? (请假, qǐngjià.) Sick leave? (病假, bìngjià.) Annual leave? (年假, niánjià.) To turn down? (jùjué.) A shame? (kěxī.) Sorry to say? (bàoqiàn.) Afraid that? (kǒngpà.) As a matter of fact? (qíshí.) Shy? (hàixiū.) Brave? (yǒnggǎn.) Generous? (dàfang.) Stingy? (小气, xiǎoqì.) Nervous? (jǐnzhāng.)

Chapter 266

Grown-Ups and Children

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about grown-ups, babies, boys and girls, and middle age.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 266: I can talk about grown-ups, babies, boys and girls, and middle age.

266.1 大人 (dàren) — adult; grown-up

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for stingy, then the Mandarin for nervous.

You'll want to know: 大人

大人 — dàren — "adult; grown-up".

> 大人和小孩都来了 dàren hé xiǎohái dōu lái le — The grown-ups and the children have all come.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 大人 (dàren) is built from 大 'big' and 人 'a person', both inherited from Middle Chinese, daH and nyin (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: dàren
- Say it: dàren, once more
- Say it: dàren hé xiǎohái dōu lái le — The grown-ups and the children have all come.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for stingy, then the Mandarin for nervous, then say dàren again

Before you move on

What does 大人 mean? ("Adult; grown-up".) Say it once more.

266.2 bǎobao — baby; darling (said to a small child)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for nervous, then the Mandarin for a grown-up.

You'll want to know: bǎobao

bǎobao — "baby; darling (said to a small child)".

wǒ jiějie de bǎobao hěn kě'ài — My sister's baby is really cute.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bǎobao is built from bǎo 'a treasure', said twice, the second time with no tone. It is inherited from Middle Chinese pawX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a treasure'; its use for a baby is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: bǎobao
- Say it: bǎobao, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiějie de bǎobao hěn kě'ài — My sister's baby is really cute.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for nervous, then the Mandarin for a grown-up, then say bǎobao again

Before you move on

What does bǎobao mean? ("Baby; darling (said to a small child)".) Say it once more.

266.3 男孩 (nánhái) — boy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a grown-up, then the Mandarin for a baby.

You'll want to know: 男孩

男孩 — nánhái — "boy".

那个男孩很高 nàge nánhái hěn gāo — That boy is tall.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 男孩 (nánhái) is built from 男 'male' and 孩 'a child', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nom and hoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: nánhái
- Say it: nánhái, once more

- Say it: nàge nánhái hěn gāo — That boy is tall.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a grown-up, then the Mandarin for a baby, then say nánhái again

Before you move on

What does 男孩 mean? ("Boy".) Say it once more.

266.4 女孩 (nǚhái) — girl

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a baby, then the Mandarin for a boy.

You'll want to know: 女孩

女孩 — nǚhái — "girl".

这个女孩很喜欢读书 zhège nǚhái hěn xǐhuan dúshū — This girl loves studying.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 女孩 (nǚhái) is built from 女 'female' and 孩 'a child', both inherited from Middle Chinese, nrjoX and hoj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: nǚhái
- Say it: nǚhái, once more
- Say it: zhège nǚhái hěn xǐhuan dúshū — This girl loves studying.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a baby, then the Mandarin for a boy, then say nǚhái again

Before you move on

What does 女孩 mean? ("Girl".) Say it once more.

266.5 中年 (zhōngnián) — middle age

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a boy, then the Mandarin for a girl.

You'll want to know: 中年

中年 — zhōngnián — "middle age".

tā bù lǎo shì zhōngnián rén — He isn't old; he's middle-aged.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 中年 (zhōngnián) is built from 中 'middle' and 年 'a year', both inherited from Middle Chinese, trjuwng and nen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: zhōngnián
- Say it: zhōngnián, once more
- Say it: tā bù lǎo shì zhōngnián rén — He isn't old; he's middle-aged.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a boy, then the Mandarin for a girl, then say zhōngnián again

Before you move on

What does 中年 mean? ("Middle age".) Say it once more.

Chapter 267

Actors and Jokes

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 4 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about actors, TV shows and stars, and jokes that are funny.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 267: I can talk about actors, TV shows and stars, and jokes that are funny.

267.1 yǎnyuán — actor; performer

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a girl, then the Mandarin for middle age.

You'll want to know: yǎnyuán

yǎnyuán — "actor; performer".

> tā shì yí ge hěn hǎo de yǎnyuán — He's a very good actor.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǎnyuán is built from yǎn and yuán, both inherited from Middle Chinese, yenX and hjwen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'wide' and quotes an older dictionary for the second, 'a number of things'. The senses 'to perform' and 'a member' are not given there, so how the pair came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: yǎnyuán
- Say it: yǎnyuán, once more
- Say it: tā shì yí ge hěn hǎo de yǎnyuán — He's a very good actor.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a girl, then the Mandarin for middle age, then say yǎnyuán again

Before you move on

What does yǎnyuán mean? ("Actor; performer".) Say it once more.

267.2 jiémù — programme; TV show

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for middle age, then the Mandarin for an actor.

You'll want to know: jiémù

jiémù — "programme; TV show".

zhège jiémù hěn hǎokàn — This show is really good.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiémù is built from 节 and mù, both inherited from Middle Chinese, tset and mjuwk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which quotes an older dictionary for the first, 'a joint of bamboo', and glosses the second 'the eye'. How the pair came to mean a programme is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: jiémù
- Say it: jiémù, once more
- Say it: zhège jiémù hěn hǎokàn — This show is really good.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for middle age, then the Mandarin for an actor, then say jiémù again

Before you move on

What does jiémù mean? ("Programme; TV show".) Say it once more.

267.3 明星 (míngxīng) — star; celebrity

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an actor, then the Mandarin for a TV show.

You'll want to know: 明星

明星 — míngxīng — "star; celebrity".

他是一个大明星 tā shì yí ge dà míngxīng — He's a big star.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 明星 (míngxīng) is built from 明 'bright' and 星 'a star', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjaeng and seng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'light' and the second 'a star in the sky'.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: míngxīng
- Say it: míngxīng, once more

- Say it: tā shì yí ge dà míngxīng — He's a big star.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an actor, then the Mandarin for a TV show, then say míngxīng again

Before you move on

What does 明星 mean? ("Star; celebrity".) Say it once more.

267.4 笑话 (xiàohua) — joke

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a TV show, then the Mandarin for a celebrity.

You'll want to know: 笑话

笑话 — xiàohua — "joke".

他说了一个笑话 tā shuōle yí ge xiàohua — He told a joke.

The new character, in pieces: 笑 — ten strokes: two small pieces on top, each a short stroke falling to the left, a short bar and a dot; under them a short stroke falling to the left, then 大. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 笑话 (xiàohua) is built from 笑 'to laugh' and 话 'talk', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjewH and hwaejH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'glad' and the second 'speech'. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: xiàohua
- Say it: xiàohua, once more
- Say it: tā shuōle yí ge xiàohua — He told a joke.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for a TV show, then the Mandarin for a celebrity, then say xiàohua again

Before you move on

What does 笑话 mean? (“Joke”.) Say it once more.

267.5 笑 — two small pieces over a short fall and 大

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xiàohua — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

大 天

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — dà, tiān

Script — two small pieces over a short fall and 大

How 笑 is written, stroke by stroke

笑

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The top piece, six strokes: two small pieces side by side, each three strokes. A short stroke falling to the left, a short bar to the right from it, then a dot under the bar. Then the same three again on the right.

The bottom piece, four strokes. A short stroke falling to the left across the top. Then 大: a long bar, a stroke falling to the left, and a stroke falling to the right.

6 + 4 = ten.

Your turn

- Write it: 笑, all ten, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 笑? (Ten.) How many small pieces sit on top? (Two, three strokes each.) Which character ends it? (大.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 笑, pinned stroke paths and medians.

267.6 好笑 (hǎoxiào) — funny

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a celebrity, then the Mandarin for a joke.

You'll want to know: 好笑

好笑 — hǎoxiào — "funny".

这个笑话很好笑 zhège xiàohua hěn hǎoxiào — This joke is really funny.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 好笑 (hǎoxiào) is built from 好 'good' and 笑 'to laugh', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xawX and sjewH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription): good to laugh at, the way 好吃 is good to eat.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: hǎoxiào
- Say it: hǎoxiào, once more
- Say it: zhège xiàohua hěn hǎoxiào — This joke is really funny.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a celebrity, then the Mandarin for a joke, then say hǎoxiào again

Before you move on

What does 好笑 mean? ("Funny".) Say it once more.

Chapter 268

Exams

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can sign up for an exam, talk about an oral exam, passing and the answers, and ask for an explanation.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 268: I can sign up for an exam, talk about an oral exam, passing and the answers, and ask for an explanation.

268.1 bàomíng — to sign up; to enter (one's name)

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a joke, then the Mandarin for funny.

You'll want to know: bàomíng

bàomíng — "to sign up; to enter (one's name)".

> nǐ bàomíng le ma — Have you signed up?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of bàomíng is built from bào 'to report' and 名 'a name', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pawH and mjieng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to report'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: bàomíng
- Say it: bàomíng, once more
- Say it: nǐ bàomíng le ma — Have you signed up?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a joke, then the Mandarin for funny, then say bàomíng again

Before you move on

What does bàomíng mean? ("To sign up; to enter (one's name)".) Say it once more.

268.2 口试 (kǒushì) — oral exam

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for funny, then the Mandarin for to sign up.

You'll want to know: 口试

口试 — kǒushì — "oral exam".

明天我们学校有口试 míngtiān wǒmen xuéxiào yǒu kǒushì — Our school has oral exams tomorrow.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 口试 (kǒushì) is built from 口 'the mouth' and 试 'a test', both inherited from Middle Chinese, khuwX and syiH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to use'. The sense 'a test' is not given there.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: kǒushì
- Say it: kǒushì, once more
- Say it: míngtiān wǒmen xuéxiào yǒu kǒushì — Our school has oral exams tomorrow.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for funny, then the Mandarin for to sign up, then say kǒushì again

Before you move on

What does 口试 mean? ("Oral exam".) Say it once more.

268.3 jígé — to pass an exam

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to sign up, then the Mandarin for an oral exam.

You'll want to know: jígé

jígé — "to pass an exam".

tā kǎoshì méi jígé — He didn't pass the exam.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jígé is built from jí 'to reach' and gé 'a standard', both inherited from Middle Chinese, gip and kaek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to reach' and the second 'a model' and 'a measure'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jígé
- Say it: jígé, once more
- Say it: tā kǎoshì méi jígé — He didn't pass the exam.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to sign up, then the Mandarin for an oral exam, then say jígé again

Before you move on

What does jígé mean? ("To pass an exam".) Say it once more.

268.4 dá'àn — answer to a question

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an oral exam, then the Mandarin for to pass an exam.

You'll want to know: dá'àn

dá'àn — "answer to a question".

nǐ de dá'àn duì le — Your answer is right.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dá'àn is built from dá 'to answer' and àn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, top and 'anH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to match' and the second 'a low table'. How the pair came to mean an answer is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: dá'àn
- Say it: dá'àn, once more
- Say it: nǐ de dá'àn duì le — Your answer is right.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an oral exam, then the Mandarin for to pass an exam, then say dá'àn again

Before you move on

What does dá'àn mean? ("Answer to a question".) Say it once more.

268.5 jiěshì — to explain

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to pass an exam, then the Mandarin for the answer to a question.

You'll want to know: jiěshì

jiěshì — "to explain".

zhège dá'àn nǐ néng jiěshì ma — Can you explain this answer?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiěshì is built from jiě and shì, both inherited from Middle Chinese, keaX and syek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to explain' and 'to untie', and the second 'to let go' and 'to untie'.

What you've built

One more word for saying what I do.

Your turn

- Say it: jiěshì
- Say it: jiěshì, once more

- Say it: zhège dá'àn nǐ néng jiěshì ma — Can you explain this answer?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to pass an exam, then the Mandarin for the answer to a question, then say jiěshì again

Before you move on

What does jiěshì mean? ("To explain".) Say it once more.

Chapter 269

When I Was Little

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I have done since childhood, what comes first, what my childhood was like, what I meant to do, and talk about toys.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 269: I can say what I have done since childhood, what comes first, what my childhood was like, what I meant to do, and talk about toys.

269.1 从小 (cóngxiǎo) — since childhood; since I was little

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for the answer to a question, then the Mandarin for to explain.

You'll want to know: 从小

从小 — cóngxiǎo — "since childhood; since I was little".

> 我从小喜欢看书 wǒ cóngxiǎo xǐhuan kànshū — I've loved books since I was little.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 从小 (cóngxiǎo) is built from 从 'from' and 小 'small', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzjowng and sjewX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: cóngxiǎo
- Say it: cóngxiǎo, once more
- Say it: wǒ cóngxiǎo xǐhuan kànshū — I've loved books since I was little.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for the answer to a question, then the Mandarin for to explain, then say cóngxiǎo again

Before you move on

What does 从小 mean? ("Since childhood; since I was little".) Say it once more.

269.2 先 (xiān) — first; before anything else

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to explain, then the Mandarin for since childhood.

You'll want to know: 先

先 — xiān — "first; before anything else".

我们先吃饭 wǒmen xiān chīfàn — Let's eat first.

The new character, in pieces: 先 — six strokes: a short stroke falling to the left, a short bar, a vertical and a long bar; then 儿 at the foot. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 先 (xiān) is inherited from Middle Chinese sen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'before and after'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: xiān
- Say it: xiān, once more
- Say it: wǒmen xiān chīfàn — Let's eat first.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to explain, then the Mandarin for since childhood, then say xiān again

Before you move on

What does 先 mean? ("First; before anything else".) Say it once more.

269.3 先 — a cross and a long bar, over 儿

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say xiān — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

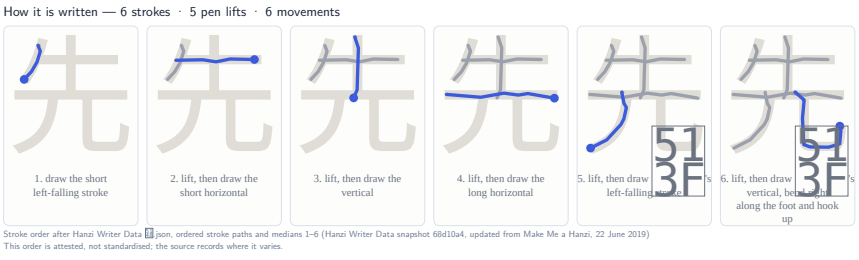
  儿 生

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — ér, shēng

Script — a cross and a long bar, over 儿



How 先 is written, stroke by stroke

先

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The top piece, four strokes. A short stroke falling to the left. A short bar to the right of it. A vertical down through the bar. Then a long bar across, wider than everything above it.

The bottom piece, 儿, two strokes, as on its own: a stroke falling to the left, then a vertical that bends to the right along the foot and hooks up.

4 + 2 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 先, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 先? (Six.) What sits at the foot? (儿.) Which bar is longer? (The second, across the middle.) Source: Hanzi Writer Data 先, pinned stroke paths and medians.

269.4 tóngnián — childhood

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for since childhood, then the Mandarin for before anything else.

You'll want to know: tóngnián

tóngnián — "childhood".

wǒ de tóngnián hěn kuàilè — I had a very happy childhood.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tóngnián is built from tóng 'a child' and 年 'a year', both inherited from Middle Chinese, duwng and nen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first as a young person who does not yet have a household.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: tóngnián
- Say it: tóngnián, once more
- Say it: wǒ de tóngnián hěn kuàilè — I had a very happy childhood.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for since childhood, then the Mandarin for before anything else, then say tóngnián again

Before you move on

What does tóngnián mean? ("Childhood".) Say it once more.

269.5 本来 (běnlái) — originally; at first

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for before anything else, then the Mandarin for childhood.

You'll want to know: 本来

本来 — běnlái — "originally; at first".

我本来想先吃饭 wǒ běnlái xiǎng xiān chīfàn — I'd meant to eat first.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 本来 (běnlái) is built from 本 'the root' and 来 'to come', both inherited from Middle Chinese, pwonX and loj (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'the root' and 'the beginning'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: běnlái
- Say it: běnlái, once more
- Say it: wǒ běnlái xiǎng xiān chīfàn — I'd meant to eat first.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for before anything else, then the Mandarin for childhood, then say běnlái again

Before you move on

What does 本来 mean? ("Originally; at first".) Say it once more.

269.6 wánjù — toy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for childhood, then the Mandarin for originally.

You'll want to know: wánjù

wánjù — "toy".

zhège wánjù hěn yǒu yìsi — This toy is a lot of fun.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wánjù is built from wán 'to play' and jù, both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngwanH and gjuH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to toy with' and the second 'to provide'. Middle Chinese ngwanH would regularly give wàn; the rising tone of wán is irregular.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: wánjù
- Say it: wánjù, once more
- Say it: zhège wánjù hěn yǒu yìsi — This toy is a lot of fun.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for childhood, then the Mandarin for originally, then say wánjù again

Before you move on

What does wánjù mean? (“Toy”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 270

Do You Agree?

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I agree or that I am against something, that I am in favour, that I am behind someone, and that I believe them.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 270: I can say I agree or that I am against something, that I am in favour, that I am behind someone, and that I believe them.

270.1 tóngyì — to agree

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for originally, then the Mandarin for a toy.

You'll want to know: tóngyì

tóngyì — "to agree".

> nǐ tóngyì ma — Do you agree?

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tóngyì is built from 同 'the same' and yì 'a mind', both inherited from Middle Chinese, duwng and 'iH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'will': to be of one mind.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: tóngyì
- Say it: tóngyì, once more
- Say it: nǐ tóngyì ma — Do you agree?
- Recall: say the Mandarin for originally, then the Mandarin for a toy, then say tóngyì again

Before you move on

What does tóngyì mean? ("To agree".) Say it once more.

270.2 fǎnduì — to be against; to oppose

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a toy, then the Mandarin for to agree.

You'll want to know: fǎnduì fǎnduì — "to be against; to oppose".

wǒ bù fǎnduì — I'm not against it.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of fǎnduì is built from fǎn and 对, both inherited from Middle Chinese, pjonX and twojH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to turn over' and 'contrary', and the second 'to answer'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: fǎnduì
- Say it: fǎnduì, once more
- Say it: wǒ bù fǎnduì — I'm not against it.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a toy, then the Mandarin for to agree, then say fǎnduì again

Before you move on

What does fǎnduì mean? ("To be against; to oppose".) Say it once more.

270.3 zànchéng — to approve of; to be in favour

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to agree, then the Mandarin for to be against.

You'll want to know: zànchéng

zànchéng — "to approve of; to be in favour".

dàjiā dōu zànchéng — Everyone's in favour.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zànchéng is built from zàn 'to assist' and chéng 'to complete', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsanH and dzyeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to assist' and the second 'to finish'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: zànchéng
- Say it: zànchéng, once more
- Say it: dàjiā dōu zànchéng — Everyone's in favour.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to agree, then the Mandarin for to be against, then say zànchéng again

Before you move on

What does zànchéng mean? ("To approve of; to be in favour".) Say it once more.

270.4 zhīchí — to support; to back

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be against, then the Mandarin for to be in favour.

You'll want to know: zhīchí

zhīchí — "to support; to back".

wǒ zhīchí nǐ — I'm behind you.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of zhīchí is built from zhī and chí 'to hold', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsye and dri (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first with this very word and the second 'to hold'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: zhīchí
- Say it: zhīchí, once more
- Say it: wǒ zhīchí nǐ — I'm behind you.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be against, then the Mandarin for to be in favour, then say zhīchí again

Before you move on

What does zhīchí mean? ("To support; to back".) Say it once more.

270.5 xiāngxìn — to believe; to trust

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to be in favour, then the Mandarin for to back someone up.

You'll want to know: xiāngxìn

xiāngxìn — "to believe; to trust".

wǒ xiāngxìn nǐ — I believe you.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiāngxìn is built from xiāng 'each other' and xìn 'to trust', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sjang and sinH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'together' and the second 'faithful'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: xiāngxìn
- Say it: xiāngxìn, once more
- Say it: wǒ xiāngxìn nǐ — I believe you.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to be in favour, then the Mandarin for to back someone up, then say xiāngxìn again

Before you move on

What does xiāngxìn mean? ("To believe; to trust".) Say it once more.

Chapter 271

Moods

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I am worked up, moved, taken aback or bored, or that something is on my mind.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 271: I can say I am worked up, moved, taken aback or bored, or that something is on my mind.

271.1 jīdòng — excited; worked up

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to back someone up, then the Mandarin for to believe.

You'll want to know: jīdòng

jīdòng — "excited; worked up".

> tā hěn jīdòng — He's very excited.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jīdòng is built from jī and dòng 'to move', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kek and duwngX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'a rushing wave' and the second 'to stir'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: jīdòng
- Say it: jīdòng, once more
- Say it: tā hěn jīdòng — He's very excited.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to back someone up, then the Mandarin for to believe, then say jīdòng again

Before you move on

What does jīdòng mean? ("Excited; worked up".) Say it once more.

271.2 gǎndòng — to move; to touch someone's heart

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to believe, then the Mandarin for worked up.

You'll want to know: gǎndòng

gǎndòng — "to move; to touch someone's heart".

zhège gùshi gǎndòngle dàjiā — This story moved everyone.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of gǎndòng is built from gǎn and dòng, both inherited from Middle Chinese, komX and duwngX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to move' and the second 'to stir'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: gǎndòng
- Say it: gǎndòng, once more
- Say it: zhège gùshi gǎndòngle dàjiā — This story moved everyone.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to believe, then the Mandarin for worked up, then say gǎndòng again

Before you move on

What does gǎndòng mean? ("To move; to touch someone's heart".) Say it once more.

271.3 chījīng — surprised; taken aback

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for worked up, then the Mandarin for to touch someone's heart.

You'll want to know: chījīng

chījīng — "surprised; taken aback".

wǒ hěn chījīng — I'm surprised.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chījīng is built from 吃 'to eat' and jīng 'a fright'. The second is inherited from Middle Chinese kjaeng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'to fear' and, after an older dictionary, 'a horse taking fright'; how eating a fright came to mean surprise is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: chījīng
- Say it: chījīng, once more
- Say it: wǒ hěn chījīng — I'm surprised.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for worked up, then the Mandarin for to touch someone's heart, then say chījīng again

Before you move on

What does chījīng mean? ("Surprised; taken aback".) Say it once more.

271.4 wúliáo — bored; boring

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to touch someone's heart, then the Mandarin for taken aback.

You'll want to know: wúliáo

wúliáo — "bored; boring".

zhège jiémù hěn wúliáo — This show is boring.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of wúliáo is built from wú 'not to have' and liáo, both inherited from Middle Chinese, mju and lew (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to have or not have' and calls the second a particle. How the pair came to mean bored is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: wúliáo
- Say it: wúliáo, once more
- Say it: zhège jiémù hěn wúliáo — This show is boring.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to touch someone's heart, then the Mandarin for taken aback, then say wúliáo again

Before you move on

What does wúliáo mean? ("Bored; boring".) Say it once more.

271.5 心事 (xīnshì) — something on your mind; a worry

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for taken aback, then the Mandarin for bored.

You'll want to know: 心事

心事 — xīnshì — "something on your mind; a worry".

他今天不笑有心事 tā jīntiān bú xiào yǒu xīnshì — He hasn't smiled today; something's on his mind.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 心事 (xīnshì) is built from 心 'the heart' and 事 'an affair', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sim and dzriH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: xīnshì

- Say it: xīnshì, once more
- Say it: tā jīntiān bú xiào yǒu xīnshì — He hasn't smiled today; something's on his mind.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for taken aback, then the Mandarin for bored, then say xīnshì again

Before you move on

What does 心事 mean? ("Something on your mind; a worry".) Say it once more.

271.6 Looking back: from Grown-Ups and Children to Moods

Say the Mandarin for a grown-up and a baby.

Your turn

- Say it: a grown-up, a baby, a boy, a girl, middle age
- Say it: an actor, a TV show, a celebrity, a joke, funny
- Say it: to sign up, an oral exam, to pass an exam, the answer to a question, to explain
- Say it: since childhood, before anything else, childhood, originally, a toy
- Say it: to agree, to be against, to be in favour, to back someone up, to believe
- Say it: worked up, to touch someone's heart, taken aback, bored, something on your mind
- Read it: 笑 先 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

A grown-up? (大人, dàren.) A baby? (bǎobao.) A boy? (男孩, nánhái.) A girl? (女孩, nǚhái.) Middle age? (中年, zhōngnián.) An actor? (yǎnyuán.) A TV show? (jiémù.) A celebrity? (明星, míngxīng.) A joke? (笑话, xiàohua.) Funny? (好笑, hǎoxiào.) To sign up? (bàomíng.) An oral exam? (口试, kǒushì.) To pass an exam? (jígé.) The answer to a question? (dá'àn.) To explain? (jiěshì.) Since childhood? (从小, cóngxiǎo.) Before anything else? (先, xiān.) Childhood? (tóngnián.) Originally? (本来, běnlái.) A toy? (wánjù.) To agree? (tóngyì.) To be against? (fǎnduì.) To be in favour? (zànchéng.) To back someone up? (zhīchí.) To believe? (xiāngxìn.) Worked up? (jīdòng.) To touch someone's heart? (gǎndòng.) Taken aback? (chījīng.) Bored? (wúliáo.) Something on your mind? (心事, xīnshì.)

Chapter 272

Husband and Wife

Modes: voice (5) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about a husband and a wife, my grandfather on my mother's side, and an uncle and an auntie.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 272: I can talk about a husband and a wife, my grandfather on my mother's side, and an uncle and an auntie.

272.1 qīzi — wife

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for bored, then the Mandarin for something on your mind.

You'll want to know: qīzi

qīzi — "wife".

> tā de qīzi shì yīshēng — His wife is a doctor.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qīzi is built from qī and 子, both inherited from Middle Chinese, tshej and tsiX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'equal'. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: qīzi
- Say it: qīzi, once more
- Say it: tā de qīzi shì yīshēng — His wife is a doctor.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for bored, then the Mandarin for something on your mind, then say qīzi again

Before you move on

What does qīzi mean? ("Wife".) Say it once more.

272.2 老公 (lǎogōng) — hubby; husband (informal)

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for something on your mind, then the Mandarin for a wife.

You'll want to know: 老公

老公 — lǎogōng — "hubby; husband (informal)".

我老公先回家了 wǒ lǎogōng xiān huí jiā le — My husband has gone home ahead of me.

The new character, in pieces: 老 — six strokes: a short bar, a vertical and a long bar, then a long stroke falling to the left; under them a short stroke falling to the left and a vertical that bends right and hooks up, the right half of 比. The next lesson puts it in your hand.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 老公 (lǎogōng) is built from 老 'old' and 公, both inherited from Middle Chinese, lawX and kuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'aged' and the second, among other senses, 'a father' and 'an official'. How the pair came to mean a husband is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: lǎogōng
- Say it: lǎogōng, once more
- Say it: wǒ lǎogōng xiān huí jiā le — My husband has gone home ahead of me.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for something on your mind, then the Mandarin for a wife, then say lǎogōng again

Before you move on

What does 老公 mean? ("Hubby; husband (informal)".) Say it once more.

272.3 老 — a cross and a long fall, over the right half of 比

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say lǎogōng — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

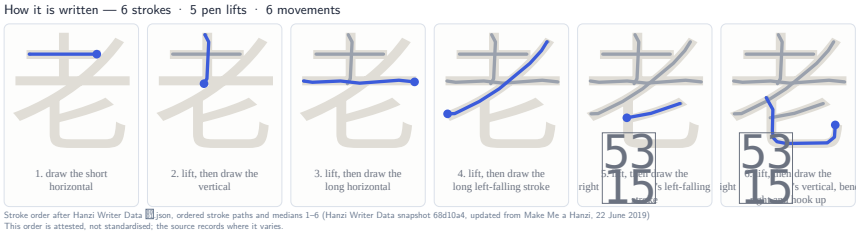
  比 公

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — bǐ, gōng

Script — a cross and a long fall, over the right half of 比



How 老 is written, stroke by stroke

老

Two pieces, top before bottom.

The top piece, four strokes. A short bar. A vertical down through it. A long bar under them. Then a long stroke from the upper right falling all the way to the lower left.

The bottom piece, two strokes, the right half of 比: a short stroke falling to the left, then a vertical that bends to the right along the foot and hooks up.

4 + 2 = six.

Your turn

- Write it: 老, all six, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 老? (Six.) Which stroke runs across the whole character? (The long fall to the left.) Where have you made the last two strokes? (On the right of 比.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 老, pinned stroke paths and medians.

272.4 外公 (wàigōng) — grandpa on the mother's side

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a wife, then the Mandarin for hubby.

You'll want to know: 外公

外公 — wàigōng — "grandpa on the mother's side".

外公很热心 wàigōng hěn rèxīn — My grandpa is very warm-hearted.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 外公 (wàigōng) is built from 外 'outside' and 公 'a father', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngwajH and kuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second, among other senses, 'a father'.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: wàigōng
- Say it: wàigōng, once more
- Say it: wàigōng hěn rèxīn — My grandpa is very warm-hearted.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a wife, then the Mandarin for hubby, then say wàigōng again

Before you move on

What does 外公 mean? ("Grandpa on the mother's side".) Say it once more.

272.5 shūshu — uncle; father's younger brother

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hubby, then the Mandarin for grandpa on the mother's side.

You'll want to know: shūshu

shūshu — "uncle; father's younger brother".

> wǒ shūshu shì diàngōng — My uncle is an electrician.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shūshu is built from shū, said twice, the second time with no tone. It is inherited from Middle Chinese syuwk (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), glossed 'a father's youngest brother'.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: shūshu
- Say it: shūshu, once more
- Say it: wǒ shūshu shì diàngōng — My uncle is an electrician.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hubby, then the Mandarin for grandpa on the mother's side, then say shūshu again

Before you move on

What does shūshu mean? ("Uncle; father's younger brother".) Say it once more.

272.6 āyí — auntie; mother's sister

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for grandpa on the mother's side, then the Mandarin for an uncle.

You'll want to know: āyí

āyí — "auntie; mother's sister".

> nàge āyí shì wǒ māma de péngyou — That lady is a friend of my mum's.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of āyí is built from ā, a friendly prefix, and yí 'a mother's sister', both inherited from Middle Chinese, 'a and yij (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a mother's sister'. The dictionary gives the first only as 'a bend' and 'a hill', so its use before names is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I have and can do.

Your turn

- Say it: āyí
- Say it: āyí, once more
- Say it: nàge āyí shì wǒ māma de péngyou — That lady is a friend of my mum's.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for grandpa on the mother's side, then the Mandarin for an uncle, then say āyí again

Before you move on

What does āyí mean? ("Auntie; mother's sister".) Say it once more.

Chapter 273

Honest and Careful

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that someone is honest, hospitable, careless, or careful and attentive.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 273: I can say that someone is honest, hospitable, careless, or careful and attentive.

273.1 chéngshí — honest

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an uncle, then the Mandarin for an auntie.

You'll want to know: chéngshí

chéngshí — "honest".

> tā shì yí ge chéngshí de rén — He's an honest person.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of chéngshí is built from chéng and shí, both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzyeng and zyit (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'trustworthy' and the second 'full' and 'sincere'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: chéngshí
- Say it: chéngshí, once more
- Say it: tā shì yí ge chéngshí de rén — He's an honest person.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an uncle, then the Mandarin for an auntie, then say chéngshí again

Before you move on

What does chéngshí mean? ("Honest".) Say it once more.

273.2 好客 (hàokè) — hospitable

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an auntie, then the Mandarin for honest.

You'll want to know: 好客

好客 — hàokè — "hospitable".

tāmen jiā fēicháng hàokè — Their family is very hospitable.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 好客 (hàokè) is built from 好, here said with a falling tone, 'to be fond of', and 客 'a guest', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xawH and khaek (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'a guest'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: hàokè
- Say it: hàokè, once more
- Say it: tāmen jiā fēicháng hàokè — Their family is very hospitable.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an auntie, then the Mandarin for honest, then say hàokè again

Before you move on

What does 好客 mean? ("Hospitable".) Say it once more.

273.3 用心 (yòngxīn) — attentive; putting your heart into it

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for honest, then the Mandarin for hospitable.

You'll want to know: 用心

用心 — yòngxīn — "attentive; putting your heart into it".

我老公工作很用心 wǒ lǎogōng gōngzuò hěn yòngxīn — My husband puts his heart into his work.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 用心 (yòngxīn) is built from 用 'to use' and 心 'the heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, yowngH and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: yòngxīn
- Say it: yòngxīn, once more
- Say it: wǒ lǎogōng gōngzuò hěn yòngxīn — My husband puts his heart into his work.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for honest, then the Mandarin for hospitable, then say yòngxīn again

Before you move on

What does 用心 mean? ("Attentive; putting your heart into it".) Say it once more.

273.4 cūxīn — careless

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for hospitable, then the Mandarin for putting your heart into it.

You'll want to know: cūxīn

cūxīn — "careless".

nǐ tài cūxīn le — You're so careless.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cūxīn is built from cū 'coarse' and 心 'the heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, dzuX and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'rough'. Middle Chinese dzuX would regularly give zù; the initial and the level tone of cū are irregular.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: cūxīn
- Say it: cūxīn, once more
- Say it: nǐ tài cūxīn le — You're so careless.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for hospitable, then the Mandarin for putting your heart into it, then say cūxīn again

Before you move on

What does cūxīn mean? ("Careless".) Say it once more.

273.5 xìxīn — careful; attentive to detail

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for putting your heart into it, then the Mandarin for careless.

You'll want to know: xìxīn

xìxīn — "careful; attentive to detail".

tā gōngzuò hěn xìxīn — She's very careful in her work.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xìxīn is built from xì 'fine' and 忄 'the heart', both inherited from Middle Chinese, sejH and sim (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'small'.

What you've built

One more word for describing things.

Your turn

- Say it: xìxīn
- Say it: xìxīn, once more

- Say it: tā gōngzuò hěn xìxīn — She's very careful in her work.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for putting your heart into it, then the Mandarin for careless, then say xìxīn again

Before you move on

What does xìxīn mean? ("Careful; attentive to detail".) Say it once more.

Chapter 274

Free Time

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about skating, collecting things, what is all the rage, handicrafts and sports fans.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 274: I can talk about skating, collecting things, what is all the rage, handicrafts and sports fans.

274.1 huábīng — to ice-skate

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for careless, then the Mandarin for careful with details.

You'll want to know: huábīng

huábīng — "to ice-skate".

> dōngtiān wǒmen qù huábīng — In winter we go skating.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of huábīng is built from huá 'slippery' and bīng 'ice', both inherited from Middle Chinese, hweat and ping (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'smooth' and quotes an older dictionary for the second, 'frozen water'.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: huábīng
- Say it: huábīng, once more
- Say it: dōngtiān wǒmen qù huábīng — In winter we go skating.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for careless, then the Mandarin for careful with details, then say huábīng again

Before you move on

What does huábīng mean? ("To ice-skate".) Say it once more.

274.2 shōují — to collect things

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for careful with details, then the Mandarin for to ice-skate.

You'll want to know: shōují

shōují — "to collect things".

wǒ xǐhuan shōují yóupiào — I like collecting stamps.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shōují is built from shōu 'to gather in' and jí 'to assemble', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syuw and dzip (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to gather in' and the second 'to gather'.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: shōují
- Say it: shōují, once more
- Say it: wǒ xǐhuan shōují yóupiào — I like collecting stamps.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for careful with details, then the Mandarin for to ice-skate, then say shōují again

Before you move on

What does shōují mean? (“To collect things”.) Say it once more.

274.3 热门 (rèmén) — popular; all the rage

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to ice-skate, then the Mandarin for to collect things.

You’ll want to know: 热门

热门 — rèmén — “popular; all the rage”.

这本小说很热门 zhè běn xiǎoshuō hěn rèmén — This novel is all the rage.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 热门 (rèmén) is built from 热 ’hot’ and 门 ’a door’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyet and mwon (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription). How a hot door came to mean something popular is not settled.

What you’ve built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: rèmén
- Say it: rèmén, once more

- Say it: zhè běn xiǎoshuō hěn rèmén — This novel is all the rage.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to ice-skate, then the Mandarin for to collect things, then say rèmén again

Before you move on

What does 热门 mean? ("Popular; all the rage".) Say it once more.

274.4 手工 (shǒugōng) — handicraft; things made by hand

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to collect things, then the Mandarin for all the rage.

You'll want to know: 手工

手工 — shǒugōng — "handicraft; things made by hand".

我们先做手工 wǒmen xiān zuò shǒugōng — Let's do the crafts first.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 手工 (shǒugōng) is built from 手 'the hand' and 工 'work', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syuwX and kuwng (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: shǒugōng
- Say it: shǒugōng, once more
- Say it: wǒmen xiān zuò shǒugōng — Let's do the crafts first.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to collect things, then the Mandarin for all the rage, then say shǒugōng again

Before you move on

What does 手工 mean? (“Handicraft; things made by hand”.) Say it once more.

274.5 qiúmí — sports fan

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for all the rage, then the Mandarin for handicrafts.

You’ll want to know: qiúmí

qiúmí — “sports fan”.

wǒ bàba shì yí ge qiúmí — My dad is a big sports fan.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of qiúmí is built from qiú ’a ball’ and mí, both inherited from Middle Chinese, gjuw and mej (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), which glosses the second ’to be led astray’.

What you’ve built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: qiúmí
- Say it: qiúmí, once more
- Say it: wǒ bàba shì yí ge qiúmí — My dad is a big sports fan.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for all the rage, then the Mandarin for handicrafts, then say qiúmí again

Before you move on

What does qiúmí mean? (“Sports fan”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 275

Saying Sorry

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can apologise, forgive, say yes to a request, accept an apology, and say it is up to you.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 275: I can apologise, forgive, say yes to a request, accept an apology, and say it is up to you.

275.1 dàoqiàn — to apologise

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for handicrafts, then the Mandarin for a sports fan.

You'll want to know: dàoqiàn

dàoqiàn — "to apologise".

> tā dàoqiàn le — He apologised.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dàoqiàn is built from dào and qiàn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, dawX and kheamH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'a road' and 'a principle'. It gives the second other senses; how the pair came to mean an apology is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: dàoqiàn
- Say it: dàoqiàn, once more
- Say it: tā dàoqiàn le — He apologised.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for handicrafts, then the Mandarin for a sports fan, then say dàoqiàn again

Before you move on

What does dàoqiàn mean? ("To apologise".) Say it once more.

275.2 yuánliàng — to forgive

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a sports fan, then the Mandarin for to apologise.

You'll want to know: yuánliàng

yuánliàng — "to forgive".

qǐng yuánliàng wǒ — Please forgive me.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yuánliàng is built from yuán and liàng 'to trust', both inherited from Middle Chinese, ngjwon and ljangH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'a broad plain' and the second 'to trust'. How the pair came to mean forgiving is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: yuánliàng
- Say it: yuánliàng, once more
- Say it: qǐng yuánliàng wǒ — Please forgive me.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a sports fan, then the Mandarin for to apologise, then say yuánliàng again

Before you move on

What does yuánliàng mean? ("To forgive".) Say it once more.

275.3 dāying — to agree (to a request); to say yes

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to apologise, then the Mandarin for to forgive.

You'll want to know: dāying

dāying — "to agree (to a request); to say yes".

tā dāying le — He said yes.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of dāying is built from dā 'to answer' and yìng 'to respond', both inherited from Middle Chinese, top and 'ingH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to match' and the second 'things answering each other'. In the word the second loses its tone.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: dāying
- Say it: dāying, once more
- Say it: tā dāying le — He said yes.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to apologise, then the Mandarin for to forgive, then say dāying again

Before you move on

What does dāying mean? ("To agree (to a request); to say yes".) Say it once more.

275.4 jiēshòu — to accept

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to forgive, then the Mandarin for to say yes to a request.

You'll want to know: jiēshòu

jiēshòu — "to accept".

wǒ jiēshòu nǐ de dàoqiàn — I accept your apology.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of jiēshòu is built from jiē and shòu, both inherited from Middle Chinese, tsjep and dzyuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to join' and 'to hold', and the second 'to take in'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: jiēshòu
- Say it: jiēshòu, once more
- Say it: wǒ jiēshòu nǐ de dàoqiàn — I accept your apology.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to forgive, then the Mandarin for to say yes to a request, then say jiēshòu again

Before you move on

What does jiēshòu mean? ("To accept".) Say it once more.

275.5 suíbiàn — as you like; casual

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to say yes to a request, then the Mandarin for to accept.

You'll want to know: suíbiàn

suíbiàn — "as you like; casual".

nǐ suíbiàn chī — Help yourself to anything.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of suíbiàn is built from suí 'to follow' and biàn 'convenient', both inherited from Middle Chinese, zjwe and bjienH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to follow' and the second 'to benefit'.

What you've built

One more word for saying no and asking.

Your turn

- Say it: suíbiàn
- Say it: suíbiàn, once more
- Say it: nǐ suíbiàn chī — Help yourself to anything.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to say yes to a request, then the Mandarin for to accept, then say suíbiàn again

Before you move on

What does suíbiàn mean? ("As you like; casual".) Say it once more.

Chapter 276

A New Job

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say I went for an interview or quit a job, talk about a chance and retiring, and say something is a big deal.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 276: I can say I went for an interview or quit a job, talk about a chance and retiring, and say something is a big deal.

276.1 面试 (miànshì) — to have an interview (for a job); interview

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to accept, then the Mandarin for as you like.

You'll want to know: 面试

面试 — miànshì — "to have an interview (for a job); interview".

> 上个月我老公去面试了 shàng ge yuè wǒ lǎogōng qù miànshì le — My husband went for a job interview last month.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 面试 (miànshì) is built from 面 'the face' and 试 'a test', both inherited from Middle Chinese, mjienH and syiH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to face' and the second 'to use'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: miànshì
- Say it: miànshì, once more
- Say it: shàng ge yuè wǒ lǎogōng qù miànshì le — My husband went for a job interview last month.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to accept, then the Mandarin for as you like, then say miànshì again

Before you move on

What does 面试 mean? ("To have an interview (for a job); interview".) Say it once more.

276.2 cízhí — to resign; to quit a job

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for as you like, then the Mandarin for to have a job interview.

You'll want to know: cízhí

cízhí — "to resign; to quit a job".

tā shàng ge yuè cízhí le — She quit her job last month.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of cízhí is built from cí and zhí 'a post', both inherited from Middle Chinese, zi and tsyik (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'words' and 'a plea'. The sense 'to take leave' is not given there, so how it came is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: cízhí
- Say it: cízhí, once more
- Say it: tā shàng ge yuè cízhí le — She quit her job last month.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for as you like, then the Mandarin for to have a job interview, then say cízhí again

Before you move on

What does cízhí mean? ("To resign; to quit a job".) Say it once more.

276.3 机会 (jīhuì) — chance; opportunity

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to have a job interview, then the Mandarin for to quit a job.

You'll want to know: 机会

机会 — jīhuì — "chance; opportunity".

这是一个好机会 zhè shì yí ge hǎo jīhuì — This is a good opportunity.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 机会 (jīhuì) is built from 机 and 会 'to meet', both inherited from Middle Chinese, kj+j and hwajH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'a meeting' and 'a trigger', and the second 'to come together'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: jīhuì
- Say it: jīhuì, once more
- Say it: zhè shì yí ge hǎo jīhuì — This is a good opportunity.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to have a job interview, then the Mandarin for to quit a job, then say jīhuì again

Before you move on

What does 机会 mean? ("Chance; opportunity".) Say it once more.

276.4 tuìxiū — to retire

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to quit a job, then the Mandarin for an opportunity.

You'll want to know: tuìxiū

tuìxiū — "to retire".

wǒ yéye tuìxiū le — My grandpa has retired.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tuìxiū is built from tuì 'to step back' and xiū 'to rest', both inherited from Middle Chinese, thwojH and xjuw (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to step back' and the second 'to rest'.

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: tuìxiū
- Say it: tuìxiū, once more
- Say it: wǒ yéye tuìxiū le — My grandpa has retired.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to quit a job, then the Mandarin for an opportunity, then say tuìxiū again

Before you move on

What does tuìxiū mean? ("To retire".) Say it once more.

276.5 大事 (dàshì) — big deal; important matter

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for an opportunity, then the Mandarin for to retire.

You'll want to know: 大事

大事 — dàshì — "big deal; important matter".

找工作是大事 zhǎo gōngzuò shì dàshì — Finding a job is a big deal.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 大事 (dàshì) is built from 大 'big' and 事 'an affair', both inherited from Middle Chinese, daH and dzriH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription).

What you've built

One more word for talking about the past.

Your turn

- Say it: dàshì
- Say it: dàshì, once more

- Say it: zhǎo gōngzuò shì dàshì — Finding a job is a big deal.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for an opportunity, then the Mandarin for to retire, then say dàshì again

Before you move on

What does 大事 mean? ("Big deal; important matter".) Say it once more.

Chapter 277

Likes and Dislikes

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what is amusing, what I dislike, whom I admire, what I enjoy and what I love.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 277: I can say what is amusing, what I dislike, whom I admire, what I enjoy and what I love.

277.1 yǒuqù — fun; amusing

> Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to retire, then the Mandarin for a big deal.

You'll want to know: yǒuqù

yǒuqù — "fun; amusing".

> zhège gùshi hěn yǒuqù — This story is a lot of fun.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of yǒuqù is built from 有 'to have' and qù, both inherited from Middle Chinese, hjuwX and tshjuH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the second 'to tend towards'. How the pair came to mean amusing is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: yǒuqù
- Say it: yǒuqù, once more
- Say it: zhège gùshi hěn yǒuqù — This story is a lot of fun.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to retire, then the Mandarin for a big deal, then say yǒuqù again

Before you move on

What does yǒuqù mean? ("Fun; amusing".) Say it once more.

277.2 tǎoyàn — to dislike; to hate

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for a big deal, then the Mandarin for amusing.

You'll want to know: tǎoyàn

tǎoyàn — "to dislike; to hate".

wǒ tǎoyàn xiàyǔ tiān — I hate rainy days.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of tǎoyàn is built from tǎo and yàn, both inherited from Middle Chinese, thawX and 'jiemH (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'to govern' and 'to punish', and for the second quotes the Analects, on not tiring of fine food. How the pair came to mean disliking is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: tǎoyàn
- Say it: tǎoyàn, once more
- Say it: wǒ tǎoyàn xiàyǔ tiān — I hate rainy days.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for a big deal, then the Mandarin for amusing, then say tǎoyàn again

Before you move on

What does tǎoyàn mean? ("To dislike; to hate".) Say it once more.

277.3 xīnshǎng — to admire; to appreciate

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for amusing, then the Mandarin for to dislike.

You'll want to know: xīnshǎng

xīnshǎng — "to admire; to appreciate".

wǒ hěn xīnshǎng tā — I really admire him.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of

xīnshǎng is built from xīn 'glad' and shǎng 'to reward', both inherited from Middle Chinese, xj+n and syangX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which glosses the first 'glad' and the second 'to bestow'.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: xīnshǎng
- Say it: xīnshǎng, once more

- Say it: wǒ hěn xīnshǎng tā — I really admire him.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for amusing, then the Mandarin for to dislike, then say xīnshǎng again

Before you move on

What does xīnshǎng mean? ("To admire; to appreciate".) Say it once more.

277.4 xiǎngshòu — to enjoy

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to dislike, then the Mandarin for to admire.

You'll want to know: xiǎngshòu

xiǎngshòu — "to enjoy".

wǒmen zài xiǎngshòu jiàqī — We're enjoying the holidays.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of xiǎngshòu is built from xiǎng and shòu, both inherited from Middle Chinese, xjangX and dzyuwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription), which lists the first under an older spelling and glosses it 'to offer' and 'to sacrifice', and glosses the second 'to take in'. How the first came to mean enjoying is not settled.

What you've built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: xiǎngshòu
- Say it: xiǎngshòu, once more
- Say it: wǒmen zài xiǎngshòu jiàqī — We're enjoying the holidays.

- Recall: say the Mandarin for to dislike, then the Mandarin for to admire, then say xiǎngshòu again

Before you move on

What does xiǎngshòu mean? (“To enjoy”.) Say it once more.

277.5 rè’ài — to love deeply

Before the new one: say the Mandarin for to admire, then the Mandarin for to enjoy.

You’ll want to know: rè’ài

rè’ài — “to love deeply”.

tā rè’ài yīnyuè — He loves music.

Its characters come later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of rè’ài is built from 热 ’hot’ and ài ’to love’, both inherited from Middle Chinese, nyet and ’ojH (Guangyun, in Baxter’s transcription), which glosses the second ’to cherish’.

What you’ve built

One more word for what I like.

Your turn

- Say it: rè’ài
- Say it: rè’ài, once more
- Say it: tā rè’ài yīnyuè — He loves music.
- Recall: say the Mandarin for to admire, then the Mandarin for to enjoy, then say rè’ài again

Before you move on

What does rè'ài mean? ("To love deeply".) Say it once more.

277.6 Looking back: from Husband and Wife to Likes and Dislikes

Say the Mandarin for a wife and hubby.

Your turn

- Say it: a wife, hubby, grandpa on the mother's side, an uncle, an auntie
- Say it: honest, hospitable, putting your heart into it, careless, careful with details
- Say it: to ice-skate, to collect things, all the rage, handicrafts, a sports fan
- Say it: to apologise, to forgive, to say yes to a request, to accept, as you like
- Say it: to have a job interview, to quit a job, an opportunity, to retire, a big deal
- Say it: amusing, to dislike, to admire, to enjoy, to love deeply
- Read it: 老 — each one aloud, then a word that holds it

Before you move on

A wife? (qīzi.) Hubby? (老公, lǎogōng.) Grandpa on the mother's side? (外公, wàigōng.) An uncle? (shūshu.) An auntie? (āyí.) Honest? (chéngshí.) Hospitable? (好客, hàokè.) Putting your heart into it? (用心, yòngxīn.) Careless? (cūxīn.) Careful with details? (xìxīn.) To ice-skate? (huábīng.) To collect things? (shōují.) All the rage? (热门, rèmén.) Handicrafts? (手工, shǒugōng.) A sports fan? (qiúmí.) To apologise? (dàoqiàn.) To forgive? (yuánliàng.) To say yes to a request? (dāying.) To accept? (jiēshòu.) As you like? (suíbiàn.) To have a job interview? (面试, miànshì.) To quit a job?

(cízhí.) An opportunity? (机会, jīhuì.) To retire? (tuìxiū.) A big deal? (大事, dàshì.) Amusing? (yǒuqù.) To dislike? (tǎoyàn.) To admire? (xīnshǎng.) To enjoy? (xiǎngshòu.) To love deeply? (rè'ài.)

277.7 Likes and Dislikes — once more

Say the Mandarin for amusing and to dislike.

Your turn

- Say it: amusing, to dislike, to admire, to enjoy, to love deeply

Before you move on

Amusing? (yǒuqù.) To dislike? (tǎoyàn.) To admire? (xīnshǎng.) To enjoy? (xiǎngshòu.) To love deeply? (rè'ài.)

Chapter 278

First, Then, Last

Modes: voice (6) pen (2) Hands-free start: the first of 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can tell what happened first, next and last.
>
> Telling things in order with 先, 然后 and 最后, first of all and straight after, and 了 … 以后 for after doing, built on two new written characters: 最 and 然.

278.1 最后 (zuìhòu) — last; finally

A new chapter, and it opens on the word for the end of a story.

- Recall: say rè'ài, to love deeply — R1, the chapter you have finished
- Recall: say xiǎngshòu, to enjoy — R1
- Recall: say zuì, most — R3, durable
- Recall: say hòu, after; behind — R3

You'll want to know: 最后

最后 — zuìhòu — "last; finally; in the end".

> 最后我们回家了 zuìhòu wǒmen huí jiā le — In the end we went home.
>
> 今天是最后一天 jīntiān shì zuìhòu yì tiān — Today is the last day.

The next lesson puts the first character in your hand. It is the zuì you already say for most.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of 最后 (zuìhòu) is built from 最 'most' and 后 'after', both inherited from Middle Chinese, tswajH and huwX (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'utmost' and lists the second, under its traditional form, with 'before and after'; 'last' for the pair is the word's own sense.

What you've built

最后 opens the last step of a story: 最后我们回家了 zuìhòu wǒmen huí jiā le. Before a noun it picks out the last one: 最后一天 zuìhòu yì tiān. The 了 at the end is the 了 you know: it happened.

Your turn

- Say it: zuìhòu
- Say it: zuìhòu, once more
- Say it: 最后我们回家了 — zuìhòu wǒmen huí jiā le — In the end we went home.
- Say it: 今天是最后一天 — jīntiān shì zuìhòu yì tiān — Today is the last day.
- Recall: say zuì, then zuìhòu

Before you move on

What does 最后 mean? ("Last; finally".) Which word you know is inside it? (zuì, most.)

278.2 最 — 日, six strokes, then 又

The word first, then the character inside it.

- Recall: say zuìhòu — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

日 对

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — rì, duì

Script — 日, six strokes, then 又

How 最 is written, stroke by stroke

最

Three pieces, and you write two of them already.

日, four strokes, wide and flat on top: the left side, the top that turns down the right side, the middle bar, the bottom bar.

Six strokes under it: a long horizontal across the whole width; then, on the left, two verticals down from it, the left one first; two short horizontals between them, the upper one first; and last a short stroke at the foot that rises to the right.

又, two strokes, on the right, as on the left of 对: a horizontal that turns and falls to the lower left, then a long right-falling stroke.

4 + 6 + 2 = twelve.

Your turn

- Write it: 最, all twelve, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 最? (Twelve.) What sits on top? (日.) Which stroke rises to the right? (The last of the six, at the foot, before 又.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 最, pinned stroke paths and medians.

278.3 先...然后...最后 — first, then, last

Three words you have, and one story to put them in.

- Read it: 最后, aloud — zuìhòu
- Recall: say 先 — xiān, first — R3, durable
- Recall: say ránhòu, then; after that — R3

Grammar Lens: 先, 然后, 最后 — first, then, last

To tell things in order, put 先 before the first verb, 然后 at the front of the next step, and 最后 at the front of the last.

我先吃饭 然后看书 最后回家 wǒ xiān chī fàn, ránhòu kàn shū, zuìhòu huí jiā — First I eat, then I read, and last I go home.

然后 is the ránhòu you have said since the chapter on the past. Now it prints: the next lesson puts 然 in your hand.
先 sits after the person, right before the verb: 我先吃饭. 然后 and 最后 open their clause, and the person need not be said again.

他先去学校 然后去打工 tā xiān qù xuéxiào, ránhòu qù dǎgōng — He goes to school first, then to his part-time job.

The order of the clauses is the order of the events.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- 我先吃饭 然后看书 最后回家 — wǒ xiān chī fàn, ránhòu kàn shū, zuìhòu huí jiā — First I eat, then I read, and last I go home.
- 他先去学校 然后去打工 — tā xiān qù xuéxiào, ránhòu qù dǎgōng — He goes to school first, then to his part-time job.
- three things you did this morning, in order, with 先, 然后 and 最后

Before you move on

Where does 先 go? (After the person, before the first verb.) And 然后 and 最后? (At the front of their clause.)

278.4 然 — a four-stroke piece, 大 with a dot, and four dots

The pattern first, then the character it was waiting for.

- Recall: say 我先吃饭 然后看书 — wǒ xiān chī fàn, ránhòu kàn shū — R1, one lesson back, before it decays

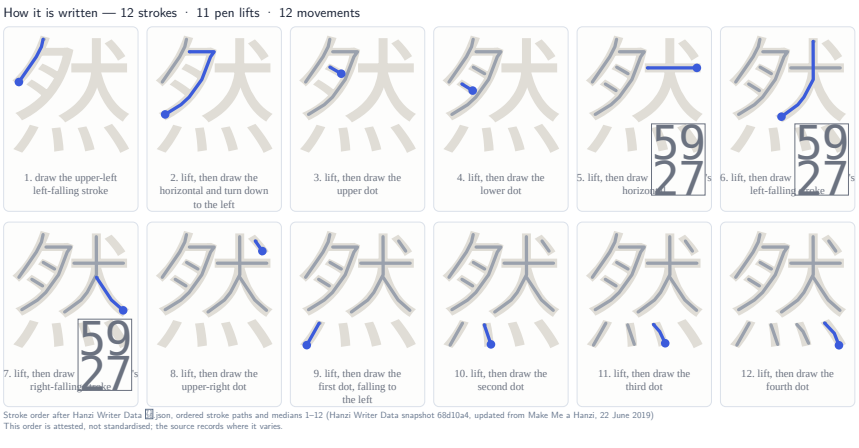
  大 点 热

Read it: each one aloud, with nothing said first — dà, diǎn, rè

Script — a four-stroke piece, 大 with a dot, and four dots



How 然 is written, stroke by stroke

然

Three pieces, and you write the last two already.

The upper left, four strokes: a left-falling stroke; a horizontal that turns and falls to the lower left; then two dots inside it, the upper one first. It is not 月: there is no hooked frame and no inner bar.

大 with a dot, four strokes, on the upper right: the bar, the left-falling stroke from above it, the right-falling stroke, and last a dot at its upper right.

Four dots along the foot, from left to right, as at the foot of 点 and 热.

4 + 4 + 4 = twelve.

Your turn

- Write it: 然, all twelve, with the model in front of you
- Cover: write it again from memory, and count the pieces, not the strokes

Before you move on

How many strokes in 然? (Twelve.) Which character you write sits on the upper right? (大, with a dot added.) Where else have you written the four dots? (At the foot of 点 and 热.)
Source: Hanzi Writer Data 然, pinned stroke paths and medians.

278.5 shǒuxiān — first of all

Before the new one: the character you wrote last, inside the word it belongs to.

- Read it: 然后, aloud — ránhòu
- Recall: say 我先吃饭 — wǒ xiān chī fàn — R1, two lessons back

You'll want to know: shǒuxiān shǒuxiān — "first of all; to begin with".

> shǒuxiān wǒ xiǎng shuō xièxie — First of all, I'd like to say thank you.
>
> shǒuxiān wǒmen qù mǎi dōngxi — To begin with, we go shopping.

Its first character comes later; for now it is a word for the ear.

The word, taken apart — what its characters are made of shǒuxiān is built from shǒu 'the head' and 先 'first', both inherited from Middle Chinese, syuwX and sen (Guangyun, in Baxter's transcription). The dictionary glosses the first 'the head' and 'the beginning', and the second 'before and after'.

What you've built

先 sits inside the clause, after the person: 我先吃饭. shǒuxiān opens the sentence, before the person, and it sounds planned: the first of several points.
然后 and 最后 follow it as usual: shǒuxiān …, ránhòu …, zuìhòu ….

Your turn

- Say it: shǒuxiān
- Say it: shǒuxiān, once more
- Say it: shǒuxiān wǒ xiǎng shuō xièxie — First of all, I'd like to say thank you.
- Say it: shǒuxiān wǒmen qù mǎi dōngxi — To begin with, we go shopping.
- Recall: say 先, then shǒuxiān: inside the clause, then at its front

Before you move on

What does shǒuxiān mean? (“First of all”.) Where does it stand? (At the very front, before the person.)

278.6 jiēzhe — next; straight after that

Before the new one: last lesson’s word, and the pattern it opens.

- Recall: say shǒuxiān, first of all — R1, one lesson back
- Read it: 先 … 然后 … 最后, aloud — xiān … ránhòu … zuìhòu

You’ll want to know: jiēzhe jiēzhe — “next; straight after that”.

